Paper Says Dolphins Crippled, Blinded In Secret Navy Project

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEATTLE (AP) — A secret Navy program to train dolphins as underwater security guards is in disarray, with four of the animals dead and others blinded or crippled by abusive handlers, a newspaper reported today.

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer quoted unidentified sources, including two former trainers who asked that their names be withheld, as saying four of the Navy's three dozen dolphins have died in the past 18 months.

The former trainers said some of the dolphins have been blinded or have suffered crippling injuries as a result of poor training procedures.

The program, which trains dolphins to hunt for mines and enemy frogmen, leaves the animals vulnerable to infection or illness by moving them from cooler to warmer water and subjects them to other stress, they said.

However, Navy Lt. Cmdr. Craig Quigley told the newspaper Tuesday that the marine mammal project, which also includes work with sea lions, had been "very successful ... effective and cost-effective."

A trainer, Rick Trout, who has worked at the Navy project in San Diego since 1985, told a convention of the International Marine Animal Trainers Association in San Antonio, Texas, this week he saw "specific incidences of abuse, weight loss, corporal punishment and damage to animals after transport."

Trainers use "very negative methods, including food deprivation, corporal punishment (hitting), and other aversive techniques," Trout said.

The newspaper said one dolphin died last month near Port Townsend and two others died earlier in San Diego, where the program is based.

Last year, a dolphin died during patrol in the Persian Gulf of what the Navy said was some type of bacterial infection that developed into pneumonia. After that, four other dolphins were returned to United States.

A Persian Gulf environmentalist, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said at the time that the dolphin probably was not used to the gulf environment and its bacteria.

The program's existence been known publicly since the late 1960s, during the Vietnam War.

Sources quoted by the newspaper blamed the project's problems on rapid turnover among employees in San Diego and pressure to expand the project to the Trident nuclear submarine base at Bangor and other sites.

Nigeria May Pass U.S. In Population

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

UNITED NATIONS — Nigeria's surging birth rate will triple its population by 2025, making it the world's fourth most populous country after China, India and the Soviet Union, a new U.N. study predicts.

The "U.N. World Population Chart — 1988" predicts that 25 years into the third millennium Nigeria will have 301.3 million people, surpassing the United States' 300.7 million.

The west-central African nation was the world's 10th most populous in 1985, with 95.1 million people.

Undersecretary-general Rafeeduddin Ahmad, introducing the study at a news conference Tuesday, said Africa's population is growing faster than that of any other continent.

"The populations of Asia and Latin America are growing more moderately than Africa's, and of course in many countries in Europe, the population growth is almost stationary."

"Each woman in the world has, on the average, 3.4 children. That is the total fertility rate. The number for Africa is 6.2, and it is around 3.5 in Latin America and Asia," he said.

Kenya and Rwanda have fertility rates of more than eight children per woman, according to the chart.

"In contrast, women in Europe and North America have 1.7 to 1.8 children, a number not sufficient to replace the existing population in the long run," Ahmad said.

He said Africa's high birth rate offsets a life expectancy of only 52 years, compared with an average of 60 for developing countries as a whole and 73 for industrialized nations.

"Aging is bound to become a very important issue in governments both in the developed and developing countries in coming years," said Ahmad.

By the year 2025, China will have an estimated 1.49 billion people, and India 1.44 billion. The Soviet Union is expected to have 351.4 million.

The 6th through 10th most populous nations in 2025 are expected to be Pakistan, with 267 million; Indonesia, 257.7 million; Brazil, 245.8 million; Bangladesh, 234.9 million; and Mexico, with 150 million people.

Currently, West Germany, Italy, Britain, France, and Spain rank in the 25 most populous countries. By 2025, France is expected to be the only West European nation in the top 25, holding the 24th rank with 60.4 million people.

The world's population was 5.1 billion in mid-1988 and will reach 6 billion in 1998. By 2025, it is expected to hit 8.46 billion.

Population has been growing at a rate of about 1.7 percent since the mid-1970s, a rate that will remain steady until the mid-1990s, then steadily decline to below 1 percent by 2025, said Ahmad.

The Population Division of the U.N. Department of International Economic and Social Affairs prepared the data for the chart.

Is 'Party Over' For Halloween?

 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

"The party's over."

Those words Tuesday of Mayor Ed Carter summed up the prospects of future alcohol-laden Halloween celebrations on the streets of downtown Greenville.

Carter's comments came on the heels of a special post-Halloween report by City Manager Greg Knowles to the City Council pertaining to the events of Monday night and early Tuesday morning.

At least 50 arrests were made by Greenville police during the annual celebration and 141 citations, including unauthorized possession of liquor and possession of alcohol by minors, were issued by state Alcohol Law enforcement agents. One ALE agent suffered a fractured ankle after being run over by a car as he attempted to stop the driver.

"I don't think the police department nor the city staff can afford to recommend that you continue to have these kinds of operations on Fifth Street anymore," Knowles told the mayor and council members at a special call meeting at City Hall.

Although the meeting was intended to discuss the possible relocation of the Patrick-Arthur house, the results of the Halloween bash dominated the agenda.

Knowles told the council that although the crowd, estimated at 8,000 people, was about half the size of last year's gathering, the arrests and citations were up significantly.

"We attribute this at this point to bands of unruly youths," Knowles said. "We had a number of arrests of 'out-of-towners' and high school students. These roving bands of younger people were going around literally picking fights. Something we had not seen before. They would walk up to somebody and just punch them right out," Knowles said.

"Unfortunately there were a number of people who decided that swinging was the opportune thing to do and some of our police officers were on the receiving end of that," he added.

Knowles said several police officers were jumped by the violent youths and some officers reported injuries.

"Some of our police officers reported they injured their fists when somebody's teeth ran into it," Knowles remarked.

Nominees Said OK In Health

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors for both presidential candidates say they are in excellent health, except for minor conditions not unusual for people of their ages and lifestyles.

Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis suffers an occasional backache made worse by campaign travel, Dr. Gerald Plotkin said. He issued a medical statement on Dukakis' health last September after a routine medical checkup at the Harvard Community Health Plan's Wellesley Center.

The candidate "was found to be in excellent health," Plotkin said.

Doctors interviewed by the Times said George Bush, 64, is in excellent health. Bush has a mild enlargement of the prostate gland but they do not expect corrective surgery to be necessary in the next four years.

Israeli Voting Ends In Deadlock

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's hardline Likud bloc and its rival left-of-center Labor Party, after a deadlocked election, today began courting four religious parties in a bid to form a coalition government.

Tuesday's balloting was considered a referendum on the future of the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip and how to deal with the 11-month-old Palestinian uprising in which 306 Arabs and 10 Jews have been killed.

The results indicate the country's 4.4 million people remain deeply divided on the issues of peace and security.

The election failed to produce the hoped-for consensus: neither of the large parties could create the 61-seat majority coalition needed to rule in the 120-member Knesset, or parliament, without religious support.

But Likud had an edge because it was likely to get first crack at forming a coalition and its right-wing policies were more compatible with some religious parties.

With 99 percent of the 4,840 polling stations reporting, Likud had 39 seats, Labor had 38 and the religious parties 18 in parliament. Three of Labor's left-wing allies won 10 seats, three rightist Likud allies seven seats, and three Arab-oriented lists took eight seats.

Both major parties lost seats from the July 1984 elections, when Labor won 44 seats and Likud 41, while the religious parties gained four seats.

Shamir rejected the idea of another national unity government like the one he and Labor leader Shimon Peres, the foreign minister, formed after the stalemated 1984 elections.

"If Mr. Peres put the international conference on top of his list, he burned all the bridges to a national unity government," Shamir said on Israel radio.

Peres, 65, had said Israel should attend such a conference and be prepared to give up parts of the occupied land in exchange for peace. Shamir rejects both ideas.

Complex negotiations over Cabinet posts and religious legislation could drag on for days if not weeks.

County Board Hopefuls Stress Their Views

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Candidates for four seats on the Pitt County Board of Commissioners voiced their views and responded to questions posed by members of the audience at a League of Women Voters-sponsored candidate forum Tuesday night in Greenville.

Jim Rouse, Republican candidate for the District 1 seat, described the district as the "inner city" of Greenville, "a very important area ... predominantly black."

Saying "an Afro-American has never served on the Pitt County Board of Commissioners," Rouse said "there are a lot of needs ... the county commissioners have never dealt with."

"In order to make change, it's going to take the whole community working together," Rouse said. "I represent that change."

Rouse told the gathering, "I have a whole list of things I'd like to see changed." But he said, "I'm a very conservative thinker ... a very conservative man."

Farney Moore, Rouse's Democratic opponent in the race, said, "I've seen Pitt County grow and change (but) many areas ... continue to need improvement."

"I feel very strongly there should be black representation on the board of county commissioners" so the board will "have input (from the black community) on the issues."

"I would try to offer my input ...

what our opinion is on many issues — education, the medical district, other issues," Moore said.

He also expressed concern about solid waste disposal ("It's a long-range problem"), but said "education is the number one asset and issue in Pitt County (because) our young people are our greatest wealth and asset."

Local Airport Tops Another Milestone

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Boardings are up and records are falling at Pitt-Greenville Airport, according to a spokesman for the facility.

With Piedmont Commuter Airlines and American Eagle Airlines operating 14 daily flights, airport Director Jim Turcotte said more people passed through the facility in October than in any month in history.

The October record of 8,970 passengers is an increase of nearly 600 from the previous record, which was set in August, and Turcotte said the rest of the year looks promising.

"We're real pleased. We think the rest of the year is going to remain strong," he said, looking to traditional travel times such as Thanksgiving and Christmas. "The market usually curtails a bit in January and February and picks back up in March."

But once 1989 rolls around, the airport may get another boost. "I understand that American Eagle is going to put on larger equipment. They are considering putting on some Short 360s, that's a 36-passenger aircraft," Turcotte said. "This may happen in February or March."

American Eagle currently operates three daily flights from Greenville, using aircraft that seat about 19 passengers. Along with the larger aircraft, Turcotte said American Eagle officials are planning to jump to five daily flights, with the larger planes operating three of the flights.

In the past, Turcotte has said 100,000 passengers could pass through the airport this year. That number may be a little high, but he said it will be close.

"We're gonna scare it," he said. "We'll come awfully close."

If the current pace continues, about 48,500 passengers will board planes in Greenville this year. That will probably put the airport just under the 100,000 mark. In addition to the passengers that use Piedmont and American Eagle, the year-end numbers include other flights the Federal Aviation Administration considers commercial. The extra flights usually add about 2,500 passengers to the total.

Passenger use at the airport is expected to increase about 20 percent this year, Turcotte said. That growth is off the 40 percent jump the airport experienced from 1986 to 1987, but Turcotte said he expected growth to level a bit. Still, the facility has come close to catching the Kinston airport, traditionally much busier than Greenville.

Turcotte said the Kinston airport had 2,100 percent more passengers than Pitt-Greenville in 1983, but this year Kinston is about 24 percent busier. And in October, Kinston had just 13 percent more boardings than Pitt-Greenville, he said.

Both Greenville air carriers set records in October for the number of passengers boarding and flying into the city.

For Piedmont, 3,729 passengers boarded flights in Greenville and 3,636 passengers flew into the facility on the airline.

For American Eagle, 783 passengers boarded flights in Greenville and 822 flew into the facility on the airline.

Sanford Says Dukakis Can Win Despite Pollsters' Predictions

By Jerry Raynor
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

U.S. Sen. Terry Sanford thinks Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis stands a good chance of proving pollsters wrong when the results of the general election are in.

"It is quite possible that Americans may be surprised to find out on November 9 that Mike Dukakis has won despite what the polls are predicting at this time," Sanford said Tuesday night in Greenville.

Recalling the 1948 race when Harry Truman bucked predictions and defeated Thomas Dewey, Sanford said that "if Democratic voters go all out in going to the polls next week, I feel there's a very good chance that voters can again prove that polls are not always entirely accurate."

The North Carolina Democrat said he has been on a "crisscross campaign" in the state since Congress adjourned on Oct. 22, visiting "at least two-thirds of the counties" with more stops planned this week.

The local stop was sponsored by members of the North Carolina Association of Educators as part of its effort to make education a key election issue. Two NCAE members, Jackie Wooten, a Bethel Elementary School teacher and president of District 15 NCAE, and Ruby Jackson, a D.H. Conley teacher and president of the Pitt County NCAE, were part of the agency's coordinating team.

"Both nationally and at home, we need to turn to candidates who can do the most for education, to consider party stands on this issue," Sanford said.

"In North Carolina, the Democrats have the leadership to carry out the best plans for education. And we have that in the Democratic Education Plan, which three of our leaders have devised, a plan that ranges across the entire field of education."

Sanford said Bob Jordan, Tony Rand and Bob Etheridge, "as your governor, lieutenant governor and superintendent of North Carolina schools, can make any good plan work. They have proposed this fine education plan, now it's up to you to elect them so that they will have a chance to get it officially proposed and passed.

"We need now to put education as the first priority in North Carolina, to find out what it is that needs to be done and to elect the men who can get it done," he said.

"We need to wipe away all the slick liberal labeling and the contrived smears of (presidential candidate George) Bush and the Republicans to find the true Mike Dukakis, a man who is a remarkable leader."

Sanford said Dukakis' "record, his ability will be good for North Carolina, and of course, for the nation. And there's another benefit, too, on the Dukakis ticket. We have Lloyd Bentsen. He is able, intelligent, hardworking and creative."

"Born in the South, raised in an agricultural community, Bentsen understands our special needs for education, our special needs for economic development."

Sturz Raises Question About Warren's Land Deals

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Joe Sturz, a Republican candidate for one of two 9th House District seats to be filled in next week's general election, called a news conference Tuesday to question whether two business deals by incumbent Rep. Ed Warren involved what he termed "a conflict of interest."

Before questioning by reporters was over, Sturz was saying, "I'm not suggesting Mr. Warren was involved in criminal activity. I'm not saying there should be any criminal investigations or any of that. I don't see any of that indicated."

Later Tuesday, Warren called Sturz's charges "not true. What he says is not true. He's looking for something negative. To me that's what he's trying to do."

In a prepared text which he distributed, along with copies of deeds, correspondence and a lease agreement, Sturz said, "For several years during the Hunt administration, Warren leased property located at (the intersection of) U.S. 264 and N.C. 30 to the Department of Correction." Sturz later said during the question and answer session, that the lease was canceled by the Martin administration "because of the conflict of interest."

The text also said that on Oct. 9, 1986, Warren "became a one-fourth partner in land speculation involving the intersection of N.C. 43 and the proposed Northwest Bypass (west of Greenville). Warren and his partners paid $300,000 for a 145-acre tract and 13 months later sold it for $525,000 — a profit of $225,000. I believe that it is improper for a state official who has a vested interest in conserving tax dollars to speculate on land involved in highway rights-of-way and to profit from the deal."

"That's a conflict of interest and Rep. Warren has again shown an insensitivity to ethical standards," Sturz's text charged.

But copies of deeds for the piece of property — given to reporters by Sturz — show the property was bought in March 1986 by R. Guy Mayo Jr.; that Warren and his wife Joan acquired a one-fourth interest in the land in October 1987 from Mayo and his wife, Jeanette Mayo

(at the same time the Mayo's sold one-fourth interests in the property to Janice R. White and to Melvin R. Sugg and Sugg's wife, Eleanor), and that the land was sold by the group of owners in November 1987.

"When I was appointed by the governor (Martin) to the advocacy council (for persons with disabilities)," Sturz told reporters, "I had to fill out forms (disclosing his business interests) ... thinking at the time what a hassle this is." But Sturz said, "When I came across this information and began to see the conflict of interest ... I can see now why Gov. Martin requires (appointees) to make a complete open declaration."

"Legislators have to pass on that themselves. There is no code, that I'm aware of, governing the Legislature. It is important that a man hold himself to that same high standard. Legislators should be extremely careful to avoid any of the conflict of interest or put himself in an awkward position that this recommends," Sturz said.

"It started off (the lease of the house at the intersection of N.C. 30 and U.S. 264, which was used as a halfway house for women prisoners on work release) when he (Warren) was a county commissioner, and when he became a legislator he continued to have that."

Saying "I don't see, on the surface, anything improper," Sturz suggested, "I think it would have been very wise of him ... to terminate that (lease) when he became a state legislator."

Sturz, who distributed 18 pages of copies of the lease agreement and letters pertaining to it, said, "I don't know where the paper work is," when asked about documents regarding the termination of the lease.

As for the property on N.C. 43, Sturz said that, "Obviously the man that bought it for $525,000 felt that the road was coming through and it wasn't going to change. Ed Warren was invited in by a man (Mayo) he had been in partnership with before. That was not anything unusual."

But, Sturz questioned, "What was in Guy Mayo's mind when he invites him (Warren) to come in? Who knows?"

"Did he (Mayo) take him (Warren) in as hopefully a guarantee that that route wouldn't be changed?" Sturz said. "Now I doubt if that's what happened. I don't think Guy Mayo would do that. But, again, he (Warren) puts himself in that position."

"When I had people show it (the information about the lease and the land purchase and sale) to me ...," Sturz said, "I was shocked and disturbed ... to see the conflict of interest. I thought, 'Here is something the people need to know and consider."

"I'm sure he'll say there is nothing illegal, and there has been nothing illegal, nothing criminal. It's just putting himself in conflict of interest."

Warren did said Tuesday that there was nothing illegal — and no conflict of interest — involved in the transactions.

A developer, Warren said he first rented the N.C. 30 property to the Department of Corrections for use as a halfway house in 1977 when he was a member of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners "because

Excellence

Lewis Best Qualified For Judgeship

Unquestionable integrity, impeccable judgment and broad perspective are the qualities that make a good judge. Add experience and maturity and the result is an outstanding judge — the kind of excellence demanded on the N.C. Court of Appeals.

John B. (Jack) Lewis of Farmville meets these lofty standards and Pitt County voters should mark the ballot Nov. 8 for Lewis.

While many voters may find judicial elections more remote than the other offices on the ballot, that thinking is inaccurate. Candidates for the bench, for reasons of propriety, are restricting in campaigning. The result of that restraint, for many voters, is a lack of knowledge about the judicial races and candidates.

So voters may not know the facts. They may not know just what Lewis has to offer. Here are the qualifications that make him the most capable candidate:

The candidate holds a bachelor's degree in history and a law degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He served in the U.S. Navy as a commissioned legal officer during the Vietnam conflict and currently is a Naval Reserve military judge, hearing court martial cases.

From 1966 to 1982 he practiced law in Farmville and served as town attorney for Farmville, Fountain and Hookerton. In 1982 he was appointed a special Superior Court judge by former Gov. Jim Hunt, a position he continues to hold.

Voting for Lewis is not only a chance for Pitt County to send one of its own to the N.C. Court of Appeals, it is an opportunity to elect a man with sound judgment and proven ability — and the best candidate for the job — to a position of statewide influence.

Voters cannot lose by seating him on the N.C. Court of Appeals.

Guidance

Etheridge, Thornburg, Brooks, Edmisten

There's more to the executive branch of state government than just the governor and lieutenant governor.

To be effective, the executive branch also needs a strong, talented Council of State — leaders who can provide vision and direction in their areas of focus. And when voters chose North Carolina's Council of State Tuesday, they should give their support to those with proven experience.

One office where a record of support and vision is vitally important is the office of state superintendent of public instruction. Here, Democrat Bobby Etheridge deserves the voters' support.

Etheridge, in his decade in the General Assembly, has accumulated a documented record of advocacy for public education in North Carolina. As chairman of the House Appropriations Base Budget Committee, he backed key funding for schools, guiding legislation like the Basic Education Program and the 1987 School Facilities Act to fruition.

Etheridge's platform is a solid one aimed at raising student achievement and lowering the dropout rate. In addition, the candidate correctly advocates higher pay and better working conditions for teachers, yet appropriately insists on accountability for the money the state spends on its public schools.

Voters should also return Lacy Thornburg to the office of Attorney General based on his record of integrity and public advocacy. Thornburg's performance in the office the past four years has left scant room for criticism. He has effectively worked in a bi-partisan manner, putting the interests of the people before politics. That is as it should be in the Attorney General's Office. Thornburg has earned the votes of North Carolina citizens.

Incumbent John Brooks, a native of Greenville, merits the support of voters in his bid for re-election as the Commissioner of Labor based on his record of bettering working conditions for laborers.

Voters would be best served by electing Rufus Edmisten to the office of Secretary of State. While neither Edmisten nor his opponent John Carrington possess the substance desired as candidates, Edmisten, because of his political experience and legal background, is the better choice.

The Daily Reflector endorses these candidates on the premise they will provide a growing North Carolina with the guidance and leadership it requires in a Council of State.

Public Forum

To the editor:

You've been running four articles a day on "your" editorial page taken from the Washington Post, a leftist sheet. In one, three days ago, Richard Cohen, their editorial writer, said that if the South did not vote for Dukakis, it would be because of his Jewish associations. That is an insult and a lie.

In the first place, nobody knows it more than one in 200 voters. Furthermore, the second man in the Confederacy was a Jew and the South had the first Jewish Congressman and Senator, Philips and Yulee. Southerners voted for Goldwater, in greater numbers than did the North. Wayne County, more indigenous than Pitt, went for Goldwater. Georgia, a Southern state, went for Goldwater. Mississippi almost did.

Give the South a Frank Meyer, Lewis Straus, Leo Straus, Eric Voegelin, or a Ludwig von Mises. We'll vote for him.

There is no valid criticism. Only anti-Semitism. On your editorial page, get shed of Washington Post and take hold of some sense.

The reason we oppose Dukakis is because he is a socialist. We Southerners prefer somebody more conservative than Bush, but it is the best we can do. The only real Conservative running for President, Congressman Ron Paul, hasn't a chance. The newspapers won't even mention his name, although he is on the ballot in 48 states. He is a write-in in North Carolina.

Southerners are still a little bit conservative, believing in the words of a Jew that socialism brings on tyranny, class warfare, strife, hatred, poverty, and ultimately war. (Ludwig von Mises)

To the editor:

The historically revered word liberal has become the emotional word in the present debate. It seems to me that it has not been adequately defined by either party. Dukakis has done a poor job of definition and Bush has mocked it with scare words. Why not go to the best source of definitions, Webster's Collegiate Dictionary?

Liberalism: a. A theory in economics emphasizing individual freedom and restraint and based upon free competition, the self-regulating market.

b. a political philosophy based on belief in progress, the essential goodness of man and the freedom of the individual, and standing for the protection of political, religious and civil liberties.

This doesn't seem to be a scare word, does it? It seems to describe the Constitution.

Surprising Lessons About Bush

WASHINGTON — The most reassuring thing Americans have learned about George Bush in the course of the 1988 campaign is that he is not the man millions mistakenly thought he was.

He is not the "wimp" of the Doonesbury cartoons or, as he was once described here, before the campaign began, "an innocent" awaiting slaughter. Sen. Bob Dole, one of many in both parties who underestimated Bush's tenacity, called him a "tough, aggressive" candidate last weekend. Few would disagree, after watching the way he disposed of Dole and others in the Republican primaries and reversed Michael Dukakis' early lead in the general election.

Since most Americans would rather have a strong President than a weak one, this display of backbone and muscle by Bush comes under the heading of good news. So, too, does his unexpected ability, on at least such occasions as his acceptance speech and the second debate, to speak for himself in ways that are affecting and appealing. That is an awfully important leadership skill which few knew Bush possessed.

What else have we learned about him as a potential President from the long campaign?

We have learned that he will find people with strong experience and good skills for tasks that are important to him. The principal strategists and operatives of his campaign, James A. Baker, III, Robert Teeter, Roger Ailes and Lee Atwater, have performed their functions well — as their track records gave Bush every reason to expect.

While Baker may be the only one of the four to take a senior place in a Bush administration (as secretary of state), it is not farfetched to suggest that Bush would have people of comparable talent and experience in key governmental positions. They would almost certainly include such Bush-affiliated Cabinet members as Attorney General Richard Thornburgh, Secretary of Treasury Nicholas Brady and Secretary of Education Lauro Cavazos, such Bush advisers as former Sen. John Tower, former White House and Treasury official Richard Darman, Bush's chief of staff Craig Fuller and half-a-dozen able domestic policy and national-security staffers from his vice presidential office and campaign.

No one need fear that a Bush administration would be composed of incompetents, hacks or people ideologically so extreme they are outside the mainstream of Republicanism and conservatism.

David Broder

However, many of the remaining signals from the campaign are not nearly so reassuring — and some are downright disturbing.

Much has been made of Bush's negativism. True, the complaining Democratic witnesses do not come with clean hands. People who jeered, "Where was George?" and passed out flyers identifying the Ayatollah Khomeini as "George Bush's friend" probably shouldn't gripe about smears.

But beyond question, the level of distortion and demagoguery in the Bush campaign suggests that he is prone to let the end justify the means. He chose to seek victory by making his vaguely defined opponent seem radical and risky, rather than by seeking a mandate for his own policies.

Given Bush's penchant for secrecy, his disinclination even during the campaign to answer reporters' questions, one would have to expect him as

'That readiness to sacrifice the future for temporary political advantage is disquieting. But even more so is the disdain Bush showed for the nation's future in his selection of Sen. Dan Quayle for vice president.'

President to be tempted to use backdoor routes to attain important policy goals, evading congressional or public scrutiny of his actions. The campaign, in that respect, confirms his history as director of the Central Intelligence Agency, his tacit approval of such Reagan administration covert operations as the arms sale to Iran, and his inability, 15 years ago, to recognize the moral or political implications of the Nixon White House's secret police operation.

His striking silence during the campaign on the issue of supplying aid to the Contras suggests either that he lacks the courage of his own convictions or, more ominously, that he believes resumption of such aid can be better engineered through stealth than argued and justified in public debate.

For the most part, Bush has dealt responsibly with foreign-policy and national-security issues. Unlike Dukakis, he has said nothing which could inhibit or embarrass his effectiveness as President in dealing with other nations. But the same cannot be said of domestic policy.

His "read my lips — no new taxes" pledge, while undoubtedly popular, is irresponsible, not only in the view of economic leaders here and abroad but in the judgment of key legislators of his own party and likely members of his own administration. The Economist, a wise British newspaper which vastly prefers Bush on foreign policy, said last week that if he is serious about that no-taxes promise, he "has ensured that the economic side of his presidency would be crisis-driven."

That readiness to sacrifice the future for temporary political advantage is disquieting. But even more so is the disdain Bush showed for the nation's future in his selection of Sen. Dan Quayle for vice president. The campaign has only served to verify the impression that Quayle is a shallow, unreflective and unfocused politician — three or four cuts below many of the other men and women in the Republican Party Bush might have chosen.

More than anything else, Quayle sends a disturbing signal about George Bush.

Philip Morris' Shift To Foods Could Affect Tobacco Workers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

For the first time since its founding 69 years ago, Philip Morris Cos. Inc. is on the verge of recording more sales from food-related products than from tobacco, and that raises questions about the future of the company's North Carolina employees.

The company has 1,200 North Carolina employees in tobacco manufacturing, and the changes in the company are also causing concern among North Carolina's 30,000 tobacco growers.

Philip Morris took a major step toward deciding their future Sunday, when it made a tentative deal with Kraft Inc.'s directors to acquire the Glenview, Ill.-based company for $13.1 billion, or $106 a share, the second-largest buyout in history. If the deal is closed, the company will become the world's largest food conglomerate.

Industry analysts and state officials say they don't expect any quick moves away from tobacco and in the short term expect to see more interest in the tobacco operations.

But in the long run, they concede, the Philip Morris-Kraft deal is another signal that the tobacco industry is likely to continue waning as cigarette smoking declines in the United States at a rate of 2 percent a year.

"It's nothing we all don't recognize," Carl Soffley, administrator of the tobacco program for the N.C. Agriculture Department, said in an interview with The Charlotte Observer. "Although tobacco remains highly profitable, it is not growing, and I would suppose they are anxious to diversify."

Philip Morris's highly profitable cigarette operations generate $1.5 billion a year — cash that will be needed to pay down the debt from buying Kraft. A quarter of its domestic cigarettes are made at its 1,200-employee Cabarrus County plant.

The dependence on tobacco income probably means the New York-based company will stand firm by its cigarette division for at least the next 20 years, industry analysts say.

"Tobacco is the cash cow that pays for all this stuff," said Charlotte financial analyst Jay Myers. Cigarette "consumption may go down, but earnings are going up. When your buyers are addicted, you have untapped pricing power."

The addition of Kraft, which comes two years after Philip Morris entered the food business, means Philip Morris will draw 36 percent of its total revenues from tobacco, down from 53 percent in 1987 and 71 percent in 1984.

Quayle Cancels Planned N.C. Visit; Democrats Slate Swing Into State

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle has canceled a planned visit to North Carolina this week, while nine Southern Democrats say they will swing through the state to promote the campaign of Mike Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen.

Quayle has appeared in the state twice in the last month, including a swing through Asheville and Charlotte last week. Quayle's wife, Marilyn, shared the stage at a Wilmington barbecue with Gov. Jim Martin on Tuesday night.

Mrs. Quayle ridiculed Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis' statement this week that he was a liberal in the mold of Franklin Roosevelt, Harry Truman and John Kennedy.

"The people who are in the tradition of FDR and Harry Truman came over to our party with Ronald Reagan," Mrs. Quayle told the crowd.

"He's a liberal in the tradition of George McGovern and Walter Mondale, and he can't escape that," she said.

Mrs. Quayle accused Dukakis of being soft on defense and of not supporting the space-based defense initiative. Mrs. Quayle arrived at the rally late when much of the crowd had already thinned.

Meanwhile, the Democratic Party announced that the nine Southern politicians will stop at Raleigh-Durham International Airport on Thursday as part of a six-state tour. Two North Carolinians — U.S. Sen. Terry Sanford and former Gov. Jim Hunt Jr. — are scheduled to take part in the regional campaign swing.

Barring a last-minute change in plans, neither Dukakis nor Republican nominee George Bush will return to North Carolina before the election Nov. 8, an indication that the state is losing importance as a target in the presidential campaign. Dukakis and Bush are spending their final week working the states that are richer in electoral votes.

In North Carolina, as elsewhere in the South, the Bush-Quayle ticket has held a significant lead in the polls since the second debate between the vice president and the Massachusetts governor.

In an effort to make the case that the Democratic ticket remains in contention in the state, Sanford held a press conference Tuesday at state Democratic headquarters. Without actually predicting a Dukakis-Bentsen victory, the Democratic senator declared, "We are going to have a result that is not like the polls."

Sanford, who has been traveling about the state for the Democratic ticket, described Dukakis as one of the best governors in the United States. And he praised Dukakis for a "right bold straightforward statement" characterizing himself as a liberal in the tradition of Roosevelt and Kennedy.

Also Tuesday, the state's three Republican U.S. Attorneys said they are reviving an election day program to accept election fraud complaints, but denied the program was aimed at keeping Democrats away from the polls.

"Unfortunately, election fraud is not unknown in North Carolina," said Thomas Ashcraft, the U.S. Attorney for the Western District, where more than 40 people were convicted of voter fraud after the 1982 election.

The attorneys said staff members would be available Nov. 8 during polling hours to take complaints and the FBI would be prepared to investigate them as warranted.

"I just think it's an attempt to intimidate voters and it's going to backfire," said Ken Eudy, director of the state Democratic Party. "We know what the program is aimed at and they do, too."

"We will have our lawyers out on election day as well to help people who are challenged," Eudy said. "We just think there is something very American about the presumption of innocence and the right to vote on election day."

"I think those kind of questions have no foundation," Ashcraft said. "We are trying to encourage people to vote and we want them to know that their vote will be counted fairly."

Meanwhile, Democratic gubernatorial candidate Bob Jordan outlined his program for senior citizens.

"Our seniors deserve to live out their lives in dignity and safety," he said at a speech in Charlotte. "As governor, I intend to provide the leadership to meet that goal."

Martin told a crowd in Wilmington that Jordan had hurt himself with negative campaigning.

"I figure the reason he had to get a bunch of chimpanzees to do that ad is because the unemployment rate in this state is so low he couldn't find anybody else," Martin joked.

In the lieutenant governor's race, Republican nominee Jim Gardner said Tuesday that Democratic leaders in the state Senate would be committing political suicide in trying to strip him of power if he wins election as the first Republican lieutenant governor in 87 years.

Gardner, campaigning in High Point and Winston-Salem, said that if the Senate leadership tries to push through rule changes to deprive him of such powers as appointing committee chairmen and members, the play would backfire.

"I'm convinced that, if they did that, they could very well destroy the Democrat Party of this state as a force for a long time," Gardner said in an interview. "You have an election in 1990, and everyone of them has to run for re-election."

"If they would freeze me out, change the rules, all for pure partisan politics, I would just simply go to the people of the state and say, 'Is this what you want?'" Gardner said. "You want people who just disregard your vote, it doesn't mean anything? Put these people out."

EPA Says Collider Report Inadequate

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The EPA says a preliminary environmental impact statement for the proposed superconducting super collider is "environmentally objectionable" and does not adequately address the project's potential to harm the environment.

A 14-page letter to the Department of Energy, which would build the $5.3 billion atom-smashing project, also lists nine specific concerns with a site proposed by North Carolina, including loss of wetlands, effects on drinking water and the pressure of urban growth spurred by the project.

"It is not an environmental condemnation of the project or any particular site," EPA Division Coordinator Armand Lepage said of the letter. "They were telling us the worst that could happen, and we are saying we don't like it. If people tell you right off the bat that you're going to lose 2,800 acres of wetlands, that sends us into a tizzy."

The 4,000-page environmental impact statement, released in August, looks at how the project would affect the environment of possible host states. Environmental impact will rate behind only geology and cultural resources in importance in choosing a host state.

The impact statement generally placed North Carolina about average among the competing states, saying it would suffer few environmental problems but raising concerns about whether the project would overtax water supplies and threaten water quality.

North Carolina, which would build the project on a three-county site north of Durham, is competing for the project with Michigan, Illinois, Texas, Tennessee, Colorado and Arizona. The letter from the Environmental Protection Agency also raised concerns about loss of wetlands in Michigan and Illinois.

DEAR DECENT CITIZENS OF PITT COUNTY

After repeated attempts with local school personnel to have the state AIDS curriculum modified in keeping with traditional values of local citizens, we have been told that the curriculum may not be modified. We have asked for certain phrases to be included in the curriculum for our children such as:

1. "Sex within marriage" (The term "marriage" never appears in the classroom instruction of the curriculum)
2. Homosexual behaviors defined as abnormal (These practices are also illegal in N. C.)
3. The failure rate for condoms during heterosexual acts (10%) and homosexual acts (50%)*

Please contact your elected school board representative and our superintendent and express your concerns. They say that they have heard only from a vocal minority on this issue and indicated that they need to hear from a vocal majority.

In support of all this, I hereby submit this letter for publication:

September 20, 1988

Edwin L. West, Jr., Superintendent
Pitt County Schools
1717 West Fifth Street
Greenville, NC 27834

Dear Dr. West:

Thank you for the letter acknowledging my attendance of the September 12th meeting of the Pitt County Board of Education.

I trust, sir, that after hearing comments from Dr. Cecil Rhodes and the Reverend James Giesey at the September 12th meeting, you do realize that parents of Pitt County's youth are seriously concerned about the AIDS curriculum as it now stands.

The amendments that we requested to the curriculum are not unreasonable. However, the response in your letter to me was evasive, to say the least. If you'll look at page "ix" of the AIDS curriculum, the Governor's letter, I'm sure you can clearly see why we feel that we are getting the same "lip service" from you regarding this issue that the Governor hoped that parents would not receive. The law (House Bill 666) calls for "parental involvement", not just lip service.

Your letter referred to an October meeting at the state level. Apparently you do not understand the workings of a legislative study. The task force may not report their findings to full legislature until such time that another full school year may have passed.

We, the concerned parents and citizens of Pitt County, ask that the requested changes be made now. Many other counties across the state have made amendments to or rewritten sections of the curriculum.

You also mentioned the Ad Hoc Instruction Committee of the Pitt County Board in your letter. Could you please send me a copy of the names and addresses of the persons on that committee?

Since you want to hold off on fulfilling our requests until after the legislative findings are in, perhaps the best plan would be not to let the curriculum into the classrooms of Pitt County until that time. On the other hand, if you do implement the curriculum as is, rest assured that we, as concerned parents and citizens of Pitt County will be at your door step. Even now, copies of this letter are being circulated throughout the county.

A prompt reply to this letter and our requests would be deeply appreciated.

Sincerely

Watkins Backed

RALEIGH (AP) — A divided panel of the state Court of Appeals has ruled that state Rep. Billy Watkins should not be removed as executor of a Granville County woman's estate, but the issue could wind up in the state Supreme Court.

An attorney for the heirs of Annie Mae S. Davis said Tuesday that his clients "most likely" would take the case to the state's high court.

Earlier Tuesday, the appeals court upheld a lower court ruling that Watkins did not mishandle an estate he charged $89,000 in fees and commissions.

The heirs of Ms. Davis had contended in a petition filed in Granville County that Watkins wrongfully had taken nearly double the 5 percent fee allowed for executors of estates who are attorneys.

The petition said that Watkins, the co-chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, had billed the estate for legal fees that should have been included as normal administration of Ms. Davis' $956,000 estate.

AT&T Closing

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — All but a couple hundred workers at AT&T's North Carolina Works will be transferred to new jobs or out of work by the end of 1989, as the facility closes down at least a year sooner than the company had said earlier.

Kenneth Raschke, the plant's manufacturing vice president, said the schedule was accelerated because the sales of some of the plant's older products are declining faster than AT&T had predicted earlier.

In a letter to all employees this week, Raschke said that, by mid-1989, only 500 to 700 of the plant's estimated 2,000 hourly workers will still be on the job. By the end of 1989, that number will shrink to between 150 and 200 workers, he said.

The salaried workforce, currently less than 500 workers, will be cut to about 300 to 350 by mid-1989, and down to about 100 to 150 by the end of the year, Raschke said.

CP&L Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court has ordered the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to consider revising the income tax rate Carolina Power & Light Co. may use in computing costs for the last four months of 1987.

A three-judge panel of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia said Tuesday that the commission's decision was "without an articulated rational basis."

The case concerns wholesale rates for power sold to municipal and cooperative electric systems in the Carolinas.

Dismissed

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Trespassing charges against 73 anti-abortion protestors arrested over the weekend have been dismissed.

"Those cases have been screened out and dismissed," said Mecklenburg County District Attorney Peter Gilchrist, citing an overcrowded court docket.

Charlotte police arrested 73 anti-abortion demonstrators on Saturday after they blocked the entrance to an abortion clinic as part of a "national day of rescue" proclaimed by anti-abortion groups nationwide.

Airport Manager

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Jerry Orr was named Charlotte-Douglas International Airport's new manager Tuesday.

Orr, 47, has been assistant manager for airport operations for eight years. He met with City Manager Wendell White on Monday, but wouldn't say whether he was offered the job.

The new manager will replace Josh Birmingham, airport manager since 1971, who will retire Dec. 31.

Conflict Denied

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Mayor Sue Myrick says she did not improperly mix her office with her job as an advertising executive when she wrote a letter urging First Presbyterian Church to let magician David Copperfield film the implosion of the old Hotel Charlotte from the church's parking lot.

Myrick Advertising, of which she is president, is working for Hesta Properties Inc., developers of the Carillon complex on the site now occupied by the hotel.

The day after the ad agency helped unveil the office development, Ms. Myrick wrote a letter as Charlotte mayor seeking permission to film the old hotel's implosion.

Myrick claims the filming would benefit the city, not Hesta.

Robeson Murders

LUMBERTON (AP) — Two Indians were found slain early Tuesday at the Robeson County motel where they lived and worked, authorities say.

Timothy Oxendine, 23, and Roger Strickland, 26, were found at the Rowland Motel on U.S. 301 in Rowland by a passerby who found a door ajar and went to check it, said Special Agent James R. Bowman of the State Bureau of Investigation.

Both men had been shot once with a .25-caliber pistol, authorities said, and one man's throat had been slit. Police had no suspects and had made no arrests Tuesday evening, authorities said.

School Officials Challenge Standards

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Local school and government officials attacked state school building standards for being excessive, expensive, inflexible, even demeaning, during a public hearing before members of the state Board of Education.

The standards have become a battleground on which state and local governments are fighting for control over school construction.

"The present minimum standards have effectively removed all local discretion and local decision making," said Robert A. Nelson, superintendent of Hoke County Schools, during the daylong hearing in the Highway Building.

A large majority of speakers Tuesday agreed with Nelson and asked the board to revise the standards and to make them recommendations rather than requirements. The Board of Education will likely decide today whether to grant those requests, board Chairman Howard Haworth said.

"The board strongly leans toward making some changes," he said. The board is to make a final report on the standards to legislators on Dec. 15.

Haworth said the board does not want to make school construction more difficult for school systems. But he also said the state should set its sights as high as it can.

The building standards, adopted in July, define minimum acreage for school sites and minimum dimensions for classrooms, laboratories, libraries, shops and other school spaces. At the request of the legislature, the board is reviewing the standards and considering standards for building furnishings and whether to require office space for teachers.

Critics said the standards represent ideals rather than minimums. The standards will force local school districts to build fewer classrooms.

School Fund Now $125 Million

RALEIGH (AP) — The Public School Building Capital Fund, which was established by the General Assembly in 1987, now has approximately $125 million to help underwrite construction and improvements to the state's public schools.

Funds are distributed to the state's 100 counties on a per-pupil basis.

Twenty counties have already begun work on 67 projects totaling $24 million.

Over the next 10 years, the money in the counties' accounts is projected to grow to more than $649 million, officials said. The money to build and renovate the schools is generated by a 1-percent increase in the corporate income tax.

Each county will earn interest on the money credited to its account. Almost $5 million in interest has already accumulated in the 100 counties' accounts.

Besides the $125 million already raised to be distributed on an average-daily-membership basis, an additional $120 million has been put into another fund which the General Assembly created to help counties with their critical school facility needs.

The Commission on Critical School Facility Needs was named by the Legislature to distribute the money to those counties which have the greatest school construction needs relative to their ability to pay for them.

Experts suggest the program could eventually build approximately 700 new schools around the state.

Prosecutor Faces Probe Over Trips

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department is investigating its chief pornography prosecutor for possible misuse of travel funds, government sources said.

The Office of Professional Responsibility, which examines allegations of wrongdoing by department employees, is carrying out the probe of H. Robert Showers with the assistance of FBI agents, the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press.

Investigators are trying to determine whether Showers scheduled official trips at taxpayer expense that permitted him to attend meetings of Christian religious groups in his hometown of Raleigh, N.C., and other cities, the sources said Tuesday.

Justice Department regulations specify that employees must use the least expensive form of travel when engaging in government business.

Justice Department spokesman John Russell and FBI spokesman William Carter declined to confirm that any investigation of Showers is under way.

The sources, however, said investigators are studying whether Showers, while traveling on department business, took indirect flights to cities hundreds of miles out of his way to attend religious meetings.

The Long Island, N.Y., newspaper Newsday reported Monday that investigators have been told that Showers arranged meetings with federal prosecutors during the same weeks as Baptist conventions, that he arranged to change planes in the city hosting the convention, attended the religious meetings and then continued on to the city where he conducted department business.

Newsday also quoted sources as saying that several of Showers' conferences with prosecutors were extremely brief and that there is a possibility Showers may have taken trips that were unnecessary. The sources told Newsday that Showers traveled at government expense to Raleigh many times, attending religious meetings there.

Showers was named to head up the department's National Obscenity Enforcement Unit in 1986 by Attorney General Edwin Meese III. He had been an assistant U.S. attorney in Raleigh, N.C., before being brought to Washington as a special assistant to Meese.

The Office of Professional Responsibility scrutinized Showers earlier this year after he allegedly asked a colleague to destroy a memo in connection with a pornography case, sources said at the time.

Showers has been placed on administrative leave.

Atlantis rolls out of assembly building at Cape Canaveral

Shuttle Atlantis Awaiting Launch

Secret Military Mission Planned

By Howard Benedict
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Space shuttle Atlantis moved to the launch pad today to be readied for a late November flight with a secret Defense Department intelligence-gathering satellite.

Perched vertically atop a huge tracked transporter, Atlantis moved out of an assembly building into the darkness shortly after 1 a.m. to begin the four-mile trip that was expected to take six to eight hours. The transporter, called a crawler, traveled at maximum speed of 1 mph.

The move, befitting the classified nature of the mission, was made without the floodlights, music, speeches and cheers of thousands of workers who showed up when Discovery rolled to the pad July 4 for the first shuttle mission since the 1986 Challenger explosion that killed seven astronauts.

Atlantis is scheduled for launching about Nov. 28, but a firm date won't be set until after a flight readiness review on Nov. 10.

The shuttle will be manned by a crew of five, headed by Navy Cmdr. Robert Gibson. The others are Air Force Lt. Col. Guy Gardner, Air Force Lt. Col. Jerry Ross, Air Force Col. Richard Mullane and Navy Cmdr. William Shepherd.

They will deploy the satellite, believed to carry instruments to verify arms control agreements, and conduct other experiments of a military nature.

The Defense Department has cloaked much of the mission in secrecy. Officials have said the launch will occur between 6:32 a.m. and 9:32 a.m., but the time won't be made public until the countdown reaches nine minutes before the planned liftoff.

Once Atlantis is safely in orbit, there will be a news blackout, except for a brief announcement every 24 hours saying the shuttle is still up there. That plan will be broken only if something serious goes wrong. Sixteen hours' advance notice will be given on the landing.

Two more Defense Department shuttle flights and seven unmanned Titan launches are planned in the next year as the Pentagon aims to start moving into space a backlog of about 24 vital national security payloads grounded by the Challenger explosion and the loss of a Titan rocket three months later.

Federal Court Rejects Tribe's Claim To Land

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Documents dating to the dawn of the republic led a federal appeals court to reject an Indian tribe's claim to 5 1/2 million acres of land in New York state.

The decision Tuesday upheld a lower court ruling against the Oneida Indian nation, which claims it has a right to land stretching from Canada to Pennsylvania.

The Oneidas, joined by four of the five other tribes that made up the once-mighty Iroquois confederacy, sought to overturn treaties made in 1785 and 1788 under which the land was sold for about $50,000.

The Oneidas claimed the Articles of Confederation, which governed the United States before the Constitution was ratified, prevented New York or any other state from enacting the treaties.

But the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals found that the articles "did give the states the power to purchase Indian land within their borders and extinguish Indian title to such land so long as such activity did not interfere with Congress' paramount powers of war and peace with the Indians."

Arlinda Locklear, a lawyer representing about 13,000 Oneidas in New York, Wisconsin and Canada, called the ruling "legally wrong and morally wrong." She said she expected to seek either a rehearing by the 2nd Circuit or to petition the U.S. Supreme Court for a hearing.

The defendants included the state of New York, various state agencies and two companies with operations in the area, St. Regis Paper Co. and Georgia Pacific Corp.

Ray Halbritter, one of two federally recognized representatives of the Oneidas in New York, said that although the tribe lost in the lower courts before, "where we have won is at the Supreme Court level."

"I'm just hoping that this will not force us into more litigation," he said from Cambridge, Mass., where he is a law student.

The Oneidas are still negotiating the claim with the state, he said.

At issue is a strip of land, 50 to 60 miles wide, running through the heart of New York from Ogdensburg on the St. Lawrence River south past Binghamton to Hales Eddy on the Pennsylvania line.

The lawsuits were brought in 1978 by the Oneida Indian Nation of New York, the Oneida Indian Nation of Wisconsin and the Oneida of the Thames Band, of Ontario, Canada.

They later were joined by four of the other tribes that make up the Six Nations of the Iroquois: the Onondagas, the Mohawks, the Senecas and the Tuscaroras. The Cayugas are the sixth nation.

Boston lawyer Allan vanGestel, who represented the 12 New York counties encompassed by the land claim, said the decision is expected to end to one of the largest Indian land claims in the eastern United States and also will have a major impact on future Indian claims.

Candidates Push Final Campaigns

By William M. Welch
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

George Bush, his lead holding firm in the polls, is confidently talking about the look of a Bush presidency and borrowing his opponent's "I am on your side" line. Michael Dukakis visited his ill wife and pressed his populism in the Midwest.

With the race for the White House in its final week, President Reagan was getting in some campaigning today with a stop on behalf of the vice president in Ohio, one of the battlegrounds. Before leaving California on Tuesday, the president derided Dukakis as "no Harry Truman, and he's no FDR."

New polls released a week from Election Day showed the Republican presidential nominee still leading solidly.

A CBS News poll conducted Saturday through Monday showed Bush ahead by 12 percentage points, 53-41 percent — virtually the same as the 13-point lead a CBS poll had shown a week ago.

But fully one voter in five said they could still change their minds before Election Day. The survey was of 1,066 probable voters and had a margin of error of plus or minus three percentage points.

An ABC News-Washington Post poll done Wednesday through Monday gave the GOP nominee a 13-point lead over Dukakis, 55-42 percent. The survey of 1,099 probable voters had a margin of error of four percentage points. An ABC News poll in California showed Bush the leader by seven percentage points in the nation's largest state.

Dukakis aides contended their own private polls showed the Democratic presidential nominee gaining on his Republican rival in battleground states. Privately, some Democrats expressed doubts.

Dukakis was following a relentless schedule. Following evening appearances in Detroit and Kansas City, he made a late-night flight to Minneapolis where his wife Kitty spent a second night hospitalized with what aides said was a viral infection.

Spokesman Paul Costello said her fever had eased and she was improving.

The Democratic nominee was campaigning today in Minneapolis, Chicago, Pittsburgh, and Philadelphia, where he was joining former Democratic candidate Jesse Jackson at rally at a local high school.

Dukakis appealed to black voters Tuesday night at Detroit's Greater Grace Temple, where he said the Republicans have ignored the needs of inner cities and are insensitive to the plight of minorities. Dukakis was joined by Rosa Parks, whose refusal to move to the back of a Birmingham, Ala., bus was a milestone of the civil rights movement.

Bush spoke to an evening rally in Waukesha, Wis., where he took a line directly from Dukakis' new populist campaign theme.

"I am on your side," Bush declared. "You are on my side."

Kitty's Better

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis says his ailing wife is in good spirits but was "pretty sick" and would remain in the hospital at least through today.

Dukakis visited his wife Kitty for about half an hour early today at the University of Minnesota Hospital after juggling his campaign schedule to spend the night in the area.

Hospital spokeswoman Mary Stanik said Mrs. Dukakis, who was admitted to the hospital with a 102-degree fever, is suffering from an upper respiratory viral infection or an allergic reaction to sinus medication.

Mrs. Dukakis, 51, was hospitalized for observation and tests Monday when she complained of fever and chills while campaigning.

"She was pretty sick yesterday," said Dukakis, who took his wife red flowers and was accompanied by their daughter Andrea. "She's just got to take it easy."

Asked what his wife said to him, the Massachusetts governor replied, "She said she loves me."

Question: Is Everyone All Polled Out?

By Gary Langer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Political pollsters have plied their trade in stormy weather in the presidential election's final weeks, buffeted by complaints that their work is distorting the campaign and alienating voters.

Democrat Michael Dukakis has led the criticism — not surprisingly, for he's trailed George Bush in the polls. But Republicans also have questioned the effect on the race of the emphasis on poll results.

"The question is whether these polls are giving the impression to the American people that their vote doesn't matter," Frank J. Fahrenkopf Jr., the Republican Party chairman, said Tuesday. "There is that danger."

The public, as well, is down on the polls. In recent Gallup surveys, 45 percent said reporting who's ahead in polls is bad for the country. As many said polls do not improve press coverage of the election. And even more said polls should not be reported in the final weeks of a presidential campaign.

The sentiment likely reflects disquiet with the way polls have muscled in on the political discussion this year. Bush and Dukakis have been scored in more than 90 major national surveys, six times the number in the 1964 election.

"I think people are a little tired of all the horserace polls," said Andrew Kohut, president of the Gallup Organization. "They want to know what the state of the race is and they're interested in public opinion. But there has been such a barrage of polls that they're saturated."

That certainly is true of the candidates. Dukakis, trailing for months, has begun to express frustration. Saturday, he declared that voters were "not going to let the pollsters or anyone else make their decisions for them."

Poll-takers agree. While reporting on polls may shape public perceptions of who's ahead, they said in interviews this week, poll results themselves disprove the suggestion that surveys influence voter decisions.

"Every time people complain about the polls they talk about it leading opinion," said CBS News pollster Warren Mitofsky. "If that was the case, the polls would never change except to go up for the leading candidate."

"I don't know of a single pollster or political analyst who believes that the polls are creating a bandwagon effect," said Everett Ladd, head of the Roper Center for Public Opinion Research at the University of Connecticut.

"There's a lot of evidence that people reach their voting decisions for deep and very substantial reasons," Ladd said. "They have interests and identifications that they bring to bear on the process. They aren't tossed around because of what a poll finds."

Kohut had an illustration: In Gallup polls, the share of respondents who expect Bush to win has grown from 45 percent in mid-August to 68 percent last week. But Bush's own lead over Dukakis moved far less in that period, from four points to 10 points among registered voters.

"What's happening is that people are recognizing that Bush is ahead," said Kohut. "But it doesn't seem to be affecting voter preferences."

Fahrenkopf, though, expressed other concerns — that polls were hogging too much of the media's campaign coverage and that the findings could dissuade voters from turning out on Election Day.

"It's not just the existence of the polls themselves. It's when we get to the indication of the polls that the race is over," he said. "I have no indication that that affects voter turnout. But it could."

Mitofsky said it does not. "We don't discourage participation," he said. "Participation has stayed at the same share of the number of people registered in every election since 1964," while polls proliferated.

"If people were only going to vote for who they thought would win," Mitofsky added, "then there wouldn't be a single Democratic vote for president cast in Utah," where Republicans predominate in national races.

Critics still raise the murky question of whether exit polls discouraged turnout in 1980, when the networks declared Ronald Reagan the winner while polls in the West still were open.

Los Angeles Times pollster I.A. Lewis said his surveys indicated turnout was not affected, but that is difficult to gauge with all the factors at play in an election. In any case, he said, polls that show a solid leader may cut two ways, creating complacency among one candidate's backers as much as discouragement among the other's.

On campaign coverage, some pollsters agreed that surveys may steal attention from other issues.

"It is unassailably obvious that the reporting and discussion of elections is much more poll-driven than it was in the past," said Ladd. "There is a feeling at times that maybe the discussion of elections is just too occupied with poll findings."

But the merits are arguable, others said. Polls can elucidate issues as well as simply indicating who's ahead. And, Ladd said, "In a democracy, there are a lot worse things to do than systematically ask people their opinion."

Before news organizations conducted polls, Lewis noted, they had to make do with possibly misleading briefings from candidates' own pollsters or with unsubstantiated views of pundits. With the latter, the Republican convention may have been rated a failure because of the controversy over Bush's running mate, Sen. Dan Quayle.

Post Passes Up Endorsements, Says Race Is 'Disappointment'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Washington Post today said it would not endorse either major party candidate for president, calling this year's race a "terrible campaign, a national disappointment."

In a long editorial entitled "No Endorsement," the newspaper's editors said "we would have liked" to support Democrat Michael Dukakis but were especially alarmed at his deficiencies in foreign affairs and defense.

The editorial said Republican George Bush made himself too beholden to the far right of the party and he is "really the major source and cause of the tawdriness of this campaign."

Mentioning Bush's controversial choice of a running mate, it said "the prospect of Dan Quayle's suddenly having to succeed him in office will remain a legitimate anxiety."

"This has been a terrible campaign, a national disappointment," the newspaper said. "For our part ... we do not feel that we can in good faith argue for the vindication of the cheap shots that have animated George Bush's campaign ... or close our eyes to alarming deficiencies of the Democratic candidate as a prospective president."

Bentsen Says Victory Coming

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CARBONDALE, Ill. — Democratic vice presidential nominee Lloyd Bentsen is stubbornly insisting that the Democrats are staging a comeback that will put them over the top on Election Day.

Bentsen wraps up a six-state swing in three days today with appearances in Illinois, Ohio and West Virginia, before returning to his native Texas by nightfall.

At every stop, Michael Dukakis' running mate compares the Democratic ticket's fate with efforts by Harry Truman and John Kennedy, who came from behind in the last weeks of the campaign and won.

"Today, the polls are closing, the momentum is our way," he told a rally attended by about 2,000 students Tuesday night at Washington University in St. Louis.

The Republicans think the campaign is over and are "popping those campaign corks, but I'll tell you on November ninth they're going to have the worst hangover they've ever had," he said.

As he has been doing at other stops, Bentsen held over his head a reprint of the 1948 Chicago Tribune which declared, wrongly, "Dewey Defeats Truman."

Mike McCurry, Bentsen's press secretary, said the message would remain simple through the final days of the campaign.

Quayle Warns Against Letdown

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Sen. Dan Quayle is warning Republicans against overconfidence in the waning days of the presidential campaign, saying the GOP could end up like Thomas Dewey in 1948.

Arriving here Tuesday night at the end of a long campaign day in Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana, Quayle said "the polls have been all over the lot."

"We believe, in fact, we have a small but marginally insignificant lead," he told reporters.

Two nationwide surveys released

Tuesday night show the Republican ticket of George Bush and Quayle holding double-digit leads of 12 and 13 points in the final week before the election.

Earlier, while campaigning for Indiana Lt. Gov. John Mutz, who is trying to succeed Robert Orr in Quayle's homestate of Indiana, the senator sought to deflect burgeoning speculation about whether his wife, Marilyn, might be appointed to fill his vacant Senate seat in the event of a Bush-Quayle victory next Tuesday.

"It's going to be Bob Orr's decision," Quayle said of talk within Republican Party circles in the state that Mrs. Quayle might be offered the vacant seat. During an interview last weekend on the syndicated program "McLaughlin: One on One," Quayle's wife refused to flatly rule out such a possibility.

"I think it's a real honor for her to be considered," Quayle told reporters in Evansville. "I'm not going to do anything to disrupt the discussion."

Farmville Utility Customers To Get Equal Payment Bills

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

FARMVILLE — Beginning in December, qualifying Farmville utilities customers will be able to participate in an Equal Payment Billing Plan based on their past 12 months' usage.

Farmville commissioners enacted the plan Tuesday night in an effort to "help our people on fixed incomes."

Under the plan, qualifying customers will have their anticipated bills averaged over 12 months and pay an equal amount for each of the succeeding 11 months, with a catch-up billing next November.

The equal payment plan will be available only to residential customers who have had 12 months of continuous service at their current locations with no history of payment delinquency.

Town administrator Frank Bradham said advertising about the new service will start right away, with enrollment possible immediately by calling the town office at 753-5116.

Catherine Beamon, director of the Farmville Girl Scout service unit, appealed to the board for help in keeping Girl Scouting active in Farmville. She asked the commissioners to reconsider their announced intention to start billing the Girl Scouts for utilities at the Girl Scout Hut.

Ms. Beamon said the Girl Scouts have been operating in Farmville for more than 40 years and the Girl Scout Hut on Contentnea Street has not had a new roof in 40 years, nor is there any money for any repair or maintenance on the building. All money the organization is granted through Farmville Charitable Services must go to pay the gas heating bill, she said. Insurance also must be paid.

The board has been considering doing away with its policy of providing free utilities to non-profit organizations in its institutional category. Board members decided to defer until the July 1, 1989, billing the ending of this policy.

Board members promised Mrs. Beamon that Girl Scouts in Farmville will not have to end their activities because of lack of funds. They said they will look at ways the town can help the organization.

Public hearings were set for a Dec. 6 board meeting on two rezonings. W.A. Allen Jr. has requested the rezoning of property at Walnut and Belcher streets from R-5 and general business to residential multi-family. Donald N. Sigmon has requested the rezoning of property at the northwest corner of the intersection of U.S. 264 Bypass and Farmville East Thoroughfare from RA-20 to Highway Business.

Waste water treatment plant staff members were commended for the efficiency they used in installing siphon pipes at the plant recently. Bradham said that, because of thorough prior planning by the staff, a rented crane that could have been needed for two days was on its way back to Greenville within six hours after the project was begun, saving the town a lot of money.

Farmville volunteer firemen were commended for their painting of the fire station of their own volition.

Bradham said the town will begin moving into the new municipal building in late November. He said the police department will be in place first, then other offices will be moved.

The purchase of a microcomputer for the tax collection and finance offices was approved. The computer will be supplied by Computer Data Systems of Farmville for $5,786.

A resolution to release the town's share of state funds to the Mid-East Commission was approved. The amount this year is $888.40.

The town's ordinance for the removal and disposition of vehicles declared to be public nuisances was amended to provide an appeals procedure.

The town's traffic ordinance was amended to include no parking on four-lane highways within the corporate limits of Farmville.

The purchase of a backhoe attachment for the town's Ditch Witch was approved at a cost of $4,375.

Also approved was the purchase of two 1,000-foot reels of electrical cable at $1,343 per 1,000 feet from Eastern Electric Co.

Recital Is Thursday

Stephen Purifoy of New Bern, a student of Jeff Jarvis in the School of Music, East Carolina University, will present his senior tuba recital in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the ECU campus at 7 p.m. Thursday.

Purifoy will play works by Aleksei Lebedjew, Robert Muczynski, Henri Tomasi, Serge Rachmaninoff, Samuel Scheidt, Gordon Jacob, A. Catozzi and Arthur Frackenspohl.

He will be assisted by Bert Sullivan, Jeff Skillen, Ledford Wilson, Richard Edwards, Fran Parrish, Clay Wagner, Steve Turner, Brad Langhans, Scott Pagona, Kim Kelly and William Mitchell.

Forum Is Thursday

The third in a series of free "Enlightenment in the East" public forums is at 7:45 p.m. Thursday in the Willis Building auditorium, First and Reade streets.

The session will focus on the literature of eastern North Carolina. Speakers are Dr. W. Keats Sparrow, chairman of the ECU English Department and E. Ted Malone, N.C. Department of Cultural Resources.

Sparrow's topic is "Economic Views of Eastern North Carolina as Reflected in 18th and 19th Century Literature," and Malone's is "How 20th Century Novelists Deal with Eastern North Carolina."

The forums are sponsored by Historic Hope Foundation and ECU's Joyner Library. The series' final forum is Nov. 10.

The Historic Hope exhibit of rare books, maps and historic prints is open at Joyner Library. For more details, call 757-6671.

 2, said, "My goal is to represent all of the people of Pitt County. You are my concern." James said, "I tell it the way it is."
 Citing achievements made during his four years as a commissioner (pay increases for county employees, the new 911 emergency telephone system, solid waste disposal — "We've started recycling to make our landfill last longer"), James said, "we have the best county that there is."

But James suggested that the county may "have to be more active ... take more of an active roll" in supporting rescue squads throughout the county and do more to "get more minorities" in management positions.

James said, "I don't believe money is the answer" to the problems facing the county's school system. "No, I certainly do not."

Instead, he said, "If we're going to have quality education, we're going to have to go back to the basics ... reading, writing and arithmetic (and) we've got to have the parents involved."

Jean Darden, James' unaffiliated opponent in District 2, said, "My theme for the election is PIE: progress with fiscal responsibility; involvement of the total community to make changes, and education ... my priority issue."

A retired teacher, Ms. Darden said that capital outlay money for the schools and supplements for teachers should be increased and she said minority employment should be improved. "Go out and find them," she said.

Ms. Darden said that county commissioners and Greenville officials should work together to ensure the success of the medical district. "It should be a cooperative effort between the city and county" and the district should be kept "strictly medical," she said. "There has to be cooperative effort."

Running unopposed for the District 4 seat, Democrat Linwood Mercer voiced support for "planned, orderly economic development" and said the county government has to "operate with good fiscal restraints."

A former mayor of Farmville, Mercer also suggested that the county is "going to have to deal" with the question of more blacks in management positions.

D.D. Garrett, a Democrat running unopposed for the District A seat, said, "I have seen some changes in Greenville and Pitt County," but he said, "I'm not satisfied. I want to see more changes for the better."

"I'd like to see Greenville and Pitt County grow orderly and steadily economically. At the same time, I'd like to see growth ... without interfering with the quality of life for any citizen." And Garrett said when growth affects the quality of life, "I shall oppose it."

Garrett also voiced support for improved educational opportunities, increased employment for unskilled workers, an increase in the war on drugs ("Nothing deteriorates the quality of life more than drugs") and improved health care "for all citizens."

Republican Stuart Shinn, a candidate in the District B race, said, "I feel it's in the best interest of the citizens, with some regularity, to change the people in office. Two terms or eight years," Shinn said, "is long enough."

According to Shinn, "I'm opposed to 911 as it exists." And "until it is enhanced, I want to shut it down."

Shinn cited the "critical need for jail space (and) more people and space for social services," as two issues the county must address. He also said the board "ought to meet at night so folks can get involved."

Incumbent Democrat Charles Gaskins, who is Shinn's opposition in the District B race, said, "Pitt County is the most progressive county in the east ... the envy of our neighbors," because of such assets as Pitt County Memorial Hospital, the East Carolina University School of Medicine, the airport, and Pitt County Community College.

Much of the progress in the county has occurred during the 20 years he has served on the board, Gaskins suggested.

"My sincere effort," Gaskins said, "has been to represent all the people of the county in an unbiased way."

Democrat Wilton Duke said, "I want to be your commissioner."

Running unopposed for the District C seat, Duke suggested that cooperation between the city of Greenville and county commissioners could be improved if the city council and commissioners met regularly "to talk over their mutual problems."

League member Margaret Wirth acted as moderator for the forum, which was designed to give candidates an opportunity to make their views on various issues known to the public.

The League of Women Voters is a non-partisan political organization which takes positions on issues affecting the community, but does not endorse candidates.

they couldn't find any other place." But, Warren said, "it's not true" that the lease ended because of any conflict of interest. "They closed and moved the agency to Wilmington, I believe."

Warren said he notified the corrections department — in a letter dated July 17, 1985 — that "I will need to terminate my lease with your department" in April 1986. Warren's letter to Ben Irons, then legal counsel for the corrections department, also said, "This two acres of property has become so valuable that I must use it for other purposes."

But Warren said a letter from Charles L. Holliday, deputy director of the Department of Administration, dated Aug. 20, 1985, notified him that the state would terminate the lease effective Nov. 15, 1985. "They closed and moved the office to some other place (because) there were not enough inmates."

"They came to me for the facility," and "it was all public knowledge. I filed it on my economic interest report," which is required to be filed by all members of the General Assembly, Warren said.

As for the farm land adjacent to the proposed route of the U.S. 264 bypass, Warren said, "I don't consider it a conflict of interest. I haven't sold the state anything ... haven't purchased anything from the state. I bought in as an investor. It's all above board."

Mayo, who sold Warren an interest in the property, said Tuesday that "I bought that piece of property myself and took on" several partners. (Warren) "didn't know anything about the farm 'til he purchased his interest."

And, according to Mayo, Warren "had nothing to do with the sale," which Mayo said was handled by a real estate firm: "A real estate agent sold (the property) to people in Goldsboro. (Warren) didn't know them and I didn't know them either."

"Mr. Warren did not know the people that bought it. He never met them as far as I know. He had 25 percent interest in it."

"Certainly his position (as a member of the General Assembly) had no bearing on it (the purchase or sale of the property)." Mayo said.

Author Believes Women's Scramble Shows Desperation

By Geneva Collins
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Karen makes $250,000 a year working for E.F. Hutton and prides herself on being "a shark." Anita runs miles every day but has been bulimic for eight years. Marjorie has made straight A's all her life but panics and overprepares for every test.

What all these women have in common, says Colette Dowling, is an overwhelming desire to achieve perfection. In her book "Perfect Women" (Summit, $18.95), Dowling argues that this striving for ever-higher goals — hours of aerobics every day, 60-hour work weeks, making every meal from scratch — is not a healthy exercise to fulfill one's potential but a desperate scramble to fill an inner void.

"An artistic drive is satisfying. A drive to perform is not," she said. "It's a kind of rigid, compulsive — kind of a symptom, as compared to something that's really joyful and self-expressive and gives back to us."

Dowling, best known for her 1981 best seller "The Cinderella Complex," recently talked about her new book in an interview at her publisher's office.

"The whole drive to be perfect comes out of a feeling of inferiority," she said. "We wouldn't even be interested in the idea of perfection if there wasn't something that we psychologically were compensating for."

Asked why she thinks this striving for perfection is unique to women, Dowling said, "Women as an entire gender have been disparaged culturally for eons, and it's a particular kind of gender feeling about self that gets handed down from the mother to the daughter."

"And now that there's so much opportunity available to women, I think we've just stepped into a new kind of performance arena. I think we're using our achievements to bolster our self-esteem, in the way we used to use our appearance or our cooking or our housekeeping skills or whatever."

She cites a litany of symptoms from which these overachievers suffer: anorexia and bulimia; drug and alcohol problems; compulsive shopping. All except the drug and alcohol abuse are overwhelmingly female problems.

The premise of the "Cinderella Complex" was that women had a deep-seated belief that they could not take care of themselves, that despite the gains of the women's movement they were still waiting for a Prince Charming to whisk them off to happily ever after.

The Associated Press

'Perfect Women' is Dowling's second book

Dowling, 50, said that work was based on her own experience. In the 1970s, after ending a 9-year marriage to an alcoholic, she moved in with a man she still lives with in New York's Hudson Valley. There, Dowling, who had supported herself and her three children as a free-lance writer, abandoned her career and became a full-time housewife. Her partner's refusal to accept her dependency, as well as the therapy she was undergoing, gave her the initiative to write "The Cinderella Complex."

"Perfect Women" is similarly based on Dowling's personal experience. The author found that despite the success of "The Cinderella Complex" (26 weeks on the best-seller list) she still felt insecure about her work and at a loss for her next project.

In "Perfect Women," Dowling cites psychological studies detailing the mother-daughter relationship that starts at the crib.

"They (mothers) are not overly involved with us (daughters) as separate persons; they're overly involved with us as extensions of themselves," Dowling said.

"Perfect Women" suffers from the kind of generalized prescription that most self-help books offer, but if it makes a few self-improvement junkies stop buying these kinds of pop psychology books and learn to accept themselves as they are, then it's done its work.

Record-Breaking Hornet's Nest Now A Museum Piece

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WENKSVILLE, Pa. — Stirring up a hornet's nest is a bad idea to begin with, but riling up the 20,000 paper-making wasps that once inhabited a nest nearly the size of a kitchen table could have proved fatal.

The gray paper nest, a permanent exhibit of the Wilson College Museum of Natural History, was built in one season by bald-faced hornets, a species common to North America.

It is 55 inches long, 30 inches wide and 22 inches deep. It is the largest of its kind found in the state and could be a national record, say officials of the Pennsylvania State Museum and Geno J. Torri, director of the Wilson College Museum.

The Smithsonian Institution is reviewing the dimensions to confirm its place in the record books, says Torri, a regional representative for the Smithsonian and an adjunct professor at Wilson College and Millersville University.

Michael D. King discovered the nest in the eaves of the outkitchen of a home he bought near Wrensville, deep in the heart of fruit country.

King wanted the nest preserved, and when contacted by Torri, agreed to donate the natural oddity to the museum.

Removing the nest from the eaves without destroying it took more than an hour. King first had to remove an aluminum roof, where the beginnings of new nests also were found. Torri then helped him cut the lathes and joist to remove the nest intact.

The nest is being mounted in the ceiling of the museum. To better illustrate the unusual size of the nest, a more typical nest will be placed nearby.

A Crocheted Plaid Afghan Provides Color, Warmth

A plaid afghan? Crocheted? Yes! And you'll love the look and feel of this unique design that is surprisingly easy to make. Only two stitches — double crochet and chain — form the basic open-mesh background with alternating rows of three colors creating a striped pattern.

Then, strands of yarn are woven through the open spaces to create the plaid. On each row of weaving, 7-inch lengths of yarn are left at each end and later knotted to automatically form the fringe. That's all there is to it.

In less time than you would believe, you will have one of the most attractive — and easiest — afghans around. Four-ply, worsted-weight yarn and a size G crochet hook are used; the finished size is 50 inches by 54 inches, excluding the fringe.

To obtain directions for making the Mad for Plaid Afghan, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-103088 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. C-103088 by sending a check or money order for $25.96 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and yarn in your choice of blue, rose, green or earth tones.

When visiting us, our daughter-in-law, Debbie, discovered that she hadn't brought a warm cap for our grandson, Kevin. So she asked if I had some spare yarn and a crochet hook. This brought a big laugh from my husband, who claims I have yarn in every nook and cranny of the house except for this bathroom.

After I gathered the materials, Debbie whipped out a little ribbed stocking cap in just a couple of hours. I was intrigued with the shaping of the cap, so asked her to show me how she did it.

She used knitting worsted-weight yarn and a size J hook, but you could use any yarn you wish with a hook size suitable for your choice of yarn.

First, work a chain for the desired length of the cap from top to bottom, plus an extra inch or two for a turned-back cuff. Try working a chain of about 10 inches. You can adjust the length of your chain to work various size caps. The entire cap is done in single crochet worked through the back loop of each stitch.

For the first row, work a single crochet in the second chain from the hook and in each remaining chain. Chain 1 and turn. On row 2, work a single crochet in each stitch of the previous row to within 4 stitches of the end. Do not work any stitches in these last 4 stitches. Chain 1, turn.

For Row 3, single crochet to the end of the row. Chain 1, turn. Row 4: Work a single crochet in all stitches, including the skipped stitches of Row 2. Chain 1, turn. Row 5: Single crochet to end of row. Chain 1, turn. Place a pin at the end of this row. Repeat Rows 2 through 5 over and over until the cap is wide enough to fit around head.

The end marked by the pin will be the bottom of the cap, which will be the end you will want to have wide enough to fit around the head. When the desired width is reached, end with the completion of Row 3 of the pattern and sew the side edges together.

Unique design is surprisingly easy to make

With knitting worsted-weight yarn, you can get a cap out of approximately 2 ounces of yarn. If you have a lot of leftovers, you could stripe the cap by changing colors on every fourth row.

Was there ever a crocheter (or knitter) without boxes, bags or drawers full of odds and ends of leftover yarns? Most of us hold onto these for years just in case we'll ever need, or find a use for the them.

From time to time, I'll give you other ways of using up leftovers, but I am hoping that many of you will send in your own favorite ways of doing so, so then I will share these with the rest of you.

Mom Says She's A Homebody, But Could Have Agoraphobia

Dear Abby: My husband and I have been married for seven years, have two children, ages 2 and 6, and have a wonderful life together. However, I am at a loss to understand this problem, and I'm too embarrassed to discuss it with anyone.

I am reluctant to hire a baby sitter so that my husband and I can go out. Every time an event comes up that requires our attendance without the kids, I experience tremendous anxiety. I have even lied to my husband several times, telling him I wasn't able to get a sitter when, in fact, I didn't even try to get one.

It is now 1 p.m. and we're invited to a 7 p.m. dinner, and I am very upset because my husband is pushing me to get a sitter and I don't really want to go out. I am educated, intelligent, over 40, and I just don't understand why it's so difficult for me to leave my children for even a few hours.

We can't afford psychiatric help, so I'm hoping that you can throw some light on my problem. I am a homebody who is perfectly happy to remain inside my house. I even dislike going outside to do yardwork. Abby, can you help me? -- Homebody In Irvine, Calif.

Dear Homebody: I am not qualified to diagnose your symptoms, but they would suggest that you are "agoraphobic" — you have a fear of leaving your house. You must talk to your doctor about this. It is far more common than most people think, and you can be helped. (There are support groups in your area.)

Please don't ignore these signs. After you've seen your physician, write again and let me know how you are. I care.

Dear Abby: At 60, I need your advice. My husband is disabled and retired, and I am facing retirement soon. Our problem is a 35-year-old daughter who is a credit-card junkie. She's divorced, has one child, gets child support, has a good job, but we have to help her out every time she's in debt over her head because she has no one else to turn to. (This is the third time.) We can't understand how she got into the habit of charging things she can't afford. She wasn't raised that way. We never bought anything we couldn't afford.

She asks us to love her as she is. We do love her, but we can't afford her. She's a beautiful, generous, sensible person, but this one fault is getting us down. How can we help her? — Sleepless Nights

Dear Sleepless: First, tell her that she is not going to have her parents around forever to rescue her when she gets in a jam. She needs professional counseling now to teach her how to budget her money and live within her means. Credit unions, family service centers and some religious groups offer some kind of free or low-cost counseling.

Advise your daughter to write to: National Foundation for Consumer Credit Inc., 8701 Georgia Ave., Suite 507, Silver Spring, Md. 20910. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope, and she will be told where counseling is available in her area.

Your daughter should also inquire about behavior modification therapy, available through her county mental health clinic. Irresponsible spending has become a national epidemic. Your daughter is not alone. Good luck.

HARPER'S BAZAAR

You can take a short cut to fall fashion with a cropped hairstyle — one that is mischievously feminine and playfully alluring.

The latest short cuts, according to an article in the current issue of Harper's Bazaar, are sleek in texture with soft wispy bangs or strands curving over one eye for a look as disarming as a frilly blouse with a tailored jacket.

Pivotal to these split-personality styles are new layering techniques and some styling tricks-of-the-trade you can use at home.

"Women want to show off their neck and shoulders now," said styling expert Howard Fugler. "This fall, cuts stop a bit below the chin, or however higher you dare."

The small head is predominant. Instead of puffs and moussed-out volume, the hair bones into the crown or against the face.

"I leave extra length on the crown," Fugler said. "That way, you have more styling freedom — scrunch it up or do a mass of bangs, a more womanly attitude."

Refined cutting methods play an important role in the new hair look. "Shingling" with a razor tapers the ends very short at the neck and temples. The top is kept longish and strands are snipped on the bias — at 45 degree angles.

The short cut becomes less severe when layers are gently snipped beneath the surface. Also, the hair is cut dry, yielding a finer blending of layers for a subtle buoyancy.

A smart alternative to very short is the updated pageboy, clipped a few inches below chin level and swept behind the ear. Stylists favor all one length, perhaps a bit shorter in front. The news is in the back, where ends flip up instead of being forced under with a blow-dryer and brush.

Streamlined texture is attainable even if you were born with curls.

"Usually, your best tool is a natural bristle brush," Fugler said. "But if you have fine hair, try one with nylon and natural bristles to remove static electricity."

After shampooing, comb hair into shape. Then, with brush and blow-dryer, work strands back from temples without forcing the ends under.

Another option — on wet hair apply an alcohol-free gel. Next, use a blow-dryer and your hands to straighten. Don't aim the nozzle near the roots — that will give you unwanted "lift." When completely dry, tame ends with more gel for increased control and shine.

In the time it takes for a neighborly chat, you'll do something important for your family.

Gravesite selection is such a simple task that it takes no longer to accomplish than a neighborly chat over the backyard fence, 20 minutes or so. It's hard to believe that something so simple could end up being so important to your family.

At S.G. Wilkerson & Sons, we'll do everything we can to make selecting a gravesite seem as natural and easy as a chat with a friend. Call us.

City Says Halloween Festivals May Stop

Knowles said several weapons were confiscated Monday night, including whips and chains, while a military-issued M-16 machine gun, with the bolt welded to make it inoperative, was confiscated Saturday night. "But people in the crowd couldn't tell it was a fake," Knowles said.

Knowles said other dangerous situations existed, including a man who came to the event as the "Angel of Death," wielding a large sickle in the crowd, while another person, pretending to be a golfer, took wild swings with a golfing iron at empty beer cans on the street.

Knowles told the council that while an ALE agent was investigating a stolen automobile, the driver ran over the agent after the agent identified himself and attempted to stop the moving vehicle.

ALE agent Richard Thornell of Greenville was treated and released Tuesday from Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Greenville police said the driver of the car, William J. Glester III, was subsequently apprehended and arrested by state Highway Patrol and ALE officers.

In another incident, Knowles said someone "not in control of all their faculties" drove through a street barricade and was stopped just before striking the checkpoint barrier blocking the crowd.

"If we hadn't (stopped the driver), they would have gone right down Fifth Street and right into the people," Knowles said.

Following the report by Knowles, Carter said, "I see absolutely no reason why we should continue to have this kind of activity in our city — they can take it someplace else, just like the drugs — take it out of town."

"We are in a civilized society and anytime they start beating on police and running over ALE officers like they did the night before last and punching folks out, we're not going to have it in this city and with your support, we're going to have a curfew in the city of Greenville. We're going to bring in the National Guard if we have to to keep them out," Carter told the council.

"We want to give them due notice that there will be no more mass halloween parties in the city of Greenville — it's over with."

Carter said he wants the Halloween situation further discussed at the next council action meeting and to "decide once and for all how to deal with this monster ... so as to show the world that Greenville is no longer a dumping ground for all these fools coming in here and creating chaos."

Mayor Pro Tem Lorraine Shinn said she has been concerned about the Halloween festivities for several years and said unruly youths were screaming on her back porch and in her neighborhood Monday night.

"If we don't do something about it, we're condoning it and I can't believe we would continue to condone that kind of behavior. It really disturbs me," she said.

"These kinds of actions now mean that we simply put a stop to it in a very positive, very calm way and there be no haranguing it," said Council Member Nancy Jenkins.

Council member Inez Fridley said if the situation is left unchecked, someone is likely to get killed in the fracas.

Meanwhile, Knowles complimented the various police departments who "behaved with a high level of restraint for the circumstances."

He also said the majority of disturbances were not caused by East Carolina University students or military personal although members of both groups were among those arrested.

"I have to say that other than the craziness of these little bands of people going around beating on people, the rest of the crowd was well behaved," he said.

Knowles said the police will be providing him with a more detailed analysis of the statistics as they are compiled during the week.

Police Chief Jerry Tesmond said local police are planning to meet with ECU administration officials and student body representatives to gather input in what will eventually be a recommendation to the council on the matter.

Halloween festivities also became unmanageable in 1975 when a melee erupted, prompting the arrest by Greenville police of more than 50 people on riot and failure to disperse charges.

ECU Begins Looking For New Coach

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina has formed a search committee to find a replacement for head coach Art Baker, and a number of potential candidates say they are interested in the position. Baker resigned Monday effective at the end of the season. He has accepted a position within the school's athletic department as director of personal development, beginning his duties Feb. 1. It will be an advisory-ry-counseling position designed to assist student-athletes. ECU Chancellor Richard Eakin announced Wednesday the formation of an 11-member advisory committee to select a new head football coach. ECU officials have not identified any candidates for the position but a number of possibilities have ties to the state or to ECU. Former ECU assistants Frank Orgel of South Carolina and Wayne Hall of Auburn are considered possibilities along with Oklahoma offensive coordinator Jim Donnan, Miami (Fla.) offensive coordinator Gary Stevens and Penn State defensive coordinator Jerry Sandusky. "I'd be interested," Stevens said. "What would it take, I don't know. You'd have to talk to somebody and see what they're doing and what they want." "I think they have a nice program there. They're building a new facility (sports medicine building). Basically, they have all the tools that you would need." Orgel, who coached under Pat Dye at ECU from 1974-1979, said he is interested in the position. "You bet," Orgel said. "I love East Carolina and I love that university and the people. I have some fond memories. I spent the best years of my life at that university. "Everybody wants to be a head coach. I certainly would be. I'd like to be the head coach at East Carolina. "East Carolina has a national reputation because of who they've played. That makes it easier to recruit the kids. Having lived there six years, I know the people. There is something special about them." Donnan, a Burlington native, played at North Carolina State and coached at North Carolina under Bill Dooley. He and Sandusky both interviewed for the North Carolina job last year that eventually went to Mack Brown. Interviewed by phone Tuesday in State College, Pa., Sandusky said he had not been contacted by anyone connected with ECU about the position.

"We've got our own problems right now," Sandusky said. "I'm just trying to survive. I'd like to be a head coach. There would be a possibility, but right now it's not on my mind." Marshall head coach George Champ, William and Mary coach Jimmy Laycock and Appalachian State head coach Sparky Woods are other possibilities, but Chaump and Woods both said at their weekly press conferences that they are too

Kansas Hopes To Adapt To Ruling Players Are Being Instructed Not To Discuss The NCAA's Probation

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Kansas basketball coach Roy Williams admits he is angry about an NCAA probation against his team for the next three years. But he says his team will adapt — and he doesn't really want to talk about it. "I have instructed the team that this is the United States of America," Williams said Tuesday after the sanctions were announced. "They don't have to talk to anyone else." The penalties were the result of recruiting violations that occurred under former Coach Larry Brown, who left Kansas to accept a lucrative offer from the San Antonio Spurs of the NBA. The three-year probation, which prevents the Jayhawks from defending their national basketball championship, could be extended with even stiffer penalties should Kansas commit further violations within that period. The school also must disassociate itself from backers that Brown identified as Jerry Collins, formerly in broadcast production for KU and now in a similar role for the San Antonio Spurs; Ralph Light, president of R A L Construction of Kansas City; and Mike Marshall, a former KU player who worked in Brown's basketball camp during 1986. The team also cannot bring recruits on paid trips to the KU campus for a year. And the school will be stripped of one scholarship during that period. Williams brought seniors Scooter Barry and Milt Newton to the press conference to discuss the sanctions. At one point, Newton broke into tears and had to leave the room. "I have anger. Scooter and Milt have anger. But there's nothing we can do about it, so why worry about it?" Williams said. "I'm not going to say I'm going to invite the NCAA to my house for dinner tonight. I'm not going to invite last year's staff over to dinner tonight." Newton, a forward and key member of the squad, said the team will not fall apart because of the sanctions.

"We're not going to succumb and take fifth or sixth (in the Big Eight Conference)," Newton said. "This will just make us play harder." But Iowa State coach Johnny Orr said the prohibition against bringing recruits for a visit next year could "be a killer." "How are they going to get somebody to come to their school if they can't bring them on campus for a visit?" Orr said. "It's a touchy situation. The bad thing is nothing will happen to the people who committed the wrongdoing. But I would definitely vote to let them play in our tournament next year." The Big Eight Conference will decide if Kansas can play in its postseason tournament, which selects the conference's automatic qualifier to the NCAA tournament. "The issue of automatic qualification will be discussed by the conference faculty representatives and athletic directors at their next meeting Dec. 7-9 in Kansas City," Big Eight commissioner Carl James said. Brown acknowledged the penalties resulted largely from improper recruiting inducements given to one-time transfer Vincent Askew during a 10-day period in 1986. Brown, Collins, Light and Marshall were responsible for the inducements, Brown said Tuesday. "The saddest thing is that I'm here in San Antonio," Brown said in a telephone interview with the Kansas City Times. "There's a new coaching staff, and the kids are suffering." "That really bothers me. The kids at the university who had nothing to do with the allegations can't go to the tournament." Brown, interviewed later Tuesday night on ESPN, said that a "source close to Vincent Askew" was the informant to the NCAA. When asked whether the source was former Memphis State coach Dana Kirk, Brown said he could neither confirm nor deny it. Chancellor Gene Budig could not be reached for comment. In a prepared statement, however,

Reds' Sabo Named NL's Top Rookie

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Chris Sabo is taking nothing for granted. The Cincinnati Reds' third baseman completed an improbable major-league arrival Tuesday by receiving National League Rookie of the Year honors. The award, voted by the Baseball Writers Association of America, topped a season in which he went from unknown backup infielder to All-Star to local hero because of his gritty style of play. The only thing he didn't do was convince himself he's an entrenched major leaguer. "I don't feel secure at all," he said Tuesday. "I've always felt that way. As far as I'm concerned, I've got to win a job in '89 like I did this year. "My dad always said, as long as you produce, you'll be wanted. When you stop producing, you're gone."

He produced well enough at the season's start to make veteran Buddy Bell expendable, earn a backup spot on the NL All-Star team, and win recognition as the Jackie Robinson NL Rookie of the Year despite a poor second half. Sabo, 26, received 79 points and 11 first-place votes from a panel of 24 writers, two from each NL city. First baseman Mark Grace of the Chicago Cubs was second with 61 points, followed by right-hander Tim Lincecum of the Los Angeles Dodgers with 35. Ron Gant of Atlanta had 22 points, and Roberto Alomar of San Diego had 11. Damon Berryhill of the Cubs and Gregg Jefferies of the New York Mets each had three points, and Ricky Jordan of the Philadelphia Phillies had two. Sabo was an improbable rookie star. He rose through the Reds' farm system in five years by establishing a reputation as a good fielder with above-average speed and hitting ability. Still, there was nothing spectacular about him. He came to the Reds' training camp last spring with a shot at a backup infield job. When Bell sprained his knee for the second time in spring training, Sabo got his chance. He started at third base on Opening Day, played well early, then returned to the bench when Bell returned. Bell then reinjured the knee, and Sabo wouldn't sit again. He hit .312 through the All-Star Game with 32 doubles and 10 homers. He was the only rookie in the All-Star Game, stealing a base before a Riverfront Stadium crowd that chanted his name. By that time, Sabo had become a local hero in the mold of manager Pete Rose. Little leaguers were wearing goggles like Sabo. Crowds chanted his name whenever he came to bat.

Chris Sabo

His second half was less stunning. He said he tired in early August, and was slowed by a variety of injuries from his hard-nosed playing style. He batted just .216 in the second half with eight doubles and one homer. Overall, he batted .271 for the season with 40 doubles — third in the NL behind Andres Galarraga's 42 and Rafael Palmeiro's 41 — stole 46 bases, the most by a Reds' rookie since Bob Bescher's 54 in 1909, and led all NL third basemen with a .966 fielding percentage. He's the sixth Cincinnati player to win the award. The last was pitcher Pat Zachry, who tied Butch Metzger of the Padres in 1976 for the honor.

Gamecocks Angered By Wolfpack Fans

By David Drocshak

RALEIGH, N.C. — A letter sent by South Carolina's athletic director, complaining that objects were thrown at coaches and players during last weekend's game at North Carolina State, would not jeopardize the 51-game series between the schools, Jim Valvano said Tuesday. Valvano, the athletic director at N.C. State, said he was not aware that a letter "showing concern" was being sent by Gamecock Athletic Director King Dixon until being alerted by media members Tuesday afternoon. The 15th-ranked Gamecocks defeated N.C. State 23-7 Saturday night to improve their record to 7-1. "He (Dixon) is sending me a letter about his concern, which we share with him, about proper behavior of all fans at any athletic event," Valvano said. "Obviously, anyone that has followed N.C. State athletics in recent years — a couple incidents at football games — we are very concerned about it."

The long-standing series between N.C. State and East Carolina was canceled last year after fans from both schools stormed the Carter-Finley Stadium field, injuring a security guard, officials said. The News and Courier of Charleston, S.C., reported Monday that Gamecock players said Wolfpack fans threw rocks, bottles and golf balls at them during Saturday night's nationally televised game. "We did have some problems toward the end of the game," said Major Miles J. Heckendorn III of the N.C. State public safety department. Heckendorn said public safety officers saw a bottle come out of the crowd. "The problem is identifying exactly how they threw the bottle or the items," he said. "There were some oranges thrown, but I didn't see any golf balls." Heckendorn said no arrests were made at the game, but about a half-dozen people were ejected from the stands for various reasons. Panthers To Fight For Playoff Spot

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

With a playoff berth on the line, North Pitt finds itself in a must-win situation when it takes the field Friday against Pamlico County. "That's what it seems to be. Win and keep playing or lose and you're through," said North Pitt coach Stuart Ennis. Ennis said controlling the Hurricanes' offense, led by running back Terrance Tatum and quarterback Chris Warren will be a key for his team. "The young man throws the ball relatively well if he's given the time," Ennis said. "Then there is always the threat of Terrance Tatum who has been one of the leading rushers in our conference for the last few years. "We have to control the line of scrimmage and get good line play. I think that we're probably a little quicker and if we do a good job at the line of scrimmage then our backs will have a good night."

The Panthers are 5-4 overall and 3-2 in the Eastern Plains Conference. Pamlico is 2-7 overall and 1-4 in the conference. "We want to approach it as a must win situation because that's what it is," he said. "Pamlico doesn't have anything as far as postseason play to play for, but they have pride and sometimes pride will win you a ballgame." Ennis said controlling the Hurricanes' offense, led by running back Terrance Tatum and quarterback Chris Warren will be a key for his team. I think that we're probably a little quicker and if we do a good job at the line of scrimmage then our backs will have a good night."

guys are having trouble getting up for this conference game. "We're trying to emphasize just improving in this and that. We're just trying to motivate them and have something to work for. You don't just sit still. You're either going to get better or get worse." The Chargers have been led by a strong ground game all season. Halfback Tony Reeves has rushed for over 1,000 yards. Fullback Aaron Harper has totaled over 600 yards also. "Tony is right now getting us some positive yards," Chappell said. "He is getting us a lot of good yardage outside. I wouldn't trade him for anybody I've seen. "When people key on that, Aaron is doing a good job running up the middle. That gives us a balanced rushing attack."

Farmville Central

An injury-plagued season apparently came to a close for the Jaguars in a 34-12 loss to Greene Central last Friday. Farmville finished the season 5-5 overall and 3-3 in the EPC with the loss. In order to make the playoffs, Pamlico County would have to upset North Pitt and South Lenoir would have to defeat Greene Central this Friday. "Barring major upsets our season is concluded at 5-5, but stranger things have happened," said Farmville coach Dixon Sauls. All season long, the Jaguars have struggled to overcome injuries at

Penn State Wants To Avoid Losing Mark

By Herschel Nissenson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The last time Penn State's football team had a losing season, Davey O'Brien of Texas Christian was the All-American quarterback, Marshall Goldberg of Pitt was the fullback and one of the ends was Brud Holland of Cornell, who later became the U.S. ambassador to Sweden.

In baseball, the MVPs were Jimmie Foxx of the Boston Red Sox and Ernie Lombardi of the Cincinnati Reds. Hank Greenberg of the Detroit Tigers made a run at Babe Ruth's record of 60 home runs but fell two short.

The year was 1938 and Penn State's record was 3-4-1, not far removed from the 4-4 mark the Nittany Lions will take into Saturday's game against Maryland. In the next 49 years, however, Penn State had 48 winning seasons, plus a 5-5 record in 1966, the year in which Joe Paterno succeeded Rip Engle as head coach. The 49 consecutive non-losing years are an NCAA record.

But with three games remaining in the regular season, Penn State is down to a best 2-of-3 to prevent a losing season. And each of those three opponents has a winning record — Maryland 5-3, Pitt 4-3 and No. 1-ranked Notre Dame 8-0.

"It's the end of civilization as we know it. The barbarians are at the gates," says Dick Jones ('70), a public relations consultant.

The Nittany Lions are in an unaccustomed rut. They have lost three straight games for only the third time in Paterno's brilliant career, including Saturday's 51-30 embarrassment at the hands of West Virginia, the most points ever scored against a Paterno-coached team. The previous two losses were to No. 16 Syracuse (24-10) and No. 18 Alabama (8-3).

If the East were a conference, the standings would read like this:

West Virginia 8-0, Army and Syracuse 6-1, Pitt 4-3, Penn State and Rutgers 4-4, Navy 3-5, Boston College and Temple 2-5.

Has the Beast of the East — 17 Lambert Trophies in the last 27 years — become the Least of the East?

"Certainly we have not played as well as I think we can play, but I don't think I've coached as well as I can coach," Paterno says. "I really think we're close to being a good football team. I just want to try to make sure we don't panic and get out of whack."

No one is ready to leave Penn State for dead — not West Virginia's Don Nehlen, not Dick MacPherson of Syracuse. The Nittany Lions are a young team. Paterno's youngest ever — Tony Sacca is the first true freshman to start at quarterback in Paterno's tenure — and have been riddled by injuries the last two years (third-team All-American tailback Blair Thomas, who rushed for 1,414 yards a year ago, will miss the entire season with a knee injury suffered before the Citrus Bowl last year). But the gap is closing, without a doubt.

"Whether any team in the East is going to dominate the way we dominated for a while there is very debatable," Paterno says. "Looking at it from my end of it, I would hope we could get back to where we could dominate some things."

For the second time in Penn State's last three visits to West Virginia, the game ended with time left on the clock because unruly fans deluged the field.

In 1984, it happened with 38 seconds left following an interception that sealed a 17-14 triumph. West Virginia's first over Penn State in 29 years. This time, there were 49 seconds left.

West Virginia officials said they will take disciplinary action against several dozen students whose IDs were confiscated by security guards, plus those who can be identified as having been on the field. Paterno was taunted and cursed by fans surrounding him.

President Neil Bucklew called the students' actions "an unfortunate conclusion to one of the most tremendous and exciting victories in West Virginia sports history. It was an insult to a very fine Penn State team and to their coaches and fans." Bucklew and athletic director Fred Schaus have written letters of apology to Penn State officials.

"We had a chance to showcase our football team, our university and our state at a time when national attention was focused upon us," Schaus said. "The incident that occurred severely tarnished that opportunity."

There also was some unruliness in Raleigh, N.C., where South Carolina defeated North Carolina State 23-7. Athletic Director King Dixon lodged an official complaint with N.C. State after some South Carolina players said fans threw rocks, bottles and golf balls at them.

"We have gone through official communications to discuss the situation with them," Dixon said.

South Carolina quarterback Todd Ellis — a North Carolinian, by the way — said: "I can't believe those fans. They threw bottles, chicken bones, golf balls, rocks. Coach (Joe) Morrison barely missed getting hit by one of those small liquor bottles. Their players are clean and nice guys, but their fans are the worst."

Navy hasn't defeated Notre Dame in 25 years and trails the series 52-9 following Saturday's 22-7 closer-than-expected loss (Navy was a 34-point underdog). Had a measurement gone Navy's way in the fourth quarter the game might have been even closer.

Had they gotten the call, the Midshipmen would have had a first down at the Notre Dame 30 midway through the final period.

"We played very well on both sides of the ball in the second half, and I don't want to overshadow the play of our team by the officiating, but the officiating stunk," Navy coach Elliot Uzelac said. "I ask any member of the press when they ever saw that many members of the officiating crew get over the ball and get that many opinions. Plus the fact it was clearly shown on the replay that our fullback went over the line and got the first down."

For the record, the Collegiate Independents Football Officiating Association crew included the same four CIFOA officials who worked the Notre Dame-Miami game, which included a controversial call against Miami on a play that could have turned the game around.

Life-in-Division III-Dept.: When Fordham plays at home on Saturday afternoons, the pre-game meal consists of bacon and eggs, etc.

Last Friday night, Fordham had a game at Iona, a short bus trip.

"We called the dining service and said we're going to eat at 3:30 and the game's at 7:30," coach Larry Glueck reports. "We didn't even think about telling them what to fix. We got what they were going to serve the regular students Friday night — Mexican food."

"As a coach, I've always said, 'I want to see fire in your eyes.' I don't think we had fire in our eyes; we had fire in our stomachs."

Nevertheless, Fordham won 31-29, cha-cha-cha.

Baker Will Be Missed

The resignation of East Carolina head football coach Art Baker shouldn't have taken anyone by surprise. There had been widespread rumors for over a month. Yet, when I found out Monday morning of the impending announcement to come later in the day, my heart sank.

To me, it was more than just a changing of the guard in the football office as Baker read a prepared statement at the Monday press conference. I was seeing a good friend suffer through a tough situation. A friend who wanted to continue his battle to bring ECU a winning program, but realized the odds stacked against his contract renewal had become too great.

And the sad part of it — as far as Baker is concerned — is that someone will come in and probably win next season with the youthful players he and his staff have worked with this year. That person will then be heaped with praise and looked on as the saviour of the ECU football program.

The young Pirate players have gained much-needed experience this year and a noticeably lighter schedule won't hurt the chances of a winning campaign next year either. Two Division I-AA teams and one less heavyweight actually makes the 1989 schedule look somewhat realistic.

Monday afternoon as he watched his team ready for a game against Temple Saturday, Baker said he felt he deserved the chance to coach against next year's schedule after all he'd been through. But it just wasn't to be.

The 1-8 record the Pirates compiled this year isn't too appealing, no doubt, but if you toss out the 27-16 loss at Virginia Tech, the Pirates' other seven losses have come against teams which have a combined overall record of 48-7. Three of the Pirates' opponents, West Virginia, Florida State and Miami, still have legitimate shots at a national championship.

Pirate players, assistant coaches, coaches from other universities and even Baker himself have said that no one in America could have come into the situation Baker did four years ago and accomplished any more.

ECU Athletic Director Dave Hart said there was never a certain number of wins set out that Baker had to win this year, and officials within the Pirate Club have said that no real pressure had been heard to remove Baker. Yet, when Baker asked Hart Sunday for some guarantees for his future, he wasn't granted any.

And to me that's sad. Everyone keeps saying that the bottom line in college athletics is wins and losses. But my argument is Baker brought class and dignity to the ECU program at a time when wrongdoings seem to be running rampant in intercollegiate athletics.

Realistically, about the only way success could have been achieved at ECU in the last four years was to cheat.

When you consider the facilities at East Carolina haven't improved much at all in the last 10 years, while schools such as Duke, North Carolina and N.C. State have had improvements, it's amazing Baker was able to get the quality athletes he did. Facilities on the Pirate campus will improve with the completion of the new sports medicine building being built adjacent to Ficklen Stadium.

But that improvement is a little late to help Baker's cause.

Rampants Begin Quest For Soccer Title

Rose High School's soccer team begins its quest for the 4-A soccer title tonight at 7 p.m. at Percy Daniels Field in the first round of the state soccer playoffs.

The Rampants, winners of seven straight contests and the Big East Conference title, will carry a 13-5 overall record into their matchup against Wilmington New Hanover.

Campbell Playing Better And Better

N.C. State strong safety Jesse Campbell continues to solidify his bid for ACC Rookie-of-the-Year and All-ACC honors.

The red-shirt freshman from West Craven High School recorded his season's best 15 tackles against South Carolina in a 23-7 loss last Saturday. Two of those tackles came behind the line of scrimmage, including an 11-yard loss on a reverse when the Gamecocks were facing a third and goal from the three. Campbell also broke up a pair of Todd Ellis passes in the game.

For the year, the 6-3, 208-pounder is second on the team in tackles with 65, first with tackles for lost yardage with eight, first in interceptions with four and tied for first in breaking up pass attempts with six.

All four of Campbell's interceptions have come in ACC contests, two of which saved Wolfpack wins. Campbell picked off Wake Forest quarterback Mike Elkins' pass in the endzone on the Deacons' final drive in a 14-6 Wolfpack win and he also had an interception and 64-yard touchdown return in the Pack's 14-6 win at Georgia Tech.

Loss Of J.R. Will Hurt UNC

When North Carolina All-America forward J.R. Reid underwent surgery for a stress fracture in his left foot last Friday, it put the Tar Heel basketball team in a tough spot early in the year.

The Tar Heels, who annually play one of the toughest schedules in college basketball, may be facing their most rugged of all this season. Now they must face that without Reid. Doctors say the 6-9, 256 pound junior from Virginia Beach, Va., will be out of action for approximately eight weeks.

Carolina's non-Atlantic Coast Conference schedule in the first eight weeks of the season includes the Big Apple NIT; PAC-10 favorites Arizona, Stanford and UCLA; either Temple or Missouri in the second round of the Tournament of Champions; Vanderbilt, Richmond, Towson State, Iowa, San Diego State, Pepperdine and DePaul.

Reid's loss leaves the Tar Heels with just two recruited players over 6-7 — Pete Chilcutt and Scott Williams.

Head coach Dean Smith, who has said repeatedly his team could not afford any injuries to its three big people, now faces a season with 6-4 Kevin Maddenas his first reserve behind Chilcutt and Williams.

"Kevin is smart enough that he can play there defensively," Smith said. "Offensively, it doesn't make any difference because our positions are interchangeable. But we are not going to be a very big team."

Upsets Rearrange Prep Polls

By David Droschak
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — After a Friday night of upsets, five new teams dot The Associated Press high school football poll one week before the end of the regular-season conference races across North Carolina.

Winston-Salem Carver entered the 4-A poll at No. 10 after its 7-0 upset of Greensboro Page, who dropped from fourth to seventh. Carver replaced Raleigh Millbrook, 8-1, in the rankings.

West Henderson entered the 3-A rankings with an 8-1 mark, while Starmount used the same record to burst into the 2-A poll at No. 9 after its 35-6 thrashing of previously unbeaten Mount Airy.

Newcomers Bladenboro and Southwest Onslow tied for the 10th spot in the 1-A rankings.

Garner, 10-0 and winners of 25 straight, will sit and wait for the playoffs to start with an off week and a No. 1 ranking. The defending 4-A champions received nine of a possible 14 first-place votes for 135 points from a statewide panel of prep sports writers.

undefeated and second-ranked Richmond County, 9-0, received four first-place votes, while third-ranked Greenville Rose, also 9-0, took the other top vote.

The remainder of the 4-A poll included Asheville Reynolds and West Mecklenburg, both at 9-0, Fayetteville 71st, Greensboro Page, Fayetteville Smith, McDowell County and Winston-Salem Carver.

Burlington Cummings remained the top 3-A team with 12 top votes for 138 points.

The Cavaliers, 9-0, were followed by undefeated Forest Hills, Havelock, High Point Andrews, East Wake, defending state champion Shelby, Tarboro, Rockingham County, East Lincoln and West Henderson.

In 2-A, Hertford County took the No. 1 spot with 12 first-place votes and 137 points.

Wallace-Rose Hill jumped from third to second with its defeat of previously undefeated East Duplin, who fell to No. 6.

Ayden-Grifton pulled in at the No. 3 spot, followed by Newton-Conover, undefeated West Montgomery, Clayton, Thomasville, Starmount and Monroe.

Bath, which scored 86 points in defeating Mattamuskeet last Friday, held on to the top 1-A spot.

Second-ranked Murphy and fourth-ranked Swain County battle this Friday night, while undefeated Midway placed No. 3 in the poll.

East Montgomery, St. Pauls, Elkin, Hendersonville, North just about every position.

"It's the first time in my experience we never got to develop continuity or momentum," Sauls said. "But we certainly don't use that as an excuse for our season. You play as well as you can with players you have."

"It was one in which we battled back from adversity, defeats and losses of players. We just ran out of gas emotionally and physically. It was difficult for our players as well as our coaches. The highlight of our season would be the win over North Pitt."

But a three-loss string to non-conference opponents Plymouth and Conley, along with a defeat at EPC foe South Lenoir hurt the Jaguars early in the season.

Then, this past week, Farmville needed to win against Greene Central to stay in the playoff race.

"That was a costly loss (to South Lenoir)," Sauls said. "We knew that at the time. We (also) knew we had to beat Greene Central to get into the playoffs."

"We ran out of gas offensively. We ran into a hot offensive team. We just didn't seem to be involved defensively."

Lalonde Ignores Criticism

Says His Left Jab Is Good Enough To Win The Fight

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Donny Lalonde shrugs off charges that he is a one-armed fighter.

Critics say he has no effective left jab or left hook and that no one can beat Sugar Ray Leonard with just a right.

"My left hand definitely is good enough throw Ray off," said Lalonde, who will defend the World Boxing Council light heavyweight championship against Leonard Monday night at Caesars Palace.

Also at stake will be the vacant WBC super middleweight title.

"My left hand is good enough to hurt Ray," Lalonde added.

That remains to be seen, but there is no doubt about the power in his right hand. He has 26 knockouts in winning 31 of 33 pro fights.

Lalonde has had to overcome two operations on his left shoulder and two fractures of his right hand.

The 28-year-old Lalonde first separated the shoulder while playing hockey at age 17. In one fight early in his career, the shoulder popped out twice.

He had it operated on in 1980 and then again in 1982 when a pin was put in.

Lalonde really was a one-armed fighter until April, 1987, when he began undergoing body shaping, a form of muscle therapy that has given more flexibility in the arm.

On May 7, 1987, Lalonde won a 12-round decision over brawling Mustafa Hamsho and on Nov. 27 of that year he won the light heavyweight title with a second-round knockout of Eddie Davis.

In his only defense, he knocked out Leslie Stewart of Trinidad in the fifth round May 29 at Port of Spain.

Except for two fights, Lalonde managed himself until he joined forces with Dave Wolf in 1985. Wolfe hired Tommy Gallagher to train Lalonde in 1987.

"He showed me how to get more leverage with my right hand, inflict more damage to the body, mix in uppercuts, counter the jab and, eventually, patiently, how to take advantage of my improved flexibility to throw a reasonable left jab of my own," Lalonde said Tuesday.

Lalonde says the body shaping makes him feel like a new man. Wolfe said it saved his career.

"It'll never 100 percent of what it could have been," Lalonde said of his left arm, but I think it's getting to be 100 percent of what it can be.

Cavaliers' Moore Is Given Rookie Honor

GREENSBORO (AP) — Virginia wide receiver Herman Moore, who caught seven passes for 175 yards and one touchdown in a 16-10 victory over Virginia Tech, has been chosen the Atlantic Coast Conference rookie of the week.

The 6-foot-5, 197-pound freshman from Danville, Va., gave the Cavaliers a 13-10 lead with a 9-yard touchdown reception with 31 seconds remaining in the second quarter.

Moore's other six receptions were all for first-down yardage, and the 175-yard total was the best single game yardage total by a Virginia freshman.

Earlier, John Howell of Duke and Matt D'Amico, linebackers who turned in outstanding performances as their teams claimed conference victories, were named ACC defensive players.

Howell, a 6-2, 236-pound junior, was in on 14 tackles, had two quarterback hurries and caused a fumble as the Blue Devils defeated Georgia Tech 31-21. With the victory, Duke, 6-2, clinched its first winning season since 1982.

D'Amico, a 6-2, 235-pound senior, was in on seven tackles as the Terrapins defeated North Carolina 41-38. His interception with 41 seconds left to play set up Dan Plocki's game-winning 41-yard field goal and enabled the Terrapins to move into a three-way tie for first place in the ACC.

Also, Maryland quarterback Neil O'Donnell and Clemson center Jeff Bak were named offensive players of the week.

Deacons Wary Of Duke's Big-Play Offense

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Wake Forest coach Bill Dooley says his team must be wary of Duke's big-play offense when the teams meet in an Atlantic Coast Conference matchup Saturday.

"The Duke offense has people who can really run — people who can really fly," Dooley said Tuesday at his weekly news conference. "Duke has one of the best offensive teams in this part of the country."

Dooley said running back Roger Boone, wide receiver Clarkston Hines and quarterback Anthony Dilweg are "big-play people."

Hines "can do it all," Dooley said. "He can catch in the open, the short, the flat. Duke has an excellent quarterback in Dilweg. With him, Duke can run a short-control passing game, a long-control passing game, screens or anything else you may want."

The Demon Deacons are 4-4 and 2-3 in the conference, while Duke is 6-2 and 2-2 in the league.

Injuries Taking Toll On UNC Gridders

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Injuries have left the Tar Heels short at several positions going into Saturday's game against 17th-ranked Clemson, North Carolina Coach Mack Brown says.

Twenty-three players were injured after last week's 41-38 loss to Maryland, Brown said Tuesday.

The most critical injuries were at tailback. Kennard Martin, who rushed for 177 yards against Maryland, has bruised ribs, while backup Torin Dorn will miss Saturday's contest with a bruised back, Brown said.

Clemson comes into the Saturday regionally televised contest with a 6-2 overall mark and in a three-way tie for the Atlantic Coast Conference lead with N.C. State and Maryland at 4-1. The Tar Heels are 1-7 and 1-3.

Brown said he hopes his team can get off to a quick start against the Tigers, something no team has done this season. North Carolina has been outscored 89-20 in the first quarter of games, while the Tigers have outscored opponents 59-0.

Chilcutt, Williams Pace Tar Heel Win

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Pete Chilcutt scored 23 points and Scott Williams added 22 to lead North Carolina to a 109-100 exhibition victory over Marathon Oil Tuesday.

After Marathon Oil took a 79-77 lead on a Darren Rowe layup with 10:26 left, North Carolina scored the next six points, including dunks by Kevin Madden and Steve Bucknall, and the Tar Heels never trailed again.

Marathon Oil led most of the first half until Williams scored on a lay-up to give North Carolina a 41-39 with 1:59 left in the first half. The Tar Heels led 45-41 at halftime.

Jeff Lebo scored 17 for the Tar Heels, Bucknall added 16 and Madden had 14.

7-1 Wenstrom Commits To North Carolina

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Matt Wenstrom of Katy, Texas, a 7-foot-1, 251-pound center, has announced that he plans to sign with North Carolina during the early signing period that begins Nov. 9.

Wenstrom, who averaged 23 points, 11 rebounds and 5.5 blocked shots and shot 73.9 percent from the field in his junior season at Katy Mayde Creek High School, will be the tallest player signed by coach Dean Smith. Former All-America Brad Daugherty, a center with the NBA's Cleveland Cavaliers, was listed as 6-11 1/2.

Wenstrom told the Durham Morning Herald that choosing the Tar Heels over North Carolina State, Villanova, Kentucky and UCLA "was the toughest decision I've had to make in my life," but that he felt it was the right one for him.

"I think I'll fit in well there," said Wenstrom, who plans to major in business or political science. "It was a combination of factors (for making the decision). I liked the coaching staff, the campus, the academics and the overall program. I just got a good feeling about it."

Wenstrom is the second player to announce a commitment to North Carolina in five days. Last week, 6-7 Henrik Rodl of Heusenstamm, West Germany, who was an exchange student at Chapel Hill High School two years ago, said he would sign a letter of intent with UNC during a two-day recruiting visit.

Hoopers, Egglestons Win Captains Choice

Reid and Joan Hooper along with Jim and Val Eggleston won low net at a couple's captain's choice golf tournament Sunday at Greenville Country Club.

The closest to the pin Saturday went to Kelly Barnhill, Cobby Deans, Diane Murphrey and Missy Decker.

The closest to the pin Sunday Diane Murphy, Bobby Edwards, George Totino, Kathryn Edwards.

Gamecocks Ink Three Tall Hoopsters

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Three home-grown basketball players — all 6-foot-8 or taller — say they plan to sign next week with South Carolina in the early signing period for recruits, according to the players' high school coaches.

The three players are:

- Stefan Eggers, a 6-10 senior at Socastee High School in Myrtle Beach who is an exchange student from West Germany;
- Chris Leso, a 6-8 senior at Dorman High School in Spartanburg;
- Bennett Jackson, 6-8, who plays for San Jacinto Junior College in Texas.

Clemson's Sean Tyson Is Hospitalized

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson junior forward Sean Tyson has been admitted to Oconee Memorial Hospital with an enlarged gallbladder, Coach Cliff Ellis said Tuesday.

Tyson, a 6-foot-7 Baltimore native, was admitted to the hospital Monday night and is expected to stay in the hospital for at least 24 hours, Clemson officials said. The school said Tyson's status was a day-to-day thing.

Tyson averaged 5.1 points and 2.7 rebounds last year for the Tigers.

Hornets Cut Larry Spriggs From Roster

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Charlotte Hornets cut forward Larry Spriggs Tuesday, leaving the Hornets with 14 players for Friday's opening game with Cleveland, team officials said.

Spriggs, a 6-foot-7, 227-pound forward, is a five-year veteran with Houston, Chicago and the Los Angeles Lakers. Spriggs, a graduate of Howard University, last played in the NBA in 1985-86, averaging 5.0 points per game in 43 games with the Lakers.

The move leaves the Hornets with 11 players on the active list for the season-opener. Three players — Del Curry, Earl Cureton and Ralph Lewis — will open the season on the injured reserve list. The trio must sit out the first five games of the season before being activated.

Johnson Still Funded By Canadians

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TORONTO — The Canadian Track and Field Association continues to act as Ben Johnson's banker even though the sprinter breached two association contracts by testing positive for anabolic steroids at the Olympics.

Johnson was disqualified from the Sport Canada athlete assistance program (the $650 monthly "carding" money) for life and suspended from competition for two years by the CTFA for contravening its anti-doping agreement last month in Seoul.

The International Olympic Committee stripped the 26-year-old Toronto sprinter of the 100-meter gold medal when post-race tests proved his urine sample contained traces of the steroid stanozolol. Johnson, however, is still able to withdraw his money from the CTFA's amateur athlete reserve fund, which shelters money from being taxed, even though he's no longer a member in good standing with the CTFA nor the International Amateur Athletic Federation. The IAAF slapped him with a two-year competition ban the day Johnson tested positive in Seoul.

Jean-Guy Ouellette, chairman of the CTFA board, told the Toronto Star that the CTFA is morally obligated to allow the sprinter to use its services even though the Johnson scandal has embarrassed the association and prompted a federal investigation.

"He may not be a member in good standing, but he's still a member of both (CTFA and IAAF) organizations, except that he's been suspended," Ouellette said Tuesday. "He's still a member of our organization and we are there to try to protect his amateur standing."

"I don't think we have any rules in our organization that say an athlete who has been suspended (from competition) also is suspended from receiving funds from his trust fund. We have this mandate to help the athletes and rehabilitate those who are suspended."

Ouellette said the CTFA will also continue to deposit money from Johnson's sponsors. Any money Johnson receives from sponsors must be deposited in the CTFA fund which is run by athlete services manager Steve Findlay. Money going directly to Johnson or a party other than the CTFA would jeopardize Johnson's amateur status.

The athlete reserve fund is similar to a trust fund in that it protects money from being taxed while it remains sheltered in the fund. The CTFA fund was established five years ago so track and field athletes could deposit endorsement earnings or appearance fee money.

Athletes are also allowed to withdraw money during their careers for training and living expenses. Whenever money is withdrawn, it is subject to taxation by Revenue Canada as income.

The original idea was to create a nest-egg for athletes so they would have money waiting for them when they retired. However, those were the days when athletes might coax a few thousand dollars out of a sponsor if they were lucky.

Loss Hurt Hartlieb More Than Injury

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Iowa's 45-34 loss to Indiana last weekend was much more painful to Hawkeyes quarterback Chuck Hartlieb than the knee injury that has bothered him since the fourth game of the season.

The fifth-year senior from Woodstock, Ill., was named The Associated Press' Midwest player of the week on offense after he put on a passing display Saturday that included 44 completions in 60 attempts for 558 yards, three touchdowns and no interceptions.

And he did it while playing with strained ligaments and tendons in his right knee — the one the side-armed thrower uses to push off — nearly leading the Hawkeyes to victory after they trailed 35-3 late in the first half.

"You put everything in the back of your mind when the competition, the victory is on the line. It's one of those things when you come off the field and you're walking off, you feel all kinds of pain," Hartlieb said.

"But when you're walking on the field and you're in the heat of the battle, you don't feel a thing. It's just pure adrenaline. I didn't feel one ounce of pain on the field Saturday, but once I got in the locker room it really starting adding up."

Hartlieb, who has been hobbled since a victory over Iowa State on Sept. 24, set several school and personal records against Indiana.

He established an Iowa record for yards passing, breaking his own mark of 471 against Northwestern last year, a game in which he also threw a school-record seven touchdown passes.

In the second half alone, Hartlieb threw for 348 yards, which would rank ninth in school history for yards passing in an entire game, and set an NCAA Division I-A record with 30 completions.

Hartlieb also set school marks with the 44 completions and 60 attempts. The old marks were 30 completions by Chuck Long in 1985 and 49 passes by Gary Snook in 1964. Prior to Saturday, Hartlieb had never even thrown 44 passes in a game, let alone complete that many.

For the year, Hartlieb is 193 of 310 for 2,448 yards and 10 touchdowns. He passed for 3,092 yards and 19 touchdowns last fall, when he was third nationally in passing efficiency.

"The game was a pretty long one, especially from my standpoint, but it also was a very enjoyable one to be able to do some of the things we did," Hartlieb said. "We didn't come out on top, but when you look back, it was fun playing in a game like that."

"I had no idea that I had thrown 60 passes. I really felt kind of fresh after the game as far as throwing the ball."

After Indiana opened a 35-11 halftime lead, Hartlieb knew the fun was about to begin. The Hawkeyes had to get back into the game quickly and that meant they had to pass on almost every down.

"A quarterback's got to love the two-minute offense," Hartlieb said. "I'd love to be in it as much as possible, but that can't be the case because you have to establish the running game as well."

"But Saturday, when we knew we had to do that the whole second half, we were really looking forward to coming out after halftime."

Hartlieb practiced only one day last week because of his knee injury and wasn't cleared to play until pregame warmups. Coach Hayden Fry said Hartlieb will miss practice this week and is "very questionable" for Saturday's game with Northwestern.

However, Hartlieb said his knee is fine.

"I'll play Saturday, I'm looking forward to it," he said. "We only have three games left. You've got to make the most of each one."

"I really believe that injuries are something that allows you to hold yourself back. I don't think it held me back at all Saturday and I don't see it holding me back in the future."

Tomczak Wants To Show He Can Do Job

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — Having stood toe-to-toe and weathered the storm against coach Mike Ditka, Mike Tomczak is ready to prove once and for all that he can quarterback the Chicago Bears.

Tomczak gets another shot at the job now that Jim McMahon is out again with a knee injury that could keep him sidelined for the rest of the season. "There are seven games to go and I have a lot of confidence," Tomczak said. "I don't know if Jim will be back at all. I'm going to play.

I have all the confidence in the world in my ability."

This will be a new Mike Tomczak, one who refuses to sulk under the tirades of the explosive Ditka — tirades he had to endure last Sunday in the Bears' 30-7 loss to New England.

McMahon went down with a twisted knee in the second quarter and Tomczak took over. He quickly moved the Bears to the Patriots' 36-yard line before throwing a pass out of bounds on a first-down play.

"I made the decision and threw the ball out of bounds," Tomczak said. "I thought it was a good play, he (Ditka) thought otherwise."

Tomczak was yanked by Ditka and the two had heated words on the sidelines.

"If someone challenges you, you have to challenge back," Tomczak said. "I thought I did the right thing and I told him I wanted to go back in the game."

Tomczak went back but couldn't rally the team. Later, Ditka acknowledged that he might have made a mistake in giving Tomczak the quick hook.

The two discussed matters on the plane back to Chicago, and again Monday morning shortly after Ditka announced Tomczak would be his starting quarterback against Tampa Bay this week. Jim Harbaugh will be the backup.

"He apologized and I accepted it," said Tomczak of his postgame discussion with Ditka. "We didn't hug and kiss. He was very emotional as a player and as a coach. Other players tell me these things happen. I've weathered the storm."

Tomczak also told reporters that in the past, he had allowed criticism from Ditka to hamper his play.

"I let that affect me mentally," he said. "I told myself that is never going to happen again."

Sunday, he said, was "one of the toughest days of my life."

"I did some gut-checking, but I know one thing: I get paid to play football and I try to play as well as I can," he said busy with coaching their present teams to consider any other job possibilities.

The Pirates, 1-8, have games remaining Saturday at Temple and Nov. 19 at Cincinnati.

Eakin said the search committee will determine what type of candidates will be interviewed.

"That indeed is what we have, a committee to advise Athletic Director Dave Hart to determine how they want to proceed," Eakin said. "An important part of any search is advertising the position and finding the nature of the position. I don't think it would be wise to determine who the coach would be and what his attributes would be (yet). We need to determine what the applicant pool would be."

The committee, which will serve in an advisory capacity to Hart, will assist in the formal interview process of candidates that are brought to campus.

The decision on who will become the 16th head football coach in ECU history will be made by Eakin on the recommendation of the director of athletics.

Eakin wouldn't comment on the timetable for the selection process.

"That is a question better put to Dave Hart," Eakin said. "I'm guessing sometime in the next month, month or a half."

The committee, which will be chaired by Hart, includes: Charlie Carr, associate athletic director; Wayne Dempsey, vice president, East Carolina Educational Foundation; Jack Edwards, president, Pirate Club; Jarrod Moody, senior co-captain, ECU football team; Larry Murphy, SGA president; Pam Penland, associate athletic director; Wayne Peterson, chairman, Trustees' Committee on Athletics; Dr. Ernest Schwarz, chairman, Faculty Athletic Committee; Craig Souza, ECU Board of Trustees; Henry VanSant, associate athletic director, and Bob Ward, Alumni Association member.

"It's both Dave Hart's and my (concern) to have a wide representation on this committee to try and represent the student interest, faculty representation and the various elements such as the trustees and other areas that are part of the university," Eakin said. "You can maximize your chances to do a good job."

"You can see from the membership (committee) we're trying to look at the total needs of the institution. Athletes have many aspects to their lives at the university. Athletics is one, but participation as a student and the total development is important to us. It's important for any applicant to know that."

N.C. State Fans Criticized

athletic director at N.C. State, said Tuesday that Dixon told him by telephone that an unidentified South Carolina coach was hit in the back by a bottle while on the sidelines.

"I can't believe those fans at N.C. State," quarterback Todd Ellis said. "They threw bottles, chicken bones, golf balls, rocks... Coach (Joe) Morrison barely missed getting hit by one of those small liquor bottles. Their players are clean and nice guys, but their fans are the worst."

Valvano said Weedon, along with Tom Stafford, vice chancellor for student affairs, would meet with student leaders Wednesday to discuss the incidents.

"... Sometimes it's not students," Valvano said. "We certainly condemn (throwing objects). We want to be good hosts. We think that our football team under Coach (Dick) Sheridan has shown a great deal of class... both in victory and defeat."

Ellis said the only time he's played in front of a worse crowd was the 1986 game in Raleigh between the two schools.

"We think all institutions are very concerned," Valvano said, pointing to the West Virginia-Penn State game Saturday in which fans rushed onto the field after the game.

"It isn't a problem (security) that we take lightly," Valvano added, "nor is it a problem that is innate to N.C. State's campus."

"When it gets to be a heated environment where they become adversaries in the stands as well as on the field, that is something that concerns us," Valvano said.

Valvano said more security is not needed at the stadium, which seats 47,000 spectators, but can accommodate 12,000 more on a grassy bank.

"When you look at the numbers involved, I still think the most important aspect is that people need to have better behavior in society," he said.

"When they (the fans) take the field, there is no amount of security that is going to stop that kind of crowd," Valvano said.

Valvano said the series between the two schools ending was "a remote possibility."

"Nothing along those lines (of the series being dropped)," said Weedon, who talked with Dixon by telephone Tuesday.

"If I had the simple solution (to crowd problems) I would share it with you, I would share it with South Carolina, ... with West Virginia, with a lot of places around the country," Valvano said.

Kansas Officials Upset

Budig said the school supported Williams.

"The University of Kansas has total confidence in Coach Williams and his ability to recruit quality student athletes... It is important that the university community now unite behind the new coach and his basketball program," Budig said.

Athletic Director Bob Frederick said he knew the gravity of the situation when Kansas received a preliminary letter of inquiry from the NCAA on May 28, 1987.

"Because we believe the university effectively presented its case, and we believe the NCAA committee gave us a fair hearing, we will not appeal," Frederick said at the campus news conference. "We are obviously disappointed with the penalties but we accept them. It's time to put the past behind us."

The basketball program came close to getting the so-called "death penalty" — a two-year ban on competition — partly because the football program was penalized for recruiting violations in 1983.

The NCAA Committee on Infractions said it did not impose the "death penalty" because Kansas cooperated with the investigation. It also noted that the 1983 infractions were limited to football and the 1986 violations involved only basketball.

"We cooperated to the fullest," Frederick said. "It was the university's position that a couple of the violations were not major violations in an attempt to avoid the worst penalty."

David Berst, NCAA assistant executive director for enforcement, said he considered the penalty as lenient as the committee could make it. The infractions report noted that Kansas officials up to the end contended that "violations somehow should not be considered violations."

"Kansas was on the bubble, so to speak," Berst said. "I'm sure there was a lot of discussion on that point, but no severe violations involved any of the players who were on the team. It was a tough decision."

Berst said the NCAA considered the incident major because the Askew recruitment included repeated minor violations.

"The primary concern was the transfer student (Askew) who didn't enroll who got around $1,400 in benefits in a 10-day period," Berst said.

"Although the institution was very convincing in talking about eliminating violations, when we were talking about the individual allegations they were quite reluctant to accept responsibility for the act or agree that it was a violation."

The NCAA report said an unidentified representative of Kansas' athletic interests paid $183 for an airline ticket to allow Askew to fly from Memphis, Tenn., to Kansas City in June 1986. Askew used that ticket and did not reimburse the KU representative.

Askew also received a round-trip ticket to Memphis to visit his sick grandmother. Brown said he paid for the ticket.

"I gave him exactly $364, which was the price for the round-trip ticket, and we told the NCAA about it," Brown said. "The kid's grandmother who raised him passed away a short time later."

"I'd give it to anybody if they told me his grandmother was passing away. It was something I wasn't trying to hide," Brown said.

The NCAA said an unidentified representative of the university's athletic interests loaned Askew $350 to pay his grandmother's electric bill. It was not repaid.

Brown said Collins drove Askew to a store to buy $231 in clothing. The NCAA said Collins expected Askew to work for him as payment, but Askew did not.

Brown said Marshall bought a $183 plane ticket for Askew to return to Memphis after Askew said he left his ticket at a hotel. The NCAA found that former assistant coach Alvin Gentry later turned that cost in on an expense account and reimbursed Marshall.

The NCAA said Askew was paid "at least" $297.12 for work not actually performed for a company owned by a representative of the university's athletic interests. Brown said Light was the provider of summer work named in the NCAA report.

Finally, Brown, two assistant coaches and an unidentified employee of the university gave statements to Budig that led Budig to erroneously certify the school's compliance with NCAA legislation.

"Now I understand that they dealt with us as a repeat offender," Brown said. "I can see why we were punished."

"I'm upset that kids are being punished, (but) I don't worry about the present staff. I'm getting tired of that because I know what we've done. From Day One, they've (present staff) been taking shots at me."

"I'm just sorry it happened," Collins said. "If nothing happened in 1983 (with football), nothing would have happened now. Kansas isn't the only school he's (Askew) done this to. It's just a game he plays."

Light would not comment. Marshall could not be reached for comment, nor could Askew.

Williams can be assured of having only three new scholarships for the 1989-90 season. Kansas now has 13 scholarship players. Williams will lose four seniors — Barry, Newton, Sean Alvarado and Lincoln Minor — and be left with nine scholarship players.

Next year's Jayhawks can have only 12 scholarship players, three below the maximum allowed by the NCAA for Division I teams.

One new player should be Ricky Calloway, sitting out this year after transferring from Indiana.

"It doesn't affect me at all," Calloway said of the probation. "Next year we'll be able to go to the tournament. I have no intentions of transferring. Nobody's thinking about that right now."

The Kansas football program served a two-year probation from 1983-85 and newly enacted NCAA legislation specifies that when a school is convicted of two major violations within five years, the second sport penalized is subject to being suspended. Southern Methodist University had its football program shut down in 1987 as the first victim of the legislation.

D. Alan Williams of Virginia, chairman of the Infractions Committee, declined to elaborate on the written news release. It noted the football probation in 1983 made the basketball program subject to suspension.

Saints Have Raised Fans' Expectations

By Dave Goldberg
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nearly two years ago, after going 7-9 in his first season, Coach Jim Mora was asked about his hopes for the 1987 New Orleans Saints.

"I'd take 9-7," he smiled.

So the Saints went 12-3, raising expectations to an almost impossible level for fans who had never experienced a winning season in the team's 21-year history, something the New Orleans brass knew well.

"We would have been as well off going 9-6 as 12-3," General Manager Jim Finks, who with Mora has turned the Saints in three years from a joke to one of the NFL's powers, said last January before reality set in with a 4-10 playoff loss to Minnesota. "But you just can't do that. You don't go out there and say, 'Enough, we've got our quota of wins.'"

Now, the predictable has happened.

A single loss becomes a disaster to New Orleans' once victory-starved fans, who have made the little ditty "Who Dat say dey gonna beat dem Saints?" part of the Cajun-Creole patois of one of the nation's most distinctive cities.

So there it was in the New Orleans

Times-Picayune Monday, the anonymous critiques of fans queried after the Saints had lost 12-10 to the Rams Sunday — their second defeat in nine games this season; their fifth in the last 24 over two years.

"I don't think the Saints are as good as everybody around here thinks they are," one unnamed fan was quoted by the newspaper. "I think they'll be lucky to win two of their next seven games."

"The Saints' play-calling is the sorriest in football," said another.

And so on, even to criticism of Mora, last season's NFL Coach of the Year and one of the top six coaches in the NFL.

Why? Probably because they were 12-3 instead of 9-6 last year.

Finks and Mora know they've made a winner of a team that, with few exceptions like Pro Bowl linebacker Rickey Jackson, is made up of average talent, particularly with Jackson's bookend on the other side, Pat Swilling, sidelined with a pulled abdominal muscle.

They know that in a balanced league, one torn ligament or sprained ankle can turn the Washington Redskins into the Detroit Lions or Atlanta Falcons. Washington, with both its cornerbacks playing injured, hardly looked like Super Bowl winners in their 41-17 loss to Houston Sunday night.

They know that the New York Giants went from NFL champion to 6-9 in one season and that week-to-week results are hardly more predictable. A week after they had been anointed as this year's Super Team, the Bears lost 30-7 to New England, a team that three weeks earlier had been beaten 45-3 by 2-7 Green Bay.

And while New Orleans fans seem to have things in better perspective than, say, those in Denver, who seem to think the presence of John Elway guarantees them the right to get clobbered in the Super Bowl every year, Finks, et al., knew the backlash was coming.

Moreover, despite the 7-1 start, turned into 7-2 by the Rams on Sunday, there's no guarantee that — as the anonymous fan said — they won't lose five of their last seven.

Their first six wins were by a combined total of 30 points against Atlanta, Detroit, Tampa Bay, Dallas, San Diego and Seattle, whose combined record is now 15-39. Their next six games are against the Redskins, Rams, Broncos, Giants, Vikings and 49ers, whose combined record is 33-21.

They're also hurt. They've lost two left tackles, Stan Brock and Bill Contz, and the third-stringer, Daren Gilbert, allowed the sack that might have cost Sunday's game. Swilling remains iffy and two of their top three running backs, Dalton Hilliard and Craig "Ironhead" Heyward, were both hurt Sunday, one of the reasons one of the league's top running attacks was limited to 33 yards.

But what's really going on is that Saints fans, who until two years ago expected to lose every week, now expect the opposite.

"That's why I don't read the papers," Mora said Monday. Then, chuckling, asked someone sitting nearby to pass him one so he could point out that his "conservative" team had scored nearly as many points as some of the more flamboyant offensive ones.

"That's why you have to approach each game separately," he added. "Yes, it was a big game. Yes, we would have liked to have won. But it's one game in 16, not the end of the world."

Top Four Keep Top Spots In Reflector's Rankings

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

All four leaders in last week's Daily Reflector High School Rankings held their positions this week, the next-to-last week of the regular season.

Garner, 10-0, continues to lead the 4-A pack with 81 points. However, the Trojans face the fact that they will garner fewer points than those behind them in the coming week — having already completed their season.

That gives Richmond County, Greenville Rose and West Mecklenburg, all 9-0, the opportunity to overhaul Garner with victories this Friday night. Richmond County currently is second with 79 points while Rose has 71 and West Mecklenburg had 70.

Points are awarded terms for each victory they attain, with additional points awarded each time a team it has beaten wins. The rankings thus rate teams on their success against the strength of their schedule. A team playing a weak schedule would not score as well as a team winning against a stronger one.

Burlington Cummings heads the 3-A list again this week. The Cavaliers, 9-0, have 71 points to lead the way. Havelock, 8-0-1, is second

Vietnam To Turn Over At Least 21 Sets Of Remains As Possible MIAs

By Peter Eng
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BANGKOK, Thailand — Vietnam will turn over to the United States at least 21 sets of remains that may be those of Americans missing from the Vietnam War, a U.S. diplomat said today.

The remains include the two sets that U.S.-Vietnamese teams recovered during last month's unprecedented joint field investigations in northern Vietnam, said Tran Viet Tan, counselor of the Vietnamese Embassy in Bangkok.

Tan said 23 sets would be returned on Thursday, but a U.S. Embassy official who requested anonymity put the number at 21. Sources said Vietnam has given the United States a list of at least nine names associated with the remains.

A U.S. military team is to receive the remains in a ceremony at Noi Bai Airport in Hanoi, Vietnam's capital. They will be loaded onto a military plane for the flight to Honolulu, where an Army laboratory tries to confirm the preliminary analyses done by the Vietnamese.

Thursday's return would be among the largest since the January 1973 Paris Peace Accords ended U.S. military involvement in the war. The communists defeated the U.S.-backed South Vietnam government in April 1975.

Maj. Dan Trout, a spokesman for the U.S. Pacific Command, said that since the Paris accords, the United States has received the identified remains of 196 missing personnel, including 168 from Vietnam, 26 from Laos and two from China. That leaves 2,387 Americans missing in action in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

In August 1987, Vietnam's foreign minister, Nguyen Co Thach, and a special U.S. presidential envoy, retired Gen. John W. Vessey, reached agreement to accelerate cooperation on the MIA issue.

Trout said the United States has identified 25 missing Americans among the 77 remains Vietnam has returned since the agreement. The most recent handover was of 25 remains on July 13.

U.S. officials said they were pleased with the quickened pace of progress on the MIA issue. But Ted Sampley, head of the National Steering Committee for American War Veterans, on Wednesday accused the Vietnamese of using turnovers for political ends.

"They are timing it for the presidential election," he said in a telephone call from the United States. The committee, a private lobbying group, has accused Washington of pursuing only the remains of the dead while covering up purported evidence of Americans still held prisoner in Indochina.

U.S. and Vietnamese experts are winding up their second joint field investigation, Trout said. He said the seven U.S. military experts are to return to Bangkok on Thursday after the 10-day probe of areas west of Hanoi.

Trout said that as with the first project, the teams were inspecting U.S. warplane crash sites and other areas to try to resolve some "discrepancy cases" — those in which the United States says there is evidence that Vietnamese authorities have information on the servicemen's fate.

Most American losses in northern Vietnam were airmen shot down during bombing runs.

Solidarity Protests Closing Of Yard, Rules Out Strike

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa led an outdoor rally of thousands of shipyard workers today to protest the planned closure of the Lenin shipyard, where the outlawed trade union was founded.

However, Walesa appeared to rule out a strike for the moment, saying: "That would only make the situation worse."

Solidarity and the official trade union OPZZ jointly agreed to fight the decision announced Monday to close the shipyard. The morning rally inside the facility was attended by nearly all the shipyard's 10,000 workers.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was due later today to begin a three-day visit to Poland, including a trip to a monument outside the yard on Friday. Solidarity leaders said they were eager to avoid creating a confrontational situation that might jeopardize her visit.

Walesa said he told the official union that Solidarity planned to fight to save the shipyard, and he proposed the two unions suspend their disagreements in order to work together.

"I suggested suspending all our disagreements, and they agreed to joint action. We adopted a common position which is proof the unions can reach agreement at any moment provided we are not set against each other by someone else," Walesa said.

The move for common action marks a reversal of Solidarity's earlier position not to talk to the official union, which was set up in 1982 after the martial-law crackdown on Solidarity.

The resolution, formulated by Solidarity, was read to the workforce by Alojzy Szablewski, chairman of the Solidarity organizing committee at the yard.

The workers have agreed to rally at 9 a.m. every Tuesday morning until the closure decision is reversed.

"As for the forms of protest, we will have to find some," Walesa said. "We have said we will fight."

Walesa said he believes Prime Minister Mieczyslaw F. Rakowski's decision to close the shipyard has ended hopes that proposed talks between authorities and the opposition on Poland's future can begin soon.

"At this moment it is losing sense," he said. "On the one hand you are trying to talk about various subjects, and on the other hand you close the cradle of Solidarity and Walesa's workplace. It doesn't make sense."

At the rally, management encouraged workers to take up tools and work peacefully. The thousands of workers who braved icy wind to report for 6 a.m. shift appeared willing to follow the advice.

Salvadoran Leftists Damage National Guard Headquarters

By Annie Cabrera
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Leftist rebels killed four soldiers and wounded 37 people in a mortar attack on the National Guard headquarters that destroyed two guard barracks, authorities said.

The guerrillas' clandestine Radio Venceremos called Tuesday's attack in the northern part of this capital a "welcome" to Col. Rene Emilio Ponce on the first day of his new job as military chief of staff.

National Guard commander Col. Jose Humberto Gomez suffered a shrapnel wound to a leg, and eight guardsmen were reported in critical condition today, a defense ministry spokesman said. Seven civilians also were wounded.

One of two parked cars packed with explosives about a block from the base exploded during the 45-minute attack, damaging nearby vehicles and homes. Army munitions experts de-activated explosives in the other car.

Rebel mortar fire set off grenades stored inside the main building at the compound and panicked residents of the poor, working-class neighborhood that surrounds the site.

National Guard officers at the site said they believed the 81mm mortars were launched from La Lomita, a hillock about 530 yards east of the compound.

Deputy Public Security Minister Col. Leopoldo Hernandez said the salvo destroyed two guard barracks.

Col. Ponce said the attack was carried out by urban commandos of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, the umbrella group of five leftist guerrilla organizations.

Ponce said about 15 rebels participated in the attack, which he described as being staged for "propagandistic" purposes.

Hernandez said the surprise attack "doesn't mean there was neglect by the security forces or the National Guard. What happened is, there isn't any way to stop a mortar attack."

The guard forms part of El Salvador's armed forces and participates in counterinsurgency operations.

Radio Venceremos, in a statement received in Mexico City, said rebels attacked a prison and blew up an electricity substation in Sensuntepeque, 50 miles northeast of San Salvador.

Military sources confirmed rebels attacked the prison there for four hours Monday night, but there were no injuries or escapes.

In another statement, Venceremos said army forces suffered 479 casualties, including dead and wounded, in combat during October. It did not provide a breakdown or a rebel casualty figure.

It said the guerrillas were stepping up the urban war in an offensive called "Death to Reagan's Policy, Yankees Out of El Salvador."

The attacks came as guerrilla leaders embarked on a tour to brief Latin American leaders on the possibility of resuming peace talks with the government.

Front commanders Leonel Gonzalez and Joaquin Villalobos met Monday in Panama City with Roman Catholic archbishop Arturo Rivera Damas, who said he presented a report on proposals for a negotiated end to the 9-year conflict that has claimed 65,000 lives.

Rivera Damas declined to elaborate.

Salvadoran church leaders have mediated the few meetings between the government and rebels. The last meeting was Oct. 20, 1987, in San Salvador.

Meanwhile, negotiations continued late Tuesday with inmates holding at least three hostages at a prison in Quezaltepeque, 15 miles north of San Salvador.

Six inmates there demanded political asylum in Mexico in exchange for the hostages' release, a prison official said.

One inmate yelled out a window to reporters that his group was holding 12 hostages. Clutching a pistol and a grenade, he threatened to amputate their arms and legs if the asylum demands were not met.

Col. Miguel Vasconcelos, commander of the army brigade that has surrounded the prison, said the hostage-taking incident began Monday night when prisoners jumped two guards and took their rifles.

Soviets Acknowledge Decade Of Deficit Spending

By Michael Parks
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

MOSCOW — For the past decade the Soviet Union has been running a substantial budget deficit, at times "critically large," Finance Minister Boris Gostev disclosed Tuesday in perhaps the frankest acknowledgment of the severity of Moscow's economic difficulties.

Gostev said for the first time in public that the budget deficit, officially acknowledged only last week, had begun in the mid-1970s and reached a peak of nearly $61 billion in 1985.

Funds have been borrowed from the State Bank of the Soviet Union and other domestic banks to cover the accumulating debt, which informed Soviet economists have estimated to be more than $400 billion in a country where the gross national product, a key measure of overall economic strength, is put at perhaps $1.4 trillion at present exchange rates.

"We have used domestic bank credits to cover the deficits," Gostev said at a press conference. "This is usual economic practice throughout the world, although this is the first time we have spoken so openly about it."

Prominent Soviet economists have argued for a moderate budget deficit to underwrite the political and economic reforms of President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, noting that as much as 8 percent to 10 percent is viewed in the West as encouraging economic growth. But Gostev said Tuesday that the current deficit far exceeds what the government considers acceptable and that intensive efforts will be made to eliminate it.

Industrial managers, he said, will try to trim $40 billion from next year's projected deficit of $57 billion, notably by getting some of the country's 24,000 money-losing state enterprises to make a profit.

At the same time, the government will attempt to reduce its administrative costs by reducing the size of the huge bureaucracy.

Gostev and Yuri D. Maslyukov, a vice premier and chairman of the State Planning Committee, all but ruled out any immediate effort to rationalize prices and, in the process, to eliminate the enormous subsidies the government uses to maintain low prices for food, housing and other necessities.

"For the first time, we have clearly stated that a deficit exists," Gostev told the reporters. "We cannot live with such a deficit, and so we will try to get rid of it during this coming year."

At the same time, he noted that the projected deficit is only 7 percent of the state budget and only 4 percent of the gross national product, the value of all goods and services, and consequently manageable.

In the extraordinarily candid and wide-ranging press conference, Gostev also acknowledged that the official estimate of inflation of 0.9 percent to 1.5 percent a year greatly understated the impact of rapid increases in the amount of money in circulation, the continuing budget deficits and the inability of Soviet industry to satisfy consumer demand.

"We do have inflation in the Soviet Union," he said, "but it is of a different nature to that in Western countries. It can be seen in structural changes in our market — not so much in higher prices as in the disappearance of cheap goods."

Inexpensive consumer products have become increasingly difficult to find in recent years because of the system of state-set prices and the pressure put on industrial enterprises to increase their profits. Since producers are not free to charge whatever consumers are willing to pay, or to raise prices gradually to cover higher production costs, they stop manufacturing them and replace them with more expensive goods that bring a higher profit.

Soviet economists speak privately of a rate of inflation between 5 percent and 7 percent. This would be higher than that in the United States or Western Europe, but the figure is largely impressionistic — how much more people feel it costs them to live now compared with a year ago.

Maslyukov said that wages are now rising faster than labor productivity and that the effect is bound to be inflationary.

"We have more money than we have goods," he told the reporters. "That is why the shelves in our stores are empty."

The State Statistics Committee is working to develop a better measure of inflation than the average of state-set prices it now uses.

"We want something that reflects how people actually live, that reflects how they spend their money," Gostev said. "What we have now tells us how fast state enterprises have increased their prices, but says nothing about the cost of living."

Gostev and Maslyukov said that despite the calls of radical economists for the creation of a full-fledged "socialist market," the government will not end its control of consumer and wholesale prices.

Newspaper Says Doris Duke Putting Up Imelda Marcos' $5 Million Bail

By John M. Doyle
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A bail package has been worked out for former Philippine first lady Imelda Marcos, who is under a judge's order not to leave New York until arrangements for paying her $5 million bond are set, a source says.

Prosecutors and defense lawyers were expected to present the deal to U.S. District Judge John Keenan today, said the source, who is close to the case and spoke on condition of anonymity.

Mrs. Marcos has been charged with racketeering with her husband, former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos, who was ousted in a popular uprising in 1986.

The New York Post reported today that the $5 million bail would be paid by tobacco heiress Doris Duke, 75. Her attorney, Donald Robinson, would say only that the plan was "under consideration."

Mrs. Marcos, 59, would not confirm the report, but told the newspaper, "I can thank a good Samaritan, a good American woman Samaritan."

Mrs. Marcos visited Duke at her Park Avenue penthouse several hours after her arraignment Monday, the Post said.

At Mrs. Marcos' arraignment Monday, Keenan barred Mrs. Marcos from returning to Hawaii until arrangements for paying the bail were made.

Mrs. Marcos, who has been staying in a $1,800-a-day suite at the Waldorf Towers, was scheduled to return to court Thursday if an agreement had not been reached by prosecution and defense lawyers.

Marcos, 71, remained in Hawaii. Defense lawyers claimed last week that he was too frail to make the 10-hour plane trip. Keenan postponed

Marcos' arraignment, and ordered an examination by a government physician.

The Marcoses are accused of plundering $103 million from the Philippine treasury, funneling it to foreign bank accounts and using it to buy prime Manhattan real estate and art.

Their eight co-defendants, including Saudi Arabian financier Adnan Khashoggi, remained at large outside the United States, said U.S. Attorney Charles LaBella.

"There are arrest warrants out for all of them," LaBella said Tuesday.

Mrs. Marcos said she believes she will be found innocent.

"This is a no-lose case," she told the Post. "But if I do not win, I do not believe I will be sentenced to years in jail in America. I will be sent home to be jailed in the hearts of the Philippine people."

She said her husband "was flabbergasted by the $5 million bail. I told him when I came back from court. We thought, 'Am I not enough bail?' Is not my presence enough? It's like the government told us, 'Commit suicide or we will kill you.'"

She complained about the treatment her family has received since arriving in Hawaii in 1986. She said the phones at their home are tapped and "we are suffering continual vigilance."

"Life for the president and me is worse than the gulag of Solzhenitsyn," she said. "Our beautiful Hawaiian isle is for us worse than Alcatraz."

At her arraignment Monday, Mrs. Marcos stunned onlookers by wearing a regal, full-length gown with traditional Philippine butterfly sleeves to court.

She told the newspaper she wore the dress "to send the world a message that I am a patriot and proud to be a Filipino. That I hold my head high even at this moment of trial."

Polish Crash Kills 29 People

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WARSAW, Poland — A domestic airliner with 29 people aboard crashed today while trying to make an emergency landing in a field, and a police officer said all but one passenger survived.

The official PAP news agency originally reported that 16 people were killed. It retracted the report several hours later, confirming the account of a local police officer who told The Associated Press there was one death.

Authorities reported five people were hospitalized and at least 10 were treated for minor injuries and released. The police officer, Capt. Jerzy Pacula, said most passengers suffered only minor injuries.

The Soviet-built, Antonov-24 twin-engine turboprop plane, was on a flight from Warsaw to Rzeszow when it crashed in the village of Bialobrzegi, PAP said. It was carrying 25 passengers and four crew.

The plane went down — apparently due to a mechanical failure — in an empty field 170 miles southeast of Warsaw, said Pacula, the officer at police headquarters in Rzeszow.

He said by telephone that the pilot was moments from making an emergency landing in the field when he lost control and the aircraft

Human Tests Necessary In Developing Drugs

By Gerri Kobren
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BALTIMORE — The ads appear so often that they have become commonplace. Hospitals, universities, public and private research institutions are forever recruiting people to participate in drug or treatment tests.

And people do respond, signing up for studies that require them to take new medicines, give blood samples, submit to tests, answer questions or alter their lifestyles, all to show whether the rest of us ought to do the same thing.

Somebody has to. The Food and Drug Administration does not allow either prescription or over-the-counter medicines to be sold in this country until years of research have proved them safe and effective. The process includes laboratory experiments, animal tests and three levels, or phases, of clinical trials involving ever-larger numbers of people.

Drugs can fail anywhere along the line. Those that pass muster in small test populations could cause unsuspected effects when larger numbers of people are involved. Or the drugs might not work as well as expected. Or they might not be different enough from what's already available to make further development worthwhile.

Actually, no drug is absolutely safe for everyone; there is always some kind of risk, even after a drug has been approved for sale. The FDA does not give permission for human trials until animal studies have been evaluated, and legitimate sponsors and institutions do not actually enroll humans until certain ethical safeguards are in place. Nevertheless, there is no certainty that safety in animals translates to safety in humans, or that doses that seem appropriate will, in fact, be appropriate.

But for some volunteers, a promise of absolute safety is a secondary consideration.

For instance, says Dr. Jay Goodman, chairman of the 19-member review board whose permission is required for all human research by the faculty of the University of Maryland at Baltimore, "if someone has a cancer that has been radiated and treated with chemotherapy and has spread all over the body anyway, that person might be eager to try something new."

Even without terminal disease, though, some people are eager to participate in tests that offer free but unproven treatments.

"It is not at all difficult to recruit volunteers," says Dr. Barry Brown, chief of treatment and early intervention research at the Baltimore-based Addiction Research Center of the National Institute of Drug Abuse. A current project there provides free medical and psychological treatment to cocaine and PCP addicts in an effort to find out whether medicines now used to counter depression can help reduce the addiction.

"These are not experimental drugs," Brown explains. "They are prescribed routinely. Because of their chemical action, there is reason to believe they would act on the neurochemistry that is responsible for the craving for cocaine and PCP."

The research volunteers, he says, come from the population of drug abusers who know they need help in kicking the habit.

Other people join experiments for altruistic reasons.

When the Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene and Public Health put out calls for volunteers for a test of AIDS vaccines, there was no shortage of response, said Carol Hilton, the recruiter. People accepted in the study "will not get AIDS," she insists, but they could react to other biochemicals in the vaccines, and they also could end up with ambiguous results on future HIV antibody tests. Documents from the researchers may not be enough to keep them from the stigma of being an AIDS carrier.

She interviews prospective participants carefully, to be certain they know what they're getting into. And, over the one-year course of the project, she has come to know them, and their reasons, well.

"Somewhere, most of them have had some first-hand experience with an AIDS patient," Ms. Hilton says. "They're in it because too many people are dying."

Volunteers for this test get a small fee — $15 to $20 a visit — as reimbursement for time and travel.

In some tests, however, fees are more substantial. PharmaKinetics Laboratories in Baltimore advertises payments of up to $1,000 for people willing to participate in studies that, most often, compare absorption rates of already approved name brand and generic drugs. Those trials are carried out in the company's in-patient facility, usually over a period of about 10 days.

Not all tests involve drugs. Medical advice on life style changes — on how more exercise or fewer dietary fats might affect certain medical conditions, for instance — does not have to wait for federal approval. But doctors still generally look for demonstrated and documented risks and benefits in large populations even when common sense would argue for one course of action or another.

For instance, since diabetes is a cause of kidney failure, heart disease, strokes, blindness and circulatory deficiencies, it would seem logical that rigid control of blood sugar levels should help prevent those complications.

However, "a major piece of the puzzle is missing," says Dr. Philip Levin, assistant professor of medicine and pediatrics at the University of Maryland Medical Center. "We want to know what the magic numbers are. Do you have to be at 100 (milligrams of glucose per 100 milliliters of blood), or is 120 good enough? Or do you just have to stay under 200?"

And, he adds, no one knows for sure whether diabetics can maintain themselves at low blood sugars over the long term, while living normal lives, or even whether it is safe to do so. If they go too low, Levin says, they could become hypoglycemic, which could cause dizziness, weakness, unconsciousness or even coma.

The university is therefore participating in a six-year study to determine whether tight control of blood sugar levels can decrease complications of diabetes. Financed by the National Institutes of Health, the study will involve 1,500 people at medical centers nationwide.

In Baltimore, 40 diabetics, aged 13 to 39, are in the program. Random assignment by computer put half of them into a regimen of rigid control while the other half are maintained at the level most medical experts consider appropriate; they do not get less than standard care.

Those in the tight-control group have to be more vigilant. They have to check their blood sugar levels more often than most diabetics would, stick to stricter diets and, possibly, increase their insulin use.

The university will provide all of them with free medical care, educational backup and equipment and supplies related to diabetes treatment.

As the test progresses, the condition of the two groups will be compared, to see if the new intensity is really worthwhile, says Levin, who is co-director of the study. If, at any time, there is clear evidence that one group or the other is doing better, all volunteers will be given the option of moving to the healthier program.

"These people know that if we find something significant in the next few years," says Levin, "it could benefit them for the rest of their lives."

Scientist Explores Mystery Of Killer Cells

By Dean Golembeski
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FARMINGTON, Conn. — Scattered across Leslie M. Loew's desk are hundreds of color photographs of a battlefield in which the victors devour the vanquished. It's a microscopic war that has been fought for ages, and one that has serious consequences for humans.

Loew studies the parasitic amoeba, so small that 1,000 could fit on the head of a pin yet so powerful it causes a disease that researchers say sickens an estimated 50 million people a year and kills as many as 100,000.

"Most people think of the amoeba as the innocuous little creature you learn about in school," said Loew, a University of Connecticut Health Center physiologist. "The freshwater amoeba that people play with is harmless."

"But one form is a parasite that lives in people and causes amoebic dysentery. It is connected to sanitary conditions. It occurs in tropical and subtropical climates."

The amoeba is one reason travelers are advised not to drink water in foreign countries, he said. In Mexico, for instance, an estimated 6 percent of the people are infected with the cell, properly known as entamoeba histolytica.

Scientists are interested in the parasitic amoeba because of its ability to kill other cells. If they can understand how it kills, they may be able to understand, for instance, how human cells kill cancer cells.

Loew, 41, began his research six years ago at the Weizmann Institute of Science in Israel with Carlos Gitler, who discovered the amoeba's hole-punching ability. Loew gets $100,000 a year from the National Institutes of Health.

"The thing that fascinates is that it's a killer on an individual cell level," said Loew, who has built a laboratory that provides him with a close-up view of the killing. His microscope is connected to a computer that enlarges and enhances images of the cells. The images are sent to a still camera and video recorder, providing photographs and videotape to examine.

The victims appear as small, uniform circles that glow brightly. The amoeba is a much larger, darker blob that approaches a cell, gives a "kiss of death" and moves on. Within a short time, the cell begins to die and fade. The amoeba eventually returns, engulfs the cell and digests it.

An active amoeba can eat up to 10 cells in an hour, Loew said.

Research suggests that the amoeba punches holes in the membrane of a cell it has "kissed," Loew said. "It delivers a little packet, one part of which includes hole punching material and the other part of which is toxins."

Study Indicates Many Deaths In Hospitals Are Preventable

By Janny Scott
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — Nine common medical errors — ranging from prescribing the wrong drugs to misdiagnosis of stroke — appear to have caused as many as 27 percent of all deaths from heart attack, stroke and pneumonia among patients in 12 hospitals, says a study released recently.

The study, by two RAND Corp. researchers working with the cooperation and financial support of American Medical International of Beverly Hills, Calif., is believed to be the first systematic examination of preventable hospital deaths from common conditions.

"It's an indictment of the medical care system if it's generalizable," commented Dr. William R. Fifer, a consultant to AMI, one of the nation's largest hospital management companies. "What we don't know is if this is atypical. We have no way of knowing."

The researchers, using AMI hospitals in the Southern and Western United States, studied the cases of 182 patients who had died of heart attack, stroke or pneumonia. Panels of experienced specialists then examined medical records to determine which deaths were preventable.

A majority on each panel concluded that 27 percent of the deaths could have been prevented — that is, that poor care at that hospital led to the patient's death. The panels voted unanimously in the case of 14 percent of the deaths.

"I think what we found was that (the percentage) was a surprisingly high number," said Dr. Robert W. Dubois, a co-author of the report. "... I guess if you asked the typical physician, they might say something in the neighborhood of 1 (percent) to 4 percent."

The researchers say their work can serve as a guide for hospital officials wishing to reduce rates of preventable death. Eventually, their approach might also help in providing consumers with information on which to base decisions about hospital care.

However, the researchers cautioned that their findings are preliminary and need to be studied further. They said it is impossible to know whether the 12 facilities they examined are representative of other hospitals nationwide.

AMI officials said in a statement Friday that "similar findings would almost certainly result from a sampling of any group of ... hospitals." However, they said the study had proved useful in identifying areas of their operations that "demanded immediate evaluation."

The statement said AMI underwrote the RAND study in recognition of the need for a reliable system of monitoring patient care. AMI also began using in 1986 a computer-based patient screening program, which AMI said is unique in the hospital industry.

The two-year RAND study, published in Annals of Internal Medicine, was intended to determine the frequency of preventable deaths and their causes. The researchers also explored whether hospitals could identify in advance patients at high risk of preventable death.

The 12 hospitals, which were not named in the report, were selected from an earlier study by Dubois and his co-author, Dr. Robert H. Brook of University of California, Los Angeles, and RAND. Six of the hospitals had death rates significantly higher than what would be expected; six had death rates significantly lower than expected.

The researchers found a small number of causes accounted for most of the preventable deaths.

—According to the study, the 23 patients who died unnecessarily from heart attack were victims of "significant errors in management." For example, some patients were treated inadequately for chest pain, permitting it to progress to heart attack and death.

—The panel examining the cases diagnosed as stroke found that many of those patients died because they were misdiagnosed or not fully diagnosed. The panel concluded that some may have died of other conditions that went unidentified by hospital staff because insufficient or inappropriate tests were done.

—Patients who died of pneumonia suffered from mistakes in management as well as diagnosis, the study found. Some had received inadequate initial work-up while others were given the wrong, or insufficiently powerful, antibiotics.

While Dubois and Brook concluded that it is possible for a hospital to determine after the fact which types of deaths are most likely to have been preventable, they found no way of identifying upon admission those patients at high risk of preventable death.

"I think the hospital medical system is very complex," Brook, a professor of medicine and public health at UCLA, said in an interview. "We haven't devoted sufficient resources to the kind of quality control activities that maybe the best industries have identified."

"My hope would be that the constructive outcome (of this study) would be to try to seriously ... develop better quality control systems in hospitals," he said.

Dubois is a consultant at RAND and vice president of Value Health Sciences, a medical consulting group.

Some are able to take care of the special needs of their district. Some are not.

Some districts have a Senator with a proven record of leadership. Some do not.

Our district does. He is Tom Taft.

He was ranked 22nd in effectiveness by his fellow senators after only three years service.

At this critical time, Pitt County and Eastern North Carolina need a State Senator with ability and effectiveness.

Let's keep Tom Taft working for us in the State Senate.

Skeleton Shop Bones Made On Demand

By Greg Smith
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINFIELD, Iowa — Thousands of bones are heaped on the tables. Skulls of all sizes stare from the shelves. Soon thigh bones will be connected to hip bones, and neck bones to head bones, at the H.T. Lensgraf Co.

"We can make your mother-in-law if you want," said Tom Shelledy, general manager of Lensgraf, one of the few companies in the world that creates hand-made replicas of entire skeletons and individual bones.

The finished products, made of urethane plastic, are sold to clinics, medical schools, physical therapists, hospitals, medical libraries and doctors nationwide and in 20 other countries.

"You mention Lensgraf products and just about any doctor knows who you're talking about," Shelledy said.

Having one of the world's leading makers of bone copies in this southeastern Iowa village doesn't seem strange to the 897 residents. Many of them don't even blink when Shelledy takes his pet baboon, Babelle, for a stroll.

From a cage in the middle of the Lensgraf factory, Babelle watches two dozen employees work in somewhat of an assembly line fashion.

Parts — a total of 180, not including small hardware such as screws and wire for assembly — are formed in molds that were made from actual bones.

"Most of the bones have come out of India or Europe," Shelledy said. "A real, complete skeleton will run you a couple of thousand dollars."

After the plastic parts harden, they are taken to another part of the factory, where the excess bits called "flesh" are removed.

The urethane plastic skeletons, each selling for $399, are assembled at five separate stations.

"It takes a day to make a full skeletal replica," Shelledy said. "We can put out 14 a day."

The replicas are complete with arteries, discs and nerves, and Lensgraf also manufactures dog heart replicas for veterinarians.

For fun, Lensgraf makes such trinkets as 5-inch-long spinal cord key chains, or key rings attached to miniature foot and hand structures.

Shelledy says it's not spooky being around bones and skulls all day.

"I wouldn't say it's spooky ... it's quite different," he said. "Your mind comes up with a lot of questions — who they were, what they were like ... To know these structures once had feelings — happy and sad — and now they're all gone."

Titanic

Priest Bestows Intricate Detail On His Scale Model

By Sheryl Stolberg
LAT-WP News Service

LOS ANGELES — Roberto Pirrone just became a priest. With his ordination came a vacation — two weeks to travel, relax and do whatever pleases him.

And what pleases Pirrone? Tinkering with the 19-foot scale model of the luxury liner Titanic that he began building when he was 15.

For nearly a decade, the model has stood as the centerpiece of the Los Angeles Maritime Museum. Encased in glass, Pirrone's Titanic is an awesome miniature, with moveable parts and precise features — including the ship's pool, sauna and racquetball courts, the galleys and dining rooms and luxury cabins. To the hundreds of thousands of visitors who have seen the Titanic, it has no doubt appeared perfect.

But Pirrone, now 31, knows better. He spent his two-week break retouching and rearranging the engine rooms and lower decks of the model to make it conform more accurately to new information about the sunken ocean liner. With his paintbrush in hand and plans by his side, he drew as much attention as the model.

"He is meticulous about this," said museum executive director William Lee. "He did the same thing about a year ago. He came in and took the glass off and worked for a few days, changing some small details like the way that a railing was configured. It's incredibly accurate and there are always people coming here who are considered experts in Titanic history who are amazed to find such an accurate rendition of the ship."

Said Pirrone, "I want the model to be as accurate as possible."

Unlike Pirrone's subsequent model cruise ship endeavors — he also built the Lusitania, sunk by a German submarine in 1915, and is now beginning work on the Normandie, a French ship scrapped after it caught fire during World War II — there are no complete specifications available for the Titanic.

Most of the plans for the 882-foot-long, 45,000-ton ship were destroyed during World War II, according to Pirrone. And because the ship — which sank on April 15, 1912, after hitting an iceberg — went down on its maiden voyage, photographs are limited.

Thus, Pirrone pieced together his model using available pictures, drawings and partial specifications, including those for one of the Titanic's two sister ships, the Olympic.

Since he completed the model in 1977, a considerable body of new information has come out about the Titanic, especially after the discovery of the ship's wreck in 1985. Pirrone said he has used photos of the wreck to fix a few flaws: "Sky-lights that were missing, minor structural details the average person wouldn't even care about, vents I didn't know about."

More recently, Pirrone obtained plans for the engine room and lower decks of the Britannic, the Titanic's other sister ship. He used those plans to transform the neutral gray lower decks of his model to the Britannic's colors — red, white and black. It is likely that these features were identical to the Titanic's, although Pirrone acknowledges that he may never know for certain.

Such mysteries are part of Pir-rone's fascination with the doomed ocean liner. "It's probably the most famous ship in the world," he said. "But who knows what it looks like? No one."

But it was the ship's grand central staircase, with its plush red carpet, black and gold rails and magnificent domed top, that first sparked his interest as a boy. That, he said, and the fact that he was "lousy in sports."

Pirrone, who began building model houses in his early teens, came across a description of the staircase in a book he was reading for school. "The book did not interest me," he said. "The staircase did." He decided to build the whole ship.

Cardboard Masterpiece

The starboard side of the 19-foot-long cardboard model of the ocean liner Titanic at the Los Angeles Maritime museum shows the full exterior of the ship, while the port side shows the interior. At left, Pirrone touches up a model of the Titanic's reciprocating engine before placing it in the "engine room" of his model, which was five years in the making.

Veteran Jazzman Brecker Guides His Solo Career Through Infancy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — After dazzling a nightclub audience with his work on an ultramodern electronic wind instrument, Michael Brecker went to his dressing room to audition a 40-year-old saxophone that a friend had offered to sell.

Such paradoxes make up the music of Brecker, a popular sessionman who has played on more than 500 albums but is guiding his solo career through its infancy.

Brecker has lent his licks to albums by such diverse artists as Frank Sinatra, Parliament-Funkadelic and Dire Straits, but his two solo records are filled with lengthy improvisations and traditional jazz sounds. He is known primarily for his studio work but loves to perform live.

As a horn man, his influences begin with the masters: jazz saxophonists such as John Coltrane and Charlie Parker. A recent favorite is blues guitarist Robert Cray, who won critical acclaim last year with his hit record, "Smoking Gun."

But to go from pop to funk to rock, from bebop to blues is not unusual for the 39-year-old Brecker. "My music is always heading in a bunch of different directions," he said.

With his brother, Randy, who plays trumpet, the tenor saxophonist was one-half of the Brecker Brothers, who recorded several successful albums of fusion pop in the 1970s. But Michael was 20 years into his career before he released a solo album, last year's "Michael Brecker." The current tour that brought his quintet to Fort Lauderdale is in support of his new record, "Don't Try This at Home."

"The two albums are somewhat different but coming from sort of the same place," Brecker said. "They're both not at all commercial in a pop sense."

"I really wanted to make a jazz record — basically an acoustic type record that was played fairly live in the studio with tunes that were open to allow for a lot of improvisation. I wasn't trying to employ gimmicks. I just wanted the music to speak for itself."

Director Wants Audiences To Think For Themselves

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Unlike the title character in his latest film, "Madame Sousatzka," John Schlesinger doesn't see himself as a teacher. The director would rather have audiences make up their own minds.

"I hope there's plenty of irony in all my films. That's the very thing I look for," said the British director of "Midnight Cowboy," "Marathon Man" and other acclaimed movies.

"It could all be disaster, but it isn't. That's kind of my attitude to life. Most of the endings I've had, there is a question mark. They're often about people determined to carry on."

"Madame Sousatzka," based on the novel by Bernice Rubens, takes place in London and stars Shirley MacLaine as a demanding, emotional piano teacher whose philosophy, "I teach how to live," is the cause of much conflict with her students.

Schlesinger originally sought a European actress to play the Russian-born teacher, but wanted MacLaine after deciding to cast an American.

"I liked the fact that she was willing to take risks," he said. "I thought she brought quite a lot to 'Terms of Endearment,' looking dreadful. She's not worried about her Shirley MacLaine image. I got to know that very fast."

Schlesinger credits MacLaine, whose work in "Terms of Endearment" earned her an Academy Award for best actress in 1985, with making the eccentric Sousatzka believable.

"Sometimes when I worked on the script, I'd say, 'Oh god, she's too monstrous.' But she had a way of playing the eccentricities so that it was totally part of her," the director said. "She doesn't play to the audience at all. I think it's a most extraordinary performance."

For the part of Manek Sen, the 15-year-old prodigy who endures Sousatzka's violent mood swings, Schlesinger auditioned hundreds of actors before choosing newcomer Navin Chowdhry, who makes his film debut in the movie. Chowdhry had no musical training, but Schlesinger nevertheless found him perfect for the part. The youngster worked with musical advisor Yonty Solomon.

In a way, Irina Sousatzka can be likened to Nora Desmond, the aging actress in "Sunset Boulevard." Both are flamboyant on the surface and lonely underneath. Desmond falls in love with a young screenwriter, Sousatzka with Manek.

"It's a love story. She's created something and now she falls in love with him," Schlesinger noted.

"She's a survivor. Even if she's angry or upset. I believe it isn't so removed from people even if the subject is about music. It's all about perfectly common human experience."

Ex-Centerfold Is Kids' TV Queen

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — Move over, Mr. Rogers.

In tropical Brazil, the queen of kiddie TV is a blond ex-centerfold who wears a miniskirt. She has lured millions of children to her "Xuxa Show," and has become rich by making movies, records and selling her trademarked toys and children's fashions.

But detractors say Maria da Graça Meneghel, 25, known as Xuxa (pronounced SHOO-shah), is a two-dimensional caricature whose top-rated show has no redeeming educational value and serves only to brainwash children to crave expensive playthings.

"Many grownups don't understand that the secret of my success is that I am a friend who treats children as little people with minds of their own," counters 5-foot-10 Xuxa, the ex-girlfriend of the soccer star Pele. She calls all youngsters "baixinhos," Portuguese for "shorties."

Her 4½-hour, six-day-a-week morning show on TV Globo, the country's largest commercial network, on which she sings, dances, interviews kids and introduces cartoons, pulls in a phenomenal 85 percent rating. She gets 10,000 letters a week. She sells more records than Roberto Carlos, for 20 years Brazil's No. 1 pop music star, and her recent movie, "Super Xuxa Versus Mr. Bad Vibes," was a box-office hit.

The University of Brasilia invited Xuxa to write a message for a time capsule, along with other "prominent" Brazilians such as President Jose Sarney and Pele.

However, for Dr. Yvette Piha Lehman, a psychologist with two young children who both watch the "Xuxa Show," Xuxa is "a beautiful marionette whose main job is to promote consumerism."

Lehman said Brazil's present dismal situation of high unemployment and inflation, coupled with political uncertainty surrounding its corruption-plagued 3½-year-old civilian government, permit the Xuxa phenomenon to flourish.

"In a country where everything seems to be going wrong, people flock to an idol like Xuxa as a last resort," Lehman said in an interview.

Xuxa's three corporations gross millions of dollars each year selling and franchising toys and children's fashions, and cashing in on her film and recording rights. The young star also puts on personal appearances throughout Brazil's vast interior, where she performs in soccer stadiums and regularly draws 50,000-100,000 screaming youngsters at each show.

"I have a sincere and natural relationship with children," Xuxa said, "but sometimes adults criticize me, saying that my program doesn't teach anything and that it promotes consumerism and precocious eroticism."

"That is not the case at all," the entertainer said in an interview at her mansion in Rio's expensive Barra da Tijuca Atlantic beachfront neighborhood surrounded by high walls and protected by armed guards.

"In a poor country like Brazil where elementary education is terrible, the so-called educational process embarrasses children by asking them questions they can't answer." Fewer than half the school-age children in this nation of 144 million make it to eighth grade.

"If kids fall in love with me instead of their teacher and want to put on miniskirts like mine or use the same eye makeup I do, what's so bad about that? It's just a phase," the entertainer said.

Xuxa was on 50 magazine covers in Brazil in 1987. She also models overseas and is under contract with the Ford Agency in New York.

But before becoming a magnet for young people and a star, Xuxa frequently posed nude for Brazilian men's magazines, a fact that doesn't bother her a bit today.

"Brazil is a hot, sensuous country," she said. "People here wear fewer clothes than in other places."

But Lehman said: "I think we Brazilians have lost our minds. It seems all we care about are superficial, esthetic things, and through the 'Xuxa Show' we are transmitting these values to our children."

Xuxa thinks much of the criticism against her is because her countrymen cannot accept that a 25-year-old woman has become so successful.

"If we were talking about a man, the attitude would be different," she said.

"I want to do something for children. After all, it was the 'shorties' who have given me everything I ever dreamed of."

Xuxa wants to set up a foundation to aid some of Brazil's estimated 10 million abandoned children and to participate in an international "Just Say No" anti-drug campaign aimed at young people.

Though this Brazilian bombshell is unattached, she would like to have children of her own one day and "do something lasting."

"I know that what I've got going for me now is only temporary," Xuxa said. "And Brazilians never will forgive me for growing old."

Networks Enter Sweeps With Programming Woes

Writers' Strike Leaves Huge Imprint On Fall Television Schedule

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The November sweeps are here, but you would hardly know it.

"The National Love and Sex Test"? "Inside the Sexes"? "Goddess of Love"? This is not late-night cable, unfortunately, but real network TV shows scheduled to air this month.

Festivals

January. The museum exhibit focuses on medieval armor, manuscript replicas, tapestries and other items portraying life in the Middle Ages. A collection of authentic brass rubbings, taken from the ornate brass covers of the tombs of high-ranking officials will be one of the show's highlights.

"Dark Crystal," a movie based on medieval times, will be shown in the museum, along with videos on castles and cathedrals.

Other attractions will include the Joe Pierce family band providing country and folk sounds and gospel music by the Strings of Praise.

Steve Myott of Greenville will entertain the children with stilt-walking, mime and puppet shows.

An antique automobile show is also scheduled Sunday.

For more details, call Albert Potts at 324-5008.

Normally in November, as in February and May, the networks load their schedules with top notch programming to help affiliates do well in local ratings. But this November still rattles with vacancies created by the writers' strike that ended back in August.

At least the strike forced ABC to move up 18 hours of "War and Remembrance" to fill the void left by production delays on regular series. Otherwise, the networks are struggling just to get their regular schedules on the air, and most of the "special" programming is "reality-based" or standard movie-of-the-week fare.

All this might well prompt the average viewer to ponder how late the video store stays open.

"This entire fall is a great opportunity lost to the networks due to the strike," said David Poltrack, CBS' vice president for marketing.

"We're going to go from a sweeps that still has premieres in it, that has major extra programming, and from then go into ... all the holiday specials. We're not really going to have a fix on regular network product until January."

Poltrack estimates network audiences, currently down from last season by about 8 percent, will end up down 5-10 percent for the season. If not for the effects of the strike, he said, network audiences probably would have been higher than last season, thanks to the Olympics, the World Series and the big event "War and Remembrance."

Gerald Jaffe, NBC's vice president for research projects, expects network shares, or the percentage of viewing audience, to be down a couple of points for the season, but doesn't think the sweeps numbers will be that severely affected.

"I think November will certainly be a really good indication, other than for election night. We're definitely going to take a big hit. ... It may cost us couple of network share points, just that one night, on the entire sweep. It will certainly cost us at least one," Jaffe said.

On Tuesday, Nov. 8, the networks pre-empt their entire prime-time schedules so the news divisions can cover the election. There will also be paid political broadcasts taking up network time the day before.

"It's more of a two-day depressant than a one-day depressant," said Poltrack.

"War and Remembrance" would be an anomaly in any sweeps — 20 percent of ABC's prime-time schedule devoted to one program. It begins Nov. 13. The rest of the 32-hour epic will air in February.

"War and Remembrance," based on the Herman Wouk novel, is a sequel to "Winds of War." "Winds of War" was an 18-hour miniseries in 1983 that averaged a rating of 38.6 and a 53 share and became the third highest-rated miniseries ever.

"War and Remembrance" will probably win the sweeps period for ABC, but will have to contend with lower overall network viewing attributed to just the kind of "grazing" among channels that keeps viewers from committing to long projects.

Marti Jones Searching For A Piece Of Market

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Marti Jones doesn't want to take over the whole world, just a small part.

"I don't have that drive to want to be this huge superstar because I'm just having fun doing what I'm doing," said Jones, whose third album, "Used Guitars," was released this summer.

"But I'd be stupid not to notice when people hear the record on the radio, they go out and buy it. I can go to Washington, D.C., and play halls, fill 1,400-seat halls. Other places, with no airplay, you get maybe 50 people saying 'Who is she?'"

Jones has slowly accumulated a following over the last few years, earning praise for interpretations of songs by John Hiatt and Graham Parker, and for the original material created by herself and producer Don Dixon.

It's tempting to define Jones as a "Critics' Choice," someone who receives good reviews but doesn't sell many records. Jones would like to be successful both artistically and commercially, not just for herself, but for the songwriters she covers.

That spirit came out this summer at a concert at the "Bottom Line" in New York, when Jones brought out many of the songwriters featured on "Used Guitars." Those appearing included Hiatt, Parker and the team of Janis Ian and Kye Fleming, who wrote two songs on the new record.

"We had so much fun," Jones recalled. "Everybody tossed their egos out the door. Everybody rooted for everybody else. Nobody complained about having enough time.

"Nobody got paid. We covered their expenses for traveling and that was it. What a bunch of pals. It was just the whole spirit of the thing. It was like 'Dick Clark's Cavalcade of Stars.' Everybody does their best five songs."

Jones, who still lives in her native Ohio, grew up in the 1960s hearing a wide variety of music.

"My parents had Burl Ives and the Kingston Trio," she said. "My sisters listened to Top 40, the Beatles, Temptations and Supremes. Later, I went into the heavy Joni Mitchell scene, but at the same time I'd take out a Jimi Hendrix record and put it on."

She began singing at an early age and idolized the late country legend Patsy Cline. But Jones' own vocals can best be compared to the British singer, Dusty Springfield.

"I started reading reviews and they kept saying, 'Dusty Springfield, Dusty Springfield,' and I thought, 'What does she sound like?' Dixon had this compilation of British hits and we listened to it and I went, 'They're right.' I'm really flattered. She's a great singer. It was eerie."

Jones was in her first band, "Color Me Gone," when she met Dixon, now her husband and also producer of R.E.M.

"Somebody had the brilliant idea to re-record two of the six songs on the album," she said, rolling her eyes. "We had already done them 20 million times in 20 million ways.

"They flew in Don Dixon as a candidate for a producer. I really liked him. He was a nice guy. He had this attitude that nothing's a big deal. Great attitude."

"He said, 'I caught your name at the bottom of my drawer and I always liked your singing, what are you planning on doing?' The record label put the two of us together."

Jones credits Dixon with helping develop her own sound.

"I wasn't sure what my sound was as a singer because I had been singing songs that were not really the kind I wanted to sing," Jones said.

"He helped me pick out songs and built my confidence up."

Jones' first album, "Unsophisticated Time," came out in 1984 and has set the tone for her career so far: original songs and covers; good reviews and poor sales.

"The record company didn't push the record. They thought it sounded like a demo," she said.

"Match Game," released in 1986, continued the pattern. Jones combined original songs with covers of Elvis Costello and Marshall Crenshaw among others.

"Used Guitars" has 11 songs, three of them Dixon-Jones originals. The songs range from "Ruby," a bluesy ballad written by Ian and Fleming, to the mainstream pop of "Tourist Town," a Dixon-Jones composition.

The creative process of "covering" a song can be compared to an actor reading a script — taking words written by someone else and turning them into the artist's own personal experience.

Jones isn't concerned about how many of her own songs are put on each album. She believes in using the best material possible, no matter who wrote it.

"Hopefully, people are opening up a little more to realizing a song is a song and it doesn't matter if the person's who's singing it, wrote it," she said. "I could write an album's worth of material in two weeks but I don't think it would be good enough."

Sally Field Stretches For Role In 'Punchline'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Sally Field, a stand-up comic?

"I never would have thought it would happen," she says with a nervous laugh. "And I'm not so sure it has."

Moviefoggers who have seen the Columbia Pictures release, "Punchline," may disagree. Yes, as a housewife who tries to break in at a New York comedy emporium, she bombs. But under the tutelage of another tyro comic, played by Tom Hanks, she manages to hold her audience with her one-liners about domestic distress.

It's hard to imagine the fundamentally shy Field trying to squeeze laughs out of a jaded nightclub audience. She admits that unlike her co-star, she didn't practice her role.

"I did no research for the character because I understand her very well, being a housewife with three children and wanting to have her life and her career; I understand all that," she said in an interview at her rambling Brentwood house.

"The difficult part was doing the standup. I wish I could say I did months and months of preparation. I tried to do months and months of preparation, but I couldn't find the comedy. We wrote our own comedy: Tom Hanks with his comedy team; I wrote with my comedy team."

The day he got the part, Hanks started appearing in comedy clubs in Los Angeles and New York. Field said, "finding the comedy, writing the comedy, getting onstage, making it work, honing and twisting and pinching and pulling."

"I went onstage once, with no material whatsoever, because Lily Tomlin told me to," she said. "I just talked to people. They had to go home and say, 'Let's never do that again, dear. You told me to go to a comedy club. It was so dull.'"

"I worked and worked and worked for about six months to find where Lilah's comedy was, which is what my character was going through. So it was actually happening to both of us."

Being bad in the early stages was not hard. "That came easy to me," the Academy Award-winning actress said.

Her early training in such TV comedies as "Gidget" and "The Flying Nun" provided little help.

"I have a sense of humor, a sense of comedy for Sally," she said. "I don't think it's terribly sophisticated; I don't think it's terribly unique. I can hear my certain timing. But it's very different to do a comedic scene in a film or even have a funny evening in the living room with your friends than it is to stand up on a stage with 200 or 300 people you don't know — and be funny."

"Punchline," which was co-produced by Field's Fogwood Productions, is the first major film depicting the outburst of comedy clubs across the country. The reason for the phenomenon?

"People may have studied the psychological reasons, but my feeling is the country needs to laugh, the world needs to laugh," the actress-producer said. "People need to forget themselves for a while, because it is a troubled time."

Sade's Entry Into Show Business Had Odd Twist

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — No one looks or sounds quite like Sade, so it should come as no surprise that her entry into show business came under unusual circumstances.

"I was driving along with a friend in London and we both said, 'God, it's misty.' We went to visit somebody and 'Misty' was playing on the radio. Someone then asked me if I was going to see 'Misty in Roots' (a reggae band) tomorrow."

"I went and I met these boys that I was at school with. They said they've got a group. Was I interested in singing? Do I know any singers who could just rehearse? They persuaded me that I should join them."

The rest, as they say, is pop history: three platinum albums, five Top 10 singles and total record sales of over 20 million. But in the beginning...

"I remember my first concert," she recalled. "Our stage was built on empty beer crates. I had to stand still because my heels got stuck in the cracks. It's not easy."

But how many singers make it seem as easy as Sade? Her relaxed vocals, influenced by Marvin Gaye and Nina Simone among others, helped make "Smooth Operator" a hit single in 1984, while "Diamond Life," became the all-time best-selling debut album for a female British singer.

Sade, the singer, should be distinguished from "Sade," her group, composed of Stuart Matthewman on guitar and saxophone, Andrew Hale on keyboards and Paul S. Denman on bass.

"Sade" won a Grammy in 1985 for best new artist.

"I think anybody who is the least bit interested really knows it's not just coming from me," the singer said. "Rather than me with a backing band of musicians, we're talking about a group of people."

One problem at first was songwriting; no one in the group had any experience.

"Stewart and Andrew are musically well-educated. Paul and I are ignorant," Sade said. "It isn't hard to find the ability. It does take a lot out of you. You fight with the songs. You fight to get how you want it to feel or sound. The ability isn't that special."

Sade was typically low-key about her success.

"The ultimate goal is to simply get pressed onto vinyl. There are not that many people who approach it that way."

She also downplayed the impact of her unique appearance.

 Most bridge players we know complain about holding too little in the way of high cards. On this deal, declarer might have had a legitimate complaint that he held too many. The auction was straightforward. When North showed a minimum opening bid, South was not interested in anything more than game. West led the top of his diamond sequence, attacking declarer's weakness right at the opening salvo. Declarer won the ace and crossed to dummy with a trump to take the club finesse. In with the king of clubs, West continued with the jack of diamonds and a diamond to his partner's king. East exited with a trump. Declarer cleared the ace of clubs, crossed to the table with the ace of hearts and ruffed a club. Had the suit split 3-3, all would have been well. But when the probabilities prevailed and the suit broke 4-2, declarer was an entry short to use his long club—down one. Had declarer's hand been 2 points weaker, he would almost surely have made his contract. Take away the lure of the club finesse by changing the queen of clubs to a low card, and the winning line should have become obvious. After winning the ace of diamonds, declarer should play the ace of clubs and another. Now he is a tempo ahead. No matter what the defenders do, declarer has the time and entries to set up a long club for a heart discard. The defenders will get two diamond tricks and a club, but that is all.

Anger

By Amena Hassan

The sky is gray and the air is heavy and humid. The wind is a gentle breeze. The dark clouds gather and overshadow the light. The sun has gone and in the distance a rumble of thunder can be heard. A maiden steps out, she is white with beauty but dark with anger. Her skirts flow around her. Her hair is tangled, strayed and long as it tugs with the wind. She dances slowly, at first, but keeping in time with the storm.

Her dance gets faster, the storm gets wilder, the sky gets darker. A flash of brilliant lightning lights up the sky, blinding anyone in its path. Her anger is vigorous. Her body, but not her lips, are shouting out every move.

Finally, down comes the rain, a downpour of water washing the land. The rolling hills stand in the distance. She falls to the ground. The rain splashes against her body.

She looks up to the clouds, ending her emotion.

Amena Hassan, 13, a student at Ayden Middle School wins this week's writing contest.

Me And The Cherokees

By Ashley Harris

One time a Cherokee Indian captured me. I was scared. But, they were nice to me. We ate corn, turkey, beans and wild berries. They went to a trading post. I slept in a wig-wam or a teepee. We rode on horses. They cooked some of their food on fire.

The food they made was good. Their village was pretty. The babies were carried in a papoose. They taught me how to weave, to do pottery and how to hunt for deer and buffalo. The totem poles are real, real pretty. They built their homes out of mud, trees, logs, straw and bark. The Indians trade stuff for food and other things. They wear jewelry when baking and doing other things. Because they think if an enemy was coming, it would give them power. I met an Indian named Squanto. I had fun on my adventure. I hope you liked it.

Ashley Harris, 8, a student at Sam D. Bundy School receives special mention.

Kids Care About The President

By Tracy Strickland

Kids care about the election! We need law and order! We need an education.

Someone needs to protect our future. People need freedom to go to church. People

You need to know about the presidents because you're going to vote when you get

Federal Facts

The Democratic Party

The oldest active political party in the U.S. has the donkey as its symbol. It has its beginnings in the 1790's.

The Democratic Party traces its start to two very famous men in history. Thomas Jefferson led the Democratic-Republicans in the 1790's and Andrew Jackson during his 1828 presidential campaign called his party the Democrats. Today in many states the Democratic Party holds an annual Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner to celebrate its beginning.

Like the Republican Party, the Democrats have changed their focus over the years. Earlier they favored a strict following of the Constitution. They also favored very limited government powers. It was later that the Democrats and their presidents changed to a more liberal following of the Constitution. Today the Democratic Party is the more liberal of the two major parties. This means that they favor more changes or reforms.

Prior to the Civil War, the Democratic Party split into a southern branch and a northern one. There was a disagreement over slavery. Each division nominated its own candidate for president. Neither one of the Democratic hopefuls won as Republican Abraham Lincoln became president. After the Civil War, the Democratic "Solid south" was begun. Many people in the southern states were angry over the treatment by the Radical Republicans during the reuniting of the nation. These people and their ancestors continued to vote for the Democratic candidates.

Since Herbert Hoover, a Republican, was in office when The Great Depression began, that party was blamed for the nation's troubles. In the 1930's Democrats took control of the Congress and the presidency. Franklin D. Roosevelt was elected for four terms as president as he promised a "New Deal". Next Democratic president Harry Truman fought for the "Fair Deal". It was in 1949 that southern Democrats started the new party called the Dixiecrats in opposition to Truman. By 1960 Democratic President John F. Kennedy offered the "New Frontier" followed by President Lyndon Johnson's "Great Society". Since 1953 the Democrats have been in the White House for 12 years.

The Democratic party was the first of the major political groups to nominate a woman, Geraldine A. Ferraro, to be the vice-presidential candidate. In 1984, Walter F. Mondale selected her to run on the ticket.

Like the other major political party, the Democrats gained their symbol of the donkey through the cartoonist Thomas Nast. Because Andrew Jackson in the 1828 campaign had been called a name by an opponent, Nast drew the donkey as the party's symbol in Harper's Weekly magazine. (note: Thomas Nast also drew Santa Claus as we know him today).

George Washington, the nation's first president, cautioned the country about supporting political parties. He was afraid that they would divide the country.

However, the two major political parties, the Democrats and the Republicans, work apart and together for the improvement and growth of the nation.

Katy Vojtecky, 7, a student at W.H. Robinson School receives special mention.

Oyster-Saving Recipes Can Help Stretch Small Supply

By Bill Burton
LAT/WP NEWS SERVICE

Oysters are back and so are the high prices. But this fall's crop appears to be a bit more full and tasty than last fall.

The U.S. Department of Natural Resources predicts a harvest of about 400,000 bushels tops, which would be about the same as in 1987. Six years ago, the catch was nearly 2 million bushels.

With scarcity comes higher prices. In recent days, I have seen retail prices of shucked oysters range from $6 a pint and $42 a gallon, to $10 a pint and $60 a gallon. By the bushel, good oysters start at $28 to $30.

For some cooks, that means cutting back; making a measure of oysters go farther. Two suggestions on how to do that come from Ron Ormrod of Towson, Md.

Ormrod said that in both of his oyster-saving recipes the cook can cut back the oysters as much as desired. "The country ham will carry the load, and there will still be the oyster flavor," he said.

OYSTER POT PIE

- 1 large stalk celery, chopped fine

The fruit of fall — pumpkin — becomes a delicious pie

Pumpkin Pie

Believe It Or Not, Toppings May Make It Even Tastier

Pumpkin pie is one of those beloved traditional desserts that, year after year, usually is enjoyed plain or with just a dollop of whipped cream.

Although pumpkin pie purists might argue, "If it isn't broken, why fix it?" there exists a myriad of tasty, elegant toppings which can add fun and flair to your holiday pie.

A lovely lattice crust, made with marzipan (almond paste), glamorizes any pumpkin pie. "Fruit leaves," made with fruit leather (available at most supermarkets) and a couple of pecans, complete this picture perfect look.

Pecan lovers are sure to be "whistling Dixie" after one bite of pumpkin pie with Praline Topping. This rich, crunchy topping features pecans, brown sugar, cream and vanilla. If pecans aren't available, walnuts are an especially tasty substitute. This unique combination of fall flavors — pumpkin, nuts and fruit — gives this pie an especially wholesome appeal.

Orange Cloud Topping, a light fluffy meringue featuring marshmallow creme and orange juice, is a heavenly complement to any pumpkin pie. Soft swirls of this luscious topping are lightly browned and topped with orange zest. To maintain the look of this meringue pie, cut slices with a moistened knife.

All of these mouth-watering desserts are not only attractive, but are also an excellent source of vitamin A and other important nutrients, since they feature pumpkin.

FAMOUS PUMPKIN PIE

- 2 eggs, lightly beaten
- 1 3/4 cups (16-ounce can) solid pack pumpkin
- 3/4 cup sugar

- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cloves
- 1 1/2 cups (12-fluid ounce can) undiluted evaporated milk

1 9-inch (4-cup volume) unbaked pie crust or 2 9-inch regular pie crusts

In large mixing bowl, combine filling ingredients in order given; pour into unbaked pie crust. Bake in preheated 425-degree oven for 15 minutes. Reduce temperature to 350 degrees. Bake an additional 40 to 45 minutes, or until knife inserted near center comes out clean. Top cooled pie as desired.

Note: When using metal or foil pie pan, bake on preheated cookie sheet. When using glass or ceramic pie plate, do not use cookie sheet.

MARZIPAN LATTICE TOPPING WITH LEAVES

- 1 baked 9-inch pumpkin pie, cooled
- 1 package (7 ounces) marzipan or almond paste
- Ground cinnamon (optional)
- Various fruit leathers
- Pecan halves

On board lightly dusted with powdered sugar, roll out marzipan into 9-inch circle, 1/16-inch thick. Cut into 1/2-inch wide strips. Selecting every other strip, arrange over pie 3/4-inch apart in striped pattern. Rotate pie 1/2 turn. Place remaining strips on pie to create lattice effect; trim to fit. Brush with cinnamon to add additional color, if desired. Cut leaf shapes out of various flavored fruit leathers. Arrange leaves in cluster at edge of pie. Garnish with pecan halves.

Celebrate The Election With A Political Party

It's election time, and whether you're Democratic, Republican, or Independent, having the freedom to choose our country's leaders is cause for celebration.

If you hadn't planned on attending an election-night gala, how about throwing an election party of your own? With family or a few close friends, watching the votes being tallied on TV can be just as much fun as a full-blown rally.

Invite your guests to stop over after they hit the polls. Then arrange some comfortable chairs in full view of the TV. Provide some fitting refreshments and let the national events take it from there.

The food, of course, should be in keeping with the '88 election theme. One fun way to do that is to serve foods based on the heritage of this year's front runners.

Democratic supporters, for example, can enjoy the Greek influence with authentic Gyro Pitas. Tender lamb-filled pocket sandwiches with creamy dressing can make cheering on the Democratic nominees fun, as well as tasty.

Republican supporters can take the English route for their menu selections. Wedges of beef and potato Shepherd's Pie make a perfectly proper, not to mention delicious, way for Republicans to cheer on their political choices.

As for drinks, try skipping the alcohol this term. By casting your vote for mocktails, or cocktails without the alcohol, you free yourself and your guests from alcohol's aftereffects. That makes mocktails a popular addition to any ticket.

And mocktails are not only sensible, they're delicious, too. Take savory Mediterranean Sipper, made with zesty vegetable juice, lemon juice, a dash of olive oil and orragano, it's the perfect accompaniment for Gyro Pitas. And Spicy Mulled "V-8," with its brown sugar, lemon juice, cinnamon and cloves, tastes terrific with a steaming slice of Shepherd's Pie. Since both mocktail recipes feature delicious "V-8" vegetable juice, which provides a serving of vegetables for each 6-ounce glass, no matter who your guests support, their diets will get a healthy boost.

Enjoy this year's election night for a change and throw an election celebration. But do it now. You won't get another chance for four more years.

SHEPHERD'S PIE

- 2 tablespoons butter or margerine
- 3/4 cup chopped onions
- 1 cup chopped celery
- 1/2 cup thinly sliced carrots
- 2 cups cubed cooked beef
- 2 tablespoons all-purpose flour

- 1 cup clear ready-to-serve beef broth
- 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
- 2 cups hot, seasoned mashed potatoes

1. In 10-inch skillet over medium heat, in hot butter, cook onions, celery and carrots until tender, stirring occasionally. Stir in beef; heat through.

2. Stir in flour. Gradually add beef broth, stirring constantly. Heat to boiling. Stir in Worcestershire.

3. Spoon mixture into 1 1/2 quart round casserole. Top with mashed potatoes. Bake at 450 degrees for 10 minutes or until heated through. Makes 4 servings.

SPICY MULLED "V-8"

- 3 cups "V-8" vegetable juice

- 1 1/2 teaspoons brown sugar
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon

Generous dash ground cloves

In 2-quart saucepan combine all ingredients. Over medium-high heat, heat to boiling. Ladle into mugs. Makes 3 cups or 4 servings.

GYRO PITA

- 1 cup peeled, seeded and finely chopped cucumber
- 1/2 cup sour cream
- 1/4 cup plain yogurt
- 1/2 teaspoon dried dill weed, crushed
- 1/4 grated lemon peel
- 4 pita breads (6-inch diameter sandwich pockets)

1 pound thinly sliced cooked lamb (about 2 cups)

Fresh dill sprigs or chopped pitted ripe olives for garnish

1. To make dressing: In small bowl, combine first 5 ingredients. Set aside.

2. Cut each pita bread in half, forming two pockets. Fill pockets with lamb. Spoon about 2 tablespoons dressing in each. Garnish with fresh dill or olives. Makes 8 gyros or 4 servings.

MEDITERRANEAN SIPPER

- 3 cups "V-8" vegetable juice
- 4 teaspoons lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon olive oil
- 1/4 teaspoon dried orragano leaves, crushed

In small pitcher, combine all ingredients. Cover; refrigerate until serving time, at least 1 hour. Makes 3 cups or 4 servings.

Q. Recently the paper had a big article "Non-dairy creamers meeting consumers' health demands," next to your column. I thought the creamers had coconut and palm oil and therefore were not good for heart healthy diets. Have they changed? Why don't you run more healthy recipes along with your column? B.G., Greenville.

A. Thanks for asking. As I have written the whole area of diets can be confusing. And, the term "healthy diet" can have lots of meanings. If you are a person sensitive to lactose in foods, then a non-dairy creamer would be "healthy" because it would replace a lactose containing food. If you are a person only concerned about calories, a tablespoon of half-and-half has about 20 calories, the same as a serving of frozen non-dairy creamers. So there is no real difference in its "health calorie properties." If you are a person with high blood cholesterol and need to watch the saturated fats in your diet, then you must be careful in the creamer you choose because they are not the same. We looked at several brands of frozen non-dairy creamers available in our area. "Coffee Rich" and "Poly Rich" are made with partially hydrogenated soybean oil, so they are "more healthy" than half-and-half. But half-and-half is a better choice than the many other brands of creamer that have coconut or palm oil in them. Read the labels is my constant advice.

The Reflector Food pages often carry healthy recipes, but readers need to encourage the editors to run more if that is what you want. There are times we all want to enjoy a recipe that is a little bit higher in fat, sugar or sodium. That's OK, too. People with no diet and lifestyle health problems and of ideal body weight under control don't have to be as vigilant as a person with high blood pressure, heart disease or diabetes in their food selection and preparation. I am pleased that the Reflector continues to run my column as a public service provided by the Department of Family Medicine. I don't, however, select the recipes or other stories.

Q. At the State Fair, a booth was selling low calorie cotton candy. What's that? C.L., Greenville.

A. That's an enterprising business person. Cotton candy is spun sugar with some flavoring and coloring. I am not aware of a way to reduce the calories in cotton candy. It could be, though, that the vendor was comparing his treat with other higher calorie, higher fat foods at the fair, like fudge, corn dogs, doughnuts and other fried foods. I don't think cotton candy plays a big role in the diet of most folks, so I wouldn't worry about it much. Except, I did see a home cotton candy machine in the Christmas catalog!

The Key To Healthy Dieting

If you think D-I-E-T and D-E-P-R-I-V-E-D are synonymous, think again. In fact, the key to successful dieting may be to give up feeling deprived.

Confused? Linda Webb, a nutritionist for a major soup company, explains, "The downfall of many diets is the feeling that we can't have the foods we want or like to eat. Too many times, diets can seem like an endless list of boring foods that have little taste appeal to the dieter."

The solution? Indulge in your favorites! According to Ms. Webb, "No foods should be excluded from a healthy diet. The key to successful weight control is learning how to include favorite foods in a balanced, reasonable diet."

That balanced diet should be based on the following food: whole grain breads and cereals; fruits and vegetables; lowfat dairy products and lean meats, poultry and fish. To this basic diet, include reasonable portions of other favorite foods.

To cut calories from some old favorites, Ms. Webb offers the following tips and strategies:

•If you're hooked on ice cream, save money and calories by buying inexpensive store brands — they're made with less butterfat. Try ice milk or fruit sorbets, too.

•Make your favorite refrigerated pie without the piecrust and save 115 calories per serving. Simply put the pie filling in a parfait glass and chill.

•If you love cream soup but can do without the cream, try making homemade versions with buttermilk instead of cream. For a quick, delicious version, try cup-a-soup golden creamy broccoli — creamy

New Orleans' Breakfasts Are Truly Eye-Openers

By Diane Stoneback
LAT/WP NEWS SERVICE

NEW ORLEANS — Shortly after sunrise, the slow, steady clip-clop of a mule's hooves echoes through the nearly deserted, narrow streets of the French Quarter. In the distance, a steam boat whistle moans plaintively on the banks of the Mississippi River.

In today's New Orleans, it is not hard to catch glimpses of the past — those boom-town days of early growth during the era when Mark Twain piloted a churning, paddle-wheeler on the river.

That is because the Crescent City is "the city that care forgot," according to a proprietor of one of its most famous restaurants.

Ted Brennan, of Brennan's on Royal Street, explained, "New Orleanians still take the time to enjoy life. They're willing to spend as long as three hours savoring a Creole breakfast." Now, that's time enough for a real power breakfast!

In most other cities, Brennan noted, "Breakfast is eaten early, if

(See CREOLE, D-2)

Creole Breakfasts Of New Orleans Are Truly Something Extra

at all, and it is gulped on the run."
The roots of this hearty breakfast tradition can be traced back to the customs of the city's French Market merchants who conducted much of the port city's business in the early morning hours.
By 10 or 11 a.m., when their day's work was nearly done, coffee and cotton merchants, the produce men, the fishmongers and butchers sought hearty mid-morning meals. The town's restaurateurs responded with what must have been the forerunners of today's brunches.
Authors Rima and Richard Collin, in "The New Orleans Cookbook" (Knopf; $9.95), note: "The fame of the full-meal New Orleans breakfast spread during the Cotton Exposition of 1884-1885 and became one of the hallmarks of Creole cuisine."
It was not until the early 1950s, however, that someone first capitalized on the richness of this culinary heritage.
Owen Brennan (Ted's father) was already operating a successful restaurant when he noticed most of the city's dining rooms opened for lunch and dinner only. He decided to open earlier, spreading out his operating costs.
At the same time, a best-selling book by Francis Parkinson Keyes, "Dinner at Antoine's," touted Brennan's nearby competition. Undaunted, Brennan gave the title a twist of his own and set out to popularize "Breakfast at Brennan's."

A stylized, full-color gamecock became the restaurant's permanent logo and Brennan and his staff began collaborating on what has to be, at the very least, one of the most elaborate and eye-opening breakfast menus in the United States.
As a matter of fact, if the morning fare does not open your eyes, the prices will.
Tom Fitzmorris, a New Orleans restaurant reviewer, says, "Breakfast at Brennan's is one of New Orleans' most famous meals. The experience is still memorable if all goes well and if you are ready for the prices — which are higher than you've ever paid for a morning meal."
A single person's tab for a full breakfast ranges from $29.75 to $35.50 and that is without drinks or the tip!
"I don't know of any other city in the country that can rival New Orleans for its breakfasts. There are weekend brunches in other cities, but I haven't been anywhere else that serves such elaborate breakfasts seven days a week," Brennan commented.
The city's residents generally indulge in a Creole breakfast for special occasions or on weekends while tourists and businessmen frequent the restaurant on weekday mornings.
Noted Brennan, "Although New Orleansians can't eat like this all the time, their philosophy is 'Diets be damned,' when they come in here for breakfast."

That is an attitude one has to keep all day long to get even a moderate sampling of the city's Creole and Cajun fare.
Joe Cahn, owner of the New Orleans School of Cooking, put it another way. "New Orleans is one of the eating capitals of the world. If you've ever wondered why New Orleans is below sea level, it is because it is one of the heaviest cities in the world. People here have a passion for food," he said.
Although you might not be able to be one of the many people who breakfast at Brennan's each day, you can try some of Brennan's recipes for considerably less than the cost of several day's groceries.
As Ted Brennan says, "We enjoy sharing the recipes with people and hope they can recreate them successfully at home. Perhaps, some day, they'll visit us to taste the complete experience."

SOUTHERN BAKED APPLE WITH DOUBLE CREAM
8 firm red apples
3 tablespoons sugar
1 1/2 teaspoons cinnamon
2 2/3 cups heavy cream
1 tablespoon vanilla
3 tablespoons sugar
To bake the apples, wash, dry and core them, then place in a shallow baking pan side by side. Sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon and bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until tender, about 50 minutes to an hour. Remove from the oven, place in heated bowls. Mix vanilla and sugar with heavy cream and pour 1-3 cup of mixture over each portion before serving.

EGGS SHANNON
For creamed spinach:
1 cup butter
1 1/2 cups white onion, chopped
1 1/4 cups flour
4 cups milk
About 1 teaspoon salt
About 1/2 teaspoon black pepper
8 cups cooked spinach, chopped
Other ingredients:
8 filets of fried trout
To poach the eggs:
16 large eggs
3 quarts of water
2 cups white vinegar
For the Hollandaise Sauce:
8 large egg yolks
4 tablespoons lemon juice
1 1/2 pounds hot melted butter, clarified
1 teaspoon salt
About 1/4 teaspoon cayenne
To prepare the creamed spinach, melt the butter over low heat in a heavy saucepan. Add the chopped onion and cook until just soft. Add the flour gradually, stirring constantly. Stir in the milk, still stirring, and cook until evenly blended and warmed through. Add the salt, pepper and spinach and cook a few minutes more, just until the spinach is warmed through and the mixture evenly blended. Put equal amounts of creamed spinach on eight heated plates then place one filet of fried trout on top. Place two poached eggs side by side on top of the trout and spoon the Hollandaise sauce over the eggs.

To poach the eggs, bring the water and the vinegar to a boil in a large skillet or saute pan. Keeping the water at a continuous low rolling boil, crack the eggs one by one into it. Cook until the egg whites are firm, about 4 minutes. Lift the poached eggs out of the water with a skimmer or slotted spoon, allowing the water to drain back into the pan. Place them on a heated platter while you assemble the dishes.

To prepare the hollandaise sauce, put the egg yolks and lemon juice in a mixing bowl. Place the bowl over or near the pilot on top of the stove. Beat briefly with a whisk, then slowly pour in the hot melted butter, beating briskly and constantly while you pour. When the sauce begins to thicken, sprinkle in the salt and pepper. Continue to beat while adding the rest of the butter. Beat until the sauce reaches an attractive thick consistency. When the sauce is finished, leave the bowl over the pilot to keep warm, or place it in a basin of warm water.

PRALINE TOPPING
1 baked 9-inch pumpkin pie
1 cup pecan halves
1/2 cup packed light brown sugar
2 tablespoons half and half
2 teaspoons butter
1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
1/4 teaspoon orange zest, finely chopped
1 egg white, stiffly beaten
Place pecans in medium bowl; butter cookie sheet, set aside. In small saucepan, combine sugar and half and half. Bring to a boil over medium heat, stirring frequently. Add butter, continue to boil, stirring constantly, until temperature reaches 250 degrees on candy thermometer (hard ball stage).
Remove from heat; stir in vanilla and orange zest. Immediately pour hot mixture over pecans, tossing with two forks, to coat nuts. Quickly spread on cookie sheet, pulling apart to separate.
When completely cool, chop candied nuts into small pieces. Stir into beaten egg white. Spoon nut mixture over pumpkin pie. Bake in preheated 350-degree oven for 10 to 15 minutes or until golden. Cool.

ORANGE CLOUD TOPPING
1 baked 9-inch pumpkin pie
1 1/3 cups (7-ounce jar) marshmallow creme
2 tablespoons thawed orange juice concentrate 2 teaspoons orange zest, finely chopped
3 egg whites, room temperature
1 teaspoon cornstarch
1/8 teaspoon cream of tartar
3 tablespoons sugar
Orange zest (optional)
In medium bowl, combine marshmallow creme, orange juice concentrate and orange zest; set aside. In small mixer bowl, combine egg whites, cornstarch and cream of tartar; beat until thick and foamy.
Beat in three tablespoons sugar, one tablespoon at a time, until meringue is stiff and shiny. Fold half of meringue into marshmallow mixture; blend well. Fold in remaining meringue; blend gently. Spread over cooled pie, sealing to edge of crust.
Bake in preheated 350-degree oven for 12 to 15 minutes or until golden.
Garnish with additional orange zest, if desired. Allow to cool 15 minutes before serving. Pie cuts easily with moistened knife.

taste for only 50 calories per serving.
•When eating out, share your dessert with a friend — it tastes the same, whether you eat it all or only half!
•Love fried chicken? Try this alternative: remove skin and visible fat, spread each piece with 1/2 teaspoon reduced-calorie salad dressing and coat lightly with bread crumbs, bake at 400 degrees for 40 to 50 minutes. Use small pieces of boneless breast for low-cal chicken nuggets!
•Have a sweet tooth? Make a list of some low-calorie sweet snacks to keep it satisfied. For example, a small lollipop has only 35 calories; 4 vanilla wafers have 50; 1 frozen fruit bar, 2 fig bar cookies or 6 gum drops have 100 or less.
•Be aware of your food moods. If you're in the mood for something warm and comforting, try one of the varieties of cup-a-soup at 30-70 calories, per serving. If you feel like munching, try 2 cups of popcorn for under 50 calories, or 10 bite-size cheese crackers, for 100.

LEAN Machine Gears Up To Get The Fat Out

By Carole Sugarman
LAT/FP NEWS SERVICE

The latest effort to get Americans to cut down on their biggest edible vice is "Project LEAN," a nationwide campaign aimed exclusively at dietary fat.

Sponsored by the Henry J. Kaiser Foundation, a philanthropic organization in Menlo Park, Calif., the major publicity blitz, announced last week, will feature national public-service advertisements, a hotline (offering free brochures, counseling and referral services) and information on all kinds of "practical skills" to moderate fat intake, according to Merrill Rose, Project LEAN spokesperson.

The Kaiser Foundation will be joined by a coalition of 23 private and public health or marketing organizations, such as the American Medical Association, the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and the American Cancer Society.

It's obviously too early to tell if the marketing efforts behind Project LEAN (Low-fat Eating for America Now) will be as successful as the ones behind fast-food restaurants. However, in the meantime, here's an easy, healthful dinner to keep you from depending on your local burger joint.

Recipes are from "The American Cancer Society Cookbook," by Anne Lindsay (William Morrow, $17.95). The 355-calorie dinner should take no more than 45 minutes to complete. Serve with sliced tomatoes (25 calories apiece, no fat).

LEMON CHICKEN SCHNITZEL
(5 servings)
1 pound boneless, skinless chicken breast halves
Juice of 1 lemon
1/4 cup all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon salt or to taste
1/2 teaspoon thyme
1 egg
1 teaspoon water

1/2 cup fine dry bread crumbs
Dijon mustard for dipping (optional)
Cut chicken horizontally into 1/4-inch-thick slices. Place between two pieces of waxed paper and flatten chicken, using the flat side of cleaver or bottom of bottle. Sprinkle chicken with lemon juice; let stand for 10 minutes.
In shallow dish, combine flour, salt and thyme; mix well. In another shallow dish, lightly beat egg with water. Dip chicken pieces into flour mixture, then into egg mixture, then into bread crumbs.

Place on lightly greased baking sheet or in microwave dish. Bake in a 400-degree oven for 10 to 15 minutes, or microwave, uncovered, on high for 4 minutes, or until chicken is no longer pink inside. Pass dijon mustard.

fat per serving: 7.2.

GLAZED BRUSSELS SPROUTS WITH PECANS
(4 servings)
2 cups small brussels sprouts
2 teaspoons butter or margarine
2 teaspoons granulated sugar
2 tablespoons coarsely chopped pecans (or substitute walnuts)
Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste

Trim base of sprouts and outside leaves. Steam sprouts over boiling water for about 10 minutes or until tender. Drain thoroughly.
In skillet, melt butter over medium heat; add sugar and stir until melted. Add sprouts and pecans; stir to coat well and cook for 1 to 2 minutes. Season with salt and pepper to taste.

Oysters

1 teaspoon all purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon celery salt
1 cup milk
1/4 cup pimentos, chopped
1/2 pound country ham, chopped
1 pint oysters with liquid
1 cup fresh mushrooms, sliced
Commercial pie crust mix

In a saucepan, melt butter over medium heat; add carrots, celery and green onions. Cook 7 minutes, or until tender, stirring occasionally. Stir in flour and celery salt until smooth. Add milk, pimentos and ham, and cook for about 10 minutes until thickened and bubbly. Add oysters, liquid and mushrooms, and keep warm.

In four individual casserole dishes (one large, if you prefer), line bottom and sides with pie crust mix and bake in pre-heated oven for about 7 minutes, or until crust gets lightly browned. Fill crusts with oyster filling, top with pie crust, flute edges and cut vents for steam to escape. Bake for 30 to 35 minutes until top crust browns lightly.

SPAGHETTI WITH OYSTER SAUCE

1 pound spaghetti
3 sticks butter or margarine
3 cloves garlic, minced
1 1/2 cups green onions, chopped
1/2 cup chopped pimento
3 cups heavy cream
2 1/2 cups country ham, chopped
1 pint oysters
Fresh parsley

Cook spaghetti according to instructions. Melt 2 sticks butter in large frying pan. Add garlic, green onions and pimento. Saute 2 to 3 minutes. Gradually beat in cream, whisking constantly until it just comes to a boil, but do not boil. Add last stick of butter, stir constantly until it thickens, about 5 minutes. Add ham, oysters and liquid, cook several minutes longer. Mix spaghetti and sauce, trim with fresh parsley, and you should be able to serve 8.

More Than Just A Muffin

1 1/4 lbs. chicken breast, boned and skinned
1 stick butter or margarine
1/2 cup apricot brandy
2 1/2 cups heavy whipping cream
4 heaping teaspoons Pommery mustard
4 English muffins

Watercress, as garnish
Cut chicken into chunks. Melt butter in small non-stick skillet over medium heat. Add chicken and saute in butter until almost done (about 1 1/2 minutes). Flambe with brandy; add whipping cream and reduce mixture. Add mustard; stir until thickened. Pour chicken mixture over toasted open-face style English muffins leaving the top rim of the muffins free of sauce. Garnish with watercress.
