Gorbachev Schedules U.S. Visit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev announced today he will visit the United States early next month to address the United Nations. U.S. officials said he will also meet with President Reagan and, possibly, President-elect George Bush.

Indeed, Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov said in Moscow that a meeting with Bush, as well as Reagan, could be "assumed" for "a continuation of the U.S.-Soviet political dialogue that we believe should continue without artificial pause."

The announcement was made while Gorbachev attended a session on agricultural problems in the Russian city of Orel, south of Moscow, and was carried by the official Soviet news agency, Tass.

Gorbachev also will visit Britain and Cuba, the announcement said. U.S. officials said the visit to New York and a fifth meeting with Reagan would take place around Dec. 7.

"Mikhail Gorbachev intends to appear in New York at the session of the General Assembly of the U.N. to set forth the views of the Soviet Union on the most important problems of world development," Tass said.

Two members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said today such a session could give Bush the chance to build on recent positive Soviet moves around the world.

A get-together would also give the two sides another chance to narrow the gap on a treaty to reduce long-range nuclear weapons arsenals and to ease tensions caused by Afghan rebel attacks on Soviet troops in Afghanistan and a slowdown in the Red Army's withdrawal from the country.

The treaty is bogged down with several technical problems that may not be easily solved. But on Afghanistan, the Soviets already have pledged to have all their forces out by Feb. 15.

Two weeks ago, citing attacks by the U.S.-armed rebels, the Soviets announced suspension of the withdrawal. Still, Gorbachev has not ruled out adhering to the deadline set in last spring's Geneva accords.

Interviewed today, Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., pointed to "some of the moves taking place in the Soviet Union, and its affect on Europe in particular and the third world in general," and said the New York

County Gets School Request For $25.7 Million Bond Issue

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County Commissioners talked big money Monday as the Board of Education asked for a $25.7 million bond issue for school construction and architects working on a long-range facilities master plan told the board that a new jail could cost from $9.5 million to $15 million, depending on its location.

Meeting with the school board over lunch, commissioners were asked by George Williams, chairman of the education board, to "consider approving" a $25.7 million bond referendum to be held in February 1989.

Eddie West, superintendent of schools, said if voters approve the bonds, the money would be spent over a three-year period to build classroom space called for in the schools' long-range plan.

West, who said the school board has "worked diligently" over the past 18 months to put together "what we think is a very realistic" long-range facilities plan, said the $25.7 million in bonds could be repaid over a 10-year period without using money from county property taxes.

"We can do it without a tax increase," West said, suggesting that money allocated to Pitt County from a state school capitals projects fund and income from sales taxes earmarked for the schools could be used to retire the bonds.

According to West, the proposed bond issue would meet the schools' facilities needs for the first five years as projected by the long-range facilities plan.

The five-year needs projection, West said, was based on attendance line and organizational changes and enrollment growth, as well as requirements of the state's basic education plan.

According to West, "We think it is a responsible way to deal with construction, (to) improve the learning environment for boys and girls (and) help us achieve our mutual goals."

After hearing the school board's request, commissioners met with architects designing a long-range plan for county facilities. And before that meeting ended, the board told consultants to plan for a new jail facility away from downtown Greenville.

Bruce Flye, an architect with the firm of Dudley, Shoe, Ellingwood & Associates — one of three firms in-involved in the planning process — told commissioners that the "fact-finding" has been completed and consultants have "reached the point now in the design state," where input from the board is necessary.

Steve Carter of Carter Gobel Associates said that county and court facilities occupy about 65,000 square feet of space in downtown Greenville and 123,000 square feet in the county office complex off West Fifth Street.

By 1990, Carter said the county will need 86,800 square feet of space at the courthouse complex and 142,300 square feet at the complex on West fifth Street.

But Jim Kessler of Hellmuth, Obata & Kassabaum said that by us-

Unmanned Soviet shuttle Buran lifts off from launch pad

Soviet Shuttle's Flight Flawless

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — The Soviet space shuttle Buran orbited the Earth twice today and landed eight miles from its launch pad in Soviet Central Asia, ending with flawless precision its unmanned 3-hour, 25-minute maiden flight.

The successful flight puts the Soviets into the shuttle program alongside the United States. A major success for the Soviet space program, it comes after a series of problems including the near loss of cosmonauts on a joint Soviet-Afghan mission to the Mir space station in September.

The Buran, snowstorm in Russian, touched down on a 2.8-mile concrete runway with a puff of dust from its rear wheels and rolled to a halt as three parachutes opened at its rear.

"The U.S.S.R. has successfully tested its first reusable space craft Buran," official Radio Moscow said, interrupting regular programming two minutes after touchdown.

The flight originally was scheduled for Oct. 29, but computers stopped that countdown with only 51 seconds left when an access arm failed to pull far enough away from the rocket. Officials said they had since redesigned the joint.

Within 30 minutes of today's landing, Soviet television showed the fully automated approach and touchdown of the delta-winged U.S. shuttle look-alike in the middle of the barren, brown steppe.

Radio Moscow said the flight, which had been in jeopardy because of cold, rainy weather, went according to schedule, and all on-board tests were completed.

Pointing to the January 1986 explosion of the U.S. shuttle Challenger that killed its seven crewmembers, Soviet officials say they will not make a manned flight until all the shuttle's systems are fully tested in unmanned flight.

They have not said when that might be.

Tass said President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, informed of the flight's success, said the flight was "one more confirmation of the kind of huge possibilities the Soviet Union has to solve any problem."

Buran separated as planned from the liquid fuel Energia booster minutes after it lifted off from the Baikonur Cosmodrome in a flame of yellow, with clouds of white steam lighting up the early morning sky.

About three-quarters of an hour later, Buran's own engines fired twice at an altitude of 99 miles, nudging the craft into its two orbits.

Television film shot from a jet aircraft showed the shuttle's dark silhouette against a pale blue-gray sky as it approached the landing site, then switched to closer shots as the shuttle landed like an aircraft.

PLO Panel Proclaims Statehood

ALGIERS, Algeria — The PLO's parliament-in-exile proclaimed an independent Palestinian state early today, approving a new, moderate political program that indirectly recognizes Israel and renounces terrorism.

Addressing the body, PLO chairman Yasser Arafat declared that the state, with Jerusalem as its capital, would be run by "a democratic, parliamentary system based on freedom of expression and multiple parties."

Palestine National Council delegates broke into applause and the occasion was immediately followed by quiet handshakes, kisses and an occasional tear.

Farm Venders Put Wares On Display

By Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Organizers and farm venders were prepared at 9 a.m. today when the doors of Farmers Warehouse on Greene Street opened for the first day of the 13th annual Mid-Atlantic Farm Show.

Within the first hour of the show, visitors lined the aisles viewing the variety of farm-related goods and services on display.

"The crowd looks like it's going to be good," said Jim Swindell this morning, "but I expect it's going to be kind of down a bit today because of the beautiful weather we've got — the farmers will be out in the fields."

Over 500 companies are represented at the event, with exhibits valued at over $10 million.

The show offers an opportunity for farm-product venders to display and explain new products and the latest innovations in agricultural methods.

Tractors, mulch layers, and semitrucks are among the items on display this year. Insurance representatives, new car dealerships, and local television and radio stations are also represented.

Hanging Out: A Pastime Gone Sour

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Hanging out.

It's sleeping away a lazy afternoon at the beach or killing time with some friends on campus between classes. But for some Pitt County high school students, hanging out is trouble.

Greenville police say unruly crowds of students gather each weekend at area locations for late-night parties that sometimes include drinking and fighting.

The No. 1 hot spot?

The city parking lot beside the Fast Fare at the corner of Cotanche and Third streets in downtown Greenville is the favorite hub for most students, according to Lt. C.B. Landreth of the Greenville Police Department.

"Fast Fare ... on Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights would probably be the No. 1 place," Landreth said. "They hang out in front of the store, in the parking lot beside it, at the corner of Third and Cotanche — all along the street there."

Students from D.H. Conley, Ayden-Grifton, North Pitt and Farmville Central are the regulars hanging out at the Fast Fare, Landreth said.

"I think each of them has their own little section of the parking lot or part of the store, or whatever," he said.

There are bull sessions, but Landreth said there is also underage drinking, assaults, drugs and, at another location during the summer, officers confiscated two guns.

"The assaults (outside the Fast Fare) are either with fists, bottles or cars. And mostly it's school versus school. There are blacks and whites against blacks and whites.

"The (students) are black, white, male, female, 14, 15, 16 years old, all the way up to 18 years old.

"Almost every weekend (officers) arrest somebody for drugs," he said. "We'll put officers in plain clothes backed up by anywhere from two to four officers in patrol cars. They'll

Board OKs Projects

The Ayden Board of Commissioners approved 10 rehabilitation projects for homes eligible to receive money from Community Development Block Grants and the North Carolina Housing Fund.

At the group's monthly meeting Tuesday, the board approved the projects, which range in cost from $1,020 to $22,500.

About $44,000 from the state housing fund will be used to weatherize homes and about $59,800 of CDBG funds will be used to rehabilitate houses, including rewiring, replumbing and installing new siding. Homeowners will contribute $2,900 for the projects.

The board also approved a request to rezone a plot of land behind the Harris Supermarket in Ayden from highway-commercial to residential. A Raleigh developer plans to build one-bedroom apartments designed for senior citizens. The apartments will be within walking distance of a pharmacy and grocery store.

A spokesman for the developer said construction is tentatively set to begin in the spring, and the apartments should open in January of 1990.

Visitors to the Mid-Atlantic Farm Show in Greenville examine one of the displays.

Mid-Atlantic Farm show is the second-largest indoor event of its kind held east of the Mississippi, according to Swindell.

Last year approximately 35,000 visitors attended the show, providing manufacturers with an excellent opportunity to reach a well-targeted market.

"I think it's the best way to introduce new equipment or show improvements on equipment," said John Morgan, executive vice president for Tri-State Distributors in Statesville.

Morgan said his organization has annually attended the farm show since its inception 13 years ago.

"It's an ideal way for the grower to get all the information and ask all the information he would like," he said. "It's without a doubt one of the best shows we go to. There's a show in Raleigh in the first part of February that is also an excellent show but this show and that show are the ones we particularly focus on."

A tobacco-tying contest was held at 11 a.m. today while country music singer Julie Maners was scheduled to entertain the crowd with a performance at 2 p.m. today.

Other entertainment planned for the warehouse stage is the gospel group, the Kingsboys, who will perform Wednesday at 2 p.m. and on Thursday, comedian and author Jerry Clower will entertain the crowd at 2 p.m. with his unique brand of country humor.

Also scheduled Wednesday is a tobacco-grading contest at 11 a.m.

Hours for the show are from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. all three days.

Leaders To Meet

meeting would give the president-elect "a significant opportunity ... to take positive advantage" of such developments.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., interviewed with Biden on the NBC-TV "Today" show, said Bush "has a number of fronts where there are major opportunities. Clearly, the Soviet Union and east-west relations is one, moving on human rights, trade, regional conflict resolution and arms control."

Two U.S. officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Gorbachev's visit would be in early December. A third source, also refusing to be identified, said Dec. 7 was the projected date.

A year ago, the Soviet Communist Party General Secretary made his first trip to the United States. At a Washington summit with Reagan, he signed an unprecedented treaty to abolish U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range nuclear weapons.

It was the first arms control treaty to actually reduce nuclear arsenals. But a pact on strategic weapons, which are globe-girdling and far more deadly, has continued to elude U.S. and Soviet negotiators.

Reagan and Gorbachev have held four annual meetings since 1985, improving U.S.-Soviet relations on a number of fronts. Bush, meanwhile, said after winning the presidency last week that he would like to hold a summit meeting with the Soviet leader.

Earlier, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher announced that Gorbachev and his wife, Raisa, would visit London Dec. 12-14.

Bush has set relatively easy conditions for a summit meeting with the Soviet leader sometime after moving into the White House in January. He asked only that it produce progress on arms control, human rights or regional disputes.

But first, Bush said, he would have James A. Baker III, whom he has named as his choice for secretary of state, meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze and with foreign ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Bush ruled out a mere get-acquainted session. "I am acquainted with him," the president-elect said of Gorbachev. "What I want to see is progress. I've never supported meetings just for the sake of having meetings."

The Washington Post today quoted a source as saying the Kremlin had proposed that Gorbachev meet with Reagan and Bush in just "the last few days" and that the White House had quickly approved the request.

Reagan first met with Gorbachev in Geneva, Switzerland, in November 1985. They held their second summit in 1986 in Reykjavik, Iceland, then met in Washington last December and in Moscow May 29-June 2.

The two superpowers are close to an agreement to reduce their armories of long-range bombers, missiles and submarines by 30 to 50 percent, but are wrestling with problems over how to verify some of the cutbacks.

State Will Seek Review Of Decision On Collider

By Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina will seek a review of the process that led the U.S. Department of Energy to choose Texas over North Carolina for the superconducting super collider, Gov. Jim Martin's science adviser says.

"We've gone to bat with Texas now three times and lost," science adviser Earl Mac Cormac said Monday. "It's Texas 3 and North Carolina 0."

"The first was MCC, the microelectronics coalition center (during Gov. Jim Hunt's administration)," he said. "The second was Sematech, where we thought we were going to get it. The third was the SSC."

But Mac Cormac told the Board of Science and Technology that North Carolina isn't ready to give up in its quest to lure technology.

"I would start tomorrow for number four," Mac Cormac said. "I have no regrets whatsoever that we entered into this. ... We did the best we could, we did an excellent job in many respects, we made a few mistakes and we know that."

"We have an excellent site. We have excellent capabilities."

The board apparently agreed, unanimously passing a resolution of appreciation for the efforts of Mac

Cormac and the entire North Carolina team that tried to lure the high-energy project here.

Mac Cormac said DOE criticisms leveled at North Carolina were sometimes trivial, sometimes based on outdated information and sometimes simply false.

"The impression that I get personally ... is that the report was written to justify Texas getting it," he said. But he was quick to point out that was not the official position of Gov. Jim Martin or his administration.

"That's Earl's impression, as a reader of language, not as an official judgment," he said.

Officially, North Carolina officials will appear Dec. 16 before the DOE and will review such things as the state's relatively low ranking on geology and university support, Mac Cormac said.

"We thought we had made it very, very clear that the different types of rock did not prohibit a single tunnel-boring machine from going through," he said.

North Carolina had resolutions of support from Duke University and the University of North Carolina System as well as 60 letters backing its bid from universities in other states, Mac Cormac said. In addition, there were seminars and symposiums concerning the SSC and experts appeared before the DOE in Washington.

"What more could we have done for university support? We don't know," he said. "We are flabbergasted. ... We're going to protest that, obviously."

Other issues that should be investigated include leaks of confidential siting information to Texas and whether promises of $1 billion in Texas bonds helped sway the decision, Mac Cormac said.

Legislation for the SSC said money should have no bearing on site selection, he said, adding, "If it did, that, then, is illegal and we are deeply disturbed by that process."

Mac Cormac insisted that despite the complaints, "We are not coming back with sour grapes. We were perfectly willing to lose if someone else was better."

Unlike some of the other states spurned by the DOE, North Carolina still supports the project, Mac Cormac said.

"We just believe that the process should be reviewed so that the taxpayers of this country will have confidence that this decision was not a political decision but a decision based on merit and technical qualifications," he said.

Jail Could Exceed $10 Million

ing all the county-owned space at the office complex to house county government agencies, "there should be enough space for the year 2000."

However, he suggested the situation is not the same for court-related facilities located in the downtown area. "There's not enough space downtown now," even if all the county-owned buildings are used for court-related functions. By the year 2005, Kessler said, an additional 25,000 square feet of space will be needed.

But the consultants suggested that in order to continue to plan for downtown facilities, some questions about the location of a new jail would have to be addressed.

Carter told commissioners that "the county has need for 250 bed spaces" in a new jail "to take you to the turn of the century." He also said the planning team would plan a "core (including support areas) for 350 inmates," so additional bed space can be added later "to take you past 2010."

The first phase of the jail would include the core service areas, 156 cells for pre-trial prisoners and 96 bed spaces on the "sentencing side," Carter said. Such a facility, according to Carter will include about 95,000 square feet (about 63,000 square feet of housing area and 30,000 square feet in the support core).

The site options, Carter said, include:

— An eight-story building on the courthouse block, which he estimated would cost $14.75 million (including $1.15 million for a parking deck and $2.95 million for furnishing, equipment and other costs).

— A three- or four-story facility on the block bounded by First, Washington, Second and Evans Streets estimated to cost $15 million (including $32,000 for demolition, $1.15 million for a parking deck, $195,000 for a tunnel to the courthouse and $3 million for furnishing, equipment and other items).

— Or a low-rise building on a rural site, which would cost an estimated $13.11 million (including $75,000 for land purchase, $450,000 for site development, $330,000 for perimeter development and $51,000 for the cost of transporting prisoners to and from court facilities for a five-year period).

In addition to the higher cost of building a jail in the area of the court house, Carter said "the number one disadvantage" to locating the jail downtown is "you limit future growth" of both the jail and court facilities.

By building a jail "outside of town," on a 10- to 15 acre site, Carter said the building itself would cost about $9.5 million, compared to $11.6 to $15 million in building costs for a downtown jail.

Kessler agreed. "Building a jail downtown precludes expansion of court facilities downtown."

Police Wary Of Late-Night Youth Activity

watch the patrol cars and keep doing their business, so it's usually the plain clothes officers that see them.

"As far as what we've seen, (officers) may write two or three tickets a weekend for possession of drugs. ... Based on that, it doesn't sound like a lot. But that's only what we can catch."

Officers cannot just ask students to leave the city parking lot, Landreth said, because the city does not have a law against loitering.

Greenville Mayor Ed Carter said he is aware that loitering is a problem in the city, but a U.S. Supreme Court ruling makes it very difficult to write a loitering ordinance that does not violate a person's individual freedom.

"It is an increasing problem," Carter said. "(The court) really tightened up on our ability to deal with people who are loitering. Our attorney has given us a really bleak picture of what we can do as far as loitering."

Patricia Perkins of Bethel, a clerk at Fast Fare, said she cannot see all the activity in the city lot beside the store, but the store's parking lot is also usually packed with people on the weekends. She said the Fast Fare crowd is mainly high school-age and college-age people and Hispanics.

Last Friday night, when Ms. Perkins worked 3 p.m. to 11 p.m., store workers called police to disperse the crowd in the parking lot.

"The whole parking lot was full," she said. "They were all around the gas pumps. People coming up to try and get gas couldn't get gas. You ask them to leave and they act like they don't hear you."

"When I work 3 p.m. to 11 p.m., I don't want them hanging around here. There's too much going on," she said. "It scares me. When I get off, I get one of the guys ... to walk me to my car."

Ms. Perkins said the store manager has filed a complaint with Greenville police and has given employees the authority to ask anyone to leave who stays in the store more than 15 minutes. If they do not leave, employees are to call the police.

Ms. Perkins said the biggest problem is that the crowd clogs the store's parking lot, but there is also a lot of shoplifting.

Police records show a Greenville man was assaulted near the store Saturday by several black males about 10 p.m. No one was arrested and the investigation is continuing.

All the hanging out began last summer, Landreth said, and so many students parked along Cotanche Street that extra officers had to patrol the area to keep the street clear for traffic.

"It started this summer and it hasn't quit yet. This summer we had a terrible time, when they weren't in school. At 5 o'clock in the morning they were still fighting and fussing," he said. "Most of the time it was 5:30 in the morning before they'd leave. They weren't the working crowd, that's for sure."

Other favorite spots for students include the Sportsworld skating rink on Red Banks Road and the recently closed Beau's teen club at Carolina East Center.

On Sunday night, Sportsworld has a Soul Night, Landreth said, and the business usually hires at least four police officers to control the crowd, which sometimes spills out into Red Banks Road.

At Beau's, Landreth said police confiscated two guns this summer, and officers are concerned that more kids may be carrying guns. "It was expected after a while," he said. "They were fighting, running over each other. They had guns and all kinds of nasty things."

One student was arrested during the summer for having a gun on campus during a countywide session of summer school. A D.H. Conley student, Ehyin Mohamad Youssef, 17, of Greenville, was arrested Aug. 2 after Greenville police found a loaded sawed-off shotgun in his gym bag at Rose High School. His case is yet to come to trial.

Landreth said there are other hangouts in Greenville, such as Bailey's convenient mart on Watagua Avenue, where one man was beaten and another shot to death in a drug related incident in April.

But those places are community gathering spots for older folks, some of whom are involved in drugs, Landreth said, while Fast Fare and Sportsworld attract mainly high school-age students.

The police department has tried to develop a way to control the number of people who can hang out in one place at one time, and Landreth said it would help if the city would create somewhat of a curfew for city parking lots.

"If we could control the city parking lots better, it would probably work out better for the kids, because at least they would know what's expected of them," he said.

If the city closed the lots at 1 a.m., he said, students would know they would have to be gone by then and no more cars would be allowed in.

On private property, Carter said owners can post no trespassing signs and the city can help enforce the order. But on city lots there are fewer options. He said the City Council might consider Landreth's idea of closing certain city lots late at night.

"Well look at all angles to it," he said. "We'll get with the city attorney and see what we can do."

Dog Attack

RALEIGH (AP) — A 3-year-old Wake County girl was attacked and killed by two large dogs Monday after the girl's mother sent her outside to play, authorities said.

Wake County sheriff's deputies found the mauled body of Antoinette Renee Robinson behind her mother's mobile home near Holly Springs shortly after 11 a.m., Wake Sheriff John Baker said.

After Wake County animal control officers unsuccessfully tried to capture the dogs, they shot and killed one of the them, a mixed-breed German shepherd-Doberman pinscher weighing about 75 to 80 pounds. The dog, named Meatball, belonged to the girl's neighbor.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Time To Try

Third Street Proposal Worthwhile

The large block-lettered printing on the playroom wall says this about public school-operated child care: there are good reasons to try.

Pitt County's school board is considering converting Third Street School to a child care center and that move would be a worthwhile experiment. If it can be conducted with a minimum of expense to local taxpayers and without diminishing existing programs, the project should proceed. But the results should be analyzed before pre-kindergarten child care is extended to all areas.

It doesn't take a social critic to ascertain that child care is an issue important to Pitt County's future. The statistics on how many households it affects are not firm, but an estimated 2,220 kids are enrolled in private day care in the county. Fifty percent of the women in the county work outside the home. Whether you applaud or disagree with this trend, the facts are clear: families need child care they can afford. They need care they have confidence in.

Three key needs make the Third Street School proposal salient.

First, the county needs low cost child care. Too often, a mother stays out of the work force because the price of day care equals or surpasses the wage earned in the job market. That makes working financially unfeasible. In families with two incomes, that sacrifice is endurable, but in single-parent homes, not working often translates to public assistance needs — and, all too often, substandard housing and nutrition. Both of these take money out of taxpayers' pockets and yield no return.

Second, although private child care opportunities abound in Pitt County — 46 licensed centers operate here — the quality of the care varies sharply. Programs range from "mini-schools," where kids get a classroom-like curriculum, to supervised play to instruction aimed at mind stimulation. In short, child care can mean anything from babysitting to education.

While the need for day care is established, what is not clearly known is the scope of that need — or the cost. These variables could be determined by operating a child care center for a year. The school system could then determine which socioeconomic groups need attention the most, and what each must be asked to pay to make child care administered by the schools a productive and financially solvent project.

Third, latch-key children need attention. Families with two workers and school-aged children need a viable, inexpensive alternative to time at home alone for these youngsters. Too often that time is devoted to boredom. That, combined with peer pressure, can form the beginning of disruptive, destructive habits.

While the need for day care is established, what is not clearly known is the scope of that need — or the cost. These variables could be determined by operating a child care center for a year. The school system could then determine which socioeconomic groups need attention the most, and what each must be asked to pay to make child care administered by the schools a productive and financially solvent project.

Public day care speaks to all the points enumerated — it can be low cost for those who need it to be, it can provide consistent standards of care, it can offer an after-school program. Third Street School, which will be vacant after the 1988-89 school year, is an economically satisfactory environment to attempt the venture.

It should be tried, but with attention to economy and the other large needs of Pitt's school system.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Ellen Goodman's column on Nov. 6 discusses the safety of the mother during an abortion. She does not even mention the safety of the unborn child. How does she avoid discussing this issue?

There are dramatic differences between slavery, the holocaust, abuse, and abortion, but these major injustices have a common rationalization that leads many otherwise good people to participate in the injustice.

The rationalization has three major steps. First, we divide human beings into classes such as Negroes and whites, Jews and Aryans, born and unborn, husbands and wives, children and adults.

The second step is for one class to declare superiority over another. In the cases of slavery and the holocaust, the declarations are well known. Some husbands declare superiority over their wives. In the case of abortion, the born declare superiority over the unborn.

The third step is for the self-declared superior class to discount the inferior class and conclude they do not deserve the same rights that the superior class has. They believe they are justified in denying responsibility for the inferior class, abusing or even killing them.

Ellen Goodman defends the use of drugs for abortion by pointing out that a percentage of women die during the abortion procedure and many of these women's lives could be spared. However, she never mentions that 100 percent of the unborn children will still die during the abortion procedure, nor does she discuss the justice of abortion. She apparently has classified, declared inferior and discounted unborn human beings and concluded it is okay to kill them.

The real question is not about safety, but about justice.

Hat In Hand & Hoping

BOSTON — Put aside the 1988 but-tons and try this year on for size: 2333. At the current rate of progress, the Congress of that banner year will be composed equally of men and women. Just 345 years from now.

That is the less than smashing news from this election. On Nov. 8, we added exactly two more women to the House of Representatives, making a grand total of 25 or five percent. We added no women to the Senate, maintaining the current figure at two: two women, two percent.

This is not to underplay the House victories of Nita Lowey, the newcomer from New York, or Jolene Unsoeld, who squeaked through a vicious campaign in Washington state. This is the first time since 1982 that women have made any gains in the House at all. But in the words of Jane Danowitz from the Women's Campaign Fund: "One, two...big deal." How many of us are going to be around for the swearing-in ceremonies of 2333?

The biggest barrier for women isn't money any more or old-fashioned women-should-be-in-the-kitchen prejudice. It is the problem facing any newcomer: the incumbent. The turnover rate in the House of Representatives is in a par with the turnover rate of a rent-controlled apartment in mid-town Manhattan.

Ellen Goodman

A stunning 99 percent of the 408 representatives who ran for re-election won. About the only way to get a seat is if it's already vacated or if the incumbent runs into a major scandal.

This snail's pace of capitol change is in marked contrast to what's happening in the states. In 1972, only four percent of state legislators were women; in 1988, 16 percent are women. More are holding statewide offices, including two governors, and at least half-a-dozen are poised to run for gubernatorial slots.

The incumbency encumbrance is part of a larger reality: American politics is a seniority system. You have to start early and run often. For that reason, Ellie Smeal, who has taken her Fund for the Feminist Majority to college campuses these days, believes that women have to make their first move for power at a much younger age. They have to deal with another issue as well. In politics, as in other professions, women are more likely than men to make decisions based on their families and the ages of their children.

This year women made strong races for five of the 27 open House seats from Louisiana to California. Only one woman ran for the Senate.

Even those who get into a congressional race are likely to encounter a new and more subtle variation on old-boyism. Celinda Lake, who worked on the tough Unsoeld race, has learned that "People see Congress as a man's world. They like the idea of a woman as a breath of fresh air, but they worry how women will be able to operate in that world. Will the men allow them to be effective?"

The charge of "naivete," the attacks on "leadership" — code words these days — are more likely to dog these women, even the incumbents. In her bid for re-election to governor, Madeleine Kunin of Vermont was hit with the sort of "leadership" charges rarely leveled at a sitting governor.

"I always knew that women had a harder time establishing their competence in the mind of the voter," says Lake. "But it's a matter of careful crafting. They have to show that they can operate in that world."

The pool of women in state politics, the pool of knowledge about running campaigns, even the pool of money for female candidates have all increased dramatically. It's the numbers that haven't caught up.

But we are about to see the congressional door open more than a crack. After the 1990 census, Congress will go through redistricting. There are likely to be 20 new open seats and 20 to 40 districts so different they will be like new seats.

Says Ellen Malcolm, head of the remarkably successful fund-raising operation known as Emily's List: "We have to start winning those races or we will end up the '90s the way we ended up the '80s."

How are women ending up the '80s? Hat in hand, hoping that a nearly all-male Congress will reward us with such things as parental leave or child care. Standing patiently in a long, long line to reach parity. A line reaching all the way to 2333.

Bush Can Break The Democratic Stronghold On Blacks

WASHINGTON — President-elect George Bush, having blasted his way to victory without any help from me, may not be exactly pining away for my post-election advice.

Here it is anyway. He should move quickly to resolve his identity crisis. Anyone with a political memory of more than a few weeks knows that there are two different men named George Bush. The one we have known for most of his public life is the nice guy who would rather compromise than crush, who prefers accommodation to confrontation and pragmatism to ideological purity.

The George Bush who surfaced a few months ago wears the same innocent smile as the other guy. But unlike him, this one will blindside an opponent, hit him with a sucker-punch and do anything else not specifically forbidden by the rules. For this Bush, the point is to win, and the Marquess of Queensbury be damned.

The first George Bush may have been more comfortable with himself, but he was also something of a joke — a preppy wimp whose defeat seemed likely. The second George Bush may seem oddly cast — like Alan Alda in the role of "Dirty Harry" — but he is a winner.

Which of the two will take the oath of office next January?

The advice here is: compromise. Keep the nice guy from the old days, but don't retire the fighter who knows how to win. Lose the flag-waving, ACLU-baiting demagogue, but also abandon the personality that allowed him to tiptoe through a half-dozen high-level government offices without leaving an identifiable footprint.

The Bush who tried to sound like a tough guy (remember the amateurish crudity with which he described his vice presidential debate with Geraldine Ferraro?) came off as ludicrous. The Bush who showed himself willing to fight for principles as a certified winner.

One more piece of unsolicited advice: Bush should do his party the favor of breaking the Democratic stranglehold on the black vote. That is not as difficult a task as he might imagine. He shouldn't be misled by the fact that black voters apparently were more solidly for his opponent than they were even for Walter Mondale four years ago.

Bush has the opportunity over the next few months to signal to black voters that they are welcome in the Republican party. The signals will be in the transition team he puts together, the meetings he holds and the appointments he makes.

And finally, Bush should think long and hard about his prospective nominations to the Supreme Court. He will be under intense pressure from hard-line conservatives — and particularly from right-to-lifers — to continue the rightward drift of the Court. But three things should give him pause. First is the fact that even as popular and persuasive a President as Reagan saw two of his choices rejected. A less-persuasive Bush, facing a more-Democratic Senate, would be well-advised to look to the judicial mainstream for the Court.

The second factor is that Bush himself is, at heart, more a centrist than a hard-right ideologue.

And the third consideration — the substance of my unsolicited advice — is that worries about the direction of the Supreme Court may have been a major factor keeping blacks from supporting the Republican ticket.

But the Democratic hold on the black electorate is as tenuous as it has been for a long time, and Bush has the opportunity to break it once and for all. That will be good for blacks, which may not interest Bush very much.

Court Backs Legislators On Newly Elected Judges

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Fourteen Superior Court judges elected last week will be allowed to take office, after a Superior Court judge upheld a redrawing of the state's judicial districts to increase the number of black judges.

But Judge Henry McKinnon Jr. of Lumberton said Monday that the General Assembly exceeded its authority when it extended the terms of nine incumbent judges. Except for a victory on the extension of the judges' terms, the ruling went against Republican Gov. Jim Martin, whose lawsuit had contended that the redrawn judicial districts violated the state Constitution.

But Jim Trotter, general counsel for Martin, said the decision was not a setback.

"We were very pleased with the judge's ruling," Trotter said. "It is true that we raised four issues and he ruled with us on one, but that still is a recognition of the unconstitutionality of it."

Assistant Attorney General James C. Wallace Jr., who represented elections officials who were defendants in the suit, said the extension of terms "was the least critical portion of the bill."

"I would not describe the act as seriously damaged by the ruling," he said. "As a matter of fact, we are elated."

The Democrat-controlled legislature redrew the Superior Court districts in 1987 to settle a suit filed under the Voting Rights Act by black voters. The black plaintiffs contended that the old system, in which judges were elected to staggered terms from multijudge districts at least the size of a county, diluted the voting strength of blacks and kept them from electing judges of their choice.

Of the state's 64 regular Superior Court judges, only one is black. Of 10 special Superior Court judges, who are appointed by the governor and not subject to election, two are black. Of the 14 judges elected Nov. 8, eight are black.

The legislation expanded the number of judicial districts from 34 to 60 by creating a number of single-judge districts, including nine where most voters are black or Indian. It eliminated staggered terms in multijudge districts by giving nine incumbents a one-time extension of their terms, so that all judges in a district would come up for election simultaneously.

Except for the extension of the judges' terms, "it has not been shown that the General Assembly exceeded its authority under the Constitution in any respect," McKinnon said, announcing his decision. He said his judgment would be entered Tuesday, after it has been put in writing.

Leslie Winner of Charlotte, a lawyer for some of the black plaintiffs whose suit led to the legislation, said her clients never contended that the Voting Rights Act required an end to staggered terms.

"The elimination of staggered terms is a good thing for black voters — in fact, for all voters — but once the majority black districts were created, I don't think that the staggering of terms rises to the level of a requirement," she said.

Of the nine judges whose terms were extended, the term of only one would have expired this year. McKinnon ruled that the judge, Robert E. Gaines of Gaston County, may "hold over" in office until the 1990 elections.

The other eight judges had terms that expired in 1990 and 1992 but were extended to 1992 and 1994. Under Monday's ruling, their original expiration dates will stand. Those judges are Bradford Tillery of Wilmington, Henry Barnette Jr. of Raleigh, Coy Brewer Jr. of Fayetteville, Anthony Brannon and Thomas Lee, both of Durham, C. Preston Cornelius of Mooresville and W. Terry Sherrill and C. Boone Saunders, both of Charlotte.

Thailand Holds MIA Hunters On Possible Passport Violation

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BANGKOK, Thailand — Authorities today ordered two Americans who had illegally crossed into Laos on a search for U.S. prisoners of war to remain in Thailand pending an investigation of their status.

Donna Long and James Copp, both from North Carolina, returned to Bangkok on Saturday after 41 days of detention in a Laotian jail. The Laotian authorities detained them after they sailed across the Mekong River from Thailand to illegally enter Laos.

Once in Laos, they passed out offers of a $2.4 million reward for Americans they believe are still being held more than 13 years after the Indochina war ended.

When they returned to Bangkok, immigration officials at the airport let them through but kept their passports because they did not bear the stamp given when travelers leave Thailand, said Capt. Apisak Phumsvi of Immigration Police.

That delayed the Americans' original plans to leave for the United States Wednesday.

Apisak said immigration commander Maj. Gen. Kriangkrai Karnasuta must approve the Americans' request that the charges of an immigration violation be waived. The process normally takes up to three days, he said.

"Their case is not a serious violation of Thai immigration rules," Apisak said. "We are looking at it as if it were unintentional."

Miss Long is a 45-year-old writer from Jacksonville, N.C., and Copp is a 44-year-old school teacher from Hampstead, N.C. They said they were not physically mistreated in Laos, but were subjected to interrogations and spent 32 days in solitary confinement.

They were released after $1,500 in administrative costs was paid to the Laotian government and a veterans group canceled a protest planned at the Laotian Embassy in Washington to demand their release.

Miss Long said a police colonel told her that if any other Americans dared enter Laos illegally again, they would be held "forever, forever."

The reward the two Americans were trying to publicize was pledged by 21 U.S. Congressmen and some private citizens.

Laos has repeatedly denied it is holding any Americans from the war.

The State Department on Monday praised the release of Miss Long and Copp. But its spokeswoman, Phyllis Oakley, said: "We reiterate our conviction that government-to-government cooperation is the way to resolve the the POW-MIA (prisoner of war - missing in action) issue ... and that reward offers are counterproductive to this ongoing effort."

There are 547 Americans listed as MIA in Laos.

'Re-enactment' troops hold a N.C. flag captured in 1862

Yankee City Will Return Rebel Flag

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — This city, one of the few to hail Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, will mark the 125th anniversary of the now-famous speech by returning a captured Confederate battle flag to North Carolina.

The flag, bearing 10 stars, was believed to be the personal banner of Lt. Col. Wharton Green, who commanded the 2nd North Carolina Battalion and later was wounded and captured at Gettysburg.

It was captured by Massachusetts' 27th Regiment at the Battle of Roanoke Island in 1862 and had been in the museum's collection for years, according to Joseph Carvalho, director of the Connecticut Valley Historical Museum.

"It is a very personal piece of North Carolina's own history and we felt it should be returned to the state," Carvalho said Monday.

The Saturday ceremonies will open with the reading of the names of more than 50 men buried in "Soldiers Rest," a section of the Springfield Cemetery set aside for Civil War dead. Elementary school children will place a rose on each grave.

Deacon Donald Ford of St. John's Congregational Church in Springfield will give the invocation.

The church was renamed St. John's after one of its early members, abolitionist John Brown, was hanged for treason in 1859 for attempting to seize the U.S. Armory at Harper's Ferry, Va. While in Springfield, Brown had been active in the underground railroad that helped fugitive slaves.

Following a march to the museum, Springfield Mayor Richard E. Neal will formally present the captured flag to officials from the North Carolina State Museum, and a descendant of Union troops will read the Gettysburg Address.

The short speech, which has become one of the most memorable in U.S. history, was penned by most political writers when it was first read.

"The Springfield Republican, which reprinted it in full, is said to have been one of the very few newspapers in the country to praise the Gettysburg Address. It may have been one of the few, but I haven't been able to locate any other," said Richard Garvey, a historian and associate publisher of the Springfield Newspapers. "Most newspapers called it silly, gave it a very sarcastic review or just ignored it."

Samuel Bowles, who started the newspaper now known as the Sunday Republican in 1824, was one of the founders of the Republican Party. In 1860, he traveled to Springfield, Ill., to bring word to Lincoln, who had not attended the party's Chicago convention, that he had captured the party's nomination for president.

Nursing Incentive Program Considered

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — State lawmakers are considering a $5 million nursing scholarship program, patterned after North Carolina's Teaching Fellows Program, to lure more students to the nursing profession.

Under the plan, 475 merit scholarships — of $2,500 to $3,500 — would be awarded to nursing students each year. The program was unveiled Monday at a meeting of a legislative study commission on nursing.

As with the Teaching Fellows Program, which debuted last year, lawmakers think the proposed nursing scholarships would coax more students into a profession whose prestige and popularity have declined in recent years.

In the past five years, enrollment in the University of North Carolina's nine nursing programs has dropped 33 percent. Educators generally attribute nursing's declining appeal to its reputation for high stress, bad hours and low pay — as well as increased opportunities for women in other fields.

Most of the scholarship money would be targeted toward traditional college students. The plan calls for awarding 100 scholarships, at $3,500 each year, to students enrolling in four-year nursing programs leading to a bachelor's degree.

Another 300 scholarships, worth

$3,000 each year, would be awarded to nursing students pursuing associate degrees at two-year schools.

And 25 more scholarships, at $3,000 a year, would be awarded to college students who didn't decide until their junior year to enroll in a nursing program at a four-year school.

Students would "repay" the scholarships by working as nurses in North Carolina, with each year of nursing employment erasing one year of the scholarship.

Nancy Langston, dean of the College of Nursing at UNC-Charlotte, said she "couldn't be more pleased" by the proposal.

"Let Us Build You A Home You Can Live With"

IN THE STATE

Retirement

CHARLOTTE (AP) — U.S. District Judge James McMillan, who 17 years ago ordered school busing to desegregate Charlotte-Mecklenburg Schools, said Monday he may step aside as an active judge in early 1989.

In an interview, McMillan denied rumors that he would retire, leaving his judicial duties entirely. But he said he may move to senior status, a semi-retirement.

"I'm thinking about taking senior status in the next few months," said McMillan, who turns 72 on Dec. 19. "I'll do it when the right time comes."

Federal judges on senior status are allowed to pick how many and which cases they will hear and are exempt from court administrative decision-making. There is no mandatory retirement from the federal bench.

Flounder Season

ATLANTIC, N.C. (AP) — State fisheries officials say new regulations on flounder fishing are necessary because populations of the breed have diminished in recent years, but fishermen say the new rules are costly and impractical.

"North Carolina's commercial fishermen could become an endangered or decreasing species along with flounder, striped bass and mackerel if reasonable steps aren't taken to preserve the industry and the fishery," said Bill Hogarth, state director of marine fisheries.

But some commercial fishermen say a new regulation requiring them to throw back flounder under 13 inches could cost them half their catches.

FmHA Loans

RALEIGH (AP) — More than 1,200 North Carolina farmers will be warned in letters by the end of the month that they're behind in repaying FmHA loans, but officials say the vast majority of farmers will be able to work things out.

"Foreclosure is very rare," said Eddie Miller, special projects representative for the state Farmers' Home Administration office in Raleigh. "It's not something that happens very often. If the farmers are cooperative, we can get things worked out."

More than 80,000 farmers across the nation whose loans have become delinquent are scheduled to receive the letters by Nov. 25. Of those, 1,253 are in North Carolina.

The notice advises the farmer to respond within 45 days in order to be considered for the available options.

Worker Killed

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — A 44-year-old Durham construction worker was killed Monday morning when he was run over by the rear wheels of a tandem truck at a construction site off Interstate 40 in Research Triangle Park, officials say.

James Smith was killed about 8 a.m. while working on a backhoe, according to Davidson and Jones Construction Company spokesman Jesse Scarborough. Eyewitnesses said Smith's heel got caught as he was climbing down from the backhoe, and he fell beneath the wheels of a truck that had just been loaded.

Investigators say the accident was apparently unavoidable.

Stones Broken

RANDLEMAN, N.C. (AP) — As many as 60 broken and damaged gravestones, some dating to the 1800, were found by those who attended services at the New Salem United Methodist Church Sunday.

Vandals had struck sometime Friday night or Saturday morning, officials said.

In another incident late Friday or early Saturday morning, more than 80 monuments at St. Paul's Cemetery in Randleman were knocked over or broken, according to Randleman Police Chief Mike Kellam.

Jumping Deer

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — A deer jumped through a plate-glass window at the American-Drew Furniture Company offices in North Wilkesboro on Monday, keeping the police department and state wildlife officers occupied for several hours before they could get the animal tranquilized.

The deer jumped through the office's front window about 11 a.m. Receptionist Portia Wyatt was working just a few feet away, but she didn't see the animal, and thought the building was caving in when she heard breaking glass.

The animal ran into the hallway and through the office of plant manager Jim Parks, then into the office of personnel manager Bob Whelan. Whelan and others working in the office were able to close the door quickly, corralling the deer until the North Wilkesboro Police Department and North Carolina wildlife officers could be called.

Arkansas Mother Reunited With Baby Missing 2 Weeks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — A mother reunited with her premature baby says she forgives the woman who allegedly posed as a nurse and took the 3-day-old boy from her arms at a hospital two weeks ago.

"If she took the boy because of a loss in her own life, I hope that she will have the opportunity to get some help," 32-year-old Annette Thomas-Jones said Monday, minutes after police returned her son.

"I forgive her," Mrs. Thomas-Jones and her husband, Willie Jones, 39, showed off the child, Christopher Michael Jones, at a news conference at Doctors Hospital, where the baby was kidnapped Nov. 1.

Police retrieved the infant Monday and arrested Acquetta Rushon Smith, 32, at Ms. Smith's Hot Springs home, 50 miles away, following a tip to a hot line established after the kidnapping.

Ms. Smith, an unemployed nurses' aide with four children, was charged with kidnapping, said Hot Springs Police Lt. Bobby Thomas. An arraignment was set for today.

The infant, who was wearing a tiny white T-shirt reading "Welcome Home" at the news conference, appeared no worse for the ordeal.

"The baby obviously was well taken care of," said Dr. Terry Jefferson, a pediatrician. He said Christopher weighed 5 pounds, 6 ounces Monday, up from 4 pounds when he was kidnapped.

"She took very good care of the baby," said Mrs. Thomas-Jones.

Jefferson said he expected the child to go home today, assuming lab tests found no problems. The parents spent the night with the child at the hospital.

Mrs. Thomas-Jones, who has two daughters, said the prosecution of the kidnapper would not make the family feel any better, but that they would cooperate with authorities.

"I wouldn't feel better, because I have Christopher," said Mrs. Thomas-Jones, a secretary at the state teachers' union headquarters. "She (Ms. Smith) needs help. ... (She should) just ask the Lord to forgive her for what she's done."

The tip that led police and FBI agents to Ms. Jones came from "a concerned citizen" who said the baby might be at the woman's home, said Little Rock Detective Ronnie Smith.

Detectives continued to question Ms. Smith late Monday but released no details on a motive.

A positive identification of the infant was made through a footprint, said FBI agent Ron Wolfe.

Applause broke out from a crowd of about two dozen neighbors and reporters when Mrs. Thomas-Jones and her husband, a real estate agent, emerged from their house on their way to the hospital to be reunited with the infant Monday afternoon.

"Praise the Lord, praise the Lord, hallelujah!" Mrs. Thomas-Jones shouted.

"I just want to thank the media," she said, tears filling her eyes and her voice breaking.

Local broadcasts and newspapers carried repeated appeals by Mrs. Thomas-Jones, her minister and others for information leading to the baby's return. The reports noted that Christopher needed continued medical attention because he was six weeks premature when he was born Oct. 29.

Three days after his birth, Mrs. Thomas-Jones handed the baby over to a woman posing as a nurse at the hospital who said she needed to weigh the boy, authorities said.

DOT Schedules Random Testing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Millions of transportation workers including pilots and truckers will be subject to random drug tests under a new federal directive that is likely to be challenged in court before it goes into effect in December 1989.

The Transportation Department announced the broad-ranging drug testing requirements Monday, and immediately the head of the airline pilots' union promised to fight the regulation both in Congress and in the courts.

The testing requirements cover all types of transportation, including airlines, long-distance trucks and urban transit systems.

"The American people demand and expect a drug-free transportation system. These new rules will take us as far as practically possible toward that goal," Transportation Secretary Jim Burnley said at a news conference.

He acknowledged the tests likely will be challenged in the courts. The Supreme Court already has before it two separate drug-testing cases — including one involving post-accident testing of railroad workers — that are expected to be decided next year.

The series of federal regulations announced by Burnley call for transportation companies — airlines, trucking companies, railroads and commercial shipping companies — to have comprehensive testing programs in place by December 1989. Companies with 50 or fewer employees, including tens of thousands of over-the-road independent truckers, have another year to comply.

The Transportation Department estimated the testing will cost businesses more than $2.1 billion during the first 10 years, but Burnley said the testing will save the same companies about $8.7 billion in increased productivity, accident reductions and medical cost savings.

Lawmaker Says He Thought Of Families

MIAMI (AP) — U.S. Rep. Bill Nelson says he was thinking of the Challenger astronauts' families, not about any cover-up concerning the shuttle explosion, when he intervened in a dispute over the astronauts' remains.

"It's the last thing in the wake of an American tragedy (that) there should be a bureaucratic turf fight over who's going to possess the remains of the seven dead astronauts," Nelson said Monday. "That simply was not right in the context of the national tragedy we were all suffering, and it was not right for the families of the seven astronauts."

"If I had to do it all over again, I would do it exactly the same way," he said at a news conference.

A story published Sunday in The Miami Herald's Tropic magazine said Nelson, a Florida Democrat who chairs the House Space Science Subcommittee, acted at NASA's behest in calling Brevard County Medical Examiner Laudie McHenry and telling him to drop his office's contention that the autopsies should be performed by Brevard authorities.

The article implied Nelson's actions were part of an alleged NASA cover-up aimed at preventing the public from knowing that the astronauts likely were alive until the Challenger slammed into the ocean on Jan. 28, 1986. Autopsy reports from the county office would have been public record.

Veteran Actress Coaches Trial Lawyers

IRIS ACKER

By John Platero
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — To win a case before a trial jury, an attorney needs something that isn't taught in law school, says Iris Acker, a veteran actress and television producer. She calls it "courtroom demeanor."

For years, Acker has been coaching lawyers on how to speak, dress and establish credibility with jury panels.

"In law schools, attorneys are helped with everything except their bad habits," says Acker, who began her show business career at age 11 in her native Bronx, N.Y. "An attorney must have believability so no matter what you say no one will doubt you."

Teachers, Acker explains, rarely correct students for choppy sentences, cutting off words, swaying from side to side when they speak or for not looking at the person they address.

"If you don't look a jury in the eye, they won't trust you," says Acker, who produced a 13-week series called "The Jury Box" at WLRN during her five-year tenure at the public television station here.

Using a real judge and two practicing attorneys, the program put issues on trial with actors serving as witnesses and jury.

A lengthy career in the theater has given her the wherewithal to teach voice projection and modulation, not only to attorneys, but to celebrities who are to be interviewed on television.

At her studio in North Miami, Acker, who gives her age as 50-plus, also advises attorneys on courtroom attire.

"They should wear nothing that's disconcerting — avoid stripes, polka dots and wild ties," she says. "Nothing should detract from what you're saying."

A self-described workaholic, Acker is in demand for television commercials and acts in area theaters. She often gets parts in movies made in South Florida and will be seen in "Cocoon II," soon to be released.

At her studio, she teaches aspiring actors how to audition for commercial work. She has made a videocassette and written a book on the subject.

This is her fifth year as producer-host of "On Stage," a weekly half-hour celebrity interview show on public TV that relates to the performing arts.

She became involved with attorneys when, several years ago, she was invited to a seminar at Nova University in Fort Lauderdale.

"It was for attorneys who wanted career changes and to get back to courtroom work," she says. The seminar included mock court trials.

"I was to critique attorneys on how they handled themselves — physically and verbally — in court." Her work was a success, and she returns to Nova each year to help graduating law students with their courtroom demeanor.

"I know being coached by her has helped me turn a corner," says Ellen Leesfield, a Miami trial lawyer. "She has helped my ability to present myself to judges and juries."

Acker believes her expertise would be useful to politicians.

After watching the vice presidential debate, she said, "If I had (Dan) Quayle, what a job I could do with him. He was politically coached, but not dramatically coached. He needed me."

Immigrants Flood U.S. Classrooms

By Sandra Walewski
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SWEETWATER, Fla. — He's a bright and engaging 7-year-old boy with close-cropped hair, a winning smile he flashes often and a little secret.

A first-grader at Sweetwater Elementary School in southwest Dade County, he's also a recent arrival from Brazil and still peppers his broken English with Spanish and Portuguese.

Being new to this country is not a distinction at this school, nor in schools across the county for that matter. Many must cope with a steady flow of immigrant students.

But this child, unlike many others, is handling the whole transition with surprising ease.

"I have to tell you something," he told a reporter recently, a mischievous grin spreading across his face as he leaned over a noisy lunchroom table.

"My name is not really Mike; it's Patricio."

And why did he arbitrarily change his name?

"Because I like Mike better than Patricio," he said, scrunching up his face at the sound of his real name, a Spanish version of Patrick to go with his surname of Martinez.

Peruvian-born "Mike," who arrived in the United States several months ago from Brazil, has fared better than most immigrant children because of his exuberant personality, says his teacher, Maritza Prieto.

"It doesn't matter if he makes three mistakes. He'll tell you what's on his mind," she says.

Ms. Prieto, who was born in Cuba, teaches intensive English language classes to first grade students in Sweetwater, a Miami enclave with a colorful history dating back to the 1930s when many of the first developed lots were bought by Russian midgets looking for a place to retire after the circus.

The classes are called ESOL, or English for speakers of other languages, and are part of a special program that awaits nearly all immigrant children before they go into regular classes.

The classes are focused on intensive English instruction, while reading, writing and arithmetic are taught as usual along with other subjects. Bilingual instruction is also given part of the day.

At Sweetwater, 95 percent of the students are Hispanic, with about one-third in ESOL classes. That ranks the school among the highest in the county in percentage of Hispanics.

But the entire Dade County Public School System is, in fact, coping with a crush of foreign students — some 66,000 in all, and some 6,600 of them new arrivals from foreign countries since June 1, according to Jean Sullivan of the Department of Attendance.

Anywhere between 80 and 250 foreign students are registered daily in Dade public schools, the country's fourth-largest district with 262,000 students.

From Los Angeles to Miami, schools reflect the politics and economies of troubled nations worldwide.

Turmoil in Nicaragua where civil war rages has made Nicaraguans the largest group of students flooding into Dade. But problems in impoverished Haiti and immigration programs with Cubans in third countries have also had a major impact on the influx of immigrant children in Miami.

Students also come in large numbers from Colombia, Jamaica and 124 other countries.

In Los Angeles, students from Spanish-speaking countries continue to swell the public school population, but noteworthy has been a steady rise in Korean children that has surpassed the number of Vietnamese, previously the largest Asian group,

Tutor Mary Scott gives extra help to a student during a morning session said Angel Sanchez, administrative coordinator of information services in Los Angeles. And relaxed Soviet emigration policies and ethnic unrest are being felt with more Armenian students there.

For many teachers, it means dealing with school children who, aside from language difficulties, are often disoriented, shy and require a lot of attention and understanding while they adjust during the first few months.

"I think it's very difficult for them. It's a new country, new culture, and they have to learn a lot of things," Sweetwater's Ms. Prieto said.

The Nicaraguan youths, in particular, face even more struggles than most adapting in a new country because of previous experiences.

Joyce Sanchez, an area junior high school teacher, described the difficulties in a recent newspaper interview.

"They come from a very violent world. They talk about guns, about seeing people shot, about relatives who have died. Many of them have been brought for the sole purpose of keeping them out of war."

Seven-year-old Marielo Bassett is fairly typical of incoming foreign students. She started school over the summer after arriving from Nicaragua, where she lived in the countryside and apparently did not attend school regularly because of the armed conflict in that Central American nation.

Asked if she knows any English, she says quietly, "Solo un poquito (only a little)."

"She's very emotional. Once when I told her she'd done something wrong, she started to cry," Ms. Prieto recalls, adding Marielo frequently complained of stomachaches at first, probably emotionally-related. "Her reaction to things is kind of lost, disoriented."

Rudy Sarantes, 6, of Nicaragua also is a lot like many recent arrivals, appearing insecure and needing reassurance before answering a question.

"Take your time," are words heard often in Ms. Prieto's classroom.

"There's a lot of strain," acknowledges Jacob Gewirtz, an expert in child developmental psychology at Florida International University.

With some of the older youths in their teens, there may be clashes in values held in the old country compared with their new home, Gewirtz said.

And many of the youths also have other family concerns, such as a relative left behind in their homeland or being unable to get homework help from parents because of the language barrier facing the adults.

"I think they (the parents) have a lot on their shoulders — work problems ... they don't have as much time as they want (to help) but are generally supportive," Ms. Prieto says.

In an overcrowded school with 1,517 students, but designed for 860, Ms. Prieto shares a single classroom with another ESOL teacher and 28 second-graders.

A single, oversized chalkboard on rollers is the only thing that divides the classes, but they cope — and sometimes shout to get their point across.

"What country do we live in," asks the teacher.

"U-S-A," shout Naomi from Ecuador, Milagros of Nicaragua and Maria from Guatemala, along with the rest of the class.

"And what is the long name," the teacher continues, getting a "United States of America" after some prodding.

'Annie' An Activist?

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — During the 1930s, the comic strip "Orphan Annie" carried a hidden message to Americans troubled by the liberalism of the New Deal programs, says University of Rochester historian Jesse Moore.

"The fact that Orphan Annie took care of herself and surmounted adversity on her own is significant," says Moore. "It implied that the government should not be taking care of an individual's problems."

A portable computer and picnic table substitute for an office for Chuck Woodbury, publisher of 'Out West'

Editor, Publisher, Reporter Runs His Paper From Old Motor Home

By Robert W. Stewart
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BRIDGEPORT, Calif. — Piloting his weather-worn motor home through the autumn-hued aspen high in the Sierra Nevada, Chuck Woodbury, editor, publisher and reporter for Out West, the nation's only "on the road" newspaper, indulges in a bit of folksy hyperbole.

"The rural West is still very much that America that was there 20, 30, 40 years ago," Woodbury, 41, tells his slightly cynical reporter companion.

"People still leave their doors unlocked at night, they don't roll up the windows in their cars ... and the kids in little towns, if they don't show up at 5 o'clock for dinner, their parents just figure they're having dinner at somebody else's house."

"Sure," Woodbury's companion murmurs.

Several hours later the soft-spoken, ever-earnest editor waves over a waiter at the whitewashed Bridgeport Inn. What is it about this isolated California town of 900 that this man finds so appealing? Woodbury asks.

Well, the waiter says, he does not need to bolt the front door at night, he usually leaves his car unlocked, and he never worries about where his children ride their bicycles.

When it comes to the rural West, Chuck Woodbury knows whereof he speaks.

For the last year, Woodbury has crisscrossed the region's mountains, deserts, valleys and coast in search of the little stories — the humorous, the bizarre — that are the texture of small-town culture. With two cameras, Macintosh and NEC computers, and the darkroom equipment he packs into his 11-year-old, 18-foot motor home, this unusual romantic sets down the stories for his equally unusual quarterly.

After each sojourn of six or eight weeks, the slightly graying, slightly built scribe returns to a small, simply furnished cottage in suburban Sacramento and, with the help of a contract printer, puts out another edition of his unique chronicle of Western life.

"I like a certain light style," Woodbury explains. "I like to see the humor in things and have fun."

Mixed into a potpourri of stories are reviews of highways, based, among other things, on their scenic value and pot hole quotient; essays on roadside dining ("If eating cow brains sounds pretty good, join the editor as he eats some in Missoula"); photographs of off-the-wall bumper stickers (on one RV: "Don't tailgate or I'll flush"); and Woodbury's personal roadside journal.

One thing you won't find is advertising. "I'm sick of advertising," Woodbury says. "Everywhere I go — shopping carts, bus benches, the Olympic Games, television. They've even got it in some Johns, now. You stand there in front of a urinal and there's an ad in front of you."

As a result, Woodbury relies solely on his subscribers for revenue and promotes "Out West" as "100 percent fat free."

"People ask if I ever run out of stories," the editor says as he drives south through the Mono

Basin. "We've gone by about five already today. ... No matter where you go, if you just start talking to people, you find a story."

Although he still earns extra cash by selling free-lance articles to recreational-vehicle magazines and the like, "Out West" is increasingly becoming Woodbury's sole means of support. And he's delighted.

"Sometimes I feel like Walter Mitty," he says. "It's some sort of fantasy."

The whimsical periodical, which most recently weighed in at 36 pages, has already attracted more than 2,000 subscribers, and the circulation seems to be doubling with each issue. At $5 a year ($6 after Jan. 1), it won't be long, Woodbury figures, before he can stop worrying about where he'll get the money to repair the next flat tire.

After college, Woodbury was involved in several publications. Though he started successfully, he eventually lost more than $45,000 on a failed magazine venture. When he regained his footing, he didn't know what to do next.

"I didn't want to get a job," he says. "I had job offers, but I always felt in the back of my mind that something would happen."

A year ago, somewhere between Thermopolis and Rock Springs, Wyo., something did.

"All of a sudden I thought, you know, I'll go home right now. I've got the stories in the computer. I'll lay out a paper. I'll print 3,500 copies, I'll put it in the mail and send out a press release and see what happens."

"Out West" immediately attracted more than 250 subscribers, and the list has been growing ever since.

Toys Are True Trendsetters Of America

If you want to know where the country is headed, look to the toy departments.

For years, they have been the barometer for every new trend or direction taking place. They have been forerunners of the space program, technology and the women's revolution. Military toys have reflected our enemies and sex education brought us anatomically correct dolls. And I'll bet there isn't one of you who can't remember where you were and what you were doing the day you discovered Barbie "went corporate."

That's why I nearly fell out of my chair the other day when I was reading a toy catalog that featured a laundry and cleaning center for glamorous fashion dolls to care for their pretty clothing.

I'm serious. There was this doll with 30 pounds of flaxen hair and a body that defied gravity standing in front of an ironing board. Behind her was a washer, a vacuum cleaner that really worked, an iron that glowed when plugged into the socket, a bucket and pretend soap. (Batteries and skinny laundress not included.)

What kind of message is the toy industry sending out here? Am I to believe that young women are going to learn how to plug in an iron? Is polyester becoming an endangered species? Is it possible Barbie will go domestic on us? Barbie, who wears underwear with a "Dry Clean Only" label in them? Or are they trying to lure young people back to the utility room with designer appliances? I don't know what to think.

There's a theory that toys shape your children's lives. I believe it. When they came out with a baby doll that wet, burped, crawled, talked and whined, the birth rate ultimately declined. Those little play kitchens stocked with ovens to be cleaned, little boxes of mixes to be baked and tiny pans that had to be washed produced a generation of fast-food junkies. And face it, dollhouses that involved moving the furniture around all day drove yesterday's children to studio apartments.

It's an interesting concept, but frankly, in a world where Barbie changes heads to change the color of her hair, I don't think it will fly. It has taken women 200 years to get out of the utility room, and a pink bucket with a matching iron isn't going to get them back.

Nowadays, when you iron your husband's shirt, you ask if he plans to take his jacket off. Hand-washes go out of style waiting to be laundered. When you ask your kid to drop off his muddy gym shoes in the utility room, he asks, "Where is it?"

In the same catalog, I noticed there was a little boy in a red turbo Lamborghini. Put him in front of the ironing board and see how it plays.

Sister Is Still Plagued By Childhood Shame

Dear Abby: I am writing to you because I can't tell this to anyone else.

I am carrying a terrible load of guilt from my past that I can't forgive myself for, and I can't forget. I committed incest with my brother when I was 11 years old and he was only 3. This happened only once, but I can't get it out of my mind. I am 50 years old and he is 42, and I don't know whether he remembers it or not. I am too ashamed even to ask his forgiveness. We do not live close to each other. I live in the Midwest and he lives in California. He is happily married with a nice family.

Without making this a book, I'll try to fill you in on some of the details. Our mother was sick much of the time when we were growing up. She was hospitalized several times for what they called "nervous breakdowns." Our father was a devoted husband and a loving father. Both parents are gone now. I have been married to a recovering alcoholic for 30 years. He is in A.A. and I am in Al-Anon — that's probably what brought all this to the surface. In trying to work the 12-step program, this guilt keeps coming up, and I don't know what to do with it.

Please help me, Abby. Most of the people who know me think I'm a nice person. Writing this has been one of the hardest things I've ever had to do. If you think printing my letter will help someone else, you may, but please, do not mention where it came from. — A Troubled Woman

Dear Troubled: You are a nice person, and you have absolutely no reason to feel any guilt or shame. You did not commit "incest," my dear lady! You were a curious 11-year-old girl who went on a fact-finding expedition and did some preadolescent "exploring." Most children are curious about the opposite sex, and you merely satisfied your natural curiosity.

Dear Abby

In all probability, your brother has no memory of this incident. If he has, he has probably dismissed it as a childhood game. Almost all children have played "doctor," or a game of "You show me yours and I'll show you mine." Believe me, it is nothing to worry about, so put it out of your mind and don't give it another thought.

If you aren't able to unload the unearned guilt, please see a professional counselor.

Dear Abby: My son was recently married. I am a widow struggling to make ends meet, so I was not able to help finance the wedding.

I just saw the wedding announcement about to be mailed. It says, "The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Smith" (made-up name), but there is no mention of my name as the mother of the groom.

My son asked his mother-in-law why my name was not mentioned. She told him that I had not contributed anything toward the wedding.

Is this proper etiquette? — Invisible Mother

Dear Mother: Your name should have been mentioned as the mother of the groom. You made a very important contribution to the wedding — the groom, without whom there would not have been a wedding.

Halloween favors for patients' trays at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. She said three Halloween trees and two pumpkins were placed at nurses' stations.

Mrs. Richard Gavigan reported on Ronald McDonald House efforts. Mrs. W.C. Taylor reminded members to take items for Operation Santa Claus, a community project to provide gifts for mental health system clients, to the December meeting.

Baker Maintains Humorous Side ECU Coach Preparing For Final Game As The Pirates' Head Man

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

One thing for sure, Art Baker hasn't lost his sense of humor, despite the fact that he is preparing for his final game as head coach of the East Carolina football team.

Monday afternoon, following Baker's weekly press conference, several media members were outside the Pirates Club, talking when Baker pulled out of the Scales Fieldhouse parking lot — on a bicycle. Baker was dressed in suit and tie and sporting an ECU baseball-type cap.

"Lose your courtesy car?" one member of the press quipped as Baker approached.

"This is what happens to you when you lose your job and can't afford gas," Baker said as he peddled by, a big grin in his face.

Baker, at the press conference, said that a lot of strange things had happened since he last met with the media. "The last time we were together, I turned in my resignation," Baker said. "Then we went out and won a ball game and I was looking forward to being able to talk about it Monday, but we didn't have a press conference."

The regular meeting was superseded by basketball's media day since the football team had an open date the following Saturday.

Baker said that some things happened against Temple, where the Pirates claimed a 34-17 victory, that had not happened before. "We had great kickoff coverage and then on the first play, we intercepted a pass for a touchdown and ended up with a 21-0 lead at the end of the first quarter.

"Our players made a great effort in the game and we came out with no injuries," he added.

In fact, the open date has given several others a chance to lead. Baker said that slotbacks Jarrod Moody and Dennell Harper returned to practice Monday, along with lineman Tod Creech.

All three are hoped to be available for regular duty on Saturday when the Pirates close out the 1988 season against Cincinnati.

"That will be my final game," Baker said, "although the itch to coach is still there. But I don't know if I'll coach again. I have grandchildren now and I want to be close to them, so that limits the area I would be interested in."

Meanwhile, Baker has been named to head a personal development program for student-athletes at ECU.

"This is not the manner in which I would like for it to have

Strange Beats A Friendly Foe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — They were two good friends going head to head for most of the annual honors in golf's season-ending event.

"These are friends and there are friends you go to dinner with," Curtis Strange said.

"Tom (Kite) and (his wife) Christy are friends Sarah (Strange) and I go to dinner with a lot," Strange said Monday. "He's a good friend, a close friend."

"But that ends on the golf course. On the golf course, he isn't my friend Tom Kite. He's just somebody standing in the way of me winning a golf tournament."

And it was a dead-serious, completely combative Curtis Strange who beat Tom Kite on Monday in the day-late sudden-death playoff finish to golf's season-ending, $3-million Nabisco Championships of Golf.

Strange's face was grim and determined, betraying no trace of friendship, when he snatched the tee from the ground after his 4-iron shot on the second playoff hole nestled two feet from the flag and left Kite with an impossible task.

Kite had to better that shot, match Strange's near-certain birdie, to stay alive on the 17th hole at Pebble Beach.

He couldn't do it. He put his tee shot in a bunker, got up and down for a par-3, but lost to Strange's birdie on the second hole of a playoff for most of golf's major seasonal honors.

Strange's two-foot birdie putt made him:

- The first man to go past $1 million in single-season earnings on the American tour.
- The 1988 Player of the Year.
- The only four-time winner on the American tour this year.

Strange, who has won five titles around the world this year, collected $535,000 from the total prize money of $3 million and pushed his season's earning to a record $1,147,644 for the year.

Close Of Season Breeds Uncertainty

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

As East Carolina closes out its football season Saturday at Cincinnati, the team's rising seniors are looking to the future with uncertainty.

ECU head coach Art Baker announced his resignation earlier this season and ECU athletic director Dave Hart has already begun searching for a successor.

Of all the players on the team, it is the seniors who are placed in virtual limbo. With only one year of eligibility left, they could easily be swept up in a youth movement.

Hart said he would like to name a coach by the first week in December. For rising seniors

Grant Lowe and Mike Applewhite, the sooner the better.

"Over Thanksgiving would be a good time, whoever it is, to set up recruiting and stuff," Lowe said. "Some of the seniors and myself have been talking and we're going to set up a meeting with Dave Hart. We're (going to be) talking about some things that we feel, qualities of a coach, that we think are necessary."

"I think if we went over there — four or five of the seniors — I think that we could get some points across."

"I'd like to see them name one quickly," Applewhite said. "Next thing you know, we'll be home for Christmas (soon) and I'd like to know what's going on and not go

Hershiser Tops Selections

Cy Young Award Winners Top All-Star Selections

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Orel Hershiser and Frank Viola, the Cy Young Award winners, were picked for the 1988 The Associated Press Major League All-Star team, and outfielder Kirby Puckett of Minnesota was named for the third straight year.

Hershiser, the Most Valuable Player of the NL playoffs and the World Series, was a unanimous selection as the right-handed starter, receiving 165 points from a nationwide panel of writers and broadcasters in voting announced Monday.

Third baseman Wade Boggs of Boston and relief pitcher Dennis Eckersley of Oakland were nearly unanimous selections. Boggs received 155 points at third and Gary Gaetti — the only other player to receive votes at that position — got nine. Eckersley beat John Franco of Cincinnati by that same margin.

The American League dominated the AP team, filling eight of 12 spots, including all three in the outfield.

Alan Trammell of Detroit was picked as the shortstop, Paul Molitor of Milwaukee as the designated hitter and Viola of Minnesota as the left-handed starter.

Puckett, Jose Canseco of Oakland and Mike Greenwell of Boston are the outfielders.

National Leaguers picked were first baseman Will Clark of San Francisco, second baseman Ryne Sandberg of the Chicago Cubs, catcher Benito Santiago of San Diego and Hershiser. Santiago last year became the first rookie named an AP All-Star.

Hershiser should be used to no one voting against him. He was a unanimous pick last week for the Cy Young Award.

"Unanimous is hard to attain, so how can you expect it?" he said. "My career will go downhill from here."

Eckersley had 45 saves during the season, one short of Dave Righetti's major-league record.

Eckersley failed to get a save in Game 1 of the World Series when Los Angeles' Kirk Gibson hit a two-run homer with two outs in the ninth inning.

"How can I be disappointed with the season I've had?" he said. "At

Comments Get Coach Banned

ACC Suspends Spurrier

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM — Duke University head football coach Steve Spurrier will be barred from Saturday's Duke-North Carolina football game because of comments he made about officiating after last Saturday's 43-43 tie with N.C. State.

Atlantic Coast Conference Commissioner Gene Corrigan said Monday that conference policy will allow Spurrier to be with his team up to one hour before game time this Saturday, after which he must leave the stadium.

"I guess you just cannot talk about the refs if you coach football in this league," Spurrier said after Corrigan announced the penalty.

Spurrier said he hoped his suspension won't have a negative effect on his team Saturday, when the Blue Devils meet North Carolina, but his players are having a tough time swallowing their disappointment.

"That one play took away a bowl game and took away our coach," said wide receiver Clarkston Hines.

Duke was leading State 43-40 in the final seconds Saturday when a defensive holding call against Duke nullified an interception by Duke safety Scott Brittingham and gave N.C. State a first down at the Duke 20-yard line. Two plays later, Damon Hartman kicked a 37-yard field goal to tie the game as time expired.

In interviews following the game, Spurrier said the officials kept his team from winning. At that time, Spurrier said it was the "worst call he'd seen as a player or a coach" and "the worst call in the history of Duke football."

The ACC Constitution and bylaws prohibit public criticism of officials other than directly to the conference office.

League officials at the fall meeting Oct. 16 voted to initiate game suspensions in all sports for coaches who broke the code of conduct in criticizing game officials.

"Public criticism of officials or comments evaluating officiating of a particular contest is not in the best interest of intercollegiate athletics," the policy reads. "Institutional personnel are prohibited from commenting on officiating other than directly to the conference office."

"The commissioner feels like he has to go ahead and enforce the rule," Spurrier said at his weekly press conference Monday. "Obviously I will comply by it. I don't think it will make that big a difference."

Duke athletic director Tom Butters said he agreed with the suspension. "That's the rule," he said. "We supported it unanimously, the athletic directors and faculty representatives. If you support the legislation, you support the enforcement."

Bills Are Closing On The AFC East Title

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — The Buffalo Bills are closing in on the AFC East title and trying to keep their emergence as one of the NFL's better teams in perspective.

The Bills improved the league's best record to 10-1 Monday night with a 31-6 victory over the Miami Dolphins and can clinch their first division championship since 1980 by beating the New York Jets next week.

Ronnie Harmon and Robb Riddick scored two touchdowns apiece and Cornelius Bennett led a defense that limited Miami's sputtering offense to 257 net yards as Buffalo extended the club's longest winning streak since 1974 to six games.

"The sky's the limit for this team," defensive end Bruce Smith said. "All we've got to do is keep our heads and not get carried away with what we've done."

"We play the New York Jets next week. That's the most important game of the season," he added, refusing to be drawn into speculation about how far the Bills can go in postseason. "That's all we can think about. Everything else will take care of itself."

Harmon and Riddick, subbing for injured tailback Thurman Thomas, combined for 229 yards total offense and Jim Kelly completed 18 of 26 passes for 211 yards, and one touchdown for Buffalo.

The Bills lead the Indianapolis Colts and New England Patriots by four games in the AFC East and are two games up in the race to claim the homefield advantage throughout the playoffs.

The Dolphins, on the other hand, were virtually eliminated the playoff picture after falling to 5-6, including a 0-5 record against AFC East opponents.

The Bills won a Sept. 11 meeting between the teams 9-6 and have won three straight in a series Miami once dominated.

"I would not have guessed we would come away with this kind of margin (of victory), and if we

Holding Call Looms As Key Play

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — The Miami player didn't think he had held, the Buffalo player didn't realize he had been held and Dolphins coach Don Shula said he had never seen such a call.

The penalty helped trigger a 21-point second-half outburst by the Bills in Monday night's 31-6 victory over Miami.

Dolphins defensive end Jackie Cline was called for holding fullback Jamie Mueller, negating a fumble recovery by Miami's Rick Graf at midfield early in the third period. Buffalo led 10-6 at the time.

After Mueller fumbled a handoff, Cline tackled him. Mueller vainly tried to escape Cline's grasp to retrieve the ball, and the flag flew.

"That was the first time I've ever seen it called, but it was called," Shula said. "You can push and shove and do those kind of things if you're going for a loose ball."

The five-yard penalty allowed the Bills to complete an 80-yard touchdown drive. Less than three minutes later they scored again following an interception and led 24-6.

"A big play," Shula said of the penalty. Line judge Boyce Smith made the call.

"During the fumble, he (Cline) grabbed the legs of the Buffalo player who was attempting to crawl to the loose ball and held him to prevent him from getting the ball," Smith said.

Cline said he had never heard of such a penalty. "No, and I don't think anybody in this locker room has, either," Cline said. "I didn't even know they called the penalty on me. I just tackled him and I was laying on him after the tackle."

Mueller said he would have recovered the ball had Cline not tackled him. But the penalty confused the Bills' player.

"When they said holding, I didn't even realize that it was holding (of) me until a couple of plays later," he said.

Mueller said the call came at a critical time. "You never know — with a turnover like that, if they would've gotten the ball, they could've taken it down and scored."

Purple Tops Gold In ECU Hoop Scrimmage

SNOW HILL — Blue Edwards scored a game-high 20 points for the Gold team in a return to his high school alma mater, but it wasn't enough to prevent the Purple from taking an 86-80 victory Monday night in a East Carolina basketball intra-squad scrimmage at Greene Central High School.

Senior swingman Kenny Murphy and junior forward Gus Hill scored 18 points apiece for the Purple team. Stanley Love added 12 while Kevin Staples had 12.

Junior swingman Reed Lose had 15 points and freshman forward Casey Mote added 12 for the Gold team.

Led by 14 first half points from Murphy, the Purple team took the lead from the outset before the Gold battled back to trail by one at the half, 43-42.

Edwards, who was a three-year starter at Greene Central, was the unofficial winner in a halftime dunk contest with Murphy and Staples. Saturday in a public scrimmage at Minges Coliseum, Edwards shattered a backboard with a dunk during a halftime dunk contest. He attempted the same dunk this time, coming in one handed from the side, but the rim and backboard stayed intact.

In the women's meet, William and Mary won the final event, the Tribe won the 400 yard free style relay.

In the 200 individual medley, Meredith Bridgers broke her own school record for the second time in one weekend with a time of 2:29.71.

The win moved the men to 4-0 overall and 3-0 in the CAA, while the women fall to 3-1 overall and 2-1 in the CAA.

Holley Named To All-Conference Team

East Carolina's Jemma Holley was named to the Colonial Athletic Association's All-Conference second team this weekend at the CAA volleyball championship tournament held at American University.

Holley, a junior outside hitter from Teachey, was the first ECU player ever named to a volleyball all-conference team.

The Lady Pirates' leading hitter for the season with 243 kills, Holley is also ranked as the CAA's fourth leading player in kill average. For the Lady Pirates, she is third in digs with 338 and is ECU's number-two blocker as she ends the season with 20 block solos and 18 block assists.

Davis Love Jr. Killed In Plane Crash

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A pilot and three Georgia golf pros, including the father of PGA player Davis Love III, were killed when their plane crashed into a swamp during a fog-bound approach to Jacksonville International Airport.

The single-engine Piper Cherokee went down at about 9 p.m. Sunday night just two miles short of the runway after a flight from Brunswick, Ga., according to spokesman Steve Weintraub of the Jacksonville Sheriff's Office.

Deputies searched through the night for the wreckage, which was spotted just after 7 a.m. Monday, he said.

Investigators from the Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board remained at the swampy crash site to try to determine what caused the plane to go down, Weintraub said.

Killed in the crash were passengers Davis Love Jr., 53; John Pops, 37, and Jimmy Hodges, 35.

Pilot Frank Worthington was also killed in the crash.

Love, Pops and Hodges were on their way to a Golf Digest school annual meeting at the Innisbrook resort in Tarpon Springs, according to the magazine's president James W. FitzGerald.

Deacons May Go To Independence Bowl

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Officials with the Independence Bowl say Wake Forest can win its way into the Dec. 23 game with a victory Saturday over Appalachian State.

Mike Collier, chairman of the Independence Bowl selection committee, said Monday that if the Demon Deacons win Saturday, "they're in."

That would eliminate the University of Texas at El Paso and the University of Pittsburgh from consideration.

If they win, Wake Forest would finish with a 7-4 record and play the University of Southern Mississippi, 9-2.

Soviets Roll To 86-71 Win Over Wolfpack

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Arvidas Sabonis scored 17 points in a reserve role to lead five players in double figures as the Soviet Union national team held off North Carolina State in the second half for an 86-71 exhibition victory Monday night.

Sabonis scored four points in a seven-point burst by the Olympic gold medalists which widened a 51-46 edge at 16:10 of the second half to 56-46 following Sergei Tarakanov's three-point play with 15:01 remaining.

The Soviets opened a 69-56 lead with 8:17 left on a 3-point basket by Rimantas Kurtinaitis, but the Wolfpack put on a final charge, twice cutting the deficit to six points. Poor free throw shooting kept the Soviets from a bigger lead, as they missed six straight free throws, the last four of which were the front end of one-and-ones.

Valeri Tikhonenko had 16 points, and Tarakanov and Aleksandr Volkov had 13 points apiece for the Soviets, who won their second game on their 12-game tour of the U.S. Kurtinaitis had 10. They defeated North Carolina in their tour opener.

Chucky Brown led the Wolfpack with 20 points. Rodney Monroe, who hit one of 12 3-point shots he attempted, scored 13 points, Avie Lester scored 11 and Corchiani had 10.

Tate Leads List Of Maryland Signees

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Michael Tate of Oxon Hill High School heads a list of four signees to the University of Maryland's basketball program announced Monday by Coach Bob Wade.

The 6-foot-7 Tate has been listed as a third-team High School All-American by Street & Smith magazine, a leading sports publication, according to a statement from the university.

Tate, Curley Young of Chesapeake, Va., Kevin Chamberlain of College Park, Ga., and Evers Burns of Baltimore all signed national letters of intent to play basketball at Maryland beginning next year, Wade said.

Young is a 6-foot-4 forward, Burns is a 6-foot-8 forward and Chamberlain is a 6-foot-8 forward. Young and Burns were listed on Street & Smith's All-America Honorable Mention list, the university said.

Staak Ready For This Season

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

(This is one of a series of articles previewing the basketball teams in the Atlantic Coast Conference)

When Wake Forest basketball coach Bob Staak looked at his roster for the 1988-89 season, he realized for the first time in his three-plus years as the Deacons' coach that he actually had an Atlantic Coast Conference squad.

"I really consider this the first year of our program in that we have one player that we have coached three years and every other player we have recruited," Staak said. "I'm optimistic about this year. I'm looking forward to this year more than any other year I've been a head coach. I don't know what it's like to have an ACC team in the ACC. Right now I think we have the ingredients for that."

The Demon Deacons have been mired in the bottom of the ACC in recent years but have made strides each season toward respectability. Last year, Wake Forest went 10-18 overall and 3-11 in the conference with a team that lost its starting backcourt midway through the season.

With its injured players back and Staak's best recruiting class yet, there is cause for optimism in Winston Salem. Guard Robert Siler is healthy after missing most of last year with a knee injury. Tony Black, another guard, is recovering slowly from a fractured leg, though.

"We have a lot more players this year where we can substitute in people," said forward Sam Ivy, who often seemed Wake's only true threat last season. "Whereas last year we had eight or 10 people and everybody would be so tired. In the long run it will help us. Hopefully we can capitalize on what we have and hopefully we'll come out better than we did last year. In the ACC, some weird things can happen."

Among the newcomers, 6-7 forward Chris King and 5-11 point guard Derrick McQueen figure to make immediate impacts. Phil Medlin, a 6-8 freshman who starred at D.H. Conley, might also help out before long.

"As optimistic as I am this year there is a measure of caution because there are some things that have to fall in place for us to realize success I think this team has the potential to have," the coach said. Staak said one key will be the recovery of guards Robert Siler and Tony Black, both of whom were injured most of last season. Siler, who started at point guard until he was downed by a knee injury, appears ready to go. Black is still having trouble recovering from a fractured leg. Another factor is Sam Ivy, who was diagnosed as having an enzyme deficiency that has resulted in a diet change to generate the fatty acids to regenerate the fluids that he loses during exertion.

The development of the freshman, though, stands to be a key to the Deacons' development.

"The second ingredient to whatever level of success we achieve this year depend on contributions from the freshmen," Staak said. "I really believe we'll have two freshmen who will contribute heavily. One is Chris King, who I believe is going to be an outstanding player in this league before all is said and done. As good as King could be I think Derrick McQueen could be more important to our squad this year. He's a legitimate point guard, something we lacked last year."

"We recruited another freshman, Phil Medlin, who will impact earlier than we thought. With the added strength and bulk, he is going to be a factor."

Ralph Kitley returns for his junior year at center and improved markedly during the latter part of last year. His continued improvement will be a key for the Demon Deacons.

"Ralph has improved a lot," Ivy said. "I think that once we get into the flow it will come through. If we can keep Ralph going, he'll be a tough player to play against."

David Carlyle started at forward last year and averaged 13.6 points per game. Guard Cal Boyd chipped in with 11.3. But both their roles could change with the added personnel.

Boyd very likely could find himself at off-guard, while Carlyle figures to alternate between wing and forward.

All in all, it adds up to something Wake has not had in recent seasons — versatility.

"We can go to a bigger lineup with me, Ralph and Chris on the front line," Ivy said. "If he wants to go to a smaller lineup he can go with David (Carlyle) and Ralph and I. He has the choice of style of play now. I think I will be predominantly on the inside."

Creighton Looking For Excitement

By Scott Ostler
LAT/WP NEWS SERVICE

"Great balls of fire, Creighton basketball," says the cheery yet businesslike woman answering the phone.

I ask to speak to the Creighton basketball coach, Tony Barone.

When connected, I ask Barone — whose last name rhymes with his first — why his secretary answers the phone that way.

"That's our team's theme this year," Tony says in his native Chicago accent. "You shake my knees and you rattle my brain. Jerry Lee Lewis, one of the greatest. We're trying to put a little life back in the world of athletics, a little excitement."

Which is why I'm calling. I have heard that Coach Barone is going to have his players work in a poverty-area soup kitchen on Thanksgiving Day. I don't know if that falls under the heading of excitement, but Tony seems excited about it.

He says that he's fed up with the jerks in college sports stealing all the headlines. Cheating, robbing, raping, fighting, snorting, lying, dying. The usual stuff.

"It's getting to be an old scenario," Tony says. "On Thanksgiving Day, our kids will go into the community, work in shelters, food kitchens, spend a couple hours trying to give something back, as opposed to taking."

"I know it sounds like I'm on some kind of high horse, but I'm sick of the negativism that surrounds the world of intercollegiate sports. Somewhere along the line they're going to have to take hold of this image and clean it up."

This will be Barone's fourth season as basketball coach at Creighton, which is in Omaha, Neb. He succeeded Willis Reed. Tony thinks that he will have a pretty good team this season, but he also thinks that it won't mean much unless his players learn more than just basketball.

"We have what we call the Creighton Basketball Pride Club," Tony says. "You pay five bucks, you get two tickets for any game, and one buck goes to the homeless in Omaha. Your name goes on a huge plaque, which will be the biggest plaque in the history of plaques."

"We have Operation Bluejay, where we send our players to high schools and grade schools in the city, to talk about substance abuse, the value of education. We send out letters to the schools, and we've actually had schools tell us they can't give us that 45 minutes because if they do, they'll have to let in other groups selling magazines and stuff. I throw up when I hear that."

These community activities, by the way, are not voluntary for Tony's players, any more than wind sprints or defensive drills are voluntary. Tony believes in more or less taking the initiative when it comes to helping players find constructive ways to spend their time.

"Do our kids want to go to the soup kitchens?" Barone asks, rhetorically. "Of course they don't. If you give 'em a choice — 'Do you want to lay around the dorm all Thanksgiving Day and watch football on TV, or do you want to go work in a soup kitchen?' — what would they choose? We just say 'Do it,' period. They do it and they enjoy it."

"Kids today expect so much. A scholarship to Creighton is worth $12,000 a year. I think for that, I have the right to tell 'em what to do, and I do."

"People miss the point if they think we're doing this just for the community. This is for the benefit of the kids, too. They're going to experience something they've never experienced before. The reality is something I need to get across to these kids. They don't understand sometimes what the real world is like. They get sick, they go to the team doctor."

"A soup kitchen's not the greatest place in the world to hang around on Thanksgiving Day. But kids go to college, get a degree and are never exposed to the real world."

been (the close of his career). I would have liked to go out a winner; maybe that has something to do with that itch."

Winning the last two games, however, would be some consolation to the coach, closing on a high note and giving some momentum to the program for the new coach to carry into the coming year.

"I've tried not to think that this is the last game I'll ever coach, but it might be," he said.

Baker also said that he feels that he has accomplished some positive things for East Carolina in his four years. "There will be 24 or 25 seniors returning for next year's team. This year we have only seven seniors who are starters. And we've redshirted what I believe is the most talented group of freshmen we've had here."

Now, however, the Pirates come to the close of the season as they travel to meet Cincinnati's Bearcats on Saturday at 1:30 p.m. at Nippert Stadium, ending the Art Baker era at ECU.

Players Wonder About Future

home and have it flashed across the news wire."

Jarrod Moody, a senior co-captain on this year's team, is the squad's lone representative on the search committee, which is made up of a number of academic and athletic department officials.

That representation is vital, according to Applewhite.

"I think it's very important," Applewhite said. "Jarrod knows how we feel and he'll do anything to enhance our program."

"I think we should leave it up to Dave Hart and the athletic department administration as to who the next coach will be. Being players I don't feel its part of our critique. We're not paying anyone. We're on scholarship here to play football and go to school. It's a hands off policy concerning that."

Both Applewhite and Lowe have started since their sophomore years and figured to challenge for all-star honors during their final seasons.

But with any coaching switch, things can change very quickly.

"If they bring somebody in they are going to be looking down the road next year. That's all we have — the seniors — is next year," Lowe said.

"I just want to go out and win the Cincinnati game. A lot of changes are going to happen after that."

And that raises some interesting possibilities. With only seven seniors starting on this year's team, the new coach will inherit a reasonably experienced team.

In the last three years, both North Carolina State and North Carolina went through coaching changes. At State, Dick Sheridan took over a team in 1986 that the year before had gone 3-8.

The following season, Sheridan guided a senior-dominated team to a 8-3-1 mark and a trip to the Peach Bowl.

This past season, Mack Brown succeeded Dick Crum at North Carolina. He took over a team with some experience on offense and virtually none on defense. In addition, the Tar Heels also had one of their toughest schedules in recent years.

UNC is presently 1-8 and a number of the upperclassmen that started the year have since been replaced by freshmen, primarily on defense.

"I think if I was going to be the football coach of this team next year I would look at the positives being there are something that 24-25 players that are going to be seniors coming back," Baker said. "36 out of 40 players are returning. We redshirted (the majority of) what I consider to be the most talented group of freshman we've had."

So while the media and fans speculate on Baker's replacement, it remains a waiting game for the ones who will end up playing under the new coach.

Rogers Is Charged With Manslaughter

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PONTIAC, Mich. — Detroit Lions defensive end Reggie Rogers, wearing a metal halo brace to prevent movement of his injured neck, is facing manslaughter charges in the traffic deaths of three teen-agers.

Rogers, 24, pleaded innocent Monday before 50th District Judge Christopher C. Brown and was released on $10,000 personal bond. Brown scheduled a preliminary examination for Dec. 1.

Rogers could face up to 15 years in prison if convicted on three felony counts of involuntary manslaughter.

"He feels terrible," Rogers' attorney, Elbert Hatchett, said after the hearing as his client stood by, silently. "This is a terrible tragedy and he's immensely sorry about what has happened."

Hatchett said he hasn't yet formulated a legal strategy, but denied he would try to shift blame to the teen-age victims, who also had been drinking before the crash.

"No one is going to try to scapegoat anyone," he said.

However, Hatchett said he would seek a court order giving him copies of all police reports, including blood alcohol tests done on the victims as well as police photographs.

Police allege Rogers' vehicle ran through a red light and slammed into the other vehicle early Oct. 20 in downtown Pontiac. They say he was drunk when his Jeep Cherokee struck the car in which Kelly Ess, 18, and Dale R. Ess, 17, of Versailles, Mo., and their cousin, Kenneth J. Willett, 19, of Drayton Plains, were riding.

The Ess brothers died at the scene, Willett, who was driving, died 10 hours later at Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital.

Prosecutors have said that the blood alcohol levels of both Rogers and the victims were above the legal limit of 0.10 percent. Rogers had a blood alcohol level of 0.15 percent after the crash, according to state police.

Oakland County Assistant Prosecutor Edward Cibor had argued for a higher bond due to Rogers' 1986 arrest on drunken driving charges in Seattle. Drunken driving charges in that case eventually were dropped and Rogers was found guilty of speeding.

After the hearing, Hatchett denied that Rogers was receiving special treatment because of the low bond figure.

Rogers suffered two broken vertebrae in his neck, a badly cut thumb and other injuries in the crash. He was released Wednesday from Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital, but is only able to move about with the neck brace.

Hatchett said his client would make a full recovery.

Bob Willett, father of victim Kenneth Willett, expressed anger that anyone would be concerned about Rogers' football future.

"Hell, my son's life is gone," the father said.

The elder Willett said he had hired an attorney to pursue legal action against Rogers.

"We can't bring back our dead children, obviously," he said. "Under our system of justice, the only thing we can hope to do is hit him monetarily."

Rogers' brother, Don, a former defensive back for the Cleveland Browns, died in 1986 of a cocaine overdose.

Houston Gains Spot In AP Top 20

By Michael A. Lutz
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — The Houston Cougars are known for their exciting run-and-shoot offense, but they moved into The Associated Press Top Twenty for the first time in eight years with defense.

Before a nationally televised audience, the Cougars shocked previously unbeaten Wyoming 34-10 and earned the No. 17 spot with a 7-2 record.

While the Cougars returned to the rankings for the first time since September 1980, No. 1 Notre Dame and No. 2 Southern California moved closer to a showdown, holding their positions.

The Cougar defense sacked Wyoming quarterbacks 16 times, six by tackle Glenn Montgomery and shut down the Cowboys' top-ranked offense.

"I've been around some great defensive teams before, but I've never seen a performance like that in my life," Houston Coach Jack Pardee said. "By this time of year, most teams are either getting better or worse."

The Cougars must be getting better. Wyoming led the nation with 536 total yards per game entering the contest but they got only 160 total yards Saturday night and they had a minus 37 yards rushing.

Houston quarterback Andre Ware was pleased to applaud the defensive effort.

"I think our defense right now is playing better than anyone in the country," Ware said. "The way we're playing right now, we feel capable of beating anybody. We can explode."

Wyoming, 10-1, the Western Athletic Conference champion, dropped from No. 10 to No. 16, but still will represent the WAC in the Holiday Bowl.

Houston thrust itself back into the national spotlight with the victory and moved a step closer to an invitation to the Aloha Bowl.

Several players left the Astrodome after the victory wearing Hawaiian leis.

Colorado, No. 19 last week, fell out of the rankings by losing to No. 7 Nebraska 7-0.

Auburn and Oklahoma swapped places, Auburn rising from ninth to eighth and Oklahoma slipping from eighth to ninth.

Notre Dame, idle last weekend, received 40 of 59 first-place votes and 1,156 of a possible 1,180 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

The 9-0 Irish, who play Penn State on Saturday, are No. 1 for the third consecutive week.

Southern Cal, a 50-0 winner over Arizona State, received 18 first-place votes and 1,131 points. The Trojans, also 9-0, are No. 2 for the third week in a row.

They face No. 6 UCLA on Saturday and Notre Dame on Nov. 26.

The other first-place ballot went to defending national champion Miami, which was idle. The Hurricanes, 7-1, received 1,060 points.

USC Remains Atop Reflector Grid Poll

Southern Cal Southern California retained its lead in The Daily Reflector Computer Rankings for the second week in a row.

The Trojans, now 9-0, have put together 2,552 points to lead second place UCLA by 104 points going into the 12th week of the 1988 season.

Points are awarded for each victory a team earns, with additional points awarded each time a team it has beaten wins a game. Points are awarded to the third level of competition, thus ranking teams on the basis of their success against the strength of its schedule.

UCLA, 9-1, has amassed 2,448 point to hold to second place again. Florida State, fourth a week ago, moved up to third with 2,250 points while Notre Dame, third last week, dropped to fourth with 2,186. The Fighting Irish, 9-0, did not play this past weekend.

Fifth place is still held by Wyoming, 10-1, despite falling to Houston this past weekend. The Cowboys have 2,100 points.

The second five consists of Auburn, Nebraska, Louisiana State, Arkansas and West Virginia.

The biggest move of the week in the Top 20 was by Michigan, which moved from 24th to 14th. The biggest drop was by Arizona State, which tumbled from 19th to 29th.

Boston's Boggs May Be Traded

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Red Sox and Cleveland Indians reportedly are discussing a trade that would involve Boston's five-time American League batting champion Wade Boggs, and Cleveland slugger Joe Carter.

The Boston Herald today said it was told by unidentified sources in Cleveland that Lou Gorman, general manager of the Red Sox, approached Hank Peters, his counterpart at the Indians, and asked if he would be interested in Boggs.

Gorman confirmed that Cleveland had inquired about obtaining Red Sox shortstop Spike Owen and that there had been talk of a larger trade.

"Yes, they have an interest in Spike," Gorman is quoted as telling the Herald last Sunday. "Have we talked about expanding it? Yes, we have."

Peters said he had talked to Boston but would not name names.

"I'm not commenting on it," he said Monday. "I won't comment on their players or our players. We've talked to a lot of clubs."

He also said, "Most of the talks we've had with clubs have been major in nature."

Other players who might be involved in a swap between the two clubs, the Herald said, include Cleveland third baseman Brook Jacoby, Boston infielder Todd Benzinger and pitcher Jeff Sellers, and second basemen Marty Barrett of the Red Sox and Julio Franco of the Indians.

Third baseman Boggs is 30 and has a .356 lifetime batting average. He hit .366 last season and had five home runs and 58 runs batted in.

Carter, 28, bats right and hit .271 last season with 27 homers and 98 RBI. He is listed as an infielder-outfielder, and the Herald said he would be asked to play first base in Boston if a trade is made.

N.C. State To Play Iowa In Peach Bowl

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina State has reached a gentleman's agreement to play Iowa in the Peach Bowl on New Year's Eve, according to two newspaper reports Monday.

The Charlotte Observer and The Raleigh Times, quoting unidentified sources, said that the agreement had been reached. The Observer said the settlement was reached Sunday night after the Gator Bowl made overtures to the Wolfpack.

The Gator Bowl, held in Jacksonville, Fla., and the only bowl being played on Sunday, Jan. 1, expressed interest in pitting Georgia, which is already in, against the winner of Saturday's game between N.C. State and Pittsburgh, the newspaper reported.

The Peach Bowl wanted to wait until this weekend's games and choose N.C. State, Duke or Virginia to play Iowa, but went ahead and extended an informal invitation to the Wolfpack when the Gator Bowl entered the picture, the Charlotte newspaper said.

Peach Bowl executive director Robert Dale Morgan wouldn't confirm to the Raleigh newspaper that N.C. State would play in the contest. He said the remaining invitation would be extended to N.C. State, Duke or Virginia after Saturday's regular-season finales.

"It'll be one of those three," Morgan told the Raleigh newspaper. "We decided to go one more week and give ourselves the chance of getting the best possible team."

Although bowl bids don't officially go out until next Saturday, many bowl selection committees met Sunday.

N.C. State has been a favorite of the Peach Bowl because of its fan support. The Wolfpack brought 23,000 fans to Atlanta two years ago for its Peach Bowl game with Virginia Tech.

Iowa of the Big Ten was a preseason Top 10 team but has struggled to a 5-3-3 season.

The Gator is a more lucrative bowl than the Peach, but sources told the Observer that N.C. State officials opted to go for the sure thing rather than taking the risk that a loss to Pittsburgh would leave the Wolfpack out of the bowl situation altogether.

The Gator will be televised on ESPN at 8 p.m. on New Year's Day and will pay each team an estimated $1 million. The Peach payoff is approximately $800,000 per team.

N.C. State will take a 6-3-1 record into Saturday's game against Pittsburgh.

Duke also is 6-3-1 after last Saturday's 43-43 tie with the Wolfpack, which might have cost the Blue Devils a bowl bid. The All-American Bowl was interested in the Blue Devils before Saturday, but bowl spokesman Bill Oakley said Sunday that the selection committee had decided to pit Florida against Illinois.

Oakley said the only stipulation with those schools is that Illinois (5-4-1) must beat Northwestern on Saturday. He said Florida (6-4) is in regardless of the outcome of its game with Florida State.

Oakley would not speculate on Duke's chances if Illinois loses, saying, "If that happens, we start over."

Duke athletic director Tom Butters said Sunday the Blue Devils could beat North Carolina this Saturday to finish with seven wins and still be overlooked by all bowls.

the beginning of the year, I would have thought 30 saves would be a great year."

Boggs isn't big on awards. For him, the enjoyment is on the field.

"That's the fun part of the game," he said, "the one-on-one confrontation between you and the pitcher. Get a hit, you win. Strike out, you lose."

There were three close races. Clark, who led the NL in runs batted in with 109 and was tied for third in homers with 29, got 58 votes, eight more than Montreal's Andres Galaraga. Clark displaced Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees, who had been the first baseman from 1984-87.

Sandberg beat Cleveland's Julio Franco 37-29 at second and Santiago beat California's Bob Boone 39-32 at catcher. Santiago hit .248 with 10 homers and 46 RBI.

The outfield voting was a runaway for the three American Leaguers. Canseco got 149 votes, Puckett 131 and Greenwell 119. Gibson was next with 31.

Trammell, a repeater from last year, was a runaway selection at shortstop, getting 118 votes to 22 for the Reds' Barry Larkin. Viola, the AL Cy Young Award winner, got 148 votes as left-handed pitcher to 15 for the Reds' Danny Jackson. Molitor won at designated hitter with 99 votes to 54 for Jack Clark, traded after the season from the New York Yankees to San Diego.

Duke Heads Preseason Top 20 Hoop List

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. DURHAM — Most college basketball coaches shun the notoriety associated with being ranked No. 1, but Duke's Mike Krzyzewski...

Duke, which last held the top ranking over the final three polls of the 1985-86 season — another in which it reached the Final Four — finished with 1,257 points from the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters, well ahead of the Hoyas' 1,107.

junior Robert Brickey goes back to the wing. Last season, Krzyzewski used Brickey for the opening jump ball and relied on his athletic ability to aid with rebounding, and he responded by averaging five per game.

"Laettner can probably help us the most because he seems to be a little bit more comfortable," Krzyzewski says. "He's picking up the system the quickest."

Doug Rader, newly named manager of the Angels, displays his uniform Monday in Anaheim

Radar Takes Tough Job Of Managing California

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Doug Rader realizes his new job isn't going to be an easy one, saying the position wouldn't have been open if it were.

"If it wasn't a difficult job, I wouldn't be here. It's not that I have all the answers, but if it was an easy job, the manager would already be in place. He wouldn't have been fired," Rader said Monday after he was named to succeed the fired Cookie Rojas as manager of the California Angels.

Rader, the former Gold Glove-winning third baseman for the Houston Astros who went on to manage the Texas Rangers, said he believes the Angels have the players to be a contender in the American League West.

"I think we have, not excellent talent, but good enough to get us headed in the right direction," he said, adding that he wants to get the Angels to play to their full potential.

"The Dodgers are a perfect example," Rader said of the team up the freeway that won the National League playoffs and the World Series this season by upsetting the New York Mets and Oakland Athletics.

"They (the Dodgers) didn't play over their heads," Rader said. "They played to their abilities and other clubs did not."

"The differences between winning and losing are minuscule. Having the attitude that you can win and compete can carry you to greater heights than people think you're capable of."

The 44-year-old Rader, who worked as a scout for the Angels last season, becomes the 12th manager in the club's 28-year history.

He said he has a one-year contract and that he will retain the Angel coaching staff.

He called the job a "dream opportunity," saying, "There are not many people who love baseball who wouldn't be ecstatic, not only to be a part of this organization, but to get the job I have been given."

"The selection process went on longer than we had hoped," General Manager Mike Port said. "There were a lot of good baseball people interested. We have the man we want."

Rader was hired as the Rangers' manager in the winter of 1982. He had a 77-85 record his first season, was 69-92 the second, then was fired in 1985 after the team started the season 9-23.

He has a major league managing record of 156-201.

Golden State Continues To Win And Improve This Year

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The Golden State Warriors already are far ahead of last season, thanks to Chris Mullin.

The Warriors, 20-62 last season and 4-37 on the road, improved their record to 4-2 and won their second road game Monday night, beating the New Jersey Nets 100-96 in the NBA's only game.

"I'm happy where we are right now," Coach Don Nelson said. "We kept our composure down the stretch, and that's what you have to do to win on the road."

Best at keeping his composure Monday night was Chris Mullin, who scored 33 points to improve his average to 28.7, tied for fourth in the NBA.

"Whoever gets open gets the ball and gets the points, but you want to be aggressive at certain times of the game," said Mullin, 13 for 24 from the field with five rebounds, five assists, three blocked shots and three steals.

Mullin scored 17 points in the first 16:20 of the game as Golden State built a 47-30 lead.

Later, after the Nets pulled ahead 92-90 with 5:33 left, Mullin hit four straight free throws and a basket before two free throws by Manute Bol put the Warriors ahead 98-92 with three minutes remaining.

"I made a conscious effort to drive the ball, and if they come to me, then I pass it off," Mullin said.

"They were real tough shots, but he either got it in the basket or he was fouled," Nelson said of Mullin's decisive spurt, which gave the Warriors six straight victories at the Meadowlands since their last loss in 1983.

"If I keep doing what I've been doing, hopefully I can have a great season," Mullin said. "We have very good coaching and we've worked very hard."

"Chris is a great player," Nets coach Willis Reed said. "He moves very well without the ball and he is a smart player with it."

After Bol's free throws made it 98-92, consecutive baskets by John Bagley got New Jersey within two, but two free throws by rookie Mitch Richmond concluded the scoring with 1:25 left.

Richmond finished with 21 points, while reserve Lester Conner led New Jersey with 15 points, nine of them in the fourth quarter. Buck Williams had 14 rebounds for the Nets but scored only five points on 1-for-6 shooting.

The Warriors, who did not win their fourth game last year until

Dec. 23, when they already had 18 losses, are a different team with Mullin in the lineup.

The Nets rallied from their 17-point deficit in the second quarter with Mullin resting on the bench.

They scored eight consecutive points immediately after he left the game for the first time.

"We had a bad time in the second quarter when he wasn't in there," Nelson said of Mullin. "A coach notices that. I'm not afraid to play him a lot of minutes. He's in great shape."

New Jersey outscored Golden State 15-3 in the final 6:42 of the first half, cutting the deficit to 50-45.

PCC Begins Season With Pair Of Losses

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt Community College's Paladins got their 1988-89 basketball season off to an early start this past weekend, dropping a couple of games in Georgia and Alabama. Tonight, the Paladins travel to Chowan for a conference game.

Coach Charles Coburn returns only two players from last year's team, so experience is a missing commodity for the most part.

The only two back from last year are Ricky Congleton, a 6-1 forward and Otis Barnes, a 5-11 point guard. The Paladins also have 11 other players, although four of them won't become eligible until Nov. 28.

Two others from last year's squad who are still in school will not play this season. Eric Dunn is ineligible and Paul Hollingsworth is concentrating on his academic work.

Currently joining Congleton and Barnes on the starting lineup is Don Hutson, a 6-3 forward/center, Ricky Farrow, a 6-1 forward and Anthony Johnson, a 6-6 center. "Anthony played forward in high school and is having to make an adjustment to the center position," Coburn said. "He needs to be more aggressive, but I think that will come with experience."

Others on the team are Andre West, a 6-1 forward; Jeff Eakes, a 6-3 forward; Chuck Sellars, a 6-4 forward/center; and Derrick Credle, a 5-10 point guard. "West, Eakes and Credle all saw little action in high school, but have come along well for us. Sellars is a transfer from Louisburg, but did not play ball there," Coburn said.

Expected to join the team after Nov. 28 are Ken Mullins, a 6-2 forward; Maurice Williams, a 6-1 forward; Michael Council, a 6-0 guard and Todd Polythress, a 6-0 guard.

"We don't have a lot of experience, but I'm more impressed with this group than any other I've had because of the hard work they're doing. Once we get some experience, about five or six games down the road, we should round into a pretty good ball club," Coburn said.

"We're going to have to rely on Congleton to carry us and be the team leader. Farrow, who is coming off an ankle injury, should take part of the load once he gets back to 100 percent."

The Paladins will be competing for the second year in the National Junior College Association's Region X, Division 2. Last year, the team won the division title. Richard Bland of Petersburg, Va., and Central Piedmont also compete in the Division.

"Bland has four starters back and is favored this year. But I think that we have a chance again, too," Coburn said.

By Scott Shane
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

MOSCOW — An official U.S. delegation arrived here Monday armed with a list of 200 political prisoners for what will be the first discussions of human rights with a Soviet parliamentary group.

The delegation, led by Rep. Steny Hoyer, D-Md., met Monday night at the U.S. Embassy with nearly 100 dissidents, refuseniks and others with information on Soviet human rights violations.

One participant, Yuri B. Chernyak, a Moscow physicist who has been refused permission to emigrate for 12 years, said the visit of the U.S. Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe is an important precedent.

"It's a tremendous breakthrough," said Chernyak, 48. "It legitimizes the right of the U.S. to consider human rights problems in the Soviet Union."

Although individual U.S. officials, including President Reagan, have often met with the Soviets to discuss human rights, the commission's visit is intended to be the first of regular, mutual exchanges of officials for such talks.

The commission members in Moscow include two senators, Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., and Charles E. Grassley, R-Iowa, nine congressmen, and three executive-branch officials, including Richard Schifter, assistant Secretary of State for human rights. They are accompanied by more than 30 staff members.

They will meet with a delegation from the Supreme Soviet, the Soviet parliament, that includes Vadim Zagladin and Georgy Shakhnavarov, top advisers to Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev; Minister of Justice Boris Kravtsov; Soviet Procurator General Alexander Sukharev; and Ivan Laptev, editor of the newspaper Izvestia.

On the agenda for the commission's week in Moscow are freedom of expression and religion, legal guarantees of human rights and emigration. Also planned is a roundtable discussion of restrictions on the work of foreign correspondents in both countries.

Gorbachev's reform program has resulted in the release of several hundred political prisoners, the reduction of restrictions on religious worship and training and a sharp increase in the number of Soviet Jews, Armenians and ethnic Germans permitted to emigrate.

Nonetheless, Western experts believe that there are at least 200 people held in prisons, labor camps and psychiatric hospitals or in internal exile as a result of their political or religious beliefs. In addition, at least several hundred Soviet citizens who have applied to emigrate have been refused permission, usually on the grounds that they know military secrets.

Dissidents are still regularly arrested and fined or jailed for up to several weeks for participating in unsanctioned demonstrations, particularly those calling for a multiparty system. Last month a massive rally in the Belorussian capital of Minsk, called in remembrance of the victims of Stalin's terror, was broken up by police using tear gas, dogs and fire hoses.

The U.S. and Soviet delegations are likely to clash over the number of political prisoners in the Soviet Union. Kravtsov recently said there were 11 people now being held under articles in the legal code banning anti-Soviet propaganda. The U.S. list contains the names of dozens of others who are believed to have been charged with non-political crimes as a result of political activity or who were diagnosed as mentally ill after they made political statements.

The Soviets, whose official press regularly reports that there are 11,000 political prisoners and 3 million homeless people in the U.S., are expected to raise their own questions about alleged U.S. rights violations.

The idea of a regular exchange of parliamentary delegations to discuss human rights was first proposed by Zagladin during a live televised discussion between U.S. and Soviet representatives last year. Gorbachev took up the idea with President Reagan at the summit in Washington in December, and the U.S. accepted the proposal early this year.

U.S. analysts believe the Soviets hope to remove human rights questions from the agenda of arms control meetings, but the U.S. government responded positively to the exchange because it institutionalizes American criticism of Soviet rights violations.

Thatcher To Say Farewell To Reagan, Hello To Bush

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher flies to Washington today to bid goodbye to President Reagan and welcome President-elect George Bush to the ranks of Western leaders.

The British leader, who has marched in ideological step with Reagan since he took office eight years ago, thanked him in a speech Monday for what she said has been his main contribution to the West.

"Let us above all thank President Reagan for ending the West's retreat from world responsibility, for restoring the pride and leadership of the U.S., and for giving the West back its confidence — confidence not only in the success of free enterprise but also in the values which guide our societies." Speaking at the annual Lord Mayor's banquet in the City, London's financial area, she added: "He has left America stronger, prouder, greater than ever before and we thank him for it."

In the speech, Mrs. Thatcher also announced that Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev would visit Britain Dec. 12-14. Around Dec. 7, Gorbachev is to visit the United Nations as well as meet with Reagan for a fifth time and possibly see Bush, U.S. officials say.

Mrs. Thatcher also welcomed Bush as "a worthy successor" to Reagan. "We know him as a man of unrivaled experience and we respect him because he stands for all that is best in America," she said.

Reagan said Monday that Mrs. Thatcher was the best statesman he had met. Asked by a group of schoolchildren at the White House if he thought the United States would ever have a woman president, he said: "I am certainly not against (a female president)..."

"As a matter of fact, the statesman in the world that I have met, that I respect the most, is the prime minister of England, Margaret Thatcher, and she has done a remarkable job for England."

Reagan came to office 1½ years after Mrs. Thatcher, and together they have reinvigorated the log-standing special relationship between the two countries.

But while Reagan must step down, Mrs. Thatcher, 63, who is now the West's longest serving leader, faces no such constraints.

Her present tenure lasts another 3½ years, and she has said she will seek a fourth term in the 1990s. If the Conservative Party leader wins that means she will be working with Bush right up to 1992.

Reagan and Mrs. Thatcher have shared a deep anti-Communist ideology, distaste for welfarism, faith in free markets and belief in negotiating from strength.

They have helped each other at critical moments, sometimes at great political risk — Reagan by approving arms supplies and intelligence to Britain in the 1982 Falklands War against Argentina, and Mrs. Thatcher by letting Reagan use U.S. bombers based in Britain to bomb Libya in 1986.

Mrs. Thatcher was the first major Western leader to visit Gorbachev after he came to power in 1985. And on his way to Washington to sign the arms-reduction treaty in 1987, Gorbachev stopped in Britain for talks with the prime minister.

Mrs. Thatcher arrives in Washington tonight, and will have talks with Reagan on Wednesday, followed by a state dinner. On Thursday, she will have talks with Bush, returning home early Friday.

Pakistan Believed To Possess Nuclear Weapons Capability

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Pakistan appears to have finally developed atomic weapons, increasing the threat of a nuclear war with India and representing a major setback to efforts to stem the spread of atomic weapons around the globe, says a study published today.

"After a decade of slow advances, Pakistan appears to have" joined a group of three other nations that have nuclear weapons but don't admit it, according to the review by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

The other countries in that category are Israel, India and South Africa, said the report, the fourth such survey published by the non-profit group that specializes in national security studies.

Five nations have said they possess nuclear weapons: the United States, the Soviet Union, China, Great Britain and France. A sixth, India, exploded a single atomic device in 1974 but said it was a non-military explosion.

Efforts to halt the spread of nuclear weapons generally have focused on the Middle East and South Asia, the report noted. Pakistan and India have been the chief source of concern, since the two countries have fought three wars in the 41 years since they were created by the separation of colonial India from Britain.

The report, titled "The Undeclared Bombs," was written by Leonard S. Spector, author of the three previous reports. Spector formerly worked on non-proliferation issues at the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the Senate Energy and Natural Resources non-proliferation subcommittee.

In the past two years, Spector said, "convincing evidence emerged that Pakistan had crossed the nuclear weapons threshold and had acquired the essentials for its first nuclear weapons."

That evidence includes production of highly enriched uranium, a key component of atomic weapons; and European reports of a previously clandestine effort by Pakistan officials to smuggle sophisticated nuclear components out of West Germany.

The Pakistani program is a dilemma for the United States, Spector said in an interview, because Pakistan is a prime recipient of U.S. aid at the same time U.S. officials are pushing Pakistan not to develop atomic weapons.

Mansfield Will Retire Next Month After 11 Years As Envoy To Japan

By Margaret Shapiro
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

TOKYO — Mike Mansfield, the former U.S. Senate majority leader who became an institutional figure here in 11 years as ambassador, Monday announced that he will retire next month.

Mansfield, 85, who has served longer than any previous U.S. ambassador here, said that with the presidential election now over and many thorny issues between the U.S. and Japan at least temporarily resolved, he and his wife felt it was time to retire and move back to the United States.

With his academic background in Asian matters, political connections in Washington and willingness to fight protectionism and anti-Japan sentiment in the U.S., Mansfield has been well-respected and liked here, though occasionally criticized at home for not being tough enough on Japan.

Some Japanese said they perceive a current mood of antagonism toward Japan in the United States, and expressed worry that this might result in a less-understanding U.S. appointee being sent here.

Mansfield's tenure in Tokyo coincided with this nation's remarkable rise to prominence as a world economic power.

In 1977, arriving here as an appointee of Jimmy Carter shortly after retiring as Senate Democratic Majority Leader, Mansfield found himself trying to bolster Japanese confidence and counteract a then prevailing view of the United States as a superior ally and trading partner.

In recent years, though, he found himself having to rebut pessimists here who argued that the United States is in decline. He often chided U.S. businesses for not being more competitive or aggressive.

In announcing his retirement Monday, Mansfield noted one significant change he has witnessed in his years in Japan. "Japan has come a long way in the last decade," he said. "They have achieved maturity. They no longer stand in the corner and bow their heads and remain silent."

The U.S.-Japan relationship, Mansfield added, "has evolved from the status of a nephew and an uncle to one of a brother and a brother."

Mansfield's retirement announcement was among the top stories on the national news Monday night, though it had been somewhat expected ever since last winter when he had gone back to the United States for emergency triple heart bypass surgery.

Not since President Kennedy sent Harvard Prof. Edwin O. Reischauer to Tokyo had an American ambassador been so well appreciated by the Japanese while maintaining his essential American-ness.

(Mansfield's 11-year stint here is nearly two years more than the longest previous service by a U.S. ambassador to Tokyo. Joseph C. Grew served as the American envoy here from June 1932 until December 1941, when the U.S. declared war on Japan in the wake of the attack on Pearl Harbor, according to the State Department's history office.)

(Grew was interned by the Japanese before being allowed to return to the U.S. in June 1942. The longest service in one foreign post by any U.S. envoy was that of George P. Marsh who was appointed ambassador to Italy by President Lincoln in March 1861 and served there until his death in July 1882.)

Mansfield's habit of making and serving coffee to his guests never failed to impress the decorum-conscious Japanese, and he decorated his office walls with mementos of the American West as well as photographs of members of Congress.

In his fairwell news conference, in which he quoted both the Bible and Confucius, Mansfield praised Japan throughout, saying it has solved many trade problems, begun to shoulder its international responsibilities as a financial superpower and proved itself "a staunch and reliable ally and friend to the United States."

Mansfield criticized those who single out Japan for failing to do enough on defense, saying that Japan now has a bigger military budget than any of the NATO allies. "We do not want Japan to become a regional military power," he said. "Japan's neighbors do not want it and neither does Japan."

He also rejected criticism of Japanese investment in the United States, since Japan ranks well behind Britain and the Netherlands in total investment. "I think Japanese investment is good for our country as U.S. investment is good for Japan. Everyone benefits," he said.

Mansfield, who first came to Japan as a 19-year-old Marine at the end of World War I and remained interested in Asia from then on, said he is convinced that the coming years will see the blossoming of a "Pacific Century," led by the partnership between the United States and Japan.

Meanwhile, he said, he and his wife will soon return to Washington and then retire in Florida "with our heads high and our arms swinging."

Indian Court Calls For Anderson Arrest

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BHOPAL, India — Arrest warrants were issued today for former Union Carbide chairman Warren Anderson and two other officials of the U.S. multinational in connection with the 1984 Bhopal gas disaster.

On Dec. 3, 1984, more than 3,100 people were killed and at least 20,000 injured when toxic gas leaked out of a tank at a pesticide plant operated by Union Carbide's Indian subsidiary. Chief judicial magistrate R.C.

Mishra issued the arrest warrants today after Anderson and the two Carbide officials failed to honor summonses to appear in the Bhopal magistrate's court to answer murder charges.

The summonses for Anderson and the two others were issued last December when the murder charges were filed in conjunction with the Indian government's still unresolved $3 billion damage suit against Union Carbide.

The Indian government has accused Union Carbide of negligence for the gas leak.

'Growing Pains' Actress Writes Scripts For Show

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The producers of ABC's "Growing Pains" could reasonably have expected Joanna Kerns to pitch stories featuring her own character when she asked to write an episode.

Kerns stars as Maggie Seaver, a television anchorwoman who's married to psychiatrist Jason Seaver, played by Alan Thicke.

"I think they expected Maggie stories," she said. "We pitched them six stories, none of them about Maggie."

This Wednesday's episode, co-written by Kerns and her writing partner Becky Ayers, revolves around Jason's mother, played by Jane Powell, and the crisis that arises when she announces she's remarrying.

"We got the idea from a few different things," said Kerns. "I'm single and dating, and it's difficult to date with a child who has set ideas about who you should be with. We applied that to Jason, a psychiatrist, who should know better. When his mother says she's getting married, how does he react? Like a grownup, or a 5-year-old?"

"It challenges the expectations that children have of their parents. Children tend to believe parents are around just to serve them. It's about letting go. Even if you're 40 years old, you have to let go."

Jason's mother has been referred to in the show, but she has never appeared before. "In one episode she stops by to pick up the kids," said Kerns. "You hear her honking the horn, then screeching tires as she pulls away. That gave us the idea she was a little more daring than Jason."

Kerns and Ayers met about eight years ago when their children were in nursery school together. Their first writing project was an unproduced movie script called "Let It Rain," which they said was similar to "Mr. Mom," the hit movie that came two years later.

They also collaborated on another script, "American Pie," which has been optioned as a television movie.

Ayers, who is married to actor Robert Rockwell, has written another script for "Growing Pains" on her own. This one is about Maggie. "I wanted to write about the stress of being a working mother," said Ayers. She had once sold a script to "Flo," but the series was canceled before it could be produced.

Working alone, Kerns has written a movie script called "Freestyle" that tells of two teen-age sisters competing to go to the 1980 Summer Olympics in Moscow — which the United States ultimately boycotted because of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. That script is also under option by a studio.

"The younger sister thinks that if she can win a spot on the team she'll be loved by her father," said Kerns. "The sisters wind up competing against each other."

The story is partly autobiographical. Kerns' older sister is Donna de Varona, who won two Olympic swimming gold medals in 1964. Kerns was a gymnast who participated in the 1968 Olympic trials, but placed 14th out of the 28 vying for the team.

"It was a sport I was too tall for," said the actress, who at 5-foot-8½ was a foot taller than most of her competitors. "I really wrote the story because it took me years to give myself any validation as an athlete. My expectations for myself were so high. When I didn't make the team I thought I had failed. My friends say I should call the script 'I Never Swam for My Father.'"

Despite being a star of "Growing Pains," Kerns found it tough breaking in as a writer.

Alumnus Donates CDs, Cassettes To ECU's Music Listening Center

ECU NEWS BUREAU

Tom Mallison of Greenville, an East Carolina University alumnus and host of a weekly jazz program on WTEB Radio in New Bern, has donated hundreds of cassettes and CDs from his personal collection to ECU's Music Listening Center.

"Students generally don't have as much income as other people," Mallison said. "For those who would like to know a little more about jazz, this is a way for them to listen and grow and appreciate it without making a financial investment."

The donation includes music by such artists as Wynton and Branford Marsalis, Diane Shuur, Eddie Daniels, Kevin Eubanks and David Benoit.

"A lot of them can be classified as New Age, which is the more mellow electronic-type music that is very popular with the students," Mallison said. "I'm also giving some cassettes by Japanese artists and a few live concert performances."

Although space is at a premium in Mallison's home because of his massive collection of albums, cassettes and compact discs, the donation consists only of duplicates. The Greenville native gets several packages weekly from recording companies eager for him to play their latest releases on the air. Extras are usually given to listeners who call in during his show.

"If I just wanted to get rid of some of these records, I could do many more lucrative things with them," Mallison said. "Many people sell duplicates to a second-hand record shop in Raleigh for $1 which re-sells them for $4."

"People who are willing to buy complete collections advertise in magazines all the time," he said. "It's a big business, just like baseball cards and comic books."

According to Rudy Alexander, director of University Unions at ECU, Mallison's gift is as unique as it is welcome.

"We have had some albums given to us by the campus radio station in the past, but nothing to compare with this," he said. "A portion of the Mendenhall Student Center programming budget is allocated for the purchase of tapes and to keep up the equipment, but that portion is very small, so gifts such as this one mean a lot."

The listening center has been in existence since 1973 when Mendenhall Student Center first opened its doors. Three years ago improvements were made with a gift from the senior class and the Department of University Unions.

"Persons who are interested in enjoying music check out headsets from the control center," Alexander said. "They can either request the type of music they're interested in, listen to a channel that is already in use, or bring their own music to play. We provide a good service, and it's getting good usage."

All types of music are made available to students at the listening center, including country, classical and rock.

"This gift will certainly enhance the capabilities of the center to better serve the students, particularly those who are jazz enthusiasts," Alexander said. "Up until now jazz was the weakest area. With this gift, our jazz collection will probably become our strongest musical offering."

Mallison views the gift as a test — if the recordings prove popular, he says he'll consider adding to the collection.

"My prime motivation has always been to advance the art form of jazz," he said. "If the cassettes aren't being used, I'd rather give them out to callers who like that kind of music."

Mallison has been satisfying jazz junkies with a healthy fix of the latest tidbits, releases and classics since 1974, when he first offered his assistance to the staff at WRQR in Farmville.

His following remained faithful during a move several years later to WITN Radio in Washington, N.C. Three years ago he went with WTEB, whose 100,000 watts allows listeners from Apex to Atlantic Beach to tune in.

Jazz is only a hobby for Mallison, who works full time at the Du Pont plant in Kinston as a staff assistant in administrative and external affairs.

"I represent Du Pont to the outside world by doing presentations, handling the media, and dealing with contributions," he said.

'War' Debut Falls Short Of First Run

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — NBC and CBS declared a tongue-in-cheek promo "war" on ABC's mammoth World War II miniseries, "War and Remembrance," but were nevertheless relieved and surprised when its first night didn't do as well as expected.

ABC expressed disappointment in the preliminary ratings for Sunday's opening episode, even though the first installment of the 18-hour, seven-part first half of the $110 million miniseries won the night. It only got a 34 share — or percentage of the viewing audience — compared to the 53 share for "The Winds of War" in 1983. "War and Remembrance," based on Herman Wouk's novel, is a sequel to "The Winds of War."

"We're a little surprised at the first night's viewing levels, but it's quality viewing at its finest, and we're very proud of it," ABC spokeswoman Janice Gretemeyer said Monday.

ABC estimated 50 million people watched the opening installment. Another 14 hours or so of "War and Remembrance" will run on ABC sometime next year. The length of the miniseries was a target of NBC's and CBS' counter-advertising.

An NBC promo asked viewers to weigh "a World War II movie that doesn't end" against NBC's lighter fare, including a TV movie starring Vanna White.

"The tricky thing is you don't want to try your airwaves to hype something on another network in order to say there's an alternative. We have a couple of spots that we've held back on," said NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff.

One of those he described as similar to the old Alka-Seltzer commercials in which gorged Americans marveled, "I can't believe I ate the whole thing."

"Don't be a prisoner of war in your own living room," said a CBS ad that promoted CBS stars.

"I think there are things you can get away with, with humor," said CBS spokesman George Schweitzer. "We were not disparaging the competition, and we will never belittle or disparage the competition. But tongue-in-cheek humor is acceptable when it works."

Opening lead: Queen of ♣ Avoidance play at the table is something like guarding the foul lines in the late innings of a baseball game. In the latter case, you are prepared to give up a single to protect against the possibility of an extra base hit. In the former, you are willing to surrender a trick to a particular player to keep his partner off lead.

In this sequence, South's two-heart rebid promises a six-card suit. North, therefore, judged his hand was quite suitable for game in hearts despite the fact that his hand was perfectly balanced.

West led the top of his club sequence, won by dummy's ace as declarer discarded a diamond. The reckless player cashes the ace-king of trumps; if they divide evenly, he is assured of an overtrick and can make a second overtrick if the ace of diamonds is with East.

The careful player realizes that he will probably have to lose a trump trick. He also counts that, even so, he has 10 tricks—five hearts, four spades and a club. The only danger to the hand is that East has the long trumps and, when he gains the lead, he can push a diamond through the king.

Once South has spotted the problem, the solution is simple enough. As long as East doesn't have all three missing honors, the contract is secure. At trick two declarer leads a low heart and, if East follows with the eight, he simply covers with the nine. If the cards are divided as above, West will win the trump trick, but he can do declarer no harm. Declarer wins any return, draws trumps and cashes his winners to fulfill his contract.

Insurers Fire New Shot In California Battle

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — State Farm Insurance, the biggest seller of auto policies in California, announced Monday an action that would slap 20 percent higher rates on anyone in the state seeking new auto coverage from the company, an amount that matches the deductions ordered by a winning ballot proposition that is currently tied up in lawsuits.

The step drew immediate criticism from consumer groups, and the state insurance commissioner said she would challenge it.

In the latest maneuver to counter Proposition 103, State Farm said its principal auto insurance division — State Farm Mutual — will quit writing new auto policies in California. But more expensive coverage will be available to anyone who would have qualified at the lower rates.

The Bloomington, Ill.-based insurance giant said it would do this by shifting its auto policy underwriting to its State Farm Fire & Casualty affiliate, in itself a major California auto insurer that normally charges sharply higher rates.

Present policy holders will not be affected, State Farm said. However, it could affect thousands seeking new policies. State Farm Mutual sells nearly 10,000 new policies a week; it has written about 352,000 new policies in the state in the first nine months of the year and holds 15 percent of the state market.

Proposition 103, which orders the industry to roll back rates to levels 20 percent below those of November 1987, was approved by California voters Nov. 8 but its implementation has been put on hold by the state Supreme Court in response to legal challenges filed by insurers.

State officials, calling State Farm's action discriminatory against new policy holders, said they would move to block it.

Insurance Commissioner Roxani Gillespie said she will notify State Farm of her objections by letter and, if necessary, order them to halt the practice.

"That's pretty reprehensible," said Gillespie. "Frankly, I'm very surprised at a company this size doing something like this. They're the only ones."

She said the move would violate current law because new customers would be subject to substantially higher rates than existing ones, even if the qualifications are identical. The grounds for opposition have "nothing whatsoever" to do with the provisions of Proposition 103 and are based on prior law, Gillespie said.

Company officials had no immediate comment on Gillespie's position. But C.A. "Pete" Ingham, vice president and general counsel of State Farm said: "I don't see any legal problems with it." The new arrangement takes effect immediately.

One leading industry critic called State Farm's action a "subterfuge."

"It's a rate increase," said J. Robert Hunter, president of the National Insurance Consumer Organization in Alexandria, Va. If a 20 percent rollback ultimately takes effect, Hunter noted, the new customers in State Farm Fire & Casualty will end up paying about the same as if they had bought policies from State Farm Mutual before Proposition 103, which passed on the Nov. 8 ballot. "When the 20 percent rollback takes effect, they'll be back where they started. It's illegal."

State Farm objected to the characterization of its move as a rate increase because it does not apply to any of its current 3 million auto policies in California. Ingham also said State Farm probably would have acted even without passage of Proposition 103.

'Skinheads' Are Blamed In Beatings

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PORTLAND, Ore. — Community leaders and civil rights activists expressed outrage at the beating death of a black man by white youths believed to be "skinheads," and one group called on citizens to take direct action.

Sunday's slaying was the nation's third linked to the bands of young toughs who promote white supremacy. Skinheads, whose name is derived from their shaved heads, have been linked to numerous criminal acts against blacks, Asians, Jews and homosexuals nationwide.

Two other black men were injured in the attack by three young men, who had shaved heads and wore military jackets. The three victims were Ethiopian immigrants.

Mayor Bud Clark said in a statement Monday he was "saddened and disturbed" by the beatings, and urged citizens and public officials to find a constructive solution to racial violence.

"A cowardly act against any one of our citizens is a cowardly act against every one of our citizens," City Commissioner Bob Koch said at a news conference. "But let us not react out of hatred. Let us react with love and understanding."

The militant Jewish Defense Organization mailed letters to Portland synagogues asking them to arm their congregations.

"Violence will be met with violence," said Mordechai Levy, head of the 3,000-member group based in New York.

He said a $10,000 reward was being offered for information about the beatings, or to anyone who physically restrains a neo-Nazi from doing violence against a minority group.

More Buried Bodies Found

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Police were expanding a search for bodies beyond the yard of a rooming house after digging up the sixth and seventh elderly victims from shallow graves there.

A warrant charging the boarding home's missing landlady with one count of murder was issued late Monday, said police Capt. Sam Somers.

Investigators using shovels, steel probes and a tractor found the two bodies wrapped in cloth or clothes in the yard of the two-story Victorian house, said police Sgt. Bob Burns.

The bodies, one unearthed in the front yard under a flower bed and the other in the side yard under a shed, are unidentified, like the five others.

"We'll continue to dig, and we won't stop digging until we've dug up every square inch of this yard," Burns said.

The landlady, Dorothea Montalvo Puente, 59, disappeared after police interviewed her Friday, the day they discovered the first body. Puente, who according to a social worker once said she took in elderly boarders as her way to repay society, was released for lack of evidence.

"Our first priority is to get her into custody," Burns said.

The Sacramento Bee reported today that police in Las Vegas had been told Puente may be there.
