Court Corrects 18 Bonds For Accused Heroin Dealer

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The 18 bonds posted for a Greenville man accused of operating a heroin operation were filled out incorrectly, but court officials say the bonds are valid and the errors should be corrected today.

Charlie Lee Jenkins, 41, of 1802 McLellan St. is charged with 36 heroin violations and operating a continuing criminal enterprise. The indictment accuses Jenkins of being the organizer of a heroin ring that involves at least five other people. The charge carries a maximum punishment of life in prison.

Jenkins was released Sunday from the Pitt County Jail, four days after Superior Court Judge David E. Reid Jr. of Greenville lowered his bond from $500,000 to $300,000.

As conditions of Jenkins' pretrial release, Reid ordered Jenkins to keep in constant communication with his attorney, to remain in Pitt County and to remain at his home from dusk until dawn. Jenkins' trial date has not been set.

Instead of paying one bonding company to post the $300,000 bond, court files show Jenkins apparently paid for a number of smaller bonds. In the files, there are 18 bonds that total $300,000. Pitt County Clerk of Court Sandra Gaskins said it is common for such large bonds to be split up among several bondsmen.

In all, 17 different bondsmen from Wilkesboro, Raleigh, Roxboro, New Bern, Rocky Mount, Bethel, Bridgeton, Durham, Butner and Greenville posted bonds for Jenkins.

The clerk of court or a magistrate usually administers an oath to the bondsman — who swears the information on the bond is truthful — before the defendant is released.

Ms. Gaskins said she has been told that the bondsmen went before Magistrate Melvin Moore on Sunday, but Moore neglected to sign any of the bonds.

All the bondsmen invovled returned to Greenville this morning and were to meet with Ms. Gaskins.

Shuttle Launch Put Off 24 Hours

By Howard Benedict
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The launch of space shuttle Atlantis and five military astronauts on a secret spy satellite mission was postponed today for 24 hours by bad weather.

"The launch of STS-27 has been postponed because of local conditions and unacceptable upper-level winds," launch control commentator Hugh Harris reported at 8:55 a.m. EST.

The countdown, blacked out publicly for security reasons, stood at nine minutes when the scrub was called, sources reported. It had been held there for more than an hour while officials waited in vain for a significant break in the cloudy, windy weather, which before dawn had carried intermittent showers.

An hour after the scrub, the clouds had disappeared and the launch pad was bathed in sunshine, but NASA said winds were still too high to have permitted a safe liftoff.

Sources reported the flight had been rescheduled for Friday morning, sometime between 6:32 and 9:32 a.m. EST, the same time it had been set for today. The exact time remained a secret because the mission is classified.

For today's launch, sources had said the actual goal was 7 a.m. but as the bad weather persisted, they said the time was delayed first for an hour, then another hour, before the effort was scrubbed.

The astronauts, who had boarded the spacecraft shortly after 4 a.m. in their bulky escape suits, returned to crew quarters seven miles from the launch pad.

The postponement was nothing new for the crew commander, Navy Cmdr. Robert L. Gibson. As commander of Columbia on the 24th mission, he had experienced a recordd seven postponements and had to board the ship six times before finally taking off. Technicians promptly began emptying the huge external fuel tank of the half-million gallons of liquid oxygen and liquid hydrogen that had been pumped aboard overnight. The fuel will be reused for the next attempt at launching.

The forecast for this morning had been ominous for days, and NASA knew it was gambling when it decided to load the fuel tank. the space agency has estimated the costs of a last-minute scrub at about $250,000.

The fickle weather at the Florida launch site has been a persistent problem, forcing numerous delays and postponements of previous shuttle launches. Weather criteria for launch have been tightened since the Challenger explosion of January 1986, but conditions today would not have been acceptable even before Challenger.

Rural House Fire

The residence of Billy Harrelson, located off rural paved road 1735, Route 13, Greenville, was damaged Wednesday by fire. Firemen said part of the carport was destroyed and a car was damaged, while heavy smoke and water damage resulted to the house. Harrelson and his wife were not home when the fire started, but a worker next door saw the blaze and contacted Harrelson, firemen said.

Appellate Court Race In Recount

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A statewide recount is scheduled for next week to determine the winner of the Court of Appeals race between Donald Smith of Raleigh and John B. Lewis of Farmville.

Lewis apparently scored a narrow win in the November election, but his margin of victory was less than 1 percent of the total number of votes cast in the election. With the narrow margin, Smith, the Republican incumbent, was able to call for a recount Wednesday after the state Board of Elections canvass.

Lewis, a special Superior Court judge whose term ends Dec. 31, polled 983,850 votes. Smith, appointed to the court by Republican Gov. Jim Martin, polled 967,992 votes.

The state Board of Elections has sent an order to all 100 county election boards notifying them of the recount, according to Johnnie McLean, executive secretary for the state elections office.

Soviet Parliament Adopts Gorbachev Reforms Despite Scattered Protests

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — The Supreme Soviet voted overwhelmingly today to adopt Mikhail S. Gorbachev's overhaul of the political structure, but a handful of "no" votes and abstentions showed the reforms remain controversial.

Five deputies in the Supreme Soviet, or parliament, voted against the package of constitutional amendments, which give more power to Gorbachev as president and provide for indirect election of the president and lawmakers.

Gorbachev, who is also general secretary of the Communist Party, told the deputies that a storm of controversy over the reforms — including 250,000 letters to the Kremlin — could have been reduced, and he took the blame.

"We did not care about explaining the essence, the meaning" of the changes, Gorbachev said. "The center was just following the old practice, thinking, well, they would get used to it."

"All of us are now learning our lessons. All of us are in a school of democracy, and we should be good pupils in that school," Gorbachev said.

In the Soviet of Nationalities, half of the bicameral Supreme Soviet parliament, the vote was 657 in favor, 3 against and 26 abstentions on amending the constitution to incorporate Gorbachev's proposals.

The Soviet of Unions voted 687 in favor, 2 against with one abstention to approve the same measures. A companion package providing for multiple-candidate elections was adopted unanimously by both houses.

At least three of the negative votes came from Estonians, whose tiny Baltic republic has declared its sovereignty from Moscow.

The reforms create a strong presidency in place of the largely ceremonial role now accorded the head of state. They also establish a new Congress of People's Deputies to elect the president and a new Supreme Soviet, which will meet for eight months a year.

Elections for the new congress were set for March 26, and Gorbachev said today's session was the last meeting of the current Supreme Soviet. He said no emergency sessions would be called before the elections.

Pitt Schools Seek Parental Involvement

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

An effort to "bring the school to the parents" will begin next week as the Pitt County schools initiate a parent involvement pilot project.

The project will be "tied into our after-school tutorial program in the five housing projects in Pitt County," Charles Ross, associate superintendent of instruction, said in a recent interview.

The after-school program, developed by the Pitt County Partnership for Progress and funded by the United Way, is designed for kindergarten through sixth-grade students identified through the schools as achieving below their grade level in reading.

In its second year, the tutorial program is conducted in the projects in areas provided at no cost by the housing authorities and is administered by a part-time director, teachers, assistants and volunteers. The tutorial classes are held Tuesdays through Thursdays for two hours after school.

The parent project will attempt to reach the parents of the students participating in the tutorial program and other interested parents in the housing projects and encourage them to become involved in teaching their students, Ross said.

In addition, the project will work with Pitt Community College to coordinate parent training sessions in the housing project classrooms. The sessions will be designed to meet the parents' needs, which may include tips on parenting, working with students on school-related subjects or participating in Adult Basic Education classes.

Since transportation or other concerns may keep parents from attending classes at PCC or from visiting their students' schools, "we'll go out and meet with them where they can walk to the site," Ross said.

Funded through a $5,000 grant awarded to the school system by the state Department of Instruction, the project will be coordinated by a part-time employee, which has been selected and will need final approval by the Pitt County Board of Education.

The Pitt school system was one of eight in the state awarded the funds

Kohlberg Kravis Will Get RJR

By Rick Gladstone
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The RJR Nabisco Inc. takeover war ended in stunning triumph for buyout specialist Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co., whose record $24.53 billion agreement derailed a fatter rival bid by the management group that triggered the corporate free-for-all more than a month ago.

The $109-a-share offer approved by RJR directors late Wednesday capped a day of frantic maneuvering that at times left the unprecedented auction for the nation's 19th largest industrial company in utter confusion.

RJR said Kohlberg's offer of $81 in cash, $18 in stock and additional securities worth $10 beat out a last-minute offer valued at $112 a share, or $25.2 billion, by chief executive F. Ross Johnson's management group.

Although the face value of the management offer looked higher, RJR stated that its board of directors concluded the Kohlberg offer was worth substantially the same.

"The Board of Directors of RJR Nabisco, by unanimous vote of all directors present, adopted the KKR offer as being in the best interest of the company and its shareholders," RJR said.

Kohlberg, the undisputed leader in buying companies with borrowed money in deals known as leveraged buyouts, said it was pleased with the decision that ended the biggest takeover brawl in history.

The value of Kohlberg's offer was nearly double that of the previous record, a $13.4 billion takeover of Gulf Corp. by Chevron Corp. in March 1984.

"We are also pleased that this process has come to an end so that the employees of RJR, its consumers and suppliers and the communities it serves, can be assured that business will now return to normal and stability will be restored," Kohlberg's two principals, Henry R. Kravis and George Roberts, said in a statement.

Kohlberg's triumph raised the prospect that at least some

MADD Kicks Off Holiday Campaign

The Pitt County chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving has kicked off its annual holiday campaign to alert area residents to the need to refrain from driving after drinking.

The group began Wednesday presenting red ribbons to people willing to "tie one on for safety and join MADD's campaign for a less violent holiday season."

The group is requesting that each participant in the campaign tie a reminding red ribbon to his or her vehicle's left door handle or left rear view mirror.

Delta Zeta and Sigma Sigma Sigma sororities at East Carolina University are assisting the MADD chapter with "Project Red Ribbon," as are several local businesses and the Greenville Police Department. People may obtain a ribbon from the front desk at the Greenville Police Department or from any of several businesses.

MADD is also sponsoring a candlelight vigil Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. at the Delta Zeta and Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority houses, 801-803 E. Fifth St. Katherine Prescott, president of the Pitt County MADD chapter, said the purpose of the vigil is "to provide a setting in which family and friends may remember in a special way their loved ones who have been killed or injured by drunk drivers."

Property Is Taken From Home

Greenville police said 11 thefts, including $2,500 worth of property from an Avery Street residence, were reported to the department Wednesday.

Officer A.J. Dennison said several items of clothing and two jewelry boxes containing, among other things, a gold watch, a pair of diamond earrings and several rings, were taken from 119 Avery St. in an incident reported at 9:26 a.m.

Officer J.G. Bridges said a radar detector was taken from a car parked at Pitt County Memorial hospital in an incident reported at 7:14 a.m.

Investigators said a television set and video cassette recorder were taken from Family Housing at 809 Greenville Blvd. in a break-in reported at 8:38 a.m., while Officer Alexander Batts said a $50 Christmas wreath was taken from a door at 1211 Kingsbrook Road in an incident reported at 8:38 a.m.

Officer R.L. Smith said a stereo amplifier was taken from Showtime Stereo at 300B S.W. Greenville Blvd. in an incident reported at 10:16 a.m., while Officer R.C. Allsbrook said a leather coat was taken from Apartment 19 at 429 Wedgewood Arms Apartments in a break-in reported at 2:39 p.m.

Officer J.A. Felton said a video cassette recorder and a tennis racket were taken from C6 Medical Oaks Apartments in a break-in reported at 2:46 p.m., while $105 in cash and a pair of tennis shoes were taken from a room at the Econo Lodge on Memorial Drive in a break-in reported at 8:03 p.m.

Officer C.S. Candler said a washer, a can opener and a hair dryer were taken from Luv Homes at 850 Greenville Blvd. in an incident reported at 3:42 p.m.

Officer R.J. Brewington said a purse containing $55 in cash was grabbed from the hands of a woman in an incident reported at 5:36 p.m., while the center wheel caps were taken from a car parked at Pic 'n Pay Shoes on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 9:12 p.m.

Correction

The Daily Reflector, by error, on Wednesday reprinted a list of cases disposed of during the Nov. 7-10 term of Pitt County District Court that had been published in the Nov. 17 edition of the newspaper.

The list of cases reprinted included a charge against Angela Kay Hardee, Route 9, Greenville, of allowing an unlicensed driver to drive, which was dismissed.

The list of cases published first on Nov. 17, and again in Wednesday's edition, erroneously listed other charges against Miss Hardee.

Ayden Awards Contract

The Ayden Board of Commissioners has awarded a contract to Service Roofing of Greenville to put a new roof on the town's municipal building.

Service Roofing submitted a low bid of $35,860, and the board accepted the bid at a special meeting Tuesday night. The existing roof is 19 years old, Ayden Clerk Ralph Ford said, and the town has had trouble with leaks in the roof.

The article discusses how spinal problems affecting certain nerve may lead to increased risk of heart attack.

Doctors Finish Training

Drs. William Rucker and Richard Larson of Pitt Surgical, P.A., a Greenville surgical practice, have completed training in the surgical use of lasers.

Their training was conducted at the Laser Center of Abbott Northwestern Hospital in Minneapolis, Minn. They were trained in the laser treatment of skins lesions, abdominal tumors and diseases, breast lumps, hemorrhoids and blood vessels.

Lasers utilize highly amplified and carefully controlled light beams to precisely divide, remove and alter tissues of the body with minimal bleeding.

Sexton Appointed

Sexton has undergraduate and master's degrees from East Carolina University.

Pactolus Activities

Pactolus School volunteers contributed 248 hours of service in the first three months of school by helping with dental and hearing screening, the fall festival, classroom activities, field trips and the installation of playground equipment.

Pactolus kindergarten classes celebrated the first Thanksgiving by making pilgrim and Indian costumes and friendship necklaces, and by sharing a feast of turkey, venison stew, fried apples, maize casserole and cornbread. First-grade classes also prepared a traditional Thanksgiving dinner.

Tonya Pardue's and Cindy Budacz's students had a Thanksgiving feast and invited five guests from the school. Students built their own version of the Mayflower and share facts they learned with the guests.

Second graders dressed as pilgrims and Indians and made candles. They also prepared and ate pumpkin pie. A puppet show shared Indian and pilgrim facts.

Jerry Everhart, a science instructor with the Pitt County schools, spoke to Jean Swanner's fourth graders about air and air pressure.

Bridges Closed

Two local bridges have been closed temporarily for maintenance, according to a representative of the N.C. Department of Transportation.

The bridge in Grimesland, 0.1 miles from SR 1566 toward SR 1568, has been closed, and a 20-mile detour, on U.S. 264, U.S. 264-A and N.C. 33, has been outlined. The bridge should be closed about 10 days.

In addition, a bridge 0.6 miles northeast of junction N.C. 43, on SR 1800, will be closed for about two days. A 4.8 mile detour has been provided on N.C. 43 and N.C. 102.

REST HOME RESIDENTS APPEAL

The Pitt County Department of Social Service is appealing for individuals and organizations to adopt residents in rest homes and family care homes for Christmas.

Gifts of clothing and other essential items not covered by residents' personal funds are needed. Those who would like to donate but who would rather not shop themselves may donate money, says Beverly Wheeler, adult home specialist.

Mrs. Wheeler said there are in Pitt County four homes for the aged housing from 29 to 120 people each and 16 family care homes with four to six residents.

Anyone wishing to help may call her at 758-2167. The hours when it's easiest to reach her are 8-9 a.m. and 4-5 p.m.

Jones Urges ECU Students To Dream

By Jerry Raynor
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Raleigh contractor Robert L. "Roddy" Jones urged members of the East Carolina University chapter of the Association of General Contractors to "reach for the stars."

Jones told his young listeners Wednesday in Greenville, "Don't be afraid to reach for the stars, but mix that reach with hard work, dedication and responsibility."

Jones stressed what he termed "two common denominators" essential to success — "accountability and responsibility. Accountability can be equated to reputation, and responsibility develops into what we call character."

He asked the students not to overlook "dreams as part of success. People who are dreamers, who look for different ways to accomplish a task and then work to make it happen" are the achievers in society.

"ECU has had lots of dreamers, teachers, administrators and others who dreamed big. And ECU had a special dreamer, Leo Jenkins. He was like the little steam engine that thought it could, and he did."

Jones said the contracting business in North Carolina today is a risky business. Only restaurants have a higher degree of failure than contractors."

He said "many contractors work against themselves. Many do not seek young workers. A responsible contractor in our day has got to make a commitment to training and keeping their employees, the older ones, the young ones. Training is beneficial both the the employee and the employer.

"It's a matter of either training or trailing behind your competitors."

Jones, a 1958 ECU graduate, said that when he told a friend he was to attend a meeting of students in the ECU chapter of the AGC, the friend was surprised that ECU had such a chapter since it does not have an engineering school.

"I explained that ECU has a vital school of industry and technology, with an enrollment of 600 students of which 115 are enrolled in the construction management program.

"In the 30 years since I graduated, I have followed events at ECU. I'm impressed with the training students are getting in industry and technology. They are getting a solid basis of what construction people need."

Steve Barber, president of the ECU chapter, presided at the meeting and presented Jones a yellow hard hat emblazoned with an ECU seal.

Jones is chairman of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors.

Schools And 4-H Join In Project

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

"Blue Sky Below My Feet," a program relating space technology to everyday life, will be introduced to sixth-graders in the Pitt County schools at the beginning of the new year as the school system pairs up with 4-H to enhance the science curriculum.

"4-H has endorsed a new program called 4-H School Enrichment," Dale Panero, Pitt County extension agent, 4-H, said of the statewide program.

"The first program that we're introducing in Pitt County is basically space technology but it's called 'Blue Sky Below My Feet.'"

The material will be introduced this afternoon to about 20 sixth-grade teachers who will share the information with other sixth-grade teachers in their schools. The teachers will begin implementing the material into the science curriculum in January.

The information provided in the program, "fits into the competencies that the sixth-graders are working on," Ms. Panero said.

The students will explore the topics of gravity and forces, fiber and fabrics and food and nutrition through three half-hour videos focusing on the national shuttle program.

Booklets, which are comic book-like in size and texture of paper, will be provided by 4-H to the sixth-graders for the program, she said. At a cost of about $500, the booklets have been provided through 4-H's $5,000 budget given by the United Way, she said.

Another program that will be offered next year to students at an elementary level is embryology, or egg hatching.

Students will study the development of the chick embryo, record and interpret their observations and breed chicks in the classroom.

The programs "are endorsed on the state level and we implement them," Ms. Panero said. "Those are the only two that have been selected for the county" thus far. Project Learning Tree, a program on forestry, is also being considered for a specific age and grade.

"It's a new approach to offering extension programs," she said of the enrichment program. While 4-H will continue to offer the programs it already has, "this is just an additional concept to offer programs to children and people in our county."

1989 Time To Address Court Needs

The verdict is in on Pitt's court needs, and that judgment is guilty — guilty of inadequate space and manpower. The sentence is a stiff one dictating better planning for a rapidly-expanding segment of public business.

The next 30 days will be busy ones for court. District attorneys, understandably and correctly, try to clear the docket before the new year. After all, those accused of crimes are entitled to a fair and speedy trial, not a carry-over into the next calendar year.

But with a new District Court judge taking the bench today and the number of Superior Court cases swelling beyond the county's allotted Superior Court time, Pitt is in a pinch. And if the growth of the past five years is an indication, the squeeze will continue.

The county's District Court criminal case load has doubled in the past five years — from 17,000 in 1982 to 34,000 in 1987. And the number of court sessions will rise from 34 per month to 46 in January.

In addition, Superior Court cases, because the number of court sessions is limited, pile up endlessly. For example, on a typical week in Superior Court, Pitt District Attorney Tom Haigwood says a dozen cases may be heard. But in the same week his office might take in an additional 100 cases. It doesn't take a mathematical whiz to see this data computes to an overload.

These figures are persuasive evidence that Pitt County needs a long-term plan to provide sufficient space and manpower for important public business. While it's pointless to finger blame for the current predicament, it is pertinent to ask why this explosion in court cases has not been accompanied by expansion in space and staff.

Population growth was not an unexpected phenomenon for Pitt County and the growth of the community has simply spilled over to the courts. Now it is threatening to overwhelm them. Planning simply hasn't kept pace and the result could be an ineffective legal system. Court officials are doing an efficient job now, but can this performance continue under difficult circumstances?

Diminishing legal service is a dilemma the county must avoid. A strong criminal justice system is the foundation for a county's integrity and protection. But without sufficient space, this very important function cannot be performed.

There is no excuse for allowing court overcrowding to escalate further. County leaders should make a New Year's resolution to prioritize the requirements of Pitt's legal system. In 1989, they must also look to the year 2000 — 11 years away — and make a tangible effort to address present deficiencies and future needs.

Conservation: The Secret Weapon

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has once again reached an agreement to reduce crude oil production and increase prices. The world reaction was immediate with concerns being expressed for a new round of inflation.

Whether the nations which make up OPEC can make the agreement stick remains to be seen. Such agreements have been made in the past and they have soon disintegrated as various nations exceeded their quotas.

Even if OPEC nations do abide by the agreement and force higher energy prices, United States consumers have a potent weapon. They have only to cut use of oil to send OPEC swimming in oil once again.

The United States did that once before. It did it not so much as a patriotic gesture, but as a reaction to the higher fuel prices which were wrecking individual budgets.

The nation began building energy efficient homes and automobiles that were economical. Consumers found energy efficient homes were comfortably warm and the autos which got high gas mileage ran as well as the gas hogs.

As gasoline prices dropped, Americans have tended back to energy wasteful ways. There will be little hardship, however, for the average American family to conserve on energy, and higher prices for energy will make it happen.

Industry and business found they could operate with more efficient use of energy. Computers were a great help in controlling power use and flow.

America can reduce its power demands again, however, and will do so as energy costs rise. Because of that, the economy won't be crippled by excessive energy expenses. This is one battle the nation can win with its own resolve.

To the editor:

Last Friday's Holiday Gift Guide in "The Daily Reflector" was great — except for one thing. The picture of puppies among Christmas gifts on the front seems to promote the attitude that puppies make great Christmas gifts.

This attitude, unfortunately, results in the Pitt County Humane Society and the city-county animal shelter being flooded with puppies after the holidays. This is because the gift givers, blinded by the puppies' cuteness, overlook the responsibilities that go along with pet ownership.

The puppy will need housetraining and the house will need puppy-proofing. The "solution" training the puppy — requires time, effort, and commitment. Upon realizing this, most of the impulsive Santas deposit the former "gift" at the shelter.

But the list of responsibilities goes on. The animal will need vaccinations and other veterinary care. The dog invariably will get into mischief, some of which may be costly. And because dogs are so overpopulous, every dog owner with a conscience has a responsibility to have their pet spayed or neutered. The excuse that "I will find homes for all the puppies in the litter" just doesn't cut it. When one person's puppies are placed into home, they displace other puppies that would have gotten those homes. Since there aren't enough homes to go around, the net result is that more puppies (an amount equal to the number in the litter) will have to be killed because of that person's ignorance and selfishness.

The really sad part of the story is that almost all of the discarded Christmas puppies will be killed. They just can't compete with the somewhat young puppies for adoption when being judged on cuteness.

Adopting a puppy is not something to do on a whim.

To the editor:

Read my lips: Democrats and Republicans alike have conspired and are conspiring to rip off the so-called "trust" funds of the Social Security system. "Financial World Magazine," about as conservative as the Wall Street Journal, states in its Nov. 15 issue: "In broad daylight, the federal government has been siphoning off Social Security funds to pay its bills. If a public corporation tried the same act with its employees' pension fund, it would be patently illegal.

In 1983, the Greenspan Commission came up with solutions for the faltering system which could run up surplus funds of $100 billion in another five years, according to Financial World. But those funds and the interest they should earn would be on hand to provide the pensions for our "baby boomers" about 20 years from now. But the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings "deficit target" for 1987 counted Social Security trust funds as part of the federal government's "revenue."

Financial World reports that while the 1987 operating deficit for the Treasury has been reported as $150 billion, down from $175 billion the year before, the real 1987 deficit was $225 billion and that by 1994 (according to the Congressional Budget Office) the real deficit will be nearly $300 billion.

How have the White House and Congress covered up this mess? By "borrowing" from Social Security and trading "special issue" Treasury IOUs which carry a market interest rate but are nonmarketable securities with no maturity date. Financial World sums it up: "The Social Security system has in fact become a slush fund for the government's current expenses."

Both Republicans and Democrats have, for lack of a better term, lied outright by devising a slick coverup.

Behind, The Face Of The Hangman

Richard Cohen

WASHINGTON — Around the age of 12, I picked up Irving Stone's "Clarence Darrow For The Defense" and found my boyhood hero. Darrow, one of America's great criminal lawyers, defended John T. Scopes's right to teach evolution in Tennessee, and in Chicago he took on the hopeless case of two privileged youths who, for the sheer thrill of it, murdered a 14-year-old boy. Darrow used the Loeb-Leopold case of 1924 to teach a lesson. Sixty-four years later, it's in danger of being forgotten.

There was never any doubt about the guilt of either Richard Loeb or Nathan Leopold and indeed Darrow pleaded them guilty. His challenge was to save their lives. In a masterful three-day summation, he argued that both youths (Loeb was 18, Leopold 19) were mentally ill. For witnesses Darrow called to the stand practitioners of a relatively new science: psychiatry. It took the judge three weeks to decide. He sentenced Loeb and Leopold to life plus 99 years. The hangman was cheated.

Implicit in Darrow's argument that his clients were mentally sick was the suggestion that they could be cured. In that, Darrow was proven right. Loeb was killed in prison, but Leopold was paroled in 1958 and devoted the rest of his life to scientific research. He died in Puerto Rico in 1971, a health-department worker whose specialty was life-risking communicable diseases.

No one would argue that every criminal can be rehabilitated. Surely, though, some can and some have. Yet the national mood at the moment seems to be lock 'em up and throw away the key. In the Washington area alone, two states — Maryland and Virginia — have had second thoughts about their furlough or parole programs. Virginia suspended its furlough program for inmates convicted of homicide, assault and kidnaping. In Maryland, the Patuxent Institution has cut back its work-release program after a furor caused by the weekend release of a triple murderer.

These actions — and similar ones in other states — are the baleful consequences of George Bush's campaign against Michael Dukakis. Bush seized upon Massachusetts' furlough of Willie Horton to clobber Dukakis — not entirely without justification. Horton, a convicted killer, was a bad choice for a furlough — and proved it by escaping and raping a woman in Maryland. For too long Dukakis defended a flawed program.

But Bush did more than just criticize Dukakis about Horton. In manner, if not in speech, he seemed to question the very idea of furloughs — in effect, of rehabilitation itself. Furthermore, he played cheerleader for those who believe — against all evidence — that crime can be reduced if only we have more cops and tougher judges. For a rebuttal, Bush need look no further than Washington itself. Its prison population is one of the highest in the land. It has cops galore, too. But this year Washington has already set a record for murders — and the bell for New Year's has not yet rung.

A jittery population, understandably scared witless over crime, is entitled to have a say about how the prison system is run. In effect, what Bush heard — and Dukakis did not — was the cry of "Protect us." Prison officials, too, should hear that cry. The prisons they run are government institutions, ultimately accountable to the voters. The people have the sovereign right to end furlough or parole programs. They are not laboratory mice in penology experiments: Do not take a chance with criminals who have already proven they are dangerous.

But Darrow had a point, too. People can change: they can be rehabilitated. Charles Colson, Richard Nixon's White House hit-man in residence, came out of prison a born-again Christian and has devoted his life to a prison fellowship program. The streets are teeming with people who, when young, committed heinous crimes and now lead productive lives. Vengeance has its satisfactions, but so, too, does rehabilitation.

'A public, led by opportunistic politicians, that would severely curtail proven parole or furlough programs would, in Darrow's phrase, be turning its face to the past.'

In 1924, Darrow called psychiatry to the witness stand. In doing so, he was asking that his clients be judged as individuals, not just by the crime they committed. Parole boards and furlough committees do precisely that. They ought to be cautious. They ought to be careful. But they ought to be able to say — maybe only occasionally — that a particular person has changed, that he no longer is a danger to society and that keeping him in prison does no one any good. They ought to have that option.

"You may hang these boys," Darrow told the judge in summation. "You may hang them by the neck until they are dead. But in doing it, you are turning your face to the past." A public, led by opportunistic politicians, that would severely curtail proven parole or furlough programs would, in Darrow's phrase, be turning its face to the past. Back there is the hangman who nearly got Nathan Leopold.

Funerals Held For Two Victims Of Tornadoes

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — In a church which itself bore scars of a tornado assault, hundreds of friends and relatives mourned the death of 12-year-old tornado victim Edwin "Pete" Fulghum, and his mother clung to a jewelry box he had made for her for Christmas.

"At the very moments when we think life has come to an end, that is when life begins," said the Rev. Bob Walkup, pastor of Saint Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

"Pete is raised by grace, by his faith. He is with God forever and forever," Walkup said. "It is we who suffer; it is no longer Pete."

Pete made the box in shop class and signed his name inside. A friend brought it to his mother.

"Only Pete would give me a present even after he's dead," Patty Fulghum said, tears welling in her eyes. Her face was badly bruised from injuries from the twister, which hurled her and her daughter across the street.

Pete Fulghum was one of four people killed when vicious tornadoes struck nine counties along a 200-mile stretch of eastern North Carolina in darkness Monday. Another 157 people were injured and 850 left homeless. Damage was estimated at $100 million.

A funeral for Janet Barnes, 9, of Raleigh, was held Wednesday afternoon. Also killed were Lee Roy and Mary Alston of Nash County, who will be buried Sunday afternoon.

"One of the things that touched me so was how much she loved people as a whole," Janet's mother, Elizabeth Barnes, said after the service. At Janet's elementary school, "The custodians were as important to her as the principal.

"When the flowers started to come, there were flowers from the custodial staff. ... That's pretty big for a 9-year-old," Mrs. Barnes said.

"We feel so fortunate to have had her," she said.

According to reports, Janet died when parts of her second-floor bedroom and a chimney collapsed onto her. Her parents, Elizabeth and Henry Walter Barnes III, and a 16-year-old sister, Elizabeth, escaped unharmed. A brother, H. Walt "Chip" Barnes IV, was away at school at The Citadel in Charleston, S.C.

Meanwhile, Gov. Jim Martin requested $9.3 million in federal disaster assistance in a letter to President Reagan that state officials planned to hand-deliver to the White House. Owners of the 1,827 houses and businesses damaged or destroyed continued clearing away wreckage.

The letter asks Reagan for a disaster area declaration that would make victims eligible for assistance from the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

If the application is approved, individuals and families could receive grants of up to $10,000 per household, loans and housing for up to 18 months. The application requests funds for 482 temporary housing units, 462 individual and family grants and unemployment assistance for 345 people.

Martin also asked for 363 home loans totaling $3.6 million from the Small Business Administration and 43 SBA business loans totaling $1.7 million. Another $718,252 for public buildings was sought.

The assistance is designed to help victims pay for minor repairs and immediate needs, said James Self of the state Division of Emergency Management. A subsequent application to cover agricultural losses will be submitted later, he said.

Almost $250,000 has been contributed to the local American Red Cross relief operation so far, officials said Wednesday. IBM and Glaxo Corp. have donated $100,000 each to the fund-raising efforts, said Peter VanGraafeiland, chapter chairman fo the Red Cross Triangle Area.

Pete Fulghum died in his bed as the tornado blew apart his house. His mother and sister were hurled across the street but suffered only minor injuries.

Walkup said in an interview it was miraculous that Ms. Fulghum and her daughter, Ruth, 15, survived. "When you consider the power and devastation we've all seen ... the whole town is a miracle," he said.

Pine tree fragments and stumps littered the churchyard and the church sign was broken in half.

Mrs. Fulghum, walking with crutches, led the family into the sanctuary. Her daughter carried flowers. Pete's father, who is divorced from Mrs. Fulghum, Pete's grandparents and other relatives attended. Folding chairs were set up in the vestibule for the overflow crowd.

Walkup read verses from I Peter that he said was the dead child's favorite scriptural passage: A promise of resurrection and "an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you."

The pastor recalled combing the wreckage of the Fulghum's house and finding Pete's size 7 Barracuda running shoes.

"Even like an Olympic runner, he runs before his time," Walkup said. "He carries that torch for all of us."

Dozens of Pete's schoolmates and friends attended the funeral. Afterward, many wept and embraced. A group of young people stood in a circle outside the church and prayed, some with arms around each other.

Driver Charged

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A Wilkes County truck driver has been charged with the deaths of two children in a three-vehicle wreck last week in Alexander County, officials said.

Clifton Hutchinson, 31, of Traphill was charged with two counts of misdemeanor death by vehicle.

Brook Danielle Powell, 3, and Mark Anthony Bowman Jr., 5 months, were killed in the wreck on N.C. 16 about two miles north of Taylorsville last Wednesday morning.

If convicted of both charges, Hutchinson could be sentenced to four years in prison.

Rex Roberts, Burroughs Wellcome Co. Campaign Chairman, presents a check in the amount of $193,352.32 to Lou Folger, the United Way Executive Director from Pitt County. The check is from Burroughs Wellcome Co. and employees.

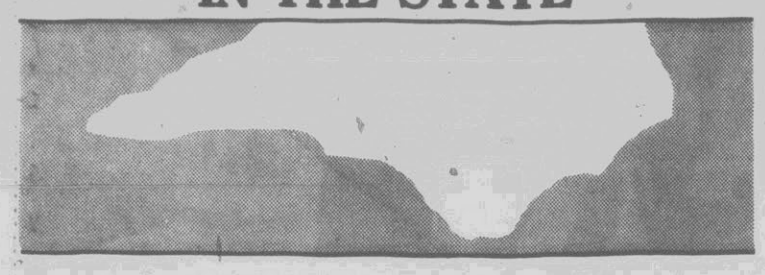
IN THE STATE



Swine Tests

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Beginning Jan. 1, hogs being transported on state public highways will have to be tested for pseudorabies, a highly-contagious disease that has affected 319 herds in the state this year, officials said.

Blood tests will be required to ensure that the animals are not carriers of the disease. According to Dr. Tom McGinn, assistant director of field services for the Veterinary Division of the state Department of Agriculture, the Pseudorabies Control Program could cost the state up to $1.1 million a year. The state has allocated $835,000 for a three-quarter year period in order to prevent any further spread.

The program was instituted because of a dramatic increase in the number of infected herds statewide, McGinn said. He said 184 herds had been quarantined at the beginning of 1988. That figure has jumped to 319.

Citations

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — A judge delayed ruling Tuesday on Central Transport trucking company's request to dismiss allegations of safety violations and fines of $2,800 cited this year at Central's terminal in Charlotte.

Attorneys for the company claim the allegations should be thrown out because they stem from an illegal inspection by the Labor Department's Occupational Safety and Health Division.

The citations relate to safety issues raised by the deaths of two employees — Clyde Hendershot, 23, of Belmont and Richard Enfinger, 18, of Gastonia — who died of methylene chloride poisoning in June 1986. Methylene chloride was in a solvent Central sometimes used to help remove chemicals hauled in tankers.

Administrative Law Judge Joyce Garrett instead gave attorneys for both parties until Dec. 9 to file briefs about Central's claim.

Cargo Declines

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Officials at the N.C. State Ports Authority credited market conditions and current expansion products for a sharp reduction of cargo moving through the terminals the first four months of the fiscal year.

The two ports handled a total of 1,606,464 tons during the first four months of the fiscal year, which began July 1. For the same period last year, 2,036,282 tons of cargo moved through the ports.

"The current year's reduced tonnage figure primarily reflects the loss of liquid bulk received at the Port of Wilmington by liquid bulk customers," said NCSPA executive director Noel Painchaud.

Herbicides

ASHEVILLE (AP) — The U.S. Forest Service plans a greater reliance on herbicides to control unwanted vegetation in the Appalachian Mountains, but a spokesman said the chemicals will be applied more selectively.

The agency released a draft environmental impact statement this week detailing what it believes is the best way to get rid of plants on utility rights of way, mountaintop balds, railroad corridors and in recreation areas in national forests in the Appalachians.

Vegetation management is now practiced on an average of 130,000 acres each year on the forests. Under the Forest Service proposal, the acres treated would remain the same, but the amounts of the various control methods would change.

Herbicides would be sprayed on 34,259 acres annually, up from the current 24,600. In addition, aerial spraying along power lines would be used for the first time on about 900 acres.

Interest Raised

RALEIGH (AP) — The rate of interest charged to banks and savings institutions for state funds invested in six-month certificates of deposit and savings certificates was raised from $8\frac{7}{8}$ percent to 9 percent effective Wednesday, State Treasurer Harlan Boyles announced.

The change marks an increase in interest rates in the market for U.S. government and agency securities.

Most North Carolina Counties Still In Running For Waste Storage Site

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — About 62 percent of North Carolina's land area has been eliminated from consideration for a low-level radioactive waste facility that would open in 1993, but few entire counties have been excluded.

Ebasco Services Inc., a New York contractor retained by the North Carolina Low-Level Radioactive Waste Management Authority, unveiled maps Wednesday showing areas that could house a waste site.

Tenney Deane Jr., executive director of the authority, said the report was significant not only because it narrows the scope of the search.

"Second, it gives us a procedure, a methodology, for making a closer examination of broad geographical areas as we search for a site that is acceptable to both the public and the regulatory bodies," he told the Joint Select Committee on Low-Level Radioactive Waste. "Third, this report will help us to promote interest among community and county leaders for hosting the facility."

Deane and other officials were careful to point out that no actual sites have been identified and no counties officially excluded. A news release by the authority warns, "Although county boundaries appear on the map, the boundaries are for reference purposes only."

However, some counties appeared to have little or no suitable areas because they were entirely within flood-plain areas. Among those were Perquimans, Dare, Tyrrell, Hyde, Carteret and New Hanover.

Proximity to population centers also appeared to eliminate large areas of Mecklenburg, Buncombe, Guilford, Gaston, Forsyth, Cumberland and Wake counties.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, said he was surprised at the near-elimination of the most populous counties.

Sen. Lura Tally, D-Cumberland, eyed the maps with anxiety, noting every county had unsuitable areas.

"We can really see how fragile North Carolina is and really we're not a suitable state," she said.

The select committee went further, passing a motion asking the authority to give priority to sites volunteered "by a responsible public or private entity," and to land "owned or controlled by a public utility in proximity to an operating nuclear power reactor."

That drew questions from Sen. Joe Johnson, D-Wake, as it would make Carolina Power & Light Co.'s Shearon Harris plant one of the most likely areas still in consideration. The waste facility would eventually take waste from an eight-state region, once a facility in Barnwell, S.C. closes down.

"I just want it to be clear we're just making recommendations, not mandating anything," he said.

The panel also asked that the authority develop recommendations for compensating local governments of the host community, "including a revenue package and revenue distribution formula."

The search for a volunteer and attempts to saddle radioactive waste generators with the facility have been hot topics in the General Assembly for the past few years.

Authority members said they had no problem with directives from the joint select committee.

"We're looking at all the suitable areas," said Deane. "There's been no efforts to exclude them (utility lands) in the first place." Deane said at an authority news conference it was possible many potential sites would remain on Aug. 1, when legislation calls for at least two sites to be chosen.

"Nebraska went through a similar process and ended up with 12 sites for characterization," Deane said.

Autopsies Ordered

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MARION, N.C. — The bodies of two women who died when they fell from an overlook on the Blue Ridge Parkway will be exhumed so medical examiners can perform autopsies on the bodies, officials say.

"The gist of the matter is that, at the time the deaths were initially investigated, the medical examiner was under the impression that it was an accident," said state Medical Examiner Dr. John Butts.

The autopsies are necessary to "establish beyond a reasonable doubt what they (the two women) died of," Butts said Wecnesday.

Superior Court Judge Robert D. Lewis of Asheville ordered the exhumations on Tuesday.

Helen Burnette Gibbs, 30, of Fayetteville and her best friend, Jane Susan White Haire of Ladson, S.C., 32, were found dead Oct. 17 on the slopes below Chestoa View, about $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles south of Linville Falls on the parkway.

Authorities at first thought the women had died accidentally. Mrs. Gibbs' husband, James Clifton Gibbs, 37, told investigators the women had fallen while the three were taking photographs at sunset. The Gibbses and Mrs. Haire were on vacation in the area.

But McDowell County officials were suspicious of Gibbs' story. A week later, they charged him with two counts of murder.

Burke County medical examiner Dr. Dorwyn Croom examined the bodies after the deaths, but did not perform autopsies. Death certificates on the women said they had died of traumatic injuries resulting from a fall.

Economist Sees Slow N.C. Growth

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The North Carolina economy will grow in 1989, but not by much, an economist says.

"The key here is to realize that we are witnessing a slowdown, not a recession or a decline," said John Connaughton, director of the quarterly UNC-Charlotte-First Union North Carolina Economic Forecast.

"Our economic growth in 1988 peaked at mid-year," Connaughton said Wednesday. "In the last two quarters, GSP tapered off and unemployment rose slightly. Those signs are telling us that 1988 will be a growth year, but a slow growth year."

In the last half of 1988, the U.S. dollar has gained strength in international markets. "This is likely to give rise to another round of import penetration and reduced export opportunities during 1989," the report says.

Nondurable goods manufacturing — the largest dollar component of the state's economy — will be "the slowest growth sector in the North Carolina economy" next year, according to the quarterly UNC-Charlotte-First Union North Carolina Economic Forecast.

The state's ecomomy grew at an inflation-adjusted average of 5.8 percent in the last six years, the report said.

"Manufacturers have already cut production and inventory levels, and continued caution by the textile industry during 1988 and 1989 will assure a 1989 textile slowdown," the forecast said.

The report said stunted nondurable goods manufacturing will limit gross state product gains to 2.4 percent. The state will end 1988 with a 5.2 percent gross state product increase, despite a sluggish 1.4 percent average during the third and fourth quarters, the report said.

While apparel manufacturing in the state should grow 3.5 percent in 1989, the forecast said an expected 1.3 percent decline in textiles will make the nondurable sector "sluggish" and limit the state's overall economic gain.

David Orr, First Union Corp. vice president for economic research, said increased competition from neighboring states will challenge North Carolina's economic prosperity in the next decade.

"North Carolinqa has benefitted from relocating companies," Orr said. "In the 1970s, 35 percent of our population growth came from out-of-state immigration and so far in the 1980s it has been 52 percent. Our success at attracting new jobs has been based on low wages, low real estate costs, few labor unions and low taxes."

"These advantages still apply, but the gap between us and the rest of the nation is closing."

Orr said the state must concentrate on improving education and transportation and make inovations in business taxes in order "to remain a leader in the immigration sweepstakes."

Democrats Fume, Launch Search For New Chairman Of State Party

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — While some participants said a closed-door meeting of top Democrats featured blunt exchanges about the party's recent defeats, others said the discussion did not deal with fundamental issues that must be addressed for the Democrats to improve their fortunes.

"It seems to be much of the same old stuff, really," said U.S. Rep. Tim Valentine, who left about halfway through the 2½-hour meeting Wednesday night.

"It has not been a frank discussion, and I have other places to go," Valentine said.

But some said the meeting had been worthwhile. "We may be seeing the rebirth of the Democratic Party in North Carolina," said state Rep. H.M. "Mickey" Michaux, D-Durham.

Outgoing party chairman Jim Van Hecke appointed a 17-member committee led by former Charlotte Mayor Harvey Gantt to search for a new state Democratic chairman.

The search panel will make its recommendation to the party's Executive Committee on Jan. 14, the day Van Hecke plans to step down from the post he has held since 1986.

Gov. Jim Martin's re-election and Jim Gardner's election as the first Republican lieutenant governor of the century have left the Democrats with no clear titular leader.

The Executive Council, a group of about 30 party leaders, is spearheading the effort to find a successor to Van Hecke and develop a strategy for producing winning candidates for future campaigns.

"Our purpose tonight was not to have a soul searching," Van Hecke said. "Our purpose was to talk about the process for selecting officers, the unique position we find ourselves in, and what do we do about being in this position."

Historically, the state's highest-ranking Democratic officeholder has recommended a chairman and the Executive Committee has rubber-stamped the choice.

Van Hecke said he chose the search committee with an eye toward representing the party's constituent groups and all geographical regions. Among the members are U.S. Rep. David Price, Durham Mayor Wib Gulley, Sen. Terry Sanford, state Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, former Raleigh Mayor Clarence Lightner, and Almetta Armstrong, 8th District minority affairs chairwoman.

Sanford, who did not attend Wednesday's meeting, has scheduled eight meetings with Democratic leaders across the state to get their input on the next chairman. The first will be this Saturday in Asheville.

Democrats on hand Wednesday said some of the sharpest remarks were made by those who felt the party leadership had done too little to promote the nomination of blacks and women for statewide offices.

At one point, Michaux told the group to "look at that wall," gesturing toward the wall of the conference room where the meeting took place. Hanging there are framed photographs of present and past elected Democratic officeholders — all white males.

Karen Gottovi, a Wilmington party activist and Democratic National Committee member who is not seeking re-election, made the same point in a memorandum to council members.

"It frankly embarrassed me that the Republican Party had both a black and a woman on their Council of State slate of candidates and we had neither," Ms. Gottovi wrote.

"We expect the undying loyalty of these constituencies on voting day, but do not act like the inclusive, fair-minded party that we say we are when we construct the ballots," her memo said.

Van Hecke told reporters later that Democrats did need more black and female candidates.

"We've got to do a better job," he said. "We tried to get other candidates to run last time and didn't (succeed). I think there's an opportunity for us now to go out and get young people, blacks, women to run."

Expansion

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Production capacity at the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. plant will be increased 30 percent as part of a $1.5 billion, three-year worldwide investment, Firestone and Bridgestone Corp. announced Wednesday.

Firestone became a wholly owned subsidiary of Bridgestone Corp. of Japan last May.

The expansion in Wilson will include converting the majority of the plant's production to high-performance tires bearing both the Firestone and Bridgestone brands. To date, no Bridgestone tires have been produced at the Wilson plant.

No substantial increase in employment is expected at the Firestone plant, Wilson County's largest employer, which now has 1,600 workers.

School Board May Back Merit Raises

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Members of the state Board of Education probably will recommend launching a $400 million teacher merit-pay program statewide next year, officials say.

"For consideration in January, this committee is going to recommend in all probability that we move to the opportunity for everybody to participate," Norman Turnage, chairman of the board's personnel committee, said Wednesday.

The salary plan, in its fourth year of testing in 16 school systems, would create a career ladder with five status steps offering increasingly higher pay to teachers as they gain experience and meet higher performance standards.

But the N.C. Association of Educators, the state's largest teachers group, wants to see the state repair a complicated and inequitable salary schedule for teachers before it starts pouring money into a career ladder, said Thomas Husted, executive director.

Under the board's merit pay plan, a new teacher would begin at the initial certification level for two years, move up to provisional status in the third year and then be eligible to compete for Career Status I and a 5 percent pay raise. Three years later, the teacher could compete for Career Status II, and another 10 percent pay hike. The state still is developing standards for Career Status III.

Teachers are judged for the ladder by trained evaluators who observe them four times a year as they teach. A study shows that in pilot programs funded by the state, 39 percent of the teachers have reached level one and 38 percent have climbed to level two.

CELEBRATING 40 YEARS — 1948 - 1988

Bailey's was founded in 1948 by my parents, Ann and Clyde Bailey. My mother operated the store from my father's death in 1962 until her retirement in 1978. Today, 40 years after our beginnings, we rank among the leading jewelers in North Carolina. On this special occasion I would like to give my sincere thanks for our success first of all to my parents whose great vision and hard work paved the way, secondly to the 25 outstanding people who work with such dedication for Bailey's, and most importantly to our many valued customers and friends whose support through the years have made it all possible. Our commitment to our customer in 1988 is the same as it was when my parents established Bailey's 40 years ago. That's why today we say, Bailey's, a tradition of fine service and honest value.

Sincerely, Clyde Bailey

Baptist Alliance Plans New Theological Center At Black College

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — The Southern Baptist Alliance says it hopes to break down old racial and regional barriers by establishing a theological center at a predominantly black college in Richmond, Va.

"This isn't just a new Baptist seminary," said the Rev. Tom Graves of Charlotte. "The most important thing is that, for the first time, American Baptists, black Baptists and Southern Baptists are cooperating in theological education.

"We are overcoming regional and racial barriers that for more than a century have kept us apart," Graves said.

The alliance's theological education committee met in Charlotte Wednesday with leaders of four seminaries affiliated with the American Baptist Churches in the U.S.A., a 1.6 million-member denomination based in Valley Forge, Pa.

Participants outlined plans for a staff of eight professors — four each supplied by the alliance and the American Baptists — to be attached to the school of theology at Virginia Union University.

If all goes according to plan, the center could accept students as early as next fall, said Graves, who is chairman of the alliance committee.

The Southern Baptist Convention split from the American Baptist Churches over slavery in 1845. The predominantly Southern, predominantly white convention is the nation's largest non-Catholic denomination.

But 10 years of power struggles and disagreements over interpreting the Bible have divided the 14.7 million-member convention. The alliance, which represents about 40,000 moderate Southern Baptists, has been searching for alternatives to theological education based on the fundamentalist view that the Bible is literally true.

Interest accelerated after fundamentalists won a majority on the board of trustees at Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary in Wake Forest and voted to hire only faculty members who believe the Bible is without error. Amid student and alumni protests, enrollment dropped by nearly 20 this fall.

Graves, who left Southeastern's faculty to become pastor of St. John's Baptist Church last year, said the new center would draw professors from four American Baptist institutions: Andover Newton Theological School in Boston, Colgate-Rochester Divinity School in Rochester, N.Y., Eastern Baptist Theological Seminary in St. Davids, Pa., and Virginia Union.

In addition, the alliance would commit about $250,000 to hire a development director and four other full-time professors.

The new effort "in no way dims support for a divinity school on the campus of Wake Forest University," another alliance project that has been discussed for almost a year, Graves said.

Farms Face Fines Over Illegal Aliens

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The federal government's offer of amnesty for illegal migrant farm workers has expired, and starting today farmers who hire illegal workers face fines of up to $10,000 and six months in jail.

More than 1 million migrants — including about 18,000 in North Carolina and South Carolina — had applied for permanent resident status by Friday, Toni Lake, a spokesman for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in Washington, told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

The government first offered permanent residency to migrants in a landmark 1986 law passed by Congress to blunt the incentive farmers had for hiring illegals aliens.

In North Carolina, the 18-month application period drew to a close without the overwhelming numbers officials had expected.

Authorities said it would be months before all the applications could be checked against the records of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Central Intelligence Agency and other federal agencies.

Migrants whose records are cleared begin a five-year trek to U.S. citizenship, and, in the meantime, legally can work anywhere.

About 125 farm workers were lined up at the INS office in Charlotte when staff members opened the doors, Timothy Greene, the area's chief legalization officer, said in a telephone interview.

By 4:30 p.m., he said, about 160 applications had been filed at the office, which serves North Carolina and South Carolina.

"We're very surprised," he said. "We were expecting a lot more."

Migrant farm workers in eastern North Carolina, most of whom come from Mexico, rely heavily on tobacco growers and vegetable farmers for work, officials said. The season for most of those crops has ended and the nomadic workers are gone.

Cocaine Seized

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — ABC agents have seized about $22,000 worth of crack cocaine from a Winston-Salem home and arrested a 44-year-old man, charging him with trafficking in crack, authorities said.

Officials said the crack bust was the biggest in the city.

Joel R. Blackwood of Winston-Salem was arrested Tuesday, police said.

Blackwood's first court appearance is scheduled for Thursday.

Crack is a powerful cocaine derivative that police says is showing up in increasingly large amounts on Winston-Salem streets.

Store Robbed

RALEIGH (AP) — Two men armed with a submachine gun and a hammer robbed a jewelry store at Crabtree Valley Mall on Wednesday morning, police said.

No shots were fired and no one was injured, authorities said.

Sgt. Albert Watson said the two men broke open display cases at a Carlyle & Co. jewelry store and took watches and other items. They then escaped outside a door near the store, Watson said.

It was not known how many watches were stolen or their value.

Quayle Says He's 'Stronger Person'

By Eileen Putman
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President-elect Dan Quayle may spend more time than his predecessors presiding over the Senate, a move that could spell conflict between the Democratic-controlled chamber and the administration.

In an interview, Quayle on Wednesday also made his strongest public rejection of the notion that he will act as the link between the administration and the Republican Party's far right.

He also said his verbal gaffes during the campaign gave him some hard lessons about his own tendency to talk too much. Being besieged with questions and jokes about his qualifications was painful but educational, he said.

"I know myself better now. I'm a stronger person," he said.

Quayle said his focus now is on the task ahead — picking his vice presidential staff during the transition period and working with President-elect George Bush.

Since the election, conservatives have beaten a path to Quayle's transition office seeking his ear. Quayle himself is an ardent conservative who has largely supported Reagan administration positions during his eight years in the Senate.

"I've worked with a number of conservatives in the past; a lot of good friends are conservatives, but I'm not the point man for the conservatives in this administration. ... You won't see me being the so-called spear carrier for all the so-called conservative issues," Quayle said.

Quayle also hinted that he may take a more active role in his official capacity as president of the Senate, presiding over the Democratic-controlled chamber more frequently.

"It's certainly an option. ... There have been suggestions to me by many that I consider spending more time in the Senate than my predecessors have. I have not made a decision on that," he said.

The presiding officer has substantial discretion as to which senator to recognize for the purpose of offering amendments, bills and motions. Normally the chair is occupied by a member of the majority party. A Republican in charge could touch off partisan parliamentary warfare.

The vice president may take the presiding chair at any time, and the presiding officer's decision to recognize a senator is not subject to a point of order or appeal under Senate rules.

Bush has said he wants to work with Congress, and Quayle said if he did decide to preside more often, it would not be done "in a contentious manner."

"I would be fair and objective and do what the president of the Senate should do to protect senators' rights, all senators' rights," he said.

During the interview, Quayle was relaxed and friendly, but clearly weighing his words. He has not generally spoken to the press in depth since the election. He confessed to being "far more careful of what I say today than six months ago."

"I also try to discipline myself when I get into a situation ... instead of being verbose, which is a tendency that I have, to be concise. Because verbosity leads to unclear, inarticulate things."

Also on Wednesday, Quayle met with retiring Indiana Gov. Robert D. Orr, a Republican who will appoint Quayle's replacement in the Senate. Quayle will resign effective Jan. 2 so his replacement can have seniority over other incoming senators.

Orr has not said whom he will appoint, and Quayle said he made no recommendation. But he did not reject a reporter's suggestion that he favors Rep. Dan Coats, who was Quayle's district representative in Fort Wayne, Ind., while Quayle was in the House from 1976 to 1980.

$30 Billion Needed For Weak S&Ls

By Kathleen Day
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The government will need at least $30 billion in cash next year to close the 500 weakest savings and loans that are costing taxpayers millions of dollars every day they remain open, one of the nation's top banking regulators said Wednesday.

Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Chairman L. William Seidman, whose agency insures bank deposits, also said that when banks and S&Ls fail, the government should immediately raise premiums charged to financial institutions instead of waiting until deposit insurance funds are exhausted.

Seidman said that raising premiums when institutions fail would send a signal to bank and S&L executives to curb risky behavior in their industries. Nevertheless, Seidman said the FDIC has no immediate plans to raise premiums for its member banks despite record failures. The FDIC will end the year with $15 billion in reserves, which Seidman said is more than sufficient to handle the banking industry's problems.

"A deposit insurance system out of control has the potential to 'melt down' and damage the entire U.S. economy," Seidman said of the S&L deposit insurance fund, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. That fund is insolvent by at least $14 billion and possibly by twice that amount.sw

"The message today is, the situation requires $30 billion in 1989," Seidman said.

As much as $70 billion in additional cash will be needed in 1990 and beyond to close hundreds of troubled S&Ls that are healthier than the worst 500 cases, he said.

Seidman said that before any money is spent, however, the agency that regulates the savings and loan industry — the Federal Home Loan Bank Board — and its insurance arm, FSLIC, should be overhauled to eliminate conflicts of interest that many banking experts believe helped create the S&L crisis.

The bank board has been widely criticized for being heavily influenced by S&L executives and by the industry's major lobby group, the U.S. League of Savings Institutions.

Any fund that insures S&L deposits "should be independent of the industry it regulates," Seidman said.

Seidman made his remarks during a speech unveiling the FDIC's 10-point plan to reform the deposit insurance system. The FDIC plan follows a year of study and will be published in several weeks, he said.

Officials close to the administration of President Reagan and President-elect George Bush have said they want to raise $20 billion to $30 billion a year for the next three years to dispose of the failing S&Ls. But they said they will not unveil their plan, developed at the Treasury Department, until they devise a way to raise the money without swelling the federal deficit and triggering automatic budget cuts under the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction act.

Seidman's proposals to deal with the S&L crisis and prevent it from infecting the banking industry's insurance fund are believed to anticipate the Treasury plan.

Bush Wraps Up Congressional Calls

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President-elect George Bush is wrapping up a series of good-faith gestures toward Congress by meeting with the Senate's new majority leader, George Mitchell of Maine.

The invitation to Mitchell, a liberal Democrat elected to the Senate's top post just two days ago, caps a series of one-on-one meetings between Bush and leading lawmakers from both sides of the aisle over the past two weeks.

Bush also was attending a foreign intelligence advisory board meeting today at the White House and joining President Reagan tonight at a testimonial dinner for one of the men he defeated for the GOP nomination, retiring Rep. Jack Kemp of New York.

Mitchell, asked Wednesday what advice he would offer Bush, said, "I'm going to listen to him and try to be accommodating to his concerns."

"We look forward to cooperating," said the new Democratic leader. "The campaign is over and we've got serious problems, important issues facing the country."

Bush also met on Wednesday with Jesse Jackson, holding a private lunch with the Democrat he had called a "hustler from Chicago" just a few months ago during the presidential campaign. This time Bush had nothing but praise for the longtime civil rights leader.

But sources who insisted on anonymity said Samuel K. Skinner, chairman of the Regional Transportation Authority in the Chicago area, has emerged as Bush's likely choice for transportation secretary.

Bush sidestepped questions about whether he will name former Sen. John Tower of Texas as defense secretary. Another Texan, Houston oilman and political fund-raiser Robert Mosbacher, is reported to be in line for commerce secretary.

Bush, asked about reported staff wars over a Tower appointment, claimed that "all is tranquil."

Other sources said Wednesday that Elizabeth Dole, the former Transportation secretary and wife of Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, is a top candidate for ambassador to the United Nations.

Bush's personnel chief, Chase Untermeyer, told reporters that Bush has at most 4,307 full-time jobs to fill, and many will not come open in 1989. Of the 2,252 possible appointments to jobs, boards and commissions that require Senate confirmation, Bush is likely to fill only 1,355 next year, Untermeyer, and only 818 of those are full-time jobs.

Released

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A former Marine master sergeant sentenced in 1987 to 35 years in prison for sexually molesting his stepdaughters has been freed from the Camp Lejeune brig. He will return to active duty, according to Marine spokesmen.

The dishonorable discharge given now-Pvt. Robert Ortiz, 40, was remitted by the Navy Clemency Parole Board at the direction of Kenneth Bergquist, assistant secretary of the Navy for manpower and reserve affairs.

Marine Corps Commandant Gen. Al Gray earlier reviewed a clemency request from Ortiz's wife and two stepdaughters.

Ortiz pleaded guilty during a general court-martial on April 1, 1987, at Cherry Point air station in Havelock to two specifications of rape, one of sodomy and three counts of unlawful carnal knowledge of a child under 16 years old, Peck said.

AT&T Drops Long Line Phone Rates

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Local telephone rates are going up today, and AT&T's long-distance prices are going down, soon to be followed by those of rivals US Sprint Communications Co. and MCI Communications Corp.

This script has been replayed several times in recent years as part of an effort by federal regulators to shift the costs of the local phone network to local customers.

For about half of all customers, long-distance price cuts of 38 percent since 1984 have more than offset the rise in local rates, according to the Federal Communications Commission. Those in the other half, however, don't call long-distance enough to benefit. Instead, their overall bill is higher.

Beginning today, customers will see another 60 cents added to their monthly local phone bill, and American Telephone & Telegraph Co. will drop its basic interstate long-distance rates an average of 3.8 percent.

US Sprint said it will drop its rates Jan. 1 an average 3.85 percent, about the same for business as for residential customers. MCI expects to announce details of a price cut next month.

AT&T is able to make its $697 million annual reduction, and US Sprint and MCI theirs, because costs of connecting to the local network are being reduced by the corresponding increase in customers' monthly bills.

With today's 60-cent increase, the subscriber line charge has risen to $3.20. The federal charge, imposed in 1985, is designed to reduce the subsidy long-distance companies pay to maintain the local network.

A customer who makes about $5.20 per month in direct-dialed long-distance calls saves enough to offset the effects of the line charge, according to James L. Lande in the FCC's industry analysis division,

"About half the people are at least breaking even," he said.

AT&T will cut its basic long-distance rates for calls traveling more than 124 miles by 3.8 percent. It will make smaller cuts in rates for interstate calls of shorter distances, which account for about one-quarter of AT&T interstate calls.

The largest among the price cuts will go to large volume users, both residential and business.

Rates for Reach Out America, AT&T's long-distance calling plan for residential customers, will be cut 4.9 percent.

AT&T WATS rates will drop 4 percent and the company will restructure the service to bill calls individually based on time and distance, rather than by the current hourly pricing method. This price reduction is to take effect Jan. 1, a month later than the others.

Rates for AT&T's three PRO WATS calling plans for business customers will be cut 3.8 percent overall. MEGACOM WATS rates will drop 4.7 percent and MEGACOM 800 rates will go down 4.5 percent.

Basic AT&T 800 service prices will go down 3.6 percent, and Software Defined Network Service rates will see an overall reduction of 6.2 percent.

Economy Index Rises Slightly

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The government said today its chief forecasting gauge of future economic activity edged up a sluggish 0.1 percent in October after falling a month earlier.

The Commerce Department's Index of Leading Indicators had previously been estimated as falling only 0.1 percent in September, but today's report revised that downturn to minus 0.3 percent.

Economists said the movement of the index appears to be pointing to slower growth, but they have been hard-pressed to find much sign of it yet.

Other statistics for October, the latest available, all look very strong. Unemployment is at a 14-year low, factories are using more of their capacity than at any time in 8½ years and personal income posted its steepest increase in a year.

"The message is clear that the fourth quarter is starting out very well. ... There are no particular imbalances ... (and) that suggests the economy should keep on expanding nicely for another six to nine months," said Allen Sinai, an economist for The Boston Co.

However, the leading index is "clearly signaling a slowdown," he said in advance of today's report. Over the last 12 months, it is up only 0.5 percent, compared with a gain of 6.0 percent for the previous 12-month period. It was the smallest October-to-October increase since 1979-80, before the last recession.

In October, four of nine available indicators were pointing to faster growth, while five were pointing to slower growth.

Times Says Intruder Forced Pentagon To Split Computers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — An unknown computer intruder forced the Pentagon to cut links between an unclassified military network and a nationwide academic and corporate network for several days, The New York Times reported today.

The academic and corporate computer network, known as Arpanet, was the same one crippled last month by a computer virus, which is being investigated by a federal grand jury in Syracuse.

Pentagon officials said Wednesday the Defense Department move was due to technical difficulties.

However, several unidentified computer security experts told the Times that Pentagon officials had informed them the network connection was severed after the intruder illegally gained entry recently to several computers operated by defense contractors and the military.

The experts said they believed the Pentagon broke the connection, which permits military and academic researchers to exchange information, while it tried to eliminate a security flaw in the military network, the Times said.

An unidentified Defense Communication Agency spokesman said in a statement that the links between the two networks were cut at 10 p.m. Monday, and were expected to be restored today.

The Defense Department apparently acted after a computer at the Mitre Corp., a Bedford, Mass., think tank with several military contracts, was illegally entered several times over the past month, The Times said.

Officials at several universities in the United States and Canada said the intruder used their computers to reach Mitre's.

Mitre spokeswoman Marcia Cohen said one of the company's computers had been entered, but said the computers involved had not handled any classified or sensitive information. She said the problem was fixed within hours of being detected.

The decision to disconnect the military computer network, known as Milnet, from Arpanet upset a number of computer users around the country.

"There is a fair amount of grumbling going on," said Donald Alvarez, an astrophysicist at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Last month a computer virus, a self-copying program which can cripple computer operations, crammed an estimated 6,000 computers nationwide. The virus attack caused at least $97 million in damage because of interrupted work on computers that had to be shut down and work needed to resuscitate the computers, according to the Computer Virus Industry Association.

Former Accuser Says Wrong Man Convicted In Cop Murder

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — The wrong man spent 11 years in prison for the murder of a police officer, his former accuser said as he recanted his testimony in a dramatic real-life epilogue to the documentary movie "The Thin Blue Line."

"I feel like it's my responsibility to step forward — to be a man — and admit my part in it," said David Ray Harris, who at age 16 testified in 1977 that Randall Dale Adams killed Dallas police officer Robert Wood.

Harris, now a death row inmate in an unrelated killing, was the first witness to testify Wednesday in a state district court hearing in which Adams is seeking a new trial.

Adams was convicted of the Nov. 28, 1976, shooting death of Wood, and sentenced to death. The sentence was later commuted to life in prison. He has maintained his innocence, and "The Thin Blue Line," a Public Broadcasting Service production released to selected theaters this summer, questioned his conviction.

After originally saying that he and Adams were in a car stopped by Wood and Officer Teresa Turko, Harris said Wednesday that he was alone in the car when the killing occurred.

Although he stopped short of saying he committed the murder, Harris said his finger was on the trigger of the .22-caliber gun that killed Wood.

Judge Larry Baraka said based on the testimony, he would determine that Harris had admitted to committing the crime.

"As far as the court is concerned, he is telling me that he did," Baraka said.

Baraka could make a recommendation to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals for a new trial after the hearing, which was expected to last several days.

Defense attorney Randy Schaffer quickly got to the heart of the case, however, asking Harris, "Did Randall Adams kill Robert Wood?"

Harris replied, "No, he did not. Randall Adams knew nothing about this offense and was not in the car at the time."

Dressed in an orange jail suit and wearing handcuffs and shackles, Harris also denied assertions that he recanted to avoid a reputation among other inmates as a "snitch."

"Someone might come up and stab me in the back tomorrow. So be it," Harris said.

Dallas County prosecutor Leslie McFarlane asked Harris why he started making stronger statements to reporters in the past two or three months about Adams' innocence compared to what he said in a similar hearing for Adams in federal court in 1986.

"I felt like I needed to do something to push things forward because evidently what I told them wasn't enough," Harris said.

Harris testified he was biased in favor of the prosecution when he implicated Adams at the trial. He said then-prosecutor Doug Mulder had promised "to take care of" other criminal charges pending against him in return for his testimony.

After he testified against Adams, Harris said, he was not prosecuted in those pending cases and did not have to continue reporting to his probation officer.

In initial reports, Turko, the policewoman whose partner was slain, did not give a description of the gunman, but testified Wednesday that she later described him as having bushy hair. She acknowledged that she did not know where that description came from, and she may have gotten it from Mulder.

Schaeffer asked if others in the police department were pushing to solve Wood's murder.

"I wanted to see the man accused of killing my partner convicted," Turko said.

Among spectators in the packed courtroom Wednesday was Wood's younger sister, Patricia Willis, who said she wants to see the matter put to rest. Ms. Willis said she believes Harris has recanted for attention and to bide time for himself.

Movie director Errol Morris, who also watched the hearing, said: "I'm concerned because I want Randall Adams to get out of jail. I care deeply about him and his family."

Admitted To Bar

Bethel native Cynthia Ann Bowers has been admitted to practice law before the Supreme Court of Virginia.

A graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and the University of Richmond School of Law, Miss Bowers serves as clerk to Judge Marvin F. Cole of the Court of Appeals of Virginia. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. J.R. Bowers of Bethel.

Jenkins Released Under Total Of 18 Bonds

Moore was to administer the oath again and sign the bonds, she said.

"The bonds are good," she said. "There was just one step overlooked and that's going to be corrected this morning."

Jenkins' attorney, Charles Vincent of Greenville, said he was out of town Sunday and did not learn that Jenkins was released until Wednesday. He said he was not in a position to comment on the release.

On 13 of the bonds, Pitt County Deputy Sheriff Greg Beacham's name appears as the custodian of the detention facility, indicating he was the jailer on duty Sunday when Jenkins was released. His signature appears in the space where the magistrate should have signed.

On a $8,250 bond posted by New Bern bondsman George H. Dunson, Dunson's name appears on the bond in the space designated for the bondsman's signature. His name also appears in the space where the magistrate should have signed.

No magistrate, clerk or jailer signed the remaining four bonds.

On two of the 18 bonds, check marks indicate a magistrate administererd the oath, but no magistrate signed the document.

Several of the bondsmen apparently gave Jenkins a bargain on the premium.

Customarily, a defendant will pay a bondsman a premium that is 15 percent of the total value of the bond. For example, on a $10,000 bond, the defendant would pay a $1,500 premium.

State law does not allow professional bondsmen to charge more than a 15 percent premium, but they may charge less, said Fred Mohn, director of the special services branch of the state Department of Insurance. The bondsman may be held responsible for the entire amount of the bond if the defendant fails to appear in court.

In all, Jenkins was able to pay a 10 percent premium on eight of the bonds. On nine bonds Jenkins paid a 15 percent premium, and one bond did not include the premium.

"The defendant, really, is getting a 5 percent break, across the board. There's no doubt about it," Mohn said.

The bonds indicate Jenkins paid a total of $31,338 in premiums on the 17 bonds that include the amount of the premium.

With a standard premium on a $300,000 bond, Jenkins would have paid $45,000.

The largest of the bonds, one for $95,000, was posted by the American Bankers Insurance Co. of Florida. The bond is signed by Jack Keener of Wilkesboro, and the bonding company apparently allowed Jenkins to pay a premium of 10 percent.

Pilot Project Set

for this school year. The state may offer the possibility of refunding it in subsequent years or other sources of funding may be sought if the project is successful, Ross said.

The coordinator will "go into the homes to talk with parents about follow-up educational activities for the students," Ross said. Also, parents will be encouraged to volunteer their time in the tutorial program by reading to the students, helping to serve refreshments, observing or anything to make the experience more enjoyable for the students.

Also, "we hope there will be some follow-up for children who did not become involved in the program," Ross said. Some students identified by the schools have not participated in the tutorial program.

The coordinator "will be going into the home, explaining the need for the child to be involved."

The project will be evaluated by parents and school personnel after the close of school in June, and a copy of the evaluation will be sent to the state, Ross said.

Recount Is Ordered

Local boards have the option of conducting the recount either Dec. 8 or Dec. 9, she said, and each board must inform both candidates by mail of the date and time of the recount.

Margaret Hardee, Pitt County elections supervisor, was out of town on vacation and unable to be reached for comment. Earlier, she had said it would be time-consuming for Pitt election officials to recount the ballots in the Lewis race.

In the Nov. 8 general election, there were over 400,000 ballots distributed to precincts. The ballots are stored by precinct, not by contest; therefore county election officials will likely have to sort through every ballot by hand to locate all of the ballots handed out for the Court of Appeals race, Mrs. Hardee said.

Lewis was assigned to hold court in Murhpy this week, and he could not be reached for comment.

Candidates had until noon today to call for a recount. Ms. McLean said recounts have already been called for two state Senate races, but the Court of Appeals race was the only statewide contest going to a second vote count.

House Painter Is A Self-Taught Expert On Gibbons

By T.W. McGarry
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — At sunrise each day, Alan Mootnick's chorus greets the dawn with a yammering of wild hoots, filling the desert north of Santa Clarita with the exotic cacophony of an Asian jungle.

Mootnick runs the Gibbon and Gallinaceous Bird Center, home to up to two dozen gibbons, the small apes that claim — loudly — the title of noisiest land mammals on Earth.

For 10 years Mootnick, a construction worker and house painter, has used his own money to run the center because he finds gibbons fascinating. It costs him about $30,000 a year, he said.

He is applying to California and federal tax authorities for recognition of the center as an educational institution. With tax-deductible status, he hopes to attract grants that will allow him to give up construction work, concentrate on writing research papers, and perhaps move his gibbons to a new home somewhere with a milder climate.

Scholars from American and foreign universities visit the center to observe the gibbons. Mootnick has published 10 research papers in scholarly journals such as the American Journal of Primatology, Cell Genetics and Cytogenetics and works of the American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums.

His own formal education, however, consists of a high school diploma and a two-year dental technician course. He never worked as a dental technician, he said, because "I hated the idea of being cooped up in a little office." He found painting and remodeling houses more satisfying and runs his own business.

Mootnick shrugs off the observation that few people with his academic training could write papers acceptable to scientific journals. "If you get good facts and can prove they're right, background isn't such a problem," he said.

In his case, the academic community agrees.

"Mootnick has worked very hard to establish credibility with the scientific community against what I think were overwhelming odds," said Joe Erwin, a biology professor at American University in Washington, D.C.

"It's quite difficult for someone who hasn't gone through formal training to be able to write a paper ... and get it published in a journal that is referred by experts in the field," he said. "It's difficult for someone with his background to establish a strong reputation, but his reputation is quite good."

Richard Tenaza, a biology professor at the University of the Pacific in Stockton, Calif., who is usually named by primate researchers as one of the handful of gibbon experts in the country, said that he was surprised to learn that Mootnick had no formal education in the field.

"He's very impressive on gibbon taxonomy," Tenaza said, "better at it than I am."

Taxonomy includes classifying individual animals as members of one of the nine species of gibbons, and many subspecies, which often look alike, a problem that is compounded by interbreeding of species in zoos. When other biologists and zoo administrators are stumped in classifying a gibbon, Tenaza said, they send for Mootnick to render judgment.

"Alan is the epitome of the kind of person who teaches himself through dedication and determination," said Rick Barongi, curator of mammals at the San Diego Zoo.

"I can call Alan on the phone and play a recording of a gibbon's vocalization, and he can tell me right off what species and subspecies it belongs to. Only one other researcher in the country can do that," Barongi said, "and he has a Ph.D. and works at the Smithsonian."

Because all gibbons are classed as endangered, since the mid-1970s the federal government has allowed only zoos and other accredited institutions to import them, and then only animals that were born in captivity or captured before the law went into effect.

Although they are cute and their ability as natural acrobats makes them a delight to watch, life as a pet is psychologically harmful to gibbons, he said. They identify too closely with humans, lose their identity as gibbons and become confused.

Mootnick lives in a former machine shop on 5 acres in a remote area north of the city. He currently keeps 14 gibbons in tall cages equipped with ropes, trapezes and perches to give them leaping points. The population has fluctuated from a low of seven to a high of 27.

Mootnick began collecting gibbons when he lived in North Hollywood in 1971. He founded the center in 1978, keeping the animals on 2½ rented acres in Chatsworth until 1981, when he bought the Santa Clarita Valley site.

"Some people like elephants or tigers, and I just happen to like gibbons," he said. "I've been fascinated by them since I heard them vocalize in the zoo when I was about 7 years old."

The piercing howl of a gibbon is music to his ears, said Mootnick, calling them "the songbirds of the primate family."

The cry, which Mootnick said can be heard for 2 to 3 miles, is primarily a gibbon's way of declaring to other gibbons that he has staked out a foraging territory and does not welcome competitors.

There have been no complaints from the neighbors in the sparsely inhabited area, Mootnick said. "On the contrary, some of them have told me they have friends over to hear the gibbons, that it gives the neighborhood something special," he said.

An informal survey of neighbors backed him up. "We like them," said Sue Smith, who lives about a mile away. "We hear them every morning and sometimes at night. They're like the coyotes, a kind of a nice noise."

Be Polite But Firm When Refusing To Answer Queries About Your Age

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: I'm a 32-year-old unmarried woman who happens to be very pretty and look younger than I am. I have a hard time dealing with people who ask me how old I am. I think that's a very personal question — like asking people how much they weigh, or how much money they make.

If I tell them the truth about my age, I get a backhanded compliment, like, "You look young for your age." If I lie, and they find out, I lose my credibility. One woman had the nerve to ask me my age in front of a crowd of people at a wedding. I was so angry, I lied. When people guess my age, nobody gets it right. They think I'm 24 or 25.

I'm starting a new job soon and I'm sure I'll be asked how old I am. How do I handle it? If I don't tell them, they will think I'm younger than I really am. If I tell them the truth, they will want to know why I haven't married at my age, etc. Please tell me how to deal with this. — Age Conscious

Dear Age Conscious: The cardinal rule: Never lie. However, you do not have to answer a question simply because it was asked. No need to get defensive, sarcastic or hostile. The most effective dodge is to smile, look the person in the eye, and in a very pleasant tone say, "My goodness, that's a rather personal question that I choose not to answer. I hope you don't mind." Then change the subject.

Since you are asked this question often and it irritates you, I recommend practicing the above response before a mirror — and commit it to memory.

Dear Abby: My sister's son committed suicide a few months ago. Although my sister and I live far apart in distance, we are extremely close. His birthday would have been this week, and I couldn't decide whether to send her and her husband a nice card, call them, or just not mention it for fear of upsetting them.

My thoughts were: What if they were coping quite well? Wouldn't a card or call from me just stir up more emotion? The boy was like a son to me and they know it. — Bereaving, Too

Dear Bereaving: Since it's been only a few months, even if they're "coping," they are still grieving. A brief note, "Thinking of you with love," would say it all.

Dear Abby: Perhaps I can enlighten you as to the reason that 27-year-old man informed his mother that he and his girlfriend of two years were getting married, but he did not want her present at the ceremony. He informed her that they wanted to be alone. The mother signed herself "Crushed."

If "Crushed" has been strongly opposed to couples living together without marriage, the son might have felt that it would be a kindness to his mother simply to pretend that they were getting married to help her accept the young woman with whom he planned to live.

That happened to me, so please don't print my name. — Learned Later

Shoulder Pads Were Designed With Fun-House Mirrors In Mind

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

It's not as if I don't already have enough lumps on my body to keep track of. Now I've got shoulder pads.

Why did I think that after a couple of seasons they'd go away? Every time I bought a blouse or a dress, the first thing I did was to rip out the shoulder pads. The minute I did that, I was punished. The shoulders dropped, making my chest look like I was backing out of a room. The sleeves covered my hands, and the hems dragged on the floor. I couldn't walk into a room where people didn't look at me and ask, "What happened?"

Shoulder pads were designed using the same principle as fun-house mirrors. Make the top of you look wide, and in contrast the bottom of you will look small. This is true, but I always feel as if I'm Scarlett O'Hara wearing the draperies with the rods still in them.

For some strange reason, I never threw the shoulder pads away. They were like those subscription cards that fall out of magazines. I save them and hate myself for not being able to throw them away. When my discarded pads spilled out of two drawers and threatened to take over my bedroom, I finally admitted to myself that they were here to stay.

Now I play a little game called the Shoulder Pad Chase. (Suitable for ages 15-79. One player at a time. Batteries not included.) You are standing around at a party making conversation when you feel your entire left shoulder slump forward. You cast your eyes downward to see a chest that gives new meaning to the phrase "peaks and valleys." You are a victim of a wandering shoulder pad. Your mission is to get it back on the shoulder where it belongs without attracting attention.

There are ways. There's the "Fake Cough," where you throw your head forward, at the same time jerking your left shoulder back, hoping the pad will balance on your shoulder once again.

There's the "Bumping Into the Wall Ploy," where you pass by the corner of a wall to reposition the pad. A riskier way is the "Shock Reaction," where you grab your throat in horror at what is being said, and in a movement that is faster than the speed of light, slip your hand inside your dress and hike the shoulder pad back to its original position. When I see someone staring at my bulges, I usually say lamely, "I retain water."

All of this is reminiscent of the old joke in which a woman used to store two nose tissues in her bra, and one night when she was fishing around and got caught, she said, "Funny, I had two of them when I came here."

Some people have it down to a science. As my husband watched a pro football game the other night, 22 men came out on the field in shoulder pads that would have thrown Donna Karan into shock. The pads never moved! I think they were implants.

Therapist Helps Pet Owners Calm Their Neurotic Canines

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TETERBORO, N.J. — It's Wednesday night, and Perry Frantzman is conducting his weekly therapy sessions for more than 50 patients with behavioral problems.

But the patients aren't hyperactive toddlers or manic-depressives. They're dogs. And for 18 years, Frantzman has helped cure them.

"I had a dog that was giving me terrible problems, and I was seeking help," Frantzman says of a pet who chewed nearly everything in sight. He took him to obedience school near his home in Colorado, and it was there that Frantzman discovered his interest in animal therapy.

"I really enjoyed working with him," he says. "I went through the training and ... I became hooked."

So Frantzman, now 43, sold his two restaurants, went into full-time training, earned a doctorate with concentration in animal behavior and moved to New Jersey, where at home in Kinnelon he has three dogs and a cat.

His association with the Bergen County Animal Shelter began four years ago after a worker approached him with the idea of developing a "behavior modification" program at the shelter. Frantzman says the worker told him that many of the adopted animals were returned to the shelter because the owners didn't know how to cope with their mischievous behavior.

Most of the animals returned to the shelter were put to death, Frantzman says.

So Frantzman instituted a program which he says "is designed to be very intense and produce results fairly quickly ... because these people are at the end of their ropes."

The doctor believes dogs are like people and structures his therapy around that philosophy.

"My job is to modify the behavior of the dog and the behavior of the family so they can live together," he says. "That's where I feel good about what I'm doing.

Classes are arranged into four categories — housebreaking, chewing and destruction, obedience for dogs with "minor problems," and a problem class.

Frantzman says the problem class ranges "from anything that has to do with aggression and neurotic behavior to anything that is just way out of control."

He encourages families to take part in the therapy so they can understand how they may be contributing to the dog's problems.

"It's behavioral modification training for people who are at their last resort," he says.

Frantzman has four sessions every Wednesday night. Patients are evaluated before being accepted to see if they are "workable" and to identify their problems so they can be placed in the appropriate class. Frantzman works with his canine patients individually and in groups to demonstrate to the owners ways to deal with the problems.

He recalled one case of a jealous poodle who refused to let its owner's new husband into the bedroom. But after counseling both the poodle and the husband, he says, the family was able to "live happily ever after."

Pennsylvania Company Still Bullish On Christmas Club Plan It Founded

By Rich Harry
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

ALLENTOWN, Pa. — From Vermont comes the paper. But Forks Township is where the coupon booklets are marketed, designed and assembled by the company that first brought you Christmas Club — the popular holiday-savings program sponsored by banks and other financial institutions throughout the nation.

Now 78 years old, Christmas Club, a corporation, still holds a majority share of the market it pioneered, says company President John H. Guinan. And he expects to see healthy growth through continued diversification.

"How many coupon books do we make each year? Millions," Guinan says in a near shout while walking amidst the clacking printing presses in Christmas Club's sprawling plant. "We make coupon books for 5,000 banks across the country."

The Christmas Club concept was born about the turn of the century when a Carlisle, Pa., bank organized a holiday savings program for young Indians attending school, says Guinan.

Herbert Rawl, an English businessman, admired the idea of having the youths set aside a few cents each week for holiday gift-giving and asked the bank for permission to sell the idea to other banks. The bank said OK, and off went Rawl to other parts of the country in search of customers.

The concept caught on in a way that allowed Rawl to build Christmas Club into a successful business, starting in 1910. Last year, about 15 million Americans each saved $400, on the average, in various Christmas clubs, according to Guinan. Sales and profit figures for the Christmas Club corporation are not released. Christmas Club moved to its plant in Forks Township, which is about 50 miles northwest of Philadelphia, in 1972 when it consolidated its printing and business operations, the latter previously based in New York City.

Today, Christmas Club products are made almost entirely by the 160 workers at the 86,000-square-foot Forks Township facility, with only commissioned artwork and the conversion of en- velopes being handled by other companies.

Computers and automated equipment are used to make the Christmas Club booklets. Only packaging is done entirely by hand.

The company consults with individual banks on cover artwork — Santa Clauses, a snowman named "Bo," Christmas trees dotted with hearts, and a winter scene by Currier and Ives are popular covers — and a company worker adds the boxes, borders, fonts, point sizes and other booklet graphics by computer.

The assembly of one booklet takes a day. Guinan estimates that the company cranks out 1.5 million booklets in a month.

Although marketing the Christmas Club is done year-round — the club accounts for 60 percent of total sales for the company — production of the booklets and related merchandise peaks in the fall and slacks off in the spring, Guinan says. When the company is not going full steam on its Christmas Club booklets, it stays busy in other areas.

For example, the company prints bill-payment booklets for cable television companies and tax-collection booklets for state governments. It also prints payment booklets for those who owe child support.

"And that," Guinan says, " is about as far away from a Christmas Club as you can get."

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices moved lower in early trading today, after moving higher over the past three sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, up nearly 40 points over the past three sessions, was down 7.29 at 2,107.22 after 30 minutes of trading.

Declining issues outpaced gainers by a margin of 2 to 1 among issues listed on the New York Stock Exchange, with 258 up, 552 down and 466 unchanged.

Big Board volume amounted to 18.33 million shares at 10 a.m. on Wall Street, compared with 16.99 million shares at the same point in Wednesday's session.

In a new report today, the government said its chief forecasting gauge of future economic activity edged up a sluggish 0.1 percent in October after falling by a revised 0.3 percent in Sepotember.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co. was among the most active issues in the early going on the NYSE. It was unchanged at 29⅞ after saying it will take a $6.7 billion charge against its fourth-quarter earnings to cover expenses related to getting rid of outdated telephone equipment.

RJR Nabisco was off ¾ at 92¼. The company said it had accepted a buyout offer of $109 a share in cash and securities from buyout specialist Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co., spurning a competing offer from a management group.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed stocks was off 0.30 at 153.60. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 0.20 at 294.16.

On Wednesday, the Dow Jones industrial average rose 12.98 to 2,114.51.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by a better than 2-to-1 margin in nationwide trading of NYSE-listed stocks, with 995 issues up, 470 down and 502 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the NYSE came to 157.81 million shares, up from 127.42 million in the previous session.

Launch Postponed

ceptable weather at the runway across the Atlantic where the shuttle might have to land if one or two engines failed early into the flight.

Favorable weather is especially critical in case Atlantis develops trouble immediately after liftoff and has to make an emergency landing on a runway near the launch pad. Safety considerations call for clouds no lower than 8,000 feet above the runway, seven miles visibility and surface winds less than 14 mph.

Rain on liftoff or landing could damage the ship's thermal protection tiles, and high winds aloft could damage the craft structurally, especially its wings.

The go-ahead for fueling came after NASA reported that repairmen using glue had succeeded in fastening a loose panel back onto Atlantis' nose.

Atlantis' flight is the second by a shuttle since missions resumed after the 1986 Challenger accident. It is the third mission for Atlantis, the newest ship in the shuttle fleet. There have been two previous secret Air Force flights — both in 1985.

Though neither NASA nor the Air Force will discuss the cargo, sources said the shuttle was to launch a $500 million spy satellite called Lacrosse. The sources said the satellite carries a powerful new radar that is able to penetrate clouds and gather images of military targets in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union. Lacrosse is expected to act as the radar "eye in the sky" for the new B-2 stealth bomber.

The quick-fix repair job Wednesday was in response to a problem with bolts on a cover of a service panel in the orbiter's nose. The panel is used to fill the fuel tanks of the shuttle's forward steering rockets.

When the launch pad crew attempted to replace the cover to the panel, two of 10 bolts failed. The workers then used glue, heated by lamps, to secure the edges of the 1½-by-2-foot panel cover.

As with the previous military flights, Pentagon officials said the prelaunch secrecy was necessary to foil surveillance efforts by Soviet satellites and by spy ships off the Florida coast.

The flight is expected to last three or four days with a landing at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

Soviets

The package was being changed almost up until the final vote to incorporate objections from lawmakers and the public.

Many of those who objected to various drafts said it gave too much power to one person. The most vociferous and widespread complaints came from independent-minded republics, including Estonia, which claimed the reforms would prevent them from governing their own affairs.

The final version of the package was not immediately published in the official media, so it wasn't known how many concessions were made before the vote.

Gorbachev has acknowledged the original version was flawed. After the vote, he gave a short speech praising the debate during the three-day special parliamentary session and the work of the deputies who helped make alterations.

Until recently, the national legislature merely approved actions already taken by the leadership, without debate or dissent.

This time, the Supreme Soviet heard 37 of its members criticize and propose changes in the plan submitted by Gorbachev.

The 1,500-member body recommended dozens of changes over two days of debate. On Wednesday, it asked the Presidium — the nation's highest executive body — and two committees to decide which suggestions to include in the final version.

The official Tass news agency said the committees met Wednesday night, but it did not report details.

RJR Bidding Ends

businesses in one of the biggest consumer product companies might be sold to help the investment firm pay for the acquisition.

It gave no indication what, if any, of RJR's worldwide operations might be for sale. But there was speculation that possible candidates included some or even all of RJR's food segments, which would return the company to the tobacco business roots that still account for about 40 percent of its sales.

Atlanta-based RJR is one of the largest consumer products companies, with more than 120,000 employees worldwide. It makes well-known brands that range from Camel cigarettes to Shredded Wheat cereal to Life Savers candy.

The size and complexity of the RJR deal has raised major questions about the frenzied level of leveraged buyouts and other debt-financed restructurings that are transforming much of corporate America and whether it has gone too far.

Philip Morris Cos. Inc. recently agreed to acquire Kraft Inc. for $12.6 billion. Still pending are multibillion-dollar battles over Pillsbury Co., Holly Farms Corp., the nation's third-largest poultry processor; and textile maker West Point-Pepperell Inc.

The RJR deal also signaled a spectacular defeat by its chief executive F. Ross Johnson, whose management group began the takeover struggle Oct. 20 with a $75 a share offer that was later raised five times.

His tenure at the company remained uncertain. However, the Atlanta Constitution reported today that Kohlberg would install RJR's former chairman and chief executive officer, J. Paul Sticht, in the top post for a few months to smooth the transition. The newspaper said Kohlberg would move the company's corporate headquarters back to Winston-Salem, N.C.

No. One Duke Bedevils East Carolina By 95-46

Both Coaches Say Both Teams Are Improved

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

DURHAM — Both Duke University's Mike Krzyzewski and East Carolina's Mike Steele agreed on a couple of points following Wednesday's night's 95-46 romp by the number one Blue Devils over the Pirates.

The first is that the Pirates are a much improved team over last year's version which lost to the Blue Devils, 94-45. The second is that the Blue Devils are just a bit improved themselves.

"East Carolina has more talent this year. They have some depth, which they didn't have last year," Krzyzewski said. "So they must be improved."

"We're much better than last year," Steele said. "I thought we started off playing good defense, but we miss a couple of layups and I look around and we're 16-17 points down."

And it got no better.

One of the big reasons was the play of 6-10 junior Alaa Abdelnaby, who is on a scoring tear. Abdelnaby connected on all nine of his shots from the floor Wednesday night to bring his consecutive streak to 19. He made his final two shots against Kentucky, then connected on all eight of his shots against The Citadel last Saturday night. The NCAA record is 25 in a row, held by American University's Ray Voelkel and set in a nine-game streak in 1978.

"Alaa is taking his time and taking what is given him and getting the high percentage shots," Krzyzewski said. "But you have to credit the people who are passing the ball to him. He also got a lot of offensive rebounds and that translates into easy baskets" Abdelnaby pulled four offensive rebounds in the game and scored on all four of them.

In only 14 minutes of play, he scored 18 points and had seven rebounds.

Danny Ferry, Duke's All-American and a candidate for National Player of the Year, was held to just three points in the first half, getting into foul trouble against the Pirates. He came back to score 11 in the game.

"Overall, I was pleased with the job we did, especially in the second half," Krzyzewski said. "I thought Quinn (Snyder) was excellent and John Smith did a good job off the bench." Snyder had 10 assists in the game while Smith equaled Abdelnaby's seven rebounds and scored 16 points on nine of nine shots from the floor. "And I thought Robert (Brinkey) did a good job on (Blue) Edwards." Edwards finished with 10 points on just three of 15 shots from the floor.

"We had a lot of teamwork in the second half. We pulled our pressure back to half court, but we still maintained our intensity."

That, too, found Steele in agreement. "What I like (about Duke) is their unselfishness. They look like they're just as excited at passing the ball as they are to shoot. If kids play like that, they have a chance to win a championship." Duke had 29 assists in the game while ECU had 13.

"(Abdelnaby) has improved so much," Steele continued. "He's the difference this year for them. He takes up a lot of room out there."

Phil Henderson sort of foretold the game when he opened the scoring with a three-point basket, one of nine the Blue Devils would connect on in the game. From that opening basket, Duke steadily pulled away in such fashion that East Carolina never, not once in the game, managed to put together two baskets.

Just past the half-way mark in the first half, Duke pushed its lead over 10, 27-16, with 9:08 showing on the second of three straight Abdelnaby baskets. He was to hit seven of his nine baskets in the first half, as Duke ballooned its lead to 49-25 at intermission.

Krzyzewski picked up a technical foul in the first half when he complained after a foul was called on ECU's Kevin Staples for throwing an elbow. Afterwards, the Duke coach complained about ECU's use of elbows. "I expected the game to be tough (physical), and everything is fine except for elbows."

Later, asked if he was displeased with anything in the game, Krzyzewski said, "Elbows." No, on your team: "We don't throw elbows."

Steele said that ECU didn't intentionally throw elbows in the game. "We teach our kids to square up with the ball," he said. "I hope he didn't think we did it on purpose (elbowed the Duke player). But you have to protect the ball when you go up against a defense like Duke. You have to get people off you or you would never get a outlet pass off."

Things improved none for the Pirates in the second half. Gus Hill a 3-pointer to open play, but Duke followed with two two-pointers by Abdelnaby, then got three 3-pointers, one each by Henderson, Smith and Ferry to run the lead out to 34 points, 62-28.

For the Pirates, it was all downhill from there.

Duke ended up with five players in double figures, led by Abdelnaby and Smith. Henderson and Brickey each had 12 and Ferry, 11.

Lady Blue Devils Romp By East Carolina Women, 93-60

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

DURHAM — East Carolina's Lady Pirates scored on a Sarah Gray basket 30 seconds into the second half to cut Duke University's lead to just three points.

But then, seemingly satisfied, East Carolina ran away and hid while the Lady Blue Devils coasted to an easy 93-60 victory the rest of the way.

Gray's basket cut Duke's lead to just 34-31 with 19:28 left in the game, but Duke connected on the next nine points and never looked back again.

"In the second half, our defense was non-existant," an angry ECU coach Pat Pierson said afterward. "Then, our offense followed it. We weren't shooting the ball well and we didn't make up for it on the defensive end of the court."

East Carolina, which had rallied from 14 points down to within three twice, shot only 24.4 percent from the floor in the second half, while Duke blistered the nets with a 62.5 percentage. That gave Duke 10 more field goals — 20 more points — than the Lady Pirates. Rebounding was nearly equal, Duke holding a 46-45 edge, as were turnovers, ECU committing 14 and Duke 12.

Duke also enjoyed an advantage at the foul line, hitting on 23 of 30 as compared to eight of 13 for the Lady Pirates.

"We told them all night long to not let (Sue Harnett) get the ball inside, but we were horrible on defense," Pierson said. As a result, Harnett scored a game-high 23 points to lead the Blue Devils.

"We just are not getting much leadership out there," Pierson continued. "I know Duke is a good team, and they shot extremely well, but there's just no sense to the way we played. We were intimidated but I don't know why. We just shot the ball and looked at it."

East Carolina held the early lead in the game, but never by more than two. Duke finally broke it on a three-point play by Harnett with 15:31 showing, giving the Lady Devils a 9-6 lead. Ellen Langhi followed with a basket off the fast break for an 11-6 margin.

Duke steadily pulled away over the next few minutes, building its lead to 26-12 with 9:18 left to go in the half.

But Gray, who had been held scoreless until that point, suddenly came to life and scored five straight baskets over the next three minutes, cutting the Duke lead to 28-22.

Duke built it back out to 10, 32-22, but a 3-pointer by Mechelle Jones, another jumper by Gray and a basket from underneath by Gretta Savage trimmed it back to 32-29 be-

Lady Pirates Host Tourney

East Carolina's women will play host to the annual Lady Pirate Classic basketball tournament Friday and Saturday in Minges Coliseum.

East Carolina will face UNC Charlotte Friday at 8 p.m. in the second game of the opening round. Virginia Commonwealth will take on Niagara in the opening game of the evening.

The consolation game will be played Saturday at 1:30 p.m. with the championship Saturday at 3:30 p.m.

East Carolina comes into the tournament with a 1-2 record, having finished third in the Appalachian State Tournament last weekend, and suffering a 93-60 loss to strong Duke University on Wednesday night.

The Lady 'Niners bring in a 2-0 record, having won the Southern Invitational in Atlanta last weekend. UNCC defeated Florida Atlantic, 81-56, and then beat Georgia State 74-61 in the championship game. Tolonda Rose, a 6-0 sophomore forward for UNCC was named the tournament's most valuable player while 6-1 senior center Barbara Reedus was named to the all-tournament team.

Reedus is the leading scorer for the Lady 'Niners with a 22.0 average while Rose is hitting 15.5 and 5-10 guard Micah Bingeman has a 14.0 average. Rose is the leading rebounder with a 10.5 average.

Niagara is 0-2 coming into the tournament, having lost to Connecticut, 88-62, and Central Connecticut State, 73-63.

Virginia Commonwealth is 2-1, having beaten Liberty, 88-65, and William & Mary, 79-60, prior to a 70-48 loss to Richmond Wednesday night.

Kelly Hoover, a 5-9 forward, is the leading scorer with an 18.5 average, while Lisa Stiepler, a 5-9 guard, is hitting 11.5 per game.

Sarah Gray leads the Pirate scoring with a 20.5 average while Pam Williams is at 11.0. Gray is also the leading rebounder with a 10.5 average.

The meeting with UNCC will be the eighth between the two teams, with the Lady 'Niners leading, 4-3. ECU has never played VCU or Niagara before.

Baker Back 'Home' For New Job

Will Serve As Associate Athletic Director at U. Of South Carolina

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

After more than 30 years of coaching college football, Art Baker said maybe it's time for a change.

Baker, a former ECU coach who resigned after the 1988 season, was named associate athletic director for development and marketing and executive director of the Gamecock Club at the University of South Carolina, school officials announced Wednesday.

"There were a few jobs offered in coaching at small schools but I was not quite ready to go back and start at that level," Baker said Wednesday in an interview at Pitt County Memorial Hospital where he was recovering from gall bladder surgery. "After 34 years, 14 as a head coach in college, it might be time to consider putting my efforts to something else. It was just too good a job to turn down, even though there are a lot of problems that face the athletic administration at South Carolina."

USC athletic director King Dixon said Baker, 59, will begin his duties at USC Dec. 15.

Baker is a native of Sumter, S.C. and spent the early part of his career coaching in the high school ranks at McColl, Newberry and Eu Claire High Schools in South Carolina.

He was an assistant at Clemson and Texas Tech before beginning his head coaching career at Furman in 1973. After that, he moved on to the Citadel in 1978 where he coached until 1982.

After one year as an assistant at ECU in 1983, Baker went to Florida State for one year before taking the head coaching job at ECU in 1985. His four-year mark was 12-32 with his best season coming in 1987 when the Pirates finished 5-6.

There had been speculation about the move to USC for the last few weeks.

"Somebody told me today it was the worst kept secret in the two Carolinas this year," Baker said. "That's probably true.

"We had an open date and King Dixon had just been named AD (athletic director) and I had written a little note congratulating him. He and I had known each other. He was a high school player in Laurens (S.C.) when I was a college player at Clinton (S.C. at Presbyterian College) which is about six miles away.

"He called while we were at Temple (Nov. 5) and left word for me to call him back. I called him on Monday and we talked about the job a little bit. He found out I was coming to South Carolina the next week and I told him I was planning to come to the game (against Navy, Nov. 12).

"We sat in his box and the next morning and he and his wife had breakfast with my wife and I. We talked about the possibilities of a job there. He had so many things on him (to do) and I still had another ball game. So we didn't really talk much (specifically)."

Baker met with the president and vice president of the Gamecock Club Nov. 21 and later that week ironed out the details of the position with Dixon.

"It was sort of get-acquainted meeting," he said. "(I) listened to some of their problems that they felt they had and some of their strong points. On Wednesday of last week, King and I sat down and made our final plans. That's when I asked him let me think about the job a few days, but that's basically what happened."

With children in Charleston and Columbia, the move will put Baker closer to his family.

It will also be another challenge. He helped build the programs at both Furman, the Citadel and to a certain extent at ECU.

"I enjoy jobs with challenges and this will be another big challenge and I'm really looking forward to working with King Dixon," Baker said. "He's a good friend and a straight shooter. I'm really looking forward to helping South Carolina reach the potential it has which I think can be a top-10 team every year."

Oral Roberts Gets Help In Upset Of LSU

By Barry Milner
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It was the kind of call you just don't get on the road, the kind an Oral Roberts doesn't get at Louisiana State.

Oral Roberts got it, however, and a 100-96 victory with it Wednesday night, the Titans' first road win since the 1986-87 season.

All LSU coach Dale Brown got was a pair of technical fouls and plenty of frustration.

Greg Sutton was fouled by Chris Jackson as he shot from 15-feet at the buzzer in a tie game. The shot bounced off the rim, but Sutton went to the line and won it by making two free throws. He then hit two of four assessed in a double technical foul against Brown, who carried his protest onto the court between Sutton's free throws.

"At best, in my opinion, it was a no-call," Brown said. "But they (the officials) didn't lose the game for us. We lost it."

"It was a foul," ORU coach Ken Trickey said. "He (Jackson) really hacked him.

"I didn't like it to end that way. I would have preferred that Greg shoot the two and it end 98-96."

Still, it was a road win, and that's all Trickey could ask for. Oral Roberts was 8-21 last season, 0-13 as the visiting team.

In games involving ranked teams, No. 13 Louisville lost to Vanderbilt 65-62 when Barry Goheen made a 45-foot shot at the buzzer, No. 1 Duke routed East Carolina 95-46, No. 11 Arizona stopped New Mexico 80-67 for Coach Lute Olson's 300th career victory, No. 18 Villanova beat St. Francis, Pa., 70-60 and No. 19 Florida edged Siena 71-67.

Trickey, ORU's coach from 1969 until 1974, came back this year and said the team needs confidence.

"I tell my kids we've got to win and lose with class," he said. "We've got to start expecting to beat teams like LSU on the road if we're going to bring this program back.

"This is a great win for us. It's a game we can look back on a year or two from now when our program is back where we want it to be."

Sutton finished with 32 points and Haywoode Workman had 27 for ORU. Ricky Blanton scored 27 points for LSU, and Jackson had 25.

Vanderbilt 65, No. 13 Louisville 62

With the score 62-62 and three seconds remaining, Goheen took the in-bounds pass, quickly dribbled past midcourt and launched the game-winner just ahead of the final horn. The shot scraped the right side of the rim and gently settled in the basket, dropping Louisville to 0-2. The visiting Cardinals blew a nine-point lead.

"It wasn't anything fancy. I just took a dribble or two, threw it up and hoped," Goheen said. "I think a lesser team would have packed it in, but we gave ourselves a chance to win."

Barry Booker topped Vandy with 20 points. Pervis Ellison led the Cardinals with 20 points, 18 in the first half.

No. 11 Arizona 80, New Mexico 67

At Tucson, Harvey Mason scored 20 points, 12 on 3-point shots, as Arizona avenged one of its three losses last season. Arizona was 35-3 last year and went to the Final Four, but the Wildcats lost at Albuquerque.

The Wildcats took the lead for good 49-47 with 16:21 remaining when Mason hit a 3-pointer. Arizona forced eight New Mexico turnovers in the first 13:34 of the second half during a 30-13 run. Mason and Anthony Cook scored eight points each and Sean Elliott added five during the burst.

"I wasn't concentrating on scoring, but they were giving me the open shot, so I had to take it," Mason said.

New Mexico was led by Charlie Thomas with 19 points.

No. 18 Villanova 70, St. Francis, Pa. 60

Villanova's outstanding backcourt of Doug West and Kenny Wilson was too much for host St. Francis. West scored 21 points and Wilson led a second-half surge with seven points in a 15-0 run. That turned a 41-40 Villanova deficit into a 55-41 lead with just over seven minutes left.

Joe Anderson scored 23 points for the Red Flash.

Villanova is 17-2 against St. Francis. The Red Flash's last victory over the Wildcats was in the 1957-58 season.

No. 19 Florida 71, Siena 67

At Gainesville, Fla., Dwayne Davis scored eight of his 20 points during an 18-1 second-half run as Florida, down by 16 points early, rallied. Siena, an 80-79 upset winner over Pittsburgh on Monday, used hot 3-point shooting to build a 27-11 lead midway through the first half.

Siena led 42-33 at the half. Florida hit only 37 percent of its shots and missed 18 of 30 free throws in the opening 20 minutes.

UNRANKED

At New York, Jayson Williams had 23 points to lead four double-figure scorers as St. John's, 3-0, spoiled Fairleigh Dickinson's opener 86-55. Melik Sealy added 17 points and 10 rebounds for the Redmen.

At Pittsburgh, Bobby Martin scored 22 points and grabbed 11 rebounds as Pitt beat Robert Morris 75-62. Pitt never trailed and outrebounded Robert Morris 46-27.

Arkansas-Little Rock stunned Houston 100-67, riding Johnnie Bell's 28 points and James Scott's 21. Houston, the preseason favorite in the Southwest Conference, fell to 1-1 in the first meeting of the teams. It was the first opening win for the Trojans in Coach Mike Newell's five seasons.

At Manhattan, Kan., Fred McCoy had 23 points and Steve Henson scored 17 as Kansas State downed Utah State 86-67.

Also, Connecticut broke from a 27-22 halftime lead to romp past Yale 75-44, getting 14 points from Cliff Robinson and 12 from John Gwynn in the second half. Gerald Glass scored 23 points and pulled down eight rebounds to lead Mississippi to a 97-81 decision over Northwestern Louisiana.

Pat Durham's 27 points brought Colorado State back from a 14-point hole to a 73-72 victory over Colorado.

Tim Hardaway scored 17 points and Texas-El Paso held New Mexico State to just 25 percent shooting from the floor in a 59-51 win.

Robyn Davis had 22 of his 24 points in the second half to lead Wyoming to a 77-74 comeback victory over Texas Southern.

North Pitt Seeks Success With Veteran Nucleus Back

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Playing experience is a valuable commodity in basketball and that makes North Pitt the power broker among area girls' high school hoop teams.

The Pant-Hers, 18-8 a year ago, returns Eastern Plains Conference player of the year Keisha Pilgreen along with three other starters and figure to be strong again this season.

North Pitt's main competition this year should come from Eastern Plains Conference foe Farmville Central.

Rose coach Bill Kuykendall has coached the Rampettes to three straight Big East Conference regular season championships, but he faces a rebuilding task this season with only one starter returning.

At D.H. Conley, first-year coach Keith Gould returns three key starters, but he must get some development out of his guards for the Valkyries to improve.

Ayden-Grifton gets off to a late start as coach B.T. Chappell was busy with football up until last week. He returns only one starter off last year's team.

Trinity and Greenville Christian both have some key players back and figure to challenge in their respective conferences.

Possibly the best player in the county, Pilgreen (5-9, Sr.) averaged 18 points and 10 rebounds a game last season.

Amy Heath (5-10, Sr.) keys the inside game for the Pant-Hers. She averaged 10 rebounds a game last year. She'll be joined underneath by Donna Leggett (5-9, Sr.) and Louise Powell (5-10, Sr.). Yvette Fraley (5-6 Sr.) will play alongside Pilgreen at the point.

Freshman Rochelle Powell (5-8) lends depth off the bench. Gwen Pilgreen, a 5-9 forward, will not play this reason for unspecified reasons, according to head coach Ray Moltz.

"A strength that we have is experience," Moltz said. "Every year, they've won the conference tournament. They know what they have to do. Our depth is better. This year we have 14 players.

"Last year, I thought our success was due to our team play. We try to move the ball around and have everybody contribute."

Farmville, with three starters returning, hopes to improve on last year's 13-13 record.

Vicki Best (5-5, Jr.) returns at point guard while center Brenda Reid (6-0, Jr.) and forward Wanda Bullock (5-6, Sr.) lead the frontcourt.

Felicia Barrett (5-0, Jr.) should join Best in the backcourt while Lucretia Dixon (5-10, So.) will man the other forward spot.

Monica Brown (5-10, F, Jr.) will lend depth up front.

"We just have to get a smooth game worked out," said Lady Jaguar coach Hilda Worthington. "We have to play as a team. Vicki and Wanda and Brenda are going to have to come across."

Rose, 20-4 a year ago, returns only Tina Smith (5-7, Sr.) at forward, where she averaged 9.3 points a game last year and 10 rebounds per game.

Angie Mills (5-5, Jr.) will play guard along with Sharon Kuykendall (5-5, Sr.). The center for the Rampettes will be either Lori Shankweiler (5-11, Sr.) or Elke Moore (6-1, Jr.). They will probably share time early on.

Jenny Stoneham (5-8, Jr.) will play opposite Smith at forward.

Smith had 14 rebounds in Rose's season-opening 47-45 win against Fayetteville Terry Sanford Tuesday.

"We don't have very much experience or very many seniors," Kuykendall said. "We are a very young team. We're not very big. It's going to be very difficult. We're going to have to rely on speed and defense to carry us through the season.

"We're trying to force a lot of turnovers and run against most teams. We'll have to develop some outside shots because teams will pack it in against us."

Conley returns the bulk of last year's team, led by forwards Charlene Davenport (5-8, Sr.) and Glenda Hardy (5-7, Jr.). Sophomore Lendora Tyson (5-10) also returns at center.

At the guards, Nikki Adams (5-4, So.) was a part-time starter a year ago and figures to pair with Stacy Gardner (5-5, So.) and Jenny Bradburn (5-4, So.) in the backcourt.

Hardy averaged 13 points a game last year to lead the team, which finished 7-16.

"If we get good guard play we'll be a good team," said first-year coach Keith Gould. "We're very strong inside with Lendora. The key is if we can get the ball inside. We're going to have trouble with people pressing us. Glenda is probably our best ball player. I'm looking for big things out of Glenda."

Gould said he hoped to battle for third or fourth place in the Coastal 3-A Conference behind Washington, Havelock and West Carteret.

GCA, 22-2 overall and first in the conference, returns one starter in Joanie Cherry (5-8, Sr. F), who averaged 15 points a game.

She will be joined by center Gina Sizemore (5-8, Sr.) and forward Kathy Davenport (5-6, Jr.). Sherry Heffren (5-7, So.) also figures to see time at the other forward spot.

Jennifer Boseman (5-6, Sr.) will man one guard spot while Stephanie Parker (5-4, So.) figures to hold down the other spot.

"Our big girls are real good," GCA coach Dale Thatcher said. "I feel good about our girls inside. It's just a matter of can we get the ball to them. That will come down to our guard play. We're starting with a completely new backcourt."

Trinity returns four starters in guard Becky Stocks (5-4, Sr.), forward Natalie Godwin (5-2, Sr.), forward Rhonda Harris (5-4, Jr.) and center Myra Gillin (5-4, Jr.).

Christy Briley (5-2, So.) figures to man the other guard spot. Top reserves should be Laurie Vernelson (5-4, So., G) and Bobbie Jo Everette (5-6, Fr, F).

"We've got about seven good ball players, but they are very impatient," said Trinity coach Bobby Harris. "If we can play good defense and contain ourselves and be patient we can be a very good ball club."

Ayden-Grifton, 4-20 a year ago, returns only one starter in Iris Brown (5-9 Sr.).

Debbie Williams (5-9, Jr.) saw a lot of time last season along with Tammy Brown (5-4, Sr.). Mary Simmons (5-5, Sr.) also played some guard last year. Cherise Wallace (5-4, So.) also get a look in the backcourt.

Denise Allen (5-2, Fr.) figures to earn some playing time along with forwards Regina Jones (5-2, Fr.) and Meghan Craft (5-6, Fr.).

"One of the biggest keys would be trying to get somebody out there who is a good offensive player," Chappell said. "In order for this team to win we're going to have to play good defense and keep the other team down. Iris and Debbie can do fairly well under the basket."

Pam Packs' Defense Shuts Down Tigers

WASHINGTON — Washington High School outscored Williamston 24-6 in the second half to roll to a 51-34 high school basketball win Wednesday night.

Washington was led by 17 points from Nico Hines and 13 from Walter Rasdy.

The win lifted the Pam Pack to 1-1 for the season. Their next action will come Friday when they host Plymouth. The loss dropped the Tigers to 2-1 for the year. Their next game is Tuesday at North Pitt.

In the girl's game, Sonya Reddick scored 10 points to lead Washington to a 41-31 victory. Kim Hawkins poured in 12 points to lead the Lady Tigers in scoring.

Five Asked To Heisman

NEW YORK (AP) — The Downtown Athletic Club has invited five players to attend the announcement Saturday of its Heisman Trophy winner as the nation's top college football player. Two can't make it to the party, including the favorite, Barry Sanders of Oklahoma State.

Sanders already is in Tokyo, where he most likely will hear about the award only hours before his assault on the all-time NCAA career rushing record of Marcus Allen. The Cowboys play Texas Tech Sunday in Tokyo.

"I think he's got it won right now," Oklahoma State Coach Pat Jones said when the team arrived in Japan. "I think it's over with."

Also invited to the Downtown A.C., in lower Manhattan was Miami quarterback Steve Walsh, but the Hurricanes play Brigham Young on Saturday, and he will have to skip it.

The Heisman candidates who will attend are quarterbacks Rodney Peete of Southern Cal, Troy Aikman of UCLA and Major Harris of West Virginia, the Downtown A.C. said.

"We're working on getting some sort of hookup with Sanders from Tokyo if he wins," athletic club spokesman Bill Esposito said. Esposito said that CBS-TV, which will televise the Heisman announcement live, has prepared a hookup to Tokyo if Sanders is the winner, "but that'll only be for a few minutes."

ECU Football Awards Are Presented

Senior running back Tim James, senior defensive end Shannon Boling and freshman punter John James were named by East Carolina coaches as Players of the Year at the annual Pirate football banquet, held Wednesday night.

James, who led the Pirates in rushing with 787 yards, was named offensive player of the year by the coaches and players and was named the offensive captain. Boling, who made 44 tackles on the year, was the defensive player of the year in a vote by the coaches and players. He was also named the defensive captain.

Jett, who averaged 39.7 yards per punt, was named the special teams player of the year by the coaches. Senior defensive back Roswell Streeter was named the special teams captain. In a vote by the players, Matt McLaughlin (offense) and Jett (defense) were named special teams players of the year.

Jarrod Moody, a senior running back, was given the Janet Overton Memorial Award as the most outstanding senior, and the Swindell Memorial Award for his leadership, dedication and athletic achievement. Bill Carter, a senior tight end, received the Jerry T. Brooks Award for academic achievement.

Al Whiting (offense) and Chris Hall (defense) were honored as the outstanding newcomers of the year. Freshman defensive lineman Shane Hubble was named the most improved defensive player while senior offensive lineman Tim Orr received the most improved offensive player award.

Pitt Paladins Nip Methodist JVs

WINTERVILLE — Ricky Congleton scored with 44 seconds remaining Wednesday night to lift Pitt Community College to a 70-68 win over the Methodist College JV's.

Congleton, who scored 18 of his 22 points in the second half, led PCC in scoring, while Don Hudson added 17 in his best scoring game to date. Andre West came off the bench to chip in 12 points and haul down 13 rebounds.

In the second half, the Paladins fell behind 50-38 before rallying to take a 58-57 lad with 5:40 to play in the game. PCC then stretched the lead to 66-62 with two minutes left before Methodist tied the score at 66-66.

Cox Wrestlers Again Down Williamston

Cox won nine weight classes, taking six of them on pins. Recording pins were Torrence Smith, Kerry Stanley, Carter Chapman, Kenrick Ruffin, Terry Turnage and Neal Woolard.

Charlotte Among Final Four Contenders

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee announced Wednesday that six cities are being considered as sites for the 1994 and 1995 Final Four championships.

The cities being considered are Charlotte, N.C.; East Rutherford, N.J.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Landover, Md.; Louisville, Ky. and Seattle, Wash.

The committee said it would make its recommendations for the sites during its meeting July 2-6, 1989, to the NCAA Executive Committee, which oversees all NCAA championships.

Basketball Committee Chairman Cedric W. Dempsey, athletics director at the University of Arizona, said the committee will inspect each of the proposed sites except Seattle, which is hosting the 1989 Final Four, from Dec. 12-15.

In mid-January the committee will invite all or some of the six sites to make formal presentations at the committee's July meeting, which will be held in Grand Traverse, Mich.

Dempsey said no seating capacity arrangements have been established for either the 1994 or the 1995 Final Four.

York Gives Initial Stadium Approval

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP) — York County Council has initially approved a plan by sports entrepreneur George Shinn, owner of the Charlotte Knights minor league baseball team, to build a $12 million stadium along Interstate 77.

The council met in executive session Tuesday to review the 60-page agreement, giving it the first of three required approvals. Council members declined to reveal details of the contract.

"It looks very favorable but there's still some loose ends," said Councilman John Douglas. "We don't really have any stumbling blocks, but there are some changes we want made."

The proposed agreement calls for Shinn, of nearby Charlotte, N.C., to build a 10,000-seat baseball stadium complete with dressing rooms, team offices and possibly sky boxes. He will then give it to the county.

The county then would lease the stadium back to Shinn for up to 40 years. York County then would build roads and a water and sewer system — estimated to cost more than $5 million over five years — to serve the stadium and the surrounding land.

The agreement is loaded with protections absolving the county from liability, officials said. If Shinn fails to meet his duties, the county can give him 30 days to correct problems or terminate the agreement.

Shinn and landowner Doyle Jennings recently announced their plans to jointly develop Jennings's 320 acres along the east side of I-77 near Gold Hill Road.

Duper, Scott Suspended By NFL

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — The Miami Dolphins will be without wide receiver Mark Duper for the remainder of the season because he violated the NFL's substance abuse policy, but offensive guard Roy Foster says the rest of the team is clean.

"(Coach Don) Shula lets us know what's happening as far as the drug situation," Foster said. "I don't believe we associate ourselves with drugs of any sort. He weeds out those kinds of guys."

The NFL on Wednesday suspended Duper and Dallas Cowboys' defensive back Victor Scott for violating the league's substance abuse policy. The suspensions are for 30 days, which means both players will miss the rest of the season.

"It's one of the toughest things I've had to deal with," Shula said. "I hope everything gets straightened out, and Mark is able to resume his career with the Miami Dolphins next year."

Scott, 26, also was suspended for 30 days last year for substance abuse. He became the second Cowboy this season to be penalized under the NFL's drug policy; offensive tackle Kevin Gogan was suspended for a month near the end of training camp.

Duper, a seven-year veteran and two-time Pro Bowl performer, has done work with the "Say No To Drugs" program. Several teammates said they were shocked by the suspension.

"Dupe's locker is right next to mine, and I just didn't have any idea at all," safety Glenn Blackwood said. "I talk to him every day. There was no indication of pot or anything like that."

Foster said Duper is not the kind of person to use drugs.

"It just doesn't add up," Foster said. "I just don't want to believe that Duper's caught up in anything like that."

Duper told the Miami Herald, "I'm not saying anything. I'm not sure what is what. I'm disappointed in the situation as far as my family name."

He retained an attorney to review the matter and perhaps seek a temporary injunction in federal court that would permit Duper to play Sunday against the Indianapolis Colts.

"Mark states absolutely he does not do drugs," his agent, Dan Bakst, said today. Bakst said it's unclear why the NFL suspended Duper.

Duper had only four pass receptions for 44 yards in the past four games. He caught no passes Sunday against the New York Jets and finished the game on the sidelines because he was bothered by a sore left arch, Shula said.

The coach said he supports the league's drug policy.

"The most important thing the National Football League can do is to prove it's a drug-free game," he said.

The action against Duper and Scott brought to 24 the number of players suspended this season for violating the drug policy.

Duper and Scott won't be allowed any contact with their team during the suspension. They'll be placed on a non-football-related illness list retroactive to Tuesday, said Joe Browne, director of communications for the league.

Because only 2½ weeks remain in the regular season, the 30-day suspension period could be carried over to next season.

Scott was sidelined much of this year with a shoulder injury, but he did play last Thursday against Houston.

"We regret that we have that situation with Victor Scott," Cowboys president Tex Schramm said. "I don't think it'll have a major affect on the team. He was hurt all year anyway."

Scott's phone number is unpublished and he was unavailable for comment.

American Hoping To Strike It Rich

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Three Americans hope to strike gold in the annual Million Dollar Challenge.

Chip Beck, Ken Green and Don Pooley are among a field shooting for golf's richest payout — a $1-million first prize.

Beck was runner-up on the PGA Tour's money-winning list in the United States this year and won two tournaments. Green also won twice in the United States and recently won the Dunlop Phoenix event in Japan.

Also in the field are the three most recent winners of this tournament — defending champion Ian Woosnam of Wales, 1986 winner Mark McNulty of South Africa, and 1985 champion Bernhard Langer of West Germany.

The favorite is another South African, David Frost, who won two tournaments on the PGA Tour and ranks ninth on the PGA's money-winning list.

Last year, when Woosnam edged fellow Briton Nick Faldo, the tournament used a winner-take-all formula, with only a $50,000 bonus for the daily low round on offer for the losers.

This year, in addition to the huge first prize, there will be prizes for all other competitors, ranging from $200,000 for the runner-up to $50,000 for the last-place finisher. The total purse is $1.65 million.

The Million Dollar Challenge has been held annually since 1982, but last year marked the first time that the winner's check reached that total. Previously, a $1-million purse was divided among the entrants, with the first prize ranging from $300,000 to $500,000.

South Africa considers Bophuthatswana independent, but it is not recognized abroad. The winner's check awarded Sunday will equal the total yearly earnings of about 1,500 Bophuthatswanans, whose average annual income is less than $700.

Duke shot 60.3 percent for the game while holding the Pirates to just 32.1 percent. The Blue Devils also dominated the boards, snatching away 43 rebounds to just 21 for East Carolina. Duke forced 25 ECU turnovers, but committed 21 of their own.

The Blue Devils are now 3-0 on the year while ECU falls to 2-1. East Carolina returns to action on Saturday in Minges Coliseum in Greenville, hosting Campbell at 7:30 p.m.

Gray cut that back to three once more, but then the bottom fell out. Harnett made two straight and Langhi scored on a jumper. Leigh Morgan canned a 3-pointer to make it 43-31 and Duke was off for good.

Langhi and Morgan each added 17 points to Harnett's total, while Marcy Peterson had 16 and Tracey Christopher added 11.

East Carolina was led by Gray with 20, but no one else scored in double figures. Gray also led the ECU rebounding with eight.

Rumors Surround Matchup Between A&M And Alabama

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLLEGE STATION, Texas — Coach Bill Curry is expected to get the green light for another year at Alabama hours before the Crimson Tide meets Texas A&M in a nationally televised game tonight.

Interim president Roger Sayers was expected to announce today that Curry will be back next year, a source told The Associated Press.

"The Hurricane Bowl" has degenerated into "The Rumor Bowl" because of speculation about the future of the two head coaches.

The nationally game between the Sun Bowl-bound Crimson Tide, 7-3, and the Aggies, 8-4, is a makeup of a game that was to be played Sept. 17.

Hurricane Gilbert threatened the Texas coast and Curry elected to postpone the game, bringing jibes from the Aggies, including Coach Jackie Sherrill.

The Hurricane hit Mexico and the Aggies have had some fun with the decision to stay away.

T-shirts, hurricane tracking placemat charts, and even a song have been recorded about the game. The Confederate Air Force is broadcasting daily weather updates. There was a big "hurricane" party Wednesday night.

A&M is calling this a bowl game because NCAA probation sanctions include no post-season play for the Aggies.

Sherrill has been a source of gossip about whether he plans to resign after the game. He said he won't.

Former player George Smith said two weeks ago Sherrill paid him "hush" money to thwart an NCAA investigation, then recanted the statement.

Sherrill shortcircuited rumors he will resign after the game, saying "If I was planning to resign I wouldn't be working so hard."

Curry is 14-8 in his two years at Alabama. The Tide will play in the Sun Bowl against Army on Christmas Eve.

"Regardless of what's going on through the innuendo, rumor connection, either here or at Texas A&M, when the ball is kicked off, the important thing to us is the football game," Curry said.

Former Korean President Draws Spartan Life As Exile At Temple

By Peter Maass
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

SEOUL, South Korea — Compared to Ferdinand Marcos' plush exile in sunny Hawaii, South Korea's Chun Doo Hwan seems to come up short.

After apologizing to the nation for power abuses and surrendering millions of dollars he had amassed, the former president trudged off with his tearful wife to internal exile last week at an isolated Buddhist temple without indoor plumbing.

According to local press reports, Chun, 57, and his wife, who were perceived by many South Koreans to have lived like royalty while in power, now share a tiny room at the Paektam temple, waking up at 4 a.m. in subzero temperatures to pray with the monks and share their vegetarian meals.

The heating system at the 1,400-year-old mountain temple is below standard, so the monks put plastic liner around the windows of Chun's hut for insulation. The temple does not have a telephone or television, thus Chun could only listen to a radio broadcast of President Roh Tae Woo's plea last Saturday for the public to pardon the former leader.

One of the apparent concessions to Chun's special status is the presence of five fire extinguishers in his room — for use if protesters break through the security cordon around the temple and heave firebombs.

Traditional Korean-style exile is a humbling and often austere affair. The consignment of disgraced officials to political oblivion in the countryside is a centuries-old rite practiced by kings and despots throughout Korean history.

With sentiments against Chun rising in the last few weeks, and calls for his arrest growing louder, the former president continued the tradition last week, offering a televised apology to the nation for human-rights abuses and corruption during his eight-year military rule, which ended last February.

When Chun agreed to take up internal exile — giving up millions of dollars in investments, his luxury house in Seoul, a condominium at a ski resort and two golf-club memberships — he hoped that demands for his punishment would fade. But opposition parties have said they want investigations into his misdeeds to continue, and militant students and dissidents have demanded that Chun be arrested.

The middle class, which holds the decisive political influence to determine the ex-general's fate, appears undecided about whether Chun should be forgiven.

Some people have said they wonder whether Chun's dramatic exile at Paektam is a public-relations stunt aimed at drawing sympathy. Reports of his reclusive, sad soul-searching in the barren hills near the temple have struck many skeptics as disingenuous, given Chun's reputation as an aloof and stubborn ruler who rarely cracked a smile or showed emotion.

The temple, Chun's aides have indicated, is a temporary retreat from which he may leave soon, possibly for a more secure exile at a military base or military resort.

According to news reports, Chun spends most of his time praying and reading Buddhist texts. One of the monks was quoted as saying the Chuns are sleeping well in their cramped room — which has the size and conveniences of a $12-a-night hotel in South Korea — after suffering insomnia during the tense days in Seoul before the apology.

The newspapers say Chun was visited Saturday by his daughter, son-in-law and 2-year-old granddaughter. When the trio arrived at the entrance to the temple, Chun and his wife reportedly broke into tears. Ashamed of his fallen status, Chun reportedly forbade his youngest son, who is in the second grade, to visit the temple.

Australia Threatens To Close Consulate

By Richard Bill
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SYDNEY, Australia — Australia said today it will close the Yugoslav Consulate and expel its staff if authorities there don't turn over within 24 hours a security guard who shot a teen-age demonstrator.

The move capped a five-day diplomatic wrangle over the wounding of the youth on Sunday and Yugoslavia's refusal to apologize formally for the shooting at its consulate in Sydney.

Foreign Minister Gareth Evans said in a statement the government had sufficient evidence to prosecute the security guard who fired the gun.

Evans demanded that the guard, identified as Matijas Zoran, be handed over to police by 6 p.m. Friday or "the Australian government will immediately close the consulate-general."

About 200,000 Yugoslavs live in Australia.

About 1,500 people protested at the consulate on Sunday, Yugoslav National Day. Police said a security guard fired on hundreds of demonstrators when several Croatian youths began climbing the walls.

Jospeh Tokic, 16, was shot in the throat and was in stable condition at a Sydney hospital. Croatians are among several ethnic groups in Yugoslavia.

Yugoslav Ambassador Boris Cizelj allowed police to question the guard after consulting with his government in Belgrade. But he insisted the interview be conducted inside the consulate and in the presence of the consul-general.

He said Zoran would not leave the country until police complete their investigation.

Consul-General Stanojlo Glisic said the guard fired shots to protect his safety.

Bhutto Expected To Win Choice As Prime Minister

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — The selection of Benazir Bhutto as Pakistan's new prime minister and the first female head of state in a Moslem country appeared virtually certain Wednesday, after her main rival dropped out of contention.

Mian Nawaz Sharif, of the Islamic Democratic Alliance, chose to remain in the Punjab provincial assembly rather than take a seat in the National Assembly. This clears the way for Bhutto, leader of the People's Party, to be named Thursday night by President Ghulam Ishaq Khan to attempt to form a government.

In the country's first free elections in more than a decade, Bhutto's party, on Nov. 16, won 92 seats, the largest number but not an overall majority, in the 237-seat National Assembly.

Members of the new National Assembly were sworn in Wednesday, marking the return of democratic rule to this nation of 100 million people that has known mostly military-dominated government in its 40-year history.

After a simple ceremony for the taking of the oath, Bhutto, 35, became the first member of the new assembly to complete the process by signing her name in the registration ledger, as members of her party applauded.

Sharif had run for both the national and provincial assemblies, and his party stands a better chance of forming a government in Punjab than it does at the national level. Sharif, 38, has been acting chief minister in the Punjab government.

Members of Pakistan's four provincial assemblies also were sworn in Wednesday in their capitals. The ceremonies were generally low-key, following the pattern set in Islamabad, except for the Sind assembly, which meets in Karachi.

Dominated by the People's Party, the Sind assembly session turned into a memorial for the late Prime Minister Zulfiqar Ali Bhutto, Benazir Bhutto's father. Prayers were said in his memory and party slogans from his period as prime minister in the 1970s were chanted.

In Islamabad, the only excitement of the day came when the presiding officer noticed outgoing Justice Minister Waseem Sajjad sitting in the hall and asked him, as a member of the old government, to leave, saying, "In this assembly, you are a stranger." After a brief shouting match, Sajjad left in what was seen as a precursor to likely raucous scenes to come as Pakistan gets back to the free-wheeling debate that marks parliamentary sessions in many Third World countries.

Wednesday's ceremonies marked the beginning of a series of events that are expected to complete the restoration of freely elected government after more than a decade of military rule under the late Gen. Mohammed Zia ul-Haq. Legislators Wednesday also elected 16 women to seats reserved for them in the assembly.

After Thursday's announcement of the new prime minister, the person selected will be sworn in Friday and on Saturday the assembly will meet again to elect a speaker.

Assailant Flings Acid At Attorney

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — A Holocaust survivor threw acid today in the face of an Israeli defense attorney for Nazi war criminal John Demjanjuk during a funeral for another Demjanjuk lawyer who died in an apparent suicide, officials said.

The attack on attorney Yoram Sheftel injured one of his eyes, police and a hospital spokesman said. A woman standing nearby also was hurt, police said.

Police said they detained the assailant, a 70-year-old survivor of the Nazi Holocaust, immediately after the attack, which occurred at the Sanhedria Cemetery during the funeral for Demjanjuk lawyer Dov Eitan.

Sheftel was rushed to Bikur Holim Hospital, where doctors washed the eye. His eye had "slightly blurred vision and was shut," said hospital spokesman Yehuda Kingslinger.

The attorney was sent for further treatment to a special eye unit at Jerusalem's Hadassah Hospital, Kingslinger and officials at Hadassah said.

Rafi Levy, Jerusalem police spokesman, said the suspect "dumped acid" on Sheftel. He said some of the acid injured a woman nearby. Her condition was not known.

Eitan, a 53-year-old former judge, died Tuesday in a fall from a 15th floor hotel window in Jerusalem. Police said the death was a suicide.

The death has delayed Demjanjuk's appeal of a death sentence to Israel's Supreme Court for six months. The appeal had been scheduled to begin Dec. 5.

Demjanjuk, a 68-year-old retired autoworker from Cleveland, Ohio, was sentenced in April for committing crimes against humanity and the Jewish people as an operator of gas chambers at Treblinka Death Camp in Poland, where 850,000 Jews perished during World War II.

Israelis Deadlock In Coalition Effort

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The move by the five-member, ultra-Orthodox Agudat Israel Party gave Labor the support of 60 legislators in the 120-member Knesset — not enough to form a government but sufficient to block Likud, which has the backing of 58 parliamentarians.

The balance of power now is in the hands of the undecided Torah Flag party, which has two seats.

Party leader Rabbi Avraham Ravitz said he preferred a broad-based government that would include both Labor and Likud but didn't "rule out the possibility that Labor will form the government."

It was the latest turnaround in complicated coalition talks that have dragged on since the Nov. 1 election in which Likud, headed by Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, won 40 seats while Labor, led by Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, won 39 seats.

Shamir, who was asked by President Chaim Herzog to try to form a government, said on Israel radio he was still optimistic he could do it.

Earlier this week, Shamir appeared to have the firm support of 65 Parliament members, including those of the four religious and three right-wing parties.

But the religious parties started to bolt when Shamir asked Labor to join the government. The smaller parties feared Likud, to accomodate Labor, would break promises to them.

Political alignments were shaken again when Labor's Executive Bureau voted Wednesday night not to join a government headed by Likud. The vote was seen as a rebellion against the party leadership, which recommended negotiations with Likud.

Cyclone Leaves 500 Dead In Bangladesh

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DHAKA, Bangladesh — Strong winds and cloudy skies hampered helicopter search and rescue operations today in battered coastal regions and tiny sand bars where more than 500 people were reported dead after a cyclone.

The cyclone lashed the Bay of Bengal coast Tuesday night, churning up 15-foot-high waves that submerged low-lying islands and pounding the mainland with winds up to 102 mph.

Dhaka newspapers said at least 500 people died and more than 1,000 were missing in Bangladesh. In neighboring India, police sources said about 80 people were killed in West Bengal state.

Official figures in both countries were much lower, reflecting both bureaucratic delays and the nearly impossible task of obtaining fast and accurate information from areas where communications are poor even in good weather.

The human toll and the difficulty in accurately assessing it were augmented by the settlement of thousands of peasants and fishermen on newly emerging islands off the Bangladesh coast.

Hundreds of these islands, most of them narrow sand bars that are partially submerged each day even by normal tides, have been created by silt and sediment dumped into the Bay of Bengal from the rivers that originate in the Himalayas of India and Nepal.

In Dhaka, official sources said the death toll in Bangladesh was 350.

In Calcutta, capital of West Bengal state, a senior police officer insisted he had only five confirmed death reports for the entire state, even though other Indian officials said Wednesday night that 29 people were known to have perished in the storm.

The cyclone struck while Bangladesh was still trying to recover from last summer's floods that killed about 1,500 people and destroyed the homes of more than one-fifth of the population of 110 million.

Two Dhaka newspapers — the government-owned Bangladesh Times and the independent Ittefaq — said about 500 people died from electrocution, drowning, or when houses collapsed on them. The newspapers said a few thousand were injured.

Solidarity Supporters Cheer Walesa Debate

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WARSAW, Poland — Solidarity backers declared Lech Walesa the winner of an unprecedented TV debate in which he dueled with his official counterpart and urged the government to legalize the banned labor movement.

"This is a fantastic day, beautiful, which will be noted in the history of our country as a great victory for Solidarity," said film director Andrzej Wajda after Wednesday night's showdown between the Solidarity chairman and Alfred Miodowicz, head of the government's official trade unions.

"He was perfect, just perfect," a grinning Adam Michnik, a senior Solidarity adviser, said of Walesa.

It was the first time in five years that Walesa had a chance to defend his federation on state-controlled television and his longest appearance ever on Polish TV.

The exchange was broadcast live and uncensored. A clock was even placed in the background of the set to demonstrate that no deletions were made.

In the 43-minute debate, an animated Walesa spoke rapidly, challenging authorities to legalize Solidarity. He urged the official unions to join Solidarity in "creating freedom."

He also said Miodowicz, as a member of the ruling Communist Party Politburo and as leader of the All-Poland Alliance of Trade Unions, should press for the legalization of the outlawed labor movement.

"If you can make a man's decision that there is a place for Solidarity, we will immediately roll up our sleeves and we will begin working hard for Poland, because time is running out," Walesa told the 59-year-old former steelworker.

Solidarity, the East bloc's first independent union federation, was crushed under martial law in 1981 and banned in 1982. Miodowicz's group, known by its Polish initials OPZZ, was created by the government in 1982 to replace it.

The official unions say they have 7 million members, including 4.5 million former Solidarity members.

Solidarity was founded during a turbulent series of strikes in 1980. In its heyday, it said it had 10 million members.

In the debate, Walesa said proposed talks between the opposition and government could begin when officials acknowledge Solidarity's right to exist.

After the broadcast, Walesa told reporters he suffered from a severe case of flu that hampered his performance and made him "too impulsive."

Miodowicz, interviewed as he left the debate set, said only: "I have fulfilled my task. I am pleased that Mr. Walesa accepted my invitation."

The state-run PAP news agency said that although the two debaters disagreed, "the very fact of the meeting is a good prognosis for overcoming barriers in reaching ... dialogue and national agreement."

The debate brought thousands of rapt Poles to television sets. In Warsaw's Central Station, Grzegorz Streszynski missed his train to western Poland to watch. "Walesa made great remarks. I waited seven years to hear them," he said afterward.

Walesa said during the debate that all socialist countries were in difficult straits and blamed their problems on a lack of "pluralism," independent groups and ideas in public life.

In a reference to changes under way in the Soviet Union, he said conditions had never been better for reform but that Poland nevertheless was merely "toddling in place."

Miodowicz said said each enterprise should have only one trade union to avoid dividing the workforce. He said some Solidarity backers have shouted anti-state slogans like "Down with the Commune," which he called "terrifying."

"Our society must have peace, at least social peace, at least security for society," he said.

Chinese Minister Courting Soviets

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — Foreign Minister Qian Qichen traveled to the Soviet Union today on a mission to thaw decades of icy relations between the communist powers before their leaders meet for the first time in 30 years.

"The purpose of my current visit ... (is to) promote the process of normalization between the two countries through candid and sincere dialogue," Qian said.

The official Xinhua News Agency, in a dispatch from Moscow, quoted Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Vadim Perfilyev as saying Qian will meet with President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Qian said the main focus of his talks will be the war in Cambodia, the major stumbling block to restoring normal Chinese-Soviet ties.

China, the main backer of anti-Vietnamese resistance forces in Cambodia, insists that Moscow exert pressure on its ally Vietnam to end its 10-year military occupation of that Southeast Asian country.

The last Chinese foreign minister to visit Moscow was Chou En-lai in 1957. No Soviet foreign minister has made an official visit to Beijing since Andrei Gromyko accompanied then Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev in 1959.

In 1960, China and the Soviet Union split after Mao Tse-tung accused Khrushchev of "revisionism" and compromising with the capitalist West. The Soviet Union responded by withdrawing Soviet engineers and technology from hundreds of joint projects, dealing a painful blow to China's fragile industrial base.

Relations reached a low in 1969 when the two sides fought a short war along their disputed border. Mao called on the nation to prepare for all-out war, and each side stationed at least 1 million troops along the border.

The countries began normalization talks in 1982, opening the way for a general easing of tensions and a gradual increase in trade, scientific and cultural exchanges.

After 38 Years, Soviets Stop Jamming Broadcasts

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — After 38 years of continuous Soviet jamming of Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty, millions of people in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union are now getting "loud and clear" news programming from the West about their own cultures.

Word that the more than 2,000 jamming transmitters in Russia, other Soviet states and Afghanistan had shut down spread through Europe on Wednesday as shortwave radio operators discovered the annoying, raspy hum of Soviet interference was no longer heard over U.S., West German, Israeli or other broadcasts.

"The hum is gone," announced Malcolm S. Forbes Jr., chairman of the Board for Overseas Broadcasting, which directs the $200 million-a-year U.S. broadcasting effort based in Europe. "We think this is a very significant move by the Soviet Union," Forbes said at a news conference.

Future programming aimed at the services' estimated 55 million listeners could now include more music, fewer repeated programs and such new features as call-in talk shows, officials said.

Forbes said radio engineers who had developed sophisticated techniques for overriding the jamming were surprised by the development, although there had been some subtle signs of change during a recent visit by U.S. broadcast executives to Moscow in September.

He said the action could bring significant savings to the economically hard-pressed Soviets, who officials estimate spend up to $1.25 billion a year on jamming.

The European operations are run separately from the Voice of America and are aimed solely at the Soviet bloc. Soviet jamming of VOA transmissions stopped in 1987 and VOA now has a bureau in Moscow.

VOA covers much broader world news and more U.S. affairs than Radio Free Europe or Radio Liberty, which have been steadily jammed since they were started in the early 1950s.

Radio Liberty, Radio Free Europe and the 3-year-old Radio Afghanistan are funded by Congress. Radio Liberty is a former CIA operation, but Forbes said all three stations provide accurate and objective coverage. Their native-language broadcasts have more listeners than any other stations in areas where jamming stopped earlier, such as Hungary and Poland, he said.

The only jamming remaining is of VOA broadcasts into Afghanistan and Radio Free Europe transmissions into Czechoslovakia and Bulgaria.

Pravda Reports 28 Killed In Two Weeks Of Fighting In Soviet States

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — The Communist Party newspaper Pravda today said 28 people have been killed in two weeks of ethnic violence in the republics of Armenia and Azerbaijan. Kremlin leaders met to decide how to calm the situation.

Official reports said thousands were fleeing the unrest.

"We are losing our people," Interior Ministry spokesman B. Mikhailov was quoted as saying in Pravda.

The situation in the southern region remained tense, with mass meetings in many towns in Azerbaijan despite the presence of Soviet troops, tanks, and a strict curfew, Azerbaijan Interior Minister A. Mamedov said.

Authorities have confiscated homemade pistols, sawed-off rifles and explosives from young people in Armenia and Azerbaijan, Mikhailov said.

He said said the death toll includes Armenians, Azerbaijanis, a Russian, a Byelorussian and a Ukrainian.

In Moscow, at the end of a three-day conference of the Supreme Soviet, the Kremlin leadership announced a meeting with members of the Communist Party Central Committee and representatives of Azerbaijan, Armenia and Nagorno-Karabakh.

Azerbaijan and Armenia, two southern Soviet republics, are locked in a bitter dispute for control of the Nagorno-Karabakh region. The area is part of Azerbaijan, but its predominantly Armenian population has been agitating since February for annexation by Armenia.

Arkady Volsky, the Kremlin's special representative in Armenia and Azerbaijan, told the Supreme Soviet just before it adjourned that in Azerbaijan, "nothing was done to eliminate the tension right away."

"The situation is boiling in both republics," Volsky said. "We are appealing to the peoples of Armenia and Azerbaijan, it is time to stop."

In Baku, the capital of Azerbaijan, Pravda correspondents reported activists wearing red headbands gathered around bonfires on the streets at night, engaged in heated discussion of the violence.

Official media in Baku and in the Armenian capital, Yerevan, said thousands of refugees were streaming across the border to their respective ethnic homelands.

The official Armenian news agency Armenpress said the latest round of killings began Nov. 22 and included a Moslem mullah.

Leon Azruyan, the night editor in charge of Armenpress, said in a telephone interview Wednesday that the Azerbaijani mullah fired into a meeting of Armenians in the city of Kalinino in northern Armenia last week, "but they threw stones at him. One hit him in the head and killed him."

He said other deaths occurred in the cities of Kirovakan, Krasnoselsk and Spitak in northern Armenia but that there was no detailed information on how many died in each city or the circumstances.

Earlier, four soldiers were killed protecting Armenian residents of the Azerbaijani city of Kirovabad, and soldiers shot and killed three civilians there for violating curfew. Violence also was reported in Nakhichevan, an Azerbaijani enclave between Armenia and the Iranian border.

The dispute over Nagorno-Karabakh began in February. Mass demonstrations broke out, and at the end of February ethnic rioting in the Azerbaijani city of Sumgait killed at least 32 people.

Azerbaijanis accused Armenia of sending settlers into Nagorno-Karabakh to pad the Armenian majority there, of forcing Azerbaijanis out of work, and refusing them food and medical supplies.

U.N. Condemns U.S. Denial Of Visa To Arafat

By Peter James Spielmann
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

UNITED NATIONS — The General Assembly voted 151-2 to condemn the United States for not letting Yasser Arafat enter the country and gave it until today to reverse the decision. U.S. officials said they would not budge.

If Arafat, the PLO chairman, is not granted a U.S. visa, Arab nations will offer a resolution to reconvene the General Assembly in Geneva so Arafat can address it. Diplomats said passage was assured.

The United States and Israel opposed Wednesday's condemnation. Britain abstained because it said the criticism was too harsh, but all other U.S. allies supported the denunciation.

In a departure from the standard electronic voting, delegates voted in the official U.N. languages: Arabic, English, Chinese, French, Russian and Spanish. They called out "Na'm," "Yes," "Zan Cheng," "0ui," "Da," "Si," and in the case of Israel and the United States, "No."

Absent from the roll call were Dominica, Grenada, Paraguay, St. Kitts, Nevis, and South Africa.

The resolution asked U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to inform the General Assembly by tonight of the U.S. response. Secretary of State George P. Shultz said the United States would not change its mind.

The State Department denied Arafat a visa on security grounds, saying he condones and encourages terrorism perpetrated by the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Arafat had said he wanted to explain to the General Assembly the position taken by the Palestine National Council in its recent meeting in Algiers. The council — the PLO's parliament in exile — implicitly recognized Israel's right to exist, accepting key U.N. resolutions on the Middle East calling for negotiations with states in the region.

Iraqi Ambassador Ismat Kittani said if Arafat does not receive a visa, "it will constitute a grievous blow to the process of peace in the Middle East."

"I feel very pained to see that the United States is the odd couple with Israel in the United Nations," said Clovis Maksoud, ambassador of the Arab League, which sponsored the resolution.

"We are hopeful the international outcry against the U.S. position will jolt the subsequent U.S. administration into a reassessment of its policies of bias toward Israel," he said.

Arab diplomats said they would quickly introduce a resolution to shift the General Assembly to Geneva in mid-December. The second resolution would likely be voted on by early next week, and the diplomats said they had the votes to pass it.

The United States says it does not oppose a move to Geneva and would participate in debate there.

Undersecretary-General Joseph Verner Reed said plans were already under way to move the assembly to Geneva, the European headquarters of the world body. It would be the first time the assembly has moved as an act of protest.

The PLO has had a U.N. mission in New York since 1975 and holds non-voting observer status. It is considered the sole, legitimate representative of the Palestinian people and is invited to speak on all debates concerning Palestinians and the Middle East.

Under the 1947 U.S.-U.N. Headquarters Agreement, the United States is required to grant visas to U.N. diplomats and invitees on U.N. business.

In debate Wednesday, U.S. Ambassador Herbert S. Okun reiterated the State Department's assertion that the Headquarters Agreement allows the United States to protect its security interests.

Diplomatic sources said the week of Dec. 12-16 would be the most likely time for the session in Geneva.

The resolution on moving must first be heard by a 16-member budgetary advisory committee because it has financial implications.

It then would go to the General Assembly's finance committee, formally called the Fifth Committee, which would vote on it and send it to the General Assembly for action.

The cost of the move to Geneva was not known, but U.N. sources have said it would be relatively modest, perhaps $150,000, covering the travel of a small number of U.N. personnel. Most nations would send their Geneva ambassadors to the session.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY Dec. 2

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You find good in a questionable situation. Health matters warn you to slow down. A clandestine relationship is more than you can handle.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Your partner worries about finances. Budgets need closer follow up. Affection levels are high. Nocturnal hours can be exciting.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): The company you are keeping can have a direct bearing on your career, for good or bad. Make advantageous choices. Hidden talents grow.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You feel like you are in a rut, but you have a plan. Experiment with new lifestyles. You appreciate home, children and possessions.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Things can stand between you and success unless you make the right choices. Reflect on creativity, talents and where the best opportunities are.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Silence may be golden today. Adjustments must be made. Leave important decisions for another, less confusing time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Look beyond appearances into the true nature of a romantic tie. Trying to change another is an impossible task. The evening sparkles.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): It may be difficult to maintain a cheerful attitude. Forgive and forget is the best policy. The end result turns into a treasured relationship.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Emotions are peaceful and steady after an exhausting day. Plan the evening's activities accordingly. Avoid strange settings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Future plans are maturing. Take a peaceful attitude toward friends and your mate. Self-improvement and health plans need change.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Boredom is a problem today. You can bring life to the old routine through friends. Strike out for new territory and adventure.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): A companion's fluctuating moods worry you. Don't overreact and make matters worse. Take time for relaxation and emotional renewal.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West

3 ♠	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♡

It is difficult to solve a problem if you don't know that one exists. If that sounds somewhat paradoxical, read on.

There is little about the bidding that appeals to us. North's demand bid of two diamonds is a stretch, although we concede that his is not an easy hand to bid. South's decision to rebid three no trump rather than take a diamond preference is a mystery to us. Observe that, as the cards lie, six diamonds makes (declarer wins the heart opening, cashes two high trumps and four spades, discarding dummy's losing heart, then takes the club finesse).

South's play matched his bidding. He won the heart opening lead and now had to run nine tricks before the opponents gained the lead, since they were poised to run off at least four more heart tricks. He cashed the ace-king of diamonds, but when that suit didn't break he was stuck in dummy and could collect no more than eight tricks.

It is a natural tendency to go after your long suit first and, had there been another entry to South's hand, he would have been right to tackle diamonds first in case the suit did split evenly.

However, a 2-2 diamond break is only a 40 percent chance. The alternative is a club finesse, which is a 50 percent shot. Since declarer is in his hand for the first and last time at trick one, he should lead a club to the queen. When that succeeds, he has boosted his total tricks to nine.

Salinas Becomes Mexican Leader

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEXICO CITY — Carlos Salinas de Gortari, a disciple and exponent of the free market who becomes president of Mexico today, welcomed Latin American leaders and diplomats from around the world despite protests from his electoral opponents. President Fidel Castro of Cuba, President Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua and other heads of state attended a private dinner Wednesday for Salinas at the National Palace.

Salinas was scheduled to take the reins of power from President Miguel de la Madrid after his opponents registered their objections in speeches on national television.

"This is a very important advance on the road to democracy," said Juan Cardenas Garcia, spokesman for the Popular Socialist Party. "We will be able to get our message to the Mexican people without violence or problems."

The opposition claims Salinas' election July 6 was won by fraud. Opposition leader Cuauhtemoc Cardenas said foreign heads of state attending the inauguration would be supporting an "illegitimate government."

With Cabinet appointments announced Wednesday, Salinas served notice that he intends to push ahead with the economic policies he designed while serving as his predecessor's budget director: encouraging competition and reducing state involvement in the economy in an effort to promote growth.

Several key appointees are young, worked with Salinas under de la Madrid and, like Salinas, have degrees in economics from top-ranked U.S. schools.

Salinas has said his biggest concern is "to get Mexico to grow again," and to do that the country needs both new investment and the use of resources that now go abroad as payments on Mexico's $102 billion foreign debt.

In charge of renegotiating that debt will be Treasury Secretary Pedro Aspe, 38, who earned a Ph.D from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Other key appointments include Jaime Serra Puche, 37, who worked for Salinas in the budget office, as minister of commerce and industry, and close associate Fernando Solana, 57, as foreign minister.

Salinas, who has a Ph.D. in economics and government from Harvard, inherits a country with a lot of problems: the debt, an economy that has been stagnant for six years, an inflation rate of 40 percent, and an electoral system that has lost credibility.

The new president will need a quick success to demonstrate his command of the job, and he expects help from President-elect George Bush's incoming administration to win a reduction in debt payments.

Many in the opposition still refuse to accept Salinas' victory, and they threatened to walk out during the inauguration if they were not permitted to air their objections.

Criminal Charges Sought In Crash

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Police today sought criminal charges against employees of Boeing Co., Japan Air Lines and the Transport Ministry after a three-year investigation into the cause of the world's worst single-plane crash.

Police said the crash, in which 520 people died, was caused by the professional negligence of 20 people, including four Boeing employees, 12 Japan Air Lines workers and four employees of the ministry of transport.

The people accused of negligence were responsible for aircraft repairs, maintenance and inspection.

It was the first time that criminal charges arising from a plane crash investigation have been sought against officials of the Transport Ministry, which is responsible for aviation safety.

Boeing, the Seattle-based aircraft manufacturer, said in a statement it believed theaccident did not involve a criminal act.

"Boeing does not believe that criminal acts were committed by anyone and hopes that the district prosecutor's office also will conclude that there was no criminal conduct," the company said.

Gunma Prefectural Police handed results of the probe to the Maebashi District Prosecutor's Office, which will decide whether to press charges for negligence, which is an offense under Japanese criminal law.

The police said they were unable to question the four Boeing employees.

But they said documents confiscated from Japan Air Lines provided enough evidence to substantiate their involvement. The four reportedly supervised a repair of the aircraft in 1978 that was performed improperly.

Boeing sources said that police already have names of people who performed the repairs, but Boeing employees have rejected repeated police requests for questioning.

The police action highlights the different legal customs regarding air accidents and corporate criminal liability in Japan and the United States.

Japan is one of a few countries where criminal charges are sought against individuals responsible for airplane accidents, said Hiroshi Itakura, criminal law professor at Nihon University in Tokyo.

In the United States, individuals involved in an airplane accident are usually granted criminal immunity in exchange for cooperating in investigations into the cause of an accident, Itakura said.

Fox TV Scores Breakthrough In Fight With Big Networks

By Diane Haithman
LAT-WP NEWS SERVCE

HOLLYWOOD — The upstart "fourth network," Fox Broadcasting Co., is beginning to catch on in a big — and, more importantly — profitable way.

Its Sunday-night ratings are up 45 percent from a year ago and registered their highest levels last weekend, network executives report. And Fox scored a minor ratings coup by outperforming ABC in a Sunday night time slot, as both "America's Most Wanted" and "Married ... With Children" drew larger audiences than ABC's revival of "Mission: Impossible."

"We believed from the beginning we would begin to break through, and it looks like we have," Jamie Kellner, president and chief operating officer of Fox Broadcasting, said in an interview Wednesday.

And while some industry observers dismissed the narrow win over ABC for one hour as insignificant, they were more respectful of Fox's recent ratings spurt.

"I think there's a little gamesmanship going on in (Fox's announcement Tuesday) of winning a time period over ABC," said David Poltrack, senior vice president of planning and research in the CBS marketing division. "I think what's probably more meaningful is that, at those ratings levels, the shows are probably profitable. They are profitable and viable — that is more significant."

Edward Hatch, media analyst at Merrill Lynch Capital Markets, called the 10 ratings that Fox got with "America's Most Wanted" and "Married ... With Children" — each show's highest ratings to date — "a very credible result."

"It goes hand in hand that those types of ratings become very attractive to advertisers and certainly will increase Fox's revenue base," he said.

In addition, Fox's "21 Jump Street" registered its second-best ratings Sunday night, garnering an 8.1 and 12 percent of the audience. Each ratings point represents 904,000 homes.

Other Fox shows fare less well: Ratings for the other Sunday night shows — "It's Garry Shandling's Show," "Duet" and "The Tracey Ullman Show" — fell below 6 last week, and Saturday night's programs — "The Reporters" and "Beyond Tomorrow" — were even lower.

NBC research vice president Bill Rubens said that even though Fox has boosted its overall share of the prime-time weekend audience from 7 percent to 10 percent in the past year, it still poses no threat to the three major networks.

"Per week, they take seven-tenths of a ratings point away from the networks. The total effect on the networks is very small," he said.

Rubens called Fox's win over ABC Sunday a fluke. " 'Mission: Impossible' was really a creation of the writers' strike," he said, referring to the fact that it is on ABC's schedule only as a substitute for programming that was delayed by last summer's work stoppage by the Writers Guild of America. "It really would not have been in that time period" under ordinary circumstances, he added.

CBS' Poltrack said that Fox has profited from both summer reruns and strike-related delays in new fall programming on the networks. Even though Fox was also in reruns during summer and early fall, he explained, many viewers rejected the network reruns to see the shows they had missed on Fox during the regular TV season.

Andy Fessel, vice president of research and marketing at Fox Broadcasting, said Fox also has benefitted recently from "churn," an industry term for what happens when households that subscribe to cable become disappointed by what's offered and cancel the service. He said that some of those viewers, still dissatisfied with Big Three network offerings, have turned to Fox.

Kellner attributed the network's improved performance to the growing strength of its affiliated stations across the country. "Over a period of time, with high quality shows, people go back to a station and begin to make it part of their mainstream viewing," he said.

Murphy Buys Cher's Estate

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Entertainer Eddie Murphy has bought Cher's four-acre Moroccan-style canyon estate for about $6 million.

The Benedict Canyon home has six bedrooms, 7½ bathrooms, two maids quarters, 10 fireplaces, a granite kitchen, pool, spa, gym and atrium with electronic skylight, according to the listing with the Alvarez, Hyland & Young real estate firm.

"He has purchased it," confirmed Murphy publicist Terry Williams, who said Wednesday she couldn't provide any details on the sale.

Ms. Williams said Murphy wanted homes on both coasts.

Actresses Produce TV Special About Youthful Cancer Victim

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — When Beth Howland and Jennifer Warren heard about Jason Gaes' book telling of his battle against cancer they knew they had found the subject for their first co-production.

Ms. Howland, an actress best-known for her role as Vera on the TV series "Alice," saw Jason and his mother on a public-access television show talking about his upcoming book, "My Book for Kids with Cansur."

"I was so taken with him," said Ms. Howland. "He was so articulate. He was a regular kid, but wise beyond his years without being precocious."

Jason was 8 when he was stricken with Burkitt's lymphoma, a form of viral cancer. The producers said Jason, now 10, is considered cured. Their story of Jason and the fight he and his family waged against cancer is told in "You Don't Have To Die," a half-hour documentary that will have its premiere Monday on Home Box Office.

"The documentary was secondary with us," said Ms. Howland. "What we really wanted to do was animate the book. The drawings in the book are very primitive, like little stick drawings."

Ms. Warren added, "The animation was done by John Canemaker and it weaves in and out of the documentary. The animation deals with his treatment and things that would be hard to take in real life. The animation is informative but not frightening. It includes some fantasies, too, because Jason talks a lot about death."

The reason Jason wrote the book, and the reason it appealed to Ms. Howland and Ms. Warren, was that it was about survival and hope.

"There are so many books and pictures about people who die," said Ms. Howland. "Jason wanted a book about hope. The survival rate for children's cancer is now very good."

"My Book for Kids with Cansur" began as an invitation to a get-well party for Jason, who lives in Worthington, Minn. The American Cancer Society in Minnesota saw it and printed it as a pamphlet.

"We first saw it as a pamphlet," said Ms. Warren. "The book has more drawings and is in color. It has a real charm to it."

"It has very little text," said Ms. Howland. "That's why we did the documentary. There wasn't enough material for a half hour of animation. It was a good thing, because once we got into it we found out how expensive animation is."

The show was filmed at Jason's home and at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., where Jason was treated.

"It's about this family and how they went through this experience and what happened to each of them," said Ms. Howland. "The family stuck together, which we learned isn't usually the case when a child has a catastrophic illness."

The documentary is the first for their Tiger Rose Productions, which they named for their dogs. Ms. Warren and Ms. Howland first met as acting students in New York.

Ms. Warren has starred in a number of motion pictures, including "Night Moves" and "Slap Shot," and the TV series "Paper Dolls."

They are developing other projects, including dramas that they would star in.

Ms. Howland is currently in rehearsal for Alan Ayckbourn's "A Chorus of Disapproval" at the Arena Theater in Washington, D.C.

Ms. Warren will direct "The Beans of Egypt, Maine," for PBS' "American Playhouse" and for later release as a feature film. It's adapted from Carolyn Chute's novel about a rowdy rural family.

"I have no interest in directing," said Ms. Howland. "I produce because there aren't enough acting jobs. You have to create them."

Charles I, king of England, Scotland and Ireland, ascended the throne in 1625 upon the death of James I.
