Helms: Reagan Sometimes Fell Short Of Goals

By John Flesher
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — His heart was in the right place, but President Reagan often fell short of the lofty goals set for him by the staunch conservatives who have been his most loyal supporters, Sen. Jesse Helms says.

"I think any strong supporter of Ronald Reagan would tell you honestly that he or she is disappointed," Helms said. "You always are disappointed. You want to do more than you're going to achieve. I think more could have been achieved had it not been for some of the advice the president got."

"But you don't look back. You count your blessings and move ahead."

In an interview last week, Helms said that "history will record (Reagan) as one of the fine presidents." But he said Reagan had not been resolute enough in the fight to curb government spending, had signed an ill-advised nuclear arms treaty and had presided over the selling out of anti-communist rebels in Angola.

Helms said he was particularly unhappy with the president's apparent decision not to pardon retired Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North, who is awaiting trial on charges stemming from his role in the Iran-contra affair.

"The president ought to pardon Ollie North and put an end to the vendetta that's going on," Helms said. "I don't regard Ollie North as a criminal. Whatever mistakes he made, he made out of a sincere wish to preserve freedom in Central America."

Helms, the ranking minority member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, has been an outspoken supporter of the rebels battling the Marxist government of Nicaragua. He had harsh words for Lawrence Walsh, the special prosecutor in the North case.

"I have no respect whatsoever for Mr. Walsh," Helms said. "I don't know what he's running for, but he certainly looks like a politician to me, and perhaps a hack politician."

He said he had discussed the North case with Reagan but would not disclose what the president said. Reagan has said publicly he would not pardon North because he didn't want to interfere with the judicial process.

When the president visited Raleigh in October to campaign for George Bush and other Republicans, Helms spoke reminiscently about his long association with Reagan.

Helms was no Johnny-come-lately to the Reagan camp. The senator has said, with some justification, that he and his organization rescued Reagan from oblivion in 1976, engineering his upset victory over Gerald Ford in the North Carolina primary. Although he eventually lost the nomination, Reagan emerged as front-runner for 1980.

Bush, Congress Set For Round 1

'It's Deja Voodoo All Over Again,' Democratic Solon Contends

By Lee Gould
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Like prizefighters entering the ring, Republican President Bush and the Democratic Congress will return to the political arena this month, after two months of preparation, with lots of smiles and a handshake.

And as in any championship, high-stakes fight, it will be only a matter of time before someone ends up with a bloodied nose — the tough, veteran Democrats who have controlled Congress for years, or the Republican administration, which showed in last fall's campaign that when the going got tough, it did, too.

The Senate's new Democratic majority leader, George Mitchell of Maine, already has asked the president-elect to approach Congress with "candor, consultation and trust." George Bush, who promised a "kinder and gentler nation" in his successful campaign, has indicated he wants a closer relationship with Congress than that enjoyed by his predecessor, Ronald Reagan.

Round One won't begin until after Bush is inaugurated on the West Front of the Capitol on Jan. 20 and Congress returns the following Monday, Jan. 23.

Then, however brief, will come that Washington institution, the political honeymoon.

But unlike other Washington institutions, the honeymoon probably won't last long.

Democrats, firmly in control of both the House and Senate, are anxiously awaiting the new president's budget recommendations, starting with his ideas on how to save $32 billion to meet deficit-reduction targets. Then, in May, Bush will have to ask Congress to raise the national debt ceiling above its current $2.8 trillion figure.

Democrats also will have their own agenda to push, perhaps a renewed drive for a hike in the minimum wage, and other costly plans to compete for tight budget dollars.

And all these problems and programs come wrapped in Bush's promise not to raise taxes.

"The deficit is a time bomb with a lighted fuse," Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., said in a recent interview. "Bush's tendered solution, his flexible freeze, is deja voodoo all over again. The idea that we can grow our way out of this mess is absolute nonsense."

The question is: How can a Republican president, elected by a solid majority, deal with a Democratic Senate and House, also elected by a solid majority?"

History, it seems, is against the president.

"Presidential success is mainly a function of the number of seats in Congress held by the president's party," say writers Norman J. Ornstein of the American Enterprise Institute, Thomas E. Mann of the Brookings Institution and Michael J. Malbin of the House Republican Conference, in their book, "Vital Statistics on Congress."

Using figures compiled by Congressional Quarterly, the congressional observers uncovered some stark statistics.

"When one party controls both branches, success never drops below 75 percent," they said. "With divided government, presidents average well below that level of success."

Charlotte Fire Kills 4 People

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — Four members of a Charlotte family died and three others were injured in a New Year's Day fire blamed on "smoldering smoking materials," fire officials said.

David Lowery, the city's chief fire investigator, said the fire began in a living room chair in the three-bedroom cinder block house.

The victims were identified as Christine Pressley, 26; her 18-month-old son, Jonathan Lamont Pressley; her sister, Tiffany Lafern Pressley, 11; and their great-uncle, Earl Jones, 65.

Survivors include Christine and Tiffany Pressley's father, William Pressley Jr., who was in critical condition at Humana Medical Center in Augusta, Ga. He had burns over 15 percent of his body and suffered smoke inhalation.

Bernstine Pressley, 46, the mother of Christine and Tiffany Pressley, was in critical condition at Charlotte Memorial Hospital, also suffering from burns and smoke inhalation.

Another of her children, William Pressley III, 22, was treated for smoke inhalation and released from Charlotte Memorial Hospital.

New Year Ushers In Changes

By Matt Yancey
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Ringing in the new year are dozens of changes in federal laws and regulations, many of them aimed at quenching Americans' thirst for security and a few that will make life a little more expensive.

Among the most significant of the Jan. 1 changes are a vast expansion of Medicare to cover catastrophic illnesses, faster pension fund vesting that will benefit millions, particularly women, and tax changes reducing the government's subsidizing of purchases on credit.

Others that occurred just before the end of 1988 or are scheduled early in 1989 include a ban on lie detector tests by private employers, 60 days advance notice of plant closings and large layoffs and a new law prohibiting landlords from discriminating against the handicapped and families with children.

A few of the changes are a little more esoteric but their impact eventually may be felt by the entire population.

For example, Environmental Protection Agency regulations implementing the 46-nation ozone treaty took effect Jan. 1. The regulations don't require chemical companies to actually do anything until next July, but then they must cut their production of chlorofluorocarbon or CFC compounds by an estimated 20 percent back to 1986 levels.

The treaty is aimed at halting the depletion of the ozone layer 15 to 25 miles up protecting the earth's surface from ultraviolet rays. CFC compounds also contribute to the "greenhouse" effect that is warming the planet.

Dike Unleashes Wall Of Water

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. GEORGE, Utah — Residents of two states, today cleaned up homes damaged by a 12-foot wall of water that surged down the Virgin River after a dike broke, forcing 1,500 people to evacuate and closing Interstate 15.

The 2,000-foot earthen dike 15 miles east of here gave way early Sunday, flooding 50 to 60 homes and 100 apartment units in southwest Utah and three homes in Littlefield, Ariz., authorities said. No injuries were reported.

The dam, which was less than 4 years old, had a history of seepage, authorities said.

When civil defense sirens signaled the evacuation shortly after midnight Saturday, some of the 1,500 people in the flood's path mistakenly thought they heralded the new year, officials said.

Sherri Hansen of Bloomington and her husband had 20 minutes to evacuate before the water hit. They sat on a hill watching through binoculars.

"We sat there hoping and praying the river wouldn't get us," she said. "The river didn't hit everyone. I don't know how it chose us, but we really got nailed."

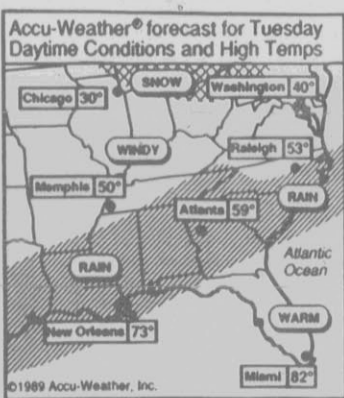

The water surged into the Hansens' home, filling the basement to the ceiling and doing structural damage estimated at $40,000.

In Littlefield, Lester C. Taylor, 27, his wife and five children rescued many of their belongings before their adobe home was submerged in 5 feet of water.

"The bad part was making sure my wife and the kids were OK," Taylor said. "I was scared."

Utah Gov. Norm Bangerter flew to the region 300 miles south of Salt Lake City, declared Washington County a disaster area in an attempt to gain state and federal aid.

Taxes Now Must Be Paid On Mail Orders

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Mail orders to out-of-state companies will no longer escape North Carolina's sales tax under one of a handful of laws that took effect New Year's Day.

Other laws that become effective with the arrival of 1989 will subject people to fines for tinting their automobile windows too darkly, boost the state income tax exclusion for military and federal employees, and tighten state regulation of investment advisers and mortgage bankers and brokers.

The mail-order tax law is designed to close a loophole that supporters say has deprived state coffers of tens of millions of dollars each year.

Retail sales in North Carolina are taxed 5 percent — 3 percent for the state budget and 2 percent for local governments.

People who buy products from outside the state, placing orders in the mail or over the telephone, are supposed to pay the tax but seldom do. The old law was virtually impossible to enforce, officials with the state Department of Revenue told legislators last summer.

Under the new law, out-of-state retailers who do business in North Carolina are required to collect the taxes and forward the money to the

Delivery Man Robbed

A Domino's Pizza delivery man was beaten with a baseball bat and robbed early Sunday morning, according to Greenville Police.

Officer R.L. Smith said the delivery man, Ron Caro, reported an armed robbery at 509 Sheppard St. Sunday at 12:02 a.m. Caro said someone struck him in the head with a baseball bat and took a pizza and hot bag, valued at $25.

In other weekend incidents, Officer Alexander Batts said a woman was shot in the arm Sunday morning.

Vernease Sutton of 204B New St. suffered injuries to her right forearm from a shotgun blast, Batts said. The shot reportedly came from outside her home and traveled through the screen and window. Batts said the shooting, reported at 6:02 a.m., is still under investigation.

Officer K.L. Hadnott said more than $20,000 worth of accounting equipment was taken Sunday from an automobile parked at 300K Horseshoe Road in an incident reported at 3:12 p.m. According to Officer R.C. Stroud, some of the equipment was later recovered outside of Ringgold Towers on Cotanche Street.

Officer L.E. White said $3,500 in cash was stolen Saturday from an automobile parked at Riverside Restaurant on North Greene Street. A cashier's check, three credit cards and personal checks also were stolen.

Lewis To Be Sworn In

John B. Lewis Jr. of Farmville is scheduled to be sworn in as a member of the North Carolina Court of Appeals in a ceremony Tuesday at 11 a.m. at the Farmville Municipal Building.

Judge Sidney Eagles of Wilson will preside and Judge Gerald Arnold will administer the oath. The ceremony is the first official function of the new municipal building. The new courtroom will be dedicated Tuesday at 10:45.

DOT Board Members Helped Martin Raise Election Funds

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Four Republican members of the State Board of Transportation helped amass more than $1 million for Gov. Jim Martin's re-election, which tapped such sources as top business executives, political appointees and contractors, a Raleigh newspaper reported.

The News and Observer reported that Martin campaign's finance records showed Charles M. Shelton, a Winston-Salem land developer; B. Tommy Pollard, owner of a small grocery store chain in Jacksonville; Seddon "Rusty" Goode Jr. of Charlotte, a research park director in Charlotte, and William B. Buchanan, a Graham automobile dealer, were keys in raising $6.34 million for Martin's re-election — a record for a North Carolina gubernatorial race.

The governor, a Republican, defeated Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan in the November election. Jordan reported raising $4.6 million as of Oct. 22.

One political insider said the financing efforts are nothing new.

"This is the way politics has been played for the 40 years I've been involved," said Joseph A. Pell of Pilot Mountain, who was a senior aide to former Gov. Jim Hunt, a Democrat.

Business executives tapped for contributions included those with such companies as Blue Bell Inc., Duke Power Co., First Union National Bank, Ruddick Corp., Carolina Freight Carriers Corp., Burroughs Wellcome Co., International Business Machines Corp., Lowe's Companies Inc., BarclaysAmerican Corp., Kenan Oil Co., Parkdale Mills Inc., Carolina Hosiery Mills Inc., Family Dollar

Stores Inc., RJR Nabisco, Wachovia Bank and Trust Co., NCNB National Bank, Nello Teer Co., Carolina Power & Light Co. and the Weyerhaeuser Co.

At least $122,990 came from Martin appointees to state government jobs. Martin also raised at least $606,021 from people he appointed to unsalaried positions on boards and commissions. That included $134,534 from appointees to the state Board of Transportation, $52,971 from appointees to the Economic Development Board, $52,536 from appointees to boards of University of North Carolina system campuses and $21,985 from appointees to community college boards.

When it came to raising money from the major contributors, the campaign often turned to Shelton, 53, founder of The Shelton Companies, a real estate development firm. Shelton was chairman of Martin's campaign finance committee. He called on his broad contacts in the business community to raise $400,000 to $500,000, according to campaign insiders.

The developer and his family members personally contributed $34,040, more than any other individual or family in the state.

Next among fund-raisers within the Martin campaign organization was Pollard, who said he had raised about $300,000.

"We had a little personal contest going on during the campaign," Pollard said of Shelton.

Pollard's money-raising skills were impressive because he garnered most of the money in Jacksonville, not one of the state's most affluent areas. Pollard, 47, said he also raised between $80,000 and $100,000 for Republican Jim Gardner, who will take office as lieutenant governor Saturday.

"Most were small businessmen, farmers and hardware store owners. They were reasonably successful, or they couldn't give $1,000. But most were not fat cats."

Goode, president of University Research Park in Charlotte, has been friends with Martin since they were fraternity brothers at Davidson College. He estimated he raised between $200,000 and $300,000.

Goode, 56, was particularly adept at working the Charlotte business community. He was the behind-the-scenes organizer of a fund-raiser held this fall at the home of Francis B. "Buddy" Kemp, then president of NCNB National Bank, an event that raised $125,000.

Buchanan, owner of Buchanan Chevrolet in Graham, estimated he raised $100,000.

Buchanan said he became a supporter in 1983, when he gave Martin several hundred dollars in cash as a campaign contribution. When Martin saw the amount — the law allows no more than $100 in cash — he returned it to the donor, who then wrote a check.

"Right then, he sold me on his integrity," Buchanan said.

Martin received numerous contributions from people who either do business with the state or who are regulated by state agencies. Those included contributions from highway contractors, nursing home operators, advertising executives and insurance salesmen.

In addition, land-developers contributed at least $181,092. Some of the largest contributors are involved in building along the coast, where there are increasing battles between developers and environmental groups.

The examination of campaign contributions focused on large contributors — the more than 1,200 people who contributed more than $1,000 each, as reported by the Martin campaign to the state Board of Elections.

ECU Chancellor's Forum To Attract 200 Leaders

ECU NEWS BUREAU

Approximately 200 community leaders from across the eastern half of the state are expected to attend East Carolina University's first Chancellor's Forum Tuesday and Wednesday.

John L. Clendenin, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of BellSouth Corp., Atlanta, will deliver the keynote address at 2 p.m. Tuesday.

The forum theme is "Education and Economic Development in Eastern North Carolina: A Challenge for Public Schools, Community Colleges, and Universities."

Philip C. Schlechty, president of the Louisville, Ky.-based Center for Leadership in School Reform, will speak on "Purpose and Vision: Imperatives for School Reform" at 3:15 p.m.

Both addresses are scheduled for Hendrix Theater in ECU's Mendenhall Student Center and are free and open to the public.

Forum participants representing education, business and government will meet in small group sessions during the evening and discuss their respective communities' problems and needs with possible solutions, based on ideas gathered from the main addresses.

On the following morning, these ideas will be synthesized by George

Shaw, president of Central Piedmont Community College, Charlotte, and Dr. Raymond H. Dawson, vice president-academic affairs of the UNC General Administration.

Dr. Richard Eakin, ECU Chancellor, will conclude the forum with a response. The Wednesday session will adjourn by 11 a.m.

Purpose of the Chancellor's Forum is to bring together national, state and regional leaders for discussions of creative ways to solve problems of the eastern region. Under the leadership of Dr. Bertie Fearing, permanent director of the Forum, ECU will assist local leaders in problem-solving programs and projects.

"The goal of the Chancellor's Forum is tapping resources, forming partnerships at the grass-roots level between public and private sectors," Eakin said.

Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. is corporate sponsor for the Chancellor's Forum.

Among community leaders who will participate in the forum are N.C. Attorney General Lacy H. Thornburg, N.C. Public School Forum President John Dornan, Fayetteville State University Chancellor Lloyd V. Hackley, N.C. Association of Educators executive director Tom A. Husted, state Sen. Thomas Taft, D-Pitt, and Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt.

B. Autry, president of MDC, Inc., Chapel Hill, in a public session scheduled for 9 a.m. in Hendrix Theater.

Following Autry's summation will be brief responses from leaders in various fields of education: Bob R. Etheridge, superintendent elect of the N.C. Department of Public Instruction; Karen Garr, president of the N.C. Association of Educators; former Gov. Robert W. Scott, president of the N.C. System of Community Colleges; Dr. Ruth Gwyn

For example, when Lyndon Johnson swept into office in 1964, his agenda, measured by public positions, was near 88 percent successful in the Congress. Republican Gerald Ford, however, managed only a 58.2 percent "victory" rate in first full year in office.

When Jimmy Carter marched into the White House in 1976 with his party in control of both houses of Congress, he enjoyed, initially, a 75 percent success rate in pushing his legislation.

But that shouldn't be the case in 1989, with Bush vowing no new taxes and Democrats almost daring him to run the country without them.

"It isn't a question of economics, it's a question of mathematics," says House Speaker Jim Wright of Texas.

"I want to give him the benefit of the doubt. Surely he must have a plan," Wright says.

Across the Capitol, Senate leader Mitchell also is offering to reason with Bush.

"The larger objective is to provide to our people the greatest possible individual liberty and economic opportunity," Mitchell said. "Our system, divided or not, can do that. But it can do it only if there is a shared understanding of the need for candor, consultation and trust."

"Divided government cannot work in a polarized society, one in which mistrust and deceit are widespread," Mitchell added.

Some Will Find New Laws More Costly

As a result of the regulations, consumers may notice fewer plastic food containers from fast-food outlets, thicker insulating panels and possibly even slightly harder seat cushions.

The biggest of the immediate changes is the Jan. 1 expansion of Medicare coverage for 32 million Medicare beneficiaries to include catastrophic health care costs.

Prior to passage of the measure last summer by Congress — the first major expansion of Medicare in its 22-year history — the program paid full hospital bills for no more than 59 days a year.

With the changes that took effect Sunday, the beneficiary still will have to pay the first-day deductible of $560. But that charge will be assessed no more than once a year no matter how many times the patient has to be hospitalized. The other 364 days are fully paid.

That fundamental change in the hospital benefit was the cornerstone of the Medicare expansion set in motion by President Reagan in his 1986 State of the Union message.

"Let us remove a financial specter facing our older Americans — the fear of an illness so expensive that it can result in having to make an intolerable choice between bankruptcy and death," he said then.

Medicare enrollees will pay for the new benefits through a flat increase in the premium deducted from their monthly Social Security checks and an additional sliding scale premium for approximately 40 percent of the elderly who pay federal income tax.

The flat increase will be $4 a month effective immediately, climbing to $10.20 monthly in 1993. The sliding scale premium is projected to rise from a maximum of 15 percent of regular income tax liability in 1989 to about 28 percent in 1993.

Many of the Jan. 1 changes grow out of the 1986 Tax Reform Act. The biggest new benefit from that law is faster vesting in pension plans.

The maximum waiting period for employees to become fully invested in a pension is being cut in half from 10 years to five years.

However, employers can adopt an option that denies full vesting until seven years. To do so, they have to offer 20 percent vesting after three years and an additional 20 percent vesting annually until the seventh year, when it reaches 100 percent.

The Employee Benefit Research Institute estimates that the pension changes will provide a retirement stake to 2 million more workers a year.

"We'll especially see more women being vested than in the past because they tend to be in the workforce or with the same employer for shorter periods," said Stephanie Poe, a spokeswoman for the institute.

Another tax change is that only 20 percent of personal interest payments on everything from car and student loans to credit card charges will be deductible in 1989, compared with 40 percent last year.

And while the government is now raising tax brackets, exemptions and standard deductions to keep cost-of-living raises from bumping people into higher brackets, it also is taking more Social Security taxes.

The 7.51 percent Social Security tax took a maximum $3,380 out of employee paychecks in 1988. This year the maximum amount of income subject to the tax rises from $45,000 to $48,000, raising the maximum Social Security tax that can be collected from an individual employee to $3,605.

The latest change came about just last Thursday, when the Federal Aviation Administration ordered airlines, effective Jan. 1, to either inspect by hand or X-ray all luggage checked aboard U.S. airline flights from western Europe and the Middle East.

The new inspections, prompted by the bombing of a Pan Am jet over Scotland on Dec. 21, are expected to delay passenger check-ins by about an hour.

Other changes taking effect slightly before or after New Year's Day include:

— The use of polygraph or lie detector tests by private employers to screen job applicants was outlawed, with some exceptions, effective last Tuesday. The American Civil Liberties Union estimates the law will effectively eliminate about 80 percent of the 2 million polygraph exams now administered annually.

— A 47-year-old ban on homework in five apparel trades is being removed on Jan. 8, unless unions which support the prohibitions win a court stay first. Affected are an estimated 50,000 to 75,000 workers in fields such as mittens and gloves, embroideries, buttons and buckles, handkerchiefs and some jewelry trades. They will be able to work legally at home for the first time if their employers obtain a certificate from the Labor Department after pledging to abide by minimum wage and other federal labor standards.

State Laws Change With New Year

department as in-state companies do.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, who sponsored the bill, said during debate it could boost revenues by up to $60 million per year. David Crofts, senior legislative fiscal analyst, said an updated estimate was that if all the money owed to North Carolina was collected, it would total roughly $40 million — $24 million for the state and $16 million for local governments.

The Department of Revenue is compiling a list of out-of-state companies that sell to North Carolinians and notifying them of the law, according to George Long, administrative officer in the department's Sales and Use Tax Division.

"We're telling them the law applies to them if they solicit business in North Carolina by sending catalogues into the state, or if they solicit over the telephone or TV, distribute flyers or whatever," Long said. "There are all types of merchandise being sold by mail order."

The affected companies are being sent reporting forms and asked to register with the department, he said, adding that he didn't know how many had been contacted.

Another tax law taking effect Sunday increases from $3,000 to $4,000 the income tax exclusion for military and federal civil service retirement pay.

Also, corporations will be required to pay at least 90 percent of their taxes quarterly, up from 80 percent.

Two other new laws are designed to protect consumers in the increasingly complex world of finance.

One requires mortgage bankers and brokers to register with the state Banking Commission. The measure exempts those registered with another state or federal agency, meaning that most banks, life insurance companies, savings institutions, credit unions and their subsidiaries and affiliates won't have to register with the commission.

State Banking Commissioner Bill Graham said his office had mailed about 1,500 registration applications to financial institutions, which can notify him if they are registered elsewhere.

"We only have about 20 ready to license, but we'll clearly have more," he said.

The law empowers the commission to question bankers and brokers about their educational backgrounds, financial soundness and general character and fitness," Graham said. The commission can refuse to register any mortgage firm it believes is unfit.

The measure will give the consumer a standard against which to measure his lender, as well as a place to make a complaint if he feels he's been wronged, Graham said.

"He'll know the person he's dealing with has at least been around long enough to fill out the registration form and the state has said he can do business," he said. "It's not like he's hung up his shingle today and he'll be gone tomorrow."

Another law provides for regulation of investment advisers. Incoming Secretary of State Rufus Edmisten, who takes office Jan. 7, has vowed to set tough standards to ensure that the advisers are qualified and scrupulous.

New Year's Day ends a grace period during which violators of the tinted-window law enacted last summer were not fined.

Under the law, automobile owners may apply extra tint to the front side windows as long as at least 50 percent of the light can shine through. The law applies only after a vehicle is factory-delivered and exempts vehicles registered in other states.

Police requested the law, saying it's dangerous for them to approach stopped cars with windows so dark they cannot see what's happening inside.

Judge Reynolds, retiring, says TV evangelist Jim Bakker is 'a little, sawed off runt'

Bakker Criticizes Judge Who Called Him A 'Runt'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Retired U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Rufus Reynolds, strongly critical of defrocked PTL leader Jim Bakker and his followers in recently published interviews, has drawn an answering salvo from Bakker.

Reynolds, who called for stricter scrutiny of religious groups after overseeing the sale of PTL, called Bakker a "little, sawed-off runt" in one interview and said he was amazed at the vindictiveness of his followers.

Reynolds, who retired Saturday, was guarded by U.S. marshals during the bankruptcy proceedings as the FBI investigated death threats.

"They didn't say, 'I'm going to kill you,' they said, 'The Lord's going to take you,'" Reynolds said.

"I didn't know Christians could be so critical. They would just chew me out," Reynolds said.

When a woman called the bankruptcy court in Columbia to find out if he was a Christian, "I said, 'You tell her I was when I started this case, but now I plead the Fifth Amendment.'"

Bakker lashed out Sunday at Reynolds, saying, "I am shocked to find Judge Reynolds so prejudiced toward us, and to hear of him making fun of us and the PTL partners."

"He should not have tried the PTL case with these feelings against us," Bakker said in a statement released by one of his attorneys.

Reynolds told the Greensboro

News & Record that television ministries are "wide open" for mismanagement or corruption.

"I think Congress should pass a very strong act forcing the IRS (Internal Revenue Service) ... to make them comply with an accounting," Reynolds said. "We have all kinds of laws protecting consumers. Religion is just another consumer item, just the same as selling soap or washing powders or aspirin."

In a separate interview with The Charlotte Observer, the 81-year-old Reynolds said he was amazed at the response to the travails that brought down Bakker's evangelistic empire.

"What puzzled me was why people were interested in that little, sawed-off runt," Reynolds said.

He said people have been writing him begging him to let Bakker back at PTL.

"It's the cuckoo. They're just so dyed-in-the-wool. You can't tell them anything.... They are Bakkerites, and they're not going to change," Reynolds said.

The ministry filed for protection under federal bankruptcy laws in June 1987, three months after Bakker resigned from PTL amid a sex-and-money scandal.

Two months ago, Reynolds ordered Bakker, his wife, Tammy, and former aide David Taggart to repay PTL nearly $7.7 million in benefits he found to be excessive. Last month, he approved the sale of PTL assets to a Canadian businessman.

It was also last month that a federal grand jury indicted Bakker and former top aide Richard Dortch on criminal fraud and conspiracy charges, accusing them of diverting more than $4 million in PTL money for their own benefit. Bakker is scheduled to appear in U.S. District Court in Charlotte on Jan. 17.

Upon his retirement, Reynolds told the Observer that he left the PTL case discouraged and somewhat cynical.

From the beginning, Reynolds said he believed the only way to save PTL was to keep it intact as a religious operation.

"It's a one-purpose center, a religious center — a wonderful idea," Reynolds said. "If Bakker had employed reasonable business principles, just on an average, they wouldn't owe a dime."

Reynolds said that he was disappointed at the outcome of the case.

"When you've had 40,000 cases — at least, when you've had success in lots of them, the majority of them; when you take the one most publicized, best known, and you make a failure, you can't feel very good. It's that simple," Reynolds said.

And he says he's got enough tales of PTL — and enough requests — to speak to civic groups night after night. But he's not planning to do much of that.

"I'm going to take a bath and forget about it," Reynolds said. "Someone asked me what was the best part of the whole case. I said, 'Getting out.'"

Colleagues Say Retiring Chief Helped Put Schools On Map

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Craig Phillips, North Carolina's superintendent of public instruction for 20 years, has drawn accolades from education officials despite what some saw as a loss of effectiveness in recent years.

"He's the one that moved us out of the dark ages," retired Greensboro city schools Superintendent Kenneth Newbold, said in an interview published Sunday in The Charlotte Observer.

"If you look at the 20-year run, even his most severe critics have to conclude it was a period of outstanding achievement in public education," said Gene Causby, head of the N.C. School Boards Association and sometimes a Phillips antagonist.

This week Phillips, 66, will officially retire as superintendent, but he has vowed to continue work on such issues as early childhood education. He's also interested in arts education and will be chairman of the board of the new N.C. Institute for Arts in Education.

During his 43-year education career, including the last two decades as state superintendent, Phillips has accumulated more than his share of accomplishments.

He led public schools through a decade of often tumultuous desegregation, saying quality and integration were not mutually exclusive.

Phillips instituted mandatory statewide full-day kindergarten and carried out the state's $800 million reform effort, the Basic Education Program, aimed at giving students in poorly funded school districts equal educational opportunities.

"He's an institution. For the bulk of North Carolina teachers, he's just always been there," said Karen Garr, president of the N.C. Association of Educators.

In his last years, his effectiveness eroded.

Observers such as Newbold, a member of Etheridge's transition team, say Phillips lost credibility with the General Assembly when he requested too many programs too quickly.

"He was more effective in his first 12 years than in his last eight," Newbold said.

But he added: "In education, Craig Phillips put North Carolina on the map. He woke us up."

And this year, Phillips has endured tough times.

Some of his own employees have leaked unflattering information to the media, he said. Phillips has been criticized for traveling too much on agency time, for taking honoraria from publishing companies that sell textbooks to the state and for promoting political allies to positions of importance.

Even what he considers one of his greatest achievements — expanding the role of the department to better serve local school systems — has been attacked as simply creating a bloated bureaucracy.

When Bobby Etheridge, a legislator and business executive with no background in education, moves in on Jan. 9, he'll face such thorny issues as career development for teachers, maintaining legislative support for the Basic Education Program and responding to school districts' calls for more local control.

"Oh, we have a lot of hopes and issues for Bobby Etheridge," Garr said. "Craig was superintendent when education issues were focused on setting some minimal standards. Now the focus has changed to decision-making at the local level."

"It's the next step, and we have a new superintendent to take that next step."

In 1956, Phillips became Winston-Salem's superintendent. Six years later, bringing with him a group of administrators known as the "Winston-Salem mafia," he moved on to the state's largest school system — Charlotte-Mecklenburg.

Charlotte-Mecklenburg's retiring deputy superintendent, Robert Hanes, credits Phillips with carrying out the city-county school consolidation that had been approved two years before in 1960 and with a $35 million bond issue for school expansion. Former school board Chairman William Poe, a Charlotte lawyer, credits Phillips with pushing the system toward desegregation.

"He was very much involved in leading the school board to close the all-black schools that existed in Mecklenburg County at that time," Poe said.

In 1967, Phillips left to become a vice president of the Richardson Foundation in Greensboro, where he worked with administrators on "creative leadership."

The next year, he ran for state superintendent against the advice of his father, who saw the $20,000-a-year job as low-prestige and the state agency as the weakest part of the state education system.

Parks System Endangered

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROARING GAP, N.C. — Meager state funding, staff shortages and decaying park roads, bridges and buildings are leading the North Carolina park system toward destruction, a state official says.

"The system is on the verge of collapse," William W. Davis, director of the Division of Parks and Recreation, said in an interview. "The physical plant is seriously deteriorating. The state parks system is really at the point of exploding."

In all, there are 29 state parks, four recreation areas, nine natural areas, seven state lakes and three state rivers. They attracted 8 million visitors in 1988.

The Division of Parks and Recreation last month released a draft of a systemwide plan for the state parks that said it would cost almost $250 million to upgrade the system. The cost would include $135 million for repairs and new construction and $114 million for land acquisition.

North Carolina spends only $1.12 annually on state parks for each resident and ranks 49th in the nation in per-capita funding for state parks.

SBI Overtime Questioned

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — While pay has been frozen and morale has fallen among the State Bureau of Investigation's agents, thousands of dollars in overtime has been paid to supervisors who may not have been eligible for it, a Winston-Salem newspaper reports.

State personnel regulations do not allow overtime pay for supervisors, except when approved by the State Personnel Commission, and the N.C. Office of State Personnel says no exemption has been granted the SBI. Even so, the Winston-Salem Journal reported Sunday that the bureau allows supervisors to claim up to $400 a month in overtime.

Payroll records in the N.C. Department of Justice show many of the claims for extra pay come from the bureau's top management.

The personnel office will review the SBI procedures this week, said Sam W. Badgett, the office's director of employee services.

"If these people turn out to be managers, as their titles indicate, we won't be able to pay their overtime anymore," Badgett said last week. "They may have been receiving something that they won't receive after the study. If we find areas where they are paying overtime, and it's not allowed, that will have to cease."

James H. Gardner, the budget officer for the Justice Department, estimated that the overtime payments have amounted to several thousand dollars.

Much confusion exists about the definition and role of the SBI's supervisors, especially at the district level, where supervisors often leave their desks to assist in criminal investigations.

Although it is unclear, those supervisors may deserve overtime pay, several officials said.

"There are times when there's a crime and the supervisor gets involved," said Gardner. "If you get into a hostage situation, the SBI just doesn't pack up and go home and leave the hostage alone after eight hours."

But for supervisors above the district level, a recent personnel letter to Attorney General Lacy H. Thornburg is clear about whether they should receive extra compensation.

"If overtime payments are being made to supervisory or management levels above the first-line supervisor, this practice should be discontinued immediately," wrote Richard V. Lee, the state personnel director.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Chilling Wind

Revenue Drop Means Tight Belts

A chilling wind blows through state government whenever tax collections fall below estimates.

The wind is blowing now with the report of November tax collections dropping nearly $30 million below projections. November collections were also 3.8 percent under the same month of 1987.

Various factors can affect one month and November might be followed by a robust month. A point of concern, however, is that 1988-89 collections for the first five months of the fiscal year have increased by only 3.5 percent. The projected growth rate was 6.3 percent.

All of that is information which will have to be digested immediately in the budget making process. The 1989 Legislature is set to convene and a recommended budget must be forthcoming.

If the slow growth continues experience tells us what effects it will have. Capital improvements will be among the first categories to feel the pressure. Buildings and other one-time capital improvements expenditures are traditionally financed out of revenues which exceed projections. If there is no excess the capital improvements picture is certainly clouded. That affects universities, state parks, prisons and state office buildings. Then expected salary increases for state employees and teachers can be adversely affected by lower than expected revenues. It is increases in revenues which cause legislators to look more favorably on raises.

Of course, any new programs would almost certainly fall by the wayside. The money available would go to support the current level of services.

More complete statistics on revenues and projected revenues might change all that, but the Legislature must already know it will have to look carefully at all requests for additional spending. There is a strong possibility that the extra funds won't be there to support it.

That means that even now the budget makers must look closely at every proposed expenditure. We have to know now what can be postponed or left out of the budget altogether. It could be a belt-tightening year for North Carolina government.

Proceed

Closings Sound Budgetary Measure

The Department of Defense should proceed with the closing of some military bases and limiting of others, as proposed by a government commission.

Most of the communities involved will not express happiness with the decisions. Certainly in North Carolina we would have been concerned if a military installation had been included. Fortunately none were.

Overriding local concern is the fact that the closing or curtailing of 145 military bases and other installations will mean an annual savings of $693 million. The saving is calculated at $5.6 billion over 20 years.

That is the factor which is important to every American taxpayer. The savings can be used to help reduce our national debt that is expanding at an awesome rate. It can be used to partially meet some of our pressing domestic needs.

Instituting the proposals will mean a leaner, more efficient military establishment, one that is not saddled with aging bases and installations it no longer needs.

The commission which made the proposals was carefully structured to shield it from congressional and provincial pressures in coming up with its decisions. And its proposals will be difficult to overturn if accepted by the secretary of defense. That is as it should be. Congressmen can complain and still be able to tell their constituents that their hands are tied.

Our government should do all possible to ease the economic impact on communities affected by the closings, but the changes must proceed. The defense sector has to bite the bullet at some point. Once the changes are made we will know that the remaining military installations have been judge necessary to our defense posture. The huge amount of work and study which has gone into these recommendations should not go for naught. We have to do what is best for the military, the taxpayer and the nation.

'If the slow growth continues experience tells us what effects it will have. Capital improvements will be among the first categories to feel the pressure.'

"HAPPY NEW YEAR!"

Keep Cuban Embargo In Place

Susan Purcell

As Cuba marks the 30th anniversary of its revolution, Fidel Castro faces unprecedented economic problems. The Cuban economy cannot generate sufficient hard currency to pay for necessary imports. At the same time, Cuba cannot count on the Soviet Union's continued largesse, given Moscow's own economic difficulties. There are signs that Castro hopes to resolve this dilemma by seeking improved relations with the United States, while maintaining Cuba's special relationship with the Soviet Union.

Until now the Soviet Union's economic problems have not translated into a reduction in Moscow's aid to Cuba. On the contrary, over the past few years Soviet economic and military assistance have increased. Today they equal an estimated $4.5 billion annually, or $12 million a day, making Cuba the largest recipient of Soviet aid.

Moscow's aid has kept the Cuban economy afloat. More important from the U.S. standpoint, it has allowed Castro to pursue a global foreign policy that has included sending tens of thousands of Cuban troops to Angola and Ethiopia and supporting both the Sandinistas in Nicaragua and Marxist guerrilla groups in other Central American countries. Without Soviet subsidies, Castro would be a traditional Latin American strongman — although an unusually charismatic one.

While Moscow has clearly benefited from Cuba's international behavior, some of it is less useful to the Soviets today than it was in the past. Currently, Mikhail S. Gorbachev's top priority is an increase in the Soviet Union's economic productivity. To achieve this, he needs a good relationship with the United States. This will enable him to avoid wasting money on a costly competition with the United States for influence in the Third World. It would also give the Soviet Union increased access to much-needed American capital and technology.

Gorbachev's desire to deepen the detente between Moscow and Washington helps explain the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan, as well as Soviet pressure on Castro to negotiate the removal of an estimated 50,000 Cuban troops from Angola. It might also lead to a reduction of Soviet military and economic aid to Nicaragua and to an end to Cuban support of Marxist guerrillas elsewhere in Central America, but this will depend on whether the Bush administration persuades Gorbachev that such behavior undermines the U.S.-Soviet relationship.

The Soviet leader's pressure on Castro has so far been limited to Cuba's international activity. Within Cuba, Moscow has tolerated Castro's pursuit of an economic development strategy since the mid-1980s that contradicts Gorbachev's own policies in the Soviet Union. Cuba is currently engaged in a "rectification campaign" that is replacing material incentives with moral ones. The campaign follows a short-lived experiment with market incentives, which increased Cuba's productivity but threatened the ideological underpinnings of the revolution and Castro's control over the Cuban people.

The rectification campaign is partly responsible for Cuba's current economic woes. Workers are protesting the policy by refusing to work. As a result, Cuba did not produce enough sugar to meet its export commitments to the Soviet Bloc in 1987. Instead, it had to use scarce hard currency to purchase sugar on the world market. Cuba also has been hard hit by the fall in oil prices. Cuba imports almost all its oil from the Soviet Union, which allows Cuba to resell on the spot market whatever it does not consume. As a result, oil exports have become Cuba's leading source of hard currency. The 50 percent drop in oil prices in 1986 and the continuing soft oil market have hurt Cuba economically. Finally, the recent decline in the value of the dollar hit Cuba hard because its main exports are denominated in dollars. The U.S. economic embargo obliges Cuba to buy what it needs in market economies from Western Europe and Japan, whose currencies have appreciated vis-a-vis the dollar.

Castro is willing to improve relations with Washington, but hopes to do so on his terms, without reducing his tight control over Cuba. The United States should not help him out by prematurely lifting the embargo. Washington should explore with Havana ways of resolving conflicts to the mutual advantage of both parties. Meanwhile, the embargo should be kept in place to oblige Castro to follow Gorbachev's lead and liberalize Cuba's economic and political systems. Only then would the lifting of the embargo benefit both the United States and the Cuban people, instead of only Fidel Castro.

Demagogues Come In All Colors

WASHINGTON — He has been surrounded by corruption. His personal behavior is out of control. He uses race in his defense, scapegoating the press for persecuting him. He attacks the establishment while, of course, doing business with it. He is popular with the poor and those in need of government services.

Am I talking about the mayor of my city, Marion S. Barry? Yes. But I could also be talking about any demagogue of old.

Barry is no segregation-era politician, but he is nothing new under the sun either. What he is, really, is an ironic testament to racial progress: a black politician doing what whites have done for eons. That hardly excuses Barry's inexcusable behavior, but it does provide a certain perspective. Blacks should feel no shame and whites should not feel smug.

Marion Barry is an American success story. He proves that any American, regardless of race or circumstances of birth, can use racial suspicion and demagogic tactics to fool most of the people most of the time.

The virtues of Marion Barry are no longer worth arguing. The man's behavior has been appalling. He has become the Mayor of the Night, a prowling womanizer-cum-party-goer who, in the last two years has spent about 30 percent of his time out of the city. There is nary a prize fight the mayor won't attend, nary a party he will miss. He has vacationed in the Caribbean with women not his wife and admitted to a "personal relationship" with one who moonlighted as a cocaine dealer. A landlady had to shoo him from the doorway of a young and fetching tenant. God knows what happened to her water bill.

Now we have the latest flap. Several times last month, the mayor visited a former city employee in a hotel room. The man, Charles Lewis, reportedly offered drugs to a hotel maid and the police were summoned — only to be called back when it was discovered Barry was in Lewis' room at the time. The incident stinks to high heaven. The police have much to account for and so does the mayor.

In a television statement, though, the mayor accounted for nothing. He started with Thomas Jefferson, went on to Paul the apostle and, in due course, mentioned his wife: a trifelecta of hypoc-ris. He took no questions, explained nothing but blamed the Washington Post for persecuting him.

To understand that the mayor knows his history, all you have to do is substitute the odious word "nigger" for the Washington Post and imagine Barry as white. Here we have the basics of Southern politics from the Civil War to the end of the Civil Rights era. Whenever a Southern politician got into trouble, he blamed the establishment and then yelled "nigger." From Huey Long to George Wallace, this was the pattern.

The successful Southern demagogue did some other things as well. He stood for the "little man." Indeed, the Longs and Wallaces of the South were good to their poor. They built roads and schools. It was not for nothing that they were popular. And it is not for nothing that Barry has been popular. In the blighted sections of this city, he is seen as the advocate of the poor. They think of city hall as their city hall — and that is no small accomplishment.

But the Southern demagogue had another base — and it is the same as Barry's: the power structure. In Washington, Barry is the darling of the business community, especially developers. Whenever concerned citizens gather to come up with an alternative to the mayor, they come up against an awful reality: the political money in this town likes Barry. He lets them build their hotels and office buildings. The construction cranes of Washington are Marion Barry's flagpoles.

So it would be wrong to see Marion Barry as something unique. We have seen him before — in the South, for sure, but also in the North. (Didn't Frank Rizzo rule Philadelphia by exploiting racial tension?). The city of Washington may be 75 percent black and (still) a black mayor is a relative novelty, but there is nothing uniquely black about what's happening here. It's as old as the goat to which the ancient Hebrews symbolically transferred their sins — and then allowed to escape into the desert. In this case, the scapegoat is Washington's white establishment, notably the press.

History repeated more than twice is no longer farce, but tragedy. And that is the case with Barry. The tragedy is personal since the man once had such promise, but it is civic as well. Black Washingtonians need only look at the recent past to see that Barry is merely repeating the tactics of white demagogues. He is playing them for a patsy. A history book would instantly make that clear. But so would a coloring book. Color Barry white and he would, as he should, be swiftly gone.

Parade-Lovers Have Pick Of Their Processions

By Jonathan W. Oatis
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

About 400,000 Rose Parade fans staked out early viewing spots today as float makers put the finishing touches on their 20-million-flower creations for the 100th annual edition of the Southern California tradition.

Halfway across the nation, about 650 pompon dancers lined up outside Dallas' City Hall on Sunday to practice for today's Cotton Bowl Parade.

Half a million people jammed downtown Miami to watch floats, stars, bands and 20 circus elephants in the 55th Annual King Orange Jamboree Parade on New Year's Eve. And 22,000 marchers — some dressed as rabbits, Mexican señoritas or California raisins — strutted their stuff in snow for 52,700 hardy spectators of Philadelphia's 89th annual Mummers parade.

People began lining up Saturday morning for Pasadena's Tournament of Roses procession. By Sunday night, about 400,000 people were waiting along the 5½-mile route, said police Lt. Gregg Henderson.

One million people were expected at the parade. Three hundred million TV viewers worldwide were expected to watch the pageant preceding the Rose Bowl football showdown between the University of Southern California and the University of Michigan.

The forecast held a chance of showers, but optimists hoped for sunny skies.

The first Rose Parade was held in 1890, when the Valley Hunt Club treated the town to a rose petal-covered procession of horse-and-buggy teams.

The 1989 edition was to feature 275 horses, 20 marching bands and 60 floats — including its tallest ever, a 70-foot creation depicting a roller-skating giraffe pulling a giant calliope. A real wedding was planned for the "Romance in California" float.

The grand marshal was Shirley Temple Black, 60, who enjoyed the same honor 50 years ago when she was Hollywood's child acting sensation.

Black recently admitted she's allergic to roses, and she'll have plenty to sneeze at: more than 20 million roses, chrysanthemums, orchids, carnations, marigolds, irises, daffodils, tulips and other blooms.

Rose Queen Charmaine Beth Shryock was to travel with her court in a float followed by another reuniting many former Rose Queens, including 80-year-old Holly Halsted Balthis, who was the parade's monarch in 1930.

In Dallas, organizers promised more floats and fun in an effort to win a little more respect for the nationally televised 32nd annual Cotton Bowl Parade, which has lingered in the shadow of the Orange and Rose pageants.

"We can't compete with the Orange or Rose parades with Walt Disney on one coast and fresh blooms on the other," parade chairman Ward Lay said during final preparations Sunday. "But we are going to have more clowns, mimes and mascots than you've ever seen before."

Cloudy, mostly mild weather was predicted.

Thirteen floats, three huge balloon figures, 15 bands and five equestrian units were expected to follow a new route mapped to avoid shadows from downtown buildings. The grand marshal is country singer Charley Pride.

Following the parade, the University of Arkansas and the University of California, Los Angeles will square off in the Cotton Bowl.

The University of Miami plays the University of Nebraska in the Orange Bowl tonight, but Miami had its parade New Year's Eve.

Sherman Hemsley, star of TV's "Amen," wore flashing sunglasses and was backed up by three female singers on a float celebrating Ben Franklin and electricity. Other celebrity participants included actor Raymond Burr, "L.A. Law" star Susan Ruttan and "Cheers" star George Wendt. Marilyn McCoo and Joe Garagiola were the masters of ceremonies.

Philadelphians lining the 2½-mile Mummers parade route on New Year's Day were treated to 14 hours of string bands competing for more than $286,000 in prize money and clowns who cakewalked to the event's perennial theme, "Oh, Dem Golden Slippers."

Mummery, the prancing and wearing of masks and costumes for the sheer fun of it, traces its origins back 2,400 years to the Greek god Momus. In Philadelphia, the first formal parade was in 1901, but neighborhood parades go back to at least 1877.

Some clowns wore traditional garb, but others dressed more topically, suiting up as President Reagan and talk show hosts Morton Downey Jr., Geraldo Rivera and Oprah Winfrey.

"Anything goes in this parade," said Philadelphia Lucille Hart, attending her 20th Mummers parade.

About 50 miles to the southwest, tiny Middletown, Del., spoofed the Mummers with its Hummers Parade despite rain and snow. About 200 spectators were entertained by 100 marchers, including participants dressed as Betty Crocker, Father Time and Baby 1989.

Junk Collector Held In Deaths

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DADE CITY, Fla. — An 88-year-old junk collector was charged today in a rampage at his retirement home that left two people dead and four injured.

Henry Thomas, who walks with the aid of a cane, was charged with two counts of homicide and was being held without bond in the Pasco County Detention Center, said a city police officer who refused to give his name.

Thomas' clothes were blood-stained when he was picked up Sunday evening while strolling through this city about 30 miles northeast of Tampa, police said. He was taken into custody about 12 hours after the victims' bodies were found.

The bodies of Max Nickbarg, 90, and Myrtle Smith, 73, were discovered Sunday morning by two nurses at the Reflections I retirement home, one of whom had slept only a few feet away from where the attack occurred, police said.

Nickbarg was found in his bedroom, and Smith was found in the living room. The two, last seen around midnight Saturday, had been beaten about the head, neck and shoulders, police said.

"Some furniture had been overturned, and there was broken glass on the floor," said police Sgt. Dale Neuner.

Four other people were injured, two seriously.

Frank Tear Sr., 89, was listed in critical but stable condition today with a fractured skull, cuts and bruises at Tampa General Hospital. Tear is the father-in-law of Helen Tear, who owns Reflections I and a similar home nearby.

Esther Kelly, 67, was in guarded condition at Humana Hospital in Dade City with two broken arms, cuts on her face and head, and bruises.

Ruth Godfrey, 71, and Lucy Mitchell, 85, were both listed in fair condition with facial cuts at East Pasco Medical Center in Zephyrhills about 10 miles south of here. Godfrey also suffered a broken collarbone.

Police Chief Phil Thompson would not say what was believed to have been the weapon or speculate on a motive.

Nine people lived in the home. All six victims had been sleeping in rooms near the front of the house, said Neuner.

Rehnquist Backs Salary Increase

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist has strongly endorsed a proposal to raise federal judges' salaries by 51 percent to $135,000 a year.

In his 1988 year-end report on the federal judiciary, Rehnquist threw his weight behind a presidential commission's recommendation of big pay raises for judges and about 2,000 other top federal officials.

Besides calling for the pay raise for trial judges, who now make $89,500, the commission recommended boosting salaries of federal appeals court judges from $95,000 to $140,000, a 47 percent jump; of Supreme Court associate justices from $110,000 to $165,000, a 50 percent increase; and of the chief justice from $115,000 to $175,000, a 52 percent increase.

The recommendations are pending before President Reagan, who can accept or modify the figures before sending his fiscal 1990 budget to Congress on Jan. 9.

Under the law, whatever pay increases the president endorses will take effect 30 days later unless both the House and the Senate vote to set them aside.

"Over the past two decades, the purchasing power of federal judicial salaries has been seriously eroded by inflation," Rehnquist said.

The buying power of an appeals court judge's salary has dropped 30 percent in the past 20 years, said the chief justice, adding, "While the salary of the median household has increased approximately 200 percent to keep pace with inflation since 1969, the salaries of federal (trial) judges rose by little more than half that amount."

Rehnquist cited a recent American Bar Foundation survey in which 30 percent of the federal judges who responded said they planned to resign before retirement unless "a significant increase in compensation" is provided.

"Dozens of federal judges have resigned from the bench during the past 15 years, far more than ever before, due in large part to financial reasons," Rehnquist said. "And the problem appears to be growing worse."

He said judicial salaries are directly linked to "the quality of American justice."

Comparing justice and medical care, Rehnquist said, "We are interested in receiving the best medical care available. If the quality of medical treatment is poor, it is little consolation that the cost may be low."

He added: "The right to one's day in court is meaningless if the judge who hears the case lacks the talent, experience and temperament that will enable him to protect imperiled rights and to render a fair decision."

Teen-Ager Survives On Spiders, Snow

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN DIEGO — A 15-year-old who got lost in the Cleveland National Forest survived six days and bitter-cold nights by sleeping in hollow logs and eating snow and spiders, his mother said.

"I don't know how he did it, being out there in 20 degrees and below," Debbie Campbell said of her son, Andrew. "He kept telling himself he had more to do in life. He's a strong boy, and he's got a will to live."

The boy was in fair condition early today at Sharp Memorial Hospital, where he was being treated for minor frostbite and hunger, hospital spokeswoman Pauline Renner said.

"His feet are swollen ... and very bruised," said Mrs. Campbell of rural Guatay. "He's lost about 20 pounds."

A father and son who had gone for a drive in the eastern San Diego County backcountry found the missing teen-ager Friday, three days after authorities abandoned their search despite protests by his parents.

Though the boy was wearing several pairs of socks, thermal underwear, a flannel shirt and Army field jacket, nighttime temperatures dipped into the 20s for several days while he was missing.

"It's just a miracle that he was found alive out there as low as the temperatures dropped," Mrs. Campbell said.

The youth had become separated from a friend while returning home Dec. 23 from an overnight fishing trip with a group of boys. He had frostbitten feet and toes when he arrived at the hospital by ambulance, Renner said.

Mrs. Campbell said her son couldn't remember some things that happened or the order in which events occurred. But he could recall crawling, walking and jogging through the forest, eating snow and spiders, sleeping in a hollow log and burying himself under a mound of dirt to stay warm, she said.

"I asked him, 'How can you eat spiders?' and he said, 'I plucked off the legs and ate them,'" Mrs. Campbell said.

The boy was rescued by Bill Orsborn, 60, a retired firefighter from La Mesa, and his son, Mark, 29.

"He was just off under some oak trees wandering around," Bill Orsborn said. "He was disoriented. He didn't know where he was, how long he was out there or what day it was."

While driving him back to Guatay, about 60 miles east of downtown San Diego, Campbell recalled how he ate handfuls of snow because water in the ravines was foul, the elder Orsborn said.

"He mentioned that he had tried to eat some crawdads from a stream, but that they made him sick," Orsborn said.

Authorities had abandoned their search Tuesday after dogs trailing his scent lost it near a roadside. Sheriff's officials said they believed Campbell, who ran away from home once before, hitched a ride out of the forest and was safe.

"I do feel angry that they just quit," Mrs. Campbell said. "We didn't give up, though. We had a search party ready to go."

A taped statement issued by the sheriff's department said officials will review how the search for Campbell was conducted.

U.S. Welcomes Help From Arafat On Pan Am Crash

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — FBI Director William Sessions says Yasser Arafat, chairman of the PLO, has "a wealth of information" that could help in the investigation of last month's crash of Pan American World Airways Flight 103 in Scotland.

Sessions said he would welcome any information Arafat might have, but with or without the PLO's help the FBI chief predicted Sunday "we're set up for the long haul" and prepared for a lengthy manhunt.

Appearing on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley" and on NBC's "Meet the Press," Sessions said he is "very optimistic" the culprit of the Dec. 21 bombing that killed 270 people will be found.

"We have a pattern and reputation for being able to solve" such crimes, he said.

The FBI chief said he would welcome any help Arafat and his Palestine Liberation Organization might provide. He said contacts between the FBI and Arafat presumably could be set up by the State Department.

U.S. and PLO officials recently opened talks on the Arab-Israeli conflict after Arafat disavowed terrorism and recognized Israel's right to exist.

Sessions said Arafat "has a great deal of information, a wealth of information he can give us."

Last week the Kuwaiti newspaper Al-Seyassah quoted an unidentified PLO official as saying the organization was considering a request by U.S. officials that the PLO help in tracking down those responsible for the bombing.

While welcoming Arafat's help in identifying possible suspects in the Pan Am crash, Sessions said he opposes any attempt by the PLO leader to retaliate by killing any suspects.

Arafat has blamed terrorists for bringing down the jetliner, condemning it as an "inhuman criminal action."

Asked about reports that Arafat is considering organizing an assassination team to retaliate against those who planted the bomb, Sessions said,

"We believe in the system of justice. We hope those people are handled in the courts."

Sessions said he has no evidence as yet to confirm the bombing was the work of terrorists rather than a non-political criminal act aimed at an individual on board the jet.

He also said that 62 bodies from the crash have been identified through fingerprinting.

Meanwhile, Alan McArtor, head of the Federal Aviation Administration, also appeared on "Meet the Press," and defended the policy of not publicizing threats to airliners.

"These threats are transmitted on a routine basis," he said.

But McArtor conceded that it was mistake for the United States to warn overseas embassy personnel about the threat to Pan Am jets while not alerting the public.

"Personally, I don't think it was managed well," he said.

McArtor said an alert has been issued to the Athens airport and others in the Mediterranean area to be on the lookout for false passports.

"There has been movement of some known terrorists who have in their possession false passports," McArtor said.

He also said the FAA will negotiate with European allies to seek improved airline security.

"This is a threat against civil aviation. It's not just isolated to American carriers," he said.

On CBS' "Face the Nation," Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, and Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., said the United States should keep open the possibility of military retaliation against any nation linked to terrorist attacks.

"The military option always has to be there," Hamilton said. "But we don't want to indiscriminately bomb areas."

In London, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher distanced herself from U.S. talk of punishing whoever planted the bomb.

"I don't think an eye for an eye and tooth for a tooth is ever valid," she said.

Police Deaths Decline In '88

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The number of police officers who died in the line of duty in 1988 fell slightly to 153, the National Association of Chiefs of Police said Sunday.

The national total was 155 the year before.

Eight women officers were included in the 1988 total; three women officers died the year before.

In 1988, California led the nation with a loss of 23 officers, followed by 21 in Texas, where five died in Dallas alone, and 13 in Florida.

Robert Ferguson, president of the association, said many police killers were on alcohol or drugs.

Of the officers killed, 75 died of gun shot wounds, 58 in traffic chases and accidents and the rest in plane crashes, stabbings, drownings and other causes in the line of duty. Their average age was 27.

Gerald Arenberg, a spokesman for the association, said the 153 deaths included a broad range of law enforcement officials from county sheriff deputies and local police to FBI and corrections officers.

"The association has maintained an American Police Hall of Fame listing all officers killed since 1960 when 55 died. In 1988, one officer died every 57 hours. On average, 157 are wounded or injured every day.

Warnings Over Super Auto Stereos Fall On Deaf Ears

By Michael Fleeman
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Something strange happens when Peter Hofsaess turns up his car stereo.

"It's kind of difficult to breathe and swallow," says the 21-year-old waiter. "The entire car starts moving. You start moving. It's really something if you're not used to it."

Of course, Hofsaess doesn't have your typical factory-installed auto stereo. His Plymouth Sapparo is hooked up with no less than $12,000 worth of Sony equipment that's capable of blasting 143 decibels of music through 24 speakers.

That's louder than a jet taking off or a jackhammer tearing up the sidewalk.

The latest expression of automobile hip is a car stereo so big and so loud that it can blow out windshields and bulge car doors. The boom-boom-boom of a superstereo bass has become a common sound along popular cruise spots around the country, and hundreds of competitions called "sound-offs" have been held.

"We love the guys with the cars that go boom," says a Top 40 song by the female rap duo L'Trimm.

But police, community leaders and hearing specialists are concerned. They say the stereos drown out emergency sirens, anger neighbors and can turn the inner ear into mush.

"It's noise pollution," said Sgt. Dennis Zine of the Los Angeles Police Department's traffic division. "These cars just drive back and forth, cruising, playing their stereos so loud you can hear it a block away."

"It's a nuisance, and it's dangerous," said Randy Bomgaars, a city councilman in the suburb of Bellflower.

"To me these stereo competitions are nothing more than a contest to see who can go deaf first," said Dr. Maurice Miller, an audiologist at New York City's Lenox Hill Hospital.

For superstereo owners, such talk is harder on the ears than the rock group Van Halen at 124 decibels. To them, the high-powered systems are more than just a hobby.

They're an art form, an expression of individuality and a statement to society.

"Who's anybody to tell me what's too loud?" said Hofsaess, who has been cited a number of times for noise violations. "I mean, what might be too loud for one person, might not be loud enough for another person."

In evaluating workplace noise, the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration calls for abatement when the sound level reaches 90 decibels. And 140 decibels — approaching the peak Hofsaess says his stereo has reached — is considered dangerous for everyone.

To put that in perspective, the sound of a jet taking off ranges from 125 decibels to 143 decibels. A power saw is 110 decibels. Normal conversation is 60 to 65 decibels. But because the decibel scale increases logarithmically, like the Richter earthquake scale, a 143-decibel stereo is thousands of times louder than a 65-decibel conversation.

Dr. Miller is concerned about boom stereos' effect on the fragile inner ear.

"This is dangerous to the point that when these people find out what it's doing to them, it's going to be too late," he said.

Frank Schettini, 22, of Chatsworth, Calif., said he does understand what his $20,000 stereo system is doing to him.

"I'm partially going deaf, but I blast mine as loud as I can everywhere I go," he said. He said he has reached 141 decibels with his 1,000-watt Rockford-Fosgate system featuring 21 speakers all packed into a customized four-wheel drive Chevrolet pickup called Big Dummy II.

Schettini, who operates a car customizing business, enters as many competitions as he can.

"It's an addicting type of thing. You get, like, the fever," he said.

"Somebody started it and now it's just going. It's another stage of competition for people who are not athletically inclined."

When Schettini cranks up his stereo, the music fills the whole body. The force of the wind from the rear-mounted speakers feels as if somebody's kicking the seat.

He called it a "clean sound" and likened the pressure on the ears to "going to the bottom of the swimming pool. It hurts your ears maybe for a minute after you get out. The harsh highs and harsh mids (midranges) tend to hurt longer."

Thousands of car stereo buffs like Schettini enter sound competitions, which have names like "Full-on Audio Bash," "Sound Quake" and "Thunder on Wheels."

Besides volume, Alpine stereo's "Car Audio Nationals" stresses audio quality, installation, and other categories. Alpine sponsored more than 300 contests this season, its biggest year yet.

"It's the creativity they're showing off. It's a personal statement," said Jim Wunderlich, technical communications specialist for Alpine.

The Texas-based "Thunder on Wheels" specializes in volume competition. This year's national winner, Thomas Fitcher, 22, of Houston, blasted his stereo at 154.7 decibels.

Anyone who lives near popular cruising areas such as Hollywood and the San Fernando Valley knows it's the thump of noisy woofers, not the neatness of installation, that is prized by car stereo enthusiasts.

"It's a growing problem. We call it the boom, boom," said the LAPD's Zine, adding "It's a hazard." A motorist with his ears full of super-sound is likely not to hear an approaching ambulance, paramedic or police car.

The car stereos have become such an irritation in Bellflower that Bomgaars says he may draft a city ordinance or press for a state law to quiet them.

"We've asked the sheriff's department to enforce the current laws as strictly as possible," he said. "Then we'll see what needs to be done."

Thrift Bailouts Creating Bigger Crunch On Budget

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Federal regulators rescued a post-Depression record 217 savings institutions in 1988, leaving Congress and President-elect Bush to figure out the best way to pay the $38 billion bill.

Theoretically, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which regulates the S&L industry, expects enough income over the next 30 years — $45 billion to $50 billion — to cover the cost.

But analysts and many members of Congress say regulators have run up such a huge bill that turning to the taxpayer is inevitable.

"We still don't know the magnitude of the S&L crisis," Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas said Sunday. "We're not even certain what the regulators have been doing the past week, running up a tab of some $40 billion."

Even with a last-minute spending spree of nearly $6 billion to rescue 22 institutions in the final 48 hours of 1988, regulators still have about 350 more insolvency cases to handle. And, as of last Sept. 30, another 150 savings institutions were sliding toward insolvency with capital levels below 1.5 percent.

Estimates of the total cost of paying for the mess run as high as $112 billion, a figure reported last month by the General Accounting Office, Congress' auditing agency.

Treasury Department officials are considering a variety of plans for the incoming administration. Most attempt to spread out the burden over time and keep as much as possible from adding to the federal budget deficit.

But Dole, in an interview on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley," said, "Somebody's going to have to pay. ... We can't hide it by putting it off budget or smoke and mirrors."

This year's failure and rescue total — 217 of the 3,100 S&Ls operating at the start of the year — is more than quadruple last year's total of 48. It is the highest total since a record 277 failures and rescues in the Depression year of 1938.

According to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which insures the nation's 13,500 commercial banks, 221 banks failed or required government assistance. That is also a post-Depression record, topping the previous record of 203 in 1987.

Both the FDIC and the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. draw their funds from an assessment on member institutions. But the FDIC depends on the much-larger banking industry, which as a whole is in much better shape, and enters 1989 in relatively good shape with more than $15 billion in reserves.

The package called for the government to provide $983 million in assistance in the sale of Beverly Hills to Michigan National Corp., a bank holding company in Farmington Hills, Mich., that is putting $52 million into the deal.

Also on Saturday, the bank board pledged:

—$243.3 million in aid to Home Federal Savings and Loan, a San Diego S&L putting up $25 million to acquire three institutions in the San Francisco area. They are: Columbus Savings and Loan, San Rafael; Cal America Savings and Loan, Walnut Creek, and First Security, Pleasant Hill.

—$151.1 million in aid to California Savings and Loan of Los Angeles, which agreed to put up $20.4 million into the insolvent Broward Federal Savings and Loan of Sunrise, Fla.

—$29.9 million in aid to First Network Savings Bank of Los Angeles, which agreed to pay $1.25 million for the insolvent Tahoe Savings and Loan of South Lake Tahoe.

—$8 million to Home Federal Savings and Loan of Sioux Falls, S.D., which is purchasing United Federal Savings and Loan of Aberdeen, S.D.

House Fire Kills Eight Kids, Two Adults

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

REMER, Minn. — A woman celebrating her birthday with her husband broke into hysteria after returning home to find that a fire had destroyed their wooden house, killing 10 people, including their four children.

Firefighters had to restrain Nancy Watson when she repeatedly tried to enter the burned out two-story house, said Valerie Pound, a witness.

"There was no house to get back into. It was just gone," Pound said. "She kept screaming the names of her four kids in a pattern, one right after another."

Three walls and the roof already had collapsed when firefighters arrived early Sunday, said Fire Chief Leo Renn.

The bodies of the badly burned victims were in or near their beds.

"It's probably the worst situation I've seen where 10 people are killed at one time," said Cass County Sheriff Jim Dawson. "It's just devastating."

Killed were John and Nancy Watson's children, Jenny, 14, Samantha, 11, Edward, 9, and William, 8; Mrs. Watson's sister and brother-in-law, Jean and Becky Smischny; their two children, Jay, 10, and Kimberly, 8; and Michelle Bastle, 10, and Robin Bastle, 12, daughters of Tony and Nancy Bastle, who live near the Watsons.

Elsewhere, New Year's fires killed at least 14 people, including four in Anchorage, Alaska.

Mrs. Watson remained under observation at Itasca Memorial Hospital early today in the north-central Minnesota city of Grand Rapids, 20 miles northeast of this town of 400 residents.

The fire spread so quickly it was unlikely anyone woke up before being overcome by smoke, said Renn.

The blaze was sparked by a wood-burning stove or an oil space heater, Renn said. He said the house was not equipped with smoke detectors, which were not required by law.

The Watsons had left the children with her sister and brother-in-law, who were visiting from Bemidji, to celebrate Mrs. Watson's 32nd birthday on New Year's Eve.

Tammy Grover, a step-sister of John Watson, said the Watson children loved the outdoors.

"They had pet rabbits and geese and ducks," she said.

"Jenny liked drawing and painting a lot, especially unicorns and horses. She just won $75 in a contest at school which was a really big thing to her," Grover said.

The Watsons, who are unemployed, "were a poor family as far as material things go, but they were a very close family," said Valerie Pound.

In other fires, Anchorage police said two adults and two children were killed in a trailer fire Sunday. Seven people died in fires in Anchorage during all of 1988, authorities said.

In Wisconsin, New Year's Day fires killed one person in a Waukesha hotel room and one in a Racine residence.

Seals Find Safe Harbor At Aquarium

By Michelle Locke
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Deep in the basement of the New England Aquarium a seal named Goofy lounges in his private tank, taking a casual glance at observers before rolling belly-up, inches below the water's surface.

Outside, in nippy 30-degree temperatures, 3½-year-old Rigel darts about his pool, twirling splashy pirouettes and barking "Hi" in return for a steady supply of fish.

Rigel and Goofy enjoy safe harbor at the aquarium, just two of the sick, orphaned or stranded animals taken in under a marine mammal rescue program that began 15 years ago.

"In terms of a job, it's a real satisfying sort of thing," said Greg Early, the program's supervisor.

Goofy was picked up on a Danvers beach this fall. Rigel was an orphan found in Maine about two years ago. He was released once but didn't take to the wild.

"He was a young orphan pup raised on seal formula and weaned on to fish. He was released up in Maine, and about a day or two later he showed up on a beach," Early said.

Volunteers recall how Rigel, identified by tags, crawled onto a beach blanket in the middle of a crowd and, when placed on the front floorboards of a truck, climbed up onto the seat and went to sleep.

"We brought him back in and said it seems like Rigel wants to stay here," Early said.

This year, the aquarium has picked up more than 150 animals, Early said, many sick or injured and most of them already dead. Seals are the most common animals rescued, but from October to January the focus is on whales, which often strand themselves on Cape Cod beaches.

The aquarium now has four residents of the program: a sea turtle chewed up by a shark and three seals. About 50 percent of the seals found survive and are returned to the wild or sent to zoos, Early said.

Harbor seals, which grow to about 5 feet and can weigh 220 pounds, usually keep to secluded beaches, rocky reefs and mud flats. Since they spend part of their time on land, they don't really get stranded, but when they're ill they often stay out of the water for unusually long periods.

Goofy, who appears satisfied to stay in his pool and be fed more than 15 pounds of food a day, is a likely zoo candidate because he seems to lack the fortitude to survive in the wild, Early said.

When he was picked up, "he was very, very docile which for a harbor seal is not normal," Early said.

Futurists Predict Trends For 1989

By Randi Henderson
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

While psychics and soothsayers may use the event of the new year for crystal ball conjecturing about the lives of celebrities from the Princess of Wales to Michael Jackson, a more serious sort of prognosticating is also going on this time of year.

Futurists, forecasters and market analysts depend on concrete facts rather than hunches from the heavens for their predictions. "Our reports," says Timothy Willard of the World Future Society of Bethesda, Md., "are not a promise about the future, but rather an offering about future trends that if they happen will require action."

If futurists' predictions are likely to be less definite and set in more flexible time frames than the pronouncements of the psychics, they are also likely to be a whole lot more accurate.

Predictions run the gamut from worldwide trends to personal life changes. Among the possibilities forecast for 1989:

Politically, says Kim Long, author of "The American Forecaster," an annual publication, 1989 will be "an interesting but not blockbuster year. The Democratic dominance of Congress will be the key to the whole political scene." He predicts a "trend to a modern version of the New Deal," with Congress creating a package of legislation with a "fairly liberal bias," including provisions for child care, guaranteed parental leave and guaranteed pensions.

Long sees an alarming dichotomy in eating trends in the United States. The fastest-growing categories in new foods are products associated with health, and the opposite, "goodies" such as snacks and sweets. This is a result, Long feels, of "baby boomers involved in the process of getting old. They want to eat what's good for them, but then they want to reward themselves for doing it." Long's own assessment of this trend: "It's pathetic. The food industry is laughing all the way to the bank."

The World Future Society predicts that computers will soon become a popular target for terrorists, an event easy to foresee with a recent incident of widespread computer tampering still simmering in the news. The society warns, "Attacks on computer networks, telecommunications facilities or defense computers could pose a major security threat to nations."

Another of the society's projections is that "Books will be published by telephone in the future, with manuscripts sent electronically by phone, printed on high-speed laser printers and then bound. A 250-page book could be produced in as little as six minutes."

On the economic front, William Halal, professor of management at George Washington University and author of "The New Capitalism," paints a pessimistic picture for 1989 and the years to come. "I think the country is headed for some kind of economic crisis," he says.

For the past 20 years, he explains, "we have been entering a transition to a new era," an era of a global economy, of an "information age." Unfortunately, "the country hasn't faced this; it's all been piecemeal. We haven't faced the need to redefine the corporation."

The huge and mounting federal deficit and the 1987 stock market crash are "phenomena thrown off by this failure of redefinition," Halal says. "Old capitalism still reigns but the country needs a new capitalism for the new age. The belief that capital drives the economy is an outmoded idea. Cooperation is a powerful force. The Japanese have shown this to us, but Americans have a hard time accepting it."

Several analysts of the American workplace predict a movement toward longer working hours, a trend borne out by a Harris poll earlier this year which found that the average workweek increased to 46.8 hours in 1987, up from 40.6 hours in 1973. "We're seeing people start work earlier and work later in order to keep up," trend follower Faith Popcorn has found. Among the reasons: the baby boom population bulge creating more competition for jobs at the top; the rise in individual entrepreneurial enterprises.

Ms. Popcorn, president of BrainReserve, a New York market research company, also predicts a continuation of the recently recognized cocooning phenomenon — people spending more and more of their leisure time in the comfort of their own homes. Evidence runs the gamut from increases in built-in residential swimming pools to the burgeoning home-delivery food business. But this prediction is disputed by other observers of the American scene who point to rising attendance at art, cultural and sports events and a leveling off of television viewing.

Grandma Turns Penmanship Into Business

By Dawn Mendez
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — Calling Jenny Lynne Pile's handwriting neat is like calling the Mona Lisa a pretty picture. In fact, her p's and q's are so beautiful, her sixth-grade teacher recently recognized her handwriting on an envelope even though she hadn't seen her for 35 years.

In a fast-paced world where computers can mass-produce "personal" letters, Pile is trying to parlay her perfect penmanship into a business — penning letters, addressing envelopes and completing thank-you notes for a fee.

"People have always complimented me on my (hand)writing," says Pile, of Dunbar. "Mostly I'd just address envelopes to other businesses and do things for my friends."

Pile worked for four years at the Charleston National Bank, then quit to care for an infant grandson. But she still needed an income, so her friends and her four children suggested she turn her talent into cash.

A classified ad in the Charleston newspapers says: "Tired of writing? Don't have time? Let me do it for you. Weddings, Graduations, Business, Anniversaries & thank-yous; all beautifully written." She also does Christmas cards.

Pile says she thinks she can be successful, primarily because of the appalling state of most people's handwriting.

"You know, when your children bring their diplomas home from school and you can't read them, that's disgusting," she says. "I used to wonder to myself, 'Who did this?'"

Pile credits her sixth-grade teacher, Sylvia Jones, with having encouraged her to write neatly. Teachers today, she says, don't place the same emphasis on clear, uniform handwriting.

"Generally, men's writing is worse than women's, although my main competitor at school was a boy," she says. "At my school reunion, he said he's a doctor, so he's probably the only doctor who can write."

Pile's penmanship, more graceful and stylish 35 years later and always done with a fountain pen and ink, caught her former teacher's eye when she spotted it on an envelope.

"We sent her an invitation I addressed to an event at the bank, and she recognized my writing," Pile says. "She contacted me and said how proud she was, how much she enjoyed seeing my improvement."

Vet's Wife Is Overwhelmed By Response To Letter

Dear Abby: I am Kathleen Cronon Wyosnick, and I wrote to you seeking support for the Korean War Veterans Memorial. You printed my letter, and the day it appeared, my phone started ringing at 7 a.m. and continued to ring non-stop throughout the weekend.

I heard from other wives who had lost their husbands in Korea; mothers who had lost sons; and men and women whose brothers, uncles and cousins were killed, wounded or missing in action in the Korean "conflict." (Although 54,246 died, 103,284 were wounded and 8,177 were missing in action, our government never called that three-year battle in Korea a "war.")

I had calls from many Korean War vets. "Bob" phoned from Montana, and in a booming voice said, "Kathleen, I just want to say, 'Lady, I love you!'" Before I could ask him his last name, he'd hung up.

A few just wanted to share some war stories that had been locked away for 35 years. Some choked up — unable to talk — and asked me to thank Abby for devoting her entire column to the Korean War vets on Veterans Day.

Abby, the mail was unbelievable! Sacks of mail were held at the post office until we could get enough hands to open it. An SOS went out to all the Kiwanis Clubs in the area. They recruited volunteers, who did an incredible job of opening it.

Some of the letters accompanying the contributions were heartwarming: John Lopez, a Sunnyvale, Calif., Marine vet who had been a POW, was one of the first to respond. A teen-age girl from Denver sent $2, saying she'd never heard of the Korean conflict! From San Antonio came a check from Jeane Westerman, a 76-year-old retired Army nurse (WW II), with a note: "Wish I could send more but my retirement isn't all that great." Al Johnson, a Korean War vet from Vancouver, Wash., sent a check saying he was going through a painful divorce, feeling alone and depressed, and this effort would give him something to do. A week later he wrote again to say he'd collected $5,000! Another vet said he was broke, but enclosed $5 in food stamps.

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

A check came from Gene Baenen of Lake Forest, Ill., in honor of his kid brother — one of the first Marines to be killed in Korea. (He went over in August, was killed in September, and would have been 21 on Christmas of that year.)

Abby, how can I thank you for all you've done for the veterans of the Forgotten War? I want to shower you with roses, hugs and kisses. May God bless you in a very special way.

— Kathleen C. Wyosnick

Dear Kathleen: Please don't thank me; that's what I'm here for.

Readers: We now have slightly more than $2 million of the $6 million needed to reach our goal. We have miles to go before we sleep, so please send your tax-deductible checks and money orders to: Korean War Memorial Fund, P.O. Box 2372, Washington, D.C. 20013-2372.

Dear Abby: If any of your followers are considering naming their child "Junior," please tell them not to. The following is the most persuasive argument I have ever heard against this practice:

I am an escrow officer for a major title insurance company. Several years ago, I was trying to close an escrow for a very nice elderly gentleman who was selling his house. I was shocked when I received the title report to find page after page of judgments, lawsuits and court cases. This man's name was so unusual that it was unlikely that there was another man with the same name in Phoenix. When I phoned him for an explanation, he sadly said, "Never name your child after yourself!" As it turned out, this man's son was serving time for forgery, writing bad checks and a few other things.

Imagine the embarrassment this poor gentleman had to go through not only to have a son like this, but to have to explain it to total strangers every time he applied for a credit card, bought a car or transacted business of any kind.

None of us think that cute little baby in the crib will ever grow up to be anything but perfect, but it doesn't always work out that way. So do yourself and your children a favor and give them their own names and their own identities. — Mistaken Identity In Phoenix

Dear Mistaken: Sometimes the father's reputation casts a dark shadow on his son. However, your point is well-taken. Let each person be responsible for his own identity and reputation.

Analysts Expect Active Takeover Scene During '89

By Jonathan Peterson
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The Year of the Mega-Deal may just have ended, but takeover activity is likely to keep up at a spirited pace through 1989.

Certainly, the $25 billion buyout of RJR Nabisco has stirred concerns about the social and financial effects of takeovers. Despite rising rhetoric, however, Congress is not expected to derail the buyout boom anytime soon.

And with the lure of returns that far exceed traditional stocks and bonds, "my prognosis is that you're going to see a lot of deals continuing," said Mario L. Baeza, a New York City attorney who specializes in the field. "Everywhere you look there's a (buyout) fund, and they're all trying to chase opportunities."

The amount spent on the takeover chase shattered all records in 1988. As of late December, corporate acquisitions completed or pending cost more than $457 billion, overshadowing the $302 billion spent in 1987 and the $264 billion spent in 1986, according to IDD Information Services in New York.

At the same time, deals have been getting bigger: Despite the bigger dollar figure for 1988, there were just 1,312 publicly reported purchases completed as of early December, compared to 1,515 in 1987.

For a clue to the future, consider this: $25 billion from pension funds and other professional investors is parked in investment pools just waiting for new buyout opportunities. Based on normal arrangements, the $25 billion could be "leveraged" into deals worth $250 billion, according to Dun & Bradstreet, the financial information firm.

"Obviously, the guys that are doing this expect very high rates of return," said Mickey D. Levy, chief economist with Fidelity Bank in Philadelphia. "They're doing it for economic reasons."

The takeover approach known as a leveraged buyout, for instance, has brought investors returns of an astounding 40 percent compounded annually, Baeza said. The headline-making RJR Nabisco transaction was an LBO, a deal financed mostly with debt and that typically forces asset sales and fierce cost-cutting to repay lenders.

But LBOs were not the only form of acquisition taking place in merger-happy 1988. The $13 billion purchase of Kraft by Philip Morris was a classic takeover, made possible by the buyer's huge surplus of cash, not debt.

Other takeovers, such as the $5.7 billion purchase of Pillsbury by Grand Metropolitan, a diversified British firm, highlighted another important trend: growing foreign investment in U.S. industry.

Several forces propelled the feverish takeover pace, some unique to 1988. As the year dawned, many executives and analysts viewed stock prices as too low, in the wake of the October 1987 stock market crash. One consequence: Price tags for entire companies were seen as bargains — and were shopped around by takeover specialists intent on stirring business.

Moreover, as the year progressed, professional investors began to wonder whether the merger movement would survive the post-Ronald Reagan White House. Would Reagan's successor oppose deals that the current administration had allowed for eight years?

"There was a fear that the Reagan administration's laissez-faire would be reversed," recalls Norman E. Mains, chief economist with Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards investment firm in Los Angeles.

By late in the year, some on Wall Street may have perceived an opportune time for deals, with members of Congress campaigning for re-election and the White House preparing for a transition. "From a political point of view, the fall was the ideal point to attempt a merger," said Stan Turesky, a Washington lobbyist who represents financial services firms.

Mergers may remain an important theme in the post-Reagan era for other reasons, too. Some are as tangible as tax policy; others as abstract as the attitudes of today's generation of investment bankers.

For one, current law has a built-in bias toward debt financing: Interest payments to bondholders — including holders of high-risk, high-yield "junk bonds" used in takeovers — are tax deductible. By contrast, dividends paid to holders of a company's stock are not.

"Wall Street needs a way to make money, and the (takeover) business is very attractive in terms of tax laws," observed David Hale, an economist with Kemper Financial Services in Chicago.

In many cases, investors who jump at buyout opportunities for a rapid return are saying in effect: "We don't believe in the future. We'll take our money now," declares Margaret M. Blair, an analyst at the Brookings Institution.

Helms Looks Back At Reagan

But despite his personal and political enthusiasm for Reagan, Helms has not hesitated to butt heads with the administration. He has delayed Senate confirmation of appointees whose conservative credentials he suspected. He has waged an eight-year war with the Reagan State Department, accusing Secretary of State George Shultz and his diplomatic corps of being too easy on communist governments.

In the interview, Helms recalled a discussion he had with Reagan during the transition period following his 1980 victory. They agreed that Reagan should strike an uncompromising pose over the federal budget, vetoing any "bloated" spending bill and taking his case to the people to subdue congressional resistance.

"If he had done that, the American people would have sided with him, and he was at the height of his popularity," Helms said. "But he didn't do it, he didn't get started. Then he got shot and the whole thing got out of kilter."

"That is the number-one disappointment. And I think so many of the other problems of this country stem from this enormous debt that Congress has run up. ... If we can ever move back to a balanced budget and start paying off some of the national debt, you'd see a rejuvenation of this economy that you'd find unbelievable."

Some conservatives have accused Reagan of only paying lip service to their social agenda — particularly the effort to ban abortions. But Helms said he had no complaints. "On the family values, he's been in the forefront," he said.

Helms said he was optimistic about Bush, despite the suspicion with which many hard-line conservatives view him. He said he was not disappointed that most of Bush's top-level appointees were products of the GOP's moderate wing "because I expected it."

"On the other hand, you and I know the campaign commitments that Mr. Bush made," Helms said. "I expect the word will get around that he expects them (his appointees) to keep those commitments."

Helms served notice that he will scrutinize Bush's appointees as closely as he did Reagan's.

He said he might oppose the confirmation of Louis Sullivan, Bush's choice for Health and Human Services secretary who has articulated conflicting views on abortion. He also voiced reservations about Carla Hill, whom Bush has tapped for special trade representative, because she has lobbied for Third World countries with left-wing governments.

"I wouldn't say it's blue sky for any of these nominees," Helms said. "I'm keeping my options open."

Irish, Mountaineers Playing For Title

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TEMPE, Ariz. — Question: Who is Notre Dame playing in today's Fiesta Bowl?

There's got to be an opponent for the No. 1-ranked Fighting Irish. No team has ever opposed itself in a bowl game.

A trip to Sun Devil Stadium provided the answer. One end zone carried the lettering "Notre Dame." And there in the other end zone, plain as day, were the words "West Virginia." They were even spelled correctly.

Not only was West Virginia invited to provide the opposition — some say the fodder — for Notre Dame, the third-ranked Mountaineers even planned to attend. They've been here all week participating in all the festivities; it would be a shame to go home without playing the game.

Most of the attention has gone to Notre Dame, which, after all, is college football's most glamorous name. A record seven national championships in the 52 years of the Associated Press poll (1943, '46, '47, '49, '66, '73, '77) — prior to the start of the AP poll, Notre Dame won six other national titles under various rating systems — a record seven Heisman Trophy winners, a record 31 former players and five former coaches in the National Football Foundation's Hall of Fame.

And although both teams compiled 11-0 regular-season records, it was Notre Dame's 11th perfect campaign in this century and the first ever for West Virginia, which has no national championships or Heisman winners and has to be satisfied with six Hall of Famers.

Notre Dame has the mystique of Rockne, the Gipper, the Four Horsemen, Leahy and Parseghian, Lujack, Hart, Huarte and Snow, Hanratty and Seymour, and on and on and on. West Virginia counters with Ira Rodgers, Clarence Spears, Joe Stydakar, Greasy Neale, Sam Huff and Bruce Bosley.

Notre Dame's 1988 victims include defending national champion Miami, Southern Cal and Michigan, all of whom were in the final regular-season Top Ten. Not a single West Virginia opponent is currently ranked.

"That bothers me a great deal because our schedule is normally very, very difficult," Coach Don Nehlen said. "I grant you this year some of the teams didn't win quite as many games, but I can't imagine us not playing a good schedule."

"It does disturb me a little bit that we haven't been given quite the credit we deserve. I think we have a tendency to think we never get credit because for so many years we never did.

"But the Fiesta Bowl thought enough of us to invite us here. I don't think people are going around saying, 'I don't know what in the world they even have that team out there for.'"

"There's no question this is the greatest thing that's ever happened to the West Virginia football program. I read in the paper that 50-60 million people will see this game on television. We don't even have two million people in the State of West Virginia."

"You'll like our team, I'll tell you that. I don't want you to misconstrue that our football team is just happy to be here. This is not the first bowl we've played in (both teams are 8-5 in bowl games)."

Notre Dame is a 5½-point favorite and Nehlen has played the role of underdog to the hilt.

"It's fun to go to a bowl and everybody tells you you're going to lose," he said. "If you're a competitor, that's fun."

West Virginia has been an underdog before with some surprising results. The Mountaineers met Florida in the 1981 Peach Bowl and, Nehlen remembers, "They laughed at us. They didn't even know my name. That was the Lock of the Year. Florida was supposed to bury us."

Final score: West Virginia 26-6.

The Mountaineers' very next game was the 1982 opener at Oklahoma. "We showed up," Nehlen points out. West Virginia won 41-27.

Led by sophomore quarterback Major Harris, West Virginia ranks second nationally in scoring, fifth in total offense and sixth in rushing.

"We have some big-play guys," Nehlen said. "We will not run off-tackle 900 times in this game."

Both teams tested the field Sunday. Arizona State coach Larry Marmie said the grass field, used by the NFL's Phoenix Cardinals as well as the college team, was "not in very good shape." Neither Nehlen nor Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz was overly concerned.

"There's not a lot of grass in the middle," Holtz said. "It's a very fine grass on the side and around both 20s. It's a very, very fast field."

Nehlen called it "a fast track. In the middle it's a little dug-up, but if it doesn't rain it'll be fine."

Holtz was more concerned with the sun. The team defending the north end will be looking into the sun fielding kicks, certainly until late in the game.

49ers Pop Vikes

Rice's 3 Scores Key Playoff Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Bring on the fog, the cold, even the big, bad Chicago Bears.

The San Francisco 49ers finally won a playoff game Sunday after failing for three years to recapture their Super Bowl glory, and they're not about to fret over the elements or the opponent coming up next.

If the NFC title game in Chicago turns out to be another Fog Bowl like the game Saturday between the Bears and Philadelphia Eagles, that's perfectly OK with Joe Montana and company.

"I think this is the fog capital of the United States, so we should be used to it," said Montana, who even has a radio talk show for local rock station KFOG.

Montana saw nothing but blue skies Sunday when he lofted three touchdown passes to Jerry Rice and directed two other scoring drives in a 34-9 thumping of the Minnesota Vikings. It was payback time for the 49ers, ousted from the playoffs by the Vikings last year and by the New York Giants in the first playoff game the previous two years.

Montana, who hadn't thrown a touchdown pass in postseason competition since winning the Super Bowl four years ago, looked especially sharp in completing his first seven passes and 16 of 27 overall for 178 yards.

"He was throwing with zip," said Vikings defensive coordinator Floyd Peters. "He put the ball right on the money. He'd roll out, see a guy coming and stop and pop the football in there."

Minnesota defensive end Bubba Baker, frustrated by a failure to put pressure on Montana and thwarted by the 49ers' smaller but quicker offensive line, said San Francisco played "Montana football."

"Nobody likes to get hit, but at this stage of his career Montana can't stand there and take the pounding," Baker said. "You could tell that was a priority of theirs today — to keep the animals off Montana." The 49ers, though, had much more going for them than Montana. They showed the kind of balance and big-play ability that was typical of their two Super Bowl seasons.

Defense Keys Bills

Buffalo Gets Revenge, Tops Oilers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — For the past four years, NFC teams that play defense have trampled AFC teams that do not in the Super Bowl.

The Buffalo Bills are ready to throw that trend back in the haughty NFC's face ... if they get by the Cincinnati Bengals next Sunday in their first AFC title game appearance in 22 years.

With Bruce Smith, Leonard Smith and Cornelius Bennett leading the defense and the special teams blocking two kicks and consistently establishing field position, the Bills beat the Houston Oilers 17-10 Sunday to earn that trip to Cincinnati, where they lost 35-21 on Nov. 27.

"They're a fine defensive football team," said Houston coach Jerry Glanville, whose team constantly self-destructed in the "red zone," inside the Buffalo 20.

"Rather than us doing something wrong, give them credit for doing something well," Glanville said.

"We played great defense and we played SUPER on special teams," echoed Buffalo coach Marv Levy, whose team's 12-4 record was largely attributable to defense. "I told them all along — don't be dumb and don't be dirty and I think we accomplished that."

Said nose tackle Fred Smerlas: "You got what we paid to see — the best defensive team in the AFC."

In fact, Buffalo's ninth victory without a loss at Rich Stadium this season was a battle of lost opportunities, with Houston losing more.

While the Bills failed on fourth and one plays from the 3- and 5-yard lines and were inside the Houston 20 four times without scoring, they managed when they had to.

They got their first score 4:25 into the second quarter when Robb Riddick went over from the 1 at the end of a 44-yard drive that began when Leonard Smith blocked Greg Montgomery's punt.

"We heard all week that they had the best special teams unit in the NFL," said Smith, obtained in an early-season trade with Phoenix. "Our special teams rank pretty high, too."

Pack Looking Ahead

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — The Peach Bowl, prancing from two years of unaccustomed success, didn't get its third straight sellout.

And 44,635 fans — few of whom remained at the soggy conclusion — didn't get a very nice day at the ballpark.

But Dick Sheridan got his first bowl victory and North Carolina State got its eight-victory season — after 4-7 last year — and that and was enough to make Saturday a happy New Year's Eve for the Wolfpack.

"I don't think of it as bowl so much as the continuation of the season," Sheridan said after his Wolfpack beat Iowa 28-23, concluding an 8-3-1 season.

"Winning eight games is a landmark," he continued. "If we can reach a point where eight or more wins a season is a standard, then we'll be developing our program."

It's a program that Sheridan considered leaving; he talked with Georgia officials about the job replacing retiring Bulldog coach Vince Dooley, but decided to stay at State.

That aside, he hopes his Pack is on the right track and that the post-season pollsters will be kind to them.

"Hopefully, we could finish in the Top 20 after all the bowls are finished," Sheridan said.

The 21st Peach Bowl will not, by the admission of its participants, make any college football textbooks as an example of how the game is meant to be played.

Miami Facing What If Question

By Hal Bock
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Welcome to the "What If" Bowl.

What if Notre Dame, 11-0 and ranked No. 1, and West Virginia, also 11-0 and No. 3, play to a tie in today's Fiesta Bowl, while Miami, 10-1 and sitting between them in the poll, blows out Nebraska in the Orange Bowl?

Then what? Then maybe, just maybe, Miami is the national champion for the second consecutive year.

Here's another "what if" for you. What if West Virginia, with a schedule that included Bowling Green, Fullerton State, Virginia Tech, East Carolina and Cincinnati, narrowly beats Notre Dame while Miami wins big?

Does that make West Virginia national champions?

Miami coach Jimmy Johnson isn't so sure.

"I just hope the voters vote who they think the best team is," he said. "We're No. 2 right now, above West Virginia. If we beat Nebraska, why should that change? If we're ahead of West Virginia and we both win, shouldn't we still be ahead of West Virginia?"

That seems like a sound argument, unless you're Don Nehlen, West Virginia's coach, who's selling his team the old adage that if you beat No. 1, that makes you No. 1.

"I told Nehlen I hope he has an ugly win," Johnson said.

Would it make a difference? "The only way we have a chance," Johnson said, "is if people look at who we played."

Miami's schedule was rather impressive. The Hurricanes opened with a 31-0 rout of Florida State, a

Georgia's Lorenzo Hampton rips off yardage against Michigan State

Dogs' Air Game Keys A 34-27 Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — After 25 years of conservative, ground-pounding football, Georgia's Vince Dooley fired up a passing attack for a memorable coaching finale.

"I am really thrilled to beat a very good football team like Michigan State, but I was surprised to see two run-oriented football teams take part in one of the great passing classics," Dooley said Sunday night after a 34-27 Gator Bowl victory over the Spartans.

"Our football team was able to have a peak performance in what was my last association with a group of great young men," Dooley said.

Dooley's 25 years at Georgia is a record among active Division I-A coaches in length of stay at one school. Dooley amassed a record of 201 wins, 77 losses and 10 ties. He is only one of 10 Division I-A coaches to win 200 games.

His teams won one national championship in 1980 and six Southeast Conference titles. Only Paul "Bear" Bryant, the legendary Alabama coach, who won 14 SEC titles, had more.

In a quarter century at the helm,

Dooley only had one losing season — 1977. Before his arrival in 1964, the Bulldogs had three straight losing seasons and losing records in seven of the previous nine years.

Dooley is third among active Division I-A coaches in career wins, trailing only Michigan's Bo Schembechler with 223 and Penn State's Joe Paterno with 212.

Dooley, who played football at Auburn, also participated in his final collegiate game in the 1953 Gator Bowl.

In Sunday's contest, Wayne Johnson passed for 227 yards and three touchdown passes and Rodney Hampton ran for 109 yards and scored three times as Georgia rolled up 409 yards offense.

"We knew we were going to have to throw the ball more," said Johnson, who completed 15 of 27 passes. "We knew they were great against the run."

The two teams combined to pass for 515 yards and six touchdowns.

"It was a wide-open game, but you'd still rather win the game," said Michigan State coach George Perles. "We'd get close, then we would give up another touchdown. That was frustrating."

12 Nebraska Players Get Suspended

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Twelve Nebraska football players have been suspended for disciplinary reasons, but all were redshirts or other team members who were not expected to play in the Orange Bowl, the school's assistant athletic director said.

Don Bryant said in a telephone interview from Miami just before midnight Saturday that two of the 12 players had been sent home to Nebraska. The suspensions were for curfew violations.

Dorm Thefts Reported At Alabama

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — The Alabama athletic dormitory was broken into and several items were stolen during the Crimson Tide's basketball game with Northeast Louisiana.

Thieves broke into Bryant Hall and took about $2,000 worth of property belonging to four Alabama players, campus police said.

Coach Wimp Sanderson said the thieves stole a television and video cassette recorder belonging to freshman Robert Horry. Another freshman, Marcus Webb, lost a gold watch and other items. Also, the players reported missing clothes.

Proctor Is In His Second Fiesta Bowl

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — The surroundings looked familiar to West Virginia linebacker Basil Proctor when he arrived last week to prepare for Monday's Fiesta Bowl.

It was just two years ago — on Jan. 2 — that Proctor was playing for a national championship while a member of Miami's then-unbeaten Hurricanes. The Hurricanes lost to Penn State and Proctor lost out on his chance for a national title.

"I've been trying to get the other players to understand the importance of this game," Proctor said.

West Virginia, 11-0 and ranked No. 3, plays Notre Dame, 11-0 and ranked No. 1, in the Fiesta Bowl Monday.

"The biggest thing I want to do is win this game. This will be my third game with a chance at the national championship. We lost the last times I was out there," said Proctor, a 6-foot-4, 250-pound linebacker who sometimes plays defensive back.

Penn State beat Miami 14-10 two years ago to give top-ranked Miami its only loss and wrest the national championship from the Hurricanes.

The year before, Penn State, Miami and Oklahoma entered the bowls ranked 1-2-3. Oklahoma beat Penn State in the Orange Bowl, but Tennessee demolished Miami in the Sugar Bowl and prevented the Hurricanes from moving up.

It wasn't frustration with those games, though, that drove Proctor from Miami. Proctor says it was frustration with Miami.

Proctor said he talked to other players about leaving Miami but hadn't made up his mind. When he ended up two classes short of qualifying for the 1987 season, Proctor said Coach Jimmy Johnson wouldn't let him attend summer school.

"He said, 'If you're not going to stay, you're going to pay for summer school yourself,'" Proctor said.

Proctor was a man without a football team and returned to the streets of Miami.

"I knew I had to go back to school," Proctor said. "If I wouldn't have, I would have been under the bridge or down at the park talking about what I used to do."

He thanked a pair of friends who kept him out of trouble.

"They kept me straight the whole year I was out."

"I have a lot of friends who are drug dealers and they would tell me to forget about football and help them."

"It's fast money, but it isn't worth it. I've always wanted a BMW, but I want to earn it."

Former Miami player Greg Jones, who had since transferred to West Virginia, talked to Proctor shortly after he had decided to return to school.

"I told him I knew I had to go back. I had talked to a defensive coach from Oklahoma but decided I didn't want to go there. Greg said, 'Why don't you come here?'"

"I said, 'If they're interested, tell them to call. The next day, (recruiter) Doc Holliday called.'"

Pre-Game Question Motivated Bills

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — A question from a Houston writer helped prompt superlative special teams play by the Buffalo Bills in Sunday's 17-10 AFC playoff victory over the Houston Oilers.

Buffalo coach Marv Levy said the writer asked him earlier in the week what the Bills would do to counter the Houston special teams, which the writer termed "the best in the NFL."

"I just repeated that question to my players," said Levy. "I want to thank that person for asking me that honest question. It helped motivate them."

The Bills special teams, which had been dormant for the past several games, came alive Sunday and produced a number of big plays, including a blocked field goal, a blocked punt and fumble on a punt return.

In addition, kick returner Erroll Tucker gave the Bills good field position with a total of 113 return yards.

Steve Tasker, who made the Pro Bowl last season as the AFC special teams player, said Levy's relaying the writer's question played "a big role, especially in our preparation."

"It raised our emotional level," Tasker said. "We knew we could really make a difference today and I think that really helped us throughout."

The first of the big plays came in the second quarter and led to Buffalo's first points of the game.

After sending 10 men on two previous punt attempts and coming close to the block, the Bills finally got through to Houston punter Greg Montgomery.

Leonard Smith smothered the punt and the Bills got the ball at the Houston 46. Five plays later, Robb Riddick scored on a 1-yard run that gave the Bills a lead they never relinquished.

"I just came in clean," Smith said. "The guy didn't pick me up."

Smith said the Bills weren't in a punt-rush formation for the block. "Sometimes we have a little bit of a disguise. It was the decoy that worked."

The next special teams play came in the second quarter's final minutes, when the Oilers, who had made it 7-3 on a Tony Zendejas field goal, lined up for another field goal attempt from 38 yards. Defensive end Bruce Smith broke through the line to block it.

The fumbled punt return came with just two minutes remaining in the game and ended any chances of a comeback by Houston.

Curtis Duncan took the punt at the Buffalo 15 and was stripped of the ball from behind by Tasker. The Bills recovered and ran out the clock.

"Special teams have to shine above both offense and defense, and that's what we were able to do," Leonard Smith said. "When it really counted, we were able to come up with a turnover."

Rice's Heroics A Catalyst For 49ers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jerry Rice toyed with Minnesota defenders while scoring three touchdowns Sunday and showed some sleight of hand to seal the 49ers' 34-9 NFC playoff victory.

The magic moment came in the third quarter, when the 49ers were leading 21-9 and had the ball on their 43-yard line. Joe Montana stepped back and threw a short pass on the left side to Rice.

Cornerback Reggie Rutland, who zigged when he should have zagged on Rice's third TD catch in the second quarter, tried to play hero this time by leaping for the ball with his arms outstretched.

If Rutland had intercepted, there was no one between him and the goal line 50 yards away, and the Vikings could have narrowed the deficit to 21-16 going into the fourth quarter.

Instead, Rutland was a split-second late, the ball slipped through his fingers and Rice made it disappear into his own hands.

Rice spun around and turned the catch into a 28-yard gain to Minnesota's 29. Moments later, Roger Craig scored on a 4-yard run to give the 49ers a 28-9 lead.

The difference, then, between an interception and a near-interception by Rutland was 14 points. It also meant the season was over for Minnesota and still alive for the 49ers.

"That was the end for us," said Vikings defensive coordinator Lloyd Peters. "The roof caved in."

Rutland, who scored a touchdown on a 45-yard interception return in Minnesota's victory over San Francisco in last year's playoffs, didn't second-guess himself this time, but knew he had just blown a big one.

"I had the ball, Rice just had more of it than I did," he said. "That's pretty much how things were going the whole way."

Rice, an All-Pro receiver, began his show early in the game as he tied an NFL playoff record, shared with five others, for touchdown receptions. Rice, though, had all his TDs in the first half.

Bo Schembechler, Bo Derek cheer at a pep rally

Schembechler Faces Another Obstacle

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PASADENA, Calif. — The last thing Bo Schembechler needs is another obstacle in the Rose Bowl, but that's what he faces in the "teacher versus pupil" confrontation with Southern Cal coach Larry Smith.

It should have been enough that Michigan is a 6½-point underdog, or that Schembechler's record is a dismal 1-7 in Rose Bowl games, or that the Big Ten has lost six of the last seven to Pacific-10 champions.

But now Schembechler has added this other element. It came up when someone asked him about his old mentor, Woody Hayes. Schembechler learned his football under the former Ohio State legend the way Smith learned his under Schembechler.

"I always felt I had the advantage playing Woody because I studied him all the time," Schembechler said. "I doubt if he studied me."

"That may well be the case here where Larry could have the advantage." As if he needs one.

The fifth-ranked Trojans, 10-1, will be making an unprecedented 26th appearance in the Rose Bowl when the two teams meet at 5 p.m. EST today. Southern Cal has won 18 of those previous games and five of its last six. Last year, USC was defeated 20-17 by Michigan State.

This will be Michigan's 13th Rose Bowl visit. The 11th-ranked Wolverines, 8-2-1, have a 5-7 record. In their last appearance, two years ago, they lost to Arizona State 22-15.

Smith, completing his second season at USC, was a defensive end coach for Schembechler in 1967 and 1968 at Miami of Ohio, then served four years as offensive line coach when Schembechler moved to Michigan.

The Wolverines played in the 1970 and 1972 Rose Bowl games while Smith was on the staff.

This will be the first time the two have ever opposed one another.

"He really set an example for us all," Smith said. "He built great programs and didn't cheat."

"But when the game starts, I won't be thinking it's me against Bo. The game will be coached by me and my coaches. We won't be affected by the fact that it's Bo, but by the fact that it's Michigan. I'm thinking more of the game itself."

Obviously, the Trojans should have the advantage on the field. They are led by quarterback Rodney Peete whose 208 completions total 17 more than Michigan attempted all season.

Behind the throwing of Peete and the running of Aaron Emanuel, Scott Lockwood, Ricky Ervins and Leroy Holt, the Trojans led the Pac-10 in rushing and scoring. They also led the conference in total defense.

"They certainly have a better record than we do defensively," Schembechler said. "I'd say that's where we've got to play our best. We have to prove we can stop them."

Michigan had the best defense in the Big Ten, allowing eight conference foes an average of 275.5 yards per game. At the heart of that defense is tackle Mark Messner, an All-American who set a school record and led the Big Ten with 25 tackles for loss, including nine quarterback sacks.

Huskers Facing A Stiff Test

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Tom Osborne says this year's Nebraska Cornhuskers might rank with the best teams he has coached — if they hold their own against second-ranked Miami tonight in the Orange Bowl.

"This team might have played as well as any, when you look at both sides of the ball, if they play well," Osborne said. "If not, they're just another good team."

The sixth-ranked Huskers, 11-1, were eliminated from national championship contention by a 41-28 loss at UCLA in their third game. But they've won nine in a row since and captured the Big Eight Conference title outright for the first time since 1983.

"I think Nebraska could be as good a team as there is in the country," Miami coach Jimmy Johnson said.

The Hurricanes, 10-1, hope to show they're the best by beating Nebraska. Johnson says a Miami victory, coupled with a win by No. 3 West Virginia against No. 1 Notre Dame in the Fiesta Bowl, might give the Hurricanes their second straight national championship.

The final AP poll will be announced Tuesday afternoon.

"Our biggest challenge is going to be beating Nebraska, not the polls," Johnson said.

The Hurricanes are favored, but Johnson is concerned about how they match up with the Huskers.

"They are one of the more physical teams in the country," Johnson said. "They hammer at you and play what people call smash ball. ... They'll be running the ball in the first quarter, and they'll be running the ball in the fourth quarter."

Nebraska won the NCAA rushing title for the seventh time by averaging 382 yards per game. I-back Ken Clark rushed for 1,497 yards, including 1,069 in the final six games.

"We're basically a power football team," Clark said. "Nothing fancy about it."

Actually, a few frills are provided by quarterback Steve Taylor, who totaled 998 yards rushing and averaged 7 yards per scramble. But Taylor said Nebraska plans to keep things simple against the Hurricanes, who have allowed only 2.2 yards per carry.

"They have an excellent defensive line," he said. "They're not overpowering or strong, but they're very agile."

"We're gonna go right at 'em. ... We can run against any team."

Miami has just as much confidence in its passing game. Wide receiver Pee Wee Smith grunted when asked how Nebraska's secondary matches up with the Hurricanes.

"Please," Smith said. "They're average-speed DBs. I think we can get deep on 'em."

Smith will try to help take up the slack created by the suspension of top wide receiver Andre Brown for an undisclosed reason. Osborne suspended 11 Huskers over the weekend for curfew violations, but most were not expected to play.

Miami's passing game is directed by All-American Steve Walsh, who has thrown a school-record 28 touchdown passes this season and finished fourth in the Heisman Trophy vote.

"I know Steve is going to go out there and try to throw 12 or 13 touchdown passes, which he's capable of doing," said Nebraska linebacker Broderick Thomas, another All-American.

The Hurricanes' four losses in the past four years, including this season's 31-30 defeat at Notre Dame, came in games in which they committed at least five turnovers.

"We'll put pressure on to force Walsh to make some bad decisions," linebacker Jeff Mills said. "If we do that effectively, we have a chance to win."

Nebraska has 38 sacks, but Walsh has been sacked only four times.

"More than anything, it might be his paranoia of getting hit," Miami offensive guard Mike Sullivan said with a smile. "He's not a real big guy."

Walsh's favorite target is running back Cleveland Gary, who has caught 57 passes for 655 yards. Gary also has rushed for 480 yards and seven scores. But the Hurricanes' ground attack is the weakest phase of their game, and improvement against the brawny Huskers is unlikely.

"They're strong and big and strong again," Sullivan said. "Our linemen are a little bit smaller. Our top five probably compare to two of theirs."

The game is the first meeting between the schools since the 1984 Orange Bowl, in which Miami upset unbeaten Nebraska 31-30 to win the national championship. Osborne said that squad was his best offensive team, and the next year's Huskers had the best defense of the 15 straight Top Ten teams he has coached.

"This is a good team all the way around," Osborne said. "After this game, we'll know a little more."

State Looking Ahead

The two teams set a Peach Bowl record for turnovers, on a rainy, sloppy day at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium. State quarterbacks tossed two interceptions and the Wolfpack lost five fumbles. Iowa checked in with four interceptions and three lost fumbles.

"The weather conditions and the wet ball made it very difficult for both teams," said Iowa Coach Hayden Fry.

"There were a lot of turnovers; they took advantage of ours, and we took advantage of theirs," Sheridan said.

State took control in the second quarter, turning a 7-3 contest into a 28-3 rout with three fast touchdowns: one on a 75-yard bomb from Shane Montgomery to Danny Peebles, the next after Iowa fumbled the ensuing kickoff, and the third off the first of Iowa QB Chuck Hartlieb's four interceptions.

The Hawkeyes slowly crept back, coming within five points with eight seconds to play, but State's Shad Santee scooped up George Murphy's onside kick, and that was that.

"It was not as pretty as we would have liked it to be, but who cares?" Sheridan smiled.

It was the fifth straight Peach Bowl in which the loser was within shooting range at the end, even if only a handful of soggy patrons were left to watch.

Dye's Hacking Relieves Bowden

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS, La. — Bobby Bowden is relieved Pat Dye is all coughed up about the Sugar Bowl. "I was beginning to get worried," Bowden said Sunday at a luncheon as the coaches of the Sugar Bowl foes made their final joint appearance before the game. "They say when he doesn't cough he isn't worried about the game."

Irish-Mountaineers Set To Go

"We're at a tremendous disadvantage," said Holtz, whose bench will be facing the sun. "I have a problem with the sun in my eyes. My pupils dilate and I can't see."

The forecast called for variable clouds with a chance of showers and a high of 62.

If Notre Dame wins, the Irish will win the national championship. A West Virginia victory and it might depend on what second-ranked Miami — which lost to Notre Dame 31-30 in October — does against No. 6 Nebraska in the Orange Bowl tonight.

Nehlen had a final message for Miami coach Jimmy Johnson, who has been campaigning harder than George Bush and Michael Dukakis combined.

"Jimmy knows my thoughts and he agrees with me; he just won't admit it," Nehlen said. "There are only two teams in America playing for the national championship. They're both right here and we're one of them."

Soldier Field Became The Bog

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

All of a sudden, the Monsters of the Midway were fighting what seemed to be the Battle of Britain.

Randall Cunningham and Mike Tomczak had disappeared into the shrouded mist of Soldier Field. But what was that blur in the corner of the end zone? Was it Bogart and Bergman? Or was it Keith Byars and Cap Boso?

No one really knows. If you weren't in Saturday's game between the Philadelphia Eagles and the Chicago Bears, you didn't see it. On television, it was a new show, The Fog Bowl.

Pete Rozelle, the NFL commissioner, let the game continue. He was mystified at the implications of stopping it.

"I don't know what we would have done if it had gotten worse," Rozelle said Sunday. Do you suspend it and start it up again? Do you start fresh on another day. I just don't know."

This was not the first time fog had interrupted a playoff game.

In Game 4 of the Stanley Cup finals between Edmonton and Boston, fog from melting ice in Boston Garden caused a halt five times in the second period. The officials asked the players to skate in circles to clear the air. With that done, the power failed, the game was halted and everyone was sent home.

On May 20, 1975, fog obscured a Stanley Cup final between the Philadelphia Flyers and the Buffalo Sabres. Philadelphia goaltender Bernie Parent could not see Rene Robert score the winning goal at 18:29 of overtime.

Cardinals Roll Over Cats

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Kentucky coach Eddie Sutton calls No. 14 Louisville the best Cardinal team he's faced in his four years on the job, and that includes the 1986 national champions.

"The reason is they're a lot deeper and they can hit the 3-point shot," Sutton said.

Four long-range baskets kept Louisville close early in Saturday's game against Kentucky, and then the Cardinals turned to their superior depth to score a decisive 97-75 victory.

Louisville had not beaten Kentucky since a 71-64 win in Freedom Hall on Dec. 15, 1984. The Wildcats, who had won the last three meetings, still hold a 14-6 series advantage.

"All week the seniors had been talking about how much they wanted to beat Kentucky," Louisville freshman Everick Sullivan said. "They said they had never beaten them and they were tired of losing. They wanted to win. They wanted to win big."

Sullivan, who had 15 points, and his fellow reserves made sure they did their part by outscoring Kentucky's bench 31-3 as Louisville won its seventh straight game to improve to 7-2. Kentucky is now 5-7.

"We just try to come into the game and give the team a boost," Sullivan said.

In Saturday's only other game involving a ranked team, No. 11 Missouri thrashed Morgan State 96-66. The nation's top-ranked teams took New Year's Day off.

Louisville coach Denny Crum said his ability to send in fresh players at will forced Kentucky into an uptempo game.

"The most important thing we wanted them to do was to run and shoot in an uptempo game. We didn't let them stand around," Crum said. "We took advantage of our depth and got good play off our bench."

Louisville fell behind 19-14 in the first five minutes, but kept the game respectable by hitting four 3-pointers over Kentucky's 2-3 zone defense, including two by Tony Kimbro.

Then, Kimbro's third long-range basket with 13:20 left in the first half ignited a 16-4 scoring run over the next five minutes that put the Cardinals up for good at 30-23.

The outburst was capped by Keith Williams' steal and pass to Sullivan, who threw a behind-the-back pass from underneath the basket to Kenny Payne for a layin that brought the capacity Freedom Hall crowd to its feet. Payne was fouled by Kentucky's Sean Sutton and made the free throw for a three-point play.

Louisville led 50-35 at halftime. Consecutive 3-pointers by Derrick Miller pulled Kentucky within 54-43 with 15:43 left in the game, but Louisville scored 11 of the next 14 points to make it 65-46 at the 11:20 mark.

Kentucky never got closer than 12 the rest of the way, and the final margin was Louisville's largest lead.

Sutton said he thought his team played well, but would have preferred a slower pace.

"The tempo was too fast," Sutton said. "We never could really get hold of the game once they got ahead. I thought our team competed very hard, but Louisville just has a fantastic basketball team."

Pervis Ellison led Louisville with 20 points, Payne added 16, LaBradford Smith had 15, and Kimbro 11, all in the first half. Smith also had eight assists as the Cardinals made 32 of 60 shots for 53 percent.

Miller led Kentucky with 34 points, including five 3-pointers, while Chris Mills added 13 and Reggie Hanson 11. The Wildcats made 27 of 58 shots for 47 percent.

No. 11 Missouri 96, Morgan State 66. Gary Leonard scored a career-high 23 points in 11th-ranked Missouri's rout of Morgan State.

Leonard, a 7-foot-1 senior center, made nine of 14 field goals and five of six free throws and surpassed his previous high of 17 last season.

"The guards seemed willing to throw the ball inside a lot, so you take that when you can get it," said Leonard, who came into the game averaging 8.8 points per game.

"Missouri's game plan was obviously to go to (Leonard) and he did a good job," Morgan State coach Nathaniel Frazier said. "He stayed in the paint like he was supposed to do and they got the ball to him."

The Tigers used a 20-2 first-half spurt to build a 45-26 halftime lead and continued to cruise in the second half.

Byron Irvin added 18 points and Lee Coward 14 for the Tigers, who improved their record to 12-3. The Bears, who got 27 points from James McCoy, fell to 4-5.

Hurricanes Playing For What If

team that was ranked No. 1 at the time and would not lose another game the rest of the season.

Then they beat Michigan, the Big Ten champion, by merely scoring 15 points in the final five minutes at Ann Arbor, no small bit of business. Later, the 'Canes would beat Southwest Conference champion Arkansas and co-Southeast champion LSU.

Nevertheless, Miami is No. 2 because it had the poor judgment to lose to Notre Dame by one point at South Bend. They lost when Johnson did the entirely correct thing, trying to win the game with a two-point conversion.

Miami could have played it cozy, kicked the extra point and gone home, still the undefeated defending national champion.

"I wouldn't have been able to face them if we took the tie," Johnson said. "I had to give my team a chance to win. We'll always go for the win. That's the way you play the game."

"I hate to see them penalized because we tried to go for a win. It was my decision as defending national champion."

Nebraska coach Tom Osborne can understand that. In the 1984 Orange Bowl, in entirely the same situation, Osborne sent the No. 1-ranked Cornhuskers out for two points and a win. They failed, losing the game and the national championship to — of all people — Miami.

The only difference is that Nebraska was finished for the year after that game. That conversion was an all-or-nothing play. These Hurricanes, however, have been toting the luggage of their missed two-pointer and the subsequent drop from the top of the poll through the final half dozen games of this season, waiting for Notre Dame to stumble. The Irish never did, though.

Nobody was happier about that set of circumstances than the Fiesta Bowl organizers. Without the tether of conference ties to constrain them, they were able to invite two undefeated independents and sell their game as a national championship showdown. They have no intention of peeking over their shoulder to see what happens at tonight's final bowl game at Miami. Johnson, however, thinks they ought to.

"So many people have told me, 'We believe you're the best team in the country,'" Johnson said. "But they're not voting it. They're voting us No. 2."

What if Miami had tied Notre Dame? Would that have changed things?

Johnson smiled thinly, recognizing the aura of the Irish, the memories of Rockne, Gipp and the Four Horsemen, and the built-in edge there is to waking up the echoes and cheering her name.

"Who knows?" he said. "If we had kicked the extra point, we might still be No. 2."

TV 'Nice Guy' Gary Collins Gets Ax On 'Hour Magazine'

By Judith Michaelson
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

HOLLYWOOD — "When you have had your fill of TV's tabloid talk shows — Geraldo's satan worshippers, Oprah's weight loss, Phil's transvestites — it is nice to know that you can escape to the common sense tranquility of 'Hour Magazine' and its affable host Gary Collins."

So began the letter from Collins' publicity agent Dec. 7.

Although the show had recently "undergone a bit of a face lift," including a title change to "Gary Collins' Hour Magazine" to give it a more personal touch, the publicist added that there was no change in the show's "core objective: to consistently inform and entertain without forcing kids to leave the room and without anyone shouting at you."

Eight days later in a midseason surprise, comparisons would no longer matter. After 8½ years, Group W Productions told Collins that "Hour" was being taken off the air. The last show is Jan. 20.

From a high of 154 stations across the nation in mid-1986, the program had dropped to 104 stations. "Stations were focusing on different program forms," Group W President Derk Zimmerman explained, "and, frankly, that's not compatible with Gary's style. ... Gary Collins is a terrific guy, always has been, still is."

The clear implication was that Zimmerman was talking about program forms so successfully marketed by Phil Donahue, Oprah Winfrey and Geraldo Rivera.

The irony is that until he got canceled, Collins and his show hardly got noticed. No one, after all, would ever toss a chair in the air on his "Hour" and break his nose.

Collins apparently lost out by being too nice. To some viewers his "tranquility" translated into dull. As TV Guide sniped last spring, "This is the TV talk show that poses the burning question: If host Gary Collins were any more low-key, would he still register a pulse?"

It is, of course, precisely that kind of blandness that works so well for the 50-year-old picture-book handsome Collins as master of ceremonies on the "Miss America Pageant" and on the annual National March of Dimes telethon co-hosted with Mary Ann Mobley, his wife of 21 years, who was Miss America 1959.

To Collins, who has no apologies for his "soft, service information" show, the real irony is that his last week on the air is all about tabloid TV, and that he was told of the show's demise while taping shows on that theme. Another change "Hour" producers had instituted to keep up with its competitors was having assorted "theme weeks."

"I don't think there was any question in anyone's mind how the changes in the marketplace and the format out there had rendered a program like ours, which was extremely innovative in a sense when we started, kind of old news," Collins said recently.

"So times change," Collins continued affably, "and you have to look way back in the woods to not see that the trend's coming."

'Power Game' On PBS Sets Stage For New Government

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Hedrick Smith's "The Power Game" comes to life beginning tonight in a four-part series that is a kind of video Cliff Notes for the 725-page best-seller about the machinations of official Washington.

Pegged to run just before the inauguration of George Bush, the PBS series is also something of a scorecard for interested viewers who want to keep track of the players as the new game begins.

Produced by Philip Burton with David Saltman and Pam Hogan, the series of one-hour programs is fast-paced and entertaining. It boasts interviews with an impressive array of current and former officials — including President-elect Bush — but avoids too many talking-head interviews by blending in news footage and flashy graphics. Smith, a Pulitzer Prize-winning print reporter and author ("The Russians") is a pleasant host and experienced interviewer.

The series hones the book down into four topics — "The Congress," "The Pentagon," "The Unelected" and "The Presidency." The installments run in that order, Monday through Thursday.

With Bush coming in, the final two segments — "The Unelected," about the power of staff and the news media, and "The Presidency" — are especially interesting.

In "The Presidency," Smith outlines the three things he says a successful president must immediately do:

—Set a simple agenda. Jimmy Carter, he says, cluttered his agenda, confusing his would-be supporters on Capitol Hill.

—Form coalitions. Carter and John F. Kennedy were good image-makers who had problems working with Congress, Smith says. Carter had the added problem of a post-Watergate and post-Vietnam Congress filled with mavericks unbound to the leadership.

—Create an image. Reagan's team masterfully managed the media.

Smith got a late interview with Bush for inclusion in the "The Presidency." A transcript was provided to television critics. If Bush has read Smith's book, he doesn't seem to buy its theories.

"It seems to me, listening to you, I hear a few echoes of Jimmy Carter," says Smith. "That may sound strange to you. I don't mean in terms..."

Bush interrupts. "That sounds very strange!"

Smith continues. "What I mean is that when Jimmy Carter came in, he wanted to do something about the environment. He wanted to do something about education. He wanted to do something about the deficit, and on and on. And one of the problems he had was focusing the Congress. He confused the Congress and he confused the country."

"Please don't suggest to me that I don't say that — if I throw in the question of trying to do something better on fighting narcotics that means I'm not interested in the deficit, the one major, you know, economic problem facing us," Bush argued. "But I think to be so unipurpose that you say you're gonna do nothing else until the deficit is solved is myopic."

The main theme in the four programs is the phenomenon of "floating" power — from the presidency to Congress, the news media and staff members. From Congress to its staff on Capitol Hill. From the news media back to the president.

Smith shows how Reagan's own National Security Council staff pursued the Strategic Defense Initiative, or so-called "Star Wars," without informing high-level advisers, some of whom talk of learning about the proposed massive shift in defense policy only days or hours before Reagan announced it to the nation in a 1983 speech.

A powerful media set the agendas for Watergate and later the Iran hostage crisis.

But Reagan advance man William Henkel describes an amazing feat of media management when he describes scheduling Reagan's stopoff in Brussels to brief NATO on his summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev just so Reagan's helicopter would arrive on Capitol Hill later that night at the top of the evening newscasts.

Smith told a news conference at PBS that he was delighted by the documentary experience and hopes to get the money to produce an examination of the first 100 days of the Bush administration. "To take 'The Power Game' analysis forward and apply it to this new administration."

"Even though you get a good audience with 100,000 copies of the hardback and several hundred thousand with the paperback, to be able to reach several million people at once with a concentrated dose in terms of this kind of material, I'm just enough of an idealist and fresh enough to the game to want to throw a lot more into it," Smith said.

Horoscope

By Bil Keane

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY Jan. 3

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You may find yourself digging out of a mountain of work. Try new organizational approaches. Eliminate feelings of isolation.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Work is demanding but satisfying. You gain through well-ordered efforts. Some mild disagreements at work will soon pass.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Good communication can work magic. Sharing your interests with others can be beneficial. Organize your workspace for productivity.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Someone pushes their responsibilities off on you. Your best bet is to go along with it for now until the picture clears.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Stay with those you like and admire. Direct your energy realistically. Avoid hasty, untimely or slipshod actions that are counter-productive.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): People around you are selfish and moody. It is hard to get yourself and others motivated. Step back and relax when things get murky.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Others ask a lot of you. Your workload seems to be out of control. You find love and companionship a good tonic later this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): You are ready for an all-around change. Communicate your feelings to those you trust. Concentrate on the positive side for results.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You are attracted to someone with a dreamy nature. A close friend is helpful in solving a problem. Return a borrowed item.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Fresh incentives spark ambitions. Weigh the importance of what you say or do. Be prepared for opposition if you deviate from routine.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Think before you speak. Words today can be helpful or destructive. Your generous nature can be taken advantage of by others.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Make plans ahead of time to avoid delays. Believe in what you are doing in spite of a lack of rational reason. Your intuition is accurate.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K105 ♥J6 ♦KQ10 ♣AQ983
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 1 2 ?
What do you bid now?
A.—While partner probably does not have much in the way of high cards (after all, you are looking at 15 points and both opponents are bidding), he should have a reasonable suit to overcall vulnerable. With a double stopper in the enemy suit, try three no trump. Partner can always correct if he deems it necessary.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ97 ♥KQ6 ♦J8 ♣K1076
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 Pass 1 ♣ Pass
2 Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—The only bid to avoid is two no trump—in this sequence, that would be only invitational and, with the values for an opening bid facing an opening bid, you want to be in game. Bid three no trump.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠97 ♥J652 ♦AQ932 ♣84
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♣ Dbl Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—In response to a takeout double, you should prefer showing a four-card major suit to a five-card minor—partner's bid guarantees support for the major suits. Therefore, bid one heart and not one diamond.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q7 ♥J652 ♦AQJ32 ♣84
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♣ Dbl Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Even with the beefed-up diamond suit, the same consideration applies to choice of suit. But now your hand is strong enough for an invitational response. Jump to two hearts.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ762 ♥74 ♦865 ♣432
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 Pass 1 NT Pass
2 Dbl Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—Partner's double is for penalty, not takeout—had he wanted to hear from you, he would have doubled one heart. Therefore, you should pass.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK93 ♥Q63 ♦8 ♣AQ762
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
2 ♥ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
2 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—You have the opportunity to describe your hand perfectly, both with regard to shape and strength. If you jump to four hearts now, you not only show a responding hand that is better than minimum but, having bid two suits and jumped in a third, you highlight a singleton in the unbid suit.

Imperial Family Cancels Holiday Date With Public

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Members of the imperial family today canceled a traditional post-New Year's appearance for the first time in 21 years, citing Emperor Hirohito's grave condition.

But the family kept the gates to the palace open, allowing at least 19,000 people to walk through and sign registries by early afternoon. The visitors included 90-year-old Kenji Muramatsu, who wore a traditional kimono and carried a tattered Japanese flag from World War II.

"I came to pray for the emperor," he said. "I want him to get well and live as long as possible."

A 23-year-old college student, who visited the palace with her boyfriend, said "I'm a big fan of the emperor ... to me he's just an old man who is always smiling."

Hirohito and his immediate family customarily appear on Jan. 2 behind bulletproof glass on a palace balcony in the East Garden before thousands of well-wishers waving paper red-and-white Japanese flags.

The 87-year-old monarch, who has been bedridden since a serious hemorrhage on Sept. 19, suffered internal bleeding early today, palace sources said on condition of anonymity.

On Sunday, Hirohito received 2.1 pints of blood in emergency transfusions following a "substantial" hemorrhage, palace officials said.

The imperial family's New Year appearance was last canceled between 1964 and 1968 for a major renovation of the palace.

The custom, which began in 1948, was also called off in 1952 because of the death of Empress Taimyo, Hirohito's mother.

Takeshi Nonogaki traveled 300 miles from Aichi prefecture in east-central Japan with his 16-year-old son Shinichi to see the registry.

"My son said he would like to see inside the palace and I thought it was important to bring him here, especially now that the emperor is gravely ill," said Nonogaki, 48, adding that he wanted his son to learn respect and adoration.

"I believe respecting the head of your country leads to respecting your family and your company on individual level," he said.

A statement from the Imperial Household Agency said that despite the emperor's internal bleeding today, he had not discharged any blood. Officials said doctors had extracted the blood using a tube inserted through Hirohito's nose to his stomach.

At midday, doctors attending Hirohito were uncertain whether the internal bleeding had stopped, palace sources said.

Hirohito, the world's longest-reigning monarch, has received 64.4 pints of blood since he fell ill.

Palace officials have not commented on reports that he has cancer.

Soviets Ban Exports Of Consumer Goods

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — In an apparent effort to help remedy severe consumer shortages, the Soviet Union announced it would ban the export of goods ranging from caviar to children's shoes.

The official news agency Tass also said foreign visitors will be limited to 100 rubles worth of souvenirs. That is $166 at the official rate or $20-$25 at the black market rate.

In the report Sunday, Tass said the restrictions specifically applied to tourists.

The radical changes in export and customs regulations take effect Feb. 1 and last until the end of 1990. Tass said the Council of Ministers approved the changes, but did not give a date for the decision.

It also did not explain the effect of the ruling on the Soviet Union's attempts to earn scarce hard currency by selling the best caviar, fur hats and coats, vodka and souvenirs in stores that require dollars, pounds or other freely convertible money.

Tass said it will be forbidden to export televisions, refrigerators, freezers, washing and sewing machines, children's clothing and shoes, coffee and caviar. Coffee is not grown in the Soviet Union, and the import duty is up to $15 a pound.

The announcement also said customs duties will climb to 20 to 100 percent of the retail price on vacuum cleaners, mixers, coffee-grinders, irons, radios, cameras, automobile parts and other items. It was not clear if this meant import or export duties.

Export limits were imposed recently in Czechoslovakia after complaints that tourists from neighboring Soviet bloc nations were stripping its stores bare of consumer goods. The practice prompted a Soviet economist, Marina Pavlova-Silvanskaya, to warn in Soviet Culture on Sunday of an impending "trade war" among socialist countries.

Many Russians travel to Eastern Europe on shopping trips, and Ms. Pavlova-Silvanskaya herself reminisced about trips to East Germany and Poland. She said her boss insisted that "the program had to include a visit to some institution named for Lenin, lest the Germans or Poles think the citizens of the nation of the Great October Revolution are coming to shop."

None of the socialist countries of Eastern Europe has fully convertible currencies, and they trade with each other based on exchange rates that often do not cover the exporting country's cost of production, much less a profit.

Ms. Pavlova-Silvanskaya noted that capitalist countries don't find an invasion of shoppers a problem. On Nov. 7, a holiday in Hungary, 100,000 Hungarians went to Austria and spent $42 million in hard currency, she wrote.

Rather than limit exports, the Austrians responded to the horde of shoppers with advertisements in Hungarian newspapers, inviting them back on their next day off, Ms. Pavlova-Silvanskaya noted.

Israelis Demolish 2 Homes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Soldiers today demolished the homes of two Palestinians suspected of firebomb attacks and of distributing leaflets that urged resistance to Israeli rule in the occupied lands, the army said.

The destruction of the homes in Balata refugee camp in the occupied West Bank came a day after Israel renewed a crackdown on activists by deporting 13 Palestinians to Lebanon. It was the largest number deported on a single day in the nearly 13-month-old Palestinian uprising.

Palestinians in Gaza City today shut their businesses and public transportation to protest the expulsions. Six of the deportees were from the Gaza Strip.

The strike came after soldiers lifted a 24-hour curfew in the Gaza Strip. Many people violated the curfew Sunday, which Arabs celebrated as the 24th anniversary of the first attack in Israel by the PLO's mainstream Fatah movement.

At least nine Palestinians were shot and wounded in the occupied lands on Sunday, including a 17-year-old critically wounded by a bullet in the head, Israel radio and Arab reports said. The army confirmed five casualties and said it was checking further.

The suspects from Balata whose homes were demolished are among nine in the camp detained recently who are active with the Moslem fundamentalist movement "Hamas," or "Zeal," an army communique said. The statement did not identify the suspects.

It said that the group was suspected of involvement in at least two firebombings, one on an army patrol Sept. 26 and a second on a civilian passenger bus on Oct. 18.

The activists were also accused of participating in riots and distributing Hamas leaflets, the statement said. The organization is one of the leading underground groups active in the rebellion against Israel.

At least 345 Palestinians and 14 Israelis have died since the rebellion began Dec. 8, 1987. Israel has ruled the West Bank and Gaza Strip since capturing them from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 Middle East war.

Castro Turns Down Economic Reforms

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAVANA — President Fidel Castro, celebrating the 30th anniversary of his revolution, rejected market-oriented economic reforms and said that for Cuba, it is "socialism or death."

Castro's remarks, in a televised speech Sunday night, seemed aimed at the Soviet Union and other Communist countries that have been abandoning strict adherence to Marxist doctrine.

"Today we say with more force than ever, socialism or death, Marxism-Leninism or death," he said.

Castro spoke to a large gathering from the balcony of the municipal building in the eastern city of Santiago, where he had proclaimed victory for his revolutionary struggle on Jan. 1, 1959.

He did not refer directly to the Soviet Union in his remarks, saying only that the contemporary situation has been marked by "confusion."

In other speeches, Castro has been more explicit about his rejection of the reform policies of Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

He has said that Cuba will never embrace any reforms that "reek of capitalism." He also has acknowledged that the changes under Gorbachev could cause "difficulties" for Cuba.

The Cuban-Soviet friendship, although far from breaking up, seems more tenuous now than it has been in decades.

A key question is whether Soviet unhappiness with the way Cuba has used economic aid from the Kremlin — estimated at $5 billion annually — will lead to cutbacks. Castro has used the economic aid to help build his country's schools and hospitals, the Soviets say, and has neglected industrial development.

Calling the revolution a "beacon of light before the eyes of the world" Castro said Cuba has an enormous responsibility to Third World countries to stick to its present hard-line Marxist-Leninist course.

Much of Castro's speech was devoted to reviewing the revolutionary heritage of the people of Santiago and other cities in eastern Cuba.

Cuban officials said Castro is expected to deliver a policy address Wednesday.

Despite Sunday's call for ideological steadfastness, Cuban policy has undergone some drastic changes in the past year, including its recent commitment to withdraw its 50,000 troops from Angola by 1991.

New President Appeals For Calm In Sri Lanka

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KANDY, Sri Lanka — Ranasinghe Premadasa was sworn in today as president of this strife-torn island. A day earlier, India said it would comply with his request and begin withdrawing its 47,000 troops in Sri Lanka.

In his inaugural address, Premadasa appealed for an end to the ethnic insurgencies that have devastated this Indian Ocean island.

"This destruction must end because democracy cannot tolerate it," said the 64-year-old former prime minister.

Premadasa took the oath of office in a solemn Buddhist ceremony at the Temple of the Tooth in this town 80 miles east of Colombo. Heavily armed soldiers surrounded the temple, and more than 500,000 people gathered outside.

Premadasa succeeds Junius R. Jayewardene, 82, who stepped down after 11 years in the nation's highest office.

He won a six-year term by defeating two opponents in a violence-marred Dec. 19 election, polling 50.4 percent of the vote. Just 55 percent of the island's 9.3 million eligible voters cast ballots.

Premadasa assumes the daunting task of governing a country reeling from five years of strife between the country's Sinhalese majority and Tamil minority that has claimed nearly 10,000 lives.

Tamil militants have been fighting for independence since 1983 and the fighting has shattered the economy.

Premadasa also faces an uneasy relationship with regional superpower India, which sent soldiers to Sri Lanka to disarm the rebels and enforce a cease-fire. The insurgency has not been quelled, and Premadasa has said he wants the unpopular Indian soldiers to leave.

On Sunday, India announced it would start withdrawing its troops this week. Between 2,000 and 3,000 soldiers are expected to leave within a few days and the remaining troops will be gradually pulled out, the government said.

It did not give a timetable, however.

In his inaugural speech, Premadasa vowed he would not allow "a single inch" of Sri Lankan soil to be occupied by any foreign country again.

"Let us settle our problems by ourselves through negotiations and mutual respect. We should not create situations that provoke or invite foreign intervention."

Premada, a Sinhalese, became Jayewardene's prime minister in 1977.

He disagreed with the July 1987 pact Jayewardene signed with India that offered limited autonomy to the Tamil community in the north and east and invited India to send peacekeeping soldiers.

Hungarian Parliament Finds New Political Voice

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BUDAPEST, Hungary — Not long ago, Parliament was a mere rubber-stamp body that met for just four three-day sessions a year. Now, outspoken deputies are openly demanding accountability from Communist authorities.

Live television coverage came to Parliament in September, and its 383 deputies have since begun edging the once-tame forum toward democracy.

Increasingly, deputies are bringing into the open formerly taboo subjects such as defense spending. They challenge government and Communist Party leaders to adhere to their avowed policy of openness and disclose facts and figures.

The changes, more rapid than political reforms occurring in Mikhail S. Gorbachev's Soviet Union, have prompted rare admissions from Hungary's Communist leadership about how parliamentary work was controlled in the past.

Matyas Szueroes, head of the party's parliamentary group, was quoted by the government daily Magyar Hirlap as admitting that Communist leaders once met with deputies to tell them how to vote.

On live radio and television, constituents watch closely what one Budapest man termed the "great theater" emanating from Parliament's 19th century quarters on the Danube — and are exercising their own rights as a result.

Deputy Karoly Eke says he has received a "tremendous response" from constituents since the broadcasts began. Just two days into December's session, he had already received eight letters commenting on his behavior in debates.

Deputies now meet often, and debate into the night. In December, Parliament held the year's unprecedented fifth session, the third in as many months. The agenda was so long that speaker Istvan Stadinger announced an unprecedented Christmas recess, with business to resume Jan. 10.

Mindful of November's exhausting session, when deputies worked 12 hours a day to get through the agenda, he also limited the length of daily sessions in the high, gilded chamber.

The non-Communists who make up 25 percent of the deputies then took another unprecedented step, banding together in a formal group intended as a counterweight to the long-established group of Communist parliamentarians.

Judit Benjamin, coordinator for the new group, told Magyar Hirlap it aims to obtain the same information as Communist deputies.

The non-Communists include one of the most outspoken deputies, Zoltan Kiraly, a television journalist from southern Hungary who was expelled from the Communist party earlier this year for his views.

In October, Kiraly stunned the chamber when he and other deputies requested a change in voting procedures on a controversial dam and power plant project opposed by many Hungarians as damaging to the environment.

His request for a roll call vote sparked an acrimonious, spontaneous debate that was eventually settled by compromise.

Taking government and party leaders at their word that this Soviet bloc country's Parliament should be more independent, Kiraly and other deputies have also called for new elections prior to those planned for 1990.

The reformers say the current legislature — with 75 percent Communist deputies — is incapable of making independent decisions.

In some ways, the changes in Parliament mirror events in the society at large.

Within weeks this fall, Hungary went from debating whether a multi-party system was feasible to discussing how soon it would come about.
