Doomed Jet Had One Engine Shut Off, Other Afire

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KEGWORTH, England — Investigators said today they found fire damage in one of the engines of a Boeing 737 that crashed in central England and that the other engine had been inexplicably shut off before the crash.

Eddie Trimble, the Transport Department's chief engineering inspector at the crash scene, told reporters that while the left engine showed fire damage, the right engine showed no sign of having been on fire and was "in a zero-thrust or shut-down condition."

He said the engine appeared to have been turned off "at a previous point in the flight," rather than in the moments before the plane crashed into a highway embankment while trying to make an emergency landing at nearby East Midlands Airport.

Trimble refused to speculate on whether pilot error was to blame for shutting down the engine.

"At this stage in the investigation, all possibilities are open in that regard," he said.

Investigators are listening to the flight recorders and will be able to question the crew, who survived. They were preparing to remove the engines and other wreckage for closer examination.

The British Midland Airways jet crashed into an embankment beside England's main north-south highway Sunday night, killing 44 people. It was flying from London's Heathrow Airport to Belfast when the pilot reported engine trouble.

Transport Secretary Paul Channon was scheduled to make a statement to Parliament later in the day.

"The left engine has fire damage," Trimble said. "The fire damage is consistent with witness reports of fire associated with the left engine in flight. We have no evidence at the moment of a mechanical failure in the right engine."

Investigators rummaged on hands and knees looking for debris that might yield clues to what caused the crash. Theories advanced by experts included contaminated fuel, a rupture in a combustion chamber, improper servicing or a mechanical fault allegedly missed during tests of the engine.

The Transport Department said all the theories were "speculation" at this stage.

Channon said Monday there was no evidence of sabotage, but Prime Margaret Thatcher said "we rule out nothing — we simply can't."

At the government's sophisticated laboratory at Farnborough, south of London, tests began on the plane's two flight recorders and the digital flight data recorder.

William Tench, retired head of Britain's Air Accidents Investigation Board, said the odds against double engine failure on a Boeing 737 were about 10 million to 1.

He suggested a "technical mistake such as something incorrect being done to the engines during turnaround (servicing between flights), either inadvertently or deliberately."

Or, Tench said, "it could be inadvertent fuel contamination."

Nursing Schools Say Inquiries Up

By Carol Tyer

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt Community College reports that its applicants are more plentiful this year than ever before and an East Carolina University School of Nursing official said that, while he has no admissions figures for next fall, he has had twice as many inquiries about nursing from general college students this year as last.

This heightened interest in nursing as a career locally seems to reflect an 11 percent increase in the number of students entering nursing school nationwide.

The increase was noted during a survey of more than 220 schools conducted by Nursingworld Journal, and according to those surveyed, can be attributed to higher salaries and a healthy job market for nurses.

The increase follows a nearly one-third drop from 1983 to 1987.

Schools responding to the annual survey, scheduled for publication this week by the trade magazine, had 15,494 freshmen in 1988, up from 13,970 in 1987.

Judith Kuykendall, PCC nursing department chairman, said the school has received 268 applications for its 75 slots in the incoming freshman class.

"I don't know how many of these applicants are qualified," Mrs. Kuykendall said, "but I believe there will be enough to fill all 75 slots this year. Some years the school has not filled all 75 because it has not had enough qualified applicants. Last year there were 208 applicants and 75 slots were filled."

Mrs. Kuykendall said that, regardless of its numbers of qualified applicants, the school does not have the facilities to increase the number of students it can teach. She said her school's full-time faculty is complete, but more part-time instructors are needed to retain the school's 1-8 ratio of faculty to students during the clinical phase of instruction.

Curtis Farrance, director of student services of the East Carolina University School of Nursing, said he has had about double the number of inquiries about nursing as a major that he usually has by the time of year. "I expect that the number of people declaring nursing as a major

Council Moves To Block Mayor's Vote

By Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Greenville City Council approved a resolution Tuesday intended to block Mayor Ed Carter's efforts to restore full voting privileges for the person occupying the city's highest elected office.

With Carter voting on the losing side, the council passed a resolution by a 4-2 vote directing the city attorney to submit for pre-clearance to the U.S. Department of Justice a 1981 city charter amendment eliminating the mayor's voting privilege.

The council in 1981 voted to take away the mayor's vote except to break a tie between the six council members. But last week the city was notified by the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Department of Justice that the 1981 charter change was not first precleared by the department as required by law.

Carter says because the charter change was not properly precleared he, as well as the other mayors who have been in office since 1981, should have been voting on all issues before the City Council.

Carter said he intends to vote on future issues before the city's governing body until the 1981 council decision is approved by the Justice Department.

"I have received several legal opinions which indicate the mayor has the ability to vote," Carter said. "I have a vote and I will exercise it."

The next City Council meeting which Carter may cast a vote is Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at City Hall.

"It is my belief that the citizens of Greenville want the mayor to have a vote and if the council elects to take that away from me, then I believe the citizens of Greenville will rectify that matter in the November elections," Carter said.

The mayor said he had been informed that some members of the council felt if the mayor had a vote, his power in city government would be too great.

"I think that's ludicrous. If the mayor has a vote, he has no more power than any of the other council members," Carter said.

Council member Bill Hadden said he believes it is the mayor's role to advise, consent, suggest, and even pressure officials on mat-

Schools Put On Pay-As-You-Go

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County Commissioners Monday suggested that the cost of a $25.7 million bond issue for school capital improvements is too high and, as a result, a joint committee composed of commissioners and Board of Education members will work toward a pay-as-you-go plan for school building needs.

The school board late last year asked commissioners to approve a $25.7 million bond referendum to finance construction of new classrooms and other facilities throughout the county. A substantial portion of the money — by some estimated $8 million to $10 million — would be used to replace Rose High School in Greenville.

But the consensus among commissioners prior to a meeting with the school board Monday was that the cost of the bond proposal was too high.

Speaking for commissioners at the meeting with the education board, County Manager Kramer Jackson said, "The Board of Education has identified $50 million in capital needs and has requested $25.7 million be made available through the borrowing of money in order to move forward with construction of some of the identified needs."

"It has been suggested that the $25.7 million would require three years to spend and that an additional $25 million might be needed in five years."

In order to borrow $25.7 million through the selling of bonds without a tax increase, Jackson said, "the county would have to repay $21 million in interest."

But Jackson said the schools "can anticipate more than $21 million during the next five years without a bond referendum and without a property tax increase."

Legislators Split On Speaker

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County's two resident members of the North Carolina House of Representatives are divided in what appears to be a statewide battle to keep Liston Ramsey from serving a fifth term as speaker of the House.

Walter Jones Jr. said this morning he would support Rep. Joe Mavretic of Edgecombe County for the post, while Ed Warren said that he will support Ramsey, from Madison County, when votes are cast for the speakership after the General Assembly opens its 1989 session Wednesday at noon.

Both Warren and Jones predicted the vote would be close. But Jones said, "We think it's locked. We think we have the votes" to unseat Ramsey.

A move to oust Ramsey, who has held the speaker's post for four terms, surfaced last week. A number of Democratic state legislators say they are upset with what they say is a lack of openness and full participation in the House of Representatives.

Pesticide Residues Removed

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Cleanup crews from the Environmental Protection Agency are working to remove toxic pesticides from trenches at the old FCX facility in Washington, N.C.

Bill Klutz, supervisor of the excavation project, said EPA officials have been working at the site, located off Grimes Street, about a week and may remain there two to three more weeks.

FCX, which filed for bankruptcy and then was bought by Southern States in February of 1986, used the Beaufort County facility in the 1950s, '60s and '70s to blend and mix pesticides to be used for agricultural application, Klutz said. After state officials discovered the pesticide residue, EPA officials conducted additional tests last September and scheduled the cleanup operation.

The project is one of 21 EPA Superfund sites in the state and 1,175 sites nationwide. Excavation costs at the site are estimated at $100,000, Klutz said.

"We're excavating trenches that were used to dispose of and bury pesticides and other pesticide debris," Klutz said. "The pesticides that we're primarily dealing with are DDT, Chlordane, Heptachlor, Dieldrin, Methoxychlor plus some others. . . . Primarily, we're focussing on removing the areas with the heaviest concentration right now."

"Chlorinated pesticides represent a threat to groundwater, subsurface water and to the environment in general. They've all been banned from use or severely restricted."

The EPA has not conducted a groundwater assessment yet, Klutz said, but he said the agency will likely conduct one in the future to determine if the chemicals affected area water.

Eastern Probation Officers Have Special Problems

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

While probation officers in Raleigh or Charlotte may be fighting traffic jams, a probation officer in eastern North Carolina may be waiting to board a ferry.

Probation officers in the eastern part of the state face special obstacles, said Robert Guy of Greenville, supervisor for the 18-county eastern branch of probation and parole, which includes Pitt County. He plans to emphasize those problems when supervisors from across the state gather Wednesday in Raleigh to meet with state Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson and other officials.

Guy said the state's prison overcrowding problem has increased the caseload of probation officers statewide and focused more attention than ever before on probation issues. Now is the time for probation supervisors to find answers to problems officers have been battling for years, he said.

Though probation officers in eastern North Carolina often are responsible for slightly fewer cases than those in urban areas, their burden may be heavier, he said.

"You get up in those northeastern counties and you've got one officer. They have to work their own court. They have to do it all," Guy said in a telephone interview from his Washington, N.C., office. "We (in eastern North Carolina) feel we're getting shortchanged."

"When you start having to travel by ferry to see some of your clients, there are about 5,000 people on probation, he said.

In larger cities, probation officers often have a large support staff that handles court work and processes paperwork when defendants are placed on probation, Guy said.

In eastern North Carolina, probation officers often have to do it all, he said. There are 44 probation officers assigned to the 18-county region, and a total staff of 69.

In Pitt County, there are currently 12 officers and about 1,000 individuals on probation. Across the region, there are about 5,000 people on probation, he said.

Statewide, probation officers have an average of 120 cases each, he said. In the eastern branch, officers average about 110 cases, up from 75 in 1984.

An officer may sit in court all week in one of the busier counties, like Pitt, and as many as 26 cases may be assigned to that officer, Guy said. It may take two weeks just for the officer to complete the paper

Youngster, Business Man Injured Fatally

CHOCOWINITY — Two Washington, N.C., residents — a 4-year-old boy and a 60-year-old man who had a business in Greenville — are dead as the result of injuries sustained in a two-car collision on U.S. 17 two miles south of Chocowinity Monday about 1:45 p.m.

Trooper E.L. Coleman said Thomas McDonald Singleton Jr., 60, a partner in the Yardage Shoppe of Greenville, died at the scene. His pickup truck and a car driven by Troy Wayne Beacham, 20, of Chocowinity collided.

Matthew Richard Morelock, 4, a passenger in the Beacham car, died later in Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Other passengers in the Beacham car were Donald Garth Morelock, father of Matthew, and Randy Gibson Baugham, also of Washington.

The elder Morelock was reported in critical condition in Pitt County Memorial Hospital, while Beacham and Baugham were reported ready to be released today from Beaufort County Hospital.

The collision occurred during rain, Coleman said. He said that Beacham apparently lost control of the car he was driving and crossed the center line. He said Beacham has been charged with driving while impaired, exceeding safe speed for conditions, and traveling left of center. Other charges are pending, Coleman said.

He said none of the five people involved in the accident was wearing seat belts.

Interest In Nursing Expanding

will be up this year," he said. "I expect this because of the interest expressed. But we don't have any figures yet. Most freshmen don't declare a major when they enter school and rising sophomores haven't yet chosen their courses for next fall. This will be happening later in the spring."

Richard A. DeVito, publisher of Nursingworld Journal, said, "Probably the most important thing is that there has been so much publicity about the national shortage of nurses."

But a more troubling factor, DeVito said, is that many schools have reduced entry-level grade point averages to attract more applicants. Perhaps as a result, he said, graduate nurses failed their licensing exams at a record rate of 16 percent in 1988, four times the 1987 level.

Mrs. Kuykendall said her school's standards have in no way been reduced. "We changed our standards a couple of years ago," she said, "and it was certainly not a reduction in standards. She said Pitt nursing applicants are required to pass reading, mathematics, science and English tests. A development course in each can be taken before retesting by each applicant who does not pass a particular test and he or she can reapply.

Farrance said that admission to the sophomore year changed criteria recently "because some faculty had done research related to the success of ECU nursing students on the national nursing board examinations, also known as the inclex RN, and had found that those admitted with a slightly lower grade point average than the GPA then in use had a good chance of passing the inclex RN." He said this standards change did not result last year in an increase in the numbers admitted.

"As a matter of fact, that summer the numbers of students in the sophomore class declined again. However, this past summer when we admitted sophomores, the numbers increased and we think they will again this year."

Nursingworld Journal said it sent its survey to 1,491 U.S. nursing schools and received responses from 227 institutions in 44 states.

Hospital officials hailed the finding as good news for the nation's health care system, which has been strained by a "significant and persistent shortage" of nurses, according to a December report by the Commission on Nursing of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

About 300,000 nursing jobs were unfilled nationwide, the American

DeVito said the shortage has had a direct impact on wages, pushing up starting salaries for registered nurses by an average of $5,000 to $6,000 during the last five years. Registered nurses now typically start at $22,000 to $28,000 a year, depending on region, and experienced nurses earn up to $55,000 in some cities, he said.

Diane Poole, vice president of nursing services at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, said the starting salary for a registered nurse at PCMH is $23,400 a year for 40 hours of work per week. An experienced nurse, she said, can earn up to $33,500 for 40 hours of work per week, not including special pay for shift differential, weekends and holiday work.

According to the survey, licensed practical nursing programs experienced the greatest increase in beginning students in 1988, with a 25.4 percent jump. Hospital-based diploma programs were next, with a 14.6 percent rise.

Baccalaureate programs at four-year colleges and universities saw a 10.7 percent increase. The smallest change was in associate degree programs offered by two-year junior colleges, which reported 8.7 percent more freshmen.

Officers To Meet

work, he said, and the officer still must make home visits and monitor his clients.

With the lack of staff and the large geographical area the officer is assigned to cover, most officers work much more than 40 hours a week. One officer who is responsible for about 110 cases must cover both Hyde and Tyrrell counties, he said.

In the past, the state has not paid overtime to probation officers, but Guy said the federal government has contacted state officials and said the officers should be receiving overtime pay, a move Guy said he supports.

He said he has felt for several years that the state should reclassify the position of probation officer to a higher level because of the job duties and the risk involved.

"We're not an 8-to-5 position," he said. "When you get a call, you respond to it, 24 hours a day. That's what the job is all about.

"We're definitely in a risk position. We're out there dealing with the convicted criminals day in and day out... Our officers are basically unprotected. They don't carry firearms and they don't have radios in their cars."

With the overcrowded prisons, judges are placing many more convicted criminals on probation, he said. Alternative punishments are one way to relieve the probation caseload, and the state has targeted Pitt County to receive funding for a house-arrest program in fiscal 1990.

In the program, defendants wear something like an electronic anklet, which allows law enforcement officers to monitor their whereabouts. Instead of serving weekends in jail, a person may be sentenced to several weekends of house arrest. Pitt County should receive the funding in the summer, he said.

House Coalition Says Ramsey Will Be Ousted

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A coalition of Republicans and dissident Democrats remained confident they have the votes to oust Liston Ramsey as state House speaker, and the Madison County legislator admitted the vote would be "extremely close."

Rep. Don Beard, D-Cumberland, who said he was the coalition's choice for speaker pro tempore, the second-ranking House post, said the bipartisan group had "60 votes plus a cushion." He estimated that 75 percent of the House Democrats wanted a new speaker and said he expected "somehow of an avalanche of people to join us now."

Ramsey said several House members who had told him within the past week that they would support him for re-election now are backing Mavretic.

"Why they would change their minds, I don't know," Ramsey said Monday. "One of them told me Representative (Joe) Mavretic came to see him, and he was just so sincere, they couldn't turn him down."

A group of Democrats released a statement Sunday saying they would support Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, when the House elects its speaker after convening Wednesday.

Mavretic said he feels "very confident we have the votes required — plus a cushion." He hasn't talked with Ramsey, he said. "Nor has he talked to me."

As behind-the-scenes maneuvering continued one day before the 1989 General Assembly convenes, some participants in the long-rumored coup plot began speaking out, saying Ramsey was under attack because he had failed to make changes that even his supporters had urgently requested.

"I have a great deal of respect for Liston Ramsey and I'm sorry it's having to be done this way," said Rep. Dave Diamond, D-Surry. "But I feel strongly that ... this must be done."

Sources said in interviews Monday that between 16 and 22 of the 74 House Democrats had committed themselves in writing to support Mavretic and that all but one or two of the 46 House Republicans were in accord.

One of those is Rep. Charles F. "Monroe" Buchanan, R-Mitchell, who says he will place his region over his party Wednesday by supporting Ramsey.

Buchanan said Republicans and Democrats have exaggerated the amount of existing support for the move to oust Ramsey.

"I would be not taking the right direction if I voted against my own mountain people," he said in an interview from his Green Mountain home.

Buchanan said he spoke to at least one other GOP representative who would vote for Ramsey, and a few others who were uncommitted.

GOP leaders "didn't have all the votes they said they had," Buchanan said.

At least one other mountain legislator, Rep. Marty Kimsey, R-Macon, appeared to be wrestling with the question of who to back Monday.

Kimsey said some "powerful people" in his district had asked him to back Ramsey, but "I can't run a campaign against the way things are done in the General Assembly ... and then come down here and vote for the status quo."

Barring last-minute reversals, the coalition has more than the 61 votes needed to topple Ramsey, who had faced no serious challenge since his 1981 election to the first of his four terms as the chamber's top-ranking officer, members said.

"I understand they have 20 (Democrats)," said Rep. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus. "As long as they do, there will be a new speaker elected."

A coalition leader who spoke on condition of anonymity said, "I can't tell you the numbers but we have a very comfortable cushion and it's growing daily."

Republicans would become chairmen of some committees under an agreement reached between GOP legislators and the dissident Democrats, spokesmen said.

Also, sources said Gov. Jim Martin had been working to line up Republican support for the election of a new speaker. The governor denied being involved in an interview after his inauguration Saturday.

"There are obviously a lot of rumors being circulated and a lot of statements being made, but the governor is not going to contribute to the rumor mill by having anything to say right now," Martin's press secretary, Jim Sughrue, said.

House Minority Leader Johnathan Rhyne, R-Lincoln, made his first public comment on the uprising Monday. In a statement issued by his office, he said the bipartisan coalition was "born out of the need of its members to participate in the legislative process to the full extent anticipated by the voters that elected them."

"The present leadership in the House has consistently engaged in practices that consolidated power in the hands of too few while the talents of able legislators were ignored," Rhyne said, adding that he was speaking on behalf of all 45 of his colleagues despite rumors that one or more Republicans might vote for Ramsey.

The coalition has "developed a structure that will assure full participation in the legislative process by members of both parties," Rhyne said. "For the first time, Republicans will be entrusted with meaningful duties and positions."

Mavretic confirmed his candidacy for the speakership Sunday in an interview with The Associated Press.

To secure GOP support for Ramsey's removal, Mavretic supporters agreed that Republicans would be appointed chairmen of some committees. It was unclear how many or which chairmanships they would get.

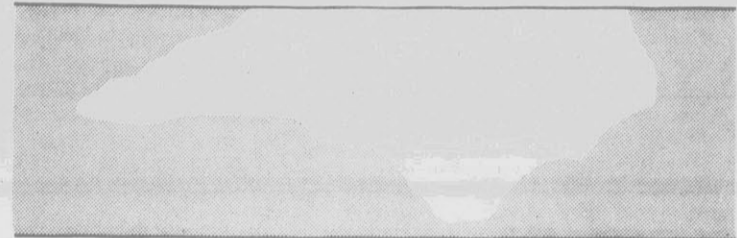

Ramsey predicted the coalition would fold unless Republicans were granted half the available committee chairmanships.

"If the Republicans are gonna furnish 75 percent of the votes for Mavretic, they'd be chumps to settle for anything less," Ramsey said.

Rep. Sam Hunt, D-Alamance, said the coalition includes liberals and conservatives.

"This is not an ideological revolution," he said. "It's about reform. Change. Taking the chains off the House."

IN THE STATE

Day Care

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Nearly every county in the state needs more day-care services, but the situation is worse in rural areas than urban ones, according to a University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill report released Monday.

"The wide range in availability of day care across regions is especially disturbing and is intensifying problems of economic development in poor communities," said Patricia M. Garrett, the author of the report and an investigator for the Bush Institute for Child and Family Policy at UNC. "The state is simply going to have to work hard to enhance the availability, quality and affordability of child care, especially for poor and moderate income families."

The report said the need for more day care was especially acute in the 42 counties concentrated in the eastern coastal region, the rural portions of the Piedmont and the northwestern mountains. In those counties there are licensed day-care capacity for fewer than 20 percent of the preschoolers in 1987, the report showed. In about a third of the counties, 60 percent of the mothers were working in 1980. Another third of the counties were in areas where job opportunities were limited.

Funds Deleted

RALEIGH (AP) — Fishermen who rely on the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to keep Oregon Inlet and several other inlets clear for passage to the ocean could be left high and dry by the budget presented to Congress by President Reagan.

The 1990 budget presented Monday contains no funds for the corps to continue dredging inlets whose commercial traffic falls below 25,000 tons a year.

Oregon Inlet, which requires almost constant dredging to remain navigable, "is the biggest casualty," in the proposed budget, said Charles E. Shuford, chief of the corps' construction operations division for the Wilmington district. The district includes most of North Carolina and part of Virginia.

Dredging by the corps also would stop in New River Inlet in Onslow County, Topsail Inlet in Pender County, Bogue Inlet in Onslow and Carteret counties, Masonboro Inlet and Carolina Beach Inlet in New Hanover County, Lockwood Folly Inlet in Brunswick County and Ocracoke Inlet in Hyde and Carteret counties.

Pupils Suspended

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — More than 40 students were suspended after a fight last week in the woods adjacent to Westover Junior High School, according to the school's principal Russell Williams.

Williams on Monday denied reports by some of the students involved that the fight was racially motivated, but he said groups of white students and black students were involved. He said the incident was an outgrowth of an earlier altercation between two white students, neither of whom was present at the Friday afternoon confrontation.

Williams said the black students in the fight were friends of one of the two white youths, whose original argument began over teasing about their hair.

Resort Park

MURPHY, N.C. (AP) — Cherokee County could become home to the state's first recreational resort state park under a proposal submitted to local governmental leaders on Monday.

Tarheel Properties presented plans to a joint county commission-town board meeting whereby a 517-acre tract of land privately owned by the trust and 600 acres owned by the Tennessee Valley Authority and the U.S. Forest Service adjacent to Hiwassee Lake would be used to form the park. The park would have a 35-acre lake as its central core.

The park, which developers want to call Fort Butler State Park, would adjoin the Murphy city limits.

Arrested

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A New Bern woman sought since May as the suspect in the stabbing death of a Pembroke resident has been arrested in Far Rockaway, N.Y.

Audrey Harrison Hyde, 28, was charged with murder in a warrant issued May 18 in the fatal stabbing of Samuel Stallings, 65, of New Bern.

Ms. Hyde, also known as Audrey Harrison, Audrey D. Harrison and Audrey Ferebee, was being held Monday in a Manhattan correction center. According to Craven County Sheriff's Office Investigator Rusty Woolard, her extradition to Craven County is pending.

Stallings was found dead from 11 stab wounds in his mobile home in the Pembroke community around 6 a.m. May 15 after an anonymous caller notified the sheriff's office.

Five Named By Gardner

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner defended his appointment of three Republicans and two Democrats to the Advisory Budget Commission, saying his appointments were more bipartisan than those of other lieutenant governors.

"In the last session there were no Republicans appointed by the lieutenant governor," Gardner, a Republican, said at a news conference Monday. "I have appointed two out of five who are Democrats, so I think I am moving in the right direction."

On his first working day as North Carolina's second-ranking official, Gardner said at a news conference he was appointing Republican Sens. Larry Cobb of Mecklenburg County, Bob Shaw of Guilford County and Donald Kincaid of Caldwell County to the ABC.

His Democratic appointees are Sens. Kenneth Royall of Durham County, who currently is chairman of the ABC, and Sen. Wendell Murphy of Duplin County. All have agreed to serve except Royall, who has been out of the state, Gardner said.

Gardner's appointments should give Republicans a majority on the panel, which helps the governor prepare spending plans for legislative consideration, for the first time.

He was criticized for the appointments because Democrats hold a 37-13 majority in the state Senate.

NCAE Makes New Salary Schedule Its Top Priority

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Five of the last nine people named teacher of the year in North Carolina have left the profession, and that trend will continue unless the General Assembly enacts a new salary schedule for educators, the president of a teacher's group said.

A six-year freeze on advancement under the existing salary plan has "demoralized our professional educators," Karen Garr, president of the N.C. Association of Educators, said Monday. "We are facing serious consequences and the flight of good teachers from our classrooms every day that we delay facing this problem."

One of those teachers of the year "decided selling real estate was better than teaching," she said.

A new salary schedule is the top legislative priority for the NCAE, even if it requires a tax increase, Ms. Garr said at a news conference.

"Everyone wants the best possible teachers in our classrooms," Ms. Garr said. "The only way we can have them is with a realistic basic salary schedule that has rewards comparable to those available in private enterprise."

The NCAE also will push for more teacher involvement in decisions about operations in their schools and classrooms and supports "entrepreneurship" instruction that would help students prepare to enter the business world, Ms. Garr said.

Teachers are one of many groups seeking more money for a year when legislative leaders and the Martin administration say the budget will be tighter than usual.

Analysts estimate that about $232 million will be available for permanent additions to the budget in fiscal 1989-90 — nearly half of which will go for the scheduled installment of the Basic Education Program.

Gov. Jim Martin has said there might not be enough money to give teachers and state employees a pay increase until the second half of the fiscal year.

Ms. Garr, however, said it was urgent to put in place a salary schedule that enables teachers to earn more money as they gain experience.

The NCAE is calling for three-year implementation of its proposed salary schedule, which would boost the salary of a teacher with 10 years of experience and a bachelor's degree from $21,315 to $27,958 in 1991-92.

The salary of a teacher with a decade of experience and a master's degree would rise from $23,294 to $30,860 during the same period.

Flu and Cold Care

The flu, a short name for influenza, might begin with a sudden fever accompanied by exhaustion, muscle aches, headache, chills, and a fever. Some people feel a tightening in the chest and develop a cough and a runny or congested nose.

A cold is different. With a cold, sneezing, runny nose, and cough set in more slowly and are less severe than with influenza.

Both the flu and the cold are caused by viruses transmitted by airborne particles from an infected person's respiratory system. Once exposed to the virus, symptoms develop in one to three days. Neither the flu nor a cold can be cured with antibiotics, which do not kill viruses.

Although flu and colds cannot be cured, relieving symptoms with bed rest, extra fluids, and aspirin or aspirin substitutes is recommended. Several other nonprescription medicines are effective. Decongestants open stuffy nasal passages. Antihistamines temporarily relieve runny nose and sneezing. Cough medicines, throat lozenges, ointments rubbed onto the chest, and liquids used in vaporizers are preferred by many persons. Most nonprescription cough/cold medicines contain a combination of ingredients plus antipyretics to reduce fever and analgesics for minor aches, pains, and headaches.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

The Poor

For Answers, Take A Look At Victims

If you want to find the way out of poverty, take a look at its victims.

In North Carolina, most often those victims are women, children and the elderly. Frequently they are minorities.

And the numbers of those affected in eastern North Carolina are astounding, according to a seminar sponsored by the Eastern North Carolina Poverty Committee last week in Greenville.

That conference examined how poverty affects the region, its people and its economy. The answer to these questions illuminated the immensity of the task facing eastern North Carolina if it is to ease the grip of economic disadvantage.

Nearly half of the families in the state living in poverty live in the east — in fact in Pitt County, one-fifth of the population is poor. What makes this statistic even more startling is the fact that while the region covers 45 percent of the state's land, it only contains 32 percent of its population — facts which attest to a sharper rate of poverty in the east and a high degree of geographic isolation. That ruralness makes this ill most difficult to combat.

The report made it clear that to battle poverty, the region must take a look at the faces of the poor. It must identify the factors which make them poor and address these barriers to prosperity.

One-half the poor families are single-parent households headed by women. That fact means that child care must be available to these families. Single parents, in order to work and earn a decent living, must have affordable care for young children.

One half of the poor are minorities, a figure which is disproportionate to the percentage of the region's total population minorities represent. In all eastern counties besides Warren, Northhampton and Robeson, the percentage of minorities is 40 percent or below. As unpleasant as the conclusion is, that statistic shows the socioeconomic gap that continues to exist to between blacks and whites, despite dollars spent on education and development.

Twenty-five percent of North Carolina's elderly are poor, and that number will likely increase sharply in the next century. That group has specific health and service needs. Health care and transportation become keys to a decent standard of living for senior citizens — and for the elderly that are poor, these items are essential.

Education and economic opportunity are the keys to unlocking the cell that keeps the region's potential incarcerated by poverty. But these tools require investments in very specific areas, based on the above realities.

First, education must continue as the region's top priority. In a changing economic climate like the East, schools and colleges must provide both children and adults with relevant skills. Responsive schools educate needed employees.

Second, infrastructure must improve. Good highways bring jobs to eastern North Carolina. Available, inexpensive public transportation helps low income families work and allows senior citizens to function.

The costs of poverty far outweigh the expense of addressing it. Poverty brings about unemployment, dependence on welfare, crime and political conflicts. It drains a community's coffers, resources and potential. To allow eastern North Carolina to continue to lead the state in numbers of poor people is unthinkable.

Expectations

A Local Presence Gets Results

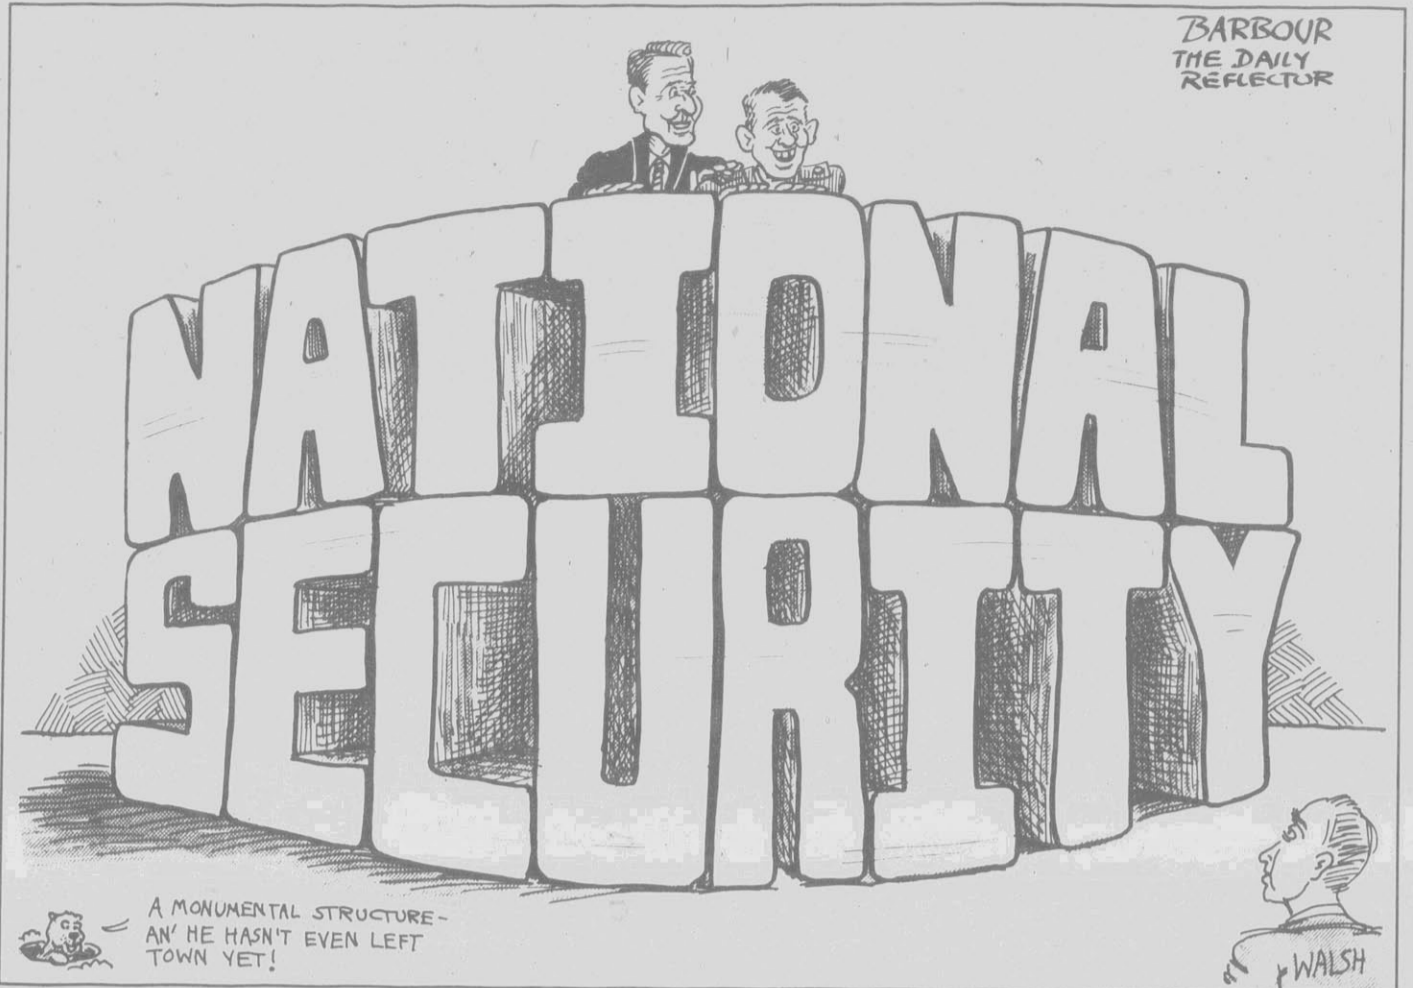

Pitt and other Department of Transportation Division 2 counties are likely expecting results from local lawyer Randy Doub's reappointment by Gov. Jim Martin to the state Board of Transportation.

Over the past four years Doub has given considerable time to Department of Transportation matters and a number of major projects have moved along.

He has also seen that some needed projects, such as the installation of traffic control signals at some busy intersections, were implemented.

During Martin's first term and Doub's first four years on the DOT board planned highway projects in Pitt County have moved on schedule. While the highway may have been conceived and planned under a former administration, portions of U.S. 264 have been completed and the second portion of the Farmville segment is up for bids this month. The northwest Greenville bypass right of way acquisition is now under way.

There is anticipation of additional funding for highway construction to be provided through legislation this year. It is important to Pitt and surrounding counties to have a DOT representative interested in obtaining more funds to improve roads. Doub has been alert to opportunities for meeting traffic needs.

Public Forum

To the editor:

At the School Board meeting Monday, Jan. 2, it was noted that the frequency of drug and alcohol use by students in school is not known. A national survey of substance abuse among high school seniors indicates the following rate of use:

Any use within the last 30 days — alcohol, 65 percent; marijuana, 23 percent. Daily use within the last 30 days — alcohol, 4.8 percent; marijuana, 4 percent. Drunk at least once in the last two weeks, 37 percent.

The National Institute of Drug Abuse states that "these rates remain extremely high ... greater than can be found in any other industrialized nation in the world."

The findings represent all use of alcohol and drugs by senior, not just in-school use. Most use begins at the junior high age level and lifelong patterns of substance abuse are usually formed in the adolescent years. Intervention at this stage offers the opportunity of preventing the spread of substance abuse and arresting the progression of the illness in individuals.

Pitt County school principals should be encouraged to use all the prevention and intervention resources available. In particular, the development within the last year of new school policies for handling in-school offenders, the growth of Student Assistance Programs, and the creation of a new Adolescent Substance Abuse Program at the Pitt County Mental Health Center, all offer great new opportunities for intervention and treatment that were not previously available in Pitt County.

To the editor:

I recently read with a great deal of interest your article titled "Rose Band To Play In Inaugural Parade." I am sure all of our citizens are proud to have Pitt County represented in this important event. While I, too, am proud of this accomplishment, I feel a little more research on the part of The Daily Reflector would have revealed that the Farmville Central High School Marching Jaguars were also invited (and the invitation accepted) to play in the inaugural parade. The Farmville Central High School Band was also a participant in the 1985 inaugural parade.

As a former Student Council president at Farmville Central High School, I find this oversight is not an uncommon occurrence on your part. It is my sincere hope that in the future the Daily Reflector will remember there are other high schools in Pitt County besides Rose.

To the editor:

Just one day after you published Charles Parker's good "Quarantee" letter in the Public Forum, your headline writers again went off the deep end!

On the front page of the Jan. 5 Reflector, the headline reads "Poverty in East Four Times Above Statewide Level." The words are spelled correctly (Thanks to Parker's letter?), but nothing written in the article on the NC Poverty Project report suggests a fourfold ratio as stated in your headline. Rather we read that the very worst two counties in the East have a family poverty rate of 24 to 27.9 percent versus the NC state average rate of 11.6 percent. Hence the worst counties of the East have family poverty rates 2.1 to 2.4 times the state average rate, and, of course, all other eastern counties have rates less than 2.1 times the state average. Although the East level is nothing to be happy about, it's a far cry from the misleading headline's "Four Times Above."

Perhaps your headline writer confused family with people rate (article reports 43.8 percent for people in East). Sadly, but statistically true, the people poverty rate reflects the larger number of family members of the below-poverty families.

Turning to the Sports Page lead headline of our Jan. 5 Reflector, we read that "Ga. Tech Pulls Away From Pirates In Second Half ..." Again, we are misled: In the first half, Tech scored exactly four points for every ECU three points and, in the second half, Tech scored exactly four points for every ECU three points. Why single out the second half in the headline? ECU just plain lost.

The Things Everyone Ought To Know

WASHINGTON — Suppose my evening's TV-watching was interrupted by the sound of an electric saw.

My first thought would be that some burglar was testing my power tools before making off with them; the second, that my 15-year-old son was about to do himself serious injury. (It would not enter my head that my daughters might be the source of the noise.)

That dismaying thought summarizes for me one of the things that I think has gone wrong with the way we do school. I was using my father's tools — handsaws, power saws, drill presses, miter boxes — long before I was the age my son is now. Neither my father nor I thought I would ever do woodwork for a living. Fooling around with tools was just something boys did.

William Raspberry

It is a dichotomy we would do well to abandon, for at least three reasons.

The first is that a lot of reasonably bright youngsters whose special gifts are in the manual arts are denied the chance to excel at what they do best. One result is that they lose interest in school and drop out.

The second, given the large number of young people whose formal education ends with high school, is that we are turning out high-school graduates who have learned very little beyond reading, writing and basic math, that will help them to land a decent job — as apprentice carpenters or masons or electricians, for instance.

The third is that even lawyers, engineers and professors ought to be able to make simple home repairs without calling in professional repairmen.

Lately, our attention has been focused on the Year 2000, by which time, we are told, a college degree will be the basic job credential. Even today, we are led to believe, college training is a virtual necessity for decently paid work.

Our schools are organized on that assumption. But, as anybody who has had the bad luck to need a plumber or an electrician knows, it isn't true.

How might we do it differently? For one thing, every large public high school ought to have mandatory courses in such things as simple carpentry, sewing, typing, mechanics, electricity/electronics and upholstery, with students free to choose a course or two of special interest. Those who discover latent skills (or interest) as a result of these mandatory classes would have the option of "majoring" in them, while, at the same time, earning their college-entry credentials.

Thus, the student who leaves school after high school might easily find work as, say, an assistant to the manager of an apartment or small office building, with a clear path to a well-paid occupation.

The student who goes on to college might earn some extra income by performing such things as word-processing or painting or repair. And all students — dropouts, high-school graduates and Ph.D.s alike — could save themselves a good piece of cash by knowing how to do some things for themselves.

Nor is it just the boys I have in mind. We are forever talking about the increase in the number of female-headed households, particularly among ethnic minorities. It is a problem, no doubt about it. But wouldn't these single mothers be a good deal better off if they knew how to free a sticking door, replace the ball on a toilet, change a faucet washer, build a bookcase or fix a lamp?

We are placing so much emphasis on college that we neglect to give our youngsters a chance at a non-college career — by teaching them the things that all of us ought to know.

Democrats Say Reagan's Budget Is Dead Issue

By Alan Fran
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

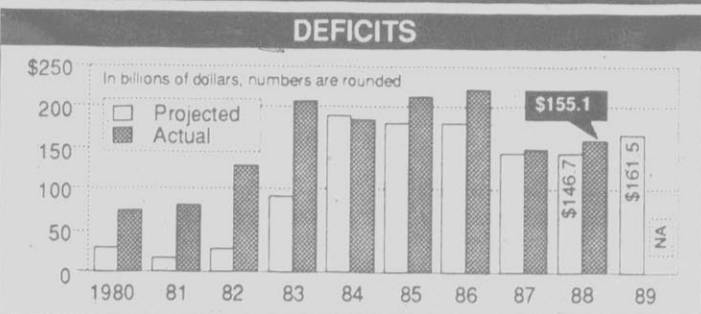

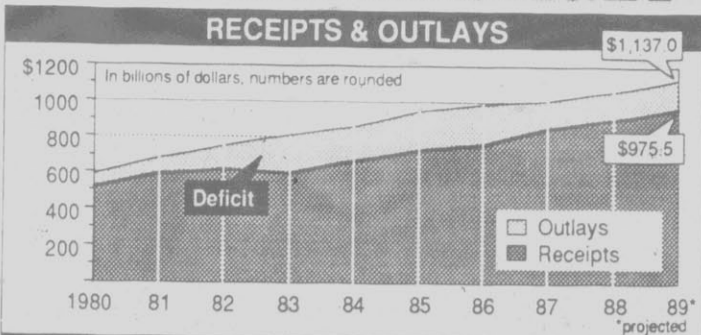

WASHINGTON — The Democratic chairmen of Congress' budget-writing committees said today that President Reagan's farewell $1.15 trillion spending plan is a dead letter and that President-elect Bush must submit a substitute reflecting his more moderate policies.

"This Reagan budget is a continuation of what we've seen for the past eight years — increased spending in defense, cuts in domestic spending and a lot of red ink. And George Bush needs to reverse that trend," said Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

Joining Sasser on NBC-TV's "Today" show, House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif., added: "These kind of budgets have been overwhelmingly rejected by Republicans and Democrats on Capitol Hill.

"So if (Bush) wants a budget that not only goes someplace on Capitol Hill but also reflects some new priorities for this country, then he's got to change the budget that was presented yesterday."

Sasser said Bush must cut defense spending in favor of restoring funds for domestic programs that were slashed under Reagan.

The president's fiscal 1990 budget, submitted just 11 days before he retires, would produce a deficit of $92.5 billion, within the $100 billion target mandated by the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law.

If achieved, that figure would be a dramatic decrease from the worst of the Reagan era shortfalls, but drastically higher than the red ink run up by any previous president.

Besides challenging the spending blueprint's priorities, the Democrats criticized what they called its unrealistically optimistic economic assumptions.

Even congressional Republicans conceded Monday that Reagan's submission is little more than a starting point for Bush's budget efforts.

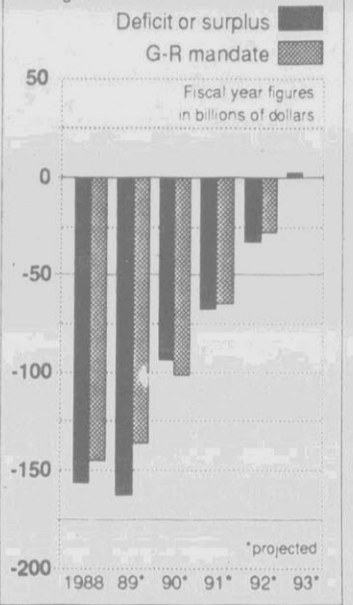

"This is obviously Ronald Reagan's book," said Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico, the ranking Republican on the Senate Budget Committee. "George Bush and the Congress will write the final chapter."

As if to symbolize the Reagan plan's lack of significance, Domenici was in Albuquerque, N.M., and his House counterpart, Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., was in Europe. Bush, who takes office Jan. 20, is not required to submit a spending plan of his own. But his aides have indicated he will propose revisions to Reagan's plan after his inauguration, and the president-elect distanced himself slightly from it Monday, saying he "agrees with its intent."

Congressional Democrats are eager for Bush to submit a detailed proposal of his own because they are skeptical he can do everything he has promised: reduce the deficit without raising taxes while still diverting federal resources to child care, education, environmental cleanups and other priorities he proclaimed during his presidential campaign.

Reagan's budget would collect $1,059 trillion in revenues and spend $1,152 trillion, leaving a $92.5 billion imbalance. That would be the lowest deficit since the $73.7 billion shortfall of fiscal 1981, which was under way when Reagan took office.

But Democrats say Reagan's budget plan masks the true amount of red ink by overestimating the economy's likely strength next year, adding more revenue on paper but with no guarantee the money will actually be there.

The federal deficit reached its all-time high of $221 billion in 1986. Under Reagan, the total federal debt has so far soared to $2.6 trillion, almost triple the $914 billion the government owed before he took office. The government will have to spend $170 billion this year just to pay interest on that debt.

The administration says it expects the current year's imbalance to total $161 billion.

Reagan would boost military outlays in the next fiscal year by $5 billion to $303 billion. His proposed Pentagon spending authority of $315.2 billion, which includes some outlays for years beyond 1990, reflects an increase of 2 percent more than inflation over this year's levels.

The increases would include boosting spending on the Star Wars missile defense system from $4.05 billion to $5.9 billion, setting aside $94.6 million for a sea-based anti-satellite system, and starting production of the B-2 stealth bomber.

The president would devote $3 billion to clean and modernize the nation's nuclear weapons plants, a task the government has estimated could cost $128 billion over two decades.

He would earmark $16 billion this year and $9 billion next year to help the country's failing savings and loan institutions, a job that could ultimately cost $100 billion or more.

Reagan also called for a $160 million increase, to $1.4 billion, for programs, many of which Congress has refused to eliminate in the past, such as mass transit assistance, aid to the Amtrak commuter rail service, and subsidies to the postal service. Overall, $4.9 billion would be saved next year.

He would also reduce the growth of Medicare spending for the elderly and disabled by $3.2 billion and cut projected increases in Medicaid for the poor by $1.7 billion, mostly by restricting payments to doctors and hospitals. In recent years, health care costs have grown much faster than inflation in general.

More savings would come from reducing agriculture spending by $9.7 billion to $42.4 billion, mostly in cuts in price supports to farmers and in child nutrition programs.

There would be no cost-of-living increases next year for retired federal workers, but Social Security would not be touched.

The government would raise $6 billion from selling various federal assets, and pocket another $1 billion by raising various fees, such as charging $25 annually for boat owners who use waters patrolled by the Coast Guard, and boosting charges paid by veterans getting home loan guarantees by 1 percent.

Unless Congress votes to block it, one part of Reagan's budget would grant a 50 percent pay raise to the cabinet, members of Congress, judges and the federal government's top managers. Another proposal, which requires congressional approval, would grant a 2 percent pay increase to rank-and-file federal workers and a 3.6 percent to the military.

Reagan Is Leaving Behind Legacy Of Federal Red Ink

By William M. Welch
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The president who rode to the White House on an anti-Washington sentiment, promising to balance the books while shaking things up, is leaving office after the largest credit binge in the nation's history.

The final budget submitted Monday by President Reagan symbolizes what he admits is one of his biggest disappointments and possibly the biggest failure of his eight years: the legacy of red ink he leaves behind.

The federal budget Reagan sent to Congress, his last as president, was like all the others that bore his name. It was far out of balance under even the rosier of economic forecasts.

Reagan said in delivering it that by getting the deficit under $100 billion in the 1990 fiscal year, his budget would show that "gradual elimination of the deficit is possible without raising taxes."

At his inaugural eight years ago, Reagan declared: "You and I, as individuals, can, by borrowing live beyond our means, but for only a limited period of time. Why, then, should we think that collectively, as a nation, we're not bound by the same limitation?"

In one of his farewell addresses last month, Reagan spoke of the deficits with regret. "One of my great disappointments as I leave office is that the federal budget itself is not yet balanced," Reagan said.

He leaves to his successor George Bush that legacy of deficits, one that together with his no-tax increase pledge severely limits the new president's options.

As Democrats frequently point out, the federal debt under Reagan grew more than under all the presidents before him. From under $1 trillion when he took office in 1981, the national debt has risen to more than $2.6 trillion.

Many point to the 25 percent tax cut Reagan fought for and won early in his first term, reducing the government's revenue and increasing pressure to borrow.

Reagan's first budget director, David Stockman, left office a vocal critic of the administration's tax and budget policies. In his book "The Triumph of Politics," Stockman called the result "the Reagan era's fabulous free lunch" and spoke of frustration in trying to get the president to confront the deficit problem.

The administration's version, however, is that the tax cuts stimulated the economy and generated growth — and that Congress is to blame for failing to carry out all the cuts in spending proposed by Reagan. In his budget, Reagan also blamed the 1981-1982 recession for lowering government revenues.

In his farewell speech, Reagan blamed a new "iron triangle," giving a new definition to a term often used in Washington to represent the triad of special interests, Congress, and the bureaucracy that supports various programs. Reagan's version removed the bureaucracy — for which as president he was responsible — and replaced it with the press, for what he said was uncritical reporting of the special interests' views.

But none of his cuts would have been enough to balance the budget — Reagan has never proposed a balanced budget.

Among the projections of his 1990 budget document are a balanced budget by the year 1993, though many doubt it possible. Even so, that's 10 years later than candidate Reagan was saying in 1980.

The target began slipping even before he was sworn in. In his first budget he predicted a surplus by 1984. Instead of a surplus, the government suffered a deficit of $185.3 billion that year.

It got worse, peaking at $221 billion worth of red ink in fiscal 1986. It's been lower since, but the deficit has not been on a downward trend; it grew in 1988 over 1987 and is estimated to do so at the end of fiscal 1989, too.

While he succeeded in trimming many domestic programs, Reagan ruled out targeting the major middle-class government benefit programs, including Social Security.

With the increase in debt has come the increased burden of interest payments. In the new budget, 15 cents of every dollar in government spending will go to pay interest on the debt.

Jeff Faux, president of the Economic Policy Institute, a labor-backed think-tank, called Reagan's final budget "sad testament to eight years of borrowing from our children."

But Stephen Hess, government analyst at the Brookings Institution, said the budget deficits may not be a harmful legacy. "I'm prepared to say it may not be so big a deal," Hess said. "The man left us at peace, literally, and employed, and with low inflation. And it's going to take some time to figure out how big a price we paid for that, but that is pretty exceptional."

Withdraws

HIGH POINT (AP) — C. Owen Phillips, superintendent of High Point schools for five years, says he has withdrawn from consideration for the deputy superintendent in the N.C. Department of Public Instruction.

The job would have made Phillips, 46, second-in-command to Bob Etheridge, the superintendent of public instruction.

"I had a conversation with Mr. Etheridge and I'm withdrawing my name for any consideration with the state department at this time," Phillips said. He said salary, time and satisfaction with his current job entered into his decision.

Greek Magistrate Shot By Extremists

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATHENS, Greece — Three men shot and wounded a leading investigating magistrate as he left his home for work today, authorities said. No group claimed responsibility, but police blamed leftist extremists.

Constantinos Androulidakis, known for his tough stand against suspected terrorists, was hit in the arm and leg, police said. He was taken to a nearby Evangelismos Hospital, where he was reported in stable condition.

A police spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, characterized the attack as an attempt by leftist extremists to intimidate other judicial officials.

Androulidakis was shot when he stepped out of his apartment in the Zographos area of the capital, the police spokesman said. The three gunmen fled in a stolen car, which was later found abandoned near the scene of the shooting, police said.

In October 1987, Androulidakis ordered the arrest and pre-trial imprisonment of two people on suspicion of involvement in terrorist activities.

The two — Gerasimos Boukouvalas and Evangelia Voyatzi — were arrested following an Athens shootout with police that killed Michalis Prekas, who was believed to be a member of the leftist Anti-State Struggle and the Revolutionary Popular Struggle groups.

Revolutionary Popular Struggle has claimed responsibility for hundreds of bomb explosions around Athens since 1975. No one has been injured in the attacks, which usually target U.S. military facilities and tax offices.

Anti-State Struggle claimed responsibility for the killing of District Attorney Giorgos Theofanopoulos in 1985.

No members of either group have ever been arrested.

Koop Says Abortion Study Inconclusive

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Surgeon General C. Everett Koop said today he remains "as opposed to abortion as ever" but that a study by his office cannot prove whether having an abortion affects a woman's mental and physical health.

The surgeon general, interviewed on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," said a full scientific study should be done "that will settle the question once and for all."

On Monday, Koop sent a letter to President Reagan declining to issue a report on a study of the effects of abortion on women.

"I remain as opposed to abortion as ever, but I've always been able to separate my personal beliefs from my responsibilities as surgeon general," Koop said in the interview today.

"The focus of the various groups that are pro-life has been on a post-abortion syndrome, and they would like to be able to prove that that is a specific thing, and I can't prove that for them except by anecdotes," he said.

"If you take the whole abortion issue ... at one end there are people who are so relieved to be rid of their pregnancy that they consider it a positive health benefit," the surgeon general said. "At the other end there are people who are really psychologically upset ... I have dealt with women at both ends of the scale."

Koop's letter declining to issue the report came on the same day the Supreme Court agreed to hear an appeal that could reverse or narrow the landmark 1973 decision legalizing abortions nationwide. Koop noted that reversal of the decision has long been a goal of Reagan and the president's advisers.

"At the time the report was requested, there were those advising you and intimately involved with the social issues of abortion who truly believed that such a report could be put together readily," Koop said.

"In the minds of some of them, it was a foregone conclusion that the negative health effects of abortion on women were so overwhelming that the evidence would force the reversal," he said.

Koop said almost 250 studies about the psychological effects of abortion are under way. He said the Public Health System he heads looked at the most significant of those studies but found flaws in the methodology.

The studies' data "do not support the premise that abortion does or does not cause or contribute to psychological problems," Koop said.

Some physical problems can result from abortion, such as infertility or damage to the cervix, but they also occur in women who don't have abortions and there has never been any scientific attempt to track the physical effects, he said.

An effective study would cost at least $10 million a year over the next five years, Koop told Reagan.

Japan Keeps Car Exports To U.S. Under Its Quota

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Japan expects to export 2.2 million cars to the United States in the fiscal year ending in March, 100,000 cars below a self-imposed annual quota, and the government today said it would continue the restraint.

"If we removed the quota, we are concerned" Japanese companies would push for more U.S. sales and aggravate trade tensions with the United States, said Hiroshi Mitsuzuka, the minister of international trade and industry.

Japan's trade surplus with the United States in 1987 was $59.8 billion, the largest chunk of the $171.2 billion U.S. trade deficit.

Mitsuzuka, in a news conference, was asked about complaints from some U.S. lawmakers that Japanese cars built in the United States should also be counted as U.S. imports. He replied that by 1991, the local content of U.S.-made Japanese cars would be 75 percent, "and we regard them as American-made cars."

Japanese automakers produced 733,000 cars in the United States from January to November, up 23.2 percent from the same period in 1987, according to the Foreign Ministry.

News reports said the Trade Ministry had been expected to lift the export quota last year, but sentiment was reversed because of concern over giving the wrong impression at a time of rising protectionist sentiment in the United States.

Some Japanese automakers feel the quota is outdated on economic grounds. Since 1985, the yen has doubled in value against the dollar, wiping out the price advantage Japanese cars had.

In fiscal 1987, which ended last March, 2.21 million cars were exported to the United States, and Mitsuzuka said shipments in the April-November period were 10.4 percent below a year earlier. Nevertheless, he predicted sales of 2.2 million for this fiscal year also.

The United States has taken a neutral position on renewing the quota, a U.S. diplomatic source in Tokyo said on condition of anonymity.

The quota began in 1981, when Japan was under strong pressure from the U.S. government and American automakers to cut the Japanese inroads in the U.S. auto market. Japan agreed to limit its annual exports to the United States to 1.68 million vehicles through 1983, then to 1.85 million in 1984.

When President Reagan decided not to ask for continued restraints in 1985, Japan set the ceiling at 2.3 million and has kept that figure.

Now the Japanese, led by Honda, which has the most sales in the United States, are trying to penetrate the U.S. luxury car market. Toyota and Nissan — the Japanese "Big Two" carmakers — both are introducing cars costing $20,000 to $40,000 in an attempt to lure Americans away from Jaguar, Mercedes and BMW models.

Soviets Nominate Candidates

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Led by President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, Communist leaders today nominated a slate of party candidates for a new legislative assembly to be chosen this year in the country's first nationwide multicandidate elections.

Gorbachev had been expected to use the meeting of the party's policy-making Central Committee to seek approval for candidates who support his program for "perestroika," or wholesale revamping of the Soviet economy and society.

However, the official Tass news agency gave scant details of what transpired at the plenary session, which it indicated lasted about four hours.

Tass said the Central Committee, meeting in Moscow, nominated party candidates for the 2,250-seat Council of People's Deputies, which is to be elected in March. It also adopted an "Address to the Party and Soviet people" and issued a decree about how the elections should be held.

Tass did not immediately issue the texts of those documents. It said Gorbachev also addressed the plenum, but the nature of his remarks was not immediately known.

Under political reforms championed by Gorbachev and adopted by the Supreme Soviet, or parliament, on Dec. 1, the new national assembly, to be chosen in multicandidate elections, will be empowered to elect a more powerful Supreme Soviet of 424 members.

It will also appoint the head of state, the post now held by Gorbachev.

Elections that offer the voter more than one candidate and a strengthened role for the customarily docile Supreme Soviet are calculated breaks with Soviet tradition that the 57-year-old Gorbachev says are needed to guarantee that his reform campaign, now in its fourth year, will become irreversible.

"The development of democracy, the democratization of the soviets (governing councils) will make the process comprehensive," Gorbachev told a meeting of Moscow Communist Party officials on Monday.

Under the election reforms, two-thirds of the members of the Council of People's Deputies will be directly elected by voters in the 15 Soviet republics and their constituent electoral districts.

The other third is reserved for deputies from social organizations ranging from labor unions to national associations representing interest groups ranging from stamp-collectors to anti-alcohol campaigners.

According to Tass, "the most influential organizations," including the 20-million member Communist Party, trade unions and associations of people belonging to economic co-operatives, are entitled to send 100 representatives to the Moscow-based council.

Unit Opens

DURHAM (AP) — Duke University Medical Center on Monday officially opened its new $4 million endoscopy unit to diagnose and treat gastrointestinal disorders, including ulcers and colon cancer.

The endoscope is a flexible tube-like instrument equipped with fiber optics or video chips, according to Dr. Peter Cotton, chief of endoscopy at Duke who has developed and refined endoscopic techniques.

Cotton said the endoscope is like a telescope that allows medical specialists to examine visually the lining of the human digestive system and the organs that drain fluids into it such as the liver, bile duct and pancreas. Previously physicians relied solely on X-rays to diagnose gastrointestinal problems.

Fragrance Ads Cause Stink

Dear Abby: Today when I received my TV Guide, a sample of a fragrance for men had been inserted, bound into the other pages. The instructions were to tear a portion of the ad to "release" the fragrance. However, this was unnecessary because the moment the mail came through the slot and plopped to the floor I began to cough and wheeze. In less time than it takes to say, "Lord, spare me!" I had a full-blown migraine headache!

I have also received soap and fabric softener through the mail. When I had a rural mailbox, I had to disinfect it regularly to combat the fumes of these offenders — which to me are extremely dangerous.

Abby, there are millions of folks with severe allergies, asthma, migraine headaches and probably other health conditions that are aggravated by such odors, and we spend a good deal of time trying to avoid them. Many of us cannot attend concerts, church, nightclubs or ride in elevators. We also spend big bucks for allergy shots. (I get two every week.)

Dear Abby

It's bad enough that we must live life constantly fighting the silent but deadly enemy — but it is really necessary to invade the privacy of our homes and attack us where it hurts the most?

Abby, please say something about the problem of these "scented samples" that invade the U.S. mail! Sign me... Choking

Dear Choking: Those "free sample" ad campaigns must cost the fragrance folks an arm and a leg, which is nothing to sniff at. If the army of allergics were to join forces and do a little lobbying, they would create a stink that no one could ignore.

Dear Abby: Congratulations on a good answer to the new wife who wanted her husband to drop his ex-in-laws.

My ex-in-laws are very dear to me. When I was first divorced, broke and jobless, with two kids and a worthless ex-husband who refused to pay child support, my ex-husband's older sister helped me go back to school. She gave me a place to live, helped with expenses and even paid the kids' orthodontist bills. She is not rich. She simply cared, and I will never be able to repay her for all she did, and still does.

Another of his sisters pays for my kids' piano lessons. She lives in another state, but she calls frequently to check on their progress and to see how we're doing. We see her whenever we can, and I value her friendship.

My ex-mother-in-law always invites me for Christmas and to stay overnight whenever we are vacationing in her state. She is welcome in my home anytime.

None of these relationships have anything to do with my ex-husband, from whom I parted with some bitterness eight years ago.

If I should remarry, I would expect to see my ex-in-laws — all of them (his mother, five brothers and sisters and all of their children) — in the front row at the wedding ceremony. These people were, are and always will be my family. — Morgan Piazza (Their Family Name, Which I Still Use Proudly)

Christmas Toys, New Year's Trash

I've been doing a lot of thinking about the guy I saw on the national news just before Christmas. He's the father who traveled to three different cities in pursuit of the current hot computer game, Nintendo. As I recall, the man stood in lines for two weeks, drove his body beyond human capacity and was prepared to spend half of his salary.

He was doing this because his child needed that toy or life would no longer be worth living.

I wonder how long it took the child to rip off the paper, insert the cartridge in the control deck, play the game non-stop for 12 hours and then banish it to the graveyard of Toys Past.

They do it, you know. Every December, there's a toy so hot parents quit their jobs and devote their lives to finding it. And every January, that same toy is harder to find in the house than it was in the stores.

At Wits End

Remember Cabbage Patch dolls? Their appearance unleashed a group of pit bull mothers who fought and scratched their way into lines and stores across this nation. Last Christmas, grandmothers on pensions paid $125 for a Cabbage Patch doll that when turned upside down activated a microchip which said, "I just love standing on my head."

Where is it today? One thing is certain. From the moment these toys hit the stores, critics charge, "They're addictive!" Do you have any idea how many years I have shopped for an addictive toy? Anything, so long as it would hold the interest of a child for five minutes? I always wanted to find a doll for my daughter that she didn't unwrap, rip off all of its clothes, punch out the eyes and throw under the bed, where it lay with fear on its face, praying for a garage sale.

I always wanted a game that was so riveting my kids would sit up half the night unable to pull themselves away. Instead, within two days, I had half of it in my sweeper bag.

Psychologists who throw around phrases like "a need to create stimuli" and "provides motivation and challenges" are giving kids more credit than they deserve.

There's nothing mysterious or psychological about it. Basically, kids like games that destroy an adult's hearing. They gravitate toward toys that cost more than your first house and are in short supply. Anything with "childproof" printed on it is a red flag, signaling instant destruction. They lust after toys that need special batteries manufactured only in communist-bloc countries. They want toys where their feet don't reach the pedals, or crafts that stain the carpet permanently.

I'm telling you, when you can find a Clean Your Room Kit that costs $149.95 and then limit the kids' playing time with it only after their homework is done, you're going to reverse a trend in this country.

Committee Named

"Is it really smart to pay $21 million to banks, for interest, in order to receive about $4 million three to four years earlier?" Jackson asked. "This is just one of many questions requiring thought before a definitive answer should be given to call for a bond referendum."

Jackson said, "For the record, it needs to be stated that education is, and has been, the number one priority of the Board of County Commissioners for many years. This is evident by the fact that $13 million of the county's $17 million received from property tax (this year) is appropriated for school operations." And, Jackson said, "an additional $16 million has been appropriated to the schools for capital projects during the past five years."

The two boards agreed to select four members from each body to serve on a committee to develop proposals to finance the school's building program.

Commissioners designated to serve on the committee include Chairman Gene James, Dews, Mercer and Farney Moore. School board representatives on the committee include Anne McGaughey, Frank Grooms, Phillips and Jack Collins.

Legislators Split

Warren, in acknowledging his support for Ramsey, said, "When I have a commitment I stick by that commitment. I have a commitment to support the present speaker and I consider a person's word his bond. It's always been my philosophy that a man is as good as his work and I believe in sticking by my word."

"I have a commitment and I will stick by that."

But Warren said "I think it will be close. I think it will be a close vote. We'll just have to wait and see what happens."

Jones said Ramsey "has been a good speaker. But I think it's time for a change."

"Since my first days in the General Assembly, I have worked with one goal in mind... how I can best serve the constituents whom I represent. From the beginning of my tenure in the House of Representatives, I have been concerned that many of our legislative decisions were based on the politics of partisan political patronage rather than on responsible public policy," Jones said.

"With that in mind, it became necessary for me, this fall, following the electorate's decision in November, to rethink my own position on the response I would make as a member of the General Assembly, as to whether the current leadership of the House could continue without major changes taking place."

"In reflecting on the obvious choice of the voters in November and my own concern that the Democratic Party would become mired in failed policies of the past," Jones said, "I came to the conclusion that it was in the best interest of the people

Bench, Yaz Make Hall; Perry Just Misses

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Move over Ty, Willie, Babe and Hank. Johnny and Yaz have reached your lofty level, too.

The election of Johnny Bench and Carl Yastrzemski to the Hall of Fame Monday night was no surprise. The number of votes they got was.

Bench received 431 votes from 447 ballots cast by members of the Baseball Writers Association of America. Yastrzemski got 423 votes. Just missing election was Williamston native Gaylord Perry, who finished third with 304 votes and missed getting in by 34 votes.

The size of their mandate put Bench and Yastrzemski in the upper echelon of baseball's superstars.

In order to be elected to the Hall of Fame, a player must be named on 75 percent of the ballots cast. Of the record 447 ballots this year, a player needed 336 votes to be elected.

Bench got 96.4 percent and Yastrzemski 94.63. Only Ty Cobb, 98.2 percent (222 of 226), and Hank Aaron, 97.8 (406 of 415), received higher percentages than Bench. Yastrzemski's percentage was the seventh-highest ever after Honus Wagner (95.13), Babe Ruth (95.13) and Willie Mays (94.67).

Bench and Yastrzemski also set a record for number of votes received. Mays had the previous mark for most votes, with 409 in 1979.

"There's a finality to it all, to reach a level so few people reach," Bench said after learning of his election. "I didn't think of percentage. ... I was just concerned with getting 75 percent. It's pretty elite company to be mentioned with Cobb and Aaron. It's hallowed ground in Cooperstown.

"Mickey Mantle was my first idol, but I played with a lot of special people — Clemente, Stargell and my teammates with the Reds — Rose, Morgan, Perez, Concepcion," Bench said.

Only one other player in this year's balloting received as many as 300 votes. Perry, winner of 314 games, finished third with 304 and missed election by 32 votes. Jim Bunning, who missed election by four votes last year, was 53 shy this time with 283. Ferguson Jenkins was fifth with 234 votes.

"It's a thrill. It's the culmination of many years of hard work. It's something, as a player, you don't think about," Yastrzemski said of his election. "I was hoping it wouldn't be a disappointment. I was on guard about it. I'm sorry that Perry and Ferguson Jenkins didn't make it."

The election of Bench and Yastrzemski marks only the third time since 1936 that two players have been elected in their first year of eligibility. In 1962, Jackie Robinson and Bob Feller were chosen and in 1982, Aaron and Frank Robinson made it in.

The election of Bench and Yastrzemski brings to 19 the number of players elected in their first year of eligibility.

Induction ceremonies at the Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y., are scheduled for July 23. Coincidentally, Cincinnati and Boston will play in the annual game on July 24.

Yaz and a few of his family and friends will be there. He already has reserved an entire motel.

Jean Yawkey, president and co-owner of the Red Sox, said "all of us in the Red Sox organization are thrilled."

"His accomplishments on the field are legendary and he richly deserves the honor," said Mrs. Yawkey, who has known Yastrzemski since he signed his first contract with the Red Sox in 1959.

After Hall of Famer Ted Williams retired as Boston's left fielder following the 1960 season, Yastrzemski took over and it was no time until he tamed the Green Monster.

Yaz finished with 3,419 hits and 452 home runs. He was named to 18 All-Star teams, won six Gold Gloves as Boston's left fielder and won the

Former Wolfpack Player Amazed At Accusations

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — Visibly shaken by allegations of wrongdoing at his alma mater, former North Carolina State star Thurl Bailey says he remembers the day when coach Jim Valvano lectured the team on how there would be no freebies passed out among them.

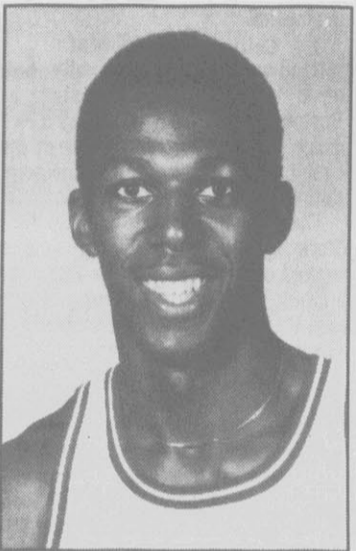

"One of the things definitely that was stressed when I was there was 'Hey, no handouts here,'" said Bailey after Utah's NBA game with the Charlotte Hornets on Monday.

"I think it's absurd that all these accusations ... things about drugs and money. It's ridiculous," Bailey said.

"I don't believe any of that stuff I've heard," Bailey said.

Valvano is the focus of allegations printed on the cover of the upcoming book, "Personal Fouls." Among the charges on the cover, excerpts of which were published last Saturday by The News and Observer of Raleigh, were that positive drug tests were kept secret, grades were altered and one player even played below his capabilities in an NCAA tournament game to avoid a future drug test that might hamper his professional career.

The cover did not name a source for the allegations.

Bailey was a member of Valvano's 1983 national championship team. He said he spoke with his former coach by telephone on Sunday.

"He definitely sounded depressed. But you know Coach V, he's a tough guy," Bailey said. "I just wish the best for him."

Bailey said he was sure that the book would sell based on the allegations, but added, "It's a shame that it has to cost other people their reputations, and the heartaches of their families."

Bailey said on his first day with Valvano in the fall of 1981, the coach told him and his teammates that they would have to earn their own way. He said if they didn't go to class and flunked out of school, they would not play. He said Valvano

State Officials Ask NCAA To Investigate Allegations

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The NCAA will wait until a book on the North Carolina State basketball program is published before deciding whether it contains allegations that should be investigated, the organization's director of enforcement said.

N.C. State officials mailed a letter to the NCAA on Monday asking for an investigation into allegations of illegal activity in the school's basketball program.

"I don't know what's in the book. As I understand so far is that all anyone has is a jacket to a book. And it's being promoted as something detrimental to North Carolina State," David Berst, the NCAA director of enforcement, said while attending the NCAA convention in San Francisco. "I would prefer to wait until there actually is a book and someone reads the book and determines if there's anything in there to be interested in. I'm not inclined to get excited about it until we actually have something in hand." The letter from N.C. State to NCAA Executive Director Dick

Jim Valvano

Schultz, which is signed by athletic director and basketball coach Jim Valvano and Chancellor Bruce Poulton, cites allegations contained on the jacket of a book called "Personal Fouls" by Peter Golenbock.

"The University has acquired a copy of the jacket of this book, and we are enclosing a copy for your information," the letter said. "Please note that some very serious allegations are made about North Carolina State University and its faculty, student athletes, and basketball coach. Amongst those allegations are illegal gifts of jewelry and cars to players, the changing of grades by faculty and university officials, the passing of large amounts of secret money from our booster club, etc. None of these allegations are true."

"In view of the seriousness of these allegations, we as athletic director and chancellor, respectively, of North Carolina State University are requesting of you an im-

Jazz Blows Past Hornets, 114-92

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — The words "expansion team" were enough to get the Utah Jazz going against Charlotte, and when they started, the Hornets were left in the dust of a 114-92 loss.

The Jazz suffered a 101-80 loss to the NBA's other expansion team, the Miami Heat. When they got to Charlotte, they didn't want to suffer a repeat.

Thanks to Malone, and some help from reserve Thurl Bailey, the Jazz escaped the sting of the Hornets, who have surprised the league with nine victories.

Malone, who hit 15 of 25 shots, grabbed 19 rebounds, leading the Jazz to a 45-36 edge in rebounding. Despite gaining a 15-13 lead in offensive rebounds, the Hornets gave up a host of second-chance baskets to Utah and it helped put Charlotte.

Utah hit seven of its first nine shots in the opening quarter while Charlotte missed its first five field goal attempts and fell behind 28-20. Malone had 14 points to lead the early attack.

After giving up the first four points of the third quarter, Utah went on a 12-2 run in which Malone had eight points. Charlotte was never closer than 24 points and Utah's lead grew to 96-60 in the fourth quarter after a free throw by Jim Farmer with 9:02 left to play.

Farmer had 13. John Stockton scored 12 and Darrell Griffith 10 points for the Jazz.

After Tripucka, Earl Cureton had 13 points and Rex Chapman scored 10 for Charlotte.

The Hornets, leading the league in attendance, drew their sixth straight sellout crowd of 23,388. It was the 12th sellout in 17 home dates.

Sonics 105, Cavaliers 103

The upstart Cleveland Cavaliers are finding out what it's like to be the team for whom everybody is waiting.

The Seattle SuperSonics were ready for them Monday night, scoring the final six points of the game to end Cleveland's season-high winning streak at 11 straight games with a 105-103 decision at Seattle.

The Sonics have now won five straight games and 11 in a row at home.

Richmond Topples Lady Bucs

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The University of Richmond used an active zone defense and a full-court press to disrupt the East Carolina offense and gain a 67-58 Colonial Athletic Association women's basketball victory Monday night.

The Pirates, forced into 23 turnovers, still had the chance, however, to pull it out, but couldn't hit when they had to.

"We just didn't play very well at times," Coach Pat Pierson said. "We played hard, but you have to give Richmond a lot of credit. They had a great point guard (Pam Bryant) and they shoot the free throw well, while we didn't go to the line a lot."

Richmond converted 14 of 27 free throw attempts, but that compared to just eight of 14 for the Lady Pirates, who were charged with six more fouls.

The big difference came in turnovers, however, where East Carolina committed 23 and Richmond just 14. That resulted in 23 Richmond points as compared to 13 for the Lady Pirates.

"We didn't quit," Pierson said. "We showed a lot of determination."

Richmond, out by as much as nine points, saw the Lady Pirates put on a rally midway through the second

Duke remained atop the Associated Press college basketball poll Monday and the Blue Devils were the only member of the Top 10 to hold their spot from the previous week, one which saw five teams from that group lose a game.

The only newcomer to the Top Twenty was undefeated Providence which was last ranked for four weeks near the end of the 1986-87 season when the Friars reached the Final Four.

Providence's ranking meant six of the nine members of the Big East Conference have been ranked at some point this season. Syracuse, Georgetown, Villanova, Seton Hall and Connecticut have all been ranked, while Boston College, St. John's and Pittsburgh have not been in the Top Twenty.

Duke, 11-0, received 63 first-place votes and 1,328 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters followed by Illinois, 13-0, and Oklahoma, 12-1, which each moved up one place from last week's voting.

Illinois received three first-place votes and 1,251 points, while Oklahoma received the only other No. 1 votes and 1,173 points.

Syracuse dropped from second to fourth with 1,087 points after losing its first game of the season to Pittsburgh but the Orangemen, 14-1, rallied to hand Seton Hall its first loss of the season.

Iowa's victory over North Carolina on Saturday that had the wrong player shooting free throws at the end of the game helped the Hawkeyes, 13-1, jump from ninth to fifth with 1,031 points, nine more than Michigan, 13-1, which improved one place from last week.

Cats' Plan Sinks Syracuse Orangemen Fall; Kansas, Oklahoma Avoid Upsets

Villanova did exactly what Coach Rollie Massimino wanted, targeting Syracuse's Sherman Douglas and Stephen Thompson and sending the No. 4 Orangemen to a 75-73 defeat.

"The key to the game was TNT. Tempo negates turnovers," Massimino said after Villanova handed Syracuse its second conference loss in a week. "That's how Big East games are played."

The Wildcats, 9-6, slowed down the tempo and stayed close after trailing by two points at halftime. Villanova moved out to a nine-point second-half lead over Syracuse, 14-2, then held on down the stretch.

Kenny Wilson scored 20 points and West had 14 as five Wildcats scored in double figures.

No. 3 Oklahoma 89, Nebraska 81
Stacey King's three-point play gave Oklahoma the lead for good with 2:40 left in the game.

"I thought they played really well, they took it right at us," Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs said. "We made the right plays when the game was on the line and that's what it gets down to. It's who makes the right plays in the last three minutes, and fortunately we did that."

Terrence Mullins led the Sooners with 27 points and King had 21.

ECU, State Resume Their Football Talks

SAN FRANCISCO — East Carolina and North Carolina State athletic officials are holding talks at the NCAA Convention in an effort to resume their football series, according to a report in the Raleigh News and Observer Tuesday.

Talks were originally spurred on by proposals at the convention to add 12th game to the current 11-game college football schedule.

N.C. State athletic director Jim Valvano reportedly said the addition of an extra game each year might allow for the series, ended after the 1987 season, to be renewed. There has been some talk about turning the game into a Thanksgiving week contest that could evolve into a traditional season ending game.

Dave Hart, director of athletics at ECU, told the News and Observer that he would like to see the series renewed even if the added-game proposal fails and added that ECU might be willing to lessen its demands for a home and away proposal to get the series renewed.

One possibility is a two games in Raleigh and one game in Greenville setup.

The cancellation of the series came after a riot following the 1987 game.

Junior High School Basketball

GRIMESLAND — G.R. Whitfield took a pair of junior high school basketball games from Wellcome Monday.

In the boys' game, Whitfield won, 32-29. Alkiwan Thompson led Whitfield with 20 points while Fleming paced Wellcome with 15.

Whitfield's girls took an 18-15 win in their game. Lakeecha Simpson led Whitfield with 10 points while Shontell Spanill had nine for Wellcome.

Whitfield's boys are now 3-3 while the girls are 2-4.

CHICOD — Farmville Middle School took a 63-21 junior high school victory over Chicod Monday in junior high school action.

Farmville was led by T. Long with 10 points and R. Tyson with eight. Chicod was led by Michael Moore with 10 points.

Farmville also won the girls' game, 53-32. Farmville was led by Charlene Reid with 13 points and Belinda Bullock with 11. Chicod was paced by Gretchen Hardee with 11.

Trey Stroud had a leg on both the 200 medley relay and the freestyle relay.

For the girls, Kristin Dougherty won the 200 freestyle, the 100 butterfly and a leg of the 200 medley relay. Kathryn Barnhill took the 50 and 500 freestyles and a leg of the medley relay. Paula Song won the 100 freestyle, the 100 backstroke and swam a leg on the medley relay.

Rose returns to action on Saturday at Northeastern.

New Year's Tennis Tourney Completed

The team of Don Rutledge and Linda Warner took first place in the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department's New Year's Mixed Doubles Tennis Tournament.

The event began on Dec. 31 with 64 players competing. The field was narrowed to eight teams which played a round-robin to determine the final winners.

Second place went to Jack Mitchell and Dolly Brantley while Doug and Cheri Getsinger finished third. Randy Bridgman and Judy Jenkins took fourth place.

Al King and Frances Cain won the consolation event.

Edwards Tabbed CAA's Top Player Again

Blue Edwards of East Carolina University has been named the Colonial Athletic Association's basketball Player of the Week for the second consecutive week, it was announced Monday afternoon.

For the previous week, Edwards scored 30 points and grabbed 15 rebounds in two games. Against Georgia Tech, Edwards scored 29 point, had seven rebounds, handed out five assists and made two steals. In the Pirates' CAA opener on Saturday, Edwards scored 31 points, had eight rebounds and two assists.

Rapone Named Defensive Coordinator

Nick Rapone, named earlier to Coach Bill Lewis' new staff at East Carolina University, has been elevated to defensive coordinator for the Pirate football team, it has been announced.

Rapone, 32, will continue to serve as secondary coach for the Pirates.

"After the situation with Dicky (Clark), we looked outside the staff at coaches who were available and, then in considering Nick, we had the best possible person on our staff," Lewis said.

Clark was first named defensive coordinator on Dec. 10, but never reported to Greenville. A member of the Georgia staff, from where Lewis came to ECU, Clark remained with the Bulldogs through the Jan. 1 Gator Bowl. Upon the appointment of Clark's long-time friend Ray Goff as the replacement to retiring Vince Dooley as head coach at Georgia, Clark decided to remain with the Bulldogs.

Editor's Speech Stirs Convention

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — One speaker after another droned on. Their subject, the results of a massive study of college athletes, seemed mostly predictable and dry as dust.

Many delegates to the 87th annual NCAA convention seemed about to nod off. Then Joe McGuff, vice president and editor of the Kansas City Star and Times, strode to the podium and made NCAA history of a sort.

Nobody, old-timers said later, ever talked to them like this before.

"The concept of big-time college football and basketball as amateur sports is pure fiction," he said. "These young men are athlete-students."

Nobody's attention was wandering now. About 1,800 delegates — the men and women who form the superstructure of collegiate athletics — listened raptly as McGuff gave his interpretation of the study.

"In a college or university, everything should be subordinated to education," said McGuff, a long-time sports editor and columnist of the Star and Times. "I don't think anyone can look at the facts and figures... and say that is happening."

"I've never heard anybody knock things like that before, and this is my 43rd NCAA convention," said Wayne Duke, retiring commissioner of the Big Ten Conference. "I think a lot of people in this room would tell you that he gave a very welcome message."

"If we're offended by what McGuff said, we have to be very sensitive indeed," said James O'Hanlon, faculty representative from Nebraska.

"Then many of us are very sensitive," said Del Brinkman, faculty representative from Kansas. "Some people appreciated what he said, including me, but not as many people appreciated it as should have."

"I guess each is entitled to his or her own opinion," said Martin Massengale, chancellor of the University of Nebraska and moderator of the discussion. "I think it certainly is amateur athletics."

McGuff was one of several panelists invited to discuss the results of the study, which included interviews with more than 4,000 athletes and non-athletes. He noted that many college administrators and coaches have lauded the study.

"The press has put a different spin on the report," he said. He drew scattered laughter and applause when he said, "Bob Verdi of the Chicago Tribune wrote that it is mind-boggling that the NCAA is spending $1.75 million for this study and adds, 'One would think the NCAA has been around too long to be so naive, but we should never underestimate the ability of this organization to out-dumb itself.'"

McGuff said he saw merit in the report "as a starting point."

"But I will offer this warning," he added. "If the spin the presidents choose to put on it is to say, 'My, look how good things are,' then instead of a starting point it will be a dead end."

The other morning panelists — NCAA President Will Bailey, San Jose State President Gail Fullerton and Indiana University President Emeritus John Ryan — conceded there are problems but drew more positive readings from the study.

Bailey noted that college and football players reported more physical and mental abuse than other students.

"But physical and mental abuse, like beauty, may be in the eye of the beholder," he said.

Fullerton noted the study indicated fewer than one-fourth of the senior football and basketball players anticipate a professional sports career.

"We're frequently criticized for encouraging student-athletes to think they might achieve a career in pro sports," she said.

Hall Of Fame

American League Most Valuable Player Award in 1967, when he won the Triple Crown and led Boston to the pennant.

In 1967, Yastrzemski hit .326 with 44 homers and 121 runs batted, but it was what he did down the stretch that got the Red Sox into the World Series. Yaz batted .444 with 26 RBI in his last 19 games. In his last 13 at-bats, he had 10 hits.

He also holds league records for most intentional walks, 190; most at-bats, 11,988; most plate appearances, 13,990, and most games, 3,308.

Yaz reached base via a hit or a walk 5,264 times in his career, ranking third behind Pete Rose, 5,822, and Ty Cobb, 5,440.

He is the only American Leaguer to have 3,000 hits and 400-plus homers.

"I accomplished something no one else has ever done," Yastrzemski said of reaching the 3,000 hit-400 homer plateau. "I'm very pleased and very proud of my accomplishments but I'm most proud of that."

"Not Williams, not Gehrig, not DiMaggio did that. They were Cadillacs and I'm a Chevrolet."

While Yaz had to work hard to become a star, Bench seemed born for fame.

During spring training in 1969, Williams autographed a baseball for Bench with the inscription: "To a Hall of Famer, for sure."

"I didn't even know that Ted Williams had ever seen me play," said Bench, who was NL Rookie of the Year in 1968. "I remember thinking, 'Are you sure you mean me?' For Ted Williams to even know who I was, that was a helluva deal."

Bench was selected the NL's starting catcher for the 1969 All-Star Game at the age of 22. Before he retired, everybody knew about him.

He holds the record for most homers by a catcher, 327. Overall, Bench hit 389 home runs and won the Gold Glove as catcher 10 times while helping the Reds win four pennants and the World Series in 1975 and 1976.

"I'm most proud of my combination of offense, defense, power, RBIs, the leadership — the overall ability," Bench said.

Bench played in four World Series, hitting .279 with five homers and 14 RBI. He appeared in 11 All-Star Games, hitting .370 with three home runs.

He is only the 13th catcher in the Hall of Fame, joining Yogi Berra, Roger Bresnahan, Roy Campanella, Mickey Cochrane, Bill Dickey, Buck Ewing, Rick Ferrell, Josh Gibson, Gabby Hartnett, King Kelly, Ernie Lombardi and Ray Schalk.

Despite stellar numbers, Perry and Jenkins posed a dilemma for some voters.

Perry was 314-265 for eight major league teams in 22 seasons. He also had a 3.10 earned run average and 3,534 strikeouts.

Some voters, who asked not to be identified, said Perry's reputation of throwing a spitball might have an influence on their vote.

"I think I have the credentials to be in the Hall of Fame, but it probably won't be on the first try," Perry said before the announcement.

Jenkins had a lifetime record of 284-226 and 3,192 career strikeouts. He is the only pitcher in major-league history to strike out more than 3,000 and walk fewer than 1,000.

But he also had a link to drugs. While with the Texas Rangers, he was suspended Sept. 9-25, 1980, following his Aug. 25 arrest in Toronto on charges of cocaine possession. Following a grievance hearing on Sept. 22, arbitrator Raymond Goetz lifted the suspension.

Jenkins was convicted by Judge Gerald Long of Ontario provincial court on Dec. 18, 1980, but was given an absolute discharge, meaning there was no fine, no jail term and no record of the conviction.

"I know personally I've got the stats and the numbers," Jenkins said after learning he didn't make it. "I feel sorry for Gaylord, he only missed by 30-something votes."

Jenkins said he wasn't sure if his link to drugs would hurt his chances. "Honestly, I don't even know, it's up to them (the writers)," Jenkins said.

points, scored on a dunk with 48 seconds left and KcKey tied the game with two free throws at the 28-second mark.

Cleveland ran the clock down to nine seconds and took a timeout. On the inbounds pass, John Williams threw the ball out of bounds.

Threat took a 20-foot jump shot with eight seconds remaining and McKey was there to jam in the winning basket.

Celtics 119, Clippers 84

Road-weary and physically battered LA took another beating as Boston's Jim Paxson sparked a 34-8 surge in the last 7½ minutes of the first half to break open a one-point game.

The Clippers, who lost to New York by 34 points Sunday night, played on the road for the 10th time in their last 11 games. Danny Manning, their second leading scorer, and Greg Kite missed the game with injuries. Charles Smith played after a recent bout with the flu.

The Celtics, 10-0 at home against the Clippers since losing on March 2, 1979, were led by Robert Parish with 25 points and 17 rebounds. Paxson with a season-high 21 and Reggie Lewis with 17.

76ers 121, Mavericks 103

Ron Anderson scored eight of his 23 points during a 26-10 second-quarter 76er run that broke open a tight game.

The game was tied 31-31 with 10:10 left in the first half when the 76ers exploded, building a 57-41 lead with 3:06 remaining in the second period on Hersey Hawkins' 3-pointer. That was the fourth consecutive 3-pointer by Philadelphia.

Derek Harper, who led Dallas with a career-high 38 points, scored 26 in the first half and helped cut the lead to 59-51.

Charles Barkley led Philadelphia with 26 points and Maurice Cheeks added 22. Rolando Blackman added 15 for Dallas.

Warriors 130, Suns 124

Chris Mullin scored 39 points and registered his first NBA triple-double to help the Warriors snap the Suns' winning streak at five games.

Mullin also pulled down 11 rebounds and handed out 11 assists before fouling out with 1:57 left in the game, while Mitch Richmond scored 28 points, 20 in the second half, and Steve Alford added a career-high 13 for Golden State.

Despite Mullin's 25 points and seven rebounds, Phoenix led 65-53 at the half as Eddie Johnson scored 18 of his 27 points in the second period.

But Golden State, using a four-guard offense, went on a 22-7 run to open the third period, moving to a 75-72 lead. The Warriors' guards, who shot a combined four for 25 in the opening half, came up with 20 points during the third-quarter spree. Richmond led the way with 10.

Mullin's 3-point basket tied the game at 107-107 with 6:51 remaining and the Warriors went ahead to stay on Alford's jumper with 6:31 left.

Duke Still Tops

Georgetown, which dropped from the ranks of the undefeated last week at the hands of Seton Hall, fell two places to seventh. The Hoyas, 10-1, received 843 points, just two more than North Carolina, 13-2, which was sixth last week.

Louisville, 9-2, moved from 13th to ninth with 707 points, 14 more than Missouri, 13-3, which moved up one place from last week to round out the Top Ten.

Nevada-Las Vegas led the Second Ten followed by Arizona, Seton Hall, Florida State, North Carolina State, Kansas, Tennessee, Ohio State, Georgia Tech and Providence.

Last week's Second Ten was Missouri, Nevada-Las Vegas, Louisville, Ohio State, Florida State, North Carolina State, Tennessee, Kansas, Georgia Tech and Georgia.

Georgia lost both its games last week to fall to 9-4. The Bulldogs lost Southeastern Conference games to Kentucky and Florida.

Providence, 12-0, won two Big East games last week, a 29-point thrashing of St. John's at home and an 80-78 squeaker at Connecticut. The Friars, who were picked ninth in the nine-team Big East in a preseason coaches' vote, were 11-17 last season following the Final Four appearance the previous season.

Coach Gordon Chiesa resigned after the season and he was replaced by Rick Barnes who had been at George Mason. The Friars have played just three road games but each was a victory over a New England team — Boston College, Holy Cross and Connecticut.

 "Eight ever, nine never" says the old rubric about how to tackle a suit combination missing the queen. In other words, the percentage play is to finesse when you have a combined eight cards in the two hands, but not with nine. That advice, however sound it is in general, is simplistic. Information you have about the hand can cause you to take a different view.

 West's four-heart preempt posed quite a problem for North. He finally decided, correctly in our opinion, that he held too much to be shut out of the auction, so he boldly bid four spades. That made life easy for his partner.
 West led the king of hearts and shifted to a diamond. Had South blindly followed the adage, he would have cashed the ace and king of trumps. However, West's preempt gave him cause for concern. He won the diamond in hand and tested trumps by leading to the king. When both defenders followed, declarer gave himself an additional chance to learn about the hand—he led dummy's remaining heart. When East showed out, West was marked with a nine-card heart suit. That meant that his remaining four cards were divided among three suits, and the most probable division was 2-1-1. It was at least 2-to-1, therefore, that West held a singleton spade.

 Backing his card-reading skill, declarer crossed to the ace of clubs and took the trump finesse. When West discarded on this trick, it was a simple matter to draw the last trump and claim the slam.

Sajak Begins Late-Night Show With Carson Tribute

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — If it's true that if you can't beat 'em, you should join 'em, then Pat Sajak is CBS' white flag in the late-night network talk-show war.

From his Midwestern folksiness, to his Middle American naughtiness, with his hip band, his plain vanilla sidekick and the Hollywood Hills backdrop behind the blue curtain, desk-and-move-down-one-sofa, Sajak is Carson Lite, Carson Jr., Carson wanna-be.

There is simply no reason for "The Pat Sajak Show" other than to wait for Carson to retire and hope to inherit his ratings.

In most markets, Sajak's 90-minute nightly show goes up against NBC's "Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson" and the first half of NBC's "Late Night with David Letterman." In his first night Monday, Sajak was up against Carson's guest host Jay Leno.

Sajak's entire show was a tribute to Carson, but his one bow to Letterman was a bald-faced copy of a "Late Night" remote segment. Pat took viewers along on his physical — and performed such side-splitting antics as building a wooden fort out of tongue depressors while waiting for the doctor. The bit was actually pretty funny.

If CBS can afford to keep him for a few years of slim ratings, Sajak might be an acceptable heir to Carson. He's quick but occasionally over-relaxed, letting his less-than-riveting guests, such as Joan Van Ark, take over for too long.

He did play off sidekick Dan Miller for easy laughs. But a man who's been making his living cracking wise at the expense of contestants on "Wheel of Fortune" had no trouble playing off the first night's standard-issue guest list.

The first guest, Chevy Chase, provided the only comic or any other relief during guest Peter Ueberroth's deadly monologue on baseball player drug use by leaving to use the bathroom.

Later, Michael Gross of NBC's "Family Ties" said he hoped his TV family, the Keatons, "die in a plane crash" to avoid future "Family Ties" reunions. But any dozing viewers had probably been jolted into switching to Letterman by then. They would have thankfully missed comedian Dennis Wolfberg, whose routine centered around a proctology exam.

By then, it seemed that a 90-minute talk show was awfully long. It seemed years since Sajak had opened with his monologue. Most of the jokes were lame, but that, too, is a Carson tradition. Sajak's best lines made fun of third-place CBS. He checked his watch and explained, "In less than one minute we will officially become CBS' longest-running program."

In fact, Sajak as Carson clone has a better shot at the master than a long list of contenders who have tried and failed, including Joan Rivers in 1986 and Alan Thicke in 1983. The last time CBS mounted a Carson attack was with Merv Griffin in 1972.

Carson, 62, signed an undisclosed multi-year contract in 1987, but he has been on the air for 26 years. Letterman has long been considered the heir apparent at NBC, though he professes occasionally to feel his more biting humor belongs after midnight.

CBS is gambling with Sajak, a former heartland weatherman whose only claim to fame is tossing quips opposite Vanna White on the enormously popular "Wheel of Fortune." But CBS has little to lose, since it can't do much worse than it has been doing with reruns and low-budget original dramas in late night. They've been pushed back until after Sajak.

ABC has long been happy to take the high road in late-night with the long-running news show "Nightline." The last pretender to the Carson throne, Miss Rivers, left Fox Broadcasting Co.'s "The Late Show" and was replaced by a series of fill-ins. Fox finally settled on the most successful of these, comedian-actor Arsenio Hall.

Ironically, or perhaps symmetrically, Hall also has a new late-night talk show, in syndication. It premiered last week.

"The Arsenio Hall Show" shows signs of developing a personality, though viewers with a low tolerance for cutesiness may give up on it before it does. The brash Hall started out with a demographically rigorous guest list that included singer Luther Vandross, actor Leslie Nielsen and, er, personality Brooke Shields, about whom Hall gushed, "The perfect first guest!" in a display of vapid sentimentality or high satire, depending upon the viewer's generosity.

Eden In 'Combat Boots'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Barbara Eden, best known for "I Dream of Jeannie," stars as a mother who tries to dissuade her son from completing Army parachute jump school in the NBC movie "Your Mother Wears Combat Boots."

The movie will begin production in early January at Fort Benning, Ga., the home of the Army jump school. Eden is also scheduled to star next season in a new series for NBC.

Ed Asner Returning To Broadway With 'Born Yesterday' Production

By Frank Rizzo
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

STAMFORD, Conn. — Ed Asner is nobody's fool.

He has played Lou Grant, the patron saint of journalists, received seven Emmy awards, and is a veteran actor of more than 35 years on the stage, in movies and on television. You would think that starring in one of the most beloved Broadway plays opposite one of the stage's most gifted comedians would be a breeze.

But Asner is cautious. It comes naturally.

The show, "Born Yesterday," in which he co-stars with Madeline Kahn, will mark his return to Broadway. But it is a different Broadway since he appeared with Jack Lemmon in "Face of a Hero" nearly 30 years ago.

And the New York-bound production has had its share of ups and downs since it began at the Cleveland Play House last fall. The show's original director, Josephine R. Abady, has been replaced by John Tillingier, a popular director of comedy.

"I guess over the years I've learned to keep the cork in," Asner said during an interview after a recent performance of the play here. "That way, if I trip I don't fall down too many stairs. It is not a willful act by any means. It's mere second nature now. It keeps me from getting too excited."

It is not easy to picture Asner getting giddy. His forehead is permanently corrugated, his eyebrows form a hairy fortress over his steely gaze, and his stocky build recalls his tackler past.

But like so many of his roles, Asner's gruff appearance gives way to a gentle disposition, a probing intellect, the ability to put things in a realistic perspective — and an occasional giggle.

"This year is tragically barren of plays on Broadway," said Asner, 59. "How many are there? Count 'em. There are four plays in New York right now." Asner is not sure how Broadway will take to this production of the comedy, but he is absolutely confident of the play's merits. "This play will last forever," he said of the comedy that made a star out of Judy Holiday in the late '40s.

Asner said that the recent political scandals of corruption in Washington, D.C., give the play a topicality, but he said that the play has always been relevant.

Fifteen years ago in summer stock, Asner first played the role of Harry Brock, a scrap-iron tycoon who goes to Washington to wield his influence. Along the way, his mistress Billie Dawn, the quintessential dumb blonde, receives a liberal education and changes Brock's plans for power.

"I was amazed when we did it (then). The play was so fresh, so modern and so perfect. I knew it would never be dated."

Despite Asner's long list of film and television credits, it was not until his own TV series that he thought that his career was on solid ground.

"At that point I couldn't conjure up a little saving gimmick I always gave myself to keep me in check," he said. "I used to be able to say to myself, 'Wake up, now. You might be pumping gas tomorrow.' I used to be able to bring that image up in a moment's notice. It was healthy for me."

By the time of his own series, Asner was a force in television — some said too much of a force — an actor who put his own political agenda into his works.

Despite its many awards, respectable ratings and loyal following, "Lou Grant" was canceled in 1982.

It was also at that time that Asner served as the controversial national president for the Screen Actors Guild, advocating an activist and liberal political role for the organization. He held that post for two terms, from 1981-1985.

"When 'Lou Grant' was canceled prematurely, there was a great driving force in me to get back on TV as quickly as possible to rebut my detractors, rebut those responsible for getting the series canceled and above all to prove to my fellow performers that there is life after death. ... It took a good long while before I could get the first nibble."

That was in 1985's ABC short-lived series, "Off the Rack" with Eileen Brennan, "which could have been good, which was probably naive of me. But I laughed and I don't laugh easily."

His next series a year later, the acclaimed "The Bronx Zoo" on NBC, "was unbelievably squandered" by the network, he said.

"We made 21 episodes and over a two-year period only 18 were shown," he said, "and no more than three were shown consecutively."

"The series) had a lot to say, maybe too much. And it was totally unsupported. ... You'd expect (series creator) Gary Goldberg and (NBC head) Brandon Tartikoff to know better. I could be wrong but it seemed to me that even the top dogs don't care about potential quality shows. They are just bottom-line people."

After the series was canceled, Asner was tired of the hassle of television series. "I had run through three networks. And I thought it was time to get away from this penny-ante ... routine."

"Born Yesterday," he said, gives him a chance to work on a project he respects.

"I'm doing what I think is good work," he said, "and making it better every night. I relish the play and I relish working on it."

Jackson To Receive Tribute

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Music sensation Michael Jackson will receive a special American Music Awards tribute this month to acknowledge the international impact of his "Bad" album.

The American Music Award of Achievement trophy will be presented to the entertainer Jan. 30 during ceremonies televised nationwide by ABC-TV.

The trophy honors Jackson "because his album 'Bad' is the first ever to contain five No. 1 singles, and in recognition of its international impact in becoming 1988's best-selling album in the world," the organizers said in a statement Monday.

Jackson, who already has received 13 American Music Awards, is also a double nominee this year — for male vocalist in the pop-rock and soul-rhythm and blues categories.

International sales for "Bad" have reached 20 million. The album's five singles reaching the No. 1 position were "Dirty Diana," "Man in the Mirror," "The Way You Make Me Feel," "I Just Can't Stop Loving You" and "Bad." A sixth single, "Smooth Criminal," is in the Top 10.

Actor Gary Busey In Private Center

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Actor Gary Busey moved into a private rehabilitation center a month after his near-fatal motorcycle crash, but his publicist said he was improving and dismissed concerns about the slow recovery.

"He did have a serious head injury and they are very optimistic," spokeswoman Carla Schalm said. "Everything is going very well. The primary reason for the move is so that Gary can have some privacy."

Busey, 44, left Cedars-Sinai Medical Center on Friday and was taken to the rehabilitation center, hospital spokesman Ron Wise said. The actor was in fair condition and "seemed to be doing well" when he left, Wise said.

The family didn't want the name of the rehabilitation center disclosed.

Busey, an active opponent of mandatory helmet laws, wasn't wearing a helmet Dec. 4 when he lost control of his motorcycle in Culver City, fell and hit the back of his head on a curb.

The actor underwent 90 minutes of neurosurgery shortly after arriving at Cedars-Sinai, and his condition has steadily improved. Wise said the prognosis for a full recovery still holds up and that the recovery time wasn't unusually long for someone with such a serious injury.

Busey, whose movie credits include "Big Wednesday," "Carney" and "Lethal Weapon," was nominated for an Academy Award for his starring role in "The Buddy Holly Story." Most recently, he portrayed a journalist in the HBO miniseries "A Dangerous Life."

Peter Falk Returns As 'Columbo'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Peter Falk as the rumpled Lt. Columbo will be back solving crimes for television audiences next month.

Falk made the detective a household name in the 1970s, and ABC announced last year that he had signed on for a revival of the series. The new "Columbo" was to have begun in the fall, but the writers strike delayed production.

Beginning Feb. 6, a series of two-hour "Columbo" movies will rotate Monday nights with two other movies: "B.L. Stryker," starring Burt Reynolds as a Florida private eye, which premieres on Feb. 13; and "Gideon Oliver," starring Oscar-winner Louis Gossett Jr. as a crime-solving anthropologist, makes its debut Feb. 20.
