Chamber Says It Costs Less Here New Study Refutes Earlier Report Putting Greenville Near Top

By Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A report released today by the American Chamber of Commerce Researchers Association indicates Greenville has one of the lowest cost-of-living rates in North Carolina, contradicting a previous study which listed Greenville as having the second highest rate for cities in the state.

Results of a third-quarter study show Greenville ranks 12th out of 13 North Carolina cities in a comparison of cost-of-living rates.

"Greenville posted the second best rates, second only to Hickory, in the cost-of-living index," said Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce

Chairman Chris McCoy. "It appears that Greenville is not only a nice place to live but it's also an economical place to live."

In the association's quarterly reports, the average American city has a cost-of-living index of 100.

Chapel Hill was the most expensive city in the state to live with an index of 111.2, compared with Greenville's third quarter index of 95.2. Following Chapel Hill were Raleigh with an index of 101.5; Charlotte, 100.8; Durham, 100.4; Wilmington, 98.9; Winston-Salem, 98.7; Rocky Mount, 98.6; Goldsboro, 98.5; Greensboro, 98.5; New Bern, 97.9; Gastonia, 96.6; (Greenville, 95.2), and Hickory, 90.

The index is calculated from the prices of local goods and services as collected and recorded by chamber officials. Prices are collected from area stores, averaged and then categorized into several consumer spending areas — groceries, housing, utilities, transportation, health care, and a miscellaneous category, including such items as cigarettes and alcoholic beverages.

Those results are then tabulated and compared with other cities by the ACCRA.

The ACCRA's third quarter results released today were in stark contrast to those released in July, which covered prices recorded in the first quarter of 1988.

That study indicated Greenville had the second highest cost-of-living rate in the state, an index of 101.2 — second in the state only to Chapel Hill which was cited with a rating of 110.2.

Those figures immediately caught the attention of Pitt-Greenville Chamber officials.

"We were concerned that our rating (for the first quarter) was a little bit higher than we thought it should be," McCoy said.

A subsequent investigation revealed some of the data gathered for the first quarter report, specifically those figures pertaining to housing utility costs, was inaccurate.

Revised utility cost calculations compiled for the most recent study consequently improved Greenville's cost-of-living standing in the state.

Poverty In East Four Times Above Statewide Level

The level of poverty for families in eastern North Carolina is four times greater than the statewide level, according to a report by the Eastern North Carolina Poverty Committee scheduled for presentation today in Fayetteville and Friday in Greenville.

The two-year study concludes that lack of education and inadequate job training and medical and child care make it difficult for the poor to break the poverty cycle.

"These problems are especially unique to eastern North Carolina because the majority of the area is rural," said E.C. Modlin, Cumberland County Department of Social Services director and co-chairman of the committee. "These needs aren't being dealt with."

The report was being delivered today at the main public library in Fayetteville. It will be repeated Friday from 10 a.m. to noon in Room 101 of East Carolina University's Belk Building on Charles Boulevard in Greenville.

The Associated Press reported that the committee is composed of social workers, public officials and directors of social services departments throughout eastern North Carolina. A branch of the Greensboro-based N.C. Poverty Project, the committee was appointed to examine problems special to eastern North Carolina.

A private, non-profit organization, the N.C. Poverty Project was founded in 1986 to study poverty and help educate the public on its effects.

Poverty in the state's eastern counties is linked to a combination of increased need for services and public misconceptions, the report states.

While 11.6 percent of all North Carolina families live in poverty, 43.8 percent of the people in the state's eastern coastal plains counties are poor, the report says.

A family of four living on a maximum annual income of $11,650 is considered to be living below the poverty level, according to state and federal guidelines.

The highest percentage of poor families in eastern North Carolina — 24 percent to 27.9 percent — live in

U.S. Says Jets Only Reacted

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

UNITED NATIONS — The United States told the Security Council today that U.S. jet fighters shot down two Libyan aircraft in reaction to hostile actions that "constituted an armed attack" on U.S. forces.

The United States made the statement in a letter to the 15-member council, which agreed to hold private consultations on Libya's protest of the U.S. downing of the jets Wednesday.

Libya has requested condemnation of the U.S. action, which it termed "premeditated American aggression." A formal session of the council, the most powerful U.N. body, has not been scheduled.

"U.S. forces have exercised their inherent right of self-defense under international law by taking defensive action in response to hostile actions constituting an armed attack by the military forces (of Libya) against U.S. forces lawfully operating above international waters of the Mediterranean Sea," said the letter from U.S. Ambassador Herbert S. Okun.

It said the U.S. aircraft were engaged in a routine, peaceful training operation when two Libyan aircraft "without provocation approached them in a hostile manner."

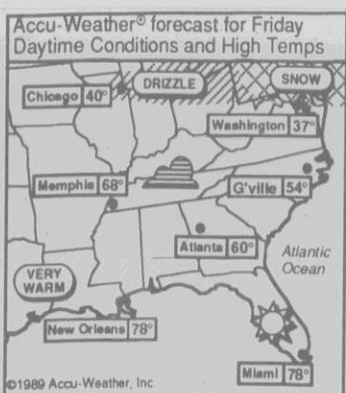

"After repeatedly attempting to disengage by taking evasive measures," it said, "the American aircraft, acting in self-defense, fired upon and shot down the two Libyan aircraft."

It said the council should be aware of "the gravity of Libya's action."

Any resolution critical of the United States was expected to be vetoed by the U.S. delegation and possibly by its allies Britain and France — all permanent members with veto power on the council.

Shultz Seeks Sanctions On Usage Of Poison Gas

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George P. Shultz left for Europe today on a mission to persuade more than 100 nations to impose sanctions on countries that use poison gas.

He also planned to urge foreign ministers and ambassadors assembling for a five-day conference in Paris to strengthen the hand of U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar in investigating allegations of chemical warfare.

The skirmish Wednesday over the Mediterranean in which U.S. Navy jet fighters shot down two Libyan MiG-23 planes acted as a backdrop for the conference, which opens Saturday.

William Burns, director of the U.S. arms control agency, acknowledged that decisions at the meeting will be by consensus. This means any nation, including Libya, can block proposals.

"I don't know how successful we will be, and I don't know how much of a resonant chord this will strike in the hearts of other participants," Burns told reporters Wednesday at the State Department.

Still, Burns said, Shultz will push for sanctions under the United Nations charter and for additional powers for the U.N. Secretary-General.

The Paris conference was proposed by President Reagan in September to draw international attention to the spreading use of chemical weapons. The focus then was on Iraq, which was accused of — and denied — devastating Iranian troops and civilians with poison gas.

For the last two months, however, the United States has put special stress on Libya and a plant at Rabta, south of Tripoli, the State Department claims has recently begun limited production of chemical weapons.

Even before U.S. jets shot down the Libyan fighter planes near Crete on Wednesday, the Reagan administration had served not-so-sub-

Pitt Will Share In Bid-Rigging Settlement

By Jerry Raynor
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County schools will share in a $1.2 million settlement by four bakery companies accused of rigging bids on bread sold to educational systems in eastern North Carolina.

But local school officials said today the amount the Pitt system — including payments for bread sold to the former Greenville city school system — will receive is still undetermined.

Payments also are to be made to school systems in Martin and Greene counties.

Donna Ware, head of the Division of Child Nutrition for the Pitt County schools, and John Murphy, director of the N.C. Division of Child Nutrition, said they have no information yet on the disposition of funds from the agreed compensation.

N.C. Attorney General Lacy Thornburg said Wednesday the bakery companies have agreed to pay $1,224,367 to settle the case, which involved bid-rigging between 1979 and 1985.

The four companies providing bread products to the schools have agreed, according to Thornburg, to "pay one and a half times the actual damages they caused the schools as well as civil penalties and the state's investigative costs."

The firms charged with bid-rigging are American Bakeries Co., formerly of Rocky Mount and Fayetteville; Fox's Holsum Baker Inc. of Wilmington; the Franklin Baking Co. Inc. of Goldsboro, and a Franklin subsidiary, Dainty Maid Bakery of Kinston.

Franklin and Fox pleaded guilty to federal charges in the case.

Ms. Ware, who testified in the federal hearing held in June 1988 in Wilmington, said that "if the funds for compensation go to the federal government, it is my understanding that the money will go into the general treasury. That is what the attorneys for the justice department told me at the time. If the compensation money is applied to state funds, I'm not sure exactly how the compensation will be allocated."

The company that provided bread products to the Pitt County schools (and to the Greenville school system prior to its merger with Pitt) is Franklin Baking Co. of Goldsboro.

At the state level, Murphy indicated that "to date, we have received no details on the way in which the compensation will be handled. I expect soon to have details on the disposition of these funds."

In addition to the Pitt County and Greenville school systems, other area school systems to receive compensation include 24 North Carolina county school operations and nine southeastern city school systems.

Doub Gets New Term With DOT

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

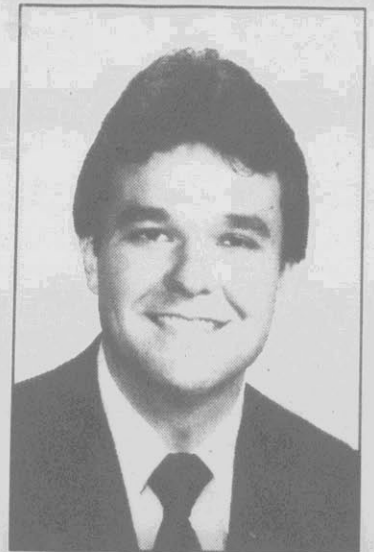

Gov. Jim Martin has reappointed Greenville attorney Randy Doub to a position on the state Board of Transportation.

Doub, one of 23 board members, has been reappointed for a third two-year term, according to Department of Transportation spokesman Bill Jones, who made the announcement today.

"It's an honor to serve," Doub said in a telephone interview from his office. "It's a lot of hard work. But few opportunities come along like this in a lifetime."

"I'm excited about it, and I look forward to it. And I appreciate all those who supported me, very much," he said.

The biggest transportation issue facing the state this year is how to reverse a $12 billion shortfall in road funding, he said. Several options have been discussed, including doubling the current funding or creating a $1 billion-a-year construction program, but no formal plan has been introduced. The General Assembly will likely address the issue in this year's session, which is set to begin later this month.

RANDY DOUB

"I think a lot of people think those (road improvement) needs are out there," he said. "I get calls about them every day from people."

"I guess I'd say we made some progress over the last four years. But there are several other feasibility studies we have conducted that

EEC Duties Likely

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRUSSELS, Belgium — European trade representatives say they will seek permission to slap stiff duties on U.S. imports of dried fruit and walnuts to retaliate against sanctions against European products.

Any such approval would escalate a trade dispute between the United States and the European Economic Community sparked by a European ban on imports of American meat treated with growth hormones.

Nico Wegter, an EEC spokesman, said Thursday that representatives of the 12 nations making up the Common Market trading bloc will receive a proposal calling for the retaliatory measures.

The plan, drawn up by the bloc's executive body, would counter sanctions the United States put into effect Sunday to retaliate against the European meat ban.

Rose Band To Play In Inaugural Parade

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Several Greenville residents are planning to attend Gov. Jim Martin's inaugural festivities this weekend in Raleigh and the J.H. Rose High School band will participate in the inaugural parade.

"It's a celebration. My wife and I are guests of the governor. We get the red carpet treatment once every four years, I guess," said Pitt GOP Chairman Gordon Walker, who also attended Martin's inauguration four years ago. "It should be fun."

There are luncheons, cocktail parties and private gatherings scheduled all weekend. There are also the standard inauguration activities set for Saturday, including a parade, a dinner, a black-tie ball sponsored by the Junior League of Raleigh, and the formal inauguration of Martin. Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner and officers of the council of state.

Charlie Gaddy of WRAL-TV in Raleigh will host the ball — which is open to the public for ticket prices from $50 to $5,000 — and musical entertainment will be provided by the Steel Bandits, Bo Thorpe and his orchestra, The Embers beach band and the 82nd Airborne Division Chorus from Fort Bragg.

The state's inauguration committee was chaired by a Republican, but the committee also included Democratic stalwarts such as Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham, Martin and Gardner are both Republicans, but all members of the council of state are Democrats.

"Obviously, in a state like North Carolina, it's a bipartisan thing," Walker said. "Even though there is a lot of politicking going on... it's a thing for the whole state."

Greenville City Council member Lorraine Shinn also plans to attend the inauguration. "I went in '85, and I'm going again this time," she said.

She will attend a luncheon Friday for the governor's wife, Dottie, that is sponsored by a Republican women's club and will also attend Saturday's parade, which is one of her favorite events.

"Seeing people, the spirit and the festivities. Just the fellowship was the nicest thing to me (at the 1985 inauguration)," she said. "And I loved the parade, and I liked the pomp and circumstance that goes along with the inauguration. I'm a parade person."

In 1985, Walker said Martin and other guests watched the parade from a viewing stand set up in front of the capitol building, and the East Carolina University marching band participated.

The inauguration committee tries to include a representative from every county in the state in the parade, he said. This year, the band from Rose High School in Greenville will march in the parade.

"There was everything from little baton twirlers to high school bands to floats. There were representatives from all the different military bases and guard units in the state," he said.

Airelle Sturz, an 18-year-old freshman at ECU, will be attending her first inauguration this weekend. She is a member of ECU's college Republicans and the granddaughter of Frank Steinbeck, a longtime Pitt County Republican and former chairman of the county GOP.

"I'm going with some of my friends with the college Republicans, the president and the vice president," she said. "I'm so excited. We're doing everything. We're going to the dinner, the ball and we're going to the parade and everything."

A private cocktail party for college Republicans from all over the state is set for Saturday night, she said.

On Sunday, the governor and his family are scheduled to shake hands with guests at the mansion during an open house, and the state GOP executive committee is scheduled to meet.

Well-wishers were lined up for several blocks to shake hands with Martin at the 1985 open house, and Walker said about 12,000 people passed through the mansion that day.

Three Men Arrested

Three men were arrested Wednesday on auto theft charges by Greenville police.

Sgt. T.V. Woolard said Royce Melvin Parker, 19, of Snow Hill, Ronnie Junior Hall, 19, of Snow Hill, and Robert Lee Brown, 21, of Elizabeth, N.J., were taken into custody about 3:30 p.m. in connection with the theft of a 1989 Nissan Maxima from Leith Oldsmobile on Greenville Boulevard on Nov. 3.

Drug Charges Made

Greenville police arrested two people on drug charges Wednesday.

Officer T.E. Evans said Terrence Desayne Nobles, 20, of 624B Ford St., was arrested on charges of possession with intent to sell and deliver cocaine in connection with an 11 p.m. incident at 608 Ford St.

Officer J.A. Bartlett said Jeffrey Jerome Barnes, 28, of 604A Hudson St., was arrested on possession of marijuana charges in connection with a 9:53 p.m. incident in the 600 block of Ford Street.

Eight Thefts Reported

Investigators said eight thefts, including a $950 camcorder, were reported to Greenville police Wednesday.

Officer R.J. Brewington said the camcorder was taken from a car parked at Stanton Square Shopping Center in an incident reported at 2:34 p.m., while Officer R.L. Smith said several pairs of jeans were taken from the Southern States store on Line Avenue in a break-in reported at 1:42 a.m.

Officer E.L. Butts said a stereo equalizer was taken from a car parked at 604 Howell St. in an incident reported at 8:14 a.m., while Officer P.E. Cherry said several shirts and several pairs of shoes were taken from a display window at Jeans Glory on Evans Mall in a break-in reported at 8:39 a.m.

Officer C.S. Candler said a vacuum cleaner valued at $215 was taken from Meadowbrook Presbyterian Church at 210 Church St. in a break-in reported at 12:35 p.m., while Officer K.L. Jones said a change purse containing $90 in cash was taken from the state license plate agency on Dickinson Avenue in an incident reported at 4:24 p.m.

Officer A.T. Parrish said a microwave oven was taken from 15 Pirate's Landing apartments in an incident reported at 4:41 p.m., while Officer M.T. Scheid said a television set and telephone answering machine were taken from an apartment at 210 Elm St. in a break-in reported at 6:43 p.m.

GHA Agrees To Allow Construction Of Pond

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Greenville Housing Authority has agreed to cooperate with the city of Greenville in the city's proposed efforts to resolve water runoff and drainage problems near the Moyewood subdivision.

Authority members unanimously agreed this week to provide the city easement rights for construction of a storm-water collecting pond on authority-owned property at the northeast section of Moyewood near the Tar River.

"During harsh storms there is a drainage problem in the vicinity of this Third Street area," said Kenneth Noland, authority executive director. "The commissioners have agreed to cooperate with the city 100 percent in this effort to correct this drainage problem and to alleviate the accompanying erosion problems."

Noland described the area as very low land, unsuitable for any type of dwelling facility.

Libby Anderson, city environmental planner, said construction of the water detention pond hinges on a grant from the Albermarle-Pamlico Estuarine Study, a joint state-federal effort to study water quality problems in the rivers and sounds in the estuarine region of the state.

Ms. Anderson said the grant applications are due this month and the city will learn in mid-March if the grant has been approved. If the city is awarded the grant, it will proceed with detailed site design of the project.

She said in addition to solving water drainage problems, the pond would also provide for the monitoring of water quality including detection of pollutants such as sediments, herbicides, nutrients and litter.

Also approved Tuesday was a $2,450 contract with Wilmington-based David Sims and Associates for the annual utility allowance study, intended to provide the authority with an updated table of allowances for authority neighborhoods.

Noland said the firm will calculate the allowances for kilowatt hours of electricity and cubic feet of gas provided to authority residents.

"When the resident exceeds that allowance, the resident pays an additional charge for excess utility use," he said.

Noland said Sims and Associates, which conducted last year's utility study, will begin the study in February and should be completed in March.

In other matters, commissioners voted Tuesday to amend the authority budget to provide an additional $500 towards the purchase of two mobile radio transmitters valued at $1,700 and approved a quarterly write-off of $3,333.90.

Sallye C. Streeter, director of resident affairs, reported that the average rent at authority developments in December was $132.79.

Rents at the housing developments included: Meadowbrook, $110.94; Kearney Park, $142.05; Moyewood I, $137.73; Moyewood II, $152.90; Newtown, $132.24; Hopkins Park, $118.32; and West Meadowbrook, $129.72.

Bridge Lessons

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department is offering bridge lessons for beginners starting Monday and lessons for intermediates starting Tuesday.

The lessons, which include 10 two-hour sessions, will be held in the activity room of the Jaycee Park Administrative Building.

Classes for beginners will be held on Mondays from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., while intermediate classes will be held on Tuesdays from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. For more information and registration, call 830-4567.

Tutorial Program

A tutorial program for Pitt County school children in grades three through eight will begin Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon in the fellowship hall of Sycamore Hill Baptist Church.

The curriculum includes academic and personal development courses such as English, language arts, mathematics, geography and Afro-American culture.

Children, parents and potential volunteers are invited, according to Dr. Chester Preyer, coordinator.

Bridge Closed

Both lanes of Pitt County bridge No. 139 on SR 1413 will be closed Monday and possibly Tuesday for the installation of a pipe, according to J.D. Gargis, supervisor of bridge maintenance for the N.C. Department of Transportation in Pitt County.

The detour route is .8 miles on SR 1415 and 1.4 miles on SR 1414.

Hearing In Marine's Death Ends

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. — A Marine officer disobeyed orders during a military exercise Aug. 30 in which a soldier was left behind in the California desert, where he died of exposure, a corporal testified.

The testimony came Wednesday at a hearing for 1st Lt. Allen Lawson, who is charged with disobeying a logistics officer in assigning road guides during the exercise.

The military proceeding, equivalent to a civilian grand jury hearing, was then recessed.

The presiding officer, Lt. Col. Michael Reardon, will determine if Lawson faces court-martial or administrative action or if charges will be dropped. He will probably make a recommendation next week, said Maj. Stuart Wagner, Camp Lejeune spokesman.

Lance Cpl. Jason Rother, 19, died after being left behind at the Twentynine Palms, Calif., Marine base.

Lance Cpl. Donald Key testified that instead of assigning road guides in pairs as ordered, Lawson split them and posted Rother about 300 yards from a checkpoint.

Key said he and a third road guide protested the split posting, but Lawson told them, "Don't worry about that. I know what I'm doing."

Key said he had been at the Mojave Desert checkpoint for about five hours when the last truck in the convoy he had been guiding picked him up around midnight.

He said he told the driver that Rother was still out in the desert, but the driver told him to "get on or get left."

Rother, who had little water and no map or compass, was not reported missing for two days. He died while trying to walk out of the desert, where daytime temperatures reached more than 120 degrees.

Lawson did not testify Wednesday.

Two other officers face court-martial in the case — Sgt. Christopher P. Clyde, Rother's platoon sergeant, and Sgt. Thomas B. Turnell, Rother's squad leader.

Church Services

The District No. 4 Union Meeting Board will be special guests of Higher Ground Free Will Baptist Church Friday at 7:30 p.m.

Eldress Gladys Worthington will deliver a sermon, accompanied by the Warren Chapel Free Will Baptist Church Gospel Chorus.

The church is located in the Emorywood subdivision off U.S. 264, seven miles west of Greenville.

Rep. Jones Honored

State Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr. of Farmville will be honored Friday at noon by the Common Cause organization during a luncheon at the Colonial Inn in Farmville.

Common Cause is honoring Jones as "the person primarily responsible for campaign financing reforms passed during the last session of the North Carolina General Assembly."

Endocrinologist Gets Cancer Society Grant

An endocrinologist at the East Carolina University School of Medicine has received a $79,500 grant from the American Cancer Society to determine if a plant-derived compound can be modified for use as an alternative to current treatments for leukemia.

Dr. D. Kirk Ways, assistant professor in the department of medicine and principal investigator for the research project, will initially seek to further understand the effects of the compound, phorbol ester, on human cancer cells.

The compound is derived from the seeds of a Southeast Asian tropical tree known as croton. The seeds produce a yellowish-brown violently purgative oil.

Through his investigation, he hopes to determine if the compound or another one with similar properties can be developed and used to treat leukemia patients. Used in its current state, phorbol ester is highly toxic.

"Preliminary studies show that phorbol ester stops leukemic cell growth and turns them into normal white blood cells," Ways said. "Current drugs used to treat the disease kill cancerous leukemia cells rather than stop their growth."

Leukemia is characterized by uncontrolled growth of white blood cells that do not perform their normal functions such as fighting off infections.

"If such a therapy can be produced using the compound or another like it, we could possibly provide an alternative treatment for leukemia which potentially reduces side effects seen in currently used treatments," said Ways.

His grant, known as the Junior Faculty Research Award, is given to investigators beginning careers in cancer research.

Nicaragua's Daniel Ortega, left, joins Fidel Castro for exhibition in Havana Wednesday

Castro Criticism Prompts U.S. Envoy To Walk Out

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAVANA — The chief U.S. diplomat in Cuba walked out in protest over President Fidel Castro's criticism of the Reagan administration during a three-hour speech honoring the 30th anniversary of the Cuban revolution.

In his Wednesday night speech, Castro assailed U.S. threats against Libya for its alleged chemical weapons plant but, curiously, omitted any reference to the U.S. downing of two Libyan jet fighters earlier in the day over the Mediterranean.

Castro did say, however, that the United States has the "most powerful" chemical weapons arsenal in the world, then asked, "Why should it deny it to other countries?" Cuba is believed not to possess chemical weapons.

It was shortly after Castro alluded to this that Jay Taylor, who has headed the small U.S. mission in Havana for slightly over a year, rose from his seat in the diplomatic section and strided out.

There was no immediate comment from Taylor.

Meanwhile, after months of uncertainty about Soviet-Cuban relations, Castro offered strong praise for Moscow while bitterly criticizing U.S. policies toward the Third World.

Tens of thousands of spectators were present as Castro inaugurated a permanent fair designed to highlight achievements in Cuba's social and economic development over the past three decades.

The public was to have access to the pavillions at the fair starting today.

In several speeches in recent months, Castro has made clear his unhappiness with the liberal reform policies of Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

He has indicated his defiance of Gorbachev by affirming Cuba will never adopt any policy that "reeks of capitalism." On Sunday, Castro said Cuba will be guided by a policy of "socialism or death, Marxism-Leninism or death."

Although there was never any doubt the Soviet-Cuban axis would continue, Castro's emphasis seemed to undergo a revival.

"We will never forget the support received (from the Soviet Union) in decisive moments," Castro said. At another point, he said, "We support the policies of peace of the Soviet Union."

He also said Moscow and Havana see eye-to-eye on the international debt issue plaguing many Third World countries. He said that while the United States subjects its trading partners to unequal terms of trade, the Soviet Union has treated Cuba fairly on that same issue.

This was a reference to the Soviet purchase of Cuban sugar at prices above those of the world market and Soviet concessions in the sale of oil to Cuba.

Among those attending the speech were President Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua and Namibian rebel leader Sam Nujoma.

Castro expressed deep concern over a proposal, apparently strongly supported by the United States, for a reduction in the U.N. peacekeeping force that will oversee the pending transition of Namibia to independence from South African colonial rule.

According to Nujoma, the proposal entails a reduction from 7,500 to 3,000 in the U.N. troop presence.

Castro said a reduction of that magnitude would play into South African hands and jeopardize the possibility of genuine independence for Namibia.

He suggested a reduced U.N. force would not be able to adequately verify the planned withdrawal of South African troops.

Airline Employees Foil Test Of Security, Find Fake Bombs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — TWA employees' suspicions about a brown parcel led to the arrest of two French newsmen on charges of trying to smuggle fake bombs onto flights to test security. Dutch TV reported a similar attempt overseas succeeded.

In the incident at Kennedy International Airport on Wednesday, three packages containing bogus bombs were left for shipment at the cargo areas of three international airlines: TWA, Pan Am and Air France, police said.

The packages also contained a typed message that read in part: "Congratulations! You have found our phony bomb! (made with molding clay, one alarm clock and wires)," said Armando Arrastia, spokesman for the Port Authority, which operates the airport.

The message was written on the letterhead of the French TV station, TF1 and signed by the station's New York bureau chief, Alain Chaillou, Arrastia said.

Chaillou and producer Bruce Frankel were arrested Wednesday night and charged with violating federal explosives law after TWA counter employees detected what appeared to be a bomb, said FBI agent Mary Frances Lilly.

The two men were testing the airlines' security, said Lt. Frank Tabert of Port Authority police.

They were being held at the Metropolitan Correctional Center and were to appear today before a U.S. magistrate.

In Amsterdam, the TV station Veronica reported Wednesday that it had smuggled a fake bomb onto a London-bound KLM flight to demonstrate that terrorists can pass security checks with relative ease.

Reporter Gert Berg was filmed by his station carrying a briefcase containing the imitation bomb through security checkpoints and onto the aircraft at Schiphol Airport, considered one of Western Europe's safest.

KLM spokesman Nico Harmsen today accused the station of "immature... marginal journalism."

"They've shown themselves to be really stupid. Bombers don't have to be real terrorists, but this will always give some crazy people new ideas," he said. He refused to say whether security was tightened after the incident.

"This kind of reporting is not in the interest of aviation and will harm its security," said Dutch National Police spokesman Rick Hirs.

The incidents a week after investigators reported that a bomb blew up a Pan Am jet in Scotland, killing 270 people, drew mixed reactions from journalism scholars over the ethics of such news-gathering techniques.

Joan Konner, dean of Columbia University's Graduate School of Journalism in New York, said it was a "particularly worthy investigation to try to find out how well airport security works," but added: "If that is how they want to test the system, they have to understand the (legal) risk they are taking."

fessor who has written about journalism ethics, called the episode "nickel-and-dime" reporting.

"For some guy to say he got a wad of paper through as a bomb sounds a little childish," he said. "I don't know if the risk these guys took proved a thing. They've caused inconvenience."

Bruce Haxthausen, an Air France spokesman, said that because of the incident the airline will now inspect every cargo shipment received rather than conduct random inspections.

TWA spokesman Robert Blattner said, "We are very pleased our employees were able to use their techniques and just solve the case on the spot."

At the Pan Am small cargo check-in, the package had been accepted and "was on its way to the X-ray when the New York Port Authority police walked in and seized the package," said Alan Loflin, an airline spokesman.

Paper Says Stalin Had Trotsky Killed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — A Soviet newspaper has publicly agreed with Western historians' longstanding assertion that former Soviet leader Josef Stalin ordered the assassination of fellow revolutionary and rival Leon Trotsky.

Literaturnaya Gazeta on Wednesday published a full-page article on Trotsky, a leader of the Russian revolution in 1917 who came to oppose Stalin and Vladimir Lenin.

Historian N. Vasertzky got to the point five paragraphs from the end:

"Stalin couldn't forget past offenses and outrages. Being convinced that Trotsky was no longer needed, he apparently either took the decision himself or let the decision be known to the people around him. With Trotsky, it's time to finish him," the paper said.

Trotsky started his opposition to Lenin in the early 1900s, saying Lenin's ideas would result in a one-party dictatorship. But following the February revolution in 1917, he joined up with Lenin to take power from the Provisional Government in the October Revolution. He served as a member of the ruling Politburo from 1919 to 1927, but lost a power struggle with Stalin and was exiled.

Stalin reviled Trotsky as a traitor and used his alleged anti-Soviet plot as an excuse for bloody purges.

Judge Upholds U.S. Claim On Noriega

MIAMI — Prosecutors concede they are a long way from bringing Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega to trial on drug charges despite a federal judge's decision to uphold the prosecution of the Panamanian leader.

But they called his hold on power tenuous, and expressed hope he could eventually be overthrown and extradited.

"He seized power by the sword, and there is no reason to believe he might not lose power by the sword," said U.S. Attorney Dexter Lehtinen. "We'll try to get Noriega here."

U.S. District Judge William Hoevener on Wednesday rejected a defense challenge to the charges that accuse Noriega and 15 others of allowing smugglers to use Panama as a weigh station for U.S.-bound cocaine.

Noriega allegedly accepted a $4.6 million bribe from Colombia's Medellin Cartel to protect the drug traffickers, allow them to process cocaine and launder their profits, according to the February indictment. A separate federal grand jury indictment in Tampa charged Noriega with three marijuana importation counts.

Hoevener took note of a U.S. State Department's affidavit saying the government continues to recognize ousted President Eric Arturo Delvalle, not Noriega, as legal ruler of Panama.

The judge added that he himself had come to a similar conclusion in a civil case disputing control of Panama's national airline facilities here.

Risks, Reform

Pitt's Role Is Leading, Sharing

Children as assembly line workers, knowledge as the raw material and teachers as executives?

What's being proposed here isn't a return to the days before child labor laws. No, it's a shift in design, purpose and perspective for North Carolina's classrooms that deserves a careful look. It's seat-of-the-pants educational reform.

And classroom change is essential, because eastern North Carolina's schools aren't working. That's what leaders at East Carolina University's first Chancellor's Forum heard Tuesday and Wednesday from nationally-known thinkers that discussed the kinship between education and economic development in the region. The gloom and doom weren't news, especially to eastern North Carolinians who know just how badly the phrase "trails the state" smarts.

Here, only 55 percent of the population has high school diplomas. And that reality has tangible economic effects. Seventy-seven percent of the households living in poverty are headed by someone without a high school education. Four out of 10 persons living below the poverty level have less than an eighth grade education. And students from uneducated and deprived families in eastern North Carolina make up one-third of the school population.

Minorities are disproportionately represented in these statistics. In the region, 61 percent of the white population has a high school degree, while only 39 percent of blacks do. These are ominous economics facts, with equally somber social implications.

The mountain of statistics that place eastern North Carolina at the rear of the class educationally should be sufficient to convince the most tenacious skeptic that there is an umbilical cord between education and economic growth. So the analogy of assembly line workers, raw material and executive becomes a very pertinent image.

The notion of schools as factories where children and information fuse to form education was one of several bold ideas offered at the forum by Phillip Schlechty, an educator with a reputation as an advocate of school reform.

While Schlechty's vision of what schools should be doesn't sound elegant, it is applicable. Schlechty correctly likened kids to workers that must forge a raw material (the curriculum) rolling down an assembly line (school) into a useful product (education, skill.) The teacher's role is executing this process — making the raw product relevant and malleable for the workers.

Here's where the reform comes in. Schelechty suggested this raw product should fit the needs and interests of the child. It should appeal to him, not conform to some arbitrary standard of learning that's supposed to be a first-grade, fifth-grade or whatever-grade ability level. School should be interesting, he said, and pertinent. Hmmm. That doesn't sound so radical.

More time and money should be invested in training teachers as executives, he said. Give them better control over the classroom. After all, only they can shape the raw product so it can be manufactured into knowledge. He even suggested a portion of the responsibility for this training process lies with private business, which must lend schools the best human resources and dangle good jobs in front of potential employees only if they agree to spend three or four years as classroom executives.

He also gave every education statistician within earshot a reason to be nervous about job security. Schlechty blasted test-scores as a means of accountability, pointing out that tests give most students their first opportunity to fail. That first "break" often sets a pattern.

Pedantic solutions are not working; the region's woes made that fact clear. Improving schools in eastern North Carolina will require risk-taking, relevance and resources. It will require a partnership between public and private entities.

Pitt County is more fortunate than most communities in the region. With a good tax base and a major university, Pitt has the assets to foster excellence in the classroom. Despite its warts, the county's public school system is a strong one — well financed and well-led. Because of its regional position and leadership, it has had the benefit of hosting progressive pilot programs in education — many of them reforms that have improved the school system.

For that reason, the dismal statistics that add up to failure for other school systems are eased for Pitt. That means the county bears a responsibility, because of its resources, to eastern North Carolina. The county's duty to educational reform is to continue embracing new ideas and implementing them aggressively. Its added obligation is to share its assets with the region, to help other areas apply fresh thinking to their schools.

Ideas and resources must flow through the region like the streams and rivers that drain it. Pitt County can be a source. Sessions like the Chancellor's Forum are a beginning.

A Tough Task To Tackle

Paul O'Connor

For their first cooperative effort of 1989, the legislature and Gov. Jim Martin's administration have not chosen an easy task.

The two sides have practically reached an agreement on the structure of a massive new state roads program, and they plan to have a final proposal ready by the end of January on the cost and timetable of the program. But after agreement on all those details is reached, the hard work of selling the program to the voters of North Carolina begins.

The job won't be easy because no matter how the program is conceived, it will require massive new sources of funding, and that means major tax and fee increases.

The state's roads program is considered woefully inadequate to spawn major economic development during the 1990s and beyond. DOT and the legislature's Highway Study Commission have several different ideas of how many roads the state should build.

The smallest wish list would require $6 billion more than the state can currently hope to raise over the next 12 years. The bigger packages create a shortfall of $12 billion for that timespan. Those figures are in constant, non-inflationary dollars, and so they are certain to be lower than the actual costs that would be incurred to build either package.

Do a little arithmetic and one sees how big the coming tax and fee increases will have to be. Even the $6 billion plan requires $500 million in new revenue a year. That's double the current state spending level. A one-cent increase in the state gas tax would produce only about $40 million, so nearly 12 cents would have to be added to reach that year-ly amount. It is almost certain that no such tax hike will be recommended.

With potential increases of that kind, however, how will proponents sell the plan to the voters? At the last commission meeting, some of the sales points were tried out by various members.

Rusty Goode, a state transportation board member from Charlotte, used the "wondrous results" technique. With the full roads plan in place, "we can't visualize what it would do for our state," he said.

He compared the plan to President Eisenhower's decision to build an interstate system and he gave that plan the credit for much of America's economic development since the 1950s.

Transportation Secretary Jim Harrington said the new roads would create enough economic development "to build the best school system." Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, said the roads would create "good problems," like the need to build more roads to service the resultant economic growth.

After Sen. Bill Goldston, D-Rockingham, threw cold water in their faces by noting the size of tax increases needed, the optimistic salesmen turned tough. Harrington used the "terrible results" technique.

Goode came back with stories of Charlotte's airport and coliseum planning. Capacity for both was quickly met, he said, and the same will happen to the state's roads — that is, there'll be massive traffic jams — unless state leaders take a bold step.

With the price so high, it'll be a tough sell no matter how good the sales pitch.

A Threat To A Good Cause

Donald Rothberg

WASHINGTON (AP) — Whatever touched off the latest violent confrontation between the United States and Libya, the most immediate danger is that the incident could undermine U.S. efforts to mobilize its allies to block the spread of chemical weapons.

Even before Wednesday's military clash, Europeans were reluctant to join American concern over a Libyan facility U.S. officials said was designed to produce chemical weapons.

Libya's Col. Moammar Gadhafi is the leader Americans love to hate. Unfortunately, Gadhafi's ability to provoke strong U.S. responses had made it tougher for the Reagan administration to convince its allies to agree to joint action against Libya.

In part the reason is economic. Libya sells oil to some European countries, and it is a market for European exports. But the reluctance also seems based in the belief that the U.S. tends to overreact to Gadhafi.

Libya and its allies portray the clash as David versus Goliath over the Mediterranean, a superpower engaged in military action against a nation of fewer than 4 million people.

As they gave details of the air battle 40 miles off the Libyan coast, U.S. officials appeared clearly worried about the potential aftershocks.

Immediately after U.S. jets downed two Libyan MIG-23's described as on a hostile course, a White House spokesman said President Reagan "considers the incident closed."

"We now consider this matter closed," echoed Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci at a Pentagon briefing.

When asked of the possible impact on the meeting this weekend in Paris to discuss how to halt the proliferation of chemical weaponry, particularly among Third World countries, William Burns, the U.S. arms control director, said, "I don't see it as really germane to the conference. I think that other nations will not see it as germane as well."

The insistence of U.S. officials that the military clash was an isolated incident that should have no effect on the conference seemed the clearest indication they were worried that it would have a serious impact.

French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas said his country, the host for the weekend conference, "hopes that tension in the Mediterranean does not increase" as a result of Wednesday's incident.

"It is still too early to know the exact circumstances of the incident," Dumas said. "France is following with close attention the consequences that could result from this action."

'If the fears expressed by Dumas and indirectly by U.S. officials prove correct, it would provide one more case of how fragile the plans of superpowers can become in that violence-prone region.'

West German officials have rejected U.S. allegations that a German firm assisted Libya in construction of the chemical plant.

European nations have never readily accepted in full U.S. concerns about Gadhafi's actions.

According to U.S. accounts, the Libyan jets approached the U.S. planes in a manner that under international rules of engagement was clearly threatening.

"You cannot, in this day and time and modern technology, wait until another plane has fired in order to defend yourself," said Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee. "It's too late then."

But military rules of engagement aren't likely to be uppermost in the minds of the 100 or so foreign ministers who will meet in Paris.

The United States delegation headed by Secretary of State George P. Shultz hopes to convince other industrialized nations to deny chemical weapons technology to Third World countries and unite on sanctions against countries that use poison gas.

The Americans also want to strengthen the authority of the U.N. secretary general to investigate allegations of the use of chemical weapons.

If the fears expressed by Dumas and indirectly by U.S. officials prove correct, it would provide one more case of how fragile the plans of superpowers can become in that violence-prone region.

IN THE STATE

Drilling

RALEIGH (AP) — A state task force was unable to convince federal officials to overturn an earlier ruling that an environmental impact statement would not be needed before exploratory drilling proposed by Mobil Oil Corp. begins off Cape Hatteras.

"An exploratory well is not a very big deal," said Bruce Weetman, director of the U.S. Interior Department's Minerals Management Service's Atlanta region. "We believe it is very safe. We have no facts or figures to indicate the environment is going to be damaged."

The service's decision came despite a new study presented by the task force that shows that any spill from the well would end up on the state's beaches.

An impact statement — an extensive study of an area's environment and the potential harm to it — has never been done for an exploratory well, Weetman said.

Mobil is not expected to submit its formal proposal for the project until March.

Bush Autograph

WASHINGTON (AP) — Allie Hill and Maggie Lambeth, the world's oldest living twins who were born when Chester A. Arthur was president, will receive a 105th birthday greeting from President-elect George Bush.

Bush and the 45 Republicans in the U.S. Senate signed a birthday letter to Mrs. Hill and Mrs. Lambeth, who are residents of Mountain Vista Health Park in Denton, N.C. The signatures were collected Wednesday by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

The women, who turn 105 on Jan. 13, are staunch Republicans, according to Velez Buie, activities director at the home.

The Guinness Book of World Records recognizes the sisters as the world's oldest living twins, Ms. Buie said.

Son Charged

RALEIGH (AP) — The son of state Rep. Aaron Fussell, D-Wake, has been charged with false pretense in a 1985 case in which a Raleigh couple lost several hundred dollars while trying to make changes in their insurance policies.

Aaron E. Fussell Jr. of Wake Forest was released Tuesday on $5,000 unsecured bond.

An arrest warrant charges that the incident occurred while Fussell was working for the Horace Mann Insurance Co. in April 1985. The warrant charges that Fussell told the couple he would consolidate their five insurance policies into a single policy and cancel the old policies. He was to send them refund checks for the canceled policies, the warrant said.

But the policies continued for an "extended term for six months during the policies used up part of the existing cash surrender value," the warrant said. "This enabled the defendant to receive retention points on his employment contract which increased the amount of his compensation from the company."

Pittman Named

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin announced Wednesday that Tim Pittman will take over as director of communications on Jan. 17.

Pittman, 33, served as Martin's press secretary from February 1985 until February 1988, when he left the governor's office to serve as a spokesman for Martin's re-election campaign organization.

He replaces Karen Rotterman, who was recently appointed assistant secretary for administration and liaison services of the N.C. Department of Human Resources. She had held the post since January 1985.

Pittman's salary will be $50,000.

Education Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. David Price, D-N.C., introduced legislation Wednesday to cut the price tag of higher education for many students.

The bill would amend the IRS code by restoring income tax deductibility for interest paid on student loans and eliminating taxes on scholarships and fellowships.

One of the first pieces of legislation introduced in the 101st Congress, the bill is co-sponsored by Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-N.C.

Price was critical of the Reagan administration, saying the cost of a college degree has tripled since 1970, while financial aid has dropped by 10 percent.

The crisis was heightened by tax changes in 1986 that eliminated the deduction for interest payments on educational loans and the exclusion for scholarships and fellowships from taxable income, Price said.

particular in housing. He said housing starts in North Carolina have been declining since the summer of 1986 and he expects another 10 percent decline in 1989.

The inflation rate probably will increase to 5.5 or 6 percent, he said, with the rate on a 30-year, fixed-rate mortgage reaching 11.25 percent by mid-year.

Since the thrift institutions are so closely tied to housing, Davis said he expected their profits for 1989 to drop to about $110 million.

Medlin said he expects inflation rates to average about 4.5 to 5 percent for the year, with erratic interest rates that could rise a percentage point or slightly more from present levels.

He said a slightly lower rate of growth in retail sales should be offset by sustained strength in exports, which are expected to grow about 10 percent this year, compared to 27 percent last year.

"For the years ahead, it may be advisable to get prepared for a slower growing economy at home and abroad than has been enjoyed during the 70s and 80s," Medlin said.

"There are no strong engines of growth anymore, and it is unlikely the record expansion of this decade can be sustained much longer."

The league said North Carolina's savings and loans have kept 75 percent of their assets in mortgage loans, helping to make them the third most profitable thrifts in the nation.

State Officials To Wear Red Bow Ties Friday To Honor Thad Eure

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Martin and other state leaders will sport red bow ties Friday as a tribute to Thaddeus Armie Eure, the nation's longest serving public official, whose 52-year tenure as secretary of state is drawing to a close.

Eure, 89, will spend his final day in office Friday. He's retiring voluntarily from a post no one has been able to wrest from him since he was elected in 1936 after campaigning on the ironic slogan: "Give a young man a chance."

In recent months, the colorful secretary — self-proclaimed "oldest rat in the Democratic barn" and "king of the ramps" — has been showered with accolades and tributes. During Eure's final meeting with the Council of State on Tuesday, Martin presented him with a North Carolina flag that had flown over the state Capitol.

Martin will proclaim Friday "Red Bow Tie Day" at a ceremony in the rotunda of the Capitol, whose first-floor, northeast corner office Eure has occupied since 1931, when he served as clerk of the state House of Representatives.

The red bow tie is a Eure trademark, along with the straw hat he dons with the coming of spring.

Eure has taken his impending retirement in stride, but is reluctant to discuss his feelings about his departure.

"I haven't thought too much about that," he said Wednesday as he walked to the Capitol after his lunch break.

Asked what he thought about the tribute to the bow tie, he chuckled and said, "I don't object to it. If they want to do it, it's mighty nice."

Eure said he began wearing bow ties as a young man and never saw a reason to switch. "I don't rightly know why," he said, "but I've never owned a long tie. I used to wear 'em with fancy colors, but now I just wear solids."

The ceremony was the brainchild of a member of Elon College's centennial year planning committee. Elon has a special affinity for Eure, who has been a member of the school's board of trustees since 1942 and chairman since 1955.

"I've been on the board nearly half the age of the institution," Eure said. He plans to retire from the chairmanship in May 1989.

"Thad Eure is just a part of the fabric here because he's been so attentive to his duties as chairman," said Fred Young, president of Elon. "He's been a positive spokesman and force. We've had extraordinary cohesiveness between the board of trustees, the faculty and students ... because of his leadership."

Young will be among the dignitaries at the ceremony. The college is distributing adhesive-backed bow tie stickers for people who attend but don't wear the real thing.

Several of Eure's family members attended Elon, but he is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and its law school.

Eure, who wears thick glasses and a hearing aid, was born and raised on a Gates County farm and was mayor of the town of Winton from 1923 to 1928. He served a term in the House from 1929-30, was defeated for re-election and but remained in Raleigh as House clerk.

His 1936 election as secretary of state launched a career that would span the administrations of 12 governors and nine presidents. In 1987, President Reagan wrote Eure congratulating him on serving longer than any other government official in the nation.

State Board Wants Career Ladder Teacher Pay Plan For All Systems

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The State Board of Education has tentatively agreed to recommend a statewide career-ladder plan for teachers that would cost an estimated $400 million over an eight-year period.

The board today will formally approve the proposal, which was tentatively recommended Wednesday.

The board agreed to send its recommendation to the General Assembly, which convenes next week and must decide whether to authorize funding for the program.

Gov. Jim Martin warned that adoption of the plan statewide would mean delaying pay raises until more money becomes available in a tight budget. But he said the trade-off would be worthwhile.

"If we're going to strengthen the teaching profession and make it more attractive, enabling us to retain the teachers who have shown true excellence; enabling us to attract young people to consider teaching as a career; there is nothing that is going to help that more than incentive-based pay or promotions that are available to teachers in the classroom," Martin told the board.

"In the past, we've only been able to promote them out of the classroom, or let somebody else hire them away."

Martin called for extending the career-ladder pilots statewide with "some degree of flexibility."

The proposal asks the Legislature to expand statewide a career ladder plan that has been tried out for the last 3½ years in 16 school systems.

The ladder offers teachers a chance to climb to higher salary levels as they become more proficient, as determined by classroom observations. Under the board's plan, schools would train observers and conduct evaluations over the next three years. Teachers would not advance to the first level of the ladder and a merit pay increase until the fourth year.

"Revenue growth for next year will be modest," Martin said. "We have $232 million that can be used for program increases, new programs or expanding existing programs. ... If you want to use it for program increases you won't have anything left for pay increases."

State board chairman Howard Haworth said, "I am considerably concerned that with the crunch on new revenues we could find ourselves in a situation with too much to be accomplished and too little revenue. But I think we ought to stay the course. If the board doesn't stand tall ... we will have defaulted on our primary assignment."

The governor said the $232 million is left in the budget once essential construction and critical needs are taken care of. That would pay for a 5 percent pay increase for teachers and state employees — and nothing else, he said.

However, revenues are expected to improve gradually, with up to $450 million available in the second year of the biennium, Martin said. The more government spending can be streamlined, the greater the pay raise that will be possible, he said.

"We can start off with three or four months worth of a pay increase with the understanding that as additional money is saved we can advance that up to six months or nine months or as far as you can get," he said. "Anything that we can do to tighten our belts then can be applied to pay increase."

Martin said he had proposed to the Advisory Budget Commission that this year's $118 million installment of the Basic Education Program, designed to provide equal educational opportunities throughout the state, be cut in half and shifted to next year.

"The response I got was not very encouraging," he said.

Martin called new taxes "a last resort."

"As I look at those revenue forecasts, if they're correct, they don't show me a chronic problem that has to be dealt with in a tax increase," he said. "It does justify taking steps to tighten our belt and to look at options and make choices as to which of the available things we're going to do."

State Treasurer Harlan Boyles, also a board member, said the picture might be brighter than Martin's review made it appear.

"Our economy couldn't be better, and I'm extremely confident about it," he said.

Boyles pointed out that the revenue estimates don't consider reversions and overcollections that traditionally amount to $300 million to $400 million a year. And he said the state will get a one-time windfall as a result of RJR Nabisco's record buyout.

"That's fundamentally significant and should be pointed out," he said.

The windfall will stem from taxes paid on capital gains realized as stockholders in North Carolina saw prices more than double during the takeover.

Boyles said the time might be right to consider setting up a separate education fund similar to the highway fund that caters to transportation needs.

Teacher Retention Rate Is Improving

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina public schools had fewer male and black teachers last year than a decade ago, according to a N.C. Department of Public Instruction report.

The report, which sketched personnel profiles of the state's teachers from 1978 to 1988, also showed that the average age for teachers last year was 40.5. Ten years ago, the average age for teachers was 37.7.

"That says the retention rate for teachers and administrative personnel has been improving, which means the turnover rate is decreasing," Bob Boyd, the department's assistant superintendent for personnel, told the personnel committee of the State Board of Education on Wednesday.

He said higher teacher salaries have made teachers more likely to stay in the classroom. The current average salary is about $25,000. It could not be determined Wednesday what the average salary in 1978 was. A negative trend, he said, was the declining number of blacks who chose teaching as a profession. Last year, just 17.9 percent of the state's 59,397 teachers were black. Ten years ago, 21.2 percent of teachers were black. About 25 percent of the state's population is black.

Black men who go into teaching continued to become more rare. According to the report, just 3.2 percent of teachers last year were black males, representing a steady decline from 1978 when 4.3 percent of male teachers were black.

Men in general constituted 19.9 percent of teachers, a drop from 21.3 percent a decade ago.

While women made up 80.1 percent of the teaching force, they still represented a minority in administrative posts.

Just 21.8 percent of principals and 40.7 percent of assistant principals were women last year, up from a decade ago when 11.5 percent of principals and 14.3 percent of assistant principals were women.

Bush Meets Senators To Discuss Textiles

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — President-elect George Bush met privately with four Republican senators and three textile executives who want Bush to drop his opposition to a bill to limit textile imports.

Wednesday's meeting came at the request of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

The textile leaders want to avoid a repeat of the 1985 and 1988 vetoes by President Reagan that killed such legislation. Bush supported the president's position, but industry officials and lawmakers hope he might be more flexible on the issue once he enters the White House.

The textile legislation, which would set worldwide limits on apparel, fabric and shoes shipped to the United States, has been a priority for the textile industry for several years. It is strongly opposed by free-traders, including Reagan, who say it is unjustified and would prompt retaliatory measures by other nations.

By narrow margins, the House failed to override Reagan's vetoes in both 1985 and 1988. Supporters of the bill are unsure whether they could override a veto this year and would prefer to remove the problem by winning Bush's support. It was unclear Wednesday what concessions, if any, the supporters would be willing to make.

Participants in Wednesday's meeting in the Capitol were tight-lipped about what took place. Helms told the News and Observer of Raleigh he could not comment, and spokesmen for the other three senators said they also could not comment or knew nothing of the meeting. Bush's press office said it had no information about the meeting. No Senate staff members attended, according to informed sources.

The senators attending included Helms, Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, John Heinz of Pennsylvania and Trent Lott of Mississippi. All four support the textile legislation.

Industry leaders who attended were Donald Hughes, vice chairman and chief financial officer of Greensboro-based Burlington Industries Inc.; Roger Milliken, chairman and chief executive officer of Milliken & Co., based in Spartanburg, S.C.; and Daniel Frierson, chief executive officer of Dixie Yarns in Chattanooga, Tenn., and president of the American Textile Manufacturers Institute, a Washington-based group representing the industry.

Morgan Defends Overtime For SBI

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — State of Bureau of Investigation personnel are generally underpaid for their work and any plan to reduce their take-home pay by eliminating overtime pay "will be opposed as strongly as possible," the agency's director said.

"The SBI has complied with the policy of the State Personnel Commission," Morgan said. "We will continue to oppose any changes in that policy, unless more adequate compensation can be provided by another means. To deny supervisory people overtime would be unjust and unfair," SBI Director Robert Morgan said Wednesday of the policies used by the agency since 1979.

The Winston-Salem Journal reported Sunday that, based on payroll records in the state Department of Justice, the SBI has allowed supervisors to claim up to $400 per month in overtime. The report said state personnel regulations do not allow overtime pay for supervisors except when approved by the State Personnel Commission.

The newspaper said the N.C. Office of State Personnel planned to begin a review of the overtime payments.

State Personnel Director Richard Lee wrote Morgan in October to question the payments.

In the letter, Lee said any overtime payments "made to supervisory or management levels above the first-line supervisor" should be stopped immediately.

"Upon receipt of that letter, a representative of Attorney General Lacy Thornburg and I met with officials of the State Personnel Department," Morgan said. "At that meeting we strongly objected to any change in policy which would deprive SBI supervisory people of fair compensation."

"It was agreed at that meeting that further study would be given the overtime matter, and that is now being done," Morgan said in a statement released Wednesday.

Meanwhile, the bureau continued to pay overtime to several top managers after receiving the letter from Lee. The Journal said in its report, citing payroll records indicating that five of the SBI's assistant directors have been authorized to receive $11,978.21 in overtime.

Morgan said limited overtime for supervisory people, with the exception of Morgan and his deputy director, "is well established and recognized."

"Since the adoption of the policy in 1979, the State Personnel Commission has reaffirmed the position in 1984 and 1985," Morgan said. "Funds for overtime compensation have been provided by the General Assembly."

Legislator Says Ramsey Concerned

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Rep. Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, apparently is taking seriously reports of an attempt by Republicans and dissident Democrats to topple him, despite his public statements that he's confident he will be elected to an unprecedented fifth term as House speaker.

Rep. David Diamont, D-Surry, realized how seriously Ramsey viewed the threat to his job when Diamont's phone rang in Pilot Mountain.

"Liston is indeed worried about something," Diamont said Wednesday. "He called me two or three times. Let me put it this way: Liston had never called me before in 14 years."

Ramsey unanimously received the nomination of Democratic legislators — who will hold 74 of the House's 120 seats when the legislature convenes Wednesday — for another term as speaker late last year.

"I'm not too concerned about it," Ramsey said. "It's going to be hard for 46 Republican members to out-vote 74 Democratic members."

Ramsey said he had called "eight or 10" Democratic legislators to lobby for their support after reports surfaced a few weeks ago that he might face opposition.

He said he expects unanimous support from Democratic legislators, though "I would not be surprised" if three or four Democrats back another candidate.

"I expect to win," Ramsey said. Republican House members met Wednesday in closed caucuses to discuss how to unseat the 68-year-old Democratic leader from Madison County.

The meetings, in High Point and Lincolnton, had been quietly set up to discuss the delicate task of luring enough Democratic votes to topple Ramsey.

A legislator who spoke on condition of anonymity said late Wednesday after the meeting in High Point that the Republicans have extended an offer to a Democrat to oppose Ramsey. The legislator declined to elaborate.

"It's not what you think. It's really fascinating if it works," he told the Winston-Salem Journal.

Another proposal is already in the works. If all 46 Republicans back Rep. Johnathan L. Rhyne Jr., R-Lincolnton, when the General Assembly convenes Wednesday, the support of 15 Democrats would ensure victory.

"I've heard a lot of rumors, but I've met each one with a healthy dose of skepticism," Rhyne said of the likelihood that conservative Democrats will cross over to help unseat Ramsey, who appoints committee members, names committee chairmen, assigns bills and presides over the lower chamber.

Ramsey said that he viewed the challenge from Rhyne, the House minority leader, as a symbolic but unthreatening challenge.

U.S. May Use Cruise Missile If Plant Attacked

By Norman Black
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration has made no final decision about whether to attack a Libyan plant it claims is producing chemical weapons, but Pentagon contingency plans suggest the first use of cruise missiles, sources say.

Such a strike would use a land-attack variant of the Navy's Tomahawk cruise missile, equipped with a non-nuclear warhead, that was first declared fit for use in war in March 1986.

Use of the unmanned Tomahawk is "a preferred contingency" because of the missile's accuracy and the fact that no pilots would be endangered in bombing runs, the sources added.

The sources, who insisted on anonymity, agreed to discuss the Libyan situation after two Navy F-14 Tomcat jets shot down two Libyan jet fighters Wednesday in a confrontation over the Mediterranean Sea.

Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci, in discussing the conflict at a Pentagon briefing, flatly dismissed suggestions the F-14s were airborne as part of U.S. preparation for mounting an attack on the suspected chemical weapons plant. Libya says the plant makes pharmaceuticals, not chemical weapons.

President Reagan said last month his advisers were considering such a military strike.

The Washington Post reported in today's editions that Reagan now opposes a U.S. military strike against the plant because it would cause an international furor that might harm other U.S. interests. The Post cited an unnamed senior administration official who said Reagan was heeding the advice of European allies, particularly British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, that a military response would be unhelpful.

The British government said Wednesday night, meanwhile, that it has confirmed beyond doubt that the plant in dispute was built to produce chemical weapons.

"We have been in contact with a number of countries to make the point that we have independent information on the Libyan chemical warfare programs," said a British Foreign Ministry spokesman who spoke on condition of anonymity. "This information shows that the plant is very large and that there is no doubt it is intended for chemical warfare production."

Meanwhile, The Los Angeles Times reported today that Libya had initiated secret overtures to the United States in recent months in hopes of avoiding an armed confrontation. The Times, quoting unidentified officials, said the overtures were rejected because they failed to address U.S. complaints that Gadhafi's regime supports terrorism.

The Times sources said the most recent Libyan contact came less than 24 hours before the American F-14s shot down Libya's Soviet-built fighters Wednesday over the Mediterranean.

Carlucci said the F-14s were on a routine training flight, more than 600 miles from the Libyan plant and 70 miles off Libya's coast, when they were approached "in a hostile manner" and fired in self defense.

"What he didn't say was that if orders came to attack that plant, we probably wouldn't use airplanes," said one defense official. "We can use the Tomahawk now."

The United States wants to prevent Libyan strongman Moammar Gadhafi, from starting large-scale production of chemical weapons, particularly given Libya's past support of terrorist organizations, the sources said.

The administration is now trying to isolate Libya diplomatically and gain the cooperation of allies in denying Libya access to Western supplies and technology said to be needed for the plant. Secretary of State George P. Shultz plans to address the issue during an international conference on chemical weapons that opens Saturday in Paris.

"There won't be any military action before then," said one official.

"But the contingency planning no longer focuses on bombing runs," said another source. "The Tomahawk is mission-capable and we have the digitized navigation data (for the missile) needed to fly a strike."

The new plant is situated about 35 miles inland from the coastal capital of Tripoli. The conventional land-attack model of the Tomahawk has a range of 700-plus miles, meaning cruise missiles could easily be launched by either submarine or surface ship against the Libyan facility.

When the United States staged a bombing raid over two Libyan cities in 1986, it did not have enough conventional Tomahawks available to mount the attack. One Air Force F-111 bomber and two aviators were lost in those bombing runs, which were in retaliation for alleged Libyan involvement in the bombing of a West Berlin discotheque frequented by American servicemen.

The Tomahawk is a flying torpedo with short stubby wings and a small tail fin. Powered by a jet engine, it can fly at extremely low altitude just below the speed of sound and is almost impervious to air defenses on the ground.

The missile finds its way with an advanced navigation system and sensors that allow it to follow a pre-programmed computerized map in its memory.

The conventional variant of the Tomahawk costs roughly $1.5 million and has never been fired in a conflict. The Navy to date has certified 35 of its submarines and 23 surface ships to deploy with the Tomahawk; eventually 100 submarines and 91 surface ships are to carry the weapon.

According to one Pentagon source, "the accuracy is such that we can put a Tomahawk through the goal posts on a football field after a flight of 500 to 700 miles."

Libyans Bracing For Attack

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TRIPOLI, Libya — Residents fleeing Tripoli jammed gas stations and troops fortified the home of Col. Moammar Gadhafi, whose government claimed the U.S. downing of two Libyan jet fighters was a prelude to a major attack, news reports said.

The Foreign Ministry summoned heads of West European diplomatic missions after Wednesday's incident in the Mediterranean, asking them to condemn the U.S. "aggression" and prevent an escalation in tensions, the official Libyan news agency JANA reported.

Gadhafi branded the U.S. action an example of increased "official American terrorism, which is backed by brute force," the agency said.

The strongman, whom Washington accuses of sponsoring international terrorism, was quoted as declaring that the "revolutionaries of great Libya" would "meet challenge with challenge."

The Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported from Tripoli that residents were packing filling stations as they fled the capital after learning that the two Libyan fighters had been shot down by U.S. Navy F-14s.

It said Gadhafi's home was turned into a "fortress," with anti-aircraft missiles mounted on its roof.

Libya claimed the downing of its two fighters was a premeditated attack and a potential precursor to a major assault.

The Reagan administration said the two U.S. fighters had acted in self-defense while on routine patrol over international waters, but the Libyan ambassador to Rome linked the event to U.S. charges his country had built a chemical weapons factory about 50 miles southwest of Tripoli.

In Washington, the State Department said there was "absolutely no connection."

Solons Back U.S. Attack On Planes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell today joined other top lawmakers in calling the U.S. downing of two Libyan jets an appropriate act of self-defense.

"We regret the tragedy involved but I don't think there's any basis for second-guessing the decision by these pilots," Mitchell, D-Maine, said on NBC-TV's "Today" show.

He said he believed the action of the American pilots, flying in international airspace over the Mediterranean Sea, "was an appropriate act of self-defense under the rules of engagement and given the circumstances that existed at the time."

Mitchell made similar remarks on "CBS This Morning" and ABC's "Good Morning America."

Asked if he would support a U.S. attack on the plant in Libya, which the administration says is intended to produce chemical weapons, Mitchell said on CBS that President-elect Bush "ought to have the fullest range of options before he makes his decision."

Congressional leaders overwhelmingly backed the U.S. downing of the jets and most took great pains to deny the action was linked to the allegations concerning the Libyan plant.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, said after senators were briefed Wednesday by Defense Department officials that the shooting down of the Libyan MiG-23s was appropriate "under the circumstances."

"It was a justified defensive measure taken by American pilots who felt they were in jeopardy and were taking sort of evasive action," said Nunn.

Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci said Wednesday at a Pentagon news conference that the commander of the F-14 patrol made the decision to fire at the Libyan aircraft "in self-defense" and apparently shot down both planes.

Nunn said Adm. William J. Crowe, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff assured him there was no connection between the confrontation and U.S. reaction to the suspected Libyan chemical weapons factory.

Libya has claimed the plant makes only pharmaceuticals and has offered to allow a one-time inspection of the facility by international experts. The United States rejected the offer.

"The action took place 45 to 50 miles away from shore. It wasn't even in the approximate region of that chemical plant," Nunn said.

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, said the American pilots "had reason to believe they were under attack and they were acting in self-defense."

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said the incident — the first battle between the United States and Libya since American jets bombed Tripoli and Benghazi in April 1986 — appears to be "self-defense — pure and simple."

"Gadhafi never learns," Dole said. "Maybe this time he will finally get it straight: Whenever he threatens American forces, we will defend ourselves."

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, a member of Nunn's panel, declined comment on the U.S. action. "The briefing that we got did not cover some of the things I want to know before I say it was right or wrong," said Glenn.

Glenn said he is still waiting for "final information" following a debriefing of the F-14 pilots who were flown to Naples, Italy. Glenn said he wants to know about any missiles that might have been fired, angles of attack, use of radar and justification for firing.

Discovery Launch Set For Feb. 23

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The launch of space shuttle Discovery and a five-man crew has been rescheduled for Feb. 23, five days later than planned.

The schedule change does not reflect any technical problem, only that extra time is needed to prepare Discovery for flight, Lisa Malone, a NASA spokeswoman, said Wednesday.

However, she said that before a launching can occur engineers must resolve tile and cracked bearing problems that developed during the December flight of the shuttle Atlantis. Officials have said they are confident the problems will be resolved in time to meet the February launch date.

Atlantis suffered severe damage to nearly 200 of the 28,000 thermal tiles that protect it from atmospheric re-entry heat. And when engineers inspected the craft's main engines, they found a tiny crack in a bearing in a liquid hydrogen pump.

Officials believe the tile damage was caused when insulation peeled away from the shuttle's external fuel tank and solid fuel booster rockets during liftoff. They think the bearing damage may be traced to a flaw in the metal curing process.

The space agency said the current plan is to move Discovery into an assembly building on Jan. 19 to be hooked to its fuel tank and booster rockets, with rollout to the launch pad set for Jan. 26.

Agency managers will meet here Feb. 8 and 9 to assess the readiness of the shuttle for flight. Liftoff on Feb. 23 is set for 8:30 a.m. EST.

Navy Capt. Michael L. Coats will command Discovery on the five-day mission during which the astronauts will deploy a communications satellite and conduct scientific and technology experiments. The other crew members are Air Force Col. John E. Blaha, Marine Cols. Robert C. Springer and James F. Buchli and James P. Bagian, a doctor.

Mother Kills Four Children, Herself

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MENDON, Ill. — A woman drowned her oldest daughter in a bathtub, shot her other three children to death, then killed herself in a rampage that shocked this tiny rural town.

"I've been in law enforcement for 19 years, and this is the most gruesome thing I have ever seen," Adams County Sheriff Robert Nall said following Wednesday's grim events in this town near the Missouri border.

The bodies were discovered when the father, Greg Epker, returned home from work at a sign company in nearby Quincy, authorities said.

Epker, 32, found that his oldest daughter, Casey, had been drowned; that two other daughters, Shannon and Mandy, and a son, Lance, had been shot; and that his wife, Sheila, 27, had shot herself, Nall said. The children were 1 to 8 years old, neighbors said.

Epker was being treated for shock at St. Mary's Hospital in the county seat of Quincy 10 miles to the south, Nall said.

The killings apparently occurred between 3:30 p.m. and 5:15 p.m., Nall said.

"We're trying to determine the sequence of events and what took place," the sheriff said. "At this point, we have found no motive. It was a spontaneous event, and we don't know what happened. We may never know, exactly."

Mendon, with a population of nearly 1,000, is nearly 140 miles north-west of St. Louis.

"We've got a grocery, a gas station, a bank and variety store — that's pretty much Mendon, except for one oil company that services the local area," said Mayor Gene Rogers.

"It's just a small town, where everything's based on agriculture and everybody pretty much knows everybody else."

"You just can't imagine anyone doing anything like that," said Ron Durk, who owns the town's bowling alley and lives a few yards from the Epkers. "Something had to snap."

"We didn't know them too much," Durk said. "We'd just see her out there in the yard with the kids in the summertime. ... Something like this is unbelievable."

Neighbors said the family had lived in Mendon for about seven years.

"They were sweet, little children," said Durk's wife, Doris. "I used to see the little girls out in the yard, and they would wave at me."

Science Experts Urge Bush To Act Quickly

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Some of the nation's leading scientists, engineers and physicians today urged President-elect Bush to move forcefully to combat AIDS, set new goals for the space program and appoint a prominent science adviser.

The recommendations came in the form of a series of white papers commissioned by the presidents of the National Academy of Science, the National Academy of Engineering and the Institute of Medicine.

In space research, the panel told Bush the United States cannot take a leading position without his help.

"To give visibility to the importance of his space program, the president must establish his goals early in his administration. He should then support them strongly with the public and the Congress to help ensure their achievement," the experts said.

The study recommended that Bush quickly select a new National Aeronautics and Space Administration administrator. It said a basic space program will cost $10 billion a year, plus $3 billion to $4 billion for long-term special programs, such as the space station and human exploration of Mars or the moon.

In fighting AIDS, the panel recommended that the Bush administration protect persons infected with the deadly virus from discrimination and ensure that screening tests for the disease be employed "only when their purposes are clear and their results productive."

The AIDS study also said the president should continue aggressive educational programs and develop a plan for financing care of AIDS victims.

The study also recommended that the United States take a forceful leadership role in the international effort to fight AIDS and increase contributions to the global program to $50 million annually by 1990 from $15 million currently.

The panel urged Bush to move quickly to appoint a science adviser with "outstanding scientific, engineering and management credentials" who is familiar with the federal role in science.

Fatal Accident

ROBBINSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Graham County deputy's efforts to help a woman along a roadside turned to tragedy Wednesday when a passing car struck both of them, killing the woman and injuring the officer, authorities said.

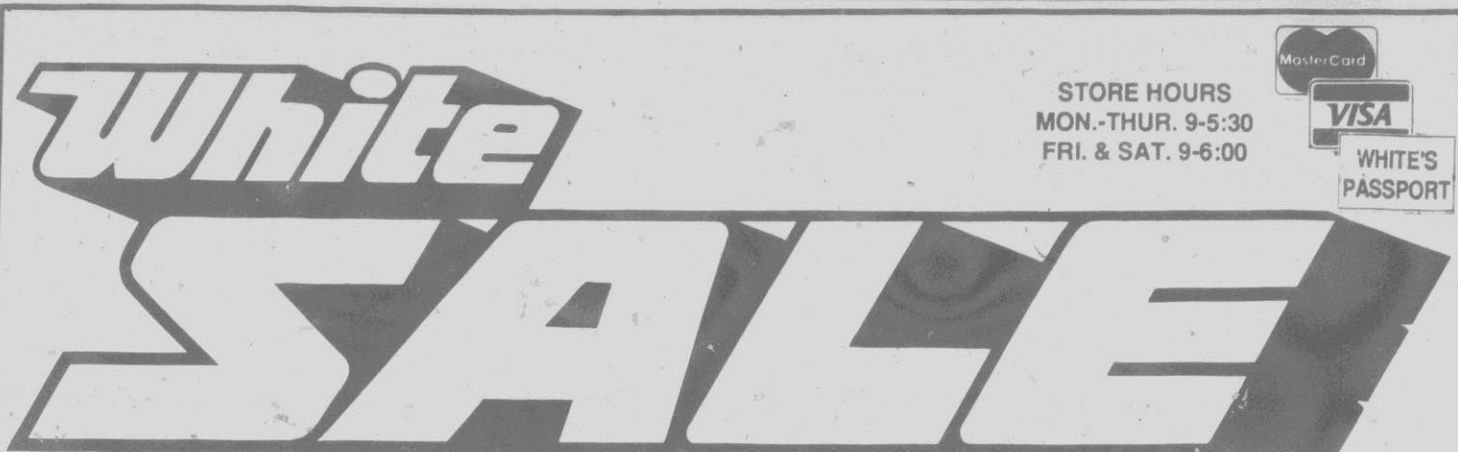

Deputy Philip Carringer, 26, was on patrol at 5:20 a.m. when he spotted Rebecca Smoker Birchfield, 57, of Robbinville, who appeared to be staggering along U.S. 19 outside of Robbinville, said Trooper Bob Debruhl.

Carringer stopped his patrol car and told Ms. Birchfield to get in so he could take her home. Ms. Birchfield circled the patrol car and then fell into the highway, Debruhl said.

Carringer got out of the patrol car to pick Ms. Birchfield up and while assisting her they were struck by a car driven by Thad Thomas Shope, 60, of Tapoco, who was enroute to work in Robbinville, Debruhl said.

Shope, who was blinded by the lights of the patrol car, failed to see the victims and was unable to stop, Debruhl said. The accident occurred in a curve. No charges were filed in the incident.

Carringer was listed in stable condition at District Memorial Hospital in Andrews.

Elite Boarding Schools Change And Flourish

ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

RUGBY, England — Some younger pupils stifled yawns and fidgeted as the strains of Camille Saint-Saens' Second Piano Concerto in G Minor, played by the school orchestra, filled the assembly hall.

Thus began another day at Rugby for 730 youngsters of the latest generation to have minds refined and upper lips stiffened by that durable and distinctively British institution, the public school.

Piles of schoolbooks lay in a misty rain around the doorway of the Temple Speech Room. The hall is a place for concerts, speeches and other important events, so the distraction of books is not permitted inside.

Traditions die hard, if at all, at this 421-year-old school in the English Midlands, where the game of rugby was invented and Thomas Arnold, that great Victorian and Rugby headmaster, set his 1857 novel "Tom Brown's Schooldays." Arnold's tale of courageous young Tom pitted against the evil bully Flashman embodied the physical bravery, self-reliance, school loyalty, patriotism and "muscular Christianity" that built the British Empire.

Those ideals still are preached at Rugby, Eton, Harrow and other "public schools," as Britain's fee-paying private schools are paradoxically known, even as a more egalitarian age forces change on the system.

Morning chapel is obligatory at Rugby. Nearly all pupils study Latin and, on Thursday afternoons, they must train as military cadets or do community work in the town of Rugby.

Shrouded in legend, beloved and reviled, public schools have weathered the leveling forces of socialism, advance of women, postwar revolution in education, permissiveness, drugs and recession.

They now enjoy a revival as the breeding ground of the British elite, educating the sons — and increasingly the daughters — of the wealthy for fees of 7,000 pounds ($13,000) or more a year.

Public schools always have been praised for the best and blamed for the worst of British life.

After the Duke of Wellington defeated Napoleon at Waterloo in 1815, perhaps the most famous quote about public schools was attributed to him: "The Battle of Waterloo was won on the playing fields of Eton." The Iron Duke also has been quoted as saying he never said it.

Novelist Henry Fielding, on the other hand, described public schools as "the nurseries of all vice and immorality."

Defenders see them as incubators of genius and say the institutions must be elitist to do their job. To them, the schools embody the finest British characteristics — modesty, individualism, gallantry and honesty.

Detractors savage them as perpetrators of class division, snobbery, sexual perversion, cruelty and sexism. Public schools, it is claimed, turn Englishmen into homosexuals or Soviet agents, or both, and make them adolescents for life.

Neil Kinnock, leader of the socialist Labor Party, says public schools are "the very cement in the wall that divides British society."

Moreover, the schools are accused of focusing so heavily on the classics and humanities that Britain is afflicted by a debilitating anti-science mentality.

"It's a closed society like an army barracks, a prison or a monastery — protective, cosseted and also unbelievably harsh," says writer William Boyd, a graduate of rugged Gordonstoun in Scotland. His play "Good and Bad at Games" portrays the fine line between horrors and glories in public school life.

"If you fit in, you can enjoy levels of acclaim, fame, celebrity at the age of 17, 18 that you cannot reproduce in your adult life," Boyd, 36, said in an interview. "But if you're unpopular at these schools, it's nightmareish."

From banking, politics and the professions to the military, the diplomatic corps and civil service, public school graduates retain a disproportionate influence.

Although only 7 percent of British children are educated by the 2,500 fee-paying schools, they capture nearly half the places at Oxford and Cambridge each year.

Only a fraction go to very top schools like Eton or Rugby. Their graduates, however, include Robert Walpole, Winston Churchill and 18 other prime ministers. Notable foreigners as King Hussein of Jordan and Jawaharlal Nehru, the first prime minister of independent India; noted lawyers, writers, philosophers, scientists and sportsmen, and more than half Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Cabinet.

Mrs. Thatcher, a grocer's daughter, went to one of the state-subsidized "grammar schools," which lost their subsidies in 1976 and became either private or entirely state-financed.

Many public schools approached bankruptcy in the 1960s and 1970s, beset by hostile Labor governments, student revolts, high taxes and intense rivalry from the grammar schools.

Two decades later they flourish, with waiting lists longer than ever. They rallied by rewriting curriculums with the stress on examination results, subsidizing poorer students and making more room for non-boarders.

They ended such harsh traditions as initiation rites, beatings and "fagging" — 13-year-olds acting as servants to the 18-year-olds. Flogging was stopped two years ago.

Girls are admitted to the sixth form, equivalent to 12th grade, and dormitories have been divided into private rooms. Some masters even call students by their first names.

Isolation from parents, the opposite sex and social inferiors is gone, and today new money predominates. Sixty percent of parents with children at public schools did not attend them.

"Socially, the schools are as exclusive as ever but in every other way they are much more in touch with the currents of contemporary life," John Rae, former headmaster at London's elite Westminster School, wrote in The Times.

At Rugby, a montage of Victorian, Gothic, Tudor and modernistic school buildings surround "The Close," a rectangular sports field.

A carved stone commemorates the first game of rugby in 1823, when William Webb Ellis, "with a fine disregard for the rules of football as played in his time, first took the ball and ran with it."

At lunch in Michell House, one of 15 boarding houses, 60 pupils grouped by age stood stiffly as grace was mumbled quickly, then sat down to a meal of sausages, green beans and potatoes and gravy.

"It's the cook's day off," a senior boy told a visitor in apology.

Rugby boys wear tweed jackets and dark trousers. Eton still insists on tails and starched collars but its arch-rival Harrow settles for tails on Sundays and formal occasions only. Winchester requires academic gowns in classes.

Classes are limited to 15 boys at Rugby and about 80 percent of the graduates will attend universities, more than five times the average of 15 percent for all British graduates of lower schools.

Eighteen modern languages are offered, including Chinese and Russian.

In 1859, Rugby challenged the landed gentry's distaste for technical education by pioneering science instruction. Half the seniors now study science and six of the 17 science teachers have doctorates.

The school employs a full-time public relations officer and publishes a glossy promotional brochure.

Foreigners and non-boarders each make up 10 percent of Rugby's pupils, and 20 percent of students are helped by an annual aid fund of 400,000 pounds ($750,000). Under week-long exchanges with state schools, students learn how the other half lives by sharing each other's classrooms and homes.

Ask For Proof Of A Law

Dear Abby: In response to the letter from "Wondering in Waco," the woman who had planned to have her tubes tied and was told she needed her husband's consent, I would like to add my own experience along the same line:

As a widow, planning to marry, I wanted to have my tubes tied. As I sat in the hospital, wrapped in a sheet awaiting my turn for the surgery, a nurse came in and asked if my husband was available to sign the "consent form."

I informed the nurse that I had no husband, and if I did have one, I'd be aghast at the idea that I would need his consent to have my tubes tied.

This requirement may not be "on the books," but it is a widespread practice. — Also Appalled In New Jersey

Dear Appalled: As I previously pointed out: "It's possible that the physician asked the woman to obtain her husband's consent in a way that gave the impression that it was required by law."

The moral to this story: If you are asked to do something that "feels" unfair, unjust or inappropriate, don't assume that it's a law — ask for proof.

Dear Abby: I hate writing letters, but I couldn't resist a comment to

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

"Wondering in Waco," who was upset when her doctor told her she needed her husband's consent to have her tubes tied.

I'm the mother of six lovely children and was on the pill for 10 years when some negative reports started coming out about it.

This worried my husband, so he decided to have a vasectomy. We made an appointment with the surgeon, and I took my husband to the doctor's office. I sat in the waiting room. The nurse came to get me, saying the doctor wanted to see me, too. When I went into his office, he handed me a form to read and sign.

It said: "I agree to allow my husband to have this surgery, and I will not sue the doctor for tampering with my personal property."

Of course I signed it, and my honey and I had many laughs over this for a long time afterward. So you see, it all depends on the doctor's rules. — R.K. In Biloxi, Miss.

Dear Abby: The letter about the girl who worked in a fast-food place that required her to wear short-shorts so "people could look at her legs" reminded me of an experience our niece had a few years ago. (She was a beautiful girl and looked like Judy Garland.)

While attending nursing school and living with us, this niece took a job as a waitress in a local steak house. After a week or two, her boss told her that he wanted her to wear high heels, mesh tights, hot pants, a short black dinner jacket and a white, sleeveless, turtleneck sweater. He told her it would help business, and she would get bigger tips.

He was right. Nobody sat at the bar anymore. Her tips doubled, but after one week in those spike heels, she decided that the propositions from drunks and the pawing wasn't worth it, so she told her boss that she wanted to go back to wearing a skirt. He refused, so she quit her job and filed with the California Fair Employment Practices Commission. She won four weeks' pay, plus an offer of re-employment from her erstwhile boss (which she refused!). — Karin And Bob, Elk Grove, Calif.

Dear Karin And Bob: Hooray for your niece. She's not only a credit to womanhood, she chose a noble profession that desperately needs to increase its numbers.

Natural Mother Gets Youngster

By Jennifer McNulty
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

SAN FRANCISCO. — A young mother given a second chance to raise her child after the baby's adoptive parents were shot to death a few feet from his crib says she's now ready for motherhood because "I've grown up a lot."

"I've been feeding him, changing him, clothing him and bathing him," Tracy Medeiros said Wednesday, a day after she successfully convinced a Marin County court she was ready for such responsibility and was awarded custody of the toddler.

"I've never been a mom before. I'm getting used to it. He's real happy," she said as she prepared to fly home to Massachusetts today.

Medeiros gave Travis up for adoption nine months ago in hopes his new parents would provide the security and comforts she feared she couldn't after her boyfriend left her. At 17, she felt it was the right thing to do.

But that decision was turned upside down last month, when Travis' adoptive parents, William and Tasia Stephens, were shot to death a few feet from the baby's crib at their home in Novato, about 25 miles north of San Francisco.

The Stephens' housekeeper and her boyfriend were arraigned Wednesday on charges of murder and pleaded innocent. Yolanda Segura and Zohelin Diaz, both 25-year-old illegal aliens from Guatemala, face a possible death sentence if convicted. A preliminary hearing was set for April 5.

Novato police believe the shooting occurred after Segura told her boyfriend she had been sexually assaulted at the home of the slain couple, the San Francisco Chronicle reported today.

Segura, however, may have been fired by the couple and investigators think she may have told Diaz the story to cover up the loss of the job, the newspaper reported without citing sources.

On Tuesday, Superior Court Juvenile Commissioner Sylvia Shapiro ruled that the adoption, arranged before Travis' birth, had not been legally finalized, thereby paving the way for Medeiros to return with the baby to her mother's home in Billerica, Mass.

"Now I know I'm ready. I've grown up a lot," Medeiros, 18, said afterward.

Shapiro required Medeiros to take parenting classes and make monthly reports to the court about the child's welfare. The reports will be shared with relatives of the slain couple, who also applied for custody of the child, and the case will be reviewed in six months. But Medeiros isn't worried about that now.

Tracy Medeiros holds her son, Travis

"I just care about my son," she said. "Nothing else bothers me. I'm going to do what's best for him."

Something Will Be Finished This Year

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

As I am the reigning queen of unfinished projects, it is not unreasonable to assume that my No. 1 New Year's resolution this year is to finish something.

I have a wide choice. I can finish raising my three thirtysomething children. I could finish an eagle afghan that still needs 84 knitted squares. Or I could go crazy and paste the rest of the pictures in the photo album of my wedding.

You probably think I have never finished anything in my life. You are wrong. You may remember the cross-stitch pillow I started in 1967 titled "Colonial Lady at White House." I finished it eight years ago. Once I make up my mind to do something, I do it.

I am not alone in leaving things undone. At a meeting of the Louisville chapter of the Embroiderers Guild of America Inc., a contest was held among its 275 stitchers to see who had the most unfinished projects. The categories were: largest, smallest, least worked, nearly finished, hopeless case, greatest number and most popular.

The winner had a total of 72 unfinished projects. Amateurs.

You're reading someone with an interest span of 20 minutes ... tops!

Christmas will go out of style before I finish all the stockings, poinsettia key rings, Christmas tree pillows and felt applique skirts. They are all jammed in a shopping bag with the prophetic label "Next Year."

At one time I silently made plans to teach origami at the Y. The book, "Beginning Origami," is still in its cellophane wrapper. Under the sheets in the linen closet are five little bundles of silk fabric I bought in China on my vacation. I don't own a sewing machine.

In Alaska, I bought a book of Alaskan animals to be assembled for my grandchildren. I put together a caribou before I realized I don't have grandchildren.

Recipe and coupon files are in the embryonic stage ... chairs are half-stripped of their paint in the garage ... lawn furniture is still stuck to newspapers awaiting a second coat. I never seem to be able to get ahead of the season. I know that I should be getting out those plastic Easter eggs that come in a kit to decorate, but I won't do that.

I looked carefully over all of my unfinished projects before I announced which project I was going to finish this year. Yesterday, I made my choice. "I am going to finish the book," I announced.

"The one you are writing?" asked my husband.

"No, the one that's by my bedside that I tell you I'm reading each night before I fall asleep. It's been there since 1984."

Levett-Banks Vows Said Saturday

Sycamore Hill Baptist Church was the setting for the wedding of Lucy Felicia Banks and Willie Brian Levett III.

The Revs. Howard Parker and Pat Houston conducted the 2 p.m. Saturday double-ring ceremony which included communion and the lighting of the unity candle. A program of nuptial music was presented by Danny Dupree, organist, and Tammy Edwards Pugh and Rachel Summers, vocalists.

The bride is the daughter of Arthur Lee Banks of Greenville and the late Lola Jones Banks. Mr. and Mrs. Willie B. Levett II, also of Greenville, are parents of the bridegroom.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white formal gown of raschel lace combined with crystal organza. The sweetheart neckline, bodice and leg o'mutton sleeves featured jeweled Venice lace motifs and bands. The front and back basque waist was edged with Venice lace and flowed to a full skirt. A large organza bow was attached at the lower back. Lace roses caught swags of the skirt where three rows of wire edge crystal organza formed the hemline and chapel-length train. She wore a floral wreath adorned with seed pearls and pout attached to a two-tier fingertip veil. She carried a cascade of roses, stephanotis and white lilies accented with baby's breath and satin streamers.

Jane Elizabeth Levett, sister of the bridegroom, was the honor attendant. She wore a mauve sheath of georgette which featured a sweetheart neckline and high-low hemline. She carried a single mum accented with mauve satin streamers and greenery and wore baby's breath in her hair.

Bridesmaids were Edith Levett, sister of the bridegroom, Wendi Mair, cousin of the bride, and Danielle Cyriaque, all of Greenville. Kaye Mitchell of Greensboro, Kowana Ragland of Hillsboro and Thelma Williams, cousin of the bridegroom of Newark, N.J. They were dressed identical to the honor attendant and carried similar bouquets.

Keji Baruwa and Wachin Shipp were flower girls. They wore white ruffled gowns and carried baskets accented with mauve satin streamers and flower petals.

Craig Peele of Greenville served as best man. Groomsmen were James and Wilbert Levett, brothers of the bridegroom, of Greenville; Rudolph Williams of Newark, N.J.; William Rollins of Brooklyn, N.Y.; George Fonderson of Washington, D.C. and Dwayne Lowe of Durham.

The ring bearer was Raymond Walters of Greenville.

Roses were presented to the bridegroom's mother, to Jane

Howard Levett, grandmother of the bridegroom, and to Hazel Jones Lee, aunt of the bride.

The reception and after-wedding party were held at the Comfort Inn. The rehearsal dinner was held in the fellowship hall of the church.

The ceremony was directed by Ella Harris of Greenville and Patricia Mair, cousin of the bride, presided at the guest registry. Hostesses were Sharon Ragland, Jeanette Williams, Jean Blackwell, and Mary Outlaw.

The bride and bridegroom are graduates of J.H. Rose High School and North Carolina A&T State University in Greensboro. They will reside in Greensboro.

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press

HOGS: Market $1.50 to $1.75 higher at N.C. buying stations. Kingston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Robersonville, Siler City 41.50; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Chadbourne, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 42.00; Wilson 42.00; sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 30.00; Wallace 30.00; Spivey's Corner 31.00; Rowland 31.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 55.25 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. Too few percent of the loads offered have been confirmed for a preliminary average. The market is about steady and the live supply is adequate for a moderate to good demand. Average weights are desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina 2,142,000, compared to 2,045,000 last Thursday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn mostly 2 to 3 cents higher, at mostly $2.93-$3.09 in the East; mostly $3.08-$3.19 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly 14 cents higher at mostly $8.01-$8.16 in the East; mostly $7.87-$8.06 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly $4.17-$4.27; new crop wheat $3.41-$3.77. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were mostly steady and ranged from 97 to 99 1/2 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices gained ground today as traders looked ahead to the government's monthly report Friday on the employment situation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 5.53 to 2,183.21 in the first half hour of trading. Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 5 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 582 up, 333 down and 528 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 29.32 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The data from the Labor Department Friday on employment for December are expected to show continued strength in the economy.

That presumably would give the Federal Reserve extra cause to consider a further tightening of credit in its campaign to keep inflationary pressures from reviving.

Indeed, the Fed is thought by some analysts to have pulled in the reins a bit this week in anticipation of the employment report.

But the bond and stock markets have held their ground in the first few sessions of the new year, suggesting that investors have already taken the prospect of tighter credit into account.

General Motors, which said Wednesday it expected to report record earnings for 1988, rose 3/8 to 84 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .26 to 157.32. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .80 at 308.57.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 33.04 points to 2,177.68.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by more than 3 to 1 on the NYSE, with 1,182 up, 328 down and 445 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 149.70 million shares, against 128.50 million in the previous session.

Poverty

Halifax and Hyde counties, the report says.

Education, health, housing, transportation, industry and welfare programs were the human services needs examined by the committee in 41 eastern counties.

"One system is not responsible for the cause or the solution," committee co-chairwoman Maria McMahon said. "There are gaps in services that show why poverty continues to grow. There has to be a sense of shared responsibility. But all we've seen is finger-pointing."

"There is a need for more coordination between federal, state and local agencies and more money," Modlin said. "The public and private sectors need to look at the problems of poverty together."

The study also found that 55 percent of eastern North Carolina households are headed by women and that the poor are living in substandard housing, with little or no transportation and few job skills.

"There is disbelief that so many live in poverty, but you don't have to receive assistance to be poor," Modlin said.

"High unemployment, underemployment and low wages contribute to poverty in our county. These factors make our aid programs some of the biggest in the state," said Russell Sessoms, Robeson County Department of Social Services director. "People just can't make ends meet with such low wages."

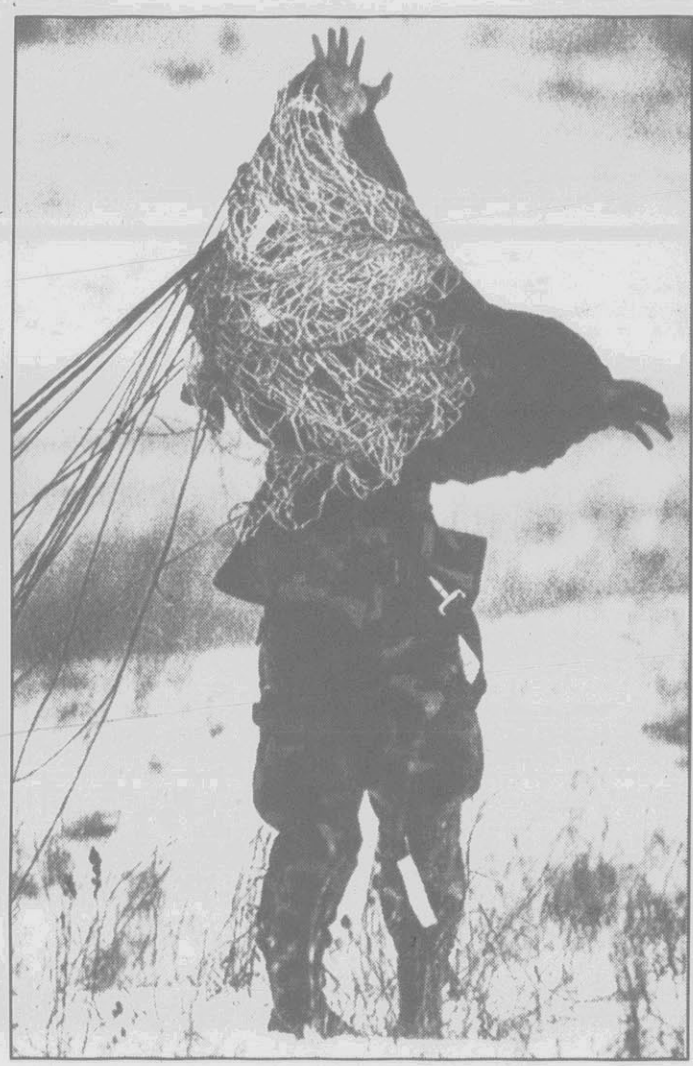

And the numbers of poor people are increasing. More people live in poverty now than in the 1960s, said J. Gordon Chamberlin, executive director of the N.C. Poverty Project.

"It is assumed that it's their (the poor) own fault and their own responsibility," Chamberlin said. "We are trying to help the public look at the real reasons why poverty is so persistent."

Recommendations offered by the committee include making education, job training and employment accessible; providing preschool and child-care centers and assisting in locating and providing suitable housing.

"What we propose to do is not charity," Chamberlin said. "It's trying to break up the vicious circle of poverty that lasts."

"Children are the largest population in poverty with one child in five growing up poor, and 25 percent of the state's elderly are poor. Some receive Social Security. But most of these people have no income at all," Chamberlin said.

Shultz Makes Plea

tle notice to the world that it considers Moammar Gadhafi's drive to produce poison gas — an allegation the Libyan leader has consistently denied — a serious threat to world stability.

After the clash, Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci and other senior U.S. officials sought to separate the incident from the drumbeat of alarm the Reagan administration has sounded over the suspected chemical weapons facility.

The Libyan plant controversy is bound to have an impact on the conference. And yet, Burns said "it is not aimed at bashing a particular country."

Referring to the air clash, Burns added: "I don't see it as really germane to the conference. I think that other nations will not see it as germane as well."

Carlucci, at a news conference at the Pentagon, said the Libyan jets had approached the U.S. F-14 Tomcats at high speed and in "a hostile manner" in international airspace.

He said the Navy planes acted solely in self-defense. Based on preliminary reports, the MiGs activated their radar before the Tomcats opened fire with air-to-air missiles, Carlucci said.

Congressional leaders said the United States had acted appropriately, but expressed concern that the incident might portend further hostilities with Libya.

House Majority Whip Tony Coelho, D-Calif., said "Congress should be informed ... if the United States is engaged in a piecemeal escalation of our conflict with Libya beyond these legitimate acts of self-defense."

Libya, meanwhile, condemned the U.S. firing as a premeditated attack, and Gadhafi, the Libyan leader, declared his North African nation would "meet challenge with challenge."

"If America has prevailed because it is a superpower in the air and the sea, it will inevitably be defeated in Libya," Gadhafi said. "We, as well as the fish, are awaiting them."

European officials reacted cautiously to the incident, while Israel applauded the U.S. action and Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, and the Arab world sharply criticized the United States.

The downing of the two Libyan jets kept attention fastened on the suspected Libyan chemical plant as delegates to the Paris conference began assembling.

Shultz, who will be in Paris through Sunday, will urge industrialized countries to deny technology to other nations bent on developing chemical weapons. Charles E. Redman, the State Department spokesman, said the key to the Libyan situation was to deprive Gadhafi of the equipment, material and expertise to produce poison gas.

"If these kind of things are going to be cut off it's going to be very difficult for a plant of this kind to operate," he said.

The 1925 Geneva Protocol under review in Paris bans the use of chemical weapons, but does not outlaw their production. Some 20 nations, by U.S. estimate, either have produced chemical weapons or are capable of manufacturing them.

The protocol has no enforcement mechanism. Its effectiveness depends on the self-discipline of the 130 nations that are parties to the pact.

To try to stem proliferation, Redman said "we are prepared to discuss the strongest possible measures" against countries that export sophisticated technology.

The West European governments have responded with some skepticism to the U.S. allegations, however.

are sitting there waiting to be funded."

Projects that could possibly be started with new funding include work on the eastern portion of N.C. 33 and construction of a southwest bypass around Greenville, he said.

Several other projects are already set to begin this year. The state DOT is scheduled to open the bidding later this month on construction of the Farmville Bypass, which will link newly completed sections of U.S. 264. The state has purchased all the land needed for right of way.

The state is still working to buy right of way for the widening of Evans Street from Howell Street to 10th Street, and Doub said the project should be open for bidding in June.

The state is scheduled to make improvements on N.C. 903 from Memorial Drive to the Martin County line, Doub said, and bidding on the project is set to begin in August.

The state is also working to construct a northwest bypass around Greenville, which will link newly completed sections of U.S. 264.

A dozen people work per shift, mining a 48-inch seam at the mine, the agency said.

The mine had no fatalities or serious injuries in 1988 and no violations involving roof regulations, officials said.

Kentucky reported only one roof-fall death last year, down from 15 in 1987. The number nationally declined to eight, down from 19 the year before.

Officials attributed the improved safety record to greater awareness by miners of the dangers of roof falls and to the increased use of automated roof-support systems.

McCoy said the revised rating is good news for the local business community.

"This type of information suggests to those companies, industries and individuals who are planning to relocate to some part of the United States that Greenville is a good area to relocate from a cost-of-living standpoint," he said.

Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce President Ed Walker concurred, saying the revised rating might also benefit area residents.

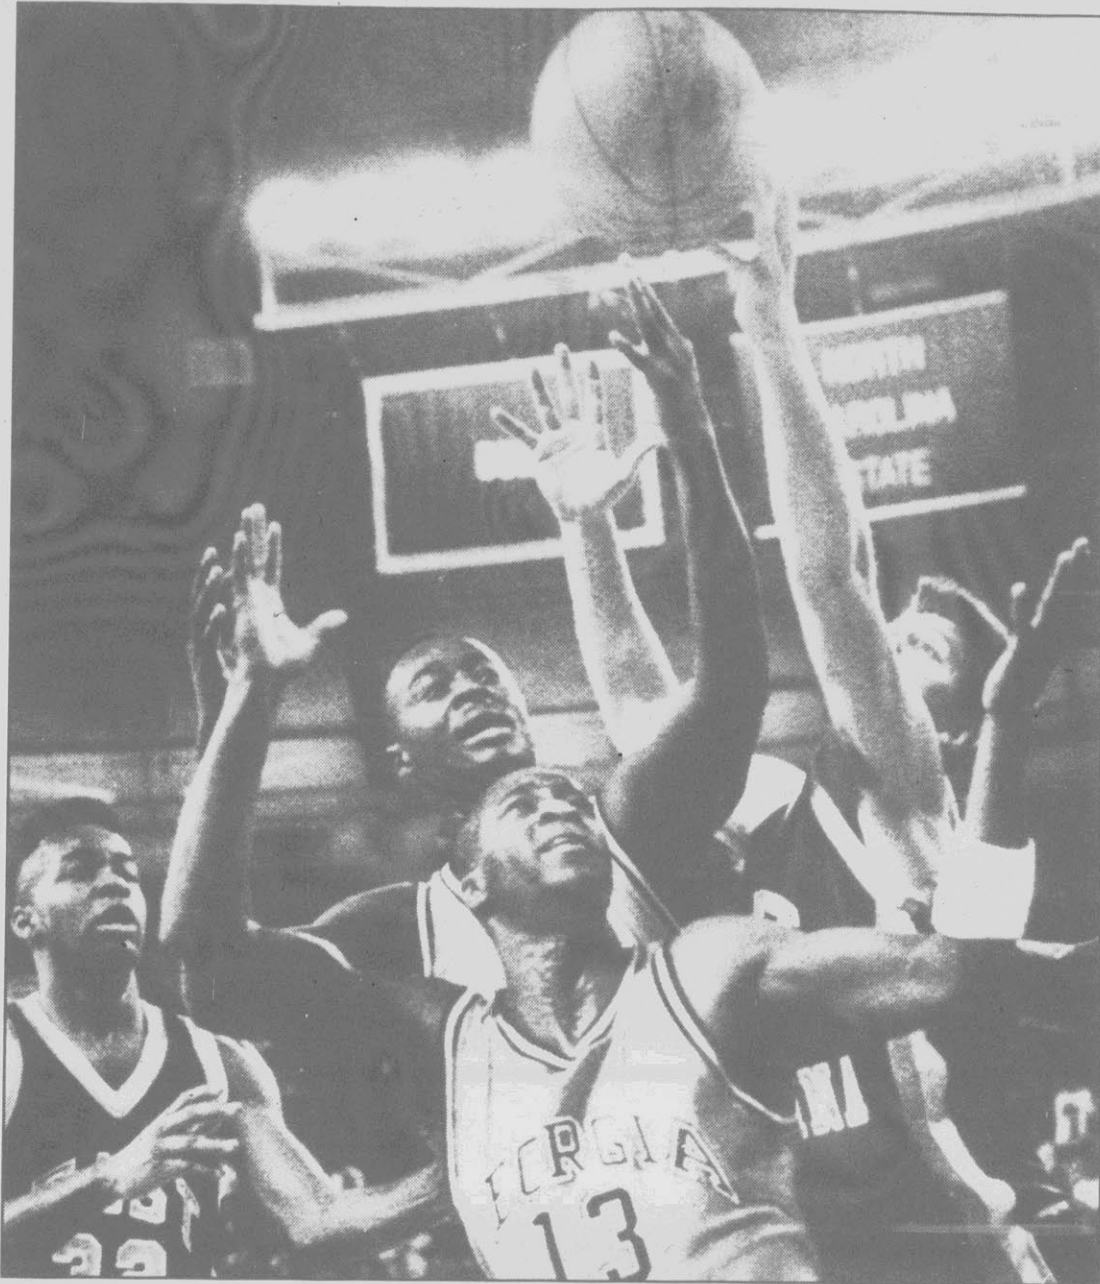

"I think when you have more people to come to Greenville, the private enterprise system has a chance to really work and to breathe which creates more competition, which eventually leads to better prices for the consumer," he said.

"We receive here at the chamber some 4,600 inquiries every year about living in this area and some of these inquiries have to do with what the cost-of-living is here," Walker added.

ECU's Reed Lose (R) battles with Tech's Brian Oliver (13) and Johnny McNeill for rebound

Georgia Tech Pulls Away From Pirates In Second Half To Take 92-69 Win

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

ATLANTA — When East Carolina made a run at Georgia Tech, the Yellow Jackets dug a little deeper and found their second wind.

Georgia Tech withstood a late first-half rally by the Pirates and rolled to a 92-69 college basketball win Wednesday night before 8,215 fans at Alexander Coliseum.

The Pirates came in heavy underdogs to the 19th-ranked Yellow Jackets, but after a slow start the Pirates rallied and made a game of it late in the first half.

East Carolina cut the lead to 31-28 on a jumper by Gus Hill with 3:37 remaining, but Georgia Tech rolled off seven straight points and held off the Pirates for a 40-30 halftime lead.

In the second half, it was all Tech as forward Tom Hammonds ended up with 30 points and point guard Brian Oliver added 24.

"I thought the turning point of the game was with three minutes remaining in the first half, we cut it to three points and then they come down and trap us and then we didn't complete a few plays," said ECU coach Mike Steele.

"In the second half, our guys got tired and their size advantage showed up."

The Yellow Jackets held a size advantage at every position but Hammonds in many cases was a one-man wrecking crew. Time and again, he came up with a strong post move or a timely tap in to keep the Yellow Jackets rolling.

"We got the ball to Hammonds and Hammonds kept scoring inside," Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins said. "I was concerned about tonight and this game. I called (South Carolina coach) George Felton last week and he said that when they played East Carolina, they were tied with three minutes to go. They have beaten Texas Christian. They are smaller and quicker than we are and that caused us some problems. They just didn't have any height."

After ECU had pulled within 31-28, Johnny McNeill scored on a turnaround jumper and was fouled by Reed Lose. He added the free throw for a 34-28 lead.

At the other end, Lose missed on a jumper and Oliver got the ball quickly on the break and hit a short jumper to make it 36-28 with 2:36 remaining in the first period.

Oliver added another basket on Georgia Tech's next possession and Dennis Scott added another bucket for a 40-28 lead before ECU's Stanley Love scored with seven seconds remaining in the first half to make it 40-30.

Between Hammonds inside and Oliver outside, the Yellow Jackets slowly pulled away in the second half, going up by as many as 25 points.

ECU went into game trying to deny Scott, the Yellow Jackets' leading scorer and a prolific three-point shooter. With an arsenal like Tech's, it's tough to figure out which player should be the focal point of a defensive effort, but ECU chose Scott. That, in a number of cases, gave Oliver some room to operate.

"I thought Oliver played hard," Steele said. "It seems like when he

Wake Closes Arena With Win; Cavs Bow

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — Defense and depth helped Wake Forest close out an era in Winston-Salem's Memorial Coliseum.

Playing their last game in the old arena, the Demon Deacons applied defensive pressure early in the first half and used it to take a 70-60 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over Maryland on Wednesday night.

"Our defense really did the job for us tonight, especially in the second half," Wake Forest coach Bob Staak said. "We played extremely hard, and that's why we kept fresh people on the floor."

"We knew Maryland was a dangerous team," Staak said. "We were always in control of the game, but we could never shake them."

Sam Ivy scored 16 points and Cal Boyd had 14, including four 3-point baskets.

The Demon Deacons, 7-3 and 1-1, gave up five points to the Terrapins while playing a zone defense in the first minute. When Wake Forest switched to a zone defense, it ran off nine straight points, and after Maryland tied the score at 14, Wake Forest went on a 9-1 run to take command.

Maryland fell to 6-6 in its conference opener.

"The difference was a combination of their perimeter shooting and our turnovers," Maryland coach Bob Wade said. "Turnovers really hurt us in the first half and they shot exceptionally well throughout the ballgame."

Maryland committed 11 of its 19 turnovers in the first half. Wake Forest hit 15 of 29 field goals in the first half and finished at an even 50 percent after hitting 25 of 50 field goals.

Ivy had four of the nine points in the run, capping it off with a jump hook with 10:23 remaining in the first half for a 23-15 lead. Wake Forest led by as much as 39-25 after the last of three free throws by Robert Siler with 4:01 left in the half. Three straight baskets by Wall Williams helped Maryland cut the gap to 39-31 at 1:32, but Wake Forest's David Carlyle scored the last two baskets of the half to give the Demon Deacons a 43-31 edge.

Jarrod Mustaf's dunk with 15:08 remaining brought Maryland to within 50-2, but Boyd and Carlyle had successive 3-point baskets to repel the threat.

"Every time we looked to make a run in the second half, they would hit a couple of 3-pointers to get back a big lead," Wade said. "We just have to put this one behind us and get ready for Clemson. We're going to have to take care of the basketball better than we did tonight if we want to be successful."

Carlyle had 11 points for Wake Forest.

Tony Massenburg had 15 points to lead Maryland. Mustaf scored all 14 of his points in succession in the second half. Williams scored 11 and John Johnson had 10.

Cowboys Won't Decide Early

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — The Dallas Cowboys won't play their Troy Aikman cards until February.

Dallas coach Tom Landry said on Wednesday that the Cowboys won't decide until February whether they will make the UCLA quarterback the No. 1 pick in the NFL draft.

Aikman quarterbacked the Bruins to a 17-3 victory over Arkansas on Monday in the Cotton Bowl and was named the most valuable offensive player of the game.

Landry watched on television while celebrating the New Year's holiday with his family.

"I thought Troy did a good job of taking what Arkansas gave him," Landry said. "They took away the deep pass so he threw the short passes well. He did a good job of directing the team. UCLA had a good running game and that helped."

Landry visited Aikman during UCLA's workouts at Texas Stadium, but wouldn't say Aikman was a Cowboy, yet.

"People say it would be a mistake to take him now without exploring all the possibilities of having a first choice," Landry said. "Troy is a definite prospect, but we ought to look overall into what is best for the team."

"We've got plenty of time to make the pick. We have to finish off some things from last season this month. Then we have the (workout) combines in February."

"I'd say we should be ready to make a decision around then. Once we do make our choice and if it is Troy then we'd like to sign him as soon as we could to get him into quarterback school."

On another matter, Landry said nothing was imminent on possible changes in his assistant coaching staff.

"The number one priority right now is to see who the new owner will be," Landry said. "We'd like to wait and see what the owners have to say."

Aikman will play in the Aloha Bowl and the Japan Bowl, then will pick an agent.

The Cowboys will have a representative, probably chief scout Gil Brandt, at each one of those games.

Landry will attend a workout combine in Indianapolis in February to watch Aikman and other prospective draft choices.

Washington Drills Charlotte, 109-86

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LANDOVER, Md. — With the Washington Bullets leading by 29 points at halftime, coach Wes Unseld knew better than to meddle with the momentum by talking to his players in the locker room.

"I didn't say anything. We were up 29 points, the worst thing in the world is for me to start coaching," Unseld said after the Bullets routed the Charlotte Hornets 109-86 Wednesday night.

The Bullets wasted no time opening a big lead against the expansion Hornets, who like Washington went into the game with an 8-19 record.

The Bullets scored the game's first eight points, led 12-2 at 7:53 of the first period and 22-8 with 5:17 left in the quarter.

The Hornets scored only 10 points in the second quarter, and just 30 in the first half, both lows for the franchise. They went more than seven minutes in the second period without scoring a point and trailed 59-30 at halftime.

"It's frustrating, but you can't stop playing," said Charlotte's Kelly Tripucka, who went 3-for-17 and scored only once in 11 tries in the first half. "You have to keep going and hope to turn it around."

The Hornets shot a dismal 35.5 percent for the game, making 11-of-25 from the field in the third quarter. In the opening period they made just 8-of-24, and connected on 5-of-19 in the second quarter.

Despite Washington's lopsided lead, Unseld said he worried about a Charlotte comeback. "You know sometime during the course of the game they're gonna start making those shots, so we wanted to put them in as big a hole as possible."

"At the beginning, you worry about games like these, because when things come easy the intensity level drops, and when it comes to a situation where we have to stop them we haven't been able to do it," Unseld said.

"We jumped on them before they could get started," said Washington's Darrell Walker. "It's happened to us a few times, too. Our offensive intensity went down a little in the third quarter, but overall we played a pretty good game."

The Bullets kept the pressure on in the second half, with Charlotte unable to get closer than 20 points after the intermission.

That enabled Unseld to give everyone some playing time. Terry Catledge led the Bullets with 31 minutes. Catledge also led the Bullets in points (21) and shared rebounding honors with Walker (11). The Bullets had six players score in double figures, including Jeff Malone with 19.

Kurt Rambis led the Hornets with 16 points.

Will the lopsided victory be a morale booster for the struggling Bullets?

"This is our first one," Unseld said with a laugh. "We don't have much to compare it with."

Knicks.....105
Nets.....96

Trent Tucker's 3-point shot capped a 20-0 fourth-quarter spurt that boosted the Knicks past the Nets 105-96 Wednesday night as New York held its cross-river rival scoreless for a stretch of 7:04.

During the Knicks' spurt, New Jersey missed two free throws and five shots from the field. The Nets also made five turnovers, once on a 24-second violation and another time on a lane violation during a jump ball.

The Nets, who had led since the end of the first quarter, scored the first seven points of the final period, taking an 87-70 lead on a three-point play by Dennis Hopson with 9:27 to go.

Then came the Knicks, who just the night before had rallied from a 15-point deficit to defeat Boston.

Patrick Ewing began the New York comeback with a slam dunk. The Knicks tied the game at 87 when Ewing, who had nine points in the run and 13 in the quarter, sank a running shot across the lane with 2:58 to go.

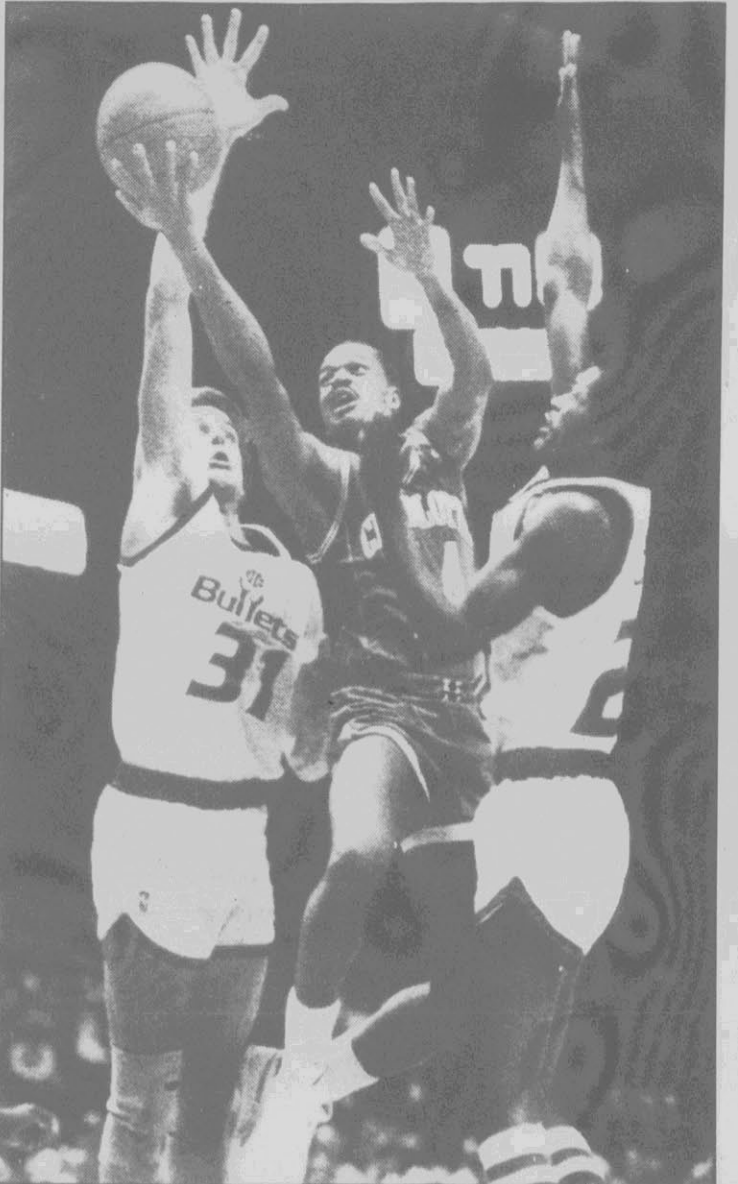

After the Nets lost the ball on the jump ball violation, Tucker hit his 3-pointer from the top of the key for a 90-87 edge.

Ewing led New York with 30 points, while Jackson had 21, including eight in the final quarter in which the Knicks outscored the Nets 35-16.

Hinson topped New Jersey with 18 points.

Suns 106, Celtics 104
Led by Tom Chambers, Phoenix outscored Boston 10-3 in the last 2½ minutes as the Suns snapped a nine-season Boston Garden losing streak against the Celtics. The Suns have won seven of their last eight games, while Boston has lost five of its last six.

Whitehurst Named Regional Officer

GRIFTON — William E. Whitehurst of Grifton has been elected to serve as the Southeast Regional Commissioner of the International Babe Ruth League program.

As regional commissioner, he will serve on the International Board of Babe Ruth League, Inc.

Whitehurst, 53, has worked with the Babe Ruth program since 1964, serving as a coach, manager, league president and secretary, district, area and state commissioner. He and his wife, Mary, are the parents of three children and have three grandchildren. Whitehurst is employed by the Dupont Co.

UNC-Wilmington Announces Suspensions

WILMINGTON (AP) — Senior guards Ricky Griffin and Kenny Mickens have been dismissed from the North Carolina-Wilmington basketball team and two others have been suspended for one game. Coach Robert McPherson said Wednesday.

Freshman center Ed Chesney and sophomore forward Major Wiggins will miss Thursday's game with Richmond, McPherson said.

McPherson said the actions were taken after the players violated unspecified team rules.

Griffin had played in three games this year, averaging 4.3 points and 3.0 rebounds. Mickens played one minute in a 68-66 loss to Old Dominion Dec. 7.

Chesney has played in all 10 games, averaging 3.5 points and 1.9 rebounds. Wiggins started the first eight games, averaging 4.0 points and 3.2 rebounds.

Earlier, freshman Matt Fish was dismissed for a violation of team policies.

West Montgomery Hoop Coach Suspended

TROY (AP) — West Montgomery High School's varsity basketball coach was suspended from his job last week, more than a month after he was charged with possession of cocaine.

School officials acknowledged Wednesday that they delayed action on the matter, in part because of the team's plans to play in a holiday basketball tournament last week.

Last Friday — the day after the tournament ended — the coach was suspended and the Montgomery County Board of Education met in secret about the suspension.

Bobby Martin, 32, a teacher and coach at West Montgomery High since 1983, was suspended from his job for 90 days with pay, effective Monday. Montgomery County Schools Superintendent Larry Ivey said Wednesday. The suspension came a day after Martin led the conference-winning team to third place in a holiday invitational tournament.

On Dec. 2 — West Montgomery's basketball season opener — Montgomery Sheriff's officers charged Martin with a misdemeanor count of possession of cocaine. The cocaine, less than a gram, was among Martin's belongings during a routine search at the Montgomery County Jail in October after Martin was charged with assaulting a female, Sheriff's Maj. W.A. Walser said.

On Dec. 5, Ivey gave the school board a report on Martin's case in a closed session that lasted only a few minutes, he said. He told the board he didn't believe there was enough information on which to take any personnel action, Ivey said Wednesday.

Murphy Named As Cincinnati Coach

CINCINNATI (AP) — Tim Murphy, who turned around the football program at the University of Maine, was named today as the head football coach at the University of Cincinnati.

Murphy, described as a disciplinarian and a motivator by new UC athletic director Rick Taylor, had worked as an assistant coach for three years under Taylor at Boston University.

Murphy said he would concentrate his recruiting efforts in Cincinnati and Ohio.

Murphy said he was concerned about Cincinnati's NCAA probation and said he would work to improve the program's image nationally. But he added that he was troubled that he will only be allowed 70 scholarship players rather than the normal 90.

Murphy, who has been the head football coach at Maine the last two seasons, was one of two finalists for the job vacated by Dave Currey.

Cincinnati has had six straight losing seasons in football and has been put on NCAA probation for violations in its football and men's basketball programs. Currey resigned after his fifth losing season and after the NCAA sanctions were announced.

Maine has never been on NCAA probation, one of UC's criteria for its new head coach.

Murphy compiled a 15-8 record in his two seasons at Maine. He and Western Kentucky Coach Dave Roberts were identified as the two finalists for the UC job.

He inherits a program that was 3-8 last season and has not had a winning football season since 1982 when Mike Gottfried was head coach. Currey was 19-45 in five seasons after coming to Cincinnati in 1983 from Long Beach State.

College Football Attendance Declining

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — College football attendance fell by 888,528 last season to its lowest level since 1980 and the NCAA cited unrestricted televising of games as a factor.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association said Wednesday that 1988 attendance — 35,574,143 at the nation's 680 four-year colleges — marked a decline of 2.44 percent from 1987.

The biggest previous decline — since the NCAA started official record-keeping in 1957 — occurred in 1985, when attendance fell by 340,157 or 0.93 percent.

The NCAA said college football attendance has edged downward from a record 36,652,179 since the U.S. Supreme Court struck down the NCAA's television plan in 1984, allowing unrestricted televising of college games.

The NCAA said a firm that made estimates of college football attendance before 1957 found two bigger declines than the 1988 drop — in 1950-51, before the advent of restricted televising of college games. After that, the NCAA reported, college football attendance rose for 20 straight years and nearly doubled during that span.

Every NCAA division was down in total attendance last season for the first time in 32 years of NCAA record-keeping. Because of the slightly smaller number of games played last year, NCAA Division II and non-NCAA teams recorded slight increases in average attendance per game.

The top five NCAA Division I-A schools in average attendance were Michigan, which increase by 332 per game to 104,801; Tennessee, up 3,767 to 91,946; Ohio State, up 867 to 86,162; Penn State, down 242 to 84,140, and Clemson, up 6,434 to 81,750.

National champion Notre Dame was 24th with average attendance of 59,075, which represented no change from last year. Runner-up Miami was 28th at 53,106, down 815 per game.

There were a few bright spots in attendance. The Pac-10 Conference and I-A Eastern Independents set records in attendance and average attendance — 3,058,637 and 50,977 for the Pac-10 and 2,384,082 and 44,983 for the independents.

Worley And Henderson Decide To Go Pro

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Tim Worley and Keith Henderson, whose legs carried Georgia into the 1988 Gator Bowl, are going pro.

The two running backs, redshirted in 1987 after being dismissed from school for academic reasons, announced the move Wednesday.

They will be eligible for the NFL draft in the spring since that is when their freshman class graduates.

Worley, a 6-2, 220-pound tailback from Lumberton, N.C., led Georgia in rushing this year with 191 carries for 1,216 yards, fifth best in school history. In his career, Worley rushed for 2,038 yards, becoming only the seventh back in Georgia history to go over the 2,000-yard mark.

Worley is expected to be one of the first running backs taken in the NFL draft.

Henderson, a 6-2, 202-pound fullback from Cartersville, was third in rushing (394 yards and three touchdowns) and second in receiving (20 catches for 297 yards and two touchdowns) for the Bulldogs in 1988. He ended his career with 273 carries for 1,648 yards and 44 catches for 595 yards.

The two players said they delayed their announcement until after Ray Goff, the Bulldogs' running backs coach, was chosen Monday to succeed Vince Dooley as head coach.

Bradshaw Leads Nominees

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CANTON, Ohio — Terry Bradshaw, who quarterbacked the Pittsburgh Steelers to four Super Bowl victories, heads a list of 15 finalists for induction into the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Bradshaw, twice named as the most valuable player in the Super Bowl, was joined on the list by Mel Blount, a cornerback for the Steelers from 1970 through 1983, and wide receiver Lynn Swann, one of Bradshaw's favorite targets for nine seasons.

Joining the three former Steelers are Kansas City Chiefs defensive tackle Buck Buchanan; Al Davis, former coach and current managing general partner of the Los Angeles and Oakland Raiders; Minnesota Vikings defensive end Carl Eller; former Vikings coach Bud Grant; Miami Dolphins quarterback Bob Griese; linebacker Ted Hendricks, who played for the Baltimore Colts, Green Bay Packers and Raiders; Packers defensive tackle Henry Jordan; Browns running back Leroy Kelly; Los Angeles Rams offensive guard Tom Mack; Baltimore Colts tight end John Mackey; Raiders offensive tackle Art Shell, and Packers safety Willie Wood.

Bradshaw, Blount and Hendricks are eligible for election for the first time.

Two members of Pittsburgh's "Steel Curtain" defense entered the Hall of Fame the last two years, lineman Joe Greene and linebacker Jack Ham.

Bradshaw, who played at Louisiana Tech, spent all 14 of his pro seasons with the Steelers. The first player chosen in the 1970 NFL draft, he completed 2,025 of 3,901 passes for 27,989 yards and 212 touchdowns. He also ran for 32 touchdowns. Bradshaw, MVP of the 1979 and 1980 Super Bowls, holds Super Bowl records with 932 yards passing and nine touchdown passes. He also played in six AFC championship games and two Pro Bowls.

Blount missed only one game in 14 seasons, led the NFL in interceptions in 1975 with 11 and finished his career with 57, seventh all-time. He recovered 13 fumbles, returning two for touchdowns. He played in six conference title games, five Pro Bowls and the four Steelers' victories in the Super Bowl.

Swann caught 336 passes for 5,462 yards and 51 touchdowns, and was MVP of the 1976 Super Bowl with four receptions for 161 yards, including a 64-yard catch for the game-winning touchdown. He holds Super Bowl records with 16 catches for 364 yards. He also played in four Pro Bowls.

Buchanan, a 6-7, 274-pound pass-rusher, batted down 16 passes in 1967. The first overall pick in the 1963 AFL draft, the Grambling standout played in six AFL all-star games, two Pro Bowls, two AFL title games and two Super Bowls.

Davis is the only person to hold positions as a scout, assistant coach, head coach, general manager, league commissioner and team owner. He spent three years as coach of the Raiders, with a 23-16-3 record, and was named AFL coach of the year. He was named AFL commissioner in 1966 and presided over the AFL-NFL merger two months later. Under Davis, the Raiders won Super Bowls in 1977, 1981 and 1984.

More recently, he engineered the controversial move of the Raiders from Oakland to Los Angeles in 1982.

During Eller's 15 years with the Vikings, Minnesota won 10 division titles, the 1969 NFL title, NFC championships in 1973, 1974 and 1976 and went to four Super Bowls. Eller, a University of Minnesota graduate, was a cornerstone of a Vikings defense that was known as the "Purple People Eaters."

He was credited with recovered 23 fumbles, third-highest total ever, played in four Pro Bowls and was named the NFL's top defensive player in 1971.

Grant coached the Vikings to 168 victories, including 10 in postseason, to rank seventh all-time in the league. He won four championships in 10 years with Winnipeg of the Canadian Football League and then led the Vikings to Super Bowls in 1970, 1974, 1975 and 1977. He played six years of pro football before embarking on a coaching career.

Griese completed 1,926 of 3,429 passes for 25,092 yards and 192 touchdowns in 14 seasons with the Dolphins. He was selected NFL-AFC player of the year in 1971. The former Purdue University quarterback missed eight games due to injuries during Miami's perfect 1972 season, but returned to guide the team to the AFC championship and a 14-7 victory over Washington in the 1973 Super Bowl to complete a 17-0 season.

Hendricks, a 6-7, 235-pounder from Miami, Fla., played with the Colts from 1969 to 1973, the Packers in 1974 and the Raiders from 1975 to 1983. He played in 215 consecutive regular-season games, with 26 interceptions and 16 fumble recoveries. He scored a touchdown and was credited with four safeties. He played in eight Pro Bowl games, seven AFC championships and four Super Bowls.

Jordan spent 1957 and 1958 with the Cleveland Browns before moving to the Packers in 1959. Over the next 11 seasons, he played in four Pro Bowls, seven NFL championships and the 1967 and 1968 Super Bowls as a fixture at right defensive tackle. Jordan died in 1977 at age 42.

Kelly, a backup his first two seasons behind superstar Jim Brown, took over the starting job in 1966 and rushed for more than 1,000 yards the next three years. He led the NFL in rushing in 1967 and 1968 and finished his career with 1,727 carries for 7,274 yards and 74 touchdowns, as well as 190 pass receptions for 2,231 yards and 13 touchdowns.

Mack, a 250-pound guard from Michigan, spent 13 seasons with the Rams, never missing a game while playing in 184 consecutive games. He played in three NFL Pro Bowls and eight Pro Bowls.

Mackey, a powerful 225-pounder, was the prototype tight end, a powerful blocker and fleet receiver. In a 10-year career, he caught 331 passes for 5,236 yards and 38 touchdowns.

LaBradford Smith's driving layup with 2:21 left broke Louisville's scoring drought, and the game was nip-and-tuck the rest of the way.

Virginia pulled within 71-69 on Brent Dabbs' 3-pointer with 1:10 remaining before Williams made the clinching free throws.

Stith's rebound basket with six seconds left pulled the Cavaliers within 73-71, but Louisville's Pervis Ellison made one of two free throws three seconds later to end the scoring.

Louisville improved to 8-2 with its eighth straight victory, while Virginia, 7-4, has lost three in a row.

"All you ever want is a chance to win against a team like Louisville," said Virginia assistant coach Dave Odom. "But it's still a loss. We didn't come to lose. Virginia never does that."

Odom was filling in for head coach Terry Holland, who was in a Virginia hospital recuperating from abdominal surgery.

"I think he would have been proud of his players and his coaches," Odom said afterward.

Louisville coach Denny Crum said he thought the Cardinals played well except for their five-minute scoreless stretch late in the game.

"We went to sleep and made a lot of silly mistakes," Crum said. "We took some bad shots, missed some free throws and everything went against us. One thing we've got to learn to do is play 40 minutes."

"They just did a good job of stopping the things we do well. Fortunately, we won," Williams said.

Williams and Ellison led Louisville with 14 points apiece, while Tony Kimbro and Kenny Payne each added 10.

Stith and Richard Morgan each scored 16 points for Virginia and Matt Blundin added 10.

Virginia took its only lead at 19-18 on Curtis Williams' inside shot with 10:36 left in the first half before Louisville scored the next 11 points to take control.

Everick Sullivan capped the Cardinal outburst with consecutive dunks, the last a reverse slam off the fastbreak, to make it 29-19 with six minutes remaining in the half. Louisville led 41-30 at halftime.

ATLANTA — The last time Georgia Tech's Dennis Scott and East Carolina's Gus Hill were together on a basketball court was 1984 when they were teammates at Flint Hill Academy.

At the time, Hill was a senior while Scott was a sophomore phenom. They played together for two years and each season their team was ranked in USA Today's Top 10.

During their careers, each was named MVP of Las Vegas Holiday Prep Classic, one of the most prestigious prep tournaments in the country.

Since they were teammates, the two have gone different ways. Scott became one of the most sought-after high school players in the country and was the freshman of the year in the Atlantic Coast Conference last year.

Hill overcame a knee injury his freshman year, sat out two seasons and last year averaged 19 points a game and was the Colonial Athletic Association's rookie of the year and an all-conference selection.

As opponents, Scott's Yellow Jackets took a 92-69 win. Hill had 22 points, a season high, while Scott had 15.

Blue Edwards had 29 points against Georgia Tech, his fifth-straight game over 25 points. Over the last four games, Edwards has shot 63 percent from the field. He was 11-18 against the Yellow Jackets.

Georgia Tech's Brian Oliver is in his first year of full-time point guard duty and scored 24 points against the Pirates.

"We're asking Brian Oliver to be our leader," Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins said. "It's going to be a tough challenge to see if he can get us over this hump."

Oliver, at 6-4, was approximately as tall as ECU's front line of 6-5 Stanley Love and 6-5 Blue Edwards and 6-3 Gus Hill.

ECU tried to take a page out of the playbook of Richmond, a fellow CAA member, that has beaten Georgia Tech three of the last four times.

The Pirates tried to keep a man on Scott at all times while also changing its defenses every few trips down the floor to try and confuse the Yellow Jackets.

In the first half, ECU stayed even, but Tom Hammonds, the Yellow Jacket's 6-9 power forward, started taking over inside and forced ECU to run some different defenses designed to slow him down.

"Before we went out there, the whole thing was respect," ECU swingman Reed Lose said. "We had confidence in ourselves that we could give them a good game."

"If they got things going they could have beaten us by 30, but if we played smart, and we played smart at times, we were still in the game. We put so much emphasis on Scott we forgot our other responsibilities with Hammonds."

Georgia Tech...

plays well they play well. We didn't think he could catch it and shoot it as well as he does."

Oliver scored 19 of his 24 points in the second half.

"They were laying off me and I had the open shot," Oliver said. "Coach (Cremins) has always told me to play natural. That's the one thing I've been working on. That's been one of the biggest improvements for me."

ECU struggled early on and fell by as many as 14 at 24-10 when Hammonds scored inside with 9:48 remaining.

But the Pirates, behind 10 points by Edwards, rallied to get back in the game. A three-point basket by Edwards made it 24-13 and on the next possession he caught an alley-oop from Reed Lose and dunked it to make it 24-15. He added another three points and then a two-pointer sandwiched around a layup by Kevin Staples and a short jumper by Gus Hill to make it 31-24. Hill then hit two jumpers in a row to make 31-28, but that was as close as ECU would get.

"We tried to change defenses and confuse them and tried to get them to stand around," Steele said. "In the second half, they came down and recognized things better."

"In the second half, once they get ahead, they're tough to come back on."

Hill added 22 points for the Pirates but no other players scored in double figures.

ECU falls to 6-5 and returns to action Saturday at William and Mary in its Colonial Athletic Association opener.

NBA Results...

Chambers scored 33 points, while the Celtics were led by Kevin McHale with 27.

Pacers 116, Hawks 113

Wayman Tisdale scored 24 points, including eight in a fourth-period run that gave Indiana the lead for good, as the Pacers snapped a nine-game losing streak by defeating Atlanta.

Indiana gave interim coach George Irvine a victory in what may have been his last game leading the club. The Pacers today were expected to name Detroit Pistons assistant Dick Versace as their new head coach.

Atlanta, which had a five-game winning streak snapped, led 97-96 before Chuck Person tied the game and John Long's 3-pointer gave the Pacers the lead for good, 100-97, with 7:10 remaining.

Dominique Wilkins had 29 points and had 10 rebounds for Atlanta.

Bucks 110, Clippers 102

Terry Cummings scored 27 points and Milwaukee fought off a fourth-quarter rally to defeat the Clippers. The Bucks led 87-68 after three quarters before Los Angeles put together a 14-4 spurt and cut the deficit to 91-82. Quintin Dailey and Tom Garrick, who had 10 points each in the final quarter, reduced the Bucks' lead to 97-90 before Milwaukee rebuilt it to 120 points.

Ken Norman led the Clippers with 24 points.

The Clippers played the final three quarters without rookie forward Danny Manning, who hyperextended his right knee while driving for a layup.

Lakers 133, Trail Blazers 120

Mychal Thompson scored 27 points and James Worthy had 25 as the Lakers remained the only unbeaten home team in the NBA. The two-time defending league champions, who have lost their last seven road games, have won all 11 games at The Forum this season and 18 regular-season games in a row.

Clyde Drexler led Portland with 33 points, 11 rebounds and 10 assists.

Warriors 109, Heat 100

Chris Mullin scored 26 points and Golden State blew most of a 23-point lead before defeating the expansion Heat. The Warriors led by at least 13 points until the fourth quarter, when a Miami rally cut the deficit to 104-100 on a 3-point goal by Kevin Edwards with 1:04 left.

But the Heat, who were led by Rony Seikaly's 20 points, didn't score again.

Miller's 22 Points Leads Pitt By Syracuse, 81-76

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

When the week started, there were eight undefeated Division I college basketball teams. Half came from the Big East. Now, half of that group is no longer undefeated.

Fifth-ranked Georgetown lost to undefeated and 10th-ranked Seton Hall on Tuesday night and on Wednesday night, Pittsburgh beat No. 2 Syracuse 81-76 to knock the Orangemen from the ranks of the unbeaten.

The Big East, which still has Providence on the list of unbeaten, is living up to its reputation as one of the toughest conferences in the country.

"It was a big game for us. I don't know how many people believed in us," said Pitt sophomore guard Sean Miller, who led the Panthers with a career-high 22 points. "The season was on the brink. This shows that we can beat anybody on a given night, but we can also lose to anyone."

Pitt had showed it could lose to anyone early in the season as the Panthers entered the Syracuse game with a 6-4 record that included losses to Duquesne and Siena.

Pitt coach Paul Evans credited Miller with giving his team the chance to hand Syracuse its first loss in 14 games.

"Sean controlled the tempo offensively. When we had the break he went with it. When we didn't, he pulled it back out and still got us the good shot," Evans said.

"I think Miller hurt us more than I would have liked," Syracuse coach Jim Boheim said. "He's a good shooter and runs the ballclub well."

Pitt had managed a 40-28 halftime lead and Syracuse started the second half with a 16-5 burst. But Miller made one of his four 3-pointers on the night and the Panthers started an 8-0 run and were never headed.

"We came out and controlled the tempo," Miller said. "We had a lot of opportunities on offense. That's what we had to do, especially when the rallies came in the second half."

Sophomores Jason Matthews and Bobby Martin added 18 and 13 points, respectively, for Pittsburgh, while Syracuse was led by Derrick Coleman's 19 points. The Orangemen were held to their lowest scoring first half of the season. They made just 15 of 35 free throws and shot a season-low 42 percent from the field.

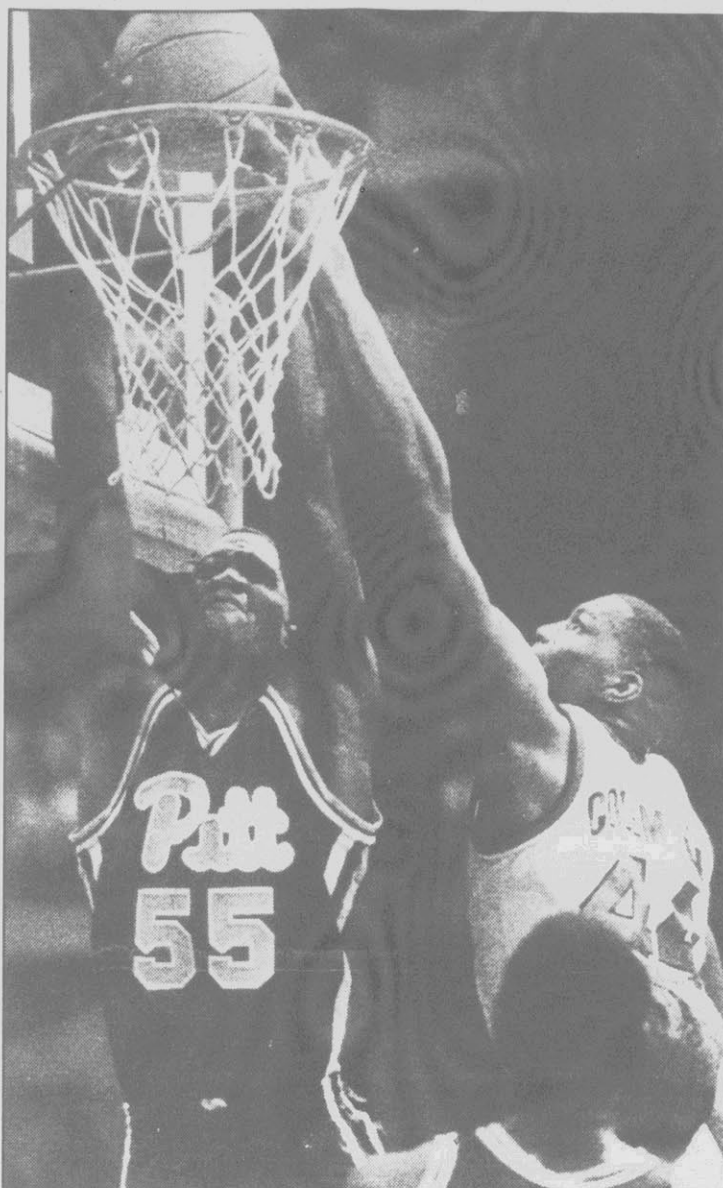

The victory extended Evans' Carrier Dome winning streak over Syracuse to four games. Evans' Navy team defeated Syracuse in 1986 — in the second round of the NCAA tournament — and Pittsburgh has beaten Syracuse in its last three meetings at the Dome.

Indiana 75, No. 14 Ohio State 65

The Hoosiers won their eighth in a row in the Big Ten Conference opener for both teams. Indiana, 11-4, trailed by two points at halftime but scored the first eight points of the second half to take the lead for good.

Jay Edwards had 24 points to lead the Hoosiers, while Jay Burson led Ohio State, 9-3, with 25.

The Buckeyes cut Indiana's lead to 48-45, but Joe Hillman and Edwards responded with consecutive 3-pointers for a 54-45 lead with 6:35 to play.

Syracuse center Derrick Coleman fouls Pitt's Bobby Martin

"We had a couple of chances that didn't go our way, and the two 3-pointers hurt us," Ohio State coach Gary Williams said. "I thought our timing was off on offense. This was just one game. You have 18, that's why it's a tough conference."

No. 15 Florida State 113, Rider 67

Tharon Mayes and George McCLOUD each scored 19 points to lead Florida State, 9-1, as six Seminoles scored in double figures. Jay Bizyak led Rider, 3-8, with 14 points. The game was the first for Florida State since suffering its first loss of the season last week to Villanova in the championship game of the Red Lobster Classic.

No. 17 Tennessee 84, Auburn 73

Dyron Nix did it all for the Volunteers. The 6-foot-7 forward scored 29 points, six on 3-pointers and 10 on dunks, as Tennessee won its fifth in a row to improve to 9-1.

Auburn, which committed 25 turnovers and made just 26 of 67 shots from the field, was led by Kelvin Ardister's 22 points as the Tigers fell to 7-3 overall and 0-2 in the Southeastern Conference.

Kentucky 76, No. 20 Georgia 65

Georgia's first game this season as ranked team happened to come at Rupp Arena and that's a tough place to play even if Kentucky is suffering through a rough season.

The Wildcats, 6-7, beat Georgia behind the 20 points of Reggie Hanson and 18 each from LeRon Ellis and Chris Mills. It was the first SEC game for Kentucky, while the Bulldogs fell to 9-3 overall and 1-1 in the conference.

Freshman Litterial Green led Georgia, which committed 21 turnovers despite Kentucky being in a zone, with 17 points.

Other Games

Ball State remained undefeated in 11 games with a 65-63 victory over Western Michigan. Curtis Kidd's layup with five seconds to go gave the Cardinals the victory.

Murray Williams drove the length of the court and scored as time expired to give Connecticut a 57-55 victory over Villanova, which had tied the game with eight seconds left on a 3-pointer by Kenny Wilson. It was Connecticut's first victory over Villanova in 15 games.

Mike Vreeswyk scored 24 of his 26 points on 3-pointers as Temple beat city rival La Salle 67-57 and evened its record through eight games.

John Taft scored 29 points to lead Marshall to a 108-104 victory over Virginia Tech, which was led by Binbo Coles' 29 points.

Strange, Lyle Are Listed As Favorites In Opening Event

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CARLSBAD, Calif. — Sandy Lyle and Curtis Strange hold hopes rather than expectations for success in the Tournament of Champions.

"I'm not really rusty, but I'm not real sharp either," Strange said before teeing off today in the kickoff event on the PGA Tour schedule.

"I feel good on the golf course, but I don't feel like I'm playing particularly well right now," said Strange, who edged out Lyle for 1988 Player of the Year honors in the final event of the season.

"I really don't expect much this week," Lyle said. "I just want to try to get the concentration back, try to get it in the red numbers and take it from there."

Despite the disclaimers, the two men who dominated world golf last year rank as the players to beat in the exclusive gathering of winners only from the 1988 tour.

Strange won four times last year, including the U.S. Open and was the first to go over $1 million in official single-season earnings on the American tour.

Lyle, a Scot, won the Masters and two other American tournaments and had more than $1 million in worldwide earnings.

"I was very tired at the end of the year; could hardly put one foot in front of the other," the globe-trotting Lyle said.

"But I haven't touched a club in five weeks, ate a lot of Christmas pudding, looked after of my pub (in England), collected a lot of awards."

"Now I'm eager to play again; keen to get back at it," he said.

Strange had a more modest break, less than two weeks, between the end of his 1988 campaign and the start of this season.

"I'm trying to be careful not to overdo," he said. "I played until the middle of December, but most of the time it was play one and take a week off."

"I'm not really rusty, just not real sharp. But that can change. That can change quickly," he said. "I'd like to have a good tournament, get off to a good start."

Some other leading contenders in the 32-man field chasing a $135,000 first prize are Ben Crenshaw and Mark Calcavecchia, both of whom played extremely well at the end of last year. Australian Greg Norman and PGA champion Jeff Sluman, one of 11 making his first start in this event.

British Open champion Seve Ballesteros of Spain is not competing. Larry Nelson withdrew with an ankle injury.

In a separate but simultaneous competition for winners from the Seniors Tour, Arnold Palmer head a 14-man field that also includes defending champion Dave Hill.

ESPN will provide national television coverage of play today and Friday. ABC will cover the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

New Hogan Tour To Offer 30 Golf Events

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CARLSBAD, Calif. — There's a major difference, Deane Beman said, in the new Ben Hogan Tour and earlier, unsuccessful secondary professional golf tours.

"We recognize, and the Hogan Company recognizes, that this is not going to be a money-making situation. We are ready to go ahead on that basis," the PGA Tour commissioner said Wednesday in announcing the new $3 million, 30-event professional tour.

The new tour — designed for younger professionals not eligible for the regular PGA Tour, veterans not yet eligible for the Seniors Tour and PGA club pros — will be in operation by March or April of 1990, Beman said.

Beman said a five-year agreement has been reached between the PGA Tour and the Hogan Company, a golf-equipment manufacturer, to jointly fund the new venture.

The Hogan Company will underwrite the tour's $100,000-per-event prize money, and the PGA Tour will assume "upwards of $1 million a year" in administrative and support costs, Beman said.

Details of organization, eligibility requirements, format and locations have not yet been completed, Beman said. Tournament sites have not yet been selected but will be concentrated in areas not now visited by the PGA or Seniors Tours or the LPGA, he said.

Tyson-Bruno Fight Gaining Lots Of Publicity In London

LONDON — They're screening it in movie houses, in theaters, night clubs and concert halls.

It'll be even bigger than the Ali-Frazier "Thrilla in Manila," while the 1987 Hagler-Leonard clash "pales into significance," according to organizers.

Not since England won soccer's World Cup in 1966 has a sports event captured the imagination of so many people in Britain like "Big Frank" Bruno's world title fight with undisputed heavyweight champion Mike Tyson.

As Bruno flew to the United States to prepare for the Feb. 25 showdown at the Las Vegas Hilton, television representatives outlined the massive interest being shown in the challenger's homeland, where the contest begins at 3 a.m.

"You've really got to be a Bruno fan to come out at that time but we're thinking in terms of 80,000 people, maybe more," said Geoff Potts, Bruno's TV agent. "From the interest that has already been shown, we know that Hagler versus Leonard pales into significance against this."

Potts, who is putting the fight on live at closed circuit venues throughout Britain and Ireland, said as many as 40 indoor centers were being considered.

The contest also is being screened live on satellite TV by Sky Television, and on tape delay — twice — by the British Broadcasting Corp.

"We anticipate a massive audience for what is the biggest sporting event for many years," said Jonathan Martin, BBC's head of sport.

Promoter Jarvis Astaire said another 2,000 Britons were expected to fly to Las Vegas to support Bruno in the 10,000-seat Las Vegas Hilton arena.

As he left London carrying the hopes of a nation, Bruno was adamant he was not on a mission impossible.

After all the problems suffered by Tyson in recent months — physical, emotional and psychological — Bruno confidently predicted the time was right to take out the champion.

"I'm going to stop him," Bruno said. "That's my ambition for 1989. It's difficult to lose respect for him. He's gone through so many different things. But he doesn't feel sorry for me, so why should I feel sorry for him?"

Bruno, the World Boxing Association's top-ranked challenger for over a year, will not have fought for 16 months when he takes on the undisputed, unbeaten champion.

The Briton will earn $3.64 million dollars.

Bruno's manager, Terry Lawless, said Tyson's split with his trainer, Kevin Rooney, was the most serious of all the champion's recent upheavals.

"Trainer and fighter is a very special relationship," said Lawless, who has taken four British fighters to world titles as a manager. "It's got to be very intimidating for anyone who trains Tyson now."

The meeting of the ferocious American champion and the big-punching-but-modest British challenger followed months of hard bargaining and five postponements.

Lawless said he could not imagine there could be another delay, so close to fight day.

"I would think it's gone as far as it can go," he said. "If anything more goes wrong with Tyson, it's my opinion that I don't think the world would stand any more. Nor would the TV networks. He's got to go through with it."

Bruno said he was "210 percent" in better shape than he was for his only other world title fight 2 1/2 years ago. Then, he was knocked out in the 11th round at London's Wembley Arena by Tim Witherspoon.

It was one of only two defeats in Bruno's 34 pro fights, most of which have ended in quick knockout victories — just like Tyson.

"Before, I was trying to get involved in everything and took a lot of pressure," Bruno said. "I've been there once and I'm getting a second bite at the cherry. I'm not worried by those who say I don't stand a chance. I'm really looking forward to February 25."

Cougars Roll To A Win Over Pam Pack

WASHINGTON — Goldsboro High School bombed Washington for nine three-point baskets and rolled up a 63-48 basketball victory in the non-conference meeting Wednesday night.

The Cougars jumped off early and pushed out to a 14-6 lead in the opening quarter of the game. Washington rallied, however, and cut the Goldsboro lead back to 24-21 at intermission.

In the third period, however, Goldsboro again pulled away, building its lead out to 49-36. The Cougars held off any Pam Pack rally hopes in the final period.

Quintin Miller led Goldsboro with 23 points while Gary Best added 14. Rod Gorham led Washington with 13 while Mike Moore added 11.

The loss drops Washington to 6-4 on the year.

In the girls' game, Washington failed to score in the third quarter, then couldn't quite pull off its rally in the fourth, falling to Goldsboro, 43-36.

Goldsboro inched out to a 9-7 lead in the first period and took a 15-12 lead into halftime. In the third period, Washington's failure to score let the Lady Cougars build its lead to 24-12. Washington outfit Goldsboro, 24-19, but was too far back.

Ginny Helms led Goldsboro with 17 points while Hycynthia Helms added 16. Allison Bron had 11 and Crystal Lupton, 10, for Washington, which falls to 3-5.

Washington plays at home against Havelock on Friday in its first Coastal Conference action.

New 'Davy Crockett' Gives Contrast To Parker's Role

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Tim Dunigan was an interested onlooker when the television series "Lucas Tanner," about a former baseball player turned teacher, was filmed near his home.

"They filmed some of it in Webster Groves, Mo., where I grew up," said Dunigan. "I was interested because I wanted to be a baseball player. I never thought about acting."

Nevertheless, Dunigan did begin acting at Webster College in St. Louis. He soon joined the St. Louis Repertory Co.

Last year, Dunigan won out over more than 1,000 actors for the role of the new Davy Crockett in NBC's "The Magical World of Disney." The role was originated by Fess Parker in the Frontierland segment of "Disneyland" in 1954-55.

The latest chapter will be seen Jan. 15. Crockett, who saves a young Creek Indian and becomes his guardian spirit, is caught in a moral dilemma when the Army plans to attack the youth's village during a sacred ceremony.

"My Davy Crockett is certainly different from Fess Parker's," Dunigan said during a brief visit in Los Angeles. The show is filmed in British Columbia.

"Fess Parker will always be Davy Crockett to a lot of people. I don't think people are going to forget him. I know I grew up watching him. But I think people can watch me and enjoy me as Davy Crockett, too. Actually, since I was born in 1955, I think of Fess Parker more as 'Daniel Boone' (whom Parker played in the 1960s). The Davy Crockett I see was more of a Will Rogers of his time. He was a storyteller who liked to sit around and tell good stories."

"I think people want to see the legend. Still, we have to give it more reality. So there we are out in the woods. We have to tell a story that both children and adults can enjoy. It's the hardest thing I've ever done physically."

At times, the role has called for Dunigan to run up a mountain wearing soaking wet leather clothing and carrying a heavy musket.

Dunigan's Crockett is younger than Parker's, but the major difference is that in the past 30 years, views regarding Indians, ethnic minorities and women have changed. The upcoming episode reflects that change. In the past, it's doubtful that Crockett would have been sensitive to Indian sacred ceremonies.

"He did his share of Indian fighting," said Dunigan, "but later when he was in Congress he tried to help Indians. I'm out in the woods. He's a hero. That's the way I play him. He's exciting. He tells you straight."

Dunigan first came to Los Angeles for a pilot called "Century City," in which he played Richard Kiley's son. "I'd been doing musicals and had never been in front of a camera before," he said. "You know what I liked about it? You could do it over again."

Dunigan's last show was the syndicated series "Captain Powers and the Soldiers of the Future," which was also made in Canada. In 1983 he was baby sitter to an orangutan in "Mr. Smith." This monkey business didn't last very long. On "Wizards and Warriors," he was Prince Dirk Blackpool's incompetent brother, Geoffrey.

He was also the original Templeton "Face" Peck in "The A-Team." He appeared in the pilot, but was replaced by Dirk Benedict in the long-running series.

"They said I was too young and too tall," said Dunigan, who's 6-foot-5. "I look even younger on camera than I am. So it was difficult to accept me as a veteran of the Vietnam War, which ended when I was a sophomore in high school. It took me a while to get over it. I kept saying,

"What did I do wrong?" The producer, Stephen Cannell, said I didn't do anything wrong, but I still felt it was my fault. George Peppard called to cheer me up. He said he had been replaced in "Dynasty" as the original Blake Carrington."

Dunigan was filling in for a week or so as Skip on the soap opera "The Young and the Restless" when he auditioned for Davy Crockett.

"I replaced the actor playing Skip when he went into the hospital," he said. "I didn't know the character. I'd have to drive out to the Disney Ranch for Davy Crockett. Then I'd drive to CBS Television City for the soap. I never knew which accent to do."

'Working Girl' Tops List For Golden Globe Honors

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — "Working Girl," the holiday season hit about an ambitious secretary's escape from the steno pool, combined with a dark film about aging '60s radicals to lead nominations for the 46th annual Golden Globe awards.

The awards are considered important not only for their use in newspaper, television and radio ads but also as indicators of favorites for the Oscars in March.

Last year's big Golden Globe winners were "The Last Emperor," with four trophies, and "Moonstruck" and "L.A. Law" with two statuettes apiece.

"Working Girl" collected six nominations Wednesday, including best musical or comedy motion picture, best director for Mike Nichols, best actress for star Melanie Griffith, and best screenplay for Kevin Wade.

The Mike Nichols film, which featured Harrison Ford as Griffith's suitor, was a smart comedy in the tradition of Katherine Hepburn-Spencer Tracy matchups of the 1940s.

A darker film, "Running on Empty," drew five nominations, including best drama, best drama actress for Christine Lahti, Sidney Lumet for best director, and Naomi Foner for best screenplay.

Nominated for best dramatic motion picture were "The Accidental Tourist," "A Cry In The Dark," "Gorillas In The Mist: The Adventure of Dian Fossey," "Mississippi Burning," "Rain Man," "Running On Empty" and "The Unbearable Lightness of Being."

Selections for best musical or comedy motion picture were "Big," "A Fish Called Wanda," "Midnight Run," "Who Framed Roger Rabbit," and "Working Girl."

"Babette's Feast," "Hanusen," "Pelle the Conqueror," "Salaam Bombay!" and "Women On The Verge of a Nervous Breakdown" were selected for top foreign language film nominations.

Nominees for best performance by an actor in a dramatic motion picture were Gene Hackman ("Mississippi Burning"), Dustin Hoffman ("Rain Man"), Tom Hulce ("Dominick and Eugene"), Edward James Olmos ("Stand and Deliver") and Forest Whitaker ("Bird").

Jodie Foster ("The Accused"), Lahti ("Running On Empty"), Shirley MacLaine ("Madame Sousatzka"), Meryl Streep, ("A Cry In The Dark") and Sigourney Weaver ("Gorillas In The Mist") were the actresses nominated for work in a dramatic films.

For acting in a musical or comic film, the male nominees were Michael Caine ("Dirty Rotten Scoundrels"), John Cleese ("A Fish Called Wanda"), Tom Hanks ("Big"), Bob Hoskins ("Who Framed Roger Rabbit") and Robert De Niro ("Midnight Run").

Their female counterparts were Jamie Lee Curtis, ("A Fish Called Wanda"), Griffith ("Working Girl"), Amy Irving ("Crossing Delancey"), Michelle Pfeiffer ("Married To The Mob") and Susan Sarandon ("Bull Durham").

Actresses nominated in supporting roles were Sonia Braga ("Moon Over Parador"), Barbara Hershey ("The Last Temptation of Christ"), Lena Olin ("The Unbearable Lightness of Being"), Diane Venora ("Bird") and Weaver ("Working Girl").

Nominated supporting actors were Alec Guinness ("Little Dorrit, Parts I and II"), Neil Patrick Harris ("Clara's Heart"), Raul Julia ("Moon Over Parador"), Martin Landau ("Tucker: The Man and His Dream"), Lou Diamond Phillips ("Stand and Deliver") and River Phoenix ("Running on Empty").

Actor Clint Eastwood received a Golden Globe nomination for his work as director of "Bird." Joining Eastwood in the category are Barry Levinson ("Rain Man"), Alan Parker ("Mississippi Burning"), Fred Schepisi ("A Cry in the Dark"), Lumet and Nichols.

Spielberg Will Join In TV Cartoon Series

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Director Steven Spielberg, a longtime lover of animated cartoons, is joining forces with Warner Bros. for a new television version of Warner's famous "Merrie Melodies," to be called "Tiny Tunes."

"These will be offspring of the famous Warner Bros. cartoons, such as Bugs Bunny, Porky Pig and Sylvester the Cat," Spielberg said at a news conference Wednesday. "But I don't know if they will be actually sons and daughters. I'm not quite sure how reproduction works in "Tunes."

"Tiny Tunes" will be produced jointly by Spielberg and Warner Bros. and will be distributed for syndicated television by Lorimar Telepictures Corp. for the fall season of 1990. The initial order under the two-year contract is for 65 episodes.

Terry Semel, president and chief operating officer of Warner Bros. Inc., said the project had been in development for several years with Spielberg, who has produced such animated features as "An American Tail" and "Who Framed Roger Rabbit."

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY Jan. 6

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): A routine workday turns exciting. A close relationship takes on new dimensions. A changing lifestyle works in your favor.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Ignore promises that seem too good to be true. A challenge comes. Keep communication lines open. Avoid the lure of fast money.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You made all the right moves yesterday, now watch for results. Plan an outing with family members. You're in a party mood.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Make a new start in a new direction. Get domestic chores out of the way early. If entertainment plans fail, make new ones.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Get together with a special someone. You can be financially practical and still have fun. Curb those urges to spend impulsively.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Join in social activities. You worry over details and take matters too seriously. Get centered around peaceful, happy people.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): A change of plans may be unavoidable. You and your mate may be at odds over the matter. Working in harmony will calm rough waters.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Travel arrangements can be set. Extra work may have you hustling to keep appointments. Accept an unusual invitation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You wonder where you fit in socially. Explore new vistas. Pioneer new recreational outlets. Travel may be rewarding.

APRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Take charge of a situation where someone wants to control you. Maybe you would rather not be tied down at this time. Play the field.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Be practical in using your spare time. Budgets are stretched to new limits. Be honest with yourself in analyzing difficulties.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): You may want to end a restricting relationship. Find a way to improve a delicate situation. Avoid doing a flip-flop. Stand firm.

Opening lead: Five of ♣
 First reaction to a bad trump break is often blind panic. A far more sensible attitude is to look for a line that nullifies the whims of Dame Fortune.

 West's jump to three clubs was a weak (very!) jump overall. South's decision to pass four clubs and then pull the double to show a better than minimum opening has the endorsement of this department. We feel, however, that it might have been wiser for South to try four hearts en route. With careful play, 12 tricks can be made at hearts despite the 4-1 break.
 Declarer, former world champion Peter Weichsel, realized that East probably held five spades for his double. He took the first trick with the ace of clubs and immediately led a trump. East shot up with the king, losing to the ace.
 The diamond ace and a diamond to the queen followed. When West showed out on the second diamond, it became obvious that East was short in hearts. Declarer cashed the remaining high diamond, then ruffed a diamond to set up two long cards in the suit. A winning finesse of the eight of hearts put declarer in the cabbird seat. He simply led a winning diamond from the table.

 If East ruffed low, declarer would overruff, repeat the heart finesse and the defenders would be held to three trump tricks. If East refused to trump, declarer would simply discard hearts, then lead a club from dummy to make sure that he picked off one of East's trumps with the jack of spades. In all, the defenders could take only three spade tricks.

Hollywood Stars Turn Out To Welcome Reagan Back

By Jeff Wilson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — A legion of Hollywood glitterati feted President Reagan at a $1 million homecoming gala, singing "Camp David is rare, but it ain't Bel-Air" and tantalizing the former actor with a TV offer.

Reagan, for his part, said he was eager to return to the state where he began his dual careers in film and politics.

"Everytime I come home, I say to myself, 'Why did I ever leave?'" Reagan remarked at Wednesday night's dinner. "I don't want to say I'm anxious, but in 15 days, 15 hours and 15 seconds, I will be on my way."

Merv Griffin, who escorted Eva Gabor to the gala to raise money for Nancy Reagan's anti-drug program, replied "Isn't it wonderful?" when asked about the Reagans' imminent return to California.

"Maybe we'll all make a movie together. I'm sure they'll be the leaders of everything that happens here," he said.

Dinner guests included Griffin and Marvin Davis, the Reagans' new neighbors in posh Bel-Air, along with Charlton Heston, Lucille Ball, Aaron Spelling, Angie Dickinson and Burt Bacharach. The menu featured caviar, truffles and lobster.

As the president and his party arrived, limousines at the Beverly Hilton unloaded such passengers as Phyllis Diller, Armand Hammer, Shelley Duvall, Charles Bronson and his wife, actress Jill Ireland, the first lady's friend Betsy Bloomington and Mr. T.

Dynasty star Joan Collins invited the president to play a role on her nighttime soap. "He could be my ex-husband or something," she quipped.

"I'm delighted to have him back," said Heston. "We'll miss him in Washington, but I'm glad he's back here."

To attend the dinner and a reception, the only welcome home party for the Reagans before they leave Washington on inauguration day Jan. 20, about 65 people paid $25,000 each for a table of 10. About 950 people paid $1,000 each for single seats.

Reagan used the gala as a forum to praise the first lady's anti-drug crusade, saying his wife used the White House "bully pulpit" for the good of America.

Presentation of a $1 million check by Barron Hilton, whose hotel chain paid the cost of the ceremony, highlighted the fund-raiser for the planned Los Angeles home of the Nancy Reagan Center for drug rehabilitation.

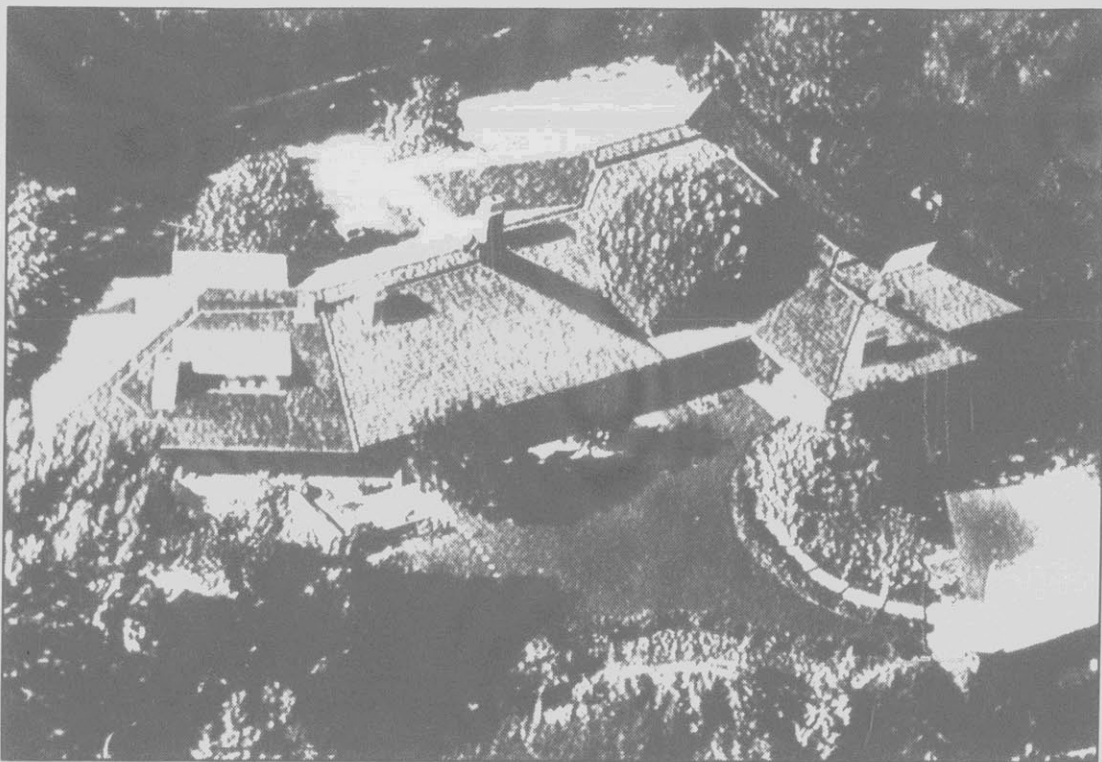

The center, for those ages 12 to 18, is to be established in a former hospital in the San Fernando Valley. Organizers say they need $10 million to buy and renovate the structure.

At the dinner, Don Rickles delivered his rapid-fire brand of caustic comedy. In a five-minute routine, he opened saying, "Mr. President and Mrs. Reagan, for $25,000, this meal was lousy."

In an evening that also featured a Nancy Reagan singing duet with Mary Martin, Griffin filled in for Frank Sinatra, who was ill with a cold. Griffin sang a personalized version of Sinatra's signature song, "My Way."

The usually staid and stoic Gov. George Deukmejian told Reagan, "I hope it won't bother you to be the second-most charismatic person in California."

Reagan's eyes stayed on his wife. Nodding at the first lady, Reagan said, "Nancy, I knew from the first moment I laid eyes on you, that you were the greatest. Now, the whole world knows."

The Reagans will live in this 'modest' $2.5 million home in a Los Angeles suburb

Reagans Use Vacation To Break In New Digs

By W. Dale Nelson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Aides say President and Nancy Reagan have been unpacking boxes, hanging pictures and drinking juice squeezed from oranges from their own trees on their first stay in a $2.5 million home.

The president and first lady were flying back to Washington today, ending a two-week California vacation during which they slept nine nights in the house they will call home after Reagan's second term ends Jan. 20. Despite the seven-figure price, it is modest by standards in the posh Bel Air neighborhood.

The ranch-style flagstone house stands behind a wall and security fence on a hillside dotted with orange, palm and other trees. It was purchased by a group of 20 friends of the Reagans from whom they will lease it for a reported $15,000 a month, with an option to buy.

There is also a small black mailbox in front, with the address, which is 668 St. Cloud Drive. It was changed at the Reagans' request from 666, which many consider a biblical symbol for the devil.

The Reagan residence is "the low-man-on-the-totem-pole house" in a neighborhood where the neighbors include Elizabeth Taylor and Zsa Zsa Gabor, a local realtor said.

"The house to the west sold for $13.5 million and the house to the east sold for $14.5 million," said Jeffrey Hyland, who lives in the neighborhood and is president of the real estate firm Alvarez, Hyland & Young.

"He is following out the real estate rule that you always want to buy into a neighborhood on the bottom end," said Hyland. "You want to be the cheapest man on the block so every other house pulls you up."

Hyland also said he believed the buyers got a bargain. He estimated the land alone was worth $3 million when they bought it and the property is probably worth $5 million now with the improvements that have been made. The house stands on a lot of just over an acre.

One thing it doesn't have, unlike houses farther up the hill, is much of a view.

"When the house was built there was some view, but all the trees across the way have in the past 25 to 35 years blocked it," Hyland said. "It's amazing. Every 25 feet you go the view is bigger and better. There's a house up above them where you can see the ocean as well as downtown Los Angeles."

The Reagans' house has an outdoor heated swimming pool, but the weather during their vacation has been a bit chilly for swimming.

Elaine Crispin, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, reported that the first lady "says they have been busy putting things in their places and unpacking pictures and hanging them."

"She told me the other morning that it was a real treat for him that he had orange juice from the oranges off their own trees," Mrs. Crispin said.

The first lady also reported that her husband "was pleased to see that she had been able to get so much done" in making the house a home, even though she was 3,000 miles away in Washington most of the time, the spokeswoman said.

She said Mrs. Reagan made several visits to the house before their current stay.

"On trips that we were coming back to California anyway, then she would spend an afternoon or so looking at things and deciding what she needed and what would have to be done and sort of some mental placement of furniture," she said.

The first lady has told reporters the president got his first look inside the house on an earlier trip when she sneaked the president out of their hotel past reporters by having him crouch down in the back seat of a White House car.

On Dec. 23, when he rode to the house for the first time sitting straight up, he was quoted by aide Mark Weinberg as saying, "I'm awed, and I love it."

Ten days later, Weinberg told a reporter that Reagan was "helping with the unpacking and watching a little college football."

The Reagans have not allowed reporters into the 6,500-square-foot house. Hyland said his listings showed it has a drawing room and library, a dining room, a patio with a heated floor, a kitchen with a walk-in cooler and a two-bedroom servants' wing above a three-car garage. There are four fireplaces and six bathrooms.

The house and grounds have been festooned with security gear, with television cameras mounted on the chimneys and the street blocked off and lined with vans, trucks and trailers.

"I live a block up the street and every time I drive up and down, it's just a mess," Hyland said this week. "I understand Thursday he's leaving. It will be welcome."

Carter Says: 'I Have A Vote'

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Greenville Mayor Ed Carter is determined to vote at City Council meetings.

In 1981, the six-member Greenville City Council voted to take away the mayor's vote, leaving the mayor to vote only in case of a tie. But, the U.S. Justice Department contacted city officials last week and said that the 1981 council failed to submit the change for federal review.

In the eyes of the federal government, the mayor should have been a voting member of the council all along, Carter said.

"I should have been voting all along, and I will vote now until the matter is legally resolved," Carter said today in a telephone interview.

"I do have a vote. I've had one.... And they just illegally took the vote away back in 1981," Carter said.

"They voted to take away the mayor's vote, (and) they did not clear it with the Justice Department."

But it is not that simple, City Attorney Mac McCarley said. The mayor cannot exercise his vote immediately, because the state government still recognizes the 1981 change in the city's charter that took away the mayor's vote.

The federal government does not recognize that change, McCarley said, but all action taken by the council still stands.

"The fact that we have not gotten preclearance does not invalidate any of the actions taken between 1981 and the present," McCarley said. "The city has an excellent relationship with the Justice Department, and we plan to move as quickly as possible to remedy this situation."

The city has two realistic options in correcting the situation, he said.

Nearly One-Fifth Of Pitt Citizens Live In Poverty

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A study of the state's poverty levels released today in Greenville labels Pitt County as half urban and half rural with between 16 and 19.9 percent of its families living in poverty.

The study, completed by the Eastern North Carolina Poverty Committee, concludes that North Carolina's 41 Coastal Plains counties have a disproportionate share of the state's poor and that these people include both the dependent and the working poor.

The report, which says rural areas of the eastern region have many more poor than other sections of the state, indicates the same poverty percentage range for Martin, Greene and Beaufort counties as suggested for Pitt.

According to the study, Pitt and Greene counties have between 5 and 6.9 percent of its families receiving Aid to Families With Dependent Children, while Martin has between 1 and 2.9 percent and Beaufort, between 3 and 4.9 percent.

Figures given in the study indicate that 12 out of every 100 families in the state are categorized as poor and five of these live in the East. It was made clear that not only the elderly, the disabled and the unwilling to work whose families are poor, but also families of people who work at regular jobs but are not sufficiently skilled to earn wages which take them out of poverty.

In the introduction, Dr. Maria O'Neil McMahon, chairman of the East Carolina University School of Social Work who co-chaired the study, cites the decline of tobacco production and the recent difficulties of fishermen as contributing to the East's having nearly 44 percent of the state's families who live below the poverty level.

Throughout the study, living below the poverty level is defined as a family of four having an income of $11,650 or less or the equivalent. She comments that these working and unable-to-work people in eastern North Carolina's farming and fishing communities include both employees and employers.

She also said that, while many of these people decline to seek assistance from social services offered them, even those who do are not having their multiple needs met.

Guilty Pleas Filed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Three employees of defense contractors and a New York firm pleaded guilty today to charges stemming from the federal government's massive investigation into Pentagon fraud begun more than two years ago.

The guilty pleas, entered in federal court before U.S. District Court Judge Claude M. Hilton, were the first in the procurement probe and came as prosecutors in the case presented evidence to a federal grand jury.

Defense attorneys for at least one consultant said they expected indictments to be handed up later in the day.

The initial guilty plea came from Hazeltine Corp., a Greenlawn, N.Y., firm that is a division of Emerson Electric Co. Hazeltine's attorney, Scott Muller, said the company agreed to plead guilty on three counts: conspiracy to defraud the United States, conversion of government property and making false statements to the government.

"We have worked out an arrangement with the government," Muller said.

Two of Hazeltine's employees, Joseph Colarusso, 58, the company's senior vice president, and Charles Furciniti, 54, a marketing representative, pleaded guilty to one count of defrauding the government and committing wire fraud.

The maximum sentence they could face is five years in jail and a $250,000 fine. Hilton set sentencing for March 17.

Prosecutor Seeks Dismissal Of Major Charges For North

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Dropping conspiracy and theft counts against Oliver L. North to protect national security secrets would not set a precedent in every case in which such sensitive information might be endangered, Attorney General Dick Thornburgh said today.

Independent counsel Lawrence Walsh moved Thursday to drop conspiracy and theft counts against the fired White House aide. He cited North's "insistence on introducing classified information in his defense" and the Reagan administration's refusal to release classified material a judge said North needs to get a fair trial.

"Hardly is it going to be a precedent in every case," Thornburgh said on the "CBS Morning News."

"In every case, there is going to have to be the type of balancing ... Walsh carried out here," he said.

"One the one hand, is it more important to go ahead with a particular criminal prosecution that involves a particular defendant and a particular offense as against what harm might come to the country's long-term interests from exposing of sensitive information?"

"He (Walsh) made the decision here to protect this information rather than go forward with these counts in the indictment that was returned," Thornburgh said.

Walsh's motion was triggered by U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell's refusal to allow more censoring of 300 prosecution exhibits to meet administration concerns over disclosing sensitive information about covert intelligence operations.

Walsh says North, a former National Security Council aide, should stand trial on the 12 other charges dealing mainly with the alleged cover-up by North of his efforts on behalf of the Contras fighting the leftist government of Nicaragua. The 12 counts carry total penalties of 60 years in prison and $3 million in fines.

At a hearing Monday, Gesell is to

Pentagon Shows Film, Audio Tape On Dogfight By Fighters

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon has released photographs and a dramatic audio tape of the U.S.-Libyan dogfight over the Mediterranean that it says prove its pilots were provoked and acted reasonably in downing the Libyan planes.

The photographs, although of poor quality, show at least one of the two Libyan MiG-23 fighters carried missiles. The Libyan government has claimed both its planes were unarmed.

The cockpit audio tape clearly records the pilot of the lead U.S. Navy F-14 Tomcat citing each of five attempts to maneuver away from the approaching Libyan jets, then, along with a second F-14, shooting down the MiG-23s.

Libya has asserted that the incident Wednesday was connected to growing American complaints that a Libyan chemicals plant is being readied for full-scale production of poison gas. President Reagan has said he would not rule out a military strike against the plant, which Libya claims is merely a medicine factory.

The Pentagon said there was no link between the factory dispute and the air battle, which it said began while the Navy Tomcats were flying a routine protective patrol for the aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy well off the Libyan coast.

In Paris on Thursday, Secretary of State George P. Shultz hinted that Reagan may be willing to work out a deal with Libya that would not require destruction of the plant.

Before arriving in Paris for an international conference on chemical weapons where the U.S.-Libyan dispute will take center stage, Shultz acknowledged even some of America's allies are not convinced the plant is a weapons facility.

In his first public comments on Wednesday's air battle with Libya, Reagan on Thursday said the American pilots had done the right thing in firing their missiles.

Train-car collision left a Greenville woman injured

Motorist Trapped As Train Hits Car

A 73-year-old woman escaped with relatively minor injuries Thursday afternoon when the car she was driving was struck by a CSX Transportation freight train at the Airport Road crossing and pushed some 726 feet — about two blocks — down the tracks.

Officer J.G. Jenkins said Elizabeth Baldree Edwards of 24 Tice Mobile Home Park was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment of a "broken arm and other minor injuries" following the 4:16 p.m. crash.

Greenville Fire-Rescue Department Assistant Chief Raymond Carney said it took rescue workers about 45 minutes to free Ms. Edwards from the twisted wreckage of her car. He said the car was so "squashed" that the top of the vehicle had to be cut off and the steering wheel had to be cut out so Ms. Edwards could be removed from the vehicle.

Jenkins quoted witnesses as saying Ms. Edwards' vehicle, headed east on Airport Road, stopped on the railroad tracks — about 100 feet in front of the oncoming northbound train — for the traffic light at the Airport Road-Greene Street intersection.

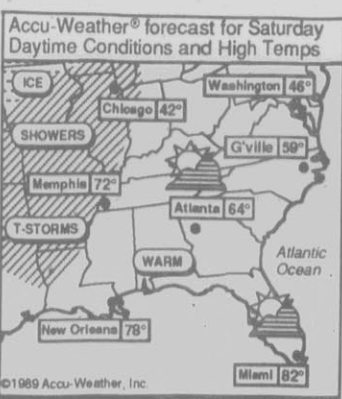

Members of the train crew were quoted as saying the engineer applied the emergency brakes but was unable to avoid striking the passenger side of the car.

Reagan Backs Pay Raise For Congress

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Reagan said today he supports a 50 percent pay raise for members of Congress and other federal officials because "we must not allow federal service to become the province only of the wealthy."

In a letter to the House and Senate, Reagan said he endorsed the pay-raise recommendations of the Commission on Executive, Legislative and Judicial Salaries. He said "fair compensation for those who bear the responsibility for effective functioning of our government is critical at this juncture of history."

In advance of the president's decision, which was made public late Thursday by the White House, consumer activist Ralph Nader labeled it the "greatest salary grab in government history."

The raise will increase the pay for members of Congress and federal judges to $135,000 a year unless both houses of Congress reject it by Feb. 8.

In his letter today, the president coupled his support for the pay hike with a plea that Congress at the same time bar outside income such as speaking fees, as the commission recommended last month.

"The current system undermines public faith in the integrity of senior federal officials, particularly in the legislative branch," Reagan wrote. "Congress should move immediately to enact legislation that takes a comprehensive approach to the problems posed by honoraria, including payments for articles, speeches and appearances, and other forms of financial benefits."

Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif., said, "I'm very pleased that the president has decided to make this decision. This is a pay raise for all the top-level federal officials ... but, of course, we (Congress) take all the heat."

Nader said, however, "Mr. Reagan has put an end to any further pretense that he wants his federal deficit reduced. He has thumbed his nose at the vast majority of the American people, Republican, independent and Democrat alike who are against the greatest salary grab in government history."

Reagan could have modified the proposal made last month by the commission. Under the law, unless both the House and Senate vote to head off the pay increases, they will automatically take effect 30 days after the plan is submitted to Congress with the proposed federal budget on Monday.

The commission recommended that members of Congress and federal district judges, who now make $89,500 a year, be paid $135,000. The House speaker's salary would go from $115,000 to $175,000, and that of majority and minority leaders from $99,500 to $155,000.

Top executive-branch officials such as Cabinet members would get raises from their current $99,500 to $155,000.

James Adrian Marshall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Marshall of Greenville, is one of 23 students spending three weeks in January attending special seminars in Washington, D.C., as part of the N.C. Teaching Fellows program at Elon College.

Wallet Stolen

Greenville police said two thefts were reported to the department Thursday.

Officer P.E. Cherry said a wallet was taken from a purse at J.H. Rose High School in an incident reported at 2:37 p.m., while Officer D.R. Wyrick said a television set was taken from 98C Brookwood Drive in a break-in reported at 7:13 p.m.

Millpond Hike

A hike through the woods and fields of Merchants Millpond State Park will begin Sunday at 2 p.m. at the park's boat rental site, located a short distance from Gatesville.

The two-hour, 1.5-mile hike will focus on how plants and animals cope with the cold of winter. Participants should wear warm clothing and shoes suitable for walking. The event is free.

Odd Fellows Meeting

Anderson Lodge No. 11972, Grand United Order of Odd Fellows, will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at Mount Hermon Lodge Hall. Important business will be discussed, according to W.H. Jones.

Lesson Plan Published

Sherry Ann Clevinger, a fifth-grade teacher at Ayden Middle School, has been notified that her lesson plan on illiteracy has been published by the state Department of Public Instruction.

During the 1987-88 school year, Mrs. Clevinger and 20 other teachers attended a three-day workshop titled "Law in the Middle Grades," which presented lesson plans on distributive, corrective and procedural justice.

Funded by the Governor's Crime Commission, the published plans have been mailed to teachers throughout the state.

School Accredited

Ayden Middle School has been accredited for the 1989 school year by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools' Commission on Elementary Schools.

Schools seeking accreditation must engage in self-study and an interim review. During the 1984-86 school years, Ayden Middle School conducted a comprehensive self-study and an interim report that addresses state standards will be completed during the 1990-91 school year.

Accreditation means that the school meets national standards with regard to its educational program and physical facilities.

County Gets State Grant To Fight Failures In North Pitt Area Schools

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Pitt County school system has received a $25,000 grant from the state Department of Public Instruction to be used to benefit at-risk students — those considered likely to fail, regardless of the cause — in the North Pitt attendance area this spring.

"The major emphasis is on identifying at-risk young people, working with staff and how to best understand these students and work with their needs," said Charles Ross, associate superintendent of instruction.

"We have prepared the project to address the elementary schools in the North Pitt area," in response to interest among principals in that area toward at-risk students, in response to requests from the community to help at-risk students and in response to the number of students in the area that would benefit from the program, he said.

The program will include developing a personal education plan for each student "with much of the emphasis on communication skills that need to be remediated and thinking skills," Ross said.

"We'll be stressing high expectations for all students and good standards of discipline."

The program also calls for strong public and private partnerships, strong parental involvement, staff development, integration of exceptional children into regular education classes and an evaluation.

The program will be administered in the four elementary schools — Bethel, Stokes, Pactolus and Belvoir.

Ross was to meet with the principals of the schools today to start the initial phases of implementing the program.

Students at-risk have been defined as "young people who, because of a wide range of personal, familial, social or academic circumstances, face failure or unwanted outcomes unless there is intervention to reduce these risks."

Factors that may identify the students include limited proficiency in English; disinterest in school; truancy; two or more years below reading level; academic failure (older than classmates); learning disabled; physical, mental or emotional handicaps; physical or mental health problems; physical or sexual abuse; substance abuse; delinquency; pregnancy; large families; single parent; unstable home environments; economically disadvantaged; parents' negative attitudes toward school, and frustrated gifted and talented.

The grant, which is provided through federal funds dispersed from the state, will fund workshops for teachers, instructional materials and other costs of administering the program, Ross said.

Man Injured In Shooting

One man was injured and another charged with assault with a deadly weapon as a result of a shooting Thursday evening near Shady Knoll Trailer Park on Mumford Road, according to the Pitt County Sheriff's Department.

LeRoy Rodman of Bland's Trailer Park on U.S. 264 was charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, inflicting serious injury, in connection with the incident, said Chief Deputy Brooks Oakley. He said Rodman is accused of shooting Joey Tripp of Thomas Mobile Home Park in the left cheek during a dispute.

According to an officer's report, Tripp and Curtis Grimble of 1216 Mumford Road took a cab to a store on Airport Road. When they returned to the trailer park there was a dispute over the amount of cab fare.

The cab driver, Marvin Best, allegedly went to the trunk of the cab and retrieved a tire tool, Oakley said.

Rodman reportedly was driving past the scene and noticed the ongoing dispute. When he stopped and told the men to leave Best alone, Tripp came at him, officers said.

Rodman allegedly shot toward the ground once with a .22-caliber pistol and fired a second shot that entered Tripp's left cheek, according to the officers' report.

Oakley said a physician examined Tripp and said he is expected to fully recover.

Officers expect to make at least two more arrests, Oakley said.

Federal Officials Delay Action Against Jamaicans

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The federal government has drawn warrants against four Jamaicans arrested in Greenville on drug trafficking charges in September, but the warrants have not been served and the government may wait to take action until after a local trial, an assistant U.S. attorney said.

The four defendants had been set to appear in Pitt County District Court for a probable cause hearing Dec. 2, but prosecutors continued the hearing after federal warrants were drawn.

But, earlier this week, a Pitt County Grand Jury indicted all four defendants on drug trafficking charges, and they are set to be arraigned in Greenville later this month or in early February. Pitt County District Attorney Tom Haigwood said the cases will move along the usual legal channels until a time when federal authorities officially take over the case.

U.S. Magistrate Alexander Denson issued warrants for all four defendants Dec. 1. But instead of arresting the four on federal charges, the government lodged the warrants as detainers, Assistant U.S. Attorney Bill Webb said Thursday in a telephone interview from his Raleigh office.

"(The Jamaicans) cannot be released from state custody into anything other than federal custody," Webb said.

"It may well end up in federal court. It may end up in federal court after the state prosecutes the case," Webb said. "We'll just have to make a decision as the case proceeds."

Greenville police arrested Malcolm Eugene Encarnacion, 29, Courtney L. Fuller, 33, Leslie Lee Thomas, 29, and Angerette Daniels, 23, on Sept. 21 after a tip from Crime Stoppers. All four are from Jamaica and lived in New York before coming to Greenville. Each is currently in the custody of the state Department of Corrections.

In the arrests, officers seized more than 3,700 vials of cocaine-based crack, $23,000 in cash and a stolen firearm. If convicted in a state court, the four face maximum prison terms ranging from 65 years to 110 years.

Ron Tunkel, a Federal Drug Enforcement Administration agent, said it is up to state and federal officials to work out an agreement, but federal officials do plan on taking the case. He said he is "quite confident" that the U.S. attorney's office intends to prosecute the case.

There have been other drug arrests involving Jamaicans in Kinston, Jacksonville and Raleigh, and the DEA held a seminar last year to educate local drug agents on the tendencies and patterns of Jamaican drug dealers.

Webb said federal prosecutors are attracted to the case because it may involve out-of-state crimes and because federal laws concerning drugs and weapons are tougher than state laws.

"There are unique federal laws that allow us to prosecute people (involved) in these circumstances," he said. "There are a number of reasons we are interested in the case."

Telephone Outage

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Some Southern Bell customers around the state who dialed directory assistance or the company's business offices couldn't get through on Thursday because a cable was accidentally cut, officials said.

Customers who dialed 411 for local directory assistance in North Carolina got a rapid busy signal. Those who called 555-1212 for long-distance directory assistance were connected to telephone operators, who were unable to retrieve numbers on computers because of the cut cable, Ladd Baucom, a Southern Bell spokesman in Charlotte, said.

Some customers could not get through to business offices in the Raleigh, Wilmington and Greensboro areas, Baucom said.

RALEIGH — Retiring Secretary of State Thad Eure bade farewell today as his 52-year tenure drew to a close, telling well-wishers who sported red bow ties in his honor that he had no intention of fading from public view.

"You're going to see me around some more," Eure said at a ceremony in the state Capitol that drew about 150 people. A fiercely partisan Democrat, he vowed to "spend the rest of my life helping Democrats get elected to public office."

Eure, 89, was in a buoyant mood as he traded friendly verbal jabs with Republican Gov. Jim Martin, delighting the crowd that included fellow Council of State officers, legislators, members of Congress and lobbyists.

The ceremony was proposed by officials of Elon College, of which Eure is longtime chairman of the board of trustees. Students and administrators attended and handed out red bow tie stickers to people who did not have the real thing.

The red bow tie is Eure's trademark, along with straw hats he dons with the coming of spring.

Standing in the rotunda of the historical Capitol, down the hall from Eure's ornate office, Martin read a proclamation declaring today as "Red Bow Tie Day."

"Thanks to Secretary Eure's unwavering dedication to North Carolina and its citizens, good government will forever be associated with the big red bow tie that is inseparably associated with the man who is the country's longest running elected official," the proclamation read.

Martin said his aides had done research to see whether any other elected official had held office longer.

"I have to say to you that we found one: Ramses the Great," the governor said as the crowd roared and applauded.

Poverty Discussions

Pitt Ranks High In Poverty Tables

The study is the compilation of data collected by the committee which began meeting monthly in December 1986. It has been composed of social services professionals, educators, Chamber of Commerce officials, state legislators, alcoholism professionals, aging specialists and church ministry professionals from throughout the East.

E.C. Modlin, director of the Cumberland County Department of Social Services, co-chaired the study with Dr. McMahon. Deryl W. Torbert, education coordinator of the North Carolina Poverty Project headquartered in Greensboro, served as consultant to the group.

In the study the "multiple needs" are said to be "complex and inter-related." They are classified under headings of education, health, social services, housing, transportation, and employment. Facts and figures to show "how bad it is" are cited in each area.

The committee gives recommendations in each needs area. Its members call for educating the public about the prevalence of poverty in the region, which is the purpose of today's presentation and a nearly identical one given Thursday in Fayetteville.

Today's presentation was to be given at East Carolina University's Belk Building. Dr. McMahon said Thursday afternoon that about three times as many people as had registered for the Fayetteville presentation had indicated they would be on hand today in Greenville. The Fayetteville meeting was also well-attended, with many more present than had registered, she said.

Under education, the committee recommended increased support for preschool and child care centers with enrichment opportunities in both, expanded parent-guardian education programs, more and more accessible after-school tutorial programs, reading skills development for children and adults, training for teachers in teaching economically deprived children, incentives for educators and others to conceive and implement successful school achievement programs or strategies for impoverished children, and development of "a sequential poverty curriculum with suggested implementation for grades K-12."

Under health, the panel called for expanded Medicaid coverage, assistance for small employers to make health insurance more affordable for the working poor, and for increased access to health services and to information about health services.

Work training for all welfare recipients was cited as the No. 1 need under public social services. Special attention should be given to the state's rural economic development and the public and private sector should work together to provide good jobs with adequate wages and benefits. Transition from dependency to self-sufficiency for all people was seen as a goal that could be made reality by case management and education, day care and transportation and by preventing teen pregnancy. Continued insistence that parents support their children was seen as important, as was making all AFDC and SSI clients automatically eligible for Food Stamps. Uniformity among application forms and programs eligibility was seen as another important need.

Public and private agencies should combine their efforts, the committee members said, to prevent duplication of services, facilitate referrals, and have as a primary goal the assistance of people, not only with their emergency needs, but with helping them develop ways to be independent and productive. Caring, well-trained social workers need to be accessible to those needing their assistance and the community needs to understand and help conceive ways to "solve the problems of the poor," the study said.

The specific needs of people living in substandard housing should be assessed and dealt with, the study said. Cities, counties, churches and other local leaders need to help identify housing improvement needs. Instruction and assistance in housing rehabilitation needs to be made available and national housing rehabilitation programs need to be advocated.

The study said that low-skill jobs, which once proliferated in the South, are disappearing and people of all ages and skill levels need to be trained for jobs demanding greater skill. Child care during training and working time need to be made available, committee members said. More small-scale industry in outlying areas would contribute to resolving the problem, as would better transportation systems, they said.

Carter Says He Will Cast Votes

One, the city may submit the change to the Justice Department eight years late. Under the Voting Rights Act of 1965, the Justice Department must approve any change that affects voting in the city. McCarley was not in Greenville in 1981, but he said it was probably an oversight that the change was not submitted for preclearance.

If the city submits the 1981 plan for review, Justice officials will likely approve the change, thus formally recognizing the measure that took away the mayor's vote, McCarley said.

Two, the city could change the charter back to its pre-1981 wording, and McCarley said the Justice Department would likely approve that also.

If the city opts to return to pre-1981 status, the mayor would be able to vote.

The Justice Department also said the city could take the issue to U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., to get a declaratory judgment, but McCarley said that option is very unlikely.

Carter, who is beginning the second year of a two-year term, is the city's first black mayor. He said it appears only City Council Member Lorraine Shinn supports the mayor's vote; the remaining members of the council, including the black members, are against the idea.

"They fear that if a Greenville had a white mayor), and if the mayor had a vote, it would be to the adverse of the black community. But that is ludicrous.

"That is not a racial issue ...

Generally, a mayor has a position on everything. Whether he has a vote or not makes no difference in his philosophical position," Carter said. "Unless one changes his mind as a result of seeing others vote, it doesn't matter."

If the council casts a 4-2 vote or a 5-1 vote, the mayor's vote would make no difference, Carter said. In a tie 3-3 vote, the mayor would automatically vote to break the deadlock, regardless of the recent Justice Department order.

"Should the mayor have equal authority along with the City Council members? That is the issue," he said.

When Greenville Mayor Percy Cox left office in 1981 and voters elected Don McGlohon, the council decided the mayor had too much power, Carter said. The feelings stemmed from past years when a mayor might hand-pick people to run for the City Council and maintain a constant political machine, he said, but those days are long gone.

"Many people look to the mayor as the leader of the city. To take away his vote and not give him anything to fight with is ludicrous."

"But, the preliminary indication is that the majority of the council is opposed to the mayor having a vote, and I am calling on the people to come forth and let (the council) know they ... expect the mayor to be at least equal in authority to a council member."

Allowing the mayor to vote would also help expedite city business, Carter said.

Since January of 1987, the council has been unable to act on eight issues because there were fewer than four members in attendance, Carter said. It takes four members to make a quorum, and it takes four affirmative votes for an issue to pass.

Thursday's City Council meeting had to be canceled at the last minute, he said, because only three council members were able to attend. If he had a vote on the council, the group could have met Thursday and conducted business.

Sarbaugh Retiring

RALEIGH (AP) — Raymond Sarbaugh, the executive director of the N.C. Association of School Administrators, will retire from that post June 30, officials said.

Sarbaugh, 61, said he plans to return to Winston-Salem, where he worked for 30 years in the Winston-Salem-Forsyth County school system.

Sarbaugh has been the only full-time executive director of the administrator organization. He has served in that capacity since 1978.

Dismissals Asked

consider the prosecution's request to dismiss the conspiracy and theft charges, which accuse North and three co-defendants of illegally diverting more than $14 million in U.S.-Iran arms-sale profits to the Nicaraguan rebels.

Walsh wants the two charges dismissed without prejudice, an approach that would make it possible to bring them again.

Attorneys for North, declaring the heart of the government's case against him "destroyed," are stepping up attacks on the other 12 criminal charges he faces in the Iran-Contra affair.

President Reagan said Walsh's motion "satisfies our problem, which has been ... concern about national security. ... We're waiting to see what the future is going to be."

Abandoning the two central charges while keeping the other 12 will "minimize the exposure of classified information," Walsh said.

North's attorneys disagreed with Walsh. "Although the heart of its case is destroyed, the independent counsel continues to toy with Colonel North and apparently refuses to recognize that classified information pervades the remaining charges as well," Brendan Sullivan, one of North's lawyers, said in a statement.

Sullivan said "it is disgraceful" that the conspiracy and theft charges were brought against North "and outrageous that they survived for nine months after indictment."

He said the proof of North's innocence lies in the classified material itself.

Gesell also will hear comments from prosecutors and North's lawyers on possible scheduling changes. Dropping the two main counts will require significant adjustments in the documentary case both sides plan to present. The trial is set to begin Jan. 31.

House Majority Leader Thomas Foley said the decision to drop the two charges "has nothing to do with the inadequacy of the evidence. It has to do with the sensitivity of the evidence."

"Col. North still faces very serious charges," said Foley, D-Wash. "The dismissal is not any sort of vindication."

Reagan was asked whether he was going to pardon North and responded, "We're waiting for the judicial process to go forward."

Thornburgh said "the assurance that was given to me by Judge Walsh was that he had been dealt with in good faith, that every line of inquiry that he pursued he received the fullest cooperation from the executive branch."

Reagan and Vice President Bush have been subpoenaed by North to testify at the trial, but dropping the two major charges could make it harder to show why their testimony would be needed.

A source said Thursday that Reagan had engaged the Los Angeles law firm of Gibson, Dunn and Crutcher to represent him if he is called to testify in the North's trial.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Balance

Time For Dollar-Sign Reckoning

The 101st Congress has convened and in only a couple of weeks it will begin working with a new president to overcome the nation's problems. The most immediate one is the federal deficit and the rapidly mounting national debt — the legacy Ronald Reagan will leave.

So far President-elect Bush and the Democratic congressional leaders have taken a cooperative approach to their future relationship. That will last until serious decisions must be made as to how to reduce the deficit.

For the past eight years Congress has listened to President Reagan's exhortations about the deficit. The problem was that Reagan wouldn't bite the bullet and propose the needed tax increases. Nor would he provide the leadership that was really necessary for budget reduction. Being popular was overwhelmingly important to the president. Pity he didn't care more about responsible fiscal policy.

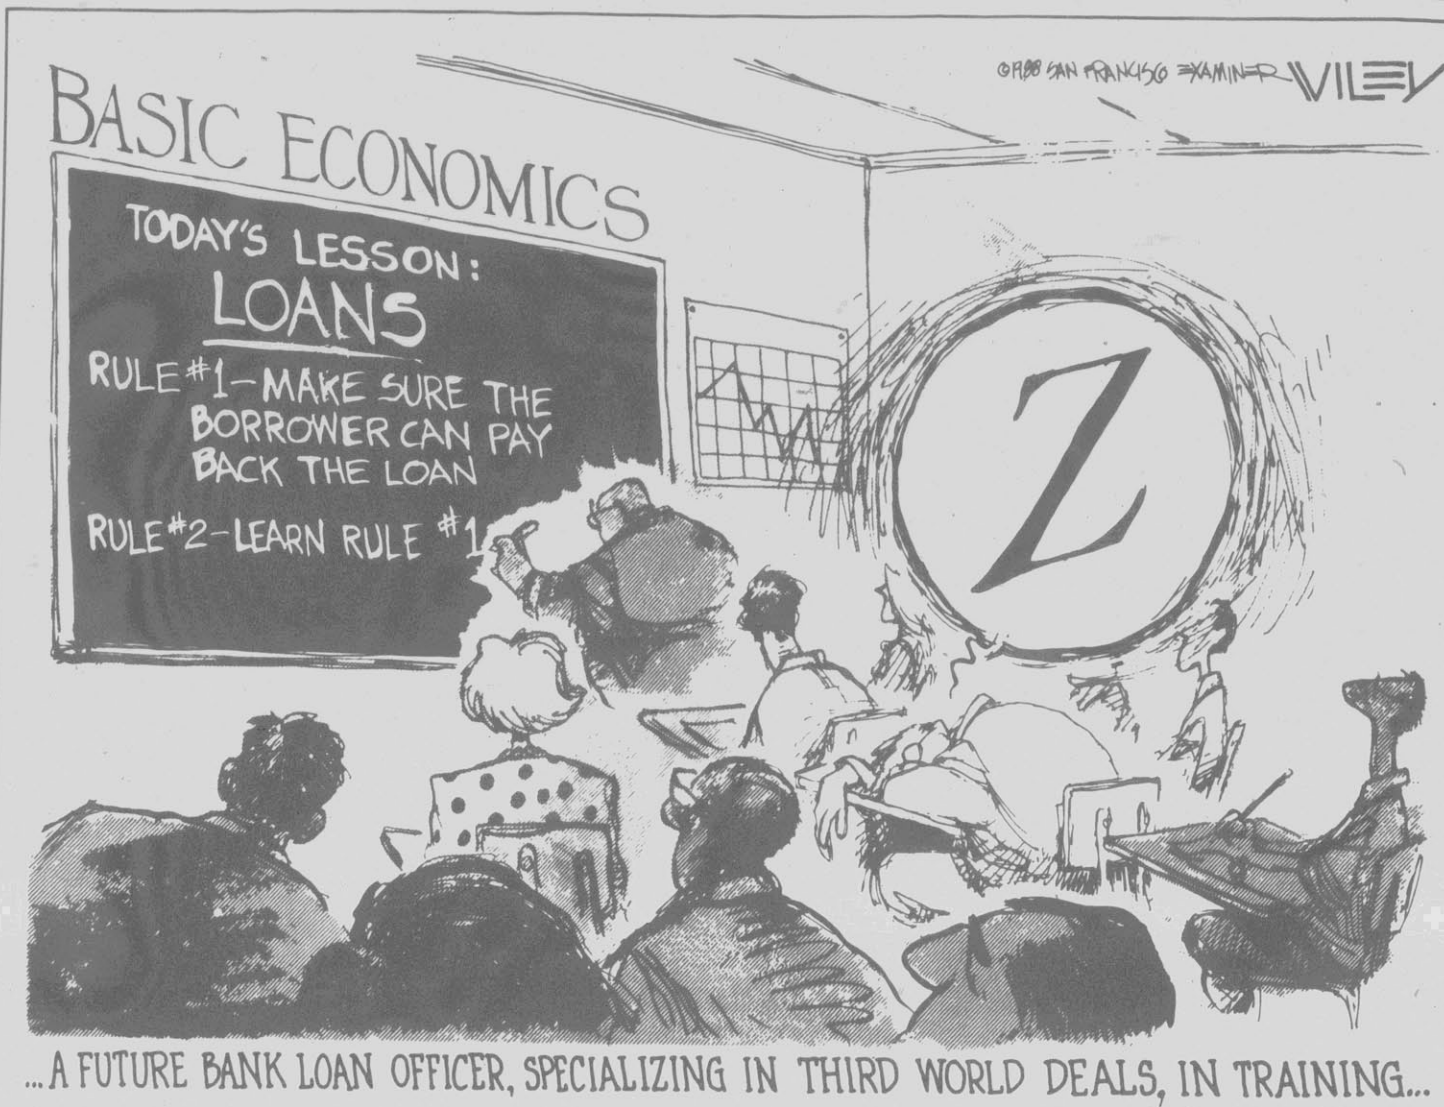

That is not going to work with the new administration and Bush, a seasoned and shrewd observer of politics, likely knows it. He will be forced to take some unpopular stands if the nation's economic problems are going to be alleviated. With his long experience in government as his training, Bush is aware of this reality. He simply can't be everybody's pal for four years and do what must be done to reduce the deficit.

How he will proceed remains to be seen. He is saddled with a "no new taxes" pledge which seems to limit raising additional revenues in the traditional ways. Obviously, however, he is going to have to work closely with Congress to restrict spending and find additional revenues. Anything else will be national economic suicide.

It is virtually assured there will be a flattening of defense spending. Beyond that the new president will have to find new revenues without violating his no new taxes pledge. Bush is about as likely to walk on water as he is to accomplish that task. But he made the promise in his campaign, and Congress will not likely let him forget it easily.

One of Bush's first acts must be to ask Congress to increase the national debt ceiling — an embarrassing move for any president who ran on a conservative platform. Congress will respond positively because to do anything else would mean bringing government to a halt. Congress should then firmly demand to hear what the administration proposes to do to balance the budget. It is a question which should have been posed relentlessly each of the last eight years as deficits continued to pile sky high.

Now with the 101st Congress and a new and perceptive president, it is critical that this question be the first on the lips of leaders. The correct response, however, will be much harder to articulate.

Chemical Ban An Urgent Need

Elisa Harris

On numerous occasions throughout last year's presidential campaign, Vice President George Bush promised voters that a treaty banning chemical weapons would be one of the highest priorities of his administration.

This intention to work actively on behalf of a chemical-weapons ban has become a source of concern to arms-control opponents and proponents alike. The former question the "verifiability" of a chemical-weapons treaty while the latter fear that it may take precedence over a treaty limiting strategic nuclear arms. Although it will not be easy to reach final agreement on the terms under which all chemical weapons can be eliminated, domestic as well as international realities make it imperative that such a treaty be at the top of the Bush administration's arms-control agenda.

The president-elect's personal interest in banning chemical weapons is partly explained by his own recent involvement with the issue. In April 1984, Bush introduced a chemical-weapons treaty draft in Geneva on behalf of the United States. This is probably one of the few Reagan administration foreign-policy efforts that bears the vice president's fingerprints. Bush also cast three tie-breaking votes in the Senate in favor of the Pentagon's program to produce new chemical weapons. Because his first vote in support of the so-called binary-weapons program prompted a disapproving phone call from the vice president's mother, Dorothy Bush, President Reagan himself agreed to call the elder Bush to explain her son's second vote. A successful outcome in Geneva therefore would not only be a personal triumph for the president-elect but would also vindicate his earlier votes on binary weapons.

Oyer and above these personal reasons, domestic and international problems provide other, more compelling, reasons to pursue a ban on chemical weapons. Here at home, Congress is showing more and more reluctance to continue funding the binary-weapons program. Doubts about the technical effectiveness of one of the proposed systems, the Bigeye bomb, as well as more general budgetary restraints resulted in deep cuts in the binary program in the current fiscal year.

If, as seems likely, these technical and budgetary concerns remain, Congress will almost certainly impose further limits on the production of binary artillery shells, and will refuse to provide additional funds for the development and procurement of other binary systems. Under these circumstances, even the most ardent binary enthusiasts are likely to support the elimination of both American and Soviet chemical-weapons stocks as part of a larger treaty on chemical disarmament.

Two international developments add further urgency to the efforts to ban chemical weapons. Under an agreement reached by Reagan and Chancellor Helmut Kohl in May 1986, U.S. chemical weapons currently stored in West Germany are to be removed by 1992. This agreement enjoys widespread support in West Germany, in part because civilians there would suffer disproportionately if such weapons were ever used in a Central European war.

However, influential elements in both Congress and the Pentagon believe that without the U.S. stocks of chemical weapons in West Germany the Atlantic alliance will be severely weakened in its ability to deter Soviet chemical use. As the 1992 deadline draws nearer, the United States may be forced to choose between trying to delay or prevent implementation of the Reagan-Kohl agreement, thus precipitating a crisis in U.S.-West German relations, and carrying out an act of unilateral chemical disarmament. Only by agreeing to eliminate all chemical weapons will the United States be able to avoid this Hobbesian choice.

Finally, and most important, a ban on chemical weapons is essential to halting their proliferation in the developing world. For many years the only known members of the chemical club were the United States, the Soviet Union and France. This situation changed abruptly in 1984, when U.N. investigators confirmed Iranian claims of Iraqi chemical use in the Persian Gulf war. As many as a dozen other Third World countries, including Libya, reportedly either possess chemical weapons or are trying to acquire them. Persuading these countries to forgo what has often been termed the "poor man's atomic bomb" will not be easy. Yet without a global chemical-weapons ban the proliferation of these weapons will almost certainly continue.

U.S. security as well as international security more generally would be well served by an agreement eliminating chemical weapons on a global scale. Bush recognizes this simple fact, and has committed himself to achieving this goal. No one need fear that he will sign a "bad" chemical-weapons treaty. Nor should there be concern about such a treaty detracting from efforts to reduce strategic nuclear arms. The real worry is that efforts to achieve a ban on chemical weapons will be impeded by those who fail to understand the domestic and international realities that the next president will face.

Technology & The Changing Weight Of Nations

WASHINGTON — As Congress convenes and the pulse of government quickens, consider the growing sovereignty of social forces over sovereign governments. Technology-driven change is changing the weight — physical and political — of goods, institutions, countries and regions.

George Will

Norman Macrae of The Economist reports that in 1903 the Mercedes corporation concluded that there never would be a world market for more than one million automobiles. The limiting factor? There would never be more than one million people trainable as chauffeurs.

Manual labor was the norm until remarkably recently. In the 1950s in Western Europe and America, 70 percent of all employed people were use-of-hands workers, 30 percent use-of-brain workers. That ratio is being reversed. Walter Wriston, writing in Foreign Affairs, notes that 85 percent of all the scientists who have ever lived are alive today, that scientific knowledge is doubling every 13 to 15 years and that the resulting social change is diluting the sovereignty of nations. In one important instance, glasnost was forced on the Soviet regime by photos taken from a privately owned satellite, the French SPOT, launched in 1986. Pictures of the Chernobyl nuclear plant forced the Kremlin to stop lying about the extent of the catastrophe.

The ability to mandate the value of currency was a traditional aspect of national sovereignty. Today communications technologies have produced an instantaneous international market rendering constant judgment about the values of currencies. In this wired world, Wriston writes, there is no place to hide as currency values are controlled by the "information standard."

Wars have traditionally begun when borders were violated. But today borders are porous because money and ideas — as powerful as armies — cross them electronically. Markets are no longer geographic locations. Rather, markets are data on millions of computer screens, worldwide. The markets render pitiless judgments on political actions by altering monetary values. Such global markets are, as Wriston says, a form of free speech telling the unregulatable truth about nations' politics.

Workplaces, like marketplaces, can become geographically indeterminate. Workers can be connected by computers to jobs far from their residences, and these are economic incentives for allowing people to "commute electronically." Macrae notes that the rental cost of the square foot of office space occupied by a wastepaper basket in the City of London or downtown Tokyo can rent an entire apartment a few blocks away.

Technology even alters the strategic importance of regions. As Wriston says, not long ago the conventional wisdom was that lights would go out all over the world if the Suez Canal were closed. That wisdom did not anticipate supertankers capable of carrying oil economically around the Cape of Good Hope.

Alan Greenspan argues that the rapid expansion of international trade is produced, in part, by technology, particularly the shrinkage of the size of products. In 1950, radios were made with vacuum tubes. Today, radios fit in shirt pockets, calculators fit in wallets. A fiber-optic cable as thin as a hair replaces a thick bundle of copper cables. Copper-producing nations lose their weight. (Wriston notes that the material for computer chips is the world's most common substance: sand.)

New architectural designs, engineering techniques and building materials mean more usable space with less concrete and steel. Space heating improves, so winter clothing becomes lighter, with the help of new chemical technologies.

Greenspan says the recent improvement in the economic well-being of most nations occurred without significant change in the physical bulk or weight of gross national product. "If all the tons of grain, cotton, ore, coal, steel, cement and the like that Americans produce were combined, their aggregate volume probably would not be much greater on a per-capita basis today than it was, say, 50 or 75 years ago."

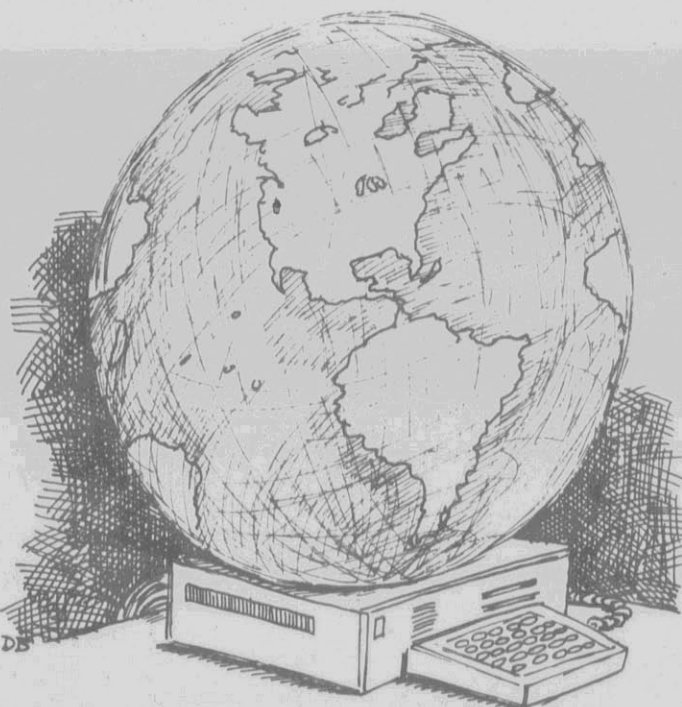

'Technology-driven change is changing the weight — physical and political — of goods, institutions, countries and regions.'

High-value and easily transportable goods lend themselves to cross-border commerce more readily than do bulky products. "The cost of moving gravel across continents makes it hard to see foreign quarries as much of a backup for excess domestic demand. But the ease with which small electronic components can be moved by air integrates a significant part of the world's capacity."

The decline in the bulk and weight of goods is a result of what Greenspan calls "the conceptual contribution to economic activity." It has the political consequence of complicating one familiar assertion of national sovereignty: protectionism. In 1900, Greenspan writes, economic value was created, archetypally, by moving iron ore by rail from the Mesabi range to Pittsburgh, where it was joined with coal to make steel.

Today, economic value is increasingly created by moving data, analyses and insights hither and yon, electronically. The products of economic production, says Greenspan, "are becoming progressively impalpable." So are elements of national sovereignty.

Probation Lifted

BOLIVIA, N.C. (AP) — Former Brunswick County Clerk of Superior Court Greg Bellamy's two-year probation for cocaine possession was lifted this week on an unprecedented recommendation from the state attorney general, whose office prosecuted the case.

Judge F. Gordon Battle lifted the remainder of the term Tuesday during a brief hearing with Bellamy's probation officer and a lawyer representing Bellamy in Brunswick County Superior Court.

In a Dec. 12 letter to Judge Carlton Fellers, who was acting judge in Superior Court that week, N.C. Attorney General Lacy Thornburg said he had "no hesitation to favorably recommend the motion to terminate Mr. Bellamy's sentence."

Thornburg said he made the character recommendation as a private citizen, though it was typed on state stationery and carried his title.

Reward Offered

GREENSBORO (AP) — A Greensboro businessman offered a $2,000 reward for information about the hit-and-run driver who last month deliberately caused a car with four Greensboro teen-agers to crash, killing one and seriously injuring the other three.

Meanwhile, the businessman and several other Greensboro residents have donated $750 to hire a private investigator to help find the unknown driver, said Bennie Higgins, principal of Smith High School.

Higgins declined to identify the businessman, who is offering the reward for any information leading to an arrest in the incident. Two days before Christmas, the four Smith High School students were traveling to Raleigh on Interstate 40 when a dark blue Monte Carlo ramed into the rear of their car three times, the third after they had moved to the right lane of the highway.

The car driven by Smith senior Levern Allen III spun out of control and overturned several times before landing in a ditch. Kenny Dungee, 19, was killed. Allen, 17, lost his right leg and remains at Duke Medical Center in Durham. Two other Smith students, Kenneth Newkirk and Darius Bannerman, both 17, were thrown from the car and suffered serious injuries. They are recovering at home.

Base Schools

RALEIGH (AP) — Citing strong community opposition, the Pentagon has decided not to force local governments to take over the education of children at military bases such as Camp Lejeune and Fort Bragg.

The proposal, which some congressmen urged as a means of saving money, was unpopular throughout the nation, according to a letter from Deputy Defense Secretary William H. Taft IV to congressional leaders.

Military parents opposed it because of "grave concerns" that switching from military-run schools to locally operated schools "would compromise the quality of their children's education," the letter said. It said the local school systems adjacent to military bases also opposed the move because it would cost them money and make them dependent on federal subsidies that might be unpredictable from year to year.

Smoking Bans

DURHAM (AP) — Two of Durham County's largest employers have announced they will ban smoking in their buildings effective March 1.

Duke Medical Center, the county's largest employer, and Glaxo Inc., the county's 12th-largest employer, join Northern Telecom in adopting a no-smoking policy. Northern Telecom banned smoking in September.

There are 11,400 employees at the medical center and 1,800 employees at Glaxo's national headquarters in the Research Triangle Park and its manufacturing plant in Zebulon. Both employers had smoking restrictions in place before the bans.

Surgeon Moving

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A Washington surgeon who will operate on President Reagan's hand Saturday will be joining the Charlotte Orthopaedic Clinic on Feb. 1.

Dr. Paul Perlik, chief of hand surgery at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, is one of three surgeons who will be operating on Reagan's ring finger. Reagan suffers from Dupuytren's contracture, a progressive shrinking of the tissue in the hands that can make it impossible for the victims to straighten their fingers.

A 10-year Army veteran, Perlik has been with Walter Reed for three years and has also been assigned to Martin Army Community Hospital at Fort Benning, Ga.

Recycling Plan

GRAHAM, N.C. (AP) — Alamance County commissioners have approved a varied recycling plan that would include banning commercial corrugated cardboard from the county landfill and purchasing a pallet and brush grinder.

The ban will begin only after seminars are held to educate business and industry in recycling cardboard, officials said Tuesday. The product, which comprises approximately 40 percent of the waste that enters the landfill, can be sold at a premium to wastepaper product companies.

Harrington Opposes U.S. Gas Tax Hike

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A move in Congress to increase the federal gasoline tax for deficit reduction threatens to scuttle North Carolina's plans to raise billions of dollars for highway construction, state officials said.

"This idea is a real dragon, one that needs to be vigorously defended against," N.C. Transportation Secretary Jim Harrington said Thursday. "It would severely handicap the state's effort to raise money for roads."

Members of the N.C. Legislative Highway Study Commission, who are considering increasing the state's 15.7-cent-a-gallon levy to fund sorely needed road construction, will meet in Raleigh today with U.S. Sen. Terry Sanford and five other N.C. members of Congress.

Legislators are planning to urge the delegation to oppose the 15-cent-a-gallon increase suggested by Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

"This would have a terribly injurious effect on our efforts," Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, a commission member and co-chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said. "They would be asking us to absorb federal responsibilities, but would be taking away our means to do so."

The co-chairman of the study commission, Rep. Bobby Hunter, D-McDowell, said a rise in the federal levy would make it "nearly impossible" for North Carolina legislators to pass a second increase during the General Assembly session, which begins Wednesday.

A 15-cent federal increase would raise roughly $15 billion a year nationally, with none of the money going to highway construction. It would siphon off an estimated $600 million each year from North Carolina, said Doug Carter, a state fiscal analyst.

The tax on gasoline in North Carolina is 24.7 cents a gallon, with 9 cents going to the federal government and 15.7 cents to the state. The last time the federal tax increased was in 1983, from 4 to 9 cents a gallon.

State legislators have been looking at the state's gas tax as the chief means of raising as much as $12 billion to build four-lane North Carolina highways and urban belt loops and to pave dirt roads into the next century. A 1-cent increase in the state's tax raises about $40 million annually.

Probation-Parole Officers May Get Overtime

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — State prison and personnel officials have learned that North Carolina may be required to pay overtime to the state's 681 probation and parole officers, a move that may threaten the state's ability to relieve prison crowding.

The officers, charged with keeping tabs on almost 74,000 convicts on probation or parole, have been among the hardest-worked state employees since the state put a cap on the prison population two years ago and mandated that it be decreased.

Created in part to fend off a federal takeover of the system, the cap significantly increased work for probation and parole officers.

One official estimated that it will "take a couple million bucks" to pay restitution.

"The timing of this is what bothers me," said Jeff R. Becker, the N.C. Department of Correction's assistant director of personnel, after a meeting Thursday with federal wage and hour officials from the U.S. Department of Labor.

"At the same time the federal courts are saying that we must provide better services in our prisons, another branch of federal government is saying we need to make changes on the other end. It's kind of contradictory — that's my biggest gripe about it," Becker told the Winston-Salem Journal.

Over the last few weeks, investigators with the labor department's Wage and Hour Division have examined employment records and conducted spot inspections of probation and parole workers in Raleigh and Wilson County.

The investigation was prompted by a Labor Department opinion written last year, which interpreted the Fair Labor Standards Act to include probation and parole workers.

In North Carolina and most other states, probation and parole officers are considered professionals and are not paid overtime. That may change.

"The activities of probation officers are related to the production of the department, not management, so they can't qualify as management. They do routine, day-to-day activities and do not have a lot of discretion," said Lynn Pierce, a wage and hour spokesman in Atlanta.

Becker said that investigators are determining whether North Carolina should be brought under the act.

The investigation is not finished, but comments made by a wage and hour spokesman at the meeting Thursday suggested a foregone conclusion, Becker said. "He basically said that this was the opinion of his office and wanted to know if we were going to comply with it."

Under the act, the state may be liable for overtime worked during the last two years as well as any worked in the future.

Sam F. Boyd, the administrator of the N.C. Parole Commission, said that few officers work 9 to 5.

"Oh Lord, we may be talking about staggering amounts of money here," he said. "I know they say this is a tight budget year, but something will definitely have to give."

The legislature set a cap on the prison population in 1987. The cap mandates that, when the population exceeds 17,460 for 15 consecutive days, the parole commission must declare an emergency and cut it back to 17,280.

The caseloads for probation and parole officers have increased steadily since the cap — even though the number of officers hasn't changed, said George W. Barnes, the assistant director of the N.C. Division of Adult Probation and Parole.

"We feel like they work extremely hard," he said. "In a lot of jobs, when it comes 5 o'clock you're out. But that's not the case with this job. It's never-ending."

Phillips Gives His Farewell

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A 20-year era ended Thursday as retiring state Superintendent Craig Phillips gave his final address to members of the state Board of Education.

Phillips urged the board to seek creation of a special state education fund and to push for education programs for all 3-, 4-, and 5-year-olds in the state.

He said the "window is open" for establishing a separate state fund for education, similar to the state Highway Fund. With a 2-cent increase in the state sales tax that fund would swell by $800 million and give the board plenty of money to support its major initiatives.

Board Chairman Howard Haworth told reporters that while he supported looking for new ways to raise money for education, he "wouldn't want to endorse any particular approach." He said, however, that he and the board were strong advocates of establishing preschool programs, particularly for disadvantaged students.

In his 80-minute speech, Phillips described and defended the agency he helped build. He said he did well in hiring a full, competent staff despite the pressures of racists, fundamentalists and special, political and personal interests.

"They have not got much of a fair shake," he said.

The superintendent, who officially retired Dec. 31, advised the board to build a strong relationship with Bobby Etheridge, who will be sworn into office Saturday.

Methodists Hold Session

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — United Methodist bishops from nine states met with lay leaders in Charlotte on Thursday to discuss declining membership, ministerial competence and other concerns facing the nation's second-largest Protestant denomination.

The sessions were part of the semi-annual meeting of the College of Bishops for the Southeastern United Methodist Jurisdiction, which winds up Friday.

Reversing membership declines and revitalizing church life in the 9.2 million-member United Methodist Church will be the focus of the bishops' next major paper, said Bishop C.P. Minnick of Raleigh. He compared the document to the bishops' pastoral letter of 1986 on the threat of nuclear war.

Retired S.C. Bishop Roy Clark urged lay people to participate in the information-gathering process, which already involves pastors, theologians and church growth specialists.

The denomination has lost about 1 million members in the past two decades.

State Board Wants Religion In Schools

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina students will learn more about religion in their social studies classes, but some observers fear they also will be encountering more religious indoctrination.

With one member dissenting, the state Board of Education voted Thursday to include goals for teaching about religion in the social studies curriculum. No timetable was set and Department of Public Instruction officials said nothing would change until next fall or later.

Board member Donald Pollock, a lawyer from Kinston, said educators were opening a "can of worms" that would lead to squabbles between teachers and parents over religious issues.

"We are in the Bible Belt, and you know what is going to happen when you start teaching about religion," Pollock said.

But board Chairman Howard H. Haworth, who majored in history in college, said schools could not give students a complete understanding of history without including the role of religion. Board member James B. Chavis of Pembroke agreed.

"There have been more wars fought and more lives lost in the name of religion than anything else in history," Chavis said.

State curriculum specialists and teachers will decide what religious topics should be included at various grade levels. The state also will inform other state superintendents, textbook committees and publishers about its actions with hopes that future social studies textbooks will include more about religion.

The board acted on the recommendations of a 10-member committee it appointed to study whether more about religion should be included in social studies. The panel was created after members of the N.C. Textbook Commission expressed concern about publishers skirting religion in social studies textbooks to avoid controversy that could hurt sales.

New Legislators Warned That Budget Will Be Tight

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — House and Senate welcomed freshmen legislators to the General Assembly with warnings that a drop in revenues means the state cannot finance every program that's recommended.

"We're going to be short of money this year," House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, told the newcomers at orientation meetings Thursday. "All of you have read about it. It's a fact."

Ramsey said despite the tight money supply, the budget was balanced now and would be balanced again this summer when the General Assembly adjourns.

"I would hope that you would keep the elderly citizens in mind (as you consider the budget) because they are the ones who made our state great," Ramsey said. "And I would hope you would keep public education in mind. It is those boys and girls in school, more than a million of them, who will be expected to keep our nation and our state great in the future."

Ramsey said some spending would be mandated by the federal government, including new funds for prisons and for catastrophic health care.

"We've got to spend money on the prisons," Ramsey said. "We've got no choice about it. If we refuse to do it, the federal government will take it over and cost us twice as much."

Among the 34 freshmen are 26 who have never served in the legislature before, four former House members who won election to the Senate, and four House members who served previous terms in the House.

They were briefed on how to get around the building, their $1,500 office budgets for telephones and postage, and their allotments of 4,000 sheets of official stationery.

Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne — who is expected to be elected president pro tempore, the Senate's top leadership post — said decisions made during the session that begins Wednesday will decide the state's future.

"Some of you people sitting here will be in this body when we start the year 2000, going into the 21st century," he said. "What North Carolina will be like then depends on your work."

Republican Lt. Gov.-elect Jim Gardner, a newcomer to the General Assembly himself, also welcomed the freshmen, saying a bipartisan effort could help solve the state's problems.

"Being a newcomer like most of you, I don't even know what I'm doing up here," said Gardner, who has no legislative experience except for one term in Congress.

"I know every member of the House and Senate worked hard to get here. I know I did," said Gardner, who defeated Senate Majority Leader Tony Rand to become the first Republican lieutenant governor elected this century.

"I know you are here for one reason and one reason only, to serve the people of North Carolina," Gardner said. "I know that Democrats and Republicans working together will be able to solve the hard problems we face."

Gardner Will Have Inauguration Spot

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Lt. Gov.-elect Jim Gardner, the Republican elected to the post this century, will only have five minutes to speak at Gov. Jim Martin's second inauguration Saturday, but he has plenty to say in that time.

"I'll be speaking about the awe I have for the great responsibility the people have given me," Gardner said Thursday. "And I'll be talking about working as a team member with Governor Martin. I'll also be thanking the people who helped me and who gave me their trust."

Inaugural organizers said Martin's second inauguration would vary little from ceremonies except that Gardner would get a chance to speak.

"You do these things with a historical backdrop, so there's not a whole lot of flexibility in the planning..." said Tim Pittman, the spokesman for the inauguration committee.

"The only thing different involving the lieutenant governor is that he will be allowed about five minutes to speak," Pittman said. "That is a little different from past inaugurations. It won't be an inauguration address, as such; it's more as an introduction for Martin, but he will have a chance to speak."

Gardner will host a fund-raising breakfast before the inauguration and a free reception for supporters in the Capitol Saturday afternoon, said Paul Richardson, the head of Gardner's transition team.

The Inaugural Ball, normally held at North Carolina State University's Reynolds Coliseum on the Friday night before the inauguration, was moved to the Raleigh Civic Center and Saturday night this year because of conflicts with the university's basketball schedule.

The change left Friday night open for separate fund-raisers by the election committees for both Martin and Gardner, as well as the state Republican Party.

Pittman said forecasts of partly cloudy skies and temperatures in the 60s should draw a good crowd for the outdoor inauguration ceremony and parade through downtown Raleigh.

"We're expecting 40,000 to 50,000 people, just based on the size of the crowds in the past," Pittman said. "The weather looks to be real good, which is a radical change from 1985 when it was something like 35 degrees outside."

The inauguration begins with the governor's prayer breakfast at 9 a.m. At 11:50 a.m., Martin, Gardner, Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and their wives, as well as the Council of State members, Supreme Court justices and their wives, will walk from the Executive Mansion to the stage in front of the Archives and History Building on Jones Street.

The noon ceremony includes giving the oaths of office to Martin, Gardner and Council of State members and a 19-gun salute to Martin. The governor will then give his inaugural address.

At 1:15 p.m., the inaugural party will move to the reviewing stand on the east side of the Capitol for the parade.

There will be an inaugural reception at 6 p.m., with the ball at 7:30 p.m.

On Sunday, the public can meet Martin, Gardner and the Council of State members at a public reception at the Executive Mansion from 2 to 5 p.m.

Rufus Gets An Office

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Democrats say giving the offices previously used by the lieutenant governor to Secretary of State-elect Rufus Edmisten is a suitable compromise, but the Republican who thought he would get the space said he was disappointed.

"If (Lt. Gov.-elect) Jim Gardner had not elected to move out of the Legislative Office Building, the status quo would have been preserved and I told him so," said Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne. "He wanted all of it. In life we learn to compromise. You can't have it all."

Gardner will forfeit the suite of offices used by his predecessor because of his decision to have a part-time office in the state Capitol, Barnes said Thursday.

Barnes said the suite in the Legislative Office Building being vacated by outgoing Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan will be turned over to Edmisten, who had planned to occupy the Capitol office that Gardner will use.

Gardner also will be given a two-room office in the Legislative Building behind the Senate chamber, Barnes said. That was former Gov. Jim Hunt's office when he was lieutenant governor, Barnes said.

Barnes, who will become Senate president pro tem after the General Assembly convenes next Wednesday, said in an interview that the Capitol office and the Legislative Office Building suite were too much for Gardner and his staff. Space is hard to find in the crowded government complex, Barnes said.

Barnes broke the news to Gardner in a private meeting Thursday afternoon.

Gardner declined to comment at length Thursday, but scheduled a news conference today to complain about the move and other recent actions of Senate Democrats.

"I am very disappointed and I think there are a lot of people in North Carolina who are going to share that feeling, those people who voted for me and a lot of those who didn't," he told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

But Edmisten said that the office moves were a suitable compromise.

"I was going to be very happy being in the Capitol, but everything seems to be evened out now because each of the respective statewide officials have offices where they are closest to their assigned duties. It could have all been avoided in the beginning, but now it is time for us all to move forward."

The squabble erupted last month when Martin, a Republican as is Gardner, announced that he would give Gardner the two-room office in the historic Capitol being vacated by Secretary of State Thad Eure, who is retiring after 52 years on the job.

Water Discharges Go Unreported

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina's drinking water supplies are jeopardized by the state's incomplete records on industrial discharges of hazardous waste, a legislator said.

Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, made his comments Thursday after state officials told the legislative Environmental Review Commission that three times as much hazardous waste is discharged in waste water than state records show.

"There's nobody in state government who knows what's in our waterways," Hackney said. "If you're drinking it, you don't know with any degree of certainty what you're drinking. That's the unvarnished truth."

J.H. "Jerry" Rhodes, the head of the N.C. Hazardous Waste Branch, told the commission that 34 percent of the hazardous waste discharged into streams and municipal treatment plants was reported in 1987, the last year for which figures are available. His report, a survey of 794 companies, shows that 3.8 million tons of hazardous waste was discharged and only 1.3 million tons was reported. The report is incomplete, however, because 284 companies failed to respond.

Researchers Say Less-Educated Are Still Lighting Up

By Brenda C. Coleman
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Better-educated Americans smoke far less since the surgeon general first warned of tobacco's dangers 25 years ago, but by 2000, 30 percent of those who never went beyond high school will still be lighting up, researchers reported today.

Poorer and less educated people are missing the message that smoking is linked to cancer and other numerous health problems, said researchers at the national Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

"Smoking prevalence has declined across all educational groups, but the decline has occurred five times faster among the higher educated compared with the less educated," they reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

One reason may be that much of the antismoking message has gone out in newspapers and medical journals, typically read by the better educated, said Dr. Michael C. Fiore, a leader of the CDC group.

"Little has gone out via mass media, especially television," he said in a telephone interview Thursday from Madison, Wis., where he is now an assistant professor of medicine at the University of Wisconsin Medical Center.

From 1974 to 1985, the number of U.S. smokers among people who had completed four years of college plummeted by more than a third, from 28.5 percent to 18.4 percent, the CDC group said.

But the corresponding drop among people who never graduated from high school was 2.1 percent, from 36.3 percent to 34.2 percent, the researchers found.

Fiore said that while the number of smokers overall is decreasing steadily — from more than 40 percent in the 1960s to less than 29 percent by 1987 — differences in smoking patterns based on educational status stand out more than those based on gender and race.

About 1.3 million Americans quit smoking annually between 1974 and 1985, but about 1 million young people joined the smoking ranks each year during the 1980s, the researchers said.

The researchers, co-led by John P. Pierce, said that if the trend continues, 22 percent of the population 20 and older in the year 2000 will smoke, compared with 30 percent in 1985.

They further predicted that while less than 10 percent of college graduates will be smokers in 2000, at least 30 percent of those with no more than a high school education will be puffing.

"Public health interventions must be made more relevant to these slowly changing groups," the researchers said. "Only when such targeted efforts are successful will smoking have the potential to lose its distinction as the number one preventable cause of death in the United States."

A spokesman for the Tobacco Institute, a Washington-based group representing the tobacco industry, said the study only confirms that people in that segment of society enjoy smoking.

"The antismoking forces should not adopt some paternalistic attitude saying these people are less in a position to take information on smoking and health and make a rational decision on whether or not they should smoke," said Gary Miller.

Smoking-related deaths claim 390,000 Americans annually, said Joann Schellenbach, a spokeswoman for the American Cancer Society in New York.

Smoking is linked to lung cancer, heart disease, chronic obstructive lung disease, emphysema, and cancers of the mouth, larynx, esophagus, pancreas, stomach, bladder and possibly cervix, Ms. Schellenbach said.

Carlucci OKs Base Closings

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A plan to save billions of dollars by closing dozens of military bases around the country goes before Congress after being approved ahead of schedule by Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci.

The House and Senate must deal with the plan in its entirety, approving or rejecting it. The congressional resolution would then go to the White House. Senate and House leaders have predicted Congress will approve the plan.

Carlucci told reporters Thursday that U.S. military leaders strongly endorsed what he called a "unique opportunity" to save money.

"We just have to move ahead and do this," Carlucci said. "We have not closed a base since 1978. And I think that fact speaks for itself. We need to step up to the plate here."

Carlucci took just a week to review the recommendations of a government commission that had been created by the administration and Congress to review 4,200 military properties.

After seven months of review, the commission recommended outright closure of 34 military installations and 52 military housing complexes and partial closure of five other installations. It recommended that 54 other bases receive new missions or additional personnel.

Members of the commission estimated the closings would save the nation $693 million a year in the short term, and up to $5.6 billion over two decades.

Carlucci said he would have endorsed the closing of even more bases, but did not want to tinker with the delicate political compromise.

Military Expansion

WASHINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A panel of the state Coastal Resources Commission has begun a study to determine whether new standards and procedures are needed to address conflicts created by expanded military activities.

At its first meeting Thursday, the commission's Military Activities Task Force received an outline of military projects that could affect land, water and air along the coast. There are at least nine projects that involve expansion of special use airspace where military aircraft train, state officials said.

Requests for more airspace and land area have sparked strong protests from many residents who have complained about aircraft noise, threats to civilian aviation, and possible harm from sophisticated weapons that use lasers and electromagnetic radiation.

The task force is scheduled to report in May to the 15-member commission, which regulates development in 20 coastal counties.

Tower Hospitalized

DALLAS (AP) — Defense Secretary-designate John Tower had a cancerous polyp removed from his rectum last week and was recovering today from surgery to remove a polyp, believed benign, from his colon, a hospital spokesman said.

The 63-year-old former Texas senator was in good condition and "is expected to make a full recovery," said Steve Habgood, a spokesman for Baylor University Medical Center, where Tower underwent the three-hour operation Thursday.

Dr. R.D. Dignan performed the operation, and a preliminary test showed the growth to be benign. A complete report was to be issued later today.

Doctors discovered the polyp when Tower underwent a colonoscopy examination Dec. 27. A rectal polyp was discovered at that time and immediately removed.

Tests on that polyp showed it to contain some "malignant but well differentiated cells," Habgood said. Such cells are typical of a malignancy in its early stages.

Tower, who retired in 1985 after 24 years in the Senate, served as an arms negotiator for President Reagan and headed the White House's Iran-Contra investigative panel.

President-elect Bush named Tower to be defense secretary on Dec. 16.

NASA Says Plutonium Device Safe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — NASA said today the risk of a nuclear accident will be only slight when it launches an interplanetary satellite containing a plutonium power plant later this year from the space shuttle Atlantis.

In an environmental impact statement required by law, the space agency said health and environmental consequences of the "most probable" of accidents — a one-in-10 million chance — would be small.

The inch-thick document was released by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and an abstract was to be published in the Federal Register.

The electric generator, holding nearly 50 pounds of plutonium oxide, will be aboard the Galileo spacecraft scheduled for launch from the space shuttle in October for a two-year study of the planet Jupiter.

According to one estimate, if that amount of plutonium were released into the atmosphere it would have about 10 times the radioactivity of the Soviet spy satellite that crashed into Canada in 1978. Plutonium is used in nuclear weapons as well as nuclear reactors.

The environmental impact statement calls for public comment over the succeeding 45 days before a final statement is issued.

"This is part of the approval process, the portion of the process where the public and interested groups can review our thinking and our analysis of the risk and comment," said NASA spokesman Charles Redmond. "This is a nuclear device and through this process we hope to get launch approval."

The final approval must come from the president or from the Office of Science and Technology Policy, Redmond said.

"An intensive analysis of the proposed action indicates that the possible health and environmental consequences of launch or mission anomalies pose small risks," the statement says. "The accident estimated to be the most probable would pose very small health risks and very small probability of environmental contamination."

A nuclear generator has not been carried aboard a space shuttle before, although the devices have been used on space probes and manned flights to the moon.

Steve Aftergood, of the conservative, pro-nuclear Center to Bridge the Gap, in Los Angeles, said his organization will not oppose use of the generator. The group has been critical of nuclear power in space.

"There is a finite risk," he said. "I believe NASA has done a good job of minimizing that risk by design of the system. The risk is not reduced to zero. Reasonable people disagree."

"The basic question is, 'do the benefits outweigh the risks?'" he added. "My judgment is they do."

On the Galileo mission, the generator would be used to provide electricity to the space probe when it is too distant to draw energy from the sun into its solar panels.

It is built to withstand fire and explosions, such as the accident that destroyed the Challenger and killed its crew of seven in 1986.

According to the environmental impact statement, the most likely accident would involve the complicated method used to send the probe on its journey. That scenario envisions a crash of the satellite into Earth at high speed.

Galileo will be released into Earth orbit by the shuttle and boosted toward Venus by an attached rocket stage. Flying around Venus and using a second rocket, the probe will gain velocity that will speed it back toward Earth. From Earth, the satellite will gain an additional boost, loop out into space and return a second time for another push before it finally hurtles toward Jupiter. The trip to Jupiter will take six years.

The trajectory is called VEEGA, for Venus-Earth-Earth Gravity Assist.

"The maximum credible accident would be an accidental reentry into the Earth atmosphere during a planned VEEGA flyby," the statement said. It put the chances of that happening as one in 10 million.

Little Girl's Body Rejecting Transplants

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PITTSBURGH — Less than six weeks after undergoing a rare five-organ transplant, a 3-year-old girl is rejecting the new organs and will die without another complete transplant, doctors say.

Rolandrea Dodge of Farmington, N.M., became only the second person to receive a new liver, stomach, pancreas, small intestine and portion of a large intestine in a 16½-hour operation Nov. 29.

But Dr. Thomas Starzl, the transplant pioneer at Children's Hospital here, said Thursday the girl's immune system was rejecting the new organs. Hospital officials launched a nationwide search for another set of donor organs after blood tests and biopsies revealed the rejection, Starzl said.

"She is very critically ill. Rolly's only chance for survival is with a new set of organs," said hospital spokeswoman Lynn McMahon.

The little girl was in intensive care, her breathing aided by a respirator. Rolly, as she is called by parents Cyndi and Brandon Dodge, was born with intractable secretory diarrhea, an incurable disease that prevented her intestines from absorbing food and liquids. She has spent her life in hospitals, getting 21 hours a day of high-protein food through intravenous feeding.

Four other people in the United States have had multiple abdominal organ transplants, and all have died. Three of the cases involved fewer than five organs, while only one involved five. Doctors are not sure what went wrong with Rolly because there are so few precedents, Ms. McMahon said.

"Doctors are seeing some things ... and they they are not exactly certain what they are. They can't say definitely what is happening, but they can say they're resulting from the changes in her immune system," she said.

Two of the previous four transplants took place at Children's. The most recent was Tabatha Foster, 3, of Madisonville, Ky., who died of a blood infection in May, six months after her operation. Tabatha was the only other patient to get five organs.

"Some of Rolly's symptoms are different from Tabatha's," Ms. McMahon said. "In all of her six months, Tabatha never exhibited any symptoms of rejection."

Doctors believe Tabatha's infection was caused by the amount of cyclosporine she received. While cyclosporine keeps the body's immune system from rejecting donated organs, too much of it can leave a patient vulnerable to infections. Rolly was given less of the drug than Tabatha.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the book of 1 Samuel intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

SAMUEL AND SAUL

SAUL, ANOINTED BY SAMUEL, HAS BEEN TOLD THE MANY THINGS THAT WILL HAPPEN ON HIS JOURNEY HOME—AND THEY DO, EVEN TO HIS MEETING WITH A COMPANY OF PROPHETS, NOW...

...AND PROPHECIES ALONG WITH THEM IN THEIR MIDST! THOSE WHO KNOW HIM EXCLAIM: "IS SAUL ALSO AMONG THE PROPHETS?!" AND FOR GENERATIONS TO COME, WHENEVER AN ISRAELITE WISHES TO SHOW COMPLETE AMAZEMENT, HE WILL USE THIS PHRASE TO DENOTE HIS ASTONISHMENT!

Long-Time Survivors Of AIDS Beat Odds

Scientists Study Them For Clues

By Brenda C. Coleman
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Mike has lived twice as long as might have been expected when doctors diagnosed his AIDS. Dan Turner and Cristofer Shihar had one chance in five of seeing 1984.

They don't know why they've survived what has been a death sentence for more than 45,000 Americans, but say it may be a matter of attitude.

"A lot of people don't die of the disease, they die because they give up," said Mike, a 34-year-old Chicagoan who was diagnosed with acquired immune deficiency syndrome in January 1984. He asked that his last name be withheld.

According to Judith Wiker, a Chicago holistic therapist who says she has counseled hundreds of clients with AIDS or AIDS-related problems, Mike is one of many people with the disease who are well enough to feel and act normal.

"There are a lot of healthy people running around with AIDS," she said.

Scientists are trying to determine just why some people have survived as long as 10 years with AIDS. The federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta is studying 119 people known to have lived with it for three or more years.

"Is the virus somehow different?" asks Ann M. Hardy, a CDC epidemiologist now at the National Center for Health Statistics in Hyattsville, Md. "Is it something in their immune system?"

Does survival time hinge on the mildness or severity of the infections that attack people with AIDS? Or could the key really be a "lifestyle-psychosocial type of thing" — a positive attitude and emotional support?

All of these possibilities are now being studied, either by the CDC or in studies funded by the National Institutes of Health.

For the purposes of the CDC's 2-year-old study, long-term survivors were defined as people who lived at least three years after being diagnosed.

Unlike the estimated hundreds of thousands of Americans who are infected with the AIDS virus but do not have symptoms, long-term survivors actually have battled one or more ailments that define acquired immune deficiency syndrome — including Kaposi's sarcoma,

Dan Turner was diagnosed as having AIDS in 1982

The Associated Press

pneumonia, damaged immune systems and severe weight loss.

Most long-term survivors are white homosexual men in their 30s whose main or only symptom is Kaposi's sarcoma, the skin cancer that was rare before AIDS became an epidemic, CDC data indicates.

"The major issue people are interested in is what way the immune response for the long-term survivor is different than in the short-term survivor," said Dr. Henry Masur, deputy chief of critical care medicine at the Clinical Center of the NIH in Bethesda, Md.

"With any disease, whether it's cancer or pneumonia, in a healthy person, some people get sick very quickly and die and other people survive much longer. With breast cancer or colon cancer, some people will be dead within a few months and some people will go for 30 years," Masur said.

For Mike, an accountant, three years of chemotherapy kept the skin sores of Kaposi's sarcoma at bay. He then began treatment with the drug AZT, now called zidovudine, which prolongs the lives of many with AIDS.

Mike, who considers himself "fairly lucky," said his only current health problem is mild leg pain. "I'm basically as normal as they get. Nobody would know, if they saw me on the street, that I had been diagnosed with AIDS."

Turner, 42, of San Francisco, was diagnosed with Kaposi's in February 1982, before most Americans — including doctors — had heard of AIDS.

"I do believe one can live with AIDS and strike up a bargain and co-exist with the virus, as we do with other viruses," said Turner.

He underwent chemotherapy, a year of acupuncture, took megadoses of Vitamin C for a while, has taken zidovudine intermittently since early 1988 and still gets alpha-interferon, a genetically engineered anti-cancer drug.

"I go to the gym regularly, and I try to maintain my weight and my energy level," said Turner, who writes and performs music. "A friend and I have just finished writing a movie script, which we hope to sell."

Shihar, 38, of Los Angeles, was diagnosed with Kaposi's in November 1982, and said he's done "just about the opposite of all the recommended treatments" but his illness went into remission anyway.

"I would love to say it was all very spiritual, but I was in remission before I became spiritual," said Shihar, who works for Northern Lights Alternatives, a New York-based education and support organization for people with AIDS. "I think the one thing I hear from people I know who have survived is they're real stubborn."

Ms. Wiker believes "there is a certain kind of person that is a survivor with AIDS. That kind of personality is one that starts living in the moment, a person that is letting go of their past feelings and fears ... and they're letting go of future projections about death."

That theory is being tested in a federally funded study at the New York State Psychiatric Institute, where 450 people infected with the AIDS virus are being tracked for five years to determine whether their emotional state influences their resistance to the illness.

"Most people would like to believe they have control over this, and if they remain optimistic and cheerful it will help," said Dr. Jack M. Gorman, associate professor of clinical psychiatry at Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons and principal investigator in the study.

"And we certainly want to encourage people to remain optimistic and cheerful, but we don't really know if it makes a difference or not, and that's what we're trying to see," he added.

Teens' Parents Are Breaking The Law

Dear Abby: High school football season recently ended, and I would like your opinion of a practice that has been going on for a number of years in our small New Jersey community.

The parents of the members of the football team provide "victory parties" for the team and cheerleaders. Beer and other alcoholic beverages are served. The host parents collect all the car keys as the teen-age guests arrive. The keys are returned only after the party-goers can prove that they are sober and capable of driving — otherwise, they must spend the night, or wait until they are sober.

The rationale: These kind of parent-supervised parties keep the drinking teen-agers off the streets and save lives. They say that if such parties were not provided in a "safe" environment, the kids would "party" somewhere else and possibly become a traffic fatality statistic.

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

In our state, the legal drinking age is 21.

What is your opinion, Abby? — Concerned New Jersey Parent

Dear Concerned: Serving teen-agers beer or any other kind of alcoholic beverages in one's home because "they would party somewhere else," is, in my view, both a feeble and unacceptable excuse. Furthermore, anyone who provides minors with alcohol is clearly in violation of the law and should be dealt with accordingly.

Dear Abby: Here are some suggestions for "Age Conscious," who doesn't know what to say when someone asks her how old she is:

1. "I am 21 and holding." (Given with a sweet smile.)
2. "Why do you need to know?"
3. "What makes my age your business?"

4. "When you pay my rent (or mortgage), I'll tell you my personal business!"

If all else fails and they still persist, this proves that they have the hide of a rhinoceros, so at this point give yourself permission to be as rude as they are, and just plain tell them to mind their own business.

The word will get around, and nobody will ever ask you a personal question again. — An Old Hand At Telling People Off

Dear Abby: Re people who do not wish to tell people how old they are: I have a dear friend (now retired) who avoided revealing her age in the following manner:

Ms. Nosey: Ruth, just how old are you?

Ruth (leaning in near Ms. Nosey's ear): Can you keep a secret?

Ms. Nosey (expectantly): Yes!

Ruth: Well, so can I. — Lakeland, Fla.

Dear Abby: Recently "Age Conscious" wrote to you asking how to deal politely with people who ask her how old she is.

What I find more difficult is answering people who ask me to "guess" their age. I feel put on the spot and never know quite how to answer tactfully. Any suggestions? — Bobbie In Lancaster, Calif.

Dear Bobbie: Always "guess" their age to be 10 years younger than they look.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gained ground today, extending the early-1989 rally that has carried the Dow Jones industrial average to its highest levels since the crash of 1987.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 6.60 points to 2,197.14 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 524 up, 250 down and 441 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 22.47 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Before the market opened the Labor Department reported that the civilian unemployment rate dropped to 5.3 percent in December from 5.4 percent the month before. Accompanying data showed a 279,000 increase in nonfarm payroll employment.

The report signalled persistent strength in the economy, and did nothing to relieve expectations on Wall Street that the Federal Reserve might tighten credit further in its campaign to keep inflation from reviving.

However, the numbers were pretty much in line with advance estimates on the Street, and thus came as no great surprise to traders.

Analysts said portfolio managers at investing institutions were continuing to buy stocks to put some of their large cash reserves to work at the start of a new year.

Among the blue chips, General Motors rose 1/2 to 84 3/4; Eastman Kodak 3/8 to 45 3/4; International Business Machines 1/4 to 122 1/2, and General Electric 3/8 to 45.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .55 to 158.04. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .19 at 309.61.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 12.86 to 2,190.54, surpassing its 1988 closing high of 2,183.50 reached on Oct. 21.

Hospitals Begin New Pay Plans

WINSTON-SALEM — Forsyth Memorial and Baptist hospitals are starting nurse career ladders this month to enhance the professional status of nurses who stay by the bedside.

The optional career ladders have several steps that successively provide more money and responsibility for registered nurses. Eligibility for each step is based on experience, education and length of employment.

The career ladders are the latest tool that hospitals are using to recruit and retain nurses. Hospitals are recognizing that increasing salaries alone won't stop the exodus of registered nurses from their floors.

Sallye A. Taylor, the vice president of nursing at Forsyth Memorial, said recently that many nurses leave the hospital for nine-to-five jobs in doctors' offices or with insurance companies, even though the pay is less.

"Time is a very big issue," she said. "Some say, 'I've done this for a long time and I don't want to do it anymore.'"

Nurses also say that they leave because of the lack of recognition for their work and the lack of authority over it. Other factors they cite are understaffing, having to fill out time-consuming paperwork, and the stress of caring for patients who are sicker on the average than in previous years.

EPA Says Ban Needed On Pesticide

WASHINGTON — The Environmental Protection Agency Thursday proposed banning a pesticide said to kill more than two million birds every year, including bald eagles in the Chesapeake Bay region.

According to the EPA, granular carbofuran — widely used for 20 years mainly on corn and sorghum — has "unreasonable adverse effects" on birds, which can be killed by eating a single granule.

The proposal was made 18 months after the EPA's staff recommended the ban. More than three years ago the agency began investigating the insecticide when large numbers of small birds were found poisoned in fields treated by the granules. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has urged geographic restrictions on the chemical.

"It's long overdue," Ed Clarke of the Wildlife Center of Virginia said of the EPA proposal.

FMC Corp., manufacturer of the insecticide, issued a statement saying it is disappointed but confident of proving that the granules do not pose an unreasonable risk to birds during the 60-day comment period before a decision on the ban is made. At least six million pounds of granular carbofuran are used annually to treat 10 major crops.

Acting deputy EPA administrator Jack Moore said the insecticide kills more birds than other chemicals used for the same purposes. He said the long delay between the EPA staff recommendation in June 1987 and Thursday's proposal was needed to evaluate alternative pesticides.

More than 20 species of migratory birds and bald eagles have been reported killed by granular carbofuran, and federal officials have blamed it for the deaths of 17 bald eagles in Maryland and six in Virginia in recent years.

Duke's Quinn Snyder (14) blocks shot try by Bruce Elder

CLEMSON, S.C. — North Carolina State coach Jim Valvano says the 16th-ranked Wolfpack got out its bag of tricks to defeat Clemson in the Atlantic Coast Conference opener for both teams.

"We just tried to disrupt their pattern a little," Valvano said after the 73-65 victory Thursday night. "I guess you could say we resorted to a few tricks."

Rodney Monroe scored 21 as the Wolfpack held Clemson scoreless over the final 5:24.

Clemson led 65-63 on Elden Campbell's basket with 5:24 left. But North Carolina State, 8-1, then scored the game's final 10 points for its sixth straight victory.

The Wolfpack went to a box-and-one defense on 6-foot-9 forward Dale Davis with 8:30 remaining and it proved to be the difference. Clemson led 61-55 and Davis had scored 20 points when 6-1 guard Chris Corchiani was assigned to guard Davis and held him scoreless the rest of the game.

"In the second half we had trouble with Davis and Campbell so we put our smallest guy on one of their biggest," Valvano said. "And Monroe shot well. That's one of the fine lines between winning and losing."

Clemson coach Cliff Ellis said Valvano's move caught him by surprise.

"We didn't react well to the chaser on Davis and that was the key move that helped N.C. State win the game," Ellis said. "Our perimeter didn't move and didn't dribble to penetrate the gaps."

Ellis added, "I thought our club got beaten by an excellent team of an upper-division caliber."

Davis had all of Clemson's points in a 10-4 run over a 5½-minute stretch in the second half to give the Tigers, 7-3, the 61-55 lead.

Clemson's only points in the final 8:50 came on baskets by David Young at 5:47 and Campbell 23 seconds later.

Monroe scored 12 of the Wolfpack's final 18 points.

Chucky Brown had 18 points for North Carolina State while Brian Howard added 14 and Corchiani 11.

Kirkland Howling scored 13 points for Clemson and Campbell finished with 12.

Duke 101
Davidson 53

DURHAM (AP) — Top-ranked Duke planned to pound the ball inside against Davidson to open up their perimeter shooting. But the layups kept falling.

The Blue Devils, 10-0, beat Davidson 101-53 Thursday as 6-foot-10 Danny Ferry scored 18 points and grabbed nine rebounds. Quin Snyder, who anchored the defense with three steals and two blocks, said everything didn't go as planned.

"We want to make people stop us inside, but at the same time we have to recognize when we can't force the ball," Snyder said.

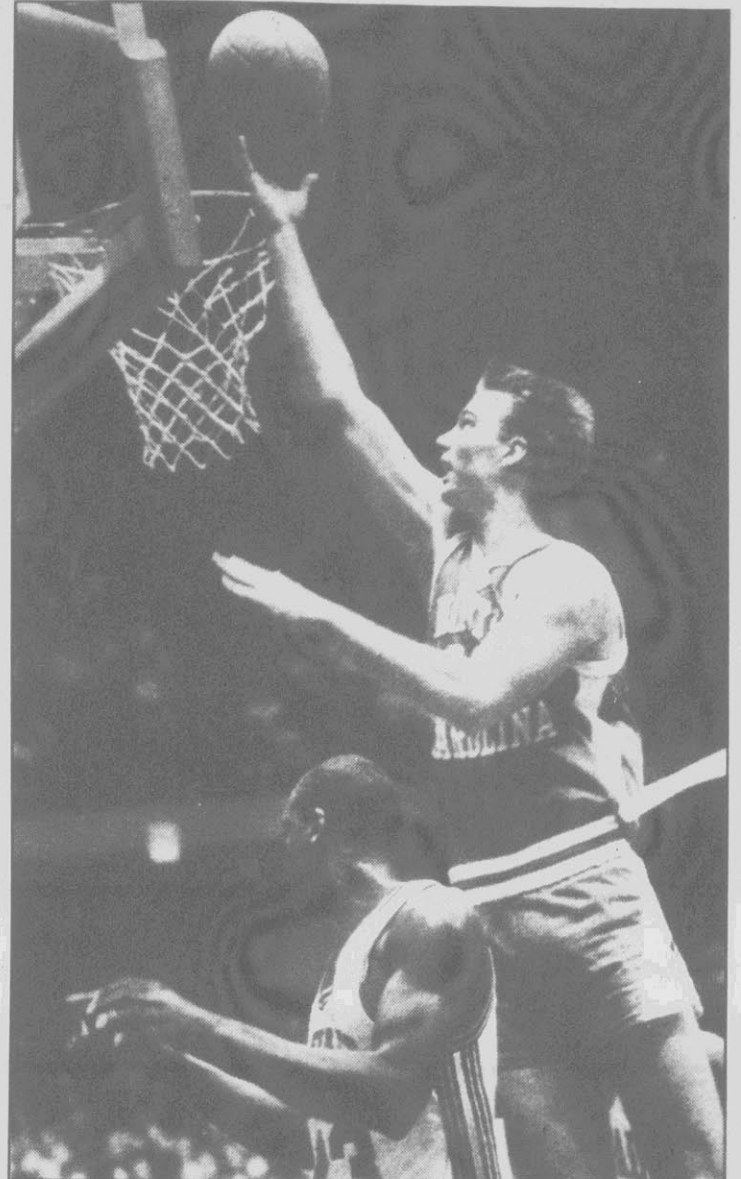

"We found ourselves a bit tonight," he said. "We made the extra pass on offense and we rotated well on defense."

For Davidson coach Bobby Hussey, the game plan was both simple and impossible.

"We spent most of our time figuring out how do you guard Danny Ferry," he said.

Lady Pirates Trim Campbell, 76-65

ECU Women Record Back-To-Back Wins For First Time This Season

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina's Lady Pirates put together a good shooting night with some good defense and rolled up a 76-65 basketball victory over Campbell University Thursday night.

It marked the second straight victory for the Lady Pirates — the first time they've put two wins together this year. In fact, one must go back to last year near midseason to find two straight victories for the Lady Pirates, when they beat William & Mary, Richmond — and Campbell — to string together three in a row.

"We didn't shoot well at times," Coach Pat Pierson said, "but we scored when we had to."

The Lady Pirates ended up with a 50.8 percentage for the game, including a 60.7 mark in the second half. They held Campbell to just 41.3 percent and forced the Lady Camels into 27 turnovers — an advantage of 13 in that department.

Even so, the Camels put on rallies from time to time in the game and would never roll over and die for the Pirates. East Carolina led by as much as 14 points in the first half, only to see the Camels fight back to within three before the period ended.

In the second half, East Carolina went out by 15, only to see Campbell again rally, this time within seven before the game finally ended.

"I was sort of disappointed in the level of play when we made a lot of substitutions," Pierson said. "That was when they came back on us like they did. We lost our patience in the first half, too. Our shot selection got poor."

But, Pierson added, she was glad to see the team overcome its mistakes and get back into the flow of the game.

Campbell never led in the game and never tied it. East Carolina scored the first six points to get the lead before Campbell came back to cut the lead to two on three occasions, the last time at 10-8. But Tonya Hargrove ignited an eight-point string for the Lady Pirates that pushed the lead out to 10, 18-8, with 12:05 left in the half.

East Carolina steadily pulled away, finally reaching a 14-point margin at 27-13 with 6:41 left when Hargrove scored from underneath.

But Campbell's Denise Ford, who led all scorers with 29 points, ignited a Camel rally that slice the margin down to three at 29-26 and again at 31-28. Ford scored nine of Campbell's final 15 points in the half.

Chris O'Connor, who hit her first five shots on the night, scored with five seconds left for a 33-28 halftime lead.

"Chris had a good night," Pierson said. "That's the best she's played. She's been shooting better in practice."

Ford hit again to open the second half, but East Carolina began another pullaway after that, moving out by 13 before Campbell cut it back to nine again. Then, the Pirates inched away again, moving out by 15 at 58-43 with 8:27 to play. Campbell drew within seven again at 72-65, but only 36 seconds remained by then.

Ford, who also pulled down 18 rebounds, led the Campbell effort. "We did everything we could to slow her down, but we couldn't," Pierson said. "She got a lot of points off her offensive rebounds (14)."

Tammy Brown added 12 points and Tonya Colwell hit 11.

East Carolina was led by Irish Hamilton with 14 points while Sarah Gray had 12, Hargrove had 11 and O'Connor, 10.

The win evened the Lady Pirate record at 4-4 while Campbell drops to 3-5, bowing for the third straight game.

East Carolina opens Colonial Athletic Association play on Saturday, hosting William & Mary at 7 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The road can be a lonely place for a basketball team, but East Carolina coach Mike Steele knows how the Pirates play away from home figures to be a big key to the season.

The Pirates stand at 6-5 following a 92-69 loss to 19th-ranked Georgia Tech Wednesday and open Colonial Athletic Association play Saturday at William & Mary. Game time is set for 7:30 p.m. at William & Mary Hall.

The Tribe is 2-7 following a 71-53 win over Manhattan Wednesday.

Last year, the Tribe swept a pair of games from the Pirates, including an embarrassing 88-62 defeat in Williamsburg, Va.

"Traditionally, ECU has struggled against William & Mary in all the games," Steele said. "Any road game is going to be a struggle. It's important for us because we have two at home right after (William & Mary Saturday and a Jan. 11 game at Richmond)."

East Carolina will host James Madison and George Mason in Minges in their next two games, their third and fourth in the CAA this year.

The Tribe holds a 30-21 edge in the series between the two teams.

Wins, much less road wins, were a rarity for ECU last year as the Pirates struggled to an 8-20 record. The only road win for the team came in a 68-65 win over James Madison.

This year, though, ECU sends an improved team into CAA play.

Senior Blue Edwards has returned from a one-year hiatus due to a disciplinary suspension and leads the Pirates in scoring with an average of 26.0 points per game, including 29 against the Yellow Jackets.

Junior forward Gus Hill, who was a first team All-CAA pick a year ago as well as the conference's rookie of the year, has also come on after a slow start and is averaging 14.2 points a game.

Prior to the loss to Georgia Tech, ECU had won two games in a row, including a 80-74 decision over Texas Christian.

"Anytime you lose you're disappointed," Steele said after the loss to Georgia Tech. "(But) a new season starts and again we're 6-5 and I was pleased with the play, other than the second half (against Tech), and how we've been playing the last few games."

"You can't really use that game as a barometer of how we're playing because they are so talented." Still, Steele is concerned about William & Mary.

"It's a big game, it's our first game of the conference (season)," he said. "William and Mary hasn't beaten that many teams this year, but they've had guys sick, they've had guys hurt and now they have everybody back."

"What they are going to be able to do is say, hey we're 2-7, but now it's a new season in the conference and we're playing at home. It is going to be an important game."

The Tribe is led by senior swingman Greg Burzell and guards Matt O'Reilly and Jimmy Apple. In the last meeting between the two teams, Burzell scored 21 points, many coming off of three-point baskets, to lead the Tribe to a win at home.

Burzell, a 6-5 senior, is averaging 10.0 points a game, while Tom Bock, a 6-9 senior, is the team's leading scorer with a 15.1 average. Apple, a 6-4 sophomore, is hitting 13.9 point a game.

Other likely starters for the Tribe include 6-9 sophomore John Leone, hitting 7.8 points a game, and O'Reilly, a 5-9 junior, hitting 4.0. O'Reilly is the CAA's assist leader with 4.5 per game while Bock is seventh in scoring and fourth in field goal percentage.

Blue Gets CAA Honor

East Carolina's Blue Edwards has been selected the Colonial Athletic Association's Player of the Week for the period ending Dec. 31.

In two games during the week, Edwards led the Pirates to victory over Maryland-Baltimore County and Texas Christian. In the UMBC game, Edwards scored a career high 38 points and pulled in nine rebounds. Against Texas Christian, he scored 25 points and nine rebounds.

He also shot 66.7 percent from the floor for the two games, had seven assists, five steals and blocked two shots.

At the end of the week, Edwards was the CAA's leading scorer with a 25.7 points per game average. He was fifth in the league in field goal shooting and was ninth in both rebounding and assists.

Edwards scored 29 points against Georgia Tech Wednesday to raise his average to 26.0. He and the Pirates open their CAA season on Saturday at William & Mary.

NCAA Slaps OSU

(See Other Story, B-4)

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — The NCAA today placed Oklahoma State's football program on four years probation, barring the Cowboys from postseason play for three years and keeping them off live television for two years.

The NCAA's Committee on Infractions, citing more than 40 rules violations, also limited to 20 the number of scholarships Oklahoma State can offer in the 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92 academic years.

Richmond Defeats UNC-Wilmington

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Mike Winiiecki scored 20 points and grabbed 11 rebounds to power Richmond to a 78-60 Colonial Athletic Association victory over North Carolina-Wilmington on Thursday night. The Spiders improved to 5-6 overall and 1-0 in the conference, while the Seahawks slipped to 4-6 and 0-1. The Spiders were in control most of the way, taking a 36-30 halftime lead that they expanded to as many as 17 points, 67-50, on Winiiecki's basket with four minutes remaining. Ken Atkinson added 18 points for Richmond and Eric English had 17, including three-of-three shooting from 3-point range. Winiiecki led the Spiders to a 29-22 edge on the boards. Joe Houzer paced North Carolina-Wilmington with 17 points. Antonio Howard added 14 points and Brannon Lancaster 11.

Cox Wrestlers Defeat Williamston

WILLIAMSTON — A.G. Cox Middle School of Winterville rolled up a 75-12 wrestling victory over Williamston Thursday. Cox won 13 of the weight divisions, including five by forfeits. Winning by pins were Danny Via, Demetrius Lynch, Carter Chapman, Kendrick Ruffin, Timmy Craft and Brian Harper. Torrence Smith added a technical fall decision while Percy Rogers won by decision. Cox is now 8-0 on the season.

Ayden Cagers Roll Over Chicod

AYDEN — Ayden Middle School romped to a 101-12 basketball victory over Chicod in junior high school action Thursday. Ayden, which played its starters only six minutes, had five players in double figures, led by Orlando Peterson with 15. Victor Barrett had 14, Carl Artis and Andreell Roundtree each had 13 and Alico Dunk had 12. In the girls' game, Ayden took a 36-8 win. Nikki Wilson led Ayden with 13 points. The Ayden teams are both 5-0 and play Grifton on Monday.

Goff Seeks Orgel, Bell For Staff

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — South Carolina linebackers coach Frank Orgel has talked with Ray Goff about a spot on the new Georgia head football coach's staff.

Orgel, who played football at Georgia from 1957-60, said he is applying for the defensive coordinator's position left open after Goff fired Dale Strahm Wednesday but that he would consider a job as a position coach if that's what Goff offered.

"We've talked about both of them," Orgel said by phone from his home in Columbia, S.C. Thursday evening. "I'll just have to wait and see what's on his mind. I'd like to come back, certainly. I'd just like to be on the coaching staff. As long as I can coach and recruit and have a roll of film to look at, I'll be happy."

Orgel said Goff called him Jan. 2, the day he was named to replace Vince Dooley. He said the two have talked by phone, but not met. They probably would try to "get together sometime this weekend."

Orgel, 49, said he has always been interested in returning to his alma mater and that he told Goff of that desire long before the 33-year-old former running backs coach became the Bulldogs' head coach.

Orgel has been linebackers coach at South Carolina since 1986. Before that, he was defensive coordinator under Pat Dye, his roommate as a player at Georgia, at Auburn for five years.

He also served as defensive coordinator for Dye while the two were at East Carolina from 1974 to 1979. He was an assistant at Clemson for one year (1980) and began his collegiate coaching career at North Alabama in 1973.

He was head coach and athletic director at Warner Robins High School before that.

Orgel's responsibilities at Auburn included recruiting in south Georgia where he signed athletes like Benji Roland and Kevin Porter. He is currently responsible for the Fort Lauderdale-Miami area and south Georgia for the Gamecocks.

Also Thursday, former East Carolina defensive coordinator Richard Bell said he has applied for a job on Goff's staff.

"I talked to Coach Goff earlier this week and I have not heard back from him. I hope to hear from him sometime this weekend," Bell said.

In addition, Willie McClendon, an All-SEC running back on Dooley's 1978 team and a teammate of Goff's said he has contacted Goff about a job.

McClendon, who was an assistant under Mike Cavan at Valdosta State before taking a sales job, said Thursday he has not "heard back from him."

McClendon said he would accept a job with Georgia "quicker than Ray accepted the head coaching job."

SuperSonics Streaking On Home Court

SEATTLE — With Dale Ellis playing like a Northwest version of Michael Jordan, the Seattle SuperSonics are becoming virtually unbeatable at home.

"We want to establish ourselves and make teams believe they can't win here in Seattle," forward Michael Cage said after the Sonics beat the Sacramento Kings 120-106 Thursday night for their ninth consecutive victory at Seattle Coliseum.

Ellis scored a career-high 49 points in the game and continued his incredible streak of accuracy from long distance, hitting five of eight shots from 3-point range. He has made 19 of his last 26 3-point attempts.

"Dale is feeling it now and I want him to continue to feel it," Sonics coach Bernie Bickerstaff said. "Down the stretch his teammates were pulling for him and that's good to see."

Ellis missed his last two shots that could have made him Seattle's third 50-point scorer in a game. Fred Brown set the team record with 58 points and Spencer Haywood had 51.

Reserve point guard John Lucas, who has had a long career of feeding the ball to hot players, says that Ellis is one of the hottest he's ever seen.

"He's taking his game to a different level," Lucas said. "It makes you feel guilty when you get asked to do the postgame talk show. As a point guard, you have to ask how you can keep getting him the ball."

Lucas and his teammates did exactly that Thursday as the Sonics broke away from an 86-86 tie after three periods to outscore the Kings 34-20 in the fourth quarter. Ellis had 14 points in the fourth period and 15 in the third and finished 20-for-32 from the field.

"I took a lot of shots and they kept giving me the ball," Ellis said. "Since I was getting open, I kept shooting."

Ellis said 3-point baskets "are like dunks because they take a lot out of the other team. I just try to shoot them like an ordinary shot."

Sacramento coach Jerry Reynolds agreed that Ellis' 3-pointers were hard for his team to adjust to. "He shoots threes like most people shoot foul shots," Reynolds said. "The threes break your spirit."

Ellis is averaging 29.3 points per game, third in the league behind Jordan and Utah's Karl Malone, but the Sonics are second to none in scaring opposing teams at home.

Seattle's nine consecutive victories have been by an average margin of nearly 22 points, an average that was lowered with Thursday night's 14-point decision.

"We've played well on the road, too; it's just that we've lost some close games on the road," Bickerstaff said. "My barometer isn't winning and losing at this point in the season — it's how well we're playing. We've played consistently hard. It's virtually impossible to have that effort for 82 games. I can't criticize them if the effort hasn't been there for only two of our first 28 games."

"The league is so competitive that you don't see 4-0 road trips very often," Cage said. "The key to getting to the playoffs is winning at home and making teams respect you. We tend to set the tempo better at home and teams can't catch up with us."

Which Quarterback Is Which?

AFC Finalists Have Undergone A Role Reversal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — There's an easy way to tell the quarterbacks apart Sunday in the AFC Championship game.

One of them likes to throw the ball as often as he can. He is Buffalo's Jim Kelly, who finished near the middle of the pack in the AFC quarterback rankings.

The other spends most of his time handing off. He is Cincinnati's Boomer Esiason, who went from start to finish in the regular season as the NFL's top-ranked passer.

Puzzled? You're not alone.

The two quarterbacks have done a role reversal heading into the conference championship at Riverfront Stadium.

Kelly came out firing in the Bills' 17-10 playoff victory over Houston last Sunday, throwing on Buffalo's first six plays. That flew in the face of the Bills' conservative philosophy, which is based on running the ball successfully.

Kelly, who has admitted his frustration with the Bills' offensive conservatism, said the air attack was "something I've been waiting for for a long time." He ended up completing 19 of 33 passes for 244 yards with one interception.

"It definitely made me feel better," Kelly said. "It's something that when you win and you know you're a big part of it by throwing the ball, it makes it a little bit special."

While Kelly was doing his best

Dan Marino imitation, Esiason was playing a role usually reserved for a wishbone quarterback.

He threw just 19 times, with season-low totals of seven completions and 108 yards, in a 21-13 playoff victory Saturday over Seattle. It marked the fourth consecutive game in which Esiason had completed 10 or fewer passes and thrown for less than 200 yards.

"The last couple of weeks, I've been like Jamelle Holieway," Esiason said, referring to Oklahoma's wishbone quarterback. "I just hand the ball off and let them go."

In fact, Holieway had it better than Esiason last weekend, completing 10 of 24 passes, albeit in a 13-6 loss to Clemson in the Citrus Bowl.

One of the interesting questions Sunday is whether the two quarterbacks keep taking their offenses in different directions, or whether they revert to form.

The Bills, 13-4, like to run the ball first and pass second. Coach Marv Levy considers the tilt toward passing against Houston an aberration.

"We started the (Houston) game with a very general idea that we would be loose in our attack," he said. "If you asked me if I thought that we'd pass on 16 of our first 19 snaps, I would have said I doubted it very much. But we found against Houston that they were making an adjustment to a formation we used early, and continued to make that same adjustment. That said to us, well, let's keep throwing."

Levy admits it wasn't a strategy he favored.

"When it was all over, we ran 29 times and passed 33, which is pretty close to the 'balance we want,'" he said. "And when it was all over, we ran more times in the game than Houston did, and I still think if you can succeed in running more times than your opponent — whatever the reason might be that allows you to do it — you usually wind up winning."

The Bills' passing game has come under criticism this season. Kelly completed 59.5 percent of his passes for 3,380 yards, but threw more interceptions (17) than touchdowns (15). Running back Robb Riddick criticized Kelly publicly after the regular season, saying the quarterback didn't throw to his running backs enough and held onto the ball too long when pressured.

Levy says the Bills' record is evidence that Kelly is doing a good job.

"Our objective is not to see how many touchdown passes he can throw," Levy said. "Our objective is not to have him be necessarily the No. 1-rated quarterback by that formula that no one understands except some physicist at MIT. Our objective is to win games, and that's what he does."

Esiason opened the season in a blaze of glory, throwing 17 touchdown passes in the Bengals' first seven games. With the ground game improving as the season went on — the Bengals finished with the best running attack in the NFL — he threw less and less.

He threw for more than 200 yards in six of the Bengals' first seven games; his highest total in the last four games was 187 yards in the regular-season finale against Washington.

Esiason, the league's Most Valuable Player, finished with 3,572 yards on a 57.5 percent completion rate, with 28 touchdowns and 14 interceptions.

Although Esiason thinks the Bengals sometimes get too conservative when trying to protect leads, he agrees the emphasis should stay on the running game as long as it's working.

"I don't have any problems with that," he said. "Like I said last year, I remember a game we played at home against Pittsburgh. I had thrown for 409 yards and we ended up losing the game (30-16). And I remember how sick I felt that day."

"Then I remember back to last Saturday when we beat Seattle and we only threw 19 times and we won, and I remember how glad I felt. So I'd much rather have the feeling of the Seattle win than the Pittsburgh loss last year."

However, he wouldn't mind if the Bengals fell behind and were forced to throw more often Sunday.

"That would be fine. That would be great," he said. "That's the kind of fun that we're looking for."

Ditka Still Mum On Choice

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — With millions of people hanging on his words, Mike Ditka finally made his long-awaited announcement.

Bryan Wagner, the punter, will replace placekicker Kevin Butler for kickoffs when the Chicago Bears play the San Francisco 49ers on Sunday in the NFC championship game.

The answer to the real question — who will be the Bears' quarterback? — is still to be answered. Maybe today, Ditka said.

Whether it will be Jim McMahon or Mike Tomczak at the controls on Sunday is a controversy-in-the-making that San Francisco's Joe Montana can relate to.

"I can understand what's going on there because I've been there," said Montana, who finally won the full-time quarterback job for the 49ers from Steve Young in late November after a year and a half of shuffling by Coach Bill Walsh.

"I know the longer he waits, the tougher it is on both those guys," Montana said of the Bears' situation.

At the same time he was awarding the kickoff duties to Wagner, Ditka was putting off the decision that might affect how many times Wagner gets to kick.

Tomczak still seems to have the inside track with Ditka, who said he would probably decide today. He's scheduled a news conference at a Chicago hotel after the Bears return from their winter training camp at Suwanee, Ga.

No matter who starts, Ditka said Thursday, both McMahon and Tomczak are expected to play on Sunday.

Asked whether he delayed the answer on the quarterback situation to keep the 49ers guessing, Ditka replied: "Take a bow."

The problem is that it also keeps Tomczak and McMahon guessing.

The 29-year-old McMahon, yet to play a full season without injury in seven years with Chicago, has nominally been the Bears' starting quarterback since 1983. But his game-by-game record in the team's media guide is replete with references to his absences: "dnp (did not play) back," "ir (injured reserve) kidney," "dnp shoulder," "ir shoulder" and "dnp hamstring."

This year, he managed to make it, through eight games. A knee injury in the ninth game Oct. 30 against New England kept him out until last week's 20-12 victory over Philadelphia in a fog-shrouded playoff game at Soldier Field last weekend. In that game, Tomczak reinjured a left shoulder that had been separated on Nov. 27.

Last week's game was the first playoff start for the 26-year-old Tomczak, whose regular-season record is 16-3. But McMahon has a career record of 3-0 against San Francisco while Tomczak's only start against the 49ers was in a 41-0 loss at Candlestick Park last year.

Meanwhile, the 32-year-old Montana, most valuable player in San Francisco's 1982 and 1985 Super Bowl victories, is now solidly back as the No. 1 quarterback. It was a job he seemed to have put in jeopardy when he was relieved by Steve Young during a 36-24 playoff upset by Minnesota last week. Last week, as the 49ers got revenge on the Vikings 34-9, Montana completed 11 of 14 passes, three for touchdowns, in the first half.

Young, whose scrambling ability forces opponents into different defenses, had his moments this year, breaking five tackles on a 49-yard touchdown run that gave San Francisco a 24-21 win over Minnesota in a regular-season game.

In fact, Montana reclaimed the starting position only after San Francisco lost two games to fall to 6-5 at mid-season. Walsh said Montana was bothered by "a dystentery-type thing," although Montana said he was perfectly healthy.

Now the quarterback controversy has moved from the West Coast to Chicago, where it is splitting fans and the team.

Defensive tackle Dan Hampton, for example, questioned McMahon's dedication earlier this year, but offensive tackle Keith Van Horne took the other side.

"If you're able to come back and play — and you're a starter — you should have your job back," Van Horne said. "That's what I'd expect if it was me."

Moreover, 63.6 percent of fans responding to a Chicago Sun-Times telephone poll said they wanted McMahon to start; 34.6 voted for Tomczak.

Meanwhile, the 49ers have their own opinions.

"At one time, I would have chosen Jim McMahon if I were on the Bears' staff," Walsh said earlier this week.

"It might be that Tomczak has improved so much that he can rival McMahon. His seasoning is what's made a difference."

Duke, Heels Post Wins...

75-35 at the 10:51 mark and beat Davidson going away.

"They were far superior to us tonight, especially the inside positions," said Hussey. "They just kept beating us to the ball, they kept beating us to the second shot. We were just overpowered inside."

"I thought our defensive effort was excellent," said Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski. "We played hard. We didn't just take advantage of just being more talented."

Christian Laettner, a 6-10 forward, added 14 points for Duke, mainly on layups. Robert Bricey got loose for 13 points, including several dunks, while Alaa Abdelnaby scored 11 and Phil Henderson 10.

Phil Denmond, who hit two 3-pointers, was the only Wildcat in double figures with 14 points. Bruce Elder had nine points and eight rebounds.

Duke's poor shooting in the first half was offset by strong defense as the Blue Devils held the Wildcats scoreless until Edward Gaines wriggled free for a jumper at the 16:30 mark. Davidson shot only 33 percent for the half while Duke hit 45 percent.

The Blue Devils, dominating the boards and scoring frequently under the basket, outscored Davidson 21-9 over the next eight minutes to go up 28-11. The Wildcats pulled within 30-19 as Bruce Elder hit three of four Davidson buckets, but Duke pulled away for the 38-23 halftime margin.

North Carolina.....87 DePaul.....67

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — In this day of physical basketball, to succeed a team should have a couple of big fellows who can run the floor with ease or stand their ground under the boards.

No one knows that better than Dean Smith, coach of sixth-ranked North Carolina, who has been able to acquire such players every season. DePaul Coach Joey Meyer came into Thursday night's game with North Carolina without the troops to battle the tough Tar Heels.

"They play so physical, so unselfish and so smart. ... I was just impressed with them as a team," Meyer said after the Tar Heels demolished DePaul 87-67.

From his vantage point, he should have been impressed. North Carolina rolled to its 11th straight win (13-1 overall) with little trouble as Steve Bucknall led the way, making all four of his 3-point attempts and scoring seven of 21 points during a decisive first-half run. J.R. Reid added 15 points from the inside and Kevin Madden 18 from everywhere.

Using a disciplined half-court trapping defense and helping themselves to 12 DePaul turnovers, North Carolina breezed to a 52-36 lead by halftime and never let DePaul closer than 14 points the rest of the way.

"Sometimes, you sit back in the middle of a game and say, 'Lord, it's really nice the way they're moving that basketball.'"

"I wish we would have been a little more competitive," he continued. "But I think, maybe, it will teach our kids a little something."

The craggy-faced Smith has been providing that service for opposing coaches as well as kids long enough to become an institution, long enough to win a national championship, 651 games and have the people of North Carolina build him a fine gym they named the Dean E. Smith Center.

Ironically, those 651 career wins is a few less than another Meyer, this one named Ray. That Meyer won 724 before turning over the program to his heir after the 1983-84 season.

Joey hasn't done badly on the whole — DePaul's winning percentage over the last 10 years remains third, behind only North Carolina and UNLV — but he is 8-6 in the middle of a tough season facing a tough schedule with a cast of thin, young ballplayers and only one dependable front-courtman in Stanley Brundy.

And Brundy, who finished with game-high totals for both points, 23, and rebounds, was no match for the Tar Heels in the middle by himself.

Terence Greene added 15 for the Blue Demons.

"They're young," said Smith. "They're going to come around."

Of course, he could afford to be gracious. His veteran team shot 59 percent — including a very handsome 6-of-9 from three-point range — and didn't pick up its first personal foul until six minutes were left in the first half.

"With the shots we were getting, we should shoot well," said Smith, still the perfectionist. "What I thought was even better, though, was our defense."

Limited Immunity Seen Necessary

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STILLWATER, Okla. — Oklahoma State's Hart Lee Dykes and other student athletes given limited immunity for cooperating with the NCAA are essential in uncovering illicit activity in college athletic programs, an NCAA official says.

"If you want to find out what really happened, you have to have limited immunity," said David Berst, the NCAA's director of enforcement. "Without limited immunity we couldn't find out a lot of what happens and wouldn't be able to penalize a lot of institutions that are cheating."

Dykes' testimony reportedly figures in NCAA probations handed to four college football programs, including a report compiled against Oklahoma State. The former Bay City, Texas, High School star already has been named in published reports concerning NCAA disciplinary actions against football programs at Oklahoma, Illinois and Texas A&M.

Berst defended the practice of offering limited immunity to Dykes and other student athletes in response Thursday to comments by a University of Oklahoma official who said Dykes was "making a mockery of the NCAA system." "Immunity is an essential tool for us," Berst said. "Without it, we wouldn't have serious infractions cases."

Ron Watson, assistant athletic director at Oklahoma, said Thursday he believes students like Dykes who remain eligible for college sports after admitting wrongdoing are "beating the system."

"I think it's time we leveled penalties against athletes," Watson said.

Dykes, who caught a school record 84 passes for 441 yards and 14 touchdowns this season for the Cowboys, is in Hawaii practicing for Saturday's Hula Bowl all-star game. The projected first-round NFL draft choice has refused comment on the controversy continuing to swirl around him.

Dykes' attorney, James Sears Bryant of Dallas, said he is surprised to hear Watson's comments.

"I was rather surprised by his statement," Bryant said. "I haven't actually seen the story, but what I heard left the impression he thought Hart should have lied or obstructed the investigation. I think all concerned want programs cleaned up more than they want retribution against someone."

Berst agreed, saying Watson's comments were "not very well thought out."

"It's not a plea-bargain situation. It's a situation in which we try to find someone we think may know what's going on."

Berst noted that an unidentified Oklahoma player also received immunity in return for his testimony about the Sooner football program, which was placed on probation last month.

But Watson, who spent 18 months working in the enforcement office of the NCAA before joining Oklahoma, said the number of schools penalized for illicit actions involving Dykes' recruitment apparently is unprecedented.

"There's four institutions out there that got hit pretty hard," Watson said. "He goes out and sets all kind of records — he's a very gifted athlete — and enhances his status in the pro draft. He's in a position to say, 'I beat the system.'"

Cavaliers Win Tenth In Row

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cleveland played the perfect defense against Michael Jordan, which is one reason the Cavaliers ran their club-record winning streak to 10 straight games.

Craig Ehlo was the man assigned to Jordan, but he said there was a team plan against the NBA's fourth-highest scorer.

"We've been working on pushing him towards help for the past two days," Ehlo said Thursday night. "He just wasn't as aggressive as he has been in the past. But as many minutes as he plays, I'm sure he gets exhausted."

Jordan scored 32 points. But only 12 came in the second half, and just five of those in the fourth period as Cleveland defeated Chicago 103-98, snapping the Bulls' three-game winning streak.

"If you want to say Ehlo stopped me, you can. But it was really good team defense," Jordan said. "He (Ehlo) was trying to force me to the middle, where he had help if I penetrated. Every time I beat him, he had help."

Elsewhere, it was San Antonio 119, Philadelphia 104; Seattle 120, Sacramento 106, and Denver 131, Golden State 129.

Cleveland's Ron Harper scored seven straight points as the Cavaliers snapped a 90-90 tie late in the fourth period. He made a scoop shot, a short jumper, a free throw and a fast break layup off a steal to put the Cavs up 97-90 with 1:40 to play.

Jordan's 3-pointer got Chicago within four points with 28 seconds left, but the Bulls could get no closer.

"I came back off the bench fresh with five minutes left," Harper said. "Coach (Lenny Wilkens) gave me a chance to rest and get my mind back into the game."

Cleveland extended its club record for consecutive victories in one season and matched the record of 10 over two seasons it had set in 1977-78 and 1978-79.

Larry Nance led Cleveland with 24 points and Harper scored 20.

Sonics 120, Kings 106

Dale Ellis scored a career-high 49 points, including the first two baskets of Seattle's nine consecutive field goals without a miss in the fourth quarter, and the Sonics won their ninth consecutive game at home. The Sonics outscored the Kings 34-20 in the final period, which started with the game tied at 86.

Jim Petersen paced the Kings with 23 points.

Nuggets 131, Warriors 129

Alex English scored five of his 37 points in an 11-4 fourth-quarter run that snapped a 105-105 tie and to lead Denver to its 12th straight home victory over the Warriors, who have not won in Denver since April 5, 1984.

Walter Davis added 31 points for the Nuggets, while Chris Mullin led Golden State with 35 points.

Spurs 119, 76ers 104

Rookie Willie Anderson scored a career-high 36 points as San Antonio handed Philadelphia its fourth straight loss.

Anderson, who hit 18 of 26 shots, scored 10 of his points in the first 5:22 of the third period. Then, after Philadelphia moved ahead 70-69, the Spurs scored seven straight points, taking the lead for good at 76-70.

Charles Barkley led Philadelphia with 23 points, while Mike Gminski had 22.

OSU Sanctions To Be Announced

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STILLWATER, Okla. — Oklahoma State, coming off its second consecutive 10-victory season and sporting the Heisman Trophy winner, is braced for NCAA sanctions that school officials expected to be "serious."

A spokesman at Oklahoma State said the school received a copy of the sanctions Thursday afternoon, and athletic director Myron Roderick said specifics of the school's response would be provided today.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association penalized a dozen schools last year, and the last six each received three years' probation, including Oklahoma's football program last month.

Numerous reports have indicated that sanctions levied against Oklahoma State today will be at least that stiff.

The Cowboys finished the year 10-2 and ranked 11th after a 62-14 Holiday Bowl victory over Wyoming. Barry Sanders brought Oklahoma State, perennially overshadowed by Oklahoma, national attention by rushing for 2,628 yards and scoring 39 touchdowns, two of the 24 NCAA records he set or tied.

Neither Oklahoma State officials nor David Berst, director of enforcement for the NCAA, would comment on the scope of the penalty to be levied against the Cowboys.

Last month, Oklahoma received a three-year probation, banning the Sooners from bowl appearances for the next two years and live telecasts next season.

Cowboys Coach Pat Jones said he is "just waiting around for something to occur."

"I have absolutely no idea what the decision is," said John Campbell, Oklahoma State's president.

"Any time you violate a rule, it's a serious matter," Campbell said. "As to the intensity of the penalties, I would not make any speculation. That's an NCAA decision. We did our best to persuade them we're serious about compliance."

The school did not release details of the allegations, but published reports were that the NCAA was investigating more than 50 allegations of violations within the program, including allegations that wide receiver Hart Lee Dykes received cash as an incentive to attend Oklahoma State, stipends through his sophomore year and the use of a car.

Dykes, an All-American, reportedly received immunity from eligibility sanctions to testify against Oklahoma State, Oklahoma, Texas A&M and Illinois, the last three of which now are on probation. Former Oklahoma State football recruiting coordinator Willie Anderson also refused comment on his alleged involvement in recruiting improprieties.

Anderson, who resigned from the Oklahoma State staff in May 1986, said he would hold a news conference next week to give his side.

Roderick said Oklahoma State already has disassociated some boosters from the football program. He said no members of the current coaching staff were involved in any alleged improprieties and that no serious violations had been found during the past three seasons.

Jones has a guided Oklahoma State to a 44-15 record during his five years as head coach, including three 10-2 seasons.

And They'll Do It Again In '90

By Hal Bock

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

As we approach the AFC and NFC championship games in the wake of Notre Dame's national collegiate Championship, you might want to consider a bit of cogent philosophy offered some time ago by the cartoon characters in the "Peanuts" comic strip.

Linus, his hair appropriately mussed, appears first, strolling quietly down the street. He is minding his own business, probably thinking about his pal Schroeder's passion for Beethoven or something equally important. Suddenly, he is accosted by a most agitated Charlie Brown. Linus can see that Charlie is excited and that's putting it mildly.

"What's up, Charlie Brown?" Linus asks innocently.

"This is the most exciting day of the year," Charlie explains. "This is Super Sunday, the day they decide the best team in all of football."

Linus is obviously unimpressed and, in his mind, with good reason. "I thought," he says evenly, "they did that last year."

"You know what? They did. And they will again next year and the year after that. And Charlie Brown will get excited about it every time. That's no indictment of him. But Beethoven would be less stressful because you know how that will come out every time."

A year ago at this time, Cincinnati and Buffalo were AFC also-rans while San Francisco and Chicago had been dismissed in the NFC. Now citizens in those four cities are running around with their index fingers thrust in the air, proclaiming, "We're No. 1."

Who knows? Maybe they are. In South Bend, though, there are no maybes about it. Notre Dame has been officially announced as the champions of college football.

The accomplishment of the Fighting Irish should be celebrated for a number of reasons, not the least of which is that it was achieved by a squeaky clean program that doesn't trifle with NCAA regulations. In today's collegiate climate of death penalties and sanctions, where some schools break the rules with amazing regularity, that is rare, indeed.

It should be celebrated, too, for Lou Holtz, a wisp of a man who rebuilt a program in three years and did it in the glare of the national spotlight that rests squarely on this university. That is no easy task.

And finally, it should be celebrated for all that Notre Dame football has meant in the national psyche, from Lujack to Lattner, from Hart to Huarte, with more Heisman Trophy winners and more national championships than any school in the country.

But it might be a good idea to take a tip from Holtz, the man who woke up the echoes. When the pre-game Fiesta Bowl hype seemed ready to envelope one and all, the little coach exclaimed, "Hey, it's just a game."

Linus would like that.

That's all we are dealing with here, just a game. Not neurosurgery. Not rocket science. Not Armageddon. Just a game.

Alan Page was a defensive leader of the Notre Dame team that won the national championship in 1966. He went from there to a Hall of Fame career in the NFL where he played in four of Charlie Brown's Super Bowls. He is now an assistant attorney general in Minnesota.

Page was asked, 22 years after the fact, about the significance of finishing No. 1. His reply might be of interest to the current class.

"It's not important to me now that we won the national championship," he said. "A lot has happened since then, at least for me. It was great to play with that team and have success and I stay in touch with some of those guys, but in the final analysis, I'm not sure about the significance. There's more to life than football."

When Page was at Notre Dame, the school did not participate in that quaint American custom called bowl games. Did it make him jealous, then, to see other players in the spotlight on New Year's Day?

Page chuckled at the question. "No," he said, "I wasn't envious. Not having a bowl game meant a week away from football for me."

And time, perhaps, to listen to a little Beethoven.

Madonna Ends Rumors, Files Again For Divorce

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Pop singer Madonna has filed for divorce to end her turbulent three-year marriage to actor Sean Penn, a spokesman for her record label said.

"I assume (the divorce was filed) in Los Angeles," Warner Bros. spokesman Bob Merlis said Thursday. He did not say when she made the filing.

"It is true," said John West, a spokesman for Penn. "Sean and Madonna are separated. They plan to divorce and it's amicable."

The announcement follows a nullified divorce filing from late 1987 and several well-publicized fights involving the hot-tempered Penn, one of which led to a 60-day prison term. Divorce rumors have been swirling around the couple in recent months.

Madonna rose to fame with her hits "Borderline" and "Like a Virgin," and is perhaps best known by the title of another song, "Material Girl." She has also starred in the movie "Desperately Seeking Susan" and David Mamet's Broadway play, "Speed-the-Plow."

Penn, who has starred in the movies "Colors" and "The Falcon and the Snowman," is appearing in Los Angeles in "Hurlyburly," a play about Hollywood decadence. A spokesman for the play, Jay Schwartz, said Penn would complete the play's run to Jan. 15.

The couple married in August 1985 in a Malibu ocean-bluff ceremony that was buzzed by press photographers in helicopters. They started together in the flop 1986 film "Shanghai Surprise," in which Madonna played a missionary smuggling opium in the Orient.

The pugnacious Penn served more than half of a 60-day prison term in 1987 for violating parole by punching a movie extra. At the time, he was on probation for fighting a man he accused of trying to kiss Madonna in a nightclub in April 1986.

In an interview that year, he spoke fondly of his wife. "Nothing that I could possibly come up with is as important as her," he said. "No movie, nothing is as important as her. And that's about the best answer I can give."

Ailment Helped

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Tom Cruise says his childhood battle with dyslexia prepared him for his eight-year drive to stardom.

"My drive and determination go back to difficult times as a kid," the 26-year-old actor said in an interview to be published Sunday in Parade magazine. "I had to set goals and force myself to be disciplined, because I always felt I had barriers to overcome."

Actress Says Hitchcock Did Not Like Kids

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Actress Melanie Griffith says director Alfred Hitchcock was "sick" and helped sour her relationship with her parents because of his obsession with her mother, Tippi Hedren.

"He didn't like kids. He never wanted me on the set and I felt like he took mom away from me, which he did. He was obsessed with her," she said in an interview in the Jan. 23 issue of US magazine.

Hedren starred in Hitchcock's thrillers "The Birds" and "Marni." Griffith said that when she was 6, Hitchcock "sent me a box shaped like a coffin, and inside was a miniature of my mother, exactly the way she looked in 'The Birds.' He was sick."

Griffith, 31, star of the box-office hit "Working Girl," is the only child of Hedren and developer Peter Griffith, who divorced when she was 4.

She recently reconciled with her parents after a long estrangement. Her son, Alexander, 3½, helped her realize she was partly to blame for the rift.

New Arts-Entertainment Series Explores U.S.-Soviet Relations

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The Arts & Entertainment Network begins tonight an ambitious 26-part series on U.S.-Soviet relations, "The Eagle and the Bear," produced with help from ABC News.

Free-lance producers working for A&E actually put together the series, but it is a cooperative venture between A&E and Cap Cities-ABC Video Enterprises Inc., and the executive producer is ABC News' Av Westin. The footage comes from the ABC News and Pathe film archives.

The series of half-hour episodes, airing weekly on Fridays, covers 40 years of U.S.-Soviet history, from World War II to glasnost. It is part of a burgeoning repertoire of documentaries and series — "The Twentieth Century," "The Vietnam War with Walter Cronkite," "World War I," "Biography," and "Profiles," for example — that are making A&E a favorite of history buffs.

Sophisticated students of U.S.-Soviet relations might not find much new information in "The Eagle and the Bear" if the first episodes are any indication, but the footage is fascinating and the series well-written. It is interspersed with interviews with statesmen and historians.

Tonight's opening episode, "Dateline 1943, Europe," explains the basis for the mistrust inherent in the Soviet Union's international relations — the country's massive losses in World War II. In the battle for Stalingrad alone, says the narration, more Russians were killed than all the Americans lost during the entire war.

In the midst of the war began the "personal diplomacy" between Franklin Roosevelt and Josef Stalin, whose apparently amiable relationship seems not unlike that between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. FDR found in the Soviet dictator a "stalwart good humor," and yet a slide in U.S.-Soviet relations followed.

"I believe that we are going to get along with him (Stalin) and the Russian people very, very well," Roosevelt predicted in an overly optimistic speech to Congress.

There is also a lively description of the later meeting between Stalin and Harry S. Truman at Potsdam. With the Nazis defeated, Truman was ready to get tough on the communists, and told Stalin that the United States had test detonated an atom bomb. Historians recall accounts that Stalin simply didn't react to the information. He either didn't understand what Truman was talking about, or he already knew about the atom bomb test.

Despite Truman's get-tough attitude, he left Potsdam without changing the Eastern European boundaries that existed when Roosevelt attended the summit at Yalta.

By the end of the episode, the United States has dropped atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, and the United States and Russia participate as allies for the last time at the signing of Japan's surrender.

The Cold War begins, setting the stage for episode two, "Dateline 1945, Korea," airing Jan. 13.

Later episodes do not necessarily follow linear history. Episode three is set in 1961 and is about the building of the Berlin Wall, and the following episode jumps ahead to 1983 and the invasion of Grenada.

Later installments have more on Korea and Berlin, plus the Cuban missile crisis, the arms race, the rise of Solidarity in Poland and the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

A&E has 15 episodes ready for air.

The last 11 are in production. A&E and Cap Cities-ABC Video Enterprises Inc. are collaborating on another series, "Heroes."

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY Jan. 7

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): An inspiring romantic connection may be under stress. Put a new slant on weekend plans. Organize yourself and make lists before shopping.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): The New Moon accents financial progress. A mixup occurs over mate's plans. Chores and errands may have to be postponed again.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): The weekend's tempo starts slowly. A short trip finds you farther from home than planned. Morning hours are good for shopping.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You are full of energy today. Follow budget plans. Enthusiasm for social activities keeps your evening fun. Be patient with children.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Avoid careless actions. Keep maintenance plans intact. Social affairs may be disappointing. Rest to relieve any emotional strain.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Today is a welcome relief from yesterday's hectic pace. Stay close to home, and catch up on neglected personal odds and ends.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Little annoyances have you on edge. This is not the time to test your partner's intentions. Shop for bargains. Mix with friends later.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Fun and frolic may not get off the ground. Other activities prove worthwhile. The evening promises to be sensually fulfilling.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Try to collect what is owed you. A weird friend may try to influence you. Creative projects require your immediate attention.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): The same Saturday scenario is becoming a bore. Ditch the kids, and spend some time alone with your mate at your special place.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Close relatives may have more advice than you can use. Be a good listener, but leave it at that. Peace of mind is better than arguing.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Tweedle-Dee and Tweedle-Dum may make a visit today. Be hospitable (with tongue in cheek). Later spend time with children.

 The thrust and parry of a skilled defender battling an expert declarer is one of the most exhilarating sights at a bridge table. This hand is from the recent Blue Ribbon Pairs Championship at the Summer North American Championships in Nashville.

North-South were using a 15-17 HCP range for their one no trump opening bid, which explains South's jump to two no trump. South, young New York star Debbie Zuckerman, decided that her intermediate cards and top honors in partner's suit warranted treating her hand as a maximum, so she accepted the slam invitation.

West made a neutral club lead and declarer cashed out the suit. East, Peter Nagy of Chicago, discarded one card from each major. Since declarer needed a spade trick for the contract, she cleared the ace-queen of hearts from dummy, then led a spade to the king, which held. Next, she took her queen of diamonds and two red-suit kings. Down to A-9 of spades and J-5 of diamonds, on the king of hearts Nagy discarded his ace of spades! Declarer had to be satisfied with 11 tricks.

Note that no other defense would have beaten the contract. Had Nagy clung to his ace of spades, declarer would have thrown him in with that card. Declarer would then have been forced to lead away from his J-5 of diamonds into declarer's A-9 ten-ace, giving declarer an extra trick and her slam.

Ah, well—just another of those hands where counting the distribution makes the winning defense easy!

$20 Million Cache Found In Drug Raid

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Nearly $20 million, most of it in neatly stacked $20 bills, has been seized here in what authorities said was the largest cash haul in the history of the war on drugs.

Eleven people, allegedly members of a powerful Colombian drug cartel that controls cocaine distribution in the metropolitan area, were arrested in the raid Thursday.

"It is the largest cash seizure in a drug case in the world," said Robert Stutman, head of the Drug Enforcement Agency's New York office, at a news conference held among dozens of ordinary brown boxes brimming with $20 bills.

"This is the result of people laying down $20 a shot" for cocaine, he said.

Stutman said $19 million in neatly stacked $20 bills and some $100 bills were found in boxes inside a passenger van at a Queens warehouse called Zoom Furniture.

An additional $630,000, three loaded submachine guns, a pistol and detailed business ledgers were seized after task force members executed search warrants at two private homes in Queens and on Long Island.

"The accounts showed they were doing about $1 million a day in cash," by selling cocaine throughout the city, Stutman said.

Authorities believe the money was heading out of the country to be laundered. The 10 men and one woman arrested were charged with conspiracy to distribute narcotics, said Ann Driscoll of the U.S. attorney's office.

Those arrested were all believed to be members of the powerful Cali drug cartel, which law enforcement authorities say controls cocaine distribution in the region.

Stutman said the suspects were probably illegal aliens.

Chlorine Forces Evacuation

SIMI VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Workers at a company repeatedly cited for illegally dumping chemicals released a cloud of deadly chlorine gas when they failed to tighten a valve, forcing 11,500 people to evacuate, officials said.

Three firefighters were injured and massive traffic jams snarled this Los Angeles suburb before authorities capped the leak and lifted the evacuation order Thursday evening, more than 11 hours after the gas was first reported.

"We don't expect any major injuries or deaths," Ventura County Fire Department spokeswoman Susan Chandler said.

The chlorine escaped from a 5,000-gallon tank at the Travelin' West Textile Co. and formed a greenish-yellow cloud over an area as big as six football fields on the outskirts of this city of 100,000 people.

The gas "forms an acid in your lungs that creates blisters, and you could die," said fire department spokesman Kevin Nester.

Battalion Chief Larry Whelan said workers drained the tank of all but 20 to 50 gallons of liquid chlorine on Tuesday, but instead of tightening the valve with a wrench, "they only hand-tightened it." The chlorine, used to treat the plant's wastewater before disposal, turns into a gas when released into the air.

Deputy City Manager Jay Corey said the city had fought Travelin' West for two years over its dumping of dyes and other chemicals in city sewers.

He said the city cited the company several times in 1987 and 1988 for illegal dumping and then sought a court injunction. The city recently won a cease-and-desist order requiring Travelin' West to stop discharging dyes and chemicals into the sewers by Jan. 1, he said.

Two weeks ago, Travelin' West informed the city it would close the plant and move, Corey said. Authorities believe the firm was shutting down its operation, he said, but it was unclear whether the chlorine tank was emptied earlier this week as part of that move.

Late Thursday, city officials obtained a temporary restraining order barring any plant employee from entering the building until an investigation can be completed.

Travelin' West officials did not immediately answer telephone calls, and could not be located by city officials.

GAO Says Medicare Payments To Teaching Hospitals Are Too High

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration and a congressional watchdog agency agree that Medicare payments to compensate teaching hospitals for higher patient-care costs are hundreds of millions of dollars too high.

A report by the General Accounting Office released Thursday said the payments to offset indirect expenses from the teaching hospitals' medical education programs for interns and residents could be cut in half.

Such a cut would amount to as much as $1.2 billion this year, which GAO suggested could be redistributed among all hospitals with Medicare patients.

The Department of Health and Human Services, in comments included in the report, agreed that the teaching hospitals are being over-compensated. It said the adjustment factor that inflates their standard reimbursement should be lowered.

Medicare spokesman Dennis Siebert declined to comment on whether cuts in these payments plan, scheduled to take effect Monday.

The suit contends that the regulations contain inadequate safeguards to prevent violations of laws governing minimum wage, child labor, maximum work hours, workplace safety and other issues.

It also attacks the department's record of enforcing regulations covering homework in the knitted outerwear industry — which has been legal for the past four years — and asks that the government be ordered to consider reinstating the ban in that field.

Labor Department officials said they had not seen the suit and therefore could not comment on most aspects. But they rejected its characterization of enforcement of labor laws in the knitted outerwear industry.

would be proposed in President Reagan's 1990 budget, which is to be given to Congress next week.

The extra payments are projected to total $2.3 billion in the current fiscal year for more than 150 major teaching hospitals and nearly 800 smaller teaching hospitals that treat Medicare patients.

Rate Falls

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's civilian unemployment rate dropped back to a 14-year low of 5.3 percent in December, with service-producing industries leading the way in the creation of 279,000 new jobs, the government reported today.

The jobless rate dropped 0.1 percentage point from November, reaching 5.3 percent for the third time in 1988, the Labor Department said in its final unemployment report of the Reagan presidency.

In its year-end report, the department reported that 3,798,000 jobs were created in 1988, the most since 1984, when employers reporting adding 3.95 million people to their payrolls.

Janet Norwood, commissioner of labor statistics, said 3 million of the new jobs last year were on the service side of the economy, including 700,000 in retail trade.

Playwright Tennessee Williams was born in 1911 in Columbus, Miss.

Tanker Breaks In Two After Mystery Blast In Gulf

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANAMA, Bahrain — A Saudi Arabian tanker broke in two today and its stern section sank after a mystery blast believed to have been caused by a drifting mine left six crewmen dead, authorities said.

Shipping executives, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Greek captain of the 36,904-ton Sagheera was among those killed in the explosion in the southern end of the Persian Gulf Thursday. Two other men were listed as missing.

They said 26 members of the crew made up of Greek officers and Sri Lankan seamen were rescued Thursday from lifeboats by the Omani Coast Guard.

The Sagheera was ripped by an explosion as it was sailing empty into the storm-whipped Strait of Hormuz, gateway to the Persian Gulf, en route for the Saudi port of Mina Saud. The blast started a fire aboard the tanker.

Shipping sources said the vessel later split in two and that one of two salvage tugs that went to aid the blazing tanker was towing the bow section in the Gulf of Oman toward the Omani coast.

The London-based Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Unit, which monitors shipping traffic around the world, reported an explosion in the tanker's pump-room before it caught fire.

It did not say what could have caused the blast. But U.S. Navy officers have been warning for weeks that winter storms could tear mines, laid during the Iran-Iraq war, loose from their moorings, leaving them to drift into shipping lanes.

Winds were gusting at more than 30 miles an hour in the gulf Thursday, with waves as high as 30 feet.

The U.S. Navy has estimated as many as 200 mines were still believed to be in the gulf, mainly in northern waters, despite mine-sweeping operations by the U.S. and other navies in the strategic waterway.

Several vessels were hit by mines during the Iran-Iraq conflict before fighting was halted Aug. 20 when a United Nations-sponsored cease-fire took effect.

No ship has been confirmed to have hit a mine since the cease-fire began.

Philippine Troops Storm Base After Hostage Killed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ZAMBOANGA CITY, Philippines — Troops backed by tanks and armored personnel carriers today stormed a military garrison after Moslem captors killed a general they were holding hostage, officials said.

A hospital near the garrison said at least five people were wounded. A wounded soldier reported numerous dead, and city police chief Lt. Col. Jovencio Gongora said several bodies still were in the compound.

Gongora said he suspended the assault at dark. Bodies could not be recovered because some dissident Moslems were believed still on the grounds.

Defense Secretary Fidel Ramos told reporters in Manila the attack began after the military learned the regional Constabulary commander, Brig. Gen. Eduardo Batalla, had been shot and killed by a renegade Moslem policeman.

One of the wounded, Staff Sgt. Rosendo Noveleno, told reporters there were "many dead" on the second floor of the headquarters building where Brig. Gen. Eduardo Batalla and his chief of staff, Col. Romeo Abendan, had been held. There was no word on Abendan's fate.

Batalla and Abendan were captured Thursday after Batalla ordered Moslem policemen to surrender their weapons and face murder charges in a 1984 incident.

House of Representatives Speaker Ramon Mitra said the military decided to storm the garrison after the policemen's leader, patrolman Rizal Alih, rejected Mitra's last offer. Mitra had asked to see Batalla and verify he was alive.

Ramos said the military learned of Batalla's death from the governor of largely Moslem Sulu province, Tupay Loong, who spoke with the kidnapers.

Witnesses said tanks and armored personnel carriers smashed through the gates ahead of marines. Reporters saw captors resist with automatic rifles and grenade launchers, and at least one armored vehicle was disabled by the firing.
