Twisters Slash Destructive Trail Across 4 Northeastern Counties

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CRESWELL, N.C. — Tornadoes and waterspouts toppled mobile homes and barns, damaged houses and left more than 1,000 people without electricity in Currituck, Dare, Tyrrell and Washington counties this morning, authorities said.

No injuries were reported. An apparent tornado ripped the roofs off two houses, damaged three mobile homes and tossed trees onto a highway in Creswell, a sheriff's deputy said.

"We've got three trailers damaged and 75 to 80 trees down across U.S. 64," said Linda Spruill, a deputy at the Washington County Sheriff's Department in Plymouth.

Randy Spear of Creswell said he heard loud winds about 9:30 this morning, then saw branches and small trees begin to fly through the air and spotted the tornado.

"I grabbed my dog and ran toward the center bathroom in the house, and as I left the den, the back window just caved in," Spear said.

He said he and his yellow

Labrador retriever, Fanci, were unharmed.

Spear said the twister blew out the windows in the back of his home and tossed four trees onto his roof.

Two barns were destroyed on a farm near Creswell, but two mobile homes on the same property were not damaged, emergency management officials said.

"I've got six deputies down there checking the area, and also firemen," Ms. Spruill said. "We've also got one wreck and have a highway patrol trooper at the scene of that. I don't know the extent of that yet."

A number of small tornadoes and waterspouts were reported over the northern beaches of the Outer Banks and the Currituck Sound, the National Weather Service said.

A tornado blew over a mobile home and the roofs off some buildings in Point Harbor, but no injuries were reported, the weather service said. Currituck County emergency management officials are in-

Swiss Red Cross Worker Kidnapped

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SIDON, Lebanon — Gunmen today kidnapped the Swiss head of the International Committee of the Red Cross's mission in the southern port of Sidon, authorities said.

Lebanese police said Peter Winkler, 30, was grabbed by three gunmen from his official car on Sidon's Hisbeh Square.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility.

A police spokesman said there were reports Winkler was taken to the Palestinian refugee camp of Ein el-Hilweh on Sidon's southern outskirts, "but we haven't been able to verify this."

The kidnapers, driving a

BMW, intercepted Winkler's white Peugeot, grabbed him, pushed him into their car and sped away, the police spokesman said on condition of anonymity.

At Red Cross headquarters in Geneva, officials confirmed the abduction and said Winkler's Lebanese driver was released shortly afterward.

Winkler took up his duties in Sidon, 25 miles south of Beirut, about a month ago, said the police spokesman.

He said an emergency meeting was under way between Palestinian guerrilla leaders and the command of the Popular Nasserite Organization militia in Sidon to try to determine Winkler's whereabouts.

The organization is a leftist Sunni Moslem militia that has been governing Sidon since the 1975 outbreak of Lebanon's civil war.

In Geneva, spokesman Joerg Bischof said Red Cross delegates have been abducted before in the region but all were released a few hours later. "Let's hope this will be again the case this time," he said.

Issam Salem, a spokesman for PLO chief Yasser Arafat, said the action was aimed against the recent declaration of the state of Palestine and pledged to find the kidnapers.

"They (kidnappers) are not go-

President Reagan, Margaret Thatcher dance at White House

White House Fling Is Reagans' Last

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — For the final state dinner of their eight-year White House reign, President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, were hosts of a nostalgic night of song and dance to honor their conservative friend, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Breaking protocol, the Thatchers dallied Wednesday after the evening's entertainment and took a turn with the Reagans about the marbled Grand Foyer to the tune of "Shall We Dance?"

Usually, the honored guests depart posthaste, but the Thatchers and the Reagans even switched partners as they smiled for the cameras.

"I wanted this to be special — it's very sentimental," said Mrs. Reagan, who said she got "a little teary" during the effusive round of toasts that the president and prime minister offered each other earlier in the evening.

The president, asked about his "last dance" with his first lady, quipped, "You don't mean that Nancy and I are breaking up, do you?"

With their 55th state dinner, the Reagans closed the book on one of their favorite White House events. Their elaborate celebrations recalled a tradition of glitz and glamour dating to the first White House social event, when John Adams greeted New Year's Day revelers in 1801.

Victorious Bhutto Now Set To Form New Government

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — Populist leader Benazir Bhutto defeated her right-wing opponents in Pakistan's first free national elections in 11 years and today called on the president to let her form the new government.

In Wednesday's balloting, the voters gave "a mandate for democracy, dignity... justice and technology," the 35-year-old politician told reporters at her family villa in southern Sind province.

The U.S.-educated Ms. Bhutto would be the first woman to lead a Moslem nation if she is chosen to form the government. Pakistan was run by military strongman Gen. Mohammad Zia ul-Haq until his death Aug. 17 in a plane crash.

Ms. Bhutto's Pakistan People's Party captured 92 seats in the National Assembly with all but three of 205 contested seats decided. The results assured her of a plurality in the 237-member chamber, but not a majority.

Her main rival, the right-wing Islamic Democratic Alliance, won 53 seats and the remaining 57 went to independents and minor parties. Two of the Alliance's three major figures, including former Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo, were defeated by People's Party candidates.

About 30 political parties fielded candidates, but the campaign boiled down to a race between the People's Party and the nine-party Alliance, which includes loyalists of Zia.

Ms. Bhutto said President Ghulam Ishaq Khan

"should now call upon the PPP to form the government," which would allow her to recapture the prime ministership her father lost in a 1977 coup.

She said the People's Party had already started talking with other left-leaning parties, and predicted likely difficulty in forming a governing coalition.

The country's Constitution requires Ishaq Khan to choose a prime minister who will be "most likely to command the confidence of the majority of the National Assembly," but he is under no deadline to act.

Asked Wednesday whether he would be reluctant to designate a woman as head of government of this male-dominated society, Ishaq Khan replied: "I think a woman prime minister might be a good change."

The army pledged had not interfere in Wednesday's balloting and thousands of soldiers and police were deployed for the election, which was largely peaceful.

Junejo, once the undisputed leader of the Alliance-dominating Pakistan Muslim League, was defeated in his hometown of Sindhri by a People's Party candidate.

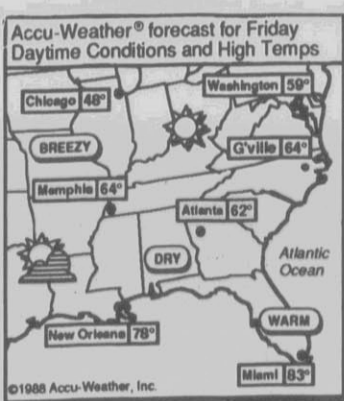

The chairman of the Alliance and leader of the center-right National People's Party, Ghulam Mustafa Jatoi, lost to People's Party candidates in both districts he contested.

The Alliance's leading political strongman, Punjab chief minister Nawaz Sharif, was assured a seat from Lahore.

Ms. Bhutto, in a show of her personal popularity, won all three seats she was contesting.

Candidates could contest more than one seat to improve their chance of election, but must forfeit all but one. The vacant seats are contested later.

County Board Looks At Pitt Water Study

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County commissioners took a look at the first stages of a countywide water and sewer study Wednesday and looked at preliminary figures for retiring a proposed $25.7 million bond issue requested by the Board of Education earlier in the week.

In presenting preliminary work on the water and sewer study, Gil Alligood, a vice president of Rivers & Associates, said, "We've done a good bit of preliminary work (and wanted to) share that with you (to) be sure we're addressing needs you have concerns about."

Using maps to illustrate, Alligood said, "We've talked with each municipality and private water corporation" to find out which areas now have water and sewer service, and what areas are projected to be served by them in the future.

Alligood said the firm has "done head counts to project population densities" for various roads throughout the county in order to project the feasibility of installing water and sewer service.

According to Alligood, "at today's rate" the cost of installing water lines in areas with a density of 10 houses per mile is $4,750 per house.

Haigwood Baffled By Early Release

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A Greenville drug kingpin has been released from prison after serving just one-tenth of his 35-year sentence, and the prosecutor who helped put him behind bars is baffled by the decision of the state Parole Commission.

"I don't understand why they would do this, and I don't expect the public to understand," Pitt County District Attorney Tom Haigwood said after learning this week that Dalton Woodrow Worthington, 73, was paroled last month.

After a two-week trial in Greenville in January 1985, a Pitt County jury convicted Worthington of three counts of cocaine trafficking; two of the charges involved more than a pound of cocaine. Judge Henry W. Hight Jr. of Henderson sentenced him to 63 years in prison and fined him $450,000 dollars.

Lawsuit Dismissed

A Pitt County Superior Court judge has dismissed a lawsuit filed against the city in regards to the dismissal of a city employee who refused to take a polygraph test upon request.

City Attorney Mac McCarley on Wednesday filed an order to dismiss the suit after Judge David Reid ruled the plaintiff, William E. Barnhill, failed to state a claim upon which relief could be granted.

McCarley said the suit was filed in April after the city dismissed Barnhill, a former police detective, in April 1986 for refusing to take a polygraph test as part of an internal affairs investigation.

"There is decided case law in this state that if you properly warn a public employee that he may be required to take a polygraph test and the questions asked will relate narrowly to the performance of his duties, and that the answers he gives will not be used against him in a criminal charge, and warn him of the consequences for refusing, that you may terminate that employee if he refuses," McCarley said.

"We followed that case law, believing our position was correct.

"The court is holding that the facts alleged by the plaintiff don't violate the law," he said.

Report Given On Water Study

And he said the Farmers Home Administration considers 20 houses per mile as the minimum number needed to make a rural water system feasible.

Alligood emphasized that the $4,750 per house "does not include any new (water) plants or major transmission lines."

As for sewer service, Alligood said sewer lines "are considerably more expensive to build." He estimated that the per-house cost for installing sewer lines would be $5,200 per house on roads with 30 houses per mile, $3,900 per house on roads with 40 houses per mile, and $3,000 per house on roads with 50 houses per mile.

"There are lots of houses out there" in the county, Alligood said, "but they are not dense enough to support a sewer system."

Alligood said the cost of installing a mile of 6- or 8-inch water line is from $47,000 to $50,000, while the cost of a mile of sewer line is about $150,000.

Malcolm Green, general manager of the Greenville Utilities Commission, who was asked to attend the meeting, told the board that "the things that we look at" when figuring the feasibility of providing water and sewer service to an area include, among other things: the number of customers per mile; line size ("What capacity can you afford."); "What looks like it will pay for itself," and return on investment.

At a Monday meeting, the school board asked commissioners to consider approving a $25.7 million bond referendum to be held in February 1989 with the money to be used to build additional classroom space at schools throughout the county.

Eddie West, superintendent of schools, suggested that the bonds could be repaid over a 10-year period "without a tax increase" by using state school capital projects funds allocated to Pitt County and income from sales taxes earmarked for the schools.

But County Manager Kramer Jackson told board members Wednesday that, based on present revenue, a $25.7 million bond issue would require a 3.33 cents increase in the tax rate to repay the bonds in 10 years.

But Jackson said a $25.7 million bond issue for schools could be retired over a 20-year period with no increase in taxes by using state and sales tax money.

In an effort to give commissioners a number of options to consider — all based on requests or needs — Jackson said a bond issue to provide the money requested by the schools and $13 million for a new jail complex would require a 4.33 cent increase in the tax rate to retire in 20 years. He said a 4.50 cents increase in the tax rate could fund the schools' request, the jail complex and $500,000 for new voting machines.

Other options, according to figures presented by Jackson, would be to: add $2 million for a new landfill to the $25.7 million for schools, $13 million for a new jail and $500,000 for new voting machines — $41.2 million in all — which would require an increase of 5.17 cents in the tax rate to repay; include another $1 million for an expansion of the health department, for a total of $42.2 million, with a resulting 5.5 cents increase in the tax rate; provide an additional $1.5 million for an agricultural center and add 6-cents to the tax rate for repayment, and include $10 million for Pitt Community College buildings — which would bring the total to $53.7 million — a move which would increase the tax rate by 9.33 cents.

Including the $25.7 million for school capital funds, Jackson told commissioners, "There are requests before us for $62.7 million already."

The board's next meeting is scheduled for 9 a.m. on Nov. 28 at the county office building.

Holly Farms OKs Merger

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Holly Farms Corp., which has been fending off a hostile takeover bid by a rival poultry producer, said today it agreed to be acquired by agriculture conglomerate Conagra Inc. in a stock-swap deal worth around $1 billion.

The friendly merger was unanimously approved by the boards of directors of both companies and is now subject to stockholders' agreement.

Under the definitive pact, each of Holly Farm's 18.1 million common shares outstanding would be exchanged for between 1.875 shares and 2 shares of Conagra shares, depending on market fluctuations. Lee Taylor, president of Memphis, Tenn.-based Holly Farms, said in a brief interview.

Based on Conagra's close of $28.87 1/2 a share on the New York Stock Exchange on Wednesday, the deal would be valued at around $1.04 billion.

Holly Farms closed at $52.75 on the NYSE. The opening of both stocks was temporarily delayed today.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Don't Linger

Service & Excellence Inseparable

A downturn in performance is a concern, and one that East Carolina University cannot dismiss.

Whether indelible lines of alarm should be drawn around drooping freshmen Scholastic Aptitude Test scores at ECU remains to be seen. But the fact that the school's scores dipped while other state universities' scores climbed is disturbing.

While there is no evidence these scores represent a trend, ECU was the only university in the North Carolina system with declining freshman scores. After improvement three years ago, the scores remained stable, then fell in 1988.

That position is not a comfortable one, and ECU mustn't linger there. The lower scores might not be cause for panic, but they should be redflagged. The university should seek to better its position, not trail behind.

To accomplish this goal, ECU must set top standards for students, yet remain true to its stated purpose of "service." For the school, that charge means offering educational opportunity to those aspiring students in eastern North Carolina who might not receive it otherwise.

It would be quite easy to attribute lagging freshmen scores to the geographic area the university serves. Eastern North Carolina students lag consistently behind the Piedmont and many western counties in achievement and performance testing. But ECU's out-of-state scores also deflated — down 27 points from 1987 to 1988.

And besides, although its charge and focus is the East, the university has a diverse representation of North Carolina's students — and talent. Its attraction extends beyond boundaries. Because of its growth and appeal, the school draws high caliber students for admission.

East Carolina University has fought enormous political battles to gain the advantages it offers. It moved, in two decades, from a small college designed to train teachers, to a fledgling university, to a major institution of higher learning. Now, it faces a future that includes research.

But to complement these advances, ECU needs to build its muscle of academic integrity. This challenge cannot be fulfilled without high goals and quality students.

"Servire" is not an empty Latin word. It is the university's charge, and the school should honor it. But now, for East Carolina University, there cannot be service without academic excellence.

Where To Go?

Time For A Serious Self-Search

The North Carolina Democratic Party still fully controls the Legislature but last week's election results have left the party in a quandary.

Republican Gov. Jim Martin was returned to office for a second term. While that was not a great surprise, the election of Jim Gardner as the state's GOP lieutenant governor certainly was. Add to that the gains made in the Legislature by the Republicans and a situation for serious self-examination presents itself to the Democratic party.

The most immediate problem is how to handle the Republican lieutenant governor presiding over the North Carolina Senate. The Senate can set its own agenda but it has traditionally given lieutenant governors the power to appoint committee chairman and members. Gardner has already let it be known that if he is not given such control, he will make an issue of power stripping.

The next problem for the Democrats is determining a titular head of the party. Traditionally the Democratic governor is viewed as the party's leader. When there has been no Democratic governor the party looked to the Democratic lieutenant governor. Now there is not even that, and the next ranking elected Democrat is Sen. Terry Sanford. His time and attention will be taken up in Washington, however, and there are questions as to how much he can do in involving himself in day-to-day party affairs.

There will, however, be no dearth of personalities who want to assume the role of Democratic Party leader. The problem may be too many powerful people jockeying for party control. That could lead to squabbling and perhaps blood letting which might do further damage to the party's stronghold in North Carolina.

Of course, the Republican party had bitter power squabbles only a year ago. Now it has gotten itself together and become a real political force in North Carolina.

The Democrats can do the same. But to do so it the party must examine itself and determine why it has lost its appeal to so many Tar Heel voters. And if answers are not found in the next two years, the Democrats can expect to lose still more ground to the ever-strengthening Republican Party.

The 'Gun' May Be A Pop-Gun

WASHINGTON — George Bush's only clear campaign pledge was to continue President Reagan's policy of borrow-borrow, spend-spend, elect-elect. That is what "No new taxes" means. So we know the answer to the central question of the 1992 election. The question is: Are you better off than you were in 1988? The answer will be: No. To see why, consider the following.

Although it is hard to look up to a man in that position, candidate Bush placed his ear to the ground and announced triumphantly: "By two-to-one Congress is blamed for these deficits." The polls are right about who the public blames but the public is mistaken.

Congress' disagreement with Reagan has been marginal and mostly about the composition rather than the amount of spending. In the six budgets before the post-crash Reagan-Congress "summit" agreement, deficits averaged $184 billion and Reagan budgets proposed at least $169 billion of that.

Bush will now get to name two members to the National Economic Commission, which will make deficit-reduction proposals to Bush. He can choose either people who think his "flexible freeze" is a solution, or people who can add.

Bush promises to halt the four-year decline of defense spending, which is 27 percent of the budget. Entitlements and other mandatory programs are 47 percent. (All in favor of cutting them signify by saying, "I choose not to seek re-election.") Interest payments are 14 percent of the budget. (They will be more once the dollar's decline causes interest rates to rise.)

George Will

That accounts for 88 percent of the budget. In 10 months Gramm-Rudman requires reduction of the deficit to $100 billion (with $10 billion leeway). If it is to be done without taxes, it will require at least $35 billion in cuts. There is not a single vote in Congress — not one — for a budget that would take that from the 12 percent that is discretionary spending.

Besides, Bush pines for child care, longs to be the "education President" and is "haunted" by the plight of poor children. Are his pinings, longings and hauntings as strong as his taxophobia? (Never mind the scores of billions required for the savings and loan bail-outs, for the crisis in nuclear facilities, for...)

A Republican close to the President-elect recently said to a senior Democratic senator, "He'll have to veto a couple of your tax increases" before he accepts one. Oh, my. Are there really Republicans silly enough to suppose the Democrats are suicidal enough to accept this division of labor: They beg for higher taxes, Republicans reluctantly agree? As Bennett Johnston (D-La.) says, "We're not going to get the blame while he gets the money."

Some Republicans seem to think the problem is just one of split-second timing. The theory is that Republicans will put entitlements "on the table" at the instant Democrats put taxes, and by some immaculate conception a proposal will be born that will have on it neither party's fingerprints.

But that is prestidigitation, not politics. Besides, Democrats won't play. Why should they? Bush is the first Republican in history to win the White House while his party was losing strength in both houses of Congress. He will soon hear this from growth and low interest rates. There will be a growing lust to raid the Social Security trust fund, to squander it on current government operations.

Gramm-Rudman, the so-called "gun behind the door," may be a pop-gun. It can be amended or ignored. And if it is triggered and "sequesters" are made, half the total must come from defense. That would be interesting 11 months after an election won by a candidate shouting "Peace through strength."

'Bush promised continuity. That means more reckless borrowing that absorbs private savings needed for productive investment. It means more borrowing from abroad, borrowing that exports assets and, eventually, sovereignty.'

Democrats: Read our lips — you move first.

They will say: You had jolly fun in the campaign and now you get Air Force One and the Marine Band and Camp David. But you are expected to lead. Begin by submitting a budget. We need a laugh and we'll get one from any budget purporting to hit the Gramm-Rudman target without new taxes.

We probably are in for more government by Mr. Micawber and Scarlett O'Hara: "Something will turn up." "We'll think about it tomorrow." Tomorrow is apt to be a lot like today — Bush promised as much. So there will be a lot of book-keeping legerdemain, supplemented by weird assumptions about high

Bush promised continuity. That means more reckless borrowing that absorbs private savings needed for productive investment. It means more borrowing from abroad, borrowing that exports assets and, eventually, sovereignty. It means scanting investment in infrastructure and education crucial to our children's living standards.

All this — the sacrifice of our children to pay for our gluttony — is the aftermath of a campaign thick with talk about "values," especially "family values."

Keep Peace In Play

William Raspberry

WASHINGTON — Could it be that after all these years of strife, terrorism and outright war, the Middle East really is on the verge of peace?

It's always a good thing to read not just the lips of the disputants in that part of the world, but also their eyes, the words they put on paper and, as best one can, their real intentions.

It will be a while before all those signals can be sorted out. But the Palestine Liberation Organization's proclamation of an independent Palestinian state, its apparent acceptance of the legitimacy of the state of Israel and its announced intentions to subscribe to the two main U.N. Security Council resolutions affecting the region have the look of a breakthrough.

Or, at least the basis of a breakthrough. All that has happened so far — notwithstanding the cheering in the Arab world, the raised expectations of Palestinian exiles, and the crossed-fingers hopefulness in the West — is that the PLO has been negotiating with itself. But these self-negotiations have, by all early accounts, been unexpectedly successful.

The PLO is no longer talking about Israel as the Palestine it expects to liberate. It has, implicitly at least, accepted — and declared its intention to live in peace with — the state of Israel. Instead of talking about driving Jews into the sea, it is talking about a Palestinian homeland in the West Bank and Gaza. And the whole packet was endorsed by the Palestinian National Council (PNC), the PLO's parliament in exile, by a vote of 253 to 46, with ten abstentions.

"The State of Palestine...announces itself to be a peace-loving state, in adherence to the principles of co-existence," a newly moderate Yasser Arafat told cheering delegates to the PNC session in Algiers. Whether the conciliatory move is an act of desperation or a genuine effort for peace, it represents a changed reality in the Middle East.

But all of this is meaningless unless Israel can bring itself to take a chance for peace. With the prospects of a conservative administration, as the Likud Party joins with smaller parties of the religious right to form a government, it remains unclear to what extent, or how quickly, Israel can respond to the PNC announcement.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir already has reiterated his commitment never to negotiate with the PLO.

"It's not a problem of definition and formulations on various positions," said the man who is likely to be Israel's leader for the next four years. "We'll not negotiate with them because they are opposed to peace in Israel."

A statement from the Israeli Foreign Ministry denounced the Palestinian position as a "gimmick" full of "ambiguity and doubletalk" designed to "obscure its advocacy of violence."

A cautious White House said it "still is not clear just how specific" the PLO has been with regard to Israel's right to exist.

The specifics will be clarified soon enough. The question for the United States is, assuming genuine change on the part of the PLO, how much pressure the administration will put on Israel to enter land-for-peace negotiations.

Indeed, the American government will first have to decide whether the PNC announcement amounts to enough of a breakthrough for it to talk to the PLO. Current policy forbids official discussions with the PLO, on the ground of its refusal to accept the existence of Israel or to abide by U.N. Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338.

"We have not seen a complete set of all the final documents, and we will want to take a careful look at them," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Tuesday.

Well, of course. But if that "careful look" and subsequent statements from the PLO show a real change of attitude, the United States may be forced to pressure Israel into some reciprocal action — at least to the extent of laying out an acceptable basis for negotiations.

While it's impossible to be certain in advance of further talks just how serious the PLO is, the best hope for peace in the region may lie in accepting the new PLO position at face value, leaving it to the Palestinians themselves to prove they don't mean what they seem to be saying.

"Our political statement contains moderation, flexibility and realism, which the West has been urging us to show," Arafat said in his announcement. "The ball is now in the American court."

And so it is. The least the Americans can do in the interest of peace is to keep it in play.

IN THE STATE

Train Wreck

WILSON'S MILLS, N.C. (AP) — No one was injured Wednesday when dump truck drove into an Amtrak train at a crossing about six miles north of Smithfield, the Highway Patrol said.

The truck driver, Darnell Junice McLean, 30, of Smithfield, was charged with failing to decrease speed, said Trooper N.C. Johnson.

The truck was hauling dirt for J.P. Edwards Construction Co. of Smithfield.

"The truck was tore up pretty good. A total loss," said Kenneth Gooch, a fireman who was at the scene.

The truck struck the train at the second engine.

The wreck occurred about 10 a.m. near U.S. 70-A and blocked a main intersection here.

Glaxo Plant

DURHAM (AP) — Glaxo Inc. plans to open a $90 million pharmaceutical manufacturing plant in the former American Tobacco Inc. buildings in downtown Durham that would employ more than 250 production workers.

Adaron Group Inc. and Duke University, which own the building, and Glaxo will announce the project Thursday.

Glaxo is expected to unveil plans to buy some of the space available in the American complex, which contains about 1 million square feet of usable space.

The Research Triangle Park-based company is also expected to construct a new building on a 1,000-space parking lot across the street from the huge brick building. The buildings would be bridged to connect the Glaxo facilities.

Glaxo will produce antibiotic tablets at the plant.

Williams Dies

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — Eric Williams, the former executive director of the North Carolina Zoological Society, died Tuesday at Duke Medical Center after an extended illness. He was 49.

Williams was hired as president of the N.C. Zoological Society in June 1982 and was later named executive director, a post he held until December 1985, when he resigned to enter private business.

During Williams' tenure, the society successfully completed a $1.4 million fund-raising campaign to buy plants and animals for the African Pavilion and the African Plains exhibits.

Powers Staying

RALEIGH (AP) — State Revenue Secretary Helen Powers, who had planned to retire effective Nov. 30, has agreed to continue in the post during Gov. Jim Martin's second term.

"Naturally, I was not looking forward to losing such a competent and innovative leader as Secretary Powers," Martin said Wednesday. "Now, however, I am pleased that she has agreed to stay because she will play a key role in our second administration."

Before joining the Cabinet, Ms. Powers served as senior vice president with the Bank of Asheville, and as senior vice president and director with NCB National Bank in Asheville.

Deane Appointed

RALEIGH (AP) — Tenney I. Deane Jr. has been named the executive director of the North Carolina Low-Level Radioactive Waste Management Authority, officials announced Wednesday.

Deane, 51, has served as chairman of the authority since April and replaces Paul B. Stam Sr., who resigned Tuesday. Stam, who had held the position since July, said he resigned for personal reasons.

Deane was Secretary of the Department of Commerce in 1973 and was a member and chairman of the Utilities Commission from 1973 to 1977.

Harassing Calls

GRAHAM, N.C. (AP) — A Gibsonville man previously convicted of at least 30 counts of indecent exposure has been found guilty of making harassing phone calls to two local high schools.

The Alamance County Superior Court jury took less than 15 minutes Tuesday to convict Gary Boyd Moore, 35, of five counts of harassing phone calls. The case was appealed from District Court.

Moore was sentenced to eight years in prison for the first four counts with an additional two-year sentence suspended for five years on probation following his release from prison.

The state's case included a taped confession from Moore admitting he had made obscene calls to Western High School and Southern High Schools during April and May. Two school employees testified that they believed the same man had made the calls, but could not definitely say the voice was Moore's.

Winston-Salem Mostly Plays It Cool As Others Observe 'Great Smokeout'

By Robin P. Teater
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cold turkey sandwiches and "Kiss Me I Don't Smoke" buttons were the order of the day today as the 12th annual Great American Smokeout was observed in the biggest tobacco-producing state in the country.

But the event, sponsored by the American Cancer Society, was subdued in Winston-Salem, home of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

"There's very little happening here," a spokeswoman at the Cancer Society's Forsyth County office in Winston-Salem said Wednesday. "We don't do a lot of things in our community because R.J. Reynolds is our biggest employer here ... we do not have parties and big celebrations on Smokeout Day."

The spokeswoman, who asked that her name not be used, said the national office leaves activities during the 12th annual event up to the local chapters. One year the Forsyth chapter tried setting up anti-smoking booths.

"It was very traumatic for the volunteers ... people came by and blew smoke at them and let them know they weren't welcome," she said. "I don't want to ask them to go through that again."

But in neighboring Greensboro, there will be something for everyone, including cold turkey snacks at Southern Lights restaurant, a "Walk Your Butt Off" course at Greensboro Hospital and an all-day celebration at Carolina Circle Mall.

At the Center for Preventive Medicine in Greensboro, smokers can blow into a machine that gauges the amount of carbon monoxide in their lungs from cigarettes.

Charlotte Assistant City Manager Don Steger will give up cigarettes for the day to be this year's honorary chairman, while Deputy City Manager Tom Finnie will "adopt him" and provide moral support.

In western North Carolina, the Cherokee Indian Reservation is giving school children balloons to be released simultaneously, while Southwestern Community College in Sylva will hold a live broadcast to interview students who adopt a smoker for the day.

At several plants in the mountains, including Dupont, Lee and Champion International Paper Co., survival kits containing crossword puzzles, carrot and celery sticks and sugarless candy will be available, said Peggy Hurt, the executive director for an eight-county district based in Sylva.

The Buncombe County chapter of the Cancer Society is sponsoring a balloon release at Asheville Senior High School, said Executive Director Robbie Hambright. She said area hospitals and corporations will hold adopt-a-smoker programs.

Hospitals in the Triangle also plan to participate.

Rex Hospital and Wake Medical Center in Raleigh, along with the Chapel Hill Obstetrics and Gynecology Clinic, will give away T-shirts to babies born on Smokeout Day.

North Carolina State University in Raleigh and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill will sponsor cigarette dumps, where volunteers will give away balloons and "survival kits" to people who dump their cigarettes.

At several booths across Wake County, volunteers will distribute headless matches, "Kiss Me, I Don't Smoke" buttons and Larry Hagman wrist snappers, which smokers can snap when they get the urge to light up. Hagman, a television actor and former smoker, is the national honorary chairman of the Smokeout.

On the coast, several factories will offer smoking employees alternative vices such as celery sticks, chewing gum and apples.

Nitrex, a chemical company in Wilmington, starts off the day with a breakfast where former smokers speak. Throughout the day, plant nurse Bessie McCoy will dole out munchies and crossword puzzles, and cold turkey sandwiches for lunch.

"Just the fact that our county buildings have gone no smoking is a move in the right direction," said Denise Teachey, executive director of the New Hanover Cancer Society chapter.

RJR Executives Boosted Stock Holdings

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — The day F. Ross Johnson announced his plan to buy RJR Nabisco Inc., company directors gave him and other executives 151,000 shares of stock — a move one ex-RJR executive calls one of the "most flagrant grabs ... you will ever see."

Three months earlier, on July 21, the day that the board of directors approved a "poison pill" aimed at thwarting potential hostile takeover attempts, the board's compensation committee authorized Johnson to grant up to 400,000 shares of restricted stock "to selected employees."

Meanwhile Wednesday, acquisition specialist Forstmann Little & Co. said it has abandoned a plan to enter the bidding for Nabisco.

Johnson, the RJR Nabisco chief executive, passed out 375,000 of the shares on Aug. 1. Edward A. Horrigan Jr., a vice chairman and Johnson's partner in the buyout plan, received 50,000 shares. Harold L. Henderson, the executive vice president and general counsel, got 15,000 shares.

As a group, some 31 RJR Nabisco executive officers, including Johnson, Horrigan and Henderson, received 107,500 shares.

At $88.50 a share, the closing price of RJR Nabisco stock Tuesday, the 526,000 shares given to the executives since July 21 are worth $46.5 million.

An RJR Nabisco stockholder and former company executive said in an interview published Wednesday in the Winston-Salem Journal that such stock grants to top executives are not typical of the way companies do business.

"This represents one of the most flagrant grabs, I think, you will ever see," he said. "It's just been abusive the way they have spent money."

Albert L. Butler Jr. of Winston-Salem, chairman of the compensation committee, could not be reached for comment.

Documents RJR Nabisco filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission do not provide a detailed breakdown of the stock distributions, so it is not clear how many shares Johnson kept.

The company reported in the filing, however, that as of Nov. 7, Johnson held restricted stock awards of 169,106 shares and Horrigan held 168,136. Horrigan's total included the 50,000 shares granted on Aug. 1, which alone are worth $4.42 million.

Further, the filing said that on Nov. 7 Robert J. Carbonell, a vice chairman, had 97,439 shares of the restricted stock; Henderson, 74,401; and James O. Welch Jr., a vice chairman, 66,106. All executive officers as a group held 982,607 restricted shares, worth $86.96 million. The company did not mention in the SEC filing what the group's total stock holdings are, counting restricted and unrestricted.

Restricted shares are grants of stock that the holder will receive full rights to at some specified time in the future if certain conditions are met, one being his continued employment with the company.

Johnson and Horrigan have not identified the other executives who are members of their management buyout group.

RJR Nabisco does not spell out in the filing whether the Nov. 7 totals are in addition to the executives' holdings as of March 1, which are reported in the company's 1988 proxy statement. A company spokesman said Tuesday there is some overlap in the totals, but she said the company would not specify the amount of stock that the executives have added since March 1.

A special committee of RJR Nabisco directors will receive sealed bids for the company on Friday.

State Cotton Yields Rise

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Despite a federal program to reduce cotton production, North Carolina farmers expect to harvest more cotton this year than in the past, officials say.

An estimated 135,000 bales are expected to be produced this year, "the most I've seen in 15 years," said Jack Cox, president of Carolinas Cotton Growers Association in Raleigh.

The increase in production has caused nine new ginning facilities to be built, and four more are planned, according to the N.C. Department of Agriculture. In the past 10 years, cotton production has increased from 20 counties to 34 counties.

North Carolina cotton farmers will vote in late November and early December on whether to continue a program, begun in 1978, to eliminate boll weevils that can destroy the crop.

North Carolina participates in a program with Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Alabama to keep the pest from reinfesting areas where the weevils have been eradicated.

Democrats Stir Wrath Of Blacks, Women, Youth Over State Meeting

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Black political and civic activists blasted top North Carolina Democrats for inviting no blacks, women or young people to a meeting tonight on the future of the state party.

And they criticized the officials for a reorganization proposal in which a group of white men, all over 40, would run the party.

Not inviting or including blacks "strikes me as rather stupid," said Dennis Schatzman, executive director of the state chapter of the NAACP. "We (blacks) are the only bloc of voters the Democratic Party has been able to rely on these many years."

"Trying to decide the future of the party without us is like making a cake without sugar," Schatzman said.

Among the angriest Wednesday was Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake. He said he was not invited to the meeting even though he heads the Legislative Black Caucus, chaired by Jesse Jackson's presidential campaign in North Carolina and is considered a leading spokesman on urban issues.

"I'm offended that they would have a major meeting without a broader group," Blue said. "If they can't see the absurdity of that, then they're in for some shocks."

The 7:30 p.m. meeting at state Democratic Party headquarters was set up a week ago. U.S. Sen. Terry Sanford, former Gov. Jim Hunt; House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison; and the newly elected Democratic members of the Council of State, including Secretary of State-elect Rufus Edmisten, and Attorney General Lacy Thornburg have been invited to attend.

The group plans to discuss how to appoint the party's next chairman and executive director.

Edmisten said Wednesday that state school superintendent-elect Bobby Etheridge was supposed to invite Blue to the meeting in his capacity as a legislative leader.

Etheridge could not be reached for comment, but Blue said he knew nothing about the meeting when contacted by a reporter Wednesday.

Blue strongly criticized a plan floated by Edmisten and other Council of State members to have the party's policy, direction and personnel decided by a new "board of directors."

Such a board, Edmisten has said, would comprise the eight Council of State members, Sanford, Hunt and the party's two losing statewide candidates — Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, who ran for governor, and Senate Majority Leader Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, who ran for lieutenant governor.

Blue pointed out that all are white, male and over 40.

"If there's going to be some corporate governance of the state party, one damn thing is for sure: It'll be a representative group," he said. "Otherwise, there'll be no structure to preside over except their personal little fiefdoms."

Some Democratic activists have become impatient with the Council of State, dubbing the group "the white boys" and criticizing their failure to reach out to blacks and women.

Edmisten defended the proposal for a board of directors, pointing out that the plan also calls for creating an advisory council that would include blacks and other party leaders.

By proposing a board of directors, Edmisten said, "the idea was that there are these well-defined persons who have been elected statewide who can make some initial decisions and get the ball rolling until there's a chairman and executive director."

Asked why Blue and others wouldn't be included, Edmisten said, "There had to be a cutoff."

The current party chairman, Jim Van Hecke Jr., who wants to step down, was hostile to the board of directors idea Wednesday.

"There isn't going to be any board of directors," he said. "It'll be the (party's 380-member) executive committee that decides who the next chairman is."

Vehicle Tax Plan Aired

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A legislative study panel has proposed a plan that would prevent owners who fail to pay property taxes on their automobiles from renewing their license plates.

The proposal, which received broad support from the Property Tax System Study Committee, calls for the state to refuse vehicle registrations and renewals for motorists who do not pay vehicle taxes to city and county governments.

Supporters said the move could bring in an estimated $15 million that local governments lose annually in unpaid property taxes on motor vehicles, without inconveniencing law-abiding drivers.

"If they don't pay their property taxes, we'll know they can't drive because they can't renew their license plates," Terry L. Rowland, the Cabarrus County tax assessor said Tuesday. "If they want to drive on the highways of North Carolina, they're going to have to come looking for us."

Court Panel Studies Legal Fees Paid For Indigents

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The Constitution says the government will pay the legal bills of poor people accused of a crime, but it leaves lawyers, judges, bureaucrats and legislators to decide just how large the bills should be.

For the 12 months ending last June, North Carolina paid almost $21 million for legal services for the poor, said Dallas Cameron, assistant director of the state Administrative Office of the Courts and chairman of an AOC committee examining standardized fees for legal services.

"It looks easy at a distance," said Cameron. "But to just pay so much for each offense is almost irrelevant. Every case, every outcome, is different."

"You can have a DWI case that's pleaded guilty in 20 minutes, or a capital murder case pleaded guilty in the same time," he said. "Or you can have a DWI case that ends up going through District Court, Superior Court, the Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court."

The General Assembly this year gave the AOC until March to propose a schedule of fees. The action came after legal bills last year exceeded AOC projections and the state ran out of money to pay them. AOC director Franklin Freeman appointed the committee, which includes judges, prosecutors, defense lawyers and a clerk of court, but is not bound by their recommendations.

This year, the legislature approved a $9.8 million fund for indigent services, with the money divided among counties according to the percentage of indigent cases they handled last year. A reserve fund of $2.3 million also was set up, with a third pool of $3 million for capital cases.

In most counties, judges appoint local lawyers from a list to represent people charged with a crime who cannot afford a lawyer. The lawyer submits his bill when the case is finished and the judge decides how much the state will pay.

"I feel like most judges will look at the number of hours involved and maybe knock out some hours if they feel they are a little too much for what was done," Cameron said. "And then they may, very apologetically I think, ... try to cut it down some more because of budget considerations."

"There has always been pressure on the system to hold down fees," said Chapel Hill lawyer Adam Stein, who represents the N.C. Academy of Trial Lawyers on the AOC committee.

"Our position is that when the state goes to hire a lawyer to represent somebody, that lawyer should be paid a reasonable fee," Stein said. "The system requires that the state hire competent people to do the work and you should pay them a reasonable rate for the work they do."

In the fiscal year ending in June, the state paid $11.9 million for legal services for adults. Lawyers were paid an average of $245.41 for about 48,419 cases.

"A case, to us, is a check," Cameron said. "It sounds bad, but it is probably as good a definition as I've seen."

In capital cases, where the defendant's life was at stake, the state paid $2.3 million for 647 cases, an average of $3,560. Some of those cases could have involved payments to two lawyers.

The average payment per case, Cameron and Stein agreed, is well below a lawyer's normal charge.

"When the state hires a lawyer to represent an indigent client, the other state lawyers there — the judge and the prosecutor — do not take a pay cut," Stein said. "It's not appropriate anymore to think of this as a system that should be subsidized by that section of the Bar that is willing to do criminal defense work."

Stein said a State Bar economic survey indicated it takes about $30 an hour, or $50,000 per year, for each attorney in a law firm just to pay for normal business overhead. That does not include a salary for the lawyer.

"So if I'm an average lawyer in an average North Carolina law firm, if I don't get $30 an hour, it is costing me money out of my own pocket to do what I'm doing," Stein said. "It seems unfair to me to have a system that drafts lawyers to do the work and then pays them less than it costs them to keep their doors open."

"We're not looking for a windfall for anybody, but we do want to see that they are fairly compensated for the work they do," Stein said.

Stein said any system for paying lawyers would have to be accountable to state officials, and could require a separate agency to oversee the payments. Cameron said the committee will come up with a fee schedule, "even if we eventually decide it's a bad thing to do. That's what the General Assembly has asked us for."

"We might come up and say, 'Here's the schedule, but we think it's not the best thing to do,' or we might decide it is the best thing to do," Cameron said. "Right now, it's difficult to say how it will come out."

Landlady Returns To Face Charges In Tenant Deaths

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — A landlady suspected in the deaths of seven tenants whose bodies were unearthed in the yard of her rooming house was returned here today, hours after her arrest in a Los Angeles motel room.

Dorothea Montalvo Puente, 59, accompanied by Sacramento detectives, arrived in handcuffs at Executive Airport and was taken to the Police Department for questioning. She ignored reporters' questions as she crossed the tarmac.

It was not immediately known when she was to be arraigned.

Puente was taken into custody after a five-day hunt Wednesday night by police who tracked her to a motel on a tip provided to a TV station.

"She was real cool, real calm. It looked like she almost expected it," said Officer Paul Von Lutzow.

Police believe Puente killed tenants of her Sacramento boarding house for their Social Security benefits. They have a list of two dozen people who are missing and who might have lived at the eight-bedroom house at one time or another.

Police tracked her to the Royal Viking Motel on the basis of a tip provided to CBS by a disabled pensioner who met her in a bar and took a liking to her, said CBS assignment editor Gene Silver.

Von Lutzow, who said the woman identified herself using an alias, Donna Johansen, told the Associated Press that the man who alerted the news media had made a date to go shopping with her today.

"During a lengthy conversation, she told him she was from the San Francisco area and he put two-and-two together and called," Von Lutzow said.

"He wanted me to wait until the next day because he had a date with her," Von Lutzow said. Police would not identify the man.

The white-haired Puente, clad in a red jacket and pink house dress, bowed her head as officers walked her to a patrol car. She declined to answer any reporters' questions, but appeared somewhat dazed.

Puente, who has a criminal record dating back to a 1948 conviction for forging checks, has been charged only with the murder of Alvaro Montoya, 52, a mentally disabled transient who lived in the house. His disappearance caused Volunteers of America counselor Judy Moise to contact police, leading to the diggings.

She had not been seen since Saturday, when police allowed her to walk away from the house while they dug for bodies. State and federal authorities had been searching for her in Mexico, where she has relatives, and Las Vegas as well as California.

One former tenant, Homer Myers, told reporters Wednesday that he and other tenants unknowingly helped Puente dispose of the bodies by digging the makeshift graves.

Myers, 74, said Puente first asked him to dig a hole in the back yard for an apricot tree.

"She said she had contacted a nursery and they told her she needed a hole that was four feet by four feet and five feet deep. I thought that was a little deep. Now I know why."

Digging was completed at the boarding house yard Tuesday and police searched the inside of the blue house. Detectives removed several items from the house, but would not say what evidence was found other than the seven bodies.

Kearns said there has been no decision whether to dig at any other sites, including a house several blocks away where Puente lived several years ago.

The coroner's office, assisted by several forensic anthropologists, is still in the process of identifying the bodies and performing autopsies to determine cause of death.

Records Show Grandmotherly Suspect Was Conniving, Cruel

The Ill And Elderly Had Been Her Prey For Years

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — She appeared to be a grandmotherly landlady who took in the homeless, but court records show the woman arrested in the deaths of seven tenants was a dangerous eccentric who preyed on the ill and elderly for years.

The records indicate that 59-year-old Dorothea Montalvo Puente, who was arrested late Wednesday in downtown Los Angeles after a five-day search, could be kind and generous one moment and cunning and cruel the next.

Puente had not been seen since Saturday, when police allowed her to walk away from her Victorian rooming house after the first of seven bodies was unearthed in the yard.

Her estranged daughter, Linda Bloom of South Pasadena, described her as "shy, withdrawn and reserved" with "no real personality." Doctors discovered she may have a penchant for poisoning as far back as 1980, according to a probation report.

Police believe Puente killed tenants to collect their Social Security benefits. They have a list of two dozen people who are missing and who might have lived at Puente's eight-bedroom house at one time or another.

One former tenant, Homer Myers, told reporters Wednesday that he and other tenants unknowingly helped Puente dispose of the bodies by digging the makeshift graves.

Myers, 74, said Puente first asked him to dig a hole in the back yard for an apricot tree.

"She said she had contacted a nursery and they told her she needed a hole that was 4 feet by 4 feet and 5 feet deep. I thought that was a little deep. Now I know why."

Court documents, including a record of her first conviction for forging checks in 1948, paint the picture of a conniving, manipulative woman who can concoct a story for any occasion.

Puente herself, in letters to a judge preparing to sentence her on unrelated charges in 1982, described her life as plagued with hardship, four failed marriages, abuse and the responsibility of supporting some of her numerous brothers and sisters.

In the court documents, most of which were filed in connection with search or arrest warrants, Puente claimed to be of Mexican descent, the youngest of 18 children. However, San Bernardino County recorded her birth as Dorothea Helen Gray, on Jan. 19, 1929, in Redlands, to Jessie Gray, an ex-serviceman, and Trudy Yates, a housewife.

The first complaints that Puente may have been involved in poisoning came in early 1980, when doctors at University Medical Center in Sacramento conducted a toxicology test on an emergency room patient, 79-year-old Esther Busby.

Busby's physician, Dr. Jerome Lackner, recalled that he first suspected Puente, his patient's live-in companion, of poisoning Busby with overdoses of a heart medication he had prescribed.

Lackner notified officials of the county Adult Protective Services agency "that Puente was poisoning or making Busby sick by overmedicating her, and that I suspected that she was ripping Mrs. Busby off."

"They were able to check, and found out that Mrs. Busby's (Social Security) check had been cashed and that the endorsement was a forgery," he said. "I told Esther what was going on, and she got rid of Puente."

That occurrence and a similar one led to a warning to all Sacramento hospitals about Puente, a criminal investigation by county authorities, and Puente's 1982 arrest on charges of forgery, grand theft and "administering stupefying drugs."

While in custody, Puente claimed that all her surviving brothers and sisters in Mexico depended on her for financial support.

"When I was 3 years old, I had to start picking cotton, potatoes, cucumbers, chilies, then fruits," Puente wrote in one of two letters to Sacramento Superior Court Judge Roger Warren. "I finally married when I was 13, he died after a few days."

Earthlings Can Reach Out To Space Today

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Earthlings who dream of reaching out and touching extraterrestrial beings can thrust their voice and image billions of miles into space by making a special long-distance call.

By using "space phones" set up today through Saturday in the AT&T building's atrium, the public will have a chance to communicate with someone who could hear their voice long after they're dead, said AT&T spokesman Brian Monahan.

About 30 hours of recorded audio-visual messages will be beamed to outer space by the telephone company's satellite dishes from Thanksgiving to New Year's during the early morning hours when they aren't being used for business.

Monahan said AT&T has 30-meter dishes across the country aimed at communications satellites, and one or two would be realigned to beam the radio waves.

"They're very powerful," he said. "We're gonna crank these up."

The messages will travel at the speed of light in a straight line until they run into something, Monahan said.

"I think it appeals to the imagination — the idea of hurtling messages at the speed of light," he said. "And, of course, it's free, so if people don't get a call back they won't be upset."

The so-called "space phones" are not the first high-tech attempt to communicate with possible extraterrestrials. When the Voyager spacecraft was launched in 1977, it carried a digital record of 118 photographs of Earth, 90 minutes of the world's greatest music and greetings in almost 60 human languages and one whale language.

But what is new and exciting about this latest communication effort is that it is the first time non-scientists will send messages into space, Monahan said.

The messages are recorded as callers speak for 30 seconds into a microphone while being filmed by a television camera, he said.

Cats Really Do Have The Meow

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — This country isn't going to the dogs. In fact, more Americans now consider a cat the "purrfect" pet, and birds are soaring in popularity.

For the first time ever, cats are more popular with American pet owners, apparently because of the advent of the yuppie, the American Veterinary Medical Association said Wednesday.

The U.S. cat population reached an estimated 54.6 million at the end of 1987, compared with 52.4 million dogs, according to a study of 40,000 households by Charles Research Group of Overland Park, Kan.

Birds are moving up in the rankings faster than any other creature. The number of pet birds rose 24 percent, from 10.4 million to 12.9 million, between 1983, when a previous survey was taken, and the new study.

The U.S. cat population increased 4.6 percent and the dog population declined 5.8 percent between the two studies, said the AVMA, based in suburban Schaumburg.

The total number of cats, dogs, birds and horses kept by Americans increased less than 1 percent to 126 million. When hamsters, fish, turtles, snakes and rabbits are counted, the total climbs to more than 200 million creatures — closing in on the nation's human population of 245 million as of last January.

The typical pet owner, researchers said, is a large family with children living outside a metropolitan area, with an above-average income and more than one pet.

They also found that people in Western and Southern states keep more pets.

This is an exciting, penetrating, serious but humorous gospel play. No matter how strong your defenses are, I assure you that you will jump, shout, laugh and cry. Resolutions has taken this world by storm. It deals with the seduction of a young girl, false pretension and the movement of evil around us. It also tells of the commitments made to God, themselves and others.

Resolutions written by Ms. Dorothy Hughes (pictured) is bound to be the play of the century. It tells the story of hypocrisy in the church, the courtroom, the home, schools and today's world that we all play a part in; However small it might be.

Dorothy Hughes wrote the play, Resolutions out of a need to show people the reality of life in order that we might resolve some of our life's situations while there is still time.

Bush Has His Choice Of Cabinet Candidates

By Christopher Connell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Trying to figure out who's going to be in George Bush's Cabinet is a little like playing musical chairs: Any number can play but there are only a limited number of chairs.

The only guy who can stop this music is Bush, and he's giving few clues. Asked today if he had decided to name New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu his chief of staff, as the Associated Press reported Tuesday, Bush said only, "Stay tuned."

Bush, commenting to reporters as he waited for British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher outside his official residence, was asked if he had any transition announcements.

"I don't know," he responded. "Maybe so, but I'm not sure. We're just on the phone about that." He was not more specific.

For his part, Sununu refused to confirm at a new conference in Concord on Wednesday that Bush has tapped him for White House chief of staff.

"A request isn't a formal request until the tall thin guy sings," Sununu said. "And the tall thin guy hasn't sung publicly, and therefore I'm not going to comment."

Two seats already have been taken (State and Treasury) by James A. Baker III and Nicholas Brady, leaving the president-elect with a dozen other department heads to name.

Bush also is compelling his transition staff to take an oath of secrecy, but that hasn't stopped what seems like every Republican politician in America plus assorted Democrats, pundits, bureaucrats, self-promoters and other Washington idlers from speculating furiously, peddling inside tips and drawing up endless lists.

Here's a look at some of the names that have bubbled to the surface of these rumor rivelets. The departments are listed in order of seniority after the oldest, State and Treasury.

DEFENSE

Frank Carlucci is the incumbent. Unlike some of his Cabinet brethren, he has not been lobbying to stay on. Expressing an eagerness to return to the private sector, he is likely to get his wish.

Former Texas Sen. John Tower is at the top of most lists of possible defense secretaries, unless Bush opts for a corporate chieftain to straighten out the Pentagon procurement mess. Then the talk turns to folks such as Paul H. O'Neill, chairman of the Aluminum Co. of America or former defense secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld. Former Rep. Jack Edwards, R-Ala., is a dark horse, along with retired Air Force Lt. Gen. Brent Scowcroft, national security adviser during the Ford Administration.

INTERIOR
Secretary Donald Paul Hodel, one of the few Reagan Cabinet members to serve the full second term, is certain to go.

Sen. Dan Evans, R-Wash., who decided not to seek re-election, is a favorite in the rumor mills for Interior.

LABOR
Secretary Ann Dore McLaughlin campaigned hard for Bush, but is unlikely to retain the job she got just 11 months ago.

The leading candidate is Rep. Thomas J. Ridge, R-Pa., a moderate from a blue-collar district in western Pennsylvania who has tried to forge GOP ties to organized labor. He is credited with helping Bush carry the Keystone state.

Constance J. Horner, Reagan's Office of Personnel Management director, also is said to covet the Labor seat, although shaky relations with government workers' unions could undermine her chances.

Rep. Matthew Rinaldo, R-N.J., is also under consideration.

The longshots include William Kilbert, a Washington labor lawyer and onetime general counsel to the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, and former Rep. John Ehrlichman, R-III.

Other possibilities include Nat Reed, a former assistant Interior secretary, and Rep. Manuel Lujan, R-N.M. Gov. Garrey Carruthers of New Mexico informed Bush's transition team he does not want to be considered as a candidate.

AGRICULTURE
Secretary Richard E. Lyng will be packing his bags after 2½ years.

U.S. Trade Representative Clayton K. Yeutter is on everybody's list, although he has talked about hankering for the private sector. Yeutter, regarded as an able trade rep, is a former Nebraska feedlot operator and head of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Others with a shot include Rep. Tom Coleman, R-Mo., former Iowa Rep. Cooper Evans and Seymour Johnson, a Mississippi soybean farmer. Peter Myers, currently holding down the No. 2 job at Agriculture, has been beating his own drum, but it's not known whether the sounds have reached Bush's ears.

COMMERCE
Secretary C. William Verity Jr., a retired steel executive and one of several short-timers in Reagan's Cabinet, has taken himself out of the picture.

Heading the pack for this post is Robert Mossbacher, Houston businessman, GOP fund-raiser and longtime Bush chum. A couple of Bush's erstwhile rivals for the Republican nomination, ex-Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont and lame duck Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, are possibilities. Another lame duck, baseball commissioner Peter Ueberroth, has an outside chance, as does former Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole.

HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES
A Republican member of Congress figures prominently in the hand-capping for a successor to Doc Bowen — former Indiana Gov. (and M.D.) Otis R. Bowen — as HHS secretary. But a physician who heads a non-profit hospital chain has also emerged as a front-runner.

They are:
—Rep. Willis D. Gradison Jr., R-Ohio, the ranking Republican on the Ways and Means health subcommittee and an architect of Medicare's new catastrophic illness insurance program.

—Dr. Monroe Trout, the head of American Healthcare Systems, a close friend of Barbara Bush from their service together on the board of Morehouse College, a black institution in Atlanta.

Rep. Lynn Martin, R-Ill., is also a possibility. Dorcas Hardy, the Social Security commissioner and longtime Reaganite, has her hand raised. Deborah Steelman, Bush's domestic policy adviser during the campaign, has an outside chance.

HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT
Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr. is the only original Reagan Cabinet member left. He'll head back to New York to practice law.

His successor could be Cleveland Mayor George Voinovich, who just lost a bid to unseat Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio. Bush could tap Robert Woodson, a black conservative and advocate of turning public housing projects over to tenants who is president of the National Center for Neighborhood Enterprise.

Other possibilities include Deborah Steelman and Thaddeus Garrett, who was a Bush aide; Maurice Bartsdale, a former HUD official; and Shirley Wiseman, who is in line to be president of the National Association of Home Builders. Some have suggested a possible return engagement for Carla Anderson Hills, HUD secretary under President Ford.

TRANSPORTATION
Secretary James Horace Burnley, at 40 the youngest member of Reagan's Cabinet, has taken himself out of the running.

Craig Fuller, 37, Bush's chief of staff for the past four years, is a possibility for Transportation secretary, now that Bush has reportedly passed over him and chosen Sununu to run the White House.

Bush To Be Veep For Soviet Visit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — George Bush's role in next month's meeting between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev will be as vice president, and any discussions about Bush's future dealings with the Kremlin leader will be "fairly brief," a spokesman said.

Bush, the president-elect, will be attending the talks in New York with Reagan when the Soviet leader is in town to address the United Nations.

"It should not be expected that the meeting is being designed as a summit or designed with a set of objectives in mind that would be the kinds of things that we would hope for in a future meeting," Craig Fuller, a co-director of Bush's transition team, said Wednesday.

He said Bush would be prepared to take stock of U.S.-Soviet developments over the past eight years.

"He will participate in the meeting as vice president," Fuller said.

"We're not certain exactly what the scenario is going to be for those discussions but any discussion they have about the future I think will be fairly brief and will be designed merely to set the stage for each other's approach with regard to meetings in the months ahead," Fuller added.

Fuller commented at a news conference where the Bush team also announced that all people involved in his transition are being asked to sign a code of conduct pledging they will not leak any news about assignments in the new administration and will avoid any conflict of interest.

After talks today with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and a separate meeting with Reagan, Bush returns to the job of assembling a Cabinet.

Robert Teeter, another transition co-director, said Bush would review candidates today for two or three Cabinet posts.

Margaret Thatcher and George Bush meet before breakfast

Thatcher Has 'No Doubt' About Bush

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said today she has "not the slightest shadow of doubt" that President-elect George Bush will deal responsibly with the U.S. deficit.

Mrs. Thatcher repeated similar expressions of confidence in Bush and the U.S. economy in three network television interviews prior to meeting with the vice president for breakfast. The meeting followed an evening of reminiscing at a state dinner with President Reagan, whom she described as "a marvelous president."

"I have not the slightest shadow of doubt that in good time the deficit will be considered in a responsible way," Mrs. Thatcher said in an interview on "CBS This Morning."

"I don't share concerns about George Bush's ability to deal with fundamental problems," she said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America." "I think he will deal with them in his own time and in his own way and very responsibly indeed."

On NBC-TV's "Today" show, Mrs. Thatcher said Bush and his advisers will need time to come up with policies for dealing with the deficit. "I don't think we should hurry them," she said.

When Mrs. Thatcher arrived at the vice president's residence for her meeting with Bush, he greeted her as "the star of 'Good Morning America.'"

The prime minister said in the interviews, all broadcast live from Blair House, that she and Bush were talking about the world economy, the Middle East and East-West ties.

Mrs. Thatcher, who was ending her two-day state visit this afternoon after a news conference, said Wednesday that the Western alliance is "very fortunate" to have Bush as Reagan's successor.

"For the first time we will have continuity of policies, stretching over a second presidency. And that brings enormous stability and confidence to the feeling of the world," she told reporters as she sat next to Reagan during an Oval Office photo session.

Mrs. Thatcher also has said of Bush, "We know him as a friend, we admire him as a man of unrivaled experience and we respect him because he stands for all that is best in America."

After a private meeting between Reagan and Mrs. Thatcher, Bush joined a subsequent meeting attended by top officials of both governments. Like most others in the room, Bush said little, deferring to the president and the prime minister, who met in their respective capacities for the last time.

Despite signs that Bush and Mrs. Thatcher will be able to work well together, Bush will have a difficult time matching the partnership Reagan forged with the British leader.

The White House arrival ceremony for Mrs. Thatcher on Wednesday was filled with expressions of mutual admiration.

"Together our nations have faced the challenges of our time, and have not flinched. We forged ahead with strengthening the peace, spreading prosperity and safeguarding liberty," Mrs. Thatcher said.

Reagan lauded Mrs. Thatcher for her "extraordinary role in the revitalization of freedom," and said she has contributed to a "remarkable change" in her country through policies that encourage individual creativity.

Looking beyond his own term of office, Reagan added, "It is profoundly reassuring to me and to all who care about freedom that you will continue to share with America your vision and your steady hand."

Dog Shooting

WHITEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Three people were injured when a Chihuahua stepped on the trigger of a shotgun, which was on the floor of a car that was parked at a Whiteville flea market, authorities say.

Michael T. Palmer of Whiteville, placed the gun in the car after he went deer hunting. He got out the car at the flea market about 3 p.m., and his wife, Sharon, was standing on the right side of the car. The Palmers' two children were in the backseat of the car, and the dog was in the front seat.

Whiteville Police Officer T.L. Dicker said the dog apparently stepped on the trigger, causing the gun to fire. The shot blew a hole in the floor board, and pellets ricocheted from under the car and struck three people, authorities said.

LaRhonda Shaw of Whiteville, was struck in the front of both legs, Joseph Harold Dyson of Whiteville, was struck in the right wrist, and Allane Smith Clarida of Nakina, was struck in the right arm, left leg and lower back. They were treated at Columbus County Hospital and released.

Census Bureau Says U.S. Is Approaching Thirty-Something

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Thirty-nine, that magic age teetering between youth and maturity, will be the most typical age for Americans early in the next century, according to Census Bureau projections.

Historically a nation of youthful orientation, the United States is now thirty-something, heading upward, the Bureau reports.

Combining to increase the median age of the population are the maturing of the massive post World War II Baby Boom and that generation's relatively low birth rates, which reduce the number of babies to pull down the numbers.

So if present trends continue, census officials expect that half of all Americans will be over the age of 39 by the year 2010, and half younger. The agency's most recent estimate of median age was 31.7, as of 1986.

Whether America will plateau at 39 — as did the late comedian Jack Benny — remains to be seen.

The median age of the country touched 30 for the first time in 1950, then slipped back as the Baby Boom produced a bouncing crop of youngsters to lower the numbers.

It took until the 1980 census to hit 30 again, edged up to 31.7 as of 1986 and is expected to climb to 33 by 1990, 36.5 by 2000 and 39 by the year 2010, according to the new projections from the Census Bureau.

Despite the aging of the population, however, the report anticipates that the so-called dependency ratio will decline.

That ratio is the number of people under 18 and over 65 compared to the number of people of working age in between. The younger and older groups are most likely to "depend" on those working.

The 1986 ratio of 62.2 dependents per 100 workers is expected to slip to 56.7 by the year 2010, with the low birth rate reducing the number of young dependents to a greater extent than aging adds to the older group. While there have been reports of increases in the total number of births in the last few years, that is because the giant Baby Boom generation is largely in its prime childbearing years. The rate of births per 1,000 remains well below that of the post-World War II period.

The new census study also estimates that the nation's black population will increase to 13.7 percent by 2010. Blacks made up 11.8 percent of the population in the 1980 census.

Nearly one in five Southerners will be black in 2010, 19.7 percent of the population. That will be up from 18.7 percent in 1980.

In the Northeast, blacks will increase from 10.1 percent to 13.2 percent. They will go from 9.1 percent to 11.9 percent in the Midwest and from 5.3 percent to 6.3 percent in the West.

The projections show the Northeast remaining the oldest section of the country, with the median age for that region increasing from 33.6 in 1986 to 40.3 in 2010.

Social Security Rates Should Stay, Study Says

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Social Security benefits to people born before 1917 are higher than Congress intended, but there's no practical way to fix the inequity, a study concludes.

Congress should neither reduce benefits to those getting the unintended windfall nor raise them for everyone else, said the study released Wednesday by the non-partisan National Academy of Social Insurance.

In a related development, lawmakers and lobbyists reacted angrily to a draft government proposal that would make it harder for the elderly, disabled and poor to appeal government decisions denying them welfare or Social Security benefits.

The proposed rule, still under review, would require people to submit all evidence at least seven days in advance of a hearing before an administrative law judge. Current regulations permit new evidence to be introduced during or after the hearing.

The benefits report focused on a category of Social Security recipients known as "notch babies," — those born between 1917 and 1921. It said their benefits in some cases are as much as $200 a month less than those of people born earlier. But the notch babies are receiving the level of benefits Congress intended and in fact are at an advantage compared to people born after them, the report concluded.

The inequity, the report said, lies in the fact that those born before 1917 are getting higher benefits than Congress intended — not that others are receiving too little.

The notch, or discrepancy in benefits, arose when Congress adopted a new formula meant to keep rising Social Security benefits at a constant percentage of a person's average pre-retirement earnings.

However, people born before 1917 were allowed to use the old, overgenerous method of calculation. The result: a benefit rate that peaked in 1981 at 56 percent of average earnings, about 15 percentage points higher than what Congress had intended.

Estonia Declares State Of Sovereignty

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Lithuania's parliament convened today to debate the Baltic republics' ties to Moscow, one day after tiny Estonia struck an unprecedented blow for independence by declaring its sovereignty.

The Lithuanian Supreme Soviet met in Vilnius, the republic's capital, to debate amendments to the Soviet Constitution that opponents say would shift power to Moscow and eliminate the right of the Baltic republics to secede.

The Lithuanian parliament also is expected to consider a measure similar to Wednesday's declaration of sovereignty by the Estonian Supreme Soviet, which stopped short of a declaration of independence.

A declaration of sovereignty in the third Baltic republic, Latvia, could follow.

Estonia's parliament, meeting in Tallinn, also declared that Estonia has the right to veto Soviet laws. The Kremlin had no immediate reaction.

In a three-paragraph announcement, the official Tass news agency said the Lithuanian deputies will consider amendments to the Soviet constitution, but did not mention the sovereignty issue.

Estonia's Supreme Soviet passed the declaration of sovereignty by a 258-1 vote with five abstentions. Legislators argued that too much Soviet control has ruined the economy and environment and that Estonia must control its own land, factories and laws.

The declaration called for a treaty with Moscow that would "determine the further status of Estonia in the composition of the Soviet Union."

About two-thirds of the republic's 1.6 million people are ethnic Estonians.

Moscow Radio said without comment that "by a majority of votes, members of Estonia's parliament gave priority to Estonia's laws over national ones."

In 1940, the Soviet Union annexed the Baltic republics, which have looked toward the West and rankled under Soviet control.

Proponents said the Estonian declaration was consistent with President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's campaign for democratization and local control and with the Soviet constitution's ritual declarations of autonomy.

Marju Lauristen, a leader of the Estonian People's Front, a nationalist mass movement, said Gorbachev might be angry at first.

"But when he thinks deeply, he'll think we've supported perestroika more deeply than he expected. Moscow could have expected worse," she said in an interview. Perestroika refers to Gorbachev's plans for reforming the Soviet economy and society.

The debate was televised from Tallinn's 18th century Toompea Palace.

Another approved amendments subjects new Soviet laws to local control. If the Presidium, Estonia's top executive body, were to reject a Soviet law that law would not take effect until the next meeting of the republic's Supreme Soviet, said Igor Grazin, a law professor who wrote the amendment.

If the parliament also rejects the law, it would be declared void in Estonia, he said.

The other four amendments add human and civil rights guarantees and guarantee the right to hold private property.

The passage of such measures by a government body is an unprecedented act that defies central authorities in a country still feeling its way through Gorbachev's policy of glasnost, or greater openness.

The Estonian parliament also called unanimously for changes in proposed amendments to the Soviet constitution to lessen the shift in power from the 15 Soviet republics to the Kremlin, and to retain the republics' right to secede.

The Soviet amendments, which would remove the republics' right to secede, are scheduled for adoption Nov. 29.

Estonian radio reported that 2.6 million people in the three republics have signed petitions opposing the Soviet amendments. That would represent nearly a third of the republics' combined population of 7.7 million.

Deputies from largely Russian-speaking regions and factories in Estonia said the proposals for Estonian sovereignty were being considered too hastily.

"They have been proposed behind our backs," complained Vladimir Andreyev, a Russian power plant mechanic from Narva.

Estonian activists' strategy rests on the traditional claim of the Soviet Union to be a federation of independent republics.

Israelis Counter PLO Bid

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Israeli troops shot and wounded 10 Palestinians in clashes in the occupied lands today, and the army eased a six-day curfew aimed at blocking violence fueled by the Palestinian declaration of independence.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin dismissed the declaration of a Palestinian state in the Israeli-occupied territories as a "PLO deception attempt," and Israel launched a diplomatic offensive on Wednesday to counter it.

Hospital officials said 10 Palestinians were shot and wounded when soldiers opened fire on rioting youths near Nablus in the West Bank and several areas of the Gaza Strip. Among the wounded were a 15-year-old girl shot in the back and a 34-year-old woman hit in the left thigh, they said.

The army said it was checking the reports.

In Arab east Jerusalem today, two Israeli policemen were injured by rocks at an Arab boys' school, police spokesman Rafi Levy said. He said riot police then entered Rashadiye School and arrested eight students.

A teacher said trouble started when police arrived to quiet students singing Palestinian patriotic songs in the school's courtyard. The teacher would not give his name.

The army lifted curfews from several towns in the Gaza Strip, home to 650,000 Palestinians, but kept curfews in effect for the 250,000 who live in refugee camps. A curfew also was maintained on the Nur Shams refugee camp near Tulkarem in the West Bank.

Telephone lines remained cut off to homes and businesses for a seventh day in the West Bank cities of Hebron, Nablus, Ramallah and Jenin, but the army said they would be restored during the day.

The lines were severed to prevent Palestinians from coordinating anti-Israeli activities during the meeting in Algiers of the PLO's parliament-in-exile, which ended Tuesday with the declaration of independence.

The government, meanwhile, confirmed that Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin ordered Israel Television not to show scenes of jubilation at the Palestine National Council meeting in order not to incite Palestinians in the territories.

Rabin, who has been defense minister in charge of quelling violence during the 11-month Palestinian uprising, told Israel television Wednesday night that quiet could be restored in three to six months.

"I believe that the events of the last several days can become a turning point leading to a significant decrease in violence," he said.

Protesters End Five-Day Fast

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WARSAW, Poland — About 50 people claimed victory today and ended a five-day fast aimed at forcing officials to rehire the last of about 100 workers dismissed for roles in Poland's worst labor unrest in seven years.

Agreement was reached through the mediation of the Roman Catholic bishop in Katowice, said Adam Slomka, a spokesman for the fasters protesting since Saturday in the Christ the King Cathedral in the southern city.

"We managed to achieve in five days what hadn't been achieved in several months," said Slomka, speaking by telephone from the cathedral.

The nation's bishops and Lech

Walesa, leader of the banned Solidarity independent labor movement, had appealed for the miners' reinstatement. The opposition said rehiring them was a condition for participating in talks with the government.

Slomka said agreement was reached late Wednesday with the national coal federation to reinstate the workers today. The strikes were in August.

Bishop Damian Zimon led a delegation that met with provincial officials on Tuesday, Slomka said, adding that two more negotiating sessions Wednesday led to the agreement.

He said the workers won job reinstatements for all the dismissed workers except two workers at the Stalowa Wola steel mill in the southeast. The church will continue to mediate in that case, he said.

Tadeusz Napieracz, a deputy director at the coal federation, the body that oversees the mines, said, "The miners are returning to their old posts as of tomorrow." He denied they ever had been fired and said officials had wanted to give them new positions, while the miners insisted on their old jobs.

Solidarity national spokesman Janusz Onyszkiewicz said in Warsaw that the decision "should have been made several months ago. Let us hope other positive signs will follow."

The hunger protest began early Saturday after a pro-independence march Friday night turned violent. Organizers say about 250 people took shelter from police inside the cathedral in Katowice, about 170 miles southeast of Warsaw.

At the urging of one miner, about 80 of the people began a hunger strike, originally aimed at winning freedom for detained fellow demonstrators.

Trade Pact Overshadows Canadian Voting

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TORONTO — Hijacked by the issue of a free trade pact with the United States, Monday's general election has become a referendum reflecting Canadian fears of being swallowed like Jonah by the great whale in the south.

Probably the most dramatic single image depicting this apprehension is the opposition Liberal party's television commercial of a map with a hand erasing the border.

Critics of the trade pact say the United States, with 245 million people and huge economic clout, would outweigh this nation of 26 million to the point of endangering its identity and even sovereignty.

An astonishing Liberal revival in the polls coincided with use of the border-erasing ad, bringing the party far behind to a dead heat with the incumbent Conservatives of Prime Minister Brian Mulroney.

The Conservatives countered with a commercial in which the border is put back where it belongs with the message: "This is where we draw the line."

The Rhinoceros Party, a contributor of good humor to the elections, highlighted has proposed trading Mulroney for the first-born of hockey hero Wayne Gretzky, who left Canada to play for the Los Angeles Kings earlier this year. Another point in the Rhinoceros' free trade plank is to swap Newfoundland for Hawaii.

Over a 10-year period after taking effect Jan. 1, the free trade agreement would eliminate any remaining tariffs between the United States and Canada, whose annual trade already totals $150 billion.

Liberal leader John Turner is on a self-described "crusade" to kill the agreement. Mulroney needs a parliamentary majority to insure survival of the pact, which has been approved by the U.S. Senate but has yet to go before Canada's legislators.

The socialist New Democrats led by Ed Broadbent, Canada's third major party, also oppose the agreement signed last January by Mulroney and President Reagan.

In addition, several coalitions have sprung up to fight or promote the agreement. Dozens of books and pamphlets have been produced.

One called the Pro-Canada Network said in a pamphlet the only good thing about the deal is that "it hasn't happened yet." The pro-agreement Canadian Alliance for Trade and Job Opportunities, however, spoke of "More jobs. Better jobs. More wealth to improve government services such as day care."

Mulroney and his supporters claim opponents have used lies and "scare-mongering" to distort the potential effects.

Plane Crash Kills 7 People In France

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

EVRY, France — A Cessna-441 crashed in heavy fog today in lagoons west of Paris, killing at least seven people, some of them journalists, officials said.

Rescue workers went immediately to the site of the crash, the Saclay lagoons on the edge of the Essonne and Yvelines districts outside Paris.

Local officials and rescue workers said the pilot and six passengers, some of them reporters, were killed in the 10:30 a.m. crash. The cause was not immediately known.

The flight roster listed 10 people, according to the General Direction for Civil Aviation.

However, police and Essonne officials believed some scheduled passengers failed to board the plane.

They said there appeared to be no survivors in the debris scattered 150 meters around the crash site.

The plane took off in heavy fog from the Toussus-le-Noble airport in the Yvelines and was headed for Montlucon, in central France, authorities said.

The Air and Frontier police said the aircraft apparently lost radio contact with the control tower shortly after take-off.

The flight was organized in part by Garages du Bac, a BMW dealership in France, to take journalists to a factory and watch test drives of a new model car.

Jean-Charles Delesalle, a reporter with the newspaper Journal du Dimanche said he was among those who missed the flight. He said later he learned of the accident while in his car.

"I stopped the car. I had an intuition. I knew it was 'my' plane," he told French television. "I just stayed there trembling."

Bodies Of 3 Men, Woman Found In Submerged Car

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — A car belonging to four young adults missing since Saturday was found in a river today with four bodies in it, police and witnesses said. Identities of the victims were not immediately released. There was no immediate indication of how they died. Police divers found the car submerged in the Mill River, police said.

Earlier today, a private investigator looking for the four said he believes the three women and one man were being held against their will by someone.

Francis "Bud" Mullen, former head of the federal Drug Enforcement Agency, said he has traced the movements of the four through 11 p.m. Saturday.

State Police Detective Andrew Trudelle said the four, ages 19 and 20, had been drinking illegally for several hours at a New Haven bar near Yale University before leaving together about 3 a.m. Sunday.

Trudelle said the information came from an employee of the bar, which under state law can't serve anyone under 21.

The four East Lyme friends were last seen by their parents at 7 p.m. Saturday, when they left for an evening in New Haven. Police are investigating their disappearance, and Mullen has been hired by the parents.

"I believe they're in New Haven and being held against their will," said Mullen, who also worked previously for the FBI. His first major case with the FBI was as an agent assigned to the 1963 kidnapping of Frank Sinatra Jr.

"I've been through a lot of kidnapping cases, but never one exactly like this," Mullen said.

State police, who have launched a nationwide search for the four, said they weren't ready to accept or reject Mullen's theory and planned to conduct dives in the Quinnipiac River in New Haven today for clues to their disappearance.

"That's a scenario I don't think we're going to consider at this point," said Scott O'Mara, a State Police spokesman. "If they were in state with all the publicity that's gone on they would have realized the urgency to call home."

Police have no reason to believe they'll find anything in the river but want to be thorough, O'Mara said. They are checking numerous leads and reported sightings, he said.

"We don't have indication of foul play. But the longer time goes on, the more unusual the situation and the less likely it is the kids are out on a lark," Marcy Stamm, a State Police spokeswoman, said Wednesday. "You'd think one of the kids would have called by now."

Family and friends described the four former high school buddies as responsible adults unlikely to take off without telling anyone. The parents distributed pictures of the missing.

Reagans Closing Out State Dinners

the White House a stage for some of the nation's most elaborate and exclusive entertainment, the Reagans brought a Hollywood party style to an executive mansion shorn of hard liquor and dancing during the Carter years.

And so it was Wednesday evening, when pianist Michael Feinstein entertained with tunes ranging from Mrs. Reagan's favorite, "Our Love Is Here to Stay," to "I'll Be Seeing You," a tune played at the first state dinner honoring Mrs. Thatcher on Feb. 26, 1981, a month after Reagan took office.

The black-tie tribute to Mrs. Thatcher and her husband Denis was an apt finale to a glittering series in which Reagan, now 77, never seemed to tire.

As he has on every such evening, the president regaled his guests with anecdotes, both at the dinner table and among the demitasse-sipping guests in the Blue Room.

Even Mrs. Thatcher was caught up in the wave of nostalgia. Her parting gift to the Reagans was a leather photograph album containing nine black and white photographs from the president's 1949 movie "The Hasty Heart," which he filmed in Britain.

In the toasts, superlatives were the order of the night.

"She is a leader with the vision and the courage to stay the course until the battles are won," Reagan said of his guest. Even though his voice was raspy, the president pressed on to say, "The impact of Mrs. Thatcher's leadership at home and abroad secures her place in history."

"As I prepare to depart this office in January, I take considerable satisfaction in the knowledge that Margaret Thatcher will still reside at No. 10 Downing Street."

The prime minister praised Reagan as "more than a staunch ally and counselor. You have also been a wonderful friend to me and our country."

Mrs. Thatcher saluted as well the first lady, whose "charm, dignity and quiet but sure courage have won the hearts of millions."

She also said she wanted to "warmly congratulate" Vice President Bush and his wife Barbara on his recent election, adding that she looked forward "to working with you as a true and trusted friend."

Noticeably absent was Vice President-elect Dan Quayle, who wasn't invited. When his absence from the guest list was noted earlier this week, White House aides said he had been to a state dinner in 1982 as a senator.

Members of Congress on the guest list included Reps. Trent Lott, R-Miss., Dick Cheney, R-Wyo., and Tom Foley, D-Wash., as well as Sens. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., and Ted Stevens, R-Ala.

Also present were American Ballet Theatre artistic director Mikhail Baryshnikov, Discovery space shuttle commander Frederick Hauck, Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Orel Hershiser, actor Tom Selleck, New York City Opera general director Beverley Sills, and author Tom Wolfe.

For the evening, the State Dining Room was turned into a garden of peach roses, with a topiary tree composed of more than 100 full-bloomed flowers perched atop each of the 13 tables.

Some 120 guests dined on the famed $200,000 ivory, red and gold Reagan china, using vermeil flatware and unadorned crystal goblets. They sat at tables covered in peach linen and dabbed their spills with white damask napkins adorned with the presidential seal.

According to the first lady's press office, the guests were served: baby lobster belleve, caviar yogurt sauce and curried croissant; roasted saddle of veal perigourdine; jardiniere of vegetables; asparagus with hazel nut butter; autumn mixed salad and a selection of cheeses; and chestnut marquise with pistachio sauce, orange tuiles and ginger twigs.

That was washed down with a Saintsbury Chardonnay Reserve 1987; Stag's Leap Cabernet Sauvignon 1978 and Schramsberg Cremen Demi Sec 1984.

Baffled

After reviewing the case, the state Court of Appeals upheld Worthington's conviction in a decision handed down Feb. 3, 1987, but the court lowered his sentence to 35 years in prison and dropped his fine to $250,000.

But in October, less than two years after the ruling from the Court of Appeals, the Parole Commission granted Worthington community service parole in a move to lower the state's swelling prison population.

"As they say, that's no way to run a railroad," Haigwood said, managing a humorous comment about what he called an outrageous decision by the Parole Commission.

"I was mighty upset. I still am. If the judge had wanted for him to get three years and 10 months (in prison), he would have sentenced him to three years and 10 months."

"The amount of time that he served is so disproportionate to the sentence, it's just a fraud on the public," he said.

The State Bureau of Investigation and the Greenville Police Department used an undercover agent to make drug buys from Worthington, and when they searched his Greenville home, investigators seized more than a pound of cocaine, drug paraphernalia and $30,000 in cash.

In the search, investigators found a plaster cast and newspapers from Columbia, South America, evidence that indicated Worthington was probably involved in smuggling cocaine into the country, Haigwood said. Investigators also seized records indicating Worthington was a substantial cocaine supplier.

Though Worthington was sentenced under the state's drug trafficking laws that require mandatory prison terms and fines, the Parole Commission opted to release him to make room for new prisoners.

He is now living in Martin County with relatives and performing community service work as a condition of parole. Haigwood said, as far as he knows, Worthington is not being made to pay off his fine with any money he may earn while on parole.

"We're trying to keep them in (prison). It's the ... Parole Commission that is releasing them," Haigwood said.

Obviously, the state is in a pinch for cell space, but releasing drug traffickers is not the answer, he said. "It seems to me, if they've got a problem like that, you build more prisons."

"I think it's an outrage for a person that's been sentenced to 35 years and fined $250,000 (to be released so early)," he said. "We send him off to Raleigh and the Parole Commission undermines everything we're trying to do here to send a message."

"It happens too often, too regularly. This is just one time. It's a very aggravating situation. ... We've had several problems with the Parole Commission recently ... in a broad range of cases where people have been convicted of serious criminal offenses ... and have been released early."

After learning of Worthington's release, Haigwood said he contacted Samuel A. Wilson III, the chairman of the Parole Commission, and inquired about Worthington's release.

"I explained to Mr. Wilson that I didn't think the early release of drug traffickers was the way to deal with prison overcrowding," he said. "It just doesn't make sense to let people convicted of serious criminal conduct be released simply to make room for new prisoners."

This week Pitt County probably send 20 to 30 people convicted of crimes to the state Department of Corrections in Raleigh, but Haigwood said the process is senseless if the state releases 20 or 30 more prisoners to make room for the new inmates.

Nationally and locally, politicians took tough stands on crime issues this election year, and Haigwood said he plans to contact Pitt County's delegation to the General Assembly and ask for some new legislation in the 1989 session.

"Probably the best thing that can happen about this thing is directing some public attention to it, encouraging the General Assembly and the governor to take a position about it."

"If the Parole Commission won't change the policy, I'm hoping I can encourage the General Assembly to change the law so they can't do it," Haigwood said.

Phone Call Held Hope For Others

Aunt's Concern Became Crusade

By Jean McNair
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAMPTON, Va. — Sara Moody proudly shows a videotape of her 10-year-old nephew, Stevie Roper, riding his bicycle and raking leaves with his father.

Not so long ago, those routine activities could have killed Stevie, who suffers from hypohidrotic ectodermal dysplasia, a lack of sweat glands that can cause the body to overheat.

But a phone call to NASA in July 1987 has led to a new, active life for Stevie and hope for hundreds who suffer from the same rare birth defect. An estimated 400 children in the United States suffer from HED.

"All I did was make a phone call and the rest fell into place," said Mrs. Moody, 49, a homemaker and president of the HED Foundation she formed in March. That call, made after Stevie became overheated in a car and almost died during a visit to Hampton, was to NASA's Langley Research Center.

Mrs. Moody got the idea from watching a TV movie about a young man who lacked an immune system and lived inside a protective bubble designed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

NASA directed her to Life Support Systems Inc. of Mountain View, Calif., which helped develop a cooling system for space suits and now makes "cool suits" for firefighters,

The Associated Press

Mrs. Moody's effort to help her nephew has blossomed into the HED Foundation race car drivers and nuclear plant workers.

The company designed a child-sized vest and cap that Stevie could wear as a personal air conditioner. A portable cooling pack powered by a battery circulates chilled water through tubes to the vest and cap.

Knowing that Stevie's parents in Waynesville, N.C., couldn't afford the suit, Tootsie Moody designed a poster, collected her dill pickle jars and set them on counters at PoFolks, a restaurant chain managed locally by a friend.

The jars and a fund-raising effort by another friend brought in more than $5,000. But Life Support Systems agreed to sell the suit at cost for $2,600, so the rest of the money went for Stevie's care.

After a brief flurry of publicity about the suit, Mrs. Moody went home and settled down again. Then the telephone started to ring.

"You wouldn't believe the people who started calling that had this problem. Everybody said, 'Look, why don't you form a foundation and go on to help those other children?' I thought, 'Well, why not?'"

Since she started the foundation, suits have been delivered to children in Birmingham, Ala.; Knoxville, Tenn.; Tuscon, Ariz.; and Kuwait.

"Here we were already gone national and now then international, pow!"

PoFolks restaurants across the country now have jars to collect money for the HED Foundation, said Carol Koenig, marketing manager of the Nashville-based company. The campaign would not have started without Tootsie Moody, she said.

"She is tireless. She just keeps going, will not take no for an answer. But she does it in a way that doesn't offend anyone."

Twenty-seven children are waiting for suits to be made and the money to be raised to pay for them. The foundation has raised more than $16,000, most of it spent to buy suits, which also have helped multiple sclerosis and cystic fibrosis patients who need to avoid overheating.

Aside from helping the children survive, the suits have brought together HED victims who told Mrs. Moody they had never known anyone else with the same condition.

"It's made a different person out of Stevie as it has these other people," she said. "They no longer feel like a freak. They're out as a normal human being except for no sweat glands. I think it's done good in a lot of different ways."

Researchers Test Kids' Reactions To TV

By Hoyt Harwell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — Cartoon space creatures called "Itsy" and "Bitsy" are being used to test the reaction of children to television cartoons.

Two professors are testing 350 students to see how they react to violence, humor and action in cartoons.

The National Association of Broadcasting is interested. In fact, the NAB is helping pay for the research by Jennings Bryant of the University of Alabama college of communication and Robert Musburger of the University of Houston.

The study is based on four 3½-minute animated videos designed and produced by students working under Musburger.

"Itsy" and "Bitsy" land their spaceship on an unknown planet and enjoy a picnic and other simple adventures.

Each program tells the same story, but with major differences. Gratuitous violence is added to one version, humor to another and action to another. The fourth program, a neutral version devoid of violence, humor or action, serves as a control.

The controlled and manipulated programs make the study unique, Bryant said, because they are the first cartoons designed specifically to test the variables of violence, humor and action.

"Research that looks at why children like what (they like) and under what conditions is really in its infancy," he said. "While groups like the Children's Television Workshop have pretested short segments for attention, comprehension and appeal, what we're doing — starting out from a different perspective, asking the question of what is optimally entertaining for children — is something that has not been done systematically before."

Bryant and his graduate students are testing children aged 5 to 8, in Tuscaloosa and Hale County, Ala., Atlanta, Johnson City, Tenn., and other areas — children in rural and urban settings and from families of different income levels.

Each child will view one version of the program and will be interviewed.

"Although all testing will be done in the Southeast, we are using quota sampling, meaning that we're trying to represent the audience of the United States from the audience we use in our particular subject pool," Bryant said. "We'll be testing children of various races, genders, socio-economic groups and living conditions."

TV Offers Teens Hours Of Viewing Sex

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

EAST LANSING, Mich. — The average young teen-age American girl views 1,500 sexual acts or references to sexual acts on television annually, according to a study at Michigan State University.

The study was based on girls 14 to 15 years old who watch television four to five hours each school day. In addition, the study found, that same girl sees at least 25 R-rated movies in theaters each year.

In comparison, boys of that age view an average of nearly 1,300 sexual acts or references to sexual acts on television and attend 17 R-rated movies annually.

The data was compiled by Bradley S. Greenberg, head of MSU's telecommunication department, and Renato Linsangan, an MSU graduate student. The study was funded by the Office of Adolescent Pregnancy Programs of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

According to the teens studied, parents "never" or "not often" limit their television viewing.

"There's little indication that parents exercise any control, positive or negative, over TV viewing by teens," Greenberg says.

"The combination of sex on TV and in the movies provides a tantalizing aura of a sexually oriented society that's difficult for teen girls to resist or de-mean," Greenberg says. "At 14 or 15, they are a vulnerable group, particularly intrigued with what's ahead for their own sexual experiences."

Linguist Is Gaga Over The Virtues Of Baby Talk

By Randi Henderson
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

'Human beings are born as nurturing creatures. Why shouldn't it be inborn in us as well to use different kinds of language with babies, to be sensitive to their undeveloped language abilities and to help them learn language?'

— Nan Bernstein Ratner

KENSINGTON, Md. — Baby talkers, says Nan Bernstein Ratner, should not be ashamed of the goo-goo's and gaa-gaa's and all the other sounds that they make at babies that sound silly but feel right.

Go ahead, have those little conversations with your baby, says the University of Maryland assistant professor of linguistics and speech pathology. Repeat words, elevate your pitch, speak in italics and exclamation points. You may not know it, but what you are doing is teaching the baby to talk.

As a student of baby talk — what she calls "a very respectable area of inquiry in the field of child language development" — Ratner, 35, finds her work little understood by the public.

"The public either thinks these things are self-evident or they think it's ridiculous," she explained from the floor of the living room of her Kensington home while her children, 10-month-old Adam and 3-year-old Jamie, provided constant distractions.

She finds herself battling, for example, no less an authority than Miss Manners, columnist Judith Martin, who had this to say about baby talk in her 1984 book, "Miss Manners' Guide to Rearing Perfect Children":

"Baby talk, as an affliction of practically everyone who comes into contact with a baby, even one that doesn't articulate at all yet, is as illogical as it is irresistible. ... The household that gives in to it is doing the child a serious disservice. Eventually he will find out that words such as "oo" are not on the college entrance examinations, and he will have to learn a second language. ..."

Such an attitude couldn't be further from the truth, Ratner insists. For she believes that just as babies are born with an innate capacity to learn language, adults — and older children — have an instinctive gift to teach language.

"Human beings are born as nurturing creatures," she said. "Why shouldn't it be inborn in us as well to use different kinds of language with babies, to be sensitive to their undeveloped language abilities and to help them learn language?"

Her own home is one of her best laboratories these days. Jamie, who just turned 3, is fully conversational and no longer hears real baby talk directed at her. Adam, though, is at the very beginning of his language development. He says one word — "home" — and he only says it when he is in a car pulling up into the family garage.

"It's much more complicated than meets the eye," Ratner said. When people hear baby talk, they hear something that is "almost embarrassingly cute. They hear the funny intonation contour, they hear the funny little words like 'tummy' or 'icky-poo.' And that's what they think baby talk is in its entirety.

"But speech to children is like a whole language. There's much more to it than simply its intonation and its vocabulary. It has its own syntax, its own grammar. There are specific ways in which adults put sentences together for kids. They use very short sentences; they repeat themselves a lot; they paraphrase."

In the scientific-academic world baby talk is called child-directed speech or "motherese," an name that Ratner believes is "sort of unfair" because fathers and other relatives and caretakers also use baby talk. Baby talk is used in some form in every culture that has ever been studied, clear evidence of its intrinsic value, Ratner believes.

Techniques of baby talk, Ratner and other researchers have found, can vary from culture to culture. In some groups, including a group of Mayan Indians in Ecuador that she studied, language is taught directly.

"This is what you say; say this to me," the parent will tell a child. In the United States, the more common technique is to instruct by example.

Coming from a background of work with speech-impaired children, Ratner became interested in baby talk while a doctoral student at Boston University.

"There's so much to learn and they do it so quickly," she said. "I think it's very fascinating. Take a baby, starts talking at the age of 1 or later, by age 4 most kids sound wonderful. So in three years they learn a whole language."

Older folks, she pointed out, don't learn quite so quickly. "We all took languages in high school and college, and in three years basically we learned enough to stumble through telling people our luggage was lost at the airport."

Studies of adult conversation have found, Ratner said, "that if you take a conversation between adults and chop it up into single words, only about half of the words in a conversation are really understandable. Adults talk a little sloppy. They under-articulate. They slur words together; they leave out some sounds. It's not great stuff."

Fiftieth Anniversary

Mr. & Mrs. J. D. Hudson were honored November 6, 1988 with a Fiftieth Anniversary Reception held in the Black Jack F.W.B. Church Fellowship Hall. The reception was given by Mr. & Mrs. Donald Hudson, Dr. & Mrs. Raymond Fomes, Mr. & Mrs. Gary Hudson and friends. The couple was remembered with a corsage and boutonniere of yellow sweetheart roses.

The center piece for the refreshment table consisted of yellow roses and calla lilies accented with Baby's Breath. The guests were welcomed by Dr. & Mrs. Raymond Fomes. Cake was served by Mrs. Jeffrey Hudson and Miss Christy Hudson. Punch was served by Mr. & Mrs. Gary Hudson. Approximately 250 guests were in attendance. J.D. and Ruth were married on November 5, 1938 at the home of Mr. & Mrs. Nap Clark in Black Jack.

Just Who Is Out Of Step?

Dear Abby: I am enclosing two items clipped today from the Atlanta Constitution. They appeared one directly above the other. The first reports that a Mineola, N.Y., driver was racing down the street at 100 miles per hour. His car crashed into a limousine carrying a wedding party. Instantly killed were the groom, age 27, and his brother, who was the best man, age 29. The bride (age 24) died 18 days later without knowing of her husband's death.

The driver of the car that killed them was sentenced to 28 months to seven years in prison.

The other item was about a man in Lubbock, Texas, who was sentenced to 10 years in prison for biting off part of a police officer's ear! The jury deliberated only 10 minutes before arriving at the sentence.

Am I mistaken? Or is this a case of misplaced priorities? — Out Of Step In Atlanta

Dear Out Of Step: If you are out of step, so am I. In the case of the reckless driver who crashed into the limousine, killing three members of the wedding party, I think the sentence was outrageously lenient.

And in case No. 2: The sentence was excessively harsh.

Dear Abby: In response to the young woman who was embarrassed to wear her Phi Beta Kappa pin: Being elected PBK is an honor; it doesn't mean you're a snob or a nerd. That's why I proudly wear my Phi Beta Kappa key as an earring.

— NANCY K. PESKE, NEW YORK

Dear Nancy: One earring? Bright people usually attract bright people. Lead with the ear wearing the Phi Beta Kappa key, and you might end up with a pair.

Dear Abby: I am a Chinese woman who came to the United States 15 years ago. I was in my late 20s and could not speak English very well. I read your column faithfully to learn the English language and more about the customs in my new country.

Lately I have read in your column that some people do not wish to be called "Honey." May I relate my experience regarding same?

When I first came here, I was especially nervous talking on the telephone because my English was so poor. Once I had to make a business call, so I dialed a number. A lady answered with a very sweet voice, and when I told her whom I was looking for, she said, "Honey, I'm afraid you dialed a wrong number." I said, "Oh, I am very sorry."

I dialed again, and the same lady answered the phone! I was very embarrassed, but the lady was very patient, and she said sweetly, "What number did you dial, Honey?" I told her, and she said, "That is my number, but there is no such person here. I think you should check the number again."

Abby, 15 years have passed. I do not remember whom I was looking for, but I will never forget the first time in my entire life someone — a total stranger whom I had bothered twice — called me "Honey" twice! This would never have happened in my country.

So why not keep the friendly American custom? You may use my Chinese name. — Shan-Li-Ho

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rallied today, attracting some buyers at its lowest level since late summer.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had fallen nearly 89 points over the previous six sessions, rose 11.56 to 2,050.14 in the first half hour today.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 5 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 618 up, 370 down and 461 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 20.97 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Analysts said buying was encouraged by word that many central banks around the world were moving to support the dollar in foreign exchange.

The dollar, which has fallen sharply in recent days, hovered early today near post-World War II lows against the Japanese yen.

 kids," said Carter today before boarding a bus in Greenville that would take the children to Raleigh-Durham Airport.
 "These are kids who have demonstrated positive values such as good academic values and good discipline records," he said.
 Also making the trip is Carter's wife, Jean, and additional chaperones Elaine Holloway and her husband, Pastor Bobby Holloway.
 "We have a lot of gala activities scheduled," Carter said as the children's bags were being loaded onto the bus.
 "I'm told we have a party at the Raleigh Airport before we leave and we will party from the time we leave here until we get back. We're going to have a real good time down there."
 Carter indicated that instead of staying at the hotel with other mayors participating in the program, he plans to stay at the same location as the children.

 "We think we'll have a lot more fun getting to know them than being in the other place," he said.
 One of the children, William Stoddert, 10, said he had never been on such a trip before.
 He seemed to have done his homework on which theme park attractions offer the most excitement.
 "I asked all these people what their favorite ride is and almost everybody said Space Mountain," he said.
 In addition to Stoddert, youngsters making the trip are Rontreal Perkins, James Thompson, Tywan C. Arrington, Carlton Ray Taft Jr., Jo Lynn Webb, Brandy Greene, Monique Moye, Yolanda Williams, and Tamika Morris.

ECU's 1989 Schedule Less Demanding

The above graphic compares East Carolina's football opponents' records, as opposed to next year's scheduled opponents

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

As the selection process for finding a new football coach at East Carolina University continues, the Pirates can look to next fall's season as one with less trauma than the one which winds up Saturday at Cincinnati.

Going into this weekend's games, the 1988 Pirate opponents have a combined 66-41 record, including a number of games played against each other. It would appear that six Pirate opponents this year will end up in bowl games. They include 10-0 West Virginia, 9-1 Florida State, 8-1 Syracuse, 7-1 Miami of Florida, 9-2 Southern Mississippi and 8-2 South Carolina.

somewhat lighter — assuming the teams are of the same strength they are this year. The 1989 opponents have only a 52-55-1 record, and only four of them are likely to have played in bowls. Those are Southern Mississippi, South Carolina, Syracuse and Miami. Pittsburgh, currently 6-3, has an outside chance of a bowl game, but apparently will be one of those left home.

The teams leaving the schedule include West Virginia, Florida State, Southwestern Louisiana and Tennessee Tech. Of those, only 1-9 Tennessee Tech has a losing record. Overall those four are 26-14.

Replacing them in 1989 will be Bowling Green, 2-8-1, Louisiana Tech, 3-7, Illinois State, 1-10, and Pittsburgh. Only the Panthers have a winning mark this year and overall the group is 12-28-1. That should make whoever gets the head coaching job at East Carolina breathe a little easier.

The process of picking a new head coach apparently hinges around the speed Athletic Director Dave Hart wishes to proceed. The selection committee, which will serve to advise Hart only, not to actually select the coach, has met twice. The first meeting, Hart told the media, was to put together a profile of what qualities the new coach should have.

The second meeting, held earlier this week, saw the discussion of some of the candidates, but nothing formal was done, according to a source. No new meeting has been scheduled, although it is expected the committee will meet sometime this coming week.

Hart has said he expects to bring in two to four candidates for actual interviews, and that a new coach will be named during the first week of December.

A voice from the past has come out with a recommendation that former coach Sonny Randle be given a listen-to at least. Former ECU chancellor Leo Jenkins sent a letter to Hart saying that Randle — and any other qualified candidate — should be given a chance to state his case.

"Sonny Randle did a good job for us," Dr. Jenkins said in a telephone interview. "And he left us under very honorable conditions — something some of our other coaches have not done. He is a real gentleman."

Dr. Jenkins said that Randle, who coached ECU to two consecutive 9-2 seasons, had time remaining on his contract when he received an offer to become head coach at his alma mater, Virginia. "He came to me and asked permission to talk with them, and to leave if they offered him the job. He told me that if I objected, he would remain at East Carolina."

Dr. Jenkins gave Randle his permission to talk with the Cavaliers, and to leave when the job was offered him. Randle has since stated on several occasions that it was the worst mistake he had ever made.

Canseco Wants To Be Better

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OAKLAND, Calif. — Jose Canseco plans to announce his next lofty goal in spring training. It's already clear he won't settle for 40 home runs and 40 stolen bases again.

"I want to become a better ballplayer," the Oakland right fielder, the unanimous winner of the American League Most Valuable Player award, said Wednesday. "I'm not going to stop improving. I'm only 24 years old."

Canseco can't improve on the results of voting by members of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

He is the seventh AL player to be the MVP unanimously, and the first in 15 years. Hank Greenberg (1935), Al Rosen (1953), Mickey Mantle (1956), Frank Robinson (1966), Denny McLain (1968) and Reggie Jackson (1973) preceded him.

"I was really surprised it was unanimous. It's really exciting," Canseco told reporters in a conference call from Hawaii, where he's wrapping up a honeymoon trip before returning home to Miami.

"I'm real happy to win the MVP ... but if I didn't win it I wasn't going to be really disappointed," he said. "The thing that will stand out mostly in my mind is the 40-40 because I was the first to do it."

Canseco reached the historic 40-40 plateau in homers and stolen bases on Sept. 23. When he announced it as a goal last spring, he didn't realize that no one had ever achieved it.

Boston left fielder Mike Greenwell was a distant runner-up with 242 points, 150 behind Canseco. He was followed by Minnesota center fielder Kirby Puckett, New York Yankees right fielder Dave Winfield, A's reliever Dennis Eckersley, Boston third baseman Wade Boggs and Detroit shortstop Alan Trammell.

In his third full season, Canseco hit .307 with a major-league high 42 homers and 124 runs batted in while leading the Athletics to a major league-leading 104 victories and the AL pennant. He stole 40 bases and was second in the AL with 120 runs scored, finishing among the top 10 players in 12 of 17 official offensive categories.

Canseco's 111 career homers, including five after a late-season callup in 1985, are the 10th-highest total for a player at the end of the year in which he turned 24. The other nine players are in the Hall of Fame.

EC, Cincy Close Out Year Both Teams Aiming For Finish With 2 Straight Wins

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Two football teams will wind up their 1988 seasons Saturday afternoon at Cincinnati's Nippert Stadium, and at least one of the coaches in the game will be working for the last time at his present position.

East Carolina's Art Baker has already announced that he will resign at the end of the season, and there are some who believe that Cincinnati's Dave Currey, only 19-35 in his five seasons with the Bearcats, will be gone, too, once the smoke settles.

Cincinnati, which was bowled over by the Pirates last year, 56-28, in Greenville, snapped a six-game skid last week, pounding Indiana State, 40-21. Ironically, ECU, which had an open date this past weekend, snapped an eight-game streak in its last outing. So both teams will be trying to end the year on a strong note and go out with a two-game winning streak.

Cincinnati opened the season with a 41-7 loss to Boston College, then won two straight. The Bearcats popped Austin Peay, 52-7, and stopped Miami of Ohio, 34-18.

But then followed six straight losses, to Rutgers, 38-9, to Penn State, 35-9, to Virginia Tech, 41-14, to Miami, Fla., 57-3, to Louisville, 21-6 and to West Virginia, 51-13.

ECU played three common opponents. The Pirate fell to Virginia Tech, 27-16, in what may have been their worst game of the year, and also lost to West Virginia, 30-10, and Miami of Florida, 31-7.

Last year's meeting between the two schools was one of the most humiliating losses of the season for the Bearcats. ECU rolled up 608

Drugs Were Abundant At Olympics At Least 20 Unknown Athletes Tested Positive And Weren't Expelled

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — At least half the athletes at the Seoul Olympics used performance-enhancing drugs at some time and as many as 20 tested positive and were not expelled, according to a published report.

The New York Times reported today that the five-member subcommittee of the International Olympic Committee Medical Commission refused to pass several cases along to the full 33-member committee.

IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch told the newspaper more athletes tested positive than those suspended.

"Maybe this is true," he said. "They found more athletes, but the quantity used was not enough to suspend them. You cannot punish them."

Canadian sprinter Ben Johnson and nine other athletes were suspended during the games for using anabolic steroids. Johnson was stripped of his gold medal and his world record in the 100-meter dash.

Dr. Park Jong Sei, director of the Olympic drug-testing lab in Seoul, told the newspaper one of the athletes who tested positive but was not suspended was an American. The others, he said, were mostly Europeans. He would not identify the athletes.

Park said he voted to suspend athletes more than once, but was on the losing side of the vote.

"These were only gut feelings on my part," he said. "But in one or two cases, I was of the minority opinion. I thought the athlete had used drugs for performance enhancement. The majority overruled me."

Dr. Robert Voy, the chief medical officer of the United States Olympic Committee, told the newspaper he believed more than 50 percent of the athletes at Seoul used steroids at one time or other. David Jenkins, a former British athlete awaiting sentencing for his part in a steroid trafficking ring, told the newspaper 99.9 percent used steroids.

Donald Catlin, who runs a drug-testing lab at UCLA, claimed that an athlete who competed for the United States at the 1987 world track championships in Rome had tested positive earlier that year. He said he forwarded the finding to The Athletics Congress, track's governing body in the United States, but that the sample got mislabeled and nothing was done because it became unclear to which athlete the sample belonged.

Catlin said he knew of no coverups by the TAC or by the USOC.

The athlete in question, who was not identified by the newspaper, claimed the TAC circulated his name as a steroid user.

"I started getting calls from other people saying, 'Hey, I hear you used steroids,'" he said. "It spread like wildfire. What surprised me is that they didn't keep it confidential."

Defense A Key Ayden-Grifton Takes On Clayton

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Ayden-Grifton football coach B.T. Chappell said that if his team is to have any success Friday against Clayton in the second round of the state 2-A playoffs, his defensive linemen must play their best game of the season.

"Their team is more run oriented," Chappell said. "They'll run, run, run and then pass. They get you so conscious about stopping their run. Hopefully the guys that are up front can do the job so the defensive backs don't have to be so run conscious."

"The guys on the defensive front are just going to have to have one of their better games because this team is going to execute well."

That puts the pressure on James Collins, Grod Gilbert, George Fuller and Terry Artis, all of whom alternate at the defensive guard positions.

Really, though, Clayton has the same task before it the Chargers do. Both defenses must stop the ground oriented offenses that carried their respective teams to conference championships.

The Chargers, 10-1, were undefeated in Eastern Plains Conference play this year. Clayton, 10-1, did the same thing in the Capital Area 2-A.

Ayden-Grifton was keyed by the running of Tony Reeves (1,179 yards) and Aaron Harper (713 yards). Reeves, though, was lost for the year with a knee injury in the final regular season game. Harper took over in a 33-7 win over Wake Forest-Rolesville with 130 yards rushing and three touchdowns.

While the Chargers lost Reeves for the season, Clayton coach Gary Fowler said it doesn't really matter because the offensive line that blocked for him all season is still intact.

"The thing we have to do is we have to come up with one heck of a defensive game," he said. "We

- Significance: It's the second round of the state playoffs and there are no weak teams anymore. Both of these teams have playoff experience and feature strong running games. The question is which defense is better equipped to stop the opposing offense. For the Chargers, the play of defensive tackles James Collins and Grod Gilbert could be key against Clayton's strong trapping game, led by guard Russell Baker.
- Players To Watch: Ayden-Grifton: G-DT James Collins, FB-DE Aaron Harper, E-TE Kelvin Ellison; Clayton — TB Rod Clark, QB David Castlebury, G-LB Deon Williams.

Top-Ranked Test NP Takes On No. 1 Hertford Co.

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

BETHEL — North Pitt High School's football players are looking at Friday's matchup against top-ranked Hertford County in the second round of the state 2-A playoffs as the opportunity of a lifetime.

The Bears enter the game with an 11-0 record after sweeping through the Northeastern Conference, while the Panthers, who finished second in the Eastern Plains Conference, are 7-4.

No player on the Panther squad has ever faced a team ranked number one in the state, in fact it will be the first experience for first-year head coach Stuart Ennis, who has paced the sidelines on the North Pitt coaching staff for the past five seasons.

"We're looking forward to the opportunity to play the number one team," Ennis said. "It's something I've never done as a coach and none of the players have ever done. It's a challenge. I just hope we can meet the challenge."

North Pitt advanced to the second round game after taking a 28-7 win over Edenton Holmes last Friday, while Hertford knocked off Eastern Plains Conference member Greene Central 55-30.

The Panthers' win over the Aces marked their fourth straight win and showcased a continually improving defense. Over the past four contests, the Panthers have outscored their opponents by a 156-15 clip.

"We played well in the win over Edenton last week," Ennis said. "We had eight quarterback sacks that keyed our effort."

According to Ennis, the Panthers' confidence is very high going into the second round, but the team realizes what it must do in order to have a chance for a win against the powerful Bears.

"The key for us is to keep our offense on the field a lot and keep theirs off," Ennis said. "They

Suit Reopens King Mackerel Season

A temporary restraining order has reopened the 1988 king mackerel season — at least until Monday.

Federal Judge Malcolm J. Howard has granted the state a temporary restraining order that reopens the season with a three-fish per day per fisherman limit. The restraining order will remain in place until the court can hear the state's motion for a permanent reopening order. Such an order would be based upon the National Marine Fisheries Service not being able to prove that the king mackerel stocks had been overfished.

Howard's ruling was in response to a suit filed by North Carolina fishermen and the state Division of Marine Fisheries over a decision by federal officials to close the season Oct. 17.

The motion is scheduled to be heard in federal court in New Bern on Monday.

Rose Has Two Players Of Year In Fall

Two Rose High School athletes have been named as players of the year in their respective sports in the Big East Conference this year.

Timmy Moore was selected as the football Player of the Year for the second straight year. Moore, who rushed for 1,240 yards, played only nine and a half games this year in leading Rose to a second-straight undefeated regular season.

In tennis, Paige Powell, only a freshman, was named the Player of the Year. Powell was the state runner-up this year in the sport.

Elizabeth Langston, the Rose tennis coach, was named as Coach of the Year in the Big East, while football coach Chip Williams shared Coach of the Year honors with Northeastern's Tom Merritt.

Named to the all-conference team in tennis were Powell, Jennifer Powell and Taylor Evans.

Named to the all-conference soccer team were Jason Bizzaro, Marty Measamer, David Leisten and John Bolen.

Picked on the all-conference volleyball team was Janna Potter.

Named to the all-conference football team were Moore, Eric Morris and Raleigh Fuller on offense, and John Ebron, Shelton Northern, Carlester Crumpler and Billy Carr on defense.

Three Valkyries Are All-Conference

Three members of the D.H. Conley volleyball team have been named to the Coastal All-Conference team, along with one from Washington.

Selected to the team from Conley are Tracy Sumrell, Renee Tuten and Dee Barbee. Named from Washington is Sharon Stokes.

Conley's Eileen Evans was named to the honorable mention list.

Others selected to the team include Kim Nelson, Shannon McKay, Stacy Kyle and Wendy Nelson of West Carteret; Evelyn Brimmer of West Craven; Laura Sanders of North Lenoir and Lisa Mason and Viki Griffin of Havelock.

UNC Admitting Fewer Athletic Exceptions

CHAPEL HILL — Fewer student-athletes were admitted to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill as exceptions to minimum academic standards this year, a report says.

The report, to be presented to faculty members Friday, also notes that the graduation rate of Carolina's student-athletes lags behind that of the total student body.

Of the 124 recruited student-athletes who enrolled at UNC-Chapel Hill in fall 1987, 73.8 percent had graduated five years later. Among all students enrolling that fall, the comparable graduation rate was 84.8 percent.

The figures exclude students who withdrew from school in good academic standing or transferred to another school.

Sixteen of the 192 student-athletes who enrolled as freshmen this fall failed to meet the university's minimum standards, which include a requirement that students score at least 800 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test, the report said.

In fall 1987, 19 student-athletes fell short of the university's minimum admissions standards, which are set by the board of trustees. In fall 1986, 22 athletes were admitted as exceptions.

The best score on the standardized exam is 1,600. Freshmen enrolled at UNC-CH this fall posted an average score of 1,101 on the exam, the report states, while student-athletes scored an average 1,023.

Richard G. Hiskey, chairman of the university's Faculty Committee on Athletics, which prepares the report annually, told the News and Observer of Raleigh that the findings pleased him.

"Both the graduation rate and the number of exceptions are consistent with the desire on the part of the university to bring in students that are compatible with the university," said Hiskey, a professor of chemistry.

"We need to constantly compare the progress of our athlete-students with the progress of the regular student body, and I think in most cases, the comparison is a good one," he said.

Murphy Wants Changes; Would Take Trade

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta outfielder Dale Murphy says the Braves have to make changes to win next season, and he doesn't mind if the changes include his being traded.

Murphy, a two-time National League Most Valuable Player who has spent his entire major league career with Atlanta, met Wednesday with General Manager Bobby Cox and emerged from the session saying the Braves will not improve on their 106-loss season if the team stays the same.

"I think it's obvious that (the Braves) have to make some changes to get competitive," Murphy said. "Whether that includes me or not, that's the goal, to be competitive next year."

"That's the feeling I got from Bobby, and I have no problem with that," Murphy has the right to approve any trade in which he is involved, and he told Cox he would consider "all the options."

Several teams, including the NL East champion New York Mets, reportedly have made inquiries about Murphy. Murphy, 32, said he would not rule out going to New York.

Cox said he didn't expect any serious trade talk until next month, when baseball's winter meetings will be held in Atlanta.

The Braves, NL West champs in 1982, have suffered through five straight losing seasons. Club officials began 1988 by proclaiming it a rebuilding year, but Cox has said in recent weeks he wants to win in 1989.

"This is not a school any more for developing young players," Murphy said. "We've got to stay away from treating the major leagues as a school for young players. Status quo was not good in '88. Status quo won't be good next season. I think we all agree with that."

Murphy said if there is a trade, the Braves should seek power hitters. Murphy has been the Braves' main — some would say only — power source the past few seasons.

Cox said his main priority is to keep Murphy, and improve the team through other deals.

"Trading him (Murphy) would be the toughest thing this organization has ever done. I want to keep him and put somebody else in the lineup with him," Cox said.

Terps Would Like To Close Out With Win

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — The final game of the 1988 season has the Maryland Terrapins looking toward their future and remembering their past.

"A win Saturday means we can go out as a winner, the way we (the Terps' senior class) came in," said Maryland's senior linebacker Matt D'Amico. "A win means we've helped lay a stepping stone."

After an unexpected run at this year's Atlantic Coast Conference championship, the Terps will meet the Virginia Cavaliers Saturday in a game for second place in the conference standings.

"It's all that counts now," Maryland's junior linebacker Mark Walsh said. "Being that this is a young team, I'd say things have come out on the good end."

Some players are hedging that perception. "If we win, I'll say this season was a stepping stone for bringing this program back," quarterback Neil O'Donnell said.

Maryland won three consecutive ACC titles from 1983-85, winning 16 consecutive conference games and posting a 26-10 overall record.

However, in the two seasons prior to this one, the Terps fell to 5-5-1 in 1986 and were 4-7 last year, losing their last four games.

This season has been a pleasant surprise so far. "No question about it," said Maryland athletic director Lew Perkins. "We've shown a lot of improvement. We'd like to finish up on a winning note."

"But I remember a reporter sitting in my office telling me we'd be lucky to win four games. No one thought that going into the 10th game at the ACC title."

Blue Devils Start At Top

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Duke basketball coach Mike Krzyzewski doesn't pull any punches when talks about his team's prospects for the upcoming season. The Blue Devils are good. No doubt about it.

"I'm not going to stand up here and say that Danny Ferry is not good, or that Quinn Snyder is not that good," Krzyzewski said. "That's silly. That's stupid. I've told you when we're bad and I'll tell you when we're good. We're good."

The Blue Devils were chosen as the number one team in the pre-season Associated Press basketball poll and were also chosen to finish first in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Krzyzewski must find replacements for graduated defensive standout Billy King and outside shooting specialist Kevin Strickland, but he has the luxury of depth returning from last year's team as well as one of the top freshman classes in the country.

But more importantly, Krzyzewski returns Ferry, a consensus All-America pick last year. He averaged 19.1 points and 7.6 rebound per game while earning ACC player of the year honors.

Ferry had to bow out of the United States Olympic team trials because of a dislocated knee, but has recovered fully.

Also returning for the Blue Devils are point guard Quinn Snyder, forward John Smith and swingman Robert Brickey. Of the three, Brickey, who averaged 10.1 points per game, could be one of the biggest determinants of how far Duke goes this year.

"During our foreign tour (over the summer), we used Brickey on the perimeter," Krzyzewski said. "He has to be able to defend like a shooting guard, handle the ball and hit the outside shot. I just hope in playing defense he doesn't get the touch fouls he's gotten in the past."

"I think our three key players are Ferry, Brickey and Snyder. I'm placing a lot of responsibility on Brickey."

Ferry feels Brickey can and will play a bigger role for the Blue Devils. "He's playing really well, shooting the ball better than he has in the past," Ferry said. "He worked a lot on it this summer. He's just so athletically talented."

"He's starting to get the finer points of the game down. He can be a special player if he continues to improve because of the athletic ability he has."

"That's what we need him to do. The team is looking for him to step up and be a real defensive stopper. With the players that we have, he is probably the most capable of doing that. That's going to be something that we really need."

The loss of King, the top defensive player in the nation last year, will impact on each team member this season, according to Krzyzewski.

"It's a team that has to fill up some real important needs," he said. "Number one is the communication on defense. That's where we miss right now Billy King. His talk helped everybody else."

Each of the returning players will have to shoulder a little more defensive responsibility to make up for the loss of King. And that may mean more substitutions for the Blue Devils in an effort to keep fresh active players in the game.

Greg Koubek, a 6-6 sophomore forward, Alaa Abdelnaby, a 6-10 junior center, and Phil Henderson, a 6-4 junior guard, figure to play more prominent roles this season, as will incoming freshmen Christian Laettner (6-10, 225) and Crawford Palmer (6-10, 225).

"Someone like Greg Koubek could be important for us, getting Phil Henderson back," Ferry said. "You could go down the whole list, John's adjustment to the perimeter, Alaa, Christian and Crawford stepping in and doing a good job."

With depth everywhere, Krzyzewski has a number of options. With Snyder and Brickey in the backcourt, the Blue Devils can use Ferry and Smith up front with any one of the big men. They can also swing Brickey into a small forward spot and put Henderson in the backcourt. Koubek adds further flexibility, as he can play both in backcourt and the front court.

Regardless of where they play, the increased numbers give Duke both depth and varied strategy options.

"Our freshmen can help us," Krzyzewski said. "Laettner looks like from the first few weeks of practice like a youngster who can help us a little more than the other two because he is versatile. Palmer will be a good player."

Peete Down With Measles

Rodney Peete

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — A case of the measles has thrown a monkey wrench into the race for the Rose Bowl, the Heisman Trophy and the No. 1 college football ranking.

Southern Cal quarterback Rodney Peete, feeling poorly for almost a week, was diagnosed with the measles Wednesday. Trojans coach Larry Smith says his status for Saturday's Pacific-10 showdown with cross-town rival UCLA is questionable.

But Peete, who was already showing the characteristic skin blotches measles bring, was optimistic he would be well enough to play.

"I'm feeling a lot better and if things keep progressing as they are I hope to be out there Saturday," Peete said Wednesday night. "I'm sorry to have alarmed or worried anybody and I appreciate everyone's concern."

The game between second-ranked Southern Cal and No. 6 UCLA will decide who represents the Pac-10 in the Rose Bowl and possibly showcase Heisman candidates Peete and Bruin quarterback Troy Aikman in a nationally televised game.

The title game is the Bruins' last of the regular season, while the Trojans go on to host No. 1 Notre Dame on Nov. 26. It is the 34th time in 58 meetings the Rose Bowl will be decided by the UCLA-Southern Cal matchup.

Smith said the team would take a wait-and-see approach to Peete's playing status while preparing for the possibility he might be sidelined.

"We're a team first, although Rodney is a very valuable component of our team," Smith said. "If it means we have to play Rodney's backup, Pat O'Hara, we have a lot of confidence in him."

"We'll go ahead with the basic game plan that we've prepared. This is something that we have to be good enough as a team to overcome."

Peete's affliction is part of a recent outbreak of measles (rubeola) among Southern Cal students, and although team officials said none of the other Trojan players appear to have it, all were inoculated against the highly infectious disease Tuesday night.

The senior who ranks among the nation's top collegiate passers first felt sick last week before the Trojans met Arizona State in Tempe but didn't show it on the field, turning in one of his finest games ever and leading Southern Cal to a 50-0 victory.

Smith said Peete was tired afterward but suited up for practice Monday and had to be ordered home by coaches. He hasn't practiced all week.

Peete has guided the Trojans to a 9-0 record and ranks seventh nationwide in passing efficiency with a 149.3 rating. Troy Aikman, who has helped UCLA to a 9-1 mark, is fourth with a rating of 152.0.

Southern Cal will claim the Pac-10 Rose Bowl bid with a victory or a tie.

Pat O'Hara

Rubeola features symptoms including fever, headaches, watery eyes and a dry cough in addition to spotting on the skin. It normally lasts about a week and causes the sufferer to be physically weakened.

If Peete is unable to play Saturday against the Bruins at the Rose Bowl, O'Hara will get his first extensive playing time. A red-shirt sophomore, he has appeared in just three games this year, completing five of seven passes for 61 yards, with one interception.

"It's an exciting opportunity if it comes about," O'Hara said after practice. "Playing in a game like this is what I came to USC for."

Peete, who also plays baseball for Southern Cal, complained about feeling sick last Friday, but he still threw for a career-high 361 yards and three touchdowns in the victory over Arizona State the next day.

If Southern Cal falters against UCLA, the Trojans are likely to appear in the Sugar Bowl against Auburn or LSU. If UCLA loses, it has been tabbed for a Cotton Bowl berth against Arkansas.

Wolfpack Gains Key Prospect

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

North Carolina State and Virginia signed high school basketball players as the NCAA's early signing period ended, but North Carolina and Clemson lost key prospects. The Wolfpack landed Pancho Hodges, a 6-9 forward from Goldsboro who has transferred to DeMatha High School in Hyattsville, Md., for his senior season, and Virginia acquired Shawn Wilson, a 6-10 center from Nashville, Tenn. Guard Randy Reid of Spanish Fork, Utah, turned down North Carolina Tuesday in favor of Brigham Young. Clemson lost Orlando Lightfoot, a 6-7 forward from Chattanooga, Tenn., who said he was going to sign with Oklahoma. The acquisitions of Hodges and Wilson give the Atlantic Coast Conference 20 new players, all of them high school stars. Wednesday was the last day that prospects can sign in the early signing period. Those who do not sign by the deadline will have to wait for the next signing period, which is in April.

Hodges committed to the Wolfpack over the weekend. He had said he would not sign until the spring, but changed his mind when he took his official recruiting visit to the school.

"With his North Carolina roots, it's a very normal decision for him to make," Morgan Wooten, his coach at DeMatha, told the Winston-Salem Journal. "I think he's wanted to play for State for a long time."

Hodges averaged 14 points, 10 rebounds and five blocked shots a game last season at Goldsboro High School. Hodges is the fifth player to sign with N.C. State, and his acquisition completes the recruiting year, according to Coach Jim Valvano.

Counting Derrick Chandler, a 6-9 center whom N.C. State landed last week, the Wolfpack has now signed eight DeMatha players since 1975. The other DeMatha products who played for the Wolfpack were Kenny Carr, Hawkeye Whitney, Derrick Whittenburg, Sidney Lowe, Quentin Jackson and Benny Bolton.

Reid, a 6-2 guard, said that playing baseball in college was one of the major factors in his decision. He is an outstanding shortstop and wants to play both basketball and baseball in college. He said that the best combination of both sports was at BYU.

"Randy really struggled with North Carolina because of the place and because of the tradition there," said Mike Gardner, his high school coach. "I think he's questioned himself many times in the last week, asking how he can turn down North Carolina."

Reid will play under his father at BYU. Roger Reid, 41, is the assistant head coach at BYU.

Reid said that his father's coaching position had little bearing on his decision.

"If my father was an influence, it was negative," Reid said. "I know that with him coaching there, it's going to be a negative situation. I know I'm going to be under pressure playing at BYU and with my dad on the coaching staff."

Jordan Outscores Barkley, But Philly Takes The Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The last time two big heavyweights hooked up at the Spectrum, it was Rocky Balboa against Apollo Creed for an imaginary title.

On Wednesday night, it was real when Michael Jordan met Charles Barkley in matchup of NBA scoring kings.

Jordan scored 52 points, setting a Spectrum record, but he and the Chicago Bulls lost to the Philadelphia 76ers 123-110 when Barkley had 42 points and 16 rebounds.

"It's not satisfying when you score 52 points and lose," said Jordan, who made 24 of 29 shots. "My goal is to win. We just didn't have a good team effort tonight."

Barkley shot 18 for 25. "I haven't played up to my potential so far this year, and I've been disappointed in my play," Barkley said.

In other games, Detroit defeated San Antonio 94-88, Boston beat Golden State 107-104, Phoenix stopped Indiana 123-104 and the Los Angeles Clippers downed Sacramento 112-101.

Jordan broke the Spectrum scoring record of 51 set by Moses Malone on Nov. 4, 1984, against Detroit.

Jordan made 13 of 15 shots and had 29 points in the first half. Barkley had 20 points and 11 rebounds at that point, during which Philadelphia led 66-46.

The 76ers made it 104-82 with 8:40 left in the game before Jordan led a late rally. The Bulls got within 112-102 with 2:47 remaining, but no closer.

Ron Anderson and Mike Gminski scored 19 points each for Philadelphia.

Pistons 94, Spurs 88. Joe Dumars scored 20 points and helped undefeated Detroit stay ahead in the fourth quarter to win in San Antonio.

The Pistons won their seventh game and remained the only unbeaten team in the NBA.

The Spurs closed to 81-80 with 5:15 left, but Isiah Thomas made two consecutive baskets for Detroit and the Pistons led by at least two the rest of the way. Dumars had 10 points in the final period.

Greg Anderson and Johnny Dawkins scored 19 points each for the Spurs.

Celtics 107, Warriors 104. Dennis Johnson made a 3-point shot with one second left as Boston, playing without Larry Bird, beat visiting Golden State.

The Celtics defeated Golden State for the 11th straight time at Boston Garden since 1978. The Warriors were foiled in a bid to win their 1,000th game since moving from Philadelphia 27 years ago.

Bird did not play because of tendonitis. Danny Ainge, sidelined for 11 days with a bad knee, scored 10 points for the Celtics.

Rod Higgins scored 21 points and Chris Mullin 20 for Golden State, which led 87-91 before Boston rallied. Kevin McHale had 25 points, Robert Parish 23 and Jim Paxson 20 for the Celtics.

Suns 123, Pacers 104. Armon Gilliam scored 28 points and Tom Chambers keyed a 20-4 burst in the fourth quarter that sent Phoenix past winless Indiana.

The Suns wiped out an 89-85 deficit as Chambers scored eight of his 20 points during the fourth-period tear. Phoenix improved to 4-3, the first time it has been over .500 since Dec. 16, 1986. The Pacers fell to 0-7.

Eddie Johnson scored 22 points and Kevin Johnson 18 for the Suns. Chuck Person had 18 points for Indiana.

Clippers 112, Kings 101. Benoit Benjamin's 25 points and nine rebounds led Los Angeles over winless Sacramento. The Kings' 0-7 start is the worst in franchise history.

Benjamin scored 16 points as the Clippers took a 65-42 lead at halftime. Derek Smith, who finished with 27 points, led Sacramento back in the third quarter but the Kings never got closer than six.

Ken Norman scored 19 points and Danny Manning, coming off the bench, had seven in 19 minutes for the Clippers.

Lalonde Reaches Out To Battered Children

By Ed Schuyler

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Donny Lalonde fights men and for children.

This week, Lalonde was recognized for his efforts to aid battered children.

"Donny and I have something in common — we're both tough," quipped Peter Jennings, the ABC-TV news anchorman, who presented Lalonde with Family Dynamics Inc.'s Children's Lifeline Award for his work against child abuse.

Lalonde was tough enough to win a world light heavyweight title with a left hand reduced in effectiveness by two shoulder operations, and he was tough enough to give Sugar Ray Leonard all he wanted, knocking him down in the fourth round, before being knocked out in the ninth.

More importantly, he is tough enough to carry the emotional baggage of a battered childhood rather than stow it in the dark recesses of his mind.

Sewn on his trunks for the Leonard fight was a patch with the image of a broken heart and the words, "No excuse for child abuse."

At age 15, Donny Lalonde, who made $5 million for fighting Leonard, filched $5 from a sister's piggy bank and ran away from home in Canada. Four years of beatings by his stepfather were enough.

"Donny has not only learned how to fight back, he's learned how to give back," Jennings, a fellow Canadian, said during a luncheon in New York.

Lalonde practices what he preaches through the Donny Lalonde Child Abuse Foundation, which distributes money to various child-abuse organizations in Canada. The $1,000 that accompanied the Lifeline Award went to the fund.

He's also a spokesman on child abuse for the U.S. Department of Health and Human Resources.

Some people find it strange that a battered child would turn to boxing. There might have been a certain masochistic attraction in it at first for Lalonde, but he soon discovered that he enjoyed it and felt that he could succeed in it.

Although his intelligence, personality and newly won riches will open other avenues for him, Lalonde is not ready to walk away from the ring.

"Really, the kids and boxing are my two major concerns right now," he said.

"I personally don't see a more attractive match out there than a rematch (with Leonard)," he said. "People really enjoyed it."

There will be no rematch. Leonard has relinquished both the WBC light heavyweight and super middleweight titles he won — the latter had been vacant — and whether he fights again might depend on whether Marvelous Marvin Hagler wants another crack at him with nothing on the line except a lot of money and pride.

"There's no way I can go out of boxing losing a fight like that," Lalonde said. "I can be a better fighter. I learned a lot in that fight and I want to get the title back."

Lalonde should be in line to fight for the vacant light heavyweight title, and he should win.

"I'm a newly former but presently future champion," he said.

Out of the ring, Lalonde has nothing to regain. He remains a champion to people who know the agony and disgrace of child abuse.

Tyson, Givens Story Begins New Chapter

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Mike Tyson's fights continue to take place outside the ring.

Robin Givens, his estranged wife, filed a $125-million libel suit Wednesday against the undisputed heavyweight champion.

In a lawsuit filed in federal court in Manhattan, the 23-year-old actress accused Tyson of holding her up "to public contempt, ridicule, embarrassment disgrace and prejudice" for remarks he made that were quoted by the New York Post.

Among Tyson's quotes in the Post article that angered Givens:

"She manipulated me ... Now it turns out she was lying when she said she didn't want anything from me."

"The nature of those two women (Givens and her mother, Ruth Roper) is to be mean and vindictive. She said she wants nothing, but she refused to sign a release."

"And she (Givens) stole money from me when we were together."

The Post was not named as a defendant in the lawsuit, which described the article as "false, defamatory, malicious and libelous." The newspaper had no immediate comment.

Tyson and Givens, married Feb. 12, have filed for divorce. He is suing her in New Jersey and she is suing him in California.

Cincinnati Final EC Foe...

yards in total offense, including 500 on the ground.

Danny McCoin, Cincinnati's strong-armed quarterback, came off arthroscopic surgery 10 days earlier to throw for 268 yards and a school-record tying four touchdowns.

However, McCoin is gone this year, and the Bearcats don't have anybody of his caliber. Don Hoog is listed as the starter for Saturday behind center. He comes into the game having completed 56 of 104 passes for 576 yards and four touchdowns. He's had four picked off. His backup, Glenn Farkas, has completed 100 of 183 for 1,125 yards and six scores, with five interceptions.

Hoog, making only his second start of the season last week, led the Bearcats to the win over Indiana State.

The top rusher for the Bearcats is tailback Al McKinney. He's carried 154 times for 752 yards and one touchdown. That's almost twice as many carries as the next man, sophomore Terry Strong, not listed on the two-deep chart for this week, has. Strong had 85 carries for 347 yards, while McKinney's back-up Leonard Cry, has 82 carries for 344 yards.

McKinney is also the leading receiver for the Bearcats with 29 grabs for 192 yards and two touchdowns. Roosevelt Mukes, the flanker, has 22 catches for 270 yards and two touchdowns. Mukes, a four-year starter, has caught 109 passes in his career to lead the Bearcats in that category.

McKinney is moving up the career ladder for the Bearcats, too. He rushed for 122 yards against the Sycamores to bring his total to 2,160 yards, just 38 off the number four spot.

The top scorer on the team is placekicker Phil Insalaco, who has kicked six field goals in the last two games, four against Indiana State. He hasn't missed since hitting the first of those six. Overall, he is nine of 12 on field goals and 20 of 21 in extra points, for a total of 47 points.

One statistic for the Bearcats stands out — one the Pirates hope will continue. Cincinnati hasn't won a season-ending game since the 1980 season — seven straight closing losses. Six of those seven, however, have been by less than a touchdown.

There is an East Carolina tie with the Bearcats, too. Defensive line coach Cary Godette was an all-American while playing with ECU in the 1970s for Pat Dye, now the head coach at Auburn. Godette coached two years on the ECU staff following his graduation.

Kickoff is set for 1:30 p.m.

Chris Evert returns a shot in her three-set victory over Barbara Potter

Potter Changes Her Shirt, But Not Luck Against Chris

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The only thing Barbara Potter changed against Chris Evert was her shirt.

During their match at Madison Square Garden on Wednesday night, Potter ducked into a runway several times to replace her sweat-drenched top. But Evert was the one feeling comfortable after beating Potter 4-6, 6-2, 6-4 in the opening round of the Virginia Slims tennis championships.

"I wasn't connecting with her serves in the first set, but I thought it was just a matter of time," Evert said.

Potter, ranked 10th in the world, was frustrated after losing yet another close match to Evert. The hard-serving left-hander from Connecticut is 0-8 against Evert, but the last three matches have gone three sets.

"The biggest pain in the butt is going to the movie theater, being with friends and enjoying the Big Apple all the while knowing I should be the one playing Pam Shriver (in the next round)," Potter said.

Evert, who turns 34 next month, narrowly escaped a repeat of last year's humiliating first-round loss to Sylvia Hanika at the Slims championships.

"In the second set, I was thinking, 'Oh my heaven, I'm doing it again. Why here, in one of my favorite places?'" she said.

Evert turned it around in the second set, moving out to a 4-2 lead before Potter sprained her left ankle while diving for a shot in the seventh game.

After Potter took a five-minute break to have the ankle sprayed and taped, Evert won eight straight points to take the set. Although Potter played better in the final set, Evert broke her twice to win the match.

Neither player felt Potter's injury affected the outcome.

"She moved just as well after that as she did in the first set," Evert said. "I don't think it mattered at all."

Potter said her ankle didn't bother her after it was retaped early in the third set.

"When the adrenalin got going, I didn't feel it anymore," she said.

Potter, who raised eyebrows at Wimbledon when she changed her shirt on the court, was more subtle this time.

"She does sweat more than any other player," Evert said. "It was soaking wet around the baseline."

In other first-round matches, fourth-seeded Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina beat Katerina Maleeva of Bulgaria 6-2, 6-1 and No. 8 Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia downed Zina Garrison 2-6, 6-3, 6-3.

The quarterfinals in the 16-player tournament begin tonight when top-seeded Steffi Graf meets Manuela Maleeva and Evert takes on Shriver, the No. 5 seed.

On Friday, Sabatini plays sixth-seeded Natalia Zvereva of the Soviet Union and No. 2 Martina Navratilova faces Sukova.

Sabatini, who lost to Graf in last year's final, won seven straight games after Maleeva evened the first set at 2-all.

"I played very good today," Sabatini said, "and she didn't play the way she usually does."

Sukova spoiled Garrison's 25th birthday with a come-from-behind victory.

Despite the loss, Garrison said she was pleased with her season.

"This has been my best year yet," she said.

Groh Doesn't Hear Fans Booing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — South Carolina offensive coordinator Al Groh says he doesn't hear the fans booing as he walks the sidelines.

"There's nothing quite as valuable as a good headset," said Groh, who is in his first season as an assistant at South Carolina. "Whether it's applause or the opposite, it's very seldom that I know anything about it."

There's been a lot of booing of late in Williams-Brice Stadium, most of it directed at an offense that has managed to get into the end zone only twice in the last five games. Over that span, the Gamecocks are 3-2 and have fallen out of the top 20.

But Groh said the critics don't know what they're talking about when they criticize his offense.

"I don't say this to be arrogant about things, and I don't have the right answers on everything and there's some calls I wish I'd have back sometimes — but there's a studied reason for all of them," Groh said.

"And those people who have other opinions to what should be done, if they would like to stay over here and study it into the hours of night that I do," Groh said, "they're more than welcome to share their opinions."

But even Groh admits there are problems with the offense as South Carolina prepares to meet No. 15 Clemson in Death Valley on Saturday. Six weeks into the season, South Carolina was undefeated and averaging 28 points a game.

But in their last four games, the Gamecocks have scored just 42 points, an average of 10.5 points. In two of those games, South Carolina failed to score, losing to Georgia Tech 34-0 and fifth-ranked Florida State 59-0.

The Gamecocks' only touchdown in a 19-8 victory Saturday over a Navy, 3-7, came on a blocked punt. To be fair, the Gamecocks had two TDs called back. But that didn't keep the fans from booing.

"In some respects it's a little bit puzzling as how we would be as productive early and not as productive late, when it usually goes the other way around, said Groh, who was an assistant for the NFL's Atlanta Falcons before coming to South Carolina. "I think I have some reasons for it, but those are more tactical reasons I would be more apt to share with you when we have no games left."

One obvious problem is the lack of a healthy running game. Tailback Harold Green, who a year ago rushed for 1,022 yards in 1987, has been nagged all year with injuries and has rushed for 494 yards and four TDs.

Green will be playing with torn ligaments in his right thumb against Clemson.

"In my mind," Groh said, "I can't diminish in the least the impact that a less-than-healthy Harold Green has had on this team offensively. Harold Green is a very special offensive player who on rare occasions this year has had the opportunity to be special."

Another possible reason for the offensive problems was raised by Coach Joe Morrison.

"I think probably the main thing we found is we're getting a lot more under, zone-type coverages," Morrison said. "It takes a little more time for the patterns to develop, which gives your defensive linemen a little better chance of getting pressure on the quarterback."

That pressure may be one reason quarterback Todd Ellis is going through the worst stretch of his career.

In his first four games, the Greensboro, N.C., junior hit 64.5 percent of his passes for six TDs and one interception. In his last six games, Ellis has completed 47 percent of his passes and has thrown 16 interceptions.

Ayden-Grifton-Clayton

have to slow them down. If they start putting that thing on the board, we'll be in trouble. The key for us is we have to slow 'em down, make them work and hope we can control the football some."

Clayton is led by tailback Rod Clark (5-9, 165, Jr.) who has run for 1,428 yards while scoring 15 touchdowns this year.

"They have a very good tailback," Chappell said. "He's a hard runner. I don't think he has that exceptional speed. He's more of the type runner that can break tackles if you don't wrap him up. He's got enough speed that you're not going to run him down."

David Castlebury (5-10, 160, Sr.) is in his first year starting at quarterback after playing safety last season, but he filled the bill nicely, throwing for 1,102 yards and eight touchdowns.

"The thing that makes him effective is he's a very good runner as well as a passer," Chappell said. "They like to fake the off-tackle play and let him keep the ball on a bootleg around end. Then they'll run that same type of play and he'll drop back and pass off it."

Fowler said the teams may compare favorably on paper, but that his team's inexperience (three sophomores on the offensive line) could be a boost for the Chargers.

"It's going to be a very physical mismatch," he said. "That's a big concern. The thing I've been impressed with Ayden-Grifton is they are big but they move."

"I don't know how we can stop Harper. If he's at Clayton he'd have to be on the line. We try to be quick. You can do that against big slow team, but Ayden-Grifton, they are big but they are quick. It's going to be tough."

While Fowler quickly takes the underdog role, Chappell feels Clayton's strong running game could be trouble for his defense.

"It puts a lot of pressure on your outside defensive people, defensive ends in particular have got to determine whether it's off tackle or a quarterback keeper," he said.

"The defensive tackles are going to be doubled down by the end. He's going to have to do a good job of fighting to get out there to stop the off-tackle play."

"They've got to be do a good job of fighting off the double team and getting on the ball carrier. The defensive ends (Harper and Kelvin Ellison) are going to have to close it down from the outside."

The Chargers hope to get linebacker James Woodard back. He's been hampered by a thigh bruise the last three weeks. Erskine Lyons was starting in his place but he injured his ankle in practice this week and won't play. Scott Cannon, who replaced injured Ronnell Peterson early in the season, mans the other spot.

With only two losses between them, whichever teams gets the early lead could gain the necessary edge.

"We don't want to get behind and have to get out of our game plan. We have to control the game," Chappell said. "We like to play a physical type game, keep the ball and control it and wear them down. If we get into a situation where we are behind and try to play catch-up that may throw us out of sync."

(Hertford County) do a lot of things well offensively with their ground attack. Their wishbone is good and their power I is just awesome.

"They're mighty, mighty diversified," Ennis said. "After watching films of them I'm especially impressed with Tyrone Joyner and Keith Roberson."

Joyner is the Bears' quarterback and second leading rusher, while Roberson keys the rushing game. For the season, Joyner has completed 48-93 passes for 831 yards and eight touchdowns. He has also rushed for 355 yards. Roberson has 1,283 yards rushing this year and 16 touchdowns for the Bears' offensive attack, which has averaged just over 36 points per game.

For Hertford County head coach Daryl Allen, being the top-ranked team in the state is nice, but it also has its drawbacks.

"It (being number one) gets everybody fired up for you," Allen said. "But we know to expect a tough game now. They're all gonna be tough once you get into the second round of the playoffs. Everyone has won a first-round game then and has their confidence up."

Allen's main concern going into the game is his defense. Thus far this year, the Bear defense has given up just over 14 points per game.

"We've given up more points than I would have liked this year," Allen said. "I definitely feel like our offense is far ahead of our defense. This is the best offensive team I've ever coached, but at the first of the year when I saw the defense I had no idea that we'd be able to go undefeated, but we managed to hang in there and pull the games out."

According to Ennis, the Hertford defense is tougher than Allen lets on.

"Their defense is as quick as hiccups," Ennis said. They get to the ball in a hurry. Their defense may be quicker than their offense."

The Bears have only been behind twice this season and only one time as late as halftime.

In the second game of the season, Elizabeth City Northeastern took the opening kickoff in for a score and a 7-0 lead. However, the Bears tied the game up when their first offensive play was a 68-yard scoring pass. Hertford County went on to win the game 27-22.

The only other time the Bears trailed was during a 26-21 conference win at Northampton East. The Bears trailed 13-12 in that game at halftime.

Ennis feels the Panthers need to get a early lead in the game to enhance their chances at winning.

"I'd like to get out to about a 14-0 lead," Ennis said. "They haven't been behind that much all season so they would either react by kicking our tails or they would fold up the tent."

Devils, Cards, Look Like Frontrunners

By Tom Foreman Jr. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Louisville has been to its share of NCAA Tournament Final Fours in the last 10 years, and Duke wants to make the trip more often. Early indications are that both could enhance their record in the 1988-89 season.

Coach Denny Crum has led the Cardinals to six Final Four appearances, including four in the 1980s. Four of the starters from last year's team that went 24-11 and reached the final 16 are ready to make a run at Seattle.

"There wasn't any area we didn't make progress in last season," Crum said. "... I see no reason why we can't be better, despite our personnel losses. I think we can be a real outstanding team."

Mike Krzyzewski's first Final Four trip with the Blue Devils was in 1986. After reaching the final 16 in 1987, Duke went to Kansas City last March and lost to eventual national champion Kansas. Three returning starters, some key reserves and a top-flight freshman put a third trip within reach.

"I just think we need to go about business the right way, have fun with what we're doing, experiment, and somewhere around the end of February, first of March, hopefully all the decisions we made ... will be good ones and we'll be healthy," Krzyzewski said.

Those two teams won't be alone in the quest to go west to Seattle. North Carolina has its starting five back from last year to battle Duke for Atlantic Coast Conference supremacy. Florida State has five starters back and should be a significant threat to Louisville in the Metro Conference.

Instead of Kentucky, Florida and Georgia are the picks in the Southeastern Conference. North Carolina-Charlotte has that city's new 23,500-seat coliseum in which to defend its Sun Belt title.

The Blue Devils return senior forward Danny Ferry and junior forward Robert Brickey. Senior guard Quinn Snyder will direct the attack, but Krzyzewski says the underclassmen have to be ready to take command as well and everybody will have to pick up on defense.

The best of Duke's three newcomers is 6-foot-10 Christian Laettner, who, like Ferry, can score from anywhere.

"Christian Laettner looks like ... a youngster who can help us a little bit more than the other two at the beginning," Krzyzewski said. "He is more versatile. He can play inside ... he can go outside a little bit."

North Carolina starts without junior J.R. Reid, who underwent surgery in late October to repair a stress fracture in his left foot and who likely won't play until January. Coach Dean Smith has a stronger Scott Williams to help inside, and senior guard Jeff Lebo to direct a newly adopted up-tempo style.

Georgia Tech raised hopes by recruiting three junior college players who will allow 6-9 Tom Hammonds to play power forward instead of switching between forward and center as he did last season.

North Carolina State lost center Charles Shackelford to the NBA and, despite experience at the other four positions, the Wolfpack may have to rotate three players to duplicate Shackelford's production.

Louisville returns 6-9 senior Pervis Ellison, the cornerstone of the 1986 national championship team. Seven-foot center Felton Spencer is considered improved from last season, when he produced seven points and four rebounds a game as a reserve. Guards LaBradford Smith, Craig Hawley and Keith Williams have the necessary experience.

"We will have to stay injury free," Louisville assistant Jerry Jones said, "and not have a number of disruptions. Teams that are national contenders have cohesiveness. A lot depends on how each player accepts his role and also how lucky you are."

A close loss to Iowa in the first round of the NCAA Tournament ended a surprisingly successful season for Florida State and coach Pat Kennedy. Forward Tony Dawson and 6-7 point guard George McCloud will try to lift the Seminoles above successive 19-11 records.

Florida is without 7-2 Dwayne Schintzius for the start of the year due to disciplinary reasons, but the Gators will have an imposing front line when he joins 6-7 Livingston Chatman and 6-7 Dwayne Davis.

Losing Vernon Maxwell and Ronnie Montgomery in the backcourt leaves a gap, but Clifford Lett steps in as the team's lone senior. Two freshmen are battling at point guard.

"This is the youngest team, most inexperienced team I've ever opened a season with," said Florida coach Norm Sloan, in his 37th season of coaching.

Students Will Have TV Report On Exploration Of Roman Ship

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FALMOUTH, Mass. — The undersea exploration of a Roman shipwreck will be witnessed by thousands of students via "telepresence," an on-the-spot TV broadcast brought to them by the discoverers of the wreck of the Titanic.

Plans for the unprecedented educational project were unveiled Wednesday by Robert Ballard, who led the team that found the sunken Titanic in 1985.

Students linked by satellite to at least nine science museums in the United States and Canada will be able to communicate with explorers directing an unmanned mobile camera as it combs the floor of the Mediterranean Sea, Ballard said.

While the $6 million, privately funded project involves several advances in technology, Ballard said its main purpose is to excite students about science, a field that he said has suffered dwindling influence in America.

"We really have a crisis of education in the United States," Ballard said at a news conference at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution. In recent years, he said, science has failed to provide young people with attractive role models.

The role models they have instead are "that scientists are nerds, or as my kids would say, dweebs, and dweebs sit at terminals and are dropouts from society."

In the project, the underwater robot named Jason that helped explore the Titanic will send high-quality television pictures via cable to a ship thousands of feet above on the sea surface. For 14 days next May, the ship and its 50-member crew — including six high school students — will control the movements of the robot and send back satellite images from two underwater locations.

The broadcasts will be transmitted via the Turner Broadcasting System and Electronic Data Systems Corp. to science museums in Boston, Chicago, Memphis, Tenn., Washington, D.C., Dallas, Philadelphia, Rochester, N.Y., Charlotte, N.C., and Victoria, British Columbia.

Bridge is a logical game. If you know what the problem is, more than likely you can work out the right answer.

When North could jump raise spades, South fell in love with his hand. His three honors in partner's suit assured a double fit, and with first or second-round control of every side suit, he knew that there were no two fast losers in any suit. He settled for a small slam when he learned an ace was missing.

West cashed the king of diamonds and followed with the ace, ruffed by declarer. All South had to do to make his slam was to bring in the trump suit without a loser, and with a combined 10 cards in the suit the percentage play was to take a finesse.

It might seem, therefore, that declarer can lead any card from hand and finesse the queen. Most of the time that would be adequate. However, if the cards are divided as above, declarer will still have to concede a trump trick.

A trump finesse is only part of the solution. Declarer also should provide for the possibility that all the missing spades will be in the West hand.

To cater to that, declarer should lead the jack of spades to the third trick. If West plays low, declarer runs the jack and repeats the finesse to pick up all the trumps. If West covers, dummy's ace wins and declarer learns about the 3-0 split when East discards. It is a simple matter for declarer to return to hand in a side suit and lead another trump, taking the marked finesse of the eight if West follows low.

Gunman's Background Studied

St. Anthony Medical Center in Rockford, where he was in critical condition with an abdominal wound, said hospital spokeswoman Betty Cavers.

Police in Milwaukee, where Nguyen lived eight years, know little about the man suspected of the multiple shootings in that city and in the Rockford area.

Milwaukee police Capt. Albert Hentz said Nguyen came to the United States from Vietnam in 1980, sponsored by a refugee program of Milwaukee's Catholic Social Services. He became a naturalized citizen in 1987.

Nguyen shot security guard Michael T. Glee, 18, of Belvidere at an auto dealership and robbed a Belvidere service station before a police chase that ended with Nguyen shooting himself, police said.

Glee was released from the hospital after treatment for a gunshot wound to one arm.

Two More Airlines Boost Their Rates

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The decision by Continental Airlines and at least two other U.S. carriers to boost most of their lowest discount fares reflects current strength in passenger traffic, analysts say.

United Airlines and Northwest Airlines said Wednesday they were following Continental's revamping of the popular fares, used by most vacation travelers. Several other big carriers mulled whether to take the action.

Other competitors of Continental, a subsidiary of Texas Air Corp., were expected to follow suit.

"I would be surprised if they didn't," said Helene Becker, an airline analyst at Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc.

Spokesmen for American Airlines and Delta Air Lines said the carriers were studying Continental's move and considering whether to follow it.

United Airlines, the nation's largest carrier, is matching Continental's action throughout its route system, said spokeswoman Sara Dornacker in Chicago. She said the average increase on the so-called MaxSavers to be hiked would be around $15 each way.

Northwest Airlines partially followed the action, changing around 30,000 MaxSaver fares between different cities, said Northwest spokesman Red Tyler in Eagan, Minn. He said the Continental changes involve more than 100,000 such fares.

"We continue to review the others," Tyler said. "There is still indecision in the industry."

Houston-based Continental notified travel agents on Tuesday night and Wednesday that it would revamp its MaxSaver program to base fares on the length of a flight. Competition on individual routes, not mileage, had determined the fares in the past.

Under the new formula, due to take effect next Wednesday, Max-Saver fares for longer flights generally would be raised while those for shorter hauls would mostly be reduced.

The changes apparently raised about roughly two-thirds of Continental's MaxSaver fares and cut the remaining MaxSavers.

They followed by a few days plans initiated by Continental and matched by other big airlines to drop another category of discount air fares, the "junk fares" available four to seven days before a flight and used mainly by business travelers.

Like Continental, most of Northwest's fare changes were increases, Tyler said. He said Northwest so far has only matched Continental in the markets where the two airlines compete directly. In other markets, Northwest will wait to see whether the other carriers follow Continental's lead, Tyler said.

Burglar Asks Cops For Help

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILLISTON, N.D. — A man charged with burglarizing three grain elevators summoned police to the scene of one of his alleged crimes when he broke his ankle as he wrestled with a door, authorities said.

Harry Dowell, 58, was listed in good condition at Mercy Hospital, where he was taken after he injured himself at the City Elevator Inc., authorities said.

Police arrested Dowell at the elevator after he telephoned authorities early Wednesday, identified himself as a burglar and said he had hurt his left leg, Police Capt. Steve Molinari said.

Dowell told police he had broken into two other elevators, Molinari said, and he was charged with three counts of felony burglary.

Dowell, who was released from the South Dakota State Penitentiary earlier this month after serving almost seven years for burglary, fell and hurt his ankle as he was trying to close a sliding door at City Elevator, Molinari said. He told police he had decided to spend the night there.

Dowell crawled to the office area, where he made himself coffee and enjoyed a few lollipops before the pain prompted him to call police.

Telescope Collapse Will Hurt Research Efforts

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREEN BANK, W.Va. — The collapse of one of the world's largest radiotelescopes sent reverberations through the scientific community and will affect a long list of research proposals, officials said.

"It's a major blow. There's no way to deny that," said George Seielstad, the National Radio Astronomy Observatory's assistant director for Green Bank operations.

The dish, capable of listening to objects 10 billion light years away, crashed to the ground here Tuesday night. A night-shift operator escaped unharmed.

Seielstad said Wednesday there was no wind at the time, and that the cause of the collapse was unknown. All that remained of the telescope's framework and parabolic reflector was a twisted pile of steel girders and aluminum mesh.

Seielstad said that a future space shuttle project will be among the research affected.

"The Gamma Ray Observatory is scheduled to be launched by NASA in 1990 from the space shuttle, and one of the things they will look for will be pulse signals," he said. "We were going to use this telescope to monitor 100 of the brightest pulsars in conjunction with the Gamma Ray observations."

He said no other telescope can take over such work.

"We're shocked," said Dr. Donald Backer, a University of California-

Berkeley astronomer who is doing pulsar research at a sister NRAO observatory in Arecibo, Puerto Rico. "We'll miss it."

Backer, who used Green Bank's 300-foot radiotelescope last year to search for pulsars, said the fallen radiotelescope long ago exceeded its expected lifespan. It was built for $850,000 in 1962.

Engineers from the National Science Foundation, which finances Green Bank for a consortium of nine universities, flew to the site Wednesday to try to determine what caused the dish to topple.

The employee who was operating the 600-ton radiotelescope when it collapsed said there was no warning, Seielstad said.

"His impression was it happened in a hurry," Seielstad said. "Nobody else heard it. Nobody knew it had happened."

He refused to identify the operator or to allow reporters to interview any observatory employees.

Seielstad said the radiotelescope was designed with a 140-foot diameter but was expanded to 300 feet without corresponding changes in material strength or design.

"It did mean the design was less conservative than other similar structures," he said. "That was the price you paid to do something fast and cheap."

The radiotelescope's most celebrated contribution to science came in 1968, when astronomers used it to discover a pulsar at the center of the Crab Nebula. The find helped prove that pulsars are the dense remains of supernovas, or exploded stars.
