Merchants Expecting Major Holiday Sales

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Greenville merchants said they expected today to be the most lucrative shopping day of the year so far, and many felt it would be the biggest day of the entire year.

Rose's manager Mike Leonard said today will no doubt be the largest day of The Plaza mall store's year so far. He said people crowded into the store at 7 a.m. to catch morning specials and he expected the influx of people to continue all day.

The manager said, however, he believes, based on previous years' experience, that his store will have even greater revenues on a couple of days before Christmas. "We get more of the last-minute shoppers than most stores," he said.

Two other stores among The Plaza's 45 businesses opened earlier than the usual 10 a.m. opening time today — Penney's at 8 a.m. and Brody's at 9 a.m.

The Plaza began offering today a 70-passenger trolley to take shoppers and their packages to and from its new parking lot south of the mall. The trolley will run from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m., mall marketing director Candace Gillis said.

Carolina East Mall's two anchor stores, Sears and Belk, opened at 8 a.m. and offered specials, said Harvey Lindsay, mall manager. He said, probably as a result of the early openings, many shoppers were already inside the mall before the 10 a.m. opening of the other stores.

Lindsay said if history means anything, today will be the largest day of Carolina East's shopping year. He said he believes 20,000 shoppers visited the mall in 1987 on the Friday after Thanksgiving.

Greenville restaurants were geared up today to feed the shoppers. Nancy Cheng, a spokesperson for Peking Palace restaurant at Greenville Square Shopping Mall, said she expected that customers will be more plentiful than usual as people take lunch and dinner breaks from shopping.

Larry Messer, sales manager for Grant Buick-Mazda, said his store was already experiencing greater traffic than usual by late this morning. "A lot more people are out today than usual and some of them are looking at cars," he said.

Onassis Funeral Attracts Thousands

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEA SMYRNI, Greece — Several thousand mourners today attended funeral services for shipping heiress Christina Onassis at a cathedral her father helped build in this Athens suburb.

About 500 friends and relatives packed the St. Fotini cathedral to hear 15 priests perform the 45-minute Greek Orthodox funeral liturgy.

Ms. Onassis' silver-bordered, brown mahogany coffin lay under the cathedral's dome as the bearded, golden-robed priests chanted the Byzantine sermon accompanied by an all-male choir.

Thierry Roussel, Ms. Onassis' fourth ex-husband, stood alone behind the flower-covered coffin, which was flanked by Ms. Onassis' relatives and friends.

Greek government ministers, politicians, shipowners and businessmen stood under the cathedral's frescoed ceilings as the priests chanted the service.

Roussel, who divorced Ms. Onassis in 1987 after two years of marriage, would not answer reporters' questions.

Ms. Onassis, 37, died Saturday of a pulmonary edema, or accumulation of fluid in the lungs, in the Buenos Aires, Argentina, home of long-time friends. However, the cause of death is still under investigation. She was

Kettle Drive

The Salvation Army began its kettle drive this morning at Carolina East Mall. Starting the drive is left to right, Frank Qualliotine of the Pitt County Golden K Kiwanis Club; Les Garner, chairman of the Christmas fund-raising campaign; Maj. Earl Woodard of the Salvation Army, and Harry Leslie of the Golden K Kiwanis Club. The goal for this year's seasonal relief money drive is $70,000. The money will be used to aid families at Christmas and throughout the winter months. There will be 17 kettles in Pitt County.

White House Rules Out Any Initiative To Free Hostages

By Robin Wright
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration has decided against a diplomatic initiative with Iran during its final two months in office to free nine American hostages held by pro-Iranian extremists in Lebanon, U.S. sources say.

Nations that have served as intermediaries between Tehran and Washington during the last decade of hostility have encouraged the United States recently to provide a signal or gesture that would allow the Islamic republic to save face while reversing its disdain for the "Great Satan," according to European sources.

Although senior administration officials have probed the options, sources say that Secretary of State George P. Shultz in particular has opposed any initiative, insisting that Iran must make the first move.

"It would be unseemly for us to be seen chasing them," said a State Department official, who asked not to be named.

"That means they're abandoning the hostages," charged a relative of an American captive.

Hostage families, Middle East analysts and other interested parties long had anticipated that the transition to the administration of President-elect George Bush would provide a "window of opportunity" during which both sides could lay the groundwork for better relations by negotiating freedom for some or all of the hostages.

"I would think President Reagan would want to put this behind him before he leaves office," said Peggy Say, sister of hostage Terry A. Anderson, who has been held longer than any foreign hostage in Lebanon. "I would think he would be ashamed to do otherwise."

FmHA Completes Warnings On Delinquent Farm Loans

By Don Kendall
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Farmers Home Administration is mailing out today the last of 83,480 delinquency notices to farmers who owe more than $8 billion in past-due government loans.

Agency officials began sending out the notices by certified mail on Nov. 15 telling FmHA borrowers they have 45 days to complete and return the nine forms. Basically, the notices tell farmers about the options they have for settling their debt, including restructuring and write-offs.

Congress ordered FmHA in the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987 to revise its lending practices, including ways to handle long-overdue debt owed by thousands of farmers. Parts of the law were put into effect earlier in the year but debt write-down, or forgiveness, kicked in this month.

The purpose of the notices is to give delinquent borrowers an opportunity to let FmHA know how they want to handle their debt under the new law's provisions.

Leland H. Swenson, president of the National Farmers Union, explained: "The new law basically says FmHA must give borrowers whose delinquency was caused by factors beyond their control 45 days to convince the agency that it could recover more by working with them than it could by forcing them out."

Swenson added: "Clearly, the law puts the burden on borrowers to prepare their financial arguments quickly and thoroughly."

If a farmer's response, or application, to FmHA on how he plans to settle the debt is accepted by the

Chatty Suspect

TOWSON, Md. (AP) — Authorities arrested a bank robbery suspect who dialed the Baltimore FBI office collect from San Diego and chatted 45 minutes as agents traced his name through a computer.

The agents learned he was the last of three suspects wanted in a bank robbery last week in nearby Catonsville. They confirmed his identity and the location of the public phone where he was talking and alerted agents at the San Diego office to pick him up.

The rambling conversation ended with his arrest.

"He identified himself," said Jim Dearborn, an FBI spokesman in Baltimore. "He wanted to talk to some people in law enforcement about his situation ... concerning any charges that might have been outstanding."

Through the National Crime Information Center, agents learned that Ryan Patrick Saunders, 23, had been charged in a Baltimore County warrant with the Nov. 17 robbery of a Baltimore Federal Financial savings and loan office in Catonsville, Dearborn said.

Saunders was being held by the San Diego Police Department pending extradition, according to Baltimore County police spokesman E. Jay Miller.

Senate Pecking Order Calls The Shots

By Jim Drinkard
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — There will be 11 new senators in the 101st Congress that convenes Jan. 3, but they soon will find they aren't all created equal.

Republicans, who suffered a one-seat loss in this month's elections and were left at a 55-45 disadvantage, can take slight consolation as the pecking order of the new freshman class falls into place when the Senate meets to elect its leadership next week.

Atop the new seniority list is Republican Slade Gorton, who won his comeback bid in Washington state. He takes that spot as the only former senator in the incoming class.

The top status will be at least a minimal boost for Gorton. It entitles him to first pick of vacant office suites in the three Senate office buildings and perhaps a few other perks, like a coveted "hideaway" office in the Capitol.

In the Senate Republican Conference, the party conclave that makes committee assignments for GOP members, Gorton's prior service also will give him a leg up on his freshman colleagues in the class of '89.

Last on the seniority list will be Montana Republican Conrad Burns, the former farm broadcaster and Yellowstone County Commissioner who ousted incumbent Democrat John Melcher.

If Burns wants to know what to expect, he should ask North Dakota Democrat Kent Conrad, who came in dead last in the seniority sweepstakes two years ago and wound up with an office off a dank stairwell in the farthest corner of the Hart Senate Office Building.

Republicans also hold the next three positions on the seniority list. All are lawmakers who are moving from the House to the Senate: Trent Lott of Mississippi, Jim Jeffords of Vermont and Connie Mack of Florida.

Lott ranks first among the three because he is a 16-year House veteran who rose to the party's No. 2 leadership position in the chamber. Jeffords, after 14 years in the House, ranks next; and Mack, a six-year House member, will be next in line of seniority.

In the arcane scheme of things senatorial, politicians who have been governors get less credit than House members. Being governor isn't legislative experience, after all, and Congress tends to favor its own.

"Things are different over there," Lott said recently, grinning and shaking his head after trying to master the details of the Senate seniority system.

Three incoming freshman senators have been governors, all Democrats: Virginia's Charles Robb, Robert Kerrey of Nebraska and Richard Bryan of Nevada, who will be ranked in that order. Among freshmen with the same qualifications, ties are broken by the population of the state from which a senator is elected.

Bringing up the rear of the seniority list are three new senators who have no experience that earns credit in the Senate ranking scheme. Again, they are ranked by the sizes of their states: millionaire businessman Herb Kohl, a Wisconsin Democrat; Joseph Lieberman, the Connecticut attorney general who defeated incumbent Lowell Weicker; and Montana's Burns.

This neat arrangement could all

B-1B Crash Linked To Icy Wings

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Ice buildup on a plane that was not equipped with wing de-icers may have caused the crash of a B-1B bomber at an Air Force base in South Dakota last week, according to a published report.

The Chicago Tribune today quoted an unidentified Pentagon official as saying the $280 million aircraft was neither designed nor equipped with wing de-icers.

The four crew members ejected safely when the bomber crashed Nov. 17 while approaching for a landing during bad weather at Ellsworth Air Force Base, S.D.

It was the second bomber to crash in less than two weeks and the third crash of a B-1B in the past 14 months.

The Pentagon source, who requested anonymity, said an ice alert was in effect at the time of the crash, and another bomber that landed about five minutes earlier had a buildup of about half an inch of ice on the leading edge of its wings, the Tribune reported.

The newspaper quoted an unidentified aeronautical engineer as saying that such a buildup of ice could cause a plane to crash, not from excess weight, but from a change in the shape of the airfoil and a resulting loss in lift.

Mike Mathews, a spokesman for Rockwell International, the prime contractor for the B-1B, confirmed that the bomber, unlike civilian aircraft of comparable size, is not equipped with wing de-icers.

"Our wind tunnel tests showed it did not need them for normal cold weather operations," said Mathews, who contended that the ice buildup was not significant.

A former military pilot told the Tribune that many of the nation's other military jets are not equipped with wing de-icers. He cited the T-38 and the A-4.

"They're built to just boom through the low-altitude weather and get to the clear air at higher altitudes," he said.

One function of the B-1B, however, is to fly hundreds of miles at extremely low altitudes.

Maj. Joseph Saxon, an Ellsworth spokesman, told the newspaper, "Light rime icing was forecast for 2,000 to 16,000 feet for the period of the flight." He described rime as a type of granular ice that forms in low-altitude fog and below clouds.

Saxon declined to comment further on whether ice may have been a factor in the crash.

Ozarks Students Will Hold First-Ever School Dance

By Donna Bryson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PURDY, Mo. — When the high school students in this small town in the Ozarks hold their first-ever school dance outsiders won't be welcome and neither will reporters.

A ban on school dances at Purdy High School was struck down by a judge last summer and the first dance is scheduled for Dec. 10, although administrators are still fighting it.

"I'm looking forward to it. I'm excited," said Nancy Fox, who is in charge of choosing a dance theme, music and colors for the paper streamers.

A group of 21 Purdy students, including Miss Fox, and their parents filed a lawsuit challenging the dance ban in 1986 with the help of the American Civil Liberties Union. In the past, students had only small dances at the community center in this small southwest Missouri town.

The case drew nationwide attention, in part because of its similarities to the plot of the movie "Footloose," about a fictional town where dancing was banned.

U.S. District Judge Russell Clark ruled in August that the ban in the rural town of 900 unconstitutionally promoted the values of residents who opposed dancing for religious reasons.

The school board has appealed, but the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis has allowed plans for a dance to proceed pending its review. The court has scheduled arguments in the case at the end of the year.

School Superintendent Sheldon Buxton and Principal Ron Richardson devised dance guidelines admittedly more restrictive than those at other schools.

"I don't know of any other schools that are having a dance that is this important," Buxton said. "This is not an ordinary dance."

Buxton and Miss Fox said the most controversial of the rules is one barring from the dance all but the 160 Purdy High School students.

Miss Fox said classmates who date students from other schools would like to invite them. But Buxton said he feared outsiders bent on disruption would be attracted by the dance's notoriety.

"I think it'll still be fun," Miss Fox said. "I think that a majority of the students will show. It will be a fun activity — I like to dance."

Another guideline — barring reporters from the gymnasium where the dance is scheduled — was inspired by the students. "They want a homecoming dance, not a forum for the media," Buxton said.

The administration also vetoed the student council's decision to accept a Springfield radio station's offer of a disc jockey and music for free.

Buxton said the station had made "derogatory comments about the board. (I am) trying to neutralize what I consider to be an emotional thing." The Purdy dance case had been the subject of humorous skits and comment on the station.

Miss Fox said other disc jockeys and stations also have offered free music, and student leaders are making a second choice. "I don't really think it'll matter too much who it is, as long as there's music," Miss Fox said.

Damage At Nuclear Plant Irreversible

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GOLDEN, Colo. — A congressional investigator says damage at the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant from radioactive materials and toxic chemicals may be irreversible and even the plant's defenders admit a cleanup would be costly.

The Rocky Flats plant, which makes weapons components from plutonium, has become the target of safety and environmental concerns over the years. There have been fires, lawsuit settlements and studies showing higher cancer rates and plutonium contamination.

"I don't believe that it's possible to reverse the harm that has been done at Rocky Flats," said Bob Alvarez, who works for the U.S. Senate's governmental affairs committee, which monitors nuclear weapons complexes.

"I don't think you can retrieve the stuff (solvents mixed with plutonium) that's migrating down to the groundwater" at Rocky Flats, said Alvarez.

The 385-acre plant site 16 miles northwest of Denver is surrounded by a 6,550-acre, federally owned buffer zone.

Fred Dowsett, head of the Colorado Health Department's waste management division, said concentrations of hazardous compounds in some groundwater on the plant site are 20,000 times above the drinking water standard.

But Dowsett said that in itself poses no threat to local residents.

"The nature of the plant, with a large security zone around it, means groundwater contamination is confined to the area of the plant," he said. "There's a large uninhabitated buffer zone before it can get off site."

Officials say all 107 waste sites at Rocky Flats are closely monitored. The monitoring also has intensified in recent years, they said.

But they acknowledge it might cost hundreds of millions, if not billions, of dollars to undertake an effective cleanup.

William Fenzel, a General Accounting Office investigator who headed a recent safety study of Rocky Flats, likened predicting groundwater flow to forecasting Colorado weather.

The Department of Energy and its contractor, Rockwell International, have conceded they lack sufficient information about groundwater migration, Fenzel said, because they have decided to drill 200 additional test wells around the plant during the next few years.

He said that raises questions about just how polluted the site actually is.

"I think the severity of the problem is such that even if they spend an enourmous amount of money on cleanup, areas of the site still may be restricted for decades and even possibly centuries," he said.

Since Rocky Flats opened in 1952, large quantities of toxic, carcinogenic chemicals and radioactive materials have been handled at the plant. During the plant's first 25 years of operation, many of those materials were dumped at the site.

Some of the deadliest substances — plutonium, uranium, americium and chlorinated solvents like trichloroethylene, or TCE; tetrachloroethylene, PCE; and carbon tetrachloride — will remain in the plant's groundwater and soil for decades, if not longer.

Change Proposed

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Goals and Policy Board has recommended a package of changes in the state civil justice system, including one that would allow accident victims to collect some damages even if they were partly negligent.

That proposal is known as comparative fault. Under the current legal doctrine of contributory negligence, accident victims are barred from collecting damages if they are partly at fault.

The board's recommendations will be sent to Gov. Jim Martin, who can decide whether to seek approval for them by the General Assembly.

Tire Fire

CHADBOURN, N.C. (AP) — A blaze of undetermined origin destroyed an old warehouse containing more than 75,000 tires and forced the temporary evacuation of more than 500 people on Thanksgiving Day, officials said.

Dense smoke from the fire, which began about 3 a.m. Thursday, prompted an "air quality crisis" and more than 500 people were evacuated from a 20-square-block area for about five hours Thursday afternoon, Town Manager Marshall Shepherd said.

No injuries resulted from the blaze.

Poor's Benefactor Killed

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — A poverty stricken man who collected aluminum cans so he could give money, food and clothing to other poor people was killed by a motorist while making his rounds, police said.

Arthur Bailey, 69, was either riding or walking his bicycle along a city street when he was struck and killed by a pickup truck Tuesday night.

Bailey, who aided 28 families, died while raising funds for a disabled girl who needed money, said Denise Swope.

"He was the type of person who would give the shirt off his back," said Denise Burgos. "He'd go down to his last penny or his last dime if somebody needed medications, cigarettes or anything else. That's always the way he was."

Police said a 27-year-old man has been charged with several offenses, including vehicular homicide while driving under the influence and hit and run involving a death.

Special Panel To Consider Military Base Cuts Monday

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — A special commission, mindful of the fierce political battles that could erupt if military cost-cutting steps are not applied evenly across the country, is scheduled to begin drafting Monday a long-awaited hit list of obsolete U.S. bases, one of the panel's co-chairmen said this week.

"We know our work product has to pass muster with the secretary of defense and Congress. It can't be done insensitively," said Jack Edwards, the former Republican congressman from Alabama who is co-chairman of the commission.

During a telephone interview from his law office in Mobile, Edwards said the 12-member volunteer commission understands "we ought not to lose our minds when it comes to picking a particular area for base closings."

"We will be sensitive to that," he said, asserting that a list that balances regional interests stands to gain the most political support in Congress.

Edwards insisted that no preliminary lists have been drawn up by the commission — which meets here privately Monday and Tuesday — and he declined to say if bases named in previous Pentagon lists might end up on the new one.

The Commission on Base Realignment and Closure, also chaired by former Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, a Connecticut Democrat, was created last May by Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci in anticipation of a new law, enacted last month, requiring a bipartisan group to lead the politically difficult task of closing unneeded military bases.

The measure, which calls for closing or consolidating bases beginning in 1990, could save taxpayers $1.5 billion to $5 billion, depending on the number of facilities involved, various congressional and Pentagon estimates show.

By law, the panel has a Dec. 31 deadline for submitting a list of targeted facilities to Carlucci, who would have until Jan. 16 to forward it to Congress. Under a take-it-or-leave-it policy, both the administration and Congress must accept or reject the entire list.

This procedure was designed to limit pressure to reserve individual facilities. Despite strong efforts by President Carter, and to a lesser extent President Reagan, to save money on military bases, not one has closed since 1977 because of the intervention of legislators who feared losing jobs and votes in their districts.

During his campaign this fall, President-elect George Bush referred to the closing of unnecessary military bases as one of the few specific ways he intended to trim the nation's budget deficit.

So far, the commission's 40-member staff, drawn mostly from the Pentagon, has been working to finish its analysis of 3,816 domestic military installations so the panel can begin choosing candidates for the hit list, said James G. Abbee, a commission spokesman.

"We do the analysis and put it all on the table," Abbee said. Among the criteria to be used by commissioners in their decisions are the physical condition of a base; the ability to relocate military missions now assigned to a base; economic and environmental impact of a base closure; local activities and facilities supporting a base; and future military requirements, he said.

The actual number of bases to be designated for closing is uncertain, although House Armed Services Committee Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., predicted this month that about two dozen out of the 355 largest installations in the country should be on the list.

Some commissioners and staff have visited about 10 "randomly selected" facilities and expect to see several more by mid-December to verify data supplied by the military, Abbee said.

Bush May Back Medicare Cuts

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration will back substantial Medicare cuts of $3.5 billion to $5 billion for fiscal 1990 as part of an initial effort to cut the federal deficit, some Bush advisers and budget experts predicted Thursday.

They said any suggested cuts, at least at first, are unlikely to involve drastic changes or major restructuring of the $80 billion program, although such proposals may come later.

More likely, according to experts consulted by Bush transition aides, initial cuts would be based on the Reagan administration's fiscal 1990 budget proposals being prepared for submission to Congress.

Bush may favor somewhat bigger or somewhat smaller cuts in some items than President Reagan will propose or a slightly different configuration, but he'll be in the same ballpark, the aides and experts said.

Depending on how details are worked out, the 1990 cuts could mean savings of as much as $15 billion a year by fiscal 1995. (All such savings, in the budget world, are measured not by comparing them with what is being spent today, but by comparing them with what would be spent if current law remains in effect and if increases were made to account for inflation and population change.)

The new administration's intention to look at Medicare as a major source of budget savings was signaled Tuesday by Richard G. Darman in statements shortly after President-elect George Bush selected him as Office of Management and Budget director.

However, even incremental cuts in the $3.5 billion-to-$5 billion range would be difficult to get through Congress because the American Hospital Association, the Federation of American Health Systems, medical groups and spokesmen for the aged fear some of the cuts could hurt their members or reduce the quality of medical care.

AHA Vice President Jack Owen said that new cuts in payments to hospitals "in the long run would affect access to care and technology. You're going to see more hospitals closing."

John Rother of the American Association of Retired Persons said any proposals to increase cost-sharing by beneficiaries, to cut benefits or to reduce eligibility "harms those the program is designed to protect."

Medicare has long been an attractive source of budget cuts. Cutting it would help hold down the rapid escalation of government and private national spending on health, which has risen to 11.1 percent of gross national product, the highest of any major developed nation.

But perhaps most attractive to politicians is that it is possible to achieve substantial savings without totally alienating 33 million politically potent beneficiaries. This can be done by leaving benefit levels and eligibility unchanged.

Retirement May Hurt Marriage

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Retirement may not bring couples closer together and could damage a shaky marriage, a study says.

Retirement has no beneficial effects on the quality of marriages among older people, said Gary Lee, a University of Florida gerontologist and sociology professor.

That does not mean retirement is bad, he said, but it indicates that retirement may not add anything to a marriage and certainly will not improve a bad one.

"For an event that is supposed to be a real change, (retirement) has surprisingly few and surprisingly weak effects," Lee said. "The negative effects are few, but retirement is not going to save a failing marriage.

"Basically, people are the same folks they were before they retired; they're just not working," he said.

One circumstance where retirement may hurt a marriage is when the husband retires, but the wife continues to work.

Lee came to these conclusions after he and an associate, Constance Shehan, studied the results of marital satisfaction questionnaires from 2,176 Washington state households with at least one resident older than 55.

Respondents were asked to identify their own and their spouse's employment status, their length of retirement and marital satisfaction.

One of the surprises Lee found was that even after a husband retires, he usually does not assist in the domestic chores around the house.

Lee said this may be a reason women report less marital satisfaction after their husbands retire if they are still working, whether inside or outside of the home.

There is also a minority of couples who have problems because the husband retires and then wants to help out more around the house. Lee said that can make wives annoyed and dissatisfied with their marriages.

Lee said while he found that retirement does not add anything to a marriage, there are some steps that couples can take to strengthen their relationship.

Planning may be one thing that will help couples enjoy their marriages more and make a smoother transition to retirement, Lee said.

"One easy thing to suggest from these results is there is a reasonable argument that couples who are both working, who retire at the same time, may find that more beneficial," he said.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Wrong Image

Some Party Changes Essential

The problems of North Carolina Democrats can't be solved in private meetings where a few officeholders decide who will be chief.

No, the party's crisis goes much deeper than its lack of leadership. If this crisis is to be resolved, the Democrats must give its problems a thorough, open airing in an atmosphere that allows input from all levels in the party — top to bottom.

Whether or not last week's canceled meeting of Democratic officeholders was intended to be a private affair that excluded segments of the party's membership, it looked that way from the outside. The get-together between Sen. Terry Sanford, N.C. Attorney General Lacy Thornburg and Secretary of State Rufus Edmisten had the appearance of secrecy and back-room dealing that has hurt the party in the past. No blacks and no women were invited, although those that did get bids said logistics kept more invitations from being issued. That seems exclusionary. Even if it wasn't planned that way, that's the image it projected.

And that image won't raise the state Democratic party out of the abyss the defeats of the 1988 election put it in. That image won't help the party revise, revamp and strengthen its support among the state's voters. It won't lure lost Democrats back from the Republican fold and it certainly won't convince the best and brightest leaders in the state to be Democrats.

No, the party needs to listen to its grassroots membership as well as its brass if it's going to successfully rebuild. It needs to heed the advice of each of its segments — urban, rural, agriculture, business, industrial. And yes, it should listen to its black and female leaders. Only by strengthening its forces can the Democratic party strengthen its numbers.

But to accomplish this goal means involving these factions, not alienating them. The party cannot be a remote organization where the rank-and-file members have little say-so in platform and leadership decisions.

Never before has the North Carolina Democratic party had such vigorous competition from Republicans. And never, before the November defeats, has the party so unsuccessfully vied with its opposition.

This strong two-party system is positive. It was slow developing in North Carolina, but politically the state will reap great benefits from its presence.

But for Democrats, who right now find themselves on the down side of the coin, that two-party system means some changes have to occur.

One of those changes is openness, and last week's event sure looked like the wrong approach.

Competition

A Puzzling, Emotional Election

The political campaign between Canada's Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and Liberal Party opponent John Turner, as well as New Democratic Party candidate Ed Broadhurst, was as puzzling to Canada's United States neighbors as it was emotional for Canadians.

Mulroney's campaign ran into trouble when the opponents began questioning a U.S.-Canadian trade pact which would lower most trade barriers between the two nations.

The opponents touched a nerve with Canadian voters as they claimed the free trade agreement could mean the end of Canadian culture. The fear — and obviously it is of concern to Canadians — is that the United States culture will engulf Canada.

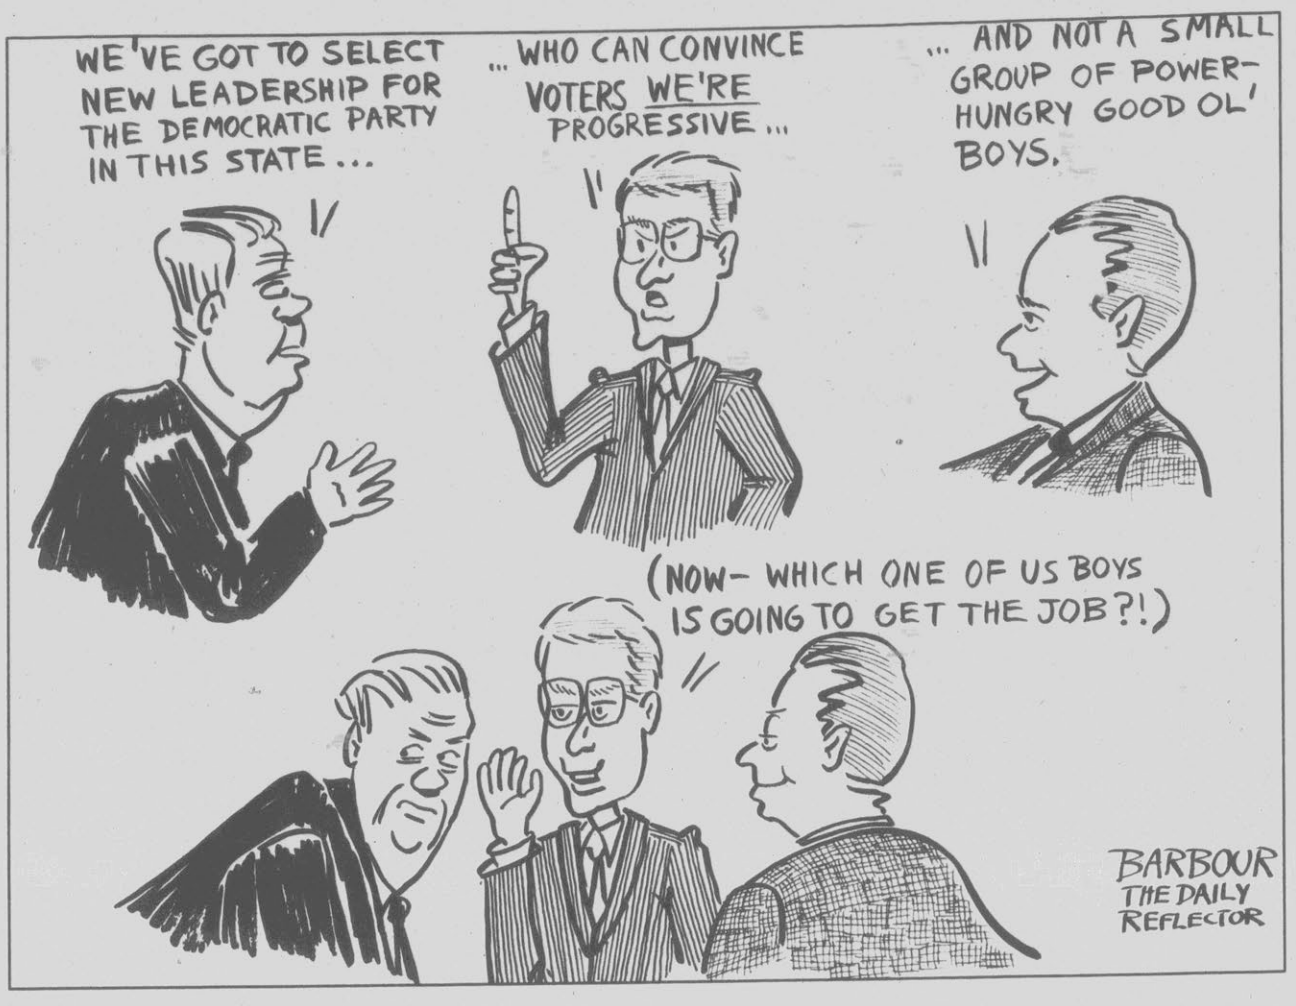
A further implication was that Canada itself would eventually be swallowed up and become a state, or group of states, of the U.S.

The argument was baffling to most Americans who never give a thought to the U.S. annexation of Canada. In fact, given the cleanliness and efficiency of the Canadian cities, we have to wonder what possible advantage there would be to Canada's joining the United States.

The two nation's borders are virtually unguarded and citizens of both nations move back and forth across the border without the bother of a passport.

Now a stronger economic bond may be necessary to compete with a growing European economic bloc, a strong Japanese economy and the growth of other nations.

Mulroney won his election and expects to proceed with the free trade pact. We would expect the Canadian culture to withstand it even as the two nations, allied in trade, become better able to compete in the world markets.



The Answer Is An Easy 'No'

Ellen Goodman

BOSTON — It is certain that Peter Rosier wouldn't be on trial today if he hadn't been on television two years ago. If he hadn't told all of Fort Myers, Fla., that, "I administered something to terminate her life."

His wife Patricia, after all, a woman whose lung cancer had spread to her other organs, had told everyone that she intended to commit suicide. Indeed she planned her death as a final elaborate production.

Perhaps it was a dramatic attempt to control, or shape, or choose the terms of her death. Perhaps it was an attempt to win some perverse victory over her cancer. Either way, Patricia Rosier, 43, picked the date, the time, even the wine for her last meal. She picked out the pills and she swallowed them.

Death, however, didn't play the accommodating role that had been scripted for it. While the Rosier children slept in the next room, the deep coma induced by 20 Seconal pills began to lighten. Her husband Peter, a pathologist, went desperately searching for morphine. And then, as he said a year later, he " administered something."

The irony is that if Dr. Rosier told the truth on television it was not the whole truth. The morphine he administered wasn't the immediate cause of his wife's death. Patricia's stepfather would testify to that after being granted immunity. At the scene of this botched attempt, Vincent Delman feared that she would become, in his words, "a vegetable," and he put his hand over his stepdaughter's mouth and nose.

So it was that Patricia Rosier began by attempting suicide and her stepfather finished the job. But it is, nevertheless, her husband who is on trial for murder, for attempted murder, for conspiracy to commit murder.

In its simplest terms, the case asks whether Dr. Rosier is guilty of these crimes. But in more complicated terms, the case asks us to think about the moral difference between assisting suicide and committing murder.

The one thing everyone agrees upon is that Patricia Rosier was determined to end her own life ahead of the horrors she read into her cancer prognosis. The law today allows — if that is the right word — people to commit suicide. But what happens when someone who is terminally ill and utterly rational needs help to carry out the wish to die?

That is not an idle question. All over this country, husbands and wives, AIDS victims and lovers, friends and parents and children have made pacts to help each other "along the way." But if we provide the pills — or for that matter the bullets or the morphine shot — they request, are we just the errand-runner, the legs for these wishes? Or are we the active accomplices in their death?

Our refusal to help means, for example, that only those people healthy enough to get a prescription themselves can choose their own death. Our inability to help means that many will die alone. But our agreement to put pills on a night stand or in a mouth could mean that complicity in death is justified because someone asks for it.

The Rosier case is a particularly strange one. When Patricia Rosier's suicide attempt began to fail, her panicky husband had already been drawn into the drama. Caught up in the power of her last wishes, he felt compelled to fulfill them. Her stepfather, standing over the woman in a coma, said to himself, "Enough is enough."

Was Dr. Rosier morally right when he administered the morphine? Would it have been morally right to allow his wife, who had chosen suicide, to end up in a coma? I am not at all sure.

Is he, on the other hand, a murderer, even an attempted murderer in the way we understand that term? That I can answer with certainty: no. No, because he didn't begin this death. No, because he didn't complete it.

The saddest part of this story is that Patricia Rosier decided to commit suicide in the first place, to secure a gentle death. "It is," worries Dan Callahan, an ethicist at the Hastings Center, "an increasing terror of medical progress" that lurks behind many such a choice among the ill. "People feel the only way they can regain self-control is to have available the possibility of suicide."

The fear of unnecessary pain and the fear of losing control to a technological death have changed the nature of many last wishes. So, the most telling part of the Patricia Rosier story is not the one played out on television or in the courtroom. It's the tale of a woman who finally believed that suicide was more merciful than medicine.

No-Nonsense Advice From Experts

William Raspberry

WASHINGTON — The document former Presidents Ford and Carter have prepared for President-elect Bush is about what you would expect it to be — once you accept the novel brilliance of having those who have sat in the Oval Office give practical advice to the one who is about to enter it.

But it also contains an emphasis that you might find surprising.

The report, "American Agenda," lays out a series of priorities, problems and suggested approaches ranging from transition and national security to the impending savings-and-loan crisis and Third World debt.

The surprise — for me, at any rate — is its emphatic call for a major White House-led assault on the problem of what is called "children at risk."

In three different places in the thin volume comprising the heart of the report, the two former Presidents make their pitch for moving quickly to reduce the size and potential social threat of the growing underclass. It is one item on a list of six proposed priorities for the first three months of the Bush administration. It is the subject of a paper, commissioned for the report, by Isabel V. Sawhill. And it is a key part of a section of "observations and priorities" that contains some of the most urgent and eloquent language of the entire report.

> 'It's a brilliant idea, worthy of being institutionalized — not because former Presidents are necessarily smarter than new ones but because it can help new Presidents to avoid the false starts, blind alleys and partisan stalemates.'

"We see two Americas," say the former chief executives, in language reminiscent of the post-riot 1968 Kerner Commission, "one increasingly wealthy, one tragically poor, a land of opportunity for most and of idle hopelessness for too many, a nation never so prosperous or so profligate. And in between are middle Americans, many of whom are struggling to hold their own."

They urge Bush to pay special attention to that part of the nation that is "poor, forgotten, out of work and out of hope."

Nor is their message one of those hopelessly general statements. It specifically calls, for instance, for inclusion of all eligibles in such programs as prenatal care, compensatory education, immunization and Headstart (only about a fifth of those eligible are presently included). The additional $2 billion cost would come from reduced outlays for Amtrak, Urban Development Action Grants and farm subsidies and modest increases in cigarette, liquor and gasoline taxes.

"American Agenda" is the brainchild of Stuart Eizenstat, Carter's domestic policy adviser, and James Cannon, who held the same post in the Ford White House. A year ago, the pair persuaded their former chiefs to co-chair a nonprofit organization for the specific purpose of advising the next President.

"The idea behind the proposal," says Eisenstat, "was to make constructive use of former Presidents and to create a mechanism for dealing with important issues that don't get discussed in any useful way during a presidential campaign.

"We had a sense that we would be going through a divisive campaign and that there would be a need to lift these key issues out of the partisan in-fighting. Our idea was that if we could identify some of the crucial problems and propose some bipartisan solutions, it would help the next President get off to a faster start."

Once Carter and Ford agreed to the concept, their erstwhile assistants put together an impressive array of experts to work through the issues and offer specific proposals for dealing with them.

"Each President has his own priorities and his own world view," Ford and Carter told the President-elect. "Our effort here is neither to subvert nor supplant the agenda on which you were elected. Rather, we — as veterans of the Oval Office, who know the exhilaration and challenges of the presidency, who have exercised presidential power and know its reach and its limits, who have been where you will be and who have made the same kinds of decisions you must make — wish to help you get off to a fast and successful start in dealing with the daunting problems and the challenging new world you inherit."

It's a brilliant idea, worthy of being institutionalized — not because former Presidents are necessarily smarter than new ones but because it can help new Presidents to avoid the false starts, blind alleys and partisan stalemates that are the usual lot of new leaders.

What Ford and Carter are offering their successor is the sort of no-nonsense advice they wish someone had offered them.

Russ Teaque prepares food for homeless at Raleigh shelter

Volunteers Say Thanks By Sharing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Most of the hundreds of needy North Carolinians who ate Thanksgiving turkey at churches, restaurants and Salvation Army centers were thankful, but some homeless people couldn't swallow their bitterness with a slice of pumpkin pie.

"You don't know — you don't sleep in the street," a man at the Durham Community Kitchen said Thursday. At 10:30 a.m., he had finished his Thanksgiving dinner and faced a long day on the city's deserted sidewalks.

In Fayetteville, about 250 people who otherwise may have gone hungry gorged on turkey, ham, casseroles, cakes and myriad other edibles at a lunch at the Salvation Army building.

And more than enough food was left over to serve supper, said Gloria Robison, coordinator for the Love Lunches program.

"We are prepared for 400," she said as the feast began, adding that Love Lunches feeds about 125 people on a daily basis. More than 45 churches in the community contributed food and volunteers for the dinner.

At Fort Bragg, 7,000 pounds of turkey was prepared for the annual feast. Along with the turkey were 4,500 pounds of steamship round; 5,000 pounds of ham; 1,600 pounds of shrimp; 1,350 pounds of nuts; 14,880 pounds of apples, oranges, grapes, pears and tangerines; 1,620 pumpkin pies; 810 mincemeat pies and 800 pounds of fruitcake.

At the Salvation Army headquarters in Greensboro, the scene was much the same, with the local restaurant association and other donors putting together a spread that included 42 turkeys, 10 cases of sweet potatoes, 10 cases of green beans, and stuffing in large foil tubs.

Salvation Army officials said they were astounded by the number of people who volunteered their services.

"It has to be over 150 of them," said Nancy Arthur, a secretary at the Salvation Army. "People called ahead, some of them. They began calling a month ago, as soon as word got out about this.

"Other people just showed up and said, 'Put me to work.' At one time, we had people lined up waiting to do something."

Meanwhile, other volunteers ferried meals throughout Greensboro to those unable to make it to the dinner.

Curtis and Keith said they appreciated the free meal Thursday at McGuffey's in Asheville. If they had not been sharing the restaurant booth, the pair said, they would have spent the holiday walking the streets.

Curtis and Keith were two of the less fortunate that McGuffey's fed as part of the restaurant's fifth annual Thanksgiving alms. The 1,000 diners expected at McGuffey's restaurants in Asheville, Hendersonville and Greenville, S.C., ran the gamut from the homeless to senior citizens.

"We've been very fortunate because the community has received the restaurant with open arms. We want to give something back to that community. What goes around comes around," said Alan Laibson, general manager of the Asheville McGuffey's.

The meal also brings employees closer together, said Bruce Ladd.

"They say the best thing about Christmas is the giving of the gifts," Ladd said. "You can say the same thing about Thanksgiving."

At the Hospitality House in Asheville, 25 homeless people were expected to gather for an afternoon meal served by volunteers. The Salvation Army had four turkeys in anticipation of serving 50 people.

Chancellor Elected

CULLOWHEE, N.C. (AP) — Western Carolina Universty Chancellor Myron L. Coulter has been elected chairman of the board of directors of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

Coulter, who was elected this week at the annual AASCU conference in Baltimore, will be a principal spokesman on national higher education issues, presenting AASCU's views on congressional activities and legislation that could affect higher education.

One of the nation's largest higher education associations, the AASCU is made up of more than 370 colleges and universities in the United States, Puerto Rico, Guam and the Virgin Islands.

Duplin Town Stages Its Holiday Parade

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEAUTANCUS, N.C. — Several thousand spectators lined a rural Duplin County intersection to watch what has become one of the region's most unusual holiday processions — the Beautancus Community Christmas Parade.

It's an event born of a good-natured joke and kept alive by tradition, friendship and fun.

On Thursday, its 105 entries featured the squawk of sirens, the pungent aroma of horses, the glitter of beauty queens and the occasional eccentricity that city slickers would never understand.

"This is our fourth annual Christmas parade," said Charles D. Kornegay, the parade director. "I don't know if you heard about it, but the first one started out as a joke."

It seems Kornegay's church was building a float to enter in parades of some neighboring towns, and organizers decided they should make a practice run.

"Somebody said, 'Why don't you drive on by the store,'" Kornegay said. "When we did, they had 50 or 60 people standing out there, watching it go by and, boom, it just boomeranged from there."

The 400 or 500 residents of Beautancus, pronounced Bo-TANK-us, left the organizing to Kornegay, a sewing machine mechanic, and G.W. Swinson, the owner of Swinson's Food Mart and the police chief in Calypso.

Rules were simple: anyone could enter, as long as he or she did so by 2 p.m. Thanksgiving Day. The parade started at 3 p.m.

"We were surprised after the first year at how many people said, 'If we knew you were going to have a parade, we would have been in it,'" Kornegay said.

Last year, 108 entries brought almost 5,000 spectators to Beautancus, about 15 miles south of Goldsboro, Swinson said. On Thursday, 105 entries were registered an hour before the parade started moving along its 1.2-mile route.

By the time it reached the intersection of Secondary Roads 1363 and 1306, spectators were sitting in lawn chairs, stretched out on quilts or standing in the back of pickup trucks to watch.

Swinson's dark blue police car led the procession, which included television personalities, just-elected state Rep. Charles Albertson of Beulaville, Mr. and Miss Beautancus and a dozen beauty queens from local schools and neighboring towns.

Fire engines and rescue squads from area towns inched along behind the Mount Olive Floor Takers Drill Team. Its eight members periodically stopped to strut their stuff for the crowd.

Beautancus resident Glanton Holland drew a lot of smiles as he drove his John Deere 185 Hydro lawn mower and wagon.

At Cypress Glen, We Know What A Carolina Retirement Is All About.

Nothing Could Be Finer.

For years, Eastern North Carolina has maintained a national reputation as an exceptional retirement location. Maybe it's our agreeable climate. Or perhaps it's our wealth of cultural and recreational opportunities. Of course it could be our charming towns, nearby coastal waters and friendly neighbors. But most likely it's the combination of all these delightful characteristics.

At Cypress Glen, we haven't lost sight of why people love to retire in our area. With this in mind, we've made some big changes that can offer you a unique and affordable retirement lifestyle.

Cypress Glen now has two fee options. Residents may choose our new monthly fee plan or our traditional entrance fee plan (which lowers your monthly cost). Both plans include your deluxe unit or suite, as well as three meals served each day in our gracious dining room, housekeeping, maintenance, 24-hour security, scheduled transportation, planned activities and more. In addition, we offer an on-site infirmary and close proximity to Pitt County Memorial Hospital, one of the leading teaching hospitals in the Southeast.

Cypress Glen is a Methodist Retirement Homes, Inc. community. This assures you of a caring staff and close friendships to share your retirement with.

An Ideal Location.

Cypress Glen is located in Greenville, the beautiful heart of Eastern North Carolina. So you'll enjoy a rare blend of hometown charm and a wide range of cosmopolitan activities from which to choose.

Greenville is known for its outstanding culture, shopping, restaurants and historical attractions. Yet it's also convenient to the Research Triangle, as well as Interstate 95. It's a city you'll love to call home.

An Outstanding Value In Retirement.

On our monthly fee plan, fees start at only $1035, so there's been a lot of renewed interest in Cypress Glen. But it's still not too late to make your reservation. Simply complete and return the attached card for more information. Or call 919-830-0036 to make an appointment to see Cypress Glen. Whatever you do, be sure to act quickly, because more and more people are discovering that we know what a Carolina Retirement is all about.

Bush Gets Taste Of Life In Presidential 'Fishbowl'

By David Hoffman
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — In the old days, when George Bush went jogging through the birch and pine forests around his home here, he was almost unnoticed.

Thursday, the president-elect, who has expressed a desire not to disturb the "magic of Kennebunkport," got a taste of what living in the fishbowl of the presidency will be like.

As he appeared on the boat dock Thursday morning at Walker's Point, the family compound here, dozens of news photographers were already lined up in the shivering cold across the cove. Bush waved from the distance and spent some time conferring on the dock with the chief and two crew members of the 95-foot Coast Guard cutter Cape Higgons, guarding his seaside home offshore.

Then Bush decided to go jogging before his Thanksgiving dinner. He changed into sweats and was driven out of the compound in the vice-presidential limosine. The big black car made a right turn on Ocean Avenue — and promptly got stuck in traffic.

The jam was caused by a convoy of two dozen reporters in rental cars who were idling on the side of the road, getting ready to follow Bush to his jogging path.

Bush looked out the window as he waited for the cars to clear — smiling and waving to the reporters.

He ran for 20 minutes on dirt roads through an area where new vacation homes are being built. One family was a little startled to see 50 reporters and cameramen standing on their driveway waiting for the next president to jog by for a photo opportunity.

On the first pass, Bush could see he wasn't going to get by unless the news-media herd got out of his way, and he called out to Bruce Zanca, a press aide who was supposed to be on his way to Thanksgiving dinner with his fiance's family — but decided he should stick around to make sure the photo opportunity didn't get out of hand.

"Got to go straight ahead, Zanca," ordered the president-elect. As the group parted and Bush headed up the road, a reporter called out playfully, "What about Noriega?" Bush acknowledged the question — a favorite humorous taunt during the campaing — by motioning with his fist behind his back. At first he appeared to be giving the questioner what he would call an "active hand gesture" of displeasure, but examination of network videotapes later showed that Bush had only displayed a protruded thumb.

On his second pass, a reporter shouted a question about the ethics bill that President Reagan vetoed. "I'm not coming by here again," said Bush. At the end of his run, he stopped to admire the infant son of one correspondent and headed back to the splendid isolation of Walker's Point, where he was to enjoy a traditional Thanksgiving dinner with his wife, Barbara, and two long-time aides, housekeeper Paola Rendon and Don Rhodes, an aide in the vice president's Senate office. The five Bush children were on post-election vacations or spending the holiday with in-laws, a spokesman said.

Rumors Are Flying At Bush's Hideaway

By Jerry Harkavy
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — In this fishing port that may be the site of the next summer White House, rumors are flying as thick as herring gulls over a dragger's stern.

One rumor has it that Ocean Avenue, the winding road that skirts President-elect George Bush's oceanfront estate, will be made one-way to ease the flow of traffic and enhance security. Others suggest the road will be closed to the public and that passes will be issued to townspeople who live along the route.

Bush and his wife, Barbara, were spending the Thanksgiving holiday at the family estate.

Rumors are about all the town's residents have to work with as they swap ideas about what may happen to their quaint but growing coastal village once Bush takes office Jan. 20.

There is scuttlebutt that lobster fishermen may be barred from setting their traps in the protected cove beside the president-elect's 11-acre compound at Walker's Point. Bush has made it plain that he opposes any such restrictions.

Other unsubstantiated rumors tell of property sold or leased at exorbitant prices to news organizations seeking an operational base near the Bush estate.

Making their way through the grapevine are rumors that a half-dozen helicopter pads will be built at various points in town to speed Bush's trips to and from his estate known as Walker's Point, after his grandfather who built it.

Some of the speculation is just plain fun.

"The last rumor I heard is that they're going to land the aircraft carrier Nimitz out there to bring him in," said Bush's closest neighbor, Robert Dennis, pointing to the ocean beyond Walker's Point.

The Secret Service, in accordance with long-established policy, would not comment on any rumors.

Small Dinner

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — Like millions of other Americans, Barbara Bush cooked the turkey and George Bush carved it as the president-elect indulged himself in a quiet and restful Thanksgiving.

Bush, his wife and two long-time employees shared one of their smallest Thanksgiving gatherings in memory. An aide explained that the Bush's five children and 10 grandchildren, after the long grind of the campaign, were scattered at various locations spending time with other family members.

At his family compound here, Bush spent a couple of hours in his office reading through material prepared by his transition team, and he also placed a number of "happy Thanksgiving calls" to supporters, an aide said.

During the morning, Mrs. Bush slipped and fell on the grounds of the compound while greeting crewmen from a Coast Guard cutter that is stationed off the point as a security precaution. She said that she caught her heel in her pants cuff and stumbled. An aide said that she was not injured.

Pay Call To White House Brings Reunion

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MILTON, Ky. — Charles Vest said he had just about given up hope on finding a way to bring his sister home from Alaska so she could be with their dying father. Then, from a hospital pay phone, he called the White House.

Vest's 71-year-old father, Lester, a farmer from Trimble County, was dying of lung and bone cancer and the family couldn't scrape together enough money for the elder daughter, Teresa Vest, to fly in from Anchorage, Alaska.

It had been 14 years since Teresa had seen her family.

"By the time I called the White House, I was to the point that I didn't think there was a person in the world that cared — that unless you were a really big shot, it didn't matter," Vest said.

"I called her (Teresa) the night that I took Daddy to the hospital, and it was hard on her," said the 28-year-old Vest, who quit his job at a small plant in Madison, Ind., a month ago to care for his father and 65-year-old mother, who is recuperating from open-heart surgery.

The next day, Vest began calling charitable organizations and churches for help to bring his sister home to this northern Kentucky town, but without success.

Finally, through Gov. Wallace Wilkinson's office, Vest was put in touch with a social-services worker who persuaded an airline to reduce its Alaska-to-Kentucky round-trip fare by about half. But that was still too expensive.

A long distance operator helped Vest reach the White House, where his call was finally transferred to Charlene Cozart, one of several special liasons to the president.

"She called me back the next morning and said, 'The ticket's at the airport. All you have to do is pick it up.'"

Monastery Gives Home To Babies With AIDS Virus

By Rich Cartier
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Firefighters refused to respond to medical emergencies at the monastery, garbagemen wouldn't pick up its trash and a county health worker described its tiny patients as "little rattlesnakes."

The reason: Starcross Monastic Community, a Roman Catholic monastery run by lay workers, wanted to provide a home for infants with AIDS.

Yet through it all, much of the bad was offset, said Tolbert McCarroll.

"For every problem we encountered, there was some surprising force that came along to balance it," said McCarroll, author of "Morning Glory Babies."

McCarroll, known as Brother Toby, said the book is an "unconcealed plea" to readers to adopt infants infected with the AIDS virus who otherwise will "spend their days in walkers tethered to doorknobs in hospital corridors."

"There are a lot of misconceptions about how ill these babies are," he said in an interview. "People think they are nothing but trouble, always sick.

"Nothing could be further from the truth, as we hope our story shows."

McCarroll describes a social worker yanking Starcross Monastic Community's 12-year-old foster care license because it would not abandon plans to care for the infants, a neighbor telling reporters the nearby town of Annapolis didn't consider Starcross "part of the community anymore" and a poster being defaced with graffiti reading: "Catch exotic diseases, kiss AIDS infected kids."

"We never carried (the babies) near the public road because of some threats shouted from cars," McCarroll writes in the 160-page book, published last month by St. Martin's Press.

Even now that two years have passed, McCarroll said, "good will toward us will continue to be a local sin for some time to come."

The monastery, about 120 miles north of San Francisco, cares for three or four infants with AIDS.

Although the internationally known monastery's conflicts have been reported before, the book, which details the first two years of Starcross's efforts to help the babies, offers the most complete picture so far of its struggles since November 1986.

Aside from neighbors' fears, the "most antagonistic reaction" came from the government, McCarroll said.

At one point, a social worker ordered McCarroll's 82-year-old bedridden mother, who lived in a separate house on the remote property in Sonoma County, to be fingerprinted for a criminal check, McCarroll says. After an argument over the matter, he said, the monastery's license was temporarily revoked.

Despite the problems, "unsolicited helpers" began showing up, offering physical labor, supplies and friendship.

A banker with AIDS who has two children started showing up early in the morning to do whatever was needed; an elderly woman would drop off a newly made quilt and baby kimonos every few months; a public health worker brought diapers on his day off; and a retired New York subway worker "tackled the mysteries" of farm chores.

Since 1981, about 1,020 cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome have struck children younger than 5, according to the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta. AIDS can be passed from mother to child at or before birth.

McCarroll and health officials warn that by the mid-1990s thousands of infants will be infected with the virus. Up to half will need foster homes.

Although organized religion's response to the epidemic has been slow, McCarroll said AIDS gradually is teaching many people what it means to be Christian.

Toxin Can Kill AIDS Virus Cell

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Laboratory experiments announced today show that a plant toxin combined with a synthetic protein is able to attack and kill cells infected with the AIDS virus while leaving healthy cells untouched.

In a study published today in the journal Science, a group of researchers report that a manmade molecule called recombinant CD4 can be used to deliver a killer toxin to cells infected with AIDS in test-tube experiments.

However, they cautioned that the new laboratory development — like other incremental advances in AIDS research — was far from being ready for clinical application and, at best, might offer a potential new treatment approach rather than a cure.

Dr. Jonathan W. Uhr, chairman of the department of microbiology at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas, said the CD4 molecule naturally binds to a gycoprotein, called gp120, that forms on the surface of cells infected with human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, which causes AIDS. CD4, he said, will not attach itself to cells not infected with HIV.

Wright Investigator Subpoenas Wife's Records

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The special counsel investigating House Speaker Jim Wright has subpoenaed records on work his wife, Betty, did for a partnership between Wright and a Fort Worth real estate developer and investor, according to a source familiar with the case.

The source, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said investigators for outside special counsel Richard J. Phelan had subpoenaed and received records of transactions, working papers and memos related to Mrs. Wright's work for George A. Mallick.

Until 1984, Mrs. Wright was paid $18,000 a year for advice that she gave to an investment venture formed by the Texas congressman, Mallick and their wives in 1979, according to financial disclosure statements filed by the speaker.

With the six-month ethics probe of Wright entering its home stretch, the investigators are examining transactions underlying the partnership company, Mallightco, in much greater detail than available in public records, the source said.

Wright's financial disclosure form shows that he apparently exchanged stock worth between $50,000 and $100,000 for his initial share of the partnership, which was formed to manage investments in stocks, real estate and precious and semi-precious stones.

He listed the value of his Mallightco holdings, which were later placed into a blind trust, at between $100,000 and $250,000. The trustee disclosed last July, two months after the ethics probe began, that the assets had been disposed of.

Wright's investments with Mallick are not mentioned in the six-count resolution which spells out the bounds of the investigation by the ethics panel, formally known as the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct.

The complaint against Wright involves charges that he improperly used his office to lobby federal officials, used campaign funds to pay for publication of a book on which he received some $55,000 in royalties, and used rent-free a Fort Worth condominium owned by Mallick's son.

Committee chairman Julian Dixon, D-Calif., declined to comment on whether Phelan is probing Wright's financial dealings with Mallick or on other matters under investigation. But he denied that any such scrutiny would amount to an expansion of the investigation.

"I am totally satisfied that Phelan's office has not in any way expanded the scope of the preliminary inquiry," Dixon said. "I cannot comment or explain why a particular issue is relevant" to the initial six charges.

Dixon also said he was not concerned that Wright's attorney, William Oldaker, also is acting as counsel to others who testified before the ethics panel, including Mallick and Carolos Moore, a Wright campaign contractor who published the book that is a subject of the probe.

Oldaker did not return phone calls earlier this week. But he told the Washington Post that he represents at least three other witnesses in the case. He declined to name them but defended the practice as ethical so long as each witness is aware of his representation of the others.

However, Wright's chief accuser, Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said in an interview that the multiple representation suggests collusion among the witnesses.

"If that's not a collusive defense, I don't know what is," Gingrich said, adding that he had sent a letter to Dixon asking if the ethics panel had approved the arrangement.

Supporters of Wright have been complaining in recent weeks that the probe, which may cost upwards of $800,000, has grown far beyond its original intent and become a fishing expedition.

They cite trips by attorneys to Texas to interview Wright's political opponents from decades ago and an apparent new look at a 40-year-old unsolved murder case that involved one Wright opponent.

Wright has said repeatedly that he is confident the probe ultimately will find no wrongdoing, and aides say the controversy will not impede Wright's re-election as speaker when leadership posts are handed out the week of Dec. 5.

Dixon said he expected the investigators to finish taking depositions from witnesses by the end of next week, but declined to say when a final report might be issued. The panel could recommend no action, or it could file a formal statement of alleged violations and hold a disciplinary hearing.

White House Pardon Issue For North Still Undecided

By Lyle Denniston
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The unusual minuet within the top ranks of government over a possible pardon for retired Marine Lt. Col. Oliver L. North in the Iran-Contra case is continuing into the holiday weekend, indicating that his chances may be fading but are not yet lost.

President Reagan's staff appears to be intensifying efforts to discourage press speculation about a pardon, yet it still will not say finally or flatly that a pardon has been ruled out.

Reagan himself has repeatedly implied that he believes that the case should be allowed to run its course in court — a view that President-elect George Bush also has expressed.

But Reagan, it is understood, has not yet arrived at a firm opinion, which could explain why a pardon remains possible even if less likely.

High-level officials at the Department of Justice remain deeply troubled about some of the constitutional implications of the criminal case against North, but the officials insist that they are not involved with the question of a pardon, which could end the case altogether. All inquiries to Justice officials, in fact, are referred to the White House, with the suggestion that only the president's views count.

What now seems increasingly likely is that the issue will simply continue, unsettled, for the next several weeks as Reagan's term winds down and the North case progresses toward a trial, starting perhaps in late January.

When the trial draws nearer, it is expected that the issue will come to the fore again, all but forcing Reagan to make a final decision in his last days in office.

There seems real doubt, among key officials here, that the question will be left over for Bush to answer.

The speculation about a pardon by Reagan has persisted and even grown this week, in part because of a series of comments by Reagan's chief spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater. It had been standard for Fitzwater to respond to press questions by saying that the president wanted the courts to deal with the case first.

He gave that response again this week, but Monday, Fitzwater told reporters accompanying the president on a trip to California: "I maintain that no one knows what the president's thinking on this is." That tended to suggest that the question was, indeed, still open.

And later that day, when asked whether he was nearing a decision on a pardon, Reagan replied: "No, no. And I don't think it would be any time to make such a decision while it's still before the courts."

Study Shows Hispanics, Asians Lead Contact With Other Races

By Jay Mathews
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — In the first major study of integration for different minorities in American suburbs, University of Chicago researchers have discovered that Asians and Hispanics have greater contact with other races as they move out of large cities while blacks still encounter major barriers to integration.

One apparent exception to the general trend, according to study authors Douglas S. Massey and Nancy A. Denton, occurs in some Southern and border states, including the Washington area, where blacks have integrated suburbs such as Prince George's County, Md., and where there has been some "encroachment of white suburban development into rural black areas."

Using a complicated formula for calculating "spatial assimilation" — the chance of having a neighbor of a different ethnic group — the authors say they still "discern strong penalties for being black." Blacks live in the most segregated inner-city neighbors, are less likely than other ethnic groups to move to the suburbs, and if they do move to the suburbs, are likely to find their neighborhoods less integrated than the suburban neighborhoods of Asians and Hispanics.

"Two decades after the Civil Rights Act of 1968, which, in theory, banned racial discrimination in the sale and rental of housing, blacks have still not achieved equal access to housing in American cities and suburbs," concluded the report, called "Suburbanization and Segregation in U.S. Metropolitan Areas," to be published in this month's issue of the American Journal of Sociology.

Under the Massey-Denton dissimilarity index, a figure of .600 to .999 indicates a high degree of segregation. Between .300 to .600 is moderate and below .300 is a well-integrated situation. The study shows that the index for blacks in New York is .826, dropping to only .704 in New York suburbs. Detroit's black index is .638 and actually increases to .836 in Detroit suburbs. By contrast, the .756 index for blacks in the District of Columbia drops to .554 for blacks in the Washington suburbs.

BILL & DELORES WINDER

Bill and Delores are laypersons who travel full time in a teaching, healing, evangelistic ministry. Wherever they go, they minister God's healing power with a warm, gentle love and with real authority. Their aim is to restore the healing ministry to the church and to equip clergy and laypeople to minister within their own congregation.

Delores personally knows what it means to be healed by God. She spent 19 years in constant pain eased only by a tight fitting bodycast and by surgery to sever the nerves in her spinal cord. Near death in 1975, she was completely healed at a Kathryn Kuhlman service of the osteoporosis of the spine, and her severed spinal cord was restored. It was soon after her healing that God called her and Bill into the healing ministry.

The Winders have a testimony book, Jesus Set Me Free, and teaching tapes available.

ROGER BLAIR

ROGER BLAIR MINISTRIES

After spending nine years in drugs, rock-n-roll and everything the devil had to offer, Roger got tired of that lifestyle. He began to reflect on his pentecostal upbringing, and his longing for the move of God in his life took preeminence. Of course this is not the end of the story. He was gloriously saved and filled with the Holy Ghost.

Roger is now in full time service to the body of Christ. The Lord dynamically manifests Himself in music with signs and wonders following through his ministry. The power of the Holy Ghost will impact the lives of your people as Jesus is exalted through him.

Roger is a man of integrity who lives a sold out life to God. You will feel he is truly a part of your ministerial staff while he is with you and your church will be changed by the power of the Lord.

Area Center Faces Urban Ills Of '80s

By Michael Argento
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

YORK, Pa. — Two years ago, Nan Geist, a 34-year-old single mother of five, was working for a temporary service, trying to make ends meet while spending a lion's share of her income on day care for her three youngest children.

Things weren't going well — until a friend told her about the Crispus Attucks Community Association.

The association's day-care program accepted Geist's children at a reduced rate, and the employment center helped her find a better-paying job with benefits.

Without Crispus Attucks, Geist says, "I'd probably be working a job rather than trying to establish a career. I would be living, literally, day to day."

While the Crispus Attucks Community Association is best known as a recreation and community center, it is also a model for fighting poverty and improving city neighborhoods during times of government austerity and cutbacks in social programs.

The association's programs address the problems that keep people in the cycle of poverty and remove hope of progressing with the community.

Except for state subsidies for its day-care center and occasional grants for its housing rehabilitation program, the center does not rely on government money. Most of the $1.5 million budget comes from donations.

The association takes the approach that addressing the woes of urban neighborhoods begins with the neighborhood and its residents.

Founded in 1931 as a recreation center for blacks, Crispus Attucks is named for a black man who was killed March 5, 1770, by British soldiers in Boston. The massacre was among the factors that sparked the Revolutionary War.

Crispus Attucks remained a traditional community center through the 1970s, offering recreation, day care and some tutorial services. But by the end of the decade, housing in the city's southeast neighborhood was deteriorating, unemployment among blacks was high and there was a breakdown in the sense of community.

"Housing came out of the concern of the center about the direction our neighborhood was going," Simpson says. "We had to look at what could we do about it. Do we blame white folks? Do we blame city hall? Or do we look in the mirror?"

Crispus Attucks' initial attack on housing, while well intentioned, was a failure. The group lacked expertise for rehabilitation and was spending more money on "gut rehabs" — in which homes are gutted and rebuilt — than the projects would be worth when completed.

But the center learned from its mistake. In 1986, the Enterprise Foundation, a private foundation run by millionaire developer James Rouse, agreed to work with Crispus Attucks.

The Enterprise Foundation provides the center with technical assistance and training for its housing and employment services.

Housing is just one aspect of Crispus Attucks' assault on urban decay and poverty.

Two years ago, the center began an employment service.

"We've knocked a lot of doors down," Simpson says. "There were a lot of companies that wouldn't hire minorities. We've helped open those doors. And we tell our people, if the door's open, be ready."

In the past two years, the center has placed 332 people in entry-level jobs with opportunity for advancement. The Crispus Attucks' budget absorbs the $250-per-person cost to keep the service free to job-hunters and businesses.

The focus now is on keeping those people working and helping them advance. "We don't want a person to be flipping hamburgers for two, three, five years, or to be in maintenance," says Michael Jefferson, who runs the employment service. "We want that person to have the skills to move to the next level."

Day care at Crispus Attucks is more than the baby-sitting provided when the program was begun 12 years ago.

The center, which provides state-subsidized day care for 165 children, charges fees based on the parents' earnings. For some parents, that may mean a fee of as little as $5 to $10 a week. This year, the center will receive about $500,000 from the state toward the program.

The day-care program is also intended to prepare future generations to continue progressing.

Depending on the child's age, says Robert Hollis, who operates the day care program, children receive anywhere from between two to four hours of instruction each day. Lessons are geared to the child's development with the aid and blessing of the city school district and the child's parents.

Of the 35 children in city schools who attended preschool at Crispus Attucks, 17 made the honor roll in third, fourth and fifth grades, Hollis says. Seven made the distinguished honor roll.

"What we show parents and the children," he says, "is that the ability is there."

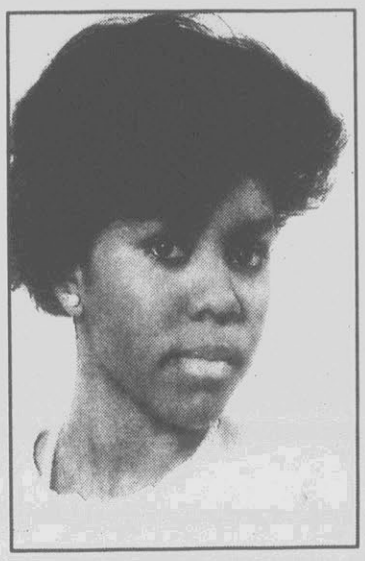
Greenville Debutantes To Be Presented

Four young ladies from Greenville will be presented at the 51st annual Debutante Ball tonight at Raleigh's Civic Center. The ball is being sponsored by Alpha Theta Omega chapter, Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc.

Debutantes are DeWanda Lynette Eaton, Kia Dawn Hardy, Starla Anne Huggins and Hershell Nicole Proctor.

The debutantes are all seniors at J.H. Rose High School. They were honored along with parents and marshals at a breakfast Thursday morning at St. Augustine's College in Raleigh. A dance was held in their honor later in the evening.

The debutantes were involved in a variety of activities this fall to enhance educational, cultural and social opportunities.



DeWANDA LYNETTE EATON

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earnest H. Eaton, Miss Eaton will be escorted by her father while Terence C. Teel of Greenville will serve has her assistant marshal. She will wear a white satin gown with a beaded lace bodice. The full skirt was bordered with matching beads and the bodice had a medallion neckline.

Modeling and gymnastics are two of her favorite pasttimes. At Rose, she is a member of the National Honor Society, homecoming court and a marshal. She is a member of Keywanettes and Teen Dems. A member of Sycamore Hill Baptist Church, Miss Eaton is secretary of the Sunday School.

Miss Hardy will be wearing a white silk gown fashioned with a full skirt, puff sleeves and portrait neckline. Lace covers the fitted bodice and basque waistline.

She plans to attend N.C. Central University or the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She is interested in a double major in Spanish education and pre-med. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Bobby H. Hardy.

Miss Hardy is a member of Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church. At Rose High School, Miss Hardy is a member of the National Honor Society and a marshal. She attended the Rotary Youth Leadership Conference.

KIA DAWN HARDY

A member of Sycamore Hill Baptist Church, Miss Huggins is a member of the Junior Choir and courtesy committee. She plans to major in business management while attending UNC-Greensboro.

For her debut, she will wear a lace gown fashioned with a Victorian neckline, fitted bodice accented with a waistline bow and a scalloped lace skirt. Her father will be her chief marshal and her assistant will be Jeffrey Lester Moore of Greensboro.

At Rose High School, she is vice president of Teen Dems and a member of the Minority Affairs Club.

STARLA ANNE HUGGINS

Miss Proctor's chief marshal will be her uncle, Dr. Melvin Henderson of Fayetteville. Her assistant will be her brother, Milton Leathers Jr. She is the daughter of Debra Leathers and the late Milton Leathers Sr. For her debut, she will be wearing a floor-length satin gown styled with bows at the hemline and sweetheart neckline. The fitted bodice has short sleeves.

HERSHELL NICOLE PROCTOR

At Rose, Miss Proctor is a member of VICA, Minority Affairs Club and the Teen Dems. After high school graduation, she plans to attend East Carolina University and major in sports medicine.

Wedding Vows Said

Katherine Jane Stocks and Phillip Randall Ange were united in marriage during an afternoon ceremony Nov. 12 at Carson Memorial Pentecostal Holiness Church. The double-ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Thomas J. Conway.

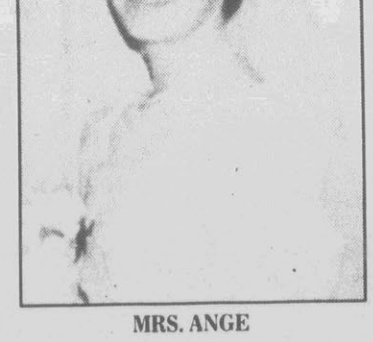
Wedding music was presented by pianist Judy Hardy and vocalist Marie Sutton.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Earl Stocks and the bridegroom is the son of Donna Mae Conyers, all of Greenville, and Phillip Wesley Ange of Hertford.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white silk-faced taffeta designed with a Sabrina neckline and Elizabethan sleeves. The fitted bodice, neckline and sleeves were enhanced by silk Venise lace motifs embroidered with pearls and sequins. The low sheer V-back fastened with bridal buttons. The full skirt had embroidered floral motifs beaded with pearls and sequins. It was bordered at the hemline with embroidered lace extending to a cathedral train. A taffeta bow accented the back waistline. Her fingertip veil of illusion was attached to a wreath of silk flowers and pearls. She carried a cascade of silk white roses, miniature roses and carnations, miniature pink roses, ivy and baby's breath.

The bride's sister, Libby Stocks, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Pam Stocks, Missy Gaskins and Dottie West.

The best man was Kevin Baker.



MRS. ANGE

Ushers were Scott Green, Derek Ennis and Jeff Martinez.

Carol Dixon was mistress of ceremony and Patty Stallings presided at the guest register.

The bride is a graduate of North Pitt High School. The bridegroom also graduated from North Pitt High School and is employed at S&J Grocery in Tarboro.

A reception was given at the church by the parents of the bride. Diane Pollard and Leona Pollard poured punch and Betty Brock served cake.

The parents of the bride gave a pig picking at their home honoring the bridal couple and the bride's mother on her birthday.

Birth

Hester

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Dan M. Hester, Columbia, S.C., a son, Dan Michael, on Nov. 1, 1988. Mrs. Hester is the former Donna Allen of Greenville.

USIA Race

NEW YORK (AP) — Shirley Temple Black is gunning for the job of director of the U.S. Information Agency and she says she already has a deputy in mind — veteran journalist Walter Cronkite.

Mrs. Black, 60, a former ambassador to Ghana, works part-time at the State Department, training new ambassadors for overseas assignments. But she has bigger goal.

"I'd like to be director of the U.S. Information Agency," she says in the upcoming Sunday's Parade magazine. "With my background in entertainment and government service, I think I'd be good at it."

Virginia Farms See New Breed

By Steve Bates
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LEESBURG, Va. — Francis Peacock speaks with pride about how his great-grandfather came to Loudoun County with 19 cents in his pocket in the 1840s and saved enough money to buy a farm near Paeonian Springs. But the pride cracks, and tears well up, when Peacock talks of being forced to sell the now unprofitable farm, which has been worked by five generations of his family.

Peter Knop speaks with equal pride about growing Christmas trees and exotic herbs and resisting developers' offers for his farm in the southern tip of Loudoun, wedged between Dulles International Airport and the Manassas National Battlefield Park. "Everyone says it can't be done (but) we're making money."

Peacock and Knop are part of a massive transformation of agriculture in Loudoun, a rapidly growing county of 81,000 outside Washington, D.C. that stretches from Dulles to the West Virginia panhandle, with a wide variety of soils and life styles in between.

Soaring land prices, high labor costs and several years of poor weather have crippled traditional farming in the county, escalating the spread of subdivisions into fields of corn and hay. But now some hardy new farmers are going against the grain, gambling on vegetables, cut flowers and a variety of specialty crops that they sell directly to consumers from their small, intensive farm operations.

These farmers — many of them young and having an outside source of income — may play a crucial role in preserving the county's open space and fueling its economy, agricultural experts say, by planting a new tradition: specialized agriculture.

"We're not just some kooks looking for fresh air," Knop said.

Loudoun's shift to market-farming reflects a national trend in metropolitan areas, said Howard Kerr, who heads the U.S. Agriculture Department's Office for Small Scale Agriculture. Eighty-five percent of Loudoun's approximately 800 farms are classified as small — grossing less than $40,000 a year — compared with the national average of nearly 75 percent.

Loudoun farmers are raising chestnuts and chinchillas, raspberries and elephant garlic, horses and landscaping plants — with the entire metropolitan area as their market.

"Consumers appreciate locally-grown produce that is not transported thousands of miles," said Helene Lepkowski, the county government's agricultural development officer. "Farm, face and landscape are connected" in the buyer's mind, she said, particularly at farmers' markets.

"People can get eggs cheaper and easier at the Safeway, but that's not the point" of buying directly from the producer, said Charles Planck, who owns the 60-acre Wheatland vegetable farm.

Until the mid-1980s, Loudoun was Virginia's top corn-producing county; hay, wheat and cattle have also been mainstays. But several factors combined to decrease prices in recent years.

As prices dropped, many farmers bought or leased more land to increase production. But land prices took off with the county's residential building boom, and most farmers in the eastern, most densely populated part of the county sold their land. Some farmers in western Loudoun, which has remained largely agricultural, also sold out, and when they left so did many feed and supply firms.

Then came droughts and talk of downzoning, which many farmers feared would slash the sales value of their land.

"There are a number of older farmers who see the land as their retirement plan," said Michael Cassidy, a farmer and real estate broker, who heads Farmers Re-Solve, a recently formed advocacy group in Loudoun.

"With grid subdivisions, the prime farm land goes first" because of its relative flatness and other factors, Cassidy said.

The county government's broadly painted Vision program — a proposal to preserve open space and farm land in Loudoun by concentrating heavy-duty urban development in the eastern end of the county while focusing on small, clustered villages in the west — "could take years to implement," he said.

Cassidy said his organization is committed to helping farmers get the best price for their land, but he sees no point in trying to preserve the rural character of the county. "It's inevitable that we're going to wind up like (crowded suburban) Fairfax."

Some people in Loudoun disagree. They cite the potential of land preservation programs such as the Vision project, and the determination of the new breed of market gardeners.

Already, developers can increase the density of certain projects by obtaining open space easements in rural areas. Many landowners are voluntarily placing large tracts in Agricultural and Forestal Districts, which strictly limit development for up to 10 years.

There are many people like Peter Knop — some of them new arrivals, others from longtime Loudoun families — who intend to keep their property as farm land.

"Marketing is the name of the game," said Knop, who works an average of one day a week as an investment banker and has one of the several dozen Christmas tree farms in Loudoun. "We did market research on the Great Depression. People bought one Christmas tree and one present. You can bank on this... . It's the only business I've ever been in where everybody's happy."

Knop, who has no formal training in agriculture, is experimenting with dwarf citrus trees that grow in small pots indoors and produce full-size fruit. He said he thinks he can sell them to restaurants and hotels for $30 to $200 each, depending on size.

Not only is Knop committed to farming, but there are signs that his teen-age daughter and son are interested in running the farm someday. "I want to show them the value" of agriculture, "to remove the impetus to sell" the land for development, he said.

A small farm "can yield a lot of money," said Planck, but he added, "I don't see how people are going to buy land (to farm) at current rates... . I bought a while ago, and I wonder if I could do it now."

Planck sees in many small farmers a love of the land that is every bit as strong as that of some of the traditional farming families who are leaving Loudoun.

Peacock, who turned 70 this month, has listed his property with a real estate firm. He's asking just more than $3 million for his Victorian house with 39 doors, the outbuildings and the 143 acres zoned for one- and three-acre building lots.

"You know, we hate to leave," he said.

Peacock, who said he hasn't made up his mind where he's moving, said he and others who for generations have raised grains and animals on large farms cannot revolutionize their operations. "Some people say you've got to get rid of your coveralls and wear three-piece suits," he said with disdain.

Select Gift With Comfortable Price

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: I have been an avid Dear Abby reader for many years and have never seen this question addressed in your column.

A friend who is soon to be married mentioned to me that she is paying $125 a plate for each guest who will attend her wedding and reception. I have received an invitation to both, and now I am wondering what to give her for a wedding gift. Am I required to give her a gift that would cost at least $125?

I really didn't think it was proper for her to have mentioned her cost, but now that I know, I feel compelled to spend at least that much on the gift. I am not a pauper, but I am far from wealthy, and I would rather not go to the wedding than to appear cheap. — To Go Or Not To Go

Dear To Go: A guest is not "required" to give a wedding gift that costs at least as much as the bride spends per plate. I agree, it was not proper for the bride to have mentioned her cost.

Select a gift in the price range that is comfortable for you, and don't worry about appearing cheap.

Dear Abby: Your response to "End of Rope," who complained that his wife was 45 pounds overweight, was really off the mark. You said: "Now is the time to be especially loving and supportive. Love her to pieces and kill her with kindness, and say nothing about her weight."

I agree that the wife needs her husband's love and support, but she also needs to seek help for her obesity and/or compulsive overeating. I believe that overeating is a disease that should be treated with the same respect as heart disease, diabetes or alcoholism. But to ignore such a problem allows the person to stay in denial and avoid treatment that could save her life. — Cathy Relf, R.N.

Dear Cathy: I hit the nail right on the thumb with that answer! You make an excellent point and I thank you for it. However, I welcome the opportunity to mention Overeaters Anonymous. It has been a lifesaver to many compulsive overeaters. O.A. operates on the same principle as Alcoholics Anonymous and Gamblers Anonymous. ("If I can do it, you can do it.")

Consult the white pages of your telephone book to find the chapter in your city. If Overeaters Anonymous is not listed, write to: Overeaters Anonymous, 4025 Spencer St., Suite 203, Torrance, Calif. 90503, for information. Enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope. It is a non-profit organization.

Dear Abby: Maybe you (or one of your readers) can give me the answer to a question that has been puzzling me for a long time.

When citizens are asked to vote on a proposition or initiative concerning their local townships or counties, why is the language so confusing and ambiguous?

For example, "If you are OPPOSED to additional funding for public education, vote YES." But, "If you are IN FAVOR of additional funding for public education, vote NO."

Or, "If you are OPPOSED to drilling for oil in a specific locality, vote YES, but if you are IN FAVOR of drilling, vote NO."

It seems to me that these issues are deliberately presented in language that will confuse the voters. Or am I mistaken? — Yes Or No

Dear Yes: No! I, too, would appreciate an answer to that disturbing question. Readers?

Couple Weds Thursday

AYDEN — The wedding ceremony of Martha Victoria Westbrook and Billy Wayne Blackmon took place Thanksgiving Day at 4 p.m. in the Ayden Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. J.B. Narron conducted the double-ring ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Westbrook Sr. of Ayden, and Mr. and Mrs. Bobby G. Blackmon of Greenville are parents of the couple.

A program of music was presented by organist Ruth Hicks and soloist Amy Narron. Marie Narron directed the wedding and Kathy R. Stox of Ayden presided at the register.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Robert Blackmon of Farmville and Chris Blackmon of Greenville, brothers of the bridegroom, and Bobby Manning of Winterville. Herbert Glen Worthington was ring bearer. He is cousin of the bride.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, wore a white satin cathedral length gown with a train of satin with sposabella lace. The fitted bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline outlined with scalloped sposabella lace motifs, Juliet pouf, long tapered sleeves and torso waist. Sposabella lace motifs etched with pearls and sequins appliqued the bodice and sleeves. Satin bridal buttons fastened the sleeves and gown back. She wore a two-tiered scalloped veil of illusion with a hand-rolled edged and lace motifs. It was attached to a bandeau of lace motifs outlined with seed pearls. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of white gardenias, roses and lily-of-the-valley.

The flower girl was Jessica Hobgood. Matron of honor was Bernice Cannon of Ayden, cousin of the bride. Carolyn Lewis of Washington, N.C., Nancy T. Dunn and Patricia S. Ristow of Chapel Hill were bridesmaids. Each wore a floor-length mauve gown styled with a sweetheart neckline and three-quarter-length sleeves. The waistline was basque with an A-line skirt. They carried nosegays of pink roses and mauve flowers with satin streamers. The flower girl carried a basket of rose petals.

The mother of the bride wore a formal mauve gown of crepe with long tapered sleeves. The mother of the bridegroom wore a gown of marigot blue georgette withran overlay. Each wore a corsage of cymbidium orchids.

A reception was held in the fellowship hall. Assisting in serving were Rosalind Branch, aunt of the bride, and Carolyn Harris, cousin of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Herman Dail greeted guests and Jenny Worthington, cousin of the bride, passed out birdseed roses.

After a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C., the couple will live in Ayden.

The bride is a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School and East Carolina University. She teaches at Ayden Middle School. The bridegroom is a graduate of North Johnston High School and attends Pitt Community College. He is employed by Spector Molding Inc.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained at a rehearsal dinner. Several bridal showers were given for the couple and for the bride-elect, a lingerie shower.

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press

HOGS: Market .25 to 1.00 Higher at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville, 35.25; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourn, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 35.00; Wilson 35.25. Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 27.00; Wallace 27.00; Spivey's Corner 29.00; Rowland 27.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 52.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pounds birds. 55 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a preliminary weighted average of 53.23 cents. The market is steady and the live supply is adequate for a light to moderate demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Friday was 1,154,000, compared to 1,624,000 last Friday.

HENS: Market 1 cent lower. Supply adequate for a fairly good demand. Prices paid per pound day of negotiation generally for slaughter the following week, heavy types, 7 pounds and up, 22 cents at farm with buyer loading.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn steady to 1 cent higher at mostly 2.71-2.83 in East and mostly 2.83-2.98 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly 4-5 cents higher at mostly 7.16-7.35 in East and mostly 7.16-7.21 in the Piedmont; wheat 3.78-3.88; new crop wheat 3.32-3.52. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady and ranged from 96 to 100 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices tumbled in light post-Thanksgiving Day trading today, depressed by expectations of higher oil prices.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 20.09 to 2,072.19 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about 3 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 228 up, 688 down and 370 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 17.30 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The session after Thanksgiving is usually one of the quietest days on the year on Wall Street, as many market participants take a long holiday weekend.

This time, however, those traders who were present were faced with the news of a tentative agreement by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries on production quotas aimed at shoring up oil prices.

The prospect of increased energy costs weighed down the credit markets. Prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, fell nearly $10 for each $1,000 in face value this morning.

Onassis Funeral Held

the heir to the fortune of her father, shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis.

Outside the cathedral, more than 3,000 people stood in the rain and lined nearby apartment building balconies. They clapped and threw rose petals in accordance with Greek tradition as young pallbearers from the Alexander Onassis Public Benefit Foundation carried the casket outside the church.

"Life to you" they yelled as Roussel and Onassis relatives filed out of the cathedral.

The pallbearers all had received scholarships from the foundation for postgraduate studies outside Greece.

The foundation was set up by Aristotle Onassis and named after his only son, who was killed in a 1973 plane crash. It also gives annual awards for outstanding work in scholarship, human rights and the environment.

A spokesman for the foundation said Ms. Onassis' body would be flown to the family island of Skorpios, on Greece's northwest coast, later in the day for burial at a private ceremony Saturday.

The spokesman, Ioannis Georgakis, said Ms. Onassis would be buried next to her father and brother in a mausoleum on the small island.

Aristotle Onassis, a shipping tycoon who also had mining and real estate interests worldwide, died in Paris in 1975. Ms. Onassis' mother, Athena, died at the age of 45 in 1974.

Upon the death of Aristotle Onassis, Ms. Onassis inherited half of an estimated $1 billion fortune. The other half was given to the foundation.

Ms. Onassis' 3-year-old daughter Athena was not present at the funeral services. Sources close to the Onassis family did not know if Athena, who is Roussel's daughter, would be present at the Skorpios burial service.

Representatives of Springfield shipping, the company that manages the Onassis' 2.5 million-ton shipping fleet, say Athena will inherit her mother's fortune when she turns 18. Until then, the fortune will be held in trust.

Inmates Escape

RALEIGH (AP) — Police on Thursday searched for a 19-year-old convicted murderer who escaped from Polk Youth Center in Raleigh by crawling through an underground drainage pipe.

A second escapee was captured early Thursday at his parents' house in Hoke County.

The two escaped from the medium-security prison about 4 p.m. Wednesday, said David Guth, spokesman for the state Department of Correction.

Guth identified the men as Bradley O'Neal Farrar of Burlington, who was serving a life sentence for first-degree murder, and Troy Dean Labombard, also 19, of Hoke County. He was serving a 12-year sentence for second-degree kidnapping, common law robbery, forgery and three counts of larceny.

Reagan Will Wait On Hostages

Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for the Associated Press, marked his fourth Thanksgiving in captivity this week.

"Do you think the United States would do the same if 100 lives were at stake?" Say asked. "Nine American lives apparently are not enough to cause anyone major discomfort." She referred to resolution of the hijacking of TWA Flight 847 in 1985, when 39 Americans were held hostage in Beirut for 17 days. Intense U.S. mediation led to their release.

Several Mideast analysts contend that the United States may be missing an opportunity at a crucial juncture.

The momentum on both hostage releases and bettering relations with the West has been building since May, when the last French hostages held in Lebanon were freed. Diplomatic ties between Iran and both France and Canada were restored during the summer.

Britain reached final terms for resumption of relations earlier this month. London hopes the release of three British hostages, including hostage mediator Terry Waite, will follow.

Iran also recently has improved relations with Kuwait and other Persian Gulf Arab states that were Iraq's prime financial and political supporters during its eight-year war with the Tehran regime.

Part of the momentum stems from the belief — among Western and Arab governments as well as key Iranian leaders — that major policy changes must take place before the death of the aged and ailing Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, who is believed to be 88.

Khomeini's support for any controversial policy reversal is vital to prevent those issues from fueling an intense power struggle after his death and causing potentially lengthy delays, according to R.K. Ramazani, a University of Virginia government professor and specialist on Iranian foreign policy.

"Iran's foreign policy cannot be divorced from its domestic policies or problems," Ramazani said. "And we would make a great mistake if we fail to explore the potential or possibilities of establishing a dialogue.

"Even at the height of the hostage crisis between 1979 and 1981, there would have been no accord or resolution without indirect communication between the two nations."

Iran has increasingly signaled a readiness to move, Mideast analysts say. On the Nov. 4 anniversary of the seizure of the U.S. Embassy, normally a time of rhetoric and bravado in Iran, one of Iran's most fundamentalist newspapers wrote, "The Islamic republic should start a new chapter in its foreign policy with all countries of the world.

"It is extreme pessimism, shortsightedness and lack of confidence to take any kind of relation with the West as compromise, surrender and the beginning of dependency. We can have reasonable, conventional and rational relations with the superpowers," said the newspaper Jomhori Islami (Islamic Republic), which repeatedly specified the United States.

The release in Beirut last month of hostage Mithileshwar Singh, an Indian national with U.S. residency, was also viewed in the Reagan administration as a signal of new Iranian interest. Through German envoys, Tehran alerted the United States about the release by Singh's Lebanese captors at least two days in advance.

An Iranian Foreign Ministry official subsequently said that Tehran was angry that Washington refused to acknowledge Iran's role in Singh's release. Reagan administration officials said at the time that they saw no obligation to thank a government that had supported the original abductions.

U.S. sources say they are not ruling out hostage releases before the Jan. 20 inauguration of Bush. But they contend that the ball is entirely in Iran's court.

Explained a senior administration official familiar with U.S. counterterrorism policy: "It's not us missing an opportunity. It's Iran.

"We continue to be interested in the possibility of resolving our problems," the official said. "We continue to make the point that we're ready for an authoritative meeting, if they will send an authoritative figure to negotiate.

"But so far, there hasn't been any motion," he added.

State Department officials point out that the United States also has sent indirect signals to Iran. Recent moves include condemnations of Iraq's use of chemical warfare and the scaling back of the U.S. naval escort operation in the Persian Gulf.

The main issue now appears to boil down to who makes the first move, since both sides have directly or indirectly hinted at relations.

Senate

be fouled up, however, by the eleventh new member of the Senate: the person appointed to replace Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., who is leaving the chamber to be vice president.

Quayle has announced plans to resign sometime before the new Congress convenes on Jan. 3, to enable GOP Indiana Gov. Robert Orr to select a Republican. Otherwise, a new Democratic governor will take over in Indiana and appoint a Democrat.

Where that person will rank on the seniority list is a topic of debate, and may have to be resolved by a vote in the Republican conference. He or she could rank first, by virtue of being sworn in earlier than the others; or it could be last, because Quayle doesn't technically become unable to hold his Senate seat until Jan. 20, Inauguration Day.

In earlier times, an outgoing senator could give his successor a seniority boost by resigning a few days early and letting the replacement come into office ahead of others in the new group. But the practice threatened to mushroom out of control, and has been abandoned by both the GOP Conference and the Democratic Caucus, the other party assembly that makes committee assignments.

If it all seems rather complicated, take heart. Even Senate insiders disagree on how the whole thing works. Said one Democratic leadership official: "It's worse than the family tree, folks."

FmHA

agency, the chances of survival are brightened. But if a borrower's plan is rejected — or if a reply is not sent at all — then foreclosure or forced sale of property is likely.

Although agency spokesmen say no hard estimates are available as to how many of the 83,480 delinquents may be foreclosed or forced to sell out, estimates have ranged from around 10,000 to more than 40,000.

Vance L. Clark, FmHA administrator, has said that eventually up to 30,000 borrowers could face foreclosure.

Clark resigned his job earlier this week, according to FmHA spokesmen. He had previously indicated leaving around Dec. 1. Sox Johnson, acting associate administrator, took over the job.

No official announcement was made of Clark's departure, although a farewell party was held in USDA on Tuesday afternoon.

Clark, who spent 42 years with the Bank of America before taking over FmHA more than three years ago, bristled at accusations the agency's notices or program are unfair.

"If anything, I tell my people we're getting ready to jump start thousands of American farmers out there," Clark said recently in Des Moines at a bankers' meeting. "The good news is that the relief measure is being offered. I think it's going to play well."

But there is some pressure on FmHA to extend the 45-day period for borrowers to return their financial forms, including a request from 14 members of Congress.

Rep. Byron L. Dorgan, D-N.D., one of the petitioners, said he was concerned that borrowers may not be able to get all the information and assistance they need before Jan. 1, because many banks and offices may be closed several days for the holidays.

"These notices include over 200 pages of complex regulations," Dorgan said. "I feel that farmers should be given sufficient time to analyze the regulations and compile the necessary information to fill out the forms correctly."

Moon's Angry Lecture Is All Oilers Need To Hand Cowboys A 25-17 Defeat

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Soft-spoken Warren Moon shocked the Houston Oilers into action with a rare tongue-lashing.

They were so amazed at their quarterback's outburst that the Oilers overcame their road phobia to beat the Dallas Cowboys 25-17 on Thanksgiving Day.

It was Dallas' ninth consecutive loss and its 11th defeat of the season, tying a club record set in 1960 when the Cowboys went 0-11-1.

The Oilers are 9-4, with each of the defeats on the road.

Moon said he was tired of them easing up once they left their so-called "House of Pain," the Astrodome. He gave them a hard chewing out after Dallas jumped to a 7-0 lead and seemed to be on the way to one of the shocking upsets of the NFL season.

"When you get to this time of a year, you have to count on something besides the home crowd to fire you up," Moon said.

So, in the absence of a Houston crowd, Moon took it upon himself to provide the incendiaries.

"I had a few players on my team mad at me for awhile," Moon admitted. "I felt we came out flat and I said so on the field. I don't usually do things like that, but I could see us flat and so I said something.

"Maybe some of the guys thought it would be like preseason (when Houston beat Dallas 54-10) coming in here, but I knew it wouldn't be like that. When you're playing a team that's down and they get off to a good start it gives them too much of a lift. That's when I noticed I had to say something. Dallas played us tough and I knew they would."

The Oilers are a half-game behind Cincinnati in the AFC Central race.

"We ran into a trap today," Houston coach Jerry Glanville said. "Dallas was emotionally high. We were flat coming out.

"I thought (Dallas coach) Tom Landry did a hell of a coaching job. You saw a lot of pride out there. They gave us a lot of new looks."

Glanville said Moon was the difference.

"He was the key, the catalyst," Glanville said. "He makes this football team work."

The Cowboys led 17-10 in the third period after Steve Pelluer's 3-yard touchdown run, but Moon wouldn't be denied. He took the Oilers on what proved to be the game-winning drive after safety Jeff Donaldson intercepted a tipped pass at midfield. Other than Mike Rozier's 12-yard run in the second period, it was Houston's only touchdown of the day.

Tony Zendejas kicked four field goals, but his miss on an extra-point kick caused some concern for the Oilers. But Zendejas padded a 19-17 edge with two fourth-period field goals.

The Cowboys could be thankful that they played Houston tough and still remained in the race for the NFL's No. 1 draft pick next spring.

But Landry said, "This wasn't a happy Thanksgiving for me."

He praised his downtrodden club's effort.

"I'm proud of their performance," Landry said. "Houston knew they were glad to get out with a win. Houston has a good football team. A playoff team. It seems like we just can't make the big play. I didn't want just a moral victory."

Dallas defensive end Jim Jeffcoat said the Cowboys were mad over charges that the team had quit in losses of 44-3 to Minnesota and 38-24 to Cincinnati.

"People said we quit last week and we wanted to prove to people that our defense never quits," het said.

Dallas linebacker Steve DeOssie chipped in, "I don't care if we're 2-13, we're not going to quit no matter what happens around here. We have pride."

Moon didn't see much quit in the Cowboys, either.

"We had to give them everything we had to win the game," he said.

Vikings Carve Up Lions In Thanksgiving Feast

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PONTIAC, Mich. — Detroit coach Wayne Fontes didn't know it, but his good buddy Jerry Burns had him in a hole before the opening kickoff.

Once the Thanksgiving Day contest between Detroit and the Minnesota Vikings had begun, Burns quickly filled in the hole and the Vikings buried the Lions 23-0.

Fontes, coaching his second game on an interim basis after the firing of Darryl Rogers, went from player to player during warmups, giving hugs and handshakes.

Meanwhile, Burns, a Detroit native, was standing at midfield chatting with Lions owner William Clay Ford, the man who will decide Fontes' future when the season is over.

"Wayne's a good friend," Burns said. "I think he could be a very good coach for the Detroit Lions."

But it became quickly apparent that what seperates the Vikings from the Lions is not coaching. Detroit needs horses.

The Lions fell to 1-1 under Fontes and 3-10 for the season.

"One day, hopefully, we'll be that good," Fontes said. "They've got athletes and they're so well-coached."

The Vikings, evoking memories of the defensive line dubbed "The Purple People Eaters," completely dominated the Lions.

The Vikings defense allowed only three first downs, a club record; 60 yards total offense, tying a club record, and intercepted two passes to run their season total to 30, tying another team mark.

One of the interceptions was by Carl Lee, his seventh, making him the NFC leader.

"It was a dominating defensive game, but Detroit is not a very good offensive team and we should be able to dominate them," Burns said. "Their passing game is suspect and the running game never materialized."

Detroit, which had the ball only 15 minues, 3 seconds, didn't get a first down until late in the third quarter and didn't cross midfield until 2:25 into the fourth quarter.

"We went out and played like girls," Bennie Blades, the Lions' rookie safety, said. "Any time the offense is not playing well, it makes it tough for the defense."

The Vikings remained on track for a wild-card playoff berth, although they still believe they can overhaul the Chicago Bears in the AFC Central title chase. The Vikings are 9-4, the best record for an NFC team that isn't a division leader.

Minnesota has won five of its last six, including four straight. The Vikings, who have three games remaining, host the Bears at the Metrodome in the final Monday night game of the season.

"They're just a better team," Lions fullback James Jones said. "We went out and tried to do the best we could but it just didn't happen.

"That's just why they may end up in the Super Bowl this season. I wouldn't be surprised."

Vikings quarterback Wade Wilson and wide receiver Anthony Carter, who tormented the Lions in a 44-17 thrashing Nov. 6, continued the assault on Thursday. Wilson completed 16 of 21 passes for 186 yards and Carter had seven catches for 84 yards.

"It's always great to do something here (in the Silverdome)," said Carter, an All-American at the University of Michigan who led the Michigan Panthers to the inagural USFL championship before that league folded.

Pirates Opening Season Saturday Against Bishops

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The scrimmages and exhibitions are over. It's time for the regular season to begin and East Carolina basketball coach Mike Steele says his Pirates are ready.

Steele, who enters his second year as the Pirate head coach, will be seeking to continue his building of the program he began last year. At season's start, that team was said by some unlikely to win a game.

But the Pirates fooled the so-called experts and posted an 8-20 mark and were in most of the games that they played.

This year, the prospects are up and most observers are picking the Pirates to finish in the upper division of the Colonial Athletic Association.

Mike Steele

Meanwhile, the Pirates kick off the 1988-89 season Saturday night against N.C. Wesleyan and then play host on Monday to UNC-Greensboro.

"We're ready for a game," Steele said. "We've had some excellent practices this past week."

East Carolina played Marathon Oil in an exhibition just over a week ago and fell, 81-71. But the Pirates outrebounded their taller opponents and but for a poor shooting night might have come away with a victory.

"The Marathon game was good for us," Steele said. "It gave us some things to focus on, our transition defense and our perimeter defense. Both of them have improved."

As for the shooting, Steele is hopeful that the low percentage was just "first game jitters." "I hope so," he said, "I think so."

The Pirates face a Division III school in their opener, but a team that has already played three games. The Fighting Bishops will bring a 1-2 record into the game. However, last year, Steele points out, Wesleyan won 17 of its last 20 games and returns most of the players off that team. "They are a good team. It would be easy for someone to overlook them, but I know, having coached at a Division III school (DePauw) that a Division III can pull off some upsets. I know how good they can be.

"Greensboro (currently 2-1) is similar, but bigger. They will shoot the ball well," Steele added. "They've both played before and that's an advantage for them. Also our students won't be here and that's a concern. I don't want to get trapped into a slow-paced game."

The Pirates, against Marathon, played a much more up-tempo game than they did most of the time last year.

Probable starters for the Pirates would include Blue Edwards, a 6-5 senior at one forward position and Gus Hill, a 6-3 junior at the other. Stanley Love, a 6-5 sophomore will be at center, with 5-9 sophomore Jimmy Hinton and 6-3 senior Kenny Murphy at the guards, although Steele said the starting lineup is subject to change. Kevin Staples, a 6-5 junior forward, and Reed Lose, a 6-3 junior and Jeff Kelly, a 5-9 senior, both guards, could also see starting action.

Tipoff in Minges Coliseum is set for 7:30 p.m. both Saturday and Monday nights.

Following those games, the Pirates take to the road for the first time, facing Duke University, the nation's number one ranked team, in Durham on Wednesday.

Baker Reportedly Given Position By Gamecocks

STAFF, WIRE REPORTS

Art Baker, former head football coach at East Carolina University, will join the University of South Carolina athletic department as head of marketing and development, The State newspaper of Columbia, S.C., reported Thursday.

Baker, who resigned after four seasons, will be named as an associate athletic director, the newspaper said. That appointment will be officially announced next week.

Baker told The Daily Reflector last week that he had had an informal interview with King Dixon, South Carolina's new athletic director on Oct. 12, when South Carolina played a home game against Navy. East Carolina, which had one game left to play at that time, had an open date that weekend. Baker said he would return to Columbia during Thanksgiving week for a formal interview. He spent the week in South Carolina, celebrating the holidays with members of his family.

According to the report, Baker, who has also served as head coach at Furman and The Citadel, both South Carolina schools, will be in charge of the department's development and marketing programs and will work with the Gamecock Club, the school's athletic booster organization.

Dixon and other administration spokesmen were unavailable for comment this morning. Dixon had earlier refused to comment on the report, The Associated Press reported.

Members of the ECU athletic department were also unavailable this morning for comment, but an assistant coach said earlier this week that Baker would accept the job at South Carolina.

Baker is a Sumter, S.C., native and a 1953 graduate of Presbyterian. Earlier this year, Baker was a strong candidate for the job as athletic director at South Carolina, but the job went to Dick Bestwick. Bestwick resigned for health reasons just six months into his tenure, however, and Dixon was named as his replacement last month.

Baker had been offered the job of director of the ECU athletic department's new Personal Development program, but had said that he was keeping his options open. He also has said that he still "has the itch" to coach, even as an assistant.

There have been recurring rumors at Columbia, too, that Joe Morrison and his staff would be relieved of duties at the end of the 1988 campaign. South Carolina finished the regular season with an 8-3 record and will play in the Liberty Bowl against Indiana on Dec. 28. Those same reports have N.C. State's Dick Sheridan as the leading candidate to replace Morrison and Baker's presence on the South Carolina staff would enhance that. Sheridan served as Baker's assistant at Furman and replaced him when he moved to The Citadel.

Kay Yow To Women's Sports Hall

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State women's basketball coach Kay Yow, who led the U.S. Olympic team to the gold medal in Seoul this summer, will be inducted into the Women's Sports Hall of Fame on Friday, school officials said.

Yow, who is beginning her 14th season with the Wolfpack, has compiled a 291-105 record at N.C. State and a career collegiate mark of 348-124.

In international competition, Yow has collected three gold medals and a silver and posted a 21-1 record.

Yow will join an impressive group of women's sports figures already in the Hall of Fame, located in Cincinnati. Those include "Babe" Zaharias, Wilma Rudolph, Margaret Wade, Flo Hyman, Althea Gibson, Dianna Nyad and Nancy Lopez.

Dooley Goes For 200th Grid Victory

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Vince Dooley keeps insisting that too much is being made over his quest to capture the 200th victory of his 25-year coaching career at Georgia.

That's the plateau he will reach if the 20th-ranked Bulldogs down their archrival, Georgia Tech, on Saturday.

"I don't want to be a distraction," Dooley said.

He would become only the 10th coach in Division 1-A history to reach the mark and the second in the Southeastern Conference.

The late Paul "Bear" Bryant is the only other SEC coach to hit the 200 mark. Bryant claimed 292 of his 323 victories while coaching in the SEC at Kentucky (60) and Alabama (232).

The Bulldogs, 7-3 and bound for a Gator Bowl date with Michigan State on Jan. 1, are slightly better than two-touchdown favorites to claim the milestone victory for Dooley.

Tech carries a 3-7 record into the game, which will draw a sellout crowd of 82,122 into Sanford Stadium.

The game will be televised nationally on cable (TBS-Atlanta), with the kickoff set for 12:40 p.m. EST.

Dooley took the Georgia job in 1964 as a 31-year-old at a time when Bryant, Johnny Vaught at Mississippi and Ralph "Shug" Jordan at Auburn were recognized as the league's top coaches.

"I never realized how young those 'old coaches' were," Dooley said. "One thing I always said was, 'I'm not going to hang around like those old coaches.' I never thought I would do it this long. The difference is, I'm not old."

Dooley's first bid for No. 200 came two weeks ago when his alma mater, Auburn, posted a 20-10 victory that also cost Georgia a share of the SEC championship.

Tech's hopes for victory rest with a defense that ranks 13th in the nation, yielding 278 yards per game, with 136 of it coming in the air where Tech ranks sixth nationally.

Georgia isn't known for putting the ball in the air, and Tech will have to stop a solid ground game to win.

The Bulldogs have three of the top 13 rushers in the SEC.

Tim Worley leads the conference in rushing with 1,173 yards, Rodney Hampton is fifth with 656 yards and Keith Henderson 13th with 386.

Todd Rampley and Jerry Mays are Tech's offensive leaders.

Rampley has completed 142 of 250 passes for 1,498 yards and six touchdowns and Mays leads the Yellow Jackets in rushing with 871 yards. Mays also is Tech's top receiver, with 40 catches for 295 yards.

The two teams met only one common foe this year — South Carolina.

The Gamecocks beat Georgia 23-10, but then were the victim of Tech's best performance in several years, a 34-0 thrashing that knocked Carolina from the unbeaten ranks and snapped Tech's 15-game losing streak against Division 1-A opposition.

"We've made improvements and come a long way even though it isn't reflected in the won-loss record," Tech coach Bobby Ross said.

"I can point to statistics to back us up, but there isn't anything like the winning statistic," he added. "Everybody realizes this — we could not win a game and win this one, and feel very good about ourselves. It has a lot of impact on a lot of things."

Johnson Wants Chance At Barcelona

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Canada's Ben Johnson, the world record-holder in the 100-meter dash who lost his gold medal at the Seoul Olympics after testing positive for steroid use, says he wants to compete in the Barcelona Games in 1992.

"I hope I can do it ... It will take me one year to recover, if I am definitely stopped for two," Johnson was quoted as saying by Milan's weekly magazine Europeo. "I believe that 1992 will be something that people will never forget."

Johnson also was banned from international competition for two years after he failed the doping tests. He claimed hard training and weightlifting — not steroids — were the reason for his impressive muscular growth.

"I am innocent, innocent of knowingly taking what they gave me," he was quoted Thursday as saying.

Interviewed by the magazine at his home in Toronto, Johnson said he's training three hours a day, including weightlifting. He still holds the world record of 9.83 seconds set at the World Championships in Rome last year.

Johnson said all of his competitors in the Olympic 100 final, including American Carl Lewis, who was eventually awarded the gold medal, panicked when he took a huge lead before the mid-point in the race.

"They all understood they could not stand my pace," Johnson said. "Lewis turned to stare at me at least three times. For winning, a champion must run against himself, not against his rival. Carl Lewis was running against Ben Johnson."

Johnson also said "it was a great pleasure beating Lewis (in the Olympics). He's a snot who always wants to be the first."

The Canadian said Italian sportswear company Diadora was the only commercial sponsor that did not break an endorsement contract with him following the Seoul scandal and disqualification.

But a spokesman for Diadora told The Associated Press that Johnson's $2.5-million, five-year contract actually has been suspended.

"The contract will be restored ... (if) Johnson can prove he was not guilty," the spokesman said.

Officials Approve Drug Guidelines

MOSCOW (AP) — An anti-drug charter that establishes guidelines for governments to combat performance-enhancing drugs has been approved by sports officials from more than 70 countries.

"The charter spells out very clearly the intentions of governments in all countries that are represented here in terms of their attempts to stamp out this enormous problem," said Len Derkach, who headed the Canadian delegation at the UNESCO-sponsored conference.

The conference also recommended that the International Olympic Committee create a panel of experts to test athletes in any country at any time on short notice.

The charter, however, has no means of ensuring enforcement. It is a procedural document and a moral statement of values.

But Thursday's approval by the ministers indicated a willingness to lobby their respective governments for legislative action that would support the charter and make it easier for the drug-testing panel to carry out its objectives.

Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the IOC, has stressed the importance of governments taking a more active role in the fight against drugs in sports.

"We must be united with others in our fight and most importantly, we need the help of governments," Samaranch said. "With UNESCO, we will be able to fight against doping."

However, it was not known if all 167 countries represented in the IOC would follow the charter's recommendation. While some countries have not taken formal action to support the charter, others, like the United States and Great Britain, do not belong to UNESCO.

The approval of the charter ended the four days of meetings.

On Monday, the United States and the Soviet Union signed a preliminary agreement on a joint random drug testing program. Top athletes from both nations will be subject to testing twice a year, according to the agreement. Tests will be conducted to detect any group of drugs banned by the IOC.

Currently, American and Soviet athletes are tested only during the Olympics and other major championships.

Canada, which initiated the creation of the document, lost a gold medal at the Seoul Olympics when 100-meter winner Ben Johnson was disqualified for steroid use.

With the Canadian government as co-sponsor, the IOC held a conference in Montreal last June that produced the charter. It was approved by the IOC in Seoul during the Olympics.

Peete Not Saying Much

Southern Cal Quarterback Lost His Voice On Sunday

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Coach Lou Holtz of No. 1-ranked Notre Dame says, "This game is what college football is all about."

Coach Larry Smith of No. 2 Southern California says, "This promises to be one of the great games of all time."

And Southern Cal quarterback Rodney Peete? Smith will be delighted if Peete can just say "Hut one, hut two" 80 or so times and throw, oh, a half-dozen touchdown passes when USC entertains Notre Dame on Saturday in the 24th game between No. 1 No. 2 since the Associated Press poll began in 1936.

Peete's last two weeks were the stuff of legends — or, at the very least, the kind of stuff one would be more likely to associate with Notre Dame than Southern Cal.

First, he was hospitalized with the measles a few days before he led the Trojans to a 31-22 victory over UCLA last Saturday for the Pac-10 title and a berth in the Rose Bowl.

As a side effect, Peete lost his voice on Sunday and was unable to talk for several days. That meant the Trojans had to practice with 12 men on offense — with freshman quarterback Todd Marinovich calling out the signals.

The silence was deafening and if Peete is rendered speechless against Notre Dame, Southern Cal's tailback will call out the cadence.

All of this probably means that trainer Jack Ward, team physician Dr. Chester Semel and executive medical director Dr. Allan Ebbin are assured they will be prominently featured when Hollywood does Peete's life story.

By Wednesday, Peete had his voice back enough to conduct a telephone news conference. Two days earlier, he had to write out his answers.

Enough to say that "I have never been through a two-week period like this before."

Enough to agree with Holtz and Smith that Saturday's game is about as big as they come.

"One of the reasons you come to USC is to play Notre Dame, play UCLA," Peete said. "I'd like to go out with a victory over Notre Dame. I've never experienced one (Notre Dame has won five straight and leads the series 32-23-4), so that makes the game even more meaningful for me and the other seniors on this team."

Both teams are 10-0 — they also have been inoculated against measles and flu — and it's the first time these traditional powers have been involved in a No. 1-No. 2 showdown against each other and also the first time both brought perfect records into their historic rivalry.

The winner will be one step away from the national championship. Notre Dame will meet No. 4 West Virginia in the Fiesta Bowl, Southern Cal plays No. 11 Michigan in the Rose Bowl.

But it's hard for coaches not to worry themselves sick, and these two are no exceptions.

Among Holtz's concerns is that Southern Cal will get out to an early lead.

"What scares you against Southern Cal is that you could be forced into a catchup game," he said. "We're not a very good team when we're required to throw, and we haven't been forced into a passing game all year.

"We haven't played a team that runs and throws as well as Southern Cal, and it starts with Peete. They have great running backs, their offensive line is big and strong, they have two fine wide receivers and two great tight ends who give them an awful lot of big plays.

"They're averaging 35 points a game, and to me that's unheard of against the schedule they play (Hey, Lou, Notre Dame is averaging 33 points a game against what the NCAA preseason ratings called the eighth most difficult schedule in the country).

"Southern Cal presents more problems than Miami did (Notre Dame edged then-No. 1 Miami 31-30 last month) because of their ability to run and throw, probably more problems than I've ever encountered as a football coach. Right now, Southern Cal is a better team than Miami on film.

"I'm concerned about our kicking game. We're not punting very well, we're not kicking off very well and our placekicking has been inconsistent the last few weeks, but there's not much we can do about that right now. We've also turned the ball over far too many times (12 lost fumbles, nine interceptions).

"We're much smaller than Southern Cal. We're probably as small an offensive line as you'll find. We're not as strong as Southern Cal and if (nose guard) Chris Zorich can't play, we'll be one of the smallest defensive lines in the country.

"But we're not going out there to lift weights."

Aggies Hold Off Longhorn Rally

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN, Texas — Texas, frustrated for the fifth year in a row by Texas A&M, can only look to next season. A&M, basking in its 500th college football victory, will seek No. 501 next Thursday against Alabama.

A&M, 7-4, but ineligible for bowl play because of NCAA probation, led 28-0 Thursday before the underdog Longhorns rallied in front of a national television audience and sellout home crowd of 77,809. But the rally fell short, and the Horned Frogs hung on for a 28-24 victory that left Texas 4-7, its worst showing since a 1-9 finish in 1956.

"The seniors on this team have gone through so much this season with all of the adversity and they have done nothing but fight back," A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill said.

Sherrill himself has been at the center of controversy as the Dallas Morning News quoted a former player as saying Sherrill had paid him $4,400 in "hush money" during an NCAA investigation of the A&M football program.

The player later recanted the story, but Sherrill has refused to give his version, saying he will wait until after the season.

A&M running back Darren Lewis, a 210-pound sophomore, ran 38 times for a career-high 212 yards and a 15-yard touchdown for the favored Aggies.

Lewis also set up fullback Robert Wilson's 1-yard touchdown with a 36-yard run.

All-American linebacker John Roper ran a blocked field goal 48 yards for a 21-0 A&M lead, and sub quarterback Chris Osgood's 8-yard scoring run raised the score to 28-0 in the second quarter.

Texas redshirt freshman Mark Murdock brought screaming Longhorn fans to their feet with scoring tosses of 9 yards to Kerry Cash in the second quarter, 14 yards to Stephen Clark and 76 yards to Tony Jones in the second half.

"It was all on guts and effort tonight," said Texas Coach David Williams, whose team lost four games this season by a total of 13 points.

A fumbled pitchout on third-and-2 after Texas had reached the A&M 34 spoiled Texas' chance for a possible go-ahead touchdown.

Backup quarterback Donovan Forbes passed the ball to tailback Eric Metcalf, who said he slipped, and the ball bounced to the A&M 49, where the Aggies recovered.

"We practiced it all week — it's unfortunate it turned out that way," said Metcalf, among the nation's leaders in all-purpose yardage.

"The momentum was ours the whole second half. Time just ran out," said Texas linebacker Britt Hager, who was credited with 20 tackles.

Lewis' ninth consecutive game of over 100 yards rushing is one short of the Southwest Conference record by 1977 Texas Heisman Trophy winner Earl Campbell.

"I owe it all to the offensive line," said the tireless Lewis, who has rushed 282 times for 1,564 yards this season.

"He (Lewis) made a lot of yards and he earned them all," McWilliams said.

Vikings...

they gave us and didn't try to rush anything," Carter said. "This is the best time to start playing good football and right now we're playing well. That's a good sign for this team."

Alfred Anderson, who rushed 19 times for 55 yards, scored on runs of 2 and 1 yards, and Chuck Nelson kicked field goals of 21, 33 and 18 yards.

"It wasn't as explosive as it could have been but I was happy," Wilson said. "I was worried about a letdown, but we didn't have one on either side of the ball."

Fontes tried to make something happen by giving quarterback Chuck Long his first start since injuring his left knee six weeks ago. But Long, amid a chorus of boos, completed only two of six passes for five yards and was hooked in favor of Rusty Hilger with 1:04 remaining in the first half.

"I'm not worried about the fans," Long said. "If they want to boo me, I'm not going to worry about it.

"Yeah, I was rusty, but the Vikings are basically a very good football team. I think the better team won today."

Tourney Lives Up To Name

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAHAINA, Hawaii — It wasn't always played on Maui and it wasn't always a classic, but the sixth edition of Hawaii's major Thanksgiving weekend college basketball tournament certainly lives up to the name Maui Classic.

Four of the eight teams which started play today were ranked in the Top Twenty. And there can't be a much more scenic setting than the island which is advertised as the "ultimate" of the many that make up the 50th state.

"Think of it as the ultimate playground game played on the world's ultimate playground," tournament director Ray Stosik said.

It wasn't always that way.

"The tournament started on the big island and was played there for two years before coming to Maui in 1984," Stosik said. "In five years an unheralded, untelevised fundraiser has evolved into a premier sporting event that merits national television coverage."

The coverage will come from national cable network ESPN, which will broadcast five of this year's 12 games.

The tournament got under way with host Chaminade facing Memphis State, followed by No. 4 Oklahoma against No. 16 Ohio State, Vanderbilt against No. 3 Michigan and DePaul against No. 8 Nevada-Las Vegas.

All games are played in the Lahaina Civic Center, a building with just under 2,000 permanent seats. Seating was increased by 1,000 by bringing in some portable football bleachers.

Madison Square Garden or Rupp Arena it isn't, but all tickets were sold by Wednesday. In fact, because of the sale of tournament passes, good for all three days, as well as individual day tickets, organizers oversold the arena by 5 percent.

"It's like an airline overbooking," Stosik said. "If there's a problem, we'll confront it that day."

Besides the level of competition, what the coaches here must confront is the vacation attitude. Players from Michigan, Oklahoma and DePaul are not used to walking around in tank tops and shorts on the final weekend of November.

"They know they have to concentrate on one thing while we're here," Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs said of his team. "It's no problem for this team to focus on what's important."

That may be hard playing in a small, hot arena and practicing at Lahainaluna High School, a mountainside group of buildings founded in 1831. It certainly seems strange to enter the tiny gym and watch Top Twenty teams getting ready to start the season.

"The bottom line of this tournament is that somebody that's not supposed to is going to end up with three losses, and you just have to hope it isn't you," Michigan coach Bill Frieder said.

There are very few losers when the Maui Classic is over. The schools have to absorb almost the entire cost of the trip, but it has been shown to be worth it. It is a recruiting tool and also gives alumni and boosters a chance to take a nice vacation while seeing their team play.

The 18 NBA scouts here will have had a chance to see seniors such as Oklahoma's Stacey King and Michigan's Glen Rice as well as a host of talented underclassmen in a setting that makes up for all those ice-covered runways and broken rental car heaters.

"We try to show the people who visit for the tournament what Hawaii is really like," Stosik said. "We always hear players asking about the cost of living here and they say things like 'back in the States.' We show them we are one of the 50 and make sure they see the local culture and what we are."

Last year's tournament was won by Iowa, topping a field that included eventual national champion Kansas.

The NCAA instituted a rule starting this season that a team can visit an "exotic" location — such as Hawaii, Alaska or Puerto Rico — only once every four years without the games counting toward the limit of 28 in a season.

Stosik said the rule could hurt a tournament such as the Maui Classic, and he will join his counterpart with the Great Alaska Shootout and the San Juan Shootout to lobby the NCAA Convention in January for a change in the rule.

"We will be there and work hard to change it," he said. "We do have some fine teams committed for next season — North Carolina, Louisville, Villanova and Missouri. Villanova is in San Juan this year but they have said they will count the games."

The games don't count against the limit, but do count on the won-lost record. And half the teams here will leave with sub-.500 records.

Smith Seeking To Take Control

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Football is a game of emotion, particularly when long-time rivals get together. But control, not emotion, was on David Smith's mind as the Alabama quarterback prepared to face seventh-ranked Auburn.

"It's tough to keep it all under control," Smith said, heading into today's Iron Bowl showdown against the Tigers. "The key is controlling your emotion and not getting too out of whack."

Kickoff at Legion Field was set for 1:30 p.m. CST.

For the first time since 1963, the game against Auburn isn't the season windup for Alabama, although it was meant to be. The 17th-ranked Crimson Tide, 7-2, has to play next Thursday at Texas A&M to make up for a Sept. 17 game that was postponed in the wake of Hurricane Gilbert.

After facing Texas A&M, Alabama will then prepare to meet Army in the Sun Bowl on Christmas Eve.

Auburn, 9-1, will be going to a bowl, as well, but the Tigers' travel plans depend on Alabama. A victory over the Tide would give Auburn a share of the Southeastern Conference title with Louisiana State and, despite losing to LSU, a probable berth in the Sugar Bowl against Florida State.

A tie or a loss, on the other hand, would send LSU to New Orleans on Jan. 2 and Auburn to Tampa, Fla., the same day for a Hall of Fame Bowl date against Syracuse.

Smith, who missed three games earlier in the season because of a knee injury, has completed nearly 61 percent of his passes this season for 1,032 yards. Although a senior, his final game against Auburn marked his first start in this state's biggest game.

"To me, this game means everything," Smith said. "This is the game I'll always remember ... No one slows down for a single play. There are incredible highs and lows. It's a game you want to be a part of, a game you want to come out of a winner."

But to win, Smith had to solve the stingiest defense in the nation. Entering the game, the Tigers led the country in total defense (213.2 yards a game) and in scoring defense (6.9 points a game).

"If we can somehow rattle him," Auburn linebacker Quentin Riggins said of Smith, "that will be the answer. I don't think he's been rattled all year, but not many teams have the defensive line we have."

Auburn quarterback Reggie Slack, the SEC leader with 2,010 passing yards and nine touchdowns, had his own problems. Waiting for him was Alabama linebacker Derrick Thomas, who calls himself the "Sack Demon."

"I'm going to play my best game," predicted Thomas, who had already registered a school-record 20 sacks for minus-159 yards and a safety this season.

Alabama leads the series 30-21-1, but Auburn has won four of the last six games.

For the first time since the series resumed in 1948, the ticket allotment wasn't divided 50-50. Under a new agreement, Auburn, designated the vistor, was limited to 10,900 tickets while Alabama got the rest at 75,000-seat Legion Field. Next year, the situation will be reversed when the game is played at Auburn for the first time.

Auburn coach Pat Dye wasn't worried about the new arrangement.

"Our concern is not in the stands," he said. "Our concern is the 11 players who will line up across from us on every play. That is where the game will be won or lost, not in the stands."

Of course, Alabama coach Bill Curry disagreed.

"There will be a lot of noise," he said. "Certainly, I think it's an advantage for us."

Dye was 8-0 against Curry, winning seven games over Georgia Tech when Curry was in charge of that program, and then beating him last November in his first season at Alabama.

Orange, Tigers In NIT Finals

NEW YORK — Bob Knight hadn't seen Sherman Douglas since the Syracuse point guard was a sophomore in the 1987 NCAA Tournament championship game.

Today, Douglas is the prime mover of the speedy Syracuse offense that hammered Knight's Indiana Hoosiers to reach tonight's final of the Big Apple National Invitation Tournament against No. 13 Missouri.

"I hadn't seen Douglas since we played them two years ago," Knight said after sixth-ranked Syracuse crushed No. 20 Indiana 102-78 Wednesday night. "He's a tremendously improved player. He's not an ordinary ball-handler, he handles the ball with a purpose. There's a purpose to everything he does."

Missouri defeated fifth-ranked North Carolina 91-81 in the other semifinal.

"Missouri runs as well as we do and they take good shots," Douglas said. "We always try to run and play hard. Friday will be an up-tempo game because Missouri likes to run like us."

Douglas had eight points and 14 assists against Indiana and his favorite target was forward Steve Thompson, who had 23 points in leading three other starters in double figures.

"We have to play with the same intensity against Missouri that we did against Indiana," said Thompson, who scored 12 points in the first seven minutes of the second half as Syracuse continued to pile up the points after leading 54-30 at halftime. "We have to get the rebounds, get the ball to Sherman and fill the wings."

The Orangemen shot 70.6 percent from the field in the first half and 63 percent overall against Indiana. It was the most points the Hoosiers have allowed in Knight's 18 years at Indiana, surpassing by one Iowa's total in a 1987 game.

Missouri was only a bit less impressive against a more formidable opponent, taking 16-point leads in the second half against North Carolina en route to Norm Stewart's 500th victory as a head coach.

Missouri also had good balance against North Carolina, with all five starters in double figures. Byron Irvin had 21 points, Doug Smith 16, Lee Coward 15 and Gary Leonard and Mike Sanbothe 12 each.

"Passing is crucial to our offense," Irvin said. "We play two men inside and three outside and our passing is great. A lot of people thought we'd not be as good this year with Derrick Chievous gone, but Coach Stewart has done a good job for us."

Chievous is now a key reserve for the Houston Rockets of the NBA.

"Last year they relied on Chievous and now they go to everybody the way we do," Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim said of Missouri.

Seminoles Wary Of Gator Team

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Fifth-ranked Florida State's battle against arch-enemy Florida on Saturday night could be a repeat of the Seminoles' 1987 victory or a reminder to Coach Bobby Bowden of the years of Gator domination in the series.

The Seminoles, 9-1, are favored over the Gators, 6-4. But Florida holds a 22-7-1 lead in the series, including a 9-3 record at Tallahassee since the teams began an annual series in 1958.

Last year, Florida State came from behind for a 28-14 victory that ended Florida's six-year winning streak. Not trusting too much to luck, Bowden has been preparing his team in restricted practices this week.

"We always have things up the sleeve, but we wanted to close things down so the players can keep their heads on their business. You don't like to have a lot of distractions when you're preparing for Florida," he said.

When Bowden came to Florida State in 1976, he'd never had a losing season and was 4-0-1 in bowl games. But from 1981 through 1986, he couldn't find a way to beat Florida, and Seminole fans kept asking why.

Some letters were nasty enough that they wouldn't get past his secretary, Sue Hall.

"My face turned red reading them," she said. "And I hear a lot of things around here."

After losing in 1976, Bowden won four straight and began to think it would be easy. Then Florida won 35-3 in 1981.

"I tried everything," Bowden said. "After we lost a couple, I would try something else. I thought, 'Maybe we were too tight last year, let's not even talk about Florida.' Then maybe we were too loose. It really begins to mount up.

"It drove me crazy. I started to think, 'I can't beat these guys.' You start taking it personally."

The Gators also have been focusing on Florida State this week, hoping to finish their season on a high note.

"We have been really concentrating on Florida State this week, and we fully expect a competitive game on Saturday," Coach Galen Hall said.

On Saturday, the rest of the season will mean little to the Gators.

"This is the biggest rivalry that we have," tackle David Williams said. "I have a lot of friends that play for that team. Really, it's important to the fans and the players."

Defensive tackle Rhondy Weston agreed.

"It's a lot bigger than Georgia and the other games," he said. "Being an in-state rivalry might make it that big. You always see people on the other team, and you're always talking about it."

Fund To Honor Coach Hayes

By Hal Bock
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The idea began 20 months ago, at the funeral of long-time Ohio State coach Woody Hayes. Today, it nears fruition, flourishing beyond all original hopes due largely to the dedication of Rex Kern, one of Woody's boys.

Kern was the quarterback of Hayes' last national championship team, the 1968 Buckeyes. "When Woody died, I was on my way to Columbus for the memorial when I got to thinking that he meant so much more to us as players than just our coach," Kern said. "He was a humanitarian. I wanted to do something to honor his memory."

So Kern wrote to his teammates, hoping to establish a scholarship fund in Hayes' name at Ohio State. The goal was $100,000, modest by some fund-raising standards. Kern never guessed how modest, though.

Today, with 90 percent of the 1968 team participating, the fund has multiplied through the purchase of insurance policies that build cash values to more than $1 million. The Woody Hayes Scholarship Fund will be used to help ex-players who did not graduate to return for their degrees.

A 90-percent participation in any fund-raising appeal is unusual, but Kern was not surprised. Woody's boys were loyal to the coach whose crusty image was contrived, according to Kern.

"He wanted that image," the ex-quarterback said. "The tantrums were all designed as a diversionary tactic to keep the pressure off his players. He was crusty, but underneath he'd give you the shirt off his back. He had the biggest heart in the world."

Kern remembers the crusty coach who made four trips to visit troops in Vietnam and then called the parents of the soldiers he met when he got back to the United States.

And he remembers the crusty coach who arrived unannounced to visit the hospitalized wife of an elderly Ohio State fan he had met for the first time at a shopping mall a couple of hours earlier.

And he remembers the crusty coach who turned the Buckeyes over to a sophomore quarterback 20 years ago, allowing the kid to call signals at a time when it was fashionable for plays to be sent in from the sidelines.

"We opened against SMU," Kern said. "We were moving downfield late in the first half and came up to a fourth and 10 at about the SMU 42 with maybe two minutes to go.

"Woody used to tell me if I felt something in the huddle, to go with my instinct. I thought our guys were one play away from making something happen."

Hayes sent in the punter and the sophomore quarterback, starting his first game, sent him back out. "I called a play, a bad pass play," Kern said. "My receiver was covered and I had to improvise. I was naked out there."

It's Time For Razorbacks To Make Bid For No. One

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Unbeaten Arkansas has been hanging back in this season's race for the national championship. Now, says Coach Ken Hatfield, is the time for the Razorbacks to make their move.

The Hogs, 10-0 and ranked eighth, play a Top Ten team for the first time on Saturday when they visit No. 3 Miami, 8-1. A victory would certainly figure to boost the Razorbacks into contention for No. 1.

"I don't think there'd be any doubt," Hatfield said. "If you beat Miami in Miami ... realistically you'd put yourself in position."

The Hogs have already won the Southwest Conference title and a berth in the Cotton Bowl, but have been virtually ignored in talk about the national championship.

"Because of the Southwest Conference being somewhat down, they have not received the respect due to them," said Miami coach Jimmy Johnson, whose own team retains hopes of repeating the No. 1 finish of last season.

Some of the skepticism about the Razorbacks stems from scores of their games. Six of the victories have been by a total of only 32 points.

"We've been about one play better than everybody else we've played so far," Hatfield said. He feels no temptation to complain about a lack of respect.

"No, no, no, no. That isn't tempting to me at all," the coach chuckled.

"There are probably 10 or 11 teams right now sitting at their place daydreaming that, if the right scenario broke, all 10 of 'em feel they would have a claim to the national championship. It's been that close and that good all season, and I think it will be all the way through the bowl games."

For their own dreams to come true, the Hogs and Hurricanes both need for No. 1 Notre Dame to lose Saturday at No. 2 Southern Cal. If the Fighting Irish win, their game against unbeaten West Virginia in the Fiesta Bowl likely will determine the national champion.

The Orange Bowl-bound Hurricanes are 16-point favorites over Arkansas, the large margin based in part on Miami's last game — a 44-3 smashing of then-No. 16 Louisiana State at Baton Rouge — and the memory of its 51-7 rout of Arkansas last year.

"We took advantage of Arkansas last year with the style of pass defense they played," Johnson said. "Also, we took advantage of their offense, in that they were one-dimensional. This year, they've made drastic improvement in those two phases."

Quarterbacks Quinn Grovey and John Bland have both averaged better than nine yards per pass attempt out of Arkansas' flexbone offense, and Grovey also has rushed for 492 yards.

But those statistics can't match the numbers of Steve Walsh. The Miami junior has thrown for 2,517 yards and 28 touchdowns. He has already broken the Miami season record for touchdown passes set by Heisman Trophy winner Vinny Testaverde, and needs only one more to tie Testaverde's career record of 48.

"Walsh is just playing outstandingly well," Hatfield said. "Walsh is as good a quarterback as I've ever seen. That's high praise. The guy is that good."

The Hurricanes haven't allowed a touchdown in five home games this season and are riding a 23-game winning streak in the Orange Bowl. They've allowed one touchdown in the past 17 quarters.

"They put a whuppin' on LSU," Grovey said. "We need to play ball control and have no turnovers if we're going to win."

Ryder Scalpers Face Penalties

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Ticket scalpers who try to make a fast buck out of next year's Ryder Cup matches face the possibility of the most stringent penalties ever imposed in golf.

Europe's Professional Golfers Association said Thursday it would prosecute anyone who tries to take advantage of new regulations covering the 28th series between the top golfers representing Europe and the United States.

Next year's match at the Belfry will be the first advance-ticket-only competition in the history of European golf. A maximum of four tickets per application will be allowed, with a limit of 27,000 spectators — 20,000 general public and 7,000 hospitality patrons.

Organizers said they are confident the event won't face the ticket-scalping problems that have plagued such events as the Wimbledon tennis championships.

"We are sailing in uncharted waters," John Lindsey, executive director of the PGA, said. "It will be an offense, punishable by law, to put in multiple applications for tickets and we will take every step we can to stamp this out. We shall take action against anyone dealing in an unofficial capacity."

Lindsey said the "genuine golf fan" will be able to get a ticket by applying well before the event. He said unprecedented interest in the Ryder Cup forced organizers to limit crowds.

"The Ryder Cup committee unanimously agreed that a limit must be set bearing in mind the considerable interest in the tournament," Lindsey said.

The Ryder Cup, staged every two years, is riding the crest of a wave of popularity following the Europeans' first-ever success on American soil last year.

The Europeans, who won the last time the matches were staged in Europe, thus will be seeking an unprecedented third straight triumph in next year's event, scheduled Sept. 22-24.

Lindsey said during a new conference that 16,000 tickets would go on sale in Britain, 2,000 in the rest of Europe and 2,000 in the United States, through official package holiday tours.

Without the crowd restrictions, Lindsey said, more than 40,000 fans could have converged on the Belfry, leading to the type of problems encountered in 1985 when too many spectators got on to the fairways and prompted complaints by American officials.

Prices range from about $27.45 a day to $82.35 for a season ticket covering the whole tournament. Overseas applicants will have to pay in British currency, regardless of the exchange rates at the time.

For the first time in the history of the event, plans are under way for live television transmission to the United States.

Action Slows For Oilers But They're Still Winning

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. LOUIS — Without Wayne Gretzky, the Edmonton Oilers are getting used to a lesser offense.

On Thursday night, it was much less.

Edmonton got only 13 shots, one more than its record club-low. Still, the Oilers beat the St. Louis Blues 4-2. Edmonton scored a power-play goal, a shorthanded goal, an even-strength goal and an empty-net goal in beating St. Louis for the seventh straight time over four seasons.

"We ran the gamut," Oilers co-coach John Muckler said. "We didn't mess around."

Jimmy Carson and Mark Messier scored two goals each and Esa Tikkanen had three assists for Edmonton, which had five shots on goal in each of the first two periods and three in the third.

St. Louis had 26 shots, but only two goals, both by Gino Cavallini. The Blues lost their third straight and fell below .500 for the first time this season.

"It's a frustrating way to lose a game, holding a great offensive team to 13 shots," Blues defenseman Gordie Roberts said. "Give them credit. They've proved they're one of the best teams. Good teams find different ways to win."

In other games Thursday night, Boston beat Philadelphia 2-1 in overtime and Quebec beat Montreal 5-3.

Edmonton, who at 13-7-3 remained in third place in the Smythe Division, also stopped the Blues in six power-play opportunities — St. Louis is scoreless in its last 11 power plays — and got strong goaltending from Grant Fuhr.

"He's the best goalie in the world," Carson said of Fuhr, who won the Vezina Trophy last season but entered the game with a 3.97 goals-against average. "Even when he's struggling, he plays great. It's nice to be playing on his team."

Messier's empty-net goal with 22 seconds remaining enabled the Oilers to top their record low for shots in a game, set in a 7-1 loss to the Boston Bruins on Jan. 17, 1980.

Carson got his 13th and 14th goals, both off Tikkanen assists. He scored in the first period when a Tikkanen shot from point on the power play bounced off his skate and into the net. Carson put the Oilers ahead 3-1 with four seconds remaining in the second period when he scored off Tikkanen's centering pass from the slot.

"He's a great shooter from the slot," Edmonton coach Glen Sather said of Carson. "Not many players can one-time it as well as he can."

Messier recorded his seventh and eighth goals and his first in three games since returning from a six-game suspension after a high-sticking incident. He got the game's first goal on a shorthanded effort in the first period, slipping behind the Blues' defense and taking a pass from Glen Anderson before skating in alone to beat Blues goaltender Greg Millen at 3:49.

Cavallini, who turned 26 Thursday, worked a give-and-go play with Bernie Federko in the first period for the first of his two goals. Cavallini passed the puck from the red line to Federko, and got the return pass at the top of the circle before beating Fuhr on a 35-foot slap shot at the 7:31 mark.

Cavallini got his ninth goal at 18 seconds of the third period, again off a Federko assist, to cut Edmonton's lead to 3-2. Federko carried the puck around the Oilers' goal and fed the puck to Cavallini, who scored from in close.

Bruins 2, Flyers 1

Bob Sweeney scored twice, including the game-winner eight seconds into overtime, and Boston snapped a seven-game winless streak.

Sweeney drove Bob Joyce's rebound past Flyers goaltender Mark LaForrest after Ken Linseman won the opening faceoff of overtime.

"Both of the defensemen went to Bob Joyce so I just busted for the net and fortunately for me the goalie kicked it out right on my stick," Sweeney said. "I'll take those."

Sweeney gave Boston a 1-0 lead at 13:59 of the first period. Tim Kerr tied at it 11:09 of the second with his 20th goal of the season.

Philadelphia has won just one of its last nine games.

Nordiques 5, Canadiens 3

Joe Sakic scored three goals and Marc Fortier had three assists as Quebec snapped Montreal's five-game winning streak. The Nordiques scored two power-play goals in the first period and took a 3-0 lead.

"We were aware they had a really good power play and that we couldn't afford to let them have too many chances to use it," Claude Lemieux of Montreal said. "We made the mistake of giving them two quick chances and they capitalized both times."

Jeff Brown had a goal and two assists for the Nordiques and David Latta also scored for Quebec.

Bobby Smith scored for Montreal, the 300th goal of his career, and Mats Naslund and Eric Desjardins also scored. Desjardins' goal was the first of his career.

Sakic, a rookie, has 16 goals this season and 31 points.

Victory Could Ease Vandy Frustrations

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Preseason's high hopes have faded into another losing season, but Vanderbilt quarterback Eric Jones says a victory over Tennessee would go a long way toward easing the Commodores' pains.

"We've had a lot of highs and lows. It has been the most difficult of years because most of our losses were so close," Jones said. "Beating Tennessee would make up for a lot of the disappointment, but not all of it.

"It will hurt me forever that we were not able to go to a bowl this year, but the Tennessee game means a whole lot to us and our fans. It's a big-time rivalry and bragging rights in the state are the prize," said Jones, who leads the Southeastern Conference in total offense with a per-game average of 256.8 yards a game.

Jones' favorite target is wide receiver Boo Mitchell, who leads the SEC and is third in the nation with 69 catches for 1,073 yards and five touchdowns.

The contest will be a meeting of football programs traveling in different directions.

Monsoon Rains Leave 142 Dead In Thailand

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BANGKOK, Thailand — A week of monsoon rains sent logs and mud crashing into villages and killed at least 142 people, officials said today.

Unofficial counts placed the dead at more than 200, with hundreds missing and believed drowned or buried beneath mudslides that hit several villages in Nakhon Sri Thammarat province.

The Interior Ministry said at least 70,000 villagers in 12 southern provinces were left homeless while extensive damage was reported to roads, bridges, railways and agricultural land.

Torrential rains in southeast Asia from Saturday to Wednesday also were blamed for the deaths of dozens in Malaysia and Indonesia. Floodwaters washed out thousands of roads, cut off rail service and destroyed crops in the hardest hit areas, authorities said.

Malaysia's state news agency Bernama reported an improvement in the flood situation in Malaysia, with no new deaths. Earlier Thursday, authorities said 27 people died from the storms, 14 in the worst hit state, northeastern Kelantan.

A spokesman of the Meteorological Department in Kuala Lumpur, the Malaysian capital, said the weather, part of the annual Asian winter monsoon season that lasts from November until March, was among the three worst this decade.

Monsoon rains lasting three to 10 days this month have lashed southeast Asia, southern India and Sri Lanka.

A spokesman for Thailand's Fourth Army, stationed in the south, said hundreds of rescue workers today recovered 45 bodies from the mudslides, bringing to 104 the number of dead in Nakhon Sri Thammarat. Villagers in some areas were being evacuated by troops to higher ground.

The worst hit province recorded 17.5 inches of rain Tuesday, a single-day record for rainfall since data collection began 38 years ago, said the spokesman.

The English-language newspaper The Nation reported that the usually bustling tourist city of Hat Yai was reeling from three days of flash floods, with many businesses closed and hundreds of Malaysian and other tourists stranded in hotels "like prisoners."

Food was reported scarce in hotels where water was being rationed to guests.

Official Radio Thailand said Prime Minister Chatichai Choonhavan planned to fly to the disaster area 490 miles south of Bangkok.

The army spokesman, contacted by telephone, said mud and logs rolled off barren hillsides in the province's Phipoon District, crushing people and slamming into homes.

An inspector of the Forestry Department blamed the deaths on "serious wounds on the soil and mountains" inflicted by uncontrolled logging and mining.

Students, Monks Pressing For Korea To Arrest Chun

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL, South Korea — Radical students and Buddhist monks demanding the arrest of former President Chun Doo-hwan hurled hundreds of firebombs today at riot police in street clashes after authorities blocked a protest march.

Radicals battled police in streets and alleyways around Dongguk University in eastern Seoul about some 2,000 students from 10 Seoul colleges tried to march out despite freezing temperatures. About 1,000 protesters stormed out of the college to bombard troopers with rocks and firebombs that exploded in showers of blazing gasoline.

"Arrest Chun Doo-hwan," protesters shouted. "Yankee go home"

Several thousand riot police in green combat fatigues and black visored helmets ringed the campus to stop students breaking through. Troopers fired volleys of choking tear gas and hurled back rocks and other missiles.

Police had no immediate word on casualties or arrests.

Student leaders at an earlier campus rally denounced Chun's apology on Wednesday for corruption and human rights abuses. Leaders demanded the former president be arrested and prosecuted for numerous alleged crimes.

Protesters also denounced President Roh Tae-woo and demanded he also be punished. Speakers told the cheering crowd that Roh was guilty of corruption and was trying to protect Chun.

Protesters burned an effigy of Roh before marching out with banners and flags to try and parade through the city. "Punish Roh Tae-woo," protesters chanted.

Buddhisht monks armed with firebombs joined the students in the fighting. Chun has taken refuge in a remote Buddhist monastery on the east coast, and the monks claimed his presence there was a desecration of a holy place.

"Drive out Chun from our sacred temple," the monks chanted.

Chun, in a nationally televised speech Wednesday, apologized for abuses under his seven-year authoritarian rule. Chun said he was surrendering his personal property and going into internal exile.

Chun has denied any personal corrupion, but some of his relatives and associates have been convicted of or charged with embezzlement and other offenses.

Dissident groups refused to accept the apology as sufficent and said Chun must be prosecuted. The main opposition parties have also said further explanation is necessary.

Roh, a former close associate of Chun, is scheduled to make a statement Saturday in which he may pardon the former president or at least ask for public mercy. The announcement probably would trigger further outbursts from radicals and other opposition groups.

Earlier, the presidential office said Roh would appear on national television tonight to make the statement, but it changed the day.

Gunmen Kill Wrong Man In N. Ireland

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Gunmen apparently targeting a Sinn Fein councilman shot and killed his brother instead, police said.

Phelim McNally, 28, was slain Thursday night while he was playing an accordion in the kitchen of the home of his brother, local Sein Fein councilman Francis McNally, police said. Sinn Fein is the legal political wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

No group immediately claimed responsibility for the attack, which the British domestic news agency Press Association said occurred near Coagh, 30 miles west of Belfast.

An officer at Belfast police headquarters confirmed a man was killed but refused to elaborate. A press officer in Belfast later said the gunmen may have been seeking to kill the councilman, not his brother.

The press officer said the gunmen, believed to number three, fired through the kitchen window from outside the house. The brothers were the only ones at home at the time, police and news reports said.

South Africa Says Mandela Will Be Held, But Not In Prison

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The government said it will not send black leader Nelson Mandela back to prison when he completes his hospital stay but will keep him under guard at an unspecified location.

A brief statement on Thursday by Justice Minister Kobie Coetsee did not give any details on when Mandela would leave the hospital, where he would be taken, or what restrictions he would face.

The 70-year-old Mandela, head of the African National Congress guerrilla movement, has been recovering from tuberculosis since August at the Constantiaberg Clinic in Cape Town.

Dirk de Villiers, a spokesman for Coetsee, said today that Mandela is still at the clinic.

Mandela's health has "improved to such an extent that should the improvement continue it will eventually no longer be necessary to care for him in a clinic," Coetsee said.

"When the time arrives he will be transferred to suitable, comfortable and secure living accommodations, where he will be able to receive members of his family more freely and on a continual basis," Coetsee said.

"His family will be informed of the locality in due course," the statement concluded.

The Citizen, a pro-government English-language newspaper, reported today that Coetsee's reference to "secure living accomodations" may mean that Mandela would be accomodated in a house built for prison officials on a prison farm.

"These homes are within the enclosed prison compound and therefore Mandela's security would not pose an insurmountable problem," The Citizen said.

It also referred to speculation that Mandela might be allowed to receive visitors outside his immediate family and lawyer, including the press, and that it may become possible to quote him. It is now illegal to quote him or print his picture.

Mandela's wife, Winnie, said in a statement issued by family attorney Ismail Ayob that she "attaches no significance to the (government) statement."

"Mr. Mandela still remains a prisoner of the South African government and there is no indication of any imminent release," the statement said.

The government statement suggests authorities are attempting to release Mandela in stages in an effort to temper the public's reaction to the country's best known black leader.

The government has expressed concern that Mandela's release could reignite black political demonstrations that have largely been quieted under the 29-month-old state of emergency.

Earlier Thursday, Pat Robertson, a television preacher and former U.S. presidential candidate, told reporters he had discussed Mandela during an hour-long meeting with President P.W. Botha at government headquarters in Pretoria.

Robertson said the president told him that Mandela will not be returned to prison, but would be placed in custody to protect him from assassination.

NELSON MANDELA

Mideast Top Arms Purchaser

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Middle East remained the No. 1 market for American arms manufacturers last year, although total U.S. arms exports fell sharply, according to a new study.

The report also said McDonnell Douglas Corp. was one of the few major defense contractors to post a sales increase for the year. The St. Louis-based company assumed the top industry position with sales of $657 million.

The value of contracts awarded to U.S. defense contractors for military equipment and services earmarked for export abroad fell to $4.9 billion — off 22 percent from the 1986 level and 44 percent below 1985's total, the report said.

The six largest U.S. arms contractors account for 55 percent of the total FMS awards in fiscal 1987, the study said.

Besides McDonnell Douglas, they are General Dynamics Corp., which had $606.9 million in foreign sales; Grumman Corp., with $503.7 million; General Electric Co., $341.5 million; Raytheon Co., $326.2 million, and United Technologies Corp., $223 million.

General Dynamics had held the top spot two years ago with sales of $1.4 billion.

Rounding out the top 10 arms exporters were Lockheed Corp., $197.1 million; General Motors Corp., $194 million; Unisys, $173.1 million, and Westinghouse Electric Corp., $122.7 million.

The study examined sales in the 12-month period ended Sept. 30.

"The overall decline in Foreign Military Sale awards led to a drop in the level of arms export business for 17 of the top 25 U.S. arms exporting companies in 1987," the report said.

The study was conducted by the Investor Responsibility Research Center, which bills itself as a nonpartisan research organization dedicated to conducting impartial studies on public policy issues involving corporate America.

The group has been analyzing foreign arms sales for several years, focusing on the official Foreign Military Sale, or FMS, transactions, that are arranged and overseen by the U.S. government.

OPEC Ministers Tentatively Agree On Production Limits

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VIENNA, Austria — OPEC oil ministers cut a tentative deal to end a bitter dispute between Iran and Iraq and boost crude oil prices on the international market.

Iran's oil minister, Gholamreza Aghazadeh, flew to Tehran today to get his government's approval for the pact, which would lead to higher prices for gasoline and other petroleum products.

Aghazadeh made his announcement late Thursday after meeting with key ministers of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

If the tentative plan gains final approval, analysts expect oil prices could surge several dollars a barrel in the coming months.

This would theoretically increase gasoline prices by five to 10 cents a gallon.

Final agreement would have to be approved by all the ministers.

The ministers opened their winter meeting Monday but postponed further discussions to give them time to end the stalemate between Iran and Iraq, which agreed to a cease-fire in August in their eight-year war.

"It's a fluid situation," said Venezuelan Oil Minister Julio Cesar Gil. "It depends. ... Mr. Aghazadeh went to Tehran for consultations."

"Everyone will be pleased when this is finalized," the Iraqi oil minister said this morning before meeting with other oil ministers.

Aghazadeh then left Vienna to catch a midday flight to Tehran. He would say only that he might return Sunday.

Mana Saeed Otaiba, oil minister of the United Arab Emirates, also left this morning to meet with Emirates President Sheikh Zayed Bin Sultan Al Nahyan in Morocco.

Otaiba refused to discuss what quota his country would be given in the tentative accord. The United Arab Emirates has been greatly exceeding its current quota, adding to the glut on the world market.

Aghazadeh said the arrangement would set total OPEC production at 18.5 million barrels a day for the first half of 1989. Output has been exceeding 20 million barrels a day.

Armenians Flee Soviet Union Riots

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Hundreds of ethnic Armenians fled to their homeland from a neighboring republic, where several people were killed in the worst ethnic riots in months, reports from the southern region said.

Two other Soviet republics, Lithuania and Georgia, mounted challenges to Moscow's central authority.

The reports from the south said Soviet troops used helicopters and trucks Thursday to evacuate women and children from one troubled area of Azerbaijan. The soldiers were sent to the republic to try to control the escalating violence.

Musa Mamedov, chief of the information department of the Azerbaijani Foreign Ministry, said Thursday night that reports from the city of Kirovabad were sketchy but that several people were killed in rioting.

"There were more outbreaks of violence," Mamedov said by telephone from the Azerbaijani capital of Baku. "There are victims, deaths." The number of deaths was not known.

He said from 50,000 to 100,000 protesters remained on the streets of the city.

The official news agency Tass blamed the situation on "irresponsible nationalistic elements" and reported fighting between Armenians and Azerbaijanis.

In Nakhichevan, border troops evacuated at least 500 Armenian women and children to Armenia with "helicopters, trucks and anything else they could find," said Boris Kufaryan, senior editor of Armenia's official Armenpress news agency. "The men stayed behind to defend their homes."

Kufaryan, speaking by telephone from the Armenian capital of Yerevan, said more than 1,700 Armenians who fled from Azerbaijan in recent days had registered as refugees in his republic.

Nakhichevan is the capital of an Azerbaijani region of the same name that is separated from the main part of the republic by the southern section of Armenia. According to the 1970 census, 190,000 Azerbaijanis share the region with 6,000 Armenians.

In Kirovabad, frightened Armenians formed an emergency committee to send their women and children to Armenia, said Arpenay Popoyan, wife of Armenian activist Rafael Popoyan. She said from Yerevan that they asked military authorities to be sent to the city to provide transport.

"The situation is sharply deteriorating in Azerbaijan," Mrs. Popoyan said in a report confirmed later by Tass, the official Soviet news agency.

Meanwhile, in the neighboring republic of Georgia, several thousand demonstrators reportedly gathered in the capital of Tbilisi to protest proposed amendments to the Soviet constitution. The changes have prompted complaints the Kremlin is trying to monopolize power and weaken the legislatures of the 15 constituent republics.

The Kremlin indicated Thursday it is open to compromise on the proposed constitutional changes.

Members of a grassroots Lithuanian political organization arrived in Moscow to deliver a petition to the Supreme Soviet, or parliament, demanding sovereignty for their republic. They claimed the petition bore the signatures of 1.8 million citizens of the once-independent Baltic republic.

In Moscow, Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov told reporters that tanks and troops were sent to Kirovabad, Baku and Nakhivechan and that a nighttime curfew was imposed.

In Kirovabad on Tuesday, mobs killed three soldiers, and 126 people were injured, according to Azerbaijani and Soviet officials.

Marines Shoot At Intruder At Canal Base

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PANAMA CITY — U.S. Marines shot at an armed intruder on the outskirts of Howard Air Base near the Panama Canal, but the man got away, apparently unhurt, a U.S. military spokesman said.

Southern Command spokesman Bill Orsmbee said Marines guarding base fuel tanks Wednesday morning fired twice after the man failed to obey orders to halt.

Orsmbee, who spoke Thursday, said he had no other information on the incident.

It was the sixth time Marines have fired at intruders, none of whom have been wounded, captured or identified. The Marines shot and killed one of their own men in an April incident.

Marines have been stationed in Panama since April, shortly after Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega forced out President Eric Artuo Delvalle. Noriega, chief of the Defense Forces and Panama's de facto ruler, has been indicted in the United States on charges of drug trafficking. He denies the charges.

Noriega said in a speech Thursday at the Rio Hato military base, 90 miles from the capital of Panama City, that the military supports a move toward greater democracy but that the country does not need the U.S. Embassy's help.

"We are committed to holding elections in May 1989," he said. "There are no changes in the election calendar nor in the Panamanian democratic process. Holding elections is 1989 is a Panamanian decision. ... It is not based on a foreign order."

Noriega said every time Panamanians have proposed initiatives to solve the country's crisis "a gringo comes along to torpedo, impede, block, terminate or liquidate the initiatives."

"It is time for Panamanians to sit down to dialogue without the eraser of (the U.S. Embassy's political attache John) Maisto and for them to realize that the Defense Forces would be part of the total picture, but not the complete dialogue," he said.

Noriega has resisted U.S. economic and political pressure to resign and leave the country.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY Nov. 26

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Break with conventional routines, and try something different. A short trip to a favorite nature spot would be rewarding. Compliment someone.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): A romantic involvement makes for an interesting departure. Schedules and promises may be altered. Intensify your focus on health matters.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Stay with a friendly group today. The familiar basics (home, family, etc.) will do nicely. Accept invitations to social events.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): A scandal may have the phones hot. Don't get involved if it doesn't concern you. Shop for gifts for family members and friends.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Your creativity attracts you to color and nice things. Buy, but be certain your purchase is functional and will be appreciated later.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Good communications come your way. Use them where they can be used to your advantage. Make plans for expanding your education.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Finances improve. Your heavy load lightens. Contact with a relative can be appropriate and rewarding. Romance needs direction.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Travel plans can be made. Others may be visiting in the future. A thorny problem is settled. Suggest but do not insist on your way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Social activities are fun but also more than you bargained for. Keep your expectations to yourself so you are not disappointed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Your self-discipline has brought you closer to your goals. Relax with children who need free time with you. Organize home activities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Getting errands done early clears the way for other thinghs. Someone wants to control an important decision. You currently need privacy.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Demands can drive you crazy. Take care of basics, and relax. The immature emotions of others are a test. Be understanding to succeed.

If you are going to bid like a lunatic, you had better be able to play like a genius—or else be a very wealthy man. South's bidding on this hand lived up to the first category—six spades would have been an iron-clad contract—but his play did not come anywhere near the second.

Why South elected to play six no trump rather than the ice-cold contract of six spades is beyond us. Even with a 4-1 trump split, the latter contract depends only on the hand with the long trumps having at least two hearts.

Declarer wasted no time in going down in his slam. He won the opening diamond lead in hand, cashed the queen of hearts and crossed to the ace of spades. Next, he tried to split out the hearts by cashing the ace-king. When the suit didn't run, he went after spades. Unfortunately, that suit also broke badly. Since declarer had to concede a spade to East, that defender was able to cash a heart trick for down one.

Had declarer stopped to count his tricks, he might have uncovered the safe route to 12 tricks. With four minor-suit tricks and three in hearts, he needed only five tricks from the spade suit. Therefore, after winning the opening lead declarer should have cashed the queen of hearts and then ducked a spade! The defenders can do declarer no harm.

Suppose East wins the spade and reverts to diamonds. Declarer wins, crosses to the ace of spades and takes the ace-king of hearts, discarding his minor-suit losers. He can get back to his hand with a club, and the rest of the tricks are his.

Leslie Uggams Stands Ready In Long 'Anything Goes' Tour

By Joe Brown
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BOSTON — Leslie Uggams is well into her 12th week of a 52-week cruise — she's top-billed with the first national company of the Lincoln Center revival of the musical "Anything Goes," which steams into the National Theater in Washington this week.

But she certainly doesn't look much the worse for wear. Some performers jog to keep from going stir crazy on the road. Others sightsee. Uggams' secret for making the most of a tour that will take her to 20-something U.S. cities:

"Shopping."

The singer has just returned to her two-room suite at Boston's ritzy Ritz-Carlton, in fact, from another jaunt through Boston's posh shops.

"I've checked out the stores on this side of town, now I want to do the other side," she says. "I mean, you can't come to Boston and not go to Filene's! I just had to send back a whole bunch of clothes, because now it's getting colder. But we hit Washington next." Giggling and casually glamorous in designer jeans and a sequined yachting sweater, chic pointy brown boots (from the New Haven run) and a tweedy, boyish cap (today's prize), she stops just short of rubbing her hands together in anticipation of plundering Washington's boutiques.

A winsome, smooth-skinned, sparkly-eyed 45, Uggams bears a startling resemblance to the young Lena Horne. "Everyone says that," Uggams laughs. "I'm one of her 'daughters.' Me and Dionne (Warwick) and a few others of us who adore her."

This afternoon — a few hours before her evening performance at the Shubert Theatre — Uggams sets her personality on autopilot for what must be her 3 billionth interview. This woman has been in showbiz since she was 6 years old. Now she's a Las Vegas and Atlantic City fixture, an Emmy- and Tony-winning actress, a bicoastal mom ... and she couldn't be more bored with the publicity process. Of course, she's the picture of polite, pleasant professionalism. But there's no urgent need to reveal anything to the world.

As the star of "Anything Goes," Uggams gets to belt the show's choicest Cole Porter tunes — "I Get a Kick Out of You," "You're the Top," "Friendship" and, of course, "Anything Goes" — in a very Vegas style. "It's what a musical used to be," she says. "Fun. Good music. Costumes. Sets. Talented people. There's some wonderful, interesting musicals around, and you walk out humming the scenery — 'Oh, remember when that moved?' That's nice, but that's not the kind of musical I want to go see."

Uggams plays Reno Sweeney, a sassy preacher turned holy-rolling chanteuse who entertains the moonstruck crew of a post-Depression Love Boat. "This is a very different kind of Reno. The original version of the show was like, ba-rump-bump! Everybody was just doing one-liners. In this one, Reno has much more of a character."

The authors of the 1934 book, Guy Bolton and P.G. Wodehouse (and later Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse), loosely based Reno on the charismatic '30s evangelist Aimee Semple McPherson, and the role was originated by Ethel Merman. Uggams says she patterned her interpretation, with help from a new book by Timothy Crouse and John Weidman, after gospel great Clara Ward.

"She was a fantastic gospel singer, but she was known for being glamorous as well, and playing Las Vegas. So whenever I think of Reno, that's who I think of, because she made the transition from her gospel beginnings to the nightclub scene.

"I think I'm probably the first black actress to play the part," says Uggams, who played Reno once before, in an Atlantic City revival, which the Lincoln Center producers remembered when they were ready to launch this tour. "But I don't think color matters much, because in 1934 Josephine Baker, Bill Robinson, all the big stars were always on the ships going to Europe. So the casting is very 1934-ish."

Uggams has done this kind of colorization before — she played Sister Sarah Brown in an all-black "Guys and Dolls" opposite Richard "Shaft" Roundtree, and Sally Bowles in "Cabaret."

The history lesson is interrupted by a knock on the door. Uggams' pre-show dinner — a club sandwich, some fruit, some sparkling water — is wheeled into the suite.

Her surname, she explains between bites, means "sweet waters." "It's supposed to be American Indian," says Uggams, whose heritage is part Scottish, Irish, Seminole and Cherokee. And Showbiz. It seems to run in the blood of her Washington Heights family: Her mother was a Cotton Club dancer, her dad sang with the Hall Johnson Choir, Aunt Eloise sang in "almost every version of 'Porgy and Bess.'" And little Leslie, whose show-business experience at age 6 had amounted to singing along with Frank Sinatra on the radio at home and playing Ethel Waters' niece on one episode of her "Beulah" TV show.

Reggae Roots Push Priest Up Charts

By Hillel Italie
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A reggae version of Cat Stevens' "Wild World"? It wasn't Maxi Priest's idea.

"I never wanted to do it. It was the choice of the record company," admitted Priest, who nonetheless went No. 1 for four weeks with the song on the British singles chart.

"All the way from London to Jamaica I was saying, 'I don't want to do this. I don't like this record,'" he said, adding, "I enjoy the song now."

Though only 25, Priest is already a veteran in the music business. "Wild World" is included on "Maxi," his third album and the first to be released in the United States.

He grew up in southeast London, the son of a factory worker, and described his upbringing as "a bit too strict." Priest did, however, have a diverse musical background.

"Coming from the Pentacostal church, I liked a lot of religious songs. Having a Jamaican West Indian background, I was into reggae."

His influences were broad, ranging from the sounds of Studio One in Jamaica to the Beatles. Although not a born musician — he does not play an instrument — Priest was singing "roughly from the time the doctor slapped my bum when I came out." He created his own studio at the age of 14.

He was still a teen-ager when he joined Saxon International as a dee-jay for "Sound System" and worked with noted English reggae stars such as Smiley Culture and Tippa Irie.

"I found myself getting a lot of ideas very quickly. A lot of my vibes came from Sound System. You just start singing and things come out. I found myself getting good melodies and good lyrics at the same time," he said.

In 1984, Priest's debut single, "Hey Little Girl," became the first British reggae record to reach No. 1 in Jamaica. The following year, he released his first album, "You're Safe," and after extensive touring, was named best male vocalist in the 1986 UK Reggae Awards.

His second album, "Intentions," came out in late 1986 and contained a cover version of Van Morrison's "Crazy Love."

"It was given to me by my manager. I like Van Morrison's stuff. I think he's a very good writer."

On "Maxi," Priest covers "Some Guys Have All the Luck," a hit for Rod Stewart.

"It was a song that I always wanted to do. It always used to work with me on stage. Once I was doing this TV program. There was a commercial break and I started to sing the song and the crowd went 'Yeah.'"

But Priest writes most of his own material.

"I don't want to be cut out as a cover artist. I'm not putting it down, it was a good idea and it worked. But I do not want to be known as a cover artist.

"I think most of my music comes from the early Studio One where you had to have a good song, a good melody."

Priest is especially proud of "How Can We Ease the Pain," an original song on "Maxi."

"It means a lot to me. It's not being too political but it's stating something the whole world need to understand. That we could live a lot better than we're living. I don't like to get into any heavy politics but it's just a nice way to say something."

He does deal more directly with politics on "Marcus," a tribute to the late black nationalist leader, Marcus Garvey. "It's giving thanks to somebody that thought of the apartheid movement many years ago."

Reggae's most famous rhythm section, drummer Sly Dunbar and bassist Robbie Shakespeare, played on "Maxi."

"They heard a lot about me in England and I always heard about them. It was inevitable somehwere along the line," Priest said. "It was fun. Like sitting back and saying, 'Hey, this is Sly and Robbie.'"

Priest will begin a tour of the United States this fall. He feels at ease performing live, crediting his confidence to the time spent at Saxon International.

"You have to sing with people right into your face. So I had a bit of experience dealing with people directly. It was easier on stage."

Despite his following in England, Priest is well aware of the difficulty that reggae artists have selling records in the United States. Even Bob Marley had problems. His only song to make the Top 10 was "I Shot the Sheriff," and that was a cover version by Eric Clapton.

"I'm realizing that now," Priest said, "but this is a new generation. The music is looking much, much better. Bob opened the doors. There's Steel Pulse, Aswad, Ziggy Marley."

But don't go looking for any "Maxi Priest Sings Cat Stevens" compilations. "I'm not a fan of Cat Stevens," he said.

Peter O'Toole Plays Heir To Castle In 'High Spirits'

By Matt Wolf
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Peter O'Toole was 15 minutes late for a lunch appointment, and he needed a cigarette.

The tall, gaunt actor swept into a crowded French restaurant in central London, removing his hat with a flourish. "I've been so virtuous." He asked the maitre d' for a pack of his favorite brand, pungent French Gauloises.

He sounded like the matinee idol he has played and parodied on-screen, and was in the proper mock-ebullient spirits to promote his new movie, "High Spirits," which opened last week in the United States.

"I love playing people who have got relish to life, a firm identity in not being part of the herd," said the actor, whose character, Peter Plunkett, furthers a line-up of O'Toole eccentrics ranging from Lawrence of Arabia to the schizoid Earl of Gurney in "The Ruling Class."

"High Spirits" casts O'Toole as an heir who inherits a decaying, haunted Irish castle. Daryl Hannah ("Splash") plays the castle's comeliest ghost, and Steve Guttenberg ("Cocoon") and Liam Neeson ("The Good Father") head the supporting cast. The movie is directed by the Irish filmmaker Neil Jordan, who made the low-budget hits "Mona Lisa" and "The Company of Wolves."

Equipped with his cigarettes and an alcohol-free Bloody Mary, the actor settled down to a salmon trout. The vegetables went untouched. At 56, he remains as gaunt and chisel-faced as when he shot to international stardom in 1962 as T.E. Lawrence, the mysterious English desert warrior, in David Lean's brilliant Academy Award-winning epic, "Lawrence of Arabia."

O'Toole said "High Spirits" marked a welcome change from the demands of his most recent screen role as tutor to the Emperor Pu-Yi in Bernardo Bertolucci's Oscar-winning "The Last Emperor." It was a cameo role that nevertheless stole the moment, as O'Toole always manages to do.

"One's always looking for something different from what one did the last time, and if a funny role comes up, it's very nice to do," he said. "Having just played classic O'Toole in China, which was not exactly a bundle of laughs, along came this rather potty film. There was a gentleness I rather liked — a sweetness, an amiability."

He described Plunkett as "a down-at-heel aristo(crat), someone who absurdly is hanging on to this enormous pile of stone at all sorts of costs."

Plunkett is the latest in a versatile career that has seen seven Oscar nominations for performances ranging from Henry II opposite Katharine Hepburn's Eleanor of Aquitaine in "The Lion In Winter" (1968) to the enigmatic film director Eli Cross in "The Stunt Man" (1978) and the hilariously self-absorbed actor Alan Swann in "My Favorite Year" (1982).

However, the actor reserves special affection for "Lawrence of Arabia." The movie will be re-released shortly with 20 minutes of lost footage restored, an act of reclamation that pleases its star.

"It's a magnificent film, part of film history," said O'Toole, who worked with the celebrated Lean and the screenwriter Robert Bolt to facilitate the restoration. "When Sam (Spiegel, the original producer) died, David went truffling (hunting) and found 20 minutes that had disappeared without any rhyme, reason or symmetry."

Two airliners collided over Yugoslavia in 1976, killing all 176 persons aboard the two planes.

'War' Becomes A Major Lesson In Disappointment

By Bill Carter
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

ABC billed "War and Remembrance" as a landmark television event. The billing has proved to be entirely accurate, but for at least one reason ABC surely didn't want:

"War and Remembrance" is likely to be remembered as the show that lost the war for network television.

The war is for the hearts and minds of the majority of American TV viewers. "W&R" was the ultimate weapon, the last line of defense, really, for the networks.

It didn't succeed. That analysis has nothing to do with the quality of the miniseries. The reviews on the show have generally been outstanding, even glowing. They were well earned. Though flawed by its size and occasional missteps, "War and Remembrance" has more than justified ABC's mammoth commitment in time and money. It surely ranks as compelling, groundbreaking drama for television.

ABC wanted the prestige associated with this kind of ambitious programming. But it wanted much more. Nobody pays more than $100 million for prestige. ABC wanted a champion for the increasingly beleaguered cause of network television.

The series' first section (it will conclude with 12 to 14 more hours in May) ended Wednesday night. ABC knows the final score already. "War and Remembrance" was not the savior of network TV; it wasn't even the champion for ABC, failing, as it did, to lead the network to a win in even one weekly ratings competition.

"W&R" proved to be another in the growing line of stunning disappointments for a business where outrageous success used to be automatic.

ABC guaranteed advertisers that "W&R" would average a 21 rating for its seven-night run. (The rating is the percentage of TV sets watching a given program at a given time, based on a perfect rating of 100. Each rating point equals 904,000 homes.)

Privately ABC believed it was being conservative. After all, the prequel to "W&R," 1983's "Winds of War," a much inferior program, averaged a gigantic 38 rating.

But in making that rating estimate, ABC made the same mistake that NBC did when it predicted the summer Olympics would easily eclipse the 21.2 rating it promised advertisers: The network believed that the TV landscape is even remotely similar to the way it used to be.

"W&R" reached the ABC rating guarantee exactly once, on its first night. It sank to a low of 16.8 the night of Nov. 17, when it faced NBC's potent Thursday lineup.

That night it was beaten by "Cheers," "Dear John" and "L.A. Law." It was obvious that night that "W&R" was not a show to turn the tide for television. Nobody was out there talking excitedly about "War and Remembrance," the way they had about the gargantuan hits of the network past. It had not generated that massive word of mouth that could carry the program past even a moderately competitive challenge.

When the official results arrive early next week, the overall ratings shortfall will be about two points. That hardly means the show was a ratings failure. In this era of television, a 19 rating is a superior performance, especially spread out over that much time.

But even at the 21 rating, ABC expected to lose about $20 million. At 19, the loss will grow significantly as ABC is forced to give sponsors "make good" ads in later programs. Many could eat up the highly valuable time in the rest of "W&R" when it plays next May.

By any measure, that puts "W&R" into the category of financial disaster for ABC.

Before the show went on the air, it was already being called the last of its kind, the last of the maxilength miniseries, the last time a network would pour money into a colossal effort to pull viewers to the set.

But in the background, producers who have long been drawn to this kind of ambitious material whispered that big numbers for "W&R" could turn it all around again.

It was all a grand illusion.

Rock Band Stays In Touch With People

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Staying in touch is what the Feelies are all about.

With their audience. And with their music.

"I'd rather appeal to 500 people for the right reasons than 5,000 for the wrong reasons. It's really what you mean to people," group member Glenn Mercer said.

As for their music, Mercer said, "We're reducing it to its basic element. Pure energy and spirit. No intellect involved at all, really.

"You don't want to make it seem that it's really being thought about. You don't write a song about people being fascinated, it just sort of comes out of you. No preconceived ideas."

On their third album, "Only Life," the Feelies stick to the same unfettered approach. The lyrics are terse, like telegrams; every word counts. The singing is deliberately flat, stripped of all emotion and irony. The listener is left to wonder if such words as, "Nothing matters and what if it did," are to be taken at face value or a criticism of that attitude.

"All of our songs are open to interpretation," Mercer said. "I'd much prefer that to saying what the song's about. I think you failed in a way if you have to say what a song's about. It really takes away something from the song."

The arrangements keep to the basic rock 'n' roll combination of drums, bass and guitars. Mercer said the Feelies were attracted to the Stooges, the Modern Lovers and the MC5 — groups more interested in emotion than fancy chord structures.

"It was a combination. One, being that they're pretty simple bands. They gave you the feeling you didn't have to take years of music lessons, didn't have to buy really expensive equipment. You could make music on a personal level. Another thing, they were cult bands. Nobody else knew about them."

Bill Million, who co-writes the Feelies' songs with Mercer, liked the spontaneous feel of those groups.

"The music had a lot of energy," he said. "The Stooges sounded like the guitar player just got a fender, a fuzz box and an amplifier for Christman and just recorded the album two weeks later."

But that changed in the 70s.

"Then it got away from that. Bands like Emerson, Lake and Palmer and Yes, just the opposite really."

The Feelies were high school students in Haledon, N.J., when the group was formed in 1976. The original lineup consisted of Mercer and Million on guitars, Dave Weckerman on drums and percussion and John J. on bass.

The Associated Press

Members of The Feelies strike up a pose during an appearance in Hoboken, N.J., this fall

They made their debut at Manchester High School in Haledon the following year, not too successfully, Million remembered.

"The audience wasn't getting into what we were doing. Between breaks, they asked us if they could use the instruments and play stuff the audience actually wanted to hear. Then we started playing CBGB's and Max's Kansas City."

And then the Feelies caught on. In 1978, they were called "The Best Underground Band in New York" in a Village Voice cover story.

"Our audience went from about 12 to 600 people," Million recalled.

It seemed like a perfect fit when the Feelies signed with Stiff Records and released their debut album, "Crazy Rhythms," in 1980. Here was the "Best Underground Band" and the ultimate new wave record label, the home of Elvis Costello, Graham Parker and Nick Lowe.

The Feelies found out, however, that Stiff had the same priority as the major record companies: the bottom line.

"They lectured us on how to write a hit single. It was like a scene out of a movie," Mercer said.

There were no hit singles, and despite excellent reviews, "Crazy Rhythms" was a commercial failure and the Feelies disbanded in 1981. Not because they wanted to, Mercer noted.

The Feelies regrouped in 1983 with Brenda Sauter on bass, Stanley Demeski on drums and Weckerman moving to percussion.

THANKSGIVING?
The Pilgrims came with old ideals of rule and thumb.
And now we cry give us some.
The Indians saved them, were they dumb?
These faults sometimes drive me numb.
They are starving people here and all the world.

Shoppers May Face Tight Shopping Inventories

By Joyce M. Rosenberg
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Christmas shoppers wading into the post-Thanksgiving rush today face a little added pressure this year: tight inventories.

That's a business decision prompted by a long-running slump in the retail business, but for consumers it means limited selection and shortages of hot-selling items.

Today's opening of the nation's annual shopping spree finds retailers optimistic about improving their seasonal sales, but conservative enough to stock sparingly.

Inventories have been tight for much of the year, and few retailers are likely to take many chances at this point.

The advice from industry analyst Monroe Greenstein of the investment firm Bear, Stearns & Co., is to shop early.

"If consumers want to buy popular items, they better not wait," he said.

The most popular items this season are expected to include designer and cashmere sweaters, leather goods and compact disk players and for children, Nintendo video games and Barbie dolls.

"It is still too early to get a true reading on whether this is going to be a nail-biting Christmas. We never anticipated Christmas 1988 to be a barn-burner Christmas," said Mike Wellman, marketing vice president for K mart Corp. in Troy, Mich.

"There are more people working, the ~~election~~ is behind us, and people seem to be reasonably, if not optimistic, comfortable with the shape of the economy."

K mart, with thousands of discount stores, book shops and drugstores, expects holiday sales to run about 6 percent ahead of last year — in the range of most optimistic forecasts.

For K mart, and other big retailers, the decisions that may make or break Christmas 1988 were made as long as 16 months ago.

"We have been playing the whole inventory thing conservatively all year long and that's continued right into Christmas," Wellman said.

Promotions are expected to help generate traffic.

While the day after Thanksgiving is the traditional start of the season, many stores have had their decorations up for weeks. At Saks Fifth Avenue's flagship store in Manhattan, for instance, the evergreens went up right after Halloween.

To get Chicago shoppers in the spirit, Marshall Field's hired carolers and minstrels to roam its stores and installed a Christmas tree in one location that it calls "the tallest indoor handmade-ornament tree in the world."

Some "sale" signs and price markdowns will be popping up around the country, but analysts say many of these promotions also were planned in advance and prices have been adjusted to account for them.

"We continue to operate in a very competitive environment, and we see some caution on the part of the consumer," said Kathy Blackburn of Mervyn's, a Hayward, Calif.-based department store chain.

Sears, Roebuck & Co., the nation's largest retailer, plans to give shoppers a taste of the new low prices that are part of its recently announced restructuring plan.

Most Sears stores will not switch to "everyday low pricing" until next year, but the company will still be touting holiday sale items.

Some retailers say price chopping may be inevitable later in the season.

In a survey conducted last month by the accounting firm Touche Ross & Co., 90 percent of a group of 70 New England retailers said major markdowns would take place earlier or at the same time as last year.

The last couple of weeks have been especially encouraging to some retailers, who noticed a pickup in business immediately after the elections.

"If you had asked me eight weeks ago, I wouldn't have been as optimistic," said Randolph Burnette, division president of J.B. White's Department Stores in Augusta, Ga.

Good Year For Trees

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ASHEVILLE — With the specter of drought foreboding bad times, Christmas tree growers throughout the state are enjoying a favorable season this fall.

Haywood County grower Mike Francis said the growers he knows have sold all their trees. Most have already have been cut and are on the way to distributors, one step away from being bought and placed in living rooms.

Based on wholesale orders, North Carolina Christmas tree producers are expecting an increase of about 10 percent in trees sold, said Bob Garner, executive director of the N.C. Christmas Tree Association.

This summer's drought resulted in a few trees not going to market, said Francis, who is vice president of the association. But he said the greater commercial fallout from the drought will not show up for four or five years, when seedlings that were stunted this summer grow into mature trees.

Video Games, Old Favorites Top List Of Best Seller Toys

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The craze that once fizzled has come back with a happy vengeance.

For the second December in a row, video games continue to head the list of what's hot for the holiday season.

Rick Anguilla, editor of the New York-based trade publication Toy & Hobby World, predicted that Nintendo, the home video game that was launched in late 1986 and soared to the top of last year's list, would capture more than 75 percent of the market share this year. The balance of the home video game sales to Christmas and Hanukkah shoppers is expected to go mostly to entries from Atari and Sega.

"To put things into perspective," Anguilla said, "at its peak a few years ago, the highly popular Cabbage Patch doll did about $600 million in sales — and Nintendo will exceed $1.7 billion in the United States by the end of this year."

Nintendo's basic Action Set costs about $100, and new this year is a Power Set (about $150), which includes a Power Pad on which a player can use his or her body movements to interact with something on the screen, perhaps aerobics or jumping hurdles. Software cartridges for the various brands of video systems are priced between $20 and $40.

Anguilla predicted that there would be a temporary shortage of top-selling software such as Mike Tyson's Punch-Out, Super Mario Brothers II, Double Dragon, The Legend of Zelda, and its sequel Zelda II — The Adventure of Link.

Bush Deficit-Tackling Team Will Have New Look, Budget Approach

By Nancy J. Schwerzler
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — When George Bush sits behind the desk in the Oval Office for the first time in January and begins to draft his game plan to reduce the budget deficit, the teams that will huddle on Capitol Hill to work out the problem will have a new look.

Bush told Republican governors that on his first day as president he would name a team of negotiators to work with Congress on the budget deficit.

The White House team will most likely be led by the new administration's choice for budget troubleshooter, Richard Darman, the designated Office of Management and Budget director. Darman, the former deputy secretary of the Treasury, is no stranger to Capitol Hill and past budget battles.

But some of the Congressional players will be new, other familiar faces have enhanced or shifted their positions of power, and personal and political rivalries could color the deficit debate as much as the red ink of the national debt.

Democrats, who hold solid majority control of both the House and Senate, agree with Bush that curbing the deficit is the top priority of the new administration. And some key Democrats have indicated that they agree — cynically, perhaps — with Bush's "read my lips — no new taxes" campaign pledge.

In the House, Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, has pledged co-operation with the Bush administration on the deficit but notably absent is any offer to accept responsibility for a tax increase — a step that Wright advocated during the final years of the Reagan administration.

In the Senate, Democrats will choose the new Majority Leader in secret balloting November 29. A leading contender, Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., has said that Democrats will not bail out a Bush administration deficit dilemma by proposing tax hikes to fill the gap and that Democrats may force a deficit showdown in late spring when the ceiling on the national debt must be raised to keep the government operating.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, the unsuccessful Democratic vice-presidential nominee who was on the receiving end of the Bush campaign rhetoric, returns to his chairmanship of the Senate Finance Committee that would have to approve any tax increase. Bentsen and some of his committee colleagues, such as Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., have declared tax hikes off limits from the Democrat side and have implied that Bu would have to come begging on l nds and knees to the committee a tax boost became necessary as part of a deficit reduction plan.

On the Republican side, the House GOP is vastly outnumbered by Democrats in that chamber. But a new leadership second-in-command, Rep. Dick Cheney, R-Wyo., a former White House chief of staff in the Ford administration, could be an important player in GOP deficit strategy. He is influential with the "pragmatist" wing of the party represented by Darman and James A. Baker III, the Secretary of State-designate and alter ego to Bush.

In the Senate, the wild card of deficit reduction could be GOP leader Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., the brooding loser to Bush in the GOP presidential primaries and a past maverick on deficit reduction initiatives. In tandem with Democrats, he convinced Ronald Reagan to sign a $98 billion tax increase measure in 1982 — one year after the landmark Reagan tax cut program was enacted — and in 1985 he led an ill-fated deficit revolt with a plan that would have raised taxes and cut domestic programs dramatically.

Dole, who has expressed skepticism about the no-tax school of deficit reduction dogma, will clearly be a player in the budget but it remains to be seen whether he will be playing by an administration game plan or improvising his own.

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., the senior Republican on the Senate budget panel and perhaps the most dedicated deficit-fighter in Congress, has signed up early for the Bush team and endorsed the "no-new-taxes" pledge. But Domenici has frequently advocated tax boosts to curb the deficit — in conjunction with cuts in Social Security and popular domestic programs — and the duration of his conversion to the no-tax camp is uncertain.

If the Bush administration were to drag its feet on deficit cutting steps, Domenici might steer an independent course. His commitment to cutting the deficit is so strong that he once proposed slashing student loan programs — even though he had several children in college at the time who could have been affected.

Both the House and Senate budget committees — usually the chief battlegrounds of the deficit wars — will have new Democratic leaders in the 101st Congress.

Sen. James Sasser of Tennessee, a liberal-to-moderate Democrat, is expected to replace the retiring Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., a moderate who had an extraordinarily close working relationship with Domenici. Sasser has not been considered a leading figure on the panel in the past but he should enjoy support from committee liberals.

In the House, Rep. Leon E. Panetta, D-Calif., a former Republican moderate turned fiscally moderate Democrat, will become the new chairman of the budget panel. He has been in training for the job for years — he served previously on the committee but was barred from seeking the chairmanship by rules limiting membership to six consecutive years.

HOLIDAY GIFT GUIDE 1·9·8·8

Planning For The Holidays? Then Don't Forget The Kids On The List

"Children thawing in front of an open fire" is not an exact line from Mel Torme's 1946 Yuletide standard "The Christmas Song," but maybe it should be.

If you think about it, a traditional Christmas wouldn't be complete without rosy-cheeked children, rushing in from the cold after a long day of winter fun to snuggle by the fire.

Mom and dad thawing little numb noses and frozen fingers is a scene as warming to the heart as it is to the body.

Christmastime is often associated with many such family moments. While it is everyone's favorite time of year, the exhilaration of increased merrymaking on the "home front" can be particularly strenuous for young families with children between the ages of "kindergarten scholar" and "teeny-bopper."

The pressures that parents must deal with in keeping their children entertained during this joyous season are monumental.

Roses Inc., representing America's fresh-cut rose growers, suggest the following activities to lower parents' blood pressure, and to ensure that both parents and children enjoy what should be a relaxed and meaningful time.

Somehow, the happy moments which make Christmas so enchanting wouldn't be as special if we couldn't share the "magic" with others. Holidays are synonymous with reunions and get-togethers with family and friends.

To welcome holiday guests to your home, hang a wreath or swag of Christmas greens with plaid or green bows or ribbons, and candy canes on the front door.

For an extra personalized touch, try adding fresh cut roses and a "treasure" supplied by each family member. The result will be a unique decorative door piece that includes your family's "signature."

Children love being included in grown-up plans! So, be sure to include them on your trip to the flower shop and let them pick out the roses to be used in your home decor. (Remember, if your schedule is a really hectic one, your florist is as near as your telephone and will deliver to your door. Or, you may find fresh roses at your local supermarket and can pick them up as you do your grocery shopping.)

If you are entertaining, let the eldest child supervise setting the dinner table. When plates and silver are arranged, have the "baby of the family" tuck a rose into each napkin at the table.

At the end of the evening, everyone will feel like they have been an important part of the celebration, and each guest can take home a rose as a remembrance of the good time they had.

Brighten every corner of the house by inserting sweetheart roses in tiny, empty, perfume bottles. Sweetheart roses fit perfectly in small hands and, after the roses are prepared, each child can then choose where he or she would like this special holiday decoration to be displayed.

When gathering to decorate the home, remember, roses make any room come alive with red and green holiday hues. Work as a team to lace the staircase banister with a garland of red roses mixed with traditional Christmas greens.

Or, put a red rose in a bud vase by the kitchen sink for Santa's helpers who get "stuck" with the holiday dinner dishes.

Fresh roses are the "ultimate" gift for both teenage and younger children to give. Send the "apple of your eye" to school with red roses in a bud vase or a single rose in a "rose bowl" as a gift for a favorite teacher. (Don't forget: Male teachers like roses, too!)

Take your child along with you to call on a "shut-in" friend who can't go out of town this season. A personal visit means so much more when children accompany you.

Prepare a basket of fruit tied up with a big green ribbon and a Christmas red rose for the child to give. This gift, unlike any other, provides nourishment for the body and the soul.

As their gift to brother, sister, mom or dad, smaller children can easily top off Christmas stockings with a red rose.

Children attending Christmas services can feel like "big people" by laying a rose on the altar as your family's addition to holiday worship.

If you are invited to pay a visit to the neighbors, let the children spread holiday cheer by giving roses to the host or hostess as a gift of thanks in return for the courtesy and kindness shown throughout the year. Perhaps the rose gift would include one rose for each of your family members, or one per child.

Roses are unexpected "treats" for small children who help out with Christmas decorating, baking and gift wrapping. Kids of all ages get a thrill out of receiving roses which they can handle, care for and watch develop through their stages of life.

Your child's first vision on Christmas morning should be bright and cheery, so surprise each youngster that holds a place in your heart with a few roses on his or her night stand.

For your little girl's hair, shape bendable wire into a halo. Wrap with green ribbon and insert red roses with baby's breath to complement her holiday attire. Any little "gentleman" would look dashing with a single sweetheart rose and holly sprig boutonniere.

If your family is posing for a photo to send to faraway friends this year, use red roses and holiday greens for the "crowning" touch. Roses are always in season, and are available when you're ready to say "cheese."

Children and roses both need a little special attention from time to time. Handling and caring for their roses can help build a tender loving care attitude when youngsters are responsible for the rose in their charge.

Here's a few simple tips you can pass on that will help ensure you get the longest life from your roses!

- Any rose that has been out of water long enough for the base end of the stem to dry out will benefit from having an inch or more of the stem end cut off under water with a pair of shears. After making the cut, place the rose in a water-filled container for display.
- Keep your roses out of direct sun and hot drafts.
- If a rose should wilt prematurely, follow the recutting under water procedure above; but, after the cut is made, leave the rose to lay flat in a sink or pan of tepid water. Let it float there for an hour or so, and it will revive. Then, replace the rose in your arrangement.

This Season, Why Not Give Anti-Thief Stereo?

If you're looking to give a car audio system to somebody you love this holiday season, you ought to face the facts. More car stereos are stolen in the United States than any other consumer electronics product.

Aiwa America, a leading car audio manufacturer, has designed an entire line of car audio systems with the hopes of changing the odds—welcome in the age of theft deterrent car audio products.

The new line of Aiwa car audio products incorporates a special theft deterrent cover that closes over the face of the unit. The cover is designed to blend in with the dashboard, concealing it from all who look in.

Aiwa's top-of-the-line CT-X5500 car audio system with AM/FM and auto reverse cassette deck, for example, has a theft deterrent cover that flips down to become the unit's control panel.

All functions are logically laid out on the panel and angled easily within the driver's reach, so the driver can safely control all system functions without taking his eyes off the road.

In addition to the deterrent cover, the CT-X5500 features a removable chassis for quick and easy carry-along convenience.

The driver simply pulls the unit right out of the car's dashboard and locks it in the trunk or carries it along in its custom-fit case. Thieves can't steal what's not there.

Aiwa's CT-X5500 is a full featured audio system with many advanced features normally found in home decks. The 20 watts-per-channel head-unit features an auto reverse tape deck, a digital quartz synthesized tuner, and a 5-band equalizer.

The tape deck features a bi-azimuth auto-adjusting amorphous head for true audiophile performance, music sensor, feather-touch IC logic controls, soft loading and eject, key off standby, feather touch electronic volume control, and Dolby B&C noise reduction.

The tuner section provides 18 user-selectable memory presets, both up and down auto seek tuning, auto scan tuning, local/DX switch, tuner monitor, and Aiwa's Active Tuning Reception Control (ATRC) for improved FM reception in all signal conditions. A CD-in jack and 3-way fader are also provided.

The Aiwa CT-X5500 is available nationwide at a suggested retail price of $450.00.

Fuji's Quick Snap Disposable Camera Makes A Snappy Gift

Looking for a holiday gift that both children and adults will love, yet which costs less than $10? Fuji's new disposable camera, the Quick Snap, is the ideal gift or stocking stuffer for children and families.

It can be used as soon as the wrapper is removed, to capture those precious outdoor scenes, such as building a snowman or the family stroll through the park.

Each Quick Snap gives you 24 snapshots with top quality Fujicolor Super HR 400 35mm film. All you do is point and shoot. There's no film loading or unloading to worry about—it's all done for you!

In fact, the beauty of this remarkable camera is its simplicity. The Quick Snap is lightweight and easy to use in any daylight situation, and so compact that it will even fit in a shirt pocket.

After you've finished the roll, just take the entire package to any store where pictures are made, and you'll get back your 24 high quality prints and negatives.

The Fujicolor Quick Snap is already loaded with the highly acclaimed Fuji Super HR 400 35mm color print film, so it is ready for use anytime you're ready to take pictures.

Simply advance each frame with the Quick Snap's handy thumbwheel and press the button for perfect outdoor pictures in sunlight or on bright, cloudy days, even on the ski slope.

This way, all your family outings will be captured in living color, and you can achieve excellent picture quality even if you're an absolute beginner.

The compact camera is the ideal second camera that can be carried in your pocket or knapsack without a care, for spontaneous picture-taking whenever you wish.

The new Quick Snap is the ideal gift—the perfect camera for the whole family. It's inexpensive, enjoyable and extremely convenient.

In fact, everyone can have one—and it comes in a bright green box for Christmas! Think of it as a member of the family, and next time you have pictures in mind, make sure you take it along.

BEST BET — Snap one of the season's best pictures with the perfect Christmas gift, Fugi's new "Quick Snap."

You Can Top Off Your Gift List With Hot New Item In Kitchen

If you've got college students, VCR fans, barbecue enthusiasts, popcorn lovers or just plain lovers to buy for this holiday season, one of the year's hottest new kitchen gadgets should go at the top of your gift list.

It's the HotTopper melter/dispenser from National Presto Industries, Inc., available in both microwave and electric models.

The HotTopper was developed by Presto to eliminate such common "topping" problems as pools of butter at the bottom of the popcorn bowl and pancakes that are instantly cooled off by a dollop of cold syrup.

It offers a quick and easy alternative to conventional methods of applying butters, syrups and sauces.

The toppings are heated in the unit, then evenly applied to foods using special accessory tips: A sprayer for fine, even coverage; a streamer for heavier applications; and a brush for neat, easy coating. Toppings stay at serving temperature in the unit for up to one hour.

The specially designed HotTopper holds up to a full quarter-pound of butter or margarine. To melt or heat toppings in seconds, the unit is placed in the microwave oven. It can then be taken directly to the table and used to add as much or as little of the topping as desired.

Such dishes as popcorn, pancakes, waffles and corn-on-the-cob get perfect, even coverage, every time.

While the new microwave unit is completely immersible for easy cleaning, there is no need to clean it after each use. You can leave unused toppings in the unit and store it in the refrigerator.

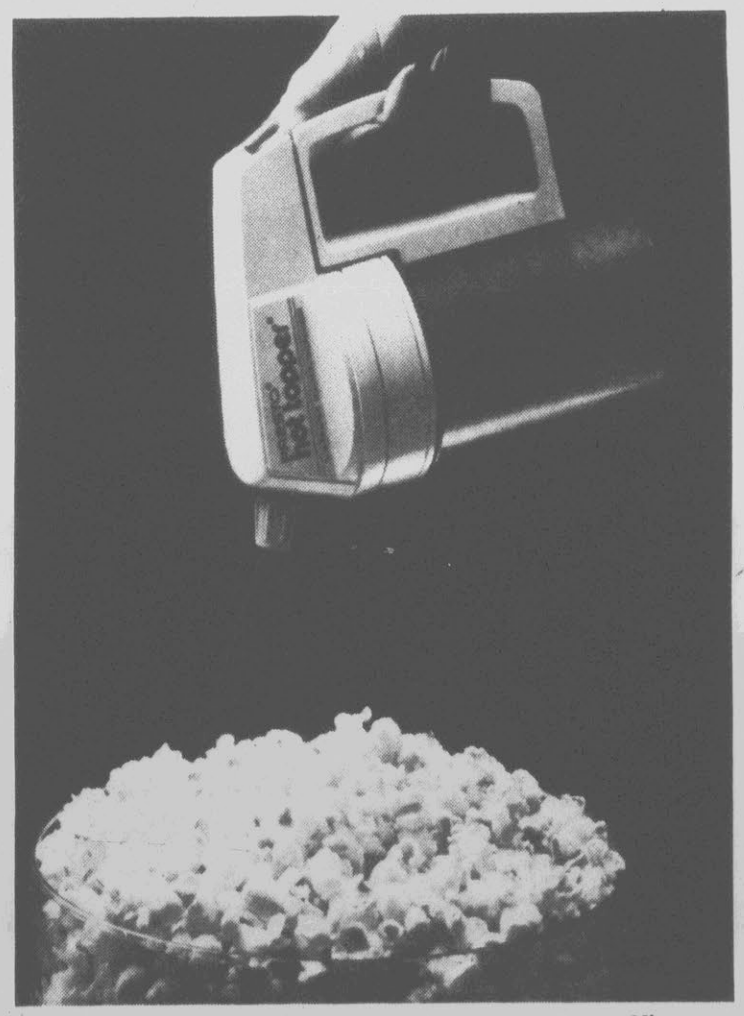
For those folks on your list who don't own a microwave, the HotTopper also is available in an electric model that can be unplugged for cordless use right at the table. Both retail for a suggested price of $29.98.

Adding the HotTopper to your holiday gift list is sure to win you top honors for ingenious gift-giving. To make your gifts even more special, here are a few creative ideas:

• For lovers: Give your favorite couple the makings of some romantic weekend breakfasts—a box of fancy pancake mix, a bottle of pure maple syrup, a Presto HotTopper and a waffle iron.

• For college students: Give a hard-working student an instant study break—a Presto PopcornNow Plus hot air popper, a Presto HotTopper, a large jar of gourmet popcorn, a box of popcorn salt and a set of red plastic bowls.

• For video fans: Help the video fans on your list enjoy their at-home evenings with a VCR care package—a tape of their favorite movie, a jar of gourmet popcorn, a Presto HotTopper and a big, family-sized popcorn serving bowl.



HOT IDEA — One of the season's hottest ideas is the Presto Microwave HotTopper, a new way to add hot toppings to food evenly and easily.

FAMILY GIFT — Why not consider a big gift that the whole family can enjoy this Christmas? This 27-inch Zenith digital TV with Sound by Bose is an ideal way to say "happy holidays" to everyone all year round.

Add A 'New Body' For Christmas

Home-baked holiday treats, sugary Christmas cookies, rich cakes and pies... think about all those calories! Preparation for Christmas parties can be quite hazardous to your figure.

So, when dropping hints about what you'd like for Christmas, set your sights on a health club membership, athletic footwear and fun, fitness fashions to help get you back into shape for the New Year.

Athletic footwear and clothing will help you look like a pro and feel like one too.

Fleece warm-up suits, colorful Lycra spandex one and two-piece bodysuits and, of course, athletic shoes are the most popular holiday gift items.

"Our stores are flooded with men buying fashionable women's warm-ups and fitness clothes as gifts for their wives, girlfriends, mothers, sisters, etc.," said Steven Gerke, an apparel buyer for Lady Foot Locker, America's leading women's athletic footwear/apparel retailer.

Gerke added the following fitness gift-buying suggestions from Lady Foot Locker:

• For the gym as well as for regular casual wear, warm-up suits are always useful items. Fleece and nylon are two of the most popular materials for warm-ups this season.

Pastel colors such as pink, light blue and mint green are the most popular colors for warm-ups. Approximately $55-70.

• More than 50 million people today walk for exercise. Thus, walking shoes, designed to maximize performance and comfort, make excellent gifts. Approximately $40-75.

• Trimmed in a variety of colors, tennis and aerobic shoes, in canvas and leather, are extremely popular gift-giving items at holiday time. Approximately $35-75.

• For terrific stocking stuffers at the most affordable prices: Pedometers, about $13-25, are ideal for tracking your mileage during your walk or run; colorful wrist and ankle weights, about $17, enhance exercise performance.

SHAPELY — You can work your body to stay in shape. Gifts like leather walking shoes, Lycra spandex bodysuits and fleece warmup suits from Lady Foot Locker will make every woman look and feel like a fitness pro.

Digital TV Is Family Gift

Looking for that one big gift that the whole family can enjoy for many Christmases to come?

Digital television is the answer, according to Bruce Huber, vice president of marketing at Zenith.

"New digital electronics put today's most advanced TVs at the forefront of television technology," Huber said. "Digital sets produce the sharpest, most brilliant TV pictures and strikingly realistic stereo sound."

Features such as remote control, on-screen menus and inset pictures also make these TVs highly practical and easy to use.

But with so many features out there, how do you select the digital TV that makes just the right gift?

Huber offered this shopping list of features to consider when looking for a new digital TV:

One major manufacturer of new digital TVs on the market, this holiday season, offers a picture-in-picture feature that even makes it possible to watch four TV channels at once.

"With our triple flashback feature, the sports enthusiast or channel-changing youngster can sample and freeze segments from three TV channels in three separate insets — all by remote control," Huber said.

• On-screen menu displays — The most advanced digital TVs offer new on-screen "menus" that make it easier than ever to adjust all TV controls and operate the special features by remote control.

"For example," Huber said, "a viewer can adjust color, picture, bass, treble, time set and sleep timer, and select from various audio and video sources, all by remote control, using the new menu system."

• Automatic demonstration — Some new digital TVs even offer a built-in demonstration that teaches the viewer how to use the on-screen menus. The five-minute lesson highlights each menu on Zenith digital TVs, and gives easy-to-follow instructions and explanations.

• Other features — Huber said other new features to look for include automatic channel programming that searches for "active" broadcast or cable channels, and saves them in memory for simple up/down channel scanning.

Some digital TVs offer built-in decoding for teletext, a service that lets you read the TV screen for up-to-date news and information. These sets also decode closed captions for the hearing impaired (when broadcast in a teletext format).

"For the best performance possible, choose a TV with digital circuitry that processes audio as well as video," Huber said. "For a clearer, sharper picture, look for features such as digital video filtering, digital broadband comb filtering and wide-band peaking."

Digital TVs available this Christmas range from 20-inch table model TVs (for under $700) to 46-inch projection TVs for more than $3,000.

"The main thing to consider when shopping for a digital TV is everything," Huber said. "It's important to compare all the features and performance before choosing the model that's right for you."

Pick Flowers for Christmastime Giving

Christmas gift ideas are blossoming this year — literally. Everything's coming up roses, or chrysanthemums, or beautiful bouquets of spring-like blooms, certain to give the spirits a lift no matter how wintry it seems outside.

There's a logical, even historic precedent for the emphasis on a flowery holiday. From Saturnalia to Christmas, the great festivals of the year traditionally have fallen at the time of the winter solstice, when the orbiting earth begins its long swing back toward summer and, very gradually, the days grow longer once again.

What could be a more appropriate symbol than flowers for the time of increasing sun and growing hope?

Of course, you can pick up a poinsettia, or give someone special a single long-stemmed rose in a lovely crystal vase. But there are other ways to send flowers.

The fashion world joins the trend with tempting gift ideas — a bright scarf in a stylized floral pattern, a romantic Liberty print blouse, or an exquisite silk flower that she can wear on shoulder, at neckline or, more dramatically, at waistline or wrist.

For the home-lover, if you're feeling truly extravagant, look for a flowered comforter to bring spring to the bedroom all year round. Another welcome gift might be linens in a charming floral pattern, or perhaps a set of guest towels with embroidered blossoms.

Perfume, of course, classically captures the scent of myriads of rare blooms, yet there are other great shopping ideas at the cosmetic counter. Neutrogena, for instance, has a suggestion that will fit everyone on your list from teenager to grandmother.

It's a skin care duo in a see-through box, holding one-ounce bottles of Liquid Neutrogena Facial Cleansing Formula and Neutrogena Moisture, a marvelous new, non-comedogenic moisturizing lotion, plus a double-picture frame for favorite photographs, beautifully fashioned in a cheerful chintz.

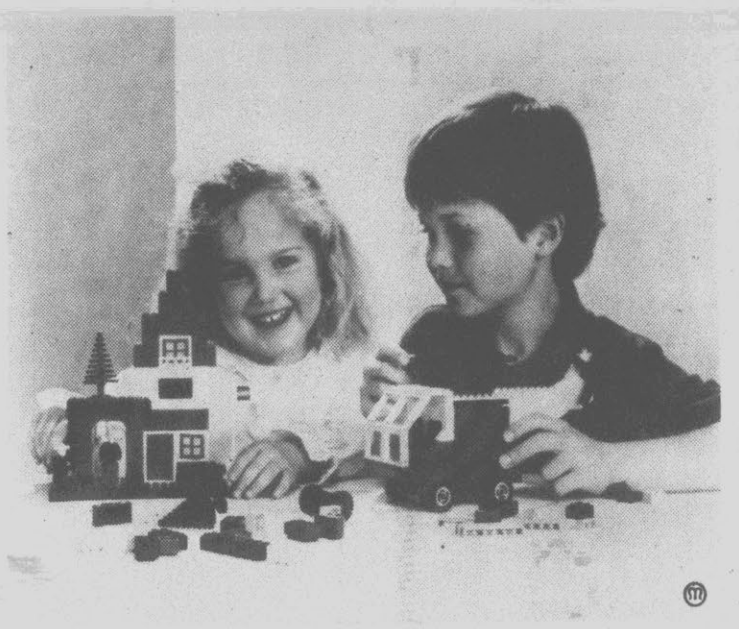
Development Experts Think Basic Toys Can Help Build Imagination



'BACK TO BASICS' — Children can enjoy getting "back to basics" as they build their imaginations along with their toys. The colorful Lego bricks snap together easily and encourage both childrent o touch and build whatever they want to.

Michel de Montaigne, a Renaissance writer and perhaps the earliest expert on toys and child's play, once said, "Children's playing should be deemed as their most serious actions."

Today, experts on child development and creative thinking agree, and urge parents this holiday season to buy basic toys that build a child's imagination and creativity—not just the toy chest.

By knowing just what creativity is, it becomes much easier to encourage it in children. Says Fidel Maynard, author of many books on child development and family life, "Creativity is fresh, spontaneous, inventive, curious and free—and every child has these tendencies."

Continues Maynard, "Creativity is the impulse to self-expression that we all have. The key to creative spirit is observation—teaching children to look and see."

Building things with construction toys like Lego® bricks, she suggests, encourages children to notice the details of what they want to build.

Susan Striker, art educator and founder of an art studio in New York City for children, suggests that creativity starts at home. Striker says that many creative things can happen in your own home without too much effort or preparation. You just need a few basic elements for creative play like drawing materials and building materials.

Striker suggests that an ongoing construction made of Lego bricks, for example, can grow to its natural limits in the basement, and give kids the time and space to create—simply for the sake of creating. She adds that building bricks encourage a child to touch and try building in many different and imaginative ways.

Not only is it necessary that a child's toys encourage creative play, but they also should encourage creative thinking, says Edward DeBono, director of the Center for the Study of Thinking at Cambridge, England.

Says DeBono, "In order to develop creative thinking, we need some medium which we can play around with in our own thinking. Blocks or things like Lego bricks are indeed very useful in helping a child to develop creative thinking—in several ways."

DeBono explains that creative thinking is enhanced by sheer imitation, as the child closely examines the building instructions, and carefully counts the holes on the bricks. "Although this is an imitative sort of thinking, it is important as a discipline."

Problem solving also plays a major role in the development of a child's creative thinking. Says DeBono, "The child may know what he or she wants to achieve, whether it is a crane, or a boat, or a house, and sets about achieving this, and in doing so learns some important principles of construction."

Once creating with an imaginative toy begins, a child is encouraged to improve or alter it as he or she goes along, perhaps finding a simpler way to accomplish a particular effect like a gear in a toy windmill. Improvement and modification are among the great insights of thinking, according to DeBono.

Perhaps after a little moving around of the bricks, the child, not quite knowing what he or she will do, suddenly sees that a certain idea suggests itself and the creation takes a turn toward its completed state.

Explains DeBono, "This sort of creative exploration is an extremely important part of thinking in that it teaches us how to explore, it teaches us how to be curious, it teaches us how to build on."

Why Not Give Gifts Of Luxury?

Buying a gift for the sophisticated person who has everything can be difficult for even the most creative shopper. When giving the best is the least you can do, gifts of luxury are the best choice.

Package some sunshine from exotic foreign lands with a gift of travel, or offer a taste treat to titillate the palate.

Cunard Line "gift wraps" some of the world's most luxurious cruises with a convenient "Gift of Cruising" certificate.

Regally presented in a gold-embossed box with a royal blue velvet drawstring pouch, the "Gift of Cruising" includes an inscribed parchment certificate, solid brass luggage tags, facsimile cruise tickets and tempting travel literature.

Available in amounts of $1,000 or more, the gift certificate can be applied to any cruise on any ship in Cunard's top-rated fleet, including the ultra-deluxe Queen Elizabeth 2, Sagafjord, Vistafjord, Sea Goddess I and II, and the more informal Cunard Countess and Cunard Princess.

Recipients have a choice of ship and cruise from itineraries that cover six continents and the seven seas.

Trend watchers in major cities agree that the martini tops the list of preferred drinks for urban sophisticates. But today's martini is being made with vodka, not gin.

In fact, according to bartenders of the finest restaurants and most exclusive nightclubs across the country, two out of every three martinis are made with vodka.

This year, Smirnoff vodka is offering the perfect gift of luxury for the martini-lovers on your gift list—the Smirnoff Silver Martini Gift Set.

Offered by participating retailers during the holiday season, the holiday-themed gift box includes a collector's bottle of Smirnoff Silver, a premium 90-proof vodka, and two elegant, long-stemmed martini glasses. Retailing for about $10.00, this package makes a great gift to pick up for the host on your way to holiday parties.

With more than one in 10 Americans proclaiming themselves as chocolate-lovers, there's sure to be at least one special person on your shopping list deserving of Truffles Liqueur du Chocolat, a creamy chocolate liqueur for adults.

The ultimate chocolate indulgence, Truffles may be enjoyed alone, or as an affer-dinner drink to sip by the fire, or used in a variety of sinfully rich dessert and drink recipes to serve your guests.

Truffles is packaged in an elegant amber bottle perfect for gift giving. Or, for a more elaborate gift, wrap a bottle of Truffles in a large box with a set of four crystal cordial glasses. It is available in three sizes—1 liter, 750 ml and 375 ml.

For a booklet of Truffles recipes, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Truffles Recipe Offer, % Heublein, P.O. Box 388, Farmington, CT 06034-0388.

Imagination Will Add Flair To Holiday Entertaining

From the room's decorations, to the refreshments you serve, to the games you provide for family and friends, a little imagination and planning can add a new flair to this holiday's home entertaining.

The Sewing Fashion Council suggests turning your living room into a winter wonderland with stuffed door wreaths, quilted Christmas pillows and felt tree skirts.

Also, create Christmas stockings using fabrics that complement your living room, or stick with traditional red and green.

Sew the basic stockings, and let the children add the finishing touches with glitter, lace, jewel heads and buttons in the shape of Santas, wreaths, snowmen or Christmas trees.

A particularly favorite refreshment with adults this year is the new line of flavored vodkas from Stolichnaya, the only exclusively imported Russian vodkas.

The popularity of Stoli's Limonnaya, incorporating the aromatics of fresh lemon peels, has skyrocketed since its introduction, while the peppery Pertsovka, a key in creating the perfect Bloody Mary and the "Cajun Martini," has attracted a strong and growing following.

To make the "Cajun Martini," substitute Pertsovka for the gin or vodka and garnish with a hot okra pickle. The Pertsovka and other Stolichnaya vodkas are priced at about $12.99.

With friends and relatives dropping by during the holidays, it's a good idea to keep plenty of beer—America's favorite alcoholic beverage—on hand. Consumers are drinking less alcohol, opting for quality over quantity.

Fine imported brews like classic Guinness Stout, crisp Harp lager and distinctive Bass ale offer a variety of tastes to suit the most discriminating beer drinker. And for the non-drinker, tasty non-alcoholic brews like Kaliber are holiday party essentials.

The holidays also present a frequent need to whip up dishes at a moment's notice. For people who love to cook and bake, Sharp's new mid-sized convection microwave oven with a new space-saving design offers the "best of both worlds"—the speed of microwave cooking with roasting, broiling and baking capabilities. At a suggested $429 retail price, the unit makes a perfect family gift for the house.

Entertaining at the holiday season also means games. A roomful of people will enjoy playing this year's top selling adult board game, Pictionary, the game of quick draw.

Pictionary, from the Games Gang, plays like charades, only on paper—players have 60 seconds to frantically sketch clues so teammates can guess one of 2,500 words. Words include everything from "mistletoe" to "snow tire." It's priced at about $30.

Part of the fun in holiday entertaining is video taping the festivities. This year, that means putting that new camcorder to work.

And for those first-time camcorder users, Maxell has put together the perfect Camcorder Starter Kit, which includes everything a beginner will need: A Maxell Gold VHS-C or 8mm videocassette, a nicad rechargeable battery pack and a carrying case. It also includes an instruction book for beginners to help make home recording easy and simple. Suggested retail price, $79.95.

Blank Maxell audio and video tapes also make ideal stocking stuffers. And for all those battery-powered gifts, a collection of Maxell batteries in all sizes would be most welcome when gifts are unwrapped.

Planning Ahead Helps Cut Your Time For Shopping

Christmas shopping often requires the stamina of an Olympic athlete. For weeks before the big holiday, gift-givers compete in buying events, including the 50-store dash, the parking space sprint, the salesperson tackle, the grab-the-last-one-left run, the check-out counter hurdle and the return-it relay.

Sound familiar? Just the thought of this annual shopping marathon is enough to make even the most seasoned shopper break into a cold sweat.

But, you don't have to go into training to find gifts that will please the favorite guy on your holiday shopping list.

With a little planning, you can find gifts that will give him a fresh, fashionable look for the New Year—and reduce your shopping to one store.

The Arrow Company, a leading manufacturer of men's dress shirts and sportswear, offers these suggestions to keep your Christmas spirits high:

Send him—and the children—out for a few hours to wherever you send them when you want to be alone.

When the coast is clear, grab a piece of paper and a pen and make a preliminary shopping list with headings for items that need replacing, things to fill in obvious gaps in his wardrobe, and new pieces to give him a fashionable new look.

Add columns for his favorite colors and the colors in which you think he looks best, and a list of his sizes.

Now, head for his closet. Go through what he already owns and fill in your list as much as possible. Be sure to check out his style preferences. For example, do his favorite dress shirts have button-down or spread collars?

Now you're ready to finalize your shopping list.

Check off the things you wish to replace or add to his wardrobe. Then make a note of style choices and several color options for each item, keeping the following tips in mind.

The easiest way to update a business suit is to purchase a shirt of a different color. Even the most conservative guy can add pink, seafoam green or maize to his collection of white and pale blue dress shirts.

Another quick update is to give him a patterned shirt. Newest for the coming season are those with strong two-color stripes or narrow (from 1 to 1½ inch) repeating patterns on a white or pastel background.

Spread collars will be the most fashionable in 1988, and you'll be seeing a lot of solid white collars on contrasting color shirts.

The more fashionable man will be wearing relaxed fit shirts, a silhouette which is slightly larger and looser over all.

Thinking about sportswear? Bold colors like royal blue, red, jade, gold and purple will lead the way, followed closely by pastel combinations like pink and lavender.

Sportswear styles are oversized and comfortable. Rugby or henley collar shirts in bright solids or bold stripings will please just about any guy.

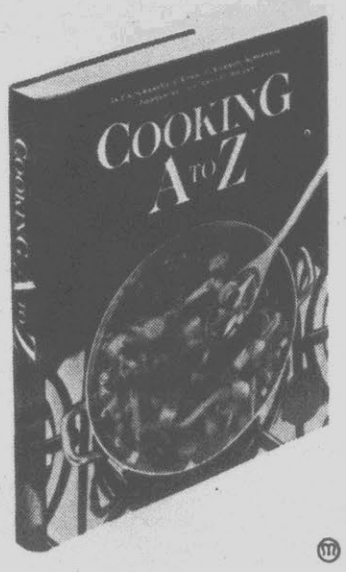
Sweaters, in either solid colors or the latest contemporary mixed patterns will really spice up his wardrobe.

For a final touch of newness, think about adding a shirt in one of the new fabric finishes. Add to your list a shirt of chambray, flannel, corduroy or one of the new garment-washed shirts that have the look and feel of being comfortably worn.

Be flexible. Give yourself several alternative selections for each item. Then, when you begin shopping, you won't have to run all over town to find something in one exact style or color.

If you've planned completely and flexibly, you should be able to do all your shopping for him in one session in one store.

LOOKING GREAT — 'Tis the night before Christmas and, all through the house, the guys look great. Bib brother wears a jewletone and black argyle sweater over a bright turtleneck, and little brother is in a brightly striped black and gray marled knit sweater, both from Arrow Brigade for Boys. Dad's Arrow Criterion black and jeweltone marled knit sweater is worn over a bright plaid Criterion button-down shirt.



ULTIMATE GIFT — The reference volumne, "Cooking, A to Z," is the ultimate holiday gift for just about anyone.

Book Gives 'Secret Code' For Kitchens

Everyone has enjoyed an item for which the chef wouldn't divulge the recipe. The new California Culinary Academy reference volume, Cooking A to Z, will help you "break the secret code" on recipes.

For instance, if you're able to identify some of the ingredients, you can look them up in the book to find out how they are used, then find information and references to the type of dish you tasted, and recreate the recipe.

In time for holiday gift giving, Cooking A to Z is a full-color, hardbound book that is a valuable resource for everyone who cooks and anyone who loves food.

It is an encyclopedia of food preparation with terms, techniques, ingredients and equipment in one easy-to-read volume. It's a book no kitchen should be without.

Editor Jane Horn's goal with this book is to remove the mystique that surrounds cooking and encourage creativity. The alphabetical listings make it easy to learn about new recipes, ingredients and cooking techniques, making the book virtually a one-of-a-kind culinary resource.

Cooking A to Z is the first hardbound volume in the award-winning California Culinary Academy cookbook series, published by Ortho Information Services. It is available in bookstores nationwide for $32.95.

For more information, or the name of a store near you, contact: California Culinary Academy Cookbooks, Ortho Information Services, P.O. Box 5047, San Ramon, CA 94583; (415) 842-5537.

Toaster Adds To Your Meals All Year Round

Holiday breakfasts are special times for the family to gather and enjoy good cheer. This year, Christmas breakfast can include toasted bagels, English muffins and other "wide" breads that don't fit in ordinary toasters.

In addition to two regular width slots, the new Toaster's Choice toaster from Toastmaster has an extra 1½" slot (the widest on the market) for simultaneous preparation of a whole bagel or English muffin along with toast.

The wide slot is self-adjusting to hold foods upright for even toasting. It has its own electronic control for precise crispness of toasted items; items can be toasted for up to six minutes.

The Toaster's Choice wide-slot toaster is available at Sears. Manufacturer's suggested list price is $61.95.

TOAST IS READY — For toasting bagels, English muffins and pastries as well as bread, the Toaster's Choice wide-slot toaster from Toastmaster features the widest slot on the market. Its timing can be controlled separately from the two regular width slots.

Home Videos Can Capture Holidays

This season, holiday entertainment can be much more than building snowmen on the front lawn, a sleigh ride in the country, or singing Christmas carols around a roaring fire.

With the proliferation of low-cost home video equipment, special holiday moments like these can be captured in "video Christmas cards" and home movies like never before.

If during this season to be jolly, your plans include dusting off the camcorder and filming away, consider this: What better way to capture the holiday cheer than with a personalized video fully-equipped with cartoon-like animation, 3-D graphics, TV-style special effects and sophisticated fades and wipes.

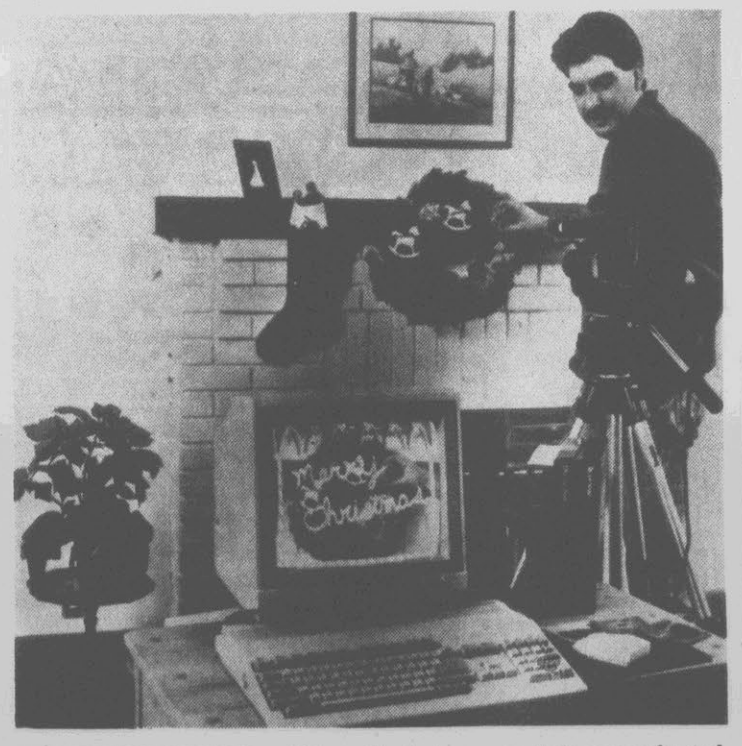
Sound more like a Hollywood production? Too complicated for you? Actually, the answer is yes and no. Thanks to the emergence of easy-to-use personal computers like the Commodore Amiga 500, and the popularity of camcorders and VCRs, home videos can have the look and feel of Hollywood productions that are not complicated to produce.

The powerful and creative Amiga can help transform normal holiday video footage into personalized works of art, designed to help family memories live on even when they become those of Christmas past.

Add to your video animated images of Santa coming down the chimney and "paint" extra ornaments on the tree as Bing Crosby croons "White Christmas," all while your wide-eyed children tear into their holiday treasures.

Make this holiday season one you'll remember for a long time. Turn that ordinary, run-of-the-mill video footage into a personalized memento.

With a little imagination and the Commodore Amiga, you can create a lasting entertainment treasure for family and friends to cherish—during the 12 days of Christmas and beyond.



DESKTOP HOLLYWOOD — Video enthusiasts can use their camcorder and Commodore Amiga computer to transform ordinary home movies into Hollywood productions. Cartoon-like animation, TV-style special effects and titling can be used to create "Video Christmas Cards" and holiday videos that rival those of expensive production facilities.

ROMANTIC FRAGRANCE — The romantic Chloe fragrance is a gift of luxury that always delights, especially at holiday time.

Gifts Of Fragrance Are Always Welcome

A gift of true luxury never fails to give great pleasure, to make a lasting impression. An often unexpected indulgence, it captivates, pampers and seduces the senses.

Throughout the ages, the most sensual, most pleasurable of all gifts of luxury has been that of fragrance. The Queen of Sheba took gifts of fragrance to King Solomon when she visited him in 800 B.C.

Indeed, so highly valued was fragrance, that thieves in King Tut's tomb stole the fragrant oils but left the many objects of gold.

Today the allure and the mystery of fragrance continues in the four classic fragrances from Parfums Lagerfeld. For her: The sublimely romantic floral notes of Chloe, and the smoldering exotic scent of KL. For him: The masculine woodsy richness of Lagerfeld, and the sensory adventure of KL Homme for the man who lives on the edge.

This Christmas, giving a gift of luxury has never been more effortless, more highly individualized. All the Parfums Lagerfeld fragrances come specially wrapped.

Outwardly, Chloe delights the eye with a motif of unfurling satin ribbons, while KL seduces with an abstract fan design.

Lagerfeld is tucked inside handsomely marbleized black and camel paper, and KL Homme captures its excitement in a mist of granite gray and blue with flashes of gold.

Charm her with private pleasures for the bath and the boudoir. Chloe's peach-colored dusting powder luxuriates in a shimmering frosted box with the signature embossed calla lily, and is paired with a sensuous spray of eau de toilette.

Indulge her with the sybaritic experience of KL's silken body creme and eau de toilette, adorned with its seductive symbol—the fan.

Make certain his days and nights are filled with pleasure. Give him the Lagerfeld Natural Elements: A splash of cologne, soap, marble soap dish, and marble-handled razor and toothbrush.

Unleash his love of adventure with KL Homme Essentials: A virile splash of eau de toilette, and the invigorating after-shave baume.

The luxury of the ages, the excitement and sensuality of today, is waiting at Parfums Lagerfeld this Christmas. Make it hers, make it his!

New Jewelry Gives Changes In Fashion

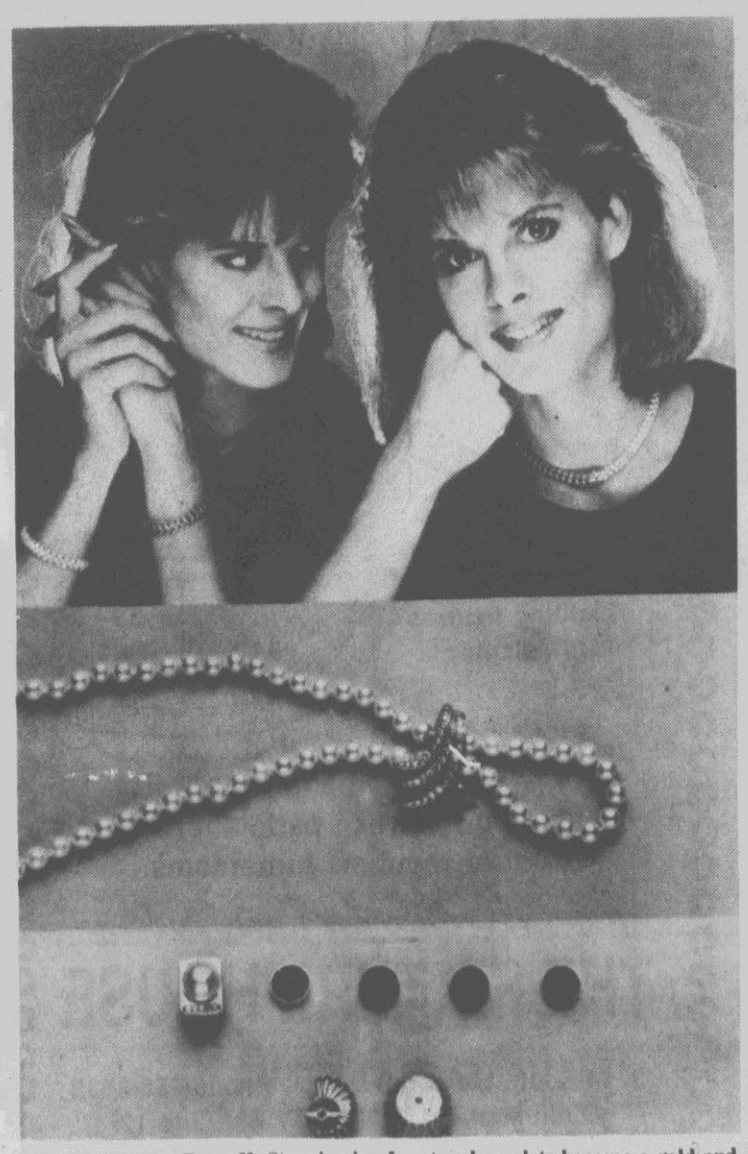
Every woman enjoys adding a new piece of jewelry to her collection and, when that item also serves to give greater versatility to her jewelry wardrobe, it's even more delightful, says Kae McCulloch, fashion consultant to the Jewelry Industry Council.

That's why new jewelry called 'enhancers' or 'add-ons' make excellent holiday gifts, she reports.

"A simple strand of pearls can become a handsome pendant, and two bracelets can join together to create an arresting necklace," she points out.

A case in point: One such set of bracelets features one bracelet in simple gold links, while the other is a single strand of matched diamonds. When they are joined together, the diamond part worn in front, they are perfect for evening wear.

What looks like a simple pin becomes a pendant, to be worn on a strand of pearls or chain. Or you may choose to use it to fasten together a long strand of pearls for a different look. Pin the pearls to one side for a swag effect.



VERSATILE — From H. Stepphenjay Inc, two bracelets become a gold and diamond necklace. Change a string of pearls with an enhancer from Three H. Jewelry Ltd. Steven Lagos creates five pairs of errings, using one gold setting and five different gemstones.

Learn To Play Guitar By Gift Video Package

Is there a budding Elvis or Dolly Parton in your home? Guitars are popular gifts, but sometimes with mixed results. Lessons are expensive, and it's not so easy to pick up chords and strums from the radio.

Now a two-hour videotape will help ensure that a gift guitar will not just be plinked experimentally for a few weeks and then stuck in the back of a closet.

"V.I.P. GUITAR—Essentials Made Easy" will help even beginners master the skills of guitar playing. Within weeks, students can start to take over the guitar part in a half-hour concert at the end of the tape.

Presented like a cabaret show—taped before a live audience—this concert features a professional band and guest artists. The guitar part has been faded out so students can use their new skills to "jam" with the pros.

The unique program has been hailed by the critics. Downbeat said it is "Highly Recommended." Guitar Player praised the tape's "excellent use of the video medium." Home Viewer said the "presentation is well thought-out, making excellent use of split screens and graphics to keep things clear."

Library Journal also praised the tape as "Highly Recommended" and added that "video is a natural medium for instruction in musical instruments and 'V.I.P. GUITAR' exploits it fully." Frets magazine called the program, "an excellent beginning guitar instruction course" with a "relaxed, thorough, good-humored approach."

For complete details on what the two-hour tape covers and for ordering information, call toll-free: 800-862-8900, extension 2000, or write: Guitar Tape, Dept. MM, Video Instructional Programs, Inc., 521 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10175.

The tape includes six lessons which cover all the basic chords and variations and dozens of strumming patterns which will enable students to play along with almost any song.

The lessons incorporate the use of the VCR's pause and rewind controls. In this way, students are encouraged to try different fingerings and strums and to "interact" with the two teachers on the tape. When used like this, each lesson runs 30 or 40 minutes, just like a private lesson.

But each lesson covers far more material than a private lesson would. Guitar teachers estimate that it would take three or four times as many private lessons to go over the same ground the tape does.

By using two teachers—John Pell and Marty Crum, both well-known Nashville studio artists, as well as experienced teachers—"V.I.P. GUITAR" constantly demonstrates different approaches to playing and it encourages students to find and develop their own individual styles. "We want you making music, not mimicking music," is a theme the teachers stress throughout the tape.

Everything is taught in an easy-to-grasp manner with lots of diagrams. Knowing how to read music is not required. All the chords and strums are taught in the context of learning to play songs. There are no boring scales and exercises.

Accompanying the tape is a 60-page booklet that has an index keyed to a running counter that appears in one corner of the screen. In this way, students can locate any song or subject immediately. The booklet also includes a glossary of important terms and other interesting information.

All the lessons and songs lead up to that exciting concert at the end. It is something that students can return to, time and time again, long after they have mastered all the lessons on the tape. This gives "V.I.P. GUITAR—Essentials Made Easy" an entertainment value that never ends.

STOCKING STUFFER — Affordable "multibrand" remote controls make wonderful stocking stuffers for those persons who have everything. This personal control center from Zenith operates more than 30 color TV brands, about 30 VCR brands and eight cable converters.

DAZZLING — Angora in two and three piece outfits like these are among the hottest gifts this Christmas. These outfits are most elegantly topped with costume jewlery from Susie's and dressy leather pumps from Kinney shoes.

Western Boots, Oldtime Classics Are Fashionable

When it comes to fashion, the past is often treated like the sentiment at a New Year's Eve party—"out with the old and in with the new."

This year, why not select fashion gifts for the holidays that have proven their timeless appeal as classic wardrobe staples?

A current fashion item that reflects a rich history is the authentic Western boot, especially perfect for gift-giving in cold winter months.

Despite more than 450 years of history, Western boots are remarkable for the fact that very little has changed in their design.

Nearly every feature originated for a practical reason for the working cowboy—the toe was narrow to fit a stirrup, the top was loose for easy removal in a dangerous tangle, stitching helped keep the boot tops from drooping, and the underslung heel could dig into the ground when wrestling steer.

Although the original design and construction of Western boots haven't changed much over the years, what has changed is the variety of colors, styles and exotic skins to suit every taste, whether conservative or trendy.

According to the Western Boot Council of America, the hottest exotic skin right now is snake in natural tones and bold colors such as red; ostrich, elephant skin and genuine elk also are popular looks for 1988.

The Council is quick to point out that none of the skins used on Western boots comes from endangered animals.

"This year, we see a continuing strength in the Santa Fe look with muted desert colors and romantic pastels," says Bill Bush, of Acme Boot Company. Menswear colors are featuring cordovan and taupes, with black making a strong showing.

In addition to being a fashionable choice, Western boots are excellent footwear for the cold months. According to Dr. John Waller, a New York orthopedic surgeon, "Western boots provide protection from the cold and dampness because their tough leather soles and leather-lined tops protect ankles and feet from icy winter winds.

"And indoors, they're comfortable because the leather 'breathes,' allowing air to circulate around the foot."

Dr. Waller also points out that there is a built-in steel arch support in Western boots, which is important in winter when feet take so much abuse.

TIME ZONES — Now he can have the xact time in two, three, even five different places at once. Watches are available from Breitling, Tourneau, Seiko and Vacheron & Constantin.

For '88, Deck The Halls With Best-Selling Angora

What are soft and furry, are available in a paletteful of colors, and are among the hottest-selling gift items for women at Christmas? Angora sweaters and sweater outfits, of course!

"We've ordered three times as many angora sweaters and outfits this year," said Bob Walling, vice president, general merchandise manager for Susie's, one of the nation's leading chains of women's fashion boutiques. "We're expecting angora to sell out as fast as it did last year."

The following are the most popular 1987-88 angora colors and styles, cited by Janice Gibney, buying vice president at Susie's.

• The most popular colors for angora this season are cream, peach, pink and black.

• Angora sweaters look best when matched with other fabrics such as velvet pants or wool skirts. "You can dress them up or down. Angora is perfect for both day and evening dressing," Gibney reports.

• Costume jewelry and other accessories make angora look extra special. A simple strand of costume pearls and pearl-studded earrings add to the elegance of angora.

• Mock turtle necklines, cable knit designs and crew necklines with buttons down the back are this year's most popular angora styles.

Susie's, with more than 250 stores across the U.S., offers a broad selection of quality, high-fashion dress and casual apparel and accessories for the contemporary woman.

Bracelet Puts The Focus On The Wrist

This holiday, the fine jewelry focus is on the wrist—and the spotlight shines on the newest trends in bracelet designs that will add more sparkle to this and future holiday celebrations.

Jewelers of America, Inc. (JA), the national organization dedicated to consumer education and information about fine jewelry, suggests you select a bracelet for your loved one, this Christmas/holiday season. What's in store?

• A hot trend that continues to get hotter is the "tennis bracelet"... a circlet of diamonds for the wrist to be worn with your watch, just like Chrissie does!

• Big, bold gold links in dozens of shapes and sizes are available in shiny polished matte or "distressed" finishes.

• Cuffs of varying widths make a strong fashion statement, either in gold or more affordable sterling silver, and are truly striking when accented with colored gemstones or pearls.

• Speaking of colored gemstones, the newest rage is the cabochon cut, that is rounded, not faceted, in a convex shape. Rubies, emeralds and sapphires are particularly "rich" when set with diamond accents in jigsaw puzzle-look geometric settings.

Cabochons in semi-precious stones such as amethyst and garnet are being featured as "tip" stones in the increasingly popular torque style bracelets.

One of the best reasons for selecting a bracelet as a gift is that it looks best when worn in multiples, mixed or matched, so the recipient can never have too many.

CLASSIC FASHIONS — Western boots for holiday gift-giving are available in a variety of styles and skins, from ostrich to pony, for both men and women. Pictured, clockwise from top, are boots by Hondo, Tony Lama, Justin and Dan Post.

New Watches Offer Choice Of Time Zones

Looking for a truly unique gift for that special man in your life? If he commutes to Paris, London or Berlin, has to be in constant touch with farflung factories in Tokyo or Taiwan, or simply finds his business trips cross country take him into different time zones, today's executive needs a watch that will keep him apprised of local time in selected areas, says the Jewelry Industry Council, making the new multi-time zone watches a gift he'll treasure.

Two-zone and more time watches are not so much a luxury as a necessity in a world that grows smaller, both distance-wise and business-wise, each day.

The businessman will find convenience in a watch that lets him know, by just a glance at his wrist, whether his factory in South America is starting its day, or if his family on the West Coast is awaiting his evening call.

There are many handsome stylings in multi-zone watches for holiday gift-giving. Some show analog and digital readouts. Some feature twin dials side by side.

There's even a flip-side watch, with dials on each side of its case. One watch features not two or three but five time zones on its dial.

These quartz beauties are extremely accurate and beautifully designed as handsome accessories to a man's wardrobe.

While watches have long incorporated such other functions as measuring fractions of a second; calculating speed, distance and altitude; and even phases of the moon, the two or more time zone watch is fast gaining in popularity as trade and commerce make it a small world.

For the world-traveler or important executive with international ties, these new beauties are efficient, and require no attention as new batteries power them for from two to five years.

Victorian Grace, Romance Are Recreated With Timeless Gifts

Many of our most beloved Yuletide traditions—from the Christmas tree, which Queen Victoria's consort, Prince Albert, introduced to England from his native Germany in the 1840s, to the custom of sending Christmas cards—are steeped in the grace, beauty and romance of 19th century England.

The lavishness of the era, no less than its lingering love of sentiment, has struck a responsive chord in late 20th century America.

One of the most enduring symbols of Victorian times is the heart, which seems uniquely to symbolize the loveliness and gentleness of bygone days.

No wonder, then, that Gorham has chosen to recreate, as the first ornament in the company's archive collectible series, a Victorian Heart in heirloom quality sterling silver.

Sensitively handcrafted by artisans, the 1988 Victorian Heart, copied from an authentic period design, will be treasured as a lasting memento of Christmas, 1988, as well as a symbol of the Christmas spirit, the ultimate embodiment of loving and giving.

Also drawn from Gorham's extensive design archives is the fluid and graceful poppy motif, which adorns Gorham's collection of Covent Garden accessories, whose blend of beauty and utility makes them particularly cherished Christmas gifts.

Reflecting the natural grace of Art Nouveau, a decorative style which began to gain popularity as the Victorian period drew to its close, the Covent Garden design combines stylized leaves and flowers within a frame of open scrollwork. It was recreated from an 1890s original, and is as elegant as yesterday and as modern as tomorrow.

Choose from rectangular box, letter opener and letter holder in silverplate and onyx polymer or, for a truly spectacular gift for a very special someone, wrap all three up together to be opened on Christmas morn.

Another antique motif, this one drawing inspiration from classical times, is the Melody key chain from Gorham. An ideal gift for the music-lover on your list, the sterling key chain depicts a woman in flowing Greek robes playing the lyre, within a beaded oval framework. This graceful design is timeless in the most important sense of the word.

So, for Christmas, 1988, think first of bestowing presents with a sense of the past, continuing beloved traditions and, perhaps, starting some new ones, with heirloom-quality ornaments and decorative accessories from Gorham that will be treasured for years to come.

HEARTS AND FLOWERS — Reminiscent of an earlier, gentler time, these elegant gifts from Gorham feature antique designs with timeless appeal. The heirloom-quality sterling silver Victorian Heart is the first in Gorham's archive collectible series. A stylized poppy design is the dominant motif of the Covent Garden desk accesories collection of rectangular box, letter opener and letter holder. The sterling Melody key chain would be the perfect gift for the music-lover.

Affordable Toys, Innovative And Classic, Are Long On Fun

Americans spend more than $12.5 billion a year on toys, with $7.5 billion of this spent during the holiday season alone. What most consumers want are quality toys that offer good value at a reasonable cost.

This year, the holiday season will be even more exciting with the choice of both classic toys and innovative, new toys.

Listed below are several affordable gift-giving suggestions—all of these toys are $10 or less—and will provide children with countless hours of fun for an enjoyable holiday season.

• Maxie—There's no snow, only sunshine and sand with this new fashion doll. Makin' Waves Maxie, sporting a beach theme, comes with a bathing suit and fashionable hair that little girls love to style.

• Cops—Boys can imagine it's Christmas in the 21st century with this new line of action figures and vehicles that include special cap-firing accessories.

• Fazz—Spruce up a holiday outfit or play dress-up with Fazz—a creative combination of jewelry and cosmetics, including Pink Fizz lip gloss, Purple Pazzion eye shadow, Peach Pizzazz blush and more. Compacts attach with a special Z-clip mechanism to the colorful jewelry accessories such as necklaces, bracelets, string ties, hair and banana clips.

• Now You're Cooking—Children can be festive, this holiday season, when they create delicious holiday desserts and Christmas puddings with Dreamy Delights. Dreamy Delights is one of four sets in this new collection of microwaveable cookware for children.

• G.I. Joe—Christmas for the past 24 years has included excitement from little boys over this favorite action figure line. This year, collect all six G.I. Joe Battle Force 2000 combat units and create two spectacular vehicles and Future Fortress! The 17 G.I. Joe figures also are lots of fun and a great value!

CHRISTMAS DELIGHTS — Kids can be festive this holiday season when they create delicious Christmas desserts with Dreamy Delights — one of four sets in the Now You're Cooking collection of microwaveable cookware for children.

Tips For A Successful Shopping Strategy

What's the best part of the holidays? Most people would say that it's the joy of giving. Even those who say they hate shopping, do it willingly at holiday time—for the pleasure of giving special gifts to family and friends.

Christmas is the time to show our love and appreciation for all the special people in our lives. Whatever your budget, there are great gifts in every price range. It may have become a cliché, but it's true that it's the thought—and the feeling—that counts, not the amount of money that you spend.

Are you one of those people who hates shopping? It doesn't have to be that hard. If you really can't handle the crowds and long lines, the standard advice is to do your shopping early or rely on catalogs.

Both are good ideas, but maybe a better one is to stop thinking of all those other shoppers out there as the competition, the people who are going to grab all the good gifts before you get to them.

Remember, the holidays are the time for love, peace and good will among men and women. Try smiling at your fellow shoppers, apologizing when you bump into someone, saying a few sympathetic words to a harried sales clerk. You'll be surprised at the response you'll get.

And don't worry about choosing the "perfect" gift. Anything chosen with love and caring is sure to be appreciated. If you can get your loved ones to tell you exactly what they want, great; you're ahead of the game.

But usually they'll say something like, "Oh, I don't know. I'm sure I'll love anything you get me." And they will, as long as you put some thought and caring into your choices.

Before you head for the mall or downtown, sit down and make a list of all the names of people you want to buy gifts for. This way you can check off each name as you find gifts.

If you have any ideas about what to get, jot them down too. But don't be too rigid. If you decide that the perfect gift for your aunt is a baby blue cashmere cardigan sweater with mother-of-pearl buttons, you may spend a whole day looking for precisely that item and end up frustrated.

Sometimes it's actually best to buy on impulse—when a particular item just "jumps out" at you and seems to capture some part of the special essence of the person you're buying for. If that happens, go ahead and get it, as long as it's within your price range.

But the best way to choose great gifts is to really think about the people for whom you're buying them. Picture them in your mind. Think about their interests and tastes.

If the person has a hobby, or collects something, maybe you can find a book about a special interest or an item to add to a collection.

Another good idea is to select something that the person wants or could use but wouldn't buy for him or herself, maybe something that's not quite practical, something a little extravagant or whimsical.

Remember that newlyweds and young people just starting out on their own are usually spending all their money for major purchases like furniture. A little questioning should reveal some of the many items that they're planning to buy as soon as they have some extra money.

BOARD GAMES — A great way for people of all ages to come together and enjoy simple basic fun is through the use of board games. Shown here are some of this year's favorites: Shrieks and Creaks, Girl Talk, Outburst, Once... and U.S.A. Trivia.

New Board Games Hold Early Spotlight For Gift Suggestions

If your idea of the perfect holiday is spending cozy evenings around the fireplace with family and friends, this holiday season offers a host of great new games to captivate everyone's attention.

Today's games run the gamut, from haunted houses to history. And, while they encourage creativity and education, the emphasis is still on fun.

Traditional activities like telling stories around the fireplace will have a modern twist this year with Once..., a new story-telling game from Golden that will bring the family closer together while generating lots of laughs.

Completing sentences like "Once, on a blind date..." or "Once, I made a bet that...," family members will hear fascinating stories and then decide if it is a "total truth" or "tall tale." For ages 12 and up; retails for approximately $15.00.

You don't have to be a history or politics buff to be entertained by U.S.A. Trivia from Boynton Games. This patriotic party game contains over 6,000 fascinating facts about the people, places and history of life in the United States.

Traveling across a colorful map of the United States, players will encounter questions ranging from easy to difficult to sometimes wacky, like "Which president was so large he got stuck in the White House bathtub?" (Answer: President William Taft). For ages 14 and up; retails for $34.00.

Those adults who think they "know it all" can meet their match with Outburst, The Game of Verbal Explosion from Western Publishing. A fast-paced game of common knowledge, Outburst challenges players to burst out with as many items as possible in categories like "Cars rich people drive" or "Commands you give a dog."

Players have 60 seconds to earn points by matching one of 10 items listed on the chosen game card. For adults; retails for approximately $20.00.

A great game for the preteen girl in the family is Girl Talk from Golden. Incorporating the age-old fun of "Truth or Dare" with the tradition of slumber party talk, Girl Talk will keep girls entertained for hours.

Encouraged to express themselves freely, players are asked questions like "What would the title of your life story be?" When landing on a "dare" space, girls may be asked to "Pick up a pencil with your toes."

Any girl who refuses to accept the dare or divulge the truth must wear a red-dot zit sticker on her face for the entire game! For ages 10-14; retails for about $12.

For the younger kids in the family, you can turn your living room into the haunted Mystery Mansion with Shrieks and Creaks, a new audio-cassette board game from Golden.

Chilling sounds and mysterious noises accompany players as they roll the die and follow Sir Simon's instructions to move from one howling hall to the next, trying to reach the Tower safely. For ages six and up; retails for about $14.00.

With The Holidays Just Around Corner, It's Season For Creative Ideas On Gifts

'Tis the season for finding gifts for those hard-to-please friends or relatives on your holiday list. Perhaps it's your mother or Uncle Bob—you know...the person that has everything.

This year, be original as well as thoughtful. Give gifts that will add both organization and luxury to their lives—personal clothing care items.

Lint removers continue to be a fun and useful gift this year. Just in time for the holidays, Singer Sewing Company has expanded its line to include "Deluxe" and "Super" versions of their popular Fuzy-Wuz lint remover.

The deluxe model includes a more powerful motor plus a cover for easy travel, and the super version is large and heavy duty enough for large fabric areas such as blankets, chairs, even sofas.

Other practical yet unusual gifts include scented sachets, and padded or wooden hangers which are gentle to clothes. Garment and storage bags are also novel presents that are bound to be appreciated for years to come. Look for durable bags with good quality zippers and that you can see through for convenience, recommends Singer.

For the man or woman who truly has everything, consider giving the professional quality ironing press from Singer Sewing Company. An ironing press at home can give garments an instant, fresh-from-the-dry cleaner look, a look which anyone will appreciate.

Perfect stocking stuffers include travel-sized cosmetic kits, shoe horns and mending kits. The Mini Mender, a hand-held mending device from Singer, is an excellent choice. The Mini is only the size of a small stapler, yet it works like a portable sewing machine, creating a durable chainstitch in seconds.

With a little imagination, the most difficult people on your gift list may end up the most satisfied.

CLOTHING CARE — Creative gift ideas for the holidays include personal clothing care items asuch as the products from Singer Sewing Co.

Gifts For Preteens Carry Special Appeals For Youth

Finding gifts for preteens is not easy. They're too old for toys, yet too young for more serious grown-up gifts. This season, several manufacturers have developed items specifically for kids at that "between age"—emphasizing creativity, education and long-lasting appeal.

If you think the world of the preteen in your family, show it this season with Hugg-A-Planet soft-sculptured globes from XTC Products. Hugg-A-Planet, Earth is a colorful way to teach students geography and reinforce the importance of world peace. They'll learn geography without even knowing it, simply by examining the multicolored globe.

Other choices include Geo Hugg-A-Planet, Earth, to teach the Earth's physical boundaries, and Hugg-A-Star and Hugg-A-Haley's Comet, illustrating the wonders of the constellations. In addition to being educational, these globes make great room decorations. Each retails for about $16.00 (mail order: 914-833-0200).

Eastman Kodak has designed the Pazzazz camera especially with kids in mind. It's not just a lightweight, compact, focus-free camera with a built-in flash, it's a fashion statement.

ORNAMENTS — Bright silver Christmas balls and shiny tart shells make Crhistmas orgnaments that will add sparkle to your tree. Fill the bottom of the tart shells with Elmer's Tacky Adhesive and place miniature Christmas balls inside to fill the shell. After drying, glue the backs of the shells to a green satin ribbon. Add a loop of heavy thread or yarn to the back of the ribbon for hanging, and a red holiday bow for a colorful touch.

GIFT FOR DAD — If a sports car is out of the question, Dad can still drive in class with Sony's new CDX-R88 car stereo that combines a CD player and tuner with 25W+25W amplifiers in one package. The stereo package features such technological advancements as the single aspheric optical lens, Unilinear Converter System with 2X over sampling digital filter and an auxiliary inpurt which allows easy connection to an optional cassette player or video deck.

JUST FOR YOU — When its all over this Christmas, what will you have? If you're lucky, these Christmas socks from Camp will be among your gifts to brighten the holidays into the new year.

The Loss Of A Glove

It lies on the street in the dead of winter, is found helpless on the back seat of a cab, car or train, and waits aimlessly for its partner to return.

Once happy and warm, it's now ragged and lost forever. It's really sad when you lose a glove.

Why is it that so many people lose their gloves each year? According to Aris Isotoner, leading glove manufacturer, almost half of all adults buy a new pair of gloves each year, and 75 percent of all gloves are purchased as Christmas gifts.

So for those of you who think that a pair of gloves is "too ordinary" a gift to give at Christmas time, think again — you'll be doing a great favor to your friends and relatives who find it hard to admit that they lost the pair (or the one hand) that you gave them last year.

ONE-SIZE FIT — These Isotoner gloves feature a one-size fit and a wide range of styles and colors, making them the best selling and most appreciated of the season.

Spread Holiday Cheer

With all of the goodwill and togetherness that abound during the holiday season, there's probably no better time than this to share our joy with those who may be less fortunate.

There are so many little ways in which you can bring the magic of Christmas into the lives of youngsters in a children's hospital, or elderly people in a home.

You might want to bring some gingerbread men that you've baked, or some candied apples, to a nearby children's hospital.

If you have a friend or know someone who is a volunteer, you could ask to come along and perhaps read Christmas stories to the kids.

If you don't know someone, you can call the hospital and tell them that you'd like to volunteer to spend some time with the children over the holidays, and they'll be more than happy to arrange something.

Getting together a group of your friends to sing carols at a home for the elderly is another way of spreading the Christmas spirit.

You could also bring ornaments you've made, giving them as small gifts to be hung where people confined to bed can enjoy them.

To spend just one hour singing or reading, to bring a few small toys or some cookies, or to do anything, big or small, that you can think of to share the happiness you feel at Christmas, can make this holiday a lot brighter for someone else.

Fragrances Can Let You Recall Christmas Longer

Christmas is certainly the most fragrant season. During this short period, the amount of fragrance purchased exceeds the total sold the rest of the year. With that in mind, here are a few "scentsible" holiday gift suggestions.

For the English Leather contemporary man in your life, choose a gift from the special "classic car" series.

Each contains two ounce bottles of both cologne and after shave with a useful novelty gift.

Select a genuine leather luggage tag with a privacy feature, or a leather key ring with brass accents, or a miniature ceramic shot glass mug. All sets are priced around $9.

To make her Yuletide sweeter, there's a Heaven Sent fragranced cherub candle. It features a decorated white candle holder with 3.5 ounces of Heaven Sent fragrance to burn. It's a hot buy for $5.50.

This same perfume offers those on-the-go a five-piece traveler gift consisting of moisturizing lotion, shower and bath gel, splash cologne and bath powder in a decorated, water-resistant, reusable cosmetic bag for under $9.

For your younger gal's needs, try Love's Baby Soft, the country's most popular teen fragrance. For about $5.50, you can get an adorable stocking stuffer: A choice of Love's Baby Soft, Love's Musky Jasmin or Love's Baby Soft Musk cologne spray in a Christmas cottage shaped box.

This Christmas, Members Only, the men's fashion setter fragrance, offers a special atomizer spray with 50 ml. of cologne for under $20.

If your wallet is as big as your love, buy him the limited edition 32 ounce designer bottle of Members Only that carries a hefty $150 price tag.

The choice is yours this Christmas. It is simply a case of dollars and scents.

Chocolate-Filled Toys Are Ideal For Stuffers

'Tis the night before Christmas... and all through America parents are frantically searching for wonderful (and affordable) stocking stuffers.

Among the most delightful new small gifts of the season are the Kinder Friends, adorable chocolate-filled playmates that children can collect.

Kinder, from Ferrero, the makers of Tic Tac and Mon Cheri fine chocolate, is a line of milk-enriched chocolate created especially for children.

This holiday season, the irresistible menagerie of Kinder Friends will include the cute Kinder duck and the lovable Kinder elephant.

When the wholesome Kinder chocolates are eaten up, Kinder Friends become a bank and a toy to keep.

These colorful little animals with distinct characters are fun to play with, and can enhance the make-believe world of children ages three to 10.

Mothers will be glad to know that Kinder chocolate is made of nearly one third milk, and has no additives, preservatives or colorants. Kinder has been a European favorite for over 20 years.

Around the world, mothers consider Kinder a nutritious treat that can be given as a reward or a little gift throughout the year.

The good tidings are that Kinder Friends retail for under $4.00, and can be picked up at local stores and supermarkets near you. So, if you're makin' your list and checkin' it twice, remember that Kinder Friends are coming to town.

CHOCOLATE TOYS — Paul Hour and Melanie Young play with Kinder Friends, the new chocolate-filled toys from Perrero. They are stocking stuffers that won't break the bank.

Santa's Advice: Contain Yourself This Holiday

Christmas is coming! It's time to make your gift list and check it twice. This season, why not choose presents that will really be used and enjoyed all year long?

A Swedish manufacturer of storage systems for over 30 years, elfa, offers drawer units, shelving systems, and other products to organize and customize any room or special area.

Made with sturdy steel, see-through wire construction and Life-Bond epoxy coating (the same finish as your refrigerator), elfa products will last a lifetime.

Almost everyone on your list has a hobby or special interest that elfa can organize and make more enjoyable and, throughout the year, as they use elfa, they will think of you.

Workshop owners will love the hanging wall grids with all sizes of hooks and baskets attached. Sewing corners can be organized with elfa drawers and shelving.

For those who work at home, offices can be made more efficient with elfa desk "component style" combinations.

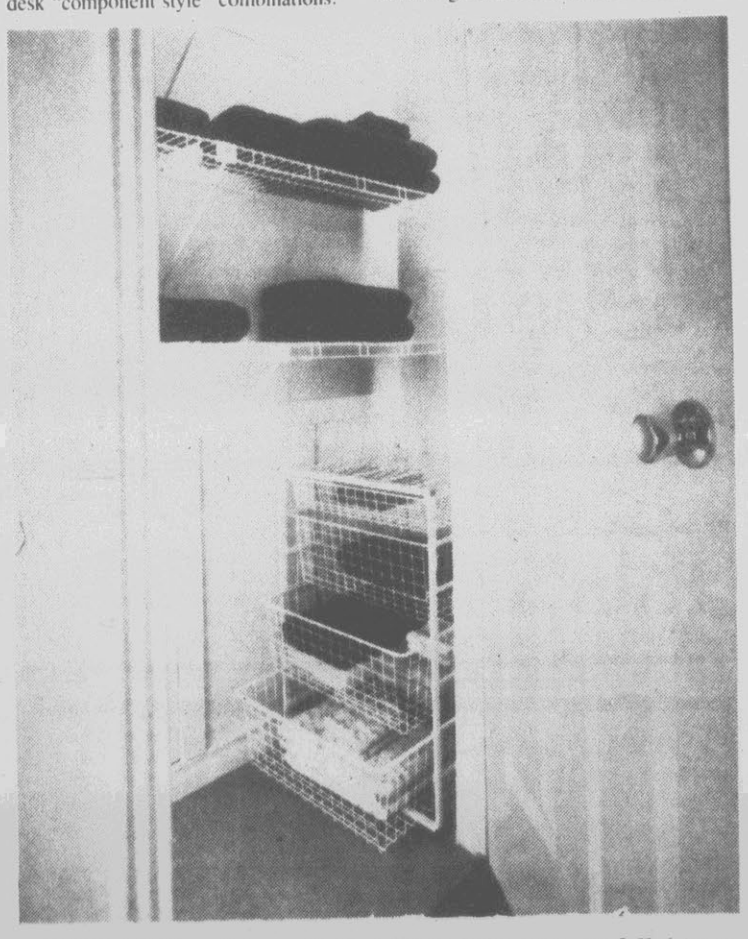
Everyone on your list has closets, and elfa is absolutely the best product available for closet organization. Closet space can be doubled by utilizing wasted space beneath hanging clothes.

Laundry is something else everyone has, and sorting it is easy with elfa. The large baskets are perfect for holding sheets and towels, while other baskets separate lights from darks.

That way, the sorting's already done by the time washday rolls around. And when the wash is done, the baskets can be used to separate clothes for each family member.

Kitchens, pantries and linen closets are other areas with which we all must contend. These can be made into more attractive, functional areas with elfa baskets, drawer units and shelving systems.

For a free elfa product catalog and more tips on how to "Contain Yourself" and everyone on your Christmas list write: The Container Store®, Dept. N, 2818 Virgo Lane, Dallas, TX 75229.



CLOSET READY — Get your linen closet ready for unexpected Christmas guests with elfa products, and give elfa to friends this Christmas so they will be ready for you next year.

Safe Driving Isn't A Laughing Matter

Over the river and through the woods— it sure sounds like fun, as long as the horse knows the way and the sleigh (or more likely, the car) doesn't break down.

Whether it's local shopping or a long trip to visit friends and family, we all spend more time in our "sleighs" during the holidays.

Before you get caught up in the hectic pace of the season, take a few minutes to prepare your car for winter driving.

The experts at Nationwide/Marlenn, major manufacturers of car care products, offer the following suggestions to help your car through the holidays.

Are the tires properly inflated? Now is the time to check tire pressure and add air if necessary. You should also consider changing to snow or studded tires, depending on the climate.

Add antifreeze to the radiator and check the fluid in the battery. If the fluid level is low, add distilled water.

Check your windshield wiper blades to ensure that they are in good condition before trying to use them in a storm. Drain and replace your windshield washer fluid.

For winter driving, use a solution with an antifreeze component to keep the fluid from freezing on the windshield.

Check the window and door seals. Are they in good condition? If not, frost can develop inside the car to make driving even the shortest distance treacherous.

Despite your precautions, winter driving can take its toll. By keeping a "driver survival kit" in the trunk, you'll be prepared for any road emergency.

To make your own kit, first buy a sturdy plastic case or tool box at your local automotive supply store. The container should measure at least 18" x 24", and be deep enough to accommodate several aerosol cans.

Nationwide/Marlenn offers a wide range of products to aid the do-it-yourselfer in solving winter's toughest driving problems.

For your driver survival kit, select Snap® Fix-A-Flat® to seal and inflate punctured tires in seconds. It's quick, safe and easy to use, and assures that you'll never again be forced to change a punctured tire during a blizzard.

Gifts From Kitchen Are Favorite Items

There is no greater joy than to receive a gift made with love. It can be as simple as a favorite niece or nephew's artwork...or as ornate as a handmade quilt from Grandma.

For busy people who want to give a little of themselves, a homemade gift from the kitchen (perhaps combined with a purchased, reusable container) can be easy to give...and heart-warming to receive.

Aromatic Holiday Bread brings back memories of Christmases past. Baked in a coffee can for an unusual decorative shape, it can be combined with a container of Honey Cream Cheese and a new wooden cutting board for a great gift for a budding cook.

For friends who enjoy entertaining, a crock of savory Liptauer Cheese Spread and a basket of gourmet crackers and breads will be a hit. Be sure to look for a unique basket that fits the receiver's personality...there are so many delightful designs available.

A nut lover will be thrilled with a container of whole cashews...and a companion container of delicious, fresh Cashew Butter. It's important to seek airtight reclosable containers to keep the contents fresh.

Why not try the special recipes tested in the Oster Test Kitchens? Be sure to include the recipes with the gifts...and be sure to make enough for yourself!

HOLIDAY BREAD

1 cup pecans
Rind from 1 orange, cut into 1-inch pieces
⅔ cup sugar
Rind from 1 lemon, cut into 1-inch pieces
⅔ cup sugar
½ cup vegetable oil
2 eggs
¼ teaspoon almond extract
1 cup milk
2½ cups all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
¾ teaspoon ground nutmeg
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
1 cup raisins

Assemble Oster Food Processor Accessory. Place all ingredients in processor bowl and cover unit. With hand on cover, process at HIGH until well mixed. Serve with Holiday Bread, Bagels, English Muffins or Toast.

YIELD: 1 cup.

Place orange rind and ⅔ cup sugar in processor bowl. Cover and process until well mixed. Remove to large mixer bowl. Repeat with lemon rind and ⅔ cup sugar.

Assemble Oster "Kitchen Center" mixer. Add oil and eggs to the sugars and cream together at MEDIUM. Add almond extract. Reduce speed to MED-LOW.

Add remaining ingredients, alternating liquid and dry ingredients. Mix only until dry ingredients are moistened. Add chopped nuts and raisins; mix on LOW.

Pour into two well greased one-pound coffee cans (or two 8½x4½x3-inch loaf pans).

Bake in a preheated 325°F. oven for one hour or until a wooden skewer comes out clean when inserted into the center. Allow to cool 10 minutes in baking pan. Remove from pans and cool on a wire rack.

YIELD: 2 loaves.

HONEY CREAM CHEESE SPREAD

1 package (8 ounces) cream cheese, softened, cut into 1-inch pieces
¼ cup honey

Assemble Oster Food Processor Accessory. Place all ingredients in processor bowl and cover unit. With hand on cover, process at HIGH until well mixed. Serve with Holiday Bread, Bagels, English Muffins or Toast.

YIELD: 1 cup.

LIPTAUER CHEESE SPREAD

1 package (8 ounces) cream cheese, softened
½ cup butter, softened
2 tablespoons drained capers
1½ teaspoons paprika
1 teaspoon anchovy paste
1 teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon onion powder
16 slices whole wheat or pumpernickel bread

Assemble Oster "Kitchen Center" mixer. Put all ingredients except bread into small bowl. Beat at MED-LOW until smooth. Serve in a small bowl or spread onto bread. Garnish with parsley sprigs and capers.

YIELD: 1 cup.

CASHEW BUTTER

1½ cups salted cashews

Assemble Osterizer blender. Put cashews into blender container. Cover and process at MED-HIGH to the desired consistency. If necessary, stop blender; use rubber spatula to keep mixture around the processing blades.

YIELD: ¾ cup.

TASTY GIFTS — It will be hard to give away these tasty holiday gifts made with the Oster "Kitchen Center" appliance. Be sure to include the recipes with gifts. And make a double batch, as a gift to yourself.

GOURMET TREATS — Brimming with delectable gourmet treats, this Noel sleigh could be the answer to your gift-giving dilemmas. Maxwell House Private Collection of Fine Coffees comes in 11 varieties, and has a coffee to fit the personality and mood of everyone on your gift list.

Gift Of Organization

If a woman on your gift list has a New Year's resolution to get organized in 1989, look for the holiday present that is not only fun and fashionable, but will help her keep that resolution!

For instance, nearly every woman needs help organizing cosmetics. As anyone who has ever played hide and seek with a favorite lipstick knows, a special place for beauty accessories is as essential as a woman's jewelry box.

Pretty Neat has just introduced a collection of five sleek and stylish mirrored beauty organizers in pastel colors of peach, pink and lavender. Pretty enough to show off in a bathroom or bedroom, these cases will be a welcome gift to women of all ages.

Three styles of the organizer have swing-out trays that hold compacts and hair accessories, while removable dividers create compartments to keep cotton balls, tissues, sponges and makeup applicators clean and fresh.

The main section of the larger organizers is big enough to hold lotions, styling gels, brushes, combs and even a travel size hair dryer.

If travel is frequent for the woman on your gift list, she also can use the two largest organizers as sturdy totes. Both have secure clasps and strong handles, and one even has a convenient carrying strap. Forget taking the time to sort and pack cosmetics—she can simply flip the lid shut, and be on her way!

Unlike other holiday gifts (and New Year's resolutions) that are forgotten by February, the Pretty Neat beauty organizers will make it fun and easy for your friends and family to keep at least one resolution this year!

Holiday Shopping Checklist

Tips For Picking Your CD, VCR, Camcorder

A walk into a consumer electronics outlet often leaves the average shopper overwhelmed by the ever-changing models and features of today's popular products such as CD players, VCRs and camcorders.

To help you alleviate some of the confusion and decide what's important to you, use this checklist, compliments of Panasonic, to guide you through this holiday shopping season.

Panasonic also advises that you not hesitate about having the retailer demonstrate the unit, if possible, to make sure you're getting the product which best fits your needs.

Compact disc players

- Random Access Programmability—Choose favorite songs you want to hear in any order;
- Wireless Remote Control—So you can access most functions from your armchair;
- Repeat Key—Replay a single track, entire disc, or personally programmed selections;
- Headphone Jack With Volume Control—Listen in privacy;
- Digital Filter—Provides low distortion for clean sounding music;
- Skip Function—Skip directly to favorite tracks;
- Search Function—Search inward or outward at low and high speeds, with audible monitoring capability;
- Recall Key—Lets the user double check what's been programmed;
- Multi-Disc—Holds numerous discs at once in a cartridge for hours of continuous music;
- Large Integrated Graphic Display—Reveals valuable disc play and programming information at a glance;
- Flexibility—Units available for home, portable and car use.

VHS video cassette recorders

- High Quality (HQ) VHS—Enhances quality of VHS image;
- Hi-Fi Stereo Sound—Provides excellent sound reproduction, virtually distortion free;
- Three or Four Head System—Allows for exciting special effects in the standard and super long play modes;
- Cable-Compatible Tuner—Simplifies cable hook-up;
- On-Screen Display—TV screen displays all clock-timer functions and help features, ensuring accuracy of settings;
- Stand-By One Touch Recording—Enables you to begin recording almost instantaneously at the touch of a button;
- Wireless Remote Control—Command most functions from around the room;
- MTS Broadcast Stereo—Built-in circuitry to take advantage of expanded stereo television sound (where available);
- Bar Code Programming—Pass a wireless pen-like scanner over a printed sheet of bar codes to set time and day of desired TV program. Info is beamed into the recorder by pushing button;
- Built-In Power Amp—Hook stereo speakers directly to VCR for great sound without the need for added hi-fi equipment;
- Digital Special Effects—Experience picture-in-picture and TV memory capability.

Camcorders

- Standard VHS Format—Allows not only playback of your recordings, but also of pre-recorded, full-length VHS movies;
- Compact VHS Format—Cassettes and units in general are smaller than standard VHS format, and recording time per cassette is also reduced. Compatible with VHS playback systems;
- Low Light Sensitivity—Recordings with high resolution and outstanding picture quality, even under low lighting conditions;
- Automatic Iris—Adjusts unit automatically to changing lighting conditions;
- High-Speed Shutter—Provides exceptional blur-free slow/still motion for analyzing fast-paced action;
- Power Zoom Lens—Look for smooth zooming capability and quick framing action from wide-angle to telephoto;
- Instant Playback—Recordings can be played back from the unit itself for "on location" viewing;
- Full Automatic White Balance Control—Color balance automatically and continuously adjusts to ensure true-to-life colors;
- High Quality (HQ) System—Enhances sharpness of image;
- Flying Erase Head—For clean cuts between scenes without video break-up;
- Audio Dubbing/Video Dubbing—Complete the recording by adding video footage or audio tracks.

Aquariums Will Enchant Entire Family

Of all Christmas presents, perhaps the most beloved is a living gift such as an aquarium filled with tropical fish. Colorful, varied and sure to be enjoyed by the lucky recipient, it's also easy to maintain and adds a unique decorative touch to any family room, living room or den.

In fact, a recent study by researchers at the University of Pennsylvania concluded it is even a benefit in relieving stress.

Bestowing a home aquarium upon a friend, relative or your own children has many positive benefits. Throughout the U.S., 10 million aquariums are being enjoyed in homes, offices, restaurants and hotels.

In order to select the best aquarium for your money, one that's filled with colorful tropical fish and easy to maintain, it's a good idea to do a little investigating.

First, you will want to locate a good dealer in your area. If you have a friend who has an aquarium, ask for a reference; otherwise the phone book lists most tropical fish retailers.

It is advisable to purchase a book that provides complete instructions on setting up and maintaining an aquarium.

One basic rule to follow, however, is to buy the largest aquarium possible since, the greater the water environment, the less chance of water problems.

If you receive an aquarium as a gift, you must assume all the responsibilities for maintenance.

When determining where to put your new aquarium, you should consider several factors. You will not want to put it in direct sunlight since this will cause algae to grow on the glass and plastic accessories.

You will also not want to put it on your best carpeting since, during water changes, it is possible for some water to splash on the floor. And you should also be sure to put your aquarium on a firm stand since water is heavy.

After you have decided on the aquarium, your first accessory will be a tightly fitting canopy cover equipped with a fluorescent fixture. Fluorescent fixtures throw off a cool light and will not cause fluctuations in the water temperature.

While we are on the subject of water temperature, tropical fish require an environment maintained at around 75°F (25°C). You will therefore need a good heater and an aquarium thermometer.

A recent development in this technology is the liquid crystal digital thermometer which affixes to the outside of the aquarium yet measures most accurately the water temperature.

You will also need a quality filter. Your dealer can give you proper advice since there are several types of filters and your needs will vary with the size of your aquarium. If you are going to keep a lot of fish, you will also want a separate air pump to add oxygen to the water.

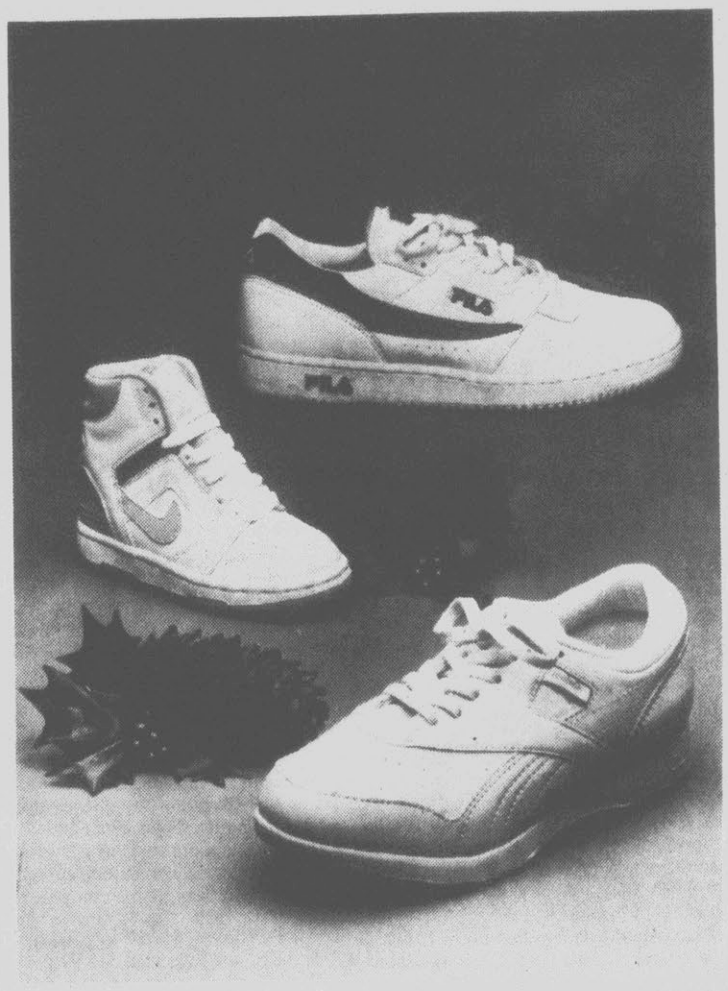
Decorating an aquarium is great fun. There are multi-colored gravels, highly decorative backgrounds and hundreds of ornaments, as well as plastic plants so real in reproduction it's almost impossible to distinguish them from live plants.

Most good retailers will have a complete assortment and your selection should be based on the size of your aquarium and the amount of money you decide to spend.

Once you have set up your aquarium, you should add a chlorine neutralizer to the water and add only a few fish initially. These few fish will help develop the proper biological conditions necessary to maintain a fully stocked aquarium.

After three to four weeks, assuming everything is functioning properly, you can then go ahead and add the rest of your fish.

Aquarium maintenance is a lot simpler than people think. Every two weeks a partial water change (not greater than 20 percent) by siphoning the water from the bottom of the aquarium is all that is required.



FUNCTIONAL FASHION — Fashion meets function in these athletic shoes that made great holiday gifts for the whole family and for every type of workout. This selection from Foot Locker includes, clockwise from bottom, a woman's walking shoe, a child's basketball shoe and man's court shoe.

You May Be Best Gift Of Them All

By Tandy O. Dunn
REFLECTOR CREATIVE SERVICES

The holiday season is approaching fast and most people have already started buying their gifts. Some of us wait until Dec. 24 to start looking for gifts and then are stumped as to what to get.

Here are some simple gift ideas to help you in your selection.

For the small child in your life, a teddy bear is a natural gift. Teddy bears provide a lot of comfort for infants and make great friends to cuddle up with at night.

Preschool children are in the learning stage and need encouragement. Toys that help teach them manual dexterity can also be fun without the children knowing that they are learning something. Flash cards that teach the alphabet or numbers are also great learning tools and can be found at most stores.

School age kids are the most difficult to buy for. A book that was enjoyed by yourself can be a great gift idea. Many of the young group are into music and an album or cassette would be appropriate for them. Your local record store would be glad to assist you in your selection.

The collegiate young adult could always use money. You could also buy a gift certificate to their favorite hangout or a couple of passes to the movies for them and a date.

Most mothers always want something for the house. Country crafts go with a lot of decors and can be found at specialty shops all around town. Fathers, on the other hand, would enjoy something to go along with a hobby they may have. A box of golf balls or a set of screwdrivers with a lifetime guarantee are perfect gifts for them.

If you care to make someone else's Christmas brighter, here is a suggestion. Contact your local department of social services and sponsor an orphaned child or adopt a grandparent from the nearest home for the elderly. Remember ... the greatest gift you can give is yourself.

CHILD'S DREAM — Santa answered this child's letter with a brand new puppy and a bike from JCPenney's Christmas catalog. They'll be set for years of adventures with this single speed 20-inch "Vortex" bike with powerflow handlebars and contoured flash wheel disks.

Infrared Technology Aids Use Of Cordless Speakers

Ever since the makers of consumer electronic gadgetry discovered infrared light, they have feverishly developed many new products and applications using this technology. Their work has brought infrared light into millions of American homes.

It is infrared technology which makes possible wireless remote controls for television, VCRs, compact disc players and a host of other electronic items.

These and other products, such as cordless stereo headphones, have "unplugged" audio listeners and video watchers into a new world of convenience and freedom.

The latest use of infrared light, just unveiled by Koss Corporation, the world's leading manufacturer of stereophones, brings infrared technology to loudspeakers.

Kordlesspeakers™, utilizing infrared transmission, deliver quality stereo sound without cumbersome wires or cords.

Unlike traditional speakers, they can easily be moved to different locations within a room in a mere matter of minutes. No longer is it necessary to drill holes in walls or hide speaker wires underneath a carpet.

The Kordlesspeaker™ is similar to other infrared items, as it utilizes a "line-of-sight" transmission of invisible infrared light.

Pick Out A Gift That Will Fit Well In College Dorm

Selecting just the right gift for the student in the family, especially one away from home, is not always easy. But here's a selection that truly fits well into today's college dorm life.

For in-room snacking and single-serving meals, Sharp's new "Hot Stuff" personal-sized combination microwave/toaster oven proves an irresistible gift.

Versatile toast, bake, brown, crisp and microwave features transform this space-saving microwave into a complete cooking system for students.

Convenient side handles make "Hot Stuff" portable from home to dorm each semester. It's available in glossy white, trendy black and "almond blush" for a suggested $229 retail price.

Now there's a way to help students improve those English papers. For years, many students had built their vocabulary skills with the Readers Digest column, "It Pays to Enrich Your Word Power."

Now, Peter Funk, author of the column, has created Winning Words, a new word definition game. The game's 3,600 words span six reading levels, and test knowledge in six separate categories, including "Sports Nuts," "Mad Scientist" and "Romantic Soul." It retails for about $30.

Another mind-challenging game that is proving particularly popular on college campuses is The Quest of the Philosopher's Stone.

The game takes players through ancient lands of Atlantis, Stonehenge, Egypt and Camelot in search of clues to unlock the central mystery.

Travelers test their wisdom as they confront logic questions and brain teasers in the Book of Challenges. All 2,000 questions were written by college students. The game retails for about $40.

With more and more students possessing their own personal computers, a truly appreciated gift would be computer disks.

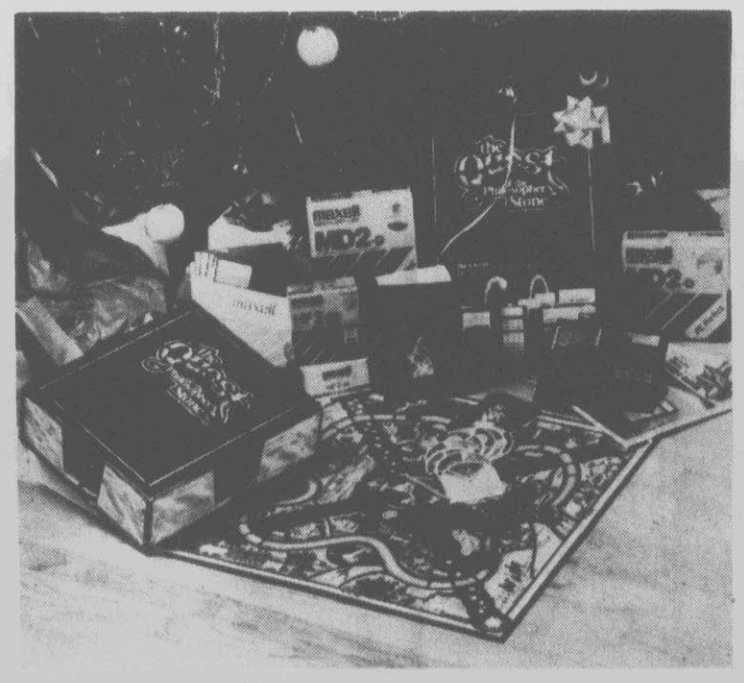
For 5¼-inch drives, Maxell suggests its MD2-D disks at a suggested $16.99 per 10-pack, or a 10-pack of its MF2-DD diskettes for 3½-inch drives at $35.99 per box.

Two electronic products from Sharp also make excellent gifts for the serious student. One, the book-sized Handy Copier, allows quick and easy copying of important notes and information from just about any location.

Just scan the copy wand over the portion needed, and the copier automatically prints it onto 3-inch thermal paper.

Compact and portable, it fits easily into knapsack, briefcase or desk drawer. The Handy Copier carries a $189.95 suggested retail price.

For the serious student, Sharp's handheld EL-546 scientific calculator would be a welcome gift.



STUDENT AID — Both in and out of the classroom, your favorite student can get ahead with great gifts like the Sharp El-5200 calculator, featuring both the basic and the most sophisticated functions, and Maxell floppy disks, a necessity for any computer buff.

Waterproof Jackets Are Versatile Types

Searching for the perfect gift for your outdoor enthusiast? Many Americans are just finding out what the English have known for over a century...when looking for a wearable, comfortable gift, nothing beats a well made oiled cotton jacket.

Perfect for cool days, stylish oiled cotton jackets are fashionable at tailgate picnics, around the campus and in the field. The best oiled cotton jackets are so warm, durable and weatherproof that they have still never been equaled by synthetic alternatives.

Designed primarily for the shooting man, the handsome Barbour Beaufort is a little shorter than most oiled cotton jackets. The tailored style, pure cotton tartan lining, full width rear game pocket, and pair of moleskin hand warmers allows for a warm, comfortable wear, which explains why many use it for a wider range of activities than was originally intended. For colder days, the zip-front pile lining promises warm wear into the winter months.

Holders of three Warrants of Appointment to the Royal Family, Barbour has been making Thornproof jackets and other outdoor apparel and accessories for over a century. Each oiled cotton garment's finish is renewable and highly resistant to abrasion.

As in Britain, Barbour supplies a refinishing kit for all Thornproofs at purchase, and a reproofing facility is operated by Barbour in the United States. With proper service, an oiled cotton jacket can last a lifetime.

For more information, contact your local sporting goods dealer or call Barbour for your nearest representative at (508) 251-8770 or 1-800-338-8770.

LEISURE WEAR — Today the best British clothing for the worst British weather is preferred by young and old in Europe and here in America. Barbour Inc. has a complete line of oiled cotton leisure wear for all outdoor occasions.

Gardening Could Be Just The Right Gift

Is that wide tie your wife gave you for Christmas in 1973 still hibernating in the back of your closet waiting to come back in style?

Why not give a gift this year that will still be cared for 15 years from now? Why not give the gift of gardening?

Gardening can give enjoyment now and for many years to come—without ever going out of style.

Instead of giving just a plant this holiday season, why not outfit a future plant lover with everything he or she will need to begin a hobby that will last a lifetime!

Caring for a plant from seed to maturity instills a genuine sense of satisfaction in the budding horticulturist, while providing a wide array of benefits, both therapeutic and aesthetic, particularly for children and the elderly.

When giving the gift of gardening, the experts at Garden Scene, the nation's leading manufacturer of horticultural accessories, suggest that you try to match a seed or plant with your future garden buff's home environment.

"For new home gardeners, it's best to pick a plant that will flourish indoors," says Garden Scene's plant expert, Robert Maronde.

"And if you know where the plant will be raised, all the better. For instance, if the plant will be in plenty of sunlight, a chrysanthemum is ideal.

DISTRESSED — The Members Only's distressed look leather jacket is a great gift for any Tom, Dick or Harry. It fetures five pockets, action back, rivet details, zip front and detachable mouton collar. Bomber jackets are hot fashion, and this fully satin-lined number will have them lining up with compliments.

Fabric Relaxant Takes Costly Wrinkles Out Of Your Dry Cleaning Bills

A revolutionary new product that removes clothing wrinkles and will save consumers about one-third on their dry cleaning bills, Wrinkle Free brand fabric relaxant, has been selected as the "Stocking Stuffer of the Year" for Christmas '87 by an all-Elf panel of experts.

Passing the Elfian requirements to win the award is no easy task. Santa's Elves are bombarded with candidates each year, and have set down a number of stiff stocking stuffer guidelines that must be achieved in order to even be considered:

- All stocking stuffers must fit in a stocking (fair enough);
- All stocking stuffers should be a good product value (no lumps of coal);
- All stocking stuffers should be useful to as many people in the family as possible (to enable proper sharing of the bounty);
- All stocking stuffers should be reasonably priced (so as not to diminish the excitement of the presents under the tree).

Wrinkle Free meets all the above criteria. It is a product that can be used by anyone in the family to help maintain a daily neat appearance at work, for social occasions or on a business trip.

Its portable size (3 oz.) also makes it the perfect traveling companion (Santa keeps one in the sled), providing quick "presses" after arriving at the hotel or helping to remove wrinkles caused by seatbelts, reindeer harnesses and hours of sitting.

Wrinkle Free uses a patented new formula that is emitted in a fine, mist spray, similar to steam. Once the wrinkled fabric is sprayed, the solution quickly penetrates the clothing's fibers.

The Wrinkle Free formula then softens and "relaxes" the dampened fibers, enabling the user to smooth out wrinkles or reshape the fabric without staining. The fibers dry within minutes, eliminating the need for the application of heat.

To use Wrinkle Free, simply spray the entire wrinkled area thoroughly without soaking. Allow to penetrate for 10 seconds, then smooth wrinkles away with your hands.

In addition to making wrinkles disappear, Wrinkle Free fabric relaxant eliminates static charge that causes clothing to cling—accomplishing the task of a static remover.

It also refreshes clothes by removing tobacco or cooking odors. And by massaging the solution into the fabric fibers, it softens stiff collars or lapels.

As the final qualification for the perfect stocking stuffer, Wrinkle Free is available in a portable 3-oz. size and a 9-oz. home economy size. Wrinkle Free thus qualifies, by all Elfian criteria, as "The Perfect Stocking Stuffer for Christmas '87."

Telephone Will Answer Needs Of An Entire Family

A gift that speaks for itself, over and over, to anyone, anywhere, at any time, is so necessary that it is often overlooked.

While virtually all households have a telephone, few phones have all the features that would ideally complement all the family members' needs.

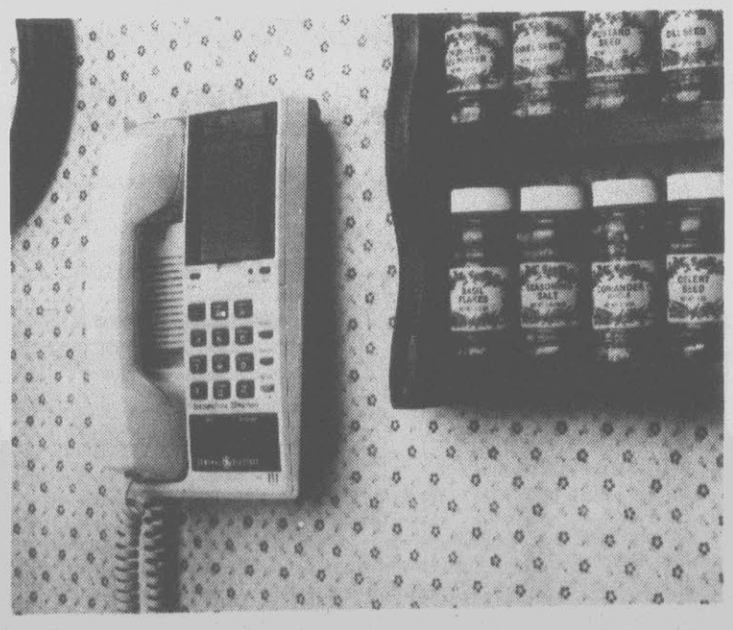
From tots who are encouraged to speak up, to teenagers who may be asked to hang up; from moms who are requested to keep it brief, to dads who are requested to pick up the tab; from grandparents who are encouraged to keep up with loved ones, to family friends who are encouraged to please make local calls...GE answers the call with over 20 different models, from bedroom phones to state-of-the-art cordless telephones, with many different combinations of features, styles and colors.

To match the decor of individual rooms, particularly bedrooms, one GE model is offered in six home fashion colors, each chosen to match today's most popular interior design colors.

To make your phone gift really appropriate, you can choose from a number of useful features:

- Memory for the most frequently called numbers. Special instant access emergency numbers are ideal for families with children;
- Telephone answerer so that important calls are not missed;
- Speaker phones, so the whole family can get in on the conversation—perhaps to harmonize their favorite Christmas carol to grandma;
- Three-way conferencing and the ability to accommodate two separate phone numbers could be perfect for the person with a home business, or the person with teenage children.

As to quality, GE phones have that natural sound that blocks out room noises. They are ruggedly constructed with high-grade components to withstand the rigors of daily use.



HOLIDAY BELLS — Ring holiday bells year-round with a GE speaker phone for hands-free conversation. Shown here, model 2-9355 has a one-touch memory dialer, including hree one-touch emergency numbers, and is deak or wall mountable for use in any room.

Eyewear With Sports In Mind Is Just The Thing For Active People

Sporting goods top many Christmas lists, but sunglasses—an important accessory for outdoor enthusiasts—are not traditionally thought of as a holiday gift.

As America's love affair with fitness continues and the popularity of outdoor activities rises dramatically each year, the number and variety of sports have become amazingly diverse.

Since every sport has its own requirements for optimal eye protection and sight enhancement, the sports boom gives holiday shoppers an easy solution to the age-old what-to-buy problem: Protective eyewear designed with the needs of specific active sports in mind.

The glamorous, fun or dashing sunglasses from high-quality eyewear companies prove that serious eye protection and cosmetic appeal are not mutually exclusive. Gift-giving is also simplified by the unisex appeal of most styles.

When choosing a gift, always look for superior products from a reputable manufacturer that protect delicate eye tissue from the sun's harmful ultraviolet rays.

Carrera, a leading manufacturer of sports eyewear, incorporates the latest in lens and frame technology in designing goggles and sunglasses that provide 100 percent protection from ultraviolet rays, and that meet the rigorous demands of active sports.

Skiers face a variety of unpredictable weather conditions, and need goggles to protect their eyes from the elements.

Reflective glare off snow reduces visibility and causes eye straining and squinting; rushing wind causes tearing and blinking.

Changing weather alters the appearance of the terrain (for example, clouds reduce depth perception by creating flat light), and skiing without goggles during a blinding snowfall is nearly impossible.

Carrera makes a variety of goggle lenses that accommodate different kinds of weather. The all-around Softsight is good for both bright sun and cloudy skies; Goldgreen enhances contrast and defines uneven terrain during rain, snow or fog; and Ultrasight cuts reflection and glare on very overcast and especially bright days, while enhancing natural color reproduction and preventing eye fatigue.

A special double-lens construction prevents condensation and fog from forming and causing blurred vision during bad weather.

Snug-fitting frames with foam cushioning and wide adjustable headbands that prevent uncomfortable face pressure are important, and aerating vents on the sides and top of the goggles are necessary to allow air to circulate for anti-fogging and clear visibility.

Bicycling's popularity has risen enormously lately, and equipment geared to the sport is flooding the market: Skin-tight Lycra spandex shorts, aerodynamically-designed helmets for safety, and padded fingerless gloves for blister-free palms and a sure grip.

In eyewear, bicycle enthusiasts need sun protection and good peripheral vision, as well as protection from wind and flying dirt and debris.

Shield sunglasses, with their wrap-style continuous lens, are an ideal solution (and their sleek design is very fashion-forward).

Carrera's racing-striped Sunrise shield features an unbreakable polycarbonate lens with broad temple connections that protects against glare and wind from the sides, and a special nosepiece that gives a comfortable, pressure-free fit.

Eyewear for tennis players should provide a wide field of vision for seeing the ball as it approaches from all angles.

Lens tint should not be so dense that the ball is obscured, but must reflect the sun's rays to prevent squinting.

Of course, an unbreakable material is essential for protection against high-speed balls. Glasses should fit snugly on the head to withstand the abrupt starts and stops of a fast-paced game.

Carrera's new Vario Sport sunglasses have length-adjustable wrap-around temples that change to a close or loose fit with one easy twist.

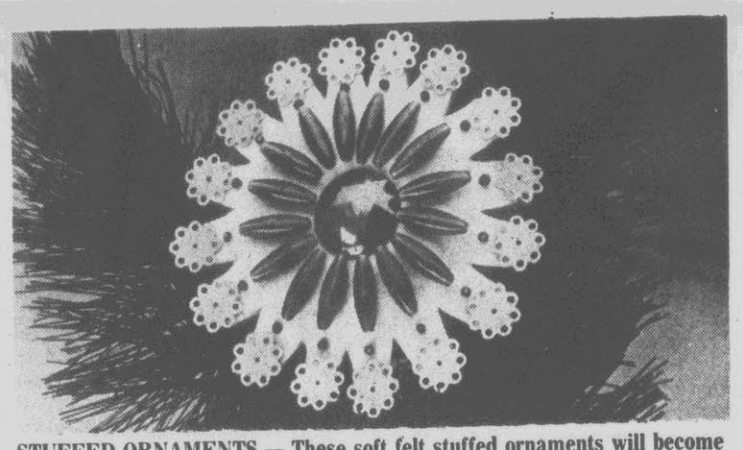
Silver mirror-coated polycarbonate plastic lenses provide adequate glare protection and are highly impact-resistant.

Runners need eyewear that provides visual acuity and a wide field of vision to see approaching cars and other obstacles.

Safety straps are ideal for keeping glasses in place during the jolts and jars of a body-pounding run.

Boardsailors and waterskiers need a snug fit and protection from the sun's intensified rays reflecting from the water's surface.

Carrera's Surf Glider shields the eyes with a wide polarized lens, and also features foam rubber flotation pads that keep the glasses from disappearing into the deep during involuntary plunges.



STUFFED ORNAMENTS — These soft felt stuffed ornaments will become family treasures. To brighten your tree (or a friend's), cut pairs of felt shapes — a scalloped circle, a diamond or whatever you like. Glue a small wad of cotton into the center of one piece. Set it aside. Arrange jewels and beads and attach with Elmer's Glue-All to the top of the second piece. Place the jeweled piece on top of the other piece and glue, being careful to apply glue to all edges. Press the glued edges together. Add a loop of yarn or ribbon to the back of the ornament and hang it on the tree.

SPECIAL GIFT — One of the world's great classic fragrances, L'Air du Temps, offers a wide arrage of feminine gifts for special holiday moments. The gift she'll treasure forever is La Petite Poupee, an exquisite doll attired in a dress of rich moire. The doll is accompanied by .2 ounces of L'Air du Temps perfume in a golden filigree flacon. Available at fine department stores.

HINT DROPPERS — These Hush Puppies Caribbean Coolers make terrific hint-droppers for winter vacations. Stocked in stores year-round, these lightweight mesh Coolers are available in natural, navy, white and colorful print pattern styles, and in a wide variety of shoe sizes and widths.

Gift For Globetrotters: Host Of Travel Savings

What could be a better gift for the globetrotter in your life than a whole year's worth of affordable dream vacations?

For $45, you can give the gift of travel with a year's membership in Stand-Buys, Ltd., the nation's original discount travel club.

The avid traveler will be able to shop year-round from hundreds of tours, cruises and air packages to the most desirable destinations in the world, at many times up to two-thirds off the regular price.

Best of all, the trips are available to the member's entire family.

How does it work? Major tour operators, cruise lines, airlines and other travel suppliers often find themselves with space left on their trips.

To fill it, they make the trips available to Stand-Buys members from three days to eight weeks before departure—at huge discounts.

In addition to brief-notice, deep-discounted trips, members can save from 15 to 35 percent on trips that can be booked up to a year in advance. All club trips, whether short or long-notice, are guaranteed space.

So, whether that globetrotter dreams of an African safari, a grand tour of Europe, a Caribbean cruise, an excursion to the mysterious Orient or a week on the beach in Hawaii, a gift of discount travel club membership can make that dream a reality.

For information on gift membership, write Stand-Buys, Ltd., Dept. X3F, 311 West Superior, Chicago, IL 60610, or call 1-800-255-0200 toll free. In Illinois, the toll free number is 1-800-826-4398.

Yule Gift Of Footwear May Lead To Vacation

With winter's approach come thoughts of holiday gift-giving, as well as where to go for a relaxing, warm winter vacation. Sun-drenched beaches, cool ocean breezes and romantic moonlit nights would be an inviting "escape."

However, how can you subtly suggest such an ideal vacation to the man in your life? Through his feet, of course!

Mesh Cooler footwear could solve both your gift-giving and hint-dropping dilemmas. Colorful, lightweight Caribbean Coolers from Hush Puppies would look terrific dancing the night away, lounging by the pool or strolling along a beach. It's fashion footwear that fits comfortably and stylishly into virtually any occasion.

Don't worry about trying to match Hush Puppies Caribbean Coolers to your mate's "resort" wardrobe. These attractive shoes are stocked in stores year-round, and come in colors of navy, white, natural and vibrant print patterns.

The comfortable casualness of these Coolers perfectly complements everything from Hawaiian print swim trunks to khaki shorts, denim jeans to dress slacks.

As further enticement, you may want to slip a few travel brochures inside the Coolers' shoe box to be certain that your "future travel companion" realizes he's received much more than a distinctive gift of comfortable footwear!

Gifts Of Athletic Footwear Will Brighten The Season

Just saying the word "Christmas" evokes images of glittering decorations, bright red and green gift packages, the smell of pine and home-baked cookies, and that wonderful warm feeling that you get deep inside when you give someone you love a gift.

This year, why not give a friend or relative the "gift of exercise and good health" with athletic shoes!

"Men's, women's and children's athletic shoe sales explode at holiday time. After all, who wouldn't want or couldn't use a new, good quality pair of athletic shoes?" said Floyd Huff, senior vice president and general manager of Foot Locker and Lady Foot Locker, the largest athletic footwear retailer in the U.S.

Reebok, Nike, Avia, Saucony...walking, running, aerobics, tennis...today, there are hundreds of athletic shoe brands, styles and categories to choose from. Thus, shopping for athletic shoes can be quite confusing. To eliminate some confusion, first read How To Choose Athletic Shoes, a new 28-page booklet from Foot Locker/Lady Foot Locker featuring advice on proper fit and foot health.

The booklet describes the unique functions of all types of athletic shoes. For example:

• Running Shoes are made for moving in one direction only—straight ahead. Most have nylon uppers reinforced with suede, leather or pigskin at the stress points and cushioned midsoles and outsoles made of hard, rubber compound. Soles are grooved or studded for traction.

• Tennis Shoes are heavier and stronger than running shoes. Tennis shoes have strong lateral support because of the game's rapid moves in all directions.

• Walking Shoes are becoming increasingly popular as walking becomes a favorite workout. Walking shoes have leather or nylon-mesh-and-leather uppers, strong heel counters, motion-control devices to restrict lateral movement, good cushioning—especially under the toes—and slightly elevated "step-up" heels.

• Aerobics Shoes are a blend of court and running shoes. Aerobics shoes feature slightly raised heels, firm heel counters, wrapped soft rubber soles and plenty of shock-absorbing midsole cushioning—especially in the heels and metatarsal areas.

How To Choose Athletic Shoes is a perfect holiday shopping guide. For a copy, send $1 to cover postage and handling to: FL/7MNC, Foot Locker/Lady Foot Locker, How To Choose Athletic Shoes, P.O. Box 307, Coventry, CT 06238.

Foot Locker, "America's Most Complete Athletic Footwear Store," is the nation's largest chain of athletic footwear and apparel stores with more than 800 stores in major markets throughout the United States.

This Year's Supergifts Promise A Merry Christmas For Everyone

This is the year of the Supergift, an '80s phenomenon whereby gift-givers pool funds to give a single super-special gift to each family member.

"Rather than give several traditional gifts, many families are giving fewer, but more substantial presents this year," says Dan Infanti, corporate communications and marketing manager, Sharp Electronics Corporation.

"The option of giving—or receiving—a stereo or VCR is often an attractive alternative to lots of smaller items such as socks, sweaters, gloves and curling irons.

"Shopping time is minimized, and usually these more substantial gifts are the extravagances that people would love to own, but often put off purchasing for themselves."

Pulling names out of a hat is one fun way to organize a family Supergift exchange, suggests Infanti. Among the top presents for this holiday season: Jewelry, outerwear, electronics and appliances.

"Electronics may be the best buy in town," adds Infanti. "Very few products have gone down in price while adding significant new features like electronics have.

"And, whether a stereo or a microwave oven, these Supergifts are bound to enrich any lifestyle for years to come."

Consider making the chef-of-the-house's life easier with a new top-of-the-line microwave oven.

Ultimately versatile, especially for working parents, a convection model is excellent for high-speed baking, browning, crisping, broiling and roasting.

Sharp's full line of easily programmable units range in price from $300 to $500.

Microwaving is the future of cooking, offering many traditional conveniences and the ability to keep pace with fast times.

Entrepreneurs built America, and not since the turn of the century has there been a boom in personal business as today.

Government statistics confirm that about 30,000 businesses open each month. Currently, six million work at home, and that figure is expected to double in the next 10 years.

As an option to big-city living, more and more suburban and rural companies are expected to blossom and solid communications are success essentials.

Many already have the "one-up," with a personal computer as part of their daily living.

Sharp, a leader in its dedication to home office products, is developing affordable and reliable technology to serve this growing market.

Feature-packed machines that won't take over the living room perform many vital functions.

Sharp's combo facsimile/copier/telephone, for example, lets you make photocopies, phone calls and even transmit documents to other "fax" machines, and fits on a tabletop.

And, how about an IBM PC-compatible computer with a state-of-the-art word-processor and electronic typewriter built in; this convenient merger eliminates separate machines, monitors and software programs.

High school is the time to prepare for the future, and every student needs a reliable calculator.

For the college/Wall Street-bound business major, a Sharp financial calculator to perform sophisticated cost, interest, selling price and cash-flow analyses at the push of a button is a great gift, one that will be used later on in the "real world."

And, with prices coming down on high quality personal computers, like Sharp's new portable models, students and business people alike can benefit from sophisticated computer processing.

SUPERGIFT — The supergift, an '80s phenomenon whereby gift-givers pool funds to give a single super gift to family members, has found its base this year. Topping the list are such items as Sharp's compact VHS camcorder, and the new CDVER all in one stereo receiver and multiplay CD changer.

PERFECT GIFTS — This holiday season, give gifts of personal sundries and clothing care items — perfect as small, thoughtful gifts or as stocking stuffers, according to Singer.

Fun And Practical Gifts Hold Top Billing On List

This holiday season, bypass all those traditional gift-giving favorites such as sweaters, ties and socks for items that are unique, as well as fun to use and give, such as personal sundries and clothing care gadgets.

These items are perfect as small, thoughtful gifts or as stocking stuffers, and they will definitely be well received.

Here are some suggestions:

• A quilted cosmetic bag that contains travel-size plastic bottles for shampoo, mouthwash and powder will keep the busy traveler's personal care items well organized, and prevent spillage;

• A shoe care gift pack with shoe trees, polish, weatherproofing products and shoe horn;

• The Sewing Companion organizer, by Singer Sewing Company, will provide years of organized sewing pleasure with plenty of storage space including divided compartments for needles, pins, scissors, buttons and much more. It's a great gift for non-sewers, too, who can use the Singer Sewing Companion as a tackle box or catch-all;

• Padded hangers protect garments and help them keep their shape. Select pretty satin-covered hangers and perhaps a garment bag to match;

• A potpourri scented sachet to keep closets or dresser drawers smelling fragrant, fresh and clean;

• The Mini Mender, a hand-held, easy-to-use mending device by the Singer Sewing Company, is an ideal gift for sewers and non-sewers alike, The lightweight

Instructional Video Gives You Good Edge On Holiday Carving

Whether you're facing the Thanksgiving turkey or squaring off with the Christmas ham, the ceremonial carving at family feasts is often a stressful ordeal.

But now, just in time for the holidays, Edgecraft Corporation, manufacturer of the Chef'sChoice® Diamond Hone™ Sharpener, has released a new home video that's guaranteed to put you confidently back at the head of the table for those traditional dinners.

Mastering the Art of Carving, with Merle Ellis, is the first comprehensive instructional video that actually shows you, step-by-step, how to increase your carving skills to that of a master carver.

An undisputed expert with a carving knife, Merle starts with a short review of carving tradition, describes the uses of different knives, and discusses effective ways to keep knives sharp.

From there he shares his simple carving techniques for all your favorites: Beef, lamb, pork and fowl.

Each distinct and separate carving segment is clearly illustrated and easy to follow, so you can rapidly retrieve and review any section of the tape immediately before demonstrating your new carving expertise.

Merle Ellis, known to millions of Americans as "The Butcher," is an acknowledged authority on carving.

In addition to being an actual working butcher, Merle is the author of the book Cutting Up In The Kitchen, and his syndicated column, "The Butcher," is carried in major newspapers coast to coast. He also is well-known for his frequent television guest appearances.

"Mastering the Art of Carving" makes a great holiday gift for yourself or for anyone on your list who yearns to wield a carving knife with confidence and skill.

It is an indispensible addition to any home cooking video library that will be referred to, time and time again, year after year.

Available this holiday season in the cutlery sections of major department stores, gourmet shops and specialty cutlery outlets, Mastering the Art of Carving is a full-color video with a running time of 53 minutes. Suggested retail price is $29.95.

For ordering information, write to Edgecraft Corporation, 407 Meco Dr., Dept. V, Wilmington, DE 19804.
