International Airlift Carries Aid To Armenia

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Relief planes from around the world rushed emergency supplies into Armenia today to help victims of an earthquake that killed tens of thousands of people and left hundreds of thousands homeless.

A spokesman for Yerevan's Zvartnots airport said planes arrived today from France, Belgium and Bulgaria and many more were expected. It was the first time disaster aid had reached the Soviet Union on such a scale.

Officials released no death toll two days after Wednesday's quake, but official media revised casualty estimates upward in the southern republic of 3.3 million.

Tass news agency said "the earthquake killed tens of thousands of people." Radio Moscow said: "It is believed that scores of thousands of people have died."

Previous statements had put the death toll in the thousands, but sources have provided unofficial estimates of as many as 50,000 dead.

Tass said the quake left 400,000 people homeless.

A scientist predicted more tremors would occur. Workers scrambled to find survivors buried in the rubble.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev returned home to direct the growing relief efforts, which brought emergency food, medics, medical supplies and search equipment to the devastated region.

Gorbachev, who cut short a trip to the United States and canceled plans to visit Cuba and Britain, arrived in Moscow before dawn, Tass said. He was expected to travel to Armenia, but officials refused to exactly when.

Tass reported a Swiss rescue team and 20 search dogs flew to Armenia with eight tons of rescue supplies. Swedish officials announced $1 million in rescue assistance, and Finland sent shipments of blood plasma.

President Reagan offered humanitarian aid, Cuban President Fidel Castro pledged to send construction workers, and Britain, France and Italy also dispatched rescue teams.

Armenian Immigrants Rush Aid To Victims

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Armenian immigrants flooded telephone lines in mostly futile attempts to learn whether their kin survived the catastrophic Soviet earthquake, while Armenian-American organizations pressed Moscow to begin relief flights today.

Throughout the country, Armenian-Americans continued to mobilize swift relief efforts for survivors of the quake that killed tens of thousands and devastated several cities in Soviet Armenia.

From Los Angeles, where the nation's largest Armenian-American community resides, a relief plane was to leave today for Boston, where it was to pick up additional supplies and depart for the Soviet Union, said Philip Hovnanian, president of the Armenian Missionary Association of America, an umbrella group for Armenian religious and community organizations.

State Department clearance was given, but approval from Moscow hadn't been obtained late Thursday, Hovnanian said.

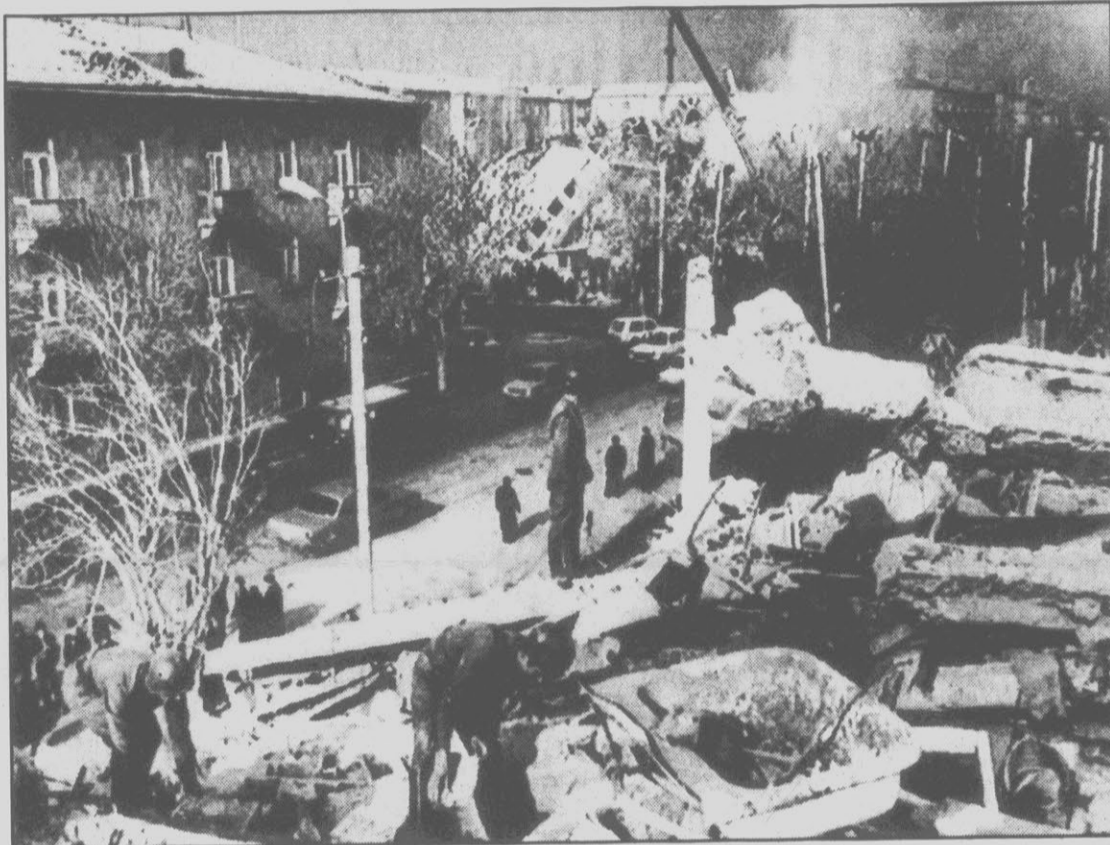

"We are optimistic," he said from New York. "This is a humane, Christian mission."

Hovnanian said he feared Moscow was withholding its permission for American relief flights because of the ethnic unrest plaguing the Soviet republics of Armenia and Azerbaijan.

"The Soviet government may fear this situation may give opportunity for some (American) Armenians to become politically involved." But, he added, "The size of the devastation is so big they should welcome all help."

Two Southern California doctors said they were flying to Armenia with a Red Cross team to spend up to 10 days lending support. Dr. Garo M. Tertzakian of Santa Ana and Dr. Vartkes Najarian of La Crescenta hoped to arrive in Armenia on Saturday.

Many churches in New Jersey planned special services Sunday for quake victims.

Council OKs Rerouting Of Arlington Extension

By Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Greenville City Council has approved a revision of the city's Thoroughfare Plan rerouting the planned Arlington Boulevard extension and Fire Tower Road.

The revision relocates Arlington Boulevard south of Red Banks Road to connect with County Home Road (State Route 1725) south of Bells Fork and also relocates SR 1708 north of its proposed northeasterly route west of Bells Fork.

The Thoroughfare Plan previously called for Arlington Boulevard to continue from its dead end south of Red Banks Road to the intersection of 14th Street Extension and SR 1725, intersecting Charles Boulevard north of Bells Fork.

"This revision will alleviate a lot of the congestion at the Bells Fork intersection and provide another major artery into the southern area of the city," said City Engineer Glen Whisler at Thursday's council session.

Whisler said the revision will now go before the state Department of Transportation for final approval.

"Any changes in the city's Thoroughfare Plan require joint approval by the city and the state," he said.

Speaking on behalf of the revision was J. Bryant Kittrell, a representative of the south-of-town property owners whose land will be involved in the new road alignment, and Gerald England, division traffic engineer of the DOT.

"We feel that this is a step in the right direction to relieve pressure into and out of the city on the south side of town going to newly developed residential areas and to the new school (Wintergreen Elementary School)," England told the council.

In other matters Thursday, the council approved a request by Collice C. Moore to rezone approximately 30 acres located north of Dickinson Avenue extension (U.S. 13) and east of Westwood subdivision from RA-20 (residential agriculture) and R-9 (residential) to nine acres of O&I II (office and institutional) and 21 acres of CS (shopping center).

The council also approved a request by Greenville Properties to annex 128.15 acres of Westpointe subdivision, located on Stantonsburg Road approximately one mile west of Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Also approved was a request by Bill Dansey to annex 25.58 acres of Treybrooke subdivision, located north of N.C. 43 and west of SR 1202, and a request by Myles Cartrette to annex .46 acres located west of SR 1700 (Evans Street extension) and being the back portion of Brookfield Apartments, Section II.

Meanwhile, the council approved a recommendation from the Greenville Citizens Advisory Committee on Cable TV to hire a cable consultant for technical assistance in the city's cable TV franchising process. The council agreed to enter into a contract for approximately $35,000 with consultant Rice, Williams Associates for their services.

Also Thursday, the council approved an agreement with the Staton House Volunteer Fire Department whereby Staton House

State's Mountains Get Winter Storm

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Predictions of light snow in the mountains escalated into a winter storm warning today with up to 6 inches predicted in some areas and accumulations of 1 to 3 inches as far east as Raleigh, the National Weather Service reported.

A winter storm warning was issued for the northern mountains with a snow advisory for the central and the northeast Piedmont. Several schools in the mountains canceled classes, as did schools in Granville and Person counties, officials said.

By 10:15 a.m., snow had accumulated on the grass and cars in Person, Granville, Vance and Warren counties. Snow had begun to stick to the roads in Person County.

An 11 a.m. weather service check with local sheriff's departments found roads in Alleghany County were slick and hazardous with 2 to 3 inches of snow on the ground.

In the northern foothills and northwest Piedmont, up to 1 inch of snow was reported in grassy areas with some accumulation on roadways in the counties bordering Virginia. Secondary roads in the northern counties were covered with snow and slush in many areas. Main roads and highways were wet with slushy spots on them.

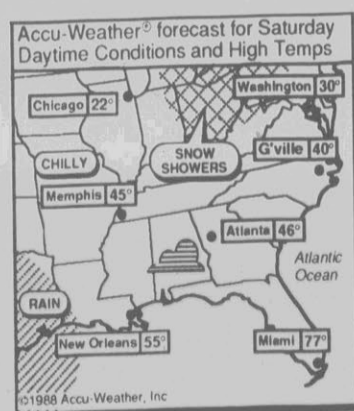

Snow was expected to continue into the early to mid afternoon, gradually spreading into the southern and eastern portions of the northeast Piedmont. In the Triangle, the warmth of the ground and roads was expected to melt most of the snow, keeping driving conditions fairly good.

"We've had just a little accumulation on the grassy areas, but nothing on the roads," said Deborah Ross, a weather specialist with the National Weather Service office at Raleigh-Durham International Airport. "It's just wet snow mixed in with the rain."

Out-Of-State Testing Saves ECU Nursing School Score

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Scores from East Carolina University School of Nursing graduates who took nursing board examinations out of state raised the July testing passing rate average enough to get the ECU school out of hot water with the North Carolina Board of Nursing.

But Emilie Henning, dean of the nursing school, said Thursday that the school is no less firm in its bolstered commitment to assist its graduates in improving their scores on state boards, the passing of which is crucial to their being able to practice nursing.

Scores from 17 out-of-state graduates brought the passing rate up to 61 percent. The state nursing board responsible for licensure has a policy of investigating schools whose passing rates fall below 60 percent. ECU's passing rate prior to the arrival of the out-of-state scores was 59 percent.

Within days after the in-state scores from July testing came in, Dr. Henning had appointed a task force from within the school to look at what could be done to assist students in raising their scores. The task force has made preliminary findings and gave a preliminary report to the school's faculty Tuesday, but has not issued a formal report. This is expected to be done in January, Dr. Henning said.

She said that seminar-type classes already have been set up to help five students who were to graduate this month prepare for the examination they will take in February. This class met from September to December, she said.

She said the school plans to hold a similar class next semester for students who will take the test next July after having graduated in May. Students who failed a previous test and wish to take it again also have been invited to take part in these special classes. Of 30 persons invited to take part, 21 have accepted so far, she said.

The review assistance for students and former students is a new area of endeavor for the school, Dr. Henning noted. She said the school's ad-

Contract Awarded For Evans Street

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A $2.47 million contract for widening Evans Street, from Greenville Boulevard to Howell Street, was awarded today by the N.C. Board of Transportation, which also approved the annual update of the state's Transportation Improvement Program.

Randy Doub of Greenville, a member of the board, said the low bid by Barrus Construction Co. was 7 percent under the estimated cost of the Evans project.

The contract, Doub said, includes grading, drainage, widening, curb and gutter, surfacing, thermoplastic pavement marking lines, snowplowable pavement markers and culverts.

Construction on the widening could start as early as Jan. 8, with an anticipated completion date of September 1990, Doub said.

The second phase of the Evans Street widening project — from Howell Street to 10th Street — is scheduled for contract letting in June 1989, according to Doub.

The board member said the city of Greenville "has done an excellent job in helping the Department of Transportation acquire and provide moneys for the purchase of rights of way

City Creates Historic Preservation Panel

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

In an effort to help safeguard the city's cultural and architectural heritage, the Greenville City Council on Thursday approved an ordinance establishing a Historic Preservation Commission.

The major duties of the 15-member advisory board will be to undertake an inventory of properties of historical significance and recommend to elected officials those structures, buildings, or objects to be designated by ordinance as "historic properties."

The HPC will also serve as a historic districts commission with the authority to recommend that entire portions of the city which have a special historic character or ambience — such as neighborhoods — be designated as historic.

The City Council still retains final powers to designate such properties or districts.

Historic designation permits a percentage property tax deferral and grants particular time periods before a structure's demolition can occur.

"I think most people tend not to think of this town as historic," said Council member Inez Fridley. "But we have some beautiful examples of 19th century architecture in many areas such as the Tar River Neighborhood and in West Greenville and there are significant efforts under way to preserve these homes," she said.

Maury York, president of the Greenville Preservation Association, told the council Thursday the ordinance would give people the sense of security and confidence they need to invest money in their property and to improve its value.

"As a consequence, people would move into these neighborhoods and help make them better places in which to live. The city would benefit as a result by the increase in tax revenues," he said.

Staff planner Constance Callahan said a consultant's survey conducted in 1982 concluded there are approximately 200 houses in Greenville with the potential for historic designation.

"Out of this, probably about 50 percent would actually be so designated because they would really fit the criteria of the commission," she said.

Those criteria the commission will examine in selecting a property for designation include elements of the city's cultural, social, economic, political or architectural history and which promote the use and conservation of the property for the education, pleasure and enrichment of the city's residents.

The 15 members of the commission will be appointed by the council.

According to the ordinance, members must reside within the planning and zoning jurisdiction of the city and preferably should have a special interest, experience or education in history or architecture.

Commission members will serve overlapping terms of three years with replacements appointed at the rate of five commissioners per year.

Initially, five commissioners will be appointed to serve for one year, while five will serve for two years and another five will serve full three-year terms.

The minutes of the HPC meetings will be a public record.

Recount Adds 20 For Lewis

The recount of the N.C. Court of Appeals race between John B. Lewis of Farmville and Donald Smith of Raleigh produced little change in the Pitt County totals.

Lewis, a Democrat, was the big winner in Pitt County in the Nov. 8 general election, polling 20,022 votes. Smith, a Republican, polled 10,984 votes in the county.

Pitt election representatives said this morning that official recount totals were not ready, but it appeared Lewis' winning margin increased by 53 votes due to minor variations among precinct totals.

All 100 county election boards in the state were to recount the Lewis-Smith vote totals this week, and state election officials said today a winner should be certified by next Wednesday or Thursday.

Statewide, Lewis won the general election, but his margin of victory was small enough to allow Smith to call for a recount.

Lewis, who is serving as a special Superior Court judge, is scheduled to hold court in Greenville next week in his final scheduled session of court before his term expires this year. Smith was appointed to the Court of Appeals by Gov. Jim Martin.

The store's management has worked with local civic organizations to obtain the names of the children chosen to take part.

Tyson Hires Nine Deputies For Jail

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson has hired nine deputies to staff the new satellite jail, and he said the facility should be opened on scheduled the first of January.

Last week a state jail inspector approved the new jail, which is located in the basement of the county office building. The jail has been used to house weekend prisoners, but it could not be opened for full use until nine jailers were hired.

Tyson said today he has hired nine people, but said he could not release the names because not all of them have given notices at their current jobs.

The group should be prepared to staff the new jail the first of January, he said, and all the equipment should be in place by then. Until then, the facility will continue to serve weekend prisoners.

Five of the new employees are already certified jailers, he said, and the remaining four will have to complete a six-week training course given by the state. Some are local people, while others were hired from outside the county, he said.

The new facility should help ease overcrowding at the existing jail, which is located in the basement of the Pitt County Courthouse.

Tyson said the state has lowered its prison population to the prescribed limit, and the DOC is now accepting new prisoners. That also will help ease overcrowding in the Pitt jail, he said.

was assigned to the newly formed vice and narcotics unit and in 1985 was promoted to patrol sergeant.

Fordham will serve as lieutenant in command of platoon C of the patrol division.

Simonowich joined the police department in 1971 as a uniformed patrol officer. In 1983 he was promoted to corporal and in 1985 he was promoted to sergeant, serving as a shift supervisor. He was transferred to the administrative and technical services division as detective supervisor in 1987.

Simonowich will assume command of squad E of the patrol division.

Tom Daly, Pitt County school supervisor for science and math, recently spoke to Terri Hardin's eighth-grade accelerated science class about atomic structure, Neil Bohr and sub-orbitals.

Parents and science students in Cynthia Adams' and Terri Hardin's classes recently participated in a night class on planets, the moon and the night sky. Floyd Mattheis, an East Carolina University professor, and a graduate student used two telescopes to assist the participants.

Jerry Everhart recently visited science classes to direct an activity of "A Crime to Solve." The students used scientific methods and processes to solve a fictitious crime.

Parole Commission Considers Four Pitt Prisoners For Early Releases

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Several inmates from Pitt County are among those being considered for early parole as the state looks for breathing space in its overcrowded prisons.

The state Parole Commission notified the Pitt County District Attorney's office this week that four people sentenced to prison earlier this year on misdemeanors may be released.

Each person was sentenced to two years in prison, but none served more than two and a half months before the Parole Commission considered the early release. All four are still being held pending review by the Parole Commission, according to state Department of Correction records.

One of the four, Elmer Davis Jr., 27, of Brown Trailer Park, Lot 2, Gritton, was originally charged with larceny of a motor vehicle, which is a felony. He pleaded guilty in January to a reduced misdemeanor charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and received a two-year suspended sentence.

After failing to meet conditions of his probation, Davis surrendered to authorities Sept. 29 and opted to serve his sentence instead of remaining on probation. The Parole Commission began considering Davis for early release two months and four days after he entered prison.

At least eight other prisoners — including some felons — are also being considered for early parole, as state officials work to keep the prison population at 17,280. That is the cap that was set in March of 1987.

The Parole Commission is required by state law to release enough prisoners to meet the cap when the prison population rises above 17,460 for 15 consecutive days, as it did earlier this fall. The Parole Commission has released hundreds of prisoners over the last few weeks in order to meet the cap by the Dec. 17 deadline.

When an inmate is being considered for early release, the Parole Commission notifies court officials in the county in which the person was sentenced. The notices are posted on bulletin boards in the Pitt County Courthouse, and anyone opposing or recommending the parole is asked to contact the commission chairman.

The notice also states that the commission may bypass the notification procedure and release inmates immediately in an emergency situation.

One man, Reginald Dixon, 23, of Gritton pleaded guilty to second-degree murder in August of 1983 and was sentenced to 35 years in prison for shooting his father to death.

Dixon, 17 at the time, was sentenced under the Committed Youthful Offender program, which allows people to be eligible for early release much sooner than someone convicted as an adult.

In October, the Parole Commission began considering Dixon for community service parole, a program that would allow him to be released on the condition that he perform 30 hours of community service a month for the remaining portion of his sentence. He would also have to participate in the required treatment and vocational programs and follow other conditions.

Another man, Jerry Cooper, 28, of Greenville was convicted of possession of stolen goods in December of 1987 and given a two-year suspended sentence and placed on probation.

Cooper was accused of violating his probation by possessing marijuana and a firearm, and a judge activated the sentence last month. Cooper served 22 days before the Parole Commission began considering him for early release. He also has other drug charges pending in Pitt County in connection with a

A Partnership

Academia Needs Outside Involvement

Good education doesn't occur in a vacuum. It doesn't brew in isolation like some scientific experiment where materials are mixed, then capped and stored in a jar on a laboratory shelf.

No, good education happens in the open, when theory meets reality. And for that to happen at a university requires healthy interaction with the "real" world. To be effective, academia must have constant stimulation from the realities it explores. It must have involvement from outside.

And that goes for funding, too.

That's why the value of a BellSouth Foundation proposal to fund a Middle School Leadership Academy at East Carolina University's School of Education is twofold. It represents a blending of public and private entities in the interest of higher education — and consequently improving public schools.

And the public-private partnership this academy exemplifies is essential to the future of education. It is a key ingredient for achieving excellence in education.

While local, state and federal governments must dedicate themselves to vigorous support of education, there are limits to the spending power of the public dollar. All three of these entities can, and should, prioritize education. They must do better than they have in the past decade.

But even if education received every nickel lawmakers could scrape together, there would still be deficiencies. Complex times and a diverse society — Pitt County and ECU are no exceptions — create vast instructional needs. And at the same time, the demand for quality increases. Rather than adequacy, business, industry — and the public that pays the bills — wants excellence.

Schools simply cannot keep pace. Taxpayer dollars aren't flexible enough to cover these needs. Consequently, the role of the private sector will become more and more significant in addressing the lacks that fall between the cracks of funding.

This is especially true in teacher training programs, where those charged with educating the leaders of the future learn their profession. Universities must do a better job of educating teachers; public schools must make the classroom challenging and appealing to the best, brightest and most dynamic people.

Neither of those tasks can be accomplished without the involvement — both hands-on and financial — of the private sector.

The commitment by BellSouth is but one example of how schools, business and industry can work together to plug the holes in the education. It is ECU and Pitt County's good fortune to benefit from this endowment.

But when better middle school teachers prepare better students that become better employees, that is to everyone's benefit. The vacuum has been breached.

Don't Forget

MADD Message Relevant All Year

Mothers Against Drunk Driving is a mad group.

Known as MADD, the members constantly seek to remind the public that drinking drivers can kill. Their message to all who will listen is don't drink and drive. Particularly do they emphasize this during the holiday season.

This year a MADD project is the tying of a red ribbon to a vehicle left door handle or left rear view mirror to remind other motorists about the dangers of drinking and driving. The Delta Zeta and Sigma Sigma Sororities of East Carolina University are assisting with the project, known as "Project Red Ribbon." Businesses and the Greenville Police Department are also participating.

MADD also sponsored a candle light vigil at the Delta Zeta and Sigma Sigma Sorority houses Tuesday. The vigil was in memory of those who have been killed or injured by drunk drivers.

The drinking and driving reminder is valid advice all year 'round. Particularly is it important during the holiday season when social gatherings are being held and traffic is at its worst.

It would be difficult to find any driver who isn't in favor of safety. None of us want to be the cause of an accident which injures someone else. That doesn't mean we can't enjoy the holiday activities. It does mean we should have a designated driver who will not drink and will provide for safe transportation home.

Any accident can mar the holidays. One that causes injuries or death can be devastating. MADD members won't let us forget that.

The Importance Of Manual Labor

WASHINGTON — Add one more thing to the list of awful things we are doing to our young people. We are teaching them contempt for manual labor.

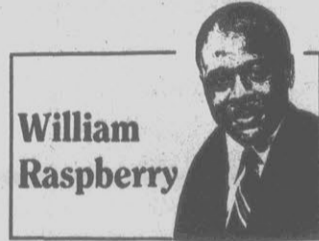

We don't do it consciously, and in fact our rhetoric goes in the opposite direction. But if you read our attitudes, and not just our lips, what comes through is the judgment that manual work is not something that we want our children to do.

I used to think it was primarily something that middle-class black parents did to their children, and I thought I knew the reasons. It came from our memory of the time when manual work — the trades as opposed to the professions — was about all we could aspire to. Even the most intellectually gifted among us were farmers and artisans and entrepreneurs. We grew things, made things, repaired things, sold things, and we were justly proud of our skills.

But we also resented — and worked hard to eliminate — the artificial limits on our ambition.

That is precisely what we should have done. But now that the options have been expanded, we are in danger of imposing new limits of our own. We are saying to our children not that they can aspire to the professions, but that they must.

We have decreed non-intellectual work to be unworthy.

Nor is it only black parents who are delivering this absurd judgment.

I was talking the other day with Carroll Harvey, a one-time District of Columbia official who is now head of a paving contracting company. Harvey's immediate concern was his difficulty in finding young blacks willing to hire on as construction laborers with a chance to move up to skilled work.

But, as he pointed out, the problem is more pervasive than I had thought.

"It's a societal problem," he said. "Not just black people but the whole society is saying that manual work is somehow unworthy. Our schools are organized on the assumption that all our children will be going to college and into the professions. We make very little room for the youngster whose aptitudes involve physical skills."

A few years ago, he noted, we used to have shop classes for kids who we thought couldn't master the intellectual skills, which means that we pushed the slowest kids into what we used to call industrial arts. The implication, of course, was that if you did have intellectual potential, you shouldn't work with your hands.

But then we learned to say (though we fell short of actually believing) that all children could, if properly motivated and properly taught, master the intellectual skills. The result is that we teach all our children as though we expect them to go to college and train for the professions. We count it an insult to suggest to our children that they might think of a career as an electrician or a plumber or a transmission specialist — not because these jobs don't pay enough (anyone who's had to have his car, or his pipes, fixed knows better), but because they lack prestige.

Harvey believes the American society has fallen into the trap of elevating symbols above substance. Our modern-day success stories are less likely to be about people who make things uncommonly well than about people who get rich assembling existing companies.

We are leaving it more and more to others — notably the Japanese — to manufacture the things we use, contenting ourselves with the ephemera of financial manipulation.

What makes it more difficult to find our way out of this societal deadend is our tendency to think in either-or terms. As Harvey points out, it isn't necessary to discourage our children from developing their intellectual skills in order to encourage those who are so inclined to develop their manual aptitudes. Indeed, he believes that all children should have a chance to develop their manual skills.

The point is not that there is something wrong with the professions, but that there is nothing dishonorable about work that involves blue collars or dirty fingernails.

Harvey is dismayed that his best workers are likely either to be older black men who still honor manual skill, or young Hispanics who are looking for a chance to learn the skills that will lift them into middle-class life. Black youngsters, including those who are languishing in poverty for want of a means to earn a decent living, have been taught by us, however inadvertently, that manual work is beneath their dignity.

And we wonder why so many of them are wasting their lives as small-time hustlers or else killing themselves at such an alarming rate trafficking in drugs.

Did Nussbaum Have A Place To Go?

BOSTON — Now the attention is focused on Hedda Nussbaum, this woman whose punching-bag face and battered psyche have been reconstructed into some semblance of normalcy. It's Hedda Nussbaum now on the cover of Newsweek. Hedda Nussbaum whose halting, searing testimony tops the charts in Manhattan's TV ratings, wiping out even Oprah and Phil.

Her lover — a bizarre misuse of that term — is the one on trial for the murder of their adopted daughter, Lisa. But public attitudes toward Joel Steinberg have become as uncomplicated as the judgment uttered by Mayor Koch: "I'd like to dip him in oil many, many times." It is Nussbaum who has become the morbid target of public fascination.

Why didn't she just leave? This is the question asked by any woman chilled at this testimony. The question asked of everyone who has worked with battered women. Why didn't Hedda Nussbaum leave the first time he hit her? The second time? The 25th time? The time she had her nose broken, her ear cauliflowered, her spleen damaged so badly it had to be removed.

How did this woman descend to the point where she was unable to defend herself and then — even more terrifying — where she was unable to defend her child? In the days before Lisa's death, Hedda Nussbaum testified that Steinberg threw the girl down repeatedly. "What did you do?" the assistant district attorney asked. "Nothing," she said. "Why not?" he asked. "I'm not really sure," she said.

For a year this case has been the country's most infamous tale of family violence, and not only because of the gory details of Lisa's death. Her parents couldn't be filed away under some suitable heading. One had been a children's book editor, the other was a lawyer. They were middle-class, white, educated, Jewish, inhabitants of Greenwich Village. No matter how many researchers of family abuse report that it happens everywhere, they were not the "sort of people" we persist in associating with violence.

In the attempt to distance ourselves from violence, to seek out a safe emotional suburb far from the inner city, we have long tagged family abuse by race and class and place. But when that doesn't work, we hunt to find another difference between us and them, a line that promises to keep danger remote.

In the case of Hedda Nussbaum, our protection rests now on the notion that she was crazed, must have been crazed because she never left him. That diagnosis is spoken in the street talk of New

Ellen Goodman

York. And she must have been sick to stay with him.

But the portrait that emerges of Hedda Nussbaum isn't even that comforting. This is a woman who oh-so-gradually lost control of her life, until she no longer had the free will to dial 911 while her daughter was dying in her arms. She was subtly and overtly, emotionally and physically, isolated and then destroyed by a man who, in the words of one who knew him, "could manipulate a banana out of a gorilla's hands and make the gorilla think he'd gotten a prize."

"Those of us outside the relationship can say that the sane thing to do is to leave," says Susan Schechter, the author of "Women and Male Violence." But in interviews with battered women, Schechter has seen them "trying to make choices when the outcomes all looked negative, and trying to make choices while being assaulted."

Abuse is not only physical assault. It's what Schechter calls a pattern of coercive control, from outright assault to the monitoring of phone calls and work patterns.

We know a handful of certain things about this violence. That some get away and some don't. That most of these women are ter-

'The safety is in seeing that women like this most famous victim have a place to go and someone to protect them.'

rified and most have no place to go. That shelters help victims. That law enforcement — the arrest of the abuser — is also a powerful aid. And that there are too few shelters and too little law enforcement.

Under these circumstances "leaving can also be a very dangerous act," says Schechter. You don't have to be crazy to be terrified or for that matter to be victimized.

If Nussbaum is to be believed, Joel Steinberg isolated his "lover" and cowed her into obedience. No, she isn't Everywoman. Everywoman does not think her abuser is a "healer." Nor is she the woman next door. The woman next door doesn't believe she is controlled by a cult with hypnotic powers.

But there is very little protection in an analysis that marks her as one of "them" because "we" would have the strength to leave. Or dismisses her as nuts. The safety is in seeing that women like this most famous victim have a place to go and someone to protect them. Hedda Nussbaum has that now. Her daughter Lisa never got the chance.

Girl's Comments Allowed In Court

RALEIGH (AP) — The N.C. Supreme Court has for the first time approved hearsay testimony in a child sexual-abuse case, but the state's highest court says it is not establishing a principle that will apply in every instance.

The court ruled Thursday that a sexually abused child's statements made outside the courtroom can be admitted as evidence in some cases, even if the victim does not testify.

In a 7-0 decision, the court upheld the first-degree rape conviction of Danny Mark Deanes of Hertford County. He was sentenced to life in prison July 15, 1987.

According to an opinion written by Associate Justice Louis Meyer, the county Department of Social Services was tipped off May 4, 1987, that a 5-year-old girl had been raped. Police investigated and the child's mother acknowledged that the girl had told her of the incident three days earlier.

Deanes was living with the mother, her boyfriend and two children. The victim later described the incident to a social worker and a doctor and demonstrated it using anatomically correct dolls. A physical examination revealed that the girl had contracted gonorrhea.

At Deanes' trial, the judge ruled after a hearing that the child was not competent to testify because she was "a shy and ineffective communicator." The judge allowed the social worker to testify about the child's statements to her.

The social worker's testimony met the legal conditions for exceptions to the rule against admitting hearsay evidence in court, Meyer wrote.

The court rejected Deanes' contention that the testimony was insufficiently trustworthy, was evidence that the state could not have gotten elsewhere, and did not serve the interests of justice because it deprived him of his constitutional right to confront witnesses against him.

"This is the first case in which we approve the admission of a child victim's out-of-court statements in evidence against the defendant in a sexual abuse case in which the child did not testify at trial," Meyer wrote.

"We emphasize that in approving the admission of the child's statement, we do not establish a per se rule that a child victim's statement to a social worker is admissible when the child is found not to be competent as a witness and there is some corroboration of the child's statements," he wrote.

The federal and state constitutions and court procedures "require a case-by-case examination of the facts of each case to ensure that their elements are fully satisfied."

Lawmaker Arrested On Morals Charge

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — State Rep. Ivan Mothershead says Rep. Walt Windley, charged with soliciting for prostitution, has spoken with other House members about resigning.

"We're all very concerned about him," Mothershead, R-Mecklenburg, said Thursday. "We don't want him to quit. It's something he can be forgiven for. Worse things have happened."

Windley, R-Gaston, had a court date Thursday after being charged with soliciting for prostitution and carrying a concealed weapon.

Windley, 32, co-sponsored an anti-pornography law in 1985. He won a third term in November, and has campaigned on a platform of upholding Christian principles.

He also had announced plans to seek the House minority leader's post.

His arrest Tuesday came during a police undercover operation in a section of Charlotte frequented by prostitutes, officers said.

After his arrest, Windley was released on $500 unsecured bond without being jailed.

"If Walt is cleared on this, I'm sure there'd be no problem in the future," Rep. Robert Grady, R-Onslow, told The Charlotte Observer. "He's held in very high regard by everyone who knows him."

Allen Brotherton, Windley's attorney, appeared on his client's behalf in Mecklenburg County District Court Thursday. The court set Windley's trial for Feb. 23.

Windley declined to discuss his arrest when contacted by The Gastonia Gazette. "I'm just not in a position to comment," he said.

Calls to his home and office were not answered Thursday.

Windley approached an undercover female officer about 2:30 p.m. Tuesday in the parking lot of the Paper Doll Lounge, said Sgt. L.B. Wallace, who heads Charlotte's vice division.

The officer said the man asked her to have sex with him in exchange for money, so she signaled two officers who were monitoring the operation from a nearby post, and Windley was arrested, police said.

Wallace said Windley was in a 1986 Honda with a state House license tag when the incident took place.

Reports said he was charged with carrying a concealed .25-caliber automatic handgun. Windley has no prior arrest record.

In Windley's re-election literature, he told voters he "supported and upheld Christian principles in government."

In 1985, he was co-sponsor of a law that gives police greater authority in gathering evidence, charging and prosecuting obscenity cases. At the time, he said, "Pornographic material gives way to wanton sexual criminal acts."

Supreme Court Says State Agencies Can Levy, Collect Civil Penalties

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — State agencies may accept payment of fines already imposed and prepare new ones under a state Supreme Court order that temporarily halts a lower court ruling that could strip the agencies of fine-setting authority.

"Those of us in state government are very delighted with the court's decision," said Chief Deputy Attorney General Andrew Vanore Jr.

Without the stay, he said, "Business was sort of closed down as far as administrative agencies in trying to enforce their rules and regulations."

Reversing an order it returned last week, the Supreme Court imposed Thursday a stay on a decision by a state Court of Appeals panel.

The lower court had said the separation-of-powers doctrine makes it unconstitutional for state agencies to have discretion in setting fines. That is a judicial function, the panel ruled, citing a precedent set by the state Supreme Court in 1968.

The state Attorney General's Office appealed to the state Supreme Court, which is scheduled to hear arguments in February. The state's lawyers also asked the court to stay the appeals panel's decision until the Supreme Court can affirm or overturn it. A stay temporarily sets aside a ruling and maintains the status quo until a final decision is made.

The justices last week denied the stay, prompting an outcry from state environmental officials who said they would be unable to collect $7.5 million in fines previously set. The state attorney general's office filed a motion Wednesday asking the court to reconsider, and the court obliged during a conference Thursday. It did not explain the reason for the switch.

Vanore said state agencies still would be advised not to impose new fines while the issue is pending in the Supreme Court. Agencies, he said, may "put the administrative work into gear ... but not do any collecting of new fines until after the Supreme Court has issued a decision."

R. Paul Wilms, director of state Division of Environmental Management, said the stay would help his agency deal with pending cases. But he said it wouldn't improve the state's ability to enforce pollution laws as long as its authority to do so remains a legal question.

"It doesn't really make much of a difference as far as how we're going to enforce the laws between now and when the Supreme Court hears the merits of our case," he said. "It does help as far as helping close out old cases."

In the motion to reconsider, the state's lawyers pointed out that another panel of the Appeals Court in 1987 upheld the fine-setting authority of state agencies, and that state agencies were therefore left with two conflicting decisions.

The November decision, in effect, overruled the 1987 ruling, the motion said. "Which case is controlling?" the lawyers wrote. "Prudence dictates it is the more recent. ... Accordingly, the Attorney General's Office has advised state agencies that (the November decision) controls and that they have no discretionary civil penalty power."

Gardner Outlines Money Problems

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. — While falling short of calling for new taxes, Lt. Gov.-elect Jim Gardner says he thinks most North Carolinians are "willing to shoulder their share of the burdens" if they know where the money will go.

Gardner painted a picture Thursday of extensive needs and little money in a speech to North Carolina's county commissioners.

"We're going to have ... tough budgetary problems. We're going to have to place very tough priorities on the state spending," he said.

"I think we need to explore every possibility, public and private," Gardner said in an interview. "Long-term bonds. Toll roads. We need to fully examine the issue before we tell the people we need any new taxes."

Gardner, the first Republican elected lieutenant governor this century, called on Democrats to set aside partisan politics to address needs for highway construction, education and the environment.

He also repeated his call for education about "the horrors of drugs" from kindergarten through eighth grade and for a new drug enforcement division with at least 200 agents.

"Yes, it's going to cost some money," he said. "No, we cannot afford not to do it."

Gardner also called for accelerated prison construction to accommodate laws that would keep drug dealers in prison without parole.

"The vast majority of drug dealers in this state do not spend a minute of time in our prisons," he said. "Our laws, and particularly our parole laws, are too lax in this state."

"I want to see them serve every day of their sentence. I want to see the death penalty in drug cases that result in death."

Gardner said North Carolina will benefit from the emergence of a two-party system in a state once completely dominated by Democrats. And he vowed to work to open up secret meetings of the General Assembly and to try to get line-item veto power for the governor.

"It would give us a system of checks and balances that we just simply do not have now and have not had for a very long time," he said.

In the interview, Gardner defended his $1,000-a-person reception for lobbyists, saying, "Everybody does it. It's just a part of the political process."

Gardner said he has campaign debts like everyone else and that most lobbyists gave money to his opponent, Sen. Tony Rand.

Asked whether lobbyists could hope to get in his good graces with the contributions, Gardner said, "I'm not sure what my graces are going to be, quite honestly."

Democrats in the Senate are planning on removing appointment powers from the office that have traditionally been granted to Democrats.

The N.C. Association of County Commissioners, in its two-day legislative goals conference, was considering a long list of proposed legislation, including a request that local governments be given the power to levy personal income taxes, corporate income taxes, land transfer taxes and impact fees and taxes. County officials also want the power to borrow up to 1/2 of 1 percent of assessed property valuation without a vote of the people.

Lobbyists Pay Up For Gardner

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A small crowd of legislative lobbyists paid $1,000 apiece Thursday night to meet the new president of the state Senate, Lt. Gov.-elect Jim Gardner.

Forty to 50 lobbyists, political supporters and representatives of political action committees attended a fund-raiser for Gardner at the Marriott Hotel and helped him reduce a $150,000 campaign debt.

For their $1,000 contribution, lobbyists got drinks, hors d'oeuvres, and a chance to meet Gardner, the first Republican lieutenant governor elected in this century.

Gardner said some of the lobbyists who attended had backed both Republicans and Democrats in the recent campaign. He said the fund-raiser had been held to help retire his campaign debt and that others would be held around the state next year.

Asked if those lobbyists who attended would get special treatment in the Senate, Gardner replied: "Absolutely nothing. They are like anybody who has given me $5, $10, or $100."

Jim and Tammy Bakker take a break at their Pineville home Thursday during TV interview

Tammy Says Report About Bakker's Sex Life Is Just 'Lies'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PINEVILLE, N.C. — Former television preacher John Wesley Fletcher's allegations that he had sex on three occasions with Jim Bakker are "lies" from a "former good friend," Tammy Faye Bakker says.

With husband Jim looking on, Mrs. Bakker discussed everything from allegations of homosexuality against her husband to her extravagant spending habits in an interview Thursday with talk show host Sally Jessy Raphael.

Bakker, indicted this week on federal charges of wire and mail fraud and conspiracy, gathered with crew members to watch the taping on a tiny monitor in the driveway outside the couple's leased 14-room log cabin.

The interview will be aired on Dec. 19, said Burt Dubrow, executive producer of the "Sally Jessy Raphael Show."

"Sally was going to do a show with John Wesley Fletcher and Tammy called to complain," he said after the taping was finished. "Sally told Tammy she wouldn't do it if she would talk with her."

Mrs. Bakker agreed. The taping was cloaked in secrecy, with Ms. Raphael arriving shortly after 2 p.m. in a white stretch limousine with tinted windows.

About a half hour later, she was seated next to Mrs. Bakker in front of a two-story fireplace in the log house. Bakker stoked the fire, and presents from friends and family sat on the mantle.

Bakker declined to be interviewed, but was overheard chatting with Ms. Raphael minutes before the taping began.

The mood was festive, with crew members sneaking Christmas cookies. Mrs. Bakker's touches could be seen everywhere in the home, from the "Tammy's Kitchen" sign to the glass prisms on the coffee table.

Mrs. Bakker also talked about the pain she has suffered during the past two years, including being humiliated when people at shopping malls and restaurants ridiculed her and her husband.

"We're tough," she said at one point.

She joked about her famous shopping habits, admitting that "yes, I am a K-Mart shopper. ... I'm a bargain hunter."

She also said she felt the media has treated the couple unfairly by giving little time to their side of the story. Bakker resigned from PTL in March 1987 after admitting he had a sexual encounter with church secretary Jessica Hahn and paying her hush money.

"Sometimes I wish we could just move away to another planet," she said tearfully.

During the interview, the subject of Monday's indictment of her husband only came up indirectly.

"We want to hear your side of the story," Ms. Raphael told her.

Mrs. Bakker broke down in tears several times during the interview. Her husband suggested several questions, including ones about the couple's famous air-conditioned dog house and their Rolls Royce automobile.

During the interview, Mrs. Bakker stroked her four-month old Yorkshire terrier.

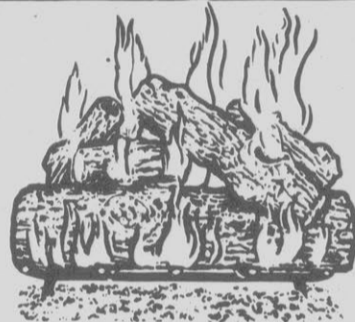

Her husband brought the puppy home recently after her other dog died, she told a visitor before joining Ms. Raphael.

Mrs. Bakker also talked about her feelings about becoming a grandmother. Her only daughter, Tammy Sue, is seven months pregnant.

IN THE STATE

CP&L Waste

WILMINGTON (AP) — Beginning next summer, about 10 shipments a year of spent nuclear reactor fuel will travel by railroad from Southport to Raleigh if the Nuclear Regulatory Commission approves a request that Carolina Power & Light Co. plans to file today.

The two enclosed pools where spent fuel is stored at the Brunswick plant are running out of space, and CP&L wants to store the fuel at the Shearon Harris nuclear plant near Raleigh. Each shipment would travel by rail west to a railroad switching station in Hamlet and then north to the Harris plant, said CP&L spokesman Roger Hannah.

"We have done basically all we can do in terms of expanding the fuel pool at Brunswick," he said Thursday. "It would be possible to build more spent fuel pools, but it would be very expensive."

Bond Payment

RALEIGH (AP) — The National Council of Churches has agreed to pay the $25,000 bond for Indian activist Eddie Hatcher, and his attorney expected him to be released from the Robeson County Jail late today.

Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs, who remained at large Thursday night, were indicted Tuesday on 14 state charges of second-degree kidnapping. The charges stem from their takeover Feb. 1 of a Lumberton newspaper during which they used sawed-off shotguns to hold 20 people hostage.

While state and local police searched for Jacobs, the bond for Hatcher was dispatched from the New York offices of the National Council of Churches on Thursday afternoon, said J. Martin Bailey, the organization's associate general secretary.

"The executive committee of the (Council's) bail bond fund said we are taking no position on the guilt or innocence of the defendant but, as in other cases, we are working to secure the rights of minority persons under the Eighth Amendment of the Constitution," Bailey said.

Research Animals

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A federal veterinary inspector says he found no evidence of animal abuse and no serious violations of federal law at a facility used by the University of North Carolina to hold research animals.

"I looked at all of the animals out there, and they appear to be healthy," Dr. David Kelley of the Agriculture Department's Agriculture Animal and Plant Health Inspection Services office in Raleigh said after inspecting the animal holding area known as "The Farm."

A national animal-rights group last Friday raided the facility and has demanded that several alleged violations of the U.S. Animal Welfare Act be investigated.

UNC Chancellor Paul Hardin said the specific complaints are being investigated by the university.

Chase Accident

HENDERSON, N.C. (AP) — A Vance County man was killed Thursday when his car crashed head-on into a tractor-trailer rig on Interstate 85 while eluding Henderson police officers trying to stop him for questioning, authorities said.

Joseph Edward Bobbitt, 27, of Henderson was killed instantly on impact with the rig, which was pulling a load of bricks. The accident occurred shortly after 1 a.m. on the northbound side of the interstate at the entrance ramp from U.S. 158 Bypass, police said.

Poultry Savings

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina poultry farmers can save more than $6 million a year by using fluorescent lights instead of incandescent lights in their broiler or layer houses, a North Carolina State University researcher says.

Sheila Scheideler, an N.C. State Poultry Extension Specialist, told a group of poultry farmers meeting in Moore County they could save between $500 and $1,000 annually per house on their power bills by using fluorescent lights. She said if all the state's poultry farmers switched to fluorescent lights, the annual savings in power costs would be approximately $6.2 million.

The popularity of fluorescent lights is increasing, said Neil Elliott of the N.C. Alternative Energy Corporation, which is promoting use of the lights.

Six Banks Will Receive More Than $700 Million For RJR Nabisco Work

By John A. Bolt
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Six commercial and investment banks will receive more than $700 million for advice and arranging financing of the $24.53 billion leveraged buyout of RJR Nabisco Inc., with the bulk going to junk-bond specialist Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

Although the dollars are huge, they amount to only about 3 percent of the total deal, putting them on the low side of fees in previous LBOs.

"Of course, we don't have much to compare it with," William Curt Hunter, a researcher at the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta who has studied fees paid investment bankers, said Thursday.

The previous record fee for a leveraged buyout was the $49 million paid in the 1986 $6.1 billion sale of Beatrice Cos., Hunter said.

Documents filed at the Securities and Exchange Commission by winning bidder Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. suggest investment and commercial bankers would get as much as $711.88 million in fees for arranging financing for Kohlberg's $109 cash-and-securities offer for each share of RJR stock.

Earlier documents indicated RJR itself would pay $14 million each to investment banks Dillon Read & Co. and Lazard Freres & Co. for their assistance.

According to the SEC documents filed Wednesday, Drexel would get an estimated $226.88 million, Merrill Lynch & Co. would receive $109.38 million, while Morgan Stanley & Co. and Wasserstein, Perella & Co. would get $25 million each.

In addition, a syndicate of four banks — Bankers Trust Co. Chase Manhattan Bank, Citibank and Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. — would split $325 million for lining up $14.5 billion in bank loans.

Drexel could also end up with 4 percent of RJR Nabisco, while Merrill Lynch could get 2 percent.

According to the filing, the fees break down this way:

—A 1.5 percent commitment fee and .05 percent funding fee to Drexel for a $3.5 billion bridge loan; Merrill Lynch receives the same fees for a $1.5 billion bridge loan.

—Drexel and Merrill Lynch each will receive another 3.62½ percent when they replace the $1.5 billion bridge loans with junk bonds.

—Drexel gets another 3.87½ percent for the remaining $1.5 billion in junk bonds.

—Kohlberg's four investment bankers get $25 million each for other services, including advice and financing.

"Although these dollars seem excessive, they're probably not if you look at the risk," Hunter said.

"There's a lot of risk involved, and also underwriting the junk bonds," he said. "There's a real question if the market can absorb this amount of financing."

Also in the filing, Kohlberg disclosed 10-year business projections made by RJR management and provided during the negotiations.

Profits for the nation's 19th largest industrial company are expected to jump from $1.4 billion in 1988 to $4.6 billion by 1998, with tobacco continuing to provide most of the profit, the filing said.

By 1998, sales of the company's tobacco products, including Winston, Salem and Camel cigarettes, are projected to go from $6.1 billion a year to $15.7 billion a year, with operating income from tobacco climbing from $1.9 billion to $5.5 billion.

Food sales — Oreo cookies, Ritz crackers, Planters peanuts, Del Monte vegetables and others — could go from $9.9 billion to $18.5 billion, with operational income rising from $1.1 billion to $2.4 billion.

Kohlberg has said it may sell as much as $6 billion worth of the food business, especially in areas that may raise antitrust questions.

because of KKR's Beatrice holdings. However, RJR's board said in a separate SEC filing that it accepted Kohlberg's offer in part.

Survey Rakes Tar Heels For Smoking, Eating Habits And Stress

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — Welcome to the land of unmanaged stress, heavy smoking and poor nutrition. That's the bad news in a "Prevention" magazine survey that rates North Carolina poorly for the high percentage of residents who smoke, eat unwisely and don't have an effective way to combat stress. But don't get uptight. There's good news, too, in the magazine's survey of the 21 most populous states, conducted by pollster Louis Harris. North Carolina finished last in alcohol, cocaine, marijuana and speed use. So if Tar Heels are ruining their health, at least they're doing it sober. The findings stem from five years of data collected by the national health magazine and from interviews with 6,263 people, 162 in North Carolina.

"It's a fairly small North Carolina sample, but it's representative in terms of the various population groups," said Tom Dybdahl, director of the Prevention Index, the magazine's survey arm. He said the makeup of the survey group closely matched the state's composition by age, race and gender. But because the sample was so small, Dybdahl told The Greensboro News & Record, the North Carolina findings probably contain a substantial margin of error, although he isn't sure what it is. And a Duke University nutrition expert said reliable data on the nutritional habits of North Carolinians is scarce. That should change with the upcoming completion of a U.S. Department of Agriculture study likely to be more precise than the magazine's, said Dr. Susan Kleiner of Duke's Sarah Stedman Center for Nutritional Studies. "Diet surveys over the phone by poll takers are not viewed as valid methods," she said. Dybdahl said the survey was aimed at measuring the percentage of residents who follow good health practices ranging from moderation in food and drink to exercising regularly, increasing fiber intake, and cutting salt, fat and sugar in the diet. Overall, North Carolina finished 14th among the 21 states, with Florida, Virginia and Massachusetts the top three. Worst states were Minnesota, Wisconsin and Indiana. Dybdahl said that just because North Carolina finished poorly in the stress category — worse than hectic, high-pressure New York — doesn't mean it's a stressful place. "It may be that because North Carolina is not perceived as a stressful place, a lot of people there don't work out ways of dealing with it when they encounter it," he said.

MISS AMERICA IS 'RELIGIOUS'
CHICAGO — The new Miss America, Gretchen Elizabeth Carlson, says she is "a very religious person and faith in God is my No. 1 support system."
In an interview with The Lutheran, the monthly magazine of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, she said other media had peppered her with all kinds of questions except about her favorite subject — religion.
"No matter where I am and what I hope to accomplish, I know I have my best friend (God Jesus) with me," she said.
The blonde Miss Carlson, 22, of Anoka, Minn., a senior at Stanford University, was crowned Sept. 10 in Atlantic City, N.J., after competing as Miss Minnesota.
She said she regards today's society as "quite immoral" and would like to do her part in improving it.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the book of I Samuel intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

SAMUEL AND SAUL

SEEKING AID TO FIND HIS LOST ANIMALS, SAUL, WITH HIS SERVANT, HAS REACHED SAMUEL THE PROPHET IN RAMAH....

TELL ME, I PRAY THEE, WHERE THE PROPHET'S HOUSE IS?

I AM THE PROPHET! DO NOT FEAR FOR THINE ANIMALS—THEY ARE ALREADY FOUND!

GO UP BEFORE ME INTO THE HIGH PLACE FOR YE SHALL EAT WITH ME TODAY, AND TOMORROW I SHALL TELL THEE ALL THAT IS IN THINE HEART!

BUT I AM ONLY A BENJAMITE! IN THE LEAST FAMILY OF THE SMALLEST TRIBE OF ISRAEL! WHY, THEREFORE, DO YOU HONOR ME IN SUCH MANNER?

AND MUCH TO THE ASTONISHMENT OF SAUL AND HIS SERVANT, SAMUEL PUTS THEM IN THE CHIEF PLACE OF HONOR AT THE HIGH FEAST...

SAVE THIS FOR YOUR SUNDAY SCHOOL SCRAPBOOK

Quake

the Armenian capital, Yerevan, said he saw dozens of villages "totally destroyed." In Spitak, a city of 16,000 near Leninakan, "99 percent of the population is gone," he said.

"Helpless sobbing people are climbing on the wreckage of an apartment house, from which can be heard heart-rending cries for help," the Communist Party daily Pravda wrote from Leninakan, a heavily battered city near the quake's epicenter.

U.S. scientists said the quake measured 6.9 on the Richter scale.

"We expect more tremors to take place soon in the area of the earthquake that shook the trans-Caucasian region on Dec. 7," said Nikolai Shebalin, a spokesman for the Soviet Institute of Physics of the Earth.

Tass quoted him as saying the tremors "should be less powerful" than the quake, which also rocked portions of the republics of Azerbaijan and Georgia.

Official Soviet media covered the disaster with unprecedented scope and speed.

In an interview Thursday on Soviet television, Premier Nikolai I. Ryzhkov appealed for aid to the area. He said rescue workers needed cranes and other heavy equipment to remove debris and look for survivors.

ECU Studies Scores

ministration had previously believed that it was the nurse licensure candidate's responsibility to study on his or her own. But these scores, coupled with reports of high proficiency in nursing from supervisors of graduates, has caused the administration to reconsider.

"We know our graduates are well-prepared for and perform well in their work as nurses," Dr. Henning said. "Their employers tell us so. But passing these tests is critical for them. Without them, by North Carolina law, they cannot practice nursing once a certain time span as a nurse applicant has passed. It's necessary that we help our people do everything possible to do well on these tests."

Dr. Henning said that the Eastern Area Health Education Center programs and some privately operated courses also offer bone-up help for nurse applicants.

She said the ECU school is looking at its entire curriculum for ways to make the students better prepared for nursing and for passing the test. She said, as an example, that a large portion of the questions on the tests recently have been on medical-surgical nursing. For this reason, this part of the curriculum is being seriously examined for ways to illuminate it for students.

Students are also being encouraged to take diagnostic readiness tests developed by the National League for Nursing as a measure to improve their likelihood of passing the state boards.

"I think I can assure everyone that the school of nursing and the entire university is committed to doing everything that's needed to help our nursing students become the best nurses possible and perform well on the licensure examinations," said Dr. William Laupus, the university's vice chancellor for health sciences.

Laupus and ECU Chancellor Richard Eakin called last September for a "rapid repair solution for students in the senior class and a long-range solution to prevent this happening again."

According to Doub, the replacement of the Greene Street bridge over the Tar River remains on schedule for funding of planning and design work in fiscal 1994 and 1995, with right of way acquisition and construction funding in fiscal 1996.

along that congested section ... and deserves a great deal of credit for taking the leading role and helping keep that portion of the project on schedule."

In approving the updated TIP, Doub said, all highway projects affecting Pitt County remain on schedule or "were accelerated."

Doub said the TIP includes the January letting of a contract for grading, drainage, culvert and structures on the second portion of the Farmville Bypass — from U.S. 258 north of Farmville to the Farmville East Thoroughfare — a 3.34-mile project estimated to cost $4.9 million.

In August the transportation board is expected to let a contract for replacement of the Grindle Creek bridge on N.C. 903 north of Greenville, as well as widening, drainage and paving on N.C. 903, from N.C. 11 to the Martin County line. The project, involving 6.22 miles, has an estimated cost of $7 million, Doub said.

The widening of N.C. 43, from the south city limits of Greenville to Bells Fork, has been advanced in the TIP for right of way acquisition in fiscal year 1995, Doub said, with construction scheduled to begin in fiscal year 1996 at a cost of $1.35 million.

The northwest Greenville bypass remains on schedule in the TIP, Doub said, "even though the cost estimates have increased by over $2 million, for a total of

It's Bleak In State College

Penn State A Loser For The First Time In 50 Years

By Hal Bock
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It has been 50 years since December was this bleak at State College, Pa., known fondly in the college football community as Happy Valley, home of the Penn State Nittany Lions.

And take it from coach Joe Paterno, 5-6 is pretty bleak.

Usually the weeks before Christmas are a bustling time in the Valley, with the team and its fans preparing for another bowl trip. This time, others are on their way to the land of pastel blazers and perpetual parties, celebrating the end of another football season. The Lions are staying home, licking their wounds from a long, tough year, their first losing season since 1938.

A half-century between losing records is not too shabby, but the faithful did not take the shock of this season silently. Two years after his team won the national championship, there were rumbles in the Valley that the parade had passed Paterno by, much the way NFL critics suggested Tom Landry, Chuck Noll and Don Shula had been left behind this season.

"It doesn't bother me," Paterno said. "I'm not a guy who's ever been sensitive to criticism or eaten up all the praise. There are ups and downs."

Then he smiled benignly.

"After the Notre Dame game, I came home and turned on a late sports show," he said. Learning that Dallas, Pittsburgh and Miami had each lost in the NFL the same weekend, he considered drastic action.

"I thought about sending telegrams to Tom, Chuck and Don saying, 'Let's go away someplace.'"

Then they could have sat around and listened to the chorus of critics together. And maybe done a little criticizing of their own.

"You've got to understand," Paterno said. "Everybody knows how to coach football. Everybody knows when to throw a screen pass and when to throw a bomb, when to blitz and when not to. You're going to get second-guessed. We should expect it."

"Hey, I second-guess. It's natural to blame the coach. You can't be in this game, in the limelight, without expecting people to jump you. Fans get frustrated, they go after the coach. You don't let it get you. If you react and let it affect your judgment, you can forget about it."

And yet, the hard times in Happy Valley have produced a discernible change in Paterno, a new dedication to his team and his program.

"What bothers me is when they criticize the kids," he said. "This is a good bunch of young kids. They worked hard but had a little tough luck. People played well against us."

Then he added softly, "I may not have done a good enough job for them. I may have let them down."

If that happened this year, Paterno is determined it will not happen again.

"This gives me an excuse to get out of things I've been doing, charitable things and fund-raising work. Winning creates so much demand. There are things you just can't turn down. I had no excuse then. Now, I've got an excuse."

And he is using it, plunging himself into full-time football. "I've been able to spend more time with the staff and squad. All I think about is how we can get better. I have to teach them how to win again. Somewhere along the line, they lost confidence. A lot of people smelled the kill against us."

Players are the lifeline of any program and Paterno believes he has the right ones to bring Penn State back.

"I have the best young squad, physically, that we've ever had," he said. "We need leadership, intangibles, commitments. These are the things you learn when you lose. We had no quitters. When you win, morale is easy. When you get it even though you're losing, that's a positive."

So that gives the coach something with which to start, a place to begin the reconstruction. He will take it from there. It will take time and effort. The rubber chicken circuit will suffer, but Paterno figures that is a small price to pay for improving future Decembers in the Valley.

Pirates Hosting 4-0 Highlanders

East Carolina's Pirates closing to action Saturday night, closing out their pre-holiday home schedule.

The Pirates will entertain Radford at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum. East Carolina has two other games remaining prior to the Christmas break, both on the road, at Winthrop and at Mississippi State.

East Carolina comes into the game Saturday night with a 3-2 record, having lost to unbeaten South Carolina, 75-67, Wednesday in Columbia, S.C. In that game, the Pirates fell behind by 14 points in the first half, but struggled back and finally tied the game with about seven and a half minutes left to play. But ECU fell on hard times after that, failing to hit from the floor the rest of the game as South Carolina pushed back out by eight points and held that margin the rest of the way.

Blue Edwards scored 31 points in the game, the third time this year he has scored at least 30 points in a game. He was the only Pirate in double figures for the contest, however.

Radford comes in with a 4-0 record following an 84-68 victory over North Carolina A&T Thursday night.

The Highlanders are averaging 95.5 points a game and have four starters in double figures through the four games, led by 6-6 junior forward Vernon Brooks with a 19.0 average. Brooks scored 23 points in the win over A&T. He has a 6.3 rebound per game average.

Phil Young, who scored 17 against the Aggies, has a 17.8 scoring average and dishes out six assists per game. Young is a 6-3 junior guard.

The other starters are 6-6 senior forward Aswan Wainwright, averaging 14.5 points and 5.5 rebounds a game; Stephen Barber, a 6-3 freshman guard, averaging 10.0 points a game; and 6-7 sophomore center Ron Shelburne, averaging 8.8 points and 8.8 rebounds a game.

The meeting between the two teams is only the second. Last year at Radford, the Highlanders pulled out a 77-75 win when Gus Hill's three-point attempt at the horn bounced off the rim. Radford went on to post a 16-14 season.

The Highlander coach, Oliver Purnell, however, is in his first year at Radford. A graduate of Old Dominion, Purnell twice came into Minges as a player, scoring 23 points and 11 assists in those two games.

Following the game, the Pirates take to the road for two games, playing at Winthrop on Thursday and at Mississippi State on Dec. 20. They return to Minges on Dec. 27 to host Maryland-Baltimore County.

Auburn's Rocker Adds Lombardi

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — Auburn defensive tackle Tracy Rocker is gathering awards almost as efficiently as he collected tackles for the nation's leading defense.

Rocker, two nights after winning the Outland Trophy as the nation's top interior lineman, received the 19th Lombardi Award on Thursday night as the nation's outstanding lineman.

"It's fun winning the awards, but when you are walking around on two hours sleep, you are kind of in a daze," Rocker said.

"I'm still pinching myself that I'm the winner. Two years from now I'll probably realize I won."

Rocker beat out linebackers Broderick Thomas of Nebraska and Derrick Thomas of Alabama and Michigan defensive tackle Mark Messner.

Rocker, a finalist for the Lombardi Award last season, received the Outland Trophy in New York on Wednesday night.

Rocker was a finalist for the Lombardi Award last year when Ohio State linebacker Chris Spielman took home the trophy.

"I told these guys here it doesn't matter who wins because we're all winners," Rocker said. "I felt just as much a part of the award last year as I do right now."

The Lombardi Award, honoring former Green Bay and Washington Coach Vince Lombardi, goes to the top offensive or defensive lineman and includes linebackers.

Rocker paced the Auburn defense that led the nation with 7.2 points allowed per game, 218.1 total yards and 68.2 rushing yards.

Rocker, who will lead the Tiger defense against Florida State in the Sugar Bowl, has 101 tackles, including 13 for losses, plus five quarterback sacks this season. His 354 career tackles are an Auburn record.

Although this week has been exhausting, Rocker is still enjoying it.

"It's been an enjoyable week, being the winner of the Outland and now coming to Houston and winning the Lombardi," he said.

"In each case it's been unexpected. You have to respect the other guys that they are just as good as you are."

Rocker was introduced by Auburn defensive coordinator Wayne Hall, who said Rocker would be missed in the Tiger defensive line.

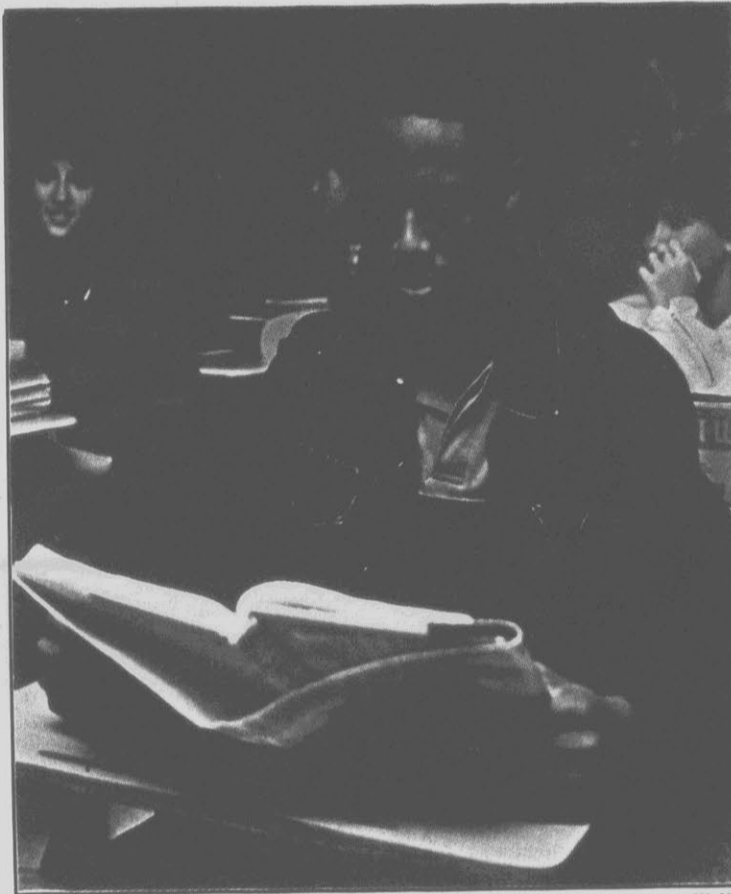

"The intensity and desire to excel is what we'll miss most about Tracy Rocker," Hall said. "Defensive linemen are the only players on the field that can be clipped."

"It takes a special person to play that position and Tracy Rocker has excelled in more plays than his statistics show."

Derrick Thomas has 204 career tackles and 52 quarterback sacks for the Tide, who will play Army in the Sun Bowl. He earlier won the Dick Butkus Award as the nation's outstanding linebacker.

Conley's Bershawn Thompson

Thompson Carries Family Tradition

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

When D.H. Conley's junior guard Bershawn Thompson walks onto the basketball court, he's carrying on a tradition of family excellence that dates back to the 1930s.

One step inside the Thompson house, which is nestled just off Highway 33 near Grimesland, and it's easy to see basketball plays a big part in the life of the family.

Lining the mantle in the living room are trophies won by his father and mother. Sitting on the couch watching Oklahoma and New Mexico play a college basketball game is his 70-year old grandfather, Smith Thompson.

"They don't play like they used to," Thompson's grandfather says. "When we used to play (in the 30s) we'd be looking to shoot as soon as we crossed half court. And we could hit it from there. Now, it's all changed."

"But the key is still the same. You've got to have good hands and be able to move with the ball. That's the key."

Down the hallway in Bershawn's room there's even more trophies.

Organized on his bedroom dresser are 13 trophies and a state championship medal from the 1986-1987 season when he was a freshman reserve on the Viking team.

"I always wanted to win a state championship," Bershawn's father Bobby Thompson said as he looked admiringly at the championship medal. "I never won one myself, but the Lord sent one to me through Shaun. To me it felt like I had won that night. I was so proud of him and the team."

Now Bershawn's father, a local basketball referee, is hoping for another state crown from his son before he leaves Conley. On a junior-dominated 1-1 team the 6-3 Thompson is the only returning starter in the backcourt. He's currently averaging 12 points per game.

"I think they have an excellent chance to be very good this year," the elder Thompson said. "And next year they should be very good since most of the guys are coming back."

Having a father that has so much knowledge of basketball is almost like having an extra coach, according to Bershawn.

"My father takes situations from his past and relates them to me," Bershawn said. "He was a great all-around athlete and he thinks I have the potential to be good, too, so he keeps pushing me to be my best."

"If he's at the game and I make a mistake I'll sometimes look up at him. He'll tell me to settle down. And then when something goes well I'll look up at him and we'll both smile."

The elder Thompson doesn't want to be an over-bearing presence on his son, just a positive one.

Awesome Barry Awed At Banquet

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Barry Sanders couldn't believe it. There at a private dinner for past Heisman Trophy winners was Jim Plunkett.

"I kind of froze when they said he was at the dinner. I said it can't be the Jim Plunkett, maybe some other guy named Jim Plunkett," Sanders said 24 hours later, as he was formally presented with the 1988 Heisman Trophy on Thursday night.

"I've always been a big (Oakland-Los Angeles) Raiders fan. I've probably seen every game that Jim Plunkett has played on television. I felt honored to meet him."

Sanders, Oklahoma State's record-setting tailback, was welcomed into the Heisman family at the annual banquet Thursday night by none other than Plunkett, the former Stanford quarterback and 1970 Heisman winner, and another long-time idol, Texas running back Earl Campbell, the 1977 winner.

Plunkett, one of 19 past Heisman winners at the banquet, told Sanders the Heisman family is "a group of select individuals who have become friends over the years."

Campbell, attending the banquet for the first time since he won the Heisman, had some fun with Sanders, telling him — only half-jokingly — "We expect great things out of you in the future and want to make sure that you realize that you've got 40 or 50-some other guys (past winners) that will get on your case if you do bad things."

"I hope that you will do everything in your power to realize this — you did a lot to get the Heisman, but the Heisman's going to do a heck of a lot more (for you) than you can do for it," Campbell said.

When there were some giggles from the audience, Campbell said, "You guys are snickering about this, but I think the Heisman Trophy — and I've won three MVPs in the NFL — this guy right here (tapping the trophy) has done more for me than any award I've won."

Sanders, who finished the regular season with his best game — 332 yards against Texas Tech in Tokyo — called the Heisman "the best award I could possibly receive" and said he would "try to do my best to be the best representative of the Heisman Trophy, the best Heisman Trophy winner that I can be."

Dr. John R. Campbell, president of Oklahoma State, predicted that Sanders "will indeed contribute a great deal to the Heisman Trophy for he fosters those values that I think the Heisman Trophy really represents."

Oklahoma State coach Pat Jones described Sanders' record 2,628-yard, 39-touchdown season as "the very, very best and most productive

Spivey Set To Clean Up Once Again

Woody Peele

Well, it's just about official now. In fact, it might as well be, but we've got to go through the motions.

Vickie Spivey has bested us all this year. She's won it and we've still got the bowl games to go.

Vickie finished the regular season with a 103-37 record leading the pack of pickers by at least six games. Tom Baines goes into the bowl battles with the second best record, 97-43, six behind Spivey. But they've got only two differences. In fact, no one is able to catch her with the picks each of us has individually made.

So Vickie will be the champ and the rest of us are fighting to see where we'll be.

Tim Chandler has fought his way up to third place with a 94-46 mark while Tom Morris is fourth at 93-47. I'm next at 89-51, followed by Greg Laudick at 85-55.

Officially, however, it won't be over until the last snap of the last bowl game. There are, count 'em, 17 bowls this year. The Bluebonnet has bitten the dust, for this year anyway, and may not return. But be sure that there's another one waiting around the corner to squeeze into the act.

Bowls aren't what they used to be anyway. They once were rewards for an outstanding season. You had to be good to earn a bowl berth.

Nowadays, however, all you have to do is sell tickets. And have a modicum of success. Six and five is good enough if your fans will follow you and buy them tickets.

For this reason, you can just about predict before the season opens who will be in the bowl parade. The Alabamas, the Oklahomas, the UCLAs, the Southern Cal's, the Penn States (where is Penn State this year?), etc., are just about guaranteed bowl wins if they win as many as six games.

Lesser known teams can win nine, ten or 11 games and be totally overlooked because they don't "sell" either at the ticket office or with the television producers.

Enough of that, on to this year's bowl predictions. Here's our consensus picks for this year's bowls:

California Bowl — Fresno State over Western Michigan; Independence Bowl — Texas-El Paso over Southern Mississippi; Sun Bowl — Alabama over Army; Aloha Bowl — Houston over Washington State; Liberty Bowl — Indiana vs. South Carolina, a toss-up; All American Bowl — Florida over Illinois; Freedom Bowl — Colorado over Brigham Young; Holiday Bowl — Oklahoma State over Wyoming; Peach Bowl — N.C. State over Iowa; Gator Bowl — Georgia vs. Michigan State, a toss-up; Hall of Fame Bowl — Syracuse over Louisiana State; Citrus Bowl — Oklahoma over Clemson; Cotton Bowl — UCLA over Arkansas; Fiesta Bowl — Notre Dame over West Virginia; Rose Bowl — Southern California over Michigan; Sugar Bowl — Florida State over Auburn; Orange Bowl — Miami, Fla., over Nebraska.

Hurst, Hawkins Make Deals To Highlight Winter Meetings

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Free agent pitchers Bruce Hurst and Andy Hawkins spent the winter meetings dialing for dollars and ended up with the right numbers.

Hurst signed a three-year, $5.25-million contract with San Diego and Hawkins left the Padres to sign a three-year, $3.6-million deal with the New York Yankees.

Hurst had been the focus of a bidding battle among San Diego, California and Boston.

For the Red Sox last season, the left-hander was 18-6 with a 3.66 earned run average.

The Angels and Red Sox offered $5.5 million to Hurst over three years. A week ago, Hurst had turned down the St. Louis Cardinals' bid of $5.1 million.

"For me and my family, San Diego was the place we wanted to go," Hurst said in explaining his reason for taking a smaller offer.

"We made every effort to sign Bruce Hurst. He took less money,"

Red Sox general manager Lou Gorman said. Although the winter meetings officially ended Wednesday, the trades kept coming.

The Boston Red Sox dealt shortstop Spike Owen and minor league pitcher Dan Gakeler to the Montreal Expos for right-hander John Dopsong and infielder Luis Rivera.

The Philadelphia Phillies traded former All-Star outfielder Phil Bradley to the Baltimore Orioles for pitchers Ken Howell and Gordon Dillard, who spent most of the season in the minors. Los Angeles sent Howell to Baltimore on Sunday in the Eddie Murray trade.

"We just acquired him and didn't plan on trading him," Orioles general manager Rollie Hemond said. "It was rather difficult to call him tonight to tell him. Naturally he was quite surprised."

"We've been looking for right-handed hitting," Hemond said. (Bradley's) a fine defensive outfielder and has speed. He has the talent we were looking for."

In Thursday's third deal, outfielder Mike Aldrete was traded by San Francisco to Montreal for outfielder Tracy Jones. New York Mets vice president Joe McIlvaine said he talked with five teams Thursday and had made an offer to one. McIlvaine said he also had some unexpected offers, one involving a three-way deal. "It's meaty," he said.

It's also unlikely to happen today, according to sources.

The Mets have talked with Atlanta about Dale Murphy, with Cleveland about Joe Carter and with San Diego about John Kruk and Greg Harris. They also have expressed interest in Kansas City's Danny Tartabull.

The Mets on the move could be infielder Howard Johnson, reliever Roger McDowell, center fielder Len Dykstra and shortstop Kevin Elster.

"Teams know we have two second basemen, two shortstops, two third basemen," McIlvaine said. "Some-times things fall in your lap."

The Padres, who obtained Jack Clark and Walt Terrell earlier in the offseason, could not compete with the Yankees' big bucks for Hawkins. He made $453,000 and was offered salary arbitration by the Padres, but chose New York.

"The lure of playing for the New York Yankees is one that most players feel," Hawkins said. "We're very pleased with the way things turned out."

The Yankees had pledged financial restraint this winter, but are spending like the days of Catfish Hunter and Reggie Jackson. Second baseman Steve Sax left the Dodgers and signed a three-year, $4-million contract and Dave LaPoint got $2.575 million for three years. "We think we're getting value received for dollars spent," Yankees general manager Bob Quinn said.

Hawkins, 29 next month, was 14-11 with a 3.35 ERA. His 33 starts and 218 innings were more than any starter pitched for the Yankees last season.

"He's a 35-start, 200-inning guy," Yankees manager Dallas Green said. "The Yankees haven't seen those kind of numbers for a while."

Hawkins said he had "no regrets whatsoever" about leaving San Diego. He said the Padres did not offer more than a two-year contract and that the Yankees' bid was the best.

Tyson-Bruno Fight Is Set To Go Again

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — Mike Tyson's on-again, off-again title defense against Frank Bruno is apparently on again, at least for now.

Tyson's manager, Bill Cayton, confirmed on Thursday that final agreements are being drawn up for the fight to be held Feb. 25 at the Las Vegas Hilton. An announcement of the bout is expected sometime next week.

The new fight date is the latest wrinkle in a bout that has been announced and postponed five times, while Tyson has done his battling outside the ring with his estranged wife, Robin Givens, and with his manager.

"There are agreements being prepared," Cayton said. "I think Mike wants the fight. I want the fight and the promoters want the fight. I believe the deal will be made."

Hilton executive John Giavenco confirmed the hotel was ready to stage the bout, and said he expects contracts to be signed this weekend.

"Hopefully we'll have something to announce next week," said Giavenco, president of Hilton's Nevada operations.

The fight apparently will take place without promoter Don King, who has befriended Tyson and is trying to get the fighter signed to an exclusive promotional contract.

"Don King is not involved in this deal," Cayton said.

Cayton, however, said he did not expect King to try to sabotage the fight.

"I think Don at this time is in favor of the fight," he said.

Tyson is suing Cayton over his refusal to allow the fighter to sign the contract with King, and Cayton has been dealing with intermediaries to set up the Tyson-Bruno fight because the champion isn't talking to his manager.

Cayton earlier said he won't allow Tyson to sign the contract with King because terms are the worst he has ever seen.

Three-Pointers Key Knicks To Victory Over Milwaukee

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Rick Pitino, who took advantage of the 3-point shot to get Providence College into the Final Four two years ago, is using the same route to improve the New York Knicks.

The Knicks, coming off an 0-for-7 performance from 3-point range against Denver on Tuesday night, made an NBA-record 11 3-pointers in 19 attempts Thursday night en route to a 113-109 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks. The win moved New York into a tie for first place in the Atlantic Division.

"We haven't been that hot lately from that range, but our big guys did a great job kicking the ball out to us," said Mark Jackson, who had three 3-point baskets. "The thing with that shot is if we keep taking them, sooner or later they're going to fall in. But the best part of our 3-pointers is that Coach has confidence in us and encourages us to keep taking them."

"We've been struggling from the 3-point line lately, but Rick keeps prodding us to take them," said Trent Tucker, who also had three 3-pointers. Sometimes he yells at me if I don't take them."

Pitino said it wasn't necessary to encourage his players to keep firing despite the dismal performance in the Denver game.

"They know I'll be upset if they don't take the threes," Pitino said. "As long as we're shooting near 40 percent, we'll take it the whole year and stay with it."

New York is 97-for-241 from 3-point range, 40.2 percent, and the Knicks are averaging 13 3-point attempts and 5.4 conversions game. Pitino's 1987 Providence team averaged 8.2 3-point baskets per game.

In the only other NBA games Thursday night, Cleveland defeated San Antonio 104-95 and the Los Angeles Clippers beat Houston 120-116.

Jackson, Tucker and Johnny Newman had three 3-pointers apiece and rookie Rod Strickland had two for the Knicks, who broke the record of 10 established three times previously. The Knicks did it on Nov. 18 against Philadelphia, Dallas had 10 in a game in 1987 and Boston tied the record last April.

Newman had 20 points, Patrick Ewing 17 and Tucker, Strickland and Jackson 16 each for the Knicks. Ewing also had seven blocked shots.

"When we're hitting the 3-pointer, it's an easier game for me," Ewing said. "I can make the defense pay by getting the ball out for the three, and I don't get double-teamed as often because no one wants their man to score the easy basket."

Terry Cummings scored 26 points for Milwaukee and Jack Sikma and Larry Krystkowiak 19 each.

Jackson keyed an 11-2 spurt down the stretch with three baskets and an assist. The run did not include a 3-pointer, a fact that did not escape Bucks coach Del Harris.

"The 11 3-pointers hurt us, but we had a five-point lead when they made their last one," Harris said. "We couldn't stretch our defense totally to guard against the threes because they have a good inside game as well. We tried to adjust to the threes, but they still have to make them."

After the Bucks took a 100-97 lead on a jumper by Sikma with 5:37 left, Gerald Wilkins started the 11-2 streak with two free throws.

Jackson then passed to Charles Oakley for a layup and later got inside for three baskets in the next three minutes as the Knicks pulled ahead 106-102 with 1:53 remaining.

Paul Pressey's 3-pointer, Milwaukee's only one of the game, got the Bucks within two with 1:07 left, but they got no closer in the final seconds.

Cavaliers 104, Spurs 95
Brad Daugherty scored 23 points, including 11-for-11 from the foul line as Cleveland won at San Antonio.

The Cavaliers used a 20-6 run to build a 58-46 halftime lead, and the Spurs got no closer than six points in the second half. Cleveland outscored San Antonio 29-8 at the foul line and the Cavaliers also had eight steals, eight blocks and a 28-11 edge in defensive rebounds.

Johnny Dawkins scored 19 points for San Antonio, which was playing its 1,000th NBA game.

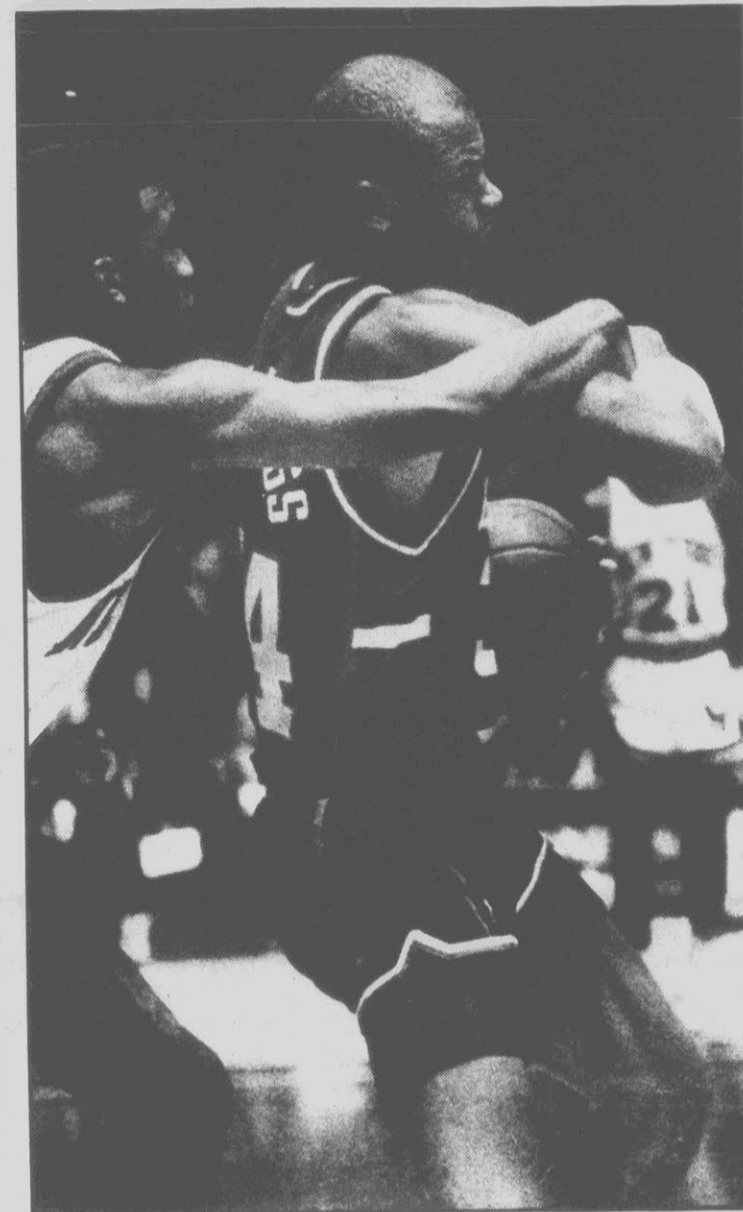

Clippers 120, Rockets 116
Los Angeles snapped a five-game losing streak despite 37 points and 17 rebounds from Houston's Akeem Olajuwon.

Danny Manning's 15-foot jumper with 25 seconds left broke a 115-115 tie and put the Clippers ahead to stay after they trailed 113-107 with 3:28 left.

Los Angeles followed with eight consecutive points for a 115-113 lead with 1:21 to go. Olajuwon's two free throws tied the game with 36 seconds remaining.

After Manning's shot, Buck Johnson could have tied the score with seven seconds left, but he was called for an offensive foul. Manning made two free throws and Norm Nixon one in the final seconds to keep the Clippers in front.

Quintin Dailey led Los Angeles with 36 points, his high since joining the Clippers on Dec. 12, 1986. Benoit Benjamin scored 21 of his 24 points in the first half, while Manning also scored 24 points and Norm Nixon had 20 assists.

Doubles Motivates

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — If it wasn't for doubles, Jim Pugh, Rick Leach, John Fitzgerald and other specialist players would have little to motivate them.

The Nabisco Masters Doubles championship at London's Royal Albert Hall has placed them in the spotlight of world tennis, with a big cash prize to aim for and a stage of their own to show off their expert qualities.

But for how much longer? When the players' union, the Association of Tennis Professionals, sets up its own breakaway tour in 1990, the fate of such events as this year-end tournament could hang in the balance.

For those whose livelihood depends more on doubles than singles, the future is worrying.

"If they get a big sponsor, the tournament should continue. If they don't, I don't see it how it could," said American Leach. "That would hurt us."

Leach could be one of the players most affected by any change in the calendar. Although ranked 235th in singles, he and partner Pugh are the top-ranked doubles team for 1988, having won six tournament titles.

On Thursday, they kept in the hunt for the $72,000 Nabisco Masters title by whipping Piet Aldrich and Danie Visser of South Africa 6-4, 6-4, 6-3 to improve their record in the round robin event to 1-1.

Fitzgerald did even better, virtually making sure of a semifinal berth as he and Anders Jarryd won their second straight match, 6-4, 6-7, 7-5, 6-3 over Brad Drewett and Marty Davis.

Unconfirmed reports have hinted that the Masters Doubles may be merged after 1990 with the New York-based Masters singles tournament.

Fitzgerald said that would weaken the attraction of doubles as a spectacle.

Furman Wants To Complete Surprise

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Furman, which was not even expected to be among the top teams in the Southern Conference this season, battles top-ranked Idaho on Saturday for a spot in the NCAA Division I-AA championship game.

"We're very happy to be playing to get into the national championship," Furman third-year coach Jimmy Satterfield said. "That's what every team plays for."

Neither team is a stranger to the I-AA playoffs. Idaho has earned its way into the playoffs for four consecutive seasons but has never gotten this far. The Paladins have been in the playoffs five of the past seven years. But this was supposed to be a rebuilding year for Furman, which lost 31 seniors and 16 starters.

Instead, Furman managed to earn a share of the league title and then beat co-champ Marshall a week ago in the I-AA quarterfinals. Idaho, meanwhile, was picked to win the Big Sky Conference — and did.

Idaho is 11-1 — its best record ever — and beat Northwestern State 38-30 to advance to its semifinal showdown with Furman, 11-2, touchdowns. Friesz, a junior, has thrown 19 interceptions.

Backup quarterback Steve Nolan is also out, having hurt his knee last week in practice. So, the starting job falls to freshman Andy Beitia, who replaced Friesz when he was injured in the third quarter last week.

"We have no choice," Coach Keith Gilbertson said, "it's either that or we don't play."

Beitia has played in three games, hitting five of 12 passes for 41 yards.

"We recruited Andy with the idea in mind that by his sophomore year he'd be ready to play a lot," Gilbertson said. "This is just a year early. And with the situation being in the semifinals for the national championship is a little unfair."

The Vandals are also hurting at running back. Bruce Harris, who leads the team in rushing with 837 yards, is out with a knee injury suffered last week. Running back Devon Pearce, who has gained 334 yards, also has an injured knee and is questionable.

Running back Damon Daniels, who's rushed for 700 yards, will be called on to carry the bulk of the rushing load.

"It's too bad we've come this far and are this beat up," the third-year coach said. "That's the way it goes."

Idaho is averaging 32 points and 450 yards a game — third best in I-AA — with a healthy Friesz at the helm. But the Vandals must now face one of the best I-AA defenses with either a freshman quarterback — or a limping star.

The Paladins are giving up just 9.5 points per game — tops in the nation. Furman also ranks No. 4 nationally in total defense, surrendering 254.9 yards per game.

"They probably have the best defense we've played all year," Gilbertson said, "particularly in regards to the running game. They're awfully good."

Linebacker Jeff Blankenship leads the Furman defense. Blankenship has 212 tackles this year and a school-record 557 during his career.

The Idaho defense is no match for Furman's — at least statistically. The Vandals are giving up 336 yards and 22 points a game.

Leading the defense are linebacker Jerry Medved, who has a team-high 131 tackles, and strong safety Brian Smith, who's been in on 113 tackles. Marvin Washington, a 6-foot-6, 235-pound defensive end, has 16 1/2 sacks this year.

Offensively, Furman is led by quarterback Frankie DeBusk, who's hit 89 of 192 passes for 1,383 yards and seven touchdowns. He's thrown 14 interceptions this year.

The running game is led by fullback Dwight Sterling, who missed two games this year but has still rushed for a team-high 741 yards, and tailback John Bagwell, who has gained 405 yards despite being sidelined with an injury the first four games this season.

Furman is still minus fullback Kennet Goldsmith, who rushed for 586 yards before a knee injury in the seventh game sidelined him for the year. But the Paladins may be getting tailback Bobby Daugherty back. Daugherty, who has 709 yards rushing in 12 games, may play after missing the Marshall game with a knee injury.

Given those injuries and others suffered by his team, Satterfield said he did not expect his team to be any less ready for the Vandals because of their injuries.

"I don't see why," he said. "We've had more injuries than they have — and we're still playing. They're not a one-dimensional team. Hopefully, they will get the message."

Big Three Set To Join Forces In Trying To Combat Drug Use

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VIENNA, Austria — In basketball, it's the Big East. In football, it's the Big Eight or Big Ten. In the fight against drugs in sports, it's now the Big Three.

A joint American-Soviet attack on doping, forged in the wake of the drug scandals of the Seoul Olympics, picked up a major ally Thursday when East Germany said it would join the agreement.

"The Big Three are leading the way," said Anita DeFrantz, an International Olympic committee member from the United States.

Procedural matters must be worked out before East Germany can take on a one-third role in the superpower crackdown on drugs.

said Robert Helmick, U.S. Olympic Committee president and an IOC member.

But the move, announced by East German Olympic Committee president Manfred Ewald, means the top three medal-winning countries at Seoul have committed themselves to a plan whereby each country can test the others' athletes any time, anywhere.

"We are in favor of strict controls and against doping," Ewald said. "In our opinion, having the three nations that finished in the first three places in the Olympic Games should set a good example for the rest of the world."

The Soviet Union won 132 medals at Seoul, East Germany 102 and the United States 94. None of the three nations had any athletes among the 10 punished for drug use at the Games.

As a week of worldwide sports meetings in which drug use was the predominant topic drew to a close, the International Olympic Committee was asked to add marijuana to the list of banned substances.

The Association of National Olympic Committees said marijuana was a danger to health and "leads to the use of other, harder drugs."

The IOC found marijuana use among a small number of athletes tested at the Seoul Games but did not punish them.

Sooners Rounding Into Form

Oklahoma Romps By New Mexico; Purdue Defeats No. 18 Connecticut

The Associated Press

Purdue's Steve Scheffler (55) blocks Tate George's path

The Associated Press
ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — The Oklahoma Sooners may not be Final Four material just yet, but they are rapidly smoothing out the few remaining rough edges.

The Sooners, who reached the NCAA Tournament title game a year ago only to lose to Danny Manning and Kansas, ran their record to 4-1 Thursday night with a 100-96 victory over New Mexico.

And where the sixth-ranked Sooners won was almost as impressive as how.

Playing on New Mexico's homecourt, known in college basketball circles as "The Pit," the Sooners got a 24-point effort from Stacey King and some big plays from Mookie Blaylock and Tyrone Jones to win in what is considered one of the toughest arenas for an opposing team.

"This is a tough place to play. You have to keep score and you can pick up money off the floor," said Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs, who spent much of the night at the scorer's table and dodging coins thrown by the rowdy New Mexico crowd of 18,100.

With King hitting 8 of 12 shots in the second half, the Sooners withstood one New Mexico surge after another.

A 3-point goal by Jones with 1:06 left gave Oklahoma the lead for good at 96-94, and Blaylock sealed the victory with a steal and free throw with five seconds left.

In other games involving the Top 20, it was No. 15 Louisville 81, Western Kentucky 69, and Purdue 88, No. 18 Connecticut 73.

Tubbs, whose team was 35-4 last year, said this group of Sooners is a little behind last year's pace.

"I don't think we're as set in our ways after five games as we were last year," he said. "This year we're kind of searching and we're losing our continuity at times."

Tubbs would have a tough time convincing New Mexico's first-year Coach Dave Bliss.

"I think we realize what a good basketball team Oklahoma is," Bliss said. "They made the plays when they had to make them. I felt we put out a good effort, but the championship team that they are, they have the ability to make those plays."

New Mexico erased a 13-point deficit early in the second half behind the outside scoring of guards Rob Robbins and Willie Banks.

And the Lobos took an 85-81 lead with 8:24 left before King and Jones took over the Sooners' offense and control of the game.

In the end, the Sooners' inside tandem proved too much, even for "The Pit," and its rowdy inhabitants.

"As much as anything, they (crowd) contributed to us coming back in the second half," Bliss said of the partisan crowd.

Asked how many points "The Pit" is worth to the Lobos, Bliss noted, "tonight, it was four too few."

New Mexico, at 2-4 off to its worst start since the scandal-marred 1979-80 season, gave the Sooners all they could handle.

And until Blaylock sealed the win with a free throw with five seconds left, it appeared the Lobos might duplicate last year's victories in Albuquerque over then No. 1-ranked Arizona and No. 5 Wyoming.

Only King's 20 second-half points and Blaylock's steal as the Lobos were headed for a potential tying 3-pointer averted the upset.

Robbins scored 25 points to lead New Mexico, while Banks scored 21.

It was Robbins' three second-half 3-pointers and the freshman Banks' 12 points in the final 20 minutes that kept New Mexico within upset range.

The Lobos, who trailed by as much as 15 points in the first half, tied it at 76-76 with 9:38 left in the game on a hook by 7-foot center Rob Loeffel. A pair of free throws by Banks gave New Mexico an 83-81 lead with 8:34 left and the Lobos extended it to 85-81 seconds later on a layup by Charlie Thomas.

The Sooners got six straight points and the two teams traded leads until Jones sank a 3-pointer with 1:06 left for a 96-94 Oklahoma lead.

Free throws by Terrence Mullins and Jones sandwiched around a pair of free throws from New Mexico guard Darrell McGee made it 99-96 and set up Blaylock's steal of a New Mexico pass.

Jones added 19 points for Oklahoma. McGee had 19 and Thomas 17 for New Mexico.

Top Twenty
 No. 15 Louisville 81, W. Kentucky 69
 LaBradford Smith had 18 points and a career-high 11 assists to lead the Cardinals to the road victory.

"The way we're playing now, it's not just going to be one player," Smith said. "It's evening out. Everybody's working hard, everybody's unselfish."

Pervis Ellison had 11 rebounds and eight blocked shots as the Cardinals won for the third straight time after losing their first two games.

Tony Kimbro scored seven points and Smith added six in a 21-4 run late in the first half that carried Louisville to victory.

Kenny Payne topped Louisville with 19 points, Western Kentucky, 4-2, was led by guard Brett McNeal's, 20 points.

Purdue 88, No. 18 Connecticut 73
 The Boilermakers went on a 14-0 run after a first-half technical against Coach Gene Keady.

"What we tried to do is play with some emotion, get into the game defensively, and get up and down the floor, and we finally did that," Keady said. "So far this season, the only time we've had emotion was on the bus to the game. We finally had it on the playing floor."

Stephen Scheffler scored 15 of his 21 points in the first half and was one of five Boilermakers in double figures as they improved to 4-2. Connecticut, 1-3, was led by freshman Chris Smith with 16 points.

Purdue led 15-14 with 13:31 left in the half when Keady was assessed his technical foul for arguing a foul call against center Mel McCants.

Smith hit one of the two free throws, then the Boilermakers started their run.

Holyfield Is Set For Step

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Evander Holyfield, who wants to challenge heavyweight champion Mike Tyson next year, can take a step in that direction tonight by beating a man who experienced the fury of Tyson in 1987.

Holyfield, the undisputed cruiserweight champion, will fight for the second time as a heavyweight in a scheduled 10-round bout against Pinklon Thomas, a former World Boxing Council champion.

It will be Thomas' first fight since he was knocked out in the sixth round of a challenge to Tyson on May 30, 1987, at Las Vegas.

Michael Dokes, a former World Boxing Association champion and a possible opponent for Holyfield early next year, also will appear on the card at the Convention Center's 3,200-seat ballroom.

Dokes will defend the Continental Americas title in a scheduled 12-round bout against Rocky Sekorski.

It will be the eighth fight for Dokes in a comeback that began Dec. 17, 1987, following drug rehabilitation.

The Dokes-Sekorski bout will begin the Showtime telecast at about 10 p.m. EST.

Holyfield weighed in officially at 210 pounds Thursday night, which is 15 pounds over the cruiserweight limit. He weighed 202 when he made his debut as a heavyweight by stopping James "Quick" Tillis, 210, in five rounds last July 16 at Reno, Nev.

Reagan Says 'Trust But Verify' Still His Policy

By Terence Hunt
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, in a twilight assessment, says Mikhail S. Gorbachev has never shown any reason to be mistrusted and in fact is steering the Kremlin away from its old goal of "a one-world communist state."

In what was probably his final White House news conference, Reagan said "trust but verify" remains his byword in dealing with the Russians, but he offered an optimistic assessment of how U.S.-Soviet relations stand at the end of his eight-year tenure in office.

"The path remains open and the pace of peace continues," he said.

For half an hour, Reagan fielded questions Thursday night in an East Room decorated with Christmas trees hung with silver tinsel. He said it was the Russians — not he — who have changed, but his old anti-communist fire was dampened.

On a pressing domestic issue, Reagan said he would be "deeply disappointed" if President-elect Bush, after assuming office next month, raised taxes to help cut the deficit, which grew to $155 billion this year.

But he quickly added, "I don't think it's going to happen."

The chief executive also told reporters the United States ultimately will have to negotiate with Iran to win release of American hostages in Lebanon. "We would be ready to talk with them," he said of the Iranians.

In addition, he said PLO chairman Yasser Arafat did not go far enough in saying his organization accepts the existence of Israel as a state and condemns terrorism in all forms.

"He has left openings for himself where he can deny that he meant this or meant that, that sounded so clean-cut," Reagan said.

On a day after his fifth and final meeting with Gorbachev, Reagan opened the meeting with reporters by reading a warm statement on the state of superpower relations.

Asked if he believed Gorbachev was trying to make the Soviet Union a less threatening nation, Reagan replied without hesitation, "Yes, I do."

"And I think he recognizes that their massive buildup has been responsible for the great economic crisis that he faces there in the Soviet Union," Reagan said.

Asked point-blank if he trusted Gorbachev, Reagan said, "He hasn't shown me any reason yet that I shouldn't."

However, Reagan said the motto "trust but verify" is one that properly guides Soviet policy, too, and said he did not think Gorbachev "would gamble on believing that he shouldn't protect his own interests, also."

Whether or not the United States and Soviet Union ever become allies, as they were during World War II, Reagan said it was entirely up to the Kremlin.

It could happen, he said, "if it can be definitely established that they no longer are following the expansionist policy that was instituted in the communist revolution that their goal must be a one-world communist state."

The president said "certainly there are indications" the Kremlin is moving that way.

"I do think that there is evidence that they don't like being the pariah, that they might want to join the family of nations and join them with the idea of bringing about or establishing peace." He said he would like to see that happen.

Reagan seemed cool to Gorbachev's call for a ceasefire in Afghanistan, followed by a United Nations-sponsored peacekeeping force and broad-based government.

"I'm not sure the U.N. would like that or that the U.N. is prepared to do such a thing," Reagan said.

Moreover, he said it would be unacceptable to stop arming the Afghan rebels unless the Soviet-backed regime ended military operations.

The president said he was "very grateful" for Gorbachev's announcement of a 500,000 cutback in Soviet troop strength but said Moscow still would have superiority in conventional weapons.

Reagan also expressed confidence that Bush believed as he does that Contra forces fighting the government of Nicaragua are freedom fighters and worthy of continued U.S. support.

On the subject of American hostages in Lebanon, Reagan said the United States ultimately would have to negotiate with Iran because the Iranians control the kidnappers.

Concerning that prospect, he said, "There are conditions that have to be met also there. Anytime that they are ready to come forward on an open basis, we would be ready to talk to them."

"We cannot enter into negotiating in the sense of what kind of ransom to pay or you're just encouraging more hostage-taking. But there are other channels," he said.

Later, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater elaborated: "We'll be glad to talk, but we've never been able to get them to do that."

Reflecting on the highs and lows of his presidency, Reagan said his "greatest burden" was to have to order troops into "danger ... to where their lives are threatened, to where their lives are taken." He later expanded that, noting the continued captivity of hostages in the Middle East.

His greatest joy, he said without hesitation, was the economic recovery — the longest ever during peacetime.

Fitzwater refused to say the news conference was Reagan's last one, but Nancy Reagan said it was.

Reagan Hid On Car Floor To See House

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Nancy Reagan once persuaded President Reagan to hide on the floor of the backseat of her car to elude reporters and view a prospective California residence in privacy.

The first lady wanted Reagan to see the house before a group of friends and supporters went ahead with plans to purchase the residence for the Reagans' use after they leave the White House, Mrs. Reagan's spokeswoman, Elaine Crispin, said Thursday.

"I put him on the floor of the back seat of the car," Mrs. Crispin quoted the first lady as saying.

The couple was accompanied by a Secret Service agent, the spokeswoman said, but she added that she did not know if other agents accompanied them in another car or other vehicles.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the incident occurred when the couple was in California staying at a Los Angeles hotel, sometime prior to his becoming Reagan's chief spokesman in February 1987.

Normally, the president travels in an armored limousine, accompanied by a motorcade consisting of more than a dozen vehicles, including a van containing Secret Service agents armed with submachine guns.

Additional cars transport additional Secret Service agents, special communications gear, police cars, an ambulance, members of his staff and a small group of reporters and photographers.

The Reagans agreed last March to lease, rather than buy, the $2.5 million estate they drove to see.

Eureka College workers displays presidential odds-and-ends

Reagan Sends Relics To Eureka College

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

EUREKA, Ill. — Ronald Reagan's alma mater, tiny Eureka College, is sifting through a bonanza of presidential baubles, including the trademark jellybean jar and a cowboy belt buckle proclaiming "the buckaroo stops here."

"President Reagan has a deep affection for Eureka College and remains consistently in touch with us," said George Hearne, the college's president.

The school of 460 students about 20 miles east of Peoria has received about a dozen boxes of assorted trinkets in the past few weeks. School officials have been notified to expect more presidential odds and ends before the school's most famous graduate leaves office in January.

"It's interesting and exciting and may be just the tip of the iceberg," said Lynn Beer, director of college relations. "He knows we have a display of his memorabilia so he sends anything he feels is suitable."

The boxes are piling up in a small store-room adjacent to Hearne's office. Most are wrapped in old newspapers and appear in no particular order.

One box contains small gifts Reagan regularly gave White House visitors, including the famous jar of jelly beans, the belt buckle and a paperweight made from a piece of cork taken from the Oval Office floor. A note says the cork supported six presidents from 1934-69 before the floor was replaced.

Other items include an inaugural book set, cuff links, a key ring, a yo-yo, golfball, bookmark and a tie bar.

Two of the more unusual items are a pair of cowboy boots emblazoned with the presidential seal and a Plexiglas-enclosed Wheaties box bearing a photo of the 1988 Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins.

A small library could be created from the books Reagan has shipped. Personal messages of good will abound in autographed books. Richard Nixon offered greetings "to another great leader." Jimmy Carter, Ted Kennedy and Ferdinand Marcos autographed other books.

Even reporter Sam Donaldson had kind words for Reagan, saying "you have my respect and admiration."

Eureka College officials welcome all contributions. The college is planning a permanent display in a new campus center located near the Reagan Physical Education Center and Reagan Street, Hearne said.

Officials target 1992 for completion of the center and plan to invite Reagan for opening ceremonies to coincide with his 60th class reunion.

Reagan graduated from the private, liberal arts college in 1932 with a degree in social science and economics.

'Alternatives' Poster Ready

ELLENWOOD, Ga. (AP) — The 1988 "Alternatives" poster shows a sleighing Santa and reindeer flying over the Holy Family and Child in the manger. A caption asks, "Whose Birthday Is It, Anyway?"

"Alternatives," a campaign seeking to recover a Christ-centered Christmas and to protest its commercialization, this year has the backing of more than 100,000 Protestant and Roman Catholic congregations across the country.

Milo Thornberry, director of the campaign founded by various Christian groups in 1973, says it doesn't want people to reject the whole notion of gift-giving and celebration nor send them on a "guilt trip" about it.

Rather, it seeks to help them "restore perspective to a season that often degenerates into a religion-sanctioned orgy of self-indulgence."

Sponsoring agencies for 1988 are Detroit's Catholic Diocese and seven major Protestant denominations.

Missile Down U.S. AID Plane Over North Africa

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RABAT, Morocco — A U.S. locust-spraying plane was shot down near where Marxist rebels have been fighting Morocco for an independent Western Sahara, and officials said all five people aboard were presumed killed.

A second DC-7, also from the U.S. Agency for International Development, was damaged in Thursday's anti-aircraft missile attack over Mauritania but was able to land at a remote airstrip in Morocco. No one aboard that plane was injured.

Marxist guerrillas of the Polisario Front may have fired at the four-engine propeller-driven planes, official sources in this North African country said on condition of anonymity.

The guerrillas are known to have been armed with Soviet-made SA-6 and SA-7 surface-to-air missiles. Both the Moroccan and Mauritanian armed forces also have such anti-aircraft missiles.

No one immediately claimed responsibility, and a U.S. Embassy spokesman in Rabat said an investigation was under way.

"The five crew members of the downed aircraft, all of whom are American citizens, are presumed dead," an AID statement from Washington said.

Both aircraft were owned by T & G Aviation of Chandler, Ariz., and were under contract to AID to spray insects, said T & G co-owner Sergio Tomassoni, who was in the other plane that was hit.

Tomassoni, 64, spoke with reporters by telephone from his hotel room in Agadir, Morocco.

He identified those aboard the downed plane as Joel Blackmer, 46, and Blackmer's son, Frank Kennedy, 21, both of Phoenix; Ben Rossini, 49, Tempe, Ariz.; Frank Hedeman, 47, Cody, Wyo.; and Wes

Wilson of Nebraska. Tomassoni did not know Wilson's age or hometown.

Tomassoni described the two-hour trip in the crippled plane to the next airfield as "hairly."

"We were just flying along at about 11,000 feet when, all of a sudden, the first airplane was hit," Tomassoni said. "We saw the smoke and a big ball of fire. One of the engines was in flames. The plane started losing altitude, and then the right wing blew off. I knew they were in trouble, but we had problems of our own."

"We were 25 to 30 feet above the ground most of the way. We had a load of insecticide aboard, and we dumped it and were able to gain some altitude," Tomassoni added. "We made an emergency landing at an airfield in a town about 80 miles south of Agadir."

A caller identifying himself as Madjid Abdullah, Polisario's North American representative in Washington, said the front "will do everything possible to shed full light on this tragic and unfortunate incident."

"We are not sure really who shot it down," he said in a phone call to The Associated Press in New York. "The Polisario Front has no interest in creating problems with the United States."

He said Morocco must assume responsibility for the attack because it directed civilian planes over an area with a "huge concentration" of Polisario troops.

The area where the plane was shot down is 650 miles southwest of Rabat, the Moroccan capital.

The DC-7s were used for spraying locust swarms in Senegal, which borders Mauritania to the south, AID spokesman Bart Kull said in Washington. Locust infestations have ravaged much of northern Africa this year.

earlier Thursday and were bound for Agadir when they came under fire from ground-to-air missiles, the embassy spokesman said.

Moroccan government officials said the two planes were attacked while they were flying at an altitude of 10,000 to 11,000 feet in an international navigation corridor over Bir Moghrein, northern Mauritania.

The Moroccan sources said officials were trying to locate the downed plane's wreckage, which they said could have scattered over a wide area.

Mauritania lies east of the Western Sahara, a former Spanish colony. Morocco annexed part of the Western Sahara in 1976 and the remaining territory three years later, when Mauritania withdrew from it.

For 13 years, the desolate border region has been the scene of a guerrilla war waged by the Polisario Front to establish an independent Western Sahara.

The United Nations is mediating talks between Morocco and the rebels.

In Washington, FBI spokesman Ray McElhane said his agency was checking to see if it might have jurisdiction to investigate. In 1986, Congress passed the Omnibus Diplomatic Security and Anti-Terrorist Act, which made it a crime for any terrorist group to assault or kill an American anywhere in the world.

Five Killed As U.S. A-10 Jet Slams Into German Apartment Building

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

REMSCHIED, West Germany — Officials today revised the death toll from the crash of a U.S. Air Force jet in Remscheid to five after discovering that a postman counted among the dead was hospitalized with severe burns.

The U.S. military refused to speculate on the cause of the crash Thursday and opened an investigation.

However, the West German air force chief of staff, Horst Jungkurth, told reporters in Bonn he believed the crash was caused by human error.

He said the A-10 aircraft was known as highly reliable and that the chances of a technical problem were "not very high." He said, "The pilot may have become disoriented when he tried to climb in heavy cloud cover."

Witnesses said the plane flew low over a school and struck the top floor of an apartment building before bursting into flames.

Black smoke billowed from the crash site in this central city of 130,000 today. Burned-out cars lined the street. For more than a block, many buildings were either destroyed or heavily damaged.

The Remscheid city spokesman, Wilhelm Ellerbrake, told reporters officials mistakenly reported that six people died in the crash because they were not aware that the postman was moved to a hospital in neighboring Bochum.

Ellerbrake identified the five dead as the lone pilot of the U.S. plane, two women, aged 86 and 76, and two men, aged 35 and 30.

The U.S. Air Force identified the pilot as Capt. Michael P. Foster, 34. It did not give his hometown.

Peter Becker, a civil defense official in North Rhine Westphalia state, said workers were searching for more victims. At least 40 people were treated and released, but 11 remained hospitalized from injuries.

U.S. Air Force Major Gen. Marcus Anderson said the pilot of the A-10 Thunderbolt II jet had reported in a last radio transmission 14 minutes after leaving the West German air base at Norvenich that he had run into bad weather.

"He was trying to get out of it by moving up. That was the last transmission," Anderson said today.

"In the course of doing so (climbing), the mishap aircraft did not come out from the top of the clouds and continued in a descent and ultimately crashed. We do not know why," he said.

Anderson said an Air Force investigation team was trying to determine the cause of the crash, but said the probe could take up to 30 days to complete.

He said the plane was fully loaded with 1,800 gallons of fuel.

Asked about eyewitness reports that one of the plane's two jet engines was on fire before it crashed, Anderson said: "Witnesses sometimes become confused." He also apologized for what he said was a delay in notifying local authorities that the aircraft was carrying ammunition.

"That is standard procedure to notify authorities as quickly as possible. We did have some delay and we regret that very much. We will investigate what the cause was," he said.

There are no plans to ground the A-10 aircraft unless investigators determine it had a technical problem, Anderson said.

Before Thursday's crash, 12 military accidents this year had claimed 95 lives in West Germany.

The U.S. Air Force said it was suspending all tactical training flights in Europe until Tuesday. The West German air force suspended low-level training flights until the end of the year and called on its allies to do the same.

Opposition political parties called for a ban on low-level flights and sharp cuts in air exercises.

Opposition to low-level flying grew in August when Italian stunt planes collided and crashed into a crowd of spectators at an air show at the U.S. Air Force Base in Ramstein. Seventy people were killed.

California Fire Razes Homes Near L.A., Forces 5,000 To Flee

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — A brushfire early today burned as many as a dozen homes and forced evacuations of up to 5,000 people, one day after fierce winds fanned flames that destroyed at least 22 homes and cut power to half a million people.

The fast-moving blaze raced across at least 200 acres in a four-to-six-square-mile area of Grenada Hills, an affluent residential area of the city about 25 miles north of downtown, said police Sgt. Doug Boka.

The fire, which burned four to 12 homes, was fanned by strong westerly Santa Ana winds, said Fire Department spokesman Jim Wells. No injuries were reported.

The hot, dry "devil winds" from the desert gusted to 69 mph Thursday, causing damage estimated at $10 million but no serious injuries, although some residents had to dash through flames to safety, officials said.

"We saw sparks, showers of sparks, like rain," said Ruben Cabadas, 18, recounting his family's flight from their Baldwin Park home on Thursday.

Hardest hit were the Los Angeles suburbs of Baldwin Park and La Verne, where fires blamed on wind-downed power lines destroyed at least 22 homes and damaged 12 others and five businesses.

The winds toppled at least a dozen tractor-trailers and a motor home on freeways obscured by blowing dirt and sand.

About 500,000 people were without power at various times. By nightfall Thursday, 30,800 remained in the dark in Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside and San Bernardino counties, utility officials said.

Trim Your Tree In Style

By Charlyne Varkonyi
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Hauling out the Christmas tree decorations used to be a trip down Memory Lane. A wooden sleigh ornament from our childhood, a fuzzy wool sheep from the vacation trip to New Zealand, a crystal reindeer from a long-gone lover. No one seemed to care if the tree matched the sofa or the rug. Eclectic was "in." A theme was something you wrote for English class.

Today "themes" are the thing. It's no longer enough to give shoppers a new twist on the old glass ball.

"Whatever the reasons for the appeal, we do know one thing — new young marrieds want their holiday decor to blend with the rest of their homes," according to "Selling Christmas Decorations," a trade journal for retail buyers and merchandising managers of Christmas trees and decorations.

"Manufacturers and importers in 1988 offer an abundance of simple looks, taken directly from the most popular home decorating schemes."

Consider the trees of '88:

More and more people are dreaming of a country Christmas to match their pine furniture and quilts. They search for their roots in "American folklore" with ornaments in tin, wood and pewter. Barnyard animals are everywhere.

Although the trend soothsayers predicted a loss of interest in the beautifully crafted Victorian theme, many store managers say they are still stocking and selling elegant pearl wreaths, lacy hearts and tapestry balls. New this year are elongated shapes, variegated colors, ribbon fans, lace-edged skirts and lots of porcelain.

Southwest decorations match the mauves and aqua colors of the desert. There are cactuses in terra cotta pots, wooden boots, jute-wrapped lambs.

The "Colonial Williamsburg" look stresses simple designs, sooty blues, tempered reds and deep greens.

Remember arguing over multicolored lights or white lights? Theme trees call for white lights that don't compete with the subtle color schemes. Sales of clear lights have grown from 10 percent to 45 percent of the market in the past 15 years, according to the National Ornament & Electric Lights Christmas Association, the trade group for manufacturers and importers of Christmas decorations.

We have come a long way from 130 years ago near Nuremberg, Germany, when craftsmen made the first blown-glass ornaments, which were hung by strings attached to small corks plugged into one end of each ball. By 1890, the glass blowers used molds to create every imaginable fruit and vegetable, dogs, cats, monkeys and bears. Today almost every type of material is used, from pearls to parchment to plastic.

"Everything has its day," says Connie Watson of Watson's Garden Center in Baltimore. "Trends have changed. I think more people are looking for something with a Victorian theme — small angels with pink, burgundy or mauve, flowers and fans.

"It used to be people wanted to

This year's trees are trimmed with country look, terra cotta or other ornaments

Thomas Forrest/The Daily Reflector

decorate their trees with a lot of mice, doggies, cats, bears and penguins. They all had their day in the sun. Some were briefer than others. We have seen a trend toward dresser ornaments in the past few years."

The nostalgia theme has spawned a couple of collectible items. Customers are calling for specific items of the lighted Dickens-style houses. Others are clamoring for the Byers' Choice Ltd. carolers — expensive dolls with faces molded and sculpted of special clay and dressed in velvets, wools, felts, lace and furs in colors and styles of the 19th century.

The job of gauging what will sell is difficult for Silk Greenhouse, a 57-store chain in 13 states.

"Last year, everything glittered," says owner Jere Bradwell from his Tampa, Fla., headquarters. "I don't think the industry has a single leader, but I do think it all has been very much affected recently by home furnishings colors."

Christmas Ornament Enjoys Trendy Status

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

That old favorite — the Christmas tree ornament — seems to be following the BMW, the Mercedes and the car phone as an item indispensable to trendy status.

To be trendy, your Christmas tree should resemble something between a fine arts craft shop and a museum. Don't hang that bauble unless it's a current collectible or a future antique.

Away with the flashy, bright and tacky little hang-ons in their flimsy boxes, the ones that used to get broken all the time. Out with the cute little hobby horses, plastic angels, paper chains and all the tinselly stuff of Christmas past! Your Christmas ornament, like everything else, is a possession today, often laid down in a velvet-lined box and emblazoned with a coronet or two, if not a royal warrant from Queen Elizabeth II.

Don't laugh; you might get one as a present during the holidays. Among the items most often seen this season are lavish glass ornaments for various parts of the Christmas tree. The great Irish crystal maker, Waterford, for instance, offers decorative glass disks dated 1988 for hanging on trees and a great spiked, globed tree-topper in the same glass.

At Macy's the ornaments were $30, the faceted glass ornaments for the tip of the tree, $65 each. In the old days you could get six fair-sized sparkling balls for 99 cents. Now a single astonisher is far more. Take the Berta Hummel glass ornament of two cheerful cherubs; the 1988 Hummel is going for $7.50 in shops here and there. This is about where the heirloom quality starts — witness a $6.50 silver-plated bell, dated 1988, marketed by the Miles Kimball catalog folks (41 W. Eighth Ave., Oshkosh, Wis. 54906). The same house ships a sports series featuring the logos of NBA and NFL teams emblazoned on the Christmas ball, in the team colors, $7.49 per ball. An elegant specimen in the Christmas ball line is this year's Lladro Christmas ball, a dated, blue-and-white treasure nearly 4 inches fat with bas-reliefs on seasonal themes ($60 from Brielle Galleries, 707 Union Ave., Brielle, N.J. 08730).

In a sense, the new look in ornaments harks back to the days a century ago and more, when such things were handcrafted. A specimen of such are the glittery handblown tree ornaments by Gerard Lavoie billed as the kind "grandmother used to have." The ethereal glass ornaments are hatched with threads of delicate glass strap work. A tree-topper is $20, while four balls are $30 from Gerard Originals, P.O. Box 531, Methuen, Mass. 01844-0631.

Lavoie reports that handblown strap work has a respectable ancestry, to say the least. The Babylonians knew something about it 4,000 years ago. Glass blowing, too, can claim to be the

No. 1 industry in America in point of time, having been started by Jamestown settlers in 1608, he says.

The specialty here is jewellike, beveled or engraved stars of intriguing shape, framed in leaded strips like stained-glass windows. "They catch the light and can shift random colors into a room," says designer Saul Farber. The bibelots run from $15 to $20, but the Farber shop has hundreds of other specimens of tree ornament.

Farber visits important Austrian markets and shops annually for new glass creations that he can add to his gallery. Most of the handcrafted items range from about $3.50 up to about $25.

Teachers Ask Clowns To Rescue

'Mimesolving' Helps Behavior

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BALTIMORE — When the youngsters at Downtown Baltimore Children's Center tease one another too much, when their silliness spreads faster than chicken pox, when a few children resort to hitting or biting to settle their disagreements, the teachers don't lecture, cajole or take away privileges.

They send in the clowns.

Not to laugh off behavioral problems, but to solve them or, better yet, to help the children solve them.

The clowns — teachers whom the children recognize behind their "white face" — act out the problem in mime, portraying it in a situation that the children can understand and letting them "write" a happy ending to the skit. The technique is called mimesolving, developed at Johns Hopkins University to give insight into undesirable behavior and how to change it.

Two or three clowns participate in a skit; a "facilitator," who is not a clown, stops the action to get the children involved.

For instance, if a group of children is having a problem with too much teasing, here is what might happen:

Portraying a child, Clown 1 builds with blocks while Clown 2, as another child, watches. Slowly, Clown 2 moves toward the other clown, making faces. Clown 1 ignores the other clown at first but gradually is distracted, looks hurt and begins to sulk. Then she looks sad and cries. Clown 2 continues teasing until Clown 1 looks angry and tries to hit Clown 2.

This is the peak of the conflict.

Now the children must finish the script by offering solutions. The facilitator, who has interrupted the action all along to ask questions such as "What do you think is happening?" and "How do you think the clowns are feeling?" will now ask "How do you think they can fix the problem?"

The clowns then take their cues from the youngsters, acting out the various proposed solutions until the children, with a little help from the facilitator, see one that really works.

The clowns are played by Nan Russell, a teacher at the downtown center; Margo Shayne, program director there, and Ann Scheck, director of Woods Memorial Child Development Center.

The three shared their technique recently with educators at the annual conference of the National Association for the Education of Young Children in Anaheim, Calif.

In mime, "we bypass the verbal, cognitive level and it hits them at an emotional level. The children are sitting on the edge of their chairs the whole time and, in this way, they're giving messages to themselves and alternative solutions are evolving in their own mind," explained Russell, who developed the technique with Lee Richmond and Lenore Lynch at Hopkins and refined it with patients at The Kennedy Institute for sick and disabled children.

Through the mimes' actions the children are able to bring their own thoughts and ideas to the situation.

The nature of the clown helps, too. "They don't have a sex ... they don't have an age ... so they're kind of ambiguous," said Shayne. "Each person in the audience can see what's going on from his perspective. They can overlay their feelings, their emotions and their experiences on what the clown is doing."

"And, of course, they love the clowns," said Russell, who is almost mystical about clowns and their power to draw people out.

"The children identify with us much more strongly than with puppets," another tool often used to portray behavioral problems to children, she added.

In preschool, mimesolving is used to attack behavioral, rather than psychological, problems and to address situations common to many children in a classroom.

The long-term effects of all this clowning around are unknown, but for the short haul, mimesolving is effective in changing young children's behavior, the educators say.

"The next day or the day after, if some children are in some kind of tension, someone will come up and say 'remember the clowns.' ... And they'll talk about it months later," said Russell.

"It's just simply a wonderful way of teaching children to teach themselves. It's a pretty magic thing."

Abby Gives Her Annual Holiday Shopping Advice

Dear Readers: Well are the Christmases getting closer together or does it just seem that way? It's time to start preparing for the holidays again, so do yourselves a favor and do your Christmas shopping now.

Here's my annual — slightly revised — column on holiday shopping.

If you're wondering what to give Aunt Olivia or Grandpa, who doesn't go out much, let me tell you what not to give them:

Forget dusting powder, aftershave and cologne. (They probably have several unopened boxes gathering dust on their closet shelves.)

Grandpa doesn't need another necktie, and Aunt Sylvia doesn't really want any more brooches, necklaces, bracelets or earrings.

With the price of groceries so high, older folks who live alone on a fixed income would be delighted to receive a basket of goodies. Include small cans of salmon, chicken, ham, tuna, fruit, instant coffee, tea bags, crackers, cookies and instant soup mixes.

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

Older people who live in confined quarters do not need more "things." Don't send music boxes, statuettes or other bric-a-brac.

A truly thoughtful gift: postcards and some lined stationery with envelopes and a generous supply of postage stamps. (Enclose some felt-tip pens, too.)

A handy gift: an assortment of greeting cards for all occasions, so that they, too, can send birthday, anniversary, graduation, get-well and condolence cards to others.

Don't give a gift of clothing unless you're absolutely sure the size is right

If you're tempted to pass along a scarf, purse, wallet or some little doodad you received three Christmases ago, please don't; the recipient will probably find it just as useless as you did. (Besides, you might get it back the year after next.)

If someone on your gift list is living on a pension, a check for any amount would be far more appreciated than some useless little trinket. Another thoughtful gift would be a year's subscription to a newspaper or magazine you are sure he or she will enjoy.

If you buy a gift on sale, be sure it's appropriate, since if the recipient tries to exchange it, he will be told, "Sorry, sale merchandise is not returnable."

Never give a pet to anyone unless you're absolutely sure a pet is wanted and will be properly cared for. And if you want to delight someone who considers his pet a "member of the family," include a tin or two of cat or dog food for the pet.

Don't give wine or liquor unless you're sure the recipients imbibe. Candy, nuts and fruitcake make wonderful gifts for those who aren't counting calories, but please have compassion for those who are, and lead them not into temptation. Also remember that many older people have difficulty chewing hard candies and nuts.

Instead of giving someone a gift with permission to "take it back and exchange it if it's not what you want," save yourself (and them) time and effort by giving gift certificates in the first place. (P.S. A cash gift is always appreciated.)

For those who maintain their own homes and apartments, consider a gift certificate for other types of service needed — window washing and rug cleaning. And don't forget certificates for the barber shop, beauty parlor, taxi rides or dinner out. And (don't laugh) a trip to the podiatrist!

Holiday time can be depressing for people who are alone, so if you know someone who might be alone and lonely, give him (or her) the best gift of all — an invitation to have a holiday meal with you and your family. Loneliness is the ultimate poverty. — Love, Abby

Bridal Shortage Faces Japan State-Run Agencies Search For Eligible Women

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

TOKYO — Arranged marriages, once the traditional form of match-making here, are largely a thing of the past in modern Japan, where commercial and state-run matrimonial agencies have mushroomed to fill the void.

Since the end of World War II many young Japanese have left their homes in rural areas to seek a better life in the big cities where the nation's industry is based, breaking up the old family structures.

Today young Japanese women of marriageable age appear to be in an enviable position. Statistics show that men searching for brides far outnumber females who consult a marriage bureau.

The agencies spare no effort to attract young women. However, the female clients, when and if they show up, are hard to please.

Nearly all women want their future husbands to have a university degree, a promising career and a high salary. They look for a man with a "trendy" profession such as a job with a television station, an advertising firm, in architecture or science.

Preferably he should be able to take his wife with him when traveling abroad on business.

Even a man who meets all these requirements might find that he stands little chance. Many confident young women categorically rule out marriage with a single or eldest son.

They all know that if they marry a sole or eldest son, they probably will have to move in with their parents-in-law once their future husband's father retires. Pensions in general are too low for the elderly to maintain a separate household.

Opinion polls show that women are almost exclusively guided by economic considerations in their choice of a partner.

"Personality and financial situation," "Health and financial situation" and "Health and family situation" were the criteria mentioned most often by female students.

Male students, the survey showed, wanted above all a pretty woman. The three most often listed expectations were "Personality and appearance," "Appearance and personality" and "Appearance and health."

Japan's young blue-collar workers find it much more difficult to get themselves a nice girl than white-collar workers, since one in three office employees has a university degree.

Most male factory workers toil with other males by day and at night sleep in company-owned hostels for male workers.

On Saturdays busloads of workers arrive in the city centers, where the men pour into the bars to spend their money on drink while they cast amorous glances at the bar maids. But that's not the way to find a bride.

Search For Perfect Poppers Taught Them Secrets

The Associated Press

Jim Beebe watches a machine filter out the best corn

Beebe Family Treats Corn With Kid Gloves

By Robert Lee Zimmer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CISSNA PARK, Ill. — A half-century search for perfect poppers taught Jim Beebe's family a few gourmet secrets.

At the Beebe farm, a ring of trees shields bins of popcorn from scorching sun and chilling wind. A bed of air floats the best kernels away from the chaff, and a popping tube confirms that virtually every kernel will explode into one of the nation's favorite snacks.

"Quality control is our No. 1 job around here," said Beebe, who sends slightly imperfect popcorn to feed a cousin's hogs. "We take care of our popcorn and don't abuse it."

Beebe's parents started the business in 1936. After they died, his sister and brother-in-law joined him in 1985 to create Beebe-Stevenson, which now grows about 700,000 bushels of popcorn a year. The popcorn is sold in containers ranging from 3.5-ounce microwave packages to 50-pound bags. It is marketed in independent grocery stores, at school ballgames, church events, and as a promotional gift used by businesses.

Beebe, 50, gave up a Danville teaching position and returned in August to manage the business.

He plans to concentrate distribution on an area within 50 miles of this small east-central Illinois community.

New products, new packaging and new customers are part of Beebe's plan to boost sales in a highly competitive business.

Illinois farmers harvested about 36,000 acres of popcorn last year, said to Deirdre Flynn of the Popcorn Institute. The state is generally second or third to the nation's popcorn leader, Indiana.

The United States supplies 90 percent of the world's popcorn, and consumes 11.9 billion quarts of popcorn a year. The industry has been growing from 4 percent to 6 percent a year.

"It's a good-for-you snack," Flynn said. "There is a lot of emphasis now on healthy eating and popcorn is high in fiber and carbohydrate and low in calories if you don't just smother it in butter."

Beebe-Stevenson has had 200 to 300 acres of popcorn in its crop rotation in recent years, some grown on contract by other farmers in Illinois and Indiana. Once a delicate plant, hybrid seed now has made popcorn strong and efficient.

"We harvest it on the cob so we keep it in God's wrapper," Beebe said.

It is dried without artificial heat to prevent damage, then hand shelled the following spring. The corn floats over a table on air, with the perfect kernels moving to one side and on to packages.

Beebe said many long-time customers still prefer to buy popcorn in bulk, at a cost of 30 cents a pound for 50-pound bags.

But the microwave market is the place for growth. The price is at least 10 times higher per pound, mainly because of hand labor — a worker scoops kernels into a microwave bag, adds a pinch of salt and a squirt of soybean oil and butter flavor.

Scientists Find Early Use Of Fire

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Scientists say they have found the earliest direct evidence for use of fire by ape-men or early humans, bone fragments that were burned as long as 1.5 million years ago.

Fires were apparently a regular event in the South African cave where the fragments were found, although it is unclear whether they were for cooking, warmth or scaring predators, scientists said.

"We're not absolutely certain those bones were there (in fire) because they were food remains," said researcher Andrew Sillen. "They could have been thrown into the fire as kind of a refuse heap."

Sillen, of the University of Cape Town in South Africa, and C.K. Brain of the Transvaal Museum in Pretoria, South Africa, describe their analysis in today's issue of the British journal Nature.

The fires may have been set by ancestors of humans called Homo erectus, or by ape-men called Australopithecus robustus, which are not direct human ancestors, they wrote.

In an interview, Sillen said the bone fragments could be 1 million to 1.5 million years old, but most likely they are 1.2 million years old.

Previous research suggests fire was being used in Kenya a bit more recently than 1.4 million years ago, a date many experts accept but with some hesitancy, said Eric Delson, professor of anthropology at Lehman College of the City University of New York.

That research is supported by indirect evidence, magnetic irregularities in the ground thought caused by ancient fire on the surface, he said in a telephone interview.

The evidence from the new study is "certainly the strongest to date in favor of early human-controlled fire," Delson said.

Other research suggests fire was used slightly less than 500,000 years ago in Hungary, France and China, and certainly less than 150,000 years ago in Africa and Europe, he said.

In the new work, researchers used bones recovered from South Africa's Swartkrans cave, well-known for providing remains of Homo erectus and the ape-man robustus.

To make sure they could identify signs of ancient burning, researchers took a fresh leg bone from a South African antelope called a hartebeest, and heated bone slices to different temperatures.

Charlotte Residents Returning To School To Work For Advanced Business Degrees

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — While much of Charlotte went shopping the day after Thanksgiving, David Bach spent his day off working on a paper for his UNC Charlotte finance class.

Bach, a systems analyst for Rexham Corp., decided two years ago to return to school to get his MBA.

"I guess it's a matter of professional growth as well as personal growth," he says. "I enjoy learning and enjoy being challenged, and I just saw this as a way to benefit personally — and hopefully professionally."

Lots of people have the same idea. In the Charlotte area, more schools than ever — UNC Charlotte, Winthrop, Queens and Pfeiffer colleges — are offering master's degrees in business administration. Winthrop College in Rock Hill, S.C., even has two kinds.

And more students than ever are working toward their degrees.

"We're just burgeoning here," says Charles Spruill, director of Pfeiffer College's Charlotte branch. "We're splitting classes, we have so many MBA students."

Pfeiffer's Charlotte branch began its MBA program in 1985 with hopes of having an enrollment of 80 in four years. It topped 80 in its second year. The program now has 118 students.

The other three colleges aren't growing so quickly, but officials from those schools say their programs are about as large as desired.

In all four Charlotte programs, enrollment consists mostly of business people returning to school part time.

Graduates of the nation's top graduate business schools often land positions paying $40,000 or $50,000. But Charlotte's part-time MBA students are often looking simply to move up a rung on their company's ladder.

The addition of those part-time students in Charlotte and across the nation means the number of MBA degrees awarded annually has swelled.

In 1980, 55,148 were awarded in the United States. By 1986, the total was 67,137, according to the St. Louis-based American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business.

Why is the MBA so coveted? "The MBA has always been considered a ticket to better things," says George McGuire, director of Winthrop's MBA programs. Bach believes the degree has become a hot ticket as businesses strive to be more competitive. MBAs help make better managers. And good management means better businesses.

Yet the MBA hasn't become a prerequisite to upper management, says Bob Dillon, Duke Power's director of human resources planning, staffing and development.

"We base decisions on a broad variety of things," he says. But it's true, he said, that employees with MBAs usually have "a little broader background, especially in finance."

As the demand for MBAs has soared in the past 15 years, so has the number of U.S. colleges offering the degree — almost 700, up from 389 in 1974.

Animators Find Hope In Success Of 'Oliver,' 'The Land Before Time'

By Bob Thomas
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The best news for fans of animated movies came with last week's box-office report which showed big grosses for "The Land Before Time" and "Oliver and Company."

Revival of animation, the most tedious and expensive kind of filmmaking, has been predicted every few years. Until recently, though, economics made animation features risky. But in their first weekend "The Land Before Time" topped all releases with $7.5 million in 1,395 theaters ($5,395 average), and "Oliver and Company" in a smaller release of 952 theaters scored no. 4 with $4 million ($4,226 average).

Those are big numbers, and they're likely to grow through the holiday season. That's encouraging for the animation trade, which has been hampered not only by the heavy expense of production but the nature of the audience.

"A large number of tickets we sell go for a lower admission price," said Don Bluth, who produced "The Land Before Time."

"If we make a boffo with a picture, it's because we sold more tickets," Bluth, who formerly worked for the Disney Co., cautiously predicts a renaissance of animation.

Walt Disney Pictures, which produced "Oliver and Company," has pumped up its animation department and is starting up an additional facility at the Disney-MGM studio tour in Florida. Roy E. Disney, nephew of Walt, is largely responsible for the revival. Four years ago when Roy helped create a new management at Disney, the outlook was dismal.

"Animation was dying around here," he said in an interview at his studio office. "There had been 10 years of a kind of lack of faith in it, and a lack of direction to it. There were an awful lot of discouraged artists working here."

"We were finishing up 'The Black Cauldron,' which had been an enormous seven-year effort, with the kind of strange idea of doing an epic or making a masterpiece and not having any strong sense of what the story was. There were a lot of people who thought we just weren't going forward with the animation department. There was even talk of getting out of the movie business entirely."

Disney was faced with the task of educating new company heads, who were trained in live-action films, to the uniqueness of the animation process.

"First of all, it's a matter of time; 'Oliver,' for example, took four years to complete," he said. His campaign was aided by having "The Great Mouse Detective" in good story form. When the movie proved a hit, all doubts were erased.

"Oliver and Company" resulted from a "Gong Show" session in which 20 film executives appeared with at least three story ideas. Most were shot down, but an updated "Oliver Twist" survived. Members of Fagin's gang became dogs, as was the newcomer, Oliver. But during story development Oliver became a kitten.

The young animators worked at a fast clip, inspired by the casting of the voices, including Bette Midler, Billy Joel, Dom DeLuise and Robert Loggia. Many of the new artists have come from the Disney-endowed California Institute of the Arts, but Disney observed that more schools are teaching animation as an art.

The studio won't reveal the cost of "Oliver and Company," but Disney said it was in the middle range for an animated feature (estimate: $18 million). Computers will increasingly relieve some of the tedium of inking and painting, he said, helping to bring down expenses.

"But the animation of a character, hand-drawn in pencil I think will never change," he said.

Bluth, who produced "The Land Before Time" for $12 million, found a way to reduce animation expense: He moved his entire studio to Ireland because of the labor cost of animation. The Irish government offered a 10-year commitment for tax breaks, grants for Irish artists who would be trained and access to bank loans, he said.

Speedy Alka-Seltzer And Marlboro Man Become Museum Relics At Smithsonian

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Speedy Alka-Seltzer, the Marlboro Man and the Pepsi Generation have earned a permanent place in advertising lore. Now they're about to get a permanent place in the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History.

The museum this week will formally establish the Center for Advertising History to administer its massive collection of TV commercials, print ads and assorted marketing memorabilia. Unlike the American Advertising Museum in Portland, Ore., the center's collection will be available only to researchers and won't be open to the general public. Its primary purpose will be to serve as a resource for research into advertising and its impact on business, culture and consumer behavior.

"This recognizes that advertising has had a central and permanent impact on the history of this country," said Douglas E. Evelyn, deputy director of the museum. "It helps us understand ... the material culture of American society."

Like advertising itself, the center is a kind of marketing concept in its own right. Since 1984, historians in the museum's archive center have collected material for a series of special projects that focused on the development of ad campaigns for Alka-Seltzer, Pepsi-Cola, Marlboro cigarettes and Federal Express. A case study of Campbell Soup's campaigns is currently under way.

The archives also contain a 400,000-piece collection of tear sheets from the NW Ayer ad agency and the million-piece Warshaw Collection of "business ephemera" acquired by the Smithsonian in the 1960s. Beyond this, however, research and collecting efforts have been limited, said Stacy Flaherty, one of three historians who will direct the center. By establishing the center, the museum hopes to achieve a higher profile among scholars, collectors and fund-raising sources, said officials, who estimated that $75,000 to $150,000 will be needed annually from private sources to operate the center.

To help raise funds, the museum also will announce this week the formation of a 12-member advisory board composed of academics and industry executives, including Alex Kroll, chief executive of Young & Rubicam, the largest U.S. ad agency, and Earle Palmer Brown, founder of the Washington area's biggest agency. With added funding, Flaherty said she hopes to mount public exhibits and education programs.

Documentary Of Callas' Life Has The Stuff Of Melodrama

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

NEW YORK — It is difficult not to view Maria Callas' life as high melodrama or Greek tragedy, says John Ardoin, executive producer of "Maria Callas: An Operatic Biography."

The documentary about the great soprano airs tonight on PBS as part of the "Great Performances" series. Callas, who died in 1977 at age 53, was famed for her voice and her acting, for reviving the bel canto repertoire in the 20th century, for being a superstar before the word was invented, for her liaison with Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis.

"No one ever had so much and wound up with so little," said Ardoin. "It's hard not to see it as the gods taking away all they've given."

The TV show includes Callas singing and talking and others talking about her.

Ardoin says public interest in Callas remains high. "A lot of people remember her still. A big number are hooked on her because a friend played them a record which reached out and grabbed their attention and won't let them go."

Ardoin had been a friend of Callas since 1964. His fourth book about her, focusing on her master classes at the Juilliard School, is scheduled to be published this month. He says Maria Callas was two people, Maria the person and Callas the diva.

"It was like two people fighting for some kind of supremacy in this body, one always trying to dominate the other," he said.

"It's not typical. Most singers have a pretty good sense of identity. I've never encountered anyone else who had such a terrible battle between the person and the persona. Maybe Marilyn Monroe.

"Maria spent most of her time away from the stage trying to understand Callas. She knew she had a tremendous effect on people; she never really could understand why.

"It was just chemistry — which she had in spades.

"On stage, when she did something, it was in such perfect sync with the music, it knocked the socks off of you. She physically was the music. Whether you realized what was happening or not, something told you it was right."

Ardoin, music critic for The Dallas Morning News, wrote the script for a 1978 documentary on PBS, "Callas," which emphasized her art.

This new documentary, he says, emphasizes her as a woman.

"Director Tony Palmer had an idea which I think was wonderful. He was more interested in the quality of this life. I helped him with interviews and background material. A lot of her voice speaking on the soundtrack came from interviews I had with Maria."

Ardoin went through his 40 hours of taped Callas interviews for a four-hour documentary that will air on National Public Radio in January.

Her best recordings, he believes, are "Lucia di Lammermoor" in Berlin, "Medea" in Dallas, "La Sonnambula" in Cologne and "La Traviata" in London, all live performances. Ardoin says, "She had that extra additive of the audience inspiration of the moment."

Suit And Tie Follow His Every Role

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON (AP) — Edward Herrmann, America's favorite acting preppy, is once again wearing a suit and tie onstage, but that's an occupational hazard when you're thin and well-educated and take naturally to the look.

"I can wear a suit; it's the kiss of death," joked Herrmann, who dons one nightly opposite Alec Guinness in Lee Blessing's two-character play "A Walk in the Woods," now at the Comedy Theater.

He plays an American arms negotiator named Honeyman strolling through the woods of Geneva enmeshed in talks with his Soviet counterpart, Andrey Botvinnik, played by Guinness.

Herrmann says he accepted the role solely for the chance of acting opposite the great Guinness, having turned down offers to do it at the Yale Repertory Theater in New Haven, and on Broadway last February.

"When I heard Sir Alec wanted to do it, it was something I wanted to put my hat in the ring for," said Herrmann. "The way Alec does it, it's just a charmer."

Robert Prosky and Sam Waterston performed "A Walk in the Woods" for four months in New York, where it received a Tony nomination for best play. The British production, directed by Ronald Eyre, received mixed reviews for the writing but near-raves for the stars. Herrmann is contracted for six months plus a British tour if Guinness is willing.

Albums Reflect Bangles' Growth

By David Bauder
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Bangle Susanna Hoff's mom invoked the dreaded "M-word" when her daughter recently played her group's latest album, "Everything," for her.

"She thought it as more sophisticated and mature," than the band's first two records, Hoff said.

Maturity may be a dirty word for many rockers — and Hoff quickly disavowed her mother's language — but it's an apt description for both the record's sound and the approach the Bangles took in recording their first album in almost three years.

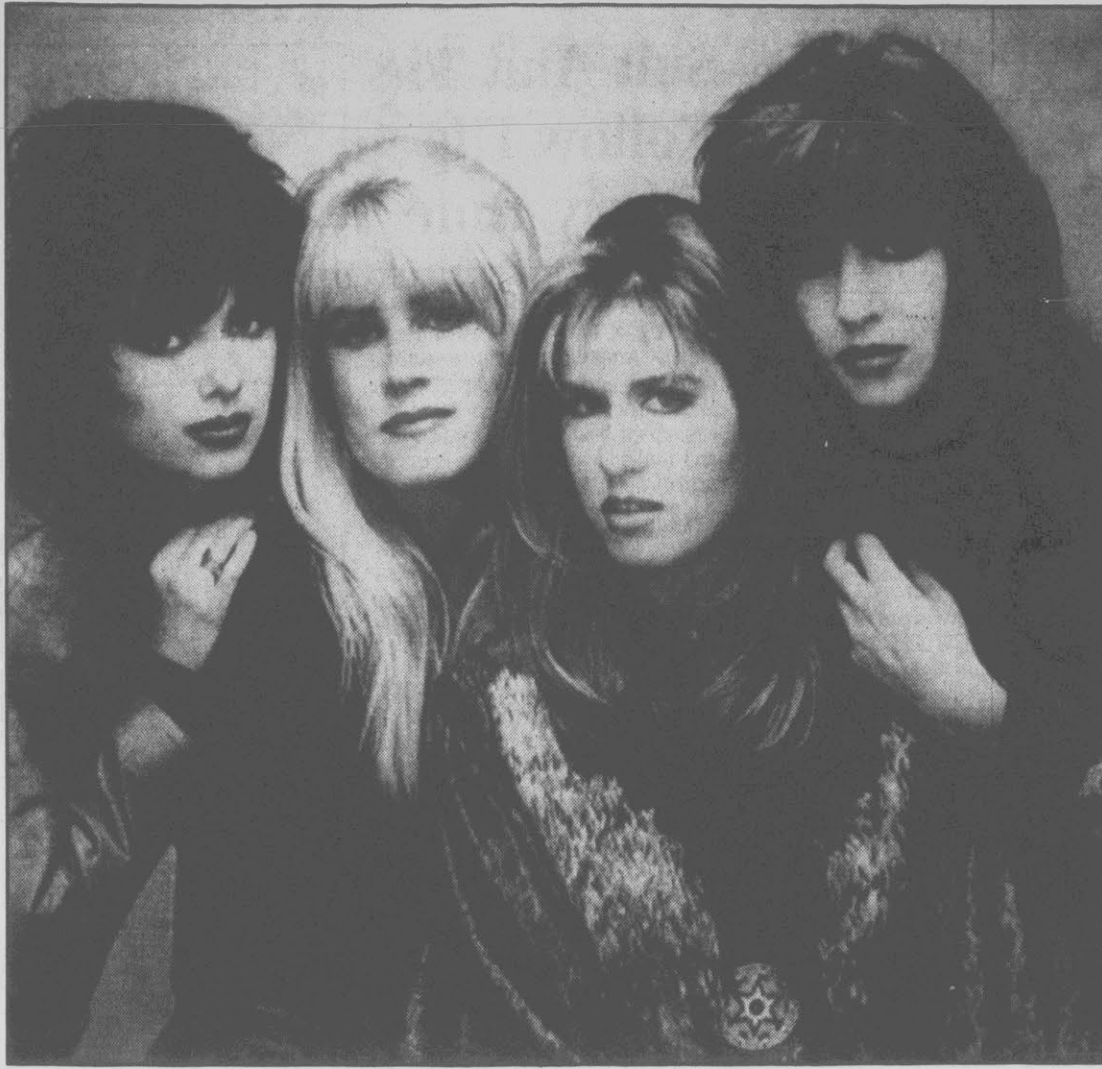

After two LPs and seemingly endless rounds of touring, the Bangles say they finally feel comfortable with their craft.

"We're learning to trust ourselves more, to be more emotional in our performance," said bass player Michael Steele. "I don't really know if you can call it maturity. It's more of an artistic growth."

The four women of the Bangles, who pay homage to classic bands of the 1960s with their sunny melodies and intricate harmonies, became stars with such hits as "Walk Like an Egyptian," and the Prince tune, "Manic Monday," from the 1986 LP, "Different Light."

The Bangles are thankful for their success, but said they needed to take greater control over their music.

Producer David Kahne, whose

relationship with the band was stormy at best, was replaced by Davitt Sigerson. Hoff, Steele and sisters Vicki and Debbi Peterson, who once readily accepted contributions from outside songwriters, each wrote or co-wrote all of the new album's 13 songs.

When all four members of a band write songs, they notice when their biggest hits are written by someone else. "Walk Like an Egyptian" was written by Liam Sternberg, "If She Knew What She Wants" is a Jules Shear song and the Bangles hit the Top 10 with a cover of Paul Simon's "Hazy Shade of Winter."

"It was a reaction to the success of 'Different Light' that made us determined to write as many songs as we could come up with — strong stuff that we could feel was emotionally attached to us," Steele said. "We had a strange, slight feeling of distance from 'Different Light.'"

The flip side to trusting your own instincts, of course, is getting burned if the public rejects you. Some critics have grumbled that "Everything" sounds overproduced and the songs don't sparkle. But the public's responding to the first single, a Hoff rocker called "In Your Room," which is moving swiftly up the charts.

The Bangles say they liked the songs they wrote for this album so much they couldn't bear to throw any away. Hoff said it costs the band money to pack the record with 13 songs instead of the traditional 10.

"The thought of not having those extra three tracks on the record just to save money makes no sense to me," Hoff said. "I'd rather put out a record that we truly love."

"That's why we got into it in the first place," Steele said. "We're really oriented toward the music."

"I got into it because of the fashion," Hoff said, lampooning her colleague's cliché.

"I do it for the boys," Steele shot back.

They may joke about it, but the Bangles say they're tired of defending themselves against people who denigrate their musical ability because they're women.

The Bangles knew Sigerson, who's produced Rickie Lee Jones and David & David, through mutual friends.

"We liked Davitt immediately," Hoff said. "He's been a songwriter and he's from that orientation. We felt more comfortable with someone we could talk to about our songs."

Those songs are generally the typical pop music fare of love won and lost, with a few twists and turns. In "Glitter Years," Steele reminisces about the mid-'70s California rock scene and laments some of its drug casualties. In the ballad "Eternal Flame," Hoff said she used Roy Orbison and Patsy Cline as role models.

"We just sort of let each song lead us down whatever path it would lead us, like putting on a blindfold and just going," Hoff said. "There's no formula. I wish sometimes there was. Everytime I write something I rewrite it a billion times."

Hoff said the Bangles feel grateful to get their songs on the radio, since the singles charts are dominated by young heavy metal bands and dance music.

"We grew up hearing the Byrds and Beatles, Jimi Hendrix and the Doors on the radio," Steele said. "Radio to us has never been a plastic sellout."

 There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads to their hands appearing in bridge columns. This deal, featuring veteran internationalist Sidney Lazard of New Orleans in the West seat, cropped up in a national team championship.

South's jump to two spades in response to his partner's takeout double was a distinct stretch even though the bid is only invitational, not forcing. Lazard tried to jam the auction with his jump to five diamonds, but there was no denying North.

We have often featured this type of hand where West has led a low card away from his honors to obtain a ruff. If that was necessary here, however, it would be because either declarer or dummy held a singleton diamond (by no means a sure thing), and West would have to find his partner with a trick if the contract were to be defeated. But if his partner did have a defensive trick, an underlead of the diamond honors could give declarer an unexpected trick and his contract.

Therefore, West elected to make the normal lead of the king of diamonds. He was unhappy both at the sight of dummy and the fact that his partner began an echo to show a doubleton by dropping his jack. From the cards in dummy, it was obvious that East could not have anything resembling a solid defensive trick. Desperate measures were called for.

At trick two West led the three of diamonds! He was lucky—East held the seven of diamonds. When that card won the trick, East had no difficulty in working out what his partner wanted. His club return and the resulting ruff netted the defenders a total of three tricks—just enough to beat the hand.

Uris' Book, 'Mitla Pass,' Is Painful And Personal

By HILLEL ITALIE
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Leon Uris has based much of his work on historical events. In Mitla Pass, the history is his own.

Working for a legacy to leave to his family and my grandchildren, said Uris, the 64-year-old author of such best sellers as Exodus and QB VII.

Mitla Pass (Doubleday, $19.95), which closely follows the lives of Uris and his family, begins in Israel in 1956 during the time of the Suez Canal crisis and centers on the experiences of the author's alter ego, Gideon Zadok, a writer covering the incident. The novel then traces Zadok's ancestry back to the 1880s, allowing various relatives to tell their stories.

Uris lives in Aspen, Colo., with his third wife, Jill, and hopes the book will bring him closer to their two children.

"I wanted to leave them with a story of what their old man did and let them know he was not infallible. ... You spend the second half of your life getting over your first half," he said.

"I want them to learn that their daddy gets frightened. That he makes mistakes. I wanted to humanize the relationship very early."

Uris quickly points to his own experience. In Mitla Pass, the writer had difficulties with both parents.

"Those relationships took me 60 years to get some understanding — their relationship with me that hurt me a great deal, brought me a great deal of pain as a child. What I long for is a better relationship with my own children."

Like Zadok, Uris was born in Baltimore and spent several years growing up in Norfolk, Va. His father, Wolf William, was a paper hanger and storekeeper. Uris remembered him as an unhappy man.

"I think his personality was formed by the harsh realities of being a Jew in Czarist Russia," he said. "He was basically a failure. He went from failure to failure. I think failure formed his character, made him bitter."

"I think I can say without hesitation that from earliest memory I was determined not to be a failure."

Uris credits his mother, Anna, with teaching him an appreciation of the arts, but says they did not get along.

"Her life was such that there was a heavy distrust of men, in large part because of a very cruel father. We were essentially disinterested in each other. She was inside of her own head there somewhere."

Uris struggled to establish his own independence and World War II provided the perfect opportunity.

"All societies that I know of are shaped by macho, the need of a man to be macho," said Uris, who served as a marine. "There's no better proving ground than a war. The war came along at a time when I needed to go war. My time had run out at being at home. The war worked into my life."

After the war, he began submitting articles to magazines and finally had a piece, "The All American Razzmatazz," published in the January 1951 issue of "Esquire."

His first novel, Battle Cry, a story about the Marine Corps, was released in 1953 and made into a film. Two years later, he came out with The Angry Hills, a spy novel, and in 1956, traveled to Israel to begin research on Exodus, his most famous work. The novel, which depicted the history of European Jewry from the turn of the century to the establishment of Israel, was released in 1958 and sold millions of copies.

"Exodus has been the Bible of the Jewish dissident movement in Russia," Uris said. "It's referred to as 'The Book.'"

Uris has also written about the Warsaw Ghetto resistance in Mitla Pass, post-World War II Germany in Armageddon and the Cuban missile crisis in Topaz. For Trinity, the story of three Irish families from the mid-19th century to the Easter Rising of 1916, Uris was given the Irish Institute's John F. Kennedy Award in 1976.

But now the author wants to deal with more personal matters.

"My motivation is to be on a one-and-one basis with my readers. To say, 'Look, I'm old enough and wise enough to work in this area of human relationships.' This is what the world's all about, other people," he said.

Uris said researching Mitla Pass made him see himself in an entirely different way. "I used to think of myself as a very sad little Jewish boy, isolated in a Southern town, undersized, asthmatic."

"When I read all my correspondence again, I realized I was a hustler," he said. "I was tough. I used everything to my advantage. I could be very ruthless. I hurt a lot of people on the way up."

Now, he said, smiling, "I'm mellowed out."

To research Mitla Pass, Uris pored through 100,000 pieces of correspondence, a process that was physically and emotionally exhausting.

"It was painful. I would get to my office at noon and be dead asleep on my couch at 2. I was so depressed. This book drained me."

Yet once he began writing Mitla Pass, the words came easily.

"So much was stored up for so long that I almost set the typewriter on automatic," Uris said. "It's a wild structure but it's the way I wrote the first time around."

His books are usually enormous in scope, covering extensive periods of time and requiring painstaking research. He has been criticized for an overblown writing style and for making his characters one-dimensional.

But readers have been unable to resist his epic tales.

"I have a good relationship with my readers," Uris said. "If you haven't anything to say, you sit down and shut up. I feel I have something to say that has value."
