Rescue workers search through wreckage of train in London

Trains Collide In London At Least 42 Reported Dead, Over 100 Hurt

By Ben Dobbin
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Three trains collided in south London at the height of this morning's rush hour, killing at least 42 people and injuring more than 100 in a vast tangle of crushed metal, the London Ambulance Service said.

A spokeswoman for the ambulance service, requesting anonymity, said 42 bodies were accounted for and "we are expecting to find more bodies."

She said 115 passengers were hospitalized, 30 with serious injuries, and others were treated where they lay on the ground and in the wreckage. Other ambulance service spokesmen said some people had to have limbs amputated to extricate them from the wreckage.

The British Transport Police, a law enforcement unit controlled by state-owned British Rail, said 53 people died in the crash. But ambulance spokesmen and fire officials at the scene said they could not confirm the transport police figure.

Lou Gill, the Fire Brigade's chief divisional officer, said all survivors had been removed about five hours after the crash near busy Clapham Junction just before 8 a.m. But he said he feared that when the mangled wreckage was finally cleared "there may be further bodies underneath."

Rescue workers used metal cutters to pry open rail cars strewn like matchwood across the tracks. Scores of people suffered minor injuries and were treated on the scene.

Transport Police spokesman Jim Rowe said at the scene that about 1,500 people were aboard the 20 passenger carriages involved.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher came out of a meeting in her Cabinet room and told reporters she was "grief-stricken."

Hope Fades For Finding More Survivors; Relief Plane Down

By Mark J. Porubcansky
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

YEREVAN, U.S.S.R. — Official estimates put the death toll from the Armenian earthquake at up to 60,000 today, and hopes waned that any more survivors would be found. A second relief plane crashed near the Armenian capital, killing seven people.

Renewed political trouble broke out, with Armenian activists reporting clashes with troops over the arrest of several nationalist leaders.

Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, after touring the disaster area, accused "provocateurs" of using the consequences of last week's earthquake to create instability and insisted, "They must be stopped."

One Armenian activist who avoided arrest, Raphael Popoyan, said by telephone today that three demonstrations were staged Sunday in the Armenian capital of Yerevan.

He said all were protesting the arrest of leaders of a committee that has spearheaded a drive to annex Nagorno-Karabakh, a predominantly Armenian enclave in Azerbaijan. In one demonstration, troops and demonstrators began fighting, and several were wounded on both sides, Popoyan said.

An editor at Armenpress, the Armenian news agency, confirmed there was violence at one demonstration but said the incident did not appear serious. The editor, who spoke on condition of anonymity, acknowledged soldiers fired several warning shots to break up the protest. He confirmed that police detained several leaders of the Nagorno-Karabakh Committee on Saturday.

A dozen tanks were parked in Yerevan's central square Sunday night.

Before dawn today, a Yugoslav military plane crashed while trying to land at Yerevan airport with medical supplies — the second crash of a relief plane in as many days. On Sunday, a Soviet military transport plane crashed as it approached the airport at Leninakan, a city hard hit by Wednesday's quake. Seventy-eight people died.

All seven crew members aboard the AN-12 cargo plane died in today's crash, First Deputy Aviation Minister Boris Banyukov said.

Local reporters said the plane crashed at 4 a.m. because the pilot mistook a well-lit highway for a runway.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the Geneva-based League of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies said in Yerevan there was little hope more survivors would be found in the rubble piled high in several Armenian cities, including Leninakan, near the quake's epicenter, and Spitak, which was virtually wiped out.

The spokesman, George Reid, said only people trapped who managed to find water and had an air supply would survive.

Reid quoted reports that only 150 people survived in Spitak, where some 25,000 people lived before the quake. Other reports said only 10 percent of the population remained.

An Associated Press reporter visiting Spitak found a nearly deserted wasteland. She said only a few hundred residents remained.

Forecasters Say Snow Likely

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A winter storm watch has been posted for much of eastern North Carolina for tonight and Tuesday, and forecasters said the storm could bring that part of the state its first significant snow of the season.

"I think there's going to be some (snow), but it should be primarily an eastern North Carolina situation," said Mike Sabones at the weather service office at Raleigh-Durham International Airport. "It could be mixed with rain closer to the coast."

The watch area includes all of the coastal plain and all coastal areas, including the Outer Banks.

Sabones would not predict how much snow the state might get tonight or Tuesday.

"The amount of snow at this time is uncertain but significant amounts are expected," forecasters at the National Weather Service said in a written statement. "This storm has the potential to be a large snow producer especially since the storm may be a slow mover and intensify while tracking up the North Carolina coast."

"... The threat of high winds and coastal flooding in addition to heavy precipitation will make this situation potentially dangerous for people at the coast Monday night and Tuesday," the weather service said.

After low temperatures that dipped into the teens and 20s Sunday night, temperatures were expected to remain at or below freezing across the state Monday.

Study: Non-Nursing Jobs Burden Nurses

By Jerry Estill
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The solution to the nursing shortage plaguing many U.S. hospitals lies not just in higher pay, but also in letting nurses be nurses once again, a federal commission said today.

A major problem, the commission report said, is that hospitals have laid off 100,000 non-nursing employees over the past five years at the same time that sicker patients are being hospitalized.

Outpatient treatment is now more likely for the less seriously ill, leaving hospitals with the most difficult cases. Nurses, meanwhile, find themselves burdened with increasing amounts of non-nursing duties, the report said.

"With increasing frequency, nurses provide services that should be carried out by other health care workers," said the 19-member commission convened by the Department of Health and Human Services.

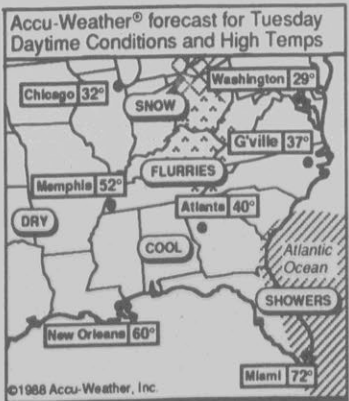

The panel said nurses not only are being asked to render more care typically carried out by higher-priced personnel such as respiratory and physical therapists, but also are required to do more paperwork previously handled by support staffs that have been reduced to hold down hospital payrolls.

"Health care delivery organizations should preserve the time of the nurse for the direct care of patients and families by providing adequate staffing levels for clinical and non-clinical support services," the report said.

The panel did call for higher pay for nurses, but said:

"Increasing compensation alone, however, will not be sufficient to resolve the shortage. Attention must also be given to increasing professional recognition, increasing representation of nurses on policy-making, regulatory and accreditation boards as well as increasing the use of more collaborative approaches between nurses, other health care professionals, and management."

Vegetable Expo Set

The third North Carolina Vegetable Expo will be held Tuesday and Wednesday at the Hilton Hotel. The event will feature more than 40 commercial exhibits and 40 speakers on various topics of concern to vegetable growers.

Those interested in the production and marketing of vegetables may contact Sam Uzzell of the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service at 830-6374. Registration for the expo begins Tuesday at 9 a.m.

Nursery Receives Gift

The Pitt County Day Care Association has donated $800 to the newborn nursery of the Children's Hospital of Eastern North Carolina, a division of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

"The money will be used to furnish a room that will provide a warm and private atmosphere for families whose infants are hospitalized in the newborn nursery," said Kathy Eastwood, head nurse in the nursery.

Utilities Board to Meet

The Greenville Utilities Commission board will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the utilities building at the intersection of Fifth and Washington streets.

Among items for consideration are a rural street light policy, selection of an engineering firm for the Brook Valley natural gas project and selection of a consultant to study long-range goals for the gas department.

Teacher Nominated

Carol Whitaker, a kindergarten and first-grade teacher, has been nominated Teacher of the Year at Stokes Elementary School.

Ms. Whitaker received her bachelor's degree in primary education and a master's degree in elementary education from East Carolina University. She is working on an educational specialist degree and supervisor's certificate at ECU.

Teacher of Year Named

Jean Swanner, a fourth-grade teacher, has been named Teacher of the Year at Pactolus Elementary School.

Mrs. Swanner, a native of Farmville, is the daughter of Russell Wells and Dorothy Gray. She attended Atlantic Christian College and is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, where she received a bachelor's degree in English.

She taught in the Kings Mountain city schools for six years and at H.B. Sugg Elementary School in Farmville for six years, where she was a nominee for Outstanding Young Educator and was a Teacher of the Year representative. She is married to Herbie Swanner of Washington, N.C., and they have three sons.

The school's Christmas program will feature presentations of "Frosty the Snowman" and "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer." The play, "Christmas at Pactolus," will be presented to the Parent Teacher Organization Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the gym.

Tractor Tests Offered

The Pitt Community College Rural Agricultural Assistance Center is sponsoring a free dynamometer test Wednesday from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. at Stokes and Lane Farm Center in Gardenersville.

The test determines the maximum horsepower of a tractor and detects mechanical problems in the power train. Tractors with either 540-rpm or 1,000-rpm shafts may be tested.

Lyman Craft, chairman and instructor of the diesel mechanics program at PCC, will conduct the tests. For more information, call Robery May, RAAC coordinator, at 355-4214.

Lion-Hearted Award

A Greenville resident was given the "Lion-Hearted Award" during the annual Christmas party of the Greenville Dialysis Center.

Lonnie Graham was among about 190 patients and family members from the Greenville, Kinston and New Bern dialysis centers who attended the party. He was presented a plaque noting his "special courage while being a patient at the Greenville Dialysis Center."

Graham works 40 hours a week for the Greenville Utilities Commission while undergoing kidney dialysis three times a week. Ed Askew of GUCO participated in the recognition of Graham.

The group heard Christmas music by the House of Worship Choir of Greenville, of which Graham is a member. Comedy entertainment was provided by Barbara Davis and Santa Claus brought gifts.

State Trooper, Motorists Save Boy's Life

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — The life of a 10-year-old boy was saved through the extraordinary efforts of a state trooper and passers-by who righted an overturned truck, freeing the boy.

Ronald A. Abbott Jr. still was in critical condition Sunday in the intensive care unit at the King's Daughters Children's Hospital in Norfolk following the Friday accident. Without the aid of Trooper Lewis D. Shelton and three or four passing motorists, he would be dead, say witnesses.

"I think we gave him a fighting chance," Shelton said.

"He definitely saved life of child through his ability to take charge and direct the help," said Trooper D.M. Russell, who was called to the scene by Shelton.

"He called me on the radio at 9 p.m. telling me that it was a critical condition and that a wrecker was on the way, but he didn't know if it would get there soon enough" to save the child, said Russell. "When I got there at 9:04, they had the vehicle righted and were working on the victim."

The accident occurred when a truck driven by the boy's mother, Brenda Joyce Abbott, overturned on the Virginia 607 overpass of Interstate 64 near Toano. The state police said the truck skidded on a patch of ice. Both the mother and boy were wearing seatbelts, but the boy's apparently was not cinched tightly enough, said Russell.

"There was a young boy who was partially pinned under the cab. His midsection and one shoulder and his legs were under the vehicle. He was lying face down on the pavement," said Shelton in describing the scene when he arrive.

Mrs. Abbott was pinned inside the vehicle. "She could see her son lying there, but she could not get to him," Shelton said.

Shelton, a 12-year veteran of the state police, grabbed three or four bystanders and together they were able to raise the vehicle enough that Shelton believed he could slide the boy free. When he let go of the vehicle to reach for the child, the truck started to come back down.

"I... grabbed the vehicle again. I began to lift as hard as I could," Shelton said. "It just came up and landed on its four wheels."

The trooper was not finished. The child had a faint pulse and did not appear to be breathing. When Shelton started mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, the boy's pulse stopped.

The trooper began cardiopulmonary resuscitation with the help of a member of the James City County Volunteer Rescue Squad. The boy's pulse was restored, but he was still having difficulty breathing, so Shelton continued the mouth-to-mouth in the ambulance until the child was hooked up to a respirator.

Rose Senior A Delegate To 1989 Youth Program

Anjali Kataria, a senior at J.H. Rose High School, recently was appointed as a state delegate to the 1989 United States Senate Youth Program in Washington, D.C.

The state's two high school delegates, which includes Johnathan Robertson of Cary, were named by Dr. A. Craig Phillips, superintendent of public instruction.

Miss Kataria was president of the senate in Girls State and attended Governor's School. She is president of the debate, French and science clubs and is secretary of the Anchor Club. She also serves as a student government association representative and is a participant in the Honors Medical Science program.

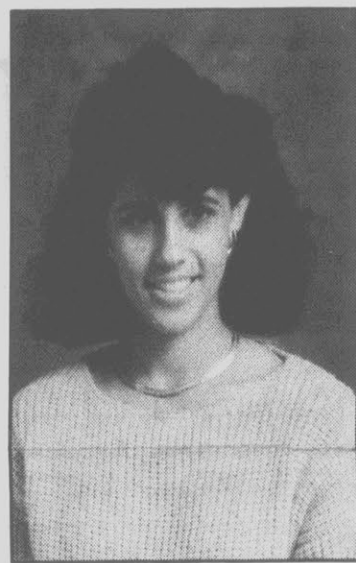

In addition, Miss Kataria is a member of the National and Mu Alpha Theta honor societies, a class marshal, a news teen for the school and a Morehead Scholarship semifinalist. She serves in the Pitt-Greenville Youth Council and is in the pre-college program at East Carolina University.

The daughter of Drs. Yash and Sudesh Kataria of Greenville, Miss Kataria likes to dance, read, cook, write poetry and play tennis and is considering studying law or medicine.

Miss Kataria and Robertson will join 102 other high school student body officers from Jan. 28 to Feb. 4 for intensive study of the federal government and the United States Senate.

Each delegate will receive a $2,000 college scholarship, which along with the program, is made possible by a grant from the William Randolph Hearst Foundation. Transportation, meals and accommodations are provided by the foundation.

Electronic Equipment Taken From Apartment

Investigators said 11 thefts, including more than $5,400 worth of electronic equipment from a Riverbluff Road apartment, were reported to Greenville police over the weekend.

Officer K.L. Jones said $5,400 worth of stereo equipment and a television set were taken from 116E Riverbluff Road in an incident reported Sunday at 9:46 p.m., while Officer B.E. Lewis said two coats and a wallet were taken from a car parked at the Waffle House on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 2:20 a.m.

Officer B.M. Highland said a purse was taken from a car parked at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Skinner Street in an incident reported at 3:09 a.m., while Officer J.A. Felton said four hubcaps were taken from a car parked at E4 Kingstone Place in an incident reported at 12:46 p.m.

Officer C.G. Alphin said an 8-month-old cat was taken from 38 Riverbluff Apartments in a break-in reported at 1:40 p.m., while Officer S.C. Locke said a wallet was taken from a vehicle parked in a lot at the rear of Happy's Pool Room on Cotanche Street in an incident reported at 3:33 p.m.

Officer R.E. Jones said two Christmas wreaths were taken from 1207 Kingsbrook Road in an incident reported at 5:16 p.m., while Officer Alexander Batts said several games were taken from a vehicle parked at 501 Winstead Drive in an incident reported at 11:05 p.m.

Officer A.T. Parrish said a .38 caliber pistol was taken from 1009D Broad St. in an incident reported at 9:01 p.m. Saturday, and said a battery was taken from a vehicle parked at the Roxie Theater on Albemarle Avenue in an incident reported at 10:40 p.m. Officer R.E. Jones said a television set, a radio and a kerosene heater were taken from 1529B W. 14th St. in a break-in reported at 9:37 p.m.

Farm Scene

ACTING EXTENSION DIRECTOR

According to a recent survey of county farmers, the average production yield for corn in 1988 was 79 bushels per acre.

Pitt County corn acreage has declined tremendously over the past two years due to the participation of farmers in the set-aside governmental programs.

Despite a better than average year for corn across the county, production of this commodity is often unprofitable for many growers. This year's average is only a few bushels above the 13-year average of 72 bushels per acre.

Every year, several producers, who believe that production on a given acre of corn land more than triples this level, seek the assistance of the local extension office in verifying these yields.

Four entries were collected during this past season with yields ranging from 125 to 170 bushels per year.

A close examination of these entries reveal important factors for other practitioners to observe.

Rodney Williford of Bethel was found to produce the highest yield per acre with 169.5 bushels.

This entry was the only one to receive water from irrigation and was calculated to have a plant population of 24,000 plants per acre.

Williford's land preparation consisted of disking followed by the use of ripper bedder and Dekalb 689 was the chosen variety.

J.P. Davenport and Sons had the second top yield in the county with 163.08 bushels per acre being weighed.

Unlike Williford who used irrigation, Davenports have the highest dryland entry but also used a ripper bedder in their land preparation. The variety of this entry was Pioneer 3165 and it was planted at 22,300 plants per acre.

Other entries were Mike Peadon of Belvoir at 126.67 bushels per acre and Steve Sutton at 125.21 bushels per acre. Peadon grew variety AgPro 793 and Sutton grew variety Deltapine 5750 to achieve his final yield.

In conclusion, three of the four top entries in the corn trial comparison used ripper-bed type equipment to maximize final yields.

Matching tillage equipment with soil types is a major strategy used by the most successful corn producers.

Future technology will attempt to find new ways to eliminate barriers to the utilization of soil moisture for corn production.

FILTER SOILING

There's a name for those awful black lines occurring in carpet around baseboards, floor vents, and sometimes even under doors and draperies. It's called filter soiling.

How does it form? Really, it's a combination of several things: pollution from outside your home (especially auto exhaust emissions), pollen and dust, and oils and greases generated by a good cook—all these culprits are picked up by air currents in your home and they float around until filtered out on some fabric. Draperies get lots of them, and if there's an opportunity for air to circulate under walls, doors, draperies or vent-outlet covers, they'll be filtered out onto the fabric close at hand—carpet being the most readily available.

Result? Filter soiling!

Remedies? Now, what do you do about it? Stopping the flow of air through the carpet's nap is the first order of business. Caulking under the walls to seal off airflow is an excellent idea, along with forcing a double thickness of carpet between the tackstrip and baseboard (double-tacking). You might also want to schedule regular AC/heating filter cleaning to facilitate airflow through the filter—not the carpet.

How do you correct filter soiling once it forms? Realistically, there's little you can do by way of home remedies; however, a professional cleaner has aggressive cleaning agents available with which to treat filter soiling. They usually work well when treatment is meticulous...usually!

Oh yes, one final point. Filter soil is slightly acidic by nature and can fade carpet dyes in time, creating a new problem known as fume fading. Unfortunately, this condition doesn't show up until the filter soil's been removed; but remember, the problem's caused by the filter soil, not the valiant cleaner who's trying to remove it!

Fortunately we're talking possibility, not probability.

Study Finds School Discipline Hits Blacks Hardest

By Lee Mitgang
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Black students especially in the South are far more likely than whites to be targets of corporal punishment or school suspension, according to a study.

"Teachers often overreact to blacks, especially black males. Interestingly, that's true even with black teachers," said Joan McCarty First, executive director of the Boston-based National Coalition of Advocates for Students, which Sunday released an analysis of federal school data.

The report found black youngsters are more than twice as likely to be hit or be labeled mentally retarded as whites. And while blacks make up 16 percent of the school population, they comprise only 8 percent of those in gifted student programs.

The findings were based on an analysis of biennial data published by the U.S. Department of Education's Office of Civil Rights in 1986, the latest year available. The coalition study projected the rates at which students of different races suffered various school penalties.

The coalition found that the 10 states with the biggest black-white disparities in the rate of corporal punishment were nearly all southern: Arkansas, Tennessee, Texas, Florida, New Mexico, Ohio, Georgia, Indiana, Arizona and Oklahoma.

Nationwide, male students account for 80 percent of corporal punishment incidents and 70 percent of suspensions, the study found.

It shed little light, however, on why blacks seem to bear the brunt of school penalties.

Mary Hatwood Futrell, president of the National Education Association, called the analysis "disheartening" and said the study indicated that teachers and administrators sometimes respond in a racist manner to certain students.

Jane Usdan, a spokeswoman for the American Federation of Teachers, said her union rejected racism as the explanation.

Among the report's findings:

- Nationwide, 5.22 percent of black students received corporal punishment, compared with only 2.28 percent of whites and 2.05 percent of Hispanics.
- Arkansas had the biggest statewide disparity in corporal punishment rates: 22.57 percent of blacks received such punishment, compared with 10.99 percent of whites, and 5.64 percent of Hispanics.
- Among the nation's 100 largest school districts, the largest black-white disparities were in Lee County, Fla.; Orange County, Fla.; Nashville-Davidson County, Tenn.; Polk County, Fla.; Montgomery, Ala.; Seminole County, Fla.; Pinellas County, Fla.; Brevard County, Fla.; Hillsborough County, Fla.; and Arlington, Texas.
- Nationwide, 9.07 percent of blacks, 4.44 percent of Hispanics, and 4.05 percent of whites were suspended from school.
- The racial imbalance in suspension rates was largest in Ohio: blacks were suspended at a projected 16 percent rate, Hispanics at 9.54 percent, whites at 4.8 percent.
- Among the largest districts, the biggest racial disparities in suspension rates were in the Alpine School District, in American Fork, Utah; Long Beach, Calif.; Lee County, Fla.; Sacramento, Calif.; Baltimore County, Md.; Los Angeles; Pinellas County, Fla.; Seminole County, Fla.; Minneapolis; and San Francisco.
- Blacks nationwide were placed in special classes for the "educable mentally retarded" at a 2.3 percent rate, while 0.87 percent of whites and 0.56 percent of Hispanics were similarly labeled.

"educable mentally retarded" at a 6.13 percent rate, compared with 1.99 percent of whites, and 0.79 percent of Hispanics.

Among the largest school districts, the largest black-white disparities existed in Montgomery, Ala.; Detroit; Jefferson County, Ala.; Wake County, N.C.; Gwinnett County, Ga.; Escambia County, Fla.; Forsyth County-Winston Salem, N.C.; Tulsa, Okla.; Mobile, Ala. and Omaha, Neb.

— 5.35 percent of white pupils get placed in gifted programs nationwide, compared with 2.44 percent among blacks and 2.41 percent among Hispanics.

The differences were largest in South Carolina, where whites were placed in such programs at a 9.46 percent rate, compared with 5.62 percent of Hispanics and 2.03 percent of blacks.

Large school districts with the biggest black-white disparities in gifted placements were Austin, Texas; Atlanta; Charlotte-Mecklenburg, N.C.; New Orleans; El Paso, Texas; Wake County, N.C.; Oakland, Calif.; Greenville County, S.C.; San Francisco; and Omaha, Neb.

Time To Help

Tragedy Doesn't Recognize Politics

In the aftermath of the Armenian earthquake disaster neither internal Soviet differences nor western world economic philosophy differences seem so important.

Around the world we all know that people pursuing their daily activities have undergone a disaster that may compare with the worst the world has ever known.

Even now the figures are staggering. Some 400,000 left homeless, perhaps 50,000 dead and many thousands injured.

It is understandable that it will require days of rescue work to determine the number of people who died and even to locate some of the injured. In previous earthquakes people have been found alive in collapsed buildings after all hope had been surrendered.

Here in North Carolina we can compare with the tornado which struck the state only a few days ago and another which hit in Pitt County in 1984. With widespread damage and tangled communications it was some time before the full extent of the damage could be assessed. Multiply that many times and we have the problem of determining death, injuries and damage in the mighty quake which destroyed whole towns in Armenia.

The situation was grave enough to prompt Soviet president Mikhail S. Gorbachev to cut short a visit to the United States. He had planned to visit Cuba and London also, but he chose to do what any national leader would do ... return home to take personal charge of the emergency efforts.

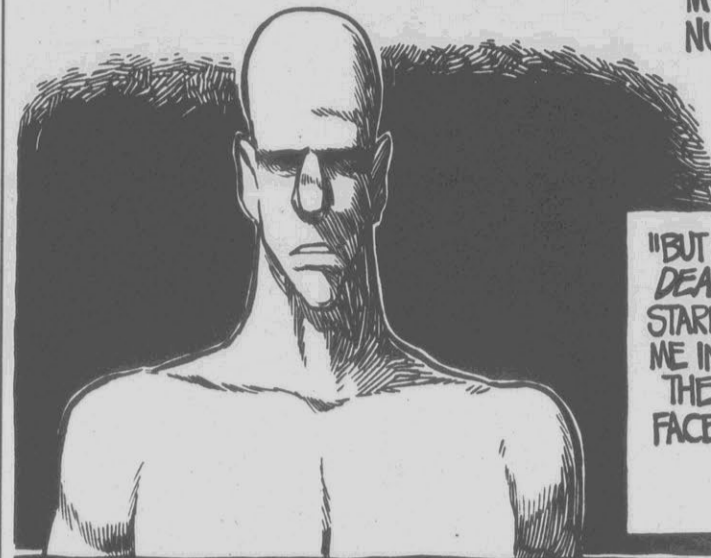

The disaster was such that all segments of Soviet society were mobilized to help and assistance is coming in from nations around the world.

Interestingly, because of glasnost, both the Soviet people and the world know more about this disaster than would have been the case only a few years ago.

Knowing about it gives the world a duty to do whatever possible to help. The United States and all nations should pledge the aid necessary to alleviate the incredible suffering this great natural disaster has caused.

"I AM MAN, RULER OF THIS PLANET."

To the editor:

As I drove through Rocky Mount recently, I observed the new city administration building and the Christmas lighting of white lights on real tree along the main street. As I drove through Wilson, I noted the new Transportation Center and the Christmas lighting of white lights on real trees. And have you seen the scene at Pinetops?

As I drive around Greenville, I observe the city administration scattered around town here and there, an aged bus station, no place for city bus passengers to wait out of the wind, and ordinary Christmas lights hanging from utility poles.

Apparently Greenville does not have it all. Then what do you have? Our school superintendent is at or near the top in annual supplement — about $33,000 — and the typical county school teacher is way down the list, getting about $500 annually. Is that it?

We went to Rocky Mount to take Amtrak roundtrip to DC, three trains a day from Rocky Mount, about four hours' travel time each way, arriving at the newly and magnificently redone Union Station. Saw DC on the Metrobus for 75 cents and on the Metrotrain for $1.

And if you want to do good, you can take a bag and pick up the trash off the streets, since apparently no one else is.

To the editor:

"He Remembers the Day of Surprise" by Alvin Taylor in Sunday, Dec. 4, ends, "Fortunately, our military regained the initiative and the outcome is well known."

I remember Pearl Harbor Day, the war and the day the Japanese are supposed to have surrendered.

There used to be a joke, "If you wish to rebuild your economy and cannot afford to, attack the U.S.A. and they will do it for you after the war is over."

Remembering Pearl Harbor, why should we now beg the Japanese to limit their imports to this country while we have difficulty exporting to theirs?

The Japanese are now buying the Hawaiian Islands and other parts of the U.S.A. They also are financing a large part of our national debt.

My question is, "Who actually won the war?" It looks to me like the Japanese did.

Why, if we do what the Japanese and others are doing, will only we cause economic collapse.

I think we should remember Pearl Harbor and wake up before it's too late.

Honeymoon Begins Before The Vows

An odd change is in process on Capitol Hill — the view of lawmakers toward George Bush. Before the election, Democrats were deeply skeptical about Bush being able to do business with them and they were angry about the campaign he was running. Now, they speak in increasingly positive terms about their ability to govern with him. And Republicans who ran a largely unified campaign behind Bush have already begun to go their own way.

The shifts in political mood have been especially significant for Democrats, who have comfortable majorities in both the House and Senate but know it would be a mistake to take Bush for granted. In the wake of his issueless campaign, many in Congress expected that they could make Bush deal with them on their own turf. The Democrats' feistiness was enhanced by what Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., refers to as Bush's "bikini coattails" — his near-total failure on Election Day to translate personal success into other GOP victories and the Democrats' own ability to survive the shortcomings of presidential nominee Michael S. Dukakis.

Since then, however, Democratic defiance has dissolved. Some lawmakers have moved to a stance of respectful waiting, while others have taken steps that the Bush team might consider political burden-sharing. The first camp, which includes new Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, says that it will await the president-elect's recommendations with an open mind but with doubts that he can achieve his goals, especially on the all-pervasive issue of taming the federal budget deficit; this group, meanwhile, says that it will not reveal its own agenda.

Other key Democrats have been making statements that could allow Bush to blame them for forcing him to abandon his "no new taxes" pledge. House

Richard Cohen

Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, has made it clear in populist rhetoric to colleagues and reporters that he favors tax increases targeting the wealthy. Incoming House Budget Committee Chairman Leon E. Panetta, D-Calif., has long advocated a comprehensive approach, including added revenues, to the deficit problem. And influential House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., this week embraced a hefty hike in the federal gasoline tax as a way to cut the federal deficit.

Many Democrats, regardless of their views, like the tone Bush has been setting even though they have not seen the details. "I have become much more optimistic about action on the budget," said Rep. Martin Frost, D-Texas, a political neighbor and ally of Wright. Rep. Dennis E. Eckart, D-Ohio, another party stalwart, said this week: "George Bush has made all the right moves since the election. We are waiting for a honeymoon with him." Bush may have received another boost in dealing with Congress when Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev announced at the United Nations that he was cutting his military troop strength by 500,000, a step that could ease pressure on the Pentagon budget.

The whirlwind of across-the-board meetings by Bush in the month since his election has underscored major differences in approach from the Reagan years. Bush has shown an apparent desire to be more engaged in the details and strategy of handling issues and more willing to consider opposing viewpoints.

This pragmatism highlights dramatic political differences in Washington at the start of the two presidencies. In 1981, Republicans controlled the Senate and worked with a coalition of conservative House Democrats to pass Reagan's spending and tax-cut agenda. This time, Democrats will find it difficult — procedurally, politically and individually — to sit on the sidelines. Another contrast is that Democrats, who were shell-shocked after their 1980 debacle, are more confident about having regained their political footing.

Many Democrats will surely want Bush to eat some crow before they join forces with him on the budget. A senior Democratic aide gleefully predicted an extended round of finger-pointing to Bush's lips when he breaks his campaign promise. Bush might launch a semantic argument about whether he has, in fact, proposed new taxes, or he might simply call on all sides to move beyond politics in addressing the nation's problems. Regardless, many Capitol Hill players foresee a strong possibility that, by next summer, a bipartisan budget agreement will have been struck.

If that happens, many Republicans could abandon Bush's ship. Conservative leader Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said that he and his allies might be willing to support modest increase in federal user fees and the like but that they will steadfastly oppose anything that common sense dictates is a new tax. And, he added, they do not want to touch Social Security in any way. House Republicans issued a warning to Bush this week about the limits of bipartisanship when they elected several partisan activists to their leadership team and rejected more conciliatory members.

In the Senate, Bush's personal dealings with Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., remain uneasy and are potentially troublesome. Mitchell, meanwhile, may need time to establish his leadership style and make promised changes in Senate operations.

After the budget issue, the most difficult problem on the 1989 congressional agenda will be the bailout of savings-and-loans institutions, estimated to cost as much as $100 billion. Reagan and Bush administration officials have recently announced high priorities for resolution of this crisis. Bipartisanship is likely, both because of the magnitude of the problem and the fact that several prominent congressional Democrats have been so allied with the savings-and-loan industry that some have been accused of being too close to the schemes of alleged wrongdoers.

The outlook remains sufficiently uncertain to warrant a healthy dose of skepticism and patience before the various sides come together on key issues. Even though some of the new players are taking a positive attitude (Bush and Mitchell are tennis buddies), it often takes time to establish a working relationship. But if the political picture is darkest before the dawn, the warm sun may slowly start making brief appearances over the Capitol in the next few weeks.

Congressional Democrats will offer proposals, some of them debated this year, that will draw Republican opposition or force alternative ideas. The Democrats' social agenda will include child care, a minimum-wage increase and liberalized leave policies for employees facing medical problems at home. Watch, too, for wide-ranging hearings on the growing practice of leveraged buyouts in the financial community; many Democrats are alarmed about the concentration of economic power. Solutions in this thorny area may be more difficult to find.

Christmas Answers

Art
Buchwald

It's time once again to ask the Christmas Man some questions.

Dear Christmas Man,
I was brought up to believe that you couldn't buy love. Now my grandchild tells me that I can. All I have to do is get him a Nintendo set, he says, and he'll love me a "lot." What am I to make of this?

Sincerely,
Willy Wooster
Dear Willy,

Unfortunately, your grandchild is right. You can buy love but it is no longer cheap. The going rate for a $10 to $20 doll is one wet kiss on the cheek. Any train set from $20 to $50 will guarantee a hug, and for a $100 Walkman your grandchild will climb onto your lap and let you tell him a story. There are children who will love you even if you don't bring them anything. But to this date, nobody has ever met one.

Sincerely yours,
C.M.

Dear Christmas Man,

Last year I gave a close friend a lovely gift. She has never mentioned the item or thanked me. Now that Christmas is coming up again, I am not sure if I should send her a present or not. My kindest thought is that she never received the gift, and I don't want to penalize her for what could easily be another monumental screw-up in the Post Office. But what I really think is that she has no manners.

Sincerely,
Billy Boy Louder
Dear Billy Boy,

Join the club. Millions and millions of people never get thanked for Christmas presents they sent to relatives and friends. It is now estimated that only one out of eight gift-senders has ever received a note. When sending a gift I have found it very helpful to enclose a letter addressed to myself, thanking me for the gift and raving about it. I ask the recipient of the package to please sign the thank-you note and return it to me in the self-addressed envelope. This more or less guarantees an acknowledgment of the present, and saves the other person an awful lot of guilt.

Cheers,
C.M.

Dear Christmas Man,

What is the world record for a salesperson writing up a purchase in a department store at Christmas, and who holds it?

Sincerely,
Frank and Dorothy Kleinman
Dear Frank and Dorothy,

The world's record for a person transacting a sale is 22 minutes and 12 seconds. It is held by Myra Blunt of Macy's, who completed the paper work, including checking the charge card, in what is now considered a world record. The speed was so phenomenal that Myra was asked to take a steroid test to make sure that she hadn't cheated. Myra passed the test with flying colors, and is now working in fine linens.

Happy Holidays,
C.M.

Recipients Of 1988 Rhodes Scholarships Announced

By Lauren Blau
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — A doctoral candidate who entered college at the age of 12, a part-time waitress, and a taekwondo expert were among the 12 women and 20 men named Sunday as American Rhodes Scholars-elect.

Among this year's nominees "There was a tremendous interest in working for the homeless and the hungry," said David Alexander, American secretary of the Rhodes Scholarship Trust and president of Pomona College. "A few years ago (the interest) was in terms of investment in South Africa."

Many of the winners were politically active, Alexander said, and many expressed interest in AIDS education.

Alexander said three of the winners worked to support themselves. Several others worked at their campus radio stations, which he said previously has not been a common activity.

The group includes students with aspirations in politics, medicine and writing.

The recipients of the 1988 Rhodes Scholarships for two years of study at the University of Oxford in England were chosen during meetings held nationwide Wednesday and Saturday.

The scholars came from 26 states, with New York leading the way with four, followed by three from Ohio and two from Oklahoma.

Among the winners were Karl Craig Boatright of Wilmington, N.C., who attended Emory University and Wake Forest University student E. Scott Pretorius of New Philadelphia, Ohio.

Harvard was the university or college with the most recipients with five scholars, while Yale had four winners and Stanford had two.

One recipient, Holly Wyatt of San Clemente, is a California resident.

Other California colleges attended by 1988 Rhodes scholars include the University of California at Berkeley, California Institute of Technology, Whittier College, Occidental College, and the University of Southern California.

The Rhodes Scholarships were established in 1902 by the estate of Cecil Rhodes, a British philanthropist and colonialist. He had hoped the scholarships would contribute to world understanding and peace.

Among the qualities sought in scholars are proven intellectual and academic excellence, integrity, respect for others, the ability to lead and use their talents fully.

Scholarship winners will receive college and university fees and a stipend to cover living expenses.

Women were first allowed to apply since 1976.

Among the winning scholars is Gregory Peter DuBois, 23. He entered New College of the University of Southern Florida at age 12 and now at 23 expected to receive his doctorate from Cal Tech at the end of the academic year. He has published numerous research papers in high energy physics and is fluent in four foreign languages.

Miss Wyatt, a double major in political science and international relations with a minor in peace and conflict studies at the University of Southern California, works 20 hours a week as a waitress to help support herself.

Advocates For Homeless Plan Asheville Vigil

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Advocates for the homeless will hold a vigil on the streets later this week to protest what they call a lack of action on the issue in the Asheville area.

"We would love to do more, but we need the resources," said Larry Holt, deputy director of the Asheville Housing Authority. "The safety net has missed a lot of people."

Highlighting the people who have slipped through the net will be the purpose of the vigil, organizers said. The vigil is scheduled to Friday at 10:30 p.m. and will continue Saturday.

Representatives from Asheville area shelters said they have been overloaded with people seeking refuge from the elements.

Hospitality House recently turned seven people away in one evening because the shelter in the basement of Calvary Presbyterian Church was full, director Carol Lathuras said.

On another night, 41 people showed up at the temporary shelter in the basement of St. Lawrence Catholic Church run by Asheville-Buncombe Community Christian Ministry. The shelter could only accept 29, director Tony Clarke-Sayer said.

The shelter volunteers found space for the remaining 12 people, but that in turn overloaded the city's other shelters, he said.

The crowding points out the shortage of beds, Clarke-Sayer said. Estimates put the number of beds at 100 and the number of homeless at about 150.

The overload shows private endeavors cannot solve the homeless problem, Lathuras said. Government must become more involved and one purpose of the vigil will be to express outrage at the failure of Asheville's political leaders to address the homelessness crisis, she said.

Bakker Rails Against Media During First Service

By Paul Nowell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — An unrepentant Jim Bakker, facing criminal fraud and conspiracy charges, turned his first church service since his indictment into an upbeat love feast for still-faithful followers.

"I feel a miracle," he told about 350 worshippers Sunday at Skate Palace, a Charlotte roller rink. "And the harder the devil fights, the bigger the miracle that's coming."

The fallen former PTL president railed against the news media, but never mentioned the 24-count indictment handed down last week by a federal grand jury in Charlotte. He also urged followers of his New Covenant Church to forgive his accusers in his first public remarks since being the indictments.

"If the news media wasn't the biggest money-maker today, would they still pay people $1 million to lie and tell stories?" he said during a 20-minute message to about 400 followers. "The love of money is the root of all evil."

"They ask us, 'Why don't you attack your enemies?'" Bakker said, his voice rising. "The Devil wants me to renounce my salvation and attack, attack, attack. The Bible says 'Love your enemies.'"

"I'm not going to lift a finger to attack my enemies. I'm not going to lift a finger to vindicate me," Bakker said. "That will put cold chills down your enemy's spine."

Bakker, dapper in a double-breasted gray suit, won repeated cries of "hallelujah" and "you got that right" from worshippers seated under the fluorescent lights and mirrored balls of the roller rink. At one point, most of them left their metal chairs to gather around him and raise their hands in prayer.

As one elderly woman left the service, she told reporters: "The worse they do Jim, the more we're going to love him."

Bakker talked about his reaction to being fingerprinted and having his mugshot taken at the federal courthouse in Charlotte.

"I looked up at all those wanted posters and I thought, 'No one is smiling — so I smiled,'" Bakker said. "If I'm going to be on the walls of post offices, I'm going to smile."

Bakker said he and his wife, Tammy, plan to tape several television specials at their home south of Charlotte.

"The old adrenalin is flowing again," he said. "We're excited to be able to minister to the people again."

The first show could be taped at their home as early as next week, said Bakker, who gave no other details.

Bakker did not allow reporters inside the building. Some of his remarks, however, could be heard through the door in the lobby.

A spokesman for Bakker, Harold Sweigart, said Bakker decided to exclude the media from the services because he believes some of his supporters felt intimidated.

Mrs. Bakker joined her husband on stage, singing "This Too Shall Pass" and telling stories of well-wishers who had greeted her in restaurants and shopping malls.

She told of a school bus of deaf students who gave the couple a "thumbs up" sign last week and a man at a Charlotte-area shopping mall who screamed at her: "Give them hell, Tammy."

"He didn't know that's not my job," she said. "When we go back on the air, we'll be trying to keep them out of hell."

Bakker and three of his former associates were indicted Dec. 5 after a 16-month federal grand jury investigation into the PTL television ministry. Bakker, 48, and Richard Dortch, 57, his former top deputy at PTL, were accused in a 24-count indictment with wire and mail fraud and conspiracy to commit wire and mail fraud.

The two were accused of diverting more than $4 million of their followers' money to support their own "lavish and extravagant" lifestyles.

David Taggart, Bakker's former personal aide at PTL, and his brother, James, the ministry's former interior decorator, each were charged in a second indictment with six tax violations.

Meanwhile, PTL, which has been in bankruptcy since June 1987, has been ordered by a federal bankruptcy judge to sell its assets to pay creditors. An auction has been scheduled for today in Fort Mill, S.C.

PTL's court-appointed trustee, M.C. "Red" Benton, will try for the second time in a month to auction the 2,200-acre property, which includes a 500-room hotel, a water park, a television studio and a 2,000-seat church.

The only certain bidder, Toronto businessman Stephen Mernick, has let it be known he intends to offer a total of less than $70 million cash. A month ago, he said he would pay $115 million, $50 million of it cash.

Weekend Wrecks Kill 11

RALEIGH (AP) — Eleven people died in weekend traffic accidents, including four people killed in separate head-on collisions, the N.C. Highway Patrol says.

Isabelle Taylor Spinks, 52, of Bear Creek, was killed in a head-on collision on U.S. 421 in Chatham County at 5:30 p.m. Saturday about two miles south of Goldston. Troopers say a vehicle being towed broke loose and hit the car in which Ms. Spinks was a passenger.

Luke Francis Shaw, 38, of Kenly, was killed at 6:40 p.m. Friday when the vehicle he was driving collided with another vehicle head-on. The accident occurred 7 miles west of Lucama in Wilson County.

Kimberly Dawn Doss, 16, of Dobson, was killed when the car she was driving collided with another car on N.C. 89, about 11 miles west of Mt. Airy at 7 p.m. Saturday.

Avis Brown Plummer, 31, of Winston-Salem, died inside the city limits when her car was involved in a three-car wreck at 12:37 p.m. Saturday. Troopers said Ms. Plummer's car sideswiped one car, then hit another one head-on.

Anthony Scott Tift, 27, of Cary, was killed about 2 a.m. Saturday when the vehicle he was driving struck a guard rail off N.C. 54 about two miles west of Raleigh, and he was thrown from the vehicle.

Richard Adolf Lewis, 29, of Henderson, died about 5:30 p.m. Saturday when another car struck his vehicle, which was stopped in the right lane of Interstate 85, about two miles south of Henderson, troopers said.

Thomas Jeffrey Rogers, 32, of Chapel Hill, was killed about 11 a.m. Saturday when he was struck by a vehicle as he walked on I-85 just less than a mile south of Hillsborough.

Karen Marie Clapper, 25, of Spring Lake, was killed about 1:30 a.m. Sunday when her car struck a group of trees off a rural road about a mile south of Sanford.

Joe Congery Jr., 55, of Tarboro was killed about 4:30 a.m. Sunday when he was struck by a vehicle as he was standing in N.C. 44 three miles north of his hometown.

Lonnie Ray Coleman, 22, and Nedham Lamont Cox, 22, both of Wilson, were killed at 2:52 p.m. Sunday when they were thrown from their car after it hit a tree off a state road one mile south of Wilson.

The deaths bring this year's North Carolina highway death toll to 1,443.

Fishermen-Insurance

WASHINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Thousands of North Carolina fishermen might be able to deflate rising insurance rates with the help of a new federal law, safety experts say.

The Commercial Fishing Industry Vessel Safety Act of 1988 requires fishermen to significantly upgrade safety equipment on their boats, many of which previously had to carry nothing more than portable fire extinguishers and life preservers, said Lt. Cmdr. Glenn W. Anderson, a U.S. Coast Guard regulations expert.

Fishermen should be able to reduce their risk of loss and lawsuit by adding the new safety equipment and using better business management practices, said James C. Cooper III, a marine insurance agent from Morehead City.

New rules require most commercial vessels to carry fire extinguishers, visual distress signals, life rafts, two-way radios, electronic distress beacons and immersion suits.

Many commercial vessels had been classified in essentially the same manner as recreational motorboats, Anderson told about 25 fishermen, trade representatives and Coast Guard Auxiliary members during a seminar Saturday.

Mexico City Fireworks Explosion Kills 70

By James Anderson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEXICO CITY — Investigators today cleared unexploded illegal fireworks from a marketplace where a chain reaction of blasts and flames killed at least 70 people as the inferno raced through stalls crowded with Christmas shoppers.

Another 45 people were injured in Sunday afternoon's mayhem in a congested street market, said Salvador Padillo, the Red Cross commander. Most were quickly released from the hospital and none was reported seriously injured.

Red Cross spokesman Alfonso Manzo said early today that 70 bodies had been found. At least 12 of the dead were children, officials said.

The last seven bodies were discovered shortly after 3 a.m. (4 a.m. EST) in a fireworks storeroom. Many of the other dead were found in the rubble of candy vendors' stalls.

"It was a time bomb," said Elizabeth Diaz, a member of a union of market vendors. "There's hundreds of people who come here to sell them (illegal fireworks), they have for years. Why didn't the authorities come?"

Authorities said they had not determined the cause of the disaster, and witnesses disagreed on where the first explosion occurred.

But all said that after the first blast, explosions ripped like machine-gun fire through stalls where vendors had been selling sky-rockets, Roman candles and other fireworks.

"At first it sounded like bullets. Then there were more and more and then the explosion," said Fernando Dominguez, who was working in a shoe store.

Selling fireworks to the general public is barred in Mexico City, but the law is widely ignored.

The fire ripped through the congested market and five adjacent buildings, which are half a mile from the Zocalo Plaza in the heart of Mexico City.

The area was crowded with shoppers buying food, looking for Christmas presents and for fireworks to celebrate the Day of the Virgin of Guadalupe, Mexico's patron saint, which is today.

"People were running out of the market and screaming," said Oscar Cordero, 25, standing by the pile of debris that had been his stand and stock of calculators and other electronic goods.

The block on Corona Street was one of scores in the old downtown where vendors set up tables on the street. It is one of the busiest and most famous for the Mercado de Dulces, or Candy Market, one of the buildings that was partially burned.

Many people died when they were trapped in buildings along the street that caught fire. The fire spread to the five-story Candy Market, an apartment building and three other buildings.

After the fire was out, firefighters and sanitation workers used dollies to remove dozens of crates of unexploded fireworks from the area, and the work continued under floodlights through the night. The street was strewn with spent firecrackers, charred wood and comic books, twisted metal, tangles of high-tension wires and glass from shattered windows.

Although illegal, fireworks are easily purchased and are a strong tradition on the Day of Guadalupe, one of the country's biggest religious holidays. They are heard sporadically in the city from Dec. 12 through New Year's.

"Here's it's all clandestine," said Rutilo Ayala, a policeman at the scene. "They sell rockets and hide them under pastas, fruit and whatever else they sell."

"It's a case of corruption," said Angelica Peredo who lives next to one of the buildings that burned.

Residents and market vendors vented their anger at Mayor Manuel Camacho Solis as he plodded through the water-soaked debris, a yard deep in places.

"Many children died here, Mr. Mayor," said one man.

The mayor, who took office Dec. 1, promised to look for a solution to the problem.

District Attorney Ignacio Morales Lechuga said fireworks are too much of a tradition to do away with.

"This does not mean there is going to be an attack on Mexican culture," he said. "These things (fireworks) are part of Mexican culture."

Everado Gamiz Fernandez, a municipal leader, admitted that inspections in the market were not frequent and that there might be 2,000 fireworks vendors in his district.

Exile Faces Extradition After Hijacking Attempt

By Tracy Fields
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — A Cuban exile tricked into thinking he had diverted a jet with 128 people to Havana faces extradition from Grand Turk for only the second hijacking attempt of a domestic U.S. airliner in 2 1/2 years, officials said.

Weary but unharmed, the 121 passengers and seven crew members aboard the TWA Boeing 727 flight from San Juan arrived in Miami on Sunday evening. They said the hijacker was not violent and was shocked when he was arrested on Grand Turk, part of the British colony of Turks and Caicos Islands southeast of the Bahamas.

"He was horrified to realize he had been tricked," said passenger Willie Douglas of Montgomery, Ala.

Robert Blattner, a spokesman at TWA headquarters in St. Louis, identified the would-be hijacker as Felix Sanchez Rodriguez, 26, who left Cuba during the 1980 Mariel boatlift.

Larry Torrence of the FBI's Miami office said the suspect remained in Grand Turk and extradition proceedings were scheduled to begin today. A device that Rodriguez claimed to be a bomb proved to be harmless, officials said.

Blattner said Rodriguez apparently wanted to return to Cuba to see his ailing mother.

"A couple of times he leaned over some people and told them everything's going to be all right," said passenger Tom Patri.

The pilot of the Flight 469 was able to get permission to land on Grand Turk island where police were able to convince Rodriguez he was in Havana, Miller said.

Luis Carlos Motta of Cali, Colombia, who acted as an interpreter during the hijacking, said Rodriguez tapped him on the shoulder and gave him a letter that said in red ink "This is a hijacking." He told Motta he had a bomb and said it would be activated by his watch.

"He said 'I want to stay in Cuba. Please tell the captain, we go to Cuba,'" according to Motta. Motta said the man was very nervous, and that the plane banked to land on the first island it approached.

"As they landed he saw a fire engine (and several cars) and said 'Really, we are not in Cuba. I know the cars in Cuba,'" Motta said.

The pilot and the interpreter convinced him that a civilian would have to greet him, and when he left the plane he was arrested, Motta said.

It was the first hijacking of a domestic U.S. flight since May 3, 1986, when a man hijacked a Horizon Air commuter jet with 11 other passengers and two crewmembers en route to Medford, Ore., and demanded to go to Phoenix.

Fee For Using The Public Library Frustrates Teacher

Dear Abby: You encouraged your readers to use and support their public libraries, saying, "Our libraries are filled with knowledge and joy, and it's all there — free for the taking."

Abby, it's not all there "free for the taking." Near my home is a small branch library that my children and I visit frequently. Recently, I needed more in-depth information than was available in our small library, so I went to the main library downtown to research further. There I was told that before I could check out materials from the library, I must pay $15 for a library card that was valid for one year!

As a teacher, I have often assigned projects requiring students to use the public library, thinking I was doing them a favor, not only in requiring them to learn to use the library, but hoping to introduce them to the wealth of materials available there. I never dreamed of the financial burden I might be putting on them! Fifteen dollars may not seem like much, but to single parents or poor people, $15 could be one week's grocery money. I was appalled to learn that not all tax-supported, public libraries were free to everyone.

Dear Abby

I am going to write to Gov. Campbell about this. — A South Carolina Taxpayer, Teacher And Single Parent

Dear Taxpayer, Teacher, Etc.: Please don't bother Gov. Campbell. I checked with the main library in Columbia, S.C., and was told that residents of the county pay nothing for a library card, but non-residents are charged $15 a year. The cost varies; in Beverly Hills, Calif., the charge is $50 a year for non-residents who are not members of certain reciprocal libraries.

Dear Abby: Let your readers know that in some states a divorce can be annulled, thus reinstating the original marriage. There are some advantages to having a divorce annulled, especially where children are involved.

Couples wanting to annul a divorce should consult with an attorney in the state where the divorce was granted to find out if this procedure is available to them as it is in Kentucky. — Russell L. Croley, Kentucky Lawyer

Dear Lawyer: Annuling a divorce? That was news to me. Thanks for some valuable information.

Dear Abby: This letter concerns "Angry Parents," who were upset because the welfare department named their son as the father of a young girl's child.

1. You were correct to say that the welfare department did not name the boy as the father — the girl did.

2. In many states, a welfare agency is entitled to reimbursement for monies paid on behalf of the child, and whoever the woman names can and should be subject to legal proceedings and blood testings.

Those parents should be grateful that the blood test showed that their son was not the father, and he will not be liable for 18 years of child support.

Abby, please inform your readers that if they have a child born out of wedlock and wish to have paternity established in order to obtain a child support order, they should call their local child support enforcement agency. It is usually located in the county attorney's office. This legal service is provided free.

Abby, if your readers would like more information, tell them to contact their local child support agency. We also provide free services for women/men who are divorced and have been unable to obtain court-ordered support monies from their ex-spouse. — Alan K. Polley, Cochise County Attorney, Jan Woodfill, Child Support Coordinator, Bisbee, Ariz.

Court-Ordered School Dance A 'Blast,' Could Be The Last

By Donna Bryson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PURDY, Mo. — The first dance in this 100-year-old Ozark town's high school is just a memory, but the students who thought it was "a blast" may not get an encore.

The school board is appealing a court ruling that its policy against school dances is unconstitutional. A federal appeals court allowed Saturday night's dance while the matter is considered.

Officials restricted the dance to Purdy High School's 161 students, saying they wanted to avoid any chance of trouble. Among those barred were reporters and photographers, and even an alumnus who was the lead plaintiff in the federal lawsuit that brought dancing to Purdy High.

Jonathan Clayton, a 1987 graduate, got only as close as the basketball game that preceded the homecoming dance.

"It's OK, though — I won," Clayton said as he watched the game and greeted old friends. "It's still worth it. The idea was to allow Purdy students to have a dance, and we did that."

Clayton, a business school student, and 20 other Purdy students and parents sued in 1986 to overturn the school board's written policy banning dancing.

Longtime residents in this town of 900 say Purdy has never been without a ban on social dancing in the schools. Some have said they associate dancing with drinking, drugs and illicit sex.

But U.S. District Judge Russell Clark ruled this summer that the school board's ban promoted the values of those who oppose dancing for religious reasons.

The board appealed Clark's order that they stop enforcing the ban, but the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals is not expected to rule in the case before next year.

The dance ban evoked comparisons to the hit movie "Footloose," about a similar ban in a fictional town.

Although barred from dancing at school, Purdy students have held dances at the community center or in neighboring towns. But they said that was inconvenient and unfair.

Miss Howard Is Married To Mr. Allen On Sunday

MOUNT OLIVE — Sherri Denise Howard and Lansing Ray Allen were married Sunday at 3 p.m. in the Mount Olive Pentecostal Holiness Church. The Revs. Frank Moore and Bobby G. Howard Sr. conducted the double-ring ceremony.

Daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Howard of Mount Olive, the bride was given in marriage by her father. Renee Jones of Vanceboro, cousin of the bride, was honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Ruby Nethercutt of Farmville, Debby Godwin of Greenville and Michelle Morris of Vanceboro, cousin of the bride. Elizabeth Allen of Kinston was flower girl. She is niece of the bridegroom.

The bridegroom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lansing C. Allen. Lionel Allen of Raleigh of was best man for his brother. Ushers included Michael Allen of Kinston, brother of the bridegroom, and Bobby Howard Jr. of Beaufort, brother of the bride. Jason King of Kinston was ring bearer.

Pianist Carol Herring and vocalist Neil Swinson, both of Mount Olive, presented wedding music.

Karen Bryan of Kinston presided at the register and Jean Letchworth of Mount Olive directed the ceremony.

The bride wore a white formal satin and silk Venise lace gown designed with a high neckline and sheer English net yoke outlined with scalloped, beaded lace medallions. The bodice back closed with bridal buttons and had a basque waistline. The satin Victorian sleeves closed with lace appliqued cuffs. The flowing skirt extended into an attached chapel train. A pearl etched Dior bow and silk illusion veiling accented the back of her tear drop halo outlined with pearls and silk flowers. She carried a cascade bouquet of red and white sweetheart roses, white miniature carnations and stephanotis interspersed with baby's breath, greenery and ribbons.

The attendants wore crimson taffeta tea-length gowns styled with a puffed elbow sleeves accented with bows on the edge and the back bodice had a ruffled peplum and contrasting bow. Each carried a bouquet of white sweetheart roses made similar to that of the bride.

The flower girl wore a tea-length gown of crimson and carried a white basket with greenery.

A reception was given by the bride's parents in the church fellowship area.

The couple will live in Kinston after a wedding trip to unannounced points.

MRS. ALLEN

The bride is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and attended Emmanuel College in Georgia. She is employed with a division of Tar River Communications in Kinston. The bridegroom is a graduate of Grainger High School and East Carolina University. He is employed by the Lenoir County school system.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bride at the church. A bridesmaids luncheon, miscellaneous shower and office party were also given for the couple.

Arrangements are by Wilkerson Funeral Home.

Quake Toll Climbs

 Bitter cold weather was forecast for Armenia overnight, worsening conditions for the 500,000 people left homeless by the quake. The Soviet Meteorological Center said the temperature in Yerevan would drop to 14 to 23 degrees Fahrenheit. The center did not have weather information for the disaster area itself, but temperatures there have generally been even lower.

Hundreds of bonfires provided the only heat for some people who have lived on the streets since the quake.

The earthquake rescue effort, drawing workers and supplies from about 40 nations, has been hampered by shortages of equipment and haphazard organization, some officials said.

Some aid that proved useless. A crane sat idle besides the ruins in Leninakan. Workers said it was too small.

Without electricity or water, Red Cross rescuers worked around the clock by the eerie light of campfires. On Sunday, with the aid of search dogs, they pulled out of the rubble a man in his 30s who had broken bones in his legs but did not appear seriously injured.

Gorbachev and international rescue workers warned of the danger of epidemics breaking out. But one relief official from the United Nations, Sverre Kilde, said the danger was substantially reduced by sub-freezing temperatures in most of the region, which would inhibit the growth of disease-carrying organisms.

Correction

Hollis Gunn, a student at D.H. Conley High School who has served as a governor's page, incorrectly was identified as a female in Sunday's edition of The Daily Reflector. Gunn is the son of Thomas and Candy Gunn.

Trains Collide

"It brings home to us very much that families have lost some of their dearest people... it is even more poignant just coming up to Christmas," she said. She promised an inquiry.

Rowe said a crowded passenger train traveling at 40 mph to 50 mph slammed into the back of a stationary commuter train about a quarter-mile south of Clapham Junction. An empty freight train traveling in the opposite direction then hit the wreckage, he said.

"We were going pretty fast, about 70 miles an hour," said Greg Ford, 23, who was on the passenger train. "It went 'bang' and that was it. We were all over the place."

Roy Daniel, 37, was in the buffet car when "the train started stopping and we started falling on top of each other. We came to a stop and the (buffet) counter was sort of lodged on top of us. That saved us."

Chris Reeves, 38, of Southampton, also was in the buffet car. He said he saw "furniture and enormous lumps of metal flying everywhere."

"The whole of the buffet car disintegrated," Reeves said. "The roof split open like a ripe tomato and that's how we got out. We tried to find people underneath the rubble but there was so much debris, there was nothing we could do."

Today's was the third serious rail accident in a month in Britain. On Nov. 30, 15 passengers were injured when two express trains collided outside the Newcastle-upon-Tyne in northeast England. On Nov. 12, a driver was killed and 18 passengers badly hurt in a crash near St. Helens in northwest England.

The ambulance service said today's collision occurred at the bottom of an embankment, making it difficult to reach the injured. Some cars overturned, the fire brigade said.

Ten injured were ferried to five hospitals in a fleet of 20 ambulances.

British Rail said the commuter train was the 7:18 a.m. from Basingstoke, southwest of London, traveling along the main British Rail line to London's Waterloo station. The second train was the 6:14 a.m. from Poole, on England's southern coast, also heading toward Waterloo, British Rail said.

Emmanuel High School near the scene of the crash was used as a makeshift clinic.

Boys from the school scrambled down the banks to help rescue survivors, and elderly people at a nearby day center handed out tea to survivors.

NFL Playoff Picture Is Still A Mess

With One Week Left To Play, Very Few Teams Are Locks For Postseason Play

By Dave Goldberg
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Suddenly, with a week to go in the NFL season, the team that most everyone has been calling the best in the league for the past few weeks may not even make the playoffs because it can't beat the worst team.

To put it precisely, how can the Minnesota Vikings get to the Super Bowl when they've accounted for two of the three victories posted this season by the Green Bay Packers? Particularly in a year when more than half the 28 teams in the NFL remain alive after 15 weeks?

Four teams are in — Chicago, Buffalo and Cincinnati, all of whom had previously clinched playoff spots, and San Francisco, which beat New Orleans 30-17 Sunday. But only the Bills in the AFC East and the Bears in the NFC Central have clinched division titles.

AFC East

The Bills, 12-3, who clinched the division title three weeks ago, regained the home-field advantage by beating the Raiders 37-21 while Cincinnati was losing to Houston.

New England, 9-6, can gain a wild-card berth if it beats Denver next week while Cleveland, 9-5, loses tonight in Miami or at home to Houston next week.

Indianapolis, 8-7, is out if Cleveland wins once or it loses at home to Buffalo next week.

AFC Central

Cincinnati, 11-4, can clinch the division title if it beats Washington next Saturday, but will lose if the Redskins beat the Bengals and the Oilers win in Cleveland. Houston has a better record against common opponents.

Cleveland can't win the division but can clinch a wild-card by beating Miami and Houston and could still make the playoffs by losing one if New England loses at Denver.

AFC West

Seattle's 42-14 win over Denver Sunday night knocked out the Broncos.

It also makes the winner of the Seahawks-Raiders game the division titlist — Seattle, by virtue of a 9-7 record; Los Angeles because its intra-division record, 7-1, will prevail.

NFC EAST

The Giants, 10-5, can win the division title by beating the Jets "on the road" at Giants Stadium next Sunday. If they lose and the 9-6 Eagles beat Dallas, then Philadelphia wins the title because it beat New York twice.

If the Giants and Eagles both win, the Eagles may still have to depend on other circumstances to make it as a wild card.

NFC CENTRAL

The Bears, 12-3, are set. If the Vikings beat Chicago Monday night, they're assured of a home wild-card game. If they lose, they could be out of the playoffs altogether, depending on the games involving the Eagles, Giants, Rams, Saints and 49ers.

NFC WEST

The 49ers, 10-5 and Rams, 9-6, play in San Francisco Sunday night and won't know what they need to do until after the Saints-Falcons game in New Orleans and some of the other Sunday afternoon contests.

If the Saints, 9-6, win, that clinches the division for the 49ers because even if the Rams, Saints and 49ers are involved in a three-way tie, the 49ers come out best in the competition among the three — 3-1, to 2-2 for Los Angeles and 1-3 for New Orleans.

Monday Notebook:

Saturday night wasn't supposed to be like that. This was one the Pirates were supposed to win to keep on the right track toward an outstanding year under second year coach Mike Steele.

But it didn't turn out that way. Radford University brought in a veteran team that was loaded with quickness and was well-coached, to boot. The Highlanders got the ball down court in a hurry, but unless they had a good shot, they were extremely patient.

With the shot clock, a number of teams have been forced down to the 10-second mark and begun to be hurried, looking for any kind of shot. East Carolina's defense, on a number of occasions, forced the clock well inside the 10-second mark, but Radford never seemed to panic and always managed to find a good shot and usually made it pay off.

Time and again, they worked the ball around the perimeter, trying to pull the Pirate defense away from the basket. Then, if that happened, the Highlanders got the ball inside for a one-on-one situation and it usually resulted in a basket.

Coach Steele, after the game, was critical of his team's attitude going into the contest, noting a lack of effort on defense and offense.

Radford, certainly, was not a Duke nor a South Carolina. The Highlanders were no taller than the Pirates — ECU actually outrebounded them by 12. But they appeared more poised and it showed in the eventual result.

It leaves East Carolina with a 3-3 record, instead of the 4-2 it had hoped for at this point of the season. Coming up are two tough road games, at Winthrop next Thursday and at Mississippi State in two weeks. Those two wind up the pre-Christmas schedule for East Carolina.

Two years ago, the Pirates went to Winthrop and were thoroughly embarrassed by a much less-talented team. They have a chance to recoup that this week. It is another of those games that the Pirates need to win to keep their goals alive for the season. Mississippi State, while a name school, certainly is not a name program. However, it is another venture into a hostile environment, but the opportunity for a victory is there.

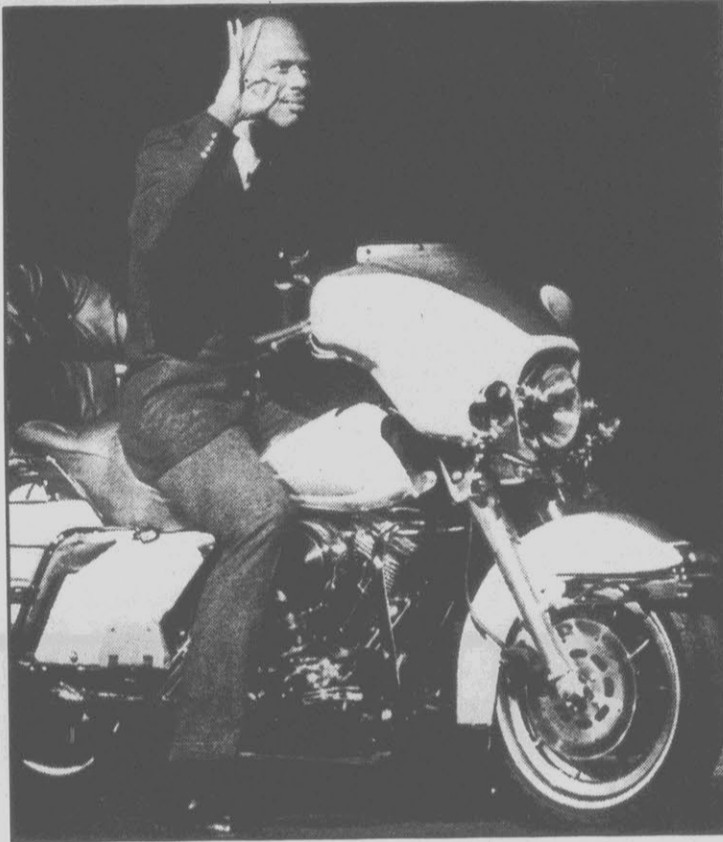

The Pirates, in their first two trips on the road, came away losers, although they definitely had the chance to win against South Carolina. They need to prove that they can win on the road, and these next two games give them the ideal opportunity.

There are strange doings in the Colonial Athletic Association thus far this year.

The league's coaches picked American University to win the championship, and the Eagles thus far have given little reason to toss that out the window. They thoroughly whipped Navy in the league's first game Saturday afternoon. No other league game is scheduled until after the first of the year.

George Mason, the team tabbed by the media to win, has gotten off to a less than auspicious start. The Patriots are 3-2, but have lost to several teams they could have been expected to beat. Saturday night, in the finals of the Heritage Classic, they outlasted Wright State (who?) in a double overtime. Returning CAA Player of the Year Kenny Sanders appeared to have taken up where he left off last year, leading the league in scoring and rebounding, but he appears to be getting little help.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar tries out another gift

Jabbar Returns

Milwaukee Honors Former Buck

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MILWAUKEE — When Kareem Abdul-Jabbar left Milwaukee in 1975 after six seasons and one NBA championship, fans revered him, opposing players could not stop him and sportswriters found him too quiet for their daily columns.

He's no longer unstoppable and somewhat more talkative, but 18,633 fans at the Bradley Center showed they hadn't forgotten Abdul-Jabbar as his farewell tour made its final stop in Milwaukee.

The beard, eye goggles and No. 33 uniform that were his trademark during his days with the Bucks in the early 1970s had given way to a sports jacket and tie — courtesy of a knee injury that has kept him out of the Los Angeles Lakers' lineup for the past two weeks.

"I've gone through so many personal changes ... but there's one thing that's never changed here and that's all the warmth and appreciation you've provided me with," he told the fans.

Abdul-Jabbar did not play Sunday when the Bucks defeated Los Angeles 95-94.

Instead, he turned over his role as the NBA's most dominant center to a younger generation of players.

"There are other players who have obviously taken over the more prominent type of recognition at the center position and they deserve it," Abdul-Jabbar said at a news conference.

"People like Akeem Olajawon and Patrick Ewing, their teams are doing well and they deserve some of the credit," added the NBA's all-time leading scorer.

ECU Fills Two More Positions

East Carolina head football coach Bill Lewis filled two more positions on his staff over the weekend.

Mark Richt, the quarterback coach at Florida State for the past four seasons, has been named offensive coordinator for the Pirates, while Donnie Thompson, special teams and defensive line coach under former coach Art Baker, was retained on the staff and named as inside linebacker coach.

Richt, 28, will coach the Seminoles through their Jan. 2 Sugar Bowl game against Auburn before arriving in Greenville.

"Mark and I want the same type of offense," Lewis said. "The information, tailback-oriented attack is one of the most exciting in college football. I think it is a type of offense that running backs and quarterbacks will be excited to play for."

Richt, a Boca Raton, Fla., native, is a 1982 graduate of Miami, and was the backup quarterback for three years to Jim Kelly, now the quarterback for the Buffalo Bills. He started five games in his senior season when Kelly was injured.

At Florida State, he has worked with quarterbacks Chip Ferguson, Peter Tom Willis and Danny McManus.

Thompson will be beginning his third year at East Carolina. Before coming to the Pirate program he served as linebacker coach at Western Kentucky for two years. Before that he was at the University of Pittsburgh for three years. Prior to his stint at Pittsburgh, Thompson served for six years at his alma mater, the University of Connecticut.

"It's a great opportunity to have a coach who has worked with both inside linebackers and the defensive line," Lewis said. "The two work so closely together. It takes a tremendous amount of cooperation between these two position coaches on the practice field and on the playing field."

Thompson received his bachelor's degree from Connecticut in 1975 and his master's in 1976.

Browns, Kosar Are Peaking

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Cleveland quarterback Bernie Kosar says the Browns are coming on strong at the end of the season. Browns coach Marty Schottenheimer says the same is true of Bernie Kosar.

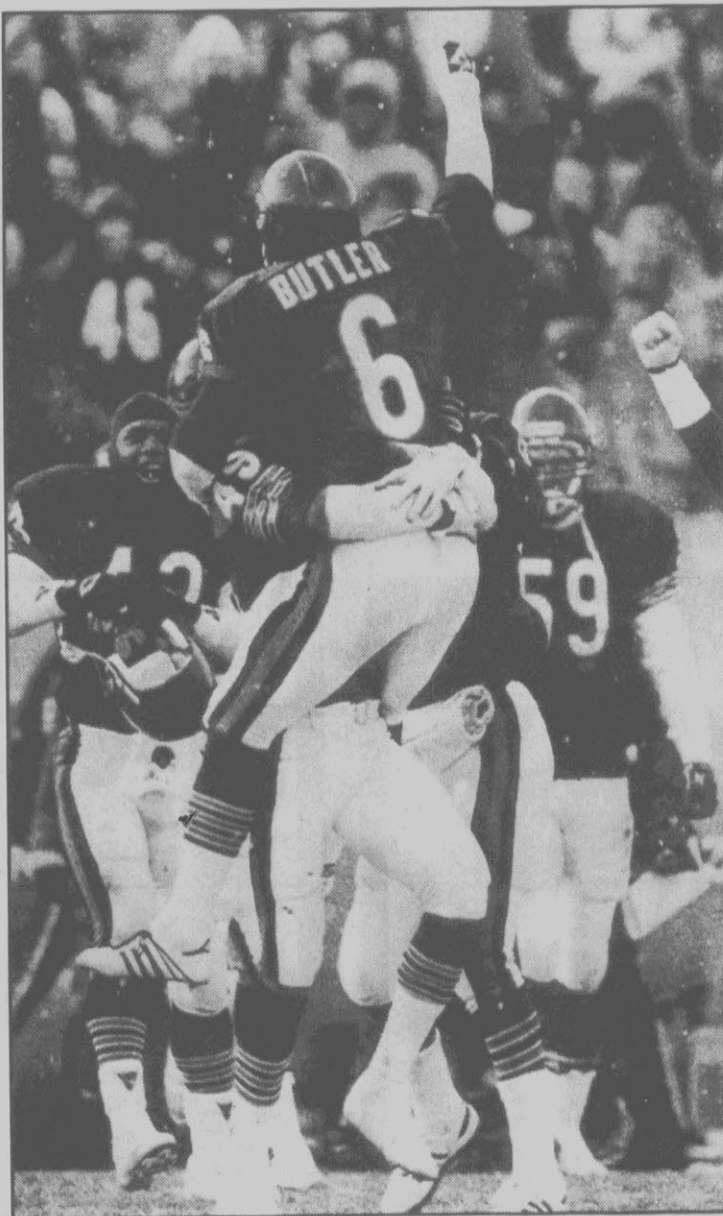

It's a good time for the Browns and Kosar to be playing well, because a victory tonight against troubled Miami would improve their chances for an AFC wild-card playoff berth.

"Considering all of our injuries, we haven't played up to our capabilities like we'd like to," Kosar said. "But our timing's starting to come back, and we've played pretty well the last couple of weeks. We've put ourselves in a position where we're still able to realize our goal."

The most serious injury was to Kosar, who missed nearly half the season with an ailing right elbow.

"Each week he improves," Schottenheimer said. "I think the last two ballgames have been the best performances of the season for him."

The Browns, 9-5, have won three straight. For the first time in four years, Cleveland won't win the AFC Central Division title, but victories over Miami and Houston would assure a wild-card playoff game at home.

Last Year's Super Bowl Teams Will Miss Playoffs

By Barry Wilner
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

While four NFL teams are in the playoffs and 11 others scramble for the remaining spots, the two Super Bowl squads of last January are gone.

For the first time, the defending NFC and AFC champions didn't even get into the playoffs. Super Bowl winner Washington was eliminated by losing to Dallas 20-17 Sunday, and Denver fell out when it was routed at Seattle 42-14.

As the Redskins and Broncos start thinking about rebuilding, the Chicago Bears can celebrate their fifth straight NFC Central championship. The Bears edged Detroit 13-12 and Minnesota lost to Green Bay 18-6, giving Chicago a two-game lead with one game remaining.

San Francisco clinched at least a wild-card berth with its 30-17 victory over New Orleans. The 49ers host the Rams next Sunday night and will clinch the division with a victory. The Rams defeated Atlanta 22-7.

Nobody secured anything in the AFC. The Seahawks took the lead in the West at 8-7, but must beat the Raiders in Los Angeles next week to win the division. The Raiders lost to Buffalo 37-21 Sunday.

Houston whipped Cincinnati 41-6 and can win the AFC Central with a victory over Cleveland next week and if the Bengals lose to Washington.

Buffalo has the best record in the AFC, 12-3, and is the East champ.

The New York Giants held their one-game lead over Philadelphia in the NFC East with a 28-12 decision against Kansas City. The Eagles beat Phoenix 23-17 Saturday.

Also, it was New England 10, Tampa Bay 7 in overtime, and San Diego 20, Pittsburgh 14.

In the other game Saturday, the New York Jets beat Indianapolis 34-16.

Tonight, Cleveland is at Miami.

Cowboys 24, Redskins 17

Dallas not only ended 10 weeks of losing, it blacked out the last remaining glimmer of playoff hope for the defending champions. Michael Irvin caught three touchdowns passes from Steve Pelluer and Washington, 7-8, committed five turnovers and gained only 24 yards on the ground in losing for the fourth time in five games.

"It's a great win for us, but to do it in RFK Stadium against the Redskins makes it all the sweeter," said 14-year veteran Randy White.

"It's got to rank up there with a championship win, a playoff win," safety Bill Bates said. "To go through a streak like we went through, and then to win here, is the greatest."

The Redskins went from the greatest to an also-ran.

"All season we've been coming up short," Ricky Sanders said.

"We turned it over again. ... You can't overcome that, and we've been doing it consistently," Redskins coach Joe Gibbs said.

Seahawks 42, Broncos 14

Curt Warner rushed for a team-record four touchdowns and Dave Krieg completed 19 of 22 passes for 220 yards and two scores. The Seahawks scored on all six of their possessions in the first three quarters.

Warner, coming off a career-low 10-yard rushing performance at New England last week, scored on a pair of 1-yard runs and from 13 and 12 yards. He rushed 23 times for 126 yards to go over the 1,000-yard rushing mark for the fourth time in his six-year career.

John L. Williams rushed for 109 yards, the second time both Williams and Warner have gone over 100 in a game this season.

"I can't explain it," Seahawks coach Chuck Knox said. "Every week is different in this league. This was this week and last week was last week."

Bears 13, Lions 12

Chicago's ninth straight victory over Detroit was helped by Ed Murray's missed extra point. That left the Bears room to win with a field goal, and Kevin Butler provided it, a 32-yarder

Crenshaw's Putting Keys World Cup Win

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — The United States' victory in the World Cup golf tournament was special to Ben Crenshaw.

Crenshaw rolled in a four-foot putt on the final hole Sunday to give the Americans their 17th World Cup. He and Mark McCumber combined to finish the tournament at 16-under, one shot ahead of Japan.

But what made it special for Crenshaw, who won individual honors with 275 total after Sunday's 74, was the site — the Royal Melbourne Golf Course, a layout he has long admired.

"To win something here is absolutely very special to me," he said. "I love the golf course so much, I just think it's a work of art and I was determined to try to do my best."

Japan skipped past Australia on the last hole to finish second at 15-under. Crenshaw and McCumber earned $88,000 each while Crenshaw pocketed an extra $46,000 for edging Jet Ozaki of Japan for individual honors.

He said he was surprised his first putt at the 18th hole went four foot past the cup and said he was "pretty jumpy inside" as he lined up to putt for the trophy.

"But it boils down to a matter of drive," he said.

Dream Round Earns Chrysler Win

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — George Burns said the final round he and Wayne Levi shot en route to a sudden-death victory over defending champions Mike Hulbert and Bob Tway in the $600,000 PGA Team championship was "a day you dream about."

"You've got to give Wayne credit," said Burns. "He never gives up." Levi sank a 38-foot birdie putt on the first playoff hole Sunday in the climax of an impressive round.

"I had an awful feeling in my stomach when I watched on TV and saw Hulbert sink that putt at the 18th," said Levi who says he has been playing all year with a sore thumb. "You just can't take anything for granted."

Starting the final round seven strokes off the lead, Levi and Burns shot a 13-under-par 59 over the 7,085-yard Cypress course at the Palm Beach Polo and Country Club.

They finished the four-day event at 252, 36 under par, and seemed almost certain of the $100,000 first prize as they sat in the clubhouse waiting for a few remaining pairs to finish.

Francis Added To Blue-Gray Roster

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Recording-setting Tennessee quarterback Jeff Francis and All-American tight end Wesley Walls of Mississippi have agreed to play on the South squad in the Blue-Gray All Star Football Classic on Christmas Day.

Also signed are Brad Baxter, the all-time leading rusher at Alabama State, and Lewis Tillman, who broke all of Walter Payton's rushing records at Jackson State.

Francis is the leading passer in Tennessee history, having directed the talent-short Vols to five straight victories after a 0-6 start. He will be joined at quarterback by Jay Gruen, who broke Johnny Unitas' passing records at Louisville.

Walls, the only two-way player in the Southeastern Conference, also played outside linebacker for Ole Miss.

Other offensive players selected for the South team are: running back Ivy Joe Hunter of Kentucky; wide receivers Tony Belser of Georgia Southern, Titus Dixon of Troy State, Floyd Turner of Northwestern Louisiana, and Rod Harris of Texas A&M; tight end Travis McNeal of Tennessee-Chattanooga; centers Jeff Garnica of North Carolina and Alan Champagne of Texas; and linemen Billy Michel of East Carolina, L.B. Moon of Texas A&M, Darrell Hamilton of North Carolina, Ben Jefferson of Maryland, and Kevin Simmons of Tennessee.

Defensive players selected for the game are: backs Anthony Greene of Wake Forest, David Johnson of Kentucky, Ray Crockett of Baylor, Alex Morris of Texas A&M, Stevon Moore of Mississippi, Merv Scurlock of Texas Tech and Terry Young of Georgia Southern; linebackers David Braxton of Wake Forest, Marlon Brown of Memphis State, Jeff Lageman of Virginia, Dana Batiste of Texas A&M and Richard Harvey of Tulane; and linemen Chris Gannon of Southwestern Louisiana, Mitchell Benson of Texas Christian, Desmond Royal of Texas Tech, Warren Powers of Maryland, Rodney Lowe of Mississippi, and Anthony Butts of Mississippi State.

New Doubles Team Is Emerging

LONDON (AP) — Stan Smith and Bob Lutz had it. So did John McEnroe and Peter Fleming and, in recent years, Ken Flach and Robert Seguso.

It's called teamwork, and on Sunday, another American men's doubles pair showed they have it in abundance.

"We work well together," said Rick Leach after he and Jim Pugh won the Masters Doubles title by beating Spain's Sergio Casal and Emilio Sanchez 6-4, 6-3, 2-6, 6-0.

"This is the first entire year we have played together and right from the start, it worked," Leach said.

The start came at the Australian Open in January when Leach and Pugh, in only their third Grand Prix tournament, won the men's doubles, beating Jeremy Bates and Peter Lundgren in a one-sided, three-set final.

Then came five more victories — in Munich, Washington, Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Detroit.

Richmond, which was picked for the second division, shocked Wake Forest and then lost to Campbell. Campbell, in turn, was crushed by the Deacons on Saturday. Richmond, meanwhile, gave North Carolina's Tar Heels all they could handle before losing by eight points in Greensboro, a "neutral" court.

UNC-Wilmington, another contender for the championship, is only 2-4, but is just getting star Larry Houzer back from an injury. They'll improve as he does.

Perhaps the surprise of the league is Lefty Driesell's James Madison team, currently 4-2. Sure, they haven't beaten anybody with a name, but they're gaining confidence that they can win and they probably will. Winning in JMU's Convocation Center is going to be very hard this year.

William & Mary, at 0-5, is a surprise, too. Coach Chuck Swenson said he expected to be improved this year, but the Indians haven't shown it yet.

Oh, well, there's still an awful lot of basketball to be played before the tournament in March. Right now, it's still anybody's race.

Coach Bill Lewis made his third staff addition Sunday when he added Mark Richt of Florida State as the offensive coordinator.

Richt is listed as only a volunteer coach at FSU, but he's been on the staff for six years now, the first two as a graduate assistant and the last two in his current capacity. As the quarterback coach, he's been credited with the development of such arms as Chip Ferguson, Peter Tom Willis and Danny McManus. As an undergraduate at Miami, he was the backup to Jim Kelly.

Lewis has said that he admires the offensive style of three programs, Miami's, LSU's, and Florida State's.

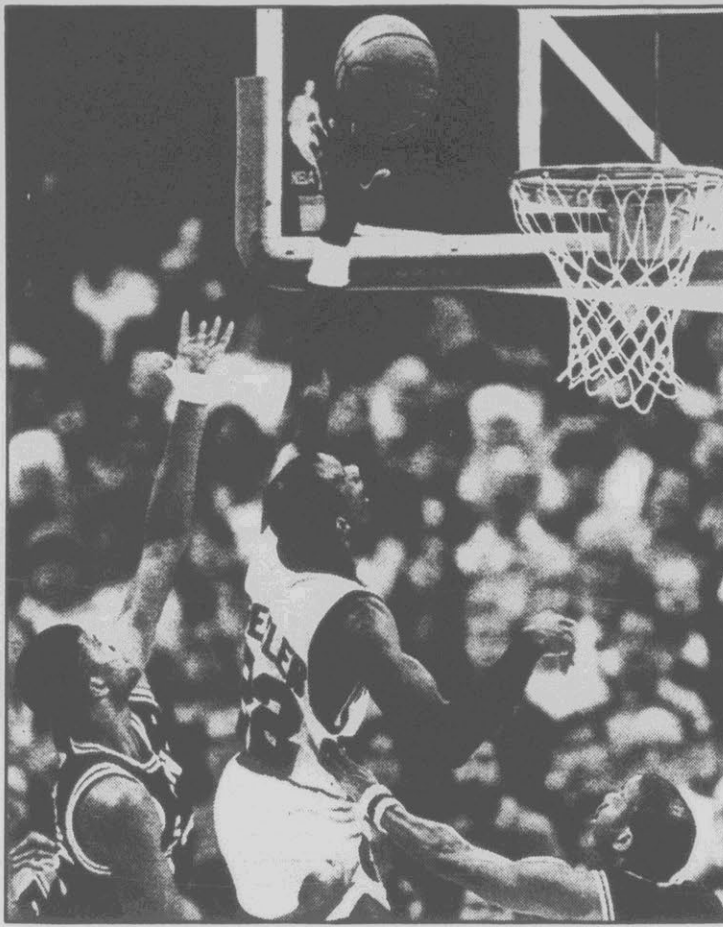

Getting Richt to join the staff would be his way of bringing the best elements of FSU's program to Greenville.

NFL Alumni Group Being Investigated

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHOENIX — A state grand jury investigating a fund-raising group affiliated with the National Football League has subpoenaed records of the group's president as part of what officials say is an effort to see whether money was diverted from charities.

Financial records of the National Football League Alumni Association and Pro Legends were subpoenaed by the grand jury for production today in Phoenix. Also subpoenaed were pay records and correspondence concerning a number of people including association president Victor Maitland and his relatives.

Doug Lang, the association's director of public relations, confirmed that his group was under investigation in Arizona but said he did not know whether a grand jury was involved.

"The inquiry is into the use of funds raised at the golf tournament" run by the group's Arizona chapter, Lang said from the association's headquarters in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. "Our attorneys have advised us that our Arizona chapter operated in compliance with all applicable rules."

He declined to say whether any other chapters were under investigation.

The association, comprised of former NFL players, has branches in most NFL cities and functions like a national fraternity with local chapters reporting to a central office.

The group operates independently of the NFL but with its blessings, league officials said last week.

"They're endorsed by us," said Peter Abitante, director of information for the NFL's American Football Conference. "They're wholly unto themselves but affiliated with us."

The alumni raise money by holding banquets and by staging a series of about 30 golf tournaments throughout the country, teaming former football players with paying participants, Lang said. The winning team from each tournament advances to a "Superbowl of golf."

Attorney General Bob Corbin confirmed last week that his office was investigating "a national charitable organization" affiliated with the NFL but declined to elaborate.

A source familiar with the probe told The Associated Press that the investigation was now in the hands of a grand jury, however, and that investigators were trying to determine how much money Maitland and others had received.

Grand jury proceedings are secret under Arizona law, and the source spoke on condition of anonymity.

Coaches

brings the number of coaches named by Lewis to four, three on defense and one on offense.

In related news, Lewis said that recruiting coordinator Carlester Crumpler and graduate assistant coach Charlie Tate have been cleared to actively recruit on the road in North Carolina. NCAA rules state that only nine full time assistant coaches can actively be on the road recruiting and since the Pirate staff has not been filled, permission was sought for Crumpler and Tate to recruit.

Bucks Use Big D To Defeat Lakers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MILWAUKEE — After his basket at the buzzer handed Los Angeles its first loss in eight games, Milwaukee's Jay Humphries said defense, not offense, was what won the game.

The Bucks failed to score for four minutes down the stretch Sunday night, but Humphries' 15-footer as time ran out gave Milwaukee a 95-94 victory over the two-time defending NBA champs.

"I'm positive that it would be very difficult to beat a team like the Lakers not scoring in the last four minutes, but I think we played decent defense the whole game and that made the difference," Humphries said.

In the only other NBA game Sunday, Portland outscored San Antonio 128-123 in overtime.

While Milwaukee's offense sputtered down the stretch, the Bucks' defense kept Magic Johnson scoreless in the second half and held the Lakers to their lowest point total of the season.

"When you weather that type of storm, you know we must have played good defense," said Bucks Coach Del Harris, whose team improved to 9-8.

Harris called a timeout with three seconds left to diagram the game-winning shot, but took no credit for Humphries' heroics.

"He got his own shot," Harris said. "He had to penetrate through some hands, and he was able to get a great shot."

Humphries took the inbounds pass from Paul Pressey near half-court, drove the lane and hit the jumper over two defenders.

Humphries said the ball was supposed to go to veteran Sidney Moncrief on the inbounds pass. But when it arrived, Humphries decided to fulfill one of his childhood dreams.

"Well, I hadn't ever made that shot before in the pros because I was never called upon to do it," he said. "But as kids we used to always practice shots like that, just dreaming one day we would hit the last-second shot that won the game."

The loss snapped a seven-game winning streak for Los Angeles, who played again without Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who was honored in pre-game ceremonies on his final visit to the city where his NBA career began.

Milwaukee trailed by as many as eight in the first half but took the lead with a 12-2 run midway through the third quarter.

Jack Sikma, who finished with 12 points, led the surge with six points. Moncrief, who led the Bucks with 23 points, added 7 third-quarter points.

The Lakers, however, surged midway through the fourth quarter and used eight Milwaukee turnovers to rally to a 94-93 lead on a 17-foot jumper by Michael Cooper with 2:00 left.

"It was a heck of a comeback, but we got stung in the end," Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley said. "You want to contain with a one-point lead and three seconds left, but we overextended our defense."

Riley said he was not concerned that the Bucks have swept the last four meetings between the two teams, but he was worried the most recent loss may have come at the expense of Byron Scott.

Scott, who entered averaging 21.7 points, suffered a sprained ankle in the first half. It was not immediately known whether he would miss his next start.

"It was tough to lose Byron Scott. He's our sticker from the outside," Riley said.

James Worthy scored 21 points to lead the Lakers, 15-4, while Johnson finished with 11 points and 12 assists.

Trail Blazers 128, Spurs 123, OT

Clyde Drexler scored nine of his season-high 41 points in overtime to lead Portland past San Antonio after the Spurs' Frank Brickowski missed two free throws with three seconds left and the score tied.

Drexler's three-point play and Terry Porter's foul shot at 3:58 of overtime were the first points of OT and broke a 110-110 deadlock.

Darwin Cook hit a jumper with two minutes left in overtime to bring San Antonio within 118-116.

Drexler then scored four points to keep Portland ahead for good.

Banker Has Plan To Cut Third World Debt

By Carl Hartman
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A leading international banker has a new plan to reduce the burden of debt owed by the Third World without cost to taxpayers in the United States and other creditor countries.

"The objective of lower debt service is sound and necessary for some (debtor countries), at least for a time," says Pedro-Pablo Kuczynski, chairman of First Boston International. "But the idea of using taxpayers' dollars to achieve what the market is already doing, albeit partially, is not."

Third World debt is expected to reach $1.2 trillion by the end of this year, and debt service has become an increasing drain on nations that can least afford it. The World Bank estimates that in 1987 Third World transfers to richer countries were $29 billion. Traditionally the flow had been in the other direction, in the same way that money flowed from Europe to this country when it was developing in the 19th century.

In an article for the current issue of the magazine "International Economy," Kuczynski proposes dividing the debts of countries such as Brazil and Mexico into two parts. Interest payments and delayed payments of principal on the first part would continue, but with the size of the debt discounted — possibly by 40 cents on the dollar.

How much of the debt that portion should contain would be established in a deal between the commercial banks and the World Bank, which is owned by 151 governments. They include both debtor and creditor countries.

On the second part, Kuczynski would require payments by a debtor country only under two conditions: if it earned more from world trade than an agreed amount, and if its reserves of gold and hard currency were greater than the projected payments. If those conditions were fulfilled in any given year, the World Bank would call on the debtor to pay at least part of the interest and principal owed. Total payments could be as little as 10 percent and as much as 125 percent of the debt.

This plan would go on for 10 years. At the end of that time, the debt in the second portion of the plan would be considered paid off. Payments on the first portion would continue.

Kuczynski estimated in a telephone interview that his plan could save heavily indebted Latin American countries as much as $13 billion a year in the first few years. Later the savings would be less, but the countries would be in a better position to pay.

A World Bank spokesman said officials are now reading Kuczynski's proposal and would have no immediate comment.

Motivation A Problem For West Bank Students

By Mary Sedor
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RAMALLAH, Occupied West Bank — Arab educators say they face a difficult task trying to motivate children deprived of classroom learning during Israel's long closure of West Bank schools.

They say they fear the system may never fully recover.

After a nearly 10-month shutdown, elementary schools are again abuzz with children's chatter. Junior high schools reopened Sunday and high schools are to resume next week, bringing all 300,000 West Bank students back to classes.

But, Arab educators warn, the West Bank's 1,194 schools may never achieve the same standard they maintained before being closed last Feb. 3, remaining shut for all but a few weeks since.

"In the limited period we have to catch up for nearly a year of lost education, I'm sure our standards will decline," said Khalil Mahshi, principal of the Quaker-run Friends Boys' School in Ramallah. "The quality of education we could provide before the closure has definitely been lost."

Army officials say schools were closed because they had turned into breeding grounds for protests during the year-old revolt against 21 years of Israeli occupation.

Authorities have indefinitely closed West Bank universities and colleges and Brig. Gen. Shaikhe Erez, head of the West Bank military administration, has warned that other schools will stay open only if they are "used for learning and not for demonstrations."

According to Palestinian educators, the closures have brought myriad difficulties, ranging from a decline in enrollment to unmotivated students who have lost the discipline of regular study.

"Our No. 1 problem is getting the children into the habit of coming to school regularly again," said Abdullah Rishmawi, principal of Ramallah's Lutheran School.

"For almost a full year, these children have been in the habit of watching TV until late at night and getting up at 9 or 10 in the morning. Now we are asking them to get back into the swing of school discipline. It is not going to be easy."

The task of catching up is further complicated by closure orders from the Palestine Liberation Organization. School officials will comply, closing at noon instead of the usual 1 p.m. for public schools and 3 p.m. for private schools.

Even though last year's academic term was unfinished, West Bank students were automatically promoted — often, educators fear, at the expense of basic skills.

"They have moved on to the next grade, but this really means nothing," Mahshi said. "In terms of learning, these students have lost a year."

Especially at risk, he said, are children in the primary grades.

"There are critical periods in a child's life when he begins to learn skills like reading, writing and numbers," Mahshi said. "If you miss that period, although he may eventually learn to read, a person will never reach the same level of competency."

Palestinian attempts at alternative study during the school closures were quickly outlawed by the Israeli army, which claimed they were organized to incite civil unrest.

Israeli Troops Kill Guerrillas

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli soldiers killed two guerrillas before dawn today in Israel's self-proclaimed security zone in southern Lebanon, a military spokesman said.

No Israeli troops were hurt in the clash, the spokesman said. Troops opened fire after encountering the guerrillas during a routine patrol in the central sector of the 6-to-10-mile-wide security zone near the village Barachit, the army said.

The guerrillas were heavily armed with submachine guns, hand grenades and rocket-propelled grenades, the army said. Israel army radio said they were probably planning to attack an Israeli target within the security belt.

It was the third clash between soldiers and guerrillas in the last 2½ weeks. Two guerrillas were killed in two separate firefights on Nov. 27 and Nov. 30.

Israel carved out the security zone in 1985 when it pulled the bulk of its troops out of Lebanon three years after invading the nation. The border strip, designed to curb guerrilla raids into Israel, is patrolled by hundreds of Israeli troops and the South Lebanon Army, a mostly Christian militia of 1,500 men trained and equipped by Israel.

Bowers Retires After 36 Years

Sam Bowers, Jr. was honored Saturday night, December 2nd, at Parkers Barbecue with a dinner shared with employees and family.

Sam was presented a wood frame weather clock by District Manager, Billy Mizell and D.C. Long, Regional Manager.

Sam started in the gas business in 1952 with Combs Rulane in Greenville, N.C. Suburban Propane purchased Combs Rulane 1956 where he worked as a plant operator, serviceman and tank truck deliveryman.

Texas Eastern purchased Suburban Propane south eastern, N.C. in 1979. While employed by Texas Eastern, Pyrofax Gas Co. and Petrolane, Sam worked as delivery service technician. In 1986 Sam is back with Suburban Propane where he retired on September 1, 1988.

From 1952 to 1972, Sam received a 20 year award. Also, from 1952 to 1977, Sam was presented a watch for 25 years of service.

In 1983, Sam won delivery and performance of the year in the South East Region. In 1984, he won the Honor Employee of the Year N.C. L.P. Gas Association. Also in 1985, Sam brought back home a $500.00 prize for 1st place in the Tank Truck Driver Rodeo which was held in Fayetteville, N.C.

Sam is to be commended for an excellent driving record...36 years without a chargeable accident.

Sam and his wife, Mildred Brooks Bowers, are looking forward to spending more time with their children and their 5 grandchildren. They are planning to travel and go fishing more now.

All who know Sam wish him much happiness in the years to come.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠32 ♥A1093 ♦A65 ♣AQ83
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass ?
 What do you respond?
 A.—While you have the strength and distribution for a jump to two no trump, your prime values suggest that a suit contract might be better. Start a probe by bidding two clubs.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠32 ♥A1093 ♦A65 ♣AQ83
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
 2 ♣ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—With only a single diamond stopper and one tenace, don't commit the hand to no trump yet. Just bid three hearts and see what partner does.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠32 ♥A1093 ♦A65 ♣AQ83
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
 2 ♣ Pass 3 ♥ Pass.
 3 ♣ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—The time has come to commit the hand to game—but not three no trump. Partner's bidding has shown a good six-card or longer spade suit, and probably no diamond stopper. Since you have at least an eight-card spade fit, bid four spades.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠72 ♥954 ♦KQ10953 ♣84
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Db1 ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—In the modern style, a jump shift response after a takeout double is preemptive, and this would be a perfect jump to three diamonds. If that weapon isn't in your arsenal, bid two diamonds. Since a strong hand would either redouble or jump, that must show a reasonable suit and little else.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠762 ♥AK3 ♦954 ♣AQJ8
 Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
 A.—With only three-card support, don't jump raise partner's suit if there is any alternative—especially with such a balanced hand. Respond two clubs, then vigorously raise hearts next.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠QJ9 ♥AJ6 ♦K1052 ♣KQ3
 Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?
 A.—With 16 high-card points, you can expect to make slam if partner is at the top of his range. You can issue an invitation by bidding four no trump. That's not Blackwood—to ask for aces you would use the Gerber Four Club Convention. You are simply asking partner to bid a slam if he has a maximum no trump opener.

Have Dinner With Miss Ruby

By Mary MacVean
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A holiday dinner as sassy and sumptuous as the one Miss Ruby serves up is a feast indeed.

The table is set Tuesday on PBS for "Miss Ruby's Southern Holiday Dinner," and even Yankees will feel right at home with New York restaurateur Ruth Adams Bronz, aka "Miss Ruby," and her guests: humorist Roy Blount Jr., entertainer Pearl Bailey, Annie Potts of "Designing Women," and food writer Craig Claiborne.

Together they cook, eat and talk about some of the hallmarks of a Southern Christmas feast — Smithfield ham, which "looks funny, tastes real good," says Bronz; red-eye gravy; red snapper stuffed with crab; turkey and cornbread stuffing; scalloped oysters and derby pie. It's a delightful hour, for cooks and for eaters.

Bronz, whose restaurant features a changing menu of regional American foods, was "raised in Texas by a Louisiana grandmother" and so qualifies as a Southern cook. But she acknowledges at the start that some will disagree with her version of the dishes: "Every Southerner believes his South is the only true one."

Her guests come from Virginia (Bailey), Georgia (Blount), Kentucky (Potts), and Mississippi (Claiborne), and have a range of experience in the kitchen. Blount, for instance, mostly puts things in and takes things out of the oven, tastes the food, and comments on it: "This is the prettiest ham. I've seen little children that weren't as pretty."

Over cocktails, Potts and Bronz laugh about fruitcakes and Yankees, and Claiborne and Blount discuss childhood Christmases, including Claiborne's memories of breakfasts of quail and ham with red-eye gravy and grits.

When Claiborne makes his cornbread stuffing, he notes that it's "not essential to cook these innards until they're quite well-done" because they'll cook in the turkey. But Blount wanders into the kitchen, takes a handful of stuffing and bites into a raw gible, which Claiborne calls "chicken gizzard sashimi."

At one point, Bronz coerces Blount and Potts to pick crab for the snapper stuffing. As they work on a big pile of blue crabs, they giggle and reminisce, and Blount, who steals a few bites and gets caught with crabmeat on the end of his nose, lets on that he's borrowed Claiborne's apron.

"When I used to try to cook things, people used to say, 'You couldn't wear Craig Claiborne's apron.' But I showed them," he says.

When Bronz was working with producer Robert Kanter and director Michael Wolkowitz to plan "Miss Ruby's Southern Holiday Dinner," it was decided to try to fit the celebrity guests in with the cooking, said Bronz.

Orbison Remembered At Services

By Joe Edwards
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GALLATIN, Tenn. — Rock 'n' roll pioneer Roy Orbison was remembered at the first of two memorial services planned for him as a legendary performer who touched millions worldwide.

Seventy-five friends and music industry associates attended a 30-minute service Sunday at the College Heights Baptist Church, where Orbison worshiped when he was in Tennessee.

Orbison, whose recording career spanned 30 years, died of a heart attack Tuesday night in the Nashville suburb of Hendersonville while visiting friends and relatives. He was 52.

"He became a legend in his own time," the Rev. Larry Gilmore said in his eulogy. "He touched the lives of millions throughout the world."

"His ability in music is unquestioned. A world has benefited from what he shared in the music industry."

Orbison was best known for his 1960s-era hits "Oh, Pretty Woman," "Only the Lonely" and "Cryin'." But he cultivated a new generation of fans in recent months as a member of the Traveling Wilburys with ex-Beatle George Harrison, Bob Dylan and Tom Petty.

Orbison was known for his ever-present sunglasses, dark attire and ebony pompadour. Many of his songs were about lost love and loneliness.

The second memorial, called by his family a "celebration of life," is scheduled for Tuesday night at a nightclub in Los Angeles near where Orbison lived for the past four years.

Among those attending Sunday's memorial were Orbison's brother, Sam, and one of his three sons, Wesley.

Orbison's body was flown Saturday to Los Angeles. Barbara, his widow, flew to Los Angeles on Wednesday from her native Germany, where she was visiting relatives when the singer died.

Actor Castellano Dies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NORTH BERGEN, N.J. — Actor Richard Castellano, nominated for an Oscar and a Tony for his role in "Lovers and Other Strangers," has died of heart failure. He was 55.

Among his best-known roles were his portrayal of Mafia lieutenant Clemeza in the film "The Godfather" and his part as co-star in the television series "The Super."

The New York City native, who died Saturday at his North Bergen, N.J., home, gained an Academy Award nomination for best supporting actor in 1970 for his role in the film "Lovers and Other Strangers." He was nominated for a Tony for the same role in the theatrical version of the work in 1968.

He also appeared on Broadway in Peter Weiss' "The Investigation," Frank Gilroy's "That Summer, That Fall," and in Art Buchwald's "Sheep on the Runway."

A statement issued Sunday by his wife, actress and writer Ardell Sheridan, 45, said the couple had been working on a book titled "History of the Method," which chronicles the genesis of method acting.

"It was Mr. Castellano's dream to pass on his acting legacy to aspiring actors, writers and directors in an easily understood and applied formula," Mrs. Sheridan said.

She said she planned to continue her husband's work.

Castellano also is survived by his daughter, Margaret Castellano Moller, his sister and an aunt.

Funeral services are scheduled for Wednesday in North Bergen.
