BellSouth Funds Middle School Academy At ECU

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Southern Bell officials announced Monday that the BellSouth Foundation is funding a new program to improve education of middle school students in eastern North Carolina.

BellSouth Foundation is giving $100,000 to fund the newly created Middle School Leadership Academy, an East Carolina University School of Education program for training educators of eastern North Carolina sixth through eighth graders.

Lois Fisher, a Southern Bell of North Carolina employee who is an East Carolina University graduate, made the presentation to ECU officials, including Chancellor Richard Eakin, Dr. Charles Coble, dean of the school of education; Dr. Patricia Terrell, department of elementary education chairman, and Don Spence, ECU professor who is the program coordinator.

Spence said the program will serve administrators, principals and teachers in 56 eastern North Carolina school districts.

Individualized learning is to be emphasized, he said. During the two-year program, participants in the academy will plan course work for development of skills in assessment, curriculum-program management, research and change management. The emotional and physical changes of adolescents will be kept in mind as the curriculum is developed.

BellSouth Foundation is an endowment administered by the BellSouth Corp. and funds programs in nine southeastern states.

"Southern Bell has a long history of supporting education," said Joseph P. Lacher, Southern Bell's vice president for North Carolina. He said the company hopes that the grant will encourage excellence in the classroom just as his company encourages excellence on the job through its employees.

Spence said the academy envisions schools in which students take an active part in planning their education and where learning how to learn is emphasized along with learning facts. The teacher's role, he said, is seen as helping each student develop and implement his own learning goals. Administrators are seen as assuming roles that carry out the school's basic mission and provide leadership.

The grant was announced during a luncheon given Monday in Greenville by Southern Bell. Area legislators, including state Rep. Ed Warren and state Sen. Tom Taft and Bob Martin were present. Several ECU, Greenville and Pitt County officials also attended.

Pitt County's new satellite jail has been approved for use, but Sheriff Ralph Tyson must hire five additional jailers before the facility may be opened.

A state jail inspector toured the jail Friday and gave it a stamp of approval, but Tyson said he must hire nine deputies to staff the facility before inmates may be held there. He has already hired four jailers.

Tyson said he is listing the job vacancies with the state Employment Security Commission and has contacted other law enforcement agencies to inquire if anyone is interested in the job. He said he would like to hire jailers already certified by the state.

Three of the four people he has hired are certified, he said. The fourth must complete a six-week course offered by the state before being certified as a jailer.

The new jail — located in the basement of the county office building on West Fifth Street — should be open by the first of the year, Tyson said. It is equipped to handle about 50 inmates.

Gorbachev's Trek Begins

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev left today for New York, where he is expected to put a moderate face on Soviet foreign policy and show himself eager to achieve progress with the new U.S. administration on arms control and a host of other pressing issues.

With his wife Raisa, the Soviet leader walked across the tarmac at Moscow's Vnukovo 2 airport to his official jet on a gray, slushy day.

They waved to Politburo members and other officials who accompanied them to the plane, then disappeared inside.

Gorbachev was being accompanied to New York by top foreign policy advisers Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze and Politburo member Alexander N.

Yakovlev, and by Deputy Premier Vladimir Kamentsev, according to the official Tass news agency.

On Wednesday, the Soviet leader addresses the United Nations and meets with President Reagan and President-elect Bush. After a day of sightseeing in Manhattan, he then travels to Cuba and Great Britain.

In a dispatch by a diplomatic correspondent distributed shortly after Gorbachev's departure, Tass said Gorbachev intends to discuss the entire range of U.S.-Soviet issues with Reagan and Bush.

It said Gorbachev's decision to address the United Nations was a sign of Soviet regard for the world body as an "indispensable mechanism in the quest for a peaceful solution to international issues, for resolution of crisis situations, and for settlement of other global problems."

Bakker, 3 Aides Indicted

By Paul Nowell
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Jim Bakker and a former top PTL aide defrauded 150,000 contributors and used more than $4 million in contributions to the TV ministry to support extravagant lifestyles, an indictment charges.

Two other Bakker aides also were indicted for alleged tax evasion.

Bakker and Richard Dortch, PTL's former senior executive vice president, used fraudulent means to sell lifetime partnerships in the ministry's theme park, a federal grand jury said Monday after a 15-month investigation.

Bakker, who founded the ministry in 1972 and built it into one of the nation's most popular evangelical enterprises, and Dortch are charged with eight counts of mail fraud, 15 counts of wire fraud and one count of conspiring to commit mail and wire fraud for using the mails, telephones and television.

If convicted of all the charges, Bakker, 48, and Dortch, 57, each could be sentenced to 120 years in prison and fined $6 million.

Bakker's wife, Tammy, a target of the investigation, was not indicted.

Bakker left the ministry in March 1987 after admitting to a 1980 sexual encounter with church secretary Jessica Hahn. The indictment alleges that Dortch authorized a $265,000 payment to Ms. Hahn to keep her quiet about the incident.

Bakker's attorneys, Jim Toms and Ryan Hovis, told reporters Monday that Bakker would not have a statement for several days.

"Certainly there's a degree of discouragement or regret that criminal charges were brought against Mr. Bakker," Toms said. "But he's glad to know what he's facing, so he can prepare his defense."

Bush Set To Name Two More Top Aides

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President-elect George Bush will name Texas oilman Robert Mosbacher as secretary of commerce and Carla Hills, a former housing secretary, as his special trade representative, Bush transition sources said today.

Bush planned to formally name the two, who will be his top trade officials, later in the day, said the sources, who spoke only on the condition of anonymity.

Ms. Hills, 54, is the first woman the president-elect has named to a major position. A lawyer, she was former President Ford's secretary of housing and urban development and thus continues a trend of Bush naming veterans of previous Republican administrations.

Mosbacher, 61, is a longtime friend of the vice president's and was national finance chairman of his 1988 campaign.

Although trade representative was not originally a Cabinet-level post, President Reagan gave it that status in his administration.

The two officials will oversee the nation's trade policy. The office of U.S. Trade Representative negotiates trade agreements and the secretary of commerce enforces them and seeks to expand markets for U.S. goods.

Mosbacher will take over Commerce from former steel executive C. William Verity, who has held the job for only a year. Reagan appointed Verity after the death of Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige in a horseback riding accident.

In deciding to name Ms. Hills to the post, Bush was also beginning to fulfill a promise to name women to his administration.

Sheriff Needs Deputies For New Jail

On weekdays, there will be more space available at the new jail for inmates serving sentences of a few days. Also, minor offenders being held in the existing jail may be transferred to the new facility.

"The sooner we can get it open, the better we'll be," Tyson said. "I think it will ease a little pressure over here."

The existing Pitt County Jail has had continued problems with overcrowding, and a Pitt County Grand Jury toured the facility in October and complained that it was also dirty and needed better lighting and more storage.

Two former inmates at the Pitt County Jail have filed lawsuits against the county over jail conditions and the lack of certain services at the facility, according to county officials.

With the new jail a few miles away from the existing facility, Tyson said he will need a new van for deputies to use in transporting inmates back and forth from the two facilities. He said he plans to ask the county commissioners to purchase the vehicle.

Food for inmates at the new facility will be prepared at the existing jail and transported to the inmates.

Moye Draws 42-Year Prison Sentence, $300,000 In Fines

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A Greenville man has been sentenced to 42 years in prison and fined $300,000 after pleading guilty to three counts of cocaine trafficking.

In sentencing Randy Moye, 31, of 1108 Fairfax Avenue on Monday in Pitt County Superior Court, Judge Charles B. Winberry of Rocky Mount reprimanded Moye for helping to unleash at least 10 ounces of cocaine on the people of Pitt County and North Carolina.

State law requires a minimum sentence of 14 years in prison for each charge to which Moye pleaded guilty, and Winberry said the only way he could lower the 42-year prison term was if Moye had given the state substantial assistance in nabbing other drug traffickers.

"There is no evidence before me that you have given the slightest iota of any assistance in any way, shape or form to any law enforcement agent," Winberry said.

"There can be no excuse for those who traffic in the dastardly substance known as cocaine," Winberry said.

Moye was accused of participating in four cocaine sales to undercover agents of the Pitt County Sheriff's Department in August and September of 1987.

The final sale involved a half-pound of cocaine, according to John Smith of Kinston, who was arrested along with Moye but testified for the state last week.

Smith, an East Carolina University student at the time of his arrest, has also pleaded guilty to three trafficking charges but could receive less than the minimum prison term if a judge rules he provided the state with substantial assistance. No date has been set for his sentencing hearing.

The state began to try Moye last week on the charges stemming from the last of the four cocaine sales. But after two days of testimony, Moye pleaded guilty to possessing, delivering and conspiring to sell and deliver more than 200 grams of cocaine.

Under the plea arrangement, the state agreed that Moye's prison sentence would not exceed 42 years. The state also agreed to dismiss 16 lesser cocaine violations stemming from the other three sales, which involved between 3 grams and 1.5 ounces of cocaine. Winberry revoked Moye's bond on Thursday and placed him in the custody of the Pitt County Sheriff pending sentencing.

Prior to being sentenced Monday, Moye offered an apology for his role in the drug sales.

"I'm deeply sorry for my little part (in the crime) ... (and) for the trouble I caused everyone," said Moye, who worked for a local plumbing company at the time of his arrest. He told Winberry he was ready to take the punishment and put the incident behind him.

But Winberry said Moye's role in the drug sales was hardly little, and he said Moye had been charged with three of the most serious felonies in the state.

Winberry did recommend Moye for work release, saying he was entitled to the privilege and was apparently an accomplished plumber.

Two of Moye's former employers testified Monday that Moye had a good character and reputation, and they said he was a loyal, dependable and productive worker.

His aunt, Addie Haddock of 108 Anderson Drive in Greenville, also testified that Moye was of good character.

Moye's mother died when he was 2 years old and he lived with his grandmother until she died when he was in the 11th grade, Mrs. Haddock said. Moye then lived with her, she said.

Moye's attorney, Richard Cannon of Greenville, argued to Winberry that Moye was a good person who resorted to drugs because of the pressure of an unstable home life. First he turned to marijuana, then to cocaine, Cannon said.

But Assistant District Attorney Clark Everett argued to Winberry that the four sales in which Moye participated indicate he was heavily involved in the drug business.

"Ten ounces (of cocaine) is not something you come by easily," Everett said. "It's just hard to believe this is a first-time event."

Library Study Wins Approval

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County Commissioners have given approval for a study that may lead to more formal working arrangements between Sheppard Memorial Library in Greenville and smaller public libraries in other municipalities in the county.

The board's action Monday came after Willie Nelms, director of the library system in the county, asked for permission to meet with other public library officials in the county "to find out if more formal arrangements are possible and what form they might take."

Nelms said Sheppard Library has had "informal arrangements" with various municipal libraries in the county for many years. But he suggested, "It is becoming increasingly apparent that a more formal arrangement among the public libraries ... would be beneficial to all concerned."

Sheppard is operated jointly by the city of Greenville and Pitt County. The city provides the facilities and maintenance for the main library and the two branches, while the county provides the bookmobile which travels throughout the county. The city and county governments share the cost of operations.

Saying the Sheppard Library board supports the concept, Nelms said "the support of the county commissioners is absolutely essential to this process. I don't want to proceed with this matter if the commissioners object to it."

Nelms then asked for "permission to examine the means of forming more formal arrangements," and commissioners granted the request.

Nelms suggested that more formal relationships between the various libraries in the county might result in more state money for libraries as well as improved service for those people using the various facilities.

Nelms cited as an example a request by the library in Bethel for state funds to convert an old railroad depot into a new library facility. The request for money was denied, Nelms said, because the Bethel facility was not part of a larger library system.

People in Winterville, Nelms said, want improved service in that area, possibly "a branch of Sheppard Memorial Library." But at present, according to Nelms, there is no mechanism in place that would allow Sheppard to open a branch outside the city.

In addition to Greenville and Bethel, other municipalities with public libraries include Grifton, Fountain, Ayden and Farmville.

In other action Monday the board adopted a resolution recognizing Charles Gaskins for his service as chairman during the past year; adopted a resolution authorizing county Finance Officer Margaret Roberts to develop a cash management policy for consideration; reappointed Linda Howard and A.C. Turnage Jr. to the board of health; reappointed William F. Cox, Richard K. Worsley and Harold Stator to the industrial facilities and pollution control financing authority, and reappointed Raymond Eubanks Jr., Charles Mayo Jr. and Bobby Joyner to the Mid-East Emergency Medical Council.

The board also appointed Dr. William E. Laupus and Michael Garrett and reappointed James Dupree to terms on the mental health board; named Myron Brown — formerly an alternate — to a seat on the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission, and named Lucy Jones and Jean Darden to seats on the women's commission.

Fever Reducing Medicines

The control of body temperature takes place in an area of the lower part of the brain referred to as the hypothalamus. It is here that temperature is maintained at between 97.7 and 99.5 degrees F. The hypothalamus balances the production and loss of body heat with the assistance of the nervous system. Fever is generally defined as body temperature which exceeds 100 degrees F. The substance which accumulates in the cells and causes a rise in body temperature is referred to as prostaglandin E-2.

Persons with high fever (103 to 105 degrees F) lasting for 12 to 24 hours should be evaluated by a physician. Fever that goes above 105 F requires immediate medical care.

Fever-reducing medicines such as aspirin, acetaminophen, and ibuprofen are used to relieve fever discomfort. These medicines prevent the formation of prostaglandin E-2 through their action on a specific enzyme system. According to the Handbook of Nonprescription Drugs, aspirin and acetaminophen are equally effective fever reducers and have the same onset and duration of activity. Acetaminophen and ibuprofen are preferred by many physicians because of the association between aspirin use and Reye's syndrome in children.

New Bids Sought For Project

The Greenville Housing Authority in January will again accept bid proposals for a planned 32-unit development on State Road 1204, west of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Kenneth Noland, the authority's executive director, told commissioners at Monday's monthly meeting that the six bids initially submitted for the Dubber-Laney Woods project all were over the budgeted amount.

"Subsequently, changes were made in the specifications and plans and new bids will be accepted in January," Noland said.

The planned project is located on a 4.52-acre tract located off SR 1204, south of N.C. 43 and east of Rountree and Westhills townhomes.

Noland said the necessary rebidding will postpone the estimated completion date of the project until December 1989.

The accepted bid must also be approved by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Meanwhile, a three-member committee of commission members was formed to select nominees from among residents of housing owned by the authority to compete for a statewide scholarship competition.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Affirmation

No Bold New Steps Likely

When Ronald Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev meet Wednesday the event will be a time of assessment and affirmation, not bold new steps in arms control.

While the two will revisit their idea of a strategic arms reduction treaty over lunch, a nudge forward, not a breakthrough, is what can be reasonably expected from this meeting. The odds are stacked against a breakthrough.

First, the vital groundwork that could facilitate such an agreement has not been undertaken for this visit. For example, Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze did not hold a planning session nor set an agenda to define issues for their leaders.

Second, Gorbachev is well aware he is dealing with a lame duck president with only six weeks left in office and Reagan will be in no position to commit his successor, George Bush, to any course of action.

Finally, the hard fact is that the treaty to reduce U.S. and Soviet armories of long-range bombers, missiles and submarines by 30 to 50 percent is still mired in disagreement on several key points.

The two sides have not decided, for instance, whether to include mobile missiles or sea-launched cruise missiles. Both are extremely hard to track, which means cutbacks are hard to verify — the room for cheating is uncomfortably wide.

The Soviets still would like to restrict Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative (Star Wars) as part of a treaty deal — a move the Reagan administration has vigorously resisted. With a new U.S. administration coming aboard — one that may be less amenable to Star Wars technology — Gorbachev is not likely to cut any new deals with Reagan on Star Wars.

No, for the Soviet leader, this visit is an effort to avoid the experiences of 1977 and 1981, when incoming American administrations set off on radical new courses in arms and other issues rather than follow the lines of their predecessors. It will be an assessment — Gorbachev's first goal will be to obtain at least a symbolic affirmation that Bush will continue the Reagan administration's basic policies toward Moscow. President-elect George Bush, during his campaign for office, has expressed markedly more skeptical sentiments about the Soviet leaders than Reagan has.

Reagan will also have his own agenda. His first priority should be to seek a renewed commitment from Gorbachev to withdraw all Soviet troops from Afghanistan by the February 15 deadline.

Reagan should also emphasize Soviet performance in human rights areas before new conventional arms talks in Europe can begin.

Finally, he can be expected to insist Soviets tear down their controversial Krasnoyarsk radar station in Siberia — a facility that violates the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty — before any new strategic arms reduction agreement can be signed.

If the two world leaders accomplish anything beyond these goals, it will be a surprise.

Gorbachev wants to meet America's new president. He wants to know what he will be dealing with for four years — and he wants to make a plea for continuity.

Reagan wants one last smooth, courteous meeting with the Soviet leader to pad his image. He wants to jab them about Afghanistan and human rights. He doesn't want to step into any new territory in his last six weeks in office.

More Than A Government Prescription

WASHINGTON — One largely overlooked reason for this country's special feeling about the John F. Kennedy era is that it was a time when we really believed the world could be a better place and we could help to make it so.

I won't dispute that the leadership style, the personality and the youthful vigor of Kennedy himself helped enormously to produce that feeling. We still resonate to "ask not what your country..." But the feeling itself was of paramount importance: There were important things to do, and we ourselves were the means by which they would be accomplished.

The Peace Corps, VISTA and the National Teacher Corps were not so much government initiatives as opportunities for civic service.

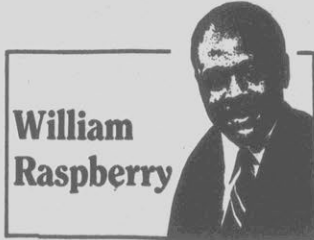

Americans never seem more pleased with themselves than when they are working together, with some realistic hope of success, toward an unquestionably worthy goal.

If we seem a less happy nation now, it is not because our objective situation has worsened but because the opportunities for individual action seem less clear, and less promising of success.

Paradoxically, one reason for the diminished optimism of the 1980s may be the success of the 1960s.

Take the civil-rights movement.

William Raspberry

There is no question that it produced a lot of good: the Voting Rights Act, Civil Rights Acts, fair-housing legislation — all the things that declared an end to second-class citizenship as a matter of national policy. Its greater significance, however, may lie in the fact that we — black and white, rich and poor, working together — made it happen. The beneficiaries of the legislation were also mainly responsible for producing it.

But a part of the success of the movement was the institutionalization of the change. The establishment of government bureaucracies to enforce the new rules may have been a good thing, but it diminished the role of individual activists. The good things we make happen are more valuable for our participation. The good things that government delivers are viewed, even by their beneficiaries, as grudging and inadequate.

One might argue that, in the 1960s, the changes that needed to be made were obvious, and clearly required the full participation of government. But that is no less true of the changes needed today. Poverty, inadequate schools, the growth of the underclass, neighborhoods rendered dangerous by drug-spawned crime — all are obvious problems, and all clearly require governmental action.

But I would argue that no purely government prescription will solve them. Government cannot cure poverty in the absence of citizen demands for increased opportunities for decent jobs. Government cannot produce excellent schools unless parents of the inadequately educated work to improve them. There are not enough police officers to make our neighborhoods safe unless the residents themselves take a hand in driving out the predators, killers and dope traffickers.

Take the matter of welfare reform that has engaged the national attention for the past several months. The argument has revolved around whether the government should require the able-bodied to work or underwrite the option of low-income mothers to stay home with their children.

After due deliberation, we have settled on a work requirement as the new national policy. But nobody expects any significant improvement in the plight of the poor, and a fair assumption is that poor people will come to resent being relegated to the bottom-of-the-barrel jobs as the price of governmental support. Think how different it might be if poor people themselves demanded opportunities for decently paid work, opportunities for training, a chance to get off the dole.

The jobs that resulted from such demands would be viewed as victories, not, as is likely to be the case now, as involuntary servitude.

What this country needs as much as anything are opportunities for citizens to be effective participants in their own deliverance. This is what Charles Murray ("In Pursuit: Of Happiness and Good Government," Simon and Schuster) is talking about when he stresses the importance of restoring the role of "little platoons" of voluntary action.

"Little platoons," he insists, "are vital insofar as they consist of people voluntarily doing important things together. To enable people to pursue happiness, good social policy consists of leaving the important things in life for people to do for themselves and protecting them from the coercion of others as they go about their lives."

Government can and must help. But the priorities, the primary efforts and the initiative must come from those who share the problem. Nothing else is likely to work.

Will Bush Answer Kemp's Questions?

WASHINGTON — We were in a chartered plane heading from Texas to Buffalo and the passengers totaled five: Jack Kemp, his two daughters, his press secretary and me. The plane was small and there was no escaping Kemp. He leaned in, shouting over the roar of the engines: "Would you try it, Richard?" he said over and over again. It was then that Jack Kemp, Republican conservative, converted me.

Not to urban-enterprise zones, about which he happened to be talking, but to Kemp. On the issues, there is probably nothing about which we agree. But goals are a different matter. Jack Kemp would revive the inner city. He would make his party hospitable to blacks. He is that rarest of Republicans — one who recognizes there's a world past the 18th hole.

That is no small thing. The election results carried an ominous message: In political terms, the nation is racially divided. Blacks voted overwhelmingly for Michael Dukakis and most whites voted for George Bush. Bush's friends insist that the President-elect recognizes the racial challenge he faces. His speeches suggest that he is not blind — as Ronald Reagan seemed to be — to the problems of the inner city. Already Bush has met with Jesse Jackson which, for much of the campaign, was more than Mike Dukakis was willing to do. Bush's heart seems to be in the right place.

But even for the hapless Washington Senators in "Damn Yankees," heart was not enough. Success takes ideas and energy. Kemp is a so-called movement conservative and his ideas are not always appreciated by Bush. Kemp preaches supply-side economics. Unlike Bush, he is not particularly troubled by the federal budget deficit. He would peg the dollar to some commodity, maybe gold. He is a cheerleader for the Strategic Defense Initiative and, in foreign affairs, there is nary an anti-communist that Kemp would not arm.

Some of these ideas make Bush grimace, but ideology alone is not what so far has kept Kemp out of the coming Bush administration. (Dan Quayle, after all, endorses much of what Kemp preaches.) Bush does not seem to like Kemp. A conversation with the New Yorker can be a contradiction in terms: He lectures. He preaches. He comes pretty close to haranguing. After Kemp pulled out of the presidential race, he met with Bush and all-but scolded him for not doing his homework on SDI. It was not the first time Kemp has taken that tone with Bush.

So why do I, an out-of-the-mainstream liberal, have a soft spot in my heart for Jack Kemp (as well as for the ACLU)? It's the very passion that many people (including, presumably, Bush) find so off-putting. During that plane ride, taken when Kemp was first beginning his presidential race, Kemp kept saying over and over again that some things are worth trying — that the situation in America's inner cities is so desperate that we ought to attempt anything with a chance of success.

Jack Kemp would sell public housing to tenants. He would monkey even more with the tax code to favor the working poor. He would implement what up to now has been an empty proposal for urban-enterprise zones. The names of those who have co-sponsored some of Kemp's bills attest to his range of interests: Walter Fauntroy, the delegate from the District of Columbia; Bob Garcia, the Democratic congressman from the South Bronx. They are not in the habit of sponsoring standard conservative legislation.

When it comes to what can be called racial issues, the passion that Kemp exhibits has been sorely lacking in the Reagan administration and in the Republican Party in general. Bush promises to do better, but nothing in his background prepares him for the task. Rich and white, his intentions are fine, but his body language is all wrong.

Kemp, on the other hand, played ball with blacks. They have been his friends. Almost alone among the GOP presidential candidates, Kemp campaigned among blacks and visited inner-city churches. This was not necessarily smart politics — most blacks are Democrats — but it was evidence of his commitment, of his desire to bring a little of Jesse Jackson's rainbow into a bleached GOP.

People close to Kemp think Bush is still smarting from Kemp's stern tutorials. If that's the case, Bush's sentiments are understandable. But when it comes to domestic problems such as our racial division and the plight of the inner cities, a Bush administration not only could use Kemp, but badly needs him — maybe at Housing and Urban Development. God knows, we need both housing and urban renewal and Kemp has some ideas — the ones he kept asking me if I would try. My answer is immaterial. The question now is, will George Bush?

And We Treat Them The Same: I

In today's financial institutions, people are walking in as individuals and walking out as numbers.

Probably because it's just more efficient to treat customers in "bulk," and serve up "bulk-rate" services.

All very easy for the bank, but very hard on the individual.

A Big Bank Dedicated To More Than Just Getting Bigger.

For three million people who bank at NCNB, things are different.

We work to help each one of our customers reach their full potential.

We're training-and re-training-all our people to find out exactly what you want and what you need before we talk about what we've got.

Banking Services
Designed For The Individual,
Not The Institution.

We're introducing new services based on your needs-not ours.

For example, we believe that if you're good enough to be doing your banking business with us, you should get something in return.

That's why we put together a package of services we call Deluxe® Banking, all the services you're likely to need at special rates or no charge.

We've come up with all kinds of ways to help you borrow money.

But we feel that our customers deserve more than just a brochure and an application form.

That's why our people are trained to give you what we call "loan advice that's right on the money."

Every One Of Like An Individual.

High Tech That Keeps In Touch With People.

Our people behind the scenes have developed a technology that works so well, we'll give you $10 any time we make a mistake on your personal checking statement.

High technology helps us offer you same-day answers on loans, 24-hour banking coast-to-coast and 800 phone numbers that can give you up-to-the-minute information on all your accounts with us.

Finally, you don't just get a bank account from us. Even better, you can also get a connection to insurance, to investing and to buying a home.

The Customer Comes First, Even When A Bank Has Three Million Of Them.

That's a lot of business. So it pays us to see that you get more for your money with us.

The kind of service, the kind of financial advice, the kind of personal attention that will help you get ahead and stay ahead in the business of life.

If that last part sounds a bit like a small bank, that's the idea.

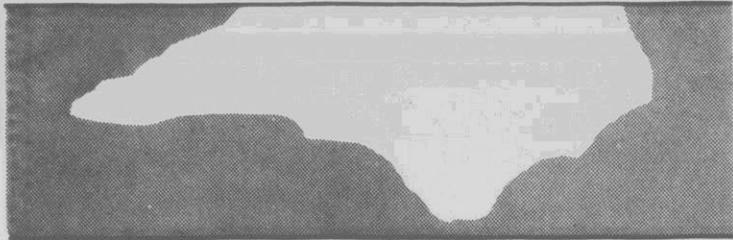

If the rest of it sounds like the things that only a big bank can offer, that's the idea, too.

If all of it sounds like the right bank for you, that's even better. After all, you're who we're dedicated to.

IN THE STATE

Honest Applicants

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A new federal law that will significantly restrict businesses from using lie detectors to test prospective employees is "a major victory for the worker," civil liberties officials say.

"Working people are subjected to too much invasion now," said James Shields, executive director of the N.C. Civil Liberties Union in Raleigh.

"Even if it were totally accurate, it's voodoo magic," Shields said in an interview published Monday in The Charlotte Observer. "All it measures is stress. People tend to believe these things work. It's scary to people."

The Employee Polygraph Protection Act will take effect Dec. 27.

Tornado Aid

RALEIGH (AP) — Hundreds of families were expected to apply for tornado relief assistance today as federal disaster centers opened in Raleigh and Franklin County.

The one-stop centers will provide temporary housing assistance, low-interest loans and grants agricultural aid to people with uninsured losses.

Paul E. Hall, coordinator of the disaster centers for the Federal Emergency Management Agency, said he hoped most victims could receive checks within a week for whatever assistance they qualify for.

On Friday, a center for tornado victims in Halifax and Northampton counties will open at Eastman School on N.C.48 between the towns of Brinkleyville and Ringwood. That center will close Saturday.

Al Warlick of the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety said a toll-free hotline will be set up to help residents in Dare, Currituck, Pamlico and Hyde counties.

Martin Speaks

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — States have shown innovation and energy in attacking problems such as educational shortcomings and crime, but can succeed only as partners with the federal government, North Carolina Gov. Jim Martin says.

Martin, who presented the Council of State Governments' "Report to the President-Elect on the State of the States," said he was confident that the new administration would give attention to the concerns it lists.

"The overall message is mixed," Martin said in a prepared speech. "It is one of innovation, pride and satisfaction for what states have been able to accomplish."

Escapee Captured

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A convicted rapist sought in a week-long manhunt after failing to return to a Maryland prison while on work release says he won't fight extradition.

"I'll go back on my own," James Stavarakas, 27, said Monday before being taken to Mecklenburg County Jail to await an extradition hearing set for today.

Stavarakas was arrested Sunday night in China Grove at the home of his wife's brother, according to Rowan County Sheriff's Sgt. Carl Hardy.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Carl Horn told U.S. Magistrate Paul Taylor on Monday that he would fight any attempts for bond to be posted. Horn said Stavarakas was a suspect in a rape committed in Maryland after his escape.

Taylor said Stavarakas was charged in federal warrants with crossing state lines to avoid imprisonment. Any additional charges would have to be filed in Maryland after his return, he said.

Stavarakas allegedly escaped Nov. 28 from Maryland's Patuxent Institution, a prison already under fire for granting furloughs to a triple murderer.

Ceremonies

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Two ceremonies commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Educational Foundation's incorporation on Dec. 7, 1938, will be held Wednesday at the foundation office and at the Dean E. Smith Center.

The Educational Foundation is the oldest fund-raising corporation on the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill campus.

A brief ceremony will be held at the foundation's office at Koury Natatorium, and the occasion will be recognized during North Carolina's basketball game against Vanderbilt.

Development

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — A Dare County conservation group wants to stop a plan to turn a piece of historic Roanoke Island into a golf resort.

The Friends of Roanoke Island, a group formed last month, has offered to help the Roanoke Island Historical Association pay for 320 acres on the northern end of the Dare County island so the association will not proceed with a luxury residential development, including a golf course.

The Historical Association announced plans in 1984 to build a $12 million Roanoke Island Center for the Arts on the site. The center would become the new home to "The Lost Colony," an outdoor drama produced by the association that depicts the first settlement in the New World.

To finance the center, the association later said it would build a 150-room hotel, a shopping area and a residential subdivision on land surrounding the Fort Raleigh Historical Site, the setting for the Outer Banks drama.

Luther H. Daniels, a Manteo town commissioner and head of the Friends group, said his organization is not opposed to the theater or the inn. But its members are against a golf course and a large residential development.

Court Ruling Leaves State Agencies With Little Power To Fight Pollution

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A North Carolina appeals court ruling that denies state agencies the authority to determine civil fines may lead the EPA to revoke the state's authority to issue air- and water-quality permits, officials say.

"The effect of this ruling is a serious one," said Paul Wilms, director of the Division of Environmental Management. "It will have significant implications, both for our ability to protect the environment ... and certainly, potentially, to the economy of this state."

"In a sense, it renders us impotent in any practicable way in enforcing environmental law and rules," Wilms said.

Rules against polluting North Carolina's air and water became virtually unenforceable Monday, when an appeals court ruling that was issued Nov. 15 took effect.

The ruling leaves in limbo a $5.7 million penalty levied against Texasgulf Chemicals Co. in December 1986 for 1,724 alleged violations of air-quality laws.

Also in doubt is the status of another 140 pending fines totaling $1.8 million, which are being appealed, Wilms said. The violators might not have to pay the fines if the state Supreme Court upholds the Court of Appeals ruling.

The state Supreme Court last week rejected a request to expedite consideration of the case, meaning that it could be "five or six months or more" before the matter is resolved, Wilms said at a news conference.

Although the ruling stemmed from an appeal of a fine levied by the DEM, a division of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, it has broader implications since a variety of state agencies have discretion in assessing civil penalties.

Among them are the departments of Insurance, Transportation, Commerce, Labor and Human Resources, as well as the Real Estate, Alcoholic Beverage Control and Banking commissions.

The Department of Human Resources last month stopped imposing civil penalties for violations of regulations dealing with landfills, nursing homes and rest homes, according to DHR Secretary David Flaherty.

He said the department heeded a memorandum from the state attorney general's office informing administrative agencies of the Court of Appeals decision.

"This is really having a far-reaching impact," Flaherty said. Fines, he said, often are "the best way we have of getting people to comply with these very important regulations."

The only other way DHR's Division of Facilities Services can punish violators is to suspend or revoke their operating licenses, he said.

"That's pretty severe," Flaherty said. "We don't want to go that far sometimes, but we don't want to overlook ... the quality of life of our people."

The Department of Labor has not changed its policy because of the ruling, according to Assistant Commissioner Charles Jeffress. He said the department levies monetary penalties for violations of occupational safety and health and elevator safety regulations.

"We're studying the situation at this point," he said. "Whatever impact it has, it'll impact on all state agencies and the Legislature will have to respond to it."

Psychiatrist's Quick-Fix Ideas Help Relationships

By Anne C. Roark
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Dr. Aaron T. Beck's idea was simple: Change the way people think and you can change their lives.

Challenge a few unrealistic beliefs, alter some habitual thought patterns, and people will stop being depressed; they will lose their anxieties, kick their drug habits and give up alcohol.

Beck called the method "cognitive therapy." Despite considerable resistance from his fellow psychoanalysts over much of the past 30 years, the technique has proved quite successful — so much so that it is now one of the treatments of choice for a number of illnesses, ranging from depression to panic disorders.

Now the Philadelphia psychiatrist is offering his quick-fix therapy to those people who are not necessarily mentally disturbed or emotionally troubled but who, he believes, also desperately need help: couples whose relationships are in trouble.

At the urging of his followers, Beck has written his first pop book,

Even if they weren't depressed, Beck found, people in rocky relationships shared many of the same "thinking defects" as those who were clinically depressed.

Love Is Never Enough, a 323-page opus just released by Harper & Row and aimed not just at husbands and wives but all couples whose relationships are falling apart or at least need some retooling.

"Virtually everyone I talked to told me it was a great idea because typically people who most need help are the least likely to get it," Beck said in a recent interview.

Marriage counseling may seem an odd place for an eminent Ivy League professor of psychiatry to focus his attention. After all, in the hierarchy of the profession, family therapy is not exactly at the top of the list. And Beck, who has already written numerous scholarly books, years ago earned a permanent place in the annals of the profession with his famed Beck Depression Inventory, a scale of symptoms used almost universally to diagnose depression.

Yet with somewhere between 40 percent and 50 percent of all marriages ending in divorce and with countless others in distress, Beck long ago became convinced that there was a real need for different counseling techniques.

What's more, the courtly, good-humored professor claims to have more than just professional knowledge of committed relationships. A father of four and grandfather of seven, he has been married for 38 years to the same woman, Superior Court Judge Phyllis Beck.

Beck got involved in the business of marriages quite naturally, he said, when he was working with depressed patients, many of whom also had marriages that were in trouble.

Even if they weren't depressed, Beck found, people in rocky relationships shared many of the same "thinking defects" as those who were clinically depressed. While he credits one of his former students at the University of Pennsylvania, Norman Epstein, with first making that observation, Beck came up with the whole notion of defective thinking.

The idea came to him in the late 1950s shortly after he graduated from medical school at Yale and completed his training at the Philadelphia Psychoanalytic Institute.

At the time, he was trying to prove Freud's theory of depression — that it was hostility against a loved one turned inward. If Freud were right, Beck had reasoned, it would be possible to find evidence of hostility in the dreams of depressed patients. But that is not what Beck uncovered. Instead, he saw recurring patterns of distorted thinking: People who were depressed did not dream of hatred or revenge; they dreamed of defeat, deprivation, loss. They did not seek failure; they twisted reality to the point where they could not recognize success, even when it came their way.

Beck then began to wonder: Was it possible to change those thinking patterns? If they were changed, would the patient no longer be depressed?

The answer in both cases was yes. Cognitive therapy, the method that Beck devised for changing thinking patterns, is almost as easy to use as it is to understand, according to its practitioners, although many spend upwards of a year in training to perfect the technique.

With the help of hefty doses of reality testing and some painstaking self-discipline and role playing, inappropriate and destructive thoughts can be identified and replaced with more objective — and positive — forms of thinking. And instead of months and years of introspection and analysis, the whole process can usually be completed in 8 to 12 sessions.

therapy clinics to thousands of psychiatrists, psychologists and other mental-health professionals.

One of the peculiarities of relationships (and it is true whether the couple is married or not and whether they are heterosexual or homosexual), is that the individuals involved act perfectly normal and rational outside the relationship and "positively crazy within it," Beck told a group of therapists in Los Angeles recently.

"We've had couples watch videotapes of other distressed couples and they see precisely what is wrong. In their own relationships, they have no idea," he said.

What seems to be an innocent statement will provoke a fight simply because the person who hears the statement does "some automatic and quite inaccurate mind reading," he said. A wife, for instance, will think that she knows what her spouse is thinking when in fact she hasn't a clue, Beck said. Instead of assuming she knows what her husband is thinking, she ought to ask first. "Is this what you meant?" If it isn't, they should both keep talking — and listening — until they do understand one another, Beck said.

"Mind reading," he cautioned, "is not something anyone can do. We forget that."

Pair Cleans Using Soap And Laughter

By Mary Farrell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TUPELO, Miss. — As Martha May described the snake-in-a-crate incident, her partner, Martha Bullock, began to laugh.

It was the kind of laugh that started deep inside, tickled the ribs and rolled off the tongue, leaving her gasping for air. Hysterics, in other words.

Meet Martha May and Martha Bullock, the best of friends for 13 years and cleaning partners for four. They could take their act on the road if they wanted to, as a modern-day Lucy Ricardo and Ethel Mertz.

But who would be there to scrub toilets, make beds, dust picture frames and give the furniture the white-glove treatment?

Cleanliness is next to godliness for the "Spic and Span" duo of the maid industry, and they both have learned to accept their career choice with pride.

"I remember a home we cleaned that had an s-n-a-k-e," May said, with a slight shiver as she recalled her fear of the slithery creature. "It was in a crate bigger than a cedar chest. We named him Herb."

Bullock continued the story: "One day it crawled up on this stick and Martha (May) was leaning over the crate looking at it and I told her, 'Martha, you're my friend, but if you fall in there you're gone,'" she said.

Paranoia set in as the two went from room to room dusting, straightening and scrubbing, checking every so often to make sure the snake had not left his wooden shelter.

"We were both cleaning in the bedroom when I accidentally stepped on the cat's tail. The cat screamed: I thought I had stepped on the snake and ended up across the bed," May said, doubled over in laughter.

Of course, laughter hasn't always been a part of May's and Bullock's lives. Before they became a team, May was struggling to make her maid business work and Bullock was bored selling what she called "cardboard potato chips," a sort of snack food geared toward the health conscious.

"I dropped by Martha's and was in tears because I hated my job," Bullock said. "And she told me that I could always help her clean houses. I thought to myself, 'I hate cleaning my own house, so why would I want to clean anybody else's?'"

But Bullock soon found out that it was different, especially when she was getting paid for a job well done.

"On our first cleaning job, we got hired on the spot," May said. "We were asking a guy about the right kind of cleaning supplies to use and he hired us to clean his home that day. There we were in high heels, not even dressed to clean. When we got to his house, we discovered that his vacuum cleaner didn't work right."

The Associated Press

Ms. Bullock, left, Ms. May have worked together four years

So Bullock had to clean the entire carpet by getting on her hands and knees and vacuuming with just the hose tip. "It was the funniest thing I've ever seen," May said.

While most people consider house cleaning one of the least glamorous of career choices, Bullock and May have turned the world of dust rags and trash bags into sheer fun.

Although they've never been known to drag their feet at the expense of their customers, they will do a little "whistling while they work," dancing to the likes of Beethoven or some '50s and '60s classics.

"This is the most fulfilling job we've ever had," May said. "It's definitely the most fun. There are some things in this job that you can't put a monetary value on. It's dirty work. It's hard work. But we decided when we were going to do this, we were going to be different. We wanted to have fun."

As in: — They were cleaning a house and noticed that the owner was searching through the cabinets and refrigerator for something to eat. He was hungry, but had come up only with a jar of jelly. There was no bread. So Bullock dropped what she was doing and whipped up some homemade biscuits. She found out later that his wife had put him on a strict diet.

— They dressed up for the Christmas season in aprons that had reindeer with horns that blinked.

— For Halloween, they wore bats and spiders in their hair.

Mother Pens Sci-Fi Tales While Kids Are At School

By Jim Warren
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON, Ky. — In the afternoons, while Lynn Hightower's husband is at work and her children are at school, she travels to worlds we have not dreamed of.

The 31-year-old Lexington woman writes science fiction.

"I'm somewhere else when I'm writing," she says. "That may sound strange, but when I'm writing, I don't have to live in the everyday world."

When she returns to reality, however, she has had to face what most writers face, the process of getting published. She is familiar with rejection. Her first story was turned down by a magazine when she was only 16. Many more rejections followed.

But she kept trying, sustained, she says, by a supportive husband and a love for putting stories together.

Now, things are coming together. Hightower had a science fiction novel bouncing from publisher to publisher for the last few years. In August, Pageant Books agreed to buy it. The book, The Stars as Witness, is due out before year's end.

It is the first thing Hightower has sold.

"It was like being pregnant for five years and then the baby comes," she says.

As a writer, Hightower is interested in entertaining readers, not delivering some message about the meaning of life.

"Some writers do sit down and make a statement," she says. "But I can't see myself doing that. My motivation was always more along the lines of, 'Sit down and let me tell you this really neat story.'"

Hightower wrote her first novel when she was in fifth grade. It was a Nancy Drew-type mystery.

"One year at Jessie Clark school, I had a girlfriend, and we wrote a book together," she says. "She would write a chapter and end it with a cliffhanger. Then I had to figure a way out of the cliffhanger, write another chapter and leave her a cliffhanger to get out of."

At 16 she wrote a story about souls lost in mirrors. She knew nothing about the publishing game. But with the boundless optimism of youth, she sent the story to Redbook magazine.

She was surprised when it was rejected.

"I had a lot to learn. I sent a lot of stories to Ladies Home Journal before I ever found out they didn't accept anything not submitted by an agent."

Hightower does not expect the book to make her rich. But it is the culmination of a dream and also a beginning.

Quiz Will Test Your Knowledge Of Homosexuality

Dear Abby: Several years ago, you ran a "true or false" quiz titled "How Much Do You Know About Homosexuality?" I found it most illuminating and respectfully request that you run it again. — Still Learning In Scottsdale, Ariz.

Dear Still Learning: Aren't we all? Here it is:

How much do you know about homosexuality? Mark the following statements true or false:

1. Homosexuals commit more crimes than straight people. (True or False?)
2. Everyone is born straight, but some become gay because they have been seduced by a gay person early

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

in life. (True or False?)

3. You can always tell homosexuals and lesbians by the way they act, dress and talk. (True or False?)
4. With the proper therapy and motivation, a gay person can become straight. (True or False?)
5. Boys raised by domineering mothers and weak (or absent) fathers usually turn into homosexuals. (True or False?)
6. Gay people can never become mothers or fathers. (True or False?)

7. Homosexuals are more inclined to molest children sexually than heterosexuals. (True or False?)
8. If a person has one or two sexual experiences with someone of the same sex, he is gay. (True or False?)
9. The American Psychiatric Association stated that homosexuals are "sick." (True or False?)
10. Homosexuals can be legally married to each other under the law in the United States. (True or False?)
11. Most homosexuals try to convert young people into becoming gay also. (True or False?)

12. Children raised by gay parents (or gay people) usually become homosexuals themselves. (True or False?)

How did you score?
If you marked all 12 statements "False," you are very well-informed.

If you marked nine statements "False," you are fairly well-informed.

If you marked four or more statements "True," you have a great deal to learn about homosexuality, because all of the above statements are false!

Dear Abby: My 21-year-old daughter is getting married next month, and I am expected to pay for the bulk of the wedding cost. Her mother and I have been separated and divorced for more than four years. I asked for the divorce, but there were no other parties involved.

Six months after we separated, I met the lady I am now engaged to marry. (She is a very fine person.)

My ex-wife has "put her foot down" and says my fiancée cannot attend the wedding. My daughter gets along very well with my fiancée, but her mother seems to be running the show.

I want to be able to share this important event with the woman I love, and not have my ex-wife acting as though we were still a couple.

My fiancée is very understanding, but if I give in to my ex-wife, my fiancée will think I am a wimp. What words of wisdom can you offer? — Concerned In Charlotte

Dear Concerned: Since your fiancée had nothing to do with the breakup of your marriage, your ex-wife has no right to bar her from the wedding. Furthermore, money talks — so inform your ex-wife that unless you can bring your fiancée, you will feel justified in withdrawing your financial support.

She's Making Her List And Checking It Twice

Over the weekend, I kicked into Phase I of my Christmas timetable: making out the gift list. First, I list the names of all the people I am buying gifts for and then I record what to look for.

Under "Mother" I have listed, "Anything she doesn't have to dust." She has made it clear to all within the sound of her voice that she is trying to unload all those ceramic pigs and plaques that say, "If I get to drinking and ask you to stay for dinner ... don't do it." She has threatened that everything I buy for her I am going to get back. That's very depressing.

Under "Dad" I have written, "Something that ages well, can be stored and doesn't take up a lot of room." This is because he has an inventory of shirts and sweaters from Christmas Past still in their original wrappers. He wears a "Save the Whales" T-shirt.

Listed under my husband's name is, "Anything. Save sales slip." Money, size or taste is no object with him. Why should it be? He returns everything the week after Christmas and has it credited to the account.

The kids are easier to buy for. You could go into a mall, shoot off a cannon, and anything it hits, they need. It's a matter of priorities. Do you buy seat covers for a car that runs only when oysters are in season? Do they really need a $90 ski sweater when they have only one set of sheets for their beds? Should I shop like a mother — or make them happy for the first Christmas in their lives?

The list grows. There are business friends and friends I don't see enough of to know what they've got and hate or what they need, and, if I would get it, be sure they wouldn't hate it too. Or, if I did get what they want and loved, I'd run the risk of having them return it and find out how little it cost.

There's an entire category on my list that is marked simply "Strangers" and has eight or 10 spaces under it. These are for the people I haven't met yet, but will before Christmas Eve. They will enter my life suddenly and do some great service for me that will cause me to look at my husband and say, "Good grief, I don't have a gift for ..." (man who cleaned septic tank/returned package delivered by postman to his house by mistake/girl who gave me eye test for my driver's license, etc.). These gifts must be ageless, sexless, generic and cheap.

As I glanced down the list I thought, wouldn't it be wonderful to find one gift that you didn't have to dust, that had to be used right away, that was practical, fit everyone, was personal and would be remembered for a long time.

I penciled in "Gift certificate for a flu shot." It could change, but I've got to get on with Phase II.

Jury Indicts Bakker

Dortch told reporters in Clearwater, Fla., where he runs a ministry called Life Challenges, that he looked forward to being able "to tell my side of the story and to put this matter behind me and with God's help I know that I can face the future."

U.S. Attorney Thomas Ashcraft declined to comment, saying, "There has already been too much publicity on this already and we don't want any more."

Ms. Hahn, who works for a radio station in Phoenix, told a news conference she is willing to testify in court, but otherwise wants nothing to do with the case.

"I have lived with this for eight years," she said. "I refuse to be a slave to this any longer."

Two months after Bakker left PTL, his Pentecostal denomination, the Assemblies of God, dismissed him and Dortch.

According to the indictment, the Bakkers received bonuses totaling $3,465,000 from 1984 through 1987, and Dortch got bonuses totaling $550,000 although they were aware PTL was in poor financial condition.

The Bakkers returned to the Charlotte area in June, mounting an unsuccessful attempt to buy PTL, which filed for bankruptcy reorganization three months after Bakker left the ministry.

A U.S. Bankruptcy Court has been trying to find a suitable buyer for PTL's 1,700 acres of undeveloped property, satellite television network and Heritage USA theme park in Fort Mill, S.C., just over the North Carolina line.

The indictment said Bakker and Dortch raised at least $158 million from the lifetime partnerships sold to finance construction of a hotel at the theme park. PTL sold the partnerships from 1984 until spring 1987, promising free yearly lodging at the theme park in return for a one-time gift, usually $1,000.

More than 152,000 partnerships were sold.

The indictment said Bakker and Dortch oversold those partnerships, didn't tell partners about it and misled PTL board members about the ministry's finances.

Also indicted Monday were David Taggart, a former PTL vice president, and his brother, James, a former interior designer for PTL.

FBI Says 93 People Tied To Drug Ring

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The FBI announced today that 93 people tied to two Colombian drug cartels have been charged with importing cocaine, heroin and marijuana into the United States.

The people charged in the United States and abroad shipped drugs from South and Central America and other Caribbean countries and distributed the drugs through a network stretching from Miami to New York, Los Angeles and Europe, the FBI said.

U.S. attorneys' offices in Miami and Tampa, Fla., assisted in the investigation and most of the 93 were being charged in those two cities, the FBI said.

The operation, codenamed Cat-Com, led to the seizure of 11,000 pounds of cocaine, 211,000 pounds of marijuana and some heroin, according to the FBI.

The yearlong investigation "is the largest undercover operation ever directed toward the interworkings of the drug cartels based in Medellin and Cali, Colombia," FBI Director William Sessions said in a statement.

More than $1 million in cash and property has been seized and total seizures are expected to exceed $4 million, said the FBI director.

Sessions said undercover agents posed as experts in the communications field and equipped the traffickers with state-of-the-art electronic gadgetry, enabling the agents to identify leaders and assets possessed by the organizations.

The traffickers identified themselves to undercover agents as transporting drugs on behalf of cocaine-trafficking cartels headed by Colombian drug lords Pablo Escobar-Gaviria, Jorge Luis Ochoa-Vasquez and Jose Gonzalo Rodriguez-Gacha.

U.S. naval warships and U.S. Coast Guard cutters acted on information provided by the FBI undercover operation to interdict vessels carrying the drugs headed for the United States from South America.

In one instance, a sailboat named Naut-For-Fun was piloted by FBI sources hired by the drug traffickers. The sailboat contained nearly 900 pounds of cocaine from Colombia.

The FBI had planned to seize the drugs covertly and tell the traffickers that the sailboat had sunk with the crew lost at sea.

meeting Monday night, also approved the construction priorities for the next five years that would benefit from the bond.

Board members agreed to ask commissioners for a $25.7 million bond that, coupled with the sale of the J.H. Rose High School facility at $3.5 million, will be used to meet regulatory requirements and to build more classrooms and other areas as needed through attendance line, organizational and enrollment changes and through the Basic Education Program implementation. It also will be used for major renovations to roofs and for bus maintenance in the school system.

In other matters, the board re-elected George Williams as its chairman and Donovan Phillips as vice chairman for the coming year. According to the board's policy, the officers may serve no more than two consecutive elected terms in their office. Williams and Phillips are serving their second terms.

The bond issue would go about half way toward meeting the $50 million construction needs of the school system outlined in its long-range plan for the next 10 years.

The bond "certainly doesn't meet the 10-year need," board member Frank Grooms said. "My frustration is that we don't lead people astray that five years from now we won't be back."

The five-year construction schedule has been outlined in three phrases with the major priorities first. A consulting firm in Wake County will be hired to conduct a program study of the schedule.

The proposal to change Third Street School into a child development center for preschool students was approved by the board. Community representatives along with representatives of the Frank Porter Graham facility in Chapel Hill and the state Department of Public Instruction will be selected to plan for the program. Planning is expected to be completed in the summer with necessary modifications being made in the plan through its implementation in the fall of 1990.

As approved by the board in May, the kindergarten through third-grade students in the current Third Street attendance area will attend

Eastern, Falkland and Wahl-Coates schools in 1990.

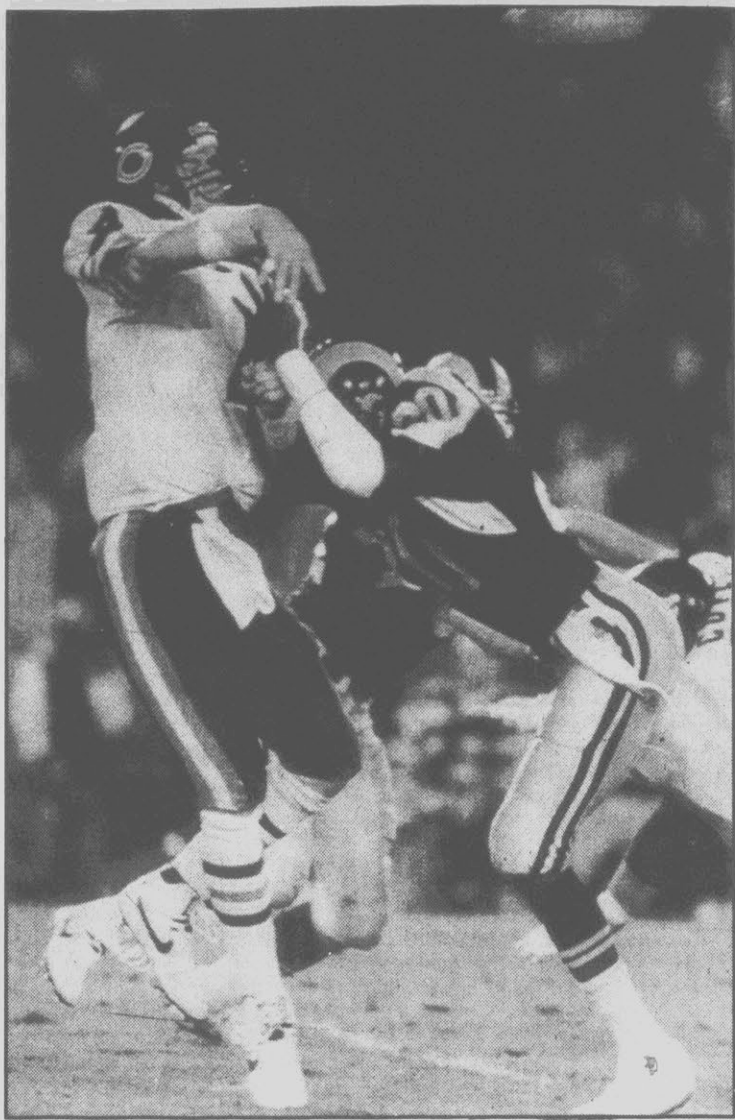

A revised mission statement was approved in addition to personnel recommendations.

Christy Folke, saying she represented parents at Wintergreen Elementary School, discussed concerns about busing. She said substitute drivers are not familiar with the routes, drivers are not giving adequate notice when they can't report to work, and "children are left at home."

Grooms said he wanted a report on the bus drivers — the number of applicants, the number hired, the turnover and absentee rates.

Steve Blades of the Greenville kindergarten through sixth-grade advisory council, asked for a better working relationship with the

Ellard, Rams Make Most Of Opportunity

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Henry Ellard was beaming.

Not only had the Los Angeles Rams ended a four-game losing streak and kept their playoff hopes alive, Ellard had — for a change — some time in the national spotlight.

And the Rams' wide receiver made the most of his chance Monday night, with six receptions for 132 yards in a 23-3 victory over the Chicago Bears.

Ellard's effort, which included a 31-yard touchdown to give the Rams some breathing room in the third quarter, catapulted him to the top of the NFL's receiving list this season. He has 1,248 yards on 74 catches.

It was a special night for Ellard, who has been generally overlooked during his NFL career.

"It helps to have a big game on Monday night against a team like the Bears," Ellard said when asked if he thought he might finally earn some recognition.

"This was definitely one of the biggest games of my career. We knew this was a chance for us to turn it around, and we did."

While Ellard may be generally unappreciated, he's appreciated by his teammates.

"If he's not one of the top three or four guys in the league, I don't know who is," Rams quarterback Jim Everett said of the sure-handed receiver.

"I hope he makes it to the Pro Bowl this year. He deserves it."

The victory gave the Rams, who went zero-for-November after a 7-2 start, an 8-6 record and keeps them in contention for a playoff berth.

The Bears, who already have clinched at least a wild-card playoff spot, are now 11-3.

The Rams, who outgained Chicago Bears 364 yards to 213 and never let the Bears get into anything resembling rhythm on offense, might owe some credit to the Green Bay Packers.

The Bears lost two key players, quarterback Mike Tomczak and defensive end Richard Dent, to injury in their 16-0 victory over the Packers last week.

Jim Harbaugh, a second-year pro out of Michigan, was making his first pro start, completed just 11 of 30 passes for 108 yards, with two interceptions.

But Chicago coach Mike Ditka said, "It wasn't Jim's fault. He did OK."

Harbaugh, however, somewhat apologetically, shouldered much of the blame.

"I didn't think I played that well

... I have no excuses," he said. "It was frustrating. Our defense played so well. I felt I let the team down."

Everett completed 17 of 31 for 251 yards and one touchdown, although he did throw three interceptions.

"I thought Jim Everett played a great game at quarterback," Rams coach John Robinson said. "And I'm not talking about statistics."

"And Greg Bell (98 yards on 28 carries) played a great game at tailback."

Robinson said he was particularly proud of the way the Rams controlled the line of scrimmage against one of the NFL's finest teams.

"I thought we played the physical part of the game very well," he said. "We gave game balls to our offensive line and defensive line."

McMahon Was Missed By Chicago

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANAHEIM, Calif. — The turning point for Chicago in its loss to the Los Angeles Rams came eight days earlier when the Green Bay Packers knocked out Bears quarterback Mike Tomczak and Pro Bowl pass rusher Richard Dent.

The Rams beat the Bears 23-3 Monday night, ending their own four-game losing streak and putting Chicago in jeopardy of losing the NFC Central Division for the first time in five years by simply wearing down Chicago's strength — its defense.

Los Angeles was able to do it because the Bears never could move the ball under third-string quarterback Jim Harbaugh, who entered the game having thrown just 52 passes in his NFL career. Over the first 58 minutes, when it counted, Chicago netted 151 yards.

The defense, without Dent, hung in for almost three quarters, limiting the Rams to just two field goals. With two minutes left in the third quarter, they trailed just 6-3, one turnover away from the lead.

But instead, Jim Everett hit Henry Ellard for a 31-yard touchdown with 1:43 left in the period and the dam broke — the Rams also scored on their next two possessions, controlling the ball for 8:35 — an unheard-of drive against the Bears — en route to Mike Lansford's third field goal.

"We wanted to play physically and I think we wore them down physically," Rams Coach John Robinson said.

"You don't dominate a team like the Bears, but we were able to control the game up front, on the offensive and defensive lines, where it counts."

While Chicago Coach Mike Ditka didn't fault Harbaugh, who was 11 for 30 for 108 yards, 41 of which came in the final 1:50, the second-year quarterback was less flattering about his own performance.

"It was frustrating," he said. "I felt I let the team down."

The Dent-less defense, meanwhile,

Duke Runs Past Stetson, 90-62

DURHAM (AP) — After his top-ranked team defeated Stetson 90-62 with Danny Ferry playing only about 13 minutes, Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski was able to look at the ups and downs of the game with equanimity.

"The good and the bad," he said. "The bad is that we were not able to play him and it was frustrating for Danny. The good part of it was that we faced something like this against a good basketball team; a team that's going to put a lot of pressure on us. I saw a lot more maturity from the backcourt tonight."

Duke improved to 5-0 with the victory Monday night, while Stetson suffered its first loss of the season against two wins.

Phil Henderson scored 17 points, while Alaa Abdelnaby had 16 and Ferry scored 14. John Smith added 12 points for the Blue Devils.

"I thought we ran into as good a pressure defense as you can run into," Stetson coach Dr. Glenn Wilkes said.

Duke grabbed a 10-point lead less than four minutes into the game and led 29-13 when Ferry got his third foul and went out with 11:09 left.

The Blue Devils went up by as many as 19 at 39-20, but Stetson closed within 11 as Randy Anderson, who finished with 20 points, hit a 3-point jump shot.

Duke was cold early in the second half and Stetson pulled within 52-44 on an Anderson free throw. But Stetson was unable to draw closer as Duke went on a 13-5 run to take a 65-46 lead with 11:15 left.

Ferry returned with 9:38 remaining and helped the Blue Devils forge a 29-point margin at 79-50 before fouling out at the 7:05 mark. Duke led by as many as 31 points before coasting to the final margin.

Duke outrebounded Stetson 49 to 27 with Abdelnaby collecting eight.

"They killed us on the offensive boards," said Wilkes. "The first half they had eight stick-backs and that's 16 points. That was the difference in the ball game when you take out the turnovers."

South Carolina.....57
Maryland.....51

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — For undefeated South Carolina, it's two down and one to go.

The Gamecocks are in the midst of a five-day span in which they play three games. But the worst should be behind the Gamecocks, who downed Maryland 57-51 on Monday night and will play host to East Carolina, 3-1, on Wednesday.

"Three games in five days is kind of tough," Coach George Felton said.

The problem is in the preparation.

ECU Challenges South Carolina

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina University's Pirates head southward Wednesday to face the University of South Carolina.

The game is set for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday night in Carolina Coliseum in Columbia, S.C.

The game is somewhat of a rubber match for the two teams, who are tied in their eight-game series with four wins each.

Both teams come into the game with wins behind them. East Carolina defeated Campbell University Saturday night, 86-72, while South Carolina defeated Clemson Saturday night, 90-70, and topped Maryland, 57-51, Monday night.

The ECU game will be the third in five days for the Gamecocks, who are 3-0 on the season. East Carolina is 3-1, having lost to No. 1 ranked Duke.

"Three games in five days is kind of tough," South Carolina coach George Felton, a former ECU aide, said. Felton pointed out that the lack of preparation time hurt against Maryland as the Gamecocks struggled against Maryland's 2-3 matchup zone.

Dozier said the tight game against the Terps could pay dividends in the future.

"This will help us prepare for games on the road," Dozier said. "You have to play games like this."

Neither squad was at its best. The Terrapins committed 20 turnovers and shot 38.2 percent in losing their first game in four contests. The Gamecocks had 17 turnovers and shot 39.7 percent in running their record to 3-0.

"It sure wasn't easy and it wasn't pretty," South Carolina coach George Felton said, "but it was a good win for us."

"I'm proud of the way we dug down deep and the way we hung in there and didn't fold when things got tight," he said. "Our offense was out of sync, but our defense came through."

Interestingly enough, it was the first time USC and Maryland played in Columbia in 18 years. While the two teams played at Maryland last year, the game was the first at the Carolina Coliseum since Dec. 16, 1970, when a fight erupted between the two teams. During the melee, Maryland coach Lefty Driesell was punched by a Gamecock player.

John Hudson led South Carolina with 15 points while Terry Dozier and Barry Manning each had 12. Hudson and Manning each pulled nine rebounds.

Hudson, a 6-8 senior forward, was the Gamecocks' leading scorer last season with a 13.5 average, while Dozier, a 6-9 senior forward, hit 13.4 per game.

Rangers, Cubs Make Trade

Palmeiro Heads To Rangers, Williams To Chicago

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — The Texas Rangers needed a hitter and liked Rafael Palmeiro. The Chicago Cubs wanted bullpen help and went after Mitch Williams.

And, after adding some left-handed pitchers, the teams Monday put together a nine-player trade that was baseball's biggest deal since 1980.

Rafael Palmeiro

Palmeiro, the second-leading batter in the National League last season, joined pitchers Jamie Moyer and Drew Hall in going to Texas.

Williams, among the least-hit relievers in the American League, went with pitchers Paul Kilgus and Steve Wilson, infielder Curtis Wilkerson and two minor leaguers to be named later to Chicago.

It was the biggest trade since the 1980 winter meetings when Texas and Seattle exchanged 11 players, among them Richie Zisk and Willie Horton. Four days before that, St. Louis and San Diego made an 11-player trade that included Rollie Fingers and Terry Kennedy.

"We were looking for an offensive player and we feel like we got our cake and can eat it, too," Texas general manager Tom Grieve said after getting Palmeiro plus pitching.

Palmeiro, 24, batted .307 this year, his first full season in the majors. He hit 41 doubles, eight homers and drove in 53 runs.

Palmeiro expressed disappointment in the trade.

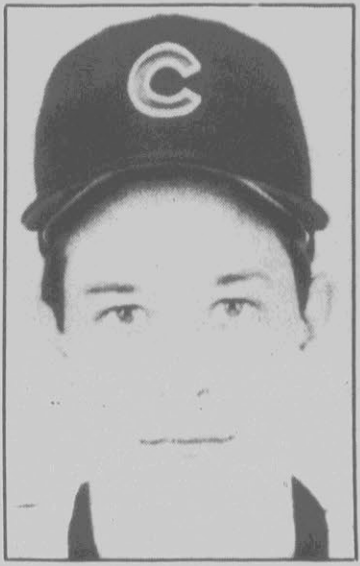

"I never expected this, not this early in my career, especially coming off a good year," Palmeiro said told WTVA television in Tupelo, Miss., his wife's hometown. "I really thought it wouldn't happen this year. I thought maybe two, three or four years down the road, but things happen and I just have to go on."

Grieve said it had not been determined whether Palmeiro would play first base or outfield. The Rangers have Pete O'Brien at first base and Oddibe McDowell, Pete Incaviglia, Ruben Sierra and Cecil Espy in the outfield.

Texas designated hitters batted .192 last season, the lowest ever for a

Ueberroth, Aaron At Odds

The Two Disagree On Progress Of Minority Hirings

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Commissioner Peter Ueberroth and home run king Hank Aaron don't quite agree on baseball's progress in hiring minorities the last two years.

Ueberroth made his final State of the Game address Monday at the winter meetings and said baseball was in sound financial condition and making progress in minority hiring.

Aaron questioned, however, if the progress was in the right direction.

"There has been progress but not enough in the front office and managerial level," said Aaron, a vice president with Atlanta.

Minorities were hired to fill 36 percent of all new baseball jobs in the last 18 months, according to the major league's annual report.

Ueberroth, who leaves office next March, rejected complaints that the minority hiring was only in clerical positions, but admitted there are still areas where improvement is needed.

Those people's positions should not be denigrated by anybody — and it's just a first step."

Aaron, however, doesn't see the power positions going to minorities.

"There are minorities getting interviewed but they're not getting the (front office) jobs," Aaron said.

In a separate interview with the Atlanta Journal-Constitution, Aaron said, "I just went to a farm directors' meeting, and there were two blacks and more white women."

"I think that's where he's getting his figures from. Why haven't we seen more black general managers and managers? Most of those jobs are only in the ticket department, and that's about it."

Ueberroth said there was obviously a lot of room for improvement.

"I'm personally disappointed in the lack of minority hiring in manager-general manager and public relations (directors)," Ueberroth said. "We must make progress in the GM and manager positions."

In the last 18 months, a total of 51 minorities were hired for major league and minor league managerial and coaching positions. Of that number, 29 were black and 22 Hispanic.

The report also showed baseball's financial status to be improving.

NORTH MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — John Russell of Snead's Ferry, N.C., and Frank Harris of Rocky Mount, N.C., combined for five birdies and a 5-under-par 66 on the Heritage Club course Monday to tie for the lead after one round of the 27th annual Carolinas PGA Pro-Am Championship.

Champ Still Linked To Other Positions

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Marshall's football team did a good job of fending off opponents through the season, and now team members say they hope they can fend off schools trying to attract their coach.
"We have to keep Coach (George) Champ because he's the nucleus of this team," said Nick McKnight, a linebacker who completed his eligibility this fall. "He made our success. This is a great city with great fans and it has a great coach."
Champ had been linked to coaching jobs at two Division I-A schools — East Carolina and Missouri — after his success at Marshall, but East Carolina already has hired someone else and Missouri is interviewing another candidate.
Furman defeated Marshall 13-9 Saturday in the Division I-AA playoffs, keeping the Thundering Herd from returning to the national championship game and letting the team turn its thoughts to 1989.
"I see some great teams here in the future. They'll be good next year," McKnight said.
Last year's Marshall team went 10-5 and lost to Northeast Louisiana 43-42 in the title game.
The Herd will lose 32 seniors, including All-America wide receiver Mike Barber, All-America tight end Sean Doctor, wide receiver Bruce Hammond and nine starters on defense.
"There's no way to replace the guys we lose from this team," said Matt Downey, a sophomore. "We won't be the same type of team. We'll still win, we'll just do it differently."
"I wish we could start playing tomorrow. I can't wait. I really can't wait."
Barber said he hopes for a shot in the National Football League, either via the draft or a free-agent tryout camp.
"It's up in the air right now," Barber said. "I'm just happy to have played here. My teammates, my coaches and the fans were great."
"I look back at all of the success we had and hope that we've started a tradition. The future is still bright here. There are good players and coaches left."

Garnica, Hamilton In Blue-Gray Game

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Senior offensive linemen Jeff Garnica and Darrell Hamilton have been chosen to play in the Blue-Gray Football Classic in Montgomery, Ala., on Dec. 24.
Garnica, a 6-foot-3, 262-pounder from Kettering, Ohio, is the 1988 All-Atlantic Coast Conference center and has been a starter since late in his freshman season.
Hamilton, 6-6 and 277, started every game the past two seasons at tackle.
"Both these guys played very well for us last season," said North Carolina coach Mack Brown. "I've said all year that Jeff may be the best center in college football and Darrell came on in the second half of the season to be one of the top linemen in our league."

Wake's King Earns ACC Rookie Honor

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Wake Forest forward Chris King was named the Atlantic Coast Conference rookie of the week Tuesday after leading the Demon Deacons to two victories in three outings last week.
King, a 6-foot-8 freshman from Newton Grove, N.C., scored 40 points and grabbed 19 rebounds in the three games, including 19 points and eight rebounds in an 82-77 victory over Wyoming. Wake Forest lost to Richmond and defeated Davidson.
Rick Fox, who scored 41 points in three games and shot 85 percent, was named the ACC player of the week Monday after leading North Carolina to victories over Stanford, Arizona and Missouri.
Fox, a 6-foot-7, sophomore from Nassau, Bahamas, hit 17 of 20 shots, grabbed eight rebounds and had eight assists and five steals.
Fox scored a career-high 24 points in North Carolina's 76-60 victory over Missouri in the championship game of the Tournament of Champions.
Fox, who was named the tournament's most valuable player, scored nine points and pulled down four rebounds in the Tar Heels' 79-72 victory over Arizona in the opening game.
Earlier in the week, Fox scored eight points and had three steals in North Carolina's 87-76 victory over Stanford.

Mets Continue To Show Interest In Murphy

ATLANTA (AP) — The New York Mets will continue discussions on a deal for Dale Murphy on Tuesday, said Atlanta General Manager Bobby Cox, who also talked to three clubs on Monday interested in acquiring a shortstop from the Braves.
Cox said most of the inquiries by other clubs during baseball's annual winter meetings here have been about Murphy, shortstops Andres Thomas and Jeff Blauser and pitcher Pete Smith.
The Braves, who finished last in the National League West last season, are looking for a third baseman and a power-hitting outfielder to go along with Murphy, if he is not traded.
Cox said he is not seeking to trade Murphy, and would only do so for three starting everyday players, which would include a leadoff hitter and power hitter.
"The Mets would be the hottest team," said Cox, who mentioned overtures from several teams, but no serious interest.
"To get Murphy, we would have to get at least three players to play in our lineup," he said, adding that there have been no formal offers.
"We've mentioned names, they shake their heads and say they'll get back to us," said Cox.
He said the Mets have not mentioned any players in a potential deal for Murphy, asking Cox to name the players he wanted.
He said Lenny Dykstra and Howard Johnson were discussed, but pitchers Dave West, Rick Aguilera and Sid Fernandez were not.

Becker Masters Lendl In Finale

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Boris Becker finally mastered Ivan Lendl at Madison Square Garden.

Becker, who had lost two previous Masters finals to Lendl, avenged the defeats Monday night by winning the season-ending championship in a thrilling fifth-set tiebreaker.

"I actually don't know what happened yet," Becker said immediately following the 4-hour, 42-minute match, longest in Masters history. "I think I'm going to realize it in the next couple of days. For the moment, I'm just very exhausted."

The final point of the 5-7, 7-6 (7-5), 3-6, 6-2, 7-6 (7-5) victory was the most memorable of the match. Becker climaxed the 37-stroke rally with a backhand that nicked the top of the net, popped straight up and landed inches away on Lendl's side of the court.

Lendl, back on the baseline poised for his next shot, could only shake his head in disbelief and watch Becker raise his arms in celebration.

It was that kind of year for Lendl, who failed to win a major title, lost his No. 1 ranking to Mats Wilander and saw his bid for a record fourth straight Masters title fall just short.

"If you don't call this unlucky, you don't call anything unlucky," Lendl said of the final point. "It's the way it's been all year. Hopefully, it's all behind me now."

Becker's emotional reaction to winning the championship brought back memories of his Wimbledon victories in 1985 and 1986. He draped a West German flag over his shoulders, threw his racket in the stands and rushed over to hug his coach and father.

"I'm playing the best tennis I've ever played," Becker said, "and that makes winning even sweeter. Even if I'd lost the fifth set, I would have felt it was a very good match."

The match, which ended just before midnight, moved at a glacial pace, primarily due to Lendl's deliberate play and frequent complaints about line calls and noisy fans. Becker filled in some of the pauses with playful gestures like pecking a lineswoman on the cheek after a favorable call.

Stanford Gets Rid Of Elway

Cardinal Teams Had Trouble Scoring Points In Shadow Of End Zone

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STANFORD, Calif. — He was praised for his recruiting, but the team's inability to score when it got close to the goal line was Stanford University Coach Jack Elway's downfall.

Saying it was time for "new direction," Elway, whose Cardinal had lost four out of the last five seasons, was fired Monday afternoon.

The not-so-surprising announcement by Stanford Director of Athletics Andy Geiger came just two weeks after the Cardinal wrapped up a 3-6-2 season.

"This extremely difficult decision came after a very careful evaluation and review of every aspect of our football program," said Geiger in a prepared statement.

Speculation that Elway was on the way out was rampant in the final weeks, but the actual move caught many — including players — unprepared.

Starting halfback Charlie Young said he was not aware that Elway would be fired until the announcement was made.

The why of the decision was hardly unexpected.

The Cardinal had a chance of winning every game this season except the one against Notre Dame. It missed opportunities to beat two bowl-bound teams — USC and Washington State — when it failed to score after getting a first down at the 3-year line in both those games.

Elway, who came from San Jose in 1984 after Paul Wiggin was fired following a 1-10 season, has been praised for his recruiting effort at Stanford, particularly the past three seasons. Every starting skill position player on offense returns next season, and five of them are sophomores or freshmen.

But Elway repeatedly was criticized during the season for Stanford's inability to score points after the team got close to the goal line.

While at Stanford, Elway compiled a 25-29-2 record. The Cardinal finished this season a disappointing 1-5-2 in the Pacific 10 Conference.

Elway also was head coach at San Jose State for five years and at California State University-Northridge for three years. His combined career record is 80-58-4.

Stanford said a search for Elway's successor would begin immediately.

The San Francisco Chronicle reported in early editions for Tuesday that Bob Stull, coach at Texas-El Paso, is considered a prime candidate for the job. Stull already is the leading contender for the coaching position at Missouri.

Stull has made no comment about wanting to come to Stanford if the job became vacant, as had been the rumor for more than a month. But his wife is from Sausalito and he was an assistant at Washington for 12 seasons.

Cardinal players expressed sympathy for their former coach.

"I just feel bad for the coach. It's a sad moment for him," said defensive back Kevin Scott.

Elway did not show up at his Stanford office Monday, said a woman who answered his phone. He could not be reached for comment.

Elway's son, John, starting quarterback for the Denver Broncos, told KMGH television station in Denver that he hadn't had a chance yet to speak with his father and didn't want to make any comment until he had done that.

During his tenure, Elway could only lead Stanford to one winning record, in 1986 when his team went 8-4.

Elway's firing came only about a month after Geiger said it was not worth speculating about replacing him as coach.

Geiger made the comment in connection with the Cardinal's 24-21 loss to Washington State and a subsequent statement by a television analyst that called Elway a "coach in trouble."

Elway's dismissal, Geiger said, is "not worth speculating about. I am not considering it."

Dodgers Interested In Getting Backman

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — The Los Angeles Dodgers, in an attempt to fill the void left by Steve Sax, talked on Monday to the New York Mets about acquiring second baseman Wally Backman.

Backman, a switch-hitter, hit .303 last season in 99 games for the Mets.

Sax, who became a free agent after the Dodgers won the World Series, signed a $4 million, three-year deal with the New York Yankees on Nov. 23.

Joe McIlvaine, the Mets' vice president of operations, said he wasn't sure the Dodgers have what the Mets are looking for in exchange for Backman. McIlvaine said the Mets were looking for a power hitter or a middle-inning reliever.

"They don't have the power I'm looking for at the major league level," McIlvaine said.

McIlvaine, however, made it clear the Mets have too many infielders and "something has to give."

The Mets have Backman and Tim Teufel at second, Howard Johnson, Gregg Jefferies and Dave Magadan at third and Johnson and Kevin Elster at shortstop. They would prefer to make Jefferies the regular third baseman.

The Mets also plan to continue talks with the Atlanta Braves about outfielder Dale Murphy.

McIlvaine said the Mets had made an offer but the Mets had not mentioned any names in the discussions.

"We just listened," McIlvaine said.

McIlvaine also said the Mets talked to Cleveland. Although he would not confirm the players involved, New York is interested in Joe Carter if the Murphy deal doesn't happen.

Rams Win 23-3

Most of the Rams said they weren't really worrying about their chances of making the playoffs, and instead are concentrating on winning their final two regular-season games.

"Let's see, if Mars is lined up with Jupiter, and this and that happens ..." Everett said, talking about the confusing playoff possibilities.

"We just have to win. But this was a season-type game for us. I think there may be some light at the end of the tunnel now."

The Rams' other scoring against the Bears came on Mike Lansford field goals of 25, 27 and 22 yards. The Bears' only points were provided by Kevin Butler's 39-yard field goal.

got just two sacks, on consecutive plays by Dan Hampton and Steve McMichael on the first series of the game. And the pressure was rarely there as Tom Newberry, Jackie Slater, Doug Smith and Duval Love were able to double-team Hampton, McMichael and Al Harris.

Sean Smith, who replaced Dent, had four tackles, but was never near Everett, who was 17 of 31 for 252 yards.

"Our offensive line just dominated," Everett said. "We got the running game going and that allowed us to mix up our plays."

"We played well at times, but we didn't play smart," said middle linebacker Mike Singletary, Chicago's defensive captain. "We played sloppy in certain areas and missed some tackles. We won't win in those situations."
And they didn't win Monday night.

Temple Off To A Rocky Beginning

By Jim O'Connell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The last time Temple started a basketball season like this was 1939. The last time Mark Macon had this type of problem was in March. This time, he can't blame Billy King. The Owls opened their season last weekend in the inaugural Tournament of Champions. It started with a 91-74 double overtime loss to Missouri and ended with a woeful 68-50 defeat against Arizona.

A tough way to start the season, especially since this is the first Temple team to start 0-2 since the 1939-40 season, when the Owls lost to the Pennsylvania Athletic Club and Oregon on the way to a 13-10 record.

John Chaney still thinks the tournament and tough early schedule is good for his young team, one trying to succeed after a season in which the Owls finished No. 1 in the poll with a 32-2 mark. They've already matched the two.

"These are a stepping stone," Chaney said Saturday after a 32 percent shooting effort in the consolation-game loss to Arizona. "These games were experience and we got it by not having a soft schedule. These were great games and they were away from home. Obviously, they were a way for our young people to grow as a group.

"Look at the teams that were here. Those are all possible Final Four teams and certainly they are in the Top Ten in the country."

In fact, the tournament was won by North Carolina, the only team Temple didn't face.

"Certainly, we were the caboose but we lost one in double overtime and even with tonight's score you don't understand how proud I am of these kids."

The leader of the kids is Macon, a sophomore. The leading freshman scorer in the nation last season at 20.6, Macon must assume a large portion of the ballhandling duties with the graduation of Howard Evans, he of only 77 turnovers in 34 games.

"Mark's learning as a sophomore to be a lot more patient," Chaney said. "I've been using him at the point, the '3' position and the '2' and my purpose for doing that is the sophomore year is, in my opinion, the most important year of any college player.

"It is the time you must develop the player here," he said, pointing to the side of his head. "Especially in the situation we have here. Mark was lucky last season in coming in as a freshman where he had a supporting cast. This year, we're requiring of Mark to be a leader — not in terms of mouth, but he's a leader in terms of the work ethic and all the other players listen to him. We sat down and talked about it and told him that's what I expect of him.

"And with a lot of attention being placed on him from the other teams, his stats may not look as good as they were last year, but believe me, he's just as good or even better and hopefully you shoot for junior and senior years when he can sprout his wings and have a command of just about every aspect of his game.

"A great player is only great when he can develop those players around him and not just be out there by himself. That is what Mark is going to be doing this year. His skill will have a chance to blossom, but as he goes, this team goes. We'll get better with the young players because of Mark."

Macon wasn't able to carry the Owls in either game at Charlotte, N.C.

The final game of the season for Temple last March was a 63-53 loss to Duke, one step from the NCAA Tournament Final Four.

Cameras focused on Macon as he left the floor after hitting only six of 29 shots. It was an inspiring performance that capped the defensive career of the Blue Devils' Billy King.

Macon never publically said what he thought about that game, because he was off-limits to the media. He isn't any longer, and so he stood and answered questions about two poor shooting performances to start the season.

"We got good shots they just didn't fall," Macon said after the Owls went 23-for-62 and 19-for-60, respectively, a tournament effort of 34 percent from the field.

Macon started the season like he had heard the King was dead.

He made five 3-pointers in the first half as the Owls jumped to a 33-25 halftime lead over Missouri.

Then the Tigers went to a press and the shots weren't there as they were in the half-court offense. Macon finished 9-of-23 against Missouri, hitting a field goal with 13:52 left in regulation and then being blanked until the last minute of the first overtime.

Arizona came at the Owls with a 1-3 zone and a chaser assigned to Macon. He started hot again, hitting three 3-pointers as he finished the half with 15 points. But the Owls were out of the game when a 5-0 run gave the Wildcats a 15-point lead with 15:54 to play.

Macon, who finished 6-of-18, was asked if he had seen defenses like these before.

"Of course. It's not like I haven't seen them before. I did in high school and there's no difference in the transition," the former Michigan prep player of the year said. "These teams played great defense. They are great teams."

Temple goes next on Saturday at Atlantic City, N.J. against Kansas. Then the schedule gets even tougher, with road games at Villanova, North Carolina State, Notre Dame and Nevada-Las Vegas.

Macon remains confident.

"We had good shots; we just didn't make them. We are working together and we will learn," he said. "We'll be all right."

Harris Leads AP All-East Team

By Herschel Nissenson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Quarterback Major Harris, who led West Virginia to a No. 3 national ranking and a shot at college football's national championship, was named to the Associated Press All-East team for 1988 today along with six of his Mountaineer teammates.

Harris, a sophomore, is one of six underclassmen on the 24-man team. The others are Curvin Richards, Pitt's freshman running back, and four juniors — wide receiver Reggie Rembert and linebacker Chris Haering of West Virginia and defensive tackle Rob Burnett and linebacker Terry Wooden of Syracuse.

Harris finished 28th nationally in total offense with 213.4 yards a game but he had the highest average per play — 8.3 yards. The 6-foot-1, 207-pounder completed 92 of 160 passes for 1,749 yards and 13 touchdowns and carried 121 times for 599 yards. His total offense of 2,348 yards is the third highest in West Virginia history.

Richards, a true freshman, was called upon when Adam Walker was injured in the fourth game of the season. He responded with 1,228 yards and his average of 111.6 was 11th best in the country. In the last eight contests, he averaged 140 yards a game.

Besides Harris, Rembert and Haering, other West Virginia players on the first team are offensive tackle Rick Phillips, center Kevin Koken, defensive tackle Chris Parker and defensive back Bo Orlando.

The third-ranked Mountaineers will face No. 1 Notre Dame in the Fiesta Bowl on Jan. 2.

Phillips, Paul and Wooden are the only repeaters from 1987 first team.

Syracuse is represented by six players, Pitt by four, Boston College three, Navy two and Penn State and Rutgers one apiece.

The rest of the offensive team consists of tight end Kevin Voss of Navy, wide receiver Tom Waddle of Boston College, offensive tackle Doug Widell of Boston College — his brother, David, made last year's team at the same position — guards Mark Stepnoski of Pitt and Joe Wolf of Boston College and fullback Daryl Johnston and placekicker Kevin J. Greene of Syracuse.

Rounding out the defensive unit are linemen Burt Grossman of Pitt and Troy Holland of Navy, linebacker Jerry Olsavsky of Pitt, defensive backs Chris Ingram of Syracuse and Eddie Johnson of Penn State and punter Matt O'Connell of Rutgers.

Waddle is the nation's sixth leading receiver with 6.3 catches a game. In all, he caught 70 passes for 902 yards. Rembert caught only 21 passes but he averaged 22.7 yards per reception and seven of them went for touchdowns.

Johnston is the quintessential fullback — an outstanding blocker who also can run with the ball. He gained 566 yards on 118 carries this season.

Barry Sanders arrives home after trip to Japan

Sanders Suffers Through A Rally

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STILLWATER, Okla. — The welcome home rally given to Heisman Trophy winner Barry Sanders on his return from Tokyo lasted about as long as one of his NCAA-record 39 touchdown runs. That suited Sanders just fine.

"It's becoming a hassle," the Oklahoma State junior said of the attention he has received of late. "I wish people would consider the way I feel about it (the Heisman), that it's no big deal."

Sanders, who broke Marcus Allen's single-season rushing record of 2,342 yards with a 257-yard game in a 45-42 victory over Texas Tech in Tokyo on Sunday, said all season that he truly didn't care whether he won the Heisman. He reiterated that point Monday.

"It's a tremendous award ... maybe in 20 years it will hit me," said Sanders, who finished with 2,553 yards and became Oklahoma State's first Heisman winner. "But right now it's just another award."

The rally in Sanders' honor lasted only about five minutes. The Cowboys were cheered loudly by a crowd of about 1,000 as they got off buses they had taken from Dallas-Fort Worth airport.

Many of the players stood in front of and alongside a stage set up on the Cowboys' practice field as university officials and Coach Pat Jones addressed the crowd.

Jones thanked the fans for their support and introduced the team captains — David Bailey, Garrett Limbrick, Chris Stanley, Mike Gundy and Hart Lee Dykes. Sanders, also a captain, was introduced last.

"On behalf of my teammates I want to thank you guys for coming out here today," Sanders told the crowd. "We have one more favor to ask. We want to get these seniors 10 wins. With your support, I'm sure we can pull out a victory."

The Cowboys, 9-2, play Wyoming in the Holiday Bowl in San Diego on Dec. 30.

After the ceremony, Sanders was whisked away by an assistant coach and met briefly with the media. He said he realized reporters would continue making demands on his time, but added "I'll just stay away from it as much as possible if I have to."

On whether he would return to Oklahoma State for his senior year, Sanders said flatly, "I'll be here next year."

The Gamecocks defeated Clemson 90-70 on Saturday evening, giving Felton and company a day to prepare for Maryland. The lack of practice time showed on offense as the Gamecocks struggled against the Terrapins' 2-3 matchup zone.

"We were a bit disoriented on offense," point guard Brent Price said.

Price made just two of nine field goals — and the Gamecocks overall made a meager 39.7 percent and committed 17 turnovers while still managing to win for the third time in as many games.

"We didn't know what kind of defense Maryland would be bringing here. ... We didn't have time to work on their defense," guard Barry Manning said, "and they did a great job of picking their defense and running it."

The game was tight most of the way. Maryland were up by eight with 9:29 to go in the first half, but the Gamecocks rallied to take a 28-23 lead with 3:33 left on Joe Rhet's 12-foot jumper. The Terrapins battled back to tie it at 29 at the half.

South Carolina led 47-41 with 5:15 left on a 3-pointer by Price, his first points of the game. Maryland cut the lead to 47-46 and had a chance to tie it, but Tony Massenburg missed a free throw with 3:34 left.

Price then hit a 3-pointer with 3:01 left to make it 50-46. Moments later, Terry Dozier stole an inbound pass at halfcourt and raced down for a dunk to give the Gamecocks a 52-46 lead with 2:16 remaining.

The Terrapins, 3-1, cut the lead to four, but Manning scored five straight points to give the Gamecocks a 57-48 lead with 17 seconds left.

"It sure wasn't easy and it wasn't pretty," Felton said, "but it was a good win for us. I'm proud of the way we dug down deep and the way we hung in there and didn't fold when things got tight. Our offense was out of sync, but our defense came through."

John Hudson led South Carolina with 15 points, while Dozier had 12 — eight in the second half. Manning had 12. Both Hudson and Manning had nine rebounds each.

Jerrold Mustaf led Maryland with 13 points, 11 coming in the second half. Massenburg added 10 points and 10 rebounds for the Terrapins, who shot 38.2 percent and turned the ball over 20 times.

"It was a pretty even ballgame, and we did a good job of defending and frustrating them," Maryland coach Bob Wade said. "We took them out of the game."

"We tried to control the game," Wade said. "All in all, I thought we did a fine job."

The game was the first time Maryland has played at the Carolina Coliseum since Dec. 16, 1970, when a fight erupted between the two teams. In the melee, Maryland coach Lefty Driesell was punched by a Gamecock player.

Mocnik scored 13 points and Chris Springs added 12 points, eight rebounds and five assists for the Camels.

In the second overtime, the Bulldogs opened a 91-84 lead before the Catamounts rallied to cut the lead to 92-91 with 27 seconds left.

Western Carolina twice missed potential game-winning shots in the closing seconds of regulation and first overtime. With the score tied at 69 in regulation, Catamount center Terry Miller's shot was blocked by Moise Preston with one second left.

team since the DH's inception in 1973.

Chicago's 3.84 earned run average was third-worst in the NL and its short relievers were not effective. Rich Gossage led the corps with 13 saves and had a 4.33 ERA.

"We wanted something to help our bullpen and everybody in baseball knows Mitch Williams has one of the best arms around," Cubs general manager Jim Frey said.

The Cubs felt fortunate to get someone they consider a stopper without having to trade shortstop Shawn Dunston. Several teams offered bullpen help in return for Dunston, with Montreal making Tim Burke available.

Williams, 24, was 2-7 with 18 saves and a 4.63 ERA. The left-hander pitched in 67 games and his 231 relief appearances in the last three seasons are the most in the AL.

Williams held opponents to a .203 batting average, the second-lowest among AL relievers with more than 50 innings. His problem has always been control. He has walked 220 in 2742-3 major league innings.

Kilgus, 26 and left-handed, was 12-15 with a 4.15 ERA in his first full season with Texas. His three shutouts tied the team record for a left-hander and ranked him fifth in the league.

Wilson, a 24-year-old left-hander, went 15-7 with a 3.16 ERA at Class

AA Tulsa. He pitched three games for Texas in September and was 0-0 with a 5.87 ERA.

The Rangers, who earlier in the day acquired reserve infielder Bobby Meacham from the New York Yankees for Bob Brower, were able to make Wilkerson available. Wilkerson batted a career-high .293 with 28 RBI in 117 games.

Moyer and Hall also are left-handers.

Moyer, 26, was 9-15 with a 3.48 ERA and allowed three earned runs or less in 23 of his 30 starts. He has pitched more than 200 innings in each of the last two seasons.

"I was very surprised," Moyer told The Associated Press by telephone after returning from a vacation in the Virgin Islands. "I hadn't heard any rumors. I hadn't heard anything."

"I look at it as a good opportunity. I couldn't say what Texas' record is, but they've got a good young team, some power and good pitching."

Hall, 25, was 4-3 with 19 saves and a 2.34 ERA for Class AAA Iowa. He went 1-1 with a 7.66 ERA in 19 relief appearances for the Cubs.

Shula Won't Pass Early Judgment

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Miami Dolphins coach Don Shula says information that has surfaced in the past week about possible drug use on the team is "certainly serious" but so far involves only allegations and innuendo.

"To me it would be very unfair to indict a football team or indict a player or certain players on allegations," Shula said Monday. "As of now, I don't think anything has been completely determined."

The NFL last week suspended wide receiver Mark Duper for violating the league's substance abuse policy. Then, a newspaper reported that a suspect in a $3-million cocaine deal has frequented team practices since 1985.

"If there is anything going on, I'm in favor of finding out rather than not knowing," Shula said. "The things that have come out are certainly serious and are being looked into. Hopefully it'll prove the player or players aren't involved."

The developments are just the latest chapter in what has been Miami's worst season in recent years. The Dolphins, perennial title contenders from the early 1970s through the mid-1980s, are out of the playoff race and have lost more games than any of the 26 teams Shula has coached.

"The guys that have given me everything that they have to give — you can't do anything but encourage those kind of people," Shula said. "If there are some others that aren't doing that, it's important that we find that out before next year."

The Dolphins have lost five straight, the longest such streak in Shula's career. Sunday's 31-28 loss to Indianapolis dropped their record to 5-9, but the game was overshadowed by the team's problems off the field.

The suspect in the cocaine deal, John Rafael Gomez, told police he is a friend of Duper. Police said they have no evidence to link any Dolphins with Gomez's alleged criminal activities, although they searched his home and seized pictures of him with at least three Dolphins.

"They're so vulnerable — a lot of temptations out there," Shula said. "That's what you continually warn them about."

The Miami Herald on Sunday published a picture of Gomez with wide receiver Mark Clayton.

"People start digging for certain things when we're not winning," Clayton said. "If we were winning, I don't think a lot of those things would've never come up."

Now, fans and the media are speculating about drugs being a possible explanation for some of the team's poor play. Shula did not directly answer the question of whether he suspects drug use on the team.

"Until something's proven, I'm not going to go on allegations and innuendo," he said. "I just don't tolerate anything but full attention in meetings and full effort in practice."

But the Dolphins bear no resemblance to the Miami teams that have played in five Super Bowls and have won at least 10 games 13 times since 1970.

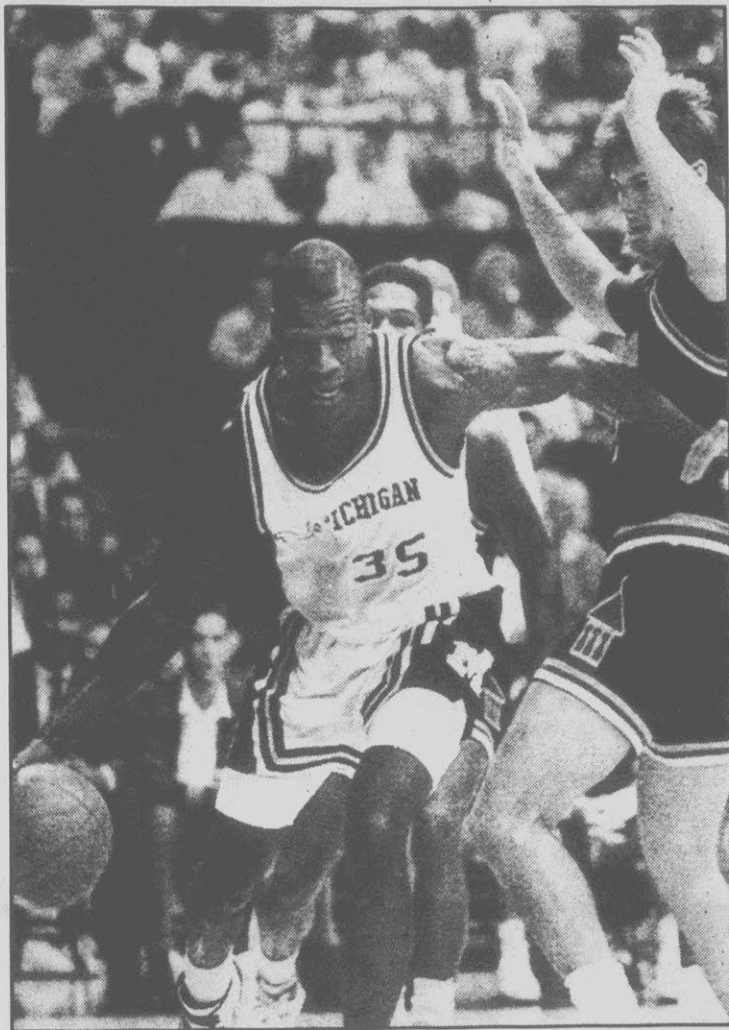

"We're trying as hard as we can, and we keep coming up short," said rookie safety Jarvis Williams, one of the team's few bright spots.

The Dolphins have lost their past three games by 10 points, but they also were blown out by the Chicago Bears (34-7) and Buffalo Bills (31-6). Sunday's loss dropped Miami to 0-8 against AFC East teams; in three of those games, the opponent won without scoring a touchdown.

The players have promised to keep trying in the final two games, at home against Cleveland next Monday and then at Pittsburgh.

"If you fold it in with two games left to go," linebacker Rick Graf said, "it's going to be that much easier when things are going tough in the future to quit."

DeVoe Happy To Get Out With Win

By Barry Wilner
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Don DeVoe likes the way the cadets play. He just doesn't like how well they play against his team.

"I love those guys from the military schools," the Tennessee coach said Monday night after the 16th-ranked Volunteers squeezed past Virginia Military Institute 84-82 in double overtime. "They hustle and they believe they can win."

They almost did win, too.

The underdog Keydets had Ramon Williams at the foul line with two seconds left in the overtime. Williams hit one shot for a 76-76 tie, but missed the other and the teams headed for a second overtime.

VMI tied the game 82-82 on two free throws by Damon Williams, Ramon's twin, with 11 seconds left. Tennessee's Greg Bell missed a 3-point attempt with five seconds left, but Clarence Swearingen rebounded and tried a reverse layup that rolled out. Mark Griffin came down the lane and tipped in the winning points with two seconds to go.

"VMI did everything you've got to do to win a game on the road against a bigger team," DeVoe said. "It was a magnificent job their players did. They never gave up."

But a close loss wasn't nearly enough for Keydets coach Joe Cantafio.

"It was a heck of a college basketball game — double overtime and all that," Cantafio said. "We had our chances, but that's how the game is. We're disappointed. There's no consolation in a game like this one."

Ramon Williams, who led VMI with 28 points, said the Keydets "came out with nothing to lose. We weren't nervous and we didn't really feel any pressure. We just came out and played ball."

Dyron Nix led the Vols, 4-0, with 25 points.

In other games involving ranked teams, it was No. 1 Duke 90, Stetson 62; No. 2 Michigan 98, Tampa 65; and No. 18 Connecticut 93, Marist 71.

Tennessee led almost the entire game until Damon Williams hit a 3-point shot with three seconds left in regulation to tie it 69-69.

Tennessee scored first in the second overtime on a slam dunk by Nix, but Michael Williams tied it for the Keydets. Doug Roth tipped in a miss with 1:22 left for an 80-78 Tennessee lead, but Lennon Mings responded for VMI with 1:02 to go.

VMI got the ball back with 41 seconds remaining, but Swearingen stripped the ball from Ramon Williams and Roth slammed home a dunk on a fast break with 25 seconds left for an 82-80 lead. Damon Williams' foul shots tied it, setting the stage for Griffin's winning tip-in.

No. 2 Michigan 98, Tampa 65

Glen Rice scored 29 points as the Wolverines improved their record to 6-0. Rumeal Robinson added 18 points, Loy Vaught 17 and Sean Higgins 16.

The Division II Spartans, 3-1, were led by Bryan Williams with 15 points and Drexel Deveaux with 13.

"I enjoyed playing them. They presented problems to us early," Frieder said. "They made us execute and do the things we have to do to win. This was a game we were supposed to win, and we went out and won it."

No. 18 Connecticut 93, Marist 71

Cliff Robinson and Tate George, inspired by Connecticut's first Top 20 ranking in 21 years, led the Huskies to their homecourt rout. Robinson scored 27 points, pulled down nine rebounds, had five steals and blocked four shots. George had his best night of the season with 16 points and 10 assists.

"Cliff's second half was the best job he's had in the three years I've coached him," UConn coach Jim Calhoun said.

"It makes us more aware we can't take things lightly," George said of the national ranking. "It gets you psyched up."

Marist was led by Yugoslavian Olympian Miroslav Pecarski with 23 points.

UNRANKED

Eric Brown scored 38 points, including Miami's first 15 points in the second half, in the Hurricanes' 88-72 victory over Bethune-Cookman. Brown hit 12 of 13 shots for the Hurricanes, who shot 67 percent.

Steve McGlothlin's 17 points, including eight straight to open the second half, led New Mexico State past New Mexico 70-66. New Mexico, hit only one field goal in the final 3:50.

Senior Jeff Grose had 32 points, 26 in the second half, as Northwestern beat Rutgers 75-69 in a game that saw 44 turnovers, 31 in the first half. Rutgers' Anthony Duckett was ejected for fighting.

Irish Lead DR Poll

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Notre Dame, despite being idle Saturday, boosted its lead in The Daily Reflector Computer Rankings, and held to first place.

The Fighting Irish, 11-0, finished the regular season with 3,660 points while Southern California, 10-1, finished with 3,588 points. The Irish, up by only 16 points going into the final week of the regular season, boosted their lead due to victories by defeated opponents on the second and third levels.

Miami, Florida, in sixth place last week, vaulted into third place with 3,380 points. The Hurricanes ended the regular season with a 10-1 record.

Fourth place is held by Florida State, down a spot from last week. The Seminoles, 10-1, had 3,070 points. Fifth place is held by Wyoming, 11-1, with 2,984 points.

The second five consists of UCLA, Nebraska, Auburn, West Virginia and Louisiana State, in that order.

Rankings are based on success against the strength of schedule. Points are awarded for each game a team wins. Additional points are awarded for each game victims win on the second and third level of competition.

Of the 34 bowl teams this year, each team ranked in the Top 20 will play but one. Arizona, 7-4, was left out of the bowl picture this year. The Wildcats are ranked 13th this week.

The lowest ranked team to make it to a bowl game is Fresno State, ranked 56th. Fresno was 9-2 on the year, and will play in the California game as the champion of the Big West Conference.

The lowest ranked team to earn a bowl berth without a tie-in was Iowa, ranked 50th. The Hawkeyes are 6-3-3 on the year and will face N.C. State in the Peach Bowl.

The Top 20 teams, plus the standings of the remaining Atlantic Coast Conference teams, East Carolina and its opponents.

Artist's conception depicts Pioneer 12 and its probe approaching Venus to begin its study

Scientists Mark 10th Year Of Pioneer 12 Venus Probe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. — Scientists offered a warning as they celebrated the 10th anniversary of the launch of the Pioneer 12 space probe, which has helped demystify the cloud-shrouded planet Venus.

"Venus is not a living, breathing example, but a very dead example of what a polluted atmosphere is like," said Donald Hunten, a professor of planetary sciences at the University of Arizona.

Venus has a history that suggests devastation by an extreme greenhouse effect and extensive, naturally occurring stratospheric pollution — damage that researchers said may have particular meaning for the Earth's inhabitants.

But the words of warning Monday were mixed with messages of congratulation. The success of the mission, originally expected to last for 243 days, has delighted researchers who now predict that the spacecraft will continue providing information for four more years before its fuel supply runs out.

The spacecraft has already generated 10 trillion pieces of data.

Researchers are seeking clues to the mysterious planet, which is similar in size, mass and density to the Earth. Scientists wonder if there are clues to the Earth's future buried in the 5 billion-year history of Venus.

So far, the probe has helped map 93 percent of Venus' searing-hot surface and helped to reveal continents, high mountains and deep canyons like the Earth's ocean trenches.

Pioneer 12 has provided a new understanding of volcanic activity and land formation on Earth and has also revealed a severe greenhouse effect on Venus that researchers believe may be the cause of a surface temperature of 900 degrees Fahrenheit.

"We used to think when I was in school that Venus and Earth were twin planets," said Hunten. "More recently, we've discovered they are really not very alike at all."

It appears to have been 4 billion years since Venus, which has no oceans today, may have had enough water vapor to form one, he said.

Information now suggests that high temperatures from the planet's greenhouse effect, in which clouds or airborne pollution trap the sun's heat near the planet's surface, may partially account for the differences between Venus and Earth, researchers said.

Additionally, extreme stratospheric pollution on Venus, where chlorine is found at levels 100 to 1,000 times the concentration found above Earth, could further explain conditions on Venus and provide a warning for our own future.

"What I think it means to Earth is that we have to take these threats to heart," said Hunten. "We should not ignore these warnings. These two examples of stratospheric pollution and the greenhouse effect are real. It is happening on the Earth."

Scientists who gathered at NASA's Ames Research Center to celebrate the mission's anniversary also urged a return to unmanned probes in addition to the far more costly manned missions now popular.

Steven Dorfman of Hughes Aircraft Co., a major government space contractor, called for "a return to a mix of small and large programs," pointing out that the Pioneer project was relatively cheap at less than $200 million in today's dollars.

Dorfman said the U.S. sent 36 planetary launches aloft in the 1960s, but only 11 in the 1970s and just two are scheduled for this decade.

Next year, the Magellan mission will team up with Pioneer to provide high resolution radar mapping of the geography of Venus. In February 1990, Pioneer will team up with the Galileo orbiter as it passes Venus on its way to Jupiter.

Pioneer's unique variable orbit, which responds to the effect of solar gravity on Venus, has allowed the spacecraft to come as close as 150 kilometers — 93 miles — to Venus and as distant as 2,300 kilometers, or 1,426 miles.

Democrats Choosing Sides To Pick New Party Chief

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Democrats are already choosing up sides in the race to select a new party chairman following Paul Kirk's decision not to seek a second term, with a forecast of a bruising, two-month struggle ahead.

"It makes it much more difficult to arrive at a choice without some bloodshed," Democratic Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen of Texas said Monday after Kirk's announcement that he would step aside.

Among those stepping forward immediately were Ron Brown, a Washington lawyer, longtime party activist and ally of Jesse Jackson in this year's presidential campaign. He scheduled a news conference for today to declare his plans officially.

Others expressing interest in the post were former Rep. Mike Barnes of Maryland who declared his candidacy in a mailgram sent to Democrats by his state's governor and senators on Monday, and Michigan party chairman Richard Weiner, who was flying to Washington to meet with reporters in an afternoon session.

Former Rep. Jim Jones of Oklahoma, who advocates a three-year television advertising campaign leading to the 1992 presidential election, said he would make a formal announcement next week. Former Rep. Jim Stanton of Ohio also has been exploring a race and said late Monday he was "looking forward to a candidacy."

In contrast to the Democratic maneuverings, Republicans are expected to ratify without dissent President-elect George Bush's selection of campaign manager Lee Atwater to be GOP national chairman.

Kirk exited at a news conference in Washington where he said the Democratic Party is better off politiically and financially than it was four years ago. He said he decided when he took the job in 1985 that he would keep it for four years. "My purpose was to give something back and to leave something better than existed before I was given the honor and the opportunity to serve," he said.

Kirk said he will practice law when his term ends in February but that he will not become a "political dropout."

He said he expects a "spirited contest" among the candidates to replace him, but brushed aside forecasts of a bloodletting. The Democratic National Committee meets in Washington Feb. 9-10 to make its selection.

Bentsen, who was the party's vice presidential candidate this fall, said Kirk's decision "makes it much more difficult to arrive at a choice without some bloodshed. ... Paul was my candidate," said the Texas senator, who joined a chorus of party officials praising Kirk's work.

Newly elected Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell said, "I and many other Democrats across the country will miss Paul's leadership."

Kirk, a 50-year-old Massachusetts native, was urged publicly and privately by party officials to accept a second four-year term, in part to head off a battle shortly after the loss of the presidential campaign.

Air Force Leader Dies In F-16 Crash

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MADRID, Spain — The commander of U.S. Air Force troops in the Mediterranean died when the F-16 jet fighter he was flying crashed during a training mission, the Air Force said today.

Maj. Gen. W.S. Harpe was killed in the crash Monday near the Torrejon air base outside Madrid, Air Force spokesman Sgt. Kenneth Fidler told The Associated Press.

Harpe, who was 51, commanded the 16th U.S. Air Force, which has 15,000 troops stationed at 10 American bases, including two in Spain, three in Italy, two in Greece and three in Turkey.

Fidler said the crash occurred near the town of Chiloeches about 20 miles northeast of Torrejon. Maj. Keith Gillet, spokesman for the 16th Air Force at its headquarters at Torrejon, said Harpe was piloting an F-16 in formation with three others near the end of a 90-minute training flight when the plane crashed.

Col. Juan Antonio Martinez Ortiz, a Spanish Defense Ministry spokesman, said the jet crashed into a mountain.

An investigation was under way to determine the cause of the crash.

"I don't think we've had a loss like this happen before in the Mediterranean," Gillet said. "It's always a blow when we lose a general officer. He traveled a lot, met a lot of people and was a very popular commander throughout the 16th Air Force."

Supreme Court Will Look Into High Punitive Damage Awards

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Businesses that are the target of lawsuits seeking big payoffs from "deep pockets" are getting a Supreme Court hearing in their challenge to multimillion-dollar punitive damage awards.

The justices said Monday they will decide whether such awards violate a constitutional ban against excessive fines.

A ruling, expected by July, could determine the future of a growing trend in U.S. courtrooms that has sparked legislative debate nationwide. At stake are huge sums of money awarded in a wide variety of lawsuits.

The high court, which failed in the past to resolve the question, will tackle the issue in an appeal by a Texas-based waste collection company ordered to pay $6 million to a Vermont competitor.

A number of business groups, including the National Association of Manufacturers, say the situation is critical.

Because of their "deep pockets," manufacturers are bearing "the brunt of a massive and discriminatory increase in punitive-damages verdicts," the association said.

The term punitive damages applies to awards aimed at both punishing and deterring misconduct.

One of the questions confronting the high court is whether punitive damages must bear any specific relationship to compensatory damages awarded for actual injuries.

The high court in May declined to decide the constitutionality of very large punitive-damage awards. In that case, it upheld on narrow, procedural grounds a $1.8 million judgment against an insurance company that wrongfully rejected a $20,000 claim.

Left unresolved was the legitimacy of skyrocketing punitive-damage awards, a development that has touched off a wave of legislative activity, often called "tort reform."

Some states, reacting to soaring insurance premiums and pleas from the industry, have imposed ceilings on punitive damages.

A recent federal study cited "explosive growth" in damage awards. It said, for example, that the average jury award for medical malpractice leaped 2,000 percent from 1960 to 1984 — from $52,000 to $1.2 million with adjustment for inflation. Jury awards in some product-liability cases increased more than tenfold to average $1.1 million, the study said.

The court will address the issue by reviewing a decision by the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in April that upheld a $6 million award against Browning-Ferris Industries Inc. of Houston.

Study Indicates 600 Plants Face Extinction By Turn Of Century

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Nearly 700 plant species in the United States face extinction by the year 2000, and those in rapidly developing parts of the nation are at particular risk, a conservation group says.

The private Center for Plant Conservation said 73 percent of the plants facing extinction are in southerly, subtropical regions with intense economic or population growth — Hawaii, California, Texas, Florida and Puerto Rico.

"The causes of extinction are by now quite familiar to us — destruction of habitat, population growth, urban, suburban and industrial sprawl, irresponsible resource extraction, overuse of public land,"

Donald Falk, the center's executive director, said Monday. "A consequence of that is this tremendously accelerated rate of extinction that we're seeing in these priority regions."

Falk said some of the endangered plants are relatives of important timber products, food groups, or plants used in horticulture and landscaping.

The center's 1½-year study found that 253 species may become extinct within five years and another 427 may vanish by the turn of the century. As many as 52 of the plant species may already be extinct in the wild.

The center is a consortium of 19 botanical gardens and arboreta headquartered in Boston.

"What we're dealing with here is just another sign of a planet in trouble and indeed, a national environment in trouble," said Thomas Lovejoy, an expert on tropical rain forests and assistant secretary for external affairs at the Smithsonian Institution.

At least 200 kinds of plants already have become extinct during the past two centuries, experts generally agree, and conservationists worry that the rate may accelerate as population and economic growth jeopardize habitats. A 1973 study by the Smithsonian found that 3,000 of the nation's 25,000 species are endangered.

Washington Veteran Advises Bush Staff: Don't Play President — You're Not

By Mike Feinsilber
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Veteran Washington insider Donald H. Rumsfeld is offering advice to White House staffers in a Bush administration on how to avoid elevation of the ego while working in high places.

"Don't play president — you're not," Rumsfeld tells George Bush's future staff. "The Constitution provides for only one president."

"Learn quickly how to say, 'I don't know,'" he advises. And: "If you foul up, tell the president and others fast, and correct it."

He should know a thing or two about the business. The Princeton-educated former Navy pilot has been a fixture in government almost since arriving in 1969 as a Republican congressman from Illinois.

He ran the Office of Economic Opportunity and the price control program for President Nixon and served as Nixon's ambassador to NATO. After Nixon resigned, he worked for President Ford as chief of staff and secretary of defense. He served as President Reagan's Middle East envoy before going off to private enterprise.

Through it all, he occasionally slipped into a bulging file some ideas on getting the job done in Washington.

He dusted them off this year when he joined former Presidents Carter and Ford, scholars and other former government officials in writing "American Agenda," a compendium of policy advice for President-elect Bush.

Many of Rumsfeld's rules offer advice on how to get ahead without getting a swelled head.

Examples:

—"Don't speak ill of your predecessors (or successor) — you did not walk in their shoes."

—"Don't begin to believe you are indispensable or infallible, and don't let the president, or others, think you are — you're not."

—"Don't speak ill of other members of the administration."

—"Never say 'the White House wants' — buildings don't want."

—"A vice president has a very difficult set of relationships. Do your darndest to make things work well for him. It will take everything you have, and you still may fail."

—"One price of proximity to the president is the duty to bring bad news. You fail him, and yourself, if you are unwilling to do so."

—"Don't forget that the 50 or so invitations you receive a week are sent not because those people are just dying to see you, but because of the position you hold. If you don't believe me, ask one of your predecessors how fast they stop."

—"Don't take the job, or stay in it, unless you have an understanding with the president that you are free to tell him what you think, on any subject, 'with the bark off' — and the freedom in practice to do it."

—"Work continuously to reduce the number of people who have White House phones, White House stationery, White House Mess privileges, and the like. Only those who see the president frequently, say three or four times a week, should be in a position to represent themselves as being 'White House staff.'"

—"Assume that most everything you say or do will be on the front page of The Washington Post the next morning."

—"Simply because a problem is shown to exist, it doesn't necessarily follow that there is a solution."

—"Most people with whom the president will be dealing will have, possibly with some cause, reasonably sizable egos before they come into government. Their experiences after they arrive, and the press notices, will probably have done little to deflate them. This includes you."

L.A. Chooses Design For New Monument

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — A $45 million monument intended to rival the Statue of Liberty includes a "Musical Forest" and aquariums but not a giant video screen facing freeway drivers or a huge transparent bird that lays an egg.

And the architects selected by the West Coast Gateway Committee were from New York.

The winning design was unveiled Monday by the committee, which hopes corporate donations will be sought to build the project over a downtown freeway.

"This is the project that's going to lead Los Angeles, at least in architecture and vision, to be a true world-class city," said committee chairman Nick Patsouras.

Mayor Tom Bradley launched the design contest in February for a monument to welcome newcomers to U.S. shores, as the Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor has done for more than 100 years.

The committee chose five finalists from the 150 designs submitted. The finalists were from Massachusetts, the Soviet Union, Austria and California, in addition to New York.

The winners, architects Hani Rashid and Lise Ann Couture, titled their design "Asymptote," the name as their design studio. Rashid called it "clouds of steel."

Patsouras said the design is "a combination of structures that are simple, geometric figures — squares, cones, rectangles — connected with a fantastic engineering excellence."

He said it will be made of steel, aluminum and bronze with "cables like the Golden Gate Bridge."

The design calls for two giant aquariums with marine life from the Pacific and Atlantic oceans and 10 to 12 buildings housing the "Galaxy of Foods," "Park of Peace and Unity" and the "Musical Forest," as well as theaters, art galleries and an immigration museum.

"We didn't want to pigeonhole Los Angeles in a conventional sense. It is a very creative design that will stand the test of time. That was one of our objectives, that 100 years from now our descendants will say, 'Our forefathers had vision,'" said Patsouras.

The other finalists' designs were a giant video screen facing freeway drivers; towering fountains of water; a design described by its creator as a "vessel for social gathering"; and a giant transparent bird that lays an egg on the street.

The mayor was attending a National League of Cities meeting in Boston on Monday and had not been told of the selection, a spokesman said.

"He knows that they were about ready to unveil the final selection but hasn't seen it," said press secretary Fred MacFarlane.

The international panel that selected the monument design included Sverre Fehn, an architect from Norway, Juhani Pallasmaa, an architect and director of the Museum of Helsinki in Finland, and actor George Takei, who portrayed Sulu on the former "Star Trek" television series.

Bush Confers With Libby Dole

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President-elect George Bush has yet to name a woman to a senior post but he was meeting today with Cabinet veteran Elizabeth Dole, considered a strong candidate for a top job in the new administration.

Bush and Mrs. Dole, the former transportation secretary and wife of Senate minority leader Bob Dole of Kansas, were having breakfast at Bush's office.

The vice president was having lunch today with Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., the House Ways and Means Committee chairman, and was also meeting with leaders of disability groups and boning up for his part in Wednesday's meeting with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev in New York.

Bush told reporters Monday that he has made clear to the Soviets that he will not attempt to jump the gun on any arms control proposals.

"It's the president's (Reagan's) meeting and I am going there as vice president of the United States," said Bush. "My own key advisers will not be in the meeting."

Noting that his entire national security team is not yet complete, Bush said, "there will not be any commitment on my part in terms of specific arms control proposals or things of that nature."

If Gorbachev springs a surprise proposal as a Christmas present, "We're not going to open it before Christmas," he joked.

Bush met Monday with 10 university presidents led by Benno Schmidt Jr., president of Bush's alma mater, Yale.

"We recognize that we have a friend of education in the White House. We're excited and grateful for that," Schmidt told Bush.

The academic leaders, including presidents from Cornell, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the universities of California, Michigan, Tennessee, and Texas at Austin, said they stressed the federal role in ensuring access to higher education and the need to support scientific research on campuses. They also expressed concern about the nation's shortage of scientists and engineers.

Schmidt said Bush, in turn, "stressed the limits on federal resources and the need to make hard choices about the federal budget to bring the deficit under control."

Bush's personnel chief, Chase Untermeyer, said last week that the president-elect had repeatedly instructed aides to find more women and minority candidates for top posts.

One post reportedly being considered for Mrs. Dole, a former Federal Trade commissioner and White House aide, is ambassador to the United Nations, but transition sources denied over the weekend that she had already landed that position.

Mrs. Dole, a Harvard-trained lawyer from Salisbury, N.C., quit

Reagan's Cabinet in late 1987 to campaign full-time for her husband in his failed attempt to gain the GOP presidential nomination.

Mrs. Dole later campaigned extensively for Bush.

Former Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, is still thought to have the inside track for defense secretary, possibly with Norman Augustine, the president of Martin Marietta Corp., in the No. 2 slot at the Pentagon.

Augustine, a former Pentagon official, has written extensively about reforming military purchasing.

Bush and his wife Barbara attended the premiere Monday night of a comic film, "Twins," at a Kennedy Center fund-raiser for the Special Olympics.

While paying tribute to the "unmatched success" of the athletic competition for the retarded, Bush also got in a quip about actor-muscleman Arnold Schwarzenegger, son-in-law of Special Olympics founders — and died-in-the-wool Democrats — Eunice Kennedy and Sargent Shriver.

"You know, there's all kinds of courage. There's the courage of my friend Arnold Schwarzenegger, who more than once campaigned with me across the country, then returned home each time to face his in-laws," said Bush.

The Shriver and the actor's wife, television journalist Maria Shriver, joined in the laughter.

Schwarzenegger and "Twins" co-star Danny DeVito, the pint-sized comedian, came to the premiere in identical togs, befitting their movie roles as long lost fraternal twins.

U.S. Says Terrorism Aimed At Americans On Increase

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Terrorist acts against Americans have increased sharply this year, although the number of casualties has fallen, the State Department said.

The department also reported Monday that terrorism worldwide is rising.

Incidents directed against Americans in the first nine months of this year rose to 157 from 108 in the corresponding period last year, it said. Three Americans were killed and 25 injured, compared with one death and 38 wounded in the earlier period.

Almost half of the attacks on Americans this year were bombings of U.S. oil company property in Colombia. No one was killed in these incidents.

The three American deaths were in Greece, Italy and Peru.

Terrorist incidents worldwide totaled 680 in the first nine months of this year, up from 655 in the same period last year. The number of casualties declined, however, to 278 killed and 875 wounded, from the year-earlier total of 443 killed and 2,014 injured.

Increases in terrorist acts in Asia, Latin America and Africa outweighed declines in Western Europe and other areas.

An increase in Asia — to 155 incidents from 130 — was due largely to South Korea, which reported no international attacks in the first nine months of last year but 10 in 1988. These were mostly attacks against U.S. offices in Seoul.

In Western Europe, terrorist incidents linked to events in the Middle East were down to 20 from 35 a year ago. Terrorist attacks of other types in Western Europe rose to 83 from 82.

 It is only human to want to hold on to what we have. But once in a while we have to sacrifice a little to gain a lot. Here's an example of what we mean.

With so much of his strength concentrated in diamonds and only a singleton heart, South could not take any action over East's opening bid. But when North stretched a little to show a hand of at least opening bid strength with an excellent heart suit by his balancing jump to two hearts, South went right to the game he expected to make.

West led his fourth-best diamond, and it did not take a genius in the East seat to work out that he could expect little or nothing from his partner. And it was obvious to one and all that, if declarer were to rake in six heart tricks, he would have little difficulty in fulfilling his game contract.

There was only one way to shut out the heart suit. Declarer would have to hold a singleton heart. And since that would almost surely be the singleton ace, dummy's entry would have to be removed before the hearts were freed.

East found the surest way to accomplish that. He shot up with the ace of diamonds and shifted to the king of spades! Declarer had no counter.

Ducking the first spade would not help, since East would simply continue with another spade; and winning the ace would maroon those wonderful hearts. East's play surrendered a trick in spades, but gained four in the other suits. In the trade, his play is known as the "Merrimac Coup."

Yes, we know a low club at trick two by East, followed by a spade shift from West, would have proved equally effective, but that would have been dependent on West holding the queen of clubs. East's actual defense was both prettier and more effective.

Crew Survives Crash Of B-52

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MARQUETTE, Mich. — A B-52 bomber crashed and burst into flames early today on a runway while practicing "touch-and-go" landings at K.I. Sawyer Air Force Base, but all eight crew members apparently survived, officials said.

The plane, normally equipped to carry nuclear bombs, crashed about 1:15 a.m. EST, said Lt. Naomi Siegal, a spokeswoman at the Strategic Air Command installation.

No weapons were aboard, said Lt. Col. George Peck, a spokesman for SAC headquarters in Omaha, Neb.

The crew was practicing landings after a seven-hour training flight when it crashed during one of its touch-and-go approaches, Peck said. During such maneuvers, landing gears touch the ground but the plane doesn't land.

"Initial indications were that the aircraft burst into flames upon landing," said Peck. "It had already done a series of landings..."

He said the crew was taken to hospitals.

Members of the crew suffered broken bones, but no one was burned, said Capt. Paul Bicking, a Sawyer spokesman.

Peck said those aboard were Capt. Mark Hartney, aircraft commander; First Lt. Michael S. Debruzzi, pilot; Capt. Anthony D. Phillips, radar navigator; First Lt. James W. Herrmann, navigator; 1st Lt. Daniel McCarrick, electronic warfare officer; Airmen 1st Class, Joseph A. Vallie, gunner; Maj. William R. Kroeger, instructor pilot; First Lt. Gregory C. Smith, upgrade pilot. No hometowns were available.

It was not known who was at the controls when the plane crashed, Peck said.

Peck said a board of officers will investigate the accident, adding weather did not appear to be a factor in the crash.

Peck said it was not unusual for B-52 training missions to be out at that hour.

"Crews have to be trained to fly at any time of the day or night in any weather," he said.

The eight-engine B-52, which was deployed in the early 1950s, is the military's biggest bomber with a wingspan of 185 feet and a maximum takeoff weight of 488,000 pounds.

In other accidents involving B-52s, a bomber was damaged when a pilot aborted a takeoff and overshot a

U.S. Denies Anti-Terrorism Project With Isreal Existed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The White House and State Department are presenting a united front in denying that the United States and Israel had an agreement to conduct joint covert operations against terrorists.

Congressional sources said that if there were such a compact — as alleged by a former Israeli official — the Reagan administration never told lawmakers about it. Reagan never signed any such agreement, his spokesman said Monday.

The denials were prompted by a weekend news story which said such a U.S.-Israeli agreement had been revealed by former Israeli official Amir Nir.

In Jerusalem, the office of Foreign Minister Shimon Peres also denied the report in The Washington Post, saying, "There is no such agreement." Foreign Ministry spokesman Alon Liel declined to elaborate.

Nir, a prominent figure in the Iran-Contra affair, said in June that a compact allowed such covert operations, which he said he supervised with then-National Security Council aide Oliver L. North, the newspaper said.

The Post reported Nir's assertions in its Sunday editions, four days after the 37-year-old former Israeli counterterrorism official was killed in the crash of a light plane in Mexico.

North is charged with a variety of offenses including conspiracy and illegal diversion of millions of dollars in government money. The charges center on the Reagan administration's clandestine sales of U.S. arms to Iran in 1985-86 and subsequent diversion of proceeds to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua. North is scheduled to stand trial in late January.

Nir said in June the agreement authorized still-secret operations that he and North supervised in 1985-86, the Post said.

Argentine Rebels To Surrender Base

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — The leader of a military uprising was placed under arrest and his followers surrendered one of two bases they held for five days. Rebels said they would give up the other base today, news reports said.

Questions persisted about whether a secret deal was made with the rebels, who demanded an end to prosecution of officers charged with human rights abuses during eight years of military dictatorship that ended in 1983.

Defense Minister Horacio Juanarena was to brief the Senate on Wednesday on how the government ended the uprising, which Argentines considered a threat to their 5-year-old democracy.

President Raul Alfonsin has said no concessions were made to the rebels. Rebel spokesmen denied they surrendered and said they negotiated a cease-fire that allows them to return, unpunished, to their units.

The leader of the estimated 500 rebels, Army Col. Mohamed Ali Seineldin, surrendered Monday night and left the infantry school on the Campo de Mayo base just outside Buenos Aires, where he and some followers had been holed up.

Seineldin organized the dismantling of the defenses, including trenches and land mines, he and his comrades had set up at the arsenal.

Shortly afterward, several army trucks left the arsenal carrying cheering troops, according to the private news agency Diarios y Noticias. It was not immediately known where the trucks were headed.

Army chief Lt. Gen. Jose Dante Caridi said Seineldin would be held at a military prison. No mention was made of a trial or punishment for him or his supporters.

More rebels were at a base at Mercedes, about 60 miles west of the capital. The government news agency Telam said rebels intended to turn over that base to the government today.

The insurrection began before dawn Thursday and was the third military uprising in 20 months and the rebels' demands, including for a change in the military hierarchy and better pay, were also behind the two previous revolts.

It was clear this time that the rebels had wide support throughout the army. Five bases openly supported the mutineers and units at several others refused to help the government.

On Sunday, three people were killed when civilians outside Campo de Mayo began throwing rocks and bottles at the rebels, who fired back, police said. La Nacion newspaper said police believe many of the estimated 600 demonstrators were from the Montonero urban guerrilla group.

The government had claimed victory early Monday, saying the military rebellion was over. But the public was skeptical because Seineldin and many of the renegades remained at the Campo de Mayo base.

In contrast to the current situation, soldiers who participated in an April 1987 uprising were arrested, held incommunicado and taken to military prison. Soon afterward, however, three-fourths of the army's top generals were removed and Alfonsin proposed legislation limiting prosecution for human rights offenses only to the highest-ranking officers.

The Buenos Aires Herald commented somewhat skeptically in an editorial Monday:

"For a group of officers who surrendered unconditionally, the rebels (in April 1987) gained a surprisingly high proportion of their demands..."

"After the almost unbearable tension of the last four days, everybody... is entitled to a prolonged sense of relief, but the respite will be short indeed if Col. Mohamed Ali Seineldin's surrender was the result of yet another deal," the English-language daily stated.

From 1976 to 1983, the country's military rulers conducted a so-called "dirty war" against leftists in which an estimated 9,000 people disappeared.

Doctors Are Pushing For Lower Alcohol Level For Drunken Driver Convictions

By Allan Parachini
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Some medical groups are pressing to reduce the blood-alcohol limits for motorists — proposing a tougher standard that could mean the arrest of a driver who stops for three beers after work.

This new focus on preventing drunken driving has lacked the clamorous debate of the 1970s and 1980s that prompted the federal government to set a national drinking age of 21 and states to set blood-alcohol levels, at which motorists legally would be presumed to be drunk.

All but three states use a blood-alcohol level of .10 percent or higher to establish drunken driving guilt. Maine, Utah and Oregon use a lower .08 percent standard.

But health groups, within the anti-drunken driving movement and in the federal government, have begun recently to push for an even stricter standard.

In an announcement timed to coincide with traditional holiday safety concerns about drinking and driving, the nation's largest group of emergency physicians late last month called for every state to set the blood-alcohol level at which a driver could be presumed to be drunk at .05 percent and a level of .08 percent at which motorists could escape conviction only by proving that police acted illegally in an arrest.

The announcement, by the American College of Emergency Physicians, appeared in the November Annals of Emergency Medicine. The doctors said that their endorsement — the first by a large medical group — of the two-pronged drunken driving standard came at the encouragement of another physicians' group, the Association for Advancement of Automotive Medicine.

"I think the time may be ripe for resuming the drunk driving debate," said Elaine Petrucelli, the association's executive director. "We're still seeing about half the people who are killed on the highway (in crashes) where there is alcohol involved. Maybe what was done five years ago is beginning to wear off."

The .05 percent level could put a driver who quickly drank three beers on an empty stomach at risk of arrest, said Brian O'Neill, executive director of the Washington-based Insurance Institute for Highway Safety.

But a couple splitting a bottle of wine over dinner at a restaurant, probably would not be at risk of violating the tougher new laws, he noted.

The recommendation by the emergency and automotive doctors coincides with a position taken last year by the American Medical Association, encouraging states to adopt a single .05 percent blood-alcohol standard. Mothers Against Drunk Driving last year also adopted the two-step strategy just advocated by the emergency physicians.

While no state legislature has acted in response to the proposals, a little-noticed amendment to a wide-ranging drug-enforcement bill passed in late October orders a National Academy of Sciences study of drunken driving standards to determine if the federal government should press for uniformly lower state limits.

The study, not yet begun, is to be completed in 14 months. Its cost will be covered in the existing Department of Transportation research budget, said an aide to Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., who offered the amendment. Lautenberg also authored the 1984 Senate bill that set the national 21-year-old drinking age. The aide said that the Department of Transportation had recently enacted rules setting a .04 percent blood-alcohol level as the legal definition of impairment for drivers of commercial vehicles.

Massage Ordinance

GREENSBORO (AP) — The Randolph County Board of Commissioners voted Monday to enact a new ordinance that makes it illegal for someone to offer massages to the opposite sex.

Officials said the ordinance was a major provision in the overhaul of a longtime county ordinance, whose loopholes were providing a pathway to prostitution.

The old county ordinance prohibited any person "to massage or offer to massage the private parts of another for hire." The ordinance, however, didn't say a word about doing it for free.

Star Awaits CBS Decision On 'Coming Of Age' Series

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Actress Phyllis Newman expected to make just a quick trip home to New York for the holidays, but now it's an indefinite waiting period until CBS decides what to do with "Coming of Age."

CBS pulled the comedy series because of poor ratings and is looking for a new time slot.

"Kate & Allie" returns next Monday to take over the 8:30 p.m. EST time period. Meanwhile, "Coming of Age" has several episodes in the can and CBS has ordered new scripts written.

In the series, Ms. Newman plays the wife of an airline pilot (Paul Dooley) who reluctantly retires because of a mandatory age limit and finds it difficult to adjust to life in a retirement community. Alan Young and Glynnis Johns play retired neighbors whose incredible happiness drives Dooley to distraction.

The New York actress, who's married to author and lyricist Adolph Green, is a Broadway veteran and was in fact doing "Broadway Bound" when the producers of "Coming of Age" asked her to come to Los Angeles. She won a Tony award in 1962 for her supporting role as the beauty queen in "Subways Are for Sleeping." She was also nominated for "Broadway Bound."

She played Aunt Blanche in the Neil Simon play, then began a brief role in the ABC soap opera "One Life To Live."

"I was supposed to do just five episodes of 'One Life To Live,'" she said. "I played Renee Devine, an ex-madame from Las Vegas who dressed to kill. The character just took off, and the producer wanted me to sign a contract. I didn't want to commit myself, so they kept having me come back."

"Then I was asked to come out and read for this show. A lot of other women were reading for it. I had to read for everybody. The producers, Universal, CBS. Then back to New York, and I didn't have the part. When I didn't hear, I didn't think I had it. Then I was called back to read with Paul Dooley."

She was finally signed, of course, and some shows were filmed for a spring tryout.

Ms. Newman considers "Coming of Age" her first series, although she previously starred in two other shows. She says "Diagnosis: Unknown" doesn't count because it was only a brief summer show in 1960, and neither does "That Was The Week That Was" in 1964-65 because NBC pre-empted it so many times.

Actress Tess Harper Likes 'Sure Things'

By Hillel Italie
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — In the unstable world of acting, Tess Harper has come to appreciate a sure thing.

"It's hard to establish a routine as an actor," said Ms. Harper, who broke onto the movie scene five years ago playing opposite Robert Duvall in "Tender Mercies."

"You can only be certain that this job is going to end and you're going to have get another one. That's why people go into soap operas or television series: It's safe."

So when playwright-actor Sam

Shepard offered her a part in the comedy-drama "Far North," which he wrote and directed, Ms. Harper accepted without even reading the script.

"It was just the thrill of being asked by him because I respect his opinion greatly. I felt honored that my capabilities matched up to his writing," she said.

Ms. Harper's journey to Hollywood began in Mammoth Springs, Ark., with detours through Springfield, Mo., Houston and Dallas. Mammoth Springs, where she lived until leaving for college in the late 1960s, has a population of just under 1,200.

"I certainly knew where the road leading out of town was, but I left reluctantly," she recalled. "You grow up in a place where nothing ever changes and the thing you become most afraid of in your life is any change."

But since leaving her hometown, Ms. Harper has faced changes, many changes. She attended Southwest Missouri State in Springfield, moved to Houston and became involved with the local theater.

"Sometimes I directed, sometimes I was the stage manager," she recalled. "The thing about doing that type of theater is you're involved on every level. You might have the lead in one show and work box office the next."

In the early '80s, Ms. Harper moved to Dallas, determined to further her career. After making commercials and industrial films, the casting director for "Tender Mercies" spotted her and recommended that she be tested for the young widow who falls in love with a country-and-western singer (Duvall).

"It was like winning the lottery," said Ms. Harper, now a resident of

The Associated Press

Beverly Hills, Calif. "(Director Bruce) Beresford and Duvall treated me as if I knew precisely what I was doing. If they had any doubts, they kept it to themselves."

Ms. Harper's lucky streak continued when she landed a small role in the enormously successful "Silkwood," which starred Cher, Meryl Streep and Kurt Russell. She has also appeared in two TV miniseries, "Chiefs" and "Celebrity," and the film "Flashpoint."

In 1986, Ms. Harper appeared in the movie adaptation of Beth Henley's play, "Crimes of the Heart," which starred Diane Keaton, Jessica Lange and Sissy Spacek as the eccentric McGrath sisters.

"'Crimes' was summer camp and we had such a great time with each other," said Ms. Harper, whose portrayal of the meddlesome cousin Chick earned her an Academy Award nomination for supporting actress.

"I think it was easier for me because I was the only supporting role and here were these three women in the leads. Every time those women work anywhere you have to watch because their work is so exceptional," she said.

Ms. Harper developed close friendships with Ms. Lange and Shepard, who also had a supporting role in "Crimes," and was happy to have the chance to work with them again.

"I knew it would be a really good working relationship. You form a community. If you trust the people you're with then you know the community is going to be there."

In "Far North," Ms. Lange and Ms. Harper are sisters, who battle each other and their father (Charles Durning), as they struggle to find direction in their lives.

"What I liked about the character was her anger. I've always played very sane, very earthy characters. The character of Rita isn't focused at all. She's taking a break from her life." Something Ms. Harper can directly relate to.

"I've done it, but it doesn't last very long. My ability to pity myself has about an eight-week limit."

Although Ms. Harper thinks of acting as a "joyful experience," she confesses to usually coming down with a strong case of nerves before starting any film.

"There comes a time before shooting or rehearsals where I panic and think I'm no good and the project's no good. But if you're lucky, the feeling doesn't last very long."

Former Actor Finds Way To Help Needy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCKFORD, Mich. — Dick York, who played the often-frustrated husband Darren Stevens to Elizabeth Montgomery's Samantha in the 1960s TV comedy "Bewitched," is conjuring up a little magic of his own to help the needy.

"I'm ready to fight city hall and scream and yell about everything," York, 60, said recently. "It seems to me, when somebody's hungry, you feed them. If they don't have a place to live, you find them a place to live."

York has raised thousands of dollars and donated items to the homeless and the hungry through his "Acting for Life" concern. He has headed the effort despite his fight against incurable emphysema and a degenerative spinal disease that confines him to his home.

"There's no sense grieving about it. The pain is there anyway, (but) I can't turn my back on other people. I've been there."

"I saw the look on my mother's face when she had to give us second-hand Christmas presents," York said. "That's how you learn to act. Because you don't want your parents to know you know."
