Six Survive 35 Days In Rubble

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Six people who survived on canned vegetables, fruit and pickles for 35 days after the Armenian earthquake were pulled alive from the basement of a collapsed apartment building in Leninakan, Tass reported today.

The survivors were rescued Wednesday, Tass said, the 35th day after the Dec. 7 earthquake that killed an estimated 25,000 people in northwest Armenia. Rescuers last pulled a person alive from the wreckage Dec. 26, Tass said.

The six men were found under the rubble in the basement of a nine-story apartment building which had collapsed on them, the official Soviet news agency said in a report from Yerevan, the capital of Armenia.

They survived because there was plenty of canned food stored in the basement, Tass said. All are hospitalized in Yerevan but none are in danger, doctors told the news agency.

Tass did not say how the six men were found or who rescued them. Officials had ended the search for survivors weeks ago, saying it was necessary to clear away the rubble to prevent disease spreading from decayed bodies.

Authorities have been demolishing buildings that could not be rebuilt after the earthquake.

One of the six survivors, Aikaz Akopyan, had medical training and administered massages to the others to relieve the pain of their injuries, Tass said. The first reports said one of the men, Karin Sarkissyan, had a broken arm, but there were no immediate details on their others' injuries.

"On the day of the earthquake, I asked five neighbors to help me carry two heavy jars to the basement," Akopyan was quoted as telling Tass. "Just then, we suddenly heard a terrible roar. The walls began to collapse. I thought a war had started."

Akopyan, 50, said they never had to worry about food and water because the basement was used to store tins of vegetables, fruits and pickles.

"It's true, we conserved the food in every possible way. But we never doubted for a minute that we would be found and released," he was quoted as saying.

The quake leveled much of Leninakan, Armenia's second-largest city 10 miles east of the Turkish border and left thousands homeless.

Jones Says People Are The Winners In House Revolt

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

State Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr. of Farmville helped topple Liston Ramsey's reign as speaker of the state House of Representatives, but he's not gloating.

It is the people of North Carolina who are the winners, he said, not him or any of the other 19 Democrats who joined forces Wednesday with 45 Republicans in the House to elect Edgemore County Democrat Joe Mavretic as the new speaker.

Ramsey, a Democrat from Madison County, served as speaker for four consecutive two-year terms.

"All we're asking for is equal distribution (of state funds)," Jones said of the Democratic coalition.

"I didn't support this move for any personal reasons. I supported this move because it's in the best interest of the people of North Carolina. From the standpoint of having a speaker from eastern North Carolina ... I think it's certainly going to help our district ... and the other people of North Carolina."

"But, let me make this clear, I do not want to see any favoritism for any area. The only thing we are looking for is equal distribution of state dollars. I want (Mavretic) to be a speaker that will ensure equal distribution, within reason, of state funds," Jones said today in a telephone interview from his Raleigh office.

Not since 1975 has a speaker been from the east, Jones said, and that was Bladen County. And it has been 20 years since a speaker hailed from the northeastern part of the state, he said, and that was Gates County.

"We want to ensure that eastern North Carolina gets its fair share, that's what it comes down to," Jones said.

The move should also improve the image of the Democratic Party among voters, Jones said, by opening up the budget process to the public and the media.

Gordon Walker of Greenville, chairman of the Pitt County Republican Party, agreed that business conducted in the House under Mavretic's leadership will be open more than it has been under Ramsey.

"It's going to be a whole different state of affairs. I think the Republicans would have voted for the devil if he'd run against Ramsey," Walker said.

"With politics being the way it is now, it seems to me it really is an open arena ... I think what you're going to have is a system in which everybody's proposals will get a fair hearing," he said. "I think it's a good day for North Carolina, when people can put things aside and get along with the things they were there to do to start with."

Mavretic Gets Speaker's Job Republicans Gaining Role In House Power Structure

By John Flesher
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Rep. Joe Mavretic became speaker of the state House after a bipartisan coalition swept Liston Ramsey from power in a startling rebellion that participants vowed would bring more open and equitable leadership.

Mavretic, an Edgemore County Democrat and retired Marine aviator, promised to steer the House in a "new direction" that "should encourage full and open participation by all 120 members, and it will permit each one of you to grow as much as you want as a legislator."

"Everybody in this state is going to be represented by someone who is going to have an equal opportunity to express their views," Mavretic, 54, said Wednesday after defeating Ramsey, D-Madison, 65-54 with one abstention. "The people of this great state will not measure our performance by the politics we play but by the policies we set."

Twenty of the 74 House Democrats joined 45 of the 46 Republicans to oust Ramsey in a vote that ended months of behind-the-scenes maneuvering and arm twisting that continued until moments before the 1989 session convened at noon. The only legislator not voting was Rep. Monroe Buchanan, R-Mitchell.

Also unseated was Speaker Pro Tem Jack Hunt, D-Cleveland, who was replaced by Rep. Don Beard, D-Cumberland.

Although Democrats remain in control of the House, the agreement that forged the winning coalition makes Republicans a part of the power structure for the first time in modern history.

Under a reorganization plan approved Wednesday, the number of standing House committees will be reduced from 58 to 12 and there will be 58 standing subcommittees. Democrats will chair all the committees, but Republicans will receive 20 subcommittee chairmanships and will get roughly 38 percent of all committee seats — the proportion of their membership in the entire House.

'Emergency' Bus Drivers Trained

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

There are regular bus drivers and substitute bus drivers and now the Pitt County school system has begun training emergency drivers to make sure students have a safe way and means to get to school.

The emergency bus drivers are those who'll be called on when students need to be sent home during situations such as snow or other "acts of God," Chet Preyar, associate superintendent for personnel development services, said.

"Many of the (regular) drivers work other jobs" and may not be available if the schools have to close early. So, non-certificated school personnel such as secretaries, custodians, cafeteria workers, teaching assistants and maintenance workers that meet the qualifications have been asked if they'll serve as drivers in an emergency.

Bus drivers have to be at least 18 years old, have 20-20 vision or corrected vision, hearing in both ears, and have no driving while impaired conviction or traffic violation within the last six months.

Preyar said he hopes to have about 105 emergency drivers on his list. That represents about half of the 215 drivers needed each day to transport students to and from school.

The emergency drivers are being trained today and Friday at D.H. Conley High School.

The emergency bus driver crew is one of the ideas being used to make sure there are enough bus drivers for the schools, Preyar said. Other efforts include hiring a full-time bus driver recruiter for the school system on a trial period of 30 days, having principals recruit for their areas, contacting those that did and could drive, and advertising.

In a written report Preyar presented to the Pitt County Board of Education in December, he said that the school system requires 215 regular drivers and 25 substitute drivers daily. At the beginning of the school year, there were 215 regular drivers and 94 substitutes available. As of November 9, 1988, there were 365 bus drivers, regular and substitute, on the roll.

"They're on the list but that doesn't mean they're available to drive," Preyar said. "The question is are they available at the time you need them, and generally, the answer is no."

Bus drivers are scarce enough that several principals often are driving the buses, he said.

The pool of drivers is not large enough — a problem that boils down to economics, Preyar said. In order to recruit and keep bus drivers, they should be paid about $10 per hour, he said.

"The public is going to scream" at that wage, Preyar said. But drivers have no fringe benefits, and they don't work a full day.

"You have to cover their basic costs of getting to the school and back home. In addition to that, by the time you take the taxes out of that you really haven't made anything, and then there are no fringe benefits."

"Fringe benefits would make a difference. A lot of people would work just to get the medical coverage."

"There's a problem for a reason," he said.

Beginning Pitt County bus drivers are paid $5.28 per hour through their third year. The maximum wage a Johnny Quinerly was served birthday cake by Greenville Shelter for the Homeless program director Nancy Pierson and shelter operations manager Tom Tucker Wednesday night at a celebration marking the first anniversary of the shelter's opening. Use of the community-run facility has increased over the year, with more women and children using it now than ever before, Ms. Pierson said. She said volunteers are still needed.

Bush Set To Round Out Cabinet

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President-elect Bush is rounding out the top ranks of his administration by nominating retired Adm. James D. Watkins as energy secretary and former Education Secretary William J. Bennett as drug czar, transition and congressional sources said today.

Bush was to announce the selections at a news conference a few hours before holding a late-afternoon dress-rehearsal meeting of his Cabinet at Blair House, the historic residence across from the White House.

"He will talk about what he expects of them, what his priorities are, what's important," Sheila Tate, Bush's transition press secretary, said of the first gathering of the president-elect's top appointees.

Sources who declined to be identified confirmed that Watkins, formerly the Navy's top uniformed officer, would be tapped for the energy post and that Bennett would get the job of coordinating the government's war on drugs.

Bush had a hard time filling both jobs, the last top-level posts that were vacant. Aides suggested that he vacillated on the energy post between an oil-state candidate and one

N.Y. Judge Blocks Cuomo's Directive Ordering Jacobs Extradited To N.C.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WAMPSVILLE, N.Y. — A judge today stayed New York Gov. Mario Cuomo's order to return fugitive Indian Timothy Jacobs to North Carolina to face kidnapping charges.

Madison County Judge William O'Brien III set a Feb. 28 hearing date for arguments on whether Jacobs should be returned to North Carolina. Jacobs' lawyers asked for the stay after Cuomo signed an extradition request Tuesday for Jacobs' return from North Carolina Gov. Jim Martin.

O'Brien allowed Jacobs to remain free on the $25,000 bail he posted at an earlier court appearance and told Jacobs he must remain in the custody of the Onondaga Indian Nation and not leave New York.

Madison County District Attorney Neal Rose opposed allowing Jacobs to remain free, saying he was concerned that Jacobs would be more likely to flee as his extradition nears.

Rose also was concerned that officials were sending a message that New York was a "safe haven for people who commit violent acts in other jurisdictions."

After the hearing, Jacobs said again that he was disappointed in Cuomo's decision to have him returned to North Carolina. "but at least now we have time to make plans. I hope we are allowed to present the case on why I should not be returned to North Carolina."

Jacobs has maintained that he would not receive a fair trial in Robeson County and that he fears for his life if he is returned there.

One of Jacobs' lawyers, attorney Lewis Pitts of the Christic Institute South, said he would present witnesses and evidence to show it would be a "miscarriage of justice" if Jacobs is sent back to North Carolina.

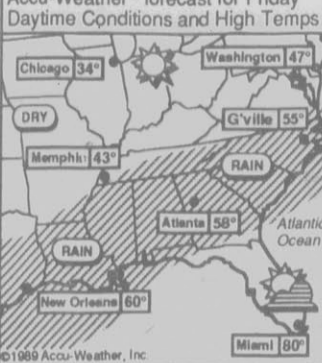

"We'll get a chance at a hearing to put in testimony that the situation there is so unfair, so unusual, that he should not force Timothy to go back," Pitts said.

Jacobs, 20, and Eddie Hatcher, 31, were indicted Dec. 6 by a Robeson County, N.C., grand jury and charged with kidnapping in connection with the February 1988 armed takeover of a newspaper in Lumberton, N.C. They said they took over the newspaper to bring to light their allegations of corruption by Robeson County officials.

Jacobs fled to the Onondaga Indian Nation reservation south of Syracuse after being indicted, but was captured Dec. 13 outside the reservation by police after a car chase. Jacobs was released on bail under an agreement with Onondaga leaders that he would be turned over to authorities should Cuomo order his extradition.

Larceny Arrest

Greenville police arrested Connie Bruce Jackson, 24, of Ayden on larceny charges Wednesday.

Officer B.W. Lewis said Jackson was charged in connection with a purse snatching incident at Carolina East Mall about 8:50 p.m. Lewis said mall security guards held Jackson for police.

Escapee Behind Bars

A Robersonville man who escaped from the county's satellite jail Tuesday night is back behind bars.

Charles Ray Dixon, 33, turned himself in to law enforcement authorities Wednesday, said Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson. Dixon was being held on charges of driving while his license was revoked and failing to appear in court on trespassing and larceny charges.

Another man, James Arthur Acklin, 31, of Bethel, who escaped through a window with Dixon shortly after an 8 p.m. head count, is still at large. Deputies are searching for Acklin and are pursuing leads, Tyson said.

The jail, which holds up to 50 inmates, is located on West Fifth Street in the county office building complex. It is used to house weekend prisoners, defendants awaiting trial and people serving short sentences.

Webb Presents City Deed To Park Land

By Jerry Raynor
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A deed for land at River Park North owned by Fred Webb, a local businessman, has been given to the city of Greenville.

Webb, who owns Fred Webb Inc. grain storage operation, presented the deed to Rosemond Tipton, chairman of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission at the board's meeting Wednesday night.

"I'm happy to be able to do this, especially since it's land located on the right side of the river," Webb said. River Park North is located off Mumford Road on the north side of Tar River.

Boyd Lee, Recreation and Parks executive director, explained the circumstances leading to Webb's donation. "When the city first obtained land for River Park North, we knew approximately where the boundaries were, but as it turned out, not exactly.

"We had no money at the time to do an actual ground survey. When we did eventually, it was discovered we had put up one stretch of the big fence on Mr. Webb's property. The bad thing about it was that the access to a picnic area and to the nature trail was on the Webb property, which could have caused some real problems."

Lee said that when Webb was informed of the situation, "He came right to the point for a solution and said, 'let me donate the property, give you a deed for the land.'"

Lee said that "things like this are what make us all feel good. This is another instance that when something nice has been needed to be done, somebody always seems to be there to step in and do it. We are grateful to Fred Webb for willingly giving us this land."

Parks Board Postpones Vote On Allowing New Power line

By Jerry Raynor
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Following spirited public input on a request by Carolina Power and Light Co. to place an additional power line across property at River Park North, members of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission on Wednesday night deferred making a recommendation.

The decision not to make a recommendation was based on an approved motion that asks officials of the power company to first of all meet on Feb. 2 with members of the Pitt County Environmental Committee, with the matter again to go before the Recreation and Parks Commission at its February meeting. At that time, the commission will review whatever report comes from power company officials and environmentalists.

Dick McDonald presented the CP&L request that seeks an additional five feet to be added to the current right of way on one of two sets of power lines crossing the River Park North property. The request entails the additional five-foot strip for a length of 463 feet.

McDonald said that to date CP&L has acquired about 85 percent of the additional rights of way needed in order to complete the necessary INS acquisition to add a third line.

Discussing the matter, in addition to McDonald, were Boyd Lee, Recreation and Parks executive director; Roger Jones, director of electrical systems for the Greenville Utilities Commission; Jim Mulligan, chairman of the Pitt County Environmental Committee; Howard Vainright, director of River Park North, and Walter Stasavich, superintendent of city parks. A representative of the League of Women Voters also spoke.

Among major questions raised during the meeting and responses by CP&L representative McDonald were:

- What is the possibility of placing the third line underground? Not at all feasible as the cost of placing underground a 230-volt line that generates a lot of heat with the necessary conduit and coolant would be prohibitive in cost, as well as fraught with certain dangers as the area is in the flood plain.
- How many trees will be destroyed in the addition of a five-foot strip? Not known until an actual survey/sighting of trees are carried out.

In the matter of trees that would possibly be lost, GUC's Jones said that if agreeable to both the park people and CP&L officials, staff persons of the GUC can carry out such a survey/sighting.

The loss of trees, particularly large specimens from the wetlands growth of tupelo gum, were cited by many interested persons as a major point of concern.

- What is the feasibility of installing the third power line in a piggy-back manner on the existing two lines? This is possible and could be done in a manner to meet federally mandated guidelines, but not practical in that it would create conditions that could cause recurring power problems.

- Is the third line needed right away, and is it designed to provide power mainly to Greenville or to other areas of eastern North Carolina? The need at this time is not urgent, but as Greenville grows and the power supply available from existing sources reaches full capacity, the need will become urgent within a matter of anywhere from five to 15 years in the future. The third line would serve some needs in Greenville as well as needs for other areas of eastern North Carolina.

- In the event the Parks and Recreation Commission as recommenders and the City Council as the approving authority does not grant the five-foot right of way extension, what happens then? Such a denial would likely result in CP&L having to consider the possibility of going into condemnation procedures.

ECU Receives $287,565 Grant To Study Needs Of Elderly In East

ECU NEWS BUREAU

A private foundation that promotes health care research has awarded East Carolina University a grant of $287,565 for a study of older people living in eastern North Carolina.

The Kate B. Reynolds Health Care Trust of Winston-Salem made the award to Dr. James P. Mitchell, director of the ECU gerontology program, to support a two-year study of the needs of elderly citizens and the services they use. Thirty-three counties in the eastern region will comprise the area being studied.

"It's an exciting and important project," said Mitchell, a sociologist. He said the study will help determine the needs of the elderly in regards to finance and health care. It will also assess the use and awareness of services available to the elderly and will help in the development of new programs for health care and for recreational and educational opportunities for senior citizens.

The Reynolds Health Care Trust, a private foundation located in Winston-Salem, was created in 1946 through provisions in the will of Mrs. William N. Reynolds for the purpose of improving health care to the people of North Carolina.

Approximately $3 million is awarded annually in grants to non-profit organizations throughout the state. The trust's current areas of interest are alternative approaches to the delivery of care which improve cost effectiveness and illness prevention-health promotion programs.

The main purpose of the gerontology study is to gather original data describing the elderly population that uses and does not use services in the eastern 33 counties of the state. Mitchell said the information collected in the study will help in developing a profile of the region's elderly.

The study will contain two parts. One will include interviews with 2,180 randomly-selected citizens.

The second part will collect data about the people who are already using services available to the elderly.

Assisting Mitchell in collecting the information will be the five regional Area Agencies on Aging offices in eastern North Carolina. Information from the individual counties will be collected by the regional offices which will feed the information to ECU for storage and processing.

A Reminder

Mavretic Was No Friend To Pitt

Wednesday's coup in the North Carolina House of Representatives wasn't about reform, it was about political opportunism.

And while reform in that body was needed, the end didn't justify the means. Rep. Walter Jones, D-Pitt, overlooked that fact.

Rep. Joe Mavretic was the means, and Jones' support of his bid to oust Rep. Liston Ramsey from his long-held position as speaker of the House reflects little concern for Jones' own district.

Did Jones forget about the Edgecombe Waste Park? What Mavretic tried to do to Jones' district just six months ago must have slipped the mind of Pitt's legislator. How could he not remember that Mavretic, from Edgecombe County, offered 3,000 acres on the Pitt-Edgecombe county line as the site of a hazardous/low level nuclear waste dump in May 1988? Did he forget Mavretic made the deal in exchange for $5 million in state grants to Edgecombe — without regard for the environmental and economic impact downwind and downstream in Pitt County?

And did Jones forget the way Mavretic devised the plan for such a site? The way he and the Edgecombe County Commission circumvented the intent of North Carolina's open meetings law to avoid discussing the issue in public meetings?

Jones' support of Mavretic as an instrument of reform and openness ignores Mavretic's record of disruptive, unbalanced operation. It ignores the new speaker's disregard for propriety. And it overlooked his history of disdain for his neighbors — especially Jones' own district — where regional issues are concerned.

Jones' black constituents should note the fact their legislator joined a coalition of support for Mavretic that included only one black from the House — Rep. C.R. Edwards, D-Cumberland. They should ask themselves if that action appropriately represents minority interests and then ask Jones why he made such a move.

Reform — openness and bipartisan leadership in North Carolina's House of Representatives — is a desirable goal. Back-room government and the procedures that perpetuate it are anachronisms. The state's government should be open, not autocratic.

But Mavretic, if he follows form, will not alter this trend. His history of unpredictable positions and his reputation for behind-the-scenes maneuvering make him a troubling, questionable choice for speaker — and no county in the state is more painfully aware of that fact than Pitt. Jones should have recognized this fact.

Consider Mavretic's capricious record on taxation. Mavretic advocated eliminating the property tax and replacing it with a sales tax of eight cents per dollar. Then he proposed replacing the property tax with a combination of higher sales and income taxes and user fees. He also proposed giving the state all revenue from the sales tax and having the state make grants to local governments. That's an impulsive approach to an important issue.

His record on education — particularly the all-important Basic Education Program — is equally whimsical. As a member of the Education Policy Council, Mavretic took part in forming the Basic Education Program. Later, as a member of the House Education Committee, he inexplicably worked closely with a coalition on that committee that bogged down the issue. Was that stable, consistent leadership?

This propensity to flip-flop, combined with Mavretic's erratic record and his history of strong-arm tactics, mark him as an opportunist, not a reformer. While the House leadership may reflect a more appropriate mix of Democrats and Republicans under Mavretic, it's doubtful power politics will cease.

Pitt almost became the victim of one of Mavretic's political whims. If Walter Jones forgot that incident, if he forgot Mavretic's record of arrogant, authoritative and unpredictable operation, his constituents should hold the history book to his face and make him read the lesson out loud.

Public Forum

To the editor:

The editorial staff of The Daily Reflector is extremely liberal in offering its advice to county and city officials with regards to the conduct of city and county business. I am somewhat fascinated by the various conclusions reached by this group and sincerely feel they could benefit from serving in public office. I am even more curious as to the editorial staff's knowledge of underlying facts surrounding issues which they choose to address. For example, when opposing the mayor's vote in the City of Greenville, did the editorial staff check to determine that there were eight meetings since Jan. 1987, at which city business could not be conducted because of poor attendance from Council members? One of these meetings was scheduled for Jan. 5, 1989, and had to be canceled at the last minute, because of late notification of two Council members' inability to attend the meeting and the mayor's inability to vote.

I am certainly not normally in the habit of responding to negative editorials in The Daily Reflector about me. I have much better use for my time. However, I thought it appropriate to respond in this case because of the obvious disregard of relevant factors surrounding the current issue. In the meantime, rest assured that Mayor Ed Carter shall continue to provide the strong leadership and direction to the city of Greenville which has been mandated by citizens' overwhelming support.

November 1989 shall be the time when the people of Greenville will write their editorial on the mayor's vote. This editorial will be comprehensive, factual and completely unbiased!

To the editor:

Recently my 6-year-old son and I were heading west on 14th St. Extension. As we reached the intersection on Charles Boulevard, we both noticed the tree removal on the wooded lot where the Patrick Arthur House once stood. I was halfway expecting Joshua to be enthralled by the huge bulldozers and other machinery pushing the enormous uprooted tree trunks into a cleared area of the lot. Instead of glee, his expression changed to a look of horror. He turned to me and said, "Mom, trees are our friends. Cutting down a tree is like cutting down a person! Why are they doing this?"

As I tried to explain about the new shopping center and how fortunate it was that the old house had been saved, Joshua responded, "But what about the animals? The trees were their homes."

Simplistic questions, yes. But ones I couldn't satisfactorily answer. Somehow, "grown-up" explanations of growth, increased tax revenue and more jobs couldn't justify the carnage that both Joshua and I witnessed. Instead, my own questions came to mind:

Couldn't some of those trees have been saved? How many parking places were gained by cutting a magnificent tree down? Two? Three? Wouldn't the benefits of a shaded parking lot have outweighed the need to totally clear it? Does a developer have the right to cut down trees on the city's right-of-way? Don't they belong to the public? Can't the city encourage the protection of urban greenspaces by requiring developers to submit landscape plans for approval?

Joshua ended the conversation by saying, "I don't think I can come to this shopping center, Mom. I'd always think about those dead trees."

I don't think I can either.

Yes, Remembering Is Necessary

WASHINGTON — A black man who was young in 1964 emerged blinking from the bludgeoning administered by "Mississippi Burning" and wondered aloud, "Is this movie necessary?" An interesting word, "necessary."

It is optional, but good, to touch the sore of that summer when the three civil-rights workers were murdered. But it was not necessary to touch the truth the way this movie does.

The movie is winning awards and throwing off sparks that are kindling controversies. The most emotional criticism is unjust, but there is rough justice in that criticism. The movie plays fast and loose with facts for the frank political purpose of evoking visceral responses.

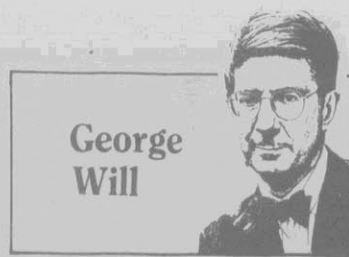

Angry critics say that blacks are reduced to the role of mere victims, appearing on screen only as sufferers, a background chorus to a melodrama of white FBI agents battling white conspirators. Such critics are complaining because the movie's makers did not choose to make a fundamentally different movie. The movie does not set out to tell the rounded story of "Freedom Summer" in Mississippi. The movie's subject is the cracking of one conspiracy. In that episode, blacks were largely bystanders.

But midway through "Mississippi Burning," the movie becomes a 1960s clean-up-this-town Western, with a dash of familiar male bonding and a large dollop of Dirty Harry intruding in the dust. The movie was made by people, many of them liberals, who believe that conservatism is bofo at the box office.

Liberalism, at least as defined by conservatism, is systematic impotence, well-meaning woolly-headedness that tries to overwhelm problems by piling on resources, and makes matters worse. FBI agent Ward is liberalism incarnate. He sends armies of blue-suited agents wading into swamps. By trying to interrogate a black man in public, at a segregated lunch counter, Ward gets the man beaten.

Ward's buddy (after some turbulent bonding) is agent Anderson, an Oliver North with a middle-aged man's mileage registered on his face. Anderson is a get-it-done, no-nonsense-about-due-process-please sort of fellow who operates beyond the Warren Court's wildest nightmares. He gets Ward to acquiesce in the use of violence, coercion, kidnapping, semi-seduction, entrapment and a few nicks with a razor to crack the case. It is a sign of the times that a movie made for the proclaimed purpose of raising society's consciousness, panders to conservative appetites, the satisfaction of which is considered commercially necessary.

The director, Alan Parker, says: "I'm trying to reach an entire generation who knows nothing of that historical event, to cause them to react to it viscerally, emotionally, because of the racism that's around them now. And that's enough of a reason, a justification, for the fictionalizing."

All drama is, in a sense, manipulative. But there are respectful and disrespectful ways of approaching an audience and a historical record. When the subject is real people and events — and nothing as distant as Richard III — it is neither necessary nor acceptable to tamper so much with the truth.

The three deaths moved history. The six-week hunt for the bodies became the hinge on which the nation's political will turned toward strong federal action. It is a story so dramatic that no embellishment should be thought necessary.

Charles Dickens was a "journalistic novelist." He wanted to inform as well as entertain, to improve the world while — by — depicting it. He exaggerated and caricatured to provoke reforming impulses. But "movie journalism" derived from real recent events owes the record more respect than "Mississippi Burning" shows.

'There are so many such silent aches beneath the nation's scar tissue that it is respectful and kind to say: We remember the way it was.'

Movies almost never miss an opportunity for missing an opportunity for fidelity and subtlety. However, Hollywood history can whet appetites for the real thing, and the real story of the 1964 murders is told in Seth Cagin and Philip Dray's book, "We Are Not Afraid." Reading it is a harrowing experience:

"Several black corpses were found in Mississippi by authorities searching for Goodman, Schwerner and Chaney...One of the saddest discoveries of the season was the body of a never-identified boy, about 14, wearing a CORE (Congress of Racial Equality) T-shirt."

That victim would have been about 40 today. His parents are probably living and remembering and wondering. There are so many such silent aches beneath the nation's scar tissue that it is respectful and kind to say: We remember the way it was. "Mississippi Burning" is broadly truthful about the terrifying tone of that time and place. Remembrance of that is necessary.

Rebel Democrats Say Frustration Spurred Switch

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Liston Ramsey's ouster as House speaker resulted from several factors, including steady growth in Republican ranks and frustration among the Democratic rank-and-file that finally reached the boiling point.

"When you finally get enough people unhappy, some of them are going to speak out," said Rep. Sam Hunt, D-Alamance, an architect of the coup that replaced Ramsey with Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe. "I don't have anything personal against Liston, but I want to see the system change."

The 20 Democrats who supported Mavretic, as did 45 of the 46 Republicans, eagerly spoke out Wednesday after weeks of secrecy and denials that they said were necessary as the coalition took shape.

"This is not a happy time for me because I truly like Liston and Jack," said Rep. Harry Payne, D-New Hanover. The bipartisan coalition also replaced Speaker Pro Tem Jack Hunt, a close Ramsey ally, with Rep. Don Beard, D-Cumberland.

The dissidents and legislative insiders said in interviews that Ramsey helped bring about his downfall by clinging to power far longer than was customary.

"There is such a thing as wearing out your welcome," said Hawk Johnson, a veteran lobbyist. "We saw it with (former Gov.) Jim Hunt, and now with Liston."

Roger Bone, a lobbyist who served in the House from 1979-82, said the coup was "a byproduct of longevity. It had nothing to do with the man."

Ramsey's eight-year tenure, unprecedented in modern times, occurred as Hunt wound up his second term as governor and Martin served his first. The bottleneck at the top of state government frustrated young, talented legislators who could not move ahead, Bone said.

The 1979-81 Legislature included included a number of well-regarded freshmen who have quit in part because they couldn't rise in the legislative hierarchy, Bone said. One who stayed was Mavretic.

Democrats who joined in the coup downplayed personal ambition, saying they were motivated by a desire to involve more rank-and-file members in the power structure, ensure fair treatment of all lawmakers and the governor, and salvage their party's image.

"The concern was the way the process was working," said Rep. Walter Jones, D-Pitt. "We wanted it to be more open and fair, as simplistic as that sounds."

A handful of Democrats discussed overthrowing Ramsey as far back as 1985, Jones said. But the prospect seemed so remote, no serious effort was mounted.

The dissidents were "mostly just dreamers then," said Rep. Dave Diamont, D-Surry.

The movement caught fire after the Nov. 8 election, in which Republicans picked up 10 House seats, Martin won re-election and Jim Gardner became the first GOP lieutenant governor since 1901. Democrats who narrowly retained their seats decided they had to act or risk defeat in 1990.

No single person spearheaded the uprising, participants said. A series of post-election telephone conversations led to the first of seven meetings that gradually enlarged the group as word spread.

The initial group, which met in Asheboro, included Hunt, Diamont and Reps. Don Dawkins, D-Richmond; Dan DeVane, D-Hoke; and John "Pete" Hasty, D-Robeson.

The second meeting produced some converts, including Mavretic, according to Diamont.

"He played the devil's advocate at first," Diamont said. "He dug up all these things that could go wrong, how we couldn't do it, didn't have enough expertise or enough people, how we shouldn't go in with the Republicans ... every single scenario you could think of."

Some Democrats joined after becoming convinced Ramsey would not heed pleas for changes such as stripping Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, of the House Appropriations Committee chairmanship and spreading power among more members.

Payne said he was one of several lawmakers who visited Ramsey after the election. He said he hoped Ramsey would announce changes at the Dec. 2 Democratic caucus, during which he was nominated for a fifth term as speaker.

"I was optimistic ... but it didn't occur," Payne said. Other Democrats looking for change came away disappointed, he said.

Thus, the event at which Ramsey's grip on his job appeared to have solidified instead fueled the opposition. "It did much to jell that," Payne said.

Jones, DeVane and Sam Hunt visited Gov. Martin shortly before Christmas to propose a coalition. After some negotiating over how much power the GOP would get for its cooperation, a deal was struck.

Republicans originally sought chairmanships of major committees and other perks, but finally settled for proportional representation on all committees and 20 of the 58 sub-committee chairmanships in a reorganized House.

"All we really promised the Republicans was that if they had a good idea, it would get a fair hearing," Hunt said. "The bottom line was they wanted fair treatment."

Senators File Veto, Lottery Bills

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Two controversial bills — to let voters decide whether to give the governor of North Carolina veto power and whether to set up a statewide lottery — were pre-filed on the opening day of the 1989 General Assembly.

Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, filed what may be the first of several bills aimed at ending North Carolina's reign as the only state without veto power. Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, filed a lottery bill similar to one he supported in the 1987-88 session.

Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner immediately voiced his support for the veto, saying he would prefer a line-item model that would require a two-thirds majority to be overridden.

"I will do everything I can to use my influence within the Senate in talking about fairness and the responsibilities of the division of government to push that," Gardner said. "And there seems to be some strong sentiment this year for veto power for the governor."

Winner said there would be a lot of negotiations. His bill calls for a three-fifths override with a referendum on the matter in 1990. If approved, the governor in 1993 could exercise the veto.

"I don't know what's going to have to get attached to it and how much compromise will be needed," Winner said.

Gardner said he would remain neutral on the lottery bill although he is personally opposed.

The bills, along with measures to curb profane bumper stickers and set up a study of drunken-driving laws, were to be introduced today.

Drug Roundup

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — A total of 86 people were charged with 245 drug and alcohol charges on Tuesday night in a roundup of drug suspects.

Most of the offenses involved cocaine and marijuana. One suspect was charged with an alcohol violation and one with possession of weapon of mass destruction.

The investigation was carried out by the Robeson-Scotland County Drug Task Force. It was a six-month investigation in which officers spent an estimated $10,000.

Officers confiscated two pounds of cocaine and 15 pounds of marijuana.

Bush Declines To Intervene

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ASHEVILLE — George Bush will not help fight parole for the convicted murderer of Saluda's police chief, the president-elect's legal counsel has decided.

C. Boyden Gray notified survivors of Police Chief Andrew Williams in a letter that Bush could not help the family in its fight against parole for William Fred Constance, who shot and killed Williams in 1976 in the small Polk County town.

Gray told the family that "the vice president appreciates the circumstances which prompted you to write and wishes he could help; however, his duties are restricted by the U.S. Constitution to matters of federal law and he cannot become involved in state proceedings."

"We sympathize with you during this difficult time and are very sorry that our response cannot be more encouraging," Gray concluded in the three-paragraph letter.

The parole board is expected to announce in early March whether Constance, who is eligible for parole every year, will go free. A jury convicted him in 1977 of Williams' first-degree murder after the officer answered a disturbance call.

Gardner Slows His Gavel As Senate Democrats React

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — It was a give-and-take first session of the 1989 Senate, with Republican Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner giving Democrats a taste of his gavel as they worked to take some powers away.

Newly elected Senate officers pledged Wednesday to work in a bipartisan manner in the 1989 legislative session, then broke on party lines over curbing the powers of the Republican lieutenant governor.

After extended debate, the Senate voted 37-13 to adopt rules shifting committee appointment powers from the lieutenant governor to the Democratic president pro tem, Sen. Henson Barnes. The new temporary rules also make it slightly easier for Democrats to suspend rules during the session and allow the Senate to have appropriations committee members apart from the House.

Gardner, who presides over the Senate, was slow to recognize Democrats during the debate. Nor was he quick to apologize.

"I think it's very important that we understand that Republicans are going to be represented in this session of the Senate," he said.

Asked whether he would use similar tactics again, he said, "In the future when I think we have something to say I will certainly do that. But I will not try to abuse that," Gardner said.

Barnes called the new rules very fair, and said giving Republicans proportional representation on committees was a "big move." He said never before have Democrats "given that much recognition and power to the minority power."

Gardner said Democrats had defied the wishes of the public.

"I think the final say-so in whether or not it was right and fair doesn't rest with me and certainly doesn't rest with the membership here," he said. "They have made their decision. It will rest with the voters in 1990 in each district in North Carolina."

Squabbling broke out only after a placid series of conciliatory speeches in which Barnes was approved unanimously. In addition, Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, was unanimously elected deputy president pro tem; Sen. Ted Kaplan, D-Forsyth, was chosen majority leader and Sen. Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg, was named minority leader.

"We are pledged to work with you as you have pledged to work with us," Kaplan said.

"We are pledged to try and work for the good of the state of North Carolina," Cobb said. "We'll have our squabbles along the way."

After Royall intoned, "We should do everything to prevent partisan strife from becoming an actuality," and the last offices were filled, Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, quipped: "Now the war begins."

Kincaid likened the situation to a baseball game, the score 3-2, bottom of the ninth.

"The home team is at bat with two outs and suddenly they change the rules and the home team only gets two outs," he said. "That's what we're seeing today."

Sen. Dan Simpson, R-Burke, reminded the Senate that dissident Democrats in the House had just joined Republicans to unseat Liston Ramsey as speaker amid complaints he had become too heavy-handed.

"The people of North Carolina will not always see their desires and wishes frustrated," he said. "And they are going to be, in my opinion, frustrated today."

"Can you not feel ... in your political bones, the winds of change that are blowing across this state?" Johnson asked.

Sen. Don Kincaid, R-Caldwell, said Democrats were offering crumbs by letting the GOP appoint its members to committees with "ranking members" to speak for the party.

"It doesn't mean anything, it looks good on your stationery," Kincaid said.

Gardner's opening address tiptoed around partisanship.

"Those of us who are new will look to those experienced for help," he said at one point. Later, he called for an end to partisan bickering in facing North Carolina's problems.

"I dare say under the best of circumstances we cannot solve them all, but I dare say we cannot solve any of them if we do not set aside partisan interests and resolve to seek solutions together," Gardner said.

When Barnes accepted his election as president pro tem, he seemed to refer to GOP ascendancy obliquely, saying, "Our state is a state where the weak grow strong and the strong grow great."

Almost lost in the events of the day were the platforms laid down.

Gardner renewed his call for better schools, highways and stronger economic growth. And he repeated his challenge to curb illegal drug use.

"As you know, we face a threat today to our future greater than any faced by those who preceded us — the deadly dangerous use of illicit drugs," he said. "In this area of need we must be entirely creative in thought. We must be bold and decisive in our action."

Barnes agreed almost point for point, calling for continued commitment to schools, merit pay for state employees, better pay for teachers, better roads, a better environment and a stronger war on drugs.

Lawmakers Back Basic Education Plan; Career Ladder Grows Cool

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The enthusiasm for the Basic Education Program does not carry over to the Career Ladder Plan, an experimental system of rewarding teachers for exceptional performance, an Associated Press survey of lawmakers shows.

"I am the only legislator who will be evaluated by the career ladder," said Rep. Dave Diamont, D-Surry, a teacher and coach. "I have not made up my mind. I have serious problems with the evaluators ... (but) if I do a good job or better than another teacher maybe I should be paid better."

Currently, there is "no incentive to stay in the classroom — no advancement," Diamont said.

The mail and telephone survey drew responses from 108 of the 170 members of the 1989-90 Legislature, or 63.5 percent. Respondents included 29 of the 50 senators and 79 of the 120 members of the House of Representatives.

Thirty-six House members or 45.5 percent came out against immediate statewide implementation of the Career Ladder Plan, while 21 or 26.5 percent said they favored it. Another 22 members, or 28 percent, were undecided.

Seventeen senators or 58.6 percent opposed statewide implementation, while eight or 27.5 percent favored it and four were undecided.

The Career Ladder is a program being used on an experimental basis in 16 school systems. It enables teachers to earn extra pay and prestige for demonstrating exceptional performance, taking on more duties and earning additional degrees.

Gov. Jim Martin has invested considerable political capital into the Career Ladder, boosting it on the campaign trail and giving it a prominent place in his inaugural address last Saturday.

But the program is unpopular with many teachers, according to legislators who responded to the survey. The NCAE, whose leaders have said the program has major problems, plans to take a formal position Jan. 21, said Karen Garr, president of the N.C. Association of Educators.

The "core issue" for many teachers is the belief that the process of evaluating teachers prescribed in the Career Ladder Plan is flawed and does not guarantee equitable treatment, she said. "It's a shaky foundation for the ladder to rest on."

Many of the legislators who opposed going statewide with the program this year said they might support it later after the pilot projects are evaluated and adjustments are made.

Asked whether they supported keeping the BEP implementation on schedule, 57 House members or 72.1 percent said yes, while 10 or 12.6 percent said no. Another 13 were undecided.

In the Senate, the BEP drew support from 25 or 86.4 of the respondents, while none voiced opposition. Four, or 13.7 percent, were undecided.

The BEP is a program approved in 1984 that, when fully implemented, will pump an additional $800 million per year into the public schools to hire more teachers and other personnel and provide broader course offerings.

The goal is to ensure that children in every part of the state have access to the same level of basic education.

Martin voiced reservations about the program after taking office in 1985, saying it didn't put enough emphasis on enhancing the teaching profession and that the standard course of study it prescribed had flaws.

But he embraced the program in late 1986 and this year campaigned for re-election on a promise to keep its implementation on track.

In December, Martin proposed a temporary slowdown in implementing the BEP. He suggested adding only $56 million to the program in fiscal 1989-90 instead of the scheduled $113 million because of a shortfall in tax collections.

Martin said the money held back next year could be restored in 1990-91, when revenue collections are expected to improve. But he withdrew the idea in the face of strong opposition from the Advisory Budget Commission, a bipartisan group dominated by Democratic legislators.

"The feeling when we were debating the Basic Education Program was that we have delayed too long ... this kind of commitment," said Senate President Pro Tem Henson Barnes, D-Wayne. "Our first priority is (that) the BEP stays on target."

The BEP "has become an apple issue," Ms. Garr said.

A solid majority of the legislators surveyed preferred keeping the BEP on schedule over taking the Career Ladder statewide if there was insufficient money to do both.

Charges Dropped

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Military prosecutors dropped charges against a Marine sergeant stemming from the death of a young Marine during a desert training exercise, but new charges may be filed in the case.

Charges of dereliction of duty and disobeying an order were dismissed against Sgt. Christopher Clyde in the second day of his court-martial at the Camp Lejeune Marine Corps Base. Prosecutors said they wanted to avoid "appearances of impropriety" because the man who brought the charges, Lt. Col. Edward J. Robeson, has been relieved of his command during an investigation into the same case.

Maj. Richard McNeill, chief trial counsel with the base's legal services, said after the court-martial that the case would be referred to Col. J.W. Ripley, commander of the 2nd Marine Regiment, who will decide whether charges should be brought against Clyde, 28. He said similar action was expected in the case of Sgt.

Thomas Turnell who is also facing charges in the incident.

Ripley can review the charges and request another court-martial or let the matter drop, said Lejeune spokesman Maj. Stuart Wagner.

Clyde's attorney had argued Tuesday that charges should be dismissed because Robeson, his chief accuser, was also implicated in the death of Lance Cpl. Jason Rother of Minneapolis, Minnesota. Rother, 19, died of exposure after being left in California's Mojave desert during a training exercise on Aug. 30. His remains were found Dec. 4.

Clyde was charged with dereliction of duty and disobeying an order from his company commander not to allow anyone special liberty without prior approval from Robeson. He had pleaded innocent.

Rother died in the Mojave Desert after he was not picked up from road guard duty last Aug. 30 at the conclusion of a military exercise from the Marine Corp's Twentynine Palms base in California.

Waste Authority Appears Unlikely To Receive Legislators' Attention

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Disposing of low-level radioactive waste, often a hot issue in the General Assembly, appears unlikely to receive much attention this year, officials say.

Lawmakers who tried unsuccessfully to remove North Carolina from an eight-state compact for handling the waste may have fired their last salvo. Since then, the North Carolina Low-Level Radioactive Waste Management Authority has drawn increasing support from legislators, electric utilities and environmentalists in its quest to find an appropriate site.

"I think they're pretty much committed to taking the recommendation of the siting commission," said House Speaker Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, who spent several sessions advocating North Carolina's defection from the Southeast compact. "I don't hear anybody who is saying, 'If we don't like what they say we'll turn it around.'"

"I think the trick now is to let the process develop and to stay out of the way."

Tenney Deane, the authority's third executive director in two years, said he sees no need for legislation.

"We're on schedule at meeting milestones," he said, noting that his panel is scheduled to choose a contractor to operate a low-level radioactive waste site by Jan. 31.

The authority on Nov. 30 announced that 38 percent of North Carolina is potentially suitable for the waste facility, which would begin accepting waste from the eight states in 1993. The areas will be narrowed to two or more sites by Aug. 1. A final site is to be chosen by Nov. 15, 1990.

Bill Holman, a lobbyist for the North Carolina chapter of the Sierra Club and the N.C. Conservation Council, said the narrowing of potential sites could spur some action.

"If the potentially suitable areas become concerned, then I think there is potential for a serious effort to repeal the compact," he said. "If those areas are apathetic, I think efforts to repeal the compact will be unsuccessful this session."

There might also be attempts to require that the compact choose the next host state before North Carolina's site is opened, Holman said.

"There's still interest in things that secure and also test the good faith of the other Southeastern states," he said.

However, controversial efforts to require that the facility be placed on land owned by electric utilities have subsided. Supporters of that idea maintained that since nuclear power plants generate most of the low-level radioactive waste, it would be most efficient to handle the waste near one of those reactors. Mavretic at one point suggested a utility should volunteer its land as a "good corporate citizen."

Roger Hannah, senior communications specialist for Carolina Power & Light Co. in Raleigh, said he had no problem with the authority considering such areas.

"We certainly would have no problem with them considering any land that we may own if, in fact, it is involved in a systematic scientific approach and isn't selected just because it happens to be utility land," he said.

Mary Boyd, spokeswoman for Duke Power Co. in Charlotte, said Duke was also pleased with the authority's work.

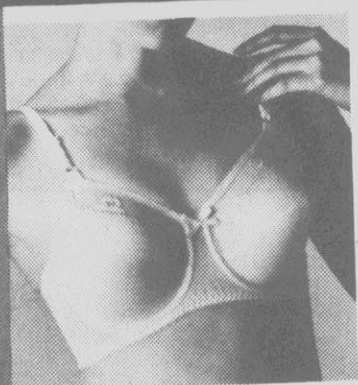

"We would anticipate that the legislature would want to remain in step with the success that the authority has had in carrying out its duties and its timetable," she said. "Why mess with success?"

Currently, the authority is spending a lot of its time with public hearings across the state — something that has proved a wise investment, Deane said.

IN THE STATE

UNC-W Trust

WILMINGTON (AP) — The University of North Carolina at Wilmington announced on Wednesday that the school had been named the recipient of a $1 million irrevocable charitable remainder trust by William E. Sisson, retired president and owner of Travelers Oil Co.

Proceeds of the trust, which will become available to UNC-Wilmington upon Sisson's death, will be used to support research in the marine sciences. Annual earnings from the gift will be used to sponsor selected research, provide graduate student support, assist in purchasing specialized research equipment and to support faculty development.

In 1968 Sisson, of Wrightsville Beach, sold his oil interests to Sun Oil Co. when he retired, but he continued to serve as a management consultant to Sun Oil until 1973.

Performance

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Division of Travel and Tourism has failed to respond to 93,221 reader service inquiries during the first part of 1988, and to provide a complete and timely publication package to 175,000 other inquires, according to a performance audit report.

The report, released by state Auditor Ed Renfrow, was called "Department of Commerce: Division of Travel and Tourism and North Carolina Film Office." Renfrow said the failures to respond were a "serious failure to perform properly the responsibilities of the division."

"These inquires represented nearly $50 million in potential travel revenue, based on studies used by the division," Renfrow said. "Our recommendation was that a backlog such as this not be allowed to accumulate again and that production be increased to its former levels."

Surprised Robber

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — A gas station owner pulled a gun when a would-be robbery pulled a knife on Wednesday and held the suspect until officers arrived.

Gastonia Patrolman R.A. Wright found owner Dale Calvert, 45, holding a gun on another man who was backed against a fence in a rear parking lot. Ronald Hayes Huskey, 43, of Bessemer City was arrested and charged with armed robbery, reports said.

Calvert told police that a man entered the station and went into the bathroom. When he came out, he headed for the door with a large bulge in his coat, reports said. Calvert said he then approached the man and found he had four cartons of Marlboro cigarettes under his coat.

"As he passed me, I noticed he had something sticking out of his coat," Calvert said. "He turned around and drew a knife on me and swung at me."

Clerk Fired

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — A convenience store clerk who shot an armed robber to death on New Year's Eve has been fired for violating store policy.

Eugene Navey, 59, was employed at The Pantry when he pulled a gun and shot a robber who was beating Navey over the head with a tire iron, police reports say. Convicted armed-robber Rodney Stacey Hardy, 21, of York, S.C., was pronounced dead at Gaston Memorial Hospital. He was 21.

Navey was not charged in the incident because police said his gun was not concealed. But Navey was suspended that night for violating a company policy that prohibits guns, he said. He has not returned to work since.

Electrocuted

PARKTON, N.C. (AP) — A man was electrocuted in a power line accident near Parkton in Robeson County Wednesday afternoon, authorities said.

Jack Spaulding, 32, of Lumberton, was taken to Southeastern General Hospital where he was pronounced dead, Robeson County Sheriff's Department spokesman Bill Price said.

Spaulding was a member of a crew that was cutting tree limbs along the path of a power line when a truck boom apparently touched a line and the electrical current traveled down to the truck, Price said.

State May Have To Pay $15 Million To Resume Cross-State Train Service

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A governor's study panel has recommended resuming train service between Rocky Mount and Charlotte by the early 1990s, but Amtrak has warned that the cost to the state will be up to $15.5 million.

An Amtrak official told the Governor's Rail Passenger Task Force Wednesday that the company will not be able to provide the service unless the state is willing to pay for the locomotives and cars needed.

"Equipment has become an increasingly scarce resource at Amtrak," Elyse Wander, Amtrak's vice president for corporate planning and development, said.

"On the one hand, ridership is going through the roof," she said. "But, on the other hand, where are we going to get the equipment?"

To add to the railroad's problems, the latest budget before Congress "once again zeroes Amtrak out," Ms. Wander said.

But the panel's report to Gov. Jim Martin, expected to be submitted by late February, will urge a long-term state commitment to passenger service through Piedmont cities as well as to preserving threatened railroad corridors statewide for freight and passenger trains.

North Carolina had asked Amtrak to estimate the state's share to institute two-train service between Rocky Mount and Charlotte. Amtrak's initial reply, in a letter from Tim Gillespie, was discouraging.

Gillespie, assistant vice president for government and public affairs, wrote that the cost of the service would be "excessively high because the equipment for the trains would be isolated in the service and we would be required to establish a new crew base, as well as a satellite commissary, to provision these trains. For these reasons, we do not think the second Raleigh-Charlotte train would justify its costs."

Gillespie estimated three locomotives would be needed at $1.5 million each, plus eleven cars costing $1 million apiece.

"Although these costs are significant, they dwarf the exorbitant costs of new highway construction," he said.

David King, director of the Public Transportation Division, agreed, although he said the state had not been prepared for the added capital expense.

"Costwise, it is competitive with adding lanes and overpasses on our highways and it is competitive with adding runways and terminals at our airports," he said.

King said it might be possible to reduce the costs by purchasing refurbished equipment for the rail service and by reducing the number of cars used.

Task Force Chairman Howard Clement asked whether Amtrak, faced with dwindling federal aid, might consider ways to make state participation more economically attractive.

"I don't think any amount of state participation or belt-tightening at Amtrak is going to crack the nut of $720 million in equipment needs," Ms. Wander replied. "Likely, the solutions are political."

"I can't say I'm too encouraged," said Clement.

'Inactive' Fault Found Under S.C. Nuclear Plant

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — The discovery of an "inactive" fault on Savannah River Plant property will not have an impact on the restart of three nuclear reactors on the site, a Department of Energy official said.

"We see nothing right now that would make any difference," said Steve Wright, who directs some of DOE's environmental studies at the SRP.

The three reactors at the SRP have been shut down since August because of concerns over their safety, and the idling of the nation's only active tritium-producing reactors have caused Department of Defense officials to be concerned about the supply of tritium.

The radioactive material decays at a rate of 5.5 percent a year, which means that nuclear weapons must have their tritium receptacles replenished periodically.

DOE and Du Pont officials announced Wednesday that geologists have discovered a fault under the Savannah River Plant property.

The Pen Branch Fault runs within a half mile of the K-Reactor and the site of a proposed reactor that is expected to be built beginning in 1991 or 1992, Wright said.

The other two reactors on the site, the P-Reactor and the L-Reactor, are several miles from the fault, he said.

Details of the discovery were announced Wednesday afternoon by officials of DOE and Du Pont, which operates the facility.

Geologists believe the fault is no longer active and its last movement probably occurred about 30 million years ago, according to the report.

They plan to drill more wells and excavating trenches to learn more about the fault, including its history, regional and geographic relationships and magnitude.

A geology professor at the University of South Carolina said the fault, which is about 300 meters deep at its lowest point, is too shallow to produce an earthquake of any significance.

"These are extremely shallow faults," said Dr. Pradeep Talwani. "(They) just don't have the energy to have a large earthquake."

The Pen Branch Fault extends across the SRP site in a northeast-southwest direction for about 20 miles, and is probably part of a sub-set of other faults that run parallel with it, geologists said.

The fault runs almost parallel to the previously known border fault of the Dubarton Basin.

Evidence of the Pen Branch Fault resulted from a seismic reflection survey and the study of 45 wells drilled on the 300-square-mile site in the past 30 years, the report says.

Geologists studied sediments that were laid under the ocean between 35 and 90 million ago. Studies of the land surface, including soil mapping and examination of aerial photographs, give no indication that the fault has been active, the report says.

The discovery of the fault is not expected to affect the restart of SRP's three reactors, Wright said.

The preliminary report on the fault will be submitted to the "Bulletin" of the Geological Society of America for publication later this year, following peer review.

Wright said preliminary findings are seldom released before peer and official reviews have been made. He said, however, that DOE and Du Pont officials realized the public has a strong interest in discovery "regardless of whether (the fault) is active or not."

Neighbor Saves Woman In Fire

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. — An 18-year-old Rocky Mount man saved the life of an elderly woman when he carried her from her burning home earlier this week, authorities say.

The fire, which caused $25,000 damage to two homes, was the second fire that occurred at the duplex within a matter of hours on Monday. Rocky Mount firefighters were dispatched to the same address about 9:30 p.m. Sunday. Damage was reported at $400 from that fire.

Rocky Mount police say they are investigating the fires. Police have no suspects.

No injuries were reported.

Beatrice Jones, 77, was saved by an 18-year-old neighbor, Keith Little. He placed his shirt over his mouth and went to the back of the house, rescuing the woman.

"There was just so much smoke," Ms. Jones said. "I was in the kitchen trying to take my pill when the boy next door picked me up and carried me out."

IN REMEMBRANCE OF DR. MARTIN LUTHER KING, JR. (January 15, 1929 - April 4, 1968)

"I have a dream! That one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: 'We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal.' I have a dream! That one day on the red hills of Georgia the sons of former slaves and the sons of former slaveowners will be able to sit down at the table of brotherhood. I have a dream! That one day even the state of Mississippi, a state sweltering with the people's injustice, sweltering with the heat of oppression, will be transformed into an oasis of freedom and justice. I have a dream! That my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin, but the content of their character."

Snowmobile Team Found After 3 Days

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BONE, Idaho — Five snowmobilers said they survived nearly three nights in blizzard conditions by huddling in an aspen grove and melting snow for water after becoming stranded when they ran out of gas.

"There were a few times I thought I might die out there," Steve Brammer, 30, said Wednesday. "It was the scariest I've ever been."

Searchers located the men by air Tuesday night after they spotted the fire and flares set off by the men. Neck-deep snow prevented rescuers from reaching them until early Wednesday, officials said.

"Temperatures didn't get too low, but the wind chill was bad," said Bingham County Sheriff's Lt. Bill Gordon. "But they got into trees, and that protected them from the wind. They had enough knowledge of winter survival that they stayed together and stayed put and waited until the weather cleared so they could shoot up some flares."

Brammer, Wayne Hopkins, 44, Bob Miller, 43, Melvin Manning, 54, and Jason Manning, whose age wasn't available, apparently went off the main snowmobile trail Sunday evening while on an outing with eight others, authorities said. They were stranded about 10 miles outside this small southeast Idaho town.

The eight others arrived in Bone on Sunday evening and reported their friends missing.

"We never gave up hope," said Brammer's wife, Stacie. "I know their attitudes and their skills. They're all pretty experienced and had a lot of knowledge as far as what to do."

Airlines Ordered To Check Wiring On 737s

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — U.S. airlines have three days to check for cross-wiring in 300 Boeing 737s, following speculation that faulty warnings deceived the pilot of a British 737 into shutting down his only good engine when the other one caught fire.

"We think this is not a very likely scenario, but it's a check that can be done very, very quickly without disrupting service," said Federal Aviation Administration spokesman John Leyden.

The FAA order late Wednesday applies to eight Piedmont Airlines 737-400s with U.S.-French CFM56 engines similar to the British Midland Airways 737 that crashed Sunday in England, killing 44 people. It also would cover 292 smaller Boeing 737-300s operated by 10 U.S. airlines.

No planes were grounded by the order, and other 737s and other planes using the CFM56 engines would not be affected.

FAA Administrator Allan McArtor issued the order after the British Civil Aviation Authority ordered similar checks for three types of aircraft flown by British carriers, including the same two models of the 737 and the Airbus A320.

The British agency also ordered increased inspections of CFM56 engines on the planes, a step the FAA was still considering, said a spokesman.

The FAA's "air worthiness directive" gives airlines 72 hours from official receipt of the warnings this morning to make the inspections, which officials said would take about an hour for each plane.

This could allow each plane to make one or two flights before the inspection was mandatory, and officials said it should not disrupt airline schedules.

British officials said Wednesday it was too early to conclude what caused the crash and they were still examining the possibility that both engines failed. A statement from the British Transport Department said, however, that the airliner's left engine caught fire and the right engine was shut down, and that pilot Kevin Hunt had told ground control the fire was in the right engine.

This led to the speculation that crossed wires might have caused warning lights to mislead Hunt into shutting down the right instead of the left engine. He could not see the engines from the cockpit. Hunt, who was injured in the crash, was interviewed by investigators Wednesday, but they did not disclose what he told them.

Fred Farrar, another FAA spokesman, said airlines flying the 737-300s are Aloha, America West, American, Continental, Delta, Orion, Piedmont, Southwest, United and U.S. Air. Piedmont is the only airlines using 737-400s with the CFM56 engines.

The U.S. inspections will cover fire warning systems and vibration monitoring circuitry in the aircraft, Farrar said.

He said there have been "very, very isolated incidents" of cross-wiring of warning systems in U.S. aircraft but none has led to an accident.

HUD Selects Federal Sites For Homeless

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Housing and Urban Development's latest list of property identified as suitable for the homeless includes national parkland, a naval submarine base and a lock and dam site.

Those sites are included in a list of 38 pieces of federal property identified by HUD on Wednesday as suitable for the homeless.

In announcing the decision, HUD said the new list of 17 buildings and 21 land sites was being submitted to the General Services Administration and the Department of Health and Human Services.

GSA and HHS will oversee a process in which states, local government units and private non-profit organizations may submit applications to use the facilities for the homeless.

Wednesday's action brings to 148 the number of federal properties — 65 buildings and 83 land sites — judged suitable for aiding the homeless.

HUD is also reviewing for suitability more than 1,600 unused or underutilized properties owned by federal landholding agencies. The department is due to complete this review no later than the end of February.

Wednesday's action was taken to meet a deadline set on Dec. 14 by U.S. District Court Judge Oliver Gasch.

The locations identified Wednesday as containing suitable federally owned land included Camp Butler, N.C.

Mission Air

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Union County sheriff's deputies locked the hangar doors of Mission Air Ministries Inc. at Monroe Airport on Wednesday because the Christian air ambulance service failed to pay two creditors, said Union County Sheriff Frank McGuirt.

A civil judgment filed in Wake County Superior Court last fall by Aero Services of Raleigh-Durham claims Mission Air owes $44,776, plus 8 percent interest dating from May 18, McGuirt said.

Texas-based Exxon Co. sued Mission Air in District Court in Union County on Wednesday, alleging the carrier owes Exxon $12,885 plus 8 percent interest dating from Aug. 21.

Mission Air, which has flown more than 800 benevolent flights across the nation, Canada, Mexico and the Caribbean, must pay the money or risk having its property sold at auction, McGuirt said.

Mission Air specialized in carrying patients to major medical centers and reuniting families. It will be six years old Feb. 21.

Reagan Warns Against 'Erosion Of American Spirit'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Reagan says he's handing the nation over to the "good hands" of George Bush, advising his successor to keep a wary eye on the Soviet Union and warning against "an erosion of the American spirit."

In a folksy Oval Office speech bidding adieu to the nation, Reagan boasted Wednesday of his accomplishments and ignored many of the difficulties that arose during his eight years in office.

"We meant to change a nation, and instead, we changed a world," he said.

Yet Reagan also admitted that his self-styled conservative revolution left many things unchanged, and he asked his followers to stick around and help his successor.

"If we're to finish the job, Reagan's Regiments will have to become the Bush Brigades," Reagan said. "Soon he'll be the chief, and he'll need you every bit as much as I did."

The president said he was leaving office with the central message of his political life strengthened — that an unfettered economy, a strong defense and a free citizenry forged a nation "respected in the world, and looked to for leadership."

"Democracy, the profoundly good, is also the profoundly productive," he said. "Because we are a great nation, our challenges seem complex. It will always be this way. But as long as we remember our first principles and believe in ourselves, the future will always be ours."

The president and his wife Nancy were scheduled to receive a farewell accolade today from the Department of Defense, which arranged an elaborate ceremony featuring flyovers and military bands at Andrews Air Force Base. Every four-star general and admiral in uniform was invited to attend.

Reagan addressed the nation from his Oval Office desk, his left hand in a splint and swathed in bandages from weekend surgery on a finger.

Speaking nine days before his retirement to California, Reagan called his departure "sweet sorrow." But he also said he looks forward to a renewal of personal freedom, contending a modern president must live "somewhat apart. You spend a lot of time going by too fast in a car someone else is driving."

Another regret, Reagan said, was his failure to tame the nation's deficit. But that merited only a paragraph in the roughly 21-minute speech. "I've been talking a great deal about that lately, but tonight isn't for arguments and I'm going to hold my tongue," he said.

The national debt almost tripled in Reagan's term and he ran up the biggest budget deficits in history. His final budget proposal, released earlier this week for the 1990 fiscal year starting Oct. 1, projects a deficit of $92.5 billion.

The president's remarks were void of any mention of such national tragedies as the barracks bombing that killed more than 241 servicemen in Beirut, the Challenger disaster or the Americans held hostage in the Middle East.

There was no word of the trade deficits or the scandals that tarnished his administration, such as the sale of arms to Iran and use of the proceeds to fund the Contra rebels in Nicaragua illegally. The Contras, subject of so many Reagan speeches, were not mentioned at all.

As triumphs Reagan listed the nation's economic recovery, its low unemployment and inflation, and its bolstered military.

The president who warned early in his tenure of the "evil empire" in the Soviet Union took credit at the end of his presidency for forging "a satisfying new closeness" with the Soviets. He said the new relationship helped bring about the first U.S.-Soviet treaty to eliminate an entire class of nuclear weapons, as well as "a new peacefulness around the globe."

"What it all boils down to is this: I want the new closeness to continue," Reagan said. But he advised those who follow to "trust but verify. ... Watch closely — and don't be afraid to see what you see."

"We must keep up our guard — but we must also continue to work together to lessen and eliminate tension and mistrust," he said.

Reagan also said he was concerned that America was losing "a national feeling," a patriotism built on a love of country and awareness of the nation's history of freedom.

"Are we doing a good enough job teaching our children what America is and what she represents in the long history of the world?" Reagan asked.

"If we forget what we did, we won't know who we are. I am warning of an eradication of the American memory that could result, ultimately, in an erosion of the American spirit," he said.

Of his departure from the White House, Reagan likened himself to a man walking off "into the city streets," and he referred to Bush by saying "We made the city stronger, we made the city freer and we left her in good hands."

Earlier in the day, Reagan posed with his Cabinet for an official class picture, and he was given the brown leather chair that he used for eight years in the Cabinet Room. The presentation was made by Samuel Pierce, the only remaining member of the original Reagan Cabinet formed in 1981.

Diluted Anti-Chemical Weapons Statement Signed By 149 Nations

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS — An anti-chemical weapons declaration, intentionally crafted in diluted form to satisfy its 149 signatory nations, should help accelerate talks on a ban of toxic arms, officials say.

But the United States and Soviet Union, the only two countries that admit they possess chemical arms, said Wednesday that the document produced by the five-day conference had fallen short of their expectations.

The chief U.S. delegate, William F. Burns, said Washington would have preferred that explicit language be put into the declaration to include sanctions against users of poison gas, nerve gas and other toxic chemical arms.

"If the United States had written this statement, which we did not, it might have been stronger. This is a consensus document," said Burns, who heads the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

Iran, a victim of poison gas in its eight-year war with Iraq, was among several states that voiced reservations after the declaration's unanimous endorsement.

Iraq's use of chemical weapons against Iran and Iraq's Kurdish minority — graphic pictures of peasants killed in Iranian villages heightened concerns last year — provided a somber backdrop for the conference, which was formally proposed by President Reagan at the United Nations in September.

Iran succeeded in getting a reference to "recent violations" of the protocol in the declaration. But its delegation said it had hoped for a categorical condemnation of past use of toxic weapons.

Host France said the conference would give life to languishing negotiations in Geneva seeking a verifiable ban on chemical arms.

The non-binding declaration reaffirms the 1925 Geneva Protocol, which prohibits the use of chemical weapons, and urges negotiators in Geneva to "redouble" efforts to ban the use, production and stocking of chemical arms.

The six-point declaration affirms the U.N. role in investigating chemical weapons use and called for a strengthening of existing procedures at the United Nations in dealing with such use — a reference to enacting sanctions.

Signers condemned the use of chemical arms, pledging not to use them.

Unanimous approval of the final declaration was "tantamount to saying the whole international community has taken a posture" against chemical weapons, said Foreign Minister Roland Dumas of France, who presided over the conference.

"This unanimity will accelerate ... work underway in Geneva," he said.

Cancer Patient Goes To Jail Over Sewer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLESTON, S.C. — A 73-year-old cancer patient says he decided to go to prison as a matter of principle rather than accept a solution to a decade-old dispute over a sewer hookup that would have cost him nothing.

"I'm doing this to show my rights to America," Wilbert Siegel, a retired metal worker with rectal cancer, said Wednesday as he was taken from his modest James Island home near here to begin a six-month sentence for contempt of court.

A large American flag decorated Siegel's porch and yellow ribbons adorned pine trees in his yard as he tearfully kissed his wife, Hattie, goodbye.

He was then taken to Lieber Correctional Institution in Ridgeville. "I'm not scared because I'm going to jail." But, he said, "six months is a long time for anybody to go to jail, especially on a charge like this."

Siegel was imprisoned for defying a 1986 court order requiring him to tie his septic tank to a sewer line.

The problem began in 1979 when the Siegels paid a fee to tap into the line. When the line was installed, it ended at a corner of their lot, too far away, according to Siegel, who said he would have had to spend $2,000 and take down four large trees to make the connection.

Siegel said the line should be extended in front of the house, where a straight 30-foot connection could be made.

Ray Patterson, chairman of the James Island Public Service District, said the utility had been willing to extend the line, but the Siegels would have been billed an additional $200, which they declined to pay.

Circuit Judge William Howell on Nov. 1 found Siegel in contempt of the 1986 ruling that he make the connection, and gave him 60 days to hook up or go to prison.

Siegel, who'll appear in court again after serving his sentence, predicted he'll probably be returned to prison.

"I have a life sentence for not hooking up to an unequal sewer line," he said.

Government-Run Insurance Proposed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — The United States should abolish private health insurance and instead provide Canadian-style government coverage for everyone, a group representing 1,200 doctors proposed today.

"Our health care system is failing," the group wrote. "It denies access to many in need and is expensive, inefficient and increasingly bureaucratic."

They suggested a system modeled on Canada's national health program that they said would cost no more than the United States' current mix of public and private coverage.

"Every year, as the costs of the current system go up and up and the number of uninsured people go up and up, that will be a push toward this fundamental change in our system," said Dr. David U. Himmelstein.

The proposal was drawn up by the 1,200-member Physicians for a National Health Program and published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

The group's 30-member writing committee was chaired by Dr. Stefie Woolandier and Himmelstein. The two doctors, based at Cambridge Hospital in Cambridge, Mass., recently published "a Marxist view of current U.S. health policy," which also praised the Canadian system.

"There are people of all political stripes involved in writing this, from the right to the left wing," Himmelstein said in an interview. "I am clearly one of the left-wing people."

A second paper in the journal, written by Alain Enthoven and Richard Kronick of Stanford Business School, proposed a less drastic plan for universal health insurance.

Their program would retain private insurance but require employers to provide coverage for their workers. Those not covered at work would contribute through taxes, and poor people's coverage would be totally subsidized by the government.

These authors argued that a complete government takeover of health care financing "would represent far too radical a change to be politically feasible in this country."

Dr. Arnold S. Relman, the journal's editor, wrote in an editorial that the "time has come" for universal health insurance, but he did not endorse either plan.

joining the large block of Republicans, Walker said it is more obvious than ever that North Carolina is officially a two-party state and Republican Gov. Jim Martin's ideas will not be squelched.

The legislature was scheduled to convene today at 1:30 p.m., and House members were to list committees on which they wish to serve, Jones said. Instead of serving on seven to 10 committees as members have done in the past, Jones said each person will serve on three or four committees.

A longtime advocate of election reform, Jones said he planned to ask to serve on the Election Law and Constitutional Amendment subcommittee and the Appropriations Committee.

Betty Speir of Greenville, a member of the Democratic National Committee, said it is not yet clear how the Democrats and Republicans joining together will affect the General Assembly.

"I think it's difficult to read the significance at this point. No one knows what will develop from this coalition. I think the Democratic Party will meld," she said.

She said she hopes the coalition and the remaining members of the General Assembly will continue to support the Basic Education Plan.

State Rep. Ed Warren of Greenville, who sided with Ramsey in the political tug of war, said today he is not sure what committees on which he will ask to serve. In the past, he has worked on banking, agriculture and Department of Corrections panels, and he chaired the base budget committee on education, a position he does not know if he will hold under Mavretic's leadership.

"Whatever he assigns me, I will do the best I can," Warren said in a telephone interview from his Raleigh office.

"I am confident that the new leadership installed Wednesday will be equal to the task," Warren said. "The test of any issue coming before us should be: what is best for all the people of our state?"

"I hope and believe a spirit of co-operation will prevail, and I pledge my support to the leadership during the crucial days and months ahead."

Jones said many of the Democrats who voted for Mavretic want to create a law limiting the length of term for any speaker for two elected terms. It is an idea Jones said he has been considering since 1985.

"I did a lot of thinking on this for several years. Anytime that you make a major effort for reform, there's a lot of pressure. We were willing to take a stand and go out front and make the change," Jones said.

The Democratic coalition was a good mix, Jones said. It included Dr. C.R. Edwards, a black minister from Fayetteville, and Betty Wisner, a strong Democrat from Wake County, he said.

There were a couple of liberals and a couple of conservatives, he said, and the rest would be considered moderates. Also, he said there was never any doubt that minorities will be included in activities under Mavretic's leadership.

"I don't think you could have a better mix," Jones said.

bus driver would make is about $7.82 after about 30 years of experience.

The problem may be helped if each high school attendance area had a transportation coordinator, Preyar said. "That would make an appreciable difference in the quality of transportation services."

Other recommendations are to establish a minimum pay per day for two hours to employ and retain drivers for short routes; establish time-and-a-half pay for non-certificated personnel who are licensed to drive, and increase the salaries for school bus drivers to an hourly rate of pay that will attract capable and dependable applicants.

The school system will have training classes for those wanting to be regular bus drivers Jan. 23-25 from 6:30 p.m. to 10 p.m. at D.H. Conley High School.

Watkins, who was a nuclear submarine commander before becoming chief of naval operations, is considered an authority on nuclear warfare.

Other contenders for the energy job were identified by Bush transition sources as former defense secretary Harold Brown and former Sen. Daniel J. Evans, R-Wash. Another contender, former Louisiana Rep. Henson Moore, was told he was no longer being considered, transition sources said Wednesday.

Along with Bennett, Surgeon General C. Everett Koop and Texas industrialist Ross Perot had been mentioned previously as prospective drug czars.

Flood To Speak

Dr. Dudley Flood, formerly of Greenville, will speak Sunday at 3 p.m. at the annual Founder's Day celebration of the Beta Kappa Sigma chapter of Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity. The meeting will be held at the Barbecue Lodge in Kinston.

Flood, associate superintendent of the N.C. Department of Public Instruction, was a principal at Bethel Union School in Bethel and a recipient of an outstanding alumni award from East Carolina University. A Raleigh resident, he serves as president of Eta Sigma chapter of Phi Beta Sigma.

Greenville area Phi Beta Sigma members who will attend include the Rev. Farney Moore, the Rev. Alonzo Mills, Gaston Monk, Clarence Moore and M.W. Rountree.

Bird Club Meets

A program on bats will be presented Monday at 7:30 p.m. at a meeting of the Greenville-River Park North Bird Club at the park on Mumford Road.

Mary Clark, curator of mammals at the North Carolina State Museum of Natural Sciences in Raleigh, will present a slide show and have specimens of bats for inspection. She will tell about her special interest in long-eared bats, especially the eastern big-eared bat.

Non-members are welcome. For information call 830-4561.

Training For Principals

Principals in the Pitt County schools are participating in "Effective Principals Training" today at the Farmville Community Center, according to Chet Preyar, associate superintendent for personnel development services.

The training will help principals develop their administrative behaviors to create better learning environments within the schools, he said. Other sessions will be conducted Jan. 23 and Feb. 2.

St. Matthew Services

Quarterly meeting services will be conducted this weekend at St. Matthew True Born Faith of Christ Church on Norris Street.

A members' meeting will be held Friday at 7 p.m. and Holy Communion will be conducted Saturday at 7:30 p.m. Eldress Hattie M. Cobb will preach Sunday at 11 a.m., while Bishop Stephen Jones and Haddocks Chapel will conduct the 3 p.m. service.

School Plan Discussed

The League of Women Voters of Greenville-Pitt County is inviting teachers, school administrators and parents of students in the Pitt County schools to attend an informational forum on the North Carolina Career Development Plan for teachers and school administrators.

The plan, which encourages high-quality teaching, will be discussed Tuesday at 8 p.m. at First Presbyterian Church at 14th and Elm streets.

Louise Woods, education committee chair for the League of Women Voters of Charlotte-Mecklenburg County, will discuss this plan, which was implemented in a pilot program in her school system.

Dr. Chet Preyar and Christin Drye of the Pitt County schools administration will explain the personnel development and evaluation system used in Pitt County.

Missionary Day

Bishop Raymond Griswold will speak Sunday at noon for Missionary Day at Friendship Holiness Church in Falkland. Special singing will be rendered, followed by dinner.

Recognition Banquets

The Greenville Jaycees is sponsoring two recognition banquets this month.

The 43rd annual Distinguished Service Award and Bosses Night Banquet will be held Tuesday at 6 p.m. at the Beef Barn. Randy Dixon of Dixon, Duffus and Doub and previous DSA recipient, will be keynote speaker.

The outstanding public servant young educator, teenager, vocation farmer and senior citizen will be honored at the annual Community Service Awards Banquet Jan. 31.

Forms for nominations are available at the Pitt County Board of Education, the chamber of commerce and Pitt County Fair Bureau. Entries must be postmarked by Jan. 20. For reservations and information, contact Joni Windham at 551-4676.

ECU Has Another Record

East Carolina University has a record spring semester enrollment of 14,745 students, the registrar's office reported today. The spring semester began last week and registration was concluded with a drop-add period earlier this week.

The registrar's office said 1989 enrollment was 670 students above last year's spring enrollment of 14,075. The all-time record for a semester was set last fall at 15,583.

A breakdown of the spring enrollment showed 10,750 fulltime undergraduates and 814 fulltime graduates. There were 1,400 part-time undergraduates and 1,781 part-time graduate students. Total undergraduates comprised 82.4 percent of the spring enrollment at 12,150, with 2,594 graduate students making up 17.6 percent of the spring enrollment.

Slaves' Quilts Were 'Stitched From The Soul'

By Carleton Jones
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BALTIMORE — One day in the early 1980s, folklorist Gladys-Marie Fry, who was studying black folk "survivals," mailed 600 form letters to museums, historical societies, collectors and craft shops.

"Do you have any black women who are quilting in your community?" the inquiry read. No, came most of the answers that were returned, but a good many respondents said that they had antique quilts in their collections.

Those responses sent Fry, an associate professor at the University of Maryland at College Park, on a national research hunt for one of the roots of black folk craft.

This year she is scheduled to receive two of the ultimate accolades available to luckier scholars of the arts and crafts: a Manhattan show and a published book. She is also on leave from the College Park campus as a Bunting Institute fellow for 1988-'89 at Radcliffe College in Cambridge, Mass.

The letters she received became the seeds of an investigation of U.S. slave culture and how it is illustrated, sometimes in mysterious ways, in 19th-century quilting relics.

Her book, "Stitched From the Soul: Slave Quilts in the Ante-Bellum South," will be published in July by E.P. Dutton in conjunction with a show on black textiles at New York's American Folk Art Museum. In October, the show will visit the Renwick Gallery of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

"If people hadn't helped, I wouldn't have had a story to tell," Fry says.

At first, she says, most museums, curators and galleries showed little interest in antique quilts as a form of black art. Not a single one that answered could identify a slave-made quilt, though many respondents owned vaguely attributed, antebellum (before 1861) quilt relics.

Now all has changed; research has uncovered the quilt's sources and prices have vaulted. Such artifacts can command five-figure prices at auctions and sales. Fry's search identified almost 150 previously unknown slave-made quilts, though few quilts made by blacks for their own families seem to have survived.

Many of the first respondents to Fry's letters showed a class-conscious belief that "white Southern women designed and directed most of the fine, durable quilts in antebellum days," the folklorist says. Actually, many quilts were of pure African-inspired designs stitched by blacks, she relates. And black men, as well as women, made the coverlets.

"People's opinions have changed. When I first started, museum accession cards would read 'made by unknown darcy' or 'unknown slave woman' on such and such plantation."

"Today," the folklorist notes, "most museums fill in information about the quilt and its maker where possible and delete offensive racial epithets."

An early breakthrough was that Fry's research uncovered the personalities of those involved in the making of the quilts.

"In Mississippi I found three quilts made by twin sisters who were seamstresses. One of them won a prize in a county fair in the 1850s. I found the silver cup she won and a photo of how she made the quilt. Both sisters were freed from slavery by their husbands," she says.

"Near Asheville, N.C., I found a slave seamstress who made a 'borderie' quilt — the word describes a very old applique technique. Her quilt was so finely executed that it appeared to have about 20 stitches to the inch. She was a plantation seamstress and also the mistress of her owner."

Her decade of research also has indicated broad artistic outlines to the making of quilts in pre-Civil War America, findings that will be fully explored in her book.

It now seems incontestable, for one thing, that African symbolism was a major force in shaping slave-made quilts. A sort of cosmology of nature seems to have been active in the creations of the seamstresses.

Among the more provocative quilt symbols that appear over and over again are representations of the sun. Fry believes many of the slaves were "actually residual sun worshippers," inheriting that form of devotion from African roots.

Some quilts have pronounced red and white contrasting patterns, which Fry sees as a symbolic relic of the Shango cult of Nigeria. The Benin area of Africa, she notes, inspired the use of applique techniques on quilts.

Women Fight Own Battles In Nicaragua

Struggle For Equal Rights Is Under Way

By Bryna Brennan
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — Nicaraguan women, many of whom fought on the battlefield to help bring about the Sandinista revolution, are back in combat demanding the new society change its macho attitude toward females.

In the past year, a growing women's movement has obtained equal rights in divorce and had a satirical newspaper suspended for presenting women as sexual objects.

It's not a battle won easily in Latin America, where women are expected to remain subservient to males, stay at home and raise children. This, despite the fact that many women must work outside the home to survive.

Women's lives are further burdened by primitive conditions: shanty homes, lack of potable water or plumbing, wood-burning stoves.

These day-to-day struggles, coupled with the lack of education and sexist attitudes, make the job of the women's movement more difficult. When asked about women's rights, a peasant woman in the rural south asked, "What is that?"

"We are trying to change the level of consciousness," said Lea Guido, head of the Luisa Amanda Espinoza Association of Nicaraguan Women.

Ms. Guido's group is linked to the ruling Sandinista National Liberation Front and takes its name from one of the martyrs in the fight to depose Anastasio Somoza, who was ousted in 1979.

"Participation by women in politics is a new phenomenon," she said. "It started because everyone was against the dictator, and that caused everyone to fight. It was the first victory for women."

During the war, women served as guerrilla fighters or messengers and ran safe houses, organized demonstrations, set up contacts and sought the release of prisoners.

Dora Maria Tellez was a guerrilla commander. She is now the minister of health. Doris Maria Tijerino was a clandestine member of the Sandinista Front. She is now the nation's chief of police.

Rosario Murillo, the nation's first lady, worked secretly with the guerrillas. Rosa Pasos, a lieutenant colonel in the army and spokeswoman for the Defense Ministry, acted as a go-between in clandestine contacts.

Nicaraguan women struggle with a Soviet-made anti-aircraft gun during military training

Many women, especially in the capital, wear olive green uniforms for their administrative jobs with the army and Interior Ministry. The government even provides maternity uniforms.

Thousands of civilian women underwent arms training for militia work, some in the use of Soviet-made anti-aircraft guns. They are barred from combat but serve behind the lines as cooks and in administrative jobs.

"Women here traditionally were not just housewives. They always worked," Ms. Guido said. "But they used to be exploited by the men and not paid fairly."

Most women work to add to the family income, and just finding scarce goods and budgeting with 20,000 percent inflation can be a full-time job.

The official Sandinista newspaper Barricada says 70 percent of the pickers for coffee, the nation's main export crop, are women. Almost 49 percent of the state's administrative positions are held by women, but none is among the nine-member directorate that runs the Sandinista Front.

"We're working on it," Ms. Guido said. "In a country so poor, so backward, it's not easy, but there's a political will."

The Sandinista party has vowed to "abolish the discrimination that women have suffered with respect to men; it will establish economic, political and cultural equality between women and men."

But old ideas are hard to change.

"A woman's job is to take care of the family. What is this about rights? They have rights," said a man at a vegetable market. Several other men agreed.

"Having women in battle creates problems, jealousy, you know what I mean," a young male army lieutenant said.

Ms. Guido's organization opened a legal affairs office in 1983 to deal with abuses, separations, and much-needed sex education.

"The legal office has had to overcome women's traditional timidity and fear in publicly discussing problems that have long been considered exclusively private and better left unexamined," said Envio, a magazine published by the Central American Institute, a Sandinista think tank.

Ms. Guido points out that education is an important part of the movement.

"Many women in the rural regions are not married. They have too many children, it's part of the machismo," she said.

"Before the triumph, we didn't even have day care," Guido said. "It's still insufficient, but it's enormous in comparison."

Students Writing Before They Read

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHOENIX — "One day I went to the park with my dad and we saw a monkey and a zebra and a rabbit and a snake and a turtle the end."

Thus wrote a first-grader in her second month of Beverly Kerner's class at Lowell Elementary School in inner-city Phoenix. The composition was good enough to be displayed on a bulletin board, illustrated with the author's crayon drawings, and used as an example by the teacher.

Although technically imperfect, even the most discriminating reader gets the gist of the story: The author went to the park with her dad and later to the zoo with her parents, and wrote about the animals she saw.

That a 6-year-old who has barely learned to read could type her story on a computer keyboard, using a range of words not found in traditional first-grade spelling books, is an accomplishment that has educators singing praises for a writing program adopted by the district.

The "Writing to Read" program is being used in several school districts statewide. It focuses on kindergarten children and first-graders and encourages them to begin writing even before they read.

The premise is that young children come to school with broad vocabularies and abundant ideas, and they should be encouraged to write those ideas even though they don't know grammar, syntax and spelling.

The program, created by International Business Machines Corp., combines computers with pencil-and-paper writing lessons, listening programs and play exercises to teach children how to write any idea they want to express.

"The way they're being taught to write is to get out a whole idea," says Debra Gomez, principal of Lowell Elementary. "The first focus is on the complete thought."

The mechanics of writing — spelling, grammar, punctuation and capitalization — also are taught, because children must have a solid grounding in basic skills, Gomez says. But those skills are secondary in the writing lab, reinforced instead in the regular classroom.

"What we're finding is minority students, when they get to college, can't write," Gomez says. "It's not so much the mechanics, but how you put the idea together."

Pet Owners Should Learn Facts And Neuter Their Own Animals

Dear Abby: I am a volunteer for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and my job is to talk to schoolchildren. I show them a chart that shows one female dog with a litter of four. In a year, if only half the pups themselves have litters of four, and the mother does likewise, there will be 12 pups. This goes on and on until the seventh year, at which point there are nearly 4,000 pups!

Nine out of 10 of these dogs will die either at an animal control facility or from some kind of neglect.

I think if most people were aware of these facts, they would have their dogs and cats spayed or altered. Many S.P.C.A. or Humane Society organizations offer financial help for this process.

Abby, by publishing this message, you could save countless unwanted dogs and cats from being born to die tragic deaths. — Shirley Beedy, S.P.C.A., Auburn, Calif.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Dear Shirley: Thank you for reminding us of something that most people already know, but need to be reminded of.

Dear Abby: Will you please do every pediatric office in the country a favor and print this:

One of the most common requests we get — especially at the onset of the school year — is for information about immunization shots. This creates extra work for our busy medical clinic staff. Why don't parents keep a record of the shots their children have taken? We must get at least two dozen calls a day from parents who say, "I misplaced Johnny's shot records when we moved." Or, "I know they're around here somewhere, but it's quicker to call you."

Abby, we have more to do in this clinic than look up information and call back to tell the mother when her child had his last shots and what kind of shots they were. Right now I am trying to get back to someone for the fourth time. Her line is either busy, or she's not home yet. Talk about frustrating!

Please tell people that for more than one reason — trips to the emergency room, college enrollment, moving to another city — they should keep a running record of their children's immunization shots. — Had It In Ohio

Dear Had It: Your point is well-taken and parents would be well-advised to heed it. Continually having to dig into your records for information can be a bigger pain in the behind than the booster shot.

Dear Abby: We were recently married, and for a wedding gift we received a check for $25. We put the money into our savings account, and a week or so later, we received a note from our bank advising us that the check had bounced!

The $25 was deducted from our account. My question: Should we confront the gift-giver or just forget about it?

Also, should we send a thank-you note for the $25 check that wasn't any good? — Skunked In Virginia

Dear Skunked: Thank the gift-giver. It will eventually come to his/her attention that the check bounced, and unless he/she is a total cheapskate, it will be replaced with a "good" one.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Stress Is '80s Designer Disease

If there is a designer disease of the '80s, it's "stress."

You can dress it up or down. You can take it with you to the club. You can suffer from it and still play tennis. The higher your income and the more powerful you become, the worse it gets.

You won't hear any of the women on "Roseanne" sitting around a bar saying, "I'm stressed out." No siree.

Well, the Japanese have been experimenting with ways to combat pressure in the marketplace, and they've come up with a theory: Fragrant aromas reduce stress. Here's the plan. They're going to pump various scents into the air conditioning system of office buildings and gas 'em into mellow.

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

According to their research, the fresh smell of a forest is supposed to help workers deal with being uptight, while lemon and jasmine are said to have a rejuvenating effect, helping workers overcome post-lunch drowsiness.

My first reaction is one of suspicion. A few years ago, for whatever reason, they came out with an "auto perfume." Remember? For an extra buck, the folks at your local carwash squirted a scent on the carpet of your car. There were lemon-lime, cinnamon, floral, orange blossom, northern pine, strawberry, cherry, and even one called "new car" to choose from. The latter was a leather scent, but someone said it smelled more like a new car and it had more market appeal.

Anyway, I'm here to tell you the smell my husband had spritzed in my car didn't relieve my stress. It created it. I don't know what scent it was. My guess was a cross between an overripe cantaloupe and a possum in heat. I drove with the windows down for two solid weeks, and whenever I thought he forgot about it, I reminded him.

That is not to say there might not be some merit to the Japanese theory. I'm not ready to admit smells can bring down your hypertension, but they can certainly make you have a better, more relaxed outlook on things. It's no great secret that if you're trying to sell your house, just set a bowl of yeast bread under a towel and a prospective buyer will send for the kids. And if you want your husband to be in a good mood when he opens the door at night, have an onion in the oven.

It'll be interesting to know if the Japanese experiment works. Will the fresh smell of the great outdoors relieve stress? Or will people figure out that before they spend all that money, all they have to do is open a window?

Group Helps Them Cope With Death

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DANVILLE, Pa. — Joyce Schlagel knows all too well the pain that comes from the death of a child.

But through a newly formed bereavement group, she is able to share her feelings about her loss with others in similar situations.

"We don't dwell on death," says Schlagel, whose 18-year-old daughter, Jennifer, died in an accident the day before Thanksgiving 1987. "We learn how to live with it and how to go on."

The bereavement group, Cherished Remembered with Warmth, was founded by Helen Wagner, whose 30-year-old son died in a traffic accident.

Each word in the organization's name begins with an initial of the son, C. Richard Wagner.

The twice-monthly meetings are open to anyone — including those who have lost beloved pets.

Schlagel says the meetings have helped her husband, John, become able to talk about their daughter's death.

"I really couldn't talk to him about it. I knew he needed to talk to someone," she says. "Christmas was hard for us. We opened up what she had bought and cried."

A grieving family member never knows when the wound may reopen. Schlagel says she was shopping once when she saw flowers that would have looked nice in Jennifer's hair on prom night.

"I had to leave the shop and go out on the street," she recalls. "The first time I went shopping for Christmas for the boys it seemed everything she liked jumped out at me. Now I can walk by the girls' shops that she liked."

Wagner says the group's youngest participant was a 16-year-old girl whose brother was killed in a motorcycle accident. The quietest was a woman who sat silently for a couple of hours and then started crying.

Wagner, who has read more than 70 books on bereavement, tries to convince other group members that there is hope.

"An awful lot of people waste an awful lot of energy and time trying to make life the way it used to be and to feel the way they used to feel," she says.

"When that doesn't happen, they get really down on themselves. They have to understand it's never going to be the same. They have to build a new life."

Court Sends Man To Prison, Orders Medication To Combat Alcoholism

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A Greenville man convicted of assault and breaking and entering at an Oct. 29 birthday party at an area subdivision has been sentenced to six months in prison and ordered to take medication to control alcoholism.

District Court Judge Wilton R. "Rusty" Duke of Greenville found Kenneth E. Wilson, 40, of 9 Quail Ridge Road guilty of breaking and entering the home of Max Milner, a Greenville restaurant owner. After being ordered from the house, Wilson allegedly returned and tried to break in, Milner testified, and Milner said he fired a shotgun blast in the direction of the door, missing Wilson.

Duke also found Wilson, a salesman for a cotton products company, guilty of assaulting J.B. Surles III, a Greenville businessman.

Wilson pleaded guilty to another charge of assaulting Barbara Ramey of 27 Upton Court, a radio station account executive. Wilson hit her after verbally abusing her for working on Rufus Edminsten's secretary of state campaign, Ms. Ramey testified.

Duke found Wilson innocent of assaulting Milner, of 110 Williams St. in the Cherry Oaks subdivision, who was entertaining a group of people at his birthday party after an East Carolina University football game.

Ms. Ramey, Milner and Surles testified Wednesday at Wilson's trial in Pitt County District Court. Ann Bass, a local real estate agent, accompanied Wilson to the party, testifying in his defense.

Under cross-examination from Assistant District Attorney Joe Blick, Ms. Bass testified that she and Wilson had been drinking and were impaired before they arrived at the party and his behavior was affected by alcohol.

Wilson's drinking may have violated the conditions of a suspended sentence in a judgment handed down by District Court Judge James E. Martin of Bethel in January of 1988, prosecutors said. In that judgment, after Wilson was convicted of assaulting and threatening Ms. Bass, Martin ordered Wilson not to use alcohol during the two-year suspended sentence, prosecutors said.

At the October party, Ms. Ramey testified that Wilson used foul language and called her profane names. He grabbed her left hand and struck her in her face with his fist, she testified.

Milner and Surles testified that they escorted Wilson out of the house, and Wilson pushed Ann Davis of 105 Hearthside Drive to the ground. Mrs. Davis was not in court, but her husband, Billy Davis, He was not called to testify.

Milner said he again asked Wilson to leave, and Wilson became aggressive.

"All of a sudden, he just came for us," Milner testified. "He swung at me and he just grazed the side of my head."

Wilson then went for Surles, Milner said, and the three men toppled to the ground.

Wilson then left with Ms. Bass. She testified that they returned several minutes later to retrieve her pocketbook from the house. Milner and other witnesses said they saw Wilson's car return to the house and he broke a glass panel in the front door and put his hand in to unlock the door.

Ready with a loaded shotgun, Milner said he fired in the direction of the door, but most of the buckshot hit the wall.

Neil Elks, the Pitt County sheriff's deputy who later arrested Wilson, said it appeared at least two pellets hit Wilson in the hand. Elks also said Wilson twice ran into nearby woods and eluded him before he could arrest him.

Wilson's attorney, James R. Vosburgh of Washington, N.C., said Wilson entered a private rehabilitation facility in Raleigh immediately after the October incident, and he asked Duke to impose a sentence that would allow Wilson to keep his job.

But Assistant District Attorney Elizabeth Warren asked Duke to hand down the maximum penalty, four years in prison.

Since 1971, Wilson has been convicted once of possessing narcotics, four times for driving while intoxicated and once for assaulting Ms. Bass, Ms. Warren said.

"This man's conduct was abhorrent," Ms. Warren said. "We would argue to the court (that) he is a dangerous person."

Duke said he has been on the District Court bench about one month, and alcohol has continually arisen as a factor in crime.

"It would be great if, somehow, after the advertisements of alcohol show it to be so glamorous, (companies had to) show what destruction it wreaks on peoples' lives," Duke said. "I had no idea it was this awful."

On the breaking and entering conviction, Duke suspended a two-year prison term for five years on the condition that Wilson serve six months in prison, participate in a rigid alcohol treatment program and take Antabuse under the care of a counselor.

Wilson received suspended sentences on the other convictions on the condition that he comply with the same restrictions.

According to the Physicians' Desk Reference published by Medical Economics Co. of New Jersey, Antabuse is a drug that aids management of alcoholism in selected people who want to remain sober to benefit from supportive or psychotherapeutic treatment.

If a person takes the drug daily, any contact with alcohol will produce severe side effects, the book said, including vomiting, throbbing headaches, respiratory difficulty, blurred vision and vertigo.

Stanley Love reaches to attempt to block a pass by Richmond's Mike Winiecki Wednesday

English, Winiecki Spark Richmond To 83-56 Romp

Foul Trouble Keeps Pirates' Edwards Handcuffed

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

RICHMOND — East Carolina basketball coach Mike Steele felt before the season ever began that Richmond was the best team in the Colonial Athletic Association.

After Wednesday's 83-56 loss at the hands of the Spiders in the Robins Center, Steele said he was sure of it.

"They are by far the best team in the conference," Steele said. "They've got the best post player (Mike Winiecki) and the best point guard (Ken Atkinson) in the conference. Everybody talks about what they lost, but they're going to be tough."

The Spiders did well from the perimeter as well as inside the paint against the Pirates. Guard Eric English, who canned five of eight 3-pointers, led the team with 23 points, while Winiecki added 18 and forward Scott Stapleton, 12.

"Our kids are playing with a lot more confidence now," Richmond head coach Dick Tarrant said. "They're shooting the ball better now than earlier in the season (in the second half the Spiders hit 64 percent from the field)."

The Pirates, who dressed out only nine players for the game, held their own most of the first half until senior forward Blue Edwards was whistled for his second foul.

Edwards went baseline for a dunk with 4:15 left in the half to cut the lead to 28-23. After the dunk, Edwards was called for charging into English.

"I felt like I was undercut," Edwards said. "If anything, I think it should have been a no call."

Steele agreed. Frustrated by the calls, he threw a balled up program on the floor on the sidelines and was whistled for a technical foul by referee Jim Howell.

English went to the line and sank both of his free throws and Atkinson added the technical shots to boost Richmond up by nine, 32-23.

Moments later, the Pirates lost Edwards for the rest of the half when he fouled Stapleton on a successful driving layup. Stapleton added the free throw to push the lead to 35-23 with 3:44 left.

The lead grew to 15, 39-24, with 2:56 left in the half when Winiecki scored on a follow shot.

The Pirates rallied thanks to a 3-pointer from Gus Hill and a jumper from the corner from Kenny Murphy to cut the margin to 39-30 at the half.

In the second half, Lose and Hill, who each scored 16 points as did Edwards, helped keep the Pirates in striking distance for a while.

Lose's follow shot inside with 15:23 to play got the Pirates to within eight, 44-36, but that would be as close as they would get.

The Spiders quickly padded the lead to 14 after the score as English sandwiched a pair of 3-pointers around a Stapleton hook shot.

Edwards cut the lead back down to 12, 52-40 with 12:42 left, but seconds later was called for his fourth foul and went back to the bench.

"He (Edwards) only played 23 minutes and got no rebounds," Richmond coach Dick Tarrant said. "That's too bad for them (ECU). They need him to do well if they are going to be successful."

Steele agreed.

Ex-Prof Lived With Stress

By Tom Foreman Jr.
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Richard Lauffer says he doesn't want to discredit North Carolina State, but when basketball coach Jim Valvano said allegations of grade changing for his players were not true, he decided to break a three-year silence.

"When you live with something like that, you're talking about stress," Lauffer said in a telephone interview from his retirement home at Emerald Isle.

"It's been something I've had to hold in the last three or four years," he said.

Lauffer, who retired in 1988 after seven years as head of the N.C. State physical education department, said in an interview published Wednesday that three failing grades on Chris Washburn's transcript were changed to passing grades in 1985 and that he had taken his concern to N.C. State chancellor Bruce Poulton. He said he thought the grades were in speech and political science courses, and a third course that he could not recall. Lauffer said he was later told that Washburn never took a political science course at N.C. State.

"It was disturbing, but I'd lived with this for a while. But when Valvano went on national television adamantly denying that these charges were (true), I just had to stand up and say 'Hey, I'm going to have to call CBS and say this is not totally true,'" he said.

Lauffer says he spoke with a Greenville, N.C., television station, and the story eventually made its way to The News and Observer of Raleigh. That led to Wednesday's response by Poulton, in which he denied allegations that he knew of the changes and did nothing.

"I'm standing by everything that I said," Lauffer said. "It's the truth and I stand by the truth..."

Lauffer says he has nothing against the basketball coach and athletic director, although they met only once, at his request, when Valvano succeeded Willis Casey as athletic director.

"If there were any disagreements between Lauffer and Valvano, he says it might have stemmed from the use of the new Carmichael Gymnasium on the N.C. State campus.

Lauffer believed that the building should have been reserved for student use as much as possible. Occasionally, according to Lauffer, Valvano wanted to use a portion of the new building for basketball practice and that was where the conflict arose.

"The times that he worked out in Carmichael, he was disturbed because there was too much noise," Lauffer said. "It was a matter of a struggle to use a new facility that had been student-funded and primarily not a private building."

"My stance was that I had promised the student body that if they paid for it, the athletic department wouldn't be using it in prime time hours," he said. "I came under some pressure from the athletic department and Poulton for it."

Some members of the N.C. State faculty were quoted in the newspaper as saying Lauffer's relationship with the athletic department was a stormy one, but Lauffer replied that the dispute with the gymnasium was the lone point of contention. He said his relationship with the athletic department was a good one, especially while working with Valvano's predecessor.

Lauffer said it will be interesting to see what "Personal Fouls" really says, adding that he hopes the university isn't discredited.

"I hope whatever happens, it happens for the best of North Carolina State University," he said.

Tar Heels Top Terps; Duke Rips Tribe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHAPEL HILL — Kevin Madden has to play three positions for eighth-ranked North Carolina, and no matter where Coach Dean Smith puts him, he manages to score.

Madden goes to the off-guard and both forward positions in the Tar Heel attack, and against Maryland, the inside-outside approach resulted in 25 points and a 88-72 victory in Atlantic Coast Conference action. The 6-foot-5 junior says he can put it in as long as he's in position.

"My teammates give me the ball where I can do something with it, so I'm happy with that. You have to be playing with the guys who get you the ball," Madden says.

Of Madden's 11 field goals, his first two were from 3-point range and came in the opening three minutes. He finished with three shots from beyond the 3-point arc. Five of his baskets were layups, two were jumpers from inside the 3-point line and yet another was a dunk.

It was the opening 3-pointers that broke a sluggish beginning for the Tar Heels. Still, defense was the key to breaking open a close contest for seven minutes and helping the Tar Heels raise their record to 14-2 in their ACC opener.

Maryland, 6-8 and 0-3, had gotten within 18-16 after John Johnson's baseline jumper with 12:29 remaining before halftime. North Carolina retaliated with a 15-4 run in which Rick Fox and Scott Williams scored four points apiece and Madden got a basket on a goal-tending call.

"It's my job to play (three positions) and things like that. So what I try to do is adjust to the position I'm playing so it's a lot easier on us and a lot easier on the team," Madden said.

The Terrapins hit seven of its first 12 shots before North Carolina went on its run, and 11 turnovers took them out of the game entirely. The Tar Heels didn't play that sharp, either, committing eight turnovers, yet they held a 46-35 lead at halftime.

"We didn't play very well in the first half," North Carolina coach Dean Smith said. "We wouldn't win many ACC games that way. The rebounding wasn't quite as good as what we wanted and we missed a lot of easy shots, so there's plenty to work on."

After the teams went scoreless for the first two minutes of the second half, the Maryland bench was assessed a technical foul after a personal foul was called. Williams sank the free throws for the foul, Jeff Lebo hit the technical free throws, then capped the run with a 3-point basket, giving North Carolina a 53-35 lead with 18:45 remaining.

Maryland was no closer than 12 points in the second half.

"Offensively, we got careless with the basketball," Maryland coach Bob Wade said. "We were right there, had the momentum... I think breakdowns offensively and defensively allowed them the baseline probably too much the entire basketball game."

Rick Fox had 18 points for the Tar Heels. J.R. Reid, still playing as a reserve since his return to action from foot surgery, scored 17 points and Scott Williams scored 10 as North Carolina raised its record to 14-2 in its league opener.

Jerrod Mustaf led Maryland with 18 points. Johnson had 12, and Tony Massenburg and Cedric Lewis had 10 points apiece.

Duke ..... 100 William & Mary ..... 38

DURHAM — Are the top-ranked Blue Devils as good as the Duke team that went to the Final Four two years ago? Looking up at the scoreboard, it seemed that way to former assistant coach Chuck Swenson.

Swenson saw Duke pound his William & Mary team 100-38, Duke's biggest margin of victory since they gave the Tribe a 109-44 thrashing in 1954.

"This may be the best Duke team I've seen offensively," said Swenson, who was with the Blue Devils for seven years before taking the William & Mary job. He said this team is better at rebounding than the Final Four team, not quite as good on defense.

"It's maybe the best passing team I've seen," he said. "And all those things are scary from where I was sitting."

Christian Laettner scored 13 points to lead six players in double figures in the victory.

"Our defense was excellent and the times they were able to penetrate our defense, we were so good they had to alter their shots," said Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski, whose team improved to 12-0. "I think they're not accustomed to playing at that pace."

Duke fans didn't know whether to cheer for holding the 2-10 Tribe below 40 points or for scoring 100. George Burgin settled the issue when he came in for the first time with 3:24 left amid changes of "George, George, George" and hit the shot that put Duke over the century mark.

Duke scored almost at will while forcing the Tribe into 27 turnovers, 16 in the first half. The Blue Devils outshot William & Mary 54 percent to 26 percent and added substantially to a 41-point halftime lead with most of the starters on the bench.

Phil Henderson scored all 11 of his points in the first half and Ferry had 10 as the Blue Devils went up 28-7 at the 10-minute mark and took a 30-point margin on two Ferry free throws with 4:09 left. Duke substituted freely while taking the 55-14 halftime lead.

Perry Awarded $1 Million In Suit Settlement

BARTOW, Fla. (AP) — Retired baseball great Gaylord Perry and his family on Wednesday accepted a $1 million settlement for a lawsuit involving his wife's death in a car wreck.

The agreement came as attorneys were preparing for closing arguments following two days of testimony.

Perry's wife, Blanche, 48, died following an accident near Lake Wales in September 1987. A car driven by Mrs. Perry, of Gaffney, S.C., collided with one that Harold Arnold of Winter Haven drove through a stop sign.

The Perrys' daughter, Beth Long, 24, said the family was ready to settle the civil case after she, her father and other family members testified. "We had all said our piece, and that was what was important," she said. "We stood up and paid tribute to my mother."

Following the wreck, Arnold was charged with failure to yield the right of way and paid a $67.50 fine. Assistant State Attorney Mike Cusick said that homicide charges weren't filed against Arnold, 67, because his actions might have been related to a medical condition, and culpable negligence could not be proven.

The Perry family filed its lawsuit last March following the decision not to prosecute Arnold.

"This man paid $67.50 for my mother's life," Ms. Long said. "That is injustice in as pure a form as you can get."

"It was hard to go into that courtroom, but I wanted to go and wanted him to sit there and listen to what he has done to our lives," she said. "And maybe he wouldn't go out and kill somebody else's mother."

John Jordan, an Orlando attorney representing Arnold, said that his client had never been under medical treatment for clogged arteries. While Arnold had never blacked out before, he said, it appears that that is what happened at the time of the accident.

"The last recollection he has was that he was going to slow down, and that's all he remembers," Jordan said.

Perry, a native of Williamston, N.C., retired from professional baseball in 1983, ending a career that spanned 21 years. He won the Cy Young Award in 1972 while playing for the Cleveland Indians and in 1978 while pitching for the San Diego Padres. The award is presented by the Baseball Writers Association to the best pitcher in each of the two professional baseball leagues.

Aggies Visit ECU

East Carolina's Lady Pirates return to action tonight at 7 p.m. in Minges Coliseum, hosting North Carolina A&T in a non-conference basketball game.

The ECU women will be seeking to bounce back from their first defeat of the month Monday, when they lost to Richmond, 67-58, in a Colonial Athletic Association game.

North Carolina A&T brings in a 6-4 record, following a 53-37 MEAC victory over Morgan State on Monday.

The game winds up the current home series. The Lady Pirates go on the road for their next two games, at James Madison and George Mason, before returning home on Jan. 21 to host American.

East Carolina's Irish Hamilton will be seeking to move into seventh place on the all-time career assist list. She currently is eighth with 165 and is only two behind Frank Hooks. Chris O'Connor, with 150 career assists, needs one to move into 10th place on the list, joining Gale Kerbaugh and Kathy Riley.

A win for the Lady Pirates would be the 180th for head coach Pat Pierson in her career.

NCAA Forms A New Group To Handle Advisory Position

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — A new group will soon join NCAA schools in the debate concerning what's best for college athletes. The new group is college athletes.

Legislation setting up a 16-member student advisory committee drew far less attention than other actions of the 83rd annual NCAA convention, which ended Wednesday. But Executive Director Dick Schultz, and others, believe it could be one of the most significant actions the ruling body of college sports has taken.

"I think this is a giant step forward," Schultz said. "It's going to be very important now to establish a structure where we can pick very interested student-athletes who will take the responsibility seriously and do their homework."

The more than 1,800 delegates gave unanimous approval to the resolution. The students won't be able to write or introduce legislation to NCAA conventions, but for the first time in the organization's long and sometimes checkered history, the voice of the students is going to be heard.

"My personal feeling is that this is just a starting point," Schultz said. "I hope this will prove very effective and the 16-member group, if it functions properly, can be expanded over time. I think this can be very effective."

While NCAA students secured a victory in one round, many might say they suffered a serious reversal with the elimination of the "partial qualifier" as spelled out in Proposition 48. By a 163-154 vote on Wednesday, Division I schools reversed their decision on Tuesday and closed the only loophole available to high school prospects who do not meet all the controversial freshman-eligibility standards of Proposition 48.

A partial qualifier is a high school graduate with a 2.0 overall grade point average who does not meet other Proposition 48 requirements such as minimum test scores or a 2.0 average in college preparatory courses.

Since Proposition 48 went into effect three years ago, an estimated 1,800 athletes have received scholarship under the partial qualifier provision. Beginning in 1990, there will be no partial qualifiers, and high school prospects will have to meet all eligibility requirements.

Previously, partial qualifiers could receive full scholarship aid but had to sit out their freshman year and then have only three years of eligibility left.

"I have to admit I was a little surprised that it passed," Schultz said, noting that several other measures aimed at altering Proposition 48 were defeated. "What they were really doing was strengthening Prop 48."

Now, partial qualifiers will face the same dilemma as non-qualifiers — having to pay their own expenses in their freshman year while not playing or practicing in their sport. They may receive scholarships as sophomores if they complete 24 credit hours, but will have only three years of eligibility.

An NCAA spokesman in Mission, Kan., said about 600 partial qualifiers had been admitted each of the three years Proposition 48 has been in effect.

"This will affect not just black kids, but poor kids who are black, white and other shades," said Jim Frank, commissioner of the predominantly black Southwestern Athletic Conference.

Black educators have generally opposed Proposition 48 on the basis that the college entrance exams are discriminatory against minority and economically disadvantaged students.

"It means that a great many kids who cannot afford to pay their own costs for their freshman year will never get the opportunity for a college education," Frank said.

The rule takes effect in 1990 and does not affect anyone currently enrolled.

The request to reconsider was made by Alan Williams of Virginia, chairman of the infractions committee.

"We came to the convention intending to vote to eliminate the partial qualifiers, but were told the presidents Commission opposed it," Williams said. "Then we learned the presidents were not really that adamant."

Most delegates seem to believe the tougher standards are having an effect.

"The overwhelming group of students seem to be much, much better prepared for college than they used to be, because of Prop 48," Williams said. "But there seems to be a persistent group of people who do not take academics seriously because they felt they had a way out through the partial qualifier provision. That's the group we were looking at."

Frank, the only black president in NCAA history, was president when Proposition 48 was adopted in 1983.

"I would disagree with those who say this action by the convention was punitive in nature," he said. "But this is the way they wanted Proposition 48 to read from the very beginning, and now they've got it the way they want."

"I don't like it," Nebraska athletic director Bob Devaney said. "I don't see what's wrong with giving a kid a second chance. I don't think our coaches are going to like it either."

"It's unfair not only for minorities but for persons of low income," said Al Avant, athletic director at Chicago State University. "But whether or not that proposal passed, Proposition 48 is a failure. It's just an attempt by the NCAA to look good."

"Obviously, this was not an athletic consideration, but an academic consideration," said Steve Sloan, Alabama athletic director whose Southeastern Conference sponsored the proposal. "And it is in no way meant to exploit anybody. We feel this will only strengthen athletes' academic preparation and academic performance."

Holley Named ECU's Volleyball MVP

Jemma Holley, a junior on East Carolina University's women's volleyball team, was named the team's most valuable player at an awards banquet held this week.

Holley, an outside hitter from Teachey, led the Lady Pirates with 243 kills on the season. Ranked fourth in the final Colonial Athletic Association standings, she became the first ECU player to be named to the all-conference team.

Traci Smith and Michelle McIntosh were named as the top offensive and defensive players, respectively, while Debbie Tate received the coaches' award.

Smith, a senior middle hitter from High Point, was the top offensive player with 22 blocks and 21 block assists. She also led the team in service aces with 42, fourth in the CAA.

McIntosh, a junior outside hitter from Morehead City, led the CAA in digs with 384 and a 4.17 dig average. She finished 11th in dig average in the American Volleyball Coaches Association's statistical rankings.

Tate, a junior outside hitter from Greenville, was ranked third in digs and was rated a team leader for the Lady Pirates.

Cox Outwrestles Northwoods Park, 56-27

WINTERVILLE — A.G. Cox Middle School rolled up a 56-27 wrestling victory over Northwoods Park in a junior high school match Wednesday.

Cox won 10 weight classes. Pins were recorded by Torrence Smith, Danny Via, Dewey Collins, Demetrius Lynch, Shondiel Ruffin, Kendrick Ruffin, Terry Turnage and Robbie Wilson. A technical fall was won by Percy Rogers and a decision by Matt Leggett.

Cox is now 10-0 and returns to action Tuesday at P.S. Jones of Washington.

Greenville Swimmers Take Part In Meet

The Greenville Gators competed in the Goldsboro Juicy Fruit "B" Invitational Swim Meet recently.

Greenville will host its annual Pirate Invitational Swim Meet on Feb. 11-12 at Minges Natatorium.

Greenville members placing in the Goldsboro meet were:

 Eight and under boys: David Simo, 1st in 25 breast in 20:76 (new club record); Stephen Phillips, 2nd in 100 free in 1:18.21; 7th in 25 free in 16:20; 2nd in 25 back in 19:06; 2nd in 50 free in 42:17 and 3rd in 50 free in 35:84.
 11-12 girls: Kristy Cain, 6th in 100 fly in 1:18.20.
 13-14 boys: Leo Kishore, 4th in 200 fly in 2:46.57; 2nd in 400 IM in 5:37.52; 4th in 100 back in 1:17.20; Ken Ferebee, 6th in 100 free in 1:04.61; Barry Simo, 4th in 200 back in 3:00.48; 6th in 200 free in 2:28.26; 5th in 100 back in 1:29.38 and 5th in 200 IM in 2:51.03.

Banks Is Jailed In Atlanta Again

ATLANTA (AP) — San Diego Chargers linebacker Chip Banks was jailed in Atlanta Wednesday night on charges of holding a woman against her will and sexually assaulting her.

Banks, 29, of Augusta, was arrested by Atlanta police Wednesday on charges of false imprisonment, aggravated sodomy, possession of cocaine and possession of less than an ounce of marijuana, a city detention center spokeswoman said.

Banks, who did not play football this year because of a contract dispute with the Chargers, had a court appearance scheduled for Thursday, she said.

Banks had been free on bond while awaiting trial on an October arrest. He was stopped during a routine road block Oct. 14 and was charged with possession of cocaine, possession of marijuana and driving without a license, Atlanta police Sgt. G.E. Smith said.

Atlanta police spokesman Keith Williams said the new charges stem from an incident that began about 1 a.m. Wednesday.

Sgt. Micky Lloyd, with the department's Sex Crime Unit, said preliminary reports indicate the woman went with Banks to the apartment, but resisted his advances.

She alleges that she was then forced to perform oral sex and was not allowed to leave for several hours, Lloyd said.

Banks played five seasons with the Cleveland Browns before being traded to the Chargers in 1987.

Kimball Suddenly Changes Plea To Guilty

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — As testimony began, Olympic diver Bruce Kimball unexpectedly switched his plea to guilty in his drunken-driving manslaughter trial, admitting that he sped into a crowd of teen-agers last summer, killing two and injuring four.

The first witness, a deputy, was describing seeing body pieces strewn along a stretch of pitch-black roadway and the state was ready to introduce color pictures of the gory scene when the 25-year-old athlete changed his mind.

Couples Shoots a 65 To Take Lead

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — Fred Couples shot a 7-under-par 65 to take the first-round lead in the Bob Hope Classic.

Couples made nine birdies in his round at Indian Wells, the shortest and easiest of the four desert resort courses used for the first 72 holes of the 90-hole event.

Jim Gallagher, Brad Bryant and Peter Jacobsen, the other first-round pace-setters, all played at the 6,478-yard Indian Wells course.

Tar Heels...

Koubek each finished with 12 points while Henderson and Robert Brickey had 11 apiece.

Jimmy Apple was the only William & Mary player in double figures with 13 points.

Duke outplayed the Tribe in every category, outrebounding them 49-21 and committing only 12 fouls to 24 for William & Mary. Thanks to the foul difference, Duke outscored the Tribe 20-4 from the free-throw line.

Wake Forest.....84 Stetson.....73

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Sam Ivey scored 18 points and Wake Forest outscored Stetson 19-8 to open the second half on its way to a 84-73 victory Wednesday.

The Deacons, 8-4, surged from a 46-40 halftime lead to go ahead 65-48. The Hatters, 7-5, rallied to within 72-66 with 4:22 left, but Wake Forest scored the next six points.

Ivy hit eight of 13 shots and grabbed seven rebounds, doing most of his work against the Stetson front line.

David Carlyle had 17 points for the Deacons, while Chris King had 16 and Robert Siler 10.

Randy Anderson led Stetson with 23 points, but he fouled out with 3:40 left, and the Hatters' comeback staffed Derrall Dumas added 16 points, while Terry Johnson had 10 points and nine assists.

The Hatters lost point guard Frank Ireland five minutes into the game when he suffered a possible broken nose.

Wake Forest outrebounded Stetson, 39-20, led by Carlyle's nine boards.

The loss was the Hatters' 22nd in 25 games lifetime against Atlantic Coast Conference teams.

Clemson.....88 Virginia.....70

CLEMSON, S.C. — Clemson coach Cliff Ellis found plenty to praise after the Tigers beat Virginia 88-70 in an Atlantic Coast Conference game Wednesday night.

"We went out and played aggressively and at times we were awesome," Ellis said.

Eldon Campbell had 20 points and Clemson scored 18 of the first 21 points in the second half.

Derrick Forrest and Jerry Pryor combined for 10 points during the 18-3 run that gave the Tigers a 28-point lead, 55-27, with 14:38 left.

Virginia cut the deficit to 77-68 with 1:14 to go. But Clemson, 9-3 overall and 2-1 in the ACC, scored 11 of the final 13 points, including four each by Forrest and Tim Kincaid.

The Cavaliers, 7-6 and 0-2, lost their fifth straight game.

"Now, I didn't say we were an awesome team," Ellis said. "I said at times we were awesome. At other times we weren't. We got a little careless but I don't want to take anything away from our team. It was one of our better games, if not the best game of the season."

Acting Virginia coach Dave Odom, filling in for Terry Holland while Holland recovers from surgery, said the Cavaliers couldn't regroup after falling behind by 13 points at the half.

Clemson held a 26-22 lead with 3:43 remaining in the first half before going on an 11-2 run for the 37-24 halftime lead.

The Cavaliers chipped away at Clemson's lead in the second half. Richard Morgan's jumper made it 70-57 with 5:24 left and John Crotty cut it to 77-68 with a 3-pointer with 1:14 to go.

But the Tigers held on as Marion Cash and Kincaid made seven of eight free throws and Forrest scored on two layups.

"We tried to get our minds and bodies in concert with each other," Odom said. "I thought it was Clemson's night and they made the most of it. They took advantage of things we gave them and we had a hard time doing that in reverse."

Forrest scored 18 for Clemson and Pryor added 14. The Cavaliers were led by Morgan, who had 19. Crotty scored 16 and Bryant Stith added 15.

Clemson held the Cavaliers to 34.2 percent shooting, including eight of 29 in the first half. Clemson shot 52.9 percent for the game.

Georgetown Rolls Past Pittsburgh, 76-57

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

When John Thompson talks, people listen. Especially his own players.

So when the Georgetown coach told John Turner to contribute more to the team's effort, he did. Turner scored 18 points and had 11 rebounds Wednesday night as seventh-ranked Hoyas beat Pittsburgh 76-57 in the Big East.

"John and I had a little conversation, and I think he heard what I said," Thompson said. "All of it wasn't kind, but it wasn't cruel."

Thompson took aside Turner, a junior college transfer, on Tuesday and said Georgetown was relying too much on Olympic guard Charles Smith and freshman center Alonzo Mourning.

"He just told me to rebound, to help Alonzo on the boards," Turner said. "That's what I did."

Mourning, who scored 15 points and blocked seven shots, noticed the difference.

"He took a lot of pressure off me," Mourning said. "He was picking up the loose balls, dumping them back in, helping us all out."

In other Top Twenty games, No. 1 Duke routed William & Mary 100-38, No. 8 North Carolina stopped Maryland 88-72, No. 9 Louisville downed South Carolina 75-52, No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas got past Fresno State 83-77, No. 13 Seton Hall defeated Iona 74-58, No. 14 Florida State beat Jacksonville 85-70 and No. 17 Tennessee topped LSU 100-96.

Smith scored 19 points and Georgetown held Pitt to 19 points in the first half. Smith began the game with 999 points and became the 24th Georgetown player to score 1,000 in his career.

The Hoyas improved to 11-1 overall and 1-1 in the conference. They are 7-0 against the Panthers at the Capital Centre.

Pitt, 7-6 and 1-2, has lost two straight games for the first time since Coach Paul Evans took over in 1986.

"It could be three in a row," Evans said. "We've got Oklahoma on Saturday."

"I picked Georgetown as the team to beat in the Big East, and they're just going to get better," he said. "We were kind of happy we were hitting them this early, so I hate to see what's going to happen later in the season."

Georgetown put away Pitt early. The Hoyas scored nine straight points for a 15-4 lead and were ahead 30-19 at halftime.

Turner started a 12-2 streak that made it 61-38 with 7½ minutes left. Brian Shorter scored 16 points for Pitt.

The Pirates trailed 13-3 in the first six minutes before scoring 17 straight points. Volcy led the spurt with six points.

John Morton got 17 of his 18 points in the second half to preserve the lead. Seton Hall, 14-1, won its first game since losing by 34 points at No. 4 Syracuse on Saturday.

Sean Green scored 15 for the host Gaels, 6-8.

RICHMOND — Before the season began, East Carolina's basketball team had a young, thin bench to work with. Now it's even more so.

Just Tuesday the Pirates lost Kevin Staples indefinitely. Staples was suspended from the team prior to the Richmond game, an 83-56 Pirate loss, after being arrested and charged with breaking and entering and theft charges.

The loss of Staples currently leaves the Pirates with only nine players dressing out for games.

"Certainly it hurt us to lose him," East Carolina coach Mike Steele said. "It was definitely a shock to me."

The Pirates already had lost point guard Jimmy Hinton, who left the squad for personal reasons on December 16.

Add to that freshman center Brooks Bryant, who underwent arthroscopic knee surgery on Dec. 28 and is expected to be out until the end of February, and the Pirates' bench is in desperate need.

"Hopefully, Brooks will be back ready before then (the end of February)," Steele said. "We'll just have to wait and see."

Against the Spiders, the bench consisted of junior Reed Lose and three freshman guards, Robin House, Jeff Perlich and Jay Scherer.

Except for Lose, who had 16 points, the Pirates got only three free throws from the rest of the bench, one from House and a pair from Perlich.

In field goal shooting, House was 0-5 from the field and Scherer was 0-2.

"Those guys are young, they need some experience," Steele said. "But right now our bench is in very bad shape."

One of the options Steele has is to put freshman 6-7 Casey Mote on the active roster. Mote is currently being red-shirted by Steele.

"That is an option for us," Steele said. "But it's an option that I hope we don't have to use."

With only nine players available against Richmond, Pirate shooting guard Kenny Murphy had to shrug off the fact that he was running a 100-plus fever and battling sickness and play.

Murphy, who played 28 minutes, was 1-4 from the floor for the game, scoring two points.

"Murph wasn't at his best for us but he probably shouldn't have even been playing," Steele said.

Senior point guard Jeff Kelly has a good shot at becoming the Pirates' all-time career assist leader before the season is over.

Kelly, who dished out two assists against Richmond, is currently in third place on the all-time list with 196.

Curt Vanderhorst, who played for ECU from 1982-1986, sits atop the list with 232 career assists, while Scott Hardy (1984-1986) is second with 203.

When the Pirates topped William & Mary 75-59 last Saturday, Kelly had the most assists of his career as he dished out nine against the Indians.

ECU returns to action Saturday at home against James Madison and the game figures to be a sell-out with the main attraction being Dukes' coach Lefty Driesell.

The Dukes were picked to finish at the bottom of the conference this year by the media and coaching geniuses of the league, but they have exceeded all expectations by posting a 9-5 overall mark and a 2-0 CAA record.

Included in that is a 84-82 win over pre-season top pick American Wednesday in Harrisonburg.

Spiders...

"We can't beat anybody if Blue only plays 23 minutes," Steele said.

Lose cut the lead under 10 points for the final time with 11:48 left with a 3-pointer from the left wing.

The Spiders quickly countered the score by Lose with baskets from Winiecki and Jacksonville native Benji Taylor to push the score to 56-43.

Edwards got back into the game and added a layup before fouling out with 7:29 to play. Edwards fifth foul was called when he was battling for a loose ball.

"He went straight up in the air, jumped higher than anybody on the court and gets called for a foul," Steele said. "He got two of the worse calls I've ever seen tonight."

From there, the rout by the Spiders was on. English scored twice inside and Jim Shields added a tip in to push the Richmond lead to 67-48 with 5:53 to play.

The Pirates broke the Spider run with a free throw by Stanley Love with 4:55 left. Seconds later, however, Hill picked up his fifth foul and left the game.

Richmond then ran off seven straight points capped by a steal and a layup from Stapleton with 3:36 left to put the Spiders up 74-49.

"At the start of the season when I looked at our schedule I said we had to get a split in these first two conference games," Steele said. "We're 1-1 and we've got to pull together now. Even if we had lost by two or three points tonight, we'd still be 1-1."

GCA's Parker, Cherry Lead Area In Scoring

Clint Parker and Joanie Cherry, both of Greenville Christian Academy are the leaders in scoring for the area after the first month-plus of the 1988-89 season.

Parker holds a slim edge over Trinity Christian School's Kirk Welch through games of Tuesday night, while Cherry has a two-point per game lead over Williamston's Kim Hawkins and North Pitt's Keisha Pilgreen. Those five players are the only ones in the area averaging 20 or more points a game thus far.

Parker leads the boys' scoring with a 20.6 average, just ahead of Welch, who comes in with a 20.0 mark. Guy Spruill of Williamston is third with an 18.4 average.

Rounding out the top five are Ayden-Grifton's Ronnell Peterson with an 18.2 mark and Farmville Central's Jarvis Lang at 18.1.

Lang holds the high single game mark for the season, having scored 40 points against Charles B. Aycock last week.

Cherry leads the way among the girls with a 22.5 average. That puts her up on Hawkins, who comes in at 20.4, and Pilgreen, who has a 20.3 mark.

Lendora Tyson of Conley and Chrylene Myers of Chocowinity are tied for fourth place with 17.7 averages.

Trinity is the leading boys' team on offense in the area, averaging 68.1 points a game. Farmville Central is hot on the Eagles' heels, however, with a 68.0 mark, followed by Greenville Christian at 65.0.

Trinity also leads the defense among the boys, giving up 42.9 points a game. Chocowinity is a distant second, allowing 49.4 points a game, while Rose is third with a 50.3 average.

Farmville Central tops the girls' teams on offense with a 56.2 average. Chocowinity is second, scoring 54.9 while North Pitt is close behind at 54.6.

On defense, Trinity leads the way, allowing 34.6 points a game. Rose is second at 35.4 followed by Chocowinity at 36.7.

Jordan Held To 24, But Bulls Top Hornets

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — On a night when he scored a mere 24 points, Michael Jordan was still more than the Charlotte Hornets could handle.

Jordan turned decoy and playmaker and led the Chicago Bulls to a 106-101 victory over the Hornets at the soldout Charlotte Coliseum Wednesday. Jordan was credited with 10 assists.

"Michael is so good at seeing what's going on," the Bulls' Craig Hodges said. He'd say, 'Hodge, they're coming off you every time to get me. Find a spot.' And the next time he'd hit me. You couldn't ask for a better shot."

Hodges, a recent Chicago acquisition, scored 14, including eight in the fourth quarter when the Bulls were fending off a Hornet rally. Scottie Pippen had 24 points and Horace Grant scored 16.

"It's tough to defend them when the other guys are active and looking for their shots," Charlotte's Kurt Rambis said. "Michael's very good at accepting the double team so if the other guys want it, it's probably going to be there."

Coach Dick Harter said: "We gave 'em every outside shot you could imagine, but I don't know what else to do. I'd like to see us recover a little faster and contest those, but I'm not sure it's possible to do that and do something with Jordan, too. What do you suggest? That we play him straight up? I don't think that would have worked very well either."

Charlotte's chosen strategy worked for awhile. Along with the rebounding of Rambis (14) and the shooting of Robert Reid and Rex Chapman (combined 19 of 37 for 49 points), it kept the expansion team in the game until the final minute.

Chapman and Reid wiped out an eight-point Bullet lead at the start of the fourth quarter. When Chapman hit a 15-footer with 7:22 left to play, Charlotte led 85-82.

But the Bulls rallied behind Hodges and went ahead 87-85 less than 90 seconds after that. It was tied two more times before Hodges' jumper, after a loose-ball scramble, put Chicago ahead at 91-89 with 4:15 to play.

The Hornets cut it to two twice more, and in the last 2:12 had three cracks at tying the game again.

But Pippen, who had two fourth-quarter blocks, batted away Earl Cureton's layup. And Robert Reid misfired on two jumpers.

Reid said that he was bumped on the first attempt, with 1:50 left. On the next one, 30 seconds after Kelly Tripucka had forced Jordan's sixth turnover, he was wide open from 18 feet on the right wing. But his mind was on other things.

"It was a good shot and I just should have gone ahead and shot it," Reid said. "But as I went up I was thinking maybe one of our guys was going to flash open down low. They didn't and I was off (with the shot)."

Chicago ran the lead to four after that when Bill Cartwright hit two free throws with 63 seconds left. The 7-footer wasn't much of a factor (9 points, five rebounds), but he got those two after drawing a foul from Rambis in the low post.

Jordan put the game away after that. Tripucka drove into the lane and was stripped of the ball. Jordan ended up with it on the break. His two points put the Bulls up 101-95 with 47 seconds left.

"On that play I just didn't get a call," Tripucka said. "But overall I think we've got to a better job of handling the double team at the end of a game. There are easy shots there but we're not getting them."

Pacers 127, Celtics 108
The last time the Indiana Pacers won at Boston Garden, Rik Smits was 11 years old and living in Holland.

On Wednesday night, the suddenly revived Pacers earned their fourth straight victory as Smits, a 7-foot-4 rookie center, helped them past the Boston Celtics 127-108 with a career-high 21 points. Chuck Person led Indiana with 29 points.

The Pacers, who now are 3-0 under new coach Dick Versace, won for the first time in their last 19 starts on the famed parquet floor in Boston, dating back to April 2, 1978.

The victory also ended Indiana's season-long 15-game losing streak on the road.

"We took advantage of what the Celtics gave us," Smits said. "Hitting the early shots really gave me confidence and got my game going."

The former Marist College star started in place of injured Steve Stipanovich and connected on 9 of 10 shots from the floor — most of them dunks — and three of four free throw attempts.

"We were running the floor, I was getting open and the guys were giving the ball to me," Smits said.

The Pacers hit 60 percent from the floor on 48-of-80 shooting. The Celtics managed just 44 of 105 for 41.9 percent.

Boston was led by Kevin McHale with 21 points and Jim Paxson with 20.

76ers 103, Nets 94
Charles Barkley scored 25 points and sparked a fourth-quarter rally as Philadelphia defeated New Jersey for its third straight victory.

Barkley scored 13 points in the fourth period and spearheaded a 24-3 run that saw New Jersey go scoreless for 4:15.

Ron Anderson scored 24 points for Philadelphia, 10 in the fourth period, and Mike Gminski added 17. Morris had 20 points and Williams 17 for New Jersey, which lost its third straight game.

Knicks 100, Pistons 93
Mark Jackson scored four of his 19 points in the final 1:04 to fuel a 7-0 burst that gave New York its third straight victory over the Pistons this season.

Patrick Ewing's free throw broke a 91-91 tie and put the Knicks ahead to stay.

Jackson added seven rebounds and seven assists, while Rod Strickland scored 16 points and Gerald Wilkins 15 for the Knicks.

Detroit was led by Bill Laimbeer with 21 points. The Pistons' Joe Dumars suffered a possible broken left hand when he fouled Wilkins with 3:28 left in the game.

Bucks 123, Nuggets 106
Larry Krystkowiak scored a career-high 27 points and helped ignite a 15-2 spurt to open the fourth quarter as Milwaukee ran past Denver and picked up its fourth straight victory.

Paul Pressey had six points and Krystkowiak four in the decisive burst, giving the Bucks a 104-88 lead with 8:12 remaining.

Milwaukee, which has won eight of its last nine games, got 25 points from Terry Cummings and 17 from Pressey, including 11 in the final quarter.

Denver, suffering its fifth straight road loss, was led by 27 points from Lafayette Lever.

Rockets 122, Spurs 117 OT
Purvis Short scored six of his 26 points in overtime, and Houston got past San Antonio despite blowing a 27-point lead.

Short, whose previous high this season was 17 points, carried the load for the Rockets after Akeem Olajuwon, who scored 29 points, fouled out two minutes into the extra period.

San Antonio pulled even three times before the extra period. The last tie was 106-106 on rookie Vernon Maxwell's 3-point basket with 15 seconds left.

Maxwell finished with a career-high 29 points.

Cavaliers 124, Suns 121

Larry Nance scored 22 of his 28 points in the second half and John Williams had 11 of his 27 in the fourth quarter as Cleveland snapped the Suns' 11-game home winning streak.

Cleveland, owners of the NBA's best overall record at 25-6 after winning for the 12th time in the last 13 games, went ahead to stay at 107-106 on Mark Price's jumper with 6:13 remaining. It was the 30th lead change in the game.

Two jumpers by Nance, sandwiched around a Williams layin, gave Cleveland a 122-115 lead with 1:43 remaining.

Nance added 13 rebounds, while Price had 24 points. Tom Chambers paced the Suns with 28 points.

Kings 106, Clippers 104

Kenny Smith hit a 20-foot jumper with one second left, capping a 23-point performance and lifting Sacramento over the Los Angeles Clippers.

The shot ended a nine-game road losing streak for the Kings, who got 18 points from Rodney McCray. The Clippers, losers of seven straight games, were paced by Quintin Dailey's 26 points and 21 by rookie Charles Smith.

Charles Smith went to the foul line with 16 seconds left and made the first free throw. He missed on the second try, got the rebound and converted the layin to tie the score 104-104 with 13 seconds left.

The Kings inbounced from mid-court, and Kenny Smith hit the game-winning shot from the left side.

Warriors 107, Mavericks 106
Winston Garland's 10-foot jumper with one second remaining gave Golden State a victory and extended the Dallas Mavericks' losing streak to five games.

Mark Aguirre, who had averaged only 13.8 points in his last four games, scored a season-high 41 points for Dallas. But Dallas still extended its longest losing streak since February 1986.

Chris Mullin scored 13 of his 35 points in the fourth quarter and rookie Mitch Richmond added 27 for the Warriors, who won for the eighth time in their last 10 home games.

Allison Still Hurting, But Wants To Return

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CONCORD — His badly injured hip still hurts and his memory is still hazy more than six months after a crash during a Winston Cup race, but Bobby Allison says he still wants to return to the circuit.

"The one thing I've done all my life is drive race cars," Allison said. "I certainly miss it a lot and I long to return. I don't know exactly where I am on that right now."

"I hope I won't be guilty of trying to come back too soon," he added.

The 50-year-old stock car racing legend was the big drawing card at Wednesday's media tour sponsored by the Charlotte Motor Speedway, cracking jokes with reporters and refusing to rule out a return to the Winston Cup circuit.

"I guess I could live without racing if I had to, but my wish is to return," Allison said as his wife Judy looked on. "I want to get back in there and go."

Allison suffered severe injuries last June 19 in a Winston Cup race at Pocono, Penn. He was hospitalized more than 100 days and is still undergoing intensive therapy for his injuries.

Doctors back in Allison's home state of Alabama have told him that it will be at least six weeks before they can remove rods that were surgically inserted into his hip.

Allison did make a brief visit with reporters during last fall's Oakwood Homes 500 race at the Charlotte Motor Speedway. He has not done any interviews since then.

"How are you feeling?" one reporter asked.

"I'll tell ya, I've felt better," Allison replied with a wink.

Allison shared anecdotes about his time in the hospital, including the day shortly after the crash when he woke up and realized he was not in his own bed.

"I thought, 'How did I get here?,' he said. "I said what I've got to do is break out. When I put my leg on the floor and realized it was broken, I thought, 'They must really want me here if they broke my leg.'"

Turning serious, Allison spoke frankly about his memory lapses, which continue to haunt him to this day.

"The doctors tell me all this stuff (injuries) will go away but they also tell me not to expect it to happen overnight," he said.

Sponsors Widen The Field For 1989 Grammy Awards

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — The 1989 Grammys competition promises to be more spirited and less predictable than in its previous 30 years, but singer-songwriter Tracy Chapman and pop-soul master George Michael appear to be favorites.

The National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences has widened the field of nominees by adding awards categories for heavy metal-hard rock and rap music.

The nominations were to be announced today.

Miss Chapman, whose album of ballads and topical songs has sold more than 2 million copies, was a surprise star amid the year's techno-pop and thriving heavy metal sounds.

Her "Fast Car" single was a Top 10 hit, and the album named after her contained several other nuggets, such as the driving "For My Lover." Nominations seem certain for best song, best album, best single, best new artist, best female pop vocalist and best contemporary folk performance.

Michael's "Faith" LP has sold more than 6 million copies and has spawned six hits, including several crossover hits on pop and soul charts.

Michael, whose musical style has changed considerably — some would say pretentiously — since the days when he was half of the pop duo Wham!, should be in line for best song, single and album and best performances that could encompass the pop, rock and rhythm and blues categories.

TRACY CHAPMAN

who could get multiple nods include Steve Winwood for his "Roll With It" song and LP; INXS for their "Kick" album and "Need You Tonight-Mediate" single; and Terence Trent D'Arby's debut album.

Forecasting Grammy winners is no longer the easy job it once was, Billboard magazine columnist Paul Grein said Wednesday.

"The academy has recruited many new members, most of them younger and more ready to give rock its due," he said. "It's much harder now to get a handle on what they do. Once it was pretty easy to just line up whoever fit in the Barbra Streisand-Doozie Brothers-Billy Joel middle of the road form. Now those acts still do well, but they also recognize rock acts like Prince, U2 and Bruce Springsteen."

The nominations with an all-time high 76 categories were culled this year from a record 6,800 entries released between Oct. 1, 1987 and Sept. 30, 1988. Besides hard rock-heavy metal and rap, best bluegrass was added as a new award.

Ballots will be mailed Jan. 18 to the academy's voting members, who include musicians, recording technicians and industry executives.

Winners will be announced in Los Angeles on Feb. 22 during a televised awards ceremony on CBS from 8 p.m. to 11 p.m. EST. Billy Crystal will be the host.

Actress Rejected Another Role To Play Lesbian In 'HeartBeat'

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The creator of ABC's "HeartBeat" wanted Gail Strickland to play a doctor's wife, but she opted for the role of a lesbian nurse-practitioner.

"I heard of the project from Sara Davidson, who was the writer and creator," said Strickland, who stars in this series set in a women's medical clinic.

"We've been friends for a long time. She said she wrote it with me in mind for one of the characters. But as I read the script I found the character didn't appeal to me. It was the charming, sophisticated wife of a doctor, and I'd played that kind of role too many times.

"But the role of the nurse-practitioner, Marilyn McGrath, appealed to me very much. She was funny and wise and had a way of dealing with things I found interesting."

The character was also gay, and Strickland's portrayal, beginning with the series' brief run last year, is the first openly lesbian character on series television.

"It wasn't the fact that she was gay that I found interesting," said Strickland. "It was the other aspects of the character. Her sense of humor was very much like my own. After I read the script I asked for the role. I didn't give much consideration to the fact that she was gay."

Apparently a lot of other people have. She said a number of viewers' letters have complained about the character's sexual preference, but an equal number have praised her portrayal.

McGrath is a fertility expert and one of the founders of the clinic, Women's Medical Arts. The series also stars Carmen Argenziano, Laura Johnson, Darrell Larson, Ben Masters, Kate Mulgrew, Julie Ronnie and Lynn Whitfield.

"Marilyn has a long-term relationship that was explored the first season," Strickland said. "She also has an estranged daughter from an earlier marriage. The character was able to say a few things about homosexuality that don't usually get said on the air."

"She's accepted and respected by her peers. It hasn't been an issue in the first six episodes we did. What's fun about the show is that we're all different. We've all been defined in our goals and how we relate to each other. The friendships we've developed with the other actors I've noticed are showing up in the scripts as friendships between the characters."

Strickland grew up in Birmingham, Ala., and went to school at Florida State University at Tallahassee.

Country-Western Club May Close

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — They're heading for the last roundup at the 40-year-old Bar Double-R Ranch. But the trail bosses hope they can find a new pasture for the only no-cover, no-minimum, country-western basement nightclub in downtown Chicago.

An office skyscraper is planned for the site where the Sundowners trio entertains the crowd, and 30 varieties of chili are served to the folks who stroll in off Randolph Street.

The movie theater next door has already been closed, but the Ranch is still filled with the sounds of guitar picking — for a few more weeks.

If the owners can't find a new location before the wrecking ball strikes, the Sundowners will have to find a new place to hang their white Stetsons, and night owls will no longer be able to find a $3.15 "chili mac tamale cheese salami bowl" at 3 a.m.

However, co-owner Arthur Brown is optimistic he'll find a place for the Ranch, which has been at its current location since 1978.

"Both of its previous sites got torn down, too," he said Wednesday.

"They tell us we've got three or four weeks, maybe a bit longer," Brown said. "We're looking at various sites in the downtown area. Most of the nightlife seems to be moving to River North, but I don't think River North is for us."

River North, a fashionable neighborhood with loft condominiums and art deco restaurants, might not be the best place for a club that has a barbed wire collection behind the bar and "Bulls" and "Heifers" signs on the restrooms.

River North's nouvelle sensibilities also might be offended by the Ranch's menu, which features items such as the "Jesse James Steak (A Steal!)" and the occasional ornery patron.

When the music's going good and the club is near its 200-patron capacity, the cook, who calls himself "Little Bill," sometimes has to double as waiter and calmer of the crowd.

"When the parties get a little wild, you might find someone who wants to pull a little strip show, and I've got to stop them," he explained.

For singer and guitarist Bob Boyd, 57, the Ranch has been home since he left Chattanooga, Tenn., 35 years ago.

"Don (Walls), Curt (Delaney) and I have been the Sundowners most of our adult lives," Boyd said. "We do about seven sets on a good night, mixing in a little blues and a little pop with a lot of C&W."

"We keep four big books with a few thousand songs in them up by the bandstand in case we get an odd request — the tunes are usually no problem, but you can forget the words."

"Mostly, though, the old songs wear the best. Over the years, we've had the most requests for Roy Acuff's version of 'The Wabash Cannonball' and old Bob Wills' 'San Antonio Rose.'"

The Sundowners are the only act advertised on the Ranch's street-level sign, but other entertainers have been known to walk down the steps and sit in for a set or two. Red Foley, Eddie Arnold, Gene Autry and Mel Tillis are among those who have dropped in over the years.

"We know most of their songs," Boyd said. "Frankly, being at it as long as we have, we know most of everybody's songs. When we don't know a song — then that's what I'd call an odd request."

Acting 'For Love'

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Tom Selleck says he's drawing big bucks for his movie roles but that he'd play some parts without the pay.

"I'd do a walk-on in a Woody Allen movie," said the star of the former "Magnum, P.I." detective series. "But you don't want to call up a person and seem to be pandering by saying, 'Please let me into one of your movies.'"

"People say, 'We could never get Tom for this nice little movie, because he's too expensive,'" Selleck said in an interview in February's McCall's magazine.

"Some movies, if they can't afford your price, you do them for love," said Selleck.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY Jan. 13

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Study a challenging situation before acting. It is a fun day to make new friends and socialize. Keep an open mind to activities.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): A difficult workload has you in a frenzy. The evening can be set aside for needed rest. A prosperous financial streak is in the making.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): A fragile situation can worsen if you do not use good judgment. Your social charisma is powerful today. Surround yourself with friends.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You are appreciated, and someone demonstrates it. Positive attitudes and a sense of sharing put you high on the popularity list.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): While in your present creative mood, enjoy the arts. Avoid asking someone else to keep a secret. Adapt to a change in plans in the evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): People around you seem to be at cross-purposes. Plan a pleasant weekend journey. Hot tempers cool regarding family matters.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Personal time may be at a premium today; choices must be made over a new romantic tie. Remember your plans for tomorrow, and rest today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): A friend asks for help with a problem. Put energy into new contacts and exciting people. You can have it all when you are patient.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Your good business sense and originality lead to progress. Stay with familiar routines. Contact close friends for evening fun.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): This day will turn out better than it starts. You are overextended, but you will manage to complete the tasks on your full schedule.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): You have feelings for an affectionate friend. Try a new approach that is less demanding. Watch your cash flow, and curb spending.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Take advantage of a new situation. Focus on personal projects that need attention. Hobnob with a friend who has many original ideas.

Opening lead: Seven of ♣

One of the more important developments of the recent Fall North American Championships was the formation of an organization for young bridge players. In this respect the American Contract Bridge League has trailed far behind the rest of the world. The Europeans stage regular junior international matches and they have a European Junior Championship. The 1988 Alwater award for the best-played hand by a junior was won by a 21-year-old Scot, Alistair MacDonald.

CUT THROUGH THE ENEMY LINES

At this vulnerability, an opening bid of four spades was an accurate description of his holding. His hand was long on offense, especially since he had a fair second suit, and short on defense.

West's lead of the seven of clubs was obviously from a short suit. Paying little heed to the warning signals, most declarers won in hand and tried to draw trumps. The defenders in the East seat were able to win the ace and then return their lowest club when giving partner a club ruff. Heading the suit preference signal, West underled the ace of diamonds, allowing East to win the king and give his partner another ruff for down one.

MacDonald saw the threat. He won the first club trick in dummy, cashed the ace of hearts and continued with the jack. When East could not cover, declarer cut the defenders' communications by discarding his diamond loser. When East eventually gained the lead with the ace of trumps he was still able to give his partner a club ruff, but he had no entry back to his hand to allow the defense to score a second ruff. With the help of what is known in the trade as a "Scissors Coup," declarer was able to hold his losers to three—a trump, a heart and a club ruff.
