Pitt Election Officials To Limit Number Of Voters Inside Polls

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

With more than 50,500 registered voters in Pitt County, election officials are set to implement crowd-control measures for Tuesday's general election.

The polls will be open from 6:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. In past elections, Pitt elections Supervisor Margaret Hardee said as many as 60 voters have been lined up outside the polling sites at 6 a.m., hoping to vote before going to work.

There is also usually a surge of voters at lunchtime, and Mrs. Hardee said this year election officials plan to limit the number of voters entering the polling site at one time, so that pollworkers are able to properly distribute ballots.

"They're all wanting to get in there," she said. "You get the pressure of a lot of people standing in line, pushing and shoving and wanting to get their ballots.

Pitt has had high voter turnout in the past two presidential elections. In 1980, 70 percent of the county's voters went to the polls; in 1984, the number jumped to 74 percent.

If that pattern holds on Tuesday, more than 35,000 voters will pass through the polls.

The county has rented 11 additional voting machines to accommodate the expected turnout; there are now 40 machines available for the 25 voting precincts. The machines were to be delivered to the polling sites today, Mrs. Hardee said.

Pitt Democratic Party Chairman J.B. Spilman said a big turnout would help Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis and Democratic gubernatorial candidate Bob Jordan.

"All the local Democratic candidates will do well, regardless of

Martin Says GOP Needs A Mandate

By Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Approximately 70 GOP faithful gathered at the Pitt-Greenville Airport today to hear Gov. Jim Martin and candidate for lieutenant governor Jim Gardner deliver their final messages before Tuesday's election.

Their appearance was part of a cross-state series of news conferences which began this morning in Wilmington and will carry the politicians on their final day of campaigning to Raleigh, Greensboro, Asheville and Charlotte.

Martin, who holds a substantial lead in opinion polls going into Tuesday's election, reiterated his campaign themes of better schools with higher salaries for teachers, tougher policies regarding drug-related crimes and completion of his Strategic Highway Corridor Program, which would put major highways within 10 miles of the vast majority of the state's population.

Martin told cheering Pitt County supporters that, within the next year, construction will begin on the U.S. 264 bypass around Greenville.

"It's much better to have unpromised paving than to have unpaved promises," Martin remarked.

Also joining Martin at today's rally were several Republican candidates running for local offices.

Martin urged North Carolinians to send more Republicans to Raleigh through Tuesday's vote.

"I want you to send a mandate to the General Assembly," he told those in attendance. "The way to send that mandate is not only to vote for me

Quake Leaves Hundreds Dead, Wounded In China

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — About 600 people were killed or injured by an earthquake that shook a remote mountain jungle region of southern China, the state-run China International Broadcasting Station said today.

The station said it did not have a breakdown on how many of the 600 were dead and how many injured in Sunday's quake.

The highest previous count was from the official Xinhua News Agency, which reported at least 37 deaths and said more than 100 people were injured. Telephone service was cut off to the affected region, in Yunnan province near the Burmese border.

The quake measured 7.6 on the Richter scale, and was followed overnight and early today by 34 aftershocks, the strongest measuring 7.2 on the Richter scale.

Roads to the affected area were impassable and Yunnan authorities ordered an airlift of food, medicine and other relief supplies. Yunnan Gov. He Zhiqiang flew to the scene to direct rescue work.

Xinhua said most houses were destroyed in Lancang and Menglian counties, which were at the epicenter of the quake. The population of the counties was not immediately available, but officials said the area is sparsely inhabited.

Buildings also were destroyed in 14 surrounding counties, Xinhua said. Most homes in that part of China are simple mud and wood structures.

Crews were working to repair roads, and radio contact was established, Xinhua said.

Pollsters Give Bush New Push

By Donald M. Rothberg
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

George Bush and Michael Dukakis voiced confidence today as they crossed paths in battleground states on the final day of campaigning before Americans choose the next president. Underdog Dukakis urged voters "to send a message that can be heard from California to Kennebunkport" while Bush declared he was finishing "not in a power walk but in a sprint."

The latest polls bolstered the vice president's optimism as he followed his Democratic rival into Ohio and roared toward St. Louis.

At a sunrise rally in a steelworkers union hall outside Cleveland, Dukakis was in high spirits after snatching a two-hour nap on an overnight flight from the West Coast.

"Good Morning, Ohio," he said. "We took the red-eye to be with the Buckeyes."

"I don't need sleep, I'm charging," he said. "... We're going to win."

Bush began his day in the Detroit suburb of Southfield, Mich., and took a jab at Dukakis' fondness for exercising by walking rapidly while carrying weights.

The vice president said the race in Michigan was close and "it's a very important place to be as we run right down to the finish line, not in a power walk but in a sprint."

Bush said that when Americans vote they should ask themselves this question: "Is the country headed in the right direction? The answer is, yes it is."

From Michigan, Bush was headed for rallies in Ohio, Missouri and Texas, where he maintains his voting residence.

Dukakis preceded Bush into St.

Sakharov Recalls Supporter

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Andrei Sakharov arrived on his first journey outside the Soviet Union, declaring himself a free man and speaking out for a supporter jailed over a protest on behalf of the Nobel laureate nearly eight years ago.

The human rights activist told reporters at Logan International Airport on Sunday night that dissident mathematician Vazif Meilanov was imprisoned after staging a one-man protest on his behalf and now faces additional charges.

"I feel it is my duty now, at this moment, to remember this man and many others who remain in prison," Sakharov said.

Sakharov, winner of the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize for his defense of human rights, is scheduled to spend two weeks in the United States visiting relatives, undergoing medical tests and promoting a new international organization.

The trip comes less than two years after he was freed from internal exile in the industrial city of Gorky, where he had been sent because of his outspoken opposition to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Using stepdaughter Tatiana Yankelevich as a translator, the tall, balding 67-year-old spoke for about 10 minutes but refused to answer questions. He appeared ruffled and tired after a 14-hour flight from Moscow.

Germans Recalling 'Madness' That Began Nazi Push On Jews

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BERLIN — The two German nations today recalled the "fascist racial madness" of Kristallnacht, the night a half-century ago that signaled the start of the systematic Nazi campaign to annihilate Jews.

Towns and cities in the East and the West have begun paying tribute to the victims of the night of Nov. 9, 1938, when Nazi sympathizers looted and burned Jewish temples and businesses, beating and killing scores of Jews and sending 30,000 of them to concentration camps.

The rampage became known as Kristallnacht — or "Crystal Night" — because of the shards of broken glass that filled the streets.

Josef Fossepoth, the general secretary of West Germany's Societies for Christian-Jewish Cooperation, said the night marked "the start of a new phase, the phase of the physical annihilation of the Jews."

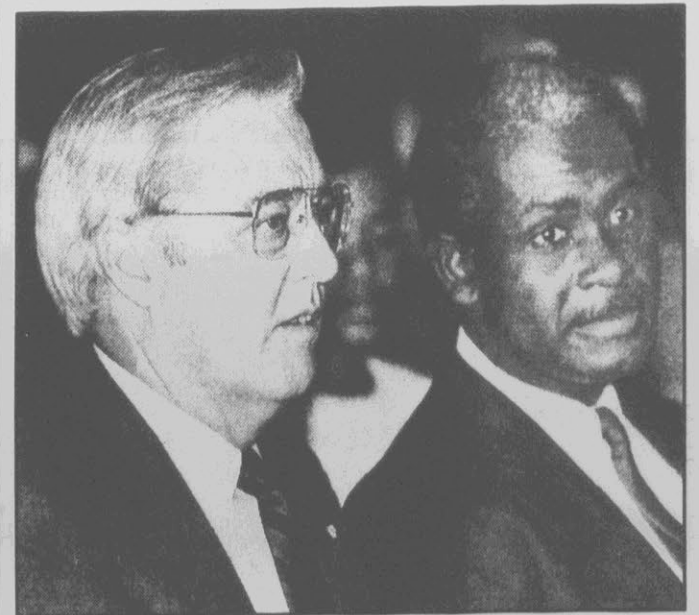

This week, hundreds of gatherings, panel discussions and ceremonies will mark the 50th anniversary Wednesday of what the West German news agency ADN called a night of "fascist racial madness."

In the East German city of Leipzig, officials and members of the Jewish community today paid tribute to the victims by laying wreaths at the site of the synagogue that was destroyed and at the city's Jewish cemetery.

Jordan Starts Day On Field At ECU

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Greenville firefighters backed by two fire engines and a few other citizens stood by this morning as Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan stepped from a helicopter on to an East Carolina University playing field and scurried to a podium a couple of blocks away.

The firemen were there as a matter of routine. But the others — many of them Jordan campaign workers, a few of them ECU students and faculty — apparently came to see what the Democratic candidate for governor would say on election eve.

They heard him renew his oft-heard promise to "make North Carolina better."

Wearing an ECU T-shirt over his long-sleeve dress shirt, Jordan said he was starting his day at "the best place to start off, right here at this great university."

He said he'd be riding the red, white and blue helicopter to Raleigh, Greensboro, Asheville and back to Charlotte before today is over.

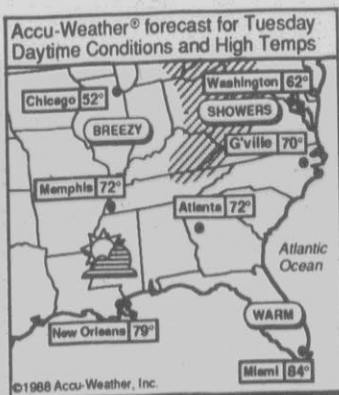

He declared that the gubernatorial vote Tuesday is "a decision on the next four years, the next 20 years, and the new 50 years. He said he offers:

• "A new economic development strategy that puts less emphasis on the Fortune 500 companies and more emphasis on home-grown entrepreneurs and small business right here in the state."

• "A new education strategy that reduces the dropout rate, give unskill-

Bladen Swamp Has Ancient Tree Stand

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KELLY, N.C. (AP) — T. Nelson Squires makes a living by cutting down trees, but he's not going to touch the huge cypress trees, draped with Spanish moss, that tower over 400 acres of swamp land he owns along the Black River in Bladen County.

"There are some monsters in here," Squires said. "I bet we've got some trees older than 2,000 years old. To have something that was here when Christ was here on this Earth, that just sort of excites you."

Scientists say the swamp contains the oldest trees in the nation east of the Rocky Mountains.

"We had thought about logging for some of them," Squires said. "But I'll tell you right now, there won't be any of them cut. I promise you that. I would feel so guilty if I allowed that swamp to be cut, knowing what I know now."

The ancient trees grow along a 10-mile stretch of the Black River between Bladen and Pender counties. The coffee-colored stream flows into the Cape Fear River just north of Wilmington.

A team of scientists from the University of Arkansas discovered the age of the trees about three years ago while studying tree rings for research on past climatic trends.

What they found astounded them. Dozens of trees in the swamp were more than 1,000 years old. The oldest identified tree had rings dating back to the year 364 A.D., and researchers estimated the tree was at least 1,700 years old after they accounted for missing rings and other factors.

"Millennium-old trees are rare, and the swamp-grown bald cypress at Black River are the oldest trees in eastern North America," the researchers wrote in an article published in Science magazine last summer.

The state Natural Heritage Program, which keeps track of rare plants and animals across the state, recommended the site to the researchers. But state officials said they were surprised by the findings.

"We knew they were old, and we knew it was an important stand of timber, but we had no idea they were that old," Julie H. Moore, a botanist and protection planner with the state program in Raleigh, said in an interview with The News and Observer of Raleigh.

"At first, people didn't believe it," she said. "But this is positive dating. This isn't an estimate at all. These are actual ring counts."

Bristlecone pines, which grow in the White Mountains of California, are the oldest known living trees — with the most ancient specimen dated at 4,900 years. California also is home to the famous giant sequoias, which are estimated to be as old as 3,500 years.

Although the Black River cypress trees are much younger, Ms. Moore said they are important because of the scarcity of old-growth forests in the East that have never been logged or burned. Forests older than 200 years are rare in the East.

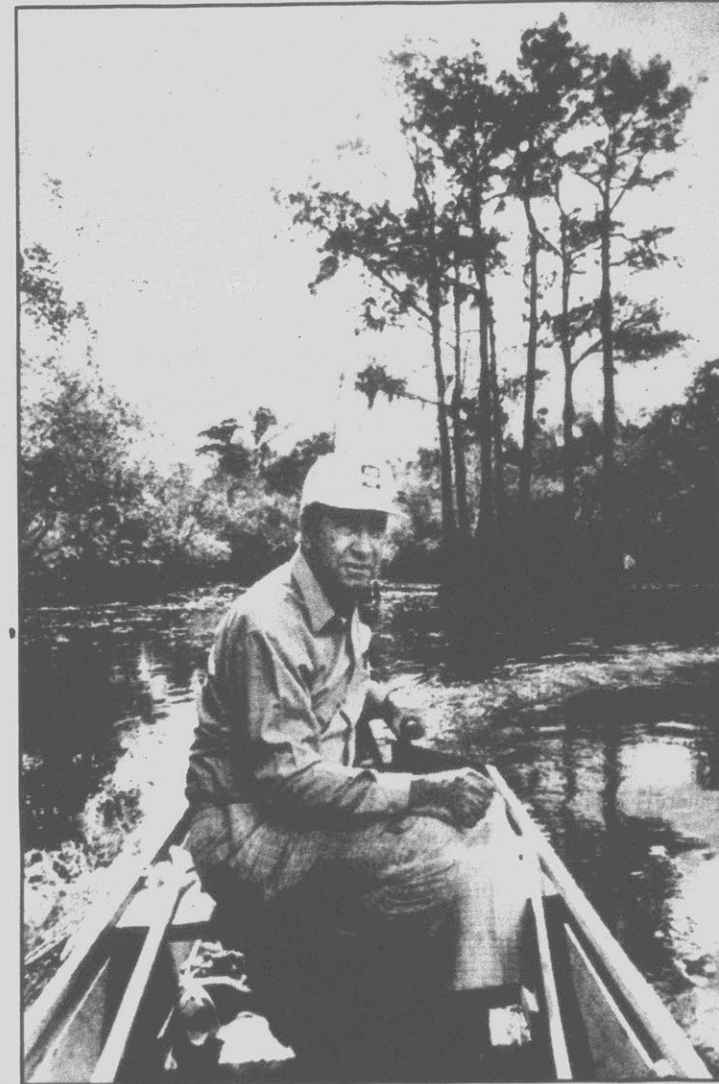

"Here's this place that's a living laboratory," Ms. Moore said. "It's absolutely one of the top areas — nationwide. It's just so remarkable because of the age."

"The thing that's so important about this stand is that it's not just one tree," Ms. Moore said. "This is a whole stand of trees ... There are about 1,800 acres in here we'd like to see protected."

The heritage program is working with the N.C. Nature Conservancy, a private conservation group, to protect the area, she said. So far, the two groups have focused on contacting local landowners to make sure they know how valuable the forest is.

The Nature Conservancy also is negotiating with some landowners who might be willing to sell their property. But the conservancy and the state primarily are trying to convince landowners to sign conservation easements, which specify that the forests will not be cut or damaged.

"We are finding that the majority of owners have had their property for quite some time," said Frederick Annand, associate director of the organization, which is based in Chapel Hill. "In cases like that, many people have attachments to their property and are unwilling to sell."

"Generally most of the landowners are intimately aware of how important the river is. They have recognized that, in some cases, for many generations. They are very sympathetic to do what they can to see that the river is protected.

"I am optimistic, at this point, that it can be done privately," he said.

"COMFORT LININGS"

After having your teeth worked on by a dentist, do you find that you are sensitive to hot and cold, to chewing, for a long period of time? Well, some people's mouths are naturally more sensitive than others. If this is the case with you, perhaps you should ask your dentist about "comfort linings".

These are linings, usually medicated, which are placed under restorations (fillings) to keep teeth from being sensitive to hot and cold, especially cold. If the restoration is made out of silver amalgam or gold (both metals) it will certainly conduct temperature changes into the tooth. If the restoration is a quartz composite, the chemicals may cause an irritation to the pulp or nerve, as you call it.

The comfort liner acts as an insulator, cushion and medicated layer, protecting against pressure, chemical irritation, or temperature changes—all of which add up to comfort.

Candidates Voice Last-Minute Confidence

Louis by a couple of hours and told his audience, "This is the 'show me' state, and I'm here to show you how much I want your support," he said.

Then, in a reference to Bush's summer home in Maine, Dukakis asked, "Are you going to let the pollsters and pundits decide this election, or are you going to send a message that can be heard from California to Kennebunkport?"

"They're getting so worried Bush is following me around — can you believe it?" Dukakis told a rally in Portland, Ore., Sunday night. The Democratic nominee was on a non-stop campaign swing with no time to see a bed until he arrives home in Massachusetts Election Day.

President Reagan was spending the day campaigning for Bush in California.

Both camps bombarded voters with 30-second commercials and the two candidates were the stars of 30-minute prime time election eve programs running back-to-back on the three major commercial networks — ABC, CBS and NBC.

A rush of late national polls said the Republican vice president was leading by margins ranging from five to 12 percentage points.

A 50-state, ABC News-Washington Post poll of 7,777 likely voters said Bush was solidly favored or leading in states with enough electoral votes to assure his election.

An Associated Press state-by-state survey said Bush was leading in states with 356 electoral votes — 86 more than the 270 needed for a majority — while Dukakis was ahead in states with a total of 101 electoral votes. Another 81 were in tossup states that included Pennsylvania, Illinois and Missouri.

Among the new polls, Gallup put Bush ahead by 12 percentage points, while USA Today-CNN made it 11. ABC set the margin at 10 and CBS said the difference was nine points. An NBC News-Wall Street Journal poll and another by Louis Harris and Associates said the margin for the vice president was five points with enough people undecided or wavering to allow for dramatic last-minute changes.

The presidential candidates weren't the only ones winding up their campaigns.

There were 33 Senate seats and the entire House being filled on Tuesday and 12 states were electing governors.

Democratic control of the Senate and House appeared secure and the Democrats appeared likely to add to the 27 to 23 edge they now have among governors.

Thousands of other offices were being filled and scores of initiatives also were on ballots, including 39 in California on which opposing sides spent more than $100 million.

Dukakis began a marathon race around the country late Sunday flying from Spokane, Wash., to Cleveland, with a dawn arrival in the Ohio city. From Cleveland he was heading for St. Louis and then on to San Francisco.

Aides were considering another 1,000-mile detour from San Francisco before addressing a rally in Los Angeles. Then it was on to a pre-dawn Election Day rally in Des Moines, Iowa, and a stop in New Jersey or Ohio before ending the campaign back home in Boston.

Whatever sleep he got would be in a tourist class seat on his campaign plane.

Reagan: Bush Offers U.S. 'New Beginning'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONG BEACH, Calif. — President Reagan told fellow Californians today their votes could be crucial in assuring "a new beginning for America" by electing Republican George Bush as president and staying off a late-hour drive by Democrat Michael Dukakis.

In a speech prepared for delivery at the Queen Mary, a former luxury ocean liner converted to a waterfront hotel, the 77-year-old president said he was returning to his home state at the end of the Bush campaign just as he did in his own campaigns for the White House.

"Today, of course, is the last day of this, my last campaign as president," he said. "But tomorrow launches a new beginning for America."

"Your votes tomorrow may be the most important ones cast in America," the president said. "They will determine how California goes, and California may send the next president to the White House."

California has 47 electoral votes as the most populous state.

Reagan lavished praise on Bush, who has served under him for nearly eight years as vice president.

"This year, one of the best qualified men to ever seek the office of president is on the ballot," he said.

Of Bush's personal qualities, Reagan said, "He is strong, decent, loyal, wise, capable and compassionate."

"As for his opponent, we only really began to learn about him during the last few months," the president said. "He has been vague as to what he would do in office, yet when we focus on his record, he objects."

Reagan contended that the Democratic nominee "is against voluntary prayer in school ... appointed judges to his state Supreme Court who have voted to strike down a ban on child pornography ... and, in every case, even for the most brutal crimes, he opposes the death penalty."

"He's free to have these views, but is this the man we want choosing the justices to sit on the Supreme Court of the United States?" he asked.

The former movie actor recalled that it was from the Queen Mary, then a British liner, that he first saw the Statue of Liberty on his return from England, where he filmed "The Hasty Heart."

"This is my last campaign, and seeing all of you ... and seeing the Queen Mary again, it's like closing a circle, like sailing into harbor after a long and wonderful voyage to be greeted by old, beloved friends," the president said.

From Long Beach, Reagan, 77, headed to San Diego for a nostalgic visit to the seaside city where he held his final campaign rally on the eve of his landslide re-election in 1984.

Controls Planned

the turnout, but the big turnout would help the presidential candidate and the gubernatorial candidate.

"We think the turnout is going to be good. If we have a good turnout, we're going to do well," he said. "But it's hard to say. ... There are a lot of people who have been turned off by the negative commercials."

Election records show there are 36,627 registered Democrats in the county and 11,012 registered Republicans. The Pitt GOP has registered about 2,000 voters since the March 8 Super Tuesday presidential primary, and Pitt GOP Chairman Gordon Walker has said he thinks Republican Gov. Jim Martin will carry Pitt. Martin received 48 percent of the vote in Pitt in 1984.

Walker has also predicted Republican presidential candidate George Bush will win Pitt.

In addition to controlling crowds in the polling sites, precinct workers also will be watching for voting irregularities or anyone giving improper assistance.

"The precinct workers are looking for any kind of problem that might involve someone assisting when they're not supposed to," Ms. Hardee said. "They have been given guidelines."

Pitt District Attorney Tom Haigwood issued a warning Sept. 13 to Farmville businessman Marvin Speight, ordering him not to assist any of his employees at the polls in future elections.

Speight, a prominent Democrat and former chairman of the State Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, was accused of illegally assisting an employee in the May 31 Democratic primary runoff by pointing out which candidate to vote for. Election statutes bar an employer from helping any employee at the polls.

Haigwood also asked the county board of elections to monitor Speight's activity at Tuesday's election and report any irregularity. He said he would move to prosecute Speight if he continues to aid employees in voting.

Mrs. Hardee said no special arrangements have been made to monitor Speight, but pollworkers will watch everyone at the polls.

There are approved ways in which voters may receive help at the polls. Election statutes state that any voter may request assistance from a near relative, and any blind, disabled or illiterate voter may be assisted by any person the voter chooses, other than his employer, an officer of his union, or an agent of either one.

Tuesday's ballot includes the presidential contest between Dukakis and Bush and the gubernatorial race between Jordan and Martin.

The ballot also includes the race for a seat in the U.S. House of Representatives between Democratic incumbent Walter B. Jones Sr. and Republican Howard Moyer. Neither North Carolina senator, Democrat Terry Sanford or Republican Jesse Helms is up for re-election this year.

In state races, Democrat Tony Rand is running against Republican Jim Gardner for lieutenant governor; Democrat Rufus Edmisten is running against Republican John Carrington for secretary of state; Democratic incumbent Lacy Thornburg is running against Republican Sam Wilson for attorney general, and Democratic incumbent John Brooks is running against Republican Richard Levy for state commissioner of labor.

Democratic incumbent Harlan Boyles is running against Republican Nancy Lake Howard for state treasurer; Democratic incumbent Ed Renfrow is running against Republican Ed Garner Jr. for state auditor; Democratic incumbent Jim Graham is running against Leo Tew for state commissioner of agriculture; Democratic incumbent Jim Long is running against Republican H.L. Rednour for state commissioner of insurance, and Democrat Bob Etheridge is running against Republican Tom Rogers for state superintendent of public instruction.

There are two contests for seats on the state court of appeals. Democrat John R. Friday is trying to unseat Republican Robert Orr, and John B. Lewis of Farmville is trying to unseat Republican Donald Smith.

There are 17 Superior Court judgeships up for grabs Tuesday, but Pitt Superior Court Judges David E. Reid Jr. and Herbert O. Phillips III are not up for re-election. Superior Court judgeships are statewide elections.

In other state races, Democrats Walter B. Jones Jr. and Ed N. Warren are trying to retain their state house seats. They are challenged by Republicans R. Marshall Helms and C. Joe Sturz for the ninth district house seats. Democratic incumbent Gene Rogers is also running for re-election to his sixth district state house seat. Republican Raymond Carl Freeman is running against Rogers.

Democratic state Sen. R.L. "Bob" Martin is running unopposed to retain his sixth district seat, but Democratic state Sen. Tom Taft faces Republican Bill Dansey in his bid to win re-election to his ninth district seat.

In local races, all seven Democratic candidates running for District Court judgeships in Pitt County are unopposed. County commissioner seats from districts 1, 2 and 4 and Consolidated Districts A, B, and C will also be decided Tuesday.

Democrat Annie G. Holder is running unopposed for register of deeds in Pitt County, and Democrat J. Earl Sermons is running unopposed for supervisor of the Pitt soil and water conservation district.

but to vote for Republican legislators who will work with me in the General Assembly.

"Send them a mandate to work with me, not to be obstructionist, not to spend so much time trying to block the good things for the people of this state," Martin said.

Also sharing Martin's enthusiasm and optimism going into the election was Gardner, a Rocky Mount native who predicted that, come January, the state will have the "Jim-Team" working for North Carolinians.

Gardner said his opponent in the race for lieutenant governor, Tony Rand, told him Sunday that he would not pursue a threatened libel lawsuit if Gardner would retract certain negative television ads.

"I said sue us," Gardner said. "The truth always prevails. We're going to keep running the ads and let people know about you." Gardner then called Rand's last minute threats of a lawsuit a "grandstand play." Rand did file the suit this morning.

"The first time that we decided to let the people of this state know who Tony Rand is and know what he does, he squealed and cried like a baby," Gardner said.

Gardner also said Rand was asked in 1983 why he did not represent indigents and accused Rand of responding by saying "I hate poor people. I like rich people."

"A new commitment to ethics in state government that eliminates political hit lists, no-show jobs for political cronies and political payoffs, and

"A new commitment to helping those who do not share the prosperity of our economy — children in poverty, lonely senior citizens, the handicapped and the mentally ill."

Jordan dropped in on Charlotte's Friendship Baptist Church Sunday in a bid to court black votes.

"That clearly could be our margin of win," says Tommy Norman, Jordan's state chairman. "If the black turnout is there, that clearly could make the overall difference in the campaign."

But Jordan will have to convince those voters to go to the polls, political activists said in interviews with The Charlotte Observer.

"The key factor within the black community tends to be motivation," said Charlotte's Kelly Alexander Jr., president of the state NAACP. "I think there is much less motivation now (than in the primary)."

Do Your Duty

Democracy Depends On Participation

There's really only one thing a democracy requires of its citizens.

Only one obligation. One demand. One responsibility. Yes, beyond simply obeying the laws and maintaining a healthy interest in civic affairs, there's one huge duty a nation's people are asked to perform.

They are asked to cast a ballot.

That doesn't mean citizens are required by law to vote. It means they are given a right to choose their leadership. That's a hefty privilege and carries with it an equally weighty responsibility.

That one obligation dictates the success or failure of a democracy. How well its citizens respond to this obligation determines whether a nation is weak or strong; whether it is vigorous or faint.

And at no time has this responsibility to participate in government been more prominent than in 1988. Tuesday's Pitt voters will be asked to elect national, state and community leaders. With their vote, they will determine how well tough issues like federal deficits, equitable funding for rural and urban areas and a diminished environment are addressed. That means some hard decisions await voters. But the choices facing them are meaningless if the people don't take the opportunity to have their say — in the voting booth.

Democracy means government by the people. That principle, defined by the nation's greatest thinkers in the U.S. Constitution two centuries ago, is the cornerstone of liberty. To be free, to resist tyranny and anarchy, people must govern themselves. That means voting.

You might not think your vote is terribly important. The American nation is fragmented, you might suggest, and there are too many special interests for your opinion to count. One vote won't mean anything. It has no impact.

But that point of view is not valid and you'll be dead wrong if you use this flawed reasoning not to vote Tuesday.

In a 20th century democracy, struggling to meet the complex needs of a diverse populace, the individual vote becomes even more meaningful. Beyond the political action committees, the cursed polls and the media commentators, the vote means control — control of national, state and community leadership. It is the thread that secures freedom in the fabric of a democracy.

Voting is a right but it is also a duty. And that duty should not be shirked Tuesday. Cast your ballot for whatever cause or candidate you wish, but cast it. In a strong participatory democracy, there is no other option on election day.

A Concern

No Easy Answer To Halloween Party

Should the downtown Halloween celebration in Greenville be discontinued?

Mayor Ed Carter said flatly "the party's over" following last week's activities in which some 50 arrests were made, 141 citations issued and numerous fights were reported.

City officials reported some people were attacked by roving teen-aged hoodlum bands and one officer was injured by a vehicle he was trying to stop.

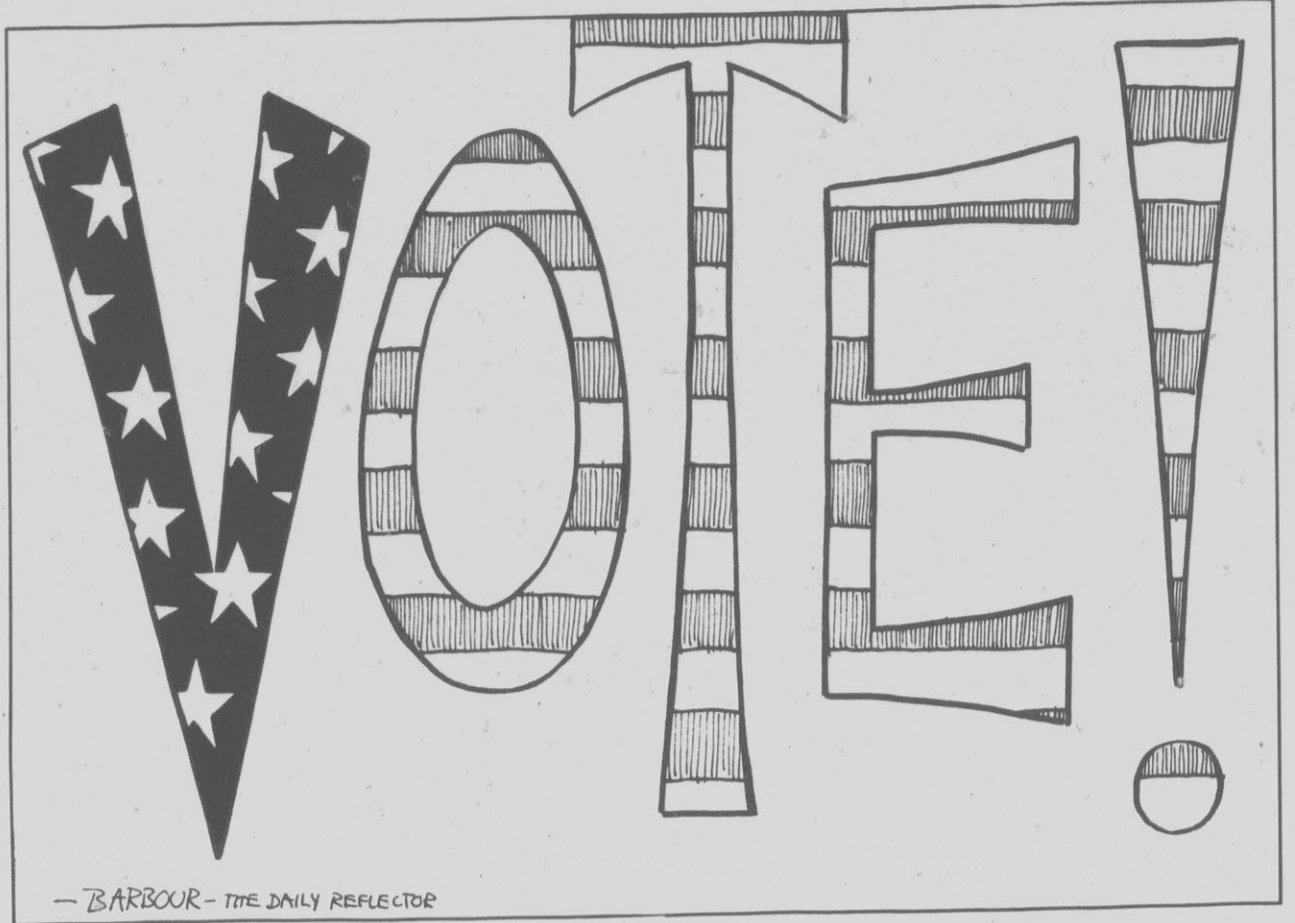

Clearly that is too much difficulty on a night when most young people are on hand for fun. It is a situation which poses danger not only to police officers but also to the celebration participants who are there to enjoy the evening and want no part of fighting or destruction.

Now city and university officials are assessing the situation to determine what can be done in future years to restore Halloween to an evening where young people don costumes for pleasure — without violence.

It becomes obvious that the city and the university cannot risk potential serious injury to police officers or to students who go downtown assuming they will be safe. A concern, however, is that if the students and other young people don't go downtown on Halloween they will gather at various spots throughout the city and county, making it more difficult to police activities.

There aren't any easy answers. This year police blocked off more streets than ever to provide plenty of room for the revelers to spread out without danger from traffic. One suggestion has been a limited activity on the Town Common. Others have said the celebration should be held on the university campus. Either of these might help but the young people can, after all, go wherever they want.

Whether the party is or is not over, the mayor and city officials are correct to assess the situation. They properly are consulting with campus officials and it is imperative that ways be developed to make Halloween revelry by students and others a safe activity. Neither police nor participants should be subjected to injury on such a night.

Public Forum

To the editor:

This letter is response to the Oct. 21 editorial and cartoon showing the county finance office breaking the piggy bank. The question has been raised about improved financial planning for the county. We must look at how wisely the county commissioners have been spending taxpayers' money.

911 is a long overdue system for Pitt County, so why did we need an independent consultant service hired to tell the commissioners that Sheriff Tyson was wrong and that we do need a separate communication center? Commissioners told Tyson he couldn't have 911, so Tyson stamps his feet and pounds his fists and the next thing you know the commissioners spend thousands of dollars to appease Tyson by knocking a hole in a courthouse wall and giving him his own communications center complete with telecommunicators.

This is ridiculous when an agreement should have been reached between the Sheriff's office and 911.

The money spent for this could have been better spent giving pay raises to deputies already serving with the department. It is a disgrace that deputies with the same time and service as Greenville police officers are making five-to-15 percent less.

Not long ago, a request to buy defibrillators for the rescue squads came before the commission. These machines are designed to save lives by correcting irregular beats of the heart. The commissioners voted no to fully funding them but reconsidered and decided they would access it on a case-by-case basis. Commissioners opened their hearts and gave unnecessary equipment to Sheriff Tyson, yet volunteer rescue squads must wait.

It appears that the present commissioners are more inclined to do party favors than to assess where tax money could be appropriately spent. So citizens of Pitt, let's pay our taxes early so commissioners can buy something else for Tyson to add to his personal collection.

To the editor:

Few citizens know that North Carolina is one of 30 states which has petitioned for a Constitutional Convention. Once Congress received petitions from 34 states, it will be required to call a national Constitutional Convention.

In 200 years, our Constitution has never been amended through a convention and the Constitution provides no guidelines on how such a convention should be funded, how delegates would be selected or who should establish and enforce its operating rules. Many Constitutional experts, included Judge Sam J. Ervin III, son of the late Senator Sam J. Ervin Jr., are concerned at the implications of a Constitutional Convention.

The current drive to call a Constitutional Convention is led by proponents of a federal balanced budget amendment who failed to achieve their goal by Congressional amendment. However, no single issue is important enough to risk the loss of our Constitutional freedoms and protections.

A forum on the issue of a Constitutional Convention will be held Nov. 21 at 7:30 p.m. in the Willis Building, corner of Reade and First streets in Greenville. Each citizen should avail themselves of the opportunity to learn more about this issue.

Bush Is No Better Than He Seems

WASHINGTON — The campaign, having promised instruction and barely delivered diversion, now sags to a stop and I herewith complete the task begun in my last column. Then I made the case for electing Michael Dukakis. Today I undertake the comparably Herculean task of arguing George Bush's case.

Is Bush better than he seems? No. This low, dishonest campaign, which squandered the precious commodity of the nation's attention, was the carefully prepared and freely chosen culmination of his public life to date. He seems to have passed through the tumults of the 20th century unmarked by any of its great passions or arguments or aspirations. Paradoxically, that may be the key to putting the best face on his performance.

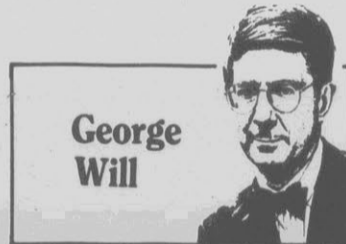

Perhaps he has campaigned basely because he has, in place of substantive political motives, a single ideal. He is moved entirely by an abstract duty to "serve," not by any idea he wants to be in the service of. In the absence of ideas, mere tactics are everything.

He is at once vaguely admirable and ominously empty. What matters is who will fill him up.

That brings us to 5,000 reasons for electing Bush. They are the appointments, from senior White House and Cabinet officers on down, that a President makes or are made in his name. An important question in any election, and the crucial question when both candidates are so inadequate, is: Which party has the better pool of talent from which to draw? The Republican Party is to be preferred until the Democratic Party regains its political acumen and intellectual vigor.

Three other reasons for preferring Bush also pertain to the presidential power to shape the composition of government. Four days after the election, Harry Blackmun will become the third Supreme Court Justice over 80. The others are William Brennan and Thurgood Marshall. All three are liberals. The next President probably will have at least three nominations to make.

Almost the entire public agenda seems to pass through courts. It is urgent that new justices reverse the tendency to turn what should be legislative decisions into litigation. This is important to the rejuvenation of the Democratic Party. The liberal party's powers of persuasion have atrophied as liberals have increasingly relied on judicial fiat rather than mass persuasion to achieve their aims.

A Bush-directed change in the Court's composition might result in reversal of the 1973 abortion ruling, but that might not result in much change in abortion policy. It would ignite 50 arguments by restoring to states the right to regulate abortion. The arguments are needed, given such bio-medical developments as intra-uterine medicine. But abortion is, after circumcision, the nation's most common surgical procedure. The culture has moved far in 15 years and there now is a majority in favor of liberal abortion laws.

The careful selection of justices requires an interest in constitutional theories that is as foreign to Bush as Mongolia. Liberals should take comfort from the possibility that he may squander his opportunities. There is precedent. Two of the three liberal octogenarians were appointed by Republicans — Brennan by Eisenhower (who also nominated Warren) and Blackmun by Nixon. The fourth liberal, John Paul Stevens, was Ford's choice.

In foreign policy, Bush will offer warmed-over Reaganism —

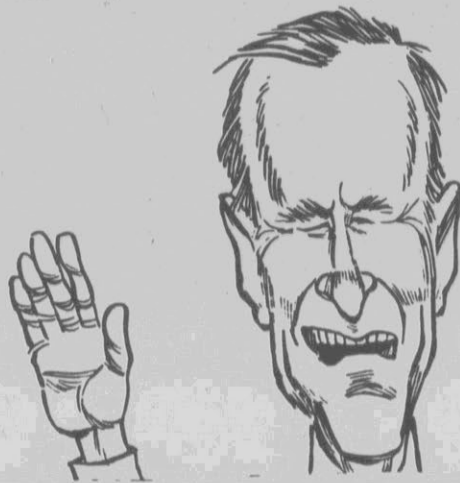

'Is Bush better than he seems? No. This low, dishonest campaign, which squandered the precious commodity of the nation's attention, was the carefully prepared and freely chosen culmination of his public life to date. He seems to have passed through the tumults of the 20th century unmarked by any of its great passions or arguments ...'

whatever Reaganism means after eight years of dilution. Reagan's grand passion, the Reagan Doctrine — aid to armed resistance within the Soviet empire (Nicaragua, Afghanistan), seems to matter little to Bush. Reagan has forcefully licensed detente, and hence the moral disarmament of the West. Thus there is little to do but watch to see if he is right — to see if the Soviet regime really has repudiated its first seven decades of words and deeds.

If not, we are in trouble too big for Bush. As Soviet military spending continues its steady increase, the U.S. defense budget is declining and is under increasing pressure that can not be resisted by Bush, the anti-tax warrior.

Bush's probable secretary of state, James Baker, is a clever fellow, but he may suffer the diplomatic fidgets that afflict political deal-makers when they become diplomats. They think that deals made are the only meaningful ratifications of their exertions. The arms-control lobby should rejoice. Arms agreements are always popular and Bush's campaign indicates that no consideration will ever weigh more than crude political calculations.

Still, Bush may at least have the instinctive caution of a man without a compass. That is faint praise but about as much as he has earned this fall.

Democrats' Fortunes Hinge On Solid Black Voter Turnout

John Flesher

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan no doubt was gratified when the Rev. Clifford A. Jones Sr., pastor of Friendship Baptist Church, endorsed Jordan's gubernatorial candidacy from the pulpit.

But as Jordan acknowledged the congregation's applause Sunday, the question hanging in the air wasn't whether most of the parishioners supported him. After all, polls suggest that at least 80 percent of North Carolina blacks favor the Democratic challenger over Republican Gov. Jim Martin.

What is not clear is whether enough blacks will vote Tuesday to give Jordan the boost he must have to pull an upset.

Blacks, historically the Democratic Party's most loyal constituency, are exhibiting the same disenchantment and apathy with the campaign that whites and others have shown.

The extent to which blacks shake off the lethargy and go to the polls could spell the difference between victory and defeat for Jordan and other Democratic candidates.

"It's very crucial," former Charlotte Mayor Harvey Gantt said, standing alongside Jordan as he greeted worshippers after the Friendship Baptist service.

"I see a strong black turnout being important for me," Jordan said.

Earlier this year, black enthusiasm was at or near an all-time high. Jesse Jackson's strong showing in the presidential sweepstakes inspired massive black turnout in North Carolina and across the South.

But after Jackson failed to win the nomination and Michael Dukakis rejected him as his running mate, blacks were deeply disappointed, some said. And when reports surfaced that Dukakis had asked Jackson not to campaign in some states for fear of alienating conservative whites, the disappointment turned to anger.

But some black leaders say friction between them and the Dukakis campaign has been exaggerated.

"All the energy spent over where Jackson would hurt or help was wasted energy," said state Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, state chairman of the Jackson campaign. But he said most blacks were not so disenchanted that they would pass up the opportunity to vote.

"There will be a significant number sitting it out, but I don't think it will be any greater than the percentage of the overall population that stays home," Blue said.

Aside from the Jackson factor, there appear at least a couple of other reasons why Democrats have been unable to take heavy black turnout for granted.

First, Jordan and Dukakis have made a concerted effort to win over the moderate to conservative whites who have voted Republican in recent elections. Dukakis' selection of Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen for the vice-presidential nomination was designed primarily to lure "Reagan Democrats" back to the fold.

Some blacks believe that in their effort to appeal to conservative whites, Dukakis and Jordan backed away from blacks and their agenda. Black leaders in North Carolina occasionally have been quoted this year as saying Jordan needed to devote more attention to their constituents.

But Jordan said he repeatedly had appeared before black groups whose invitations Martin had declined.

A second factor is that while Democrats likely will get the overwhelming majority of the black vote once again, the GOP is gradually making inroads in the black community.

Polls suggest Martin is poised to capture as much as 20 percent of the black vote.

Rand Files $2.5 Million Lawsuit Claiming Gardner Libeled Him

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tony Rand, the Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, filed a $2.5 million lawsuit against Republican Jim Gardner, saying his opponent had libeled him in campaign ads.

Rand filed the suit after an exchange of telegrams in which Gardner refused to retract the ads or apologize for them.

Paul Richardson, Gardner's campaign manager, said he sent a telegram to Rand in Fayetteville Sunday night, informing him that there would be no apology.

"No reason to apologize or retract ads. Unlike your ads, the truth speaks for itself. Insist you file (suit) early AM," Richardson said, reading from the telegram.

Richardson also said his telegram told Rand that the campaign plans "to make you a full-time lawyer for drug king pins after Nov. 8."

Stephanie Bass, a spokeswoman for Rand, said Rand had sent a telegram asking for the retraction as part of the legal process.

Meanwhile Sunday, The Winston-Salem Journal declined to endorse either gubernatorial candidate, saying North Carolina voters have a rare dilemma: a choice between equals.

"Republican Gov. James G. Martin and Democrat Lt. Gov. Robert B. Jordan III are both fit to fill the executive office not merely with competence but with uncommon distinction," the newspaper said.

"Citizens who have followed the campaign, and who have memories long enough to take in the past four years, will have a hard choice in the polling booth," the Journal said. "The comfort they can find in the quandry is that state government will be in good hands, whoever wins."

In the race for lieutenant governor, the Journal endorsed state Sen. Tony Rand of Fayetteville, calling him "more qualified to exercise the power responsibly and effectively."

"As an insider, with alliances in place, he knows how to make the wheels turn," the newspaper said.

The Goldsboro News-Argus, meanwhile, endorsed Martin for governor, but did not express a preference in the lieutenant governor's race.

The newspaper said Martin has represented the state well, projecting a vibrant image of "warmth, competence and confidence."

"While his management style may be enigmatic to many of us, he is both a salesman and a saleable commodity," the newspaper said. "He should be given an opportunity for a second term, but he should build a better relationship with the Democratic legislature."

In the lieutenant governor's race, the newspaper said a case could be made for breaking up the "old cliches that have run the Legislature," but it asked whether Republican Jim Gardner, "with a wealth of ideas and a dearth of legislative experience, could break bread with the collective heads he's been bashing all summer."

But the newspaper said Rand's performance in the race "has not matched his effectiveness in the General Assembly."

The Goldsboro paper also endorsed Republican George Bush for president, saying the nation had come too far and done too well economically to risk changing direction. The newspaper also endorsed Democrat Bob Etheridge for superintendent of public instruction and Republicans Donald Smith and Robert Orr for court of appeals.

First Woman D.A. Expected

RAEFORD, N.C. — Jean E. Powell, an assistant district attorney for the last 10 years, will take the oath of office on Jan. 1 as North Carolina's first female district attorney.

She will head a newly created judicial district comprising Hoke and Scotland counties.

After graduating in 1975 from the University of North Carolina law school, she worked for a year for a state legal services agency in Alaska. She spent 18 months at a private law firm in Clinton, her hometown, before taking a job as an assistant to District Attorney Edward W. Grannis Jr., whose district comprised Cumberland and Hoke counties.

"I really had very little courtroom experience when I came," Miss Powell said. "I wanted a chance to get experience trying cases and being in the courtroom. I didn't realize I was going to enjoy the job as much as I have. That was a bonus."

She had no opponents in the Democratic primary because she was the unanimous choice of the bar organizations in both counties.

Study Says Seat Belts Saved 179 Lives

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A significant increase in the use of seat belts in North Carolina has prevented thousands of serious injuries, saved 179 lives and saved about $500 million in medical and related costs, a study indicates.

The state's 3-year-old mandatory seat belt law has prompted more than half of North Carolina motorists to buckle up, said B.J.

Campbell, director of the North Carolina Highway Safety Research Center.

The study, conducted for the Governor's Highway Safety Program and mandated by the General Assembly, showed there were 4,343 fewer serious injuries and 5,821 fewer moderate injuries because of the law.

"That's 10,343 fewer total casualties attributable to the seat belt law," Campbell said.

Researchers examined accident figures over a five-year period and compared what happened before the seat belt law was enacted in 1985 with what happened after, taking into account a warning period for motorists before tickets were issued.

Campbell said there was no downward trend in deaths and injuries among motorcycle riders, pedestrians and others not affected by seat belt legislation.

SENATOR THOMAS F. TAFT
9TH DISTRICT

The Honorable James G. Martin
Governor of North Carolina
State Capitol
Raleigh, North Carolina 27611

RE: W. E. Dansey's candidacy for East Carolina University Board of Trustees

Dear Governor:

Please accept this letter as my recommendation and support for W. E. Dansey's candidacy for membership on the East Carolina University Board of Trustees. I know of few citizens in Eastern North Carolina who have demonstrated the loyalty and commitment to the progress of that University as has Bill Dansey.

A successful businessman, dedicated father, active civic leader, Bill has the character and willingness to work that is so important to the community and so necessary for a successful trustee.

Probably the most important measure of a candidate's potential value to a university board of trustees is his vision for the future. Bill has always been an individual who looked to the future and was not afraid of change so long as it promoted positive and beneficial goals. Too often, trustees are merely caretakers or administrative overseers. Bill will bring to that Board of Trustees a willingness to ask pressing questions about what the University's community role is now and in the future. He is absolutely unafraid to make difficult decisions and to take an unpopular position if he believes in the correctness of his position.

If you trust my own character and commitment to North Carolina's future based upon my record in public and private service, then Bill Dansey will be one of your most serious contenders. The decision is certainly yours, but you can make no better choice to serve East Carolina University, North Carolina and the ideals of your administration.

Sincerely yours,

Tom Taft

Changes In Elections May Increase Blacks In Office

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Only 8 percent of the county commissioners in North Carolina are black, but that could change as at least 25 of the state's 100 counties change the way they elect their local representatives, officials say.

"Boards of county commissioners, particularly in the past have all been about the same size and most elected the same way," said Michael Crowell, a Raleigh lawyer who specializes in election law. "Now there's going to be a lot more variety."

The primary goal of blacks has been to eliminate at-large voting, which forces candidates to run on a countywide basis. Critics say that dilutes the voting strength of blacks, who in some cases make up 40 percent to 50 percent of the population.

Leslie Winner, a Charlotte lawyer who has represented blacks in lawsuits against county commissioners, school boards and city councils, said election changes do not necessarily mean blacks will be elected. But the changes will give blacks the chance to elect the candidate, black or white, of their choice, she said.

In an interview with The News and Observer of Raleigh, Ms. Winner estimated that at least 40 black candidates will stand a better chance at the polls because of the elimination of at-large voting in about 20 counties.

In Pitt County, for example, where no black has ever been elected to the county board of commissioners, two blacks will take seats on the board after the election Tuesday, and a third may join them.

Currently, 42 of the state's 508 county commissioners are black.

According to information compiled by Crowell, 18 counties have changed the way commissioners are elected in the past two years. They are: Anson, Bladen, Caswell, Craven, Duplin, Forsyth, Granville, Guilford, Halifax, Lenoir, Nash, Onslow, Pamlico, Pasquotank, Pitt, Vance, Wayne and Wilson.

Three counties — Beaufort, Cumberland and Richmond — are in litigation. Three others — Chatham, Iredell and Perquimans — are threatened with lawsuits or are considering changes on their own to avoid lawsuits.

Chowan County changed its method voluntarily after watching others unsuccessfully defend their election systems. The county's plan is being reviewed by the U.S. Department of Justice, and must be approved by federal officials before it can be implemented.

"We're not dumb," said Chowan County Manager Luther Copeland. "We've got a lot more things we need to be spending a half million dollars on than attorney fees."

Blacks have had a good track record in overturning at-large elections in the past few years partly because of 1982 amendments to the federal Voting Rights Act of 1965. The law was changed to eliminate a requirement that plaintiffs prove that an election plan had been adopted with the intention of discriminating.

In 1986, the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the amended law in a case that challenged multimember districts in North Carolina.

"It really gave plaintiffs a very heavy weapon to use and is really the cause for what's been happening in the last couple of years, Crowell said.

Lathe Death

WILMINGTON (AP) — A Carolina Beach man died Saturday morning when his jacket became tangled in a lathe at a machine shop where he worked.

Terry Long Molongy, 22, was found dead by his employer about 8 a.m.

Molongy was apparently using the lathe to repair a mowing shaft when his left sleeve got caught, pulling his arm and upper body into the machine, said detective W.H. Simmons of the New Hanover County Sheriff's Department.

Molongy's employer heard the machine running when he arrived at the building. The employer found Molongy and tried to free him, but he was too late to save him.

Ugly Pickup

CLINTON, N.C. (AP) — Dancy Hayes, 82, of Clinton bought his dented, rusted, faded sky-blue Chevrolet pickup truck 25 years ago. But it wasn't until Saturday that the 1963 truck, which he calls, "Ol' Betsy," came into its own.

"Ol' Betsy" was named the winner of the fourth annual Eastern North Carolina Ugly Pickup Truck Contest.

About 50 people attended the contest, and the weather was perfect — gray, windy and wet. The contest was sponsored by the City of Clinton and the Downtown Merchants Association.

Inexperience

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Asheville's patrol officers have less experience on the average than most of their North Carolina colleagues, according to a study released by the local chapter of the North Carolina Police Benevolent Association.

And that inexperience could lead to serious injury or even death of officers and the public, charges Wayne Warren, president of the Asheville chapter of the Raleigh-based PBA.

"It's a time-bomb situation," Warren said. "We can rock along for years and nothing happen and then have two or three manhunts in one week. And, we'll have to send our rookies in there. Someone could be hurt or killed because they just don't have the experience to handle the situation. It takes about five years for an officer to have experienced all the different things he can experience and learn how to handle it."

Asheville's patrolmen have an average of 2.7 years experience — considerably less than most of the 51 North Carolina cities and counties that responded to the study, Warren said.

Is Mr. Dansey's Letter To You Based On Ignorance Or Worse?

Mr. Dansey has mailed a computer letter to every voter in the senatorial district with the heart of his message ALL WRONG.

He said on October 20 that ECU was last in capital expenditures per student behind UNC and N.C. State.¹

Senator Tom Taft corrected him on October 22 and showed that ECU was 8th on a per student expenditure and ahead of both UNC and N.C. State.²

Now in his letter to the voters, he says ECU is "10th out of the 16 universities in the amount of money it receives from the General Assembly for capital expenditures."

WRONG AGAIN, Mr. Dansey. ECU is 3rd in the total amount of money it has received from the General Assembly for capital expenditures.³

The truth is that ECU has done extremely well during the last 15 years. This is the result of success and hard work by Dr. Leo Jenkins, Dr. John Howell, Dr. Richard Eakin, area legislators and hundreds of other friends of ECU. Not even Mr. Dansey's "double talk" can change that.

the drop-out rate down and cut it in half ... set a goal to do that by 1992. "Our teachers need to be able to make up to at least $40,000 and beyond, and be treated like the rest of the professionals."

But Dansey said "the thing that really bothers me is that we talk about secondary and primary education, and being a trustee here at East Carolina University, what really concerns me is when you sit and look at the capital expenditures per pupil for the past 15 years, East Carolina ranks last.

"You know, we're the third largest university in the state. We have the largest minority population in our university of any predominately white university. And yet we rank last in the amount of facilities that have been awarded us and that includes the medical school appropriations."

According to a table provided by Dansey, ECU, from 1973 through 1988, received $84.47 million for capital projects for an average of $2,252 per student. N.C. State University's per-student average for the same period was $3,903, while the average per student at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill was $3,107.

Expensive California Propositions Top Non-Election Issues On Ballots

By Steve Geissinger
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Partisans of 29 statewide propositions Californians face Tuesday spent a record $130 million — more than $9 a voter — on a media war involving issues like car insurance rates, AIDS and raising cigarette taxes.

More than half the spending has centered on five conflicting propositions aimed at revamping the auto insurance rate-setting process and lowering premiums.

Insurance companies alone, fearing a budding "car premium revolt," poured more than $60 million into the battle, and trial lawyers' groups spent $15 million, making it the most expensive single campaign in the country outside a presidential race.

"This is the most massive financial attempt in corporate history to buy votes," said consumer advocate Ralph Nader, chief supporter of the proposition that would cut auto rates the most.

Other hotly contested initiatives would raise cigarette taxes by a record 25 cents per pack, override Republican Gov. George Deukmejian's veto of a state worker safety program, and tackle AIDS issues.

Elsewhere Tuesday: Maryland will decide whether to keep a 6-month-old law effectively banning cheap handguns; Michigan, Arkansas and Colorado will tackle the issue of abortion financing; South Dakota, Utah and Colorado will decide tax limitation proposals.

Florida, Arizona and Colorado voters will vote on whether to declare English their states' official language; and Oregon voters will consider the toughest statewide smoking ban in the nation. Insurance companies have tried to convince California voters that the only real hope for rate relief would come from Proposition 104, which would create "no-fault" auto insurance and cap attorney fees.

Insurers have condemned the rival Nader-backed Proposition 103, which would cut rates 20 percent and impose government regulation. They also have criticized a rival measure backed by lawyers to cut auto premiums by 20 percent for good drivers and prohibit limiting lawyers' fees.

Despite the insurers' blitz of television commercials, polls showed voters favoring the Nader-backed measure. But a large undecided vote left the outcome unclear.

If two or more of the measures pass, court battles may produce some unintended hybrid. California Proposition 102, backed by tax revolt champion Paul Gann, would require doctors to report people who have AIDS to county public health offices. It would also allow people charged with certain crimes to be tested for the deadly disease without their consent. The measure has been opposed by state health authorities.

Gann, who contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome in 1982 from a blood transfusion, and other supporters argued that they were tired of watching public health sacrificed in the name of civil rights. Proponents received a boost late in the campaign when Deukmejian endorsed the measure.

A second AIDS measure would allow people charged with certain crimes to be tested for AIDS without their consent. Supporters claimed the measure would help protect victims of sex crimes, police and firefighters. But critics argued it could give victims a false sense of security.

Polls indicated voters leaning toward adopting both AIDS measures.

The tobacco industry spent $18 million to defeat a measure that would raise cigarette taxes 25 cents per pack and use the money for research and health care programs. But polls indicated the initiative could pass by a slim margin.

Health experts argued in their low-budget campaign that the measure would discourage smoking; the industry called it an unfair tax that would trigger a crime wave by encouraging cigarette smuggling.

California Proposition 97, meanwhile, would in effect override Deukmejian's veto in 1987 when he wiped out the private-employer portion of the California Occupational Safety and Health Act program, known as Cal-OSHA.

Student Reportedly Tried To Stop Computer Virus

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ITHACA, N.Y. — A student suspected of unleashing a "virus" into an estimated 6,000 computers nationwide tried frantically to warn operators after discovering his experiment had gone awry, associates said.

Robert T. Morris Jr., 23, a first-year student in Cornell University's doctorate computer science program, is suspected of creating the computer virus that last week clogged the computers tied to a military network.

He has been unavailable since discovery of the virus Thursday. His father, Robert T. Morris Sr., a government computer-security expert, said his son left the university Thursday to avoid reporters.

The senior Morris has refused to say whether his son created the virus.

The electronic virus, so named because it multiplies after invading a computer, jammed computers across the country linked to the Pentagon-supported Arpanet network.

slowing computers by reproducing itself over and over. But affected centers reported the virus only took up memory space and did not destroy any files.

"It could have been a whole lot worse," said Dexter Kozen, one of Morris' instructors. "He could have wreaked a lot more havoc. I can't believe it was malicious. Mischievous, yes."

Friends of Morris quoted today in The Washington Post said Morris created the virus as an intellectual challenge and that the virus was supposed to lie dormant in computer systems.

Morris reportedly went to dinner after setting the program loose Wednesday night and checked it before going to bed. Discovering his mistake, Morris desperately worked to find a way to stop the virus' spread.

"His machines at Cornell were so badly clogged he couldn't get the message out," said Mark Friedell, an assistant professor of computer science at Harvard University, where Morris did his undergraduate studies.

Panicked, Morris called Andrew Sudduth, systems manager at Harvard's Aiken Laboratory. He asked Sudduth to send urgent messages to a computer billboard, explaining how to defeat the virus, Sudduth told The Post.

"The nets (computer networks) were like molasses," Sudduth said. "It took me more than an hour to get anything out at all."

Cornell officials said Sunday they have no absolute proof that Morris caused the virus. But the evidence in the university's computer system so far points to Morris, they said.

One Cornell official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Sunday that it appeared there was an early version of the virus in Morris' computer files.

The elder Morris, chief scientist at the National Computer Security Center in Bethesda, Md., said the episode will "clearly raise the awareness of the existing vulnerabilities, particularly of network systems."

More Families Depending On Multiple Wage Earners

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — America's wealthiest families are keeping ahead of inflation, the poorest are losing ground, and many of the rest are holding even only because more family members are working, according to a new economic study.

The study conducted for the Economic Policy Institute shows a widening gap between rich and poor since President Reagan took office, with the top-earning 20 percent making nine times as much money in 1986 as the poorest 20 percent, compared with seven times as much in 1979.

Institute president Jeff Faux said the report shows average American families have been under greater economic pressure during the past decade than at any time since World War II.

"Without new economic policies it is clear that families can no longer count on steadily increasing incomes and that the next generations cannot expect to live better than their parents," Faux said.

Stephen Rose, a Seattle economist who wrote the report along with economist David Fasenfest of Louisville, said the widening gap between rich and poor is a reversal of trends in earlier decades.

The study concludes that without big increases in the number of women working, as many as 60 percent of American families — those earning less than $40,000 a year in 1986 — would have been unable to keep up with inflation between 1979 and 1986, the latest year for which complete data is available.

The report says the number of working wives increased from 55.4 percent in 1979 to 66.1 percent in 1986.

"This is an important first step in measuring the real economic benefit of having a wife work," Rose said in a telephone interview Sunday. But he cautioned that more study is needed to determine the additional costs families incur when the wife works, such as greater need for child care.

Diplomatic Risks Rise

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Central America has become one of the most hazardous areas for U.S. government personnel because of widespread anti-American sentiment that has produced incidents ranging from harassment to diplomatic expulsions.

Diplomats stationed there also face the potential risk of losing out on career promotions because of their identification with the Reagan administration's highly controversial policies in the region.

Promotions proposed for two senior diplomats stationed in Central America have been blocked by Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., an outspoken critic of administration policy.

Perry Shankle, president of the American Foreign Service Association, the union of career diplomats, said, "As a career officer you do put your career on the line in these highly charged situations. There are a lot of dangers involved." He said the association has asked Dodd to reconsider his action.

In the region itself, life for many official Americans can be anxiety-ridden. In Panama, U.S. Marine sentries at Howard Air Force Base exchanged gunfire with unidentified intruders on four occasions last month.

Between February and October, 240 cases of harassment of American servicemen in Panama were reported, according to the U.S. Southern Command. The U.S. diplomatic presence in Panama is being reduced because of what one official called "the potentially confrontational situation" resulting from continued U.S.-Panamanian hostility.

In El Salvador, concern over personal security has heightened with stepped up leftist rebel activity in San Salvador, the capital. In late October, the offices of the U.S. Agency for International Development were struck by a projectile that cracked several windows and caused minor damage.

In previous years, the U.S. Embassy has been the target of rebel attacks on several occasions but without serious incident. Diplomats posted in El Salvador long have been security conscious, never taking the same route twice in a row when commuting. To avoid detection, one diplomat had his car repainted every few weeks.

In Nicaragua, U.S. Ambassador Richard Melton and seven other members of the embassy staff were expelled last July by the Sandinista government on grounds of interfering in Nicaragua's internal affairs.

Newhouse Dies Of Heart Attack

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Norman N. Newhouse, a low-profile newspaperman who helped establish the world's largest family-owned communications empire, died of a heart attack.

Newhouse died Sunday in his home.

The family's holdings, now run by his nephews, include 26 U.S. newspapers, Conde Nast magazines, major book publishers and cable TV systems.

Like his brothers, the late Samuel I. and Theodore Newhouse, he shunned the limelight and was little known outside the newspaper business.

For the past 20 years, Newhouse was based in New Orleans, although much of his time was spent traveling to Alabama and Ohio to visit Newhouse newspapers there. He did not take a role in the day-to-day operations of the Times-Picayune, the Newhouse group's paper in New Orleans.

The empire — now run by S.I. Newhouse's two sons, Samuel I. Newhouse Jr. and Donald Newhouse — includes Vogue, Gourmet, Vanity Fair, HG, GQ and the New Yorker magazines, the Parade Sunday newspaper supplement, the Random House book publishing group and cable TV systems serving a million homes.

Nursing Home Survey Finds Inadequacies

By Scott J. Higham
LAT/WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — A new national survey of 16,000 nursing homes finds that nearly one of every three fails to administer drugs properly and close to half store and prepare food in unsanitary conditions.

The report, conducted by the federal Health Care Financing Administration, evaluates all nursing homes receiving Medicare and Medicaid and says thousands of facilities fail to meet basic health and safety standards. The report is scheduled for release next month, but portions of it were obtained by The Allentown Morning Call.

The survey, which analyzes problems in nursing homes state by state, is the broadest of the industry to date. While the health care administration refused to comment, agency officials warn that the survey is only a "snap shot" of nursing home standards.

"It is neither the final, definitive word on nursing home performance, nor a guide to answer all questions on selection of a nursing home," the survey notes. "Rather, it provides a rich source of background materials on federal and state enforcement programs and considerable information on individual nursing homes."

The consumer-oriented survey, opposed by the nursing home industry and applauded by senior citizen advocates, relies on inspections of 16,000 facilities. Each nursing home is reviewed using 32 federally-regulated categories that range from the quality of care to patient's rights violations.

Titled "Medicare/Medicaid Nursing Home Information," the survey finds that 29 percent of the nursing homes improperly administer prescription drugs to patients. Slightly more than 42 percent of the homes fail to store, prepare and distribute food under sanitary conditions.

In several health-care categories, the survey notes that nursing homes have trouble maintaining the minimum standards set by the government. Nearly one of four facilities surveyed does not insure that residents receive rehabilitative care to prevent deformities and paralysis.

The survey also says that close to 30 percent of the facilities do not provide residents with adequate personal hygiene. One of every four fails to isolate sick residents to avoid the spread of disease, and nearly 18 percent take few steps to prevent skin deterioration.

Additionally, 9 percent of the homes inspected misuse drugs to control behavior, the survey says, and two in 100 fail to shield their residents from mental and physical abuse.

The nursing home inspections, conducted by 3,000 health officers working for 53 different state agencies, show that homes providing specialized rather than intermediate care fare worse in the categories surveyed.

But senior citizen watchdog groups and nursing home industry officials caution that the guide can mislead consumers. Patient abuse is widely underreported, for instance, and nursing aides are not likely to slap residents in the presence state inspectors. If residents are being abused, studies show they frequently remain silent.

"The published data shows a disturbing difference between official and unofficial reporting of abuse in nursing homes," said U.S. Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., ranking minority member of the Senate Aging Committee. "Until these discrepancies can be resolved, our assumption must be that the official reporting paints only part of the picture."

Heinz cited a recent study by the Pennsylvania Attorney General's Office that finds many seniors fail to report violence because of physical and mental impairments. Some fear retribution by their abusers. Still others are unsure of their rights and legal recourse, the study says.

Another study in New Hampshire found that nearly one-third of the 600 nurses and nursing aides interviewed by the University of New Hampshire last year witnessed one or more physically abusive actions committed by staff members.

The most frequent abuse was unnecessarily restraining patients, followed by pushing, grabbing or shoving patients in anger. Six staff members reported seeing patients kicked or punched or hit with objects, the New Hampshire study found.

The new nursing home survey was ordered by William Roper, chief of the Health Care Financing Administration, which oversees the Medicare and Medicaid programs.

It is the second time Roper has requested a "report card" on the health care industry, and both surveys have drawn sharp criticism from industry representatives.

Federal officials acknowledge the survey's shortcomings, saying it is an attempt to guide consumers through the complicated process of selecting nursing homes. Families should tour nursing homes and ask questions, the survey says. It includes a glossary, sample questions, tips of what to look for and phone numbers of federal health care officials stationed around the country.

The survey also includes profiles of each nursing home that note the number of beds, type of ownership, survey date and resident indicators, such as how many senior citizens are confined to chairs and how many are confused or disoriented. The indicators are compared to state and national averages.

The profile also contains the 32 performance indicators that indicate whether nursing services are provided at all hours and whether the facility protects the rights of its residents.

"We think individuals who use this information as a source document will be better informed about health care issues they or their family may face," the survey says.

Mountain Town Ponders Growth

By Bruce Henderson
THE CHARLOTTE OBSERVER

BLOWING ROCK, N.C. — There is unalloyed love in Town Clerk Judith Burns's voice as she describes her hometown:

"I can't help but believe that it's everybody's dream of a way of life," she said. "It's like a New England village, like a Christmas card, a small town the way it's supposed to be. Of course, we're not perfect..."

As the October leaf-gazing season approached, the talk was about the thing Blowing Rock does best — draw tourists. Business this summer was the best in memory, but its success prompted some municipal soul-searching.

There is worry over the lack of parking when Blowing Rock's popular arts-and-crafts show is held in the town park six weekends a year. And some Main Street business people add that they heard unruly voices shouting from cars this past summer, and even a few honking car horns.

That sort of behavior is not at all condoned in this venerable Watauga County tourist town of 1,506, where the unhurried ambience is both

White Shirts Make News

NEW YORK (AP) — The ubiquitous white blouse, always dependable but seldom fashionable, is making news for fall and winter.

"We've been talking about the bright, white shirt for a couple of years, and now it is making a strong fashion statement that's just beginning to roll," says Marjorie S. Deane, chairman and publisher of Tobe Associates Inc., which publishes the Tobe Report for fashion retailers.

"There are so many ways," she says, "to wear the white shirt — with a short skirt, the new long skirt, or with pants — and so many ways to accessorize a white shirt, that it's a natural to stretch the clothing budget."

The white shirt showed up in nearly every designer collection on both sides of the Atlantic during trade shows last April. From Yves St. Laurent to Calvin Klein and Ralph Lauren, it was shown with a jacket for day and with dressy pants or a skirt for evening.

"The bright, white shirt will now come out from under the jacket," says Deane. "The new shirts are better looking than ever and can stand on their own for career or after-five dressing."

In addition to the well-tailored, crisp shirt, this season offers white blouses with innovative detailing: lace, embroidery, scrolls, tucks and pleats and soutache, a flat decorative braid. More lavish touches include hand-finished flowers and faux pearl and ribbon appliques.

Fabrics are soft, necklines variable. There are high, crushed collars; soft bows; portrait collars; ruffles.

Lucille Klein, fashion director of J.C. Penney, with stores nationwide, says the white shirt will not fade rapidly from the fashion scene.

"I am currently working on fall, 1989," she says, "and soft shirting ... will be a key fashion item. Also, with the emergence of the vest as a fashion piece, the white shirt becomes an integral part of dressing."

A Stress Cure: Call 'Enough'

By Dana Kennedy
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEWTON, Mass. — Nan Berman has a suggestion for all spurned lovers, tyrannized employees and anyone who's had an especially bad day: don't get mad, get even. And she'd be glad to help.

Her month-old business "Enough is Enough," billed as "creative revenge for today's world," has already mailed a three-foot dead bluefish to a philandering husband in California and delivered a burned and messy suit to a lawyer who implied his girlfriend was "unsuitable" for him.

More common requests among those wronged, however, are the 13 dead roses, sent in a beribboned black box ($25), or 13 black balloons tied together by a single dead red rose ($30).

Other "insults to suit the occasion" include a real stuffed shirt ($25) for pompous bosses and drinking glasses with cigarette butts on the bottom for obnoxious smokers.

"Twenty years ago, people didn't speak up the way they do now," said Berman. "But since the '60s, people have expressed themselves. And with me, you really have a way to vent things out."

Berman, 43, was inspired to start "Enough is Enough" after a year spent driving a florist delivery truck for a boss she said was the "grumpiest, most unpleasant person ever born."

"She never smiled, she was just miserable," said Berman. "I hung in there for a year but I was so sick of it. I thought — I can get this same atmosphere by making a business out of it."

Berman financed her venture with $30,000, some of it from her husband, a businessman. She prowled bargain-basement department stores and gift shows for ideas. She brought back artifacts such as a cloth witch on a stick (for "those witchy people on brooms"), porcelain pigs ("for people on a diet") and real kites (to send those for whom you want to tell "go fly a kite").

She buys her dead roses for $5 for several dozens at the Boston Flower Exchange and purchases other items in bulk. Her material is a combination of specialty store items from joke shops and objects she finds herself.

Berman is happiest fielding phone calls in her small office behind a florist, surrounded by boxes of wilting roses, black balloons, and buttons reading "First of All — We Kill All the Lawyers."

She jumps up enthusiastically to point out another gag, like the cactus she recently bought. She plans to deliver it to an insufferable boor with the words "sit on it," she said, laughing uproariously.

"Maybe after a while it won't seem so funny but now I can't help laughing all the time," she said.

Since she opened her business, Berman has received more than 100 calls and 30 people have paid for her services. She promises her customers that she won't reveal their names.

"I want to stress that we'll do anything, as long as it's legal," she said.

Berman is most eager to coordinate more elaborate schemes. For people who want to play a prank on a boss, she has a plan in the works to move the boss's office furniture and to another part of the building.

"But we'll move it back during the day," she said. "Most people we get are doing this stuff for a joke. They're not malicious."

Berman's part-time staff consists of her 23-year-old son, her cousin and a friend. Her days driving a flower truck are a distant memory.

"We just sit around and laugh all day," Berman said.

Double Wedding: A Perfect Solution

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: You are correct to say that hotel managers do not care whether couples traveling together are married or not. After I lost my first wife to cancer in the 1950s, I made trips to Las Vegas, New Orleans, San Antonio and elsewhere — signing the hotel register with my name only, and marking "2" in the proper space when I took a lady along.

After losing my second wife to cancer, I was 79 years old and thought my time for romance was over — then I met a lovely lady at church. She was a 65-year-old widow. Before we married, she wanted a trial honeymoon trip and so did I. She wanted to go to the Swiss Alps and I wanted to go to the Orient. We compromised and went to both!

The travel agent made all our reservations in the name of "Mr. and Mrs." However, our passports were in our own names. The tour hostess called us "The Andersons," and the only embarrassment occurred when others on the tour asked us how long we had been married because we looked like honeymooners. We were, actually, but we weren't married yet. Our biggest difficulty was getting a double bed instead of twin beds.

I'm 82, and happier than I ever thought I could be at this age. All I can say is what my wife's daughter told her after meeting me: "Go for it, Mama!" — Andy Anderson, Desert Hot Springs, Calif.

Dear Andy: Thanks for another testimonial to the fact that people are not only living longer, they are enjoying their later years more. Go for it, Papa!

Dear Abby: You recently published a letter from a young woman who wanted to get married before her sister, who had announced her engagement first.

My son had the same problem when he decided to get married after we had begun making the arrangements for his sister's wedding. The perfect solution for our family was to make it a double wedding! The brides agreed to it, and all the brothers and sisters from the three families involved were included in the bridal parties.

It turned out to be enormously successful, and the wedding was far more memorable than two small weddings would have been. Also, it was appreciated by the out-of-town friends and relatives who didn't have to make two trips. — Marilyn Ippolito, Phoenix

Dear Marilyn: My twin sister and I also had a double wedding (circa 1939), and we recommend it. But not every bride would be willing to share equal billing with another bride.

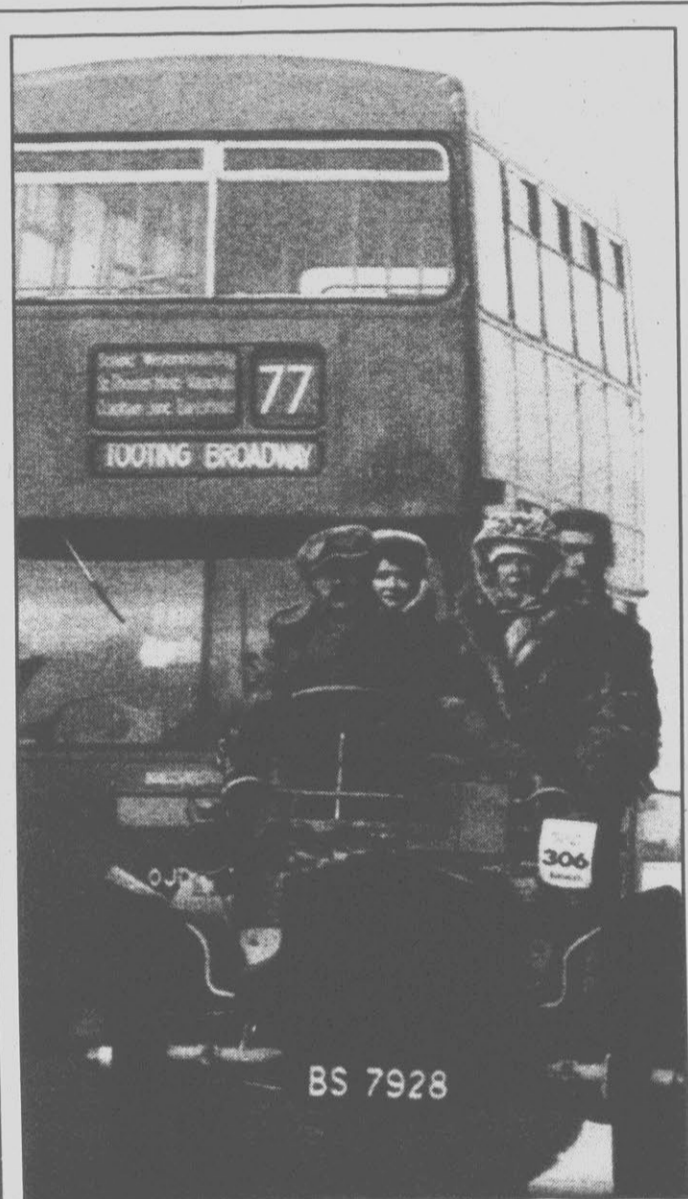

Dear Abby: When my wife and I were married, there was no way I was going to call my father-in-law — who is an elderly gentleman — "Roy" or "Mr. Henderson." I started to call him "Governor." He loved it, and told all his younger friends about it. To his joy, they promptly adopted it.

This may be a solution to a tough problem. — Donald Ridge, Waukegan, Ill.

Dear Donald: Wonderful. Now, do you have any ideas about what to call an elderly mother-in-law? How about "Governess" ... or just "Hello, Beautiful"?

Don't put off writing thank-you notes, letters of sympathy, etc. because you don't know what to say. Get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send a check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Former Haitian Strongman Dies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — One of Haiti's most powerful men, a colonel indicted on U.S. drug charges who until recently led the country's most feared army unit, has died under suspicious circumstances, a family friend says.

Col. Jean-Claude Paul, who was forcibly retired Sept. 30 as commander of the Dessalines Battalion, died about 3 p.m. Sunday of a heart attack in his home in suburban Fermeche, Radio Haiti-Inter said. He was 49.

The independent station gave no other details, but a family friend said there was speculation the 29-year army veteran was poisoned.

Paul's maid and gardener were detained by police for questioning, said the family friend, who would not be identified further.

In addition, the colonel's former wife, Mireille Delinois, was taken to the Petionville police station for protection because of fear of reprisals by Paul's relatives, the friend said.

The military government's spokesman, Frantz Lubin, said he had no information on Paul's death. U.S. Embassy spokeswoman Susan Clude also said she had nothing.

Paul was stripped of his command after a Sept. 17 revolt by noncommissioned officers ousted Haiti's military leader, Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy.

The coup leaders, who said they were outraged by state-sponsored murder under Namphy, replaced him with Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril and ousted about 60 of the army's most repressive commanders.

Paul at first appeared allied with Avril, but the new leader reportedly became concerned Paul might turn against him. Last month, Avril said he planned to close the barracks of the 700-man Dessalines Battalion, the most brutal unit in Haiti's 7,000-member army.

The unit has been linked to the Tonton Macoutes, the hated private army of the 29-year Duvalier family dictatorship, and some of its members have been blamed for widespread violence that has thwarted moves toward democratization promised after a popular uprising drove Jean-Claude Duvalier into exile in February 1986.

The violence included attacks on polling stations that forced the cancellation of independently run general elections last November, leaving at least 34 people dead.

Paul had been a powerful force in the army, which has run this impoverished Caribbean nation for most of its 144 years. The barracks of his former command are adjacent the presidential palace.

In March, Paul was indicted by a federal grand jury in Miami on charges of conspiring to import cocaine into the United States.

The soldiers who ousted Namphy said they wanted to name him army chief but decided not to because of the drug charges.

Haitian and diplomatic sources later said Paul's retirement could help lead to the renewal of a $70 million annual aid package the United States cut off after the November 1987 election massacre.

The drug trafficking indictment alleges Paul conspired to import 220 pounds of cocaine into the United States in December 1986. It says the traffickers used a landing strip on Paul's farm 90 miles outside Port-au-Prince, the capital, to load and fly the shipment to the Bahamas.

Sakharov Arrives

"Two years ago, I became a free man when I returned from Gorky to Moscow," Sakharov said. "Now I have become even freer because I have been granted the right to travel around the world."

"But a man who staged a one-person demonstration on my behalf in January 1980 when I was exiled to Gorky remains in prison. The name of that man is Vazif Meilanov. He has been charged once again with a very serious crime and faces a long imprisonment."

Meilanov was a cellmate of Natan Sharansky, who was deported in 1986 for his human rights work. Sharansky, who now lives in Israel, said last May that Meilanov remained in Siberia.

Sakharov is traveling without his wife, Yelena Bonner, who saw him off with a kiss at Sheremetyevo Airport in Moscow.

He was starting his trip with a visit to her daughter by a previous marriage, Mrs. Yankelevich, Mrs. Yankelevich's husband, Efrem, and their two teen-age children in suburban Newton.

Sakharov is expected to visit Mrs. Bonner's son, Alexei Semyonov, Semyonov's wife, Liza Alekseyeva, and their 4-year-old daughter, Alexandra, in the nearby town of Westwood. It will be his first meeting with his granddaughter.

He is also scheduled to undergo a heart examination and may receive a pacemaker at Massachusetts General Hospital. Mrs. Bonner had cardiac bypass surgery at the hospital in January 1986.

Sakharov is expected to travel to New York, then Washington, where he will participate in a board meeting Nov. 13-17 of the International Foundation for the Survival and Development of Humanity, the first such session outside the Soviet Union.

The foundation, formed in January by Soviet and U.S. scientists and educators, is embarking on a worldwide campaign to raise $10 million for research on global problems.

Sakharov said Sunday he believed "my country ... and your country can do a great deal together for peace, for a world that is happy and close and without hunger, violence or disease."

He said that since childhood, he has had a great deal of respect for the United States, which is "indeed a truly great country."

The granting of an exit visa for Sakharov to visit the United States is a dramatic example of the changes in Soviet society since Mikhail S. Gorbachev became general secretary of the Communist Party in 1985.

The foundation also played a role in obtaining the visa, said Jerome Wiesner, president emeritus of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the foundation's vice chairman.

"The foundation's position was not to meet outside the Soviet Union unless all the board members could attend, and that meant the Soviet government had to change its position and give (Sakharov) permission to travel," Wiesner said at Logan airport.

Sakharov was a top Soviet physicist and helped develop its hydrogen bomb in the 1950s, but became a dissident leader in the 1970s. He was exiled to Gorky, a city about 250 miles from Moscow, in January 1980, a month after the Soviets invaded Afghanistan. His wife was banished to Gorky in August 1984.

They remained there until Gorbachev called them back to Moscow in December 1986. Earlier that year, Gorbachev had told a French newspaper Sakharov could not travel outside the Soviet Union because he knew too many state secrets.

Sakharov has continued his scientific work, and now concentrates on the origins of the universe. He speaks out occasionally on human rights issues.

Horror Recalled

Germany's tiny Jewish community, said his nation — which has emphasized how communists as well as Jews were persecuted by the Nazis — appears to be learning more from the lessons of the past than neighboring West Germany.

"In (East Germany), there's a greater cracking down on neo-fascist ways of thought than in (West Germany), where meetings of former Nazis can take place under police protection," Kirchner said Sunday in an interview on West Germany's Deutschlandfunk radio.

The city of Potsdam just outside Berlin has organized an exhibit about Jewish life during the Nazi era, which includes "shocking, original fascist documents in which an expulsion order and the stripping of (German) citizenship are communicated to Jews," according to the news agency.

Residents of Koenigstein, a West German town of 16,500 near Frankfurt, on Sunday placed a wreath at the site where the synaagogue was burned down on Nov. 10, 1938.

West Germany's Bundestag, or parliament, will hold a solemn ceremony on Thursday.

In the city of Darmstadt, about 25 miles south of Frankfurt, a new synagogue will be dedicated Wednesday.

The number of deaths on Kristallnacht remains uncertain. At least 195 synagogues and about 7,500 Jewish businesses were either destroyed or badly damaged. Some estimates put the number of vandalized synagogues at more than 1,100.

"Throughout (Germany) that night, 91 Jews met their death under the sticks, boots and bullets of the death squads of the Nazi movement," Foschepoth told 125 residents of Koenigstein on Sunday. "How was all this possible?"

Jones, Waitz Claim Wins

Waitz' Victory Is Her 9th On The New York City Marathon Course

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — For Steve Jones and Grete Waitz, the 19th New York City Marathon was vindication. For Joan Benoit Samuelson, it was a crashing, but not smashing, return to marathoning.

Jones and Waitz, recent disappointments after years of glory, were the men's and women's first-place finishers in Sunday's race, the largest marathon in history with 22,912 starters.

Samuelson, the 1984 Olympic gold medalist who was running her first marathon in three years, was victimized by two collisions, one of which sent her sprawling to the ground, and an unexpected "pit stop," which she attributed to nervousness over her inactivity.

Although Samuelson, who had been unbeaten in five marathons since 1981, finished third among the women, she provided the most spectacular action in the heavily congested field, which at times resembled roller derby.

Near the 11-mile mark, she bumped into Laura Fogli of Italy as the two were chasing Waitz, but neither fell nor was injured.

At the 14-mile point, Samuelson left the course briefly to relieve herself after suffering "stomach cramps."

"I think it was a case of nerves," she said, "because I hadn't run a marathon since 1985."

And just past 21 miles, she was upended by a volunteer who came onto the course with a cup of water for another runner.

"I did a complete somersault, but I got right up," the stunned Samuelson said. "I was so dazed. I don't think I was helped up. I think I got up on my own."

At that juncture, she was running third behind Waitz and Fogli.

"I had Laura in sight," Samuelson said. "I was too focused on catching her, I guess (to notice the volunteer). When I grabbed the water, I planted myself between the man giving me the water ... I was stunned."

Samuelson blamed herself in part for the mishaps.

"I'm notorious for not looking at the course beforehand," she said. "I'll look at courses from now on. This one was a challenge."

Sideline in recent years because of a series of injuries to her left leg, left hip and back, plus the birth of her first child last year, Samuelson said she was hurting and sore afterward.

"I won't wait three years before I run another marathon," said Samuelson, adding that the probably would run the Boston Marathon in April.

After the final crash, Samuelson, who said, "I lost about 30 seconds to get myself back in order," thought she could catch Waitz or Fogli, "but they were too strong."

Waitz had no difficulty with the course, one that she's run every year since 1978, except last year, when she was injured. She has won every time she started except in 1981, when she did not finish because of stomach cramps.

Sunday's victory was her ninth in New York, and her time of 2 hours, 28 minutes, 7 seconds was only one second slower than her 1986 clocking. No other marathoner has won the same marathon nine times. Waitz had been tied for the record with Johnny Kelley, an eight-time winner of the Yonkers Marathon.

Overall, Waitz has won 13 of 17 marathons, with one second-place finish — in the 1984 Olympics, behind Samuelson — and three unfinished races, including this year's Olympic marathon in Seoul.

The injury which kept her out of the 1987 New York City Marathon and the arthroscopic knee surgery which forced her out of this year's Olympics made Waitz an uncertain commodity coming into Sunday's race.

"This victory is a little sweeter than the others, except for the first one 10 years ago," she said after

ECU's Win Eases Past Frustrations

All year long, there has been the feeling that somewhere within the East Carolina University football team, there was a winner waiting to burst forth. The Pirates humbled Tennessee Tech in their first outing. Since then Tech has won but one game, and the ease of that victory somewhat colored what has happened since then.

The Pirates followed that win with perhaps their worst all-around performance against a Virginia Tech team that certainly cannot be said to have set the world on fire. Aside from East Carolina, it has won but one other game, that against next week's ECU opponent, Cincinnati.

That game may have been a turning point for the season. East Carolina went back out, however, and played well defensively against South Carolina, but the defense went right out the door in the next two games, close losses against Southern Mississippi and Southwestern Louisiana.

East Carolina had the potential to have beaten Virginia Tech, Southern Mississippi and Southwestern Louisiana, and perhaps in retrospect, maybe even South Carolina.

But what occurred, as the season swept into the October Death March, was eight consecutive losses.

Substitute Car Keys Kulwicki Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHOENIX — Alan Kulwicki says he posted his first NASCAR Winston Cup victory in the $460,735 Checker 500 in a substitute car.

"We tried to come here with an optimistic attitude, but the car we wanted to race here got wrecked at Rockingham (N.C., site of the last tour event)," he said after his victory Sunday at Phoenix International Raceway.

"This is the car we wrecked at Charlotte and wanted to run at Atlanta. The car worked well and handled well all weekend, and going into this I felt we were among the five fastest cars."

However, the misfortune of another driver and crew paved Kulwicki's path to the winner's circle at the 24-year-old Phoenix track's first-ever Winston Cup event. Ricky Rudd led 182 of the race's first 296 laps before a malfunction cost him the victory.

"It was a radiator hose, and that's disappointing. When I got the lead, the temperature gauge went crazy. I backed off and was running 50 to 60 percent on the straightaways," said Rudd, who finished second at Rockingham to Rusty Wallace.

Kulwicki, who took 260 laps to work his way from 21st to second, said he felt disbelief when he saw Rudd's misfortune.

"I'll tell you, with about 20 laps to go, I almost started crying," he said.

The 33-year-old University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee mechanical engineering graduate had another piece of luck earlier — fate kept him out of a six-car pileup on the 160th lap.

Kulwicki, the 1986 Rookie of the Year, averaged 90.457 mph for 312 laps on the one-mile oval and posted an 18.5-second victory over Terry Labonte and the 28 other drivers who finished the race.

Ditka Handles Couch Potato Role

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Mike Ditka a couch potato? "He was very calm ... about the way I expected him to be," said Dr. Jay Alexander, the cardiologist who spent Sunday watching the Chicago Bears coach observe his team play football without him for the first time in six years.

The Bears gave Ditka little reason for anxiety, as they pounded Tampa Bay early and often en route to a 28-10 victory.

"Certainly he was intense, certainly he was interested in the game," Alexander said. "But he did not lose control and he was very comfortable. He drank his iced tea, he was happy and he watched the game."

Iced tea? Sure. And he probably didn't throw a clipboard, curse a referee or yell at anyone, either.

"He didn't do anything different than if he were watching another (team's) game. And that's the truth," Diana Ditka said after leaving her husband's bedside at suburban Lake Forest Hospital, where the 49-year-old Ditka is recovering from a mild heart attack suffered Wednesday.

"If we were watching a game after our game were over with, he would always yell, 'Catch the ball.' He just gets excited a few times when somebody makes a mistake."

Now that sounds more like Mike. "But he really did fantastic," she added, "even though he chewed his gum a little harder, I think."

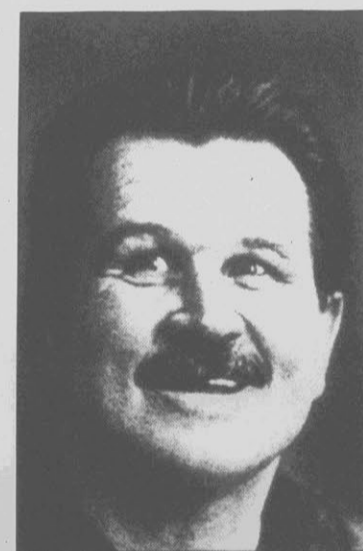

And — tell the truth — he did criticize a few things? "Yeah," Mrs. Ditka said, "a few. Doctor Alexander said, 'I'd hate to be that piece of gum in his mouth.'"

As for the players, some were more keenly aware of Ditka's watchful eye than if he had been at the stadium.

They knew he was watching TV, "and to me, that's almost scarier than having him on the sideline," offensive guard Tom Thayer said before the game.

"Because if you screw up," he added, "you know it's coming through — that he saw it."

Ditka called defensive coordinator Vince Tobin, who has assumed the head-coaching duties in his absence "and told him, 'Gosh, you're one-and-oh, you're the best coach in the league right now,'" Diana Ditka said.

Survivors Set For Meeting

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — The Houston Oilers and Cleveland Browns are survivors in the year of the injured quarterbacks.

While other teams around the league faltered as their quarterbacks fell, the Oilers and Browns kept winning. Both take 6-3 records into tonight's nationally televised game in the Astrodome.

"I don't know of any place but Cleveland and Houston where you could keep on winning without a quarterback," Oilers coach Jerry Glanville said. "They did the same thing we did."

Houston's Warren Moon and Cleveland's Bernie Kosar were both injured on opening day.

Moon missed five games after suffering a broken shoulder blade against Indianapolis and returned on Oct. 16, leading the Oilers to a 34-14 victory over Pittsburgh.

Kosar suffered an elbow injury against Kansas City and missed six games, returning Oct. 23 against Phoenix in a 29-21 victory.

The surrounding talent on both teams has helped the Browns and Oilers to continue winning, according to Glanville.

"The bottom line is he (Kosar) could screw up for five weeks and nobody will care because the defense may win four games for them," Glanville said.

Cardinals Rally Past 49ers

Down 23-0, Phoenix Comes Back For A 24-23 Victory

By Barry Wilner
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Phoenix Cardinals left their game in the locker room for one half. They left the San Francisco 49ers searching for answers in the second half.

The Cardinals stormed back from a 23-0 deficit to beat the 49ers 24-23 Sunday when Neil Lomax hit Roy Green for a 9-yard touchdown with three seconds to go. That capped a 17-point fourth-quarter comeback that had the Cardinals bubbling and the 49ers confused.

"You look at the players over there and most of them are totally spent," Phoenix coach Gene Stallings said. "That's what these kind of games are all about — you leave it on the field — and that's just what we did."

"When you come from behind playing that kind of football team with time working against you, that's a big win. It wasn't the greatest game we played from start to finish, but we made some plays when we had to."

Lomax made most of them. He was 9-for-16 for 141 yards after three quarters, then connected on 16 of 25 in the fourth period. He had 323 yards passing despite being sacked seven times.

"Our offense played well but people forget our defense started playing well in the second half," Lomax said. "When the offensive line gives me time like it did late in the game, I can find people."

He found Green on a 35-yard scoring pass with 3:39 left in the third quarter. Al Del Greco's 24-yard field goal and Lomax's 5-yard TD pass to rookie Ernie Jones with 2:19 left brought the Cardinals within 23-17.

San Francisco was forced to punt and Phoenix, with no timeouts remaining, took over at its 34 with 1:27 left. It took seven plays before Green scored and Del Greco kicked the decisive extra point.

"I wanted it," Green said. "They pay me a lot of money to come through in situations like this. There was no doubt in my mind it was going to be a touchdown."

There was plenty of wonder among the 49ers.

"It's one of the worst defeats ever," center Randy Cross said. "It ranks up there. You can point all sorts of fingers, but the bottom line is we didn't do enough in the fourth quarter."

Added quarterback Steve Young, "It's 23-0 in the third quarter. That's a pretty good lead in the NFL. They came back with some tremendous scoring drives. We'll look back on this and just pull our hair out."

Eagles 30, Rams 24

The Eagles had the lowest-rated pass defense in the league, but it befuddled Jim Everett and the Rams. Everett had thrown just five interceptions before being picked off four times by Philadelphia, 5-5.

"Everett is a great quarterback, but we were able to confuse him today," said William Frizzell, a former Rose High standout who had one of the interceptions. "We mixed it up pretty good with our zone and man-to-man defense and we made up our minds to concentrate on our responsibilities and be consistent every down."

Still, Everett nearly led his team back to a sixth straight road win. But Frizzell stole a pass deep in Philadelphia territory with 24 seconds remaining. Philadelphia's Randall Cunningham threw three touchdown passes, two to rookie tight end Keith Jackson.

games, the best record in the NFC.
Tobin's defense clamped down on Tampa Bay quarterback Vinny Testaverde with two interceptions and two sacks.
"We didn't go out with the idea of playing this game for anyone but ourselves and the players," Tobin said. "The players know how to win on the field and they came through."
Bills 13, Seahawks 3
At Seattle, the Bills beat former coach Chuck Knox for the first time and upped their league-best record to 9-1 with their fifth consecutive win. Buffalo's defense didn't allow a touchdown for the second straight week and yielded just 145 total yards. Bruce Smith had two of Buffalo's four sacks.
Raiders 13, Chargers 3
Los Angeles held San Diego to 63 yards on the ground — Marcus Allen, with 67, and Bo Jackson, with 64, each had more rushing yardage than the Chargers.
Redskins 27, Saints 24
New Orleans, 7-3, has lost by a total of six points in its defeats. When Washington rallied from a 24-17 hole with 8:12 minutes left, the Saints failed to tie the league record of consecutive road victories. New Orleans, tied for the NFC West lead with the Rams, had won 10 straight away from home.
But the Redskins, 6-4, drove 94 yards for the tying touchdown, an 8-yard pass from Doug Williams to Ricky Sanders. After a punt, Washington moved 64 yards to set up Chip Lohmiller's winning 23-yard field goal with 47 seconds to go.
Morten Anderson was short on a 49-yard field goal attempt with four seconds remaining for New Orleans.
Falcons 20, Packers 0
Green Bay suffered a second straight shutout for the first time since 1932 — the Packers lost 28-0 to Buffalo last weekend.
For Atlanta, it was its first win at home after eight straight defeats and the Falcons' first shutout since a 35-0 whipping of New Orleans in 1982.
Bengals 42, Steelers 7
Eddie Brown needed only seven catches to compile a club-record 216 yards receiving. He teamed with Boomer Esiason for an 86-yard scoring pass on the Bengals' second play from scrimmage and Cincinnati, leading the AFC Central at 8-2, never looked back.
Esiason, the league's top passer, had no TD passes in the past two games, but threw against the Steelers as Cincinnati rolled up more than 500 yards of offense.
Patriots 21, Dolphins 10
Host New England ran and ran some more. Miami couldn't stop rookie John Stephens from gaining 104 yards, giving him more than 100 yards in three consecutive games; the last Patriot to do that was Don Calhoun in 1976. The Patriots had 203 yards on the ground.
Giants 29, Cowboys 21
New York held its lead in the NFC East with its fourth straight victory. Those wins have come against teams which, when they played the Giants, had a total of six victories.

This time, however, the Giants played well in the first half, a rarity this season. New York surged to 26 points by halftime against Dallas, 2-8. The Cowboys have lost six straight for the first time in one season since their debut year, 1960.
Vikings 44, Lions 17
At Minneapolis, Wade Wilson had the biggest passing day of his career with 391 yards and two touchdowns. He was 28-for-25 and found Anthony Carter eight times for 188 yards.
Broncos 17, Chiefs 11
At Denver, the Chiefs couldn't match their only win this year, a 20-13 decision over the Broncos. Instead, Kansas City fell to 1-8-1, the worst record in the league, getting just three Nick Lowery field goals and a safety.
Colts 38, Jets 14
Indianapolis took apart New York in the second half, scoring 21 points in the third period for its fourth consecutive victory — the Colts' longest winning string in 11 years.

Rookie QB Chris Chandler passed 44 yards to Clarence Verdin for a TD and ran 29 yards for another during the third-quarter burst, when the Colts needed just eight plays to get the 21 points.

Which of These Children Will Fall Victim to Drugs?
They're nice kids from a family like yours, but one in six will soon try cocaine, crack or pot.
Let's force the politicians in Raleigh to stop playing games with our children's future.
Bill Dansey is committed to a seven-point program to remove drugs from our streets.
• Increase the number of SBI agents fighting drugs to at least 100.
• Double the money available for undercover and sting operations by state and local agents.
• Impose mandatory life sentences for drug trafficking.
• Restore funding to build a new state crime lab.
• Abolish parole and gain-time credits for convicted drug traffickers.
• Make drug trafficking one of the aggravating factors a jury should consider in recommending the death penalty for first-degree murder.
• Pursue and prosecute habitual drug users as felons.
It's time for a change in Raleigh. The children are counting on us. Elect Bill Dansey to the North Carolina Senate.

Martina Navratilova gestures after winning match Sunday

Navratilova Enjoys Tough Competition

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Martina Navratilova, who once dominated women's tennis, has learned to enjoy some healthy competition.

"That's one of the best matches I've ever been part of," said the 32-year-old resident of Fort Worth, Texas, after battling to a 6-7 (4-7), 6-4, 6-3 victory Sunday over Natalia Zvereva of the Soviet Union in the finals of the $300,000 New England Virginia Slims championship.

Navratilova, ranked a distant second to Steffi Graf in women's tennis, was behind 3-2 in the final set before winning four straight games and breaking Zvereva at 15 in the finale.

"That's what it's all about," said Navratilova, who earned her 137th career singles title. "I played close to my best but she rushes you, doesn't give you time to get set up. She's got me on a yo-yo with that slice service."

Navratilova has beaten the 17-year-old Zvereva four times in six career meetings.

"She's a little younger than I am," Navratilova said. "She has more room for improvement but not too much."

Navratilova, who has won the New England Virginia Slims four times, said she was impressed with Zvereva's game.

"If I was going to lose, I was going to enjoy her shots. I didn't play too well at the start and if I'd lost I would just have said she played the big points better."

Zvereva reached the finals by knocking out second-seeded Chris Evert in straight sets Saturday and was encouraged by her play against Navratilova.

"I was surprised I wasn't so tired from yesterday," Zvereva said. "Now I feel able to beat her. I was playing mentally better today."

In other major tournaments this weekend, West German Boris Becker defeated Swede Peter Lundgren 6-4, 6-1, 6-1 to win the $642,500 Stockholm Open; American John McEnroe beat Soviet Andrei Chesnokov 6-1, 7-5, 6-2 in the finals of the $1 million European Community championship in Antwerp, Belgium, and Zina Garrison, Lori McNeil and Gigi Fernandez led the United States to a 7-0 sweep in the Wightman Cup at London's Royal Albert Hall.

McEnroe, the top player in the world in the early 80s, beat injured Soviet Andrei Chesnokov 6-1, 7-5, 6-2 Sunday to win the $1 million European Community Championship.

"I am ready to take the next step," the 29-year-old McEnroe said. "I've taken quite a few, but there are still some to go."

Chesnokov was hardly a worthy opponent but that didn't matter to McEnroe as it was his sparkling play throughout the week-long exhibition event that gave him confidence for the future.

Leonard Hopes For Magic Again

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — Sugar Ray Leonard, 32 years old and at his heaviest weight ever, tries once again to summon up his special brand of boxing magic tonight when he faces Donny Lalonde, Canada's "Golden Boy."

Leonard, whose flashy ring skills and deep determination have enabled him to meet every challenge he's faced so far, now faces a more vague test.

Will he be as motivated as he was for his much-heralded fights against such well-known champions as Marvelous Marvin Hagler, Thomas Hearns and Roberto Duran?

Will his ability be eroded by the added weight and the fact he has fought just three times in almost seven years?

And, how good is Lalonde? Leonard, coming out of retirement for the third time, will bring a 34-1 record with 24 knockouts into the 12-round bout at Caesars Palace's outdoor arena.

He is rated a 3 1/2-1 favorite as he tries to collect the fourth and fifth titles of his career.

Lalonde will carry a 31-2 record, with 26 knockouts, into the fight, scheduled to begin at approximately 11 p.m. EST.

The contractual top weight is 168 pounds, but Lalonde's World Boxing Council light heavyweight title (175 pounds) will be at stake, along with the WBC's newly created super middleweight (168-pound) crown.

Leonard says he has plenty of motivation.

"I know he wants to win for himself and for the people in Canada and I respect that," Leonard said of his foe from Winnipeg, Manitoba. "And I want to win for myself and to keep the title in the States...."

"My motivation is that I enjoy winning more than losing."

Leonard added that he's worked harder for this fight than he did for the meeting with Hagler in April, 1987, when Leonard won a split decision.

"The Hagler fight, for some reason, I procrastinated," he said. "I kept putting it (training) off and off."

"With Lalonde, I know subconsciously that if I don't train hard, that something could happen to me like it did in the Kevin Howard fight."

The lightly regarded Howard knocked Leonard down in the ninth round of their May 1984 fight in Leonard's first comeback.

Leonard won a decision in the fight, the only other bout besides the Hagler fight that he has had since February 1982.

Leonard, whom many believe was at his best as a 147-pound welterweight, believes neither the added weight nor the fact he has fought infrequently will take any edge off his ability.

"Some people say I've slowed a step," Leonard said. "They're the same people who said Michael Spinks would beat Mike Tyson."

While there are many questions about Leonard at this stage of his career, there are perhaps even more surrounding Lalonde.

In a number of obvious ways, he would seem to have an edge over Leonard. At 28, he's four years younger. Lalonde also will be five pounds heavier, 168 to 163, and, at 6-foot-1 1/2, he is about three inches taller.

Waitz Claims 9th NYC Marathon

leading the women virtually the entire distance. "This one is not the most important, like the one in 1978, because if I hadn't won that one, I wouldn't be here today."

Waitz had said after the frustration of watching last year's New York City Marathon, she was thinking seriously about retiring. She was talked out of it by her husband, Jack.

Winning the $26,385 first prize, plus a new Mercedes-Benz, made her thankful she did not quit.

Jones, who received the same first prize and a similar car, also has been frustrated in recent years.

After winning the Chicago Marathon in 1984 in 2:08:05, then a world best, winning the 1985 London Marathon in 2:08:16 and defending his Chicago title in 1985 in 2:07:13, one second short of the world best and now No. 4 on the all-time list, his marathon performances dipped.

Sunday, he showed his old form, winning in 2:08:20, only seven seconds off the course record set by Alberto Salazar in 1981.

Jones was ecstatic over his victory. As he neared the finish line in Central Park, he waved to the hordes of fans and thrust his right fist into the air in a triumphant gesture.

"I don't care about the record, I came here to win," the Welshman said. "I couldn't resist the waves. I proved the point to those who wrote me off and said I was finished. It gives me a certain amount of satisfaction."

Among Jones' poorer efforts in the past three years was a ninth-place finish at this year's Boston Marathon. That cost him a place on Britain's Olympic team.

"I'm not dwelling on the disappointment of not going to Seoul," said Jones, a bronze medalist in the 1984 World Cross-Country Championships and the 1986 Commonwealth Games in the 10,000 meters.

"After Boston, I decided I wasn't going to go into any high pressure races and I was going to ease off in my racing."

He also decided to retire from the Royal Air Force after 14 1/2 years of a 22-year commitment. He had to pay $400 to free himself of his remaining obligation to the RAF, in which he had reached the rank of corporal and worked as an aircraft technician.

Concentrating full-time on running, he began to work his way back to his old form with three strong performances during the summer in shorter races.

He was ready Sunday. After bidding his time early in the race, he bolted into the lead at the 12.4-mile mark, was caught briefly at 15 miles by Salvatore Bettiol of Italy, then took command.

Bettiol finished second in 2:11:41, more than three minutes behind Jones. He was followed by 1984 Olympic silver medalist John Treacy of Ireland in 2:13:18 and Gidamis Shahanga of Tanzania, the 1978 Commonwealth Games gold medalist, in 2:13:50.

Fogli was the second-place woman's finisher in 2:31:26, also more than three minutes behind Waitz. Samuelson's time was 2:32:40.

Would You Eat This Diseased Crab from the Pamlico?

If You Leave Tom Taft in the North Carolina Senate, You May Have To.

After years in the North Carolina Senate, Tom Taft, through inaction, leaves dead fish floating on the Pamlico and diseased shellfish and crabs beneath the surface. He flip-flopped his position on the Phosphate Ban, while his appropriations committee refused to approve funds for a much-needed coastal environmental study.

Don't let this record of tragic neglect continue.

This year, send a man to Raleigh who will clean up our environment and has the clout to get things done. Bill Dansey pledges to:

- Create a state-level Department of Health and Environment to coordinate all environmental regulatory activities.
- Develop cost-effective alternatives to solid-waste disposal landfills.
- Appropriate funds for much needed coastal projects.
- Work closely with industry for a cleaner environment.
- Impose tighter controls on disposal of hospital/medical wastes.
- Adopt state-wide standards for watershed protection.
- Improve programs for protecting coastal waters and the fishing industry.

Brown Defends His Actions At Kansas

By Scott Ostler
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

While admitting his guilt in the case of NCAA vs. Kansas U, former Kansas basketball coach Larry Brown has invoked the "grandmother defense."

Larry's program was found guilty of giving $1,244 worth of cash and inducements to a recruit, and the program was slapped with a three-year probation.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association punishment means that the Jayhawks, who won the national title last season, will not be allowed to compete in the postseason tournament.

The baseball equivalent would be for the Los Angeles Dodgers to be ruled ineligible for postseason play until the next decade because Jay Howell used pine tar.

Larry Brown says that he bought an airline ticket for the young man in question so that he could visit his gravely ill grandmother, who reared the lad and who died a short time after the illegally funded visit.

"I'd give it to anybody if they told me his grandmother was passing away," Brown said.

Larry's own personal suffering will be limited. In an incredibly fortunate bit of timing, Brown and his entire KU coaching staff transferred itself en masse to the San Antonio Spurs, a professional team not subject to NCAA jurisdiction. Larry will be paid $3.5 million over the next five years, and the Spurs are eligible for postseason play.

In fact, by beating the Los Angeles Lakers Saturday night to run their regular-season record to 1-0, the Spurs qualified for the National Basketball Association playoffs.

Meanwhile, the Kansas players, the new coaching staff and the student body are picking through the ruins of a basketball program, even though nobody currently residing within the state of Kansas has been found guilty of the teensiest infraction.

Clearly, some rethinking is in order. The NCAA's penalty schedule, for instance, has been exposed as inadequate.

The NCAA announced that it came very close to imposing its "death penalty" on Kansas basketball, shutting down the program for one year. This is after a two-year, full-scale investigation turned up one breach of the rules, involving $1,244 and one young man who didn't even enroll at the school.

If this level of criminal activity will put you on the brink of capital punishment, what should happen to a school that, say, illegally recruits two players, and buys each a new car? It is highly unlikely that any school would ever get that carried away. But you never know.

Just in case, the NCAA needs a Death-Plus plan, a graduated system of bonus penalties for frequent fudgers.

To administrate the plan, the NCAA would hire Shirley MacLaine as Commissioner of Reincarnation. She would rule on how soon a convicted team is eligible to return to life, and in what form.

Also, the NCAA must learn to pick its targets better. You can't make a villain out of Larry Brown, the Charlie Chaplin of basketball.

Talk about reincarnation. Larry is Charlie with a better wardrobe. Brown has the wide, innocent eyes of a cuddly orphan. He never misses an opportunity to refer to his players, in his shy and soft-spoken way, as "my kids."

Lord knows that there are enough cheating coaches out there. College athletics is the world's biggest carnival midway, a colorful and brightly-lit aisle of illusions and deceptions.

Step right up, pal. See the pure athletic contest, played by eager children in return for nothing more than the glory of a college education.

We develop a sport like college basketball that generates hundreds of millions of dollars for advertisers, universities, coaches and gamblers. Then we expect the "kids" to donate their services.

We expect the coaches to run a clean program when doing so would cost many of them their careers.

Maybe in some other lifetime. The solution to the deceit and hypocrisy is to open college athletics, where a player is paid whatever he or she can command, with no restrictions or penalties.

History, however, tells us this would be a fatal course.

We all remember how the sport of tennis withered and died when cash prizes became legal. We remember the late, great sport of major league baseball, tragically wiped out by free agency. We lament the passing of the NBA, driven out of existence years ago by greedy players demanding huge contracts.

We mourn the late, great Olympic Games, which lost the interest of the public once professionals were allowed to contaminate the amateur purity.

Fortunately, we still have college sports, where the bad guys are good guys, the kids play for fun and even death isn't as bad as it seems.

Samuelson Glad To Finish Accident-Filled Marathon

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — After crossing the finish line at the New York City Marathon, Joan Benoit Samuelson felt more like a Mike Tyson victim than a long-distance runner.

Samuelson survived a collision with another runner, a mid-race knockdown by an overeager volunteer and a queasy stomach Sunday to finish third in her first marathon since 1985.

"It was a very tough race for me, but I'm pleased with the way I competed," Samuelson said.

Samuelson, who took three years off from marathon competition due to injuries and the birth of her first child, was obviously not in peak form for her first New York Marathon. But she still managed to beat everyone in the women's field except Grete Waitz of Norway and Laura Fogli of Italy.

Waitz, who finished second behind Samuelson at the 1984 Olympics, won the New York race for a record ninth time in 2:28:07. Fogli was runner-up in 2:31:26, while Samuelson completed the course in 2:32:40.

"Whenever you lose to Grete, it's certainly an honor," Samuelson said after losing a marathon for the first time since 1981, when she finished third at Boston. "She owns this course."

It must have seemed like an obstacle course to Samuelson.

Near the 11-mile mark, she bumped into Fogli and nearly fell down.

A few miles later, stomach cramps forced the 31-year-old American to make a brief "pit stop."

"I went between some parked cars and did what I had to do," she said.

At the 21-mile mark, while running in third place behind Waitz and Fogli, Samuelson was accidentally knocked down by a volunteer who was attempting to hand a cup of water to another runner.

Samuelson said she was focusing on Fogli at the time and didn't see the volunteer running onto the course.

"I did a complete somersault," she said. "I was really dazed."

A male runner attempted to help Samuelson, but she said she got up on her own.

"I don't know whether it cost me second place," she said, "but I never would have caught Grete anyway. She was too strong today."

Samuelson, who lives in Freeport, Maine, has the second-fastest time in women's marathon history and the four fastest times by an American. But her last race at the distance was the 1985 Chicago Marathon, where she set the American record of 2:21:21.

Since then, she has battled hip, leg and back injuries and given birth to a daughter last year. So she wasn't quite sure what to expect Sunday.

"I was a little wobbly the first five miles," Samuelson said. "From five to 10 miles, I felt great. At 13 miles I got stomach cramps and at 14, I bowed out to make a pit stop."

Kulwicki Wins Race

His elapsed time was 3:26:57.

Kulwicki had failed to qualify among the top 20 on Friday after a 120.595-mph lap but came back the next day with a 122.179-mph run to lead those who elected to requalify.

"Somebody told me maybe the trick was not to qualify so well," he joked.

Labonte, who started 17th, beat Davey Allison to the checkered flag and, although he was two-thirds of a mile behind Kulwicki at the end, said he thought with new tires he might have won.

"I was and I wasn't looking for a caution near the end. I would have liked a caution to get new tires, but I didn't want a caution because I was about out of brakes," Labonte said.

Winston Cup points leader Bill Elliott breezed into fourth late in the race, just ahead of Wallace, whose string of three consecutive cup victories ended.

Wallace, who led the field on three occasions for 67 laps, was ahead of Elliott in third place until he ran low on fuel with four laps remaining and was forced into the pit.

Elliott entered the event 79 points ahead of Wallace and maintained that margin heading into the last of 29 cup races this season, the Atlanta Journal 500 on Nov. 20.

The 160 points both picked up gave Elliott 4,358 to 4,279 for Wallace. Dale Earnhardt, the 1987 series champion, was eliminated from contention with 131 points and a total of 4,131 after placing 11th.

Elliott could win his first series crown by finishing 18th or better at Atlanta, NASCAR officials said.

Pole starter Geoff Bodine, Bobby Hillin, Benny Parsons, Phil Parsons and Sterling Marlin rounded out the top 10.

Rudd, 32, who won the rookie title in 1977, qualified fourth and ran lower than that only for brief periods after pit stops. He led at three different points in the race — the last time from the 252nd lap through the 296th — before steam began streaming from his car.

Rudd never completed the 297th lap and drove straight to the garage area.

The race was marked by 14 lead changes, with seven drivers on the point at different intervals.

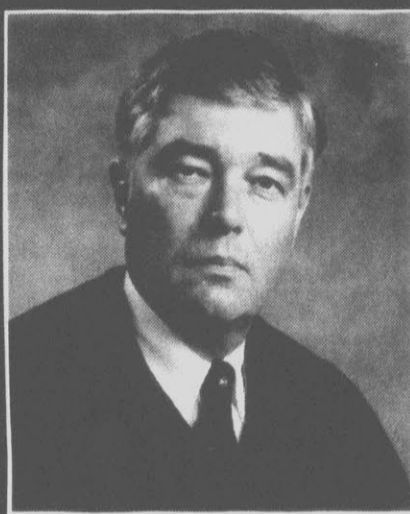

Officials slowed the field seven times with caution flags. The last was the midrace collision in the front straightaway which took out Johnny Rutherford, Mike Martin, Bill Schmitt and Greg Sacks and forced Rick Wilson and Michael Waltrip into the garage for extensive repairs. Both finished the race with fenders missing from their cars.

All escaped serious injury.

Kulwicki's best previous finishes had been second to Earnhardt in the 1987 Summer 500 at Pocono International Raceway and to Lake Speed at this year's Darlington TransSouth 500.

The track, now the third in the country to stage both Winston Cup and Indy-car events the same season, estimated attendance at a record 60,000, including thousands who paid $10 admission to sit among cactus and creosote bush on a hill above the east turn.

Falcons Reclaim Ex-ECU Standout Smith

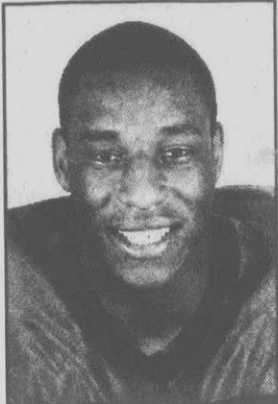

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Falcons placed Sylvester Stamps, the NFL's leading kick returner last year, on the injured reserve list Saturday, and picked up rookie linebacker Vinson Smith of East Carolina from waivers.

Stamps, a five-year veteran who returned kicks for an average of 27.5 yards a game last year, suffered a hamstring injury against Dallas Sept. 25 and has been sidelined since then.

Smith, a Statesville, N.C., native, was East Carolina's leading tackler last season and had 118 tackles and 294 stops during his Pirate career.

Smith is expected to be available for the Falcons' game Sunday at home against Green Bay.

The Falcons placed Smith, who was undrafted but signed by the club as a free agent, on injured reserve Aug. 29 with an elbow injury. He was waived off of that list, but reclaimed.

Top Teams Retain Their Position

By Herschel Nissenson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Led by Notre Dame, the top 11 teams in the Associated Press college football poll remained the same as last week while Colorado and Washington State made the Top Twenty after lengthy absences.

Colorado, which last appeared in the rankings 10 years ago, is No. 19 and Washington State, back after a seven-year absence, is No. 20. Houston, which hasn't been in the Top Twenty since 1980, missed by one point.

Notre Dame, a 54-11 victor over winless Rice, received 42 of 59 first-place votes and 1,160 of a possible 1,180 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

However, Southern California made up some ground on the Irish. The Trojans, who host the Irish on Nov. 26, trounced California 35-3.

Player Of The Week

Player of the week honors this week go to the entire defensive unit at Rose High School following their efforts in the Rampants' 21-14 win over Northeastern High School Friday.

The win sewed up first place in the Big East Conference for the Rampants for the second straight year. Rose, now 10-0 for the year, will battle Fayetteville Pine Forest this week in the playoffs.

Linebacker Maurice Hines blocked a punt in the game to set up a 33-yard run by Billy Carr for the game-winning touchdown. After that, linebacker Terry Miles blocked a field goal attempt by the Eagles at the Rampant 15-yard line.

On the following Northeastern drive, linebacker Malcolm Wilson tackled James White for no gain on a fourth and 3 play at the Rose 6-yard line.

Defensive back Keith Anderson halted the Eagles next drive with an interception of Lawrence Winslow's pass at the Rampant 22-yard line.

Linebacker Billy Carr then came up with the next defensive heroics for the Rampants when he intercepted a Winslow pass at the Rose 30.

The Rampant defense then held Northeastern out of the endzone one last time at the end of the game as the Eagles were at the Rampant 2-yard line when time ran out.

Prep Honor Roll

Greene Central quarterback Kris Radford completed 8-15 passes for 104 yards and a touchdown and rushed 10 times for 83 yards and a pair of TD's to lead Greene Central to a 35-0 blanking of South Lenoir. The win sewed up third place in the Eastern Plains Conference for the Rams.

Williamston quarterback Guy Spruill scored two touchdowns and passed for another Friday in the Tigers' 28-13 win over Roanoke. Spruill returned a kickoff 81 yards for one score and added another on a 4-yard run. Earlier, he connected with Tyrone Bland for a 70-yard touchdown pass.

North Pitt tailback Michael Daniels rushed four times for 76 yards and two touchdowns Friday in the Panthers' 49-0 win over Pamlico County. Daniels' touchdowns came on runs of 45 and 43 yards.

Lady Pirates Drop Two In Volleyball

HARRISONBURG, Va. — East Carolina University's volleyball team lost a pair of matches held this weekend at James Madison University. The Lady Dukes took three straight from East Carolina as did William & Mary.

In the opening match, James Madison swept through 15-12, 15-3, and 15-3. In the second match, William & Mary took the Lady Pirates, 15-1, 15-3, 15-2.

The losses drop East Carolina to 7-16 overall and 0-5 in the Colonial Athletic Association.

The Lady Pirates close out their home season on Tuesday, hosting the University of North Carolina in Minges Coliseum. In an earlier match, UNC defeated ECU, three games to none.

Following that match, ECU travels to American University for the CAA tournament, which begins Friday. ECU will be seeded sixth in the field and will meet third seeded George Mason in the first round.

Pirate Swimmers Win Two Meets

East Carolina's swimming teams won a pair of meets this weekend as they opened the 1988-89 season.

Saturday, the Pirates topped American. The men won their meet, 137-96, while the women took a 132-100 victory.

J.D. Lewis and Perry Smith led the men with two victories each. Lewis won the 500-yard freestyle in 4:51.9 and the 1,000 free in 10:02.6. Perry took the 1-meter diving with 212 points and the 3-meter with 219 points. Kentucky Freshman Kemp Leaves School

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Center Shawn Kemp, who has been embroiled in controversy since arriving at the University of Kentucky this fall, has left Lexington and indicated he will enroll in a Texas junior college, according to a statement from Kentucky coach Eddie Sutton.

"We are sorry to see him go, but we wish him the best of luck in junior college and in all his future endeavors," said Sutton's statement, issued by UK Sunday night.

The statement said Kemp had indicated he would enroll at Trinity Valley Community College in Athens, Texas.

It had been reported earlier that the 6-foot-11 player would enroll at Brevard Community College in Cocoa, Fla.

UK athletic director Cliff Hagan said Saturday that Kemp had not been comfortable at Kentucky and apparently wasn't making the necessary effort in his studies.

Bucs Beat Someone

Then, Saturday, things finally went the way the Pirates had hoped all season. The young defense came through with just enough to keep the wolf away from the door while the offense put 27 points on the scoreboard.

Now, the losing skid is over. The Pirates go into their final game, in two weeks, against Cincinnati with the prospect of being favored for the first time in a long, long time.

A victory would close out the season with a lot of enthusiasm by Pirate supporters and give some momentum to the coming season.

Unfortunately, Coach Art Baker and his staff won't be around — as coaches — enjoy the fruits which could come to bear from it.

The Pirates are generally young. There will be some losses, but most of those who are leaving also leave behind fairly experienced back-ups, people who can step in and get the job done.

Whoever gets the head coaching job at East Carolina next year will be way ahead of the game unless he gets off to a horrible start in recruiting. With the lightening of the schedule — and the fact that the Pirates don't play any true heavyweights until later in the season — the prospects of a winning season are there.

But only if the right chemistry comes together between the new staff and the returning players.

These past two Friday nights, I've witnessed two fine high school performances by Rose High School's football team.

Two weeks ago, the Rampants looked like they might be out of the championship picture when both 1,000-yard rusher Timmy Moore and fellow backfield companion Tony Williams went down with injuries in the first half.

Then, when Wilson Hunt pushed into the lead, 14-10, it looked like it might be over for the Rampants.

But they dug down inside themselves and came up with enough to pull out the victory and remain unbeaten, setting up this past Friday night's game with Northeastern for all the Big East marbles.

Again, it was a hard-fought contest and the Rose defense was the true hero of it all. Time after time in the second half, the defense rose to the occasion. It set up the go-ahead score with a partially blocked punt that went only four yards.

Jim Martin Needs
Jim Gardner as Lt. Governor.

We Need Them Both.

Jim Martin has presented the NC Legislature with many proposals for making our state greater for us all:

- Tougher Drug Trafficking And DWI Laws
- Highway Improvement Bonds (With No Tax Increase)
- Better Pay For Better Teachers
- Necessary School Construction To Better Educate Our Children
- Pre-School Program For Disadvantaged Children
- Additional Highway Patrolmen For Safer Highways
- Consolidation of State Agencies Dealing With Protection of the Environment
- Veto Power For The Only Governor In America Without It

Partisan politics prevented their passage.

As Lieutenant Governor, Jim Gardner will preside over the State Senate and will help change that pattern.

Frost Takes Tuscon Win

By The Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. — Mark Wiebe was ailing and didn't have a chance in the final round of the Tucson Open Golf Tournament.

David Frost saw to it that nobody else had one, either.

"I wanted to get off to that good start, get in front and let them try to catch me," the South African said after his runaway five-shot victory Sunday.

He followed that plan to perfection, making birdies on his first three holes and coasting in with a 5-under-par 67 for his second victory of the year.

"Nobody made a run at me," said Frost, who won with a 266 total, 22 under par on the TPC at Starpass.

Wiebe, who entered the final round tied for the lead with Frost, physically wasn't able to make a challenge.

"I don't know what it was. The doctor said it could be flu, it could be food poisoning," said Wiebe, who became ill at his hotel early Sunday morning and, at one time, questioned whether he'd be able to play.

"There was a lot of doubt, I just decided I'd give it a try," said Wiebe, who was very pale and obviously in distress when he teed off. He struggled to a 73, really wasn't a factor and drifted back into a tie for fourth at 272.

"It was just one of those days you don't want to happen when you're tied for the lead going into the last round," Wiebe said. "I'm not saying I would have won, but I think I could have made it a lot more fun for everyone if it hadn't happened."

"It's a pity something like that happens to a player when he gets in contention. You don't get in contention that often. I feel sorry for the poor guy," Frost said after his front-running, almost-unchallenged victory.

It was worth $108,000 from the total purse of $600,000 and boosted his earnings to $621,900 and sixth place on the money-winning list going into this week's season-ending Nabisco Championship.

The Nabisco tournament, which offers $3 million in total prize money, takes only the top 30 players from this year's money-winning list. There were no changes in the makeup of that top 30 in this, the last tournament to qualify for golf's richest event.

Mark Calcavecchia and Mark O'Meara came on to share second at 271. Calcavecchia finished birdie-birdie for a 69 and O'Meara had a 70 that included a last-hole birdie.

Ken Green shot a 68 that lifted him into a tie with Wiebe at 272.

Andy Magee, with a 65 that ranked as the best round of the day, was next at 273.

Lawmakers Say Tougher Ad Bill Ahead On Kids TV

By Deborah Mesce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Lawmakers angered by President Reagan's veto of a bill to limit advertising in children's TV programs say Congress will be back next year with another, possibly tougher measure.

Reagan killed the bill late Saturday night with a pocket veto, even though the measure had overwhelming support in Congress. Critics likened his action to "ideological child abuse" and called his administration "morally bankrupt."

Reagan said the bill to impose ad limits and make children's informational programming a condition of station license renewals would violate constitutional guarantees of free speech and might discourage commercial networks from financing quality children's programming.

But Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., co-author of the bill, said the veto was another example of the administration putting "commercial considerations and ideological precepts ahead of children's interests."

"The president's actions represent a victory for the toy and cereal hucksters, but a major defeat for our nation's children," said Markey, chairman of the House Energy and Commerce telecommunications subcommittee.

Rep. Matthew J. Rinaldo of New Jersey, ranking Republican on the subcommittee, said Reagan acted on bad advice in killing the measure.

"It was a rather conservative piece of legislation with a minimal amount" of regulation, far less onerous than earlier proposals that were considered but set aside in favor of the bipartisan compromise, he said.

"Next year, whoever is president will be faced with a tougher bill and a more determined Congress," Rinaldo predicted.

The measure would have limited advertising in children's shows to 10 1/2 minutes per hour on weekends and 12 minutes per hour on weekdays.

The Federal Communications Commission had imposed similar limits on broadcasters but scrapped them four years ago in the belief that self-regulation by the industry would determine what was best for children.

The bill also would have required TV broadcasters to provide educational and informational programming for children as a condition of license renewal.

The Senate approved the measure on a voice vote last month. The House passed it by a margin of 328-78 in June.

Reagan said that while he supports efforts to improve the quality of children's programs, "this bill simply cannot be reconciled with the freedom of expression secured by our Constitution."

He said, "the Constitution simply does not empower the federal government to oversee the programming decisions of broadcasters in the manner prescribed by this bill."

Children's television advocates had pushed for the bill because they said that under the FCC's philosophy of deregulation, children's TV has become overcommercialized and the quality of programs has suffered.

Peggy Charren, president of the Cambridge, Mass.-based Action for Children's Television, which has worked 20 years for passage of the measure, said she was "flabbergasted" by the veto.

"Here was a bill that was not going to raise the deficit, not going to raise taxes, was going to get a little bit of education for children ... and what Reagan said was you don't have to do anything for children. I call it ideological child abuse," she said.

The measure was a bipartisan compromise that had been stripped of proposals to outlaw shows, called "program-length commercials" by critics, that feature toy manufacturers' products and to require broadcasters to air an hour of educational programming per day.

The final measure had the tacit support of the broadcasting industry after the National Association of Broadcasters lobbied effectively against the stronger versions of the bill.

Edward O. Fritts, president of the NAB, said that "while we recognize this legislation charted some new territory, we were willing to accept its outcome."

The veto puts back on track an FCC inquiry into the commercialization of children's TV. The commission is considering whether it is necessary to impose advertising limits and regulate program-length commercials and interactive toys that respond to inaudible signals beamed through TV sets.

Boycott Canceled

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Police have canceled a boycott of Willie Nelson's concert Thursday after the country singer apologized a second time for a benefit he performed for an Indian later convicted of killing two FBI agents.

Two weeks ago, Sgt. Harold Flammia, president of the San Antonio Police Officers Association, asked officers not to work as security officials at the concert because Nelson sang at a California benefit for Leonard Peltier. Nelson met earlier this year with the American Federation of Police Officers and the Fraternal Order of the Police and issued a blanket apology for that concert.

But Flammia said since the Texas police organization is not affiliated with the other groups, it wanted a separate apology.

Nelson gave one Friday night.

"I deeply regret that so many police officers and police organizations were offended by the Indian concert," he said. "I have nothing but respect for all lawmen and under no circumstances do I support cop killers."

'War And Remembrance' Has Plot Problems But Great As War Film

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Director Dan Curtis had his work cut out for him with ABC's "War and Remembrance," a sequel to one of the most-watched television events of all time, the 1983 epic he also directed, "The Winds of War."

Based on the first 18-hour installment of "War and Remembrance," Curtis has himself a masterpiece of a war movie, interrupted too often by tedious subplots and silly romantic interludes.

The $110 million budget bought a heck of a production. The locations, sets, costumes, cars and special effects are spectacular.

ABC rushed the first 18 hours of the 32-hour monster onto the screen this month, three months early, because of scheduling gaps caused by the summer writers' strike. "War and Remembrance" commences Nov. 13. The rest will air in 1989.

Both miniseries were based on Herman Wouk's epic novels. "The Winds of War" followed Victor "Pug" Henry and his family through the events leading up to World War II. "War and Remembrance" takes them through the war.

Wouk kept control of his work, co-writing the screenplay and restricting the number and types of commercials ABC could air. Wouk wisely felt it would be inappropriate to juxtapose powerfully graphic material with pitches for burgers and fries.

There have been cast changes since "The Winds of War." Is your scorecard handy?

Robert Mitchum, now 70, is back as Pug. He was too old for the role five years ago, and although he doesn't dodder, he is so profoundly taciturn, you wish someone would take his pulse — or at least offer him an eyelift. Now commander of a cruiser in the Pacific fleet, he has broken off his almost-affair with plucky Pam, played nicely again by Victoria Tennant, who is off on a world tour with her BBC commentator uncle, Alistair Tudsbury (Robert Morley).

Polly Bergen is also back as Rhoda, Pug's ditsy wife. She has resumed her inexplicable affair with the remarkably dull Palmer Kirby (Peter Graves). Their romantic scenes qualify as high camp. "Palmer, take me to your apartment!" "Is that what you really want?" "What do you think, you fool!"

Steven Berkoff is a kitschy, full-tilt Hitler, blood vessels popping. Ralph Bellamy does his impression of Franklin Roosevelt as cheerful nitwit.

It's hard to imagine pining for the screen charisma of Ali McGraw, but Jane Seymour is boring as Natalie, the Jewish older woman married to Pug's son, Byron. Byron is now played by the capable Hart Bochner, replacing Jan-Michael Vincent. Natalie and her famous-author uncle — Sir John Gielgud replacing John Houseman — traipse tediously about Europe trying to escape the Nazis. Bill Wallis is wonderfully oily as the German official who poses as their protector.

Michael Woods successfully replaces Ben Murphy as son Warren. Leslie Hope replaces Lisa Eilbacher as daughter Madeline, but doesn't have much to do this time around. David Dukes returns as Leslie Slote, the State Department drone who yearns to prove the rumors of Nazi atrocities.

Although the miniseries is fraught with too many comings and goings and so-nice-to-meet-yous, Curtis has managed to keep things apace with spectacle in just about every episode. The battle scenes are stunning. The first episode includes some of the best submarine scenes since "Das Boot." Barry Bostwick gives a first-rate performance as Byron's buddy and commanding officer, cigar-chomping Carter "Lady" Aster.

In the third episode, Pug and Warren fight in the battle of Midway. Again, the scenes are worthy of a theatrical film, even in the rough cut given to reviewers. The scenes should be even more spectacular in the final version.

The concentration camp scenes are the most powerful such depictions television has ever seen. They are so graphic, ABC will run advisories before episodes 2 and 7 warning viewers. Adding to the palpable evil is the knowledge that Curtis filmed at actual concentration campsites.

Although they are rather rotund for concentration camp internees, Topol and John Rhys-Davies are compelling as Berel and Sammy, relegated to a dwindling work detail that is forced to dig up decaying bodies from a mass grave so the Nazis can burn the evidence of the massacre.

What action do you take?
A.—There is a common misconception that North's jump to two no trump is a game force. Not so! It shows a hand of 19-20 points, and partner can bow out of the auction if he does not think he has enough for game. This hand surely qualifies: 6 soft points and no source of tricks. Pass.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J ♥AKQJ1093 ♦Q4 ♣A52
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 2 ♥ Pass
3 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Partner's rebid should remove any worry you might have about two fast losers in the diamond suit. Ask for aces and kings by using the Blackwood Convention. If he shows two aces and two kings, bid a grand slam in hearts. Otherwise, a small slam is enough.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A973 ♥954 ♦Q64 ♣AQ5
The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
2 ♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Don't bid no trump with such a poor diamond stopper, especially since partner has shown an unbalanced hand. He must have five hearts on this auction, so you can support his first suit. But you are too strong for a mere preference to two hearts, and your flat shape makes four hearts unappealing. A jump to three hearts feels just right.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠6 ♥AKQ102 ♦A7 ♣KJ1064
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
2 ♣ Pass 3 ♥ Pass
What do you bid now?
A.—You made a simple two-club rebid at your first turn because of a possible misfit. Now that partner's jump preference has allayed your fears on that score, it is time to make your move. Ask for aces with four no trump.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ943 ♥A6 ♦AJ8652 ♣Void
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♣ 2 ♣ ?
What do you bid now?
A.—A promising hand has suddenly become enormous. Not only do you have a huge fit for partner, the overall has made it clear that most of partner's points are outside your void suit and, therefore, working. Convey the good news to partner with a cue-bid of three clubs.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Wisconsin Democrat William Proxmire had the Senate's most tightfisted voting record in 1988, and Republican Phillip Crane of Illinois led the House in austerity voting during the legislative year, according to a survey by Roll Call Report Syndicate.

On the other side of the ledger, Florida Democrat Lawton Chiles was the senator voting most often to raise spending on roll calls that presented a clear choice between higher and lower quality outlays, and Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Tex., was the House member whose voting showed least concern about the annual deficit.

The newspaper syndicate's second annual Spending Index, a study of nearly 100 key roll calls conducted in 1988, shows how often lawmakers cast austerity votes to break up their political boasting on the deficit issue. It is the only national study of its kind by a news organization.

The survey found the average senator voting for austerity on only 19 percent of the year's roll call posing a choice of more or less spending, and the average House member supporting the less-spending alternative only 22 percent of the time.

The Spending Index covered nearly all votes in the House and Senate chambers offering a choice between more or less spending, regardless of the amount of money at stake.

It tracked yeas and nays on efforts to establish or eliminate programs, create new agencies and commissions or dismantle existing units of government, hike or trim entitlement benefits, curb increases, increase outlays and inflict direct spending cuts.

The survey excluded several roll calls on highly-charged issues such as Contra Aid and abortion where policy considerations overwhelmed fiscal concerns.

Altogether, the 1988 index covered 76 House and 22 Senate votes. The less-spending alternative prevailed on only 12 percent of those 98 roll calls.

Proxmire, who voted the austerity position 68 percent of the time, was followed by Sens. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., who scored 55 percent, and Jesse Helms, R-N.C., 41 percent.

Chiles registered zero percent, ranking just above him were Sens. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., and Albert Gore, D-Tenn., each with pro-austerity scores of 5 percent.

Crane scored 59 percent. Ranking immediately behind him were GOP Reps. Bob Stump of Arizona with 57 percent, Norman Shumway of California with 55 percent, William Danemeyer of California with 51 percent and James Sensenbrenner of Wisconsin with 50 percent. No other House member voted pro-austerity at least half the time.

Wilson recorded the lowest House score by supporting the less-spending alternative less than 1 percent of the time. He was followed by Democratic Reps. Sam Stratton of New York and Dan Mica of Florida, each with 4 percent, Ronald Coleman of Texas with 5 percent and Kika de la Garza of Texas with 7 percent.

The Spending Index weighs all votes equally and is strictly non-partisan and non-ideological. Its percentages and the accompanying chart reflect the frequency of pro-austerity votes — the higher the score, the more austere the voting record.

THE 1988 SPENDING CHART

Percentages show how often North Carolina members voted for the less-spending alternative on 76 House roll calls and 22 Senate roll calls. Perfect pro-austerity voting is 100 percent.

The 98 votes are all of the year's roll calls that presented members with a clear-cut choice of higher or lower federal spending, excluding those (such as Contra aid) where policy considerations overwhelmed fiscal concerns.

Walesa Threatens Strike Alert

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WARSAW, Poland — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa threatened to order a national "strike alert" Tuesday unless the government reverses its decision to close the Lenin shipyard and shows itself willing to reinstate the banned labor federation.

The statement Sunday was the strongest from Solidarity since Communist authorities announced Oct. 31 that they intend next month to close the Gdansk shipyard, the free trade union movement's birthplace and political base.

The closure announcement all but extinguished already dim prospects for round-table talks with Solidarity that the government had promised in exchange for Walesa's efforts to end an August strike wave.

Now, Solidarity and the government appear to be on a collision course.

On Saturday, Walesa said he would not meet with Interior Minister Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak to discuss plans for the talks unless the shipyard decision is suspended and all workers fired for taking part in strikes in August are rehired.

In a statement Sunday, Solidarity's executive commission, which Walesa chairs, called baseless the government's assertion that the shipyard must be closed for economic reasons.

"The Gdansk shipyard has to be defended," the commission said. "In this situation we consider it necessary to conduct a broad action in November for the legalization of Solidarity, in defense of the Gdansk shipyard and the repressed participants in strikes — even resorting to strike action."

Walesa aide Piotr Konopka said the Solidarity leader told worshippers at St. Brygida's church in Gdansk on Sunday that he would call a national "strike alert" at a workers' rally scheduled Tuesday in the Baltic port.

"If there is still great pressure on him from the side of the shipyard and other enterprises as well, then on Tuesday he will announce a strike alert for the whole country," said Konopka.

A "strike alert" would mean organizing strike committees and getting workers prepared to strike at any moment, said Solidarity spokesman Wojciech Maziarzki.

The Solidarity statement denounced the decision to close the 10,000-worker yard as "a dangerous political act" and "an act of revenge against Solidarity."

Dowry Suicides

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Fearing their father could not raise enough money for their dowries, four sisters in southern India committed suicide, Indian news agencies said.

The sisters hanged themselves with their saris from the ceiling of their house at Alappulli in Kerala state, United News of India and Press Trust of India reported Sunday.

The four young women were concerned about the financial problems their father, a police constable, had after providing a dowry for their eldest sister, the news agencies said.

The sisters — Santha, 25, Sumati, 23, Anaka, 21 and Sasikala, 18 — took their lives Friday while their father was away on duty and their mother was working in the family's rice paddy, according to the reports.

Last February, three sisters between the ages of 18 and 22 hanged themselves over dowry problems in the northern state of Uttar Pradesh.

Although India outlawed dowry in 1962, the practice of paying the groom's family is still widespread.

Many marriages are still arranged by families before the bride and groom ever meet, and there are frequent reports of young women being set on fire by in-laws in dowry disputes that continue after the weddings.

Such "kitchen fires" are reported almost every day by Indian newspapers. Last year, the government reported 1,572 cases of the crime, which is known as "bride-burning."

Hirohito Stabilizes After Blood Loss

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Emperor Hirohito's vital signs stabilized today, one day after his most serious loss of blood since falling ill seven weeks ago with internal hemorrhaging, an imperial palace spokesman said.

The 87-year-old Hirohito, who has received almost daily blood transfusions since he first coughed up blood Sept. 19, received 4.66 pints in emergency blood transfusions Sunday, spokesman Kenji Maeda said.

Also today Hirohito's second grandson, Prince Aya, arrived in Tokyo after he was called back from Britain for the second time since the emperor took ill. Aya, 22, is studying at Oxford University.

He returned to Japan at the end of September for nine days when Hirohito's condition took a turn for the worse, and his latest return was expected to fuel concern over the fate of the bedridden emperor.

The world's longest-reigning living monarch was "in stable condition for the time being," Maeda told reporters. But "doctors fear he may bleed again," he said.

"His temperature and other signs are stable," Maeda said, but did not give the figures.

Hirohito received the transfusions Sunday because of "considerable" amounts of blood lost during intensified hemorrhaging, palace officials said.

Soviets Celebrate Bolshevik Victory

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union today celebrated the 71st anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution with a parade that proclaimed "War on the Bureaucracy" rather than Western imperialism.

The traditional display of Soviet military might was followed by throngs of civilians supporting President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's campaign for social and economic reforms. The parade also signaled an increase in the power of Moscow Communist Party leader Lev N. Zaikov.

Zaikov strode onto Lenin's Mausoleum behind Gorbachev, Premier Nikolai I. Ryzhkov and Yegor K. Ligachev, a conservative who was formerly regarded as the No. 2

Krelin leader. Television cameras focused several times on the triumvirate of Gorbachev, Ryzhkov and Zaikov, excluding Ligachev, who was demoted to running agriculture five weeks ago.

All 11 Moscow-based members of the Politburo attended the gathering marking the anniversary of the seizure of power by the Bolsheviks in 1917. The annual event is often one of the clearest indicators of changes in the hierarchy.

The parade, held in light snow and temperatures just below freezing, was attended by John M. Joyce, the U.S. charge d'affaires, said Embassy spokesman Richard Gilbert.

It was the first time a top U.S. diplomat in Moscow attended the Revolution Day parade since the Soviets sent soldiers to Afghanistan in December 1979. Gilbert said U.S. Ambassador Jack F. Matlock was out of town and would have attended had he been in Moscow.

Although the procession of T-72 tanks and SS-21 surface-to-surface missiles resembled last year's parade, the columns of Moscowites trailing them into Red Square bore banners that traded foreign policy fears for internal boosterism. They carried paper flowers and strode in to popular Soviet melodies rather than solemn marches.

Missing were the usual portraits of the Politburo members, and slogans warning the public to beware of capitalist aggression.

Also missing were complaints on specific East-West disputes like Nicaragua.

Instead, posters promised "War on the Bureaucracy" and "We're behind perestroika," Gorbachev's plan to restructure Soviet society. Some mentioned the word profit, which until recently was unacceptable.

The United States enjoyed a new portrayal as a peacemaker. One float showed the silhouettes of workers, wrapped in Soviet and American flags respectively, sledge-hammering missiles.

Defense Minister Dmitri T. Yazov reviewed the procession and delivered a relatively mild message criticizing Western military policies.

"The destruction of medium and shorter-range nuclear weapons has just begun, yet already there are calls for all kinds of compensation, modernization, the build-up of conventional arms and the stepping up of the 'Star Wars' program," he said.
