Investigators Say Bomb Caused Pan Am Crash

By Robert Barr
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOCKERBIE, Scotland (AP) — A bomb blew up Pan Am Flight 103 with 259 people aboard as the jumbo jet flew over Scotland a week ago, the Department of Transport announced today.

The statement said investigators found "conclusive evidence of a detonating high explosive" in two parts of the metal framework of a piece of luggage.

It said: "The explosive's residues recovered from the debris have been positively identified, and are consistent with the use of a high-performance plastic explosive."

In London today, pine coffins containing the first bodies of Americans killed in the Dec. 21 crash arrived at Heathrow Airport and were loaded onto two separate Pan Am flights bound for New York.

In Scotland, authorities said they had formally identified two more victims: Michael Joseph Doyle, 30, of Voorhees, N.J., and Sean Concannon, 16, of Banbury, England.

On Tuesday night, residents paid silent respects to the five American victims of the jumbo jet disaster whose bodies were the first to leave this Scottish town since the New York-bound Boeing 747 fell onto its pieces.

All 259 people aboard were killed, and 11 missing townspeople are presumed dead. Police spokesman Angus Kennedy said one more body was recovered Tuesday, bringing the total to 241.

More than 600 rescuers, including 15 divers, 30 tracker dogs and 100 soldiers, today resumed their search of the woods and icy waters in a 100-square-mile area of southwestern Scotland for the missing victims and wreckage, which included one of the plane's wings.

Also today, four men arrested for allegedly looting the wreckage were scheduled to appear in a local court.

The Department of Transport called the latest reports of bomb suspicions speculative. "We're not saying what so far has been found," said spokesman John O'Sullivan.

The Times quoted unidentified investigators as saying they found

Package For Basic Cable To Cost More

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

With Greenville Cable TV planning to increase the cost of basic service 7 percent in the new year, Greenville subscribers will be paying more than customers in several other North Carolina cities.

The company, a division of Multimedia Inc. of Greenville, S.C., has announced a rate increase in the basic cable package from $15 a month to $16.05 a month. The package of 25 channels includes three local network affiliates, WRAL of Raleigh, WTBS of Atlanta and WTTG of Washington, D.C.

Tommy Edwards, general manager of Greenville Cable TV, said the price is very competitive with cable packages in other cities in the state.

"In some cases it is even better. You've got a lower price with more channels," Edwards said. "I don't see any reason why it won't (be competitive with cable packages in other cities) this year."

But several other companies in the state offer a lower price for a similar package. No companies contacted charged as much or more than Greenville Cable.

Alert Cable, headquartered in Florida, serves Farmville residents, and it offers a package of 25 channels for $14.95 a month.

In Wilmington, Vision Cable offers a package of 31 channels for $14 a month. The package includes WNCT of Greenville and WTBS, but it also includes WTVD of Durham, WGN of Chicago and WOR in New York, none of which are available in Greenville.

Vision Cable, headquartered in New Jersey, also serves Jacksonville, where it offers a package of 25 channels for $12.50 a month, including WGN and WTBS.

Durham Cablevision, a division of Atlantic Telecommunications Co. in Denver, offers a two-tiered package: 11 channels for $10.95 a month and 26 channels for $14.50 a month. The smaller package includes WTBS and WOR comes with the larger deal.

Cablevision of Charlotte, a division of Time Inc. of New York, offers a package of 38 channels for $14.49 a month. The company has about 100,000

South Korea Agrees To Talks

By Barry Renfrew
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL, South Korea — South Korea sent a message to communist North Korea today agreeing to high-level political and military talks aimed at reducing tension on the divided peninsula.

Prime Minister Kang Young-hoon suggested in the letter to North Korean counterpart Yon Hyung Muk that they head delegations to alternating talks in Seoul and Pyongyang to discuss non-interference, cooperation in select areas and building "mutual trust in military matters."

"To wipe out mutual distrust and restore trust between them the two Koreas should recognize each others' ideologies and systems, conduct dialogue on the basis of mutual respect and non-interference and develop cooperative relations on the principle of mutuality until unification is achieved," Kang wrote in the letter delivered to the north at the border truce site of Panmunjom.

But the south's response to a Nov. 16 North Korean proposal for wide ranging talks on reduction of military forces did not appear to go as far. The south did not refer to troop reduction and its proposal was more vague.

Kang made no reference to the north's proposal that talks also negotiate withdrawal of the U.S. forces based in the south under a mutual defense pact. The United States has 42,000 troops in the south. South Korea's letter also proposed separate economic and Red Cross talks to discuss cooperation in humanitarian and economic areas. It proposed preliminary talks in early February to set the terms for full negotiations.

The south also called for prime ministers to head the delegations, instead of deputy premiers as proposed by the north. Procedural differences have been a major problem in arranging north-south talks in the past.

The rival Koreas have both been pressing major initiatives to end the long, bitter confrontation dividing the peninsula.

Although some progress has been made, both sides have tended to stress their respective initiatives and play down the other's proposals.

Delegations of lawmakers are to resume talks Thursday at Panmunjom on clearing the way for full-scale parliamentary talks on a non-aggression pact and other measures. South Korean legislators expect full talks to be held sometime next year.

Feds Note Rescue Of Insolvent S&L

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Federal regulators announced today completion of an agreement to rescue the country's largest insolvent savings and loan institution in a bailout that will cost the government $1.7 billion.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board said it had completed an agreement for the sale of American Savings and Loan Association of Stockton, Calif., to an investment group headed by Texas billionaire Robert M. Bass.

According to the details of the sale, the bank board, which regulates the country's 3,100 savings and loans, will inject as much as $1.7 billion in federal aid.

As costly as the American Savings bailout will turn out to be, it was dwarfed by a second announcement concerning the rescue of five large Texas institutions.

The bank board said it will provide $5.1 billion in government assistance over the next 10 years to assist in the takeover of five of the most financially troubled Texas institutions.

The Texas S&Ls are being taken over by the investment group of MacAndrews & Forbes Holding Inc., which is headed by Ronald O. Perelman, the takeover specialist who is the head of Revlon Inc., the cosmetics company.

Chamber Outlines Programs For 1989

By Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Officials of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce today announced budget figures and plans for the upcoming year which include a series of new programs designed to increase the chamber's effectiveness in the community.

Chris McCoy, 1989 chairman of the chamber board, said plans for 1989 have been approved by the officers and directors of the chamber and are ready to be implemented.

New programs to be included as part of the chamber's record $663,000 annual budget include the "Committee of 100" designed to oversee and manage the economic development efforts of the chamber.

"Those efforts of the chamber will work in cooperation with the Pitt County Development Commission as well as Evergreen Inc. to really strengthen and coordinate the economic effort of all these individual agencies," McCoy said.

He said the Committee of 100 will have the responsibility within the policy structure of the chamber to develop, execute and implement a broad program of research, advertising, promotion and recruitment to encourage and assist the expansion of industry and business in the area.

Other new programs planned by the chamber in 1989 are the region's first boat show to be held in Green-

Franco and Maureen Capaldi admire their newborn baby, Catherine Faye

Jet Becomes Delivery Room

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — A woman gave birth two months prematurely aboard a jumbo jet flying at 39,000 feet from Barbados to Britain, her husband too shocked to do anything but hold her hand, a newspaper reported today.

Catherine Faye Capaldi was born on Monday, the day after Christmas, while the British Airways Boeing 747 was over the Atlantic, the Times of London said.

The aircraft was diverted to Shannon airport in Ireland after the baby was born. An ambulance rushed the baby and her mother, 31-year-old Maureen Capaldi of London, to St. Munchin's maternity hospital at Limerick, it said.

The baby weighed 3 pounds, 11 ounces at birth and mother and daughter were reported doing well, the paper said.

Mrs. Capaldi, 31 weeks into her pregnancy, was within one week of the recommended limit for pregnant air travelers and went into labor three hours after the plane took off, it said.

The paper quoted the plane's co-pilot, Nick Eades, as saying: "It was getting a bit panicky and I went (to the passenger section) to give reassurance, convinced that the birth was not going to take place. But by the time I got there, it was all happening."

"The head was already out. When the contractions stopped, the baby was there. It was really a do-it-yourself birth."

Eades was quoted as saying it was 30 minutes before the baby breathed unaided. "We thought the little mite wasn't going to live," he told the paper.

"A stewardess got a suction line from the medical kit while I tried artificial respiration. We decided to leave well alone and not cut the umbilical cord."

"I then rushed back to the flight deck to (help to) land the airplane. Mrs. Capaldi was very calm throughout. But her husband (Franco Capaldi) was too shocked to do anything except hold his wife's hand."

Sinar Elected President

Dr. Dennis R. Sinar recently was elected president of the Pitt County Medical Society.

Dr. Sinar, associate professor and section head of gastroenterology at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, was elected by the 296-member professional association of licensed physicians in Pitt County.

Born in Elyria, Ohio, Dr. Sinar received his bachelor's degree at Marquette University in Milwaukee and his medical degree at Ohio State University in Columbus.

He is director of endoscopy laboratories at the ECU School of Medicine and is certified in techniques in endoscopic laser therapy. He is faculty and course director for laser training workshops and serves on several national, ECU School of Medicine and Pitt County Memorial Hospital committees.

DR. DENNIS SINAR

Dr. Richard W. Crockery was chosen president-elect and Dr. Thomas G. Irons was named secretary-treasurer.

Home Grown Program

Four full-time employees of Pitt County Memorial Hospital have been chosen to participate in the Home Grown Program, which provides career advancement opportunities.

The new program is a joint effort between the hospital and Pitt Community College, said Jan Kimble, PCMH employment officer. Participants attend school full-time at PCC while working 20 hours per week at the hospital and receiving full-time pay and benefits.

Linda Burhans, director of nursing resources at PCMH, said the program was developed to meet the increasing need for nurses and allied health professionals.

"It was felt that supporting our own staff in meeting their career goals more quickly would enhance quality patient care delivery in those areas feeling the effects of national manpower shortages," Burhans said.

Employees selected include Chip Fleming, Calvin Hodges, Antonio Horsley and Pauline Stancil.

Fleming, an equipment technician in respiratory care, is working toward an associate degree in respiratory care. Hodges is a film library clerk in radiology earning an associate degree in radiologic technology. Ms. Horsley, a licensed practice nurse, is working toward a registered nurse degree, while Ms. Stancil is a dispatcher in the communications center earning an R.N. degree.

They were selected based on their qualifications, letters of recommendation from supervisors, extensive interviews and acceptance to the program at PCC.

To be eligible, a candidate must be a full-time employee at PCMH, a high school graduate or equivalent, at pay grade 4 or less and accepted into an accredited associate degree program in nursing, radiology or respiratory care at PCC, Ms. Kimble said.

Participants must accept full-time employment at PCMH following graduation for a period of time equal to that provided for study, must become certified or registered in their chosen fields and must complete the program in two years or less.

For more information contact the hospital's employment office at 551-4556 or the nursing recruitment office at 551-4843.

Many cow-calf producers in our area have a fall calving season with calves born by Christmas.

A fall calving season puts an extra burden on winter feed needs for cattle because nutritional requirements are highest for lactating cows.

Feed costs make up about 80 percent of the total annual variable costs of producing a weaned calf and winter feed makes up about half of the total feed costs.

Most cattle producers have estimated hay needs for the winter. If you anticipate coming up short, now is the time to do something about it. Hay requirements vary depending on size of cow, time of calving, hay quality, pasture availability, etc. A rule of thumb for hay needs is generally 2 percent of body weight daily for a dry cow and 2.5 percent of body weight for a nursing cow.

Cattle producers can have the quality of hay checked by submitting samples to the NCDA forage testing service. After determining hay quality, the need for supplemental grain or protein can be determined.

It is usually advantageous to feed cattle feedstuffs available locally that are much less expensive than commercial supplements. Examples of roughages in our area include corn stalks, cotton gin trash, cottonseed hulls, peanut hay, peanut hulls, soybean stubble, wheat straw and oat straw.

Protein feeds which may be available for cattle include broiler litter, layer waste, damaged soybeans and whole cottonseed. These feedstuffs should be analyzed for quality and fed according to the nutritional needs of cattle.

The agricultural extension service can help cattle producers in formulating rations using these feedstuffs. Winter annuals (rye, ryegrass, oats and wheat) can meet the nutritional needs of most classes of cattle when growth is adequate.

Winter grazing also can be expensive when it is not utilized properly. Limited grazing of small areas of winter annuals is most efficient. Winter annuals should not be grazed until they are 8 to 10 inches in height and cattle should be moved when annuals are grazed to a 2-inch stubble.

Liggett Continues Lower-Priced Product Strategy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — As selling cigarettes becomes less profitable, Durham-based Liggett & Myers Co. is trying to undercut its bigger rivals by offering a lower-priced product.

Liggett introduced Pyramid, a cut-rate brand, after cigarette manufacturers continued a twice-yearly ritual this month by announcing a 5 cents-per-pack price increase.

The move was the latest in a strategy Liggett, by far the smallest of the six major cigarette makers, launched in the early 1980s when it introduced generic cigarettes. Last year, Liggett began selling 30 L&M cigarettes for the price of 20.

By contrast, other major cigarette makers use more traditional strategies to boost sales. New York-based Philip Morris Cos. Inc. typically spends more on advertising, while R.J. Reynolds Co. has introduced new products, such as its low-smoke Premier cigarette.

"Liggett doesn't have many options" to attract new business, George E. Thompson, an analyst with Prudential-Bache Inc. in New York, told The News and Observer of Raleigh. "They don't have any strong brands, so they are appealing on a price basis."

Some observers view Liggett's strategy as brilliant. Ted L. Boyette, a cigarette wholesaler in the Eastern North Carolina town of Kenly, braces for a big drop in business every time cigarette makers unveil price hikes.

He says many of his customers are weary of price hikes and would be willing to try a lower-cost brand that Liggett says is made with much the same blend of tobacco as other major brands.

"The ordinary person can only spend but so much money on cigarettes," Boyette said. "These price hikes hurt everyone."

Pyramids sell for $5 to $7 a carton, depending on the retailer and taxes in the state in which they are sold. That's about $2.50 less than Dorals, Reynolds' leading generic brand. And it's up to $5 less per carton than such popular brands as Winston and Salem.

Liggett began shipping Pyramids across the country Dec. 18. It will keep prices low by shunning advertising campaigns and distributing the product alongside its other products, the company said.

"We're starting a third pricing tier" with Pyramids, said Hal A. Grant, a Liggett senior vice president. "With all the price increases over recent years, we wanted a lower-priced product."

Analysts say it might take up to nine months to judge the success of Pyramids. With its generic brands, Liggett dominated that niche for four years until 1985, when rival Brown & Williamson Co. in Louisville, Ky., introduced its generics in a move that sent Liggett's earnings plunging.

Since then, Liggett has been purchased by New York investor Bennett S. LeBow, who owns an 83 percent stake in the company. Last year, it raised $43 million in a stock sale and then introduced its 30-cigarette-pack L&Ms.

The company's earnings since have recovered and Liggett even is diversifying: It recently announced plans to sell candy for a Finnish company.

But like other cigarette makers, Liggett faces a struggle to expand its business in the wake of declining cigarette consumption. For the fourth year in a row, and the seventh time since 1980, U.S. sales of cigarettes this year are expected to decline 2 percent.

U.S. sales are expected to slip to 557 billion cigarettes, down from a peak of 640 billion in 1981.

Declining sales reflect growing concerns about health hazards related to smoking, as well as stiffer regulations on smoking.

Liggett's share of that shrinking market has fallen steadily as its much larger rivals snared market share by appealing to younger and more image-conscious smokers.

Its share of the U.S. cigarette market slipped to 3.4 percent this year, down nearly a percentage point over the previous two years.

Moreover, many of Liggett's leading brands — L&Ms, Chesterfield and Larks — appeal to older customers, a market that is declining even more quickly than the overall industry. Even market share for Liggett's generics, the company's leading product, inched up only slightly in the last year — to a 1.9 percent share of U.S. cigarette sales.

Poll Says Monarchy Favored

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Four out of five Britons firmly loyalist but nearly 60 percent think Queen Elizabeth II should step down to allow her eldest son Prince Charles to become king, according to an opinion poll published today.

The Gallup poll, published in The Daily Telegraph newspaper reported 82 percent of those questioned said they were in favor of the British monarchy, just 14 percent wanted it abolished and the rest expressed no opinion.

But 59 percent said they thought the 62-year-old queen should "retire" early, allowing 40-year-old Charles to become king.

Because of the disgrace surrounding the abdication in 1936 of the queen's uncle King Edward VIII, later the Duke of Windsor, in order to marry American divorcee Wallis Simpson, the queen has said she will never abdicate the throne.

This could mean a long wait for Charles. His great-great-grandfather, King Edward VII, had to wait until he was 59 years old before he ascended to the throne in 1901 on the death of his mother, Queen Victoria, at age 81.

Charles, whose concern for the poor, homeless and what he regards as the uglier aspects of modern architecture have won him widespread public support, heads the list of most popular royals, according to the poll. It said 21 percent of those questioned said Charles was their favorite. A 75-minute television documentary made by the prince attacking many modern buildings as ugly was screened by the British Broadcasting Corp. on Oct. 28. A newspaper survey at the time said 75 percent of Britons agreed with him.

In today's poll, 19 percent of respondents said Elizabeth the Queen Mother, Charles' 88-year-old grandmother, was their favorite; 17 percent favored his 38-year-old sister Princess Anne; 12 percent liked his 27-year-old wife Princess Diana best; and 11 percent liked the queen most.

Despite the overwhelming support for the monarchy, 40 percent of respondents said they thought the $9.45 million in taxpayers' money paid last year to support the royals was too much.

The queen, one of the world's richest people, has a personal fortune estimated earlier this year by the London business publication Money Magazine at $6 billion. But she and some other royals also receive an annual grant of taxpayers' money voted by Parliament to help them with the cost of their official duties, upkeep of palaces and other expenses.

Frightening

Gaping Holes In Airline Safety?

It is a frightening thought, the image of a jetliner landing with a 14-inch hole in its fuselage. And the questions raised are even more troubling.

A 20-year-old Eastern Boeing 727 with a history of a cracked fuselage landed safely Monday after the fracture blew open at 31,000 feet — leaving a gaping hole that depressurized the cabin. While the incident ended without serious injury, the potential for tragedy was large.

And it is not the first mishap of its kind. The top blew off a 737 en route to Hawaii in April, killing one. An American Airlines flight made an unscheduled landing in Detroit because of a 15-inch crack in its wheel well.

The latest incident prompts questions not only about the safety record of the nation's aircraft fleet, but the ability of the Federal Aviation Administration to satisfactorily monitor operations. And these issues are relevant to both Pitt County and North Carolina, areas where growth in air service has been vigorous.

A 1986 federal inspection found a five-inch fuselage crack in the Eastern aircraft. In addition, corrosion and a tiny wing crack were found in 1987. The aircraft's record showed mechanical problems had forced the jet to land at least five times in the past five years. Yet the jet was maintained according to FAA guidelines.

Something just doesn't seem right.

The aircraft had identified structural deficiencies and a lousy maintenance record. Yet it continued to fly under federal standards. That sounds like a recipe for disaster, and the 110 people aboard the Eastern flight were fortunate one didn't occur.

The questions are obvious.

First, why is an airliner allowed to fly with known defects? Sure, they're expensive beasts, but their integrity is the key that locks passenger safety into place. If the nation's standards allow for compromise, as the most recent incident indicates, that's not acceptable.

Second, is the nation's airline fleet too aged to perform safely? Many jets used daily have been in service for 20 years or longer. Combine that fact with the increased air travel of the past decade and the stress factor on these jets exceeds any previous generation of aircraft.

Finally, has the nation allowed its FAA to fall too far behind in manpower and equipment? Are an aging infrastructure and inadequate personnel putting passengers in peril? Are the regulations in place adequate for an airline industry that has grown dramatically since deregulation in the 1970s?

These are issues that must be raised and questions that must be answered before simple neglect turns into tragedy. It would be naive to suppose air crashes could be avoided completely. But a lack of concern for safety shouldn't contribute. That is one factor capable of being controlled.

Fine Tuning

Saving Time & Conserving Fuel

How can we save money on vehicle fuel bills without changing the number of miles we drive?

Traffic engineers say that can be accomplished through fine tuning the traffic control cycle system. It is said that the savings in fuel at retimed signals can be substantial.

An effort to reap some of that savings is soon to get under way. Department of Transportation workers will be retiming many traffic lights in Greenville and Pitt County with the goal of moving traffic more smoothly and reducing the waiting time at the signals. Certainly it won't be a day too soon.

Given the large number of signals which have gone up in and around Greenville in recent years it is apparent that even a modest saving in waiting time can mean large overall savings in our vehicle fuel costs. In the larger picture we will also be conserving a precious natural resource by placing less pollutants in the atmosphere.

There won't be any drastic speed up of traffic. After all, the lights still have to allow traffic to proceed both ways. With the many five-lane thoroughfares in the area, however, the signals often must have left turn cycles which further increase the waiting period until through traffic can proceed.

It will cost $750 per signal to make the planned adjustments. That cost will be far offset by the savings to motorists. The fuel savings is said to be 7,790 gallons annually per intersection. As an investment that will a gigantic payoff to society.

Looking to the future, even more sophisticated computer control signals can allow more green light time for the route with the heaviest traffic during rush hours. Our traffic needs should be regularly assessed with a goal of installing the latest traffic control systems as they are warranted.

The Genius Of An Unsung Hero

WASHINGTON — There are only two categories of people, a friend remarked a few days ago at the wake of Wiley A. Branton. "There are those who didn't know Wiley at all, and there are those who considered him a close personal friend."

The first category is bigger than, in justice, it ought to be. Branton, who died a week ago at age 65, was an unsung giant of the Civil Rights Movement — unsung, at least, in the national press.

The people whose brave hearts and bruised heads made the movement possible knew Branton well. He was the clever young lawyer they counted on to get them out of those brutal Southern jails. His tools: enormous integrity, a keen grasp of the law, an intimate knowledge of the South (including the racial nuances that varied from state to state, and even from town to town within a given state) and, always, a wonderful sense of humor.

One of his storied ploys (recounted in the 1967 book, "Climbing Jacob's Ladder," by Pat Watters and Reese Cleghorn) was to phone the backwoods sheriff who was holding civil-rights activists on one trumped-up charge or another and pretend to be a dimly remembered friend.

"Sheriff, this is old Wiley Branton up here in Atlanta," he would say in his best cracker accent. "Lawyer, you know. Been down there a few times."

William Raspberry

The sheriff, not wishing to offend, would pretend to recall their meeting, thereby setting himself up for Branton's next move.

"Look, you got a couple of my boys down there — one of their mothers works for me — and it'd shore be a mighty big favor to me if you could let me have them."

It worked in Georgia during his years as head of the vastly important Voter Education Project (his official duties at VEP were executive, but the ranks of black attorneys in the South were so thin that he was frequently pressed into service as a lawyer), as it had worked back in his native Arkansas, where he was lead counsel during the struggle to desegregate Little Rock's Central High School.

It was part of Branton's genius to put to effective use experiences that might have left others merely bitter. His education at the University of Arkansas School of Law (where he enrolled in 1948 as the first black student), his subsequent work among white law officers and court officials, and his blend-into-the-woodwork looks (he could easily have passed for white) gave him a peculiar understanding of how things worked in the Old South. He knew which buttons to push.

But as a member of an entrepreneurial family in Pine Bluff, as a solid Southern Baptist and as a frequent victim of racism, he also knew black people, a fact that helped him to defuse countless potential disasters during his years on former clients or their widows; his subscriptions to Arkansas papers that allowed him to keep up with the accomplishments of his "home boys" and their children and to send them congratulatory notes; his never-assuaged grief over the death, in 1986, of his daughter, Toni.

But Branton's special gift was his friendship. People who never heard him argue a case or teach a class or resolve a dispute counted him a special friend. He had a way of 'The people who never knew him need to be told of his gargantuan contributions, too seldom noted, to the course of the Civil Rights Movement and of American jurisprudence.'

in Washington — as special assistant to Attorneys General Nicholas Katzenbach and Ramsey Clark, as head of the United Planning Organization, this city's antipoverty umbrella, and as dean of the Howard University Law School.

He was everybody's favorite master of ceremonies, always ready with a funny story — usually with himself as the butt. Thousands of people who thought they knew him well learned, in the week following his death of heart attack, things about Branton that they had never known: his weekly visits, with his wife Lucille, to nursing homes to call bringing you inside, making you feel that he took genuine pleasure in having you around.

The people who never knew him need to be told of his gargantuan contributions, too seldom noted, to the course of the Civil Rights Movement and of American jurisprudence.

But it is for Wiley Branton's kindness, his good fellowship and his incredible warmth that I will remember him — I and a few thousand other "close personal friends."

Goofs & Gaffes Aplenty In '88

WASHINGTON — Each Halloween, kids try to ward off the evils of encroaching winter darkness by dressing up as ghosts and goblins. And two months later, this column tries a similar trick-or-treat approach by parading some of the notable goofs and gaffes of the previous year. Mentally, you see I'm still stuck in second grade.

David Broder

Goofs and gaffes had we aplenty in 1988. Years divisible by four are always great for entries in the dunce-cap derby. Presidential campaigns may bore the voters, but they stimulate the best work from those of us who have made a career of being wrong.

Like the classic crooked politician who "seen his opportunities and took 'em," I started my course of errancy as soon as the first voters went to their caucuses in Iowa last Feb. 8. I had shrewdly high-tailed it out of the state 24 hours before the voting and gone to Manchester, N.H., to prepare for the following week's New Hampshire primary.

The distance and perspective gained by this move paid big dividends when I boldly wrote of the Iowa results, "Vice President Bush became a vulnerable front-runner tonight."

With returns from the caucuses showing Bush trailing Sen. Bob Dole (R-Kan.) and television evangelist Marion G. (Pat) Robertson, I approvingly quoted New Jersey Gov. Thomas H. Kean (R) as saying that Iowa "throws everything in the Republican Party in a cocked hat."

Well, something was cockeyed, for sure, but I didn't know it was me.

The misreading of Iowa may be excused because of the haste with which it was delivered. Second-thoughts often are better, and with 24 hours to think it over, this is what I said of vulnerable Republican front-runner Bush:

"Eight years ago, he came into New Hampshire as the winner of Iowa and lost here because he had nothing of substance to say to people. This year, he comes in as the loser in Iowa, and he still has nothing of substance to say. Loyalty to (Ronald) Reagan and a vague commitment to be 'the education President' will help in this state, but they are not enough to sustain Bush for long."

Just long enough to make him President, it turned out.

The Broder bid for the 1988 Booby Prize, which began so auspiciously in the Iowa-New Hampshire period, staggered badly in the following weeks, as I wandered into unfamiliar fields of perspicacity. But I showed I had not lost the knack when the Democratic race took a dramatic turn in Michigan.

"Jesse L. Jackson's breakthrough victory in Michigan Saturday has transformed him into a formidable contender for the Democratic presidential nomination and prompted shellshocked party leaders to question Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis' ability to compete with him," began a March 28 story on which I generously shared byline credit with colleague Paul Taylor. "If Jackson can continue to connect in this way, he will be formidable," we wrote.

Well, perhaps. It took eight days after Iowa for New Hampshire voters to disprove my judgment about Bush's vulnerability, but only four for Connecticut voters to "untransform" Jackson and show that Dukakis could indeed compete. Party leaders emerged quickly from their shellshock; this reporter did not.

In fact, it was not until May 17 that the old crystal ball was back in working order, displaying vivid mirages. By then Bush and Dukakis had cinched the nominations and the question was their vice-presidential choices. Dealing first with the Democrats, I wrote that two months before their nominating convention "the focus in preliminary discussions (is) on Sens. Bill Bradley (D-N.J.) and John Glenn (D-Ohio) far more than on Sam Nunn (D-Ga.)."

Rereading the 1,200 words in that account, I now see that I mentioned virtually every living Democrat who might be on the ticket with Dukakis. All but one, that is: Lloyd Bentsen.

Five days later, there was another breathless bit of foresight, beginning, "Dixie Democrats are putting out the welcome mat for prospective presidential nominee Michael S. Dukakis. After hiding from their national ticket four years ago, southern Democratic officials are telling the Massachusetts governor's aides that Vice President Bush does not have their region's electoral votes locked up — unless Dukakis decides to default."

I'm sure Bush campaign manager Lee Atwater read that story, and it clearly affected his strategy. Recognizing that the odds were against Bush, Atwater largely wrote off his native South, balancing the Bush ticket with a little-known senator from northern Indiana, Dan Quayle.

I expect Atwater was astonished when the South gave all of its electoral votes to the Bush-Quayle ticket. I know I was.

The general election produced its own bumper crop of blunders, including one which Washington Post political researcher Colette T. Rhoney believes should be designated as the "goof of the year." That was the assertion that, in the first presidential debate, Michael Dukakis proved "that he could deflect George Bush's efforts to place him outside the mainstream of American politics."

That piece is a strong contender, admittedly, but there were other howlers of similar proportion during the fall, too many to chronicle here.

Let me just say that I think I'm on a roll that will carry right over into 1989. As the President-elect would say, "Read my slips."

Report Says Income Formula Inflated Poverty Rate

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Census Bureau, in an experimental study, says the nation's poverty rate in 1986 would have been significantly lower than officially reported if the government had used a broader definition of personal income.

The study assessed poverty rates under a variety of hypothetical definitions and found the reported 1986 poverty rate of 13.6 percent would have been 2 percentage points lower using a definition that excluded income taxes and payroll taxes but included non-cash government benefits not factored into the current standard.

The study also concluded that without Social Security, nearly half of the elderly would fall below the poverty line. For 1986, the poverty line was $5,701 for a single person, $5,255 for a single, elderly person, and $11,203 for a family of four.

The study was the first of a series of experimental reports compiling benefit and tax data that previously had been handled in separate reports.

It also was the first time the Census Bureau had estimated monetary values to recipients of non-cash benefits such as Medicare and Medicaid.

The government's current definition of income includes all cash pre-tax income except capital gains, including government benefits such as Social Security, veterans' benefits, unemployment and workers' compensation insurance and public assistance.

Some liberal groups have protested the use of pre-tax income for determining the poverty level, saying it failed to take into account what the individuals had left over after paying taxes.

Conservatives, on the other hand, argued that non-cash benefits — such as Medicare, Medicaid, food stamps, school-lunch and rent subsidies — should be included as income when determining the poverty level, because these programs enhance the quality of the recipients' lives.

Using the current definition, the overall national poverty rate in 1986 was 13.6 percent. Among whites it was 11 percent, among blacks 31.1 percent and among Hispanics 27.3 percent.

If the definition were amended to include non-cash benefits and capital gains, the overall poverty rate in 1986 would have been 11.6 percent, the Census Bureau reported. Among whites it would have been 9.4 percent, among blacks 25.8 percent and among Hispanics 23.5 percent.

The new study listed hypothetical poverty rates under a variety of possible income definitions, including one used in the private sector: income excluding cash-paid government benefits such as Social Security while adding employer-provided health benefits.

Comparing the poverty rate among the elderly using the current government standard and the private-sector formula shows the striking effect of Social Security.

Using the government formula, 12.4 percent of those over 65 years old lived in poverty in 1986. Under the private-sector definition that excludes Social Security, the poverty rate for that age group was 48.5 percent.

In addition to assessing the effect of various government programs and definitions of income on poverty, the study listed an index of income concentration under each experimental definition.

Under the official definition of income, the Census Bureau reported that aggregate household income in 1986 was $2.75 trillion, with a median household income of $24,897. The index of income concentration showed that the bottom 20 percent of households received 3.8 percent of total income while the top 20 percent received 46.1 percent.

If all government benefits were subtracted from the income definition and employer-paid health benefits were included, 52.4 percent of all income was received by the top 20 percent of households and just 1 percent by the bottom 20 percent.

The effect of taxes on poverty varied depending on the type of household, the study said.

Among married-couple families, for example, subtracting taxes from the current income definition increased the poverty rate from 9.4 percent to 10.6 percent among whites, from 15.8 percent to 18.5 percent among blacks and from 23.8 percent to 26.6 percent among Hispanics.

In single-parent, female-headed households, subtracting taxes increased the poverty rate among whites from 47.4 percent to 49.9 percent. For blacks, it increased from 64.7 percent to 67.9 percent and for Hispanics, the rate increased from 65 percent to 68.5 percent.

Income definitions that included all government benefits, on the other hand, produced sizeable reductions in the poverty rates although some groups still were characterized by high rates.

Couple Wins $39.6 Million Lotto Prize

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — A cancer survivor who has been using his former cigar money to buy Illinois Lotto tickets says he and his wife will use their $39.6 million winnings from a Christmas Eve jackpot to retire early to Arizona.

John Evancho and his wife Maryanne of Waukesha, Wis., said Tuesday they usually buy 20 Lotto tickets a week, but they formed a partnership with their two daughters to buy about 70 for the Illinois State Lottery's second-largest jackpot on Saturday night.

"When I found the winning ticket, I realized we had matched four of the numbers and I thought we had won 80 bucks," said Evancho, a trucking manager for a manufacturing company.

"But when I looked closely, I saw all six numbers and all I could say was, 'Oh, my God!' — I must have said it about 12 times! Now I know what it's like to go into shock."

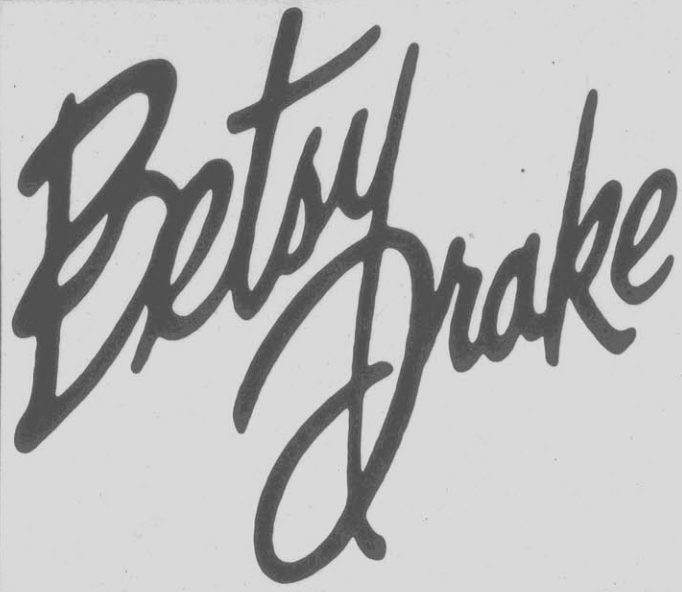

Evancho, 60, said he won the drawing on numbers he always plays, 8, 9, 27, 33, 43 and 54. They were chosen for the birthdays of his wife and daughters, his age when he learned he had throat cancer, and other personally significant numbers.

Doctors declared him cancer-free after a post-surgical exam two years ago, Evancho said, and then he started using his cigar money for the lottery.

Director Hal Ashby Dies

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Oscar-winner Hal Ashby, who directed the 1970s classics "Coming Home," "Being There" and "Harold and Maude," was remembered upon his death as "a genius for finding the humor and beauty in the most unlikely places."

Ashby died of liver cancer at age 59 at his home Tuesday as he was preparing to direct a film of Truman Capote's "In Cold Blood," said his business manager, Larry Reynolds.

Revenuer Says 'White Lightning' Coming Back

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — After several years of decline, "white lightning" is flowing into Winston-Salem by the trunkload from illicit distilleries in Wilkes and Surry counties, the city's chief revenuer says.

"There's always a demand for it. And just like drugs, as long as there's a demand for it, they'll keep supplying it," said L.G. Russell, chief of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission's law-enforcement office in Winston-Salem.

"I think it hasn't seen its peak yet," Russell said.

On Dec. 15, Russell and other agents raided a still in Wilkes County that could turn out 1,000 gallons of 100-proof corn liquor every week. In a year, the coal-fired still in the Rock Creek community could have earned $250,000 for its owners, Russell said.

In the early 1970s, when the price of sugar increased and made moonshining less profitable, many moonshiners switched to growing marijuana and trafficking in drugs, despite the tougher penalties, Russell said. Today, the price of sugar is lower and some old-timers have switched back to moonshining because it is profitable but not as risky as drugs, he said.

A gallon of white liquor costs about $2.50 to make and usually sells for about $8.25, less than half of what a gallon of cheap store-bought liquor costs, Russell said. Then there are specialty items, which command a higher price and are especially popular during the holiday season, he said.

A few months ago, Russell and his agents raided a still in northern Surry County and found a stockpile of corn liquor, rye whiskey, apple and peach brandy, peaches soaked in brandy, and moonshine made from wild grapes.

The still, hidden in some woods near the Virginia line, was uncovered by tracing moonshine from a drink house in Winston-Salem to its source, Russell said. The technique, which Russell declined to discuss in detail, led to nine stills in Wilkes and Surry counties being shut down and blown up this year, he said.

ABC agents also shut down about 40 drink houses in Winston-Salem this year, he said. Moonshine was being sold at most of the houses, as well as tax-paid liquor, beer, marijuana and cocaine, he said.

For many years, lead and other adulterants were common in moonshine, particularly liquor brewed in flat metal stills known as submarines, Russell said.

"It got such a bad reputation, they were losing sales," he said.

As a result, some moonshiners switched back to the more traditional "steamer" still and now pay more attention to quality, he said.

Russell said that in the past 10 years he has seized only one batch of "bad" moonshine: some low-proof brew to which rubbing alcohol had been added to give it kick.

In another shift back to traditional ways, some moonshiners have returned to using fruit jars instead of plastic jugs to package their wares, partly to increase the mystique that moonshine holds for some people, he said.

Making moonshine is a crime, but if a person holds a federal permit, he or she can legally distill high-proof alcohol for use as fuel. Since Congress passed the law in 1980, more than 400 permits have been issued for "gasohol" stills. But not all of that alcohol is used as fuel, Russell said.

"It's like one old fellow up in Wilkes told me: They're making it to put in the trunk, not the tank," Russell said.

Because the permit allows the holder to store his liquor legally at the still site, it is difficult to charge an unscrupulous permit holder with moonshining unless an agent catches him transporting or selling the alcohol, Russell said.

Russell, who has been chasing illegal liquor for 24 years, said he's sometimes amazed by the ingenuity of some moonshiners.

"Some of these guys could be rocket scientists," he said, chuckling.

For example, a fellow in Wilkes County built an automated still with a capacity of about 12,000 gallons. "All he had to do was put the mash in the tank. The tank had boat propellers in the side to keep the mash stirring. All he had to do was fill the jugs when it came out," he said.

Moonshine has been making a comeback for about the past three years and shows no signs of leveling off, Russell said. Some informants who used to know of only a few places to find the stuff now say it is widely available, he said.

"It's just gradually on the rise, and I think it will be for a while," he said.

Nationwide Kidney Study Involves Bowman Gray

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — Researchers at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine are participating in the largest study ever undertaken in America to determine possible links between diet, high blood pressure and chronic kidney failure.

The study, which seeks to include about 80 people from the Piedmont with kidney disease, will place some participants on low-protein diets to see if that will slow the loss of kidney function, which in most cases leads to costly dialysis procedures.

The six-year study, taking place at 15 medical centers nationally, ultimately will monitor about 1,100 people. Duke University Medical Center also is participating.

"This is the first major study to look at the prevention and treatment of chronic progressive kidney disease," said Dr. Anna Sandberg, who is coordinating the effort nationally for the National Institute of Diabetes and Digestive and Kidney Disease.

Each year, 100,000 Americans with kidney disease worsen to the point where dialysis is required. That costs Medicare and Medicaid more than $2 billion for treatments, said Dr. Vardaman Buckalew Jr., who heads a kidney research section at Bowman Gray and will coordinate the study locally.

"It's a major budgetary problem," Buckalew told The Greensboro News & Record. "The National Institutes of Health is under increasing pressure from the Congress to do something about this situation. They want to know how can we prevent all these kidneys from giving out."

Though the reasons are unclear, the problem is particularly acute in North Carolina, Buckalew said. According to the N.C. Kidney Council, the number of kidney patients per year requiring dialysis has increased dramatically in this decade — up almost 90 percent from 1979 to 1986, the latest year for which figures are available.

The study is not seeking to find the cause of kidney disease, which is largely unknown. Rather, it hopes to find simple, inexpensive ways to stabilize the disease.

Chronic progressive kidney disease gradually destroys the kidney's blood-filtering system, which is made up of thousands of tiny filtering units called nephrons. As more and more nephrons are damaged, those left intact are forced to work harder. That usually results in increased blood pressure in most patients.

Because animal studies indicate a link between high protein intake and further damage to diseased kidneys, most participants will be placed on diets that reduce the amount of protein eaten each day through foods like meats and eggs. Some, however, will follow normal protein diet that is less restrictive.

Also, medication will be administered to lower blood pressure in those who suffer from that ailment.

"We've thought for many years that high blood pressure damages the kidney, but it has never been proved that lowering the blood pressure will protect the kidney from further damage," Buckalew said. "This is the first time that this commonly accepted idea will be tested rigorously."

Lengthy Appeals Battle Looming

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Champion International Corp., could face a long struggle if it decides to appeal a Tennessee decision to deny a waiver of water-quality standards for the company's paper mill on the Pigeon River in western North Carolina.

"We could be looking at a very lengthy legal process," R. Paul Wilms, director of the state Environmental Management Division, said Tuesday.

Tennessee Gov. Ned Ray McWherter announced Friday that the Tennessee health and environment commissioner, J.W. Luna, would deny a variance that would have allowed Champion to continue exceeding the state's water quality standards.

The paper plant in Canton discharges coffee-colored wastewater into the Pigeon River, which flows into eastern Tennessee.

Linda Tidwell, a spokesman for the Tennessee Department of Health and Environment, said Tuesday that Champion had not yet been notified officially of the state's decision.

After official notification is made, she said, the company may appeal the decision to the state Water Quality Control Board. If the board denies the appeal, she said, the company could seek relief in the courts.

Charles Curtis, a spokesman for Champion, said Tuesday that the company had not decided how to proceed, but that the appeal was one alternative it was exploring. He said it would be several weeks before Champion decided on a course of action.

The paper mill was built in 1908, and Champion now employs about 2,300 people in western North Carolina and eastern Tennessee.

Tax Collection Woes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — State tax collections for November fell nearly $30 million below projections, prompting the Martin administration to prepare to slow spending by state agencies and causing new worries about next year's budget.

Revenues for the month dipped 3.8 percent below November 1987 collections, according to statistics released Tuesday by the state Department of Revenue. November collections were almost 6 percent under projections for the month.

For the first five months of the 1988-89 budget year, collections grew by only 3.5 percent above the level for the same period in the previous year — far below the projected 6.3 percent growth.

The projections are important because legislators already have appropriated money based on what they estimated would be available. If collections dip below the estimates for a full year, Gov. Jim Martin and lawmakers will have to scale down spending from the budget approved earlier this year.

"Any way you look at it, if the revenue growth stays the same way for the next seven months, we're going to be about $150 million behind," said House Speaker Liston Ramsey.

Rest Well Deserved

WILMINGTON (AP) — For 41 years, Florence Davenport has helped blind and visually impaired people in New Hanover County compete in a sighted world.

She understands their struggle and their needs only too well. She is also blind.

But Ms. Davenport has decided its time to let someone else take over. She retired in October as a social worker for the blind.

"The pressure and the paperwork had gotten to be too much for me," she said.

Her former colleagues at the Department of Social Services agree that if anyone deserves a rest, it's Ms. Davenport, who joined the department in 1947 after receiving a master's degree in social work from the University of North Carolina.

As an undergraduate, Ms. Davenport was going to major in business administration before she was diagnosed as having glaucoma, which caused her to lose her sight over a three-year period.

She said she would have stayed in business administration if she could have foreseen the technological advances that have now allowed blind people to advance in all areas.

Drinking Water

GREENSBORO (AP) — Several environmental groups have asked the Martin administration to require builders of the Randleman Lake to prepare a new environmental impact statement on the future Triad drinking water source.

The environmental impact statement completed in 1976 by the Army Corps of Engineers is "inadequate and out of date," the groups say in a letter to state Secretary of Administration James Loftin.

"I just feel like the Corps kind of did what they wanted to do and didn't look at some things they should have looked at," said Edith Coltrane, a member of the Deep River Citizens Coalition. "I think they wanted this project so bad, they've overlooked a lot of things."

The groups have asked Loftin to require the Piedmont Triad Regional Water Authority to prepare a new impact statement, and to postpone issuing state permits needed to build the lake, including authorization for the power of eminent domain and to transfer water from one basin to another.

Plane Flew Too Low

MOUNT AIRY (AP) — A small plane that crashed near the Surry County Airport on Christmas Eve, killing a Raleigh couple, may have been flying in heavy fog and nearly 600 feet lower than allowed under FAA standards for the airport, officials say.

An airport employee, who declined to be identified, told the Winston-Salem Journal the Cessna 210 was approaching the airport at 1,600 to 1,700 feet above ground. Standards established by the Federal Aviation Administration say planes should approach the airport at no less than 2,180 feet, the employee said.

The plane crashed into a mountain bank Saturday night, killing Dr. William Riley Spencer, 55, a dentist from Raleigh. Also killed was his fiancée, Cynthia Lou Dockery, 35, a real-estate broker in Raleigh and former resident of Dobson.

Kidd Brewer Pardoned

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin hand-delivered a pardon to longtime Democratic activist Kidd Brewer, a onetime gubernatorial candidate who served a prison term in 1963 after being convicted of influence peddling.

The pardon for Brewer, 80, of Raleigh, was signed Dec. 21, said John Hunter, the governor's legal counsel.

Martin delivered the pardon that day, saying he had brought Brewer a Christmas present, Brewer said Tuesday.

"I didn't have to look at it very much before I saw what it was," Brewer said. "I shook his hand and then said, 'That's not enough,' and I hugged him and my wife said, 'That's still not enough,' and she kissed him."

"And he went on to the basketball game and we sat back down. And that's about it," Brewer said.

Brewer was sentenced in 1963 to 18 months in prison and served 4½ months before being paroled in April 1964.

Brewer represented firms that supplied road signs for interstate highways and was charged with paying a state Highway Commission engineer to rig the specifications to favor those companies he represented.

Brewer made unsuccessful bids for lieutenant governor in 1956, governor in 1964 and the Court of Appeals in 1968.

Employee Testing

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Beginning Jan. 1, prospective employees of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. will be required to submit to urinalysis before they are hired, company officials say.

Rick Rountree, a spokesman for the tobacco company, said Tuesday the testing would be required of nearly every person to whom a job offer is extended. The only exceptions, he said, would be temporary employees and some sales people outside the Winston-Salem offices.

The decision, which Rountree said was made by senior management at the tobacco company, will not affect current employees.

"We've been looking at this for several months now," Rountree said. "At least six months."

Rountree said that, after the decision has been made to offer a job, company officials will require the prospective employee to submit to urinalysis to search for evidence of substance abuse.

Reaction To Car Listing Fine Mixed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — A new state law that fines people $100 for failing to list their automobiles for taxation is popular with officials of some counties that are collecting money from delinquent taxpayers, but critics say the law is confusing and difficult to enforce.

"Some counties didn't want the havoc it's created," said Burke County Assessor Nancy Bost. "I can't feel sorry for people who have gone year after year after year and not listed their vehicles. It's just sad that the people who have innocently forgotten got trapped in this."

But other counties, including Burke, Cumberland, Forsyth, Guilford, New Hanover and Wake, meticulously researched tax listings, and some had the state check vehicle registration forms. They have collected hundreds of thousands of dollars in fines and say the law is working.

In Wake County, Assessor Lonnie Bost has charged about $1.2 million in $100 fines and expects to collect more. He said the law "provided substantial improvement in the listings."

The law, which took effect last January, fines people for falsely certifying on a state Department of Motor Vehicles registration card that they listed motor vehicles or trailers on county tax forms.

Local tax assessors had determined that North Carolina counties were losing about $15 million a year in unpaid taxes. Up to 15 percent of the state's 8 million motor vehicles were not being listed on the January tax forms, they said.

Counties already were fining people a small penalty — 10 percent of the car tax — for not listing their vehicles on time. But the new law imposed an additional fine.

"The original intent was to get those people," Rep. Robert McAlister, D-Rockingham, the bill's sponsor, said in an interview published Tuesday in The Charlotte Observer. "Normally, what we do if someone breaks the law in North Carolina, we fine them."

Some county commissioners and tax officials are trying to get the $100 penalty revoked.

Wayne and Phyllis Ross of Burke County last week appealed the $100 fine tacked onto the $16.83 tax levied against their 1984 Escort. They said their omission was an oversight. County commissioners agreed the high penalty was unfair, but demanded that the couple pay.

"That's what you get for being a faithful taxpayer," Mrs. Ross said.

The law allowed various interpretations, and many local officials say they cannot enforce the fine without seeing the actual DMV renewal cards, which are in Raleigh.

Burke County has fined about 3,500 people for $350,000; Guilford County has fined about 14,000 people; and Cumberland County has fined about 6,000.

In Mecklenburg County, tax officials did not try to determine how many of the 53,000 vehicles listed late had been falsely certified on registration forms.

"In Mecklenburg County, it's a volume problem," said Tax Administrator John Petoskey. "Our interpretation is, from the available records, we couldn't do it equitably."

Because of problems interpreting the new law, the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners and various county assessors and tax collectors proposed a different bill to repeal the $100 penalty and get rid of all county tax listings of motor vehicles.

The Legislature's Property Tax System Study Committee has approved the change and plans to propose the new bill to the General Assembly in January.

Under the proposal, citizens would renew their registration with the DMV. Then the department would send registration lists to the counties. Local officials would levy motor vehicle taxes based on that list.

Hero Of Vietnam War May Finally Get A Monument

By Nicholas K. Geranios
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

YAKIMA, Wash. — World War I hero Alvin York has a statue on the grounds of the Tennessee state Capitol. His life, like that of World War II hero Audie Murphy, was made into a Hollywood movie.

Joe Hooper has nothing. The most decorated U.S. soldier of the Vietnam War lies nearly forgotten near the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington National Cemetery, another symbol of a war the nation would just as soon forget.

In Washington state, where Hooper grew up and lived much of his life, there is no individual monument to his memory and the deeds that won him 37 citations, including the Medal of Honor.

Plans to rename various public buildings or parks after Hooper have been in the works for years. It isn't that anyone is opposed to them, but more often they seem to stall for lack of interest.

That may soon change. Rep. Rod Chandler, R-Wash., plans to introduce a bill in January to rename the substance-abuse wing of the Veterans Administration hospital in Seattle after the man who won the nation's highest military honor, plus two Silver Stars and 11 Purple Hearts.

The office of Sen. Brock Adams, D-Wash., is leading a separate drive to get the VA to do the same thing, without Congress having to pass a bill.

And some efforts have started in Moses Lake, where Hooper grew up, to rename a city park or erect a memorial to him.

Why has it taken so long? "The unpopularity of the war has shifted over to a bias against the individuals who served in the war," speculated Jim Gunsolus, the Adams aide working on the Hooper effort.

Part of the reason may have been Hooper himself, who drank his way out of the military and a variety of jobs after the war, failed to play the part of war hero for the government, and died from a fall in a motel room in Kentucky in 1979 at age 40.

Donald Ross, a Medal of Honor historian in Port Orchard who knew Hooper well, said a small number of recipients are "unable to live and honor the Medal of Honor."

"He was one of them," said Ross, who served at Pearl Harbor and is a Medal of Honor winner himself. "It was too much of a load for him."

Another friend said Hooper couldn't bear what he witnessed as an employee of the VA hospital in Seattle.

"It just got too much for him and he couldn't stand all the misery around here," said Joe Feldman of the American Legion in Seattle.

Hooper's peacetime life was in sharp contrast to his 30 months in Vietnam.

The Medal of Honor citation, covering six hours of combat near Hue on Feb. 21, 1968, relates astonishing exploits — killing two dozen enemy, rescuing six of his men and suffering seven wounds.

Hooper, then a 29-year-old sergeant, crossed a river through enemy fire and with his men overran several bunkers. He then ran into heavy gunfire to help his wounded men, suffering serious wounds but refusing medical treatment.

Then, he singlehandedly stormed three enemy bunkers, destroying them with hand grenades and rifle fire, and also killing two enemy soldiers who had attacked his unit's chaplain.

Leading his men forward, Hooper destroyed three buildings housing enemy riflemen, and killed a North Vietnamese officer with his bayonet.

His initial wounds now compounded by grenade fragments, Hooper raced down a small trench, hurling hand grenades to destroy four enemy bunkers.

He then ran across an open field, still under enemy fire, to rescue a wounded man. Upon reaching that man, Hooper was attacked by an enemy soldier and killed him with a pistol.

He then killed three North Vietnamese officers with rifle fire, reorganized his men, and did not consent to evacuation until the following morning.

What the citation doesn't say is that 189 U.S. soldiers began the river crossing and Hooper was among just 14 who survived.

Hospitalized for his wounds, he broke out of the hospital to return to his unit. In the next two days, Hooper and 10 other soldiers ambushed 600 enemy fighters, earning him a Silver Star and another bullet wound.

Hooper was discharged shortly after, but found civilian life boring and re-enlisted a few months later.

The Army, which had been unable to locate him after the discharge, awarded Hooper the Medal of Honor and he became a celebrity.

He served in Los Angeles as a recruiter, and in the Panama Canal Zone as a courier. But things went badly, and he opted to rejoin the 101st Airborne in Vietnam.

He won a second Silver Star and more medals, received a battlefield commission to lieutenant, and ultimately returned to the United States to work at a basic training company.

But he didn't like being an officer and eventually resigned, ending 18 years of service that began in 1956 when he enlisted in the Navy.

He returned to the Yakima area, where friends said he was often drinking and carrying a pistol. He also was arthritic and suffered 60 percent disability because of his wounds.

Friends tried to help Hooper with jobs and support, but he often failed to show up for work before his fatal fall in a Louisville motel room on May 6, 1979, Ross said.

"I know it was alcohol-related," Ross said.

Hooper, who left behind a wife and a daughter, was buried at Arlington with full military honors. His name was put on a plaque honoring all Washington Medal of Honor winners at the state capital in Olympia.

Other than that, he was mostly forgotten. Both York and Murphy, the most decorated U.S. serviceman of World War II, have VA hospitals named after them.

"People look at Audie Murphy and people like that and these guys are national heroes," said Steve Witter, a Chandler spokesman. "It's appropriate that (Hooper) be recognized for what he did."

New Crack Found in Boeing 727

By Dan Sewell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Inspections of an Eastern Airlines Boeing 727s found a fuselage crack in "roughly the same area" where a 14-inch hole tore open in another plane, forcing an emergency landing, the airline said today.

Eastern officials in Boston said the Boeing 727 was grounded for repairs at Logan International Airport after company inspectors discovered the 3-inch crack in the fuselage Monday night.

The airline ordered the inspections of its Boeing 727 fleet after a 14-inch hole tore open in the fuselage of an Atlanta-bound 727 on Monday, forcing it to make an emergency landing in Charleston, W.Va., when its cabin depressurized. "We're doing it on our own," spokeswoman Karen Ceremusak said from Eastern's headquarters in Miami. "It's just as a precautionary measure following yesterday's incident. ... We know that Eastern Airlines is safe. We hope that professionalism will prevail."

On Tuesday, federal officials investigating the forced landing of Atlanta-bound Flight 251 said the plane had problems maintaining cabin pressure shortly after takeoff from Rochester, N.Y., before the roof ripped open.

"By the time they reached 31,000 feet, they were able to stabilize the pressure," although the hole in the fuselage soon developed, said National Transportation Safety Board spokesman Ted Lopatkiewicz.

There was no indication what caused the initial problem, he said. A 5-inch crack had been found on the fuselage in an inspection in July 1986, although the plane had been cleared to fly in an inspection as recently as September, Federal Aviation Administration officials said.

On orders from Eastern, mechanics spent Monday night and Tuesday inspecting 17 of the airline's 100-series 727s and 28 of the 200-series model.

"During the inspection of the 727s up in Boston, we uncovered a 727 that had a 3-inch crack in the crown," said airline spokesman Robin Matell, who added that the crack was in "roughly the same area" as the hole in the plane in Charleston.

Executives of the financially troubled airline insist their safety record is one of the industry's best, and blame disgruntled labor union officials for suggesting Eastern has a safety problem. The airline's unions complained this year that Eastern employees were being pressured to bypass safety procedures.

However, an investigation by the FAA, which included inspection of every Eastern plane, reported the airline was safe, but expressed concern over labor-management strife that could have "an adverse impact on the public safety."

On Sunday, an Eastern A300 bound for Newark, N.J., had to return to Miami International Airport because of an engine problem. On Tuesday, a Fort Lauderdale-bound Eastern A300 turned back to New York's LaGuardia airport after a problem with a door prevented the plane from being properly pressurized.

Two NTSB representatives from Washington were in Charleston today to examine the plane used on Flight 251. It could be six months before a final determination is made on what happened, said NTSB investigator Pamela Kleckner.

As federal investigators began the investigation, they also said:

— Records for the past five years show the plane had made seven unscheduled landings in the last five years before this week, but none could be called an emergency landing.

— The section of the fuselage that developed the hole was a replacement part, not the original skin of the plane, which is about 20 years old.

— The piece that peeled away would be taken to a laboratory for metallurgical tests.

Jet Passenger Held After Bomb Threat

By Tom Coyne
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — A literature professor aboard an American Airlines jet was arrested on charges of issuing a bomb threat that forced the Boeing 767 to make an emergency landing at Albuquerque International Airport.

Flight 240 bound for Dallas from San Francisco with 198 people aboard was evacuated on a remote stretch of runway Tuesday, but searchers using bomb-sniffing dogs found no bomb or weapon, authorities said.

"The initial investigation revealed that a passenger was in possession of a note indicating there were bombs planted on the aircraft," FBI agent James W. Nelson said in a statement.

"The passenger gave the note to a flight attendant, who relayed the information to the pilot. ... The FBI, after a lengthy interview of the passenger, took him into custody."

The suspect was identified as Peter M. Canning, 40, a literature professor at the University of California at Berkeley. A colleague, Dr. Avital Ronell, said in a telephone interview from Berkeley that Canning denied the charges over the phone Tuesday night.

"He didn't do it. He handed a note that dropped on his lap from the stewardess' tray," Ms. Ronell said. "The stewardess was walking by, and it dropped on his lap."

Canning's girlfriend, Rhonda Lieberman, said from Berkeley that he had been flying to New Orleans for a convention of the Modern Language Association.

"This sounds like a major misunderstanding," said Ms. Lieberman. "It's an absolute disgrace. I can't believe they are doing this to him."

Canning was taken to the Bernalillo County jail, where he was held for investigation of charges pertaining to destruction of aircraft and bomb threats made aboard aircraft, Nelson said.

Canning was scheduled for an initial appearance before a U.S. magistrate today, and bail was to be set then, Nelson said. If convicted, he could face up to five years in jail, a $5,000 fine or both, Nelson said.

American spokesman Jim Brown said nobody was injured in the incident, and the plane resumed its flight about 4½ hours after it landed.

Calloway Hospitalized

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Jazz great Cab Calloway, one of the last of the great swing-band musicians, flew home after collapsing during a show in Tokyo and was hospitalized here early today.

The "King of Hi-de-ho," who turned 81 on Christmas Day, collapsed from exhaustion during intermission at a Dec. 21 show and was taken to Tokyo Hospital, said his spokesman, Stan Scotland, who was with him in Japan at the time.

After being treated there for a week, Calloway flew to White Plains on Tuesday "to be near his home," Scotland said.

Palestinians Strike; Curfew Set

By Sergei Shargorodsky
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Palestinians staged a general strike today and the army imposed curfews on four refugee camps in the occupied Gaza Strip, confining 150,000 Arabs to their homes, Arab reporters and the army said.

Throughout the occupied lands, Palestinians shut stores and schools and paralyzed public transportation as part of the strike.

Soldiers patrolling the territories stepped up searches and random checks of Arab residents, according to news reports from Gaza City and the West Bank city of Nablus.

The curfews and increased security followed anti-Israeli incidents

Tuesday in which one Arab was shot to death and at least 19 wounded.

High school girls took to the streets today in Nablus, marching around the center of town chanting, "With our blood and soul, we will revenge our Palestinian martyrs," an Arab reporter said.

At the entrance to the West Bank town of Bethlehem, soldiers used computerized lists of tax evaders to stop local cars and confiscate vehicles whose drivers owed back taxes, an Arab reporter said. The soldiers told drivers the cars would be returned on payment of back taxes.

Palestinians have waged a tax boycott as part of their uprising against Israel's 21-year occupation.

Officials at nearby Ramallah Hospital reported that 25-year-old villager Mohammed Omar Ahmed

Khalil died of gunshot wounds received Tuesday.

The army said it learned of the death through hospital reports but was having trouble determining the circumstances because relatives took Khalil's body from the hospital.

The army customarily takes the bodies of Palestinians killed in the uprising for autopsy, and usually orders the family to conduct a quiet burial to avoid nationalistic protests. Palestinians oppose the practice and try to bring a "shahid" (martyr) to an immediate burial.

At least 337 Palestinians have been killed in the uprising since it began Dec. 8, 1987. Fourteen Israelis have also died.

In Tuesday's clashes, troops shot and wounded at least 19 Arabs, hospital officials said. The army confirmed 10 wounded.

The casualties included Mahmoud Saqer, 16, who was reported in critical condition after being struck with a bullet in the left eye during a riot in West Bank's Balata refugee camp, said officials at Nablus' Al Itihad Hospital.

In Gaza Strip's Nuseirat refugee camp, eight youths were shot in clashes with troops. After the first two were wounded, hundreds of residents poured into the narrow alleys of the shantytown to protest the casualties, said Arab witnesses and hospital officials.

Troops responded with tear-gas, rubber bullets and then plastic bullets, witnesses said, adding that six more youths were then wounded, including one hit in his chest and face.

Dissident Sends Poignant Letters From Prison

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — In poignant letters from prison, one of China's most famous dissidents sent his wife kisses and advised his sickly daughter to get more sun and exercise.

"Did you have a happy birthday?" Xu Wenli wrote his daughter in one of five letters obtained by The Associated Press on Tuesday.

In another, he wrote gleefully: "I had a great weekend because I got six letters."

Xu's letters, dated since April and sent to his family in Beijing from Beijing's No. 1 Prison, are his only contact with the outside since he was barred from having visitors in 1985, four years into a 15-year sentence for counterrevolutionary activity.

Xu, 43, has spent much of the time in solitary confinement.

The former electrician was among the leaders of China's 1978-79 Democracy Wall Movement, during which Deng Xiaoping, newly in power, tolerated unprecedented open calls for multiparty democracy and other reforms.

But in early 1979, his position in the ruling Communist Party consolidated, Deng ordered a crackdown on the dozens of unofficial journals that had sprung up, and he ended the Democracy Wall itself, a brick wall in Beijing where outspoken posters went up daily.

Xu mimeographed the underground magazine April Fifth Forum in his home, in which he argued that a multiparty system was not anti-Marxist and would help the socialist cause. He was arrested in 1981 and convicted the following year.

His letters, addressed to his wife Wang Tong and 16-year-old daughter, Xu Jingjing, said nothing about his own condition. Instead, he sent a steady stream of questions and advice.

To the daughter, who has been ill for several years with a bad back, he wrote on Oct. 28: "You should improve your daily nutrition, exercise daily and make a study plan. After you make your plans tell me or I will worry."

Artist's Portrait Work Begins Long Before Her Brush Hits Canvas

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DOTHAN, Ala. — Her subjects have included such varied personalities as her three children, the American ambassador to France and the queen of Sweden.

But all of the subjects shared one thing from Dothan artist Dale Kennington. They each had her total attention for hours and days before she took brush in hand to paint their portraits.

Her brush captures what no mirror can reflect nor any photograph reveal. But her brush is only the conduit for the portrait that has already been painted in her mind.

The internationally recognized artist said her visions of the subjects she paints are created long before she applies the first color on a canvas.

There have now been close to 400 individuals for whom Mrs. Kennington has transposed her visions from mind to brush to canvas.

But regardless of the subject, Mrs. Kennington's vision of each is painted for posterity only after she has, as she expressed it, "telescoped time." She described this telescoping as her way of meshing a lifetime of knowledge about her subjects into a comparatively few days in which she eats, visits, plays and talks with them prior to painting.

Not only are the faces and forms of her subjects important for one of Mrs. Kennington's portraits, but the lifestyle, hobbies, disposition, desires and aspirations of the people are also to be painted.

"A good portrait should reflect more than the likeness of a person. It should include their lifestyle, personality and the era in which they live," she said.

"I may spend two hours playing on the floor with a three-year-old," she said. Or in the case of a Houston physician, she accompanied him on his rounds and watched him in surgery.

While the vivacious middle-age mother of three and grandmother of one did not begin her accomplished career as a portrait painter until about 15 years ago, her training began in her youth at the University of Alabama as an art major. The decision for that academic specialty came about as a result of deciding what she did not want to do rather than a desire to paint.

"I had to pick a major and I didn't want to be a teacher or a nurse," Mrs. Kennington said.

Mrs. Kennington now travels one-third of the year, visiting her subjects. She maintains studios in Dothan and Atlanta.

The artist, who is wife of retired veterinarian Don Kennington, said not all of her subjects have been human.

Alabama artist Dale Kennington may spend days with a subject before painting the first stroke

When she was preparing to paint a portrait of Sweden's Queen Silvia and her three children, Crown Princess Victoria, Prince Carl Philip and Princess Madelyn, Sweden's king mentioned that he might like one of the royal dogs included in the painting. Consequently Mrs. Kennington took several photographs of the king's spaniel.

The portrait was ultimately painted without including the dog; however, Mrs. Kennington later received a letter requesting that she paint a portrait of the animal.

But the finished product is no ordinary painting. It will be hung in the royal household as the final portrait on a wall that displays the collection of previous dogs owned by ancestors of the Swedish royal family.

Berry College Has Tradition Of Hard Work

Students Get Degrees, Certificates Of Work

MT. BERRY, Ga. — This is the home of the largest campus in the United States, 28,000-acre Berry College.

Twice the size of Manhattan, the school has irregular-shaped boundaries running 15 miles in one direction, 12 in the other. Those who tour the campus are given a tape to play on the 16-mile route. Some have driven its back roads for two days and never touched the same road twice.

The entire Berry campus, dotted with lakes, is a wildlife sanctuary with more than 4,000 deer, hundreds of wild turkeys, fox, swans and a wealth of other birds and animals. Much of the campus is a forest preserve.

"This is Georgia's best-kept secret," said Gloria M. Shatto, 57, the school's president for the past eight years. Located on the outskirts of Rome in the northwest corner of Georgia, Berry is a liberal arts school that's big in size and small in enrollment — 1,810 students. Yet scholastically it consistently ranks among the top small liberal arts colleges in the nation. In a recent evaluation by U.S. News & World Report, for example, Berry placed fifth.

The average Scholastic Aptitude Test score for entering freshmen this year was 1,049 — 145 points above the national average, 201 points above the Georgia average.

Berry is also one of about a dozen work colleges in the country. Along with diplomas, 90 percent of the graduates receive Certificates of Work, noting they worked at least 10 hours a week, usually at a variety of jobs.

"Work has always been an integral part of the educational process at Berry," explained John Heneisen, 45, Berry's dean of work. "We encourage, but do not force students to work on campus in addition to their studies."

The college pays $3 million a year in wages to students who work at 120 job classifications. Some are groundskeepers, carpenters, mechanics, electricians, painters, foresters. Others run a cable TV company, a dairy with 200 cows, care for 750 head of beef, or work as research assistants, secretaries, switchboard operators.

Still others hand-craft clothing sold in a school gift shop, make and repair furniture for campus buildings, run school cafeterias and residence halls.

"Our young men and women come from affluent families, from welfare families and everything in between," Heneisen said. "Berry is a great leveler. Learning the value of work is for everyone."

With diplomas, Berry graduates earned work certificates saying they worked at least 10 hours weekly

Berry College traces its beginning to a Sunday afternoon in 1900. It was Spring and 34-year-old Martha Berry, the daughter of a wealthy plantation owner, sat alone reading in a log cabin near her Possum Trot home. Looking up from her book, she saw three mountain boys peering at her through a window.

"Where do you live? What are your names?" she asked, as she invited them into her cabin.

"I'm Jed," said the oldest. "This is Adam, and this is Least'un. When he come there was so many of us, Ma couldn't think of no more names, so we just called him Least'un." They lived nearby in Trapp Holler at the foot of Lavender Mountain.

Like nearly all of the children in the area, they could neither read nor write. At the time, there were no schools in this part of Georgia. Noting their curiosity, Martha Berry read to them that afternoon.

The following Sunday the boys were back, their sisters and brothers in tow. On subsequent Sundays, they showed up with their mother and father and soon with neighboring families. All wanted to be read to by the woman they called "The Sunday Lady of Possum Trot."

Berry opened a boarding school for boys in 1902, combining education with vocational training. The boys worked the plantation to earn their keep and education. Seven years later she started a girls' school.

In time, the Berry schools became elementary and high schools, a junior college in 1926, a four-year college in 1930. Berry's goal was to instill her students with a belief in the importance of work, their studies and faith in God. Eventually she donated to the college the plantation and Oak Hill, her Greek revival antebellum mansion built in 1847.

Through the 1940s, the schools were self-sufficient. Students grew crops, raised poultry, cared for beef and dairy herds, and ran a cannery. They grew cotton and made their own clothing on looms. They harvested trees to construct and heat buildings. They built dams and reservoirs and erected a giant wheel and grist mill to grind corn and grain.

In the 1930s, high school and college students fired their own bricks and built several Georgian-style buildings, including a three-story science hall, gymnasium, residence halls, industrial shops, a large dairy complex and a 1,000-seat Christopher Wren-style church.

Hearing about Berry's remarkable school, Theodore Roosevelt came to visit. Andrew Carnegie was so impressed that he started the Berry Endowment with a $50,000 gift. Other industrialists added to the fund.

Henry Ford became the largest benefactor. He and his wife, Clara, first visited the school in 1923. Though Ford disliked most institutions of higher learning and the things they taught, he liked Berry's emphasis on work and practical learning.

"I felt Martha Berry could make better use of some of my money than I could myself," said Ford, who gave nearly $5 million for campus improvements.

Employing stone masons from Italy, he constructed a complex of Gothic buildings patterned after England's Oxford University, including residence and dining halls, classrooms, offices, auditorium and gymnasium. He also purchased additional land, built a large mountain reservoir, and gave the school a fleet of tractors.

When Martha Berry died on Feb. 27, 1942, Ford was one of many notables at her funeral. She is buried on campus.

The high school and elementary schools were discontinued a number of years ago, except for the Berry College Laboratory School, a teachers' demonstration school for 110 kindergarten through fifth-grade students. Today, Berry College consists of the original log cabin campus, the main campus, the Ford quadrangle and the mountain campus.

The mountain campus, formerly the high school, provides housing for 110 students on full, four-year scholarships sponsored by Truett Cathy's Chick-fil-A, a chain of fast-food outlets in 35 states.

There are 1,600 acres of pasture land on campus for the beef and dairy herds, 1,100 acres of crop and grain to feed the cattle, and the remainder forest and wilderness area.

"The land is our endowment in addition to our $60 million endowment fund," President Shatto said.

Cartoon Video Helps Teach Values To Children

By Peggy Fikac
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN — As a parent who returned to work six weeks after her daughter's birth, Karen Huybrechts saw the need for a different way to teach values to children who spend more time at daycare than on their mothers' laps.

So Huybrechts and her husband developed a video — with original music and animated characters — to instill the values of cooperation, self-worth, politeness, self-control, dependability, loyalty and perseverance.

The videos, distributed nationally, have sold more than 50,000 copies for use in classrooms, daycare centers and homes so far, Huybrechts says. A pilot television program also has been broadcast on cable.

The Huybrechts say they are launching a video curriculum with Scholastic Inc., with editions for preschool and for kindergarten through third grade.

"The parents traditionally in our country have instilled in children their value system," Huybrechts says. "They provide the emotional support and teach them the social skills they need."

But 10 million children under age 6 now are in single-parent homes or in homes where both parents work, she says. Teachers have told her they are expected to teach morals and ethics but have few tools to help them.

The video curriculum kit — including the music video, audio cassette, story cards and teachers' guide — relates to lessons normally taught in preschool and the early grades, Huybrechts says.

For example, teachers can assign third-graders to write a news story about one cartoon segment showing a group of ants putting out a fire.

The same segment — which features the "Andrew Sisters" trio singing about cooperation — can be used to teach fire safety.

"It crosses over into everything from social studies to language arts, dramatic play, music and movement and arts and crafts activities," Huybrechts says. The curriculum is unusual because it specifically "deals with behavior development, social skills and emotional development," she says.

The Huybrechts established their production company, UMA Mirage Productions of Austin, in 1984. Karen Huybrechts is president and producer. Her husband, Francois, a symphony orchestra conductor, is music director.

More than $1 million was invested in the 24-minute "Watchkins" video, Karen says. By comparison, a regular half-hour Saturday morning cartoon may cost up to $300,000 to produce, she says.

The difference is quality, she says. The animation, aimed at children aged 2 to 8, used 16 to 20 drawings per second, compared with as few as six in many Saturday morning cartoons.

The pilot TV program featured Winnie and Wally Watchkins — round, fuzzy-looking animated creatures who live inside a book. It also included sunflower puppets named Sol and Flora, and child actors.

The musical segments of the video include a variety of animated characters. Among them — besides the Andrew Sisters — are a gluttonous billy goat who learns self-control after eating too many green apples and a frog who admonishes a rude upstart of his species in a Leon Redbone-like song.

Francois Huybrechts wrote the music, each song with a different style, including big band, salsa, bluegrass, country and rock-and-roll. Of seven musical vignettes on the video, five are from the pilot TV program.

"I wanted each one (song) to be quite distinct and different," he says. "I wanted to make sure the music was sophisticated enough for an adult listener to get something out of it."

Huybrechts' wife developed the Watchkins concept, and she worked on the story and lyrics with six staff members. The company hires freelancers, including musicians and animators, for its large projects.

Dear Abby

Thank-You Notes A Waste, She Says

Dear Abby: I am a mother who did not teach her children to write thank-you notes. Why? Because my mother didn't teach me to write thank-you notes. I asked her why, and she said because most people didn't have money for stationery and postage during the Depression. A verbal thank-you was considered sufficient.

Where do the snobbish etiquette people get the idea that a written thank-you is better than a spoken one?

I disagree strongly with the grandmother who refused to give her grandchildren any more presents because they didn't write thank-you notes. If she wants to know if they received her present, she should phone them up and ask them. Then, if they didn't say thank you, she would have a legitimate complaint.

Jesus was not thanked by nine of the 10 lepers he healed. Did he stop healing lepers? No!

I give presents because I love people. I neither expect nor desire thanks. A written thank-you is a waste of time and money. —
Midwestern Grandmother

Dear Grandmother: The number of readers who agree with you surprised and dismayed me! As for the story about Jesus and the lepers, according to "Good News for Modern Man" (the New Testament in today's English) published by the American Bible Society: When Jesus healed 10 lepers and only one thanked him, he said, "There were 10 men made clean — where are the (other) nine?" So obviously Jesus kept track of those who thanked him and those who did not. Should a Midwestern grandmother do less?

Dear Abby: Concerning the use of live animals for medical research, I would like to offer the following information:

Today's advanced technologies have brought viable alternatives to using animals for research. Science has shown that much animal experimentation is not only duplicative and unproductive (two-thirds of biomedical experimentation is unpublished and therefore useless), but is also old-fashioned and should be phased out because up-to-date, sophisticated methods of biomedical research are available for use right now.

Computer, mathematical and mechanical models can be used to simulate many physiological systems. In-vitro research utilizes cell tissue and organ cultures, bacteria and other micro-organisms. Chemical and physical systems such as enzymes, artificial membranes and robots serve as alternatives. Even plants make useful and inexpensive research tools.

These are the procedures that will give the most benefits to both people and animals because they are more accurate and reliable than animal experimentation, and eliminate needless cruelty. They also can save the taxpayers a bundle. —
Cares For Both Animals And People

Dear Cares: Well said. Thank you.

Bomb Said Cause Of Pan Am Jet Disaster

heat damage on parts of a cargo bay's plastic lining, caused most probably by an explosion among luggage.

"One investigator indicated that the cargo bay lining was the most significant find," the newspaper said. "It is made of kevlar, an extremely strong but lightweight polymer compound ideally suited to aircraft construction."

"The signs of heat damage were clearly evident but it will be left to the scientists at the Ministry of Defense's Royal Armaments Research and Development Establishment at Fort Halstead in Kent (southeast England) to prove that the damage was caused by a bomb."

Michael Yardley, a terrorism expert and author, told the domestic news agency Press Association that "We can be 99 percent certain that it was a bomb."

"My guess is that it was a large device, probably 10 to 20 kilos (22 to 44 pounds) of a plastic explosive like Semtex," said Yardley, who is not involved with the investigation.

"A bomb leaves a telltale signature which will show up quite clearly in forensic tests. It should be possible to identify the specific type of explosives used, the size of the bomb and its position in the aircraft."

Semtex is a Czechoslovakian-made plastic explosive that is lightweight, odorless and hard to detect. Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi is believed to have obtained large quantities of Semtex, which is used for military and industrial purposes.

On Monday, Britain's chief investigator, Michael Charles, said in a statement that experts at Fort Halstead were examining a suitcase and an unspecified amount of wreckage for signs of an explosion.

The Times account today quoted unidentified experts as saying that that suitcase and others recovered Tuesday were ripped by metal fragments. It also quoted them as saying some passengers' bodies contained slivers of metal.

"Experts believe that the damage and injuries are incompatible with a catastrophic structural failure on the jet, the other possible cause of the disaster," the newspaper reported.

Charles said Monday, however, that structural damage had not been ruled out as a cause of the disaster.

The town's tribute on Tuesday to the dead appeared to be spontaneous. Reporters, who are briefed two or three times daily in Lockerbie, had only about a half-hour notice of the move.

The convoy for the coffins began at a warehouse, now pressed into use as a chapel of rest. An honor guard included police, mountain rescue teams with their dogs, local officials, and Pan Am flight attendants.

As a police motorcycle led the big white refrigerator van past the town hall, the crowd surged forward.

Some women wept, and others bowed their heads as the van rolled slowly by. One man saluted and another raised his hand in a gesture of parting.

The only sound on High Street, as the main street is known, was a squeaky axle on the trailer.

Residents stood silently for a couple minutes, then melted into the night. A cold rain began to fall.

Kennedy, the local police spokesman, said it was not known when the next bodies would depart, but the pace is expected to accelerate in coming days.

He identified the five Americans as Kenneth Raymond Garczynski, 37, of North Brunswick, N.J.; Om Dixit, 55, of Fairborn, Ohio; his wife, Shanti Dixit, 53; and their two grandchildren, Suruchi Rattan, 3, and her 2-year-old brother Anmol, of Warren, Mich. The children's mother, Garima, 29, was also aboard the plane but her body apparently has not been identified.

Cable Charges Rise

subscribers in Charlotte and offers WTBS and WGN in its package. Time Inc. also owns local cable companies in Gastonia and other smaller cities outside Charlotte.

Edwards said he could not compare the price of Greenville Cable with services in other cities because he was not familiar with their past rates, channel lineups or the types of business operations in other cities.

In 1985, Greenville Cable combined a two-tiered system and raised the price to $13 a month, he said. In 1987, the price was increased to $15.

The main reason cable prices rise, he said, is because programming is becoming much more expensive. Programming costs jumped 34 percent this year and are expected to rise again in 1989, as networks such as USA purchase rights to popular syndicated re-runs like "Miami Vice" and ESPN adds professional football, and possibly baseball.

After surveying the 15,000 customers in Greenville and surrounding townships, Greenville Cable dropped the PTL network and added the new Turner Network Television, which runs classic movies continuously.

Greenville Cable serves 51 percent of the homes in the market and the survey showed viewers wanted old movies added to the package without having to purchase one of the premium channels such as HBO or Cinemax, he said.

According to the survey, viewers showed almost no interest in receiving independent stations WKFT of Fayetteville or WFLD of Durham, both of which carry selected Charlotte Hornets games. No station in the Greenville market airs the Hornets games. WKFT also plans to carry championship games of state high school sporting events; Greenville Cable aired the state high school football championship this year on its local access channel.

The survey also showed many viewers want WOR or WGN, Edwards said, but federal copyright laws make it extremely expensive for a cable company to offer more than two superstations, unless the company acquired the stations before 1982. Greenville Cable offers WTBS and WTTG.

Congress also passed a law this year that may make superstations even more unattractive, Edwards said. Local affiliates may now sign exclusive contracts with syndicated programmers and bar another station in the market from showing the same program.

For example, if a local station shows "The Andy Griffith Show," it may sign an exclusive contract with the syndicator. If a superstation from New York or Chicago also airs "Andy Griffith," the cable company will have to black out the show from the superstation. With no alternative programming, that would leave a blank screen, which is not good business when paying a bundle to carry a superstation.

In addition to negotiating a contract with the specific station, a cable company would have to pay about $200,000 a year to add a third superstation, Edwards said.

"If the exclusionary (rule) is really going to be enforced, it would not really be beneficial to import distant signals that would be blacked out part of the time," Edwards said.

The company is working with the city of Greenville to renegotiate its franchise agreement, which expires in August 1991. The company has had a non-exclusive contract since 1976 — which means another company could offer cable services in the area — and will likely have another non-exclusive contract, Edwards said.

The Greenville Citizens Advisory Committee on Cable TV, chaired by Andy Chused of Greenville, has hired the consulting firm of Rice, Williams Associates of Washington, D.C., to assist in the negotiations.

Chamber Plans Told

ville during the first week of March and the formation of a Chamber Human Relations Committee.

"The purpose of the human relations committee is to expand a communications network to reach out to all the elements of the business community and to try to develop a common focus on the issues that address the business community and the county in general," McCoy said.

Also planned during 1989 is sponsorship of a reception in Raleigh for state cabinet members and the General Assembly and the implementation of a program designed to assist businessmen in dealing with substance abuse problems in the workplace.

"I think 1988 was a visionary year for us," McCoy said. "The chamber leadership during the year set in motion some major programs for us.

"We want to develop those visions and to really increase the effectiveness of the chamber in 1989 and for years to come," he said.

Goals for the chamber in 1989 include increasing the membership of the Greenville council of the chamber from its current 832 to 1,000 members and to develop strategies and directions of the chamber's "Year 2007 Committee," he said.

The Year 2007 Committee was initiated in 1988 as a long-range planning process for the county with input from volunteers of the public and private sectors.

"The chamber is dedicated to making Pitt County and Greenville a better place to live and make a living and we will give ourselves to making 1989 a large part of the bright future of our area," McCoy said.

Girls' Fate A Mystery

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon — There was no trace today of two French girls reportedly freed after being held by a Palestinian terrorist group for 13 months.

Walid Khaled, spokesman for Abu Nidal's Fatah-Revolutionary Council, said Monday that the girls, Marie-Laure Bettile, 7, and her sister Virginie, 6, were on their way to Paris by plane. But they never arrived in the French capital.

In west Beirut today an official of the organization said: "Comrade Walid Khaled revealed the latest information on the two French girls yesterday. There is nothing new on them."

"Comrade Walid Khaled is not in town and cannot be reached," said the official, who identified himself only as Izzat.

Khaled said Dec. 24 that the girls would be released within 24 hours in response to a call by Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi, the group's main financial backer.

Economic Illiteracy

By Lee Mitgang
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Economic illiteracy is rampant among America's high school students, according to a first-of-its-kind survey that found only a dismal one in three was able to define simple concepts like inflation or profits.

Results of the survey, involving 8,205 11th- and 12th-grade students in public and private high schools in 33 states, were to be released today at a news conference featuring Paul A. Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board from 1979 to 1987.

It found only 34 percent taking a multiple-choice exam in economics, popularly known as the "dismal science," were able to correctly define profits as "revenues minus costs."

And just 39 percent selected the correct definition of Gross National Product: "the market value of the nation's output of final goods and services."

The news is "not good if you believe that a basic understanding of our economic system is important if this country is indeed to be effective in what everyone realizes is a period of global competition," Volcker said.

Students across the country took a 40-minute, 46-question multiple choice "Test of Economic Literacy" in May 1986, said William B. Walstad, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln economics professor who developed the exam with John C. Soper, an economics professor at John Carroll University in Cleveland.

On average, students correctly answered only about 40 percent of the problems but were even weaker on simple questions pertaining to inflation, the effects of tariffs on trade, and the impact of investment on economic growth, Walstad said in a telephone interview.

The report found that white students who had had some high school economics scored an average of 53 percent, blacks 42 percent, and Hispanics 46 percent.

Among youngsters with no economics background, whites answered 41 percent of the questions correctly, blacks 33 percent, and Hispanics 36 percent.

Rudolph Oswald, director of research of the AFL-CIO, called the results "appalling."

"They rationalize better than any series of speeches the reasons why organized labor feels it can only gain from an economically literate population," Oswald said.

The survey was sponsored by the New York-based Joint Council on Economic Education, a non-profit, nationwide coalition aimed at promoting economics instruction from kindergarten through high school.

The exam was the first to document the apparent economic illiteracy of a majority of U.S. high school students. Economics thus joins a growing list of disciplines including writing, geography, foreign language, science and math where recent tests have shown U.S. students achieving at dismal levels.

Edwards Scores Career-High 38

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Blue Edwards looked inside for operating room early and found all he needed to help East Carolina to a 97-78 college basketball win over Maryland-Baltimore County Tuesday night.

With a variety of post-up moves and fast break dunks, Edwards scored a career-high 38 points to lead four Pirate players in double figures.

"It's easier to start inside and go outside because if you're not hitting outside then the defense will sag in," Edwards said. "If you're hitting inside, that gives your wing men more room to shoot."

"That keeps people from saying you're a one-dimensional team. Anytime you've got four people in double figures you're not counting on one person for everything."

Reed Lose came off the bench to score 14 points for the Pirates, 5-4, while Kenny Murphy had 13 and Gus Hill and Stanley Love added 11 points apiece.

After building and losing an early lead, ECU put together a rally in the final three minutes of the first half that carried over into the second half.

After Kenny Reynolds hit a turnaround jumper with 3:35 remaining, Maryland-Baltimore County led 31-28. But it was a short-lived advantage.

Murphy nailed a three-point basket with 3:12 left in the half.

On the next possession, Lose came up with a steal and Murphy hit a short jumper at the other end for a 33-31 lead.

Duane Faust missed two free throws for UMBC and Edwards countered with two shots from the line with 1:28 to go to make it 35-31.

After UMBC's Larry Simmons misfired from outside, Edwards grabbed the rebound, pushed the ball up the floor. He drove the lane for a basket, drew a foul from Levi Franklin and added the free throw for a 38-31 advantage with 1:08 to go.

Jim Frantz scored the Retrievers only basket of the final three minutes of the half to pull his team within 38-33 with 30 seconds left, but Edwards added another three-point play with seven seconds to go to make it 41-33 at the half.

"When we got a chance to go ahead, we kind of relaxed," said UMBC coach Earl Hawkins. "We allowed easy baskets and that the story of the entire ballgame. We did not play with a whole lot of in-

Schottenheimer Out As Cleveland Coach

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CLEVELAND — The Cleveland Browns were treading water under Marty Schottenheimer while division rivals Cincinnati and Houston were developing into NFL powerhouses, says Browns owner Art Modell.

"My job is to foresee the future. What I see, I don't like," Modell said Tuesday after Schottenheimer quit the team that he coached to four straight playoffs appearances.

Modell and Schottenheimer met Tuesday morning to discuss Modell's plans for the Browns. Among the plans were the hiring of an offensive coordinator and a realignment of the assistant coaching staff.

Schottenheimer, who assumed the duties of offensive coordinator this year after Lindy Infante became head coach at Green Bay, refused to hire a new one or change his staff significantly for 1989. He decided to leave the team instead.

"I frankly thought we would go backwards," Schottenheimer said. "It became evident that some of the differences we had, we weren't going to be able to resolve. We came to an agreement that it was in everybody's best interest that we part company."

The Browns went 10-6 this season, finishing two games behind the Bengals and tying the Oilers for second place in the AFC Central Division. Houston beat the Browns 24-23

Cleveland had won the division each of the previous three years, after Schottenheimer was elevated from defensive coordinator to replace fired Sam Rutigliano as head coach halfway through the 1984 season.

"The competition was not nearly as (stiff) as it is today," Modell said. "I see Houston and Cincinnati as powerhouses. We can't afford to tread water or mark time. This

Close Of Year Prompts Award Ceremony

By Scott Ostler
Lat-WP NewsService

Before we pack it in a cardboard box and stick it in the attic, one fond look back at 1988, with some appropriate awards:

Sportsman of the Year: Larry Brown, who stated, "I'm committed to these kids and I'm staying."

What kids? Well, because there is no evidence that Brown even for one moment seriously considered defecting to Russia, apparently he was referring to American young men in general.

Medical Researcher of the Year: Ben Johnson, whose bold pioneering work in steroid experimentation was the talk of the Olympic Games.

Ben has a big decision to make next year: Should he get off steroids and make a comeback in track, perhaps as a steeplechaser? Or should he greatly increase his dosage and become an NFL linebacker?

Trainer of the Year: Stan O. Zolol.

Name of the Year: Former quarterback and coach Joe Kapp was jogging when he was struck by a taxi cab driven by Festus Banjo.

Footnote: No truth to the rumor that Banjo will team up with Steve Sax and Doug Flutie to form the Manny Trillo.

Catch of the Year: San Diego Padres outfielder Shawn Abner, chasing a spring training fly ball at Palm Springs, Calif., crashed into the outfield wall, broke halfway through the plywood and stuck fast in an advertisement for La Cabana Mexican restaurant.

Medical Researcher of the Year, runner-up: British soccer fans, who went on a drunken rampage and terrorized several West German cities, thus proving conclusively that megadosage of alcohol is not a cure for brain damage or neo-Nazism.

American Rifle Association Overachiever Award: To New England Patriots wide receiver Irving Fryar. A New Jersey state trooper searching Irving's car found a .38-caliber pistol loaded with hollow-point bullets, a loaded shotgun and a hunting knife.

Thus, a new meaning to the sports clique, "He's got all the tools."

Trustees You Can Trust Award: Hoping to bulldoze away the wreckage of their scandal-plagued football program, SMU trustees passed the hat and kicked in $1.8 million to pay off the football coach and various aides who lost their jobs.

That donation worked out to $41,000 per trustee. Where did they get the money? Don't even ask.

Cultural Exchange Award: America helped introduce baseball, golf and McDonald's hamburgers to the Soviet Union.

In retaliation, the Soviets kicked our butts in Olympic basketball.

Ditz of the Year: Marge Schott, owner of the Cincinnati Reds, referred to interim manager Tommy Helms as "Whatchamadoodle."

To her credit, Marge did not, even once, refer to a baseball as "the thingamabobby."

Still, at all costs, we as a nation must take steps to insure that Schott never mates with Yogi Berra.

Iowa Worried About Pack's D Hawkeyes' Coach Is Looking For Chinks In Armor

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Hayden Fry looks at the football games North Carolina State has won this season and shudders.

Dick Sheridan looks at the games North Carolina State hasn't won and he gets nervous, too.

Both are justified in their concern.

In posting a 7-3-1 record, North Carolina State gave up only 27 points in the games it won. Fry, the head coach at Iowa, is trying to figure out how to crack that defense as his Hawkeyes prepare for Saturday's Peach Bowl game with Sheridan's North Carolina State team.

"They probably have one of the most outstanding defenses against outstanding offenses in the nation," Fry said Tuesday during a joint appearance with Sheridan.

"Seven of their opponents have failed to score other than field goals. That's a real tribute to Dick and his staff and the enthusiasm and hustle of the North Carolina State football team."

But in the Wolfpack's four other games, they gave up 115 points and were especially vulnerable against a couple of passing teams — Maryland and Duke. Maryland defeated North Carolina State 30-26 and Duke tied the Wolfpack 43-43.

"We're very concerned because the two games where we did have problems defensively, it was primarily because of the pass," Sheridan said. "We're facing a team that we feel is much more difficult to defend than either one of those teams."

"So we're very concerned about slowing that offense down as well as moving the ball against what we feel is a very fine defense."

The Iowa offense is triggered by the all-Big Ten Conference quarterback the past two seasons, Chuck Hartlieb.

Hartlieb was bothered by a sore right knee during the final eight games of Iowa's 6-3-3 season, underwent arthroscopic surgery on Nov. 20 and didn't resume practice until this week.

But Fry said Hartlieb will start Saturday, although he wouldn't say if the operation made the knee any stronger. Hartlieb has passed for a school-record 3,310 yards and 14 touchdowns this season.

"He played on one leg all year and I anticipate a one-legged performance on Saturday," Fry said. "He's the No. 1 quarterback, he'll start the game and we'll go from there."

Monroe Paces Wolfpack To Win Over Monmouth

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Rodney Monroe scored a career-high 31 points to pace 18th-ranked North Carolina State to a 95-50 romp over Monmouth in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball.

In other contests involving ACC teams Tuesday night, West Virginia defeated Maryland 69-61, Wake Forest beat Fairfield 75-59 in the Lobo Invitational in Albuquerque, N.M., and Clemson defeated Middle Tennessee State 81-77 in the Far West Classic in Portland, Ore.

"Basically, we played scared," Monmouth coach Wayne Szoke said of the North Carolina State contest. "When things got bad, we bailed out and when they got worse, we went further south."

The Wolfpack raised its mark to 5-1 and the Hawks dropped to 4-3.

"When Monroe was stroking his jumper like he was tonight, things are much easier," said North Carolina State coach Jim Valvano.

Monroe, whose previous high was 26 points twice earlier in the season, scored 24 points in the first half Tuesday night, leading four other Wolfpack players in double figures.

N.C. State's lead hit 40 points with 5:30 remaining on a jumper by Avie Lester.

Brian Howard had 15 points, Chucky Brown 14, and Lester and Kelsey Weems 10 each. Weems played in his first game after sitting out the first five for personal reasons.

Fernando Sanders led the Hawks with 20 points, while Chuck McKay and Lewis added 11 each.

In College Park, Md., Chris Brooks scored 19 points to lead West Virginia.

The Mountaineers jumped from a 7-7 tie to a 19-7 lead midway through the first half, and although Maryland cut the deficit to 29-24 at the half, the Terrapins couldn't recover.

West Virginia held leads of 16 points twice during the second half, at 52-36 and 56-40.

Herbie Brooks scored 15 points and dished out six assists and Darryl Prue added 14 points as West Virginia improved to 6-2 for the season.

Maryland, which was led by John Johnson's 17 points, dropped to 5-3. Walt Williams had 12 points for the Terrapins, while Tony Massenber scored 10 points and grabbed 13 rebounds.

Wake Forest will face New Mexico tonight in the championship of the Lobo Invitational, after the Lobos defeated winless George Washington 94-73 in the first round of the 24th annual tournament.

"Playing Wake Forest is going to give us a great opportunity to find out more about our team," said New Mexico coach Dave Bliss.

Wake Forest Coach Bob Staak saw enough of New Mexico's victory to know that the Demon Deacons, 6-2, face a tough assignment.

"We just have to go out and play with the type of concentration that's necessary to win games against good basketball teams," Staak said. "We're going to have to do that tomorrow night or it will be a long night for us."

The registration is for a seven-week session starting Jan. 9. The program is for boys and girls ages 3-9 and includes beginners, advanced beginners and intermediate classes which will be held in the afternoon and early evening. For more information call 830-4550 or 830-4567.

JMU's Brooks Honored By CAA

RICHMOND (AP) — Kenny Brooks of James Madison and Cindy Baruch of George Mason were named the Colonial Athletic Association players of the week, the conference announced Tuesday.

Brooks, a sophomore guard from Waynesboro, scored 33 points — including the game-winning basket against Virginia Commonwealth — in the Dukes' two victories last week. Against the Rams, Brooks scored 20 points and hit the game-winning with 3 seconds remaining. He had seven points in the game's final two minutes.

Baruch, a senior guard from Silver Spring, Md., scored 28 points in the Patriots 82-57 victory over Morgan State last week. She is averaging 18.9 points per game, second best in the CAA.

Fenner Claims He Wasn't In A Fight

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Former North Carolina running back Derrick Fenner says he was not involved in a fight at a Washington nightclub, and that he didn't realize for several minutes that he had been shot.

"I don't know how the fight got started," Fenner told The Charlotte Observer in a telephone interview Tuesday. "I heard on the news that I was fighting, but I wasn't fighting at all. I was trying to get out of the club. I was leaving."

Fenner, a student at Gardner-Webb this fall, was shot in the right side shortly before 4 a.m. on Christmas Day in a parking lot outside the RSVP night club on the southwest side of Washington. He was treated and released from D.C. General Hospital. There have been no arrests. A D.C. police official said Tuesday that the case was under investigation.

Fenner said he noticed there was an altercation taking place when he was leaving the club.

"There was a lot of commotion outside. I didn't know exactly what was going on. The door was blocked, like you couldn't get out. I pushed my way out, took a couple of steps and then I heard a gun go off. I did what everybody else did, I ran."

Fenner said it was not until several minutes later that he discovered he had been shot.

"I ran for a little while, then I stopped to rest. I felt myself and realized I'd been hit. I was in shock. I didn't know what it was or what to do."

Fenner said Tuesday that he felt fine and planned to lift weights in the afternoon.

Fenner said he had planned not to re-enroll for the spring semester at Gardner-Webb and apply for April's NFL draft. Though he was not seriously injured, he said he is concerned that the incident may have further tarnished his image in the eyes of NFL scouts.

"I really don't know what to do, because of the way this thing's been exposed," Fenner said. "From what I can see, the press and the media have exposed it negatively. That's ridiculous."

"I mean, I wasn't even involved. I was an innocent bystander. But once something like that happens, people start asking why he was there in the first place at 3 in the morning. Well, for one thing, it's the holidays and I was out with some friends who were home from school. What's so wrong with that?"

Fenner said he was leaning toward enrolling for spring classes at Gardner-Webb and trying to become eligible to play for the Bulldogs next season. He said he would reach a final decision in a few days.

Fenner, 21, led the Atlantic Coast Conference in 1986 with 1,250 yards rushing and set a conference single-game record when he gained 325 yards against Virginia.

Fenner was later suspended from the team for academic and disciplinary reasons. He was attempting to work his way back onto the team when he was arrested and charged with first-degree murder by Prince George's County, Md., police on June 2, 1987.

Fenner spent 44 days in Maryland jail but was later cleared of the murder charge. He is serving three years probation after pleading guilty to cocaine possession related to an arrest in April, 1987.

Fenner transferred to Gardner Webb in August and was declared eligible to play football. But before he could take the field, the South Atlantic Conference ruled that he did not meet all eligibility requirements for transfers.

Hokies Reinstate Coles And Cannon

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Virginia Tech coach Frankie Allen has reinstated guard Bimbo Coles and reserve forward Sam Cannon, who were suspended for curfew violations, the school announced Tuesday.

Coles — the Hokies' leading scorer — and Cannon were suspended last week for violating team curfew in Washington and missed Virginia Tech's game against Georgetown. The Hoyas won that contest 87-57.

"We have now put the incident behind us and are busy preparing for the (Richmond) Times-Dispatch Tournament," Allen said in a news release.

Virginia Tech faces Richmond on Thursday in the opening round of the Times-Dispatch tournament.

Coles, a member of the 1988 U.S. Olympic basketball team, was averaging 22.5 points per game this year for the Hokies. Cannon was averaging 3 points per game.

Noll And Rooney Meet; No Decision Made

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Steelers president Dan Rooney met with Coach Chuck Noll again Tuesday, but team officials declined to say whether they had settled differences on proposed changes in the Steelers coaching staff.

Team spokesman Dan Edwards said no announcement would be made on the talks until next week.

Rooney on Monday denied a Boston Globe report Sunday that said Noll told his 11 assistant coaches he was considering resigning because he could not follow Rooney's orders to fire some of them. Globe sportswriter Will McDonough wrote that Noll argued with Rooney during a meeting last Wednesday, then gathered his assistants and told them he might quit.

The Globe said Rooney last week told Noll to fire an undetermined number of assistant coaches following the Steelers' 5-11 season, their worst in 19 years.

An unnamed Steelers source told the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette that McDonough's story was correct, however.

Edwards said the coaches have been given the next few days off and will not report to work until Tuesday.

Hershiser Eligible For Arbitration

NEW YORK (AP) — Orel Hershiser, the playoff and World Series MVP, and Jose Canseco, the American League's Most Valuable Player, are among the 177 players eligible to file for salary arbitration.

Other AL stars eligible include Roger Clemens, the 1986 and 1987 AL Cy Young Award winner; Minnesota outfielder Kirby Puckett; California first baseman Wally Joyner, and Milwaukee pitcher Ted Higuera.

From the NL, Cincinnati pitcher Tom Browning, who pitched a perfect game last season; New York Mets hurlers Dwight Gooden and Ron Darling, and San Francisco first baseman Will Clark are among those eligible.

Conley Hangs On For 49-46 Win

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley battled back from a 29-20 halftime deficit and held on late to defeat Chocowinity 49-46 in the opening round of the D.H. Conley Girls Holiday Basketball Tournament Tuesday.

Conley held a 49-40 lead with 31 seconds to go in the game before Chocowinity canned a pair of 3-pointers to cut the lead to 49-46. The Lady Tribe then missed a chance to send the game in overtime when they missed a 3-pointer with seven ticks left on the clock.

Lendora Tyson led a trio of Conley scorers in double figures with 18 points. Glenda Hardy added 13 and Charlene Davenport had 10.

Chocowinity was led by Chrylene Myers 13 points, while Drusilia Crawford had 11 and Kim Coffey 10.

Conley, now 6-1 for the year, will play Havelock, a 61-40 winner over Ayden-Grifton, tonight at 8:30 p.m.

HOLLYWOOD — Farmville Central battled back from a 12-point halftime deficit to record a 60-53 win over Aurora in the first round of the D.H. Conley Girls Holiday Basketball Tournament.

Brenda Reeves led the way for the Lady Jaguars with 22 points, while Vickie Best added 15. Aurora was led in scoring by Viva Jordan and Melinda Peacock. Each player had 17 points.

After trimming the Aurora lead to 43-40 heading into the final quarter, Farmville poured in 20 points to overtake the lead.

The 4-3 Lady Jaguars will be back in action today in semifinal action at 7 p.m. against Plymouth, a 36-26 winner over Belhaven in the first round.

Faust Hoping Irish Win Fiesta Bowl

By Herschel Nissenson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Next Monday night, at his home in Akron, Ohio, Gerry Faust will turn on his television set and root for Notre Dame to beat West Virginia in the Fiesta Bowl and win the national championship.

He will pull just as hard as if he were still on the sidelines as Notre Dame's head coach.

"I wouldn't miss watching this game. I'm a Notre Dame man through and through," said Faust, who estimates that some 15-20 of his recruits are on the team and whose youngest son is a Notre Dame junior.

"If they win, I'll be excited for everybody. That's the ultimate. It's something that's very difficult to accomplish and it must really be neat."

Dan Devine, the coach who preceded Faust, won a national championship. Ara Parseghian, the coach who preceded Devine, won two. Lou Holtz, the coach Faust preceded, will win one if Notre Dame beats West Virginia.

Gerry Faust won none. His five-year record (1981-85) was 30-26-1 and, although he did take Notre Dame to a couple of bowl games, they were the Liberty and Aloha and neither one had the slightest national championship implications. None of Faust's teams finished in the Top Twenty and his 1981 and 1985 squads were responsible for two of Notre Dame's seven losing seasons in this century.

"You don't know why things happen. You just leave it in the good hands of the Almighty," said Faust, who was plucked out of the high school ranks at ultrasuccessful Cincinnati Moeller by the Rev. Edmund P. Joyce, Notre Dame's former executive vice president. "I could sit and philosophize and say this and say that, but it was not meant to be."

"I always had a goal to coach at Notre Dame. I had that opportunity, and I'm real happy I was one of 25 (Notre Dame head coaches). It still means a lot to me."

"The years at Notre Dame were five of the greatest years I ever spent in my life. In fact, they were less frustrating than the last three trying to build a program from Division I-AA to I-A."

Since leaving Notre Dame, Faust has been head coach at the University of Akron, which moved up a division in 1987.

"It's been frustration after frustration, but it's starting to come around," he said (the Zips were 5-6 this season, including one-point losses to Northern Illinois and Arkansas State, after going 4-7 last year). "It's been a lot tougher than my Notre Dame experience. You have to recruit a different athlete in I-A than I-AA."

Two years ago, Faust attended the Penn State-Miami Fiesta Bowl as the guest of one of the committeemen. This time, he will be there only in spirit.

"I really thought about it," he said. "But I feel it's best for me to stay away until these kids graduate. They're Lou Holtz's kids right now and what they accomplish is for Notre Dame and Lou Holtz."

Faust's legacy to Notre Dame included some pretty good football players. Offensive tackle Andy Heck and defensive end Frank Stams made The Associated Press All-America team this season. Linebacker Wes Pritchett and strong safety George Streeter were season-long starters, free safety Cory Southall and split end Steve Alaniz started about half the games, D'Juan Francisco saw plenty of action at cornerback and Steve Belles was a key special teams performer.

Belles made one of the big plays of the season when he smelled out a Miami fake punt and stopped it short of a first down.

"I haven't had any contact with any of them," Faust said. "I'm trying to stay away from them right now. I'm not trying to ignore them, but I feel the attention should be on Lou Holtz and the players right now. It's a great thing for the university and the kids and Lou."

During the season, once Akron's game was over, Faust eagerly sought out the Notre Dame score. He also tried to catch the Irish on TV when he could, although his team usually was playing at the same time.

He managed to see Notre Dame's season-ending 27-10 victory over Southern Cal on TV because Akron's season was over, but he hasn't attended any games in person since he left.

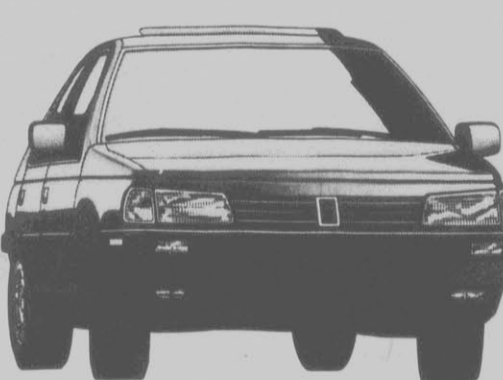

"I don't think it's time to go," he said. "But when I retire from coaching I plan to go almost every weekend they're at home."

Faust's record was far from Notre Dame's best. In fact, only Hugh Devore and Joe Kuharich had lower winning percentages than Faust's .535.

In the game of life, however, his percentage is up around .1000.

Forget about Gerry Faust the coach. This little vignette says something about Gerry Faust the man.

tensity, especially on offense. East Carolina probably had a lot to do with that. Their defensive intensity was great. We gave up too many easy baskets to them also."

The Pirates had opened the game and build their early lead on the strength of their man-to-man defense, but midway through the half they switched to a zone. ECU coach Mike Steele switched back to the man defense in the final minutes of the half and felt that was a catalyst for the rally.

"I thought that at the end of the first half, we went back to our man and Reed came in and really gave us a good lift playing hard," Steele said. "It probably helped us. We wanted to come out and get after this team and try to force some turnovers and try to take them out of their offense. When we went to the zone we kind of stood around."

Edwards, who had 19 points in the first half, got the Pirates going in the final minutes of the first half and that success carried over to the final 20 minutes of the game.

"I think so, we had the lead and lost it," Edwards said. "We needed something to happen. Coach Steele told me to go in and get a couple of baskets. In the second half, we wanted to go out and build a lead."

ECU steadily added onto its advantage in the second half and led by as many as 19, following a layup by Love off a pass from Edwards with 11:26 remaining.

"I felt like at halftime we really talked to the guys about being unselfish," Steele said. "One thing that this team has had trouble with, one thing that the teams I've had here have had trouble with, is that when you have a ten-point lead guys have to understand that the game is not over."

Syracuse Too Much For Rutgers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Any team can make dunks and layups. So when No. 3 Syracuse started making its outside shots, too, it was too much for Rutgers.

"They can score a lot of points in a hurry," Rutgers coach Bobby Wenzel said Tuesday night after the Orangemen romped 100-81.

Matt Roe started and finished a first-half burst with 3-point shots that carried unbeaten Syracuse to its 12th straight victory and gave Coach Jim Boeheim his 299th career triumph.

"We've been through a lot and seen it all in the last couple of years," guard Sherman Douglas said. "We knew we just had to keep playing our game and things would work out for us."

Two other Top Twenty teams played and both won easily as No. 15 Ohio State trounced Florida 93-68 and No. 18 North Carolina State routed Monmouth 95-50.

Syracuse got its inside game going early, getting six dunks and four layups in the first 16 minutes. Still, host Rutgers hung close and trailed only 31-26.

"What happened the other night, the number four team (Iowa) got beat by 18 points," Boeheim said. "Any team can lose on any night. That's college basketball today and we shouldn't be too surprised."

But Roe's 3-pointers keyed a 14-4 run and the Orangemen led 45-30 at halftime. Syracuse stayed hot from all over the court the rest of the game and Rutgers never again pulled within 13 points. Derrick Coleman and Stephen Thompson scored 20 points each; Billy Owens had 19, Douglas 15 and Roe 11 for Syracuse.

The 12-0 start is the fourth-best for Syracuse; the best was 15-0 in 1986-87.

Tom Savage scored 18 points for the Scarlet Knights, 4-3.

No. 15 Ohio State 93, Florida 68

Jay Burson scored 37 points, including a school-record nine 3-point goals, as Ohio State routed Florida in the opening round of the ECAC Holiday Festival in New York.

Ohio State will play host St. John's in Thursday night's championship game. St. John's beat Fordham 84-59 in the other first-round game.

Burson surpassed the Buckeyes' mark of five 3-pointers, set by Dennis Hopson in 1987, and single-handedly broke the team record of eight in one game. Ohio State finished with 11 against Florida.

Burson, a senior guard, was one point shy of his career high. He did not play the final 5:39.

The Buckeyes' pressure was too much for Florida's young backcourt. Ohio State turned several steals into easy baskets, taking a 31-19 lead and then going on a 10-0 run with Burson scoring four times and assisting on the other basket.

Perry Carter had 14 points and Tony White 13 for Ohio State, 8-2. Dwayne Schintzius scored 19 points for the Gators, 1-5.

St. John's, with 26 points from Jayson Williams, beat Fordham for the 20th straight time. The Redmen have reached the title game of their own tournament for nine consecutive years and have won the last four.

Malik Sealy had 19 points for St. John's, 7-2. Dan O'Sullivan scored 14 points for the Rams, 3-4.

Others
 Freshman Chris Mills had 19 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists as Kentucky held off Austin Peay 85-77. The Wildcats, 5-6, led by 20 points before Austin Peay got within 75-69 in the final three minutes. LeRon Ellis scored 23 points for Kentucky and Keith Rawls had 28 for the Governors, 7-5.

Eric Murdock scored 20 points as Providence beat Maine 100-78. The Friars are 9-0, their best start since the 1964-65 season.

Cavaliers Continue Winning Ways

By Bill Barnard
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Where the Cleveland Cavaliers used to falter, they now are finding ways to win.

The Cavaliers, 11-30 on the road last season, improved their record away from home to 9-3 Tuesday night with an impressive 107-96 victory at Chicago.

Craig Ehlo came off the bench for 16 points and Larry Nance scored eight of his 18 points in the final 2:47 as Cleveland extended its winning streak to six games. The Cavaliers, who now have the NBA's best record overall and on the road, had six players in double figures.

Michael Jordan led Chicago with 43 points after being held to four in the first quarter. He scored 19 points in the fourth quarter, sparking a Bulls rally that fell just short.

Kings 112, Blazers 111
 Sacramento coach Jerry Reynolds was hospitalized after he collapsed on the sideline while arguing with a referee in the fourth quarter, but his team came back to beat Portland when Harold Pressley hit a 20-foot jumper from the baseline with one second left.

Reynolds lay motionless for six minutes while paramedics tended to him near the Kings' bench. He fell face first while arguing with Blaine Reichelt.

He was expected to be hospitalized for 48 hours, but doctors said his blood pressure and pulse were normal.

Hawks 128, Knicks 126
 Reggie Theus, Dominique Wilkins and Moses Malone each scored at least 30 points, and Malone hit two free throws with 25 seconds left for Atlanta against New York. Malone's free throws made it 127-124. After a layup by the Knicks'

Gerald Wilkins with 16 seconds left, Cliff Levingston hit one of two free throws to give the Hawks a two-point lead with 13 seconds remaining.

Mavericks 110, Spurs 101
 Dallas got 33 points from Mark Aguirre, including 15 in the third quarter, as San Antonio lost for the 11th time in their last 12 games.

The Spurs led 72-68 before the Mavericks responded with a 15-2 spurt late in the third quarter. Aguirre led the way with seven points, including a three-point play.

Bucks 120, Pacers 107
 Milwaukee dropped Indiana to 0-13 on the road as Terry Cummings scored 29 points and Larry Krystkowiak had 26 points and 14 rebounds, both career highs.

Chuck Person scored 32 points and Wayman Tisdale 19 for Indiana, the NBA's only winless team on the road.

Rockets 101, Heat 93
 Houston won its sixth straight game, wiping out a nine-point halftime deficit as Akeem Olajuwon scored 14 of his 22 points in the second half, snapping expansion Miami's two-game winning streak.

Olajuwon struggled through a 6-for-16 shooting night from the field, but he hit 10 of 14 from the free throw line.

Warriors 119, 76ers 112
 Rookie Mitch Richmond scored a season-high 34 points and Winston Garland hit six free throws in the final two minutes for Golden State against Philadelphia.

Garland's two free throws with 1:43 remaining gave the Warriors the lead for good at 111-110 and started a run of eight straight points.

Nuggets 130, Celtics 109
 Denver snapped a three-game losing streak as Alex English scored 21 of his 37 points in the second period against Boston, raising his career point total to 22,007.

The Nuggets outscored the Celtics 36-25 during English's hot quarter, turning a 21-21 tie into a 57-46 halftime lead. Denver made it a blowout in the third period, outscoring Boston 40-31 for a 97-77 advantage.

Clippers 104, Sonics 100
 Los Angeles overcame a nine-point Seattle lead in the last 6½ minutes behind rookie Danny Manning.

Danny Manning scored 25 points, six of them during an 11-0 spurt that turned a 92-83 deficit into a 94-92 lead. He then hit a reverse layup with 11 seconds to go.

Pack Rolls

Sam Ivy scored 17 points, 15 of them in the second half, to help Wake Forest turn what had been a close game into a late rout.

Fairfield, led by guard Troy Bradford's 22 points, rallied from an early 20-9 deficit and took a 33-31 lead with 11 seconds left in the first half, before a 25-foot basket by reserve Steve Ray gave Wake Forest a 34-33 halftime lead.

Fairfield went scoreless for more than five minutes midway through the second half and Wake Forest ran off nine straight points for a 60-42 lead with 5:40 left.

Dale Davis scored 20 points and pulled down 14 rebounds to lead a balanced Clemson attack as the Tigers defeated Middle Tennessee State 81-77 in an opening round game of the Far West Classic.

The Tigers, 6-1, saw a 13-point lead evaporate in the second half as the Blue Raiders, 6-3, cut the lead to 76-73 on a pair of foul shots by Kerry Hammonds with 1:59 left.

Clemson held on by connecting on five of seven free throws in the closing minute and a half.

Best Rule Innovation: The balk. Baseball's 1988 answer to the eternal question, "What can we do to space out the game's non-stop thrills?"

Sincerity Award: To Larry Brown. Accepting the Spurs coaching job, Larry said, "I just like to coach, and the purest form of coaching is in the NBA."

It sure ain't in college, where coaches do so much cheating that sometimes schools get slapped with probation.

Animal Story of the Year: Cornell cornerback Evan Parke stepped into the shower in his apartment, only to find the stall already occupied by a six-foot Bahamian boa constrictor.

Parke summoned help from the local animal shelter, after first determining that what he had stumbled upon definitely was not soap-on-a-rope or an SEC recruiter.

Hottest New Sport: Train surfing. According to a report in Surfer magazine, thousands of young men in Rio de Janeiro have taken to riding atop the slick metal roofs of overcrowded electric commuter trains.

The surfers stand on the roofs and even do some high-speed hot-dogg-ing. There were 60 reported deaths the first four months of the year. On the up side, none of the surfers has tested positive for steroids.

Scapegoat of the Year: The Baltimore birdie. After the Orioles lost their first 21 games and finished with the worst record in baseball, the front office determined that a shake-up was in order. They started by firing the team's longtime symbol, the cute little cartoon Oriole on the crown of the team's caps.

The birdie will be replaced by an "ornithologically correct" representation of a Baltimore Oriole. In other words, a dog with wings.

Worthwhile Experiment of the Year: It is rumored that British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is trying to get English soccer fans interested in train surfing.

Consumers' Guide Says X-Body Cars Drew Most Complaints

By Guy Darst
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — GM's now-dead X-body cars were trumpeted in the 1980 model year as the first of a new breed of fuel-efficient models from Detroit, but a consumers' guide says the cars prompted owners to complain like no other American car built in the 1980s.

Jack Gillis, the principal author of the 1989 edition of "The Car Book," which was released Tuesday, said the X-cars were "probably the worst cars ever produced in the United States."

Gillis' guide, first produced in 1981 for the government but now being issued as a private venture, for the first time this year classifies cars according to owners' complaints lodged with the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

Those government figures show 15 cars with no complaints at all: nine Japanese names, four U.S. models, a Swede and a German.

The book classifies autos as simply "good," "average" or "poor," according to whether a car ranked in the top, middle or bottom third of the list of complaints per million cars. Similar classifications are made in a companion volume, the "Used Car Book."

In a news release accompanying "The Car Book," Gillis listed actual complaint rates for the 26 best and 26 worst models.

The X-cars occupied four of the worst seven slots.

Before production ended after the 1985 model year, the X-cars — Chevrolet Citation, Pontiac Phoenix, Oldsmobile Omega and Buick Skylark — were the subject of a massive 1983 lawsuit by the government seeking a $4 million fine from General Motors Corp. and a recall of 1980 X-car models to modify rear brakes that federal regulators said could lock and cause a spin.

GM, which already had recalled the cars twice to fix the brakes, won the lawsuit in 1987, with the judge ruling there was "no engineering evidence of any peculiar property of the X-car generally that renders them in any way exceptional."

In Detroit, GM spokesman Chuck Licari said company officials in a position to comment on the X-car complaint rate were not in their offices because of the holidays.

According to Gillis, here are the 26 worst cars, complaint rates per million cars and the applicable model years: the Pontiac Phoenix 1980-1984, 4,267; Peugeot 505 1980-1988, 4,017; Oldsmobile Omega 1980-1984, 3,523; Buick Skylark 1979-1985, 3,305; AMC Alliance-Encore 1983-1987, 2,522; Plymouth Horizon 1978-1988, 2,315; Chevrolet Citation 2,246; Dodge 400 1982-1983, 2,183; Dodge Omni 1978-1988, 2,153; Ford EXP 1981-1985, 2,109; Chrysler E Class 1983-1984, 1,930; Chrysler Laser 1984-1986, 1,903; Chrysler Cordoba 1980-1983, 1,727; Buick Century 1982-1988, 1,700; and Audi 5000 1978-1988, 1,693.

Also, Lincoln Mark series 1983-1988, 1,671; Pontiac 1000 1981-1987, 1,670; Cadillac Cimarron 1981-1988, 1,648; Dodge Aries 1981-1988, 1,623; Plymouth Reliant 1981-1988, 1,573; Mercury Marquis 1983-1986, 1,539; Buick Skyhawk 1982-1988, 1,534; Pontiac Fiero 1984-1988, 1,517; Ford Thunderbird 1980-1982, 1,469; Chrysler LeBaron 1982-1988, 1,440; Pontiac 6000 1982-1988, 1,438.

There were 15 cars and light trucks with no complaints against them at all: Acura Integra 1986-1988, Buick Somerset Regal 1985-1987, Chevrolet S-10 Blazer 1986-1988, Chrysler LeBaron GTS 1985-1988, Dodge Shadow 1987-1988, Honda Civic CRX 1984-1987, Hyundai Excel 1986-1988, Mazda B2000 1986-1988, Nissan Van 1987-1988, Saab 9000 1986-1988, Subaru Justy 1987-1988, Toyota Starlet 1981-1984, Toyota Tercel 1987-1988, Toyota Van Wagon 1986-1988 and the Volkswagen Fox 1987-1988.

The next best 11 models and complaints per million: Nissan Sentra 1987-1988, 4; Suzuki Samurai 1986-1988, 8; Nissan Stanza 1987-1988, 15; Mazda 323 1986-1988, 23; Acura Legend 1986-1988, 25; Toyota MR2 1985-1988, 26; Mazda RX7 1986-1988, 32; Toyota Celica 1986-1988, 32; Nissan Pickup 1986-1988, 62; Volkswagen Vanagon 1981-1988, 93; Mitsubishi Tredia 1983-1988, 98.

Gillis used information from a variety of sources, including NHTSA's results of crash testing, fuel economy data compiled by the Environmental Protection Agency, manufacturers' warranty data and maintenance requirements, resale values tracked by the National Automobile Dealers Association and material from other sources.

Giving the greatest weight given to crash test performance, Gillis rated "best" and "worst" choices from each major size category.

His top three choices: Subcompact — Ford Escort, Honda Civic, Mazda 323; Compact — Buick Skylark two-door, Dodge Aries, Oldsmobile Cutlass Calais two-door; Intermediate — Ford Taurus, Mercury Sable, Oldsmobile Cutlass Ciera; Minivans — Dodge Caravan, Nissan Van, Plymouth Voyager.

His choices as the worst: Subcompact — Geo Spectrum, Isuzu I-Mark, Mitsubishi Precis; Compact — Chrysler LeBaron, Dodge Daytona, Dodge Lancer; Intermediate — Audi 100-200, Dodge Dynasty, Isuzu Impulse; Minivans — Chevrolet Astro, Ford Aerostar, Volkswagen Vanagon.

Gillis also used complaint rates to classify cars into three general groups. They are: GOOD

Honda CRX Si, Hyundai Excel, Mazda 323, Mitsubishi Mirage, Nissan Pulsar, Nissan Sentra, Subaru Justy, Subaru Loyale, Toyota Tercel, Volkswagen Fox, Volkswagen Golf, Volkswagen Jetta, Yugo, Acura Integra, Buick Skylark, Chrysler LeBaron GTS, Mazda RX-Difference Manpower is big on it.

At Manpower, we pride ourselves on doing things differently from other temporary help services. We offer free word processing/PC training with our unique Skillware®. It's hands-on. Fun. And available only at Manpower.

And Manpower's comprehensive system of interviewing, testing and evaluating your skills — and your job preferences — helps us match you to jobs that you'll not only be able to do well, but that you'll like doing.

As a Manpower Temporary, you'll get good weekly pay. Life/health insurance. Paid holidays and vacations. And, whenever you move to a new city, you're likely to find Manpower there. We'll transfer your test results and work experience and put you right to work.

It's all just a small part of the big difference you'll find when you work for Manpower.

He Does His Best Research In A Bar

By Thomas H. Maugh II
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

PHOENIX — Anthropologist Jim Schaefer's scariest moment was not among Jivaro headhunters or Yanomamo warriors in South America but in a rural bar outside Missoula, Mont. Schaefer had just observed a late-night fistfight and some of the participants wanted him to leave with them, presumably to keep him quiet. Schaefer was not about to report the fight to the police because the first rule of an anthropologist is "never intervene," and he certainly did not want to break his cover.

"There was no way I was going to tell them ... I was there observing their drinking habits," he said.

He went with the brawlers, but all turned out well. They all got drunk and parted the best of friends at 4 the next morning.

Such is the life of an anthropologist whose specialty is the denizens of the American bar.

Schaefer, who is director of the Office of Alcohol and Other Drug Abuse Prevention at the University of Minnesota, told scientists here for a meeting of the American Anthropological Association earlier this month that more than half of the patrons of bars come in alone, that at least half get drunk and that as many as one in every eight patrons is too drunk to drive safely — much higher percentages than anyone had previously expected.

"The bad news is that so many people are intoxicated and the bar staff continues to pour" drinks for them, he said. "No wonder we have problems."

Among his other conclusions from a lifetime of observing bars: The heaviest drinking occurs in country and western bars, and the heaviest drinking in those bars occurs during slow songs.

Schaefer's research "is about our own personal risks," he said.

"We need to teach drinkers how to drink smarter. We need to understand their internal controls on drinking: What are the influences on that control? When does it break down? How does an individual know his or her own limits? Is there any way we can accentuate the personal control so that, at particular times when he or she is at risk of violating those own personal guidelines, we can get some red flags that flash in front of them?"

Those are long-term questions,

Los Angeles Times/Rick Meyer

Dr. Jim Schaefer is a University of Minnesota anthropologist who specializes in the denizens of the American bar he said, that he and other researchers are only now beginning to grasp.

Schaefer backed into the study of bars, although he had a long knowledge about them.

"Back in my college days (at the University of Montana), I was a pretty regular drinker," he said. "So I knew a lot about drinking. When my graduate work (at the State University of New York at Buffalo) was nearing completion, my adviser sat me down and said. 'You know that your dissertation is probably going to be about something you'll be dealing with for the rest of your life, so you ought to do it on something that you really like. What do you know a lot about?'"

As a result of that conversation, Schaefer wrote a thesis on problems caused by alcohol abuse. After graduation, he got a teaching position back at the University of Montana and began looking for new research topics. The search, perhaps unintentionally, took him back to bars.

"I started going back to some of the same old haunts, with these new eyes that I had gotten, and started looking around and thinking about things that I might be able to do in terms of field studies," he said.

"I was sitting there one afternoon, with all the same crowd as usual, just six years older, and there was a hubbub of activity. Suddenly, the jukebox stopped; the plays ran out.

"That bar absolutely came to a standstill. And everybody got antsy, they said, 'Well, let's get that jukebox going,'" he said.

The bartender came out with the bean game, a jar of beans containing one red bean. Whoever drew the red bean got to put the next 75 cents in the jukebox and pick the songs.

"I started observing this whole ritual that went on. Here's the lifeblood of the place, I thought. It was the atmosphere that was being created by the music.

"At the time, I was sort of in shock. I said, 'Boy, there's something going on here that I need to learn more about.' Well, on top of that, the 75 cents came out, and as the person (who did not normally play the jukebox) walked over, everyone started shouting out their favorite numbers, G-12, N-6 and so on. ...

"And when I went over to the jukebox a little later, I noticed the 'G' was almost completely rubbed off; the 'N' was almost completely rubbed off, and I knew I was on to something. That's how I got started."

Over a period of more than 10 years during the 1970s, Schaefer and his students studied the patrons of bars around Missoula and found a close correlation between what patrons listened to and how much they drank. The heaviest drinking, they found, occurred in country and western bars, while only moderate drinking occurred in bars playing rock or pop music.

"There was a slightly different agenda in the bars where rock and popular music was played," Schaefer said. "They tended to be a little more upscale places, where people dress up a bit and drink more expensive drinks, in general.

"There is just a little bit more group behavioral control as a result. There is not this general attitude of 'Let's get drunk and be somebody,' that is predominant in the country-type atmosphere."

The least amount of drinking occurred in bars where a wide variety of music was played and where there were many distractions, such as games, video machines, shows or a buffet.

"When people are moving and standing, they are a lot more aware of their level of intoxication than when they are just sitting in one place," he said.

"Now that was very typical anthropological field work: Mixing with people, following them home, going out to breakfast with them, getting informants, getting people to respond to questions, finding out what the rules were.

looking at the back-bar paraphernalia, talking to the bartender, all that stuff," Schaefer said.

While his findings up to this point were interesting and most were published in alcohol journals, he acknowledges that his research had been somewhat undisciplined.

"When I moved to Minnesota, my colleague Richard Sykes got very interested (in the work), but he was upset about the subjectivity of it," Schaefer said. "He said what we really need to do is start getting some very tightly designed ... data. And then we can start pulling into it some of those other influences."

To obtain the data, the researchers have observed more than 2,000 drinking "groups" containing from one to nine people in 65 Minneapolis-area bars, collecting information on group size, drinking rates, the cost of drinks, music, lighting and a host of other environmental factors. Most of the data has not been processed yet, but Schaefer has been able to reach some preliminary conclusions, which were reported for the first time here in Phoenix.

About 54 percent of the bar's patrons came in alone. They stayed an average of 56 minutes and consumed an average of 4.1 drinks an hour.

Gore Vidal Gives Own Appraisal Of America

By Kathleen Hendrix
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

HOLLYWOOD — According to Gore Vidal, American society has three ways of handling its critics: "One is to black you out altogether, which they did with Noam Chomsky (a linguistics expert and Vietnam War opponent) — he can't get published anywhere; he's been made a non-person. Or they demonize you, which they did with Jesse Jackson. Or they trivialize you, which they do with me."

Having said that, Vidal screws up his face, pitches his voice into a high, nasal whine and delivers his imitation of an obnoxious prude commenting on the likes of Gore Vidal: "Oh, he's vicious, he's venomous. He's outrageous."

Outrageous? Or outraged? Sometimes he seems to be both, although more often than not, the outrage comes out as sarcasm. Trivial? Never.

Vidal — essayist, novelist, playwright, sometime politician and lifelong critic — lives in Italy most of the time now. But he returned recently for a brief stay at his grand old Spanish-style house in the Hollywood Hills, making forays out to a few talk shows and speaking before a few groups on the state of the union.

For starters, he finds the state of the union close to that of a police state. As is usual when he is in Los Angeles, he was a guest on Johnny Carson's show last month. But this time around, he was asked to bring his passport or other proof of citizenship. He thought it was a joke. It was not. Were he a foreigner, he was told, the law would require him to bring a green card or documents to show that his visa was in order. It all had to do, he was told, with the federal crackdown on hiring illegal immigrants.

"So I said, 'Oh, yes! It's well known that as soon as a Mexican crosses the Rio Grande, he is immediately booked onto the Carson show, thereby depriving an American entertainer of his showcase.'"

But it was not the Carson show that was bothering Vidal. It was the requirement that he was calling a violation of the First and Fourth Amendments, and the acceptance of it.

Americans, he said, now accept all that as the proper role of government and seem ready for laws on abortion, their sex lives and "making you say prayers aloud." At the same time, they see it as improper to "go to a corporation and say, 'Clean up a mess,' because that's 'socialism' and that's evil. How you get people to vote against their interests and to really think against their interests is very clever. It's the cleverest ruling class that I have ever come across in history. It's been 200 years at it. It's superb."

Vidal, 63, referred to himself at one point as an aging patriot. And what he said about critics, he said about patriots: "Patriots in a patriarchal society are considered dangerous and so are made into non-persons."

Part of the purpose of his visit includes promoting his new book, At Home (Random House), a collection of essays that have appeared in periodicals from 1982 until this year.

Vidal also was in Los Angeles to be on hand when the shooting of a two-hour feature film he wrote about Billy the Kid begins this month in Tucson, Ariz.

His main work in recent years remains the group of novels he calls, collectively, the American Chronicle. Although he has not written them sequentially, they amount to a chronicle of America's history: Burr, Lincoln, 1876, Empire, and Washington, D.C. He is completing the volume that precedes Washington, D.C. and covers 1917-1923.

Crossword Puzzles Mark Red-Letter Day

By Jean Marbella
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The word wonks of the world might have gotten totally out of control as they celebrated the 75th anniversary of the crossword puzzle last week. You know what a wild bunch they could be: Why, some might have even solved their puzzles in red ink to honor the puzzle's red-letter day.

That is not to imply that the average crossword puzzler is a four-letter word for "someone who is not very strong on social activities, not interested in sports and enjoys solitary activities." That is how the nation's crossword champ, Doug Hoylman of Chevy Chase, Md., defines the word "nerd," and, incidentally, himself.

Could there be more than 60 million nerds in America? That's how many people puzzle over crosswords, according to surveys.

And today's crosswords, such as the ones solved by Hoylman to beat out 136 competitors at this year's American Crossword Puzzle Tournament, have become increasingly sophisticated, even hip. Among the clues that confronted Hoylman, a 45-year-old insurance actuary, were "Hall of fame?" (Fawn), and "doctoral student's dream?" (the third degree).

What Arthur Wynne has wrought. When that newspaperman published the first crossword puzzle 75 years ago in the New York World, he hardly could have imagined how his "word cross" game, which was descended from an ancient word square game that later appeared in children's books in England during the 19th century, would evolve and endure.

"Crosswords have come a long way," says Will Shortz, the senior editor of Games magazine who sold his first crossword puzzle about 22 years ago, when he was 14. "There are a lot of new ideas, original formats and shapes, different ways of crossing words. They're the most flexible form of puzzle ever invented. Other puzzles have limitations. But interlocking letters ... they're infinite.

"Puzzles are popular because they have definite answers," he adds. "Most of the problems we have don't have a black-and-white answer."

For much of its history (and even today, some would argue), crossword puzzles have been black-and-white in more than one sense. The clues came straight out of a dictionary rather than from a clever brainstorm or a twist on words. If you knew your esnes and Aars, you could fill in the blanks. As the sports guys say, you could look it up.

But more modern puzzles are stretching the old crossword, both in the way clues are created, and even the shape of the once strictly square puzzles.

The changes, however, aren't happening fast enough for some. Stanley Newman, president of the American Crossword Federation, admittedly gets "quite worked up" when he encounters newspapers that run "boring, dull, obscure crosswords ... made up of obscure words that would not be allowed anywhere else in the paper."

Newman, like the Games gang, is part of the "new wave" in puzzlemongering — crossword writers and editors who use modern rather than archaic expressions and pop culture rather than African rivers and Turkish weights for their clues. "It really takes you back," in one of Newman's puzzles, for example, turns out to be "recliner."

While some new wavers scoff at the traditional style, which is exemplified by that grande dame of newspaper crosswords, the New York Times, even those classics have changed over the years.

Times crossword editor Eugene T. Maleska recalls a particularly puzzling puzzle that he ran shortly after he took over as editor in 1977. The Easter-themed puzzle required that you draw an egg in one square any time a word had the letters "e-g-g" in it. The New York Times' owner happened to have a sister who was a great puzzle fan and called her brother up to complain about his "crazy" new crossword editor, Maleska says with a laugh.

For Maleska, crosswords are indeed a labor of love. He used one to woo the college classmate who would become his wife.

"I saw her sitting in some room,

Priscilla Presley Falls For Fun In 'Naked Gun'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — For years, Priscilla Presley has been a darling of the tabloids, as fans followed her storybook romance with Elvis and watched her square off with the Ewings in "Dallas."

Now in "Naked Gun," the latest production from "Airplane" creators David Zucker, Jim Abrahams and Jerry Zucker ("ZAZ"), you can meet the "real" Priscilla Presley, a charming, alluring woman with an endearing tendency to not look where she's going.

"It's opened up a whole new world for me," said Presley, whose clumsy character fits right into the upside down world of "Naked Gun."

"If someone had told me a couple of years ago, I'd be doing 'Naked Gun' with Leslie Nielsen I would have thought they were crazy."

In "Naked Gun," she's first seen at the top of a winding staircase, a closeup affirming her status as one of the world's most beautiful women. She gazes down at an admiring Nielsen and the two are in love. She then proceeds to tumble down the stairs.

"I have to go back and see it two or three more times for things that I missed in the script. You're laughing so hard watching it, you have to go back and see it again," she said.

It might strike movie fans as unusual to cast Presley in a slapstick role, but her lack of comedic experience was exactly what ZAZ — as they call themselves — was looking for.

"I loved the script and I wanted desperately to be in the film," she said. "During the interview I was asked if I had ever done comedy, and I said I never had done it. I thought that was it for me."

But as Presley learned, ZAZ wanted actors who could play off-the-wall scenes with complete seriousness. "They said don't play funny. 'You mean like it happens everyday?' I asked. 'I'm always bumping into walls, right?'"

"Naked Gun," based on the ZAZ TV series "Police Squad," stars Nielsen as Lt. Frank Drebin, a bumbling Los Angeles officer who must prevent a corrupt businessman (Ricardo Montalban) from assassinating Queen Elizabeth II while she visits the city.

Presley plays Montalban's personal assistant, who falls in love with Drebin and helps foil the murder plot.

"It was hard trying to get adjusted to all this funniness," said the actress, who played the very serious Jenna Wade in "Dallas."

"In one scene, Leslie and I are having dinner. He's making suggestive comments and I'm licking his fingers. We must have done it about five times we were laughing so much."

Presley, the daughter of an Air Force officer, was just 14 years old when she met Elvis in West Germany in 1960 and agreed to return with him to his Graceland mansion in Memphis, Tenn.

Elvis and Priscilla were married in 1967 — news cameras faithfully recording the event — and the following year a daughter, Lisa Marie, was born. The marriage, however, could not withstand the pressures of Elvis' unprecedented fame and the Presleys were divorced in 1973.

Priscilla remains protective of Elvis, who died in 1977. In response

Array Of TV Specials Set On New Year's Eve

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Unless you're compelled to spend New Year's Eve knee-deep in honking, confetti-hurling strangers, there's plenty of entertainment right at home with a loyal friend who's been there for you all year — your television set.

It doesn't hand out party favors or free champagne, but Saturday night TV offers an array of musical specials featuring, among others this year, Johann Strauss, Placido Domingo, Mel Torme, Reba McEntire, Manhattan Transfer, Robert Plant and Hall & Oates.

Public television is especially busy. Check local listings with the big-band sounds of "Happy New Year U.S.A.!" and Mel Torme: and "Live from Lincoln Center" with Zubin Mehta, Placido Domingo and the New York Philharmonic.

On Sunday, the Vienna Philharmonic has its fifth New Year's special on PBS, this time featuring conductor Carlos Kleiber and a program of Strauss music. Walter Cronkite is once again host of the special.

At a recent luncheon to publicize "From Vienna: The New Year's Celebration 1989," Cronkite recalled that last year's taping of his introduction — from a balcony overlooking the stage before the concert began — didn't exactly stir the holiday spirit in everyone.

"Last year, a harpist — more happy than harpist — showed up very early to tune up her harp. Every time I got up to say anything, the harp starts going," said Cronkite. "We sent a runner down asking her to desist for five minutes. No, not for TV."

"I always thought the harp was kind of a gentle instrument. Not in her hands. It was a trumpet of Jericho. We sent the management of the house, in tails. She still was not moving."

"Then two stage hands came out and picked her up with the harp and carried her out of the hall, outside somewhere."

The show went on, as it will this year. Incidentally, Cronkite's favorite waltz is "The Blue Danube." He says the Austrians might write them, but Americans know the finer points of dancing them, and he and his wife, Betsy, impress the Viennese by reversing during a waltz. "They appreciate this," Cronkite said. "They have difficulty reversing in a waltz."

If you prefer to see in the new year getting down with some hard rock, MTV offers "Big Bang '89," a countdown of top videos. Close to midnight on the East Coast, MTV will go live to Times Square, where comedian Sandra Bernhard will be joined by guests Gilbert Gottfried, Robert Downey Jr. and Whoopi Goldberg, among others. Then, thanks to the magic of time zones, MTV will move to the West Coast for its midnight celebration with comedian Sam Kinison as host and guests who include rockers Robert Plant, Hall & Oates and Poison.

Want to rock but have no cable? ABC has "Dick Clark's New Year's Rockin' Eve '89," with live reports from Times Square on Saturday night, as well as the Coconut Grove in Hollywood, featuring performances by Natalie Cole, Taylor Dayne, Richard Marx, Reba McEntire and Frankie Valli & The Four Seasons, among others.

The Disney Channel will be repeating "The Manhattan Transfer: Going Home," which isn't necessarily a New Year's Eve special but features the always welcome jazz sounds of the famed vocal quartet.

Back over on PBS, Mel Torme returns for a second year as host of "Happy New Year U.S.A.!", a big-band and jazz show that originates live from Baltimore. This year, Torme is joined by vocalists Rosemary Clooney and Lonette McKee and the Glenn Miller Orchestra. There will also be ice dancing with John Curry and JoJo Starbuck.

PRISCILLA PRESLEY

to the succession of books written about the late rock 'n' roll star, she decided to come out with one of her own, "Elvis and Me."

"My book showed a much more human side. It gave him more understanding," said Presley, who lives in California with writer-director Marco Garibaldi and their 1-year-old son, Navarone Anthony.

She originally sought a quiet life after her divorce, and she ran her own boutique before drifting into show business. She appeared in commercials as a spokeswoman for Wella Balsam and made her television acting debut in 1979 as co-host of "Those Amazing Animals."

Four years later, she auditioned for "Dallas" for the part of Bobby Ewing's new girlfriend. She was understandably nervous; she had limited acting experience and knew little about the show.

"I only knew about 'Who shot J.R.?' she admitted. 'I didn't think I'd get the part.'"

However, she hit it off with Patrick Duffy, who plays Bobby Ewing.

"Everyone told me if I passed the test with Patrick I was in. I was a little bit reserved at first. I have a tendency of doing that, but he just wants to have fun. If you go in with an ego, I think Patrick will run over you."

NBC Chief Reorganizes The Top Echelon Of News

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC News President Michael Gartner has reorganized his top brass. Joe Angotti has been named senior veep instead of regular veep. He takes over coverage, operations, special programming, weekend "Nightly News," "Sunrise" and affiliate relations.

Tom Ross, already a senior veep, will head up a new "strategic planning" department that will also include Bob McFarland, former Washington bureau chief, and Bob Keyes, now director of news operations. Tim Russert, previously named senior veep in Washington will oversee "Sunday Today," "Meet the Press" and the Washington bureau.

Singer's Hit Record Reflects Philosophy

By Elissa M. Vecchione
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Samantha Fox's latest hit single, "I Wanna Have Some Fun," expresses the young singer's carefree philosophy.

"I'm a very happy person. There are not many things that really upset me," the 22-year-old British rocker says. "Everything I do I seem to enjoy. I'm a really lucky person to be in job that I really enjoy."

Her single is fast climbing the charts, following the success of "Naughty Girls Need Love" and "Touch Me."

"I Wanna Have Some Fun," her third LP, is Fox's favorite album. She also calls it her best. "I think I've just improved musically. You don't know what sound is coming next after each record."

The numerous producers of "I Wanna Have Some Fun" give the album a special variety in sounds and styles, and include Full Force, Fred Zarr and the team of Stock, Aitkin and Waterman, who also produce Rick Astley and Bananarama.

Fox also had a lot of freedom on this album. "I just go to the studio and sing how I want to sing, they don't really tell me how to do anything," she said. "I make up my own style with their style of music."

Most of her music doesn't carry meaningful messages or lyrics, but she does hope her listeners understand the importance of enjoying their youth. "Be careful, but have a good time," she says. "Every young girl or boy should be having fun."

Fox grew up in London. Her father, Pat, worked in construction, carpentry and building refurbishing. Her mother, Carol, was a homemaker. Both parents now work full time managing their daughter's career.

Fox began modeling when she was about 15. She went on to become one of England's favorite "Page 3 girls," the topless models featured regularly on page 3 of The Sun newspaper. When her modeling career began to really take off, she dropped out of school and has had no desire for further formal education.

"I saw stars and went," she said. "I've learned more traveling the world and being with people a lot older than me and in the business than I would have learned in school."

Her popularity as a model attracted music executives, and it wasn't long before she was offered a contract. But singing spelled an end to modeling.

Though she lives alone in an apartment in London, she doesn't stray too far from her family. Her younger sister, Vanessa, helps the Foxes with the business which includes not only Samantha's recording career and performances but also calendars, clothing, posters and other paraphernalia fans crave.

Fox's popularity is so enormous in England that she often has problems with privacy. She plans to sell a country home because fans found out about it and it's no longer the safe hideaway she intended it to be. "I'm news, everything I do they want to write about," she said.

In the meantime, she's beginning to look at a movie career, and will do screen tests for an undisclosed project. And with what little free time she has available, Fox fills it with workouts, swimming, movies, concerts and writing songs. She also likes fast cars.

"That's what I'd like to do, you know, speed car racing. I'd love a motorbike really," she says glancing at her father who responds, "That is out of the question."

She's planning at least five more albums, but she's not sure what will develop after that.

"I don't know what I want to do in five years. Who knows, I might meet the man of my dreams and get married," she said.

And who might that ideal man be? Actor Mickey Rourke, she said. But first she has to meet him.

Boys Club Malls Its Way To Top Of Record Charts

By Dennis Hunt
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

HOLLYWOOD — Record industry insiders laughed when MCA Records tried to launch a young singer by putting her on a tour of shopping malls.

But when Tiffany went on to become one of the biggest stars of 1987 and 1988, the laughter stopped.

Now MCA is employing the same strategy with a young duo known as the Boys Club. The plan seems to make perfect sense: Gene Hunt and Joe Pasquale have a Top 20 single, "I Remember Holding You," with their first single from their debut album, "Boys Club." But they have no visibility. Fans know the single but not the act.

Since malls are big teen hangouts, they're full of the kinds of fans these young pop artists are aiming to reach. And mall officials are eager for such attractions, regarding them as good "traffic builders." All in all, it's a cheap, easy way to get exposure for a new, teen-oriented act.

"The Boys Club is perfect for the malls," said MCA executive Larry Solters, originator of the mall-tour idea. "We look at malls as alternative venues."

"Tiffany started off playing malls," Solters said. "She was the first to do malls. She was an unknown artist at the time. She couldn't draw people to clubs and doing a club tour is so expensive. So I thought of the mall thing as an alternative."

"She could sing live to backing (instrumental) tracks at a mall. It's a great place to reach that target teen audience."

At first the experiment seemed like a failure. "The first shopping mall she played, there were only 12 people watching," Solters said. "But at the end — after about 100 shows in different malls — she was playing to about 1,100 people."

The Boys Club appeals to that same teen audience. And despite its Top 20 single, Solters said, the duo still isn't ready for clubs.

Vidal A Harsh Critic Of American Society

"I'm going to call it 'Hollywood,' and Hollywood is in it," he said. "Woodrow Wilson, the First (World) War, the League of Nations, Warren G. Harding and the Teapot Dome — which I then intercut with the rise of the silent movies. ... The political history of this was not all that interesting, whereas what was interesting was Hollywood. This is the first world fact. ... It came right out of here and it was the first great cultural fact that touched every country on Earth."

While Vidal is finishing Hollywood, he said, Walter Clemons, a former Newsweek critic, is completing Vidal's biography.

"He's been at it a couple of years now. ... He's got his work cut out for him, because I never did anything. I wrote and I politically activated, but these stories (biographies) are usually horror stories."

"Of course, who knows, I'm not at the end, touch wood, but it's always drugs, divorce, sex changes, disasters and I've had nothing of that sort in my life. He (Clemons) gets very interested in my private life and keeps saying, 'There doesn't seem to be any,' and I keep telling him, 'What you don't see, you don't see.' It's as simple as that. I was always more public than private."

He expects to finish Hollywood next year. By then Clemons' book should also be out, he said, and Vidal plans to make use of his own biography, debating Clemons on its merits, in completing the Chronicle.

"If I'm spared, there will be a seventh, a summing-up volume, which will be written, as of today, by me looking back over my own life, looking back over the life of the republic, mixing some of the fictional characters with real people along the way. ..."

Thanks to his beloved grandfather, Sen. Thomas Gore of Oklahoma, he spent much of his childhood in Washington, knew the capital before the days of its solid Romanesque landmarks and was beneficiary to his grandfather's reminiscences, including stories of his friendship with Abe Lincoln's son Robert. Through his father, Eugene, who was FDR's appointee to the new Bureau of Air Commerce, there were pioneering days and flights, and acquaintance with Amelia Earhart and Charles Lindbergh.

Vidal knew Hollywood and the studio system, having arrived as the last contract writer at MGM in 1954, and was on hand for the early days of television.

One world Vidal has left behind was New York. He lived outside the city and ran for Congress in 1960 in a Republican stronghold, losing but finishing well for a Democrat. He took up Los Angeles, instead. He calls New York a Third World city because of its poverty juxtaposed with "arrogant wealth that in a less docile society would be pre-revolutionary" and in the degree of its violence.

"You see the way the rich live (in New York). I could live rich there if I wanted to. But I don't want to live behind guards; I don't want to have TV cameras in every hall; I don't want to live in a state of siege. L.A. to me is, you have a house you know and you can withdraw into the house — this is the good part of Los Angeles — you can have any kind of life you want. Then the air went bad here. My sinuses cannot cope."

So Vidal spends much of his time at his flat in Rome or villa in Ravello. In 1981, the patriot in semi-exile registered to vote, ran for the Senate in California and came in second in the Democratic primary. The vote he cast for himself was the first he cast since 1964; he has not voted since.

He has no plans to vote or run for a political office again. That is consistent with his view of patriotism, he said: "It's pointless."

Restaurateur Turns $500 Investment Into Empire

By Ruth Reichl
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — Eleven years ago Bruce Marder was sleeping on a banquet at a restaurant called Cafe California. At night he went to a friend's house to shower. In the daytime he was the restaurant's chef. He was also the waiter. And the dishwasher.

"After the first week my partner and I pooled our tips and hired a dishwasher," he says. "We just kept moving up."

Way up. Today Marder has built a $500 investment in a funky Santa Monica, Calif., restaurant into an empire. Marder's third restaurant, the $2.5 million DC 3, opened early this month. Next year he will open another big deal restaurant (with Citrus' Michel Richard).

It is not inconceivable that in the decade to come, Bruce Marder will emerge as the city's most influential restaurateur.

But Bruce Marder is hardly a household name. He has not been inducted into Cook's Magazine's Who's Who. You don't read stories about him in Gourmet or Bon Appetit either. And when people talk about California cuisine, the name Marder does not spring to anybody's lips.

Yet he was cooking California cuisine at his West Beach Cafe here before Michael's, before Spago, before Trumps. Marder had duck tacos on his menu before the term "Southwestern cuisine" was coined. He streamlined French cooking and reinterpreted American food. And in a time when food and art were not considered much of a mix, Bruce Marder was hanging really good art on the walls of his restaurant.

"At first it was hard to get anybody to take me seriously," he admits. "We were successful, but we didn't have a name. It took at least six years for people to recognize what an establishment we were."

Says one friend baldly: "That's probably because Bruce has absolutely no personality."

Marder may be L.A.'s most handsome chef. He is certainly among its most talented. He is bright. He is well-dressed. He is successful. But he is, by his own admission, "not a people person." Small talk is foreign to his nature. "I'm not the sort of person who goes up to every table and schmoozes," he says.

In normal conversation his voice is so low it is hard to hear, and when you ask for anecdotes about him, there aren't any. In a world where chefs are as famous for their personalities as they are for their food, Marder is an anomaly. Unlike the amiable Wolfgang Puck, the quotable Michael McCarty, the outspoken Susan Feniger and Mary Sue Milliken, the suave Piero Selvaggio and the lovable Michel Richard, Marder has been easy to overlook. He may make wonderful food; he definitely does not make wonderful copy.

But if Marder lacks charm, he owns a double dose of an equally important quality: determination.

"Bruce is a funny kind of guy," says artist Charles Arnoldi, who found himself designing DC 3's interior although he had never done any design work. "He's very sure about what he wants. ... When he decides on something, he's committed to it and he doesn't let anybody change it."

Marder remembers the exact moment when he became committed to the idea of cooking. He had dropped out of the University of California, Los Angeles and gone to Europe. Now he was camping on a beach in Morocco. "It was Christmas 1972, and I was out of it in a big way in the back of a van. All of a sudden it came to me that I wanted to be a chef instead of a dentist." Marder never looked back.

He ended up back in the U.S.A., trying to make enough money to go to France and learn to cook. "I read about the Dumas Pere School of French Cuisine in Chicago. It was run by John Snowden, who was an excellent chef in terms of technique." Marder talked Snowden into taking him on as an apprentice.

Marder stayed about a year. "I was learning a lot," he says, "but I couldn't stand being with John. He was an awful person." So Marder came home to Los Angeles and tried to get a job in a French restaurant. And tried. "In 1975 no French restaurant would hire Americans. I tried everywhere." Marder finally got a job flipping omelets at Cafe Figaro.

Marder then went to work as day chef at Cafe California. "The night chef was charging $10 for dinner. This was 1977, and people in the neighborhood weren't going to go for it. No way. So the restaurant went out of business."

One of the partners asked Marder to help keep the restaurant going. "So I took $500 of my own money, and we became partners. I made quiche and soup and salad and the lady who'd put up the money heated up the quiche and mixed the salads. I waited on the tables and washed dishes and talked to people and said, 'If you want dinner, just give me a day's notice and I'll make you anything you want.'"

It is typical of the aloof Marder that he never refers to his partner, Carol Lorenz, as anything but "the lady." He lived at the restaurant and took showers at her house, but the two apparently didn't get along. "It was my restaurant, my idea and she wanted to have some input," he says. "She wanted to put yellow checkered tablecloths and place mats on the table. ... She always wore muumuus, homemade dresses, things like that. It wasn't working for me. So she bought me out in six months for $35,000. It hurt a lot to leave."

But it hurt good. For Marder had an opportunity to take over a restaurant called Casablanca in the Los Angeles neighborhood of Venice. The down payment was $30,000. Marder would finally be his own boss.

Marder named his new restaurant West Beach Cafe; he envisioned it as a community gathering place. He hung the work of neighborhood artists on his walls; the artists, in turn, hung out in his restaurant. He showed movies on Monday nights. He brought in bands from time to time. None of it, he says now, worked well. "I didn't put enough energy into it. I wanted to be in the kitchen."

What came out of that kitchen was enough to keep people coming into the restaurant. It was highly unusual food for 1978. Today it would be called California cuisine, but in those days it defied classification. The menu was constantly changing, but at one time it might offer slices of rare duck breast in Cabernet vinegar sauce, basil linguine with morels in walnut oil, stuffed calamari and steak with French fries. Marder, for instance, loved Mexican food. He saw nothing incongruous about making tacos out of filet mignon — and serving them with Chateau Lafite. He eventually put the dishes onto his regular menu. If you didn't like Mexican food, you could order something else. "There was always a choice," he says.

Marder may have given his customers a choice — but those who worked for him rarely had that option. Says Arnoldi, "The way he runs his restaurants, it comes out like he's bossy. But it's really just that he knows what he wants."

Marder's wife, Rebecca, agrees. "The thing is," she says, "Bruce really takes over. He is quite the autocratic businessman."

But he did not want, he says now, to open a second restaurant when he was running the West Beach Cafe. But "the landlord wanted to put a restaurant in on the corner, and he came to me."

And Marder went to his wife's close friend, architect Frank Gehry, and asked him to design the new restaurant, Rebecca's.

Gehry's design proved to be so startlingly original that it threatens to overshadow the excellent modern Mexican food.

When it came to his latest venture, Marder also knew exactly what he wanted the interior of his restaurant to be. Arnoldi, known primarily as a painter, was hardly enthusiastic.

"I'm not an architect," he says, "I didn't want to do it. Bruce wanted me to do it. He said, 'You can do it in your spare time.' I did it." Of course.

The resulting restaurant is a knockout. Arnoldi has taken the huge space (14,000 square feet), divided it and turned it into an elegant work of sculpture. You walk in, turn around and find that you have come through an enormous ball. Everywhere you look are surfaces demanding to be touched, examined, paid attention to. Outside on the airport's runway planes are constantly taking off or coming down, but the real action is in the restaurant with its wood and its polished stucco and its marble. Marder may have hung local art on his walls at West Beach, but with Rebecca's and DC 3, he has turned the restaurants themselves into works of art.

But where Rebecca's is overwhelming, DC 3 has a quiet elegance. Says Marder, "You've got the warmth of the wood. ... It's nice to take the idea of old wood restaurants, like going to Musso and Frank's (in Hollywood), which is so nice to be in, and translating it into a lighter, more fun interior."

The restaurant seats 180 people — but that is only the beginning. There is also a private dining room (30 seats), an enormous banquet room (up to 300 seats), even a table in the kitchen. For his part, Marder seems unconcerned about the size. "Seating that many people is not that big a deal," he says confidently. "The important thing is to try and figure out what people in the area want to eat."

Puzzles Mark 75th Anniversary

and it was love at first sight," Maleska. "As part of the courtship process, I found out she liked solving crossword puzzles, so that weekend I made one up. One across was a four-letter word for 'most beautiful girl on campus.'"

That would be "Jean." Who are the ink-stained, head-scratching puzzle fans among us? It takes more than sheer IQ.

"I think you have to be mentally flexible," Shortz says. "When you're stumped by a clue, you should be able to step back and approach it from a different angle. It is more than intelligence. Just because someone's intelligent doesn't mean they can solve puzzles."

Puzzle solving involves the frontal lobe of the brain, says Dr. Barry Gordon, an expert on cognitive neurology at Johns Hopkins Hospital. "People who have lost their frontal lobes have a terrible time solving puzzles, or anything new, or anything that requires flexible thinking."

As you get more skilled in puzzle solving, you can skip over the initial steps that you once had to take, he said.

"It's like learning to walk or ride a bike or drive," Gordon says. "At first you have to consciously be directing yourself, but after a while, you can be programmed enough. It's like you've erected scaffolding on a building, and then you can take the scaffolding down because the building is already erect."

To Charles "Chick" Elum, president of a group called Puzzle Buffs International, puzzles are the family business. His father invented circle-a-word, which is sort of the "Jeopardy" of crossword puzzles — it gives you a block of letters; you have to find the words.

"I'll be lifting my glass to the memory of Mr. Wynne," offers Elum, "and to the millions of puzzle fans everywhere. It's the largest, single, identifiable — and printable — indoor sport that there is."

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

"PJ's havin' a piggybank ride."

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY Dec. 29

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Romance was growing, but now it seems to be fading. Stay in the background, and get ready for it to bloom again. Plan a short trip.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Lucky moves could come your way. In the evening let out the cat and relax with family members. A surprise call may come from afar.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Over-optimism could be dangerous to your wallet. It may also affect romance. Avoid risky moves, and stay within proven objectives.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Keep your nose out of a close relative's problems until you are asked for help. Create interesting plans for the weekend.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Creating future plans today may have an extravagant outcome which is beyond your means. Stay clear of those who may waste your time and money.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Stay with a normal weekday schedule. Use your reserved side, and say no to unproductive plans and activities. Luck is on your side.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): If you are still undecided about holiday plans, let someone else take over and nail down chores and schedules. Control your spending.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): When you feel threatened, you test others to determine their level of commitment. Such pressure has the opposite effect. Remain confident.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You could be pulled off course easily and not even know how it all happened. Broken schedules, promises and routines bother you.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): A lucky streak could be beneficial if you cut out unnecessary frills. Enthusiasm may be over-inflated and lead to gullible actions.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Read between the lines before signing agreements or contracts. You have analyzed a home problem to death. Relax for peace of mind.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Family problems could be a headache. Others are passing the buck. Map out routines that can be followed, and don't be fooled.

 Stop, look and listen is sound advice, not only for crossing the road but also for working out opponents' holdings at the bridge table. This hand is a prime example.

 North judged well in removing the double of five clubs. While it is true that with the lead of ace of hearts and a continuation that contract would have failed by a trick, on the more normal diamond lead declarer would have romped home.
 East's ace of clubs took the first trick, and he shifted to the queen of hearts. Declarer won his ace, led a diamond to the ace and returned a diamond to the nine. After the queen of diamonds lost to the king, declarer ruffed the club return and drew the last trump. The crucial point of the hand had been reached. How should declarer play the spade suit?
 Those who follow rubrics would remember 'Eight ever, nine never' and blithely cash the ace-king. But is that logical in the light of the auction and play?

 East surely has a six-card club suit and has shown up with four diamonds. If he had a singleton heart, West's distribution would have been 2-7-0-4, and he would probably have jumped to four hearts at his first turn. It is more probable that West has only six hearts, leaving East with two.
 That means that 12 of East's cards have been accounted for, leaving him with only one spade. Therefore, the almost sure-trick line is for declarer to cash the ace of spades and then finesse the jack to land his contract.

A December Mouse

By Jessica Oakley

Once there was a mouse named December. He had bright green eyes and fur white as snow! It was Christmas Eve and St. Nicholas was loading up his sleigh at the North Pole. December jumped into the first bag of toys. St. Nicholas hitched up the sleigh and called, "On Dasher, on Dancer, On Comet, Cupid, Doner and Blitzen, we can't forget Vixen!" Off they flew into the sky. "Whoa," said Santa. St. Nick grabbed the first bag of toys with December in it and went down the smokey brick chimney. The house had a lit Christmas tree, wreaths, holly, mistletoe and a snowman outside! When Santa opened the bag of toys, he found the little mouse, named December, cuddled up by a doll named Catherine. Santa woke the mouse up.

December said, "Hello Santa, my name is December." "That's it," said Santa. "That's what?" asked December. "I'm going to name this cold month after you!" December cheered! That's how the month of December got its name.

A Happy Christmas Tree

By Ashley Harris

One Christmas long, long ago there was a tree. He was happy. Then one day a man came and chopped it down and carried it home. For a few days it just sat in a stand outside. Soon the man brought down the ornaments from the attic and decorated the tree with lights and wreaths. It was a very beautiful tree. On the top they put a great big elf and filled the bottom with lots of presents. The tree saw mistletoe hung all around the house.

When Christmas Eve came, the tree saw Santa Claus come down the chimney. He was covered with dust and had a red nose. It was the real Santa Claus! He had a black bag full of all kinds of toys. There was a boat, ball, truck and a "My Child" doll. The doll was for the little girl named Ashley who lived in the house. Near the bottom of Santa's sack was a beautiful ornament. It was a crystal snowman. This ornament glittered and shined. The tree picked it up and put it in front of him. This made the tree feel very proud.

Ashley Harris, 8, a student at Sam D. Bundy School receives special mention.

Getting Ready For Winter

By Paul Lichstein

One misty morning I went to scrape the frost off the car. I saw a squirrel gathering nuts and berries. He was full of chatter. I laughed for a moment. Then I realized that he was getting ready for the cool, nippy winter. Soon he left to go to his tree.

Substitute Santa

By Carin Tew

It was the day before Christmas Eve and Santa was sick. He had pneumonia. So he called me up and said, "Look here, I have pneumonia and I can't go out tomorrow night. So I want to know if you can go out for me?"

I said, "OK, Santa." Now I do not know what to wear. So I sat down and thought. Hum-m-m-m. I know! I can wear my brother's suit he wore in the play. He was the lion in the "Wizard of Oz."

Then I thought how am I going to get there? So I sat down again and thought, hum-m-m-m. "Oh, I know—the horses. All I have to do is find a big enough cart," I said.

Now I was ready. But I had to hitch up the horses. So I went out and did just that. "Now, I'm ready," I said. So I was off and very excited. Giddy-up, giddy-up I would say. It was very boring for a minute. But, finally, I came to Bill and Jane's house. I got out a baby doll for Jane and an airplane for Bill. In their stockings I put a little car for Bill and a baby doll bottle for Jane. So I was through with them.

Then I came to Jim and Jill. I gave Jill a pair of skates and Jim a bat and ball. I went on and on.

It was the last house and guess whose house it was? It was my house and I had run out of toys. So I took off my suit and left my cookies for all my family. It was a good Christmas after all.

Carin Tew, 8, a student at Sam D. Bundy School receives special mention.

Chas Rice, 6, a student at Sam D. Bundy School receives special mention.

Santa Was Sick

By Will Kitchin

When Santa was sick there was not a present to be given. No one seemed to care if they didn't get any presents because Christmas is a time to celebrate about Jesus and God. After a few nights Santa got well. He got ready to go and give people presents. Three days after Christmas the children got presents.

Will Kitchin, 8, a student at Third Street School receives special mention.

Christmas

By Preston Joyner

I think Christmas is love. I also think about Jesus' birth. I like to get presents. I like the best part of all and that is being together at Christmas.

Colorful Tradition

Bright, Candied Fruits Add Flavor, Beauty To Sweet Holiday Confections

Studded with glistening bits of candied orange peel and glazed cherries, desserts like fruitcake and stollen are traditional Yuletide treats. Colorful and intensely flavored, their distinctive sweet, yet slightly bitter aroma and taste — a result of the candied fruit and peels that are added — are an important part of the holiday season.

Often storebought, desserts made with candied fruit are ideal for the home baker, particularly around the hectic holiday season, because many of them can be prepared in advance, and actually improve — their flavors mellowing and blending neatly together — as they age.

Even if they've not been a part of your regular holiday dessert repertoire, they deserve consideration because of the festive air they impart, and because they bring to contemporary celebrations the flavor of the past, tradition at its most appealing.

The recipes below range from classic candied fruit recipes to ones that are more unusual. The simple, elegant fruitcake, Hedelmakakku, is a Scandinavian variation, the recipe for which is reproduced from The Great Scandinavian Baking Book (Little, Brown) by Beatrice Ojakangas.

FRUITCAKE (Hedelmakakku)

Vanilla wafer crumbs for coating pan

1 cup unsalted butter, room temperature
1 cup sugar
5 eggs

2 cups all-purpose flour
2 tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
1½ cups golden raisins

3 Tbsp. finely chopped candied orange peel
2 Tbsp. finely chopped candied fruitcake fruits
¼ cup finely chopped blanched almonds

Butter a 10-inch fluted tube-cake mold and dust with vanilla wafer crumbs. Preheat oven to 350 degrees F.

In a large mixing bowl, cream the butter and sugar until blended; add the eggs and beat until light and fluffy. Mix flour, baking powder and salt. In a small bowl, combine raisins, orange peel, cake fruits and almonds. Add 1 Tbsp. of the flour mixture to the fruits and toss to coat each piece well.

Blend the flour into the creamed mixture, then add the raisin mixture, blending well. Turn into the prepared pan and smooth out the batter.

Bake for 50 to 60 minutes or until a wooden skewer inserted in the center comes out clean. Cool 5 minutes before removing from the pan. Makes one 10-inch cake.

Also reproduced from "The Great Scandinavian Baking Book" is the recipe for Danish Rocks, chewy drop cookies redolent with spices and filled with a myriad of good things — three kinds of nuts plus candied pineapple and cherries or raisins.

DANISH ROCKS (Rokkekager)

1 cup butter, room temperature
1½ cups light or dark brown sugar, packed

3 eggs
2½ cups all-purpose flour
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking soda

1 tsp. cinnamon
½ tsp. nutmeg
¼ tsp. cloves
1 tsp. vanilla

3 cups mixed candied pineapple and cherries or raisins
2 lbs. pitted dates, cut up

1 cup whole filberts
1 cup whole pecans
1 cup coarsely chopped walnuts

Cover baking sheets with parchment paper or lightly grease them. Preheat oven to 350 degrees F.

In a large bowl, cream the butter and sugar. Add eggs and vanilla and beat well. Combine the flour, salt, baking soda, cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves. Add to the creamed mixture to make a smooth dough. Mix in the fruits and nuts. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto the prepared baking sheets about 2 inches apart. Bake 8 to 10 minutes until lightly browned. Remove from baking sheets and cool on racks. Store in an airtight tin. These cookies keep well. Makes about 8 dozen cookies.

The recipe for the yeasty, filled Fruited Braid, a dessert as decorative as it is delicious, is called from

FRUITED BRAID

1 pkg. active dry yeast or one cake (¾ oz.) fresh yeast
1 cup warm milk
¼ cup granulated sugar

½ cup (¼ lb.) butter or margarine, melted
2 tsp. ground cardamom
4 Tbsp. very finely ground blanched almonds

3 eggs, beaten
3½ cups all-purpose flour
FILLING:

2 Tbsp. butter, melted
½ cup apricot preserves
½ cup sliced blanched almonds
¼ cup diced candied orange peel

¼ cup glazed cherries, halved
¼ cup yellow raisins, plumped in hot sherry or liquor
¼ cup quartered pitted prunes

Dissolve the yeast in the warm milk (105 degrees if fresh, about 120 degrees if dried) in a bowl. Add the sugar, butter, salt, cardamom and almonds; combine.

Set aside 2 Tbsp. of the egg. Add the remaining egg and 2 cups of the flour to the yeast mixture; beat until smooth. Add the remaining flour gradually, beating until a soft, pliable dough has formed. Beat until the dough is smooth and not sticky.

Sprinkle the dough with a little flour; cover and let rise in a warm place until it has doubled in volume (about 1½ hrs.), or cover and refrigerate it to let it rise overnight.

When the dough is doubled in volume, punch it down, then turn it onto a lightly floured board; knead it until smooth. Roll the dough into a rectangular strip about 10 inches by 18 inches. Spread the melted butter, the apricot preserves, over the rolled-out dough; sprinkle the nuts and fruits to within 1 inch of the long edge. Roll up the dough lengthwise.

Place the roll, seam side down, on a greased 12x18-inch cookie sheet, setting it diagonally (to accommodate its length) and tucking the ends under. Make incisions with sharp scissors, about 1 inch apart, going almost — but not completely — through to the bottom. Pull the slices alternately left and right, then pinch and nuts and stir until mixture boils. Turn out onto a large platter that has been moistened with cold water. Flatten with spatula dipped in hot water. Sprinkle with confectioners' sugar. Allow to cool 8 to 10 minutes. Cut into small squares.

FRUIT AND NUT DIVINITY

3 cups sugar
1 cup light corn syrup
1 cup water
3 egg whites, beaten stiff
1 tsp. vanilla
½ cup chopped nuts
¾ cup candied fruit

In a 2-quart saucepan combine sugar, corn syrup and water. Cook, stirring, until sugar dissolves. Then cook to hard-ball stage (260 degrees F.). Pour in a thin stream into beaten egg whites, beating at medium speed until begins to thicken. Add vanilla, candied fruit and nuts. Then beat with wooden spoon, lifting high to incorporate air until candy is very stiff. Pour into buttered square pan to cool. Cut into squares. Let dry until firm and wrap individually in waxed paper or store in a tightly covered tin.

Add Danish Rocks to your holiday dessert table.

the top outside of each slice to a point. Let the roll stand in a warm place for about 30 minutes to rise. Brush the top with reserved beaten egg.

Bake at 350 degrees F. for about 25 minutes, until it is golden. Cool. Wrap the bread in transparent wrap on a base of foil-wrapped cardboard or wood. Makes 1 long loaf.

Finally, from Candies & Goodies (Allen D. Bragdon Publishers, Inc.), a tiny jewel of a book filled with appealing recipes for a wide range of confections, come two candy recipes:

ORANGE POPPY SEED CANDIES

3 cups honey
1½ lbs. poppy seeds
1 cup candied peel, diced
2 cups walnuts, finely chopped
Confectioners' sugar

In 2-quart saucepan cook honey and sugar over moderate heat until sugar dissolves. Add poppy seeds and boil until mixture reaches hard-crack stage (300 degrees F.), about 30 minutes. Add orange peel

Kitchen Puts Its Recipes To Test

By Rober Munns
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES, Iowa — From the start, Barb Goldman's recipe for scallops didn't have a chance.

Out they came, steaming hot and fresh from one of the 10 test kitchens for Better Homes and Gardens magazine, served in tiny portions for a group of food editors gathered in a taste test.

"I think it's pretty tasty and the sauce doesn't stick to the pasta," said Ms. Goldman, a senior associate food editor. Using outlines from other recipes, she had assembled a group of recipes to appear in Better Homes next spring, but first they had to pass the magazine's test kitchen test.

Everyone at the table agreed about the consistency, so the question became whether to reduce the amount of sauce or keep the volume and make it thicker. In its second test, it was decided, the recipe will include two teaspoons of cornstarch, which helps coagulate sauces.

Someone else said the dish didn't have much sass, so a bit of lemon pepper was added. Shredded carrots will be substituted for red peppers next time.

And so it went for the other recipes as well. Each was tested for taste, appearance, nutritional value and ease of preparation, and each was sent packing with a list of changes. The adjusted recipes will be prepared and tested again, to be published only after the testers are satisfied.

Uncounted magazines send out recipes and many have their own test kitchens, but Better Homes, circulation about 8 million, says it has the largest test operation.

Some 11,200 recipe tests are done each year, and each is tested at least twice, the second time with changes ordered by the food testers. Almost all of the ingredients are readily available national brands.

"Our recipes are very do-able for a wide variety of cooks, from the beginner to the accomplished cook," says Nancy Byal, executive food editor for Better Homes. "When we print a recipe, we guarantee that it will not only work, but it will taste good."

"People do have limited time, and if they prepare one of our recipes, they know they won't have a failure," says Sharon Stilwell, director of the test kitchens.

"If we tell them it takes 20 minutes to do, then it will take 20 minutes," she says. "Unless the phone rings or something."

To make sure the recipes are do-able, the test kitchens are set up to resemble the ones in average homes, with normalized ranges and other appliances. The cooks are home economists skilled in different types of food preparation, but they're also attuned to the abilities of their readers.

"We have to make it foolproof so it works every time," says Ms. Byal. The cooks at home, she says, have neither the time nor the temperament to experiment with complex recipes that need tinkering.

She says the business of publishing recipes has come a long way since the first one by Better Homes went out in 1922, six years before the test kitchens were established. That early recipe told cooks to mix berries, put them in a shell and heat the combination until it became a pie.

"There was nothing on adding sugar or even on how long to cook it," says Ms. Byal, explaining that the turn-of-the-century cook had enough knowledge to fill in the blanks.

Cooks today have less time to prepare meals and they demand recipes of greater variety and nutritional value, she says.

Ms. Stilwell says the tests aim for unbiased results. They won't rule out green peppers just because one tester doesn't like them, for example, and the milder foods will get their tests ahead of dishes that might dominate the palate, such as sweet or spicy hot items.

The testers say regional tastes are not a factor. Although the testers are Midwestern, most have broad food experience.

Poor Labeling Frustrates Effort To Avoid Allergens

Q: My 5-year-old son is allergic to peanut oil and cottonseed oil. Why do ingredient labels say "this product may have one of the following oils: palm oil, coconut oil, soybean oil or cottonseed oil?" It takes a lot of time to read the labels. Mrs. E.T., Greenville.

A: If a food product can be made with any type of oil without affecting the final color, flavor and texture, the company will make it with the least expensive oil available at the time of production. This is an economic decision. There are, however, consumer groups trying to make labeling more specific for items like oils that affect consumers' health. Folks at high risk for heart disease are as frustrated as you are, but for different reasons. They want to know if the oil is coconut or palm oil, which they must avoid since it raises blood cholesterol. You and many other parents of children with allergies to peanut or soy have good reason to know which oil is used to prevent the allergic reaction. Some food companies are responding to the consumer interest and you should support them by buying their products.

The logical treatment for a food allergy is elimination or avoidance of that food. Children seem to most frequently be allergic to milk, egg, soy, peanut, chocolate, corn, rice and wheat. The good news is that many children outgrow these food allergies or food sensitivities. You told me you had your son tested by a doctor to confirm the allergy. That testing is an appropriate step to take. We can't predict when children will outgrow the food allergies, so you have to test the child. Ask your doctor when you can try to put small amounts of the peanut or cottonseed oil back in the diet to test for reactions. Unfortunately, until your son grows out of the allergy, you've either got a lot of label reading ahead of you or lots of food preparation from "scratch." Don't forget to carefully explain the situation to your son so he won't feel left out of foods other kids are eating or mistakenly eat an offending food. Also, make sure babysitters and other caregivers are aware of the problem and your son's reactions.

Wine Expert Answers Champagne Questions

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Champagne adds an elegant, festive touch to any entertaining occasion, particularly during the holidays.

Clark Wolf, chairman of the New York chapter of the American Institute of Wine and Food, offers answers to some of the most commonly asked questions about champagne:

Q: What's the difference between champagne and sparkling wine?

A: Every champagne is sparkling wine, but not all sparkling wines are champagne. Only those wines produced from certain grape varieties — Chardonnay, Pinot Noir and Pinot Meunier — grown in the legally designated region of Northern France, can be called champagne.

Q: What foods are best with champagne?

A: Champagne is "crisp" in nature, so it is important to choose foods that balance this quality. These foods can include hot and cold soups, mousses, fish, poultry, pasta and all combinations of eggs.

Q: What information on the label will help in making a purchase decision?

A: Knowledge of the following frequently used terms will be helpful when making a selection. Of course, the reputation of the producer and importer must also be considered.

Vintage: The champagne of one outstanding year. For example, 1982 is considered to be an outstanding vintage.

Non-vintage (without a date): a blend of champagne, usually from more than one year.

Cuvee: The blend or special lot made from several champagne vineyards in the distinctive style of a particular champagne house.

Rose: This champagne is dry and full-bodied, and can vary in color from pale gold to salmon. Rose champagne complements roast meats and game and is a delicious companion to rich desserts.

Brut: dry champagne.
Demi-sec: sweet champagne.

Q: How should champagne be stored?

A: It's important to keep a bottle on its side in a cool, dark place where the temperature does not fluctuate. Ideally, the storage temperature should be 50 to 55 degrees F. Storing a bottle horizontally will keep the cork in contact with the wine, preventing it from drying out or spoiling. Although sold for immediate enjoyment, when properly stored, champagne will keep its full flavor and sparkle for at least five years. Magnums, which hold 1.5 liters, can last the longest. Once champagne has been opened, a special champagne stopper can be used to preserve the sparkle for up to 48 hours.

Q: What are the best ways to cool champagne?

A: Champagne is at its proper serving temperature if kept in a wine bucket filled with ice for 20 minutes or placed for one hour in the coldest section of the refrigerator. If champagne is served too warm, the wine foams excessively when opened and loses its sparkle. If served too cold, the champagne loses its fragrance. Remember, never place champagne in the freezer!

Q: What is the best way to open a bottle of champagne?

A: Tilt the bottle at a 45 degree angle, away from guests, breakable objects and windows. Unpeel the foil and remove the wire hood that holds the cork in place, without letting go of the cork. Using a cloth or towel to cover the bottle, hold the cork firmly between the thumb and forefinger; with the other hand, twist the bottle, not the cork, in one direction. The pressure will gradually help push out the cork, resulting in a soft pop. Never use a corkscrew when opening champagne.

Turn Christmas Leftovers Into A Culinary Gold Mine

By Joan Drake
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Do you dread opening the refrigerator door the week after your big holiday meal? That terrific meal has now deteriorated into a half-carved bird, a heap of dressing, a soggy salad or sour-cream cucumbers, cranberry sauce and umpteen containers of cold potatoes and vegetables.

Do not make the mistake, however, of looking at these foods as just a bunch of leftovers. Actually they are valuable ingredients, ready to be transformed into soups, breads and even desserts.

Here are a few ideas:

TURKEY STOCK

- 1 cooked turkey carcass
- 2 quarts water
- 1 medium onion, sliced
- 1 carrot, peeled and coarsely chopped
- 1 stalk celery, coarsely chopped
- 3 parsley sprigs
- 2 cloves garlic
- 1 bay leaf
- 12 peppercorns

Break up turkey carcass to fit into large stockpot. Add water, onion, carrot, celery, parsley, garlic, bay leaf and peppercorns.

Cover and bring to boil. Reduce heat and simmer 2 hours. Strain broth and discard bones and vegetables. Use immediately or refrigerate up to 2 days. For longer storage, freeze. Makes about 2 quarts.

Note: Fat may be skimmed off top of stock after cooling. Add salt, if desired.

TURKEY-PAPAYA AVOCADO SALAD

- 1 cup light sour cream
- 1 tsp. chopped fresh thyme
- 1/2 cup sliced green onions
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1/4 tsp. white pepper
- 1 large clove garlic, minced
- 1/4 tsp. hot pepper sauce
- 1 tsp. lemon juice
- 1 medium avocado, diced
- 2 cups diced cooked white turkey
- 2 cups diced cooked dark turkey
- 1/2 papaya, diced
- Diced roasted almonds
- Lettuce
- 1/2 papaya, sliced

Combine light sour cream, thyme, green onions, salt, white pepper, garlic, hot pepper sauce and lemon juice in medium bowl. Fold in avocado.

Place turkey, diced papaya and 1/2 cup almonds in large bowl. Fold in dressing mixture. Serve on lettuce, sprinkled with additional almonds and garnished with sliced papaya. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

CREAM-OF-LEFTOVER PEAS SOUP

- 1/4 cup minced onion
- 1/4 cup butter or margarine
- 2 cups turkey stock
- 1 cup cooked peas
- 1 cup half and half
- Salt, pepper
- Basil or chervil

Saute onion in butter in saucepan until tender and transparent. Add turkey stock and peas. Bring to boil, reduce heat and simmer 5 to 10 minutes.

Pour vegetable mixture into blender or food processor container and puree or process until almost smooth. Pour back into saucepan, stir in half and half and season to taste with salt, pepper and basil. Heat through. Makes 4 servings.

SOUR-CREAM CUCUMBER SOUP

- 1 cup Sour-Cream Cucumbers
- 1/2 cup buttermilk
- 1 tsp. fresh dill

Combine Sour-Cream Cucumbers, buttermilk and dill in blender. Process until smooth. Makes about 1 1/2 cups.

- 1 cup sour cream
- 1 1/2 tsp. sugar
- 1 tsp. vinegar
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1/4 tsp. prepared mustard
- 1 medium onion, thinly sliced
- 2 cucumbers, peeled and thinly sliced

Combine sour cream, sugar, vinegar, salt and mustard in medium bowl. Add onion and cucumbers. Blend well. Refrigerate overnight to blend flavors. Makes about 3 cups.

SWEET-POTATO MUFFINS

- 1 3/4 cups sifted flour
- 2 tsp. brown sugar, packed

- 1 tsp. baking powder
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1/2 cup coarsely chopped walnuts
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 3/4 cup milk
- 1 1/4 cups mashed cooked sweet potatoes (not candied)
- 1/4 cup melted butter or margarine
- Ground cinnamon
- Granulated sugar

Sift together flour, brown sugar, baking powder and salt. Stir in walnuts. Combine eggs, milk, sweet potatoes and butter, mixing well.

Add sweet-potato mixture to dry ingredients, mixing only until moistened.

Fill greased 2-inch muffin pans 2-3 full. Sprinkle lightly with cinnamon and granulated sugar. Bake at 425 degrees 20 to 25 minutes. Makes 16 to 18 muffins.

CRANBERRY BREAD

- 1/2 cup butter or margarine
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 eggs

- 1 tsp. vanilla
- 2 cups flour
- 1 tsp. baking soda
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1/2 cup orange juice
- 1 cup chopped apples
- 1 cup canned whole-berry cranberry sauce
- 1/2 cup chopped walnuts

Cream together butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Beat in eggs and vanilla. Combine flour, baking soda and salt. Add dry ingredients alternately with orange juice to egg mixture, beating just until blended. Fold in apples, cranberry sauce and walnuts. Turn into greased and floured 9- by 5-inch loaf pan and bake at 350 degrees about 1 hour, or until wood pick inserted in center comes out clean. Makes 1 loaf.

MASHED POTATO FUDGE

- 1/4 cup hot mashed potatoes
- 1 tsp. butter or margarine
- 2 1/2 cups sifted powdered sugar
- 1/2 tsp. vanilla

- Dash salt
- 1 1/2 cups shredded coconut
- 2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
- Macadamia nut halves

Combine potatoes and butter in bowl. Add sugar gradually and beat until well blended. Stir in vanilla, salt, coconut and chocolate.

Pack mixture into greased 8- by 4- inch loaf pan. Chill until firm. Cut into squares and garnish each with macadamia nut half. Makes 1 1/4 pounds.

Chef Shares His Secrets In Cookbook

By Carol Deegan
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Michael Roberts says there are no such things as secrets in the kitchen, but there are secret ingredients — those ingredients that are not tasted but would be missed if they were omitted.

Tastes that are obvious are called primary flavors. Secret ingredients are secondary flavors; they act on primary flavors to make them more complex and lively. Without those subtle additions, recipes become lackluster and monotonous, Roberts says.

For example, Roberts, who has been the chef at Trumps restaurant in Los Angeles since 1980, may add a drop of vanilla to lobster, put a dash of Pernod in zucchini soup, or create guacamole with green peas instead of avocado.

"Knowing how to combine many flavors and aromas to achieve a simple and pure result, and knowing when not to combine flavors, will make you a better, more confident cook," he said in an interview here.

Secret Ingredients: The Magical Process of Combining Flavors, is the title of Roberts' new cookbook, published by Bantam Books ($19.95).

"There are secrets I've learned in 15 years of cooking that I want to share," Roberts explains. Many of the 200 recipes in his cookbook are the result of his improvisations at Trumps, and many of the dishes on the restaurant's menu are the result of working out ideas for the cookbook.

"What I'm hoping is that you read the book and then you try some of the recipes and start to understand how some things combine.

"You can take all my little lessons, I tried to make every page note a little miniteaching lesson, and apply it to your own cooking, to your own favorite recipe."

Roberts was given "Larousse Gastronomique" by his college roommates on his 21st birthday. He says he became "obsessed with the possibilities of culinary improvisation."

Following graduation, he began cooking in restaurants. He soon abandoned cookbooks and learned to improvise.

Not content to remain self-taught, he went to Paris in 1975. He attended l'Ecole Jean-Ferrandi, where he learned basic principles of cooking. When he returned to New York, he was offered many jobs. However, Roberts says he decided that he didn't "want to be a cook in a fancy French restaurant to learn some chef's secrets."

He moved to Los Angeles in 1979. Since 1980, he has been the chef at Trumps.

"I felt that I needed to rise to the top very quickly," Roberts says. "I have this crazy nerve disease and, in a sense, it's propelled me to get to where I need to be real fast before I can't do it anymore."

"I still stand up on my feet all the time and I still go to work lunch and dinner every day almost, but I don't actually cook any more, so I needed to go through all of that, it's pain-induced."

Secret Ingredients is Roberts' first cookbook. Two more are scheduled for publication.

"I think that there are different things to be gained from this book, depending on what your level of cooking ability and expertise is," Roberts says, "but it very much reflects the way I cook at home, because I'm very lazy; I'm very spoiled.

"In the restaurant, I have people to do things for me, and can easily have chopped garlic; peeled, seeded, chopped tomatoes, and all those little things that are such drudgery to do before you even start the cooking.

"At home, I don't do that stuff, I make it all real simple, and I really do think that if you can make it taste really fabulous, so that each mouthful tastes different, then people forget the fact that it was a really streamlined recipe, that you took a veal cutlet, and went poof-poof and then took it out of the pan."

Unless you grow your own peas and eat them straight from the garden, Roberts suggests using frozen peas for cooking. Why? Because the color is more vibrant, he says, and the sugar in the peas has not been allowed to turn to starch.

"Fresh peas are the same thing as the corn that you buy at the local store," he explains. "For corn, you should go out into the field, pick it, and it should be in the water 8 minutes from the time it's picked. You really need to grow your own corn for it to be fabulous; the sugar turns to starch very quickly. And peas are even worse. Frozen peas are one of the great products of the 20th century."

Among Roberts' favorite recipes: corn and lobster chowder, smoked chicken salad and "all the pancakes."

He also likes all the gumboes and the chilis featured in the cookbook. "They're so easy, with my gumbo base, you make a ton of it, freeze it, use it with whatever leftovers you have," he says.

Roberts also likes Ham and Cheese Fried Chicken with Mustard Gravy. "It's two things that everybody loves, combined together. It really is delicious — and easy."

And what about desserts? "I hate desserts," he says, adding, with a laugh, "but I like all these desserts in my book. The lemon and rosemary steamed pudding is probably my favorite."

The following is a sample recipe from Roberts' cookbook:

SWEET PEA GUACAMOLE

- 2 tbsp. virgin olive oil
- 2 tbsp. fresh lime juice
- ¼ bunch cilantro, trimmed of long stems
- 1 jalapeno pepper, seeded, or 2 serrano peppers, seeded
- 1 pound frozen, defrosted peas
- ¼ tsp. ground cumin
- ¾ tsp. salt
- ¼ medium red onion, finely diced

Combine oil, lime juice, cilantro and jalapeno in a blender or food processor and blend until cilantro and hot pepper are roughly pureed. Add peas, cumin and salt and blend until smooth. There will still be some lumps, but this adds to the textural interest of the guacamole. Scrape into a mixing bowl and add the diced red onion. Serve as a dip with tortilla chips or potato chips. Or use to accompany tamales or arroz con pollo.

Cinnamon Adds Zing To Holiday Punch For New Year's Eve

By Nancy Byal
BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

For a whistle-wetter that's always ready for a party, steep stick cinnamon in apple and cranberry juice. Ground cinnamon won't work in this recipe; the flecks of spice muddy the drink's clear sparkle.

At serving time, gently add champagne or ginger ale to the juice mixture. Add a cinnamon-stick stirrer and float an orange-peel star in each cup.

HOLIDAY APPLE FLING

- One 14-oz. jar spiced apple rings
- One 32-oz. bottle apple juice
- One 32-oz. bottle (4 cups) cranberry juice cocktail
- 1 cup water
- 4 to 5 inches stick cinnamon
- Peel from 1 orange
- One 750-milliliter bottle champagne or one 28-ounce bottle ginger ale

Cinnamon sticks (optional)
Drain apple rings, reserving syrup. In a 3-quart container combine reserved syrup, 2 cups of the apple juice, cranberry juice cocktail, water and stick cinnamon. Cover and chill 24 hours. Remove cinnamon. Chill, covered, up to 2 weeks.

In a 4-cup ring mold freeze a little of the remaining apple juice just until slushy (about 30 to 45 minutes). Using a hors d'oeuvre cutter, cut orange peel into stars. Press stars into slushy juice in mold. Center apple rings over stars. Freeze until firm. Add remaining apple juice to mold. Freeze up to 2 weeks.

To serve, unmold ice ring; place in a large punch bowl. Add syrup mixture. Slowly add champagne or ginger ale. Serve immediately with cinnamon stick stirrers, if desired. Makes 24 (4-ounce) servings.
