Soviets Will Cut Troops, Arms

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

UNITED NATIONS — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev announced today the Soviet Union will unilaterally cut its military forces by a half-million troops and will reduce its conventional arms substantially.

Gorbachev said the move comes "without relation" to international negotiations that have long been stalled in Vienna.

Gorbachev spelled out his proposals in an address before the U.N. General Assembly as President Reagan flew to New York and a luncheon meeting later today that will seal an extraordinary chapter in U.S.-Soviet relations as well as set the groundwork for relations when George Bush becomes president. The Soviet leader announced a dramatic unilateral gesture — a reduction by half a million in Soviet uniformed manpower. And he called for a ceasefire on Jan. 1 in Afghanistan, announcing the Soviet pullout from that troubled land will proceed.

In a speech that blended ponderous rhetoric with a quotation from Ernest Hemingway, the Soviet leader said, "The bell of every regional conflict tolls for all of us."

Urging that international leaders seek a "balance of interests," Gorbachev told a rapt audience of diplomats that nations should "look for ways together to improve the international system and build a new world."

"It is now quite clear that building up military power makes no country omnipotent," Gorbachev declared. "What's more, one-sided reliance on military power ultimately weakens other components of national security."

A few hundred miles away, President Reagan left the White House for a quick flight to New York and his fifth and final summit session with Gorbachev — a luncheon discussion on Governors Island in New York Harbor.

Before leaving Washington, President Reagan said today that he and Gorbachev would continue their "quest for human rights and personal freedom" when they hold luncheon talks this afternoon.

The 2½-hour meeting is concluding a relationship between the two superpower leaders that has mellowed since their first summit three years ago.

President-elect George Bush was to join them at the luncheon table.

"Although our time together will be brief, I welcome this opportunity for a final meeting between myself, President Gorbachev and Vice President Bush that will demonstrate the continuity of the process that we first put in place in Geneva in 1985," Reagan told reporters.

He said, "The quest for human rights and personal freedom is very much a part of the agenda of the American-Soviet relations."

Today's meeting was one that Reagan did not anticipate when he visited Moscow last summer and withdrew "evil empire" from his political vocabulary.

For Reagan, in the twilight of his presidency, the trip to New York could be the sentimental culmination to a relationship that overcame his distrust of most things Soviet.

Strong Earthquake Rocks Soviet Union

MOSCOW (AP) — A strong earthquake centered in the southern Soviet Union today knocked out communications with an Armenian city and killed at least four people in eastern Turkey, authorities said.

There was no immediate word on damage or casualties in the Soviet Caucasus, but extensive damage was reported in Turkey.

The U.S. Geological Survey said the quake registered 6.9 on the Richter scale and its epicenter was just south of Tbilisi, capital of the Soviet republic of Georgia and a city of nearly 1 million people.

Armenia is just south of Tbilisi. The quake registered 8 on the Soviet scale of one to 12, which measures tremors on the basis of their visible effects, said Tamara Levkina, an official of the National Earthquake Center in Moscow. A quake of such intensity is described in reference works as "destructive."

Ms. Levkina said communications with Leninakan, an Armenian city of about 200,000 just east of the Soviet-Turkish border, had been knocked out.

The quake was felt in Tbilisi and the Armenian capital of Yerevan at a force level of 5, she said. That intensity has the power to shake buildings and break windows.

An editor of the official Armenpress news agency in Yerevan said "everything in the building shook" when the quake hit.

He said there were no reports from outlying areas. State Turkish radio quoted Kars provincial Gov. Hasan Fakir as saying four residents of the town of Akyaka were killed in the quake. Many houses were damaged in Akyaka and in the nearby Cildir township, it said.

The Kandilli observatory in Istanbul, reached by telephone, said the quake shook four eastern Turkish provinces twice, at 9:43 a.m. and 9:48 a.m.

In Washington, D.C., David Terrell of the Geological Survey said the quake was measured by American seismologists at 6.9 and its epicenter was about 50 miles southwest of Tbilisi.

A quake of that magnitude is capable of causing widespread, heavy damage.

Atlantis Crew Finishes Secret Trip In Space By Returning In Darkness

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON (AP) — Atlantis' astronauts returned home under a cover of darkness early today, a fitting finale to their secret space mission during which they reportedly launched a powerful spy satellite into orbit over the Soviet Union.

Atlantis, bruised a lot more than usual, streaked out of orbit Tuesday, completing a four-day space voyage with an unusual afternoon landing on a packed clay runway at Edwards Air Force Base in California's Mojave Desert.

The military mission, the second shuttle flight since Challenger exploded 34 months ago, was believed to have included deployment of a sophisticated satellite that can peer through clouds and darkness to spy on the Soviets.

The five astronauts' low-key, middle-of-the-night arrival here seemed an appropriate ending to the classified flight, which had been shrouded in secrecy since it launched Friday from Cape Canaveral, Fla.

Despite the crew's 12:50 a.m. arrival, more than 200 people were there to cheer the astronauts and their wives when they stepped off two planes. In contrast, some 5,000 flag-waving spectators greeted the evening return of Discovery's crew in October.

Atlantis landed with a slow leak in a tire on its landing gear that NASA previously had said was not a concern. The leak did not seem to affect the smoothness of the touchdown.

As the astronauts and several officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration inspected the shuttle, some damage could be seen to the underside, including "dings" in the black protective tiles. The tiles shown by NASA cameras "appeared to be a lot more damaged than usual," said NASA spokeswoman Nancy Lovato.

The landing was closed to the public because of the flight's classified nature, leaving only a few hundred journalists, invited guests and NASA employees to watch. Some 425,000 spectators witnessed Discovery's landing.

Atlantis' flight was the 27th shuttle mission and the longest of three trips dedicated entirely to military purposes, lasting 4 days, 9 hours and 5 minutes.

Navy Cmdr. Robert L. Gibson, who guided the 97-ton shuttle to a centerline touchdown Tuesday, was surprised at the early-morning turnout in Houston.

Farmville Municipal Offices Will Move

By Carol Tyer

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Farmville Commissioners, who met Tuesday night, expect that their Jan. 3 meeting will be held in the town's new million-dollar municipal building.

The commissioners approved plans to move the police department into the new building at least by Dec. 19 and to move other town offices by Dec. 20.

"This will be the finest municipal building for a town our size anywhere in the state," Commissioner Marvin Speight said.

Following public hearings with no dissenting discussion, the commissioners approved two rezoning requests. They rezoned property at

Judicial Recount Slated Thursday

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County election officials are scheduled to conduct a recount Thursday in the Court of Appeals race between Democrat John B. Lewis of Farmville and Republican Donald Smith of Raleigh.

The recount will begin at 6:30 a.m., said elections Supervisor Margaret Hardee. Precinct registrars and judges will be on hand at the elections office to unseal ballots, which have been in storage since the Nov. 8 general election.

Mrs. Hardee returned to Greenville on Tuesday from a weeklong business trip with her husband in Las Vegas. Members of her staff had already contacted her and informed her of the recount, she said, and both candidates have been contacted by mail concerning the time and place of the Pitt recount.

All 100 county election boards in the state will be participating in the recount, and the state Board of Elections ordered the local boards to conduct the recount either Thursday or Friday.

Lewis, a special Superior Court judge whose term ends Dec. 31, apparently scored a narrow win over Smith in November, but his margin of victory was less than 1 percent of the total number of votes cast in the election. The narrow margin allowed Smith to call for a recount last week after the state board certified the vote totals.

Lewis, who polled 983,850 votes, is holding court in Moore County this week and is scheduled to hold court in Greenville next week. Smith, who was appointed to the Court of Appeals by Gov. Jim Martin, polled 967,992 votes.

More than 400,000 ballots were distributed to Pitt voters in the general election, and the ballots are stored by precinct, not by contest. Therefore, election officials will have to sort through every ballot from each precinct in order to find all of the ballots from the Lewis-Smith race.

There will be three Air Mac machines available at the elections office Thursday, and election officials should be able to speed up the process by counting ballots from three precincts at one time, Mrs. Hardee said.

DGA, Evergreen Will Merge On Jan. 1

Officials of the Downtown Greenville Association and Evergreen of Greenville Inc. announced today the consolidation of the two groups into one organization effective Jan. 1.

Louis Clark and Lawrence Behr, presidents of the DGA and Evergreen, respectively, said the action is a major step forward in strengthening the partnership between publicly supported Evergreen and the privately supported DGA.

"The city felt it was important last spring for us to show more private sector financial support for Evergreen and the chamber (of commerce) has for some time been interested in seeing increased business recruitment," said Jack Steelman, executive director of Evergreen.

the public about too many downtown programs and the improved economies of scale to be realized by consolidating these two programs, everyone's goals seem to be well achieved by this consolidation," he said.

Evergreen of Greenville Inc. is a private non-profit corporation working to provide downtown as well as citywide economic development services.

Steelman said the conversion of Evergreen to a membership organization in January will enable current members of the DGA to become members of Evergreen.

He said a citywide membership drive will be launched immediately to recruit additional members and to increase Evergreen's accessibility.

will include area businesses interested in downtown and the sustained economic development of Greenville, downtown businesses, property owners and residents of downtown neighborhoods including Tar River, College View and West Greenville.

Individual memberships will also be available citywide to persons interested in knowing more about and supporting economic growth and downtown revitalization, Steelman said.

He said the 1989 program of work for the consolidated organization includes as the top priority increased efforts to recruit business and real estate investment downtown and to Greenville at large, and the provision of assistance to local businesses interested in expansion or relocation.

Business recruitment activities of Evergreen will be closely coordinated with those of the Pitt County Development Commission and the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, Steelman added.

New programs under consideration include the establishment of membership based committees to participate in communications, promotions, marketing and membership services.

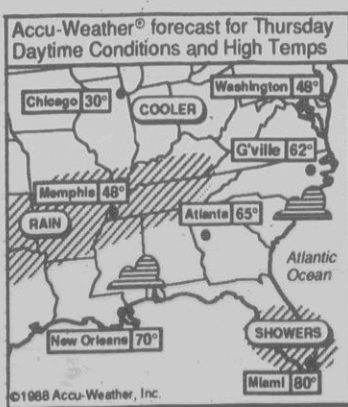

"This is obviously a very bold program of work and one which will come about as a result of increased membership dues revenue, direct membership participation, and our continued relationship with the city of Greenville," Steelman said.

"The network available to us through other related programs will enable costs to be held at a minimum by simply working with, rather than duplicating, services already available."

Current members of the Evergreen board of directors include Clark, Chris McCoy, Ed Carter, Inez Fridley, Greg Knowles, John Chaffee, Charles Gaskins, Kramer Jackson, Ennis Chestang, Wes Hankins, Margaret Wirth, John West, Ed Kirby, Wes Beckner, Dick McKee, Walter Faulkner, Barbara Fenner, Phil Flowers, Ric Miller, Jack Richardson, Jo Linda Sanders, Jon Tingelstad, Wallace Wooldes, Don Edwards and George Coffman.

DGA directors to be installed on the Evergreen board in January include Behr, Jimmy Hite, Bill Taft, Bud Wheelless and John Shan-nonhouse.

New Judge Cited For Efforts To Protect Children In Courts

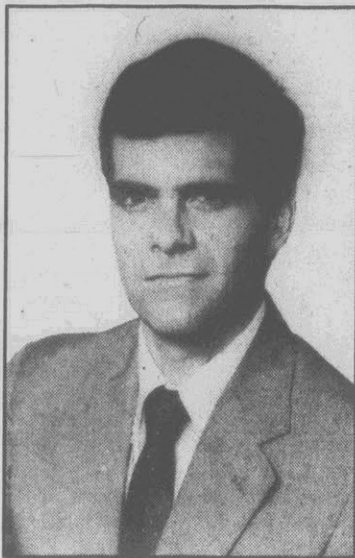

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Judge David Leech, former Guardian ad Litem attorney advocate in Pitt County, was honored Tuesday night as the second recipient of the Alice E. Patterson Attorney Advocate Award.

Leech was chosen from among 100 attorney advocates in North Carolina for the state-level award. The Guardian ad Litem program protects the interests of abused and neglected children in the courts. It includes both attorney advocates and volunteers from the public.

The award was presented during a reception honoring Leech and Judith Kornegay, the new Guardian ad Litem attorney advocate, was held in the home of Guardian ad Litem volunteer Ellen Shokler and her husband Howard.

Leech was sworn in Monday as a District Court judge. He has previously represented abused and neglected children, not only in the District Court, but at the Court of

JUDGE DAVID LEECH

Appeals as well, Virginia Weisz, head of the North Carolina office of Guardian ad Litem Services in the Administrative Office of the Courts, said during the presentation.

"David's devotion to abused and neglected children was reflected in the high quality of legal representation he provided each individual child," Ms. Weisz said. "His appellate work makes volunteer representation of children more effective throughout North Carolina."

She said that court decisions made as a result of Leech's appeals have made it possible for Guardian ad Litem volunteers statewide to have knowledge of and input into the selection of adoptive homes for children for whom the courts decide an adoptive home is the best solution.

"Everything David has done has always been dedicated to promote the best interest of the child," said Carol Mattocks, coordinator of the Guardian ad Litem program for the 3rd Judicial District.

Ms. Weisz said Leech was selected not only for his dedication to working with and for children but for his commitment to bringing the law closer to the people by participating in the training of and working with volunteer Guardian ad Litem. She said he is knowledgeable of community resources for juveniles and their families, is expert in juvenile law, and has made himself involved with local groups that provide services to young people.

The Patterson Attorney Advocate Award was established in honor of and named for Alice Eller Patterson, a Forsyth County attorney advocate who died when fire destroyed her home New Year's Eve, 1986.

Whitfield Activities

Doug Woodworth of Ayden recently spoke about Indians and artifacts to Kim Daniel's fourth-grade class at G.R. Whitfield School. He brought rocks, arrowheads and a chart about North Carolina's history of Indians.

Gigi Walter of The Daily Reflector spoke with Carolyn Watford's Career Club about newspaper procedures. The club will begin a school newspaper soon.

Ms. Daniel's and Gail Carraway's fourth graders will visit Raleigh Thursday to see the history museum, the Capital, the legislative building, the museum of natural sciences and the Governor's mansion.

Crusade Scheduled

Bishop Ocie Gorham of New Haven, Conn., is conducting an evangelistic crusade at the Anointed Ones Church, 112 W. Second St., Ayden.

During the 7:30 p.m. services today through Friday, the minister will tell about his experiences with drugs and in prison.

VFW Gets New Van

By Jerry Raynor
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Greenville's Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 7032, the Charles Gray Morgan Post, has a new 15-passenger van which Quartermaster Julian Lowery says "has been designed to be an eye-catching vehicle as we use it in our community work."

The 1989 model van is "attractively lettered in red and proudly displays the VFW emblems on all sides."

The vehicle, Lowery says, "should create a positive image of VFW and the things we do. We have lettered each door with our motto, which is, 'We Honor Our Dead By Helping The Living.'"

In addition to activities the post carries out in connection with the VFW membership, Lowery said "we are constantly active in all types of community service, in aid to others, in safety, in official VFW functions and business conducted by the post."

Among the groups VFW works with in assistance programs are civic and church organizations, Boy and Girl Scouts, public agencies such as the sheriff's office and the police force, and others.

The building housing Post 7032 is located on East Mumford Road and has been at that location for 10 years. Current post commander is Lee F. Pascasio.

Membership meetings are held on the first and third Thursdays of each month.

Membership in VFW is open to all military veterans who have served overseas at any place during a wartime situation, whether or not the military member was actually involved in combat while overseas.

Persons interested in details can contact the post by calling 758-3251, or by writing to Post 7032, VFW, P.O. Box 1162, Greenville, N.C., 27834.

Suspect Held In Florida

John Fitzgerald Ward, 24, of Winterville, wanted on murder charges in connection with the death of a night watchman at Keel's Warehouse in August, has been taken into custody in Palm Beach, Fla., Greenville police said this morning.

Detective John Nichols said Ward was taken into custody Tuesday by officers in Palm Beach who learned, through fingerprints, that Ward was wanted on murder charges in Greenville.

Nichols, who said Ward gave Florida lawmen a fictitious name, said he did not know when Ward would be returned to Pitt County.

Ward has been charged with murder in connection with the death of Wilbur Lee Stocks, 72, of Route 1, Winterville, who was found dead at Keel's Warehouse on Dickinson Avenue on Aug. 28.

Stocks, a night watchman at the warehouse, was found in the office area by his son, who went to check on Stocks after telephone calls went unanswered.

Investigators said Stocks died from gunshot wounds to the head. He had also been beaten about the head and a pistol Stocks usually kept in the warehouse office was missing, police said.

Stocks had been a night watchman at Keel's for four years. Prior to that, he had been a night watchman for a tobacco warehouse in Farmville.

Nichols said Ward had been working at the warehouse for a short time before the killing.

Classes Visit Park

Jana Corbitt's and Mary Agnes Mayo's first-grade classes at South Greenville School recently participated in activities concerning pilgrims and Indians. They visited River Park North, where they identified leaves and trees, recognized animal footprints and made leaf prints.

Ken Marsh, visiting artist at Pitt Community College, presented a program of Indian art.

Drug Arrest Made

Reginald Moore, 22, of 603 W. Fifth St. was arrested early Tuesday by Greenville police on possession of drug paraphernalia charges.

Officer K.P. Woods said Moore was also charged with driving without a license in connection with a 1:30 a.m. traffic stop on East 10th Street.

Students Learn Writing

The Sadie Sautler School Parent Teacher Association recently sponsored a poetry workshop for fourth-grade students. Claire Pittman, an East Carolina University professor and a writer, taught creative writing.

The workshop was sponsored to assist the teachers in improving students' writing skills.

Jaycee Parade Set Saturday

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Greenville Jaycees will provide the city with a dose of yuletide good cheer Saturday as the organization sponsors its annual Christmas Parade at 10 a.m.

This year's parade, like the 1987 event, will be staged on a one-mile stretch of Arlington Boulevard, originating in the parking lot of Farm Fresh and continuing to the Boys Club facility.

WNCT-TV anchorman Allen Hofman will be the grand marshal of this year's parade, which is expected to feature nearly 100 units including six floats and five marching bands.

"The Jaycees are committed to helping make Greenville a better place to live and part of that means fostering community spirit and seasonal good will," said Michie

Faulconer, president of the Greenville Jaycees. "This Christmas parade is our way of creating that spirit for the city."

The Jaycees' Christmas Parade is a Greenville institution which, over the course of 20 years, has grown in both size and popularity among holiday revelers of all ages.

"The parade is something the Jaycees enjoy doing and something which we think the community enjoys being a part of," Faulconer said. "And I think there's something in this year's parade for everyone."

Featured will be bands from four county high schools — North Pitt, Rose, Farmville Central and D.H. Conley. A band Southwest Edgecombe High School is also scheduled to march.

A coalition from East Carolina University will be in the lineup, including the men's and women's basketball teams and the ECU cheerleading squad.

Also to be displayed are a number of automobiles from the Coastal Plains chapter of the Antique Car Club.

Also scheduled to participate will be Mayor Ed Carter, Amy Narrin, president of the Greenville Chapter of Today's Women, and Tim Avery, community development vice president of the North Carolina Jaycees.

Also scheduled to appear are several local fire/rescue squads, The Honda Goldwing Motorcycle Club, local Scout and youth groups, racing powerboats, a 25-member drill team from a Kinston ROTC organization, trick-bicyclists, a color guard from a Vietnam Veterans group, and area pageant winners, including the Ayden Collard Queen, the Gritton Shad Queen, the Winterville Watermelon Queen and this year's Rose High School homecoming queen.

Council Will Study Street Route Plans

A revision of the city's Thoroughfare Plan which would reroute the planned Arlington Boulevard extension and Fire Tower Road is one of the items to be considered Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at City Hall by the Greenville City Council.

The proposed revision, which received unanimous support from the Planning and Zoning Commission, would relocate Arlington Boulevard south of Red Banks Road to connect with County Home Road (State Route 1725) south of Bells Fork.

The revision would also involve a minor rerouting of SR 1708 north of its proposed northeasterly route west of Bells Fork.

Currently, the Thoroughfare Plan calls for Arlington Boulevard to continue from its dead end south of Red Banks Road to the intersection of 14th Street extension and SR 1725, intersecting Charles Boulevard north of Bells Fork.

The council will consider a request Thursday by Collice C. Moore to rezone approximately 30 acres located north of Dickinson Avenue extension (U.S. 13) and east of Westwood Subdivision from RA-20 (residential-agriculture) and R-9 (residential) to nine acres of O&I II (office and institutional) and 21 acres of CS (shopping center).

The council will also consider the annexation of three tracts totaling approximately 154 acres.

To be considered is a request by Greenville Properties for the voluntary annexation of 128.15 acres of Westpointe subdivision, located on Stantonsburg Road approximately one mile west of Pitt County Memorial Hospital; a request by Bill Dansey to annex 25.58 acres of Treybrooke subdivision, located north of N.C. 43 and west of SR 1202, and a request by Myles Cartrette to annex .46 acres located west of SR 1700 (Evans Street extension) and being the back portion of Brookfield Apartments, Section II.

The council will consider deleting from the City Code the Greenville Historic Properties Commission and rewriting it to provide for a combined Historic Properties and Districts Commission to be called the Historic Preservation Commission.

Also up for consideration is a recommendation from the Greenville Citizens Advisory Committee on Cable TV to hire a cable consultant.

The committee has recommended the city enter into a contract for approximately $35,000 with Rice, Williams Associates for technical assistance in the city's cable TV franchising process.

The council will also consider entering into an agreement with Staton House Volunteer Fire Department whereby Staton House will provide at the city's request a 1,150-gallon tanker at the scene of a fire at Colonial Mobile Home Park and duplexes in Colonial Village in exchange for $1,500 for one year.

The council will consider a request by the development department to amend the Zoning Ordinance to allow one menu reader board per each restaurant drive-through facility; a resolution to abandon an unused portion of 14th Street located near the railroad tracks; the sale of Disposal Parcel 42-F-2a in the South Evans Community Development Project; an ordinance allowing city employees to bid at public auctions of city surplus property, and designating the recently relocated Patrick-Arthur House as historic property.

Items to be considered on the consent agenda include the release of $9,532 in taxes; the acceptance of streets in Brook Valley and vicinity for permanent city maintenance effective Dec. 31, and an ordinance establishing five new stop signs.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

No End Run

Keep Commitment To Quality

When new East Carolina University head football coach Bill Lewis formulates his game plan, he should designate academics as the key ball carrier.

The university's football program took a giant step toward strengthening its academic reputation under Art Baker, and Lewis should continue that forward progress. Appropriately, Baker recruited high quality players and put education first for his team. Lewis must do the same. A commitment to excellence in the classroom and on the playing field is essential. Nothing else is acceptable.

Whatever his shortcomings on the football field, Baker did build a base of integrity for the program. And while Lewis symbolizes a fresh start for the team's competitive record, his tenure shouldn't represent a change of direction on quality.

Athletes are in college to get an education — and develop whatever competitive talent they have. That talent, however, is secondary to the learning process. Academics and athletics can go hand in hand only if education is given clear priority. The other perspective, placing sports before academics, compromises integrity and produces troubling results. A look at the problems Southern Methodist University has experienced is one example of these results.

The advantages of a vigorous sports program benefit ECU. That is an enriching part of a broad college experience. Developing individual physical talent is important to those who have it — as well as those who might not know their potential without some prodding.

In addition, competition builds support for the university by extending its image. That brings money in the university's direction. Sports also provide an outlet and an activity for the students — usually a harmless one.

But none of these aspects can be effective if a sports program isn't built on integrity and dedication to education.

And at ECU, football creates the most attention. For that reason it bears a large responsibility for a commitment to quality. Baker laid the foundation for that commitment in recruiting and by setting high standards for his players. Lewis should continue it.

A coach's goal is to win, and it would be difficult to find a devoted ECU fan who would profess indifference to improvement in the school's win-loss record in football.

But winning with high caliber players — ones that take academics seriously and aim for a college degree, not just a college football career — is the proper direction. There can be no end run around school for ECU athletics.

Way Cleared

Expansion Needed For Larger Role

The way was virtually cleared for a $58 million Pitt County Memorial Hospital expansion with conditional approval of a Certificate of Need announced last week.

The Certificate of Need is issued by the state Department of Human Resources and is required before a hospital expansion is carried out. It was specified that the expansion is for purposes of teaching and research only, which is a part of PCMH's mission as a teaching hospital for the ECU School of Medicine. The school's facilities are located adjacent to the hospital.

That was the intent of the application, according to hospital officials. The application was made under the academic provision of the CON statutes.

The expansion will provide 143 new beds, renovation of some present beds and an array of support facilities. The hospital board of trustees can now choose an architect and begin work on financing for the large project. The first phase is anticipated for use in 1992 with further phases to be completed in 1993 and 1994.

Proceeding with the massive expansion is proper, not just to serve Pitt County, but to meet the needs of eastern North Carolina. PCMH was originally constructed as a county hospital. Before it was completed the agreement was reached to fulfill a clinical function in conjunction with the medical school. Even prior to completion of the original building expansions were made to accommodate the medical school. Additions have been under way since.

This newest project will be by far the most costly addition. It must be recognized, however, that it is needed for PCMH's larger mission as a medical school teaching facility. While the hospital still fills its originally planned role as a county hospital to serve county citizens, it has moved far beyond that. The planned expansion is a necessity if PCMH is to provide the facilities that the medical school must have to fully develop.

32 Years, And Still A Minority

WASHINGTON — Robert H. Michel has a distinction he would like to shed. The House Republican leader has represented Peoria in Congress for the last 32 years, and never once has he been in the majority. Party record-keepers say that he "has the dubious distinction of having served longer without interruption in minority status than any other Republican in the history of this country."

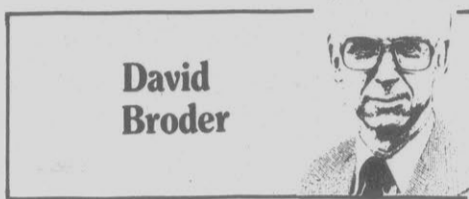

Michel told the House Republican caucus on Monday, "I wouldn't wish that on any of you." But changing the makeup of Congress — especially the House — is a more daunting challenge for Republicans than breaking the

'But Republican frustration with the unchanging House status quo is clearly rising. Bob Michel is far from alone in saying "never again" should anyone have to serve 32 years in Congress without escaping minority status.'

GOP's grip on the White House is for the Democrats. By the time George Bush finishes his first term, Republicans will have held the White House for 20 of the last 24 years. But in 1990, Democrats will have controlled the House for 36 straight years and the Senate for all but six years of that span.

While five of the last eight Presidents have either failed of election or withdrawn in the face of strong political opposition, the success rates for members of the House have increased to the point that 98 out of every 100 seeking re-election are routinely returned for another term.

The Constitution envisaged the House as the most sensitive barometer of changes in political mood, but the "incumbent lock" makes it no barometer at all. Realistic Republicans know that to increase the competitiveness of House races, at least three major changes must be made.

David Broder

First, district lines would have to be redrawn to encourage competition, not protect the maximum number of safe incumbents. The reapportionment following the 1990 census will provide an opportunity, but Republicans' persistent weakness in the legislatures cripples their chances of winning many clearly partisan battles. So they must work with nonpartisan groups, including those seeking to enhance the power of under-represented minorities, in litigation aimed at challenging the sweetheart districting designed by incumbents of both parties.

Michel is launching his own redistricting task force, but a crucial role can be played by the Justice Department if Attorney General Dick Thornburgh orders it to take an aggressive stance in opposition to pro-incumbent gerrymandering — whichever party is responsible.

The second area is campaign finance. Competition will remain rare until the parties or public financing provide most challengers enough money to get their names known and their messages heard. Even then, challenger victories will be uncommon unless some way is found to curb the gross advantage incumbents now exploit in collecting money from political-action committees (PACs) and other access-seeking contributors. In this year's House races, 85 cents of every PAC dollar went to incumbents — a huge barrier to political change.

In the past, many Republican incumbents have opposed rules changes aimed at helping challengers. But Michel told his colleagues he wants a thorough review of the party position on campaign finance, including the role of PACs. And Rep. Newt Gingrich (R-Ga.), who will play a crucial role in shaping Republican campaign-finance proposals on the House Elections Subcommittee, is committed to the view that increased competition is the main goal of any reform.

The third area involves issues. Republicans are planning a major challenge to the welter of rules and procedures, including the allocation of committee seats and staff positions, which they believe deny them a fair shot at presenting their alternatives to Democratic legislation. Their goal is to gain a larger voice in shaping laws — or sharpening issues for the next campaign.

The Democrats will undoubtedly smother the Republican rules changes, and that will be the end of the matter — unless President-elect Bush is persuaded to enter the fray. Some Republicans, like Michael J. Horowitz, the former general counsel in the Office of Management and Budget under President Reagan, and OMB director David Stockman, are advocating that Bush threaten to veto the legislative branch appropriations bill, unless the Democrats deal seriously with the rules, staffing and campaign finance laws which give incumbents their enormous advantages in securing re-election.

Horowitz argues that if Bush denied Congress the money for all the mass mailings and district-office staff positions which bolster the incumbents' re-election machines, the Republican minority could sustain the veto and the issue could be dramatized for the whole country to see. Bush is not likely to embrace that radical an attack on the so-called principle of comity between the branches. It would clearly invite retaliatory assaults from Capitol Hill on the White House and OMB budgets.

But Republican frustration with the unchanging House status quo is clearly rising. Bob Michel is far from alone in saying "never again" should anyone have to serve 32 years in Congress without escaping minority status.

Traditional Ambiance, Modern World

BOSTON — She is suffering from an impulse to make orange marmalade. It may pass; it usually does. She has the jelly glasses from two years ago to prove that.

My friend thinks of her marmalade fancy as a tradition attack, although the recipe is most assuredly not from her family lineage, nor is it in her palate. Although she is most assuredly not a traditional woman.

But she regards this moment, or so she says, as part of a trend, a surge in the number and duration of the tradition attacks in herself and the people we both know. Among the most modern of them, there seems to be a longing for the comfort of what is old.

This is a trend that can be seen in the magazine she opens for me, the kind that is geared to homes and houses. This December, the Christmas colors that deck those pages aren't green and red, but shades of gold and amber. The interiors resemble manors lit by a crackling fireplace. There is the implication, the subtext, that every real holiday home should have at least a hearth.

The scenes that come to eye repeatedly are Edwardian or Victorian, or even Georgian. They are variations of the patterns inscribed on sheets and wallpapers. Furnishings for an English ancestral home, the sort of place that has a spaniel or two, where Alistair Cooke might be found in a chair warmed by wassail and a plaid lap robe.

In all probability, the tables in the magazines were construed by some hip food stylist in mid-town Manhattan, dressed to kill in black leather, who glazed the traditional goose and arranged the traditional feast under nontraditional strobe lights. The dining room was probably captured by an equally hip photographer in jeans who shot the Noel feast in highspeed color.

But real-life homes and tables are also full of such imagery and such contradictions. This year there will be electronic toys under many a Dickensian Christmas tree. A compact disc will play Christmas carols. A microwave oven will make at least one fruitcake. Or one batch of marmalade.

It occurs to both of us that there is much conversation now about nesting, as if the homing instinct, once extinct, had mysteriously reappeared among our national species. It is true that young couples are going to extraordinary lengths to own a home. The irony is that more of them now work outside their houses just to pay for those houses.

Today, "lived-in" is a look rather than a reality. Families may actually have less time under their own roofs than any previous generation. At times it seems that homes are environments we create for the lives we don't actually lead because we aren't in them. They build family rooms for small families and elaborate kitchens for people who eat fewer, faster meals in them.

Like my friend the marmalade maker, many of us work long hours in contemporary offices behind a modular desk, in Bauhaus buildings with windows that don't open, in artificial workspaces with plants that are chosen for their ability to live without sunlight. While we are there, our homes sit like empty stage sets waiting for us to come back and act on them.

It is possible that the less time we spend there, the more important they are as our theater. Our interiors may have come to represent something, a fantasy life about home and family, a place out of place with our real modern lives. This may be especially true during that elaborate annual short-run production called the holidays.

Americans have always lived in two time zones: now and then. But the gap between present and past is greater for us now. People who work in hi-tech environments and eat oat bran acquired a modest yearning for comfort furniture and comfort food — for the fantasy we call tradition, even if our real traditions go back to Krakow instead of Kent.

Maybe that gap is why there's a passion to put a traditional ambiance around modern world. For a wood-burning fireplace in the midst of central heating. For a Victorian print on our no-iron sheets. It may even be why a thoroughly modern woman with two serious suits and a lap-top computer is at this moment still thinking about jars of orange marmalade.

Abortion Foes Mapping Plan To Restrict State-Funded Services

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Abortion opponents, encouraged by the November elections, are planning an aggressive assault on the state abortion fund for poor women in next year's legislative session.

"We've got the best chance we've ever had to restrict abortion funding," said Rep. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus, an abortion foe who is seeking to become House minority leader.

Supporters of the fund, which allows some poor women to have an abortion at state expense, acknowledge that they will have to fight to maintain the fund.

"It will be close," said Charlotte Brody, associate director of Planned Parenthood of Greater Charlotte. "We're going to have to work harder, and we're prepared to do that."

Abortion opponents feel they are gaining strength. Their man, George Bush, won the presidency, and the pro-abortion majority on the U.S. Supreme Court has dwindled.

In North Carolina, Republicans increased their legislative seats by 13 in last month's election; they will hold 59 of the 170 seats. Voting on the issue has not always been along partisan lines, but opponents of the Abortion Fund hope a coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats will vote to slash it.

They will have Republican Gov. Jim Martin on their side.

"I would expect the governor to be personally involved in lobbying on this issue," Phil Kirk, Martin's chief of staff, told The Charlotte Observer.

Poor women in North Carolina can receive a state-funded abortion if they are a victim of rape or incest, if a physician determines that the fetus is deformed or if a physician determines that the women's health would be impaired by the pregnancy.

Opponents of the fund say it is too easy for a woman to get a doctor to say her health would be impaired by the pregnancy; supporters say that's a reasonable standard.

Martin thinks the fund should apply only in cases of rape or incest or if the mother's life is endangered. Kirk said Martin's budget would include a much smaller abortion fund, as Martin has proposed in previous years.

In fiscal year 1987-88, Martin proposed a fund of $200,000. The legislature allocated $925,000. Of that, $800,000 was used to pay for 3,600 abortions.

Since the abortion fund was created in 1978, there have been many attempts to slash it. In 1985, prodded by Martin and other abortion foes, the legislature reduced the fund by 30 percent. Since then, there have been other attempts to cut the fund more dramatically, some of which have failed by narrow margins.

"An extra few votes could go a long way," said Rep. Johnathan Rhyne, R-Lincoln, another fund opponent who is seeking to become House minority leader.

Abortion opponents think they now have those extra few votes.

Robeson Tuscaroras Indicted On Kidnap Charges

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LUMBERTON, N.C. — Saying he's frustrated and angry that state hostage-taking charges have surfaced less than two months after he and Eddie Hatcher were acquitted of federal charges, Timothy Jacobs told a Raleigh TV station he won't return to North Carolina.

"There's no way they can find me. I'm safe where I'm at and I'm not worried about them or whoever else they've got working for them," Jacobs told WRAL TV in a telephone interview Tuesday night.

A specially called Robeson County grand jury Tuesday indicted the two Tuscarora Indians on 14 charges each of second-degree kidnapping in taking hostages at The Robesonian newspaper on Feb. 1.

Hatcher was arrested by sheriff's deputies in Pembroke shortly after the indictments were returned and Jacobs' family had been notified that Jacobs should turn himself in, Sheriff Hubert Stone said.

Jacobs reacted to the charges from a hiding place in New York.

"I'm really upset about it. I'm sick upset about it," he said. "I was tried before in federal court for the same charges except they were different wording. I was tried for hostage taking; that didn't apply. So the people down there that were behind these charges ... they were upset.

"They lost the battle," Jacobs said. "The war's not over with yet. That's the way I look at it."

Supporters of Hatcher and Jacobs say the state charges are vindictive, but one former hostage says they should "pay for what they've done."

"The vindictive nature of this is so apparent to me that it makes me ashamed to be part of the human race," said William Kunstler, who represented Hatcher, but could not be present during his federal trial on hostage-taking charges.

"It is not technically double jeopardy, since hostage-taking and kidnapping are separate charges, but they are punishing them twice, or trying to, for the same offense," said Kunstler, who intends to represent Hatcher on the state charges.

"This is an ugly, vindictive prosecution designed to punish them for being acquitted."

"Ridiculous," said District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt said today from a judge's conference he is attending in Chapel Hill. He refused further comment, but said the investigation is not over.

"There is an intense investigation under way looking at a conspiracy before Feb. 1 and possible obstruction of justice charges after Feb. 1," Britt said.

Mary Ann Mayers, a circulation secretary at The Robesonian and one of those held hostage, said that although she tried to be forgiving, she was pleased with the indictments. She said Hatcher and Jacobs should answer for the terror inflicted when they commandeered the newspaper office with sawed-off shotguns.

"The Bible says we shouldn't glory in another man's woes, and I'm trying not to do that," she said. "I just feel like they need to pay for what they've done."

Superior Court Judge Robert Hobgood set bond for the two men at $140,000 each.

Hatcher, 31, and Jacobs, 20, were acquitted by a federal jury Oct. 14 on hostage-taking and firearms violations.

Hatcher and Jacobs never denied taking over the newspaper, but said they were trying to save their lives by drawing attention to Hatcher's claims that he had information linking public officials to drug trafficking.

Hatcher claimed during the newspaper siege that Stone was trying to have him killed and said he would not surrender to deputies because his life would be in jeopardy in the county jail.

"We will treat him just like everybody else," said Stone, when asked if any special precautions were being taken with Hatcher. "He'll be treated just like any other prisoner in the jail."

Allen Gregory of the Christic Institute South in Carrboro, one of the attorneys who represented Jacobs, said the state indictments came as a surprise.

"We really didn't expect him (Britt) to bring state charges," Gregory said. "We thought he would leave that to his successor."

Britt is leaving the district attorney's office to become a Superior Court judge in Robeson County next month. Britt, who is white, won the May primary after his Democratic opponent — Indian legal aid lawyer Julian Pierce — was gunned down in what investigators say was a domestic dispute. He faced no Republican opposition in the November general election.

Britt was at a judge's conference Tuesday and could not be reached for comment.

State Bureau of Investigation agent James Bowman said he expects more indictments to come later against alleged co-conspirators and others suspected of obstruction of justice. He would not elaborate.

The indictments name only 14 hostages as prosecution witnesses in the case. Bowman said investigators believed some of the hostages did not wish to prosecute the men.

The maximum sentence for second-degree kidnapping is 30 years on each count. The presumptive sentence — the sentence normally given — is nine years.

Agency Asks Court To Reserve Funds

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The state agency that insures colleges student loans has gone to court to try to stop the federal government from seizing $2.6 million in "excess" reserves, saying the United States has no valid claim to the money.

The suit challenges the constitutionality of a 1987 federal deficit-reduction provision requiring such agencies to turn over "excess cash reserves" to the U.S. Department of Education.

The Education Department originally tried to get $15.9 million in reserve funds but waived $13.3 million when the state said that giving up the money would violate agreements with lenders, according to the complaint, filed Thursday in U.S. District Court.

The state and the N.C. State Education Assistance Authority, the plaintiffs, say the provision's intent was "to seize funds which were the sole property of the state of North Carolina for the purpose of permitting the federal government to spend additional money without raising legal issues."

They accuse the federal government of violating a prior agreement under which the education secretary reimburses the state for losses from students default, and the federal government in turn reimburses the state.

But to reduce the state's reserve, the U.S. Education Department will reduce reimbursement payments and also could cut its payments of the state for administrative costs, the complaint says.

North Carolina is the seventh state to file suit over the provision, part of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act, according to Stan C. Broadway, executive director of the authority.

Wisconsin, Ohio, Delaware, Iowa, South Carolina and New Hampshire also have taken legal action, and the suits are imminent in other states, he said.

The suit alleges that the provision places a "grossly disproportionate burden" on guaranty agencies, such as North Carolina's, that have low default rates. The agency has a default rate of about 3 percent, Broadway said.

Furniture Firm Seeks Protection

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STONEVILLE, N.C. — The financially troubled Stoneville Furniture Co. has filed a Chapter 11 bankruptcy petition in federal court, after sending its employees home in the second layoff in two weeks.

Sam Swirsky, the company president, said Tuesday night that he expects the plant to reopen Dec. 12 under the leadership of Jack Louza, who formerly headed Stoneville Furniture.

Under Chapter 11, a company obtains a federal court order freeing it from the threat of creditors' lawsuits until it can develop a plan to put its finances in order. Any reorganization plan must be approved by a majority of the creditors.

Disaster Units Offer Assistance To Tornado Victims

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — It surely wasn't as hard as the ordeal they had just survived, but for many tornado victims, walking into the Raleigh federal disaster center was a tough task.

"You get to the point where you just don't have anything anymore," said Laurie Madure, whose Calibre Oaks apartment was severely damaged by the twister. "I didn't have insurance, that's why I'm here."

David J. Hatch, a mortgage banker whose North Raleigh condominium was damaged by the twister, went to the center Tuesday for advice about car insurance difficulties and tax deductions.

"I didn't know what kind of help I could get, or even if I would qualify for it," he said. "I really wasn't going to do anything about it and just struggle through. But I decided to swallow my pride and go in and see what I could get."

In its first day of operation Tuesday, the Raleigh center received requests for assistance from 219 victims. About 750 families are expected to seek help before the center closes Saturday. It will be open from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. each day.

A disaster relief center in the Franklin County town of Louisburg received 41 requests Tuesday.

Relief officials urged all tornado victims to seek assistance.

"If they sustained any damage at all, even if they think it is trivial and meaningless, they need to come and put in an application," said Thomas Hegele, public information officer for the Federal Emergency Management Agency. "They might find out they qualify for things they didn't even realize."

"It will be very, very easy," said Paul E. Hall, coordinator of the disaster centers for FEMA. "They will come in and be signed in."

Most people spent less than 90 minutes at the center, and many were finished in about 45 minutes, said Mr. Hegele.

People without transportation can call the toll-free number to arrange for rides to and from the center. Free child care is provided at the center.

Federal disaster officials say many of the aid programs are aimed at people with little or no insurance.

Like 150 other victims, Ms. Madure, for example, was waiting to see whether she qualified for a low-interest Small Business Administration loan. Those unable to pay back a loan were given federal grants, which do not have to be paid back.

There is no upper income limit to receive SBA loans, and most are given to individual homeowners, rather than businesses.

On leaving the Raleigh center, Patricia Arrington urged people to take advantage of the assistance it offered.

"They'll be surprised," said Ms. Arrington, a Raleigh resident who was mainly concerned about damage to her furniture. "I haven't even been here 45 minutes. They told me everything I needed to know and even made suggestions."

Organizations offering legal advice and assistance to the elderly, the unemployed and farmers, as well as groups answering questions about insurance and building assessments, were on hand.

Disaster officials say relatively few Wake County victims have sought help from local relief agencies.

Worker Killed

CHARLOTTE (AP) — One man was killed and another was seriously injured when a crane lowering pipe into a ditch touched a 24,000-volt power line, according to Mecklenburg County police.

John Ray Juneau, 24, of Forest City, was killed in the accident, which occurred Monday as he was working at a site on Texland Boulevard, east of I-77. Walter Scott Horn, 23, of Spindale, was listed in critical condition at Charlotte Memorial Hospital.

The accident occurred when another man was operating a crane, which was lowering pipe with boring augers into a ditch. Juneau and Horn were guiding the pipe when either it or the crane struck a power line, sending as many as 14,000 volts of electricity through the two men, police said.

Indicted

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Four teen-agers who had been charged with aiding and abetting second-degree murder in the fatal stabbing of another teen have been indicted on a lesser charge of felony riot.

In addition, the Davidson County grand jury indicted Robert F. Branham, 18, on charges of second-degree murder, felony riot and assault with a deadly weapon, inflicting serious injury.

The charges stem from the death of Marcus Bey, 18, a junior at Lexington Senior High School, who was stabbed in the neck with a hunting knife during an after-school fight last month.

Those charged with felony riot are 17-year-old Christopher Pratt, 17, and 16-year-olds Eric Pratt, Brooks Hooper, and Christopher Justice. Felony riot is punishable by a maximum five-year prison term.

Grievances

RALEIGH (AP) — The grievance committee of the N.C. State Bar has filed complaints against two Raleigh lawyers, saying they failed to pay state income taxes.

Ernest Ray Briggs, 52, and Rodney Allen Cook, 40, pleaded guilty in June in Wake District Court to failing to file or pay state income tax in 1985 and 1986. They were given a prayer for judgment continued, ordered to pay the delinquent amount and fined $200.

The bar action, filed last week, means the two will have to appear before a panel for a disciplinary hearing within 90 days. The panel will determine whether the two have violated the bar's rules of professional conduct.

Convicted

RALEIGH (AP) — A federal jury convicted three Raleigh residents Tuesday of charges relating to a holdup in June of the State Employees Credit Union in Raleigh.

Creadell Hubbard, 30, and Alice Biggs Williams, 42, were found guilty of armed bank robbery and possession of a firearm during a crime of violence. Williams, Hubbard and Hubbard's brother, Fred Douglas Hubbard, 25, also were convicted of conspiracy and of receiving, possessing, concealing, storing and disposing of stolen credit union money.

Testifying for the government were two co-defendants, Newman Alton Jiles, 45, and Elbert Lee Porter, 43, both of Raleigh. The two had previously pleaded guilty to possession of stolen credit union money.

No sentencing date has been set.

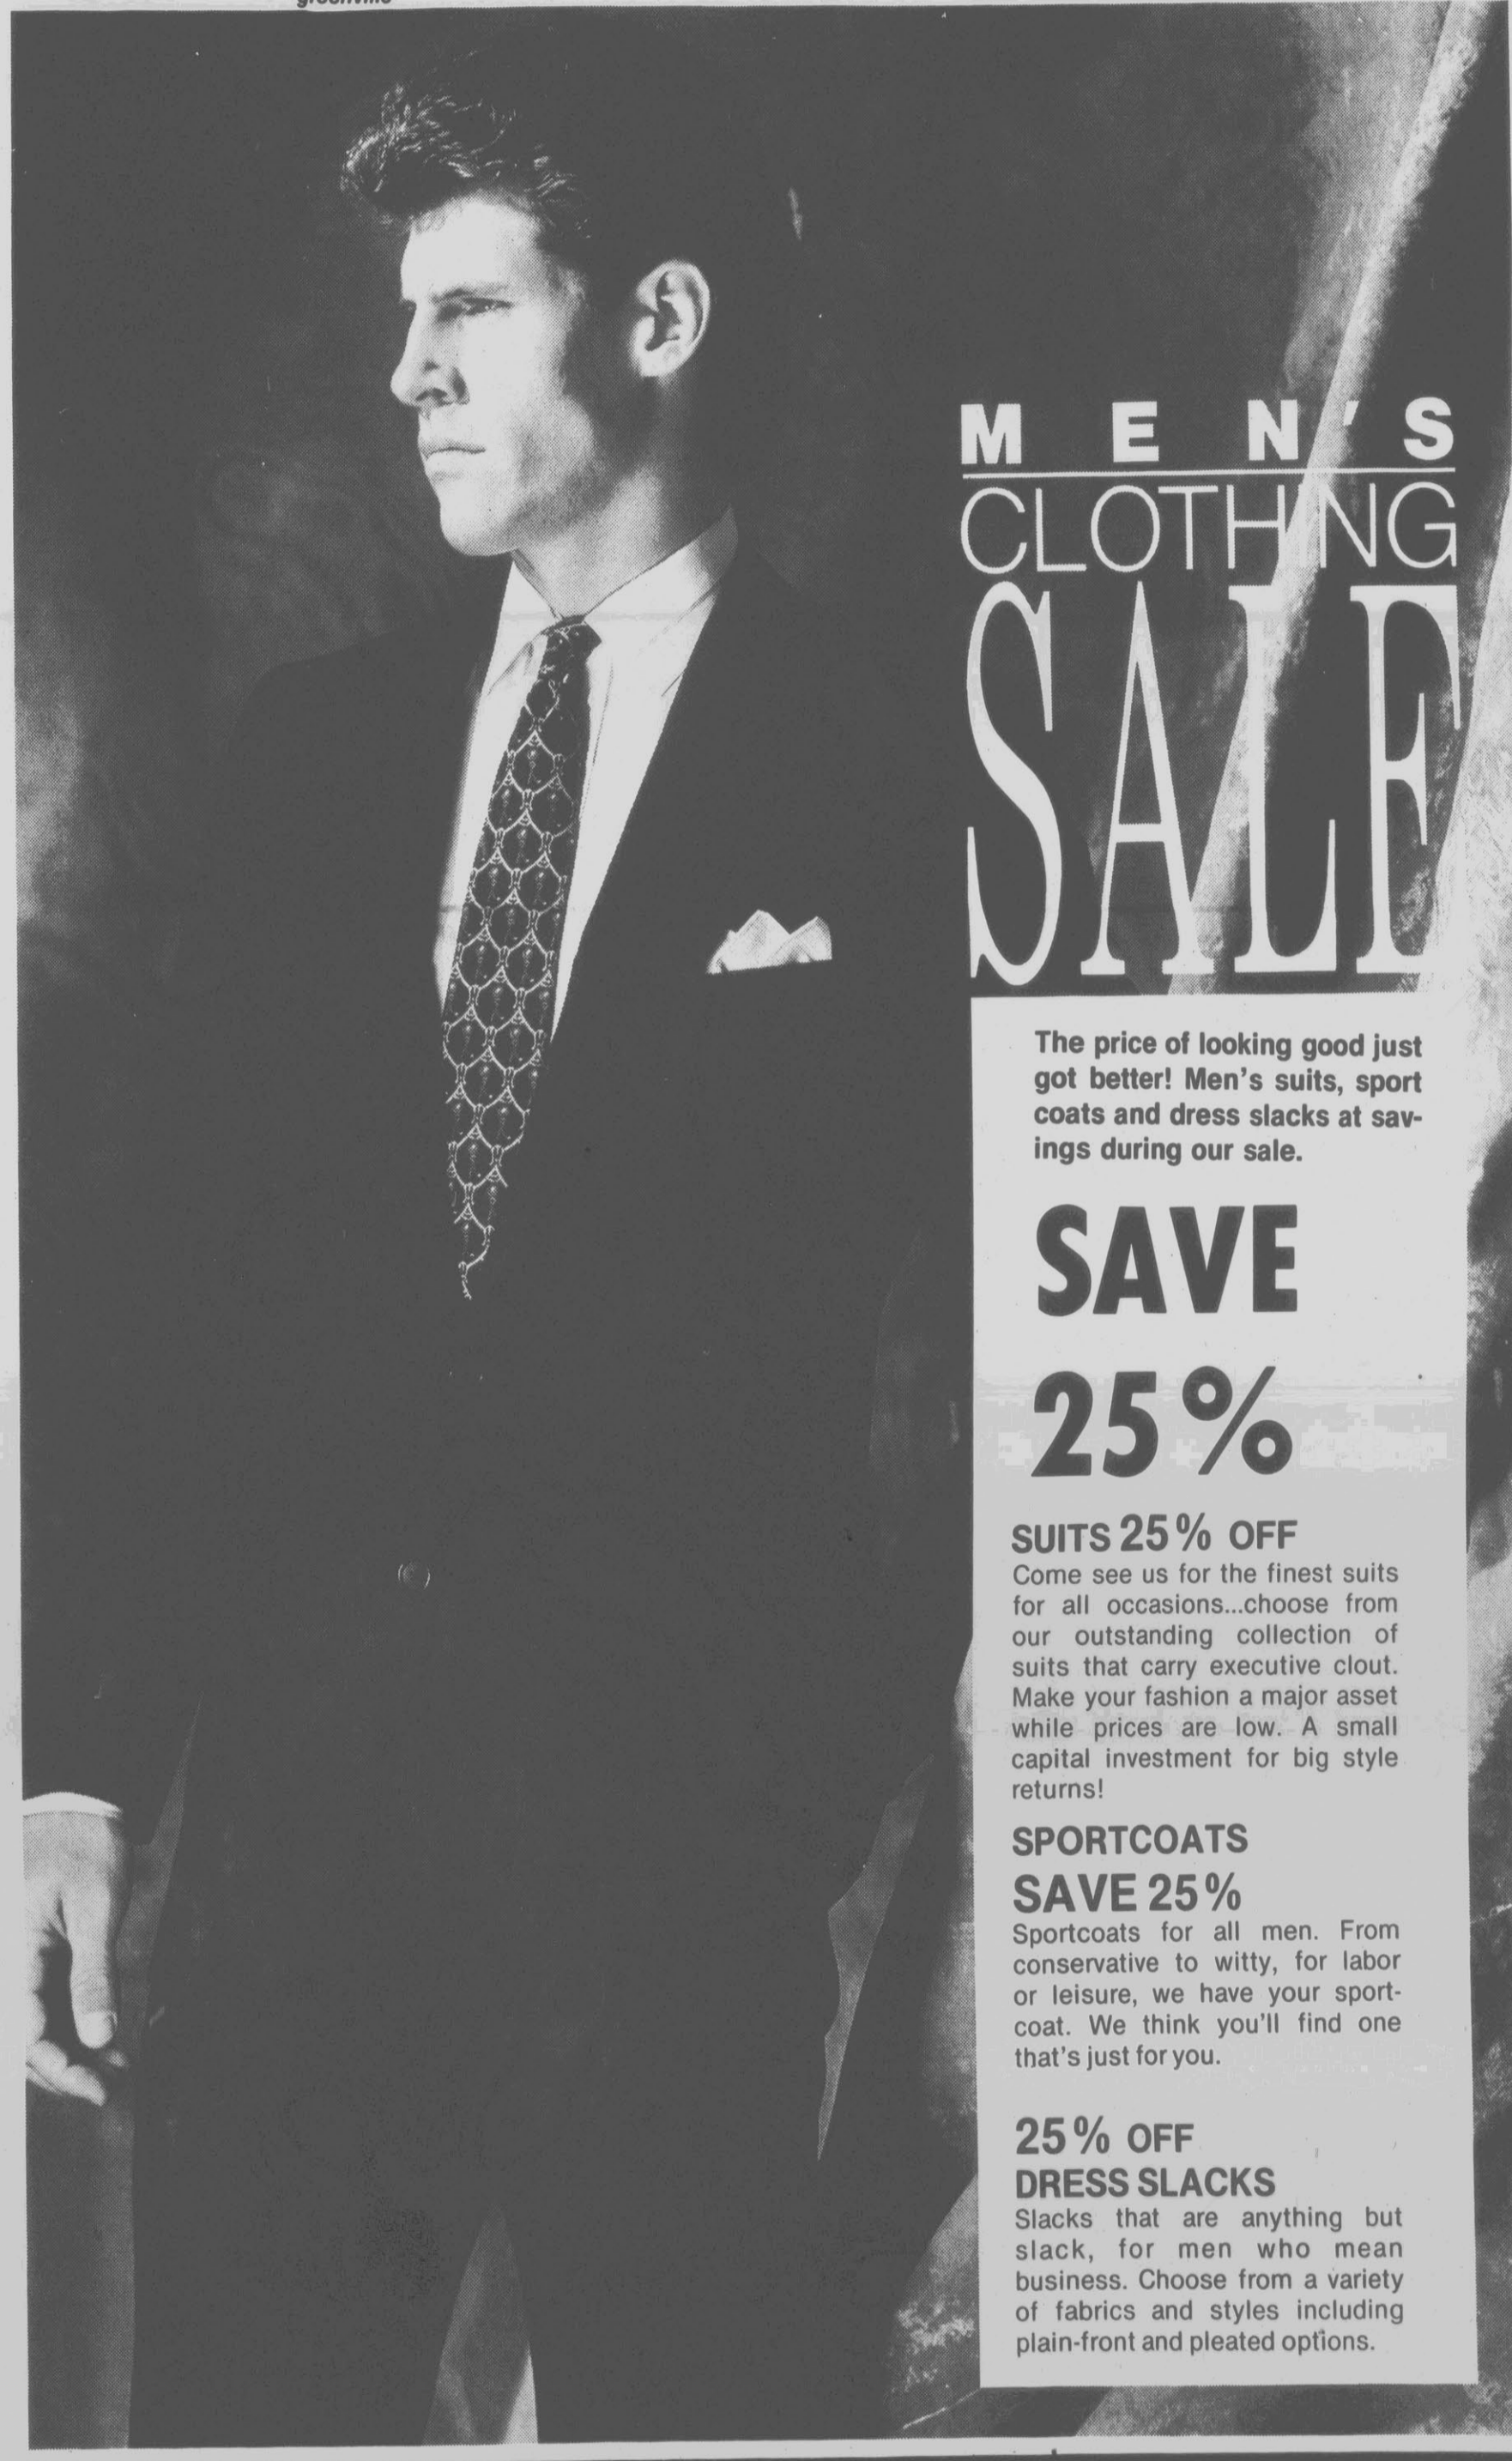

Airport Expansion

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Rapidly growing Charlotte-Douglas International Airport has begun an expansion that could carry it into the era of jumbo jets and greatly expanded international travel.

Airport executives said Tuesday that contractors are pouring foundations for the $16 million Concourse D, which will house four international gates and 21 enclosed, ground-level gates for commuter flights. The international gates are designed to accommodate up to three 500-passenger Boeing 747s simultaneously.

Piedmont Airlines serves London and Nassau, Bahamas, from Charlotte-Douglas. Company officials have declined to comment on whether USAir, which will take over Piedmont on Jan. 1, will add international flights.

Gardner Hosting $1,000-A-Person Fund-Raiser Event

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Lt. Gov.-elect Jim Gardner has invited legislative lobbyists to a $1,000-a-person reception Thursday night to help pay off a $150,000 campaign debt.

The reception comes just a month after the Nov. 8 election and in the midst of a reorganization of the power structure in the state Senate.

Gardner, a Republican who will preside over a Democratic-majority Senate, defeated his opponent, state Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, a member of the Senate leadership. That victory left many of the state's most influential lobbyists backing the losing candidate.

In interviews Tuesday, some lobbyists grumbled about the timing of the reception. Some speculated that Gardner was giving those lobbyists who had contributed heavily to the Rand campaign a chance to even the score.

A few, like Raleigh lobbyist Sam Johnson, said the price of admission was too high.

"Normally we pay respect to the office, but the admission is a little high for me," said Johnson, who is considered one of the most influential lobbyists and whose clients include automobile dealers and the soap and detergent industry. "I have never been to anything that cost a $1,000."

Bill Holman, a lobbyist for several environmental groups that backed Rand, said that he had received an invitation, but did not plan to attend. He also said the ticket price was too high.

"I have never gone to one that cost $1,000," Holman said. "It is not anything personally. Since a lot of lobbyists backed Tony Rand for lieutenant governor, I suspect it is an effort by Gardner to allow people to make amends."

Several lobbyists were reluctant to say publicly whether they would attend the reception, but said that the invitation had caused a lot of talk among lobbyists.

One lobbyist, who backed Rand, said he planned to take advantage of the opportunity to meet Gardner.

"My perception is, here is someone that I and others like me are going to have to work with for a few years," the lobbyist told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

"I interpret it as him extending an olive branch to those who were on the other side," the lobbyist said. "I am not offended by it. I think all of it is indicative of the trend that the price of playing poker is going up."

Terry Edmondson, finance director for the Gardner campaign, said the campaign debt was about $150,000. He said lobbyists, professionals such as doctors, and representatives of political action committees had been invited to the reception. The event will be closed to the news media, he said.

Paul Richardson, the manager of Gardner's campaign who now heads his transition team, said the reception targeted those groups who would have representatives lobbying the General Assembly.

"After the election, it is just tradition to invite them in to see if they would like to support the one who won," Richardson said. "They have an interest in working with the elected official. This is a chance to get to know him and contribute to paying off his campaign debt."

Charities May Reap Benefits From RJR

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — While philanthropic organizations that hold stock in RJR Nabisco wait for some of the profits to roll their way, organizations that don't even have stock in the company are hoping to share in the billions of dollars that will be paid to stockholders.

The buyout could mean windfalls of epic proportions — in one case as much as $260 million — for philanthropic organizations. The Greensboro News & Record reported Tuesday.

Wake Forest University, the Winston-Salem United Way and area churches have run newspaper ads, sent letters and held seminars telling people how to donate a part of their new found riches.

"Some people see this as an asset they helped create in this community, and might view this as a good opportunity to give some stock away," said Henry Carter, executive director of the Winston-Salem Foundation. "Frankly, we hope a number of them do that."

Some already have. About $2.5 million in stock has been donated to the foundation since RJR Nabisco President F. Ross Johnson announced his buyout bid in October, Carter said.

The Kate Biting Reynolds Trust, a Winston-Salem philanthropic organization, will collect more than $260 million from the sale of its 2.4 million shares.

Vance Frye, director of the trust, said it is difficult to tell how much new money reinvestment of the stock will produce or how that money will be used.

"Kate Biting Reynolds' will stipulated that none of the stock could be sold, but Wachovia Bank and Trust Co., the trustee, has filed a petition asking the court to allow the sale. No decision has been made, but it is likely the sale will be approved, Frye said.

"Obviously, with the appreciation of the stock price and increase of income, we'll be in a higher strata in terms of grant-making ability," Frye said. "But we're not sure how it will affect our grant-making policies. We'll just have to think that through."

Thomas Lambeth, executive director of the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation, said the record buyout of RJR — in which stock will be sold for nearly double the price for which it was trading in October — would be positive for nonprofit organizations, which do not pay the capital gains tax that will eat into the profit of private shareholders.

The two trusts supporting the foundation could get more than $80 million from the sale of 800,000 RJR shares, adding $1 million annually to the $8 million the foundation gives away.

Lambeth said he has no immediate plans for its new income, but said the foundation had $20 million in requests.

"It will be no problem spending it and spending it well," he said.

Another Winston-Salem trust, the Mary Reynolds Babcock Foundation, holds about 35,000 shares, which could generate about $3.8 million.

Community organizations have been quick to let shareholders know they're willing to accept gifts.

"Before you sell your RJR stock, read what some of your shares can do," said a Winston-Salem United Way newspaper ad.

Visitors arrive at a memorial built over the sunken hull of the USS Arizona at Pearl Harbor

Hawaii Plans Observances Of Attack On Pearl Harbor

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONOLULU — President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev should remember Pearl Harbor as they meet in New York, says a retired Navy captain who survived the Japanese sneak attack 47 years ago today.

"I hope they're working for peace as we're remembering war," said Forrest Biard, who was to be the keynote speaker at a National Park Service ceremony marking the Dec. 7, 1941, attack that plunged the United States into World War II.

"We were both on the same side during World War II, but look what's happened since then," the 75-year-old Biard said of the superpowers. Gorbachev arrived in New York on Tuesday for informal talks with Reagan and President-elect George Bush.

Thousands were expected to attend ceremonies across Hawaii today commemorating the air raid on Hawaiian military installations. The largest crowds generally gather at Pearl Harbor, which was hardest hit.

The Park Service predicted 1,000 people — sailors past and present, tourists and history buffs — would mark the attack at its ceremony on the harbor shore, and that 5,000 others would attend special programs and lectures throughout the day.

More than 2,400 people were killed and 1,200 wounded that Sunday morning in 1941.

The Navy planned a private ceremony today aboard the USS Arizona Memorial, which spans the sunken hull of the battleship as a tribute to the 1,177 men who went down with the battleship. The Arizona was one of 21 ships damaged or destroyed in the raid.

At 7:55 a.m. HST (12:55 p.m. EDT), the moment the first bombs fell, a moment of silence was to be observed. Then, Hawaii Air National Guard jets were to fly in the "missing man" formation.

A Navy ship was to pass the memorial, and wreaths and flowers were to be presented as the national anthem and Navy hymn were played.

Remarks by Navy officials were to be followed by prayers, a 21-gun salute and Marine Corps buglers playing "Taps."

Pearl Harbor entered this year's presidential campaign on Sept. 7 when Bush, in a speech to an American Legion meeting in Louisville, Ky., erroneously reminded veterans that that day was the attack's anniversary.

The flub angered many Pearl Harbor survivors, but had a positive effect, said Dan Martinez, a spokesman at the USS Arizona Memorial.

"Unfortunately, so many Americans, especially younger ones, have forgotten the importance of Pearl Harbor, or never learned it," Martinez said. "So in a way, Mr. Bush's mistake got people to remember when it really was, and what it really means."

"December 7, 1941, is a turning point in history," he said, adding that "it changed the lives of all Americans, whether they realize it or not."

Perdue Says Chicks Skinny

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — The chickens sold in the Soviet Union are so scrawny that shoppers joke the poultry is starved to death rather than slaughtered, and even Frank Perdue says he can't help until the emaciated birds are fed better.

Perdue, who picked over the poultry during a visit to Moscow's famous G.U.M. department store on Red Square last week, politely referred to the chickens he saw as "lean" and "narrow-breasted."

"The chickens lack protein," concluded Perdue, chairman and chief promoter of Perdue Farms Inc., the United States' fourth-largest poultry producer.

Soviet chickens make do with 15 percent corn feed plus wheat and barley, while Perdue says he feeds his birds on a diet of nearly 60 percent corn.

Their diet isn't likely to improve soon since both corn and high protein soybeans require a warmer climate than found in most of the Soviet Union, said Donald W. Mabe, president and chief executive of Perdue Farms.

One solution by local cooks is impaling the chicken on a glass milk bottle filled with water. The bird and bottle are balanced in the oven and the chicken is steamed from the inside out while it bakes. The recipe is called "Chicken on a Bottle."

Bush Fills Business Jobs, Taps Webster To Stay As CIA Director

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President-elect George Bush filled his top two trade jobs with a close friend and a Ford administration veteran, and tapped longtime officials William Webster and Thomas Pickering for positions he once held himself — CIA director and U.N. ambassador.

Bush said Tuesday he has chosen Texas oilman Robert Mosbacher, a longtime friend and Republican fund raiser, as commerce secretary, and Washington attorney Carla Hills as U.S. trade representative. The latter move prompted quick Democratic criticism that Bush had selected someone without extensive experience in trade.

Rounding out appointments to his economic team, Bush announced selection of Stanford University economist Michael Boskin to head the Council of Economic Advisers. Bush called Boskin "one of this nation's preeminent economists."

Bush said he was seeking continuity at the CIA when he asked Webster to stay on at the intelligence agency. President Reagan named Webster, a former FBI director, to the CIA job last year after the death of William Casey.

Pickering, 57, currently is ambassador to Israel. If confirmed by the Senate, he will replace Vernon Walters as ambassador to the United Nations.

Pickering's primary experience is in the Middle East, where he also was ambassador to Jordan from 1974 to 1978 during President Jimmy Carter's administration.

HILLS BOSKIN

Transition officials said no additional appointments were expected until Bush returns from New York, where he was accompanying President Reagan to a meeting today with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Bush said that his CIA director and U.N. ambassador will not have Cabinet rank, but that both would attend Cabinet meetings when pertinent subjects were discussed.

"There is no point in the United Nations ambassador sitting around, as I did for a while, talking about agriculture policy," Bush said.

Bush was U.N. ambassador under President Nixon and was CIA director during the Ford administration.

Bush's choice for trade representative, Hills, also served in the Ford administration, as secretary of housing and urban development.

The 54-year-old Hills is the first woman Bush has tapped for a high-level post, but the choice drew immediate criticism from Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, this year's Democratic vice presidential candidate.

He called Hill's "a very able person," but criticized Bush's selection of a trade representative with little background in the field.

Bentsen said that while Hills probably will be confirmed by the Senate, "I had hoped, frankly, that we'd have someone from the business world who had extensive international experience in trade. That didn't happen."

The two trade jobs will be highly visible with the federal trade deficit totaling $170 billion last year and running at an annual rate of $137 billion this year.

Mosbacher, 61, is a longtime friend of Bush's who headed his primary campaign fund-raising operation. He also was chairman of a Republican Party program that raised $24 million in $100,000 contributions for the general election campaign.

Mosbacher, worth an estimated $200 million from his oil and gas holdings and investments, is a former chairman of the National Petroleum Council.

The commerce secretary enforces trade policy and seeks more markets for U.S. goods, as well as serving as a voice for U.S. business within the government. Mosbacher also will oversee agencies ranging from the National Weather Service to the Census Bureau to the National Bureau of Standards.

The trade representative negotiates trade agreements with other countries and investigates complaints of unfair trade practices.

MOSBACHER WEBSTER

Dan Rostenkowski, Democratic chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee. Afterward, Rostenkowski, D-Ill., said Bush was "very firm in the fact that he did not want to discuss the increasing of revenue" to combat the federal deficit.

Bush also met Tuesday with former Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, whose name had been circulated as a potential U.N. ambassador. A Bush aide said no promises were made to her regarding administration jobs.

U.S. Will Continue Tariffs On Redwood

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

MONTREAL — The Reagan administration said Tuesday that it would continue the five-year tariffs it imposed in mid-1986 on Canadian redwood shakes and shingles but would lower them more rapidly than had been scheduled.

The tariffs, imposed after complaints by American lumber mills that Canada was providing an unfair advantage to its own shake and shingle producers by selling logs at a discount, sparked a major political flap between the two countries.

Canada retaliated briefly, imposing stiff tariffs on U.S.-produced semiconductors, books and Christmas trees, but lifted them a few months later after protests by Canadian consumers.

U.S. officials said when they imposed the tariffs that they would review the tariff program after 2½ years and decide then whether to continue the extra duties for the full five years. In return for the protection from imports, U.S. lumber mills were expected to modernize and seek alternative materials with which to compete.

The tariff, which was set at 35 percent in June 1986, originally had been scheduled to drop to 20 percent Wednesday for 30 more months and then fall to 8 percent for the final six months of the five-year period.

Prosecutor Narrowing North Case

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Iran-Contra prosecutors are narrowing the case against Oliver L. North to try to undercut defense arguments that government secrets must be disclosed to guarantee the former White House aide a fair trial.

Responding to President Reagan's refusal to release virtually any of the secret documents North wants to disclose at trial, independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh conceded that some of the operations financed by the U.S.-Iran arms-sale proceeds were legal.

The prosecutor said he wouldn't contest the legality of spending some of the proceeds from the U.S.-Iran arms sales to help drug agents locate American hostages in Lebanon, purchase a Danish ship for clandestine operations, buy radios for a foreign political group and pay Nicaraguan rebel leaders.

"The government is willing to concede, for the purposes of this case, that this group of expenditures went to programs otherwise lawful" but not authorized as part of Reagan's attempt to free hostages by selling arms to Iran, Walsh said in a pleading released late Tuesday in federal court.

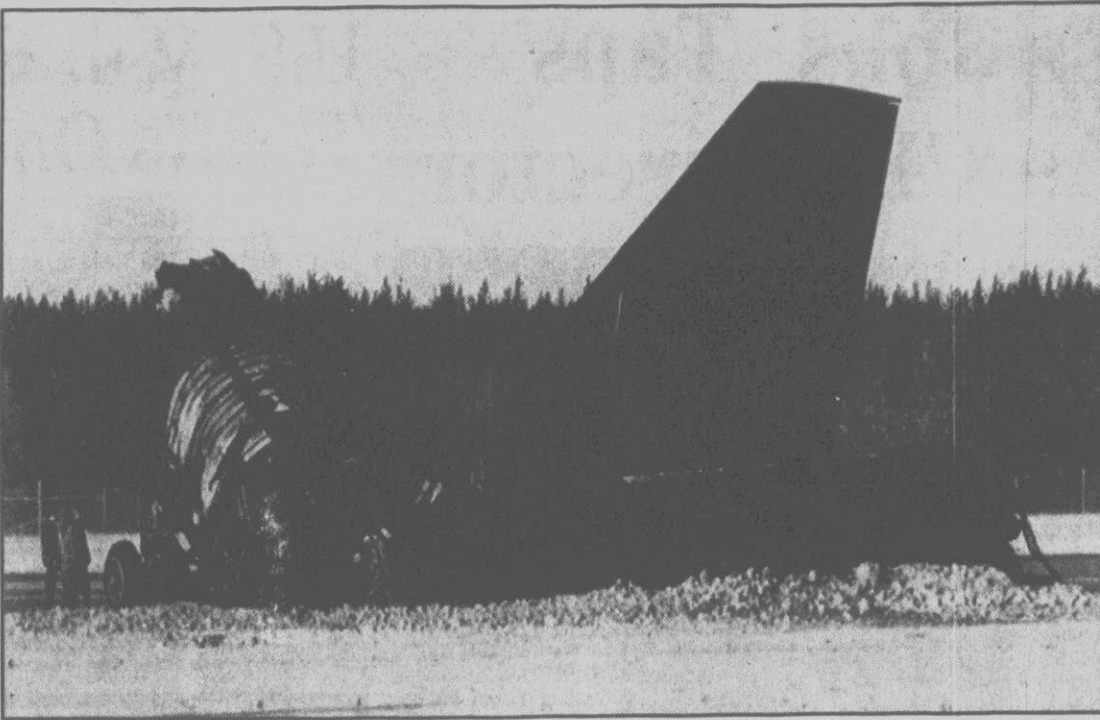

Walsh, however, maintained that there was still sufficient evidence to prove that North conspired with former national security adviser John M. Poindexter and arms dealers Richard V. Secord and Albert Hakim to defraud the government.

The central conspiracy and theft-of-government property charges against the former National Security Council aide and his co-defendants, who are to be tried separately, stems from the diversion of more than $14 million in arms-sale profits to the Nicaraguan rebels, known as the Contras.

North's "deceitful acquisition" of $18 million in profits from the U.S.-Iran arms sales is "the critical element of North's behavior that makes it criminal," Walsh said.

Instead of turning over the money to the U.S. government, North placed it in secret Swiss bank accounts along with funds raised from foreign countries and from private donors through a tax-exempt foundation.

"Whether he used the diverted funds for ends that the government could otherwise legitimately fund is irrelevant," the independent prosecutor said. "North's crime lies in how he acquired and maintained control of these funds, not in the specific purposes for which he spent them."

Tail section of a burned B-52 stands as grim reminder of crash Tuesday at Michigan base

Air Force Lifts B-52 Ban

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MARQUETTE, Mich. — The Strategic Air Command lifted its grounding of its aging fleet of B-52s imposed after the crash of a bomber during a training flight that sent eight crewmen to the hospital.

The cause of early Tuesday's crash at K.I. Sawyer Air Force Base remained under investigation, said Capt. Paul Bicking, a spokesman for the SAC base in Michigan's Upper Peninsula.

Seven of the crewmen remained hospitalized today, four in serious condition, officials said.

SAC grounded its fleet of about 260 B-52s as a precaution so their fuel systems could be inspected. The grounding was lifted Tuesday night and some of the bombers could be cleared to fly as early as today, said Lt. Col. George Peck, a spokesman at SAC headquarters at Offutt Air Force Base in Omaha, Neb.

Bicking said Sawyer's 20 B-52s would be ready to fly by the end of the week.

The B-52 broke into three parts about 1:15 a.m. EST Tuesday during practice "touch-and-go" landings that followed a seven-hour training flight, said Sgt. Naomi Siegel, a Sawyer spokeswoman. In a touch-and-go, the plane immediately takes off again rather than slowing down.

No weapons were aboard the plane, which is equipped to carry nuclear bombs, officials said.

Four crewmen were treated at Marquette General Hospital and three were transported to the Wright-Patterson Air Force Base Medical Center in Dayton, Ohio, Bicking said.

The eighth crewman, 1st Lt. Gregory C. Smith, a 26-year-old pilot, was released Tuesday from Sawyer's base hospital, Bicking said.

The eight-engine B-52, first deployed in the early 1950s, is the military's biggest bomber with a wingspan of 185 feet. The last B-52 was commissioned in 1962. The original cost of the aircraft was $9,955,000, said Capt. Harry Edwards, at SAC headquarters.

Five of the original 102 B-52s have crashed and one was destroyed in a ground fire, said Technical Sgt. Alan Dockery, from SAC headquarters. The most recent crash occurred Oct. 16, 1984, in Arizona, when a crew practicing low-level flights crashed into a plateau, he said.

FBI Says Cartel Used Phony Firm

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — A 17-month FBI "sting" had Colombian drug-cartel point men using a phony electronics company as a clubhouse, leading to indictments of 93 people and leaving traffickers wondering, "who do you trust?," authorities say.

About half of the suspects were in custody Tuesday in Boston, Houston, Los Angeles, Tampa and Miami, and many were expected to surrender later, the FBI said. Among those arrested were a Latin recording star and two former Miami police officers.

The sting, nicknamed "Cat-Com" for Catch Communications, also allowed federal agents to seize about 5 tons of cocaine, 100 tons of marijuana and some heroin, authorities said.

R.A. Communications and Computers Inc. "essentially was used as a clubhouse or a meeting place for first-line drug traffickers associated with the Medellin and Cali cartels," said William Perry, South Florida's acting FBI director.

He said the traffickers, who were indicted by federal grand juries in Miami and Tampa, were "top-of-the-line" U.S. contacts for drug lords Pablo Escobar Gaviria, Jorge Luis Ochoa Vasquez and Jose Gonzalo Rodriguez Gacha, who operate in the Colombian towns of Medellin or Cali.

Plants Warned Layoff Notice Required

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department is advising employers who plan plant closings or large layoffs in February to heed the terms of new legislation and begin providing 60 days advance notice now.

The law — formally the Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification, or WARN, Act — does not take effect until Feb. 4.

But the Labor Department said in an "interim interpretive rule" that courts might later decide that employers planning layoffs on that date or immediately afterwards should have given the notices 60 days beforehand, or as early as Dec. 6.

Unions, which won the legislation last summer after a 15-year fight in the Congress, favor an interpretation that any worker losing a job to a plant closing or layoff of 50 people or more as of Feb. 4 is required to be informed in writing 60 days beforehand.

However, some business groups have interpreted the law as not requiring the notices to begin until Feb. 4 — for closings or layoffs planned for April 5 or afterwards.

Heart Attack Kills Early Rock 'N' Roll Star Roy Orbison

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HENDERSONVILLE, Tenn. — Roy Orbison, a balladeer of lost love whose piercing, three-octave voice on songs like "Pretty Woman" and "Cryin'" pioneered early rock 'n' roll, died of a heart attack at age 52.

The singer-songwriter, known for his black pompadour and ever-present sunglasses, was brought by ambulance to Hendersonville Hospital late Tuesday, said Melanie Lamb, a hospital spokeswoman. He died just before midnight.

Orbison achieved fame more than two decades ago with the hits "Only the Lonely," his first million-seller, then "Blue Angel" and "I'm Hurting." "Oh, Pretty Woman," in 1964, sold more than 7 million copies, and was recently a hit for the group Van Halen.

At his death, he was again on the charts, with the single "Handle With Care," a collaboration with artists including Bob Dylan, George Harrison and Tom Petty. Their album, recorded under the name The Traveling Wilburys, is No. 8 on the charts.

Orbison, who played guitar, gave a concert Sunday in Akron, Ohio, before 2,000 people. On Tuesday, Orbison was at the Nashville-area home of country singer Jean Shepard, who said he had been with her husband, "having a great time."

During his heyday in the early 1960s, Orbison had 27 straight records on the charts. In May 1963, he toured Britain with the Beatles, then a smash in England but still virtually unknown in the United States.

In 1977, Elvis Presley introduced him as "the greatest singer in the world." Bruce Springsteen saluted him in his song "Thunder Road."

Orbison once estimated he had sold 30 million records, but added, "I don't normally keep tabs."

Some of his other hits include "Cryin,'" "It's Over," and "Blue Bayou." Last year, he re-recorded his 1963 hit "In Dreams" after the song had been revived in the movie "Blue Velvet."

In a 1986 Associated Press interview, Orbison said the biggest thrill in his career was "just being in the business itself."

As for being called a legend, he said: "I did say facetiously once that being a legend meant being old. But someone pointed out that not all old people are legends. Anyway, it's nice to have had longevity and to have influenced a few people for the good."

On Sept. 30, 1987, Orbison gave a concert at Los Angeles' Coconut Grove nightclub, called "Roy Orbison and Friends: A Black-and-White Night." The friends were Springsteen, Elvis Costello, Jackson Browne, Tom Waits, T-Bone Burnett and J.D. Souther, with Bonnie Raitt, Jennifer Warnes and K.D. Lang singing backup. The concert was taped for a cable television special.

In 1980, Orbison teamed with Emmylou Harris on the duet, "That Loving You Feeling Again," and earned a Grammy award. He also was inducted into the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame and the Hall of Fame of the Nashville Songwriters Association.

Orbison grew up in Wink, Texas, and was taught to play guitar at age 6 by his father, an oil field worker. He played guitar on a radio station at age 8 and was in a country music band by age 14.

He got his early recording experience in the 1950s with Sun Records of Memphis, the company that launched the careers of Presley, Johnny Cash and Jerry Lee Lewis.

He was one of the first "rockabilly" singers — a hybrid of rock 'n' roll and hillbilly music, as country music was known then.

Orbison began wearing sunglasses publicly all the time in 1963 when he accidentally left his regular glasses at home and had to wear shades while in London. His appearance was well-received and he kept it a tradition.

His career plummeted in the late 1960s in the aftermath of two personal tragedies. His wife died in a motorcycle accident in 1966. Two of his three sons, ages 10 and 6, died in a fire that destroyed his $150,000 lakeside home in 1968. His third son is now in his twenties.

His most successful songs focused on broken romance and his "Too Soon to Know" was written after the death of his wife. "A little hurt went a long way," he said in the 1986 interview.

Orbison remarried and had two sons from that marriage.

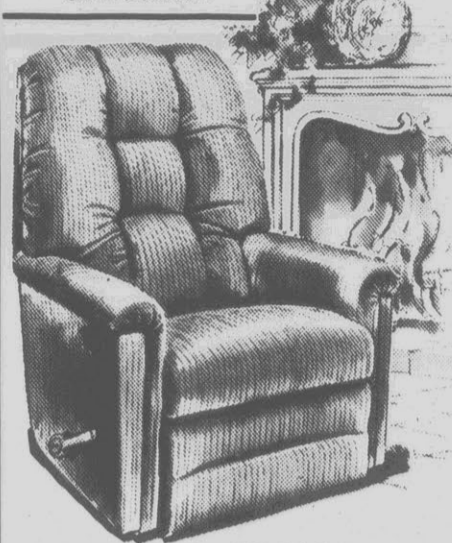

Asked in the 1986 interview how he would like to be remembered, he replied:

"One day when they are mentioning people who had an impact, if they just mention me among the rest of the guys and gals, it would be great."

Family Recipe Is Success Story For Moravians

By Martha Waggoner
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — It's the smell that grabs visitors as they walk to the door of the small wood-frame building that's the bakery for the "famous" cookies baked at the Moravian Cookie Shop.

The pungent spices of the traditional wafer-thin Moravian cookies combine with the smells of the lemon, sugar and black walnut ones to keep customers coming back — and last year, waiting in line for up to 2½ hours as Christmas drew closer.

Faye Stout, shop manager and daughter of co-owners Russell and Thelma Boose, doesn't even notice the smell any more.

"I'm around it all the time," said Mrs. Stout, who lives across the street from the bakery. "I just don't pay any attention to it."

The smell may be the only thing Mrs. Stout doesn't notice as she mixes spices, makes dough, cuts cookies and waits on customers at the business that has grown from seven employees in 1979 to 62 today.

On a recent Friday, the employees baked their typical 67,500 cookies, or 450 pounds. "And we're selling everything we make," Mrs. Stout said. "We have no built-up stock."

Those who roll the dough can average about 100 pounds a day, she said. Getting the dough wafer-thin "just takes a lot of practice and a lot of skill," Mrs. Stout said.

It also takes the right equipment, such as a lightweight canvas for rolling, she said. "A lot of people are really surprised they can do it."

The business began in 1940 when Robert Foltz started making "Famous" Moravian cookies. He used a recipe that his great-great-grandparents, Peter and Elizabeth Foltz, had brought to the Moravian settlement known as Salem when they moved there in 1768.

Robert Foltz and his wife, Grace, ran the store. After his death, Grace Foltz remarried and managed the store until about 1979. She died just over a year ago.

That was also the last year that the family advertised their business or made presentations to companies such as Belks. Since then, the business has grown "by leaps and bounds," Mrs. Stout said.

They've also added the sugar cookies baked by a recipe from Mrs. Boose's mother; and the lemon and walnut cookies.

The house where R.F. Foltz started his business in his kitchen still stands, but with several additions to the original five rooms. No one lives in the house, which is now used for shipping and storage. The bakery consists of one room for mixing dough, two for cutting cookies and one for baking and packaging.

Only three people know the mixture for the spices in the Moravian cookies — Mrs. Boose, Mrs. Stout and Mrs. Stout's sister, Sheila Binkley, who's in charge of shipping.

"We have had people who have tried to analyze our dough," said Mrs. Stout, adding that no raw dough is sold for that reason.

The cookies are so popular that there are two shifts — 6:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. and 3:15 p.m. to 11:45 p.m. — to fill the requests.

And the requests from all over the country. Companies such as Norm Thompson and Williams-Sonoma sell them in their catalogues; other companies buy the cookies and resell them.

"And the prices are phenomenal," Mrs. Stout said. The highest price she has seen was $9 for a half-pound tube, which sells for $4.08 at the bakery.

There are 100 companies waiting to become wholesale customers, and Mrs. Stout doesn't think any of them will be added this year. One on the list is a local bakery that had been a customer for years, then dropped out when it decided to make its own cookies. Now it's on the list, waiting to become a customer again.

Then there's a separate list of wholesale customers who want to re-order.

"They buy them by the tractor-trailer loads, and we're sending them across the country," she said.

The family takes as many wholesale orders as they think they can handle before cutting off orders. And that date keeps "getting earlier each year," Mrs. Binkley said. This year, it was March.

One woman ordered the cookies from a West Coast company, only to find they were baked in her home town of Winston-Salem. Another woman wrote of using a magnifying glass to get the address off the cookie container in the picture.

The cookies are popular locally for Christmas, but are sold across the country year-round, she said. The sugar cookies are popular at Easter.

Despite the hectic pace, there's still time for fun. The seven ovens are named after employees. And the bakers often taste their products, said Dot Myers, who has worked there for 11 years.

"Oh yes, we nibble," she said, adding that the sugar cookies are her favorite. "We nibble as we go." Some of the other women are jealous, she said, "because I nibble and don't gain weight."

They bake until the day before Christmas Eve, but for the last two to three weeks before Christmas, all cookies are sold at the bakery and not to any wholesale customers. Individuals may phone in orders until Thanksgiving, when all orders must be placed in person.

Knit And Crocheted Scarf Is A Great Gift

There's no doubt about it — scarves are big now in the world of fashion. Stay in style by accenting your wardrobe with this knit and crocheted triangular scarf. It would also make a lovely gift.

The solid area of the scarf is knit, while the decorating edging is crocheted. When working the knit part, you will use "short rows" to achieve the desired shaping. Two strands of worsted-weight yarn are used on large needles, so this chic fashion accessory is both quick and easy. Finished size is approximately 60 inches long and 22 inches deep.

To obtain directions for making the Chic Accent, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-120488 with $ and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-120488 by sending a check or money order for $12.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and yarn in your choice of mulberry, royal blue, red, peach or off-white.

Knitting "short rows," as for the Chic Accent scarf, is a very useful shaping technique, adding extra width or depth to a knitted piece without changing the length of the side edges. Some knitters may even work short rows without realizing it: In some directions where they are used, you are simply told to turn your work and start working back in the opposite direction before you have completed the row you are working on.

Short rows are rows that are not completely knitted across. When you are told to "turn" before you reach the end of the row, this indicates a short row is to be started. Do not complete any more stitches on that row, but turn your work so the opposite side is facing you and place the needles in the opposite hands.

Most directions simply tell you to slip the first stitch after the turn is made to avoid leaving a hole in the knitted fabric. This is the technique used for the Chic Accent.

The majority of knitters find this method very satisfactory, but for more experienced knitters, there is a way to make an almost invisible turn. Admittedly, it is a bit more involved, but certainly well worth the extra effort.

If you are on a knit row, do the following before you turn your work: Bring the yarn to the front of your work; slip one stitch from the left to the right needle (slipping it as if to purl); take the yarn back and then put the slipped stitch back onto the left needle. Now turn and work back in purl stitches until you are again advised to turn.

'Short row' technique achieves desired shape of scarf

If you are on a purl row, before turning, take the yarn to the back, slip the next stitch purlwise, bring the yarn forward and return the stitch to the left needle and then turn.

Usually the turns or short rows are worked at varying points across several rows before you return to working full rows. When you come to the point where you will working over "turns," there is one final step that completely conceals the small holes. At this point, you will come to a tight stitch everywhere you slipped and wrapped stitches. On these stitches, knit the tight stitch together with the yarn that is wrapped around it. This will neatly close up each of the turn stitches.

On a sample swatch, try simply slipping the stitches and then try the more involved method described above to see the difference. When you do, I think you will want to clip and save this column reference anytime you work short rows.

Poinsettias Not Poisonous

Dear Abby: I've always heard that poinsettia plants are poisonous. Every year at Christmastime, I warn friends with small children or pets to avoid poinsettia plants for that reason. Well, last year, my roommate, who is a landscape architect, showed me an article in Landscape Contractor magazine saying that poinsettias are not poisonous. So, please pass this information on to your readers, as I am sure there are many who believe otherwise. — Bill In Illinois

Dear Bill: I telephoned several local florists in Los Angeles, asking if the poinsettia plant was poisonous, and was told, "Yes, we think so."

However, Marvella Crabb (her real name), manager of the Florist Information Committee of the Society of American Florists, stated that the poinsettia plant is not poisonous — and she is amazed that this rumor still persists.

Furthermore, according to the American Medical Association, no deaths or serious injuries have been attributed to poinsettia ingestion.

So, after years of being maligned, bad-mouthed and discriminated against, the beautiful poinsettia plant rates a clean bill of health — and comes out smelling like a rose!

Dear Abby: This may be a little late, but you're always saying, "Better late than never."

Four years ago, "Buddy," a friend I was very close to at the time, needed $300 in a hurry, so I gave it to him on the promise that he would pay it back "as soon as possible." I didn't ask him to sign a note because I thought that would be an insult, and besides, I knew Buddy was good for it.

Well, he wasn't as "good for it" as I thought he was. He left town because of a job change, and believe it or not, that's the last I heard from him. He has a brother in town, so I called him and asked where I could find Buddy. He told me he didn't know. I wrote to Buddy's last address, hoping my letter would be forwarded to him, but it was returned to me.

Abby, Buddy's brother is a very rich man. Wouldn't you think he would offer to pay the $300 his brother owes me just to protect the family honor? It's chicken feed to him, and I could use the money. So what should I do? — Too Trusting

Dear Too Trusting: Forget it. "Buddy" apparently has. Also, forget the notion that Buddy's brother should assume Buddy's obligation.

Write it off as tuition in the school of experience. And if you ever lend money again, be sure to get a note stating the terms of repayment.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, hesitating after its sharp rise over the past two sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks slipped 1.24 to 2,148.12 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 3 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 550 up, 366 down and 516 unchanged.

Volume of the Big Board came to 33.70 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The dollar rose, interest rates fell and stock prices climbed Tuesday on talk that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev might make some dramatic announcement of military reductions during his current visit to the United States.

Among actively traded blue chips, American Telephone & Telegraph rose $\frac{1}{8}$ to 29 $\frac{5}{8}$; Union Carbide gained $\frac{3}{8}$ to 26 $\frac{1}{8}$, and General Electric was unchanged at 45 $\frac{3}{4}$.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks edged up .03 to 155.81. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .21 at 297.15.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 25.60 to 2,149.36 on top of a 31.48-point jump the day before.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 5 to 3 on the NYSE, with 899 up, 546 down and 520 unchanged.

Walnut and Belcher streets from R-5 and general business to residential multifamily, honoring a request by W.A. Allen Jr. They also assented to a request from Donald N. Sigmon to rezone property at the northwest corner of U.S. 264 Bypass and Farmville East Thoroughfare from RA-20 to highway business.

The board revised its policy for providing health insurance to retired and medical disabled former town employees. For those who qualify under pre-existing length-of-service and other criteria, the town will now pay premiums, the board indicated.

A public hearing was set for the rezoning of the property of A.P. Mewborn and the Primitive Baptist Church on West Wilson Street from general business to R-5 residential.

Gerrelene Walker, the certified public accountant who has been auditing the town's books for several months, reported that the town is in excellent financial condition and that the town office staff has been helpful and cooperative in making changes in accounting practices that she has suggested. She said a number of tax debits for deceased people and bankrupt businesses need to be taken off the books. Frank Bradham, town administrator, said a list will be prepared for presentation to the board early in the new year.

A budget ordinance revision was adopted for the 1985 Community Development Block Grant Program. Some $140,000 will be spent for street, water, sewer and drainage improvements.

It was reported that a 10-year contract for supplying electrical power has been sent to the town of Fountain. If agreed to by the Fountain commissioners, this will be a continuation of Farmville's practice of selling electricity to its neighbor town.

A proposal to buy eight aerators for the waste water treatment plant was tabled until more information can be obtained. Bids already received range from $52,720 to $73,600. Action is expected to be taken by Dec. 21.

Commissioners agreed to accept a Carolina Telephone and Telegraph proposal to complete installation of underground cable for telephones for the new municipal building for $4,000. This action completes lengthy discussion with the phone company which developed when a subcontractor of the phone company started burying cable before an agreement on the project and its price was approved by the board.

The board requested that a resolution of respect be drafted for Gray Martin, longtime Farmville Public Library librarian who has died within the past month.

Officials Will Speak

Bob R. Etheridge, state superintendent-elect of the N.C. State Department of Public Instruction, has accepted an invitation to speak at the inaugural Chancellor's Forum on economic development at East Carolina University Jan. 3-4.

Etheridge will appear on the podium with John L. Clendenin, president of BellSouth Corp., Atlanta; Phillip C. Schlechty, president of the Center for Leadership in School Reform, Louisville, Ky., and George B. Autry, president of MDC Inc., Chapel Hill. They will address the role of education in economic development.

Karen Garr, president of the N.C. Association of Educators, will also speak. Other speakers from higher education are Robert W. Scott, president of the N.C. System of Community Colleges; Ruth G. Shaw, president of Central Piedmont Community College, Charlotte, and Raymond H. Dawson, vice president of academic affairs for the University of North Carolina General Administration.

More than 1,000 other state and regional leaders from education, business and government have been invited to attend the free public forum at the Cynthia Mendenhall Student Center.

Woman's Club to Meet

The Woman's Club of Greenville will have a luncheon meeting Friday at 11:30 a.m. at the Greenville Country Club. Entertainment will be provided by a student from the East Carolina University Department of Music.

and the auditorium, while the varsity cheerleading competition is scheduled for Saturday in Elizabeth City. The Conley band will participate in the Greenville Christmas parade Saturday.

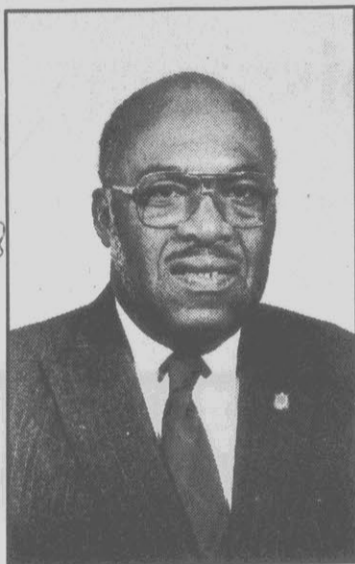

Christy Boyd, Chad Dickerson, Andy Fassett, Julie Milner, Jennifer Grier Moore and Terri Thomas have been selected to represent Conley in the Rotary Youth Leadership Conference, while Joel Rollins won the county-level competition of the Voice of Democracy oratorical script writing contest. He has advanced to the district competition in Goldsboro.

President Elected

Freager R. Sanders Jr., coordinator of federal programs for Pitt County schools, recently was elected president of the North Carolina Association of Compensatory Educators at its annual fall meeting in Burlington.

The association is made up of at least one director from each school system in the state, and it represents more than 113,833 children who are at risk of learning difficulties. The programs are federally funded and serve students in preschool through grade 12.

Sanders, who will serve for one year, is a graduate of Winston-Salem State University and has completed graduate work at Indiana University, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, N.C. A&T State University, East Carolina University and Pitt Community College.

Warehouse Purchased

FARMVILLE — Hamilton Beach Inc., which has small appliance manufacturing plants in Washington, N.C., and Clinton, has purchased a 72,000-square-foot warehouse just west of Farmville, at the intersection of U.S. 264 and Secondary Road 1144.

The warehouse and 4.59 acres of land was bought last month from The Mercer Group of Farmville for $900,000, according to a deed for the property on file with the Pitt County Register of Deeds.

A source familiar with the transaction said the facility had been operated as a factory storage warehouse for Hamilton Beach products for five years before the Washington, N.C.-based firm bought the property.

The source said Hamilton Beach would use the warehouse as a distribution facility and estimated that from three to six or more people would be working at the facility at various times.

Rangers Are Dealing Texas Out To Change Its Roster

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — For the Texas Rangers, baseball's winter meetings really have been a big deal.

The Rangers followed up their nine-player blockbuster with the Chicago Cubs by acquiring second baseman Julio Franco from Cleveland on Tuesday for first baseman Pete O'Brien, outfielder Oddibe McDowell and infielder Jerry Browne.

In the only other deal of the day, Philadelphia traded All-Star pitcher Kevin Gross to Montreal for starter Floyd Youmans and reliever Jeff Parrett. Parrett was 12-4, including 8-0 in extra-inning games.

Before Parrett was traded to the Phillies, he was offered to the New York Mets.

The Phillies, who finished last in the NL East at 65-96, wanted to improve their pitching when the season ended, but so far have traded their top two starters — Gross and Shane Rawley.

The bidding war for free agent pitchers Bruce Hurst and Nolan Ryan got serious and both were very close to making decisions.

The Phils were also busy completing details of Mike Schmidt's complicated contract and reached a verbal agreement with the 39-year-old third baseman.

Schmidt's agent, Arthur Rosenberg, said the signing of the one-year deal for a guaranteed $500,000 would be announced today. Schmidt can make another $1.3 million in bonuses if he stays healthy and plays regularly.

The Phillies had announced Sunday that they reached agree-

Duper Linked To Drug Use

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Mark Duper, a Miami Dolphins wide receiver suspended for violating the NFL's substance abuse policy, has ties to a convicted drug dealer and has been a cocaine user since at least 1986, according to a published report.

Sports Illustrated magazine, in this week's edition, quotes a variety of sources as saying that Duper was a close acquaintance of jailed Miami drug dealer Nelson Aguilar and that Dolphin owner Joe Robbie and coach Don Shula knew in 1986 of photographs of Duper and Aguilar and other reputed drug dealers.

The article also cited sources claiming a former driver for Aguilar delivered cocaine to Duper's North Miami condominium twice in January 1986. In addition, Kim Knight, the estranged wife of one of Aguilar's former associates, said she snorted cocaine with Duper in a limousine in 1986.

In the article, Aguilar, serving a 13½-year federal prison term in Oxford, Wis., for cocaine trafficking, described Duper as "a very good

Williams' Widow Ready To Sell Off Orioles

By Richard Justice
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

ATLANTA — The widow of Baltimore Orioles owner Edward Bennett Williams Tuesday announced she had reached an agreement to sell the team for approximately $70 million to a group whose principal shareholder will be New York investor Eli S. Jacobs.

Jacobs will own a large majority of the stock, although Orioles President Lawrence Lucchino will serve as chief executive officer and president and will have "a significant share of stock," Lucchino said.

Washington attorney R. Sargent Shriver and his son, Robert S. Shriver Jr., a New York venture capitalist, also will own minority shares. No breakdown of shares was given, but it is believed Jacobs will own about 90 percent, the remaining 10 percent to be split between the Shrivers and Lucchino.

If Agnes Williams' sale of the team her Washington lawyer husband purchased for $12 million in 1979 is approved, it will be the largest price ever paid for a baseball team, easily outdistancing the $53 million paid by Domino's Pizza executive Tom Monaghan for the Detroit Tigers in 1984.

The last franchise to change hands was the Cleveland Indians, sold to developers Richard and David Jacobs two years ago for about $40 million. They are not related to Eli Jacobs.

Lucchino delivered a preliminary report on the sale to a meeting of American League team owners Tuesday afternoon, and AL President Bobby Brown said approval could come in about 90 days. Approval requires a two-thirds vote by the 14 American League owners and a majority vote including the 12 National League owners.

Agnes Williams did not appear at the meeting and was not available for comment. Jacobs also declined to comment. Lucchino indicated Jacobs would not be involved in the day-to-day operations of the team.

In choosing Jacobs over several other bidders, including former Orioles owner Jerald C. Hoffberger, Agnes Williams evidently ensured that the management team her husband began putting together 15 months ago will remain and shape the franchise for years to come.

Shortly before his death Aug. 13, Williams signed a 15-year lease for a proposed downtown Baltimore stadium. That facility is expected to be ready for occupancy in 1992, and Lucchino emphasized the Orioles would remain in Baltimore for the foreseeable future.

Stith's Performance Convinces Holland

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Terry Holland had planned to use Bryant Stith as a key reserve this season, but five games into the schedule, the Virginia coach has yet to get the freshman forward out of the starting lineup.

"He can do a lot of things, and he's fundamentally sound. He's fun to watch play," Holland said Tuesday night after Stith came up with his best effort yet, a 21-point performance that led Virginia to an 88-61 victory over Fairleigh Dickinson.

Stith scored 14 of his points in the first half as the Cavaliers built a 40-31 edge at intermission.

After Fairleigh Dickinson turned the ball over 13 times in the first half, Virginia kept up the pressure, scoring 12 straight points to open the second half. Kenny Turner capped the surge with a fast-break dunk that gave the Cavaliers a 52-31 lead with 15:53 to play.

After the run, Fairleigh Dickinson, which turned the ball over on its first seven possessions of the second half, was unable to get closer than 17 the rest of the way.

Virginia Tech 103, James Madison 84

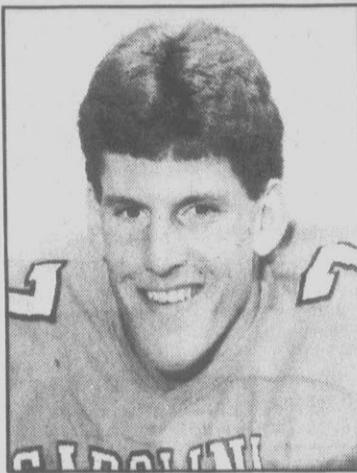

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Virginia Tech's Wally Lancaster set an NCAA record for consecutive games in which at least one 3-point goal was made, helping the Hokies to a 103-84 victory over James Madison on Tuesday night.

Lancaster, a 6-foot-4 senior guard from Lanham, Md., made his first shot of the night, a 21-footer from the right wing, giving him a 3-pointer in 50 consecutive games.

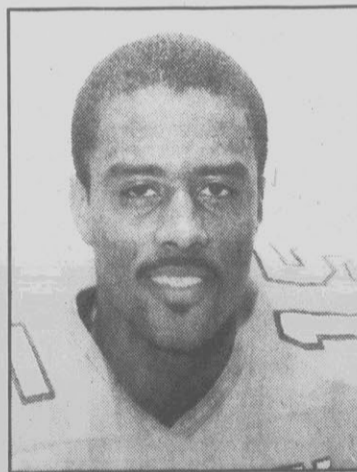

On Saturday night, Lancaster tied the NCAA record of 49 games reached last year by Troy Lewis in the final game of his career at Purdue.

Virginia Tech held a 56-44 intermission lead before going on a 14-7 run to open the second half.

Bimbo Coles scored 26 points to lead Virginia Tech, 3-0. Quinton Nottingham added 10 points for the Hokies.

12 UNC Gridders Won't Return

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Twelve North Carolina football players, including starting defensive backs Dan Vooletich and Victor Bullock, have decided not to return to the football team next season.

Vooletich, from Ann Arbor, Mich., and Bullock, from Henderson, are scheduled to graduate in June. Both were red-shirted in 1985.

Five other potential fifth-year players informed first-year UNC coach Mack Brown they wouldn't return, including defensive back Bill Franklin, the younger brother of former Tar Heel tight end Arnold Franklin, linebackers Chuck Sledge and Steve Lowe, defensive lineman Phillip Cheek and offensive lineman Richard Applebaum. Sledge was the only one of those to see extensive action for the Tar Heels.

Five underclassmen, including junior wide receiver Freddy Renken, sophomore fullback Brian Vooletich, sophomore tailback Brad Smith, junior tailback Jay Palmisano, and junior nose guard Dave Wolfe, will also leave the program, according to the Durham Morning Herald. Only Renken, who started the season opener at South Carolina, and Vooletich, the younger brother of Dan, saw much action this season.

Brian Vooletich plans on transferring to Michigan State, where he would have two years of eligibility remaining. Palmisano, from Melbourne Beach, Fla., will transfer to Central Florida. Smith, from Boardman, Ohio, is thinking about going to Kent State, where former North Carolina coach Dick Crum is the coach.

North Carolina coach Mack Brown said Renken would probably remain in school in Chapel Hill and not play football.

"The biggest point is most of them (red-shirts) wanted to get a degree. Some wanted to transfer to get a better chance to play," said Brown, who was on a recruiting trip in Charlotte on Tuesday. "All had the opportunity to stay if they wanted to."

Vooletich started at safety for the Tar Heels the past two seasons. Bullock started the last half of last season and the first part of this season at cornerback.

"I ultimately made my decision after the season," Dan Vooletich told The Durham Morning Herald. "When I came to Carolina my main goal was to get a degree. ... I guess in a way I've been thinking about it for some time now. Basically, I'm just tired. I just felt like it was time to do some other things with my life."

Vooletich said North Carolina's 1-10 mark in 1988 was not a main factor.

"It had some play in it, but wasn't the main reason," he said. "I still feel real good about the program. But I still feel real good about the decision."

Vooletich said the departure was very amicable.

"I talked with coach Brown several times," said Vooletich, a journalism major. "Everything was on great terms. He (Brown) said he'd help out anyway he could. He respected my decision. I'm very thankful what he's done for me."

Vooletich was a starter at free safety for the Tar Heels as a senior after playing strong safety as a junior. He was one of the few veterans on the Tar Heel's defense this season.

At the start of the season, he and Bullock were both starters. Bullock, who had started at various times throughout his career, was replaced by Doxie Jordan, a redshirt freshman, early in the season and didn't see much playing time the rest of the year.

Applebaum was highly recruited coming out of high school but saw little action during his career. He played in both the offensive and defensive lines at various times in his career.

GCA Takes Win Knights Withstand Tigers' Rally

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Greenville Christian and Trinity got back together Tuesday for the first time in a couple of years and found all the necessary ingredients for a nice little high school basketball rivalry.

Their game featured a buzzer beating first-half shot, a scrappy second-half comeback by Trinity and ultimately a 61-53 win for GCA at the Trinity Christian School Gymnasium.

Clint Parker provided the heroics for GCA, scoring a game-high 30 points, including three 3-point field goals along with two blocks and one steal, but the matter wasn't decided until the final minutes.

It was the first time the schools, located on opposite ends of Greenville Boulevard, had played in four years.

GCA led throughout the game, but Trinity came back from 15 points down in the second half and cut the lead to four three different times. The Knights, though, made the key plays down the stretch to retain control of the game.

"We played our best two quarters of the year in the first half," GCA coach Dale Thatcher said. "Our turnover-assist ratio was the best I've seen. Then we went back to our old selves in the third quarter. We got tentative. You make a couple of mistakes and you're afraid to take a jump shot or to drive the lane and you end up taking a poor percentage shot."

The Tigers took advantage of the Knights' post-halftime lapse to get back in the game as Kirk Welch scored 11 of his 23 points in the third quarter.

"Our kids were so nervous when we came out," Trinity coach Don Southerland said. "It was so obvious. We had good shots all night. It was surprising to me that we could run the fast break. We just couldn't convert (early on)."

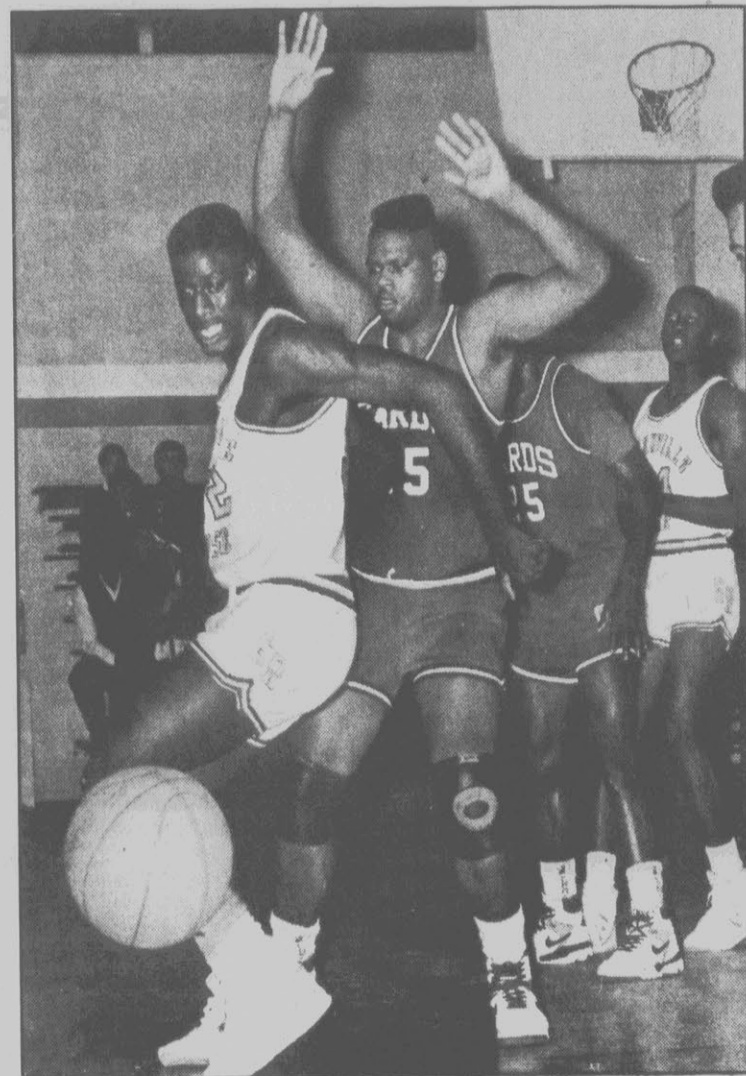

"Our guys settled down and ran the fast break like they have all year. We just did not play our game in the first half."

The running game brought Trinity back.

GCA's John May had ended the first half by hitting a three-pointer at the buzzer to make it 33-18. But Trinity outscored GCA 9-2 in the first four minutes of the third period to pull within 35-27 on a layup by Kirk Welch with 4:12 remaining.

Michael Harrell later got the Tigers within seven on a layup after a turnover. He then fed Kirk Welch

Rampants Roll Defensive Effort Keys Rose

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Fueled by a tenacious third quarter defensive effort, keyed by point guard James Teel, Rose High School garnered a 51-39 win over Jacksonville in high school basketball action Tuesday night.

The win improved the Rampants' record to 3-0, while the Cardinals slipped to 1-1.

The Rampants took a 26-21 lead in at the half and turned up the defense a notch in the third quarter to bolt ahead 36-21 by the four minute mark of the period.

Johnny Ebron, who finished the game with eight points, opened up the quarter with the first two Rose scores for a 30-21 lead.

Ebron then dished to Jamie Brewington for the next Rampant basket. Paul Powers then added a layup off of an assist from Teel for a 34-21 lead.

Following a steal, Teel, who scored 11 points, tossed in another Rose goal for a 36-21 lead.

"Their (Rose's) point guard (Teel) is very good," Jacksonville head coach Robert Hurley said. "He screwed up everything we were trying to do on offense. He made it tough for us to run the offense anywhere except on the wing."

The Rampants, who won their first two games of the year in overtime, were glad to finally have a comfortable lead for a change.

"I told them at halftime that I was tired of overtime games," Rose head coach Jim Brewington said. "I told them to go out there and take control of the game."

The Cardinals held their own for the rest of the quarter behind the scoring of Erick Kinsey, who poured in six of his game-high 13 points in a one-minute span, and headed to the final period trailing 40-29.

After Patrick Joyner scored the opening basket in the fourth quarter to increase Rose's lead to 42-29, Jacksonville mounted a rally to once again put the Rampants in a tight-game situation.

The Cardinals reeled off the next 10 points, capped by a dunk from Dennis Watson, who scored 12 points on the night, to trim the lead to 42-39 with 3:35 left in the period. The 10-point surge was met with a pair of timeouts by Brewington.

"I wanted to change our style of play," Brewington said. "We had a good lead and then fell back and took shots that we didn't have to. I just wanted to settle them down."

After the timeout, Carlester Crumpler stretched the Rampant

Outland Winner To Get A New Trophy

NEW YORK (AP) — A "new" Outland Trophy is to be presented to the nation's top collegiate lineman as selected by the Football Writers Association of America.

The three finalists chosen from the FWAA's All-America team are offensive tackle Tony Mandarich of Michigan State, offensive guard Mark Stepnoski of Pitt and defensive tackle Tracy Rocker of Auburn. The award will be made tonight.

The 6-foot-6, 315-pound Mandarich "could very well be the number one (NFL draft) pick overall," according to Whitey Dovell, personnel director of the Kansas City Chiefs. Purdue coach Fred Akers calls Mandarich "the best offensive lineman I've ever seen."

The 6-3, 270-pound Stepnoski is the top blocker for a team that averaged 253.2 yards a game on the ground and 414.4 overall. He also is one of the National Football Foundation's 11 scholar-athletes for 1988.

Roker, 6-3 and 278, was the only underclassman selected as one of the four finalists for the Lombardi Award last season and is one of the final four again this year.

"Without a doubt, Tracy Rocker is the most outstanding defensive lineman in America today," LSU coach Mike Archer said.

The original Outland Trophy was stolen in 1967 during a banquet at which Ron Yary of Southern Cal received the award.

Tonight's winner will receive a bronze sculpture created by former Syracuse and Dallas Cowboys star Jim Ridlon. It depicts a lineman moving into action with one arm raised in a defensive move, the other in a traditional offensive position.

Hawks Suspend Willis Indefinitely

ATLANTA (AP) — Injured forward Kevin Willis has been suspended indefinitely by the Atlanta Hawks for missing team functions and rehabilitation therapy.

"The last straw was tonight when he missed the entire game," said Stan Kasten, president and general manager of the Hawks, following Atlanta's 123-113 victory over the Sacramento Kings Tuesday night.

"He was here before the game and decided to leave before the game," Kasten said. "He was warned that if he was late for this game he would be suspended. He chose not to come at all. This is the last instance of what has been a series of misbehavior. He missed our game tonight. That's a fairly serious thing. That's what he gets paid for."

Willis, a starter, has missed the entire season with a cracked bone in his left foot, but was expected to return to action late this month or early in January. The suspension is without pay.

"He can get reinstated once he gets back on track doing the things he has to do like going to therapy and going to games," Kasten said.

Gill, Merriman Tied For PGA Lead

NORTH MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — Hugh Gill and Jim Merriman scored a 7-under-par 64 Tuesday for a two-day total of 132 and a tie for the lead of the 27th annual Carolinas PGA Pro-Pro Championship.

The pair from Myrtle Beach combined for eight birdies and one bogey on the Heritage Club Course Tuesday.

Also at 132 after the second round of play was the team of Bob Boyd of Florence and Scott Bailey of Greensboro, N.C. They also had eight birdies and one bogey for a 7-under-par 65 on the par-72 Pawley's Plantation County club course.

Two other twosomes were within one shot of the lead — Terry Florence and Steve Behr of Isles of Palms, and Tommy Price of Hickory, N.C., and David Thore, of Greensboro, N.C., who lost last year on the first hole of a playoff.

The record field of 144 teams in the better-ball tournament was cut to 46 after playing one round each at the Heritage Club and Pawley's Plantation.

The contending teams advanced to the final round at the Heritage Club on Wednesday.

The event features a purse of $36,030. The winning team will split $4,500.

Herzog Says Horner Will Be Cut

ATLANTA (AP) — Slugger Bob Horner, who underwent a shoulder operation to repair an injury earlier this year, will be cut by the St. Louis Cardinals, Manager Whitey Herzog said Tuesday.

"Our plans for Horner are that after the Dec. 20 deadline, we will release him, making him a free agent. Then we'll offer him a lesser contract," Herzog said at the winter meetings.

With Pedro Guerrero set at first base, Horner would be used as a pinch hitter, Herzog said.

Horner's agent, Bucky Woy, reached by telephone in Dallas, said he doubted that Horner would sign with the Cardinals. "I would be surprised. He's got too much talent to be a pinch hitter."

"He'd be a perfect DH in the American League. It would be an ideal situation for Horner where he doesn't have to play 155-160 games to alleviate some of his unfortunate injury problems," said Woy.

The Texas Rangers reportedly are interested in obtaining Horner as a DH.

Tennessee Tops Women's Top 20 Poll

By The Associated Press
The nationwide panel of 60 coaches were in unanimous agreement that unbeaten Tennessee, 4-0, is the No. 1 team for the third straight week in The Associated Press women's basketball poll announced Tuesday.

Georgia, 4-0, moved into the No. 2 position. Three other Southeastern Conference teams made the Top Twenty.

The consensus of the voters also was that everything else had to be changed around after seven teams from last week's poll suffered losses — five of them to unranked teams.

As a result, five new teams are on the list this week — three of them for the first time in many years. Three other teams have been ousted.

Louisiana State, which celebrated the 25th-year anniversary of Coach Sue Gunter with an upset of then-No. 2 Long Beach State, re-entered the poll at 16th, after a week's absence.

South Carolina, 3-0, which last appeared five years ago in November, 1983, entered at 19th.

Three other teams tied for 20th. Colorado, 5-0, off to one of its best starts, ended a six-year absence. Illinois State, 3-2, bumped off previous-No. 14 Southern Cal and previous No. 17 Ohio State at the Buckeyes' tournament last weekend to re-enter the list for the first time in seven years.

Stephen F. Austin, 5-0, also tied for 20th, which marked the first appearance for Coach Gary Blair's team since the final vote of last season.

The teams dropped were North Carolina State, from 15th, Ohio State, from 17th, and Washington, from 18th.

Conley Routs Greene Central, 80-47

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley evened its record at 1-1 for the year with a 80-47 rout of Greene Central in high school basketball action Tuesday night.

The Vikings built a quick 25-10 lead by the end of the first quarter to cruise to the victory. By the end of the third quarter, Conley had built a 67-34 advantage over the 0-3 Rams.

Junior Farrow led the way for the Vikings with 13 points while Bershawn Thompson added 12 and J.J. Stephenson 10.

The Rams were led in scoring by Leon Harper's 12 point effort.

Conley will be back in action Friday at North Pitt.

Penn Upsets Villanova

Walt Frazier Jr.'s 25 Points Leads Quaker Victory

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It sounded like a postgame interview from a bygone era. "Walt Frazier made some big-time shots. He's the team leader, and he showed it tonight," the coach said.

This wasn't a flashback to the old New York Knicks. This was Tuesday night at the Palestra, where Walt Frazier III led Pennsylvania to a stunning 71-70 upset of No. 17 Villanova.

Frazier scored 25 points as Penn beat Villanova for the first time in six years.

"It's the best win I've ever had," Frazier said. "We had never beaten them before, and to go out my senior year knocking off Villanova is just great."

Jose Tavaraz's layup gave the Quakers, 2-1, a 65-60 lead with 3:34 left. After Tom Greis scored for Villanova, 4-2, Tavaraz scored again on a rebound basket and Frazier followed with two free throws.

Doug West's jumper pulled Villanova within 69-67 with 38 seconds remaining before free throws by Scott Schewe and Jerry Simon offset a 3-pointer by West with four seconds left.

"We remembered last year when they had us down by 30," said Simon, recalling last season's 84-55 loss.

Greis scored a career-high 32 points for Villanova, which led 31-30 at halftime.

No. 5 Iowa 95, N. Iowa 76
B.J. Armstrong scored 18 of his 29 points in the first half and Roy Marble had 22 points to become Iowa's No. 3 career scorer.

Iowa, 5-0, led 58-54 with 12:36 left and went on a 20-12 run. The Hawkeyes led 48-35 at halftime.

"I think they're better in the transition game than anybody I've coached against in the Big Ten," said Northern Iowa coach Eldon Miller, who coached at Ohio State for 10 years.

Jason Reese scored 18 points for Northern Iowa, 1-2.

No. 6 Oklahoma 104, Southern Methodist 78

Mookie Blaylock tied his career high with 30 points, including seven 3-pointers.

Stacey King added 24 points and Andre Wiley had a career-high 20 for the Sooners, 3-1.

Blaylock scored 11 points during a 90-second stretch of the first half in giving the Sooners a 23-17 lead.

No. 7 Illinois 97, Florida 67
Nick Anderson scored 21 points for Illinois, 4-0, which led 48-35 at halftime and extended the lead to 58-37 with 15 minutes left and 83-53 with seven minutes to go. team.

Clifford Lett scored 20 points for Florida, 3-3.

No. 15 Louisville 83, Murray St. 51
LaBradford Smith scored 19 points and Louisville, 2-2, made a school-record 11 3-pointers.

Murray State, 3-2, pulled within 46-44 on Paul King's 3-pointer with 14:56 left. Louisville then got four of those 3-pointers during a 22-2 run that gave the Cardinals a 68-46 lead with 7:40 remaining.

No. 20 Seton Hall 90, St. Peter's 63
Australian Olympian Andrew Gaze made three consecutive 3-pointers to start a 19-5 run midway through the first half as the Pirates improved to 6-0, their best start since 1981.

ment with Schmidt, but a last-minute snag developed.

The Rangers, who had not made a trade at the winter meetings since 1983, now have made three deals involving 15 players.

On Monday, Texas got Rafael Palmeiro — the second-leading hitter in the NL — from the Cubs and made another minor swap with the New York Yankees.

"You don't come down here expecting to do anything. But we hoped to improve our offense, and we have," Texas general manager Tom Grieve said.

Franco batted .303 last season, tops among major league second basemen.

The Angels made a $1.8 million offer plus incentives to Ryan, his highest bid yet, and said they would match any offer Hurst gets.

California on Tuesday increased its offer to Hurst to $5.5 million for three years, up from $4.9 million. San Diego Tuesday increased its offer to $5.25 million from $4.7 million. Boston then matched California's $5.5 million offer, a $500,000 increase from the Red Sox's previous bid. Hurst was 18-6 with a 3.66 earned-run average for the Red Sox in 1988.

Three free agents decided on Tuesday to return to their former clubs. Bill Buckner re-signed with Kansas City for $400,000, Jim Dwyer re-signed with Minnesota for $200,000 and Garry Templeton re-signed with San Diego for $500,000, all three for one year. Templeton took a payout of about $650,000.

Also Tuesday, two free agents were offered salary arbitration by their former clubs — Mike Flanagan by Toronto and Wayne Tolleson by the Yankees.

On the trade front, the New York Mets' talks with Atlanta about Dale Murphy stalled but more negotiating is scheduled.

Among the Mets who interest the Braves are Len Dykstra, Howard Johnson, and Keith Miller. New York also turned its attention to Cleveland outfielder Joe Carter.

The Mets also met with the Los Angeles Dodgers again and talked about New York second baseman Wally Backman. New York wants reliever Ricky Horton.

Minnesota and the New York Yankees reached a dead end on a trade for Yankees outfielder Dave Winfield.

"We made an offer but when it came back they tore the deal apart, so I knew their wasn't much of a chance," Twins manager Tom Kelly said.

The Yankees then began discussing a trade that would send Winfield to the Chicago Cubs with another player for pitcher Rick Sutcliffe and shortstop Shawon Dunston.

Kelly said another Yankee might be playing in the Metrodome in 1989; the Twins are interested in free agent second baseman Willie Randolph.

There also was some wheeling and dealing going on among the owners.

The Baltimore Orioles made a $70-million deal when an agreement was reached to sell the team to former vice presidential candidate Sargent Shriver, team president Larry Lucchino and private investor Eli Jacobs.

The Orioles were sold by Mrs. Agnes Williams, widow of the late Edward Bennett Williams. Jacobs will be the principal shareholder with Lucchino, Shriver and Robert Shriver Jr. also having shares.

GCA Wins

for another fast break bucket to make it 36-31. After another GCA turnover, Gerard Fulton hit one of two free throws to bring the Tigers as close as they would get the rest of the way at 36-32.

"I'm proud of our kids that we battled back from a 15-point deficit," Southerland said. "I thought that we could come back."

But the Tigers were never able to get over the hump.

Trinity twice more narrowed the gap to four, at 38-34 late in the third quarter, and at 42-38 in the opening moments of the final period.

But in both cases, GCA was able to push back out to a sizable lead. Parker and Ray Davidson had baskets to close the third quarter and give GCA a 42-34 edge. Then when Trinity pulled within four again early in the final period, May drove the lane two times in a row for scores and Parker added a free throw to make it 47-38 with 6:01 remaining.

GCA got in the bonus early in the final quarter and Thatcher immediately went to a spread offense designed to pull the Tigers out of their zone. The strategy worked as the Knights drew fouls and hit on seven of 11 free throws in the final period.

Parker scored 19 of his points in the first half but managed only four in the third quarter. He got untracked in the final period and hit four of five free throws along with one field goal. John May added 16 points for the Knights.

"The spread offense helped us out," Thatcher said. "We got in the bonus and decided to take advantage of it. John came through and did a good job. He forgot a few things in the first half, wasn't using his head and I had to talk to him at halftime."

GCA moves to 4-2 on the year while Trinity falls to 5-1.

In the girls' game, Joanie Cherry scored 23 points to lead GCA to a 57-26 win over Trinity.

The Lady Knights led 20-9 at the half and never looked back.

Jennifer Boseman added 13 points for GCA.

Lewis Looking For Staff

Newly hired East Carolina head football coach Bill Lewis spent a good part of Tuesday interviewing for positions on his staff.

Among the candidates reportedly on campus yesterday were Florida State quarterback coach Mark Richt, Georgia linebacker coach Dickie Clark, and Austin Peay defensive coach Tim Kelly.

Richt was reportedly applying for the offensive coordinator position, while Clark was seeking the defensive coordinator post. Kelly reportedly may be named as the new defensive line coach.

Lewis also spent some time talking with the members of Art Baker's staff.

First Team Meetings Held

As he promised when he was named as ECU's 16th coach Saturday, Lewis held meetings with the Pirate players Tuesday.

Separate meetings were held with both the graduating seniors and returning players for next year.

Althoff Finally Going Home

John Althoff, East Carolina's Assistant Athletic Marketing Director, is finally getting a chance to head back home.

Althoff, a native of Illinois, will finish his duties at ECU Dec. 19 and begin work as the Director of Marketing at Illinois State University Dec. 21. Althoff's duties at ISU will also include fundraising.

Post-Game Pep Talk Worked Wonders

Following D.H. Conley's season-opening loss to Farmville Central last Friday, Viking head coach Cobbie Deans blasted his team for departing from its offense after taking a lead in the third quarter. The Vikings made some poor shot selections, which wound up costing them the game.

Deans, who has a junior-dominated team, said the talent exists at Conley for a good team, it's just a matter of maturing the raw talent and getting it together. His pep talk obviously worked wonders as the Vikings bounced back Tuesday with a 80-47 rout over Greene Central to even their record at 1-1.

South Carolina Is Big Test For Pirates

East Carolina faces a big task tonight in Columbia when it tips off against South Carolina in a non-conference basketball game.

The Pirates, 3-1 for the year, will be looking to answer skeptics who are wondering if they are as good as they appeared during a second-half run Saturday which propelled them to a 86-72 win over Campbell or as bad as they looked in a 49-point loss at Duke. And the 3-0 Gamecocks, who are fresh off a 57-51 Monday win over Maryland, should go a long way in answering the question.

How Soon Pirate Fans Forget

Just last year Gus Hill was the love of all ECU basketball fans as he continually poured in 3-pointers from the outside.

Hill averaged 19.3 points per game for the Pirates last year and was one of the bright spots in a 8-20 year. At season's end Hill's performances gained him a spot on the Colonial Athletic Association's All-Conference team. He was also named as the league's rookie-of-the-year.

Yet this season, everyone has been talking about the return of forward Blue Edwards. Not that Edwards hasn't earned or deserved the cheers. He has poured in 30 or more points in two of the Pirates four games this season. His dunks also have a way of exciting the crowd at Minges Coliseum.

Hill's scoring totals are down this year, but that happens when you've got a more balanced offensive attack.

Last season the Pirate offensive threats revolved around what Hill and Reed Lose could deliver. While this season the threats are Hill, Edwards, Lose, 6-3 senior guard Kenny Murphy and 6-5 junior college transfer Kevin Staples.

Day Off Wasn't Meant To Be

With football season completed one of my first promises was to spend a Saturday with my fiancée. In this profession, weekend dates are almost unheard of so when the opportunity for one comes around it's almost like a holiday.

This past Saturday was to be one of those so-called holidays. I glanced at my calendar early in the week and saw the word off on the last block on the right for the first time in over three months.

I quickly picked up the phone, called Stephanie and made plans for the night.

After working past midnight Friday, I awoke to the blaring sound of my telephone Saturday morning shortly after 11 a.m.

I ignored the bothersome ringing and simply turned over and went back to sleep, for this was to be the day where I did absolutely nothing.

Later in the day I decided to stop by Minges Coliseum and check out a little bit of the Lady Pirate Classic basketball tournament before heading home and preparing for my date. It was there I found out who had been calling my apartment earlier in the day.

It was my boss. He had called to tell me East Carolina was holding a press conference at 5 p.m. to announce the hiring of a new football coach. My duty was to get a reaction story from the current ECU players.

"Great," I thought to myself, knowing I was going to get the cold shoulder from Stephanie. "There goes my plans for the night."

"I sure dread telling Stephanie," I said to my boss. "It's something she'd better start getting used to," he hepped back before telling me of a similar situation he had experienced.

The story was written and I still have a fiancée so things could have been worse. But I'm still waiting for that Saturday off.

Bucks Rekindle The Old Magic

By Bill Barnard
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Milwaukee Bucks, who won their division the first six years of this decade, still have some of the old magic left.

The Detroit Pistons, the Central Division winners last season, took a 9-2 road record into Tuesday night's game at Milwaukee, but they scored only 31 points in the second half and shot only 40 percent from the field in a 109-84 rout by the Bucks.

"Defense is the most consistent part of our game," said forward Terry Cummings, who scored 13 of his 21 points in the third quarter, when Milwaukee outscored the Pistons 36-17 for an 88-70 lead.

Lakers 111, Clippers 102
The Lakers won their fifth straight game and handed their crosstown rivals their fifth consecutive loss as Magic Johnson had 25 points and 21 assists.

Bulls 105, Celtics 100
Michael Jordan scored 38 points and Sam Vincent added a season-high 23, and Chicago made its free throws down the stretch against Boston.

Hawks 123, Kings 113
Atlanta stayed unbeaten in eight games at home and kept Sacramento winless on the road as Dominique Wilkins scored 26 points, including 10 in the first 3:11 of the third quarter.

Knicks 124, Nuggets 123
New York overcame outstanding performances by Alex English, Michael Adams and Fat Lever for Denver.

Warriors 114, Jazz 103
Chris Mullin scored 31 points and Ralph Sampson had his best game of the season for Golden State with a season-high 17 points, 11 rebounds and four of the Warriors' 12 blocks.

Trail Blazers 97, Nets 93
Portland handed New Jersey its sixth consecutive home loss as Kevin Duckworth scored 26 points, including six during an 11-4 fourth-quarter run.

Vikes Topple Hunt; Cards Dump Rose

WILSON — D. H. Conley swept every weight division in recording a 67-0 win over Wilson Hunt in high school wrestling action Tuesday.

The win lifted the team to 2-0 for the year.

The Viking grapplers will be back in action Saturday at a quad meet at Northern Durham High School.

The JV squad for the Vikings also won Wednesday, taking a 53-12 victory.

JACKSONVILLE — Rose High's wrestling team slipped to 0-4 on the year after falling 43-23 to Jacksonville Tuesday.

The Rampant wrestlers will return to action Friday at home against Eastern Wayne.

103 — Bates (J) d. Brian Rose 18-12, 112 — Adib Fahardi (R) p. Simmons 2:54, 119 — Perry (J) p. Greg Parker (R) 3:35, 125 — Ford (J) d. Thomas Leahy 5-2, 130 — David Best (R) d. Kirby 1:49, 171 — Parker (J) won by forfeit, 189 — Scott (J) won by forfeit, Heavyweight — Jeff House (R) p. Keller 2:43.

Rockets 106, Cavaliers 105
Akeem Olajuwon scored all six of Houston's points in the final 3:12, including a 12-foot turnaround jumper with one second left that beat Cleveland.

SuperSonics 112, Spurs 107
Seattle scored the last six points of the game to beat San Antonio.

Dale Ellis scored four of those six points for the Sonics and finished with 28, including seven consecutive points in another fourth-quarter run. Suns 130, Bullets 92

Phoenix outscored Washington 40-11 in the second quarter and Armon Gilliam had 14 of his 25 points during a 36-5 run.

The 11-point quarter was one shy of the Bullets' club record-low. The Bullets shot 7-for-21 in the first quarter and 5-for-21 in the second for the worst shooting half in their 25-year history at 26.7 percent.

Rose Wins Game

led to 43-39 when he knocked in the front end of a one-and-one. After Crumpler missed the second free throw, Eric Edwards, who came off the bench to score 11 points, pulled down the rebound and scored on a follow shot for a 45-39 Rose lead with 3:02 left.

Crumpler and Teel each hit one out of two from the line to push Rose ahead 47-39 with 1:27 to play and end the comeback hopes of the Cardinals.

"After we caught back up and had it down to three I thought we were in pretty good shape," Hurley said. "We didn't box out though (after Crumpler hit the first of two free throws to make it 43-39). They got the rebound and put it back in for a six point lead. I think that was the turning point."

"Our kids never quit though, you've got to hand them that," Hurley said. "We're young and going up against this Rose team, which is big and strong, will help us out down the road."

"We're proud of the way we played tonight," Brewington said. "We're continuing to improve and we need to each time out. Anytime you can hold a team to 39 points you're playing good."

Rose will be back in action Friday on the road against Eastern Wayne, a team they topped last Friday, 48-46, in overtime on a last-second shot by Ebron. The Cardinals will play again Friday. They will travel to Kinston for a non-conference matchup.

In the girls game, Jacksonville held off a late rally by the 1-2 Ramettes to take a 39-33 win.

The Lady Cardinals entered the final quarter with a 29-13 lead after Rose managed only one point in the third period. The Ramettes, however, caught fire in the final four minutes and nearly pulled out a win.

Angie Mills led the Ramettes in scoring in the defeat with 10 points.

JV Score: Rose 58, Jacksonville 54

Governors Praise Court Ruling On Guard Training

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Two governors praised a U.S. appeals court ruling upholding their right to veto National Guard training missions. But the author of the law that had denied them that authority said the ruling was disturbing.

"The court's decision restores the effective balance between the state and federal governments with regard to authority over the National Guard," Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich, who had challenged the law, said in a statement released by his office Tuesday.

Responding to Perpich's challenge, the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled 2-1 Tuesday that the law is unconstitutional.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, whose state lost a similar challenge in the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in October, called the ruling a "victory for common sense, the Constitution and the governors of the United States."

But Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D-Miss., who wrote the so-called Montgomery Amendment taking away governors' control over Guard units, said the ruling could hamper the Guard's effectiveness.

"If 50 governors are allowed to veto Guard missions because they don't like the way our foreign policy is administered, it would have an adverse impact on training and would raise questions about the availability of the Guard to meet its considerable defense responsibilities," he said.

Because the decision conflicted with the 1st Circuit's previous ruling, the matter may have to be decided by the Supreme Court. In the meantime, federal officials said, the ruling will not immediately affect Guard training.

Perpich and Dukakis said Tuesday's ruling reaffirms constitutionally guaranteed states' rights. Ohio, Colorado, Vermont and Maine also supported the Minnesota lawsuit.

"The Montgomery Amendment went too far in tipping the balance of power toward the federal government," said Perpich, who was vacationing in Hawaii.

Dukakis, the unsuccessful Democratic presidential nominee, also criticized what he said was the Reagan administration's policy of using Guard troops in Central America to destabilize Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista regime. "That policy has been a failure," he said in Boston.

His state's effort to block the use of Massachusetts Guard units in Central America was criticized by Vice President George Bush during the presidential campaign.

Massachusetts Attorney General James Shannon said his state now is more likely to appeal the ruling in its case.

The 8th Circuit majority concluded that the Montgomery Amendment contravenes the intent of the framers of the U.S. Constitution, who they said designed the militia — now the National Guard — "to serve as a check on the potential abuse of military power by the federal government." "The government has not demonstrated that the effectiveness of either the national defense or the National Guard will be diminished by adherence to the constitutional principle of basic state control over National Guard forces, absent a declaration of war or national exigency," the majority said in an 80-page opinion.

The ruling reversed an August 1987 decision by U.S. District Judge

Donald Alsop of Minnesota.

Amy Brown, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Department of Justice in Washington, said the ruling only affects states in the 8th Circuit: Arkansas, Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota and South Dakota. The ruling does not take effect immediately, she said, and probably would be put on hold if the government appeals.

Dan Donohue, a spokesman for the National Guard Bureau in Washington, suggested further legal action is likely because of the conflicting appeals court decisions. "But no decisions have been made officially on an appeal," he said.

"The Montgomery Amendment is still the law of the land except in the affected case," Donohue said. "We will continue to deploy and train soldiers in accordance with the federal law."

Nationally, about 115,000 men and women serve in the Air National Guard and an additional 460,000 serve in the Army National Guard, Donohue said.

The Pentagon is planning to send about 6,000 Guard members from across the country to Honduras during 1989 for road-building and engineering exercises, Donohue said.

State Court Upholds Seat Belt Statutes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina's requirement that drivers and front-seat automobile passengers wear seat belts does not represent involuntary servitude and slavery, a panel of the state Court of Appeals has ruled in upholding the law.

"Determination of what is in the interest of public health, safety and welfare is a legislative matter, and the courts will not interfere if the question of reasonableness is merely debatable," Judge Sarah Parker wrote in the opinion handed down Tuesday.

"Therefore, the state may do whatever is reasonably necessary to further safety on the public highways," Mrs. Parker wrote.

A three-judge panel unanimously rejected a contention that the 1985 law violates the 13th Amendment of the United States Constitution.

The appeal was brought by Duard Stockton Swain Jr., who was fined $25 on Sept. 2, 1987, in Washington County for failing to wear a seat belt.

The opinion says the state can exercise police power when necessary "to achieve a legitimate legislative purpose and (when doing so) is not unduly oppressive or discriminatory."

Mrs. Parker noted that the state Supreme Court had upheld a challenge of the law requiring motorcyclists to wear protective helmets and that other states had ruled that mandatory seat belt laws were justified.

Such laws protect not only the wearers, but their passengers and people in other vehicles, Mrs. Parker wrote.

They also might "promote the economic welfare of the state by reducing public costs associated with injuries and deaths due to automobile accidents," she wrote. "Without question, the carnage on our public highways, either directly or indirectly, places a substantial burden on public funds each year."

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

In a move that has already created an enormous flap in the American Jewish community, five prominent American Jews met Tuesday with Palestinian Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat in Stockholm, Sweden.

The seven-hour talks, arranged by the Swedish Foreign Ministry, were aimed at obtaining a clear-cut statement from Arafat accepting Israel's right to exist and renouncing terrorism.

The two key issues were the subject of a summit of the Palestine National Conference last month in Algiers, where a breakthrough had been anticipated. But the subsequent PLO announcement, which hedged on both points, was interpreted by the State Department as insufficient to warrant direct talks with Arafat.

"It was rough going," said one of the Americans interviewed about the Stockholm talks, "but everything looks like a go."

The meeting culminates a secret six-month effort in which Swedish

Foreign Minister Sten Andersson played the key role, according to delegation sources. The group planned a press conference today in which Arafat was expected to agree to the "clarifications" on the two key issues. The two groups were to be guests of the Foreign Ministry at a dinner Tuesday night.

The delegation is led by Rita Hauser, chairman of the U.S. branch of the International Center for Peace in the Middle East, which is headed by former Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban. The delegation also includes economist and publisher Stanley Sheinbaum and Menachem Rosensaft, a naturalized American Jew born in a Nazi concentration camp, who is founding chairman of the International Network of Children of Jewish Holocaust Survivors.

During the discussions Tuesday, Arafat and his three-man delegation sought to link PLO recognition of Israel with simultaneous establishment of a Palestinian state. In blunt terms, he was told that a statement on Israel had to stand alone.

"In my mind, there was no ambiguity in his final response," one source said. "He said 'yes.'" But he conceded that Arafat has made pledges to American and Israeli delegations in the past that have always come up short.

The Israeli Foreign Ministry expressed "stupefaction" over the surprise session and warned that the Arafat visit to Sweden, the first in five years, could be "very damaging" to diplomatic relations between the two nations.

Several American Jewish groups immediately disowned both the effort and the participants. B'nai B'rith, the world's largest Jewish organization, called the meeting "a fraud being perpetrated on international public opinion."

The Anti-Defamation League said that members of the delegation "have always been isolated individuals in the American Jewish community who have argued that the PLO is a legitimate partner for peace."

"The vast majority of American Jews have always rejected this approach and have not been swayed by PLO theatrics in Algiers," it added.

Spaniards Organize Effort To Outlaw All Bullfights

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MADRID, Spain — Ban bullfighting in Spain? It's as if someone wanted to ban baseball in the United States.

But a group of Spaniards, nevertheless, wants to put an end to what it sees as cruelty in the bullring.

The Spanish Animal Rights Association and several European Parliament deputies have launched a Europe-wide petition drive calling on governments to adopt legislation that would ban bullfighting in Spain and France and fox hunting in Britain, France and Ireland.

The petition, which organizers say would carry half a million signatures, is to be given to Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez of Spain in January in Brussels, Belgium, shortly after Spain assumes the rotating presidency of the European Economic Community for the first time.

While organizers want animal protection legislation passed in all 12 EEC member states, the petition is aimed specifically at ending or "modernizing" bullfighting in Spain and doing away with the torturing or killing of animals during many traditional religious festivals around the country.

Making bullfighting "modern" or acceptable to opponents would involve eliminating the picadors on horseback who lance the bull to weaken its neck muscles so its head goes down, the banderilleros who spike the animal's neck muscles with three pairs of long darts, and the final act — the moment of truth — when the matador stabs the bull between the shoulder blades and through the heart.

In neighboring Portugal, the bull is picked lightly by a bullfighter on horseback, then grabbed by the tail by a group of men called "forcados" and wrestled around until it is dazed. The bull does not die in the ring but is slaughtered shortly afterward in packing-house fashion.

The proposed legislation would also eliminate the use of horses during bullfights, prohibit young people from attending and force televised fights into a late-night time slot when children are in bed.

Carlos Briones, a spokesman for the Ministry of Interior which oversees bullfighting, said the government had no official comment on the subject.

But Briones said he personally feels bullfighting is part of Spanish culture and should be maintained.

Bullfighting is considered an art rather than a sport in Spain.

This past season, 23 million people attended bullfights in Spain, 3 million more than 1987. The capitals of 49 of Spain's 52 provinces have permanent bullrings, and during the summer months portable rings are set up in thousands of towns and villages for their annual fiestas.

The number of major fights rose 11 percent this year to 566, the highest number in the past decade.

A first-class bullfighter earns from $27,000 to $35,000 to fight three bulls in an afternoon during the big fiestas in Madrid, Seville, Bilbao, Pamplona, Zaragoza, Malaga and Valencia.

Spain's leading bullfighter of the moment, Espartaco, fought 82 "corridos" — three-bull afternoons — during the past season.

Bullfighting and animal sacrifice in religious festivals are centuries-old traditions in Spain. Dona Mercedes de Borbon, the mother of King Juan Carlos, is an avid bullfight aficionada, and the king occasionally makes an appearance at Madrid's Las Ventas ring, the world's largest.

U.N. Predicting Famine In Sudan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KHARTOUM, Sudan — Emergency food airlifts now under way will do nothing to stave off famine in Sudan's ravaged south even if the country's civil war were to end today, U.N. relief officials say.

Predictions for 1989 are gloomy. One U.N. official said: "No matter when the peace agreement will be signed, we anticipate the same disaster next year."

"It's a cycle that has happened for hundreds of years, but before the war people stockpiled the food in the villages. Now the situation is aggravated by the displaced people and the war makes transport of food more difficult."

Most survivors of this year's famine, which has claimed hundreds of thousands of victims, are too weak to till the fields they abandoned because of the fighting, officials said.

Aweil is a town that typifies the desperation facing one of the world's poorest countries, which spends $1 million a day trying to crush a 5½-year rebellion in the Christian and animist south against the Moslem north.

Aweil, 580 miles southwest of Khartoum, is among the targets of an airlift that began Sunday to deliver sorghum, oil and medicines.

Relief planes land at Wau, 45 miles southwest of Aweil and capital of the Bahr el-Ghazal region. Organizers for the International Committee of the Red Cross hope to ship supplies from Wau to Aweil and other towns.

The relief effort, which also includes flights from the Kenyan border town of Lokichokio to rebel-held areas, is the first to operate under pledges from both sides to give the planes safe passage.

Another airlift, run by U.N. organizations and the Sudanese government, is sending relief planes to Aweil and nearby el-Obeid. Organizers of both relief efforts say they will continue as long as security permits.

Western diplomats say a de facto cease-fire has existed since rebels led by former Col. John Garang and the Democratic Unionist Party, a junior partner in Sudan's governing coalition, signed an interim peace agreement last month.

Relief workers said many of the hundreds of thousands of people who fled to Aweil and other towns during the rainy season, when Garang and his Sudan People's Liberation Army went on the offensive, returned home when the rains ended in October.

"But now only half ... are physically capable of cultivating the land," a U.N. official said on condition of anonymity. "That means only half the amount of food needed will be available. They will eat it and then come to the towns, and when the rainy season starts next June another tragedy will happen."

An average of 62 people died each day in Wau at the peak of famine, and about 8,000 are believed to have perished in towns in the strip that divides Sudan's north and south.

Detlef Palm of UNICEF said: "The tragedy is over for the moment. We made a quick survey. We asked families how many children they had lost and they would usually point to little mounds or graves near their huts and say one or two or three or all of them died."

Soviets Give Visa To Trotsky Grandson

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEXICO CITY — The grandson of Soviet revolutionary leader Leon Trotsky has been given permission to visit the Soviet Union for the first time in 57 years because the sister he hasn't seen since he was 5 is dying of cancer.

"Things are much more open in Russia now. It's all part of (Soviet leader Mikhail) Gorbachev's policy, I'm sure," Esteban Volkow Bronstein said in a Tuesday night interview with The Associated Press.

Volkow said he has already been granted a visa to visit Alexandra Zakharonavna, his half-sister and Trotsky's granddaughter, in Moscow.

Volkow was living with Trotsky in Mexico City when the former head of the Red Army was assassinated on Josef Stalin's orders on Aug. 20, 1940. Volkow was only 14 at the time but still remembers finding Trotsky on the floor, dying from serious head wounds.

Trotsky, born Lev Davidovich Bronstein, was one of the leaders of the October 1917 revolution that established the Soviet Union, but he lost a power struggle with Stalin and was exiled in 1929.

He eventually settled in Mexico City, where one of Stalin's agents finally killed him with a mountain climber's ice-ax.

Trotsky became a non-person, his name reviled in the Soviet Union.

"For 50 or 60 years the Russian public has been conditioned to think of him as almost the devil," said Volkow. "Things are changing, but gradually."

Volkow, 62, said that until last month he had known nothing of his sister's fate except for a reference in a book published 10 years ago that showed she was still alive.

He said he had asked friends traveling to Moscow to try to find her several times, but none could until Pierre Broue, a historian and Trotsky specialist at the University of Grenoble in France, located her in November.

"I haven't been able to talk to her, really, because I don't speak Russian, except for a few phrases that I memorized to say to her," said Volkow. "She doesn't have long to live."

He said Zakharonavna, only a year older than Volkow, had spent 10 years in prison camps in Stalin's Gulag Archipelago solely because she was a relative of Trotsky.

"She's suffered a lot, and now she's very weak," said Volkow.

Volkow said he doesn't remember the last time he saw his sister because he was only five years old when he and his mother fled the Soviet Union in 1931.

Volkow noted that his grandfather is being slowly drawn out of the shadows under Gorbachev's policy of glasnost, or openness.

It's Edible, But It's Art New York Show Feast For Eyes

By Joan Brunskill
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The sweetest dreams of some gifted artisans and artists have come true and are as visible as a giant chocolate kiss and tiny gems of pastel sugared almonds. They're all in an exhibition that is more than just a feast for the eyes. It's "The Confectioner's Art" show at the American Craft Museum through Jan. 22 and then in other cities through 1991.

The more than 200 exhibits include fragile chocolate lace, lollipops as big as car wheels, a full-size chair studded with candies and a crocheted necklace of colored candy beans.

"This exhibition is to celebrate an area of creativity most people don't recognize," says Paul J. Smith, museum director emeritus and co-curator. "We focused on this area of confectionery, we refined it, so to speak ... to convey the breadth of work in sugar and chocolate."

Meryle Evans, author, culinary historian and co-curator, says the show is timely in view of "the revived interest in the art of decoration of food as well as in food itself in America. A modern confectionery art has emerged."

Contributors include professional food preparers and decorators, artists, folk artists and amateurs from around the world.

"Art is an offering, and when sculpture is really edible that is my kind of offering in art," says Dorothee Selz, the French creator of a radiantly colorful sugar rainbow large enough to walk through.

Then there's a chess set in brown and white sugar cubes; an abstract, intricately worked plaque in black and white licorice, silvered almonds and white-gold leaf; and collar and hat of tiny hard candies.

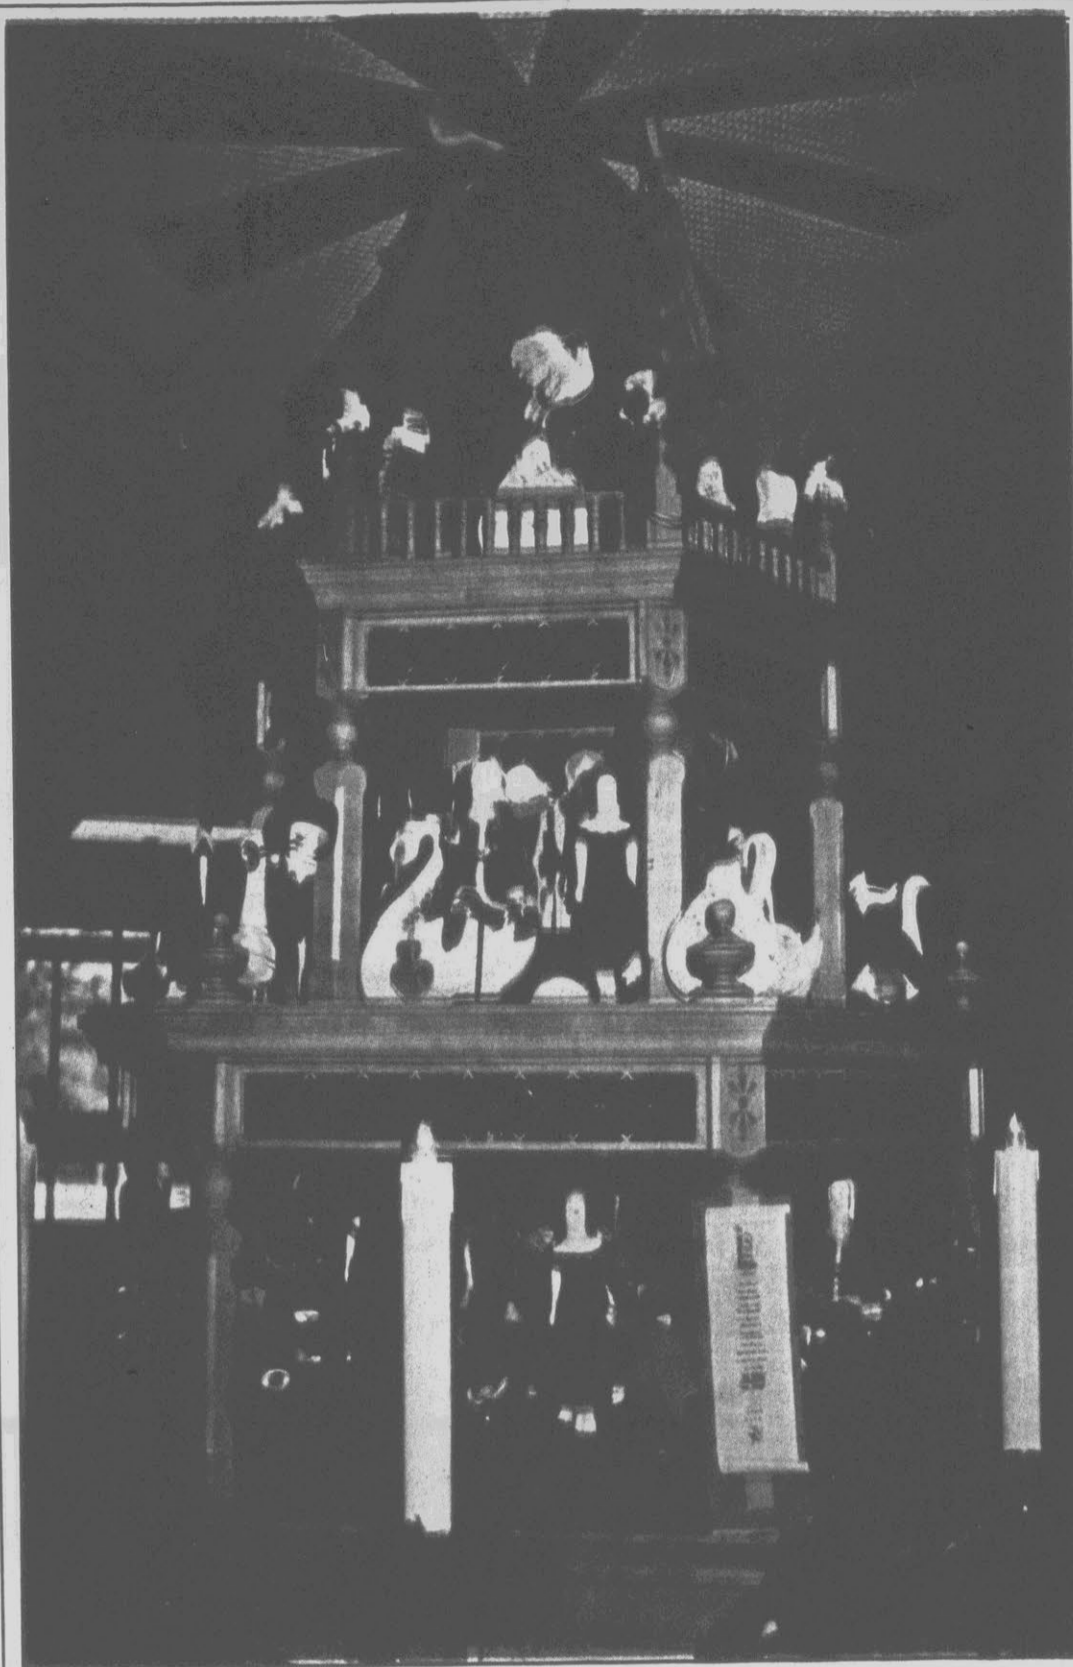

Dolph Gotelli of Sacramento, Calif., hangs a candy-encrusted chandelier over a similarly embellished elegant period chair and table. He says these particular pieces are "a play on antique furniture."

There's a large Toll House of chocolate cookies and chips, a precisely accurate miniature White House aglitter in icing sugar; a chocolate Big Apple, 4 feet in diameter and sectioned to incorporate a New York City skyline; a lacy, rococo dream of a wedding cake; Easter eggs opening into miniature panoramas, and gingerbread angels with pearly wings, decorated with nuts, seeds and fruit.

The gingerbread maker, Gertie Frolich of Vienna, explains how she applied decorations carefully to her gingerbread figure using egg white, and only when all was finished was it baked.

Gingerbread, cookies and sugar figure in many forms of traditional confectionery still made by folk artists in Europe to celebrate feast days and other special occasions: Sicilian heart cookies, Hungarian honey cakes, Czechoslovakian bell cookies, Spanish marzipan New Year's serpents.

A strikingly different example of folk art from Mexico catches the eye: ranks of bright sugar skulls and small sugar coffins, with garish embellishments and sometimes dedications, made for the observances of the Day of the Dead.

Christmas Carousel

Those who visit NCNB during the holiday season will get a floor-to-ceiling look at Christmas color from this carousel produced by Pentes Design Inc. Though the work has been with the bank for the last three years, this is its first visit to Greenville. It was shown in Charlotte and Columbia, S.C. during the last two yule seasons.

Reception Opens Graduate Exhibit

An opening reception for the 1988 fall graduate thesis exhibition will be held at 3 p.m. Saturday at the Gray Art Gallery, East Carolina University School of Art.

"A Mad Tea-Party" is the title chosen for the show, which will be on view through Dec. 20 and features the work of two artists, Roberta Brown-Bennett and Susanne Nielsen.

Ms. Brown-Bennett is a ceramic major and will be showing works in clay and handmade paper. A native of Windsor, she holds the B.F.A. degree in ceramics from ECU. The artist says that "inspiration for my large clay forms are always the natural landscape. Open space of land and ... earth fascinate me. I want my work to relate back to the land from which the clay came. The connection I feel for the land goes back to childhood.

Ms. Nielsen, a native of Wiesbaden, West Germany, holds a M.A. degree in English Literature from Bonn University, West Germany. She now lives in Goldsboro.

For her part of the graduate show, Ms. Nielsen is exhibiting mixed media pieces of handmade paper, hand-painted silk, acrylics, fur and fabric. The subject of her show is "Vessels," which she says "refers to women as the carriers of new life." She is showing nine "pregnant" forms in various situations, placed in the gallery.

The reception is open to the public without charge. Parking is available in lots adjoining the building. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays. For more details, call 757-6336.

Clevinger Art Shown This Week

Two-dimensional art work by James Clevinger of Winston-Salem, senior student in the East Carolina University School of Art, is on display this week in the Kate Lewis Gallery of ECU's Whichard Building.

Clevinger's exhibition includes three mixed-media paintings and more than 20 graphic designs and illustrations.

Clevinger is a candidate for the Bachelor of Fine Arts degree in communication arts, with a major in graphic design. Upon graduation, he plans to seek a career in graphic art or illustration.

Elbert Wins Competition

By Jerry Raynor
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A new dimension for Pitt County high school students in the creation of art was unveiled Monday night at a reception highlighting student art entered in the first Margaret L. Blount art competition.

First-place winner among the art work of 43 students chosen for the exhibition is Anthony Elbert, a ninth-grade student at D.H. Conley High School.

The award has been established by Margaret Blount Harvey to be given annually in honor of her mother, Margaret L. Blount.

The winning work will be displayed in the Pitt County Office Building for one year and will then be returned to D.H. Conley where it will become a part of a permanent collection in the school.

Second-place winner in the competition is Amanda Drake, a junior at D.H. Conley and third-place winner is Elizabeth Betts, an Ayden-Grifton High School junior.

For more details, call 383-4345.

Open House At Duke Homestead

DURHAM — Duke Homestead State Historic Site in Durham is offering three Christmas Open House programs. From 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, there will be a celebration of Christmas on a typical 1870s Piedmont farm. Visitors will be given refreshments. Traditional string music will be performed in the parlor. From 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Sunday and again on Thursday, there will be a candlelight tour with Christmas music and refreshments served to guests in the kitchen. Duke Homestead is located near Durham. Take the Guess Road exit off I-85, north to Duke Homestead Road, then right one-half mile on Duke Homestead Road. For more details, call 477-5498.

Anthony Elbert and Margaret Blount Harvey

All Pitt County high schools are represented in honorable mention awards going to 13 students and in 30 other pieces chosen for the competition.

School officials and others making brief remarks during the ceremony included Dr. George Williams, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Education; Dr. Edwin West Jr., superintendent of Pitt County schools; Kenneth Dews, chairman of the board of directors of the Pitt County Educational Association, and Lou L. Miller, vice president of the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council.

Harper Enjoys 'Far North' Role

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — In the unstable world of acting, Tess Harper has come to appreciate a sure thing. "It's hard to establish a routine as an actor," said Harper, who broke onto the movie scene five years ago playing opposite Robert Duvall in "Tender Mercies."

"You can only be certain that this job is going to end and you're going to have to get another one," she said. "That's why people go into soap operas or television series: It's safe."

So when playwright-actor Sam Shepard offered her a part in the comedy-drama "Far North," which he wrote and directed, Harper accepted without even reading the script.

"It was just the thrill of being asked by him because I respect his opinion greatly. I felt honored that my capabilities matched up to his writing," she said.

In "Far North," Lange and Harper are sisters, who battle each other and their father (Charles Durning), as they struggle to find direction in their lives.

"What I liked about the character was her anger," Harper said. "I've always played very sane, very early characters. The character of Rita isn't focused at all. She's taking a break from her life." Something Harper can directly relate to.

"I've done it, but it doesn't last very long. My ability to pity myself has about an eight-week limit."

Although Harper thinks of acting as a "joyful experience," she confesses to usually coming down with a strong case of nerves before starting any film.

"There comes a time before shooting or rehearsals where I panic and think I'm no good and the project's no good. But if you're lucky, the feeling doesn't last very long."

And how nervous could she be about making "Far North," with Shepard writing and directing and Lange co-starring? Well, the actual story was just fine, but Harper worried about getting it on film because of weather conditions in Minnesota where the movie was shot.

"Hopefully everytime you walk on the set, you're going to learn something from somebody," the actress said. "I would be perfectly happy to do Sam Shepard-Bruce Beresford films for the rest of my life."

Gems Hide Among Holiday TV Offerings

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Ah, December. Time to turn on the television and get set for those wonderful, warm-hearted holiday specials.

But what's this? Pee-Wee Herman and Grace Jones? The Brady Bunch with gray hair? John Denver schmoozing in upscale Aspen?

It's not that bad, really. Selective viewers can pick through the junk like so much wrapping paper to find some gems this month.

For instance, Jason Robards and Julie Harris star in "HBO Showcase: The Christmas Wife," a different kind of Christmas story about two lonely strangers. And for those who like holidays with wry, there's "Season's Greetings," a comedy on the Arts & Entertainment Network written by British playwright Alan Ayckbourn. On PBS, the King's Singers from England appear in concert with the Kansas City Symphony in what promises to be a very special special.

Here is a list of December holiday fare:

Various times throughout the month: "The Nutcracker," PBS. The Tchaikovsky ballet performed by Mikhail Baryshnikov and the American Ballet Theatre premiered in 1976 and has become a TV classic.

Dec. 10: "The Care Bears' Nutcracker Suite," The Disney Channel. The Care Bears go to Toyland to rescue the Sugarplum Fairy. Strictly for those who prefer jelly beans to Christmas dinner.

Dec. 11: "Roots: The Gift," ABC. Louis Gossett Jr. and LeVar Burton are reunited as Fiddler and Kunte Kinte for whom Christmas means a chance for freedom.

Dec. 12: "I'll Be Home for Christmas," NBC. Eva Marie Saint and Hal Holbrook star in a wartime drama. Note for shopping list: tissues.

Dec. 13: "Miss Ruby's Southern Holiday Dinner," PBS. Pearl Bailey, Annie Potts, Roy Blount Jr. and Craig Claiborne join New York restaurateur Ruth Adams Bronz of Miss Ruby's Cafe for down-home cooking and conversation.

Dec. 17: "Bob Hope's Jolly Christmas Show With the All-America Champs," NBC. Hope's annual holiday special, this time from Florida and featuring the usual oddball array of guests: Dolly Parton, Don Johnson, Olympic gold medalist Florence Griffith Joyner, Dodgers pitcher Orel Hershiser and The Associated Press All-America Football team.

Let it wash over you, or try going out.

Dec. 18: "A Very Brady Christmas," CBS. Reunites the family that has achieved cult status in syndicated reruns. Snap out of it! Go caroling, knit a sweater, take food to the homeless.

Dec. 19: "The Little Match Girl," NBC. A repeat of last year's surprisingly good movie starring Keshia Knight Pulliam ("The Cosby Show") in the title role.

Dec. 19: "Christmas in Aspen," CBS. John Denver is host. Watch it from the BMW, dahling.

Dec. 20: "Frosty the Snowman," CBS. The 1969 animated perennial, narrated by Jimmy Durante. Followed by "How the Grinch Stole Christmas," first broadcast in 1966, a Dr. Seuss classic narrated by Boris Karloff.

Dec. 21: "Pee-Wee's Playhouse Christmas Special," CBS. Pee-Wee Herman gets his own one-hour special. Celebrity guests who visit the playhouse include Grace Jones, Joan Rivers, Charo, Oprah Winfrey, k.d. lang and Dinah Shore, among others. Be hip or have headache remedies ready.

Dec. 21: "Christmas in Washington," NBC. James Stewart is host of this holiday music special, featuring soprano Kathleen Battle.

Dec. 21: "A Child's Christmas in Wales," PBS. A repeat of the lovely 1987 film of the Dylan Thomas recollection.

Dec. 22: "A Very Special Christmas Party," ABC. Arnold Schwarzenegger, Danny De Vito, Barbara Mandrell, Mike Tyson and members of the Kennedy family celebrate Christmas with retarded children who participate in Special Olympics.

Dec. 22: "A Christmas Carol," CBS. A repeat of the 1984 all-star production. George C. Scott as Ebenezer Scrooge. Edward Woodward, David Warner and Susannah York co-star.

Dec. 22: "Season's Greetings," Arts & Entertainment Network.

Dec. 23: "The King's Singers' Holiday Special with the Kansas City Symphony," PBS. Selections range from Bach's "Oratorio" to "We Wish You a Merry Christmas."

Dec. 23: "Season's Greetings: An Evening With John Williams and the Boston Pops Orchestra," NBC. A musical special featuring Andy Williams, John Candy, Robert Flack and Reba McEntire.

Dec. 23: "One Magic Christmas," NBC, starring Mary Steenburgen and Harry Dean Stanton. A young mother regains her faith thanks to her daughter and an angel. Harry Dean Stanton as a Christmas angel?

Dec. 25: "The Gift of Love: A Christmas Story," CBS. A repeat. A woman whose life seems to be crumbling dreams about simpler childhood days in New England. Lee Remick and Angela Lansbury.

Dec. 25: "Christmas Snow," NBC. A repeat. A widow (Katherine Helmond) and her adopted children face eviction because of a mean landlord (Sid Caesar).

Phyllis Newman Waits For A Decision By CBS

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Actress Phyllis Newman expected to make just a quick trip home to New York for the holidays, but now it's an indefinite waiting period until CBS decides what to do with "Coming of Age."

CBS pulled the comedy series because of poor ratings and is looking for a new time slot.

"Kate & Allie" returns next Monday to take over the 8:30 p.m. EST time period. Meanwhile, "Coming of Age" has several episodes in the can and CBS has ordered new scripts written.

In the series, Newman plays the wife of an airline pilot (Paul Dooley) who reluctantly retires because of a mandatory age limit and finds it difficult to adjust to life in a retirement community. Alan Young and Glynnis Johns play retired neighbors whose incredible happiness drives Dooley to distraction.

The New York actress, who's married to author and lyricist Adolph Green, is a Broadway veteran and was in fact doing "Broadway Bound" when the producers of "Coming of Age" asked her to come to Los Angeles. She won a Tony award in 1962 for her supporting role as the beauty queen in "Subways Are for Sleeping." She was also nominated for "Broadway Bound."

She played Aunt Blanche in the Neil Simon play, then began a brief role in the ABC soap opera "One Life To Live."

"I was supposed to do just five episodes of 'One Life To Live,'" she said. "I played Renee Devine, an ex-madame from Las Vegas who dressed to kill. The character just took off, and the producer wanted me to sign a contract. I didn't want to commit myself, so they kept having me come back."

"Then I was asked to come out and read for this show. A lot of other women were reading for it. I had to read for everybody. The producers, Universal, CBS. Then back to New York, and I didn't have the part. When I didn't hear, I didn't think I had it. Then I was called back to read with Paul Dooley."

She was finally signed, of course, and some shows were filmed for a spring tryout. During the long writers strike, she packed up and went back to New York. She talked about the show in Los Angeles just before CBS put it on hold.

Newman considers "Coming of Age" her first series, although she previously starred in two other shows. She says "Diagnosis: Unknown" doesn't count because it was only a brief summer show in 1960, and neither does "That Was The Week That Was" in 1964-65 because NBC pre-empted it so many times.

She tells about it all in her biography, "Just in Time," published recently by Simon & Schuster.

"I started writing it after I was diagnosed as having breast cancer," she said. "I started writing it because I didn't want to talk about it. Not that it was a secret. After I had 50 pages down, Simon & Schuster bought it."

"It tells the high points and low points of my life and how I came through them. Now I'm 55 and I have my health. Betty Ford was an example for me in talking about my illness. I'm getting some very terrific letters from women about it."

Newman underwent one mastectomy and then had to have her second breast removed. She describes it as "no way to treat a lady." Soon after her recovery she went back to work, first in a own one-woman show, "The Madwoman of Central Park West," then in "Broadway Bound."

Newman and her husband have two children, Adam, a comedy writer, and Amanda, an actress.

The Bright Lights Of Atlantic City's Casinos Draw Authors, Filmmakers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Drawn by the bright and dazzling lights of casinos and the bleak squalor of the urban area beyond the Boardwalk, Atlantic City has become a popular setting for filmmakers and novelists crafting tales of organized crime, drugs, prostitution, gambling and murder.

"An ugly mixture of glitter and sleaze," is how novelist Ovid Demaris sees the city in his upcoming work, "Ricochet." In "Under the Boardwalk," author Bill Kent's characters are portrayed in a "universe of dazzle and slime."

TV viewers got glimpses of Atlantic City recently with a movie based on Elmore Leonard's 1985 novel, "Glitz," starring Markie Post and Jimmy Smits. In his book, Leonard talks about the glittery casinos thriving on bus tours that "dropped the suckers off for six hours to lose their paychecks."

He also describes the city's Inlet neighborhood as an area that "looked as though it had been fought over in a war, house to house, and half the people had packed up and left."

All the attention gets mixed reviews from city fathers who take pride in the allure of their town but worry that it's being typecast.

"We do look like a perfect stage set," said John Fox, a spokesman for the Atlantic City Convention & Visitors Bureau. "We have a beautiful stage set along the beachfront with the giant casinos ... but the rundown neighborhoods also seem to be an easy target."

Mayor James Usry accuses some writers of "yellow journalism" when it concerns Atlantic City. "But that's what sells papers and books," he said.

"I don't know of any Mafia in Atlantic City. You know, these authors could say it took place in Mayville, Ill., but what would that mean to people? Atlantic City is one of the most designated city names in the country."

Louis Malle's critically acclaimed movie, "Atlantic City," starring

Burt Lancaster and Susan Sarandon, marked the start of Atlantic City's revival as a setting for moviedom and novels. That was nine years ago, barely a year after legalized gambling began.

Now barely a month passes without Atlantic City featured in some TV show, movie or book.

Diane Keaton has shot scenes in one casino for a story about three nightclub entertainers. The comedy-magic team of Penn & Teller was in the resort last spring to film "Penn & Teller Get Killed."

"Atlantic City Weekend: A Romantic Adventure," was released this fall. Characters in the book by Helen Mourtos include an entrepreneur "on the outside of society," a casino dealer and a mysterious nightclub dancer.

Previews described the novel as "offering insiders a view of life in the world of Atlantic City's casinos ... about the temptations beneath the casinos' bright lights."

Fox doesn't think the visions of a sleazy Atlantic City have driven away business or visitors.

"I can't throw rocks at the movie writers and novelists because they happen to choose us as their setting," he said. "I don't think anybody except a travel writer goes out of their way to write something positive about any particular city."

Fox worries more about how trade publications portray the city.

"They prefer to look at the business side of things," he said. "They are more important to us, the marketers."

Demaris said it was the lure of gambling, the big hotels and Atlantic City's history as a resort that enticed him to choose it as the setting for "Ricochet," a novel that promises to take "readers straight to the heart of a world of greed, political corruption, organized crime and murder."

Could his novel have worked in another city?

"No," said Demaris, "because casino gambling is a part of it."

Chinese Menu Strictly Kosher

By Eugene Meyer

Ellsworth J. Davis/The Washington Post

Tessler, left, Ung and Meyer at 'Ung's Moshe Dragon,' which offers kosher Chinese food

WASHINGTON — It's the Great American Success Story. And it's strictly kosher.

Its proprietor is Lenny Ung, 28. No, he's not Jewish. He's Buddhist by background, a Vietnamese immigrant who traces his ancestry to China.

With his family, Ung fled the Vietnam War to Cambodia, then wound up as a Cambodian boat person in a Malaysian refugee camp for 22 months before immigrating to the United States in 1980.

His employees also are Vietnamese immigrants of Chinese descent, except Michael Meyer, a 40-year-old Vietnam War veteran, who supervises the kitchen for kosher compliance. In addition, Meyer takes phone orders and works as maitre d' and cashier.

The restaurant is tastefully decorated with Israeli and Chinese art. By the cash register are Chinese symbols and the 1948 Israeli declaration of independence, in Hebrew. To Orthodox Jews, this blending of cultures has made eating out while observing ancient dietary laws possible.

"Without it, there are no options," said Rabbi Joel Tessler of the Beth Shalom Congregation in Potomac, Md., who was instrumental in bringing Ung to Washington from Philadelphia, where Ung owns another kosher Chinese restaurant.

With it, Dr. Ron Gartenhaus, a yarmulke-wearing cancer researcher at the National Institutes of Health, was able to enjoy eating out one night in November.

"I come from New York, where I'm used to having all kinds of kosher restaurants — French, Italian, etcetera," Gartenhaus said.

"I come here almost once a week."

Also among the diners that night was a singles group from Adas Israel, a Conservative congregation in Washington. The next day a half-dozen elderly men from the Hebrew Home in Rockville, Md., ate a kosher Chinese lunch. Non-Jews, as well as non-kosher Jews, also patronize the restaurant.

Kosher means not mixing meat and dairy products, and eating meat only from animals with cloven hooves that chew their cud, according to dietary laws originating in the Book of Leviticus.

That eliminates all pork and shellfish. Higher standards of kosher, signified by the Yiddish word glatt, require that animals be killed by religiously trained shochets, and that the internal organs be free of all abnormalities. Only meat that passes muster makes it to Moshe Dragon.

"We had a Hasidic couple here from Williamsburg, New York," Meyer said. "They checked out all our credentials" before they sat down to eat.

Moshe Dragon closes Friday afternoons for the Jewish Sabbath and reopens Saturday evenings. It also closes for major Jewish holidays. The cuisine is mostly Sichuan, although Ung's ancestors are Cantonese.

Soon after coming to America, Ung moved to Philadelphia, hoping to study medicine. But when other family members arrived, he quit high school to help support them by cleaning cars in an auto dealership, picking blueberries in New Jersey and waiting on tables in a Chinese restaurant.

Eventually, he bought a small carry-out food shop in a heavily Jewish Philadelphia neighborhood. It did not do well. The reason, Ung learned, was that the residents were Orthodox.

Ung's restaurant went kosher, and business boomed. Among his out-of-town customers was Tessler, who thought Ung also could succeed with a second restaurant around Washington.

With an estimated 175,000 Jews in the Washington area, Tessler noted, restaurants observing the dietary laws had come and gone, but a kosher Chinese restaurant had never been tried here. Tessler mounted a campaign to convince Ung that Washington area Jews would enthusiastically support such a place.

Michael Epstein and Dennis Berman, business partners and brothers-in-law who belong to Tessler's congregation, helped Ung find a location, suggested a name and guaranteed a bank loan to enable their dream to come true. The restaurant opened on Sept. 17, in the middle of the Jewish High Holy Days.

At the last minute, Tessler, representing the Rabbinical Council of Washington, helped to get the kitchen into compliance with kosher standards — "with one hand cleaning greasy chickens and with the other hand writing my High Holy Days sermon with a pen," he said.

Today, according to Meyer, the restaurant, which seats up to 140 people, grosses about $20,000 a week. Saturday and Sunday nights are busiest, he said, with lines of customers stretching out the door.

There's a lot of table-hopping at Moshe Dragon, with friends meeting friends. Tessler said, "It's one small step for bringing the community together and showing it's not as difficult to be kosher. It's a real Jewish experience."

The restaurant has attracted its share of Jewish celebrities, such as Hyman Bookbinder, the Democratic Party activist, and officials from the Israeli Embassy in Washington. Recently an Israeli judge ate there.

Good Lighting And A Little Work Keys To Photographing Your Pets

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Don't say "cheese." Say "sit" and hope he'll stay.

Actually, there's no sure-fire way to assure fine photos of your pet, this holiday or anytime. But Ken Merfeld, a Los Angeles area fashion and portrait photographer, offers some help.

Quality lighting is vital. "The average pet owner can't be expected to have strobe lights, but you do need sufficient lighting," says Merfeld, who over the past decade has compiled a photographic series on people and their pets. "This gives fur definition and allows for texture, particularly in the case of a dark dog whose coat absorbs light."

Try to photograph your pet in a confined space. If possible, keep the dog on a table or a stool to prevent him from walking off once he has lost interest. "The smarter the dog, the more easily bored he becomes," says Merfeld.

Since dogs respond to noise, several squeak toys with different pitches may catch an animal's attention. Also, drop a variety of "teaser" items in front of the camera to keep him interested.

Be ready to shoot as soon as you get the dog into position.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY Dec. 8

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Over-extension of the budget can affect family matters. You are running from one end of a financial see-saw to the other. Achieve balance.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): If you push too hard for love, you may lose. Avoid petty jealousies, and give your partner some creative room. Everyone needs freedom.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You love a challenge so you can prove yourself. Avoid setting up inferior activities that are not up to your talents. Develop quality.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Setting up things in terms of negative and positive produces poor results. Prepare yourself to take a middle-of-the-road approach.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Doubt in your mind over a relationship persists. Draw back socially to take an objective view. Remain conscious of work and family schedules.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Others are depending on you for answers. Organize yourself for up-and-coming career challenges. You have the power to succeed.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Love and home matters need attention and some direct and firm decisions. Control yourself, and avoid instinctive reactions to circumstances.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): You feel cornered and need a change of pace. Stay with constructive activities that don't disrupt what you have accomplished.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Professional and career involvements become more rewarding. Lay plans to satisfy your current desire for education.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Stop worrying, and let go of a problem in order to find a solution. Your picture-perfect ideal is preventing you from expressing your talents.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Learning to control your thinking will anchor your creative intellect to useful and rewarding projects. Rambling ideas have few rewards.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): You rise above any fears or doubts that you had yesterday. Be vital, energetic and enthusiastic, and keep your curiosity high.

Christmas Stocking, by Frank Stewart. (Available from Stocking, P.O. Box 18099, Memphis, Tenn. 38181-0099, $8 postpaid.) To make it a personal gift, the author will autograph or inscribe the book on request.

On this hand, one of the characters, Lance, was defending against three no trump with the West cards. He led a heart to declarer's ten, and back came the queen of spades to the ace.

"I played low, a bad mistake as you will see. Declarer then cashed his two top clubs and threw me in with the king of spades. It was then I realized that I should have covered the queen of spades with my king even though dummy had the stiff ace!"

"You can see what I had done to myself. Another heart lead now, besides losing a trick, puts me out of touch with partner's hand; and if I lead a diamond, declarer can always set up the suit without letting (partner) in. If I still had the five of spades, I could exit safely. Declarer would have only eight tricks, and Millard is bound to get in to lead a heart through.

"I actually led the jack of diamonds, hoping (partner) had the ace. Declarer ducked in dummy and was all set to duck in hand, too ... But (partner) played the king ... I don't know what made him do it, maybe 'cover partner's honor with an honor' Who knows? Declarer didn't give either one of us much credit—he won the ace and led a diamond to the nine.

"Down four. Another top."
 A book to warm the cockles of your heart any time of the year.

A Most Beautiful Scene

By Anna Ibele

The most beautiful scene I've ever seen in nature was a waterfall coming over a cliff and the meadow below it.

The waterfall I once saw was fed by a river coming out of a nearby forest. It rushed angrily along as if it were in a hurry to get somewhere. Cool, blue water was turned to stinging foam as it fell a mile downward.

Over the waterfall, there was a rainbow. It was the largest I have ever seen. It started just where the water began to fall down the cliff and it ended in the meadow a mile below. The rainbow had a soft pastel tint to it. It seemed to contain every color.

At the edge of the cliff, on each side of the waterfall, a few trees grew. They were short and had only a few clumps of leaves. The leaves were a light spring green and the bark was as dark as chocolate. The trees looked as if any moment they would fall from the cliff, down to the meadow below.

The meadow was a beautiful, quiet place. It contrasted greatly with the angry water above it. It was full of wildflowers. Among them were black eyed Susans. Their petals were as gold as the sun and their centers were a dark, dark brown. There were no trees in the meadow, but it was full of rich, green grass.

In the meadows, wild ponies grazed. They were soft grey, with grey or white manes. They didn't seem to notice the sound of the raging water above them.

I think that the meadow, with its peaceful little ponies, and the great waterfall overlooking it was the most beautiful scene in nature I have ever seen. I hope to see more like it someday.

Homework Shouldn't Be Assigned On Weekends

By Leigh Messer

Homework shouldn't be assigned on weekends for the following reasons.

First of all, it is the weekend and that is vacation and rest time. We have been in school all week doing work and we don't need to do it at home because we are tired. Another thing is that we need to rest our minds because we have been thinking and being good all week. We need to rest up for a fresh week so we can perform well on the following Monday morning.

Second of all, some students have jobs. Weekend homework would interfere with their jobs. Students may want to work to earn money to buy extra things like jewelry and other accessories for their wardrobes that their parents may choose not to buy for them. Also, some people don't have very much money so they need to help their parents out. Most of all, young people need to learn responsibility through our weekend jobs, but not if homework keeps us from working.

Last of all are family activities. Some people hardly ever get to see their families because they live so far away. Also parents work hard all week and children are busy with school work. Your family is a very special part of your life. Your family encourages you, loves you, and cares for you when no one else does. So you should spend as much time with them as you possibly can. As you can see, weekend homework will keep us from many family activities.

Homework shouldn't be assigned on weekends. It keeps us from resting, working, and being with our families.

Leigh Messer, 13, a student at Farmville Middle School receives special mention.

That Great Saturday

By Kim Barrett

It was Saturday a.m., a very sunny day. My mommy took me to a place I had never been. It had lots of balloons. They were pretty. Then I saw one of my friends. Her name was Lolly. Lolly's father was the boss of the balloons. He let us get one the prettiest balloons. I would never forget that day. I thought I was dreaming. Lolly and I got on. Her father said, "Don't be scared." We went all over the forest. I saw a deer, a dog, people and mom. We had so much fun.

Soon I looked down. I noticed how high I was in the sky. It seemed that I was in heaven. I got used to it and was not scared anymore. After that, my heart was slowing down. Soon I saw the beach. I asked Lolly's father, "Could we go?" He said, "Not today." So we went on.

Then we were coming back. I knew mom was waiting for me to come back.

I told mom about how it went. She asked me did I have fun? I told Lolly that this Saturday was the best I ever had and then I went home.

Department Of Defense

The Department of Defense is a part of the executive branch of government. The head of the agency is called secretary of defense. The president appoints the secretary and the appointment must be approved by the Senate. The secretary of defense is a civilian and is 6th in line to serve as president. The secretary is also a member of the president's Cabinet.

In 1789 Congress established a War Department, this name was changed after 1947 to the Department of the Army. It was in 1949 that the agency was restructured into the Department of Defense. This was combined into one department of all the armed forces. Members of the Department of Defense are the joint chiefs of staff. These are heads or chiefs of staff of the Army, Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps. The duty of this department is to direct all of the operations of the armed forces of the United States. Today there are more than 2 million civilian and military employees of this department.

In 1982 a Space Command was established as a part of the agency. It's responsibility is to deal with space shuttles which carry military loads. In addition, it is responsible for antisatellite warfare.

Time Is Money, Especially To Calendar Industry

By A.M. Chaplin
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

"Time, time, time is on my side, yes it is."

— Mick Jagger and Keith Richards

That was in 1964, when the Rolling Stones and their fans were young, and time stretched before them long and empty as a Nebraska interstate.

But on the eve of 1989, the once-young fans of the rock and roll group have grown into busy adults with careers, families and personal organizers to maintain, and time is crowding in on them like rush-hour traffic on a busy highway.

Time has become less an ally than a problem, needing to be carefully controlled by the tidy squares of datebooks and the relentless accuracy of quartz-hearted Casios.

But even as measuring time has turned into an essential chore, it also has become one more means to that valued "baby boomer" end: self-expression through ownership.

Now, even while you're managing your time efficiently, you can be telling the world who you are: You can buy a calendar that expresses your support for the environment, a watch that shows you're athletic, an organizer expensive enough to prove your prowess in the business world.

On the eve of 1989, it seems, time is on the side of those who have figured out how to market it.

Time is money to the tune of about $1.3 billion a year, if you're talking about the calendar industry alone.

So says Michael DeMent, products spokesman for Hallmark Cards, one of the nation's biggest producers of calendars, although he adds that the figure can vary depending on factors such as whether you include giveaways.

"The average American household uses as many as six calendars at one time," DeMent continues, "three in the home, two in the office and then one in a wallet or purse."

"Over the last five years calendars have really come into their own," says Dara Tyson, spokeswoman for Waldenbooks. She estimates that calendar sales for the company have increased by 20 percent a year in recent years.

"It's really doing great as a category," she adds. "It's phenomenal."

Much of the increasing popularity of time-management tools like calendars and personal organizers is "just demographic," reflecting the increasing number of households where both adults work, especially since the early '80s, DeMent says.

With women in the workplace rather than at home running household errands, the time available for leisure pursuits has become shorter and shorter for both men and women, but perhaps especially for women.

"Whether in single-parent or two-parent households, women tend to lead in organizing the household's time," DeMent notes. "They just have so much to do that they need the kinds of time-management tool that a calendar offers."

"She not only needs calendars, she practically needs a personal computer," says Thomas J. Cottle, clinical psychologist at the Harvard Medical School and author of "Perceiving Time: a Psychological Investigation With Men and Women."

"And when she decides to take a vacation, (her husband) practically collapses under the strain" of living up to her calendar.

As if having women work weren't already putting enough pressure on their time, baby boomers also insist on sticking to that major '80s goal: having it all.

And if they want to have it all — family and community involvement as well as career and the health club — they have to start "putting priorities on what's important to them and what's not," DeMent says. "And when you start prioritizing your life you need to get a better grip on time."

And when you need to get a better grip on time, it seems, calendar and datebook sales go up. The evolution of calendars from lowly throwaways to artful barometers of self seems to be another major reason for their increasing popularity.

Today's consumers want the things they use "to reflect the kind of people they perceive themselves to be," Hallmark's DeMent explains. "Our calendars are almost always targeted to lifestyle niches."

DeMent himself maintains a wall calendar that reflects his love of sailing as well as a more businesslike personal organizer.

"Just about any hobby that a person could have is represented by a calendar," agrees Jo Blankenburg, manager of a Waldenbooks store in Towson, Md.

Hobbies aren't the only special interests to be calendared: quilts, flamingoes, pigs, chocolate, fighter jets, Porsches, trains, diners, dinosaurs and the Grateful Dead are among the 1989 calendar subjects for Landmark General Corporation, one of the country's biggest calendar producers and a self-described pioneer in the lifestyle of calendars.

But marking interests and hobbies isn't the only way today's calendar defines its owner. In a more general way, it also advertises the good taste of the person who uses it.

"Beauty and aesthetics are increasingly important to customers," says Mary Lilja, spokeswoman with

B. Dalton Bookseller. "They won't put their bank calendars up on the wall; they'll put up an Ansel Adams."

"Calendars are used in a big way for decorating. And the manufacturers have become more savvy" about what they put in them, agrees Waldenbooks' Ms. Tyson.

So calendars have grown from cheap giveaways into expressive "wall art." Still, the self that Americans want to show off on their walls is far from ultra-sophisticated.

The big best-selling categories remain scenic and animals, especially cats and dogs. The off-beat humor of Gary Larson's "The Far Side" continues to top popularity lists at many outlets, and the Sports Illustrated swimsuit calendar also does consistently well.

New trends include big calendars, like Hallmark's poster-size series; little calendars, called mini wall calendars; the increasing use of characters picked up from cartoon or book series, and the growing popularity of page-a-day calendars.

In addition, the trend toward 16-month calendars, particularly popular with students, has lengthened the traditionally short selling season for calendars — thus adding still more to their popularity.

With the exception of the Sports Illustrated version, calendars that show a lot of skin seem to be on the wane, Ms. Blankenburg says.

"I think the public was sort of overwhelmed by the variety" available in the last season or two, "and now it's not as fascinating."

Ms. Blankenburg also thinks the vogue for personal organizers "has sort of dropped off. ... Unless you were super-organized, they're difficult to keep up."

But, she adds, "We sell a lot of simple appointment books."

There's still another factor that may help account for the boom in time-managing devices, and "It's perhaps metaphoric," Harvard's Cottle says.

"I think the shadow of living under the threat of nuclear death" affects people and their sense of time, he explains. "Way, way, way, way back of their minds (they know) that it could all come to an end" in a single unstoppable instant — but people also feel calendars and clocks are a kind of insurance against that ugly truth.

He describes an acquaintance who owns a Casio watch-calendar that is good through 2050, and says, "If you have a calendar in your pocket that goes to 2050, that's kind of a guarantee that you'll live that long."

"Americans don't like to face mortality," Cottle concludes, "but as long as you've got calendars and watches, the perception that time is endless remains alive."

Chicken wings may be combined with vegetables and a dip for delicious hors d'oeuvres

Buffalo Chicken Wings Suit Holiday Nibbling

You can add a special zest to your holiday get-togethers this year with a popular and novel snack — Buffalo Chicken Wings.

These tasty tidbits began as a spur-of-the-moment concoction in a New York state neighborhood bar more than two decades ago. Today, they are a national favorite.

According to legend, Buffalo Chicken Wings were first served in 1964 at Frank and Theresa's Anchor Bar. Theresa was in search of something to serve friends who had stopped into the bar, and she came across a batch of chicken wings which she had set aside as useless.

She cut the wings in half at the joint, fried them in oil, added a hot sauce and served the wings on a platter with blue cheese dressing and a few celery sticks. They were an instant hit.

Buffalo Chicken Wings can be served as an hors d'oeuvre or finger food at holiday cocktail parties, or even as a main dish. They're an excellent choice whether you're the hostess or a guest who's been asked to bring something.

1 cup soy or corn oil
2 cups cider vinegar
1/2 teaspoon pepper
Cayenne pepper to taste
1 garlic clove, crushed
1/8 teaspoon celery seed
Dash coriander
Dash ground cloves
Celery sticks
Creamy Blue Cheese Dipping Sauce (recipe follows)

In medium bowl, beat egg; add oil and beat again. Add vinegar, pepper, cayenne, garlic, nutmeg, celery seed and cloves. Stir well. Cut chicken wings in half at the joint; remove wing tips and place in shallow roasting pan. Bake about 10 minutes at 500 degrees, turning and basting with sauce several times until wings reach desired crispness.

Remove from oven, drain and remove to warm platter garnished with celery sticks. Serve with Creamy Blue Cheese Dipping Sauce.

Cooks Tell How To Prepare For Large Gathering

By Linda Giuca
LAT/WP NEWS SERVICE

If the thought of having an elegant dinner party for 12 or a holiday dinner for 30 prompts heart palpitations, take a deep breath and listen to Susan Wyler.

"The key to successful entertaining is allowing yourself to feel like a guest at your own party," Wyler writes in the introduction to her book, "Cooking for a Crowd."

Easier said than done, Wyler agrees, conceding that cooking for a crowd takes work and money. "But you can make it easier on yourself, and if it's in your nature, downright enjoyable — if you learn what's important and what's not, what's possible and what's not worth attempting," she says.

Wyler, food editor of Food and Wine magazine, has mastered the art of easy entertaining, no matter the occasion or the number of guests. She catered her own second wedding in her home and enjoys impromptu gatherings, often on weeknights after a day at the office.

A key to her success are tried and true recipes culled from her parties and food-writing work over the years. "You have to choose simple recipes that are manageable and can be made ahead," she said in a telephone interview from her New York City home.

Wyler is not a slave to those recipes, however. "For years and years I followed recipes, making little changes like all good cooks do," she said. "The pleasure for me is taking ingredients and doing something new with them," she says.

Wyler's advice in the book is meant to encourage and guide timid hosts. She maps out 22 menus, ranging from informal suppers and more elegant dinner parties for 10 to 12 people to holiday celebrations, a tailgate party for 24 and theme parties for 36 to 50 guests.

For each menu in the book, Wyler draws up a "Do-Ahead Planning" list. She outlines what portion of the recipe can be prepared in advance and when. The recipe directions, while sometimes lengthy, leave nothing to chance.

When planning and giving a party, "Do what you can really manage and don't underestimate" the work involved, Wyler advises. "If you have any doubts, make it easy on yourself."

Do not think that you must prepare everything from scratch. "Have the butcher roast a turkey or do a poached salmon, and you do the salads," she said. Buy dessert if baking is not your forte.

Wyler said that she is typical of many cooks of her generation — the group that learned to cook from watching and reading Julia Child. "We did everything ourselves. We made everything from scratch — we made the pastry and we made the pasta," she says. "But now, because we're all so busy, we cannot cook like that anymore, and we're lucky because there are so many good takeout foods."

Try Whole Grains For Better Nutrition

Bread has always been one of the basics of good nutrition, and a visit to any modern supermarket reveals a growing sophistication in taste and nutritional knowledge among today's consumers. That good old American standby, enriched white bread, is certainly still there on the supermarket shelves, but it has gotten a lot of new neighbors as consumer demand has increased for both new tastes and better nutrition.

Bleached white flour, which is the basis for our old favorite white bread, has been through processing which has removed the wheat grain's bran and germ, and thus most of its nutrients and fiber. The enriched process adds back a few nutrients, but not all and none of the fiber.

A sounder nutritional choice today are breads made from whole wheat flour, or from flours ground from other whole grains. The flour-making process for these grains does not strip off the bran and germ of the wheat, and retains most of the natural nutrients in the final flour, as well as all the natural fiber.

Choosing breads made from whole grains is an excellent way to increase your daily intake of dietary fiber, nutrient which studies supported by the American Institute for Cancer Research have associated with lower cancer risks. Your key is to read ingredient labels. Pick a bread that lists "whole wheat flour" as its first ingredient.

The following homemade bread uses whole wheat flour, plus bran and bran cereal for high fiber content. Requiring no kneading, it's easy to do, and its texture — between that of an angel food cake and traditional hearty bread — will delight your family.

ALMOST HEAVEN BREAD

First Mixture:
2 1/2 cups sifted whole wheat germ flour
1/2 cup sifted wheat germ
1/2 cup 100% Bran cereal
1/4 cup instant non-fat dry milk
1/2 tsp. ginger
2 pkgs. active dry yeast
2 Tbsp. olive oil
1 cup sifted unbleached, all-purpose white flour

Second Mixture:
2 cups water
1/4 cup honey
1 tsp. salt
In a large bowl mix all the first mixture ingredients, except the one cup white flour and the oil. Beat with an electric mixer on low for one minute. Blend in the oil.
Mix ingredients for second mixture in a saucepan and heat until just hot (120-130 degrees).

Pour the second mixture slowly into the bowl with the first mixture, mixing constantly and scraping the

Poultry Anchors Menu

Whether it's a "home-for-the-holidays" family dinner, a neighborhood holiday open house, a covered-dish Christmas dinner at church, or an informal gathering of friends ... whatever the occasion for a holiday get-together, poultry will likely be an often featured item on the menu.

Many holiday tables around the world traditionally feature a delicious golden roast turkey with all the trimmings, and there are a variety of poultry recipes that are party-perfect for festive entertaining.

"Poached Turkey Narmandy," using turkey tenderloins and a sauce made from cranberry sauce, orange marmalade and apples, is just right for small gatherings. This dish is not only elegant and easy to prepare, but also low in calories (only 198 per servings). "Orange/Cranberry

Q. Can you recommend a good book for parents to read about child nutrition? A.B., Greenville.

A. There are many books on the shelves and it is difficult to choose. Unfortunately they don't all have good nutrition information. A colleague of mine has a new book I feel very comfortable recommending to you. "How to Get Your Kid to Eat ... But Not Too Much" is a comprehensive, easy-to-read book on feeding styles and behaviors of children from infancy through teens. Ellyn Satter is a registered dietitian and also a therapist who has had an extensive background in childhood nutrition and behaviors.

Behavioral aspects and nutritional guides of parenting are offered. Ms. Satter includes many real life situations and solutions that have been presented to her in counseling sessions.

Several truisms are stressed throughout the book. Do not force or deny food to a child. Each child has unique tastes and varying amounts necessary to achieve optimum growth. Timing of meals and snacks is essential. It is the parents' responsibility to eat it. You are not alone as a parent if you feel frustration, resentment and anger at times (but learn to recognize and control these emotions!) And finally, eating is an experience that should be pleasant!

Each life stage of childhood is discussed with its peculiarities, aggravations, practical suggestions for the frustrated parent are given. Sick daycare, developmentally disabled children, chronic illnesses, dieting, eating disorders, failure to thrive and picky eaters are just a few of the topics discussed in this book. Ms. Satter's wit makes us all realize that the most frustrating moments of life can be made easier. Responsibility, education, guidance and patience are factors that are stressed in good parent-child feeding interactions.

Realistic approaches and goals are explained to give the frenzied parent direction. Meal plans, food groups, vitamin and mineral sources and growth charts are provided, as well as suggested serving sizes for appropriate age groups.

Ms. Satter provides many references you can find in the library for further study or reading to understand childhood eating problems and behaviors. Developmental stages are discussed for each group as well as to give the new puzzled parent some guidelines and markposts to use.

Nancy Gray, the pediatric dietitian at the ECU School of Medicine also highly recommends Satter's books for parents or professionals that may need information or guidance. In particular, Ms. Gray mentioned the sections on obesity, failure to thrive and eating disorders as being very functional in theory and providing guidelines to use in treatment or avoidance of problems with eating disorders.

The book is paperback ($12.95) and can be ordered from Bull Publishing Co., Palo Alto, Calif.

Q. I thought your readers might like to know how successful our diabetes screenings were. Please share the results. Earl Aiken, Greenville.

A. Earl was one of many volunteers involved in the local diabetes association special work in November. He said they were very busy, the volunteers are thankful for the stores who supported the cost of the screenings. About 408 people were screened for diabetes, while 19 people were determined to be possible diabetics because of their high blood sugar. Those people need to visit their doctor to review their family medical history, do another blood test and review other symptoms like obesity, to determine if they are diabetics. Diabetes can be well controlled today with doctor and patient working well together. Congratulations to the local diabetes chapter for their good work.

Holiday parties or informal gatherings are perfect occasions for Ham Swirls, made with frozen ready-dough, sliced ham

Ham Swirls Perfect For Holiday Parties

Be it a holiday cocktail party, appetizers before the family dinner, or just an informal get-together, Ham Swirls made with ready-to-cook frozen dough and sliced cooked ham are perfect for the occasion. Easy to prepare, these delicious appetizers will please every one of your holiday guests and leave you plenty of time to enjoy the festivities. Just follow the simple recipe below and have a happy holiday!

HAM SWIRLS

! (one lb.) loaf of frozen ready-to-cook dough

12 slices cooked ham (4"x4")
4 oz. softened cream cheese
6 Tbsp. chopped olives (black or green)

Let dough thaw until pliable. On lightly floured board, roll dough out to 12"x16" and cut in half. Cover each half with 6 ham slices. Spread cream cheese over ham and sprinkle with chopped olives. Beginning with 12" sides, roll each dough piece up tightly. Pinch dough to seal. Cut into 1/2-inch slices and place on greased baking sheets. Let rise for 30 minutes. Bake at 350 for 15 minutes or until brown. Makes 48 appetizers.

Cooks Tell How To Get Ready For A Large Holiday Gathering

Wylar also is a believer in making written rather than mental lists. "When was the last time you left something in the refrigerator" that was supposed to be served at a party, she asks. "Even greeting 24 people at the door is work. Make a list ahead of time, and make sure the food is done ahead."

Wylar practices what she explains in "Cooking for a Crowd." "I entertain a lot," she said. "I entertain much more casually in the summer and grill out almost exclusively. In the winter, I give chili parties or a Southwestern buffet. I love to do Thanksgiving and Christmas."

The book's menus bear out her preferences. A backyard barbecue for 16 people features grilled pepper-lime chicken, grilled corn basted with a spicy mayonnaise, black bean salad, and more. Her Southwestern buffet begins with caviar nachos and other nibbles and moves on to Barbacoa of Lamb with fresh tomato salsa and warm flour tortillas, a do-ahead chicken cheese tortilla casserole, salads and toasted coconut flan for dessert.

The following recipes are reprinted from "Cooking for a Crowd." Wylar's Holiday for a Large Gathering menu, geared for 16 to 20 people, features this Pecan-Cornbread Stuffing. She suggests filling the turkey loosely with the stuffing, and baking any extra in a separate dish for about 30 minutes. Prepare the cornbread at least one day ahead so that it has time to dry out.

PECAN-CORNBREAD STUFFING

- 1 1/2 cups broken or coarsely chopped pecans
- 1 recipe Sage Cornbread (recipe below)
- 1 stick unsalted butter
- Cup olive oil
- 4 medium onions, chopped
- 3 celery ribs with leaves, chopped
- 5 garlic cloves, chopped
- 3 eggs
- 1/3 cup chopped parsley
- 1 teaspoon crumbled sage leaves
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 1 teaspoon coarsely cracked black pepper
- 1/8 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 1 1/2 teaspoons grated orange zest
- 1/2 cup fresh orange juice
- 1 to 1 1/2 cups turkey or chicken stock

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Spread out the pecans on a baking sheet, and toast in the oven for 8 to 10 minutes, or until lightly browned and fragrant. Pour onto a plate and cool.

Cut the cornbread into 3/4-inch cubes. Put them and any crumbs into a large bowl, and let stand, tossing occasionally, for at least 6 hours or overnight, to dry out.

In a large skillet or flame-proof casserole, melt the butter in the oil over moderate heat. Add the onions, cover and cook 5 minutes. Uncover, add the celery, and cook, stirring occasionally, until the onions are golden, 15 to 20 minutes. Add the garlic and cook 1 to 2 minutes longer, until fragrant. Scrape the vegetable mixture over the cornbread.

In a small bowl, beat the eggs with a fork until blended. Beat in the parsley, sage, salt, black pepper, cayenne and orange zest. Pour over the cornbread. Add the pecans and toss to mix. Add the orange juice and 1/2 cup of the stock and toss again. Add enough remaining stock so that the stuffing is moist but not soggy. Cover and refrigerate for up to a day before stuffing and roasting the turkey. Makes about 12 cups.

SAGE CORNBREAD

- 4 cups stone-ground cornmeal
- 1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon plus 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 3/4 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- Cup parsley sprigs, loosely packed
- 5 fresh sage leaves, cut up,
- or 1 1/2 teaspoons dried
- 1 stick unsalted butter
- 4 eggs
- 2 cups milk
- 1 cup half-and-half or light cream

Combine the cornmeal, flour, sugar, baking powder, baking soda and salt in a large bowl. Whisk to blend well. Put 1 cup of the cornmeal mixture, the parsley and sage in a food processor, and process until the herbs are minced. Add to the remaining dry ingredients and whisk to blend.

Preheat the oven to 425 degrees. Melt the butter and let cool to tepid. Just before you're ready to cook the cornbread, whisk the eggs to blend them. Gradually beat in the milk and half-and-half. Add the liquid to the dry ingredients. Add the melted butter, and mix just until blended. Pour the batter into a buttered 16- by 13-inch baking dish, and bake for 25 minutes or until the cornbread is browned on top and a tester comes out clean. Makes 16 to 20 servings.

MAPLE-BUTTERNUT BISQUE

- 6 pounds butternut or acorn squash
- 1 1/2 sticks (6 ounces) unsalted butter
- 3 large onions, coarsely chopped
- 1/2 cup all-purpose flour
- 3 cups milk
- 3 cans (13 3/4 ounces each) chicken broth
- 3/8 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 1 1/2 cups heavy cream
- Cup plus 1 tablespoon pure maple syrup
- 1 1/2 cups pecans, toasted and coarsely chopped

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Pierce the squash in several places with a fork and bake until soft, 45 minutes to 1 hour. Remove and let cool slightly, then cut in half, scoop out and discard the seeds and stringy membranes and scoop the squash into a bowl.

In a large flame-proof casserole or heavy stockpot, melt the butter over moderately low heat. Add the onions and cook, stirring occasionally, until golden brown, about 30 minutes.

Sprinkle the flour over the onions, increase the heat to moderate and cook, stirring, for about 2 minutes to make a roux. Whisk in the milk and chicken broth. Bring to a boil, stirring frequently. Season with cayenne pepper and salt.

In batches in a blender or food processor, puree the baked squash with the soup base until smooth. Return to the pot, add the cream and maple syrup and simmer for 10 minutes to blend the flavors. Check the seasoning; if there is not a little bite to contrast with the sweetness of the squash and maple syrup, add more cayenne pepper to taste. Serve hot, garnished with a sprinkling of toasted pecans. Serves 16 to 20.

CRANBERRY-RASPBERRY MOUSSE

- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
 - 2 packages (12 ounces each) cranberries, fresh or frozen
 - 2 1/2 cups sugar
 - 1 package (12 ounces) individually quick-frozen raspberries with no sugar added
 - 6 egg whites
 - 1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar
 - 3 cups heavy cream
- In a small bowl, sprinkle the gelatin over 1/4 cup cold water. Let stand to soften. In a large saucepan, combine the cranberries with 1 1/2 cups of the sugar and 1 1/2 cups of water. Bring to a boil over moderately high heat, reduce the heat to moderate and cook, stirring frequently, for 5 minutes. Remove from the heat, stir in the softened gelatin and let cool slightly.

Pass the cranberries through the medium disk of a food mill or puree in a food processor and then strain to remove the skins. Let cool to room temperature. Puree the raspberries in a food processor. Work through a mesh sieve with a rubber or plastic spatula to remove the seeds (There will be about 1 1/4 cups puree). Combine the cranberry and raspberry purees in a large bowl and mix well to blend.

Beat the egg whites and cream of tartar with an electric mixer on high speed until stiff.

Fold about one-third of the cream into the berry puree to lighten it a little. Fold in the remaining cream and then the egg whites, until the mousse is even in color and no white streaks show. Turn into a large serving bowl, preferably glass, cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate until chilled and set, at least 6 hours, or overnight. Makes 30 to 36 servings. For smaller groups, the recipe can be halved exactly.

sides of the bowl. Beat for 3 minutes on high speed. Then add the reserved one cup of white flour and mix in well.

Cover the bowl tightly and place it in a warm place (85 degrees) for 10 minutes to allow dough to rise. Press the dough down with a wooden spoon and then spoon it into a loaf pan (9x5-inches) that has been greased with margarine. Cover loosely with foil and let rise until almost double, about 30 minutes.

Remove the foil and place the bread pan into a preheated 350 degree oven for about 35 minutes until brown. Remove the bread from the pan when done and cool on a rack. Refrigerate.

CREAMY BLUE CHEESE DIPPING SAUCE

In medium bowl, place 2 tablespoons chopped onion, 1 garlic clove (crushed), 1/4 cup chopped fresh parsley, 1 cup mayonnaise, 1/2 cup sour cream, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 tablespoon vinegar and 1/4 cup crumbled blue cheese. Stir, and add pepper and cayenne to taste. Cover and chill.

HOLIDAY BRUNCH TURKEY HAM & EGG CASSEROLE

12 eggs
2 1/2 cups milk
4 slices bread
1/2 cup chopped green pepper
1/2 cup chopped onion
1 can (4 oz.) mushroom pieces
1 cup chopped turkey ham
2 cups grated cheddar cheese
Salt and pepper to taste

Beat together eggs, milk, salt and pepper until fluffy. Cube bread and spread in a large greased 9x13-inch baking dish. Stir together green pepper, onion, mushrooms and turkey ham mixture into egg mixture. Pour over bread. Sprinkle cheese on top. Refrigerate at least 12 hours. Remove from refrigerator and bake in preheated 325 degree oven for 45-50 minutes. Serves 12.

Poultry Often Featured Item At 'Home-For-Holidays' Dinners

 Chicken" and "Pecan Stuffed Chicken Breasts" are also easy-to-prepare, yet impressively elegant for a special holiday buffet. "Turkey Tidbits in Cranberry Barbecue Sauce" is a good recipe for leftover roast turkey. It makes a delicious appetizer for a reception, open house or informal gathering of friends and family. And the holiday menu would not be complete without recipes for an elegant Christmas morning brunch ... like this easy "Sausage & Egg Crescent Roll Bake" or "Holiday Brunch Turkey Ham & Egg Casserole."

So, be sure to stock up on plenty of chicken, turkey and eggs for fast, festive, flavorful feasting throughout the holiday season.

POACHED TURKEY NORMANDY
 2 turkey breast tenderloins
 1/2 cup onion, chopped
 1/2 cup celery, sliced
 3 peppercorns
 1/2 tsp. salt
 Boiling water
 2/3 cup apple, pared, cored and diced
 1/3 cup orange juice
 3 Tbsp. jellied cranberry sauce
 4 tsp. orange marmalade

In a large skillet, place tenderloins, onion, celery, peppercorns and salt. Pour in enough water to cover turkey. Place lid on skillet. Over low heat, poach tenderloins about 30 minutes, or until done. Remove tenderloins from liquid. In a small saucepan over medium heat, combine apple pieces, orange juice, cranberry sauce and orange marmalade. Cook until sauce is hot and apples are tender, but hold shape. Spoon over tenderloins. Serves 4.

ORANGE/CRANBERRY CHICKEN
 1 broiler-fryer chicken, cut up in serving pieces
 1/4 cup flour
 1/2 tsp. salt
 1/8 tsp. pepper
 1/2 cup butter or margarine, melted
 1/2 cup cranberry juice
 1/2 cup cranberry jelly
 1/2 cup orange juice
 1/2 tsp. grated orange rind
 1/4 tsp. ground cloves

Mix together flour, salt and pepper in a paper bag. Add chicken and shake to coat thoroughly. Place chicken in a large shallow baking dish and pour melted butter over it. Cover with aluminum foil and bake for 35 minutes. Mix together remaining ingredients in small saucepan; stir and heat to boiling point. Remove the cover from chicken. Pour sauce on and bake, uncovered, 30 minutes longer or until done, basting several times.

PECAN STUFFED CHICKEN BREASTS
 4 whole broiler-fryer chicken breasts
 3 cups crumbled toast
 1/4 lb. butter or margarine, melted, divided
 1 cup chopped onion
 1/2 cup chopped celery
 2 tsp. parsley flakes
 3/4 cup chopped pecans
 3/4 tsp. monosodium glutamate
 1/4 cup water
 1 Tbsp. lemon juice
 1 tsp. salt
 1/4 tsp. pepper

Encore Potato Casserole Makes A Quick Supper

ENCORE POTATO CASSEROLE
 2 cups cold mashed potatoes
 1/3 cup salad dressing
 4 crisply cooked bacon slice, crumbled
 2 Tbsp. green onion slices
 1/4 cup (1 oz.) sharp cheddar cheese, shredded

Combine potatoes, salad dressing, bacon and onions; mix well. Spoon into 1-quart casserole. Bake at 350 degrees, 35 to 40 minutes or until thoroughly heated. Sprinkle with cheese; continue baking until cheese is melted. Makes 4 servings. Recipe may be doubled, if desired.

NOTE: Because the consistency of mashed potatoes varies, more or less salad dressing may be required for this recipe. Add enough salad dressing to leftover mashed potatoes to make them a creamy consistency.

Make Ahead: Prepare recipe as directed except for topping with cheese and baking. Cover; freeze. When ready to serve, bake, covered, at 350 degrees, 45 minutes; stir. Continue to bake, uncovered, 20 minutes or until thoroughly heated. Sprinkle cheese on top; continue baking until cheese is melted.

MICROWAVE: Assemble recipe as directed except for topping with cheese and baking; cover. Microwave on HIGH 4 to 5 minutes or until thoroughly heated, stirring every 2 minutes. Sprinkle with cheese; microwave, uncovered, 1 to 1 1/2 minutes or until melted.

MICROWAVE MAKE AHEAD: Prepare recipe as directed except for topping with cheese and baking; cover. Freeze. When ready to serve, microwave, covered, on HIGH 5 minutes; stir. Continue microwaving, covered, on HIGH 4 to 5 minutes or until thoroughly heated, stirring every 2 minutes. Sprinkle with cheese; microwave on HIGH 1 to 1 1/2 minutes or until melted.

Mix toast crumbs, 1/2 of the melted butter, onion, celery, parsley, pecans, monosodium glutamate and water. Make 4 mounds of this stuffing and arrange on 4 squares of heavy aluminum foil. Place on baking sheet. Brush both sides of chicken with lemon juice and remaining butter. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Place an opened chicken breast over each mound of stuffing. Fold the foil up around the top of the chicken to make individual packages. Bake at 350 degrees F. for 40 minutes. Fold back foil and bake 20 minutes more at 400 degrees until brown and done. Makes 4 servings.

TURKEY TIDBITS IN CRANBERRY/BARBECUE SAUCE
 3 cups cooked turkey pieces, cut in 1-inch cubes (white meat is best)

1 can (8 oz.) jellied cranberry sauce
 1/2 cup barbecue sauce
 1/8 tsp. allspice
 1/2 tsp. grated orange peel

Heat cranberry sauce, barbecue sauce, allspice and orange peel in saucepan. Simmer about 10 minutes. Pour into chafing dish. Add turkey and heat. Serve warm with toothpicks.

SAUSAGE & EGG CRESCENT ROLL BAKE
 1 lb. turkey sausage, thawed
 1 (8 oz.) can refrigerated crescent dinner rolls
 2 cups shredded mozzarella cheese
 4 eggs, beaten
 3/4 cups milk
 1/4 tsp. salt
 1/8 tsp. pepper
 Crumble turkey sausage in a medium skillet; cook over medium heat until brown, stirring occasionally. Drain well. Line bottom of a buttered 13x9x2-inch baking dish with crescent rolls, firmly pressing perforations to seal. Sprinkle with turkey sausage and cheese. Combine remaining ingredients; beat well and pour over turkey sausage. Bake at 425 degrees for 15 minutes, or until set. Let stand 5 minutes; cut into squares and serve immediately. Serves 6 of 8.
