Soviet Union Suspends Pullout In Afghanistan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — A top Foreign Ministry spokesman today said the Soviet Union has suspended its troop withdrawal from Afghanistan because of heavy attacks by rebels and hinted the pullout might not be completed by a Feb. 15 deadline.

"The Soviet troops are being withdrawn due to the goodwill of the Soviet government," First Deputy Foreign Minister Alexander

Bessmertnykh told a news conference. "They will be withdrawn in honorable conditions."

The current atmosphere of heavy attacks by insurgents with arms supplied by the United States, Pakistan and other countries "does not provide conditions for such a withdrawal of Soviet troops," Bessmertnykh said.

In Washington, Reagan administration officials accused the Soviet Union of raising tensions in Afghanistan and stirring up uncertainty about when remaining Red Army troops would be withdrawn from the war-torn country.

The Soviet Union says supply of arms to the rebels violates the April 14 Geneva agreement under which the Soviet Union already has withdrawn half of its 100,000 soldiers and has promised to remove the remaining soldiers by Feb. 15.

"The Soviet Union intends to stand by its obligations under the Geneva accords," he said. But in order for the Geneva agreement to be fulfilled, all four countries that signed it — the United States, Soviet Union, Afghanistan and Pakistan — must obey its provisions, he said.

"If none of the countries violate them, the accords will be fulfilled by the Soviet Union," Bessmertnykh said.

He said the Soviet Union was introducing more powerful weapons into Afghanistan to help forces of President Najib's pro-Soviet government, but that the quantities of soldiers and weapons remained constant.

He criticized an "unremittant flow of armaments of U.S. and other origins."

Capping a week of U.S. complaints about new Soviet weapons shipments to Afghanistan, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Soviet actions "can only increase tensions in the region and raise speculation that they are going to live up to the Geneva accords."

The Soviets pulled out by Aug. 15 half the 100,000 or more troops they had in Afghanistan. All of the rest are supposed to leave by Feb. 15.

Fitzwater, on a political campaign trip with President Reagan to Chicago, said Soviet actions "raise

Pre-Election Jobless Rate Falls

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The nation's civilian unemployment rate fell to 5.3 percent in October as the economy created more than 300,000 jobs, the government said today in its last major economic report before Tuesday's presidential election.

The 0.1 percentage point drop in the rate from September's 5.4 percent matched June's rate as the lowest since May 1974.

President Reagan, leaving the White House to campaign for George

Bush, said the report was "very, very good news for all Americans."

"The future is bright and its getting brighter. ... Nothing's going to stop us now."

Employers added 325,000 jobs last month, more than the average monthly increases of 240,000 in August and September but comparable to last spring's gains of 300,000 a month.

Nearly 100,000 of October's new jobs were on assembly lines, more than double the drop of 45,000 manufacturing jobs over the two previous months.

Today's figures showed 193,000 more Americans at work than in September, with the number of jobless people totaling only 6.5 million.

The report said that the percentage of working-age Americans with jobs remained at a record 62.4 percent.

The number of women holding jobs grew by 320,000 while the number of working men fell by 99,000, according to the Labor Department's monthly survey of 58,000 households.

Food processing paced the unusually large manufacturing job gains with 25,000 new jobs logged in October. The department said, however, that the seasonally adjusted increase in those jobs reflected fewer fall cutbacks than would normally be the case because of light summer hiring caused by the drought.

After "several months of drought-related slowdowns, the one month pickup in manufacturing jobs may thus be somewhat overstated," said the commissioner of labor

Shootout In Hotel Kills Two

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEXICO CITY — A shootout between rival labor factions inside a luxury hotel sent guests fleeing to their rooms and left two people dead and 21 wounded, authorities said.

Identities of those killed Thursday night at the Hotel Presidente Chapultepec were not immediately available. But Marta Ramirez, hotel shift supervisor, said today that all guests and employees were safe and accounted for.

Hotel spokesman Federico Gonzalez said factions of the Mexican Workers Federation and the Revolutionary Confederation of Workers and Campesinos clashed inside the lobby. The brawlers surged into the bar, attacking a group of Revolutionary Confederation-affiliated musicians.

The pro-government Workers Federation lost a bid to win the musicians' contract to the Revolutionary Confederation in an arbitration ruling earlier Thursday, the Excelsior news service reported.

The shootout was the second involving the Federation this week. On Monday, a fight between Federation activists and the Acapulco hotel workers union left two people dead, 18 injured and Acapulco's union headquarters in flames.

Gonzalez said he did not know who began shooting first. Employees of the popular hotel near Chapultepec Park quickly ushered guests to their rooms after the shooting broke out.

Humberto Pena, a Red Cross spokesman, confirmed two died from gunshot wounds.

'Virus' Slows Computer Systems Coast To Coast

By Paul A. Driscoll
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Researchers today tried to trace a "virus" that infected computer systems nationwide, slowing machines in universities, a NASA and nuclear weapons lab and other federal research centers linked by a Defense Department computer network.

By Thursday night, the virus had infected hundreds of computers on what one expert said was the largest scale ever. Authorities said the virus apparently destroyed no data but temporarily halted some research.

The New York Times reported today that an anonymous caller to the newspaper claimed that a graduate student had created the virus as a harmless experiment and became terrified of the consequences when it got out of hand.

Viruses are tiny programs introduced to computers either as a prank or vandalism. They can attach themselves to other programs and spread through shared software or "electronic mail" systems that link computers.

Mild viruses may flash a message on a user's screen, while "deadly" forms can destroy data or cripple a computer. This virus apparently did its damage by rapidly duplicating itself, thereby slowing computers' processing speed and taking up their memory space.

Many research centers shut down their computers Thursday in an effort to purge the rapidly spreading virus, but not all experts were confident they had eliminated the program, which could linger in electronic mailboxes. In the past, "antidote" programs have been developed to seek out and destroy viruses.

"The very scary thing is that this is a very sophisticated computer program, and shutting them down may not be enough," said Richard LeBlanc, associate professor in Georgia Tech's School of Computer Sciences.

At Lawrence laboratory in Berkeley, Calif., computer scientists noticed their computers operating very slowly Wednesday afternoon.

They turned off the machines, flipped them back on again and within 30 seconds the virus was spreading again, said Lynn Yarras, a spokesman at the research center.

The computer problem also was discovered late Wednesday at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory in Livermore, Calif. The laboratory's work includes design of the nation's nuclear weapons and key work on the Strategic Defense Initiative, or "Star Wars," program.

However, spokesman Jeff Garberon said the virus infected the unclassified, non-secured computer systems and not the classified national defense system.

At the Los Alamos, N.M., National Laboratory, the virus infected only unclassified computers, said spokeswoman Barbara Mulkin.

Computer experts at the lab were analyzing the situation to determine what damage might have occurred and to find a cure. Ms. Mulkin said that might take a day.

At Stanford University in Palo Alto, Calif., the virus was "mainly just slowing down systems and slowing data," said Bob Beyers, a school spokesman.

"The developer was clearly a very high order hacker," or computer buff, said John McAfee, chairman of the Computer Virus Industry Association in Santa Clara, Calif.

"He used a flaw in the operating systems of these computers" to

Group Attending Planning Session

A contingent of 126 Greenville and Pitt County residents left this morning en route to Asheville to attend the 1989 planning conference, "Challenges and Opportunities."

The conference, sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce at the Grove Park Inn, will begin tonight and continue Saturday and Sunday morning.

Chris McCoy, chairman elect of the planning session, is presiding over the three-day event. The first session will be at 7:30 p.m. today with David Abernathy, director of employee relations for Duke Power Co., as the speaker.

The principal round of discussions will begin at 8:15 a.m. Saturday and conclude at 1 p.m.

Saturday speakers and discussion leaders will include McCoy; Jerry Powell, chairman of the Year 2007 Committee; City Manager Greg Knowles; County Manager Kramer Jackson; Malcolm Green, Greenville Utilities Commission general manager; Jack Steelman, Evergreen executive director; John West, a member of the Greenville-Pitt County Convention and Visitors Authority, and John Chaffee, executive director of the Pitt County Industrial Development Commission.

Also, James Lanier, East Carolina University vice chancellor for institutional advancement; Dr. Ed Bright, dean of instruction, Pitt Community College; Dr. Eddie West, superintendent, Pitt County schools; Jack Richardson, president, Pitt County Memorial Hospital, and Dr. James Hallock, dean, ECU School of Medicine.

Computer Diseases

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Just as a biological virus disrupts living cells to cause disease, a computer virus invades data processors and disrupts normal operation of the machines.

A computer virus is a computer program that carries in its code instructions for replicating itself perfectly.

Once it invades a computer, the virus temporarily takes control of the operating system, which is the master program that allows the computer to run other programs, such as word-processing software.

The virus spreads into other programs in the computer and spreads from one computer to the next as users give each other floppy disks or link up over telephone lines.

Some viruses are entered into a computer by pranksters.

'Loaned Executive' Plan Draws High Marks

By Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

As the 1988 Pitt County United Way drive draws to close, campaign officials are giving high marks to a first-year program implemented to help reach this year's goal of $1,104,071 in contributions.

The Loaned Executive Program, a new effort for the campaign, "loans" management-level employees of one company to another organization to assist with in-house campaigning.

"The Loaned Executive Program has provided 16 volunteers with a new and different opportunity to participate in the United Way campaign," said Mac McCarley, campaign chairman.

"Loaned executives are carefully selected management-level employees or individuals in management training programs who have been recognized as high achievers in an organization.

"The executives are 'loaned' to the United Way for 12 weeks for approximately eight hours per week," he said.

McCarley said the program has been tried in other communities and has proven to be an efficient and effective way of penetrating potential markets.

"It's also one source of securing well-informed and fully-committed individuals to work within the campaign," he said.

In the beginning of the campaign, most of the loaned executives had little knowledge of the United Way. Subsequently, they participated in a two-day training seminar.

"The training provided them with a strong understanding of the United Way and its functions and granted them a first-hand experience with United Way member agencies," McCarley said. "They also learned specific fund-raising techniques and gained direct experience in handling objections."

Ann Stewart, a loaned executive from NCNB, said she feels the program is very worthwhile and would like to see it continue in next year's campaign.

"Participating in the Loaned Executive Program has really made me aware of all the lives that United Way touches and it also provided me an opportunity to become more involved in the community," she said.

Jacqueline H. Arnold, a loaned executive from First Citizen's Bank and Trust, agreed that, in addition to assisting the United Way's efforts, the loaned executive program has provided other benefits.

"The program has enhanced my communication skills and also increased my community awareness," she said.

Managing the program is D. Jordan Whichard III, vice president and general manager of The Daily Reflector.

Whichard, who participated in a similar program in Greenville, S.C., said participating as a loaned executive can help an employee develop skills in interpersonal relations and foster contacts with community volunteer leadership.

"Participation in the Loaned Executive Program also benefits the participating organizations by developing employee work skills in leadership and salesmanship that the person might previously not have been exposed to," he said.

Whichard also suggested companies that did not participate in the program this year consider involvement during the next campaign to help meet the United Way's contribution goal.

Program participants are Jacqueline H. Arnold, First Citizen's Bank and Trust; Donna C. Bell, Home Federal Savings and Loan; John Bulow, Pitt County; Mark Edwards, BB&T; Ann Stewart and Lauri Roberson, NCNB; Jennifer Garlow, Carolina Telephone; Denton W. Hardee, People's Bank & Trust; D. Todd Harris, The Daily Reflector Inc.; Camille Smith, First Federal of Pitt County; Steve Stephenson, Ward & Smith, P.A.; James N. Vincent, Fieldcrest Mills Inc.; Beau Young, Wachovia Bank & Trust, and Michael Garrett, Macon Sizemore and Susan Messick of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Seven Thefts Reported

Investigators said seven thefts, among them a 1989 model car and a purse containing $506, were reported to Greenville police Thursday.

Officer J.A. Bartlett said the car, a Nissan Maxima, was taken from Leith Oldsmobile on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 5:41 p.m., while Officer J.G. Bridges said the purse containing the cash was taken from a shopping cart at the Food Lion grocery on E. 10th Street in an incident reported at 2:49 p.m.

Officer C.A. Sharpe said a portable radio valued at $40 and a cassette tape valued at $8 were taken from Nichols Discount Center about 1:09 p.m. by two juveniles who were turned over their guardians, while Officer S.A. Bass said a license plate was taken from a vehicle parked at the Ramada Inn on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 1:41 p.m.

Officer Alexander Batts said a wallet containing $75 was taken from 1713 Rosewood Dr. in an incident reported at 3:09 p.m., while Officer R.L. Forrest said a bicycle was taken from 510B W. First St. in an incident reported at 4 p.m.

According to Officer R.S. Sawyer, a gold necklace, a gold bracelet and a set of gold earrings, with a combined value of $420, were taken from F6 Sheraton Village in a break-in reported at 4:53 p.m.

Two Arrested, Charged

Greenville police said two people were arrested on theft charges Thursday.

Detective J.E. Harris said Glenn Pearson, 21, of 1503 Spruce St. was arrested on common-law robbery charges about 9:30 a.m. in connection with the theft of $4,400 from a man at the intersection of 14th Street and Douglas Avenue on Oct. 16.

Officer A.J. Dennison said Angela Shimeme Green, 26, of 708 W. 14th St., was charged with shoplifting in connection with the theft of a greeting card from Hollowell's Drug Store at the intersection of Sixth Street and Memorial Drive about 11:38 a.m.

Dennison said Ms. Green was also charged with obstructing and delaying an officer in connection with the incident.

The meeting will last until about 3:30 p.m.

Diabetes Month Named

Mayor Edward E. Carter has declared November as "National Diabetes Month" in Greenville.

Carter urged support of the 1988 campaign of the American Diabetes Association, Pitt County chapter, North Carolina Affiliate, through contributions and volunteer services. The organization supports research and education about diabetes and community service programs for people with diabetes.

Youth Week To Begin

The Optimist Club of Greenville, in conjunction with Optimist International, will have "Youth Appreciation Week" Sunday through Nov. 12.

The club has promoted youth week activities since 1957, president Carl Knott said. This year, the club has designated daily themes for the week.

Sunday is Youth in Religion Day; Monday - Youth in Community Service Day; Tuesday - Youth in Business Day; Wednesday - Youth in Government Day; Thursday - Youth in Education Day; Friday - Youth in Recreation Day, and Saturday - Youth in Family Day.

Greenville Mayor Ed Carter has proclaimed the week as Youth Appreciation Week, saying that "by this action, let it be known that we have faith in the ability of today's youth as they assume responsible roles in the future of mankind."

As part of Wednesday's activities, members of the student government at J.H. Rose High School will meet with Greenville governing officials and will have a program on city government.

Club Meets Monday

Cosmetologist Club Chapter 24 will meet at the home of Helen Bridges, 444 Grimes St., Winterville, Monday at 2 p.m.

Smith At Workshop

Greenville attorney John Newton Smith III recently attended a four-day trial workshop in Raleigh. Smith was one of 40 lawyers participating in the trial advocacy clinic, which was sponsored by the North Carolina Academy of Trial Lawyers.

A panel of judges and attorneys shared their knowledge on jury selection, opening and closing statements, direct and cross examination and professional responsibility. The workshop also provided attorneys with a chance to videotape themselves and receive a critique from faculty and peers.

Dancers Perform

The Atlantic Dance Theater of New Bern performed last week at Sadie Saulter School.

The dance company performed two presentations for the students and provided a mini-lecture on "Dance As Communication."

Greene Deputy Indicted

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A former Greene County deputy has been indicted on 34 charges of illegally obtaining about $1,500 for drug investigations and lying under oath in cases that caused 13 people to be falsely arrested on drug charges.

Harvey Edward Jones Jr., 34, who resigned last year after four years as a deputy, was indicted by a Greene County grand jury Monday on 16 counts of perjury, 17 counts of obtaining property by false pretense and one count of embezzlement. He was released from custody earlier this week under $10,000 bond.

District Attorney Donald Jacobs of Goldsboro, chief prosecutor for Greene County, said he was attempting to determine if anyone had been sent to prison on the basis of Jones' testimony. In one case, he said, a woman was placed on probation as a result of charges brought by Jones. She has been cleared of the charge and freed from the probation, he said.

James Coman, a deputy state attorney general who will prosecute the case, said Thursday the investigation began last November after a person who had been accused by Jones of an illegal drug transaction demonstrated that he had an "air-tight alibi" which caused Jacobs to question the deputy's action. The charges cover a period between October 1986 and November 1987.

Coman said most of the cases resulting from Jones' testimony were dismissed before the individual was prosecuted. But the disposition for the people involved in the perjury cases was not available. He also said Jones had repaid money to the county.

The charges against Jones carry a total maximum penalty of 340 years in prison.

Classical ballet, modern dance, jazz and tape dance forms were demonstrated.

Cartography Discussed

Pia Leahy recently discussed cartography with Linda Stapleton's second graders at Eastern School, concluding a social studies unit on maps. Deborah Dutton, a Burroughs Wellcome chemist, also visited, and discussed pharmaceutical products.

Dr. Duane Kratzer, a Greenville balloonist, shared slides illustrating hot-air balloons with Ms. Stapleton's class and Mary Chrismon's third graders. His visit went with a science unit on weather.

Washington, D.C., with his or her parents and a RIF coordinator to attend the Reading is Fun Week April 23-29. A $250 cash prize, to be used for purchasing children's books, will be awarded to the RIF program that submits the winning entry. Eight runners up and their local RIF programs also will receive prizes.

"Follow the Yellow Brick Road to RIF" is the theme for the school's first RIF distribution week this school year, Nov. 14-18.

RIF day is Nov. 18, when a "Wizard of Oz" program and a book distribution is planned.

Student Chosen

Allyson Leigh Norris, daughter of Bill and Andrea Norris, has been nominated to represent Ayden-Grifton High School at the state's 1989 Hugh O'Brian Youth Foundation Leadership Seminar at Meredith College.

The seminars are conducted annually in the United States, Canada and Mexico to give high school sophomores an opportunity to meet with business, education and government leaders.

Seven Ayden-Grifton sophomores applied for the nomination by answering questions concerning leadership experience and qualities.

Group Gets Certificate

The Ayden-Grifton High School Health Occupations Students of America recently received the HOSA 100 certificate from its national organization, topping off its September membership drive.

During October the students completed several community service projects, including providing food and clothing a fire victim, making trick or treat bags for the Senior Citizens center and conducting classes in freshman health on blood pressure and temperature monitoring procedures.

Social events included a party honoring the school's volleyball team and a birthday party for the principal.

The students also conducted a training workshop, using training manuals they created and attended a Career Day promoted by Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Beth Stamper was elected the HOSA regional historian by the HOSA delegates from the seven schools in Region I. She will be responsible for collecting news items and making a scrapbook that records the progress of HOSA in Region I.

Clarissa Edwards, Tracey Blount, Monty Brown and Nicey Harris were the HOSA students of the month of October. The students are selected by classmates based on their individual contribution to HOSA and its goals during the preceding month.

Specialists Visit Conley

Bob Emory and Marcus Jeanette, radiation specialists from the East Carolina University School of Medicine, presented a program on nature, sources and detection of radiation to biology students at D.H. Conley High School. Demonstrations on radiation detection also were given.

Members of the Conley Future Business Leaders of America recently attended the District I Fall Leadership Conference in Elizabeth City. After the general session, members attended several workshops on leadership development.

Leigh Cowan, Conley FBLA president and state secretary, welcomed students in the district to the conference.

Which of These Children Will Fall Victim to Drugs?

They're nice kids from a family like yours, but one in six will soon try cocaine, crack or pot.

Let's force the politicians in Raleigh to stop playing games with our children's future.

Bill Dansey is committed to a seven-point program to remove drugs from our streets.

- Increase the number of SBI agents fighting drugs to at least 100.
- Double the money available for undercover and sting operations by state and local agents.
- Impose mandatory life sentences for drug trafficking.
- Restore funding to build a new state crime lab.
- Abolish parole and gain-time credits for convicted drug traffickers.
- Make drug trafficking one of the aggravating factors a jury should consider in recommending the death penalty for first-degree murder.
- Pursue and prosecute habitual drug users as felons.

It's time for a change in Raleigh. The children are counting on us. Elect Bill Dansey to the North Carolina Senate.

Physician On Probation

A Greenville physician has been placed on probation by the North Carolina Board of Medical Examiners because of his plea in Pitt County Superior Court last January of no-contest to charges of taking indecent liberties with a minor.

The court ordered Dr. Lee R. Trent III, a family physician, to receive psychiatric treatment as part of a suspended sentence that resulted from his no-contest plea.

Terms of the board of medical examiner's probation require Trent to take a continuing education course to update his medical knowledge and to "remain of high moral character."

Trent has been practicing medicine "on a limited basis with the support of physicians in the Greenville, N.C., area," the board said.

School Kids Ambush Troopers

KEYSTONE HEIGHTS, Fla. (AP) - Hundreds of Army paratroopers from Fort Bragg, N.C., planned a surprise assault on the airport here as a training exercise, but were ambushed by hordes of children from a nearby elementary school.

Some 320 paratroopers from the 82nd Airborne Division flew in aboard C-141 transport planes and jumped onto the airfield Thursday during four separate passovers at 10-minute intervals.

The purpose of the exercise was to make a forced entry and secure an airfield and its runways by overtaking the enemy.

But as the troopers landed, children from the Keystone Heights Community Christian Church School ran onto the airfield to talk with the paratroopers and get autographs.

Chad Sanders, 11, was one of about 20 students who chased down the men, dressed in fatigues and laden with combat gear.

"The best part was getting all the autographs and seeing how nice everybody is," he said. "They would give their lives for our country."

Mike Merritt, a teacher at the private school, said the exercise was a good learning activity for the youngsters and would be used in class discussions about the military.

After the autograph session, the paratroopers began an eight-mile march to the camp.

Virus Slows Computer Systems

enter the electronic mail system of ARPANET, a computer network established by the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, the research arm of the U.S. Defense Department, McAfee said.

ARPANET links nearly every university in the United States, allowing researchers to "communicate data and text very easily," said Bob Finn, a spokesman for the California Institute of Technology.

The virus also infected a network called Science Internet that serves many scientists and research labs, including NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., said JPL spokesman Jim Wilson.

Also attacked were computers at Harvard University, Boston University, Purdue University, the University of Wisconsin in Madison, Georgia Tech, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and other major research centers.

The Times reported today that the anonymous caller to the paper said his associate was responsible for the attack and had meant it to be harmless. The caller said the hacker was a graduate student who made a programming error in designing the virus, causing the program to replicate much faster than expected.

The caller said the student realized his error shortly after letting the program loose and now was terrified of the consequences, the Times said.

The Defense Communications Agency set up an emergency center to deal with the virus, the newspaper said. But no known criminal investigations were under way.

In September, a former Fort Worth, Texas, programmer was convicted of planting a virus in his employer's computer system in the first such conviction in the nation. Two days after the employee was fired, the virus activated, erasing 168,000 company records.

Charley Kline, senior research programmer at the University of Illinois, said Thursday's virus traveled between computer systems through a process in which computer operators usually send electronic mail to each other.

He said once the messages were received, their coding told the computer to make copies of the virus. The copies then sought out other connected computers, he said.

"This is the first time that I know of that it has happened on this scale to larger systems," said Kline.

statistics, Janet L. Norwood. Nonetheless, she told the congressional Joint Economic Committee that there are 422,000 more factory jobs now than had been the case a year ago.

Despite October's strong growth, the department said, employment in just nine of the 20 manufacturing industries was above July's levels. Other industries showing significant gains included lumber and wood products, steel and aluminum, machinery, motor vehicles, and rubber and plastics.

The 231,000 new jobs on the services side of the economy were paced by gains of 50,000 in retail trade, 47,000 in health services and 21,000 in wholesale trade.

Grocery stores, restaurants and bars all posted healthy gains. Department store employment, however, edged downward for the fourth straight month.

Despite the large manufacturing gains and a drop in new orders last month, factory workers continued to average four hours a week in overtime.

Average hourly earnings rose five cents last month to $9.49, an increase of 3.8 percent over the last 12 months.

The U.S. spokesman added: "We expect them to ... and hope that is what their intentions are."

A senior administration official, meanwhile, said the Soviets had discussed resuming the withdrawal on Nov. 15.

"To say they are suspending now raises a question about what they mean," the official said. "Are they going to resume on Nov. 15, or later?"

He said the United States continues to urge the Soviets "to follow the timetable they have set for themselves, and to meet their obligations to pull out by the 15th of February."

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Thanks, Coach

Baker's Guidance Bettered ECU

It is rare, indeed, when a football coach whose team has won only one of nine games has the good wishes of virtually all of the fans as he resigns. That is the case with East Carolina University's outgoing football coach Art Baker.

Baker announced his resignation, to be effective at the end of his contract this year, at a recent press conference. It was also announced by Athletic Director Dave Hart that Baker has been offered a new position, director of the Personal Development Program.

Virtually no one was bitter at Baker because he had done nothing to earn bitterness. In four years here he has faced brutal schedules. This year was the most brutal of all. Even those who made the schedule could not have imagined what the strength of the opponents would be in the year 1989.

Even as Baker announced his resignation The Associated Press was listing Miami, West Virginia and Florida State as third, fourth and fifth in its weekly top 20 college football teams. All had been East Carolina opponents. Listed 15th and 16th were South Carolina and Syracuse respectively, two more ECU opponents. Two other teams that were ECU opponents, Southern Mississippi and Southwest Louisiana, were having outstanding years. All that adds up to a tough schedule and softens the impact of the 1-8 season ECU has had so far.

What is more important than wins and losses is how far Baker has brought the ECU program in four years. Foremost is his own reputation for character and integrity which has put a new face on football at East Carolina University. All his recruits this year met academic requirements and Baker went where ever necessary to sign that caliber athlete. And, if winning were everything, it should be noted how far Baker has brought the football program in the playing field. Despite the losses his teams played some of the best in the nation on statistically even terms.

None of that eases the disappointment of a string of losses, but Coach Baker's contribution to ECU football is indeed important. ECU is a far better place, athletically and academically, for having Art Baker's guidance. While only he can make decisions concerning his future, we applaud the move to offer him a new position on staff. He can make further great contributions to the university.

Public Forum

To the editor:

On Nov. 8 I will cast my first vote for President of the United States. Being 20, I remember very well the double-digit inflation, interest rates and unemployment of the Carter years. I remember how we hurt our farmers with the Soviet grain embargo and how we grimaced as a nation while our Carter-weakened military forces failed to rescue our hostages in Iran. At 13, I was watching the world collapse around me.

In 1980, our nation needed a new direction. Young people needed assurance a future would exist for them to enjoy. It was time for Ronald Reagan to become President. For the first time in my short life, America was on the mend. The successes of the Reagan presidency have far outnumbered the failures. Inflation, interest rates and unemployment are now half what they were when Carter was President. America is shining again and young people can once again envision a future for themselves where dreams become reality.

In 1988, the election of Michael Dukakis can destroy our dreams. He picked Bentsen hoping to carry the South. Texans are not stupid. They know Bentsen can accomplish more for them as their senator than vice-president and that is why Bush is 12 points ahead in Texas. Until the Democrats nominate someone who is in touch with America, they will continue to lose the presidency.

If you desire a return to the failed policies of the past, I urge you to vote for Dukakis and Bentsen. If you desire the continuance of peace and prosperity, I urge people to vote for my choice, the choice for the future: George Bush and Dan Quayle.

To the editor:

One of my favorite people in the whole world is a young man named Franklin. He would rather be called Frank.

He has his father's here-and-now wisdom and his mother's what-if boldness. He is 11 years old.

Yesterday Franklin asked me what a liberal is. He has been hearing about it in school.

I remembered enough of Latin and living to tell him it is someone who remains free enough to question, explore, examine first, conclude later. It has to do with freedom and with the complexity of things.

When Franklin is questioning, exploring, examining, you can see it in his eyes. I saw that he knew. In his eyes, I saw a young person's curiosity, the hope of us all.

Just Another Spectator Sport

WASHINGTON — I don't know who first proposed it, but I expect Ed Brown might be attracted to the notion of adding a choice to the presidential ballot that says: Neither of the Above.

It wouldn't change the outcome of the election, but it would give frustrated voters a way of telling the candidates to climb down out of their tank turrets and flag factories and deal with the issues that matter on a day-to-day basis.

Brown is doubly frustrated: as a voter who must grit his teeth and choose next Tuesday, and as director of the Voter Education Project whose job is to encourage voter participation in an election characterized more by platitudes than by concrete proposals.

"We're trying to educate the people of the Southeastern United States to the fact that the political process impacts on their lives, but the candidates act as though the only thing Southerners care about is the Pledge of Allegiance and the right to keep their guns," he said in an interview from his Atlanta office.

"Southerners know that this part of the country has some problems that it bears disproportionately to other regions. Infant mortality is the highest in the nation. We have less per capita to spend on education. We have a devastated rural sector, with the family farmer scarcely able to earn a living. Our people are migrating from rural wastelands to urban wastelands. And none of it gets talked about in the campaign."

Brown believes that both candidates are locked into an outdated view of the South as a place where race matters above all else. In fact, he says, more and more people of both races have come to see the necessity of working together. That is why he helped to create an interracial "Committee of 100 Voters from the South" to press the candidates "to visit this region and address the critical issues facing our families, our fortunes and our future."

Sad to say, it won't do any good. This is an issueless campaign dominated by slogans and mud-slinging. And since the candidate whose campaign is slinging the most mud — Vice President George Bush — continues to lead in virtually all polls, it is likely to remain issueless.

Brown understands that. Still he insists, "The function of leadership is not just to tell people what they want to hear but also what they need to know. If the democratic process has degenerated to the point where we can no longer expect that sort of leadership, to the point where the campaign is dominated by 'spin doctors,' we have lost the process. The whole idea of an informed citizenry has been debased beyond recognition."

Which is precisely what has happened. It is impossible to glean from this travesty of a campaign any idea of what the candidates might do to save the family farm, restore the vitality of the Rust Belt, combat the scourge of drug-related crime, redress the nation's trade imbalance or balance the federal budget. The candidates contrive not to solve problems but to avoid giving offense to important electoral blocs. One calls vaguely for a "kinder, gentler nation"; the other says he is "on your side." One swears (unconvincingly) not to raise taxes; the other urges a vote for "competence."

The campaign is not about competing visions of the nation's future but about how to carry California; not about how to govern but about how to win. And no matter how frustrated Ed Brown and the rest of us may be, one of them will win next Tuesday.

Nor is staying home an attractive alternative. Our nonvotes will be chalked up to "voter apathy," and that will be the end of it.

Wouldn't it be nice if, instead of having to choose between two unsatisfactory candidates running campaigns that insult our intelligence, we could mark our ballots "Neither of the Above" and have that option tabulated?

It wouldn't do any good this time around, but a few million "Neither" votes might convey to future candidates our desire for a campaign based not on platitudes but on solid proposals — if that really is what we want.

As it is, the election has become just another spectator sport: mildly interesting, but with little relevance to our families, our fortunes or our future.

Some Democratic Help For The GOP

Paul O'Connor

LEXINGTON — On the second day of his statewide whistlestop train tour, Gov. Jim Martin made what might have been a serious gaffe.

In this Davidson County town, among a cheering partisan crowd, with bands playing and bunting adorning the train, Martin started talking about a substantive issue.

Talk of the issues was exactly what Martin did not want as he brought his re-election campaign down the homestretch for what the polls predict to be a successful conclusion on Election Day. The whistlestop train ride was full of visual images, all designed for TV coverage and for creating a pep rally spirit for his supporters. The only thing that appeared to concern the campaign was the apparent fattening of the chief visual, the governor himself, who has gotten a bit chunky in the past few months.

While Tim Pittman, Martin's press aide, was warning reporters that victory over Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan was far from a certainty, the Martin campaign was acting like it knew it had things won, only if it didn't foul up some way. And the quickest way to foul up would be to talk substance. The governor conceded as much in many interviews.

Even the substance Martin talked about on the train trip was low weight, however. He talked about restoring passenger rail service to the Piedmont and of re-opening rail corridors in the west — appropriate topics for a train ride.

But before Martin is too heavily criticized for fluffing up the final weeks of the campaign with lightweight appearances, give the candidate credit for getting himself ahead. He did so with masterful manipulation of the issues, and with a lot of help from his Democratic opponents.

Martin entered this race with the incumbent's advantage. He could also count on a wealth of goodwill from his record of proposing tax cuts.

For four years, the Democratic leaders of the General Assembly thumbed their noses at Martin, showing him both personal and political disrespect. All the time, Martin used that Democratic resistance to his best advantage. Feuding between House and Senate Democrats provided additional fodder for the Republican efforts to undermine Democratic candidate Jordan. Democrats like House Speaker Liston Ramsey continually voiced support for Jordan but repeatedly embarrassed him in the 1988 session of the assembly.

It's not that Martin didn't warn the Democrats. For the past four years, he continuously warned them that North Carolinians didn't appreciate such treatment of their governor. Whether or not North Carolinians actually felt that way, Martin made sure he planted the ideas in their minds.

Once Martin began charging that the Democrats weren't being cooperative, he opened himself to the Democrats' best counter-charge: that Martin is an ineffective governor. But Martin has managed to swing that issue his way, also. He takes credit for almost everything the legislature has done. He reasons that he raised the issues, he slugged them out with the legislature, and that the legislature acted only after he had forced them to do so.

Jim Martin and the Republicans spent the past four years getting re-elected, while the Democrats appeared to have come together only last summer. Given the extra time he spent in the beginning, it's no wonder that Martin began cruising to the finish line a bit early.

Pay Day

Raise Not Much, But Important

A 4 percent increase in Social Security benefits won't mean lots of additional money to recipients, but for many it will help.

There are now 38.4 million social Security recipients in the nation. In January their benefits will increase by 4 percent in accordance with a cost of living formula. The average retired worker's benefit is $516 per month and this will increase by $21 per month.

The raise will have varying effect for recipients. Those who have other pension funds or income from investments will hardly notice. There are millions of Social Security recipients, however, who live entirely on what they receive. While, it's not enough and never was designed to be enough, it is a fact of life for them. Twenty-one dollars a month will buy a lot of flour and meal to help keep them going.

The Social Security program was created to provide some income for workers in their old age. Participants from the beginning were encouraged to provide other income to supplement it. That is not always possible for everyone and they simply live on what they receive from Social Security. For them the indexing which keeps their checks abreast of inflation is a godsend. Without it their already meager income would be steadily eroding in the face of inflation.

Rand Says He'll Sue Gardner

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — State Sen. Tony Rand said today he will file a libel suit against his opponent for lieutenant governor, Jim Gardner, for campaign ads he said were "outside the bounds of common decency."
 "We're going to file a libel action against Mr. Gardner Monday," Rand said in a telephone interview. He said the suit stems from an ad that accuses Rand, an attorney, of obstructing justice in a drug-related case.
 Paul Richardson, Gardner's campaign manager, said the threatened suit was likely a political ploy.
 "We must be scaring him to death," Richardson said. "I think he's scared and I think he's sticking his neck out here to get a little free publicity before everybody shuts down for the weekend."

 Rand said he knew of no other libel suit ever being filed in a North Carolina political campaign.
 "There's never been anything that's been this low," Rand said. "It's a lie. It simply isn't true and they know it isn't true and it's malicious and it's done with intent to damage."
 Rand said he had not discussed the matter with Gardner's campaign nor had he asked that the ads be halted.
 "I have no interest in talking to them," he said. "Asking somebody to discontinue is like asking somebody after they shoot you to take back the bullet."

Bakker Alerted Of Jury Probe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — Federal prosecutors looking into the finances of PTL have notified Jim Bakker and several of his former associates they are targets of a grand jury investigation, an indication that indictments may be imminent, a Charlotte newspaper says.
 "A target of the grand jury investigation is a person as to whom the prosecutor or the grand jury has substantial evidence linking him to the commission of a crime and who, in the judgement of the prosecutor, is a putative defendant," prosecutor Charles Alexander wrote in a letter to Bakker, The Charlotte Observer reported in today's editions.

The newspaper said Bakker, the founder of PTL, PTL chief builder Roe Messner; and Richard Dortch, Bakker's former top deputy, received the letter. All three have been invited to testify to the 23-member grand jury the week of Nov. 28.
 Washington lawyer Ben Cotten, who represents David Taggart, Bakker's former personal aide, and his brother, James Taggart, PTL's former interior decorator, would not say whether his clients received target letters.
 But Cotten said: "There is no doubt that both David and James are identified as targets of the grand jury."
 Alexander's two-page letter to Bakker, dated Oct. 24, cites Justice Department guidelines in inviting Bakker to testify, the newspaper said.

 "Should you wish to take advantage of this opportunity," Alexander wrote, "you will be expected to waive your privilege against self-incrimination and consent to a full examination under oath."
 "Any and all testimony which you provide can be used against you by the grand jury and in subsequent legal proceedings. ... Further, if you knowingly make a false statement to the grand jury, you may be prosecuted for perjury. This letter is not a subpoena, and you are not compelled to appear," the newspaper quoted the letter as saying.

I would decentralize and give opportunity for parallelism as opposed to the present single-track mode. I would seek State financing of schools by a new kind of Literacy Fund which was used earlier.	An efficient versatile transportation system is vital to the cultural and economic health of any people. Our transportation includes roads, rails, planes, pipes, cables and some waterways. I would seek a unified overview of the system. Since transportation is vital infrastructure to our society, not all of the expense of highways should be derived from tax.	Disposal of waste is coming to be a governmental problem much as education and transportation are. None of these can be left solely to local government. Recycling is vital. One aspect of waste disposal is the reduction of waste substances as yet untouched by government. Hazardous waste disposal must be centralized.	Alcohol is still our major drug. Our Society has little concern for it as witness its advertising and its use in typical gatherings. Use of other drugs by the individual begins and develops in the same manner as use of alcohol. The 1989 Session of the General Assembly will be considering the recommendations of the Commission which are expected to include bond issues, toll roads, recycling of asphalt and other materials, along with other sources of revenue. The 1987 General Assembly passed legislation that should help the East get its fair share of highway revenues.	We must examine the producers of hazardous waste and determine if the production of the waste can be stopped or reduced. By stopping or reducing the amount of hazardous waste, we can more effectively deal with what is left. Specific recommendations from producers, scientists and authorities in the field, as well as from the general public, need to be solicited in order to make decisions for responsible and safe disposal of hazardous waste.	I feel that the 1989 General Assembly will continue to seek strong laws to deal with the drug problem and those who deal in drugs. We must give law enforcement the tools they need to fight the problem and then insure that their dedication and hard work are upheld by severe and harsh penalties to those found guilty and that the offenders serve maximum sentences imposed by the Court.

Choice On Super Collider May Come Next Week

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM — The federal government could announce a preferred site for the superconducting super collider by as early as the end of next week, Gov. Jim Martin's science adviser says.

State and federal officials say North Carolina's bid for the proposed $5.3 billion project won't be jeopardized by Environmental Protection Agency objections, but others said the EPA report would put the state out of the running.

Earl Mac Cormac, Martin's science adviser, said Thursday that the EPA's environmental objections to the proposed site in Durham, Granville and Person counties were "mild," compared with the other possible sites.

"We have a site we can build on without undo damage to the environment," he said.

The director of North Carolina's bid for the super collider agreed.

"I don't think it in any way hurts North Carolina's prospects," Bill Dunn said. "Any time you undertake a large effort, it's possible to find criticisms."

Dunn said anyone reading the impact statement "would have to conclude North Carolina is one of the sites that would be least affected."

The EPA letter lists nine concerns about North Carolina's site, including the loss of 258 acres of wetlands, the effect of runoff on drinking water supplies, the effects of urban growth on air and water quality, pollution due to new roads and inadequate information about mapping and disposal of construction debris.

The EPA letter said the 4,000-page draft of the environmental impact statement is "environmentally objectionable." It recommends that the Energy Department consider the ability and cost to mitigate impacts when choosing a preferred super collider site later this month.

Other states being considered for the project also were targeted by the EPA, which listed five concerns for Illinois and Texas, four concerns for Michigan, Tennessee and Colorado and two concerns for Arizona.

EPA officials said the agency's letter was intended to help minimize problems, not to scuttle the project.

But an environmental group called Save The Water called EPA's concerns "the last nail in the coffin" and urged Gov. Jim Martin to withdraw the site from consideration.

"The North Carolina site is now dead, or should be," said Jim Clark, president of Save The Water, at a news conference Wednesday.

The collider would be a 53-mile oval tunnel in which atomic particles are smashed together to study the principles of matter. It would bring an estimated 3,000 new jobs to the host state and an estimated $270 million a year to the local economy.

Meanwhile, eight members of the Congressional Black Caucus have urged the energy department to locate the Superconducting Super Collider in the Southeast to benefit minority education and employment, The News and Observer of Raleigh reported.

In addition to North Carolina, Tennessee also is among the seven finalists for the project.

"In our view the SSC would have its maximum favorable impact on minorities in science education and high technology jobs if it were sited in a Southeastern state, closest to the overwhelming minority of traditionally black colleges and universities and their graduates," Rep. John Lewis, D-Ga., wrote in an Oct. 19 letter to Energy Secretary John Herrington.

Other signers of Mr. Lewis's letter include Democratic Congressmen Ronald Dellums and Mervyn Dymally of California, Mike Espy of Mississippi, Walter Fauntroy of the District of Columbia, Harold Ford of Tennessee, Kweisi Mfume of Maryland and Edolphus Towns of New York.

Hatcher Uncle Says State Should Prosecute Nephew

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LUMBERTON, N.C. — Indian activist Eddie Hatcher's uncle says his nephew should face state charges in the Feb. 1 takeover of a Robeson County newspaper, but Hatcher's mother says her brother is only trying to score political points.

"As an American Indian, I really cannot support the actions taken here last February," Jim Hatcher of Winston-Salem said Thursday. "I do not believe taking hostages is the solution to any problem."

Thelma Clark, Eddie Hatcher's mother, said her brother was an unsuccessful candidate this year for county commission in Forsyth County.

"My brother is interested in politics and needs any coattail he can ride as he is not able to make it on his own and, apparently, neither are you," she said in a letter to Sam Wilson, the Republican candidate for attorney general. Jim Hatcher held a news conference with Wilson on Thursday.

The news conference became a shouting match between Hatcher supporters and opponents. Wilson, who is challenging Democratic incumbent Lacy Thornburg, has criticized Thornburg for not pursuing state charges against Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs, who were acquitted of several federal charges last month.

"At this time, the primary injustice is the lack of prosecution of Eddie Hatcher and Tim Jacobs," Wilson said. "I don't want North Carolina to become known as a state that condones terrorists."

Hatcher said he decided to support Wilson after he saw news reports in which Wilson called for prosecution of Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs.

But a spokesman for Attorney General Lacy Thornburg said SBI agents already have met with the Robeson County prosecutor to review the hostage-taking case.

"Mr. Wilson obviously needs a civics lesson," said Thornburg spokesman John Simmons. "Any first-year law student would know that the North Carolina Constitution and state law specifically require that the district attorney and only the district attorney can bring charges."

"Wilson has demonstrated once again with his irresponsible charges that he has very little knowledge or understanding of the law," Simmons said.

"On the day Hatcher and Jacobs were found innocent in federal court, our SBI agents met at the direction of the attorney general with the DA, Joe Freeman Britt, to go over evidence and investigative reports on the hostage matter. Mr. Britt has the facts before him and he will determine whether or not to bring charges," Simmons said.

"If he decides to prosecute, and needs the assistance of the attorney general, the attorney general will do everything within his power to help. And that's the way the system works. You can't go unless you're asked."

'Mocktail'

DURHAM (AP) — Students at the Triangle's four major colleges have challenged one another to a new kind of drinking contest — non-alcoholic — this holiday season.

The schools — North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Duke, N.C. Central and N.C. State — hope to out-do one another in concocting a superior "mocktail" without the use of liquor or other spirits.

Their entries are to be named for a campus celebrity — such as a coach or star athlete — and judged by a panel of bartenders on what is perceived to be neutral territory, the Sheraton Imperial Hotel & Towers in Research Triangle Park. The winning school will receive $1,000 to be used for drug awareness programs for its students.

Touring Democrats Reject Pollsters' Forecasts

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Regardless of what polls have predicted, the only numbers game that counts will take place on Tuesday, when voters head to the polls, a group of Southern Democrats says.

"Let nobody tell you this is over yet," Sen. Wyche Fowler, D-Georgia, told about 100 supporters at Raleigh-Durham International Airport.

"Elections are held for more than just confirming polls," added Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Georgia.

Fowler, Nunn and other Southern Democrats barnstormed through the South Thursday, saying that polls that show Republican presidential candidate George Bush solidly ahead of Democrat Michael Dukakis in the South don't necessarily reflect the outcome of next election.

"In our country, man looked on the outside, but God looketh on the heart," said Fowler, who added that he had been behind by as many as 26 points before winning his Senate campaign in 1986.

In the lieutenant governor's race, the N.C. Bar Association denounced political commercials criticizing Democrat Tony Rand for representing accused drug dealers, calling the ads "an inappropriate attack on our entire system of justice."

"Recent campaign ads suggest that one of the candidates for statewide office is unfit to serve because he has been the attorney for persons accused of violations of law," the association said in a statement.

"... We consider such suggestions to be in inappropriate attack on our entire system of justice and the rights it preserves," said the association, which represents 8,200 attorneys in the state.

In the Democrats' fly-around, Fowler and Nunn were joined by Sens. Terry Sanford of North Carolina, Al Gore of Tennessee, David Pryor of Arkansas; Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas, former Sen. Wendell Ford and former Gov. Martha Lane Collins of Kentucky, former N.C. Gov. Jim Hunt and Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young.

The group had already stopped in Atlanta and Columbia, S.C., before reaching Raleigh. They flew on to Louisville, Ky., Nashville, and Little Rock, Ark.

"This state will cast more votes than any other state we're going to visit today," said Hunt, who told the crowd the last week of the campaign is when voters begin to think seriously about the election.

"What has Reagan and Bush done for textiles?" Hunt asked. "These senators passed two bills to protect our textile jobs and what did Ronald Reagan do with George Bush's help? He vetoed them."

Nunn said the campaign had been filled with "distortions and twists," but the president and vice president elected next Tuesday will face real problems with the budget deficit, the trade deficit and the "social deficit."

"We've got some time bombs out there," he said. "The fuses have been lit and this administration has done nothing to put them out."

He said the "time bombs" included fraud in defense spending, the foreign debt situation and the financial problems of savings and loan associations around the country.

In the race for governor, Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan campaigned in eastern North Carolina, bearing what has become a familiar message: Gov. Jim Martin's claim to a good education record is bogus.

"I'm angry because we have a governor who is trying to be something he is not and trying to fool the people," Jordan said at Pitt County Community College in Greenville.

In Raleigh, an increasingly confident Gov. Jim Martin told cheering supporters his re-election would help unite North Carolina and said Jordan was sowing regional discord and trying to "intimidate" voters.

"I'm tired of candidates going around playing one group against another, playing off one region ...

one city against another," Martin said at a Wake County Republican rally.

Martin apparently was referring to remarks Jordan made during a Charlotte appearance Tuesday. The Democratic challenger said next week's election holds high stakes for the state's largest city and Mecklenburg County.

Jordan shares laugh at Fayetteville stopover

As A Front Runner, Martin Killing Clock

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gov. Jim Martin has inserted the line into virtually every stump speech lately, always drawing hearty laughter.

"You want to see me do my backflips?" he says, a reference to Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan's television commercial in which four chimpanzees lampoon the Martin administration's budget writing process. One of the trained apes turns flips on a table cluttered with papers, an adding machine and other paraphernalia.

"I used to say that Bob Jordan's proposal to abolish the North Carolina Department of Commerce was the dumbest idea I'd ever seen until I saw his campaign ads," Martin says. Another burst of mirth from the crowd.

"I'm not going attack his ads. They're working — for me," the governor wisecracks. More laughter.

The setting is Thursday night's Wake County GOP rally at the State Fairgrounds, but it could have been any of the campaign events Martin has attended in recent days.

With polls showing Martin leading Jordan by a comfortable but not insurmountable margin, the Republican incumbent has a lot to smile about. While urging audiences not to succumb to complacency, he's been unable to conceal his own optimism.

And with the election less than a week away, he has adopted a strategy that a basketball fan might liken to the "four-corner offense," in which the team that's ahead makes no real effort to score but holds the ball until time expires.

Substantive issues have virtually disappeared from Martin's stump speeches, and he offers no new initiatives. He speaks of "better schools, better roads, better jobs and a cleaner environment" but seldom says how he'd attain these goals in a second term.

Instead, Martin spouts one-liners in such abundance that he rivals Jim Valvano, the fast-talking N.C. State University basketball coach who told a few jokes at Thursday's rally before the governor arrived.

Martin also emphasizes the impor-

Jordan Toughens His Late Message

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

As Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan's campaign van rushed northeast from Winston-Salem into rural Rockingham County, it was as though Mother Nature had decked herself in finery to impress the guest.

The vehicle cruised along U.S. 158 past a dazzling array of fall foliage — red, gold, orange, yellow. Cows grazed serenely in green pastures. Log cabins and barns dotted the rolling landscape and roadside signs advertised turkey shoots and harvest festivals.

The pastoral scene was almost enough to make one forget the political wars, yet it carried a disquieting message for Jordan. For as autumnal colors foreshadow the end of another year, they also signal the campaign's approaching conclusion.

With time running out to overcome what polls suggest is a significant lead for Republican Gov. Jim Martin, Democrat Jordan has sharpened his attacks and refined his message, giving it a distinctly populist ring. He's also refocusing on the constituencies that long have formed the Democrats' base of support.

"If he's changed in any way, it's in his willingness to go out and attack Jim Martin," said Jordan spokesman Phil Wells. "If you go back and look at his earlier speeches, he was much more timid about that."

Criticism of Martin has been blended into Jordan's standard stump speech from the outset. But starting in late September, the lieutenant governor became increasingly aggressive, launching a series of television ads questioning the administration's ethics and competence.

Guilford County's Health Officials Seek Source Of Hepatitis Outbreak

By Paul Nowell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Guilford County health officials say they still they do not know the source of a breakout of the Hepatitis A virus, which has infected at least 52 people who ate at three Greensboro restaurants.

In a related development, Winston-Salem-Forsyth County health officials confirmed a growing hepatitis A problem Thursday that may be related to Guilford County's epidemic. The connection is under investigation, said Fred Overstreet, director of environmental health in Forsyth County.

"We have not been able to determine that any of these people ate in Guilford County restaurants," Overstreet said. "Hepatitis has a lengthy incubation period. The people are finding it difficult to remember exactly what places they ate at when you go back that far. But the rise in cases coincides with the time of the incidents in Guilford."

There have been 21 reported cases in Forsyth County since late August, and four of the victims worked at four different Forsyth County restaurants, Overstreet said. The four no longer work at the restaurants, which Overstreet declined to name. The four restaurants are still open and are being monitored by the Health Department.

Overstreet said most of the cases involved intravenous drug users. Forsyth County usually has no more than six cases a year, he said.

"We have not had any cases reported that we can attribute to eating in a restaurant," Overstreet told The Greensboro News & Record.

Davidson County also has a significant number of cases — 34 since January. None is linked to restaurants.

A Guilford County Health Department clinic was swamped Thursday with people seeking free inoculations after officials said nine people infected with the Hepatitis A virus were linked to a Greensboro restaurant, bringing to 52 the number of people infected during a recent outbreak of the virus.

"We've had another clustering of cases, nine until this point, associated with Nathanael's Restaurant," said Brenda Motsinger, adult health director for the Guilford County Health Department.

Ms. Motsinger said an employee of the restaurant tested positive for the virus Tuesday night, and eight patrons also have become infected.

On Wednesday, the health department issued a statement asking anyone who ate at Nathanael's — formerly known as London's — Casey's — between Oct. 21 and Monday get gamma globulin inoculations to boost their immune systems against the Hepatitis A virus.

The agency estimated between 300 to 600 people — including some out-of-state residents who came to the area during the recent Southern Furniture Market in High Point — may have eaten at the restaurant during the 10-day period.

As of noon Thursday, more than 200 people had come to a special clinic set up by the health department to receive the free shots. Five nurses were on hand to administer the inoculations.

Ms. Motsinger said warnings had been sent by the state to health officials across the country so people who may have come to the Greensboro restaurant during the furniture market could be inoculated. The fall furniture trade show ran from Oct. 20 to Oct. 28.

Meanwhile, Ms. Motsinger said the source of the outbreak, which began in late September, and has been blamed for a total of 52 confirmed cases of Hepatitis A, including the death of Greensboro insurance agent Ronald Austin, 50.

"At this point, we haven't been able to detect the original source (of the virus)," she said.

Nathanael's voluntarily closed on Monday after lunch when the health department informed owner Roy Schmidt that his restaurant was part of the investigation into Austin's death.

Merit Costs

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina will have to spend $400 million more a year, about half what it ultimately will spend on the Basic Education Program, to expand a merit pay plan for teachers statewide, a state official says.

"I don't know that there is a lot of support out there for increasing taxes to come up with that," said Rep. David Diamont, D-Surry, a teacher and vice chairman of the House Education Committee.

A statewide career ladder — a plan being tested in 16 school systems to offer higher pay and special duties to superior teachers — would cost between $385 million and $400 million a year to operate, Robert Boyd, assistant state superintendent for personnel, told the state Board of Education on Thursday.

That amounts to the largest investment in education since the General Assembly five years ago approved the Basic Education Program, a school improvement plan that would cost about $800 million a year when fully funded in 1992-93. The state's annual public schools budget has expanded from $1.8 billion in 1984-85 to $2.9 billion this year.

just a few feet away won't totally remove them from the memorial," Pollard said. "That is the next best thing we can do in order to leave the trees where they are."

Drug Sentences

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Two consecutive 27-year sentences and a $75,000 money judgment were handed down as the felony drug trials of Thomas and Rosa Dawson came to a close here this week.

An eight-woman, four-man jury deliberated two hours before returning guilty verdicts against the Wilson County couple, convicting them both on charges of trafficking in cocaine, possession with intent to sell and deliver cocaine, possession of cocaine and maintaining a dwelling for the sale of cocaine.

The Dawsons were arrested at their residence July 9, 1987, after officers searched their residence and found 46.6 grams of cocaine in their bedroom. Also seized during the search was over $4,000 in cash, a variety of guns and an assortment of new merchandise that county law enforcement officers believe had been stolen and later traded for drugs.

Lejeune Trees

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — After several weeks of controversy over the relocation of trees planted in honor of servicemen killed in Beirut and Grenada, officials with the state Department of Transportation have offered an alternative plan.

State Board of Transportation member Tommy Pollard said in a Wednesday press conference that the 25 trees directly in front of the memorial would be moved from the median of Lejeune Boulevard to a nearby drainage area that borders the memorial.

He said it will cost $50,000 and will be financed by money in a local Department of Transportation small ordinance fund.

"We feel that by moving the trees

tance of not letting up, of getting every supporter to the polls. He speaks of "one united state" — the theme of his 1985 inaugural address. He even waxes philosophical, recalling his come-from-behind victory in 1984 and thanking his supporters for their efforts. He recounted for the Wake County audience Sen. Jesse Helms' story of his father picking up a box turtle and putting it on a fence post. The turtle didn't get there by itself, the elder Helms told his son. "And I didn't get here by myself," Martin said. "You put me here. You and people like you all across North Carolina introduced me to your communities and neighbors, spoke up for me, got those ... yard signs up for me. That's why I'm here tonight, because you were there when I needed you."

Martin's four-corners approach does not mean he has fallen into the same complacency trap he's urged others to avoid, says his chief of staff, Phil Kirk. "We just think we're in the lead and there's no need to be running any unnecessary risk."

Martin has spent months discussing his record and issues likely to arise over the next four years, Kirk said. "I don't think the voters have been shortchanged at all. At this stage of the game it's a little late for new ideas."

The approach Martin took to last Saturday's debate in Winston-Salem was part of the plan, Kirk said. The governor was less combative than usual and did not respond directly to some of Jordan's criticisms. "The strategy was to appear gubernatorial, to be calm and let Jordan attack and not strike back," Kirk said.

Martin's mountains-to-coast whistlestop tour fit the strategy perfectly — a series of pep rallies tailored for television news. His "official" functions have included ribbon-cuttings and similar photogenic activities.

For the remainder of the campaign, look for more of the same — an optimistic message reinforced by a final round of television and radio ads.

"He's bone-tired, but he'll be fine," Kirk said. "These crowds just fire him up. He's the best campaigner I've ever seen."

Jordan Quickens Pace

Last Saturday's debate in Winston-Salem saw the emergence of Jordan as populist battler — a development that roughly paralleled Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis' stepped-up aggressiveness. "Jim Martin believes the status quo is OK. I do not," Jordan said. "Jim Martin believes tax cuts for the rich are more important than education. I do not."

Describing Martin's 1985 tax-reduction initiative as welfare for the wealthy was a new twist for Jordan, a millionaire businessman who has long supported repeal of the intangibles and inventory taxes. The latter was abolished as part of a Democratic school financing bill in 1987.

Jordan boasts he has made business audiences unhappy by telling them further reductions in the intangibles tax are unlikely without significant growth in state revenues.

In recent days Jordan also has courted such traditionally Democratic constituent groups as blacks, blue-collar workers and teachers. He has promised to appoint one or more blacks to cabinet-level posts, has greeted workers at factory gates and railed against the Republican record on textile imports, and has lambasted Martin's performance on education issues.

But easily the most notable change in Jordan has been stylistic. Long regarded as awkward and wooden on the stump, he has loosened up considerably — using more colorful rhetoric and not hesitating to show emotion.

"I'm angry because we have a governor who is trying to be something he is not and trying to fool the people," Jordan said Friday at Pitt County Community College in Greenville.

Jordan's opening statement during the televised debate was so feisty that Martin, seemingly taken aback, described it as "very combative."

Later, in response to Martin's implication that Jordan had a "hidden agenda," Jordan forcefully replied, "Governor, I'm a businessman. I will not tell a group of people I'm going to do one thing and then do the other."

He is taking advantage of every opportunity for personal contact, stopping at shopping malls to shake hands between scheduled events.

State Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, says he's noticed a difference in Jordan.

"It's what Brutus called that long, lean, hungry look in Cassius' eyes," Blue said. "I think Jordan got that lean, hungry look and realized he was fighting for the heart and soul of this state. He's gotten a lot more animated ... seems to have more drive."

Some supporters say they wish the more aggressive Jordan had appeared earlier. But most refuse to say it's too late.

"If he just keeps this up ... who knows," Sen. Ted Kaplan, D-Forsyth, said.

Political Fight

RALEIGH (AP) — A North Carolina State University student has pleaded guilty to assaulting another student during a campus rally for Indiana Sen. Dan Quayle last month.

Anthony Kyle Ross, 23, of Raleigh, pleaded guilty to one charge of simple assault in Wake County District Court on Thursday. He punched another N.C. State student, Charles Tully Handley, 29, at the rally Oct. 7.

Judge Jerry Leonard gave Ross a prayer for judgment continued, which means that if he fulfills certain conditions, no conviction will be entered.

As one condition, Ross was ordered to take and complete a college course in constitutional law by June. He must also complete 120 hours of community service at a privately-financed homeless shelter in Raleigh.

Mrs. N.C. Objects To Pageant Attire

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEWTON, N.C. — Mrs. North Carolina desperately wanted to switch the high-cut pink and blue bikini for a conservative one-piece swimsuit.

But Connie Hedrick, 32, was stuck with it. For a week she kept it secret from her husband of 15 years.

"I don't wear that," Ms. Hedrick said Thursday, holding up the bikini she was told to wear in the Mrs. America Pageant. "I'm a wife and a momma."

Ms. Hedrick and at least two other contestants in Tuesday's televised pageant are upset. She called the contest an exploitation aimed at portraying her as a "sleaze."

The contestants also criticized a survey that included questions asking if their husbands are good kissers, where their favorite places are "for making romance," and "Can you be in love with two men at the same time?"

Ms. Hedrick filled it out, but didn't tell her husband until he joined her in Hawaii a few days before the pageant was taped Sunday, The Charlotte Observer reported.

The final insult came that night when pageant officials told Ms. Hedrick to model a low-cut silver-sequined cocktail dress, shortened 3 inches above her knees and pulled tight around the waist.

By then, Marvin Hedrick had arrived. He sat in the audience and watched her in the cocktail dress. The pageant was taped for broadcast nationwide, including earlier clips of Connie Hedrick in the pink and blue bikini.

"If I had known all this was going on, she wouldn't have done this to begin with," Marvin Hedrick said.

Connie Hedrick, mother of two young boys, agrees. "He doesn't want the world to project his wife as a sleaze person," she said.

Mrs. Alabama and Mrs. Wisconsin have also criticized the 12th annual pageant.

Hedrick said the pageant provided about 20 one-piece bathing suits and the rest of the contestants were ordered to model bikinis.

"It was exploitation, whether they want to admit it or not," Ms. Hedrick said.

But a pageant spokesman said Thursday that contestants had the choice of wearing a one-piece or bikini. He also defended the six-page survey, calling it "a very rounded market survey" that was not part of the judging.

An irate Marvin Hedrick believes his wife, but worries what other Christians may think.

"We're religious people. I just think about going to church and having people say we saw your wife in a bikini bathing suit," he said.

RJR Managers Step Up Bid

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — RJR Nabisco Inc. management, which last week surprised Wall Street with a proposal to take the company private, is at it again with an even higher offer for the nation's 19th largest industrial concern, besting by about $450 million a bid by a New York takeover specialist.

The management team led by Chief Executive F. Ross Johnson on Thursday announced an offer of $84 per share in cash and $8 per share in unspecified securities. The total deal is worth about $20.7 billion.

The $92 per share eclipses a $90-per-share, or $20.25 billion, tender offer by Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co.

"The pricing is not real surprising. It beats KKR's on all aspects," said Neal Kaplan, an analyst for Interstate Johnson Lane in Charlotte, N.C.

Either deal, if successful, would rank as the largest U.S. takeover in history.

On Wall Street, Nabisco stock rose 25 cents a share Thursday to close at $87 in composite New York Stock Exchange trading.

While there had been reports management and its financial partners were preparing a competing bid, many observers had questioned the ability of management to make a credible counteroffer because of the size of the deal.

Some even speculated that RJR Nabisco, which earned $1.2 billion on sales of $15.8 billion last year, might delay showing its hand in the hope that Kohlberg Kravis might lower its bid or withdraw it altogether.

"Every time you go up you're talking billions of dollars," said Jack Maxwell, an analyst with Wheat First Securities in Richmond, Va. He said any competing offer by Kohlberg Kravis would only be slightly larger.

RJR Nabisco previously began the lengthy process of providing Kohlberg Kravis with critical financial data on all of its businesses.

Shortly after the offer was announced, Kohlberg Kravis revealed that discussions had terminated with Johnson about a possible joint effort to buy the company, maker of a host of famous brands such as Winston cigarettes and Oreo cookies.

In a statement, Kohlberg Kravis said the decision "did not foreclose further discussions in the future although there could be no assurances that such discussions would occur."

Kohlberg Kravis, RJR Nabisco and one of its financial partners in the management-led buyout, Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc., have talked off and on over the past two weeks without success. Discussions that pitted Shearson Chairman Peter Cohen against his one-time skiing partner, Henry Kravis, over joining forces to take over RJR Nabisco also deteriorated.

Fledgling Presbyterian Denomination Feels It Is Now Ready To Be Aggressive

By John A. Bolt
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — The 15-year-old Presbyterian Church in America, begun in protest to the merger of Northern and Southern branches of larger Presbyterian denominations, has grown to 200,000 members and officials say it is ready to take a higher profile among the nation's churches.

"We believe God brought us into existence to have an evangelistic and reformed voice that was being quietened," says the Rev. Charles Dunahoo, coordinator of the denomination's Committee on Christian Education and Publications.

"We believe God wants us to be aggressive," says Dunahoo, who was defrocked by the Presbyterian Church in the United States for his activities in helping form the PCA in 1973.

The PCUS, mainly a Southern church, reunited with the United Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) in 1983 to form the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). When it was formed, the PCUSA had 3.3 million members but has since dropped to just under 3 million members in about 11,600 congregations. Concern over declining membership has highlighted the church's last two annual meetings.

The PCA, meanwhile, has grown from 249 congregations with 40,000 members in 1973 to more than 1,000 congregations with about 200,000 members, and is one of the country's fastest growing denominations at 5.7 percent a year for two years, according to the National Council of Churches. Dunahoo says the goal is 2,000 churches by the year 2000, "and we're right on target."

Dunahoo says most of that recent growth has come from new church development and conversions, and not in "transfer growth," although he says early growth was at the expense of the larger church.

There remains tension between the two denominations, however, with the PCUSA General Assembly rejecting in June without comment a suggestion by one of its own local groups that it begin reunion talks with the PCA.

The PCA, headquartered in Atlanta, continues to be centered in the Southeast — Mississippi, Alabama and South Carolina have the most congregations — but has 79 churches in Pennsylvania, 44 in California and has targeted New York, "that incredible mission field," as ripe for expansion. In all, the denomination has churches in 42 states, Canada and the Grand Cayman Islands.

In addition to its domestic mission, the church maintains 403 career missionaries and 92 others on two-year commitments. It also has 42 chaplains on active duty in the U.S. military and another 42 in the reserves.

The church tries to avoid being labeled as fundamentalist, although like many fundamental denominations it holds to the doctrine of biblical inerrancy — the belief that the Bible is without error in all matters, historic and scientific as well as religious.

The PCA does not ordain women, although Dunahoo said there is discussion about allowing women to become deacons.

Congregations have more autonomy than in the larger PCUSA, he says. For example it's up to the local congregation whether women can teach both men and women in Sunday school. Although the denomination has no doctrinal stand on the issue, Dunahoo says congregations are encouraged to allow women to teach both sexes.

Some fundamental churches forbid women teaching men, saying that violates biblical teachings by making a man subservient to a woman.

The church maintains traditional

Presbyterian emphasis on a seminary-trained clergy, although it did not have a seminary of its own until it acquired Covenant Theological Seminary in St. Louis in a 1982 merger with the small Reformed Presbyterian Church, Evangelical Synod.

"We are 'conservative,' but we're not old-fashioned!" says a brochure on the church. "We hold to the faith of the Bible and of our fathers, but we strive to proclaim God's Truth as imaginatively and creatively as possible."

One of the catalysts in the denomination's founding, Dunahoo said, was the growing acceptance in the Southern church of The Confession of 1967.

The confession, first adopted by the Northern church but later adopted by the PCUS at reunion, discusses the church's responsibility in racial, social and economic matters.

The confession "was a change in our doctrinal standard," Dunahoo says.

The PCA claims to be the continuing Southern Presbyterian Church — formed in 1861 in a dispute over the church's responsibility concerning slavery.

Retired Minister Finds His Roots On Road

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. — When the government fell in Greece, the Rev. Fred E. Young was there.

When Adolf Eichmann was tried in Jerusalem for the murder of countless Jews in Nazi concentration camps, Young was there.

And when Iraqi Prime Minister Nuri al-Said was hanged in the streets of Baghdad, Young was there.

No, this Watsontown native was not covering these world events as a foreign news correspondent. Young was just covering ground, and he happened to be in the right places at bad times.

"I have a philosophy," Young says. "If there's a problem on a trip, it makes good script when you get back."

With trips to nearly two-thirds of the world's countries, Young should have a good idea what constitutes good script.

After the 69-year-old Kansas City, Kan., man completes a journey to Antarctica he has planned for January, he will have visited more than 200 of the 306 countries on the globe.

Not bad for a fellow who never left Pennsylvania until he was 17 — and then only across the border to Maryland.

"I grew up in the horse-and-buggy days," says Young, explaining the late start in his travels.

But soon after he became a man of the cloth in the 1940s, Young began his journeys as a man of the world.

Each July, Young says he, his wife and son would go camping across America. Visits to Yellowstone, Acadia and Glacier national parks and other U.S. sites led to further voyages.

"We like to explore and to meet people from other countries and just to see this good earth," Young says.

Until his retirement from the Central Baptist Theological Seminary in Kansas City, where he was a dean and professor of the Old Testament, Young and his wife would visit foreign countries at least three times a year.

When Young officially retired from the seminary last July, he was in Madrid, on a 22-day, 11-country tour of Europe.

The retiree says his most enjoyable excursion involved shooting wildebeests, zebras, lions and other African game with a camera as they moved out of the Serengeti Plain in Central Africa.

Riding across the Serengeti, Young and others on the safari followed the migration of the animals for three weeks.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the book of I Samuel intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

SAMUEL AND SAUL

ALTHOUGH SAMUEL HAS WARNED THE ISRAELITES OF THE MANY HARDSHIPS THEY WILL ENDURE UNDER A KING, STILL THEY INSIST UPON HAVING A RULER...

THE LORD WILL GIVE YOU A KING!

AND NOW, RESIDING IN THE LANDS OF THE TRIBE OF BENJAMIN, IS KISH...

...WHOSE SON, SAUL, IS A GOOLY MAN, STRONG AND, IN STATURE, TALLER BY A HEAD AND SHOULDER THAN ANY OTHER MAN IN ALL THE TRIBES OF ISRAEL...

For Her, Spiritual Approach Is Key To Health

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Ali Guggenheim remembers weighing 312 pounds and wanting to die — and if it weren't for a slender little black man she met in a taxicab, she might have.

It was he, who, at one of her lowest points, confronted Ms. Guggenheim with reality. And it was from that source of truth that Ms. Guggenheim found herself seeking another: God.

Today, the Israeli-born Ms. Guggenheim is a slim 36-year-old leader of weight-control workshops. She says she has put behind her the pain of those years of obesity — pain she began in childhood of comparing herself with her slender mother, a former Vogue model, and her beauty-pageant-winning sister.

"I can remember crying myself to sleep when I was no older than five," she said. "We had a very unsettled life, traveling from Israel to Argentina to the United States, back to Israel. I was a very sad little girl who felt very sorry for herself."

She blamed her unhappiness on feel she was ugly. And she ate to suppress her sorrow.

By the time she came to the United States as a young woman, she weighed 222 pounds. Her weight has climbed as high as 312.

It was when she was at this peak that she met the man in the taxi. Having moved to California, she had begun to seek secretarial jobs, but was always turned down. A college graduate and a veteran of the Israeli Army, she knew she was capable. She had adequate clerical skills and was fluent in eight languages.

But the only job she could land was driving a cab.

One night while she was driving, "a skinny, audacious little black man" spoke up from the back seat. "Why are you killing yourself like this?" he asked.

She was annoyed, but listened when he said that he, too, had once been grossly fat, unable to do the things he longed to do. But, he said, he had confronted his health needs. He realized that he could not eat like other people and keep his weight down.

So for 25 years, he had been a fruitarian. With energy from his diet, he had regained his health and could do the things he had always wanted. He told her it was a matter of priorities: Do you want to suppress your negative feelings with food, or do you want to live life fully?

His advice came at a good time. Ms. Guggenheim had been seeing a counselor. She was keeping a journal, pouring her heart into its pages both in poetry and in prose. She was also reading every book she could find on changing one's thinking, weight control and healthful eating.

"I was reared Jewish," she said. "My father's family had been very rich in Germany before World War II and had been fortunate enough to have most of the family members escape Europe prior to the Nazi Holocaust with their lives. We were Jewish by culture, but I was reared with no religion.

"Relating to a personal God with something very new and strange for me to consider doing."

"But that was what my reading and soul-searching were leading me to."

She says she called out to God, asking him for freedom from her fat, the courage to act, the courage to create a life that would focus on others, rather than self.

"That was a turning point for me," she said. "I found out that, with God's help, I could trust myself to not eat, even when I wanted to very, very much."

She found an eating plan she could follow and lose weight. And she found the courage to stick to it, one day at a time. She began to like herself better and better.

Though she never got that secretarial job, she was hired to teach backgammon, a game she had learned in childhood. She enjoyed the work and the association it brought her with many well-known movie industry people.

Men began asking her for dates, and that frightened her. She had never related to them except as one of the boys or as a fellow soldier.

"I had some stormy relationships during that time," she said. "But having men relate to me positively still reinforced my growing good feeling about myself."

Her path to health wasn't without setbacks. While on one trip to England, she had a gall bladder attack, abandoned her eating plan and added 131 pounds in six weeks. But gradually she got back on track and she lost it all again.

Ms. Guggenheim now travels the country presenting a workshop called "Loving Your Fat Away." She gave one recently in Greenville and plans to return for another in January.

She tells workshop participants her story, talking frankly about obesity, which she says is the No. 1 killer in this country today. "More people die in this country every day from obesity-related causes than die in India from starvation-related causes," she says.

All the answers to weight loss — or any challenge — lie within each individual, she believes. She says the odds of most people losing weight and keeping it off are 10,000-to-one. But, she adds, "When you're working with Spirit, the statistics don't count."

Ms. Guggenheim also advises using a positive approach to every goal. She states, in positive words, what she wants for herself. She writes affirmations and listens to see what objections her minds brings up to keep them from becoming reality.

She suggests calling a halt to worry, which she said is the opposite of prayer.

"You feed whatever you perceive to be happening by attention," she said. "Worry is feeding with negative energy. Prayer is feeding with positive energy."

Ms. Guggenheim believes it impossible to heal oneself alone. That's why she constantly reinforces herself by leading workshops and why she recommends a buddy system for mutual support in losing weight and dealing with emotional issues that tend to block weight loss.

And she recommends the books, "I Love My Body," by Louise Hay, and Harvey and Marilyn Diamond's "Fit For Life" and "Fit For Life II."

The Diamond books detail the food plan Ms. Guggenheim uses to stay near her goal weight and rebuild the health she feels she damaged with years of obesity and poor diet.

"I'm within 20 pounds of my goal weight," she said. "And I love myself even at this weight. I don't feel I've totally rebuilt my health, though. I still have some symptoms that tell me I haven't."

"And, even if I were to get rid of all the symptoms, there'd still be maintenance. Having good health is a matter of lifetime priority-keeping. I'll have to feed my body lovingly for the rest of my life."

Telephone Their 'Tie That Binds'

By Clay Deanhardt
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Admittedly, it's a twist. Instead of pounding the pulpit, the Rev. Mike Rasmussen pounded telephone keys to attract members to the new Christ Presbyterian Church in Greenville.

And he says the work will pay off. Rasmussen, a 30-year-old minister with the savvy to use modern promotional tools for an ancient cause, has been sent to eastern North Carolina with a mission. He is here to establish, for the first time in Greenville, a church under the auspices of the Presbyterian Church in America.

But you've got to have a congregation to have a church. Over time, different churches have tried different methods to get that congregation. Some churches advertise in newspapers, others use word of mouth.

But Rasmussen has capitalized on a new trend in church advertising: telemarketing.

"We wanted to start a church," he said, "but we didn't want to seem like sheep-shifters, where you're just trying to get members of other churches."

"So we decided we would use the telephone."

Rasmussen said he, a small core of about 10 families with previous PCA affiliations and several students from East Carolina University's Campus Crusade for Christ called 9,000 people in the area between Sept. 6 and Sept. 30.

To decide which 9,000 Greenville residents to call, Rasmussen said the group used the Johnson Directory, which breaks down phone listings by street address. The group then targeted newer developments, assuming that most residents of established neighborhoods already had church families.

"We'd ask permission to ask two very brief questions, and the vast majority of the people would say yes," Rasmussen said. "The first question would be 'Are you actively involved with one of the local churches at this time?'"

If the answer was yes, Rasmussen and his co-workers would simply thank them for their time and congratulate them on having a church family.

If the answer was no, the group would ask permission to send literature about the church.

The plan seems to have worked. Rasmussen said about 1,000 people were willing to receive the literature. He said experiences with telemarketing indicate that approximately 10 percent of those people (about 100 people) will show up Sunday for the church's first service.

Rasmussen said the new church will often try to modernize presentations of the traditional, conservative, evangelical beliefs of his denomination. The entire congregation, for example, will have one full meeting a week, the Sunday service. At other times, small groups will be encouraged to meet for Bible study and fellowship, Rasmussen said.

Telemarketing is perhaps the newest means of shepherding a flock into a new church, and, like most new trends, this one started in California.

"There was a man who came to know Jesus Christ as his savior through the Friends Church," Rasmussen said. "His business was acting as a consultant to business on telemarketing."

"He went to work with the Friends Church in their church planting group, applied his telemarketing know-how to the church and put together packets that churches are buying that now are being used all over the country."

Rasmussen said he thinks this is the first use of these tactics in Greenville, possibly in eastern North Carolina.

For now, the Christ Presbyterian Church has offices in The Comfort Inn on Greenville Boulevard. The congregation will meet there for the first time at 11 a.m. Sunday in the main banquet room.

NEH Receives Millions For Books

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The National Endowment for the Humanities has received $12.3 million in fiscal 1989 for a nationwide program to preserve brittle library materials.

Most of the funds will be used to microfilm brittle books and other library materials printed on acid paper that has deteriorated to the point of crumbling.

The NEH's Office of Preservation had a budget of only $4.5 million in fiscal 1988.

Experts estimate that 77 million of the 300 million volumes in university and research libraries will turn to dust by the year 2000. The Commission on Preservation and Access estimates that 11 million are at immediate risk and of those, three million should be saved.

Acid paper, according to the commission, came into universal use in the mid-1800s because it was cheaper to produce. Wood was used for the cellulose fibers and alum was used as filler. The interaction between the alum, which is acidic, in the paper and water in the atmosphere results in the breakdown of the cellulose fibers.

The goal of the program, according to the commission, is to create a new, national resource of microfilmed materials that will be available at modest cost to libraries and scholars throughout the nation and the world.

Couple Wed On Oct. 23

Community Baptist Church was the setting for the wedding ceremony of Catherine Marie Reaves and Clayton Dean McLawhorn at 3 p.m. Oct. 23. The double-ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Stanley Wingard.

Daughter of Wilbert and Margie Reaves of Route 2, Grifton, the bride was given in marriage by her father. Tina Bowen Reaves of Route 3, Ayden, was matron of honor her sister-in-law. Robin Phillips of Route 2, Ayden, and Sandra Loftin of La Grange, sisters of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids. Kelly Singleton of Route 3, Ayden, was flower girl, and Charles Ray Reaves Jr. of Route 3, Ayden, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer.

Homer McLawhorn of Route 2, Ayden, and the late Hedden McLawhorn are parents of the bridegroom. Randy James McLawhorn of Winterville was best man for his brother. Ushers were Charles Ray Reaves, brother of the bride, Jerry McLawhorn, cousin of the bridegroom, and William Hines, all of Route 3, Ayden. Lisa Teal of Ayden was pianist for the ceremony.

The bride wore a white gown of lace, sequins and seed pearls. The neckline was high Victorian style and had long lace sleeves. The basque waistline was accented by a tiered lace overlay train that extended chapel length. She wore a hat accented with pearls and sequins and carried a cascade bouquet of carnations and baby's breath.

The wedding was directed by Betsy McKaughan of Greenville. Peggy and Glenn Blancett of Greenville presided at the register.

A reception followed and was held at the church.

The couple is living near Ayden after a wedding trip to the mountains.

The bride and bridegroom attended Ayden-Grifton High School; she is employed by Brody's and he is employed by Pugh's Tire Service.

Several showers were given for the couple prior to their marriage.

Rules For Dressing Have Changed, Abby, As A 'Scantily Clad' Teen-Ager Can Attest

Dear Abby: Recently you told a 14-year-old girl whose mother wouldn't let her wear a strapless, wraparound dress because it was too revealing that the rules for how a 14-year-old girl should dress haven't changed.

Well, I am a 14-year-old girl, and I say they have changed. Today, girls are compelled to show off their bodies because of the same social rules that forced their grandmothers to cover up theirs.

I'm a figure skater — not on ice, on roller skates, so you won't be seeing me in the Olympics unless they accept dancing on wheels instead of blades as an athletic competition.

But whether it's done on wheels or blades, one thing is the same — the boys are always fully dressed, but the girls are semi-nude. The same thing is true in many other sports. Just take a look at how the gymnasts are dressed when they perform. And it isn't only in sports; my sister has an after-school job that requires her to wear a uniform with short-shorts during the summer, so the customers can look at her legs while ordering pizza.

It's everywhere, Abby. Just take a look around you. — Scantily Clad In Tennessee

Dear Scantily Clad: Call me old-fashioned, but my perception of acceptable (modest) attire hasn't changed, although fashions have. Witness today's baseball and football uniforms. Gone are the baggy trousers — replaced with skin-tight stretch pants.

Dear Abby: I just sat through a Sunday morning sermon in which our minister used the phrase "man's seed" no less than a dozen times. It was all I could do to keep from walking out.

It's taken what seems like an eon to enlighten people about the miracle of reproduction, and what happens? An ignorant, callous patriarch stands in front of a church full of people and implies that the creation of life is a process in which man — make that "Man" — sows the seed, and woman provides the passive soil.

Well, I'm not going to take it anymore. All life in this world is born of Woman. It's a power we must reclaim as our own, or be responsible for the continued disrespect and subjugation dumped on our sisters and children. The ovum — make that "Ovum" — is the "seed"; and semen is, you'll pardon the expression, fertilizer. — Unsung Matriarch, Cleveland

Dear Matriarch: Yours is another variation on the same old theme: Which is more important to the creation of life — the egg or the sperm? Obviously they are of equal importance since neither can reproduce without the other. And enough of the name-calling, please. Man is not "fertilizer"; neither is woman "dirt."

Dear Abby: What do divorced couples do with photos of their times together? I haven't seen my "ex" in more than 10 years. We were married for seven years. No children. He has since remarried and has children.

I thought maybe I would send him all these pictures anonymously. I can't just throw them out.

Abby, if you were in my place, what would you do? — "Say Cheese" In San Francisco

Dear Say Cheese: I'd pack them up and send them to him.

If you don't feel inclined to enclose a note, you don't have to; he'll know where they came from. Those pictures are part of your ex's "history," which might mean something to his children one day. If he doesn't want them, let him throw them out.

Psychologist Says Babies Are Aware While In Womb And Remember Birth

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Nurse (is holding me). Now doctor. I'm a fine girl, a real fine girl, the doctor says. I'm here! ...

"(My mother) says, 'I can't hold it.' I'm not an 'it'! I'm a beautiful girl! (Beginning to sob.) She still doesn't want me. She doesn't love me. She hates me. ... She told me. And she doesn't want to hold me. (Still crying.) And I was so happy!"

To those who believe that babies are highly aware and intellectually sophisticated, this is a reliable account of birth as seen by the infant, and an affirmation of the terrible toll a negative reception can take on babies. To others, the account rings false — it's an adult's perception supposedly coming from an infant's brain.

Psychologist David Chamberlain of San Diego wants to convince us of that belief in his new book, "Babies Remember Birth" (Tarcher, $16.95), from which the account above is taken. And birth is not all they remember, he says. He is convinced that fetuses — "preborns" — are also highly aware and can be influenced for life by a mother's emotions and thoughts during pregnancy.

"I think it's vitally important for parents to be alerted to babies' consciousness at birth and before birth," Chamberlain says. Babies can be hurt by insensitive obstetrical practices, by parents who think the infants are incapable of comprehension and by mothers' experiences during pregnancy, he contends.

He says hundreds of his patients, while under hypnosis, have told him of experiences in the womb or at birth. He finds supporting evidence in research documenting the capabilities of infants. Chamberlain is vice president of the Pre- and Perinatal Psychology Association, which publishes a journal.

"There's nothing small or shrunken or baby-like about these memories," Chamberlain says. "(Babies are) alert, astute, perceptive and wise about things. They raise questions, and they object and they protest."

Others dispute his claims. One is Dr. Charles H. Zeanah, chairman of the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry's Committee on Psychiatric Dimensions of Infancy. Zeanah is assistant professor of psychiatry at Brown University and director of the Infant Behavior Clinic at Women and Infants' Hospital in Providence, R.I.

There is "a real lack of evidence" about both birth memories and prenatal experience, he says. And the manner in which Chamberlain and his colleagues report their beliefs to the public is troubling, he says.

"It's bad to be talking to the public about it before there's any kind of scientific consensus at all," Zeanah says. "There are a lot of possibilities so far, but they're only possibilities."

Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady and ranged from 96 to 98 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was sharply lower in early trading today, pressured by new unemployment data that showed surprising strength in the economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 14.58 points at 2,155.76 after a half-hour of trading at 10 a.m. EST.

Declining issues outpaced advancing ones by around 4 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 804 issues down, 185 up and 458 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 21.01 million shares.

The government reported today that the nation's civilian unemployment rate fell to 5.3 percent in October as the economy created more than 300,000 jobs.

Bucs Seek To End 8-Game Slide

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina's Pirates, facing a lame-duck situation with head coach Art Baker, head into the final weeks of the season with a couple of road games, starting Saturday at the University of Temple.

Kickoff is set for 1 p.m. at Veterans Stadium in Philadelphia.

East Carolina's Baker announced Monday that he would resign at the end of the current season. His contract, which will continue in force, will expire in January. Baker is then expected to take over a new personal development program for the athletic department.

Meanwhile, it's Gipper-time for the Pirates, as they attempt to snap an eight-game losing streak against the Owls, who snapped a losing streak of their own last Saturday. The Pirates come into the game with a 1-8 record, having beaten Tennessee Tech, 52-13, in their opening game. Since then, they have come close to victory, but it has eluded them each time, including five times against teams ranked in the nation's top 20.

Temple, 2-5, lost its opening game to Syracuse, 31-21, a team which beat the Pirates 38-14, two weeks ago. After a 37-0 loss at the hands of Alabama, Temple defeated Navy, 21-7.

After that, Temple lost three straight games. They were beaten by Penn State, 45-9, by Pittsburgh, 42-7 and by California, 31-14.

But this past weekend, the Owls abandoned their multi-bone offense and went back to the I formation with some wishbone mixed in, running past Rutgers, 35-30.

In that game, Temple quarterback Matt Baker unleashed a passing attack for the Owls, throwing for a school record tying 313 yards and three touchdowns.

Meanwhile, the Pirates, in bowing to Miami, turned in a good performance until a fateful flag turned the game around for the Hurricanes.

Trailing 17-7, the Pirates had just recovered a fumbled punt by Miami at midfield. But Miami was flagged for clipping and East Carolina for holding on the play — off-setting penalties that required the Pirate punt to be replayed.

On the second kick, Miami broke through to block the punt, and one play later scored to take a 24-7 lead. From there Miami went on to win, 38-14.

In that game, defensive back Junior Robinson intercepted two passes. That was the first time since the 1985 season that a Pirate had picked off more than one pass. Ironically, that too came against Miami as Kevin Walker intercepted three passes.

Tim James became the second Pirate to move over 1,000 career rushing yards in the game. His had 74 yards on 17 carries to bring his career total to 1,065 yards. Earlier this season, slotback Reggie McKinney surpassed the 1,000-yard mark.

Meanwhile, quarterback Travis Hunter, a junior, moved past 3,000 yards in career total offense. He now has 3,017 yards and stands fifth on the all-time ECU list. He is only nine yards short to the number four man, Butch Colson.

Jarrold Moody, a senior slotback, caught two asses to move to 49 on his career, good enough for ninth place in his career total.

East Carolina holds a 4-2 lead in the series with Temple, counting a forfeit received earlier this year when it was revealed that former Owl running back Paul Palmer signed with an agent prior to his senior year. Temple beat the Pirates that year, but when Palmer's signing was revealed, Temple forfeited all its wins that year.

ECU won last year's meeting, in Greenville, 31-26.

James is the leading rusher for the Pirates, with 526 yards. McKinney, who has been hobbled by injuries the last two weeks, is second with 324 yards.

Hunter, who has rushed for 245 yards, has connected on 40 of 95 passes for 612 yards. His backup, Charlie Libretto, who started two games this year, has hit on 50 of 103 passes for 732 yards. Both quarterbacks have five touchdowns passes.

Walter Wilson is the top receiver with 15 for 333 yards. Al Whiting had 15 grabs for 237 yards while Moody has caught 14 for 156.

McKinney is expected to be ready to play this weekend.

Hornets Open First Year Against Cleveland Tonight

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — The Charlotte Hornets play their first regular-season game tonight against the Cleveland Cavaliers, and the team's decision to draft several guards in the expansion and regular drafts looks like a good one after a rash of injuries hit the team in training camp.

Guards Dell Curry and Ralph Lewis will begin the team's first NBA season on injured reserve, meaning they will have to sit out the first five games.

Lewis is suffering from a bruised right thigh and will likely be back after the first five games. Curry, the team's top pick in the expansion draft, has a broken left wrist and will be out longer.

"It would have been very hard at guard with Ralph and Dell getting hurt," Coach Dick Harter said. "It's good that we had all those guys."

Despite losing Curry and Lewis to injury, the team still has Rickey Green, Robert Reid, Tyrone Bogues, Michael Holton and Rex Chapman. All but Chapman, a rookie out of the University of Kentucky, have NBA experience.

Injuries weren't just limited to guards, however. Power forward Kurt Rambis was improving from a sprained right ankle he suffered in Monday night's exhibition game against the Cleveland Cavaliers. He was a likely starter against the Cleveland Cavaliers Friday night at the Charlotte Coliseum.

Earl Cureton, a backup power forward, was making progress from a pulled hamstring. Harter said he had considered putting Cureton on the injured reserved list, but that would have kept the 6-foot-9 player out of the lineup for at least five games.

"We decided to wait and see how he feels," Harter said. "I think he might be better than we thought he was Tuesday."

"Injuries haven't helped us, but that's part of the business."

With Rambis and Cureton hobbling, former North Carolina-Wilmington star Brian Rowsom will have to be ready as a backup.

"Brian is an improving player over last year, that's for sure."

Harter said. "At times, he can be a very good NBA player. At other times, he doesn't look that way."

"We have a lot of guys on our team like that."

The Hornets might have a tough decision to make Nov. 13. That's when Lewis is expected to return from injured reserve. Lewis and Cureton have guaranteed contracts, as do 10 other Hornets. The only two players on the active list without guaranteed deals are Robert Reid, the starting shooting guard, and Rowsom.

Once that roster decision is made, another will arise in December, when Curry returns. Curry's return will force the team to make another deal, whether it be waive or trade.

Torborg Named

CHICAGO (AP) — Jeff Torborg, a former major league catcher who once managed the Cleveland Indians, was named as manager of the Chicago White Sox.

The 46-year-old Torborg replaced Jim Fregosi, who was fired last month after the team finished fifth in the AL West with a 71-90 record.

NCAA Hands Cincinnati Three Years Of Probation

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — University of Cincinnati officials were relieved at getting only three-years probation from the NCAA and were commended for their zealous self-policing during the investigation of infractions.

"I thought we were treated fairly, when you consider what they could have done. We intend to comply fully with the NCAA's directives as we continue to evaluate the university's athletic programs," UC President Joseph Steger said Thursday.

The NCAA said Cincinnati gave financial aid to basketball players who were ineligible because of Proposition 48, allowed non-scholarship players to attend school without paying tuition, exceeded limitations on football and basketball scholarships and used gym classes as out-of-season football practices.

Cincinnati also housed a potential basketball recruit in a dormitory for three weeks and arranged for another to stay in a hotel at a reduced rate for two weeks. The school also arranged for a reduced hotel room rate for the high school coach of two basketball recruits.

In addition, an assistant basketball coach provided prohibited car transportation to potential recruits and a booster reated cars to two potential recruits without having them fill out the usual credit applications.

The university said it would not appeal the NCAA punishments that include a ban on postseason competition in football and men's basketball in the 1988-89 season.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association levied that and other penalties as punishment for the university's violation of NCAA rules in operation of its football and men's basketball programs.

The NCAA said the university's punishment will also include:

—A public reprimand and three years' probation.

—A requirement that the university develop and implement systems for administrative control and monitoring to assure compliance and that it educate school personnel about NCAA regulations.

—Limitations on financial aid for basketball in 1989-90, and for football through 1991-92.

"The University of Cincinnati intends to conduct an exemplary program for our student-athletes," Steger said. "The investigative process has allowed us the opportunity to identify systems and procedures that we will correct. We will not appeal the findings of the NCAA nor the penalties imposed."

Steger said the 35,000-student university has begun a search for a full-time compliance officer.

Steger said that the NCAA had praised the university for cooperating in the investigation and for self-reporting some violations that NCAA officials might not otherwise have found.

"We have been treated fairly by the NCAA throughout this process. We intend to comply fully with the NCAA's directives as we continue to evaluate the university's athletic programs," Steger said.

Chuck Smrt, NCAA assistant director of enforcement, said Cincinnati's case was "unique."

"It was the Infractions Committee's feeling that they did not act intentionally," Smrt said.

UC football coach Dave Currey said he was relieved that the penalties finally came down but was upset about what it has done to the school's reputation.

Powell Second In State Meet

CHAPEL HILL — Greenville's Paige Powell took second place in the 4-A North Carolina High School Athletic Association's tennis championships Thursday, bowing in the finals.

Scotti Thomas of Durham's Jordan High School slipped past Powell, 6-3, 6-1, to gain the championship.

Powell, who was seeded fourth in the tournament, defeated Jenny Boone of Raleigh Broughton, the number two seed, 6-2, 6-0, to advance through the semifinals, while Thomas defeated Cara White of Henderson Vance, 6-0, 6-1, in the semifinals.

Goldsboro, which won the doubles championship, took first place in the team standings. Daniella Marx and Lee Worrell defeated Lisa Cook and Vera Janders of South Mecklenburg, 6-1, 6-2, for the doubles crown.

Powell, playing as a member of the Rose High School tennis team, is actually a freshman at E.B. Aycock Junior High School, but is eligible for Rose since her school does not field a tennis team.

Powell was unbeaten on the year going into the finals of the tournament. She was seeded first in the 14-and-under age group for North Carolina in the last North Carolina Tennis Association rankings.

"Paige did exceptionally well, especially for just being a freshman," Coach Elizabeth Langston said. "Beating the number two seed is a big step for her. The match in the finals was very close, and Scotti just happened to get the points that made the difference. One game went to deuce five times before Scotti got the point."

It was the third meeting of the two in championship play. Both of the earlier meetings have come in NCTA action and each of them had once before. Thomas is a junior and will also return next season.

Hardison Takes NPHS Reins Takes Over Leadership Role As Panther Quarterback

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Every football team needs strong senior leadership, so when North Pitt's standout quarterback Calvin Hunter graduated last year head coach Stuart Ennis turned to three-year tailback Billy Hardison to guide the Panthers.

The move has proven to be a good one for Ennis, as Hardison has led the team to a 5-4 record this year. A win tonight over Pamlico High School, 2-7 for the year, will lock up second place in the Eastern Plains Conference for the Panthers and send them into the state 2-A playoffs once more.

"He (Hardison) heard a lot of the things that I did with Calvin (now a quarterback for Guilford College) last year," said Ennis, who was the team's offensive coordinator last season. "So it wasn't like he'd never heard the things I expected him to do. He'd just never gone out there and done them."

For Hardison it was an opportunity to close out his senior year in a way he'd always wanted to.

"When you're young you always want to be the quarterback of the team," Hardison said. "Now in my senior year I'm the quarterback and also the captain of the team. That's something everybody always dreams about."

And he feels confident in the role. "I felt like after watching Calvin run the offense that I was used to it and that I could do the job," Hardison said. "Since Coach Ennis had faith in me to do it, I felt I had to step in and give it a try."

Not only did Hardison have to adjust to the loss of Hunter, he also had to adjust to the loss of standout end Ashley Sheppard, who is playing at Fork Union Military Academy this year.

"That was a big adjustment for me when Ashley and Calvin left," Hardison said. "When they were here they were looked on as the team's leaders. Now since I'm a senior I feel like I have to push the others the way they pushed me."

Hardison, who sports a time of 4.5 in the 40-yard run, has rushed for 395 yards and seven touchdowns thus far this season. And, although struggling somewhat with his passing, he has completed 22-57 passes for 266 yards and five TD's, while suffering seven interceptions.

"I think he's done an excellent job running the offense," Ennis said. "We run the true triple option, so it's a pretty complex offense to have to learn."

Hardison isn't just a one-way player though. He also plays defensive back for the Panthers. In fact, that's the position colleges are recruiting him for. As a defender he has recovered a pair of fumbles and picked off one interception this season.

"Chances are he'll be recruited as a defensive back," Ennis said. "He's started back there for four years and really plays the position well."

Currently, Hardison is being recruited most heavily by Wake Forest, Clemson and South Carolina.

"I'm probably leaning a little bit to Wake Forest," Hardison said. "I have tried to pattern my play after (Wake defensive back) A.J. Greene. I think I could learn a lot from him."

Making the jump from the high school level to the collegiate level many times is a difficult adjustment. However, Hardison may prove to be an exception to that rule. He jumped straight from the middle school level to the varsity team when he entered the ninth grade.

"I feel like I adjusted pretty well," Hardison said. "It was a lot to adjust to at first going from elementary school straight to varsity football."

Ennis believes the adjustment was made easier because of Hardison's intelligence, not only on the football field, but also in the classroom.

"He's a good, smart student," Ennis said. "He'll have no trouble getting in any college he wants to go to."

That's something Hardison says can be credited to the backing of his parents.

"My mom and dad have been very supportive of me," Hardison said. "But they always pushed me to make good grades. They said if the grades weren't good enough there would be no football."

The grades are there and, for now, all of Hardison's thoughts are on beating Pamlico County Friday night and making it to the playoffs again.

"My goal for us as a team is to go all the way and win the state championship," Hardison said. "We came close last year, but we want to go all the way this year."

Last season, the Panthers went to the third round of the playoffs before bowing out to Ayden-Grifton and finishing with a 8-4 record.

"My goals personally are to do whatever I can to help the team win," Hardison said. "I want to help take North Pitt as far as it can possibly go this year."

Gamecock String On The Line

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
COLUMBIA, S.C. — While No. 15 South Carolina hasn't lost at home in 14 games, Coach Joe Morrison still looks at No. 5 Florida State with a measure of concern, especially when it comes to the Seminoles' use of trick plays.

"I think you try to cover everything," said Morrison of Saturday's game at Williams-Brice Stadium. "I'm sure we're going to be covering the reverses, passes off the reverses, that kind of thing."

Morrison, whose Gamecocks' 7-1 mark is identical to Florida State's, views the Seminoles as a strong threat with a balanced offense and a defense that's tough to pass against.

"They are a good football team," he said. "And we'll have to be at our best physically, mentally, emotionally, all the way around, to play the type of game we need to play."

Kickoff is scheduled for 8:08 p.m. and the game will be carried nationally by the ESPN cable television network.

South Carolina, which features the passing arm of junior Todd Ellis, relied heavily on its defense in last weekend's 23-7 win against North Carolina.

The Gamecock defenders are ranked seventh nationally in total yards allowed, eighth in rushing defense and fifth in scoring defense, having given up an average of only 12 points per game.

"They're the Chicago Bears of college football," said Seminole coach Bobby Bowden. "They've always put on an intimidating pass rush.

"They say, 'Ok, you can have a touchdown pass if you can get it off.' Their defense has got to be our biggest concern."

Another concern of Bowden's has been the health of his team, which is much improved after having last weekend as an open date. However, starting quarterback Chip Ferguson remains doubtful.

Ferguson, who suffered a shoulder injury against Louisiana Tech two weeks ago, may be replaced by Peter Tom Willis, who started against South Carolina two years ago.

Willis, who was relieved by Ferguson in Florida State's come-from-behind 45-28 win, has completed 22 of 47 passes for 214 yards, three touchdowns and three interceptions this season.

Ferguson, on the other hand, has 1,427 yards, nine interceptions and 12 touchdowns this year — good enough to make him the sixth-rated quarterback in the country.

Ellis, who got off to a good start but has faltered in recent games, remains the key to South Carolina's pro-style offensive attack.

He has passed for 1,833 yards but has also thrown 14 interceptions and only eight touchdown shots.

Backing up Ellis at tailback will be junior Harold Green, a strong runner who had 85 yards against North Carolina State, his best game since suffering an injury early in the season.

Despite the injuries, Green has 370 yards on 105 attempts this season to lead the Gamecock runners. Next in yards gained is backup tailback Mike Dingle, who has 251 yards on 67 carries.

For Florida State, the key is tailback Sammy Smith, who also has had injury problems.

Smith leads the Seminole rushing game with 366 yards, followed by Chris Parker with 347 yards. Both Smith and Parker have been averaging more than five yards per carry.

Florida State, like South Carolina, also boasts a fine group of speedy receivers, the best of which is Terry Anthony, who has caught 24 passes for 390 yards and six touchdowns.

For the Gamecocks, the top pass-catcher is Green, who has 29 receptions for 241 yards. The top gainer, however, among the wide receivers is tight end Carl Platt with 28 catches for 410 yards.

Close behind Platt is freshman flanker Robert Brooks, whose often spectacular catches have netted South Carolina 382 yards and three touchdowns on 24 catches.

The Seminoles' second-best receiver is Ronald Lewis, who has 20 catches and 372 yards gained.

Defensively, South Carolina has been allowing an average of only 258 yards per game while Florida State is giving up a 305-yard-per-game average.

The Seminoles, however, have better statistics in the pass defense category than the Gamecocks, having allowed 149 yards per game compared with South Carolina's 154-yard average.

Florida State cornerback Tracy Sanders and South Carolina linebacker Patrick Hinton each have four interceptions for the season and both rank in the top 10 nationally.

Hinton had three interceptions, including one he returned 83 yards for a touchdown, and a fumble recovery against North Carolina State.

Free safety Ron Rabune, with 84 tackles, leads the Gamecocks in tackles while Florida State's top tackler is linebacker Kelvin Smith with 62.

Pirate Swimmers Set To Open Season

East Carolina University's swimming team opens the 1988-89 season Saturday at American University and Coach Rick Kobe believes that the Pirates could win the Colonial Athletic Association's championship this season.

"This year we are returning the nucleus of last year's CAA second place finisher, and that finish was only 10 points behind a strong Navy team," Kobe said. "The group returning combines with the best class of freshman and transfers I've ever had."

The biggest positive for the men is their depth. There are at least two or three in each event, and the largest team in the school's history, 25.

Team leaders are expected to be Andy Johns and Andy Jeter, who will be co-captains.

Three newcomers will pace the Pirates in the freestyle sprints, junior college All-American Erick Hoyos and freshmen Tim Boyd and Billy Haughton will lead the 50 and 100-yard distances. Jeter and Jones, along with John Farrell and Marc Cook will handle the 200 and 500 and J.D. Lewis and George Walters, along with Cook will man the 1,000 and 1,650.

Raymond Kennedy and Tom Holsten lead the Pirates in the individual medleys with Sean Callender, Ted Christensen and John Springer adding depth.

Jones is the currently varsity record holder in the 200 butterfly and Hoyos got his all-America standing in the 100 fly. Todd Stebbins will also swim in the fly events.

Mark O'Brien, Farrell and Walters lead the backstroke. Farrell set a new conference record in winning the 200 last year and O'Brien was second.

Raymond Kennedy will lead the breaststroke along with Chip Kline and John Springer.

Divers Perry Smith and Scott Milligan return for their sophomore seasons. Meanwhile, the Lady Pirates may suffer from a lack of depth, with only 12 members on their squad, although all are quality performers.

"Our women's team is the most talented ever at ECU," Kobe said. "We set the most records ever last year and most of the record-setters are back, so I see no reason why we can't continue. I believe a first place finish in the CAA meet is within reach for this group as well."

Patti Walsh, Leslie Wilson and Meredith Bridgers figure to be the top swimmers with Bridgers as a bona fide contender for NCAA qualification.

Walsh set records in the 200 and 500 freestyle and 100 butterfly as well as swimming on the 800 freestyle relay team. Bridgers set 100 and 200 breaststroke records while Wilson set the standard in the 200 individual medley and has a shot at the 400 record.

Chantal Morris, a freshman, has already posted marks better than the ECU records in the 1,000 and 1,650 freestyles. Kristine Lutker, Page Holt and Erin Reilly will add depth in the freestyle events.

Robin Wicks, Carolyn Green along with freshmen Shelly Micka, Jennifer Muench and Wendy Smith add more depth in the odd strokes.

Sherry Campbell returns as a diver, along with newcomers Cynthia Cordova and Jennifer Grove.

Little League Elects Officers

Jerry Clark and Ken Hilton have been elected as presidents for the two Greenville Little Leagues.

Clark will head the North State Little League as its chief executive officer. Richard Holloman has been elected vice-president, while Barbara Wing was selected as secretary. Roy Berbert will serve as treasurer, while Sylvia Briley will head the women's auxiliary and Mike Aldridge will serve as safety officer.

Hilton will lead the Tar Heel League. Other officers include Rob Whitley, vice-president; Teresa Whitley, women's auxiliary president; and Emmett Walsh Jr., safety officer.

Dan H. Gordon was reappointed as league commissioner and player agent.

Aycock Defeats White By 30-0

E.B. Aycock Junior High School's 7th and 8th grade football team rolled up a 30-0 victory over C.G. White of Bertie County Thursday.

Jeff Freeman scored twice for Aycock, on runs of 35 and 20 yards. Quarterback Germaine Reed also scored two touchdowns, on runs of 15 and 10 yards.

Extra points were scored by Carlton Holder on a run and Jermarlon Harris on two passes from Reed.

Aycock is now 1-6 on the year.

Conley, Rose Take Jayvee Victories

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's junior varsity football team closed out its season Thursday night with a 25-6 victory over East Carteret.

Mike Clark got the Baby Vikings on the scoreboard and Richard Brittle added the PAT kick for a 7-0 lead.

Derrick Cox caught a scoring pass from Bryan Smith and Kenneth Hadcock and Jesse Corey both ran over touchdowns to round out the scoring.

Conley finishes the season with an 8-2 record.

ELIZABETH CITY — Rose High School's junior varsity football team claimed a 42-29 victory over Northeastern Thursday night.

Rose got on the board in the first period on a 60-yard fumble return by Derrick Wilkes and Grant Harmon took a conversion pass from Columbus Grice. Rose and Northeastern were tied at 8-8 at the end of the period.

In the second quarter, Rose scored twice to take the lead for good. Grice scored on a four-yard run and Anthony Love went over from five yards out for a 20-15 halftime lead.

Rose added another score in the third period on a one-yard run by Love, who also added the PAT. Rose led, 28-23, going into the final period.

The Rampant Cubs picked up two more in the final period. Carlos Ebron returned a kickoff 93 yards and Grice scored from the two, passing to Harmon for the conversion.

Grice finished the game with 147 yards rushing while Lvoe had 103.

Sooners Face Small Problem

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Oklahoma faces a small problem in its bid for the Big Eight championship: 5-foot-8 Barry Sanders.

The eighth-ranked Sooners and No. 12 Oklahoma State meet for the 83rd time Saturday in a crucial game for each team's chances to win the Big Eight. Oklahoma, 7-1 overall and 4-0 in the conference, plays the other Big Eight leader, Nebraska, 8-1 and 4-0, on Nov. 19.

The Cowboys are 6-1 and 3-1 but have lost to Nebraska.

Oklahoma must contain the nation's highest-scoring offense and the Sooners are hoping their defense, ranked first in the Big Eight against the run, can control Sanders, averaging more than 200 yards a game rushing.

"They're one-dimensional. Think about it," Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer said. "If they can't have the running game with Barry Sanders, what do they do?"

Switzer said stopping Sanders would help the Sooners contain quarterback Mike Gundy, who has passed for 1,494 yards.

"If they can run it and throw it, we've got some problems," said Switzer, 14-1 lifetime against Oklahoma State. "If we can't handle him in the running game, we can't do what we've done in the other games, use five defensive backs."

Nebraska, ranked seventh, is favored by 27 points over Iowa State on Saturday, but the Cornhuskers insist they're not looking ahead to the showdown with Oklahoma.

"When you look at the trouble we had with Missouri and the fact Iowa State beat Missouri in Columbia, you've got to figure we've got our work cut out for us," Nebraska coach Tom Osborne said. The Cornhuskers beat Missouri 26-18 last Saturday.

In other games involving Top Ten teams on Saturday, No. 1 Notre Dame plays host to Rice; No. 2 Southern California is at home against California; Miami, Fla., ranked third, entertains Tulsa; fourth-ranked West Virginia is at Cincinnati, No. 5 Florida St. is at No. 15 South Carolina; No. 6 UCLA is on the road against Oregon; No. 9 Auburn is at home against Southern Mississippi, and No. 10 Wyoming plays host to Texas-El Paso.

Rounding out Saturday's Top Twenty games, 11th-ranked Arkansas is at Baylor; No. 13 Louisiana State is on the road against 18th-ranked Alabama; No. 14 Michigan stays home for Minnesota; No. 16 Syracuse plays host to Navy; 17th-ranked Clemson is at home against North Carolina; No. 19 Georgia plays Florida at Jacksonville; No. 20 Indiana is at Illinois, and Brigham Young, also ranked 20th, is at San Diego State.

Also on Saturday, Air Force travels to West Point for its 23rd meeting with Army. The Cadets lead the series 11-10-1.

The Iowa State Cyclones are just 4-4 and 2-2 this year and have lost 10 straight games to Nebraska. But Coach Jim Walden isn't ruling out an upset.

"You always have a chance against somebody that doesn't play up to snuff," Walden said.

Nebraska, however, has rarely been below par. The Cornhuskers are averaging 386.6 yards a game rushing, second best in the nation, and have outscored opponents 409-163.

Iowa State also must rebound from a poor performance last week when Bret Oberg threw six interceptions in a 24-12 loss to Colorado.

"We set a goal for Saturday," Oberg said. "We want to have no turnovers. Mistakes killed us against Colorado and my performance was certainly something I won't want to remember when I'm 50 years of age."

Oklahoma State has thrived on opponents' mistakes this season, forcing 25 turnovers while committing only 12.

"Obviously they can score a lot of points from four-down territory and they can score from a long way," Switzer said. "They can score a lot of points if we do that (self-destruct)."

Cowboys coach Pat Jones said Gundy, who has struggled against Oklahoma, must have a big game.

"They've all got to play well, but I do think that Gundy has got to perform well. He has to make good decisions," said Jones. "I'm not putting the entire burden on Mike's shoulders, but I think Mike's got to play well."

The Sooners have dominated Oklahoma State over the years, leading the series 64-12-6. But no one can predict whether Oklahoma will handle the Cowboys' explosive offense.

"If I had a lot of money to bet, this is one game I'd stay away from," Gundy said.

Blyleven Traded

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANAHEIM, Calif. — It took nearly 19 years and 254 victories, but Bert Blyleven has finally landed a few minutes from home.

"I don't know how to express how much this means to me," Blyleven said Thursday at a news conference after the announcement of his trade by the Minnesota Twins to the California Angels. "I've dreamt about this since I was growing up in Garden Grove."

The 37-year-old right-hander was traded to the Angels along with right-hander Kevin Trudeau in exchange for three minors leaguers — pitchers Mike Cook and Rob Wassenaar and outfielder Paul Sorrento.

The Twins traded Blyleven under the threat of free agency. Blyleven had until Friday night to file for free agency, a move he said he would've taken had talks broken down between general managers Mike Port of the Angels and Andy MacPhail of the Twins.

Blyleven went through five team changes during his career, including two stints in Minnesota. Each time, the resident of Villa Park, an Anaheim suburb, hoped to be routed to the Angels.

"It has taken only 19 years into my career to get here," he said.

He arrives at the apparent sunset of that career. He is coming off his worst season, when he had a 10-17 record with a 5.43 earned run average. The 17 losses matched his career high and the ERA was 2.18 above his career mark.

"I was reasonably certain I'd get here ever since Andy (MacPhail) told me he was talking with Port, a few days after the season," Blyleven said. "I went through so many emotional ups and downs. I didn't want to get overly excited, because I'd gone through this three, four other times when things didn't work out."

To The Sports Editor:

Once again the East Carolina administration has shown what a class organization it has really become. My heart goes out to Art Baker who is a class individual who has brought integrity to our athletic program in the true sense of student-athletes and has never let wins and losses come before his beliefs. This may have cost him his job, but if I were speaking to Art right now I would tell him to hold his head up and be proud of the accomplishments you have made at East Carolina University. Our fans are very grateful. Also we are very grateful for the excellent manner in which Dave Hart, athletic director, handled a very delicate situation and his wisdom to keep Art Baker on in a capacity at our university.

East Carolina University's future has never been brighter because of the two individuals I have mentioned and right now I have never been prouder of my alma mater. You have my full support. We are in very good hands.

Patrick Jones
Greenville

To The Sports Editor:

It was no surprise to learn Art Baker resigned as head football coach at East Carolina University. No coach, not even Barry Switzer of Oklahoma, could have had a winning season at ECU with the impossible schedule that has been imposed on them. I don't blame Mr. Baker one bit for resigning.

Why doesn't the athletic department, plus whomever else that deals with scheduling, come down out of the clouds and join a conference or schedule teams that they realistically have a chance of beating.

Believe me, ECU is not UNC or N.C. State, so why don't they stop trying to be like them and be themselves.

Spivey Still Holds Lead On Panel

Woody Peele

Vickie Spivey continues to lead the race this year, but Tim Chandler turned in the best record this past week, missing only two of our 10 games.

Spivey has improved her record to 78-28 on the season, and holds a four-game lead over second place Tom Baines, who is in at 74-32.

Tim Morris is in third place at 73-33, while Tim and I are tied for fourth with 71-35 records. Greg Laudick continues to come along behind at 66-40.

This is the final week of the regular season for high school football, and only two more weeks remain after this in the regular season of football — for the most part. Then, it's on to the bowls and our final picks of the year.

Our high school picks last week turned out with six right and two wrong bringing us to 55-21 on the year.

Believe it or not, much of the playoff picture in the area is set — or in not set, at least is fairly clear. Both Rose and Northeastern have clinched 4-A playoff berths; it's just a question of which will be one and two. Our panel will look that way.

In the 3-A ranks, Washington and Havelock are in at two and one, respectively, and Conley has a chance with a win tonight. In 2-A, Ayden-Grifton is in, and tonight's games will decide who else goes. North Pitt, Greene Central and Farmville all still have chances.

In the 1-A ranks, Jamesville is in and Chocowinity has an outside, slim chance.

Conley travels to East Carteret with a playoff spot on the line. The winner of the game will take the Coastal Conference's number three playoff position. Conley could just about have sewn up a spot last week with a victory over Washington, but fell short, putting Washington in. East Carteret, after a slow start, has been playing well of recent, and I must go with the Mariners to win this one, 21-14.

North Pitt plays host to Pamlico. The Hurricanes are out of the playoff picture, but could knock the Panthers out. North Pitt, with a win, would take the league's number two spot and eliminate Farmville Central. The Panthers should be ready for this one, 28-0.

Showdown Coming Among Track And Field Powers

By Steve Wilstein
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — A showdown is coming on the power of track and field's ruling bodies to maintain their boycott of South Africa, and already the words are getting nasty.

The dispute is about freedom and oppression, for Americans and South Africans, and has as much to do with money as morality.

The Athletics Congress, track's governing body in the United States, has scheduled a hearing in Chicago on Nov. 18 to thrash out the issues and, probably, suspend a dozen U.S. athletes who recently violated a ban on competition in South Africa.

The athletes, coaches and organizer of the trip haven't decided whether even to go to the hearing before a three-member panel, but they're pretty sure that won't be the end of the case.

Count on this one going to federal court eventually, and don't bet against the athletes beating TAC just as Stanford athletes won a decision against the National Collegiate Athletic Association's drug-testing policy.

The subjects are vastly different, but the underlying issues are the same: the protection of rights guaranteed in the Constitution.

"We were looking for this confrontation and we're welcoming it," says Dick Tomlinson, the tour's organizer who is connected with wealthy sports sponsors in South Africa. "I think long term we're headed for the courts, just like the Stanford case."

Tomlinson says his goal is to get South Africa, which has been banned from the Olympics since 1960, back into international competition because "sport is apolitical" and athletes should be free to compete and earn a living anywhere.

"I don't think too much of East Germany or some other countries we compete with, but we can't get into prioritizing around the world and excluding some because of governmental policy," he says.

To Carol Cady, American record-holder in the women's discus and former Olympian who went to South Africa, the dispute stems from the "hypocritical" boycott by track and Olympic officials who otherwise decry mixing politics with sports.

Cady, a Stanford graduate, wanted to see South Africa herself, learn about its problems first hand, and earn a quick $30,000 or so before she retires from a sport that has paid her precious little over the past eight years.

She felt the three multi-racial meets last month were "a positive exchange," but when she got home she heard angry, anonymous messages on her phone recorder and criticism from some friends.

To TAC officials, the central issue is a violation of the rules — Americans competing in a non-sanctioned meet in a country expelled from the International Amateur Athletics Federation in 1976 for its racist apartheid policies.

If the IAAF says no meets in South Africa, TAC, the group's representative body in the United States, claims it has no choice but to suspend any athlete who competes there.

Yet the IAAF originally placed that sanction on South Africa for economic, not moral, reasons. Certainly IAAF members abhorred apartheid, but they were more concerned about all other African nations boycotting the Olympics and other international meets if South Africa remained in the IAAF.

There are more Kenyan, Ugandan and Nigerian track stars than South Africans, and the IAAF didn't want to alienate a continent for one country, risk disruptions at all meets and loss of sponsors.

Some critics of the American athletes' South African trip say the tour was shameful and the athletes should be banned.

Sydney Maree, a South African-born black who competed for the United States in the 5,000 meters in Seoul, says the tour gave "the appearance of legitimacy to South Africa's position."

Brooks Johnson, coach at Stanford, a black man, and not one of those who went on the tour, thinks that sort of "knee-jerk" reaction is ludicrous. "The issue is whether citizens of the United States have the right to go there, and they clearly do," he says.

"The whole idea of protecting a person's rights comes from my point of view as a black man," he says. "I don't think a person's civil rights should be impinged upon because of a trend ... a quasi-boycott that is only conveniently applied or not applied."

Tennis players, golfers and business people are free to go to South Africa. Not so track and field athletes.

Johnson defends the rights of Cady, shot putter John Powell, former world-record holder Tom Petranoff, hurdler Milan Stewart, middle distance runners James Robinson and Ruth Wosocki and others who competed in South Africa, but he says he's not interested in their "platitudes" about the country.

"It's no different from (the late Olympic czar) Avery Brundage going to Nazi Germany in the 1930s and coming back and saying, 'Hey, the trains run on time and the streets are clean,'" Johnson says. "How can you be there for three weeks, spend most of the time in competition and know anything about anybody or anything?"

Cady, however, isn't an apologist for South Africa.

"I'm not going to make a political statement, because I'm an athlete, and I didn't mean to make a political statement by going over there," said the 26-year-old medical technician.

Tomlinson, of Yuba City, Calif., says his tour, and another planned for next spring, are "the start of a change" that will see South Africa return to the Olympics within eight years.

Apartheid "doesn't bother me a bit," he says. "because I see progress at a very rapid pace. Apartheid is overstated and not very well understood outside South Africa. I'm not saying it's right by any means, but it's no different from the way the United States treated blacks and Indians for a long time."

Blood Doping Detection Said To Be Possible Now

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAUSANNE, Switzerland — Blood doping, until now safe from the chemical tests that can catch drug cheating in sports, finally may have met its match.

A pair of Scandinavian experts on the endurance-boosting practice told an international meeting on sports medicine Thursday that a revolutionary detection breakthrough had been made.

By measuring the amount of oxygen-carrying hemoglobin in the blood with the amount of the substance that would create the hemoglobin naturally, Drs. Tapio Videman of Finland and Inggard Lereim of Norway said new tests could prove without doubt when an athlete injects another person's blood to enhance performance.

In cases where an athlete takes a transfusion of his or her own blood, the physicians said, the accuracy of the tests was 50 percent. That was the accuracy of tests for muscle-building testosterone when they were introduced 12 years ago, the doctors said.

"There might always be the chance of missing someone who uses their own blood," Videman said. "But it is like smuggling. We do all we can to prevent smuggling, although some smuggling occurs, and taking blood would have the same preventative effect."

The announcement came on the first day of the General Association of International Sports Federations' annual meeting, which is focusing on sports medicine and particularly the problems of drugs.

Lereim, the doctor for the Norwegian Olympic Ski Team, and Videman, an orthopedic researcher, offered no statistics to support their claims and were greeted by skepticism from delegates when they urged other governing bodies to follow the lead of the International Ski Federation in requiring blood tests. Drug tests are conducted with urine samples.

The first international sports event to conduct blood-doping tests will be the World Cross-Country Ski Championship in Lahti, Finland, next February.

But both doctors, who have spent 16 years between them on the blood-doping research, said they were sure of a major breakthrough.

"We believe this is revolutionary," Lereim said.

The association, representing 72 sports including all Olympic events except ice hockey, heard the head of the International Olympic Committee call for government help in winning the war on drugs.

"Doping is an acute problem. But it is a problem that we are starting to overcome," IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch said. "But we must be united with others in our fight. We need the help of the international sports federations and most importantly the help of governments."

It also was told by Dr. Albert Dirix, a Belgian physician and a member of the IOC medical commission, that drug use by athletes was entering a "third phase" involving relatively new substances.

Dirix noted that half of the 10 positive drug results at this summer's Olympics involved diuretics or beta blockers, drugs that were not even on the banned list when the previous Games were held in 1984.

Diuretics help weight loss, while beta blockers calm heart rate.

Blood doping is banned by the IOC, although it has said until now that no foolproof method to detect it existed.

It long has been rumored that athletes in endurance sports such as cross-country skiing or long-distance cycling used blood doping, although it has never been proven.

But Lereim and Videman said those days were over, and none too soon.

"In the case of cross-country skiing, it is more effective in my mind than all the other doping methods put together," Videman said.

His colleague used harsher language.

"It's very risky. It's unethical. It's illegal. It's a crime," Lereim said.

Conference delegates peppered the doctors with questions about their call for widespread blood testing. Many argued that requiring blood tests might violate religious beliefs or personal freedom.

Hearns In Bout

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — Thomas Hearns, fighting again in the shadow of Sugar Ray Leonard, meets veteran James Kinchen tonight in a super middleweight fight that could propel Hearns into a Leonard rematch.

Hearns has vowed to bring back the "Hit Man" of his prime and needs to look impressive to keep his dream alive of getting a rematch of his famous September 1981 fight with Leonard.

Leonard, who fights Monday night against Donny Lalonde, will be watching from ringside as Hearns tries to rebound from a third-round knockout loss in June to Iran Barkley and regain the form that has seen him knock out 38 of his 48 opponents.

"I'm going back to what made me the 'Hit Man,'" Hearns said. "I'm going out there and taking them out as soon as possible."

Two other title fights are on the card, with International Boxing Federation middleweight champion Michael Nunn defending his title for the first time against Argentina's Juan Domingo Roldan and IBF junior middleweight champion Matthew Hilton meeting No. 1-ranked Robert Hines.

The fight card from the Las Vegas Hilton will be televised via pay-per-view beginning about 6 p.m. PST.

Kinchen, a San Diego fighter with a record of 45-4-2 with 32 knockouts, is a late replacement for Fulgencio Obeljemias, the World Boxing Council super middleweight champion, who pulled out of the fight three weeks ago with a fractured rib.

The change in opponents cost Hearns a chance to earn an unprecedented fifth title — something Leonard can do by winning two titles Monday night against Lalonde — although the newly-formed World Boxing Organization says it plans to make the winner of the fight its first champion.

"I think it's going to be a legitimate title," said the 30-year-old Hearns, the only fighter to hold titles in four different weight classes. "Anytime a man (Leonard) can go and win two titles with one fight, why can't I win one title?"

More important to Hearns than any title, however, is a possible rematch with Leonard, a fight he has been chasing for more than seven years.

Leonard has said he is done retiring and plans to fight again within a year if he beats Lalonde, and Hearns thinks a rematch of their first fight would be a natural.

"I'm hoping and praying that it does happen," said Hearns, who will earn $750,000 to $150,000 for Kinchen. "I think this will be the one thing that will draw him (Leonard) in."

Leonard has referred to Friday's fights at the Las Vegas Hilton as "only an undercard" to his Monday fight at Caesars Palace, though Hearns insists Leonard is not the only star attraction.

Reid Surprised

CHAPEL HILL — J.R. Reid says the pain from a bruise on his left foot wasn't nagging or bothersome. But the All-America basketball player at North Carolina was in for a surprise.

"I really didn't think too much about it," Reid said Tuesday night. "The bruise was small, and there was just a little pain. But I told our trainer, Marc Davis, about it last week, and he said I ought to have it checked out."

X-rays revealed the small bruise was a symptom of a big problem — a stress fracture of a metatarsal bone in his foot — and the only safe option was surgery. That meant the 6-foot-9 junior probably would miss the first eight weeks of the 1988-89 season.

"It was quite a shock," Reid said. "I mean, the worst injury I've ever had before was a twisted ankle."

"The doctors said it was not a break, but that it could be in time," he said. "They said the surgery would be for the best, that if I had it and it was successful, I would not have to worry about it the rest of my career."

Reid, a member of the U.S. Olympic basketball team, sat out a couple of games in Seoul after his foot was stepped on during one of the early-round contests. But he said that injury was not the cause of the fracture.

"The doctors said that it had developed over a long, long time," Reid said. "It came from playing a lot of basketball."

Former UNC star Michael Jordan experienced a similar injury in his second year with the NBA's Chicago Bulls. And it was a stress fracture that caused former N.C. State standout Derek Whittenburg to miss most of the 1982-83 season with the Wolfpack.

During the operation, doctors inserted a screw into Reid's foot to provide stability. And Reid said the screw might become a permanent physical fixture.

"I'm gonna leave it in," Reid said with a smile. "I don't like the thought of going under the knife again. No more surgery."

Reid said he might be able to play in about six weeks. But doctors and UNC coach Dean Smith disagree, and the Heels are planning on Reid being back in early January.

How will Reid's absence affect Carolina?

Cochran, Pavin Are Tied

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TUCSON, Ariz. — Russ Cochran and Corey Pavin took different views of their positions atop the standings after the first round of the $600,000 Tucson Open Golf Tournament.

"I'm not trying to set any records. I just want to play good solid golf," Cochran, a left-hander, said Thursday after his 7-under-par 65 had set the first-round pace. Pavin, who flirted with a PGA Tour scoring record in his recent, runaway victory at San Antonio, had a much more specific target.

"There's only one thing that will let me in (the Nabisco Championships with a $3 million purse) next week. And that's to win this tournament." Pavin said after a 66 had left him one shot off the lead.

"That's the only way I can get in, to win this week. That's what my mind is set on. That's certainly my goal this week," said Pavin, who can qualify for the elite, 30-man field at the Nabisco only by taking the $108,000 first prize in this tournament.

Mark Calcavecchia, South African David Frost and Payne Stewart were tied with Pavin at 66 and five others were at 67 as ideal conditions produced some exceptionally low scoring on the TPC course at Star-Pass.

"The weather is perfect," Pavin said. "The course is in great shape. So you're going to have low scores. Everybody expects the good conditions, so they're more aggressive."

Tobin, Tomczak Fill Big Shoes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Vince Tobin and Mike Tomczak, both used to filling big shoes, face hefty challenges on Sunday. They can be thankful that the pressure might be eased by weak opposition. With Mike Ditka hospitalized by a mild heart attack — he was upgraded to fair condition Thursday — Tobin was named acting head coach for the Chicago Bears' game with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. Tomczak once again must step in at quarterback for an injured Jim McMahon.

Luckily for the Bears, 7-2, the opponent is Tampa Bay, 2-7 and tied for the basement in the NFC Central that Chicago leads.

It will be Tobin's debut as a head coach in the NFL. But it isn't the first time he's been in the spotlight — Tobin, whose brother Bill is the Bears' vice president of personnel, joined the team after the 1985 Super Bowl championship, replacing Buddy Ryan, who left to coach the Philadelphia Eagles.

"I talked to Ditka, and the consensus of the players and the assistant coaches was that the best person for the job was Vince Tobin," Bears president Mike McCaskey said. "We want to keep the train on the right track."

That train was derailed in New England last Sunday, falling 30-7. Still, Tobin's defense is No. 1 in the league.

"A lot of coaches on this team could have done the job, so to be chosen is a privilege," Tobin said of his temporary elevation. "My job is to keep the Bears playing winning, successful football."

Ditka was reported "sitting up today and joking and being in real good spirits," spokeswoman Pamela Crotty of Lake Forest Hospital said Thursday. Doctors have been optimistic about Ditka's recovery, but he won't be back on the sidelines for quite a while.

McMahon will be sidelined for about four weeks with a right knee injury. He has never played a full season for Chicago in his seven-year career.

So Tomczak, who has started 13 games in McMahon's offense, moves in again.

"There are seven games to go and I have a lot of confidence," Tomczak said. "I don't know if Jim will be back at all. I'm going to play. I have all the confidence in the world in my ability."

Tomczak signed as a free agent out of Ohio State in 1985. He has an 11-2 record as the starting quarterback.

"Hopefully, I'll be more confident and we can win our last seven games," Tomczak said. "I want to be the Orel Hershiser of the National Football League."

Sunday's schedule is dominated by intradivisional matchups. In addition to Tampa Bay-Chicago, Dallas is at the New York Giants; Detroit at Minnesota; Miami at New England; Pittsburgh at Cincinnati; the New York Jets at Indianapolis; Kansas City at Denver; and the Los Angeles Raiders at San Diego.

Also, it's San Francisco at Phoenix; Green Bay at Atlanta; the Los Angeles Rams at Philadelphia; New Orleans at Washington; and Buffalo at Seattle.

On Monday night, Cleveland is at Houston.

The Raiders, despite their 4-5 record, are just a game behind first-place Seattle in the suddenly weak AFC West. Coach Mike Shanahan doesn't think it's a bad spot.

"We're tied with the Broncos now, Seattle's one game ahead," Shanahan said. "We play Seattle twice, we play Denver once. We control our own destiny."

The Raiders also hold an edge in divisional play — they've won all four games with AFC West teams.

"It's a must-win game," Shanahan said of the night contest. "That's the way our team is going to approach it. Right now, we have to approach every game we play as a must-win."

San Diego, 2-7, isn't in quite the same position. Chargers coach Al Saunders knows why the Raiders are ahead of his team — and still alive in the division.

"They're the most talented team in our division. Just look at their players," Saunders said. "If you had a door you could open and there were their running backs and there were ours, which would you choose? Bo Jackson and Marcus Allen, two Heisman Trophy winners, or our backs (Gary Anderson and Lionel James)?"

"We have to get a great deal better in terms of where we are. It's not just the physical talent. It's the maturity, the experience."

Is Saunders writing off the game? Are his players conceding?

"They understand we can win if we play above our heads and things happen to us, if we don't turn the ball over, all those things," Saunders said. "Everybody on this football team would like to see great players come in here, guys of the stature of John Elway and James Lofton and Bo Jackson and Willie Gault. If you've got the best players, you've got the best chance to win."

NBA Asks Fateful Question As 1988-89 Season Opens

Can Lakers Be Beaten?

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Are the Los Angeles Lakers beatable in 1988-89?

They became the first team since 1969 to repeat as NBA champion last season, and they added free agent Orlando Woolridge during the off-season, giving them their deepest bench of the 1980s.

But with three teams — Utah, Dallas and Detroit — taking the Lakers to the seven-game limit in the playoffs, there's hope around the league that Magic Johnson, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Co. can be taken.

"There are at least 10 or 11 teams I think that have a legitimate chance of winning the whole thing," Lakers coach Pat Riley said. "But I do guarantee one thing, our players are not tired of winning games. They are going to give us a legitimate chance of winning it again."

The Mavericks, who lost to Los Angeles in the Western Conference finals, gets the first chance to send a message tonight when they play host to the Lakers in Dallas.

The nationally televised game (TBS) is one of 10 NBA openers. Elsewhere, it's New York at Boston, Atlanta at New Jersey, the Los Angeles Clippers at Philadelphia, Cleveland at Charlotte, Milwaukee at Indiana, Detroit at Chicago, Houston at Denver, Seattle at Utah and Phoenix at Portland.

Charlotte joins Miami as expansion teams. The Heat plays its first game at home Saturday night against the Clippers.

Dallas coach John MacLeod is looking forward to the challenge of facing the Lakers.

"It's time for new blood and new excitement in the West and it might as well be us," MacLeod said.

But while the Lakers added Woolridge to their already formidable cast, the Mavericks are standing pat with last season's Western Conference finalist.

"There's a side of me that feels that we needed to do something," General Manager Norm Sonju said.

"It's been very hard on me personally to see a couple of teams being able to go out and do things."

"But there's another side of me that says, 'Look, you don't ever want to make a move. You should only make a move to improve.' I want to move only to improve," Sonju said.

Everyone in the West still regards the Lakers as the team to beat.

"I think everybody better look out or they'll repeat again," Golden State coach Don Nelson said. "They're an awesome team right now and I'd warn the rest of the league they better look out."

Denver's Doug Moe said the Lakers have a Midas touch.

"They can get guys off the scrap heap and keep them for a year or two and they're pretty good, where if you put them with another team they'd be in the tank," Moe said. "Like Mychal Thompson, he was struggling with San Antonio, struggling with Portland, then he goes to L.A. and plays pretty good."

"The Lakers have that supreme confidence," Seattle's Bernie Bickerstaff said. "They play collectively in an era of me-first attitudes."

Cleveland, the only team with a perfect record in the preseason, was only 11-30 on the road last season, a situation the Cavaliers will have to improve on if they want to rise in the tough Central Division.

At Charlotte, the Cavaliers will face an emotional opponent in the expansion Hornets, who are led by former All-Star Kelly Tripucka, veteran Robert Reid and first-round draft pick Rex Chapman.

For the opener, all employees of the team will be wearing tuxedos and formal clothes, and fans are being encouraged to wear them, too.

Outside the sold-out Charlotte Coliseum, with a capacity of 23,500, there will be a fireworks display and a jazz band, while the Charlotte Symphony will perform inside the arena.

The atmosphere will be just as festive at Miami on Saturday night.

Television star Don Johnson will introduce the Heat's new dance team, followed by a laser light and fireworks shot and Ben Vereen singing "America The Beautiful."

NBA Commissioner David Stern will present the first ball at the openers for both Charlotte and Miami.

"David Stern has never been to one of my opening games," said Reid, who played 10 seasons for Houston before being acquired by Charlotte in the expansion draft.

"Usually he shows up to give someone a ring. The ball will have my signature on it and will go to the Hall of Fame. I knew I could get there sooner or later."

Failing Entrepreneur Seeks Aid Through Hunger Strike

By Larry Neumeister
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Struck down by bad luck and last year's stock market crash, a once-rising star among entrepreneurs is trying desperately to save his business with a 12-day-old hunger strike in an illegally parked van opposite the New York Stock Exchange.

"I've come to the seat of capitalism, the New York Stock Exchange, to be heard," Jan Stuart said Thursday.

Stuart said he has not eaten since he left his Cliffside Park, N.J., apartment on Oct. 24 to live in a van on Wall Street, just feet away from where George Washington was sworn in as the first president of the United States.

The 34-year-old owner of Jan Stuart Skin Care Co., who was once featured on the cover of Entrepreneur Magazine, was shown skeptically at first as police ticketed the van for each of the first four days and passers-by told him he was crazy.

But as the days passed — and Stuart's weight dropped from 190 pounds to 175 — police left him alone and on-lookers started writing encouraging notes on his van, which features posters that read: "Wake Up America" and "Help Me Save My Company."

Dozens of people have already signed a petition, attached to his van, that Stuart hopes to present to the stock exchange to show that there is concern for the small business owner in America.

"I have to do something drastic to keep my business going. I'm desperately in need of funding," Stuart said. "Small business people need help. We are the future of this country. Big business has put me down. In the small business world, anything can cause destruction," he added.

Eight years ago, Stuart invested $2,000 in a line of natural-ingredient men's shaving and skin care products, and turned it into a business that had annual sales in the millions.

As his product began showing up on the shelves of Bloomingdale's, A&S, Lord & Taylor, Macy's and other major department stores, he attracted national media attention.

He built a staff of 60 workers and expanded his line to 30 skin care products for men sold in 2,000 department stores in the United States, Canada, England, Australia, Puerto Rico and the Caribbean. The Entrepreneur article called him the "Father of the Men's Skin Care Industry."

But Stuart's luck turned when he attempted to raise $9.2 million so the company could continue to grow. He said a major underwriter went out of business and a second company that offered necessary financing went down in the stock market crash last year.

Some companies showed interest in teaming up with him but "corporate constipation" got in the way, he said, meaning he would have to wait until lengthy feasibility studies were completed.

"My dream has been to build a business, become a viable part of the American economy," Stuart said. Now, Stuart said he is left with a $2 million debt and just enough of his products to supply mail-order clients.

In a full-page advertisement in The New York Times on Aug. 3, Stuart pleaded with the public to "Please Help Me Save My Company!" He said the ad resulted in hundreds of letters and phone calls but no financing.

Now, he sits in the van he has rented for $600 a week, outfitted with a bed and toilet, and watches as people sign their name and offer opinions on his plight.

"Please eat," wrote Lorne Williams. "Wish you all you are wishing for comes true, love you, mom," reads another note.

Michael J. Basel, who works on the floor of the stock exchange, tapped on his window and shouted him luck. "He's trying to say, 'I've got an idea. I want you to take me to the moon,'" Basel said.

"Guys like him aren't going to make it right now," Basel said, explaining that Wall Street is not funding risky ventures until it is clear which way the economy is headed after Election Day.

Doug Colitz, a 23-year-old Coast Guard worker in New York, said Stuart "must be out of his mind."

"There's a lot less fortunate people in the world than him. Business comes and goes every day in New York. It's survival of the fittest. He's a loser, but, heh, he's got some spunk."

that process meat and poultry by focusing inspection efforts where they are needed most," said Lester M. Crawford, head of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service.

Crawford said the proposal would put into effect the Processed Products Inspection Act of 1986. The law allows the new targeted inspection program to operate only for six years, at which time it would be reviewed by Congress before being renewed.

"Under the proposal, USDA would increase inspection at processing plants where records indicate a need for additional oversight," he said. "By the same token, plants with good records of compliance could be visited less than daily."

The program could begin by mid-1989, but it likely would take several years for the policy shift to be completed.

Slaughter plants, where livestock and poultry are killed, would not be affected by the plan. Those plants still would be under continuous inspection.

Department officials, who once called the program "discretionary inspection" of processing plants, changed the name in the proposal to "improved processing inspection."

The proposal was hailed by a major industry organization, the American Meat Institute, and criticized harshly by spokesmen for consumers and labor.

In a statement, the AMI said the proposal "would adopt the risk-based approach advocated by the National Academy of Sciences" and would focus inspection "at those critical points in the process that pose the greatest risk to public health."

NASA Expects Shortages That May Ground Shuttle Supplier For Booster Products Closing

By Harry F. Rosenthal
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — For the second time this year, the space agency is facing a supply shortage that could ground space shuttles in 1990, and it is looking nervously for other potential gaps in critical materials.

The country's only manufacturer of rayon yarn used in shuttle booster rocket nozzles, Avtex Fibers, began closing its plant in Virginia on Thursday — only two days after announcing its plans to do so.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration faced a similar problem in May when the Henderson, Nev., plant of Pacific Engineering and Production Co. was destroyed in an explosion and fire. Pepcon, as the firm is called, was one of only two producers of ammonium perchlorate, the oxidizer in the solid fuel that powers the shuttle's booster rockets.

At this point, NASA is guaranteed enough booster rocket fuel to power nine flights and has enough rayon for 10. That would take the agency through this year when only one more flight is scheduled and through next with seven on the calendar.

No one at NASA headquarters or at the agency's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., would say how many other materials used for shuttle flights have only a single supplier.

However, sources who declined to be identified said shuttle program boss Richard Truly would probably order a thorough study to identify them and the potential for a cutoff of supply.

Shuttle builder Rockwell International Corp. alone depends on more than 250 subcontractors nationwide for various systems and components. Some are single-source.

For example, one metal — NARLOY-Z — is a specially developed alloy used by the firm's Rocketdyne division in the engine's combustion chamber and it is made by only a single licensee. Similarly, only one foundry makes the engine turbine blades and there is only one set of tooling for those.

The presidential commission that investigated the Challenger disaster criticized the space agency for not having enough spares on hand, which fostered a practice of borrowing parts from one shuttle for use on another.

That problem has not been completely solved. After the flight of Discovery last month, engineers found evidence of a leak in one engine. They had to borrow an engine from shuttle Columbia to prepare Discovery for its next mission.

Rocketdyne's Joyce Lincoln said there are 16 engines in existence: three each on Discovery and Atlantis, two new units undergoing acceptance testing, one being assembled after overhaul and seven undergoing improvements. That situation is not likely to ease until spring.

The impact of the fuel and nozzle problems won't be felt for more than a year. An allocation board that included the Defense Department, NASA and other government agencies met recently to divide up ammonium perchlorate production.

"We have been allocated sufficient quantities for nine flight sets," said Rocky Raab, spokesman for Morton Thiokol in Utah which builds the rocket boosters that flank the orbiter.

"The allocation board meets again in early 1989 to make additional allocations, so presuming Pepcon gets the plant going again in early or mid-1989 that would mitigate that situation," he said.

Only the late-November flight of Atlantis remains this year and there are seven more missions scheduled for 1989.

Pepcon is rebuilding its plant in Henderson and has broken ground for a new facility for finishing work in Cedar City, Utah. "Presuming everything goes as planned, our concerns about the fuel are minimized," Raab said.

It is too soon to know what will be done about Avtex which began closing its plant at Front Royal, Va., on Thursday and letting its 1,300 employees go. "Production, for all intents and purposes, is stopping today," said Avtex spokesman Nick Nichols. "People will be working for the next couple of days to shut it down and secure it."

Ten-Year-Old Shoots Bus Driver In Head

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PORT ARTHUR, Texas — A 10-year-old boy who may have feared being reported for truancy shot a school bus driver in the head, critically wounding her, police said.

Russell Jean Hampton, 40, was shot in the base of the skull Thursday with a small-caliber handgun, police said. She remained in critical condition early today at St. Mary's Hospital.

The boy was taken into custody at his grandparents' house, near the site of the shooting, after his grandmother called police. He could go before a state district judge today and face charges, authorities said.

"I talked to one of the assistant superintendents who is familiar with the boy, and he said everyone was quite surprised," said Joe M. Pitts, superintendent of the Port Arthur schools. "He was an all-around student and did a good job participating in school."

The youth was seen running from the bus shortly before Ms. Hampton was found, police said. Another bus driver found her slumped over the steering wheel and called an ambulance.

The shooting occurred after Ms. Hampton had dropped off students at Dick Dowling Elementary School and was returning to the district's bus storage barn, police said.

"Apparently this boy had missed the bus earlier in the day and she had seen him riding his bicycle along the road on her way back," said police Lt. J.W. Fontenot. "We don't know whether he was riding his bike to school or playing hooky."

Police speculated that Ms. Hampton had told the boy to get on the bus, with the intention of returning him to school and possibly reporting him for truancy.

Fontenot said the boy also may have been afraid school officials would discover the weapon. A .22-caliber handgun and the boy's bicycle were recovered from the bus, Fontenot said.

The shooting victim's father, Russell DeJohn of Port Arthur, said he was shocked by the incident. "She was a housewife and a mother and she never bothered anybody," DeJohn said.

No Arrests

MIAMI (AP) — City commissioners have rejected a proposal allowing police to arrest homeless people, jail them for 10 days and fine them up to $100.

"We're catching hell for it," Commissioner J.L. Plummer said of the proposal, which was unanimously rejected Thursday but will be reconsidered Dec. 15. "We have existing laws that can be enforced."

The ordinance, aimed at curbing the annual influx of homeless from Northern cities, would have banned sleeping on sidewalks and cooking and urinating in streets and parks.

After rejecting the measure, the five commissioners requested a less harsh revision and promised to appoint a task force to help street people. The revision should not call for the arrest of homeless people, officials said.

"That's out," Mayor Xavier Suarez said. "It actually can be viewed as an attempt to harass the homeless."

The proposed ordinance had caused an uproar among advocates for the homeless. Critics said the city was trying to clean up the streets near the Miami Arena before the city's new NBA team debuts there Saturday.

The Arena is a few blocks from the city's overflowing shelter for the homeless, whose director, Brother Paul Johnson, applauded the commission decision.

Starving Cattle Found

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORNEY, Texas — Thousands of starving cattle found along with more than 60 carcasses at a northern Texas ranch had been moved there because of the drought and probably had not been fed since July, authorities said.

"Their ribs were showing. A lot of them were completely down. Some can't even see — they're starved so much that they're blind," said Kaufman County Sheriff Robert Harris. He called it the worst case of animal cruelty he had ever seen.

The discovery of the malnourished Santa Gertrudis cattle Wednesday has prompted a search for the person responsible for their condition.

"It isn't something that happened overnight," Harris said. "I'd say they haven't been fed since they've been up here" in July. "This has been progressing."

The King Ranch in southern Texas owned the estimated 3,000 cattle, but they had been under the care of a Dallas man, Harris said.

The cattle ended up in Forney because of the drought in southern Texas, said Ken York, who operates the American Livestock Management Co. of Marshall.

The person responsible for taking care of the cattle never notified the King Ranch of trouble when northern Texas also was stricken by drought, York said.

"The reports kept coming in and every indication was that things were OK," he said.

Feed has been brought to the site and Harris said authorities would care for them.

Some cattle were so malnourished they could not walk, and feed had to be put in front of them.

"They're high-bred cattle," Harris said. "They're Santa Gertrudis, they're not just scrub cattle." In the 1920s and 1930s, the King Ranch crossed Shorthorns and Brahmins to develop the Santa Gertrudis.

USDA Wants To Ease Inspections At Some Meat Processing Plants

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Agriculture Department is proposing to get tougher on inspections of the most troublesome meat and poultry processing plants but ease up on those with good records.

The prospective changes, announced on Thursday, were welcomed by the industry as an improvement in the inspection program's focus.

But consumer and labor groups assailed it, saying it would be like putting "the fox in charge of the chicken coop."

Thousands of plants that make hotdogs, beef stew, luncheon meats and scores of other processed items that include meat and poultry would be involved in the proposed program.

Over time, officials estimated, the USDA's inspection force of about 2,200 employees at the affected plants would be reduced by half by retirements and resignations.

The changes "would strengthen USDA's inspection in the 6,300 plants

Elderly Mistrust Vaccines

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Many elderly people who are fearful of adverse effects from flu vaccine or skeptical of its effectiveness don't get recommended annual flu shots, which could save thousands of lives, according to a government report.

About 60,000 deaths are reported from flu and pneumonia in the United States each year, mostly among people 65 and over, the national Centers for Disease Control said Thursday.

"Although safe, effective and inexpensive vaccines are available for these diseases, only about 22 percent (of people 65 and up nationwide) receive influenza vaccine annually," the CDC said.

For pneumococcal vaccine, designed to prevent pneumonia and its complications, the numbers are even lower: only 10 percent have ever received the one-time-only shot.

Influenza and pneumococcal vaccines are recommended by federal health officials for all persons 65 and over, because of seniors' increased risk of complications or death from pneumonia and flu.

One study conducted this summer in metropolitan Atlanta indicated the reason for low vaccine use among seniors may be mistrust of the vaccines, not ignorance.

Among 716 senior citizens surveyed in Fulton and DeKalb counties, 90 percent were aware of flu vaccine and 53 percent were aware of pneumococcal vaccine. But only 55 percent received annual flu shots, and only 38 percent had received pneumococcal vaccine.

"Many individuals may refuse the vaccines over concerns over adverse effects," said Dr. Walter W. Williams, a CDC immunization specialist. "If there's one thing that may influence someone to take or not take a vaccine, it's fear of side effects."

Seventy-three percent of the senior citizens in the Atlanta survey who were aware of influenza vaccine reported "negative attitudes" about it — usually the feeling that it causes illness, doesn't work, or isn't necessary, the CDC said.

"A lot of those fears are unfounded," Williams said, adding that today's flu vaccines are much safer than vaccines of a generation or two ago.

The negative attitudes remained even among those getting flu shots; half of those with such attitudes reported they'd had their flu shots anyway.

Study Shows Heavy Drinking May Increase The Risk Of Fatal Injuries

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Doctors are letting alcoholics use hospitals as "revolving doors" by ignoring their drinking problems, even though experience shows that alcoholism can be effectively treated, researchers reported today.

At a Connecticut hospital's emergency room, not a single patient was referred for alcohol evaluation or assistance out of 47 who were found to have at least double the legal blood-alcohol limit, the researchers said.

The subjects were among 346 motor-vehicle accident victims whose cases were reviewed at the unidentified hospital's trauma center, said the researchers, led by Dr. Grace Chang of Yale University School of Medicine in New Haven.

Only about one-fourth of the 346 patients were even tested for alcohol, with 53 of them testing positive, the researchers reported in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

Forty-seven had levels of at least 200 milligrams of alcohol per deciliter of blood — double the legal limit for drivers in Connecticut, the researchers said. Levels went as high as 550 milligrams per deciliter, they said.

Blood-alcohol levels of 200 milligrams per deciliter "are unusual in the course of ordinary social drinking" and are considered an indication that a drinker has "an alcohol problem, however infrequent his inebriation," the researchers said.

While unable to generalize about all physicians, the researchers said this study and others indicate that recognition of alcohol problems in hospital emergency departments "is limited, as is referral for treatment."

"Despite evidence that alcoholism treatment success rates can be as good as or better than those for many medical problems, alcoholics are permitted to use medical centers as revolving doors, with the witting and unwitting complicity of the institutions," the researchers said.

Studies show that when doctors advise patients that their alcohol consumption is dangerous, "there is a high probability that the patient will cut back on use of the drug," said an accompanying editorial in the Journal.

"Studies of patients treated for alcoholism show that brief relapse, peaking around six months after treatment, is common, but long-term improvement usually is the ultimate outcome," added the editorial by Dr. Julian R. Waller of the University of Vermont College of Medicine in Burlington.

A separate study in today's Journal found that people who usually consumed five to eight drinks per occasion were almost twice as likely to die of an injury as non-drinkers or those who consumed one or two.

That study also found that people who consumed nine or more drinks per occasion had more than triple the risk of the low-consumption groups.

"The important finding in this study is that what people tell us about alcohol use related strongly to their future risk of dying from an injury," said Dr. Robert F. Anda, co-author of the study and a researcher at the national Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

"We hope that this finding will help physicians become more involved in asking patients about their alcohol use," Anda added in a telephone interview Thursday.

Motor vehicle accidents accounted for about one-fourth of the deaths among the study's subjects, 13,251 adults who answered questions about their drinking habits and then were tracked for nine years.

Eighty-one subjects suffered fatal injuries — 24 in motor vehicle accidents, 20 in suicides, nine in homicides, six in falls, four in fires, three each in drownings and poisonings, and the others in miscellaneous ways, the researchers found.

Hispanics Leading Fall Into Poverty

By Jennifer Dixon
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Poverty among Hispanics has risen at a faster rate than for other ethnic groups over the past nine years, according to a study by a non-partisan research group.

"The current economic recovery appears to be benefiting Hispanics much less than other groups. Hispanics are the only racial or ethnic group whose poverty rate remains at or close to recession levels (of the early 1980s)," said Robert Greenstein, director of the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities.

The group's study found the percentage of Hispanics living in poverty grew from 21.6 percent in 1978 to 28.2 percent in 1987, while the poverty rate for whites grew from 8.7 percent to 10.5 percent, and from 30.6 percent to 33.1 percent for blacks. The poverty rate for all Americans increased from 11.4 percent in 1978 to 13.5 percent last year.

The center — a non-partisan, non-profit research organization that studies government spending, programs and public policy issues affecting low and moderate-income Americans — based its findings on data from the U.S. Census Bureau and Labor Department. It used 1978 as a comparison year with 1987 because national economic conditions, such as national and Hispanic unemployment rates, were nearly the same in both years.

During the nine-year period, the income of the typical Hispanic family fell nearly $1,600, after adjustment for inflation, compared with an increase of $276 for a white family and a decline of $854 for a black family, the study said.

As a result of declines in Hispanic earnings, the study said the median income for Hispanics equalled 62.9 percent of median family income for whites last year, the lowest percentage on record.

Hurt hardest by the increase in poverty and the earnings decline have been Hispanic married families, the study said. Their poverty rate grew by more than half, with fewer than one in eight families below the poverty level in 1978 compared with nearly one in five in poverty last year.

The study also found that two in five Hispanic children were living in poverty last year, or 39.6 percent, up from a rate of 27.2 percent in 1978.

Raul Yzaguirre, president of the National Council of La Raza, a Hispanic organization, said the study is further evidence Hispanics are the poorest community of people on a per capita basis.

He blamed the failure of the educational system to keep students in school and an increase in job discrimination for the rise in the poverty rate.

Greenstein blamed the increase in the poverty rate and the decline in earnings on several factors, including the sharp erosion in the value of the minimum wage, which at $3.35 per hour has remain unchanged since January 1981, while consumer prices have risen 38 percent over that period.

"Because Hispanic workers are more likely to be paid low wages than non-Hispanics, the lack of a minimum wage increase in nearly eight years has affected Hispanics with greater severity than it has affected the general population," the study said.

Major Cities File Suit To Protest 1990 Census Count

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — New York, Los Angeles and other major cities have sued the federal government claiming that undercounting in the 1990 census could cost them billions of dollars and deprive minorities of their political clout.

"This is one of the most important civil rights issues in the country today," said Peter Zimroth, New York City's chief attorney. "To the extent minorities, black and Hispanics in the inner cities are undercounted, their vote is diluted."

The cities contend in the suit, filed Thursday, that the Census Bureau was prepared to make adjustments to compensate for undercounting, particularly of minority groups, but that it was overruled last year by the Commerce Department, its parent body.

Congressional seats and federal grants are allocated on the basis of population. If an area is undercounted, it may have fewer representatives in the House and lose millions of dollars from Washington.

The census as now structured misses many members of minority groups and illegal aliens, the suit contends, because many of them do not respond to the mailed census forms.

The suit says they could be counted if census takers visited homes in selected areas and projected the results.

Also joining in the lawsuit were Chicago and Dade County, Fla., which includes Miami; as well as the states of California and New York; the U.S. Conference of Mayors; the National League of Cities; the League of United Latin American Citizens; and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The suit was filed in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn with the Department of Commerce, the Census Bureau and President Reagan among the defendants.

The Census Bureau has acknowledged it undercounts the population, although the best estimates suggest that only about 1 percent of the total was missed in the last 1980 census. But the bureau estimates the undercounting of blacks is 5 or 6 percentage points higher, since it is hard to reach the inner-city neighborhoods where many share addresses and distrust the government.

The Commerce Department referred all calls to the Justice Department. Amy Brown, a spokeswoman, said the department had not yet received the complaint and therefore could not comment.

In Los Angeles, according to City Attorney James K. Hahn, the population was undercounted by 4.6 percent in 1980. Blacks living in Los Angeles were undercounted by 9.1 percent, Hispanics by 9.8 percent and Asians by 7.3 percent.

"What makes this problem of undercounting particularly troublesome — and even tragic — is that the people most affected are the ones in the most dire need of adequate representation and help," Hahn said.

Zimroth, New York's corporation counsel, said the city was undercounted by about 500,000 people in 1980 and that he expects the 1990 census to be even less accurate.

New York state lost five of its 39 representatives as a result of the 1980 census and is expected to lose three more because of the 1990 count, according to Election Data Services Inc.

In Chicago, officials said the undercount costs the city more than $10 million a year in federal aid for social programs, a seat in the state House of Representatives, half a seat in the state Senate, and one-fourth of a congressional seat.

New York state Attorney General Robert Abrams said an inaccurate census violates the principle of one man, one vote.

It would mean that "states, cities and, in particular, minority communities will be shortchanged on funds for housing, education, health, nutrition, community development, drug enforcement and other vital services," he said.

Zimroth said the city based much of its case on an affidavit by Barbara Bailar, the Census Bureau's associate director for statistical standards, who resigned after 29 years to protest the Department of Commerce's decision not to go ahead with plans for an undercount correction.

Ms. Bailar was the federal government's chief witness against the city in an unsuccessful similar suit New York brought to correct the 1980 census. She said then that the technology to make an accurate count was not available, but later concluded it could be done.

No date has been set for a hearing in the case.

Dukakis Rasps, Bush Bristles As Debate Goes On

By William M. Welch
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A hoarse Michael Dukakis is pounding George Bush on two issues, drugs and his running mate, and says "We're coming on strong" in the dash to Election Day. Bush complained about racial charges while promising to help heal any wounds left by the campaign.

With the nation's presidential decision just a long weekend away, both campaigns were focusing on a handful of battleground states. Trailing in most of the polls, Dukakis seemed to need every one of them.

Both candidates were making their cases in a series of television interviews, with the Democratic nominee going on NBC's "Today" show today.

Dukakis was campaigning in New York and Kentucky and ending the day with a walk in Chicago's torchlight parade, a traditional show of party unity.

His voice was badly hoarse from the strain of long campaign days.

"I've been giving a lot of speeches lately and my pipes are a little weak," Dukakis told a Thursday night audience.

Bush was campaigning through four states today — Connecticut, in Dukakis' New England, and in the industrial battlegrounds of Ohio, Michigan and New Jersey.

According to sources in both parties, Republican and Democratic tracking polls showed Bush leading nationally by a margin of seven to nine percentage points, within the range of the nationwide surveys released earlier this week. Democrats contended there was still opportunity for Dukakis, with sizable numbers of undecided or weakly committed voters.

By states, private polls pointed to a significant Republican lead in Ohio; Dukakis held a narrow margin in one New York survey and a slight advantage in Washington where he was ahead by 10 points in a statewide poll with a five point margin of error. Both Illinois and California, where Dukakis will wind up his campaigning, were rated close.

Meanwhile, the Bush campaign announced late Thursday that the eighth person connected with the vice president's ethnic council had resigned his post following reports of ties to Nazi or anti-Semitic groups.

In Washington, Bush spokesman Mark Goodin confirmed reports that during World War II Akselis Mangulis had been a member of the Latvian Legion, a group which had connections to the German SS, the quasi-military unit of the Nazi Party.

Mangulis had been chairman of Latvians for Bush.

Across the country there was yet another round of new television commercials.

Dukakis was airing a tough new ad that zeroed in on Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle. It shows the most remembered moment of Quayle's debate with his Democratic counterpart, when Lloyd Bentsen said, "Senator, you're no Jack Kennedy." On the screen appear the words, "President Quayle?"

The Republican Party aired a new ad featuring President Reagan and the boast of good times.

"America is at peace, and we are prosperous once more ..." the president says. "I hope you will vote Republican — up and down the ticket — to continue the change we began in 1981."

The Justice Department, meanwhile, said it will investigate Democratic complaints that a Republican ad in South Texas is intimidating Spanish-speaking voters. The ad, in Spanish, says "voting officials will be watching closely" and warns of penalties for non-citizens who try to vote.

Through television interviews and campaign appearances Thursday, Bush looked ahead to what he said was national unity after the election.

"I would work my level best if I'm elected to heal any wounds that might be there," he said.

Birthday Cake

State Sen. Russell Walker, D-Asheboro, presents a birthday cake to Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., in honor of Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis' birthday Thursday. The presentation came during a stopover at Raleigh-Durham Airport by Sanford and other members of a group of Southern Democrats barnstorming in support of Dukakis.

But Bush accused the Democrats of "grossly unfair and untrue" charges of racism in his campaign. Democrats have charged race was injected by the Bush camp's repeated mention of Willie Horton, a black murder convict who attacked a white couple after failing to return from a weekend furlough from a Massachusetts prison.

"I don't have an ounce of bigotry in my body nor does my running mate," Bush said.

Dukakis, the Massachusetts governor, unveiled a new $400 million program to fight drugs in the schools. He renewed his charge that Bush "cut deals with foreign drug runners" and failed in leading the administration's anti-drug war.

"He's been in charge of the war for eight years and we all know what happened," Dukakis said. "Where's he been for the past eight years? What's he been doing?"

Dukakis, who turned 55 on Thursday, told a big Philadelphia crowd, "We're coming on strong."

Quayle, in Oklahoma, said Dukakis' talk about drugs "rings hollow." He quoted the Massachusetts attorney general, Democrat James Shannon, as saying "We're losing the war on drugs" in the state.

"If Mr. Dukakis can't fight drugs effectively in his own backyard, how can he make claims to do so for America," Dukakis said.

Late Thursday, Shannon issued a statement through the Dukakis campaign, saying: "The reason we have a drug problem in Massachusetts and 49 other states is because George Bush blew the one job Ronald Reagan gave him, and that was to spearhead the administration's war on drugs."

Bentsen traveled Texas by bus, accompanied by country singer Gary Morris and actor Rob Lowe. He complained the Republicans were wrongly depicting Dukakis as soft on crime and advocating restrictions on sportsmen's guns.

Bentsen said that should Bush win, the Republicans' negative campaigning would stir a backlash that would rob him of a mandate and "honeymoon" with Congress.

In Washington, Bush campaign chairman James A. Baker III disputed talk they have run a negative campaign and said should he win, Bush would have "a mandate to pursue the philosophy he espouses."

Singer Sues

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer-songwriter Van Stephenson claims in a lawsuit that Penthouse Forum magazine made him look like a sexual deviant by using one of his album covers to illustrate an article about transvestites.

Stephenson, who lives nearby in Williamson County, contends in the U.S. District Court suit filed this week that the magazine invaded his privacy and defamed his character.

The suit seeks $500,000 in damages. Among those named as defendants are Forum International Ltd., the magazine's publisher; Bob Guccione, the magazine's chief executive officer; and MCA Records, which released Stephenson's album.

Penthouse publicist Leslie Jay said she had not seen the lawsuit and could not comment. MCA officials did not return telephone calls seeking comment.

The photo shows Stephenson's face with an agonized expression superimposed on a woman's back. It was the cover for his 1984 album "Righteous Anger."

Stephenson's songs include "Your Kisses Will," recorded by Crystal Gayle, and "China Girl," recorded by John Cougar Mellencamp.

Mideast Expert Reportedly Tried To Free U.S. Hostages

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A Middle East expert who advised George Bush's presidential campaign made an unsuccessful attempt to free the U.S. hostages in Lebanon by meeting with Syrian officials, ABC-TV's "Nightline" reported.

After the U.S. government learned of the meeting, Secretary of State George Shultz told Syria that the expert, Paul Jureidini, in no way represented the government, the program reported Thursday. Shultz also told Jureidini to end any such contacts.

A spokesman for Vice President Bush's campaign, Mark Goodin, denied that Jureidini's Aug. 16 meeting was in any way sanctioned by the campaign. As late as July, Jureidini served as an unpaid consultant on the Middle East to the campaign, "Nightline" said.

"Nightline" also reported that the release last month of hostage Mithileshwar Singh, an Indian professor who is a legal resident of the United States, followed third-party contacts between the United States and Iran.

The intermediary was West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, the program said.

Jureidini, who according to "Nightline" has been a frequent Pentagon consultant and has top-level U.S. security clearance, said on the program that he told his Syrian hosts during the meeting in Damascus that he was acting on his own.

He said he did not consider his meeting improper since he was acting as a private citizen. Joining Jureidini at the meeting was his partner, Ronald McLaurin.

"Nightline," quoting Syrian sources, reported that during the meeting Jureidini and his hosts discussed options for securing the release of the nine American hostages and what the impact of their release would be on the U.S. presidential election.

Before the release of Singh, Shultz used Genscher to tell Iran that the U.S. hostages must be freed if there is to be real progress in improving U.S.-Iranian relations, "Nightline" reported.

Following this contact, substantial pressure was exerted on the Hezbollah, the radical group in Lebanon believed to be holding the hostages, the program said. That pressure led to Singh's release, it said.

Afterward, the U.S. government sent word to Iran via the Japanese government that all the U.S. hostages must be released, and that there would be no deal and no negotiations, "Nightline" reported.

The program quoted Iranian officials as saying they considered that response an insult; that Iran was not trying to make a deal.

Kitty Dukakis Leaves Hospital

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MINNEAPOLIS — Kitty Dukakis says she feels healthier but plans to use common sense to protect her health as she resumes campaigning for her husband, Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis.

Before leaving her hospital room Thursday, Mrs. Dukakis received a telephone call from her husband and wished him a happy 55th birthday. They had planned to campaign together in Waterbury, Conn., Thursday before she was hospitalized Monday night with a temperature of 102 degrees.

Mrs. Dukakis was treated for a bacterial and viral infection at the University of Minnesota Hospital.

"I feel much better," Mrs. Dukakis said as she left the hospital. "I'm looking forward to resuming campaigning ... I'm going to do what I can, but I'm going to use common sense as well."

Her press secretary, Paul Costello, said Mrs. Dukakis meet her husband in Chicago late today and that she would keep a limited schedule Saturday, with appearances tentatively scheduled in Texas and Colorado.

If possible, Mrs. Dukakis will resume a full schedule with her husband on the West Coast Sunday and Monday for the final two days of the campaign, Costello said.

Firm Will Build Blood Facility

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — A company plans to build a storage center for people who want their own blood frozen and available for quick delivery if they need it, but a doctor says the concern is preying on people's fear of AIDS.

Daxor Corp. of New York will store blood for individuals at the Federal Express nationwide shipping hub in Memphis, Daxor Vice President Allen Gelb said Thursday.

"It is aimed at anyone who wants to store their own blood or blood for their family because they are afraid of or reluctant to get blood from the general population because of the risk of transfusion," Gelb said.

But Dr. Edward Scott, director of LifeBlood, the Mid-South Regional Blood Center, said the odds are one in 100,000 of contracting acquired immune deficiency syndrome from a blood transfusion.

"They undermine public confidence in the blood supply and exaggerate the risk of transfusion to promote their service," said Scott.

Federal Express spokesman Armand Schneider said he couldn't discuss details of his company's agreement with Daxor. "We will provide some logistic services, including storage and transportation," he said.

West German Firm Offers Satellite Photos For Sale

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MUNICH, West Germany — Soviet spy satellite photographs can now be purchased from a Munich company.

"We use Soviet, U.S., and French satellite photographs for research. You can get them from us, but we're not officially marketing them," Rupert Haydn, managing director of the Company for Applied Remote Sensing (GAF), said Thursday.

Haydn said GAF works closely with the Moscow-based Soyuzkarta company, from which the satellite photographs are obtained.

The GAF staff uses modern digital processing to develop data from satellite photographs for environmental and climate surveillance, forestry, agriculture and other areas of research, Haydn said.

The company recently obtained a photograph of a 37-square-mile area surrounding Munich from Soyuzkarta that had been taken from about 125 miles high by a Soviet Kosmos satellite.

It shows highways, streets, buildings and objects as small as 16 feet in size.

"They are of good quality," Haydn said. He said the photographs "were several years old, and no doubt at one time they could have been used for military reconnaissance."

Haydn said the cost of a Soviet satellite photograph is about $980, or nearly equal to the $1,000 charged for a U.S. version.

Indian Paratroopers Help Block Maldivian Coup Try

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — Loyalist soldiers backed by Indian paratroopers searched today for mercenaries who tried to overthrow the Maldives government in a surprise attack that left at least 12 people dead, officials said today.

President Maumoon Abdul Gayoom said his government had the situation under control, and Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi said he hoped to start withdrawing his paratroopers later in the day.

The people of Male, a small coral atoll that is the capital of the archipelago 475 miles southwest of India, emerged from their houses as hundreds of Indian troops patrolled the streets where the coup attempt took place Thursday.

"The situation is back to normal. The attackers have fled," said Ahmed Abdullah Aziz, Maldivian high commissioner in Colombo. "A joint Indian-Maldivian search operation by boat is on, combing all islands in search of the raiders in case some are hiding."

Radio Male announced five mercenaries were captured before they could leave the atoll in their boats. No additional details were immediately available.

The mercenaries were thought to be Tamils, fighting a separatist war against the Sinhalese-dominated government in Sri Lanka, and were recruited by followers of an ex-president of the Maldives, said diplomatic sources in Colombo, 500 miles northeast of Male.

In New Delhi, India's capital, Gandhi told Parliament the mercenaries were hired by "disgruntled Maldivians living outside the country."

He said no Indian troops were injured.

"Our troops have carried out their assigned task," Gandhi said. "The president and the government of the Maldives are secured, and we hope our troops will begin withdrawing today."

Gayoom, who appealed for India's help after the foreign gunmen attacked the presidential palace in a pre-dawn raid Thursday, went on radio today, urging calm and thanking God for delivering his country from violence.

In his radio address, the 50-year-old leader also thanked Gandhi for dispatching troops in the Maldives' hour of need. Gayoom noted he survived three coup attempts since he was elected to office in 1978, but he gave no indication who was behind the latest attempt.

The top Sri Lankan diplomat in the Maldives, High Commissioner Mohammad Ali, said about a dozen people died during the clashes between the hired gunmen and Gayoom's 1,200-man lightly armed troops.

Diplomats and residents estimated 150 mercenaries shot up the presidential palace and other government buildings with bullets and rocket-propelled grenades.

Aziz said the number of deaths was "definitely less than 20" but could not give an exact figure.

Other diplomatic sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Gayoom's National Security Force reported that three of its men were killed and six to eight wounded but the number of mercenary casualties was uncertain.

Today is the weekly holy day when most businesses and shops close in the Moslem nation. Mosques were open for prayers as life started to return to normal in Male, a town of 55,000 people.

Radio Male resumed broadcasting at 7 a.m. (9 p.m. EDT Thursday) today for the first time since the mercenaries attacked the presidential palace and took over the radio station Thursday.

Diplomatic sources and a Sri Lankan military official in Colombo said Tamil guerrillas were recruited with promises of cash by an agent of former President Ibrahim Nasir, who ruled from 1968 until he fled to Singapore after stepping down in 1978. His supporters were blamed for the previous coup attempts.

Radio Male said 700 Indian paratroopers were on Male after landing Thursday night on Hulule island, a 10-minute boat ride away. An Indian navy ship was standing by offshore, the radio added.

Throughout the day Thursday, sporadic exchanges of gunfire were heard between the attackers and the Maldives' National Security Force. But Male residents said they had heard no gunfire since midnight Thursday.

Gayoom has tried to chart a political course of non-alignment with the superpowers for his country, which lies near major shipping lanes leading to the oil-rich Persian Gulf. But when he came under attack, he appealed to India, the United States and Britain for help.

Korean Radicals Hit U.S. Army Facility

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL, South Korea — Radicals firebombed a U.S. Army facility and a ruling party office and seized a government building today, demanding the arrest of a former president and withdrawal of American troops.

The incidents came a day after thousands of students took part in nationwide rallies against former President Chun Doo-hwan in one of the worst street protests in South Korea in recent months.

Chun has been under public fire for alleged misuse of power, corruption and violation of human rights during his seven-year tenure that ended in February. Chun, a former general, seized power with military backing in 1980.

U.S. authorities said a dozen youths today threw six firebombs into the compound of a U.S. Army engineering installation and fled, shattering windows but causing no injuries.

Radicals have demanded the withdrawal of 42,000 U.S. troops in South Korea as part of their anti-U.S. campaign.

About 20 students hurled firebombs at an office of the governing Democratic Justice Party in the western port of Incheon, shattering windows, police said. No injuries or arrests were reported.

In another attack, on the Office of National Tax Administration in downtown Seoul, five students demanding Chun's arrest seized a third-floor office for a half-hour before being overpowered by police.

Two of the students jumped onto mattresses placed by police on the ground outside the building. Police said the two were slightly injured.

Up to 380 people, mostly police, were injured and about 100 protesters are under questioning after more than 29,000 people took part in anti-Chun rallies across the country Thursday, newspapers reported today.

Drug Usage Increasing In Italy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MODENA, Italy — Parishioners found moistened sponges in the holy water fountains recently at the Modena's 12th century Roman Catholic cathedral. Archbishop Santo Quadri apologized, explaining that the fountains had to be drained to stop drug addicts from using them to rinse their needles.

Drug addiction, said the archbishop, "is one of the heaviest crosses Italy is carrying today."

In the first nine months of this year, 500 deaths in the country have been attributed to heroin overdoses — more than all of 1987.

Former Premier Bettino Craxi said Mafia-controlled drug smuggling and killings will soon reach "South American proportions" in Italy and called for life sentences for pushers.

Police seizures of heroin have risen from 11,440 ounces in 1987 to more than 14,080 ounces so far this year. The use of cocaine, once reserved for the wealthy, is booming, with police seizing more than 17,600 ounces this year, compared to 14,472 ounces in all of last year.

Drug pushers and users have been growing younger every year. A common urban sight has been police and sniffer dogs inspecting students' bags at the gates of high schools. On the first day of school in September, 113 drug peddlers were picked up across the country while lurking outside school buildings.

The drug explosion has also stoked the spread of AIDS, which can be transmitted through dirty needles, turning Italy into the second worst affected country in Europe behind France.

According to the World Health Organization, most of Italy's 2,233 AIDS victims have been heroin addicts.

Italy's current drug law was passed in the wake of the more lenient atmosphere of the 1970s.

Geraldo Rivera, third from right in center, ducks away as fists fly during taping of his show

Brawl During Show Taping Gives Geraldo Broken Nose

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A television show on "hate mongers" being taped by Geraldo Rivera erupted into a brawl that left the host with a broken nose and what he said was a hard-earned lesson: "Throw the first punch next time."

The melee broke out Thursday when a young white supremacist uttered racist remarks, prompting black civil rights leader Roy Innis to grab him by the neck. Pushing and shoving followed, "skinheads" stormed the stage and chairs and punches were thrown.

"I've been in plenty of scrapes before, but never in a studio," Rivera said afterward. "I never expected this. I anticipated heated words, but I didn't know it would boil into violence."

Rivera concluded the taping and taped two more shows before having his nose X-rayed. He said his nose was broken. "It clicks when I move it," he said.

During the brawl, which lasted about a minute, Rivera got into a toe-to-toe fistfight with a burly man who threw a chair. At some point, he was hit in the nose by another chair, he said.

"It was like a bench-clearing brawl at a hockey match," Rivera said. "About a dozen of them came out of the audience. The three punks on stage would have been easy to handle." The brawl started when one of the guests on the show, John Metzger, the 20-year-old leader of the White Aryan Resistance Youth, complained about "kikes" and called Innis an "Uncle Tom."

Innis walked across the set to Metzger, his fists balled, then turned to another panelist who was warning him off. Metzger then began to stand and Innis put his hands around Metzger's neck.

"I moved on him," Innis said. "A guy's gonna jump up in my face, I'm not going to wait for damage. He got the Sharpton treatment."

Earlier this year, Innis had a run-in with New York City activist Al Sharpton, shoving him to the floor on the Morton Downey Show.

When Metzger resisted, his supporters moved toward Innis. Punches were thrown, several people were wrestled and pushed to the floor and audience members — "skinheads" among them — stormed the set, the videotape showed.

Pushing and shoving matches continued as order was restored.

"It confirmed to me that these (supremacists) are roaches, and the only way to get rid of roaches is to turn the lights on," Rivera said.

The show featured members of the White Aryan Resistance Youth, The American Front and Skinheads of the National Resistance. Many ultra right-wing group members have adopted close-cropped hairstyles.

Back On Stage

LONDON (AP) — Veteran actor Sir Alec Guinness has returned to the London stage for the first time in a decade.

Guinness, 74, appeared in Thursday night's opening of "A Walk in the Woods," by American writer Lee Blessing, playing a Soviet arms negotiator coming to terms with nuclear weapons. The play closed on Broadway in New York earlier this year.

Most of Guinness' recent work has been in films and television.

He last appeared in a London theater in Alan Bennett's "The Old Country" in 1977-78.

In 1984, he was Shylock in William Shakespeare's "The Merchant of Venice" at Chichester, 70 miles southwest of London.

Producer Sought Foreign Funding

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Jeremy Thomas, the British producer of the Oscar-winning movie "The Last Emperor," said he was forced to seek investment abroad for his new films after investors from his own country refused to fund him again.

"It's a great shame that British banks would not back us this time," said the 39-year-old producer. "A lot of money for 'The Last Emperor' came from British institutions and they all got their money back."

He told reporters Thursday he raised $120 million in Japan and Europe for his next six movies, a sum he claimed was a record for an independent British producer.

The first movie, "Everybody Wins," will be based on a screenplay by American playwright Arthur Miller, whose last film script was for the 1961 classic "The Misfits," starring Marilyn Monroe and Clark Gable.

"Everybody Wins," which is to be shot in Connecticut and North Carolina in January, will be directed by Briton Karel Reisz and feature American stars Nick Nolte and Debra Winger, said Thomas.

Kennedy Assassination Holds Key To November TV Sweeps

By Howard Rosenberg
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

HOLLYWOOD — American Expose: Who Murdered Journalism?

The 25th anniversary of President Kennedy's assassination does not arrive until Nov. 22. But television's observance of that grim event is almost monthlong, ranging from the appealingly nostalgic "JFK: In His Own Words" Sunday on cable's HBO to syndicated columnist Jack Anderson's tawdry and strident "American Expose: Who Killed J.F.K.?"

How convenient for some in TV that J.F.K. should have died in November — now a ratings sweeps month when audience totals are especially crucial in setting advertising rates. How ironic, too, that 25 years after his death, this son of enormous wealth should become a posthumous soldier in the battle for TV profits.

The J.F.K. programs include more than the usual run of documentaries. Cable's Arts & Entertainment network will rerun 4½ hours of original assassination coverage Nov. 22. And arriving Nov. 15 on PBS is a meticulously rendered "Nova" probe titled "Who Shot President Kennedy?"

The onslaught of JFK fare surely will also include the inevitable canonizing, the kind of uncritical worship reflected in Lloyd Bentsen's now-famous crack to Dan Quayle that: "Senator, you're no Jack Kennedy!" What Bentsen neglected to add, of course, was that Jack Kennedy himself was no Jack Kennedy — in other words, that JFK the flawed man and president did not always measure up to JFK the icon.

Better Kennedy the legend, however, than Kennedy as part of the sleaze heaped upon "Who Killed J.F.K.?"

The program was best typified by Anderson's muddled live interview via satellite with Oswald's widow, Marina Oswald Porter. After one of her answers, she looked to the side and asked someone off camera: "Did I make any sense?"

Even worse, the interview began with her telling Anderson: "Good evening to you, whoever you are."

Whoever he was, he was not making any sense, either. Huge doubts linger about the Kennedy assassination, a subject on which reasonable people continue to disagree. Whether his conclusions were true or false, however, Anderson's program was not reasonable.

He promised "compelling evidence" that would refute the Warren Commission's 1964 conclusion that Oswald was the lone Kennedy assassin (Congressional probes concluded in 1977 that Oswald had had an accomplice).

Instead, his so-called evidence was unclear, unconvincing and untrustworthy.

Intercutting reenactments and actual interviews in a way that blurred reality, Anderson built only a circumstantial case for CIA-Mafia-Fidel Castro involvement in Kennedy's death, a case he had previously argued in his columns.

Based on a fuzzy, inconclusive photo, Anderson even raised the spectre of involvement by Watergate and former CIA operative E. Howard Hunt, even though Hunt said that he had witnesses who could prove he wasn't in Dallas.

Anderson flatly contended — without citing evidence — that the CIA later told Lyndon Johnson that Cuban leader Castro arranged for Kennedy's murder in response to alleged attempts by Kennedy to have Castro murdered by the Mafia.

Much of Anderson's case rested on what he said he was told years ago by the late mobster John Rosselli, conversations he has written about and that were reenacted Wednesday for the camera, with an actor as Rosselli and Anderson as himself.

If Castro was behind the assassination, as Anderson contended, then how was it — as Anderson also contended — that Jack Ruby was the one who recruited Oswald to shoot Kennedy, and then later shot him on orders from the Mafia (who had tried to kill Castro)?

To show that Ruby and Oswald knew each other, Anderson relied on hearsay and uncorroborated eyewitness accounts from persons of unsubstantiated credibility (one was identified as a "Dallas businesswoman and L.B.J. mistress").

Anderson resurrected the theory that, in addition to Oswald in the Texas Schoolbook Depository building, a second assassin was deployed on a grassy knoll. Analysis through modern technology "proves beyond a doubt" that the shot that killed the president entered from the front, not the back, Anderson insisted.

In contrast, however, the Nov. 15 "Nova" hour uses scientific technology and testimony from medical authorities to show that the fatal bullet indeed could have entered from the rear, lending support to the lone-assassin theory.

Narrated by Walter Cronkite and containing shockingly graphic pictures of the slain Kennedy, "Who Shot President Kennedy?" is as measured in its conclusions as "Who Murdered J.F.K.?" was loose and free-wheeling.

Combining photo enhancement and three-dimensional computer modeling with testimony from supporters and critics of the lone-assassin argument, the hour carefully examines the clashing theories, but is unable to refute the Warren Commission's essential premise.

The Kennedy assassination was the most-photographed murder in history, Cronkite notes. Yet there is one picture here that, in its own way, is more dramatic even than footage of Kennedy being hit or lying motionless. It is a closeup of the bullet said to have ended the president's life, an object so paradoxically small and benign looking that its awesome power is unimaginable.

What a fine program this is, one that sweeps away enigma without making unsupported charges. Just the same, it leaves us where we began — not knowing.

Vanna Files Suit Over Photo Use

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Vanna White, the letter-turning beauty of "Wheel of Fortune," has filed a $1 million lawsuit against an electronics company and its advertising agency claiming they are using her likeness without permission.

The advertisements selling televisions and stereos for Samsung Electronics show a likeness of Miss White standing on a copy of the television game-show set, Miss White's personal manager, Ray Manzella, said Thursday.

"What Samsung has done is unauthorized and they will have to answer for it," he said.

The suit targets Samsung, of New York, and its advertising agency, David Deutsch Associates, Inc., also of New York.

It seeks $1 million in damage and unspecified punitive damages.

Telephone calls to Samsung were unanswered Thursday evening. Calls to David Deutsch Associates were referred to company President Jim Aucone, who was unavailable.

Studios, Stars' Agents Stump Early For Academy Awards

By Bob Thomas
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Oscar campaigns begin earlier every year, and already the guns of autumn are firing for such potential nominees as Tom Hanks, Jodie Foster, Sigourney Weaver and Don Ameche.

The studios and publicity offices are readying trade paper ads to offer films and performances "for your consideration." The ads will feature reviewers' comments that a certain actor's work is deserving of Academy Award recognition. The champ in that department is Tom Hanks.

The affable Hanks has been the subject of the biggest publicity blitz since last year's blast for Cher, who ended up with the best-actress Oscar for "Moonstruck."

First with "Big" and then with "Punchline," Hanks has been the recipient of glowing reviews, many of which mentioned his Oscar chances.

A Hanks nomination seems certain, but for which movie? If Academy voters judge by financial success, they might choose his role in "Big" as the youngster who is transformed overnight into a 30-year-old. But they might consider his troubled comic in "Punchline" more of a challenge.

Some observers believe Weaver is overdue for an Oscar, and she is likely to be nominated for her role as the obsessed naturalist Dian Fossey in "Gorillas in the Mist." If the Academy had an award for bravery, she would certainly win it for working intimately with the wild gorillas.

Two recent performances have drawn Academy predictions from many reviewers: Jodie Foster's rape victim in "The Accused"; Don Ameche's innocent among the Mafia in "Things Change."

Unlike 1987, when most of the Academy hopefuls were clumped in the final weeks, this time an impressive array of films and performances has been spread out over the year. Although more potential nominees will appear in November and December, it's possible to offer a survey of possibilities thus far.

As with last year, the strongest race appears to be among the female stars. Aside from Weaver and Foster, other performances which have attracted strong support include: Shirley MacLaine, "Madame Sousatzka"; Barbara Hershey, "A World Apart"; Meryl Streep, "A Cry in the Dark"; Whoopi Goldberg, "Clara's Heart"; Sally Field, "Punchline"; Gene Rowlands, "Another Woman."

Joining Hanks and Ameche as possibilities for best actor: Forest Whitaker, "Bird"; Sam Neill, "A Cry in the Dark"; Ben Kingsley, "Pascali's Island"; Willem Dafoe, "The Last Temptation of Christ"; Edward James Olmos, "Stand and Deliver"; Kevin Costner, "Bull Durham."

However, so far no runaway has been sighted for best picture of 1988. Here are some possibilities: "Big"; "Gorillas in the Mist"; "Punchline"; "A Cry in the Dark"; "Bull Durham"; "Madame Sousatzka."

The Oscar race will undoubtedly change as new entries reach the marketplace. The most promising works include:

- "Rainman," with Dustin Hoffman, Tom Cruise.
- "Torch Song Trilogy," starring Harvey Fierstein in the film version of his hit play, with Anne Bancroft and Matthew Broderick.
- "Mississippi Burning," starring

Gene Hackman and Willem Dafoe.

— "Talk Radio," with Ellen Green and Alec Baldwin.

— "The Accidental Tourist," co-starring William Hurt and Kathleen Turner.

— "Beaches," with Bette Midler and Barbara Hershey.

— "Working Girl," starring Melanie Griffith, Harrison Ford and Sigourney Weaver.

The 61st Annual Academy Awards will arrive early next year — March 29. For the second year the ceremonies will be held at the Shrine Auditorium, and city authorities have promised more control over the traffic. Allan Carr is producing the show, and Marvin Hamlisch has been announced as musical director.

Molecular biologists comparing genetic material from the placentas of 147 women of different racial backgrounds have deduced an African "Eve," the ancestor of every living person. The descendants of this ancestor, they theorize, carried her DNA to the rest of the world, says National Geographic.

Owner Says Fox TV Improving

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK — Media baron Rupert Murdoch predicted Thursday that his Fox Broadcasting Co., which has lost more than $100 million since it began in October 1986, will be earning money "maybe in the next six months."

Murdoch, who estimated that Fox Broadcasting lost $90 million last year and "less than" $20 million this year, also said that he "absolutely" will continue his fledgling Fox TV network.

The network, which currently programs only Saturday and Sunday nights, plans to add a third night next spring. It says it serves 123 stations, seven of which are Fox-owned.

There have been sporadic rumors that the network, which last month retreated from the late-night talk show arena by canceling "The Late Show," might be shut down because of its financial losses.

Not so, Murdoch said: "On the contrary, we need another couple of ratings points, and we're there."

Here to talk up his new four-channel satellite service that will start serving British homes in February, Murdoch spoke at a combination breakfast-press conference with a small group of journalists.

He said that more "news-based" programs such as the Fox network's "The Reporters" and its syndicated "A Current Affair" are in the works. They cost half of what entertainment programs do and tend to get better results in the ratings, he said.

Moreover, he asserted, "the things that distinguish you as a broadcaster are things that come out of your news departments. There's no longer any loyalty to networks. People sit back with their remote control buttons and they shop...."

The Australian-born Murdoch, now a U.S. citizen, was asked if the term "tabloid TV" bothers him.

"I think tabloid TV in this country is 'Eyewitness News' — a format notably used by ABC-owned stations — "and I always thought (CBS) '60 Minutes' was terrific tabloid journalism... great, old-fashioned, foot-in-the-door investigative journalism," he replied.

Some critics have used the term to knock Fox's "The Reporters" and "A Current Affair" for their fast-paced emphasis on sensational stories about sex and violence.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY Nov. 5

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Gather the necessary experience before getting involved in unknown activities. Avoid any financial overindulgence. Stay close to home.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Someone asks a lot from you. No need to fret over situations that are beyond your control. You will have a chance to express your emotions.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Keep your head today, and use good judgment. Avoid long trips over unfamiliar routes. Leave extra time between appointments.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Your work is demanding, but you enjoy gains that can help goals materialize. Dinner conversation sparks new ideas for the future.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Sometime love comes at the most inconvenient time. Take care of responsibilities first. Enjoy a candlelight dinner later.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Confusion is just a passing situation. Keep your wallet closed today. Use caution while driving. Accept the affection offered by others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Social aspects have you in retreat. Catching up on personal projects and chores will be satisfying. Keep the day simple and basic.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Stay on course today. Focus on forward prospects and developments at work. Take time for personal pleasure. Give yourself a break.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You are offered a proposal that may turn out to be a pig in a poke. Mind your business, and ignore get-rich-quick schemes. Be cautious.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): You have no use for people who squander their resources and then expect you to help out. Stick with a firm "no" when approached.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): A fresh approach is called for. Examine your lifestyle with those who are close to you. Determine a realistic path you can stick to.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): You feel scattered and dreamy. Stick to the basics to recover lost energy. Relax and enjoy life. Don't forget about your sense of humor.

If Your Child Is Born Today: He or she will be a superb communicator with a talent for quick-witted responses. Your child will want to be different, unique and will have intuitive practicality. Timing will be a challenge for him or her, as will learning to talk and act at the right time.

We are often asked whether we think that artificial club systems are better than the more natural ones employed by the vast majority of players. In the hands of a top-flight pair, perhaps so. However, most of these methods are too involved for the average player, and they have some odd drawbacks that can be exploited by astute defenders. This hand was played in a national championship.

North-South were using the Precision Club System, in which opening bids of one in a suit other than clubs showed a hand with fewer than 16 high-card points. West put this knowledge to good use to defeat a close contract.

In normal methods, South's one spade opening could be as strong as 20-21 points, so the auction would carry little information. However, West knew from South's opening bid that South could not have more than 15 HCP. Therefore, South had to have a highly distributional hand to jump to game after receiving only a simple raise.

A distributional hand meant ruffs somewhere. To cut down on that possibility, West elected to lead ace of spades and another. That proved to be deadly. Declarer could ruff only one diamond in dummy, so he had to concede two diamonds and a club in addition to the ace of trumps.

Note that, without a trump lead, declarer has plain sailing. Since he can get to ruff at least two diamonds in dummy, he will come home with his contract. Indeed, on some lines he might even end up with an overtrick.
