Tornado Cleanup Begins

By John Flesher
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH, N.C. — Cleanup began today from tornadoes that tore across eastern North Carolina, causing about $50 million in damage here alone, killing four and leaving 843 people homeless.

The roar of chain saws and the smell of pine permeated the air in The Wedges, the residential neighborhood where 12-year-old Edwin "Pete" Fulghum's death overshadowed the devastation of dozens of houses. Fulghum was one of two children killed in Wake County.

Many residents had spent the night with friends or in motels, said Jeff Johnston, who arrived home with his wife, Helen, to begin repair work.

"All my damage is minor compared to some of these people," said Johnston, an employee of Northern Telecom.

The windows of his two-story house were shattered, a tree limb pierced the front wall, and his backyard storage shed had disappeared. An overturned white van lay in beside his driveway and the yard was littered with nondescript debris.

"Look at this," Johnston said, picking up a child's red shoe. "I have no idea where this came from."

His next-door neighbors were worse off; the side of their house was torn off. "They'll have to move," Johnston said. "This whole neighborhood is going to change a lot."

David Barnes, clad in jeans, a sweat shirt and a toboggan cap, used a chain saw to clear away pine trees that covered his front yard. One of them had tumbled onto his roof when the tornado hit, shaking loose a beam that fell through the ceiling and narrowly missed his 4-year-old son.

Kremlin Proposes Veto For Soviet Parliament

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev told the Soviet parliament today it would gain the right to veto his decisions if it adopts his revised proposals to overhaul the Soviet political system.

In a speech opening a three-day special session of the Supreme Soviet, or parliament, Gorbachev said the Kremlin leadership made the veto proposal among 88 changes it recommended in response to 250,000 public comments on the new election law and constitutional amendments put before the body today.

Two high republic officials from the Baltics, however, registered dissatisfaction with elements of the reform program when addressing the plenum, signalling the start of a genuine debate in the chamber where ritual ascent is the norm.

The original drafts, published just five weeks ago, sparked widespread criticism that the changes would concentrate too much power in the presidency in a nation with a history of dictatorship.

In a reference to the outcry, Gorbachev acknowledged, "It is obvious that some of the provisions of the bills were not formulated precisely enough and caused quite a few critical remarks in the course of the discussions."

Reading today from a new draft,

Gorbachev said the Supreme Soviet "has the right to veto decrees of the presidium, instructions of the president of the Supreme Soviet," and the leadership would be required to account to the legislature "at least once a year."

Currently, directives from the president are made in the name of the Presidium and are subject to confirmation at the next full session of the Supreme Soviet. But practically, there are no challenges. The Supreme Soviet had its first non-unanimous vote in memory last month.

Gorbachev promised that other changes also would preserve the Soviet Union's traditional collective style of leadership. Under that style, the highest government body — the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet — and the highest party body — the Politburo — are collective bodies. The head of the Presidium is the president, traditionally a ceremonial role.

It was not immediately clear whether Gorbachev was giving up his original proposal to strengthen the president's role by giving him chairmanship of the Defense Council and responsibility for overseeing foreign policy.

AT&T Offsets Tax

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AT&T will lower its rates on all long distance services within North Carolina to offset an increase in the sales tax on the services, officials with the company said.

The sales tax increase follows the elimination by the General Assembly of the gross receipts tax the company had been paying. The moves are effective January 1.

B.C. Morrow, Jr., assistant vice president for external affairs said the sales tax will be increased from 3 percent to 6.5 percent. He said the company is lowering its rates $10.3 million to offset the sales tax increase.

The rate reductions will apply to all long distance services within the state. The reductions will range from 3.26 percent on basic long distance service to 3.98 percent on one business service.

Morrow said the tax restructuring will result in a lowering of AT&T's tax burden.

Iranian Minister Pledges Support To Free Hostages

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TEHRAN, Iran — Iran's deputy foreign minister said today his country will "work as much as we can" to gain freedom for all foreign hostages in Lebanon, including Iranians he maintains are held by a Christian militia.

The hostage issue has dominated the state visit of German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, who arrived Sunday.

Genscher has offered to act as a mediator in gaining the release of Western hostages, including nine Americans, believed held by pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem extremists, West German government sources in Bonn said.

Genscher met for four hours Monday with Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati and held separate discussions with President Ali Khamenei and Velayati's deputy, Mohammad Javad Larijani.

Larijani told reporters today that "there aren't just American hostages in Lebanon, but there also are Iranian hostages, who are in the hands of Christian militiamen."

He was referring to three Iranians who disappeared with their Lebanese driver in 1982 and were presumed kidnapped by Christian Phalangist gunmen. The four are widely believed to have died. No group claimed responsibility for their kidnapping.

"Western nations, especially the United States, have close ties to the Phalangists," Larijani said. "We want all hostages to be free, the Iranians as well, and we will work as much as we can so that they are freed."

Larijani did not specify what actions Iran might take.

Genscher was to meet again today with Velayati, as well as Prime Minister Hussein Musavi and Parliament speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani.

"The issue of the hostages remains of the utmost concern to us," said a West German official in Tehran who spoke on condition of anonymity. "We are ready to do whatever we can to speed their release."

Economy Expands

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The U.S. economy, held back by the summer drought, expanded at a moderate 2.6 percent annual rate in the July-September quarter, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said the performance of the gross national product, the broadest measure of economic health, slowed in the third quarter after growing at an annual rate of 3.2 percent during the first six months of the year.

It was the slowest pace since the fourth quarter of 1986, when the economy grew at a sluggish 1.4 percent rate.

The report, however, represents an upward revision from a preliminary estimate last month, which pegged growth at 2.2 percent.

The department attributed the revision to a higher-than-expected rise in personal consumption expenditures, which account for nearly two-thirds of economic activity.

A contractor moves the historic Patrick-Arthur House up 14th Street to its new site near the railroad tracks

Patrick-Arthur House Gets New Address

By Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

For well over a century, the Patrick-Arthur House rested on the corner of 14th Street and Charles Boulevard — but today the house possesses a new address.

A house-moving contractor this morning relocated the historic structure to a city-owned lot on the north side of 14th Street between Pitt and Greene streets.

Traffic on 14th Street was rerouted to allow the movers, cable television crews, utilities workers and telephone linemen to perform the tasks necessary for the relocation.

Lines stretching across 14th Street were temporarily brought down to allow the two-story house to proceed up the street. The traffic lights at 14th and Evans Street were removed and police were enlisted to help direct traffic.

A four-man moving crew spent nearly an hour this morning placing boards under the moving platform as it inched along the moist ground of the corner lot.

Finally, amidst a cheering crowd which gathered to witness the effort,

Pitt Board Honors Retiring Strickland

Bruce Strickland was honored by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners at a reception Monday afternoon for his 28 years service as a member of the board.

Strickland, who first took the oath of office as a commissioner on Dec. 5, 1960, will retire from the board Monday. He chose not to seek re-election this year.

"Employees of Pitt County are probably the best employees in this state," Strickland told the gathering. "I've had a wonderful time."

Strickland received a plaque recognizing his 28 years service as a commissioner. He also received a pocket watch from other commissioners and a Masonic ring from county department heads.

"I'm representing the people of the county," Harding Suggs, a long-time friend, said as he paid tribute to Strickland.

Suggs said that Strickland "loves people" and has "supported progressive programs with fiscal responsibility" for as long as he has been "a grass roots representative of our grass roots government."

Manning Appeals His Life Sentence In White Murder

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

James Earl Manning, who was sentenced to life in prison last week for his part in the murder of Bobby Charles White, appealed the sentence Monday to the state Court of Appeals.

Manning's attorney, Robin Fornes of Greenville, gave notice of the appeal about 12:30 p.m. in Pitt County Superior Court.

There are a number of factors in the case that could be the basis for the appeal, Fornes said later in an interview, and the length of the sentence may be a consideration.

Fornes declined to comment on the specific objections Manning had with the outcome of his case, in which Manning pleaded guilty to conspiring with his cousin and White's wife — with whom he was allegedly having an affair — to carry out the killing.

Pitt County District Attorney Tom Haigwood declined to comment Monday on the appeal.

Fornes could appeal the findings made by Judge David E. Reid Jr. of Greenville concerning aggravating factors, which tend to support a stiffer prison sentence.

In sentencing Manning, Reid found three aggravating factors: Manning's prior criminal record; the fact that the murder was premeditated and the fact the crime was committed for monetary gain.

Reid said the aggravating factors outweighed the mitigating factors Fornes offered — that Manning aided in the apprehension of felons and voluntarily gave a statement to authorities — and sentenced Manning to life in prison with a 10-year sentence to run concurrently.

County Board OKs Request For Light Near Winterville

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County Commissioners Monday adopted a resolution asking the Department of Transportation to place a stop light at the intersection of N.C. 11 and N.C. 903 west of Winterville.

The board action came at the request of the town of Winterville.

In a letter to commissioners, Winterville Mayor E.C. Hines said the intersection "has become a dangerous traffic hazard" and "the potential for injuries and deaths is too great to allow this situation to continue. There is now a desperate need for a signal light to be erected at this intersection."

Commissioners also approved the sale of a power rescue tool purchased by the county in 1979 for $5,900 to the Bethel Rescue Squad for $3,801.

Bobby Joyner, the county emergency services coordinator, told the board that when the rescue tool was bought, there was only one other power tool in the county. With five other rescue tools in the county now, Joyner said Pitt does not need the device.

The Bethel bid was the highest of three received for the tool, Joyner said.

In a report to the board, County Manager Kramer Jackson said renovation work on the satellite jail in the basement of the county office building has been completed and state officials are scheduled to inspect the jail this week. He said once the inspection is complete and nine

Reid said he did not impose a longer sentence, as Haigwood had requested, because he felt he needed to recognize Manning's efforts to help authorities.

If Reid had found no aggravating factors or found that the mitigating factors were stronger, then Manning's prison sentence would have likely been much less.

In a plea arrangement with the state, Manning, 24, of Grimesland pleaded guilty Sept. 8 in Pitt County Superior Court to second-degree murder, conspiring to commit the murder and aiding and abetting solicitation of murder.

He agreed to testify for the state against James Alton Mobley, 22, of Greenville and Sandra Faye Haddock White, 46, of Grimesland and was to be sentenced after their trials. But both pleaded guilty and were sentenced two weeks ago.

At Manning's sentencing hearing last Wednesday, Fornes told Reid he was making a passionate plea for a sentence of less than life in prison for Manning. He said Manning should receive a lesser sentence because his statements to investigators allowed them to file more serious charges against Mobley and Mrs. White.

A few days after the March 19 murder, Manning, Mobley and Mrs. White were each charged with conspiring to commit the murder.

In late March — the day before Haigwood said he was planning to file first-degree murder charges against all three defendants — Fornes told Haigwood that Manning was willing to make a statement to investigators. First-degree murder charges were filed against Mobley and Mrs. White after Manning made his statement.

During Manning's sentencing hearing, Haigwood said that Manning's cooperation broke a logjam between the three defendants and allowed investigators to turn each defendant against the other.

But, Haigwood asked Reid to impose a sentence of longer than life in prison, claiming Manning had already been rewarded for his cooperation by being allowed to plead guilty to second-degree murder, instead of standing trial for first-degree murder and possibly facing the death penalty.

Mobley and Mrs. White had been scheduled to stand trial this week, but Mobley pleaded guilty Nov. 17 to second-degree murder, conspiracy to commit murder and felonious breaking and entering. As a condition of the plea arrangement, he was sentenced to life plus 20 years in prison.

Following Mobley's plea, Mrs. White pleaded guilty to second-degree murder, conspiracy to commit murder and solicitation to commit murder. As a condition of her plea arrangement, she was sentenced to life in prison with a 20-year sentence to run concurrently.

Investigators said Mrs. White promised to pay Mobley $35,000 to kill her husband, but no money changed hands. She was to get the money through an insurance policy, and she and Manning were to take control of White's assets, according to investigators.

Manning allegedly helped hire Mobley, helped establish alibis for all three people and drove Mobley to within a mile of the White home the evening of the murder. He was previously convicted of felonious possession of stolen property and misdemeanor larceny.

Food Distribution Program Scheduled At Guard Armory

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The National Guard Armory on U.S. 13 in Greenville will be the December site for the Surplus Food Distribution Program in Pitt County.

"We have a place," Debbie Ryals, eligibility director of the Pitt County Department of Social Services, told the Social Services board during its regular meeting Monday evening.

"They were very interested in our coming," she said. The program, which will distribute flour, corn meal, dry milk and butter Dec. 14 and Dec. 15, temporarily had been left homeless once plans to convert the basement of the Pitt County Office Building into a jail were under way.

The program usually serves about 10,000 people and 3,800 households during each distribution, but "we don't know what to expect" in December, Ms. Ryals said. With the change in location and the limited number of food items to be distributed, participation may be down.

"We hope the draw will be the better" during this holiday season, she said.

In other matters, board attorney Ed Harper told the board he had met in Raleigh with state Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr. and Jennie Dorsett, a staff attorney with the N.C. General Assembly, to discuss a proposed draft of legislation to require parents who abuse and neglect their children to participate in treatment as a condition of having custody of the children.

Ms. Dorsett's "initial reaction to this draft was favorable. She did want to consider it further" before putting it into a formal bill, Harper said.

Jones and Ms. Dorsett had asked about the fiscal impact of the bill of which Harper said he was not knowledgeable, but he said he thought it would only minimally affect the Social Services budget.

"This seems very much to me what the board had in mind when the issue was first raised," Director Ed Garrison said. The board agreed to await a draft of the bill and to begin mounting support for the bill from related agencies.

A request for an income maintenance caseworker position to be housed at the East Carolina University School of Medicine will be submitted to the Pitt County commissioners, Garrison said. The medical school has agreed to pay 100 percent of the non-federal share for funding the position.

The department's management team is in the process of developing a plan that would bring the department into compliance with state building and space requirements for conducting interviews, Garrison said.

"Generally, we are going to change just about every office in the building" to create private interviewing offices, he said. The department will have to meet with the county manager to make sure some funds will be available for purchasing some partitions and other necessities of the changes and it will meet with the state to make sure it will accept the interim plans.

During the board's November meeting, Garrison said failure to comply with the state regulations could cost the department $450,000 a month in federal and state administrative funds.

An additional 20 telephone lines have been added to the Social Services system, Garrison said. Direct numbers have been given to several employees in the department who are routinely in contact with various agencies.

"The system itself seems to be working very well," Garrison said. "Time will tell if it's going to solve the problem" of making the department accessible to its clients by telephone.

Ms. Ryals reported that all the applications are in for the Low Income Emergency Assistance Program, and plans are to have the applications processed before the Christmas holidays. The program provides one-time assistance to individuals and families needing funds for their utility bills.

The department has been granted $10,000 in federal emergency food and shelter funds, Garrison said. The money will be used to replace some crisis intervention funds lost through federal cutbacks.

A "corrective action plan" is being developed for the department as a result of the opinion and attitude survey conducted within the department, Garrison said.

Brenda Jackson, social worker II, and Alma Phillips, income maintenance caseworker II, made a presentation to the board on the Emergency Assistance Program.

The board's December meeting has been scheduled for Dec. 19.

U.N. May Move Debate On PLO To Geneva So Arafat Can Attend

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

UNITED NATIONS — Unless the United States reverses its decision to deny Yasser Arafat an entry visa, the U.N. debate on Palestine will shift to Geneva so the PLO chairman can address the General Assembly, diplomats said.

Arab representatives planned to introduce a resolution today in the United Nations that deplors the U.S. action, postpones debate on Palestine now scheduled for Thursday until at least next month, and urges the State Department to grant the visa.

Saturday's decision by Secretary of State George P. Shultz to bar Arafat from the country on grounds he was an "accessory" to acts of terrorism against Americans has been widely criticized by dozens of countries, including the Arab world and such staunch U.S. allies as Britain, Canada and Australia.

Only Israel backed the U.S. decision. In Washington, the State Department said Monday the U.S. decision to deny the visa was "firm and final."

A senior U.N. official said on condition of anonymity that if the United States still refuses to grant Arafat a visa, another resolution probably will call this week for moving the assembly to Geneva.

Arab diplomats say they have enough votes, a simple majority in the 159-member body, to shift the assembly to where Arafat would be able to speak.

U.N. legal counsel Carl-August Fleischhauer told a U.N. committee the U.S. decision violates the 1947 U.S.-U.N. Headquarters Agreement that requires the host country to grant visas to people invited by the United Nations.

"The agreement does not contain a reservation of the right to bar the entry of those who represent, in the view of the host country, a threat to its sovereignty and security," Fleischhauer said.

Patricia Byrne, alternate U.S. representative, said the U.S. government disagreed with Fleischhauer's interpretation, but she did not elaborate.

Many nations in the world body said the U.S. action countered what they described as the Palestine Liberation Organization's move toward modernization with its declaration of Palestinian independence Nov. 15 that also implicitly recognized Israel.

The PLO's U.N. observer, Zuhdi Labib Terzi, said, "We have a message of peace that we want to bring to the General Assembly through Chairman Arafat. The United States is imposing some obstacles that would impede easy access, so we have to do it somewhere else."

The U.N. Committee on Relations with the Host Country heard numerous speakers assail the U.S. decision to bar Arafat from speaking to the General Assembly.

The chairman of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country, Constantine Moushoutas of Cyprus, said "the vast majority" felt the United States had violated the Headquarters Agreement, but the committee took no action.

Iraqi Ambassador Ismat Kittani told the same committee: "The decision by Washington is a slap in the face, of equal measure, to every member of this organization."

The Soviet Union and China, and U.S. allies France, Spain, Sweden and Norway, among others, said Arafat should be allowed to speak.

Tornado Damage Hits $50 Million In Wake

Raleigh City Manager Dempsey Benton said the storm caused about $50 million in damages in Raleigh.

A damage assessment team from the Small Business Administration arrived to inspect Wake County after Gov. Jim Martin asked the agency to declare Wake County a disaster area and to conduct damage surveys of other counties hit by the storm.

In Raleigh, police restricted access to damaged areas, said spokeswoman Jade Jurek, and three people were arrested today and charged with looting. Six Raleigh residents, including four juveniles, were charged Monday with looting from a K mart that was flattened by the storm.

Police asked citizens to stay away from damaged areas unless they had property in them and the mayor declared a state of emergency for the damaged parts of the city.

In rural Nash County, authorities said there had been no reports of looting at storm damaged homes.

The storms brought reminders of the 24 twisters that ripped a 250-mile path through the state in 1984, killing 44 people, injuring more than 800 and leaving 2,300 homeless.

The American Red Cross declared a "level 4" emergency. Level 5 is the agency's most severe emergency category.

The Red Cross in Wake County got so many offers of assistance that the agency ended up turning away some would-be volunteers. Organizations rallied to supply everything from free legal advice to tips about home repairs.

About 700 customers in north Raleigh were without power today, said Carolina Power and Light Co. spokesman Kyle Hampton. Most of those outages were at damaged homes where a building inspector would have to certify that electricity could be restored, he said.

Farmers also suffered losses in the storms, said Jim Graham, state Commissioner of Agriculture.

Several egg production houses, 12 bulk tobacco barns, 2,000 acres of timber, and two hog operations were destroyed, Graham said.

Bill Lord, extension agent in Franklin County, said one farmer lost $70,000 in damage to farm equipment.

There were also losses of livestock in Wake, Halifax and Nash counties.

"We're just glad to be alive," Barnes said. "You can't complain when you consider what could have happened."

Police patrolled the streets watching for looters as traffic picked up on the streets. A school bus weaved its way past fallen limbs on Wedgeland Drive to pick up half a dozen pupils.

Only 17 people from five families spent the night at Wake County's only shelter for tornado victims at Martin Middle School, according to Gloria Brown of the Wake County Department of Social Services.

Funeral services for the two Wake County victims were scheduled for Wednesday. A service for 9-year-old Janet Barnes was scheduled for 2:30 p.m. at First Baptist Church and a service for Fulghum was set for 10 a.m. at Saint Andrews Presbyterian Church. Funeral services had not been scheduled for two victims in Nash County.

Approximately 761 homes were damaged in nine counties by the tornadoes, said Tom Ditt, spokesman for the State Emergency Response Team, and 490 homes were destroyed. In addition, 65 businesses were destroyed.

The storms left 843 people homeless, 830 of them in Wake County, Ditt said, and injured 154 people in addition to the four fatalities.

The Red Cross is soliciting for cash donations for tornado victims.

"That's the best way, really," said Beverly Thompson, public relations director for the Durham County chapter.

She said the Red Cross operated shelters in most of the affected counties Monday night, and dispatched damage assessment teams and mobil feeding units Tuesday.

Mill Worker Killed

A 20-year-old Greenville man was killed in an industrial accident at Fieldcrest Mills at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Mumford Road about 9:15 p.m. Monday.

Greenville police identified the victim as James Taylor of 1506 Halifax St. Investigators said Taylor, who was caught by a conveyor and pulled into a textile dryer at the plant and crushed, was pronounced dead at the scene.

Rebels Claim Army Massacred Peasants

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala — Twenty peasants and a civilian liaison officer were tortured and burned before they were strangled by leftist guerrillas last week, an army spokesman said.

The guerrillas' coalition denied that rebels were responsible and blamed the army for the massacre.

The victims, found Saturday night in common graves near Chimaltenango, about 50 miles west of Guatemala City, were tortured before they were killed, army spokesman Col. Luis Arturo Isaacs Rodriguez said on Monday.

He denied a report that the victims were members of a death squad and repeated government claims that guerrillas were responsible.

The government said on Sunday that guerrillas killed Carlos Humberto Guerra Callejas, a civilian who worked with the military in El Aguacate town and who disappeared last Wednesday. It said the guerrillas then massacred 20 friends and relatives who organized a search party Friday and went looking for him.

In a statement distributed in Mexico City, the National Revolutionary Union of Guatemala, a guerrilla umbrella organization, called the government charges "totally and absolutely false" and said the army was trying to cover up involvement in the killings.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Blown Away

The Memories Of A Disaster

It was deja vu of a nightmare. For Pitt County, the news that a tornado dragged its destructive tail through North Carolina Monday, leaving a swath of death and ruin, triggered painful memories of March 28, 1984.

On that day, 24 twisters ripped a 250-mile path across 11 North Carolina counties, killing 44 people, injuring 804 and leaving 2,300 homeless. Pitt County shared in the tragedy. Ten people died here; hundreds were homeless or lost their possessions.

Three communities — Ayden, Portertown and Simpson — received a first person lesson about the fury of a twister. The rest of the county got a first-hand look at destruction. The experience left indelible scars that Monday's tornadoes couldn't help but irritate.

Photos of splintered houses in north Raleigh prompted images of disaster close to home. The images of tragedy in other communities all too clearly mirrored the suffering here. The county couldn't help but remember.

In 1984, the sight of Ayden Elementary School without a roof was sobering. Had the storm struck just hours before, the building would have been filled with youngsters. The image of mobile homes strewn like toothpicks was equally startling. Many of those killed lived in trailers, and during the tornado, these homes became boxes of death. The image of the entire village of Simpson destroyed, from fire station to post office, was unforgettable. The town was obliterated by a faceless nighttime killer that scattered its parts carelessly around the countryside.

These images came to mind Monday, as Pitt County watched other northeastern North Carolina communities dig out from under the debris.

There was no clear lesson from Pitt's tragedy four years ago, just as there is no moral to the disaster that struck Monday. In 1984, warnings helped save some lives. But at 1:30 a.m., the time the twisters wracked Raleigh, very few people would have heard warnings, and there were none. It is likely the victims were as prepared to survive as they could be.

There is a message, though, from Pitt's experience, that is relevant to Monday's tragedy. Ayden Elementary has a new roof and children learn within its walls and play in its school yard today. Portertown, devoid of some trees, has rebuilt. Simpson has a new fire station and post office and remains a thriving community.

It sounds trite, but life goes on. It did in 1984 for Pitt County and it will in 1988 for Wake, Nash, Halifax, Northhampton and the other counties hit Monday.

But when tragedy strikes nearby, the memories flood back, like a bad dream.

Big Spenders

Military Bases Important

Everyone agrees there is waste in military spending and the military says closing of some unneeded installations would result in savings.

That hits close to home for eastern North Carolina where Cherry Point, Camp Lejeune, Seymour Johnson and Ft. Bragg are among the military installations which contribute to the economy.

The bases are often the mainstays of local economies, and Carteret, Onslow, Wayne and Cumberland counties have seen major benefits from military spending. The economies of adjacent counties also have felt the effects of military payrolls and direct spending in the area.

All that makes it obvious that those who understand the economic benefits of military bases do not want to see them disappear from the area.

Thus there is concern in many communities as the military prepares to present recommendations for closing up to 50 military bases around the nation, starting in 1990.

The consensus is that Camp Lejeune, Cherry Point and Ft. Bragg will remain. The military, in fact, says there is no list yet of bases targeted for closing. However, the magazine U.S. News & World Report included Seymour Johnson Air Force Base of Goldsboro on its unofficial list for potential closing.

The base has about 4,800 military personnel stationed there and about 1,000 civilians. It is currently scheduled for upgrading of its aircraft with the F15 E Eagle jet replacing the F43-3 Phantom 2.

Speculating on what bases will be recommended for closing is a fruitless exercise at this stage. A Defense Department Commission on Base Realignment will soon develop a list. The department at this point says there is no list.

Hopefully North Carolina military bases will remain, however and that the military will continue to be an important part of eastern North Carolina's economy and its way of life.

The Message Should Be 'Talk'

WASHINGTON — Is the PLO at long last ready to make peace with Israel?

There are as many answers to the question as there are observers of events in the Middle East. But perhaps the most intriguing — and troubling — answer of them all is coming from Israel's most fervid supporters. That answer, or a fair paraphrase of it, is: I hope not.

The very name of the PLO — the Palestine Liberation Organization — has been taken as a statement of its bottom-line objective: the "liberation" of the land that Palestinians call Palestine and that Israelis call Israel. Out of that basic tenet has come an entire mass of political, military and diplomatic problems. It has spawned war and international terrorism, undermined governments and set Arab against Jew.

But following the recent session of the Palestinian National Council (the PLO's parliament in exile), the talk has taken a new direction. Instead of liberating Palestine, the PLO has declared the establishment of Palestine in the West Bank and Gaza.

William Raspberry

The rhetorical U-turn sent waves of hope around the world. By agreeing to abide by two key U.N. Security Council resolutions — 242 and 338 — the PLO seemed to remove the basis for America's no-talks policy. By voting overwhelmingly for a two-state solution, the Palestinians seemed to be establishing new possibilities for peace in the region.

There was guarded rejoicing everywhere — except in Israel and among her staunchest American supporters, where the tack was to paint the Algiers declaration as all sound and fury, signifying nothing.

Did it imply recognition of Israel? Well, it didn't make that recognition explicit, and besides the capital of the new Palestine would be Jerusalem. Did it forswear terrorism? Well, not in language that would clearly preclude violence against Israel. Did it accept the U.N. resolutions? Yes, but its vague language suggests the acceptance also of such resolutions as the one equating Zionism with racism.

And what did they expect? That the Palestinians, negotiating with themselves, would produce a treaty ready for Israel to sign? The PLO sought only to make enough of a breakthrough to create the basis for negotiations, and, for anyone truly interested in negotiating a settlement, it succeeded.

But instead of fashioning a response that would test the seriousness of the Palestinians, Israel and its hardcore partisans prefer to make no response at all, and the question that fairly screams for an answer is: Why?

One answer, of course, is that the very conditions that led to the establishment of Israel in the first place make Jews extremely wary of taking anything for granted. They would like peace in the region, of course, but they prefer the present state of hostility (in which they hold the upper hand militarily) to negotiations that might lead them to make concessions.

Another is that Israel does not wish to see the existence of a Palestinian state under any circumstances, and the best way to avoid dealing with that prospect is to avoid talking about it.

But since Israel's response depends on the support of its principal sponsor, the United States, there are some questions that we need to consider, and the crucial one is whether the PLO is serious about peace — serious enough to provide the basis for negotiations that could establish peace.

If it is — and it seems to me that it is up to us to prove otherwise — then we ought to be pressing for negotiations.

I don't know if Israel wants peace or not. But if we do, then our message to the Mideast adversaries, including our client Israel, ought to be: Let's talk.

The Real Life Test For Women

BOSTON — In the premiere of the TV series "Baby Boom," there was a wonderful moment when the single working mother of the 1980s met the '50s mothers of her dreams. Literally.

The star of the show, J.C., fell into bed after another hard day, failing to achieve a perfect score as mother, worker and woman. From deep in her subconscious she conjured up none other than June Cleaver and Margaret Anderson. But this time, the flawless mother of the Beaver and the perfect wife for father who knows best let her in on a little secret.

Margaret: "J.C., you know we were just actresses playing parts." June: "We reported to work and they tied aprons on us." Margaret: "In real life we were working mothers putting in a 12-hour day."

Ellen Goodman

In this refreshing encounter, June Cleaver and Margaret Anderson were played by the actresses from the original show, Barbara Billingsley and Jane Wyatt. It was reassuring to discover in a non-fiction moment in this fictional meeting that even Barbara Billingsley felt inferior to June Cleaver: "I was forever comparing myself to the character I was playing and I always came up short..."

But the most crucial part of these confessions was embodied in three little words: "in real life." This presented in its most pristine form my favorite test on the images about women that have floated up and around for all these decades. I call it the Real Life Test.

I was first inspired to apply the Real Life Test long after June and Margaret were in reruns. It was back in the '70s when Phyllis Schlafly was extolling housewifery as the only virtuous role for women. But what was she in Real Life? A lawyer and political activist.

Then there was the woman who published a particularly judgmental book about how she had quit work — and others should follow — to stay home with her children. In Real Life, the woman had become a writer.

In the early '80s, there were all those superwoman stories about top executives who led seamless lives balancing home and office, without ever wearing pantyhose with runs stopped by nail polish. In Real Life, they had housekeepers and gobs of money.

Now, I find myself using the Real Life Test to judge the next generation of ads that have incorporated a late '80s fantasy of working motherhood.

One is the United Airlines ad that opens with a young mother dropping her child at day care and flying to a meeting in Chicago. While her child plays happily, she works with no more than a casual glance at her watch. After a calm flight home, she picks the girl up right on time. Courtesy of United.

The other is a Macintosh computer ad that shows a very pregnant woman talking about her plans to be back working one week after her baby is born. "Do you think you can run a $10 million business from the nursery?" a friend asks. She answers "No, I think I can run it from the den." The computer makes it possible.

I don't know much about the stars of these ads, except that in Real Life the women are both actresses. But the test comes in handy anyway.

After all, in Real Life, we all know women who travel for work have more backup childcare plans than generals had for the invasion of Normandy. In Real Life, I have sat next to a mother of a waiting child when our plane was number 23 for takeoff out of O'Hare, and watched her hands begin to sweat.

I also know enough about Real Life to envision the baby formula dripping onto the Macintosh keyboard. I certainly know about trying to concentrate on work with a newborn in the next room.

There is a somewhat more honest tilt to the '80s. Shows like "Baby Boom" are about stress and the well-dressed single mother trying to hold it all together. (Although in a Real Life role reversal, the star Kate Jackson doesn't have children).

But there is still a notion running like a theme song through these decades that somebody (else) is doing it perfectly. In the Fifties, June Cleaver and Margaret Anderson were perfect mothers because they had the right temperament. In the '80s, the women in these ads lead perfect lives because they have the right technology.

In real Real Life, there is no perfection. So the best, most enduring line of all came from the Fifties mom, June Cleaver, to her Eighties counterpart: "Aren't you being a little hard on yourself?"

In Israel, Peace Is Still The Fundamental Question

David Bar-Illan

JERUSALEM — The media portrayal of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's possible right-wing coalition with the religious parties as an unholy alliance of uncompromising nationalists and coercive religious fanatics borders on the indecent.

The devout Jews who participate in Israel's political process are neither worse nor better than their gentile opposite numbers in America and other democracies. They range from fundamentalist to moderate, from hawks to doves and from pro-Labor to pro-Likud. They are relatively small in number — 10 percent of the votes went to the fundamentalists, 5 percent to the religious moderates — and they can drive a hard bargain, invariably described in their case as extortionate, only because the rest of the electorate is about evenly divided between left and right. By joining one side or the other, the religious parties become kingmakers.

American Jews, mostly non-Orthodox, are panicked by the fundamentalists' demand for tightening the definition of "Jew" in the Law of Return, the basic Israeli law that allows every Jew to become an Israeli citizen on request. The common belief that this "correction" may delegitimize non-Orthodox Jews is sheer nonsense. Neither the legal status nor the right of any Jew by birth to become an Israeli citizen is affected. The proposed amendment, whose passage in the Knesset is still in doubt, particularly if the Labor Party decides to join the govrigors of an Orthodox conversion — a very small number indeed. Neither Shamir nor Labor leader Shimon Peres favors this amendment — Shamir has repeatedly stated that such matters do not belong in the political arena — but Israelis, though concerned by Jewish reaction abroad, are more irritated by the prospect of religious fundamentalists, whose sons invariably study in theological seminaries and are thus exempt from the draft, participating in government decisions on war and peace. But none of the Orthodox members of the government will serve in ministries directly involved in the country's security.

A more universal concern is that Shamir's victory will impede the peace process. In fact, the opposite is true. It was Peres' talk of territorial concessions and of discarding the Camp David accords in favor of the Soviet-Arab idea of an international conference — an idea in which Washington acquiesced — that begat the "intifada" and brought the danger of war closer. The prospect of an imminent Israeli withdrawal encouraged the Arabs in Judea-Samaria (the West Bank) and Gaza to rebel against what they perceived as the outgoing power, hoping thus to gain points with the incoming power — the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The intifada helped Likud not only because most Israelis want tougher measures against the rioters, but because it became clear that Peres' "territories for peace" policy could only lead to an Israeli withdrawal to the '67 lines and the establishment of a Palestinian state on the outskirts of Tel Aviv and Jerusalem. The vast majority of Israelis consider this kind of peace process a prescription for war.

The question now is whether Shamir's stubborn insistence on the Camp David autonomy plan — a plan pronounced dead by President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt, discarded by the U.S. State Department and rejected by King Hussein of Jordan and the Palestinians — can bring peace. To paraphrase Churchill, it is the worst plan around, except for any other. Its chances for success depend on Arab realization that the international conference option does not exist, on American insistence that the Camp David terms must be fulfilled, and on Soviet understanding that the establishment of another Palestinian state in addition to Jordan is incompatible with the survival of Israel. Then and only then will King Hussein and the Palestinian Arabs negotiate directly with Israel within the framework of the Camp David accords. The autonomy plan envisioned in them can provide what Arabs and Israelis need most: proof that they can live side by side with maximal security for Israel and minimal Israeli interference in the affairs of the Arabs inhabitants.

When Menachem Begin came to power in 1977, the very same Cassandras who are now wringing their hands over Shamir's victory predicted all-out war. Instead, Begin achieved the first Israeli peace treaty with an Arab state. No one is better poised to achieve the same kind of miracle with Hussein and the Palestinian Arabs than Yitzhak Shamir.

David Bar-Illan directs the Jonathan Institute, an anti-terrorist foundation based in Jerusalem and New York.

In fact, it was Peres' promise to agree to the conversion amendment in an attempt to entice the fundamentalists away from Likud that forced Shamir to do as much.

Evidence of Good People's Dirty Work In A Sacramento Yard

Leonard Schneiderman

The nation has been shocked by news that seven old people may have been murdered and buried on the grounds of their Sacramento, Calif., boarding house for the sake of their Social Security checks. How could such a thing happen? Who is responsible?

As the story has unfolded, attention has focused on the criminal record of the suspect, the investigative failure of the police, the failure of federal agents to supervise a parolee who was known to be dangerous, the oversight provided by the county mental health department, the licensing practices of state agencies and the policies of the Social Security Administration, which allow others to cash checks for mentally impaired recipients of disability insurance.

Now a social worker steps forward to report that some or all of the bodies dug from the ground may have been those of clients whom she referred to the boarding house. We are told that such clients are often disturbed and abusive; they get drunk and vomit and pass out; they take drugs and have hallucinations and paranoid ideas. No one wants these people. Their need for care is often desperate. Desperation can lead to the erosion of standards and to taking risks when no alternative care is available.

What concerns me is that care for the frail elderly, for the chronically ill and dependent, for neglected and abused children is often determined in the face of desperation. And that in our search for someone to blame we may fail to address such desperation as a major cause of what occurred in Sacramento — desperation resulting from that absence of alternatives, that bankruptcy of caring resources, that leads so often to placing dependent children and adults at risk of injury to their lives, their well-being, their dignity and self-respect. Over and over again we read of underfunded programs in mental health, in child-protective services, in care for the frail elderly and the chronically ill. It is easy to be indifferent to the impersonal message of statistical and budget analysis. But the murder of real, identifiable human beings is not so easy to push aside.

After World War II, sociologist Everett Hughes undertook to explain how it was that the good people of Germany allowed such dirty work to be done in their name in the concentration camps. He described a process in which good people build social distance between themselves and dirty work. Social distance encourages the perception that we are dealing with things rather than people, with groups rather than people — with the poor, the sick, the mentally ill, the winos, the homeless. They are not like us. They think and feel differently, even strangely. The very fact of such difference explains why they suffer and we do not.

This process works well as long as great social distance is maintained, as long as good people are not forced to know those who suffer in personal terms. Let one case be known, let one victim be humanized so that we can identify with him, and we will shower him with contributions and change every rule to be helpful. Confronted with their humanity, we are not able to deny our own.

We have a vested interest in not knowing. There is an unspoken compact between good people and dirty workers (teachers, nurses, physicians, judges, child-care and nursing-home workers who serve the institutionalized poor). "Do your dirty work but don't tell us about it; don't confront us with unpleasantness."

The police, parole officers, mental health workers, social workers and others can tell us a lot about the community's dirty work. Fortunately, one social worker in Sacramento has been brave enough to come forward, brave enough to escape the fear of blame, brave enough to break the compact of silence between good people and dirty workers. She has told how bad it really is, how few are the resources for the mentally disturbed, how desperate is their need.

We have to try to hear that message and to connect it to the statistics that we hear about people and budgets. Cutting budgets for the human services has consequences. One consequence is a sense of desperation in providing care for those in need. One consequence of desperation is that risks are taken that place people in danger of harm from those on whom they depend for care.

While it may lack the satisfaction of a finding of individual guilt and the simplicity of punishing an individual offender, it is important that good people know about the dirty work that is being done in their name. Perhaps then they will accept responsibility for the failure to support the range of human services required to replace desperation with choice and the assurance of safety for those who are unable to protect themselves.

Leonard Schneiderman is the dean of the School of Social Welfare at the University of California, Los Angeles.

Why Resist?

Susan Baker & Tipper Gore

WASHINGTON — Now that cable television has reached the District of Columbia, many D.C. residents have realized that family programming is almost a thing of the past. By subscribing to cable, many viewers expected to lose commercials and gain the Discovery Channel and unlimited movies. Instead, they have discovered MTV, which features music videos that are often sexist and sexually explicit and a deluge of R-rated movies, many of which contain the dangerous ingredient of sexual violence. Women are most often the victims.

One dilemma that modern parents now face is this: how do we control our children's access to violent and sexually explicit entertainment without placing a childproof cap on the entertainment industry?

In 1985 we formed the Parents' Music Resource Center to grapple with this issue. We became aware that some music containing violent and sexually explicit themes was being marketed to our very young children.

We cannot be knowledgeable about every movie, video or song that is released, so consumer information from the entertainment industry is needed. If it is going to adopt the "sex and violence sells" philosophy, we want to know just what kind of sex and violence is being sold to our kids and bought with our money.

We met with representatives of the recording industry to stand up for our right as consumers to know the content of the music products we buy. As a result of these talks with the industry, a voluntary agreement was reached. Twenty-two of the major record companies agreed to alert the consumer to releases containing lyrics that are violent, sexually explicit or promote the use of drugs and alcohol by applying a warning label or printing the lyrics on the cover.

Since the agreement went into effect, there has been limited compliance on the part of the music industry. Some companies have shown a good-faith effort. However, most have not complied, or when they have, the warning labels are too small to be noticed or are hidden in the artwork.

Years ago, the motion picture industry did not move to regulate itself until growing public concern activated statewide legislation. Faced with the prospect of hundreds of community rating boards, the movie industry decided to do the job itself.

The PMRC has never proposed or endorsed federal legislation, and we continue to work for voluntary measures. We hope that one day soon, the recording industry will understand that working for the public interest by answering the demand for consumer information is good business sense any way you look at it.

Susan Baker and Tipper Gore are founders of the Parents' Music Resource Center.

Weather Service Says Tornadoes Unpredictable

By Michael Hobbs
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The National Weather Service did not begin issuing tornado warnings until 38 minutes after the first tornado touched down in western Wake County because the twister was too close to radar to monitor, authorities say.

"If you are looking straight up at a storm you can't see much," said Rod Gonski, a meteorologist with the weather service at Raleigh Durham International Airport.

"It's like looking at a pencil point at point blank," Gonski said. "You can't tell if it's a pencil or a dot in the middle of a circle."

Gonski said the tornado that struck north Raleigh early Monday, killing two children and injuring more than 100 people, could not have been predicted, even with advanced radar systems.

"Even in hindsight it would have been very difficult to predict that we would have severe damage from this storm," Gonski said.

The weather service office in Raleigh was operating without a critical early-warning tool — a weather radar that has been broken since Nov. 20. Meteorologists debated whether the radar's absence kept them from issuing a tornado warning as early as they might have.

All agreed, however, that the current weather radar — even when working — doesn't have the early-warning capability of an experimental radar-computer system, called NEXRAD, that should be installed at the 173 weather stations across the United States by 1995.

Gonski said his office's radar would have been rendered useless by the heavy rains that deluged the radar site at the airport.

"The air around the radar site was heavy laden with moisture," he said. "The rain absorbs and scatters energy from the radar so that there is not enough returned to the signal."

Gonski said radars at Volens, Va., Charlotte and Wilmington are covering the Raleigh-Durham area.

"The radar coverage was adequate," he said.

But meteorologists at the National Severe Storm Laboratory in Norman, Okla., and the National Severe Storm Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said the lack of a radar probably hampered weather forecasting efforts at Raleigh-Durham.

Fred Mosher, chief of technical development at the Kansas City forecast center, said the weather stations at Volens, Charlotte and Wilmington would not give meteorologists as accurate a radar picture of Raleigh-Durham as their own radar.

"The beam gets wider as you get farther away, so you have less resolution the farther away you are," Mosher said.

"Normally if there's a strong thunderstorm in the area, you take the local radar, look for signatures in the storm like liquid water high up in the cloud," he said. "That's an indication of a strong storm. It's difficult to do that from far away."

Mosher agreed that a storm out break over or near a radar site would diminish forecasters' ability to see thunderstorms that have the potential to spawn tornadoes.

But Don Burgess, a research meteorologist at the storm laboratory in Norman, said, "At least they would have seen the storms forming or perhaps moving into the Raleigh-Durham area."

Joe Dean, state secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety, said 15 minutes' warning might have made the difference between life and death Monday. But he added that because the storms hit when most people were asleep, it's hard to say how many would have heard a tornado warning.

"In a disaster, the strongest partner I have is the media," Dean said. "If you aren't watching TV or aren't listening to the radio, you don't know."

Gonski said the storms were spawned by the collision of a cold front into a warm, moist air mass over the eastern part of the state. He said temperatures on Sunday ranged in the 70s and humidity was similar to summertime levels. Two jet streams located over the state also contributed to the development of the twisters, he said.

But Gonski said that when the cold front entered the state, it did not exhibit the qualities of a potentially damaging storm.

"The front had some history of causing severe weather in previous days," he said. "As it entered North Carolina, it did not have severe weather associated with it."

"The front looked a lot more friendly as it entered the Carolinas than when it exited," Gonski said.

Thunderstorms began to develop as the cold front collided with the warm air Sunday night. Gonski said that when the thunderstorms grew to an elevation of about 30,000 to 40,000 feet, their tops were "blown off" by two jet streams.

The high level winds then pulled more air up into the storms.

"Suppose you had a fireplace and then you blew a wind across the top of the chimney, Gonski said. "You would increase the temperature of the fire because you intensify the updraft."

"And the whole thing went off in a matter of minutes, literally."

The first tornado strike occurred just northeast of the airport. A clock on a tower at Hartford Hills Apartments was stuck at 1:07, apparently the time electricity was disrupted.

Gonski said the weather service issued their first statement regarding severe weather at 1:30 a.m. after receiving reports of possible tornado damage. No tornado watch nor warning had been issued prior to the storm.

The first tornado warning was issued at 1:45 a.m.

Robeson County Grand Jury Indicts Former Indian Legislator-Lawyer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LUMBERTON, N.C. — A lawyer who is a former state legislator allegedly told a man that he could stay out of jail by paying the lawyer $9,000, according to indictments handed down in Robeson County Monday.

The grand jury returned three indictments Monday against attorney Horace Locklear. One indictment alleges that Locklear told his client, who had pleaded guilty to drug trafficking, that he "had the judge in control."

The indictments say Locklear privately approached Superior Court Judge Robert Hobgood Jr. of Louisburg about the case and also solicited the help of Sheriff Hubert Stone and one of his deputies.

The indictments charged him with attempted obstruction of justice, obtaining property by false pretenses and attempting to obtain property by false pretenses.

Locklear collected $1,500 of the $9,000 between Sept. 1 and Nov. 16, the indictments said, and tried to collect an additional $7,500 from Leroy Locklear, a Robeson County man who had pleaded guilty to trafficking in marijuana by manufacturing and conspiring to traffic in marijuana.

Leroy Locklear, a farmer, entered guilty pleas in September, but sentencing was postponed so that he could harvest his crops.

Horace Locklear, who apparently is no relation, approached him with the plan, even though the drug trafficker was represented by another local lawyer, John W. Campbell, the indictments said.

Horace Locklear's plan, according to the indictments, would have had Stone and his deputy, Mike Stogner, testify that Leroy Locklear had assisted law enforcement officers in making other drug arrests and that his sentence should not include jail time.

Hobgood was the presiding judge in the drug case and had the authority to make such an agreement.

The judge filed a civil order Monday, before the grand jury returned its indictments, instructing officials of the N.C. State Bar to present evidence against Horace Locklear regarding his professional conduct, during a hearing set for Dec. 14.

As for the criminal charges, Locklear was freed on $30,000 bond and faces sentences of more than 10 years if convicted on all counts.

A Lumbee Indian, Locklear was one of the first lawyers to represent Eddie Hatcher when he faced charges of taking hostages at a Lumberton newspaper in February. Hatcher dismissed Mr. Locklear from the case early in the proceedings, saying he wanted New York lawyer William Kunstler to represent him.

Locklear, a graduate of Pembroke State University and N.C. Central University Law School, was the first American Indian to be admitted to the bar in North Carolina and for years was the only American Indian practicing law in the state. He has been outspoken in his support of Indian causes in Robeson County and elsewhere in the state.

Locklear was elected three times to the state House, but he resigned his post in December 1980, before beginning his third term, to devote more time to other business.

Bakker Skips Appearance Before Jury

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — PTL founder Jim Bakker has declined an invitation to appear before a grand jury in Charlotte this week, but another target of the federal probe into alleged fraud had indicated that he might testify before the grand jury.

But as of 4 p.m. Monday, Roe Messner, PTL's chief builder under Bakker, had not shown up at the federal courthouse in Charlotte where the special panel is conducting its investigation behind closed doors.

The grand jury reconvened Monday amid speculation that indictments could be returned before the end of the week.

"It's anybody's guess," said Bakker's attorney, Jim Toms of Hendersonville. "All we can do right now is sit around and wait."

"I would think they're not quite to that (indictments), but they're not far from it," he said. "They're still taking testimony. I guess we could all be surprised. We're certainly getting closer."

Toms said earlier that he believes Bakker will be indicted.

"It's a question of when," he said, "and what the particular allegations will be."

The 23-member grand jury heard testimony Monday from several so-called "lifetime partners," people who contributed money to the PTL ministry in exchange for free hotel lodgings at Heritage USA.

Bakker, who resigned as PTL president in March 1987 after the revelation that he had a tryst with church secretary Jessica Hahn and paid her hush money, has denied any criminal wrongdoing, and has called the investigation "a fishing expedition."

Three months ago he predicted, "I don't think I'll be indicted. I never have. If I am, I'll be shocked."

Charles Alexander, the federal prosecutor handling the 16-month-old investigation, wrote Bakker, Messner and at least one more Bakker associate last month informing them that they were targets of the probe and inviting them to appear before the grand jury this week.

Toms said the timing of the indictments depends on whether Messner agrees to testify or not.

"My feeling is that if he does (testify) it would eat up a good deal of time," he said. "At this point, I have not heard that he is not (going to appear)."

State Says Parks 'In A Crisis'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The state's park system is "in a crisis" and almost $250 million is needed to upgrade facilities, officials of the State Department of Natural Resources and Community Development said.

The department's Division of Parks and Recreation planning staff prepared the plan after two years of research. Its recommendations were based on findings of five legislative study commissions, a State Auditor's report on management and operation of the park system, information collected by the division and from other sources.

"This plan is the most comprehensive analysis and review ever conducted on the North Carolina state park system," S. Thomas Rhodes, secretary of the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, said in a prepared statement.

The plan, which was released Monday, says $135 million would be needed for new construction, renovations and repairs to park facilities and $114 million needed to acquire land for the park system.

The state park system is "in a crisis," Rhodes said. "We're millions and millions of dollars behind."

The State Parks Act passed by the 1987 General Assembly required the department produce the plan and update it every five years. A public hearing on the plan will be held Wednesday.

To protect the state's natural resources properly, the plan said, the state park system would have to double in size.

Bayard C. Alcorn, head of the parks and recreation strategic planning program, said the plan will be submitted to the 1989 General Assembly. He said it did not identify specific sources for the funds.

"It will be up to the administration and the legislature to develop a strategy to implement those recommendations," he said. "It obviously shows there is a great deal to do in a number of different areas."

Husband Sentenced

HIGH POINT — A former High Point furniture sales executive has been sentenced to life in prison after pleading guilty to poisoning his wife with arsenic.

Prosecutors said Robert Coulthard Jr. killed his wife, Sandy, because he was having an affair and wanted to end his marriage.

Coulthard, 30, pleaded guilty to first-degree murder, which is punishable by either life in prison or death. The unexpected plea Monday in Guilford County Superior Court followed a hearing in which Judge William Helms of Wingate ruled that there was insufficient evidence for prosecutors to seek the death penalty.

High Blood Pressure Medicines

High blood pressure medicines work in a variety of ways. These medicines may:

Reduce the amount of blood pumped: Beta blockers protect the heart from nervous system stimulation, decreasing the amount of blood pumped out of the heart during each heartbeat. Commonly used beta blockers include propranolol, nadolol, and metoprolol. Enzyme inhibitor high blood pressure medicines such as captopril reduce the amount of blood pumped from the body back into the heart.

Dilate blood vessels: Several different types of high blood pressure medicines including the enzyme inhibitors, calcium channel blockers (nifedipine and verapamil) and direct acting vasodilators (hydralazine and minoxidil) lower blood pressure by causing certain blood vessels to dilate (become larger).

Inhibit nerve receptors in the brain: Blood pressure medicines which inhibit nerve receptors in the brain are called "central acting agents" to distinguish them from medicines that work directly on the heart or blood vessels. These potent medicines, which include methyldopa and clonidine, are widely used to lower elevated blood pressure.

Shooting Spree

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Four murder charges and 12 other felony counts against Michael Charles Hayes have been referred to Forsyth Superior Court for trial after Hayes waived a preliminary hearing in Forsyth District Court on a shooting spree July 17.

Hayes, who is being held by the state Department of Correction, was brought to Forsyth County for the hearing Monday. He was returned to Central Prison in Raleigh without appearing in court after the hearing was waived.

District Attorney Warren Sparrow said he will ask the Forsyth County grand jury to indict Hayes on the felony charges next week.

Sheriff's deputies say that Hayes killed four people and wounded four others July 17 as he fired a .22 caliber rifle into cars driving along the 3300 block of Old Salisbury Road.

Escapees

GREENSBORO (AP) — Three prisoners escaped from the Guilford County Superior Courthouse Monday after a lock in a holding cell malfunctioned, and another prisoner escaped from the Guilford County Jail when he slipped out of his handcuffs, officials say. One escapee has been captured.

Three men remained at large Tuesday morning.

Guilford County Sheriff's Major Larry Linthicum said the lock on the prisoners' holding cell at the courthouse malfunctioned and failed to relock after the bailiff removed one of the prisoners. Officials said the three men walked out of the holding cell while about 17 fellow detainees watched.

"I don't think this was a planned situation," said Capt. Sidney Wray of the Guilford County Sheriff's Department. "It was a spur of the moment thing."

Greensboro police captured Ronald Boatman, 19, at about 9:00 p.m. Monday night. Boatman had been jailed for violating probation and breaking and entering.

Woman Chains Self In Albany Protest

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALBANY, N.Y. — A North Carolina woman who chained herself to a legislative office building doorway says it's the best way of drawing attention to New York state's failure to protect children from abuse by their parents.

Jennifer Vollmer, a 22-year-old resident of Gastonia, N.C., and a former New York resident, shouted slogans for a half hour after chaining herself to the doorway Monday. She was cut loose with wirecutters by state Capitol Police, who issued her a warning but didn't arrest her.

"I feel like this gets more people's attention and kind of lets them know that you're not fooling around," said Ms. Vollmer, who said she was a victim of child abuse at the hands of relatives. "I'm not just out here doing this because I have nothing better to do on a Monday afternoon."

Ms. Vollmer contended that the fact child abuse records are kept confidential by New York state law hinders school officials and others from finding out whether a person has a history of abusing children.

Officials of the National Child Rights Alliance, who toted placards in support of Ms. Vollmer's protest, said they're angry that former child abuse victims aren't taken more seriously in debates over changes of policy. They said state policies that try to keep families together take the wrong approach.

"It's very frustrating," said Jeanne Lenzer, a former Durham, N.C., resident who is chairwoman of the New York chapter of the organization. "The very laws they say are protecting our children are actually hurting them."

They cited the case of Lisa Steinberg, a New York City girl whose 1987 death was blamed by authorities on series of beatings administered by her guardian, Joel Steinberg. Steinberg is on trial for second-degree murder.

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — A 27-year-old Wilson woman was found strangled in her vehicle less than two blocks from her home, authorities say.

Wilson Police Detective J.L. Bass said Monday that officers found the body of Lori Jean Woodard Sauls at 2:25 p.m. Saturday, slumped in the floorboard of her vehicle. When officers arrived on the scene they found Ms. Sauls' unclothed body slumped in the passenger floorboard, her head lying on the seat, officials said.

Ms. Sauls' body was immediately transported to a Pitt Memorial Hospital where an autopsy confirmed that Ms. Sauls had been strangled.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has signed into law a consumer protection bill authored by Rep. David Price, D-N.C.

The Home Equity Loan Consumer Protection Act became law over the Thanksgiving holiday. Reagan signed the bill on Nov. 23. The House originally approved the bill in June, and the Senate agreed to the version hours before adjournment on Oct. 22.

The law requires lenders to disclose the full terms and obligations of home equity loans.

New Sheriff

RAEFORD, N.C. (AP) — Alex S. Norton was picked unanimously by the Hoke County Board of Commissioners on Monday night to succeed Sheriff Dave Barrington, whose retirement is effective Wednesday.

Commissioners picked Barrington's 58-year-old chief deputy from a field of six candidates that included detective Jimmy Riley, the son of commissioner Mabel Riley.

Commissioners set a meeting for Wednesday at 5 p.m. to formally appoint Norton and determine his salary.

She unsuccessfully tried to chain shut a second set of doors to the legislative office building across from the state Capitol before chaining herself to the other doorway. She left peacefully after being cut free, hugging one of the police officers who freed her.

Capt. William Bottachiari of the Capital Police said he saw no need to arrest Ms. Vollmer, but would if she tried the same protest again.

"They just wanted to do their thing," he said of the protesters.

Increase In Lending Rate May Cut Into Spending For Christmas Gifts

By Vivian Marino
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Consumers may cut back on big-tag Christmas presents now that the nation's biggest banks boosted their prime lending rates to 10.5 percent, the highest level in 3½ years, some analysts said.

The increases in the key lending rate by a half percentage point were announced Monday and were the fourth this year.

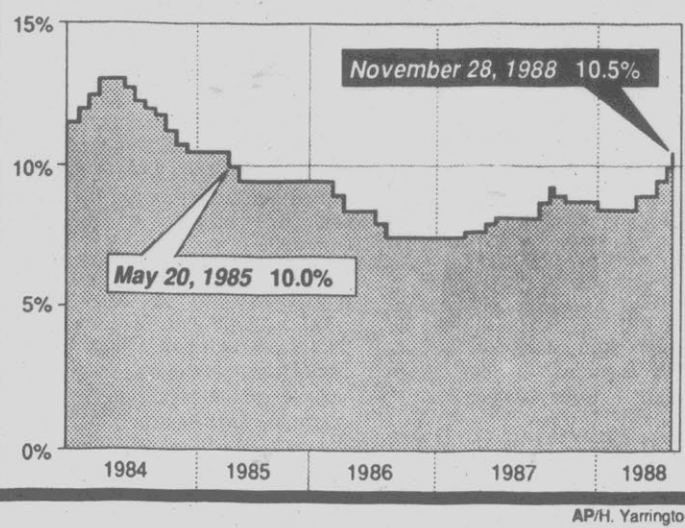

Many economists have been predicting a prime rate hike in recent weeks because interest rates in the bond markets have been rising due to inflation speculation and the dollar's weakness in foreign exchange.

"It comes as no surprise. In fact, they (banks) seem to have held back longer than I expected," said Edward Yardeni, chief economist for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.

The prime rate reflects a bank's costs of borrowing money, including interest it pays on savings accounts or certificates of deposit, and trails more subtle increases in other interest rates.

The rate is watched closely because bankers use it as a basis for calculating interest on corporate loans and for determining many types of fixed and adjustable-rate consumer loans, such as home equity loans.

"It's clear that consumers will be absorbing higher borrowing costs in December or early next year," said William V. Sullivan, an economist for the investment firm Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

But some economists said it was unclear whether the rate-hike would adversely affect the economy, specifically consumer buying habits during the holiday season.

"I think the direct effect is pretty small because generally consumers aren't affected by modest increases in interest rates," said James L. Kochan, chief fixed-income strategist for Merrill Lynch Capital Markets Inc.

But some economists said it was unclear whether the rate-hike would adversely affect the economy, specifically consumer buying habits during the holiday season.

Michael Rothman, analyst at Merrill Lynch Capital Markets in New York, said the accord "will prevent a sharp slide in prices. ... It's a good agreement."

The production agreement was fashioned in nearly two weeks of meetings by OPEC ministers. Under the pact, the cartel would limit production in the first six months of next year to 18.5 million barrels a day.

But Yardeni said some consumers might cut back on spending and "buy only things that they can afford."

"There's an underlying sense of uneasiness because so many people have been through rough times even when the economy was strong. The prime rate hike coming into the Christmas season may make people more cautious," he said.

The financial markets had no major reaction to Monday's announcement. Stock and bond prices rose modestly, while the dollar held firm against other major currencies.

Sullivan said the markets also are prepared for further increases in interest rates.

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan has warned of higher short-term rates unless lawmakers work to trim the huge federal budget deficit, a key factor in the recent weakening of the dollar.

"There's a building perception in the marketplace that the Fed is, in fact, tightening conditions ...," Sullivan said.

Sullivan and other economists predicted the Fed might soon raise its discount rate, or the interest it charges on loans to banks, and if that happens, the banks might raise rates again.

"I'd look for something (from the Fed) in the next two weeks," said Yardeni.

Chase Manhattan was the first institution to announce the prime-rate hike Monday and several other major banks joined the move.

The prime stood at 8.5 percent at the beginning of this year and the banks have raised it four times since then. Monday's increase put the key lending rate at its highest level since May 20, 1985, when the banks lowered it a half percentage point to 10 percent.

OPEC Production Pact Is Already Showing Stress

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VIENNA, Austria — The ink was barely dry on OPEC's new production-limiting agreement when indications arose that the quota-cheating that plagued the cartel in recent years might continue.

Mana Saeed Otaiba, oil minister of the United Arab Emirates, indicated Monday that the daily production ceiling the pact sets for his nation "does not represent its official quota."

Otaiba's broad hint that the emirates might not feel bound by Monday's agreement sparked a selloff that sharply reduced the big gains crude prices posted on earlier news that the pact was reached.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the January contract for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, traded as high as $15.80 a barrel before settling at $15.03 on Monday, up $1.06 from Wednesday's close.

The market was closed Thursday and Friday for the Thanksgiving holiday.

Each $1 rise in the price of crude oil theoretically means a pickup of 2.5 cents a gallon in retail gasoline prices, although oil companies do not necessarily pass along the full increase.

The new agreement by the 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, effective Jan. 1, aims to curb the cartel's recent breakneck production, reduce the world oil glut and drive up crude prices.

The accord's success hinges on whether all member countries honor the quotas set out for them.

Analysts said they expected quota

Noted Psychiatrist Quits Harvard Faculty Amid Plagiarism Dispute

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — One of the nation's top psychiatrists resigned from Harvard Medical School's faculty after a student at another school recognized plagiarized passages in the professor's writings dating back 22 years.

Dr. Shervert Frazier, 67, former director of the National Institute of Mental Health, resigned last week as a Harvard professor and head of McLean Hospital, a psychiatric hospital affiliated with the university.

Frazier did not dispute the findings of a faculty committee that investigated the allegations, but said the plagiarism was inadvertent, according to Dr. S. James Adelstein, dean of academic programs at the medical school.

"He has accepted the evidence of the committee," Adelstein said. "But he has ascribed the events to his method of note-taking and composing papers."

Harvard officials said Monday the plagiarism was spotted by Paul Scatena, a graduate student in cognitive sciences at the University of Rochester.

Scatena said in a telephone interview he read several of Frazier's papers while researching phantom pain, a burning sensation that patients sometimes feel from a limb that has been amputated.

Scatena said he found many incorrect citations in the papers and recognized paragraphs that had been lifted from articles by other researchers. He said he sent the passages to Dr. Daniel C. Tosteson, dean of the Harvard Medical School, in August.

Tosteson announced Frazier's resignation in a Nov. 23 letter to the faculty. The letter, made public by the university Monday, says a faculty committee investigated the allegations and concluded that plagiarism occurred in four papers written by Frazier between 1966 and 1975.

Frazier could not be reached for comment Monday. Spokesmen at Harvard and McLean Hospital said he was out of town and unreachable. He did not return messages left at the hospital, and the phone at his home went unanswered.

Three of the discredited papers are about phantom pain. The fourth is on "psychiatric emergency management."

The papers, which were published in medical journals and textbooks, were intended as "teaching instruments" and did not purport to present new research data, Adelstein said.

One of Frazier's colleagues said he thought the forced resignation was an overreaction.

"It's not as if he stole a great idea from someone or published someone else's research as if it was his own," said Dr. Seymour Kety, professor emeritus of psychiatry and senior scientist at the National Institute of Health.

But Dr. Miles Shore, director of the Massachusetts Mental Health Center, said: "Academic institutions have a very important obligation to guarantee the scientific integrity of what goes on within their walls and I think Harvard took the appropriate action."

And Harvard spokesman Peter Costa said: "The university takes very seriously any charges of plagiarism because that's what we're about — the search for truth and knowledge."

DR. SHERVERT FRAZIER

The university has been hit by other allegations of scientific misconduct in recent years. In 1981, John R. Darsee was stripped of his position as a heart researcher for allegedly falsifying data. This year, Scheffer C.G. Tseng left his post at Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary after he was accused of changing his test methods and violating Harvard's conflict-of-interest rules in promoting an experimental eye drug.

Also this year, Harvard Medical School issued new guidelines for researchers in an effort to prevent academic fraud. The school also said it would consider appointing professors on the basis of only five to 10 papers, a move aimed at reducing the "publish or perish" pressure that sometimes underlies fraud.

Frazier was a professor of psychiatry at Harvard from 1972 until 1984, when he left to become director of the National Institute of Mental Health in Rockville, Md. He returned to Harvard in 1986 to become head of McLean, one of the nation's leading psychiatric hospitals.

He has worked at the Mayo Clinic, Presbyterian Hospital in New York and Baylor University, among other institutions. He is a former commissioner of mental health and mental retardation in Texas.

Hush-Hush Count Still On At Cape

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A hush-hush countdown continued today with the space shuttle Atlantis and its five-man crew facing an unfavorable weather forecast for Thursday's scheduled liftoff for a secret military mission.

A 21-member team of launch managers and engineers today was to take over key decisions leading to the launch, and the preliminary forecast indicated high winds and clouds.

Also scheduled today were jet training flights for the five military astronauts assigned to the mission, equipment checks and operations reviews.

The decision-making group is headed by former astronaut Robert Crippen, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's deputy director for shuttle operations, who has sole authority to approve or stop a launch.

A brief statement was expected late in the day on the readiness of Atlantis and its military crew for a mission that reportedly will deploy the $500 million Lacrosse satellite to spy on the Soviet Union.

NASA, meanwhile, remained silent on the exact status of the countdown after announcing that it had started early Monday. Officials will say only that the launch is set for sometime between 6:32 a.m. and 9:32 a.m. Thursday. Sources have reported liftoff will occur about 7 a.m. if weather and other conditions are acceptable.

NASA and the Defense Department issue periodic reports that the countdown is progressing but want to keep its precise status secret to cloak the exact time of launch.

There also will be a news blackout through the flight on what the astronauts are doing in orbit.

Pentagon officials contend the secrecy makes it more difficult for the Soviet Union to monitor the flight and learn its purpose.

But the Soviets, through its news agency Tass, have indicated they know much about the mission.

The Atlantis commander is Navy Cmdr. Robert L. Gibson, the pilot is Air Force Lt. Col. Guy S. Gardner, and the mission specialists are Col. Richard M. Mullane and Lt. Col. Jerry L. Ross of the Air Force and Navy Cmdr. William M. Shepherd.

Cargill Tops Forbes' List Of Largest Private Firms

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The impact of the recent wave of leveraged buyouts is evident in Forbes magazine's list of the nation's 400 largest private companies, which was topped for the fourth straight year by commodities giant Cargill.

Forbes said in its Dec. 12 issue that 40 entries on the list were public companies that went private in 1988 — compared with 21 on the list last year — including such well known businesses as Trans World Airlines and Montgomery Ward.

Minneapolis-based Cargill's 1987 revenue totaled $38.2 billion, Forbes said. That was up nearly $6 billion, or 18 percent, from the previous year, and was more than double that of the second largest company on the list, Koch Industries, the Wichita, Kan.-based oil company that had sales of $16 billion.

Continental Grain of New York and Safeway Stores of Oakland, Calif., were tied for third with $13 billion in sales. United Parcel Service of Greenwich, Conn., was fifth at $9.7 billion.

Among those entering the list as a result of leveraged buyouts were Dallas-based Southland, ranked No. 6 with $8.5 billion in sales and the biggest newcomer to the rankings. A leveraged buyout is when the buyer of a corporation uses some of its assets to cover the purchase price.

Montgomery Ward, Bell & Howell, Duracell, Singer and TWA were among other well-known companies that crossed the line into private ownership in 1988.

Forbes based its list on revenues for fiscal 1987, some of which were reported by the companies and some of which were estimated by the magazine.

Total revenue of the 400 companies rose 17 percent to $523 billion in 1988 from 1987, Forbes said. By comparison, combined sales for the 400 largest public companies in the United States rose 7.4 percent in the past year to $2.6 trillion.

A private company is one with no publicly traded common stock, either because it has too few common shareholders to file with the Securities & Exchange Commission or, if it files, its stock is unavailable to the general public.

The number of people employed at Forbes 400 private companies totaled 3.7 million, up 14 percent from last year's 3.2 million. United Parcel Service leads the list with 170,000 employees.

Farm Exports Soar

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Farm exports soared to a six-year peak of 147.5 million metric tons in the year that ended Sept. 30, and black ink in U.S. agricultural trade doubled to more than $14 billion, the Agriculture Department says.

Japan was again the top customer of the American farmer, as it has been for more than two decades, according to figures released Monday.

American farm exports climbed from $27.87 billion in fiscal 1987 to $35.2 billion this past fiscal year, a gain of 26 percent, while imports of farm products were up 2 percent to a record $21 billion, USDA said.

The United States was thus left with a net agricultural trade surplus of $14.2 billion for fiscal 1988, compared with $7.22 billion a year earlier.

Volume of exports climbed 14 percent from the 129.2 million metric tons posted in fiscal 1987, with wheat accounting for two-thirds of the increase, USDA said. A metric ton is equivalent to about 2,205 pounds.

Exports of wheat increased from 28.2 million metric tons in 1987 to 40.5 million tons in the last fiscal year. The Soviet Union and China together purchased a total of 14.6 million tons, or 36 percent of all U.S. wheat shipments in fiscal 1988.

Combined imports by the Soviet Union and China totaled 4.95 million metric tons of American wheat in 1987, or 18 percent of all shipments.

OMB Proposes $1.1 Billion Cut In Medicaid Payments

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The Office of Management and Budget has proposed cutting $1.1 billion from projected 1990 federal payments to the states for Medicaid, the medical assistance program for 22 million low-income people, according to budget documents obtained Monday.

Unless the plan is reversed before President Reagan sends his final budget to Congress in January, it is certain to set off a bitter fight with Congress. The states would have to make up the lost revenues out of their funds or cut their programs from levels they would reach under current rules.

"If these reports are true it's an outrage," said Rep. Henry A. Waxman, D-Calif., chairman of the House subcommittee with Medicaid jurisdiction.

"Over the past six years, the Congress has moved away from these shortsighted and mean-spirited cuts in the Medicaid program. The program administrators oppose them, the governors oppose them, the Congress opposes them," Waxman said.

Recalling that Reagan in 1981 won approval of a similar plan that was later killed by Congress, Waxman said, "To bring these irresponsible proposals back now, after Mr. Bush has talked about expanding Medicaid to reach the poor and uninsured, would only make a mockery of his campaign promise to make a kinder, gentler nation. I hope he dismisses them without any consideration at all."

Bush transition aides, reached late

Monday, had no comment on the OMB proposals.

In addition to the Medicaid cut, the OMB also has proposed reductions in projected Medicare outlays of $5.2 billion in fiscal 1990, almost entirely by cutting payments to doctors and hospitals for services to 33 million aged and disabled Social Security recipients. The American Hospital Association and Federation of American Health Systems said they will fight such cuts.

The OMB also has backed $1.6 billion for AIDS research and related programs in 1990, compared with $1.9 billion sought by the Department of Health and Human Services. The fiscal 1989 appropriation was $1.3 billion.

Under the existing Medicaid program, the federal government reimburses the states for 50 percent to 78 percent of their outlays for medical services to low-income people. Rich states get 50 percent, poorer states more.

Under the OMB plan, each state in 1990 would get 3 percent less than the amount to which it would otherwise be entitled in reimbursements for benefits. In 1991, the reduction would be 4 percent, and from 1992 on, 4.5 percent. This cut, which HHS Secretary Otis R. Bowen has asked OMB to drop, would reduce federal reimbursements to the states by $1.1 billion in fiscal 1990 from the amount they would otherwise get, rising to $2.34 billion by 1994. In addition, federal reimbursements to the states for administration costs would be cut several hundred million dollars a year.

In Medicare, as disclosed earlier, the documents show that the OMB is seeking a number of major cuts. These include:

- Reducing Medicare payments to hospitals for their capital costs by 25 percent below Medicare's traditional "fair share" (savings of $920 million in 1990).

- Reducing payments to hospitals for their costs of interns, residents and other trainees by $1 billion in fiscal 1990.

Computer's Virus Draws More Sympathy Than Hers

I got a virus the same week the nation's computers did. The computers got theirs from a 23-year-old kid from Arnold, Md. I got mine from shaking hands in church and saying, "Peace be with you."

The computer virus made the national news. My virus got a yawn from my husband, who said, "Get dressed and you'll feel better."

Frankly, I don't like computers taking on human airs. If they want to get a fungus when someone spills coffee on their keys, OK, but a virus belongs to people who can feel and throw up.

In a few short years, the computer has gotten more respect than people have in the last two centuries. I don't know why. As my husband pressed a brown grocery bag into a waste can and mechanically shoved it near my bed, he said, "This is terrible. Have you any idea the damage a computer virus could do to this country? It could bring it to its knees."

I crawled to the bathroom. "Listen to this," he yelled. "The virus spread to more than 6,000 computers in top universities, research centers and military installations. We're just lucky our computer wasn't affected."

At Wits End Erma Bombeck

I grabbed a nose tissue and pulled myself into bed. "The only thing you've stored on it are our appliance serial numbers."

"Can you imagine," he said, "what would happen if they were floating around out there for the world to see? Or worse, if they were erased?"

Computers always act like they're sick to me. They're always making those whining sounds as though they're not going to show up for the next printout. And no one ever wants to admit that a computer made a mistake.

I remember a letter I got a while back from a woman who wrote that more than two years ago, her daughter went to the bank to close her account and wrote out a withdrawal slip for $99. The teller gave her $999. Her daughter said she'd love to take it, but she had only $99 in her account. The teller said someone must have deposited it for her. The computer never makes a mistake, she said. The girl spent six months trying to give the money back to the bank. They refused to take it. Her daughter had her teeth fixed and the teeth of her two boys because "computers don't make mistakes."

Frankly, I never took computers too seriously. I figured they were a fad, like the Hula Hoop and the Pet Rock, until one day in Filene's basement in Boston. The lights dimmed and there was silence. All the computers had gone out. Have you any idea what it's like to be in a store full of crazed shoppers with money and bargains, and the computers won't permit you to buy anything? It was an ugly sight.

The point is, the computers are well again. I'm still tired and have a cough that is hanging on. They'll find a cure for the common cold -- when a computer catches one.

Some Tips Make It Easier To Buy Gifts For Children

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Aunts, uncles, grandparents and friends can find holiday shopping frustrating when searching for gifts for youngsters.

"It's tough to know what to buy for young children because they change greatly in relatively short spans of time," says Dr. Susan Bredekamp of the National Association for the Education of Young Children.

"A wooden puzzle with a couple of pieces might be wonderful for a 15-month-old but boring to a 3-year-old, who wants the challenge of more pieces," she says. "A 3-year-old will love big fat paint brushes but the 5-year-old, who has developed finer hand movements, may want the slender kind."

The association, whose 60,000 members are teachers and administrators of the nation's child care, pre-school and kindergarten programs, offers these tips for holiday shopping:

— Avoid fad toys. "There is a reason the same toys are played with generation after generation: wooden blocks, crayon, puzzles, trucks, dolls. It's because they meet the needs that young children have always had," Bredekamp says. — Know the child's age, especially up to age 3. Very young children change significantly every three to six months, and thus their interest in certain toys changes. When in doubt, pick something the child will grow into within six months.

— Buy toys that involve the child, not that entertain him. "Talking" for a doll that doesn't speak, for example, stimulates a child's imagination more than playing with dolls that talk. Toys that move to a young child's touch help develop motor skills and thus are better than battery-run toys.

— Opt for toys that allow a child to create whatever he or she wants rather than a defined object. Young children enjoy coloring all over a page, for example, more than coloring in a coloring book, because it is fun, not because it looks good. Likewise, Bredekamp says, wood, nails and a small hammer are better than a model or a kit.

— Remember that price has no bearing on the interest the child will have in a toy. "Many favorite activities of children involve inexpensive articles — Packets of colored construction paper, a box of chalk, plastic stacking cups.

Verbal Abuse The Lesser Of Two Evils

Dear Abby: If someone could compile an accurate statistic of all reported and unreported incidents of men beating up women — say, "Last year, 3,450,785 females were physically abused by their husbands, lovers or boyfriends" — another statistic would say, "In 1987, 3,450,785 males were verbally abused by their wives, lovers or girlfriends!"

While men pound with violent fists, women slash with vicious tongues!

I work in a casino where thousands of people pass by every day. To hear women insult, humiliate and denigrate their men in public is commonplace. (Imagine what they say at home?)

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

All in nature must balance, so for every man who takes it in the ear, another gives it on the chin. For every woman who whips out her tongue, her sister somewhere gets it in the mouth.

Solution: There are national drives against drugs, alcohol and smoking; one is needed against "anger." How about "No Anger Group" — we could call it NAG. — Mr. Sore Ears

Dear Mr. Sore Ears: Anger is a human emotion, and there is nothing wrong with appropriate anger. (To become angry about injustice, prejudice and inequality is appropriate, and, therefore, good.) But if one acts out his anger with violence — that's bad.

Unfortunately, there can be no official statistics of unreported incidents of physical and/or verbal abuse perpetrated by men or women. While neither is desirable, verbal abuse is the lesser of the evils. Ask any victim of physical abuse — male or female.

Dear Abby: Our problem is a pair of amorous but obnoxious neighbors.

The Mr. leaves the house about 6:30 a.m. for work. The Mrs. kisses him goodbye at the door. Then he gets into his car, and as he drives off, he yells to his wife, "I love you!" Then she answers him with, "I love youuuuuu!" This can be heard in our house even with all the doors and windows closed.

They both holler "I love you" until he is out of sight. Abby, we believe in love, too, but this is really annoying for neighbors who are retired and don't have to get up at 6:30 every morning.

Maybe if you print this, it would calm down those lovebirds. Abby, this is no put-on. It's an earnest problem. — K. In Springfield, Ohio

Dear K.: I suppose it's better than being awakened at 2 a.m. by a couple of battling neighbors. But no matter how you are being disturbed, these neighbors are disturbing your peace.

Don't rely on their seeing this in the newspaper. Ask them (nicely, of course) to please tone down their loving farewells in the morning.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were marginally higher in early trading today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up 3.91 to 2,085.35 as of 10 a.m. EST.

Advancing issues were slightly ahead of decliners, with 461 stocks rising, 412 falling and 540 unchanged on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the Big Board was light, with 16.68 million shares changing hands after the first 30 minutes of trading.

The Commerce Department said the economy, as measured by the GNP, expanded at a moderate 2.6 percent annual rate in the third quarter. That was up from the government's preliminary estimate last month of 2.2 percent growth, but below the 2.9 percent to 3 percent expected on Wall Street.

The GNP news sent the dollar lower and bond prices higher.

The most actively traded issue on the NYSE today was Northeast Utilities, which was unchanged at 20 3/4.

RJR Nabisco was up 3/4 at 89 3/4 as today's 5 p.m. EST deadline for bids for the tobacco and food company neared.

On Monday, the Dow Jones industrial average rose 6.76 to 2,081.44. Advancing and declining issues ran about even on the NYSE, with 710 stocks up, 726 down and 521 unchanged.

Big Board volume came to 123.48 million shares, up from 72.09 million the previous session.

Bribery Charge
RALEIGH (AP) — A Morrisville town commissioner was charged Monday with accepting a $55,000 bribe in return for aiding approval of a rezoning petition, authorities said.

Delores Mills Scott, 45, of Morrisville was charged with bribery of a public official as a result of a State Bureau of Investigations probe. Ms. Scott, who was elected to the board last year, was released on a $5,000 unsecured bond.

According to the arrest warrant, Ms. Scott was offered a bribe by SBI agent J.W. Bryant "with the understanding that the defendant would be influenced in her official actions (and) she would support and vote for the rezoning."

SBI Agent William F. Dowdy said Ms. Scott was arrested at 3:30 p.m. Monday, shortly after money was exchanged outside the Morrisville Hudson-Belk and Leggett service center where she works.

Indictment
CHARLOTTE (AP) — A Burke County grand jury on Monday indicted Philip Reid Payne Jr. on first-degree murder charges in the Oct. 31 shooting death of his second wife.

Payne Sheriff's officials charged Payne, 24, on Nov. 16 in the death of 25-year-old Pamela Barry Payne. The grand jury indictment replaces that charge and moves the case to Superior Court.

Payne was released Nov. 22 from the Burke County Jail under $75,000 secured bond. Sheriff's officials expect to serve Payne with the indictment Tuesday.

Pamela Payne, 25, was shot in the chest with a 12-gauge shotgun on Halloween night at the couple's home in the Salem community, Burke County Sheriff Ralph Johnson said.

House Relocated

Harris said the cost of relocating the house would be "right on budget" with the $25,000 which had been estimated to relocate the structure.

Of that amount, the city had agreed to pay up to $5,000. The previous owners, James F. Arthur and Louis C. Arthur, contributed 5,000 while the developer, Charles Boulevard Associates, contributed $10,000. Collice C. Moore and Associates contributed the remaining $5,000 for the effort.

Under terms of the agreement, the city now owns the 19th century, gothic-influenced Victorian farmhouse.

City Manager Greg Knowles said many options are available to the city in deciding the house's future.

"A number of groups have shown interest. Now the city will be able to sit back and takes its time to market the house properly. There will be a number of groups that will have the opportunity to put together a proposal for the city," he said.

Kremlin Offers Veto

known as soviets, or councils, could be left for later.

"We have just embarked on reform," he said. "In this revolutionary period, we are blowing up the old structure." The first step in reconstruction is the overhaul now before the parliament, he said.

Gorbachev rejected complaints that the principle of one man, one vote is violated by a plan to let organizations, such as the Communist Party and trade unions, elect one-third of the deputies in a new Congress of People's Deputies.

He said the reform clearly states that legislative elections can have multiple candidates, but added that because numerous candidates could be proposed, they must face "preliminary discussion" before their local nominating commissions. It was not known whether the commissions could reject specific candidates.

The Soviet leader also hinted at promised future reforms.

Pirates Defeat Spartans

ECU Wins Second Straight As UNCG Falls By 68-49

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

It wasn't what Coach Mike Steele wanted, but it turned out OK as East Carolina downed UNC-Greensboro, 68-49, Monday night in Minges Coliseum.

"We played like a team that was supposed to win the game and we're not at that point yet," Steele said after it was over.

In contrast to the opener against North Carolina Wesleyan on Saturday night, Steele felt that too many Pirates were on the court on their own and not playing the team game.

"We spent a lot of time talking about the defense and for the most part, I thought it was solid," Steele said. "But offensively we were horrible. Everyone was looking to score after one pass. They weren't trying to play a team game, set screens, make the good pass. Nobody looked like they were having fun playing. I'm very disappointed in the number of assists we had."

The Pirates, who led throughout the game, turned in only 14 assists, one less than the Spartans, with Jeff Kelly leading the way with five and Reed Lose adding four.

"Jeff gave us a lift," Steele said. "He got us going. I thought Gus (Hill) did a good job in the second half. He got a couple of big steals for us and I was pleased for him. He struggled in the first game."

Hill finished the game with 20 points, high for the Pirates, who again placed three players in double figures. Edwards, who suffered throughout the game, scored by 12 coming off a 34-point performance on Saturday, while Lose added 11.

Steele said that the Pirates may have been looking past UNCG to Wednesday night's game at Duke, the nation's number one team. "I talked to Coach K (Mike Krzyzewski) today and he said that UNCG would be a tough game for us, with everyone talking about our playing Duke. We didn't overlook Greensboro, but they came to play and I thought they did a nice job."

Kenny Murphy got the game off to a good start when he popped in a three-pointer to open the scoring just 18 seconds into the game. Kevin Staples added a layup for a 5-0 lead before Greensboro got on the board.

Greensboro cut the lead back to one on a couple of occasions in the early going, but then, ECU steadily pulled away to as much as a 16-point lead in the half. Murphy's follow-up shot with 9:03 left moved the lead in to double figures at 20-10. It reached 16 for the first time at 30-14 on a layup by Stanley Love with 4:32 left.

But just as happened Saturday against Wesleyan, the Pirate opponent put on a half-closing rally, trimming the lead to as little as 12, 34-22, before Hill scored a layup with 19 seconds left for a 36-22 halftime margin.

East Carolina inched the lead back out to 15, 41-26, but Greensboro took command of the game at that point. Over the next nine minutes, the Spartans hacked away at the lead, finally chopping it to four, 45-41, with 9:39 left.

That came after a surprising technical against Lose. With 10:24 left, Lose and a Spartan player scrambled after a rebound that went out of bounds in the corner of the court. Lose grabbed the ball and threw it off the body of the Greensboro player — a tactic he has often used to retain possession. But the official said he had thrown the ball after the whistle had blown for the out-of-bounds, and called the technical for unsportsmanlike conduct.

"(The official) said he had blown the whistle before Reed threw the ball," Steele said. "Reed said he didn't hear the whistle and neither (See PIRATES, B-2)

North Carolina relied on a 13-2 run in the second half to pull away from Stanford, while elsewhere in the Atlantic Coast Conference, North Carolina State, Georgia Tech and Clemson defeated non-conference opponents and Wake Forest lost to Richmond.

Jeff Lebo scored 24 points to pace North Carolina to the 87-76 victory, while Kevin Madden finished with 16 points.

Stanford coach Mike Montgomery saw several deficiencies that could be responsible for the loss, but his main concern was his team's play on the boards. North Carolina outrebounded Stanford 38-18.

"Had we played better in the zone and been more patient on offense while hitting the boards, I felt we had a legitimate shot at winning the ballgame," Montgomery said. "In the second half, we just weren't as patient on offense. We wanted to force things a little more, and they killed us on the boards. "We just stood around and watched."

"We didn't come out for the second half harder than we did for the first half. They did and that made the difference," Licht said.

Todd Licht led the Cardinals, scoring 20 points despite sitting out five minutes of the second half because of foul trouble.

Rodney Monroe and Avie Lester fueled a second-half run that powered North Carolina State to an 87-67 victory over Akron.

Monroe scored 16 of his 26 points in the second half, and Lester added 12 of his 22 in the final period. Sophomore guard Chris Corchiani chipped in a career high 16 assists.

North Carolina State coach Jim Valvano said he was looking for 20 good minutes.

"We need to win the '20-minute game,'" Valvano said. "That is the first and last five minutes of the first and second half. We did just that."

"It is especially good to win against a quality Akron team this early in the season," Valvano said. "They are intelligent and very well coached. They've had success and they expect success."

Mike Winiacki scored 25 points, including 15 in the first 10 minutes of the second half, to lead Richmond to a 74-61 victory over Wake Forest.

David Carlyle led Wake Forest with 14 points, and Chris King and Robert Siler added 12 each.

Wake Forest, which opened its season Monday, played good defense, but the offense struggled at times, said Wake Forest coach Bob Staak.

"This loss hurts but we have a lot of games left on the schedule," Staak said. "We are a young team and this is just one of the growing pains that a young team must endure."

In Atlanta, Dennis Scott lobbed bombs from midcourt while Tom Hammonds got the close-in shots and the rebounds as 12th-ranked Georgia Tech outmanned rebuilding Coastal Carolina 95-65.

Scott led the team with 25 points, while Tom Hammonds scored 18 points and pulled down a game-high 14 rebounds and the 12th-ranked Yellow Jackets outrebounded the Chanticleers 46-28.

"Coach has confidence in my long-range shooting," said Scott, who sank seven 3-pointers. "Basically, if I'm not forcing it, he lets me take it as much as I want. Tonight it felt good, it was going in, so I kept shooting it."

In Clemson, S.C., Elden Campbell scored 26 points, including seven in a 7-2 run in the second half, as Clemson opened its season with a 96-82 victory over The Citadel.

Tennessee Glad To Be Ranked

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

After what he's endured the last couple of years, Don DeVoe isn't about to be overcome by joy just because his Tennessee basketball team is ranked 20th in the country this week.

After opening with a 118-86 romp over Tennessee Tech, Tennessee began its quest for the Southeastern Conference title with an 84-76 victory at Mississippi.

"We may be in the top 20, but we weren't favored to win the game," DeVoe said. "So rankings really don't mean that much. We'd like to be number one — but on April seventh."

DeVoe, among the highly respected coaches in the country, has been a success at every stop during a career that is in its 18th season — 88-45 and a National Invitation Tournament title at Virginia Tech, 29-25 in two years of reviving a downtrodden Wyoming program, and 187-126 two games into his 11th season at Tennessee.

DeVoe got the call after Tennessee struggled to an 11-16 mark in 1978, and immediately put a charge into the program. His first team was 21-12 and, perhaps more important to Big Orange followers, swept three games against Kentucky's defending NCAA champions.

In succeeding years, Tennessee won 18, 21, 20, 20, 21 and 22 games and played in either the NCAA or NIT each season. As for the Kentucky thing, DeVoe built a 9-6 record over college basketball's winningest team, including a 7-0 mark in games played in front of the home folks in Knoxville.

Interest in basketball was such that Tennessee embarked on the building of the 24,535-seat Thompson-Bolling Arena. It was at that time that the basketball program soured. Records of 12-16 and 14-15 had the natives grumbling.

Last season, Tennessee began to come back, going 16-13, including a delicious 72-70 shocker over Kentucky that had the fans recalling the earlier DeVoe teams.

Tennessee was the only new member of this week's Top Twenty, although there was shuffling of positions among the other 19.

Duke, No. 1 in the preseason poll, was the choice for the second week in a row in regular-season balloting by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. The Blue Devils, who beat The Citadel 93-52 in their only game of the week, received 47 of 63 first-place votes and 1,229 points.

Michigan, winner of the talent laden Maui Classic, took over second with seven first-place votes and 1,162 points. The Wolverines, 3-0, beat Vanderbilt, Memphis State and then-No. 4 Oklahoma to claim the Maui crown.

Georgetown was third in the voting with seven first-place votes and 1,096 points after beating Hawaii-Loa 105-69 and Hawaii Pacific 95-55.

Langley Hoping For More Time

Former Rose Star Is Now Freshman Reserve For UNC-Greensboro

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Keyford Langley was looking

forward to returning home Monday night for his debut as a collegiate basketball player, but the script didn't work out the way he would have liked.

Langley, a former Rose High standout, is a freshman guard at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. He and his Division II Spartan teammates came in to Minges Coliseum Monday hoping to steal a win over East Carolina, a Division I school.

Instead, the Pirates pulled away in the second half for a 68-49 win.

The game had special significance for Langley. He worked out with his brother Lenny, who plays at Johnson C. Smith, and ECU players Jeff Kelly and Jimmy Hinton during the summer.

"I wanted to win so bad," said Langley. "I thought we'd win. I think a couple of our shots just didn't fall. The guy that usually takes those shots, Greg Stauffer, will usually get those. He just had a cold night. When he's on we really roll but he was a bit off it tonight."

In fact, Stauffer was 1-9 from the field. UNCG drew within four points with 9:39 remaining at 45-41, but ECU took control of the game from there as Gus Hill scored eight consecutive points to give the Pirates the breathing room they needed.

Langley, who has been hampered by foot injuries during the pre-season, didn't see a whole lot of playing time. He got into the game with 1:49 remaining, but didn't take a shot. He was matched up against Hinton defensively and got to bring the ball upcourt once. Fellow freshman Tony Green is the starter at point guard and got the bulk of the playing time Monday night.

"I was just going to try and give it all I got (once I got in), keep up the intensity the team had with the starting point guard and not to lose anything but try to gain something," Langley said.

"He's had some foot problems," said UNCG coach Bob McEvoy. "We think he's going to be a very good player. He and Tony Greene will give us some good quality play."

"The biggest adjustment is learning a whole new system, and secondly the physical nature of college basketball. He's going up against bigger, stronger players every day."

The adjustments are still being made, according to Langley.

"I just had to get used to the defensive pressure, learn a lot of plays and just to be smart with the ball," he said. "It's more intense. You have to learn UNCG's system of defense. I was used to just playing my man straight up but I adjusted well to it."

Langley was the point guard on a Big East regular season champion as a junior and then averaged 15 points and four assists a game as a senior.

For a time, Langley thought he might end up playing at ECU, which showed some interest in him prior to his senior year.

"When I was in high school I played mostly two guard my senior year," Langley said. "He (ECU coach Mike Steele) didn't get a chance to look at me my junior year as a true point guard. He looked at me when I was playing two guard. He really couldn't see my point guard abilities."

But Langley has no regrets. He was interested in UNCG from the outset.

Preliminary Mackerel Injunction Given

WILMINGTON (AP) — More than a dozen cases questioning fishery management plans have reached the courts in the past 12 years, but a North Carolina judge is the first to issue an injunction in the fishermen's favor, attorneys say. But some observers say they aren't sure that could be considered a victory.

A federal judge has issued a preliminary injunction keeping the Atlantic king mackerel season open for both recreational and commercial fishermen, marking the first successful challenge of a fisheries management plan in the United States.

Though he has not issued a final ruling, U.S. District Judge Malcolm J. Howard Friday signed an order keeping the seasons open in federal waters from North Carolina to Florida until the U.S. secretary of commerce submits specific reasons for the closure. Federal waters are from three to 200 miles offshore, where most king mackerel are caught.

Once the commerce secretary completes the review, the judge may issue a permanent ruling on the seasons or grant another hearing. Defendants in the case said North Carolina, which is one of the plaintiffs, has not necessarily scored a victory.

"I wouldn't call it successful," said Mark Godcharles, a fishery management specialist for the National Marine Fisheries Service. "It's not final. There is a thing called the appeals court."

Charles Shockey, attorney for the secretary of commerce, said the defense team is considering an appeal.

Members of the Commerce Department, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and National Marine Fisheries Service are named as defendants in a suit filed Nov. 10 by the state of North Carolina and about 150 fishermen and others with marine-related businesses.

The National Marine Fisheries Service closed the recreational season Oct. 17, based on records it said showed fishermen would surpass a 4.4 million-pound quota by the end of the month. On Nov. 15, Howard reopened the season with a temporary restraining order. He set a limit of three fish per person per day.

The commercial season, with a 2.6 million-pound quota, was scheduled to end Nov. 23, but Howard issued a temporary restraining order Nov. 22.

The extensions will affect at least 382 vessels in North Carolina with permits to commercially fish king mackerel. Many commercial fishermen rely on king mackerel to get them through the winter months.

National Marine Fisheries closes seasons in the South Atlantic based on recommendations from the South Atlantic Fishery Management Council. The suit asked for an order against closing both seasons early.

Howard's order says information shows the king mackerel closure discriminates against North Carolina fishermen in favor of fishermen in South Carolina, Georgia and Florida, where the season began several months ago. Though the recreational and commercial seasons usually last six to eight months, the bulk of the catches occur from November to January.

Ex-Duke Coach Eddie Cameron Mourned

DURHAM (AP) — Members of Duke University's top-ranked basketball team served as pallbearers after a brief funeral service Monday for Eddie Cameron, a former basketball and football coach and athletic director at the school.

The Rev. Brian Gentle of Cameron's Epworth United Methodist Church recalled a "legend in his own time" who had "time for the little people." The service was held in the Duke University Chapel.

"The real legend was this," Gentle said. "We indeed are part of a team. We do belong to each other."

Members of the teams Cameron assembled during 46 years at Duke University sat on the pews of the chapel.

Cameron died Friday after several years of declining health. He was 86.

Monday, John Crotty, who was named the most valuable player of the Investors Classic and led Virginia to the tournament title, was named the ACC player of the week.

Crotty, a sophomore from Spring Lake, N.J., scored 34 points, had 10 assists, grabbed seven rebounds and made four steals in the two games. He scored 20 points in an 99-73 opening round victory over Dartmouth and scored 14 points and had seven assists in an 80-63 championship victory over Marquette.

Elliott Ends Up Top Money Winner

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Bill Elliott of Dawsonville, Ga., who won 1988 NASCAR Winston Cup stock car racing championship in the third-closest point chase in history, finished the season as the circuit's leading money-winner.

With the inclusion of post-season awards, Elliott completed the year with winnings of $1,544,639, marking a record fourth straight year the driver has won more than $1 million.

Rusty Wallace of St. Louis, who finished second by 24 points, also was second in money-winnings with $1,411,567, the first time he has surpassed the $1 million mark in a single year.

Third-place Dale Earnhardt of Kannapolis, N.C., surpassed $1 million for the third straight season with winnings of $1,214,089.

NASCAR drivers now have won more than $1 million 10 times in a single season, beginning with Elliott's record $2.3 million in 1985.

Irish At Top Of Most Ballots

Notre Dame, fresh from a 27-10 victory over Southern California in their 1-2 shootout, was a near-unanimous choice as the nation's top college football team Monday in the Associated Press' next-to-last regular-season poll.

The setback dropped Southern Cal from second place to fifth and cost the Trojans their shot at the national championship. Defending national champion Miami, an 18-16 winner over previously unbeaten Arkansas, moved up from third place to second and West Virginia, Notre Dame's Jan. 2 Fiesta Bowl rival, jumped from fourth to third. It was the highest ranking ever in the AP poll's 53-year history for the Mountaineers, who, like Notre Dame, completed an 11-0 regular season for the first time.

Notre Dame, which is No. 1 for the fifth consecutive week, received 57 of 60 first-place votes and 1,197 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Miami, whose only loss was 31-30 at Notre Dame when the Hurricanes disdained an almost certain tie with 45 seconds left and tried a two-point conversion pass that failed, received one first-place vote and 1,124 points. The Hurricanes, 9-1, conclude their regular season Saturday against Brigham Young.

The other two first-place votes went to West Virginia, which totaled 1,069 points.

Florida State, which finished second to Miami a year ago but has won 10 straight since an opening-game 31-0 loss to the Hurricanes, trounced Florida 52-17 and climbed from fifth to fourth with 1,013 points, followed by 10-1 Southern Cal with 946 points.

Nebraska, 11-1, held onto sixth place with 891 points and Auburn, 10-1, a 15-10 winner over Alabama, remained seventh with 865 points.

UCLA, 9-2, rose from ninth place to eighth with 733 points, barely edging Arkansas, 10-1, which slipped from eighth to ninth with 731 points.

Oklahoma, 9-2, again rounded out the Top Ten with 649 points.

The Second Ten consists of Michigan, Oklahoma State, Clemson, Houston, Wyoming, Louisiana State, Washington State, Syracuse, Georgia and Alabama.

Last week, it was Michigan, Oklahoma State, Clemson, Houston, Wyoming, LSU, Alabama, Washington State, Syracuse and Georgia. Alabama remained in the Top Ten despite losing to Auburn, while Georgia defeated Georgia Tech 24-3 for Vince Dooley's 200th coaching triumph.

The AP will conduct its final regular-season poll following next weekend's games and will announce the national champion on Jan. 3.

The Top Twenty teams in the Associated Press' next-to-last regular-season college football poll, with first-place votes in parentheses, season record through games of Nov. 26, total points based on 20-19-18-17-16-15-14-13-12-11-10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 and previous ranking:

ND Tops DR Poll

Notre Dame has regained the top spot in The Daily Reflector Computer Rankings after topping last week's leader Southern California.

The Fighting Irish, which will face unbeaten West Virginia in the Fiesta Bowl, can sew up the title by winning that game. West Virginia, ranked ninth, would only have an outside shot of taking the title with a victory over the Irish.

Notre Dame, 11-0, has collected a total of 3,580 points in the rankings, which award points for each game a team wins, and each game won by a defeated opponent, down to the third level of competition. The rankings thus reflect a team's success against the strength of its schedule.

Southern California, which ends up 10-1 for the regular season, is second with 3,564 points, just 16 behind the Irish. Florida State, 10-1, moved up from a tie for fifth to third after beating Florida, with 3,046 points.

UCLA, second last week, and 9-2, drops to fourth with 2,940 points while Wyoming, third a week ago, with an 11-1 record, has 2,904 points on the year.

The second five includes Miami, up from 13th, and with one game left to play in the regular season, Nebraska, Auburn, West Virginia and Louisiana State.

The final games of the regular season will be played this coming weekend, then the bowl parade begins.

Following are this week's Top 20 teams, along with the rankings of East Carolina, the other Atlantic Coast Conference schools and ECU's opponents.

did I. I thought he made a heck of a good play myself."

That technical seemed to get the Pirates back into the game, even though UNGC did score off the tech and the following possession.

But Hill then took over, scoring the next eight points in the game to run the Pirates back out to a 53-41 lead with 7:23 to go.

From there on out, the Pirates continued to ease away, to the final 19-point margin.

"I thought the game was good for Blue, in that he found out how it's going to be the rest of the season. People are going to grab him and hold him," Steele said of Edwards' less-than-perfect evening.

Bob McEvoy, who served as a graduate assistant under former Pirate coach Dave Patton, and now the head coach at Greensboro, was pleased with his team's effort.

"East Carolina played hard defense and took us out of our system," he said. "But I respect our kids for coming back like they did. We just couldn't get over the hump."

"Edwards may be the best player we'll face this year and we challenged Verdel (Ellis) to go up against him. I don't think there were too many times when he wasn't in Edwards' face. He did a good job."

Greensboro had balanced scoring, with four players in double figures, led by Ellis with 11. Marvin Dawson, Tony Green and Ron Sheppard each added 10.

UNGC outbounded the Pirates, 36-34, but could only shoot 35 percent for the game while ECU connected on 47.9 percent of its shots.

Now 2-0, East Carolina travels to Durham on Wednesday to face Duke.

Seattle's Ron Skanski hauls in one of five touchdown passes by quarterback Dave Krieg

Krieg's TD Tosses Lead Seahawks Past Raiders

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEATTLE — Steve Largent, pass catcher extraordinaire, says he has never seen Seattle Seahawks quarterback Dave Krieg throw any better.

"I told Dave that during the fourth quarter," Largent said Monday night after Krieg passed for five touchdowns in a 35-27 victory over the Los Angeles Raiders.

"I told him I'd never seen him throw the ball with more confidence and accuracy," said the NFL's multiple record-holding wide receiver.

So how did Krieg respond to Largent?

"I think I could have thrown the ball better sometimes, especially on the interceptions," Krieg said. "The two interceptions stick out in my mind more than the five touchdowns."

Krieg did throw two interceptions in the third quarter as the Raiders took a 27-21 lead, but he threw five touchdown passes in a game for the third time in his nine-year career with the Seahawks, a club record.

Krieg completed touchdown passes of 15 yards to Largent, 6 yards to rookie Brian Blades, 11 yards to Paul Skanski, 7 yards to Clark Warner and 20 yards to Louis Clark.

It was Largent's first touchdown catch of the season and Clark's first NFL reception.

For the first time in the Seahawks' history, they had two men rush for more than 100 yards in a game. Warner gained 130 yards on 27 carries and John L. Williams rushed for 105 yards on 17 carries.

"You've got to give all the credit to our offensive line," said Williams, the Seahawks' fullback. "They created the holes for us to run through."

Bo Jackson, who shredded the Seahawks for 221 yards in a 37-14 Raiders' win in the Kingdome in a Monday night game last November, was held to 31 yards on 13 carries.

"We tackled him," replied Darren Comeaux, who replaced $11-million linebacker Brian Bosworth in Seattle's defense Monday night. Bosworth missed the game because of a sore shoulder.

"Bo likes to go wide on you," added Seahawks' strong safety Paul Moyer. "He's a very tough guy because he's so fast and he's so big (230 pounds). He's as big as some of the linebackers in this league. I think the secret for us tonight was to string him out and gang-tackle him."

In his third game back after missing seven games because of a separated right shoulder suffered in Week 3 in San Diego, Krieg completed 16 of 28 passes for 220 yards.

"That's what makes it really impressive," Largent said. "Dave Krieg misses all those games and comes back and has this kind of game for us. He was really on the money. He was really outstanding."

The victory allowed the Seahawks, 7-6, to move into a first-place tie with Denver in the AFC West. The Raiders, who started the weekend tied for first place in the division, dropped to 6-7.

"The people who think this is a ho-hum division should have seen this game tonight," Seattle Coach Chuck Knox said.

"We're still in it, but we have to win the next three," said first-year Raiders Coach Mike Shanahan.

The Seahawks, Broncos and the Raiders play each other once in the final three weeks. The Raiders will be at home against Denver next Sunday and the Seahawks will be in New England.

Seattle won on a night when it made five turnovers, had a bunch of dropped passes and couldn't seem to win a decision from instant replay official George Sladky. In addition to the two Krieg interceptions, the quarterback fumbled in the end zone after being sacked for a Raider touchdown in the first quarter. The ball was recovered by Greg Townsend.

Largent and Warner lost fumbles, with Warner fumbling on the Raiders' 2-yard line in the fourth quarter.

"We had a lot of adversity tonight," Knox said. "A lot of things happened to us. We had turnovers, officiating calls. But we didn't get down. We stayed in there."

The Seahawks won in the fourth quarter, scoring a pair of touchdowns on the 7-yard pass to Warner and the 20-yard pass to Clark.

David Hollis, a defensive back who twice has been cut by the Seahawks this season, intercepted two passes in the final quarter for Seattle. Hollis picked off a Steve Beuerlein pass with 10:21 to go and intercepted a Jay Schroeder pass with 2:27 left. Shanahan replaced Beuerlein with Schroeder in the final 3½ minutes.

"It feels great to contribute," said Hollis, who played briefly for Kansas City after being cut by the Seahawks this season.

A key play for the Seahawks came at the end of the first half. Tim Brown, 1987 Heisman Trophy winner, ran back a kickoff 95 yards to the Seattle 3, where he was caught from behind by rookie Dwayne Harper with 14 seconds left in the first half. Chris Bahr wound up missing a 31-yard field goal attempt for the Raiders with six seconds left in the first half.

"Momentum-wise, that was really a big play for us," said Krieg.

The Raiders got their other points on a 49-yard touchdown pass from Beuerlein to Brown, a 4-yard touchdown run by Steve Smith and a pair of 46-yard field goals by Bahr.

Redskins Are Now Playing Out Season For Self-Esteem

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HERNDON, Va. — The Washington Redskins have resigned themselves to playing out the season with only their self-esteem on the line.

Last year at this time, the Redskins had already wrapped up the NFC East title. Now, however, the defending Super Bowl champions are mired in a three-game losing streak that has left them at 6-7 and with virtually no hope of making it back to the playoffs.

"It's a pride factor for them, kind of a test of what's inside of you," Coach Joe Gibbs said Monday. "It's a situation where you're going to have to really want it bad."

The Redskins harbored hopes of returning to the playoffs until Sunday, when the Cleveland Browns twice came from behind to register a 17-13 victory. With that loss, Washington all but assured itself of becoming the fifth defending Super Bowl champion in the last nine to miss the playoffs.

"I'd say the odds are pretty gloomy," said Redskins quarterback Mark Rypien, named the team's starter next Sunday against the Philadelphia Eagles.

Since Gibbs took over as head coach in 1981, Washington has been among the league's most successful franchises. But now the Redskins have lost four out of five and their incentive for the remainder of the season has nothing to do with playoff booty.

"You've got to take the bad times with the good times to see what you're made of," offensive tackle Joe Jacoby said. "We'll find out about that the next three weeks."

In addition to gauging his team's character over the upcoming three weeks, Gibbs will attempt to determine which players are worth keeping around for next year.

"Each of us wants to keep his job. That's what the coaches will be looking at," Rypien said. "They've seen what we can do under ideal conditions, and now they want to see what we can do when the chips are down."

Even defensive end Dexter Manley, who leads the Redskins with 10 sacks, isn't totally sure whether he'll be around next season when Washington tries to pick up the pieces.

"Some guys are going to be out of here. I may be one of them," he declared.

While it appears ludicrous to throw Gibbs' name in among the people in the organization who must worry about job security, the NFL's winningest active coach discussed the possibility.

"I can only lose so many games and (owner) Jack Kent Cooke is going to tell me, 'Hey, Joe, I can't go any further,'" Gibbs said. "But let me say this: I don't worry one bit about that."

Gibbs, in fact, thought he and the Redskins might one day derive something positive out of a season that has been ruined by, among other things, injuries, costly turnovers and countless untimely penalties.

"Sometimes the downturns and the tough times make you a better person, a better coach, a better player," he said. "It's been a long time since we lost like this, and now we've got to find out what we're made of."

Gibbs said the losses are particularly annoying because the Redskins play such a vital role in the lives of the people who have come to depend upon their success.

"That's why I feel bad," Gibbs said. "We have so many people who love the Redskins, want them to win. I feel like we're letting people down, people who count on you like your owner and the fans."

Gibbs would dearly love to see his team rebound against the Eagles, who are perched atop the NFC East with an 8-5 record.

"We're walking into something there that's going to be tough to overcome. We know that," Gibbs said. "It's going to be a real test for us. Very few people will give us much of a chance in this one."

Linebacker Neal Olkewicz, unaccustomed to playing the role of a spoiler, added, "It would be nice to put a little dent in their hopes."

For his part, Rypien is looking forward to giving the Eagles a bit of what the Redskins have been experiencing this season as defending world champions.

"Now we can take some licks at someone else," Rypien said.

Moore Hoping For More Wins With A's

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OAKLAND, Calif. — Mike Moore wants to win.

More than anything else, that's why he left the Seattle Mariners on Monday to agree to a three-year contract for almost $4 million with the American League champion Oakland Athletics.

"It basically comes down to a chance to win," Moore said from his home in Phoenix during a telephone conference call. "That's something I really haven't had a chance to do."

Moore never developed into the superstar he was supposed to be with Seattle. He will join Dave Stewart, Bob Welch, Storm Davis and Curt Young in the Athletics' starting rotation. Young is the only left-hander.

"We look at Mike as someone who can take the ball every five or six days and pitch seven or eight strong innings," Oakland general manager Sandy Alderson said. "With a good offense and defense behind him, we think he can be a big winner."

Moore said he had narrowed his choices to Oakland, Seattle, St.

Louis and Texas before agreeing to a contract with Oakland last Thursday. He said he did think about returning to Seattle, the only major league team he has played for.

"I was trying to keep an open mind about the situation," Moore said. "When it comes right down to it, for the same money, or a little more money, I think the choice is obvious to anybody."

Seattle offered Moore a three-year contract for $3.85 million with an option for 1992. The Mariners' offer included salaries of $1.1 million in 1989, $1.2 million in 1990, $1.3 million in 1991 and an option year at $1.4 million with a $250,000 buyout. Details of the Oakland contract were not immediately available.

Moore said that Oakland appealed to him because of the Athletics' manager, Tony La Russa.

"Tony seems like a real classy guy," Moore said. "I've watched him from the other side and seen the way his coaches and players respect him."

Moore, the No. 1 pick in the 1981 draft, has a career record of 65-96 with a 4.38 ERA.

Norman Leads Aussie Lineup

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MELBOURNE, Australia — Greg Norman, Ben Crenshaw and Jack Nicklaus will head the greatest lineup of golf talent ever to play Down Under when the $1.25-million Bicentennial Classic begins Thursday at Royal Melbourne.

An elite field of 50 competitors from around the world has been invited to contest the richest event in Australia's golfing history.

The winner will collect $430,000 with last-place finishers guaranteed at least $6,020.

Among the top American players chasing the title are Hale Irwin, who holds the course record of 64 at the 7,018-yard, par-72 layout.

Other top players are Mark Calcavecchia, Mark McCumber, Johnny Miller, Jeff Sluman, Scott Simpson, Mike Reid, Craig Stadler, Peter Jacobsen, Dan Pohl, John Cook, Welshman Ian Woosnam and TC Chen of Taiwan.

Former U.S. Open champion Miller said the lure of playing Royal Melbourne, regarded by many as one of the top courses in the world, had enticed him to Australia.

"The attraction for me is just playing Royal Melbourne," he said.

Johnson's 32 Points Sinks Philly, 109-104

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — A sellout crowd came to honor Kareem Abdul-Jabbar when the Los Angeles Lakers played the Philadelphia 76ers, but they came away talking about Magic Johnson.

Johnson scored 32 points, gave out 20 assists and grabbed 11 rebounds to lead the Lakers to a 109-104 victory over the Sixers in the only NBA game Monday night.

The triple-double was only the second in the NBA this season. Johnson also accomplished one Nov. 22 against New York.

Johnson took over the game after the Sixers had taken their first lead of the night, 95-94, with 4:14 to play.

"I go into my offensive game at that time," said Johnson, who first tossed in a 3-point shot and scored 10 of the Lakers' last 13 points, while Philadelphia was scoring only five.

"I look for myself late in the game in addition to the other guys," he said. "I become much more aggressive. It's myself first, and the other guys second."

That strategy is fine with Lakers coach Pat Riley.

"I just tell him, 'Win. Be as great as you are. You don't want to be miserable after the game, so just win,'" Riley said.

The Lakers led by as many as 15 points in the first quarter and had a 93-83 lead with 8:23 to go. Charles Barkley and Hersey Hawkins then led a 10-0 Philadelphia spurt to tie the score at 93-93 with 4:41 remaining.

"They will be a tough team all year long," Johnson said of the 76ers. "They are not just walking the ball up the floor anymore. They are not a one-dimensional team, just looking for Charles Barkley."

The loss broke a four-game winning streak by the Sixers and dropped them into a first-place tie in the Atlantic Division with the New York Knicks.

Barkley had 31 points and 23 rebounds, but he missed nine of 14 free throws and blamed himself for the loss.

"The big difference was the missed free throws," he said. "It's so frustrating for me to miss so many foul shots. Any time I feel like I didn't do my best, it hurts. I played hard, but not well enough."

Philadelphia made only 19 of 34 free throws.

"I felt we hurt ourselves badly at the foul line," 76ers coach Jim Lynam said.

The Sixers went into the game without forward Cliff Robinson, who aggravated soreness in his left knee during warmups and didn't suit up. Guard Gerald Henderson, who has a sprained ankle, dressed but did not play.

Philadelphia also lost Maurice Cheeks, who reinjured a pulled groin muscle with just under six minutes to play, taking him out of action during the stretch run.

Lynam's summation of Johnson's performance was direct.

"It was par for the course," he said. "That's what Magic is all about."

Langley...

"It was the last week of the signing period in April," he said. "I was talking to the coaches and it was between UNC-Asheville, Baptist College and UNC-Greensboro. I thought they were going to get a junior college player (at UNCG) and I really wanted to go there. I really felt comfortable. They didn't get the juco and they called my up and asked me what I wanted to do and I said I'd like to go to UNCG. I thought I'd get a lot of playing time."

While that hasn't exactly panned out, Langley isn't worried. He's making the necessary adjustments.

"It's real tough," he said. "You have to be mentally and physically ready to go in when your time is called. I just have to be patient and wait my turn.

"I had the injury from high school and I just didn't know about it. Then I got the warts. It was very painful. I had to go to the doctor twice a week and then he cut them out of my foot. I couldn't play hard like I wanted to. I think I'll get more playing time down the stretch. I just have to be patient and wait for my number to be called."

McEvoy isn't making any promises, either.

"It's hard to gauge," he said. "Tony is doing a nice job. His time will come."

'Miami Vice' Will Wrap Up Final Year 'In Style'

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — NBC's "Miami Vice" has thrived on style, and executive producer Michael Mann is determined the detective series will wrap up its fifth and final season the same way.

"For the final season, our writers are taking the mythology of our best episodes seriously," said Mann. "What we're trying to do is write to that mythology. Our aim is to do a series of classic 'Vices.' The stories the writers are coming up with are on track."

What is that mythology? "A hard-nosed attitude toward life," Mann replies. "Yet, it's not all grim and serious."

The decision to bring "Miami Vice" to an end wasn't lightly made, but Mann and stars Don Johnson (playing Sonny Crockett) and Philip Michael Thomas (Ricardo Tubbs) thought it was time to move on. NBC has not officially acknowledged the decision to end the series.

"It was by our election to end the show, so we're planning for it," said Mann. "As a result it's kind of liberating and has generated a lot of enthusiasm. The show's going to be around a long time in syndication and we all want it to end well. We're going to end it with a two-hour episode. Salazar, a Latin American strong man who can cut deals, will figure in that story."

The finale is still under wraps, but don't look for Sonny Crockett to open a bait shop in the Keys and Ricardo Tubbs a charter service in Bimini.

The original concept of the show, which made its debut in September 1984, was a kind of MTV cops. It pulsed with rock music and vibrated with pastels. Its sparkling imagery came right out of a music video.

But this season, Sonny and Ricardo seem to wear only blacks and grays, and the images seem to be filtered through sepia.

Creator Anthony Yerkovich set the tone in the two-hour pilot script, in which Sonny and Tubbs battled evil and corruption against the backdrop of Florida's glitzy Gold Coast.

The show was symbolized by the reflection of the neon and lights in the black sheen of their Ferrari as they raced around Miami.

Sonny Crockett was a vice detective whom Johnson played as a knight errant in dented armor. He had a raspy voice, a three-day beard, no socks and pastel Versace suits. His partner, Tubbs, played by Thomas, was explained as a black New York street cop who first came south to find the drug dealer who'd killed his brother. Edward James Olmos played their taciturn boss, Lt. Martin Castillo.

At the start of the fifth season, Sonny has been knocked cuckoo and thinks he really is Sonny Burnett, his drug-dealing undercover alter ego, and Mann is preparing for the wind-up. Sonny's brother will show up this season and cause him trouble. A few loose ends from various stories will also be taken care of.

Although "Miami Vice" was rapped several years ago for emphasizing style over content, Mann said he is now satisfied with the scripts being turned out under the direction of Robert Ward. The show got off the track when Mann temporarily left to direct "Manhunter," based on Thomas Harris' suspense novel "Red Dragon."

"In the second season I went off to do the picture, and I thought I had everything set up to function while I was gone," he said. "Forget about that. It was total meltdown. The first day of shooting 'Manhunter' I got a phone call from 'Miami Vice.' All hell had broken loose."

"There was no conscious attempt to rely on style. It's not in the script. But once you set the style it becomes automatic. The art director, costumers, editors all know what to look for. You don't have to re-invent every week. But you do have to re-invent the story every week, and what we had was an absence of stories. The style became more obvious because the story wasn't there."

After "Miami Vice," Mann has a number of other projects lined up. Among them is a six-hour miniseries for NBC based on Elaine Shannon's "Desperados." The book tells of Latin drug lords and the murder of Enrique "Kiki" Camarena of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency.

Cruise Says Stars Help Other Actors

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Actor Tom Cruise says working with veteran actors such as Paul Newman and Dustin Hoffman is a learning experience.

"What you get from great actors like Newman and Hoffman is where to focus your energies and what to worry about and what not to worry about," Cruise said. "Because as a young actor, you're worried about everything."

Cruise, 26, starred with Newman in "The Color of Money," and with Hoffman in the to-be-released "Rain Man."

In "Rain Man," the 51-year-old Hoffman plays an autistic man with remarkable powers of memory and a $3 million inheritance. Cruise plays his brother, who wants the money.

Hoffman, known as a hard-working perfectionist on a movie set, says Cruise is equally driven.

"He's a demon. He gets up early, he works out, he goes home early, he studies, he works out again at night. ... And he always wanted to rehearse," Hoffman said in December's Gentlemen's Quarterly.

Mason Suit Dismissed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A judge dismissed Jackie Mason's libel suit against a Florida woman who filed a paternity suit against the comedian.

U.S. District Judge John Keenan threw out Mason's lawsuit Monday for lack of personal jurisdiction.

Mason last year sued Ginger Reiter and her mother, Miriam Oliver, alleging libel, invasion of privacy, copyright infringement and unjust enrichment, over a live stage production "Oh Jackie Oh," on which they collaborated.

Ms. Reiter's paternity lawsuit in Florida is pending.

Mason's attorney, Jay D. Kramer, declined comment on Monday's ruling, saying he had not yet seen it.

There was no answer at the Port Washington offices of Ms. Reiter's lawyers when called for comment Monday evening.

Difficult

NEW YORK (AP) — Tahnee Welch says it was difficult growing up as the child of a sex symbol, but she doesn't fault her mother, Raquel.

"She's a hard worker. She's always taken care of herself. My mother has never, never, never been supported by anyone," the 26-year-old Welch said. "So I had it in my mind that I had to do it myself. I have this pride."

The younger Welch insists she won her part in the 1985 film, "Cocoon," on merit, not because of her mother. Welch also appears in the recently released "Cocoon: The Return."

British Acts Find Audience In U.S.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — When their single, "Another Lover," hit the American charts, Giant Steps joined the growing list of British acts that have found success across the Atlantic before gaining popularity at home.

"I don't know why it's happening, but it probably has something to do with the quality of the songs," said George McFarlane, one-half of the duo Giant Steps.

"If you look at the songs that have been successful in America, they are very good. I think the American market is more about songs. The British charts are more gimmicky. They just tend to latch on to trends."

In the past, Americans have accepted only the cream of the British charts: U2 and George Michael were successful years before the United States took notice.

But American record companies are now taking chances on previously unsuccessful British bands, turning them into American pop stars and exporting them back for re-release in Britain.

The situation also occurred with Breathe's single, "Hands to Heaven." After failing in Britain, it was released in the United States where it stayed in Billboard's Top 10 for several weeks. Subsequently re-released in Britain, its American success pushed it into the Top 20. A few weeks later, The Escape Club hit No. 2 with "Wild, Wild West." It is now moving up the British charts as is Giant Steps' peppy dance single, "Another Lover."

"Already, we are noticing a better reaction to the record this time around," McFarlane said. "It's getting more air play, and the general vibe is a bit better — all because it was a hit in America."

McFarlane and partner Colin Campsie recorded their album, "The Book of Pride" in Los Angeles with American producers, which may explain the record's American appeal. They began working with an American producer last year, but he was too busy to devote enough time to them.

"In the end, we just got fed up, so we sacked him," said McFarlane. "It caused problems because our record company said, 'You just can't come to LA and sack your producer.' We said, 'Well, we have, so goodbye.'"

Their insouciance clearly did them

no harm, because they returned to Los Angeles in the fall and started work with songwriter-producer Gardner Cole who wrote Madonna's hit, "Open Your Heart."

Cole co-wrote their hit, "Another Lover," and helped with their next single, "Into You."

McFarlane said input from an outsider was both helpful and difficult. "Gardner's writing influences are similar to ours so that was great. But it's difficult writing with someone else, because songwriting is a very personal thing, and having someone else involved can be a problem."

Before becoming Giant Steps, McFarlane and Campsie were known as The Quick. Under that name, they released a couple of albums, and had good reviews but few sales.

"We changed the name because we decided there was a certain stigma attached to The Quick. We had released records for quite a few years, but they were never commercially successful. We finally decided that, at least in this country, we'd never get DJs to notice our records as The Quick. Plus, we felt we needed a fresh start. That's what this is for us, a new start."

The fresh start may include an American hit, but McFarlane said it's still important to be successful in Britain.

"Having success in the UK leads to things in Europe, so that would be nice," he said. "But most of all, it's just nice to be appreciated by the people in your own country. It's our home, so of course we'd like to have success here."

American Wins Nomination As British Producer Of Year

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

London — British pop followers may be surprised to learn that Stephen Hague isn't British. It was certainly news to the British Phonographic Industry.

Hague is one of the top pop producers in this country, a figure so familiar on the local music scene that few people know he's actually American.

Thus the information came as a shock to the BPI, that bastion of British music, when it decided to nominate him as "British Producer of the Year" for 1988, following his success with The Pet Shop Boys' single "West End Girls."

The BPI had to withdraw the nomination because its rules say only Britons are eligible.

"My manager phoned them to let them know I'm American," Hague, 35, said in an interview at London's Advision studios. "They said, 'Oh, that's too bad, because he's going to win.'"

Hague, a Bostonian, has made his name producing hits by The Pet Shop Boys, Orchestral Manoeuvres In The Dark, New Order and Erasure. He is rarely out of the Top 10, but has built a reputation as an individualist, rather than a formula hit-maker.

"Stephen Hague isn't associated with a restricted style," said Paul Trynka, Editor of Britain's International Musician and Recording World magazine. "That's why he's maintained his credibility."

Unlike producers whose songs "are interchangeable no matter who their artist is, Hague tends to consider the band and the song and work from there. He's seen as being much more versatile," Trynka said.

Hague's first productions were of his own band, Jules And The Polar Bears. After they split up in 1979, he got deeper into recording. "Technically speaking, things were a little backwards back then,"

Hague recalled. "But it was good learning that way."

"I'd be a little concerned about people coming into the technical side of the business now. There are a lot of things people in my generation learned that they don't have the opportunity to learn now. It was harder to make things work then. You had to try and get a good sound without much equipment."
