2 Northeastern Counties Suffer Tornado Damage

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ELIZABETH CITY — Tornadoes touched down in towns in two northeastern North Carolina counties Saturday, causing up to $2 million in property damage but no serious injuries, authorities said.

One twister touched down near Elizabeth City State University and again in several residential areas in Elizabeth City, authorities said.

"Local officials say damage could run up to $2 million," said Al Warlick, a spokesman for the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety. "Power outages are in the process of being restored."

The tornado knocked over a tractor-trailer truck, said Sgt. H.L. Bunch of the police department. The driver was not hurt.

The tornado touched down near the college, "then went about two miles and touched down again on (U.S.) 17 and Church and Main Streets, Elizabeth Street, Harney Street and Factory Street, doing more damage," Bunch said.

"It's a residential section adjacent to downtown," he said.

Wilma Stevenson, who lives in one of the neighborhoods where damage was reported, said damage was limited to fallen limbs and trees.

"A very large tree fell" about two blocks away, but "it didn't do any damage because it fell toward the street," she said.

Police officers were doing a house-to-house check of damages.

The tornado "kind of took everyone by surprise," Bunch said.

Another twister near Moyock in Currituck County touched down in a pine thicket, tearing down trees and ripping the roof off an old house, but causing no injuries, the National Weather Service said.

Wind damage was also reported in Bertie County, where the sheriff's department said tree limbs and power lines were down and several barns were damaged.

"There's also been some wind damage in the Sandhills and in the Coastal Plain," said Ben Woods, a meteorologist at the weather srevice office in Raleigh. "I'm a little concerned about more severe weather in central North Carolina this evening."

Nobel Winner Says FDA Red Tape Has Cost Lives

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A Nobel Prize winning scientist says that Federal Drug Administration red tape has slowed down the marketing of drugs in the United States and killed at least 100,000 people.

"My estimate is that the FDA has killed 100,000 people at least, maybe a million," Dr. George H. Hitchings said in an afternoon press conference Friday in Greenville.

Hitchings, a scientist with Burroughs Wellcome for more than 40 years, was recently named winner of the 1988 Nobel Prize for Medicine.

"Do you want to be quoted on that?" asked Dr. Gertrude B. Elion, who collaborated with Hitchings on developing a new series of drugs. Dr. Elion, also a retired scientist with Burroughs Wellcome, shares the 1988 prize with Hitchings and British scientist Sir James Black, who worked with Wellcome from 1977 to 1984.

"I want to be quoted," he said.

In their years of research Hitchings and Dr. Elion developed several new drugs, including a treatment for leukemia patients, a drug that made the first kidney transplant possible, a drug used in treating gout and significant antiviral research.

Forty years ago, a drug could be developed, tested and introduced into the market within three years, both said, but today that would be impossible.

Hitchings cited an example of an anti-bacterial drug he developed, Septra, that saved "at least 500,000 lives."

"The U.S. — where it was invented — was five years behind the rest of the world in allowing it to be used commercially," he said.

In the early days of cancer research, Dr. Elion said doctors used a drug on patients as soon as they were satisfied the drug worked in animal tumors and they had tested the toxicity of the drug.

It took less than three years from the time the drug was synthesized until the time it was introduced into the market, she said. "Now, that would be absolutely impossible."

In spite of their criticism of the FDA procedures, both scientists said the federal organization seems to be learning from its past.

AZT, the only drug approved to treat patients suffering from AIDS, was developed by Burroughs Wellcome. The scientists said the manner in which the government approved AZT shows the FDA is changing.

"I think they're learning their lesson," Dr. Elion said. "(AZT was) the first break really in that armor. ... I think it will lead to a relaxation of drugs for cancer, as well."

Hitchings agreed. "It slows down the process of commercial relase, sure. ... But they are trying to do better."

Both said AIDS is an epidemic in the United States, but they gave slightly different opinions on how committed the government has been to finding a cure.

"I think they handled the clearance of our drug (AZT) very responsibly. I think they've done resonably well on the other aspects," Hitchings said.

Working Women Help Families Pay Bills

By David Briscoe
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — More women working outside the home have allowed most American families to keep the buying power they had 10 years ago, according to a study released Saturday.

Forty percent of families, however, have not keep pace with the increasing cost of living over the past decade, said the study by the Economic Policy Institute.

The head of the liberal think tank said the report shows average American families have been under greater economic pressure during the past decade than at any time since World War II.

"Without new economic policies it is clear that families can no longer count on steadily increasing incomes and that the next generations cannot expect to live better than their parents," said institute President Jeff Faux, an economist.

The institute, established in 1986 by prominent liberal economists, describes itself as a non-partisan, non-profit group. It has opposed the conservative economic policies of the Reagan administration.

The report said salaries for most women have increased faster than inflation, while salaries for all but the richest American men haven't kept up.

The study documents a growing gap between rich and poor in the United States and says that young adults who do not finish college are doing "substantially worse" than those who were the same age a decade ago.

It also says low wages are forcing growing numbers of unattached young people — 1.5 million more than a decade ago — to "return to the nest" of their parents' households rather than living on their own.

Economists Stephen Rose of Seattle and David Fasenfest of Louisville, who wrote the report, said they used statistical methods that take into account family size. They also used the most conservative cost-of-living figures to overcome objections to previous studies that also showed widening inequality and slow income growth.

Some conservative economists have argued that Americans are doing better because families are smaller even if family incomes have not kept up with inflation.

"This is an important first step in measuring the real economic benefit of having a wife work," Rose said in a telephone interview. He said figures cited by the Reagan administration and others seem to show improved economic conditions while polls show that people think they are worse off.

Income from a working wife, he said, may add to family income but may cost more in child care, restaurant and other expenses.

"More wives are working now because they feel they have to, because they have to have a certain relative standard of living," he said.

Bush, Dukakis Head Down Back Stretch

By David Espo
AP POLITICAL WRITER

Michael Dukakis and George Bush hurtled through a final weekend of campaigning, the combative Democrat vowing Saturday to work for those living on "the family budget, not the family fortune," while his rival brushed aside polls pointing to a dwindling lead.

The two combatants raced across America at a pace that defied endurance while their managers were pouring millions of dollars into a campaign-ending television advertising drive.

"We are all very tired," said Barbara Bush, speaking for candidates and their entourages everywhere.

Despite the fatigue, there was no letup with the election three days away.

"I think the Republican Party began celebrating a little early, don't you?" Dukakis told voters at Rock Island in Illinois, the first of four states he was visiting. "They're taking you for granted."

Bush also had four states on his itinerary, although aides were juggling his schedule on the run. He knocked on doors in one New Jersey neighborhood, made a few get-out-the-vote telephone calls, painted a campaign sign and told reporters, "I don't believe in polls. ... Let someone else sort out all these polls."

Candidates in the 33 Senate races and 435 House contests on Tuesday's ballot also went through a final weekend of working, as did the two dozen rivals contesting the 12 statehouse races on next Tuesday's ballot. Democrats were rated as favorites to renew their control in the Senate and as prohibitive favorites to hold a majority in the new House.

Bush and Dukakis campaigned with one eye on the crowds and the other on the spate of polls being con-

Elections Official Hopes Tuesday Tabulating Is Smoother Than 1984

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The 1984 presidential election turned into the night that wouldn't end for Pitt elections Supervisor Margeret Hardee.

When she left her office at 5:30 a.m. there was still one precinct that had not reported. With the voting machines not working properly, precinct workers moved the ballots to the county elections office and officials worked until 11 p.m. the day after the election before the final vote was tallied.

"We had to do the whole thing over again," Mrs. Hardee said.

She's hoping for better luck Tuesday, but there is no guarantee.

The county is using some of the same Airmac machines used in the 1984 election. And because the number of registered voters has continued to rise, the county has had to rent 11 additional machines for the election.

"We have just outgrown the capacity of these machines," she said. "Our registration is up 10 percent (from Oct. 9, 1987). ... We have not prepared for the growth and complexity we have experienced because of the districting and the federal Justice Department's scrutiny."

There are currently 50,571 registered voters in the county, she said.

The county has 40 Airmac machines ready for Tuesday's election, and 11 of those machines were rented from Moore County, which purchased new Shouptronic brand electronic machines after using the Airmacs just one time.

Mrs. Hardee said the Shouptronic machines — which she has pushed the county commissioners to buy — would untie many election knots.

Shouptronic machines electronically record each vote on a roll of tape inside the machine, and they can produce a final tally almost instantly. There is no hand-counting,

Friendship Force

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Ernie Slater of Bristol, England, says he would like to see George Bush win Tuesday's presidential election, but Gloria A. Solano of Guanajuato, Mexico, likes Michael Dukakis. Two visitors from Germany are split in their preference.

The four are visiting the United States as part of the Friendship Force, a group that promotes understanding by having people visit other countries and stay in individuals' homes. The group is holding an international festival in Winston-Salem through Sunday that includes about 225 visitors from the United States and 10 foreign countries.

Of the four festivals that Friendship Force is sponsoring this year, the festival that started Thursday in Winston-Salem is the only one in the United States. After the festival, the participants from foreign countries will stay a week or so with North Carolina families.

At a morning session Friday, two Reynolds High School juniors, Kareem Serageldin and Aaron Bohn, gave campaign speeches touting the attributes of their respective choices for president — Bush and Dukakis.

Nobel Winners

Dr. Elion said there are some misconceptions about what is needed for AIDS research.

"There seems to be a general feeling that the government isn't spending enough money on it. But that's the same story we've heard for years about cancer research.

"Money doesn't cure a disease. You have to have ideas. You have to have scientists who are interested in doing it. And I think the government has done quite well in this regard," she said.

"Money may be the essence of it ten years from now, if you can train people to go into this work and do it properly," she said. "But you can't just throw money into the pot and say, 'This is going to cure the disease.'"

Neither scientist chose to take the bait and answer a reporter's question about which presidential candidate would do the best job in fighting AIDS.

"We don't answer political questions," Hitchings said, laughing.

"Whichever one gets in," Dr. Elion said.

As for the future of medical research, Dr. Elion said she feels young scientists today are as qualified and committed as she and Hitchings have been.

"I'm sure they are," she said. "I think one of the great pleasure about this award is the fact that all the young people in our laboratories have been so excited about it and stimulated and motivated by it."

Both Hitchings and Dr. Elion said they have had very little free time since the announcement of the award was made. They were in Greenville to meet employees at Burroughs Wellcome and attend a reception. In addition to several local media representatives, the Nobel Prize Committee had a three-person video crew recording the press conference.

Both said the Nobel award will not change their work.

Dr. Elion said she will continue teaching and advising medical schools, Burroughs Wellcome and world health organizations.

Hitchings said he will continue to devote about one-third of his time to the eight philanthropic organizations he directs and about two-thirds of this time to scientific work.

The two are to deliver speeches Dec. 8 in Sweeden and receive their Nobel medals Dec. 10.

Burroughs Wellcome is a research-based pharmaceutical company with headquarters in Research Triangle Park and manufacturing facilities in Greenville.

Women

The report says the number of working wives increased from 55.4 percent in 1979 to 66.1 percent in 1986. Wives' earnings, adjusted for inflation, increased 12.1 percent from an average $14,064 in 1979 to $15,768 in 1986, the study says, while husbands' adjusted earnings dropped from $23,204 in 1979 to $22,240 in 1986.

Even with wives working, the study says, roughly two out of five American families — those earning less than about 27,000 a year in 1986 — earned more than they did 10 years ago but the increase did not keep up with inflation. Adjusted income for all Americans increased 7.3 percent, however.

If women had worked only the number of hours they did in 1979, the study says, average wages would have increased only 4.9 percent, with three out of five families, or those earning less than $40,000, lagging behind the inflation rate.

Punjab Violence Toll At 62

By Deepak Sharma
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AMRITSAR, India — Sikh separatists attacking across Punjab state before a major Hindu holiday have killed 62 people, officials reported Saturday. Security forces were ordered on maximum alert.

At least 20 Sikh gunmen masquerading as border police killed five Hindus Saturday night in the village of Darapur, according to C. Pal Singh, inspector general of police along the border with Pakistan.

He said the killers separated Hindus from Sikhs and opened fire on the Hindus in the main crossroads of the village 39 miles northeast of Amritsar.

The gunmen, who arrived in two police jeeps and wore uniforms of India's border security force, escaped after the massacre, Singh said.

Police blamed Sikh extremists for five other attacks in Punjab Friday and Saturday that claimed 57 lives.

In addition to those deaths, five Sikh militants were killed by police in Punjab Friday night, Press Trust of India reported.

Punjab's 32,000-man police force was placed on maximum alert, according to a police spokesman in the state capital of Chandigarh.

Hindus, who form a vast majority in India but are outnumbered by Sikhs in Punjab, will celebrate Diwali, a festival of lights, on Wednesday.

Police and news reports gave these accounts of the other deaths:

Seven bombs exploded Friday in a crowded market in the town of Batala, 20 miles northeast of Amritsar, killing 28 people and injuring 50. Most of the victims were Hindus.

Also Friday, six Sikh militants raided a farm near the town of Lawdohwal, 70 southeast of Amritsar, and killed 20 Hindu laborers.

Nine people were killed in three other attacks Friday and Saturday.

BB&T Eyes Layoffs

WILSON (AP) — BB&T Financial Corp. has told its employees to expect some layoffs next year as the bank streamlines its operations.

The moves comes in the wake of record earnings for the state's fourth largest bank. But analysts say the streamlining is a trend among North Carolina banks, which have grown dramatically in recent years and have been forced to cut costs to remain profitable.

BB&T employs 3,000 people in North Carolina and South Carolina, including 900 in Wilson.

Candidates Are Winding It Up

Bush aides spread the word that their own polls showed a modest improvement in the vice president's support overnight, and claimed a lead in the range of 8-10 points nationally. Democrats said it was more like five or six points.

An Associated Press tabulation showed Bush leading for as many as 359 electoral votes. But many of them were from states where Dukakis seemed to be gaining, and the vice president could not count on the 270 needed for victory. The survey showed Dukakis leading for as many as 101 electoral votes, while 78 votes were in states rated as tossups, including Pennsylvania, Missouri and Illinois.

The two presidential rivals complimented one another in separate interviews with television personality David Frost, although the words had a certain backhanded quality to them.

"The contacts I've had with him have been very pleasant," Bush said of his rival. "But I've been accused of liking, liking, you know, almost everybody, and I think there is a lot of good in everyone and certainly in my opponent."

Dukakis said, "I don't normally get personally angry or annoyed at the people that I run against." He added he was surprised and disappointed at Bush's campaign and added "there's something I think out of character about this and there are people who know him who believe that."

So much for the pleasantries, such as they were.

Democratic vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen delivered the Democratic response to President Reagan's weekly radio address and campaigned in California. He accused Bush of false campaign advertising and said the Republican philosophy is, "If it sounds good, we're going to say it, never mind the facts."

Bush was endorsed by a handful of Democratic municipal and union officials from New Jersey, and said, "I will try, if I'm elected, to be a fair-play president in terms of the working men and women in this country and in terms of labor itself."

In Pennsylvania, he vowed, "We're not going to be outhustled by the liberal governor from Massachusetts."

The vice president also brushed aside persistent Democratic complaints about his campaign, saying, "They can dish it out but they can't take it."

Dukakis depicted Bush as a child of privilege who as president would help the wealthy. "He wants to make the rich in this country even richer," the Massachusetts governor said. "We're on the side of people who live off the family budget, not the family fortune."

The Democrat appeared on stage in Rock Island with a man wearing a mask that bore the likeness of former President Richard Nixon. Said Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin, "Yes, it's hard to believe — Richard Nixon's running again, only this time he's using the name George Bush."

Reagan campaigned for Bush and the Republicans in his weekly radio address, and he dusted off an old standby from past campaigns in personal appearances in Michigan and Texas.

"We need you to ride with us," he told a crowd at a rodeo center in Mesquite, Texas. "And if you would, I hope you'll help win just one more for the Gipper."

Official Ready For Tuesday

no storing of ballots, no printing of ballots and no doubt about the vote totals, Mrs. Hardee said.

This year the ballots — which are printed by a Fayetteville company — were printed late because the county had to wait to find out exactly which candidates would win a place on the ballot. Some ballots did not arrive until last week, she said.

"It's just living on the edge all the time. ... The Shouptronic machines would eliminate all that," she said. "It would eliminate having to deal with counting and handling and storing federal ballots for 22 months (after the election). Space is at such a premium here in the county. Printing is such a high cost, too. It would eliminate that."

When she first asked for the new machines, each cost about $4,200, she said, but the cost has now jumped to $4,550 for each machine. The county commissioners opted not to buy the new machines, she said, with one of the reasons being they felt the cost would drop in the future.

To purchase one machine for every 500 voters, as Mrs. Hardee said is necessary, would cost the county about $450,000.

"It would be cost-effective. There is no doubt about it," she said.

Pitt County once received a written offer from another county wanting to purchase its Airmac machines for $45,000, but the county commissioners did not agree to sell and Mrs. Hardee said she does not know if another buyer is interested.

With Shouptronic machines, the county could also sell voting booths and other equipment that would no longer be needed, and it could finance the purchase over two or three years, she said. The county would save money by decreasing the cost of printed ballots, time at the polls and personnel needed to conduct the elections, she said, and the savings would offset the cost of the new machines.

In 1984, ballot-printing alone cost the county nearly $40,000, she said.

With Airmac machines, voters mark ballots by hand and feed the slips of paper into the machines, which read the marks and tally the votes.

But there have been problems. If voters mark the ballot incorrectly, the machine discards the ballot and election officials have to decide which candidate the voter intended to vote for.

Last week election officials dodged another problem. Repairmen from a Lillington company had to come to Greenville to adjust the voting machines — which were not programmed to handle Tuesday's large ballot. Mrs. Hardee said they now operate properly.

The machines also require the county to print a massive number of ballots; Mrs. Hardee said about 420,000 ballots have been distributed to precincts for the election Tuesday.

And if there is a recount, election officials may find themselves counting thousands of ballots by hand, as they did earlier this year in the recount of the runoff vote between D.D. Garrett and James H. Dupree for a seat on the Pitt County Commissioners.

There are no cumbersome paper ballots with Shouptronic machines. Instead, all of the races up for grabs are listed on the face of the machine.

Voters give pollworkers a form that states which races they are eligible to participate in, and pollworkers program the machines so that lights turn on beside the designated contests.

As voters press buttons beside the names of the candidates for which they wish to vote, the lights turn off. When voters complete the process and decide not to change any choices, they press one button at the bottom of the machine that finalizes the vote.

Scouts Help Needy

Pitt County Boy Scouts will soon be canvassing the area to gather food for the needy as part of a coordinated national effort by the Boy Scouts of America, according to Bill Lee, chairman of the Civic Services Committee for the Pitt District BSA.

Lee said over 1,500 Pitt County boys will be involved in the efforts, which begin this weekend. The boys will distribute paper bags to 6,000 homes Saturday, asking families to place several non-perishable items in the bags and set them back on their front steps on Nov. 19.

On that day, the boys will collect the food and take it to a central distribution point. The food will eventually end up at the Salvation Army, Lee said, where officials will store the food and save it for the needy. Food collected in the Pitt County area will benefit needy people within the county, he said.

Lee said he hopes Scouts can collect four to six items per bag, or about 24,000 to 36,000 items of food.

While the holiday season is growing near, Lee said the drive is not geared toward holiday collections. Rather, he said, it is designed to help with the problems of the needy on the local level across the country.

Hamilton Man Is Cited For Bravery

A Hamilton man, Cecil Roy Taylor Sr., is one of 15 persons in the United States and one in Canada to receive the Carnegie Hero Fund Commissison award for acts of heroism in risking their lives to save the lives of others.

Two of the awards were made posthumously to the families of two young men who died in their efforts to save others.

"Taylor, 36, truck driver, who was not related to Gerrikka, entered the compact car on his back through the broken window of the passenger door. He could not free Gerrikka and left the car when a small explosion occurred in the engine area.

"Obtaining a pocketknike, Taylor re-entered the car though the passenger window and cut the straps securing Gerrikka. He removed her from the seat, slid part way out the car, and handed her to a bystander before exiting himself."

The 16 recent recipients bring to 93 the number of persons recognized with the hero award to date in 1988, and to 7,274 the number of persons given the Carnegie Medal since its inception in 1904.

The fund was established by Andrew Carnegie. More than $17.5 million has been given in one-time payments and pensions to recipients of the award.

A five-car accident on Greenville Boulevard near the Evans Street intersection resulted in nine injuries at 6:44 p.m. Friday, said Officer L.R. Kepler. He said a car driven by Karen Mae Matthews of Arlington Square struck the rear of a car driven by Mary Candace Gillis of Sanford, pushing it into a car driven by Hosea Loan Cotten of Enfield. Cotten's car was pushed into a vehicle driven by Ellen Kaye Jefferys of Goldsboro, and her car was the pushed into a vehicle driven by Mary Staton Stocks of Greensboro. Kepler said Ms. Gillis, Cotten, Ms. Jefferys and Ms. Stocks were all stopped at the interchange for a red signal. He said each of the drivers and Julia Hodge, Elizabeth Black, Lisa Gonzales of Greenville and Barbara Bond of Goldsboro were taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment of injuries. Kepler said the gas tank in Ms. Gillis' car ruptured, spilling gas across Greenville Boulevard and forcing the area to be blocked off until the gas could be cleaned up. Kepler estimated total damages to the five cars at over $40,000.

North Carolina Utility Services, a non-regulated division of Carolina Telephone, will soon be locating Southern Bell's underground facilities for excavators in the Greenville area, a spokesman for NCUS said.

•Planned Parenthood--
43 "pro-choice" votes, 2 "anti-choice" votes, 5 absences.
•National Abortion Rights Action League (NARAL)-- 42 "pro-choice votes", 3 " anti-choice" votes, 9 absences. "Bentsen has only once voted against funding (Of abortion). On the whole, Sen. Bentsen's voting record on our issue has been very good."
•National Right to Life Committee (NRLC)--
39 pro-abortion votes in support of federal funding of abortions, 1 pro-life vote, 5 absences. (The number of votes differ because the different groups recorded slightly different time periods and issues.)

Bob Jordan

"Jordan, as Senate President, cast the tie-breaking vote against further cuts in the state program that finances abortions for poor women...Jordan's tie-breaking vote...resulted in rejection of an amendment to the budget bill that would have cut funds for the abortion program from $924,500 to $374,500 a year, and tightened eligibility requirements."
—Raleigh News and Observer, 6/27/85

"...Jordan said he had no regrets. 'My position is well-known on this issue,' Jordan said after the Senate voted 25-24 Monday to table an amendment that would have reduced the fund sharply and imposed strict limits on its use."
—Fayetteville Observer, 6/25/85

"When the (Parental Consent) bill reached the Senate on Monday, Lt. Gov. Robert B. Jordan III assigned it to the Senate Judiciary IV Committee, which was not scheduled to meet again before the legislature adjourned."
—Winston-Salem Journal, 7/20/86

Tony Rand

Jim Martin

"We want to end state-funding for abortion on demand. He told Republicans last week at the state party convention."
—Durham Morning Herald 6/5/87

"I do support HB 1068, Parental Consent for Minor's Abortion...What's more, in my opinion, it is in the best interest of the minor pregnant adolescent, the affected parent(s), the family unit, and society as a whole for a parental consent law to pass in North Carolina."

At the request of N.C. Right to Life, Gov. Martin declared "Right to Life Week" observances in North Carolina, to coincide with the last three state Right to Life conventions.

Jim Gardner

"I favor reducing state tax funding to zero for all elective abortions. I would, however, allow funding in cases where the physical life of the mother is threatened."

"Bob Jordan cast the tie-breaking vote in favor of state funding of abortions. If I had been Lt. Governor, I would have voted NO."

"In regard to parental consent for a minor's abortion, I do favor HB 1068."

"Concerning Roe vs. Wade, overturning it would allow the North Carolina General Assembly to address the repeal of certain North Carolina laws that legalize abortion. I would do whatever possible to repeal state laws which allow abortion except where the mother's 'physical' life is in danger."
—excerpts from letter to Rocky Mount pastor

HUD Developing New Home Equity Program

In an effort to help elderly homeowners take advantage of the equity in their homes, the Department of Housing and Urban Develpment is developing a pilot program to insure home equity conversion mortgages, said HUD Secretary Samuel R. Pierce.

Under the Home Equity Conversion Mortgage Insurance Demonstration, HUD will insure mortgages on the homes of elderly homeowners, enabling them to convert their equity into cash.

A total of 2,500 mortgages may be insured in the demonstration program, authorized by the Housing and Community Development Act of 1987.

The program will run through Sept. 30, 1991, and is open to people 62 years old or more with little or no mortgage debt remaining on their property.

Pierce said, "This program is designed to meet the special needs of elderly homeowners who have excess equity in their homes. This equity could be used to increase cash flow for people on fixed incomes."

In a proposed rule published in the Oct. 25 editions of the Federal Register, the department proposes to insure three types of home equity conversion mortgages, tenure, term and line-of-credit.

All three would provide a source of income for the homeowner by converting the amount of equity in the home into a mortgage issued by a lender and insured by the Federal Housing Administration.

Tenure mortgages provide for monthly payments from lenders to homeowners for as long as they occupy the home as a principal residence. Term mortgages provide for monthly payments for a fixed period agreed upon between the lender and the borrower. Line-of-credit mortgages permit homeowners to draw money at times and in amounts of their own choosing. Each of these mortgages may bear interest at a fixed or adjustable rate.

Unless the property is sold or the homeowner moves, repayment of these loans is not required during the borrower's lifetime.

In addition, if the principal balance of the mortgage grows to exceed the value of the property, a homeowner cannot be displaced and forced to sell the home. Homeowners can sell their property at any time, and any proceeds in excess of the amount needed to pay off the motgage will revert to the homeowner.

HUD and the Administration on Aging will jointly provide counseling services to assist seniors in choosing the mortgage that best suits their needs. It was also stressed that persons considering this kind of transaction should consult their accountant, attorney or other financial advisor.

Fannie Mae (Federal National Mortgage Association) and Freddie Mac (Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation) are participating in the demonstration program.

Taft Calls For Action To Protect Area Estuaries

WASHINGTON, N.C. - "Our waters cannot wait for more talk and study," state Sen. Tom Taft of Greenville said at a news conference Friday.

Taft, who is seeking re-election to the Senate, said, "My purpose today is to reiterate my strong support of environmental organizations and governmental efforts to protect our estuaries and the Pamlico-Tar River system."

He cited sponsorship of legislation dealing with abandoned hazardous waste dumps, a law "to continue research ... on the red sore disease in the Pamlico River," and successful efforts to obtain state funding for the Pamlico Tar River Foundation "for environmental education," as evidence of his concern with environmental issues.

But Taft said the waters in the 9th Senate District "cannot wait for more talk and study. The Albemarle Pamlico Estuarine Study needs to immediately initiate preliminary implementation activities. A series of recommendations have been generated for inclusion in the priority action plan. I strongly encourage the powers that be immediately deal with these recommendations."

Taft said, "I will ask the Legislative leadership to establish a mechanism for oversight of the Albemarle Pamlico Estuarine Study and to immediately encourage the development of legislative proposals that need to be addressed in the 1989 legislative session."

According to Taft, "We cannot afford to wait until 1990 to begin thinking in terms of implementation and new legislative efforts. We must find immediate methods to stem the tide of the general degradation of wet land areas by state acquisition or other innovative methods of protection."

Taft suggested, "We must see that careful study is given to the possibility of designating the Pamlico River as a nutrient sensitive area in order to afford it special protection from the discharge of nutrients."

Reagan Vetoes Bill To Limit Ads During Kids' TV Shows

By Robert Greene
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Reagan on Saturday exercised a pocket veto of legislation that would have limited advertising during children's TV shows and required stations to provide informative programming for youngsters.

The president said in a statement that while he supports efforts to improve the quality of children's programs, "this bill simply cannot be reconciled with the freedom of expression secured by our Constitution."

The bill, which passed the Senate on a voice vote in October and the House by a 328-78 margin in June, would have reimposed advertising limits abandoned by the Federal Communications Commission four years ago. The FCC had said the marketplace itself could best regulate commercials.

"While I applaud efforts to increase the amount and quality of children's television programming, the Constitution simply does not empower the federal government to oversee the programming decisions of broadcasters in the manner prescribed by this bill," Reagan said in his statement.

Children's TV advocates had pressed for passage of the legislation, maintaining that under the FCC's philosophy of deregulation, advertising during children's shows has increased and the quality of the programs has deteriorated.

The bill would have limited commercials in children's program to 10½ minutes per hour on weekends and 12 minutes per hour on weekdays. Stations would have had until 1990 to comply with the advertising limits.

It also would have required stations to "serve the educational and information needs of children" in their overall programming. The FCC would evaluate those efforts in considering whether to renew stations licenses.

Reagan, in his veto message, said that "conditioning license renewals upon the federal government's determination as to the adequacy of a licensee's programming would violate the First Amendment."

"It would inhibit broadcasters from offering innovative programs that do not fit neatly into regulatory categories and discourage the creation of programs that might not satisfy the tastes of agency officials responsible for considering license renewals," he said.

FCC Chairman Dennis Patrick had said the legislation was "unnecessary and ill-advised," particularly because the commission was considering taking action on its own related to the commercialization of children's television.

The legislation was a bipartisan compromise that had been stripped of a proposal to prohibit programs that feature toy manufacturers' products. Critics call such shows "program-length commercials."

Edward O. Fritts, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, which helped craft the compromise, said of the bill: "While we recognize this legislation charted some new territory we were willing to accept its outcome."

"Frankly, we expected the president to sign it." Fritts said. "Under any circumstances, we are very sensitive to our responsibility to provide quality programming to children and we will continue to do so with or without legislation."

Reagan also signed a number of other measures that won legislative approval in the waning days of the 100th Congress:

— A law banning the sale of lawn darts, a game that is blamed for the deaths of three children and injuries to thousands of others. The bill requires the Consumer Product Safety Commission to carry out the ban, which is moving to do so on its own.

— The so-called "Bork bill," designed to protect the privacy of video store customers by prohibiting the unauthorized release of information about what tapes they rent or purchase.

The bill grew out of last year's hearings on the nomination of Robert H. Bork to the Supreme Court. During the deliberations, a weekly newspaper in Washington, D.C., obtained and published the video rental records of Bork, whose nomination ultimately was rejected by the Senate.

— A law banning the shipment of real-looking toy guns and of imitation guns unless they have a blaze orange plug in the barrel. The law was enacted in part because of shootings in which imitations were mistaken for real weapons.

— A law extending for two years the temporary authority for cash awards by inspectors general to federal employees whose disclosures of fraud and mismanagement result in cost savings to the government.

— A law designating certain lands and waters in Pettaquamscutt Cove, R.I., a National Wildlife Refuge.

Indian Warships, Gunmen In Standoff

By Raju Gopalakrishnan
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MALE, Maldives — Military officials tried to break a high seas standoff Saturday night with gunmen who staged a failed coup in Maldives, seized 25 hostages and were holding them aboard a crippled boat, officials said.

Two Indian warships tailed the boat in the Indian Ocean, and military officers were negotiating by radio with the gunmen for release of the hostages, Indian and Maldivian officials in Male said.

"We have not yet reached any conclusion. There are many lives involved. There are threats to life," said Maj. Zahir of the Maldivian security forces. He gave only one name.

"We are trying to solve the problem as soon as possible," said Zahir nearly 48 hours after the ship left Male, the capital.

The British Broadcasting Corp. reported Saturday night that the captain of the crippled vessel said the mercenaries had shot to death two hostages, wired the ship with explosives and threatened to blow it up if the Indian vessels attacked.

The report said a BBC correspondent had spoken to the captain in a ship-to-shore call.

Zahir said he could not verify the report. He was contacted by telephone in Male by The Associated Press and said the captain's statement "may have been propaganda."

The BBC report identified the ship as the Progress Light. Lloyd's Register of Ships lists the Progress Light as a 5,180-ton freighter owned by Maldives National Ship Management Ltd. in Male.

Maldivian President Maumoon Abdul Gayoom said in a telephone interview broadcast by the BBC in London that the safety of the hostages was the paramount concern.

Gayoom said from Male, "We wouldn't want to do anything that would engander their lives."

"Some boats of the Indian fleet, at our request, are continuing their surveillance of the ship so we could coordinate our action in a way that would not endanger the lives of the hostages and at the same time apprehend the mercenaries," he said.

Officials said an aide to former President Ibrahim Nasir participated in Thursday's pre-dawn attack and may have instigated it. Nasir, who lives in Singapore, denied involvement.

In Male, members of the security forces patrolled the gray sand streets. Businesses and shops were closed because of a national day of mourning for those who died in the violence.

Bloodstains were visible near the bullet-scarred presidential palace and security force headquarters.

India's top diplomat in Male said 27 to 32 people were killed when 150 gunmen — believed to be Tamil mercenaries from nearby Sri Lanka — attempted to overthrow President Gayoom.

"This figure is probably understated, because the mercenaries may have removed their dead," Ambassador A.K. Banerjee said. He provided no breakdown on the deaths, but said 25 people were taken hostage aboard the vessel. Earlier reports had said there were 18 to 20 hostages.

The mercenaries fled early Friday after Indian paratroopers landed to help Gayoom and his lightly armed security forces in the Indian Ocean nation, which is also known as the Maldive Islands.

Banerjee and Foreign Minister Fathulla Jameel said they suspected the coup was instigated by Abdullah Luthufi, a former Nasir aide.

"He was brandishing a gun as if he was the leader," Jameel said when contacted by telephone from Colombo, Sri Lanka.

"He gave orders to different groups of people, and for a short time this character went into the president's office and to satisfy himself, he sat on the president's desk just to assert he had taken over the country."

Banerjee said Luthufi and two Maldivian businessmen accompanied the gunmen. He said said none of the three was caught and may be on the boat with the gunmen.

He said the cargo ship, hit by fire from Indian troops Friday, was limping northeast at 9 mph toward Sri Lanka with the Indian warships staying close at hand.

He said the hostages included Transport Minister Ahmed Mujithaba.

Western diplomats, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Nasir supporters have been trying for up to five years to recruit guerrillas from Sri Lanka's Tamil ethnic minority.

Patrick-Arthur House Relocation On Agenda

Arrangements to relocate the Patrick-Arthur House, located at the corner of 14th Street and Charles Boulevard, will again be considered by the Greenville City Council at a 6 p.m. workshop session Monday in the third floor conference room of City Hall.

The property on which the historic structure is built has been rezoned for commercial use and the developer negotiating for the land has indicated a shopping center is planned for the corner lot.

Scheduled for consideration is a proposal to enter into an agreement with the developer and real estate agent whereby the city would move the house within 14 days after the developer's acquisition of the property.

The council previously voted against a proposal which would have given the city just seven days to move the house from its current site.

The Patrick-Arthur House is one of the last Gothic-influenced Victorian farm houses of the 19th Century in Greenville.

Also scheduled Monday is a report of findings and recommendations of the Gardner Fire Station Ad Hoc Committee.

The council formed the committee on July 14 to investigate potential reuses of the currently vacant fire station located adjacent to Peppermint Park near 14th Street and Brownlea Drive.

The council agreed to form the committee after representatives of The Elmhurst Neighborhood Association expressed concern over what they said was the facility's detrimental impact on the neighborhood.

A discussion will also be held regarding a proposed amendment to the city's charter allowing the mayor to vote on all issues before the council.

Currently the mayor votes only to break a tie between voting council members.

During the past two years, eight instances have occurred whereby the ability of the mayor to vote could have affected the outcome of a voting matter which lacked the four affirmative council votes necessary for passage.

Also scheduled is a presentation by Dr. Mary Ann Rose concerning the Mayor's Advisory Council Task Force on the Elderly.

The council is also scheduled Monday to discuss those items to be addressed at Thursday's City Council action meeting 7:30 p.m. in council chambers of City Hall.

The items include an ordinance deleting the Greenville Historic Properties Commission from the City Code and rewritten to provide for a combined Historic Properties and Districts Commission called the Historic Preservation Commission.

The council will also consider two annexation requests totaling approximately 25 acres and both recommended for approval by the Planning and Zoning Commission.

Also to be considered is a request by Derek P. Dunn to annex 20.06 acres of Westhaven Section 9, Phase I, located off Cedarhurst Road just south of Westhaven Section 8 and a request by James M. Moye Jr. to annex five acres of Park Place, Block A, Lot 1, located south of Stantonsburg Road, west of Pitt County Memorial Hospital and east of the proposed Arlington Boulevard.

The council will consider a boundary agreement between Winterville, Greenville, Greenville Utilities Commission and Pitt County.

The sale of three disposal parcels in the South Evans Community Development Project will be considered — Parcel 42-H-1A for $5,700, Parcel 42-H-1B for $3,000, and 42-J-2A for $28,000.

In other matters Thursday, the council will consider the sale of surplus city property including 12 vehicles; the appointment of Development Director Bobby E. Roberson as the city's representative in 1989 to the Mid-East Commission Board; an ordinance changing the street name of "Boxwood Lane" to "Baywood Lane"; a bid of $92,495 by North Carolina Equipment Company for a 6.7 cubic yard, industrial-type street sweeper; budget amendments decreasing $192 appropriated to the Family Violence Center in 1988-89;

An increase of $71,250 in appropriations for the Rental Rehabilitation Program; the appropriation of $3,969 from fund balance to purchase bus engine parts; an ordinance revising the Pay and Classification plan for fiscal year 1988-89; a Municipal Agreement with the North Carolina DOT for a section of the Evans Street widening projet from Howell Street to Greenville Boulevard which includes provisions for the DOT to perform water and sewer relocations and adjustments for GUC on a reimbursable basis; an amendment to the Zoning Ordinance preventing a petition from being continually withdrawn from Planning and Commission and City Council meetings, and an ordinance rewriting subdivision regulations in the city.

Consent agenda items to be considered Thursday include consideration of sections of Tiffany and Wellons drives for permanent city maintenance and the release of $1,133 in taxes.

Ministers Pray For Anderson

WAUWATOSA, Wis. (AP) — A group of ministers will hold a prayer meeting for American hostage Terry Anderson on Sunday, and a clergyman who was on an airplane bombed in Athens in 1986 will lead a prayer for Anderson's captors.

The ministers plan to speak about the hostages being held in the Middle East, their families and the people trying to secure their release, but Tom Kojis said he wanted to talk about the captors.

"Sometimes it's a little difficult to know how to pray for your enemy," Kojis said.

Kojis, pastor at the Wauwatosa Avenue United Methodist Church, his wife Joan, and son Jon, were aboard TWA flight 840 on April 2, 1986, when a bomb exploded, killing four people.

But he said he tries to understand the circumstances that led to the bombing and to other terrorist acts, including Anderson's abduction.

Anderson, the chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, was abducted March 16, 1985, and is the longest held of any of the American hostages.

"I think that there are times when I look at the whole question and say are we all guilty?" Kojis said. "I try to get away from us and them."

Jordan, Martin Trade Barbs

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

While Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan renewed his attack on Gov. Jim Martin's commitment to education Saturday, the Republican governor campaigned for a GOP sweep Nov. 8 that would include "a better lieutenant governor."

Jordan, in Greensboro to speak to the North Carolina School Boards Association, said he was "amazed" Martin was not there also.

"It shows what he feels about education," Jordan said. "He knows that he has a horrible record.

"My guess is they (campaign organizers) are trying to protect him from himself."

Martin, after a rally in strongly Republican Davidson County, said he didn't know the association was meeting. Asked whether his absence said anything about his stand on education, he said tersely, "Of course not."

During the rally at Tyro, Martin regaled a crowed of about 700 with what has become a standard speech promising better schools, better roads, better jobs and a better environment.

"I also want a better lieutenant governor for North Carolina," Martin said, noting that Jordan "fought me every step of the way."

Martin asked the partisan crowd to deliver a 68 percent majority on Election Day and to help Republican Jim Gardner beat Sen. Tony Rand in the lieutenant governor's race.

Jordan told about 200 educators at the Greensboro meeting that Martin was trying to take undeserved credit for advances in education like teaching fellowships, school construction and the career ladder.

"Jim Martin talked about doing things for schools and he came up with a bond program (with) ... cheaper interest," Jordan said. "When it became evident that that would not do the job ... then it was a different story. Jim Martin was not there. He was AWOL there just like he was AWOL this morning.

"... You know where his priorities are, tax cuts for the rich first, before education," Jordan added.

Kevin Brown, Martin's campaign director, told the association longstanding commitments in the western part of the state kept Martin from attending. He said the governor agrees education is a top priority.

"Governor Jim Martin has been leading and he's been dragging Bob Jordan along," Brown said.

He said Martin pushed for a career ladder for teachers and Jordan "never lifted a finger to do anything to promote it."

As for the schools, "It was Jim Martin who put the issue of new school construction on the table," Brown said.

He reminded educators Martin had put forward the concept of teaching fellowships in 1985, long before Jordan championed the idea. And he said Martin favors flexibility and accountability for local school personnel.

"The race was getting closer about two months ago, but it wasn't getting close fast enough for the other side," he said. "That's when they went on the attack."

Martin said ads like one portraying his administration as a bunch of monkeys backfired, drawing more negative responses than any other issue.

"I thought it (the ad) was funny," he said. "But a lot of other people did not agree."

Bell Will Ring Tuesday On Campaign Slugfest

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The grueling battle for North Carolina's highest office ends Tuesday, when voters will make Jim Martin the state's first Republican governor to win consecutive terms or replace him with Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan.

Also vying to make history is former congressman Jim Gardner, who hopes to become the first Republican elected lieutenant governor this century. State Sen. Tony Rand is the Democratic nominee.

Also at stake in the election are the state's 13 electoral votes for president being sought by Republican George Bush and Democrat Michael Dukakis, the state's 11 U.S. House seats, all 170 General Assembly seats, the remaining eight Council of State posts, judgeships and a variety of local offices.

They have slugged it out ever since, spending a record $10 million between them in what has boiled down to a debate over who is more effective at implementing philosophically similar agendas.

Both nominees describe themselves as champions of education, economic growth, an expanded transportation network and a cleaner environment. Their proposals for achieving these goals often have differed, but seldom in ways that have invited ideological labels such as "liberal" or "conservative."

"It would be hard to imagine two men who have a more different approach to what the role of governor ... should be," Jordan said when announcing his candidacy.

Jordan contends that Martin has been a "sitting governor in every sense of the word" — a glib, telegenic politician more interested in building the Republican Party and his own base than in the nuts and bolts of governing.

State government's biggest achievements over the past four years have been crafted by the Democratic leadership of the General Assembly, says Jordan, who presides over the state Senate. He repeatedly has accused Martin of opposing Democratic initiatives and later taking credit for them.

Martin cites a $170 million tax cut, a $220 million highway financing package and a growing state economy as evidence that his term has been a success. His television commercials and speeches boast of 100,000 new jobs each year of his governorship, a 4 percent unemployment rate and high national rankings for environmental protection.

He blames Democrats for his rocky relationship with the Legislature that has thwarted some of his programs.

"Far too often, the legislative partisanship overruled the good will of most legislators to impose partisan discipline against this administration, to erode the executive powers of this office and to place every obstacle in our path," Martin said in his re-election announcement speech.

Polls consistently have shown Martin leading Jordan, though the race appeared to tighten last summer when national surveys showed Dukakis ahead of Bush. When Bush moved ahead in September, Martin's lead widened.

A final round of polls this weekend suggests that Jordan faces an uphill struggle, but he insisted Friday the race was not over.

"It's still our election to win," he said. "If we do the right things between now and Nov. 8 we're going to win this election."

For his part, Martin repeatedly has cautioned supporters to avoid overconfidence and to redouble get-out-the-vote efforts.

"We have within our grasp the ability to win," he said Friday. "We can win it if we do what we know how to do, or we can lose it if we ... don't get out and work. It's going to be a battle royal out there in the trenches the last few days."

The race for lieutenant governor has been the most bitterly contested in memory. Gardner, who served in the House from 1966-68 and ran unsuccessfully for governor in 1968 and 1972, has benefited from wider name recognition than Rand, the Senate majority leader.

The campaign drew little attention until early October, when Rand began running television ads criticizing Gardner's attendance record in Congress.

Gardner hit back with commercials blasting Rand, a Fayetteville defense lawyer, for representing drug dealers. Rand counterpunched with ads detailing Gardner's business failures in the 1970s.

On Friday, Rand said he would file a $2.5 million libel suit against Gardner for a commercial that contends Rand aided a drug smuggler.

The latest polls indicate the contest is a dead heat.

Also emerging from the shadows late in the campaign was the race to succeed Secretary of State Thad Eure, who is retiring from the post he's held sincd 1936.

Former Attorney General Rufus Edmisten is the favorite but is receiving a spirited challenge from Raleigh businessman John Carrington, who has spent nearly $300,000 on television commercials describing Edmisten as "a liberal lobbyist." Edmisten accuses Carrington of trying to buy the office.

Robert Orr and Donald Smith, Republican judges on the North Carolina Court of Appeals, are seeking election to the seats to which Martin appointed them. If elected, they would become the first Republicans to win statewide judicial elections this century.

John Friday, a Democrat and special Superior Court judge, is challenging Orr. Smith's Democratic opponent is Jack Lewis, also a special Superior Court judge.

Here's a rundown of other offices up for grabs Tuesday:

— State Rep. Bob Etheridge and teacher Tom Rogers are running to succeed retiring Craig Phillips as state superintendent of public instruction. Etheridge, a Democrat, is a Lillington businessman and chairman of the House Base Budget Committee. Rogers, a Republican political newcomer, teacher math at a juvenile correctional facility in Concord.

— Democratic Insurance Commissioner Jim Long is seeking re-election against Republican Hermon "Pete" Rednour, owner and operator of a machine parts manufacturing company in Gastonia making his first bid for public office.

— Six-term Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham, a Democrat, is running for re-election against Republican Leo Tew, a Sampson County farmer and retired airline pilot who lost to Graham in 1984. — Democrat John Brooks is running for a fourth term as labor commissioner. The Republican nominee is Greensboro businessman Richard Levy.

— Democrat Ed Renfrow is running for a third term as state auditor against Republican Edward Garner Jr., assistant secretary of the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety.

— Democrat Harlan Boyles faces Republican opposition for the post of treasurer for the first time since he first ran in 1976. He's seeking a fourth term against Nancy L. Coward, operator of a state license tag agency in Sylva.

Shipyard Mistake Costly

The U.S.S. Orion, a submarine tender, returns to the Charleston, S.C., Naval Shipyard to get more paint applied to its hull. While in port during the summer, shipyard workers failed to put enough paint on the ship, a mistake Navy officials said cost approximately $225,000.

Borough Solicitor Convicted

N.C. Women Died In Hit-Run Incident

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEDIA, Pa. — Rejecting his claim that he believed he was having a nightmare, a jury convicted Media borough solicitor Paul L. Patchel of homicide by motor vehicle and leaving the scene of an accident in the hit-and-run deaths of two North Carolina women.

Patchel, 37, showed no reaction when the jury announced its verdict about 5 p.m. Friday, but his attorney, John M. Gallagher Jr., slumped in his seat.

Later, Gallagher said he had submitted a motion for a new trial, asking for a jury that had not been exposed to extensive publicity about the June 11 accident.

Hazel Fox, 57, of Tryon, N.C., and Ruth Wright, 60, of Union Mills, N.C., were visiting Delaware County with a church choir when they were killed on June 11. They were hit at night as they walked across a road toward their hotel with food from a fast-food restaurant.

Assistant District Attorney Daniel McDevitt said Patchel, who has been on a leave of absence as Media borough solicitor, faces up to 20 years in prison.

Patchel, 37, was allowed to remain free on bail pending sentencing. No date has been set for a sentencing hearing.

"I was hoping for a guilty verdict on all charges," said Mrs. Wright's daughter, Libby Long. "But the verdict will help ease some pain. Our mother always said God doesn't let you do wrong and get by."

Mrs. Fox's son, William, said he was glad Patchel was found guilty.

"At least he won't be able to walk away from the incident and hide behind a story about nightmares and dreams," he said.

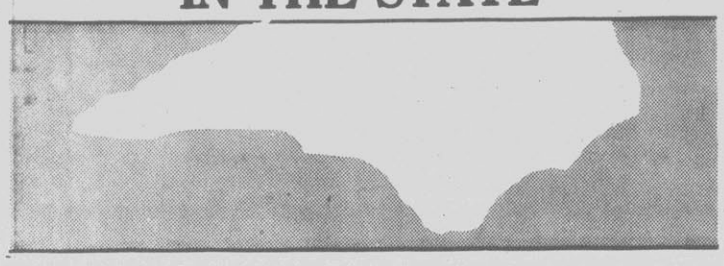
Patchel's parents, who had attended the trial since it began, left the courtroom once the proceedings were over. Mrs. Patchel had to be helped down the aisle and escorted out. Other supporters, including Media Mayor Frank Daly, would not comment on the outcome.

Ms. Long said she and other relatives of the victims believed Patchel should have found a way to tell them he was sorry for what he did.

"It would show us that he is a human being and that he has feelings," she said.

Gallagher, however, said it would have been improper for Patchel to have tried to speak to the families during the trial because it could have been interpreted as trying to influence them.

IN THE STATE



Parole Criticized

CLINTON, N.C. (AP) — An assistant district attorney in Sampson County is complaining about the parole of a convicted drug dealer who was released from prison after serving less than four years of a 35-year sentence.

But the chairman of the state Parole Commission said the release was forced by state laws designed to ease prison overcrowding.

Phillip Henry Barfield, 31, of Newton Grove, was paroled Oct. 24 after serving less than one-eighth of his prison sentence for cocaine trafficking, according to parole officials.

Barfield was released on "community service parole," which permits early freedom for first-time inmates serving sentences of at least a year, officials said.

Assistant District Attorney Dewey Hudson criticized the release as a signal that the state is soft on drug offenses.

Crossover Voting

MOCKSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A complaint about a political advertisement in Davie County has focused attention on crossover voting and how a voter could accidentally cancel some of his or her votes.

William A. Burnette, a Democratic candidate for the Davie County Board of Commissioners, said that a Republican advertisement about crossover voting is misleading.

"It seems that it might be somewhat intended at keeping Republicans from crossing over," said Burnette, who acknowledged that he will need a considerable number of crossover votes to win in Davie County, where Republicans outnumber Democrats.

The advertisement in the Nov. 3 editions of the Davie County Enterprise-Record says, in part:

"You cannot cross over without hurting your party. If you mark a straight Republican ticket in the circle and then cross over and vote for one Democrat commissioner or one Democrat senator, you will then be voting against all Republican candidates for their office. You cannot vote a straight ticket and then cross over without losing your vote for the candidates of your party for that office."

Judicial Proceedings

WILMINGTON (AP) — Officials in Laos have told U.S. government officials that judicial proceedings will take place for two North Carolinians detained in Laos for more than a month, but did not indicate what the charges would be.

The Laotian government has not specified precisely what type of judicial proceeding would take place. State Department spokesman Donald Stader said the department was informed of the judicial proceeding on Thursday.

"We were assured that they would do it as soon as they could," Stader said Friday.

He said the U.S. Embassy in Vientiane, Laos, has asked to have access to the proceedings.

Donna Long of Jacksonville and James Copp of Hampstead were arrested Oct. 3 after crossing the Mekong River by boat from Thailand into Laos while attempting to distribute messages offering a $2.4 million reward for anyone who brings a live American prisoner of war out of Indochina.

Campaign Brawl

RALEIGH (AP) — A dispute over $7,000 worth of campaign posters turned into a brawl at state Democratic headquarters when a fight broke out between a party official and a political vendor, officials said.

Elmer B. Cooper, active in the state campaign of presidential nominee Michael S. Dukakis, was arrested by Raleigh Police and charged with simple assault.

"They say this campaign needed a little spirit and passion," said James D. Warlick, president of Political Americana. "Sometimes you have to duke it out — no pun intended."

Warlick, who makes campaign buttons and posters for candidates, said Cooper lunged at him Thursday after they swore at each other about the $7,000 bill. Warlick said he was nursing two broken ribs as a result of the fisticuffs, which was broken up by two high-ranking Democratic Party officials.

Alzheimers Progress

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Progess has been made in determining the causes of Alzheimers disease, and researchers will continue to work with families of those afflicted to find a cure, a researcher from New York City said in Asheville.

"I'm predicting that we should understand at least one of the causes of the disease, if not more," Peter Davies, professor of Alzheimer's research in neuroscience and pathology at Albert Einstein College of Medicine, said during a symposium.

"We're very optimistic about the research that is being done and enjoy sharing that with the families of victims of the disease."

Davies, who has been involved in Alzheimer's research for the past 14 years, said that the most progress has been made in the area of what causes the illness.

Saving The Family Farm Is Everybody's Business.

North Carolina farm crops brought in more than $4 billion last year . . . an increase of $40 million in just one year. Beyond the tremendous impact agriculture has on our economy, farming is the bedrock of our traditional family values. That's why all North Carolinians should be concerned with agriculture. And that's why Governor Jim Martin has made protecting our state's family farms a major part of his program of balanced economic growth.

Jim Martin's record as Governor is one of delivering solid help for farmers. The results of his leadership include:

- Saving the Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Corporation from collapse by accomplishing the buy-out of its surplus stock, which has led to the reduction of assessments and the first increase in tobacco quotas in 13 years.
- Stemming the tide of family farm foreclosures with new credit and loan programs instituted by his Task Force on Farm Finance.
- Increasing employment opportunities in rural areas, with 68% of new manufacturing jobs last year going to communities of less than 10,000 people.
- Gaining financial aid for farmers by having 81 North Carolina counties designated as agricultural disaster areas following the 1986 drought.
- Getting the Republic of China to agree to buy an additional $63 million worth of North Carolina agricultural products.

Governor Jim Martin knows that saving the family farm involves more than dollars and cents. For generations, those living on farms have served as models of traditional family values. Our farm families are a direct tie to our heritage and the values they embody are a stabilizing force in today's changing society.

Governor Martin knows that to help keep farm families together and preserve our traditional values there must be increased employment opportunities in rural areas.

That is why Governor Martin is working to bring more and more new job opportunities to rural North Carolina. Governor Jim Martin is leading the fight for farm families as he works to maintain a healthy balance between agriculture, travel and tourism, and manufacturing. Let's keep a good thing going.

Florida Woman Killed In Crash

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRIDGEPORT, W.Va. (AP) — Tall trees leading up to a landing approach where a small plane crashed, killing one family member and injuring two others, have been blamed for several other plane crashes, a local official said Saturday.

State police said it appeared Roberta Krouse, 52, of Sarasota, Fla., died instantly in the Friday night crash a half-mile north of Benedum Airport in northwestern West Virginia.

However, Flemington Fire Chief Steve Gallo said the woman was alive when rescuers reached the scene, but that she died as she was being removed from the wreckage.

She was declared dead at United Hospital Center, Inc., in Clarksburg.

Her husband, Fred Krouse, 43, and her son, Cory Putnam, 10, were flown by helicopter to Ruby Memorial Hospital in Morgantown. A nursing supervisor said Saturday that Krouse was listed in critical condition and Putnam was listed in serious condition.

Bridgeport Deputy Fire Chief Mike Salvio said it appeared the plane came in too low and hit a tall tree on a ridge next to the runway. He said both wings were ripped off in the crash, but that all three passengers had remained inside the plane.

Salvio said there have been several crashes on the same runway approach, most of them caused by descending planes clipping tall trees.

He said the Krouses were making what had appeared to be a routine landing at the tiny airport.

He said the runway lights were on, but the small plane's landing lights probably were not bright enough to give a clear view of any protruding trees.

"They just hit the hillside. They weren't reporting any problems. The radio control tower said they just went off the radar," Salvio said.

Officials said the single-engine plane went down at 7:45 p.m. It took emergency crews about 45 minutes of searching the rural, hilly area to locate the downed plane.

Officials said the Krouses had flown from Florida, stopping on the way at an airport in Greensboro, N.C.

A hitchhiker in the area told WBOY-TV he saw the plane go down.

"I heard a strange sputtering noise and it sounded like an engine stalling," said Mark Thompson of Weirton. "The plane's starboard wing was tilted very, very steep — almost a 45 degree angle — coming in behind the trees and I didn't see it pull back up."

The official cause of the crash remained undetermined. A spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board in Atlanta, Ga. said an investigator would be at the scene Saturday.

The trio was traveling to Harrison County for a visit with a cousin, Barbara Harris of Bridgeport, officials said. They were flying in a four-seater Piper Cherokee Turbo Arrow III.

State Police Cpl. G.W. Lemasters said the search party found the craft using a locater device.

"At first we couldn't get to anybody. They were all sort of sandwiched in down there," Lemasters said. "We started pulling out pieces of the plane. It was brute force used pulling the airplane from them."

Toxin Eyed In Dolphin Deaths

By Valerie Meehan
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE — A naturally occurring toxin is the focus of research into an an epidemic of dolphin deaths along the East Coast, the lead investigator said Saturday.

More than 800 dead and dying bottlenose dolphins, many covered with skin lesions, washed ashore from New Jersey to Florida beginning in June 1987. The last dead dolphin was spotted in Florida in February.

Because of the state of the animals, researchers originally suspected a virus or bacteria, but are now concentrating on toxins that could have poisoned the marine mammals, said Dr. Joseph Geraci, professor of wildlife diseases at the Ontario College of Veterinarian Medicine in Guelph, Canada. He presented a report on his investigation at an Oceans '88 conference here.

He expects final conclusions in about six weeks.

Geraci said while high levels of pollutants, and various viruses were found in the dead dolphins' tissue, neither appears to have killed them.

"(We) suspect that we are dealing with a point source, something at sea that might have been a natural toxin or some other pollutant," Geraci said. Geraci said all the dolphins appear to have been poisoned in early summer 1987.

"Some died right away, some lived long enough to become infected with bacterias. Those animals languished for as long as six, eight months after the initial event," he said.

Most industrial pollutants have been tentatively ruled out and scientists are concentrating on natural poisons, Geraci said. One battery of tests for biological toxins found nothing, but tests are continuing, he said.

What Will New President Do Wednesday Morning?

By Terence Hunt
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — "Well, what do we do now?" George Bush asked Ronald Reagan the morning after they were elected eight years ago. Either Bush or Michael Dukakis will face that question come Wednesday, and the answer is not as evident now as it was in 1980.

The long campaign between Republican Bush and Democrat Dukakis has been filled with political symbols, such as the flag and the Pledge of Allegiance, but short on specifics about what either candidate actually would do in the White House.

There have been no overriding issues, such as a faltering economy or a threat to peace that have compelled Bush or Dukakis to come forward with bold ideas. For example, neither candidate has been willing to offer a concrete program for shrinking the huge budget deficit.

Reagan's election was viewed as a mandate for a change in course from the Carter administration. He pledged to cut taxes, build up the Pentagon and cut down the government.

Bush, ahead in the polls a few days before the election, promises to stay the course set by Reagan. "When you have to change horses in midstream, doesn't it make sense to switch to the one who's going the same way?" Bush asked.

On the other hand, if Dukakis managed an upset, there would be a major upheaval in policy and personnel. "The best America is yet to come," he promises. But again, few specifics.

With the now familiar invitation to "read my lips," Bush says he will not raise taxes and, indeed, will try to cut capital gains taxes. He says he will oppose new spending by Congress and personally negotiate with lawmakers for a "flexible freeze" on the budget.

He promises to keep America's military strong, pressing ahead with research and eventual development of the Star Wars missile defense shield, while at the same time seeking progress with the Soviet Union. And he says he will clean up the environment and strive to improve education.

Bush also promises more money for child care, including a toddler tax credit of up to $1,000 per child under age 4 for poor families.

He has promised no less than five summits, including an early meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to "get to each other up correctly."

Bush has pledged to convene a NATO summit "as one of my first acts as president." He says there will be a global conference on the environment at the White House within the first year in office and a summit of Western hemisphere nations to chart strategy for a war against drugs.

Moreover, Bush says he will "meet with all the governors to discuss the most urgent problems facing our nation's schools."

In addition, each year the president of the United States meets with the leaders of the six other richest nations in the world at an economic summit. Bush says he will make agriculture the top item on the agenda.

Dukakis promises a crackdown on tax cheats who he says beat the Treasury out of $110 billion a year. He says he'll hire more tax inspectors — which Bush seized on as a promise that Dukakis would put an IRS agent in every kitchen.

On taxes, Dukakis says no responsible candidate can rule out the possibility of new taxes, but that he'd ask an increase only as a last resort.

To fight drugs, Dukakis said he would double the number of agents at the Drug Enforcement Agency within five years and hire 800 more federal prosecutors to handle drug cases.

He says he will wipe out the trade deficit in four years and put the country on the course toward a balanced budget.

On defense, he calls Star Wars a fantasy but still would put $1 billion in the budget for it, about 25 percent of what it gets now. Dukakis promises to find a "sensible, affordable" way to modernize the land-based nuclear missile arsenal.

Some Politicians Fret Over Early Network Projections

By Jim Drinkard
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — George Bush's lead in the polls is causing some political operatives to worry that the networks might call a landslide win early on election evening and discourage potential voters in some close Senate races.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, said pleas to the TV networks to withhold conclusions about the election's outcome until after West Coast polls are closed have yielded little.

"We have asked them not to call the race based on exit polling," Kerry said. But he acknowledged that "the competitive drive is going to escape any kind of restraint."

Both Bush and Democrat Michael Dukakis have pledged not to make any statement of victory or defeat until all polls on the West Coast have closed.

The pledges from the two camps are "a significant step to increase voter participation in Tuesday's election," said Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., who solicited the statements from the two campaigns.

Television executives have said they will not call the election in any state until its polls are closed. But they also have made it clear that if a candidate exceeds the 270 electoral vote margin needed for election, they will not sit on the news.

Polls in Eastern states begin to close as early as 6 p.m., while the closing time in California, Oregon, Washington and Hawaii is 11 p.m. Eastern time. For Alaska, poll closing is midnight Eastern time.

Kerry said the effect of announcing a presidential election victory before all polls are closed might be to discourage West Coast voters from casting their ballots, even though local races might be very tight.

In Washington, the race between Democratic Rep. Mike Lowry and Republican former Sen. Slade Gorton is a dead heat, as is the Nevada contest between incumbent Sen. Chic Hecht, a Republican, and Democratic Gov. Richard Bryan.

Those races, as well as potentially close Senate contests in Montana and California could be affected by an early outcome in the presidential race, Kerry said.

"It was disastrous in 1980," when Democratic Sen. Warren Magnuson of Washington lost after the networks called the election for Ronald Reagan shortly after 8 p.m. and President Carter conceded soon afterward, Kerry said.

Then, there were reports that voters lined up at polling places went home without voting after hearing the outcome of the presidential race reported, based on network exit polling.

This time, it is unclear what effect an early call might have on the closest Western Senate races. Kerry said, for example, that because Lowry has devoted followers and a highly organized campaign, he might be able to turn out his supporters anyway and such a development might hurt his opponent, Gorton.

But regardless of the effect, he said, discouraging any voter "negates the electoral process" and is wrong.

Legislation to address the problem through instituting a uniform poll-closing time across the country's six time zones has not been able to get through Congress.

Drug Dealer's Address Book

(An actual page from an address book confiscated and used as evidence in a drug dealer's trial.)

When drug kingpin Dennis Carl Cable was apprehended, an address book was confiscated. One of the names in the drug smuggler's book was Tony Rand. It is no wonder that a drug kingpin would keep Tony Rand's phone number handy. Before he sought public office, Rand was a favorite defense attorney of drug smugglers.

Cable did call on Rand to defend him. For his services, Rand received from Cable a $60,000 yacht specially designed for drug running.

Drug Dealer's Hideout

When smuggler George Purvis Jr. realized that his drug deal had gone bad (federal authorities had seized the boat carring the marihuana shipment) he called his drug kingpin at a Wilmington hotel. The drug lord left the hotel without checking out.

Then Purvis called Tony Rand.

The two met later that day in Rand's apartment. Rand had to go out of town for the weekend so he ALLOWED THE DRUG SMUGGLER TO SPEND THE WEEKEND IN HIS APARTMENT.

Purvis used Rand's phone to call his partner in Florida. On Monday, he caught a plane to Miami wearing Tony Rand's clothing.

Later that day, Rand called an attorney friend and had him clean out the drug lord's Wilmington hotel room and pay the bill.

Now Tony Rand claims to be a leader in the War on Drugs

The Question Is . . .

Strange Results Posted In U.S. Election Of 1888

By Carl Hartman
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The election of 100 years ago Sunday was one of strangest in U.S. history: the candidate who won the popular vote lost the election.

Grover Cleveland, the incumbent president, won a narrow popular victory against challenger Benjamin Harrison. Cleveland had 5,540,309 votes and Harrison 5,439,853.

But Harrison took New York, Ohio and Indiana by narrow margins for an electoral vote total of 233 to the president's 168. That has not happened since, but New York and Ohio are among the pivotal states this time, too.

Both Cleveland and his wife took the defeat as a temporary setback. On leaving the White House, Frances Cleveland told the staff:

"I want you to take good care of all the furniture and ornaments in the house, for I want to find everything just as it is now when we come back again ... four years from today:"

They did come back, too. In 1892, Cleveland defeated Harrison, winning both the popular and electoral vote to become the only president who ever served two terms that were not consecutive.

Unknown practitioners of dirty tricks started a rumor in the 1888 campaign that Cleveland abused his young wife, whom he married in 1886. There apparently were no grounds for the rumor, which seemed to have done him little harm — any more than the story that he was supporting an illegitimate child. That one was true and he admitted it at once. The story gave rise to a celebrated street song:

"Maw, Maw, where's my paw?
"Gone to the White House
"Haw, haw, haw."

There was some doubt whether the child was his. He had known the mother, a widow named Maria Halpin, during his early political career in Buffalo, N.Y. She named her son Oscar Folsom Cleveland.

In the 1884 election, which Cleveland won over James G. Blaine, a supporter suggested:

"We are told that Mr. Blaine has been delinquent in office but blameless in private life, while Mr. Cleveland has been a model of official integrity but culpable in his personal relations. We should therefore elect Mr. Cleveland to the public office which he is so well qualified to fill and remand Mr. Blaine to the private station he is admirably fitted to adorn."

The voters took the advice.

Indifference to scandal was not the only thing that made campaigns different then. Cleveland ran into trouble in 1888 because he had a budget surplus — the federal government's revenue amounted to $371 million, $103 million more than its spending.

Much of the embarrassing surplus came from tariffs on imported goods. Cleveland, a Democrat, wanted lower tariffs. That was partly because he wanted to import more cheap manufactured goods for the benefit of farmers who were important supporters of his party.

Harrison, a Republican, got support from industrialists who wanted a high tariff to protect their products from foreign competition.

After the 1888 election, Harrison and the 51st Congress got rid of the surplus. It was called the "billion-dollar Congress" because it was the first that ever spent that much. There was some help from Harrison. A Civil War hero himself, he appointed as commissioner of pensions "Corporal" James Tanner, whose policy was to help "every old comrade that needs it."

George Likes Michael?

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush on Saturday admitted to "a certain pleasantness" when he's together with Michael Dukakis, but hold on.

"I've been accused of liking ... almost everybody," the vice president said.

Bush and Dukakis were interviewed by David Frost for an hour-long program "The Next President: The Final Chapter" to be broadcast on television over 162 stations this weekend.

Frost put the question about liking the opponent to both candidates.

"I don't normally get personally angry or annoyed at the people that I run against," said Dukakis. He added he was surprised and disappointed at Bush's campaign and added, "there's something I think out of character about this and there are people who know him who believe that."

As for Bush, he said, too, that he didn't know his opponent well.

"But the contacts I've had with him have been very pleasant," Bush said. "But I've been accused of liking, liking, you know, almost everybody, and I think there is a lot of good in everyone and certainly in my opponent.

"I find when we are together, there's a certain pleasantness, in spite of the tension."

Bush Odds Improve

LONDON (AP) — British bookmakers say George Bush is now a hotter favorite than at any time in the campaign to defeat Michael Dukakis in Tuesday's presidential election.

William Hill and Coral, two of the country's major bookmakers, said Saturday they had shortened the odds to 1-to-7 on Vice President Bush, and lengthened the odds on the Massachusetts governor to 4-to-1.

The 1-to-7 odds on Bush means if the Republican candidate wins, a bet of $7 would win $1 plus the original stake. A bet of $1 on Dukakis, the Democratic candidate, would win $4 plus the stake.

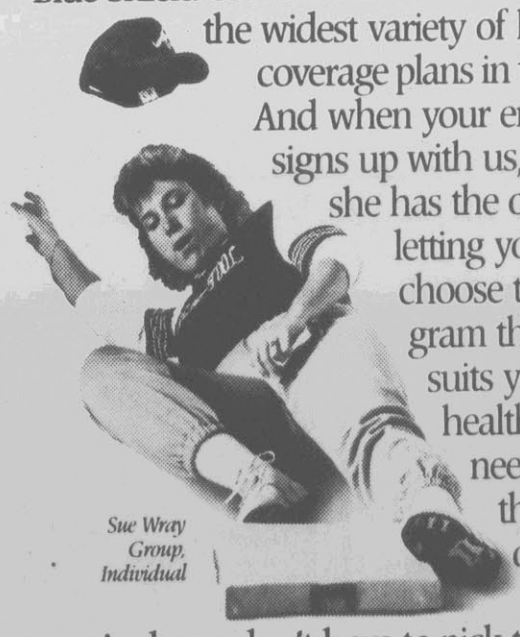
We Offer Your Company More Health Coverage Choices Than Anyone Else In The Field.

Not long ago, employees could only get one type of health coverage. Because basically that's all that was available.

But times have changed. Employers and employees have become more health conscious. And the people who provide health coverage have found new ways to deliver it.

But nobody has found more ways than Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina. We offer the widest variety of health coverage plans in the state. And when your employer signs up with us, he or she has the option of letting you choose the program that best suits your health care needs and the needs of your family.



Sue Wray Group, Individual

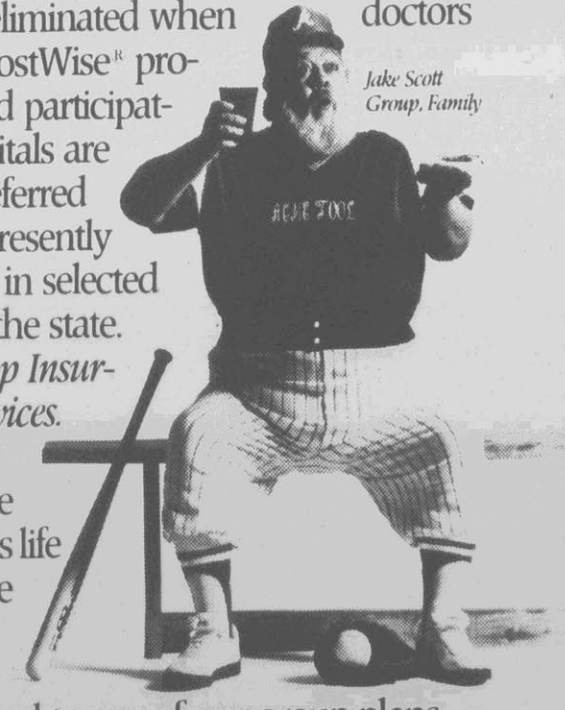
And you don't have to pick the same plan as the person working next to you. Because your needs and that person's needs may be completely different.

Here's what you get to choose from:

Traditional Group. This is the plan you're probably most familiar with. It offers basic comprehensive coverage.

The Personal Care Plan or HMO of North Carolina. Your company may select one of the two. The Personal Care Plan is an HMO. One monthly payment covers virtually every health care need. HMO of North Carolina is an HMO, too. But it differs from the Personal Care Plan in that it utilizes the staff and facilities of a participating hospital. It is presently available in selected areas of the state.

Preferred Care. Preferred Care covers treatment wherever a patient prefers. But deductables and co-payments are reduced or eliminated when doctors in our CostWise® program and participating hospitals are used. Preferred Care is presently available in selected areas of the state.



Jake Scott Group, Family

Group Insurance Services. Group Insurance Services is life insurance coverage that can be attached to any of our group plans.

So there they are. The widest choice of health programs in North Carolina. And one of the reasons nearly two million North Carolinians choose us as their coverage carrier.

If your company has Blue Cross and Blue Shield coverage, talk to your employer about providing you the option of picking the plan you like best. And if your company's not covered by Blue Cross and Blue Shield, ask your employer to pick up the phone and call us. Because when it comes to health coverage, we're clearly the best in our field.

Graduate Student Suspected Of Creating 'Virus'

By David Germain
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ITHACA, N.Y. — A Cornell University graduate student whose father is a top government computer-security expert is suspected of creating the "virus" that slowed thousands of computers nationwide, school officials said Saturday.

Robert T. Morris Jr., 23, a first-year student in a doctorate computer science program, has a reputation as an expert computer hacker and is skilled enough to have written the rogue program, Cornell instructor Dexter Kozen said.

The New York Times quoted sources as saying Morris created the virus, which on Wednesday night began infecting an estimated 6,000 university and military computers connected through the Arpanet computer network established by the Pentagon.

The virus slowed down computers by replicating itself over and over and taking up memory space, but it is not believed to have destroyed any data.

The origin of such programs is hard to investigate, and it may be impossible to trace the virus back to Morris, said M. Stuart Lynn, vice president of information technologies at Cornell.

"At this stage we're simply not in a position to determine if the allegations are true," Lynn said at a news conference. He said he did not know how long the investigation would take.

"It's quite conceivable we may not be able to say with any certainty" if the virus was created in Cornell's computer system, he said.

He said the university had been contacted by the FBI, but there was no indication any criminal charges would be filed. Officials said the school could discipline Morris if he was involved.

The FBI said it was launching a preliminary inquiry to determine whether federal law had been violated.

Morris could not be reached for comment Saturday. His roommate, Chansong Da, said Morris did not come home Friday and she did not know where he was. University officials also were unable to contact him, Lynn said.

Reached at his home Saturday in Arnold, Md., Robert T. Morris Sr., chief scientist at the National Computer Security Center in Bethesda, Md., would not say where his son was or otherwise comment on the case.

The elder Morris has written widely on the security of the Unix operating system, the target of his son's virus program, the Times reported. He is widely known for writing a program to decipher passwords, which give users access to computers.

Cornell officials said they began examining Morris' computer files Friday night after the Times identified him.

Morris had passwords in his files "for some computers at Cornell and Stanford to which he is not entitled," although those could have been placed there by someone else, Lynn said.

A computer file dated Oct. 26 found in Cornell's system Saturday is the earliest indication that Morris may have been writing the program that spawned the virus, Lynn said.

It probably wasn't a malicious act, said Dean Krafft, research associate in computer science at Cornell.

"It would have been extremely simple to take this virus structure one step further so that it was extremely destructive," Krafft said. "With a couple more lines (in the program) it could have wiped out files in all 6,000 computers."

The computers affected by the virus all used the Unix 4.3 operating system program, developed by AT&T.

If it was Morris, he "apparently found a gaping hole in the system that I'm amazed no one exploited before," Kozen said. While the loophole in the system was not evident before the virus was unleashed, "in retrospect it's really quite obvious."

"He is reputed to be a good hacker, and I guess this would be the proof of it if it's found that he did cause (the virus)," Kozen said.

Bob Ford, a spokesman for AT&T's Bell Laboratories, said Morris worked at the company's computer research center at Murray Hill, N.J., either the summer before or after his freshman year at Harvard University, and his job included writing programs.

The Times quoted computer scientists as saying one of Morris' projects at AT&T was rewriting security software for most computers that run the Unix system.

"From what I hear, he is extremely bright, obviously," Ford said. "The code he worked on was intended for internal use only. The programs were not intended for use outside of Bell Labs."

Ford said the elder Morris also worked at Bell Labs at Murray Hill and Whippany, N.J., for 26 years before retiring about two years ago.

Some computer centers were forced to disconnect from Arpanet and shut computers down, but by Friday most reported that the virus had been eradicated.

However, at the University of Illinois, researchers decided Friday evening to pull off Arpanet "for the duration." "This virus has too many skills and it's not worth the risk," said Paul Pomes, a research programmer at the school. Experts there thought they had defeated the virus, only to find that the system had been reinfected.

Some researchers said the virus had several variations and that it was making an effort to capture passwords and break the "super user" code, which allows a user to work on a system with no restrictions at all.

4 Dead, 15 Hurt As Van Crashes

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A church van crashed Saturday while carrying relatives to visit inmates at Nottoway Correctional Center, killing four people and injuring at least 15 others, police said.

No other vehicles were involved in the accident on U.S. 360, said Officer M.E. Reed of the Chesterfield County Police. There were about 21 people on the van.

The Second Presbyterian Church in Richmond operates two vans each Saturday that take people to visit relatives at the prison, a prison employee said.

One person died at the scene and another was dead on arrival at the Medical College of Virginia Hospitals, Reed said.

Two patients, including a child of 4 or 5, died shortly after arriving at Johnston-Willis Hospital, spokeswoman Carol Mawyer said.

Two people were in serious condition at Johnston-Willis with pelvis, back and neck injuries, Ms. Mawyer said. Two others were in stable condition.

A supervisor at Chippenham Hospital said 11 patients were being treated in the emergency room and were in satisfactory condition.

THE REPUBLICAN PHILOSOPHY

WE BELIEVE:

That the right of individuals to achieve the best that is within themselves as long as they respect the rights of others, is the source of our Nation's strength.

That government exists to protect the freedom of opportunity in which each individual's creative ability can flourish.

That government activities should be limited to those things which people cannot do at all, or cannot do so well for themselves.

That the most effective government is government closest to the people.

That those who cannot provide for themselves should be assisted by both government and society, but that every effort should be made to help them become self-supporting, productive citizens with pride in their independence.

That equal rights, equal justice and equal opportunity belong to all, regardless of race, creed, age, sex, or national origin.

That the preservation of our Nation and the security of our citizens depend upon the Constitution, the laws and the courts, and that respect for them is the responsibility of every individual.

That government is accountable for maintaining sound money and a responsible economy. Individual rights, liberties and properties are continually eroded when citizens are oppressed by excessive taxation, inflation, government waste and over-regulation.

That government is responsible for national defense and that only a strong America can remain a free America.

That it is absolutely essential to maintain a strong national defense posture in order that we may at all times negotiate from a position of strength, not weakness, in our continuing efforts toward world peace and friendship.

That these concepts are the foundation of our national strength and that the Republican Party, which is committed to their preservation, is the Party of today and the Party for the Future.

IF THIS PHILOSOPHY SOUNDS LIKE YOUR OWN,

VOTE REPUBLICAN ON TUESDAY!

The Honorable James G. Martin

RE: W. E. Dansey's candidacy for East Carolina University Board of Trustees

Dear Governor:

Please accept this letter as my recommendation and support for W. E. Dansey's candidacy for membership on the East Carolina University Board of Trustees. I know of few citizens in Eastern North Carolina who have demonstrated the loyalty and commitment to the progress of that University as has Bill Dansey.

A successful businessman, dedicated father, active civic leader, Bill has the character and willingness to work that is so important to the community and so necessary for a successful trustee.

Probably the most important measure of a candidate's potential value to a university board of trustees is his vision for the future. Bill has always been an individual who looked to the future and was not afraid of change so long as it promoted positive and beneficial goals. Too often, trustees are merely caretakers or administrative overseers. Bill will bring to that Board of Trustees a willingness to ask pressing questions about what the University's community role is now and in the future. He is absolutely unafraid to make difficult decisions and to take an unpopular position if he believes in the correctness of his position.

If you trust my own character and commitment to North Carolina's future based upon my record in public and private service, then Bill Dansey will be one of your most serious contenders. The decision is certainly yours, but you can make no better choice to serve East Carolina University, North Carolina and the ideals of your administration.

Sincerely yours,
T. Taft

Alaska Voters Ponder Fate Of 'Unqualified' Judge

By Brian S. Akre
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JUNEAU, Alaska — Karl Johnstone has never been disciplined or censured in his nine years as a judge, but he fears voters may oust him from the bench on Tuesday because a state agency has branded him unqualified.

The agency's recommendation that voters remove the Anchorage Superior Court judge has drawn attention to Alaska's unique system of judicial review.

Alaska is the only state with an official panel that reviews its judges and publishes findings about their judicial fitness. In other states, bar associations sometimes issue ratings.

In the 12 years since the council began making recommendations, Johnstone is the first Superior Court judge found unqualified. Only four other judges, all from lower courts, have received the unwanted distinction.

"The Alaska Judicial Council is used as a model for other jurisdictions which are thinking about adopting some method to evaluate judges already sitting on the bench," said Hal Brown, a former state attorney general and the council's executive director.

"We have been told by the American Bar Association that we give out more information than any other jurisdiction," Brown said. "That's not to say our system is entirely satisfactory, because it isn't."

Alaska's governor appoints judges from a short list of nominees submitted by the council, but all state judges periodically go before voters.

The recommendations about judges up for retention are published in the state voters' pamphlet and in most of the state's daily newspapers.

In Johnstone's case, he scored poorly in integrity, judicial temperament and overall performance, especially as ranked by his fellow jurists.

He is the first judge since the surveys began who lawyers and judges have scored less than acceptable in integrity. That, more than anything else, led to the negative recommendation, Brown said.

The council of three lawyers, three non-lawyers and the chief justice of the state Supreme Court usually recommends retention. Of the 17 judges up for retention Nov. 8, only Johnstone was found unworthy of a "yes" vote.

The recommendations are based on a review of court records, complaints, findings of the state Judicial Conduct Commission, interviews, investigations by the council staff, and surveys of lawyers, judges, magistrates, police and probation officers.

Anchorage lawyer Robert Erwin, a former state Supreme Court justice, said it's unclear to voters what is meant by integrity.

"Are you talking about his honesty? Is his work not any good? Are you talking about his character? The thing is, it's not focused," Erwin said.

"When you talk about somebody's integrity, you really strike at the core of his being," Erwin said. "The implication, given the intelligence of the people involved, is that there's something horrendously wrong with Judge Johnstone or his colleagues wouldn't vote this way."

Johnstone noted that his record as a judge and attorney is clean.

"I've never been sanctioned or disciplined or censured, either privately or publicly, by the Judicial Conduct Commission, or by the Alaska Bar Association when I practiced law," he said.

He attributed his poor rating to some lawyers' dissatisfaction with a program he started to speed the disposition of cases and make attorneys more accountable.

Erwin said the rating system encourages "guilt by association."

"The council can't say but in the most general terms what the problem is, and then the accused can't defend himself," he said.

Critics also say survey results often are based on a small number of respondents and can be skewed by anonymous attorneys seeking revenge against a judge.

Veteran Judge Dies

U.S. District Judge Edward T. Gignoux, 72, who died Friday night in Portland, Maine, is shown with is wife, Hildegarde, following a tribute to him on Sept. 19. The federal courthouse in Portland, shown in the background, was renamed in Gignoux's honor. The judge spent 26 years on the federal bench and gained national attention when he presided over the Chicago Seven trial in 1973.

Father Of 6 Convicted

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga. — A 45-year-old father of six has been convicted of molesting and sodomizing two teen-age daughters for half of their lives and faces a sentence of life in prison.

The conviction of Edward R. Dickey ended a weeklong trial marked by tearful testimony from the daughters, ages 18 and 16.

Dickey, a roofing contractor, cross-examined his daughters himself on the first day of the trial. The 18-year-old testified that her father had fondled and molested her since she was 9; the 16-year-old said her father began molesting her at age 8.

Deidre Lee Dickey, 18, cried Friday when the verdict was read and said her father's conviction was too severe. "I think it was real unfair," Miss Dickey said. "He doesn't deserve to be in there (jail) — I've been there."

In the pre-trial phase of the case, Judge Bryant Huff had jailed Deidre Lee and her mother, Peggy Sue Dickey, for more than a week for refusing to testify.

During the trial, Huff repeatedly chastised Dickey, who was acting as his co-counsel, for what the judge called attempts to slow the pace of the trial.

In his closing arguments, Dickey quoted Thomas Jefferson, George Washington and Jesus Christ and claimed courts use "the most extreme form of psychological warfare to coerce children to give false testimony to convict parents of sexual abuse."

Assistant District Attorney Don Johstono also quoted Jesus, telling the jury in his summation, "It is better to have a millstone around your neck and be thrown into the sea than to lead a child to sin."

He told the jury there had, indeed, been brainwashing but that it had been done by Dickey and his wife, not the government.

After deliberating for morre than three hours, the jury convicted Dickey on eight counts of child molestation, aggravated child molestation, sodomy and aggravated sodomy.

Airliner Lands Safely

CHICAGO (AP) — A Midway Airlines Boeing 737 carrying more than 100 people lost power in one of its two engines just minutes after takeoff early Saturday but returned safely to Midway Airport, officials said.

"It was no big deal," said Sandy Allen, an airline spokeswoman. "It was routine, not an emergency."

Ken Mitchell, a passenger, said the pilot made a smooth landing.

"After a minute or so the captain came on and said we had lost the number two engine," Mitchell said. "The plane was under control at all times. There was nothing to indicate we were in trouble."

According to preliminary reports, Midway flight 795, en route to Las Vegas, carried 106 passengers and crew members, said Martha Vercammen, a duty officer for the Federal Aviation Administration in Chicago.

The plane took off at 12:43 a.m. and landed at Midway at 1:05 a.m. Passengers left the plane normally.

Storm Rips Alabama Town

Drew Bullard takes a look at one of three trees uprooted Friday afternoon by a storm that swept through the Centre, Ala., area. No one was injured when the tree fell on Drew's house. The storm caused extensive damage in several locations in Cherokee County, Ala., including a Centre nursing home where sections of the roof were ripped off.

Furniture Saved

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Rare furniture designed by architect Frank Lloyd Wright will return to its original home in Springfield following efforts by Gov. James R. Thompson and more than $800,000 in donations.

Thompson said he has negotiated deals for the state-owned Dana-Thomas House museum to buy the furniture, a $704,000 double pedestal table lamp, a $20,000 drafting table and four dining room chairs costing $120,000.

Experts describe the Dana-Thomas house, built by Wright for $60,000 around 1903, as one of the finest examples of the architect's Prairie School houses open to the public.

The house, commissioned by Susan Lawrence Dana and now maintained by the Illinois Historic Preservation Agency, is one of the most completely furnished of all Wright's buildings.

PDC Holds Anti-Klan Rally

By Dan Blake
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — Between 500 and 1,000 chanting anti-Ku Klux Klan demonstraters celebrated victory Saturday before Independence Hall, a week after white supremacists called off a rally for the same day.

A skirmish between so-called "skinheads" and the demonstrators broke out in front of the federal building near the Liberty Bell, but no arrests were made, police Capt. Ricard Delise said.

The anti-Klan rally was organized by the Partisan Defense Committee to protest the proposed rally by the Klan and other white supremacist groups. The committee held their rally despite the Klan's decision to cancel.

"We believe blacks and working people have won a victory and forced the KKK and skinheads to back down," said Jon Brooks, spokesman for the committee. "The idea of the mobilization was to make it as broad as possible. Anybody who wanted to stop the Klan was welcome."

Brooks said he did not know how many people the New York-based skinheads brought to Philadelphia, but said several buses were used.

Speakers led the occasionally rain-soaked crowd in chants of "Hey, hey, ho ho, the Ku Klux Klan has got to go," and some people milled around carrying signs protesting the Klan and some calling for a worker's revolution.

At least five skinheads showed up for the "white pride day," unaware that the Klan-organized rally was called off Oct. 26 as opposition grew.

The skinheads, so-called for their close-cropped hair, wore red-laced, black combat boots and blue jeans, with swastikas and American flags pinned to black jackets. They were allowed to stand just north of the anti-Klan rally.

"We originally came up for the Klan rally today. Since we're from Baltimore we didn't know it was canceled," said skinhead Dennis Baranowski. "We didn't come here to get violent."

He said the Skinheads advocate partitioning the country, setting aside the five Northwestern states for whites and the rest for blacks.

Estimates of the crowd size varied, with police counting nearly 500 protesters and the National Park Service saying there were nearly 1,000 on hand.

Scores of police patrolled the perimeter of the rally on foot and horseback. Delise would not say how many police were there, but park superintendent Hobart Cawood said he had brought in 120 park rangers and police from Washington to help the 20 park service officers stationed in Philadelphia.

Bus Driver Booted

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SANTA ANA, Calif. — A bus driver whose vehicle was commandeered by a passenger who accepted his challenge to "drive this better than I can" has been fired, transit officials said Saturday.

Kim Dale Miller, 36, was dismissed Friday, a day after his case was heard by an Orange County Transit District committee, said transit district spokeswoman Claudia Keith.

The driver was dismissed for berating a passenger and leaving a bus unattended, Ms. Keith said.

Miller could not immediately be reached for comment. His phone number was not listed in the Anaheim directory.

He had not driven for the district since Oct. 19 when witnesses said he stepped off his bus after challenging passenger James G. Biddle to do a better job than him.

Biddle, a 52-year-old Buena Park engineer, said the dare came after he complained about the driver's berating a passenger for not giving him the proper bus fare.

He also said he chided Miller about his driving, complaining that his sudden starts and stops were throwing people back and forth in their seats.

At that point, Biddle said, Miller told him, "I suppose you think you can drive this better than I can."

When Biddle said he could, Miller got off the bus and stood on a street corner with his arms folded. He was left there when Biddle put the bus in gear and pulled away.

He carried the vehicle's 31 passengers more than mile, stopping to let people off and on, before police pulled him over. Other passengers said later that Biddle made change, gave them transfer tickets and was courteous.

Biddle was cited for joy riding and operating the vehicle without a bus-driver's license. He is scheduled to appear in Municipal Court on Monday and faces a maximum of $400 in fines and three months in jail.

At 40, Prince Charles Is Voice Of The People

By Marcus Eliason
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — In his search for an escape from the frustration of playing monarch-in-waiting, Prince Charles is carving out a niche as an improbable but often effective "Voice of the People."

His sorties into issues like ocean pollution, unemployment and inner city decay bring him about as close to political controversy as the strictly neutral British monarchy can go. By stretching the bars of his gilded cage, this child of privilege faces the irony of becoming a darling of the left, monarchy's traditional foe.

Charles Philip Arthur George turns 40 on Nov. 14, and the Bonnie Prince Charlie of younger days has grown more somber, the sense of guilt at all his privileges more apparent.

There's still a lot of the fun-loving jetsetter left in him, but the solemn face looks more lined and lived-in. The pate that will one day wear the crown is balding. His taste in clothes runs to conservative double-breasted suits. If he owns a pair of jeans, no one in the outside world has seen him in them.

Moving among his fellow citizens — particularly the young, urban unemployed who are his biggest concern — he takes on what a biographer, Alan Hamilton, calls "the faintly puzzled air of a bishop in a betting shop."

At times, the heir to the throne could pass for just another 1960s survivor coasting into middle age: married with two small kids, he's into organic farming, alternative medicine, health food, Jungian philosophy and the fate of ozone layer.

What lifts him above the ordinary is that as Prince of Wales, Earl of Chester, Duke of Cornwall, Duke of Rothesay, Earl of Carrick, Baron of Renfrew, Lord of the Isles and Great Steward of Scotland, his destiny is to be King Charles III.

That destiny looks far off. His mother, Queen Elizabeth II, is healthy and vigorous at 62, and shows no inclination to abdicate in favor of her son.

Meanwhile, perhaps mindful of an earlier Prince of Wales who frittered away 59 years waiting to be crowned King Edward VII, the prince has made it clear that "I am determined not to be confined to cutting ribbons."

Charles' story, writes another biographer, Anthony Holden, "is one of constant struggle against the limitations placed upon him by the genetic accident of his birth ... a confused and tortured soul trying to come to terms with a claustrophobic, if comfortable life of inherited imprisonment ... a caring and thoughtful man in search of good to do."

That search has taken him on clandestine visits to London slums, into the cowsheds of his tenant farmers, to the peatlands of the Western Isles of Scotland and as far afield as the Kalahari Desert in southern Africa's Botswana.

His attempts to articulate what he has learned have suffered from clumsiness, but as his themes become more polished, they tell as much about his own state of mind as they do about the state of Britain.

Where the Conservative prime minister is embarked on a capitalist revolution designed to create what she calls "a go-getter society," Charles gives voice to the fears of the losers in this race for a leaner, tougher Britain.

The problem for Charles is that when the issues are so all-embracing, and consensus is a dirty word in Mrs. Thatcher's book, just being neutral can seem like taking sides.

"We're in for a period of eight, 10, perhaps 20 years of Conservative government, and therefore any criticism of the world as it is sounds like a criticism of the government," says Norman Tebbit, a former Conservative Party chairman.

Thus when Charles attacks North Sea pollution, it is widely seen as an attack on Mrs. Thatcher's government as insensitive to the environment.

When he decries unemployment, Thatcherites bristle at a perceived criticism of the prime minister for having caused the unemployment. If Charles laments poverty, the implication, intended or not, is that Mrs. Thatcher doesn't care about the poor.

Says biographer Hamilton: "Mrs. Thatcher believes in the meritocracy, and an individual in Mrs. Thatcher's Britain is all right provided he can make it on his own. ... Mrs. Thatcher does not sympathize with the underprivileged. Charles does."

Tom Nairn, an anti-monarchist writer, says the irony is that if there is any threat to the monarchy today, it comes not from the left but from Tory right-wingers, traditional upholders of the royal institution, who are irked by Charles' posture as conscience of the nation.

Nairn said in an interview that often, when he addresses left-wing groups, "I've had people say to me, 'You mustn't criticize Charles too much because he's on our side.'"

A devotee of the small-is-beautiful ethos, Charles believes in good works on a small, individual scale, and runs two charitable trusts that dispense grants of up to 3,000 pounds ($5,000) to unemployed people 18 to 25 years old to start a small business.

About 1,800 people a year get grants, and the trusts have created some 4,300 businesses. One of them, a Birmingham bakery, is making the cake for his birthday party, which will be celebrated with a street festival in the central England city.

Blessed with a private $39-million fortune, Charles is the first royal heir to forego his annual entitlement from taxpayers' funds.

Also, although he doesn't have to pay income tax, he gives the state one-quarter of the annual $3.4-million profit from his 130,000-acre farming estate, the Duchy of Cornwall.

"I cannot just sit there and do nothing," he told a BBC radio interviewer a year ago. "That's the way I've been brought up. I am driven by the feeling I have had for a long time, by traveling around this country and using my eyes, that I mind about the conditions in which people live."

Last year he made a secret trip by van around a destitute district of London's East End.

Another time, after visiting immigrant workers from India's Bengal in a garment sweatshop, he looked shaken and angry.

Although he insists on being bowed to and addressed as a Royal Highness, he sometimes portrays himself in speeches as just another ordinary, citizen fed-up with bureaucrats and conventional wisdoms.

Thousands Demand Chun Arrest

Officers Hurt As Protesters Pelt Station

By Kelly Tunney
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL, South Korea — Tens of thousands of screaming protesters clashed with police throughout South Korea on Saturday, demanding the arrest of former President Chun Doo-hwan on corruption charges.

Riot police in Seoul fired tear gas to block a 10,000-strong crowd from marching to the former president's house. The protesters brandished rocks and threw firebombs.

At least 11 officers were injured, authorities said, including 10 hurt when a police station in Seoul was pelted with rocks and firebombed. Dozens of protesters were seen injured and carried away, but police gave no figures for the total number of injuries and arrests.

Tear gas filled the streets of seven other South Korea cities — Wonju, Chunchon, Cheju, Kwangju, Taegu, Taejon and Pusan — as police fought students at anti-Chun rallies, authorities reported.

The scandal over corruption allegedly committed by Chun and his family has become the major political issue in South Korea since the Summer Olympics in Seoul. On Saturday, three opposition groups rejected a governing party offer for Chun to make a public apology for his alleged misdeeds in office.

Students in Seoul burned effigies of Chun, President Roh Tae-woo and Uncle Sam, and thousands of citizens cheered and shouted "Arrest Chun Doo-hwan!"

Roh was elected in December to replace Chun, who held office seven years. The election followed months of anti-government demonstrations.

In Pusan, an opposition stronghold south of Seoul, police fired tear gas at thousands of protesters trying to burn an effigy of the former president after a street march, according to Yonhap, the South Korean news agency.

Police also battled groups of slogan-chanting protesters in Kwangju, after students razed two police buses, shattered dozens of windows and damaged eight cars in a firebomb attack on a government prosecutors' building.

One student was injured when he fell out of a third-floor window.

In Seoul, police martial arts squads drove protesters into side streets, beating and kicking them, but the protest swelled with thousands of other citizens demanding Chun's arrest.

Thousands of riot police using armored vehicles fired volleys of tear gas at more than 15,000 protesters at one crowded shopping area.

At least 10 police officers were hurt when students hurled rocks and scores of firebombs into a police station in Seoul.

A police officer was injured on the southern outskirts of Seoul when students attacked an office of the governing Democratic Justice Party with firebombs.

During the Seoul rally Saturday, dissident leaders called for bigger rallies next week and vowed to attack Chun's house.

Radical students have launched attacks on government buildings and party offices since Thursday, when riot police blocked a march to Chun's home by thousands of students.

The governing party, in a move aimed at ending the protests, proposed Saturday that Chun apologize or respond to allegations of corruption and misrule, but opposition leaders rejected the offer and demanded an investigation.

Chun's younger brother, Chun Kyung-hwan, was recently sentenced to seven years' in prison for taking bribes and misusing millions of dollars in government money while he headed a rural development program.

Chun, who took power with military backing in 1980, also is being investigated for his alleged role in putting down a 1980 civil uprising in Kwangju. By official count, about 200 people died in the military suppression of the nine-day uprising.

Roh, a former military general and a friend of Chun, arrived in Australia on Saturday to begin a four-day visit and did not comment on the disturbances.

Official Predicts U.S.-Hanoi Ties Will Be Formed In 1989

By Miguel C. Suarez

MANILA, Philippines — A member of Vietnam's Parliament predicted Saturday the United States and Vietnam will establish diplomatic relations next year. He also said his country's occupation of Cambodia has lasted too long.

Nguyen Xuan Oanh made the comments to reporters after arriving in the Philippines following a monthlong lecture tour in the United States.

Oanh also reported renewed efforts to resolve the fate of American servicemen missing in Southeast Asia.

"I think that once the new government will be installed in Washington, perhaps by mid-year or the end of next year we will resume recognition of diplomatic relations between the United States and Vietnam," said Oanh, a former South Vietnamese deputy prime minister.

During his U.S. visit, Oanh said he met with Reagan Administration officials as well as members of Congress and "received very encouraging and positive signs" from them. He did not name the people he met.

Oanh also met with American businessmen during the visit, which he said was part of a campaign to lure Western investment in Vietnam. The nation is one of the poorest in the world and needs American aid and investment that is now banned by a U.S. trade embargo.

Oanh said Vietnam is making progress in efforts to end its 10-year occupation of Cambodia.

The country has promised to withdraw its 100,000 to 120,000 troops from Cambodia by the end of 1990, a condition Washington has imposed before it will recognize the Hanoi government.

Oanh said his government was setting up offices throughout Vietnam for people to report any knowledge of missing American soldiers. The information would then be used for a joint U.S.-Vietnamese search for remains of missing American personnel, he said.

He said Vietnam invaded Cambodia in 1978 to end massacres by the Khmer Rouge government and attacks on Vietnamese communities along the border between the two countries.

"But the mistake that we have done I think is that we have stayed there too long," he said. "Should we have withdrawn perhaps a few years ago, we would not have provoked the kind of criticism that we have now."

He said Vietnam is willing to withdraw all its troops from Cambodia and allow a U.N. peacekeeping force to take over in exchange for guarantees that the Khmer Rouge will not return to power.

Oanh served as a deputy prime minister of the U.S.-backed South Vietnamese government and was jailed for a year after the capital, Saigon, now Ho Chi Minh City, fell to the Communists in 1975.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

A Reminder ...

On Tuesday Pitt County voters will have to make some choices. They will be asked to mark ballots for the best candidates in the 1988 general election. The decisions voters make will determine what quality leadership governs the nation, the state and the community.

The Daily Reflector has, during the past three weeks, published endorsements of candidates in major races — presidential, gubernatorial, legislative, judicial and County Commission. Those endorsements were based on ability, qualifications, integrity, and a demonstrated grasp of important issues.

As a reminder, here are the candidates The Daily Reflector recommended to its readers as best qualified and most capable to lead the nation, state and county:

President, Vice-President

Reflector Endorsements 88

Michael Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen, as president and vice president, can lead America down the path to fiscal responsibility and integrity. Propriety must be restored to the nation's highest office, and the Dukakis-Bentsen record is one reflecting high morals and sound judgment.

Governor, Lt. Gov., Council Of State

The idleness of the past four years will end with Robert Jordan as North Carolina's governor and Tony Rand as its lieutenant governor. The two have the experience and proven, effective leadership to steer the state on a steady course toward improvement.

And for Council of State, Bob Etheridge is the best candidate for State Superintendent and Rufus Edmisten for Secretary of State. Incumbents Lacy Thornburg and John Brooks have earned re-election to the offices of Attorney General and Commissioner of Labor, respectively.

1st Congressional District

Rep. Walter B. Jones has soundly represented the voters in the 1st Congressional District for 22 years. His constituents should return him to the U.S. House.

State Legislature

Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, has a strong record of support for education, environment and agriculture in his four years in the N.C. General Assembly. He deserves the votes of those in North Carolina's 9th Senate District.

Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, as the county's senior legislator, holds significant leadership positions in the N.C. House because of this tenure. His reputation is one of honesty and respect.

Rep. Walter Jones Jr., D-Pitt, has pioneered ethics-related legislation in the General Assembly. His proposals have drawn bi-partisan support and set clear legal and ethical standards. Voters in the 9th House District will be asked to vote for two of four candidates in this district, and should give their support to incumbents Warren and Jones.

Rep. Gene Rogers, D-Martin, also deserves the support of voters in the 6th House District.

Pitt County Commission

Decisions about local leaders must go hand-in-hand with a grasp of the issues that affect the future of the county. In the contested County Commission races, there are clear choices.

Incumbent Charles Gaskins, running for the seat representing Consolidated District B, has a 21-year record of strong support for education and agriculture. His leadership on tough issues has been valuable.

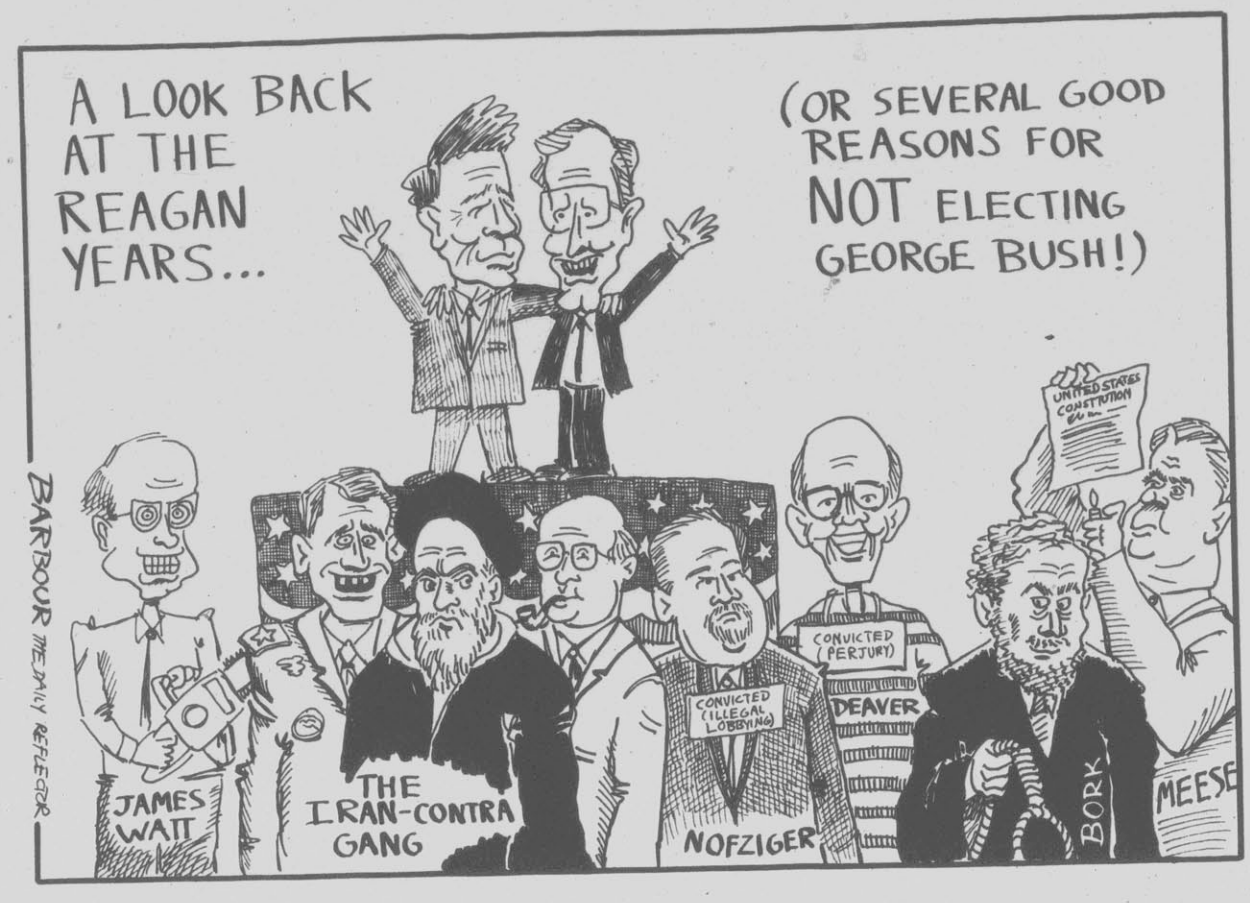
Farney Moore, although he has never held public office before, has a lifetime record of public service as an educator that gives him insight and expertise into Pitt's education woes. Moore will serve District 1 well.

N.C. Court Of Appeals

John B. (Jack) Lewis of Farmville has the integrity, judgment and broad perspective required of an excellent judge. His maturity and experience make him the best candidate for the job.



The Three Dreaded Words

Alvin Taylor

Sunday Morning Notes

There are three dreaded words to be grappled with at any annual physical — cholesterol, exercise and fiber.

They all came up at my physical the other day. As anybody who has ever seen me running huffing and puffing along the roadway knows, I get exercise.

The lab test showed I had no cholesterol problem. Fiber? I had to admit to the physician that sausage biscuits, potatoes baked in a microwave and fried chicken don't furnish much fiber.

Now I'm attempting to correct that by munching on grape nuts directly from the box, and I switched from bananas for snacks to apples.

Anyway it all set me yearning for the good old days of my grandfather when eggs, milk with cream on top and churned butter were considered to be good for you. Grandfather, who was born in 1850, lived to be 89. Granted a lot of people back then didn't make it to a ripe old age and perhaps fatback, cured meat, lard, butter, eggs and cream contributed to their demise.

The important thing is that they didn't know it. As far as they were concerned the fat foods in their diets were good for you. Of course, things like collards, cabbage and boiled potatoes tasted better because they were seasoned with streaks of pure fat. Milk had better taste because the cream was at the top. It was shaken to mix it together. And fried foods were better because the lard — fat — used to fry it gave it a better taste.

Some say food prepared at home — which is where most people ate — was better because it was prepared in wood fired stoves. Maybe, but most of the taste was the result of the fatty nature of foods and their preparation.

There was a time in there when even portly people were considered to be the healthy ones. Those with no meat on their bones - or fat — well, one wondered about their health.

Now we know that fat plugs the arteries and raises the cholesterol level. Fiber keeps our digestive system healthy. (There is a theory that the way the milling of grains changed at the turn of the century adversely affected the fiber in our diets).

Thin is in. Exercise of some kind is a must.

None of this is to dispute modern knowledge of nutrition and health. Why else would I be munching grape nuts out of the box? I simply embrace the theory that if it tastes good it must be bad for your health. At least, though, my grandfather didn't know that.

The Real Question Is About Safety

Ellen Goodman

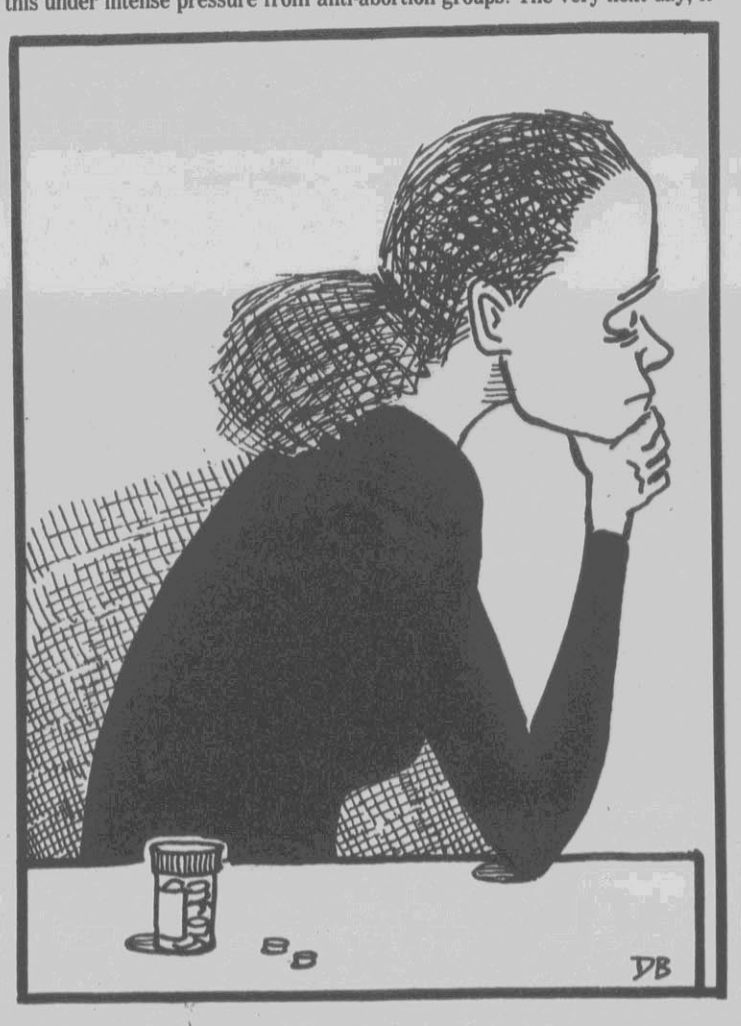
BOSTON — In my town, there is a women's health clinic. To go there, whether you need a pap smear or pregnancy counseling, you have to run a gauntlet of anti-abortion picketers.

I have something in common with that crew. I would also like to close down the abortion business of that clinic, send their vacuum aspirators and surgical tools to some museum of medical history.

In my fantasy, the abortions would be phased out because every pregnancy was a welcome one. But in the real world of imperfect and sometimes desperate human experience, I put my hopes on a new pill to replace the surgery. The pill called RU-486.

These are two distinct ways to close an abortion clinic. Make it illegal or make it unnecessary. And right now they are in a conflict that is generating extraordinary heat.

In the course of one dramatic day last week, the pill RU-486 was abruptly taken off the world market by its European drug maker. Roussel-Uclaf did this under intense pressure from anti-abortion groups. The very next day, it was ordered back on the market by the French government. The official called it the moral property of the women of France. On the day after that, in the United States, pro-lifers by the hundreds targeted clinics all over the country in a planned protest against abortion.



If the international conflict over the pill was explosive, if the sidewalk demonstrations in America were especially intense, it is no wonder. The abortion debate is now in a new and climactic phase of conflict, revolving around technology and law. Can a law stop the technology from spreading? Can the technology make an end run around any law?

RU-486 and its look-alike drugs make abortion as private as a prescription pad, as personal as swallowing a pill. Chemically, this pill prevents the cells in the lining of the uterus from getting progesterone. Without progesterone the wall of the uterus breaks down just the way it does for menstruation. RU-486 can prevent a fertilized egg from ever implanting in the uterus, or it can ensure that an implanted egg sloughs off. And it can do this in the earliest days and weeks of pregnancy, before a surgical abortion is possible, before a fetus is even formed.

In short, the drug makes abortion easier, safer, less traumatic, less expensive. To some, there is good and bad news buried in that simplicity: RU-486 could also increase the number of women using abortion as birth control. But the doctors who created a storm of protest over the brief banning of RU-486, reminded the world that 200,000 women die every year from botched abortions in countries where doctors are few and facilities are far between.

But today, RU-486 is unavailable in the United States. The large American drug companies that aren't intimidated by "controversy' are terrified by liability suits. Anything to do with reproduction sends them skittering. Inevitably though, a small drug company will ask to market this drug. When that happens, we will see the last major battle over reproductive rights.

This fall, almost against the candidates' will, abortion became a campaign issue. In the aftermath of the first debate, we learned the Bush way to close an abortion clinic: by making criminals out of doctors, though not their female "victims."

What would be the effect of the new technology on this old argument? Once the abortion pill is available in the black market, could we still call the woman who buys and takes these pills a "victim" or would she be a criminal? What of the mother who smuggles a pill in to that 12-year-old? What of the 12-year-old?

The right-to-lifers know that the abortion pill is their most potent enemy. That is the reason behind the pressure on the drug companies. Once there are no clinics to protest, no fetuses to photograph, no clinic staffs to blame, abortion is most obviously, most completely, a private matter.

But even if this opposition manages a legal ban, the abortion pill will become available. These pills are what they call in the trade "bathtub" drugs; they are easy to make. You can get such pills over a drug counter in Thailand today. Anyone who believes we could control their import hasn't checked the cocaine business recently.

RU-486 and its copycats are nevertheless powerful drugs that can be dangerous if they aren't carefully made and prescribed and monitored. So in this final debate about abortion, we come down to the same familiar argument. Not abortion versus birth. Not abortion versus adoption. Rather, legal versus illegal abortion.

Faye Wattleton of Planned Parenthood, an old hand in this field, says of the abortion pill: "It's coming. The question is whether it will come unsupervised and unsafe or supervised and safe." And that's what the debate has been about all along.

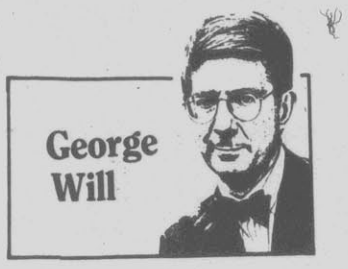
Democratic Restraint: A New Skill Dukakis Can Test



George Will

WASHINGTON — Because neither candidate has made a convincing case for himself, this column today undertakes to do so for Dukakis. The case for Bush comes in the next column.

Consider the case for Dukakis while you are sitting in a traffic jam or on a plane in coagulated traffic at a congested airport. You are then congealed in a consequence of the Reagan-Bush administration's budget deficits.

Whenever you buy gasoline or an airline ticket, you pay taxes that go into trust funds that can be spent only for highways and airports. But these funds are being hoarded to make the deficit seem to be "only" $155 billion. The deficit is the numerical expression of a cultural tendency and a governmental dereliction of duty. America's tendency is to consume more than it produces. The neglected duty is to husband resources and plan for tomorrow.

Three-quarters of the debt incurred by the U.S. government in 190 years prior to the Reagan-Bush administration was the result of war. The debt was (as Alexander Hamilton said of Revolutionary War debt) "the price of liberty." The Reagan-Bush debt is just the price of profligacy. Would Dukakis do worse? Not likely.

Democrats may have learned restraint. Even during the 1982 recession, the worst contraction since the Depression, they did not mount a serious drive for a jobs program. And having campaigned demogogically in 1982 against Social Security cuts, they collaborated in a cut (by raising the retirement age). Of the 255 Democratic congressmen, 138 have arrived here since 1978, after Carter's turn toward austerity. They have not had a chance to acquire the habit of liberality in domestic spending. The decade has produced pent-up pressure for spending, but perhaps a Democratic President would be best for enforcing discipline.

Dukakis rightly insists that some new spending is needed. As productivity growth slows, we are investing less generously in children than previous generations did. For all his flag-waving, Bush will not summon Americans to the patriotic act of forgoing, through taxation, even a small portion of private consumption. Such forgoing would serve the collective good (which, Bush please note, is what government is for) by reducing the deficit. That would reduce the drain of private savings away from productive investment. And more could be spent by government to reduce the dangerous educational deficit of the rising generation of citizens.

Dukakis, in his come-to-think-about-it-I-just-remembered-I'm-a- liberal mood, has been criticizing some American inequalities. Bush says this is un-American: "You see, I think that's for European democracies or something else — it isn't for the United States of America. We are not going to be divided by class."

Bush, you're something else if you think there are no class divisions that condition access to education, legal services, medical care and other important things. It is a national scandal that one-fifth of all children live in poverty and a national travesty that a presidential candidate denies class realities.

As for that object of universal political worship — the middle (if Bush will pardon the expression) class — consider this: Four-fifths of Americans — all but the top 20 percent — are paying a larger portion of their family income in federal income taxes than before Reagan's presidency.

Dukakis' foreign policy is, of course, improvised incoherence generated by dangerous instincts. For example, he criticizes intervention in the "internal affairs" of Nicaragua, but wants to overthrow the governments of Panama and South Africa. And his campaign conversion to the support of some military modernization is unconvincing. But then Bush blithely endorses SDI, MX, Midgetman, the B-1, Stealth, a 600-ship Navy, improved conventional forces and budget restraint. His calculator needs new batteries. The difference between Dukakis, who may find that some systems are jobs programs with Democratic constituencies, and Bush, who is unwilling to put tax money where his moving lips are when praising defense, might be small.

The next President must restrain American and Western European lenders from unleashing a flood of credit to the Soviet Union, a flood that would reduce the pressure on Gorbachev to choose between militarism and improved living standards. But regarding East-West trade, the Republican Party reveals itself as a party of blinkered businessmen and the crassest commercial values. Democrats might do better.

Under Bush or Dukakis, foreign policy for the next few years will be largely a matter of watching while Gorbachev defines himself. A Dukakis administration would at least speed that process of definition by offering a strong temptation to Gorbachev to continue the Soviet drive for politically decisive military superiority.

That is not much to say for Dukakis, but it is the most I can manage.

Public Forum

To the editor:

At last Tuesday night's Greenville City Council meeting, I was surprised and very pleased to hear Councilperson Lorraine Shinn's statement of support for historic districting in Greenville, Unfortunately, in almost the same breath, she stated that the city should not expend money to relocate historic buildings like the Patrick-Arthur House.

Historical buildings, like the Humber, Fleming or Patrick-Arthur Houses, promote a sense of identity, stability, pride and beauty in our community. They are our heritage and they are irreplaceable.

Historical architecture is truly one of Greenville's most valuable assets. It is a public trust. We citizens expect City Council members to be responsible trustees for all other public assets. Why should we expect any less of them when our architectural heritage is threatened?

I understand that money is tight. Ms. Shinn states that our needs are many and we must set our priorities. I agree. Yet, I firmly believe that a city which can afford to expend over $10,000 of public money to throw a Halloween party can afford $5,000 to save a piece of our history.

Karen Vail-Smith
Greenville

To the editor:

I have learned of an important national issue of which not very many citizens are aware. This issue has to do with a call made by 34 states of the Union for a Constitutional Convention.

I wonder why so little or no attention has been given to this utmost important issue that is critical to our lives as citizens of this country. There is a possibility of changing our Constitution if this requested convention takes place and most of us do not even know it.

There will be a forum that will focus on this issue on Nov. 21 at the Willis Building in Greenville. I think the public's attention to this event is necessary to get people informed.

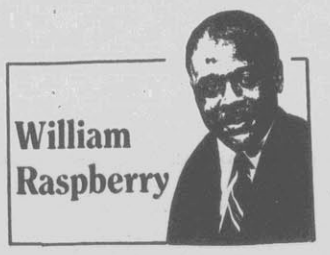
Submissions to the Public Forum should consist of no more than 300 words and should deal with public issues. The editor reserves the right to cut longer letters. Signatures and phone numbers should be included with letters.

Take Away The Customer



William Raspberry

WASHINGTON — I was driving along Georgia Avenue when three dogs started across the street. One was hit by a car, apparently fatally. The other two looked back briefly, then trotted on their way.

I don't know what I expected them to do. Guard the body of their fallen comrade? Howl in grief? Attack the car that did the damage? Of course not. Still it seemed sad to me that they could go on about their doggie business as though nothing significant had happened.

I thought about that unfortunate creature the other day when I heard Asst. Police Chief Isaac Fulwood talking about the scene of a recent drug-related shootout here at the Chapter III night club. "When the television cameras panned the crowd," he said, "it showed kids standing near bodies and laughing. How can you be laughing when people have been shot?"

What did he expect them to do? Cry out in grief at the death of a stranger engaged in what was known to be a highly dangerous enterprise? Run for their lives, while knowing that the shooting, and the immediate danger to them, was over? Attack the gunman? Of course not.

Still, it seemed sad to Fulwood, and to the rest of us, that the death of a human being could be treated as lightly as the death of a stray animal.

That, unfortunately, is what the staggering rate of drug-related slayings has done to our youngsters. Too many of them are living — and dying — like animals.

Fulwood, speaking to reporters this week, when the year's homicide record hit 288 — a city record, said that three out of every five local homicides have been linked to drugs, and that 81 percent of the victims are black men who knowingly risk death as the price of doing business in the drug market.

"We may think about marriage, families, planning for retirement, owning a home," he said. "But these kids don't think about that. They think their lives are going to be short, so they figure they're going to have some fun while they're here. They live only for today."

They have, in short, lost one of the things that sets human beings apart from animals: a sense of the future.

It would be sad enough if only the traffickers in illegal narcotics were at risk. But the truth is, their lawlessness and violence are a direct threat to the rest of us as well. One recent victim was 19-year-old Vondalia Robinson, who just happened to be outside Chapter III when she was caught in the crossfire of a shootout. There will be others, inevitably, as the turf wars expand to parts of town currently considered safe.

'But we also have to find a way to teach our young people — particularly those from poor families — that there is more to life than gold chains, gold-rimmed eyeglasses and gold-trimmed BMWs.'

And what do we do about it?

The answers range from a vastly increased police presence to citizen patrols to calls for deploying the National Guard in the areas of heavy drug traffic; from stiffer sentencing of drug offenders (though we have already run out of prison cells) to execution of those convicted of drug-related homicide.

But does anyone believe that the threat of execution will deter drug traffickers who start each day knowing that their business involves the risk of death?

If we could take the enormous profits out of drugs sales....But how? By confiscating the property bought with the proceeds of drugs? (It already happens.) By legalizing drugs? (That risks drawing more young people into drug abuse.)

The financial lifeblood of the drug traffic is the user, including the casual user who may think that he's doing nothing wrong. As Police Chief Maurice Turner noted last week, everybody who buys drugs contributes to the profits and to the killings that are turning parts of Washington into war zones.

He's right, of course. Drug dealers don't get rich buying from each other or by selling their wares to their poverty-stricken neighbors. We need to find a way to take away the customers — perhaps by confiscating their property and throwing them in jail.

But we also have to find a way to teach our young people — particularly those from poor families — that there is more to life than gold chains, gold-rimmed eyeglasses and gold-trimmed BMWs; that there are, within their reach, legitimate ways of living a good life. We have to find ways to get them thinking about their futures.

Their casual acceptance of violence, the attitude (often reinforced by their parents) that any means is okay to get what you want, and the fatalism that kills their hope of the future is turning them into a generation of animals — turning our hapless cities into deadly jungles.

He Handles Crises & Innovates, But Does He Listen?

David Broder

WASHINGTON — The "marathon" to which Michael S. Dukakis compared the long presidential campaign is now virtually finished, and the American people, few of whom knew the Massachusetts governor when the race began, have a much better fix on him.

The polls all suggest that they have taken to heart the negative information supplied by George Bush's campaign — attacks which capsulized and caricatured Dukakis' record in vivid but distorted images of Boston Harbor sludge and jails equipped with revolving doors.

If Dukakis should be elected President on Tuesday, however, the most significant clues to his probable performance would be found, not in the Bush ads, but in several things he said and did in the campaign — or failed to do.

On the positive side of the ledger, one should start with the steadiness Dukakis displayed throughout this long journey. True, his energy and verbal skills deserted him at some critical moments — most notably in the second debate. But he did ride through a number of crises and stayed on his feet to the end, neither wavering nor whining. As he has said, that emotional solidity is a useful quality for anyone occupying the Oval Office.

The second thing Dukakis demonstrated was his skill as a policy innovator. It is a daunting challenge under the pressures of a presidential campaign to develop and articulate even one defensible "new idea." Dukakis can claim at least three in the domestic field.

One, based on legislation he passed this year in Massachusetts, is a plan to require employers to provide basic health insurance for all workers and their families. A second is a "housing partnership," tapping existing pools of private savings to fill the growing gaps in that area. A third is his suggestion that all aspiring college students could be guaranteed tuition loans if the law simply directed the Internal Revenue Service to collect a surtax on their future earnings to replenish the loan fund.

Those ideas will almost certainly resurface as legislation next year whether Dukakis or Bush is in the White House. They demonstrate, as did his record in the statehouse, that Dukakis — like many governors — is skillful in using government leverage to direct funds from a variety of sources to meet important social needs.

But that about exhausts the good presidential portents one can find in the Dukakis campaign. There was no such originality in his discussions of foreign policy and defense, two vital areas of presidential leadership where his approach was tentative at best.

And the management of his campaign sent several disquieting messages about his possible performance as President. He found no one of sufficient stature to run the campaign when he allowed his first manager, John Sasso, to resign over a substantively unimportant matter, then wavered and delayed too long in restoring Sasso to power.

The Sasso affair is symptomatic of a more important weakness revealed by the campsign. It is worth recalling that Sasso left because he had failed to inform Dukakis of his role in undermining Sen. Joe Biden's candidacy. That may have been a firing offense, but it says as much about Dukakis as it does Sasso that this trusted adviser felt he could not speak openly of the matter to his boss. A boss who makes candor seem risky is himself a risk in an office like the presidency.

The campaign brought repeated evidence that Dukakis does not like to hear things that disturb his own view of reality. He picked Lloyd Bentsen for vice president, a move for which he has been justly praised, and promised that Bentsen would be a far more outspoken adviser than Bush had been to Ronald Reagan. But in the first test, as Bentsen has testified, Dukakis was stubbornly resistant to Bentsen's wise counsel that the Bush attacks must be answered quickly and strongly.

Bentsen's experience was shared by dozens of other Democrats in Congress and state capitols. They found Dukakis and his staff singularly resistant to suggestions, information and even offers of assistance. Dukakis also showed himself curiously isolated from the common culture of American society, failing to recognize until too late the symbolic importance of the Pledge of Allegiance or the vitality of the liberal tradition and the Democratic Party's name.

In the final stages of the campaign, word began to leak out that Dukakis was ignoring even the strategic decisions he and his top advisers had just made, frequently switching signals on the stump without discussion or notice.

A candidate at odds with his counselors and isolated from his party's and nation's history and symbols is not a strong bet to run an effective government. A candidate who shuts out advice is a President likely to have problems with Congress and the political community. That was the pattern of Dukakis' disastrous first term as governor, which alienated the Democratic legislature and major constituencies and ended in his being denied renomination.

What he has shown the nation in this campaign raises serious doubts about Dukakis' repeated statements that he long ago "learned the lesson" from his 1978 defeat and become a better listener.

In a democracy, a man who does not listen cannot lead. And in this campaign, Dukakis seems to have listened and learned very little.

Guerrillas Boasts That Cities Are Next Targets

By Bryna Brennan
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Leftist guerrillas have stepped up attacks in the capital, staging bold daylight raids and threatening to fulfill their pledge to bring the 9-year-old war to the cities.

Urban commandos last week hit the national guard headquarters with mortar and rifle fire, killing four soldiers and wounding 38 people. It was the largest attack in the city in seven years.

"This is only the beginning," the rebels boasted in a broadcast on their clandestine Radio Venceremos. "Prepare yourselves Salvadorans, the hour is near."

The barracks attack capped more than a month of increased activity by the Farbabundo Marti National Liberation Front, a group of five leftist armies battling the U.S.-backed and -supplied government since 1979.

The rebels say they are showing their strength. The U.S. embassy says the guerrillas are losing in the country and the city attacks are an act of desperation and a search for publicity.

The ultra-convervative National Republican Alliance, known as Arena, blames the raids on a "power vacuum" in President Jose Napoleon Duarte's Christian Democratic government.

Duarte is ill with terminal cancer and, for the first time in years, the March elections will include leftist candidates.

U.S. Ambassador William Walker linked renewed rebel activity to the presidential elections and a Nov. 14 meeting of the Organization of American States in San Salvador.

"With the world's, or at least the hemispheric spotlight on them, they are using dramatic gestures to say 'we're here,'" the ambassador said.

The guerrillas promised to take the war to the cities early last year, but until recently their attacks were infrequent and small.

However, since Sept. 13 the guerrillas have maintained pressure in rural areas and moved into new regions of this Massachussetts-sized nation of 5 million.

"As of today I know what the war is. Before it had been only on the television," said Isabel Burgos, a resident of Zaragoza, after an Oct. 6 attack on the town 12 miles south of San Salvador.

That same day commandos using grenade launchers staged a rapid-fire morning attack on the Legislative Assembly in San Salvador.

On Oct. 18, two car bombs exploded in parking lots in the posh Escalon neighborhood.

"There are no more areas of tranquility for the guardians of exploitation. It is not fair that the bombs and explosions are heard only in the rural zones, in the homes of the poor," the rebels said in a broadcast.

The military has increased patrols in the sprawling capital, but the 1 million or so inhabitants seem unaffected by the war.

Working-class neighborhoods still teem with activity. Crowds cram the outdoor cafes in the chic Zona Rosa, scene of a 1985 hit-and-run shooting that killed six Americans, including four U.S. Marines.

However, the guerrillas' occasional calls for transportation stoppages are largely respected.

The U.S. Embassy, which overseas $1.5 million in aid per day to the Salvadoran government, says the guerrillas are frustrated because they haven't been able to topple the elected Duarte administration.

"There's no doubt of increased actions (in the capital) in the last couple of months," Walker said in an interview last week. "But blowing up a hamburger joint is not a great demonstration of military strength."

Asked about Wednesday's national guard attack, he said: "They can do that on occasion and will be able to do that for some time. But it doesn't particularly demonstrate military prowess."

More than 65,000 Salvadorans, many of them civilians, have been killed in the war. The last attack as large as the national guard attack came in January 1981, when the guerrillas launched a failed "final offensive."

Groups traditionally sympathetic to the guerrillas, including the Roman Catholic Church, criticized the recent actions, especially the car bombs.

Carlos Diaz Barrera, a member of the newly formed Democratic Convergence, a coalition of three leftist parties, also said civilians should be respected but added that the barracks attack was a legitimate act of war.

"These are the effects and not the causes of the war. The causes are internal, produced by extreme poverty, the oligarchy and U.S. intervention," Diaz Barrera said.

Puerto Ricans Want Changes In Ties With The United States

By Susana Hayward
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Although they are U.S. citizens, Puerto Ricans cannot vote for president on Election Day. But the next occupant of the White House could help determine whether this Caribbean island remains a U.S. commonwealth or becomes the 51st state.

The Republican candidate, Vice President George Bush, has aligned himself with the pro-statehood party. Democrat Michael Dukakis is for commonwealth.

The Spanish-speaking island of 3.3 million people 1,000 miles southeast of Florida has been a U.S. commonwealth for 36 years.

Although it has nearly as much control over its affairs as the 50 states, Puerto Rico is not a state. It is not a colony either, although some say it comes close. A small but vocal minority favors independence.

All three main parties — Popular Democratic, Independence and New Progressive — want the relationship with the United States to change. They are putting up candidates for governor, legislators, mayors and one non-voting U.S. Congressional delegate.

Gov. Rafael Hernandez Colon, the pro-commonwealth candidate, is seeking a third term and in polls has maintained a comfortable lead over his chief rival, San Juan Mayor Baltasar Corrada del Rio, who favors statehood.

Hernandez Colon wants strong U.S. ties but more autonomy. Dukakis is his man.

"I am a Dukakis supporter and Dukakis supports me," he said in an interview with The Associated Press. "The statehood party is with George Bush and the Republicans deny Puerto Rico any change."

For example, Hernandez Colon was not pleased when Secretary of State George Shultz turned down a request in 1986 to seek a treaty with Japan to give Japanese firms tax breaks in the island.

Hernandez Colon, first elected in 1972 and re-elected in 1984, wants more leeway in economic, foreign trade and immigration issues.

His Popular Democratic Party runs under the slogan "bread, land and liberty," implying Puerto Rico has its cake and eats it too.

"We have the best of both worlds," said law professor Marcos Ramirez. "Puerto Rican people don't want the U.S. to get out, but they also don't want them to rule the country."

As U.S. citizens, Puerto Ricans are eligible for U.S. military service and welfare benefits. But they don't pay federal taxes and can't vote for president.

The island received $6.5 billion in U.S. aid this year, and with tax exemptions for American companies, it has Caribbean's strongest economy.

Hernandez Colon's campaign focuses on economic gains. He cites a drop of 14 percent in the unemployment rate, which was more than 23 percent in 1985 when he took office. Economic growth has been 5 percent over the same period, according to government figures.

Corrada del Rio says the governor should thank the United States for the strong economy.

"If the economy has grown, the credit belongs to President Reagan, not to you," he said in a television debate.

His New Progressive Party, whose slogan is "statehood, security, progress," says a statehood advantage would be to vote in U.S. elections.

"It's a sovereignty issue," said the party's Sen. Oreste Ramos. "We are governed by people we can't vote for. And we want to participate in that process." The Independence Party's gubernatorial candidate, Ruben Berrios Martinez, a Harvard-educated law professor, says Puerto Rico is grossly overdependent on the United States.

"Chickens! We import chickens!" he said. "We're not capable of raising our own?"

Berrios' party hasn't won more than 6 percent of the vote in 20 years.

All candidates have promised a referendum on the status issue after the election. But Hernandez Colon said he wants beforehand a U.S. pledge to honor the outcome.

In the last referendum in 1967, 60 percent wanted commonwealth to continue, 39 percent preferred statehood and 1 percent supported independence.

Whatever this election's outcome, Puerto Rico's status is not likely to change soon. Congress would have to approve any proposal.

Still, if Corrada del Rio's statehood party wins and so does Bush, the chances of Puerto Rico becoming a state would be enhanced.

And what if the polls are right and Bush and Hernandez Colon both win?

"I can work with the Republican administration," the governor said. "It's just in relation to our status that the Republicans don't cooperate."

Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers: Where Your Health is as Important as Your Weight Loss

Being overweight can affect your health in ways you may not consider, or even be aware of—high blood pressure and cholesterol, diabetes, clogged arteries and other circulatory problems, shortness of breath, fatigue, hernias and back problems—to name just a few of the dangers. Those extra pounds are a terrible burden for the body physically, and eventually they will take their toll. However, simply deciding to lose weight may not be the best solution to the problem. It is important to know what kind of weight you're losing as you diet—water, fat or lean body mass. If you are just losing water, your weight loss will be temporary. If you are losing lean body mass, you will be doing yourself more harm than good. That is why it is important to be selective when choosing a weight loss program. Only join a program that emphasizes good health and nutrition, one that makes sure you're losing fat by carefully monitoring your progress. Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers has designed a program that takes all of these things into consideration. They've also created a Weight Maintenance Program that will ensure that you'll never have to fight these problems again. At Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers, you'll find a professionally trained staff which takes your weight loss and your health as seriously as you do.

Fits All Lifestyles
The Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers Weight Loss Program is designed to adapt to any lifestyle. People who work at home or in an office, teachers, even construction workers have found this healthy, nutritious program to be safe and effective. The diet is based on real food bought from the grocery store. Clients can eat three meals a day and lose up to four pounds per week, as hundreds of thousands of successful clients can attest! Many people are amazed at the wide variety of foods available on the program—assorted fruits and vegetables, meat, fish and poultry, eggs, even cheeses! For those whose schedules make shopping difficult, Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers research and development departments have created a variety of delicious, low calorie Entrees which clients have the option of using whenever it is inconvenient to cook.

Your Health Comes First
If you're overweight and are not concerned about your health, you should be. At the very least, you should put yourself in the hands of people who have experience, are trained and are concerned about you. At Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers, staff members closely watch every client's physical condition as they progress through the diet. Staff Nurses and Staff Counselors repeatedly check each client's weight, blood pressure and pulse rate. At specific intervals body measurements are taken for both inch loss and fat loss. A client's progress is calculated by comparing these measurements to those previously taken. Most importantly, the staff follows strict schedules for performing EKGs and Blood Tests to ensure the client's healthy progress on the program! This careful, repeated monitoring often shows that clients' blood pressure and cholesterol adjust to healthier levels as they lose pounds and inches!

Living Longer
The days of dieting just for the sake of losing weight are over. Now people diet so that they can continue to lead healthy, active and long lives. Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers is dedicated to providing the most effective, nutritious and healthy weight loss program available to those who want help. Part of honoring this commitment to excellence is having a staff of weight loss professionals that is thoroughly trained in every aspect of the Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers Weight Loss Program. Last year alone, the company experts trained over 2000 staff members at a total of 87 training sessions held throughout the country!

At these training programs, Center staff members learn practical ways to help clients reach their ideal weights. Subjects such as portion control, the ability to plan nutritious meals and proper intake of fluids are all important topics which staff members must learn in order to teach clients how to achieve successful weight loss. In addition, staff members are taught to recognize and correct behavior patterns which encourage being overweight, such as having meals in front of the television and eating quickly. All this so staff can help clients in their desire to live a longer life.

"I Lost 290½ Pounds!"

"When I began the Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers program, I had a 71" bust, a 71" waist, 72" hips and weighed 444 pounds. It was an exciting day when it no longer took two people and two tape measures to measure me! I was thrilled to give away my size 52 clothes and 13 months later to be wearing a size 13!"

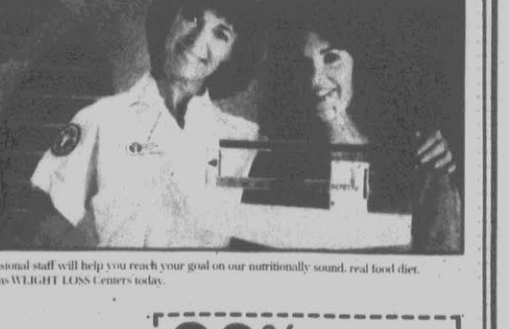
"I Lost 115 Pounds and 74¼ Inches in 17 Weeks!"



In high school I was a three sport letterman and I played football in college. Eleven years later I wondered where that person had gone. Suffering from high blood pressure, it was a chore to even play catch with my 7-year-old son. Thanks to Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Center I have now returned to my "playing weight." I have lost 115 pounds and 74¼ inches in 17 weeks. My blood pressure has returned to normal and I am no longer taking medication for it!"

"I Lost 47 Pounds And 54 Inches"

I was miserable with myself. I was overweight, uncomfortable and approaching the wonderful age of the big Four-O. My doctor was treating me for ulcers. I told my friend how disgusted I was and she told me about her neighbor who had lost weight at PWLC. I visited with her and a week later began the program.
I liked the idea of eating real food and making choices. I achieved my ultimate goal of 47 pounds and 54 inches in 15 short weeks. I was excited and motivating friends to join the PWLC diet. My dress size went from 18 to 10. Four weeks after I began the diet, I was off all medication. I felt great! I had always wanted to take shag dance lessons. I began my lessons in January and met a wonderful man who is not only dancing in contests with me but has danced his way into my heart.
I had tried every diet including acupuncture and hypnosis. None had worked prior to the PWLC program. The key to my success is the maintenance program. I have maintained my weight for five months and I'm loving every minute of being thin. Thank you PWLC!

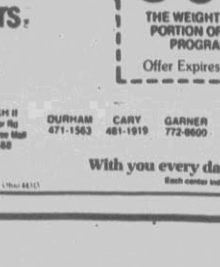
"I Lost 39 Pounds and Went to a Size 4½ Ring!"



"I lost 39 pounds in 18 weeks on the Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Program and words cannot describe how happy I am. I had gotten up to 160 pounds and I said enough is enough. I had never been on a diet before, but I had been wanting to lose weight for the last 12 years. My fiancee gave me a gorgeous diamond when I finished the diet. I had to have the ring cut down to a size 4½! So if you want to lose weight, sign up with the Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Center diet!"
Heidi Symrell

"I Lost 125½ Pounds and 113¼ Inches!"

The Physicians Weight Loss program is the best thing that has ever happened to me. In just 10½ months, I went from 253½ pounds to 128 pounds and from a size 24½ to a size 7/8. I never knew what it was like to go into a store and buy clothes; I always had to go to specialty shops. Now, I can go anywhere! Thanks Physicians Weight Loss Centers for all your help and guidance!

Pirates Race Past Temple, 34-17

East Carolina Scores 21 Points In First Quarter Rampage

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

PHILADELPHIA — Opportunity knocked for the first time in eight weeks Saturday and this time East Carolina answered the door.

The Pirates used a number of Temple miscues to jump ahead early and roll to a 34-17 win over the Owls in Veterans' Stadium.

The win snapped an eight game losing streak for the Pirates and raised their record to 2-8.

"On the first play of the game we got something we just haven't got that much of this year and in some of the other years," said ECU coach Art Baker. "We got a great break."

On the Owls' initial play from scrimmage, quarterback Matt Baker was intercepted when Shannon Boling tipped his pass, allowing linebacker Anthony Thompson to intercept and return it 16 yards for a score. Robb Imperato added the point after to make it 7-0 just over a minute into the game.

The play served as a catalyst for the entire game. ECU displayed a gambling, aggressive defensive style that hasn't always been there this season.

"We were blitzing more," said ECU defensive tackle Mike Applewhite. "We were doing a lot more position movement. There was confusion. They missed their blocking assignments."

And on the other side of the ball, the offense put another 14 points on the board in the first quarter alone to Temple's zero.

The win capped off an emotional week for the Pirates. On Monday, Baker announced his resignation effective at the end of the season.

"It was a very satisfying and gratifying win for me personally and our coaches and players and I can not describe how proud I am of this football team," the coach said.

Temple went nowhere on its second possession and kicked the ball back over to ECU.

Starting at his own 11, quarterback Travis Hunter ripped off runs of 11 and 12 yards and on a third and 11 at the ECU 45 connected with Reggie McKinney on a 55-yard scoring pass. Imperato's kick made it 14-0. Hunter beat a blitz on the play, lobbed the ball high and let McKinney run under it for the score.

"We saw they were in the blitz," Hunter said. "We just had to adjust. The guy was up on Reggie and he just went deep for it."

Nine plays later Willie Lewis scored from two-yards away. Imperato added the point after to make it 21-0.

It was the largest lead the Pirates have enjoyed since an opening day win over Tennessee Tech. It also took pressure off a defense that needed it.

"That was awesome," Applewhite said. "That made my day. We knew what we wanted. We wanted to win. Eight games (losses) is enough."

Temple managed to get on the scoreboard in the final minute of the half when Bill Wright added a 25-

Deacs Slam Duke, 35-16

Despite Dilweg's 475-Yard, 2 Touchdown Pass Attack

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

DURHAM — It was a game of numbers Saturday at Wallace Wade Stadium. Duke held the edge statistically, but Wake Forest had it on the scoreboard in a 35-16 win.

The win lifted the Deacons to 5-4 for the season and to 3-3 in the Atlantic Coast Conference. The Blue Devils slipped to 6-3 for the year and to 2-3 in the conference.

Duke quarterback Anthony Dilweg totaled the most passing yardage ever against a Wake Forest team in the game as he completed 30-49 attempts for 475 yards and two touchdowns. He also became the ACC's all-time single season passing yardage leader with 3,105 yards to date.

Wake quarterback Mike Elkins although only completing 11-19 for 171 yards and one touchdown in the game may have proven to be the better signal-caller in the game.

"I think we kept them off guard offensively," Elkins said. "We mixed it up and kept them confused. Our offensive line was blowing them away for us on defense."

The killing blow for the Blue Devils, however, came with turnovers and penalties. Duke was penalized 16 times for 131 yards and also gave up the ball fives times, three on interceptions and two on fumbles.

The Deacons managed to get the lead early in the game when Duke tailback Randy Jones fumbled on the Blue Devils second play from scrimmage. Wake Forest linebacker Warren Belin jumped on the loose ball for the Deacons at the Duke 32-yard line.

It then took the Deacons only six plays to post the game's first touchdown. Mark Young put the score on the board with a 1-yard run with 11:38 to play in the first quarter.

The Deacon score was set up on a freak 16-yard gain on a third and three play at the 25. Elkins connected with Steve Brown for a reception to the nine, where Brown fumbled and Ricky Proehl recovered at the Blue Devil five.

"We're not tough enough to beat Wake Forest, it's as simple as that," Duke head coach Steve Spurrier said. "They ran it down out throats and we couldn't run the football a lick. The second play of the game they hit us in the backfield and we lose the ball and that leads to their first touchdown. We hit a few and moved the ball a little here and there and had a lot of stupid penalties."

Duke looked poised to tie the game on the next drive, moving all the way to the Deacon one-yard line before failing to score when Jones

Late Scores Help Tigers To Overcome Heels, 37-14

By Rick Scoppe
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CLEMSON, S.C. — When 17th-ranked Clemson was not turning over the ball Saturday, the Tigers did what they do best — control it.

Clemson didn't punt and doubled North Carolina in time of possession in beating the Tar Heels 37-14 in an Atlantic Coast Conference game.

"I don't think our team took advantage of all of our opportunities early in the game," Clemson coach Danny Ford said. "We looked like we weren't ready to play in the first half."

The Tigers, who had nine turnovers in their first eight games, made three miscues in the first 17½ minutes and trailed 7-3 with 12:36 left in the half. But two scores in the final 8½ minutes helped the Tigers overcome the Tar Heels.

"You have to give our young guys credit for forcing the Clemson mistakes," North Carolina coach Mack Brown said. "But they came right back and hit us with some big plays.

"We won the turnover battle, but they dominated time of possession. We never got the necessary rhythm offensively."

Clemson had the ball for 40:09 and ran 83 plays, while the Tar Heels had the ball 19:51 and ran 48 plays.

The Tigers, who are seeking a third straight ACC title, are 7-2 overall and 5-1 in the league.

Clemson began the game tied with North Carolina State and Maryland for first place. But the Wolfpack lost 19-14 to Virginia, and Maryland lost 17-10 to nonconference foe Penn State.

As a result, the Tigers have a one-half game lead over the Terrapins, who entertain Clemson next Saturday.

But the Tar Heels, 1-8 and 1-4, for a time made a game of it — mainly because of Clemson's turnovers.

The Tigers fumbled on their opening drive at the North Carolina 19. Another turnover set up the Tar Heels' only first-half TD after Arlington Nunn inadvertently touched the ball on a punt.

But the Tigers countered with a nine-play, 82-yard drive keyed by a 48-yard end around pass from wide receiver Chip Davis to Gary Cooper, moving the ball to the Tar Heels' 15.

Clemson increased its lead to 17-7 on Allen's 3-yard run with 28 seconds left. The run capped an 11-play, 68-yard drive as Allen surpassed the 100-yard mark for the fourth time this season.

Allen's best previous game this season was 154 yards last week against Wake Forest.

Ford said he felt the Tar Heels were hurt by injury problems that

Inderlied's Four Field Goals Lift Virginia Past NCSU, 19-14

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Once again, Virginia is mounting a late-season charge, and once again, North Carolina State is helping the Cavaliers' cause.

"We needed this one badly," Mark Inderlied said after he kicked four field goals Saturday as Virginia overcame a sloppy first half to knock N.C. State from atop the Atlantic Coast Conference standings with a 19-14 victory over the Wolfpack.

Virginia, winning its third straight game, improved to 5-4 overall and 3-2 in the ACC.

The victory was Virginia's third straight over the Wolfpack. Last year, the Cavaliers beat N.C. State in Raleigh, N.C., to lock up a bid to the All American Bowl en route to an 8-4 campaign.

With two games left, Virginia once again has hopes of a winning year, which would be its fifth in the last six seasons.

"Who knows? We're in a position, now we just have to go out and do it," Inderlied said.

The Cavaliers fumbled five times in the first half, had two passes intercepted and one punt blocked, but still led 9-7 at intermission.

N.C. State, which entered the contest tied atop the ACC ladder with Clemson and Maryland, lost for the second time in as many weeks and slipped to 6-3 and 4-2.

"The game itself was a lost opportunity," Coach Dick Sheridan said. "We were in a position to win the ACC championship and this hurts quite a bit."

Virginia finished with 303 yards of total offense against the Wolfpack, which had entered the game with the top-rated defense in the ACC.

"We are very disappointed we didn't play our best," Sheridan said. "This is the toughest loss of the year."

Inderlied, who tied the school single-game record for field goals made, connected from 45, 48 and 29 yards in the first half for the Cavaliers, who limited N.C. State to 7 yards of total offense in the first quarter.

"We were tense, no doubt about it," Sheridan said. "I wish I was smart enough to know why."

The Wolfpack did not get a first down until there was 10:58 remaining in the half, and was unable to cash in on Virginia's flurry of miscues until the 2:37 mark of the second quarter. Thirteen seconds before that, Cavalier quarterback Shawn Moore's errant pitch was recovered by N.C. State's Fernandus Vinson on the Virginia 10-yard line. That set up a 5-yard touchdown run two plays later by Tyrone Jackson.

N.C. State drove 78 yards in six plays on its second possession of the third quarter. Nasrallah Worthen, running a short post pattern, caught Shane Montgomery's pass and eluded several Virginia defenders for a 35-yard scoring play that gave the Wolfpack a 14-9 lead.

But Johnnie Wilson returned the ensuing kickoff 32 yards to the Virginia 45, and two plays later, Moore hit Herman Moore on a 30-yard touchdown pass that put Virginia ahead to stay at 16-14 with 5:36 left in the third quarter.

Turnovers Key Tech Past VMI

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — It was a game Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Ross believed his Yellow Jackets would win, but he was never really sure until midway in the third period Saturday against smaller, Division 1-AA foe Virginia Military Institute.

Tech's Jerry Mays ran for 151 yards and T.J. Edwards scored two touchdowns while the Yellow Jackets came up with five turnovers in the 34-7 victory over VMI.

"We had the better team and I felt we would win, but we're the type of team you can't ever assume anything with us," said Ross.

"I felt once we got our 20th point on the board, I had a sense of relief," he said.

That came 6:57 into the third period and gave Tech a 20-0 lead.

VMI Coach Eddie Williamson bemoaned the turnovers by his outmanned team.

"The bottom line is you don't drop the ball four or five times and throw two interceptions and hope to win against anyone," he said.

Mays, who played less than half the game and carried the ball only 13 times, set up Tech's first two scores.

The junior broke loose for a 51-yard dash to set up a 22-yard field goal by Thomas Palmer midway in the opening period, then ran five times for 45 yards in an 89-yard drive, capped by Nate Kelsey's 1-yard TD plunge early in the second period.

That gave Tech, 3-6, a 10-0 lead over the Keydets, 1-8, of the Division 1-AA Southern Conference before the Yellow Jackets capitalized on VMI mistakes to score their next 17 points.

Edwards scored on a 1-yard run late in the second period, four plays after VMI quarterback Dave Brown was sacked and fumbled on his own 15-yard line with Willis Crockett recovering for Tech.

Palmer then added a 49-yard field goal midway in the third period after Tech's George Malone intercepted Brown on the VMI 27. Mays had three runs for 20 yards, including an 11-yarder to the VMI 25.

Tech made it 27-0 four minutes later when Crockett recovered a Brown fumble on the VMI 25. Quarterback Todd Rampley connected with Edwards on a 5-yard scoring strike five plays later.

Georgia Tech backup quarterback Lee Williamson hit Terry Pettis on a 17-yard TD pass in the final quarter. VMI scored its only TD with 3:45 gone in the last period when Brown and Mark Strock teamed up on a 28-yard scoring pass.

Tigers Claw Past North Carolina...

have plagued them all season.

Two starting defensive backs and tailback Torin Dorn, who alternated with Martin, didn't play.

"We caught North Carolina when they had some key people hurt," Ford said.

It was a record day for Williams and Allen, the ACC's leading rusher, before a crowd of 81,958.

Allen, who has rushed for 956 yards this season, broke the school record for yards rushing by a sophomore. Ken Callicutt held the record, with 809 yards in 1974.

Allen, who carried 29 times Saturday, also became the first Clemson sophomore to reach the 2,000-yard mark in all-purpose yards.

Williams, who earlier this year became the Tigers' all-time winningest quarterback, broke the school record for completions of 303 set by Tommy Kendrick from 1969 to 1971.

Williams completed 6 of 10 passes for 91 yards and has 306 completions in his career.

The Tigers had 500 yards total offense, including 336 on the ground. North Carolina had 191 yards total offense, led by Martin's 116 yards on 16 carries.

The Tigers dominated the second half against the 23-point underdogs, increasing their lead to 24-7 on their first possession on Tracy Johnson's 3-yard run, capping a 15-play, 76-yard drive.

Chris Gardocki kicked two of his three field goals in the second half. The freshman hit a 20-yarder, giving the Tigers a 3-0 lead in the first period, then kickedd two in the final period, a 24-yarder and a 52-yarder.

Clemson's final TD was a 15-yard run by Charlie James.

North Carolina's other score came on a 23-yard pass from Todd Burnett to John Keller.

Army.....28
Air Force.....15

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Halfback Mike Mayweather rushed for 192 yards and one touchdown and quarterback Bryan McWilliams scored twice Saturday, leading Army to a 28-15 victory over Air Force at rain-soaked Michie Stadium.

The win for Army, 7-1, gives the Cadets the chance to regain possession of the Commander-in-Chief's Trophy, emblematic of supremacy among the three service academies.

The Falcons, 5-4, are the defending champions and have already beaten Navy 34-24. An Army victory over the Midshipmen Dec. 3 will give the Cadets the trophy for the fifth time.

Mayweather, who carried the ball 30 times, gained 13 yards on first down and followed with a 5-yard run to the Air Force 4. McWilliams, who gained 95 yards on 15 carries, scored on the next play to give Army a 21-7 lead.

Late in the fourth quarter, Mayweather's 1-yard run capped a 16-play, 77-yard drive that lasted nearly seven minutes.

Greg Johnson led Air Force, which entered the game leading the nation in rushing at 399-yards-per-game, with 46 yards on 10 carries.

Neither Air Force, which entered the game averaging 42 points a game, nor Army could mount an attack in the scoreless first quarter. But Falcon quarterback Dee Dowis capped a six-play, 63-yard drive early in the second quarter with a 35-yard touchdown pass to halfback Albert Booker.

Waters Denies He'll Step Down At WCU

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CULLOWHEE — It's been a difficult season in more ways than one for Western Carolina football coach Bob Waters.

The Catamounts are struggling on the field, while Waters continues to fight a valiant battle against amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS), better known as Lou Gehrig's Disease.

This is the 20th season at Western for the wheelchair-bound Waters, and the Cats — 1-3 in the Southern Conference and 2-6 overall — were assured of a losing season going into Saturday's game at arch-rival Appalachian State.

Western returns to Whitmire Stadium next Saturday to take on top-ranked Marshall in the final home game of the season for the Cats. Will it be Waters' last home game as coach of the Catamounts?

He says no. "That's speculation," he said. "I haven't talked with any one in those terms. I still enjoy coaching and want to continue coaching as long as I can."

Nonetheless, ALS has taken its toll on Waters this season. He spent four days in intensive care last week at C.J. Harris Hospital in Sylva. Following the Furman game Saturday in Greenville, S.C., he did not speak with reporters on the advice of his doctors. Waters was suffering from a cold and could not clear his throat.

Waters was back at work this week. His voice, while sounding somewhat hoarse, was easily audible. And it was Appalachian State he was trying to focus on. "I know I always get more excited about this game than any of the others on our schedule," he said.

But it's the Nov. 12 contest against Marshall that will bring national attention to this tiny college town along the banks of the Tuckaseigee River. And not just because the visitors from Huntington, W. Va., are the No. 1 team in the nation.

It will be "Bob Waters Appreciation Day," as the veteran coach of the Catamounts will be cited for his many accomplishments. However, such an honor will only serve to increase the rumors that his days as football coach at Western are nearing an end, and that he will resign at the end of the season. But don't tell that to Waters.

"I never heard anything like that," he said. "I don't have to deal with that because none of it reaches me."

WCU Chancellor Myron Coulter insists that "Bob Waters Appreciation Day" is nothing more than an opportunity to say thank you to a man who has meant so much to Western Carolina.

"I have no knowledge of his stepping down at the end of the year," he said. "We have not discussed that. He's our coach as long as he wants to coach and can coach. My only position has been that we will continue with our coach and support him. He's a fine, courageous man who has shown a tremendous amount of strength with his condition."

Coulter says he knows that not everyone would agree with his position. "I realize that there are people who could be critical of that kind of thinking," he said. "But here's a man who has never been in trouble (with the NCAA), has always been clean and above board. And to someone like me, that means so much."

However, that doesn't mean Coulter is happy with WCU's record. "Of course, we want respectability," he said. "When we lose, it hurts us all. No one likes to see us having the difficult time we're having now. I don't like losing and find nothing redeeming about it."

Waters agrees with Coulter on that score.

"I still enjoy coaching the kids, but I wish we were better right now," he said. "I'd rather be doing this (interview) with a 5-2 record. I don't want the football team to be remembered in its struggling ways ... but more importantly it (coaching) is still fun. I still have something to offer. If I get to the point where I don't, I'll step down."

After the Marshall game comes the Nov. 19 season finale at Virginia Military. Then it's on to spring practice. "Yep, that's what I've got in mind right now," he said. "Of course, I'm sure you understand that anything could change."

Penn State Tops Terps

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Gary Brown's a 10-yard touchdown run with 2:18 left snapped a tie and gave Penn State a 17-10 victory over Maryland Saturday, the Nittany Lions' 24th consecutive victory against the Terrapins.

With 4:12 left and the score tied 10-10, Penn State began a 74-yard, five-play drive with a 45-yard pass from Lance Lonergan to David Daniels.

Penn State, 5-4, got the ball after Maryland's Dan Plocki was short on a 43-yard field-goal attempt.

Maryland, 5-4, had a last chance to win when the Terrapins drove from their own 34 to a first down at the Penn State 15 with 1:10 remaining. But three passes and a run gained only two yards and Maryland gave up the ball on downs at the 13 with 55 seconds to play.

Penn State needs one victory in its final two games to extend its NCAA record of 49 consecutive non-losing seasons.

Penn State took a 3-0 lead 7:06 into the game on Henry Adkins' 27-yard field goal. Maryland tied it with 5:33 left in the quarter on Plocki's 37-yard field goal after a 26-yard run by Ricky Johnson and a pair of penalties.

Notre Dame Pounds Rice, 54-11

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Raghib "Rocket" Ismail returned two kickoffs for touchdowns, and fullback Anthony Johnson rushed for two scores Saturday as Notre Dame, unbeaten and newly ranked No. 1, ripped winless Rice 54-11 Saturday.

Rice, 0-8, scored first when Clint Parsons kicked a 23-yard field goal on the Owls' first possession to cap a 70-yard drive.

But Notre Dame, 9-0, came back with touchdowns on its first four possessions, including Ismail's 78-yard return on the kick after Parsons' field goal.

Ismail added an 83-yard touchdown return in the fourth quarter, becoming the first Notre Dame player to return two kickoffs for touchdowns in one game since Paul Castner in 1922 against Kalamazoo.

The Irish defense pinned down the Owls during the first-half offensive streak, not allowing Rice outside its own 37 and twice sacking Quentis Roper.

Parsons added field goals of 41 and 45 yards. The Owls' scoring closed with 46 seconds left when Rice blocked an extra point attempt and Bill Stone returned the ball to Notre Dame's end zone for two points.

Notre Dame converted three Rice turnovers to scores, while the Owls failed to take advantage of two Irish turnovers.

A 40-yard run by Notre Dame's Mark Green during the Irish's first drive set up Johnson's first touchdown on a 2-yard run. Johnson rushed 3 yards score on Notre Dame's next possession.

Tony Brooks scored on a 1-yard run on the third play after defensive tackle Jeff Alm intercepted a Roper pass deep in Rice territory.

A 42-yard field goal by Billy Hackett gave Notre Dame a 31-6 halftime lead.

Notre Dame scored in the second half on a 19-yard rush by Rodney Culver, Ismail's second kickoff return, a 28-yard field goal by Hackett, and a 6-yard run by Joe Jarosz.

Rice narrowly missed a touchdown on its first possession when Richard Williams, who was wide open in the end zone, dropped a pass from Roper on third down. The Owls settled for Parsons' first field goal.

Rice finally broke beyond its own 40 when it drove 44 yards, picking up three first downs in four plays, including a 19-yard pass play to Lorenzo Cyphers. But the Owls stalled again on two incomplete passes at the Notre Dame 25 and finished the drive with Parsons' second field goal.

Rice failed to capitalize on two Notre Dame turovers.

Richard Duggin recovered Ricky Watter's second-quarter fumble but Alm intercepted the pass by Roper two plays later. Courtney Cravin recovered a second fumble by Watters, but Wes Pritchett picked up a fumble by Cyphers three plays later.

Rice's Nigel Codrington blocked two extra point attempts.

Southern Cal.....35
California.....3

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rodney Peete passed for a career-high 305 yards and three touchdowns and Cleveland Colter returned an interception 29 yards for another score Saturday as second-ranked Southern Cal overpowered California 35-3.

Peete, who completed 22 of 29 passes with one interception, threw a 42-yard touchdown pass to Scott Galbraith in the first quarter, an 11-yarder to John Jackson six seconds before halftime and an 8-yarder to Leroy Holt with 8:53 remaining in the game.

Peete did most of his damage in the first half, hitting 16 of 21 passes for 210 yards and the two touchdowns as the Trojans took a 28-3 lead. He didn't play after throwing his scoring pass to Holt.

The Trojans sacked Cal quarterback Troy Taylor 10 times for 51 yards in losses. The Golden Bears wound up with minus-20 yards rushing.

Colter made his interception return 5:17 into the game to put the Trojans, now 6-0 in Pacific-10 Conference play and 8-0 overall, ahead to stay.

Cal's Robbie Keen kicked a career-long 52-yard field goal 4:05 later to make it 7-3, but the Trojans scored touchdowns on three of their next four possessions.

Cal fell to 1-4 in Pac-10 play and 5-4 overall. The Bears have lost 10 of their last 11 games and 25 of their last 30 against the Trojans.

Ricky Ervins scored Southern Cal's other touchdown on a 2-yard run midway through the second quarter, capping an 85-yard, 16-play drive.

Taylor completed 16 of 27 passes for 171 yards with two interceptions.

Miami.....34
Tulsa.....3

MIAMI (AP) — Miami coach Jimmy Johnson was happy with the victory but unhappy with his team and the officiating after the third-ranked Hurricanes beat Tulsa 34-3 Saturday.

"We're not playing like a championship team," said Johnson, who conducted a short closed-door meeting with his players after the homecoming game.

"I'm disappointed with some of the foolish mistakes and penalties we made," said Johnson, who also blasted the officiating. "I don't think we played real intelligently at the end of the game."

Despite 572 yards offense and 31 first downs, Johnson and quarterback Steve Walsh were not happy with the Hurricanes' effort.

Johnson "was upset," said Walsh, who passed for 253 yards and three touchdowns. "Obviously we expected it (chewing out) because we played stupid. We had stupid mistakes."

Walsh, who has thrown 20 touchdown passes in Miami's last five games, tied Vinny Testaverde's school record of 26 TD passes in a season with the three scoring aerials.

Miami, which has games left with Louisiana State, Arkansas and Brigham Young, hiked its mark to 7-1. The 'Canes have now won 21 straight games in the Orange Bowl and are 31-0 against unranked teams since Johnson arrived six years ago.

Tulsa's David Fuess kicked a 34-yard field goal with three minutes left in the game to keep the visitors from becoming Miami's third shutout victim of the season.

Tulsa, now 2-6, fumbled away its only other scoring opportunity early in the second quarter after a nine-play drive took the Golden Hurricane to the Miami 23.

Walsh, who completed 22 of 39 passes, threw touchdown passes to Randy Bethel and Leonard Conley in the second period to give the defending national champions a 17-0 halftime lead.

Bethel caught two scoring passes on plays covering 30 and 33 yards while Conley caught a 19-yard TD pass from Walsh.

Conley also rushed for 116 yards in 13 carries, becoming the first Miami back this season to gain more than 100 yards in a game.

Walsh's understudy, sophomore Craig Erickson, fired a 27-yard touchdown pass to Andre Brown and Carlos Huerta added field goals of 29 and 27 yards to complete the Miami scoring.

Walsh was sacked for the first time this season when he was thrown for an 8-yard loss by Tulsa's Derrick Williams in the second quarter.

Bethel, a 240-pound sophomore getting extended playing time because of an injury to starter Rob Chudzinski, caught five passes for 94 yards.

West Virginia.....51
Cincinnati.....13

CINCINNATI (AP) — Major Harris threw three touchdown passes before suffering a hip injury Saturday as No. 4 West Virginia used big plays to remain unbeaten with a 51-13 victory over the University of Cincinnati.

Harris threw touchdown passes of 14 yards and 68 yards to Reggie Rembert and a 40-yarder to Grantis Bell to give the Mountaineers a 24-13 halftime lead.

West Virginia put the game out of reach with a 24-point third quarter. Anthony Brown went 41 yards with a pitch-out from Harris to score, and Rembert sprinted 51 yards on an end around for a 38-13 lead midway through the quarter.

West Virginia's 9-0 record is its best since the school started playing football in 1891. Cincinnati, 2-7, has lost its last six games by a combined score of 243-54.

After Phil Insalaco opened the scoring with a 36-yard field goal on Cincinnati's first possession, Harris hit his first three passes to put West Virginia ahead to stay. His 14-yard toss to a wide-open Rembert capped a seven-play, 64-yard drive.

Alvoid Mays' interception set up a 40-yard touchdown pass from Harris to Bell on West Virginia's next play. Bell slipped past the UC secondary to get open by 10 yards.

Cincinnati surprised the Mountaineers by tightening on defense and using Al McKinney's rushing to cut the lead to 17-13 midway through the second quarter. McKinney rushed for 94 yards on 17 first-half carries.

Pirates Win...

yard field goal. The score came after Temple's Joe Greenwood intercepted Hunter in the end zone. Temple then drove down the field but stalled at the ECU eight with 1:01 remaining.

Baker felt it was imperative that ECU score on its initial possession of the second half. His players agreed.

"The significant drive was the beginning of the second half," Baker said.

ECU extended its lead to 28-3 on that first possession of the second half, taking the kickoff and moving 80 yards in nine plays for a two-yard scoring run by Lewis. Imperato added the point after.

But the first quarter, offensively and defensively, keyed the day for ECU. It also sealed Temple's fate.

"No, I can't imagine the first quarter being any worse," said Owl coach Bruce Arians. "That was the deciding factor. We got nothing consistently on offense and the turnovers and our field position made the difference."

Temple did make a game of it in the second half, scoring a touchdown in both the third and fourth quarters. Baker hit Mike Palys with an 11-yard pass with 6:51 left in the third quarter. He then hit fullback Herrera with a five-yard scoring pass with 14:35 to go in the game.

But ECU moved the ball consistently all day. And while it faltered in the scoring zone in the second half, Imperato salvaged things with two field goals, one from 37 yards away in the third quarter and the other from 18 yards out in the final period.

Coming into the game Imperato had hit on only six of 13 attempts.

"Robb Imperato has caught a lot of flak," Baker said. "It's tough for a young man to be ridiculed like that. He came back and worked real hard."

For the game, ECU totaled 468 yards to Temple's 279.

Starting slotback Jarrod Moody and his backup Denell Harper both missed the trip after suffering injuries Thursday.

But McKinney and Lewis more than held their own as ECU mixed in some I-formation running along with its traditional run and shoot.

"Two of our main slot were hurt," Lewis said. "Reggie and I had to take on most of the load. We went to the I a little more than we usually do. We couldn't run all the (pass) routes. We wanted to save energy."

Regardless of the formation, the running game was there. Fullback Tim James had 95 yards rushing while Lewis had 89 and McKinney had 66. Hunter, who gave Temple trouble on the option all day, had 60 yards.

"They were more concerned with stopping the trap," Hunter said. "As soon as T.J. (Tim James) went in the hole they were on him."

It made for a frustrating day for the Owl defenders.

"East Carolina has run the football on everybody this year and they have played some good teams," Arians said. "We concentrated on the option but Hunter's scrambling ability hurt and he made the big plays."

Tom Morris

PHILADELPHIA — The past week is one East Carolina's coaches and players would just as soon forget and who can blame them.

In the midst of an eight-game losing streak, ECU coach Art Baker announced his resignation effective at the end of the season. Then, not one day after the announcement speculation on who the next coach will be was running overtime.

Sure. It's probably not right. It's probably not fair, But that's the nature of the business.

The Pirates put all that aside Saturday and took out their frustrations on Temple, coming away with a 34-17 win that raised their record to 2-8.

"They had every reason in the world to kind of go through the motions this week," Baker said. "The coaches were certainly in shock after my announcement on Monday and when I made my announcement I didn't know how it would affect the football team.

"But fortunately they are character people and they reacted in a super way."

Less than an hour after he told the team of his decision Monday, ECU had to go out to the practice field.

"Monday, we had a very disoriented practice," Baker said. "It was raining for one thing. They were sort of in shock. I don't know that my mind was completely where it needed to be.

"But our Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday practices were obviously good preparations. I'm appreciative of our coaches and players who were almost pushed out there on the end of the limb by themselves when most of the thrust in Greenville is to find out who the new coach is."

At the risk of being over-dramatic, the players said they wanted to win this game for Baker. No, it wasn't quite along the lines of "Win one for the Gipper." In fact, Ronald Reagan was nowhere to be found. He had left town Friday after a quick campaign stop.

But the importance of sending Baker out on a positive note in his final two games played a role in this game.

"We wanted to win this for coach Baker and the coaching staff," said defensive tackle Mike Applewhite. "Him coming out and putting our mind at ease (helped). Now the speculation is over."

It was a nice touch, especially in light of how distracting the past week was.

□ □ □

"It distracted the team," said quarterback Travis Hunter. "There were a lot of rumors by people who were outside. People have to understand that people have feelings and coach Baker is human and has feelings too. The media says a lot of cruel things. They say a lot of things that I don't think they should say, specifically a lot of the rumors that were going on.

"It's had an effect on the team. It's a cruel world. You just try to get something good out of it."

UCLA Struggles Past Oregon

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

EUGENE, Ore. — Troy Aikman's usually prolific passing game took the day off. The UCLA defense didn't.

As a result, the 6th-ranked Bruins are back on the winning track and still in the Rose Bowl race.

"I had a tough day passing," Aikman said after his team struggled to a 16-6 football victory over Oregon on Saturday, "and that was even when I had the wind at my back."

Aikman did manage one touchdown pass and backup tailback Brian Brown went 68 yards for another score as the Bruins pulled away from a 3-3 halftime tie.

UCLA, 5-1 in the Pac 10 and 8-1 overall, had trouble moving the ball through most of the afternoon as Aikman completed 12 of 23 passes for 114 yards, his lowest total in two seasons at UCLA.

"Our defense did do a great job to succeed in shutting down Troy Aikman for so much of the game," Oregon quarterback Pete Nelson said. "As a quarterback, he has been sort of my hero in football."

Aikman may have had an off day passing, but his scrambling gave Oregon fits.

"We allowed him to scramble," Oregon coach Rich Brooks said. "I say allow, but hey, he's got got great athletic skills and he picked up some key third downs for them."

Oregon, 3-3 in the conference and 6-3 for the season, couldn't manage a touchdown despite good field position most of the game.

"Our defense was the key to our success," UCLA coach Terry Donahue said.

The Bruins, rebounding from a 34-30 loss at Washington State last week that knocked UCLA out of the No. 1 ranking, took the lead for a good on a 12-play, 47-yard drive in the third quarter.

On third and nine at the Oregon 11-yard line, Aikman found David Keating alone in the end zone to give the Bruins a 10-3 lead with 3:41 left in the period.

With Nelson playing for regular starting quarterback Bill Musgrave, out for the season after breaking his collarbone last week, Oregon drove from its 29 to the UCLA 25 on its next possession.

After the drive stalled, Kirk Dennis, who kicked a 23-yard field goal nine seconds before halftime, added a 43-yarder to cut the Bruins' lead to 10-6 at 45 seconds into the final period.

On the second play of UCLA's next possession, Brown, a sophomore playing because starting tailback Eric Ball suffered a sprained right ankle in the first half, stepped over and through the arms of a pair of tacklers and raced 68 yards for the score.

The conversion failed, but UCLA had a 10-point lead with 13:11 to play.

Nebraska.....51
Iowa State.....16

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Steve Taylor rushed for 154 yards and three touchdowns and passed for another Saturday, leading No. 7 Nebraska past Iowa State 51-16 in a snowstorm.

Ken Clark rushed for 146 yards and one touchdown for Nebraska, 9-1 and 5-0 in the Big Eight. The Cornhuskers gained 637 yards, including 566 yards rushing, despite a biting wind that gusted to 40 mph and a 35-degree temperature.

Iowa State, 4-5 and 2-3, gained just 49 yards and three first downs in the first half.

Nebraska punted after its first two possessions but then scored on its next five, opening a 31-0 halftime lead. The Cornhuskers drove 80 yards for a touchdown to start the second half.

Clark carried 20 times and Taylor 12, and both gained over 100 yards in the first half.

Taylor completed five of nine passes for 71 yards and increased his career total yardage to 4,767, moving past Turner Gill into fourth place on Nebraska's all-time list.

Defensive back Charles Fryar ignited the Cornhuskers by intercepting a Bret Oberg pass that bounced off receiver Dennis Ross' fingers, giving Nebraska the ball at their own 36. Eleven plays later, Taylor threw a 6-yard touchdown to Todd Millikan with 7 seconds left in the first quarter.

Nebraska then scored touchdowns on drives of 78, 67 and 50 yards. Clark capped the first drive with an 18-yard touchdown run at 8:58 and Taylor followed with touchdown runs of 28 and 23 yards.

Then, with 41 seconds left in the half, Nebraska got the ball at its own 40 after an Iowa State punt and Taylor completed passes of 28 yards to Nate Turner and 20 yards to Morgan Gregory, setting up Gregg Barrios' 30-yard field goal on the final play of the half.

Taylor ran 11 yards for a touchdown on Nebraska's first drive of the second half.

Oklahoma.....31
Oklahoma State.....28

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma quarterback Charles Thompson sprinted 18 yards for a touchdown with 2:33 remaining Saturday, lifting eighth-ranked Oklahoma to a wild 31-28 victory over No. 12 Oklahoma State that may have been decided by a personal foul call in the final minute.

Thompson's touchdown capped a 13-play, 80-yard drive and nullified a record-setting 215-yard, two-touchdown effort by Oklahoma State's Barry Sanders, the nation's leading rusher, who gave the Cowboys a 28-24 lead with 6:15 remaining.

Wake Forest Not Thinking About Next Year Just Yet

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

DURHAM — Wake Forest entered Saturday's game against Duke at a crossroads.

The Deacons were 4-4 on the season. It was a situation where they could give all they had to pull out a win or pack it up and start thinking about next year.

They obviously are still thinking about the 1988 season after posting an impressive 35-16 win over the Blue Devils.

"I couldn't be prouder of this team," Wake Forest head coach Bill Dooley said. "We came in at a crossroads, at 4-4. We had two straight defeats and were facing a very strong offensive football team in Duke."

Deacon quarterback Mike Elkins agreed the win was big in that it got Wake Forest back on the winning track.

"This was a really big game for us," Elkins said. "We felt like we had our backs up against the wall, and we felt like we needed to come out and win three straight games to nd the year. We knew we were playing a tough team in Duke and we knew it would take four solid quarter of football and we came up with that today."

Defensively, the Deacons gave up 475 yards in passing to Blue Devil quarterback Anthony Dilweg, but according to defensive back Anthony Purnsley, that doesn't matter, it's what ended up being on the scoreboard.

"Individual performances come and go," said Purnsley, who had six tackles and a trio of pass breakups in the game. "We came out here with the attitude that we were going to take it to them and pull out the win, and that is what happened. This was a great victory."

The win not only got the Deacons back on the winning track after two straight losses, it also kept their preseason goals alive.

"Coach Dooley told us this week that our backs were against the wall, and that we should play like we wanted to win the rest of our games and accomplish the goals that we set out to accomplish at the beginning of the year (a 7-4 record)," Wake Forest receiver Ricky Proehl said. "We came in with a lot of emotion and I think that showed on the field today."

And what about the rest of the year.

"We're gonna try and finish 7-4," Elkins said. "Hopefully then we'll be considered for a bowl bid."

Duke quarterback Anthony Dilweg finished the day 30-49 for 475 yards, two touchdowns and three interceptions. The total of 475 yards breaks former Duke quarterback Ben Bennett's single-game Blue Devil record of 469 yards in a game, set against Wake Forest in 1980.

Dilweg has now thrown for 3,105 yards this year, besting Bennett's 1983 total of 3,086 yards to set the new ACC single-season passing yardage record.

Wake Forest's Steve Brown had a career-high seven catches for 98 yards.

The Deacons' Mark Young set a career high and a season high team mark when he rambled for a 51-yard run.

Wake's Martin Bailey had a career-long 75-yard punt.

Deacons Topple Duke...

came up short on a fourth and goal run.

The Blue Devils managed to get in scoring range when Dilweg connected with receiver Clarkston Hines for a 46-yard completion to the Wake four.

"We all lost the game," Spurrier said. "It was a team loss, coaches and players. We obviously didn't realize Wake Forest was this tough. We didn't realize they'd smash it down our throat. We didn't realize that we had to block them to run the football.

"I think you can sum up the ball game on how their team did on the goal line and how our team did in the first half," Spurrier said. "We couldn't hardly get the ball back to the line of scrimmage."

The Deacons managed to tack on another score late in the half when Mark Young plunged into the end zone from 2 yards out with 46 seconds left in the opening half. The run capped off a 14 play, 79 yard drive. Wilson Hoyle added the point after to give the Deacons a 14-0 lead.

The Deacons managed to keep the drive alive when Duke was flagged for holding on a fourth and 14 play at the Blue Devil 33. The penalty gave Wake an automatic first down.

After taking the ensuing kickoff from their own 28, Dilweg completed a pair of passes to Roger Boone to move the ball to the Wake Forest 49, setting up one final play in the half.

With time running out in the half, Dilweg heaved a Hail-Mary pass into the end zone which wound up in the hands of Walter Jones after bouncing off a pair of Deacon receivers. Doug Peterson came on to tack on the point after to trim the lead to 14-7 at the half.

"Defensively, we really prevented them from having any consistency," Wake Forest head coach Bill Dooley said. "They only had a couple of big plays on us, one of them being that pass at the end of the first half."

The Deacons looked as if they might stretch the lead more at the outset of the third quarter when thy moved inside the Duke 30. The Blue Devils, however, stiffened defensively on a fourth and two from the 25 and took over possession.

Dilweg then used an assortment of completions to Boone and to John Rymiszewski to move Duke to the Deacon 17.

From there, Doug Peterson drilled a 35-yard field goal with 4:49 showing on the clock to trim the lead to 14-10.

That's when the Deacons buckled down.

Elkins led the Deacons down the field with a 19-yard completion to Marco Pickett and a 13-yarder to Steve Brown. On a first and 18 at the Blue Devil 27, Elkins pitched out to Ricky Proehl on a option right and he went in for the score. Following Hoyle's PAT, the Deacons led 21-10 with 1:19 to play in the third quarter.

Dilweg then tried to rally the Blue Devils once again but on a third and 15 pass play from his own 46, he watched as his attempt slithered in and out of the hands of receiver Walter Jones and was picked off by Levern Belin at the Deacon 40.

It was then the arm of Elkins that led the Deacons down the field. Pass completions of 14 yards to Brown and 24 yards to David Jarvis moved the ball to the Duke 19.

Elkins then hurled a scoring pass to Pickett to give the Deacons a cushion with 11:36 left in the game. Hoyle added the point after for a 28-10 Deacon lead.

The Blue Devils managed to trim the lead to 28-16 when Keith Ewell caught a 41-yard scoring pass from Dilweg with 4:52 left in the game. The pass capped off a five play, 58-yard drive.

The Deacons added a little salt to the Blue Devils' wound with 55 seconds left on the clock when Bob Niedbala plunged in from a yard out to put an end to a 10 play, 48-yard drive. The PAT by Hoyle lifted the Deacons on top 35-10 and polished off the Deacon victory.

Cavs Looks For Improved Shooting

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

(Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of articles previewing each of the basketball teams in the Atlantic Coast Conference)

It was a long cold winter for the Virginia basketball team last year and nothing was more frigid than the Cavaliers' shooting touch which plagued the squad all year en route to a 13-18 finish.

Virginia shot only 44 percent from the field in a turbulent season that began with one of its leading scorers, Mel Kennedy, suspended, and ended with the suspension of its second-leading scorer, John Johnson.

But those were only two problems in a season that had an abundance of them.

Kennedy and Johnson were the only two true scorers on a team that was forced to play without a true center. Junior college transfer Brett Bair (6-10) failed to be the answer in the middle, leaving undersized Bill Batts (6-8, 204) playing the post position.

"The big question is who is going to score the points for us," Holland said. "We have to be able to put together a team that plays very much like the team two years ago where chemistry was an important factor — being able to put five players consistently in double figures.

"I think we have some great players returning. Richard Morgan has proved himself to be an outstanding player in this league. Again we have to avoid putting too much of a load on him. Again, I think it has to be done at every position."

To help a weak inside game, Holland has brought in two strong inside players in junior college players Brent Dabbs (6-9) and Curtis Williams (6-7).

"I was, especially after that long recruiting season," he said. "The coaches really wanted them badly. I really wanted to see if they were as good as they were supposed to be.

"I like them. They fit in quite well with the team. Brent is definitely going to make an impact. He has a great outside shot. He is definitely a scorer."

Without Kennedy and Johnson, the Cavaliers return only one proven scorer in Morgan (10.1 points per game).

Dabbs and Williams need to make an impact for the Cavaliers, but both have had knee problems during the pre-season. For Virginia to improve, they have to get healthy and produce.

"We recruited two junior college players, both considered junior college All-Americans," Holland said. "We (also) need more from Bill Batts this year, but it's not a significant difference getting him up in the double figure area. Kenny Turner falls into that same category, good defensive players, good rebounders for us, players who played consistently for us but did not put enough points on the board at the forward spots."

Freshmen Bryant Stith (6-5 guard-forward) and Anthony Oliver, who played at North Duplin, could also see time.

"John Crotty proved himself to be an ACC player last year. I feel very comfortable with him in the starting lineup," Holland said.

"Anthony Oliver is a player who can player either guard spot, handles the ball, can score and drive the lane. He has proven to us that he is a very fine defensive player which was a question mark. He's shown himself to be a very fine player. Of course stepping into the league and playing is quite a different story. Based on the fact that we have two very fine players at the guard spots means that Anthony could be very important this year."

"I think we've got four players returning who I consider to be ACC caliber starters," Holland said of Morgan, Crotty, Batts and Turner.

"That's a nice nucleus to start with. If you have some players who improved a great deal from last year (like) Jeff Daniels and I think Brett Bair will challenge for playing time."

Auburn Halts Eagle String

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUBURN, Ala. — Reggie Slack threw for 272 yards and a touchdown and ran for another Saturday as No. 9 Auburn beat Southern Mississippi 38-8, snapping the Golden Eagles' seven-game winning streak.

Auburn, 8-1, which entered the game with three consecutive shutouts, won its fourth straight since losing to Louisiana State and did not allow any points until there was 1:47 left. Brett Favre threw a 22-yard touchdown pass to Eddie Ray Jackson for the first points against Auburn in 239:49.

Southern Mississippi, 8-2, rushed for just six yards and was penalized 14 times for 128 yards. Favre completed 25 of 43 passes for 212 yards.

The Tigers, who had 462 yards of total offense, held Southern Mississippi to 218. Slack completed 14 of 23 passes and was intercepted once.

Auburn, attempting to defend its Southeastern Conference title, plays Georgia next week and closes against Alabama on Nov. 25.

The Tigers took a 21-0 lead in the first quarter. Stacy Danley, who gained 97 yards on 18 carries, scored on a 1-yard run six minutes in. Flack threw a 38-yard touchdown pass to Freddy Weyand and Greg Taylor scored on a 20-yard reverse.

In the second quarter, Win Lyle kicked a 26-yard field goal and Slack scored on a 1-yard bootleg, increasing the lead to 31-0 at the half.

Wyoming.....51
Texas-El Paso.....6

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — Dabby Dawson ran for 134 yards and a touchdown Saturday as No. 10 Wyoming whipped Texas-El Paso 51-6 to claim a share of the Western Athletic Conference football title.

The victory sends Wyoming, 10-0 overall and 7-0 in the conference, to the Holiday Bowl on Dec. 30 as the WAC's representative. Brigham Young still can tie Wyoming for a share of the league title, but the Cowboys beat the Cougars earlier this year and have the tie-breaker advantage.

Lefty Returns To Court

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

(Editor's note: this is the first in a series of stories on prospects for Colonial Athletic Association teams.)

There are no David Robinsons in the Colonial Athletic Association, no Richmonds with the Cinderella aura.

But 1988-89 is definitely going to be something special in the CAA. It's the "Year of the Left-handed One."

In case you've been away in darkest Africa, or in a monastery in Tibet, or just haven't been paying attention, Lefty Driesell of Davidson and Maryland fame is back in the coaching ranks.

Driesell, who gave up coaching at Maryland in the wake of the Len Bias cocaine-induced death, is making his comeback at James Madison University in Harrisonburg, Va.

And while that just about guarantees sell-out crowds at the Convocation Center in Harrisonburg and in arenas throughout the league, it doesn't mean that Lefty is going to run hog-wild through the conference.

In fact, in a vote of the media at the CAA Basketball Tipoff last week, Driesell's Duke were placed in the basement.

"This is probably the most inexperienced team I've ever been associated with," Lefty said. "All of them are freshmen and sophomores except for one junior and two seniors, and one of them probably won't play much."

Driesell points out that the Dukes lost 41 points and 18 rebounds in average from last year's team that went 10-18 overall and 5-9 in the CAA. Only one starter off last year's team returns, Claude Ferdinand, a 6-6 junior forward, who averaged 10.9 points and 5.0 rebounds. Ferdinand, having both physical and other problems, played in only 15 games last year, starting 12.

Three seniors graduated, guard Ben Gordon and Robert Griffin and forward Ralph Glenn. The Dukes also lost 6-11 Thom Brand, who blocked a team-record 36 shots last year, and 6-1 guard Keith McMillan off the team. Brand left the team for medical reasons last spring and McMillan left for personal reasons after the start of drills this fall.

Kennard Winchester, a second team All-CAA selection last year, was suspended this year. He was the leading scorer last season with a 16.1 average and a 6.4 rebounding mark.

All-in-all, it leaves Lefty a young, inexperienced team to work with.

"I've never had a team work as hard as these kids are doing," Driesell said. "I'm very pleased with them. We'll play hard with a man-to-man defense, and we'll run when we can. Whether we can get the ball off the backboards and stop other people remains to be seen."

Driesell also assures JMU followers that his team will be in great condition and that no one will outhustle his Dukes.

While Ferdinand is considered a starter, the Dukes also return 6-5 sophomore Barry Brown who started the final 10 games of last season. He averaged 6.0 points and 4.0 rebounds, blocking 29 shots.

Bostic, a freshman, sat out last year with an injury, and is expected to see a lot of action this year. Brooks was the back-up at the point last year, playing in each of the games and averaging 1.9 points a game.

The power forward spot could go to one of three different people, 6-7 Alan Dorsey, 6-7 Alex Clevinger or Brown. Dorsey averaged 5.0 points and 1.7 rebounds, playing in every game last year. Clevinger played well in the final month and averaged 1.6 points and 1.4 rebounds, playing in 17 games.

The small forward position is being fought over by 6-5 senior Anthony Cooley and 6-5 freshman William Davis. "If Davis plays like he practices, he's going to be a pretty damn good player," Driesell said. Cooley, who played last year after transferring from North Carolina's junior varsity program, averaged 2.1 points and 2.9 rebounds.

Lefty said he was not able, at this time, to gauge the conference. "I just haven't been around here long enough. I haven't looked at any film yet."

And for himself, Driesell says he has nothing to prove. "If I find that I can't win here, I'll quit — but don't hold me to that this year. Of course, I hate to lose, I despise losing."

Asked if he had a time frame for a winning, Driesell said, "The first game! Realistically, we may not win a game this year"

Still there is enthusiasm in Harrisonburg. And Lefty is glad to be back. "I'm not doing this for the money," he said, "to be truthful, I was just plain bored."

One thing is certain, with Lefty back on the sidelines, basketball fans around the CAA are not going to be bored.

Virginia...

N.C. State was unable to get inside the Virginia 38 in the fourth quarter.

A series of heavy rain showers in the morning left the artificial playing surface soaked for the game, but about 15 minutes before kickoff, the rain gave way to bright sunshine that prevailed throughout the contest.

Virginia's first three possessions ended in a lost fumble and two N.C. State interceptions, but each time the Wolfpack was unable to muster a first down.

Virginia's fourth possession ended with a 10-yard punt by Joel Dempsey, and the Cavaliers' next drive was ended by a block of Dempsey's punt, but as was the case previously, N.C. State could not do anything with the ball.

In addition to his two interceptions, Moore completed just five of 15 passes in the first half. He finished with 193 yards on 14-of-30 passing and was not picked off in the second half.

Worthen, who had eight catches for 82 yards, became the Wolfpack's career receptions leader with 122.

Virginia's John Ford also became the No. 1 receptions leader in Cavalier history. He had five catches for 84 yards and now has 121 receptions in his career.

Crisis Time For Miami Dolphins

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

As any coach will tell you, when you play just 16 games, each one is important. When you play divisional games, they become critical.

It is crisis time for the Miami Dolphins.

With the Buffalo Bills three games in front of Miami in the AFC East, the Dolphins have no time to waste. They beging a string of five straight divisional games on Sunday at Foxboro, Mass., against the resurgent New England Patriots.

"We're 0-3 in the AFC East and we just feel we've got to win each week," Miami coach Don Shula said. "Cincinnati, Cleveland and Houston have good records. The Jets (5-3-1) are half a game ahead of us. A lot of (AFC) teams are playing each other, but we just feel we've got to win each week."

Miami, 5-4, has won four of its last five. New England, which has its next four games in the division, is 4-5. While the Dolphins are facing the Patriots twice, the Bills, New York Jets and Indianapolis Colts in the next five weeks, New England also has New York and Indianapolis coming up.

"We have to win them all, without a doubt," New England cornerback Raymond Clayborn said. "We face that possibility that if we don't win every game, that our season could ultimately be over with that loss."

But New England has upset Cincinnati and Chicago in its last two home games and played well in losing to Buffalo in between.

"We're getting better, but there's a long way to go and we can't back off," Clayborn said.

Elsewhere in the AFC East, the Bills, who have the league's best record at 8-1, are at Seattle, and the Jets are at the Colts.

Also, it is Dallas at the New York Giants, Detroit at Minnesota, Green Bay at Atlanta, the Los Angeles Rams at Philadelphia, Pittsburgh at Cincinnati, Tampa Bay at Chicago, San Francisco at Phoenix, New Orleans at Washington, Kansas City at Denver, and the Los Angeles Raiders at San Diego.

On Monday night, it will be Cleveland at Houston.

The Bills' four-game winning streak is the NFL's longest. Extending it could be difficult in the Kingdome, where Buffalo is 0-2. Those were the only two meetings ever between the teams.

"We're only about halfway through the season," he said. "So we're not there yet."

Seattle is coached by Chuck Knox, the last man to lead the Bills into the playoffs, in 1981. But Knox's Seahawks, 5-4, have been inconsistent and are first in the AFC West mainly because Denver and the Raiders have been even more erratic.

The Colts have come alive with three consecutive victories, including 55-23 thrashing of two-time AFC champion Denver.

Rose Holds Off Eagles For Title

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

When Rose High School and Northeastern of Elizabeth City met Friday night, it was for all the proverbial marbles. Both were unbeaten in the Big East Conference and to the winner would go not only the conference championship but a home date and top seeding for the league in the State 4-A Playoffs next Friday.

And it turned out to be just the game that was expected of it.

Elizabeth City, with the more potent rushing game, moved up and down the field, amassing 380 yards in total offense. Rose, without starting backs Tony Williams and Timmy Moore, sidelined with injuries, had to rely on the passing game, which clicked just enough.

But it was the defense that finally told the tale in a 21-14 win for the Rampants.

And, as the old saying goes, it wasn't over until it was over. Even then, Northeastern coach Tim Merritt claimed that it wasn't even over then.

Merritt's Eagles picked up 12 yards on the final play of the game to the two yard line, enough for a first down. The whistle blew with two seconds left on the clock, but time was allowed to run out, the Eagles not having another time out remaining.

"The refs didn't have the guts to make the call," Merritt said. On a play which gains a first down, time is stopped to move the chains, then resumed. Merritt was hopeful that the Eagles could have gotten off a play to score in the time remaining.

"We would have gone for two if we had scored," Merritt said, rejecting an overtime to decide it.

Northeastern totally dominated play in the second half, despite not scoring. The Eagles held Rose without a first down — except on the one-play 33-yard touchdown drive that won the game, an off-tackle dash by Billy Carr.

Earlier, quarterback Jamie Brewington hit Maurice Hines for a 15-yard scoring pass and Hines ran over from five yards out for the other. Felix Robinson kicked all three PATs.

Northeastern's two scores came on big plays. Troy McCullen raced 52 yards on the second play of the game for the first Eagle score and James White later dashed 59 yards for the other. Lawrence Winslow kicked both extra points.

Northeastern, which finished the game with 380 yards in total offense, had five good scoring opportunities in the second half and each time the Rampants rose up to stop them short, including the final frantic drive that nearly came to fruition.

Northeastern got the ball back on their own 28 after another controversial play with just over three and a half minutes left to go.

Rose had the ball at its own 44 and Brewington completed a pass to Abram Lang, who appeared to fall forward well past the first down marker. However, the official, coming up from in front of the play, spotted the ball back about a foot, and the measurement was an inch short. Rose then attempted a long count to draw Northeastern offsides, but it was nothing doing. Rose was called for illegal procedure and punted away to the Eagle 28.

On fourth with four at the 46, White broke away for 22 to the Rose 32, later adding 10 more for a first down at the 17.

But after a two-yard gain, Winslow was smothered back on the 27 attempting to pass. On the next play, Rose was called for holding, giving Northeastern one last chance from the 14. Winslow hit Chester Dunton at the two, but he was dragged down there and time ran out.

After Rose had taken a 21-14 lead, Northeastern rolled from its own 30 to the Rose nine, where on fourth and seven from the nine, the Eagles attempted a 25-yard field goal.

The Rampants, however, had to punt and Northeastern resumed its attack from the Rose 45, driving down to the six, where on fourth and three, White tried to go to the outside, but was dragged down for no gain by Malcolm Wilson, turning it back to Rose once more.

Another punt put the Eagles back in business on the Rose 45, but after reaching the 33, a holding penalty moved them back and on the next play Keith Anderson intercepted at the 22.

Again Rose had to punt and Northeastern moved from its own 44, reaching the 30 before Hines slammed down McCullen for a three-yard loss and on third and 12, Carr intercepted Winslow and returned the ball 17 yards.

Three plays later, however, Carr fumbled and Northeastern had it back on its own 46. Hines tackled White for a seven-yard loss on second and 10, however, and Northeastern had to punt.

That led to the final series of the game.

Northeastern took the opening kickoff and scored in just two plays. After forcing Rose offsides on the first try, Northeastern picked up three yards on the first official play. Then, on the second, McCullen took the ball over left tackle, burst into the secondary and raced untouched to the end zone 52 yards away.

Northeastern drove again on its second possession, moving to the Rose 43 before fumbling it away.

Rose then got off one of its few drives of the night, moving from the 34 to the Northeastern 29 before returning the favor with a lost fumble of its own.

On fourth and four from the 25, Brewington hit John Ebron for 10 yards to the 15. On the next play, he rolled out and hit Hines about the five, and he cut into the end zone for the score. Robinson's kick tied it at 7-7 with 1:33 left in the period.

Rose got it right back again on another fumble on the first play following the kickoff, turning it over at the 29.

Brewington again hooked up with Ebron on first down for 13 yards then Hines carried for eight more. On the first play of the second period, Carr picked up a first down at the five and Hines went up the middle the rest of the way on the next play.

Rose appeared headed for another touchdown on its next possession. Taking over at the Rampant 37, Rose moved downfield behind Brewington's passes. A key play came when one pass to Eric Morris was batted out of his hands and into the air. Two defenders had the chance for an interception, but bobbled it around and Morris recovered to snatch it out of the air, a 16-yard completion to the Eagle 15.

Then came a freak situation. Rose was penalized five yards for illegal procedure to the 20. On the next play, Northeastern was penalized half the distance — 10 yards — to the 10. The Eagles were then offsides, but the official moved the ball just inside the five, inches short of a first down. Rose was thrown for a loss on the next play and then tried a halfback pass from Don Thompson, only to have it intercepted in the end zone.

Northeastern took over at the 20 and picked up 21 yards on two plays to the 41. From there, White went wide to the right broke free at the corner and outraced the defense to the end zone, 59 yards away. Winslow's kick tied it at 14-14 with 4:43 left.

Early in the second half, Northeastern went back to punt at its own 29, but Hines broke through to get a hand on the ball, which traveled only four yards to the 33.

There, on first down, Carr went over left tackle for what proved to be the game-winner with 8:25 left in the third period.

"I don't know if I've ever been prouder of a team of mine," Rose coach Chip Williams said. "They pulled together under adverse circumstances.

"Northeastern has an excellent team. McCullen has a lot of speed and I thought Leonard Bartlett (offensive tackle) played outstandingly on offense."

Williams said he thought the turnovers in the game were big, but singled out the blocked punt as the key play. "We were just not going to be able to drive the ball on them.

"And I have to give credit to our defensive staff, Jim Brewington, Bob Alexander and Tommy Peacock. They did a great job of preparing the team."

Merritt also praised his team. "We did a good job although we didn't throw as well as I expected. We made adjustments in the second half to cut down their passing and I thought the defense played super. It's just a tough game to lose, especially on the two-yard line."

Rose, 10-0 overall and 7-0 in the Big East, will be at home next week to Pine Forest, the Mid-South's number three team. Northeastern, 8-2 overall, 6-1 in the conference, travels to Fayetteville to meet Mid-South champion Seventy-First.

Hornets Get Rude Welcome

By Tom Foreman Jr.
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — It was the rudest of welcomes for an expansion team as the Charlotte Hornets embarked on their initial season in the NBA and the Cleveland Cavaliers made the first journey a rough one.

Sparked by a runaway in the second period, the Cavaliers started their progress toward improving on a poor road record last season with a 133-93 victory to spoil opening night for the Hornets.

"Give them credit, they came out and played hard," Cleveland coach Lenny Wilkens said. "We were just a little flat in the first quarter. We're a good defensive team. We just worked hard on defense and tried to cut down on the mistakes and be patient with our offense. If you do that, good things will happen and that's what happened."

Playing before 23,338 NBA-starved fans, the Hornets held a 24-22 lead after Kurt Rambis scored on an inside move at 2:10 of the first quarter. The score was tied at 26-26 at the end of the period.

The last time the Hornets held the lead, Tim Kempton's layup at 8:41 resulted in a 34-32 edge. Then, the Cleveland onslaught began.

" ... We settled down in the second quarter. They were pumped up, but we kept our poise," Cleveland forward Larry Nance said.

Nance's jump hook tied the score at 34-34 with 8:20 left. Cleveland ran off the next nine points before Tyrone Bogues broke the string with to free throws with 5:55 left before halftime.

On the strength of their defense and quick inside game, Cleveland went on another tear, 22-6, that gave the Cavaliers a 66-42 lead at halftime. It was a big boost for a team that won just 11 of 41 road games in the 1987-88 season.

"When we took over, we wanted our team to become competitive. We wanted them to play well at home so no one could walk in there and think that they were on R and R, and we wanted to be competitive on the road," Wilkens said. "We accomplished two of those things last year. Now we're working on the third. I feel like we're going to be a better team on the road this year."

Charlotte's problem was losing the momentum they had seized in the opening quarter.

Chargers, Rams Close With Wins

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton rounded out the 1988 regular season in football with a 35-8 romp over Charles B. Aycock, warming up for the first round of the state football playoffs.

Tony Reeves and Rashid Williams each two touchdowns in the game, Reeves getting his first one on the first Charger play from scrimmage.

Aycock started out threatening the Chargers, however, driving to the one-yard line of Ayden-Grifton. But there, the Falcons fumbled the ball and Daryl Moye scooped it up and returned it 37 yards to the 38.

On the next play, Reeves broke away and raced 62 yards for the touchdown, putting Ayden-Grifton into the lead for good.

Ayden-Grifton scored the next time it got the ball, too. But it was more routine, with Reeves carrying the ball in from only seven yards out. Reeves also ran over the PAT to give the Chargers a 14-0 lead after one quarter.

In the second period, Keith Wade intercepted a Falcon pass and returned it 63 yards for the third Charger touchdown, giving Ayden-Grifton a 20-0 halftime edge.

Aycock scored its only touchdown in the third period. Victor Holland went over from the one yard line on fourth down to get the Falcons on the scoreboard. Brandon Harris ran over the PAT to cut it to 20-8.

Ayden-Grifton came back with two more scores the rest of the way. Before the third period ended, Williams scored on a nine-yard run and Scott Cannon ran over the PAT to make it 28-8. Then, in the final quarter, Williams scored from nine yards away and George Fuller kicked the PAT.

The Chargers took advantage of Falcon mistakes all night lone. They returned two punts for 40 yards, and had another interception return of 43 yards to go along with the fumble return and the scoring interception.

The Chargers, 9-1 overall and 6-0 in Eastern Plains Conference play, will enter the state 2-A playoffs on Friday, hosting Wake Forest-Rolesville.

Greene Central.....35
South Lenoir.....0

SNOW HILL — Greene Central rolled up a 35-0 victory over South Lenoir Friday night to clinch the number three playoff spot in the Eastern Plains Conference.

That give them the honor of going up against number one ranked Hertford County on Friday in the first round of the 2-A State Playoffs.

Quarterback Kris Radford led the way, scoring two touchdowns and passing for another. He finished the game with 10 rushes for 83 yards and connected on eight of 15 passes for 104 yards. Three of those went to Wes Suggs for 54 yards while Anthony Baker caught three for 26 yards. John Dixon, who scored once, ran nine times for 86 yards.

"They outplayed us and outcoached us in the first half," Coach Spence Grantham said. "We came out to run the option and did well with it, then started going away from it. In the second half, we got back to doing the things we could do well against them and got to clicking better."

Radford passed six yards to Baker for the first score of the ball game with only 1:57 left in the first half. Baker added the PAT kick for a 7-0 lead.

In the second half, the Rams scored on their first possession, driving after the kickoff. Radford scored on a three-yard run to climax the drive.

Later in the period, Dixon scored from 13 yards out and also ran over the extra point for a 21-0 lead.

Radford scored on an eight yard run in the last quarter and Timmy Wilkes got the final TD on an eight yard run. Baker kicked the PAT after both scores.

Brian Bostic led the defense with six tackles and two assists. Swindell Flowers added four tackles and one assist. "He took away their outside game," Grantham said of Flowers. Donald Speight had an interception.

Greene Central ends the regular season with a 5-5 overall and 4-2 league mark, tying North Pitt for second place in the league. North Pitt, however, gets the second seeding because it won the game between the two.

Williamston.....28
Roanoke.....13

WILLIAMSTON — Roanoke won everywhere but on the scoreboard Friday as Williamston recorded a 28-13 victory in both teams' season finale.

The Redskins outrushed the Tigers 218-68, had more first downs, 13-9 and totaled 69 return yards to none for Williamston. But in the end it's what's showing on the lighted board. And there, Williamston was ahead.

Roanoke's demise was the turnover. For the game the Redskins had seven, six of which were fumbles.

Roanoke scored first in the game when Jimmy Brown went in from 1-yard out with 6:22 left in the opening period to cap off the Redskins' first drive. Samuel Knight added the PAT for a 7-0 lead.

The Redskins had a chance to extend the lead later before fumbling on the Tiger 1-yard line on one drive and on the 29 on another.

Following the second turnover, Williamston quarterback Guy Spruill hooked up with Tyrone Bland for a 70-yard touchdown pass. The kick failed leaving the Redskins ahead 7-6 with 2:32 remaining in the first half.

The Redskins then coughed the ball up on the ensuing kickoff and the Tigers recovered setting up another scoring drive which was capped off with a 6-yard run by Bland. The two-point conversion pass by the Tigers failed giving them a 12-7 halftime lead.

Roanoke fumbled another kickoff in the second half which led to another Tiger touchdown. The score came when Spruill ran in from four yards out on a keeper. Spruill then hit Ricky Griffin on the two-point conversion for a 20-7 lead.

Bernard Hudgins managed to pull Roanoke back within striking range when he went over for a touchdown from a yard out with just over six minutes left in the game. The kick failed leaving Williamston on top 20-13. Hudgin's touchdown was set up on a 43-yard run by Pender Locke.

Spruill then slammed the door shut on the Redskins, however, when he took the kickoff from the Redskins and bolted 81 yards for a touchdown. John Sparrow then hit Griffin with the two-point conversion pass to round out the scoring in the game.

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville warmed up for the State 1-A playoffs with an 8-6 football victory over Creswell Friday night in a non-conference meeting between the two Tobacco Belt Conference teams.

The Bullets, 6-4 overall, will enter the playoffs as the TBC's number three seed and will travel to Perquimans, the Albemarle's number two, on Friday for the first round.

Jamesville scored its only touchdown in the second quarter. That came on a 23-yard pass from back-up quarterback David Bell to Alexander Moore. Bell then hit Anthony Selby on the PAT for an 8-0 lead.

Panthers Run Past 'Canes, 49-0

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

BETHEL — North Pitt ran its way right into the state 2-A playoffs with a 49-0 drubbing of Pamlico County Friday.

The Panthers, who only attempted one pass all night, rushed 48 times for 374 yards in the game to close out the regular season with a 6-4 overall record and a 4-2 mark in the Eastern Plains Conference. That mark puts them in the playoffs as the league's second seed. The Hurricanes finish the season 2-8 overall and 1-5 in the conference.

The Panthers came out poised and ready both offensively and defensively. In the first half, they ran up a 28-0 lead with 217 yards of rushing, while limiting Pamlico to no passing yards and minus 1 yard rushing.

"It took our defense a while to get going this year, but we're playing real good now," defensive end Tony Hopkins said. "I think it's going to be very hard for teams to score on us in the playoffs."

"You can see why they're a playoff team and we're not," Pamlico head coach Mike Twitchell said. "It's been a very long year for us — one in which the ball has taken a lot of bad bounces."

"I think the kids realized what was on the line tonight," North Pitt head coach Stuart Ennis said. "I got a commitment from them (to play their best) back on August 1 and they didn't let me down.

"For this group which was picked in the preseason to finish fourth or fifth to wind up in second place says a whole lot."

It was obvious from the outset who would control the game as the Hurricanes' Terance Tatum fumbled on the first play from scrimmage following the opening kickoff. Freddie Best recovered for the Panthers at the Pamlico 24-yard line and set up the game's first score.

Four plays later, Michael Daniels went in for a touchdown from 13-yards out. Dave Sawyer added the point after to give North Pitt a 7-0 lead with 10:20 left in the first quarter.

"The (offensive) line did a good job for us (running backs) tonight," Daniels said. "The holes were there for us almost every time."

Ennis agreed.

"You've got to give the credit our running backs did tonight to the work the offensive line did in the trenches," Ennis said.

After forcing Pamlico to punt on its next drive, North Pitt set up for another scoring drive at its own 33-yard line.

Quarterback Billy Hardison keyed the drive with a 43-yard sprint on a keeper to the Hurricane 19. After Hardison moved the ball to the 5 on another keeper, Michael Blow plowed in for the touchdown. Following Sawyer's PAT, the Panthers led 14-0 with 3:35 left in the opening period.

The Panthers then stopped the Hurricane offense without a first down and, following a punt, began a 69-yard scoring drive.

Blow keyed the drive with a 32-yard scamper to the Pamlico 8. From there, Daniels did the rest with a sweep around the left side with 11:27 left in the half. Sawyer tacked on the point after for a 21-0 Panther lead.

North Pitt put a little insurance on the scoreboard later in the half when Ronald Smith capped off a two play, 24-yard drive with a 13-yard run around the right side. The drive was set up by a 22-yard punt return by William Morning. After Sawyer's PAT, the Panthers led 28-0 with 4:42 left in the half.

The second half didn't get much better for the Hurricanes as Blow took the opening kickoff of the third quarter and returned it 42 yards to the Pamlico 48.

One play later, Daniels broke free up the middle and scored on a 45-yard scamper with only 1:05 gone by in the half. Sawyer added the point after pushing the lead to 35-0.

On the ensuing possession, Hurricane quarterback Chris Warren's pass attempt was picked off by Smith at the Pamlico 41 and returned 15 yards to the 26.

Three plays later, Smith got the reward for his play on defense when he bolted into the end zone on an 11-yard run. Sawyer then hit his school-record setting sixth PAT of the game to put the Panthers on top 42-0 with 6:42 left in the third quarter.

The Hurricanes then coughed the ball right back up on the kickoff and Morning recovered to give North Pitt possession again at the Pamlico 33-yard line.

To The Sports Editor:

East Carolina University's fans became very excited with football when Sonny Randle became coach at ECU. We all know we were struggling to be a winner in the Southern Conference. Randle turned this program into a winner, a very exciting team. I'd call him "Mr. Excitement." I for one would like to see Randle back as head coach at ECU.

For you fans that did not see him coach, he had his team ready to play when they took the field — reminded me of a pack of "junkyard dogs," ALWAYS READY. The best motivator I have ever seen at ECU.

You don't mind standing in a pouring rain at Carolina to see his team play.

I love a winner. I still believe it is how you play the game.

Harold Dail

To The Sports Editor:

I read this morning in the local paper that Art Baker will not be coaching the Pirates in 1989 and I write to express my regrets that he will not be given another year. For the past four years, I have attended games during Parents' Day, but I expected to attend many more ECU games in the future. Art Baker has been two things: a "class" coach and the victim in the 1988 season of the toughest schedule played by any Division I football team in the country.

When the rankings of the top-20 teams (AP poll) came out today, I did a little survey and found that only one team in the top 20 (Miami, Fla.) had scheduled as many as four games with top-20 opponents; eight of the teams, including Notre Dame and Southern Cal, had scheduled no more than three games in the top 20. West Virginia plays but one team ranked in the top 20. East Carolina is unique in having played three of the top five teams — and giving good account of itself in each instance. Five games in the top 20 is tops.

With a somewhat softer schedule, and with a few breaks in the Southwestern Louisiana and Southern Miss games, East Carolina could have finished with something like a 6-5 in 1988. Important is the fact that ECU brings first-class football to the east-central region of the East Coast. I hope it will continue that tradition, though I will not complain if it schedule no more than three of the top 20 in any one season.

Nor will I be unhappy if Art Baker and the Pirates run up some heavy scoring against Temple and Cincinnati. Try can do it and they deserve to end the season with some one-sided victories.

Five 4-As Unbeaten

By David Droschak
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Five of North Carolina's top 4-A high school football teams head into the 1988 playoffs with perfect 10-0 records, including defending champion Garner, who is riding a 25-game winning streak.

The top-ranked Trojans had Friday night off, but Richmond County, Greenville Rose, Asheville Reynolds and West Mecklenburg completed stellar regular-season marks with victories.

Seven 4-A teams entered last year's playoffs with 10-0 records.

One of the most unusual 4-A games occurred in Rocky Mount, where the Gryphons outgrained Wilson Fike 352 yards to 43 yards, but lost the game 14-13. Both of Fike's scores came after turnovers — one a blocked punt and another an interception.

In 3-A, Burlington Cummings completed its second consecutive undefeated regular season with a 43-8 victory over Bartlett Yancey. The top-ranked Cavaliers were led by all-state quarterback Chuckie Burnette and wide receiver Ray Griffis. Burnette completed 11 of 15 passes for 246 yards and two scores, while Griffis caught six passes for 154 yards.

Second-ranked Forest Hills, after missing the playoffs last season, completed its 10-0 season Friday night with a 17-3 victory over Sun Valley.

Two-time defending 3-A champion Shelby, 7-1-1, closed strong, blasting Chase 53-14.

Unranked Western Alamance got an all-star performance from Quin Slade in its 56-0 victory over Graham. The senior rushed 44 times for 325 yards and scored six touchdowns.

In 2-A, top-ranked Hertford County, a combination of Ahoskie and Murfreesboro, completed its first season with a perfect 10-0 slate after downing Edenton Holmes 21-7.

Second-ranked Wallace-Rose Hill looks ready for the playoffs after pounding Pender County 70-0.

Fifth-ranked West Montgomery is the only other 2-A team entering the playoffs with a 10-0 record. The Warriors got 97 yards rushing and two scores from running back Tyrone Horne in their 19-0 victory over cross-county rival East Montgomery, the state's fifth-ranked 1-A school.

The big 1-A matchup between No. 2 Murphy and No. 4 Swain County was called off because of bad weather and is scheduled for today.

Top-ranked Bath, 9-0, is also scheduled to play Chocowinity today.

And things just keep getting worse for Mattamuskeet. The Lakers lost 86-0 last Friday to Bath. This week, ninth-ranked North Edgecombe turned the trick 85-0.

Synthetic oil may appear to be more expensive than petroleum oil, but it's not. That's because you don't have to drain it as frequently as petroleum, so you use much less oil.

This fact was proven by AMSOIL Inc. using a fleet of New York City taxi cabs in a recent demonstration. One set of cabs actually ran 60,000 miles on the same fill of AMSOIL Motor Oil, while another set followed normal drain intervals with petroleum. Look how much oil was saved by using AMSOIL.

Begin Preparing Game In Field

By Bill Schulz
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Hunters should start preparing game in the field, long before the meat hits the dinner table.

"You must take care of your game," stressed Sylvia Bashline, food editor of Field and Stream magazine and author of the "Bounty of the Earth" cookbook.

Clean it completely, cool it quickly, freeze it properly and cook it gently.

Clean the game as soon as it's killed and bury the entrails.

"If you're hunting all day, and it's a warm day, it's nice to have an ice chest with ice to cool birds, rabbits or whatever you got in the morning," she said in a telephone interview from her State College, Pa., home.

"Whatever you do, don't put it in a plastic bag," she said. A bag encloses the animal's body heat and the idea is to cool the meat as quickly as possible to prevent spoilage.

Don't carry game in the back pocket of a hunting coat for more than a few hundred yards' walk to the car, for the same reason, she said.

"My husband Jim and I, if we're a long way from the car, we will stash the game in the shade, hang it in a tree in the shade. But you can only do that if you don't have any predators around," she said.

In the kitchen, pluck or skin birds and skin other animals. "If you're not going to cook them within two days, you want to get them in the freezer," she said.

"With a small game animal, it's best if you freeze it in solid ice. That's the best protection against freezer burn," she said. "Most people today have freezers that have a self-defrosting feature.

"That uses a fan, and that fan draws moisture from every package. Freeze the game in a pan, take it out of the pan and wrap it in freezer paper."

She also recommended cutting small game into serving-size pieces, packing them in a milk carton, filling the carton with water, then freezing it.

Techniques are slightly different with deer.

Clean the animal quickly and completely, being careful not to cut into the bladder and other inside organs containing fluids which can contaminate the meat.

Prop the carcass open with a stick and get it to a cooler or carry it home inside a car or trailer. Carrying it on the hood speeds spoilage because of engine heat and carrying it on top of a vehicle leaves the meat open to being tainted by exhaust pollution.

Bashline suggests aging venison for several days.

"What I like to do is quarter it and put it in an old refrigerator down in the basement. That way you can control the temperature. You can't control the temperature hanging it outside. The next bet is to have a friendly meat packer who has space in his cooler."

Then cut it and double or triple wrap it, first in plastic, then aluminum foil and finally a good freezer paper.

"Then label it so you don't have to unwrap it to see what's in the package," she said. "Say what's in there, when you killed it and how many servings."

She does not recommend boning venison. "I like the bones in my meat. But it's important to freeze it really cold and don't open the freezer any more than you have to" because venison marrow needs very cold temperatures to stay frozen.

"I suggest a separate freezer for fish and game, so you're not into it all the time," she said. "You can buy a used freezer for practically nothing."

Also, she said, treat venison like prime beef.

"I have seen more venison chops ruined because people try to kill them again in the kitchen," she said. "Treat a venison chop like the best cut of beef, cook it quick and hot and only medium rare, with some pink in the middle. For God's sake, don't overcook it."

She said pheasant breast also should be cooked medium rare. "It will be juicy and delicious if you cook it quickly on the top of the stove."

Fishing Year Winding Down

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Though the fishing season is starting to wind down, you shouldn't think that it's over, pier and marina operators along the North Carolina coast say.

"We should be busy right on up to Thanksgiving, if the weather will let us," said John Dudley of Dudley's Marina in Swansboro.

"We'll have good fishing here for about 30 more days," said Keith Willoughby of the Nags Head Fishing Pier.

Hatteras

"In the surf, we've had a few big red drum," Hissey said. "The biggest I heard of was 62 pounds. We'e had real good catches of sea mullet, and a few flounder. In the sound they're catching flounder and speckled trout."

"It's been kind of rough on the boys to get offshore but the last couple of times they've been, they've caught yellowfin tuna, and wahoo."

Southport

"It's been kind of slow lately," Ratcliffe said. "They've caught a few flounder and a few spots, but that's about all."

Ratcliffe also reported catches of nice whiting.

Topsail Island

At the Jolly Roger Pier, Hardin Crouch reported an excellent run of whiting.

"They just tore it up here for about a week; it was just every night," he said. "November is getting off to a very good start."

Crouch also reported good catches of amberjacks, speckled trout, puppy drum, flounder and a few croakers and spots.

"The bigeest thing has been sea mullet," he said. "They have been exceptionally good. We've had a lot of coolers full. The mullet season has just really begun."

Wrightsville Beach

At the Crystal Pier, George Fokakis reported good catches of sea mullets and blues.

"They're getting sea mullets, big fin fish and a few blues," Fokakis said.

Fokakis hadn't heard of anyone in his area catching spots, but said they still had time to come in.

"They've had them around us but we haven't caught any," he said. "I think they will (come in), we've still got time."

Nags Head

The speckled trout are making their presence known in Nags Head, Willoughby said.

"The last couple of days they've been picking up speckled, trout, Taylor blues and a few flounder," he said. "Last week for two days, we had some big blues. It wasn't a blitz, just a few of them."

Swansboro

At Dudley's Marina, John Dudley reported good catches of tuna, provided the weather cooperates.

"It's hard to get offshore," Dudley said. "We've got some tuna and stuff out there, we just can't get to them. The Spanish are still biting and there's a lot of bluefish. The speckled trout have been running quite good."

Dudley also reported good catches of spots and grouper. Dudley said he expected the winds to die down before the weekend.

"We are expecting good fishing," he said. "There are lot of grouper out there, nice grouper; more grouper than I've ever seen."

Carolina Beach

At Carolina Beach Fishing Pier, Laura Phelps said people were catching spots "two a time for the last week."

"They've been biting real good," Phelps said. "We didn't think they were going to come. We thought they were gone. They've been biting like this since Sunday. If the weather stays like this, they should stay around."

Phelps also reported catches of spots, whitings and drum.

Winter Sportsmen Should Beware of Hypothermia

In the summertime, a refreshing plunge into cold water reduces your body's high temperature. But an unexpected winter dip can be deadly if your body temperature plunges below a safe level. It's called hypothermia.

Fishing or hunting this fall or winter when the air temperature is bearable is a must for dedicated sportsmen, but don't subject yourself to hypothermia. Know the facts before you leave home:

- Hypothermia means the body's temperature drops to 95 degrees or below. Unless treated, a person may lose consciousness or stop breathing.
- Often, the cause of hypothermia is getting all or part of the body wet and being exposed to cold temperatures. Exposure to 40-degree water for just five or 10 minutes can result in death.
- Hypothermia can result from loss of heat through only part of the body, such as the feet. Even when you're dry, hypothermia is a danger in extreme cold. In fact, as much as 25 percent of your body's heat can be lost through an uncovered head.
- Be sure to go fishing or hunting with a buddy. Inform others of your plans and when you expect to return, then stick to them.
- Don't take chances with the weather or the water. In the fall and winter, sudden storms can occur and make water turbulent. Always wear, rather than stow, a Coast Guard-approved personal flotation device.
- Seal a complete change of clothes in plastic. Self-zipping storage bags keep socks, matches, tinder and first aid items dry. Plastic bags also help items float if your boat should capsize.
- If someone gets wet, then getting dry and warm should take on the urgency of a life-or-death situation — and it may very well be. Remove wet clothing as soon as possible. Another person's body heat may be the only source of warmth, but it can be a good one. In extreme cases, two people can "sandwich" around someone. The hypothermia victim should ingest hot liquids or soup, if possible, but avoid alcohol or stimulants such as coffee.

Prevention is the best course, but when hypothermia is a danger, quick action may save someone's life.

King Mackerel Quota Increased

Gov. James G. Martin was recently notified by the National Marine Fisheries Service that the U.S. Secretary of Commerce has issued an emergency order increasing the commercial quota for king mackerel by 266,000 pounds.

Martin had requested on Oct. 14 an end to the practice of "double counting" fish that are caught by recreational fishermen and later sold to fish dealers.

According to a public affairs spokesman for the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, the Martin administration has been working closely with Congressman Walter B. Jones (D-First District) in an effort to correct double counting and other errors in king mackerel management.

"This change will not redress all the inequities causing severe economic harm to our mackerel fishermen, but it is an appreciated first step," Martin said. "It will extend the commercial mackerel season for a few weeks, perhaps gaining time to provide resolution of the problem."

The order will raise the commercial quota for king mackerel from 2.6 million pounds to nearly 2.9 million pounds. The length of time that the increase will extend the fishing season will depend on weather conditions. Fishermen normally catch more fish during periods of good weather.

The National Marine Fisheries Service is still considering North Carolina's request to reopen the recreational mackerel fishing season. Martin claims the season should not have been closed Oct. 17 because the stock is not "overfished."

Under the Mackerel Fisheries Management Plan adopted by the South Atlantic Fisheries Management Council, stocks that are not overfished continue to remain open under a daily bag limit even after the quota has been reached. King mackerel in the South Atlantic region were declared overfished by NMFS, even though most evidence did not support that decision.

"These are both rear guard actions," Martin said. "The real problem is that the annual quota, seven million pounds, was set far below the 10 to 11 million pounds justified by the strong condition of king mackerel stocks."

You can supplement your group medical policy to cover extra hospital expenses.

Arkansas Whips Baylor By 33-3

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WACO, Texas — Kendall Trainor kicked two field goals to set a Southwest Conference record of 17 straight and Quinn Grovey's running and passing carried 11th-ranked Arkansas to a 33-3 victory over Baylor on Saturday.

Arkansas, which has already clinched a berth in the Cotton Bowl Classic, extended its record to 9-0 overall and 6-0 in SWC play. Baylor dropped to 4-5 and 0-5.

Trainor kicked field goals of 50 and 20 yards to eclipse the SWC and school record of 16 in a row set by Ish Ordonez, also of Arkansas, in 1979.

Grovey scored on a 7-yard run and dashed 19 yards to set up Barry Foster's 8-yard run as Arkansas built a 19-3 halftime lead.

Grovey hit Foster with a 43-yard pass in the fourth period as the Hogs put the game away on Foster's 18-yard touchdown run on a fourth-and-two play.

The Razorbacks can clinch their first outright league title since 1965 by defeating Texas A&M next week.

Baylor's Terry Syler kicked an 18-yard field goal in the second quarter after Arkansas stopped the Bears twice inside the five-yard line.

The Bears blew another touchdown chance when linebacker Gary Joe Kinne intercepted a Grovey pass in the third period but fumbled the ball away untouched to offensive tackle Jim Mabry at the Arkansas 20.

Louisiana State.....19
Alabama.....18

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — David Browndyke's 34-yard field goal with 28 seconds remaining lifted 13th-ranked Louisiana State to a 19-18 comeback victory over No. 18 Alabama in a Southeastern Conference first-place showdown Saturday.

LSU, 6-2 overall and 5-1 in the SEC, overcame a 15-0 first-half deficit to climb into a share of the SEC lead with Georgia, which defeated Florida 26-3 earlier in the day.

Alabama fell to 6-2 and 4-2, with the setback marking the first time since 1955 that the Crimson Tide has lost two games in Bryant-Denny Stadium in a season. Mississippi upset the Tide four weeks ago.

Tom Hodson, stymied throughout the first half by the Alabama defense, sparked the winning field goal drive. He completed a 22-yard pass to Eddie Fuller and passes of 12 and 30 yards to Tony Moss.

Philip Doyle, who missed a 54-yard field goal try on the game's final play, gave Alabama an 18-16 lead midway through the period when he kicked a 20-yarder, his fourth of the game.

David Smith completed six of seven passes for 50 yards in the 16-play, 71-yard drive leading up to Doyle's kick.

Alabama appeared headed for a rout of the Bengals in the first half, dominating play but settling too often for field goals.

Doyle had first-half field goals of 35, 24 and 33 yards, the last staking the Crimson Tide to a 15-0 lead at a time when LSU had minus-5 yards in offense.

Mickey Guidry came off the bench to replace the ineffective Hodson and immediately completed three passes for 39 yards in a 69-yard scoring drive that ended on Jay Egloff's 4-yard run with 2:52 left in the half.

LSU took the lead in the third when Hodson hit on passes of 35, 17 and 11 yards to set up a 37-yard field goal by David Browndyke.

The Tigers took the lead less than two minutes later after Jimmy Young recovered Lamonde Russell's fumble at the LSU 46.

Three plays later Hodson hit Moss across the middle at the Alabama 35 and went the distance to complete a 48-yard scoring play with 5:19 left in the third.

Alabama's only touchdown came on a 2-yard run by David Casteal in the second quarter.

Michigan.....22
Minnesota.....7

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — The battle for the Little Brown Jug turned into a survival of the fittest.

Mike Gillette kicked five field goals and Tony Boles rushed for 184 yards on 32 carries in a constant, driving rain to lead No. 14 Michigan to a 22-7 victory over Minnesota in Big Ten football action Saturday.

The victory improved Michigan, leaders in the Big Ten, to 6-2-1 overall and 5-0-1 in the conference. A Michigan win over Illinois next week would put the Wolverines in the Rose Bowl. Minnesota fell to 2-5-2 and 0-4-2.

The victory was costly for Michigan, however.

Starting quarterback Michael Taylor broke his collarbone on Michigan's first play from scrimmage and is out for the season. Boles also pulled a groin muscle in the contest. His status is uncertain.

"I'm just glad we won, when you get into a situation like we had losing our quarterback for the year on the first play of the game, combined with the weather, I'm just glad we came out with a win," Michigan coach Bo Schembechler said.

Gillette's effort broke the Michigan single-game record of four field goals set by Bob Wood in 1975 and tied by Bob Bergeron in 1984.

"They were all chip shots. They were all short, I was expected to make them," said Gillette, who has not missed a field goal in Michigan's past six games.

Michigan gained 253 yards on the ground and 115 through the air. Boles' effort marked the fourth time this season that he has gained over 150 yards in one game. The Michigan record of five in a season is held by Jamie Morris and Rob Lytle.

The Wolverine defense held Minnesota tailback Darrell Thompson to 46 yards, well below his 102.6 average. Last year, Thompson became the first back ever to gain 200 yards in a game against Michigan.

"Thompson ran well when he had the ball," Golden Gophers coach John Gutekunst said. "We didn't want the defense keying on Thompson, we wanted them spread across the field."

Boles had 17 carries in the first half before Minnesota had even run 17 plays from scrimage.

"We did a good job on Darrell Thompson, he didn't get too much," Schembechler said. "By the same token, Boles ran real well for us. He had a lot of yards — the rain didn't stop Tony Boles."

"The Little Brown Jug" is a trophy that has been awarded to the winner of Michigan-Minnesota games since 1909.

Michigan jumped out to a 3-0 lead on Gillette's 18-yard field goal at 4:41 of the first quarter to cap a 14-play, 72-yard drive. Boles accounted for most of the drive, gaining 40 yards on eight carries.

In the second quarter, Michigan safety Tripp Welbourne returned a Schaffner interception 18 yards to the Minnesota 24-yard line. The Wolverines drove 16 yards on six plays, and Gillette kicked a 25-yard field goals with 7:27 left until halftime.

Minnesota then drove to the Michigan 4-yard line, but Welbourne recovered Schaffner's fumble with five seconds left in the half.

Syracuse.....49

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Tailback Robert Drummond rushed for two touchdowns and threw one of two scoring passes by a Syracuse running back Saturday as the 16th-ranked Orangemen demolished Navy 49-21, setting a home winning streak record.

Syracuse, 7-1, won for the 14th straight time at the Carrier Dome, surpassing a 13-game winning streak set between 1957 and 1960. Syracuse's last loss in the Carrier Dome was Sept. 27, 1986, to Rutgers, 16-10.

Drummond took a pitch from quarterback Todd Philcox and threw a 44-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Rob Moore on Syracuse's first play from scrimmage, giving the Orangemen a 7-0 lead less than two minutes into the game.

Late in the first period, Syracuse used its halfback pass play again, with tailback Michael Owens firing a 28-yard touchdown pass to Deval Glover.

Navy, 3-6, was held to 14 total yards in the first quarter. The Midshipmen held the ball 18½ minutes in the first half, but failed to score.

Syracuse made a goal-line stand in the second quarter, but lost its shutout in the third period when Luther Archer scored on fourth down from the 2.

Daryl Johnston scored on a 20-yard run in the opening minute and Syracuse made it 35-0 less than a minute later when Drummond raced untouched 11 yards following a Navy fumble.

After Archer's touchdown made it 35-7, reserve quarterback Bill Scharr passed for two Syracuse touchdowns. The first was a 33-yarder to Moore, the other a 23-yarder to freshman wide receiver Todd Kasmer.

Navy's other scores came in the fourth period on a 1-yard run by Aaron Johnson and on a 2-yard run by reserve quarterback Gary McIntosh.

Georgia.....26
Florida.....3

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Tim Worley rushed for 135 yards and two touchdowns Saturday as 19th-ranked Georgia stayed atop the Southeastern Conference standings with a 26-3 victory over slumping Florida.

Worley, who scored on runs of 1 and 51 yards in the fourth quarter, went over the 1,000-yard rushing mark for the season early in the first half and finished the day with 1,110 yards through nine games.

John Thomas also scored on a 22-yard pass from Wayne Johnson and John Kasay kicked field goals of 47 and 45 yards to help Georgia improved its record to 7-2 overall, 5-1 in the SEC, and give Coach Vince Dooley his 199th career victory.

Only nine Division I-A coaches have won 200 games.

The Bulldogs, who started the day tied for the conference lead with Auburn, Alabama and Louisiana State, can clinch at least a tie for the league title with a victory at Auburn next week.

Florida, losing for the fourth consecutive time, fell to 5-4 overall, 3-3 in the conference despite the return of star tailback Emmitt Smith, who rushed for 68 yards on 19 carries after sitting out three weeks with a sprained left knee.

The Gators have lost nine of the last 11 games in the neutral-site series — played in Jacksonville's Gator Bowl since 1933 — and face the possibility of closing out the season without winning again after getting off to a 5-0 start.

Three-point underdogs Saturday, Coach Galen Hall's team was limited to John David Francis' 44-yard field goal in the third quarter and will not be favored in remaining games at Kentucky and Florida State.

The Georgia defense, ranked seventh in the SEC overall and 10th among 10 teams in defending the pass, intercepted Florida's Kyle Morris twice and also forced a fumble by the Gators' quarterback.

Linebacker Demetrius Douglas had both of Georgia's interceptions — one setting up Thomas' touchdown and the other leaving Kasay into position to kick his 45-yard field goal for a 19-3 lead with 6:49 remaining in the game.

Worley's 1-yard scoring run came on the second play of the fourth quarter and the 51-yarder gave him 17 touchdowns in 1988 — three shy of Herschel Walker's single-season school record set in 1981.

Dooley, in his 25th season at Georgia, is 17-7-1 against Florida and the Bulldogs lead the series 43-22-2. He is the third winningest active Division I-A coach behind Michigan's Bo Schembechler and Penn State's Joe Paterno.

Illinois.....21
Indiana.....20

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Jeff George fired a 5-yard touchdown pass to Mike Bellamy with 26 seconds left in the game Saturday to lead Illinois to a 21-20 victory over 20th-ranked Indiana in a matchup of Big Ten teams.

The victory improved the Illini record to 5-3-1, including a 4-1-1 mark in the Big Ten. Indiana fell to 6-2-1 and 4-2.

George had cut the Hoosiers' lead to five points late in the fourth quarter with a 21-yard scoring pass to Shawn Wax, after a freak fumble recovery and touchdown by Indiana had dimmed Illinois' chances.

Indiana's Erick Coleman took an Illinois pass away from Keith Jones and raced 47 yards for a touchdown to give the Hoosiers a 20-9 lead in the fourth quarter with about four minutes left in the game.

George fired the pass to Jones, who juggled the ball and allowed Coleman to grab it and race to the end zone.

But the Illini quarterback quickly narrowed the Hoosiers' lead with the touchdown pass to Wax, and linebacker Julyon Brown recovered a fumble by Indiana quarterback Dave Schnell at the Hoosier 31-yard-line with 1:48 to play to set up the winning drive.

Indiana dominated the first half, with Anthony Thompson scoring on a 1-yard run in the first quarter and Pete Stoyanovich kicking a 28-yard field goal in the second quarter for a 10-0 halftime lead.

But Illinois trimmed the Hoosier lead to 10-9 in the third quarter, as George fired a 31-yard touchdown pass to Bellamy and Patrick Donnelly blocked an Indiana punt for a safety.

LAS VEGAS — Sugar Ray Leonard likes titles, even if they might be a bit suspect, and now he's going for two at a time.

At stake in Monday night's scheduled 12-round bout outdoors at Caesars Palace will be the World Boxing Council light heavyweight championship held by Donny Lelonde and the WBC's new super middleweight crown.

If Leonard wins, he will have won at least pieces of five world titles, already having held the WBC middleweight, the undisputed welterweight and the WBA junior middleweight.

The only fighter to win titles in four weight classes is Thomas Hearns, an old Leonard rival. He won a fifth of his own of sorts Friday night — the super middleweight championship of the newly formed World Boxing Organization — when he came back after a fourth-round knockdown and took a split decision from James Kinchen.

"I think it's going to be a legitimate title," said the 30-year-old Hearns. "Anytime a man can go and win two titles with one fight, why can't I win one title?"

The super middleweight class, which has a 168-pound limit, was first recognized by the International Boxing Federation only four years ago.

"They say it's contrived," Leonard said, "but every title means something to me."

But the 32-year-old Leonard insists that just fighting means more to him and says that alone is his motivation for coming back 19 months after he upset Marvelous Marvin Hagler for the WBC middleweight title.

This time, according to attorney Mike Trainer, Leonard will get a personal-high payday of at least $15 million, $3 million more than he made for the Hagler fight.

Trainer said there are guarantees of $20 million for the match, which will be shown on pay-per-view and limited closed-circuit television. The purses reportedly are split 75 percent for Leonard, 25 percent for Lelonde.

The fight will start between 7:30 p.m. and 7:45 p.m. PST and follow title defenses by WBC super flyweight champion Gilberto Roman agains Jose "Sugar Baby" Rojas and WBC super lightweight champion Roger Mayweather against Vinnie Pazienza.

'My last fight was a personal challenge with Marvin Hagler," Leonard said. "This fight is just competing. I enjoy competing. As long as there is a desire to do it, I'll do it, but nothing compares to Hagler because that was totally for me."

Leonard, who first retired Nov. 9, 1982, six months after he underwent retinal surgery, was roundly criticized for his decision to challenge Hagler. He had been knocked down by Kevin Howard, who he stopped in the ninth round of a one-fight comeback May 11, 1984, and most boxing experts gave him little chance against Hagler.

Leonard's 12-round decision victory over Hagler was controversial, but one person who thought Leonard won is Lalonde.

"I think he did enough to convince people he wanted to win the fight," he said. "I'm going to force Leonard to fight. I don't think he'll be big enough to knock me out. I've been hit by much bigger men than Ray. I'm definitely the hardest-punching light heavyweight in the world today."

The 28-year-old Lalonde, who has scored 26 knockouts in posting a 31-2 record, won't be able to weigh in at more than 168 pounds Monday morning. The light heavyweight limit is 175 pounds

Of course, he can add weight by the time he enters the ring, but he said he doesn't think he will weigh more than 170 at fight time.

Leonard is expected to weigh about 163. The heaviest he's been in his career was the 158½ for Hagler.

"I'll fight all the small guys I can," Lalonde said. "It's a big difference in the punishment you take."

"If I wobble him, it's all over because he'll know I can punch, too," Leonard said.

Leonard also thinks Lalonde might be struck by big-fight nerves.

"Lalonde has never been involved in a fight of this magnitude," Leonard said "He's never walked out in front of a major crowd."

Lalonde, however, has been relaxed to the point of being laid back.

"I'm not taking anything away from Ray Leonard," Lalonde said. "I'm just high on myself."

Leonard, by contrast, has appeared edgy at times.

He was angered by Angelo Dundee's attempt to negotiate a contract for this fight, and he split with the veteran cut man. Dundee had worked Leonard's corner for all 35 of his fights, 34 of them victories.

Dundee demanded his lawyer negotiate a payment for the Lalonde fight, but Leonard refused.

"I resented the little amount I was paid for the Hagler fight and I told them so," Dundee said.

Trainer said Dundee was paid more for the Hagler bout, reportedly $175,000, than for any previous fight.

"I felt I had a relationship with someone that went beyond business," Leonard said.

Leonard also was angered by an incident late last week in Los Angeles.

He was supposed to spar before a crowd of about 3,000, but just before the session was to begin, the California State Athletic Commission said he couldn't because he didn't have a license. California doesn't grant licenses to boxers who have had retinal problems.

Trainer, who will co-promote with Caesars Palace, has been annoyed, too, by rumors that the fight won't do well financially.

He charged the doomsayers either don't know what they're talking about or are angry because they're not involved in the promotion.

Trainer would not break down the $20 million in guarantees. However, the figures reportedly are in the neighborhood of $9.5 million from Titan Entertainment Inc. for television rights; $7.5 million from Caesars Palace for the live gate; $2 million for foreign broadcast rights; and $1 million from Coors for promotional rights.

Titan Entertainment, which has done very well with pay-per-view wrestling events, is distributing the fight to some 800 cable systems with the potential of reaching almost 11 million homes.

The pay-per-view price is $29.95. Ticket prices for the 15,388-seat arena range from $1,000 down to $200.

Alysheba's Win Makes Him Racing's Richest

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Alysheba became history's richest racehorse when he beat Seeking the Gold by a half-length and nightfall by a few minutes Saturday at Churchill Downs.

Also shining brightly on a damp, dismal day was the filly Personal Ensign, who won a race it looked like she had no chance of winning.

It was a big day for trainer D. Wayne Lukas, too, but Lukas does well in any weather when it comes to the Breeders' Cup.

Alysheba took the lead about 70 yards from home and won the $3 million Breeders' Cup Classic. The first money of $1,350,000 gave him a career bankroll of $6,679,242 and pushed him past John Henry, who retired with $6,591,860.

Personal Ensign, seemingly beaten at the head of the stretch, ran down Winning Colors, the 1988 Kentucky Derby winner, for a nose victory in the $1 million Distaff over 1⅛ miles. She will now go to breeding after a career of 13 races as the first major American thoroughbred to retire unbeaten since Colin 80 years ago.

Lukas started a total of 12 horses in the seven Breeders' Cup races, and won with three of them. His mounts also posted three seconds, a third, a fifth and sixth and earned $2,193,000. Lukas has now won nine Breeders' Cup races and, in the five-year history of the series, his horses have earned $6,847,000.

Lukas' winners were Gulch in the $1 million Sprint over six furlongs, Open Mind in the $1 million Juvenile Fillies and Is It True in the $1 million Juvenile, both at 1 1-16 miles.

Is It True upset odds-on favorite Easy Goer, who is trained by Shug McGaughey, who also trains Personal Ensign.

The other two winners were Miesque in the $1 million Mile on the turf and longshot Great Communicator in the $2 million Turf.

Miesque, who won the Mile last year, became the first horse to win two Breeders' Cup races. Julie Krone became the first woman to ride in the Breeders' Cup. She had three mounts and finished second on Darby Shuffle in the Juvenile Fillies, sixth on Dr. Bizzare in the Juvenile and fourth on Forty Niner in the Classic.

McGaughey earned $1,380,000, but it was a bittersweet day for him, as he saddled two beaten favorites — Mining, 10th in the Sprint, and Easy Goer in the Juvenile.

He also saddled Seeking the Gold for a runnerup finish in the Classic and Personal Flag, who was sixth in that race.

"Except for Personal Ensign, I'm very disappointed," he said. "That was the one that counted."

It was a day of vindication for Alysheba trainer Jack Van Berg, who had Gate Dancer finish second in the 1984 Classic only to be disqualified to third. He then watched Alysheba finished third in the 1986 Juvenile and second by a nose to Ferdinand in the 1987 Classic.

"I would have liked to see the sun shine today at Churchill Downs so all the fans could enjoy themselves," Van Berg said. "But it didn't bother my horse."

Alysheba, kept off the pace by jockey Chris McCarron, began to move on the final turn and then charged through the gloom to overtake seeking the Gold and Waquoit for victory in what could be his last race.

It was so dark that before the race began at 5:33 p.m., the track announcer asked the crowd to "please avoid using your flash cameras when the horses come down the stretch" so as not to spook them.

Alysheba ran 1¼ miles under 126 pounds on a muddy track in 2:04 4-5 and paid a winning mutuel of $5.

The winner will advance on Friday to play at Tarboro.

Navy won the men's meet with 34 points while the hosting Indians were second with 49. James Madison took third with 59 while George Mason had 103. Richmond was next with 139, followed by American with 182. East Carolina was last with 190.

Six Area Schools Gain Playoffs

At least six area high schools will advance into the state football playoffs which begin Friday across the state.

One team, D.H. Conley will have to wait until Monday to learn whether it will go, while another berth was decided Saturday night.

Conley, currently tied with East Carteret for third place in the Coastal 3-A Conference, was to travel to face the Mariners Friday night, but the game was postponed until Monday. That means that the winner of the game must advance with only three days of preparation.

Chocowinity needed a victory over unbeaten Bath Saturday night to gain a spot in the 1-A playoffs. If Bath won, Cresswell would take the Tobacco Belt Conference's number four position.

In the 4-A ranks, Rose High School completed its second straight unbeaten regular season Friday night with a tense 21-14 win over Northeastern. As a result, the Rampants earned not only the league title, but a home date against the Mid-South Conference's number three team, Pine Forest. Elsewhere in the league, Northeastern, the number two seed, travels to Mid-South champion Seventy-First, while number three Northern Nash visits Mideastern runner Wilmington Hoggard.

In the 2-A ranks, Washington, second-seeded in the Coastal, will face Triangle runner-up Southern Durham on the road. Havelock, the Coastal winner, entertains Tar Roanoke third place finisher Southern Nash.

Conley or East Carteret, whichever wins, will travel to face Tar Roanoke runner Tarboro.

Ayden-Grifton, the 2-A Eastern Plains Conference winner, will be at home against Wake Forest-Rolesville, a draw winner for the number three spot from the Capital Area Conference. Meanwhile number two North Pitt plays host to Northeastern runner-up Edenton Holmes and number three Greene Central travels to Northeastern champ — and AP-ranked number one Hertford County, unbeaten on the year.

The other Northeastern member to make the playoffs, Plymoutn, will travel to Capital Area winner Clayton.

In the 1-A ranks, Jamesville, number three from the Tobacco Belt, will face Albemarle runner-up Perquimans on the road. Other TBC pairings send winner Bath against Albemarle number four Camden, while TBC runner-up North Edgecombe hosts Gates. Either Chocowinity or Cresswell will visit Albemarle winner Currituck.

Precinct Officials for the Winterville Precinct requested the change because space in the building previously used would not be adequate for the increase in voters and the voter turnout anticipated.

The change in voting place location has been submitted by the Board of Elections to the U.S. Department of Justice.

Questions concerning voter registration and voting should be directed to the Elections Office, 201 East Second Street, Greenville, telephone 830-4121.

Olympic Champs Missing, But Race Still The Best

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — This year's New York City Marathon doesn't have the reigning Olympic champions, and it isn't overly deep in top talent.

What it does have, though, are most of the top marquee names in the sport, and race director Fred Lebow says that's enough to make it the best in the event's 19-year history.

If nothing else, Sunday's race will have a record field, with some 23,000 entered for the 26-mile, 385-yard trek through the city's five boroughs, and a share of the $302,270 purse.

Leading the men are Ireland's John Treacy, the 1984 Olympic silver medalist, and Wales' Steve Jones, who once owned the fastest time in the world and now is No. 4 on the all-time list.

Add Ethiopia's Wodajo Bulti, the fastest first-time marathoner ever, and Mark Nenow, the American record-holder at 10,000 meters making his marathon debut, and the men's field has an intriguing mix.

The women's field includes Joan Benoit Samuelson, the 1984 Olympic gold medalist and the American record-holder, and Norway's Grete Waitz, the silver medalist at the Los Angeles Games and the New York City Marathon champion a record eight times.

"New York will be very different from what you have seen in other years. It will be very competitive. For the first time in many years, I think the women's field will be together at 20 or 22 miles," Waitz said.

Challenging them should be Britain's Priscilla Welch, 43, the defending champion and the fastest women's Masters marathoner in history, and the Soviet Union's Tatyana Polovinskaya, the fourth-place finisher in the Seoul Olympics.

"I see the race boiling down to the four of us," Treacy said of the top men's competitors.

"Jones probably is in the best shape of his career. He's gotten himself together very well in the last three months. I'm always concerned about Steve Jones going out very fast. You have to be careful about him not getting too far ahead.

"Bulti has run well over the marathon distance. He has a lot to prove because he didn't run in the Olympics (Ethiopia was one of seven countries that boycotted the Games).

"And Nenow also has something to prove, because he didn't make the Olympic team (at 10,000 meters). When a 27:22 10K runner (the fastest time ever on the roads) goes into a marathon, it makes him potentially dangerous. He may be the Bill Rodgers you have been waiting for for a few years."

Rodgers, a four-time winner of the New York City Marathon and the Boston Marathon, also is in Sunday's race, but he does not figure to be a contender. At 40, he is competing in the race for the first time in the Masters Division.

Olympic gold medalists Gelindo Bordin of Italy and Rosa Mota of Portugal are skipping this race, not unusual considering the Seoul Games didn't begin until mid September. Mota won her gold on Sept. 23; Bordin on Oct. 2. They're next marathon probably will be Boston in April.

Therefore, this marathon should be up to the Big Four, unless there's a surprise, as often happens. A prime example was last Sunday at Chicago, where little-known Alejandro Cruz of Mexico raced to an unexpected victory.

But Jones, Treacy, Bulti and Nenow appear to have the credentials to produce an interesting race in the nationally televised event (ABC, from 10:30 a.m. EST-1:30 p.m. EST).

Jones, renowned as an extremely fast pacesetter, set the world-best of 2 hours, 8 minutes, 5 seconds, in winning at Chicago in 1984. He won at Chicago again in 1985 in 2:07:13, now the fourth-fastest time ever. He also won the 1985 London Marathon in a swift 2:08:16, finished second in the 1987 Boston Marathon, and won bronze medals at the 1984 World Cross-Country Championships and the 1986 Commonwealth Games at 10,000 meters.

Treacy finished second in his marathon debut at the Los Angeles Olympics in 2:09:56, but dropped out of the Seoul Games halfway through the race when he realized he would not be among the medalists.

He also ran third in this year's Boston Marathon in 2:09:15, and thinks he is ready to run back to that form.

"I've had a little bad luck recently," said Treacy, winner of the 1978 and 1979 World Cross-Country Championships.

"After Seoul, I was devastated. Now, I'm trying to redeem myself. I think I have the appetite for a good race."

Bulti was a noted distance runner on the track and over the cross-country hills before competing in his first marathon this year, at Rotterdam, and finishing third in 2:08:44. At the 1985 World Cup, Bulti won a gold medal at 10,000 meters and a bronze in the 5,000. He also was a bronze medalist at the 1985 World Cross-Country Championships.

Nenow, the American record-holder for 10,000 meters on the track (27:20.56), is making his long-awaited marathon debut. He will be trying to emulate former winners Alberto Salazar (1980-82) and Ibrahim Hussein (1987), who made their debut in the New York City Marathon.

Samuelson has not run a marathon since 1985, when she won the Chicago Marathon in 2:21:21, the American record and the second-fastest time ever by a woman. Injuries and the birth of a daughter last year prevented her from training properly for the race.

Like the four top men, Samuelson, holder of the top four times ever by an American, will be competing in the New York City Marathon for the first time.

Waitz, on the other hand, is the all-time New York City Marathon champion. She won the race in her debut in 1978 and was first again the next two years, setting a world-best each time. After illness forced her out of the 1981 race, Waitz came back in 1982 and won five in a row, before a stress fracture of the right foot prevented her from running last year.

Overall, she has won 12 of 16 marathons, with one second-place finish (1984 Olympics) and three non-finishes, including the Seoul Games, in which she dropped out between 18 and 19 miles. Arthroscopic surgery on her right knee hampered her Olympic preparations this year.

"I'm better prepared for New York than I was for Seoul," Waitz said.

Of her major rivals, she fears Samuelson the most.

"Joan doesn't run that often," Waitz said, "but when she enters a big race, she's always prepared."

Waitz said she has no revenge motive in wanting to race against Samuelson. She just likes the competition.

"It has nothing to do with her win over me at Los Angeles," Waitz said, referring to the 1984 Games. "The Olympics are finished. That's history."

NASCAR Takes The Limelight

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHOENIX — Willie Nelson is singing at the state fair and the Phoenix Cardinals are at home against the San Francisco 49ers, but Geoff Bodine says those events won't hold a candle to the first NASCAR race in Arizona.

"For chills, thrills and spills, the place to be is at Phoenix International Raceway," said Bodine, who will start on the pole in the Checker 500 at 3 p.m., EST.

"I think the race is going to be way more exciting than the football game or Willie — and I like Willie a lot."

To a man, the drivers in the 43-car field agree the 500-kilometer, or 311-mile, event on the flat 1-mile track should be a thriller. Some, including Richard Petty, foresee the race becoming a "shoving match" with a lot of fender rubbing because of the speedway's design.

Among those drivers who would like to avoid the bumping and grinding are Bill Elliott and Rusty Wallace.

Elliott leads Wallace by 79 points in a shoot-out for the Winston Cup championship, and an accident involving either could prove pivotal with only the Journal 500 at Atlanta International Raceway on Nov. 20 remaining this season.

"We're mostly new to this track, and it's flat and tight," Elliott said. "So we know there probably is going to be some trouble.

"That's the only thing that really concerns me. Falling out of the race on account of some incident or some little mechanical failure. Everything is there for us if neither of those happen," he said.

Wallace, seeking a fourth straight victory to keep the pressure on Elliott in the point standings, said there will be problems with the track.

"Traffic likely is going to be a problem 'cause Turn 1 is a single groove and Turn 4 is very slippery. Racing here will be like at Darlington. You have to pay attention every single second or else."

It is possible for Elliott to clinch the championship and its $1 million in bonuses. For that to happen, he has to win, and lead the most laps for five bonus points while Wallace finishes 29th or worse.

However, both drivers indicated they expect the title to be decided at Atlanta. If Elliott averages finishing eighth at Phoenix and Atlanta, he wins regardless of what Wallace does.

Florida State Crushes South Carolina By 59-0

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Peter Tom Willis, starting for the first time this season, passed for 264 yards and four touchdowns Saturday as No. 5 Florida State turned mistakes by 15th-ranked South Carolina into a 59-0 rout.

It was the worst loss ever suffered at home by South Carolina, which had been riding a 14-game home winning streak.

Willis, a junior who has started five games in his career for the 8-1 Seminoles, hit two touchdown passes in the first half and two more in the third quarter before leaving the game.

His first scoring toss, a 44 yarder to split end Terry Anthony on Florida State's second play of the game, gave the Seminoles their first points and all they needed to win.

That touchdown, which followed a South Carolina fumble, was the first of four Florida State scored before halftime thanks to miscues by the Gamecocks, now 6-2.

The second Seminole touchdown came when Phil Carollo blocked a punt and fellow linebacker Anthony Moss scooped the ball up at the South Carolina 8 and ran it into the end zone.

Starting the second quarter with a 14-0 lead, the Seminoles were quick to make it 21-0 three plays into the period when Willis hit tight end Dave Roberts in the corner of the end zone.

That touchdown and the next one were set up by interceptions.

They were made by free safeties Leroy Butler, who picked off a Todd Ellis pass and ran it back 37 yards to set up the first one, and Dedrick Dodge, who had a 17-yard return after snagging an errant halfback pass from Mike Dingle.

Florida State had a 31-0 halftime lead and scored on its first third-quarter possession on a 12-yard pass from Willis to flanker Lawrence Dawsey.

The Citadel................20
Marshall......................3

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — The Citadel, behind a tenacious defense and the 106-yards rushing and two touchdowns by fullback Adrian Johnson on Saturday, forged a 20-3 upset of Marshall, the top-ranked team in Division I-AA and the Southern Conference leader.

The loss dropped the previously undefeated Thundering Herd to 8-1 on the season and 5-1 in the Southern Conference. The Citadel, ranked No. 19 in Division I-AA and off to its best start since 1969, improved to 7-2 and 3-1.

The result clouds the race for the conference championship and its automatic bid to the Division I-AA playoffs. Three teams now have only one league loss.

The Citadel wishbone attack directed by quarterback Gene Brown rolled up 359 yards on the ground against a defense that had been surrendering only 105 rushing per game.

For its part, the Citadel defense intercepted three passes by Marshall quarterback John Gregory and registered three sacks as well.

The Marshall offense, which had gained over 400 yards a contest, was held to only 247 by the opportunistic Citadel defense.

Johnson opened the scoring with a 1-yard touchdown plunge in the second quarter and added another in the fourth period. Split end Phillip Florence scored in the third period on a 33-yard reverse.

The only scoring Marshall could generate was a 23-yard field goal by Dewey Klein in the second period.

Tennessee.................10
Boston College............7

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee defensive back Preston Warren returned an intercepted pass 31 yards for a touchdown and Chip McCallum hit a 43-yard field goal Saturday to give Tennessee a 10-7 victory over Boston College.

Tennessee improved to 2-6 with its second straight win, while the Eagles fell to 2-6.

Boston College appeared to take the lead with 1:26 to play when Mike Power hit Marcus Cherry with a stunning 80-yard pass on third and 19 from the Boston College 20-yard line.

Cherry carried the football into the end zone, but the play was called back because the Eagles, who were penalized 17 times for 165 yards during the game, had an ineligible receiver downfield.

Warren's scoring interception return came with 13:20 to play in the first half and gave Tennessee a 7-0 lead.

Warren intercepted two other Power passes inside the Tennessee 10 to thwart Boston College drives. The three interceptions tied a school single-game record.

Boston College tied the game 7-7 on a 1-yard run by Ed Toner to cap a 10-play, 58-yard drive with 3:46 to play in the first half.

After Warren's third interception, Tennessee drove from its own 9 to the Boston College 26.

The big play in the drive was a 27-yard option keeper by senior quarterback Jeff Francis on a third down and 24. It was the longest run of Francis' career.

Dantley, Pistons Defeat Hornets

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Adrian Dantley scored 18 points as the Detroit Pistons beat the Charlotte Hornets 94-85 in the first NBA game at their new arena, The Palace.

It marked the first time the Pistons have started a season 2-0 under Chuck Daly, beginning his sixth year as coach.

In ceremonies before the game, the Pistons hoisted banners to the rafters commemorating their Central Division and Eastern Conference championships last season, the first titles since the club moved from Fort Wayne, Ind., 31 years ago.

A jumper by Charlotte's Robert Reid cut Detroit's lead to 50-46 with 10:22 remaining in the third quarter. It was as close as the Hornets would get the rest of the game as Detroit outscored Charlotte 26-16 during the period.

The Hornets, who never led in the game, tied it 6-6 on Reid's jumper with 10:00 remaining in the first quarter.

Then the Pistons, with Dantley scoring eight of his 10 first-half points, went on a 15-4 run over the next six minutes for a 21-10 lead. Kelly Tripucka and Rex Chapman each scored four points as the Hornets got it down to 25-20, the closest Charlotte would come the rest of the first half.

A layup by Dennis Rodman gave Detroit a 27-20 lead at the end of the first quarter and the Pistons, playing reserves most of the second quarter, led by 10 several times in the period and were ahead 48-40 at halftime.

The night before, in their inaugural NBA game, the expansion Hornets — who were 1-6 during the exhibition season — were outscored 40-16 in the second quarter of their 133-93 loss to Cleveland.

Opening lead: Ace of ♠

Here's a tip that will win you many points: On defense, when you know that partner has little or nothing, but you need to find him with a point or two, assign him the weakest holding that will help your cause, and defend accordingly.

This hand was dealt in a national pair championship, which accounts for the third-hand opening bid. At rubber bridge or team play, we would suggest that South pass his aceless wonder which includes a bare queen. East left it to his partner to bail himself out, and the rest of the auction was natural.

West led the ace of spades. Against a no trump contract, that requests partner to unblock the queen if he holds it, otherwise to give count. Therefore, East started an echo with the five to show an even number in the suit.

It became vital to get East on lead for a spade through declarer's holding. The most West could hope to find in his partner's hand was 1 or 2 points, so the minor suits offered no hope of an entry. It would have to come from the heart suit.

It might seem that the shift to a low heart was called for. But South did not pass his partner's two hearts, which had to show at least a five-card suit, so he could have no more than two hearts. Rather than hope that his partner held the queen of hearts, West worked out a defense that would cater to the possibility of partner having no more than the jack. He shifted to the king of hearts!

When that pinned the bare queen, declarer was a dead duck. There was no way to prevent East from gaining the lead with the jack of hearts, and the defenders were able to collect three spade tricks, two hearts and the ace of diamonds. Going plus 50 was worth a ton of matchpoints for East-West.

Decorating Show No Longer A Seasonal Event

By Barbara Mayer
AP NEWSFEATURES

The urge to liye vicariously must be growing. What else explains the mysterious lengthening of the season for decorator showhouses?

Though once mainly a feature of springtime, the season in the New York area lasts through Dec. 18, all in the name of charity. AIDS research, public television, a settlement house, physical rehabilitation and even the British National Trust benefit this year from the sale of tickets to showhouses.

A conclusion about interior design that can be drawn after visits to several is that there is no longer any such thing as overkill. Perhaps the best example of the power of more — more art, accessories, painted surfaces and fabrics — to stimulate was shown in a Manhattan townhouse sponsored by Metropolitan Home to benefit the Design Industries Foundation for AIDS.

The rooms that excited some of the greatest comment were those by entertainment media celebrities. The kitchen was decorated by California showman chef, Wolfgang Puck, who placed enormously oversized, colorful ceramic vases and a plethora of other accessories among the state-of-the-art appliances.

New York art gallery owner Holly Solomon and her stable of artists created a "TV room" in which the vintage set is tuned to a video by artist Nam June Paik and Andy Warhol's "Brillo Box" is among the accessories in a room handpainted by artist Kim MacConnel. And Santo Loquasto, one of Woody Allen's favorite movie set designers, turned a bedroom into a forest glade.

Though they seemed more numerous in Manhattan, the drop dead room — amazing enough to induce temporary paralysis — was to be seen in the suburbs, too. At Chieftains, a 96-acre estate in Greenwich, Conn., redecorated to benefit public television, a former garage was turned into a game room by David Barrett in which a larger-than-life-sized deck of cards set the theme. Each 3½-foot by 5-foot "card" was placed on a black and white checkerboard floor or on walls or ceiling.

In the same house, Jeffrey Bilhuber and Tom Scheerer made a room out of an unscreened porch at one side of the house by stacking logs on its two open sides. A window-sized opening in each log "wall" and furniture that consisted of cushioned wooden pallets enlivened by striped blankets continued the rustic theme.

Another important decorating lesson from showhouses is that mixing periods now seems richer and more interesting than simply recreating a historically accurate room.

In New York, John Saladino blended these elements: a 10-foot-long, 17th-century refectory table, halogen lighting, a contemporary convertible sofa, luxurious fabrics and antiques from disparate periods.

Almost every room in every house displayed a great variety of artworks — not only paintings but craft art objects, too. The attitudes of the collector have invaded the home to a much greater degree. Forced to choose, connoisseurs prize original condition over good condition.

Architect Michael McDonough demonstrated that disrepair can be acceptable by displaying turn-of-the-century Westport chairs in their original peeling paint.

Believe it or not, they didn't detract from the colorful room's appeal. McDonough said his goal was to provide a capsule history of American design in surfaces and furnishings. References included American Indians, patchwork quilts, Shaker and Arts and Crafts Movement furniture and artifacts.

The mix of periods and nationalities was perhaps most extensive in a "Renaissance garret" by Feldman-Hagan Interiors in Greenwich. It contained an 18th-century painted Spanish bed, a 19th-century English cradle, a grand piano, a French art deco chair, a gothic-style bench found on the premises, a gaudy chandelier and a stuffed barn owl.

The room, which combined the functions of a bedroom, sitting room and nursery, was based on the past, but could only have been created today.

Debate Over Home Prices Rages On

By Chet Currier
AP BUSINESS WRITER

NEW YORK — A debate is raging in the financial world these days over whether home prices might be headed for the same kind of crash that hit the stock market a year ago.

Without question, this is a touchy subject. As a group, American individuals and families have an enormous stake in residential real estate, much greater than they have ever had in stocks.

Of course, the two markets and the assets traded in them differ in many significant ways. Housing fulfills a basic human need, while stocks are a purely financial proposition.

Still, no free market is immune to a decline, regardless of what commodity is traded in it.

The argument got under way in earnest two months ago, when Barron's magazine published an article on the "coming collapse in home prices," citing warnings from analysts at the respected investment firm of Comstock Partners.

Since that story appeared there has been something of a rush by other analysts to rebut it.

Contrary to the general impression, said Edward Yardeni, economist at Prudential-Bache Securities, "the amount of mortgage debt owed by American households is surprisingly low, especially relative to the value of their homes."

That would seem to minimize the danger of widespread defaults and forced home sales at sacrifice prices, even in the age of the adjustable-rate mortgage and the home equity loan.

But more than debt, the question that troubles some observers is simply whether home prices are too high. They have been rising faster than the Consumer Price Index for some 25 years now, and that presumably cannot continue indefinitely.

One way to gauge the market is affordability — the level of home prices measured against people's ability to make the down payments and qualify for the mortgages necessary to sustain those prices.

Gray Cardiff, publisher of the investment advisory letter Sound Advice, calculates an affordability ratio that compares the median family income (for a hypothetical household that earns more than half the population and less than the other half) with the "qualification income" necessary to pay the median price for existing houses.

For the first half of this year, by Cardiff's reckoning, it took an income of $27,290 to pay the median national home price of $88,283.

Since the actual median family income was $31,341, he says, the national affordability ratio was a positive 1.15.

"When the ratio is above 1.0, houses are affordable and the market can be expected to remain strong," Cardiff declares.

But the national picture is by no means uniform, he adds. Affordability ratios vary drastically from region to region and from one metropolitan area to another.

Houston, after suffering through the energy recession of the past several years, has an extremely high affordability ratio of 1.88.

By contrast, on the East and West coasts, New York, Boston, Los Angeles and San Francisco all have affordability ratios of less than 1, an indication that "homes have become dangerously unaffordable," by Cardiff's reasoning.

To some, Cardiff's analysis may seem a bit simplistic. The factors that influence home prices from place to place are many and complex.

On The House

By ANDY LANG

By Andy Lang
AP NEWSFEATURES

The older your house is, the more likely you have been or are being bothered by an assortment of plumbing noises.

Most common of these noises is what is known as water hammer. Its name accurately describes the kind of noise it is. The sound resembles somebody hitting one of your pipes with a hammer.

Water hammer occurs most often when a faucet or valve is shut off quickly. You can prevent the noise most of the time by turning off the faucet or valve slowly. But, since this is a condition which can be annoying as well as potentially harmful to your plumbing system, it should be corrected as soon as possible. New homes — and some old homes — have what are called air chambers. An air chamber is installed on a length of pipe leading to a fixture. Its purpose is to act as a shock absorber and thus prevent the noise and vibration you hear. When there is water hammer in your house, it is a signal that some air chambers are needed or one or more of those already in place are filled with water instead of air and require draining. This can be done by draining the entire system, first turning on the faucet at the lowest point in the house, then all the others. Generally, you will need a plumber to check the chambers or install chambers if the drainage procedure fails to halt the noise. Occasionally, the noise is the result of a water pipe that has come loose from its fastening. Check as much of the line as you can to see whether any pipe is not securely fastened. If it isn't, common sense will tell you to refasten it or obtain a similar fastener for one that is broken. Pipes are fastened to beams and other things by clamps or hangers of some sort.

Sometimes the noise will take place only at the faucet that is being used and is a kind of chatter. Check the washer in the same manner you would do if the faucet stem required a new washer. A chewed-up washer often produces a chattering sound. Replacement of the washer will eliminate the noise if that truly was the cause.

When excessive water pressure is the culprit, a pressure-reducing valve is needed. If a rumbling noise takes place when the hot water is turned on, it may be the water is too hot. Lower the temperature by 10 degrees or so. There are other reasons why you might get noises when the hot water is running, but these usually require a professional to make the decision as to what they are and how they can be corrected.

So far we have been discussing rather loud and offensive noises. But sometimes there is just the slightest sound, as though water might be running somewhere. It is a barely perceptible sound, not even noticeable if a radio or television is on or if people are talking. The noise is exactly what it seems to be. Water is running somewhere — usually in the toilet. If you see water trickling into the bowl, it is leaking under the ball that sits on the valve at the bottom of the tank. The ball needs cleaning or replacement.

In some cases, you may find that water is running into the overflow tube inside the toilet tank. That is most likely in a tank which utilizes a float at the end of a horizontal rod. The float itself may need replacement or adjustment.

Q. I see the term R-value in relation to insulation. I know it has something to do with the quality of the insulation but I am not sure of the details. Can you tell me precisely what it stands for and whether I should concern myself with it when I go to purchase some insulation soon?

A. — R-value measures the resistance of the insulation to heat flow. Years ago, insulation was rated according to its thickness. But, since there are different kinds of insulation with varying degrees of heat resistance even when the thicknesses are the same, this did not give a true picture of the situation. The R-value tells the effectiveness of the insulation you buy and most certainly should be taken into consideration. It must be remembered, however, that the R-value refers to the resistance to heat flow when the material is properly installed. Presumably, this will be true if it is professionally installed. If you install the insulation yourself, be sure you follow the instructions on how to do it. Your insulation dealer has a chart which tells him how much insulation should be installed in your area to give you the recommended R-value. Some communities have regulations regarding the kind and amount of insulation that must be used in new homes.

Q. In reading directions about the ventilation of an attic in conjunction with installing insulation, it mentions "free" vent openings. Aren't all vent openings "free" to allow the passage of air?

A. A vent is considered "free" when it has no grill or other obstruction that might interfere with the free passage of air. If a vent has some kind of covering to keep out animals or insects or whatever, it should be a larger size than a "free" vent. While insulation keeps heat inside a living space, vents allow moisture vapor to escape and, in summer, the moving air prevents heat buildup.

Q. I intend to finish our attic with a type of insulation that has a vapor barrier. Should the vapor barrier face a certain direction or doesn't it matter?

A. It matters a great deal. The vapor barrier should always face the part of the house that is heated.

Q. We have an unheated crawl space under our house. In putting in an enclosure, how many vents are required?

A. It depends on whether the ground has been sealed with something like polyethylene sheeting or asphalt roll roofing, which should be lapped by at least 3 inches. If it is sealed, you need at least one square foot of vent for each 1,500 square feet of crawl space. But if the area is unsealed, then one vent is needed for each 150 square feet of crawl-space area.

Garden Clinic

Q. Does wintersweet, the shrub that has fragrant, yellow flowers in midwinter, require sun or shade? How tall does it grow?

A. Wintersweet, (Chiimonanthus praecox) does best in full sun, but will also grow tall in partial shade. It grows 5 to 9 feet tall.

Q. Please give me some information about the vegetable called bitter melon. I tasted it at this year's state fair.

A. Bitter melon or foo gwa (Momordica charantia) is a warm season, Oriental vegetable. It has been grown in this country for some time as an ornamental but hasn't achieved much popularity with those unacustomed to iis rather exotic flavor. It is sometimes pickled, but more often it's cooked. If less bitterness is desired, pickling the smaller, less mature fruits and even parboiling them prior to stir-frying will help. The leaves and young shoots are also edible and have a high nutritive value. Treat it as you would other melons.

Q. Please give me informaiton on how to get the meat out of a pumpkin without peeling it.

A. Cut the pumpkin in half. Scrape the seeds out of the pumpkin and place it, cut side down, in a baking dish with sides. Bake at 375 degrees F. until it is soft. Remove the pan from the oven and drain liquid from the pan. Set the pan aside until the pumpkin is cool enough to handle. Scoop the pulp from the pumpkin shell into a food processor, blender or ricer and puree it. The pulp is ready to use in recipes.

Q. Cottony, mealy, soft-bodied insects are on my cactus. What can I do to get rid of them?

A. The insects you descibe are mealybugs. For small infestation of mealybugs, apply a cotton swab dipped in rubbing alcohol to the insects and wash them off the plant. If your problem seems too large for this type treatment, spray the plants with malathon according to the instructions on the label.

The company operates a plant in Greenville.

Figures Improved

First Wachovia Corp. reported net income per share fully diluted for the third quarter of 1988 was $1.09, a 10.8 percent increase from 99 cents in the same period last year, according to John G. Medlin Jr., chief executive officer.

Net income for the quarter was $63.9 million compared with $56.8 million in the prior year. On an annualized basis, the represented returns of 17.32 percent on shareholders' equity and 1.26 percent on assets.

For the first nine months, net income per share fully diluted was $3.15, a 31 percent increase from the $2.41 earned in the prior year. Net income for the year to date totaled $182.1 million compared with $136.7 million in 1987.

A fourth quarter dividend of 38 cents per share on First Wachovia common stock was declared recently by the company's board of directors.

The dividend represents an 11.8 percent increase over the 34 cents paid in the previous quarter and is 26.7 percent higher than the 30 cents paid in the last three months of 1987, according to the corporation.

The full year dividend will total $1.40 per share compared with $1.20 in 1987, an increase of 16.7 percent.

The fourth quarter dividend is payable Dec. 1 to shareholders of record at the close of business Friday.

New Marks Set

BB&T Financial Corp. reported record earnings for both the third quarter and nine months ended Sept. 30.

For the three months, net income totaled $10.2 million, an increase of 25.1 percent from the level of $8.2 million reported for the same quarter last year. Primary net earnings per share totaled 54 cents and fully diluted income per share was 51 cents compared with 43 cents and 42 cents, respectively, in 1987.

For the nine months, net income rose 10.4 percent to $28.2 million, compared with $25.6 million reported for the first three quarters last year. Primary net income per share was $1.50, up from $1.37 in 1987, while fully diluted earnings per share were $1.43 and $1.31 respectively.

The board of directors of BB&T Financial declared a quarterly dividend of 18 cents per share payable on Dec. 15 to stockholders of record Thursday.

Zenith's Struggle Is Weathervane For America

Arbitragers Say They Aren't Ogres

Zenith Chief Disagrees

By Peter Coy
AP BUSINESS WRITER

NEW YORK — The New Yorkers who are out to sell Zenith Electronics Corp.'s television-making business admit their public image leaves much to be desired.

In Glenview, Ill., Herbert B. Abelow and Nicholas L. Ihasz are seen as get-rich-quick artists. In New York, where getting rich quickly is an honorable pursuit, they are seen as inexperienced.

In a recent interview in their 41st-floor offices near the New York Stock Exchange, the men said they are simply exercising their rights as part-owners of the company.

"In the late 1800s, management worked for shareholders. But management just started to think of the companies as their own places," Abelow said. In billion-dollar companies such as Zenith, Abelow said, ownership is spread so thin that individual shareholders feel they have no power.

Meanwhile, he said, directors and managers don't care about shareholders because they themselves have only tiny stakes in the company.

Driving the point home, Brookhurst Partners says its 6.1 percent stake in Zenith is bigger than the stake of all 27 Zenith directors and officers combined.

"The bottom line is we're investors and shareholders like any other shareholders," Abelow said. "We're not trying to scrub this company or junk it or give it away to a foreigner."

"All we're really trying to do is ask the shareholders what their preferences are," Ihasz agreed.

Abelow and Ihasz say Zenith management has shown no ability or even serious commitment to make its television business profitable.

Their goal is to boost the price of Zenith's stock by finding a buyer for the consumer electronics business or, if no one wants just that part, to find someone who will buy the whole company.

That, naturally, is not the way Zenith sees it.

"What we have here in part are a couple of guys who say this appears to be easy," said Jerry K. Pearlman, Zenith's chairman and chief executive. "Somebody comes along and bails you out and you have a quick, bing-bing turnover and you've made your reputation."

Wall Street analysts would be happy to see someone come along and boost the value of Zenith's stock. But some say Abelow and Ihasz may not be the right men for such a job because all their experience lies in the unrelated field of risk arbitrage — picking stocks of potential takeover targets.

"There's nothing in the Brookhurst reports which indicates they understand the details of the business," said James Magid, a senior adviser at Needham & Co. "That's not who I would hire for the job. That's a blank check."

"I think that people are now coming to the conclusion that these people are not the right ones to do it," said Robert Johnson, an analyst for Rotan-Mosle Inc. in Houston.

Ihasz worked from 1976 to 1980 for Ivan Boesky, the speculator who is now serving three years in prison, a point that Zenith delights in pointing out to shareholders.

Ihasz, prepared for questions about the black spot on his resume, says he was simply a functionary who had nothing to do with Boesky's illegal trades.

"I was physically distanced from him at all times. ... I left in 1980. I've talked to him maybe twice in the last eight years."

Pearlman says he needs more time to carry out his plan for improving Zenith's profitability, accusing Brookhurst of having its eye only on short-term profits. That does not sit well with Brookhurst.

"In one of the greatest economic expansions in history, how can you not be profitable for almost four years?" Ihasz responded. "What is long-term? How long do you need?"

"We believe in capital formation, all the good things. We're not against motherhood," Abelow said.

GLENVIEW, Ill. — A battle over America's industrial future is being fought in this Chicago suburb, where the nation's last major manufacturer of televisions is under siege from Wall Street.

The struggle for Zenith Electronics Corp. is being watched closely by Washington, Silicon Valley and foreign capitals because of what it could mean for the future of the United States in high technology.

Two New Yorkers who ordinarily specialize in stock market speculation are asking Zenith shareholders to decide by Dec. 4 whether to dump the company's chief executive from the board of directors and install them.

The Wall Street arbitragers say they want to get rid of Zenith's money-losing television business. If they win, they will seek a buyer for the TV business or if necessary sell the whole company, which includes a successful personal computer division.

The challenge by Brookhurst Partners comes at the very time many experts are saying the United States needs to have a home-based TV manufacturing industry as a matter of national competitiveness — if not national pride.

An emerging theory says the sharp, bright televisions of the 1990s will be so crammed with advanced electronics that the United States must keep its hand in the business or fall to second-rate status in entire fields of electronics.

Right now, Japan is far ahead in developing high-definition television, so called for the striking clarity of its picture. Worldwide sales could hit $40 billion a year in the coming decade.

"High-definition TV has become a symbol of a much larger issue, which is whether the U.S. is going to lose control of the driving forces of economic growth for the first time since Henry Ford invented the modern assembly line," argues Fred Branfman, director of Rebuild America, a group that favors government-industry partnerships.

It is hard at first to swallow the argument that televisions are vital to national security. But Americans have begun to learn what the Japanese always knew, that success in exotic technology depends on having a solid base in household items.

Consumer electronics give Japanese companies invaluable experience in making things small, reliable, easy to use and inexpensive, lessons they apply to invading such American strongholds as mainframe computers.

Zenith by itself is not all that important. In spite of its illustrious history, it is only the world's 13th largest color TV maker, tied with a Finnish company called Nokia Corp.

But if Zenith cannot make it in televisions, it is not clear what American company can. Zenith, after all, has a famous brand name, strong relations with retailers, and the advantage of already being in the business.

For an outsider, jumping into the TV business would be like trying to hop onto a speeding train. That explains why giants such as International Business Machines Corp. have not started making TVs in spite of their public statements about the importance of a U.S. presence in the industry.

Should a big U.S. company other than Zenith gear up a factory to make the next generation of televisions?

"For the good of the country, yes. For the good of their shareholders, no. The stock would go straight down," said Stephen Balog, an electronics analyst at Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc.

Standing up for Zenith is Jerry K. Pearlman, 49, the chairman, president and chief executive, a 17-year veteran of the 70-year-old company who is looking for ways to return its TV business to profitability in spite of cutthroat foreign competition.

With deliberate vagueness, Pearlman says possibilities under discussion include types of cooperation such as sharing factory space with other companies, selling other companies' products under Zenith labels, and selling Zenith products under other labels.

Opposing Pearlman are the partners of Brookhurst, Herbert B. Abelow, 54, and Nicholas L. Ihasz, 44, who fled Hungary with his family after Soviet troops quashed an uprising in 1956.

Abelow and Ihasz are being cast as villains by the Zenith forces, but they say they are simply asking the shareholders — the company's true owners — what they think should be done with the company.

"I come from a communist country. I think owning shares is like having the right to vote," Ihasz said. "This is the most democratic process I can think of."

Life was simpler in 1918, when two wireless radio enthusiasts named R.H.G. Mathews and Karl Hassel began making sets on a kitchen table in Chicago for what would become Zenith.

By the early '60s the Asian invasion of consumer electronics was well under way. There were 27 U.S.-based TV makers in 1960, 18 in 1968, nine in 1974, five in 1984 and two in 1987, according to a countdown by IEEE Spectrum, a magazine for electrical engineers.

Zenith gets half its more than $2 billion in annual sales from personal computers and related equipment.

Thanks to computers, Zenith expects to make a small pre-tax profit this year for the first time since 1984. But its consumer electronics business, mainly TVs, has been running in the red.

Zenith says foreign companies are dumping TVs here at illegally low prices and accuses the Commerce Department of failing to enforce penalties.

Whatever the reason, Zenith is short on money for investment and most likely will never manufacture complete high-definition televisions. Its goal is to get its proposed HDTV transmission system established as a U.S. standard, which could win it big royalties from the companies that actually make the TVs.

Zenith also has a highly praised and patented technology for sharp, bright computer screens, which it hopes to supply to HDTV makers. Zenith is asking the federal government for $60 million so it can make the screens big enough to be used in the new televisions as well as in military equipment and air traffic control towers.

Unfortunately for Zenith and other U.S. companies, the Japanese have built up a nearly insurmountable lead in many aspects of the technology.

"HDTV is not just one technology. It's thousands of technologies. And the Japanese have ended up by dominating every single one of those markets," said Richard J. Elkus Jr., chairman of Prometrix Corp. in Santa Clara, Calif., and co-chairman of an American Electronics Association task force on HDTV.

Zenith's appeal as the last U.S.-based company in the TV business is itself rather fuzzy. Most companies in the TV business today are transnational.

Citing the threat to the U.S. electronics industry, Rebuild America's Branfman says the federal government should support a U.S.-based company or companies in manufacturing high-definition televisions with loans, shared research, guaranteed purchases or some combination of those.

Shinn Buys Fort Mill Property

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORT MILL, S.C. — Sports entrepreneur George Shinn, deciding that he needs to expand the access to his proposed sports and business complex, has purchased 60 acres of pasture and timberland from a Fort Mill farmer.

John Faile's land stood between an access road to Interstate 77 and a 320-acre tract where Shinn plans to build a baseball stadium, and a training center for his NBA team, the Charlotte Hornets, along with homes and offices.

Shinn's development would have been hard to reach without Faile's property. Currently a narrow, winding road provides the only access to Shinn's site.

Spencer Stolpen, Shinn's attorney, confirmed the purchase of the land on Thursday. He declined to reveal terms of the deal.

"This makes it easier for us to develop the property — to maximize the benefits as well as make sure the surrounding development lives up to the high standards we want.

"George is excited about this whole project, as you can tell by the substantial investment he's made in the community," Stolpen said.

Stolpen said Shinn, of Charlotte, N.C., has not yet made specific plans for the land, but will probably give much of it to the state Department of Highways and Public Transportation to help relocate the proposed Fort Mill Bypass.

"If they have acquired the Faile property, it opens things up for us," said Highway Commissioner Bayles Mack Thursday night. "If we can get the rights-of-way for no cost, it will speed up the (Fort Mill Bypass) project. You can use your money to build roads instead of buying up land."

Shinn began negotiating for Faile's land about a month ago — shortly after he struck a deal to jointly develop a 320-acre tract with landowner Doyle Jennings.

Faile sealed the deal just before fall planting on Thursday. He's getting $47,000 an acre, unnamed sources told The Charlotte (N.C.) Observer.

Starrett City: Discrimination To Gain Integration

By Rick Hampson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — At the Starrett City housing complex in Brooklyn, skin color determines how long you must wait to move in, and where you live once you do. If you're white, you wait months; if you're black, you wait years.

So why has Jesse Jackson called it the embodiment of "We Are the World?" Why are its policies endorsed by the state NAACP? Why does Kenneth Clark, whose research helped discredit the doctrine of "separate but equal," say it would be tragic if Starrett City were forced to change its ways?

It is because the complex — one parkway exit from the white enclave of Howard Beach and a few hundred feet from the black and Hispanic projects of East New York — has used racial discrimination to achieve racial integration.

It does it with quotas. Starrett City's population is about 55 percent white, a quarter black, 10 percent Hispanic and 5 percent Asian, a mix that is roughly duplicated on each floor of each building.

The result is an urban rarity — a thoroughly integrated community, from its two schools and community center down to kids' Saturday afternoon football games. The bakery even sells wedding cakes topped with mixed-race bride and groom statuettes.

But Starrett City's days as a racial paradise appear numbered. Federal courts have ruled that, whatever their intent, its racial quotas violate the Fair Housing Act's ban on racial discrimination; Starrett's appeal is now before the U.S. Supreme Court.

The case is being watched closely, because the government has filed similar suits in Chicago and Charlottesville, Va., and is conducting investigations in other communities.

Quotas are common in public and private housing complexes around the nation, according to Robert Rosenberg, Starrett's general manager and a former city housing official. "Mostly it's done surreptitiously. No one talks about it. The only difference is, we didn't sneak around — we admitted we were doing it, because we believe it's not illegal."

With 46 apartment towers and more than 20,000 residents, Starrett City is the largest federally subsidized housing development in America. But when the middle-income complex was ready for occupancy 12 years ago, black and Hispanic applicants far outnumbered whites. It was apparent to Rosenberg that he would soon have a segregated community.

So Rosenberg, a Jew who was brought up to hate quotas, adopted them as what he calls "the lesser of two evils." Today, whites still account for only about 20 percent of Starrett City's applicants; accordingly, blacks wait several years for an apartment, whites for a few months.

If the quotas were replaced by a system of first-come, first-served, the percentage of white residents would eventually drop to 20 percent, at the very least. In reality, Rosenberg argues, virtually all whites would flee around the time they cease to comprise a majority — the phenomenon known as "tipping."

To prove its point in court, the complex has presented studies by Clark, a black sociologist who also was cited by the Supreme Court in its 1954 school desegregation decision in Brown vs. the Board of Education.

"In a racist society, there is no other way to bring about stable integration but to recognize that fact of racism and to deal with it," argues Rosenberg.

But William Bradford Reynolds, head of the Justice Department's civil rights division, says the end does not justify the means: "What you're doing is excluding people and including them by reason of skin color."

Reynolds has been accused of using the Starrett case to try to justify his opposition to affirmative action quotas designed to help minorities. In a dissent to the order upholding the original federal court decision, federal appellate Judge Jon Newman wrote that the suit raises "substantial questions as to the government's commitment to integrated housing."

Starrett City's residents take a less academic view. They like what they've got, and they want to keep it.

"This is integration, and everyone knows it," says Joyce Peeples, an Hispanic whose husband is black. "I don't feel like a minority. I feel like I'm part of this community."

"We don't like to use the word 'quota,'" says Rabbi Avner German. "But for the next 100 years or whatever, if you're going to have integration, you have to have quotas."

Starrett City's stability makes it particularly attractive in a city whose recent history has been marked by rapid, sometimes violent changes in the racial composition of many neighborhoods.

Jimmy O'Pharrow, who is black, moved to Starrett after the public housing project where he was living began to deteriorate. It was an old story: as more blacks moved in, whites began moving out, followed by more affluent blacks. Services seemed to suffer. He worries the same could happen again.

Ruth Horowitz moved to Starrett City from neighboring East New York, which in the 1960s was the scene of "block-busting" by unscrupulous real estate agents; she recalls receiving dozens of post cards warning that the neighborhood was changing and urging her to sell her home while she could.

Now, she lives on a floor with "an Israeli family, a black family, a white couple, a black couple with children, an old Jewish man, two Italian sisters and a family of immigrants from Eastern Europe."

Although surveys indicate that black residents are about equally divided on quotas, a black community group opposes the government's suit, as do many black elected officials.

Reynolds admits the Starrett issue is "a tough call," but points out that the quota system creates victims — minority group members stuck on a waiting list in a city with a critical housing shortage.

The Associated Press

Starrett City general manager Robert Rosenberg waits for a U.S. Supreme Court ruling

Blacks' relegation to the back of the waiting line has evoked comparisons to their place on the bus years ago.

Karene Freeman, a housing rights attorney, recalls a black woman crying in her office because her family was languishing on the waiting list while whites who had applied after she did got in.

"If the only way to achieve integration is to discriminate against blacks, there's something wrong," says Phyllis Spiro of the Open Housing Center.

But many Starrett residents claim the very process of admitting more minority applicants will destroy the community they hope to join.

"If there is tipping, the very people who want to get in wouldn't want to live here," says Ms. Horowitz. "What we've got is what we're looking for."

Rosenberg says management will try to keep up the complex regardless of who moves in. But he says without quotas something will be lost: a model of integrated government-subsidized housing that disproves the notion, voiced mostly recently in nearby Yonkers, that "assisted housing must inevitably become segregated housing."

Meanwhile, Starrett residents wait anxiously. The impending change "is a topic of conversation," says Ms. Horowitz. "Some of the older people are frightened.'

But a Jewish community center is under construction. "We're betting on Starrett City remaining integrated," says Rabbi German.

What if Starrett City does become segregated?

"We have single-race neighborhoods," Reynolds has said. "Nothing wrong with that so long as it doesn't come about by discriminatory means. If Puerto Ricans want to live with Puerto Ricans, that's their right ..."

Rosenberg is more cynical: "In three years we'll be segregated, and then they'll be suing us for that."

Hotel Chain Ignores Competition

By Soll Sussman
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TORONTO — Isadore Sharp, founder and chairman of the Four Seasons luxury hotel chain, isn't troubled by the growing competition at the top end of the market.

"We've evolved over 25 years," he said in an interview at corporate headquarters here. "They look at us and copy a lot of what we've done."

Indeed, the move by several major hotel chains into the luxury market has actually helped Four Seasons by putting huge advertising budgets to work promoting quality and whetting the public's appetite for the kind of services that have made a name for Sharp.

"We decided a long time ago what we thought was going to be our strength," the trim and fit executive said. "The other companies still don't do it — and that's the service. It's the consistency and quality of the people you hire."

Four Seasons — with 21 properties in Canada, the United States and England — has helped set the standards by which the luxury hotel business is judged these days. Among the amenities it introduced are concierge service, twice-daily maid service, formal afternoon tea and full secretarial and translation services.

The company also has emphasized fitness for its guests, both in health centers and in its menus that feature an "alternative cuisine" lower in calories, cholesterol and sodium.

In testament to its efforts, Four Seasons hotels claimed more "Five Diamond" ratings from the American Automobile Association this year than any of its competitors.

Sharp recalled fondly the origins of his business at the outset of the 1960s with a small Toronto motel.

Although he studied architecture, he was working in construction and built a 14-room motel for a client.

"It sparked an interest, I guess, in the idea," said Sharp, in shirt sleeves. "The idea comes quickly ... yet something finally concrete took six, seven years.

"You never anticipate that it's going to take you that long."

His first hotel opened in 1961 in what was then a somewhat marginal downtown neighborhood, so he designed it to look inward and create a comfortable interior environment.

"My idea was that it had to be something distinctive," he said. "The idea of it married the motel feel with hotel services."

Sharp said the basic principles remain the same today.

"Each step along the way carried with it that same idea, of giving the customer something that was special," he said.

Sharp's office, flooded with natural light, is a stunning example of his ability to combine comfort and style. Although the office is sparsely furnished, each piece makes an impact from the large, red and blue Oriental rug to his imposing desk. He took obvious pride in showing off the entire headquarters building, located in a renovated printing shop down the street from the chain's modern Inn on the Park.

As Four Seasons grew, Sharp said he realized that it was acquiring a motley collection, everything from his first motel to a giant convention property since divested.

"It wasn't until 1972 that I decided to concentrate on one end of the market totally, and to make sure that all the hotels would be consistent," he said.

Decisions since then have been made carefully. Sharp said, for example, that Four Seasons spent 10 years looking at New York before entering the market there with the Pierre on Fifth Avenue.

"You make a list of all the cities that you consider primary destinations of the business traveler," he said. "I guess what I was able to do was not just grab and take everything."

He said expansion also has been cautious so that retreat is possible if problems crop up.

"We'll take it slowly," he said. "We're not going to do more if it jeopardizes the existing operation."

His goal for the next five years is to open at least two hotels annually.

"Where we'll go over time is the world — literally," he said.

Panic Buying Boosts Prices

By DAVID DISHNEAU
AP Business Writer

Cocoa futures prices roared to three-month highs Friday on New York's Coffee, Sugar & Cocoa Exchange on panic buying amid speculation that the world's leading producers were planning to withhold supplies from the market.

On other exchanges, livestock and meat posted strong gains; precious metals were mixed; energy futures were mixed; grains and soybeans were mostly lower and stock-index futures retreated.

Cocoa for delivery in December, which had hit a 13-year-low near $1,100 per metric ton in late September, soared above $1,400 Friday and settled at $1,403, $94 above Thursday's final price. It was the highest close since Aug. 12.

"It seems that everybody was buying — the trade, the speculators, the locals — everybody was buying and nobody was selling," said Arthur Stevenson, a cocoa market analyst with Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. in New York.

Analysts said two factors sparked the rally and both of them were related to the Ivory Coast, the world's largest pro-ducer and source of the most highly prized cocoa beans.

For much of this year, the Ivory Coast has withheld its cocoa from the world market, hoping to force prices higher.

New Doctors Discovery

Weight Loss Pill Approved for U.S.Gov't. Patent

'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight Already Sweeping U.S.

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)— An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" you steady fat loss and calorie reduction by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

The U.S. government has just approved the doctors claims for a hard-to-get patent that confirms "there has never been anything like their fat-bonding pill process before." It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough and is revolutionizing the weight loss industry.

You Can "Eat Normally"

Best of all, "you can continue to eat your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat and reduce calories from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire without exercising".

Flushes Fat Out of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles. Then, all the trapped fat and calories are naturally "flushed" right out of your body because they cannot be absorbed.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated.

"Automatically" Lose Fat

According to one of the inventors, Dr. William Shell, heart specialist and associate professor of medicine at UCLA medical school, "the new fat-bonding process is a "lazy way" to lose weight because the pills alone "automatically" reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat. It is 100% safe and not a drug."

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with glowing reports of weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slimmer, trimmer and more attractive again.

Now Available to the Public

If you are trying to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these "no-risk" highly successful fat-magnet pills directly from the doctors' exclusive manufacturer only (includes optional calorie-reduction plan for even better results). Send $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$3 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. W634 Beverly Hills, CA 90211. EATING DIRT

Southern Taste For Clay Has Roots In Africa

By Kathy Eyre
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON, Miss. — Onece Johnson tried hard to kick the habit. She took up smoking. She began eating laundry starch as a substitute. But the old craving still lingered.

Johnson has to have a daily fix of dirt, particularly her favorite crunchy clay.

The 38-year-old woman is one of a dwindling number of clay eaters in America, perpetuating an African custom brought to this country by black slaves.

"I've tried to wean myself away from it," says Johnson, showing a visitor the site of the best-tasting dirt in her native Holmes County on the edge of the Mississippi Delta.

An authority on dirt-eating is Dr. Dennis Frate, a medical anthropologist and program director of the University of Mississippi's Rural Health Research Program in nearby Goodman.

"It's analogous to eating potato chips," Frate says. "A snack food is what it is."

"It really doesn't have a significant taste," she says. "You know when it rains how the earth smells. It tastes to me similar to what it smells like."

Frate conducted a study in 1971 that found that one out of four adult women in Holmes County ate dirt regularly. He said dirt-eating has been reported throughout the South, though he knows of no recent studies.

For unknown reasons, Frate says, few men eat dirt in America, while both men and women eat dirt pellets sold today in the markets of West Africa.

Although there is a slight risk of ingesting parasites or impacting the colon with large amounts of clay, Frate says the practice generally isn't harmful to the eater's health.

Frate conducted a follow-up study of dirt eaters four years ago, which was published by the New York Academy of Sciences. The study showed that most Holmes County dirt eaters had switched to potentially harmful substitutes such as laundry starch or baking soda, which have a texture similar to the dirt.

He says the substitutes are particulary threatening because they contribute to high blood pressure.

Johnson says doctors told her that women, particularly when pregnant, craved the dirt because of a nutritional deficiency. But she never believed that because she eats a balanced diet and continued wanting dirt long after her babies were born.

After studying blood samples of both dirt eaters and non-eaters, Frate concluded that the nutritional status of the two groups didn't differ statistically. The study refuted the long-held belief that malnutrition contributed to the practice, an idea Frate said was first advanced in a New Orleans medical journal in the 1850s by a doctor studying the health of slaves.

"Cravings? Well, sure," Frate says. "I'm an Italian-American and I get cravings for pasta at least twice a month. I've got to have my pasta. It's the same thing. There's not a physiological urge that tells me I need this. I just like how it tastes."

But Frate says dirt-eating is probably going out of vogue, even in the rural South.

"I think when this generation of women — those 45 and older — is gone, it's going to be unheard of."

But Johnson notes there is visible evidence that dirt eaters are far from extinct. She points to a scooped-out hillside along Mississippi Highway 17 about two miles southeast of Lexington. It's one of two sites she knows of where local people continue to get dirt to eat.

Not just any dirt will do. It has to be the right kind of crunchy clay. Frate says the most-popular eating dirt is a light-brown clay known scientifically as "red-yellow podzolic soil."

Johnson says she knows of a few people who mail shoe boxes full of local dirt to relatives who can't find suitable sites "up North."

Tar Heels Eschew Clay For Real Dirt

By Clay Deanhardt
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Eating dirt.
Dirt eating.
Consuming clay.

Whatever you call it, to a large number of people it is a strange, misunderstood habit laced with folk tales and traditions. To others, however, eating dirt is a normal part of everyday life.

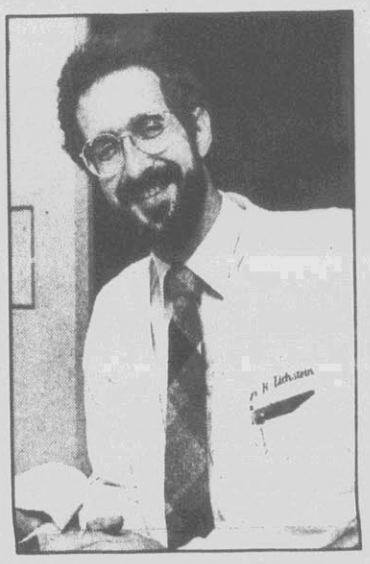
Dr. Peter Lichstein, an internist and associate professor of medicine at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, has informally studied dirt eating in eastern North Carolina as part of his investigation into his patients' beliefs about health care and illnesses. He says that while many dirt-eaters are unsure how their habit began, others use dirt, or more commonly clay, for medicinal purposes.

"Dirt eating tends to be part of the rural south and especially the black population," he said. Lichstein said most dirt-eaters are women, but the practice is sometimes also found among men.

Lichstein said he has heard of some dirt eating in the Pitt County area, but was unable to name any specific cases.

The New York Times has reported that dirt eating was brought to the Americas by Africans captured during the slave trade, a fact they say explains why the practice is mostly centered among southern black families. Today, in Asia, Africa and India, it is still possible to buy clay tablets (washed and sometimes even sculpted into small figurines) for medicinal purposes.

Lichstein said dirt-eating, or geophagy, is one manifestation of a common psychological disorder known as pica, the chronic and compulsive eating of non-foods. The most commonly known pica, Lichstein said, is the often seen habit of children eating paint from wooden objects. Other picas have involved the eating of gravel, chalk or paint chips.



PETER LICHSTEIN

Most doctors do agree, however, that geophagy often revolves around menstrual cycles and pregnancy.

"I often found women had their first dirt-eating experience when they had their first period," Lichstein said. "It also occurs more frequently during pregnancy. It's a craving."

Even though most practitioners eat some type of clay taken from seldom-trod fields, Lichstein said they will insist that they eat dirt, and not clay.

"It tastes like rain when it first hits dry dirt," a Sanford woman told him. Lichstein said the woman, who learned of the practice from other women in her community when she was a child, would take the clay she found and bake it to kill germs before she would eat it.

The woman, he said, often attended social functions where clay was served in small pieces. The people at these events would suck on the clay, closely mimicking the way some people chew tobacco.

She told Lichstein the clay would "check you" for diarrhea, and that if often slowed the flow of a woman's menstrual cycle. She also told him

Carefully Crafted Tools Are Collector's Passion

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — For many people, antiques mean furniture. But to Sam Palmer, antiques mean the tools that made the furniture.

"Old-time furniture makers used good wood in what they produced," says Palmer, president of the Mid-Atlantic Tool Collectors Association. "But the very best wood they could find went into their tools, because the tools had to last a long time."

The tools around his living room back him up — an early hand drill made of ebony wood and brass; a small plane made of lignum vitae, a wood so dense it won't float; the rosewood handle on a small Stanley plane.

For Palmer, old tools are a passion he developed in Massachusetts after he was forced by illness to retire in 1970.

"I am absolutely the last person in the world you would expect to be interested in tools," says Palmer. "I graduated from Virginia with a degree in business administration and spent my whole career in electronics.

"When I had to retire, I didn't know which end of a hammer to use to hit the nails. I started going to flea markets around the Boston area and found the old tools to be just fascinating.

"For a while, I was the only one around the Cape Cod area who was buying them at auctions, and you could buy them for next to nothing. Then other people started getting interested in them, and the prices started going up."

Soon after Palmer moved to Raleigh, he found others who shared his passion. He and three other collectors started the association four years ago. It now has about 300 members in 21 states.

"It is the most diverse group you could imagine, everything from ditch diggers to neurosurgeons," Palmer says. "We have people whose primary interest is in using tools, who love to see them work. And we have the true collector, whose primary interest is in researching and restoring old tools and then putting them in a showcase."

The association, he says, is a way to help educate people about tools.

"Most people have no concept of how much tools are worth," Palmer says. "That's the thing about it, you know there are old tool boxes laying around in basements that people don't think are worth anything."

For example, he says a Stanley No. 1 plane in good condition is worth $1,000 to $1,400. But, he adds, it has no markings, so you have to know what you're looking for.

"There's no one left that even knows why they made that plane," says Palmer. "It's too small for a man's hand, too small to use. Some think it may have been used to show children about tools, or maybe as a salesman's model."

Palmer says most people narrow their focus soon after they start collecting.

"When you first get the bug, you collect every old tool in sight," he says. "But after a while, you find out there are too many tools out there and you aren't going to be able to collect them all. So you start specializing in one way or another."

Palmer says the association wants to research distinctly Southern tools.

'Got It Together' Draws Some Fire

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: I'd like to respond to "Got It Together in Iowa," who's had it up to her eyeballs with "supermoms" who work outside the home and entrust the care of their children to others. She's angry because mothers who stay home are looked down upon, while "supermoms" are praised and respected.

I am a working mother, but I'd never call myself a "supermom." I envy all those women who can stay home and raise their children. I'd have given anything to have had the chance, but my son's father left us when "Todd" was 5 months old. I could either go on welfare or work two jobs. I chose the two jobs.

I worked 70 to 75 hours a week for six years with no child support or outside aid. The first few months I left my home at 4 a.m. and walked to the sitter's house, carrying my tiny baby. I continued to walk to work, arriving at 7 a.m. I did this until I could afford to buy a second-hand car.

I've worked my way up; now I'm able to make it with one job. I am a den mother for Todd's Cub Scout troop. He's a wonderful kid — smart, well-behaved and lovable. We read together, hike, laugh, argue, play games and make jelly. I'm no supermom. I'm normal. And there are a lot of other single working mothers just like me. — Keeping It Together In Michigan

Dear Abby: Three cheers for "Got It Together in Iowa." I was a schoolteacher for five years, but gave it up when I had my first child. Now I have four.

Please spare me the "have-to-work" excuses. I know too many "supermoms" who live in $200,000 homes, have a BMW in the driveway, a swimming pool in the backyard and take European vacations. Meanwhile, they're paying strangers to raise their kids. Let's get back to raising our own families, wearing less expensive clothes, driving economy cars and doing what women were meant to do — being homemakers and full-time mothers.

I wouldn't dream of giving the responsibility and fun of raising my children to anyone else. It's the most fulfilling and rewarding job in the world. — Got It Together In Atlanta

Dear Abby: I just read the letter from "Got It Together in Iowa," who gets no respect because she's a stay-at-home mom. OK, now, everybody listen:

Some women have to work. They need the extra money, or they're supporting their family on their own.

Some women want to work. They love their families, but the daily domestic scene is not for them. They prefer the challenge of the business or professional world. Good for them!

Some women prefer to stay home. They enjoy housekeeping, cooking and being a full-time mother. This is very hard work, but they find it fulfilling. Good for them!

Not all women who work outside the home are pampered executives with painted fingernails, designer clothes, neglected husbands and latchkey kids.

Neither are all housewives brainless, frumpy women who walk around in their housecoats and curlers saying, "Yes, dear," to their husbands and yelling at their kids.

Hooray for the stay-at-home woman! Hooray for the career woman! Do as you please, but don't belittle the woman who chooses the other road. — Live And Let Live In Long Beach

Dear Live: Hooray for you! You settled this controversy very well. Congratulations!

Doctor

she felt doctors were ignorant about matters concerning clay.

Doctors, maybe, but not chemists. Apparently the Sanford woman was right about clay having some "checking" powers: One of the main ingredients in the medicine Kaopectate is kaolin, a type of clay used in some ceramics.

Lichstein said the practice is often found among people with an iron deficiency, indicating dirt eating might be craved as an iron substitute. Instead, he said, the clay binds iron, zinc and other important minerals, keeping them from entering the blood stream, which can lead to anemia.

There are also nutritional dangers, he said, if clay is used as a substitute for regular nutritional food. He also said there is always a risk the dirt will carry eggs of parasitic worms.

Less common, but just as dangerous, is the chance the clay could accumulate and block the intestines requiring surgery, he said.

Geophagy is also a danger for patients with kidney problems, since many clays are high in potassium and most kidney patients already have to diet to maintain a low potassium level for certain kinds of treatments.

For the most part doctors have said that moderate dirt eating is neither harmful or helpful to the average person. More dangerous, they warn, are real picas such as children eating leaded paint.

Lichstein said he tried a clay tablet once, while he was conducting his investigations. His opinion?

"It tasted pretty much like dirt."

Dirt

Frate attributes the craving for dirt simply to early childhood eating habits. Johnson agrees. She says her children don't eat dirt because they grew up in urban Jackson.

"It's a universal practice," Frate says.

Polls Have Taken Their Toll On Her

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

I don't know about you, but Election Day can't come a day too soon for me. I've got a case of Poll Paralysis that may never get well.

Every 15 seconds since the conventions of last summer, pollsters have taken the voters' emotional temperatures and translated them into a win or lose column. The result: Polls have taken their toll on me.

It wasn't so bad years ago when there were only a couple of pollsters, but now it's down to some reporter surveying four white-collar workers in leather loafers as they exit a restroom at a Denny's in Los Angeles.

When I went on a vacation out of the country a couple of weeks ago, I thought it would be great to get away from polls. Instead, I had withdrawal symptoms. I woke up at night wondering how Bush was doing in Texas and what the Kennedy remark did for Bentsen. I was disoriented and confused not knowing if I was a majority or a minority. I asked a stranger, "How do the polls go in America?" He said, "Dukakis said he doesn't believe in polls." I nodded. "That means Bush is ahead this week. The only time a candidate doesn't believe in polls is when he's behind in them."

Does anyone ever wonder about the people the pollsters query? Who are they? I know a lot of people, and not one of them has ever been polled -- me included. Is this a full-time job for them? And what will they do after next Tuesday?

I have a theory that most of the people surveyed are old Nielsen families who used to tabulate what they watched on television and canceled every show I ever liked. Why should I believe them now?

Not only is the constant assault of percentages making me sick, I'm not sure polls have a place in a national election. I had a friend running for office who walked into a hotel 45 minutes after our polls closed and was told by a local reporter that Dan Rather in New York had just declared her a loser and then was asked how she felt about that.

I think the polls have taken away something very precious that rightfully belongs to the American voter -- the right to think and to arrive at a personal decision because he feels it's the right thing to do, not because he is unsure of himself and figures the majority knows more than he knows or his vote won't count against the odds anyway.

I want to go back to the days when I went to bed without knowing who our president would be until morning. I want to hear it from him, not Lesley Stahl.

I'm not going to take a poll of how many of you would like to cool it on this practice. But for those of you who agree with me, the next time someone sticks a microphone in your face as you exit the polls and asks, "How did you vote?" tell him it's none of his business. It'll make him crazy.

Archaeological Research Carried Out At Nuclear Reservation

By Nicholas K. Geranios
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RICHLAND, Wash. — Archaeologists are starting to study Wanapum and Palouse villages up to 2,500 years old, and more modern non-Indian settlements, that have been preserved largely because of national security.

The 126 archaeological sites — 20 of them non-Indian — lie within the 570-square-mile Hanford reservation that makes fuel for nuclear weapons.

"It's an irony that the protection offered Hanford because of its national defense role allowed these sites to be protected," said James Chatters, who was hired last year as the first Hanford archaeologist.

"The majority of archaeological deposits throughout this region have been destroyed or covered by hydroelectric development, agricultural activities and domestic and industrial construction," Chatters said as he crouched inside a stone hunting blind created by Indians thousands of years ago.

The heavy security that kept the public out of the sprawling federal plutonium production site for more than 40 years also preserved a collection of Indian villages, cemeteries and artifacts.

The arid Hanford site was once home to 3,000 Wanapum and Palouse Indians, who lived along the Columbia River and stalked deer and salmon. They went to reservations and up to 2,000 whites moved in at the turn of the century. But the area remained largely empty until the government created the nuclear reservation in 1943 as part of the Manhattan Project.

Officials for Battelle's Pacific Northwest Laboratories, which contracts most Hanford research, recently arranged the first press tour of archaeological sites. Reporters were taken to the remains of a large Indian village and to the hunting blind, essentially a round stone hiding place built into the side of a canyon where hunters waited to kill passing deer.

They are among the most dramatic remains of 10,000 years of human activity in the area, said Chatters, who is developing a plan to manage and preserve the sites. "There are probably more intact archaeological sites here than anywhere else in the U.S. The majority of the sites don't seem to have been disturbed."

Perhaps the most important discovery was the site of a large Wanapum Indian village, which at one time had at least 60 housepits and may have been occupied for 2,500 years, he said. It is one of the two largest in the Northwest, along with the Strawberry Island site at the mouth of the Snake River.

The village is now a series of circular depressions, overgrown with weeds, along with tool fragments, animal bones and other signs of human habitation.

The homes were pits dug into the ground and covered with wood and mat roofs, averaging about 400 square feet and sheltering around a dozen people, Chatters said. There has been no excavation of the site yet.

Hanford was where the Wanapum prophet Smohalla held the first "washat" dance, which became central to the "Washane" religion still practiced by some Indians on the nearby Colville, Nez Perce, Umatilla, Warm Springs and Yakima Indian reservations, Chatters said.

But the same security that kept out looters also kept area tribes from sacred religious sites. Those restrictions have eased with the end of plutonium production, and negotiations are under way for more access.

While part of Chatters' job is advising the Department of Energy on Indian concerns, the tribes do not fully support his work. "We're seen as gravediggers by the Indians," he said.

Non-Indian sites include the former townships of White Bluffs, Hanford and Ringold, whose residents were turned out of their homes in the 1940s in a parallel with the Indian relocation a few decades earlier.

Also, Chatters said, the nine reactors that produced plutonium, including the material for the bomb that destroyed Nagasaki, are historic. The B Reactor, the first at Hanford, is being considered for preservation and development as a national historic site.

"Our purpose is not to judge the social or political merits of what we're preserving," he said. "The reactor's importance is much greater than the hunting blind's, which fed a few families."

An Inviting Autumn Lane

Dirt lanes that branch off main highways in eastern North Carolina invite rural strolling at its finest, especially in autumn when leaves add canopies of brilliant color. Often such lanes will wind through two or three miles of forests, open fields and meadowlands.

Down Under Audiences Loved Mark Twain's Special Humor

By Alex Dominguez
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STARKVILLE, Miss. — Mark Twain's 15-week lecture tour of Australia and New Zealand in 1895 not only revealed the extent to which the famed humorist was loved outside the United States, but replenished his lagging finances, according to a new book.

"He had more than one reason for making the trip — one of the last world tours he made," said Miriam Shillingsburg, who retraces the trip in "At Home Abroad," published by the University Press of Mississippi. It appeared in bookstores last month.

A financially-strapped Twain toured Australia and New Zealand in 1895, making nearly 30 stops, while on a lecture tour of the world. At the time, Twain was facing the bankruptcy of his publishing company and the failure of a venture to produce an automatic typesetting machine.

Twain, who was about $200,000 in debt before the tour, put himself in the black with the proceeds from the tour and a resulting book, Shillingsburg said.

Twain was met by dignitaries, who honored him at lavish receptions, and by commoners, who showed up in great numbers at his lectures. A crowd of 2,000 appeared at a lecture in Sydney, and attendance at other stops averaged over 1,000, Shillingsburg said.

"They saw Twain as the paramount American humorist. He was synonymous with American humor," Shillingsburg said. "They were interested in the exaggeration and tall tales, and the totally deadpan style he used in telling those stories."

But not all of Twain's material went over big, Shillingsburg found. Twain had to delete or tailor some of his stories to accommodate his audiences Down Under.

"He had several jokes, one about the Milky Way for example, which went over real flat," she said. "He finally found out no one understood it because you can't see the Milky Way down there."

Twain toured Down Under during the last 15 weeks of 1895 and often commented on the reversed seasons in the Southern Hemisphere and the intense heat of the Australian summer, Shillingsburg said.

"If you in Australia have this kind of weather in the middle of December, what must you have in July," Twain told several audiences.

Twain also wrote in "More Tramps Abroad," about the compressed brand of English spoken in Australia and the mayor of a town who said "Q" and "Km" during a conversation.

"Then I saw 'Q' is the end of the phrase "I thank you'; 'Km' is the end of the phrase, "You are welcome," Twain wrote.

The Mississippi State University professor of English went to Australia with her family as a Fulbright lecturer in American literature to a university in Canberra. Shillingsburg, who had previously taught several courses on Twain, came up with the idea for the book while retracing Twain's trip in Australia and New Zealand with her family.

Shillingsburg based the book on letters, newspaper accounts and notes made by Twain, which she found during her travels.

Shillingsburg thinks one of the reasons Twain was so popular Down Under is because of the similarity between rural America and rural Australia.

Madagascan Names With A Musical Ring

Residents of the island nation of Malagasy, formerly Madagascar, often have a very musical sounding single long name or a long name preceded by a simpler first name.

Typical of such names are those of Rainibetsimisaraka, an independence leader; Colonel Richard Ratsimanravak, young head of state who died at 42 in 1975; Rainandriamampandry, a foreign minister in the 1890s; two noted 20th century military figures, Albert Randriamaromanana and Avana Ramanantoanina, and a 19th century public figure, Joseph Ravoahangy Andrianavalona.

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS
AN ADVANTAGE IN CREATIVE DIVIDERS
One big advantage of using dividers in your home is that rooms do not always have to remain defined in one particular shape or size. Free-standing dividers are extremely versatile and they give you the freedom to restructure rooms any time you wish.
There are many ways to create dividers that not only separate areas, but also enhance a room--all with a great deal of flexibility in the bargain.
Dividers enable you to, for instance, carve a dining room from the living room, shield an entryway, or create a work area out of part of space devoted to other purposes. When needs change, dividers can be used elsewhere.
Ideas available today for dividers include many pieces of furniture such as bookcases or other kinds of free-standing wall units or cabinets with shelves that divide and display at the same time, and units or chests with drawers that provide storage as well as division.
Someone once said that when you divide, you add. That is, by dividing one area, you are adding another, and that can be an advantage.
To see lots of furniture, for whatever your needs, stop in and see us at Betsy Drake Interiors. Our quality and affordability are guaranteed.

Roger Tory Peterson Inspired Americans To Study Birds

By Darren Dopp
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JAMESTOWN, N.Y. — Roger Tory Peterson, artist and bird lover, started a "revolution" 60 years ago in the hilly meadows and woods surrounding this small city in upstate New York.

A walk in the woods hasn't been the same since.

It was here that Peterson found the inspiration for an epic work, "A Field Guide to the Birds," a book that revolutionized nature study. It took ornithology out of the laboratory and made the feathered, fanciful world of the treetops more accessible to the common man.

Peterson's guidebook is found in more than three million homes and libraries and is considered one of the main reasons 60 million Americans take an interest in birds.

More important to Peterson, it has increased people's awareness of the environment, which he says was his underlying goal.

"Birding, after all, is just a game," says Peterson, who has identified more than 4,000 of the 9,000 known bird species around the world. "Going beyond that is what is important."

Like caged canaries in a coal mine, wild birds are an early environmental warning system for mankind, he says.

"Whatever happens to them will sooner or later come back and get man right in the neck," he says.

A pioneer in the environmental movement, Peterson has won virtually every major award given by conservation and wildlife groups. In 1980, President Jimmy Carter awarded him the Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian award. Twice he has been nominated for Nobel prizes.

"He's the grand old man of birdwatching," said Charles Walcott, director of Cornell University's ornithology laboratory, a leading bird center.

At 80, Peterson, who has flowing white hair and sharp blue eyes, is something of a folk hero. When he spoke at the Chautauqua Institute near Jamestown recently, admirers gathered around him asking for autographs or to have him listen to their best bird calls, which he always suffers through graciously.

Peterson hasn't always enjoyed such adulation.

Growing up in Jamestown, Peterson was teased and harassed by classmates whose interests were in sports and girls. He walked the forests alone, catching bugs and exploring under rocks and sketching the things he saw.

To this day he won't repeat the names other kids called him. "They weren't very nice," he says.

In addition to the taunts from his peers, Peterson's stern father, Charles, a Swedish-born cabinetmaker who had begun work in Jamestown's furniture factories at age 10, considered his nature pursuits frivolous.

Peterson acknowledges his boyhood interest in birds was more than love. "It was an obsession," he says. "They dominated my thoughts and filled my dreams."

After high school, Peterson began work in the factory, painting nature scenes on cabinets. In his spare time, however, he continued to roam the wilds, painting the birds he observed, like James Audubon before him.

Later, a supervisor at the factory recognized his talent and encouraged him to go to art school in New York City. It was there he began work on an idea that would change his life.

Before Peterson, bird books used technical language and scientific illustrations. The field guide, which he wrote and illustrated, was different. He grouped similiar birds together, with arrows pointing out their distinguishing features. It was simple and made identification of birds fun.

When completed in 1934, it was rejected by five publishers who said no one would be interested in birds. Finally, Houghton-Mifflin Co. agreed to publish 2,000 copies with the proviso that Peterson forgo royalties on the first 1,000 sold. The book sold out in three weeks and went on to become one of the publisher's most successful books.

It is recognized as an authority on bird identification. Peterson tells a story of how he once tagged along anonymously on a bird outing and got into an argument with a woman over a bird. "Wait a minute," she said. "I'll just look it up in my Petey."

Today Peterson lives in Old Lyme, Conn., with his wife, Virginia. Despite his advancing age, he works up to 12 hours a day updating the guide series, which has grown to cover 35 other topics from seashells to wildflowers.

He is also working on another project that he says is his most important — the establishment of the Roger Tory Peterson Institute, a $10 million bird research and educational center in his hometown.

After some delays in getting the project going, Peterson has taken a more active role in developing programs and fund-raising. He has made several appearances throughout the country on behalf of the institute, always using the occasions to press environmental concerns, such as acid rain and habitat destruction. But he does so almost reluctantly.

"I don't like to have to be a politician," he says. "I still would rather be out in the woods."

Prison Project Mixes Paint And Pottery

By Paul Gallagher
WILKES-BARRE TIMES LEADER

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. — Joe Tulanowski kneels on the almost 7-foot slab of leather in the Luzerne County Prison. The cold glow of fluorescent lights bathes the room. Sharpened pencil in his tattooed hand, he cuts a deep pattern into the untreated leather.

"One wing will go here ... one wing will go here.

"The moon will go here."

As he stretches over his work, tattoos peek from beneath his prison greens. A tiger on his bicep, a spider's web on his forearm, an apple, a Harley-Davidson insignia.

"I've got tattoos on over 60 percent of my body," says the 27-year-old Tulanowski.

Tulanowski and two other inmates at the Luzerne County Prison are collaborating on the leather tattoos in the hope of showing not only their views of themselves, but their dreams for their futures.

The project, called "Tattoo Haiku," was the idea of poet Craig Czury, a Dallas native who taught a poetry workshop to some of the inmates two years ago.

"I began a writing exercise using Tulanowski's tattoos, which led to a discussion about tattoos as a social statement, no different than a Marine Corps tattoo is a social statement," says Czury.

When he taught his class how to construct a haiku — a highly structured Japanese poem — he noticed a similarity in the way the men tried to create the work.

"There was the same intensity, precision and concentration that they'd talked to me about (when they) lay in lines in their skins with needle and ink," he says.

"And I thought that was the hardest they ... ever focused on anything they were building. So I got this idea that maybe there was no difference between (haikus and tattoos)."

Czury decided to meld the two forms of art into one large piece of leather, which would hang in the prison.

He received a $2,000 commission for the project from the Interdisciplinary Artists Program, operated through Philadelphia's Painted Bride Arts Center.

Tulanowski hesitates before he begins carving barbed wire into the leather. His work on the project, in addition to writing the haiku, is tracing in his part of the design, from the barbed wire and above.

"I want it to look cold," Czury says to Tulanowski. "Yeah ... me too," Tulanowski says, smiling. "That's what it's supposed to be — cold."

Joining Tulanowski on the project were Chris Henderson, 32, and Kevin Kaczmarek. Henderson's part of the design is below the concertina wire, while Kaczmarek is responsible for printing the haiku.

"I call it 'psycho-Egyptian,'" says Czury, referring to Kaczmarek's unusual penmanship.

When Kaczmarek completed his work with a black pen, the project, needing only to be colored in, was put on hold until Henderson was paroled and he and Czury tried to ink the tattoo into the leather.

"We began to find out that the tattoo inks and needles weren't possible," Czury says.

The problem was that the alcohol used to mix the inks would quickly dry, and the paints in the tattoo would crack and blow away. They decided to use paint markers, a type of felt tip pen made in a variety of colors.

Eight days after they bought the markers, "Tattoo Haiku" was finished.

"I'm proud of it. It's a sense of achievement," says Henderson. "I feel like I accomplished something worthwhile."

Czury then took the piece to The Painted Bride Art Center, where it was received with awe, according to Steve Gerba, administrator for the Interdisciplinary Artists Program and the theater manager for the center.

"It's quite dynamic," says Gerba. "People just stare at it, and they're affected by it."

After its Philadelphia showing, "Tattoo Haiku" is to be returned to Wilkes-Barre and the Luzerne County Prison, where it will remain on permanent display.

Gerba said that such projects open windows for everyone: from the outside looking in at a life most have not experienced, and from the inside looking out, providing a creative outlet.

"When you stifle expression, all you're doing is creating time bombs," he says. "So this (type of project) can give them a means of dealing with problems.

"Art has that power to overcome, giving them a way to express themselves."

Special Unit Filmed War

By Steven J. Paul
THE NEWS-ENTERPRISE

RADCLIFF, Ky. — During World War II, many Americans sat in the security of their homes listening to the news filtering through the static of their radios. They relied on a mental picture of the bloody combat, concentration camps and movements of Allied troops. Vignettes of the war also were prevalent in newsreels shown in movie theaters. Many of the scenes were filmed by a special unit from America that included Hollywood experts.

Among the members of that crew was Andrew McCarthy of Radcliff, who helped film the invasion of Normandy, the invasion of Allied troops to liberate Paris, the Jewish concentration camps and the bunker where Nazi leader Adolf Hitler's body was cremated.

"You always remained kind of a spectator to the event," McCarthy says. "The idea was to get footage and to get it back.

"I saw some things for years I had nightmares over but have long since gone — combat, the concentration camps ... the way people lived and the way they died. Everybody had an impact. There again, my job was to photograph it."

A New York native, McCarthy joined the Army in 1941 and got involved with a special unit called the Signal Corps Motion Picture Center in Long Island.

In 1942, filmmaker George Stevens Sr. and two others were commissioned into the service to organize special film units. McCarthy discovered in 1943 that he and six others had been chosen to be in Stevens' special unit, which he jokingly called the "Unholy Seven."

They joined a technical crew from Hollywood and went to England to make a film titled "Prelude to Battle," which focused on the buildup of Americans who were going to participate in the invasion of Normandy.

"Ours was presumed to be the unit that would be in the worst of it," McCarthy says, "because that's the way he (Stevens) chose it."

After the invasion, McCarthy followed foot soldiers to Paris. Cameramen were allowed to film the Free French Army liberating Paris.

Fate Of Brazilian Indians May Be Tied To The Environment

EDITOR'S NOTE — What happened in the American West a century ago is happening today to the Indians of Brazil's Amazon Basin. It is called "ethnocide" by some, a fight for survival by others. Ironically, the fate of the Indians may be tied to the fate of the environment as well.

By Susana Hayward
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRASILIA, Brazil — To symbolize his mourning, the young Indian, wearing a suit, smeared a dark paste over his face and walked up to the microphone facing hundreds of Brazilian congressmen. He didn't say a word.

That was last year when Brazil's lawmakers met to write a new constitution, the country's eighth.

Now, recalling the moment, Ailton Krenak, 33, explains, "I wanted to call attention to the lack of respect for the rights and how government policy has killed us."

Krenak, coordinator of the Indian Nations of Brazil, which represents 100 tribes, adds, "It's a race against time because soon there won't be any Indians left."

Anthropologists and Indian rights groups say the government is committing "ethnocide" because violence, disease and land invasion by mineral and agricultural interests are wiping out the tribes and their cultures and with them the mighty Amazon forest.

The Indians want their land preserved. They also want protection from diseases that are foreign to them.

The new constitution, inaugurated in October, does guarantee Brazil's 250,000 native Indians the "exclusive rights" to their land and its resources, which previously belonged to the federal government.

Brazil, with the Western world's eighth largest economy, still grapples with its Indian question 100 years after the United States and other nations resolved theirs, mostly by violence.

When Brazil was discovered in 1500 by Portuguese explorers, 5 million Indians occupied the region. Today, only 5 percent of that number survive. They make up 518 groups with 50 different languages and 170 dialects. In addition, about 3,000 to 5,000 Indians, some 40 groups, still live isolated in the Amazon rain forest and have had no contact with civilization.

Contact often is fatal. Some Indians are killed in violent encounters with outsiders, but most die because they have no immunities against common diseases transmitted by whites, such as malaria, tuberculosis, influenza or even the common cold.

In the first half of this century alone, 87 Indian groups disappeared, largely because of viruses. Experts estimate that 45 percent of a given Indian population dies within two years of the first contact with outsiders.

In Brazil, everyone agrees Indians can't remain isolated forever. But ethical, ideological and practical questions arise as to the best way to incorporate them into society.

"Continuing isolation is impossible, but brusque and violent encounters with modern Brazil kill them," says Julio Gaiger, a lawyer with the Indigenous Missionary Council, an activist group linked to Brazil's dominant Roman Catholic church.

Gaiger and Indian protection groups believe that if Indians are given correct information they can decide for themselves how and to what extent they want to join the larger society. They argue that Indians can retain their culture if their lands are protected and if they have self-determination.

In all, Indian tribal lands take up 8 percent of Brazil, a nation larger than the continental United States, and most Indians live in the Amazon rain forest where minerals, lumber and gold abound.

But the government recognizes less than half the tribes' habitat as Indian reserves. Studies conducted by the National Museum and Federal University of Rio de Janeiro show 70 percent of land specifically marked off as belonging to Indians has been invaded by mineral companies.

Despite Brazil's potential, its economic woes are enormous. It has the largest foreign debt in the Third World, 600 percent yearly inflation, 12 million landless rural families, an estimated 10 million street children and stark poverty, reflected by 70 million of its 144 million people earning just $65 a month.

In its haste to grow economically and realize its ancient dream to populate the Amazon and protect its borders with nine South American nations, Brazil's policy is to integrate Indians into "civilization."

"It is our moral duty to give Indians the same privileges that the overall population has," says Deputy Foreign Minister Paulo Tarso Flecha de Lima. "It is our responsibility to bring them into society. We can't leave them in their primitive state."

Anthropologists charge that at the rate Brazil is clearing away and burning off its Amazon forest for development, thousands of Indians will die and those who survive will become third-rate citizens.

"They get the worst jobs, lead miserable lives, and become alcoholics or prostitutes," says anthropologist and Indian activist Ezequias Paulo Heringer.

Bruce Albert, a French anthropologist who has worked in Brazil for more than a decade, says, "Ideally, outside contact should be avoided altogether, but when it can't be avoided, a strong health scheme should be mounted and Indians should be vaccinated."

Critics say the government's record with Indians has worsened under the administration of President Jose Sarney, who assumed power in 1985 as the first civilian leader after 21 years of military rule.

"There is not one nation in Latin America which treats its Indians better than we do," counters Romero Juca Filho, a 33-year-old economist who presides over the National Indian Foundation, the government's Indian agency, known by its Portuguese initials as FUNAI.

Founded in 1910 as the Indian Protection Service, it changed to FUNAI in 1967 after allegations that federal agents deliberately infected Indians with measles, smallpox and influenza. In dismantling the original agency, the attorney general charged it was "a den of corruption and indiscriminate killings."

Early this year, Juca was convicted in one Amazon state and is under investigation in three others for signing illegal contracts with about 50 lumber companies last September and allowing them to cut wood in Indian reserves. He faces only a fine, to be set later.

Juca did not respond when asked about the investigation. He said that under his administration, "We have recuperated the image of FUNAI."

"It wasn't that the agency had a policy to kill. It was carelessness and ignorance," he says.

Juca claims that under him, 74 million acres were demarcated for Indian reservations — more than double the 30 million acres reserved from 1910 to 1985.

But critics say FUNAI is counting land that merely has been identified as having Indians on it or was already in the process of being demarcated when Juca took over.

"He's just lying. But even when FUNAI demarcates land, the Indians don't know anything about it," says Osvaldo da Cunha, a former FUNAI physician who coordinated the agency's health programs for 10 years. "Basically it's a way to reserve an area so it can later be commercially developed by whoever pays the most. I quit last year in utter frustration, anger and anguish."

Reports of violent clashes between isolated Indians and farmers and miners are common. When word surfaced last year that itinerant gold miners shot to death five Yanomami Indians, it created an international furor.

The Yanomamis are the largest primitive tribe in existence, numbering about 10,000 in the remote northern territory of Roraima which borders Venezuela.

Backed by the military, FUNAI sent helicopters to remove the gold miners and in the process yanked out a group of doctors, anthropologists and missionaries who were working with the Yanomamis.

The Commission to Create the Yanomami Park, as the group is called, has not been allowed back in the area. But some 60,000 gold explorers remain and the government hasn't taken any action to throw them out.

The government charged that the commission, funded by international organizations such as the Denmark-based International Work Group for Indigenous Affairs, was a front for a foreign plot to create another nation. Even Roraima's Bishop Aldo Mongiano was ejected and accused of panning for gold to send to his native Italy.

A reporter who asked repeatedly to visit the region was told by FUNAI it was "unsafe."

"It's unbelievable. We had a good health program and the Yanomamis were slowly becoming aware of the reality around them," said the group's coordinator, Carlos Zacquini. "Now, the Indians are living in a concentration camp and they're dying of malaria, tuberculosis. But we can't do anything because only FUNAI and the military are allowed in."

Last month, Juca said FUNAI demarcated 5 million acres for the Yanomamis by naming the zone a "national forest." In reality, the Yanomamis' habitat was reduced by 75 percent, the tribe's four main groups were divided into 19, and under the national forest category their land can be commercially exploited.

In September, Juca was named as the new governor of Roraima and that has some anthropologists worried.

"Well, that will take care of the Yanomamis," said anthropologist Alcida Ramos, a professor at the University of Brasilia whom FUNAI denied permission to re-enter the region to continue work started 10 years ago.

For now, Indians look to the new constitution as their hope for retaining their cultures.

The charter includes some of the most generous Indian laws in Brazil's history.

"It's very nice on paper, but the question is how — or if — the law will be applied and by whom," Krenak says. "We have a lot of work ahead because up to now the government lacked interest."

Hike Was A Challenge

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Stuart Cowles says his 2,000-mile hike along the Appalachian Trail was more than just a long walk in the woods.

"The trip had nothing to do with my wanting to see how physically fit I was but rather to see how mentally fit I was," he said. "It was a mental challenge every day to put on that backpack and continue the hike."

Cowles, who celebrated his 23rd birthday while on the trail, graduated in December with a bachelor's degree in psychology from the University of Tennessee in Knoxville. He said he began the trek on April 16 at Springer Mountain in Georgia's Chattahoochee National Forest and wrapped it up on Sept. 25 at Mount Katahdin in Maine's Baxter State Park.

"It was a dream of mine that I wanted to make a reality," the Memphis native said. "I wanted to set a goal for myself and achieve it."

Cowles' route took him from northern Georgia along the Tennessee-North Carolina border and through parts of Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine.

"There were times I felt like quitting, but I think that what kept me going was my own self-will, my determination. I wanted to prove to myself and to my family that I could go through with it," he said.

Cowles made the trip without any major physical injuries, but he said he is still bothered by inflammation of the knees which he contracted along he way. He dropped from 165 pounds to 142 pounds on the journey.

"I had several 100-plus days in Pennsylvania where the springs had completely dried up," he said, "and sometimes I had to hike for miles without water."

Cowles said he prepared for the trip by riding a bicycle 20 to 25 miles every other day and climbing the stairs of a 13-story building three times a week.

His mother, Arlene, sent packages of food and other supplies which Cowles picked up at various towns along the way.

"He dehydrated his own food and he packed 17 boxes with the food and gear he needed," Mrs. Cowles said. "I sent one box a week, sometimes two."

D.D. Garrett
Man of Patience

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

It doesn't bother D.D. Garrett if things don't work out today. He wears a "long suit" of patience.

His patience awarded him the Democratic seat for Consolidated District A of the Pitt County Commissioners, and it has kept him active in the political and social change of Pitt County since the mid 1940s.

Garrett, 74, lost the May 3 primary, but apparently won by two votes in a May 31 runoff against James H. Dupree of Bethel. After hearing evidence that ineligible voters participated in the all-Democratic runoff, the state Board of Elections ordered the new runoff held Oct. 11.

Garrett, maximizing his stick-to-itiveness and his ability to mobilize people, won by almost 1,000 votes.

With no Republican opposition, Garrett is expected to be among the first blacks to sit on the Pitt County Board of Commissioners after Tuesday's election.

Of the five-month process, Garrett said, "I think the whole thing was worth it. Had Rev. (Ralph) Love, had he not run, and had the Board of Elections granted me the two-vote victory, we never would have had the unity and the enthusiasm that took place on Oct. 11.

"I've been here a long time, and I saw more unity among the people in Pitt County, and more specifically the black people, than I have seen in any other one thing since I've been here.

"I also believe that my election and victory in October is going to have a real positive effect on the November election because some of the enthusiasm that was picked up out of my campaign is going to be a very positive force for the Democratic party here in Pitt County."

Garrett's victory in the commissioner's race culminates the history of his efforts to be elected to public office.

"I first ran for public office in 1949," he said. "I ran, at that time, for town council. I didn't win. At that time, I didn't run to win. I did want to say to the black community you do have the right to run under the 14th and 15th amendments of the Constitution."

Garrett received 44 votes in that election; 720 votes in his 1959 attempt for a town council seat, and 1,058 votes in his 1965 effort.

"It was 25 years after I ran for the first time that any black people got elected to the town council." They were the Revs. John Taylor and Clarence Gray, he said.

Garrett said he realized early that if blacks were to advance in society, they would have to do it in the political process. So, in addition to running for town council, Garrett became active in the Pitt County Democratic party, where he has served as first vice chairman, chairman and currently as second vice chairman.

In addition to his political activities, Garrett is known for his leadership in the local branch of the NAACP. He has been president of the Pitt County branch since 1974. He said his participation in civil rights stemmed from several experiences.

While attending the North Carolina College for Negroes and working in Durham, "I remember one night as an orderly in a hospital, a black woman came in in labor and the doctors would not admit her to the maternity ward until the man she was working for, who was a white man, came in and said it was all right.

"If a white man had to give consent for a black woman to have a baby, that baby, in a sense, was that white man's baby and that always bothered me," Garrett said.

Before becoming active with the then Ayden and Grifton branch of the NAACP, Garrett said he served as president of the Colored Civic League. It wasn't popular to be a member of the NAACP because employers would often deny members jobs, he said.

But during that time, "we had some very traumatic situations," Garrett said. "We had a police officer to kick down a black woman's door in the 1300 block on West Fifth Street and shot her dead. During those days, the cops didn't have to tell why."

More subtle racism involved the public swimming pool once located on the corner of Reade Circle and Fifth Street, Garrett said. Because a few black boys would drown while swimming in the Tar River each summer, the civic league petitioned the town council to allow blacks to use the pool.

"When the civic league began to press to use the swimming pool, the town council refused us," Garrett said. So the civic league suggested a compromise of allowing blacks to use the pool one day a week.

"The town council met and said the pool had sprung a leak and wasn't fit to use, and they closed it," he said.

Participation in the social issues eventually led Garrett to the local NAACP where he succeeded the Rev. B.B. Felder as president.

"I remember when no black people were hired downtown to do anything but sweep a floor and wash some windows," he said. About 1955 or 1956, "we were struggling trying to get the downtown area to hire some black clerks, and they wouldn't do it."

So the NAACP called for a black Christmas, Garrett said. Blacks were asked not to buy Christmas merchandise in Greenville and not to turn on Christmas lights.

"We cut off the Christmas dollars from it, and they saw our spending power. After that, they began to hire some black folks on a very part-time basis as clerks and things of that nature."

Over the years, the NAACP also has been involved in helping blacks get hired in local industries and helping various agencies such as Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the Board of Education to adopt affirmative action programs.

"We didn't do all this alone," Garrett said. "We had some help."

But the NAACP experiences alone did not shape Garrett's view and motivation toward public service. His determination, inspiring to some and aggravating to others, was created through a lifetime of experiences.

Garrett was born May 6, 1914 in Fairmont as one of nine children of the Rev. William Henry and Annie Sumrell Garrett. Natives of Pitt County, Garrett's parents lived in Fairmont until he was about 2 years old before moving into the Flemings Chapel community in Pitt County.

"The school and the church were one and the same," Garrett said. One teacher taught all first through seventh-grade students in the school.

"Those were during the days of the pot belly stove. That meant the bigger boys had to supply the school with wood."

Garrett was one of the bigger boys.

During the depression, Garrett's father left his occupation of farming and moved to Greenville where he did odd jobs and preached. His mother was a domestic worker.

"I got me a job and began to work," Garrett said. "One job that I held was the yard man or yard boy at East Carolina." It was there that Garrett learned the concept of "working your way through school," he said. "I'd never heard of it."

There had been a white boy working with Garrett on the grounds of the school to earn money for his education. "That was the inspiration for me to go to college," he said.

Garrett stopped working at East Carolina Teaching College to finish his education at Greenville Industrial School. During that time, he was a houseboy for the late Dr. W.I. Wooten — making fires, sweeping, bringing in the milk, etc., before school.

After completing the 11th grade at Greenville Industrial, "I hitchhiked my way to Durham," Garrett said. "I had $50 when I left home."

At about 6 feet and 185 pounds, Garrett had hopes of being a great asset to the North Carolina College for Negroes football team and of getting an education at the same time. The only hitch was he had to be enrolled in the school to play football.

With less than $50 in his pockets and no planned means to pay for his education, Garrett talked to the college president, Dr. James E. Sheppard, about enrolling in the school.

Sheppard's advice was — "Take the next bus back to Greenville," Garrett said. "As I reflect on this, I know God was involved. I left his office, went on campus, and I think there is where I made God my first serious promise."

Garrett is a very active member in the AME Zion Church, placing his membership at York Memorial in Greenville.

Determined not to go back to Greenville, Garrett earned money by working as a houseboy for the assistant vice president, Dr. Alfonzo Henderson, and through other odd jobs. He also played football.

Garrett met his wife, the former Clotea Williams, while he was in college but was working in Virginia Beach, Va., during the summer.

"During the time we met, we were watching Count Basie. A a big time band had come to Virginia Beach to play for the white folks," he said. He and Clotea were among a group of black local workers peeping through the back door at the show.

After spending the summer getting to know each other, Garrett said he saw Clotea again at Thanksgiving, and it was during the Christmas visit they agreed to get married.

Clotea visited Garrett in Durham during Easter. "She came to Durham, took a blood test and waited over until she got the results. Then we went to get the license and while there we married without ever setting a date." They married on April 10, 1942, and they have two sons, Denison Jr. and Michael.

After five years of working and going to school in Durham, Garrett joined the U.S. Navy and became one of 25 black sailors that reported to Bremerton, Wash., after basic training.

"The merchants had never seen 25 black people there in any circumstances. They came out of their stores to see us. We were something unusual to them," he said.

Blacks faced many racial hardships during service, Garrett said.

"When we would go to the theaters the white sailors would sit on seats with backs in the movie picture house; the black sailors would sit on seats with no backs to the benches," he said.

In addition, when the sailors went on "liberty," the bus would pick up white sailors at their barrocks, but blacks would have to walk to meet the bus. Because the walk would make their shoes dusty, "they wouldn't let us get on the bus to go on liberty with dirty and dusty shoes," Garrett said. Black sailors began taking a cloth to dust their shoes before boarding the bus.

Showing leadership potential even then, Garrett was a crew leader in the Navy and he began to hear complaints about the food, which usually was beans, franks and stewed potatoes, he said.

"We began to protest this food and began not to eat it," he said. The black sailors then would complain about being hungry while working and some faked some fainting spells to get attention.

But the most effective tactic was the no-talk strike, Garrett said. "The reason for this was, the negroes going on work detail, you could hear us coming on the truck long before we got there," because of their jovial laughing and chatter.

But during the strike, black sailors would not talk loud enough for whites to hear. "This began to affect those in charge of us because we never talked loud and they never knew what we were thinking. I was called in with one or two other leaders and asked what could we do to break the silence."

That's when the bargaining began, Garrett said. "We were told that if we could break this silence they would give us the things we asked for ... I realized togetherness would pay off."

Garrett had other stories to tell of his Navy days. Like when he survived on food smuggled by black stewards and white sailors because he was not allowed to eat in the dining hall on the USS Shaula for three days until the captain gave his O.K. Or, like when he had to take the Storekeeper 2nd Class exam and pass it three times before he was granted the higher rank. And of course, as a black sailor he could not eat in white restaurants across the country on meal tickets provided his troop. He had to find black restaurants to eat in and he paid for the meals with his own money.

"That would happen in the United States traveling under the banner of the U.S. Navy and not able to eat government food," he said.

Garrett was honorably discharged from the Navy in November 1945. He and his wife returned to Greenville and soon afterward, were expecting a child.

The baby girl, Clarissa, was born about midnight Oct. 25, 1946 in the hospital, then located on Johnson Street. "There was not a maternity room for black women," Garrett said. "She and the newborn baby were sent back home ... the baby didn't survive.

"So this thing stings. It goes mighty deep."

After spending some time at home, Garrett and his family, which included Denison Jr., who was born in 1944, moved back to Durham so he could finish school. He worked with Siler Shaw in his shoe repair shop, which Shaw eventually sold to him.

Garrett finished his studies after two years and was awarded a bachelor's degree in commerce.

"If you want it, see the Garrett brothers" was a popular slogan in Greenville's black community after Garrett and his family returned to Greenville and opened an office of real estate and insurance and tax services.

"I've never been in a hurry," he said. "Patience, I really believe, is one of my long suits. It doesn't bother me if things don't work out today.

"The first month of my officially going to work I sold one insurance policy," Garrett said. It had a premium of $1.50 and the commission was 63 cents.

"That was enough, really, to be discouraging."

But Garrett said he realized that he was in a brand new area of employment for blacks, and he told his wife it would be 15 to 20 years before people would trust blacks in that area of business.

"Clotea went into a depression and literally cried over the matter" of having to wait years for acceptance, Garrett said.

Yet, not swayed by the burdens, Garrett kept at it while living with his parents and surviving on his General Issue allotment and odd jobs.

The Garrett brothers' theme for service began when Garrett and his brothers, George and Louico, combined tax services, real estate, insurance, radio repair, shoe repair (Garrett brought his equipment from Durham with him to Greenville), newspaper delivery, a hot dog stand and eventually, the business of attorney Richard Powell all under one roof.

"We were doing a lot of things but we were just rendering service," he said.

As a notary, Garrett was almost like a lawyer to those in the black community, he said. "Under the notary umbrella, I did counseling and advising."

For example, a Winterville man died and had not kept records of his self-employment, and his wife was trying to qualify for Social Security benefits. The man had made his money by selling wood and coal to people by the week, Garrett said.

By petitioning his customers as to how much they paid the man for his service, Garrett was able to create a estimate of the man's annual income and expenses. The widow "got qualified for Social Security under those circumstances," he said.

The variety of opportunities to help people "prevented my desire to become specialized," Garrett said. "Even today I'm not a specialist."

Garrett said his jack-of-all trades business has given him a "relatively comfortable" life.

"Richness never was my goal. I reckon that's why folks call me crazy."

Pottery Show At History Museum

By Peggy Howe
N.C. DEPARTMENT OF CULTURAL RESOURCES

RALEIGH — The work of 20th century North Carolina potters is on view at the N.C. Museum of History in the new exhibit titled, "Traditional North Carolina Pottery."

All kinds of North Carolina pieces — jugs, bowls, plates, mugs, candlesticks, a face jug, a tea set, and more — depict the wide variety of North Carolina pottery made since the turn of the century.

In three lobby cases visitors will see representative pottery from three major clay-rich pottery-producing regions of the state. The works are from the Piedmont area around Seagrove, the mountain region around Asheville and the Catawba Valley region.

On display are both utilitarian and decorative pieces. The bursts of color beside the more traditional ware dipict the 20th century development toward art pottery, according to Betty Tyson, associate curator, who chose the exhibit pieces.

North Carolina potters generally have belonged to "potter families," said Marianne Wason, museum research curator. This strong family influence led potter Dorothy Auman of Seagrove to remark that "no one ever decided they wanted to be a potter . . . it was just passed down from generation to generation as a natural thing."

North Carolina pottery is different in appearance from pieces made in other states, according to Charles B. Zug III, author of "Turners and Burners: The Folk Potters of North Carolina." Zug says no other state possesses such an extensive ceramic heritage. He calls folk pottery a "blend of native clay and native talent."

The exhibit features examples from several potteries, including Seagrove Pottery, Jugtown Pottery, Old Plank Road Pottery, North State Pottery, Cole family potteries, Pisgah Forest Pottery, Omar Khayyam Pottery, E.A. Hilton Pottery and B.B. Craig Pottery.

Potters whose work is on display include Benjamin W. Owen of Jugtown Pottery and Old Plank Road Pottery near Seagrove. Among Jugtown's most famous glazes are frog skin, mirror black, salt, tobacco spit and the treasured Chinese blue.

Visitors will see work by Dorothy Cole Auman and Walter Auman of Seagrove Pottery, Randolph County. In recognition of their craft, they received one of the first N.C. Folk Heritage Awards in 1988.

North Carolina Pottery with Rebecca Palmer Cooper and Henry A. Cooper offers every color of the rainbow. Their pottery features the double dip in which a pot was dipped several times in the same glaze to produce two or three bands of the color.

The Cole family looks back upon 200 years — nine generations of some of the most famous and productive potters in North Carolina. Cole pottery is especially valued for its brightly colored glazes.

Walter Benjamin Stephen's glazes are among the most distinctive of the art pottery movement of the 1920's and 1930's. His most famous wares include his American cameo ware and his crystalline-glazed ware.

Oscar Louis Bachelder of Omar Khayyam Pottery used only Albany slip — a dramatic brown/black glaze produced from clay found near Albany, N.Y.

The Hiltons of Hilton Pottery developed more than 70 pottery designs including their dogwood motif, cobalt blue-edged ware and painted rural scenes. Mrs. Hilton also produced figurines.

Burlon B. Craig produces his wares at Craig Pottery with no electric devices. He digs his own clay, grinds it with a horse-driven pug mill, shapes it on a foot-powered treadle wheel, uses a water-powered trip-hammered mill to crush glass and fires his pots in a wood-fired groundhog kiln. His specialty is alkaline glaze, developed in only two places in the world — ancient China and the southeastern United States.

Examples of North Carolina Pottery are available for purchase in the museum gift shop. A bibliography of pottery material is available free to visitors.

Admission to the exhibit is free.

The N.C. Museum of History is located at 109 E. Jones St., Raleigh, 27611. Hours are Tuesday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Sunday, 1 to 6 p.m. Closed Mondays. For more details call 733-3894.

Whitehead Art In Arts Council Show

An exhibition of art by Emmy Whitehead will be on display during November at the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, Flowers Building, 101 West 14th Street. A reception, open to the public, will be held beginning at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Mrs. Whitehead, local artist and coordinator of art education for the Pitt County Schools, will be showing paintings and drawings.

A native of Synder, N.Y., she is a cum laude graduate of Syracuse University and holds the masters in education degree from East Carolina University.

Her art is primarily done in drawings and paintings, both in oil and acrylics. Her work has been exhibited in shows in New York at the Albright Knox Art Museum in Buffalo, at Syracuse University Art Museum, the Albany Art Museum and the Greenwich Village Art Exhibit, as well as in local and area exhibitions in North Carolina.

She is currently president-elect of the North Carolina Art Education Association, and is a member of the N.C. Art Education Association board of directors. Additionally, Mrs. Whitehead is involved in implementing North Carolina's Basic Education Program in the local school system, a program with guidelines that require music, visual art, theater and dance to be a part of the curriculum in all grade levels in the public schools.

Pottery, Quilts In Tarboro Show

TARBORO — The Edgecombe County Cultural Arts Council is sponsoring an exhibit of pottery by David and Mary Farrell of Westmoore Pottery in Seagrove, and of restored antique quilts by Mark Wilcox of Creedmoor. The exhibit is on view through Nov. 27. Museum hours are 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Westmoore Pottery was established in 1977, with work from the pottery shown at some of the mst prestigious shows and galleries in the state. The Farrells have been featured on PM Magazine in Greensboro, and have been included in publications such as Raised in Clay by Nancy Sweezy, Crafts in America — A Guide to Traditional Crafts, and were featured in an article in Country Living Magazine.

David Farrell was born in Suffern, N.Y. He studied sculpture at Todd Galleries in Paramus, N.J., and received his B.S. degree from State University of N.Y. at Plattsburgh. He has worked as an apprentice at Scratchard Stoneware in Underhill, Vermont, Jugtown Pottery in Seagrove, and Leach Pottery in Beekmantown, N.Y.

Mary Livingston Farrell was born in Halifax, Nova Scotia. She received the B.A. degree in art, concentrating in ceramics, from Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn. She apprenticed with Jugtown Pottery and at Port Clyde Pottery in Nova Scotia, before joining David to form Westmoore Pottery. Their work is bold with decorative techniques, using a rainbow of glazes.

To complement the Farrell's pottery, the Arts Council introduces Mark Wilcox of Indiana, who moved to North Carolina in 1985, restored an old farmhouse, and then discovered quilts. Wilcox has been collecting, buying and selling quilts for the past four years.

For more information on the show, call 823-4159.

Three Musicians In ECU Recital

Three musicians will appear as guests performers in a recital to be given at 8:15 p.m. Saturday in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the East Carolina University campus. The event is free and open to the public.

The guest recitalists are Sydney Reed Carlson, flutist; Elizabeth James-Gallagher, soprano and Anne M. James, pianist.

The program, in five parts, will open with three selections — "Suisse Stille, sanfte Quelle," "Flammende Rose, Zierde der Erden" and "Meine Seele hort im sehen," from Handel's "Neun Deutsche Arien."

The second part will feature songs by Mahler — "Wer hat dies Liedlein erdacht?"; Mendelssohn's "Neue Liebe", and three selections from Hugo Wolf's "Goethe-Lieder" — "Mignon III," "Fruhling ubers Jahr," and "Hoch Begluckt in deiner Liebe."

Two Albert Roussel songs and three vocalises by Ralph Vaughn Williams will comprise part four. These are Roussel's "Rossignol, mon mignon" and "Ciel, aer, et vens" from "Deux Poemes de Ronsard" and Williams' "Prelude," "Scherzo" and "Quasi menuetto."

Following an intermission, section four will be devoted to Bohusslav Martinu's "First Sonata for Flute and Piano" in three movements, with the recital to conclude in part five with Henry Rowley Bishop's "Lo, Here the Gentle Lark."

Soprano James, a resident of New Bern, holds degrees from Indiana University School of Music. She has appeared with the Richmond and Corpus Christi Symphonies. She teaches voice and is a host and programmer of classical music for public radio station WTEB.

Flutist Carlson of Jacksonville, is a graduate of Eastman School of Music and is persuing her master's degree at the East Carolina University School of Music. She has performed in the Spoleto Festival in Charleston and recently presented a recital at the Bank of the Arts.

Pianist James of Richmond, Va., is a graduate of Smith College and has a master of music degree from the University of Richmond. She has been accompanist for the Richmond Symphony Chorus for 15 years, and teaches music at St. Cathrine's School.

Neon Art In Norfolk

NORFOLK, VA. — An exhibition, Neon Norfolk, is currently on view (through Dec. 4) in the large changing gallery of the Chrysler Museum, Norfolk.

The exhibition explores the rich and colorful history of neon signs in Norfolk. Organized by the Chrysler Museum and the Department of Art at Old Dominion University, the exhibition contains four large-scale neon signs as well as smaller signs, documentary photographs and photomurals of the City of Norfolk as it developed from the time of the first World War.

Neon once abounded in Norfolk and gave the city after sunset a distinctive visual character, rendering the streets temporarily magical.

This exhibition is especially timely, for neon has experienced a renaissance as an advertising medium and has also been revived as a high art medium.

Many current light artists became interested in the medium through a fascination with vintage neon. Ken Daley, a Norfolk neon artist, will exhibit a specially commissioned piece that will provide a visual synthesis of neon history in Norfolk.

The exhibition is being researched by Dr. Betsy Fahlman, assistant professor of art at Old Dominion University. It will be accompanied by an illustrated catalogue written by Dr. Fahlman, who has taken a special interest in researching the history of local arthitecture and art.

The museum is located at Olney Road and Mowbray Arch, Norfolk, 23510. Admission and parking are both free.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Hansy Jones
SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

Two new biographies of women who lived their lives in the public eye tell cautionary tales about handling fame and fortune.

"Almost Golden" by Gwenda Blair is the life story of Jessica Savitch, the onetime star reporter of NBC News. A network anchor at 31, Savitch came up on the fast track in the hectic, hard-driving world of television news. Ambitious, beautiful and intelligent, she had the kind of on-screen charisma that boosted ratings, turned her into one of the most trusted people in America and made her a candidate for the network's most sought after spot: the main anchor chair on the nightly news. By the time of her accidental death in 1983, Jessica Savitch — plagued by drugs, depression and disastrous romances — had already lost her race for the top. "Almost Golden" is her story, a compelling personal drama and an unsettling behind-the-scenes look at the television news, a world where quest for celebrity and the values of journalism often collide.

In recounting Savitch's bruising rise through local news and the string of successes that led to her first network assignment, Blair also takes a close look at the network that hired Savitch to boost ratings and then abandoned her as she plunged toward her breaking point. This is the gripping tale of a woman who almost had it all, as well as a penetrating examination of the television sphere where quick success can fuel a swift and bitter descent and where even the brightest can fail.

"Shirley Temple: American Princess" is the story of a star who shined brighter and longer, but who finally managed to achieve a balance in her life.

Perhaps the most talented and beautiful child performer ever to capture the public imagination, Shirley Temple is brought into fascinating focus in Anne Edward's revealing portrait of her as a child and as the adult that child became — a woman forced to live her entire life in the shadow of her own past glory. Edwards chronicles the tumultuous events and the disappointments that marked Shirley's meteoric rise to unprecedented fame as a child star; her fall as an adolescent who had outgrown her appeal, and her surprising ascent inta a world figure as a member of the U.S. delegation to the United Nations, ambassador to Ghana and the chief of protocol for the United States.

Written by a best-selling biographer who is known for her first hand knowledge of Hollywood and its stars, this is an enthralling story well told.

GMA's Indianfest

The Greenville Museum of Art's "First Look" children's education program will host an Indianfest: Pow Wow event on Saturday, designed especially for children in kindergarten through grade three.

The initial phase of the program, which gets under way at 10:30 a.m., will be devoted to sessions in which the participating children will be presented with information on American Indians and in preparations for the public performance to be given at three o'clock in the afternoon.

Participating "First Look" youngsters will pay a fee of $12.50 if their parents are members of the GMA Society, and $15 will be charged for participating youngsters whose families are not members. The fee will cover the costs of all materials for make-up and costuming and for lunch.

The afternoon performance at 3 p.m. is free and open to the public. It will take place around a giant tepee-campfire setting. Participating children will be garbed in full Indian-style regalia of colorful costumes and feathers, with painted faces.

She will be assisted by personnel from East Carolina University, Pitt Community College and the community in the preparation of costumes and theatrical props. Some of these assistants will also talk to the children and bring them entertainment.

The assisting personnel are: Mike Ehlbeck, ECU printmaking; Terry Smith, ECU wood design; Michael Orbach, ECU anthropology; Ken Marsh, an American Indian and Pitt Community College visiting artist, and artists Arline Morgan and Lori Ehlbeck.

Steve Myott, creative dramatist and director of the Center Theater, will entertain the children at lunchtime and coordinate the afternoon presentation.

The event is made possible with the help of a grant from the North Carolina Arts Council.

Three Exhibitions At Gray Gallery

ECU News Bureau

Three exhibitions will be featured at East Carolina University's Gray Art Gallery during the month of November. On view from Monday through Dec. 2 will be "Video Art Series," "Fingerspan Bridge Project and Model" and "Manifest Destiny."

The video series is a collaborative project curated by Laura Davis, who teaches classes in video at the ECU school of art, and Gray Art Gallery director Perry Nesbitt, with assistance from the Video Data Bank at the School of the Art Institute in Chicago.

The Video Data Bank contains over 200 video tape programs which concentrate on ideas central to contemporary art. Kate Horsfield, a representative of the Video Data Bank, will present a lecture, "The History of Video Art," at 7:30 p.m. on Nov. 21, in the auditorium of the Jenkins Fine Arts Center.

The "Video Art Series" will consist of two parts: Program I will deal with pioneers in video art and Program II will examine recent explorations in the medium.

Each program will be repeated over a two-week period. Most programs will begin at 10 a.m., at noon, 2 p.m., and 4 p.m., with a special lunch program each weekday. Programs which are too long to be included in the daily viewings will be shown on Tuesdays and Fridays at 7:30 p.m.

On Nov. 12, Program I will be shown in its entirety. Program II will be shown in its entirety on Nov. 19.

This project is partially supported by a grant from the North Carolina Arts Council.

"Documentation for Fingerspan Bridge" by Jody Pinto, features both two and three-dimensional proposals for her construction of a functional environmental sculpture, "Fingerspan Bridge," in Fairmont Park, Philladelphia.

The pedestrian bridge spans a ravine in Fairmont Park; its cor-ten steel structure is based on the "Pointed Finger of God" in Michaelangelo's painting in the Sistine Chapel.

Pinto has exhibited widely. She has been awarded numerous grants including the Cresson European Fellowship, the National Endowment for the Arts grant and the Philadelphia Council on the Arts grant.

She will present a lecture on Nov. 14 at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of the Jenkins Fine Arts Center. A reception will follow at 8:30 p.m. in the gallery.

Pinto's visit is sponsored by the National Endowment for the Arts as a collaborative project between ECU and Western Carolina University.

"Manifest Destiny" is a photographic account of farming and rural life in America. "This traveling exhibition will provide new insights to commonly held myths about American farmers," says Nesbitt. "The 50 photographs interpret agriculture as a contrast between family farmers and agriculture as a system of food production."

The exhibition was organized by Ken Bloom, director of the Light Factory of Charlotte. He will present a lecture on Nov. 17 at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium.

All lectures and events are free and open to the public. The gallery is located in the Jenkins Fine Arts Center on the ECU campus and is open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Thursday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., except on legal holidays and when the university is not in session.

Robert Ponto conducting the ECU Wind Ensemble

ECU Wind Ensemble Concert

ECU NEWS BUREAU

The East Carolina University Symphonic Wind Ensemble will perform its fall concert Monday at 8:15 p.m. in ECU's Wright Auditorium.

This year the band is performing under the baton of a new director, Robert Ponto.

The program is free and open to the public.

The schedule of compositions to be performed in Monday evening's concert is: Aaron Copland's "Fanfare for the Common Man"; a William Schuman arrangement of the William Billings hymn tune, "Chester"; Joseph Schwantner's "From a Dark Millennium"; David N. Miller's "Varmland"; the Percy Grainger "Lincolnshire Posy" of English folk songs, and a march, "The Battle of Shiloh," composed by C.L. Barnhouse.

By invitation, Ponto and the ECU Wind Ensemble will perform the same program Nov. 14 in Winston-Salem as a featured concert during the N.C. Music Educators Association convention.

Robert Ponto has degrees from Michigan and Wisconsin Universities with additional training at the Goethe Institute in West Germany. He formerly conducted and taught at Pacific Lutheran University in Tacoma, Wash., and at the University of Michigan.

His conducting experience has included engagements as director of Musical Theatre Productions at Pierce College, the Seattle Summer Concert Band, the University of Wisconsin Summer Stock Theatre Orchestra and the Mississippi Valley Chamber Orchestra, St. Paul, Minn.

As a performer, he was principal euphonium in numerous bands and tubist with the Washington Brass Quintet. He also performed in the world premier of a Stockhausen opera, "Saturday from LIGHT," at La Scala Theatre in Milan, Italy.

One among several bands sponsored by the ECU School of Music, the Symphonic Wind Ensemble is the select touring band. Members are selected by audition from among ECU's student instrumentalists.

This fall the ensemble's membership includes 55 student musicians from North Carolina, Florida, Georgia, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Tennessee, Virginia and Wyoming.

Local students participating are Bill Mitchell of Washington, N.C.; Chris Dunn of Snow Hill; Fran Parrish and Hubert Leggett of Greenville, and Guy Buck of Winterville.

The Tasaday, a tribe of Philippine cave dwellers, were arguably the most primitive people to survive into the 20th century, and stories that they were a hoax have been largely discredited, says National Geographic.

Pianist John B. O'Brien, faculty member in the School of Music, East Carolina University, will be guest soloist with the East Carolina Symphony Orchestra conducted by Robert Hause in Wright Auditorium at 3:15 p.m. today. Yoel Levi To Conduct Atlanta Symphony In Wright Auditorium On November 17

ECU NEWS BUREAU

The Atlanta Symphony, under the baton of music director Yoel Levi, will present a program of works by Mozart, Tchaikovsky and Aaron Copland at East Carolina University Nov. 17 beginning at 8 p.m. in Wright Auditorium.

Tickets to the Atlanta Symphony's ECU performance are $14 for the general public and $7 for students and youth. Tickets may be ordered by telephoning the ECU Central Ticket Office at 757-6611, ext. 266, using major credit cards. The ticket office is open from 11 a.m. until 6 p.m. weekdays.

The concert, part of ECU's 1988-89 Performing Arts Series, will consist of Copland's "Music for the Theater," written in 1925, the Mozart Symphony No. 34 in C Major, K. 338 and the Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 4 in F Minor, Opus 36.

The Atlanta Symphony's ECU performance is partially supported by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, through the Southern Arts Federation.

With the current season, Yoel Levi succeeds Robert Shaw as the Atlanta Symphony's third music director in the orchestra's 44-year history.

First prize winner of the 1987 Conductors' International Competition in Besancon, France, Levi spent six years as resident conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra. Since 1984 he has made guest conducting appearances with orchestras in such music capitals as London, Paris, Berlin, Stockholm, Boston, and Philadelphia.

The Atlanta Symphony generally gives more than 200 performances per year, both in Atlanta and on its concert tours. Attendance at its 1987-88 season is estimated to total more than half a million. Its 20 recordings during the past decade have been released under the Telarc, New World, Pro Arte and Vox labels, and have included seven Grammy Award winners.

The orchestra's current season tour will include a May 4, 1989, performance at Carnegie Hall in New York as well as concerts in the Carolinas, Florida, New Jersey and Delaware.

Last year, the symphony's performances were syndicated nationally over Chicago's WFMT Fine Arts Radio Network and were seen on two national PBS broadcasts: "Robert Shaw's Christmas Festival" and a performance of Handel's "Messiah."

Home for the symphony is Atlanta's Symphony Hall, the largest of the auditoriums in Woodruff Arts Center, where the symphony's 72-concert Master Season is presented. The symphony also performs an annual summer pops series, a light classical series, free parks concerts and special youth concerts for more than 56,000 children each year.

One of the symphony's most significant roles is sponsorship of new music, through commissions of works by contemporary composers. Last year, the symphony was given the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers (ASCAP) John S. Edwards Award for Strongest Commitment to American Music.

Yoel Levi, conductor of the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra

Chorale Concert Friday

The East Carolina University Chorale, directed by Rhonda Fleming, will perform its annual fall concert Friday at 8:15 p.m. in Wright Auditorium. The concert is free and open to the public.

Among the selections to be performed in this autumn concert are: "Sicut Locutus Est," "Jesu, Dulcis Memoria," "Locus Iste," "At the River," "The Boatman's Dance," "Walkin' On the Green Grass," and "Morning Trumpet."

The concert will also feature an ensemble from New Hanover High School in Wilmington. This 45 member chorus, directed by Johannes Bron, is noted as one of the best high school choruses in the state.

Selections this group will perform include: "Alleluia," "Moses," "Mary's Lullaby," "God of Comfort, God of Courage," "Gebor'n ist Gottes Sohnelien," featuring the Women of the Hanover Singers, and "Rudolph, the Red-Nosed Reindeer," featuring the Men of the Hanover Singers.

The two choruses combined will perform "Clap Your Hands."

An Alpine farming scene from the travel film, "Italy, Places In Between"

Italy Subject Of Travel Film

ECU News Bureau

Little-known, off-the-beaten-path places in Italy that the hurried tourist never sees will be visited in a film, "Italy — The Places in Between," to be screened at East Carolina University Nov. 21.

Tickets for viewing the film are $4 each and are now available at the ECU Central Ticket Office in Mendenhall Student Center, telephone 757-6611, ext. 266. The ticket office is open each weekday from 11 a.m. until 6 p.m.

The film is part of the 1988-89 ECU Travel-Adventure Film series and will be narrated by filmmaker Frank Mugno, beginning at 8 p.m. in Hendrix Theatre.

Some of these seldom-seen places are the Southern Italian village of Matera where stone houses were carved out of the mountainside.

Also, the Valley of Aosta with its Alpine panorama with scenes of farmers making a living on their hillside lands.

One fascnating view will be the marble quarries of Carrara — the source of Michelangelo's marble blocks. Scenes from an Italian Riviera beach will be shown as well as the walled city of San Gimignano with its 15 towers and the medieval city of Assisi — home of St. Francis.

Canadian Songbird

By Joe Edeards
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn.— Anne Murray, whose enchanting voice has made hits out of such songs as "You Needed Me," has sold more than 20 million albums by keeping a low profile.

Murray, "the Canadian songbird," has lost count of the albums she's turned out, saying: "After 20, you lose track. I think it's around 22 or 23." Her latest LP is "As I Am," another showcase of her warm, full voice. Also out is her "Christmas 88," a follow up to a previous album, "Christmas Wishes," which sold more than 2 million copies.

"There's never been a great amount of hype about me," she said in a telephone interview from her home in Toronto. "I've just sort of 'been there.' I've never been on the cover of People Magazine. I don't think there's ever been a time when people were sick of seeing my face and tired of hearing me. I just quietly go along and go for the best. It's been a quiet career but persistent."

The 43-year-old former physical education teacher reflected recently on her 20-year-old career in which she's turned out 11 No. 1 hit records.

Beginning with "Snowbird" in 1970, she's had a constant stream of hits including: "A Little Good News," "Could I Have This Dance," "Daydream Believer," "Time Don't Run Out on Me," "Another Sleepless Night," "Shadows in the Moonlight" and "Blessed Are the Believers."

She offered these comments on some of her most popular songs:

"You Needed Me" — "The lyrics were ones that everyone could relate to. Everybody has felt that way about someone or some thing. It's a universal theme but never said that way before. I found it poetic and beautiful. The combination of melody and music was close to perfection. I sat down and practically recorded it in one or two takes it came so naturally. It was magical."

"Snowbird" — "I was just starting and I didn't have the experience, but there was a feeling of excitement in the studio. I had been singing everyone else's hits and suddenly I had original material. The image of the snowbird and all that had not been done before."

"A Little Good News" — "It came out after the plane was shot down over the Irish Sea. It was unbelievable what went on. But the song applies at any time, I'm sad to say."

"Could I Have This Dance" — "It's the kind of song you think of when you think of the ones you love. It could be sung at weddings. I've had people write and tell me it was done at weddings or at the first dance at the reception. 'You Needed Me' is used at weddings also."

Murray, the daughter of a physician, pursued music as a hobby while attending the University of New Brunswick, where she graduated with a degree in physical education. She was teaching in high school when her singing talent was discovered by a television producer.

She soon became a semi-regular on Glen Campbell's network TV show and then "Snowbird" took her career even further.

"I perform places and people ask, 'Did she record that one, too?' It's almost 20 years of hits. Sometimes people don't put a face to a song," Murray said.

"There isn't anybody who doesn't know what Michael Jackson looks like or Whitney Houston or Kenny Rogers. (But) I've done my work and ran home."

She has performed sold-out concerts at diverse venues such as Radio City Music Hall in New York City, the Grand Ole Opry House in Nashville, the Greek Theater in Los Angeles and the London Palladium. But in a less glamorous venture, she once spent months touring towns north of the Arctic Circle, singing to as few as 150 people at a time.

"Satisfaction comes from interpreting a song well and getting as close to perfection as you can. There's a feeling from a song that should hit people before they think about who's singing," she said.

Tyler II, chairman of the board of Historic Hope Foundation, Windsor.

Lectures will be given in the Tryon Palace Auditorium, located across the street from the main entrance to the Tryon Palace Restoration Complex.

Tryon Palace was a government center and residence of North Carolina's royal governors during the late colonial period. The restored palace and its gardens and outbuildings are open to the public for tours Tuesday through Sunday. The complex also encompasses several nearby residences from the Revolutionary and early federal periods.

Fee for the symposium is $130 per person, which includes lectures, tours, several meals and two social gatherings. Further information is available from the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education, Erwin Hall, ECU, Greenville, N.C. 27858, or telephone (919) 757-6143.

ECU Art Enthusiasts Have Scheduled Six Foreign Films

The first of six foreign films being presented by the Art Enthusiasts of East Carolina University will be shown Thursday at 8 p.m. in the Jenkins Auditorium, in the ECU School of Art.

Tickets are priced at $12 for the complete series and will be sold at $3 for individual screenings at the door if any tickets remain available at the time. Tickets are tax deductible, and may be purchased at the dean's office of the School of Art. For more details, contact Candy Gunn at 757-6665 or Paula Blumenfeld, 757-3838.

The films encompass one each from six countries or combination of countries — Germany, USA/Italy, Denmark/France, Japan, Brazil and, New Zealand. All will be shown at 8 p.m. on a Thursday date.

• Thursday — —"David," Germany, English subtitles. Winner of the Best Film award at a Berlin Film Festival, this is the first feature film about the Holocaust filmed in Germany by a German director. It concerns a Jewish boy coming of age in Nazi Germany. The story focuses on the fate of the family of Rabbi Singer, his wife and three children — David is the youngest, in Leignitz, Germany during 1933.

• December 6 — "Good Morning, Babylon," USA/Italy. Two loving brothers, Nicola and Andrea, skilled artisans in cathedral restoration, leave Italy to seek their fortunes in America. They eventually wind up in California and help create the Italian Pavilion in the San Francisco 1914 pavilion. They are then hired by D.W. Griffith to build his set for the film, "Intolerance." At the height of success, tragedy separates them as they enlist in military service, one for Italy, the other for the U.S. Their paths cross finally in the course of a pitched battle, where they die side by side, fatally wounded.

• February 9, 1989 — "The Wolf At The Door," Denmark/France. In Paris, in the year 1893, artist Paul Gaguin has returned to Paris after having abandoned his 13-year-old Tahitian wife in the South Seas. Earlier, Gaguin had fled from his Danish wife, his five children and French mistress in Paris to live in Tahiti. On his return, he is destitute, but has brought back 66 paintings he is confident will take the art world by storm. Instead, the exhibition is met with contempt, ridicule. Gaguin steadfastly refuses to make a conventional living, and settles down to painting scenes for an astute art dealer of his beloved Tahiti and of a young Javanese gamine, a gift from the art dealer.

• March 16, 1989 — "The Ballad of Naravama," Japan. Winner of the 1983 Grand Prize in the Cannes Festival, the film is based on a Japanese legend practiced in a poor, remote village. Here, the elderly on reaching the age of 70, are by tradition customarily abandoned on a mountain to meet the gods of Narayama. The film centers a matriach who make plans to assure the survival of her family at a time when circumstances threathen their existence. She manages to overcome the difficulties, and when she reaches 70, insists that her reluctant son take her to Narayama — her death will be the final link in the family's survival.

• April 13, 1989 — "Hour of the Star," Brazil. This award winning movie, made in 1985, is the work of Suzanna Amaral. At 37 and the mother of nine children, she entered college and graduated from the University of San Paolo Film School and New York University School. When she retured to Brazil, she made short films and documentaries for televsion. "Hour of the Star," her first feature film, immediately gained world recognition for the film about a girl, Macabea. An uneducated, naive 19-year-old from the impoverished area of Brazil, Macabea has no chance for real success when she migrates to the big city. She lives on hopes and fantasies, but finally achieves a single moment of happiness, her hour of the star.

• May 11, 1989 — "Utu," New Zealand. Director Georff Murphy in "Utu" presents a dazzling kaleidoscope of memories of a Maori chieftan. The film is set late in the 19th century when the country is already settled by Europeans. A Maori village is destroyed and its inhabitants massacred by colonial troops. Te Wheke, a Maori warrior, suffers grief and rage over the loss of his people. As prescribed by Maori rituals, he has his face carved and tattooed. With a growing band of rebels, he engages in a hopeless war of "utu" (revenge) against whites. The violence ends, however, in a suprising and moving climax.

Japanese Tomb Yields Evidence Of Korean Cultural Influence

By K.P. Hong
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Japanese archaeologists say a 6th-century stone coffin opened in a previously untouched tomb contains dozens of treasures showing a strong likelihood of Korean cultural influence in Japan.

A government research team lifted the two-ton lid off the vermillion-colored coffin Oct. 8 at the Fujinoki Tumulus, or mound, in Nara prefecture, the heartland of ancient Japan.

Japanese newspapers and television have given the discovery extensive coverage while the archaeologists carefully drain water from the coffin to retrieve the encrusted articles.

They say the treasures include at least three swords, a pair of gilt-bronze shoes, a golden necklace, earrings, ornaments and other accessories. The coffin also contains human bones and remnants of cloth.

Officials at Kashihara Archaeological Research Institute of Nara prefecture, in western Japan, say recovery of the relics and remains will take several weeks. The identity of the person buried in the tomb is not known.

Professor Kyoichi Arimitsu of Kyoto University, who directed the Kashihara Institute in 1980-1984, said the relics were believed to be from one of Korea's three ancient kingdoms — Silla, Paekche or Koguryo.

"They are similar to those found in tumuluses in the Korean Peninsula," he said in a telephone interview after inspecting the excavation.

Kazu Uehara, a professor of art history at Seijo University in Tokyo, agrees with Arimitsu.

"When a set of harness was found at the Fujinoki Tumulus three years ago, some people disagreed with my view that it might have come from Korea," he said. "They said the harness looked more like Chinese.

"The remains in the stone coffin, I believe, will correct their theory. I know, of course, there are similarities between ancient Chinese culture and that of Korea. However, they are not the same. For instance, hexagonal ornaments extracted from the stone coffin have been found only in Korean tumuluses.

"There are some Japanese scholars who would hesitate to accept the fact that Japan received more cultural heritage from Korea than China . . . The tendency, I believe, stems from an attitude of looking down on a small country like Korea."

The tomb and mound date from the Yamato period, which ran from early in the Christian era through 710.

Yamato is the ancient name for mountainous Nara prefecture, where the first unified state in Japan was based. Members of its ruling class were buried in mounds.

Japan and Korea made their first peaceful contacts during the Yamato period and Japan began its long history of adopting and adapting the cultures of others.

Writing in Chinese characters was imported from Paekche in Korea in 285. In the next 300 years, through contacts with Korea, the Japanese learned of the formidable and advanced culture of the Asian mainland.

Arimitsu said the Fujinoki mound was believed to have been created between 551 and 575. It is about 600 yards from the Buddhist temple Horyuji, built between 601 and 607 in the town of Ikaruga, 8 miles southwest of Nara.

Excavation of the mound, which is 30 feet high, began in 1985. About 3,500 relics have been found, including exquisite gold and bronze objects, in addition to the stone coffin.

Archaeologists viewed the coffin's interior in June, using a flexible instrument with a lens on the end, and set up a chain-and-pulley mechanism to raise the heavy, peaked cover.

New Stamps

By Syd Kronish
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Two hundred years ago, the "Federalist" papers — considered to be the most important writings in American political science — were printed and distributed in New York in defense of the newly created Constitution of the United States.

As a tribute to these essays and their writers, the U.S. Postal Service has issued a new 15-cent postal card. It features a stylized painting of a newspaper hand press used in Colonial times. In the foreground, a pressman prints a copy of a newspaper that carried the "Federalist" papers in 1787-88, while in the background, a man examines the issue. In the upper right corner of the illustration is "USA 15."

First-day cancellations are available in the two usual ways.

You may buy the 15-cent card at your local post office and submit it for cancellation. No remittance is required. Send the card to: Customer-Provided Stationery, Postmaster, New York, NY 10199-9991. It must be postmarked by Nov. 26.

Collectors who prefer that the Postal Service provide the card should send an envelope with self-addressed labels and a money order or personal check for 15 cents per card. Send to: "Federalist" Papers Postal Card, Postmaster, New York, NY 10199-9992. The deadline is Nov. 27.

Those famous cable cars, which were invented in San Francisco and are still in use today, are hailed on a new 20-cent stamp. Its illustration is a composite drawing of cable cars from the 1880s, primarily the No. 46 "dummy" car, which carried a few passengers and pulled other cars.

The stamp's 20-cent denomination meets the rate for the second ounce of first-class mail. The stamp design is the first for California artist Dan Romano.

San Francisco's unique cable car system operates with 37 cars on a 10-mile network. These cars reach a speed of only 9.5 mph.

First-day cancellations of the Cable Car stamp are available.

Collectors who want to buy the stamp at their local post office and affix to their own envelope must remember to add 5 cents postage to meet the minimum first-class mail rate. Send to: Customer-Affixed Envelopes, Cable Car Stamp, Postmaster, San Francisco, CA 94188-9991. No remittance is required. Requests must be postmarked by Nov. 27.

If you want the Postal Service to affix the stamp, enclose a personal check or money order for 25 cents — the Postal Service will add one 5-cent Milk Wagon stamp to meet the first-class rate. Send to: Cable Car Stamp, Postmaster, San Francisco, CA 94188-9992. The deadline is Nov. 27.

The 1988 Commemorative Mint Set featuring the 40 U.S. commemoratives issued during the past year, plus interesting background information and dramatic, full-color illustrations, should be available after Nov. 1 at all Philatelic Centers and most larger post offices, as well as by mail from the Philatelic Sales Division.

The set is priced at $14.50 for the soft-cover edition and $21.50 for the deluxe, hard-bound edition. Each contains the 40 stamps with individual protective mounts.

Collectors desiring to order by mail should enclose a personal check or money order for $14.50 or $21.50, depending on which version you want, plus 50 cents for handling. Send orders to: Philatelic Sales Division, Washington DC 20265-9997.

Lennon in 1974 with lover May Pang, who later told all

Q Was John Lennon, Beatle No. 1, a homosexual and a drug addict, as is claimed by writers who researched his life?—Dale Foley, Norfolk, Va.

A Lennon might have engaged in a homosexual encounter with Brian Epstein, the Beatles' original manager, but he was primarily heterosexual and targeted women for his sexual satisfaction. Unfortunately, he also developed an appetite for drugs, and it was this combination of sex and drugs which may have deranged his life.

Q In his book "The Woman He Loved," Ralph G. Martin reports that King Edward VIII of Britain was called "David" by his family and that his brother, later King George VI, was called "Bertie." Why?—W.E.P., Roanoke, Va.

A Edward VIII was christened Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David, and his family called him the last of these. George VI was christened Albert Frederick Arthur George but was called "Bertie," which, of course, was derived from Albert. There was no special reason why the family preferred to call the brothers by those names.

Q If Michael Dukakis is elected, will he be the shortest President in U.S. history?—James Glowacz, Chicago, Ill.

A No. Dukakis is 5 feet 8. James Madison, our fourth President, was 5 feet 4. Martin Van Buren, our eighth President, was 5 feet 6—as was our 23rd President, Benjamin Harrison.

Q How does George Bush repay the federal government for the use of Air Force II, the Vice Presidential airplane he uses for his Presidential campaign? Also, do Presidential candidates who work for the government continue to draw their salaries while not performing the duties for which they were elected?—Richard Travers, Arlington, Va.

A Bush's campaign office pays the government by check for the use of Air Force II on campaign missions. When Bush flies to fulfill his Vice Presidential duties, the government picks up the tab. Federal employees who run for elective office continue to receive their salaries while campaigning. The assumption is that they can do two things at the same time. The premise is not realistic, of course, but that's the way things are.

Curtis and Monroe in Some Like It Hot: Kissing Hitler?

Q Who is the actor who supposedly said, "Kissing Marilyn Monroe was like kissing Adolf Hitler"?—Jane Landau, Freeport, N.Y.

A Tony Curtis, who had love scenes with Monroe in "Some Like It Hot," the riotous 1959 comedy, recalled the experience with such displeasure and distaste that he compared her to Hitler. Billy Wilder, who directed the actress in "The Seven Year Itch" and "Some Like It Hot," said of her: "I'm the only director who ever made two films with Monroe. I think the Screen Directors Guild owes me a purple heart." Monroe was frightened and insecure and thus frequently unprofessional in her conduct, for which her co-workers suffered outrageously.

Brigitte Galella

Bruce Springsteen and Julianne Phillips before breakup

A Springsteen and Phillips were married on May 13, 1985, in her hometown of Lake Oswego, Ore., and separated approximately three years later. Phillips filed for divorce on Aug. 30. How much she will get in spousal support and property division depends on whether she and Springsteen signed a prenuptial agreement. The rock star is, of course, worth millions.

AP/Wide World

Mrs. B.A. Bentsen

A Born in Lufkin, Tex., the only child of Burl and Ann Longino, Mrs. Bentsen was christened Beryl Ann. Her mother died when she was 6, her father when she was 8, and her grandparents when she was 11. She was reared by a maiden aunt.

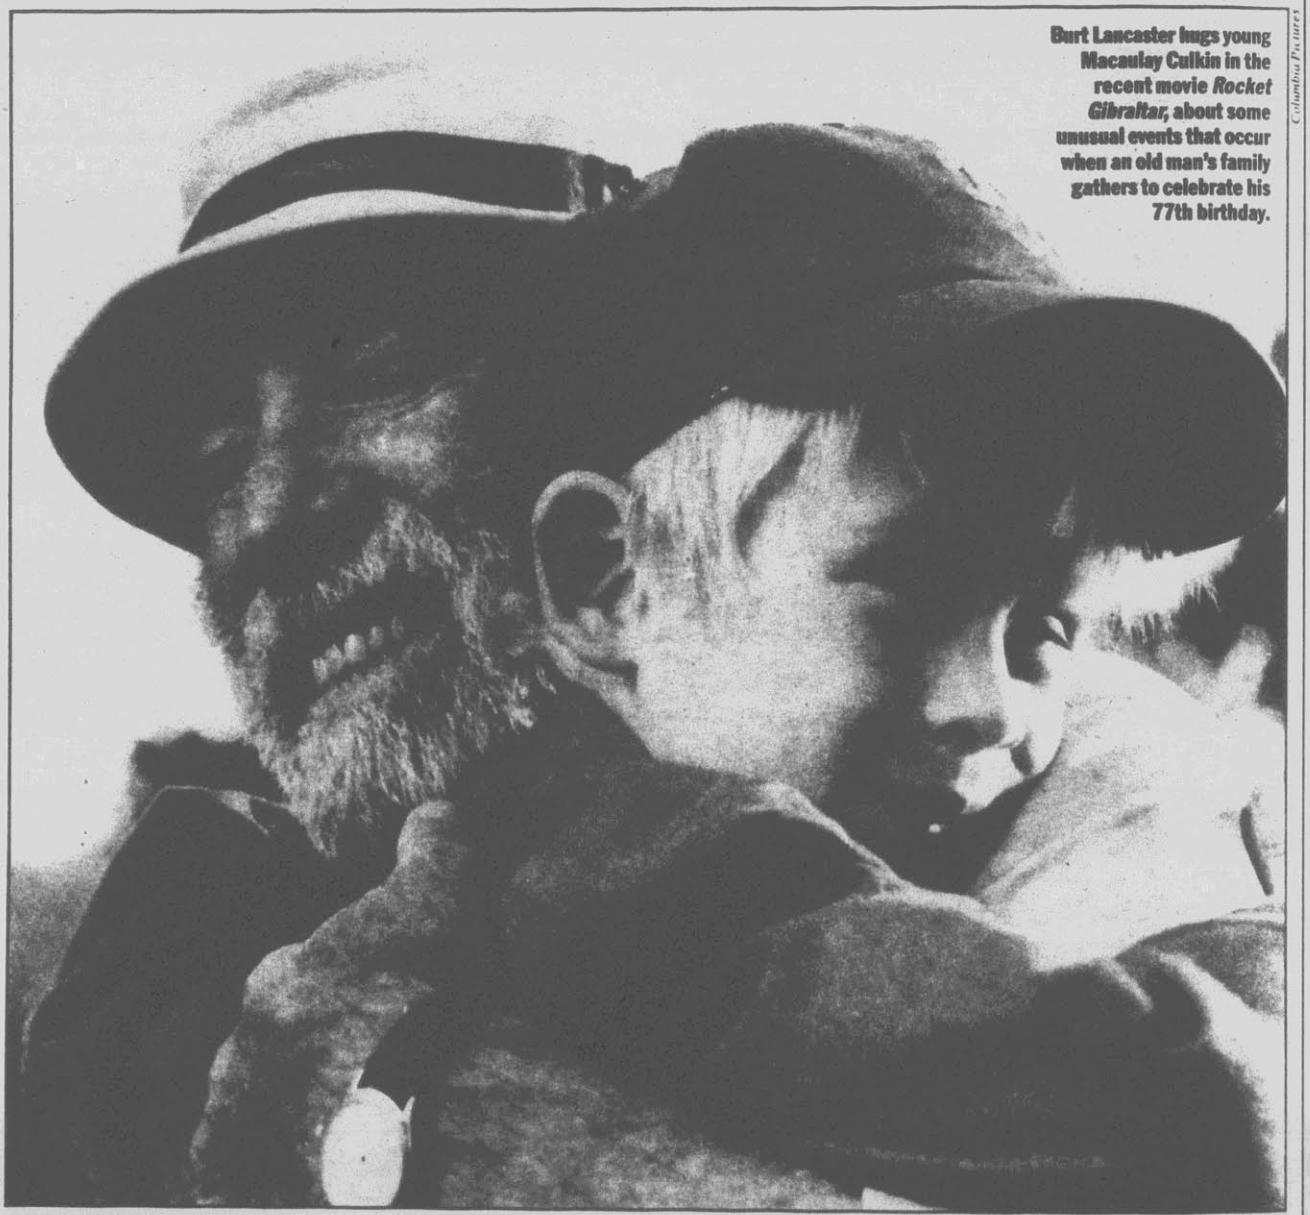
He'd Rather Take A Chance

From joining the circus as a young man to risking unpopularity, Burt Lancaster often has chosen a different path



Columbia Pictures

Burt Lancaster hugs young Macaulay Culkin in the recent movie Rocket Gibraltar, about some unusual events that occur when an old man's family gathers to celebrate his 77th birthday.

By Ovid Demaris

"WHY DON'T YOU ASK ME about taking risks? That's where you'll find the real Burt Lancaster. I determined long ago—and they thought I was crazy—not to keep doing roles I was so popular in. I was considered to be critically brilliant in them. They were great pictures, don't get me wrong, but I was still playing the basic hero role. That's why, when I made Vera Cruz, I said, 'Let me be the villain.' Well, I played the villain with a lot of charm and bull and the grinning teeth and all that, with the guns twirling, and I ran away with the picture anyway—the character was the best thing in it."

Burt Lancaster gives me a close-up look at his grinning teeth, his piercing blue eyes flashing proudly as he leans back in his chair and crosses his legs. For a man nearly 75, he looks remarkably fit. In fact, he appears a lot younger in person than he has in recent movies. His face is relatively unlined and, interestingly enough, his snow-white hair has dark roots. His dress is casual: Levi's and a long-sleeved white sports shirt.

We are in the living room of a suite in the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles. It is provided by Columbia Pictures, distributors of Lancaster's recent film, Rocket Gibraltar—a film that Lancaster is eager to discuss. But first I want to know more about the actor himself. Still, I have to be careful. Getting Burt Lancaster to sit still for an interview is no mean accomplishment. His distrust of the press is no secret, and he is known for his short temper—he once walked out during a Mike Wallace interview.

No doubt about it, he's a headstrong and independent man. And taking risks

Lester Glassner Collection

Movie Still Archives

He won an Academy Award for his portrayal of a con man turned revivalist in Elmer Gantry (1960).

Neal Peters Collection

As the bird-loving convict in Birdman of Alcatraz (1962), he garnered third Oscar nomination.

Movie Still Archives

has been part of it. As The New York Times critic Vincent Canby wrote in 1981: "For each mass-market entertainment film he made, there was always one comparatively risky 'artistic' venture."

"As an actor, selfishly perhaps," Lancaster continues, "I want a role that gives me an opportunity to explore different dimensions, to show sides of me, Burt Lancaster, that maybe people haven't seen before. You always strive for something that's a little beyond you and maybe not quite attainable, but you have to reach for it. That's why I always tried to do different kinds of pictures.

"Like The Leopard, for example. There's a movie that never made a nickel. I played the part of a Sicilian nobleman. Most people don't care about this business of royalty, but I did it because it was a wonderful role. I got involved in it. I read the book and loved it. Well, in spite of magnificent reviews in Europe, the reviewers here said Lancaster was ridiculous in the picture."

He pauses, his eyes narrowing. "Now, 20 years later, the picture was rereleased, and the big critics raved about it. So I tend to have a cynical attitude toward critics—not that they don't mean what they say, but I'm not sure they're qualified to make a proper judgment. I don't know what changed in The Leopard. It's the same movie. As we used to say in the old days, 'We make a picture, have a preview in Hollywood, get marvelous reviews. We put it on a train, and when it arrives in New York, it stinks. What happened to it on the train?'"

Another risky venture was Atlantic City, in which Lancaster played an aging numbers runner and gangland gofer. It earned him his fourth Oscar nomination and his second Best Actor award from the New York Film Critics Circle. Yet his performance seemed so natural, as if he wasn't exerting any energy.

"The energy is pouring out," says Lancaster, "but, you see, that's home. I know the Atlantic City story. I know these characters. I played the Steel Pier there. I lived among them in New York. I knew the guys that were the gangsters. I never had any dealings with them, but I knew what was going on. They knew I was an all-right guy—like, I never did anything that involved them or hurt them, so they liked me. That's as far as it went."

AP/Wide World

Best Actor and Actress for 1960—Oscars to Lancaster and Liz Taylor (Butterfield 8).

Born on Nov. 2, 1913, the fourth of five children, Burton Stephen Lancaster grew up in East Harlem. Back in those days, this section of New York City was made up mostly of Jewish and Italian immigrants. "We were the only Irish family on the block," he says.

Lancaster credits Union Settlement House for saving him from the mean streets of the neighborhood. He acted in plays in its community theater. "I was working in shows constantly," he recalls, "and the director thought I had a great deal of talent. When I was 11, he brought people from the American Laboratory Theatre to see me in a Booth Tarkington play, and they approached my mother, offering a scholarship to study acting. But I wouldn't have any part of that sissy stuff—I was only doing it to go to summer camp."

When he graduated from DeWitt Clinton High School in 1930, Union Settlement House gave him a scholarship to New York University. During his freshman year, something happened that would dramatically alter the course of his life.

"I came to the gym at the settlement house to study," he says. "It was quiet in the early afternoon, and this man was working on a horizontal bar. He was in his middle 30s, magnificently built."

His voice lowers, and you can feel the awe of that young man of nearly 60 years ago.

"He was doing wonderful things—giant swings, all that kind of stuff—and I'm sitting there, watching him. Finally, hesitantly, I said to him, 'Gee, that's wonderful.' We struck up a conversation, and I said, 'You know, I'm a physical-education major, and the first thing I have to do every day is a two-hour program. And I can't do anything. I'm good at things where I move around—I'm fast and shifty, I play basketball—but when it comes to standing on my head on bars, I'm terrible.'

"His name is Charles 'Curley' Brent, and he's still alive somewhere on Long Island. 'Well,' he said to me, 'if you like, I'd be happy to help you,' which was very sweet. I called my friend, Nick Cravat, and we worked with Curley nearly two years. At which time I said to Nick, 'Let's see if we can join the circus.'

"We took off in a little Model A Ford, with about $30 in our pockets and a copy of Billboard magazine to help us follow the routes. Our first job paid $3 a week, but when you're 19... In those days, we didn't know where to spend it. We saved $2. What did we need money for? We didn't smoke or drink. On a date, you took a girl for a walk, bought her a soda or took her to the movies—10 cents.

continued

"You always strive for something that's a little beyond you and maybe not quite attainable, but you have to reach for it. That's why I always tried to do different kinds of pictures."

"It was a great life. Doing an act in front of people—pretty important fella, you know. Feeling like a million dollars, strong enough to lift a building, and hearing the plaudits of the people, such as they were, for a little cockamamie act. But it didn't make any difference. For us, it was a very glamorous life, traveling all over the country."

Billed as Lang and Cravat, they did their acrobatic act for nearly seven years, working their way from little "mud shows" to the zenith of the circus world, Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey. In the meantime, he was married and divorced. When I ask Lancaster about that, he seems to struggle with the tender memory.

"I married June Ernst when I was 21," he says. "She was 18, and we lived together about three years. She wanted to be a dancer, and I didn't want to be a dancer, so we parted ways. Wonderful girl and a very nice marriage, if you can call a marriage that lasts three years 'nice.' No children, none of the encumbrances that can come out of a marriage. Even after I went to Hollywood, I used to see her occasionally. She worked in a five-and-dime store, taught dancing on the side. She had no money, yet whenever I saw her, she never wanted any, never took a penny from me. That kind of a girl—a lot of integrity and character and pride."

Lancaster met his second wife, Norma Marie Anderson, in Italy during World War II. He was with the Special Services branch of the Fifth Army, and she was a member of a USO group entertaining the troops. They married in 1946, raised five children and divorced in 1969.

After he came home from the war in 1945, another event changed the course of his life once more. He was riding in an elevator in a hotel in New York—on his way to see Norma, who worked as a secretary in the building—when an associate of the Broadway producer Irving L. Jacobs asked Lancaster if he'd read for a play, A Sound of Hunting.

"People were always telling me, 'Why don't you make the rounds of offices? You might get a part in a play. It might lead to something,'" he says. "I never went."

This time, he went. Although the play ran for only 23 performances, Lancaster's notices were good enough to earn him a screen test, which he passed with flying colors, and a seven-year contract with independent producer Hal Wallis, who wanted him for Desert Fury. While waiting for Wallis to begin filming, Lancaster was signed by Mark Hellinger to play "the Swede" opposite Ava Gardner in The Killers, based on the short story by Ernest Hemingway.

"After The Killers, I was off to the races," Lancaster says, grinning. "I got $45,000 for Brute Force, $65,000 for Criss Cross. But money was the last thing on my mind."

By the end of 1948, after only two years, Lancaster was hailed by Thomas Pryor in The New York Times Magazine as being "at the top of the Hollywood heap," his rise "regarded as something extraordinary." And he had formed his own production company with his agent, Harold Hecht, which made films that took advantage of his acrobatic skills: The Flame and the Arrow, Ten Tall Men, The Crimson Pirate (also featuring Nick Cravat) and Trapeze.

But he also insisted over the years on taking riskier roles in such movies as Come Back, Little Sheba, The Rose Tattoo, The Rainmaker, Separate Tables, Sweet Smell of Success, Birdman of Alcatraz, Conversation Piece, 1900 and The Swimmer.

"People always want me to be the hero," he says. "I want to be an actor. For instance, in the first version of Apache, I get killed in the end. United Artists went crazy. 'You can't kill Burt,' they said. I said, 'What's the problem? The whole irony is that I get killed because, for the first time in my life, I become involved with a woman and care about having a child. It gives the picture distinction.' For a while I wouldn't reshoot the scene, but I finally gave in. I never forgave myself for doing that. This was a good movie, and that ending would have made it a classic. There are very few pictures about Indians that mean anything except shooting and falling off horses—know what I mean? After that, I said, 'Never again. My life is not just my career. It's more important.'"

Lancaster has acted in five movies with Kirk Douglas (I Walk Alone, Gunfight at the OK Corral, Seven Days in May, The Devil's Disciple and Tough Guys). Although it is said that they are close friends, Lancaster tells me, "I don't know all that much about Kirk. I'll be honest with you, I know about working with him. That's different. I admire him, and I like him. He's a tough character. He's a tremendously dedicated man to his art. I imagine sometimes he rubs people the wrong way. I tend to be a little more—well, I don't want to make a value judgment, him against me—but I tend to take more things into consideration in a relationship."

In 1961, Lancaster was awarded an Oscar for his flamboyant portrayal of a hypocritical evangelist in Elmer Gantry. When I mention it, he brightens.

"A boyhood friend of mine, Tony Iovieno, whom I hadn't heard from in 30 years, wrote to me the following words, more or less: 'I've been following your career with great interest,' he said, 'and the picture I like the most is Elmer Gantry, because that's the way you acted when you were a kid in the street.'"

He laughs, shaking his head, his eyes twinkling. "I used to be so full of the devil. I used to sing and dance, clown around, all that stuff. The young Burt Lancaster loved to talk, con his way, and he loved to perform, the sheer joy of performing. There's a touch of that in Rocket Gibraltar. There's a scene where I do a stand-up comic routine, telling terrible jokes, yet I give it a certain type of bull charm. That's what I mean when I say a part is easy. You work just as hard, but you feel more comfortable when you're in that kind of a groove, when it's coming to life."

Finally we're talking about Rocket Gibraltar, and there's obviously a lot he wants to say about it.

"What does a person see in a script that makes him say, 'This will make a lovely movie'?" he asks, not waiting for an answer. "Now, I don't know if this film will do a lot of business. I'd call it a sleeper. You know, there's no sex, no guns, no runaway cars—none of the things people seem to like so much in films.

"It's a story about family. In a very simple way, it's almost not a story. You're just seeing how people behave. You have the old guy, who's like the hub of a wheel. Then you have the older sons and daughters, who are also very nice people in their own way—modern, bright.

"Then you have the children. The children live in a world that's very realistic. They're smart as a whip, these kids, but they also need and have fantasies. Because you cannot live without some fantasy. Fantasy is a kind of a dream. An illusion. It may not be practical. This man is not going on a Viking ship to some heaven, as the kids believe. It doesn't matter. You need these kinds of things to justify your life. It's something that gives you an ultimate happiness, that makes your life enjoyable.

"Because, mostly, day to day in our lives is a lot of trouble. Our sons and daughters are a pain in the neck. They're in trouble, or the kids are on dope, or the wife or husband is an alcoholic, or they haven't enough money to pay the rent. You have all these things working against you. And the children, somehow, have that magic. They haven't reached that stage in their life where they see that it's not going to be like that. And it's wonderful to have these feelings."

When I ask what it is about acting that keeps him working at his age, Lancaster smiles. "I look for certain special things to come along. Hopefully, a little cameo now and then, or a big picture, like this one—big in a sense of the role it offers. But you have to recognize that you're not the young leading man or the box-office star you used to be, and the picture is not going to sit on your shoulders 100 percent. So you don't worry about that. It's a natural diminution of power, energy, things of that kind, and the realization that new people are coming up who will take the spotlight. You have to step aside for them. You have to recognize that."

Step aside—maybe—but by no means down. "Still," he adds, "at the risk of sounding pretentious, I do feel that when something comes along that I'm right for, something that I would want to do, somebody will say, 'Wait a minute, let's get Burt Lancaster for that.'"

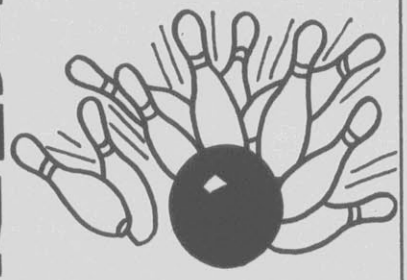
The Secret of BOWLING STRIKES!



Is there a "secret" method of throwing a strike ball? This book is the answer to the question—the question among bowlers—written by a bowler who has found a proven, workable answer!

In this unique volume, Dawson Taylor shows you the science behind winning bowling techniques, with clear, simple explanations of the reasons for "action" on the strike ball, the physics involved in the spin of the ball, and the physiology of the arm and hand movements used. With diagrams and photographs, he explores the fundamentals of the game. He also supplies actual exercises and procedures which can be carried out at home, away from the bowling alley, to help develop the skill needed to throw more and stronger strike balls.

Over 100 Photographs

Every bit of this new way to better bowling is carefully illustrated with step-by-step photographs. The camera acts as the eyes of the bowler, looking down at the various spots on which he places his feet, showing how the grip appears to the bowler's own eyes, and precisely what he sees when he looks down the alley.

THE SECRET OF BOWLING STRIKES is an exciting approach that may help every bowler to achieve the kind of explosive "action" that results in pins toppling into strikes and in increasingly higher scores. So why not order your copy today?

Angela Lansbury's Fitness Tape

Ever since Jane Fonda began minting millions through the sale of her home-video exercise tapes, other actresses—among them Raquel Welch, Victoria Principal and Debbie Reynolds—have sought to mine the same or similar territory.

One of the latest to follow suit, although with a considerable difference, is Angela Lansbury, the tall, versatile, immensely well-liked star of the TV series Murder, She Wrote. She is also the earner of three Oscar nominations for her superb work in Gaslight, The Picture of Dorian Gray and The Manchurian Candidate and the winner of four Tony Awards for her performances in the stage musicals Mame, Dear World, Gypsy and Sweeney Todd.

The actress's tape, released last month, is titled Angela Lansbury's Positive Moves: A Personal Plan for Fitness and Well-Being at Any Age. It's targeted, however, at "mature, intelligent women who are as much interested in achieving an overall happy and rewarding lifestyle as in losing a few pounds." The tape runs 50 minutes, sells for $29.95, is marketed as "a class cassette" and—according to Lansbury, who turned 63 on Oct. 16—"still comes as something of a surprise to me."

"The idea to make a fitness tape," she confesses, "was not mine. It was my agent's [Lee Stevens of the William Morris Agency]. 'Why don't you make an exercise tape?' he suggested to me. My immediate answer was 'Go on with you. I'm not interested in that. I've never been to an exercise class in my life.' Lee said, 'Just think about it.'"

Lansbury did, particularly recalling the questions her fans and friends had asked over the years: How do you keep your spirits up? How do you lose weight? What is a good, sensible diet? How do you channel your energy? How do you get people to like you?

This summer, "after a month of talking with a writer," Lansbury explains, "I finally decided to go ahead with the project. We shot the tape in my house and garden in Brentwood [a suburb of Los Angeles] so people can see how and where I live. In my opinion, it came out remarkably well. In addition to information on my favorite diets and fitness program, the tape offers some helpful hints on behavior and philosophy. It's surprisingly personal and extremely revealing of me. I hope it will be the kind of gift younger women want to give their mothers for Christmas."

Reagan's Bright Future

What will Ronald Reagan do after he leaves the White House and settles with Nancy in their exclusive digs in Bel Air, Calif.?

Will he lecture at $25,000 a talk? Begin writing his memoirs, for which he reportedly has received $1 million in advance? Will he agree, as ex-President Gerald Ford did, to sit as a director on half a dozen corporate boards at roughly $40,000 per board per year? Will he sign on as a network TV commentator? Or will he return to his first love, motion pictures?

A few weeks ago, the British press reported that Reagan will play himself in a 1990 movie, Thumbs Up, which tells the moving story of Jim Brady, the White House press secretary who was badly wounded by John Hinckley Jr. in his 1981 assassination attempt on Reagan. Supposedly Gene Hackman will star as Brady in the film, to be produced by David Puttnam. Hardly anyone in Hollywood believes this casting item. They chalk it up to Puttnam publicity.

What they do believe about Reagan is that once he returns to California, he will be able to do anything he desires, within the limits of his age and health. On Feb. 6, 1989, Reagan will be 78. For probably the first time in his adult life, he'll have all the money he wants—most of it from federal and state pensions, plus interest and dividends from his savings and investments—an annual minimum income estimated at $250,000.

Moreover, he will be in demand by a multitude of corporations as an executive, a producer or a figurehead. "Take CBS, the Los Angeles Dodgers, 20th Century-Fox, MCA," suggests a talent agent who has known Reagan for years. "Is there one of these companies," he asks, "that wouldn't want him for corporate window-dressing alone? Reagan is easily the best public-relations man in the country. Whatever it is that he yearns for—even lazying around and not doing much of anything—he can call the shots. If it's a bit of acting he relishes, just for old time's sake, he can play anything from a cameo role to a lead."

In short, anything Ronald Reagan wants he can have.

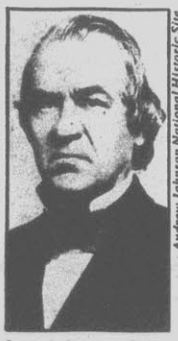
They Never Went To College



Eliza McCardle and Andrew Johnson: Our 17th President never attended school, instead learned from future First Lady

Of the 39 men who have served to date as President of the United States, nine (but only one of them in this century) never attended college. How many of these Presidents can you name?

Of these nine men, four consistently have been included by historians when compiling their lists of the top 10 U.S. Presidents. The 10 usually are ranked in the following order:

1) Abraham Lincoln
2) George Washington
3) Franklin D. Roosevelt
4) Thomas Jefferson
5) Theodore Roosevelt
6) Woodrow Wilson
7) Andrew Jackson
8) Harry Truman
9) James K. Polk
10) John Adams

In point of fact, the United States Constitution mandates no educational requirements for the position of President. Our 17th President, Andrew Johnson, was bound by law early in life to work as a tailor's apprentice in North Carolina, and he did not attend school for a single day. When he was 18, Johnson married 16-year-old Eliza McCardle, and it was she who helped to teach the future President how to read and write.

Too Many People

One of the world's major problems, if not its leading one, is overpopulation. There currently are more than 5.1 billion people on earth, increasing at a yearly rate of approximately 1.7%. If that rate continues—according to Carl Haub and Mary Kent, two demographers with the Population Reference Bureau—the global population will reach 6 billion in 10 years and will double in just 40 years.

Orient Express In the Orient

Vacationers and others who like to travel by train may look forward to a new luxury railroad service between Singapore and Thailand, a distance of nearly 1250 miles. If plans go well, it will start up in mid-1990 and will be run by the Venice Simplon-Orient Express, the same company that now conducts the Orient Express railroad service from London to Venice via Paris, Zurich, Innsbruck and Verona.

The original Orient Express, which operated for more than 90 years between London and Istanbul via Paris, went out of business in 1977. Five years later, new hands took it over. At $1300 for a one-way trip from London to Venice ($1190 in the off-season), they seem to be doing well.

Beepers Not Allowed

In Philadelphia recently, the school board ruled that students no longer will be permitted to bring beepers or electronic pagers to school. Those devices, it declared, are instruments of the drug trade. The board voted unanimously to ban and confiscate all unauthorized beepers and to expel or suspend all students carrying them.

School officials have long maintained that such paging devices are used to notify student drug-dealers when and where other students are in the market for a drug buy. There is no doubt that sophisticated sales techniques have invaded many of the nation's high schools.

Why I'm Voting

BY YAKOV SMIRNOFF

We asked Yakov Smirnoff, the Soviet-born comedian who emigrated to America and became a U.S. citizen, to tell our readers why he plans to vote.

I WAS SWORN IN AS AN AMERICAN citizen on the Fourth of July. That's a national holiday. As a matter of fact, it was a national holiday before I was sworn in, but to me it has become my own personal national holiday—which, of course, I don't mind sharing with everybody else.

I have one other national holiday I'd love to share with my fellow citizens. It's called Election Day. Most of you have been celebrating it for years, but for me Nov. 8, 1988, will be the first time.

Now, of course, I've voted before. In Russia we used to vote regularly—very regularly. They told us when to vote, where to vote and whom to vote for. No problem. There are advantages that way—you don't have to compare candidates, follow campaigns, listen to debates.

I know that a lot of changes are going on in the Soviet Union today, and I sincerely hope the election process will be among them. But I'm glad that no changes in the election system are going on here. Apparently you've had the same one for years, and it still works.

When it was explained to me that in America my voice would be heard, I was confused. America is such a big country, and I have such a little voice. How will anyone hear me? Then I learned there is one place where everybody's voice speaks volumes. It's the voting booth—a wonderful invention, and definitely not Russian in origin.

In the Soviet Union, I and my fellow citizens had nothing to say about big decisions, like who represents us in and out of government, what quality of life we can provide for our children, what our country stands for and what our country stands against. Here, in the voting booth, I control all that. So do you—as long as we do it together.

So when I step into the voting booth for the first time on Tuesday, it will be no less memorable a moment than that Fourth of July when I took my Oath of Allegiance to the United States of America.

I'll always remember that, right after I had been sworn in, I felt like I had been given a life membership in the greatest country club in the world.

Next Tuesday, I pay my dues.

What a country!

Loving—whether it's a mate, a parent, a friend or a colleague—can be difficult. Here are some ways to make it easier.

Bob Lewine

HOW TO LOVE ANOTHER PERSON

LOVE CONJURES UP DEEP FEELINGS that can be overwhelming. We may experience love as blissful, agonizing, imprisoning, liberating, frustrating or fulfilling—sometimes simultaneously.

How can we—you and I—love another person? Here are some ways I have learned:

1. We must be able to love ourselves first, before we can love another person. When our self-esteem is at rock-bottom, we inescapably project our lack of self-worth onto any relationship or partner. True, our self-esteem can be made healthier when we feel loved. But if we can't love ourselves, we can't believe anyone else can love us either. We won't let another person love us. The idea of being loved is so powerful that it scares some people away: A college student startled me during a counseling session when he blurted out that, after being intimate with a young woman, he had told her, "Thanks for not saying 'I love you.'"

Unable to love and value himself, he doubted anyone else could love him. The poor fellow could neither give nor receive love. He needed to start seeing himself as okay—as a person whom someone else could love.

2. In a close relationship, remember that two people are not peas in a pod. Don't smother.

BY MALCOLM BOYD

Allow space for breathing and for elbow room. Don't be jealous of the other's existence apart from you.

Prove your love by being flexible; don't try to exert control. A loving relationship means the center of the universe is you and the other person—two different people. Loving another calls for mutuality, compromise and meeting each other's needs.

3. See people as they really are—not as we wish they were. We're all changing constantly, and a relationship with another person won't stay the same either. Keep the lines of communication open, or someone you love might quickly become a stranger. Even if it hurts, try to keep a clear picture of your relationship. Try to interpret "danger signals" in familiar actions. Challenge puzzling statements and ask to have them made clear. Only then can you identify and begin to deal positively with a problem—together.

Friends of mine had a gifted, healthy son whom they provided with a first-rate education. A golden future seemed to await their boy. But somewhere along the line, unknown to his parents, a horror story began. When they finally discovered the truth—that their boy was an addict—he already had stolen treasured family possessions to pay for drugs and was in serious trouble.

It is essential to keep the channels of mutual expression open and to hear all there is to hear—not just the pleasant messages. Doing this can save a marriage, a family, a friendship, a community or a job.

4. Set aside special "ritual time" to spend with someone you love. And even if yours is a busy life, don't let anything interfere with this daily ritual. Make it your "golden time." At home, try to sit down for shared conversation and confidences. This is a brief but invaluable unloading period when the day's luggage gets put away. "If I can't tell you about it, whom can I tell?" That's the point.

5. Acknowledge that even superficial relationships matter—because when we respond, we show love. Perhaps where we work—or even tucked away in our family—there's someone with whom we must interact frequently but whom we regard as a nuisance. We maintain a slick, surface comradeship that's a convenience and a lie.

Imagine this scene: You're at work. A co-worker from whom you have always kept your distance appears before you unexpectedly. He talks rapidly and is quite distraught. You're dumbfounded. Abruptly, he sits down, holds his head in his hands and cries.

He explains, between harsh sobs, that his life is in shambles. He has been under the most extraordinary stress but felt he could not share his raw, genuine feelings with anyone. In this moment, to love means to be able and willing to listen. This man is here, sharing a moment of pain, reaching out. His mask has dropped. To listen rather than move away, to give without thought of getting back, is to love this person. Surprisingly, when we give in such cases, we get back a great deal in how we feel about others and ourselves.

6. Turn hate around. Hate is a curious, perverse side of love. And if we hate someone, we're not indifferent to him at all. When we attempt to ignore the pain and recurring anger hate causes us, we focus on it even more—especially in our subconscious. We need to ask ourselves: Why does this person seem such a threat? Are we, in fact, alike in ways we'd rather not acknowledge?

I've found considerable healing and joy in getting to know a few people I'd thought I hated. By carefully working through layer upon layer of feelings, we turned hate around. In the process, I found new friends and learned about myself.

7. Walk in another person's shoes—that's empathy, one of the best ways to love. Empathy really is the business of the heart. I learned a great deal about it recently when my 90-year-old mother, Beatrice, fell and broke her right wrist while she was gardening in her backyard. She felt an enormous loss of strength and independence, as well as pain, as a consequence of the accident. Her life suddenly had turned upside down.

Beatrice is warm and caring and always has been active and committed to others. She worked in a variety of occupations for 50 years, and, when she retired at 70, she began nearly 20 years of volunteer work at a children's hospital.

Since her fall, Beatrice has had good and bad days. Through them, by walking in her shoes, I've grown to understand her more deeply than before. She tires easily. There are special errands to be done by me, chores I had never noticed before. She needs to be listened to. And, although she's hard of hearing, it's important for her to hear—and understand—what I'm saying. Sometimes I feel she is being stubborn when she opposes what I honestly believe is best for her. But I could be wrong. My mother's call for help is one of love, and it requires a loving response.

To love another person requires much of us: Growing less selfish. Seeing a wider universe outside one's private preserve. Celebrating a life, or lives, other than your own. Welcoming diversity. Being open to change.

But loving another person also rewards us: We become bearers of love in the universe when we love another person. And loving helps us create a warmer, better world. Each new day in our lives becomes a new chapter—a new Act Two in our life's drama—and it's shared.

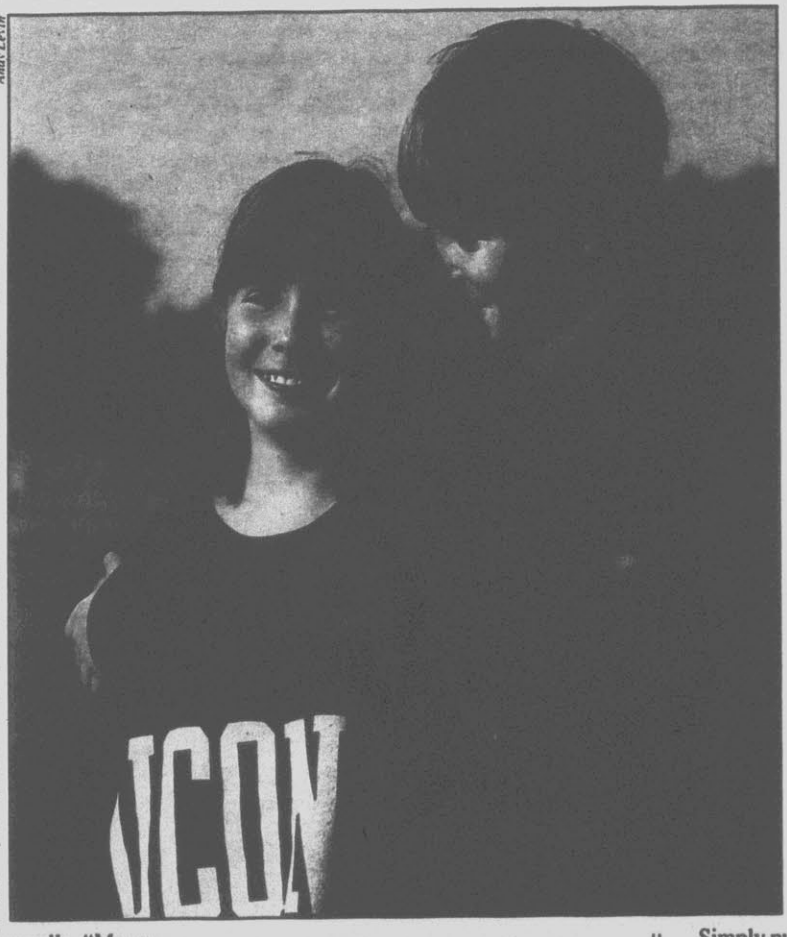
A condition that goes back to Caesar and Socrates now is controllable, thanks to new techniques and drugs

Finally, Some Answers To Epilepsy



Andy Levin

Beth Usher, 9, with her brother Brian, 11. Surgery ended Beth's daily seizures.

THE SCENE IS AN ordinary one. Couches. Small tables. Books. John Natale, 28, an appraiser for the federal government, lounges in an easy chair. A movie plays on the TV set.

But—take a closer look: There are wires extending downward through the hair at the back of John's head. The wires run from little metal disks glued to his scalp, through a cable ending in a box tied on his belt. And, up in each of the room's four corners near the ceiling, TV cameras follow his every movement.

John is a patient at the Veterans Administration Hospital in the Bronx in New York City. Dr. James Rowan, the chief neurologist, is searching for the cause of John's strange seizures. In another room, technicians observe their patient on TV monitors. A slab of white paper moves slowly out of a machine. On its surface, 16 pens write wiggly lines. From the wires the doctors are getting an electrical picture of John's brain. Suddenly, John begins to tremble and shake. He falls to the floor, his body writhing. Later he is shown a videotape of his seizure.

"I was bouncing around, uttering odd sounds, dribbling, mouth all foamy, clamping on my jaw and tongue," John recalls. "My arms got stiff. I was making odd animal noises. I was totally exhausted and went into a sleep."

While this was happening to him, the wiggly lines on the paper went wild. An electrical storm sweeps through his brain whenever John has seizures. Because no doctor had seen his fits before this, the diagnosis of John's illness had been in doubt. But because this seizure was monitored, it was concluded that the cause was neither fever nor emotional upset.

John is now one of 2 million Americans diagnosed as having epilepsy. Doctors have prescribed Tegretol, one of several anti-seizure drugs available. John now suffers a seizure only every two months or so and, thanks to his medicine, leads a normal life.

"Sometimes my illness keeps me from work," John says, "but I can function better. I know I will always have seizures, but medication can control them."

More than 500,000 Americans with epilepsy are not so lucky. They have never received a clear diagnosis or definitive treatment. They continue to have seizures; they cannot drive cars; they are often avoided by employers and neighbors. Many become shut-ins.

Simply put, the electrical storm in the brain that causes the seizures occurs because all or part of the brain is damaged due to injury or to disease. Epilepsy is not emotional, but physical.

The good news. Ten years ago, doctors controlled only 50 percent of their epilepsy cases. Now, reports The Epilepsy Foundation of America, the number is as high as 85 percent, thanks to new diagnostic techniques, drugs and surgery that removes part of the brain. The modern war against epilepsy has begun.

"Our drug treatment today is far better than in the past," says Dr. Rowan. "Our problem is that many patients fail to get a good diagnosis or they get the wrong dose of a drug or the wrong drug entirely. It's sad, because we now can control nearly every case of epilepsy."

Epilepsy is a Greek word meaning "to seize." In ancient days, people with epilepsy were thought to have divine visitations. But by medieval times, victims were said to be possessed by Satan. Doctors could do nothing, although by 150 A.D. Galen, a Greek physician, knew that the brain was involved in this illness. Napoleon, Julius Caesar, Socrates, Tchaikovsky—all had epileptic seizures, and all went untreated.

Simply put, the electrical storm in the brain occurs because some or all of the brain is damaged or because of a genetic predisposition to the disorder. A blow to the head, some toxic substances, lack of oxygen during birth—all can injure brain cells. So can infections, tumors, strokes or other circulation problems.

Epilepsy is not a mental disease—not an emotional or behavioral problem. Long ago, psychiatrists believed it caused criminal or violent behavior. Science has since shown that persons with epilepsy have the same kinds of psychological problems—or lack of them—as persons with other chronic physical diseases. And those with epilepsy are no more or less criminal.

Drug treatment. Up to the mid-19th century, doctors had no tools to deal with epilepsy. In 1857, a British physician reported success in quelling seizures with compounds of bromine. Sixty years later, phenobarbital also was found to control the spells. Both, however, have unpleasant side effects.

BY EARL UBELL

Then, in 1938, two American physicians, H. Houston Merritt and Tracy Jackson Putnam, discovered Dilantin, a drug that quieted the spells in most patients without too many side effects. Dilantin freed thousands of patients who, without it, may have been kept locked up.

Since then, science has created new drugs, and more are on the way. Dilantin controls most seizures. For various types of seizures, doctors also prescribe Zarontin, Klonopin, Depakene, Depakote, Mysoline, Tegretol and Tranxene.

The drugs do have side effects—Dilantin can disrupt coordination, Tegretol can produce blurred vision, and Depakene can cause hair loss. The doctor, ideally, tries to bring the dose to just the point where the side effects and the seizures both disappear.

Marion Clignet, 24, of Aspen Hill, Md., takes Tegretol to prevent the seizures that began when she was 17. The drug controls her condition so well that Marion, a cyclist, hopes to qualify for bicycle racing in the Olympics in 1992. She puts in 300 to 400 miles a week, plus weight lifting and stair climbing.

"I'm not concerned about having a seizure while riding," she says. "At first my family was scared for me, but I proved that I could do it."

Surgery. If the spells persist, doctors consider surgery—cutting out the damaged part of the brain. But first they must map the brain to avoid cutting out parts that control vital functions—speech, hearing, sight, writing, muscular movements.

In the past, doctors kept the patient awake during surgery and mapped his brain during the operation by touching or electrically stimulating various parts. For example, if they put a small electric current through the speech area of the brain, the patient would stop talking. But there's a limit to how long you can keep a patient in the operating room.

Now, doctors map a patient's brain by putting a network of up to 100 electrodes inside the skull and under the dura—the fibrous tissue that covers the brain. The electrodes may stay in for weeks—patients walk around with them. The scientists record the brain's electrical activity to spot damaged regions.

Dr. Ronald Lesser, director of Johns Hopkins Epilepsy Center in Baltimore, is one of the proponents of this method. "In follow-up after surgery, patients do remarkably well," he says. "You would expect that taking out an area of the brain would create lots of damage afterward, but usually it doesn't."

Mrs. Kathleen Fitts, 36, of Oakdale, Conn., had surgery twice—in 1970 and again last year at Yale-New Haven Medical Center. "The first time, the doctors went in blind," she says. "They took out tissue they thought was scar tissue. They left some behind." But last year surgeons identified all the safe and dangerous areas and removed part of Kathleen's brain. She also takes Mysoline and Tegretol. No more seizures.

As many as 16 different drugs a day could not control the blackouts of Marty Downing, 39, wife of a minister in Delmar, Md. In January 1988, in a 6½-hour operation, Dr. Sumio Uematsu, a neurosurgeon at Johns Hopkins, took out Mrs. Downing's right temporal lobe—a quarter of her brain. Afterward her left thumb and index finger were numb and remained so. But the blackouts are gone.

"I am so much different now," she says. "I can teach Sunday school again. I ride my bike. I put on a dress for the first time in 14 years. I had to wear pants all the time before, because I kept falling down stairs."

"It's not simple. It's not like getting your tonsils out," says Dr. Uematsu, "but we do help 75 percent of our patients. The rest are unchanged."

For Beth Usher, 9, of Storrs, Conn., surgery was the only way to stop her seizures—up to 100 a day. Surgeons at Johns Hopkins cut out the left brain. Beth went into a coma for five weeks. After she regained consciousness, the right side of her body was paralyzed, but she learned to walk again with a limp. She has limited use of her right hand. "But there has not been one seizure since the surgery," says her mother, Kathy. "Beth gets stronger every day."

Fewer and fewer people hide having epilepsy now that drugs can control their seizures. Rep. Tony Coelho (D., Calif.) is the first Congressman to announce that he has epilepsy. "When I ran for Congress, my advisers told me not to talk about it," he recalls. "When I got elected, I decided to go public about it. I had my last seizure in 1982. I ride cutting horses. I am a runner. Nothing slows me down."

First Aid For Seizures

IF YOU SEE SOMEONE HAVING A SEIZURE, stay calm and follow these rules:

- Turn the person gently on his or her side to keep the air passages free of saliva.
- DO NOT force a tongue depressor or anything else into the person's mouth—people cannot swallow their tongues. Also, if he clamps down on a hard object, a tooth or his jaw could be broken.
- Remove potentially harmful objects.
- Remove victim's glasses; loosen his clothing.
- Don't try to hold the person down: You cannot stop a seizure, which usually lasts only a few seconds or minutes.
- Stay nearby: When the person becomes alert, help him or her to get reoriented.
- If you have doubts about the person's well-being, you may want to phone a doctor.

'Yes' answers could be a sign of a medical problem.

Four great places for the family to visit

When You Hit The Road

THE WIDE-OPEN ROAD AND A FULL TANK OF GAS provide endless opportunities for adventure. In recent years, my husband, son and I have chosen car trips at home over travel abroad. Along with uninterrupted time to unravel and share our individual and collective dreams, these trips have left us with a storehouse of memories.

I keep the snapshots and postcards we pick up along the way in an album. I can open it at any page and recall a moment, such as the Thanksgiving Day when we missed being with friends and family at home—until we drove into the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia to Beagle Gap, where we were awestruck by the 360-degree view and felt small in contrast to the surrounding waves of land... Or the drive we took long ago, during which our son, then 4, assumed that Casper, Wyo., was the home of the Friendly Ghost cartoon character and that the slot machines in Reno were a miraculous sort of vending machine that dispensed silver dollars by the dozens.

BY JANE CIABATTARI

There are countless memorable drives around America. Following are several of our favorites:

• Starting from Washington, D.C., Atlanta or other points south, center a driving trip in Charlottesville, Va. Settle into this university town, and you can range widely. There are Civil War battlefields, historic sites such as Monticello, home of Thomas Jefferson, and Ash Lawn-Highland, the nearby estate of his friend, James Monroe. The University of Virginia, designed by Jefferson, is the centerpiece of the town. Within a half-hour's drive, you can be in the wilderness of Shenandoah National Park.

Charlottesville is at the junction of U.S. 29 and U.S. 250. Follow 250 west to Shenandoah National Park and Skyline Drive.

Monticello: Home of Thomas Jefferson.

• On the West Coast, you can center a family driving trip in Santa Cruz, Calif. It's a resort town suited for all ages, with its boardwalk and sheltered beach, redwood groves, hiking trails and charming Spanish-style downtown mall. Within an hour or so of driving south, you can be at the Royal Presidio Chapel in Monterey or, a bit farther, in Carmel, where English tea is served at 4 o'clock at the Tuck Box and other quaint cafés.

North of Santa Cruz, you can stop by Año Nuevo State Park, breeding ground of elephant seals (you also can see migrating whales on their way by in the winter months). Drive north two hours, and you're in San Francisco.

Santa Cruz is on California Highway 1, the coast highway, and can be reached from the north by U.S. 101 or I-280 to California Highway 17. Follow Highway 1 south to Monterey, Carmel, Big Sur... and Los Angeles.

• If you like mountains and wide-open skies, try a Montana loop around the crest of the Rockies (this trip is best, obviously, in the warm months). The jumping-off point is Butte, Mont., a historic mining town. While there, you can visit the Berkeley Pit, a 1500-foot-deep open-pit copper mine, and see Our Lady of the Rockies. About the size of the Statue of Liberty, it's anchored 8510 feet up on the Continental Divide.

THE NO BONES BRA Almost As Comfortable As Wearing No Bra At All $9.95

Fitting Facts

CHECKING YOUR BRA FOR A PROPER FIT

Notice any bulges over the front or sides of your bra? Maybe you've got a cup that's too small—or a bra band that's too tight. A "rule of thumb" for telling whether or not your bra band fits correctly is: try to slip your thumb underneath it. If you can do so comfortably, the fit is fine.

Now, There's a bra that gives you all the soothing comfort and support you've always dreamed of—with no underwire or bones at all! With the amazing "No Bones Bra," you can say "goodbye" to wire supports and bones that bind, cut and irritate. You get full-figured support that feels great!

- FULL FIGURED SUPPORT WITHOUT BONES OR UNDERWIRES
- FRONT HOOK CLOSING
- EXTRA WIDE 2-WAY STRETCH STRAPS
- SOFT, COTTON-LINED LACE CUPS
- POWERNET LEOTARD BACK

HIT THE ROAD/continued

From Butte, drive north. You'll pass streams and mountains before reaching the university town of Missoula. Beyond is Flathead Lake, known for its water sports and cherry orchards, and finally Glacier National Park. After a visit, drive along spectacular Going-to-the-Sun Road to U.S. 89, through the Blackfoot Indian reservation. (Stop at Browning for a look at the Museum of the Plains Indian.) Farther south is the state capital, Helena. Once known as Last Chance Gulch, in the 1880s it boasted more millionaires per capita than any other U.S. city. Helena still has an Old West flavor.

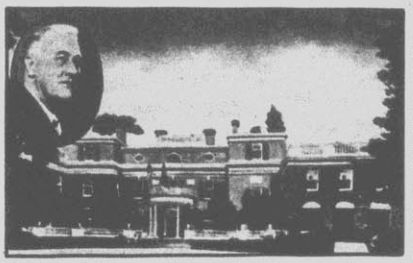
Butte is at the interstate hub of I-90 and I-15. Drive north along I-90 to Missoula, take U.S. 93 to Flathead Lake, then U.S. 2 to Glacier National Park. Follow Going-to-the-Sun Road to U.S. 89 at Browning. Follow 89 south to U.S. 287. Past Helena, it becomes I-15, which takes you back to Butte.



Hyde Park: Home of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

• The Hudson River Valley, approached from New York City or New England, is another driving loop with variety. You can spend time in New York City or upstate, in Albany, the state capital. Then drive up one side of the Hudson and down the other. On the east side of the river, you'll see historic houses (Franklin Delano Roosevelt's home and the Vanderbilt mansion in Hyde Park, for instance), along with antique shops, orchards and farms in the foothills of the Berkshires. Stop at Philipsburg Manor, Sunnyside and Van Cortlandt Manor in Westchester County, and Montgomery Place in Dutchess County, for a tour of the gardens, a picnic or for special holiday events. On the west side, you'll find West Point, the Shawangunk and Catskill mountains. Stop along the way to wander mountain trails and sit beside a stream or waterfall.

U.S. 9 goes up the Hudson on the east from New York City to Albany; on the west side, follow 9W for a leisurely drive, or swing over to I-87 if you want to make faster time.

How To Make The Ride A Pleasure

BEFORE YOU TAKE OFF ON THAT journey, check the car for safety (in running order, with workable jack and up-to-date auto-club membership) and prepare for everyone's comfort.

• Make sure the driver's seat is properly adjusted to the driver's size. Add a cushion for lower-back support. Make sure the rearview mirror provides full vision.

• Seat belts should be comfortable for every passenger—adjust them before you start. Youngsters in car seats should be in the backseat. Older children can be made more comfortable with pillows and blankets.

• Stock the car with an ice chest and snacks that travel well: fruit juices and sodas in easy pop-open cans, raw fruits and vegetables, raisins, nuts, popcorn, trail mix, individual packages of dried cereal and tuna, bread, peanut butter and cookies. If you include sandwiches, hard-boiled eggs or other perishables, make sure you eat them while they are fresh. Also include a large thermos of coffee or other hot beverages for adults, and ice in plastic containers or bags. (Freeze water in a large plastic jug, and you have a coolant for your ice chest that melts into cold drinking water during the day.)

• Designate one adult or teenage family member as the tour guide for each leg of the trip. Reading about the region and its history aloud from a book, or telling stories gleaned from research, adds texture to the passing countryside.

• Long car drives can frustrate youngsters. Bring along audiotapes and Walkman headsets (new offerings each day add variety). Favorite games and songs also provide amusement—and memories for the years to come.

Learning To Read And Getting Diplomas

Cookie king Amos helps others learn

It may surprise you how many people learn to read as adults—or are high school dropouts who take the GED (high school equivalency exam) and go on to successful careers. Wally "Famous" Amos is one of them. Now, Amos and Olympic track star Bruce Jenner (who was considered "slow" in school because of dyslexia) are featured on PBS programs to help other adult learners: GED on TV 43 half-hour segments to help people prepare for the GED; Learn to Read, a 30-part basic reading series; and Another Page, 15 segments for intermediate readers. Call 1-800-228-8813 to ask about these programs and the free tutorial help available to students in many areas of the country.

Thrills for the Ear

Terror, horror, thrills: What is your pleasure? Peter Straub's Koko is about a group of Vietnam vets who get more than they bargained for when they search for a strange killer who may be their wartime buddy. In Robin Cook's Mortal Fear, a doctor's investigation of a series of unlikely deaths leads him to a sinister biological plot (S&S, $14.95 each). Omni Audio Experience II includes an eerie dramatization of Arthur C. Kate Nelligan

Eddie Adams

Kate Nelligan—hailed in a review as "a working class Rita Hayworth"—could be the brightest star on Broadway this season. And she loves it!

KATE NELLIGAN HAS MADE SOME BIG movies and done three Broadway plays. For each play, she was nominated for a Tony Award—the theater's most significant honor. Yet most people don't know who she is. I asked if that bothered her. "No," said Kate, shrugging off fame. "My friends know my name."

That's an actress you've got to love, and I think when she opens for the fourth time on Broadway—on Nov. 10 in Spoils of War—not only her pals will know who Kate is. We all will. When she starred in Spoils off-Broadway last May, she had the usually staid New York Times hailing her as "ravishing...remarkable ...a working-class Rita Hayworth." I wondered what she thought of that. Kate laughed and said, "I loved it, because I'd done so many high-class roles and because I come from the working class."

She grew up in Toronto, where her father was in charge of the ice rinks and recreational parks, dropped out of college to study acting in England, ran out of money and returned to Canada to teach dancing at an Arthur Murray school. But she hadn't quit on England, or acting, and with astonishing cheek Kate wrote to 150 wealthy Canadian families she didn't even know, asking them to underwrite her studies. Improbably, the money came in, and for the next nine years she was a Londoner, winning rave reviews for her stage performances and making some good movies, like Eye of the Needle—and some bad ones.

In 1981, Nelligan went Hollywood. "It just wasn't my town," she told me. "I didn't have an address book or friends or a home or a car." The following year she was in New York, where she bought a place and set out to shed the English accent she'd picked up. "Now it's home," she says, "the only home I have."

Is she ever envious of the huge salaries people like Meryl Streep are paid? It never seems to have occurred to her. "I'm being paid a lot of money to do fine work," she told me. "That's worth a fortune. I would be envying the person who got this role [in Spoils of War] if I didn't and I were sitting out there in the audience. That's envy!"

When she played the title role of the Greek mother in Eleni, a movie which the First Family declared a favorite—Kate was invited to the White House for dinner. "I sat next to George Shultz," she recalled, "and on the other side was the Aga Khan. I didn't know what to call him: Aga? Khan? So I settled on 'my friend.' Walter Payton [of the Chicago Bears] was there, and I really wanted to be sitting next to him. I really get excited about great athletes."

One other thing about White House dinners: "They send this squeaky-clean Marine to the hotel to escort you, and then afterward, at midnight, he disappears like a pumpkin."

BORN: March 16, 1951, in London, Ontario.
THEATER: In London, plays include Barefoot in the Park, 1972; Misalliance, 1973; A Streetcar Named Desire, 1973; The Playboy of the Western World, 1973; Knuckle, 1974; Heartbreak House, 1975. On Broadway, plays include Plenty, 1982; A Moon for the Misbegotten, 1984; Serious Money, 1988.
FILMS: Include The Romantic Englishwoman, 1975 (debut); The Count of Monte Cristo, 1976; Dracula, 1979; Eye of the Needle, 1980; Without a Trace, 1983; Eleni, 1985.

BRADY'S BITS

Nelligan told me her play, Spoils of War, would open first in Toronto, her hometown, then come into New York for previews. "Yes," she said, "there'll be a certain amount in the papers about 'hometown girl makes good.' But that's fine. We want to sell tickets." Nelligan wants to have a child someday, but when I asked about marriage, she teasingly said only, "Maybe." What about commercials—would she do them for the right money? Kate seemed puzzled. "I don't know what I could sell," she said. I dunno, Kate... You sold me.

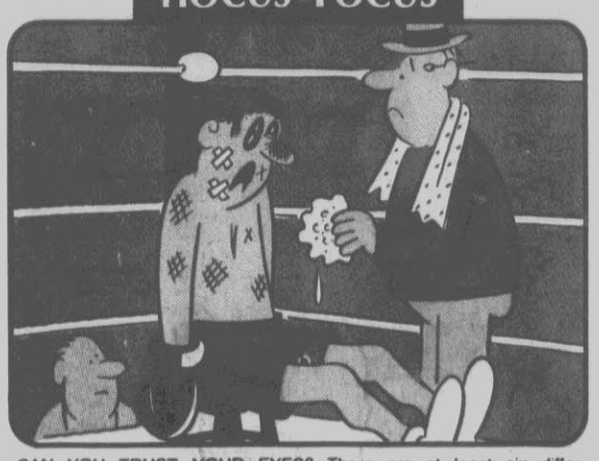
HOCUS-FOCUS



CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Head is tilted. 2. Waistband is different. 3. Sponge is smaller. 4. Towel is shorter. 5. Stripes are missing. 6. Pail is missing.

• SEE HERE! Your eyes are playing tricks on you at right. What is seemingly a design made up of spirals turns out to be a series of concentric circles. If you aren't convinced, try checking it with a compass. Or, stick a pin through the center and give the figure a whirl. It's illusionary, of course.

• WRITE SORT! Making your twos look like sevens, your threes like eights, and your sixes like zeros, will increase the sum of 23 and 26 by how much?

By ninety-nine.

WORD SQUARE PUZZLEMENT

Five five-letter words are required to complete the word square above. How quickly can you fill the blanks? Definitions are as follows:

1. Election Day VIP.
2. Branch offered as peace symbol.
3. These go flat, at times.
4. A happening.
5. Takes a breather between tasks.

Remember, a word square consists of a group of words that read the same both horizontally and vertically.

Time limit: Two minutes.

1. Voter. 2. Olive. 3. Tires. 4. Event. 5. Rests.

FIND TWINS! Two of the old-time policemen above look enough alike to be twins. See if you can say which two.

Cover Story....

1988 Presidential Election

By Andrew BeDell

We've seen George Bush fishing and Michael Dukakis riding in a tank. We've heard well-scripted one-liners zinged during debates with the spontaneity of marchers in a Soviet May Day parade. We've seen "instant commercials," usually with negative messages. But on Tuesday, Nov. 8, after a 10-month run, the made-for-TV drama that has become the 1988 presidential campaign will finally be over. More than any previous campaign, this year's race has been tailored for television. Both parties have done their utmost to package their essentially untelegenic candidates for presentation on the tube. On Election Night, CBS, NBC, ABC and CNN will be covering the results.

Of course, the pivotal role TV plays in a presidential campaign is not new. What was new in 1988 was the level of sophistication both candidates' media advisers brought to the campaign. Building on lessons learned from the textbook 1984 TV campaign, both candidates' media advisers fine-tuned Madison Avenue techniques to package two pitchmen: the political equivalents of Frank Perdue and Tom Carvel. "Bush's media people really put a premium on photo ops and colorful rallies, and have insulated Bush from person-to-person contact with the press," says NBC News correspondent Lisa Meyers.

The result: a campaign that more than any other, has put image ahead of issues. Gone were the impromptu exchanges between reporter and candidate, and voter and candidate that characterized earlier campaigns. Personal appearances were carefully staged and scripted, down to the one-liners both candidates quipped, designed to fit into a 30-second spot on the evening news.

The most glaring examples of the scripted campaign were the two presidential debates, which seemed more like personality contests than exchanges of ideas. "Both candidates were highly controlled and lacked spontaneity," says CBS correspondent Lesley Stahl. And why not? The TV camera's unsparing eye picked up every nuance, every bead of sweat, every hand gesture. With the media's insistence in treating the debates as if they were athletic events with a clear-cut winner, there was more pressure surrounding these events than at the seventh game of the World Series.

Despite all the coaching, both candidates did make a few mistakes, contradicting a statement or stand they made earlier. But the media advisers thoughtfully provided an antidote to these gaffes:the "spin doctors." The moment the debates ended, these partisan experts made themselves available to newscasters to tell the viewing audience what their candidate really meant.

If the debates didn't persuade voters, then Bush's and Dukakis' media advisers stood ready with the ultimate TV art form: the commercial. And this year, thanks to improved technology, many commercials could be created overnight to address statements made only hours earlier. What we saw, however, seemed more appropriate to an alderman's race than one for the presidency of the United States. But this week, this incessant bombardment of political pitches will cease, and the focus will shift from the candidates' personalities to counting the votes. And one candidate will learn whether all the spinning and grinning paid off with the biggest prize of all.

THE Rook Look AT GARMENT CARE

DICKIE ROOK

Who Knows What Danger Lurks...

Modern clothes care is so easy compared with the old days. Years ago housewives had to concoct their own soap out of ashes, fat, and lye! Now a trip to the grocery store provides an array of soaps and detergents plus laundering aids such as bleaches, enzyme stain removers, clothes softeners, deodorizers, pre-spotters, and static removers.

But these products must be used with care.

•Don't over-bleach. Use all bleaches according to the directions and wash and rinse the item thoroughly. Excess bleach can cause fiber damage and possible yellowing. Never use chlorine bleach on silk, wool, or spandex.

•Check all clothes care labels to make sure products are safe for use. For example, most colored items are susceptible to some bleaches, and, fabric softeners may spot some polyesters if not used correctly.

Many items labeled washable can be cared for by your dry-cleaner with even better results. When in doubt, ask us!

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

Dear Michele: I absolutely love Kevin Costner! Please, tell me all you can about him. — ANN ROSE, MERIDEN, CONN.

Sorry ladies, the lusty lead of "No Way Out" and "Bull Durham" is married, with three young children. Costner, 33, grew up in Compton, Calif., a middle-class suburb. A natural athlete, he was a baseball star in high school, and several colleges were interested in recruiting him. He attended Cal State Fullerton, and graduated with a degree in marketing. Costner met his wife, Cindy, in 1975 while she was employed as Snow White at Disneyland. They were married in 1977 and have two daughters; Annie, 4, and Lily, 1, and recently had a baby boy, Joe. The family resides in a LosAngeles suburb, and often retreats to their condo at Mammoth Lake, where Costner enjoys fishing and the simple pleasures of life.

After years of winding up on the cutting-room floor, most noticeably as the suicidal Alex in "The Big Chill" (1983), Costner has become one of our most outstanding contemporary actors. Costner's on-screen appearances include "American Flyers" (1985), "Silverado" (1985) and "The Untouchables" (1987). Following the success of "Bull Durham," Costner has been shooting another baseball film, "Shoeless Joe," co-starring Burt Lancaster.

Dear Michele: Is Kevin Peter Hall, who co-starred in "The Predator," a professional wrestler? — TERRIE SNOWDEN, McALLEN, TEXAS

Hall is not a pro wrestler. At 7 feet, 2 inches tall, I'd say he was better suited to play center for the Celtics. The 33-year-old Pittsburgh native did win a basketball scholarship to George Washington University. His heart, however, belonged to acting, and he graduated with a degree in theater arts in 1977. Hall played pro basketball in Venezuela after graduating, but in 1985, he made it to the small screen as Dr. Elvin Lincoln in the short-lived NBC series "Misfits of Science." In addition to his "Predator" role, Hall played the furry Bigfoot Harry in the feature "Harry and the Hendersons" (1987).

Dear Michele: I'm an ardent fan of Sally Field's, and know she was expecting a baby with her new husband Alan. What did they have? — ELAINE ARPKE, SHEBOYGAN, WISC.

Field, 41, and her second husband, producer Alan Greisman, were married in December 1984. Their son Sam was born in December 1987. The Oscar-winning actress has two sons, Peter, 19, and Eli, 16, from her first marriage to Steve Craig, her high-school sweetheart.

Dear Michele: I recently saw Robert Goulet in a touring company version of "South Pacific" in which his acting was superior and his use of the French language faultless. Is he of French descent? — MRS. BRUCE FERNALD, INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Goulet is of French-Canadian extraction, with one-eighth Irish ancestry. He was born in Lawrence, Mass., and moved when he was 11 years old to Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, with his mother andsister after his father died. Goulet moved to Toronto when he was awarded a singing scholarship to the Royal Conservatory of Music, and began his professional career in Toronto. In 1961, he made his American television debut on "The Ed Sullivan Show."

Dear Michele: I have enjoyed Brian Keith for many years. Would you please print some information on him? — GERTRUDE HAMPTON, SANTA FE, N.M.

Keith was born Nov. 14, 1921, in Bayonne, N.J. The son of actor Robert Keith Sr. and actress Helana Shipman, he made his film debut at age 3 in "Pied Piper Malone." Following his 1945 discharge from the Marines, where he served as a machine gunner during World War II; he returned to acting and made his adult film debut in "Arrowhead" (1953). In 1955, Keith made his TV-series debutin "Crusader" (1955-56). It was the role of Uncle Bill on "Family Affair" (1966-71) that solidified his career and his bank account. He is married to Hawaiian actress Victoria Young, and they have two children. Keith has a daughter from a previous marriage.

Murder, She Wrote

An upcoming episode of Angela Lansbury's "Murder, She Wrote" on CBS will feature an appearance by Jean Peters, who has been seen only rarely on the screen in recent years. Peters' film credits include "Viva Zapata!" (1952) with Marlon Brando and Anthony Quinn, "Three Coins in the Fountain" (1954), and "A Man Called Peter" (1955). She is perhaps best known as the ex-wife of Howard Hughes, so she may have special insight into her role as a reclusive former star who may hold the key to a murder.

TV Chatter

By Frank Sanello

"The Great Escape II: The Untold Story (NBC, Nov. 6, 7) picks up where the hit 1963 film ended. Christopher Reeve plays Major John Dodge, the Anglo-American officer who leads the escape. In researching the role of Dodge, Reeve came across a photograph of the officer, which shocked him. "I happened to really look like him, even down to the moustache!" Reeve says. The actor's research also turned him into a big fan of Dodge, who was born in America but became a British citizen in 1915.

"John Dodge was a very courageous man with a modest and offhanded manner," he says. "He was born to privilege — he was Winston Churchill's cousin — but didn't take advantage of it. He had education and money, but he also had the common touch. During the last years of his life, they kept trying to offer him a knighthood, but he kept turning it down."

Airing opposite "The Great Escape" is another sequel, "Internal Affairs" (CBS, Nov. 6 and 7), which continues the story told in the 1985 miniseries "Doubletake." Richard Crenna reprises his role as New York City Det. Frank Janek, who investigates the murder of a prostitute. Crenna says he enjoys his role as the much-suffering Lt. Janek, but won't star in a series based on the miniseries.

"It would require 14-hour days, and I'm enough of a workaholic as it is," he says. "I'd love to do it as a recurring TV movie, like 'Perry Mason.' " Although Crenna has co-starred in all three "Rambo" movies, the time lag between those films can create a problem. "It's important to do TV," he says, "because if you just do films, people think you're dead."

Soap Scoop

Charleson's real-life romance imitates soap

By Connie Passalacqua

News comes from "General Hospital" that perennial bachelorette Leslie Charleson (who plays Dr. Monica Quartermaine) will be tying the knot early next year with E. William Demms, a Connecticut land developer and restaurateur. The occasion for their meeting sounds like something straight out of a soap (a recent episode of "One Life to Live," to be exact!). Like "OLTL" 's Viki Buchanan (played by Erika Slezak), Charleson attended her hometown high school's 25th reunion, in Darien, Conn. (Well, it wasn't actually Charleson's high school, but it was the one most of her hometown pals attended, so she was invited.)

But while Viki passed out at her reunion, Charleson met Demms at "hers." Two months later, the pair, who conducted a bi-coastal courtship, decided to get married. Demms will relocate to Los Angeles after the wedding. Charleson, who's 40ish, is known not just from her soap role, but for starring in a series of ads run in the tabloids for a "miracle" wrinkle cream. (You know, "Famous Soap Star Finds Secret of Youth ...")

• "GH" is joining the parade of soaps sweeping their recent pasts to bring back old favorites. For two weeks during this sweeps month, Sam Behrens will return as lawyer Jake Meyer. He'll defend a Port Charles local who is implicated in the shooting of evil Olivia (played by Tonja Walker). Walker's role was originally short-term, but she was so well-liked at "GH" that the powers that be decided Olivia would not die as planned, but would survive her wounds. On "AMC," look for the return of evil Creed Kelly (played by James Horan) for the November sweeps. So what if the last time we saw him he was being thrown out an airplane? A very much alive Creed will complicate the romance of his nephew Nico and Julie Chandler (played by Maurice Benard and Lauren Holly).

• Is it us, or is "All My Children" taking its Erica Montgomery-on-the-run story line a bit too far? Erica (played by Susan Lucci) is currently living in a tacky boarding house, hiding out with baby Bianca from husband Travis (played by Larkin Malloy). Yes, it was a clever idea to deglamorize Erica for a while, but la Lucci in jeans every single day? Come on, if we wanted to see another pair of raggy denims, we'd just switch off our television and gaze into the mirror.

TUESDAY ELECTION NIGHT

Peter Jennings (l.) and David Brinkley will anchor "The '88 Vote," ABC's coverage of the presidential election, which culminates Tuesday, Nov. 8. All three broadcast networks and cable's CNN air coverage.

The Cosby Show

This season, NBC's "The Cosby Show" features a fresh interpretation of the show's theme song and a newly choreographed cast dance segment during the opening credit sequence. The theme was recorded by the Oregon Symphony, led by music director and arranger James DePriest, a high-school classmate of Cosby's in Philadelphia. The dance segment was created by actor, dancer and choreographer Geoffrey Holder, another of Cosby's longtime friends.

Sports Roundup

SUNDAY, NOV. 6
Track and Field (ABC)

New York City Marathon. ABC sportscaster Marty Liquori has noted an interesting change in marathoning. "It used to be that the Olympic marathon was the only thing that counted, but there's some real proof that the New York marathon may be bigger (now) than the Olympic marathon in the athletes' eyes," says Liquori, a former world-class runner. "Even though it was an Olympic year, there are a lot of good marathoners around right now and many of them didn't compete in Seoul. Others had to drop out of the race early. They're all looking for a race in which they come back and getit out of their system. The Olympic marathon is becoming just another race. With the media attention, New York has become as prestigious."

NFL Football (NBC, CBS)

Week 10 and CBS has the doubleheader.

NFL Football (ESPN)

Los Angeles Raiders at San Diego Chargers. The Chargers have been awful this year, but they always get up for the Raiders. By now, Bo Jackson's return should have had some impact on the aging Raiders, and Jay Schroeder (if he hasn't been injured) should be running the offense with poise.

MONDAY, NOV. 7
NFL Football (ABC)

Cleveland Browns at Houston Oilers. Although it is likely that Bernie Kosar will be back by now, when Week 7 rolled around the Browns were being quarterbacked by Don Strock, their fourth starting QB of the season. Head coach Marty Schottenheimer was understandably flummoxed.

"I've never seen a situation where a team loses three starting quarterbacks to injuries, especially in such a short time span," he says. "Obviously, the injuries at quarterback have slowed us, but what really causes a problem is changing quarterbacks during a game, and we've already had to do that three times."

TUESDAY, NOV. 8
Boxing (ESPN)

WBA Middleweight Championship, a 12-round fight between titleholder Sumbu Kalambay and Doug DeWitt, live from Jesi, Italy.

NBA Basketball (TBS)

Chicago Bulls at New York Knicks. Two of the NBA's up-and-coming teams face off in the first meeting between new Knick power forward Charles Oakley and his exteammates. "It wasn't that I wanted to leave the Bulls, but it's all in the business," says Oakley, the NBA's No. 2 rebounder last season. "They said if they could get a center for me they would trade me, and they did." Chicago received Bill Cartwright from New York. "I'm just going to work hard inside, get rebounds, run the floor well, fit into the offense."

SATURDAY, NOV. 12
Bowling (NBC)

The $135,000 True Value Open, final round from Indianapolis, Ind.

College Football
(ABC, CBS, ESPN)

Teams were unavailable at press time.

One of the big stories in college football this year has been the collapse of the Big Ten. "The Big Ten has been a lesser conference this season," says ABC sportscaster Keith Jackson. "The quality of play is down. Because of the 95-scholarship limitation, the influence of one or two key players on a team is greater. You only have to have two or three injuries and a team can go down." And that has happened all over the Big Ten.

Inside The Sexes

CBS will air "Inside the Sexes" on Nov. 21. It's a special presentation by the director of the well-received "Body Human" series. The special will profile specialists who are on the cutting edge of research into the physiological and psychological aspects of human sexual problems.

Runners Will Take Off In New York Marathon

By Marty Linehan

The big event of Sunday, Nov. 6 may mean turning your TV set on early in many parts of the country, but it should be worth it. ABC presents the New York Marathon live from the five boroughs of the city.

And just to prove marathon runners are no different than other athletes, a forgiven drug taker who was the second-place finisher in the 1986 run will be competing in the race. That sounds just like professional baseball, basketball and football, doesn't it?

Antoni Niemezak of Poland placed No. 2 in the 1986 New York Marathon, but didn't end up in the money because of a post-race test for anabolic steroids. His reward was a two-year suspension, which ended on last Wednesday, Nov. 2.

The New York Marathon is bigger than ever and has become larger and more significant than the grandfather of all long-distance runs, the Boston Marathon. It has even begun to rival the Olympic 26-mile plus. A few runners who finished less well than expected in the Olympics will be trying to salvage some pride with a good showing in this race.

* Sunday's race should finish just in time to switch to the pro football games. CBS airs the doubleheader, with the San Francisco 49ers visiting the Phoenix Cardinals, and the Washington Redskins hosting the New Orleans Saints in the late games. (Check local listings.)

* For fans who haven't had their day's fill of football, ESPN continues its Sunday-night pro football with the Los Angeles Raiders playing the San Diego Chargers. The Chargers have had a pooryear so far, but we expect a good game against their California neighbors, even with the Raiders' addition of part-time player Bo Jackson, who is also a baseball star with the Kansas City Royals.
