Pitt Expects Sharp Increase In Court Sessions

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

With an additional judge set to take the bench on Dec. 1, court officials say the number of sessions of District Court held in Pitt County will increase dramatically.

There will be two District Courts operating in Greenville during two weeks of December, Pitt County District Attorney Tom Haigwood said, and Ayden will hold three days of court, instead of the usual two.

More changes are set for the new year.

Currently, the county operates 34 sessions of District Court in a four-week month. As of Jan. 1, the number will jump to 46.

Next year, there will be two District Courts operating in Greenville nearly every working day in a month. Currently, there is only one full week a month of double District Court.

There will be three days of court each month in both Ayden and Farmville, instead of two days a month as it is now. The caseload in those towns has been huge recently, with as many as 358 cases set on one day.

The main reason the county is able to hold the extra court is the new judgeship, which Rusty Duke of Farmville won. He was unopposed in the Nov. 8 election.

With Duke on the bench, there will be seven judges serving the 3rd Judicial District, which is made up of Pitt, Carteret, Craven and Pamlico counties.

J. Randall Hunter of New Bern is leaving the bench to return to private practice, and Greenville attorney David A. Leech won Hunter's seat. The five other judges in the district ran unopposed for their seats.

The seven judges will serve all four counties in the district, but the extra court means much of their workload will be in Pitt County.

On the first three Tuesdays of each month at least four of the district's seven judges will be needed in Pitt County for District Court sessions: there will be two sessions of court in Greenville, one in Ayden and one juvenile court session in Greenville.

William Nicholls of Greenville, trial court administrator for the four-county judicial district, said substitute Judge J.W.H. Roberts of Greenville will also hold court in Greenville, but the amount he will work depends on the availability of other judges.

Court Takes Breather Before Storm

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County court officials can catch their breath Thursday and Friday as court shuts down for the Thanksgiving holiday, but when court resumes next week they'll face a mountain of pending cases.

Pitt County District Attorney Tom Haigwood estimates there were between 1,200 and 1,400 cases pending in Superior Court before last week's session with Judge David E. Reid Jr. of Greenville, who presided over a special session of court to help dispose of cases.

Haigwood used last week for guilty pleas instead of time-consuming jury trials, and he moved about 250 cases, according to Superior Court clerks. The cases were spread among 63 defendants. There was no Superior Court this week.

"In a good week, if you try three jury cases, you've done well," Haigwood said. "In a good plea week, it's obvious what you can do."

The progress is relative, however, because new cases are bound over to Superior Court every week, cutting the net production.

"Many weeks (in Superior Court) ... you might only dispose of less than a dozen cases (because of the time involved in jury trials)," Haigwood said.

"During that same week you might take in 100 cases. So you take one step forward and three steps backward."

District Court case files are also stacked high.

Haigwood's office began last month with 2,481 cases pending — not including traffic cases, driving while impaired cases and minor infractions.

The county has been operating two District Courts in Greenville each day of the last week of the month to ease the caseload. But again, the progress is relative, Haigwood said, because each arrest made by law enforcement officers generates new cases.

In an average week in Pitt County arrests may generate 750 new cases.

Florida Soaks In Keith's Rains

By Pat Leisner
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TAMPA, Fla. — Tropical Storm Keith blustered ashore today, spawning tornadoes, flooding streets, knocking down power lines and forcing more than 600 people to evacuate, including residents of a nursing home.

A Pacific storm, meanwhile, pummelled Oregon with 75 mph winds and unleashed nearly 4 inches of rain Tuesday.

Florida residents and tourists generally dismissed Keith's 65 mph gusts and heavy rains as a nuisance, not a danger.

"We're treating it like a bad thunderstorm," said George Miller, manager of the Best Western Sea Wake Inn in Clearwater Beach.

Forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables said Keith's center made landfall shortly after 1 a.m. today near Sarasota, about 50 miles south of Tampa.

At 5 a.m., the storm was centered about 75 miles southwest of Orlando and was moving east-northeast at 15-20 mph. It was expected to move offshore in the Cape Canaveral area on the Atlantic Coast about midday.

The storm was expected to dump up to 5 inches of rain and bring tides 4 to 6 feet above normal.

A tropical storm warning was issued for the 250 miles from Cape Sable at the state's southwestern tip, north to Cedar Key on the Gulf Coast. Forecasters extended the warning late Tuesday to the Atlantic Coast from Jupiter Inlet, north of Palm Beach, to Savannah, Ga.

However, forecasters said a cold front from the north was mingling with Keith in the Gulf of Mexico and was expected to sap its strength. Tropical storms thrive on warm, moist air but the front was feeding cool, dry air into Keith, said hurricane specialist Bob Case.

Officials late Tuesday reported 250 residents of lowlying areas in the St. Petersburg area were in shelters; about 140 were in eight shelters in the Tampa Bay area and 147 were in four shelters in Clearwater, said Jeanne Ann Crutchfield, a spokeswoman for the American Red Cross in St. Petersburg.

Fewer than a dozen were at a shelter in Venice in Sarasota County and the 96 residents of Shore Acres Nursing Home in St. Petersburg Beach were taken to two other nursing homes because of a danger of flooding.

All three causeways connecting St. Petersburg and Tampa were closed late Tuesday because of high winds.

Caucasus Unrest Leaves 3 Soviet Soldiers Dead

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Three soldiers were killed and 126 people wounded in Azerbaijan when riots triggered by a territorial dispute with Armenia swept through two southern Soviet cities, an Azerbaijani official said today.

Musa Mamedov, chief of the information department of the Azerbaijan Foreign Ministry, said the violence occurred in the Azerbaijan cities of Nakhichevan and Kirovabad with the arrival of Interior Ministry troops on Tuesday.

"Three soldiers were killed, perhaps by stones, perhaps by sticks," Mamedov said in a telephone interview from Azerbaijan's capital, Baku. "A total of 126 people in the two cities were injured."

He said a state of emergency was proclaimed in the two cities.

The Caucasus region has been tense since February because of the territorial dispute between Azerbaijan and Armenia over Nagorno-Karabakh, a mostly Armenian region of Azerbaijan whose legislature has demanded unification with Armenia.

Mamedov said it was not known if ethnic Armenians who live in Nakhichevan and Kirovabad were among those injured. "Many Armenians live in Kirovabad, so it's possible they were among the victims," he said.

In February, anti-Armenian riots shook another Azerbaijan city, Sumgait, and Soviet officials said 32 people, among them 26 Armenians, were killed. Armenians claim the death toll was much higher.

Tens of thousands of Armenians massed in their capital, Yerevan, on Tuesday night and voted to form "self-defense squads" as initial news of the unrest in Azerbaijan became known in the city.

In Baku, thousands of Azerbaijanis were reported gathered in the main square today as round-the-clock, anti-Armenian protests there entered a fifth day. A reporter with official Azerbaijan television estimated the number of protesters at 800,000, almost half of Baku's population of 1.7 million.

The giant protests on Lenin Square were caused by news from Nagorno-Karabakh that Armenians were trying to increase the Armenian population of the Shusha district.

Settlers were reportedly taken to the area a week ago in official trucks, and began building barracks with materials supplied by the Armenian government, according to a correspondent of the official Azerbaijan news agency Azerinform, who spoke by telephone on condition of anonymity.

Official Baku Radio, monitored in London, reported that "indignant" residents of the Azerbaijani capital were holding non-stop rallies and demanding the imposition of "law and order" and an end to the building project in Nagorno-Karabakh.

Baku Radio said the Azerbaijani Council of Ministers ordered a halt to the "illegal construction" by Armenia of an aluminum plant at Topkhana near Shusha, which also included a cooperative boarding house for workers.

Ex-Ford Adviser Tapped By Bush

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President-elect George Bush today selected Brent Scowcroft, Gerald Ford's national security adviser, to fill the same position in the new administration.

Bush called Scowcroft, a retired Air Force lieutenant general, "a trusted friend" who "understands the White House, the way the Hill works and the intelligence community as well."

The vice president made the announcement before heading for his oceanside family retreat in Kennebunkport, Maine, for a five-day Thanksgiving vacation. Bush has suggested he will complete the naming of his Cabinet within a month.

"I will put together a strong national security team. Now with Brent Scowcroft at my side in the White House, we have taken a large step in that direction," Bush told reporters.

Scowcroft, 63, also served as an arms control adviser to President Jimmy Carter and headed a special commission in 1983 that studied basing of the MX nuclear missile.

No Visitors At Jail

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

This is the first Thanksgiving in many years that there will be no visitors for inmates in the Pitt County Jail.

The jail visiting hours recently were changed from Thursday and Sunday from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. to Saturday and Sunday from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. There will be no exception made for Thanksgiving, jailer Greg Beacham said.

The inmates won't have company on Thanksgiving, but they will have turkey and all the trimmings. Beacham expects the population of the jail to be about like it's been for some time now — high. And he expects no lapse during the holidays — about 100 is the number of turkey dinners he expects the jail cook to prepare.

The Greenville Police Department expects more activity during the holiday period beginning tonight; the Pitt County Sheriff Department, less.

Combined Performance

Fourth and fifth grade orchestra students at Wahl-Coates, Sadie Sautter, Elmhurst and South Greenville schools performed before an audience of parents and friends that filled the Wahl-Coates School auditorium Tuesday night and overflowed into the halls. The beginning students are directed by Joanne Moore.

Greenville residents for the next two academic years.

Ellen Bettis and Dennise Bright each received a $1,200 scholarship, while Bonnie Rogerson was given a $2,000 scholarship.

Miss Bettis is the daughter of John and Nancy Bettis, while Miss Bright is the daughter of Don C. and Mary E. Bright. Miss Rogerson is the daughter of J.B. and Sarah Rogerson.

Scholarship winners have maintained above-average grades in high school, have special leadership characteristics and have made outstanding contributions to the community. The money will help with tuition, room and board at the two-year liberal arts college for women.

Students Cook Dinner

Some first and second graders at Elmhurst School celebrated Thanksgiving with a home-cooked feast today. Parent volunteers provided the food, which included turkey and all the trimmings. Students prepared, cooked and ate the food at school.

The students also made costumes to wear to the feast. First graders dressed as Indians; second graders dressed as pilgrims.

Class Has Cajun Day

During their study of the southern United States, students in Bonita Spain's fifth grade at Belvoir Elementary School participated in Cajun Day. The students danced to jazz selections and sampled several Cajun dishes.

Autry Will Lead Chancellor's Forum

ECU NEWS BUREAU

George B. Autry, president of MDC Inc. in Chapel Hill, will be the lead speaker for the inaugural Chancellor's Forum on economic development at East Carolina University Jan. 3-4.

Autry is one of three nationally recognized leaders invited to participate in "Education and Economic Development in Eastern North Carolina: A Challenge for Public Schools, Community Colleges and Universities," sponsored by ECU and Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co.

Autry chairs the Southern Education Foundation's Task Force on Education and Economic Development and is a member of the editorial board of the "Forum for Applied Research and Public Policy."

A graduate of Duke University's law school, Autry began his public service career as a Richardson Foundation Congressional Fellow and later became chief counsel and staff director of the U.S. Senate Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights, chaired by Sen. Sam Ervin.

As chief executive officer of MDC Inc., Autry has devoted a large measure of his career to employee policy research. MDC's recent work includes the research projects, "Shadows in the Sunbelt," "Three Faces of Rural North Carolina" and "Meeting the Economic Challenge of the 1990s: Workforce Literacy in the South."

Autry will appear on the podium with John L. Clendenin, president of BellSouth Corp., Atlanta, and Phillip C. Schlechty, president of the Center for Leadership in School Reform, Louisville, Ky. More than 1,000 state and regional leaders from education, business and government have also been invited to attend.

The free, public forum will be held Jan. 3-4 at the Cynthia Mendenhall Student Center, East Carolina University.

Students Make Badges

Pactolus Elementary School celebrated American Education Week last week by making and wearing badges that read "Hand in Hand, We Make A Difference." Notes and gifts, such as mints and lollipops, were given to each staff member from the North Carolina Association of Educators. A banner recognizing support personnel was placed in the hall.

Cafeteria and administrative personnel were honored with doughnuts and muffins.

Convention Is Sunday

A baseball card and comic book convention will be held Sunday at Wayne Center, 200 West Chestnut St., Goldsboro. Admission is $1. For more information call 734-3131.

Williamston High Team Wins ECU Bowl Contest

ECU NEWS BUREAU

A total of $1,000 in scholarship awards were won by a team of Williamston High School students here Saturday after they compiled the top score in the final round of East Carolina University's first ECU Bowl.

Competing in the single-elimination academic quiz event were teams from eight eastern North Carolina high schools. In a format adapted from the televised "GE College Bowl" program, the teams were matched against each other in rounds of questions from the arts, science, literature, current events, sports and other fields. Score points were awarded for each correct answer.

The winning team, coached by teachers Mollie Manning and Sudie Reason, included Kathy Hill, Uma Mantravadi, Derek Roberson, Greg Roney and Jeffrey Williams. Each student won a $200 award, and the school will receive an engraved plaque to display for one year.

The ECU Bowl is a project of the Pitt County chapter of the ECU Alumni Association, with sponsorship by Burroughs Wellcome, Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co., the University Book Exchange, Wachovia Bank, Carolina Dairies and WDLX-FM Radio.

The participating schools, randomly selected from schools who responded to invitations to apply, were Bertie High School, Windsor; Conley High School, Greenville; Greene Central High School, Snow Hill; North Lenoir High School, La Grange; Southwest High School, Jacksonville; Tarboro High School; and Washington High School, as well as Williamston High.

The day's agenda included campus tours, a lunch for teams and coaches and a post-tournament reception.

Judges, moderators and scorers were Dr. William Bloodworth, acting vice chancellor at ECU; ECU alumni Shelly Basnight and Jerry Beckman; Greenville attorney DeWitt McCarter; Dr. David Sanders, director of the ECU honors program; Dr. Helen Grove, dean of the ECU School of Home Economics; Kenneth Hammond, associate director of University Unions at ECU; and Drs. Marie Farr and Lawrence Hough of the ECU faculty.

Names of other local participants and coaches are listed according to county and home town.

Beaufort County, Washington — Washington High: Donald Alligood, Karen Brothers, Martha Harris and Daniel Turner. Don Miller — coach; Ruth Rowland and Kemp Huss, assistant coaches; Greene County, Snow Hill — Greene Central High: David Beaman, Jeffrey Bottoms, Heather Carraway and Amy Clayborne. Myrle Tyndall — coach; Andrea Norris and Barbara Small, assistant coaches, and Pitt County, Greenville — Conley High: Scott Claybrook, Jeff Denton, Chad Dickerson and Bill Wainwright. Christine Waters — coach; Jena Kerns and Dora Snow, assistant coaches.

Searches Begin

East Carolina University has launched national searches for candidates to succeed two vice chancellors.

Clifton G. Moore, vice chancellor for business affairs, and Dr. William E. Laupus, vice chancellor for health sciences, have announced plans to retire at the end of the current academic year. Laupus earlier this year relinquished his post as dean of the school of medicine.

Dr. Richard R. Eakin, ECU chancellor, has appointed search committees which will advertise nationally, screen candidates and recommend three candidates, unranked, for on-campus interviews in March. Eakin said he hopes the searches can be concluded by mid-April and that the new officials will assume duties by July 1.

Richard A. Edwards, executive assistant to the chancellor, will chair the search committee for vice chancellor-business affairs. Dr. Ronald Thiele, dean of the school of allied health sciences, will chair the committee to recommend candidates for vice chancellor for health sciences.

Article Dedicated

A history professor at East Carolina University has dedicated an article published in a scholarly journal to a colleague, Dr. Wilkins B. Winn, who died a year ago while attending a professional meeting.

The article, "The Schools of Brandenburg and the Second Reformation: Centers of Calvinist Learning and Propaganda," is published in CALVINIANA: Ideas and Influence of Jean Calvin, of the Sixteenth Century Essays and Studies series, volume 10, Kirksville, Mo.

The author is Dr. Bodo Nischan, professor of history and a noted Reformation scholar.

Winn, also a history professor, died Oct. 30, 1987, at the annual convention of the Social Science History Association in New Orleans. He had been scheduled to deliver a paper at the meeting.

Holiday Activities

The Pitt-Greenville Arts Council will sponsor holiday activities and celebration Dec. 3 starting at 2 p.m. at Jaycee Park Auditorium for children ages 4-9.

Planned activities are Christmas crafts including puppets and ornaments in addition to music, entertainment and refreshments.

Interested parents should make reservations for their children by Monday by calling 757-1785. Admission is $3 per child.

In The Area

ECU Plans Programs

A series of public programs on the 1990 minimum admission requirements for University of North Carolina system campuses will be presented this winter by East Carolina University on behalf of the UNC administration.
 The programs are should benefit families whose children are now in grades 7-10, said Susan Clarke Smith, acting associate director of admissions at ECU.
 The program will be presented Tuesday in Hendrix Theater of the Mendenhall Student Center, ECU; in Bethel in the North Pitt High School auditorium Dec. 5, and in Washington, N.C., Dec. 7 in the Beaufort County Community College Learning Resources Building. The programs begin at 7:30 p.m.
 More information about the programs is available from the ECU Admissions Office, telephone 757-6640.

Commissioners will meet with members of the Greenville City Council at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Ramada Inn to discuss items of mutual interest, among them the Medical Park district and recycling efforts.

Survivors Association

The North Carolina chapter of the Pearl Harbor Survivors Association will meet Saturday at the Holiday Inn on Memorial Drive.
 The business meeting begins at 4 p.m., a Dutch treat banquet at 7 p.m.

Town Hall To Close

The Winterville Town Hall will close Thursday and Friday to observe Thanksgiving.
 According to Town Clerk Elwood Nobles, garbage pick-up will be made Friday. The office will resume normal hours Monday.

Dr. Good Certified

The American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology Inc. recently announced that Dr. Kevin S. Good completed requirements for certification in neurology.
 A native of St. Clair Shores, Mich., he attended Hillsdale College in Michigan and the East Central University School of Medicine in the Dominican Republic.
 Good joined Eastern Carolina Neurological Associates in August 1987. His wife, Dr. Celeste Good, is finishing residency training in psychiatry at East Carolina University.

Board Meets Monday

The Pitt County board of Commissioners will meet Monday at 9 a.m. at the county office building at 1717 W. Fifth St.
 The regular third-Monday session postponed from Nov. 21 because several members were attending a commissioners school at Nags Head.
 Items on Monday's agenda include a request from the Town of Winterville, which wants to ask the Department of Transportation to install a traffic light at the intersection of N.C. 11 and N.C. 903.
 The board has also scheduled a reception at 4:30 p.m. Monday to honor Bruce Strickland, who will retire on Dec. 5 after 28 years as a county commissioner.

No Dead End

Keep Progress On Streets Moving

A city's streets are arteries that serve as lifelines, keeping business flowing to its heart. When these arteries are dysfunctional, growth ceases.

That's why a proposal to extend Arlington Boulevard from Red Banks Road to connect with state road 1725 south of Bell's Fork is a project that should be applauded and vigorously pursued by city and county leaders.

Anybody who navigates the area southeast of Greenville near Bell's Fork knows traffic is no laughing matter there. Growth in that area has far exceeded the capabilities of the highways, roads and streets that serve it. Drivers on their way to and from work must endure unreasonable waits at Bell's Fork — an intersection that growth and traffic have made obsolete and hazardous, despite some re-engineering and two traffic lights.

Add to that snarl residents who live on the southwest side of town seeking an alternate to Greenville Boulevard to get to the southeast area, and the situation becomes unmanageable. It gets no better toward town, where Red Banks Road and 14th Street carry unbelievable amounts of traffic.

And the routes are not only inconvenient, they are dangerous. At the Bell's Fork intersection, cars waiting for the light pile up north and south form long lines that can catch a driver traveling 55 miles per hour — the posted speed limit — totally unaware. In addition, drivers trying to beat the light or oncoming traffic at this slow, confusing intersection often make poor decisions. The result is accidents and injuries, and further delays.

Extending Arlington can ease some of these pressures. For those leaving Brook Valley and heading into town, it can provide an alternate route to state road 1725, which feeds through Bell's Fork. The new construction would also add a badly-needed additional southern transportation route for the city.

While the routes of large thoroughfares like Arlington Boulevard should not be amended capriciously, this change is a necessary one. Greenville's thoroughfare plan is a chart of its transportation needs. Such a chart should be broad enough and flexible enough to respond to the pressures changing demographics put on roadways and travel patterns.

The traffic problems southeast of Greenville are not just the city's predicament. Many of the motorists clogging the roads in this area are commuters from the county. While they don't live in Greenville, they work there and use its thoroughfares. That makes the snarl a shared responsibility.

Growth to the south won't end. It probably won't even slow down. Money and manpower must be committed to providing adequate roads to support this growth. Extending Arlington is an important first step, but the work to better transportation routes shouldn't dead end there.

A Generous Serving Of Pleasure

BOSTON — They will celebrate Thanksgiving the way they always do, in the Oral Tradition. Equal parts of food and conversation. A cornucopia of family.

These are not restrained people who choose their words and pick at their stuffing. These are people who have most of their meals in small, chicken-sized households. But when they come together, they feast on the sounds as well as tastes of a turkey-sized family.

Indeed, their Thanksgiving celebrations are as crowded with stories as their tables are with chairs. Arms reach indecately across each other for second helpings, voices interrupt to add relish to a story. And there are always leftovers too enormous to complete, that have to be wrapped up and preserved.

But what is it that makes this collection of people a family? How do we make a family these days? With blood? With marriage? With affection? I wonder about this when I hear the word "family" added to some politician's speech like gravy poured over the entire plate. The meaning is supposed to be obvious, self-evident. It is assumed that when we talk about family we are all talking about the same thing. That families are the same. But it's not that simple.

For the past eight years, the chief defender of the American family has lived in the White House. But Reagan's own family has always looked more like our contemporary reality than his traditional image. There has been marriage and divorce among the Reagans, adoption and blending, and more than one estrangement. There is a mother, this holiday season, who hasn't talked to her daughter for over a year.

The man who will take his place as head of this family ideology has wrapped himself in a grandfatherly image. Yet Bush's family is also extended in ways that are common but not always comforting to other Americans.

We hold onto a particular primal image of families — human beings created from the same genetic code, living in the same area code. We hold onto an image of THE family as something rooted and stable. But that has always been rare in a country where freedom is another word for mobility, both emotional and physical.

In America, families are spliced and recombined in as many ways as DNA. Every year our Thanksgiving tables expand and contract, place settings are removed and added. A guest last year is a member this year. A member last year may be an awkward outsider this year. How many of our children travel between alienated halves of their heritage, between two sets of people who share custody of their holidays.

Even among those families we call stable or intact, the ride to the airport has become a holiday ritual as common as pumpkin pie. Many parents come from retirement homes, many children from college, many cousins from jobs in other zip codes. We retrieve these people, as if from a memory hole, for reunions.

What then makes a family, in the face of all this "freedom"? It is said that people don't choose their parents. Or their aunts and uncles. But in a sense Americans do choose to MAKE a family out of these people. We make room for them in our lives, choose to be with them and preserve that choice through a ritual as simple as passing seconds at a table.

All real families are made over time and through tradition. The Oral Tradition. We create a shared treasure trove of history, memories, conversation. Equal parts of food and conversation. And a generous serving of pleasure in each other's company.

Blood, Sweat & Voodoo Economics

Art Buchwald

One of the ironies of the post-election season is that many of George Bush's strongest supporters are beginning to doubt his policies. This is odd since he doesn't have any yet.

Wall Street stands out as a case in point. Last month almost everyone was rooting for the Vice President and his brilliant sidekick, Dan Quayle. Now it's another story.

I talked to Thomas Fernando, a hot-shot broker who specializes in reading George Bush's lips.

When the market kept skiing downhill I put the question to Thomas, "Why have America's investors lost faith in George?"

"They haven't lost faith. They just think he's a disaster," he told me. "Wall Street doesn't believe that Bush has what it takes to lick the deficit. When it comes to solving budget problems, he looks like a man up the Boston Harbor without a paddle. Since we have no idea what his intentions are, we're recommending our customers sell instead of buy."

"What does George say?" I asked.

"Every time I read his lips he keeps talking about what a great family he has. This doesn't make for a bullish stock market. We want his lips to tell us what he plans to do about the yen."

"But he hasn't even slept in the Oval Office yet," I protested. "I'm sure he has a plan. No politician would dare ask the American people to elect him President if he couldn't cut the deficit."

"Don't bet on it. Some people want that office so badly they would even advocate a flexible budget."

"I know deficits are not to be sneezed at. At the same time, we had this debt for eight years and it never fazed Ronald Reagan."

"That was Ronald Reagan. He never had to admit to anything. But George Bush is a different kettle of fish. Wall Street expects signals from Bush that can be read by the average investor."

"If Wall Street has no faith in Bush, why did they vote for him?"

"Because he promised that Willie Horton would never get a weekend furlough again."

"What did Willie Horton have to do with the deficit?"

"Not much, but it impressed Wall Street that George Bush was interested in the little picture as well as the big one. What we didn't know was that he was dead set against asking for new taxes and cutting back on defense spending — which are only two ways you can cut the deficit."

"Bush made no secret that he was against taxes and defense cuts," I said.

"Maybe he spoke about it, but it never got on the evening news. In any case, what we're dealing with on Wall Street right now is a lack of confidence in Bush and Quayle which is knocking the hell out of soybeans."

"When will the market stop sliding?"

"When George and Dan take off their suit jackets and say, 'Gee whiz, guys, we have a problem here. Let's tackle this job with a will and a smile.'"

"Is that the only sign Wall Street needs?"

"Bush must also level with this country and tell us that all he can offer for the next four years is blood, sweat and voodoo economics."

The Democrats Can't Blame Their Troubles On Blacks

WASHINGTON — One of the more interesting facts of the recent election is the extent to which white America rejects the left-leaning "black agenda." One of the more ironic facts is that there isn't any left-leaning black agenda, and for a simple reason: There isn't any black agenda.

William Raspberry

That, I hasten to point out, is my own lonely view. Nearly everyone else seems to know otherwise. White voters, and particularly Democrats, seemed particularly concerned to guard having their party yield too much ground to the black agenda. Black voters were afraid of death that, in the give and take of post-primary politics, the black agenda would get lost.

Yet if you had asked these black voters to make a list of the items on this supposed agenda, most of the lists would have ended after Item No. 1: Affirmative action. "I know what's on the agenda," they might have told you, "but it has slipped my mind."

But they would have had no doubt as to the existence of the agenda. Indeed, the assumption of the agenda was one of the reasons (aside from the chance to be a part of political history) why blacks were so enthusiastic for the candidacy of Jesse Jackson.

Jackson might not win the nomination, they reasoned, but if we make him the repository for our growing political strength, he will be able to force attention to the black agenda at the Democratic Convention. They know it didn't work. But the usual explanation for the failure is that the party ignored the black agenda, not that there was no agenda to begin with.

Surprisingly enough, Jackson himself denies the existence of any peculiarly black agenda.

"When I raised the question of common ground," he told me the other day, "I was trying to make the point that there's nothing black about the issues we were pushing: fair prices for farmers, an increase in the minimum wage, doing something about unfair foreign competition, changing the welfare system with incentives to earn and learn, to stop drugs from coming in and jobs from going out. Whites as well as blacks said 'amen' to all these things."

Not only is their nothing peculiarly black about that list; it's not even particularly leftist.

What made it black — and left — in the public perception was that it was espoused by Jackson, who has been successfully labeled a leftist.

The fact is that most of Jackson's positions — except for affirmative action, which he insists is a remedy ordered by the courts for historic discrimination — have been well within the political mainstream, and even conservative.

He was making the rounds of inner-city high schools a dozen years ago to urge black youngsters to strive for academic excellence, to eschew drugs and to have done with boisterous behavior and conduct. His language was conspiratorial (and, for that reason, effective). But the substance of his message was hardly different from that of Joe Clark, the New Jersey high-school principal who became the darling of conservatives by urging the same things.

The first time he went to jail as a civil-rights protester, he said, was during his efforts to desegregate a restaurant. "That was about equal opportunity, not radicalism. The second time I went to jail was for picketing a construction company for denying work to blacks. I wasn't fighting for welfare but for work."

Even in the recent campaign, he says, he worked to move the Democratic Party toward the political center. "I embraced the flag. I spoke of personal obligations and self-reliance. I preached against drugs — from the supply side as well as the demand side. I insisted on the need for blacks, as the biggest victims of crime, to take a stand against crime and criminals. I talked about the need to change the welfare system so that people would be encouraged to learn and earn and husbands would be encouraged to come back home."

His main difference with present-day conservatives, he insists, was his call for a greater government role in addressing social problems. "But demanding that the government undertake its duty to protect and serve is not a left-wing position."

So why is Jackson so widely viewed as a political radical?

"It's just another stereotype, and stereotypes are one of the most difficult walls to knock down. In the media, we were hit by five stereotypes: that we are less intelligent, less hard-working, less universal in our perspective, less patriotic, and more violent.

'If the Democratic Party is slipping into irrelevance in presidential politics, it is because it no longer has a core of beliefs it is willing to stand up for ...'

"Calling me a leftist is just another way of saying 'nigger.'"

Yet, because he is viewed as left-wing, and because he is presumed to advocate some black agenda, Jackson — and the blacks who support him with such enthusiasm — is seen as nudging his party away from the American mainstream and into political irrelevance.

If the Democratic Party is slipping into irrelevance in presidential politics, it is because it no longer has a core of beliefs it is willing to stand up for — not because of Jackson and some imagined radical black agenda.

Foreign 'Voters' Got Their Man; Now He's Getting A Message

Susan Irving
& Joseph Rieser

Europeans have always wanted to vote in U.S. elections. This year, while millions of Americans stayed home, Europeans along with the Japanese voted for George Bush — with their money and through their central banks.

On Friday, Nov. 11, the Dow fell nearly 47 points to end election week 78.47 points below its pre-election level. That was the steepest election-week decline since Harry S. Truman's election in 1948. But, whereas Wall Street had opposed Truman and expected him to lose, Wall Street had supported George Bush. What happened?

The decline is widely blamed on the dollar, which fell 2.5 percent against the yen and 3 percent against the deutsche mark in the three days after the election. In turn, that decline was blamed on "concern" over whether Bush would be able to reduce the deficit, given his no-tax pledge.

That makes no sense at all unless foreign central banks and foreign investors were intentionally suspending judgment during the fall.

After all, there were no post-election surprises. The deficit numbers did not worsen significantly in the days immediately after the election. The arithmetic of the budget is not new. And Bush's "read my lips" pledge against a tax increase was certainly not new. Candidate Bush and President-elect Bush have been quite explicit: no gas-tax increase, no excise-tax increases, no oil-import fee, no tax increase, no new taxes. There may have been uncertainty about many things during the campaign, and there were areas about which the president-elect said little specific, but the question of a tax increase was not one of them.

The budget numbers are equally clear. The Bush "flexible freeze" assumes that spending growth can be held to $162 billion between now and 1993. Bush's promises of "no change in Social Security" and of inflation-only growth in defense together eat up $119 billion of that. To make the flexible freeze work means that everything else together can grow by only $43 billion. That will be hard; under current law Medicare alone will grow by nearly $50 billion. And interest rates have been rising, not falling, recently.

From where comes the money for a "kinder, gentler nation"? These numbers tell most of us that the "flexible freeze" will not work. None of these numbers are new. There is no reason for the calculation to be a surprise.

Are we to believe that observant foreigners, who watch every economic indicator in the United States, became aware of those facts suddenly on Nov. 9 or 10? It strains credulity. No, the logical explanation is intent.

If the Dow and the dollar had fallen six months into President Bush's term of office, we might believe that investor and central-bank actions reflected disappointment at the failure to act on the budget deficit. But to say that these actors expected action on the deficit between Nov. 8 and Nov. 10 is absurd.

During the early fall, foreign investors and foreign central banks acted to maintain calm in the financial markets. Their post-election actions bring home the underlying vulnerabilities in the U.S. economy, but their pre-election posture was designed not to raise that issue. They did not want to unsettle the American perception of peace, prosperity and economic health. Perhaps they would say that they were staying out of the campaign, that by suspending judgment and maintaining calm they avoided the debate.

That claim is disingenuous. The underlying imbalances and vulnerabilities to which the Democrats pointed were there, and recent actions show that those imbalances cause concern. By choosing to act as if they were not concerned, foreign investors and central banks voted as surely as did any U.S. citizen.

These "voters" carried more clout than the individual citizen, but we have only our own policies to blame. We have spent more than we produce, and we have borrowed abroad to make up the difference. Our foreign debt is now nearly $400 billion; we are dependent on foreign capital to fund 40 percent of our budget deficit.

Last week was a warning shot across the bow. Having voted, the Western industrial democracies wanted to tell (or remind) their chosen — and successful — candidate what they expect from him. We used to call this kind of thing a political deal. Today, because we believe that it is in the nation's interest for the new president to respond, we are more discreet. Let us support the message demanding action that foreign investors are sending, but let us remember the earlier vote as well as the current message.

Susan J. Irving is a lecturer in public policy at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government; Joseph A. Rieser Jr. is an attorney in private practice in Washington.

Soviets Test 'New Thinking' In Mideast Policy

David Remnick

MOSCOW — The "new thinking" in Soviet foreign policy under Mikhail Gorbachev has rarely been more vivid than in the way Moscow is now maneuvering in the Middle East.

When the Palestine National Council proclaimed an independent Palestinian state in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip last week, the Kremlin's response — consisting of a brief written statement and a hurried news conference — spoke volumes about Gorbachev's approach to the world.

Although the Soviets have made it clear that they favor the eventual establishment of a Palestinian state in the occupied territories, First Deputy Foreign Minister Alexander Bessmertnykh used an artfully vague formulation that appeared intended to placate not only the Palestinians but also Yitzhak Shamir, the conservative Likud leader who is to form the next Israeli government.

The statement avoided an overt, immediate diplomatic endorsement of a Palestinian state and referred to the necessity of both a Palestinian "fatherland" and "reliable security" for the Israelis.

"That statement was an extraordinary study in balance and sophisticated language. It's never been this way before in Soviet foreign policy," said Galia Golan, a professor at Hebrew University in Jerusalem and a specialist on Soviet Middle East policy.

"The way Gorbachev is trying to balance interests in the Middle East is part of an overall strategy that you can find in his policies on Angola, Cambodia, China, the Pacific, the Persian Gulf, South America, Western Europe. All over, really. You don't have to have stars in your eyes to understand that the Soviets these days are after stability, quiet and reduced tensions."

Since coming to power in March 1985, Gorbachev has steadily shifted the trend of Soviet foreign policy away from the ideological mode of Leonid Brezhnev's years to what Golan called "a broadening of options." To rebuild an economy that has suffered from decades of centralization, bureaucracy and decay, Gorbachev cannot afford disastrous entanglements such as the war in Afghanistan.

In the 1970s, Moscow tried and failed to organize a unified bloc of radical states in the Middle East and elsewhere. Under Gorbachev, the Kremlin has eliminated much of that ideological freight, moving quickly to improve ties with what it considers "conservative" states, such as Egypt, Jordan, Oman, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, North Yemen, Iran and Iraq.

The Soviet Union also has been trying to establish closer relations with the Israelis. The Kremlin severed diplomatic ties with Tel Aviv following the 1967 six-day war.

When it comes to Israel, Gorbachev seems determined. Last February, at the height of the Palestinian uprising in the West Bank, Moscow announced that it would allow a delegation of Israeli diplomats to visit Moscow. Since July, the Israelis have been meeting with Soviet officials in talks that western and Soviet analysts here agree could be a prelude to renewed diplomatic relations.

Gorbachev also has pleased the Israelis in the past year by increasing the flow of Jewish emigration to more than 20,000 in 1988.

In contrast, Gorbachev has kept a distance between himself and two ostensible allies, Syrian President Hafez Assad and Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat.

Moscow continues to supply Syria with arms but has not provided the means for the country to achieve strategic balance with Israel. Gorbachev also took the occasion of Assad's visit to Moscow to say that the lack of diplomatic relations between the Soviet Union and Israel "cannot be considered normal."

Arafat's only trips to Moscow during Gorbachev's tenure have been ceremonial: the funeral of Konstantin Chernenko and the celebration last year of the 70th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution. At that celebration, Arafat was received at the airport not by a high-ranking delegation but by a cosmonaut. The PLO leader was given only a 10-minute meeting with Gorbachev. Arafat eventually walked out during Gorbachev's speech.

After Brezhnev spent years of fruitlessly relying on a radical bloc in the Middle East to take hold, Gorbachev now is in position to be a crucial player in a future regional settlement.

Next month, Gorbachev is to meet with President-elect George Bush, and American analysts here predict that the Soviet leader will take credit for pushing the PLO into more moderate positions and will urge Bush to help bring the Israelis to an international peace conference. Shamir has said that he will not participate in a conference at which the occupied territories are at issue.

While much attention is focused on whether the American side will press Shamir into easing his objections to an international conference, the Soviets, too, can influence the new Israeli government, diplomats here said.

But even if, in the immediate future, there is no resolution of the Palestinian question, Gorbachev's "new thinking" in Middle East policy, and in other regions as well, has been essential in the rise of improved U.S.-Soviet relations.

"Gorbachev's Middle East policy is crucial to stabilizing East-West relations," said Judith Kipper, a Middle East scholar at the Council on Foreign Relations. "During the (1967) Yom Kippur war, the U.S. was on nuclear alert and the Soviets threatened intervention. The memories of those days are still alive on both sides. Flexibility now means everything."

IN THE STATE

Reward

RALEIGH (AP) — The state is offering a reward of up to $5,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or people responsible for the death of Johnny Clark Jones of Polkton.

Jones, 35, was found dead in his burning pickup truck on Oct. 16. An autopsy showed that he had died of a shotgun blast to the head.

The investigation is being handled by the Anson County Sheriff's Department and the State Bureau of Investigation.

The Southeast Dairy Foods Research Center will be housed within the N.C. State Department of Food Science.

The National Dairy Promotion and Research Board picked N.C. State as a center site last year. The board is providing $2 million over a five-year period to fund the center. Additional funding is being provided by the Southern United Dairy Industry Association, the N.C. Dairy Foundation and Miles Inc.

Bear Parts

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Five people pleaded guilty in federal court Tuesday to charges of bear poaching and the illegal sale of bear parts.

The five were among 43 people charged in a roundup Aug. 23 dubbed "Operation Smoky." The campaign nabbed people in western North Carolina and east Tennessee and is the largest federal investigation of its type, wildlife agents have said.

Many of the arrests stemmed from the selling of bear gallbladders, claws, teeth, heads, hides and pads. On the Oriental market, powdered bear bladder can bring $540 an ounce and more. The powder, diluted with liquor, supposedly makes an effective aphrodisiac.

Shooting Charge

CLINTON, N.C. (AP) — A Bladen County man was charged with murder Tuesday in connection with a weekend shooting at a nightclub in Sampson County, authorities said.

Norman Wilford Browne, 37, of Elizabethtown was held without bail in the Sampson County Jail after he was charged with the fatal shooting of Charles Lamb Jr., 34, of Garland, according to Sampson County sheriff's detective James Barefoot.

Browne is charged with shooting Lamb and two other men at the Vernon Crumpler Club south of the In-gold community late Sunday night, Barefoot said.

Parolee Wanted

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A convicted murderer paroled last month after 5½ years in prison is wanted in another killing that occurred 27 days after he got out, Charlotte police say.

Police are trying to locate Jerry Desmond Streater, 28, of Charlotte. They have a murder warrant against him in the killing of Michael Angelo Mack. Witnesses told police that Mack, 29, of Charlotte was shot in the back Oct. 26 during an argument over drugs.

He died four days later.

No Change

LILLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — The Harnett County Board of Commissioners has refused to change the way its members are elected, despite a request for the change to make it easier for blacks to elect county government representatives of their choice.

Without comment or discussion, the five white board members unanimously adopted a resolution saying "No action shall be taken as requested to change the method of election of commissioners."

The resolution said the board, county manager and county attorney completed an in-depth and thorough review of request and determined that the present election method was legally established, complies with state law, does not violate the Voting Rights Act of 1965 and was cleared by the U.S. Justice Department in 1987.

Refund Sought

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — The Cumberland County Board of Commissioners is asking Sheriff Morris Bedsole to return to the county more than $2,800 in salary and travel reimbursements paid to a deputy who delivered invitations to a luncheon for state Attorney General Lacy Thornburg held in October.

The board voted 4-1 to request the money after Bedsole refused to attend a meeting to answer questions about the issue.

County Attorney G.B. Johnson said the county cannot force Bedsole to repay the money but could take court action if Bedsole refuses.

Manager Fired

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — Lee County Manager James W. Mills Sr. has been fired in a move two county commissioners called "a black eye" and "an embarrassment" to the county.

Mills, who has held the county's top administrative spot since January 1987, was relieved immediately of his duties after the 3-2 vote Monday night. The firing followed a closed-door executive session after a regular meeting of the Board of County Commissioners.

Mills, 58, said he had no warning of the action.

"I was very surprised, stunned," he said. "But when you work at the pleasure of the board, you have no security."

Machines Illegal

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Coin-operated video poker machines are illegal and are subject to seizure and destruction by state and local law enforcement officers, the State Attorney General's Office has ruled.

The opinion received by Neill Monroe, chief of law enforcement for the Cumberland County Alcoholic Beverage Control system, and Fayetteville Police Chief Ron Hansen, was issued at the request of the lawmen. They said their request was prompted by a number of complaints.

Associate Attorney General David Hoke said the machines apparently are illegal even if no money is wagered or offered by the machine's owner.

Monroe said a number of taverns and other establishments that sell malt beverages, liquor or wine are being told of the opinion, and he and Hansen said in a joint announcement that they hope for voluntary compliance.

Center Opened

RALEIGH (AP) — A regional dairy research center, one of six to be established nationwide, was opened Tuesday at North Carolina State University.

Martin May Call Special Legislative Session To Deal With Early Releases

Governor Upset Over Short Terms For Convicted Drug Traffickers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Martin, shocked over the parole of a drug dealer who served just three years of a 35-year sentence, will decide next week whether to call an emergency session of the General Assembly to lift the limit on the number of convicts who may be held in state prisons, officials say.

Martin has discussed the possibility of an emergency session with Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, Attorney General Lacy Thornburg, House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, state Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, and several officials in the state Department of Correction.

Martin, attending a meeting of Republican governors in Alabama, could not be reached for comment Tuesday. But his chief of staff, Phil Kirk, said Tuesday the governor will announce his decision next week.

Three days before the election, the state Democratic Party revealed that Phillip Henry Barfield, sentenced after being caught with a pound of cocaine and firearms, had been paroled under early-release guidelines Oct. 24 after serving 8 percent of his sentence. Martin campaigned on the theme of tougher sentences for drug pushers and no early parole.

The legislature set a cap on the prison population and mandated early-release efforts in 1987 to help the state avoid a federal takeover of its prison system in the wake of lawsuits over crowded conditions. The legislation allows prisoners to be considered for early parole when the prison population climbs above a prescribed ceiling for 15 straight days.

Such conditions have existed since Oct. 19, when the fifth prison-emergency was declared since the law took effect.

Kirk said the number of prisoners appropriate for early parole has been severely reduced.

"The governor feels we may not be able to wait to seek relief," Kirk said. "That's why he's looking very seriously at calling a special session."

"He is concerned about the dwindling number of prospects that can be let out with a good clear conscience," Kirk said.

The prison population cap, adopted at the governor's request, says when the population at the 87 units exceeds 17,460 for 15 consecutive days, the N.C. Parole Commission must take steps to reduce the prison population to 17,280 within 60 days.

It was adopted to help North Carolina avoid the federal courts from taking control of the prison system in the wake of several lawsuits by prisoners alleging inhumane conditions at the crowded prisons.

The most recent emergency was called Oct. 19, and the deadline for cutting the prison population is Dec. 17. As of Tuesday, the prison population was 17,903 — 623 more than the goal.

The 1989 General Assembly is to convene Jan. 11.

The Constitution empowers the governor to call the legislature into special session. There has been one special session during Martin's first term — in 1986, a single day to pass laws to help the state insurance commissioner deal with the liability insurance crisis.

Kirk said Sam Wilson, Martin's parole board chairman, told Martin he had just about exhausted the number of prisoners appropriate for early parole — those who would not be considered threats to society.

Ramsey said Martin talked with him last week about the possibility of a special session.

"He didn't say definitely," Ramsey said. "He said he was thinking about it and said he was going to talk to some other people."

Ramsey noted that at any given time, the prison population includes about 2,500 convicts sentenced on misdemeanor charges — less serious crimes with shorter sentences — who are eligible for parole under the population limit law.

"I see in the paper where they've been paroling drug dealers," Ramsey said. "I don't know why they're not letting out misdemeanants rather than drug dealers. Wouldn't it be better to let out misdemeanants than drug pushers?"

He said the legislature would be able to take up the issue when it convenes in January. Ramsey also noted that the prison population limit expires June 30, 1989, and can only be continued if the General Assembly passes a new law.

Federal Judge Says State Hospitals Violating Retarded Citizens' Rights

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — State Human Resources Secretary David Flaherty has been ordered to improve the treatment of as many as 400 mentally retarded citizens who are confined in North Carolina's psychiatric hospitals.

U.S. District Judge James McMillan has ruled that the retarded citizens' constitutional rights are being violated.

In a 68-page ruling issued Monday, McMillan concluded that conditions and services for mentally retarded patients at the state mental institutions are "substantially below minimally accepted professional standards; they include major violations of very basic human treatment standards."

Many mentally retarded patients, McMillan wrote, "are subjected to inhumane living conditions ... including overcrowding, total lack of personal space and privacy, inadequate furnishings and clothing, aesthetically barren physical surroundings and endless days of boredom without variation."

"Many of the plaintiffs have no diagnosis of mental illness, yet they are placed in facilities for the mentally ill ...," McMillan wrote. "The state has chosen not to make appropriate alternatives available."

The Secretary's agents admit that many class members have been hospitalized much longer than is appropriate for them and that many others should not be there at all," McMillan wrote.

The judge ordered Flaherty to take steps to see that the mentally retarded get treatment consistent with his ruling. The order also requires the treatment be monitored and that Flaherty submit periodic reports to the court detailing progress in furnishing that treatment.

McMillan cited several cases: — Mary W., who has been in restraints almost constantly since the 1940s.

"For decades and continuing to the present, she has been restrained for all of her waking hours," McMillan wrote. "The records do not reveal that behavior training was ever considered or tried to help her stop trying to hit herself."

"In 1975, a doctor recommended fitting her with boxing gloves so she would not injure herself with her hands. However, gloves were never even tried because she had no money in her account." — William D., who was admitted to Broughton Hospital in 1958.

"He was able to speak and make statements to the hospital interviewer when he was admitted," the judge wrote. "By 1985, however, Mr. D. had regressed to the point that he was considered to be nonverbal, and efforts to find a community placement for him were terminated."

— Danny W., who is blind and mentally retarded and also confined to Broughton. "He engages in self-abusive behavior. He bites his hand ...," McMillan wrote. "He sits in a wheelchair on a very handicapped ward with very little to do. He has not been given any sort of habilitation."

McMillan said that many of the mentally retarded have little or no social interaction.

"Many are desperate for the attention and affection which they are not getting in the institution ...," he wrote. "State psychiatric institutions are like ghettos for persons with mental handicaps."

Charlotte lawyer Edward Connette, who represents the mentally retarded citizens, hailed McMillan's ruling.

"I'm thrilled," Connette said. "The decision requires the state to give mentally retarded adults in state hospitals humane treatment required by the United States Constitution."

Ohio Men Will Get Fifth Trial

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. — Two Ohio men accused of killing a Waynesville security guard 10 years ago will stand trial for the fifth time early next year.

The retrial follows a decision earlier this month by state Supreme Court justices to dismiss the defendants' appeal rather than the charges against them.

Assistant Attorney General Bill Hart, who prosecuted the case last January against Mitchell Pakulski and Elliott Rowe, said Tuesday he would schedule their fifth trial for January or February.

"I think the state deserves one more chance at trying the case," Hart said from Raleigh. "It will be at least January, and it could be into February."

The defendants' retrial had been scheduled originally for April 18 before defense motions filed in March.

Last February, a Haywood County jury failed to reach a verdict after four weeks of testimony. Six hours of deliberation ended in a 6-6 deadlock in Haywood County Superior Court.

Defense attorneys immediately asked the Supreme Court for a dismissal, saying that another trial constituted double jeopardy. Supreme Court justices disagreed, and dismissed the appeal Nov. 3.

The men were convicted in October 1984 after two hung juries earlier that year. Three years later, the state Supreme Court overturned the conviction, ruling that the McDowell County jury had been improperly instructed.

Pakulski and Rowe maintain that they were in Ohio the September 1978 weekend that Willard Setzer was killed in Waynesville.

Nursing Students Find Jobs Fair Virtual Gold Mine

By Paul Nowell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — Suzanne Abate, a senior nursing student at the University of North Carolina-Charlotte, admitted she was enjoying the attention she was getting from recruiters.

"I came to see what all the different hospitals have to offer," she said at a job fair for nursing students Monday at UNCC. "It's nice to feel wanted."

When Ms. Abate switched her major from business to nursing, she didn't anticipate that she would be in such demand. Based on the more than 80 hospitals and other employers who sent recruiters to the job fair, however, it appears she made a wise business decision.

"From what I hear, nursing (salaries and benefits) are getting better and better each day," said Ms. Abate, who wants to work in an intensive care unit of a large hospital.

"When I have eight patients to tend to I don't feel like I can give them enough attention," she said. "I care a lot about people. I want to be there."

While Ms. Abate plans to work in a hospital, there's a good chance she won't remain there during her entire career. Health care experts say the growing demand for nurses is one of the most serious health manpower problems ever to face North Carolina.

Many nurses are being lured by other opportunities within the health-care industry, while others are working for companies that offer them regular shifts and better benefits. Some are moving into administration, while others are leaving the field altogether.

In his luncheon address Monday to about 140 nursing recruiters, N.C. Department of Human Resources Secretary David Flaherty said innovations are needed to overcome the state's worsening nursing deficit.

He cited a number of reasons for the shortfall, including changes in technology, image problems, job dissatisfaction, sicker patients and declining enrollments in the state's nursing programs.

During the past five years, enrollment at the state's nine nursing programs has dropped 33 percent. Educators point to familiar reasons — high stress, bad hours and low pay.

"The nursing profession may not be as lucrative as it once was," said Sam Byrns, director of UNCC's Center for Student Employment and Career Services. "The UNC system is trying to encourage more students to become involved."

At the luncheon, Flaherty said a state legislative commission was considering the establishment of a $5 million scholarship fund to attract nursing students. Such efforts are overdue, he said, because the supply of nurses has not kept up with the demand.

"We're all in the same boat," he told the recruiters who came from all over the Southeast to interview prospects from several area schools. "We must have these nurses if we're going to meet these needs."

Demand for nurses is great, he said, because they are caring for sicker patients, the elderly population is increasing, improvements in technology require more nursing assistance and patients are being discharged earlier under Medicare regulations.

Monique Wiegman, a recruiter from the Henrietta Egleston Hospital for Children in Atlanta, said many qualified nurses are leaving the field because of low pay and morale.

"A lot of nurses are doing things they don't have time for, like making beds," she said. Still, she has no plans to quit herself.

"It's an exciting career," she said. "I couldn't imagine doing anything different."

Recruiter Jackie Hill came to the job fair from the Alcoholism Treatment Center in Raleigh, which doesn't have any openings.

"We come to let ourselves be known," she said. "We want to see what the other hospitals are doing, and so we can be prepared in case we need to do some recruiting down the road."

Last year, the American Hospital Association said the average nurse vacancy rate in hospitals was 11.3 percent, compared with 5.3 percent in 1985.

Teacher Merit Pay Tied To Results

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

In a report that could propel North Carolina toward a second wave of education reform, the N.C. Public School Forum says merit pay for teachers should be linked to student performance, and that local school districts should be given more flexibility in how they spend money.

The 60-page report released Tuesday was developed by 77 of the state's most influential education and business leaders.

John Dornan, executive director of the forum, a nonprofit group trying to improve North Carolina schools, said he hoped the report would sustain the reform momentum begun four years ago.

"The heart of the report goes to showing results for students," Dornan said.

Perhaps the most controversial recommendation concerns the state's much-debated career-ladder program, which links higher pay to how well teachers perform in class. Teachers are rated based on classroom observations.

The study group recommends turning career ladder into a voluntary program linking higher pay to how well schools achieve goals such as improving student performance in reading and math and increasing daily attendance.

Each school district could opt to enter the program and submit a three-year plan to the state that included measurable goals.

"At the end of the three years, if the schools could not demonstrate improvement, the state would cease paying merit pay," Dornan said. "If the state is going to pay additional salaries for higher performance, the only way to measure that is through better student performance."

The General Assembly must decide in 1989 whether to expand the career ladder statewide. The program is now being used in 16 counties. Dornan says the voluntary model would cost less — $160 million to $180 million, compared with $450 million if the current plan were expanded statewide.

The report contains 78 recommendations emphasizing higher test scores and better attendance as the best indicators of a school's and a teacher's success.

"Instead of looking at how well schools conformed to rules and regulations," Dornan said, "it was the strong belief of the study group that schools should be measured by how well students do."

The report also recommends establishing early-childhood programs for poor children and expanding vocational education programs. It also recommends giving school districts more leeway in how they spend state money.

The study group included the forum's board of directors, N.C. Citizens for Business and Industry, 14 members of the General Assembly, state school board Chairman Howard Haworth, representatives of the School Boards Association, School Administrators Association, County Commissioners Association, the N.C. Association of Educators and 25 business leaders.

"The strongest thing about this report is that a very diverse group came to consensus," Dornan said.

Teacher Programs Threatened

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Education programs at 10 of the 43 colleges and universities that train North Carolina's teachers could be shut down as soon as 1990 unless their students do better on the National Teachers Exam, authorities say.

While scores have improved in the past year, students at North Carolina's predominantly black schools continue to have the most trouble passing the exam, according to the 1987-88 test results released Tuesday.

The four-part exam is required for admission to and graduation from teacher-education programs in North Carolina. The key portion of the test, which measures "professional knowledge" and is considered the most rigorous section of the test, determines whether a student will be certified to teach.

Among black students taking the exam in the state last year, 53.6 percent failed the professional knowledge portion of the test. The previous year, 58 percent of black students failed the section.

Under a wide-ranging plan to improve teacher-education in the state, a University of North Carolina system task force recommended in 1986 that unless schools could show by 1990 that 70 percent of their education graduates could pass the teachers exam, their teacher-education programs should be closed.

Based on their 1987-88 test scores, all five predominantly black campuses in the UNC system would not meet that standard. Failure rates among those schools ranged from 30.8 percent at Fayetteville State University to 48.4 percent at Winston-Salem State University.

In addition to the five predominantly black UNC campuses, five private, predominantly black schools also fell short of a 70 percent passing rate.

Study Panel To Consider Required Sex Education

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The teen pregnancy problem is getting worse in North Carolina, and the number of unwed teens giving birth has risen dramatically in the last 10 years, experts say.

"It is a tragedy in this state that a thousand children ... had children last year," said Barbara Huberman, executive director of the North Carolina Coalition on Adolescent Pregnancy.

She presented statistics to a legislative study panel on Tuesday showing that 798 of the state's children age 14 and younger were reported as pregnant in 1987 — including six 10-year-olds, two 11-year-olds, 32 who were 12 years old, 165 who were 13, and 593 who were 14.

A total of 1,566 children age 15 became pregnant, as did 3,452 girls age 16 and another 4,953 who were 17. The number of 18-year-olds who became pregnant was 6,661 and the number of 19-year-olds reached 7,624.

The panel agreed to consider requiring North Carolina schools to teach students about sex and contraceptives as part of a program aimed at curbing teen pregnancy.

The Adolescent Pregnancy Study Commission also endorsed in principle a statewide funding network that would distribute about $1.5 million annually to communities to help launch local anti-pregnancy projects.

When it is finished, the panel will submit a report to the General Assembly next year.

Advocacy groups are pushing for mandatory statewide sex education in public schools, Ms. Huberman said. But Sen. Marvin Ward, D-Forsyth, co-chairman of the study commission, said it would be extremely controversial.

If the panel endorses it, he said, it should be introduced in a separate bill to avoid endangering the remainder of the group's proposals.

"We may be ahead of our time," Ward said. "I do not want to have the funding go down the drain. ... We've got a real ticklish problem and maybe we ought not to jump on a mandate."

Other members said the commission should take a bold stand.

"If this body feels it's important enough to recommend, we ought to at least recommend it and leave it up to the General Assembly to decide what they want to do," said Charles Evans, a former legislator from Manteo. "That (sex education) is a problem we are dancing around."

Elizabeth Brown, school health education coordinator for Gates County, said the Legislature in 1987 ordered public schools to teach students about AIDS. By the same logic, students should learn how to avoid pregnancy because it's a more pervasive problem, she said.

Changes In Ports Control Proposed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Despite objections from the state commerce secretary, a legislative study committee will ask the General Assembly to sever the N.C. Commerce Department's most powerful tie to the state ports.

The committee voted unanimously Tuesday to recommend that the legislature eliminate the commerce secretary's authority to hire and fire the State Ports Authority's executive director and other port employees.

The recommendation is one of several the committee will make to the General Assembly in an effort to help the ports authority get back on track. State ports lost $116,000 last year — one year after the state agreed to pay for an unprecedented $36 million expansion program at the ports in Wilmington and Morehead City.

After the loss was made public, the Legislative Research Commission launched its study of ways to boost business at the ports. Believing the ports' problems are linked to the ports authority's structure, the study committee has moved swiftly in three meetings toward substantial changes in the authority's lines of authority. Cutting out the commerce secretary's power to hire and fire port employees would significantly diminish the Commerce Department's role in managing the ports.

Commerce Secretary Claude Pope, citing the ports' important role in promoting economic development, said cutting the ports' ties to the Commerce Department would be "detrimental" to North Carolina.

"The Department of Commerce is the state's lead agency in the field of economic development, and the state ports are a critical part of our infrastructure and a great sales tool in promoting the state," Pope wrote in a letter to state Rep. Alex Hall, D-New Hanover, co-chairman of the study committee.

"... I would encourage you to proceed with caution and circumspection as you entertain making changes in the State Ports Authority statutes," Pope said.

"I am told that there was an effort during the tenure of Secretary Lauch Faircloth to cut the ties between Commerce and the state ports," he said. "It was determined to be an ill-advised action then, and I believe it would be detrimental today."

The committee's recommendation is an effort to streamline the ports' authority, which is fragmented between its board of directors, the Commerce Department and the Department of Administration, which oversees contracts and purchasing. Committee members think the fragmentation hampers the ports' ability to operate like a business in the shipping industry.

Ministries Will Make PTL Offer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORT MILL, S.C. — Heritage Ministries officials say PTL founder Jim Bakker has an excellent opportunity to make good his claims of wanting to restore Heritage USA to the people who built it, the Lifetime Partners.

"It's time to put behind us any differences we may have had in the past, time for us to settle in with one objective, one goal, that is for the partners to buy Heritage USA," Pastor Sam Johnson said Tuesday during the "Heritage Today" television show.

Johnson made the comments after announcing a campaign to buy back PTL's assets with contributions from the Lifetime Partners, or major contributors.

"The Bakkers have expressed on a number of occasions their concern to buy Heritage back, see that it returns into the hands of the partners."

"It would be a wonderful opportunity for Jim and Tammy to say 'we love Heritage USA more than we love our own lives, our own plans, our own dreams, and we would back this effort with all that we have,'" Johnson said.

Bakker failed to come up with a downpayment for his $172 million offer to buy PTL's assets. Bakker has said he wanted to return the ministry to the Lifetime Partners who helped to build it.

Bakker did not return telephone messages to his office in Charlotte, N.C. on Tuesday.

Johnson said Heritage Ministries' board of directors will make an offer to buy the assets of Heritage USA during an auction in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Columbia on Dec. 12.

Johnson said he didn't know how much would be needed for their bid to be accepted but said the ministry wants to have between $50 million and $100 million when it goes to the court's auction in 20 days.

PTL went into bankruptcy protection in June 1987, three months after Bakker left amid a sex-and-money scandal.

Johnson said the strategy for the buy-back offer will include a three-week nationally televised effort, the establishment of the escrow account for the cash offer, the participation of national church and business leaders to obtain additional financing, and the use of the collateral of Heritage USA to secure the proposed purchase.

"People ask me, 'is it possible?' Jesus said all things are possible," Johnson said.

"A lot of people didn't give us much of a chance. They said the partners didn't care any longer, the place was going under, it's dead," he said.

But Johnson said Heritage officials were encouraged to attempt to buy back Heritage USA, the television satellite network and hundreds of acres of land after partners donated about $600,000 during a telethon last week.

Also last week, Bankruptcy Judge Rufus Reynolds rejected offers as high as $115 million from Canadians Peter Thomas of Vancouver and Stephen Mernick of Toronto.

An auction of PTL's assets bot-tomed out when no one bid under terms set by Reynolds. The judge, who had rejected earlier bids because of their "walk-away" clauses, said he'll try again Dec. 12. Reynolds said if that doesn't work he'll order PTL closed and sold piecemeal, if necessary.

With a telephone ringing here and there in the background, Johnson said "the immediate response to this effort has been overwhelming."

"We are waging an all-out war to save Heritage USA for the entire Christian community," he said.

Amish Resist Vaccinations Despite Death From Cough

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CONEWANGO, N.Y. — An outbreak of whooping cough has claimed the life of one infant in western New York's Amish community but has done little to break down the conservative Christian group's resistance to inoculation.

During the past three weeks, the number of confirmed cases of the disease, which federal records indicate is fatal in eight of 1,000 cases among infants under age 6 months, has risen from six to 33. A 3-month-old infant died Oct. 31.

The outbreak, the second this decade in the community, has health officials worried about the rest of the 1,200 to 1,500 Amish who live in an area about 70 miles south of Buffalo. A vaccine has nearly eliminated whooping cough in the nation's general population, but most of the Amish avoid vaccinations and other conventional medical treatments.

"It's a very large concern," said Mary Anne Power, Cattaraugus County supervising public health nurse. "Any public health official would be concerned about an epidemic in such a large non-vaccinated community."

Power said she is afraid "the peak of the epidemic hasn't occurred yet."

The disease hasn't reached Neil Hershberger, 26, or his wife and three children, but like most Amish here, he's in no hurry to have his children vaccinated.

Instead, he said, "We would keep them (the children) away from people that have it."

That philosophy echoes the general stance the "Plain Folk" take toward the non-Amish population, whom they refer to as "the English."

A group formed in the 17th century as an offshoot of the Mennonites, the Amish are known for their severely plain clothing and avoidance of modern conveniences like electricity, telephones and motorized vehicles. They subsist by farming, producing lumber and selling home-made goods such as quilts, baked goods and cheese.

Although friendly and willing to speak, most don't want their names used, out of modesty.

"Their outlook is 'I'm a member of the community and I'll talk, but I shouldn't be boastful or proud,'" explained Lee Zook, an Amish expert and professor at Luther College in Decorah, Iowa.

Whooping cough, or pertussis, is a regular occurrence in the community. In 1982, there were 216 reported cases, but no deaths.

All of the Amish interviewed said they remembered having the disease as children, and since they survived, many don't believe it is dangerous. Their comments also reflected the community's general belief in the virtue of self-sufficiency and faith in the power of God.

"I had it. I was only a couple of months old," said one young Amish man with a fiery red beard who, along with eight of his friends, was building a home on property he'd just bought. "It wasn't that bad for me, the way my mother told me. I took some homemade remedies. I don't know what it was."

Parents Charged With Selling Baby

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ODENTON, Md. — The parents of a 2-month-old baby have been charged with selling their son for $3,500 and three ounces of uncut cocaine, police said.

Charles Albert Pannuty, and Gayle Duty, both 35 of Severn, were arrested in a parking lot Tuesday, said Sgt. Joseph Bisesi of the Anne Arundel County Police Department.

The baby, Joseph Patrick Pannuty, was turned over to child protective services, he said. The couple has four other children, but Bisesi said he didn't know whether they had been turned over to authorities.

The arrests culminated a two-month investigation that began after police heard a couple was trying to sell a baby, Bisesi said. The infant, born prematurely, was originally offered for sale for $5,000 but undercover officers bargained the price down, he said. The couple signed a contract to sell the baby, Bisesi said. Pannuty and Ms. Duty were charged with baby-selling, which is punishable by up to a year in prison upon conviction, Bisesi said. Pannuty was also charged with distribution of cocaine and marijuana because he sold undercover police drugs on four previous occasions, Bisesi said.

Ms. Duty and Pannuty also were charged with possession with intent to distribute cocaine.

Airlines Implement New Discount Fares

By Marcy Gordon
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The chances of finding a bargain airlines ticket are a lot smaller today than they were a day earlier.

The nation's biggest airlines said Tuesday they are going through with previously disclosed plans to boost most of their lowest discount air fares and eliminate the cheap fares that can be booked a few days before a flight.

The changes, announced last week, would revamp the popular advance-purchase "MaxSaver" fares used by most vacation travelers. They would also drop the so-called "junk fares" available four to seven days before a flight, which are used mainly by business travelers.

The changes went into effect at midnight Tuesday. Carriers adopting the changes include United Airlines, American Airlines, Northwest Airlines, Trans World Airlines and Delta Air Lines.

Under the MaxSaver changes, fares for longer flights generally will be raised and those for shorter hauls will mostly be reduced. That means roughly two-thirds of the fares will go up, and the remainder will fall.

The new formula based on flight mileage replaces the airlines' past practice of setting fares according to competition on individual routes.

The changes in MaxSaver fares generally range from a $20 reduction to a $40 increase on a round-trip ticket.

"We have been heavily inundated with phone calls," said David Perelman, president of DMS Travel Inc. in midtown Manhattan.

He noted that the demise of the last-minute junk fares means, for example, that a passenger flying from Newark, N.J., to Kansas City, Mo., would pay $296 round trip if he booked Tuesday on a three-day advance basis. But as of Wednesday, the cheapest round-trip fare for the same trip will be $757, Perelman said.

There are some exceptions to the changes. American Airlines, for example, said it won't go along with them in those cities where it competes with Midway Airlines, a smaller carrier that didn't match the changes.

Similarly, Texas Air Corp. subsidiary Eastern Airlines doesn't plan to make the changes in the highly competitive market linking the Northeast and Florida. Delta will put off making the revisions in that market as long as Eastern does, said Delta spokesman Jim Lundy in Atlanta.

But a substantial majority of discount fares will be adjusted.

The changes were initiated by Continental Airlines and quickly matched by the other big carriers, which were emboldened by strong recent growth in passenger traffic.

Continental, another Texas Air subsidiary, customarily has been a pacesetter in cutting fares. But the stronger traffic has spurred it to switch directions.

The airline used to slash fares to attract more passengers, and its moves quickly were mimicked by the other big carriers in an effort to remain competitive. Now, Continental's improving traffic has made it a leader in fare hikes rather than cuts, at least for the moment.

Airline analysts stress that the big test of the airlines' strength will come in January and February, when passenger traffic is seasonally weak.

Stealth Bomber Goes Public

By Dennis Anderson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PALMDALE, Calif. — The dark, ominous-looking stealth bomber was rolled into the light of day after more than 10 years of secrecy-shrouded development, with the Air Force secretary declaring it essential to the nation's defense.

The black and gray boomerang-shaped B-2, designed and built by Northrop Corp., was towed ponderously out of a hangar Tuesday to cheers and the accompaniment of "The Stealth Fanfare," an original composition played by an Air Force Band.

"We can't afford to be without this program," Air Force Secretary Edward C. "Pete" Aldridge, Jr. declared to a select crowd of about 2,000 that included members of Congress, military brass and the B-2 labor force.

Responding to critics who contend the stealth bomber is an expensive, unneeded weapons system that could destabilize arms control efforts, Aldridge said the B-2 is a key to compelling the Soviet Union to adhere to current and future arms agreements.

"This program is essential," Aldridge told reporters after the unveiling at the Mojave Desert plant where the B-1 bomber and space shuttle are built. "It's not destabilizing."

He said the mission of the B-2, which is designed to slip past enemy radar defenses and drop nuclear bombs, is to make the Soviets realize they could not protect their most precious assets, such as hardened command posts and moveable missiles.

"That's the whole idea behind the flexibility of a manned bomber force," he said.

While the B-1B bomber is considered sufficient by the Air Force to meet the current Soviet threat, Aldridge insisted the revolutionary technology of the B-2 is needed for the future.

The stealth bomber is a subsonic, all-altitude flying wing formed from non-metallic composite materials that are intended to let it absorb radar transmissions rather than reflect them. Its shape and lack of sharp angles also help make it nearly invisible to radar. Air Force officials say it makes about the same impression on a radar screen as a bird.

The plane steers with flaps on the rear of the wings rather than with a tail. Nobody was allowed to see the B-2 from the rear, presumably because revealing the design of its engine exhaust system might help enemy detection efforts.

Aldridge said even U.S. radar systems cannot track the stealth bomber and that the Pentagon believes the Soviets to be without any effective counter to it, or a stealth program of their own.

"I am not aware of any Soviet program like this," he said.

The bomber, built to accommodate a crew of two or three, has not yet flown. In the weeks ahead, it will undergo high-speed taxi tests and engine evaluations. Air Force officials declined to say when the B-2 would take to the air, saying it would fly, "only when it is ready."

The budget arm of Congress, the General Accounting Office, has estimated potential program costs for a fleet of 132 stealth bombers sought by the Air Force at $68.5 billion, or about $500 million each, twice the cost of a B-1B.

The Union of Concerned Scientists has called the B-2 a costly weapons system that could possibly panic the Soviets and cause the opposite of the desired deterrent effect. The Air Force has disputed this assertion, contending it is important for the Soviets to realize a weapon exists that could retaliate against their most prized assets.

The program to develop stealth aircraft was initiated by then-President Jimmy Carter and sustained in secrecy throughout the Reagan administration.

Fort Leavenworth: Life Is Grim In 'The Castle'

By Matt Trubell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORT LEAVENWORTH, Kan. — They call it "The Castle," a massive stone building with eight wings radiating from a central six-story round.

The wings hold eight tiers of cells, stacked one upon the other, and in each 8-by-10-foot cell an inmate is allowed a cot, a table and a chair.

The U.S. Disciplinary Barracks in Fort Leavenworth is the biggest military prison in the nation. It is a grim home for about 1,450 inmates, sent here from bases all over the world, wherever American military men and women are stationed.

Forty-two officers, including one lieutenant colonel, and 21 women are serving time here. Among them are drug dealers, armed robbers, rapists, murderers and spies. More than 80 are serving life terms. Three inmates are on death row.

And there is strict military discipline.

"Our rules are so strict that if a guy turns left and he knows he's not supposed to turn left, he's in trouble," said Lt. Col. Gerald M. Gasko, prison chief of staff.

"You earn what you get here," added the prison commandant. Col.

Larry Berrong, a former Army airborne Ranger and Vietnam veteran. "There aren't any free lunches."

Military officials say the goal of the prison is not just confinement, but correction.

"Unfortunately, in the United States today we do a lot of confining and not much correction," Gasko said. "We attempt to give them tools so when they leave here, they can be productive citizens."

When inmates leave these walls, they return to civilian life, not to the military.

Next to discipline, training is the top priority at the Fort Leavenworth prison, which has more than 20 vocational programs including automotive repairs, printing, carpentry, upholstery, and hotel and restaurant management.

Inmates, whom officials would not allow to be interviewed, even repair cars and furniture of military families living at Fort Leavenworth.

Officials claim the Disciplinary Barracks has the oldest shoe repair business west of the Mississippi River, started in 1877 to make boots for cavalrymen.

Now it repairs everything from prescription orthopedic shoes to clefted golf shoes, Gasko said.

The prison also has one of the largest silk-screening businesses in the nation, providing all the decals for U.S. Air Force planes.

Congress authorized the prison's construction in 1874. An old quartermaster depot that had supplied military posts in the Indian Territory housed the first prisoners. The Castle was completed in 1915 by inmate labor.

Inmate labor is still used for maintenance, but the prisoners also work with their minds. Most have high school diplomas, and those who don't go straight into the classroom when they arrive, Gasko said.

They can earn associate and bachelor's degrees through correspondence, and a few are working on master's degrees, but Gasko said they do that at their own expense.

The prison takes enlisted men from all branches of the service except the U.S. Navy. It takes all convicted officers, regardless of the length of the sentence.

Gasko said the shortest sentence for an officer he recalls is seven days. "I think they wanted him to see the inside of a prison," he said.

One inmate is going into his 17th year, he added.

Some famous inmates have seen the inside of its walls, from Lt. William Calley, who was convicted of murdering Vietnamese civilians at My Lai, to Clayton Lonetree, the U.S. Marine who was convicted of espionage while an embassy guard in Moscow.

Three inmates are awaiting death sentence, although the Army has not executed anyone since 1961 and no execution dates have been set. They are:

— Ronald Gray, 22, of Liberty City, Fla., who was sentenced last April in connection with the death of two women. He was stationed at Fort Bragg, N.C.

— James Murphy, 24, of Clinton, N.C., who was convicted last year of murdering his wife, his 6-year-old stepson, and his 2-year-old son, while stationed in Nanau, Germany, with the Army.

— Ronnie Curtis, 22, a Marine from Wichita, Kan., who was convicted in August 1987 of murdering his platoon commander and platoon commander's wife at Camp Lejeune.

Although most inmates are first-time offenders, the average sentence is about 10 years. About two-thirds are serving time for such crimes as assault, rape, murder or kidnapping; 17 percent are imprisoned for narcotics violations, and 11 percent were sentenced for theft. No inmate is serving time for just a military offense, such as being absent without leave.

Some prisoners work outside the walls and in nearby Leavenworth on work-release programs. About 20 inmates work on the 2,600-acre prison farm, which raises hogs and cattle and grows row crops and vegetables.

Outside The Castle walls, inmates who are "installation parolees" stay in an unsecure barracks. They have proved themselves reliable while doing their time, and have earned a few extra privileges.

"The only thing that keeps them out there is moral restraint," Gasko said. "But the rules are extremely tough, and we don't tolerate any violations."

Budget Officials Say '88 Drought Will Boost Projections Of Deficit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration says last summer's drought took such a large bite out of the economy that it will add about $3 billion to the reductions needed in next year's federal budget deficit.

Joseph R. Wright, director of the White House's Office of Management and Budget, said in an interview Tuesday that the administration now believes the fiscal 1990 deficit will have to be slashed by about $35 billion to comply with federal law.

He said that in the 1990 budget the administration currently is writing, about $15 billion in reductions probably would come from various benefit programs for the sick, farmers, federal retirees and others who automatically qualify for government help.

He said the rest would come from a combination of reductions in other federal spending, sales of federal assets and increases in user fees.

The 1990 budget year begins next Oct. 1.

He insisted there would be "no new taxes," although there have been disputes in the past between the Democratic-controlled Congress and President Reagan over whether some of his proposals for new revenues should be called tax increases.

Wright also said Social Security would not be cut, and that defense programs would probably receive a slight increase over the inflation rate. Military spending eats up about 30 percent of this year's $1.1 trillion budget.

"It is a conservative budget, and I think that's what Ronald Reagan should leave as his legacy in his last budget," Wright said.

He said the spending blueprint so far had no input from President-elect George Bush, but that the vice president easily would be able to adjust it to his own priorities once he takes office.

Wright said the administration now believes the deficit for fiscal 1990 will be $135 billion, or $3 billion higher than previously forecast. The Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction law requires a shortfall of no more than $100 billion next year, with billions in across-the-board spending cuts the consequence if the target is breached.

Wright said the budget would achieve the $100 billion target.

He also said Reagan had declared that cuts should not be made in benefits received directly by the elderly or the poor. But the budget director said that would leave open the possibility of cuts in items such as Medicare payments that go to doctors and hospitals.

Citing the ongoing budget preparation process — in which OMB officials and agency heads still are making spending and program decisions — Wright said he could provide few details of where all the cuts would be made.

But he said that when the spending plan is sent to Congress on Jan. 9, it would incorporate many of the program reductions, asset sales and other proposals that Reagan has made in the past.

"I don't see any firestorms coming from the Hill as a result of this budget," he said.

In recent years, many of Reagan's budgets have been declared "dead on arrival" by leading lawmakers. Last year's budget process went unusually smoothly, largely because of an agreement reached between Congress and the administration last November that solved many of the perennial disputes.

Just two weeks ago, the administration projected the 1990 deficit at $132 billion.

But earlier Tuesday in its final economic forecast, the administration said the nation's economy would grow by 2.6 percent this year.

Bush Will Take Holiday Break At His Maine Home

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President-elect George Bush is heading for his oceanside family retreat in Kennebunkport, Maine, for a five-day Thanksgiving vacation while suggesting he'll complete the naming of his Cabinet within a month.

The vice president planned to meet with residents of the resort town later today in a visit to its business district, but otherwise aides said he had no public events planned through Sunday.

On Tuesday, Bush met in Houston with incoming Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari for a get-acquainted session. Both he and Salinas, who takes office Dec. 1, called the meeting a first step toward improved U.S.-Mexican relations.

Over a six-course lunch that included roasted pheasant and gilded chocolate truffles, Bush and Salinas discussed drugs, immigration, trade and Mexico's staggering $102 billion international debt, aides said.

"I am absolutely confident after this initial visit that we're both committed to improving a bilateral relationship that is essential, in my view, as far as the United States of America is concerned," Bush said in brief remarks after talks that lasted two hours.

Salinas, using similarly upbeat diplomatic language that disclosed few specifics, called the session "a positive, respectful, cordial dialogue which I am certain will do a great deal to improve the relations between Mexico and the United States."

Bush thanked Salinas for greeting him in his adopted hometown. Salinas, speaking through a translator, invited Bush to visit him next time in Mexico City.

The vice president, in remarks applied to both Mexico and Canada, pledged to "never neglect our own friends in this hemisphere."

In an address earlier Tuesday to a meeting of Republican governors in Point Clear, Ala., Bush congratulated Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney for a "spectacular win" in Monday's national elections that retained a House of Commons majority for Mulroney's Conservative party.

Bush called the election a ringing endorsement not only for the prime minister, but for the recently negotiated U.S.-Canadian free-trade pact whose fate had become a campaign issue.

Bush also told the Republican Governors Association he would name negotiators for budget talks with Congress "on the first day of my presidency," suggesting a possible intention to sidestep the usual practice in which a new president first submits his own budget proposals.

He said he viewed his election as a mandate against new taxes.

And he told 20 of the nation's 23 GOP governors that Republicans were "on our way to becoming the majority party in America."

Meanwhile, Bush told reporters he still hadn't decided on a defense secretary, even though Bush transition sources who insist upon anonymity have said that former Sen. John Tower of Texas is the likely choice.

Bush indicated he would not announce his selection for the major Cabinet post until after he returns from Maine.

The vice president said he hopes to have his full Cabinet and most other senior members of his administration designated within a month.

Then, noting that President Dwight D. Eisenhower had taken his newly assembled Cabinet to Hawaii for meetings, Bush joked that he might arrange such a session for his team — but to Maine in January "to save traveling expenses."

Ethel Kennedy kneels at the grave of the late President John F. Kennedy at Arlington

Nation Honors Memory Of Slain Leader

By Robert M. Andrews
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — It was the evening of David Hibbard's last day as a Peace Corps volunteer in a mud-hut village in Nigeria when his overseas radio crackled with the bulletin that John F. Kennedy had been assassinated, and Hibbard's lonely nightmare began.

"I felt an overwhelming sense of loss and grief," said Hibbard, now a doctor in Boulder, Colo. "I stayed up all night listening for details. I wondered irrationally whether he might have lived if I'd stayed in Nigeria another year. I cried myself to sleep, exhausted."

Jim Hagan of Santa Cruz, Calif., recalls he was a youngster trying to hitchhike out of a blizzard in Buffalo, N.Y., to attend the president's funeral in Washington. He never made it, but he joined the Peace Corps three years later for a stint in India.

Kennedy, said Hagan, embodied the Peace Corps' ideal of "helping others, breaking down barriers ... and promoting peace instead of war."

Hibbard and Hagan were among 450 former Peace Corps volunteers or their surrogates who saluted Kennedy's memory during a 24-hour vigil in the Capitol Rotunda which ended at midday Tuesday, the 25th anniversary of the president's murder in Dallas.

They joined hundreds of other former volunteers at a memorial Mass at St. Matthew's Roman Catholic Cathedral, where the Rev. Theodore Hesburgh recalled Nov. 22, 1963, as the day when "the heartbeat of a nation stood still."

Americans across the land stood still for a moment Tuesday to recall that dark day, although members of the Kennedy family said they hoped the president could be remembered for his life, not his death.

"I think we should think of the high points of his life, the laughter and the vision," said Eunice Shriver, the president's sister, who made an early-morning visit to his grave at Arlington National Cemetery. "Hopefully, someday we'll get excited about his birthday." Kennedy would have been 71 last May 29.

Robert Kennedy's widow, Ethel, appeared shortly after the cemetery gates opened at 8 a.m. Later in the day, Evelyn Lincoln, the president's personal secretary, laid three red roses before the eternal flame. She has visited the site every Nov. 22 since the assassination.

Thirty uniformed men of the Army's elite Green Berets laid a wreath, formed a semicircle and saluted their former commander in chief.

The president's youngest and only surviving brother, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., laid a single white rose at the Kennedy memorial at Runnymede, England, where King John made a historic grant of civil and political liberties in the Magna Carta.

"We think it's extremely important to celebrate the life of President Kennedy rather than the tragedy," Kennedy told reporters. "We're focusing on the birthday and the hope of his life rather than dwelling upon his loss."

A private Mass was held for the president's widow, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, and her two children, John Jr. and Caroline, at St. Thomas More's Roman Catholic Church in New York City. The former first lady made no public appearances.

In Dallas, no official ceremonies were held, but about 2,500 people gathered at Dealey Plaza to pray silently and observe the site where Kennedy was killed by an assassin's gunfire as he waved to crowds from the back of an open limousine.

Twenty people clasped hands along the motorcade route. A crucifix and two bouquets of flowers were left at the approximate spot on Elm Street where the president was struck. Notes attached to the flowers read "We still miss you — Nov. 22" and "After 25 years, we still love you, John."

Schoolteacher Jean Hill, who witnessed Kennedy's murder a quarter-century ago, brought her 50 third-graders to Dealey Plaza. "I want my kids to know it does not take violence of any kind to bring about change and that they themselves can be instruments of change and it can be good," she said.

Some cable television viewers relived the hours after the assassination as the Arts & Entertainment channel interrupted its regular programming and played NBC News' actual coverage of the day minute-by-minute exactly 25 years later.

It started at around 2 p.m. just after the bullets were fired and ended in the evening with events in Washington after President Lyndon B. Johnson landed in the presidential plane that also brought Kennedy's body and widow back to Andrews Air Force Base outside the capital.

White House Says Reagan Believes North Trial Should Go As Planned

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — President Reagan believes the criminal justice system should resolve whether former aide Oliver North violated the law in the Iran-Contra affair, and he has no intention of trying to stop North's trial, Reagan's spokesman says.

Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, in statements that seemed to rule out a presidential pardon in advance of North's trial, said Tuesday the White House role currently is merely "to review classified information that has been designated by the prosecution and by the defense" for possible use in the trial.

Asked to comment on suggestions by U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell that Reagan should consider exercising his constitutional authority to thwart North's trial scheduled to begin in late January, if Reagan feels national security would be compromised, Fitzwater replied,

"We don't have any direct role." Reagan for months has said he would not discuss with reporters the option of granting a pardon to North, and has said it would be inappropriate to comment while the legal process was under way.

On Monday, when asked whether he was drawing near a decision on a possible pardon, the president said much the same thing. "No, no," he replied. "And I don't think it would be any time to make such a decision while it's still before the courts."

But when pressed during a White House news briefing to say whether a pardon was being considered, Fitzwater said repeatedly, "We aren't discussing pardons." Fitzwater reiterated that "on previous occasions" the White House has said that Reagan's position was that "he believes the legal process should be allowed to take its course."

Reagan often has sought to minimize the impact of the worst foreign policy scandal to beset his administration — the brouhaha resulting from the clandestine sale of U.S. arms to Iran and the subsequent diversion of proceeds to Nicaraguan rebels fighting the Sandinista regime in Managua.

North is charged with conspiring to defraud the government in connection with these transactions, which resulted at least in part from attempts by the administration in 1985 and 1986 to win the release of Americans held hostage in Lebanon by pro-Iranian groups.

Gesell had said Monday that if North's trial proceeded as scheduled, a large amount of sensitive information probably would be revealed in this public setting. He said the court would likely consider any request by the president on the withholding of certain documents and evidence.

Fitzwater said the administration, so far, has not sought to invoke executive privilege to protect such information. He also said that "we have declassified or reviewed — and declined to declassify" some 40,000 pages of documents that have been provided by both sides in the case.

Reagan has shown little inclination to grant a pardon, and he has less than 60 days in office. The president last March said he still thought that North, his former National Security Council staff deputy, "is a hero."

Elizabeth speaks to the House of Lords as Parliament opens

Tradition Reigns As Queen Opens New Parliament

By Dan Fisher
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LONDON — In a spectacle simultaneously as old as Britain's democracy and as contemporary as strategic arms talks, Queen Elizabeth II outlined an ambitious and controversial legislative agenda here Tuesday as she formally opened a new term of Parliament.

The monarch's 10-minute speech, which was actually drafted by aides to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, identified 16 bills that the government intended to bring forward this session, including a new anti-terrorism measure for Northern Ireland and another that would establish the first legal framework for the secretive MI-5 domestic intelligence agency.

Two other bills, expected to be introduced within the month, would privatize England's water and electricity utilities, bringing an estimated $45 billion windfall to the government but raising criticism from opponents who charge that consumers would be shortchanged.

By tradition, Thatcher and other members of the House of Commons stood in the back of the room as the queen read her speech from a huge golden throne at the front of the ornate Chamber of the House of Lords in London's Palace of Westminster.

In a ceremony timed to the minute and little changed through more than seven centuries, the queen and her husband, Prince Phillip, traveled to Westminster from Buckingham Palace by horse-drawn royal coach as thousands lined the mile-long route on a cold, clear autumn day.

At the Parliament, she donned the sparkling imperial crown, set with 2,783 diamonds, an egg-sized ruby and a sapphire dating from the 11th century King Edward the Confessor. The red velvet and gold lace train of her white satin gown was so long it took four pages to assist her.

Then, led by the Lord High Chamberlain — who, following tradition, walks backwards so he does not turn his back on his monarch — and accompanied by aides bearing such heraldic titles as Rouge Dragon Pursuivant and Keeper of Her Majesty's Privy Purse, the queen entered the Lords' Chamber.

She waited patiently on her throne as the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod went to fetch members of the House of Commons, who slammed the door in his face. It was more tradition, underlining the authority of the Commons, whose members finally responded after the Gentleman Usher rapped three times with his ebony staff.

The speech itself was almost anti-climactic, opening with a promise of continuing government support for efforts to reduce the threat of strategic, chemical and conventional weapons.

Earlier Tuesday, the British press had reported what was to be the speech's major surprise — the bill on MI-5. The measure was expected for the first time to detail the agency's mission and set out its accountability to the government. It was not yet clear what, if any, parliamentary oversight might be included.

The legislation would not extend to MI-6, the country's external intelligence-gathering agency, whose operations are so secret that it is not even officially acknowledged to exist.

Meatpacker Draws $975,000 Fine

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — IBP Corp. will pay a reduced fine of $975,000 to settle government charges of health and safety violations at its Dakota City, Neb., packinghouse that set off widespread investigations into the meatpacking industry, according to government and union sources.

Speaking on the condition of anonymity, the sources Tuesday said the reduction in fines originally totaling some $5.7 million is part of a settlement accord to be signed today by IBP, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration and the United Food and Commercial Workers Union.

The union, which represents 4,800 workers at IBP packinghouses in Dakota City and Joslin, Ill., called the settlement "historic and sweeping." The comment was contained in a press release saying a new conference would be held to announce the deal.

Union, OSHA and company officials declined to publicly specify the terms of the accord, which was to be formally signed this morning. "Lot's of things can happen," said Terry Mikelson, an OSHA spokesman. "I'm not sure there is an agreement until it is signed by all parties."

OSHA last May fined IBP $3.1 million for ignoring repetitive motion hazards leading to serious and sometimes disabling neuromuscular disorders on the Dakota City plant's production lines among workers who cut and trim beef.

A year earlier it had fined the meatpacker $2.6 million for what government officials said was the most flagrant violation of government recordkeeping requirements on job injuries uncovered in the agency's 17-year history.

Both the 1987 and 1988 fines against IBP are settled in the new agreement, the sources said.

In addition, they said, IBP will undertake a massive, three-year program at all 15 of its meatpacking plants — including 11 non-union facilities and two where workers are represented by the Teamsters union — to reduce the incidence of cumulative trauma disorders.

U.S., Mexico To Discuss Foreign Debt

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEXICO CITY — Mexico and the United States will begin cabinet-level talks in December to seek new ways to alleviate Mexico's foreign debt and free money for growth, President-elect Carlos Salinas de Gortari said.

The talks will begin shortly after Salinas takes office on Dec. 1 and well before President-elect George Bush's Jan. 20 inaugural. Salinas said Tuesday during a flight from Houston after a meeting with Bush.

The talks will involve the two nations' treasury secretaries. Salinas has not yet announced his Cabinet, but his top adviser at Tuesday's meeting, Jaime Serra Puche, is rumored to be the leading contender for the job.

Bush has already said that he will keep Nicholas Brady, President Reagan's treasury secretary, on the job.

Mexico's foreign debt now stands at $102 billion, and interest alone this year is $9 billion. Salinas said that in his meeting with Bush, he stressed the need to reduce the flow abroad of capital needed for domestic development.

Salinas said Bush brought a positive and cordial attitude to the meeting, which took place Tuesday at the Johnson Space Center. It was the first time he and Bush met, and he said he hopes to meet Bush at least once a year.

The two men also discussed drug trafficking, immigration and commerce. Salinas said he stressed the need to safeguard the human rights of Mexican workers in the United States and asked for easier access for Mexican products to the U.S. markets.

U.S. Students, Soviets Will Trade Classrooms

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Up to 15 students from each of 30 U.S. secondary schools will be spending their spring break in Soviet classrooms. They'll be part of the first nationwide program allowing students from each country to study in the other's schools.

By then the Russian students who travel to America from sister schools in the Soviet Union during their January holiday will have returned home from the first phase of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. High School Academic Partnership Program announced Tuesday by an education consortium.

"We're really excited because in about 90 days we will be going to live with Soviet families and attend Soviet schools," said Lisa Cooper, a senior and student in fourth-year Russian at Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School in Maryland.

"This program has the potential to be a very big step in U.S.-Soviet relations," the 17-year-old Cooper told reporters at a student-run press conference Tuesday.

"What makes this program so important is that when you talk about international relations you're talking about more than just governments you're talking about people," said Cooper, one of close to 450 American students who will go to the Soviet Union in March.

Anthony Mustillo, 17, also a fourth-year Russian language student at Technical High School in Staten Island, N.Y., said he believes the program will "change many preconceived notions" American and Soviet students have of each other.

"Kids are kids everywhere, and politics are not their first priority,"

Gem Thieves Use Smoke

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOCA RATON, Fla. — Five gunmen wearing wrinkly masks with gray hair and big noses stormed a jewelry store and made off under cover of smoke bombs with nearly $4 million in rare and unusual diamond pieces, authorities said.

"At first I thought it was a joke," salesman Salomon Romano said after Tuesday night's robbery. "It was frantic — you just don't think straight. In five seconds, you know what's going on."

The robbers walked through the front door of the H.T. Stuart & Co. jewelry store in the Town Center Mall, disarmed a security guard and pointed automatic weapons at three employees.

As one of the robbers stood guard outside the store, brandishing an automatic rifle, the others plucked exotic diamond necklaces, earrings and rings from two display cases, said Bob Ferrell, a Palm Beach County Sheriff's Office spokesman.

Among the $4 million in jewelry reported stolen was a diamond necklace worth more than $1 million.

said Mustillo, who will be making his second visit to the Soviet Union through the partnership program.

The program, an outgrowth of agreements signed by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev during the Moscow summit last May, will involve public and private schools from 19 states and will be administered by a consortium consisting of the American Council of Teachers of Russian, the National Association of Secondary School Principals and Sister Cities International.

Schools were selected for participation in the program in a national competition on the basis of overall academic excellence, availability of advance Russian language instruction, prospects for developing local funding, and commitment to international studies. Sister City relationships were also a consideration, said the sponsors in a statement.

The biggest challenge for American participation in the second and third years of the program will be "the need to find schools with Russian language programs" said Nancy Powell, principal of Bethesda-Chevy Chase.

Powell said she hoped the program would lead to "a real sharing of curriculum and teachers" between the two superpowers.

The program has received initial financing of $1 million for three years from the United States Information Agency. Grants from the sponsoring organizations, as well as school and community fund-raisers, will provide additional funding for American students, said project director Dan Davidson.

The Soviet Union's Committee for Public Education will pay all expenses for the Russian students.

Project officials stressed that they are still looking for schools to participate in the second and third years of the program. The deadline for applying is January 10, 1989. Schools can contact the program office by mail at 1619 Massachusetts Ave., N.W., Washington D.C. 20036 or by phone at 202-328-7309.

Mulroney Says He'll Seek Quick Vote On Trade Pact

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TORONTO — Claiming a clear national mandate for the free trade agreement with the United States, Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said he will proceed to quick enactment.

He announced Tuesday, the day after leading his Progressive Conservative Party to its second consecutive majority government, that Parliament will be called back into session the week of Dec. 12.

The U.S. Congress has passed legislation needed for the trade pact to start taking effect Jan. 1 as scheduled, but it still needs final Canadian parliamentary approval.

"The Canadian people have given us a clear mandate to implement the free trade agreement. We intend to do so," the prime minister said at a nationally televised news conference from his hometown of Baie-Comeau, Quebec.

His party won 170 seats in the 295-member House of Commons in a campaign completely dominated by the free trade issue and marked by intense opposition from Liberal Party leader John Turner.

The Liberals won 82 seats and the socialist New Democratic Party, which also opposed the agreement, will have 43 seats in the new House.

President Reagan, who signed the agreement with Mulroney on Jan. 2, congratulated the prime minister in a telephone call Tuesday from his ranch in Santa Barbara, Calif.

"In recent years, relations between the United States and Canada have been marked by cooperative dialogue and a remarkable record of mutually beneficial achievement," he said in a statement released by the White House.

Mulroney also said he spoke with President-elect George Bush and was willing to meet with him before the U.S. inauguration.

The Canadian dollar jumped in value against the U.S. dollar to more than 83 cents on the strength of the Conservative victory. It had slipped as low as below 81 cents during the campaign.

The trade pact phases out all remaining tariffs between the two countries, already each other's largest trading partners, over a 10-year period. It also dismantles many investment barriers; frees up trade in energy and services, and creates Canadian-U.S. panels to settle disputes.

During the campaign, Turner and other opponents of the agreement charged that it endangers not just Canada's extensive social and health care programs, but national sovereignty itself.

They said Canada's 26 million people will be overwhelmed by the 245 million people and vastly superior economic power of the United States.

Mulroney and the supporters said instead that future Canadian prosperity is assured by guaranteeing access to the larger U.S. market. They insisted that Canada is mature and fully able to compete in a North American marketplace without the system of high tariffs dating back to the last century.

The support was solid for the free trade agreement in Mulroney's native Quebec, the French-speaking province where entrepreneurship is credited for a 1980s economic revival, and in the Western oil-and-gas center of Alberta.

And the opposition was not solid enough in English-speaking Ontario, Canada's largest province, where the Liberals were counting on a strong showing to keep Mulroney from a majority.

"We have received considerable support in all regions," Mulroney said Tuesday. "We have received very heavy support in Quebec and Ontario and in the west. I think we have the right to say we have a national mandate."

About 75 percent of Canada's 17.5 million voters took part in the election. The Conservatives got 43 percent of the popular vote, the Liberals 32 and the New Democrats 20 percent.

Ex-Korean President Gives Public Apology For Abuses

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL, South Korea — Former President Chun Doo-hwan, saying he's "pained and ashamed" over human rights abuses and corruption during his rule, told the nation today that he is surrendering $24 million and going into internal exile.

But opposition leaders demanded a thorough investigation into corruption under Chun and said he must account for billions of dollars they contended was misappropriated. They doubted the apology would be sufficient.

"I am pained and ashamed of my past. I have no intention at all to make an excuse," Chun, looking tired and strained, said in a nationally televised 30-minute address.

"I have to bear full responsibility for the past seven years, which is branded by the people as an era of authoritarianism and misdeeds, although I tried to do my best in my way," Chun said.

"My dear people, I am really sorry," said the former general who took power with military backing in 1980.

He made a special apology for the bloody military suppression of a 1980 uprising by students and citizens in the southern city of Kwangju that left about 200 people dead. He described the incident as a "tragedy."

Chun said he was turning over his property to the government, including his Seoul house, two golf club memberships and $3.3 million in cash. He also said he would return about $20 million in political funds.

into exile at an undisclosed rural location in a traditional gesture of apology. Mrs. Lee wept while her president sat stone-faced in the car that took them away.

Millions of Koreans watched the live midmorning broadcast. People flocked around TV sets in shops and offices, and traffic was light as people stayed home to see Chun's apology.

News reports indicated Chun was going to a Buddhist monastery in mountains east of Seoul or possibly the country home of an industrialist. The government declined to reveal the location for security reasons.

About 50 radical students with firebombs and steel rods tried to rush Chun's home after the speech, but they were stopped by some of the 5,000 riot police ringing the area. Chun had already left.

"Arrest Chun Doo-hwan," protesters yelled as police dispersed them.

Radical students and dissidents called for daily protests to demand Chun's arrest. Dissident groups said the apology was an empty gesture and denounced President Roh Tae-woo for trying to protect his predecessor.

Seoul newspapers reported today that Roh plans to pardon Chun in the next few days and reshuffle the government to remove supporters of the former president. Officials declined comment.

Roh, another former general and close ally of Chun, is trying to defuse mounting public anger against the former president without damaging himself and the government he took over from Chun. Some opposition groups are calling for Roh's removal, contending he is a front for military rule.

Many observers doubt Chun's apology will defuse the crisis and Roh is expected to face more problems in coming weeks. Roh took office as Chun's seven-year term ended in February. He had won a presidential election by a plurality but not a majority, as the opposition vote was split by two candidates, Kim Dae-jung and Kim Young-sam.

Peru Shrinks Money To Curb Inflation

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LIMA, Peru — In an attempt to deal with a shrinking economy and runaway inflation, the government has devalued Peru's currency by 50 percent and imposed other severe austerity measures including food price increases.

Also Tuesday, leftist rebels launched a mortar attack on the Lima headquarters of the national security police and raided an isolated mountain town, capping a four-day wave of violence that has killed 41 people.

Though the country's two main leftist insurgencies are a serious problem for the government of President Alan Garcia, they do not pose as daunting a threat as Peru's grave economic crisis.

Announcing the devaluation of the inti, Economy Minister Abel Salinas also said the government would eliminate subsidies for basic food products in stages over the next six months because it lacks the money to finance them.

The first reduction will be implemented immediately and will double the prices of some food staples, Salinas said in a nationwide television address.

Severe economic measures implemented by the government in early September, including an 86 percent currency devaluation, did not succeed in reducing the country's huge deficit, said Salinas.

Salinas said the currency's official exchange rate was being devalued from 250 intis per dollar to 500 intis per dollar to boost exports and bring in badly needed dollars.

The inti traded Tuesday on the parallel market — a legal free-market currency exchange — for 625 to the dollar.

Burgeoning City Slums Change India's Face

By Richard M. Weintraub
LAT-WP News Service

BOMBAY, India — The image of India as a vast unchanging nation of villages is being swept away by the grim realities of the Bombay slum of Dharavi and thousands of others like it that are sprouting in cities across the country.

Dharavi is 432 acres of narrow lanes, barely wide enough for two people to squeeze past one another. More than 80,000 huts are home to nearly half a million people. There are only 162 public water taps and 842 public toilets, many of them unusable. Pools of fetid water and garbage stand only feet from doorways where children play.

As millions of Indians discover that village land can be subdivided no further and the countryside has no jobs or resources for the young graduates that schools so proudly produce, they migrate here and to India's other teeming cities to try to survive.

The same phenomenon is happening elsewhere around the world, from Jakarta to Cairo, Addis Ababa to Lagos, Mexico City to Sao Paulo. Megacities with populations of 15 million to 25 million are developing at a rate that has overwhelmed the capacity of governments and planners to provide enough sewers, water, streets, houses and health facilities to support the masses.

In the capital city of New Delhi this summer, millions went without water as the effects of a prolonged drought made clear what planners had long warned. When the rains finally came, a cholera epidemic broke out in the city's slums as wells became polluted from the human wastes that cover ditches, empty lots and even curbs because there is no sewer system.

It is a vicious cycle plaguing city after city. The lack of sewers creates conditions ripe for disease, and even if there were enough sewers, the water supplies are insufficient to make them functional.

The result is slums like Dharavi, where home to many is a couple of pieces of tin or plastic sheeting. For those on the very bottom of the heap, it is a place on the sidewalk — and even that comes at a price.

By the year 2000, when India's population is expected to reach 1 billion, three cities are projected to have at least 13 million people — Bombay, Calcutta and New Delhi. More importantly, perhaps, 95 cities are expected to top a million or more. By comparison, the United States, which is roughly three times larger than India, has no more than 40 metropolitan areas of similar size.

The one thought that no official here wants to express is that these could be conservative estimates. The projections are based on existing patterns of urban growth that saw 18 percent of India's people living in urban areas in 1961, 19.9 percent in 1971 and 23.3 percent in 1981.

By 2000, the demographers say, that figure will be 30 percent, or about 300 million city dwellers — as many as are projected for all of Africa, and more than the entire population of the United States.

For S.S. Tinayakar, the powerful municipal commissioner of Bombay, the statistics mean massive traffic jams, crumbling, ill-maintained buildings and proliferating slums. If Calcutta evokes the image of urban hell, Bombay may well be the new reality of India's urban nightmare.

Bombay, once colonial Britain's gateway to India, is still by far its most wealthy city. The city's factories generate one out of every 10 industrial jobs in the country. Its airport handles 60 percent of the country's international traffic and 40 percent of the domestic traffic. It provides one-third of all the national income tax receipts.

And for all this, Bombay is paying a price: an estimated 1,500 newcomers daily, all pouring onto an island with only 169 square miles of land already packed with about 10 million people.

"From 1971 to 1981, we added 2 million people, and there is nothing to indicate the increase has slowed because the city continues to produce wealth. Everyone who comes to Bombay earns something — maybe just by collecting metal bottle caps — but it is survival. That is why they come," said Tinayakar.

Nothing has stemmed the tide, not a ban on new industry, not employment guarantees elsewhere in Maharashtra state.

"All these steps have slowed the migration from Maharashtra, but people come from elsewhere. Go through the city. People working in roadside stands or small-scale industries come from the south. The businesses and factories are manned by people from the north. It is regionalized. They depend on one another," Tinayakar said.

If the jobs are there to draw the people to the bright lights of the city, the housing to shelter them is not.

"Shanty colonies make up 50 percent of all housing in Bombay," Tinayakar said. He also said about 100,000 people sleep on the pavement each night, a figure social workers say is anywhere from one-half to one-fifth the real number.

The situation has become so acute that officials now measure progress not in terms of new housing but in the extent to which slums can be "regularized" — squatter's rights recognized and basic amenities such as public water taps, community toilets and paved walkways with open sewers provided.

Plans to clear slum housing and replace them with new small units or high-rise apartments seem inadequate for all those in need, and they are irrelevant to the poorest of the migrants, who cannot afford to buy an apartment miles from the city center and then pay for transportation every day.

To make matters worse, an estimated 150 buildings a year collapse from neglect. With rent control often limiting rents to 1948 levels, landlords often allow buildings to crumble, and then rebuild free of the rent restraints.

The city is responding with programs to upgrade buildings or to allow tenants to take over buildings and refurbish them, a program that may benefit the middle class but does little for the slum-dweller.

If there is any real hope, it is that "New Bombay," an industrial city being carved out of the countryside on the mainland, will one day become the lightning rod that old Bombay is today. For now, as one Bombay political leader said in a candid moment, "with a lot of new resources, maybe, just maybe, we can hold on to what we have. Beyond that, there's not much hope." For those who have found their niche, life is not so much a battle to accumulate more as a fight to keep or improve what they have already managed to win.

When A.Y. Swamy came to Bombay 10 years ago from his native Tamil Nadu state, he found his way to Dharavi as had so many others before him. With a better-than-average income of 1,000 rupees — or about $70 — a month from his job as a tire-fitter, he eventually scraped together the 10,000 rupees — or about $700 — he needed to buy a 6-by-10 foot hut perched on the edge of a stinking sewer and garbage heap.

Swamy's hut has not yet been sanctioned by the authorities, but it is home for him, his wife and their three sons and it demonstrates that there is a lively real estate market even for slum housing.

According to Dharavi residents, a hut or a space that cost 5,000 rupees 10 or 15 years ago now can cost two or three times as much, depending on location and the bribes sometimes necessary to complete a deal.

Swamy came to Bombay because there were no jobs at home. D.A.

Naik came here in 1972 for other reasons.

"I had a love marriage, and it was not a good situation in the house. So we left and came to Bombay," said the Goa native who has become an activist for a slum-dweller's association.

He first got a job in a garage and then as a marketing assistant in a private company, where he still works. At night, he and his wife use their two-room hut to tutor local schoolchildren, adding to their income.

"People say Bombay is not good, but it has been good to us. No one has cheated us. You have to work and be tough, but it is good," said Naik.

Now, with a television set and shiny kitchen utensils, the Naiks are middle class by Indian standards and deeply suspicious of a new program to try to upgrade Dharavi.

When Bombay's Congress Party chief and former Mayor Murli Deora persuaded Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi to come to Bombay in 1986 for the centennial celebrations of the party's founding, the prime minister responded with 1 billion rupees — $80 million at the time, but worth much more in real buying power — to upgrade its slums.

If slums could not be eliminated, the officials decided that at least they could be made more livable. The task, however, has not proved easy.

Yarn-Wrapped Basket Has Popular 'Country Look'

Pat's Pointers
Pat Trexler

Here's a fun craft that's easily mastered, economical and versatile. Best of all it creates a beautiful, unique basket for flowers, sewing needs, fruit or anything you choose. This coiled, yarn-wrapped oval container with a country look can be made with or without a handle. Its finished size is 12 inches long, 9 inches wide and 5 inches high.

Four strands of worsted-weight acrylic yarn are wrapped around a coiling material as the basket is shaped. Once mastered, this simple technique can also be used to make trivets and any size or shape basket. Let your imagination go! As a bonus, it's a terrific way to use up your leftover yarns.

To obtain directions for making the Country Basket, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-112788 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. N-112788 by sending a check or money order for $12.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions, coiling and yarn in your choice of the following colors: gold/avocado, peach/brown, rose shades or blue shades.

Dear Pat: What fun to have readers share! My contribution is an "apple string ball." Using size 7 needles and red knitting worsted-weight yarn, cast on 18 stitches, knit 22 rows and bind off loosely. Sew cast-on and bound-off edges together. Gather the bottom edge by running yarn through the end stitches. Pull tight to close, fastening yarn securely. Place a ball of string in the middle of the piece, then gather the top edge closed.

Before closing this edge completely, pull the loose end of the string ball through the opening. Think of this short end of string as the stem. Garnish the finished apple with leaves made from green felt. — B.M.A., Jacksonville Beach, Fla.

Dear B.M.A.: Many thanks for sharing your idea. This would be a great learn-how project for children wanting to knit. It is quick and easy, and they would have something useful to keep or to give as gifts. It occurs to me that this would also make a clever pin cushion simply by stuffing it with strips cut from worn-out pantyhose.

Dear Pat: I would like to share with your readers one of my favorite "pick up anytime" knitting projects. I make knitted dish cloths by the dozens and my friends are always delighted to receive them.

You might wonder why people get excited over dish cloths, but these are just great. The nubby texture makes it a breeze to wipe off even stubborn, stuck-on food. They are prettier than most purchased cloths and they last for ages.

You should use one of the cotton yarns that are the same weight as knitting worsted. With size 8 or 9 knitting needles, cast on 4 stitches. Knit 2 rows even on these 4 stitches. For the next row, knit 2 stitches, yarnover, knit to end of row. Repeat this last row over and over until you have 44 stitches.

Then work as follows: Knit 1, knit

2 together, yarnover, knit 2 together, knit to end of row. Repeat this last row until you have 4 stitches remaining. Finish by knitting 2 rows even on the 4 stitches and bind off. Here's hoping your readers enjoy this pattern as much as I have. — Juanita Gray, North Myrtle Beach, S.C.

Dear Pat: Would you ask your readers if anyone has a knit or crochet pattern for a carry-all to hang on a walker? I would like to make these for some friends. — Marie Anne Fitzpatrick

Dear Marie Anne: Over the years, some of the best ideas featured in this column have come from readers, and I would like to encourage more to share their good, "quickie" ideas with us. Simple, small items, particularly when they can be made with leftover yarns, have the most appeal.

Few Hopes Left When Ex-Spouses Take Kids

By Paul Dean
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Our children, according to the perpetual assurances of everyone from politicians to social workers, are America's highest resource, its purest investment.

"That's a bunch of verbiage," snapped Glenda Geehan. Her son Luka, 7, was abducted from San Francisco by her former husband in 1986 and taken to Yugoslavia. She hasn't seen her son since, their only contact having been one 30-second telephone conversation. And Geehan is not encouraged by remedies offered by U.S. government officials.

"It's all hypocrisy," said Holly Planells of what she sees as lip-service paid to the sanctity of American childhood. Huey, her 5-year-old son, was taken to Jordan by his father in 1986. Mother and son meet once a year in Amman. The two-week visit is divided into daily 12-hour meetings in a locked room. The boy speaks only Arabic.

"It is like visiting your son at a penitentiary," said Planells. She paused and sighed deeply and lessened the shrill in her voice.

Carl Schwarz, a Los Angeles attorney, former military officer and one-time international business traveler, said that in his situation the U.S. government and its agencies "haven't done a damned thing but screw up in numerous ways."

His situation is that Marlon Schwarz, a teen-age son, was abducted to Britain in 1985 by Schwarz's former wife. Despite a California court order awarding custody to the father, a British court has assumed jurisdiction and denied Schwarz access to his son.

Schwarz, 52, the operator of a small West Los Angeles law clinic and still recovering from a 1984 bankruptcy, flew to London in November, where he is appealing the Royal Court's ruling.

He has made almost a dozen court appearances. The crusade has cost $15,000 and in London he sleeps in a Salvation Army hostel. In further defiance of the British ruling, Schwarz has taken his story to the British media, petitioned his son's teachers for information and attempted to deliver birthday gifts to the school.

"I once asked (a Scotland Yard detective) to arrange a meeting in some safe setting, with me in chains if he wanted, but just to let me see my son," said Schwarz. "They wouldn't. In all this time (three years) I have seen him for one hour and 20 minutes and been allowed maybe two or three phone calls."

There's obvious desperation, stubbornness and obsessive focus in his mood common to parents who have lost their children overseas to kidnapping by former spouses.

Since 1975, the U.S. Department of State has handled more than 2,500 cases of parental abductions. Conservatively, said a federal spokesman, that translates to 6,000 children, with California, New York and metropolitan Washington reporting the most abductions.

Currently, he said, the department has 650 "active files" and more than 350 children are added to the tally each year.

How many of those youngsters will be returned remains a hesitant guess. Said Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., one of several politicians currently committed to the issue: "We won't ever get all these kids back. ... We'll make some gains, we'll make some difference ... but between you and me, the only people (parents) that ever succeeded were the people who had a little money and bought somebody to go snatch their kids back."

One such parent is Cathy Mahone, a Dallas real estate agent.

Last year, Lauren, her 7-year-old daughter, was abducted to Jordan by Ali Bayan, Mahone's former husband. Mother made the rounds at Texas courts, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Department of State. Typically, they could offer only token assistance.

So in January, Mahone, 32, paid $100,000 to a Fayetteville, N.C., security company staffed by former Green Berets and Delta Force troops. Its commando team snatched Lauren from a school bus near the dusty Jordanian town of Jareesh, drove her to Israel and arranged a flight to the United States.

Mother and daughter have since changed their names and assumed new lives in another state to reduce the possibility of a counterabduction.

"The saddest part of all this," said Mahone from hiding, "is that Lauren and her father are not going to have any relationship at all. She has lost her daddy."

Bob Burton of Santa Barbara, Calif., arranges such mercenary rescues. A Vietnam War veteran, a former member of military and civilian intelligence communities, and a bounty hunter who was a technical consultant on the movie "Midnight Run," he recently returned abducted American children from Mexico and Peru.

"Any parent interested in such a recovery should anticipate spending between $35,000 and $55,000 for an operation in the Americas," he said. "For a Middle East recovery, you're talking $130,000 and up because of the risks, distance and operational difficulties involved."

On any mission, he said, it is advisable to take the contracting parent along "to minimize the kidnapping scenario and to comfort the child ... because in this business, you've got to be somewhere between Dr. Spock and Attila the Hun."

Those working for the return of kidnapped children concede that there have been isolated successes through formal, legal means, usually with America's allies — Britain, Australia and the Netherlands.

But the vast majority of parents of abducted children spend their lives meandering sadly through exasperation. On one hand they are victims of an undisputed criminal act. On the other, they complain, quick, permanent and legal resolution is made impossible by what they see as government indifference and tangled priorities.

Here, as seen through the experience of Geehan, 33, a personnel consultant in San Francisco, is how it doesn't work.

In 1981, Geehan married Paul Djurovic, a graduate of Hastings Law School, an immigration specialist and licensed private investigator. Djurovic, born in Yugoslavia, had lived in the United States for 16 years and was a naturalized citizen.

A son, Luka, was born. The marriage failed and Glenda and Paul divorced in 1983. They agreed, she said, on joint custody of Luka.

In July 1986 — after Glenda Djurovic had agreed that her former husband could take Luka to Yugoslavia on vacation — Paul Djurovic telephoned from Frankfurt, West Germany.

"He said that he was never coming back again and that he was disappearing with Luka," said Geehan. "I screamed in helplessness on the telephone. He was just talking, not listening, just saying that if I gave him sole custody of Luka he would come back."

Djurovic's subsequent letters from Yugoslavia proved to San Francisco law enforcers that he had indeed left the country. A warrant was issued for his arrest for child stealing. In addition, a federal charge of interstate flight to avoid prosecution was filed and Luka Djurovic's name was entered in the bureau's National Crime Information Center computer.

Realistically, however, neither warrant can be enforced unless the subject returns to the United States. Nor will there be extradition by foreign governments, who consider parental abduction a domestic matter best left to the courts of interested nations.

On This Day Of Thanks, Don't Worry, Be Happy

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Dear Readers: An update on my traditional Thanksgiving column: Tomorrow is Thanksgiving, so why not take a few minutes to count your blessings?

How's your health? You have a few minor complaints? Well, thank God they're not major. Obviously, you're still alive. You can probably think of at least one person who isn't around this year.

If you awakened this morning and were able to hear the birds sing, use your vocal cords to utter human sounds, walk to the breakfast table on two good legs and read the newspaper with two good eyes (or even one), praise the Lord! A lot of people couldn't.

How's your pocketbook? Thin? Well, most of the world is a lot poorer. No pensions. No welfare. No food stamps. No Social Security. No Medicare. In fact, one-third of the people in the world will go to bed hungry tonight. Would you rather be in Bangladesh, Ethiopia or Nicaragua?

Are you lonely? The way to have a friend is to be one. If nobody calls you, pick up the phone and call somebody. Go out of your way to do something nice for somebody. It's a sure cure for the blues.

Are you concerned about your country's future? Hooray! Our system has been saved by such concern. If you don't like your elected officials, you can go to work and vote them out of office. We still have the soapbox and the ballot box.

Freedom rings! You can still worship at the church of your choice, or not worship at all if you don't want to. You can cast a secret ballot, and even criticize your government without fearing a knock on the head or a knock on your door in the middle of the night.

And if you want to live under a different system, goodbye and good luck! You are free to go. There are no walls or fences to keep you here.

As a final thought, I'll repeat my Thanksgiving prayer; perhaps you will want to use it at your table tomorrow:

O, heavenly Father: We thank thee for food and remember the hungry.

We thank thee for health and remember the sick.

We thank thee for friends and remember the friendless.

We thank thee for freedom and remember the enslaved.

May these remembrances stir us to service

That thy gifts to us may be used for others. Amen.

Have a wonderful Thanksgiving, and may God bless you and yours. — Love, ABBY

By the way, want an instant high? The surest cure for the post-holiday blues is to do something nice for someone. Why not call someone who lives alone and invite him (or her) to join you for lunch or dinner?

Better yet, call and say, "I'm coming to get you, and I'll see that you get home." (Many older people don't drive, and those who do don't like to go out alone after dark.)

P.S. Special greetings to those of you in the military who wrote from remote corners of the world to tell me that you are using my Thanksgiving prayer.

Is your social life in a slump? Get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular" — for people of all ages. To order, send your name and address, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher today in quiet pre-Thanksgiving trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 3.91 to 2,081.61 in the first half hour this morning.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 5 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 519 up, 314 down and 546 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 17.54 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

In the economic news, the Commerce Department reported that new factory orders for durable goods increased 2.4 percent in October. The gain was concentrated in defense orders, which are traditionally volatile, and had little visible effect on stocks.

Energy issues were steady to higher on reports that suggested the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries was getting closer to agreement on a production-quota plan aimed at bolstering world oil prices.

Amoco rose  $\frac{3}{8}$  to 71 $\frac{3}{4}$ ; Atlantic-Richfield gained  $\frac{3}{8}$  to 78 $\frac{1}{2}$ , and Exxon was unchanged at 42 $\frac{3}{8}$ .

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks climbed .33 to 150.88. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .94 at 289.16.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 11.73 to 2,077.70.

Advancing issues slightly outnumbered declines on the NYSE, with 713 up, 700 down and 533 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 127 million shares, against 120.43 million in the previous session.

Five Arrested On Drug Charges

The Pitt County Sheriff's Department made five drug arrests Tuesday in connection with a four-month long undercover operation.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said deputies arrested Gentry Huggins, 27, of Ayden, and Johnny Stanley, 23, Elaine Wilson, 30, Chad Reel, 17, and Morris Ginn, all of Pitt County. Tyson said Ginn's age was not available and specific addresses for the defendants were also not available.

More arrests stemming from the undercover operation are likely, Tyson said.

Huggins was charged with three counts of sale and delivery of cocaine, two counts of possession with intent to sell and deliver cocaine, and 10 counts of conspiring to sell and deliver cocaine. He is being held in the Pitt County Jail under $190,000 bond.

Stanley was charged with two counts of sale and delivery of cocaine, two counts of possession with intent to sell and deliver cocaine, and 10 counts of conspiring to sell and deliver cocaine. He is being held on a $90,000 bond.

Ms. Wilson was charged with one count of sale and delivery of cocaine, one count of possession with intent to sell and deliver cocaine, one count of sale and delivery of marijuana, one count of possession with intent to sell and deliver marijuana, and five counts of conspiracy. She is being held on a $70,000 bond.

Reel was charged with four counts of conspiracy and is being held on a $4,000 unsecured bond, according to Tyson.

Ginn was charged with one count of possession with intent to sell and deliver cocaine and one count of conspiracy. He is being held on a $5,000 unsecured bond.

Court Sessions To Increase In Pitt County

Nicholls said there are also a number of pending cases in Prosecutorial District 3-B, which consists of Carteret, Craven and Pamlico counties, but that district is not growing as rapidly as Pitt County, which makes up Prosecutorial District 3-A.

Craven County operates criminal District Court four days a week; Carteret County also works with four-day weeks and does not always have District Court every week of the month.

There should be adequate time in District Court next year, but there will likely be a pinch for courtroom time in Superior Court.

"I think the real problem, in January, is going to be getting the Superior Court I need," Haigwood said.

James G. Exum Jr., chief justice of the state Supreme Court, allots Pitt County 33 weeks of Superior Court a year, and Haigwood has to request additional weeks of special court to dispose of cases.

This year, the county received 12 additional weeks of court, two weeks short of Haigwood's request.

In the first six months of 1989, Haigwood wants 10 weeks of special court, an amount he said is needed to continue to move cases through the system at an adequate rate.

Nicholls said he is working with officials from the state Administrative Office of the Courts to get a second Superior Court judge assigned to Pitt County for the first session of 1989 to handle the special court Haigwood has requested.

The General Assembly has restructured the Superior Court districts and created some new positions, according to Franklin Freeman Jr., director of the AOC.

The changes have occurred over the last two years and will add five Superior Court judgeships to the state's total, raising it to 77.

In response to a lawsuit that claimed the state's system of electing judges hurt chances of minorities, the General Assembly created nine new Superior Court judgeships statewide. Each new judge was elected from a newly-created district and may take office Jan. 1.

Apart from the redistricting, the General Assembly also created a new judgeship in Robeson County.

The restructuring will increase the number of Superior Court judges in the 32-county judicial division in eastern North Carolina from 14 to 17. Judges in the region usually rotate among the eight judicial districts in the eastern part of the state.

There are new judges from Hertford County, New Hanover County and Wilson County, where Wilson attorney G.K. Butterfield won the new judgeship. Butterfield has been assigned to District 3-B for the first six months of 1989.

But the General Assembly essentially canceled part of the benefit of the new judges by doing away with eight special judgeships about two years ago.

The governor was able to appoint the special judges, who were not assigned to a specific district and worked anywhere in the state where they were needed.

But in the last year and a half, lawmakers have created three new special judgeships. Freeman said, and Republican Gov. Jim Martin has used the opportunity to appoint GOP judges.

With the General Assembly dropping eight judgeships but creating 13 new ones, the net gain for the state is five judgeships.

David E. Reid Jr. of Greenville and Herbert O. Phillips III of Morehead City currently serve the 3rd Judicial District, which is also made up of Pitt, Carteret, Craven and Pamlico counties.

But under the changes, the district will be split in 1989, with Reid staying on as the resident judge in Pitt, which will be called District 3-A. Phillips will serve as the resident judge for the remaining three counties, or District 3-B. He has been assigned to District 3-B the last half of 1989.

Instead of sharing two judges among four counties, Pitt will benefit by having one resident Superior Court judge who does not have to divide his time, Haigwood said. Reid has been assigned to Pitt County for the first six months of 1989.

Court Takes Rest

Haigwood said. But the week of Halloween, the number of new cases that entered the system skyrocketed to 2,500.

The Christmas break is no official deadline to process cases, but Haigwood said he usually tries to concentrate on jail cases in December.

"You try to work on your jail cases those last weeks," he said. "You know if you don't dispose of them, you're not going to get to them until January."

Dec. 12 is the last week of Superior Court set for the county this year, therefore any cases not disposed of by then will probably be carried into 1989.

District Court is scheduled for every week in December, with Christmas breaks set for Dec. 20-23 and Dec. 26.

The new year is also a benchmark which Haigwood can use to see that any case a year old is disposed of promptly. He receives a monthly printout from the state Administrative Office of the Courts of the pending cases, and any case a year old is calendered as soon as possible.

Even with the backlog of cases, Haigwood's system has been successful. James G. Exum Jr., chief justice of the state Supreme Court, has commended Haigwood for operating one of the most efficient districts in the state.

From the time a person is arrested in Pitt County until the case is out of the court system takes an average of 80 days, Haigwood said.

Cavaliers End 10-Year Road Losing String Against Boston

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — Isiah Thomas was held to only 6 points, but Joe Dumars stepped in to score a game-high 26 points as Detroit captured a 99-93 victory over the Charlotte Hornets.

"I got my shots early because the fellows knew I was hot," Dumars said. "We have a lot of great scorers on this team. This time, they just went to me."

The fourth-year guard sparked a decisive 14-8 run in the second period, lifting the Pistons from a 29-28 deficit.

A Dumars jumper with 6:12 left gave Detroit a 42-35 advantage. By halftime, he had scored 20 points and Detroit led 54-46.

Playing before its second sellout crowd in four home games, Charlotte got back within 67-65 on a Kurt Rambis tip-in with 3:33 left in the third period.

"When you play a tough club like Detroit," Hornets guard Rickey Green said, "you can get some satisfaction from playing them close."

The satisfaction was short-lived as, after a timeout, Bill Laimbeer's six points paced a 12-2 run.

The Pistons took a 79-67 lead into the final period, and Charlotte pulled no closer than the final margin.

"I knew it was going to be a difficult game," Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said. "We got a 'W' and we can't go around hanging our heads even though this is an expansion team."

Robert Reid scored 19 points for Charlotte and Kurt Rambis scored 16 with 14 rebounds.

Charlotte scored the game's first five points before Detroit tied it at seven on Dumars' jumper with 9:53 left. Dumars scored 12 points in the first quarter.

Laimbeer, who scored eight in the first quarter, gave Detroit its first lead at 19-17 on a jumper with 5:46 left. But rookie Rex Chapman scored six points in the final three minutes and the Hornets went ahead 29-28.

Detroit opened the second quarter with a 14-6 run. Dumars' jumper gave the Pistons a 42-35 lead with 6:12 remaining in the first half.

Cavaliers 114, Celtics 102
Boston has not had a losing month since Larry Bird joined the Celtics in the autumn of 1979. That streak may soon end.

The Cleveland Cavaliers ended a 10-year, 26-game road losing streak against Boston on Tuesday night, beating the Celtics 114-102 behind 28 points by Mark Price and 22 by Larry Nance.

Boston is 4-6 and has five games left in November, playing Milwaukee, Charlotte and New Jersey at home and traveling to Atlanta and New Jersey.

"We didn't have intensity on defense and we played very poorly," Robert Parish said. "It was a poor showing of Celtic basketball. We were stagnant on offense and not moving around."

Celtics coach Jimmy Rodgers said his team was inconsistent.

"What we can't accomplish right now is to get a decent run at both ends of the floor," he said. "When we're going good on offense, we're not playing well defensively and when we play well defensively, we haven't played well offensively. That's the way it's been all year and we have to find a way to solve that."

"We're a herky-jerky team right now. I'll be patient as long as the effort is there. We have players who are good enough to win, but right now we are not a very good team and we have to keep working on that."

Cleveland had not beaten Boston on the road since a 115-101 victory Oct. 13, 1978. The streak included two games in Hartford.

"It's just another road win for us," said Brad Daugherty, who scored 16 points. "Our defense played well and that's something we take pride in. With or without Bird, they have to come to play every game just like us."

In other games, Portland beat Seattle 125-104, Indiana beat Milwaukee 105-91, the Los Angeles Lakers beat New York 110-98, Denver beat New Jersey 141-106, Philadelphia beat Washington 130-103, Detroit beat Charlotte 99-93 and Chicago beat Sacramento 114-98.

Danny Ainge scored 28 points for Boston. Kevin McHale had 20 and Parish had 16 and 10 rebounds. Trail Blazers 125, SuperSonics 104

Jerome Kersey and Kevin Duckworth scored 27 points each and Seattle was charged with eight technicals.

Two fights broke out in the second quarter and Portland's Steve Johnson and Seattle's Xavier McDaniel were ejected.

Seattle coach Bernie Bickerstaff, Alton Lister and Cage were given technicals for yelling at the officials and the SuperSonics were given three technicals for illegal defenses.

Dale Ellis scored 22 points for Seattle.

Pacers 105, Bucks 91
In its first start under new coach George Irvine, Indiana won its first game of the season, pulling away as Chuck Person scored 10 of his 18 points in the fourth quarter.

Cleveland, 0-7 before Jack Ramsay quit and 0-2 for assistants Mel Daniels and Dave Twardzik, gave Milwaukee its third consecutive defeat.

Indiana led 65-63 and then went on a 10-0 run. The Pacers started a 9-0 run 32 seconds into the fourth quarter, taking a 90-71 lead with 10:10 left.

Vern Fleming scored 20 points for Indiana. Paul Pressey scored 15 for Milwaukee. Jeff Grayer, out since training camp with the chicken pox, added 13 in his NBA debut.

Jabbar Begins Farewell Tour

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar expects three of his 25 farewell ceremonies to be special, and he wasn't disappointed at the first tribute, in his hometown.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, 41, in his last scheduled NBA appearance at Madison Square Garden, was honored Tuesday night by fans to whom he was "always the focus of resentment."

In halftime ceremonies at the Knicks-Los Angeles Lakers game, Abdul-Jabbar, the NBA's all-time leading scorer and six-time Most Valuable Player, got a standing ovation he said surprised him.

"One thing you know about New York fans is they're going to give their exact feelings, no holds barred," Abdul-Jabbar said after his Lakers beat the Knicks 110-98. "It was great hearing it from the fans. What they give you is from the heart and that's special."

"Having lived here, I know they don't give you anything if you don't earn it. I guess I earned it."

Abdul-Jabbar, playing his 20th NBA season, said he expects New York "to be the most intense ceremony out of the whole trip because it's home. Milwaukee will be special because they treated me great there. The others are just stops on the NBA schedule."

Abdul-Jabbar will say farewell to Milwaukee, where he played the first six years of his career, on Dec. 11. The Lakers' final home game will be April 23, seven days after his 42nd birthday.

At the halftime ceremonies, Abdul-Jabbar began by telling the sellout crowd of 19,951, "What can I say at a moment like this? I've had some tough moments and you were the cause of that. But tonight you are responsible for something wonderful and special."

Knicks captains Mark Jackson and Patrick Ewing presented Abdul-Jabbar with a sterling silver "big apple" and a large picture frame with his championship jerseys from Power Memorial High School in New York, UCLA, the Milwaukee Bucks, his first NBA team, and the Lakers.

Under the uniforms was the inscription, "Always A Champion."

Abdul-Jabbar's parents, Al and Cora Alcindor, former teammates from Power Memorial and two of his pro coaches, Larry Costello and Pat Riley, were present for the ceremonies.

"When you go out there with guys you played with as a teen-ager, it's emotional," Abdul-Jabbar said.

"He always approaches everything professionally and dispassionately, but I think this one got to him," Lakers coach Riley said. "Kareem's got to enjoy it. He can't look at it like drudgery. He's played 28 years and he deserves it."

"I think the people of New York showed a lot of class," teammate

Magic Johnson said. "I think the people of New York admire him, respect him and are going to miss him. Sometimes when I'm on the court and look over at No. 33, something deep inside me moves me. And I realize how I'm going to miss playing with him."

Abdul-Jabbar concluded his brief remarks by quoting a song from James Brown.

"This may be the last time we make plans, it may be the last time we shake hands, but I thank you from the bottom of my heart," he said.

Abdul-Jabbar, who played his first game in Madison Square Garden as a high school freshman in 1961, received his first standing ovation when the starting lineups were introduced before the game. He acknowledged the crowd with a raise of his hand.

Abdul-Jabbar, averaging just 7.4 points per game this season, bettered that in the first half with eight points and finished with 12.

Laycock Gets ECU Interview

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

William & Mary football coach Jimmy Laycock was interviewed Tuesday as a candidate for the vacant East Carolina University head football coaching position.

The advisory committee met Tuesday, but members of the committee refused to say whether Laycock was indeed interviewed. Laycock was supposed to have held a season-ending press conference in Williamsburg, Va., Tuesday, but canceled it without explanation. However, a member of Laycock's staff at William & Mary confirmed that Laycock was in Greenville to be interviewed.

Kevin Gilbride, the current offensive coordinator at East Carolina, was expected to be interviewed today, another source said. Appalachian State head coach Sparky Woods, reported by some to be receiving an interview today, is reportedly still in Boone.

Woods, contacted at home Tuesday night, said he had no plans to be in Greenville and had scheduled a meeting with his team for the day.

As far as a future meeting was concerned, Woods said, "I just don't know. I'd rather not talk about it. My athletic director (Jim Garner) has asked me not to comment on job-related type matters."

Woods, however, did not rule out a possible meeting with ECU.

Others who may also receive interviews are Miami offensive coordinator Gary Stevens; South Carolina assistant Al Groh, former head coach at Wake Forest; and George Chaump, head coach at Marshall.

The advisory committee will make recommendations to ECU athletic director Dave Hart, who serves as chairman of the committee. Hart has said that he hopes to announce a new coach the first week in December.

Nee-Nee-Nee-Nee, Nee-Nee-Nee-Nee! You've Crossed The Line You've Entered The Vitale Zone

By David Aldridge
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BRISTOL, Conn. — You're in another dimension, a dimension of sight, of sound, of mind. A dimension where the only limits are the limits of your imagination. A dimension where a 49-year-old, balding man screams into microphones in packed auditoriums, saying unintelligible things.

... This guy's a PTP, and he'll take the Reggie whenever he can, don't look for any Pete Roses here. He doesn't make the all-Rip Van Winkle team, but he's an all-Avis, no doubt about it. He gets QT, and when he makes the J, you need a TO, before it's Blowout City."

You've crossed the line to ... The Vitale Zone.

The time was last March, during the basketball-a-thon known as the NCAA basketball tournament, and Dick Vitale, college basketball's pre-eminent (and ubiquitous) analyst, was in his element. This was the first day of the first round, with ESPN — one of Dick Vitale's employers — broadcasting 11½ hours of hoops.

And Dick Vitale was rolling. Dick Vitale knew everyone in the studio by name. Dick Vitale was eating dinner. Dick Vitale was on the phone. Dick Vitale was back in the studio talking about high school phenoms.

Louisiana State Coach Dale Brown came in for an interview, and Dick Vitale begged him to mention a roast the following week in Dick Vitale's honor. Brown obliged. Then, Dick Vitale got upset about West Coast coaches who accuse the Eastern press of belittling their teams. He accused colleague Tim Brando of buttering up someone.

"Dick's like plutonium," said his ESPN studio partner, Bob Ley. "A little goes a long way."

It's the nature of the Cult of Dick Vitale. People talk about being Rolls Roycers; kids wear skinhead wigs and "Dick Vitale Fan Club" T-shirts; and athletes dream of being called PTPs. All this the creation of an ex-coach, whose new autobiography is drawing raves, who now commands a salary well into six figures and no longer can answer requests for speaking engagements personally.

He's a DPG — a Daisy Petal Guy. You either love him or you love him not.

"It just blows my mind," Dick Vitale says of his popularity. "I think it's something I'm flattered by. I certainly appreciate that attention. I'm a hot-dog. I love it all. It's part of my personality."

That was, and is, Dick Vitale's element, being able to watch a dozen hours of college hoops. The week before the NCAA tournament, he had done eight games in seven days, working for ESPN and ABC along the way. He doesn't like missing his daughter's communion, but what choice does he have?

"The college basketball tournament is, to me, the greatest sporting event of all," he said during a break, stuffing salad into his mouth. "Naturally, I'm prejudiced, because I'm a basketball junkie. But I think that the factor of the one-game elimination makes it so special. You can win an NHL championship or the World Series, and lose three times, and still be a champ. What makes this so amazing ... one slip, one bad night, and it's all over."

He spoke from experience, based on his coaching stints at the University of Detroit and with the Detroit Pistons. Fired by the Pistons in 1978, he went to work for ESPN, then a fledgling outsider cable outfit. Now it reaches more than 50 million homes. Combined with his weekly broadcasts on ABC, he now has a huge audience and following.

"He's built his own cult," NBC-TV analyst Al McGuire said, "and in my opinion it couldn't happen to a nicer guy. I envy his level of excitement. You've gotta have a good head. You can't go into those games blind-sided."

He screams into microphones, talking about "basketball madness," and he has his shtick. But it hides both his knowledge of the game and his network of coaches, scouts and other "overdosers," as McGuire calls them. It's a formidable collection, one that has given Dick Vitale more than one inside scoop.

"I have a lot of sources out there, people who I've developed relationships with," he said. "I always tease (CBS-TV analyst Billy) Packer. I was in the gym. I coached. I said I've got to get Billy Packer a coaching job to find out if he could coach or not. I hear him on the air and he's undefeated. But never was on the sideline to call a timeout. At least I did."

In the studio, he is constrained by time limitations — mere seconds as the studio hosts switch from game to game. When he does color commentary, he has time for his Vitale-isms. A Rolls Roycer is the best there is. A Marconi Special is a telegraphed pass. And on and on, sometimes past the point of being tiresome.

"That's my personality," he said. "My bottom line is we're in the entertainment business as well as the educational. If I wanted to bore that viewer, just X and O to death, I could do that. But I think that one of the problems in television now, whether it is basketball, football or baseball, we are making the game so technical that half of the people are in Z-ville, Sleepyland, and they're bored."

That doesn't mean he doesn't ruffle some feathers. A couple of years ago, Dick Vitale was disgusted with the University of Oklahoma's lack of defense, and said on the air that he would send Sooners Coach Billy Tubbs a book explaining defense. Tubbs replied, "If Dick Vitale is so smart, how come he's not coaching instead of making an ass of himself?"

Dick Vitale said he and Tubbs are good friends, that Tubbs understands he was just trying to be honest.

"He really bleeds for the coaches," Ley said. "It really does bother him. I think on a personal level, when guys get on him when he doesn't perceive any good reason."

He has critics. A Sports Illustrated article last season accused Dick Vitale of self-promotion, saying "the ego of college basketball's frog prince is out of control" and that "his self-importance is starting to get in the way of his often perceptive commentary."

The article described what Dick Vitale is like.

Nestor To Lead Strong Patriot Squad

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

(This is the last of a series of articles on the prospects of Colonial Athletic Association basketball teams.)

Ernie Nestor stepped into the George Mason University head basketball coaching position and promptly was loaded with the pressure of being the pre-season choice of the media to win the league championship.

Nestor, the third head coach in as many years at George Mason, has the league's top player, Kenny Sanders, back for his senior campaign, and while part of last year's cast has departed, there is enough back to bring on the feeling of a championship year.

Nestor comes to George Mason after having served the previous three years at the University of California. He follows in the footsteps of Joe Harrington, who left GMU two years ago and went to Long Beach State, also in California.

and Rick Barnes, a former GMU coach, who returned for one year before heading out to Providence.

Coming into a head coaching position and finding you have the Player of the Year in the conference coming back, of course, is something that can only make a coach happy.

If Nestor can come up with quality at the point guard, he figures the Patriots will be in good shape. He has experience returning at all the other positions.

Unfortunately, point guard is one of the most important positions and can make or break a team. Nestor points out.

Amp Davis, who averaged 13.5 points and six assists, handled the point last year, but has graduated. Steve Smith, a 6-3 forward, may end up in that position, which will be new to him. Smith averaged 10.2 points and 4.3 rebounds last season.

Also gone from the backcourt are two other starters, Brian Miller, who averaged 12.5 points, and Darin Satterthwaite, who started 12 games. Miller was one of the country's best three-point shooters, hitting 50.9 percent on 173 tries.

Smith, who was the sixth man last year in the backcourt, is expected to be joined by Earl Moore, a 6-0 senior. Moore started 17 games and averaged 8.8 points before breaking a bone in his hand late in the season.

Up front, of course, the Patriots return Sanders, who averaged 22.0 points and 9.1 rebounds, both tops in the CAA. Sanders has the opportunity to end his career with over 2,000 points and 1,000 rebounds, a rare feat. He begins the year with 1,479 points and 700 rebounds.

Joining him in the front court will be Robert Dykes, a 6-7 sophomore, who averaged 7.1 points and 5.2 rebounds last year. Dykes entered school after having served five years in the U.S. Navy, and promptly was named to the all-rookie team.

Others who can help up front include Kevin McNamara, a 6-6 junior, Joe Lucas, a 6-8 sophomore, and Danny Deane, a 6-6 sophomore, all of whom gained experience last season. Deane and Lucas were both sidelined with injuries for part of the year however. Deane broke an ankle and Lucas, a thumb.

Henri Abrams, a 6-11 sophomore, sat out last year, while Eric Johnson, a 6-4 sophomore and Harold Westbrook, a 6-5 sophomore, round out those returning.

Nestor will also have four newcomers to the team, 6-4 forward Chuck Broadnax, 5-10 guard Mike Hargett, 6-2 swing man Jimmy Heffner, and 6-4 swingman Steve Moran. Hargett and Heffner are freshmen, while Moran is a sophomore and Broadnax is a junior college transfer. Moran transferred from North Carolina Wesleyan and sat out last year.

Nestor said he plans little changes in the Mason strategy. "We will be aggressive at both ends of the court. I like a style that allowed them to display their athletic ability. It is a style that allows you to use good player rotation."

Mason averaged 81.1 points a game last year and surpassed the century mark four times in posting a 20-10 record. Their 9-5 record tied them for second place in the league standings.

NCAS Seeking '93 University Games

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK — They first clashed a half-decade ago in the battle for the 1987 U.S. Olympic Festival. Now they're trying to out-bid each other for the 1993 World University Games.

With the help of satellite hookups and video presentations, officials of North Carolina Amateur Sports said Tuesday that they again hope to beat out their counterparts from Buffalo, N.Y., for another major multisports competition.

NCAS, which was host of the 1987 festival, has prepared a $34 million budget, including in-kind contributions, and lined up facilities from the Smith Center, Reynolds Coliseum and Cameron Indoor Stadium to Garner High School's football stadium to land the international event, NCAS President Hill Carrow said at a news conference Tuesday at which NCAS' bid was announced.

It's all in preparation for a showdown Dec. 2 in Colorado Springs, Colo.

That's when the executive committee of the U.S. Collegiate Sports Council, including N.C. State's Nora Lynn Finch, will meet to hear final presentations from the Triangle and Buffalo, then select one as the U.S. candidate for the 1993 version of the biennial games, which never have been held in the United States.

More than 900,000 people could attend the World University Games, which would have an economic impact of more than $175 million on the area, NCAS officials said.

And while area sponsors would provide much of the funding for the Olympic Festival, Carrow said he anticipated that a large portion of the funding for the World University Games would come from national and international companies.

"Either area (Buffalo or the Triangle) could easily handle the games," Nick Rodis, executive director of the collegiate sports council, said in a telephone interview with The News and Observer of Raleigh on Tuesday night.

"Both have the facilities," he said, referring to the numerous sites that would need to host more than 7,000 athletes and officials from 130 countries who would participate in the games' 11 sports.

While the Olympic Festival was limited to four men's and four women's teams in each of the 34 sports, the World University Games could have 30 to 40 men's teams playing 160 games in a sport such as basketball, Carrow said.

Thus, the need for additional playing facilities such as the gymnasiums as Raleigh's Broughton and Sanderson high schools and the football field at Garner, which would be used for soccer.

Housing also would differ greatly from the festival, Carrow said.

Whereas NCAS tried to place athletes in housing near their competition site during the festival, athletes would be housed by country in a secure village at the games.

Plans call for areas of the south campus at UNC and the west campus at N.C. State to be used for World University Games housing, Carrow said.

The NCAS president said he considered the Triangle bid to be strong because no facilities would need to be built for the games, the area has widely recognized universities and the NCAS gained experience in hosting the 1987 Olympic Festival, which was attended by more than 400,000 spectators.

Carrow said that Buffalo's strongest point probably was that it could house all of the visiting athletes and officials at one university site.

Rodis, who has inspected facilities in the Triangle and Buffalo, declined to outline the strengths or weaknesses of either site, but he agreed with fellow council member George Killian that the chances of the Colorado Springs winner landing the games are very good.

Killian, one of three vice presidents of the games' governing body, Federation Internationale du Sport Universitaire, or FISU, said in a separate interview, "I'm sure we have enough votes (on the FISU executive committee) to make the U.S. the site of the games in 1993."

FISU will hear presentations from any country that might want to bid for the games during the 1989 World University Games in Sao Paulo, Brazil, and its executive committee will make a final decision in fall 1989, Killian said.

James Goodman, chairman of the board of NCAS, said the organization had received great support from area universities, cities and government in its bid, just as it had during the festival.

And noting that the games were for university students, he said: "This is right for us because 1993 is the 200th anniversary of public higher education in the United States, and the first public university to open in the United States was the University of North Carolina."

You've Entered Vitale Zone...

Vitale said on the air during two games: Dick Vitale having dinner with Ohio State's Gary Williams, lunch with Michigan's Bill Frieder, talking with Ohio State guard Curtis Wilson (with Wilson begging Dick Vitale to call him "Colonel" on the air), getting the scoop on whether North Carolina's J.R. Reid will go hardship in the NBA draft. Lots of Dick Vitale, little analysis.

"I thought that was a total unfair thing," Dick Vitale said. "John Chaney told me things (during the NCAA tournament). I was up with him until 1:30 in the morning, just John and I. ... Now he tells me a lot of things. Why shouldn't I share that with the people?"

When Dick Vitale's father finished his day shift pressing coats in the factory, where he would get paid by the coat, he would put on a cop's uniform and be a security guard until midnight. Seven in the morning until midnight. Every day. And Dick Vitale doesn't think what he does, as a result, is really work at all.

He was a good young athlete — a guard, a quarterback, a pitcher. But a childhood accident left his left eye virtually useless. It meant he couldn't pursue an athletic career when he matriculated at Seton Hall. It took him away from the games. In fact, Dick Vitale was as far away from big-time arenas as one can get in 1971, when he was teaching sixth grade.

But he loved basketball, and stayed connected. He still talked the game, was in locker rooms when kids grumbled about not getting any playing time — shortened to PT. He heard kids talking about other kids — "he thinks he's a Rolls Royce player." And he remembered.

He became a successful high school coach in his native New Jersey. He went to Rutgers, took a pay cut and was an assistant for two seasons. He wanted the head job. When it passed him by, he was off to the University of Detroit — a basketball program going nowhere fast.

There, he compiled a 78-30 record in four seasons, including a 25-4 season in 1976-77. A stomach disorder helped force him out of coaching, but as the school's athletic director, he helped set records for attendance and ticket sales. Then followed a year-plus-12-games run with the Pistons, during which he went 34-60 before being fired. The job at ESPN soon followed, but he was still just famous to those who were plugged in. Two years ago, Dick Vitale teamed up with Keith Jackson when ABC renewed its college basketball coverage. What was merely big became unwieldy.

"He's the hot, and I can be the cool," Ley said. "I also know that there's a large constituency out there reaching for the channel switcher, so I have to speak for them sometimes. I have to zing him sometimes."

"I have the greatest job in the world," Dick Vitale said. "I am on a fantasy trip. I don't know when it's going to end. I know it all comes to an end when they put the blond, blue-eyed guy here. But in the meantime, I'm using the ball. I'm wheeling it, dealing it, and I'm not letting the ball away some pesos for later on in my life."

But there is despair, genuine despair, in his voice when he speaks of missing his two girls win the Florida state tennis championship, asking his wife from an airport telephone booth if they hit winners and then waiting to fly to the next game, the next crowd.

"It was such a thrill," he said. "And I wasn't there to be a part of it. And all those things I can't get back."

The game remains. It always will. "I was with him in a golf tournament in Florida," McGuire said. "In August. He's talking about the Great Alaska Shootout. I said, 'That's four months away.' 'C'mon, Dick, please. Nanook of the North, I call him.'"

He is off, now, waiting for another tipoff. Where he is king. Where kids love him. Where he is needed. ....
The Vitale Zone.

Fat Lever scored 16 of his 18 points in the first half and Denver won for the 15th time in 16 home games against the Nets.

New Jersey missed nine of its first 10 shots and Denver took a 10-3 lead. The Nets got no closer.

Blair Rasmussen scored 12 of his 24 points in the third quarter as Denver won its third straight and New Jersey lost its third straight.

Mike McGee scored 20 points for New Jersey.

Mike Gmimski and Hersey

Hawkins scored eight points each during a 27-9 run midway through the third quarter.

Philadelphia led 68-66 with 2:18 gone in the second half and scored eight consecutive points to start the run.

Bulls 114, Kings 98
Michael Jordan scored 32 points on 16-for-20 shooting, grabbed a season-high 11 rebounds and had eight assists for the Bulls, who never trailed. LaSalle Thompson scored 18 points for the Kings.

Judge Keeps Mackerel Fishing Open

NEW BERN — A federal judge has decided to temporarily keep open both the commercial and recreational season for king mackerel but has not yet issued a permanent ruling.

The commercial taking of king mackerel in federally protected waters from North Carolina to Volusia County, Florida, was set to end Wednesday, but the judge issued a temporary restraining order keeping it open.

U.S. District Court Judge Malcolm J. Howard in New Bern also continued a temporary restraining order keeping the recreational season in federal waters open. That season ended Oct. 17 after the National Marine Fisheries Service said the 4.4-million pound quota had been reached.

A lawsuit filed by the state of North Carolina and 150 fishermen and marine-related businesses says the recreational and commercial quotas are unreasonable. The suit names as defendants the U.S. secretary of commerce, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, assistant administrator for fisheries in the U.S. Commerce Department and the director of the National Marine Fisheries Service.

Both seasons will remain open until further notice by Howard. He is expected to reach a decision on the matter within the next few days.

Farmville Opener Is Postponed

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central High School's basketball opener, scheduled for Tuesday night, was postponed until Dec. 8. The Jaguars were scheduled to open the season at East Carteret, but the Mariners requested that the game be rescheduled because of their participation in the State 3-A Football Playoffs.

Farmville will now open the season on Nov. 29, hosting Roanoke.

Campbell Named Rookie Of The Year

GREENSBORO (AP) — North Carolina State strong safety Jesse Campbell was named the Atlantic Coast Conference rookie of the year Wednesday by the Atlantic Coast Sportswriters Association.

Campbell, a 6-foot-3, 208-pound redshirt freshman from Vanceboro, shared the league lead in interceptions with five and led the Wolfpack in tackles, tackles for losses and passes broken up. All his interceptions came in conference games.

"Jesse had an outstanding year for us making big plays for the defense," said N.C. State coach Dick Sheridan. "He is an outstanding performer against both pass and run — abilities that make for excellent strong safeties. Jesse is a vital part of a fine defensive team."

Others receiving votes were Darrell Swilling of Georgia Tech, with 12, Walter Jones of Duke, six, Ed McDaniel of Clemson with five, Tyrone Lewis of Virginia with three and Clemson's Levon Kirkland, Duke's Quinton McCracken and the Wolfpack's Damon Hartman received one vote apiece.

Campbell was the only freshman named to the ACSWA's all-conference team and was one of four Wolfpack players selected to the defense.

"I think the defense as a whole will be very excited that Jesse's performance this season has been recognized by the Atlantic Coast Sportswriters Association," Sheridan said. "He is deserving of the award, but more importantly it is a reflection on the entire defensive effort this year."

North Carolina State defensive tackle Ray Agnew won the award in 1986 and Clemson tailback Terry Allen won the award last year.

The Wolfpack led the league in total defense, rushing defense and scoring defense.

Tech Hoping To End On A High Note

ATLANTA (AP) — It's been another frustrating season for the Georgia Tech football team, but Coach Bobby Ross says the Yellow Jackets get their annual chance at redemption on Saturday against cross-state rival Georgia.

The Jackets take a 3-7 record into the game in Athens, and Ross said his team is eager to play the 20th-ranked Bulldogs. Last year, Georgia beat Tech 30-16.

"Our kids are focused on this game. That's it," said Ross.

"It's been a pretty frustrating season for us, because we've played pretty good football most of the time," Ross said Tuesday at his weekly news conference. "We've been a competitive team. We really haven't been out of a football game all season long, even the Clemson game."

The coach said sophomore flanker Greg Lester and all-ACC cornerback Cedric Stallworth returned to practice Tuesday after being out with injuries, but both are listed as questionable for Saturday's game. Lester had missed the last two games with a hamstring pull, and Stallworth injured a knee against Virginia Military Institute.

Ross said Gerald Chamblin will start for Stallworth and Scotty Barron for Lester if the two starters are unable to play.

The main task for the Tech defense will be stopping Georgia tailback Tim Worley, Ross said. "What we've got to do defensively, as far as I'm concerned, is fill the gaps in their running game. And we've got to do it with a lot of aggressiveness."

Dilweg Named Player Of The Year

GREENSBORO (AP) — Duke quarterback Anthony Dilweg, who set six conference single season records, has been selected as the Atlantic Coast Conference football player of the year by a panel of sports writers.

Dilweg, a senior, established ACC single season marks in total offense, passing yardage, touchdown passes, touchdown responsibility, passes attempted and total plays.

He received 32 of the 78 votes cast in balloting by the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association.

The Bethesda, Md., native, who had started only two games prior to the 1988 season, completed 287 of 484 passes for 3,824 yards and 24 touchdowns. In addition, the 6-foot-4, 215-pound senior was in on 539 plays, accumulating 3,713 yards in total offense and either ran or passed for 26 of Duke's 41 touchdowns.

Twice named ACC offensive bank of the week, Dilweg threw for more than 300 yards in all but two of Duke's games and finished the season ranked second nationally in total offense while leading the Blue Devils to a 7-3-1 record, their best mark since 1962.

"Without a doubt, Anthony Dilweg is very deserving of player-of-the-year honors," said Duke coach Steve Spurrier. "He is a very unselfish player who waited four years to get his chance to play quarterback at Duke. He worked very hard and had an excellent season."

"It was a pleasure to work with him and he deserves all the honors that come his way," Spurrier said.

Washington Matmen Top Rose

WASHINGTON — Washington High School handed Rose High a 54-19 defeat as the two teams opened the 1988-89 wrestling season Tuesday night.

Rose won four weight classes, one on a forfeit, one on a pin and two on decisions. Washington's nine victories included seven pins and two forfeits.

The two teams will meet in a rematch at Rose on Tuesday.

Summary:

103 — Brian Rose (R) won by forfeit; 112 — Jerry Mitchell (W) p. Kenny Sheppard, 0:59; 119 — Patrick Paul (W) p. Greg Parker, 1:59; 125 — Joey Roberson (W) won by forfeit; 130 — David Best (R) p. Daniel Tillery, 1:15; 135 — Mo Dar (R) d. Greg Nelson, 11:2; 140 — Todd Black (W) p. Eason Brin, 2:50; 145 — Boris Murphy (W) p. Shawn MacLagg, 1:37; 152 — Joe Richards (W) p. Stearns Heinzen, 0:20; 160 — Walt Gerrard (W) won by forfeit; 171 — Glenn Richards (W) p. Neal Williams, 3:29; 189 — Tim Midgett (W) p. Chad Weiler, 4:50; HWT — Jeff Houser (R) d. Tim Tuck, 6-1.

Heels Were Planning For Balance

Reid's Injury Might Not Be As Big A Problem As Originally Expected

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The North Carolina Tar Heels were ready for J.R. Reid's injury before it happened.

The 6-foot-9 Reid averaged 18 points and nearly nine rebounds as a sophomore for North Carolina last season and he is the big reason the Tar Heels are ranked fifth nationally. But a stress fracture will sideline him until later this month.

"Even before J.R. was injured, we decided to distribute the ball better this season and not necessarily make him the first option in the offense," North Carolina coach Dean Smith said. "So when he was injured, we didn't have to change that much."

Without Reid, North Carolina routed Tennessee-Chattanooga 111-84 and beat Georgia 99-91 with a balanced attack. Those victories qualified the Tar Heels for tonight's semifinals of the Big Apple National Invitation Tournament against No. 13 Missouri.

No. 6 Syracuse meets No. 20 Indiana in the second game.

Kevin Madden had 31 points and Jeff Lebo a school-record 17 assists in the game against UT-Chattanooga, while 6-10 center Scott Williams tied a career-high with 25 points against Georgia, leading four teammates in double figures.

"Kevin is playing by far his best since he's been here," Smith said of Madden, a 6-4 forward. "We have put him inside defensively. He prefers playing a 6-8 man inside rather than a quick 6-4 player."

Missouri, which beat Southwest Missouri and Xavier, Ohio, in early-round games, also is adjusting to a missing player, the graduated Derrick Chievous, now a top rookie for the Houston Rockets in the NBA.

To compensate, Coach Norm Stewart relies heavily on four seniors, a junior and 6-10 sophomore Doug Smith. Highly regarded freshman Anthony Peeler is being brought along slowly.

Senior guard Byron Irvin scored 28 points in Sunday's 83-71 victory over Xavier.

"We're pleased with our first two games," Stewart said. "We've had trouble the last few years getting past the first round of tournaments, so we're already happy."

The Syracuse-Indiana game is the first meeting between the teams since the Hoosiers beat the Orangemen in the NCAA Tournament championship game in 1987.

"I never look at the other bench," Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim said of his confrontation with Indiana's Bob Knight. "It's my team against their team. Bobby Knight has never made a basket for Indiana. I don't coach against the other coach. That's a myth that's been created."

Syracuse crushed La Salle 92-76 and Wyoming 102-81 at home in the Carrier Dome to reach the semifinals.

Boeheim started veterans Steve Thompson, Derrick Coleman, Sherman Douglas and Matt Roe, plus touted freshman Billy Owens.

"We had two other freshmen (David Stock and Richard Manning) who were very nervous in front of a home crowd," Boeheim said. "Manning had never played in front of more than about 100 fans in high school."

But Stock and Manning, both 6-10, are taller than any Syracuse starter.

"We miss (6-11) Rony Seikaly," Boeheim said. "on defense especially. He's not there to block shots for us anymore."

Indiana got 28 points from 6-4 swingman Jay Edwards in Sunday's 84-73 second-round victory over Stanford.

Edwards' status before the season was in doubt after he underwent substance abuse rehabilitation during the spring and summer.

"We kept Edwards on a day-to-day basis," Knight said. "There are things he has to conform to that the rehab people have set up for him and I have set up for him. As long as he does what is expected of him, he can stay with us."

Edwards and guard Joe Hillman are the only experienced players Indiana has following the graduation of Keith Smart, Dean Garrett and Steve Eyl and the transfer of Rick Calloway.

"These two games in New York will tell us a lot about where we are," Knight said.

Ueberroth Headed To White House?

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Peter Ueberroth's future might be in George Bush's administration, and they have talked. But whether the baseball commissioner and the president-elect can make a match remains uncertain.

The Cabinet is the highest level of several high-profile jobs Ueberroth has been linked to since announcing he would leave office March 31. He recently turned down MGM Pictures Inc., which wanted him as chief executive officer, and is now being wooed by Eastern Airlines.

Ueberroth's battle to rid baseball of drugs and his business background intrigued members of the Bush transition team, who have yet to name a commerce secretary or fill the newly created "drug czar" position.

Yet Ueberroth, Congressional sources say, has expressed little interest in the drug post, which pays $99,500 per year. And the leading candidate for the commerce job appears to be Robert Mosbacher, a Houston oil and gas producer who gave Bush big campaign support.

Ueberroth aided Bush in a behind-the-scenes role, identifying star players that likely would help the vice president on the drug issue.

Ueberroth also gave Bush specific proposals on fighting the drug war and assisted him in making contacts in the anti-substance abuse field, according to a former Bush campaign aide.

At 51, with strong leadership qualities and a dynamic personality, Ueberroth is attractive to Bush. Another Bush aide, speaking on condition of anonymity, said some members of the transition team liked the idea of bringing in an outside "star" such as Ueberroth as a way of demonstrating Bush's initiative.

Two years ago, when the concept of a "drug czar" was first mentioned, Ueberroth was interested. He told friends he would consider public service in an appointed job of significance — possibly an ambassadorship — but would not run for elective office.

Ueberroth is a former member of advisory boards to the U.S. Department of Commerce and the Department of Transportation, has testified before Congress and is familiar with the Washington scene.

Still, it is unclear where all that leaves him. And the commissioner, who views himself as a private sector person and insists he does not want a life in politics, is privately saying he does not think the Bush people will offer anything too good to turn down. "I've heard his name mentioned in the past for president, secretary of state and other things. Like Lee Iacocca, he's one of those names that just keeps popping up everywhere," said Andy Zarutskie, press secretary for Ben Gilman, a New York congressman who serves on the committee that writes anti-drug legislation.

Ueberroth and Bush spoke before the election, although it not known whether they have talked since then. One of Ueberroth's indirect links is American League President Dr. Bobby Brown, a long-time Bush friend from Texas.

Ueberroth, as he has in the past, declined this week to comment specifically on his future.

"I'm not worried about it. I'm sure something will work out," he said last summer.

It always has.

Ueberroth was vice president of Trans International Airlines for two years when in 1963 he founded a small travel agency in southern California. Eventually, he built First Travel Corp. into the second-largest business of its kind in North America.

Later, after being warned that it would be a no-win situation to become president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, he helped the Games turned a profit of $230 million.

He was elected baseball commissioner on March 3, 1984, and that season, 21 of 26 major league teams lost money. Under Ueberroth's guidance, 20 clubs made a profit last year.

Ueberroth has long been closely watched by California lawmakers — particularly both U.S. senators — as a prospective rival.

The National Republican Senatorial Committee was interested in Ueberroth in 1986 when it was looking for a candidate to challenge Alan Cranston, the veteran Democratic senator. Ueberroth's name recognition was soaring after his success at managing the Olympics, but he declined to run.

Ueberroth's term as commissioner was to run until Dec. 31, 1989. Last September, he hand-picked former Yale president and current National League President A. Bartlett Giamatti as his successor, and simultaneously announced he would leave office March 31.

Baseball is facing difficult labor and television contract negotiations before the 1990 season. Ueberroth has said he would remain available in a consulting role to help ease the Giamatti's transition.

Holtz, Smith Differ On Game Views

By Herschel Nissenson THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. Lou Holtz and Larry Smith can't seem to agree on the importance of Saturday's game between No. 1-ranked Notre Dame and No. 2 Southern California. 'In Tuesday's teleconference with the media, Holtz said, "It's like any other football game. I don't feel any different than preparing for Navy or anyone else. It's just like any other week in the season." But remember that Holtz coaches in South Bend, Ind., a far cry from the glitz and glitter of Los Angeles and the Hollywood tendency to make everything larger than life. Smith, on the other hand, knows how to promote a football game, even one that doesn't need any. "This promises to be one of the great games of all time," he said in Southern Cal's weekly press release. "It's a classic national championship game." Smith held a teleconference of his own Tuesday and said it will be "by far the biggest game I've ever coached in. It's the biggest game we've ever been involved in, and it means the most." It means the winner will be No. 1 and need only a victory on Jan. 2 (Notre Dame meets West Virginia in the Fiesta Bowl, USC plays Michigan in the Rose Bowl) to capture the national championship. Over the years, these have been two of college football's most powerful and tradition-laden programs and, except for 1943, 1945 and 1946, they have met annually since 1926. But strange as it seems, it is not the first time they will face each other as No. 1 and No. 2, it also is the first time both teams enter the game unbeaten and untied even though they have played in South Bend in October every odd-numbered year since 1961. Notre Dame has gone against USC with a perfect record 11 times and is 6-4-1 in those games. Southern Cal has faced Notre Dame eight times in the same situation with a 5-1-2 mark. Both coaches are relatively new to the series. Holtz in his third year at Notre Dame and Smith in his second at USC. "I first became aware of Notre Dame in 1968 when I was an assistant at Ohio State and we were going to play Southern Cal in the Rose Bowl for the national championship," Holtz said. "Southern Cal was unbeaten and untied and ranked No. 1, but Notre Dame tied them (21-21) and Southern Cal dropped to second and we moved up to No. 1. "I remember the game Notre Dame led 24-0 (1974) and Southern Cal scored just before the half, Anthony Davis returned the second-half kickoff for a touchdown and Southern Cal won 55-24." Holtz's memory is a mite faulty on the 1968 season. Ohio State actually had moved up to No. 1 the week before the Notre Dame-USC game. He also is incorrect when he keeps saying that Southern Cal leads the nation in scoring defense, total defense and rushing defense. One out of three ain't bad. The Trojans are No. 1 in rushing defense but ninth in scoring defense and 10th in total defense. The Anthony Davis game is the one that Smith says "catches my eye the most. It was a big come-from-behind win. The other game I remember, Notre Dame had a big come-from-behind win. I don't remember the year." It was 1986 when the Irish erased a 17-point deficit in the final 12 minutes and won 38-37 on John Carney's 19-yard field goal as time ran out. It was the second of three consecutive late-season losses — to UCLA, Notre Dame and Auburn in the Florida Citrus Bowl — that hastened Coach Ted Tollner's departure and led to Smith's jump from Arizona to USC. "What the two coaches do agree on is that USC's Rodney Peete is a talented quarterback. "The most important thing is to try and block the extra point because no one has stopped him," Holtz said. "Peete is probably as prolific a passer as we've seen. He has excellent peripheral vision, he can find his secondary receivers and he also has the ability to run the football and get himself out of trouble. "He's probably the best football player in the country. If he wins the Heisman Trophy, I won't head a protest rally." Peete regained his immortality and became a verified legend last week when he came down with the measles but got out of a sick bed — he was hospitalized for two days and his only practice of the week was Friday's light workout — and led the Trojans to a 31-22 victory over UCLA for the Pac-10 title and a berth in the Rose Bowl. Now that Ronald Reagan is about to be out of work, maybe he can play Peete when they make the movie. "I've coached against people who probably had a stronger arm," Smith said, mentioning John Elway and Troy Aikman. "But I've never had a player get out of bed and give the total effort and performance he gave last Saturday. He's the best quarterback I've ever coached. "He's the leader of the team by being a team person first. He's an epitome of what we all would want as an All-American football player or a team leader. He has everything, including charisma, maturity and the poise to handle any situation." Now, Peete also has laryngitis. But rumor has it he will be fluent in sign language by Saturday in case he is unable to shout the signals. Perhaps he'll get the starting count across by mental telepathy. Or maybe he'll just draw the plays in the dirt. Tradition will be everywhere on Saturday. Notre Dame has Gipp, the Four Horsemen, Rockne, Leahy, Parseghian, seven Heisman Trophy winners and a record seven national championships since the Associated Press poll began in 1936. Southern Cal counters with three national championships, O.J. Simpson and three other Heisman winners, coaching legends like Howard Jones and John McKay, plus a player named Marion Morrison who later became famous in another profession as John Wayne. "There's something about the spirit of Notre Dame — good things happen to you," Holtz said. "I don't worry about hype and mystique," Smith countered. "This game is being played in the Los Angeles Coliseum and we've got our own ghosts — some living." How do you like that, pilgrim?

Nicklaus Hopes To Start Playing Seriously Again

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. — Jack Nicklaus, his back troubles eased without surgery, he expects to start playing golf like Jack Nicklaus again. "I'll never be able to play like Jack Nicklaus at 30 or 35 years old. But I can play like Jack Nicklaus of 48 or 49 years old. "And," he pointed out, "Jack Nicklaus of 46 years old won the Masters." He said the success of cortisone shots, a procedure known as a Facet Block, prompted him to forego surgery — at least immediately — for the herniated discs and bone spurs that threatened his career. Nicklaus, who has a lengthy history of back problems, has played a restricted schedule since winning his sixth Masters in 1986. This season, with his back prob-

Royal Greeting

Britain's Queen Elizabeth, the queen mother, chats with legendary Hollywood film stars Mickey Rooney and dancer Ann Miller at the London Palladium after her arrival to attend the annual Royal Variety Performance. Rooney and Ms. Miller are appearing in the show "Sugar Babies" at London's Savoy Theater.

Santa Has Bag Of Film Goodies Arriving In Time For Holidays

By Bob Thomas
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOLLYWOOD — Christmas packages are arriving early at the nation's theaters as movie companies try to lure holiday trade with ghosts, hip dogs, baby dinosaurs and Bill Murray romping about in yet another version of Charles Dickens' seasonal favorite, "A Christmas Carol."

Industry sources estimate that the holiday season will bring $300 million dollars worth of films. Why so many expensive films at year's end?

"Because the six weeks from Thanksgiving through New Year's Day is the second biggest period of theater attendance, exceeded only by summer," said Art Murphy, Daily Variety's financial expert. "Those six weeks amount to 14 percent of the year's business."

"It's unusual because the period includes a 'chasm,' the second week in December. That's the worst week of the year because children are finishing school and others are Christmas shopping."

"It's the season to be jolly, and the studios are responding with a host of comedies. In "High Spirits," Peter O'Toole attempts to pass off his rundown hotel as a haunted castle, and ghosts, including Daryl Hannah, actually appear.

Dan Aykroyd in "My Stepmother Is an Alien" is a widowed scientist who falls in love with spaceling Kim Basinger. Cybil Shepherd discovers in "Chances Are" that her daughter's boyfriend, Robert Downey Jr., is the reincarnation of her late husband.

Also in the comedy grabbag is another treatment of the Dickens' classic, "A Christmas Carol." In Warner Bros. "Scrooged" Bill Murray plays a crass TV executive who tries to exploit the Christmas spirit but gets caught up in his own scheme.

There's also "The Naked Gun: From the Files of Police Squad!" with Leslie Nielsen and Ricardo Montalban as opponents in a reworking of the memorable but brief 1982 TV series "Police Squad."

Michael Caine and Steve Martin team as con men on the French Riviera in "Dirty Rotten Scoundrels."

Ivan Reitman ("Ghost Busters") would have us believe in "Twins" that Arnold Schwarzenegger and Danny DeVito actually are.

Parents will be pleased to learn that two new animated features will appear during the holidays. "Oliver and Company," a new twist on

"Oliver Twist," with such voices as Bette Midler and Billy Joel, bears the Disney imprint. It's about a bunch of rather hip dogs and a cute little kitten who tangle with a loan shark and learn what friendship is all about.

Steven Spielberg and George Lucas acted as executive producers on the dinosaur epic, "The Land Before Time," produced by Disney defector Don Bluth.

The holidays are also a time for drama since the studios bring forth their Academy Award hopefuls before the December 31 deadline for qualification. Here are some of the most promising:

"Rain Man," with Dustin Hoffman and Tom Cruise as brothers on a trip across the United States.

"Beaches," with Bette Midler and Barbara Hershey as long-time friends striving to survive marriages and careers.

"Mississippi Burning," with Gene Hackman and Willem Dafoe as FBI agents investigating the murder of three civil rights workers in the 1964 South. Based on an actual case.

"Talk Radio," Oliver Stone's ("Platoon") version of the Eric Bogosian play about an abrasive radio talk show host. Bogosian stars.

"Torch Song Trilogy," with Harvey Fierstein, Anne Bancroft and Matthew Broderick in Fierstein's play about gay life in New York.

"Working Girl," with Harrison Ford, Sigourney Weaver and Melanie Griffith in a drama-comedy about corporate life and love.

The other attractions include:

"Cocoon II: The Return," with most of the cast returning; and "Tequila Sunrise" with Mel Gibson as a drug dealer who wants out of the business and Kurt Russell as a narcotics cop who's his friend.

No matter how these films fare with audiences, Daily Variety's Murphy predicts another record year for the movie business.

"Grosses are already $130 million ahead of last year, and so 1988 is certain to pass the 1987 record of $4.25 billion."

Still Loyal

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Martha Reeves is still loyal to the Motown sound, even though the company once relocated its offices without telling her, a discovery she made when she, well, heard it through the grapevine.

"I still stand and sing the songs because I remember the good times, the loyalty and working hard to please Berry Gordy," said Ms. Reeves, who's appearing in Atlantic City until next month.

In 1960, Gordy built his music empire in Detroit, Ms. Reeves' hometown. She joined the company in 1962 as secretary and later began singing backup.

In 1963, Martha and The Vandellas were born with the release of "Come Get These Memories" and "Heat Wave." In 1964, they had their biggest hit, "Dancing in the Streets."

But she once returned from an overseas engagement in 1971 and called Motown — only to find out it had relocated to Los Angeles months earlier.

Shirley MacLaine Wanted To Look 'Bad' For Her Role In New Movie

By Bob Thomas
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — "Make me look bad," Shirley MacLaine told the astonished filmmakers, and they took her at her word.

The result can be seen in the new film, "Madame Sousatzka," which has been hailed — with a few dissenters — as MacLaine's triumphant debut as a character actress. Some may argue that she has been a character all her life, but that's neither here nor there.

In the John Schlesinger film she plays an aging piano teacher who bullies and browbeats her gifted pupils until they approach greatness; if they leave her too soon, she erases them from her life. The actress plays the role unrelentingly, breathing fire at anyone who opposes her will. She looks several years beyond her own 54.

"I didn't take my makeup off," she said. "I just put it in the wrong places."

When the Sousatzka role was proposed to her, she admitted it gave her pause.

"It wasn't whether to play the part; it was maybe setting myself up for the rest of my working career," she said. "But I decided there are too many wonderful, eccentric parts out there for me to worry about my image. My image never did concern me much." She gave a hearty laugh.

"If I wasn't going to worry about it in real life, why should I worry about it in reel life. That's R-E-E-L."

But then she could always return to a film that would offer her glamorous side, which appeared undimmed in the interview. No thanks, she said, adding, "I don't think they would be good parts. The good parts are somewhere in the eccentric category. Those are the kinds of scripts I've been getting."

"I did Sousatzka because I loved her. I've had so many dancing teachers like that. And my father's sister was a piano teacher, with some aspects of her."

"I just drew on my own ballet teachers. Also, when I did my research in New York with a lot of teachers and their students, I found there was a Sousatzka in everyone of their lives. The kind of teacher who was so proprietary that if you went to another teacher, she'd just put you out of her life," she said.

"I had teachers like that in school. I'll never forget a teacher I had in the sixth grade. She scared the dickens out of me when I was her student. But as I look back, I realize she is the one who inspired me to love English literature. But she beat up on everybody in the class, just like Sousatzka."

To prepare for "Sousatzka," the usually disciplined MacLaine allowed herself to gain 25 pounds. She collected clunky jewelry and aged costumes to fit the role. And she instructed the technicians: "Turn off the key light (which makes actresses look good). Light me from the side. I need all the help I can get to get rid of this gamin look."

Shirley MacLaine profited from that gamine look from the time producer Hal Wallis spotted her on Broadway as Carol Haney's replacement in "Pajama Game." Her film debut came with Alfred Hitchcock in "The Trouble With Harry," then Michael Todd picked her as the female lead in "Around the World in 80 Days."

Although she has played a variety of roles, the Academy seemed to prefer her as a tart, granting nominations for "Some Came Running," "The Apartment" and "Irma La Douce."

Tyne Daly's Brother Stars In Series Starting Sunday

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Timothy Daly says he could easily have followed in his sister's footsteps, playing a cop on TV. He's no cop, but he does take over from Tyne Daly when his new CBS show, "Almost Grown," moves into the old "Cagney & Lacey" time period next week.

The one-hour series, which has a special two-hour preview Sunday, is an ambitious, multi-era drama about one couple, seen as teen-agers, as college students and as divorced adults. The plan is that each episode will begin in the present, then flash back to one of the other eras.

"I've been offered a lot of television, and I'm thankful for that. I shouldn't sound snotty about it, and I don't mean to be," Daly, 32, said in an interview. "It's just that there's a lot of stuff on TV that people were interested in having me do that to me was not acting."

"I really wanted to do something unique, because how many guys on television have pointed a gun and said, 'Freeze!' It's like there are 85 guys on TV saying 'Freeze' any night of the week. I don't want to do that. Of course, my sister did it, too. She pointed a gun and said 'Freeze,' but she was a woman, that was the difference."

Timothy Daly starred in the 1982 sleeper hit film "Diner" but has done his proudest work on the stage, most recently in "Coastal Disturbances" off Broadway.

In 1983, he co-starred in the short-lived TV medical drama "Ryan's Four." This time, he may have a winner. "Almost Grown" is one of the better offerings among the meager selection of good new shows this season.

Although different in style and premise, "Almost Grown" sounds like the CBS answer to ABC's appeal to baby boomers, "thirtysomething." The comparison bugs Daly.

"I think it's a good and ambitious show, but the only similarity I can see (with 'thirtysomething') is that it's intelligent television," he said.

"I don't think it's a 'baby-boomer' show. I think this show can appeal to anyone who likes rock 'n' roll, which is ages like 10 to 50, so that's quite a wide range."

The show plays to the fact that a lot of Americans have now grown up with rock music, and their passion for it can turn a golden oldie into a painfully evocative memory.

Daly plays Norman Foley. Eve Gordon plays girlfriend-wife-ex-wife Suzie.

The pilot flashes back to their meeting in high school, when Norm is a goody-goody and Suzie is running around with the local hood.

By 1971, they are living together off campus. He's a deejay on the university radio station, she aspires to be a documentary filmmaker.

They consider marriage only after Norm's appalled parents offer to buy them a car if they will tie the knot.

By the 1980s, Norm and Suzie have two children and a divorce. Suzie, a technical filmmaker for a medical lab, is about to marry an irritatingly well-adjusted cosmetic surgeon who donates his skills to penniless victims of disasters. At the wedding, Norm suddenly and without provocation hauls off and belts the groom. Then ensues a typical real-life fight between two guys who don't know what they are doing and are hoping not to hurt each other. The flash of fists quickly dissolves into a flood of apologies.

"I think the reason the characters are likable is because they're flawed," said Daly. "They're just struggling along like the rest of us. They're not holding themselves up as anything, they're just trying to get through. They have these emotional responses to things that get them in trouble."

"I look forward to seeing if we can make some good TV shows," Daly said. "If we can't, I hope it dies, a quick and painless death, but if we can, I can see doing it for a while."

Humor Tops War For TV Viewers

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — TV viewers chose laughter over war last week as six comedies ranked in the top 10 and the best an episode of ABC's miniseries "War and Remembrance" did was 10th, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co.

Four episodes of the World War II epic based on the novel by Herman Wouk placed in the top 20, but fell below expectations for a miniseries that cost $104 million, was heavily promoted and widely lauded by critics.

NBC won the week, with ABC coming in second. Five NBC comedy series placed ahead of the highest-rated episode of the miniseries, as did one ABC comedy show, CBS' "60 Minutes" and "Murder, She Wrote."

ABC reportedly told its advertisers that "War and Remembrance" would average 20.2 in the Nielsen ratings. Only the first episode the previous week exceeded that at 21.8.

"War and Remembrance" is the sequel to "The Winds of War," which got a 38.6 rating and a 53 share over 18 hours in 1983. The first 18 hours of the sequel is being shown in seven episodes over 11 nights. Two more episodes were to be telecast this week. The final 12 hours will not be telecast until May.

Bob Wright, an ABC spokesman, said there would be no comment on the ratings until after the final episode of the first 18 hours.

The future of longer miniseries does not look good in view of the disappointing ratings for "War and Remembrance" and the loss ABC will take. Prior to the telecasts, ABC had forecast a loss of $20 million.

NBC, which had predicted the ABC miniseries would sweep the ratings, took it on with a vigorous promotion of its comedy shows.

"Our calculated plan of youth-oriented counterprogramming, coupled with aggressive and creative promotion, had the absolute right effect with the viewing audience," said Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment.

"I'm happy NBC has kept its prime-time win streak alive in the heart of the November sweeps."

Here are the rankings, ratings and shares for the episodes telecast last week: Part III, in 10th place, 19.9

rating, 31 share; Part II, in 11th place, 19.0, 29; Part V, 17th place, 17.0, 26; Part IV, tied for 18th place with NBC's "Unsolved Mysteries," 16.8, 25.

NBC won the week with an average rating of 15.8; ABC had 14.9 and CBS 12.4.

Each ratings point equals 904,000 homes with television. The share is a percentage of the sets in use.

For the season to date, NBC stayed ahead with an average 15.5 rating; ABC had 13.8 and CBS 12.3. NBC also led in the Nielsens for the November sweeps, the period used to determine advertising rates. The ratings: NBC 15.4, ABC 13.6, CBS 12.2.

Here are the top 10: "The Cosby Show," "A Different World," "The Golden Girls," "60 Minutes," CBS; "Cheers," "Empty Nest," both NBC; "Growing Pains," ABC; "Murder, She Wrote," CBS; NBC Monday Night Movie, "Too Good To Be True," NBC; "War and Remembrance," Part III, ABC.

Fox Broadcasting's "Married...With Children" got the highest prime-time rating to date for the "fourth network" with a 10.0 rating and a 14 share. The next show was Fox's "America's Most Wanted." Both shows did better than 12 series from CBS and ABC.

Among news show, "ABC World News Tonight" was first with an 11.3 rating. "The CBS Evening News" was next with 11.2. "The NBC Nightly News" had 10.5.

Reagan Son Sues For Back Pay

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Michael Reagan, the last of the presidential family to enter show business, is involved in a dispute with a game show host that has all the makings of a feisty soap opera.

Reagan has filed a claim against the producers of the syndicated series "Lingo," alleging that Ralph Andrews Productions has failed to pay him more than $20,000 in back pay, rerun fees and pension and benefits.

Andrews admits he probably owes Reagan the money, but said the show is in "great financial difficulty."

The company, which hired Reagan to be host of the show for 20 weeks, also accused him of being an "ingrate," saying "no one else (but me) would give him a chance in this town."

Reagan, the 43-year-old adopted son of Ronald Reagan and ex-wife,

Jane Wyman, retaliated, "Andrews couldn't tell the truth if his mother's life depended on it."

Reagan, Andrews said, was hired at a weekly salary of $4,000. With five weeks remaining in the deal, Andrews said, Reagan walked off the show, and Andrews was forced to take over.

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Actress Dee Wallace Stone, best known for her role as the tolerant mother in "E.T. — The Extra-Terrestrial," has given birth to an 8-pound girl, her publicist said.

Stone, married to actor Christopher Stone, delivered Gabrielle Elise on Sunday at St. Joseph Medical Center, spokeswoman Susan Patricola said Tuesday.

The first-time mother and daughter returned to their San Fernando Valley home in time for Thanksgiving, Patricola said.

"Both mother and baby are doing well," she added.

The father has had numerous roles, including parts on the daytime soap opera, "The Days of Our Lives."

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY Nov. 24

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You sow the seeds of love and reap the harvest. Concentrate on keeping promises made to family members. Don't get sidetracked.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Make do with what you have. Some plans will run off schedule. Keep expectations realistic. Call, write or visit with a shut-in.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You bring joy to everyone you contact. A busy day keeps you hopping. Avoid scattering your energies too thin.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Learn to be less serious, and center yourself in cheerfulness. Everyone will be grateful and appreciate your efforts.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Enjoy your holiday even though plans are revised and schedules modified. Fires are lit under your social dreams. Control your nerves.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Remember to laugh and be happy today. Resolve to accept those whose presence is irritating. Live in the now. News comes from afar.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): This action-packed day will have you on the go with little time for personal matters. Pleasant contacts are highlighted. Take the initiative.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): You can't take on everyone's problems. Your sympathetic mood opens a floodgate of demands by others. Shrug off a jealous person.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Surprise contacts brighten your day. Charged with enthusiasm and curiosity, you contemplate education, travel and secret hopes.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): After a slow start, events gain momentum. Take the initiative in a slow-developing relationship. Offer support to someone in need.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Someone you have wanted to reach is contacted. A temporary breakdown has you fuming. Be versatile, and allow for adjustments.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Start the day with an upbeat approach. Distractions could send you off on a tangent. Don't neglect those you care most about.

 Suppose someone were to give you the club combination featured in this hand and then ask you how you would play it. You would first have to ask how many tricks you needed from the suit. And even then, the answer might not be relevant to the hand from which the combination was taken.

North-South reached an excellent six-club contract on the auction shown. Note that, despite his 19 HCP, South did not jump shift because his suit was poor and he had no fit for partner. That did not deter his side from getting to slam.

Now if you were given the North-South hands and asked how you would play the trumps, your only correct answer would be: "I don't know!" Before you could decide on how to handle the trump suit, you would have to know whether or not you had a diamond loser.

If East shows out, continue by leading a trump to the A-9, and win as cheaply as possible. If West shows out, a trump to the ace and a trump back toward the jack again limits the defense to one trump trick.

Triad Health Care Center Of Greenville

We know the kind of special people it takes to work in a Long Term Care/Geriatric Setting. Long Term Care Nurses give of themselves to the patients and work hard. They deal with aging and confused patients, elderly people who are frustrated at being unable to care for themselves and patients who are so ill they are unaware of the care they need. The special people that work in this environment are rewarded in a much grander way than the competitive wages & benefits we offer. If you are that special person (RN, LPN, NA) that can give of yourself, then you are the person we are looking for to complement our staff.
