Central Banks Move In To Stabilize Dollar

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Central banks intervened in foreign exchange markets today and purchased large amounts of dollars for the second straight day in an attempt to stabilize the U.S. currency's sagging value.

Money brokers said the Federal Reserve, West German Bundesbank and other central banks of major U.S. trading partners were aggressively buying dollars with yen, marks and other key currencies.

"It's the same cast of characters similar to yesterday's intervention," said Robert Hatcher, a foreign exchange trader at the New York branch of Britain's Barclays Bank.

"For the central banks, it's a case now of wearing down the market's inclination to sell dollars," Hatcher said. "The first step of course is to get the dollar to stop falling. The second step is getting people interested in buying dollars. That's going to take awhile."

Others said the dollar may have been helped by Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady, who told NBC's "Today Show" he's not concerned with the currency market gyrations and does not attribute the dollar's trouble to fear that President-elect George Bush won't solve the U.S. trade and budget deficits.

After falling to record or near-record levels following Bush's election last week, the dollar was mostly higher Thursday on a wave of central bank intervention. It rose again this morning from 121.52 yen in Tokyo to 122.15 yen, and strengthened further in London and New York to the 123-yen level.

Against the West German mark, the dollar was largely unchanged at the 1.7430 level and was slightly lower against the British pound at about $1.81.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $419.50 a troy ounce, down from $422 late Thursday. Gold was also down in Zurich and Hong Kong.

Despite its relative stability this morning, economists said the dollar will need much more than central-bank intervention for its long-term health, and some predicted the foreign exchange markets would soon push the dollar lower again.

Intervention is the direct buying or selling of currencies by central banks. If the purchases are large enough, they can influence prices directly. When the Fed, or the Bank of Japan, or the West German Bundesbank, buys dollars directly, that reduces the supply of dollars available and sends up the price.

Robert A. Brusca, chief financial economist for Nikko Securities Co. International, said traders here and abroad still are concerned that Bush and the Democratic-controlled Congress will be unable to work together to narrow the huge gaps in trade and the federal budget, and if left unchecked both factors could hurt the economy.

"Each side appears wedded to their own views and they will be unable to compromise until they've substantially ground each other up," he said.

The dollar's rebound lent some support to the stock market Thursday. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks closed up 14.05 points at 2,052.63.

But bond prices slipped. The Treasury's bellwether 30-year bond finished lower by about $5 per $1,000 in face value, with its yield rising to 9.15 percent from late Wednesday's 9.11 percent. Some analysts blamed the decline on the Treasury's auction of $9.03 billion in new 30-year bonds on Thursday.

Another B-1B Jet Crashes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RAPID CITY, S.D. — A B-1B bomber crashed and burned on a runway at Ellsworth Air Force Base in the second accident involving one of the long-range strategic jets in nine days, officials said today. The crew of four parachuted to safety.

A police officer said the $280 million plane, which was reported to have crashed in a landing attempt about 10:40 p.m. Thursday, may have come in too low and hit a utility pole. A witness said an engine was on fire before the crash.

The crew ejected from the plane, officials said. One crew member may have suffered a minor concussion and another had a possible back injury, said Sgt. Tony Evans, a base spokesman. The other crew members were unharmed, he said.

Ellsworth spokesman Maj. Joseph B. Saxon said at the base on Rapid City's eastern edge that the cause of the crash was not immediately known. The plane was on a routine training flight, the Air Force said.

"It is possible that it came in too low and hit a power pole," said police Lt. Fred Brown. Local officials said the plane knocked down at least one utility pole.

A witness, Dale Landreth, told radio station KOTA today, "The engine was on fire before it hit the ground."

Maj. Temple Black in Washington said a board of officers will be convened to investigate. He speculated that weather might have been a factor. The Rapid City Journal reported fog and visibility of a half-mile at the time of the crash.

The crash came two days after officials reported that the Air Force had inspected and cleared more than two-thirds of the 98 B-1B bombers, which were grounded following a crash Nov. 8 that destroyed one of the planes in Texas.

The crash today was the fourth in

Greenville Man Killed

A Greenville man is dead as the result of a two-vehicle collision on N.C. 33 east today around 8:15 a.m., according to the Highway Patrol.

Trooper Donnie Taylor said Charles Jacob English, 21, was killed when the car in which he was a front-seat passenger ran into the path of a two-ton truck.

Taylor identified the driver of the car in which English was riding as Mary Alice Cannon, 22, of Oakwood Acres east of Greenville. He said Ms. Cannon's 2-year-old son, Chad, was riding in a car seat in the back seat of the car.

Mrs. Cannon and her son were injured, Taylor said, and are in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Taylor identified the driver of the truck as Belvin Tucker, 39, of Greenville. The trooper said Tucker was also injured.

English was dead at the scene of the accident, Taylor said.

No charges have been filed, according to Taylor.

Court Says Refinancing Points Cannot Be Erased All At Once

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Tax Court ruled today that points paid in connection with the refinancing of a home mortgage must be written off over the life of the loan, rather than in the year the cost was incurred.

The ruling upheld the position taken by the Internal Revenue Service, which insists that Congress has drawn a distinction between points paid in a refinancing and those paid for a loan used specifically for buying or improving a home.

"In a refinancing transaction, the funds generated by the loans generally are used not to purchase or improve a principal residence but to pay off the loan that is already in existence and thereby lower the interest costs incurred or achieve some other financial goal not connected directly with home ownership," Judge Theodore Tannenwald Jr. wrote for the majority of the court.

As a result, the court held, Congress did not mean to allow an immediate full deduction for such points.

The case centered around language in the law that permits the immediate deduction of points incurred "in connection with the purchase or improvement" of a home.

The key point was precisely what Congress meant by the words "in connection with." The law does not say, but Tannenwald noted that in explaining the law, that Congress had stated an immediate deduction would not be permitted if a loan was "used for purposes other than purchasing or improving the taxpayer's principal residence."

Dissenting judges noted that the couple involved in the case, James R. and Zenith A. Huntsman of Stillwater, Minn., had used a 30-year refinancing loan to pay off a three-year $122,000 mortgage and a $22,000 home-improvement loan.

"The hard reality is that petitioners in this case were locked into a situation which necessitated that they obtain permanent financing (or at least some type of refinancing) within three years of the date of the purchase," Judge Robert Ruwe wrote or the minority.

"From the standpoint of an ordinary person who is purchasing a home with the proceeds of a large loan, payable three years from the date of purchase, refinancing would be a foreseeable necessity 'in connection with' the purchase."

Bomb Blast

GENEVA — A bomb exploded today outside an office of the Soviet airline Aeroflot, and officials said at least five people were injured.

An employee answering the phone at the office in downtown Geneva said the injured were passers-by and did not work in the office.

Louis Ody, a spokesman at Geneva Hospital, said five victims were admitted, four of them in serious condition with leg wounds and burns.

Marcel Vaudroz, a Geneva police spokesman, said in an interview with Swiss radio that the bomb was hidden in a package left outside the Aeroflot office.

He said no one immediately claimed responsibility for the blast, and there had been no warning prior to it.

Town Of Ayden Cleared Of Liability In Accident That Took Woman's Life

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A jury has ruled that there was no negligence on the part of the town of Ayden or the driver of a town of Ayden vehicle in connection with a 1985 automobile accident that killed an Ayden woman.

Ayden Town Manager Donald Russell said he was pleased with the outcome of what had been a tiring two years of litigation.

"Very much so — we are very pleased with our attorneys and the evidence he presented," Russell said. "We're very pleased it has been settled, and hopefully that's the end of it. It's been dragging on now for a long, long time."

"We were of the opinion it shouldn't have even gone to trial, period. But it didn't work that way," he said. "They did take it to trial and the judicial system did work, and they ruled in our favor."

Greenville attorneys Robert Rouse Jr. and John Martin represented the town in the case, which began Monday in Pitt County Civil Superior Court and ended late Wednesday afternoon. Judge Joseph R. John Sr. of Greensboro presided over the case, and he filed the decision Thursday.

Bertha Younger Gillis of Washington, D.C., sued the town of Ayden and the driver of the town vehicle on behalf of her mother, Alberta Dixon Younger of Ayden, who was killed in the accident on N.C. 11 near the entrance of Ayden-Grifton High School, where Mrs. Younger worked.

The case drew extra attention during the campaign season when former Ayden Mayor Ross Persinger criticized state Sen. Tom Taft, whose law firm handled the suit, for suing the town. Persinger supported Taft's opponent, Republican Bill Dansey, in the Senate race, which Taft won earlier this month.

Ken Haigler, an attorney with Taft, Taft and Haigler, said the outcome of the case was disappointing, but the fact that a judge allowed the case to go to a jury trial proved the lawsuit was justified.

"Certainly, for the family it's disappointing," Haigler said. "But we have enough faith in the system that when 12 people hear the evidence and they make a decision — it's the correct decision."

Widow, Mobley Plead Guilty In White Death

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The plot to kill Bobby Charles White was a tale of love and greed, according to court testimony from a Pitt County sheriff's investigator who took the stand Thursday after two of the players in the murder pleaded guilty.

White's wife, Sandra Faye Haddock White, 46, of Grimesland and James Alton Mobley, 22, of Lot 18, Country Estates in Greenville pleaded guilty in Pitt County Superior Court to second-degree murder in connection with the March 19 killing of White, who was reportedly stabbed more than 30 times.

Mrs. White also pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit murder and solicitation to commit murder; Mobley also pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit murder and felonious breaking and entering.

Earlier this week, Mobley agreed to plead guilty and offer testimony against Mrs. White, who hired him to commit the murder, Pitt County District Attorney Tom Haigwood said in an interview after the sentencing.

Mobley directed investigators to a T-shirt he allegedly wore the night of the murder, according to court testimony. The shirt was hidden under a tobacco barn. He also informed investigators of the location where he threw gloves and the knife used in the murder, but they have not yet been found.

Immediately after Mobley pleaded guilty Thursday, Mrs. White also agreed to plead to the charges, Haigwood said.

Mrs. White and Mobley had been scheduled to stand trial for murder on Nov. 28, but all the people involved in the killing have now pleaded guilty. "It all came together today (Thursday)," Haigwood said.

In exchange for the guilty pleas, both received sentences of life in prison plus 20 years. Haigwood had said he would ask a jury to consider the death penalty if the case had gone to trial and the two had been convicted of first-degree murder.

Another man involved in the murder, James Earl Manning, 24, of Route 2, Box 174, Grimesland, pleaded guilty Sept. 8 in Pitt County Superior Court to second-degree murder, conspiracy to commit murder and aiding and abetting the solicitation of murder.

Manning, Mrs. White's former lover, is to be sentenced Wednesday. He faces a maximum of life in prison plus 20 years. According to testimony from Ivan Harris, chief criminal investigator for the Pitt County Sheriff's Department, Manning and Mrs. White were having an affair, and they enlisted Mobley to kill Mrs. White's husband. She offered Mobley $35,000 to carry out the murder, Harris said.

Manning was the first to plead guilty and offer testimony against the other defendants, and Haigwood said that broke the logjam and allowed prosecutors to file the initial charges.

Baker Gets Early Start On The Job

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George P. Shultz called in his prospective successor, James A. Baker III, today to plan the transition at the State Department and to prepare for next month's visit by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Shultz and Baker have talked over the telephone and at various functions in the last few days, but this would be their first "substantive discussion" of foreign policy, said a U.S. official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Shultz invited Baker to have lunch in the Monroe Room, the secretary of state's private dining room. They did not plan to meet with reporters afterward.

Before the meeting, Shultz spoke to a group of Soviet and American mayors, telling them that progress in U.S.-Soviet relations had produced "a different atmosphere around the world."

He said that "there are still many problems between us, and there are others we have resolved." Shultz took no questions from his audience.

Shultz welcomed President-elect George Bush's selection of Baker last week and said of his prospective successor: "He will hit the ground running."

Radios Stolen

Two nights of break-ins and thefts have forced Pitt County School officials to consider changing the location of parking special education buses.

Greenville Police Officer J.A. Felton said a citizens-band radio valued at $750 was taken from a school bus parked at Agnes Fullilove School in an incident reported at 7:38 a.m. Thursday.

Thieves had also broke into two other buses the previous night at that location, taking two other CB radios, also valued at $750 each.

Rodney Bullock, Director of Transportation for Pitt County Schools, said only three buses reserved for special education use, carry the special communications equipment.

"We have never had anything like this happen before," Bullock said. "We have been parking the buses at Agnes Fullilove School for the convenience of our drivers."

Bullock indicated in the future, the buses containing electronic communications equipment will likely be parked inside the county garage on Mall Drive.

Land Set In Reserve

North Carolina farmers bid 13,478 acres of land into the Conservation Reserve Program during the seventh signup period, according to Bobby Jack Jones, state conservationist for the Soil Conservation Service. More than 8,000 of those acres will be put into trees.

The Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) is one of four conservation provisions of the 1985 Farm Bill. Under the program, landowners receive rent for taking highly erodible cropland out of production for 10 years and up to 50 percent of the cost of establishing vegetative cover. Land placed in CRP must have a vegetative cover on it to prevent soil erosion.

In this signup, tree planting was encouraged with special incentives. A total of 694 farmers submitted bids during the July 18 through August 31 signup period. Dates for the next signup have not been announced.

More than 3.4 million acres were placed in CRP nationwide. Of this number, 227,930 acres were bid to be placed in trees. The program goal is to have 12.5 percent of the total CRP acreage for each of the 1986 through 1990 crop years planted to trees.

Tattoo Parlor Is Rejected

The Greenville Board of Adjustment denied a request Thursday which would have allowed the operation of a tattoo parlor in the downtown area.

The board refused to issue a special use permit to petitioner Gary Nobles to operate a dermagraphic studio at 106 E. Fourth St.

Board members said the request was contrary to the purposes of the CD (downtown commercial) zoning district, which is to attract people to the central business district and to provide for harmonious working, shopping and leisure-time activities.

The board also agreed the use would adversely affect the health and safety of the residents and workers of the city, and would be detrimental to the use and development of adjacent properties and other neighborhood uses.

Panel members said a dermagraphic studio at the downtown location would create a nuisance because of the number of persons who would use such a facility and the type of physical activity on the premises.

Several people voiced opposition to the request at the public hearing on the matter before the board.

In other matters, the board granted a special use permit to Eddie Yarrell to operate a trucking company on the north side of William Tingen Road (State Road 1420), approximately 230 feet east of the intersection of William Tingen Road and SR 1441.

Also approved was a request by Chet Stanley for a special use permit to expand a light-manufacturing use (clothing manufacturing facility) located at the northeast corner of N.C. 11 and Chapman Road, and a request by Newton Storms for a variance from the Flood Damage Prevention Ordinance to exempt the first-floor elevation of a storage building at 1011 E. 10th St. from the required elevation based on the 100-year flood level.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Disturbing

Drugs, Violence, Youth Don't Mix

Kids will be kids and teen-agers will hang out — it's a given that's part of growing up.

While they might not admit it, few adults can honestly say the didn't pass time as a youth propped against their car in some parking lot, shooting the breeze. Maybe they tasted their first drink like that, or stole their first kiss. While parents might shudder a tad at those possibilities, there's no real harm done.

But when violence and drugs become a part of that scene, innocuous activities turn into dangerous situations — for the kids and for the community. Not every youth that hangs out is involved in these activities. As always, a small minority make the noise while the majority get blamed.

In Greenville, a few parking lots have been adopted by youths as their nighttime turf — that's nothing new. What's new, and disturbing, is that the gatherings have spawned fistfights recently and drug arrests are frequent.

Police fear the unruliness will spread. Understandably, they worry a youngster or a passer-by will get hurt, or that the city's insidious drug trade will develop a stronghold in these hang-outs. The community, through law enforcement, schools and neighborhoods, is working very hard to diminish Greenville's growing traffic in drugs.

Understandably, the officers who are doing the legwork for this purge don't want their effort negated — nor does the community need the problem amplified, especially in public parking lots. Police are powerless to disperse the youths — a mighty thin line separates a loitering ordinance and a violation of a person's individual freedom.

While the situation doesn't merit panic, it does deserve the attention of the city's elected officials, those who hold the reins to the police department's power. And although an ordinance on loitering might not be appropriate, a curfew on parking in public lots — emptying the lots at 1 a.m., for example — might have an effect. It would provide some preventive medicine for the gatherings — and give police a way to break them up without infringing upon rights.

The escalation of unlawfulness at teen-age hangouts is a matter of deep concern — for parents, businesses and for other youngsters who don't do anything wrong. When illegal narcotics and violence mix with youth, the results are often tragic. But the issue should not be blown out of proportion. Let's apply a reasonable curfew, and assess the results.

First Step?

Slow Progress Preferable To None

An independent Palestinian state?

It is far off even though the Palestinian Liberation Organization has proclaimed such a state with Jerusalem as its capital.

The proclamation was made by PLO chairman Yasser Arafat who said the government would be a "democratic, parliamentary system based on freedom of expression and multiple parties."

The only problem with the declaration is that Israel holds the territory and shows no signs of giving it up. That's more than a small obstacle. Even though Arab uprisings in the West Bank and Gaza areas have been regular, Israel seems determined to retain the captured territory.

The threat of Palestinian military action means little to Israel. That country has faced PLO covert activities from the beginning. And Israel has lived in a hostile Arab world from its inception.

If there is any hope of compromise that might bring peace to that part of the world and allow Israel to exist without threat of annihilation, it comes in Arafat's moderate tone. The PLO Council accepted a United Nations Security Council resolution which recognizes the right of the Israeli state to exist. The council rejected terrorism and said guerrilla action would be aimed at military targets in the occupied zone.

None of that will cause Israel to rush to the negotiating table. The Jewish nation has long since learned that only military strength ensures its existence in the Middle East.

There would be a faint glimmer of hope for a starting point, however. Israel once settled its differences with Egypt in what was considered a highly unlikely development. That incident proves it can be done and that Israel is willing, under acceptable circumstances, to resolve conflicts non-militarily.

Progress between the PLO and Israel will only come one step at a time. Perhaps the first step has been taken.

Bush Faces Economic Time Bombs

Gunther Wertheimer

For eight years we have had what Joseph Conrad, that spinner of dark tales, might have called "the blessings of illusion." Are we now to face facts? Will fantasy, deprived of the amiable magician, Ronald Reagan, give way to reality?

George Bush is the first sitting vice president elected president in 152 years; his is the first party since 1928 to retain the office without running an incumbent. That was the year Calvin Coolidge turned the office over to Herbert Hoover.

Is there anything to this strange historical analogy? Not necessarily. But there are disturbing vibrations.

George Bush won because enough voters believed that prosperity was robust and would continue. Voters, London's Economist said, might find it "hard to believe" that Bush "is cast by destiny, or by Mr. Reagan's economic policies, to be the Hoover of the 1990s. Well, do not bet on it."

Why such gloom and doom from so impeccable a supporter of market forces as the 145-year-old Economist? Three reasons: budget deficit, trade deficit and corporate debt. The numbers are staggering, and Bush largely failed to address these basic problems in his campaign.

The budget deficit is reckoned at $150 billion. However, if the surplus of the Social Security trust fund, which cannot be used to pay for the deficit, is deducted, the deficit comes closer to $200 billion. President Reagan's legacy is a national debt of $2.8 trillion — $20,000 for each American family of four — whose service costs $150 billion annually, 14 percent of the budget.

Half of that debt is owed to foreign investors, primarily Japanese. Those obligations and the annual $130 billion trade deficit have produced an America that is the largest debtor nation in the world. More ominously, they are at the heart of a shift in the balance of power, which makes the United States economy vulnerable to inflation and recession at the call of forces which we no longer control.

Those "ticking time bombs" confront the incoming president with problems he has acknowledged only with rhetoric and a promise not to raise taxes.

"The assets we have dissipated are gone. The debts we have incurred are real. The capital formation and productivity gains we have foregone are simply lost." So writes Harvard Professor Benjamin Friedman in his sober "The Consequences of American Economic Policy Under Reagan and After."

If "the full impact of these economic policies has not yet reduced our living standards," it is only because of the continuing growth of debt. "But this cannot go on forever. ... The future is beginning to arrive, and it is not what Americans thought they had ordered."

Legislative Antics Beat Democrats

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — When Democratic budget leaders conducted an "open" budget session by talking in code at the end of the 1987 session, they probably figured they were pretty clever. They probably thought it was funny when, in early 1985, they tweaked newly-elected Gov. Jim Martin by fiddling with the date that he delivered his first State of the State address.

On Election Day, Democratic legislators learned the hard way that the public found their past four years neither funny nor clever.

The Democrats lost 13 more legislative seats last Tuesday and now Republicans hold 59 seats, a twentieth century high. To put this in perspective, the GOP held only 10 seats as recently as 1977 and only 34 after the 1980 landslide election of President Reagan and the late Sen. John East.

The Democratic losses could have been worse this year if the Republican Party had contested more seats. Even before the first votes of the primary were cast, the Democrats were assured of eight seats in the Senate, while the Republicans enjoyed the luxury of only one contested seat. In the House, Democrats had 36 certain wins, the Republicans only eight.

If only contested seats are counted, then Republicans and Democrats split the 76 House races decided last Tuesday, 38 each. In the Senate, the Democrats won 21 and the Republicans 10 of the 31 contested seats.

The popular explanation for these losses is that the top of the GOP ticket — President-elect Bush and Gov. Martin — had coattails. But while their victories may have helped in some races, the coattail effect is exaggerated. Consider that Democratic sources, before the election, were steadily maintaining that through state history, governors have never provided coattails.

Also, Bush did not provide coattails wether nationally or state-wide for the office-seekers he would most likely help — Republican congressional candidates. Nor did Republicans make any significant legislative gains in four other southern states where Bush won. While Martin may have helped Jim Gardner become lieutenant governor, his Council of State slate was shut out.

The pattern of ticket-splitting indicates that voters went out of their way to vote against Democratic legislators. After filling up the top of the ticket with GOP votes, they moved to Democrats for Council of State. But a great many then came back to the GOP to vote against legislators.

There is other proof that the voters sought to send a special message to Democratic legislators in particular. On the campaign stump, Martin and Gardner regularly received the loudest applause when they criticized legislative antics. Among "Democrats for Martin" one night in Hillsborough, for example, Martin got tremendous applause on this topic.

Several individual legislators, both during and after the election, said they heard many comments from supporters and critics about legislative treatment of Martin. (In fairness, however, other legislators say this theory is bunk. They blame the losses on Bush-Martin coattails.)

Finally, legislative antics were about the only legislative issue in this election. There was little, if any, debate over the tax increases of the past four years, road building or education, except in the context of how Democratic legislators had opposed Martin.

Martin may, in large part, owe his re-election to the legislature. Absent a strong record to run on, he made a big issue for four years about how they were mistreating him. Martin masterfully cast himself as the little guy, the abused underdog, and it helped endear the voters to him.

Junk Buns Or Jelly Doughnuts?

Pay Your Debts With Shredded Wheat From The Latest Takeover

Art Buchwald

There is a tremendous amount of deal-making going on in the United States nowadays. Just recently, the management of RJR Nabisco offered to buy out its stockholders for $17 billion. Another company, Kohlberg Kravis, upped the bid to $20 billion — and so it goes. There seems to be no end to the spinoffs and leveraged buyouts being made on Wall Street. Many of the firms being taken over or offered for sale are in the food business.

So it came as no surprise to me when Al Lentil, president of United Bread Pudding, said to me, "I'm making a firm bid for American Cholesterol."

"What's the deal?" I asked him.

"In exchange for United Junk Buns, I'm offering the stockholders 10 billion jelly doughnuts."

"That seems reasonable," I replied. "Is United Bread Pudding worth 10 billion jelly doughnuts?"

"It is if I sell off American's Chicken Fat business, as well as its Computer Virus division. My offer is contingent on spinning off United's Paper Flower factories, and dumping our Hamburger Helper plants on the Japanese."

"I don't understand why the owners of American Cholesterol would want to see the firm broken up."

"It's for the good of the stockholders. The book value of American is three jelly doughnuts per one cup of coffee. We're offering six doughnuts, which is much better than if they took their dividends in Oreos cookies."

"Suppose someone comes along and makes a bid to buy American for one billion animal crackers?"

"I'll top their price with two billion loaves of Wonder Bread. I'll fight any unfriendly takeover of my unfriendly takeover. I was the first one who saw the value of breaking up American Cholesterol, and Nabisco better keep its cotton-picking hands off it or I'll crush every Ritz Cracker they own."

"What attracted you to American since you seem to be selling off most of it?"

"They're the biggest chewing tobacco manufacturers in the world. I figure any food company that knows how to merchandise chewing tobacco has a profit potential."

"What happens if the stockholders and management reject your offer?"

"Then they have to pay me to get me out of the deal. I won't settle for less than four billion turkey drumsticks, plus a seat on the board of Eastern Airlines."

"What will you do with the jelly doughnuts?"

"I'm no fool. I intend to exchange them for some blue-chips like Tofu Pizzas. I can't lose on this because there are a lot of pension funds that would do anything to have all of their capital in Tofu."

"American Cholesterol was a giant in the industry. Now since you are spinning everything off, will you still make a product?"

"The first thing to do when you buy out another firm is to cut costs. I intend to do that with a vengeance."

"If you can't produce anything, where are you going to get the shredded wheat to pay off your debts?"

"Once we control American, we hope to have enough leverage to take over Dibbler's Sour Cream with the cash we made on Mother Shapiro's Homemade Linguini."

"Is there really a good chance you can put this all together?" I asked in admiration.

"There is no doubt in my mind. All I have to do is get the bank to OK my credit card so that I can buy a shuttle ticket to Boston."

PLO Takes Small, Historic Step Toward Recognizing Israel

Timothy Phelps

ALGIERS, Algeria — The Palestine Liberation Organization appears to have taken a historic but limited step toward recognition of Israel, for the first time embracing a "two-state" resolution to the Middle East problem.

Forty-one years after Arab leaders rejected the U.N. resolution that divided the old British mandate of Palestine, they now have apparently accepted the U.N. decision that divides Palestine between Arabs and Jews.

The language of the resolutions approved Tuesday contained careful nuances, and PLO officials took pains to avoid clarifying the diplomatically obscure declaration of independence and the political statement. But they made it clear that formal recognition of the modern state of Israel will not come until Israel accepts the newly declared state of Palestine, or at least something close to it in concept.

PLO chairman Yasser Arafat refused at a news conference Tuesday to answer directly when asked about recognition of Israel, and George Habash, leader of a more militant wing of the organization, said that in his opinion, the Palestinian National Council had definitely not recognized Israel.

But the Palestinians have agreed to accept an Israeli state whose boundaries are yet to be negotiated, said Mabil Shaath, who was chairman of the committee that drafted the key political statement approved late Monday night.

"I cannot offer clear recognition when our very existence is denied by Israel," he said. "We want recognition of our rights."

Zehdi Terzi, head of the PLO observer mission at the United Nations, said that "without recognition of the legal rights of Palestinians there is no recognition of Israel. This is like a case of rape that resulted in twins. You cannot grant legitimacy for one without the other."

A Western diplomat here said that the PLO had "not recognized Israel's right to exist in a clear unambiguous formula. But you could read it as im-PLICIT recognition. Their formulas are not clear, not unequivocal, but we seem to have an evolution, a significant evolution in the PLO position."

Analysis

But the diplomat predicted that the steps would not be enough for the U.S. government to drop its refusal to talk with PLO leaders. "It's not even in that ballpark," he said.

In its declaration of independence Tuesday, the PNC said that it was adopting a 1947 U.N. resolution partitioning Palestine and in an accompanying political statement said that it accepted U.N. resolutions 242 and 338 calling for the acknowledgment of the sovereignty and political integrity of all states in the region as the basis for an international peace conference.

The conference should also be based on "the guarantee of the legitimate national right of the Palestinian people, foremost of which is the right to self-determination ...," the PNC said.

'The language of the resolutions approved Tuesday contained careful nuances, and PLO officials took pains to avoid clarifying the diplomatically obscure declaration of independence and the political statement.'

Arafat said that "a political statement contains moderation, flexibility and realism, which the world has been urging us to show. We feel that the ball is now in the Americans' court."

"It is true that this is the 'intifada' (uprising) session of the PNC, but it could also be the session of peace, if the U.S. administration and Israel wish."

But Arafat made it clear that acceptance of the U.N. resolution was not unconditional, as the United States has demanded.

But Shaath said, "If Americans want to read it properly, they can read our acceptance of a two-state solution in Palestine," Shaath said.

Habash, who voted against the PNC political resolution but agreed not to walk out of the meeting, said, "In my opinion, there is a great difference between recognizing Israel finally and officially and between accepting 242 and 338."

In both the political statement and the declaration of independence, the PNC took a strong stand against terrorism, though at the same time it insisted on its right to fight the Israeli occupation. Like any state, the PNC reserved the right for "Palestine" to defend itself.

"The state of Palestine herewith declares that it believes in the settlement of regional and international disputes by peaceful means in accordance with the U.N. Charter and resolutions," the declaration said.

"Without prejudice to its natural right to defend its territorial integrity and independence," the statement said, "it therefore rejects the threat or use of force, violence and terrorism against its territorial integrity, or political independence, as it also rejects their use against the territorial integrity of other states."

Arafat said that "while the intifada escalates, I declare we are ready, we are willing to negotiate peace through the international conference under U.N. auspices."

But he warned that "let it be clear also, I can always come back to our PNC and declare that moderation does not pay."

'Trust Fund Surplus' Isn't, But Notion Invites Alternatives

John Makin

Over the next 40 years, payroll taxes and interest earnings paid into the Social Security system will exceed the amount paid out to recipients by a total of about $12 trillion. There has been a great deal of confusion about the economic effects of the "trust fund surplus." Here are some short, straightforward answers to questions I am most frequently asked about Social Security and the "surplus."

Q: Does the $12 trillion really go into a trust fund that will pay Social Security benefits from here on out?

A: There is no Social Security trust fund in the sense that individual contributions are held in trust to pay individual benefits. The promise of generous Social Security benefits is conditional on the willingness of the working population to tax itself to provide for the elderly population.

That willingness is the real "trust fund."

In 1950 there were 16.5 payroll-taxpaying workers for every recipient. Benefits were modest. By 1980 the ratio of workers to recipients had dropped to 3.2 and benefits had increased much faster than wages, although by 1983 the per-capita income of the over-65 population had come to exceed that of the working-age population. The 1983 Social Security "crisis" loomed and payroll taxes were raised sharply. In 40 years, the ratio will drop to just two workers per retiree. Thus, the $12 trillion surplus (about $2.7 trillion in today's dollars) is necessary to avoid a doubling of payroll taxes about 25 years from now.

Actually, there would be no $12 trillion surplus without an accounting trick employed by the federal government. In years when the payroll taxes earmarked to pay Social Security benefits exceed the benefits paid, the Social Security system acquires special government bonds. The system is credited with the interest on the bonds. The interest on the bonds, which will accumulate to $12 trillion between today and 2030, will be paid by the U.S. Treasury out of general revenues collected from American taxpayers. Thus, the $12 trillion "surplus" just measures another increase in taxes earmarked over the next 42 years to pay Social Security benefits.

Q: Should the trust fund surplus be counted as deficit reduction?

A: Currently, the surplus is included when calculating the federal budget deficit, and therefore the deficit looks smaller. And this makes two things happen. For the present, the borrowing requirements of the federal government are reduced. In the future, when benefits come due, either taxes will have to be raised again, the government will have to borrow more money or benefits will have to be cut. In short, we will face a Social Security crisis all over again.

Q: Doesn't the big trust fund surplus mean that the national savings rate will be increased?

'By the time the "baby boomers" — those who now are between 24 and 45 — retire, the ratio will be down to about $1 per $1 contributed.'

A: Aside from the basic question of whether the federal government should try to increase the national savings rate, there exists a real controversy among economists about whether it can. If individuals see a significant reduction in their take-home pay as a result of higher payroll taxes that they are told will be earmarked to finance retirement benefits, why should they reduce current consumption by the amount of the increase in the payroll tax?

Studies have shown that Social Security contributions are viewed by many Americans as a substitute for savings.

Q: Is the Social Security system fair?

A: By most standards, it would be judged unfair. The payroll tax is levied at about 15 percent on the first $45,000 of income, half of which is paid by employee and half by employer. For someone earning $45,000 or less, the payroll tax is 15 percent of income. For someone earning $90,000, the payroll tax is only 7.5 percent of income. The Social Security system is also unfair across generations. Current beneficiaries receive about $3 for every $1 contributed. By the time the "baby boomers" — those who now are between 24 and 45 — retire, the ratio will be down to about $1 per $1 contributed. For the children of these baby boomers, there currently are no dollars available to pay retirement benefits.

Though the consequences of today's decisions lie far ahead, one thing is certainly true: We can make Americans under age 45 a great deal better off while not harming either current retirees or those within 10 years of retirement by returning Social Security to a safety-net system and allowing Americans to do more of their own retirement planning.

John H. Makin is director of fiscal policy studies at the American Enterprise Institute in Washington.

UNC Study Shows State Has More New Jobs Than Losses

By Robin P. Teater
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Recent layoffs by large companies have drawn a lot of publicity, but there were two jobs created in North Carolina for every job lost in a recent four-year period, a researcher says.

"What isn't announced are the thousands of small businesses that start up across the state and the existing companies that add one or two or five employees," said John Kasarda, co-author of a study that examined employment from 1984 through 1987.

Northern Telecom, Cone Mills Inc., Duke Power Co. and AT&T have recently announced layoffs, but "hardly a public note is made of (small business employment) because it's not significant," Kasarda said Thursday.

Kasarda, a Kenan professor and director of the Center for Competitiveness and Employment Growth at the UNC-Chapel Hill Business School, conducted the study with David Birch, director of the Program on Corporate Change and Job Creation at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston.

During the study period, 763,000 new jobs were created while 365,000 jobs were lost, for a net gain of 398,000 jobs in the 10th largest state.

Of the new jobs, 520,000 came from new business start-ups, 233,000 from expansions of existing companies, and nearly 10,000 from the movement of out-of-state companies into North Carolina, the study found.

Most of the new jobs came in the retail trade, services, and manufacturing sectors.

"North Carolina happens to have the largest percentage of employers in manufacturing of any state in the nation," Kasarda said.

Small companies with fewer than 100 workers contributed about three-fourths of the new jobs, while businesses employing 500 or more provided 21 percent.

Some reasons for the surge of small business growth:

- Large corporations, facing increased international competition, are "farming out" some of their consulting, public relations and other functions to small companies, Birch said.

- The influx of women entering the work force. Women, frustrated with the attitudes of larger companies, are starting their own companies two to three times as often as men, he said.

The rapid growth of high technology, which has become more accessible to smaller companies.

"That means a lot of companies who couldn't play the game before can now play," Birch said. "There's a whole new economy out there for them (small businesses)."

The study, which divided North Carolina into three regions — the east, the west and the central Piedmont — found that the 13-county central Piedmont fared the best.

"This is where the engine of job creation was concentrated in the state," Kasarda said, noting that the region captured 58 percent of the new jobs and that more than two jobs were provided for every one lost.

The central Piedmont, including Charlotte, Greensboro, High Point, Winston-Salem, Raleigh and Durham, where several major universities are located, has a more highly educated work force, he said.

Asked whether most of the new jobs created in the four-year period were low-skilled and low-paying, Kasarda said more minimum-wage jobs are being lost than created.

"What we are finding is that the number of low-paying jobs in North Carolina is going down," he said.

Kasarda cited the latest figures from the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics which showed that the salaries in 90 percent of the new jobs ranged from $11,200 to $44,799.

North Carolina should focus on better education for its workers, because "thoughtware is beginning to replace hardware," he said.

The study was sponsored by the UNC center and Cognetics, Inc., a private research firm based in Cambridge, Mass., and headed by Birch.

Democrats Cancel Session But Some Meet Privately

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Democratic officeholders canceled a meeting to discuss the future of the state party amid criticism that the gathering excluded blacks and women, but Sen. Terry Sanford met privately with some of the officials.

Sanford said the Thursday meeting was one of several plans with North Carolina Democratic groups to try to come up with a "consensus candidate" for the chairmanship who can be recommended to the party's 380-member executive committee.

With the loss last week of the Democrats' candidates for governor and lieutenant governor, the state party has no obvious titular leader.

Some within the party have forecast a battle for primacy between Sanford and former Gov. Jim Hunt on one side and the Council of State — including Secretary of State-elect Rufus Edmister and Attorney General Lacy Thornburg — on the other.

But Sanford denied that, saying he wanted to act as a "facilitator" in the search for a new chairman. The current chairman, Jim Van Hecke Jr., has said he wants to step down.

"I will be meeting with Democratic officeholders and leaders to see what kind of person, what individuals, they'd like to see as chairman and try to develop a consensus candidate," Sanford told The Charlotte Observer just before going into the meeting at a Raleigh restaurant.

The canceled meeting was to be held at state Democratic Party headquarters and was set up a week ago by newly elected members of the Council of State.

But Thornburg, reelected attorney general last week, acknowledged that some "people who needed to be contacted weren't."

"It's better to back up and do it again," he said. On Wednesday, Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, criticized the meeting.

"I'm offended that they would have a major meeting without a broader group," he said. "If they can't see the absurdity of that, then they're in for some shocks."

Thornburg said the meeting would be rescheduled in two weeks.

The canceled meeting drew criticism from others. Bill Hodges, chairman of the first district Democratic Party, said all the jockeying for position struck him as "trying to put a roof on top of a house that didn't have a foundation."

He said the party needed to build from the bottom up, relying more on local party officials.

Some people have already been mentioned as possible candidates for the jobs, including former state Rep. Parks Helms of Charlotte, former Rep. Al Adams of Raleigh, former Commerce Secretary Lauch Faircloth of Clinton, former Rep. Tom Gilmore of Julian in Guilford County, former state party Chairman Wade Smith of Raleigh and Bill Bost, a Southern Pines lawyer who managed Parks Helms' campaign for lieutenant governor and who has close ties to Sanford.

Hospital Spokesmen Say State Must Act To Halt Rising Costs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FAYETTEVILLE — Hospital costs are rising because of inadequate Medicare reimbursement by the federal government, declining admissions and the increasing cost of paying for people who can't pay for themselves, officials say.

"I don't know what to say about Medicare and Medicaid except that it's bad and getting worse," said William Pully, the North Carolina Hospital Association's director of governmental relations.

"We (hospitals) think we are absorbing a little more than our share," Pully said. "There's not a hospital in North Carolina that's making money on Medicare patients — we're losing money."

To accommodate people who can't pay their medical costs, hospital charges rise for privately insured patients, who turn the bill over to their insurance companies. Insure companies then raise premiums so that all insurance subscribers end up picking up the tab, Pully said.

"That's the way health care works in this state," he said. "We charge the paying patients for those who can't (pay)."

Pully spoke Wednesday to a handful of hospital administrators and trustees from area hospitals and state legislators in Fayetteville.

"What we want to enlighten legislators about is why costs are increasing and what they can do to stop it," Pully said.

Pully said about 40 percent of hospital revenues come from Medicare, and since the government does not reimburse hospitals for what treatment actually costs, hospitals lose money and have to shift that loss to privately paying patients.

Medicaid is a state-regulated program, but the federal government pays about two-thirds of the cost, he said.

A family has to earn less than half of the federal poverty level to qualify for Medicaid in North Carolina — which only about 36 percent of the state's poor do, Pully said.

Pully also said fewer patients are entering hospitals, so there are fewer people to help spread costs around. But when people do get hospital care, they are sicker and require more expensive care than in the past.

Under a plan supported by the hospital association, those who earned up to 75 percent of the federal poverty level would qualify for Medicaid, insuring another 180,000 people in the state, Pully said.

The cost would be about $4 million for local governments and $31 million for the state, Pully said. The federal government would then kick in about $71 million, he said.

State Sen. Lura Tally, D-Cumberland, agreed that something had to be done about health care costs.

"This is not new — it's a very serious problem and we hear about it all the time," she said. "We have people who are indigent and need care and they're not getting it. On the state level, we're going to have to make up the difference in Medicaid. We might not be able to go all the way, but we'll have to go part of the way and continue to expand."

Drive Against Sheriff Begins

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RED SPRINGS, N.C. — Eighteen people gathered in Robeson County on Thursday night to launch what they hope will be a successful campaign to oust Sheriff Hubert Stone and his son, Deputy Kevin Stone.

The Robeson Defense Committee, originally formed in Pembroke to aid in the defense of Eddie Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs for the Feb. 1 takeover of The Robesonian, is promoting the campaign with assistance of lawyers and organizers from the Christic Institute South in Carrboro.

Hatcher and Jacobs were acquitted in U.S. District Court in Raleigh of hostage taking and federal weapons charges in the newspaper incident.

The group, comprised of Indian and black men and women, said their goal is to collect signatures from a majority of the 50,000 registered voters in Robeson County. They said blacks and Indians constitute a majority of registered voters.

Neither Sheriff Stone nor his son could be reached for comment.

sources familiar with the letter said.

Ms. Milley, 48, who became the first female chancellor at the school in 1984, could not be reached for comment Thursday night, but has stated she has no intention of resigning.

Ms. Milley's tenure at the school has been stormy from the time of her arrival. In her first 18 months at the helm, 11 officials quit the 700-student school, including the vice chancellors for academic affairs and financial affairs, as well as the deans of music and students.

Faculty Criticizes Arts School Leader

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — Top officials at the N.C. School of the Arts have presented Chancellor Jane Milley with a stinging letter of indictment concerning her managerial style and leadership ability, a Greensboro newspaper reported.

The letter, signed by vice chancellors and deans and hand-delivered to Ms. Milley earlier in the week, won the endorsement of faculty members in the school's five performance disciplines who voted in separate groups this week, The Greensboro News & Record reported in Friday editions.

The letter has also been forwarded to the school's board of trustees.

"The feeling is unanimous," said a graduate student at the school, adding that people want the chancellor to resign.

The letter criticizing Milley accuses her of fiscal irresponsibility, an inability to delegate small tasks, and of having an abrasive personality that has led to vast turnover of talented staff and administrators.

Rate Order Appealed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Rate Bureau said Thursday it will ask the state Court of Appeals to overturn Insurance Commissioner Jim Long's order this month rejecting its 1988 private passenger car insurance rate filing.

Rate Bureau General Manager John Watkins said the Governing Committee voted to appeal Long's order and implement an overall rate level increase of 4.3 percent for liability and physical damage (collision and comprehensive insurance) coverages for automobile insurance, and a decrease of .9 percent for motorcycle liability and physical damage coverages.

The bureau represents the auto insurance industry in private passenger automobile rate cases.

Conviction

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Davie County man has been convicted of first-degree murder in the stabbing death of a 70-year-old Cooleemee woman.

Thomas Mark Adams, 18, of Cooleemee sat impassively as the verdict was read aloud in Iredell Superior Court. A jury of nine women and three men deliberated about 2½ hours before returning the verdict.

The prosecution is seeking the death penalty against Adams. The jury, which will decide Adams' sentence, was scheduled to begin hearing sentencing evidence today.

The alternative sentence is life in prison.

ceived the device, called a vagal nerve stimulator, was not released but he was reported in good condition and resting comfortably, a hospital spokesman said.

Most epileptic seizures can be controlled with drugs, said Dr. J. Kiffin Penry, a professor of neurology and principal investigator in study of the stimulator. A few patients who can't be controlled with drugs can be treated surgically by removing the damaged area of the brain, Penry said.

Intractable seizures are ones that can't be controlled either with drugs or surgery, Penry said he hopes to control those with the stimulator.

Policy Upheld

DURHAM (AP) — The chairman of a special committee set up to study this summer's massive forest fires in Yellowstone National Park said Thursday he believes little could have been done to prevent the disaster.

"When I first went out to the park, I thought that there might have been something that could have been done early on," said Norman Christensen, a professor of Botany at Duke University. "But after I saw it I changed my mind."

Christensen is chairing the committee set up by the National Park Service to study the fires and to recommend fire management policies for the national parks.

At issue is a controversial park service policy of allowing natural fires to burn uncontrolled as long as the fires remain within certain guidelines. The policy, implemented in 1971, was designed to clear out debris and make room for the growth of new seedlings.

Martin Says Legislators Show Willingness To Work With Him

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Martin says he'll try to expand the career ladder program for teachers, increase highway construction, consolidate environmental agencies, gain veto power for the governor and build a bipartisan working relationship with the legislature in his second term.

"Already, I have seen a willingness on the part of the legislative leadership to work on problems that might divide us, and I hope that will continue for a long time," Martin said Thursday.

Martin said at a news conference that his re-election and the election of Republican Jim Gardner as lieutenant governor gives him a "golden opportunity" to push a set of legislative goals, including veto power for the governor.

"I see it not just as a window of opportunity," Martin said. "I see it as a door."

"The timing is right from every respect you look at it... to share ideas and not try to rub each others' nose in it," he said.

Martin said he met Wednesday for about 40 minutes with House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison.

"What we've heard from the legislative leadership is if we're willing to put everything on the table, they're willing to talk about it (veto power)," Martin said. "I don't know what the process will be, but I have found a willingness to discuss it."

Martin said he was not willing to make the same concession offered by his Democratic opponent, Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, who said during the campaign he might be willing to trade the right of gubernatorial succession for veto power. North Carolina is now the only state that does not give its governor veto power.

"My response then and now is that I don't see the need to make concessions before we even sit down at the table," Martin said. "I think the public would support both veto power and a second consecutive term for the governor. It is an opportune time for us to have that discussion. Let's just put our proposals forward and see what we have."

"My view on veto is that the governor should not decide how to balance between the legislative and executive branches and the legislature should not decide how to balance between the executive and the legislative branches," Martin said. "The people should decide that."

Martin said he and Gardner are working as a team, but said the new lieutenant governor and the Democratic majority in the state Senate would have to resolve how power is to be shared. Some Democrats want to strip Gardner of the power to assign bills and appoint committee members and chairmen, powers held by his predecessors under the Senate rules but not required under the state Constitution.

"How they work that out is going to be between them," Martin said. "You can argue that as a member of the minority party, he should not make the appointments, but I don't think the people of North Carolina see the governor and lieutenant governor as minorities," Martin said. "He (Gardner) got more votes than his opponent."

"What I think is going to determine the outcome is not the weight of arguments, but whether both sides can reach an amiable agreement," Martin said. "If they can, it will set a good stage for us to move forward. If it falls apart, we will still try to move forward."

District Attorney

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Three Robeson County lawyers, including an assistant district attorney, are seeking to succeed Joe Freeman Britt as the chief prosecutor in the county.

Britt, who has been district attorney for Robeson and Scotland counties since 1974, has been elected to a new Superior Court judgeship created for the county.

Gov. Jim Martin must appoint a replacement for Britt by Dec. 31. Because of judicial district changes, the new district attorney will serve only Robeson County.

The three lawyers who say they are interested in the job are J. Richard Townsend, 36, who has been an assistant district attorney for about seven years; E. Charles Bodenheimer, 37, who has been in private practice in Lumberton for eight years, and George D. Regan, 42, who has had a private general law practice in St. Pauls for about 14 years.

Welder Burned

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — A Wilson County man remained in serious condition at the N.C. Memorial Hospital Burn Center in Chapel Hill on Thursday, suffering from burns he received following a fiery truck explosion.

Jerry Lee Mason, 40, of Kenly, was transferred from Wilson Memorial Hospital to the burn center Wednesday afternoon shortly after he was brought in by emergency personnel.

Mason, who works for Johnson Industrial Machinery Services Inc., was welding hooks onto a 250-gallon diesel tanker when fumes inside the tanker ignited with the welding sparks and caused an explosion, officials said.

Bus Fight

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — A Lee Senior High School student has been arrested and charged with possession of a weapon on school property after a fight involving several students broke out on a school bus, officials said.

Anthony Lee McIntyre, 17, was charged Wednesday with possession of a weapon on school property after the fight, which reportedly occurred on a bus traveling from Lee Senior to East Lee Junior High School, according to Capt. Marty Cole of the Sanford Police Department.

McIntyre was detained in Lee County jail under a $500 secured bond, Cole said.

Jarrett Seaman, administrative assistant for Lee County schools, said Thursday that several other students were suspended and several more were expected to be suspended as a result of the fight.

According to Cole, a student reported to police he had been struck in the head by a BB gun on the bus. He was taken to Central Carolina Hospital, where he was treated and released.

Eight Youths Face Charges In Stabbing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON, N.C. — Seven more youths have been arrested in the killing of a high school student who was stabbed during a fight, but school officials and community leaders say they don't think there is widespread racial tension at the school.

Marcus Bey, 18, was stabbed in the neck Wednesday afternoon on a catwalk that connects the northwest corner of the city to the service road that runs behind the campus of Lexington High School.

Lexington Police Chief Lucius Powell said Thursday that seven teen-agers, including five from Bey's side of the fight, were charged with aiding and abetting second-degree murder in his death.

An eighth teen-ager, Robert F. Branham, 18, was arrested shortly after the fight and charged with second-degree murder. Of the eight, Branham is the only one who is not a student at the high school.

Powell said that the seven others should also be held accountable for Bey's death because they could have avoided the fight, which Powell described as the second round of a scuffle that began Tuesday. Both charges carry a maximum punishment of life in prison.

Those charged are: Eric D. Pratt, 16, and his brother Christopher E. Pratt, 17; Quentin M. Nichols, 16; D. Brooks Hooper, 16; Christopher D. Justice, 16, and two juveniles.

Powell said the six named teen-agers were being held in the Davidson County Jail without bond Thursday night, while the two juveniles were in a juvenile-detention center.

Because the fight involved a group of black students and a group of white students, there was some concern in Lexington Thursday that Bey's death might lead to racial tensions at school and in the community.

School officials and Powell tried to dispel those fears.

"It (the fight) stems from two hot-headed groups of young people," Powell told The Winston-Salem Journal. "Certainly there were racial slurs, but I think it (the slurs) was a matter of convenience rather than bigotry on both sides."

Powell said that he did not know how Tuesday's fight began but that, by Wednesday, word had spread across the school about a fight that afternoon at the catwalk.

Students said Thursday that the catwalk over Business 85 is notorious as a place for fights. It is also the only way for students from Erlanger, where Branham and his friends live, and from the neighborhood where Bey and the Pratt brothers live, to walk to and from school.

Students and teachers said Bey was an outgoing, popular student, well-known and well-liked among blacks and whites.

One teacher described him as a promising art student.

He and his friends called themselves the Strike Force, but police say that, despite the name, they were not an organized street gang. Bey and several friends, however, were charged last spring in a series of breaking and enterings, Powell said.

Harrington Outlines Plan to Complete Interstate 40 Bypass

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A $3.06 billion state highway package would complete the Interstate 40 bypass around Winston-Salem by 1992 and speed up several major road projects in northwest North Carolina.

The widening of U.S. 421 to four lanes in Wilkes and Yadkin counties, the extension of U.S. 52 in northern Davidson County, and a two-lane connector between U.S. 52 and Interstate 77 in Surry County would all be finished early under the eight-year master plan for road development, known as the Transportation Improvement Program.

James Harrington, the state secretary of transportation, outlined the package Thursday for the N.C. Board of Transportation, which is to vote on the program next month.

Under the plan, North Carolina would spend $505 million for roads in 1989 — the largest amount ever for one year — and then $300 million in 1990 and $375 million in each of the next six years.

Even with the unexpected bonus of $114 million in federal money for the 20.9-mile I-40 bypass, Harrington said, the proposed package will meet just one-fourth of the state's $12 billion in identified road needs.

Harrington said that he plans to meet with Gov. Jim Martin and legislative leaders on proposals to increase state road funds through such measures as toll roads and bridges, increased title and registration fees.

The Board of Transportation is also to consider a plan to designate several highways for special consideration as proposed critical connectors, a designation that would give the roads priority in future expansion.

- Those include:
- U.S. 158 from Winston-Salem east to Currituck.
 - U.S. 64 from Mocksville east to Lexington.
 - U.S. 221 south from Boone to Rutherfordton; N.C. 105 west from Boone to Linville; and U.S. 19 west from Linville to Mars Hill.
 - U.S. 29 north from Greensboro through Reidsville to Virginia.
 - U.S. 52 south from Salisbury to Wadesboro.

Day Care Unit Backs Ban Against Spanking

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The N.C. Child Day Care Commission has rejected the pleas of church-run centers, upholding its ban on spanking in day care centers, but a lawyer says he expects to fight the ruling in the courtroom.

"The next move from here obviously would be to the courtroom," said Allen A. Bailey, a Charlotte lawyer representing 13 churches challenging the rule. "We've been preparing for that from day one."

The commission voted 8-6 Thursday to reject the appeal from church-run day care centers, which support spanking to discipline children as part of religious training.

The commission also rejected the advice of a state hearing officer who had recommended allowing the church-run centers to use corporal punishment.

Appointees of Republican Gov. Jim Martin opposed the ban on spanking; appointees of Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and House Speaker Liston Ramsey, both Democrats, supported the ban.

"We do not believe it's in the best interest of children to be spanked in any day care center," said commission member Bob Eagle of Charlotte, vice president of Kiddie Korner Day Schools Inc.

"It has nothing to do with religious beliefs," Eagle said. "Our concern is about how young children are treated. We have a responsibility to protect young children."

"Religious beliefs are important," said E. Carol Spruill of Raleigh, vice chairman of the commission. "Religious practices are important. But so is protecting the safety of little children."

But commission member John Morris of Smithfield said the commission was infringing on family matters. He said parents should be allowed to delegate discipline to day care workers.

"We as a state have said parents do not have the right to determine how their children are disciplined," he said.

Judge Voids PTL Bidding, Sets New Auction Dec. 12

By Trip DuBard
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — A judge kept the "promised land" of a viable television ministry out of reach by postponing the PTL sale until December, but the PTL flock will find the way, their religious leader says.

"We're not losing sight of the promised land," said Sam Johnson, president of Heritage Ministries at PTL. "One of these days we're going to cross the River Jordan to enjoy the blessings that await us."

Johnson was responding to Thursday's decision by Bankruptcy Court Judge Rufus Reynolds to reopen bidding on the ministry's assets and hold an auction Dec. 12.

Reynolds said offers presented Thursday at an auction by the only two qualified bidders — Canadian businessmen Stephen Mernick and Peter Thomas — failed to meet the financial conditions he set the day before.

As a result, he scheduled another auction and said he would convene court the following day, Dec. 13, to hear its results and decide on a sale of the 1,700 acres, satellite television ministry and Heritage USA theme park at the Fort Mill-based ministry.

Though PTL's facilities have continued to operate while a buyer was sought, Reynolds said he would close the doors and auction the ministry off if a sale is not approved at the December meeting.

"It's either then or nothing," Reynolds told a packed federal courtroom.

Reynolds had set Thursday as the deadline for wrapping up a 7-month effort to arrange a sale of the assets.

But the $115 million bid by Mernick, a 34-year-old rabbi and businessman from Toronto, did not provide adequate assurances that the remaining $65 million would be paid after an initial $50 million down payment, Reynolds said.

And Thomas's $70 million cash bid allowed him to walk away from the deal for up to 30 days, a violation of Reynolds's conditions. Thomas, a 50-year-old real estate magnate from Vancouver, makes his bids through the Samoth Capital Corp., which he controls.

Mernick's bid arrived after his attorney received a one-hour extension due to what he said was the death of Mernick's father-in-law in Memphis, Tenn.

But Reynolds later said he'd decided to "turn all of them down and to start from scratch."

Both Mernick and Thomas were at the courthouse Thursday and said afterward that they would consider their alternatives before deciding whether to continue bidding.

Bidding will begin at $50 million to $60 million, PTL trustee M.C. "Red" Benton said. The bidding will follow Reynolds' preset conditions, which forbid contracts allowing buyers to walk away from the deal within a specified period of time and require a 5 percent downpayment, among other things.

Benton said he expected one to two more bidders to appear, based on the interest in the property.

PTL filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in June 1987, three months after its founder Jim Bakker stepped aside after admitting having a sexual encounter with church secretary Jessica Hahn.

Under Chapter 11, the Heritage USA theme park and hotel, television network and other facilities are allowed to operate without the threat of creditors' lawsuits until a plan is developed to put the finances in order.

Under Chapter 7, the doors would be closed and the court would proceed to a straight liquidation.

"I assure you now that if it's not concluded (Dec. 13), I will not put up with this case any longer under (Chapter) 11," Reynolds said. "I will move it to Chapter 7."

In either case the sale proceeds would be applied to the ministry's debts, which could reach $130 million.

Reynolds has said he believes the ministry's assets will plummet in value if the facilities close before a sale.

But some creditors have pushed for immediate liquidation, citing the costs of keeping the facility running. Reynolds said Wednesday that PTL is losing $300,000 to $400,000 a month.

Reynolds said he was laboring to keep PTL in Chapter 11 because "(Chapter 7) doesn't bring the most money to the most people."

Since the summer, PTL has been operating as a non-profit corporation known as Heritage Ministries, Inc. and a for-profit corporation which holds all the former ministry's assets.

With the proposed sale of assets, PTL as an entity would cease to exist, leaving behind only Heritage Ministries, Inc.

The effort to sell PTL has dragged on since Reynolds withdrew an earlier deadline of Oct. 1 at Benton's request for more time.

Since the sale was proposed in April, mysterious Australian businessman Gavin Morehu, Charlotte, N.C. Hornets owner George Shinn and defrocked PTL founder Bakker have said they wanted to buy the site, then faded from view. Bakker fell from the bidding earlier this fall when he was unable to raise a $3 million downpayment.

He received a further setback last week when Reynolds ordered Bakker, his wife, Tammy, and former aide David Taggart to repay PTL nearly $7.7 million in excessive compensation and benefits.

Bakker attorney Ryan Hoavis said Thursday Bakker has not relinquished hopes of buying back the ministry.

"The problem is getting the money together," he said.

Trio Will Receive Schweitzer Awards

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM — Dr. George Hitchings, a winner of the 1988 Nobel Prize in medicine, was chosen Thursday as the recipient of the 1989 Albert Schweitzer International Prize in Medicine.

Boris Luban-Plozza, an authority in psychosomatic medicine from Locarno, Switzerland, won the Schweitzer prize for humanities, while Beverly Sills, general director of the New York City Opera, won the prize for music.

The three will be honored March 22 in Kenan Auditorium on the campus of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington.

The prizes are awarded every four years by the N.C. Educational, Historical and Scientific Foundation Inc. to individuals worldwide who demonstrate Albert Schweitzer's philosophy of "reverence for life."

The recipients are chosen by a secret committee from nominations sent in by an international nominating council to the chairman, the Rev. Hugh Anderson, professor emeritus of the Divinity School, Edinburg University, Edinburg, Scotland.

"I am elated," Hitchings said Thursday, recalling that he had been nominated before. "I had written it off, since I had been nominated year after year after year. Time had passed and I didn't think I would get it."

The awards committee described Hitchings as the creator of medicines used by millions of people around the world to cure illness and sustain life.

Last month, Hitchings and Gertrude Elion, retired drug researchers of Burroughs Wellcome Co. in Research Triangle Park south of Durham, were named recipients of the 1988 Nobel Prize in Medicine "for their discoveries of important principles for drug treatment."

A Chatham County resident, Hitchings, 83, retired from Burroughs Wellcome in 1975 after 33 years of service with the firm. When he retired, he was vice president for research, development and medicine, a position he had held since 1967.

While employed with Burroughs Wellcome, Hitchings discovered new compounds for the treatment of leukemia, malaria, gout and a wide range of bacterial diseases, in addition to an immunosuppressive agent that made the first kidney transplant possible.

Relatives File Suits In Deaths

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — Relatives of two people who were killed in a shooting spree last summer have filed lawsuits against the Forsyth and Davidson county sheriffs, accusing them and their departments of negligence.

The suits were filed Thursday in U.S. District Court by the families of Ronald Lee Hull, 32, and Crystal Suzanne Cantrell, 16. They and two other people were shot to death by Michael Charles Hayes July 17.

Hayes also wounded five people that night as he stood along a road and shot at motorists with his .22-caliber rifle. Hayes is in Central Prison in Raleigh awaiting trial.

The suits contend that Forsyth County Sheriff E. Preston Oldham and Davidson County Sheriff Paul "Jaybird" McCrary were "grossly negligent in training and supervising (their) deputies." Five of Oldham's deputies were also listed as defendants in the suits.

The suit claims that both counties were negligent in their handling of the sniper situation and in their deputies' training. In addition, Forsyth County was negligent because its deputies were inadequately trained in emergency mental-commitments proceedings, the suit says.

Oldham declined to comment Thursday night. "The matter will be resolved in a court of law," he said. "I'm not afraid to face that court."

McCrary also declined to comment.

The lawsuits seek a minimum of $10,000 for both families. But the actual claims are expected to go much higher.

The suit contains 16 allegations of negligence against Oldham. Five of his deputies — Kenneth Aronhime, William Capers, Jackie Crawley, D.J. Jones and Claude Chadwick — are accused of failing to protect the victims.

Apart from the allegations of negligence in training Davidson County deputies, McCrary also is accused of negligence by failing to arrest Hayes before the shooting on an outstanding warrant against him.

BANGKOK, Thailand — Two Americans who were detained in Laos after entering the country illegally to publicize a $2.4 million reward for the release of any American prisoners of war left here Friday for the United States.

Laotian authorities freed Donna Long and James Copp, both of North Carolina, on Nov. 12, after holding them for 41 days. They had entered communist Laos illegally by renting a boat from the Thai side of the Mekong River, which separates the two countries.

Ms. Long, 45, is a writer from Jacksonville, and Copp, 44, is a school teacher from Hampstead. They said they were not physically mistreated in Laos but were interrogated and spent 32 days in solitary confinement.

They were released after a U.S. veterans group paid $1,500 in administrative costs and canceled a protest planned near the Laotian Embassy in Washington to demand their release.

Bush Names Sununu To Head White House Staff

By Rita Beamish
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — President-elect George Bush, after picking a "take-charge kind of guy" as his chief of staff, said today he intends to fill out his economic team and then turn to national security posts.

Bush, here for a private meeting with several governors, told reporters he planned to "flesh out the economic side of the house. I think, and then start working on national security."

Asked if that meant he was preparing to name Richard Darman, his longtime economic aide, as director of the Office of Management and Budget, Bush laughed but said nothing.

After the morning meeting, Bush was flying back to Washington for a Capitol Hill lunch with the speaker of the House, Jim Wright.

As the day began, New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu, publicly picked by Bush Thursday as his next chief of staff, told a television interviewer that the president-elect would communicate directly with Congress "to begin the kind of interaction that's necessary" to address the federal budget deficit.

"I think Congress and the president are going to work aggressively and quickly to deal with that issue," Sununu said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

There was unusual turmoil in the Bush ranks Thursday when the president-elect announced his selection of Sununu as chief of staff and endorsed Lee Atwater, his wily campaign manager, as the next chairman of the Republican Party.

Craig L. Fuller, Bush's vice presidential chief of staff for four years and co-director of the transition, called The Associated Press beforehand to reveal that having been passed over for chief of staff, he would quit working for Bush as of Jan. 20.

Fuller said he informed Bush before the election that the only post he would accept in the new administration was chief of staff. He said he harbored no ill will toward Sununu.

Sources close to Bush said Fuller had been offered several plums, including transportation secretary and head of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, but had turned them down.

In choosing the conservative, blunt-spoken Sununu and Atwater, a bare-knuckled campaign strategist, Bush may have been indicating to Democrats who control Congress that he is prepared to play political hardball.

But he sounded a different note at his news conference, saying he expects Sununu "to build a constructive relationship" with Congress. He also called Sununu "a take-charge kind of guy" with the experience to work with his former colleagues in the statehouses.

Bush, who previously announced his choice of James A. Baker III as secretary of state and Nicholas F. Brady as a holdover treasury secretary, said he expects to announce a director for the Office of Management and Budget soon.

Transition sources have said that post is likely to go to Darman, while Stanford University economist Michael J. Boskin is likely to be chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

Bush has had to contend with a succession of economic bad news since his election. The stock market has fallen and the dollar has declined in value, with many analysts questioning Bush's ability to resolve to cut the nation's massive trade and budget deficits.

Bush aides hope fast action in naming his economic team will bolster confidence in the president-elect.

Brady, asked on NBC-TV's "Today" show if the behavior of stock prices and the dollar's value indicate a lack of confidence in Bush's ability to overcome the deficit, replied, "I just disagree."

"The Bush deficit-reduction plan, which is called a flexible freeze, will work. I think we have to give the vice president a little time to put his team together. I'm confident that things will work out just fine."

But Sununu, in his interview, said he feels that there is "a little bit of nervousness out there."

Bush said the OMB job "is important and I want to get our economic team in place. ... Most people would agree we've moved very fast so far. But I will go forward with the economic team."

Bush, who had a breakfast meeting Thursday with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and lunch with President Reagan, also held a private chat with former Texas Sen. John Tower, who is rumored to be a leading candidate for secretary of defense.

Bush defended Sununu, an Arab-American, for his refusal to sign a proclamation two years ago condemning a 1975 United Nations resolution that equated Zionism with racism. Sununu was the only governor to balk at signing such a proclamation.

Bush said Sununu was "well within his prerogative" to not want to meddle in foreign policy as a governor. "Everybody knows my position on it, that I think that (U.N.) resolution is outrageous" and should be repealed, Bush said. He also pointed to Sununu's role in drafting the 1988 Republican platform, which called for a rescission of that U.N. Resolution 3379.

Sununu told reporters, "I have no problem saying that that (resolution) ought to be repudiated."

Sununu, 49, is an engineer by training and a former Tufts University professor, with no previous experience in Washington. Asked about his reputation for having a short fuse, Sununu joked, "I'm a pussycat."

He said his main task will be to serve as "an honest broker" and present Bush with "as much information" as possible about the decisions he must make.

Sununu said today that "if I can blend into the woodwork while (Bush) gets the visibility, that's the way it should be done."

Bush said Atwater's job will be "winning elections" for the GOP.

Lawmaker Calls Sununu's Choice Gamble For Bush

By Steven Komarow
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Capitol Hill lawmakers say John Sununu, George Bush's choice as his new chief of staff, could be a tough advocate for the new president if he listens and learns the ways of Washington.

House Majority Whip Tony Coelho, who debated Sununu several times on television during the campaign, found him "tough and competent, firm in his view ... and he has Bush's confidence."

Coelho, the third-ranking Democrat in the House, said Bush's choice nonetheless was a gamble because "the guy doesn't know Washington. That's a very important negative."

"I think he can do the job," he said. "The key is does he have enough personal confidence to surround himself with people who ... know the power centers in Washington, what makes this city tick."

Rep. Dick Cheney of Wyoming, who is expected to become the House Republican Whip in January, said lawmakers understand that Sununu's first job is to do George Bush's bidding. But he would do well to hire a strong, experienced liaison with Congress.

"I think what Congress expects more than anything else is understanding ... that we have a legitimate role in the process," said Cheney, who served as former President Gerald Ford's chief of staff. "It's more a matter of attitude than anything else."

Ford, before becoming vice president and then president, was the House Republican leader, so the staff's congressional experience was less important. With Reagan, who had no Washington experience, Capitol Hill relations rested heavily on aides.

"My guess is Bush is going to fall somewhere in between," said Cheney, noting that Bush still has a lot of friends in Congress from when he served in the House for two terms from 1967 through 1970.

Many lawmakers know Sununu mostly from his role in the Bush campaign, where the three-term governor was often leading the harshest attacks against the Democrats. The 49-year-old engineer has a reputation as a self-assured and somewhat abrasive manager from his six years in the New Hampshire Statehouse.

It's a style that could generate friction in the back-rubbing world of the Capitol.

Joseph Grandmaison, the New Hampshire Democratic Party

chairman, said Sununu will "have to cool down his act."

"On a state level, he thinks nothing of dressing down legislators. The first time he tries to do that to a senior member of Congress, he'll find his ... effectiveness tremendously impacted," Grandmaison said.

Bush, in announcing the appointment on Thursday, said he was sure Sununu could "build a constructive relationship with Congress."

Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., who is running for Senate Majority Leader, said he was like many in Congress who will wait and see.

"He is widely praised outside of Washington but brand-new inside Washington," he said.

Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., a Sununu ally from his home state, said he didn't think getting along with Congress was the most important task for the new chief of staff.

"I would advise him to try to transform Washington and not be conformed to it," Humphrey said. A failing of the Reagan administration, he said, was that it was sometimes "too obliging toward the bureaucracy and the Congress."

The appointment of the chief of staff is the president's. It does not require the approval of Congress. If it did, Sununu certainly would take heat over his refusal to join 49 other governors in opposing a United Nations resolution equating Zionism with racism. Because of that stance, several Jewish organizations have expressed concern about Sununu, whose Lebanese father was a Boston businessman.

Sununu said Thursday he felt as governor he should not embroil himself in foreign policy issues. He added that he took pains to make sure the 1988 Republican platform included a condemnation of the U.N. resolution.

The case was a difficult one to develop, and prosecutors would have had a tough time convicting all three defendants without testimony from each of them, Haigwood said, thus the plea arrangement was the best result.

"You could put all three of them on trial together, not make any deals. Maybe you'll come out of it with one of them, maybe two of them," he said after the sentencing.

As deputies walked Mrs. White to the jail, she told reporters: "I just didn't get a fair trial." She did not admit she was guilty of murder when Judge David E. Reid Jr. questioned her. She said she chose the plea arrangement because it was the best alternative for her.

But Haigwood said he was satisfied that she did initiate the crime.

"I think she was the spark that started the fire," he said. "And because of that, we made every effort to convict her, to break each logjam and turn each defendant against the other in order to convict her."

When Reid asked Mobley if he was guilty of each offense to which he entered guilty pleas, he answered, "Yes, sir."

White's mother, father and other family members sat behind the prosecution's table during the proceedings, and Haigwood said the family had agreed to the plea arrangements.

Reid said in court that he had known White and his family for some time, and it is always difficult for a resident Superior Court judge to preside over a case in his home county in which he knows the victims.

After the sentencing, Reid turned to the family and said: "I'm very sorry I had to participate in this, and I wish you all Godspeed."

The investigation, which involved State Bureau of Investigation agents and Pitt Sheriff's investigators, revealed that Manning once lived in the White home along with Mrs. White and her husband, Harris said. Manning drove an automobile registered in Mrs. White's name, and she also bought his beer and marijuana, Harris said.

She told at least two people she was looking for a way to kill her husband, Harris said, and at a meeting at the home of a Farmville man, Manning and Mobley also discussed the murder. According to Harris, Mobley said, "Yea, I'm gonna do it."

Manning had approached Mobley, his first cousin, about the idea early this year, Harris said, and Mrs. White later offered Mobley the money and her family's mobile home on N.C. 33 in exchange for the murder. She was reportedly going to get the money through a life insurance policy taken out on her husband, Harris said.

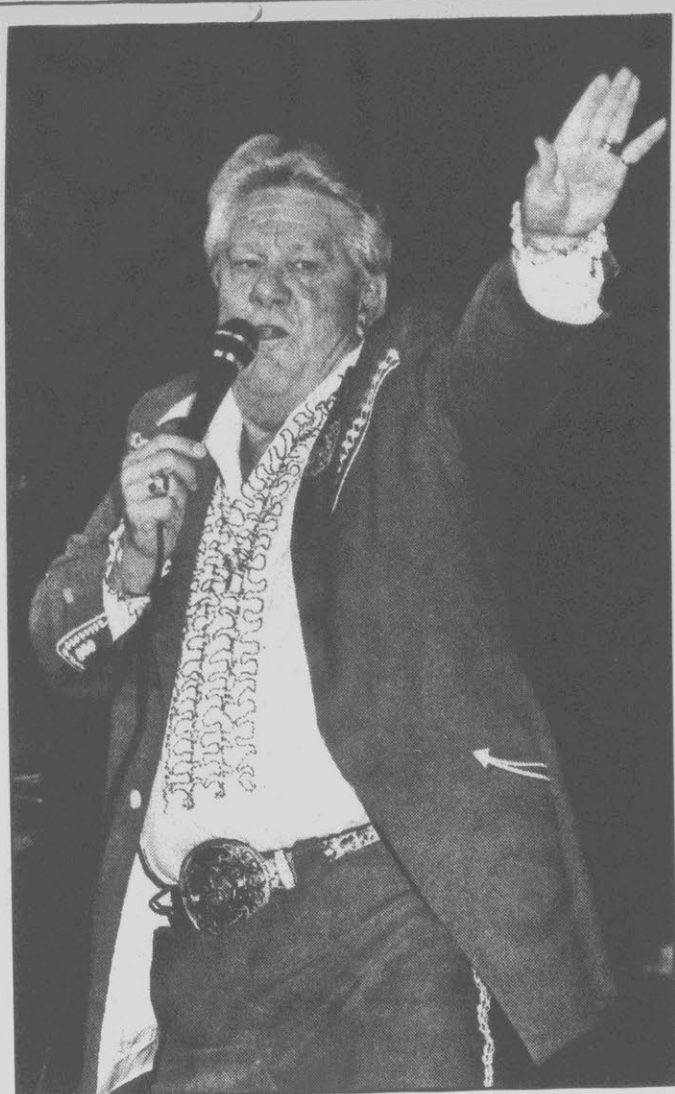

"She wanted to have Bobby done away with so her and (Manning) could be together," Harris said. "She asked him if he knew anyone that would kill Bobby for him for her. He said no. But later he said his cousin, James Mobley, would do it."

According to Manning's statement to investigators, on the morning of the murder Manning picked Mobley up and the two rode around and drank beer. He reportedly asked Mobley if that night would be OK to carry out the murder. Mobley reportedly said it was fine, he had nothing else to do, Harris testified.

About 2 p.m., Manning called Mrs. White and she met the two men at the sand dunes off the eastern bypass, Harris testified. She said she would go to her mother's home about 7 p.m. to establish an alibi. Manning agreed to drop Mobley off near the White home and go home himself to establish an alibi.

Harris said Mobley informed investigators that Mrs. White told him at that meeting to do the job thoroughly. "If you're going to do it tonight, do a good job. We don't need him coming back being a witness against us," she reportedly told Mobley. "Don't half do it. Do it to kill him."

According to Harris' account of Manning's statement to investigators, Manning and Mobley followed through with the plan, and Mobley walked to White's home from about

Shifting Mobile Home Traps Man

A Simpson man was injured Thursday afternoon when he was pinned under a mobile home that shifted as he and others attempted to repair a wheel of the mobile unit.

The accident victim, identified as Jack Pittman Williams of Simpson, was listed today in fair condition in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Frank Coburn, Pactolus Rescue Squad captain, said the accident occurred on U.S. 264 about a mile east of its intersection with Greenville Boulevard extension.

Coburn praised the judgment of Williams' co-workers who he said jacked up the mobile home and slid him out without lifting him. He said Pittman's left chest, hip and thigh were injured.

The Pactolus Rescue Squad responded to a 5:45 p.m. call.

Negligence Ruled Out

"I think the clients were pleased to have their day in court, which is what they're entitled to. We're absolutely satisfied the jury heard all the evidence."

The accident occurred May 17, 1985, at about 2 p.m. Mrs. Younger was riding in an automobile that was headed south on N.C. 11 and made a left turn on State Road 1108 in order to enter the high school parking lot. There was a flashing yellow light at the intersection, according to court records.

An Ayden town truck, driven by Marvin Lee Fox of Ayden, who still works for the town, struck the car on the right side. Fox was headed north on N.C. 11. Mrs. Younger died as a half-mile away. Mobley was to tell White he had car trouble and needed a ride, but when White would not give him a ride, Mobley killed him in his home.

Harris said the next day Manning reportedly asked Mobley why he stabbed White so many times, and Mobley said, "He just wouldn't die." Harris said there was a great deal of blood on the floor and the walls of the trailer.

Harris said investigators would continue to search for the murder weapon that Mobley said he threw away somewhere along N.C. 33.

result of injuries sustained in the accident.

Ms. Gillis, the administrator of her mother's estate, sued the town and the Ayden Board of Commissioners. She claimed the driver and the town were negligent. According to civil law, she did not sue for a specific amount, but for an amount over $10,000.

But after deliberating about an hour late Wednesday afternoon, a Pitt County jury ruled that Fox was not negligent and awarded no money to Mrs. Younger's estate.

The jury ordered the case dismissed and ordered the plaintiff to pay the cost of the court action.

Attorneys for Ms. Gillis questioned whether Fox kept a proper lookout as he approached the intersection; whether he operated the truck at a safe and reasonable speed; whether he acted appropriately upon discovering the car turning in front of him and whether he took necessary steps to avoid the crash.

Drug Bill Has Programs, But Few Funds For Them

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Reagan is signing an anti-drug bill that sharply increases penalties for recreational users and includes a federal death penalty for anyone convicted of drug-related killings.

But the bill only provides about $500 million for spending in the nation's battle against drugs, which falls far short of the estimated $1.4 billion cost of the programs envisioned by the legislation.

At this afternoon's ceremony in the East Room, Reagan was to be joined by his wife, Nancy, who has made the battle against drug abuse her cause.

The bipartisan measure was approved on a 346-11 vote in the House and passed by voice vote in the Senate in the waning days of the congressional session last month. Members of both parties used the bill to tout their anti-drug positions in the November elections.

As the bill was sent to Reagan, Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said its message is simple: "Don't do drugs. The country will not tolerate it."

It seeks to battle the use of illegal drugs through stricter law enforcement, tougher penalties, and increased treatment, rehabilitation and education. It also outlines a fund to help drug-producing countries in their battle against the illicit substances.

The bill contains stiff penalties for drug traffickers and users. Serious drug offenses would carry stiffer minimum prison terms.

The measure also makes it possible for those possessing small quantities of drugs intended for personal use to be hit with up to $10,000 in civil fines, although they would have the right to court review.

Beginning next September, those convicted of drug offenses could face loss of student loans and other federal benefits, for even a possession conviction.

That could affect public housing, grants, contracts, loans, mortgage guarantees and some forms of veterans aid, but not Social Security, Medicare, welfare benefits, veterans' disability and other safety net programs.

Under the new law, drug kingpins and others who kill or order killings while committing drug-related felonies could themselves be executed under a new revitalized federal death penalty. However, the constitutionality of that provision is in doubt and it is certain to face court challenges should federal officials attempt to use it.

The measure also establishes a Cabinet level "drug czar," who would be responsible for developing a national strategy to combat drug abuse, and for the entire federal drug budget.

Alabama NAACP Chief Sentenced

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Alabama NAACP President Thomas Reed was sentenced to four years in prison today for taking a $10,000 bribe to help a murderer win early release, and automatically lost his state House seat.

"You used your power ... to line your pockets," U.S. District Judge Joel Dubina told Reed, at 60 the senior black in the Legislature. Reed was convicted on two counts of extortion. The charges carried a maximum penalty of 25 years in federal prison and a $500,000 fine.

"Judge, I know I'm not guilty," he told Dubina today. A state judge previously ruled that Reed, who in 1970 became one of the first two blacks elected to the Legislature this century, would lose his seat in the House upon sentencing. Dubina ordered Reed to report to prison Jan. 3.

Reed was convicted of taking a bribe from a businessman in exchange for attempting to win early release for the man's nephew, an imprisoned murderer. He contacted the state Board of Pardons and Paroles on the man's behalf.

The businessman, Bobby Gene Chesser of Columbus, Ga., testified against Reed and was not charged. The nephew, Anthony Dennis Chesser, continues to serve a 40-year sentence for the murder of his wife.

The Tuskegee Democrat has blamed his prosecution on his attempt to have the Confederate battle flag removed from atop Alabama's Capitol.

the four years since the United States began flying B-1 aircraft, the nation's first new long-range bomber in more than 25 years.

The long-range bomber built by Rockwell International is designed to fly at high speed and low altitude and deliver nuclear weapons. Asked whether the bomber today was carrying nuclear weapons, Evans said it is Air Force policy to neither confirm nor deny their presence anywhere.

Todd Heine, a police officer in nearby Box Elder, said that it was cloudy at the time of the crash and that he did not notice any fog. He said he was a half-mile to a mile away and heard the plane make a "weird noise."

"It almost sounded like the plane was trying to increase in power," he said. He said he and a fellow officer saw the wings tilt one way and then the other, then the lights in the plane went out. "It was just a split second after the lights went out, there was an explosion and the flames started to come up."

Heine said he could not say whether the explosion occurred while the plane was in the air.

Harold Morgenstern, manager of a trailer court, said, "It felt like an earthquake." Morgenstern said he saw "about a half mile of flames" that were yellow. "They were up in the air a couple of hundred feet."

Last week, a B-1B crashed and burned in a field near Dyess Air Force Base in west Texas. The crew of four ejected and survived.

Lt. Col. George H. Peck, a Strategic Air Command spokesman, said Tuesday that 63 of the 85 B-1Bs at SAC bases had been inspected without any problems detected.

The Air Force refused to speculate on the cause of the Texas crash, although witnesses reported a fire around the two left engines before the crash.

Reagan Says Bible 'Greatest Treasure'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, in a message for observance of National Bible Week, Nov. 20-27, says the Bible "is the most precious treasure yet entrusted to man."
"Over the centuries, though empires have risen and fallen, though civilizations have ebbed and flowed, the Bible has remained a constant source of hope and inspiration," he says.

Reagan and his wife, Nancy, are honorary national chairpersons of the week, an interfaith project emphasizing importance of the Bible and promoting greater reading of it, including daily passages recommended for the week.

Reagan says the Bible "shaped the ideas and formed the consciences of many early Americans" and nurtured "a profound belief in human dignity, in individual freedom and in the inalienable rights of man..."
"Unless we... insure that the wonderful treasures of the Bible are handed down to each new generation, we cannot, I believe, long remain a 'nation under God.'"

BILL & DELORES WINDER
Bill and Delores are laypersons who travel full time in a teaching, healing, evangelistic ministry. Wherever they go, they minister God's healing power with a warm, gentle love and with real authority. Their aim is to restore the healing ministry to the church and to equip clergy and laypeople to minister within their own congregation.
Delores personally knows what it means to be healed by God. She spent 19 years in constant pain eased only by a tight fitting bodycast and by surgery to sever the nerves in her spinal cord. Near death in 1975, she was completely healed at a Kathryn Kuhlman service of the osteoporosis of the spine, and her severed spinal cord was restored. It was soon after her healing that God called her and Bill into the healing ministry.
The Winders have a testimony book, Jesus Set Me Free, and teaching tapes available.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

Copyright © John A. Lehti, Distributor Linage Plus, Madison, N.Y. NATIONAL SALES REPRESENTATIVE, Dot Advertising Service, 2702 E. Ash St., Goldboro, N.C. 27530

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the book of 1 Samuel intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

SAMUEL AND SAUL

SAUL, IN SEARCHING FOR HIS FATHERS LOST ANIMALS, HAS LOOKED DILIGENTLY THROUGHOUT THE LAND, NOW, WITH HIS SERVANT, HE COMES TO RAMAH...

OH, MAY NOW, WE CAN NOT GO TO HIM!

BEHOLD, I HAVE HERE AT HAND THE FOURTH PART OF A SILVER SHEKEL! THAT WILL I GIVE HIM!

SO, WITH THIS SMALL OFFERING, SAUL AND HIS SERVANT APPROACH THE CITY, WHERE, AT THIS EXACT MOMENT, A GROUP OF MAIDENS ARE EMERGING TO DRAW WATER FROM THE WELL...

BEHOLD NOW, THERE IS IN THIS CITY A PROPHET! SURELY HE CAN TELL US WHERE TO FIND THE LOST ANIMALS!

IF WE GO FOR HELP TO THE PROPHET IN RAMAH, WHAT CAN WE BRING HIM? OUR BREAD AND WINE ARE ALL GONE AND WE MUST BRING A PRESENT TO A MAN OF GOD!

Next Week THE MEETING!

Hot Tubs Makers Target Arthritics, Cocooners

By Linda Williams
LAT/WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — "Climb into your hot tub with acquaintances," read a recent advertisement for Almost Heaven hot tubs. "Communication is somehow easier, more relaxed. You laugh, smile, joke. You climb out of your hot tub with friends," the ad continued.

Angela Gallodoro, a Los Angeles housewife, has heard a lot about people who socialize in the hot tub — a leisure time activity that has become part and parcel of the California life style. Her three teen-aged children even once broached the idea of having some friends over for a fun soak in the family Jacuzzi. But mom wouldn't hear of it. In the three years since she bought the Jacuzzi, Gallodoro said, it never occurred to her that sitting in hot water shooting the breeze with a bunch of people was such a hot idea.

"A Jacuzzi is something personal," she said. Besides, she added, the unit was not purchased for fun and games. It was actually prescribed by a doctor who recommended hydrotherapy for back injuries suffered in an automobile accident, she said.

Although the hot tub industry was born and has thrived to some extent on the appeal of the notions expressed in the Almost Heaven promotion, many in the industry now think it is important to concentrate on appealing to people like Gallodoro. That sentiment reflects both the sophistication of what was once a cottage industry and the practical considerations of an industry worried that it is about to reach the saturation point with its original market.

The term hot tub technically refers to the wooden tub, but most consumers also use the term to refer to spas. Spa is an industry term denoting vessels of assorted shapes and sizes that are made of acrylic, ceramic tiles and other substances. Similarly, Jacuzzi, a brand name of a spa maker that is also well known for its spa and hot tub fixtures, has also become a generic term for any kind of spa or whirlpool bath.

In recent years, there have been grand predictions of tremendous hot tub sales because of a trend toward "cocooning" — defined as a tendency to spend more time in a home with the latest conveniences. But predictions of a million hot tub sales a year haven't materialized.

In fact, the industry, which was born in California nearly two deacades ago, is in danger of stagnating. Its growth has been hampered by the inability to persuade many people outside of California and Hawaii to buy tubs. Climate is one factor, but some in the industry acknowledge that many potential customers outside the region think of hot tubs as a California fad associated with a certain freewheeling lifestyle that they find somewhat unwholesome.

That attitude is beginning to change, said Pat Ewing, spokeswoman for the National Spa & Pool Institute, an Alexandria, Va.-based trade association. (In keeping track of sales, the institute counts spas and hot tubs in the same category.) The progress made so far is due to increased advertising and more awareness of the health benefits of hot water soaking, she said.

"It's been slow. At one time some of your more conservative areas, like the Midwest, weren't buying at all," she said. "They were not sure it was a lifestyle that they wanted to buy into."

The advent of acquired immune deficiency syndrome hasn't helped either, said Donald Tusha, national spa product manager for Helder Industries, a Morristown, N.J., maker of spas and prefabricated swimming pools. "There is absolutely no truth to it, but in some parts people believe that spas and hot tubs are carriers of AIDS," he said.

The seeds of the industry were planted in the 1940s when Jacuzzi, then a water pump company, invented a portable hydrojet bathtub unit for a child with arthritis. The modern industry came into being after publicity about Californians genially soaking in hot-water-filled wooden wine casks that had been outfitted with water jets.

The wooden vessels that started it all are now a very small part of the hot tub industry. In 1987, wooden tubs accounted for just 4.4 percent of the 262,400 units sold across the country. Acrylic spas accounted for more than two-thirds of the total.

Industry officials are keeping close watch on overall sales figures. Sales have gone up and down since 1979. After two consecutive years of sales increases, 1988 sales are expected to decline, Ewing said.

Moreover, sales have become more concentrated in California and Hawaii. The region accounted for 35.5 percent of 1987 sales, up significantly from a 22.5 percent share in 1986, according to the institute's figures. The next largest concentration in any state was in Florida, which accounted for 7.3 percent of sales. The Middle South region, which includes Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama, recorded the fewest sales at 1.3 percent of the total.

Special Pens Given Members

Special membership pens were given Doris Williams and Annie Laurie Askew at the Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Women's annual harvest day luncheon.

They were honored for outstanding services during the year especially in the Clothes Line project.

Special recognition was given Lillian Weeks, Dr. Mary Lois Staton, Sarah Stark, Barbara Hall and June Carson for their reading program interest.

The program was given by Ms. Seymour of Kinston, who portrayed Susanna Wesley. Guests recognized were Ruth Hargett Harris, Julia Johnston, Becky Seymour and Edna Tolliver.

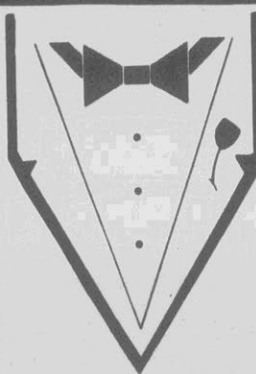

Steve Hammacher, church choir director, entertained the group with piano selections. Others appearing on the program were the Revs. Sid Huggins and John Speight.

Minority Models Enjoying Boom Times

By Sujata Banerjee
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Bye bye, blonde. Hello, brown and black. This is the year for dark hair and dark skin. For superstar black models like Naomi Campbell and Veronica Webb, Filipino model Anna Bayle and the Brazilian Dalma. Never before have so many models with minority backgrounds been so visible — on magazine covers, in advertising, on MTV videos, the runway.

"All things go in trends," says Francesca Hayslett, managing editor of Taxi magazine. "You can look in general culture and see world music is hot. There is a broader sense of what is beautiful, we're looking for something that's realistic and expansive."

Industry experts cite a combination of reasons for the rise of Third World beauty. On the largest scale, fashion has become a very global business. Top American designers are seeking licenses for clothing manufacture overseas, and it is to their advantage to portray a look stretching beyond conventional American golden girl stereotypes. In the United States, the Asian population is increasing, bringing with it more buying power, and the Hispanic population is virtually exploding.

"You always want to reflect your customer; it makes good sense," says Dan Moriarty, vice president at Revlon. "Using ethnic models is a deliberate effort. We sell Revlon around the world. The products enhance your natural beauty, whatever that may be. We are a very diverse country racially; the point is to celebrate it."

Revlon is using prominent black and mixed ethnic models in its current campaign. Models Revlon features in general and minority fashion magazines include Kara Young, Kersti Bowser, Louise Vyent, Beverly Johnson and Iman.

As fashion's customer base is changing, and so are ideas about what defines beauty. A trend toward brunettes has been in the works since the early '80s, relegating the blue-eyed blonde Christie Brinkley types of the '70s to the background. A few years ago brunettes such as Paulina, Carol Alt and Andie McDowell caught fashion's fancy. After that, it was a quick step from brunette to black.

"Before, a model used to have to have perfect eyes, a perfect nose, perfect lips," says Anne Senelly, managing editor at Model, a new fashion magazine. "Now, the movement is to girls who are not perky, but who do have a quirk that gets them noticed. So models span the entire ethnic range — from Eastern European to Asian and black and Hispanic."

Fashion trends too have brought about a desire for ethnic models. According to Senelly, this year's outbreak of ethnic print clothing created a demand for models who looked natural in the clothes.

"The girls come in, and whoever has look of (the) story gets the job. It's not broken down into two blacks needed, three Asians, or whatever," Senelly says. She adds that getting top minority models for shoots is hard these days because they are constantly booked.

Ethnic models were everywhere very well by the daughter. I gave up an absolutely gorgeous baby girl for adoption 27 years ago in the state of Indiana. It was the most painful and unselfish thing I have ever done. If there was any way I could have kept her and given her a life even close to normal or good, I would have. I was trapped in an impossible situation and had no other choice.

All these years I have hoped and prayed that maybe someday I would get to see her. I am married now with two grown sons, but I never had another daughter. I have my name on file in Nevada with an agency naturally brown models. So, like understudies called on at the last minute, black and Hispanic women made it to the big time.

"We definitely thought twice about showing white models with tans," Hayslett says. "We don't want to be hypocritical by showing tanned blonde models in bathing suits, yet I don't think the eye is used to looking at truly white skin. Everyone wants to be responsible."

Interestingly, the models of color who came to fashion's rescue in summer have held their own into fall. Kara Young has been on more magazine covers than can be counted. Gail O'Neill's fresh face peeks out from many fashion layouts, and Kelly Brown, a model of mixed racial background, just won Elite's national model search contest.

Some argue that there is a downside to the increased use of minority models, saying the black models are usually light-skinned and long haired, often mixtures of races. But Bethann Hardison, one of the first wave of black models in the '60s and who now owns a modeling agency named Bethann Management, doesn't have patience for the criticism.

"People say that Veronica Webb is not all black, but her parents certainly look black to her," says Hardison about the superstar model she represents. "You can't just say people are mixtures. There are different shades, colors, faces out there. Anything goes if you look right."

The runway is one place black women have had a strong presence since the '60s, when Hardison was a model herself. Hardison credits the rise in print work for black models to the French magazine Elle, which used black models extensively, and set off a chain reaction in the fashion magazine industry. Conversely, Hardison says, the advertising world is more conservative about using minority models.

"They don't really need us as models to sell the products; black women will buy their products anyway," reasons Hardison, who never-theless credits the Revlon cosmetic campaign as a positive opportunity for black models.

But Hardison looks at the boom in minority models with a jaded eye, having seen jobs open up with the black power movement of the '60s and dry up in the '70s. She says that the current trend for black models is bound to fade, but is not depressed about it.

"It doesn't help you, but it doesn't hurt you. When you are used to hundreds of years of people taking things from you, this isn't much. Life goes on: Black men, and white men, too, will still love us. We'll still be social, and advance professionally. Wonderful things will still go on, and excitement will still be there."

Don't Encourage Kids To Take 'Candy'

Dear Abby: Recently my 3-year-old grandson got into my daughter's vitamins. We called the poison control center as soon as we discovered it and rushed him to the hospital. Fortunately, he survived. The doctor in the emergency room said that five iron pills can be fatal to a 3-year-old! He also told us that some children who have taken iron pills feel just fine for a week or so — and then all of a sudden they die!

Abby, I was shocked to learn that iron pills are so dangerous. Please print this. It might help a mother who debates if she should or shouldn't take her child to the hospital. — Grateful Grandma In Mesa, Ariz.

Dear Grateful Grandma: Thank you for the warning. Marc Bayer,

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

M.D., medical director of the Los Angeles Poison Center, says, "Everybody should be aware that all over-the-counter drugs — particularly vitamins containing iron — are potentially dangerous to children."

Also, let me add that children should never be told that they are being given "candy" when taking medicine. All medications (and vitamins fall into this category) should be kept locked away, out of the reach of children.

Dear Abby: The letter signed "Adopted in Illinois" (and your reply) prompts me to write to you for the first time since I started reading your column approximately 30 years ago.

The author of that letter could very well be my daughter. I gave up an absolutely gorgeous baby girl for adoption 27 years ago in the state of Indiana. It was the most painful and unselfish thing I have ever done. If there was any way I could have kept her and given her a life even close to normal or good, I would have. I was trapped in an impossible situation and had no other choice.

All these years I have hoped and prayed that maybe someday I would get to see her. I am married now with two grown sons, but I never had another daughter. I have my name on file in Nevada with an agency that unites adoptees and biological parents — but only if it is mutually agreeable.

If my daughter's attitude is anything like the person who wrote that letter, I'll never get to see her. (She wrote: "Why should I go searching for my 'real' parents? I found them the day they found me.")

Just because I gave her up does not mean I did not love her — it meant I loved her enough to care about the kind of life she would have.

Abby, how could you call that letter a "beautiful and generous attitude"? I disagree completely. It's a narrow-minded, misunderstanding attitude. There, I've said it, and now it's off my chest! — Heartsick In Washington

Dear Heartsick: I owe you — and other mothers who unselfishly gave their babies up for adoption — an apology. And here it is.

Baker Would Like One More Win

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Four years ago, Art Baker walked onto the turf at Carter-Finley Stadium for the first time as head coach at East Carolina University. He came away with a 33-14 victory over N.C. State's Wolfpack, a team he was to beat twice in three games.

This Saturday afternoon, Baker will walk onto the AstroTurf of Nippert Stadium in Cincinnati, Ohio, for his final game as head coach of the Pirates. He would like nothing more than to come away from that game a winner also.

Baker resigned two weeks ago when it became apparent that his four-year contract with East Carolina was not going to be renewed. He has accepted a position as head of the athletic department's Personal Development Program for athletes, but has not closed the door on some future coaching job, be it as head coach or an assistant.

"I'm not leaving in the manner that I would have liked," Baker said. "Maybe that's why I have that itch (to continue coaching)."

For Cincinnati, Saturday's 1:30 p.m. game seems to be rounding out as a grudge match. The Bearcats felt they were thoroughly embarrassed in a 56-28 thrashing at the hands of the Pirates last season. That loss finished their hopes for a winning season and kept alive ECU's hopes. The Pirates, too, finished without a winning record, however, bowing to Southern Mississippi, 38-34, in the final game of the year to end up 5-6.

Both teams go into the game — their last of the year — with the hopes of finishing strong. Both won their previous games, ECU topping Temple, 34-17, and Cincinnati beating Indiana State, 40-21. The winner of the game would thus end with a two-game winning streak.

ECU comes in with a 2-8 mark while Cincinnati is 3-7.

"Both teams are playing for pride right now," Baker said. "We want to finish 3-8 and end on a good note."

Baker feels that Cincinnati is a better team on defense than it was a year ago. The Bearcats allowed 274.5 yards a game rushing — including 500 by the Pirates. They gave up 165.3 through the air, for a total of 439.8 per game. ECU rolled up just over 600 all together.

This year, Cincinnati is allowing only 175.9 a game on the ground and 217.4 through the air for a more respectable total of 393.3 total yards.

East Carolina, meanwhile, is rushing for 229.9 yards a game and passing for 154.0 per contest. That compares with 213.8 rushing and 128.7 passing a year ago.

The Bearcats are picking up 154.2 on the ground and 171.4 through the air, a total of 325.6 per game. ECU is allowing 199.4 on the ground and 193.9 through the air.

"They're also playing better offensively," Baker said. "They have most of their skill people back with the exception of (quarterback Danny) McCain. Their quarterback this year is not in the same class with him."

Actually, Cincinnati is — like the Pirates at times — using two quarterbacks. Don Hoog is listed as the starter for the third week in a row, with Glenn Farkas, who held the job at the start of the year, listed as backup. Farkas has the better statistics, completing 100 of 183 passes for 1,125 yards and six touchdowns. Hoog has hit on 54 of 104 passes with four scores and four interceptions.

Key people on offense include running back Al McKinney, who leads the rushing with 752 yards, over twice as much as the number two man on the team; and Roosevelt Mukes, the career pass catching leader for the Bearcats. Oddly enough McKinney is the leading receiver on the year with 29 catches for 192 yards while Mukes has 22 for 270.

Defensively, the leaders are end Andrew Stewart and tackle Chris Asbeck, according to Baker. Stewart has a team-leading 12 tackles for loss, while both have four quarterback sacks.

East Carolina's rushing attack is led by fullback Tim James with 631 yards. Reggie McKinney has 370 while Travis Hunter has 305.

Hunter, who has again settled in at quarterback, has hit on 50 of 103 passes for 732 yards, six touchdowns and eight interceptions. Backup Charlie Libretto has connected on 47 of 107 for 746 yards. He also has six touchdowns and eight interceptions.

Walter Wilson is the top receiver with 19 for 355 yards while Al Whiting has 14 for 237 yards.

Marathon Oil Tops Pirates

East Carolina's Cold Shooting Leads To 88-78 Defeat

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Coach Mike Steele of East Carolina was anxious to see how his team would play against someone other than itself, and he came away from Thursday night's exhibition game against Marathon Oil with mixed feelings.

The Oilers, a semi-professional team that tours the country during the pre-season against college teams, won the game, 88-78, but in many ways the Pirates out-played their foe.

Unfortunately, the Pirates were icy cold with their shooting and that probably spelled the difference.

ECU shot only 38.6 percent for the game as compared to 53.3 percent for Marathon Oil. "If we had shot 45 percent, we would have won the game," Steele said afterwards.

That would have been six more baskets — 12 more points.

"I thought we started out without a lot of intensity and emotion," Steele said. "I don't know whether it was because of the long wait or what."

The game was delayed an hour because of automobile problems by the Oilers team and did not get underway until after 8:30 p.m.

"Our transition defense was horrible at the start of the game," the Pirate coach continued. "But I thought we played hard in the second half. Their coach told me that we hustled better than any team they've played thus far. He also told me that we were the shortest team that they've played thus far."

Nevertheless, the Pirates out-rebounded their taller opponents, 54-41, led by 12 big grabs by junior college transfer Kevin Staples. "We never had anybody get 12 rebounds last year," Steele said.

"We've got to learn that we must play hard and with more intensity and emotion to win," the coach continued.

Steele praised Marathon as being a good team, and added that he thought playing them would help the Pirates. "They are more like some of the better teams that we will play. They're certainly a better team that (the Czechoslovakian) team we played last year and that will help us."

The Pirates got 24 points from Blue Edwards, making his first appearance on the court in over a year. Edwards was suspended from the team last year. However, he, along with Gus Hill and Reed Lose, all shot poorly. "Blue shot about as poorly as he could and still got 24. And I think maybe we were a little intimidated inside, Blue, everyone. But I do think Gus kept taking the ball to them and I liked that."

Edwards made good on only 10 of 23 shots while Hill hit just seven of 24. Lose was four of 12. Staples made good on five of 12.

"I was pleased with the play of our point guards, Jimmy Hinton and Jeff Kelly," Steele said. "Reed came off the bench and did a good job for us, too."

"We've come light years from where we were last year, but we've still got a long way to go," he added.

Marathon broke away from the Pirates near the midpoint of the first half. Both teams had held early leads, but Marathon took it for good at 17-14 on a three-point basket by

Peete Still Uncertain For Southern Cal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PASADENA, Calif. — The status of Rodney Peete figures to be uncertain until shortly before second-ranked Southern Cal faces sixth-ranked UCLA Saturday at the Rose Bowl in the 58th meeting of the cross-town rivals.

Peete, the Trojans' standout quarterback, was diagnosed Wednesday as having the measles. He had been admitted to a hospital Tuesday night so he could be fed intravenously, then was released Thursday in time to watch practice.

If Peete can't play, or gives it a shot and doesn't have the necessary strength or stamina to continue, seldom-used Pat O'Hara would get the call at quarterback for the Trojans in one of the most important college football games of the season.

The nationally televised game begins at 12:30 p.m. PST. All tickets were sold by late September, meaning a crowd in excess of 100,000 will be on hand.

Elsewhere Saturday, top-ranked Notre Dame, No. 3 Miami and No. 4 West Virginia each face tough games as they try to keep alive their national championship hopes.

Peete was released from a Long Beach hospital at noon Thursday, watched film with the other quarterbacks and then watched practice for 45 minutes.

"He was strong enough to check out (of the hospital)," Coach Larry Smith said. "He's eating solids now. We felt he'd get better rest out of the hospital now."

"It could be right up to game time before we decide if he plays," Smith added. "If we don't watch his recovery, it can develop into something like pneumonia. We're making sure he gets plenty of rest."

"The No. 1 concern is his health, not the team," Smith said.

"I'm feeling much better, even better than yesterday," Peete said Thursday.

Peete missed practice sessions Monday and Tuesday when it was believed he had the flu. It has been estimated that about 30 Southern Cal students have come down with the measles, and Smith said his players were inoculated for the disease Tuesday night.

No other Trojan players have the measles, Smith said.

The Trojans bring a 7-0 Pacific-10 Conference record and a 9-0 overall mark into the game. The Bruins are 6-1 and 9-1.

It was believed in many circles that the game would not only determine the Pac-10 champion and the conference's Rose Bowl representative, but the Heisman Trophy winner as well. Peete and UCLA quarterback Troy Aikman are considered two of the leading candidates.

Southern Cal leads the series 32-19-6, but UCLA has won four of the last six games and all three games between the teams at the Rose Bowl, where the Bruins have played their home games since 1982.

This will be the 20th USC-UCLA meeting where the Rose Bowl berth is on the line for both teams. The Trojans have won the last eight such games to give them a 13-5-1 record in that situation.

If UCLA wins to break that streak, the Bruins qualify to face Big Ten champion Michigan in the Rose Bowl game on Jan. 2 while the Trojans meet either eighth-ranked Auburn or 11th-ranked Louisiana State in the Sugar Bowl that same day.

If Southern Cal ties or wins, the Trojans will meet the 12th-ranked Wolverines in the Rose Bowl game while UCLA faces 10th-ranked Arkansas in the Cotton Bowl.

Peete, who passed for 304 yards to lead the Trojans to a 17-13 come-from-behind victory over UCLA last November, is coming off the two most productive games of his college career.

On Nov. 5, he passed for 305 yards as Southern Cal overpowered California 35-3. And last Saturday, he threw for 361 yards during the Trojans' 50-0 romp over Arizona State.

O'Hara, a redshirt sophomore, played the final 13 minutes against ASU, his longest stint in a game at Southern Cal. O'Hara played briefly in one game last season without throwing a pass and has completed five of seven passes for 61 yards and one interception in three games this year.

"It's an exciting opportunity if it comes about," O'Hara said. "Playing in a game like this is what I

Baker May Join Gamecock Staff

East Carolina head football coach Art Baker may be in line for a job on the administrative staff of South Carolina athletic director King Dixon.

Baker confirmed yesterday that he had talked with Dixon last week concerning a job with the University of South Carolina.

"I was down there (Columbia) last weekend (for the S.C. Navy game) and talked with King, who's an old friend of mine," Baker said. "I haven't gone through a proper interview, but I expect to go down there sometime next week and talk in a former interview."

Baker, who has coached four years at East Carolina, has resigned, effective with this weekend's season-ending game with Cincinnati.

"It's home, or near home," Baker said of Columbia. "And I don't know whether it will work out or not. The job would be in athletic administration."

"I still have an itch to coach and I don't know whether I'll have a chance to scratch that or not," Baker added. He said that he had been in contact with Bob Bowden of Florida State and Dick Sheridan of N.C. State. Baker was assistant head coach at Florida State under Bowden in 1984 prior to coming to ECU, and Sheridan was an assistant under Baker at Furman, replacing Baker when he moved to The Citadel.

"I've talked with both of them, but neither of them have any vacancies on their staffs at this time. But they did say that they would talk with me later on," Baker said.

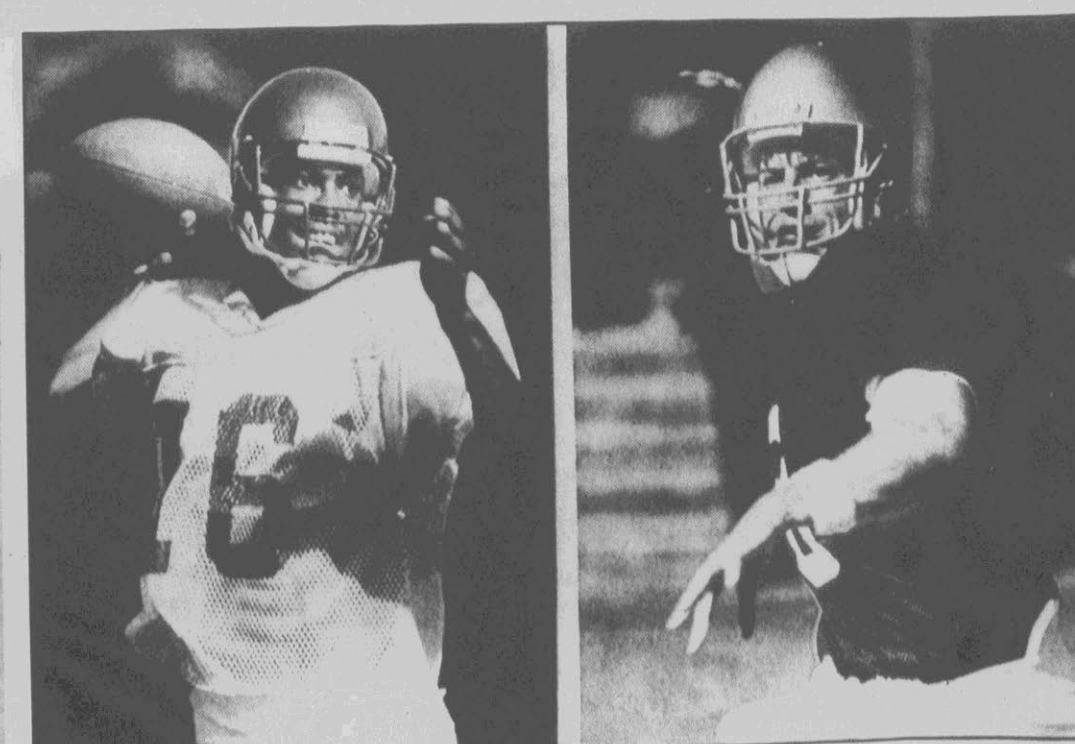

Meanwhile, it was also learned that East Carolina athletic director Dave Hart has asked permission from Dixon to talk with two South Carolina assistants, former Wake Forest head coach Al Groh and former ECU aide Frank Orgel. Groh is the offensive coordinator of the Gamecocks while Orgel is the linebacker coach. Orgel was on Pat Dye's staff when he was head coach at ECU and followed him to Wyoming and Auburn before joining the Gamecock staff in 1986.

It was also learned that Kevin Gilbride, the current offensive coordinator at East Carolina, will seek the Pirate head coaching job also.

Karate Team Defeats French

The 1988 United States International Karate team defeated the French International team, 4-3, with one draw, in a recent match.

Curtis Evans of Greenville, a member of the team, won his match on a decision, while Tony Gouge had a draw. Dale Frye suffered a loss in his match, while Kerry Dye and Tony Reid won decisions. Billy Taylor and Ray Thompson both were defeated by the French.

Bill McDonald of Greenville served as trainer for the event. A rematch, to be held in the United States, is currently under discussion.

Monroe Leads In State Scrimmage

LELAND (AP) — Sophomore guard Rodney Monroe scored 25 points and led a second-half comeback as the Red team defeated the White 82-78 Thursday night in North Carolina State's final preseason scrimmage.

The 18th-ranked Wolfpack will open their regular season at home against Columbia on Nov. 26.

Monroe scored 14 points in the final half to erase a 49-43 halftime deficit. Junior Mickey Hinnant added 18 points for the Red, while senior Chucky Brown had 14.

Freshman Byron Tucker led the White team with 31 points, while Chris Corchiani had 16, Brian Howard 11 and Avie Lester 10.

The contest was played at North Brunswick High School.

Mahaffey, Gilder Ties In Kapalua Golf

KAPALUA, Hawaii (AP) — John Mahaffey, five shots in front of the field when he finished, was asked whether that was a comfortable margin.

"No lead is safe," Mahaffey said. "Not with the high-quality fields we have now, not with so many guys able to shoot such low scores."

Bob Gilder made Mahaffey a prophet.

Gilder one-putted the last 10 holes he played, with birdies on each of the last four, and tied Mahaffey for the lead at the halfway point of the $600,000 Kapalua International Golf Tournament.

Mahaffey and Gilder each shot second-round 64's on Thursday, completing 36 holes on the Kapalua Bay course in 129, 15 under par. Each was two shots better than the tournament record of 131, set by Andy Bean last year.

Mahaffey, 40, whose last victory was in the 1986 Tournament Players Championship, scattered nine birdies across his card and called it one of his better putting rounds in some time.

But it hardly matched Gilder's effort.

"They were going in left and right," said Gilder, who finished just before darkness settled over the island of Maui.

"I didn't want to let Mahaffey run away with it, but I sure didn't expect to birdie that many holes coming in," said Gilder, who birdied seven of his last 10 holes.

Mahaffey and Gilder were four strokes in front of first-round leader Bill Glasson, who was alone in third at 133 after a 69.

Cory Pavin was next at 134 after a 67, and Jodie Mudd, with a 65, was at 135.

The group at 136 included Bob Lohr, Mark O'Meara, Mac O'Grady, Dave Rummells and Steve Pate. Pate and Lohr each had 67's, O'Meara and Rummells each shot 69 and O'Grady had a 70.

Mark Calcavecchia chipped in for an eagle-3 on his first hole, birdied the next five and finished with a 64 that left him at 137.

Army, Boston College Meet In Dublin

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Far from the granite cliffs that soar above the Hudson River, Army is about to host a football game where it feels like anything but the home team.

Saturday's contest against Boston College takes place in the middle of Dublin, the capital of Ireland. The opponent, Boston College, was founded to provide an education for immigrant Irish youth.

The Cadets are listed as the home team. But you figure out who has the home-field advantage in this clash at Lansdowne Road rugby stadium.

"In Dublin, against Boston College, there might not be many people on our side," Army coach Jim Young said. "As a coach, I'd rather play at home. But coming here, the advantages to the students, those things outweigh any other consideration."

Army is 8-1 and expected to get an invitation to the Sun Bowl against Alabama after the game. This is just the second regular-season college football ever played in Europe, so the call from El Paso, Texas, offering the Cadets a post-season game on Christmas Eve certainly will be the first bowl bid ever tendered at such a long distance.

That prospect won't make it any easier to deal with the partisan fans. Army brought about 250 members of the Corps of Cadets and will have a substitute mule for its mascot, obtained through the Mule Society of Great Britain; Boston College has not only the local fans, but about 10,000 supporters from home as well.

"We need all the help we can get," Army quarterback Bryan McWilliams said. "At home games, we usually get pumped up by the cheering of the cadets, which we call the '12th Man' on our team. We know the crowd will be for Boston."

If Army needs some help, so does Boston College. The Eagles are 2-7, having lost four in a row including a 59-19 blowout by No. 4 West Virginia three weeks ago.

But B.C. will have Mark Kamphaus back at quarterback. After starting the season with seven touchdown passes and 930 yards in the air through the first four games, Kamphaus was sidelined for five games with a broken jaw. His replacement, Mike Power, has been plagued by interceptions and has just two TDs throwing.

With Kamphaus back, the BC offense — a wide-open attack — should be more high-powered than usual. It will present a marked contrast to Army, which relies on the wishbone offense and averages 371 yards rushing a game, while gaining a total of just 419 yards passing in nine games.

Claim Sherrill Paid 'Hush Money'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — Jackie Sherrill, the coach who turned the Texas A&M football team into a conference champion, was paying "hush money" to a former player as his athletic program was being investigated this year for NCAA violations, according to a published report.

Former Aggie fullback George Smith told The Dallas Morning News in a copyright story today that Sherrill paid him $4,400 in a series of cash and money order transactions dating back to November 1986.

Smith termed the payments "hush money."

Sherrill refused to comment on Smith's allegations, but John Keith, sports information director for the team, told The Associated Press early this morning that school officials would make an announcement today regarding the story.

"The announcement will come from the president's office," said Keith, "not the athletic department. They'll need to read the story first."

Sherrill also is the school's athletic director.

A&M president William H. Mobley and vice president Robert Smith, interviewed by The News on Thursday, said the university had notified the NCAA that it had received allegations of additional rules violations.

Mobley said he has since ordered an internal investigation to be headed by Robert Smith, the official in charge of finance and administration.

"Based on our further discussions this morning and information you have available," Mobley said, "without question we'll proceed expeditiously and bring to bear investigative resources we need to seek to establish the validity of the issues on whether or not there are violations of NCAA rules or whether or not there are other institutional issues involved."

George Smith, a Georgia high school All-American when Sherrill recruited him in 1982, said he received $500 in cash on Sept. 13 — four days after Aggie officials announced at a news conference that the National Collegiate Athletic Association had levied major sanctions against the university's football program.

The newspaper said that payment, one of three Smith claims to have received since June 6, was sent to Smith's Atlanta home in an overnight express envelope. It said the envelope bore the return address of Bob Matey, a member of Sherrill's support staff.

Two other overnight express envelopes bore the return names and addresses of A&M receivers coach George Pugh and a Matey associate who is not employed by the athletic department, the newspaper reported.

The News said it obtained all three envelopes from Smith. One, which was dated Sept. 26 and contained five $100 bills, was opened in Atlanta in the presence of a newspaper reporter.

Later, in more than eight hours of tape-recorded interviews, Smith told The News that Sherrill and his staff provided about $10,000 in money, extra benefits and airline tickets. Smith joined the Aggies in the summer of 1982 and quit the team in early 1984 to transfer to Clemson University.

George Smith said Thursday he had been contacted Wednesday night at his Atlanta home by Pugh's wife. As a result of that conversation, Smith said, he would refuse to stand by the statements he made in the tape-recorded newspaper interviews. Before those interviews, Smith signed a notarized, sworn statement that he would "be truthful in the information he provides."

A&M vice president Robert Smith, no relation to the former fullback, said George Smith had contacted him early Thursday, only a short time before A&M officials were to meet a reporter and editor from The Dallas Morning News. George Smith refused to say what his conversation with university officials entailed.

"If I say it didn't happen, nothing happened," George Smith said Thursday. George Smith said that Pugh, a longtime Sherrill assistant who recruited him, was being unfairly singled out by Sherrill as the allegations unfolded.

In interviews with The News, the ex-player recalled that Sherrill had pledged to "take care of me" and provide a good-paying job working around the head coach's College Station home.

Smith said Sherrill ultimately paid him hundreds of dollars for minor yard work — an apparent violation of NCAA extra benefits regulations.

In other apparent violations of

NCAA rules, Smith claimed:

— Sherrill and Pugh routinely paid for round-trip plane flights between College Station and Atlanta.

— The head coach-athletic director also arranged for Smith to receive credit for a physical education course he did not attend during the summer prior to Smith's official enrollment at A&M.

— Sherrill was aware that Smith and other players were scalping their complimentary tickets to alumni at inflated prices. Smith claims a Sherrill assistant set up those transactions.

"I said, 'Well, coach, how will I get home in the winter months or for the Christmas breaks and things of that nature?'" Smith recalled. "He said: 'We can get you a summer job. That's not against the rules. Also I have work that I need done around my house. We can work that out. And I can pay you what I want to pay you...'"

"Once he told me he was going to take care of me and I wouldn't have to worry about nothing, I said, 'Okay, I'm coming to school here.'"

Montana Got Big Contract

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers gave quarterback Joe Montana a three-year contract extension last summer worth as much as $7.65 million, according to a newspaper report published Thursday.

The money is not guaranteed, but Montana now stands to make $9.95 million over a five-year period if he plays through 1992, when he will be 36 years old, the San Jose Mercury News reported. The contract extension could make Montana one of the highest-paid athletes in professional sports, the newspaper said.

The Mercury News cited sources close to the 49ers in reporting that Montana, whose contract was due to expire after next season, signed the extension just before training camp in July following months of negotiations.

Montana is scheduled to earn base salaries of $1.1 million this season and $1.2 million next year. The additional three years, according to the report, call for base salaries of $2 million and reporting bonuses of $550,000 each season.

Officials of the 49ers did not immediately return a reporter's telephone call Thursday. General Manager John McVay confirmed to the Mercury News that the quarterback signed an extension but would not discuss specifics.

Montana told the newspaper, "You'll have to talk to the people upstairs (management) about contracts. I have nothing to do with them."

Lady Pirates Face Alumni

East Carolina's Lady Pirate basketball team will play against a team of former standouts for the women in a game Saturday at 7 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

The game will serve as a turn-up for the opening of the regular season, which comes Friday when ECU faces Stetson in the opening round of the Appalachian State-Sheraton Tournament in Boone.

Rosie Thompson, currently an assistant coach with the Lady Pirates, will head the roster for former stars. Thompson is the all-time career scoring and rebounding lead for the Lady Pirates. She closed out her career in 1980 with 2,352 points and 1,183 rebounds.

Others expected to play include Marcia Girven (1977-81), who holds the ECU season and career records for blocked shots; Delphine Mabry (1982-87), who holds the career record for steals with 110; Lisa Squirewell (1982-86), who holds the career field goal percentage mark at .509, and Alma Bethea (1984-88), the fifth-leading scorer in career points.

Also returning are Leora "Sam" Jones, (1980-82), who went on to become one of the world's top team handball players, competing in several Olympic games, including the 1988 Seoul Olympics; Fran Hooks (1979-83), currently coaching Goldsboro High School; Debbie Freeman (1974-78), who pulled 26 rebounds in a single game; Lillian Barnes (1978-82), who went on to be an assistant coach with the Lady Pirates; and Sheila Cotton (1971-75), who once scored 39 points in a game.

Others include Loraine Foster (1981-86), Lydia Rountree (1977-81), Brenda Dail (1973-76) and Annette Phillips.

came to USC for. I don't know the extent of Rodney's illness, but if it comes down to me playing on Saturday, I'm prepared to go out and do my best.

"I don't know for sure if I will (start), but I'll prepare to play just like I do every week."

Peete isn't the only key player whose availability is uncertain — Eric Ball, UCLA's leading rusher, was listed as questionable Thursday because of the sprained ankle he suffered during the Bruins' 16-6 win at Oregon on Nov. 5.

Brian Brown, who has gained more than 100 yards in each of UCLA's last two games, will start in Ball's place. Ball has gained 781 yards this year including a season-high 148 yards in the Bruins' 41-28 win over Nebraska on Sept. 10.

"I feel bad for Eric, because this is his senior year and I know he wants to play in this game," UCLA coach Terry Donahue said.

Obviously, if Peete can't play, it'll be a bigger blow to the Trojans. Peete has 169 completions in 266 attempts for 2,240 yards and 17 touchdowns with eight interceptions this season.

Aikman has completed 177 of 279 passes for 2,282 yards and a school record-tying 21 touchdowns with seven interceptions. While Peete has been red-hot the last two weeks, Aikman has had his two least productive games, passing for only 249 yards in hard-fought wins over Oregon and Stanford.

Aikman had one of his poorest games as a Bruin against the Trojans last year, completing only 11 of 26 passes for 171 yards and being intercepted three times in the second half. He had thrown only three interceptions in UCLA's first 10 1/2 games of 1987.

If O'Hara is forced to see action, he wouldn't be the first backup quarterback to have to play extensively in a Southern Cal-UCLA game.

In 1966, future Heisman Trophy winner Gary Beban had a broken ankle before the game, and Norman Dow, a senior who had never started, led UCLA to a 14-7 victory.

In 1949, sophomore Dean Schneider, a fourth-stringer promoted mostly because of injuries, threw two touchdown passes as Southern Cal upset UCLA 21-7.

Notre Dame, idle last week, will play host to Penn State. The Irish, 9-0, are expected to accept an invitation to play West Virginia in the Fiesta Bowl, which would likely decide the title if both remain undefeated. Penn State's motivation is to avoid its first losing season since 1938; the Nittany Lions go into the game 5-5.

Miami, whose only loss was by one point to Notre Dame, will travel for a night game against No. 11 Louisiana State. LSU is still in the running for the Sugar Bowl, with Auburn the other possibility. Auburn finishes its regular season the day after Thanksgiving against Alabama.

West Virginia will be at home versus No. 14 Syracuse. The Mountaineers need a victory to complete a perfect regular season.

Several other ranked teams tangle in traditional late-season matchups. Seventh-rated Nebraska will be at No. 9 Oklahoma; No. 12 Michigan is at Ohio State; No. 15 Clemson faces South Carolina and No. 20 Georgia plays Georgia Tech.

In other Top Twenty games, No. 13 Oklahoma State is at Iowa State, No. 16 Wyoming is at Hawaii and No. 19 Washington State faces Washington.

Pirates..

Ervin Leavy with 13:28 left in the half. From there, the Oilers stretched their lead out to as much as 11 points, 42-31, on a layup by Barry Munger with 3:54 remaining.

Hill and Kenny Murphy both connected on three-point goals to pull the Pirates back within three, 44-41 with 1:51 showing, but Marathon countered that with two three-pointers of their own, by Eric Richardson and Todd May. Murphy added another three pointer to pull it back to 50-44, but Munger hit just before the horn to make it 52-44 at the half.

East Carolina was unable to dent the lead any more than that in the second half and the Oilers eased out to a much as 15 points at 79-64 on a Munger basket with 7:12 remaining. East Carolina trimmed it back to eight behind baskets by Edwards and Hill, but could get no closer.

Hill added 16 points for the Pirates while Murphy had 13 and Staples, 10.

Eric Richardson led Marathon with 22 points while Leavy had 16, Sprewer had 15, Munger had 13 and May had 11.

The Pirates attracted a crowd of 3,800 for the game, which greatly pleased Steele. "We didn't have regular game crowds like that last year," he said. It's too bad that we had a problem getting started (the late tipoff).

"And of course I'm disappointed that we lost. But on the other hand, it gave us an idea of what we've got to work on and that's good for us."

The Pirates have a little over a week to get ready for their official opening of the season. They will play in Minges Coliseum against N.C. Wesleyan on Nov. 26, tipoff set for 7:30 p.m.

Mavericks Top Hornets, 105-93

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — Dallas Mavericks coach John MacLeod usually takes the low-key approach. Kicking chairs and singling out players for criticism aren't his style.

MacLeod changed tactics Thursday night and the result was a 105-93 rout of the Charlotte Hornets.

The expansion Hornets led at halftime, 49-48, and MacLeod related his displeasure to his players.

"Coach was really after us at halftime," said forward Sam Perkins. "He said we were lethargic. The crowd was not up and we knew we'd have to get ourselves going."

The Mavericks strung together a 10-0 run to start the third quarter and finished the period with a 34-12 edge. The 12-point quarter was the lowest third period ever by a Mavericks opponent and the fewest points by Charlotte in any quarter this season.

Mark Aguirre had 10 points in the quarter, 26 for the game. Derek Harper and Rolando Blackman added 21 points each for Dallas.

Kelly Tripucka led Charlotte with 15 points.

"His talk at halftime was, shall we say intense," Blackman said. "There was some nipping at our behinds."

"A lot of times, the low-key approach doesn't work," said Harper. "We definitely needed it, no doubt about it. We weren't putting out the effort. I think anytime you play a team like Charlotte there's the tendency to relax. Teams like that come to your place and play hard."

MacLeod was particularly disturbed because the Mavericks had lost to the Hornets in an October exhibition game and apparently failed to learn a lesson.

"They really cracked us in the pre-season," MacLeod said. "A few things needed to be pointed out. If you don't watch out, these teams can crack you. I like the way the guys responded."

Dallas established dominance under the basket in the third period, blocking four Charlotte shots.

"We were a lot more aggressive," MacLeod said. "We needed to close it down underneath."

The Hornets' 39.6 percent shooting was their downfall.

"We just didn't shoot well the entire game," said Hornets coach Dick Harter. "I can't accept the way we played in the third quarter. We didn't execute and didn't play well defensively."

"We have to find some people who can shoot the ball," Harter said. "That's what they get paid to do. I can see us getting better but sooner or later we have to win some games."

Seattle 101, L.A. Lakers 98

In a game involving a big-name Johnson, unheralded Avery Johnson made the biggest impression.

Johnson, a 5-foot-11 rookie, sparked the Seattle SuperSonics in the fourth quarter as they beat the Los Angeles Lakers 101-98 Thursday night.

Johnson, from Southern University, played just one minute in the first half. But he had two key steals and three assists down the stretch.

"The coach (Bernie Bickerstaff) is getting more and more confidence in me," said Johnson, the last player off Seattle's bench. "He wants me to get out there and make some things happen when we need it. Tonight, we wanted to slow Magic down and not let him push it up and down the floor."

Magic Johnson had 28 points, 10 rebounds and six assists for the Lakers.

"He (Avery Johnson) gives them some real life," Lakers coach Pat Riley said. "He runs the offense well. The book is still closed on him, but it looks like the Sonics have themselves a nice little point guard."

Dale Ellis led the Sonics with 27 points. His two foul shots with 1:23 left put Seattle ahead 100-98.

Seattle's Jerry Reynolds blocked James Worthy's shot near the basket with 10 seconds to go.

After Michael Cage made a free throw with four seconds to go, Magic Johnson, who made a game-winning 3-pointer at the buzzer in double overtime to beat Denver Tuesday night, hit the rim with a 3-point shot as time ran out.

The Sonics ended a three-game losing streak and stopped Los Angeles' four-game winning string.

Seattle's reserves outscored the Lakers' subs 42-22. Johnson finished with three points in 13 minutes.

"The whole bunch off the bench did a nice job, but Avery gave us a pickup when we needed it," Bickerstaff said.

The Sonics played for the fourth straight game without starting point guard Nate McMillan, who is injured. Veteran John Lucas has been starting in his spot.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored just two points for the Lakers in 26 minutes.

Jazz 123, Trail Blazers 99

Darrell Griffith scored 40 points as Utah beat visiting Portland in a game slowed by 69 personal fouls.

The Jazz, fouled 41 times, made only 42 of 63 free throws. Portland was 29-for-37.

Karl Malone had 29 points and Thurl Bailey 17 for the Jazz. Clyde Drexler scored 24 for Portland.

Griffith, Malone and Bailey combined for a 14-0 burst to start the fourth quarter, putting Utah ahead 98-75.

Nuggets 139, Spurs 112

Danny Schayes got 31 points and 14 rebounds, leading Denver over San Antonio.

The Spurs lost their fourth straight game and have not won in Denver since 1986.

The Nuggets made 17 of 21 shots in the second quarter to take a 71-55 lead at halftime.

Johnny Dawkins scored 23 points for San Antonio.

Rockets 113, Heat 107

Akeem Olatuwon had 29 points and 13 rebounds and Houston used a 15-point burst in the third quarter to beat winless Miami.

The Heat, 0-6, led 62-61 at halftime before the Rockets rallied for a 76-62 advantage. Olatuwon scored seven points during the run.

Buck Johnson scored a career-high 21 points for host Houston. Sylvester Gray had 19 points and 13 rebounds for the expansion Heat.

Nets 105, Bucks 96

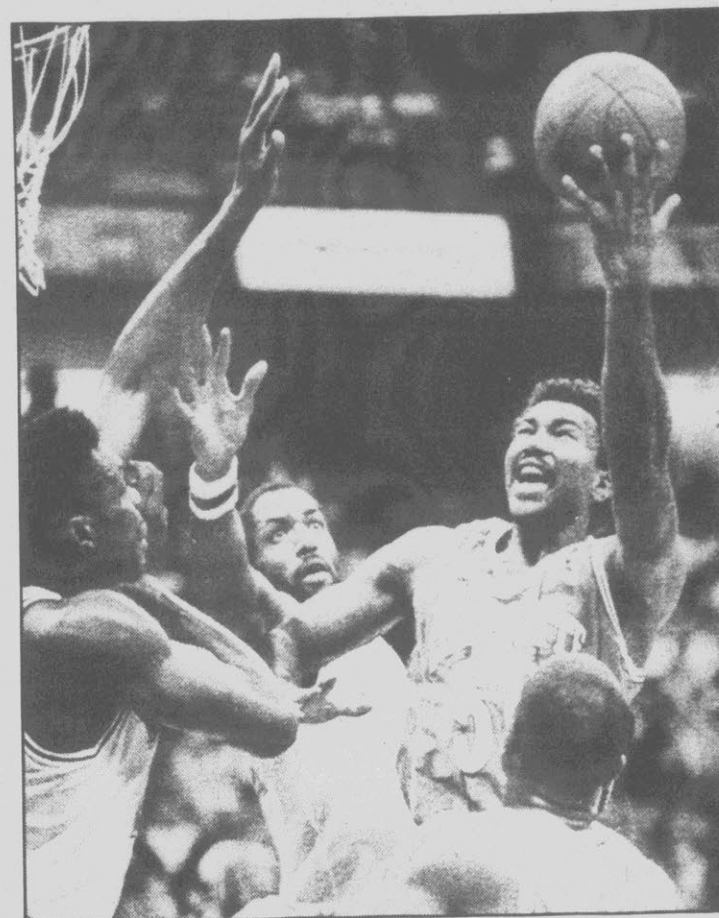

Roy Hinson scored 23 points and Walter Berry 21, leading New Jersey over Milwaukee.

The Nets, who won only three times on the road last season, have won two this season.

New Jersey scored 11 straight points during a three-minute stretch of the fourth quarter, wiping out a two-point deficit. The Nets played without center Joe Barry Carroll, who injured his left hand this week.

Ricky Pierce scored 28 points and Paul Pressey 21 for the Bucks.

Robert Reid scores two for Charlotte against Dallas

Atlanta Is Good To Bill

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAMPTON, Ga. — Atlanta International Raceway has been good to Bill Elliott.

The driver from the mountains of northern Georgia considers the 1.522-mile oval his home track, and he has definitely made himself at home on it over the years.

Since the spring race of 1985, Elliott has won four times here, including one invitational event. In his last 15 starts here, the 33-year-old speedster has started no worse than seventh and three times began from the pole.

Those statistics are a major reason for Elliott's confidence as he heads into qualifying for Sunday's season-ending Atlanta Journal 500, with the Winston Cup title all but locked up.

Practice began today, with the top 20 positions up for grabs in the opening round of time trials. The rest of the 40-car field will be filled by qualifying on Saturday.

If Elliott can finish 19th or better — something he has done in nine of his last 10 Winston Cup starts here — he will hold off Rusty Wallace and lock up his first NASCAR stock car championship and the $400,000 that goes with it.

"We're going to go into this one just the way we run every race," said Elliott, who leads Wallace by 79 points after 28 races. "We're going to try to win the race."

"If we can't win the race for some reason, we'll try to finish as high as we can," he said. "We haven't let the points worry us all year, and we're not going to start worrying about points now."

Wallace, also seeking his first series title, has been the hottest driver in the series since midseason.

The St. Louis native has won three of the last four races and has finished no worse than fifth in his last six starts while trying to catch Elliott.

"I know there's no way I can catch him if he has a decent day," Wallace said. "But I can't let that even get into my thoughts. I just have to go out there and run to win and see what happens."

Spivey Out To Clinch The Title

Woody Peele

The season is just about over, and it looks like Vickie Spivey is going to make a run-away of it — unless the bowl games bowl her over.

Spivey has run out to a five-game lead over the rest of us with a 93-36 record for the season. There's just this week's games — and we have a few testy ones — and the bowls left.

The bowl games, however, have been the cause of some trauma in the past when it came to picking the winners. In a number of years, leads have been squanders during those final fateful weeks of the season.

Nevertheless, Spivey is making us all look bad with her picks. Second place currently belongs to Tom Baines at 88-41 while Tim Chandler and Tom Morris are tied for third with 86-43 marks. Then comes me at 84-45, followed by Greg Laudick at 77-52.

The high school season, too, is just about over, with only two teams still in the running, Ayden-Grifton and North Pitt.

The panel picks the AG game this week, which leaves me to handle North Pitt.

Last week's record of 3-2 brought us to 64-24 for the season.

The Panthers will be playing host to Hertford County, the top-ranked 2-A team in the state. Hertford is the result of the consolidation of Ahoskie and Murfreesboro. Next year, the Bears will move into a 3-A conference. Thus far they have dominated nearly all their opponents.

For the Panthers, this is a game where nothing is to be lost. Going all out could bring them a victory, but it will take some effort. Hertford cannot, of course, look ahead at all.

Still in all, there's no question that the Bears are the favorites, and I think they'll finish North Pitt's season, 35-14.

Ayden-Grifton travels to Clayton and that might be the difference in the game — the home field. Both teams bring in 10-1 records with Clayton's only loss to 4-A powerhouse Garner.

Ayden-Grifton is hampered by injuries and, like North Pitt, must be at their best to advance past this one.

My choice here is Clayton, 21-16, while the panel splits down the middle, 3-3.

East Carolina closes out its season — and the Art Baker era — by traveling to meet the Cincinnati Bearcats. Cincinnati recalls with no fondness at all last year's 56-28 romp by the Pirates. It is a game they would like to avenge. For East Carolina, it's truly "Gipper" time. Art Baker came to East Carolina with a win, and he's stated he'd like to leave with one also.

A two-game winning streak would also be a nice present to give to the new coach.

The panel goes down the line with the Pirates in this one, and I look for a 41-27 victory.

Our other picks of the week are: Duke over North Carolina; Pittsburgh over N.C. State; Kentucky and Tennessee, a toss-up; Washington State over Washington; Clemson over South Carolina; Virginia over Maryland; Wake Forest over Appalachian State; UCLA and Southern California, a toss-up; West Virginia over Syracuse; and Tulsa over Temple.

Tar Heels Opening Season In Big Apple NIT Contest

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHAPEL HILL — North Carolina must offset its lack of overall size with improved shooting as the sixth-ranked Tar Heels prepare to open the 1988-89 basketball season tonight against Tennessee-Chattanooga in the first round of the Big Apple NIT.

"I hope we can improve from the Soviet game," Coach Dean Smith said. "Our shooting has not been good in our exhibitions and that must get better."

Should the Tar Heels win, they would host a second-round game on Sunday, probably against the winner of the Georgia-Arkansas State game.

The Tar Heels, 27-7 last year and a finalist in the West Region, will be without their All-American forward-center, 6-foot-9 junior J.R. Reid. He is sidelined with a stress fracture of his left foot and isn't expected to play until January.

There is plenty of talent on hand in guards Jeff Lebo and King Rice, swingmen Steve Bucknall and Kevin Madden, forwards Rick Fox and Pete Chilcutt and 6-10 center Scott Williams. However, Williams and Chilcutt are the only players over 6-7.

UTC was 20-13 last year, won the Southern Conference championship, and made its eighth straight appearance in a postseason tournament.

The Moccasins are led by 6-2 junior guard Benny Green, who was their top scorer a year ago at 17.2. Other returning starters are 6-5 junior forward Shendi Moon and 6-6 junior guard Daren Chandler. The other starters are 6-7 senior Chris Behrends and 6-6, 230-pound center Vincent Robinson.

The Mocs are also expecting frontcourt help from 6-8, 265-pound Terry Brent, a junior college transfer from Pratt (Kan.) Community College and two freshmen, 6-7 Diantre Howell and 6-8 Maceo Williams.

UNC played two exhibition games, beating Marathon Oil 109-100 and losing to the Soviet National team 104-93. UTC fell to Marathon 88-84.

Smith had praise for the Mocs, who are in their fourth year under coach Mack McCarthy.

"In Benny Green they have a tremendous scorer who can make the 3-point shot and is extremely quick defensively," he said. "Daren Chandler and Shendi Moon play much bigger than their size might indicate. They are very quick jumpers. In fact, we may have problems with their overall team quickness."

UNC has played UTC twice before, winning 73-66 at Chattanooga in 1982 and 85-63 in Chapel Hill in 1983.

In other first-round games, fourth-ranked Louisville will play Xavier of Ohio in Cincinnati's Riverfront Coliseum, La Salle travels to Syracuse, Southwest Missouri State visits 14th-ranked Missouri, No. 20 Stanford travels to Montana, Illinois State will be at Indiana, Arkansas

State will be at Georgia, and Wyoming plays host to Southern Methodist.

UNC, Syracuse, Indiana and Louisville have been promised second-round home games, if they advance. The semifinals are scheduled for Wednesday at New York's Madison Square Garden, with the championship on Friday.

On paper, Louisville vs. Xavier of Ohio looks like a mismatch. That's the way it looks to Xavier Coach Pete Gillen as well.

"They are so strong, they can just flick away our guards," Gillen said as his team prepared to meet the highly-regarded Cardinals tonight in one of the opening games in the Big Apple NIT. "They can push them away like a bothersome gnat."

The fourth-ranked Cardinals, who were national champions as recently as 1986, will send a veteran team against Xavier at Riverfront Coliseum in Cincinnati.

Three of the nation's top 10 teams — No. 4 Louisville, No. 6 North Carolina and No. 8 Syracuse — open their 1988-89 basketball seasons as the tournament opens tonight at eight sites.

Along with the Louisville-Xavier game, it will be Tennessee-Chattanooga at North Carolina, La Salle at Syracuse, Southwest Missouri State at No. 14 Missouri, No. 20 Stanford at Montana, Illinois State at Indiana, Arkansas State at Georgia and Southern Methodist at Wyoming.

The quarterfinals also will be played at campus sites, with the semifinals next Wednesday and the final two days later being held at New York's Madison Square Garden.

Right now, the Cardinals look like a good bet to make a run at the NCAA title.

"By the end of the season, I think we'll be good enough to win the national championship," said forward Kenny Payne, a member of the '86 champions.

That could mean a long night for Xavier, which lost all-time school scoring leader Byron Larkin after last season. Xavier will rely on three veteran starters — forward Tyrone Hill, guard Stan Kimbrough and center Derek Strong — to carry the team for a while.

They'll need solid play from their guards to stay with Louisville, which has 6-foot-3 LeBradford Smith and 6-5 Craig Hawley matching up against Xavier's 5-11 Kimbrough and 5-10 Jamal Walker.

Gillen said Xavier also will have to hold its own in rebounds in order to compete against Louisville's solid front line, which includes Pervis Ellison, who led the team in scoring with a 17.6 average last season, and Payne, who led the team in three-point shooting. The Cardinals' only significant loss is forward Herbert Crook, who averaged 16.1 points.

La Salle at No. 8 Syracuse Syracuse, 26-9 last season, could have its hands full with LaSalle, 24-10, and the defending Metro Atlantic conference champion.

The Explorers are paced by 6-6 junior forward Lionel Simmons, who last year led the league in scoring (23.3), rebounding (11.4) and blocked shots (2.3).

Senior guard Sherman Douglas, Syracuse's top returning scorer and captain, needs only four assists to become Syracuse's all-time assist leader, surpassing the record of 637 set by Dwayne "Pearl" Washington between 1984 and 1987.

SW Missouri St. at No. 14 Missouri

Southwest Missouri State barely lost to Nevada-Las Vegas last year when the Bears posted a 22-7 record. They are picked to win the Association of Mid-Century Universities title this season.

"It will be a difficult game. The big factor is how they handle the ball and how we react to that," Missouri coach Norm Stewart said. "Everybody's touting it as the best team ever at SMS."

The Tigers, 18-11, return four starters and should be better balanced than they were last season.

No. 20 Stanford at Montana

Todd Lichti will lead Pac-10 power Stanford as Cardinal coach Mike Montgomery has a homecoming against Montana. Montgomery coached the Montana Grizzlies from 1978-86.

Lichti, a 6-4 guard, is a three-time All-Pac 10 player and holds the Stanford scoring record. Montana, 18-11 last season, returns four starters, led by 6-9, 230-pound forward Wayne Tinkle, a second team All-Big Sky Conference selection last year.

Illinois State at Indiana

Illinois State, 18-13 last year, is hoping to recover from losing its top four scorers from last season.

"Certainly with such a dramatic change in personnel, it will take us a little longer to put things together," Illinois State coach Bob Donewald said. "How good we'll be I really won't know until we've gone through several games and the players settle into their roles."

Indiana will start 6-9 freshman Eric Anderson, who was Illinois' top high school player last year.

Arkansas State at Georgia

Georgia is picked to win the Southeastern Conference this season, while Arkansas State is on the upswing.

"We can't use the element of surprise anymore," said Arkansas State coach Nelson Catalina, whose 21-14 club returns all five of its starters. "Probably one of the greatest elements in competitive sports is being able to surprise someone. I think we did it last year a few times. ... I don't think that will be the case this year."

Southern Methodist at Wyoming John Shumate, the former Notre Dame and professional star, is making his debut as coach of SMU's Mustangs, 28-7 last season. Wyoming of the Western Athletic Conference might not be as good last season's 26-6 record.

Duke, Kentucky Playing In Tipoff Classic Game

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — The 10th Tipoff Classic is the same matchup as the first and there's a lot more in common for the two games than just that.

Top-ranked Duke and Kentucky play in the traditional opener for the college basketball season at Springfield, Mass., on Saturday. The first was played on Nov. 17, 1979 when the game was instituted as a fundraiser for the Basketball Hall of Fame, which is located in this New England town where the sport was invented.

The inaugural game was a rematch of the 1978 national championship game, in which Kentucky beat the Blue Devils 94-88. The Tipoff Classic went overtime before Duke beat the Wildcats 82-76. Ironically, Kentucky's season ended as it had begun — the Blue Devils edged Kentucky 55-54 in the NCAA Tournament.

Kentucky, minus all the major players from the 1958 championship team except guard Kyle Macy, fell to 19-12 in 1979, and ended the season with a first-round NIT loss to Clemson.

Things will be even rougher for Kentucky and coach Eddie Sutton this weekend in New England.

The Wildcats have lost seven of the top eight scorers from last year's 27-6 team that lost in the regional semifinals to Villanova.

Rex Chapman left after his sophomore year for the NBA, five seniors graduated and sophomore Eric Manuel is being withheld from competition pending completion of an investigation into allegations of possible cheating on a college entrance examination.

That is one of a number of allegations hanging over one of the most storied programs in college basketball history. The NCAA investigation continues as Kentucky faces a tough opening game in what has to be considered a tough season.

"Only four of my players in this game will be playing their first college game," Sutton said Wednesday. "The guys back from last year's team totalled about 600 minutes of playing time. That means this will be a very young, inexperienced team facing one of the premier clubs in all of college basketball."

Sutton said he expects to start 6-foot-11 senior Mike Scott, who played 73 minutes last season; 6-10 sophomore LeRon Ellis, the vet of the squad at 386 minutes; 6-7 sophomore Reggie Hanson, 83; 6-5 junior Derrick Miller, 84, and 6-7 freshman Chris Mills.

"Mills will be out of position and he's not real comfortable at the point," Sutton said.

Mills, subject of one of the main points of the NCAA investigation — concerning the alleged mailing of cash to a recruit — is playing at point guard because Sean Sutton, the coach's son, suffered a broken jaw during a scrimmage and will be lost for two months while recovering from surgery.

"Sean's loss really hurt us," Sutton said. "Chris Mills never played there before and you hate to start the season with players out of position."

It seems Duke's current players have been anchored in their spots for quite some time.

Ten players return from last year's Final Four team, just as there were a number of veterans returning to the team that played in the first Tipoff Classic.

Senior forward Danny Ferry, last season's Atlantic Coast Conference player of the year, leads the Blue Devils, who lost only starters Billy King, a defensive specialist, and Kevin Strickland, the No. 2 scorer at 16.1 per game.

"Ferry certainly has the credentials to be the college player of the year," Sutton said, "and he is surrounded by some marvelously talented kids."

"What concerns me more than anything is their great defense. They forced 19 turnovers a game last season and they play as we coach it — hard-nosed man defense and most of the time on offense is working toward a high percentage shot."

Sutton said he and his staff don't address winning and losing to the team before a game, even one in which they are such a decided underdog.

"We present the game as a challenge to carry out their assignments," he said. "If they give us 100 percent each time, the wins and losses will take care of themselves."

"We are overmatched in a lot of ways but it's not a series against them. We probably wouldn't have a chance in a series against them. But this is one game and you do not throw in the white towel for one game."

Ramsay Resigns As Pacer Coach

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Frustrated by the worst start in a 37-year coaching career and seeing no prospect for a change, Jack Ramsay decided it was time to resign as coach of the Indiana Pacers.

Ramsay has coached more NBA games than any man in history and is the league's second winningest coach. He was in his 21st season and his third as the Pacers' coach.

"I've been in tough times before. But, I never started a season losing seven games," Ramsay told a news conference Thursday night after returning from Phoenix where he told his players of his decision before the club left for tonight's game with the Los Angeles Clippers. "That eats at you."

Losing and his inability to get the Pacers to play to his satisfaction led to his decision, Ramsay said, adding that he did not think he would take another coaching job.

"I've always felt that I've done my work because I like it. I thoroughly have enjoyed my coaching career but at this time it's no longer fun for me and I'm not getting the satisfaction that I want to get from my work," the 63-year-old said.

"I'd listen to opportunities (in basketball) but I don't think it will be in coaching."

Ramsay has coached a record 1,647 NBA games.

"Whatever problems there might be, it's still the coach's job to have the team win," Ramsay said.

Ramsay discussed the club's worst start since it entered the NBA in 1976 with club president Donnie Walsh in Phoenix after it lost 123-104 to the Suns. They agreed it was the best decision for the coach and the franchise.

The club said a decision on a replacement would likely be made before its next home game against Milwaukee on Tuesday. Assistant coaches Mel Daniels and Dave Twardzik will guide the team against the Clippers and the Sacramento Kings on Saturday.

Ramsay said he had no recommendation on a successor.

"They've worked hard. They're loyal guys. I think it's a good opportunity for them, although I can't say that I envy them in their task," he said of his former assistants.

"It's a tough, tough job. This is a very competitive league, our (Central) division is just fierce and to go into it in a situation that the team now finds itself is a very tough situation," Ramsay said. "We have players who are not playing up to their levels of performance, where they should be."

"I have not been getting the best performance from some of my players and I take responsibility for that. I like to think that as a coach you can get what your players can give and that hasn't been happening."

Indiana, which averaged 23 1-2 victories in the four years before Ramsay arrived, made the playoffs in 1987 with a 41-41 mark in Ramsay's debut with the club. That was a 15-game improvement over the previous year and hopes for more improvement were high heading into last season.

But, the club faltered in the second half of the season and finished 38-44 — missing the playoffs when it lost its final game to the New York Knicks by two points.

"I think we made a very significant jump in my first year, an almost incredible jump," he said. "I didn't like the start of the (this) season and I don't see a positive direction, at least not in the immediate future and I just don't want to face it night after night. It's too hard on me."

Ramsay, who was in the final year of his contract, said he didn't fault management or the players for the situation that led to his resignation.

His 864 victories leaves him second to Red Auerbach's 938 on the league's all-time list and he was recently named for induction to the Basketball Hall of Fame.

His coaching career began in 1949 at St. James High School in Chester, Pa. After six years as a high school coach, Ramsay moved to his alma mater at St. Joseph's in Philadelphia where he compiled a 234-72 mark in 11 seasons.

In 1968, Ramsay launched his NBA coaching career with the Philadelphia 76ers.

Saints Hoping To Make Life Devilish For Elway

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The New Orleans Saints hope they can harass John Elway this week the same way they bothered Jim Everett last week, and hope the result is the same.

New Orleans, trying to stay atop the NFC West, faces Elway and the Denver Broncos on Sunday. The Saints hurried Everett last Sunday and beat Los Angeles 14-10, giving them an 8-3 record and a one-game lead over the Rams.

"We've just got to go out and play against him and try like heck to get some pressure on him," Saints defensive coordinator Steve Sidwell said. "The most dangerous situation for us would be to let Elway stand back there in the pocket for a long time and give those speedy wide receivers a chance to get open."

The visiting Broncos need a victory as much as New Orleans. Denver is tied the Los Angeles Raiders and Seattle for the AFC West lead, all at 6-5.

The Raiders host Atlanta while Seattle travels to Kansas City. AFC East-leading Buffalo hosts the New York Jets and AFC Central-leading Cincinnati plays at Dallas. The Cowboys have lost seven straight games.

Chicago, on top of the NFC Central, is at Tampa Bay. The New York Giants and Phoenix are tied for the NFC East lead. The Giants host Philadelphia while Phoenix is at Houston.

In other games, Detroit plays Green Bay at Milwaukee, Pittsburgh is at Cleveland, Indianapolis at Minnesota and San Diego at the Los Angeles Rams. New England is at Miami on Sunday night and Washington is at San Francisco on Monday night.

Saints safety Brett Maxie said Elway often runs out of the pocket by design, whereas Everett scrambled only when he needed to.

"The difference with Elway is he tries to reverse into the pressure and elude you," Maxie said. "We've got to keep him staying upfield."

Broncos Coach Dan Reeves said his team is recovering from a series of injuries, although All-Pro linebacker Karl Mecklenberg is again out with a broken thumb.

For the Saints, fullback Craig Heyward and defensive linemen Jumpy Geathers and Tony Elliott are on a day-to-day basis, Heyward and Geathers with sprained knees and Elliott with a groin pull.

Phoenix will rely on backup quarterback Cliff Stoudt when it plays in Houston. The Cardinals lost Neil Lomax for two to four weeks

The Oilers rank sixth in the NFL in total defense.

"They really get pressure on the quarterback and allow their corners and safeties to cover receivers," Stoudt said. "A quarterback that gets four or five seconds can make it tough on any defensive back, but the Oilers rarely give a quarterback that long."

The Cardinals are the NFL's top-rated offense.

"I just want to step in and try to keep things going the way they are and do the best I can with the limited amount of work I've received the past three years," Stoudt said.

Star Market Is Open Once Again

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Three years ago, baseball's free-agent market suddenly stopped.

On Thursday, the market for star players suddenly re-started.

The New York Yankees want Steve Sax. The San Diego Padres want Bruce Hurst and Mike Moore. The California Angels want Nolan Ryan.

Tommy Herr, however, turned down a $1.8-million, two-year contract from the World Series champion Los Angeles Dodgers to sign a $1.65 million, two-year contract with the Philadelphia Phillies, the team which had obtained him in a trade from Minnesota after the season.

Owners, found guilty of conspiring against free agents after the 1985 and 1986 seasons, have established a system of registering offers with management's Player Relations Committee. The clubs believe that this method of exchanging information is allowed under the collective-bargaining agreement.

Arbitrator George Nicolau ruled last week the PRC must tell the union of any offers registered. This week, the PRC agreed to telephone the union immediately upon learning of an offer.

Sax has been offered a three-year contract for $3.2 million by the New York Yankees, according to a source with knowledge of the negotiations. Sax, who made $838,182 in 1988, two weeks ago turned down a two-year contract from the Dodgers for $2.1 million with an option year that, if exercised, would have raised the contract to $3.2 million over three years.

Los Angeles now is offering a three-year contract for $3.5 million. Pittsburgh and Texas have offered Sax three-year contracts at $3 million.

Ryan, the leading strikeout pitcher in major-league history, was offered a $1.2 million contract by California. He made $1.2 million this season with Houston and a management source said Houston would raise its current offer of $1 million.

Hurst, the left-hander who went 18-6 for the Boston Red Sox, has been offered a three-year contract by San Diego for $4.9 million. The Red Sox began negotiations by offering a two-year deal for $2.6 million with an option year at $1.4 million, according to an agent who, while not involved in the discussions, learned of the details. Hurst made $900,000 in 1988.

Moore, 9-15 in 1988 for the Seattle Mariners, has been offered a two-year contract by San Diego for $2.65 million. He made $481,950 in 1988 and already has sold his house in Seattle.

"There are a lot of people out there interested in these players, and we have a tough fight ahead, but we are making the effort," Dick Freeman, the Padres' acting president, said. "I expect to get a response from both Hurst and Moore early next week."

"I love San Diego," Hurst said. "It's a great place to raise a family, and the Padres could be a great team. They are making every effort to improve. ... I consider this a very serious offer."

Bob Teaff, a lawyer for Sax, refused to comment on any offers, as did Bob Quinn, the Yankees' general manager. Ron Shapiro, the agent for Moore, also refused to comment but sources with knowledge of the negotiations confirmed that the offers were made.

Gorbachev Holds Private Talks With Gandhi

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW DELHI, India — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev began a three-day visit to India today and held private talks with Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi that are expected to produce new economic and cultural agreements.

A Soviet interpreter was the only other person present for the talks at India's presidential palace. It is Gorbachev's first visit to any country outside the Soviet bloc since he was elected president nearly two months ago.

The talks started four hours after Gorbachev arrived. Indian authorities, mindful of Afghan refugee opposition to Soviet involvement in Afghanistan, asked the estimated 7,000 Afghans living in New Delhi to stay in their homes while Gorbachev is in town.

"Once again, I am moved by the reception and welcome I have had," Gorbachev said through an interpreter after receiving a 21-gun salute at the presidential palace. "Let me say, I am very happy to be in India."

Gorbachev and his wife Raisa were met at New Delhi airport by Gandhi and his wife Sonia. The wives embraced, Raisa Gorbachev wearing a sky-blue suit and Italian-born Sonia Gandhi in a darker blue silk sari.

With armed Soviet and Indian escort cars, they sped off in a motorcade of black, bullet-proof Soviet Zil limousines on the 20-minute drive to the sandstone presidential palace in the heart of the Indian capital. Security was tight.

Schools were closed today in honor of Gorbachev's visit. More than 100,000 students and 10,000 teachers were asked to stand along the Soviet motorcade route, newspapers reported.

About 20 tons of roses, marigolds and chrysanthemums were trucked in from nearby agricultural states to deck the capital, newspapers said. Banners proclaiming Soviet-Indian friendship in Russian, English and Hindi were erected, and a few huge portraits of Gorbachev and his wife were put up on poles.

Gorbachev is scheduled to talk with Gandhi at least four times during the visit. According to Indian officials, the talks are expected to include:

- Superpower relations and the new administration of President-elect George Bush.
- Gorbachev's efforts to ease economic restraints at home, with an eye to how these measures will affect foreign trade.
- Soviet and Indian relations with China.
- Afghanistan after the Soviet military withdrawal.

Afghan refugees said they have been instructed to stay off the streets, except to report to their nearest police stations every morning while Gorbachev is here.

"The police want to make sure all heads are accounted for," said Syed Mohammad Maiwand, chairman of the International Afghan Elders Association, which claims 1,300 members in New Delhi. "They are treating us as if we were criminals."

India, a founding member of the movement of non-aligned nations, has friendly relations with both Moscow and Washington. But the Soviets are a chief supplier of military equipment, including jet fighter planes and tanks.

On Wednesday, the two countries signed a trade agreement for imports and exports worth $4.7 billion in 1989 — more than double the estimated $1.9 billion for 1987.

On Saturday, Gorbachev is to accept the 1987 Indra Gandhi Prize for Peace, Disarmament and Development. The award began in 1986 in memory of the present prime minister's predecessor and mother who was assassinated in 1984.

Gorbachev received the award announced one year ago, for "his bold and imaginative proposals to initiate a positive and practical process of nuclear disarmament and his vision of a non-violent free world."

He is scheduled to return to Moscow midday Sunday.

South Africa Convicts Four Black Activists Of Treason

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PRETORIA, South Africa — Four black activists, including three leaders of the country's largest anti-apartheid group, were convicted today of treason. They could face the death penalty.

The verdicts culminated a three-year trial on the role of the United Democratic Front, a pro-black rights coalition formed in 1983. The state alleged the front incited anti-government violence in black townships in 1984, at a time when the coalition's leaders said they advocated peaceful protest.

Supreme Court Justice Kees van Dijkhorst described the front as a "revolutionary organization" which sought to overthrow the government.

Three of those convicted of treason were senior leaders who had spent 40 months in jail without bail — Popo Molefe, 36, who was the coalition's national secretary; Terror Lekota, 40, who was its chief spokesman; and Moses Chikane, 40, a leader of its Transvaal Province branch.

Also convicted of treason was the Rev. Thomas Manthata, an activist in the Vaal Triangle area south of Johannesburg where the first wave of unrest flared in September 1984. Sentences, to be issued after mitigating arguments, are scheduled to begin Dec. 5.

Eight of the 19 defendants were acquitted on all charges and seven were convicted of terrorism related to unrest in the Vaal Triangle. Terrorism also carries a maximum penalty of death.

The crowd packed into the courtroom, including opposition leaders, was subdued when Dijkhorst announced the verdicts. The judge began reading 1,521-page trial summary Tuesday, and his preliminary conclusions this week left no doubt the top defendants would be convicted.

"We haven't given up. We will always maintain that the UDF is a non-violent organization," said Chikane before he and his colleagues gave clenched-fist salutes and were led away.

"This is very disappointing," said anti-apartheid activist Helen Suzman, a member of Parliament. "This very much narrows the field of protest."

Others who attended part of today's court session included Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu, a patron of the front, and U.S. Ambassador Edward Perkins.

The front, banned earlier this year, was formed to mobilize opposition to a new constitution that entrenched the exclusion of the black majority from representation in Parliament.

All 19 defendants had pleaded innocent to charges of treason, terrorism, murder and subversion related to the central allegation that the front and its affiliates incited violence in 1984 to make South Africa ungovernable.

Van Dijkhorst said the state proved treason because violence was an intended facet of the township uprisings. He also accepted prosecutors' allegation that the core of the front's leadership was supported and guided by the African National Congress, the main anti-government guerrilla movement.

The front has maintained it endorsed the front's political goals, such as a one-person, one-vote system, but did not promote the use of violence.

Before its banning in February, the front had become the largest opposition group in South Africa, encompassing more than 600 affiliated groups with 2 million members. Most front leaders are in detention, in hiding or barred from political activity.

Van Dijkhorst has presided over the non-jury trial since its start in 1985 and has sole responsibility for the verdict and sentencing.

Originally, there were 22 defendants in the trial, conducted for many months in Delmas before being shifted to Pretoria. Three men were acquitted in 1986.

U.S. Will Deport Cuban Detainees Involved In Riots

By Robert L. Jackson
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Department of Justice officials announced Thursday the impending deportation of 15 Cuban detainees involved in prison riots last year and said that they plan to speed up their case-by-case review of hundreds of other Cubans being held in federal institutions.

The 15 detainees were among the first group of 28 cases reviewed so far as part of a Department of Justice agreement that ended the riots at federal prisons in Atlanta and Oakdale, La., last November. They will be sent back to Cuba "in the near future," principally on grounds that they are incorrigibly violent criminals, authorities said. All of them committed serious crimes since coming to the United States in the 1980 Mariel boat lift.

Last November about 3,000 Cubans being detained at the two prisons staged riots to protest the threat of U.S. deportation to Cuba. Many had criminal records or histories of mental problems and their immigration status was in doubt.

The rioting followed an agreement with Cuban President Fidel Castro that he would accept the forced return of many Cubans who had fled on the Mariel boat lift. To quell the disturbance, Department of Justice officials signed agreements with representatives of the detainees that all of those about to be sent back would be given case-by-case reviews before any deportations were ordered.

Although only 28 such cases have received special review so far, officials said that much of the first year has been occupied with getting the review process set up and paperwork completed on the remaining 400 to 500 detainees at the two prisons who previously had been slated for deportation.

Next January, additional review panels will be established "so we hope to complete the entire review process within several months," according to project director George Calhoun.

Meanwhile, hundreds of other detainees — for whom deportation never was imminent — have finished routine processing by the Immigration and Naturalization Service and have been released from detention to pursue jobs in this country.

The 15 slated for deportation are being held in a "lockdown" condition at the Talladega, Ala., correctional center to prevent further rioting. Their crimes have included murder, kidnapping, rape and drug dealing since they arrived in the United States eight years ago, authorities said.

Calhoun told reporters, however, that the deportations could be delayed by further legal challenges.

Gary Leshaw, director of an Atlanta-based legal aid organization representing Mariel detainees, said that such lawsuits will be filed in hopes of blocking the first deportations since 201 Cubans were returned to their Communist homeland in 1985.

Palestinians Ignore Call For Strike

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Palestinians in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip today ignored strike orders issued in the name of the Moslem fundamentalist group Hamas to protest the proclamation of Palestinian independence.

Leaders of Hamas, Arabic for "zeal," claimed leaflets bearing the strike order were forged to confuse and divide Palestinian activists. It was not known if this was true or if the strike call failed for lack of organization and support.

Throughout the occupied lands, Israeli troops were deployed near mosques in anticipation of nationalist demonstrations after Moslem noon prayers, often a spark for anti-Israeli protests.

Friday noon prayers are the high point of the Moslem week, and this week's gatherings offer the first opportunity for many Palestinians to celebrate the independence declaration issued on Tuesday in Algiers by the Palestine National Council, the policy-making body of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Cyprus today formally recognized the independent Palestinian state, bringing to 26 the number of nations that have recognized it.

The Soviet Union today recognized the proclamation of an independent Palestinian state but stopped short of extending full diplomatic relations. The Soviet action comes at a time when the Soviets are moving toward closer ties with Israel after breaking relations in 1967.

The army imposed widespread curfews and travel restrictions on most of the 1.5 million Palestinians in the occupied lands in the days preceding and following the proclamation to choke off expressions of nationalist fervor.

The restrictions have been eased gradually since Thursday, and in the final move the army lifted curfews on Gaza's eight refugee camps today.

At least 29 Palestinians were shot and wounded in clashes with soldiers Thursday in the West Bank and Gaza as Israel lifted curfews on the areas, hospital officials reported. The army said it was aware of four injuries in the West Bank and was checking other reports.

More than 7,000 Palestinians have been wounded since the uprising started Dec. 8. The death toll in the revolt is 313 Palestinians and 11 Israelis.

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres summoned foreign diplomats today to explain Israel's rejection of the PLO independence declaration.

On Thursday, he told reporters that the PLO's statement accepting U.N. Security Council resolution 242 did not amount to implicit recognition of Israel since it was coupled with demands for Palestinian self-determination and linkage to other U.N. resolutions.

"We feel very strongly that under the headline of moderation, what really happened is a more extreme position," he said.

Nationalist Surge Prods Lithuanians To Defy Moscow

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW (AP) — The parliament of the Baltic republic of Lithuania challenged Moscow's authority today by debating a law declaring Lithuanian the official language. A Russian newspaper accused neighboring Estonia of fostering ethnic tension with a similar effort.

The meeting in Lithuania, and demonstrations planned today marking the 70th anniversary of independence in the three Baltic republics, Latvia, were signs of resurging nationalism in the small Soviet republics that are using Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's reforms to push for greater autonomy.

The republics of Lithuania, Estonia and Latvia were independent between the world wars but were annexed by the Soviet Union in 1940 following a pact between the Soviets and the Nazis.

Residents of the Baltics have increasingly pushed for more economic and cultural freedom under Gorbachev's reform policy. Thousands in the three republics have joined People's Front organizations, which recently have spread to the Slavic republics of Byelorussia and the Ukraine.

The Baltics have been angered by amendments to the national constitution proposed by Gorbachev, saying they would shift the little power they have to central authorities in Moscow and eliminate their constitutional right to secede.

The Supreme Soviet of Lithuania opened a session that was expected to last late into the night with the national language debate, said Vitautas Makauskas, an editor with official television, which was providing a live broadcast.

Makauskas said in a telephone interview from Vilnius, the Lithuanian capital, that the language debate would likely be followed by discussions about re-establishing the flag, hymn, and seal of the independent republic that existed before Lithuania was absorbed into the Soviet Union.

Activists said hundreds of people gathered outside the Supreme Soviet on Thursday with flags and banners supporting greater local control.

The United States backed the Baltic nationalists Thursday. State Department spokesman Charles Redman said in Washington: "The United States does not recognize the forcible incorporation of the Baltic states. ... The people of the Baltic states have been denied their basic human rights."

Sovietskaya Rossiya, the official newspaper of the Russian republic, today cited rising tensions between nationalities in Estonia, picking up a theme sounded by Politburo member and former KGB secret police chief Viktor M. Chebrikov in a visit to Estonia last weekend.

On Thursday, Kremlin expressed doubt about the constitutionality of the Estonian parliament's proclamation on Wednesday that it has the right to review any new law passed in Moscow, and its "declaration of sovereignty" in all areas except foreign policy and defense.

It called Estonian leaders to the Soviet capital for a meeting with the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, the country's highest executive body, of which Gorbachev is the chairman.

Estonian leaders said on a flight late Thursday to Moscow from Tallinn that they expected the summons to Moscow.

"Perestroika is a hope and democracy is a hope, and every hope has a moment of unease," the newly elected Estonian premier, Indrek Toome, said.

"The dialogue has begun," said Igor Grazin, the Estonian lawyer who wrote the legislation and will defend it before the Presidium.

Chebrikov sharply criticized Estonia's Communist Party for fueling nationalism and warned the leadership was causing tension between the republic's ethnic groups.

Establishment of Estonian as the official language of the republic is on the agenda for a future meeting. Official statistics say 61 percent of Estonia's 1.5 million people are ethnic Estonians. About 28 percent are Russians.

Bhutto Confers With Advisers On Choices For New Coalition

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KARACHI, Pakistan — Populist leader Benazir Bhutto, the victor in National Assembly elections, huddled with advisers today to discuss the alliances she must forge to become the first woman to lead a Moslem nation.

Ms. Bhutto, 35, also planned to confer with other political figures to form a majority coalition she would head as prime minister.

"Given consultations with different groups and independent people, we are confident that we can get a simple majority" in the assembly, she declared Thursday night after arriving in this southern city.

Her Pakistan People's Party captured 92 seats in the 237-member assembly on Wednesday in the first free elections in Pakistan since 1977.

Her rivals in the nine-party conservative Islamic Democratic Alliance, which includes supporters of the late President Gen. Mohammad Zia ul-Haq, won 54 seats.

Independents and minor parties won 58 seats. Results from 13 districts were not available, and 20 seats reserved for women will be filled later by vote of the assembly.

Ms. Bhutto did not name the parties she planned to consult about forming a coalition, but likely candidates are left-leaning parties in the opposition Movement for the Restoration of Democracy.

She remained inside her walled compound in Karachi this morning to discuss the rules governing the transfer of power, said Yahya Bakhtiar, one of her advisers. "She's looking at her constitutional position," he said.

The constitution requires the president to designate a person to form a government who will be "most likely to command the confidence of the majority of the National Assembly."

Ms. Bhutto on Thursday urged President Ghulam Ishaq Khan to give her party the mandate to form a government. When asked by a reporter if she foresaw any problems in becoming prime minister, she replied: "Given the lead (of the party), I don't see any obstacle."

As prime minister, the U.S.-educated Ms. Bhutto would be recapturing the post lost by her father, Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, when he was ousted in a coup led by Zia in 1977. Bhutto was convicted of complicity in a political murder plot and hanged in 1979.

Zia ruled by martial law for eight years after the coup, then held national elections in 1985 in which political parties were not permitted to field candidates.

The general dismissed the government and National Assembly in May on grounds of corruption, incompetence and delay in putting Pakistan under Islamic law. Zia called Wednesday's election before the plane crash Aug. 17 in which he, the U.S. ambassador and 28 other people were killed.

Both Ms. Bhutto and the conservative Alliance have said they would continue Pakistan's friendship with the United States and support of Moslem guerrillas fighting the communist government of neighboring Afghanistan.

Ms. Bhutto also has said she will pursue Zia's program of increasing the influence of Islam in the nation's life, but she pledged not to let the religious policy interfere with the rights of women and minorities.

She said in a statement released Thursday by her representatives in Washington, "I look forward to working with the (George) Bush administration and with the United States Congress to build and further strengthen the special relationship that exists between our two great countries."

The United States has a $4.02 billion six-year program of military aid for Pakistan.

Pakistan also has provided sanctuary for millions of Afghan refugees who fled their country after the 1979 Soviet military intervention and is a channel for supplies to the U.S.-backed Afghan guerrillas.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles Redman said: "We congratulate the Pakistani people and their leaders for this impressive and important step in strengthening democracy in Pakistan."

Chun Will Give Up His Wealth, Go From Seoul

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL, South Korea — Former President Chun Doo-hwan, under attack for alleged involvement in corruption, will surrender most of his wealth and retire from Seoul in an effort to allay mounting public criticism, aides said today.

Also today, a four-day parliamentary hearing opened into Chun's role in suppressing a bloody uprising in the southern city of Kwangju in 1980.

One aide to Chun, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the president will hold a news conference early next week to announce his decision to leave Seoul after turning over most of his wealth to the government.

"He will make a public apology, give up most of his wealth and live in seclusion somewhere in the countryside," the aide said.

Another aide, also demanding anonymity, said Chun would live in an isolated, rented house in central South Korea, instead of going to his hometown in a southern province, where he is no longer welcome.

Living in seclusion in the countryside is a traditional Korean way of repentance for disgraced leaders.

The Hankook Ilbo, a mass circulation newspaper, quoting an unidentified government source, said if Chun takes the action, President Roh Tae-woo is expected to pardon him.

Widespread protests have broken out in the past two months urging the arrest and punishment of Chun for alleged corruption and human rights violations. Chun, a former general, took power in 1980 and left office in February. Roh, his hand-picked successor, was elected to replace him.

Nine members of Chun's family, including two brothers, have been arrested on corruption charges. Chun is accused of amassing a fortune and sending parts of it for investment in the United States and Australia.

It was not known how wealthy Chun is, but an earlier estimate put the total at $6 million, including a $1.4 million home in Seoul.

The National Assembly probe, which opened today, is considering Chun's role in putting down a civil uprising in the southern city of Kwangju in 1980.

Opposition leader Kim Dae-jung testified that the revolt was a decoy plotted by Chun and his military associates to seize power in the chaotic days that followed the assassination of President Park Chung-hee in late 1979.

Kim also accused the United States "of taking a bystander's role" in the uprising. By official count, 194 people were killed and more than 800 injured in the nine-day Kwangju uprising, the worst in modern South Korean history.

U.S. Housing Unit Attacked

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL, South Korea — Politicians today condemned an attack by South Koreans on a U.S. military housing complex and called on police to step up security around military housing areas.

Forty young people wielding clubs and iron pipes and throwing firebombs attacked the military family housing compound Thursday night, wounding two U.S. servicemen and damaging or destroying nine military vehicles and passenger cars, authorities said. The attackers fled when riot police arrived, and there were no immediate arrests, they said.

North American Jewish Group Plans To Fight Change In Definition Of Jew

By Janet McConaughy
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS — A group representing millions of Jews in North America plans to fight the "who is a Jew" amendment proposed in Israel, but will try to prevent the dispute from affecting fund-raising for Jewish causes, the group's leaders say.

"If in a family mistakes are made ... we do not punish," said Shoshana S. Cardin, immediate past president of the Council of Jewish Federations.

The council's 3,000-member General Assembly, meeting here, voted Thursday to adopt a resolution calling on political factions in Israel to take the question of "who is a Jew" out of political bargaining.

"The issue, with its ideological, moral and communal implications, should not be decided in the context of political accommodation or of ensuring the maintenance or downfall of a particular government. World

Jewry should not be divided by a political approach to the issue of "who is a Jew," said a resolution adopted by voice vote. One voice dissented.

The council, which says it represents 95 percent of the 5.5 million to 6 million Jews in the United States and Canada, will send a mission to Israel to lobby against the proposal, encourage member federations to do the same and sponsor a petition drive.

But it also will urge people to continue giving to fund-raising campaigns, which spokesman Frank Strauss said are expected to raise $850 million this year to support Jews in the United States, Canada and overseas.

"Such support and contributions are for needs of the people of Israel, not any government of the moment, and those needs have not lessened, they have increased," said a resolution adopted Thursday.

Religious parties won 18 of the 120 parliament seats in Israel's elections Nov. 1 and probably will hold the balance of power in a coalition government being formed by Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of the right-wing Likud bloc.

In exchange for ultra-Orthodox support, Shamir promised to back legislation under which only Orthodox rabbis could approve conversions to Judaism. It would take the form of an amendment to the Law of Return, which gives Israeli citizenship to any Jew who seeks it.

Current law defines a Jew as anyone born to a Jewish mother or converted to Judaism. The proposed change would add "in accordance with Halacha," or Jewish religious law, thereby nullifying conversions performed by Reform and Conservative rabbis, who don't strictly observe such requirements.

That might apply directly to only a few people each year but would divide all Jews, said council leaders.

"We are dealing with a perceived disenfranchisement of millions of American Jews who will feel they have been written out," said Cardin.

American Jews for the most part belong to the Reform or Conservative movements of Judaism.

She said North American Jews have a right to speak out and be heard on the question both because of the role Jews around the world had in Israel's formation and because they are part of "Klal Israel," or Jewish unity.

As a religious issue, she said, it shouldn't be before the Knesset, the Israeli parliament. She said the group also opposed extending the authority of rabbinic courts, which settle questions of marriage and divorce, to include the question of who is a Jew.

Strauss said the mission to Israel will leave Sunday. He said it will be made up of representatives of the Council of Jewish Federations, the United Jewish Appeal, United Israel Appeal, United Israel Appeal of Canada, and Karen Hayesod, the fund-raising organization outside the United States.

Bush Will Meet Incoming Mexican Chief

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

MEXICO CITY — President-elect George Bush and Carlos Salinas de Gortari, the next president of Mexico, will meet for lunch Tuesday at the Johnson Space Flight Center in Houston, aides to both leaders announced Thursday night.

The unusual first meeting between the two presidents-elect had been sought by Salinas de Gortari to underscore his future role as president of Washington's most populous neighbor. Previous Mexican-American summits were held after the leaders had assumed office.

Bush at a press conference earlier said that such a meeting would "symbolize one thing I talked about in the campaign. The imperative of what I call our 'front-yard neighbors.'"

Salinas de Gortari will take office Dec. 1 at a ceremony in the Legislative Palace. Many expect the opposition parties to interrupt his inaugural address with cries that his election was tainted by fraud.

The new Mexican president was elected July 6 by the smallest margin of any modern presidential candidate of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party. The two chief opposition candidates have called for the designation of an interim president to allow for new presidential elections.

Salinas de Gortari has invited dozens of world leaders to his inauguration and many Latin American presidents have accepted. Secretary of State George Shultz is scheduled to attend in behalf of President Reagan.

The United States has offered Mexico nearly $4 billion in loans and credits in recent weeks in an effort to ease Mexico's mounting economic crisis. Plummeting oil prices are estimated to cost Mexico about $2 billion by the year's end.

Aides to Bush said that Bush, a Houston resident, had been planning to go Houston for another event, but they did not say what that was.

World Aids Fair

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A fair to commemorate World AIDS Day will be held Dec. 1 at the Frank Porter Graham Student Union at the University of North Carolina, officials announced Thursday.

The event, which is free and open to the public, will be held from 11:30 a.m. until 2 p.m. More than 50 researchers, doctors, nurses, lawyers, pharmacists, public health specialists and others from throughout the Triangle will gather to discuss their work, said Dr. Inge Corless, a member of the UNC's AIDS Task Force.

The purpose of the fair will be to tell people that transmission of AIDS can be stopped and to convince them that responsible behavior can protect them against the illness, Dr. Corless said.

Expansion

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — The Microelectronics Center of North Carolina completed the expansion of its communications system to Winston-Salem State University and Bowman Gray School of Medicine Thursday, officials said.

MCCNC's Communications system is a data and two-way color video network that links North Carolina universities. The data network currently connects more than 1,100 computers at these institutions to support research collaboration.

The network also broadcasts graduate courses in microelectronics as well as evening courses in a variety of subjects, including engineering, nursing, library science and health.

Abdul Ghaffar Lakanwal, a former agriculture minister currently serving as deputy foreign minister, is the highest-ranking official to desert the Soviet-backed government of Afghan President Najibullah. The other official was identified as Sayed Kamaluddin, a lower-ranking diplomat.

Both accompanied Afghan Premier Mohammed Hassan Sharq on a visit to the United Nations earlier this month. Sharq returned home Nov. 10, but the two officials stayed behind and are now living with relatives in the United States, a State Department official said.

"We aren't saying anything officially until the two have made up their minds about what they want to do," said one U.S. official, speaking on condition that he not be identified.

State Department spokesman Charles Redman would not comment, and Fred Negem, a spokesman for the U.S. Mission to the United Nations, would say only that "it's a delicate matter." The Afghan Embassy would not comment.

A Pakistani diplomat termed the defections a serious blow to Najibullah's regime and predicted that there would be more. "With Kabul virtually surrounded by the 'mujahideen' (Afghan guerrillas) now, it's not likely that any other officials who can get out will be returning," said the official, who asked to remain anonymous.

The rebels are supported by Pakistan and the United States, and the two defecting officials could provide valuable intelligence for the guerrilla campaign.

Kabir Kohistany, a Washington representative of the guerrillas, who have been fighting the Kabul regime for more than eight years, said he heard rumors at the United Nations earlier this month that Lakanwal intended to defect.

"He's a true Marxist," Kohistany said, but apparently concluded that the current situation in his country was untenable.

Thatcher Endorses Trade Agreement

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher took a strong stand Thursday in favor of the U.S.-Canada Free Trade Agreement, saying it would be "a great blow" to world trade if the agreement were rejected and that it could severely damage Canadian credibility in future negotiations.

At the end of her two-day official visit in Washington, Thatcher, in an interview with editors and reporters of The Washington Post and Newsweek, said "the consequences of (the agreement) not going ahead I think are very considerable."

Asked if it would be a blow to world trade for the pact to be rejected, she replied, "when a country has gone in good faith to negotiate a major agreement with another country, it would be a blow if that agreement were not ratified. A great blow."

If Canada should repudiate the pact, Thatcher said, "it would be very difficult for any prime minister of Canada to go and negotiate another agreement with another country."

Researchers Say Alzheimer's Linked To Brain Deterioration

By Brenda C. Coleman
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Millions of Americans who suffer from depression may benefit from new research linking the mood disorder in Alzheimer's patients to deterioration in certain areas of the brain, a doctor says.

Researchers said Thursday that depression in Alzheimer's sufferers may be caused by deterioration in parts of the brain that produce chemicals believed to keep people upbeat.

One of the researchers, Dr. George S. Zobenko, director of geriatric health services at Western Psychiatric Institute and Clinic in Pittsburgh, suggested that the findings could help research into depression in general.

"Our study makes a suggestion of where in the brain investigators or researchers may look for more subtle changes that are probably associated with typical forms of depression in younger patients who aren't demented," he said.

Theories about depression center on the belief it is caused by low activity of chemical messengers in the brain called neurotransmitters. They permit nerve cells to communicate with each other and are believed to be key in maintaining normal levels of optimism, energy, appetite, sound sleep and interest in pleasurable activities.

About 30 percent of Alzheimer's patients suffer symptoms of depression, but contrary to popular belief, depression is not a "normal" accompaniment to Alzheimer's, said Dr. Jacob H. Fox, director of the Rush Alzheimer's Disease Center in Chicago.

Still, hundreds of thousands of the estimated 2.5 million people with Alzheimer's must cope with the burden of being depressed in addition to their progressive loss of memory, judgment and mobility.

To explore what might be causing their depression, the Pennsylvania researchers performed autopsies on the brains of 37 patients with dementia, or loss of mental function. Most were Alzheimer's victims, including 14 who also were diagnosed with major depression.

For comparison, the researchers studied brain tissue from seven non-demented elderly patients.

The depressed subjects showed significantly more evidence of deterioration in two areas of the brain stem than the non-depressed subjects, the researchers found.

These parts of the brain produce two neurotransmitters believed to be important in keeping people free of depression. One of the neurotransmitters is norepinephrine, which is involved in mood and sleep cycles, and the other, dopamine, which is involved in physical movement and in thinking and mood.

Dr. Frey demonstrates his method of collecting tears for his research on crying and stress

'Crying' Author Flooded With Letters From The Tearful And Tearless Alike

By Laura Wilkinson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. PAUL, Minn. — The tearful and tearless both cry on William Frey's shoulder.

Among those seeking Frey's help since he published "Crying: The Mystery of Tears" three years ago were a woman whose husband alternated bouts of tears and laughter, and a restaurateur whose cooks cried chopping onions.

For the restaurant owner, the answer was easy and time-honored: Chop the onions under a mist of water.

Other times, it's more complicated.

Frey advised Anne Firebaugh, 64, who divides her year between Nanoose Bay, British Columbia, and Alta Sierra, Calif., to take her husband Joseph, 71, to a neurologist. Mrs. Firebaugh said Frey's ideas reassured her belief — scorned by some doctors — that there was more to her husband's problems than runaway emotions. She learned that he is suffering from Lou Gehrig's disease.

Frey believes tears are a body's way of getting rid of chemicals produced by strong emotion.

"To get confirmation from someone who has made a study of this, that was very important to me," said Mrs. Firebaugh. "He is someone I can look to for help and guidance."

Frey, of the Dry Eye and Tear Research Center at St. Paul-Ramsey Medical Center, receives and answers letters nearly every week from people, including many men, concerned about tears or lack of them.

They get a sympathetic response because Frey knows the frustration of being unable to cry.

His mother suggested the line of inquiry when he was a graduate student in the early 1970s in search of a research project. He was spurred by curiosity over his own lack of emotional tears since he was a child.

"Once scientifically I started thinking about this, I started to realize this could be a very important process for us as humans. I became dissatisfied with what I had been satisfied, which was the fact I didn't cry very easily or very often," he said.

"So I went and talked to a psychologist. First trying to convince a psychologist that this is a problem worth dealing with is not easy."

But Frey eventually found someone who thought he had a worthwhile concern and helped him sort out his feelings. He estimates he now cries four times a month, even if his eyes only well up with tears.

"I hear things on the news or I read things in the paper or I hear something on National Public Radio or whatever. Whereas I used to not have any tears or cry, I will cry about it now, because I allow myself to do it."

The identities of the key substances removed in tears still elude him, partly because he may have made a conceptual error early in his experiments.

"I thought we could take emotional tears ... and that we could compare those to tears that were produced by eye irritation. But the thing that I have come to realize lately is that when people tear in response to eye irritation, there is quite a bit of stress involved actually. When you're sitting there inhaling vapors from freshly cut onion, your eyes burn really a lot. You're feeling pain, stress."

His research backed that up, showing the same three biochemicals are present in both kinds of tears. They are leucine-enkephalin, an endorphin, and the hormones prolactin and Adrenocorticotropic hormone, known as ACTH. But he doesn't know in what amounts and is working on a way to determine that.

Tears also have a lot of material, such as wetting agents, which have interfered with his chemical methods of measurements.

"One thing we're interested in is trying to understand what is the biochemical basis of emotion and stress, what happens to us when we have changes in our emotions and our affect," Frey said.

"If we really understood the biochemistry of stress and emotion, we might be able to figure out what's going wrong in people who have emotional disorders."

So far though, his research has been confined to the tears of people who are sad, not the clinically depressed. Emotional tears are collected in the laboratory by showing poignant scenes from sad movies. "Brian's Song," "The Champ" and "All Mine To Give" have proven to be reliable tear-jerkers.

In his book, Frey wrote that Margaret Crepeau at the University of Pittsburgh School of Nursing discovered in 1979 that sufferers of ulcers and colitis, stress-related disorders, cry less often than healthy people.

"This suggests there's some kind of correlation between crying behavior and susceptibility to stress-related disorders," he said. "It doesn't mean that if you cry, you won't get an ulcer or anything like that."

The flip side of his research could benefit ophthalmology and sufferers of dry eyes, who number an estimated 2 million to 4 million in the United States, he said. Most sufferers of dry eyes are postmenopausal women.

Frey has found women cry on the average of five times a month, while men generally cry once a month. Other research has shown little difference in the regularity of emotional crying between boys and girls under the age of 12.

"That's very interesting because, for example, the hormone prolactin, which I think is probably involved in the sex difference (in crying) that we see between males and females, is at the same level in the blood of children," Frey said. "But it's 50 to 60 percent higher in the blood of adult women than in the blood of adult men."

In his book, Frey suggested research to learn whether there are anatomical differences in the tear glands of men and women. Other researchers have since reported finding those differences.

Pregnant women may have erroneously believed they cried more often because they were more aware of their emotions during pregnancy,

Aspirin Warning

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Food and Drug Administration is telling aspirin makers to warn women not to take the popular pain killer during the last three months of pregnancy lest they risk prolonged labor and unnecessary bleeding.

Aspirin products already must carry the standard warning: "As with any drug, if you are pregnant or nursing a baby seek the advice of a health professional before using this product."

This additional wording would be required under the FDA proposal issued Thursday: "IMPORTANT: Do not take this product during the last three months of pregnancy unless directed by a doctor."

Country Singer Loses Lawsuit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Country music star Johnny Lee, who sang "Looking for Love in All the Wrong Places," was looking for business in the wrong place when he tried to open a nightclub in north Alabama, a judge ruled.

U.S. District Judge William Acker of Birmingham dismissed a $5 million lawsuit that Lee and a business partner, Jimmy Cornelius of Guntersville, filed against the city of Guntersville.

"Rather than bring this suit, plaintiffs perhaps should thank the defendants," Acker said, because they kept Lee and Cornelius from spending money to build a nightclub that never could have received a liquor license.

"Lemonade might not have mixed well with Hank Williams and it is doubtful that it would have made the cash register ring," Acker wrote in his decision released this week.

The plaintiffs' attorney, Donald Stewart, was not immediately available for comment Thursday on whether he would appeal.

Lee, who moved to Guntersville after singing the hit song from the movie "Urban Cowboy," wanted to develop a nightclub called "Johnny Lee Show Palace" near Guntersville. Liquor sales are legal in Guntersville, but not in the rural parts of Marshall County.

In 1986, the Guntersville City Council annexed land along U.S. 431 and zoned it to allow businesses to sell liquor for off-premise consumption. Lee and Cornelius bought some of the newly annexed property and applied for a zoning change that would allow them to sell liquor for consumption in a nightclub.

The City Council denied the change in April 1987, prompting Lee's attorneys to file suit, claiming a loss of property rights.

Acker said the Alabama Supreme Court last year ruled "long lasso" annexations such as Guntersville's illegal. Because of that, the judge said, Lee and Cornelius "never had a property right subject to municipal zoning" since the property was never legally in the city.

TV Executive Says She's Tired Of 'Southern' Jokes

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — When a character on NBC's "Empty Nest" was asked what to wear to an opera and replied, "How should I know? I'm from Arkansas," at least one viewer wasn't laughing.

Arkansas native Linda Bloodworth-Thomason, creator of CBS' "Designing Women," says she's tired of television making fun of Southerners.

"Designing Women" is about four smart Southern women — emphasis on smart — who run a design store. Next season, Bloodworth-Thomason gets another show to make her point. Tentatively titled "Arkansas," the CBS show will tentatively star Hal Holbrook, husband of "Designing Women" star Dixie Carter.

"I sort of want to do that town that's in 'It's a Wonderful Life,'" she said, referring to the classic Frank Capra film starring Jimmy Stewart.

"You know, where everybody knows everybody and everybody's still real good? ... There's going to be people who talk like hicks and rednecks talking about glasnost and perestroika, and they know what's going on in the world. I think we'll make some points for our side with it.

"I don't want to be humorless about it, but I feel that negative stereotype is very damaging to children," she said. "I think they are definitely affected. I think they grow up thinking they have to move to New York to validate themselves. I think Susan (Harris, creator of "Golden Girls" and "Empty Nest") is a beautiful writer. But I found some of the jokes in the ("Empty Nest") pilot objectionable."

She said she especially objected when Laverne (Park Overall), a receptionist, was asked what Arkansans do on Saturday night. She replied, "You wash your hair until you're 14, then you marry your cousin."

Bloodworth-Thomason and her producer-director husband, Harry Thomason, call their production company Mozark, since he's from neighboring Missouri.

An NBC publicist for "Empty Nest" said that show's producers did not care to comment on Bloodworth-Thomason's remarks. It is worth noting that on Harris' "Golden Girls," Betty White's character pokes fun of Minnesotans as boring and unsophisticated.

"When other regions of the country are depicted, their eccentricities are always sort of delightful," said Bloodworth-Thomason. "Like if they're New Englanders, they're stubborn and thrifty. I mean, excuse me for being overly sensitive (but) I would rather be called stubborn and thrifty than ignorant and incestuous."

Polly Bergen Says 'War' Role Has True Depth

By Michael Hill
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

For those who watched "The Winds of War," she was the woman everybody loved to hate. And so far, "War and Remembrance" has not given you much reason to feel differently about Rhoda Henry. The wife of the main character, Navy Capt. Victor "Pug" Henry, it is Rhoda who fusses with her hair and worries about her dress as the world crumbles about her in the worst war in its history. Indeed, in "Winds of War," as Pug was on a secret mission from President Roosevelt to learn about the evils of Nazism, Rhoda was just dying to meet Hitler and picked out a dress in the dictator's favorite color.

"What everyone forgets is that a lot of people were dying to meet Hitler," Polly Bergen, the actress who plays Rhoda, said in a recent interview in Los Angeles. "I mean, Hitler was the new young guy who was going to save Germany. No one knew what was going to happen at that time except a few people who were in the know early on. Everyone was kept in the dark. Rhoda never knew anything."

Bergen, who received an Emmy nomination for her work in "The Winds of War," has something of a one-woman crusade to rescue Rhoda from her growing reputation as nothing more than a woman who used her taut, middle-aged figure to fiddle around with infidelity while her husband and two sons were trying to put out the fires that burned all over the world.

"When I heard that 'Winds of War' was going to be shot, I absolutely made it a crusade to play Rhoda," she said, explaining that she had to persuade director and producer Dan Curtis to even test her for the part.

"I felt that Rhoda was the most interesting, the most complex and the most multidimensional character in both books," she said, though even during filming she had a hard time persuading Curtis and co-star Robert Mitchum, who plays Pug, of that.

Bergen asks that you consider the type of life Rhoda led in the years before the story told in "The Winds of War" and "War and Remembrance" began.

"It's a life of going from base to base," she said. "Before you met her, Rhoda has spent 25 years traveling to every little place in the universe with her husband and three small children and had raised them and nurtured them and nurtured her husband.

"I think it's better today than it was then, but the fact is that a military wife's life totally revolves around her husband and her husband's success in the military. In the social structure, she is only as important as her husband is.

"So, if he isn't doing well, nobody calls her. She isn't invited anywhere. She's not a part of what's happening. And as he goes up in rank, she goes up in rank. It's a very, very difficult life for a woman.

"And that's what I saw in Rhoda when I read the books, even though by the time we get to Rhoda she has become tired and frightened about her age and the fact that her husband no longer loves her or cares about her romantically as much as she would like."

Bergen said that she never doubted that she wanted to continue the character once Curtis decided to go ahead with the making of "War and Remembrance."

"I felt I had only begun the job of portraying Rhoda," she said. "Rhoda's role in 'War and Remembrance,' while it is smaller than in 'Winds of War,' is much more complex, much more difficult as a role. There are 10- and 12-page scenes in which Rhoda runs through every possible gamut an actress could hope to play. I just would have been destroyed had I not had the opportunity to play her."

Bergen said that, though she is a totally different type of person than Rhoda, she has been forced to make similar decisions in her own life.

"My career always took second place," said. "When I won my first Emmy 30 years ago, I could have done any film I wanted to. But I had a husband and a baby who was under a year old and we lived in New York, and I would not leave them to become a movie star, so I gave it up."

One movie that she did make was "Cape Fear" in 1962. Her co-star was Robert Mitchum and they have been fast friends ever since.

"There was a part of the characterization of Rhoda and Pug that neither one of us had to really act," Bergen said. "When you have known each other as long as we have, there's that sense of familiarity. So, in walking into a role where the two of us were playing a married couple of many, many years, the kind of familiarity that that kind of relationship breeds was instinctively there."

Away from acting, Bergen has become a successful business executive with her own cosmetics and other companies.

NBC Acquires Share Of British Agency

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK — NBC, seeking to cut its overseas costs while expanding overseas markets for its domestic news reports, said Thursday that it had bought nearly 38 percent of Visnews, a British-owned TV news agency with which NBC has had ties for nearly 20 years.

Under terms of the $10 million deal, which becomes effective Jan. 1, the Reuters news agency — still Visnews' majority owner — can buy back NBC's share of Visnews in 1998 if it and NBC decide to end the deal.

There has been speculation that NBC's move is aimed at letting it reduce its overseas news operations, thus saving money — and in the process changing the way it gathers and reports news from abroad by relying more on lower-paid Visnews crews and reporters.

NBC News is under pressure from top NBC management to break even financially by 1990.

One former senior network news executive, when asked Thursday to assess the impact of the Visnews deal on NBC News coverage abroad, expressed concern. "I think it's going to diminish it considerably," he said.

"It's the difference between having your own staff and going to a wire service," said the former executive, who asked not to be identified.

But NBC News officials said Thursday that none of the division's 22 overseas offices would be closed. The largest bureau is London, a major story editing and relay post as well as news center. It has about 60 staffers.

No major personnel changes were afoot, either, the officials said. At most, they said, only 20 of NBC News' 170 staffers abroad would be axed or transferred into Visnews.

Nor were there long-range plans to turn NBC's foreign bureaus into Visnews operations, said Natalie Hunter, NBC News' vice president for finance and administration.

"No, not really — NBC News will maintain its identity on the scene," she said by phone from London, where she and other NBC officials concluded the company's purchase of 37.75 percent in Visnews.

"Mommy, Billy's heating the whole neighborhood again!"

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY Nov. 19

- ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Others in the household may get up on the wrong side of the bed. Be patient. Everything will get done, and you will arrive on time.
- TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Nothing can bother you today. You are stimulated and feel refreshed. Catch up on home matters. Visit the local flea market.
- GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Turmoil at home passes, but your intentions are misunderstood. It will soon cloud your day if you let it. Discuss shared resources.
- MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You want to quit when things are not going smoothly. Grumbling will cause others to feel they must defend themselves.
- LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): You are the star, and others will follow you. Give the house a once over. Things you need will be found after a search. Remain cheerful.
- VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Keep your temper in check today. Scattered energies aggravate your sense of order. A surprise phone call comes with travel plans.
- LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Research plans for a visit. Consult others on upcoming holiday plans. Share the workload to free up time. Catch up on correspondence.
- SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): You wake up annoyed by home conditions. A closer look reveals better organization. Control your feelings. Avoid taking action. Stay calm.
- SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Let the family decide the plans for the day. It feels good to let someone else take charge. Sporting events are a good idea.
- CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Make out a shopping list, and tally it against your budget. Strike out unnecessary items. Events are in your favor. Romance flourishes.
- AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): You feel that everything is broken, out of place and misused. It has been that way for some time. Get moving, and clean things up.
- PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Your picky mood is unusual. Give yourself a pep talk. Don't lose an enjoyable day. Use your creative instincts, and rely on intuition.

Opening lead: King of ♠
If you read bridge columns, ours included, you might get the impression that you have to be in game or slam for the play to be interesting. Nothing could be further from the truth. Many low-level contracts feature sparkling play and defense.

West's no trump overall showed the equivalent of a no trump opening bid. Because of his fit, North might have considered a penalty double rather than two hearts—declarer could have been held to six tricks.

Against two hearts, West led the king of spades and East dropped the queen. This play guarantees either a singleton queen or possession of the jack as well. Since a singleton queen was impossible (that would have given South a six-card spade suit), West knew he had an entry to his partner's hand. He also knew that he could expect no other help from his partner—all the points in the pack were accounted for.

For the defense to prevail, the defenders would need to take three spade tricks. That, together with the aces of hearts and clubs, would provide the defensive book. Where was the setting trick coming from?

A trump promotion was impossible because of dummy's holding. That left only a club ruff. So at trick two West abandoned spades in favor of switching to the ace of clubs and another. Declarer won and led a trump, but West wasted no time. He climbed up with the ace, cashed the king of spades and continued with a spade to East's jack. The obvious club return and West's ruff for a one-trick set completed an excellent defense.
