Keith Carves An Arc Toward Florida

By Catherine Wilson
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Tropical Storm Keith nudged past Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula and buffeted Cuba with its 65 mph winds early today on a curving track that forecasters expected would hit Florida later in the week.

The late-season Caribbean depression grew into the 11th tropical storm of the season off Mexico Sunday morning, and forecasters expected it to reach hurricane strength as it headed into the Gulf of Mexico.

At 8 a.m. EST, Keith was centered near latitude 21.9 north, longitude 87.0 west, or about 60 miles north of Cancun, Mexico, heading north at 12 mph. The Mexican resort was buffeted by Hurricane Gilbert two months ago.

Heavy showers and thunderstorms continue over western Cuba and may affect the lower Keys and southwest Florida later today and tonight, said National Weather Service forecaster Gil Clark. But "the center of Keith is expected to remain over the south central Gulf of Mexico for the next day or two."

The government of Mexico issued a tropical storm warning and a hurricane watch for the northern Yucatan Peninsula, and storm conditions were expected to spread over western Cuba today. Rainfall totals of 5 to 10 inches were possible along the path of the storm, forecasters said.

People living in low-lying areas of Cancun were evacuated Sunday afternoon, Mexico's Excelsior news service said. It was unknown how many left their homes for public shelters.

However, many homes badly damaged by Gilbert in September remained unoccupied. Excelsior said flood waters were 3-feet deep in some areas.

For much of Sunday, forecasters worried that Keith could race to southwest Florida with hurricane-force winds of 75 to 80 mph by Tuesday morning, but Keith lingered off Cozumel, Mexico, as its steering currents weakened.

"It's going to head in this general direction as it turns north or northeast," hurricane center meteorologist Martin Nelson said late Sunday. "But in 72 hours, we'd still have it in the Gulf of Mexico, somewhere west of Key West."

The Coral Gables forecasting center predicted the highest probability, a 1-in-7 chance, of the storm hitting the Gulf Coast south of Fort Myers by 7 p.m. Wednesday. Keith then was expected to cross the Florida peninsula and head into the Atlantic Ocean.

"It should be at minimal hurricane strength when it hits Florida," said Jim Lushine of the National Hurricane Center. "Anywhere from the Florida Keys to the Tampa area looks like that's the major area of concern."

Tropical depressions become tropical storms once their top sustained winds reach 39 mph, and tropical storms become hurricanes at 74 mph.

The Atlantic hurricane season begins June 1 and ends Nov. 30.

Bush Keeps Thornburgh, Cavazos

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President-elect George Bush announced today he will retain Attorney General Dick Thornburgh and Education Secretary Lauro F. Cavazos, bringing to three the number of Reagan holdovers in his Cabinet.

Bush also said he would nominate Richard Darman to head the Office of Management and Budget.

Bush said that "in all likelihood" Thornburgh, Cavazos and previously announced Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady would be the only current Cabinet members he would ask to remain in their posts. All were recent appointments to President Reagan's Cabinet and took office with Bush's blessing.

Bush emphasized the role that Thornburgh would have in fighting drugs.

"Drugs are public enemy No. 1," said the president-elect. He went on to say that Thornburgh "will work with me to fight drugs with every tool at our disposal."

Bush noted that Cavazos, a former president of Texas Tech University, is the first Hispanic to hold a Cabinet post but he added, "Overriding is Dr. Cavazos' commitment to excellence in education." Bush had promised Hispanic leaders that he would name a Hispanic to his Cabinet.

Bush said his choice of Darman underscores his determination to cut the budget deficit.

"Dick Darman understands the numbers," Bush said. "Dick Darman will play a central role in that effort, which will commence immediately when I assume office. Because he understands the government and the economy so well, Dick will make sure the Bush administration hits the ground running."

The president-elect denied he planned to meet Thanksgiving weekend with his defeated Democratic opponent, Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts. But Bush said he did want to meet "at some point" with Dukakis.

"I want to do it, I don't want to have a lot of show business," he said. "I want to hold out my hand and say, 'the campaign is behind us.'"

Cavazos was named to succeed William Bennett last fall. Thornburgh, a former Pennsylvania governor, is a Bush ally who took office last August.

Thornburgh and Cavazos will be the second and third members of the current Reagan administration to remain on the job. Earlier, Bush said Brady would keep his position. Bush also appointed former Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III as his secretary of state.

Darman was Baker's right arm throughout the Reagan administration, both when Baker was White House chief of staff and later Treasury secretary. He played a behind-the-scenes role in negotiating the 1983 rescue plan for Social Security.

Sources also said Michael Boskin is the leading contender for chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, a role that would fill out the top three economic posts in the administration. Boskin was not named today.

Boskin is a conservative economist and expert on the Social Security system. He was a father of Bush's "flexible freeze" idea to drive down the deficit.

Mulroney Seeks Majority Backing As Canadians Cast Ballots Today

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TORONTO — Prime Minister Brian Mulroney is seeking a majority government for his Progressive Conservative Party in today's national elections so he can proceed with the controversial U.S.-Canada free trade agreement.

The trade pact, which has dominated the rancorous campaign, would phase out all remaining tariffs on trade between the two countries starting Jan. 1.

Polls opened at 9 a.m., beginning with the Atlantic coast province of Newfoundland, which is in a time zone 90 minutes ahead of eastern standard time.

Until polls close at 8 p.m., there is a ban on selling liquor in each district.

Canadian evening television coverage was scheduled to start at 8 p.m. EST. Canadian television is delaying its coverage to western time zones so that voters can go the polls without knowing early results.

British Columbia on the Pacific coast, where polls close at 11 p.m. EST, could be decisive in any close race.

Opposition leader John Turner has urged Canadians to vote for his Liberal Party because he opposes the trade agreement and is seeking "to keep Canada Canadian."

Turner revived his party's chances during the 51-day campaign by accusing Mulroney of selling out Canada.

Mulroney, 49, in turn charged Turner with using "scare tactics," including allegations the pact would wreck social programs and cost many Canadians their jobs.

Mulroney brought out his mother to show his commitment to retirement benefits.

Polls in the campaign's final days showed Mulroney's Progressive Conservative Party had returned to favor after a two-month slide attributed to the effectiveness of the 59-year-old Turner's attacks.

The opinion surveys showed the governing Conservatives in good position to win a slim majority of the 295 seats in the House of Commons, which would allow the Canadian parliamentarians to ratify the 10-year trade pact.

The leader who can muster a ma-majority of at least 148 seats controls the government.

The socialist New Democratic Party, led by Ed Broadbent, 52, also opposes the free trade agreement and could play a decisive role in any close outcome.

A poll Saturday by Gallup Canada indicated the Conservatives had the support of 40 percent of the decided respondents, the Liberals 35 percent and the New Democrats 22 percent.

Turnout among Canada's 17.5 million eligible voters was expected to be higher than the 1984 elections, when about one in four didn't show up.

Snipers Kill Man With Rafting Party

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

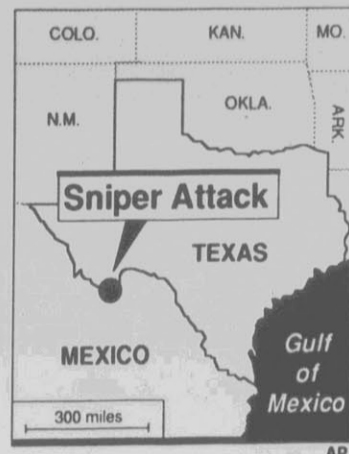

LAJITAS, Texas — Snipers ambushed a rafting party on the Rio Grande, firing a hail of bullets from cliffs on the Mexican side of the border and killing a man as he tried to drag his wounded wife to safety, officials said.

The river guide accompanying the couple also was wounded. He and the woman were hospitalized in stable condition.

Authorities were seeking up to four snipers.

Mike Cox, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety in Austin, said it was the second time this year that American tourists have reported being shot at from the bluffs on Mexico's side of the Rio Grande.

Onassis Death Ruled 'Natural'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

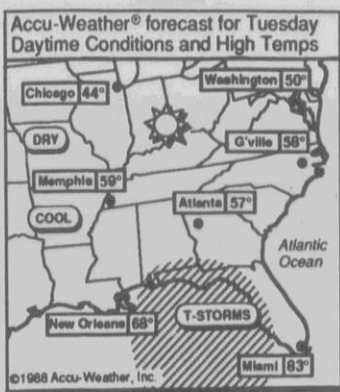

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — The coroner's report on Christina Onassis' death says the Greek heiress died of natural causes, the newspaper La Nacion reported today.

The 37-year-old daughter of Greek shipping tycoon Aristotle Onassis died Saturday of an apparent heart attack at the country club home of friends. Autopsy results on the cause of death are expected to be released today.

The coroner's report is key to the release of the body for burial in Greece, and might provide details of Miss Onassis' death. The report was to be delivered today to Buenos Aires Judge Fernando Nino.

Bids Get Bigger As RJR Nabisco Waits

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The slugfest bidding for giant RJR Nabisco Inc. has gone into extra innings, with enriched offers from two existing bidders, a record proposal from a new suitor and indications that the multibillion-dollar free-for-all may get even wilder. A special committee of RJR Nabisco's board of directors announced the new proposals late Sunday and said it was extending the deadline for receiving further offers to buy the food and tobacco conglomerate.

Not only did the new buyout plans top previous bids, which already were in the unprecedented $20 billion range, the committee said every bidder could submit revised offers, signaling that the hefty bids it had gotten so far might not be good enough.

The committee, which is overseeing the auction of RJR, also has told its own advisers to continue exploring "all forms of restructuring" that could provide an alternative to the current proposals.

"While no assurance can be given that any transaction will occur, the Special Committee expressed its belief that that process which it is overseeing will benefit all shareholders," said Charles Hugel, RJR Nabisco's chairman and head of the five-member committee.

Jostling for approval are these proposals:

—A $100 a share cash and securities offer estimated at $22.5 billion from a group led by RJR Nabisco senior management and the investment firms Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc. and Salomon Brothers Inc. That group, which last month touched off the buyout battle with a proposed takeover, previously offered $92 a share, or $20.7 billion, for RJR's 225.3 million common shares outstanding.

—A $94 a share cash and securities offer worth about $21.2 billion by a group led by buyout specialist Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co., which previously offered $90 a share.

—A preliminary cash and securities proposal from a group led by the investment firm First Boston Corp. and a partnership that includes Chicago's Pritzker family and Denver billionaire Philip Anschutz. First Boston indicated it valued the total consideration at from $105 to $118 a share, making the deal worth $23.8 billion to $26.8 billion. The biggest acquisition on record is Chevron Corp.'s $13.4 billion purchase of Gulf Oil Corp. in 1984.

The offer involves acquisition in 1989 of RJR's tobacco business, which accounts for about 40 percent of its annual sales, and the sale of its food businesses.

All three proposals would retain some stock in the post-buyout company for current RJR shareholders.

The committee will accept bids through 5 p.m. EST on Nov. 29. The panel initially cut off the bidding at 5 p.m. last Friday, and its army of high-powered financial and legal advisers worked through the weekend to analyze the various proposals.

RJR Nabisco stock finished at $84 a share in heavy trading Friday, after a week of rumor-driven battering that saw the stock close as low as $82.75 a share on the New York Stock Exchange.

Three Arrested

The Pitt County Sheriff's Department reported three arrests in connection with two burglaries over the weekend.

Bryant Bradford Jr., 37, of 114-A Emmas Place in Greenville was arrested Saturday in connection with a burglary at 203 N. Bubba Blvd. in the Colonial Trailer Park. Sheriff Ralph Tyson said deputies responded to the call about 7:30 p.m. Saturday, and recovered a color television valued at $200.

Bradford is being held in the Pitt County Jail under a $5,000 bond.

In another incident Saturday, deputies arrested Tonya Langley Sutton, 19, of 319 Oak Grove Avenue in Greenville and Martha Whitehurst, 26, of Lot 15 Belvoir Estates.

Ms. Sutton was charged with breaking and entering and larceny in connection with a burglary reported by Ray Wells, 44, of Route 15, Box 38, in Greenville. Ms. Whitehurst was charged with possession of stolen property.

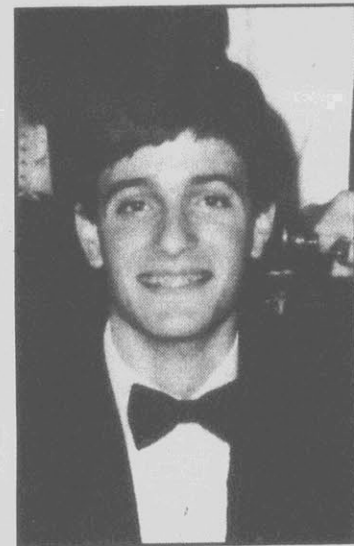

Tyson said deputies recovered a color television valued at $350 and returned it to Wells.

Prescribed Burning Program Available

The N.C. Division of Forest Resources says forest landowners can protect their land from wildfire while enhancing wildlife habitat and recreational areas through the Landowner Hazard Reduction Burning program.

The program, available to landowners from December through February, is offered by the division in cooperation with N.C. State University Forestry Extension.

It is designed to eliminate the buildup of pine needles, grasses and twigs on the forest floor that burn during periods of extreme dryness and high winds. It is done by prescribed burning with low intensity fire when there are dry weather conditions.

The activity enhances wildlife habitat for species such as quail and deer. Hazard reduction burning can

PITT EXTENSION SERVICE

Often a hay crop is lost on the ground due to continued rain or bad weather. Persistent daily rains can prevent a farmer from cutting hay at the optimum time. At these times, a hay preservative or drying agent could be beneficial to a farmer.

Hay producers often ask about these two substances and should remember that they are different and should be used on a judgment basis. They are not a cure to all hay baling problems due to inclement weather.

A drying agent speeds the drying process. Drying agents usually consist of potassium carbonate or a solution of potassium carbonate and sodium carbonate. They are sprayed on the hay crop just before the mower/conditioner and can cut drying time up to a full day. However, drying agents are only effective on legume crops such as alfalfa. They do not work well on grass hay crops.

Hay preservatives, on the other hand, do not speed the hay drying process, but allow you to bale hay at a higher moisture level. Preservatives are primarily propionic acid plus a fungicide which helps prevent spoilage and molding. Hay preservatives are sprayed on during the baling process so that hay can be baled at 30 to 35 percent moisture. This will work on grass and legume crops.

The costs of treating hay with a preservative or drying agent can range from $8 to $15 per ton of hay, so farmers must consider when to use them based on weather forecasts, type and quality of hay, etc. Contact the Agricultural Extension Office at 830-6361 for more details about hay harvesting.

Local Man Sentenced

A Greenville man arrested in a State Bureau of Investigation drug sweep has been sentenced to eight years in prison.

Henry Andrew Tyson, 37, of 1406-B Colonial Ave. pleaded guilty Friday in Pitt County Superior Court to two charges of selling heroin.

Citing Tyson's prior criminal record, Judge David E. Reid Jr. of Greenville sentenced him to eight years in prison. Tyson has two previous drug convictions, including one for the sale of heroin.

Tyson was arrested Oct. 17 after a Pitt County Grand Jury returned 117 bills of indictment against 31 people charged with cocaine and heroin violations.

The SBI and Greenville Police conducted the eight-month undercover drug investigation; 22 of the 31 people indicted have been arrested and three people have pleaded guilty to drug charges and been sentenced.

Tyson was originally charged with six heroin violations and maintaining a dwelling at 100 Ford St., Apt. 7 for the purpose of keeping controlled substances. But Friday he pleaded guilty to two counts of selling less than four grams of heroin as part of a plea arrangement. He was represented by Greenville attorney Robert Dillow.

Rates Will Change

Jim Hannan, manager of the Greenville Employment Security office, announced that according to Betsy T. Justus, chairman of the ESC, that unemployment insurance rates will change effective Jan. 1, 1989.

Hannan said approximately 37 percent of North Carolina employers will realize a rate decrease, and about one-third of the employers will see no change.

During 1988, North Carolina rates for unemployment ranged from $1.25 to $690.84 per employer, with the typical employer paying $91 in unemployment insurance taxes per employee, Hannan said.

The Jan. 1 rate will result in a reduction of 6 percent, to an average of $85.60 per employee.

TIME FOR A GOLD CASTING

There are times when a standard filling of silver amalgam or gold foil cannot be used to restore a tooth. Often, in these cases, a casting must be made. Your dentist will know when this is necessary. Basically, when so much of a tooth is lost that he or she cannot develop sufficient physical retention for a normal restoration (this is the principle that holds or retains it in the tooth), then a casting must be made and cemented into or onto a tooth.

The casting is made by taking an accurate impression of the prepared tooth. The models are formed with stone plaster and a die is made. The casting is then produced from gold and other alloys. Shaping of the casting is very important. It should be as much like the anatomy of the lost tooth structure as possible. Before the casting is cemented to the prepared tooth, the dentist will make sure that "high" spots do not exist and that the new restoration fits exactly the same and as comfortably as Mother Nature's original.

Democrats Consider Shorter Primary Period

By Donald M. Rothberg
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHOENIX — After their first post-election meeting, the Democrats are determined to avoid wholesale revisions of their rules but are ready to consider major changes in the presidential primary and caucus calendar.

The 1992 presidential campaign may see a drastically altered Super Tuesday and find Iowa and New Hampshire deprived of their first-in-the-nation status.

"Everybody thinks the thing ought to be shortened," said Texas Democratic Party chairman Bob Slagle, echoing a sentiment expressed by several of his colleagues.

"I'm going to tell you, everybody's damn tired of rules changes," said Slagle. "And I think the average Democrat thinks we're absolutely insane if we get into another big battle about rules."

"They want us to worry about how we're going to win elections."

Sam Goddard, the Arizona chairman, speaking for the Western states, said, "We are concerned in our region about the timing and sequence of the presidential primaries and caucuses."

One idea that got a lot of favorable attention at the meeting of the Association of State Democratic Chairs was to hold a lottery to determine which states would lead off the process.

While not endorsing the proposal, national party chairman Paul G. Kirk Jr. called it an idea worth considering.

Kirk said that if the parties move toward regional primaries "there ought to be one or two smaller states that begin the process."

One regional primary that may not be repeated in the form it had in 1988 is Super Tuesday, the day that most Southern states agreed to hold their primaries.

The motivation behind Super Tuesday was to give the process a more conservative voice. But the big winner on that day was Jesse Jackson and the eventual nominee was Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis.

Kirk called Super Tuesday "too large and too widespread" to give the region an effective voice.

John Baker, chairman of the Alabama Democratic Party, and Kathy Vick, a former Louisiana party chair, both said they opposed continuation of Super Tuesday.

Baker said he favored moving the Alabama primary to June when the state votes to nominate candidates for other offices.

That move, said Baker, would save the $1.2 million it costs to hold a separate presidential primary.

Baker and Vick also endorsed the idea of asking Congress to enact lottery legislation or some other method of shortening the primary season and removing Iowa from its status as the first state to begin selecting delegates.

After their fifth defeat in the last six presidential elections, many Democratic officials are saying that Iowa plays too much of a role in defining the nominating campaign debate.

Neither the Republican nor Democratic caucus winner in Iowa won his party's nomination, but the state was the scene of most of the early campaigning.

For the Democrats, in particular, that meant pressure to take stands on defense and other issues that party officials now feel were out of touch with the feelings of most voters.

Another issue that dominated discussion at the state chairs meeting was the question of whether Kirk would agree to serve another four years as chairman.

Kirk disclosed that among those urging him to seek another four-year term were Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen, the party's presidential and vice presidential nominees.

But Kirk said he had not made up his mind and would not until after Thanksgiving.

GOP Took In $20 Million In 'Soft Money'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — George Bush won the presidential election with a boost from dozens of wealthy supporters who pitched in by giving $100,000 or more to the Republican Party, GOP records show.

In addition to the Republican "Team 100" roster of people who gave at least $100,000, a list released by party officials shows millions more collected from supporters who gave amounts ranging upward from $5,000.

The Republican National Committee made public a list of contributors who gave about $20 million to its so-called soft money account — money that legally cannot be donated directly to a presidential campaign but which the party can spend on a variety of election-related activities that end up benefiting the presidential candidate.

The Republicans had a banner year with their soft money program, the records show, allowing them to more than double the $46 million in public funds that the presidential nominees are allowed to spend themselves. That money comes from the $1 voluntary checkoff on individual income tax returns.

The RNC list of heavy hitters includes such GOP stalwarts and longtime Reagan loyalists as Walter Annenberg and Trammell Crow, as well as corporate donors such as RJR Nabisco, Revlon, Occidental Petroleum and Coca Cola.

New York real estate mogul Donald Trump gave $100,000.

Also listed is William Stamps Farish III, a multimillionaire oil man and horse breeder who hosted Bush, his close friend, on the president-elect's post-election beach vacation last week in Gulf Stream, Fla. Farish is listed as having given $75,000.

Also listed were Henry Hillman and Elsie Hillard Hillman of Pittsburgh, Pa., who hosted Bush during the Florida vacation on a yacht cruise with several friends.

But the list the RNC gave to reporters may reveal only a portion of the amount a given contributor actually has donated.

RNC officials said this list, which includes 78 donors who gave $100,000, did not include all the contributors, and did not give a full accounting for the donations because some people also gave money also to separate "Victory '88" accounts that the party set up in each state.

Money given to these accounts, often at high-dollar fund-raisers attended by Bush while he was on the campaign trail, was not brought into the RNC accounts in Washington. Party officials have refused to disclose those funds and are not required by law to do so.

The National Guard was patrolling in Tuscaloosa, Ala., as the South cleaned up today from a barrage of nearly two dozen late-season tornadoes and storms that killed at least two people and damaged more than 150 homes.

The same storm system carried high winds and heavy rains to parts of Ohio and Pennsylvania on Sunday, ripping off the roof of an empty school in southwestern Pennsylvania and toppling a 75-foot Christmas tree in Pittsburgh.

In the Caribbean, Tropical Storm Keith churned off Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula after becoming the 11th tropical storm of the season. Forecasters expect it to reach hurricane strength as it heads into the Gulf of Mexico.

It could hit Florida late in the week.

Twisters skipped across Arkansas, Mississippi and Alabama, uprooting trees, damaging homes and downing power lines this weekend.

The tornadoes struck unusually late in the year, said Harry Gordon of the National Weather Service's Severe Storms Center in Kansas City, Mo.

One tornado slammed through a three-mile area near the small northeast Mississippi town of Nettleton, snapping the tops off trees before dipping into a mobile home park and running along a string of hills and valleys.

Two people in mobile homes — a 37-year-old man and the 9-month-old boy — were found dead Sunday after the tornado hit.

Three 'Skinheads' Charged In Death

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PORTLAND, Ore. — Three members of a white supremacist "skinhead" gang have been arrested and charged in what police say was a racially motivated and unprovoked attack that killed a black man in front of his home.

Mulugetta Seraw, a 27-year-old Ethiopian immigrant, was kicked in the head and beaten with a baseball bat by his assailants, and died shortly after the Nov. 13 attack.

The three men charged are members of East Side White Pride, the state's largest skinhead gang, said Multnomah County District Attorney Michael D. Schunk.

Witnesses said Seraw's attackers had shaven heads and wore green military jackets with American flags on the sleeve.

Kenneth Mieske, 23, whose alias is "Ken Death," and Kyle Brewster, 19, were being held without bond on murder charges pending arraignments this afternoon, said homicide Detective Dave Simpson. Steven Strasser, 20, was charged with second-degree assault and was being held on $100,000 bail.

The skinhead subculture emerged in London as early as the 1960s. Segments of the movement took on Nazi overtones in 1985 and since have been supported by and associated with the white supremacist Aryan Youth Movement and White Aryan Resistance.

Drug Test Program To Quadruple

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The federal employee drug-testing program instituted by President Reagan will quadruple in size next year unless stopped in its tracks by legal challenges.

An estimated 50,000 employees were tested this year, mainly law enforcement officers, transportation inspectors and civilians working for the military.

But the program is expected to test some 200,000 members of the 3.1 million federal work force in 1989, according to the National Institute of Drug Abuse.

About 150,000 to 170,000 of those will be tested at random and come from a pool of some 500,000 workers in positions deemed sensitive by their agency chiefs.

The remainder will be tested after accidents or when supervisors believe there is reasonable suspicion of drug use.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

More Needed

Keep Training Family Physicians

The most persuasive argument for establishing an East Carolina University School of Medicine was that its primary goal would be to produce more family physicians.

More specifically, the leaders of the movement promised to emphasize primary care physicians. That includes family physicians, internists, obstetricians and gynecologists, pediatricians and other similar specialties.

It was the reasoning that the school would train more physicians to provide ready service to the patients that caught the attention of North Carolina. Particularly was it appealing in eastern North Carolina where physicians were rapidly disappearing in many areas.

The East is still short on physicians, but the ECU medical school seems to have made good on its promise to emphasize family medicine. The September-October edition of the Journal of Family Medicine reports that ECU ranked fourth nationally in percentage of graduates choosing the family medicine specialty. The study surveyed 15,872 1987 graduates.

Twenty-one of 67 graduates, 31 percent, chose family practice. The national figure is about 12 percent.

Ranking ahead of ECU were Oral Roberts University at 43.5 percent; Southern Illinois University, 43.5 percent and Wright State University in Dayton, Ohio, 33 percent.

Of course many other graduates from ECU chose primary care specialties. School officials are properly pleased that the school is fulfilling the mission which was outlined for it.

From this vantage point it can also be seen that the School of Medicine has provided the regional medical referral center that was so sorely needed in the East. Many medical services are now available here that were not to be had in the entire east a decade past.

Most important is that the school is doing what it was said it would do - that is emphasizing primary health care. That hasn't solved the problem of finding doctors for eastern rural areas, but it would not be pleasant to contemplate where the region would be if the ECU School of Medicine did not exist.

While it is commendable for the university to rank among the top in the nation for training family physicians, it is hoped that the ECU School of Medicine will further improve its percentage of graduates seeking careers in family medicine - and the percentage pursuing those careers in eastern North Carolina.

A Threat

Try Negotiation, Not Bloodshed

If the Estonian and Lithuanian situation is any indication, leaders of the Soviet Union are likely thinking that Glasnost has gone too far.

Estonia has declared its sovereignty. Lithuania's parliament debated its relationship to Moscow, but did not secede.

The Baltic countries are concerned about Soviet constitutional amendments which its leaders believe will concentrate more power in Moscow and end the Baltic republics' right to secede.

Under the present constitution the Baltic republics have the right to secede. Critics say, however, that right will be lost in the amendments proposed to the constitution.

The temptation may be to compare the Baltic unrest with the United States Confederacy. But the comparison may prove to be more like the break-up of the European colonial empires.

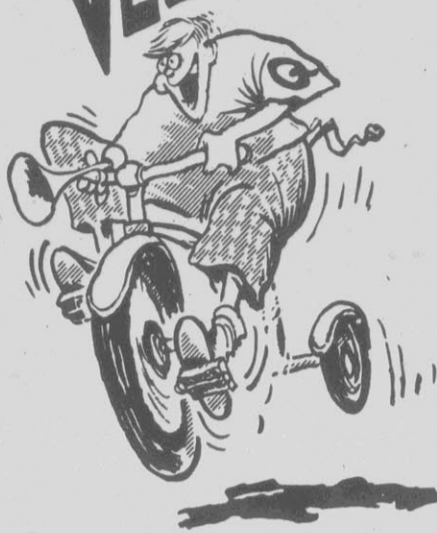

If the Baltic republics can secede other parts of the nation could follow suit. The Soviets could also lose their hold over the eastern Europe Communist bloc nations.

Thus it is not difficult to understand that Soviet leaders are viewing this situation with extreme gravity. If the sovereignty movement continues there is not much doubt that the Soviet government will crack down. Whatever military force that is necessary almost certainly will be utilized to keep the giant Communist nation together.

What all that will do to Glasnost is unpredictable. Certainly there is precious little the United States and other western nations can do about this essentially internal Soviet situation.

As to whether the Baltic situation is a result of Glasnost, that is doubtful. Probably the unrest has been developing for years but was suppressed under the closed Soviet system. Now it has to be dealt with by Soviet authorities. Hopefully their approach will be discussion and negotiations. With so much bloodshed in its past, the Soviet Union does not need more even as it adopts a more humane approach to its problems.

A Look At The Questions

James Speth

Despite the save-the-environment efforts of the past two decades, pollution is occurring today on a vast and unprecedented scale around the world. It reaches down to our groundwater, across national boundaries, and up to the stratosphere. For the first time in history, it has grown big enough to affect the global systems that control climate and create the conditions for life.

The pollution-control laws of the early 1970s have bought us time; now far more is needed. The prescription, I believe, is straightforward but immensely challenging: societies can both reduce pollution and achieve expected economic growth only by bringing about a thoroughgoing transformation in the technologies of production and consumption. We must ditch 20th-century technologies and rapidly adopt those of the 21st-century. Our old environmental foe, modern technology, must become a friend.

To understand why this is so, consider the legacy of the pollution-prone technologies of this century. Four trends describe the situation:

•The trend from modest quantities of pollutants to huge quantities.

The 20th century has witnessed explosive growth in human population and economic activity. World population has tripled. The world economy is 20 times larger today than in 1900.

With this growth have come huge changes in the quantities of pollutants released. This century's technologies have been raised on fossil fuels—first coal, then oil and natural gas; their use has jumped 10-fold in this period. One result is that over 200 million tons of sulfur and nitrogen oxide pollutants are added to the global atmosphere each year. Another is that the Earth's atmosphere contains 25 percent more carbon dioxide — one of the greenhouse gases implicated in global warming and climate change.

•The trend from natural products to synthetic chemicals and radioactive substances.

Many of them are highly toxic in even minute quantities, and some persist and accumulate in biological systems or in the atmosphere.

Pesticides are released into the environment precisely because they are toxic. We use a billion pounds of pesticides each year in the United States, of which less than 1 percent reaches a pest. Ironically, another major product of the chemicals industry — chlorofluorocarbons — found wide use because they are not toxic, but unfortunately, as we have since discovered, they destroy the earth's protective ozone layer.

•The trend from First World to Third World.

A visit to many developing countries quickly shatters the myth that polluting technologies are predominately a problem of the highly industrialized countries. Cities in the Third World are consistently more polluted with sulfur dioxide and particulates than most cities in industrial countries.

•A combination of the first three: the trend from local effects to global effects.

When the volumes of pollution world economy of 1900. Today the world economy grows by more than this amount every two years. By the middle of the next century, a scant lifetime away, our human world of 5 billion people will double to one of 10 billion, and our global economy of $13 trillion will be five times as large as today.

For example, the costs to society of global warming could be very high. As a step toward honest pricing, a fee on carbon-dioxide emissions from fossil fuel use, perhaps were much smaller and the pollutants similar to natural substances, impacts tended to be confined to limited geographic areas near sources. Today, the scale and intensity of pollution make its consequences truly global.

'People everywhere are offended by pollution. They sense intuitively that we have pressed beyond limits we should not have exceeded.'

Nothing better illustrates this point than the atmosphere. Local air quality is improving in many cities, but it is worsening in others, and continues as a health threat almost everywhere. Meanwhile, acid rain, smog and other consequences of fossil fuel use are affecting plant and animal life over vast regions of the globe-killing forests and fish, damaging crops, changing the species composition of ecosystems. And, probably most serious of all, the buildup of greenhouse gases in the atmosphere continues. This buildup is largely a consequence of the use of fossil fuels and chlorofluorocarbons, deforestation and various agricultural activities, and it now threatens societies with far-reaching climate change and rising sea levels. These closely linked assaults on the atmosphere probably constitute the most serious pollution threat in history.

The future could hold more of the same — a lot more. The scale and momentum of economic activity on the planet today are difficult to comprehend. It took all of human history to grow to the $600-billion agreed to at the international level, could be imposed. A double benefit would occur if some revenues from the fee were used for programs to stem deforestation in the tropics.

Technology-forcing regulations and economic incentives must both be harnessed. Most importantly, we must make the market mechanism work for us, guiding technological innovation that should not be micromanaged by government. Today, natural-resource depletion and pollution are being subsidized on a grand scale around the globe.

The needed transition is technological, but the drive for it will come from another realm as well—from the hopes and fears of people, from their wonder at the natural world, from their dogged insistence that some things that seem very wrong are just that. People everywhere are offended by pollution. They sense intuitively that we have pressed beyond limits we should not have exceeded. With Thoreau, they know that heaven is under our feet as well as over our heads. Politicians around the globe are increasingly hearing the demand that things be set right. And that is very good news indeed.

... And A Glance At The Answers

James Speth

Solution-oriented technologies are needed to ameliorate some of the planet's most difficult environmental problems. Here are some areas where investments should be made.

•Energy efficiency: Volvo, Toyota and other auto manufacturers have unveiled super-efficient family cars that get 70-100 miles per gallon. (The average U.S. car today gets 19 mpg.) In both the United States and Sweden, new superinsulated houses require just one-tenth the energy for heating as the average house. The energy required for electrical motors, home appliances and lighting can be cut by 25 to 50 percent with commercially attractive devices. The Elred and Plasmasmelt steelmaking processes can cut in half the energy needs in making steel. New gas turbines co-generate electricity and heat 50 percent more efficiently than today's power plants. U.S. energy use in 2025 is half of today's. Then comes the superconductivity revolution.

•Renewable energy: Plans were recently announced for the first power plant to make large amounts of electricity from the sun using photovoltaic technology. To be located near Los Angeles, the 50-megawatt facility will generate enough clean energy for typical use in 25,000 homes. Photovoltaic cost are only a tenth of what they were a decade ago. Advanced wind, biomass, refuse-to-energy, solar thermal and other renewable energy systems are also experiencing rapid technological gains. But all these technologies are held back by misleadingly low oil prices and unfair competition from waste-prone nuclear and fossil energy sources that are not paying their way.

•Biotechnology. If strictly regulated, the emerging biotech industry has great potential for cutting pollution. New microbial and other bioengineered products, for example, can substitute for chemical pesticides and fertilizer, help treat effluent and other waste, promote vegetation growth on impoverished soils, increase the potential of biological sources of energy and improve human health and contraception, thus reducing population pressures.

•Waste minimization. Through redesign of manufacturing processes, product reformulations and the re-use of waste materials, both the volume and toxicity of wastes can be reduced or eliminated. 3M's innovative Pollution Prevention Pays program has eliminated 110,000 tons of air pollutants, 275,000 tons of sludge and solid waste and 1.5 billion gallons of waste water. It has also saved the company $324 million. Manufacturing systems are environmentally closed. "No waste" technology is the rule, not the exception.

•Information technology. Computer and telecommunications technologies greatly enhance the potential for protecting the environment. Key areas include satellite remote-sensing, monitoring instrumentation, artificial intelligence for environmental management, educational programming from the village to the globe, efficient micromanagement of energy and material flows in industry. Miniturization, microprocessors and computer-aided design and systems management together with changing consumer preferences greatly improve efficient use of raw materials and reduce both waste and pressures on natural resources.

Public Forum

To the editor:

By 1983, 32 states of a necessary 34 had called for a Constitutional convention which would create an amendment requiring the federal budget to be balanced. North Carolina joined its support to this movement in January 1979. Since 1983, Florida and Alabama have rescinded their calls for this convention, but the legality of these rescissions is in question.

An amendment to balance the budget may indeed be a good idea. However, the idea of calling a convention for this purpose is disturbing, not because it has never been done, but because there are no rules governing the holding of such a convention. More disturbing, perhaps, is the idea that Congress is aware of the imminence of this event, yet has passed no laws to establish guidelines for a convention. They have tried many times in the last 200 years, but have not been able to agree on a set of rules. Why not?

There are many who feel that holding a Constitutional convention without the presence of conservative guidelines would allow narrow interest groups to take over the meeting and propose changes to existing Constitutional statements, including the Bill of Rights. I doubt that the individual states would ever ratify such amendments, should they come out of an ungoverned convention. The safest course, however, is for Congress to enact legislation limiting constitutional conventions to single stated issue such as the balanced budget concept. Until that happens, is there any possibility that the United States or Congress will participate in a valid, but untried, method of changing the Constitution.

A public forum to discuss the merits and problems associated with holding a Constitutional convention will be held tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the Willis Building in Greenville.

PLO Opens Window For Bigger Deal With Good Timing

Shibley Telhami

This week the Palestine National Council dramatically declared a Palestinian state and set a new policy agenda, just as Israel was forming a new government in response to its parliamentary election three weeks ago. The far-reaching implications of those events do not allow for the luxury of sitting back and expressing reservations.

With a new administration taking shape in Washington, and with the Soviets showing new interest in resolving the Arab-Israeli conflict, the time is right for a U.S.-Soviet initiative: an American acceptance of PLO participation in peace negotiations in exchange for the establishment of full diplomatic relations between the Soviet Union and Israel.

Consider the decisions taken by the Palestine National Council. It is a mistake to ignore the major changes that were set in motion at the meeting in Algiers. The Palestine National Council accepted U.N. Resolution 242, which implicitly recognizes Israel's right to live in secure borders, meeting a longstanding American demand. The significance of that acceptance can be understood if one knows that many of those voting for it are refugees from towns now in Israel, for whom the long and painful Palestinian struggle had been historically tied to the right of return. For them, Resolution 242 was a bitter pill to swallow.

Of course, most Palestinians still would like to see Israel disappear, just as most Israelis would like to see an exclusively Jewish state without Palestinians. But the Palestine National Council decisions indicate the kind of realism that is required for practical compromise. In the end it is policy priorities, not dreams and ideals, that matter.

Two other developments in the Palestine National Council meeting are noteworthy: the unprecedented agreement by the more radical groups, notably the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, to abide by the rule of the majority, and the denunciation of "terrorism of all forms," meeting another American demand.

Given those important and constructive changes, it would be both mistaken and dangerous to up the ante in the name of some "ambiguities" in the new Palestinian position, especially in light of the hard line taken by Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir: that nothing that the PLO says or does will make it acceptable to Israel.

What's at stake now is American credibility, not only in the eyes of Palestinians but also in the eyes of American allies such as Egypt and Jordan, which have worked hard to bring about the changes. If the Palestinians' more accommodating position fails to bear political fruit, the probable result will be serious radicalization, especially if the Israeli government imposes increasingly oppressive measures in the occupied territories.

Consider, too, the Israeli side of the equation. For months before the parliamentary elections, U.S. Middle East policy was on hold, partly on grounds that the political situation in Israel was unsettled. Now that the election results are in, it is clear that the situation in Israel will not settle down for some time, and that the United States cannot afford to tie its foreign policy to the domestic affairs of another country. In this regard, two aspects of the Israeli vote are truly surprising: that, contrary to the hope of many Americans, the elections were almost unaffected by the Palestinian "intifada" or uprising; both the Labor and Likud parties lost seats, and the success of the religious parties indicates that issues other than the intifada mattered a great deal. The second notable aspect confirms what many watchers of Israeli politics have been saying for some time: that the polarization in Israeli polity is deep-seated, encompassing ethnic, ideological, social and religious components — and that events in the near future are unlikely to bring anything but the intensification of that polarization.

Republicans Caution Against Effort To Strip Gardner Of Senate Powers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Even before the latest round of the power struggle begins, Republicans are warning that if Democrats try to strip Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner of power, the Republican will become a "martyr" who would be well positioned to be elected governor in 1992.

"We might lose the battle, but I think we will win the war," said Gardner, the first Republican lieutenant governor since 1896.

Gardner is planning to appoint members of his party to a third of all Senate committee chairmanships — a plan which the Democratic majority is likely to oppose.

Gardner, at a GOP caucus Saturday, said he also plans to appoint Republicans as vice chairmen of all the remaining Senate committees and repeated his warnings that Democratic attempts to curb his powers would result in a political backlash from voters.

"Let us lead the fight to put together a working coalition," Gardner said. "If we can't do that, we'll need to have another meeting and put up a battle flag and get going. Just for them to put a few crumbs our way — I didn't run for lieutenant governor for that."

While Gardner said some powerful Democrats — including Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland — had expressed "interest" in his proposal, it got a mixed response from the 11 GOP senators at the caucus.

"I don't think you're going to get very far with it," said Sen. Dan Simpson, R-Burke. "I think they'll proceed to strip you much as they did with the governor."

Simpson added that Gardner would become a "martyr" if the Democrats take power away from his post.

While Gardner said he would be "very comfortable" if Senate Democrats continued to chair Finance and Appropriations committees, Sen. Paul Smith, R-Rowan, questioned whether the lieutenant governor should push for bigger concessions.

"What are we going to get — wildlife or something like that?" Smith said. "We've got to talk about the committees we want. We've got some real good Republicans on our side. I don't want them to end up with nickel-and-dime stuff."

But Gardner said he must be realistic.

"They're not going to give us appropriations and finance — I know that," Gardner said. "But certainly we're going to have more say-so than in the past, even if we don't have the numbers."

Some Republican senators, along with Gardner, said the number of Senate committees should be reduced from the 40 panels last session. Sen. Don Kincaid, R-Caldwell, said Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan had increased the number of Senate committees "to give some of his friends chairmanships."

IN THE STATE

Rematch

RALEIGH (AP) — Two years before North Carolina's next U.S. Senate race, the pre-fight rhetoric is already heating up, before either incumbent Sen. Jesse Helms or former Gov. Jim Hunt has announced whether he wants a rematch.

"Without giving any figures, just let me say that a head-to-head (poll on a theoretical contest) shows that we do very, very well," Hunt said.

"I think I would enjoy it more than he would," said Helms, who defeated Hunt in a $26 million campaign four years ago. "He won't be governor. He won't have that state airplane."

Helms already has a re-election committee, and the organization raked in an average of $4,800 a day during the first six months of 1988. The committee is still sending out mass-mail fund-raising letters for the three-term Republican from Raleigh. The campaign raised $626,358 in the first half of 1988 and $462,745 in the last half of 1987.

Hunt is not accepting campaign donations and has not established a new campaign committee. His 1984 campaign organization still had $148,595 on hand on June 30, the last reporting period.

Death Penalty

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — An 18-year-old Davie County man was sentenced to die Saturday in the death of Mildred Hendrix Foster, a 70-year-old woman whose throat was cut during a $38 robbery at her home in Cooleemee.

Judge John B. Lewis Jr. of Superior Court set Thomas Mark Adams' execution for Jan. 20, 1989. Appeal is automatic.

H.W. "Butch" Zimmerman, the district attorney for Iredell County, described Adams as an unfeeling killer with no appreciation for the value of human life.

Defense attorney James Dooley said that Adams, a slight, red-headed man who was 17 when first charged with murder, was addicted to marijuana and suffered from a personality disorder that caused him to lose control the night of the killing.

Drug Arrests

NASHVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The Nash County Sheriff's Department arrested 12 people on drug charges in connection with a weekend roundup that authorities said was the county's largest.

The arrests were the culmination of a countywide undercover investigation that began in September and targeted cocaine dealers. Sheriff's deputies were searching for 25 people who were to be charged with a total of 98 felonies.

Seven arrests were made in the first hours of the roundup, but arrests slowed afterward.

"The word's out, and they've scattered," Sheriff's Capt. Milton M. Reams said Sunday. "They've all got wind that we're after them."

Reams said several of those arrested were from Rocky Mount, adding that warrants had been issued for people throughout the county.

Habitat Homes

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Fifteen families celebrated the completion of their new homes Sunday in Charlotte's Habitat for Humanity neighborhood, bringing the number of homes built by volunteers in the city to 45.

About 200 Habitat supporters and families squeezed into the Chapel of Hope at Christ the King Center in Charlotte to celebrate completion of the homes.

ROGER BLAIR

ROGER BLAIR MINISTRIES

After spending nine years in drugs, rock-n-roll and everything the devil had to offer, Roger got tired of that lifestyle. He began to reflect on his pentecostal upbringing, and his longing for the move of God in his life took preeminence. Of course this is not the end of the story. He was gloriously saved and filled with the Holy Ghost.

Roger is now in full time service to the body of Christ. The Lord dynamically manifests Himself in music with signs and wonders following through his ministry. The power of the Holy Ghost will impact the lives of your people as Jesus is exalted through him.

Roger is a man of integrity who lives a sold out life to God. You will feel he is truly a part of your ministerial staff while he is with you and your church will be changed by the power of the Lord.

Playwrights Fight For Freedom From Female Stereotypes

By Judith Michaelson
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BUFFALO, N.Y. — A bright orange tablecloth spread on a large assembly floor. Multicolored candles. A Madonna-like figure of a native American Indian goddess. Two bouquets of flowers, a ripe eggplant and a basket of ballpark peanuts to be handed to each of the participants as a symbol of welcome.

It was the second morning of the first International Women's Playwrights Conference, at the Buffalo-Amherst campus of the State University of New York, which drew 250 women from 34 nations. The tablecloth, candles and other items served as props for a discussion of "Myth, Legend and Ritual in Plays by Women."

Rather than just talk about ritual, the playwrights, directors, producers and academicians acted it out. They also turned the conference into a forum where politics and women's issues were at least as important as their art.

"It has never been easy for women to make their way as playwrights," said conference director Anna Kay France, associate professor of English and theater at Buffalo. "Many from the past have been lost in obscurity and anonymity — treated with neglect, even contempt."

To hear the women playwrights, discrimination is a given. They did not need playwright Kathleen Betsko to tell them that few women's plays are produced in the United States and those that are produced generally cluster on the bottom rungs of the theater ladder, on the "Off-Off Broadway's."

Betsko, who grew up in England, asserts that a generalized character written by a male playwright is deemed by male critics to be an "archetype" while the same character written by a woman is dismissed as "stereotype."

She noted that when playwright John Osborne, one of the esteemed "angry young men" of the postwar period in Great Britain, wrote "Look Back in Anger," his kitchen sink was considered a "metaphor for the declining British Empire," but when a woman writes about a kitchen sink it's "just a domestic drama."

Betsko also criticized New York producer Joseph Papp for saying he no longer wants "domestic" or "kitchen-sink" dramas. With "fringed lives," because many women playwrights are often also wives and mothers, that's what many women know and write about, she said.

But Alice Childress, at 68, the eldest in the room, sees this as an advantage. One of three keynote speakers, she urged women to take heart from the many things they do know and to tell their stories, just as she, the great-granddaughter of slaves, tells hers.

Is there a woman's aesthetic, or is true art genderless? Are women writers creating their own art forms?

"Art is art no matter who writes it, man or woman," says Soviet writer

Valerya Vrublevskaya. "Tolstoy — no one understood a woman better than he did with 'Anna Karenina.'"

Playwright Gretchen Cryer said there is a definitive women's perspective, "and it comes from having been outside the dominant culture for 2,000 years, outside the seats of power."

"We are in a way," she said, "court jesters."

For some playwrights, the female aesthetic is more precise. They talk of "linear" writing (male) as opposed to "circular" writing (female), which often carries a sexual connotation.

"We tend to write in a circular fashion," said Betsko, who said her opinion is based on talking to 30 women playwrights and reading hundreds of plays by women for the book "Interviews With Contemporary Women Playwrights," which she co-authored with Rachel Koenig.

Betsko believes that because a woman's life is so fragmented — "10 minutes making the beds, 10 minutes dropping off the kids, picking up the old man, throwing the macaroni and cheese on the table" — women playwrights instinctively write shorter scenes. They also tend to "share the best more generously among all the characters on stage" so that there might be several leading main characters rather than the male form of protagonist and antagonist.

"We have a lot of problems structurally because we are trying to force our perceptions and our vision into predominantly male forms," Betsko continued. "The underlying foundation is Aristotle, who requires that a play be made with rising conflict until it reaches the climax, and then tapers off. Whereas in women's work you've got a lot of small climaxes. Women tend to want to return to where they began at the beginning of the play."

"We don't see endings so easily because we really haven't found out the beginnings," said Margaret Hollingsworth of Canada.

Don't Question Compassion

Dear Abby: When the media brought us the news that three gray whales were trapped by ice in the Arctic, people all over the world wrung their hands and prayed for those doomed creatures. When one whale perished, a friend of mine went to church and lighted candles for the remaining two.

The outpouring of compassion for those whales was heartwarming. And what an admirable show of generosity on the part of the Soviets when they sent a ship with a high-powered ice cutter to set them free.

I read that more than a million dollars was spent rescuing those two whales.

Abby, I know that you are an animal lover, and so am I, but if all the time, energy and money we spent on freeing those whales were spent to provide proper prenatal care for mothers and babies, we would have a lot more to brag about. — San Diego

Dear San Diego: A million dollars is a whale of a lot of blubber, and while it's true our infant mortality rate is nothing to brag about, let's not diminish the compassion and generosity of the two superpowers of the world, who joined hands in a humane effort to preserve life.

Dear Abby: Shortly after our 4½-year-old grandson's tragic death a year ago, my husband wrote to tell you how it happened — to warn other parents and grandparents of the danger. His letter was never published. Now, you print a letter about how a parakeet hung himself on a ribbon! Well, I'll try again because even if one child's life can be saved, Tommy's death will not have been in vain.

Our two grandchildren and some other children had been swinging on a rope hanging from a tree in a neighbor's yard. The other kids left, and Tommy was all alone swinging on that rope. It apparently had wrapped itself around his neck and suspended him off the ground — choking him. When his mother found him, he had no pulse or heartbeat.

When the paramedics arrived, they got Tommy breathing again. He was airlifted to a hospital and lived only days in intensive care. He never regained consciousness although I'm sure he had the best of care ($60,000), and even if he had lived, his brain had been without oxygen too long for him to have been normal.

Our beloved, beautiful grandson's death was preventable. Abby, please help me get the word out that ropes hanging from trees may be fun for children to play with, but never let your children swing from them unless someone is with them. — Esther Ackerman, Seattle

Dear Esther Ackerman: My heartfelt sympathy to you and your family. You were very generous to have written in your time of sorrow. I regret that you will never know how many people will read about this tragedy and remember it. Be assured that your beloved Tommy did not die in vain.

Armless Clerical Worker Sees Herself As Person With A Handicap, Not As A Handicapped Person

By Gwen Coley
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BYNUM, Ala. — Twelve years ago, Eve Cole could type 45 words per minute and take dictation at about 80 words per minute, and she has used those skills at the Anniston Army Depot ever since. For the average clerk-typist, those are not exceptional speeds. But Mrs. Cole, armless since birth, types and takes dictation with her toes.

"I don't say I'm a handicapped person," Mrs. Cole said. "I am a person with a handicap."

A native of the Wellborn community, Mrs. Cole works as a clerk and recently earned a promotion along with a transfer to the Directorate of Personnel and Community Activity.

The 31-year-old mother of two said she learned to type at Wellborn High School after being encouraged by the typing teacher there.

"The only obstacle was the thought of going to the typing class and failing," Mrs. Cole said. Learning on an electric typewriter, she said, made mastering the skill easier. She types now with the help of an 18-inch-high desk.

"She's probably one of the best typists I have seen in my career," said Patsy Smallwood, Mrs. Cole's supervisor. "Eve's a very unique person, a very capable employee."

Mrs. Cole said she never had a difficult time mastering other ordinary skills. As a child, she was treated the same as her brothers and sisters, she said.

"Growing up, my family was very supportive. My father encouraged me — he would not let me give up," Mrs. Cole said. She learned to swim at 4. By 14, she was driving a car. The Ford Tempo she drives to work, she says, has no special attachments or modifications.

"If wasn't IF I could do something, it was HOW," she said. "I could do pretty much do what I needed to do. ... As a child, I didn't have much of a problem. I was very accepted."

The 1976 Wellborn High School graduate said she had one major obstacle — "attitudinal barriers" — to overcome as she grew older. Now she considers herself an advocate for the handicapped.

"I feel like the best I can do for the handicapped is to educate the public," she said.

In 1986, she was chosen the Handicapped Employee of the Year at the Army depot and placed second in the Department of the Army competition.

"I didn't actively seek that award," said Mrs. Cole, who was recommended for the honor by her supervisor.

Mrs. Cole recently participated in supervisory training sessions in which she made recommendations on how to work with handicapped employees.

She advised them to consider the abilities rather than disabilities of employees with handicaps. After having spent 12 years in the same pay grade, she said, she feels her capabilities were often overlooked because of her handicap.

"I feel everyone is handicapped in one way or another. Mine shows," she said.

Fisher

AYDEN — A funeral for Mrs. Delzora "Figlum" Suggs Fisher, 76, of 907 West Ave., will be conducted Wednesday in St. Paul Church of Christ (Disciples of Christ) in Ayden by Bishop A.L. Matthews. Burial will be in the Ayden Cemetery.

Mrs. Fisher was a member of St. Paul Church.

Surviving are a daughter, Margaret Green Spencer of Ayden, and a grandson.

The body will be at Norcott Memorial Chapel in Ayden from 6 p.m. Tuesday until carried to the church one hour before the funeral. The family will receive friends from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday at the chapel and at other times will be at the home.

Guy

Mr. John Ansley Guy, 82, of 205 Westwood Drive died Sunday in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

His funeral will be conducted at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday in St. James United Methodist Church by the Rev. Caswell Shaw. Entombment will be in Pinewood Memorial Park.

A former principal of Fountain High School, Mr. Guy had lived in Greenville since 1968 and was a director at Pitt Technical Institute from 1968 to 1972. A native of Foster Falls, Va., he was a graduate of Asbury College in Wilmore, Ky., and received a master's degree from Duke University. He first came to Pitt County in 1937, after having been employed by the Virginia school system. He served as principal of Fountain High School until 1940. During World War II, he served as officer in charge of the Navy V-12 program at Princeton University. He was then a high school principal in Florida, a dean of men at Illinois Wesleyan University, and a State Farm Insurance Company district manager and assistant director of training in Illinois.

He was a member of St. James United Methodist Church and served on its administrative board. He also was a member of Greenville Masonic Lodge No. 284 A.F. & A.M., Sudan Temple of New Bern, a director of the Pitt County Shrine Club, and a member of the Golden K Kiwanis Club.

Surviving are his wife, Jeanne Radliff Guy; a sister, Miriam Guy Jopling of Lake City, Fla., and two brothers, Emory H. Guy of Philadelphia and the Rev. Henry A. Guy of Jacksonville, Fla.

The family will receive friends at the Wilkerson Funeral Home from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. today.

The family suggests that memorial contributions be made to St. James United Methodist Church Building Fund, 2000 E. Sixth St., Greenville, N.C. 27858, or the charity of one's choice.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 52 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. 96 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a final weighted average of 52.33 cents. The market is steady to weak and the live supply is adequate for a very light demand. Average weights light to desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Monday was 1,844,000, compared to 2,001,000 last Monday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 1 cent lower at mostly 2.66-2.75 in East and mostly 2.78-2.88 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly 2-3 cents lower at mostly 6.96-7.11 in East and mostly 6.88-6.96 in the Piedmont; wheat 3.71-3.81; new crop wheat 3.30-3.50. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady and ranged from 96 to 99 percent of face value.

UNC's Offense Rolls In Win Over Georgia

By Tom Foreman Jr.
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Dean Smith won't be looking for an offensive spark when he takes North Carolina into the semifinals of the Big Apple NIT.

With J.R. Reid waiting for a stress fracture in his left foot to heal, some might think the Tar Heels are in search of point production. But in victories over Tennessee-Chattanooga and Georgia, there have been contributions from all corners.

Scott Williams scored six points in helping lead the Tar Heels to a 111-84 victory over UTC, but tied his career high with 25 points in the 99-91 triumph over Georgia.

Rick Fox had a career-high 25 points in beating the Moccasins, but just four points against the Bulldogs. Jeff Lebo has scored 14 points in both games, and Steve Bucknall has had 13 points in each outing.

"We don't worry about the scoring load," Smith said. "We'll always get good shots. We don't go to one guy to carry the load."

Kevin Madden, who scored 31 points in the first-round tournament victory over Tennessee-Chattanooga Friday night, had 18 for North Carolina.

The Tar Heels, 2-0, advanced on the strength of two big scoring runs and a defense which held off a Bulldog rally late in the first half to set up a semifinal contest against Missouri on Wednesday night.

"I think we're close to where we want to be defensively this time of year," Smith said.

Williams scored seven of the game's first nine points and contributed to North Carolina's 26-8 bulge in the first eight minutes. But Georgia, 1-1, rallied, using an 18-2 run to get within 28-26 after Sebastian Neal scored on a tap-in with 7:24 left.

"It was an amazing beginning," Smith said. "The next thing you know, an elephant jumped on our backs."

North Carolina repelled the threat and used a 7-0 surge to take a 49-39 halftime lead.

Opening the second half much like the first, North Carolina went on a 15-0 tear and expanded its lead to 64-39 after a Rick Fox steal and dunk with 16:57 remaining.

The Tar Heels expanded the lead to 70-45 after a Pete Chilcutt layup with 15:14 left and the final score was as close as Georgia got.

"When someone picks up the paper in St. Louis or Dallas tomorrow and sees the score, they'll say 'Hey, that was a heck of a game. It was on the road.'" Georgia coach Hugh Durham said. "But the score is misleading to the game."

Saturday afternoon, shortly after 4:30 p.m., the Art Baker era at East Carolina came to an end.

Happily, the end came with a lop-sided victory as the Pirates defeated Cincinnati, 49-14. Baker went out a winner.

Not that he wouldn't have gone out a winner, anyway. No matter what the record book shows, Art Baker is a winner in every sense of the word.

One of Baker's goals when he came to East Carolina was to bring more "class" to the program, and he succeeded at that. There are few of his peers who do not respect him and recognize him as a class individual.

Perhaps he did not succeed in some of the other goals, but he has improved the program over the four years he was here.

No one can doubt that the offense of the Pirates was not capable this year. And the defense, often maligned, grew during the year to the point where it became respectable before the season was over.

That the Pirates even won their last two games speaks to the performance of Baker. Coming off the four games in October with nationally ranked teams, many other teams would have fallen in those two contests too.

But Baker rallied them and pulled off the victories, going out in style.

He leaves the program in good shape, too. Of the top 44 players, 35 return, giving his replacement an excellent nucleus to work with.

The Pirates, who faced one of the nation's toughest schedules — six opponents will play in bowl games this year — see an easing of the schedule next fall. That, too, should help the new coach.

Baker still says he has that "itch" to coach, and I won't be surprised to see him coaching again before too long. He may join the staff of Dick Sheridan or Bobby Bowden or take a position with the South Carolina athletic department.

And, of course, he may stay in Greenville.

But wherever Art Baker goes, he has my best wishes. I'm not ashamed to say that I've been an Art Baker fan since his days at Furman University. And I'm still an Art Baker fan.

The old rule about playing a team twice in the same season seems to be becoming a little bent. Usually, the team which won the first meeting of the two comes out best in the second meeting — usually in the playoffs.

But so far this year in the high school playoffs, eight teams which met teams they had beaten during the regular season have come away a winner the second time around. Four of those eight wins came in the first week's play.

Six teams which lost the first time around came up with wins, however. Winston-Salem Carver beat cross-town rival Parkland the first week, while Raleigh Millbrook beat Garner; Brevard beat Canton Pisgah, Lexington beat Salisbury, Camden beat Perquimans and North Duplin downed Hobbton.

This coming Friday night, there will be six more meetings of teams which have met before. Will tradition follow, or will the first time around winner win again.

Those matchups include Fayetteville Smith, which lost to Fayetteville 71st the first time; West Charlotte, which lost to Charlotte Harding; Tarboro, which lost to Havelock; Lexington, which lost to Thomasville; North Duplin, which lost to Midway, and North Moore, which lost to East Montgomery.

Wallace Takes Season-Ending Win

But Elliott Claims Winston Cup

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAMPTON, Ga. — Rusty Wallace drove to win a race and hoped for a miracle.

Bill Elliott drove to win a championship and did only what he had to do. Wallace got his victory in Sunday's Atlanta Journal 500, but not his miracle.

Elliott drove just hard enough to win the $400,000 NASCAR Winston Cup season driving championship with a conservative and carefully orchestrated 11th-place finish.

Elliott, from Dawsonville, Ga., did it before an appreciative sellout crowd of more than 70,000 at Atlanta International Raceway.

Despite winning his sixth race, tying Elliott for the most visits to Victory Circle this season, Wallace couldn't relax and enjoy his fourth win in the last five races.

"I'm a terrible loser," Wallace said. "It bothers me that a car can run like that (Elliott's) and win the championship when I'm running my rear end off."

"Bill and I are good friends, but he'd better have all the nuts and bolts tightened down next year because I'm going to thrash him."

Elliott, who knew heading into the last of 29 races this season that he only had to finish 18th or better to clinch the championship, started 29th in the 42-car field and never ran higher than eighth.

"I ran just hard enough," he said. "That's all that matters."

When told that Wallace criticized him for driving conservatively, Elliott shrugged and said, "We wanted to just pretty much pace it, but there were 14 or 15 cars still on the lead lap with 100 laps to go. I ran what I needed because you can't give up anything to those other guys. There's too many good race cars out there."

Wallace, who started from the pole after setting a track qualifying record of 179.499 mph, was the class of the field all day.

The race was the last in the illustrious careers of Cale Yarborough and Benny Parsons. Yarborough, a three-time Winston Cup champion, finished 10th, while Parsons, also a former series champ, crashed on lap 135 and wound up 34th.

State Lands 5 On All-ACC Team

By Tom Foreman Jr.

RALEIGH, N.C. — North Carolina State, possessing a gifted offense and a stingy defense, placed five members of its 1988 Peach Bowl team on the all-Atlantic Coast Conference team announced today by the Associated Press.

Clemson, which won its third straight league title, and Duke, which posted its best year since 1962, placed four players apiece on the team. The 24 players for first-team offense and defense were selected by a panel of sportswriters from throughout the ACC region.

Leading the parade of Wolfpack stars is wide receiver Nasrallah Worthen, who became N.C. State's all-time leading receiver despite nursing a hamstring injury during the season. He finished the season with 54 catches for 856 yards and seven touchdowns.

The N.C. State defense, which was among the best in the nation for most of the season, had four picks.

Ray Agnew led the defensive line charge that kept N.C. State among the top 10 in total defense. Linebacker Scott Auer collected seven sacks in his first nine games and was in the top five in tackles. Fred Stone, injured late in the Clemson victory and out for the season with a knee injury, still managed to place third among Wolfpack tackler, and freshman Jesse Campbell, a former West Craven standout, was N.C. State's leading tackler going into the final game against Pittsburgh. He also had five interceptions in 1988.

Named to the rest of the offense were Duke wide receiver Clarkston Hines and teammate Dave Colonna at tight end. Along the line were tackles Jeff Nunamacher of Clemson and Chris Port of Duke; guards

49ers Hope For Flight

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

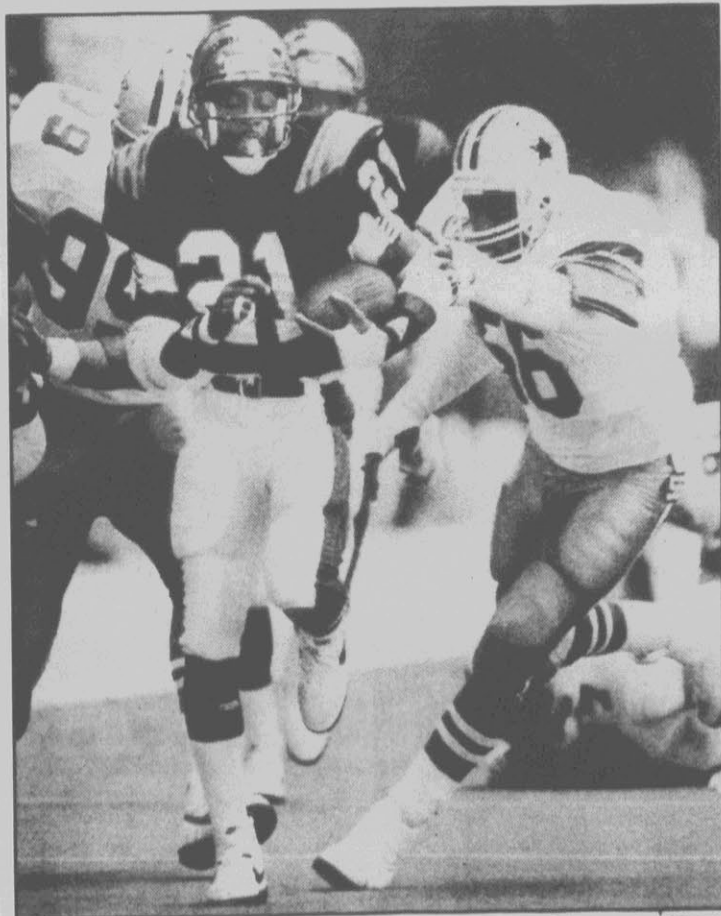

SAN FRANCISCO — The San Francisco 49ers' passing game has been grounded for nearly two months. So have their once-high hopes of a sixth NFC West title in eight years.

The Washington Redskins are No. 1 in the NFC in passing yardage, but are coming off a poor showing in last week's 34-14 loss to Chicago.

The key to tonight's game between the 49ers and Washington Redskins may lie in which team can revive its passing attack first.

When they rolled up 351 yards passing and had five TD passes in Seattle on Sept. 25, the 49ers were on a near-record pace for offensive yardage, first downs and points scored.

Since then, while dropping four close games to fall to 6-5, San Francisco's high in passing yardage has been a ho-hum 209 yards against Minnesota.

Bills' Fans Get Rewarded

Buffalo Clinches AFC East With 9-6 Win Over Jets

By Barry Wilner
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There have been few rewarding moments in Rich Stadium for the Buffalo Bills and their fans, so they really took advantage of one when they got the chance.

Thousands of fans streamed on to the field Sunday after Scott Norwood's 30-yard field goal in overtime gave the Bills a 9-6 victory over the New York Jets and the AFC East crown. It was the earliest clinching of an AFC division since the NFL went to a 16-game schedule in 1978, and it was Buffalo's first division title since 1980.

To celebrate, the fans tore down the goalposts and passed pieces to each other.

"Nobody deserves it more than Buffalo fans," quarterback Jim Kelly said. "They've taken so much grief through the years."

So has Bills owner Ralph C. Wilson Jr., who hugged the players in the locker room and recalled "when the fans were throwing programs at me.

"This is far better than 1980," said Wilson, whose team has gone from consecutive 2-14 seasons in 1984 and '85 to the best record in the league, 11-1, including a seven-game winning streak. "This team steadily improved and never played a bad game."

The Bills didn't play all that well against the Jets, 5-6-1 and losers of three straight. But they made the big plays.

New York had a chance to win in regulation but Pat Leahy's 40-yard field goal attempt was blocked by Fred Smerlas with 25 seconds left in the fourth period.

"I got a gap and I figured if I turned sideways I could get enough of the gap so that I could penetrate and maybe get a piece of it," Smerlas said. "I had a strange feeling we were going to block it."

In overtime, Roger Vick fumbled at his 32 and Norwood's kick followed four plays later.

Patriots 6, Dolphins 3
At Miami, in another of the three games with only field goals as the scoring, New England's Jason Staurovsky made two, from 22 and 34 yards, while Miami's Tony Franklin missed three, including a 23-yarder with seven minutes left.

Vikings 12, Colts 3
Minnesota's defense continued to shut down opposing runners. The Vikings, who have not allowed a rusher to gain 100 yards since Oct. 26, 1986 — a span of 38 games — held Eric Dickerson to 72 yards in 22 carries. But Dickerson did establish a team record for rushing yards in a season with 1,237.

Eagles 23, Giants 17, OT
In 1978, Philadelphia stole a victory at Giants Stadium when Herman Edwards scooped up a fumble as New York was running out the clock and ran it in for the winning touchdown. This time, Luis Zendejas lined up a 31-yard field goal try, but it was blocked by Lawrence Taylor.

But the ball bounced right to

Three Fair Well In Gymnastic Competition

GREENSBORO — Three qualifiers from the Greenville Gymnastics Club fared well at the Class III Compulsory and Optional State Championship this weekend in Greensboro.

The best finisher was Jessica Sloan in the 9-11 age group. Sloan placed fourth overall with a 29.85 score. She was third in floor exercise with an 8.3, third in the uneven bars with a 7.65, third in vaulting with a 7.80 and sixth on the balance beam with a score of 6.1.

Ragan Tayloe also competed in the 9-11 class and finished sixth overall with a score of 28.55. Tayloe was fifth in the floor exercise with a 8.2, fourth on the uneven bars with a 7.4, fifth in vaulting with a score of 7.6 and eighth on the balance beam with a mark of 5.35.

In the 12-14 compulsory competition, Heaher Garrett finished in seventh place with a mark of 8.8.

Two PCC Players Named To Tourney Team

PETERSBURG, Va. — A pair of Pitt Community College basketball players were named to the All-Tournament team this weekend at the Richard Bland Tipoff Tournament in Petersburg, Va.

Sophomore Ricky Congleton and freshman Anthony Johnson were both named to the team.

Congleton, a former Roanoke High School player, averaged 26 points, 11.3 rebounds and 1.5 blocked shots in the tourney. Johnson, a Rose High School graduate, chipped in 20 points per game, pulled down 8.5 rebounds and had 2 blocked shots per game.

Quarterback Club Slates Final Meeting

The ECU Quarterback Club will hold its final meeting of the year Tuesday at the Pirate Club.

The meeting will begin with dinner at 6:30 p.m. followed by films and discussion with the Pirate football coaches.

Awards will also be given out.

Gilder Gets Long-Awaited Victory

KAPALUA, Hawaii (AP) — It didn't take long for John Mahaffey to determine he had his work cut out for him.

"I shoot 32 at him over the front nine and lose ground. That kind of tells you it might be his day," Mahaffey said.

It was the day Bob Gilder had been waiting for. It was a day that was almost six years in coming, but Gilder had never doubted it would arrive.

It marked the first American triumph since the 1983 Phoenix Open for Gilder, who went into a decline in 1984 and didn't emerge until his strong performances this year — sixth in the U.S. Open and eighth in the PGA.

Duke Still On Top

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Duke's easy victory in the Tipoff Classic kept the Blue Devils atop The Associated Press' college basketball poll.

Duke was the preseason No. 1 and its lead only increased with today's first regular-season poll. The Blue Devils, who beat Kentucky 80-55 to start the season, received 46 first-place votes — 13 more than in the preseason poll — and 1,276 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters.

Georgetown, which received six first-place votes, and Michigan, with three No. 1 votes, remained second and third with 1,108 and 1,100 points, respectively.

North Carolina and Syracuse both won two games in the Big Apple NIT and jumped one and two places in the poll.

Eagles Feel Good About Future

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

(This is one of a series of articles on the prospects for the coming basketball season for CAA teams.)

American University makes no bones about how it feels about the 1988-89 basketball season.

Their motto for the coming year is "Our future's so bright, we gotta wear shades!"

And the Eagles, who have dwelled in the lower reaches of the conference since joining it, may be right on track in their prediction. Last year, the Eagles made a move forward, finishing with a 14-14 record and taking second place in the league standings.

That earned Ed Tapscoff Co-Coach of the Year honors in the CAA.

This year, the Eagles are going after the whole bundle, and there are many who do not doubt them. The league's coaches were almost unanimous in picking American to win the title, although the media voted them only second place, picking George Mason first.

"It's a honor to be picked (by the coaches)," Tapscoff said. "It's a compliment to the development of our program and the hard work of our youngsters."

American got a major bonus last year with the opening of their new arena, Bender Arena, a part of the Adnan Khashoggi Sports and Convocation Center. It put the Eagle basketball program on campus instead of the dark and dreary Fort Myers gymnasium.

To go with it, the Eagles also got some prime players, and it has changed the look of the ball club.

"This club has the best potential of any club since I've been at American," Tapscoff said. "We have inside players who can do some damage, and that's a different coaching experience for me."

In the past, American has relied on shorter guards to pump the ball in from the perimeter. But no longer. Now, it's get the ball inside to the big men and let them bang around under the basket.

Tapscoff returns 10 lettermen off last year's squad that was 9-5 in the league. Seven of those players have starting experience. With only 12 all told, Tapscoff's biggest problem may be coming up with the right combinations at the right time. With so much experience around, no one has a lock on a starting job.

"It's a kind of problem most coaches don't mind having," Tapscoff said. "We finally find ourselves with a level of talent that we'll have to mix and match individual players to find out who meshes together the best and gives us the best effort on the floor when we're ready to tip-off."

The biggest loss the Eagles must fill is the shoes of guard Mike Sampson, an all-CCA selection last year. He was also the team's leading scorer and playmaker.

But the Eagles do return six guards.

The heir apparent at the point would seem to be Brock Wortman, a 6-1 sophomore, who held the back-up role last season. Wortman averaged 4.9 points a game as a freshman.

Fred Tillman, a 6-2 sophomore, could play either backcourt position and is the quickest man on the team.

Most likely, however, the off-guard spot will go to Dale Spears, a 6-3 senior who started only one game last year but still averaged 12.0 points.

Others who could figure into the picture include Rodney Holmes, a 5-11 sophomore; Craig Broderdorp, a 6-5 senior; Chuck West, a 6-3 senior; and Mike Sumner, a 6-4 junior.

West, was sat out last year with an injury, could end up as the starter if Spears doesn't grab it. West averaged 12.4 points a game his last year. Sumner, who averaged 7.9 points a game last year, is the returning big guard starter but may give way to someone else, despite being on the all-rookie team last year in the CAA.

"Dale's the sort of player who can change the complexion of a game by virtue of his offensive explosiveness," Tapscoff said. "He performed well off the bench and could be effective as a starter. Chuck has proven that he can score and rebound and be effective around the basket. The big question is how does the one-year layoff affect him. Sumner has all the tools, he just needs to develop the consistency and leadership one expects of an upperclassman."

In the forecourt, things would appear more set. Daryl Holmes, a 6-6 junior, returns. He averaged 10.4 points and 5.8 rebounds last year. Clarence Ingram, a 6-5 senior, averaged 4.4 points and 2.9 rebounds. Ingram was a sometime starter and played well off the bench otherwise. Eric White, a 6-6 senior, comes off major knee surgery two years ago and is the second leading rebounder on the team with a 4.0 average.

And Tapscoff hasn't ruled out the possibility of using both Sumner and West on the wings.

The key man inside may be transfer Ron Draper, a 6-8 junior. Tapscoff feels he could be one of the best big men in the conference. He averaged 19 points and 12 rebounds a game at South Florida Community College, where he was a teammate of Spears and Ingram. "He's an impact player who should add a lot to our line-up and a player, who by his talent alone, should become a team leader once he's earned a little Division I experience," Tapscoff said.

Ron Davenport, a 6-8 sophomore, could push Draper off to a forward position, however. Davenport came back from a foot injury to appear in 10 games last year, averaging 4.7 points an outing.

For now, however, the Eagles are still trying to put it all together to get the just-right combination that can make that future shine — perhaps before this season is over.

Bench Support Keys Blazers' Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PORTLAND, Ore. — All the Portland Trail Blazers needed was a little spark. They got it from an unlikely source.

Four non-starters — Danny Young, Craig Neal, Caldwell Jones and Steve Johnson — combined with Jerome Kersey on a 7-0 run in the final 38 seconds of the third quarter Sunday night to propel the Trail Blazers to a 117-106 victory over the New Jersey Nets.

Kersey played 38 minutes with a right shoulder so sore he thought he would have to sit out the game, and scored 29 points to go with 10 rebounds.

Young, Neal, Jones and Johnson joined him for the key third-quarter run, when the Blazers stretched an 85-84 lead to 92-84. With the same group on the court, they got the edge up to 97-86 two minutes into the fourth quarter.

"That was a rambling wreck of a team out there," said Jones, who had eight points, three rebounds, two assists and two blocked shots in 15 minutes. "We're a bunch of misfits. What other team in the league would want us?"

Young, Neal and Jones, combined, average less than nine points a game. But they scrambled, scrapped and played unselfishly — and gave the listless Blazers a spark.

"They're a scrappy group," Kersey said. "They gave us some enthusiasm — something this team lacks at times."

Johnson, who had 16 points and eight rebounds in his 27 minutes, made a three-point play to begin the key scoring run.

Then Neal scored on a fast break and Kersey followed with a dunk off a long pass from Jones after a steal. In the fourth quarter, Jones — who went 4-for-4 from the field — turned uncharacteristically aggressive on offense.

"I was out there thinking about the days in the ABA when I averaged 20 shots a game," Jones said. "I figured, 'I think I'll go ahead and take a shot and see what it feels like.'"

Bills Clinch AFC East Title

Clyde Simmons one yard behind the line of scrimmage and the defensive end ran into the end zone for the winning score.

Oilers 38, Cardinals 20
Warren Moon had a big day for Houston, 8-4, with touchdown passes of 30 and 13 yards to Ernest Givins and 50 yards to Drew Hill. He also ran for a score.

Bengals 38, Cowboys 24
Dallas continued to slide toward oblivion — or, perhaps, the top selection in the 1989 draft. The Cowboys have lost eight straight and, at 2-10, have their worst record since the expansion season of 1960.

Cincinnati, meanwhile, stayed on top of the AFC Central with a 9-3 record as James Brooks, who leads the NFL in rushing average, carried 16 times for 148 yards, including a 51-yard TD run, and hauled in a 13-yard scoring pass from Boomer Esiason.

Browns 27, Steelers 7
The Browns beat the Steelers for the sixth straight time, dropping Pittsburgh to 2-10 and leaving the Steelers winless at Cleveland since 1981. Pittsburgh has lost four in a row and 10 of its last 11 games.

Saints 42, Broncos 0
At New Orleans, the Saints recorded their biggest victory margin ever and took a two-game edge in the NFC West. They also clinched their second straight winning season, the only two in the 22-year history of the franchise.

Chargers 38, Rams 24
Much-maligned Mark Malone, who lost his job to Mark Vlasic two weeks ago, took over when Vlasic suffered a torn ligament in his left knee that will require surgery. After throwing an interception, Malone guided visiting San Diego to a pair of fourth-quarter touchdowns, both on 1-yard runs by ex-Ram Barry Redden.

Falcons 12, Raiders 6
The Raiders, who hadn't allowed a touchdown in the last two games and were riding a three-game winning streak, practically handed Atlanta the winning points.

The Falcons got the ball at the Raiders' 12 when rookie linebacker Audray Bruce sacked Steve Beuerlein, forcing a fumble and making the recovery himself on a play that originated at the Raiders' 40. John Settle got the TD with a 1-yard run with 4:07 to go.

Bears 27, Buccaneers 15
Chicago, 10-2, beat Tampa Bay for the 12th straight time.

Neal Anderson scored on runs of one and 17 yards and Brad Muster turned a screen pass into a 40-yard touchdown.

Lions 19, Packers 9
Wayne Fontes was a winner in his debut as interim coach — he replaced the fired Darryl Rogers last Monday.

The Lions, 3-9, took a 9-0 halftime lead on Eddie Murray field goals of 42, 37 and 19 yards, and then clinched it with Scott Williams' 1-yard touchdown run.

Chiefs 27, Seahawks 24
The Seahawks have lost seven straight at Kansas City, the latest defeat coming on Nick Lowery's 40-yard field goal with 46 seconds left. Seattle had tied it 24-24 on Dave Krieg's 14-yard touchdown pass to Brian Blades.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY Nov. 22

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): New energy seems to be everywhere. Love knocks on your door. Popularity is at a high point. Avoid arguments over entertainment.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Avoid isolating yourself from everyday problems. There is a tendency to amplify trifles. Make a molehill out of a mountain instead.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You are bombarded with all sorts of ideas and attitudes. Many of these are unique and original. Prepare to enjoy new energy.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Your thoughts are not in harmony with your true nature. A poor work situation will change. Use fortitude until it does.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Money poses a challenge. Creativity is high and functioning satisfactorily. Problems at home clear up after productive discussions.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): You feel love for others generated from within. You are about to receive more than you gave during a crisis. Relax a bit, and enjoy the attention.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Your bubbly nature saves the day. Talents that are unused will remain dormant unless you act. Approach someone you admire.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Relax with someone you like. You can profit if you put energy into your morning. Develop an inner peace, and bury any resentments.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): An attitude of caring and expressing goodwill will highlight the day. Your personality and strong sensitivities attract others.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Your romantic relationship may be suffering due to pressures at work. Busy schedules leave no time for outside considerations.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Sorrow over a loss will soon end. You are in solid control of important changes. Spiritual life takes on new meaning through a contact.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Others test your philosophies and intentions. Protect yourself from fraud or loss. Enjoy contact with an old friend and children.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AKQ6 ♥95 ♦AKJ3 ♣J63
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—It's a difficult decision. Rule out two spades—you aren't quite good enough to guarantee game. That leaves a slightly imperfect two no trump or an underbid of one spade. We prefer one spade because we don't believe game can be made unless partner can bid again, and we surely don't want to bypass such a strong four-card major.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠KJ63 ♥A106 ♦AKJ5 ♣87
 What is your opening bid?
 A.—The stricture that you needed at least Qx in your doubleton suit to open the bidding with one no trump has long gone by the boards. If you don't open this 16-point hand with 1 NT, you'll never be able to describe it properly.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠KQ73 ♥A106 ♦AKJ5 ♣87
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 NT Pass 2 ♣ Pass
 What action do you take?
 A.—While partner could be broke, he could also have some 6-7 points, and that could be enough to give you play for game. Tell partner you have a maximum no trump with excellent spade support by raising to three spades. That leaves the decision to bid game to him.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠KQ73 ♥A106 ♦AKJ5 ♣87
 The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East
 1 NT Pass 3 ♣ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—You don't know whether partner is interested in game or slam. All you can do for the moment is pass along the good news that you have a maximum no trump opener with excellent support for his suit. You accomplish that by making your cheapest cue-bid—four diamonds.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠95 ♥KQ73 ♦AKJ5 ♣AJ6
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 NT Pass 2 ♣ Pass
 What action do you take?
 A.—Even though you have a maximum one no trump opening bid, there is a glaring flaw—no support for partner's suit. At no trump, partner's hand might not produce much for you. Pass.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠83 ♥AQ42 ♦AK63 ♣J94
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ 2 ♣ ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—You could easily have the best hand at the table, yet your side might not have a playable game. As against that, we do not see how East can come to eight tricks in light of partner's vulnerable opening bid. We would double. (If we were playing negative doubles, we would have to take the same action because partner might not be able to reopen)

Youngest Mandrell Sister Fights In The Shadows

By Joe Edwards
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Irlene Mandrell, the youngest of the performing Mandrell sisters, believes she'll always be overshadowed by her two versatile siblings.

But she's the only one seen weekly on television. She's in her fourth season on "Hee Haw," the syndicated hour-long program of country music and corn pone humor.

All three starred in the NBC variety show, "Barbara Mandrell and the Mandrell Sisters," which ran for two seasons ending in 1982. Now country music singer Barbara Mandrell is seen periodically on television specials while the remaining sister, Louise, is seen primarily in a TV shampoo commercial.

Irlene Mandrell, in an interview between tapings on the "Hee Haw" set, said her sisters are tough acts to compete against.

"Barbara and Louise are great showmen," she said. "It would be hard to top them."

But she's moving in that direction with her comic sketches on "Hee Haw," which is in its 21st season as one of the longest running TV shows in history.

On the program, Irlene's featured segments show her as a telephone operator and a highbrow society figure, Beatrice Meadows Watson, also known as BMW.

As the telephone operator, Irlene is scatterbrained much like her character on the old network Saturday night variety show.

"People are always commenting about the spot, 'I hope I don't get you as an operator. The call would never get through,'" she said.

"It's fun to do," she said. "You get to dress different and use a different accent."

She also appears regularly in segments set in a general store and truck stop.

Her tenure on the program is a return engagement of sorts. Twenty years ago, she was on the show as a drummer in Barbara's band.

When not busy taping "Hee Haw," Irlene makes personal appearances, does some emcee work and appears occasionally with her sisters at concerts. At those shows, mostly at conventions, she opens the act by singing a number or two. Then Louise sings and plays her fiddle, followed by a segment by Barbara before all three join together.

"There's some slapstick like on the old (network) show," she said. On that program, she often was portrayed as the dippy sister in comedy spots.

"I guess they thought I'm a little dingy," she said. "I miss the show a lot. We really liked to work together. I miss them."

After the show went out of production, Irlene had two acting roles in the "Love Boat" series. She also did some dancing and singing on a road show with the Marty Krofft puppets, who had been featured regularly on the variety show.

Serious acting, though, is a career ambition. "I love comedy and I'm trying to get more involved in drama. I'm capable of it. Anything that came up, I could handle."

But for the past two years, career moves have been delayed by motherhood.

"I end up pregnant every time something is happening," she said. "The last few years I've been mainly mothering which I love. They are No. 1, second only to God." Deric is 2, and Vanessa is about 1.

Irlene was born into a musical family in Corpus Christi, Texas. She was raised in Oceanside, Calif., until the Mandrells moved to Nashville when she was about 12.

Gene Autry Opens Museum To Preserve Western Lore

By E. Scott Reckard
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — You'd think an 81-year-old Texan would be satisfied with a string of careers that reads: star of radio, records, movies and TV, broadcast czar, real estate tycoon, baseball mogul.

But singing cowboy Gene Autry is back in the saddle with a new pursuit: preserver of the American West, real and legendary, at a museum underwritten with more than $50 million from his foundations.

The Gene Autry Western Heritage Museum, which opens Tuesday, traces the West from prehistory to conquistadores to Lewis and Clark to cowboys to Hollywood images.

It's meant as a gift to the world, not a monument to himself, said Autry, who first sang on radio in 1928, made 95 films, had a TV show from 1950 to 1955, and cut 635 records, including "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer," "Silver-Haired Daddy of Mine," and the signature "Back in the Saddle Again."

Autry hung up his performing spurs in 1956, and by the mid-'60s owned part or all of nine radio and TV stations, four hotels, the California Angels, 16,000 acres in Colorado, oil, music publishing, a movie studio. Along the way he started collecting Western memorabilia and art.

"I felt that I owed something. The West has been very kind to me over the years," said Autry, whose net worth is about $230 million, according to Forbes magazine.

"I figured that the least I could do is leave something for the youth so they can see what it was all about."

Autry's tile-dotted, Spanish-style museum has seven main galleries with 51,000 square feet of space, each featuring a "spirit" or aspect of the West. The building cost $34 million and houses $20 million worth of exhibits.

It has two exhibition halls, a theater, library and restaurant on 13 acres in Griffith Park.

"He had been thinking about this for 30 years, 40 years, collecting artifacts of the West as he went from town to town," said the museum's executive director, Joanne D. Hale.

The exhibits were designed by Disney's Imagineering team to delight as well as instruct. Bridles and six-shooters gleam like jewels suspended on clear plexiglass holders; items behind glass in the galleries come to life in a 3-D movie with "magic" Disney pioneered at its theme parks.

The aim is to capture not only the West romanticized by artists, authors and Hollywood, but the reality of frontier life, said curator James Nottage.

"You expect that someone is going to save pistols owned by Custer, so it's not surprising that we have those," Nottage said. "The hard items to find are the common ones."

"So we're proud of things like a simple day dress from the 1840s. What are the odds of an item like that surviving?"

Nottage shows off a collection of items used by Mexican cowboys, the original range riders, such as a mid-1700s Saltillo serape worn to ward off the weather. He hopes to expand the museum's displays of items about women, minorities and business people in the West.

But it's the romance of the dime novel and matinee that's the long suit for now.

Visitors can toss a leg over a saddle and fire a six-shooter as they become part of a "movie" using the television technique that superimposes weather reporters over their weather maps.

Or they can just peruse:

—Guns owned by Annie Oakley, Wyatt Earp, Jesse James; saddles from Buffalo Bill Cody and broncbusting legend Yakima Canutt; Autry's own guitars, their necks inlaid with his name in mother-of-pearl.

—Cecil B. DeMille's camera from the 1914 version of "The Squaw Man," the Western often described as the first full-length picture shot in Hollywood.

—Costume after costume: Tonto and the Lone Ranger's get-ups, Clint Eastwood's "Pale Rider" long coat, the eye-assaulting glitter of country-western outfits from Nudie's Rodeo Tailors of North Hollywood.

—Ed Bohlin show saddles dripping with what looks like a ton of silver.

Among Autry's favorite items are an 1870s-era steam fire engine from Nevada, a collection of Theodore Roosevelt memorabilia, and a collection of more than 100 guns from Colt, including several made for presidents, which Autry purchased from the famous firearms company.

"They were actually offered more money than I paid for it," he said. "But whoever was bidding on it was going to sell some of the most important items, maybe trying to get their money back. So I told the people at Colt the collection would not be broken up."

Selleck Helps 'Create' Jobs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — "Magnum, P.I." made Tom Selleck a rich man and his recent movie deals have kept the dollars coming.

But the handsome actor, soon to appear in "Her Alibi," says he's stimulating the economy, not just his bank account.

"You can so easily fall into the trap of wanting more and more money, and how much is enough? But understand, I don't apologize for making it," Selleck said in an interview in December's Cosmopolitan.

"People say, 'Don't you feel guilty, when so many are starving?' Well, I strongly believe that my success has created lots of jobs," said Selleck, who has invested in a restaurant in Hawaii and is developing shopping centers.

"I don't stick the money in a mattress; I spend it, I directly employ a lot of people. The fact that I'm hired for a movie gets it financed, creates work. It's not that I take a bigger slice of the pie — I make the pie bigger."

TV Lawyer, Actress Wed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Heartthrob Corbin Bernsen, who plays the crafty divorce lawyer on NBC-TV's "L.A. Law," has married British actress Amanda Pays of "Max Headroom" fame, a publicist says.

Bernsen, 34, who plays the silk-suited Arnie Becker on "L.A. Law," exchanged vows Saturday with Miss Pays, 29, in nearby Calabasas as about 170 guests watched, spokeswoman Marilyn Heston said.

With "L.A. Law" still in production, honeymoon plans are on hold for several weeks, she said.

The couple, whose first child is due in March, lived together for about a year at Bernsen's Hollywood Hills home and will continue to reside there, Ms. Heston said.

Miss Pays, who appeared in "Max Headroom" and the movie "Oxford Blues," is awaiting the release of her latest film "Leviathan" in March.

Bernsen has made three films scheduled for release in 1989, including "Major League," co-starring Charlie Sheen and Tom Berenger.

Funny People Say Laughing Can Help

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE — It's no joke that it's healthy to laugh when you hurt, funny people Phyllis Diller and Art Buchwald told a medical symposium.

"You can really help someone in the hospital tremendously by cheering them up... even when they have stitches and are not supposed to laugh," said Buchwald, the 63-year-old Pulitzer Prize-winning author and syndicated columnist.

Miss Diller, the 71-year-old comedian who specializes in portraying herself as fighting a losing battle against the ravages of age, shook her head when asked whether humor keeps her looking young.

"Surgery," she replied.

For her, humor during childhood was a "defense to not being gorgeous."

"There was the Queen of May and there was me. I didn't even get to February," she said.

The two were featured speakers Sunday at Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions' symposium "Comedy as Catharsis: The Therapy of Laughter."
