Israel Rejects Arafat Proposal

U.N. Told PLO Still Committed To Eliminating Jewish State

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GENEVA — The Palestine Liberation Organization remains committed to the elimination of the Jewish state and thus can never be a partner in any peace talks, Israel told the U.N. General Assembly today.

U.N. Ambassador Johanan Bein said "vague phraseology" of the PLO's declaration in Algeria "cannot hide the PLO's commitment to the common denominator that unites all its factions: the path of rejection, violence and terror."

Therefore, he said, the "PLO can never be a negotiating partner" with Israel. Several members of the PLO delegation walked out during Bein's speech.

Bein made no reference to Tuesday's speech by PLO chairman Yasser Arafat in which he appealed to Israel's leaders to join the PLO in direct, U.N.-supervised talks and presented a three-stage "peace initiative."

Arafat in his 80-minute speech asked Israel and other nations "to come here, under the sponsorship of the United Nations, so that together we can forge that peace."

Arafat's peace initiative called for starting with "a serious effort" under U.N. guidance to set up an international Middle East peace conference.

He proposed that "occupied Palestinian land" be placed under U.N. supervision, with an international force deployed to protect the Palestinians and oversee withdrawal of Israeli troops. He did not specify whether he was referring only to the West Bank and Gaza, occupied by Israel in 1967.

But Arafat upset some when he paid tribute to the yearlong Palestinian uprising in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. At least 323 Palestinians and 13 Israelis have died in the revolt.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vladimir Petrovsky said Arafat's speech "opens a window of new opportunities" to resolve the Middle East conflict.

Study Panel Says Lawmakers Need Pay Raise, But With Costly Strings

By Jim Drinkard

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A presidential advisory commission is proposing a hefty pay raise for Congress, but it also is pushing lawmakers toward a dilemma: whether to abandon income from speaking fees in return for higher salaries.

"Members of Congress are caught in a vise between editorial writers and reporters, who are opposed to honoraria, and voters, who are opposed to pay raises," said Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, who will be the Senate majority leader in the next Congress.

"It is apparent, however, that there is a serious perception problem regarding honoraria, which Congress will have to consider along with the salary issue early next year," Mitchell said in a statement.

The Commission on Executive, Legislative and Judicial Salaries met on Tuesday and approved recommendations for pay increases averaging 50 percent next year for the government's top 2,500 officials. That would send members of Congress from their current pay of $89,500 to $135,000.

But in an unusual move, the panel also included strong language linking the pay boost to a ban on congressional speaking fees, which reached a record $9.8 million in 1987. Such a ban would require separate action by Congress.

House leaders have spoken out in favor of such a ban. In the Senate, where members are allowed to take home more in speaking fees and are generally in greater demand as speakers, the issue is more difficult.

It is now up to President Reagan to decide whether to accept or modify the commission's recommendations. He will include his decision in the budget he sends Congress on Jan. 9, and any pay raise would automatically take effect 30 days later unless both the House and Senate vote to head it off.

Mitchell was noncommittal on the pay raise, saying only that he looked forward to reviewing the president's suggestions. Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said he would meet with Mitchell on the subject next week.

In the House, leaders said they planned to support both the increase that the president recommends and

Shopping Center Set For Charles

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The city of Greenville has issued a building permit to allow the construction of a 51,620-square-foot shopping center at the southwest corner of 14th Street and Charles Boulevard.

Ginger Barber, city permit officer, said the shopping center will include up to 13 stores, anchored by a 32,960-square-foot Harris-Teeter Supermarket. Also planned on the site is a 9,720-square-foot Kerr Drug store, and approximately 11,000 square feet of space for retail shops.

Ms. Barber said the $1,537,375 project, to be called "University Center," will also include 273 on-site parking spaces.

An Atlanta firm, Griffith and Associates, is the developer for the project, while the architecture is by Setzer, Brodte and Goodwin Architects from Charlotte. The John S. Clark Co., based in Winston-Salem, is the contractor for the development.

Don Tomberlin, spokesman for Griffith and Associates, said construction on the project will begin either today or Thursday with completion estimated for late summer, 1989.

Tomberlin described the shopping center as brick buildings with a metal canopy that will extend over the sidewalk. The stores will have glass fronts.

"We hope to attract retail tenants such as men's and ladies' clothing stores, a deli, a computer store, video stores, typical upscale retail establishments," Tomberlin said.

He said Charlotte-based Harris-Teeter has approximately 130 supermarkets in North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and Tennessee.

The 4.98-acre corner lot was formerly occupied by the historic Patrick-Arthur house, which was relocated to a city-owned parcel of land on Nov. 29.

GUC Will Install Rural Lighting

By Stuart Savage

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Residents of subdivisions in rural areas served by the Greenville Utilities Commission now have a way to have street lights installed throughout the development thanks to action by the GUC board Tuesday night.

GUC's board members adopted a rural street lighting policy and rate schedule that will allow lighting — to city standards — of residential subdivisions consisting of single-family dwellings outside the corporate limits of the city.

Malcolm Green, GUC's general manager, said a number of rural subdivisions have no lighting. Developers frequently have lights installed in others and will pay the monthly rate during development. But at some point the developers' responsibility for lighting ends and no mechanism exists to directly bill customers in the development.

The policy adopted by the board Tuesday night provides a method to directly bill the end user a pro-rated share of the cost, with the developer, in new subdivisions, paying all costs the first year.

Street lighting provided under the new policy requires 100 per cent participation by owners or tenants in a development, with monthly rates ranging from $1.68 per month for each customer to $1.74 per month,

Fire Damages Floor In ASU Dormitory

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

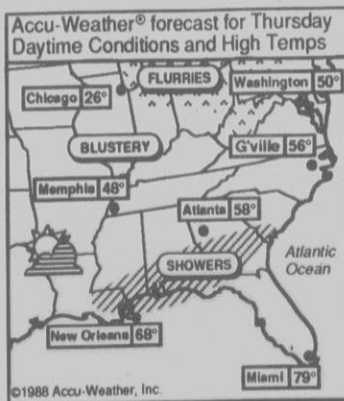

BOONE, N.C. — A fire early today at a women's dormitory forced the evacuation of about 300 Appalachian State University students, but officials said no one was injured in the blaze.

The fire broke out about 1:50 a.m. at Eggers Dormitory near the football stadium on campus, resident facilities director Doug Canipe said.

Canipe said the fire destroyed one room on the seventh floor of the nine-story building, causing $25,000 in damage. The 34 women who live on the seventh floor will be assigned to other on-campus housing, he said.

The cause of the fire was under investigation, officials said.

Lewis Named Winner In Court Election

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

John B. Lewis of Farmville has won the recount for a seat on the North Carolina Court of Appeals, according to state election officials. He is to be sworn in Jan. 3 in his hometown.

"Judge (Donald) Smith (of Raleigh) called and was very, very gracious in his congratulations ... I'm most grateful it is over. It's not something I would suggest for anyone with a weak heart," Lewis, 52, a Democrat, said of his narrow win over Smith, a Republican incumbent appointed to the court by Gov. Jim Martin.

Lewis, a special Superior Court judge whose term ends Dec. 31, polled 983,850 votes in the Nov. 8 general election, winning by nearly 16,000 votes. The slim victory allowed Smith to call for a recount.

State election officials were conducting their second audit of the statewide recount this morning, and the exact totals were not available. But Alex Brock, chairman of the state board, said Lewis is the clear winner.

"It would be safe to print in headlines, if you choose: Jack Lewis wins," Brock said. "He wins unequivocally."

Lewis' final margin of victory will likely drop some from the Nov. 8 spread, but Brock said Smith has already been notified that he has lost.

In the Pitt County recount, Lewis picked up 98 votes and Smith gained 44 votes. With 20,120 votes, Lewis nearly doubled Smith's total in Pitt County.

All 100 counties participated in the recount last Thursday and Friday, and Lewis said waiting for final results was tedious.

Lewis, who is holding court in Greenville this week, said he learned of his win late Tuesday afternoon after calling the state election board.

It was nice to learn of his victory while working in his home county, he said. He had been presiding over a death case in Statesville the first three weeks of November and was out of town during the general election.

One year ago this week Lewis was also holding court in Greenville, he said, and he announced his candidacy Dec. 16, 1987, on the steps of the courthouse.

He is to be sworn in Jan. 3 at 11 a.m. in the new town hall in Farmville, he said. Most likely, the person swearing him in will be Sidney S. Eagles Jr., a judge on the Court of Appeals and a Wilson native. Lewis said he is related to Eagles by a distant marriage.

Though Lewis won, he said the state should change its method of electing judges. The judicial code of ethics bars judicial candidates from stating views on issues; they may only discuss their qualifications for the bench.

"Having to run in 100 counties without a platform, without being able to discuss anything except one's own qualifications ... is something that's just a terrible system, in my opinion," Lewis said.

As a result, voters know very little about the candidates. "That's not the best way to elect judges, in my opinion," he said.

Campaign rules should either be relaxed so that judicial candidates are able to take stands on issues, or there should be some type of merit selection, an option Lewis said he favors.

Lewis graduated from Farmville High School and received his undergraduate degree and law degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

After passing the state bar exam in 1961, Lewis entered the U.S. Navy and served on the U.S.S. Coral Sea in Japan and Vietnam until 1966. He is a captain in the Naval Reserve and a certified military judge.

Lewis worked in private law practice in Pitt County from 1967 to 1982, when Gov. Jim Hunt of Wilson appointed him a special Superior Court judge.

Washington Family Wins Cable TV Contest

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Charles Seighman, 18, and his Washington, N.C., family are the winners of a cable television Nickelodeon network contest which has made them $10,000 richer.

As well as winning the contest, the family got the experience of being filmed performing a situation comedy in their home after Seighman gained them entry into a Nick at Nite "Do It Yourself Sitcome Special" contest on cable.

The Seighmans — Charles, his mother Martha, also known as "Bubbles the Clown," his father Jerry Sr. and his brothers Jerry and Thomas — all took part in two days of filming in October after they were announced among three finalist families for the award. Having previously been one of eight entrant groups interviewed, they played a script that had been written especially to fit their family situation.

As part of the contest entry, Charles had described living in an active family in which Mom has been a professional clown for longer than he could remember. A 15-member film crew from California worked in the home on a recent Sunday and Monday.

And this past week, the Seighman segment titled "Everybody Loves A Clown" was shown on the Nickelodeon network, along with the two others about families in New York and Iowa. Then the Seighmans entry was announced as the winner.

The Seighmans have the whole experience on videotape. They say they haven't decided what they'll do with the after-taxes money.

Nickelodeon is part of the service package offered by Greenville Cable TV.

Load Management Savings Reported

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Greenville Utilities Commission's load management program has been credited with saving $154,021 in wholesale power costs during November.

Roger Jones, GUC's superintendent of electric systems, told the GUC board Tuesday night that the load management system was in full operation between 7 a.m. and 8 a.m. on Nov. 30, at the time of Carolina Power and Light Company's system peak.

The $154,021 in savings, Jones said, included $73,359 from operation of radio-controlled Beat-the-Peak switches on water heaters, $72,408 from voltage adjustments and more than $6,000 for operation of generators at GUC's water plant and at Procter & Gamble Paper Products.

Since January 1985, GUC's load management program has saved more than $6.24 million in wholesale power costs, according to Jones.

At the end of November there were 18,280 load management switches in service on water heaters and central air conditioning systems throughout GUC's service area.

Jones reported that workers are in the process of installing new radio controlled switches which will add electric heat strips on heat pumps to the load management program. The heat pump-strip program was approved in October and by the end of November, Jones said, there were 77 customers participating.

In another cost management effort, Jim Anderson, superintendent of GUC's gas department, reported that the purchase of well head natural gas during August, September and October saved the GUC $45,266 in natural gas costs.

Anderson said the purchase of well head gas and associated transportation costs during the three-month period totaled $260,941. If the same amount of gas had been purchased from North Carolina Natural Gas, GUC's wholesale supplier, the cost would have been $306,208, Anderson said.

Robbie Tugwell, who head GUC's cash back rebate program, said the N.C. Department of Commerce's Energy Division has extended the contract for the rebate program until Jan. 31, 1990.

Originally scheduled to expire Jan. 31, 1989, the rebate program pays half the difference in the cost of high efficiency appliances — such as heat pumps, air conditioners, gas and oil furnaces — and regular models.

Tugwell said so far 288 customers have installed 372 qualifying pieces of equipment. "Their estimated energy-dollar savings," Tugwell said, "are in excess of $36,000 annually."

The extension of the contract will allow rebates to be disbursed to customers who purchase qualifying equipment before Dec. 31, 1989, or until all funds are distributed, whichever comes first.

GUC OKs Lighting

depending on the type of lighting installed.

While developers of new subdivisions pay the cost of street lighting for the first year, restrictive covenants would subject existing and future owners or tenants to the monthly charge thereafter.

In existing developments all property owners would be required to sign documents committing them to participation.

In the case of new and existing subdivisions, monthly billing for street lighting would continue until the development is annexed into the corporate limits of a municipality, at which time billing for the lighting would be transferred to the governmental unit.

The board — following previous action by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, the Greenville City Council and the Winterville town board — approved an agreement establishing a planning boundary between Greenville and Winterville. In connection with the boundary agreement, GUC agreed to purchase more than 7,700 feet of water line from Winterville for $60,000.

In other action, the board selected Scott Consulting Group to do a long-range goal and expansion study of GUC's gas distribution system provided cost of the plan can be negotiated not to exceed $35,000. The board selected the firm of Heath and Associates to do engineering work for a proposed installation of natural gas mains in the Brook Valley subdivision.

Bids for the purchase of material and labor awarded at the meeting included: $98,312 for 63,440 pounds of conductor from Eastern Electric Supply Inc.; $5,727 for 3,700 pounds of conductor from Eastern Electric; $58,518 for 175 horizontal post insulators from Eastern Electric; $2,355 for 150 line post insulators from Westinghouse Electric Supply Co.; $88,134 for 77 wooden transmission poles from Niederreyer-Martin Co.; $6,555 for 190 trunnion clamps from Eastern Electric; $6,602 for 190 armor rods from Hesco Inc.; $7,110 for labor to install an overhead distribution circuit from the Winterville Substation to Sheraton Village to E&R Inc., and $17,400 for labor to install an overhead distribution circuit from Hudson's Crossroads to Black Jack from E&R.

Animal Rights

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Officials at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill issued a seven-page response to charges by a national animal rights activists group, refuting the group's charges that UNC was mistreating a monkey, dogs and cats at an animal holding facility.

"Their observations were limited and their facts inaccurate or incomplete," said Dr. Stuart Bondurant, dean of the School of Medicine, in a report Tuesday to UNC Chancellor Paul Hardin.

"As a result, virtually all of their allegations and conclusions are erroneous," Bondurant said.

The dean's report was sent with a cover letter by Hardin to Ingrid Newkirk, the leader of People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, the Washington-based group that entered the Animal Resources Center in southwestern Orange County on Dec. 2.

U.S. Says Arafat Fell Short Of Conditions

He repeated the Soviet stand that only an international peace conference can solve the Middle East conflict.

In Cairo, Egypt, President Hosni Mubarak today praised Arafat's speech and disputed Washington's view that it failed to meet U.S. requirements. "I do not know what more is required from Arafat," Mubarak said.

The U.S. State Department said Arafat failed to recognize explicitly Israel's right to exist, a Washington precondition for recognizing the PLO.

The State Department tried through public and private diplomacy to persuade the PLO to renounce terrorism in all forms and expand on its declaration of independence last month by explicitly recognizing Israel's right to exist.

Arafat said the conference should be held on the basis of U.N. Resolutions 242 and 338 to "respect the right to exist in peace and security for all." The resolutions guarantee the rights of all nations in the Middle East to exist within secure borders.

On the issue of terrorism, Arafat said: "I, as chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, hereby once more declare that I condemn terrorism in all its forms."

But he immediately added he also was saluting "those sitting before me who, in the days when they fought to free their countries from the yoke of colonialism, were accused of terrorism by their oppressors, and who today are the faithful leaders of their peoples."

In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles Redman said the speech contained "interesting and positive" elements but "did not meet our conditions" for recognizing the PLO.

He said that, in contacts through Sweden, the United States had responded to a PLO request to clarify its conditions.

"We received suggestions from third parties that Arafat would be willing to make a clear, unambiguous statement," Redman said. "Clearly, he did not."

Arafat was invited to address the General Assembly in Geneva after Secretary of State George P. Shultz refused him a visa last month to speak to the world body at its headquarters in New York.

Last month in Algiers, the Palestine National Council, the PLO's parliament-in-exile, declared an independent state and accepted resolutions 242 and 338 as basis for an international conference, implying acceptance of Israel's right to exist.

Kidnapping Plea

WILMINGTON (AP) — A woman who had already pleaded guilty to kidnapping the wife of a Wilmington doctor pleaded guilty Tuesday in Onslow County Superior Court to kidnapping a 75-year-old woman.

Allison Pack Kalkbrenner also agreed to testify against her husband in the case.

Mrs. Kalkbrenner was sentenced along with Robert Lee Kalkbrenner on Dec. 5 in New Hanover County Superior Court for the June 20 kidnapping of Agnes A. Bachman, wife of a Wilmington doctor. Mrs. Kalkbrenner received a 30-year sentence and Kalkbrenner received a 40-year sentence.

Mrs. Kalkbrenner, 33, was charged with kidnapping Anna Felici after New Hanover County authorities made arrests in the Bachman case. Mrs. Felici had been kidnapped Feb. 8.

On Tuesday, Mrs. Kalkbrenner pleaded guilty to second-degree kidnapping and conspiracy, said Onslow County Assistant District Attorney Walter Paramore. The state suspended sentencing in return for Mrs. Kalkbrenner's signed agreement to testify against her 56-year-old husband.

Congressional Pay Raise Proposed

the ban on outside speaking fees. "Any honoraria known to mankind or yet to be conceived should be covered" by the ban, said Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., the No. 3 official in the Democratic leadership.

But Coelho said leaders are braced for an onslaught of criticism from the public and from lawmakers who fear the political backlash of accepting such a large raise when their salaries already are far higher than the average American's.

It appeared likely that, as in 1986, the Senate would vote to turn down the raise and the House would take the heat for allowing the 30-day clock to run out without voting on the increase.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist welcomed the pay-raise proposal, saying it "is bound to be encouraging to the nation's federal judges."

"The commission's salary recommendations would restore to those judges the cuts in real income which have been caused by inflation over the last 20 years," Rehnquist said.

Commission chairman Lloyd Cutler said federal courts have been particularly hard hit by the erosion in salaries caused by inflation. "Judges are leaving in droves," he said, because they can make far more money in private legal practice.

Ralph Nader, the self-styled consumer advocate, contested the commission's argument that it was only seeking to restore purchasing power lost by members of Congress and other federal officials over the past two decades. He noted that in 1964, lawmakers were paid $22,500. Two years ago they received a $12,100 increase to the current level of $89,500.

"It sounds like members of Congress and their peers in the other branches of government have kept up with inflation quite well," he said. "While members of Congress have been overly generous to themselves, they have failed to act to increase wages for the 6.7 million workers who are at or below the minimum wage." Nader said.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Alternatives Can Be Loopholes

Alternatives are just that — a choice between two or more options.

But when it comes to punishment for crimes, an alternative to incarceration, when used incorrectly, can become a loophole.

And when advocates offer alternative methods of punishment as an answer to North Carolina's prison overcrowding, they are only addressing half the problem.

Electronic surveillance, intensive probation and community penalty programs are innovative, methods of punishment that can, if correctly administered, help lessen crime. They are less expensive than incarceration, and for the right group of offenders, can be more effective. Often, these kinds of punishment can address the problem that prompts lawbreaking while simple incarceration cannot.

But these alternatives have limits. They should not apply to habitual or violent criminals, nor should they apply to drug trafficking offenses.

Neither should they be used by North Carolina as an excuse to cop out on its responsibility to provide adequate prison space for duly-convicted criminals. The state faces a jail cell crisis. It now must release lawbreakers periodically to ease overcrowding and avoid a federal takeover of its prison system.

Part of the reason for this predicament is the fact misdemeanor criminals are placed in the custody of the state Department of Corrections instead of in local jails, as they are in other states.

And part of the reason is the lack of sound alternatives to incarceration in appropriate circumstances.

But a big part of the problem is North Carolina's failure to plan adequately — its failure to anticipate the pressures the population growth of the past decade has placed on its prison system. The state hasn't expanded its prison space significantly in the last 10 years — while the number of offenders was growing rapidly. That occurrence is not uncommon in a state where the number of people per square mile has escalated sharply — in a short time.

Now, because of its sentencing methods and its limited amount of jail space, North Carolina faces the unacceptable option of letting lawbreakers out of prison simply to make room for more.

It's time to reckon with that policy, and alternatives to incarceration fit into that reckoning. But a commitment to provide additional prison space is also essential. Some crimes require incarceration; law-abiding citizens need protection from offenders with a history of violence and those that repeat their behavior, hence the need for enough cells to do the job.

This issue will be one state lawmakers must wrestle with when the N.C. General Assembly convenes in January, and it will require some dollars. They should make the necessary choices about funding so alternatives are truly options, not substitutes.

Patience

Christmas Doesn't Mean Hurry

Anyone who has been out doing Christmas shopping knows by now that tempers fray and traffic is dangerous.

It will be that way until the last store closes for Christmas and people retire to their homes to exchange the myriad gifts they have purchased for friends and loved ones.

We know that because that is the way it is every year. Christmas shopping is simply a frantic time.

Even worse, the aggressive attitudes carry over into driving. Braking tires squeal, drivers scowl and wrecks, ranging from fender benders to serious accidents, are frequently seen. Even if vehicles don't collide, drivers swear at one another because one or the other cut too close.

The frustrations of Christmas shopping are understandable but let's don't allow it to ruin the Christmas season. It is much less stressful to stand back and allow someone else to take that last toy you wanted than to fight for it.

And the anger built up while shopping can carry over when we slide behind the auto wheel. Impatience increases the chances of accidents.

Why not just start out sooner and allow ourselves time to get there? Why not allow that car in the shopping center drive access to the steady stream of cars on the boulevard rather than cutting it off?

Peace on earth is not typical of the busy Christmas shopping season. However, if we all exerted a little more patience and if we were more polite while shopping it would all be less stressful. If we were all more careful in heavy traffic there would be less accidents and consequently less injuries.

Let us put the meaning of Christmas in the shopping season and we will all be better off.

Guesswork, Mythology & Truth

Richard Harwood

WASHINGTON — We assembled the best talent journalism, academia, the political profession and the industry of polling have to offer, and we arrived at a brilliant and original analysis of the presidential election of 1988.

First, and of most importance to the image of the news business, the "media" performed with extraordinary responsibility, "fairness" and "balance." If anything, they gave the public more information than it wanted or needed.

Second, the campaign of '88 was not, by historical standards, particularly "dirty" or "nasty." The notion that it was dominated by "negativism" and "turned off" the electorate is a myth, created by the media, which were more responsible than the candidates or their campaign organizations for whatever "negativism" existed.

Third, whatever happened in the campaign of '88 had little to do with the outcome or the low turnout. The electorate voted for "peace and prosperity," as is always the case, so the candidates and the media may as well have spent the season rocking away on the front porches of America.

The venue for this wisdom was a conference convened last week by the Washington Journalism Center.

Three other conclusions emerged from the meeting.

First, the media were indeed "fair" and "balanced," so much so that they failed to do a proper job. They allowed the candidates and their campaigns to lie, dissemble and avoid every issue of any consequence facing the country today.

Second, the campaign was indeed the "dirtiest," the most empty and "negative" in modern times. For the first time in history, a campaign

(that of the Republicans) was designed specifically to besmirch and destroy the character of the opposition candidate. And the media failed to tell the public what was going on and how it was being done.

Third, it is nonsense to believe that the campaigns were irrelevant and the outcome was inevitable because of "peace and prosperity." Up until mid-October, less than a month before the election, the candidates were tied in popular support. It was only after the second presidential debate, on Oct. 15, that George Bush gained a real advantage.

These conflicting versions of reality are typical of the "expertise" we dispense in our newspapers and broadcasting stations and of the "expertise" that shapes the pictures of the world we carry around in our heads.

Walter Lippmann many years ago described these limitations that are inherent in our trade. "Wherever there is a good machinery of record," he said, "the modern news service works with great precision. There is one on the stock exchange, and the news of price movements is flashed over tickers with dependable accuracy. There is a machinery for election returns, and when the counting and tabulating are well done, the result of a national election is usually known on the night of the election."

But when we deal with news for which there is no "good machinery," what we report is of limited reliability. "All news about states of mind is of this character," Lippmann wrote. "So are all descriptions of personalities, of sincerity, aspiration, motive, intention, of mass feeling, of national feeling (and) of public opinion..."

He Uttered A Stunning Lie

BERLIN — What has Mikhail Gorbachev wrought? The answers are becoming clear: a revolution from the top in his own country, a succession of foreign policy initiatives that have captivated Europe (particularly West Germany) and, in four years, his own emergence as the dominant political leader of our times. The Reagan Revolution is to the Gorbachev Revolution what the invasion of Grenada was to Normandy.

It's probably impossible to overstate what Gorbachev has done — and is attempting — and, anyway, he put it best himself at the United Nations: "Our country is going through a period of truly revolutionary uplifting." The only response has to be, "You betcha."

But for all the daring and candor of Gorbachev's speech, he uttered a stunning lie: "What is most important is that all our peoples and all generations of citizens of our great country support perestroika." When, at another point in his speech, Gorbachev rhetorically asked if his proposals could be seen as "as a little too romantic," this surely was one of them.

The fact is that Gorbachev is faced with considerable opposition at home. At a conference here organized by the Aspen Institute, one influential Soviet intellectual placed the total of Gorbachev opponents at something like 20 million. He included the military, the security apparatus and, of course, numerous Communist Party officials who have led the sweet life of privileges and status (cars, apartments), in return for which they cook economic and production figures.

But the intellectual was only counting those who stand to lose privilege or power, when he called the roll of Gorbachev opponents. There are others — who are less opponents than cynics. The great mass of Soviet citizens ask, Reagan-like, if they are better off today than they were four years ago. If the question refers to standard of living, then the answer has to be "no." In addition, the Soviets Union's ethnic minorities are restive and in the old satellite states, some Communist Party leaders clearly would love Gorbachev to go away.

When it comes to Gorbachev and, especially to the communist system he heads, a degree of cynicism prevails in the United States as well. This is understandable: Neither the mentality nor the lessons of the Cold War can be obliterated overnight. But what vexes those Soviet officials who would most like to see Gorbachev's policies succeed is a kind of smug cynicism they detect from their American counterparts — a cynicism based on two assumptions.

The first is that the Soviet Union is an economic basket case and that glasnost and perestroika are, therefore, a reflection of weakness. The second is that once the country is economically healthy, Russia will revert to Russia — and once again be at our throat.

Gorbachev's supporters do not see things that way. They will concede much — economic troubles and past mistakes — but they will not admit that their country deals from weakness or that Gorbachev's Revolution is a facade, a pause before the Soviet Union resumes its march toward world domination. And what they seek from the United States is acceptance, a recognition that theirs is a changed country, a member of the world community and not a pariah nation. "What sort of Soviet Union would you prefer to deal with — the old predictable one?" a vexed Soviet official asked his American counterparts here. "Do you accept the new Soviet Union as a member of the world community?"

The American response has been all over the place. For instance, while President Reagan applauds Gorbachev the man, other American officials say the Soviet Union should be denied Western loans. In arms negotiations, the United States watches the Soviet Union as if it were a killer out on furlough. In Afghanistan, we are untroubled by the continued bleeding of Soviet troops as they retreat into their own country. In a sense, our policies are correct — in arms control, especially, a deal is a deal — but our attitude is all wrong. It would cost the United States nothing to embrace with enthusiasm what Gorbachev is trying to do. After all, our missiles still point toward Moscow.

After World War II, the United States developed its containment policy toward the Soviet Union. For conservatives, though, that was insufficient. They insisted on taking the offensive, on rolling back the Soviet empire. The Reagan administration gave voice, as well as jobs, to those ideologues and they remain vocal — skeptical of Gorbachev, intent on winning an advantage from him in what seems his time of trouble. The challenge for the Bush administration is to arrest that impulse and to openly root for Gorbachev's success.

If Gorbachev is not sincere, or if he is toppled, we will have lost little. As the Soviets here understand, they are the ones with most to lose.

Martin Says He'll Sharpen Skills As Lobbyist

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Martin, acknowledging that he was not an effective practitioner of the traditional "horse-trading" with legislators in his first term, says his "New Year's resolution" is to become a better lobbyist.

"That's a fair criticism," he said Tuesday. "I take that as ... an invitation from them to deal with them more frequently and so I'm ready."

Martin also said he might propose scaling back the $113 million installment of the Basic Education Program scheduled for the 1989-90 fiscal year because of what he called a temporary budget crunch.

But the governor said any BEP reduction next year would be restored in 1990-91, the second half of the biennium for which Martin will submit a budget in January. He vowed to keep his re-election campaign promise to fully implement the BEP, an $800 million school improvement blueprint being phased in over eight years.

"If we adopt a biennial budget that gets us there, that achieves the goal," Martin said in an interview with several reporters in his Capitol office during which he reflected on his first term and discussed plans for the next four years.

"I don't think there's any magical or essential requirement for a given year, particularly if the revenues are not there, that would require a tax increase just to be able to boost up 1989-90 if you can reach the intended goal for the second year," he said.

The General Assembly has kept BEP funding on track for the first four years. The fifth-year installment is scheduled for 1989-90 at a cost of $113 million. Another $100 million is scheduled to be added the sixth year.

Developing a spending plan has occupied much of Martin's time since he won re-election Nov. 8. Administration and legislative analysts say a slowdown in state economic growth has reduced state revenue collections to the point that only $231 million can be added to the budget for continuing programs.

State agencies are seeking more than $1 billion in new spending.

Critics say the $200 million in tax cuts Martin pushed through the Legislature in 1985 has eroded the state's revenue base to the point that the state cannot provide essential services.

"I've said before the election, and I say again, that you cannot pay for the Basic Education Program and the career ladder (for teachers) ... under the present tax structure," House Speaker Liston Ramsey said in a telephone interview.

Ramsey did not respond directly when asked whether he would favor reducing the BEP outlay for one year. But he said the program seeks too much money for hiring assistant principals, assistant superintendents and other personnel not directly involved with classroom instruction.

But Martin said he was convinced the shortfall was a temporary aberration and that the existing revenue base would generate enough money to fund all the new general fund spending he promised in his campaign.

"We'll have to pick and choose for next year ... but for the biennium and the four years, I am reassured that insofar as anybody can forecast those things, we are going to be able to meet those goals that I've set forth," he said.

The general fund pays for all state programs except transportation, which is covered in the separate highway fund. Martin said the highway fund revenue base is not sufficient and that he will submit a plan for expanding it in 1989.

Administration officials have said a gasoline tax increase might be the centerpiece of Martin's highway plan, but he said it was "highly unlikely" he would seek a tax increase to bolster the general fund.

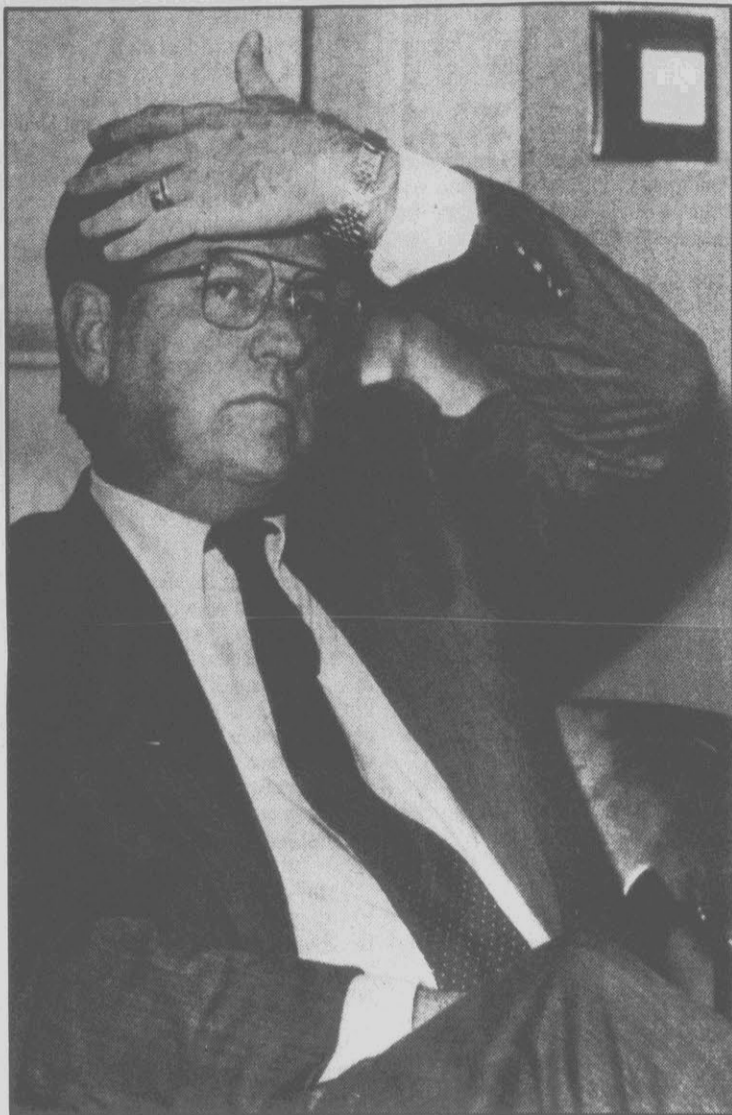

Martin said he was wrestling with the question of how big a pay raise for teachers and state employees the state could afford. He said he was pleased that a legislative study committee had tentatively endorsed restoring merit pay for state workers but did not say whether money for merit pay would be available.

The next two years will be especially crucial, Martin said, because legislative Democrats may be more cooperative during the period than at any other time during his governorship.

That's because he cannot seek a third consecutive term and will not decide for at least three years whether to run for the U.S. Senate in 1992, he said. Martin said a desire to prevent his re-election may have led some Democrats to oppose his programs during the first term.

"There is a very clear readiness on the part of a lot of Democrats in the Senate and House to work more cooperatively and not be a part of a petty, partisan rivalry," he said. "I think there are a lot of reasons for that, and one is just because most legislators would feel that they only have so much stomach for that."

Martin said he believed the new attitude would produce more than the traditional, two- to three-month honeymoon a new governor or president usually enjoys. He said the relatively cordial relationship should last at least until the 1992 campaign heats up, giving him a window of opportunity to win bipartisan support of major initiatives.

EPA Will Handle State Pollution Program Pending Court Ruling

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — While North Carolina runs the maze of a court challenge to its ability to enforce pollution regulations, the Environmental Protection Agency will oversee its air, water and hazardous-waste program, officials say.

Federal and state regulators met in Atlanta Tuesday to review the enforcement options as the N.C. Supreme Court prepares to consider an appellate decision that could ban state agencies from assessing civil fines.

Lee DeHihns III, a deputy regional administrator for EPA, said that the federal agency will provide backup authority for state regulators in the two to six months that it may take for a court ruling.

"We're urging the state to do as much enforcement as it can, and we'll work out a cooperative agreement, once the state completes the investigative field work, to proceed if there is a need to assess civil penalties," DeHihns said in a telephone interview from his office in Atlanta.

"We already have these provisions, but it's just a matter of we weren't planning on this coming up and the state's inability to proceed in some cases," he said. "It's a situation where we say, 'Look, North Carolina is in a bind in trying to enforce environmental regulations. What can we do to help out?'"

James Sheppard Jr., a spokesman for the N.C. Division of Environmental Management, said: "Any cases of significant non-compliance that we find can be turned over to the EPA for enforcement."

The issue for the court to resolve is whether state agencies have the constitutional authority to levy civil fines against polluters, because the fines vary broadly and require what amounts to a judicial proceeding.

A panel of the N.C. Court of Appeals struck down the authority in a 2-1 ruling last month, but the N.C. Supreme Court stayed the decision Friday pending its review of the state's appeal. That could come in February.

IN THE STATE

Farm Income

WILMINGTON (AP) — Despite North Carolina's large agricultural economy, the state falls just short of the top 10 in cash receipts generated from farm commodities, the U.S. Department of Agriculture says.

Overall, in 1987 Tar Heel producers' ranking in cash receipts — the amount commodities sold for — was 11th, the same as in 1986, according to the latest USDA report.

California, Texas, Iowa, Nebraska and Illinois led in cash receipts from commodities sold. They were followed by Minnesota, Kansas, Florida, Wisconsin and Indiana.

North Carolina leads in tobacco and turkey production and ranks in the top 10 in the production of six other commodities. The Wilmington Morning Star reported. In 1986, tobacco receipts were $699 million and turkey receipts were $342 million.

Crash Service

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — About 40 people attended a memorial service at Fort Bragg on Tuesday in honor of the five 18th Airborne Corps soldiers who died in a helicopter crash in Honduras last week.

Four of the soldiers killed in the crash of the CH-47 Chinook helicopter near the Caribbean port of La Ceiba, Honduras, were assigned to Fort Bragg units. The fifth, who was based in Georgia, was the son of a Fayetteville couple.

Carol McConnell of Stedman, widow of Staff Sgt. John P. McConnell, 42, a crash victim, was at the service at Division Memorial Chapel, officials said. Five flight helmets on a table at the front of the chapel symbolized the soldiers, officials said.

The other Fort Bragg soldiers killed in the crash were 1st Lt. Alan C. Urban, 25, of Durham, N.H.; Spec. 4 Douglas J. Kropp, 20, of Watertown, Conn.; and Pfc. Jimmie D. Bendon, 21, of Gardena, Calif. They were assigned to Company A, 2nd Battalion, 159th Aviation Regiment, of officials said.

Also honored in the service was Chief Warrant Officer 3 Randall B. Potter, 30, of Company B, 2nd Battalion, 159th Aviation Regiment, at Hunter Army Air Field, Ga.

Child Shot

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — A 5-year-old boy fatally shot himself in the chest Tuesday while playing with his father's handgun, High Point police say.

Jeremy Andrew Bolling shot himself with a 9-mm pistol just after 6 a.m., said police Capt. Ron McGuire. He died shortly after 8 a.m. at High Point Regional Hospital.

Robert Bolling, Jeremy's father, was either dressing or feeding one of Jeremy's two brothers in the kitchen when the accident occurred, McGuire said. Jeremy had been watching TV with another brother before the shooting.

Shares Sold

NEW YORK (AP) — Chief Executive F. Ross Johnson, who triggered the multibillion-dollar buyout battle for RJR Nabisco Inc., last week sold 60,000 shares of RJR stock for nearly $5.5 million, according to a Securities and Exchange Commission filing on Tuesday.

The stock sale came about a week after RJR directors rejected the buyout bid from a management investor group led by Johnson in favor of Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co.'s record $24.53 billion takeover offer.

The one-page SEC filing said the 60,000 common shares had belonged to Johnson's wife, Laurie, but could be considered beneficially owned by him. They were sold in the open market on Dec. 7 for $91 each, or $5.46 million, the filing said.

Tanker Overturned

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — A tractor-trailer loaded with 7,600 gallons of gasoline overturned near Shelby Tuesday afternoon as the driver tried to avoid a vehicle that pulled into the road, state officials said.

The tanker owned by Area Oil Co. of Shelby spilled at least 1,000 gallons of its load, but there was no fire, said Al Warlick of the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety. He said work crews dammed a ditch along N.C. 226 and were trying to patch three compartments on the tanker involved in the leak.

"Apparently an unlicensed juvenile driving a motor vehicle pulled into the road in front of tanker, and the tanker driver took it to the ditch as opposed to hitting the juvenile," Warlick said.

Student Assaulted

DURHAM (AP) — Durham police say a female Duke University student was pulled off a bicycle near the campus Tuesday and sexually assaulted.

The woman, who lives on campus, told police she was riding her bicycle for exercise about 5 a.m. when a man grabbed her. The man ran away after the assault and the woman got back on her bicycle and rode to the campus infirmary.

License Offer

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — An attorney accused of embezzling almost $180,000 from three trust funds he administered has agreed to surrender his law license to the North Carolina Bar.

Larry Habegger of Winston-Salem denied any wrongdoing in the letter offering to surrender his license, said Root Edmonson, general counsel for the Bar.

Habegger has maintained that the money taken from the trusts was used for legitimate loans. Habegger recently settled a suit filed by beneficiaries of one trust by repaying nearly $68,000, but admitted no wrongdoing.

Edmonson said that because he admits no misconduct, Habegger can never apply to have his license reinstated.

Police Chief

STATESVILLE (AP) — Statesville has picked an emergency services administrator from Atlanta to be its next police chief.

Robert S. Warshaw, 41, the director of administration for the DeKalb County Department of Public Safety, was named Monday to replace James Myers, who retired in September after 24 years as chief.

The public safety department includes police, fire, emergency medical and animal control services. Warshaw's responsibilities included payroll, purchasing, budget, planning and community volunteer programs for the 1,600-member department.

Warshaw, who previously was an assistant police chief in Miami, said he plans no immediate changes in the 57-member Statesville Police Department.

PTL Jurors To Return Jan. 17

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — A federal grand jury may be asked to consider additional charges — including tax violations — against indicted PTL founder Jim Bakker and Richard Dortch, his former top aide, authorities say.

The 23-member panel is scheduled to reconvene Jan. 17, a source familiar with the investigation said Tuesday.

In letters mailed in late October to Bakker and Dortch, U.S. Justice Department prosecutor Charles Alexander said the probe focused on allegations of mail and wire fraud, conspiracy and criminal tax violations.

Bakker and Dortch were indicted on Dec. 5 on 24 counts of mail fraud, wire fraud and conspiracy.

The grand jury accused the two of diverting more than $4 million in PTL money to support their own "lavish and extravagant" lifestyles. But they were not charged with any tax violations.

On the same day, two other former Bakker aides, David Taggart and James Taggart, each were indicted on six tax charges.

The Taggart brothers were accused of diverting about $1.1 million of PTL money to pay personal expenses and evading nearly $500,000 in income taxes.

The grand jury's term does not end until next month, and prosecutors reserved the second-floor room for this week. But jurors have not met so far this week.

Prosecutors decided late Monday to call the grand jury back into session for four days beginning Jan. 17 at the federal courthouse in downtown Charlotte, the source, who asked not to be identified, told The Associated Press.

After the indictments were returned, Dortch's attorney, Bill Diehl, said he was surprised there were no tax charges against his client.

Diehl did not return phone calls to his office in Charlotte on Tuesday.

Bakker's attorneys, George T. Davis and Jim Toms, also did not return phone calls.

Bakker — who has avoided reporters since his indictment — and the others are scheduled to appear

Thursday morning before U.S. Magistrate Paul Taylor.

Last week, a newspaper reported that prosecutors and top-level Justice Department officials were debating whether to seek additional indictments accusing Bakker and Dortch with tax violations.

"There's no indictment here concerning taxes," a source told The Charlotte Observer. "Seems to me that would be the big one."

Bakker, 48, and Dortch, 57, each were charged in the Dec. 5 indictment with 15 counts of wire fraud, eight counts of mail fraud and one count of conspiracy to commit wire and mail fraud. Each count of punishable by as much as five years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Orthodox Jew Wins Right To Buy PTL

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Stephen Mernick kept his strategy for buying PTL to himself until moments before his $65 million cash bid was approved, and the Toronto businessman maintained his poker face when asked about his plans for operating the religious complex.

Mernick would only tell reporters waiting for him outside the U.S. Bankruptcy Court that he was happy to win the bidding and then talked about the weather — how nice it was in South Carolina compared to his home, where he said there was a snowstorm.

Mernick would not answer questions about future plans for Heritage USA, including whether Heritage Ministries, the non-profit religious spinoff, would be able to continue leasing the television ministry and church at Fort Mill.

"We are in the middle of ongoing discussions" with Heritage Ministries," Mernick said Tuesday, adding that he would outline his plans in a week or two.

Mernick, an Orthodox Jew, said he is buying the property as an investment but would consider keeping Heritage USA operating as a Christian theme park.

PTL's assets include the satellite TV network, carried on more than 800 cable systems; 1,700 undeveloped acres in northern York County; two 500-room hotels, one unfinished; and a water park.

Mernick said in October that he was interested in PTL "purely as a real estate deal."

Sources close to Mernick said he intends to hold onto the undeveloped land for up to 10 years as its value rises, and to come up with a plan for the hotels and TV network, The Charlotte (N.C.) Observer newspaper reported in today's editions. The sources told the newspaper that Mernick is prepared to absorb $12 million in operating losses on PTL in the first year alone.

Sam Johnson, president of Heritage Ministries and pastor of the church, said Mernick told him he was "sensitive" to the religious operation.

Johnson said Heritage Ministries still wants to buy Heritage USA, or at least the church, hotel, television network and studios. "What we've done is switch landlords. Our future depends on negotiations with the new landlord."

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Rufus Reynolds approved the sale at a hearing in Columbia Tuesday, just more than a week after PTL founder Jim Bakker and three former associates were indicted by a federal grand jury in North Carolina.

Mernick bid $36.25 million on Monday in a session at Heritage USA headquarters near Fort Mill, but after meeting Tuesday with attorneys for the ministry and for the creditors, he agreed to increase his bid to $65 million.

Bakker left the Heritage USA theme park and accompanying satellite television operation in March 1987 amid reports that he had a sexual liaison with New York church secretary Jessica Hahn and paid her to keep quiet about it.

Jacobs Is Arrested On N.Y. Thruway

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TIMOTHY JACOBS

Indian fugitive Timothy Jacobs, who fled to a New York Indian reservation after being indicted on 14 kidnapping charges in North Carolina, says he will fight extradition.

"I think I'd be safer up here," Jacobs said Tuesday in New York before he was arraigned as a fugitive. "I'm trying to avoid extradition."

Jacobs was arrested near Oneida, N.Y., on Tuesday after crashing his car into the back of an empty school bus, authorities said.

No one, including Jacobs' girlfriend, who was in his car, was hurt in the accident, said Sgt. Josephine Townsend of the state police in Oneida.

Townsend said state police tried to stop Jacobs' car about 4 p.m. for a speeding violation while he drove on the New York State Thruway 10 miles east of Syracuse.

Jacobs pulled off the Thruway at an exit and pulled up to a toll booth. Trooper Jerome Crawford approached the vehicle and asked Jacobs for his license, and then asked him to drive to a nearby rest stop. Jacobs then sped away, officers said.

Police said Jacobs left the Thruway and drove at high speed through the villages of Canastota and Wampsville before reaching Oneida, where he hit the school bus.

Lewis Pitts, the founder of the Christic Institute South, a civil rights law firm in Carrboro, N.C., that is representing Jacobs, said Jacobs had found a job and was delivering a load of arts and crafts material when he was stopped by the trooper.

"What flashed in front of his eyes ... was the absolute danger of returning to Robeson County, so he decided to flee," Lewis said.

Cuyler Windham, assistant director of the N.C. State Bureau of Investigation, said Tuesday night that extradition proceedings would begin immediately.

Windham said if Jacobs refuses to waive extradition, the SBI, with help from the Robeson County Sheriff's Department, the district attorney's office and Gov. Jim Martin's office, will have to go to New York and show cause why Jacobs should be brought back to North Carolina.

Pitts said he would fight extradition "tooth and nail."

Pitts said he would fly to New York today to make an official objection to extradition. He said he hoped to get Jacobs released on bail and returned to the Six Nations, which is another name for the Onondaga Reservation.

State police said since late last week Jacobs had been living at the Onondaga Indian Reservation south of Syracuse.

His girlfriend, Kirsten Dawn Drummond, 19, also was being questioned by police, Townsend said.

"Maybe the outside scrutiny is what is necessary to bring about an end to the lawlessness, violence and corruption in Robeson County," Pitts said.

Jacobs, 20, was indicted Dec. 6 during a special session the Robeson County grand jury on charges stemming from the Feb. 1 takeover of The Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton.

Eddie Hatcher, 31, who was indicted on the same charges, was arrested the same day the indictments were returned at the office of the Robeson Defense Fund in Pembroke.

Both men were ordered held on $140,000 bond, but Hatcher's bond was reduced to $25,000 last Wednesday and he was released from the county jail Friday.

A federal jury acquitted the two Tuscarora Indians Oct. 14 of federal hostage-taking and firearms charges, despite their admissions that they sawed off two shotguns and held up to 20 people hostage at the newspaper for 10 hours.

School Forum Calls For Changes

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The quality of public education in North Carolina should be measured by how students perform rather than by what schools offer, a study group says.

"Student success must be the essential goal of all new policies and programs, and the only measurement that should be used to assess the effectiveness of public schools," said Gerry Hancock, a Durham attorney and chairman of the Public School Forum, which released the report Tuesday.

"Schools must enable (students) to succeed in life after acquiring the knowledge," Hancock said. "That is a change in the traditional view of the mission of public schools, and nothing less than a fundamental restructuring of schools will ... accomplish that change."

The report recommends a $700 million package of additional programs, including a 5.7 percent base salary increase for all teachers, full implementation of the "career ladder" pay plan and a $221 million program for early childhood education.

The report breaks new ground by seeking to rewrite the mission of public schools, according to leaders of the forum, a non-profit think tank that co-sponsored the study with North Carolina Citizens for Business and Industry.

Under the recommendations, local school systems would be free to set specific educational goals. The state would gauge success by pupil performance on standardized tests and other measures. And the schools would be strictly accountable: program funds and teacher bonuses would be added or cut off on the basis of meeting goals.

"In business," said Sen. Bill Goldston Jr., D-Rockingham, "you've got financial goals. Here we want academic and drop-out goals. We can measure this."

Lifting the regulatory burden on teachers and administrators is a central tenet of the new philosophy, Hancock said. Another is giving schools flexibility to do what they must to get good results but holding them accountable for their methods.

The plan drew praise from Gov.

Jim Martin and former Gov. Jim Hunt during a forum-sponsored symposium that drew leaders from business, education and government.

"It is truly excellent ... the most comprehensive and thorough-going recommendation for change in our public schools that has ever been made in North Carolina," Hunt said.

Drastic action is needed to prevent the United States from becoming an economic "also-ran," he said, and education is the key to making the nation more competitive.

"We must change our system, not tinker around the edges of it," Hunt said. "North Carolina can be a leader in this nation if we implement the forum report, if we're willing to be bold."

Martin endorsed the plan's emphasis on results. "The goal is not to have programs, the goal is not just to have goals, the goal is certainly not just to spend money," he said. "The goal is to improve ... performance."

The report comes when the state is four years into implementation of the Basic Education Program, an eight-year, $800 million plan to assure every child access to a basic level of instruction.

The state also is experimenting in 16 school systems with a career ladder program for teachers, which Martin wants to expand statewide.

Moving ahead with those programs would cost hundreds of millions of dollars as analysts warn of a budget crunch due to a slowdown in state economic growth and revenue collections.

John Dornan, executive director of the forum, acknowledged it would be difficult to fund the study group's entire program. But he said its price tag was not beyond reach and that some items could be phased in.

"The legislators on the study panel in particular were very concerned that we come up with something pragmatic ... not pie-in-the-sky programs that would be rejected out of hand," Dornan said.

Of the $719 million sought in the report, all but $46 million would pay for three items: a new salary schedule that would provide annual raises of 5.7 percent for the average teacher over the next three years ($293 million); the career development plan ($160 million, less than the $350 million to $400 million needed for statewide implementation of the existing career ladder); and the early-childhood program (up to $220 million, depending on its scope and the number of children served).

Martin, however, warned that the preschool proposal "may be pricing ourselves out of the range." He said an overly ambitious program would undermine the private day-care industry and lead people of all income groups, instead of only the poor, to seek state-subsidized preschool for their children.

The study group consisted of 72 business, government and education representatives.

Among the other recommendations in the report, entitled "Thinking for Living: A Blueprint for Educational Growth," were:

— More training for teachers and counselors on serving "at-risk" students.

— Improved management training for principals.

— Cooperative vocational education programs involving public schools, businesses and community colleges.

— More clerical and staff support for teachers.

Farm Groups Fret Over Leaf Quota

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The U.S. Department of Agriculture should be cautious in setting the 1989 flue-cured tobacco quota, two farm organizations say.

Figures indicate the quota — the amount farmers are permitted to grow — may increase more than 20 percent over this year's quota, which was the first significant increase in about 12 years. The quota will be announced Thursday.

The 1989 quota could be more than 917 million pounds, based on manufacturers' buying intentions, a three-year average of annual exports and the desired reserve supply. The agriculture secretary has the authority to raise or lower that amount by as much as 3 percent.

Although the two farm organizations have similar concerns, they disagree over what the quota should be.

The N.C. Farm Bureau Federation has asked Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng to reduce the indicated quota by 3 percent. The Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina says the secretary should not change the figures, but should let the quota formula determine the amount farmers can grow next year.

"The point that everybody misses," said Carlton Blalock of the growers' association, is that markets in the United States are the last to open. Blalock, executive vice president of Tobacco Growers Association, said buyers may think they won't be able to get all they need in the United States and buy more tobacco from markets in Zimbabwe, Brazil and Malawi.

The Farm Bureau says the crop should be set at 890.4 million pounds. W.B. Jenkins, Farm Bureau president, said manufacturers are required to purchase only 90 percent of the amount they say they are going to buy. If they should limit their purchases to 90 percent, Jenkins said, the grower-owned cooperative, Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp., would have to buy about 54 million pounds.

Exports can quickly decline, depending on the economic conditions in foreign markets, Jenkins said. Farmers will have to make significant investments to produce the tobacco and prices could drop while production expenses increase, he added.

If the federal excise tax is increased, Jenkins said, consumption will drop. This also will affect the amount of tobacco manufacturers need.

Blalock said farmers who have had negative reactions about an increase "still remember the '70s," when quotas increased substantially and Stabilization's surpluses threatened to bankrupt the organization. Tobacco reforms in 1986 should prevent unmanageable surpluses, Blalock said.

"Our inventory is about at an all-time low now," Blalock said, "not only in the U.S., but in the world." Supply and demand, he said, are nearly balanced.

Older farmers are reluctant to invest in new equipment to handle a larger crop, Blalock said.

"I understand that philosophy, but we need to supply the companies with what they need," he said.

Larry Wooten, a Currie tobacco producer, said he would like to see the 3 percent reduction.

"The biggest thing that bothers me ... is that large swings either way, an increase or decrease, can cause a disruption in the market," Wooten said.

He questioned whether farmers have adequate equipment to grow a significant increase and whether businesses have supplies needed to produce more tobacco.

"Is labor available to harvest this crop if it is all grown and the quality is maintained?" Wooten asked. "We've worked hard to keep the quality up. I would just hate to see us do something" that would reduce the quality.

If quality drops, Wooten said, the price could drop. "Often we can grow more and take home less" money, he said.

Manufacturers have said they plan to import less tobacco.

"If they live up to that, then we'll be OK if Stabilization doesn't take a load," Wooten said. "We basically gave up our right to say much about the quota ... when we agreed to the buyout."

Manufacturers agreed to buy a 584 million-pound surplus held by Stabilization as part of the tobacco reforms passed two years ago.

Blacks Ready To Ban Runoffs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — After finally winning support from the Democratic Party — and armed with more potential Republican allies — North Carolina's black legislators say they have their best chance to change or abolish the system of second primaries.

"I think we have a very good chance to get rid of it during this session," said Democratic Rep. Mickey Michaux of Durham, recently elected chairman of the Legislative Black Caucus.

Critics say second primaries, or runoffs, discriminate by making it harder for blacks to win nomination in majority white districts. Lawmakers have tried three times to change it. Each time they've failed.

Supporters will raise the issue again after the legislature convenes Jan. 11. Although opposition remains, they are encouraged.

Last summer, state Democrats voted at their convention to support an end to runoffs. The move also is expected to win favor from many Republicans who see it in their own interest — and whose number in the General Assembly has risen from 46 to 59.

"I think (chances) are very good for eliminating it, and it's due to several things," said Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake.

"First, by the abiding interest of many legislators," he said. "Secondly, the fact that Democratic legislators understand the significance of the action at the state convention. ... And thirdly, I think that Republicans for the most part are not opposed to it."

The new House minority leader, Rep. Johnathan Rhyne, R-Lincoln, said he thinks Republicans "would be inclined to favor" abolishing runoff primaries.

"It's generally seen as being more fair," Rhyne said.

Republicans also may have an interest in the issue. If runoffs are abolished, some argue, Democrats might field nominees who have less chance of winning majority support in a general election.

"There's no question that the elimination of second primaries will mean the nomination of more black Democrats," said Bill Culp, Mecklenburg County's elections supervisor. "And that likely will mean more competitive situations with Republicans in areas where Democrats have been very strong."

Partly for that reason, some Democrats are certain to oppose any effort to eliminate second primaries.

Others aren't convinced that change is warranted.

"I believe in the majority rule," said Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee. "I have also seen where minorities have been elected in the second primary. I don't necessarily see that as a hurdle to the election of minorities. ... I have not been convinced that we need to abolish it."

Many blacks disagree.

Kelly Alexander of Charlotte, president of the North Carolina chapter of the NAACP, has tried another route to abolish second primaries. In June, he lost a runoff to a white candidate in the Democratic primary for Mecklenburg County register of deeds after beating two whites in the first round.

Arguing that runoffs discriminate, Alexander took the case against them to the state board of elections, which ruled that it had no authority to decide the matter. He also has hinted at court action.

Some critics of the system believe that even if the General Assembly falls short of abolishing second primaries, it may change how they're conducted.

Earlier proposals, for example, have suggested that a candidate can win a primary election with 40 of the vote, plus a 5-percentage-point margin over the nearest opponent.

"I'm not confident there are enough votes out there for total elimination," Blue said. "But I am confident there are votes for substantial (changes) with the real potential

Electoral College

RALEIGH (AP) — The 50th session of the Electoral College of North Carolina will convene amid fanfare Monday in an effort to make the process better understood.

"Most Americans have no idea how the Electoral College functions," said Linda H. Gunter, a Cary High School teacher and vice chairman of the Wake County Bicentennial Committee commemorating the 200th anniversary of the U.S. Constitution. "Yet these 538 electors nationwide are the people who actually vote for the president and the vice president of the United States."

Since 1928, the electoral meetings have been quiet affairs.

The 13 electors — one from each congressional district and two at-large — represent the party that received the majority of the popular vote in the state. They meet in Raleigh to sign the official papers to be sent to Washington.

The 13 Republican electors will be bound by law to vote for their party's nominees. Failure to attend and vote properly is a felony offense that carries a fine of $500. Thus North Carolina electors cannot partake in a rumored "dump Quayle" effort to drop vice presidential nominee Dan Quayle.

that before the end of the session there will be enough votes for total abolition."

The political context of next year's debate could be volatile in the Democratic-controlled legislature.

Some blacks say changes in the second-primary system would signal that the party pays more than lip service in its commitment to blacks, traditionally a loyal constituency. On the other hand, failure to act could be seen as a slap.

"I think it's that kind of emotional issue," Blue said. "It has the potential to be even more divisive retaining (second primaries) than by eliminating" them.

Smokeless Cigarette Slow To Burn

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHOENIX (AP) — The Premier "smokeless" cigarette is drawing less than rave reviews from some smokers and retailers, but RJR Nabisco Inc. is not ready to scrap a two-state test of the product's popularity.

Despite consumer complaints about everything from the cigarette's taste and smell to its price and unusual construction, RJR claims Premier had "the highest initial trial rate of any brand in recent history, probably due to the amount of publicity that it received."

RJR spokeswoman Maura Payne said there are no plans for ending the test run of the revolutionary high-tech cigarette introduced two months ago in Arizona and Missouri. But the company said it had no figures on sales or consumer acceptance of the device, which heats tobacco to release the flavor but does not burn it.

Negative consumer reaction is only one of the problems plaguing Premier's test run. Public health advocates have called on the Food and Drug Administration to regulate the product as a drug.

A still greater threat to the product may lie in Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co.'s proposed $24.53 billion leveraged buyout of RJR.

RJR Chairman F. Ross Johnson has said Premier could cost $1 billion from drawing board to nationwide distribution. Analysts believe that the high debt costs of the buyout puts Premier's future in jeopardy. If the test-marketing lags, they say the new owners would be more likely to allow the product to go up in smoke.

Stores in St. Louis, Phoenix and Tucson, Ariz., where Premier was introduced in October say the smokeless cigarette is not catching on with consumers.

"They're terrible. They're nasty. They're beyond nasty," said Mark Padgett, an employee at a 7-11 store in Phoenix.

"I wouldn't have them here on a death wish," said Jeff Meister, manager of a south St. Louis Tinder Box shop. "My representative suggested them, but people try them and they don't want them."

Smokers who have tried Premier are convinced the new product will attract few converts.

But RJR officials say they are not discouraged.

Pentagon Seeking 2% Spending Hike

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon is proposing a 2 percent boost in spending next year, including a pay raise for military personnel, with no new cuts in forces.

The spending plan for the 1990 budget year, which begins next Oct. 1, calls for a 4.1 percent pay raise for the 2.1 million military personnel and sufficient money to maintain the level of training approved for the current budget year, Dan Howard, chief spokesman at the Defense Department, said Tuesday.

The 1990 budget proposal is to be formally unveiled on Jan. 9. It will disclose that there has been a one-year slip in production of the new B-2 stealth bomber "as a result of both fiscal and technical considerations," Howard said.

The spokesman declined to elaborate further on the stealth delay, noting the program is still classified. The Air Force had said previously it expected delivery of the first operational B-2 in fiscal 1991.

Howard's disclosure of fiscal 1990 budget details was unexpected and unusual. The Defense Department normally declines to discuss any of the administration's internal budget decisions before the entire federal budget is submitted to Congress.

The spokesman's willingness to discuss the matter, however, appeared to reflect a desire on the part of Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci to pressure Congress — and for that matter, President-elect Bush — to reverse a four-year slide in defense spending after inflation.

Bush will be free after his inauguration on Jan. 20 to amend the budget submissions, and he has indicated he might bow to congressional calls that military spending be held at current levels after accounting for inflation.

Bush said Tuesday he would not make any decisions until he assumes the presidency.

Carlucci, in several recent speeches, has argued that zero growth is unacceptable. Howard echoed that stand Tuesday.

"There are those who talk about zero-growth budgets," he said. "We just want to make sure that everybody understands what that means. If you move in the direction of zero growth, it means that over (the next five years), you have to take out at least an additional $100 billion" because of projected inflation.

President Reagan's last Pentagon request will total $305.6 billion in multi-year budget authority, up about $15.3 billion from fiscal 1989, Howard said. That does not include military-related nuclear programs under the Energy Department.

The Pentagon increase will include about $1.1 billion for the military pay raise, about $7 billion to cover inflation and $7.2 billion to provide a "real growth" increase of 2 percent, the spokesman said.

"This means that we can sustain the military force that we now have," said Howard.

Military Balking At Health Care Fee

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Office of Management and Budget is pushing a plan to begin charging military dependents and retirees fees for health care, a proposal that a Pentagon official says "is sending this building bananas."

Free medical care is one of the most highly coveted of military benefits, one that extends into retirement from the armed services.

Military dependents and retirees are allowed to use military hospitals on a "space available" basis, with active-duty personnel having priority. But when dependents or retirees are admitted to a hospital, the only fee they pay is a nominal charge for food while hospitalized.

Outpatient services also are provided free of charge.

The OMB proposal "is currently a matter of serious discussion and nothing has been finalized," a Pentagon official who spoke on condition of anonymity said Tuesday. "But the proposal alone is sending this building bananas."

The source said the problem is not that the proposed fees are unreasonable; it's the idea that any type of fee would be levied at all on the roughly 7 million retirees and dependents eligible for care.

According to Pentagon sources, the plan was advanced by OMB for inclusion in the Defense Department's fiscal 1990 budget proposal, which is scheduled to be submitted to Congress on Jan. 9. The Pentagon is resisting the idea and betting that Congress — as it did two years ago — will scuttle the plan even if the White House orders the Pentagon to submit it.

Under the plan, military dependents and retirees would be charged $10 for every outpatient doctor visit up to an annual ceiling of $100; $3 to have prescriptions filled, and $50 for admission to a military hospital.

Men and women on active duty would not be affected, nor would the dependents of enlisted personnel in the bottom four enlisted ranks.

In addition, the plan calls for a doubling of the annual insurance deductible for dependents and retirees who turn to private physicians instead of using military facilities. The so-called CHAMPUS insurance deductibles would increase from $50 to $100 for individuals and $100 to $200 for families.

The imposition of any type of user fee is an emotional and controversial issue within the military because health care is considered a major employment benefit and an enticement for service.

FDA Clears Use Of Quick, Accurate Test For AIDS

Five-Minute Procedure Doesn't Need Elaborate Lab

By Daniel Q. Haney
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — The first five-minute test for AIDS has been approved by the U.S. government, and authorities said it is 99.6 percent accurate and offers the fastest results of any tests for the deadly disease.

The test was cleared Tuesday by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. Its maker, Worcester-based Cambridge Bioscience, said it should be on the market in a few weeks.

"This technical advance should help make testing available to all who want to be tested," FDA Commissioner Frank E. Young said in Washington. "It will also be particularly useful in remote areas of the world that lack the facilities for earlier approved tests."

The results of those earlier tests — now the mainstay of AIDS screening — frequently are not available for weeks.

Gary Buck, chairman of Cambridge Bioscience, said the new test, called the Recombigen HIV-1 Latex Agglutination Test, should be useful anywhere that quick results are important.

"The big boon is that it's fast, and it will be useful in Third World countries and places where lab facilities might be less than ideal in order to screen large populations in a rapid, simple way," said Dr. Paul Skolnik, a virologist at New England Medical Center.

The test is 99.6 percent accurate, Buck said. But the company recommends that as with the current screening test, called the enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay, or ELISA, blood samples that are positive for the AIDS virus be confirmed by a time-consuming, backup test called the Western blot.

The speed of the Recombigen means those who are free of the virus are likely to be in the good news immediately, Buck said. But those who are probably infected will be told further testing is necessary.

Like other AIDS tests, this one checks for AIDS infection by spotting antibodies to the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, which causes AIDS.

"All of the present (ELISA) tests require, under the best of circumstances, three to five hours," Buck said. "This test requires three to five minutes."

Unlike the ELISA, which requires labs and technicians, the new test can be given under crude conditions where even refrigeration is lacking. Experts believe this should make the test useful in places like Africa, where acquired immune deficiency syndrome is widespread and where blood is frequently not screened before transfusions.

Teena Lerner, an analyst at Shearson Lehman Hutton in New York, said the test also may be given in many settings in the United States, such as venereal disease clinics.

"In a lot of the voluntary testing centers, there is a huge proportion of people who don't come back to find the answer," she said. "The ones who are most likely to be positive are the ones who are most likely to chicken out."

Other potential uses include testing trauma patients in emergency rooms and checking organ donors before transplants.

Buck predicted the test will account for 10 percent to 15 percent of all AIDS testing during its second year on the market. It will be sold to health care professionals for $10 per test, he said.

Although other companies are working on quick AIDS tests, Lerner said she believes it will be at least a year before Cambridge Bioscience's nearest competitor wins approval.

The new test is based on a portion of the protein that makes up the outer jacket of the AIDS virus. This protein, which is made through genetic engineering, is coated onto tiny white latex beads. AIDS antibodies in blood are attracted to the protein, and when they come together, the latex beads form clumps.

AIDS is caused by a virus that damages the body's immune system, leaving victims susceptible to infections and cancer.

It is spread most often through sexual contact, needles or syringes shared by drug abusers, infected blood or blood products, and from pregnant women to their offspring.

Body Found

CONOVER, N.C. (AP) — A 50-year-old woman whose badly decomposed body was found in front of her house north of Conover was stabbed, investigators say.

The body of Christa Louise Henkel Padgett may have been there for weeks before it was found about 5:30 p.m. Sunday, said Catawba County sheriff's detectives.

The yard around the brown, one-story frame house was littered with animals' parts — hides, bones and hooves, and the rotting head of a cow. The driveway was littered with trash, including a bag of broken eggshells. Pieces of plywood lay in the grass around the yard.

Inside the house, investigators found piles of rotting garbage, a cowhide and raw beef hanging from meat hooks, sources said. Detectives donned breathing apparatus before entering the house Sunday night.

Property records listed Ms. Padgett as the owner of the house.

Armando Gutierrez, 12, tries holding a pen with his new battery-powered, automated arms

Battery-Powered Arms Give Youngster More Flexibility

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Before he was fitted with his new automated arms, 12-year-old Armando Gutierrez pulled on his shoes and socks with his teeth and wrote with his foot.

Now, his new battery-powered arms are helping him learn to do everyday tasks in a more conventional way.

"It's easy. Nothing to it," said Armando, who lives in Las Cruces, about 180 miles south of Albuquerque and was born with arm stubs.

Armando's occupational therapist, Teresa Pollpeter, said the boy started using the mechanical arms correctly minutes after they were fitted on him Nov. 30 at Carrie Tingley Hospital in Albuquerque.

"We put them on him one day, and he immediately started using them accurately," Ms. Pollpeter said Tuesday. "He already had the muscle control mastered."

Now all he has to do is work on improving his accuracy, she said.

The arms flex up and down, and hooks open and close when Armando moves his shoulders a certain way. Thin cables attached to a switch on each arm make them move.

Each arm weighs about 3 pounds and is strapped over Armando's stubs and onto his shoulders with a small harness on his back. Batteries power the arms during the day and are recharged at night, said Eloy Padilla, Armando's prosthetist.

Armando is the second child to be fitted with the $12,000 arms at the hospital. This particular line of prostheses has been available for four years.

His first pair was not automated, and he had to push the forearm against an object to get them to lock in a bent position. Many things were easier by foot than by hand as a result.

He wrote with his left foot, holding the pencil between his big toe and second toe, and he used to pull on his shoes and socks with his teeth.

"When I was 5, I saw my mom drop a fork and pick it up with her toes," he said. "That's how I got the idea for (holding) the pencil. I only have four toes, so I put the pencil where the space is. It's easy."

Ms. Pollpeter said eating with the new arms has been the priority for Armando.

"It's not totally acceptable to have your feet at the table, so this is really going to help him," she said. "His parents like for him to use the prostheses. That's why we were eager for him to master that skill."

He will work at home on the other tasks, such as getting dressed and writing, Ms. Pollpeter said.

Holiday Traveling Could Set Record

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CLEVELAND — More Americans will be traveling during this year's Christmas and New Year's holidays than ever, according to travel industry projections.

Greyhound, the nation's largest intercity bus line, said it will carry 1.34 million passengers between Dec. 18 and Jan. 3, or 10 percent more than for the period last year.

In part, the increase is due to a recent boost in air fares and the limited amount of discount-priced seats on the nation's major airlines, said Fred G. Currey, Greyhound's chief executive officer, who was in Cleveland to meet with company employees.

"Airplane ticket prices are very substantially higher this year, and they are a factor," Currey said Tuesday. "And bus fares are very moderately priced."

But Currey's contention was disputed by organizations representing the airlines and travel agents.

Most people traveling during the holidays bought their tickets "weeks and months ago before fares went up," said Philip G. Davidoff, president of Belair Travel of Bowie, Md., president-elect of the American Society of Travel Agents.

"What's going to happen next year, I don't know," Davidoff said. "If the increases are put into effect for January, it probably will mean more people will take buses than ever before."

Bill Horn, a spokesman for the Air Transport Association, which represents the nation's largest airlines, said a record 7 million Americans traveled by air during the Thanksgiving holiday weekend.

Between Dec. 17 and Jan. 2, U.S. airlines expect to transport at least 22 million people, or about 500,000 more than for the period last year, he said. That also would be a record, Horn said.

The nation's major airlines announced last month that they were raising most of their lowest discount fares and eliminating the cheap fares that can be booked a few days before a flight. But a week later, Eastern, Continental, Delta, and Northwest announced reductions in some fares.

"Those fare increases that were announced just prior to Thanksgiving affected a very small percentage of the travel market," Horn said.

Clifford Black, public relations manager for Amtrak, said the railroad carried a record number of passengers in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30 and "it shows no signs of letting up."

But limited capacity makes it difficult for the railroad to set holiday records, he said.

"During the holiday seasons, they tend to sell out, making it impossible to improve from year to year and from one holiday season to the next," Black said.

Ladies Apparel Top Item For Shoplifters

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — The nation's retailers lost $1.8 billion last year to theft and errors, including shoplifters, whose top light-finger item was ladies' designer apparel, according to a survey.

"An Ounce of Prevention," the 10th annual survey of U.S. retailers by the Arthur Young & Co. accounting firm, said Tuesday that jewelry, shoes and men's clothing were at the bottom of the list.

"Our survey shows that many of the nation's retailers have been hit hard by theft and other losses," said Gerald Smith, head of Arthur Young's retail group in Chicago, a management consultant for the retail industry.

The survey found companies lost

$1.8 billion through shoplifting, theft by employees or vendors and errors in paperwork in 1987, compared with $1.5 billion in losses in 1986.

The survey covered 119 retail companies operating in 47,000 locations around the country with combined total sales of $127.5 billion, Smith said. The research was conducted last spring and summer.

Companies participating in the survey included discount stores, department stores and specialty stores. The names of the firms were withheld.

Discount stores were hit hardest last year, losing $1.2 billion worth of merchandise; department stores lost $364 million and specialty shops lost $233 million worth of goods, the survey said.

For the five years from 1982 through 1987, the survey found the following increases in shoplifting losses as a percentage of total sales:

—Discount stores: from 1.5 percent to 2.1 percent.

—Specialty stores: from 1.7 percent to 2.2 percent.

—Department stores: from 2 percent to 2.1 percent.

The survey showed that 86 percent of department stores ranked ladies' apparel as the first or second areas hardest hit by shoplifters.

"There was a time when calculators were the hot items for shoplifters, then it went to designer jeans, now it's designer lingerie," said Lewis Shealy, vice president of loss prevention for Marshall Field's department stores.

"It's the highest theft department in the company," he said. "We began putting designer lingerie in the department about two years ago and this year most of the merchandise is designer."

Since then, inventory loss in the lingerie department nearly tripled, Shealy said, declining to provide specific figures.

"We have suede bras and panties costing more than $400," he said. "These designer items are 'gotta have but can't afford' things and it's easy for a shoplifter to put a dozen bras or panties in a large handbag."

"It's a combination of the designer label and the price that excites them," he said.

Texas Fire Ant May Be Challenge To Super Collider

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Researchers who hope to study the secrets of nature at the government's planned $4.4 billion super collider may first need protection from a venomous ant with a penchant for munching its way through underground cables.

A 10,000-page environmental impact statement on the project says the Texas site chosen by the Energy Department for the research center is in an area infested with the fire ant.

The ill-tempered ant inflicts painful bites, is blamed by local residents for disabling home and farm equipment, and has caused power failures by chewing through underground cables, the department reports.

Plans call for the super collider to be built in a 53-mile tunnel under what is now farmland in Ellis County, Texas. Subatomic particles will be accelerated to astronomical speeds inside the tunnel and studied by scientists hoping to learn more about the fundamental nature of matter and energy.

Scientists, however, have yet to find a way to eradicate the fire ant.

The Energy Department says

special attention will have to be paid at the super collider site to the design of electrical facilities and other underground components; construction practices to protect workers from the ant's painful sting; and development of an environmentally sound pesticide policy.

Texasans who commented on the super collider project to the Energy Department said fire ants "routinely tunnel to water table depths in search of water, chewing their way through underground cables and insulation around wiring en route," the impact statement said.

Thirty years of study by federal and state agriculture officials still has not yielded an effective method of eradicating the ant, only control procedures, the study said. A Texas Department of Agriculture representative told the Energy Department that the control programs were only 80 percent effective.

Fire ants also pose a health risk since their bite is painful and can sometimes lead to serious reactions in humans, the study said.

For most people, a sting results in swelling, pain and itching that lasts a week, the study said. For others, immediate medical attention may be needed, especially for a few victims so sensitive to the ants' venom they go into shock.

Solons' Pay Controversy Spans Two Centuries

By John King
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — When the first Congress convened in 1789, members were paid $6 a day — while in session. Lawmakers created a furor 27 years later when they decided to boost their pay to $1,500 a year, a raise that was quickly repealed.

Two centuries after the first session the debate continues, with many in Congress complaining that their $89,500 salary is too small and President Reagan considering whether to offer them a sizeable raise.

Consumer advocates such as Ralph Nader were quick to criticize when a presidential commission on Tuesday suggested a 50 percent pay hike for members of Congress and other top federal officials, but former Rep. Elford A. Cederberg, R-Mich., was more sympathetic.

Cederberg, who is president of the Association of Former Congressmen, said Nader, and more importantly the folks back home, often don't realize the high cost of maintaining households both at home and in Washington, where he estimated that lawmakers' houses cost an average of $250,000.

"The average person back home just doesn't understand that if a man brings his family with him down here, unless he has some personal wealth, it's difficult for him to take on that kind of a mortgage," Cederberg said. "Especially in politics, which is a rather unstable business."

When Cederberg came to Washington, he was paid $12,500.

The annual salary had climbed to $57,500 when he was voted out of office in 1978 after serving 13 terms. He said he makes more money now as a consultant.

Winning influence also takes a toll on congressional wallets, Cederberg said.

"Republicans belong to the Capitol Hill Club and Democrats belong to the Democratic Club," he said. "And there are other people and things you have to be seen around if you're going to be influential and they cost money."

The new recommendations, from a commission that weighs in with its views on congressional pay after every presidential election, would raise the salaries to $135,000 — more than nine times the nation's average personal income in 1987.

Such comparisons are dismissed by proponents of pay hikes, who point to Washington's high cost of living. And, just like the folks back home, many members of Congress have to worry about babysitters and tuition for their children, they say.

"I think some people think that congressmen and their wives go around in limousines and live in big houses and go to the White House," said Gretchen Poston of Washington Inc., a consulting firm for social events and conventions. "That's just not the day-to-day life."

Ms. Poston, who was social secretary in the Carter White House, said members of Congress and their spouses also are expected to entertain and attend formal functions.

"They are supporting two households and worrying about babysitters and at the same time they are invited out and asked to do so many things," she said. "They are expected to be all things to all people."

Members of Congress are reluctant to vote themselves a pay hike, and won't necessarily have to if Reagan accepts the commission's findings or recommends smaller raises. If no vote is taken, the raises take effect automatically.

"You've got an electorate that loves to take a bite out of your leg," former Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said last month as he nonetheless urged the commission to reward lawmakers with higher pay. "There's nothing closer to home than examining the pay of public officials."

Critics such as Nader scoff at the reasons listed by pay hike proponents.

"Money does not buy integrity, dedication and agreement," he says.

Members of Congress surely would agree. But they might quickly add: It does buy a house. Or two.

Supporting the higher pay can also buy trouble, a fact not lost on the lawmakers.

"My appearance here kicks off my opponent's next campaign, whoever he or she is," Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif., joked last month when he urged the commission to recommend higher pay.

Others argue that more money should come with the prestige of serving in Congress. Rep. William Clay, D-Mo., complained during a 1987 debate on congressional pay that his pipefitter brother made more money.

Said Gray: "I think something is amiss."

Pay At A Glance

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Here is a summary of the major recommendations of the Commission on Executive, Legislative and Judicial Salaries, which will be formally forwarded to President Reagan on Thursday:

—Salaries for the top 2,500 federal officials — including the vice president, members of Congress, judges, cabinet members and other senior executive-branch personnel — should be increased by roughly 50 percent in 1989. That amount would restore purchasing power of those officials to 1969 levels. A member of Congress, for example, would go from a salary of $89,500 to $135,000, as would district judges. The vice president's salary would go from $115,000 to $175,000.

—Congress should enact separate legislation to raise the president's salary, which has been frozen at $200,000 since 1969, to about $350,000. The increase could not take effect until Jan. 21, 1993, because of a constitutional ban on raising a president's pay during his term.

—Congress should pass legislation to abolish honoraria, the speaking and writing fees paid to lawmakers primarily by special-interest groups. The ban should go into effect at the same time the pay raise is effective.

The commission's report is only a recommendation. Reagan may adopt or modify it when he submits his budget to Congress on Jan. 9.

Trade Deficit Smallest In 3 Months

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The U.S. trade deficit narrowed to $10.35 billion in October, the smallest imbalance in three months, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said that the merchandise trade gap between what the United States imports and what it sells overseas fell by 3.1 percent from a September deficit of $10.67 billion.

The decline, the second consecutive improvement, was slightly better than many economists had been predicting. For this reason, analysts said it was unlikely that the figure would create turmoil in financial markets. In some months, an unexpectedly bad number has sent stock market prices plunging and pushed the dollar into a tailspin.

In a separate report, the Federal Reserve Board said that the operating rate at U.S. factories, mines and utilities rose 0.2 percentage point last month to 84.2 percent, its highest level in nine years.

That report, which was in line with economists' predictions, is likely to intensify concern about inflation. As capacity use edges toward 85 percent, economists fear factories will have trouble producing enough goods to meet demand, leading to shortages and price increases.

The October trade improvement came from a 1.7 percent drop in imports, which declined to $38.02 billion, on a seasonally adjusted basis.

This decline offset a smaller 1.1 percent drop in U.S. exports, which edged down to $11.75 billion.

Even with the small setback in exports, U.S. overseas sales remained near record high levels. For the first 10 months of this year, export sales are running 28.3 percent above the same period in 1987.

This remarkable surge in export sales has been responsible for almost half of America's overall economic growth this year as American manufacturers have hired workers and stepped up output to meet demand.

Through October, the overall merchandise trade deficit has been running at an annual rate of $136.1 billion, 20 percent below the all-time high imbalance of $170.3 billion recorded last year.

President-elect Bush cited this improvement during the presidential campaign as proof that the Reagan administration's policies of solving the country's trade woes were working.

The administration launched an effort in September 1985 to drive the value of the dollar lower to make American goods more competitive on overseas markets while driving up the price of imports.

The effort took far longer to bear fruit than many had expected and has to this day failed to halt the steady increase in imports, which are running 8.3 percent higher so far this year over 1987.

The $10.35 billion October deficit was the lowest since a $9.47 billion July imbalance. That had been the smallest deficit since December 1984.

The trade report, U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter said, was "good news on which to close out 1988."

Factory Use Reported At Nine-Year High

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The operating rate at U.S. factories, mines and utilities in November rose to the highest level in nine years, the government said today in a report likely to heighten concern about inflation.

The Federal Reserve Board said the use of industrial capacity rose 0.2 percentage points to 84.2 percent last month, the highest since 84.3 percent in November 1979. It was the seventh increase in eight months.

As capacity use edges toward 85 percent, economists fear factories will have trouble producing enough goods to meet demand, leading to shortages and price increases.

In an accompanying report, the Federal Reserve said industrial production climbed a brisk 0.5 percent in November following an identical 0.5 percent rise in October.

The Fed's industrial production index now stands at 139.9 percent of its 1977 base, reflecting gains in light truck manufacturing and production of equipment for businesses.

The jumps in capacity use and the production index were in line with economists' expectations. Most government statistics have portrayed a robust economy in October and November, particularly in the manufacturing sector, which has been bolstered by strong export sales caused by the lower value of the dollar, which makes U.S. goods more affordable on overseas markets.

At manufacturing plants, the operating rate climbed to 84.5 percent last month.

P.J. O'Rourke: New Journalism With A Wry Pen

By Bob Sipchen
LAT-WP News Service

Don't laugh — you'll just encourage him.

And if there is one thing concerned citizens have no business encouraging, it is a self-described "investigative humorist" with so little respect for the deep seriousness of our troubled world.

Read any piece in journalist P.J. O'Rourke's latest collection, Holidays in Hell, and you'll encounter things you shouldn't find funny. Regardless of your moral or political leanings, you're bound to come across something ideologically incorrect.

Which makes it all the more mysterious why, in June, chic Vogue magazine named O'Rourke one of five "Men You'd Want to Sit Next to at a Dinner Party," or why the businesslike Wall Street Journal recently called him "The Funniest Writer in America."

"P.J. is completely irresponsible," said Michael Kinsley, editor of the New Republic magazine, offering a clue, perhaps. "I guess that's what I admire about him."

Bankrolled by such diverse national publications as Rolling Stone, Harper's, the American Spectator and Automobile, Patrick Jake O'Rourke has spent the last few years as a "trouble tourist," traipsing through such crisis spots as Manila, Beirut, San Salvador and Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker's Heritage USA. All along the way, he casually sidesteps conventional journalistic approaches, prefabricated wisdom and good taste.

O'Rourke, who is a former editor of the National Lampoon and script writer on Rodney Dangerfield's "Easy Money," has little tolerance for most of the run-of-the-mill tourists he encounters on his travels:

"The larger the German body the smaller the German bathing suit and the louder the German voice issuing German demands and German orders to everybody who doesn't speak German," he writes. "For this, and several other reasons, Germany is known as 'the land where Israelis learned their manners.'"

Japanese tourists, on the other hand, are "extraordinary shoplifters. ... They eschew the usual clothes and trinkets, but automobile plants, steel mills and electronics factories seem to be missing from everywhere they go."

O'Rourke himself is a different kind of tourist — the kind who dutifully notes of Beirut, Lebanon: "Ruins of historical interest abound, in fact, block most streets."

He is also a different kind of journalist.

In one of the pieces in "Holidays," O'Rourke's friend, musician Jimmy Buffet, sums up the writer's career as a "phony baloney job making fun of everything."

O'Rourke sees himself as part of the Hunter S. Thompson-Tom Wolfe strain of reportage dubbed New Journalism. The simple difference, as he sees it, is that in the so-called new stuff, "the omniscient, omnipresent, all-seeing, all-knowing journalistic voice is abandoned, and the writer admits that he or she has human prejudices and human shortcomings, thereby letting the reader know what kind of lens they're seeing the story through."

"Obviously, there's not room for that in a fast-breaking story about a downtown hotel fire," he said. "You know: 'I was feeling pretty lousy this morning and a little off my speed when the phone call came saying 30 were dead.'"

On the other hand, he believes that the strait-laced portentousness of most foreign reporting gives readers and viewers a distorted picture of world events. Besides overt lies and lies of omission, there are lies "where you pretend you know what you're talking about," he said.

O'Rourke prefers to throw up his hands before his readers.

Commenting on the young checkpoint guards he encounters in Lebanon, for instance, he catalogues the Christian Phalange, the "blustering Druse," the "angry Shias," "grumpy Syrians," and the "Scarsdale-looking Israelis," adding: "And who knows what the rest of them belong to? Everybody with a gun has a checkpoint in Lebanon. And in Lebanon you'd be crazy not to have a gun. Though I assure you, all the crazy people have guns, too."

For the most part he eschews interviews with world leaders.

"They just don't tell you the truth," he said. Instead, O'Rourke talks to real folk, with whom he discusses matters such as "What's for dinner?" and "Please don't kill me."

To get an idea of what O'Rourke looks like, picture Dan Quayle with a bad hangover. At 41, he is the same peak-baby-boom age.

With his monogrammed, striped, pinpoint oxford shirt and yuppie power tie, tasseled loafers, tousled head of well-cut hair and boyish good looks, O'Rourke — a self-proclaimed conservative — bears considerable physical resemblance to the vice president-elect.

But he bristles at the comparison to Quayle, whom he characterizes as a "sappy Deke" (Delta Kappa Epsilon, the fraternity to which Quayle and President-elect Bush belonged), "dancing around George Bush like a golden retriever."

"I like the kind of conservatives who came to it through a struggle," he said.

The product of "rock-ribbed" Republican parentage, O'Rourke went radical upon graduating from high school in 1965.

"I think every high school student who was alert during the early '60s got very embittered by the slow progress and the violence surrounding the civil rights movement," he said. By the time he entered Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, the Vietnam War had ignited smoldering anti-establishment feelings.

"Here, you're 18 years old, you've just discovered marijuana and girls and you're having a great time," O'Rourke said, speaking with the pacing and inflections of a natural conversationalist. "Then suddenly a letter from the government arrives saying, 'We'd like you to go overseas to this distant country with noxious foreign fauna and shoot people that you've never met. And they're going to shoot back.'"

"We went, 'No! We don't mind shooting some people.' I had a stepfather I'd have gladly shot. 'But I'm not going to shoot them if I don't know them.'"

O'Rourke found himself rebelling against what he saw as the rigidity and silliness of the middle class. On one side of campus life were the guys with the drugs and guitars and "girls with that wonderful long straight black ironed hair." On the other side were the fraternities.

He asked himself: "I'm all grown up and I'm going to let people paddle me so they can be my friends later on?"

O'Rourke's self-professed conservatism came to him — or rather came back to him — in the late '60s, soon after a group of self-professed Maoists took over the Baltimore underground newspaper at which he

The Los Angeles Times/Michael Edwards

O'Rourke has been dubbed 'The Funniest Writer In America' was working and subjected the staffers to 24 hours of "consciousness raising."

O'Rourke now espouses the cockeyed neo-conservative values of what he calls "Republican Party Reptiles." As he defines it, this subspecies is opposed to (among other things): "Kennedy kids ... busing our children anywhere other than Yale, trailer courts near our vacation homes, all tiny Third World countries that don't have banking secrecy laws, aerobics, the U.N. and taxation without tax loopholes ..." and in favor of (among other things): "guns, drugs, fast cars, free love (if our wives don't find out) ... a cleaner environment (poor people should cut it out with the graffiti) and a strong military with spiffy uniforms."

O'Rourke said that although his point of view is conservative, he goes into each story open-minded.

"I just don't see that one's basic political philosophy, any more than one's basic religious philosophy, has anything to do with what is or isn't happening in front of your eyes," he said. "The people who make (their beliefs) have something to do with it are crazy people."

In the few places O'Rourke tries to sum up his world view, it is that civilization is better than a lack of it, that America is as civilized as any place, and that things are falling apart almost everywhere anyway.

The other real underpinning of his world view is fun.

"You've got to understand, people are motivated by fun. And they should be," he said.

"What would any spirited, feeling person rather do? Would they rather starve behind a water buffalo or rot in a slum, or would they rather be up in the hills with a fancy hat and a gun of their own and some respect?"

Lace Tablecloth Made Of Cotton

This crocheted lace tablecloth is so beautiful you can use it to dress up any corner of your home.

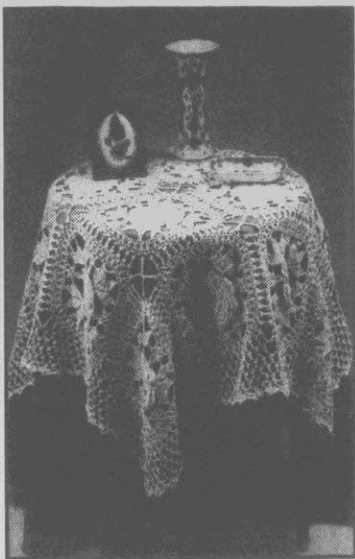

One of the loveliest old motifs — the rose — is repeated in 16 10-inch squares, resulting in a finished square of approximately 47 inches on each side. An easy-care cotton yarn is used for this traditional design that's sure to become a family heirloom.

To obtain directions for making the Heirloom Rose tablecloth, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-121188 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-121188 by sending a check or money order for $19.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and white cotton yarn.

Dear Pat: If your readers are looking for a couple of last-minute "quickies" for the holiday season, have them try these ideas.

I dress up a plain cardigan or jacket for the holidays by making wreath buttons to replace the usual ones. You can purchase small, white plastic rings in most needlework or sewing departments. With green yarn, work single crochets around the ring, filling it completely. Fasten off and run the loose end of yarn under the stitches with a tapestry needle. Then, work French knots with red yarn and each button looks like a miniature holiday wreath.

Using a larger size plastic ring, follow the same crochet directions and decorate with French knots, sequins or tiny pearls. Finish off with a bow made of narrow ribbon. Sew a safety pin to the back of the bow and you have a Christmas lapel pin.

Or cut apart the rings that hold six beverage cans together and you can create wreath ornaments of your Christmas tree, following the same directions. Decorate with a ribbon or yarn bow. Before you hide the yarn end, leave a loop of the yarn to use for hanging the ornament on the tree.

With all of these, just be sure to fit in as many single crochets around the ring as possible. Merry Christmas — Lila Williams, Pittsburgh.

Many thanks, Lila, for your cherry note and clever suggestions, and Merry Christmas to you, too!

It May Cause A Family Feud, But Tell Michele To Move Out

Dear Abby: My brother died several years ago. He had a daughter I'll call Michele. Michele's mother remarried and moved to another state.

My husband and I have raised three children who are now married and living on their own, so we have two extra bedrooms.

Michele graduated from high school last year, and her mother called and asked if Michele could move in with my husband and me while she attends a college near us.

We felt this would be OK, as Michele is 18 and considered an adult. Michele's parents agreed to pay us $125 a month rent, and said that all her other expenses would be taken care of by them.

So far, we have been paid only one month's rent, and Michele has been here for seven months. We paid a $300 repair bill for her car; our phone bills are outrageous from the calls she makes home and to her friends. She is always borrowing extra money, which she says her mother will repay, but we haven't seen one dime of it.

Michele's room is always a terrible mess, and our phone rings at all hours of the night for her. Abby, my husband and I fight constantly, and he wants her out. So do I, but I am afraid it will cause a family feud if I ask her to leave.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

I've tried talking to her, but it doesn't do any good, and I can't handle any more of this. What would you do, Abby? — Aunt Betsy

Dear Aunt Betsy: I would call Michele's mother immediately and tell her that since she failed to uphold her end of the agreement, and Michele is causing problems in your household, Michele must go. Tell her firmly that Michele has one week to vacate the premises. Advise Michele of your decision — help her pack her clothes and stick to your guns. If this causes a family feud, so be it. It's your husband's house, too.

Dear Abby: My parents, who live in another state, have a small dog named Jenny. Jenny is a lovable pet, but she frequently has "accidents" on my new carpets. Also, my two cats are declawed and cannot defend themselves against Jenny, who deliberately antagonizes them.

Although we have discussed these problems on more than one occasion, my parents have consistently ignored my wishes and they continue to bring Jenny along when they visit me.

We have tried putting Jenny outside on a leash and leaving her in the garage, but she barks and whines until we bring her in. I've begged my parents to leave Jenny in a kennel or in the care of a friend, but they refuse.

The issue is becoming a sore spot between my parents and me. Any suggestions? — Theresa

Dear Theresa: Put a doggy diaper on Jenny, or find a nearby motel that accepts pets, and send Mom and Dad and Jenny there. And keep your cats in a room with the door closed to protect them from Jenny.

Dear Abby: I have read many articles about how much it would cost to hire professionals to do all the jobs a wife does — a cook, housekeeper, chauffeur, tutor, etc., but I've never read anything about how much it would cost to replace a good husband.

We've never had to hire a carpenter, mechanic, plumber, painter, electrician or gardener. At today's prices, do you realize how many thousands of dollars this saves us every year?

My husband also works full time. Besides doing all those things, he's a wonderful lover and my best friend. — Lucky In Oregon

Dear Lucky: You are indeed lucky. But when you mention the last two virtues — you hit the jackpot in my book.

Replacement
GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Gaston County Republicans voted Tuesday to recommend W.W. Dickson as the replacement for Walt Windley in the state House.

Windley was elected to his third two-year term as a 44th District representative Nov. 8. He unofficially resigned his seat last week, after he was charged with soliciting for prostitution in Mecklenburg County.

Tuesday afternoon, state officials said Windley still had not filed a resignation in Raleigh, although he told a newspaper Friday he had resigned effective immediately.

Dickson is a retired Gastonia veterinarian.

HOME FEDERAL SAVINGS

AND LOAN ASSOCIATION OF EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA

Serving Eastern North Carolina since 1906

A MESSAGE FROM YOUR LOCAL FINANCIAL INSTITUTION

Home Federal Savings and Loan Association of Eastern North Carolina is based in Greenville, North Carolina, and has branch offices in Edenton, Plymouth, Williamston and Bethel.

We are a mutually owned and independent company dedicated to the principles of thrift and homeownership. These two ideas have helped build our nation. Home Federal Savings has been in business since 1906 and we have seen a lot of changes, but some things remain the same. People still need a home and a safe place to keep their life savings. Home Federal has always operated and will continue to operate with these basic principles in mind. In today's deregulated marketplace, there are many players in the market with all sorts of gimmicks and "come ons". They are in the market for the short gain, not the long term. How are they investing your money? This is an important question.

Home Federal continues to invest directly in the local communities it serves through home mortgage financing activities. Through our expertise and knowledge of the area markets, we have built a strong, stable portfolio of mortgage loans. That is how your money works -- by helping your community and local economy grow. Home Federal has consistently provided an above average return to its depositors. We would like to thank our customers who have helped us grow steadily and profitably to over $100 million in assets.

Sincerely,

J. Larkin Little, President

Pirate Men, Women Take To Road

East Carolina's men and women take to the road for basketball action Thursday night.

The Pirates will be in Rock Hill, S.C., to face Winthrop in a 7:30 p.m. contest, while the Lady Pirates will be at Vanderbilt for the first action in over a week.

East Carolina's men go into the game with a 3-3 record after falling to Big South Conference member Radford, 88-75, on Saturday night in Minges Coliseum. Winthrop is 3-2, having beaten University of the South (92-66), Howard (55-52) and Maryland-Eastern Shore (83-56), while losing to St. Francis (58-56) and Brooklyn (65-57).

The Eagles are coached by former Duke great Steve Vacendak, now in his third year with Winthrop, where he also serves as athletic director.

East Carolina leads the series with the Eagles, three games to one, but lost its last time in Rock Hill two years ago. That came in an embarrassing 66-52 defeat during Charlie Harrison's final year as head coach. The Pirates, under Mike Steele, downed Winthrop last year in Minges, 52-45.

For the Eagles, it will be their first game in 10 days, not having played since Dec. 5.

Winthrop has two double figure scorers leading the way. Senior forward Greg Washington, 6-5, is the top scorer and rebounder. He's averaging 16.4 points a game and 6.6 rebounds. The other player in double figures is 5-11 junior guard Shaun Wise, hitting 10.2 points per game.

Oddly enough, the number two rebounder is a guard, 6-2 junior Sean Smith, with a 6.4 average. He's the number three scorer with 8.8 points a game.

The other starters are expected to be 6-7 sophomore forward Andy McKoy and 6-7 junior center Terry Hare. They average 7.4 and 6.6 points per game, respectively.

East Carolina's scoring is led by Blue Edwards, hitting 23.0 points a game. He's also the leading rebounder with a 6.5 average.

Kevin Staples is scoring at an 11.2 pace and is also second in rebounding with 6.3 per game. Gus Hill is at 11.0 points per game to round out those in double figures.

Edwards and Staples are expected to start, along with Jeff Kelly and Kenny Murphy, at guards, while Hill or Stanley Love will probably start at the other forward slot.

Kelly leads the Pirates in assists with 21, including five against Radford and has committed only five turnovers on the year, with just one against Radford. He's been credited with nine steals.

The Pirates have suffered from cool shooting hands for the last three halves. They shot less than 30 percent in the second half against South Carolina, and shot only 41.1 percent against Radford.

The game is the only one of the week for the Pirates, who next return to action on Dec. 20 at Mississippi State.

The Lady Pirates, 2-3, defeated Niagara 86-59 in the consolation game of the Lady Pirate Classic on Dec. 3, giving them a 12-day layoff between games.

The win saw the Lady Pirates play one of their better games of the season after having played very soft games against both Duke and UNC-Charlotte, their two previous opponents. Sarah Gray leads the Lady Pirates in scoring and rebounding, with 18.6 and 8.4 marks, respectively. Pam Williams is the only other Lady Pirate in double figures with a 12.6 average.

Guard Irish Hamilton is closing in on the top 10 in assists, with a career total of 139, leaving her just four short of moving into 10th place. Chris O'Connor is also drawing a bead on the top 10 in assists, with 136. O'Connor is also just nine points shy of 500 career points and two rebounds shy of 200 for her career.

Vanderbilt comes into the game with a 4-1 record following a strong 100-89 win over Western Kentucky on Saturday. The victory boosted Vandy's standings among poll voters to rank them 23rd in this week's ratings. (Vanderbilt was to play Tennessee State Tuesday night — East Carolina's opponent this coming Saturday.)

The meeting between the Lady Pirates and Commodores will be the second between the two. Vandy defeated East Carolina, 66-56, in the finals of the 1987 Lady Pirate Classic.

Vandy is led by sophomore center Wendy Scholtens, 6-4, who averages 22.2 points and 8.8 rebounds a game. Senior guard Deborah Denton, 5-8, averages 18.4 points a game, while 5-9 senior forward Jill Goldberg, a Raleigh native, is next with an 11.8 average. Renae Sallquist, a 6-3 junior forward, rounds out those in double figures with a 10.4 average. She also is pulling 7.6 rebounds a game.

The Lady Pirates remain in Nashville to face Tennessee State, 1-5 going into the Vanderbilt game, on Saturday. It will be the first meeting of the Lady Pirates and Tennessee State.

Hornets In Second Chance Lose To Pacers On Road, Hosting Indiana Tonight

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — The NBA schedulemaker didn't do the Indiana Pacers any favors by scheduling them for back-to-back games with the expansion Charlotte Hornets, says Pacers' coach George Irvine.

"They have a lot of veterans, and they're not a typical expansion club," Irvine said after the Pacers defeated Charlotte 115-105 Tuesday night.

The same two clubs play tonight on Charlotte's home court.

"We'll be in for a game tonight," said Irvine. "I don't like playing teams back-to-back. They're going to be ready, and they'll have a big home crowd behind them. We can't afford to think about this victory."

Tuesday's victory gave Indiana a 5-5 mark under Irvine, who was named interim coach after the team lost its first nine games. They'll be seeking their first road victory in nine tries tonight.

Reserve John Long scored a season-high 25 points and Vern Fleming had a triple-double with a career-high 13 rebounds Tuesday.

"When it came crunch time tonight we showed up. A lot of times we fade. But we buckled down and gave it everything we had," said Fleming, whose best rebounding total this season had been seven.

"I felt pretty good about my rebounding tonight," said Fleming, who completed the triple-double by making a 17-foot jump shot with 1:21 to play. "I could hear the guys yelling from the bench that all that I needed was two points. It's easier when you need the points than it is to get the rebounds and assists."

Long made a 3-point shot that put the Pacers ahead to stay 77-74 with 50 seconds left in the third period. He scored 12 points in the fourth quarter.

Fleming contributed 10 points and had 12 assists as five Pacers finished in double figures. Indiana, which made all 16 of its free throws in the final quarter, pulled away with a 13-4 spurt. The burst ended with a Long jumper giving Indiana a 94-83 advantage with 7:19 to play.

Kelly Tripucka led Charlotte with 26 points, scoring 11 in the opening period to put the Hornets ahead 30-27. Reggie Miller, who had 22 for Indiana, later had the opening and closing basket in a nine-point Indiana streak that put the Pacers ahead 42-33 with 7:24 left in the first half.

The Pacers dominated the boards 66-50 with Fleming and Herb Williams each pulling in 13 and outscored the Hornets by 12 points from the free throw line.

"We missed way too many free throws," said Charlotte coach Dick Harter, who saw his club miss 14 of 38 attempts, while Indiana made 36 of 42. "The free throws were a factor but not as big as not playing well."

Lakers 111, Cavaliers 102

Magic Johnson had seen the movies and he was wary.

"We saw a lot of film of them getting layups and dunking on people," Johnson said of the Cleveland Cavaliers. "We didn't want to happen to us. They have a very good transition game."

Johnson scored 31 points, grabbed 12 rebounds and had 13 assists Tuesday night, leading the Los Angeles Lakers past Cleveland 111-102. It was his sixth "triple-double" this season and 101st of his career.

"What we were able to do was take good shots and get back on defense," Johnson said.

The Lakers have won eight of nine while Cleveland lost at home for just the second time in its last 16 regular-season games.

"Their big people were playing up so high, it was hard to get back on the double team," Cleveland center Brad Daugherty said. "They were just a little bit smarter than we were."

Johnson scored 13 points in the fourth quarter, helping the Lakers build a 14-point lead.

Cleveland got within 103-98 in the final two minutes as Ron Harper, who scored 30 points, made two 3-pointers and Larry Nance had five points. But A.C. Green made a 3-point shot for the Lakers with one minute left, blunting the Cavaliers' comeback.

Bullets 115, Celtics 105

Bernard King scored 10 of his 30 points in the final 10:23 as Washington snapped a seven-game losing streak.

Jeff Malone scored 21 of his 25 points in the second half for the host Bullets. Washington never trailed in the final quarter, outscoring Boston 8-1 over the final 1:48.

Kevin McHale scored 22 points for the Celtics.

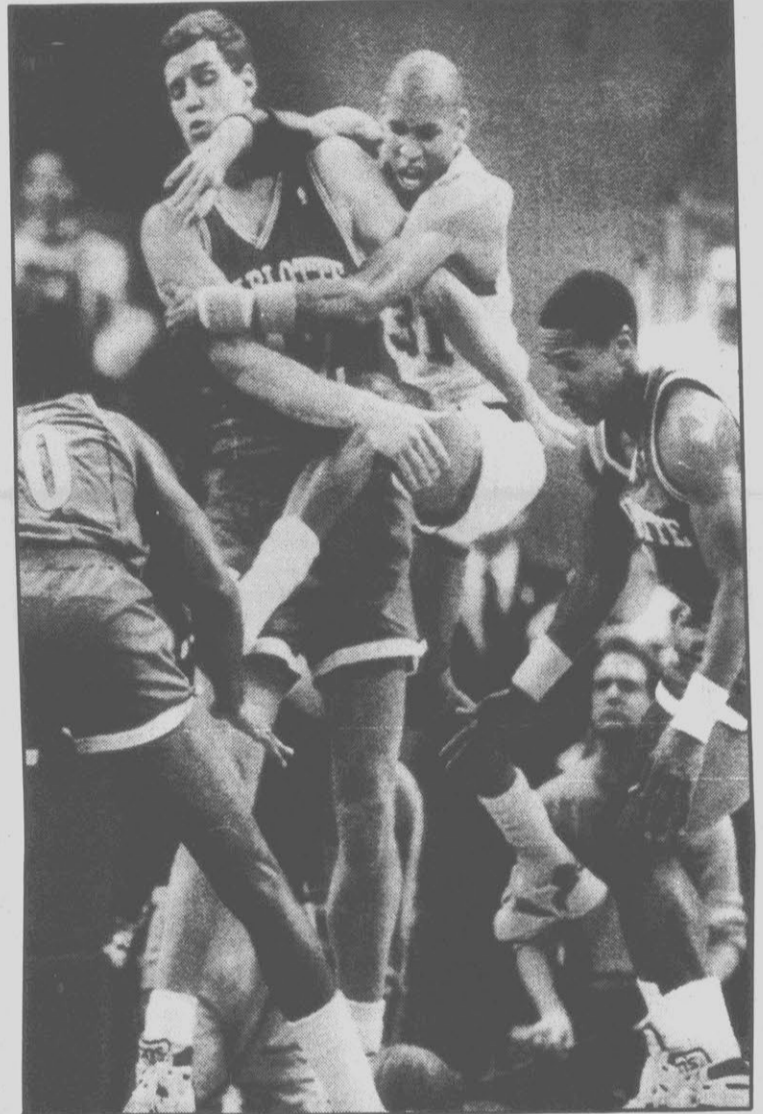

Hawks 106, Bulls 88

Dominique Wilkins scored 30 points, including six during a 16-6 run that gave Atlanta a 69-53 lead early in the third period.

The Hawks led 53-45 at halftime, and after Chicago's Michael Jordan scored the first basket of the third quarter, Atlanta went on its decisive streak. Glenn Rivers had four points, four assists and two steals in the burst and finished with 16 points.

Jordan scored 28 for the Bulls,

Dooley Reportedly Ready To Announce Retirement

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATHENS, Ga. — Vince Dooley plans to meet with his Georgia Bulldogs amid widespread reports he is retiring as their football coach after the Gator Bowl.

No one with the university would confirm the reports Tuesday night. The 56-year-old Dooley, who according to reports will remain as athletic director, had "nothing to say."

Dooley, who has coached Georgia football for 25 years and won 200 career games, has been rumored all season to be considering retirement from coaching and thinking about a possible 1990 campaign for governor.

There have been reports that the uncertainty of Dooley's plans has hurt Georgia's recruiting. Colleges and universities can begin signing high school seniors to scholarships beginning Feb. 8.

Georgia's coaches, who have been on the road recruiting, were expected to attend a staff meeting today. The players had been scheduled to begin practice for the Jan. 1 Gator Bowl game against Michigan State.

Several Georgia newspapers carried stories today quoting various unidentified sources as saying Dooley planned to use the previously scheduled team meeting to inform the players he was retiring.

One newspaper — the Marietta Daily Journal, in a copyright story — said Dooley would leave the athletic director's position in the spring or early summer.

Several newspapers said offensive coordinator George Haffner would be named interim coach through the spring and would be considered for the permanent position.

The Atlanta Constitution said university President Charles Knapp appointed a committee Tuesday to begin searching for Dooley's replacement as coach. The committee would hold its first meeting Thursday, the newspaper said.

The Atlanta newspaper said Georgia Southern football coach Erk Russell, a 62-year-old former defensive coordinator at Georgia, was at the top of the list of potential replacements.

Russell, whose team will play Furman for the NCAA Division I-AA national championship at Pocatello, Idaho, Saturday night, told several newspapers Tuesday he had not been contacted and did not know what he would do if offered the job.

Dooley reportedly informed Knapp and several other university officials of his decision to retire as coach during a meeting in Knapp's office Tuesday afternoon. Steve Frankel, an aide to Knapp, said he would not comment on the reported meeting.

Dooley took over a downtrodden football program at Georgia in 1964, won six Southeastern Conference titles and a national championship in 1980 and capped his silver anniversary season last month by becoming only the 10th coach in NCAA Division I-A history to reach the 200-victory plateau.

No. 200 came against archrival

Vince Dooley

Georgia Tech, a 24-3 triumph in the regular-season finale Nov. 26, completing an 8-3 campaign that earned Georgia a berth opposite Michigan State in the Gator Bowl — the school's 20th bowl appearance under Dooley.

His overall coaching record stands at 200-77-10.

Dooley considered retirement in 1985 to run for the U.S. Senate but decided after three weeks to remain as the Georgia coach and athletic director.

Dooley also flirted with leaving Georgia just after the 1980 national championship season when he considered returning to his alma mater, Auburn, as the head football coach.

Dooley's health came into question during the 1987 season when he underwent an angioplasty procedure to clear a blocked artery near his heart, a procedure that has been repeated twice since.

He got a clean bill of health in a heart checkup last month.

Pirates And Parker Settle Two Parties Decide On An Out Of Court Agreement

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Pirates and Dave Parker quietly settled a lawsuit over Parker's admitted past drug use, apparently closing a 3½-year-old public record on cocaine use among some of baseball's biggest names.

Pirates president Carl F. Barger said Tuesday that the out-of-court settlement with Parker avoids a repeat of the September 1985 federal trials that damaged the game through confessions of drug use by several major leaguers, including Parker and New York Mets star Keith Hernandez.

"The settlement is a good thing for us and baseball," Barger said.

Barger said the Pirates received "a very significant concession" on Parker's 1979 contract, which required the Pirates to pay him $5.3 million in deferred payments through the year 2007.

Parker, now with the Oakland Athletics, played for the Pirates from 1973-83.

"We think we have achieved a vindication of our principles," Barger said. "This was not a personal vendetta against Dave Parker, but it went forward on the basis of principles and economics. We have achieved our objectives on a very, very satisfactory basis."

Barger said the Pirates and Parker agreed not to disclose terms of the settlement. Asked if Parker settled for significantly less than $5.3 million, Barger replied, "That's for sure."

A team source, who asked not to be identified, said the Pirates would have to disclose at least part of the settlement when the club releases its annual financial report later this month.

The team has been controlled by a public-private consortium of Pittsburgh-area corporations, universities and government agencies, including the City of Pittsburgh, since November 1985. The new ownership filed suit against Parker in April 1986.

Neither Parker nor his agent, Tom Reich, could be reached for comment Tuesday. His lawyer, Louis H. Willenken of New York, did not return a telephone call to his office.

The lawsuit sought to void Parker's 1979 contract on grounds he breached it by using cocaine for about seven years. The case was filed in Allegheny County Common Pleas Court but was transferred to federal court after Parker's lawyers argued they could not get a fair trial in the local court.

The case was scheduled to go to trial in U.S. District Court in Pittsburgh on Feb. 6.

Parker's lawyers, in a May legal filing, listed as potential witnesses San Diego Padres star Jack Clark, former baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn, former Pirates and Atlanta Braves manager Chuck Tanner, and Don Fehr, executive director of the players' union, among others.

The Pirates sued Parker after he testified at a September 1985 trial of one of his drug suppliers, Curtis Strong of Philadelphia, that his use of cocaine contributed to his playing slump early in the 1980s.

The trials of Strong and another convicted drug supplier, Shelby Greer of Pittsburgh, drew star players from around the National League to testify in federal court in what became known as the baseball drug trials. Others testifying to their drug use included Hernandez and former Pirate Dale Berra.

The Pirates' suit charged that Parker's heavy cocaine use from at least 1975 to at least 1982 reduced the All-Star outfielder to an overweight, injury-prone player who "already has been generously overpaid for the drug-impaired performance" under his 1979 contract.

"The overall deterioration of Parker's performance was so complete that, by 1982, he not only failed to finish among the league leaders in any category of performance, but also compared abysmally with his own Pirates teammates," the team said in legal papers filed in May.

The suit also said damage from Parker's drug addiction included "the poisoning of the team's relationships with its fans and the sports press."

The suit further charged Parker sometimes snorted cocaine and drank beer in the morning and snorted cocaine and drank cognac at night. The team also claimed Parker became paranoid, fearing noises caused by the wind at home and wrapping his bedroom doors with electrical cord.

The team said that Parker, in the 1979 contract, swore he had no physical or mental problem that would impair his performance. But, the team said, neither he nor his agents reported his drug addiction to team officials.

However, Parker's lawyers, in their pretrial statement, claimed the Pirates knew about Parker's cocaine use, as they claimed other teams knew about drug use among their ballplayers during the 1970s and early 1980s.

Parker's lawyers said the Pirates' management apparently cared so little about Parker's drug abuse that they offered him a new contract at a higher salary before he signed with the Cincinnati Reds in December 1983.

Parker, his lawyers added, stopped using cocaine on his own after the 1982 season.

Parker was the National League's Most Valuable Player in 1978. He played for the Reds from 1984 until he was traded to the Athletics last winter.

Dye Not Interested In Georgia Position

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Auburn coach Pat Dye said he would not be interested in returning to his alma mater if Vince Dooley decides to step down after 25 seasons as coach of the Georgia Bulldogs.

Several Georgia newspapers reported today that Dooley would announce he is stepping down after the Gator Bowl game with Michigan State on Jan. 1.

No one with the university would confirm the reports Tuesday night. The 56-year-old Dooley, who according to reports will remain as athletic director, had "nothing to say."

Dye, a lineman at Georgia from 1958-60, said he has no interest in replacing Dooley, although he would expect his name to be mentioned if the veteran coach decided to step down.

"It doesn't make any difference about that," Dye told The Montgomery Advertiser. "It's come up before."

Dye said he was not surprised at the reports Dooley would give up coaching after 25 years and 200 victories.

"Everybody had been speculating for a long time he was going to step down," Dye said, adding that Dooley has "done a great job."

Dye has been Auburn's football coach and athletic director since 1981. His record with the Tigers is an impressive 71-22-2, including three Southeastern Conference championships.

He previously coached at East Carolina and Wyoming and has a career record of 125-45-3 in 15 seasons.

Drummond Earns NAIA Basketball Honor

PEMBROKE, N.C. (AP) — Kenny Drummond of High Point College and Tony Steed of Lenoir-Rhyne have been named the NAIA District 26 and the Carolinas Intercollegiate Athletic Conference basketball players of the week.

Drummond, a senior guard from Peoria, Ill., scored 63 points as he led High Point to victories over Elon and Mt. Olive. He also had seven rebounds, 18 assists and 11 steals.

Steed, a junior forward from Lenoir, scored 90 points and grabbed 57 rebounds in three games last week. She scored 31 points in a loss to Newberry and a victory over Mt. Olive. She scored 28 points in a loss to Gardner-Webb.

Citadel Gives Taaffe A New Contract

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Second-year coach Charlie Taaffe, who guided The Citadel to its first appearance in the Division I-AA playoffs this year, has received a new four-year contract, college officials said Tuesday.

Taaffe led the Charleston military school to an 8-4 mark this year and a No. 14 ranking in the final I-AA poll. As a result, he was selected Southern Conference coach of the year.

The Citadel, which finished 3-8 and didn't win a league game in Taaffe's first year, lost to second-ranked Georgia Southern 38-20 in the opening round of the I-AA playoffs.

Georgia Southern plays another Southern Conference team, Furman, for the I-AA title Saturday in Pocatello, Idaho.

Taaffe signed a four-year contract when he came to The Citadel two years ago. The new contract, which voids the old contract, is effective immediately and will carry Taaffe through the 1992 season.

"I am extremely happy that The Citadel has show confidence in me as well as my staff," the 38-year-old Taaffe said. "I think this is important to the stability of our program."

"I think it's also important that I can tell a young man that my contract will be in force while he's here."

Charlotte Said To Have Final 4 Chance

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Six cities are in contention for the 1994 and 1995 Final Four basketball tournaments, and the managing director of the new Charlotte Coliseum says his city and arena have as good a chance as the competition.

"I think we're right in there with the best of them," Steve Camp said in an interview Tuesday, one day after six NCAA officials toured the coliseum and the city. "I didn't hear anything or see anything that would leave me to believe we're not a strong possibility."

Among those who toured Charlotte were Cedric Dempsey, Arizona athletic director and chairman of the Division I basketball committee, and fellow committee members Jim Delaney, commissioner of the Ohio Valley Conference and a former North Carolina basketball player, and Ken Free, commissioner of the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference.

The three were accompanied by NCAA staff executives Tom Jernstedt, David Cawood and Bob Springer, who manage the Final Four, according to The Charlotte Observer.

Dempsey was in town 10 days ago to watch his basketball team play in the Inaugural Tournament of Champions. The two-day event, which included North Carolina, Temple and Missouri, drew more than 21,000 people to both sessions.

"They spent about an hour at the building and then several hours seeing the city and a variety of hotels," Camp said of the committee.

"They were interested in potential sites for headquarters hotels, hotels for the national media and for teams and their fans. We went in some (hotels) and drove by some others, all of it briefly, so they could get an idea what was here and where it was."

Camp said Charlotte's hotel availability might have been a concern to the committee.

"Our hotel situation isn't what they would prefer," he said. "But, then again, I'm not sure that any of the traditional arenas had that preferred situation, either. So I don't think we're at a disadvantage with that."

Hotel space is a major factor in site selection. In addition to rooms for teams and fans, the NCAA uses more than 1,200 rooms at its headquarters hotel, or two primary hotels if necessary, plus hundreds more for the annual National Association of Basketball Coaches convention held annually in conjunction with the Final Four.

Falcons Put Rade On Injured Reserve

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Falcons have placed inside linebacker John Rade on injured reserve and re-signed tight end Danzell Lee, team officials announced Tuesday.

Rade, a 6th year linebacker from Boise State, led the Falcons with 138 total tackles before spraining his left knee Sunday in the Falcons' 22-7 loss to the Los Angeles Rams.

Lee, in his second year in the NFL, had been signed by the Falcons twice before and had been on the roster for four games.

Rampants Roll Past Cardinals

JACKSONVILLE — Rose High School's Rampants had little trouble in rolling up a 66-46 non-conference basketball victory over Jacksonville Tuesday night.

The Rampants held a slim 10-7 lead after the first period and were unable to shake the Cardinals in the second period. Rose held a 22-18 halftime advantage.

But in the third quarter, Rose began to pull away, holding an 18-11 margin. That boosted the lead out to 40-29. In the final period, Rose held a 26-17 edge to put the game away.

James Teel led the Rampants with 20 points while Johnny Ebron had 11 and Eric Edwards added 10. Timon Harper led Jacksonville with 18 while Jason Guidrey added 11.

The victory boosted the Rose record to 4-1 on the season. Rose plays host to Terry Sanford on Friday.

Tigers Roll, Terps Slip Past Monmouth

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CLEMSON, S.C. — Elden Campbell scored 25 points to pace Clemson's 93-70 win over South Carolina State, but coach Cliff Ellis says he sees room for improvement. "I think we tried to get the ball to Campbell in the first half and he lost it a time or two," Ellis said. Campbell committed three turnovers.

"You've got to be active. No way is Campbell a first-round NBA choice — yet. Our goal is to get him there." Campbell scored 18 of his 25 points in a 9½-minute span in the second half of Tuesday night's game. He also made nine of 12 field goals and seven of 11 free throws, grabbed five rebounds, blocked three shots and made two steals.

Clemson, 4-1, trailed 9-2 less than three minutes into the game but scored 24 of the last 34 points in the first half to open a 44-30 lead over the Bulldogs, 5-2.

Jerry Pryor and David Young contributed six points apiece as the Tigers broke a 20-20 tie with 7:48 to go in the first half.

Campbell scored 18 of Clemson's 24 points during a 9:32 span in the second half that extended the Tigers' lead from 60-40 at 13:20 to 84-62 with 3:52 remaining.

Arthur Caldwell paced South Carolina State with 26 points while Eric Jeter added 20.

Ellis said the Tigers' effort impressed him.

"We're starting to see how important hard work is," Ellis said. "We were a better basketball club tonight than we've been all year."

South Carolina State coach Cy Alexander said the Tigers won because they controlled the boards.

"What we feared would happen did. Clemson pounded the boards," Alexander said. "Another thing that hurt is that we didn't execute our inside game like we should have or could have. Our offensive scheme broke down too many times."

Marion Cash had 13 points for Clemson and Pryor added 11.

Clemson made 56 percent of its shots and held a 45-30 rebounding edge.

South Carolina State connected on 40 percent of its shots.

The Terrapins, 5-2, led by as many as 10 points in the second half, but needed a pair of free throws from Greg Nared to hold off the pesky Hawks.

Maryland built a 57-47 lead with 11:09 remaining but Monmouth battled back, scoring 12 of the next 14 points. Freshman guard Chuck McKay led the surge with eight of his 20 points and Monmouth tied the score at 59 with about 6:00 to go.

The Hawks went ahead seconds later at 61-60 on a William Lewis jumper with 5:41 left.

But Maryland rallied to score the next five points to regain the lead for good.

Harrie Garris, who led Monmouth with 21 points, hit a 3-pointer with 10 seconds remaining to pull the Hawks to within 72-70. But Nared answered back with two pressure free throws to settle the issue.

Tony Massenburg scored eight of his 16 points during the final six minutes to help the Terrapins hang on. Johnson scored 17 of his points in the first half.

The loss dropped Monmouth to 4-2.

Seton Hall Uses Strength To Pound Rutgers, 96-70

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. — On paper and in person it was a mismatch.

Seton Hall was bigger, stronger, faster and better than Rutgers and it showed on the court Tuesday night as the No. 17 and undefeated Pirates used an early 17-2 spurt and 22 points from John Morton to crush Rutgers 96-70 for their eighth straight victory.

"They are a better team than us in almost every way," Rutgers coach Bob Wenzel said after his rebuilding Scarlet Knights were blown out for the first time in five games in the only contest involving a ranked team. "We got beat badly and by a better team."

An indication of how badly the Scarlet Knights were beaten was in the halftime statistics.

Andrew Gaze and Ramon Ramos, the second and third leading scorers on Seton Hall, were both scoreless. Rutgers still trailed by 12 points.

"It's been that kind of year," Seton Hall coach P.J. Carlesimo said. "I don't want to see Ramon not scoring and I don't want to see Andrew not scoring. But what has been good for us this year is that someone has always picked up the slack for us."

Against Rutgers, it was Morton and forward Daryll Walker. Walker ignited the big run with his fourth layup of the game and Morton followed with two free throws, a 15-foot jumper and a 3-point shot from the right side for a 17-9 Seton Hall lead.

After Craig Carter hit an off-balance shot in the lane to bring the Scarlet Knights, 3-2, within six points, Walker drove the lane for a layup to ignite an 8-0 burst he capped by putting in the rebound of a missed shot.

"We were just fortunate to have a size advantage," Carlesimo said. "At times our defense was good and we got the running game going. Other times they just outthusted us. But we were able to get the ball inside, and at this point, we were just bigger and stronger."

The Pirates also shot a lot better, hitting 33 of 65 from the field, or 50.8 percent. Rutgers made 23 of 61 or 37.7 percent.

Tom Savage, the Scarlet Knights' leading scorer, who had been averaging 24.8 points per game, hit just three of nine shots from the field and one of five from the free throw line to finish with nine points.

"If you compare the programs, they are an adult, in full maturity," said Bob Wenzel, who took over a team that went 7-22 last season. "We are still an embryo, and when an adult plays an embryo, this is what happens."

Seton Hall built its lead to as many as 21 points late in the first half on a Morton breakaway dunk, and stretched it to 29 points late in the second half.

Rutgers made one run late in the first half and managed to get within 11 points at one point.

But Ramos scored eight points in a 12-5 run at the start of the second half and the Scarlet Knights never got close again.

Morton, whose 22 points were three below his career best, also had a career high 10 rebounds and seven assists.

Ramos had 18, all in the second half, and Walker added 16.

Carter and Emory Ward led Rutgers with 11.

Pravda Says Relief Supplies Piling Up Unused

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Relief supplies for victims of the Armenian earthquake are stacking up in Spitak, one of the hardest-hit towns, rather than being rushed out to survivors, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda reported today.

In its Tuesday editions, Pravda gave the first indications that looting and other crimes were becoming a problem in the disaster area, reporting break-in attempts at a jewelry store and apartments and the murder of one person.

It also said helmeted soldiers wearing bullet-proof vests had taken up positions in the streets of Leninakan to keep order.

Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov, head of earthquake relief, said Monday that a "special situation" had been declared in Leninakan and Spitak to give the Soviet Army power to maintain peace, resulting in a higher police presence.

At the airport in Spitak, a town of 25,000 nearly completely destroyed by the Dec. 7 quake, "a huge quantity of goods desperately needed in the disaster areas has piled up," Pravda said. It said there were difficulties providing tents to both the survivors and to rescuers.

Michael Hurley, a spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, said today that Soviet rescuers had requested mass quantities of plastic sheets for use as temporary shelters.

Medical experts say it is already too late to help the countless thousands who remain trapped under rubble and that relief efforts must focus on the hurt and homeless.

"We now consider the search and rescue phase as being over because there is very little hope of finding anyone alive," said Robert Gale, the U.S. bone marrow specialist who helped care for victims of the 1986 Chernobyl nuclear disaster in the Soviet Ukraine.

Ryzhkov has pledged to keep searching for survivors as long as it was possible.

About 5,400 people have been pulled from buildings wrecked in the quake, which officials say killed at least 55,000 people and injured 13,000. The 500,000 people left homeless must cope with sub-freezing nights.

Gale said attention should go toward providing proper medical care. Many hospitals were destroyed in the quake, and the people who staffed them killed.

"In the long run, we'll save more lives in Yerevan by reinforcing the hospitals there," Gale said after visiting the stricken region, about 50 miles northwest of the Armenian capital.

Bernard Mankikian, part of a relief team from the French branch of Doctors without Borders, said survivors in the Spitak region "are almost totally isolated in the cold."

"People are staying close to their homes, without shelter or access to aid that is available in the bigger towns. They cannot stay like this and survive," he said after returning to Paris.

But some relief workers pointed to the rescue of victims trapped for two weeks in the 1985 Mexico City quake as justification for continuing rescue efforts.

Patrick Aeberhard, also with Doctors without Borders, said in Paris that freezing weather actually could help trapped victims by slowing their metabolism and allowing them to live longer.

The Soviet Meteorological Center in Moscow forecast continued freezing weather for several days.

Soviet television on Tuesday night showed rows of tents set up near the ruins of the town of Stepanavan, but said many more were needed.

"There are not enough tents," the commentator said.

The Communist youth newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda said 60,000 tents have been sent to the disaster area. But the newspaper quoted helicopter Capt. Sergei Bobylev as saying in one village that "survivors are dying from cold."

Survivors also are busy burying their relatives.

In Nalbanb, with a pre-quake population of 4,200, residents have already buried 2,800 of the dead, Associated Press photographer Morton Hvala reported after visiting the village Tuesday.

Health Minister Yevgeny Chazov was quoted by Tass as saying some of the 220 medical teams in Armenia performed complex operations, including amputations, outdoors in the street.

"When we arrived in the quake-stricken area, there was neither electric light nor communications there. Fires were raging. The quake destroyed all hospitals. Seventy per cent of the medical personnel was killed," Chazov was quoted as saying.

The reconstruction effort needed in areas flattened by the quake will cost an estimated $8 billion, Ryzhkov said.

U.S. Sending Medical Supplies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Three plane loads of medical supplies for earthquake survivors in Soviet Armenia departed California and a Red Cross charter crossed the country to pick up supplies donated by major drug companies as relief efforts continued.

Fifty cartons of medicine and equipment gathered by the Armenian Relief Society in San Francisco left Travis Air Force Base Tuesday night aboard an Aeroflot jetliner normally used by Soviet INF Treaty inspectors, said Lt. Col. Jim Dilda.

Two other relief planes left Los Angeles International Airport earlier Tuesday for the stricken region where at least 55,000 are believed dead and 13,000 injured.

A Soviet Aeroflot Ilyushin C-76, the first permitted to land at the airport in a decade, left for the Armenian capital of Yerevan with 30 tons of orthopedic equipment, pharmaceuticals and other medical equipment worth $600,000. The supplies had been donated by the Monrovia-based World Vision International, a Christian relief organization.

"We're sending whatever they need. We are collecting money, medicine, whatever they need," said Archbishop Vatche Hovsepian, prelate of the Western Diocese of the Armenian Apostolic Church.

A Flying Tigers 747 carried 50 tons of medicine, burn kits, splints, blankets and generators to the disaster area. The flight also took about 70 doctors, nurses and medical technicians from Medical Teams International of Portland, Ore.

The American Red Cross charter departed Anchorage, Alaska, and planned stops in Chicago and New York today to pick medicine donated by pharmaceutical makers before heading for Yerevan.

"This was a rush job to get this whole thing put together," said Terry Gautier, a Red Cross spokeswoman in Washington, D.C.

Eli Lilly Co. donated $1.25 million in antibiotics to the mercy mission, and Indiana State Police troopers escorted the shipment from the company's Indianapolis headquarters to O'Hare International Airport while Red Cross officials held the plane.

Survivors Of Quake Find Skimpy Refuge On Rubble-Strewn Streets

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LENINAKAN, U.S.S.R. — Her home destroyed by the Armenian earthquake, Unara Alexanyan has been living in a beat-up jacket, sleeping on rubble-strewn streets and keeping warming around bonfires.

"I don't have anything — no furniture, nothing," she said above the bustle of families unloading bundles of their sole belongings at the Leninakan airport.

Mrs. Alexanyan was en route to an unknown destination as part of the government's relocation efforts for the estimated 500,000 people left homeless by the Dec. 7 quake.

She said a sister and three grandchildren were missing and among the dead.

As the last survivors are being pulled from the wreckage of apartment buildings, schools and factories, the focus is turning to rebuilding the lives of people who, like Mrs. Alexanyan, lost everything.

Leninakan's streets were jammed last weekend with rescue vehicles, trucks and buses, and private cars filled with people fleeing for other parts of the republic.

The dislocation aggravates an already serious refugee problem in Armenia. More than 180,000 people fled to Armenia from adjoining Azerbaijan in the three weeks before the tremor after at least 31 people were killed in ethnic violence.

Soviet Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov said Monday that too many cars were impeding the rescue effort and that the army had been ordered to keep non-essential vehicles off the roads into Leninakan and nearby Spitak, which was nearly totally destroyed.

The Tass news agency reported Tuesday that 7,300 people, mostly women and children, were sent to sanitariums, vacation camps and other places in Armenia and elsewhere in the southern Soviet Union.

Soviet officials say 50,000 people can be accommodated in such places and that evacuees will be cared for free of charge.

Ryzhkov told a news conference the effort to move the homeless out of damaged cities started slowly because no one wanted to leave without knowing what happened to missing relatives.

"In the first three days we couldn't do anything to evacuate people. We tried to tell people, 'You have to take the children out. You have to take the women and old people out,'" he said. "The first three days no one would listen. They still were in a state of shock. Every family lost somebody."

Navy Missile Hits Indian Ship Near Training Area

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONOLULU — The captain of an Indian merchant ship struck by a Navy missile said he was told by the U.S. Navy his vessel was out of a restricted training area before it was accidentally hit, killing a crewman.

"I was being guided by the missile facility," said Capt. P.M. Mirchandani, who spoke with reporters Tuesday after bringing the 550-foot Jag Vivek into port here for repairs.

"I heard a noise and saw splinters flying out onto the deck," the 34-year-old captain said of Monday's incident, which occurred when his ship was about 80 miles north-northwest of the island of Kauai.

A Navy spokesman, Lt. Cmdr. Gary Shrout, said Mirchandani's contention that his ship was being guided by Navy controllers at the Pacific Missile Range was under investigation.

"Everybody has a little tiny piece of the puzzle and it's going to take a while to put all these pieces together and figure out just what happened," Shrout said at news conference at Pearl Harbor.

Attorney Leonard Alcantara, representing the Jag Vivek's owners, said controllers at the missile range radioed the ship at about 8 a.m. Monday that it was entering a restricted area.

The Navy "gave them a course to steer around it. They steered on that course for approximately two to three hours and were then told they were clear of the missile range, and 40 minutes later they were struck by a missile," said Alcantara.

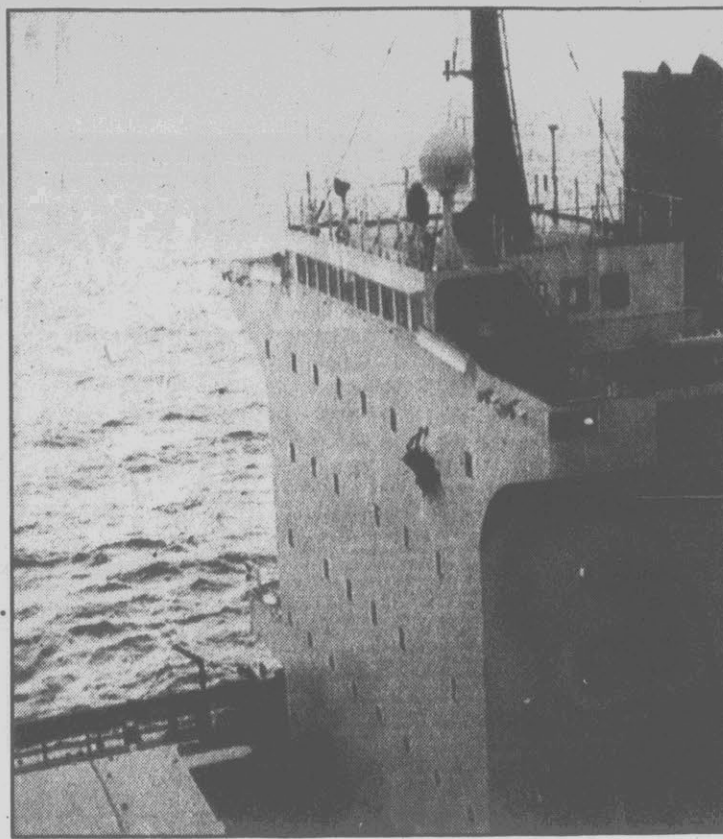

The 12-foot-long, 1,000-pound unarmed Harpoon missile hit the ship from the stern at about noon, tearing through the upper level of the pilot house and emerging with sufficient force to put a large dent in one of the ship's cranes before falling into the sea. The radio officer, K.T. Joseph, a 36-year-old Indian citizen, was wounded by shrapnel and died after being carried to the bridge, Alcantara said.

An FA-18 attack fighter from the aircraft carrier USS Constellation fired the missile at a derelict ship being used for target practice, but it's infrared guidance system later locked onto the Jag Vivek and it veered in that direction, Shrout said.

At the time, the jet was 45 miles from the merchant ship, well out of visual range, he said.

Although the Navy has not accepted responsibility for the accident, pending its investigation, the commander of the Pearl Harbor Naval Base, Rear Adm. Stephen Chadwick, went aboard the Jag Vivek as it approached Honolulu to express condolences to the captain for the loss of his crewman, Shrout said.

Suspect Arrested In Palme Slaying

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Police today detained a Swede with a history of psychiatric illness and a previous manslaughter conviction on suspicion of assassinating Prime Minister Olof Palme, officials and news reports said.

The Stockholm district court named a defense lawyer for the 41-year-old suspect, a court clerk said, an indication he faced almost certain arrest after questioning in the Feb. 28, 1986, slaying.

Palme, a four-term prime minister, was shot to death by a gunman who fled down a darkened street and escaped. The prime minister was walking home unguarded after seeing a late-night movie with his wife, Lisbet, who was grazed by a second bullet.

Swedish radio quoted the detective in charge of the case, Hans Olivebro, as confirming that a suspect was brought in for interrogation. He said reports of the detention could undermine the investigation.

The detention of a suspect was the first movement in the investigation after a two-year standstill and despite an $8 million reward offered by the government.

Attorney Arne Liljeros went to the courthouse immediately after he was named defense counsel and was not available for comment, his office said.

The suspect was questioned early in the case and admitted he was close to the scene of the murder on the night Palme was shot, reports said. He was released for lack of evidence.

He came under scrutiny again during a police review and reorganization of the investigation from scratch, including 17,000 tips or leads, the news reports said.

The national news service TT quoted police sources as saying the man had been under surveillance as a prime suspect for several months.

The reports said Palme's widow would be brought in to try and identify the suspect.

The reports by TT and two major tabloids, Aftonbladet and Expressen, said the suspect was a 41-year-old man from Stockholm with a criminal record and a history of psychiatric disturbances.

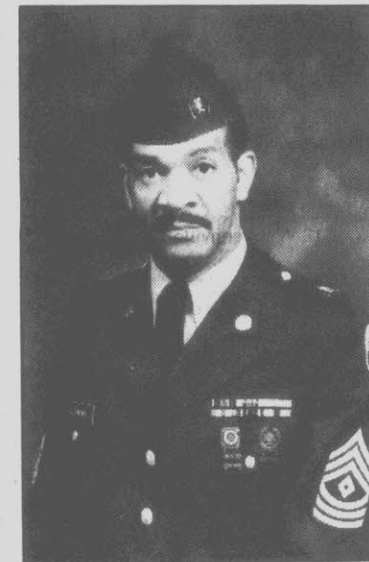

Swedish radio said the suspect had a previous conviction for stabbing a drug addict to death in 1970 only a few blocks away from where Palme was killed 16 years later.

Chinese Rage Over 'Lazy' Charge

Louvre Closing For Renovation

By John Pomfret
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — An article accusing Chinese of being lazy is causing a furor in the state-run press, sparking one paper to launch its own attack on the work habits of one-quarter of mankind.

"Our offices have turned into free tea houses for tea tasting, newspaper reading and gossip," went the editorial in the Worker's Daily on Tuesday. "Our workshops have become clubs for poker, chess, reading and sweater knitting."

Another paper, Economic Information, has twice in the last week printed batches of readers' letters about the article.

"Our system needs radical surgery if we are going to eradicate this old disorder and dispose of this chronic disease," wrote one reader.

"We must sweep away the old system that encourages this laziness and push reform to its limits," wrote another.

The article that started the ruckus was first published in September in a Singapore newspaper and has since appeared in several Chinese publications.

It tells the story that in some Japanese companies, bosses warn workers exhibiting slothful tendencies: "Do not study the Chinese."

"We have no choice but to admit," the article says, "that Chinese are the lazy bones of East Asia."

Chinese store attendants ignore customers, its workers read kung fu novels on the job and its public officials spend the whole day "blowing the ox," a Chinese expression for chatting, the article says.

"To cure laziness," it says, "we must push reform."

China is in the midst of reforms that aim to enliven its once-stagnant, state-run economy and make it more responsive to the market.

One of the biggest problems the country faces in raising productivity is that its workers have become accustomed to the "iron rice bowl," the decades-old system of lifetime employment.

Under that system, workers are paid the same no matter how hard they labor and individual enterprise is looked upon as rocking the boat. In addition, most college graduates are assigned jobs, sapping their enthusiasm for work.

Today, many Chinese complain that the country's biggest problem is not its population of more than 1 billion but the fact that talent and hard work are not rewarded by society or the state.

"It happens in almost every work unit," said the Worker's Daily editorial. "The young worker starts working actively but bit by bit he learns to work like everybody else."

The government says it wants to solve this problem and has taken halting steps to smash the "iron rice bowl" and allow more Chinese to choose their own jobs. Workers also are regularly urged to increase their productivity.

But it remains to be seen how much government efforts will change the state of labor if they are not accompanied by a fundamental change in the way society views hard work.

In its editorial, the Worker's Daily hinted at the necessity for such a change although it did not say how such a change could be effected.

"Our fundamental problem is that this society lacks a mechanism to encourage people to succeed," it said. "Chinese are not inherently lazy ... but the environment has made them lazy."

Chinese people have for years thought of themselves as "diligent and brave," the paper said, but those adjectives no longer apply.

"Only when we build a mechanism that will encourage ... the people to reach for their goals," the editorial said, "will we again be worthy of calling ourselves diligent and brave."

And then maybe, it said, "Japanese bosses might even tell their lazy workers, 'You should study the Chinese.'"

PARIS — The Louvre museum will close for about a month starting Feb. 22 to allow workers to put finishing touches on facilities under the new glass pyramid entrance, Louvre officials announced.

The 92-foot-tall pyramid, soaring up between the Louvre's two main wings, caps a vast underground complex including storage and restoration facilities, bookstores, restaurants, boutiques as well as access to subway stations and parking lots. Museum officials said Tuesday that a previously closed wing of the Louvre would also open to the public for the first time, displaying French painting from the primitive period through the 17th century.

Visitors should have an easier time finding their way through the museum's many galleries and long hallways, thanks to signs printed in several languages besides French and a computerized board indicating which rooms are closed.

Gift-Giving Easy For Sportsman On Your List

By Angela Lingerfelt Bland
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Someone who enjoys the outdoors would probably rather find a new fishing lure or duck call, rather than a tie or datebook, under the Christmas tree. But if you're not sure what to buy your picky sportsman, here are some suggestions from local retailers.

Ritchie Wynns, owner of Sportsman Gun and Tackle on East Greenville Boulevard, says his store carries "specific things ordered just for Christmas gifts and the prices are right."

Among items he recommends for hunters are padded, camouflaged scoped rifle cases ($17), 10 X 50 binoculars ($50) or Gortex Thinsulate gloves ($24.95).

"A good pair of warm, waterproof gloves is always a good gift, especially when you know it's going to be cold after Christmas," Wynns said.

A "neat little gift" for fishermen, he said, is a cast net thrower ($12.95) used to catch live bait such as shad or mullet. Tackle boxes also make nice gifts.

"There are always things a fisherman needs that he has a hard time justifying spending the money on himself," Wynns commented. "It's a good time for a wife and couple of older children to get together and purchase a VHF radio or Loran. Either one of those would be a gift he would never forget, and the family would be looking after him safety-wise, too."

Skipper Johnston, president of The Outdoor Shop on East 10th Street, suggests buying insulated coveralls, gun cases, hunting coats or pants, gun cleaning kits, boots, hats, tackle boxes or fishing rods.

Everyone knows that hunters are proud of their bounty and often want to have animals preserved. Johnston said gift certificates for taxidermy services would make excellent Christmas presents. Prices range from $60 for quail, $85 for ducks, $150 for geese and deer to $250 for swans.

At Overton's on Red Banks Road, the biggest sellers for sportsmen are socks, long underwear, coveralls, electric socks and tree stands. Popular items at The Gun Rack on 10th Street are the new Remington 1187 shotgun that shoots 2 1/4- and 3-inch shells ($475), rifle scopes ($39 to $289) and grunt calls for deer ($10.95).

For stocking stuffers, retailers suggest fire knives, fishing lures, ammunition, gun cleaning supplies, gloves, duck or turkey calls and mini flashlights.

Most sportsmen appreciate wildlife art, such as a picture of a mallard flying over a marsh or a large buck standing in a field. Meg Laughinghouse at University Book Exchange on Cotanche Street said the store is having a sale on selected wildlife art through Christmas. Unframed wildlife prints are 40 percent off, while framed wildlife art is reduced 20 percent (prices range from $75 to $100 before the discount). Available are duck stamps and pictures by well-known wildlife artists such as David Maas and Harry Adamson.

Sportsmen also enjoy books about hunting, fishing or the outdoors. Michael Ertis, owner of Central Book and News at Greenville Square Shopping Center, recommended four popular books.

The 1988 Shooter's Bible ($14.95) is a firearms reference book that lists prices and specifications of handguns, shotguns, rifles, sites, scopes and mounts. Information is also included on ammunition and reloading, as well as a directory of manufacturers and suppliers.

An illustrated handbook for every outdoorsman, The Hunter's Bible by W.K. Merrill and Clair F. Rees ($6.95) explains how, when and where to hunt large and small game. The books also includes information on choosing firearms, bowhunting, camping, hunting safety, dressing a deer and waterfowling.

Ertis said two books for specific groups of hunters are popular. The Duck Hunter's Bible by Erwin A. Bauer ($6.95) explains how to hunt waterfowl in the four flyways, types of duck blinds, public and private hunting areas, decoys and dogs. Deer Hunting by Richard P. Smith ($10.95) covers whitetail and mule deer habits and habitats, as well as gun, bow and camera hunting techniques.

A must for every saltwater fisherman is Saltwater Sport Fishing and Boating in North Carolina ($12.95). This handy reference book is full of detailed maps of state waters, including their depths and quality of the bottom. Other important information, such as where and when certain species of fish are caught and locations of launching ramps and marinas, is also included.

Seafood or wild game cookbooks are also good choices, as are subscriptions to popular outdoors magazines such as "Outdoor Life," "Sports Afield" or "North Carolina Games and Fish."

Guided hunting or deep-sea fishing trips would be appreciated by any sportsman. Two nearby choices for guided hunting trips are Haddock's Farm Shooting Preserve in Winterville, which offers no-limit quail, duck and pheasant hunting through March 31, and Beaver Dam Quail Farm at Route 4, Greenville, which features northern bobwhite and Wisconsin jumbo quail hunting. For information and prices, call David Haddock at 355-6539 or Henry Spivey at Beaver Dam at 758-6434.

Other items sportsmen may enjoy are memberships to Ducks Unlimited or other wildlife preservation organizations, memberships to a hunting club or lifetime sportsman's licenses (available by writing the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission, 512 N. Salisbury St., Raleigh, N.C. 27611, or calling 733-7123).

Reindeer Ranch Is Making Hay Across The U.S.

By Jeff Barnard
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

REDMOND, Ore. (AP) — By Christmas, four teams of reindeer from Operation Santa Claus will have logged 50,000 miles and 110 appearances at shopping malls and resorts across the country.

"We have to make hay while the snow flies," said Cindy Gillaspie, who manages the ranch for Troutman Investment Co. with her husband, Mike.

"Santa's got one night and we've got six weeks," said Mike Gillaspie.

Other reindeer from the ranch are on exhibit at Disneyland and the Los Angeles Zoo.

"The only part of the U.S. we don't hit is the Deep South," said Mrs. Gillaspie. "Part of the reason is the heat, part is because we just haven't marketed the area and haven't generated enough interest."

Most of the reindeer's bookings are through mall merchants associations for the holiday season, she said. Each team is accompanied by two trained handlers.

Mrs. Gillaspie said she knows of no serious competition in her reindeer-for-hire business. The only herd she knows of that's larger is at the University of Alaska and it's for research.

Troutman Investment, an offshoot of a West Coast department store chain based in Eugene, has no salesmen to market the reindeer. "Just me," Mrs. Gillaspie said.

"What started out as a June-through-January job has become year-round work," she said. "But it really doesn't get fast and furious until the summer months."

"People don't want to think about Christmas in February, and neither do I. But we get started early."

When John Zumstein started Operation Santa Claus back in 1950, he knew little about reindeer.

"I got the idea from watching a Christmas show with papier-mache reindeer," said Zumstein, who lives a few miles away from this central Oregon town now that he has sold the ranch. "I wondered why the dickens people didn't have real reindeer, so I questioned around."

San Francisco and Seattle zookeepers told him that they had tried to keep reindeer, but the arctic natives died.

Zumstein, who was in the fuel business, had studied animal husbandry and decided to apply to the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs for permits to buy 10 reindeer from Eskimos in Alaska.

He flew his first batch into Portland and trucked them to Redmond, where he figured the cool, dry, high-desert climate was more suitable than the rain in the Willamette Valley.

But they all died. He flew to Alaska and got more. And by trial and error he figured out how to keep the animals from dying and how to breed them.

"Every time I had bad luck I learned a little bit," said Zumstein.

The Associated Press

Tourists scramble for a look at reindeer

He developed a feed formula that worked and learned to watch out for parasites that overcame the deer when they were transplanted to a warmer climate.

At his peak, Zumstein had 80 reindeer on tour to places such as Tokyo, Honolulu, and Canada as well as the continental United States. He also was selling reindeer.

When Zumstein got the herd up to 100 head, he figured he had it under control. He sold out about 10 years ago.

Gillaspie now trains the animals to accept a harness and pull a sleigh.

Of course, the reindeer are popular with children.

During a recent visit to the ranch, some children climbed on the fence at Operation Santa Claus and pointed out one named Rudolph, even though the young calf with the nubby little antlers had a brown nose like the others.

"His nose doesn't glow because it's sunny," said 5-year-old Jewelle Urell, who was visiting from the Learning Tree preschool in nearby Prineville. "It'll glow by Christmas time. I can wait."

Folk Art Collectors Beware: Fake Items Cheap, Plentiful

HOUSE BEAUTIFUL MAGAZINE

Folk art is the easiest kind of collectible to fake, and buyers must beware because the piece that's too good to be true probably is false.

The bargain hunter who thinks he outwitted the dealer has often outwitted only himself, according to an article by Samuel Pennington, editor of the Maine Antique Digest and guest curator of "Folk Art Fakes and Forgeries," a show at New York's Museum of American Folk Art last April.

Folk art is easy to fake because the work is naive, the artists largely anonymous and impossible to document. Imposters show up even in reputable dealers booths.

Some are outright fakes, some are vintage items that have been "improved" with new decorating and a few are honest reproductions with the identifying marks ground off. Others are recent craft products.

At the 1986 New York Winter Antiques Show, for instance, Bryce Thomas spotted a $2,800 swan decoy, labeled "original throughout, circa 1910." The price was suspiciously cheap — hunting swans has been illegal since 1918 and decoys are scarce.

Thomas recognized it as one of the machine-made carvings he sells mail-order for $10, unpainted. When Thomas identified the fake, the dealer quickly removed it from his exhibit.

Here are some tips on spotting fakes:

— Ask yourself if this piece really could have been made when and where the seller says it was. Does it have the proper tool marks? Turn tables upside and look for extra holes that have no valid explanation.

— Check out any piece that looks just like illustrations in books that could have been material for photocopies.

— Fake folk portraits have a too-cute, contrived quality.

— Be wary of dirty, rusty or excessively stained things, especially art on paper. Light brown stains often indicate artificial aging with tea.

— Before making an expensive purchase consult a restorer, who can spot any previous restorations.

— Check for acrylic paint, not widely available until the 1950s. Scrape off a speck and apply a mild paint solvent. If the speck dissolves instantly it probably is not oil paint or old milk paint which practically cannot be dissolved.

— Get a written guarantee which specifies age, culture and other pertinent information and offers a cash refund if the object turns out to be significantly other than described.

Paulsen Ready To Run Again

Campaign Slogan Is Set: 'Pat Can Do In '92'

By Hillel Italie
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Comedian Pat Paulsen quickly dispensed with any doubts that's he running for president in 1992. "Pat Can Do In '92" is his slogan, and he recently cited many reasons why people should vote for him.

Experience:
Paulsen ran for president in 1968, 1972 and 1988 and recently declared himself mayor of Asti, Calif., population "seven to nine."

Leadership:
"Having a comic in the White House will assure stability in foreign relations. The world will continue to respond to foreign initiatives by saying, 'You must be joking.'"

Democratic spirit:
"No one is allowed to vote in Asti. We don't have any budget. We don't even have a jail."

He has a large base of supporters:
"People want me to run. All the people that didn't vote, I represent them. That's half of America. These are the people I represent."

He is respected by his peers:
When Clint Eastwood, former mayor of Carmel, Calif., learned of Paulsen's unilateral decision to take office, the actor muttered: "That's one way to do it."

His background is firmly rooted in the American tradition:

"I was a Depression baby. I don't mean I had a dent in my head; I grew up during the Depression."

Unlike President-elect George Bush, Paulsen has no problem with "that vision thing." He boldly proclaims:

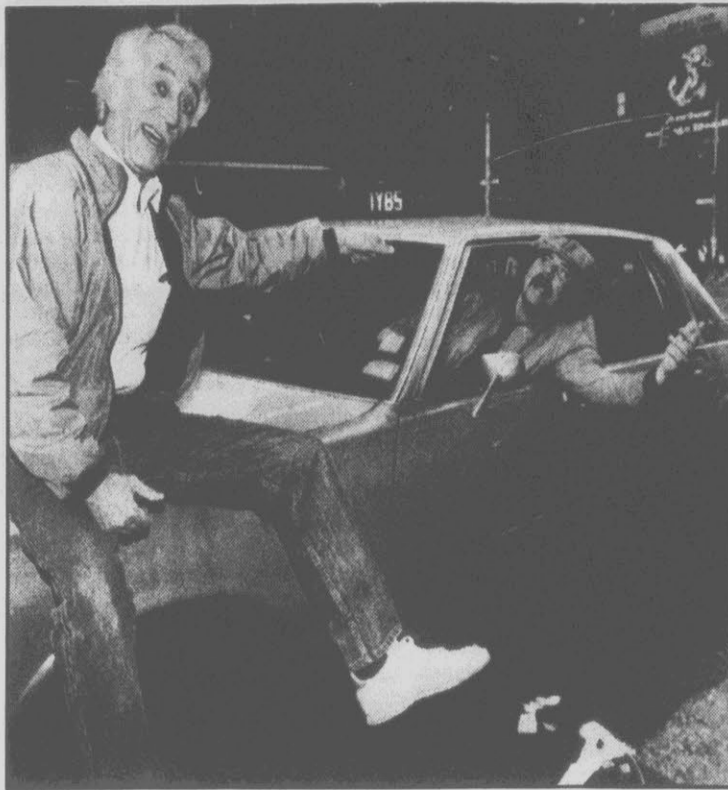

"Due to misunderstanding of the future, we are bound to make many more mistakes. Therefore, when I'm president I will lead this country into the past. By working backwards I feel we are bound to make less mistakes because we have already made them."

And unlike Vice President-elect Dan Quayle, Paulsen has a distinguished record in the armed forces, serving in the Far East during World War II:

"I wanted to hurt somebody. I didn't succeed."

He's been a successful businessman:

In the tradition of Paul Newman's

Paulsen clowns with New York City cab driver

The Associated Press

Salad Dressing. Paulsen is the proud owner of Pat Paulsen Vineyards in California's Sonoma County. He operates a 37-acre vineyard which produces cabernet sauvignon, sauvignon blanc and chardonnay grapes.

"We take it and it rots and we make wine out of it. That's all there is, it isn't very romantic."

And now, proving that he's media friendly, Paulsen is bringing his message directly to the people — at least those who own a VCR. "Pat Paulsen on Wine" is a 45-minute video featuring remarks that promise to be as dry as the product at which they're poking fun.

"I've wanted to do this a long time," Paulsen said. "It's a video on wine, but we don't think it'll take 20 years to see if it's any good. The video is dry but not subversive. Full-bodied but not obnoxious."

"This is an amusing look at wine and its history."

The 61-year-old Paulsen was born in Washington but moved to California with his family when he was 10.

He gained fame in the late '60s as the deadpan comic featured on TV's "Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour." Like Paulsen, the Smothers Brothers had come up through folk clubs, such as the Gaslight in San Francisco and Cafe Wha in New York, and combined music with political comedy.

"There were no comedy clubs then," Paulsen recalled. "I did takeoffs on folk singers."

"The Smothers Brothers were working the Purple Onion in San Francisco. I thought they were incredible. I went up to Tom after one show and said, 'You guys should put some comedy in your act.' Tom still remembers it."

In 1967, Tommy Smothers and Mason Williams, then a writer for the Smothers Brothers show, approached Paulsen with the idea of running for president, or actually, not running for president.

"I said, 'OK, I can't dance.' We started by denying I was running. I was always a little on the edge."

Paulsen entered the 1968 campaign as the candidate for the STAG (Straight Talking American Government) Party. Ever the pragmatic politician, he ran as a Republican in 1972 and has since shuffled between the two major parties.

"I'm running as a Democrat," the comedian once noted. "I ran as a Republican before but I like to mix it up."

After CBS cancelled the Smothers Brothers in 1969 because of the show's political content, Paulsen purchased some land in the Alexander Valley in Northern California and quite casually entered the wine business.

"I looked out my window one day and thought it looked like good land to plant something," he said. "If you have land in the Alexander Valley, you'd be advised to grow grapes."

Paulsen, who still does occasional stand-up comedy, produces about 30,000 cases of wine each year. He is aware of the conflict between being a successful businessman and a comedian "on the edge."

"Of course, you can't always keep that edge," Paulsen admitted. "But I'm not a big corporation, it's just me."

"I decided to build a winery so I went to the bank and built the winery. So actually I do have a partner, the bank."

Married Couple, 'Crossan And Crossan' Host Daily Connecticut Radio Talk Show

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. — Jim Crossan drops his wife off at work, tells her to have a nice day, then meets her five minutes later in a radio studio to do their talk show.

The routine is just one way the 24-hour couple attempts to separate work from home.

They are hosts for a radio show called "Crossan and Crossan" on WICC in Bridgeport six mornings a week. The Crossans have worked together for the three years they have been married.

"The priority here is news and information, and our job here is to kind of hold it together, to get the audience to sit through the commer-

The Crossans try to keep their audience amused with tales about their home life and their observations of other people and funny situations.

To punctuate their banter, they use sound effects and have produced a number of tapes of such canned sounds as dogs barking, pigs oinking, laughs, boos and cheers.

Most of their material is spontaneous, and they say the key is that they look at each other throughout their routines.

"It's like dancing around each other," Joanne says. "It's all a matter of knowing each other and communicating silently."

Alzado Enjoying New TV Role

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — In comparing acting and football, ex-All Pro defensive end Lyle Alzado quickly cites one area where performing beats pass-rushing.

"I can get to the bathroom on Monday morning without crawling," said the 6-foot-3 Alzado, who was described by one sportswriter as "a belligerent, bearded Hells Angels in cleats" when he retired in 1986.

Three seasons removed from football, that's no longer true. Alzado is an actor — portraying a bearded, belligerent professional wrestler known as "The Masked Maniac" in the syndicated TV series, "Learning the Ropes."

Actually, that's only half of it. Alzado's character, Robert Randall, is also a single parent raising two kids, working days as a high-school teacher and nights as a challenger against The Road Warriors and Ric Flair.

"The only problem is when people hear Lyle Alzado is going to play a high school principal, they get a little leery," said Alzado, whose show is in its first season. "You know, the old cliches — a football player is this, a football player is that."

"But this role gives me a greater range to develop my acting ability — develop more depth, foundation and strength."

The Brooklyn native, who dropped 42 pounds from his 260-pound playing weight for the Randall role, recalled that breaking into the acting game was a little harder than beating offensive linemen black and blue.

"I used to go to interviews like 50 times a week, and I got said no to 50 times," he said. "But I kept going, going into readings, getting the dialogue down. ... If you're going to be in this business, you've got to leave your ego behind."

Show Gives Rare Look At Wolves

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Arctic wolves live far from humans and have never been hunted, so they don't know enough to run from someone with a gun — or a camera.

Wildlife photographer Jim Brandenburg and wolf biologist David Mech took advantage of the wolves' tolerance and occasional curiosity during two years of observing them from a camp on Ellesmere Island, Canada, less than 500 miles from the North Pole.

The result was some rare and amazingly closeup footage of arctic wolves for Brandenburg's National Geographic Explorer film, "White Wolf," premiering Sunday on SuperStation TBS.

Ellesmere Island is barren, so there was no way to hide from the wolves. But the scruffy, white-coated critters were merely curious about Brandenburg and Mech's tents and cameras and four-wheel motorcycles.

Their remote location keeps the wolves safe from persecution by humans who in other areas of North America kill them for attacking domestic stock and sometimes just for sport.

Wolves live under something of a monarchy, and the king and queen are the alpha male and female. At one point, the alpha female, nicknamed "Mom," came close enough to Mech that he could toss her bits of his sandwich. She also allowed the men to come within a few feet of her frisky pups.

Though the wolves are magnificent to watch, not that much new information is revealed by the film. Anyone who has read Farley Mowat's best-selling "Never Cry Wolf," or just seen the Disney film adaptation, already knows wolves are not the slathering, indiscriminate killers of lore, but highly intelligent creatures with a well-developed social structure.

Mech, we are told, has spent 30 years studying wolves. But when he and Brandenburg stand over a tape machine listening to a recording of the pack's howling, Mech remarks not-so-helpfully, "I wish I knew what it all meant." No doubt so does anyone who might have supplied him with a research grant.

But the men did figure out that a half bark was the wolf equivalent of "Back off, man!" So when curious wolves invaded their camp, they mimicked the bark and sent the pack high-tailing it back to their den.

Later, Mech went over a ridge and mimicked a strange wolf howling in the distance, leaving Brandenburg to observe the pack's reaction. Brandenburg reported to Mech that, hey, they howled back, then all jumped around together in such a jumble, he couldn't really sort it out. Your Aunt Martha could have observed as much.

The narrative, read by Richard Kiley, is rather ploddingly written and doesn't do justice to the film footage. Brandenburg is more articulate with his camera.

Even documentaries seem to need some kind of plot, so tension builds as Brandenburg tries to film the pack hunting big game, in this case, musk-oxen, great furry creatures that look like overdressed buffalo.

In one of Brandenburg's attempts to follow them, the wolf pack crosses a river and leaves him behind. On another outing, he keeps up with them, but they only sniff around a threesome of musk-oxen, apparently deciding they are too formidable to take on.

Finally, late in the film, Brandenburg gets his chance, and the result is some stunning footage of the wolf pack working together to bring down a hapless calf whose mother abandons it, giving literal meaning to the term "thrown to the wolves." As Brandenburg and Mech note, the wolves they had gotten so familiar with back at the den had turned into one finely tuned killing machine.

Almost every aspect of the wolves' life was documented — except the five months of winter the humans couldn't endure. When Brandenburg and Mech returned the following spring, three wolves had died, probably of starvation or disease, and there was a new alpha male.

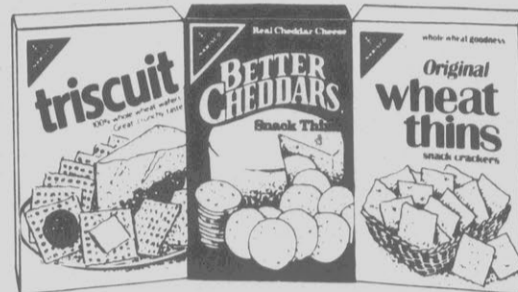

But "Mom" was still there. In an amazing feat of filmmaking, Brandenburg took pictures of her new pups — inside the den.

Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles Top Toy Market

Popularity Stuns Makers

By Carolyn Lumsden
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. — Four turtles wielding Ninja weapons, the brainchild of a sandwich maker and a self-described hack cartoonist, are threatening to move into the top 10 of the Christmas toy market.

"They are just flying off the shelves," said David Valentine, a toy industry analyst for Standard & Poors.

Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles have hit No. 11 in the Toy & Hobby World charts of best sellers just four years after they were conceived by Peter Laird and Kevin Eastman during a late-evening sketching duel.

Stores report they can't keep up with demand for the goofy turtles with their slice-and-dice arm action and their silly one-liners ("One good turtle deserves another").

"It's insane," said Eastman, 26. "We and I really had no idea what we were unleashing. We were just two wild-eyed kids who just wanted to do comic books."

They keep showing in a run-down building on a back street of this college town.

Eastman, then an occasional student at the University of Massachusetts, said he tracked down Laird, who scraped out a living by drawing illustrations for local newspapers, in 1982 because their cartoons looked alike. They became fast friends, joined by a love for Marvel Comics illustrator Jack Kirby.

The turtles were created after what Eastman called a heavy dose of "T.J. Hooker" and "Love Boat" at an apartment the two men shared while Laird's fiancée finished her studies at the University of New Hampshire. Laird was still freelancing cartoons. Eastman got by making sandwiches at a restaurant.

"We had been watching a bunch of horrible TV and we started drawing and throwing the stuff at each other," Eastman said last week. "We found we had this little beastie that we really fell in love with."

The beast soon had three brothers, all named after Renaissance painters, and a weird history involving a pool of goo in a New York sewer and a rat with the powers of a Ninja master.

As the story goes, the turtles were covered by the muck through a random series of odd accidents. They mutated and grew up under the rat's tutelage, evolving into superturtles with a taste for pizza and for doing battle with the Shredder, leader of the most feared assassins in Japan.

Valentine considers the turtles the natural descendants of the tin soldier with appealingly distasteful roots in radioactive gunk.

"Kids are into slime," he said. "Anything to gross out their little sisters."

Their creators scraped together $1,200 and printed 3,000 copies of the first Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles comic book. The comics sold out in three weeks and Leonardo, Donatello, Michaelangelo and Raphael were propelled to fame on T-shirts, cereal boxes and Saturday morning TV.

Even avid fan Tom Selleck was filmed reading a turtle comic in the farewell episode of "Magnum, P.I."

"It goes way beyond luck," Eastman said of their success. "We had one of the best black-and-white comics around. We worked hard to get it to the point where Mark Freedman picked up on it."

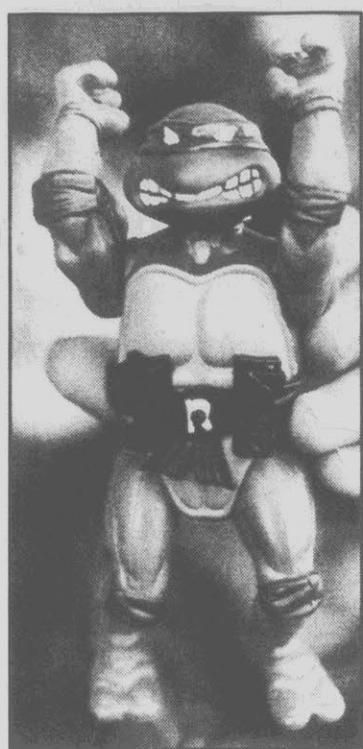

Freedman, a New York licensing agent, managed to entice a California company, Playmates, into investing $2.5 million in an animated television show and launching a line of 10 figurines.

The turtles were helped by the phenomenon of specialty comic book stores that have sprung up in the last five years, which have opened a market for the offbeat.

"Everybody says, 'You guys must be zillionaires now.' Far from it," said Eastman. He said, however, that the collaborators' annual income is in the six figures and they now have eight artists working on the comic strips and other ventures.

The turtles have long since moved their comic book haunts from the New York City sewers to the town where their creators have settled.

"They can still get into the city easily from here," Eastman said. "And we can use people we know for characters."

 Few people have had greater impact on the game of bridge as a player, writer and editor than the chairman of the Goren Editorial Board, Richard L. Frey, who died Oct. 24 after a long illness. His achievements are too many to catalogue in a bridge column. Suffice it to say that it was his ability as editor that guided many Goren bridge projects from ideas to fulfillment; that it was his training which was responsible for honing the talents of at least four major bridge writers; and that his playing skill was recognized by the American Contract Bridge League when they instituted the master point plan and conferred upon him one of the ten honorary Life Master titles they awarded. We will miss him sadly and long.

There are many remarkable hands testifying to his prowess as a player. One of our favorites is this quiet hand from a rubber bridge game, in which he held the West cards. We like North's decision to jump to two no trump on his balanced hand even though he had four-card support for his partner's suit. His decision to correct to four spades is less felicitous.

Frey realized that the chances of finding his partner with two tricks were remote. However, he had listened to the bidding, and that brought forth an idea. The queen of hearts was quite probably going to be in the North hand, so he found the devilish opening lead of a low heart.

Not surprisingly, declarer played dummy's nine, and an astonished East found his jack held the trick. A heart return allowed West to cash the ace-king. West continued with the 13th heart. East ruffed with the ten and, when declarer overruffed, West's jack was promoted to the setting trick!

A Great Place To Live

By Quenell Edwards

North Carolina is a great place to live because of its many useful natural resources. We have good soil for growing things like cotton, corn and tobacco. The long leaf pine is our beautiful state tree and we have many perfumed flowers, such as marigolds, roses and the dogwood, our state flower. Our state has beautiful land forms. We, the people, have beautiful lands. We have lakes and rivers that have water fish and other animals who live near the water. North Carolina is a great place to live because of its interesting and friendly people. Our citizens are helpful and kind people in our state.

The Slimmy Creature

By Phyllis Dixon

One day I went grocery shopping and a green creature came through the ceiling! Then it picked up a candy bar, a piece of bubble gum and a pickle! And then he went right back through the ceiling. Then he brought some more green creatures to help him. Every creature picked up two things. Each of them got one pickle and some ice cream. Then the one creature came back and I said, "What is your name?" He didn't know what was his name. So he showed me a card and I could hardly read it. So, I spelled the word out. And I did and his name was Oobleck. Oobleck was so, so, so pretty that I hugged him.

Phyllis Dixon, 9, a student at Sam D. Bundy School receives special mention.

Pig's First Day In The Mud

By Joel Cohen

Once upon a time there was a naughty little pig. His name was "Hickory" and he was always in trouble. He was so naughty that his mother never let him play in the mud.

One day he was a good pig. So his mother said, "You are a great little pig today! You can go play in the mud."

He had such a fun time in the mud that when he got home his mother didn't recognize him.

He went back to the mud puddle. Beside it there was a pond. He jumped in and swam around like a scuba diver. When he got home his mother said, "You didn't go in the mud, Hickory. You are as clean as a whistle."

The Cat Lives In The Ocean

By Katy Torrez

There is a cat that lives in the ocean and his name is Horace. You see, at one time there were cats that lived in the ocean but somehow they all went away. Some went to live on land, while others went to explore the different wonders of the ocean. No one ever returned. But one baby was left behind and no one noticed he was gone. Then one day a humpback whale found the baby cat and took him into her care. She was expecting a baby anyway.

Several years passed. Horace and Namu were the best friends in the whole wide world. That's the way they grew up.

Even though he was a cat, everybody knew Horace. They were all great friends.

One day Horace and Namu were exploring a cave and they didn't know there was a tiger shark in the cave. As you know, tiger sharks love to eat cats and whales. The shark chased them all over the ocean. Then Horace stopped and wondered why they were chasing each other. Why were they acting this way? They became great friends. There was peace all over in all depths of the ocean. Horace was declared peace maker of the ocean by the blue whale and his mother was very, very proud.

Katy Torrez, 12, a student at St. Peter's School receives special mention.

Dreams

It was a hot, steamy day as I was polishing my Olympic gymnastics' gold medals for the 2010 Olympic Games held in Greenville, N.C.

I was remembering my first back flip. Stevie and Jeff, my first cousins, asked me if I could do a back flip. I did not know so I tried it and succeeded.

Daddy had bought me a trampoline and I was tickled to death.

After all the classes I took I could not stay because I had a low grade, but my 6th and 7th grade determined P.E. teacher by the name of Mr. T. Warren helped me with proper formation and established a show at the mall. I made my Olympic debut at Carolina East Mall in Greenville, N.C.

A knock at the mansion

Federal Facts Treasury Department

Over 120,000 employees work for the Department of the Treasury. It was established in 1789 as a Cabinet post. The secretary of the treasury is 5th in line to serve as president of the U.S. if something should happen to those ahead of him/her. The secretary of the treasury is appointed to the job by the president and serves only if the Senate approves.

The Department of the Treasury deals with the money of the federal government. It collects taxes, collects custom duties (taxes on foreign goods) and pays all federal bills. Other tasks include keeping accounts or records of the government's money and keeping records of payments to be made. The Treasury Department prints all paper money and makes all coins. It also prints all the postage stamps. The national banks in the country are supervised by this department and the sale of savings bonds are promoted by it. If the federal government needs to borrow money, it is the job of the Department of the Treasury to do this.

The prevention of counterfeiting is a difficult task which the department faces. In addition, it enforces the laws against smuggling. A major job of the Department of the Treasury is the Secret Service protection of the president, the vice-president and their families.

The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms is one of the agencies within the department. This bureau supervises the production and sale of alcohol and tobacco products. It also deals with the sale, possession and use of weapons and explosives.

Pitt Schools Now Serving Foods From New Recipes

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

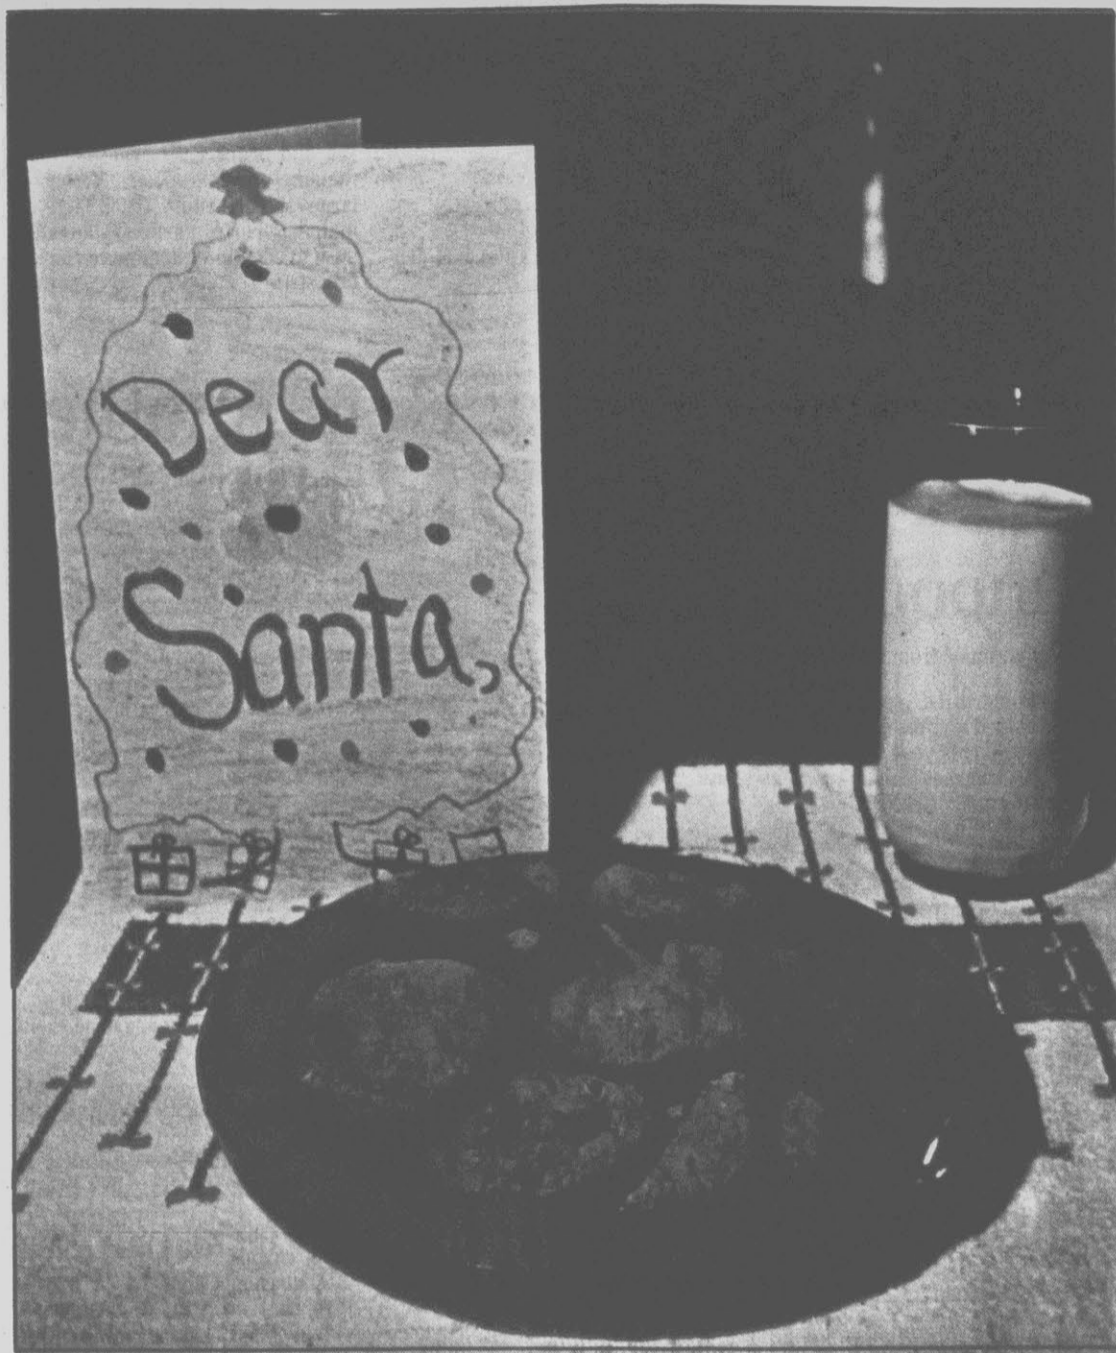

School cafeterias in North Carolina, including those in Pitt County, are offering foods lower in sugar, salt and fat, in part, because of the new standard recipes released recently by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The Food and Nutrition Service area of the USDA has revised its "Quantity Recipes for School Food Service" to reflect current concerns about decreasing the amount of fat, salt and sugar Americans eat. The recipes, used by schools under the National School Lunch Program, help school food service managers plan, purchase, prepare and serve lunches that students can enjoy while meeting nutritional needs. They are distributed through the Department of Public Instruction's Division of Child Nutrition.

"In the November managers' meeting we distributed them to the managers and talked to them about the changes in the recipes," Donna Ware, director of the child nutrition program in the Pitt County schools, said. "They're designed to keep the amount of sodium, sugar and fat at a low level."

"We have been working with our cafeteria managers to make them very aware of the need to reduce those three items," she said. "We've asked them to follow the recipes as written and not to add a little southern cooking to the stew."

The Daily Reflector/Shannon Wolfe

Treat Old Santa To A Delicious Cookie Surprise

Americans love chocolate chip cookies. It is estimated that more than a quarter billion pounds of these cookies are baked annually in homes across the country.

In addition, chocolate chip cookies are available in supermarkets, convenience stores and bakeries, and in the many specialty stores which have come into being in an attempt to satisfy the tremendous American appetite for these delicious treats.

Try the accompanying chocolate chip recipes.

DOUBLE CHOCOLATE CHIP COOKIES I

- 1 3/4 cups flour
- 1/4 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 cup butter or margarine, softened
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1 cup granulated sugar
- 1/2 cup dark brown sugar, firmly packed

Turkey Gets Another Chance At Christmas

Although Thanksgiving is the traditional time for turkey, many health-conscious families select this lowfat poultry over higher fat beef, goose or even ham for their Christmas feasting as well.

Plan on a large turkey, if, like most of us, you enjoy turkey leftovers for delicious sandwiches and casseroles. Allowing at least one pound per person when buying your turkey will usually allow sufficient leftovers.

If the turkey is fresh, purchase it no longer than two days before cooking and store on the coldest shelf of your refrigerator. Frozen turkeys are best thawed by allowing them to defrost in the refrigerator for two to three days prior to cooking time.

For many people, the stuffing that goes so well with turkey is one of the most popular parts of a holiday meal. You can deep your stuffing as lowfat and healthful as the turkey by cooking it separately from the turkey. That way it won't absorb fat from the cooking meat and will come out light, thoroughly cooked and can be sprinkled with defatted pan drippings to be as dry or moist as you desire.

To roast your turkey without putting stuffing inside, simply rub the inside with salt, and place slices of onion, a stalk of celery with leaves, and a sprig of parsley inside to help flavor the meat. Remember that an unstuffed turkey takes slightly less time to cook than a stuffed bird.

Roast your turkey on a rack so that fat will drip off. Use a meat thermometer to measure doneness. It should read 185 degrees when the turkey is ready.

Using whole wheat bread as the basis for any stuffing is one way to incorporate more fiber into your diet. The following recipe provides not only the fiber of whole wheat, but also the vitamin C and beta-carotene from the fruits used.

- ### APRICOT-ORANGE STUFFING
- 1/2 cup dried apricots, diced
 - 1 cup orange juice

Eat Healthy During Holidays

When trying to watch your weight during holidays it's important to remember that it's not necessarily what you eat, but how you eat, says an Appalachian State University home economics instructor.

"If you feel like you have to have the mashed potatoes or the casseroles, you can still have a little of everything — just don't serve big helpings," says Beth Binner, who teaches foods and nutrition courses at Appalachian.

The best solution is to eat healthy. If you're going to a cocktail party, don't eat a large meal before you go, and use club soda rather than soft drinks with your mixed drinks to help cut down on calories. Curb your alcohol and calorie intake by limiting your drinks to a social hour.

"Avoid big bowls. If you're standing there beside that big bowl of chips, it's easy to just keep reaching down and picking up a handful," Binner said. And avoid creamy products such as dips, because they're usually high in fat content. Stay with fresh items such as fruit and vegetables, and avoid hot foods, which are usually meat dishes and are also high in fat.

If all else fails, keep talking. "Keep the conversation going. It's hard to eat when you're talking," she said.

There are also some tips to follow when preparing meals, Binner said. For example, don't nibble when you're baking, and try some substitutions for the more fattening traditional foods. Try boiled new potatoes instead of mashed potatoes, and substitute low-fat items in a recipe. For instance, if a recipe calls for sour cream, use low-fat sour cream, or use skim milk instead of cream. Or substitute applesauce for oil in a cake recipe to add moistness. Try yeast rolls instead of biscuits, avoid adding butter whenever possible, and cut down on salt by substituting different spices.

"Don't be afraid to experiment with a recipe. My students think they have to stick to a recipe, but they find out they can make something a lot healthier by experimenting with different things," Binner said.

She recommended avoiding big breakfasts when you know you're going to be eating a big meal later. If you're watching a football game while waiting for someone else to fix the meal, snack on popcorn instead of peanuts. Popcorn has less fat and calories.

If you have lots of turkey left over, make a salad using your leftovers instead of a casserole.

There are some tips you can follow if you feel you just have to have those chips and dip or pumpkin pie, Binner said. For instance, wear clothing that fits versus to baggy clothing so you don't feel like eating as much, and sit down rather than stand when you do eat.

"Everybody loves to splurge, and you can have all those things if you really want them," Binner said. "The important thing to remember is to eat wisely."

Holiday Dinner Needs Elegant Main Dish

A show-stopping main dish is the hallmark of a holiday dinner. It need not be extravagant, but it should be as festive as the season itself.

Boneless skinned chicken breasts, called "supremes" by the French, are a favorite starting point for holiday party menus. Versatile and easy to prepare, they rise to the occasion when the entree must be elegant. To turn them into a main dish masterpiece and add a luxurious note to the meal, all it takes is a bit of imagination and a package of long grain and wild rice. An unmatched blend of gourmet wild rice, long grain rice and 23 selected herbs and seasonings, it adds holiday taste to any meal.

For this season's round of celebrations, home economists have created two elegant new entrees which set the stage for gracious dining.

Cheese-Filled Chicken with Scallion Wild Rice will make the menu memorable. Golden brown and crispy on the outside, the crumb-caked chicken boasts a creamy, savory filling of ricotta cheese, scallions and capers. A blend of long grain and wild rice with green onion accent showcases the chicken.

Wild Chicken Paprikash is a festive variation of a Hungarian menu classic. Prepared easily in the short time the long grain and wild rice accompaniment simmers, the chicken features a generous coating of flavorful paprika and a traditional sour cream sauce. Bright yellow bell pepper strips, stirred into the rice just before serving, add pleasing color and texture contrast.

- ### CHEESE-FILLED CHICKEN WITH SCALLION WILD RICE
- 6 small green onions
 - 1/2 cup ricotta or shredded Monterey Jack cheese

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

Dear Readers: Recently I have heard lots of you say how proud you are of yourself this holiday season. You have been careful about not overeating all the goodies. You find that you do enjoy savoring the tastes of those treats in small quantities. And you feel better because you are not overstuffed. That's good news. Keep up the good work.

Oh yes, you also tell me there has been a day on a party where you just couldn't say no to an extra helping of dessert. That's okay if you have a plan to get back on track. Don't feel too guilty.

While the big food companies have made news with the buyout of RJR Nabisco and the purchase of Kraft by Philip Morris, changes in the food supply keep happening. I have already warned you that we will be subjected to an oatmeal war. We already see lots of new oat-containing products. I hear now that there will be an advertising war among the major pizza makers. Domino's promises to war with Little Caesar's and Pizza Hut for market share. If you get tempted by the special deals, remember it's OK to enjoy a pizza and it can be nutritious. If you are watching your fat intake, though, skip the extra cheese and other fat-containing toppings and choose the veggies.

In the new year, watch for the coming of new foods aimed at children. Right now the food companies think of canned pasta products, boxed pizza, frozen pot pies and frozen pizzas as "kids' foods." But some eager small food companies want to capitalize on the feelings of moms who worry that they are not feeding their children nutritionally. Three new brands of shelf-stable microwave meals are coming: My Own Kitchen, Kids' Kitchen and Kids' Cupboard. I have not seen the nutrition information on these products yet, but will comment on them when they appear in our stores. Shelf-stable means they do not have to be refrigerated nor frozen until opened. We already have shelf-stable milk in our stores. The company that helped McDonald's patent their French fries expects to market a product called Magic Meal in the new year. This product is a frozen microwave dinner of a cheeseburger, French fries and a chocolate shake.

I think new products are interesting. When they arrive in our markets, we have to decide if they have a reasonable role in our family's lifestyle based on it nutritional value, taste, convenience and cost.

Patrick and I wish you and your family a merry Christmas and a happy and healthy new year. We thank you for your kindness during this year.

Holiday Dinner Menus Always Need A Show-Stopping Main Dish

6 small whole chicken breasts, boned and skinned (about 2 pounds)*
2 1/3 cups water
5 tablepoons butter or margarine
1 package (6 ounces) long grain and wild rice
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1 cup fresh bread crumbs
 Mince 2 of the onions. Cut remaining 4 onions into 1-inch pieces. Combine cheese, minced onions and capers; mix well. Spread one heaping tablepoon of the cheese mixture on inside of each chicken breast. Fold in half, enclosing cheese mixture; secure with wooden picks. Set aside. Combine water, 1 tablepoon of the butter and contents of rice and seasoning packets in saucepan. Bring to a boil. Cover tightly and simmer 22 minutes. While rice simmers, sprinkle outside of chicken with salt and pepper. Melt remaining 4 tablepoons butter. Dip chicken in butter; roll in bread crumbs. Place in 15x10-inch jelly roll pan; bake in preheated 450-degree oven 20 minutes, or until chicken is cooked through. After rice has simmered 22 minutes, stir in green onion pieces.

Cover and continue simmering until all water is absorbed, about 3 minutes. Serve rice alongside chicken. Makes 6 servings.
 *Note: 3 large chicken breasts, boned, skinned and split, may be substituted. Cut a pocket in meaty side of breast, being careful not to cut all the way through ends (or have butcher cut pocket). Stuff pocket with cheese mixture; secure with wooden stick.
 Note: If desired, cut two of the white pieces of onion into thin strips; reserve for garnish on rice.

6 chicken breast halves, boned and skinned
1 tablepoon paprika, preferably sweet Hungarian
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
1 large onion, cut into thin wedges
1/2 cup chicken broth
1/2 cup dairy sour cream
1 tablepoon flour
Chopped parsley (optional)
1/2 cup short thin yellow bell pepper strips

Saute one clove of the garlic in 1 tablepoon of the butter in saucepan 2 minutes. Add water and contents of rice and seasoning packets. Bring to a boil. Cover and simmer until all water is absorbed, about 25 minutes. While rice simmers, sprinkle chicken breasts evenly with paprika, salt and pepper; set aside. Melt remaining 2 tablepoons butter in large skillet. Saute onion and remaining clove garlic 2 minutes; push to edge to skillet. Saute chicken breasts in skillet until lightly browned on both sides, about 5 minutes. Pour in chicken broth; cover and simmer 10 minutes or until chicken is cooked through. Remove to serving plate with slotted spoon. Whisk together sour cream and flour; stir into juices in skillet. Cook and stir until heated through and slightly thickened, about 3 minutes. Pour over chicken; sprinkle with parsley, if desired. Stir pepper strips into rice; serve alongside chicken.

The standardized recipes have been developed and tested for school food services. This year, for the first time, the recipes also include listings of nutrients, calories, proteins, carbohydrates, fat and cholesterol per serving. Moderate amounts of added sugar, salt and fats are used in the recipes.

The new recipes also give "additional information on how to merchandise the items on the lines so they would look more appealing to the students," Ms. Ware said.

"We're seeing a general trend with students toward a term we heard dietitians use called grazing," which means eating foods that can be picked up with the hands and eaten, such as carrot sticks, fresh fruit, sandwiches, and of course, french fries.

"They want that kind of meal," she said. "They don't want any more of a plate lunch where they have sit down to eat."

While the recipes are standard, some of the recipes are based on ethnic foods, Ms. Ware said. Tacos, burritos and similar foods are among the recipes, and "those are popular with the students here."

North Pitt High School often has a taco bar during lunch, and "that's very popular."

Copies of the USDA "Quantity Recipes for School Food Service" are available by calling or writing the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402; (202) 783-3238. When ordering, request GPO number 001-000-04511-3, "Quantity Recipes for School Food Service." The cost is $25 per set which may be charged to a major credit card or included with the order.

Turkey Gets Another Chance

3/4 cup onion, chopped
6 slices whole wheat bread
1 Tbsp. margarine
3/4 tsp. thyme
3/4 tsp. sage
Pepper to taste
 In a small bowl, soak the dried apricots in one-half cup of the orange juice. Steam the celery and onion in 1 cup of water in a large skillet or saucepan until they are tender. Meanwhile, cut the bread into 1-inch pieces.

Add the margarine and seasonings to the cooked vegetables in the pan, and stir until the mixture is well blended. Add the bread cubes and the apricots with the juice, tossing well and stirring in the remaining one-half cup of the orange juice. Continue cooking the mixture over very low heat for about 5-15 minutes, stirring occasionally. (Add extra orange juice if more moistness is desired.)

You may also add one or two tablepoons of slivered almonds, if desired for added crunch, but watch the amount carefully, as the fat content from nuts adds up quickly.

APPLE CRISP FOR ONE

This quick dessert can also be made with a large peach.

1 tablepoon butter or margarine
2 tablepoons dark brown sugar
2 tablepoons quick-cooking oats
1 tablepoon all-purpose flour
1/8 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 medium apple, peeled and sliced
Whipped cream or ice cream for garnish

Place butter in 1-cup glass measure. Microwave, uncovered, on high 10 seconds or until softened. Stir in sugar, oats, flour and cinnamon; set aside.

Place apple slices in small microwave-safe bowl. Sprinkle oat mixture over apple. Microwave, uncovered, on high 2 1/2 minutes or until apple is tender, rotating dish once during cooking.

ORANGE GLAZED OATMEAL

DROPS

2 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
2 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. cinnamon
1/2 tsp. EACH nutmeg and salt
1 cup butter or margarine, softened

1 cup sugar
1 cup packed brown sugar
2 eggs
1/3 milk
2 cup uncooked oats, quick-cooking or old-fashioned

1 cup raisins
3/4 cup chopped nuts
 Pre heat oven to 375 degrees F. Combine flour, baking powder, cinnamon, nutmeg and salt; set aside. Cream butter and sugars. Beat in eggs until light and fluffy. Add flour mixture alternately with milk and beat well after each addition. Stir in oats, raisins and nuts and mix thoroughly. Drop by heaping spoonfuls onto ungreased baking sheet. Bake 12 to 15 minutes. Cool on wire rack.

ORANGE GLAZE

2 1/4 cups confectioner's sugar
3 to 4 Tbsp. orange juice
1 1/2 tps. grated orange peel
1/2 tsp. vanilla
 Beat ingredients together until smooth. Drizzle over cooled cookies. Makes about 5 dozen.

Hors D'oeuvres Solve Party-Giving Dilemma

By Charlyne Varkonyi
LAT/WP NEWS SERVICE

Party. What a fine word, a wonderful concept ... if someone else does the work. But when party-going turns into party-giving, many people turn into partyphobics.

Partyphobia can hit the best of us, particularly the busiest of us. Just a week ago it seemed like such a fine idea to have a few friends over to trim the tree or share some holiday cheer. But now you panic. You do not know what to make, how to get everything done, how to make it look like a you did it all effortlessly with a certain high-glitz style. In other words, you freeze instead of planning, cooking ahead and freezing the food.

Forget the homemade blinis. Nix on the seafood timbales. Don't bother with the spun sugar for dessert. Entertaining does not have to be a major production. Instead, take the advice of veteran party-givers and invite a handful of friends to a champagne and hors d'oeuvres party.

The cocktail segment can be simplified by offering just one "drink" — a good quality champagne. Get some bottled waters, juices and soft drinks for the non-drinkers.

Even the food can be elegant yet simplified. Some of the best advice for giving an hors d'oeuvres party comes from Susan Wyler, the food editor of the upscale Food & Wine magazine and author of "Cooking for a Crowd" (Harmony Books; $24.95). She suggests allowing 1 ounce of salmon or cured or smoked meat per person, two or three of each hors d'oeuvre per person and about 1/4 cup of spread for each guest.

"Whenever you are in doubt," Ms. Wyler says, "remember that cheese, nuts and chips can take up the slack. An invitation to a cocktail supper implies drinks and nibbles, not a filling supper."

Combining her suggestions with ours, here are some ways to take the pain out of party giving:

Do not try to do too much. Translation: Not everything has to be made from scratch and not everything has to be made by you. Get a nice selection of quality cheeses and pates from a gourmet store. Add some smoked salmon, prosciutto, cocktail rye and pumpernickel, water wafers and tortilla chips with ready-made gourmet salsa. Do not be afraid to buy a couple of hors d'oeuvres from a caterer.

Hot hors d'oeuvres are the biggest headache, so keep them to a minimum. Instead of passing around trays, set up a buffet and keep the one or two hot dishes on warming trays on the table.

Many in this health-conscious era seems to love crudites. Wash and chop the vegetables a day ahead and refrigerate them in a bowl of cold water or in plastic bags in the refrigerator. Serve them with your favorite dip recipe.

Make as many of your hors d'oeuvres ahead as possible and freeze them. This way you can start up to a week ahead and not panic at the last minute. Beautiful presentation is as important as taste, and do-aheads leave you time to make them inviting.

If you do not have a lot of time to cook, make at least two show-stopper hors d'oeuvres that your guests will talk about. Consider the presentation of caviar Christmas stars or the memorable seasoning of Cajun clams.

When selecting your menu, make sure to offer a nice mix of flavors and textures. Try to achieve a balance between creamy and spicy, smooth and crunchy, seafood, vegetables and meat.

For dessert, buy a petits fours dessert tray from a bakery or caterer or offer a chocolate fondue with fresh fruit for dipping.

The following are some of my favorite hors d'oeuvres updated for current palates. Most of them can be made ahead and frozen. They use some sort of cook's helper to speed the preparation time, such as canned clams or frozen bread dough.

- CAJUN CLAMS
1 small yellow onion, minced (about 2/3 cup)
3 large garlic cloves, minced
1/2 green pepper, minced (about 1/3 cup)
1 1/2 stalks celery, minced (about 2/3 cup)
1/4 pound butter
2 cans chopped clams (6 1/2 ounces each)
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon New Orleans shellfish seasoning, available in gourmet sections
1 teaspoon onion powder
Salt and pepper, to taste
1 cup Italian seasoned bread crumbs
Paprika, for color

Mince onion, garlic, green pepper and celery and set aside. Melt butter on high heat in frying pan, add vegetables and saute until soft and translucent, about 4 to 5 minutes. Stir periodically with a wooden spoon. Add clams, including the broth and stir. Season with Worcestershire sauce, shellfish seasoning, onion powder. Taste and adjust seasoning with salt and pepper or more shellfish seasoning if you want more fire in the dish. After it comes to a boil, reduce heat and cook for 5 minutes. Then add Italian bread crumbs. Place in clam shells or in shells purchased in gourmet store. Add paprika for color. Broil for 5 minutes until browned under the broiler. Makes 12 to 14 servings.

Note: You can do everything ahead except the broiler step and freeze them, covered tightly with foil, until the day of the party. Take them out to defrost in the refrigerator and broil them at the last minute.

The following recipe is an adaptation from Martha Stewart's new video, "Martha Stewart's Secrets for Entertaining: A Formal Dinner Party." She suggests using heart-shaped cookie cutters, but we have turned her heart toasts with caviar and sour cream into Christmas caviar stars with a star shaped cutter and a touch of dill. Instead of dolloping the sour cream, make sure the sour cream is cold and pipe it through a pastry bag.

- CHRISTMAS CAVIAR STARS
24 slices of pumpernickel cocktail bread
3 1/2 ounces of red lumpfish or salmon roe caviar
Sour cream
Fresh dill

Cut the stars from the bread. You will get the best results by pushing the cutter all the way through so you will lift the cookie cutter from the table with the star shape still inside the cutter. Then push your finger through the opposite side to remove the star-shaped bread. (The cutting can be done in advance and the bread can be stored in a tightly wrapped plastic bag or foil package. But do not toast the stars until the day of the party or they will have a stale flavor.)

Heat oven to 250 degrees. Spread the stars on a cookie sheet and cover with the same size cookie sheet. Bake until for 10 to 15 minutes until the bread is crisp and dry like Melba toast. Remove from the oven and let cool on a wire rack.

Right before the party, add about 1/2 teaspoon of caviar onto each star. Leave the sour cream in the refrigerator until the last minute and pipe it through a pastry bag onto the caviar using a small tip. Add a sprig of fresh dill to each. Makes 24 servings.

Note: The salmon roe caviar is larger, more expensive (about $13.99 compared to $4.99 for 3 1/2 ounces) and less salty than the red lumpfish. If you use the salmon roe you will need to use larger bread and a larger star cookie cutter.

Many of us love Italian fried dough, but it doesn't have to be just for street fairs any more. Use a little creativity and you can stuff the dough with tasty ingredients to allow it to compete with any fancy hors d'oeuvre. But making the dough from scratch is too much work for today's busy person. Instead, use refrigerated buttermilk biscuit dough and stuff with pepperoni and Fontinella cheese, a tangy cheese suggested for use in antipasto.

- ANTIPASTO BALLS
1 package buttermilk biscuits
1 stick pepperoni, about 5 1/2 inches long

KROGER DELUXE NATURAL FLAVOR ICE CREAM 1/2-GALLON . . . $1.99

Panic-Stricken Party Hosts Should Consider Hors D'oeuvres

Vegetable oil, for frying
 Cut biscuits in half. Put circle of pepperoni and piece of cheese about 1/2 inch square in center of dough. Roll together with your hands as if you were making meatballs. Fry in vegetable oil until golden brown. These can be made ahead, frozen and reheated in the microwave right before serving. Makes 20 servings.

This recipe, an adaptation of a chef's favorite, comes from a co-worker who is known for her fantastic culinary skills. The chef used cold cuts inside, but she substituted her cheese and vegetable stuffing.

THIN CALZONES WITH SPINACH AND GORGONZOLA

1 cup of cooked spinach either frozen or fresh (thoroughly drained and chopped)
1 red bell pepper (finely chopped)
2 cloves of garlic (mashed)
6 calamata olives, or Greek black olives (pitted and chopped)
2/3 cup of vinaigrette to marinate vegetables
1 1/2 cup of crumbled gorgonzola cheese, about 1/2 pound
Cornmeal
1 tablespoon poppy seeds
1 egg, lightly beaten

Vinaigrette:
1/3 cup balsamic vinegar

1/3 cup olive oil
1 teaspoon pommery mustard

Let dough thaw in a warm place and rise once. Put vinegar in a bowl and slowly whisk in olive oil and mustard. While dough is rising, marinate vegetables in vinaigrette. When dough has risen, punch down and roll out on floured surface into into a rectangle, about 8 by 16 inches. Cut down the center of the dough, lengthwise. Dividing dough in two.

Drain the vegetables completely. Place half of the crumbled Gorgonzola (do not use too much or it will leak in the baking) down the center of each of the pieces of dough. Then top with half of the drained vegetables. Be careful to leave space around the edges of the dough.

Fold the edges in and sides over as if you were putting together a package. Seal the dough by pinching the seam together. If you do not seal tightly enough, the dough will pop open and you will have something that looks like a boat rather than a loaf. You should have a long, skinny loaf with about a 1 1/2-inch diameter.

Repeat with other half of dough and ingredients.

Place on heavy baking sheet that has been lightly dusted with cornmeal. Brush with beaten egg and sprinkle with poppy seeds. Make 4 small diagonal slits on the top of each loaf.

Bake at 400 degrees for 15 minutes, until golden. When cool, slice on the diagonal and arrange on a platter. Makes 2 calzones.

The following recipe comes from "Fondue and Table Top Cookery," by Marian Howells. Now that fondue is back this is a sure-fire winner.

CHOCOLATE FONDUE

1/2 pound dark chocolate
2 tablespoons rum or brandy
6 tablespoons heavy cream
Assorted fresh fruit and cubes of sponge cake Break the chocolate into small pieces and put into a pan with the cream. Stir over gentle heat or in a double boiler until the chocolate melts and blends with the cream. Turn off the heat and stir in the rum or brandy. Keep warm over very low heat.

Note: For variety, chocolate containing fruits and nuts can be used. If you have a choice of fondue pots, use a fairly shallow earthenware pot. A metal fondue pot can be used, but you have to make sure to stir periodically or the mixture is likely to stick and burn. Makes 4 servings.

Oat Bran Just One Part Of A Healthy Diet

By Colleen Pierre
 LAT/WP NEWS SERVICE

The news that oat bran will lower blood cholesterol levels has now transformed itself into products on your grocer's shelf. This is a mixed blessing, because the impact of oats is not as great as you might imagine.

Oat bran is not a miracle cure. Simply adding oat bran to a diet high in saturated fat and cholesterol will not go very far in lowering your risk of heart disease. Rather, it should be just one facet of a program of dietary change that can bring about satisfactory reductions in blood cholesterol levels.

The oat bran study reported a year ago did, in fact, show that daily consumption of oat bran or oatmeal lowered blood cholesterol levels. However, two important points in that study are rarely discussed.

First, all participants began the study by changing to a low saturated fat diet for six weeks to achieve maximum cholesterol lowering. Only then did they add oat bran.

And second, the addition of oat bran lowered cholesterol levels by only 2.5 percent to 3.5 percent. This is a good increment when added to the effects of the original dietary changes, but by itself it is not enough to shout about.

And that is the point. An effective cholesterol-lowering diet is a combination of food-style changes that act together to reduce the risk of heart diseases. It includes both additions and subtractions.

—Add some foods. Add foods high in soluble fiber. These include oat bran, corn bran, fruits high in pectin (apples, grapes, oranges) and dried beans and peas (kidneys, pintos, black-eyed peas, limas, great north-erns).

—Substitute monounsaturated oils (olive, peanut) and polyunsaturated oils for other dietary fats.

—Subtract some foods. Decrease all foods high in animal fat, including red meats (limit to 6 ounces a week), high-fat dairy products (choose skim or low-fat instead), butter, cream and lard.

—Avoid saturated fats of plant origin (palm, palm kernel, coconut) or polyunsaturated oils that have been hydrogenated (products labeled "all vegetable shortening," stick margarine).

—Limit egg yolks (including those used in cooking) to three a week.

—Eat fewer foods with hidden fats — like donuts, cookies, snack crackers, cakes, pies, fried foods, chips and "fast foods."

—Add a little exercise. Increase your daily activity. Any kind of movement burns more calories than sitting still. By gradually increasing exercises such as brisk walking, stationary biking, swimming, jogging or aerobic dancing, you'll increase your "good" cholesterol, improve your sense of well-being and maintain desired weight.

—Subtract body weight. Weight loss, if you are overweight, can help lower your blood cholesterol level. But do not crash diet. Just eat smaller portions of your favorite foods rather than totally eliminating them. A loss of 1 to 2 pounds each week is most effective for long-term weight management.
