Saratoga Fights To Regain U.S. 264

By Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

When the stretch of U.S. 264 between Wilson and Farmville opened in October of 1987, residents from the eastern section of the state were pleased to discover a quicker transportation route to and from the central and western parts of North Carolina.

But for Saratoga, the opening of the highway meant not only the rerouting of traffic away from the small, Wilson County community's commercial center but also the loss of the 264 designation for the corridor that passes through town.

Saratoga officials had assumed in 1987 that the former U.S. 264 through town would be designated as Alternate Route 264. But when the bypass opened, state highway officials redesignated the former U.S. 264 as N.C. 91.

Now Saratoga city leaders are attempting to acquire the 264 Alternate designation and they have enlisted the help of a state senator in their efforts.

"There's been a lot of confusion over this," said Peggy Baker, Saratoga town clerk.

"A lot of truck drivers are complaining as well as the UPS (United Postal Service) people. They get on the new road and they miss us," Ms. Baker said.

She also said local businesses have been hurt by the loss in volume of traffic passing through town.

Currently a driver leaving Wilson traveling east on U.S. 264 will immediately come to a junction where N.C. 91 branches off to the left. Several miles later on U.S. 264, N.C. 91 intersects U.S. 264 and leads through Saratoga.

Easterners May Suffer In House

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Several eastern North Carolina lawmakers will likely lose their grip on committee positions as newly elected House Speaker Joe Mavretic of Edgemore County begins to hand out assignments.

Daniel T. Lilley, a Democrat from Lenoir County beginning his 11th term in the House, said he supported former House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, in the recent power struggle in the House.

In the past, Lilley said he served as chairman of the House Rules Committee and served as vice chairman of Finance and Local Government. But a coalition of Republicans and dissident Democrats banded together two weeks ago to oust Ramsey, who served as speaker for four consecutive terms. And because Lilley supported Ramsey, he said he will likely lose those posts.

"Obviously, I didn't vote right on this issue," Lilley said today in a telephone interview from his Raleigh office. "I understand the system, and to the victor goes the spoils. But I'm confident I'll direct one of the subcommittees, and I'm happy with that," he said.

Lilley said the subcommittees he has requested to serve on include: Ways and Means; Highway Fund; Rail, Airports and Waterways; Agriculture, Forestry and Horticulture, and State Government Revenue, which is a post Lilley said he believes he may land. He has also requested to serve on the Finance and Alcoholic Beverage Control committees.

Mavretic was scheduled to announce today who will serve on the Finance and Appropriations committees, two of the more powerful groups.

According to reports from the Associated Press, New Hanover County Democrat Alex Hall will probably be named Finance chairman and Surry County Democrat Dave Diamont is the likely choice

Drought Is Worst U.S. Disaster

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — The drought of 1988 was the nation's worst natural disaster on record, causing an estimated $30 billion in agricultural losses, and its related heat wave contributed to 10,000 deaths, researchers reported.

"If these data are correct, it's the Number One natural disaster in this country," said John A. Dracup, a civil engineer at the University of California, Los Angeles, who is developing ways to assess drought severity.

The second worst was the hurricane that struck Galveston, Texas, on Sept. 8, 1900, killing 6,000 people, Dracup said.

Norman Rosenberg of Resources for the Future in Washington, D.C., said more bad news is on the way.

"The drought of 1988 is not over," he said. "A large portion of the country still remains vulnerable. If we have a dry spring, we could have a very serious situation."

Rosenberg and Dracup were among a panel of experts who gathered at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science to assess the effects of the drought.

Stanley A. Changnon of the Illinois State Water Survey, who has tried to tally the damages, said the drought was slightly less severe in area and intensity than the droughts of 1932-1936 and 1953-1956.

Soviets Say Missiles Will Be Removed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VIENNA, Austria — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said today the Soviet Union will withdraw some of its short-range nuclear missiles from Eastern Europe.

Shevardnadze said a security and human rights accord approved last week by 35 nations attending a Vienna meeting had made the move possible. He said the missiles will be pulled out along with troops being withdrawn from Eastern Europe.

Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev announced in December that 50,000 Red Army troops would be pulled out of Eastern Europe over the next two years, but he made no mention of planned missile withdrawals.

Related story on A-13

Shevardnadze made the announcement to foreign ministers gathered in Vienna for the conclusion of the meeting on security and human rights.

He said the Soviet Union has long offered to negotiate removal of its tactical, or short-range, nuclear weapons and promised to withdraw them from Europe as part of the Kremlin's "fundamental objective of removing any foreign military presence and bases from the territory of other countries."

At a brief exchange with reporters after his speech, Shevardnadze made clear that only those short-range weapons that are part of the military units to be withdrawn will be removed and dismantled without conditions.

Shevardnadze said he could not say what percentage of the Kremlin's short-range stockpile would remain deployed, but he called on the West to negotiate removal of those as soon as possible.

Bush, Reagan Plan Private Farewells

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — His inaugural festivities launched amid thunderous fireworks over a sea of lights on the capital Mall, George Bush is spending his final day as vice president with plans for a private goodbye to the man he says helped make it all possible.

"It won't be too easy," Bush said of what could be his final private moment with President Reagan before he takes the oath of office.

On the eve of his inauguration as the 41st president, Bush was to meet at the White House with the outgoing chief executive as the focus of the nation's leadership was already beginning to shift.

A twilight inaugural extravaganza at the stately Lincoln Memorial on Wednesday was marked by a flyover of Navy jets, a massive fireworks display and music by the Beach Boys and other groups. Many in the crowd waved penlights handed out for the event to represent Bush's campaign theme of "a thousand points of light."

Bush told the crowd that Reagan will be a hard act to follow.

"I am following a great president and a great presidency," he said.

"We're not coming in to correct the ills of the past. We're coming in to build on a proud record."

Bush tried to stress his commitment to social justice during several appearances Wednesday, as hun-

Schools To Finish Asbestos Tests By Mid-February

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Inspections for asbestos in the Pitt County schools are well under way and should be completed by mid-February, according to Carl Grantham, director of the school system's maintenance department.

"We've completed 10 schools," Grantham said. "We won't speculate on the results until they come back from the lab."

The school system has hired Enpuricon of Raleigh at a cost of $51,900 to inspect the buildings of the school system and to help develop a management plan for handling the asbestos found.

But, initial inspections show that asbestos is not in the classrooms, said Randall Jones, survey analyst and management planner for Enpuricon. "We can't actually make a 100 percent guarantee," but the building materials in the classrooms routinely have not carried asbestos.

During inspection, a small drill is used to remove a sample of certain walls, ceilings and floors. The sample is marked, coded and sent to Carolina Environmental laboratories in Raleigh to be tested.

The holes made by the drill are sealed immediately after the sample is drawn.

It takes about a day to inspect each school, said Jones, who inspects the schools along with Jeff Childress, also of Enpuricon, and Hugh Garris of the school system's maintenance department.

The Asbestos Hazard Emergency Response Act of 1986, as regulated by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, requires a series of activities related to the elimination or control of asbestos conditions in schools nationwide.

Asbestos is a hard mineral made of fibers. Used for fireproofing and insulating, it is not consumed by fire and is not a conductor of heat.

The fibers of the asbestos are small, Jones said. About 1,000 of them side by side would make up the size of a strand of human hair.

The fibers become dangerous once they are released into the air, he said. "As long as the fibers don't become airborne they are not a problem."

Asbestos causes problems in the lungs, Albert Driver, a lung doctor with the East Carolina University School of Medicine, said.

"Asbestos can cause scar tissue to build up within the lungs and around the lungs. It can contribute to causing lung cancer. It also can cause a special kind of cancer that affects the inside lining of the chest," he said.

In addition, "the asbestos and cigarette smoking interact to cause very high rates of lung cancer," Driver said. Smokers who work in asbestos may reduce their risks of getting lung cancer if they stop smoking.

"The first effects from asbestos generally take 10 to 15 years before

Student Pleads Guilty To Gun Charge

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A D.H. Conley High School student pleaded guilty Wednesday to a felony charge of possessing a loaded sawed-off shotgun on the Rose High campus last summer and is scheduled to be sentenced Feb. 27.

Ehvin Mohamad Youssef, 17, of 2106 S. Charles St., Greenville, entered the plea in Pitt County Superior Court before Judge Herbert O. Phillips III of Morehead City.

The charge, possessing a weapon of mass destruction, carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison, a fine, or both, but Chief Assistant District Attorney Nancy Aycock said she did not expect the state to ask for an active jail sentence.

In exchange for the plea, the state agreed to dismiss a misdemeanor charge of possessing a weapon on school grounds.

Youssef, a junior at Conley, was attending a countywide session of summer school on Aug. 2, 1988, when the incident occurred. He apparently carried the shotgun on to campus, Mrs. Aycock said, and it was loaded when police arrested him.

"This shotgun was displayed to a large number of people outside of Rose High School ... and the police were called," she said.

Neither Mrs. Aycock nor Youssef's attorney, Assistant Public Defender Carlos "Buddy" Murray, commented on the reason Youssef carried the weapon to school, but Greenville Police Capt. Nelson Staton said after the arrest that Youssef claimed he needed the gun to protect himself.

At the request of Mrs. Aycock and Murray, Phillips continued the sentencing to Feb. 27. Phillips also agreed to Mrs. Aycock's request that Youssef be ordered to undergo a battery of tests at the Pitt County Mental Health Center.

Mrs. Aycock told Phillips the state would like to provide health center officials with information about the weapons incident, information from interviews with witnesses, any available school records and Youssef's criminal records. The assessment will allow the judge to know more about Youssef before the Feb. 27 sentencing, she said.

David E. Reid Jr. of Greenville, Pitt County's resident Superior Court judge, is scheduled to be on the bench the day of the sentencing, Mrs. Aycock said.

In connection with a separate incident that occurred Oct. 10, Youssef was convicted Oct. 27 of three counts of simple assault. Youssef was accused of trying to run over two teen-agers and a small child while driving an automobile through a Farmville neighborhood.

District Court Judge James E. Ragan of Oriental initially found Youssef guilty of three counts of assault with a deadly weapon — a more serious crime with a maximum penalty of two years in prison — but he changed the judgment to simple assault before the sentencing. Ragan suspended a 30-day jail term for two years and ordered Youssef to perform 75 hours of community service. He also placed him on supervised probation for two years.

Grifton Cyclist Hurt At Accident Scene

A Grifton man was injured early Wednesday morning when the motorcycle he was riding collided with a Greenville Fire-Rescue Department pumper at the scene of an earlier two-car accident on South Memorial Drive.

Police department investigators said vehicles driven by James Henry Speight, 21, of Route 1, Greenville, and Edna B. Franey, 34, of Apartment 1, 700 Cotanche St., collided about 6:39 a.m. in front of Parker's Barbecue restaurant.

Ms. Franey was injured in the collision, which caused an estimated $500 damage to the Speight car and $1,500 damage to the Franey auto, investigators said.

Officers said the fire truck, responding to the scene of the accident about 6:53 a.m., pulled into the center turn lane and was slowing to a stop when the motorcycle, operated by Willie Henderson Matthews, 40, of Grifton, pulled around a police car parked in the center turn lane and collided with the fire-rescue department vehicle.

Police estimated damage to the motorcycle at $700 and placed damage to the fire engine at $1,000.

No charges were made in connection with the second accident, while police charged Speight with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety in connection with the first collision.

Investigators said both Matthews and Ms. Franey were taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment of injuries they received in the collisions.

Eastern Legislators May Lose In House

for Appropriations chairman. The House is not scheduled to meet Friday and the remaining committee assignments will probably be announced Monday, several House members said. Mavretic has reorganized the House, the Associated Press reported, reducing the number of standing committees from 58 to 12. However, there will be 50 standing subcommittees and 20 of those are to be led by Republicans. Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr. of Farmville, who supported Mavretic in his bid to become speaker, said today he has asked to be considered for the chairmanship of the Elections and Constitutional Amendments Committee, which would handle items such as gubernatorial veto, election reform and limiting the length of time a representative may hold the speakership. He has also asked to serve on Appropriations and Elementary and Secondary Education, but he said he has had no indication of what posts he will receive.

Martin County Democrat Gene Rogers, whose district includes portions of Pitt County, said he expects to be appointed to a position on the Finance Committee. Rep. Ed Warren of Greenville said he has asked to be put on the Appropriations Committee. "I have been on it for a number of years, mainly on the Education Appropriations Committee, because I felt like it would be an advantage to my area, particularly to the eastern part of state. That's been my major interest for eight years. "I couldn't tell you what any assignments will be — that's up to the new speaker," said Warren. "I'm sure that wherever he assigns me, I'll do the best for my district and the state. My job is to do a good job regardless of who the leadership is." Rogers, who is beginning his second term in the House, said he supported Ramsey, but it is time to put politics aside and begin work. "I'd made a commitment to him and felt like I needed to follow through on that. Hopefully, that's no problem," he said. "I think the mood up here is: 'Let's clear the air and get on with business.'" Rogers, who served on Appropriations last session, also asked to serve on Pensions and Retirement, Agriculture and Public Utilities. Rep. Gerald Anderson, a Democrat from Craven County who has served 10 years in the House, was critical of Mavretic for being too slow in finalizing committee appointments. Anderson, who supported Ramsey, said the House is usually already working on appropriation matters at this juncture of the session. "When you start talking about $60,000 a day (to operate the legislature), it's time for us to get on with the work. Everything is such a mess up here. I've never seen it so unorganized. "(Taking Friday off) concerns me, because we get paid for seven days and taking a day off like that is expensive to the taxpayers," he said. "I don't think we need to be skipping days. I think we need to get on with it and get out early."

The House has customarily met on Fridays in the past, he said. Anderson, a past chairman of the Justice and Public Safety Subcommittee, also served on the Appropriations Committee last session. He has asked to serve on that committee again, but he said he has not heard yet what he will receive. He voted for Ramsey because he had pledged his vote to him at a Democratic caucus, he said, and he does not believe that decision should affect his appointment. "I voted for Liston Ramsey. It shouldn't (affect my appointment). Of course, you know it depends on who's underhanded, who's vindictive and who's working against you," Anderson said. "I've asked to be on committees that I have knowledge and experience in," he said. "I'm here to work with (Mavretic). I'm not going to work against him just because I didn't vote for him." Beaufort County Democrat Howard Chapin, who is beginning his eighth term in the House, said he believes he will land a position on the Appropriations Committee. "I hope I get Appropriations, but if I don't it won't be the end of the world," said Chapin, who also supported Ramsey in the recent vote. "I have no reservations about (supporting Ramsey). I would go with him again," he said. "If it does (cause me to lose previous committee posts), it's not the end of the world, I'm not going to lose any sleep over it. I'm still going to work hard for the people of my district and the people of North Carolina." In past sessions, Chapin said he served as chairman of the Marine Fisheries panel and also served on Transportation, Appropriations, and the Base Budget Expansion Committee. "This year he has asked to serve on several of the same committees and also Elementary and Secondary Education, he said. Chapin said his seatmate in past sessions has been Mavretic and the two are good friends. Ironically, he said Ramsey is now sharing a desk with him on the House floor. As speaker, Mavretic will probably do what he thinks is best for North Carolina, Chapin said. Even if some representatives lose positions, it will not prevent them from working hard for their district or the state, he said. Efforts to reach Rep. Ed Warren of Greenville today were unsuccessful.

N.C. 91 junctions with N.C. 121, with the latter highway continuing into Farmville and the former going to Walstonburg. Saratoga Mayor Tommy Hawkins says all those highway designations are confusing. He said he believes the roadways could be simplified by simply turning N.C. 91 into U.S. 264-Alternate as has been done with other communities that were bypassed by the new U.S. 264. "We would just like the same privilege and opportunity as other towns such as Bailey and Sims," he said. On Jan. 4, the Saratoga Board of Commissioners sent a letter to Sen. James Ezzell of Rocky Mount requesting his assistance in redesignating the highway. Ezzell responded in a letter two days later, indicating, "At the present time, I do not have an answer to your problem. I will be in touch with the people at the Department of Transportation about your dilemma. Soon after the session starts, I will be back in touch with you."

"At least I feel like somebody knows now and hopefully we can get some type of response to this," Ms. Baker said.

George Eason, DOT division maintenance engineer, said it is entirely possible to have the name of the roadway changed as requested. However he indicated it would not be likely until the completion of the 264 bypass north of Farmville.

He said when the Farmville bypass is completed, 264-Alternate could possibly be extended through Saratoga, passing through Farmville on the current U.S. 264 and connecting with 264-Alternate near the airport on the east side of Farmville.

Eason said such a change would first need approval from state-level DOT officials, followed by approval from a committee of the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials.

members from the state to be selected for the University of North Carolina Board of Governors' Doctoral Study Assignment Program. Under the program, faculty members will study full time for one year for a doctoral degree while receiving full salary and benefits. In return, they must teach at their home institutions for at least two years. Ms. Andrews, whose major area is maternal and child health, will study at UNC-Chapel Hill.

Employment Found

In December, 9,948 North Carolinians found jobs through the 78 Job Service Centers and six branch offices operated by the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina. Employers listed 16,049 job openings with ESC during December and the agency filled 12,099 of those openings. Figures show that Greenville's ESC received 413 jobs from employers, filled 151 jobs and placed 133 individuals. In 1988, Greenville's ESC received 3,684 jobs, filled 2,374 jobs and placed 1,641 individuals.

Be A Leader

Never Has America Needed One More

Please, President Bush, be a leader. Don't be merely a politician, a Republican, conservative, moderate or any other label. Just be a leader.

As you take office Friday, George Bush, you are grasping the helm of the world's largest democracy. The pomp and circumstance that celebrated your arrival were not just symbolic. The direction you steer will affect the course of history and the lives of countless millions. Your role is momentous and your charge is equally immense.

President Bush, you have before you the awesome task of balancing a federal budget left far out of kilter by your predecessor, Ronald Reagan. The ominous deficit amassed by him threatens to overwhelm the economic health of the United States if left unchecked.

The nation cannot continue along its present rutted route of debt. Reversing this trend is a duty that will require tough decisions — decisions that supersede hollow campaign promises, political rhetoric or partisan games. First, defense spending must be brought in line. Next, responsible budget cutting and realignment must take place. The final step, the one that you swore wouldn't show up on your lips, President Bush, is additional revenue — taxes that won't bury the already overburdened middle class and working poor. America cannot continue to coast on false wealth supported by deficit spending. Be a leader, Mr. President, and make the right choices for the nation.

Your vision of a kinder, gentler America, George Bush, must include government efforts to return a generation of disenfranchised young Americans to productivity. As you begin your presidency, eight years of disinterest in the poor and disadvantaged has left widening gap between the haves and have-nots.

Who are these Americans ignored by Ronald Reagan? Inner city youths, residents of rural communities, minorities, workers in the rust belt and the decaying petroleum economies of Texas and Louisiana. These Americans were cut off from the era of growth the nation experienced in the 1980s. That economic barrier must be dismantled, Mr. President. Be a leader.

The issue of civil rights has lost its momentum in the last eight years and that trend should be reversed. As you set policy, Mr. Bush, be a strong opponent of prejudice and discrimination. Those attitudes can destroy this diverse nation. If fostered, they can eat away at the social and political fabric of America. Fight them from the highest office in the land, George Bush, and use a weighty saber.

Place an equally mighty protective barrier around the nation's fragile natural treasures as well, Mr. President. Eight years of disregard has left the air, water and earth vulnerable to pollution and degradation. National parks and forests have been unduly plundered for their valuable timber, minerals and petroleum — merely to plug holes in deficit budgets. Draw a firm line on resources. Return the environment to its proper place near the top of the presidential agenda.

Finally, President Bush, make good on your campaign promise to be the education president. Nothing, no single issue is more critical to America's future. The nation's youngsters are its single greatest resource. They are the wage earners and decision makers of tomorrow. The skill and knowledge they carry with them to the marketplace will determine how vibrant the nation remains.

How will America continue to compete in a global economy? How will it resolve the serious technical and ethical conflicts of a complex society? How will it care for a rapidly aging population? The answers to these questions lie within an excellent system of public schools.

And remember, Mr. President, these schools must offer their knowledge and opportunity to every citizen. You talk about parental options for schools, and say this concept will allow "the marketplace" to force bad schools out of business. But it is the charge of public education to make every school a good school, and place learning within easy reach of every boy and girl. You must recall, President Bush, that the generation you educate will make decisions after your time at the top is past. Listen to the words of another president: "Leadership and learning are indispensable to each other." John Kennedy made that remark in 1963. It remains relevant.

So be a leader, George Bush. Never in its history has the nation needed one more. The voters have entrusted you with the future, Mr. President. Don't be less than they deserve.

'The voters have entrusted you with the future, Mr. President. Don't be less than they deserve.'

To the editor:

I see by last week's paper that Sue Wilson and her kid are unhappy about trees being cleared out for a shopping center at 14th and Charles streets.

What's all the fuss about? Trees are a big nuisance. It's enough trouble to clean up the bottles and cans and all the paper that blow around parking lots without adding leaves and branches. Besides, if you've seen one tree you've seen them all.

And there's no need to worry about the animals that lived there — probably just squirrels and cardinals and the like — probably mosquitoes, too. Plenty of all them around.

I know that people like Ms. Wilson say that putting buildings and blacktop where trees used to be raised city temperatures three to 10 degrees. So? All they have to do is turn up the air conditioning and quit bellyaching. What Greenville people want is more shopping centers!

To the editor:

I read with interest the letter from Mayor Ed Carter in your Jan. 12 edition.

First, I would like to say, in my opinion, we lost a good mayor. Les Garner, in the last election. Second, we now have a dedicated ex-councilman as mayor, Ed Carter, with years of experience in city government, who has been and is willing to give the time required to help give direction to our city. Although I am not always in agreement with the mayor's views, I do think he does his homework, which I feel may be lacking in some others.

I have always felt that the mayor should have the right to vote in all matters brought before the City Council, and more particularly since most of the council now represent separate districts of the city, rather than the entire city like the mayor and councilperson-at-large, who are elected by votes of all the citizens. The mayor cannot afford to be biased in casting a vote, while in most cases, the council members must, if they represent those people in the district who elected them.

I don't know why the council is opposed to the mayor having a vote. I'm sure they will give it more thought. With this in mind, I write in hopes the council will reconsider this issue in favor of the mayor.

To the editor:

Many of us share letter-writer Sue Wilson's feelings about the clearing of the Patrick-Arthur property. (Letter Jan. 12, 1989) Knowing this was to happen did not in any way prepare us for the result. The deed is done. The trees are gone. I doubt if their destruction served any good purpose. We can only deplore their loss.

To the editor:

On Dec. 14, 1988, our father, Lewis B. Surgeon, died leaving behind a single request — a military funeral. This request was not a last-minute wish; in fact, it was a long-spoken-of desire that we felt was very appropriate for a World War II veteran and a Purple Heart winner. We, a family of six siblings, had talked about this day amongst ourselves and overwhelmingly agreed that this would not be a difficult wish to fulfill, especially with the help of two sons who were veterans themselves. However, when we were confronted with the wish and the task, we found some unanticipated barriers.

Our first calls were received with positive responses and promises that Dad's desires would be fulfilled. However, the wheels that were set into motion were quickly halted by a law enacted 18 months ago. This legislation stated that a full military funeral was only permitted for personnel killed in action or veterans retiring from the service.

The two veteran sons, shocked by disbelief, frantically proceeded to make contacts to higher authorities. Their calls extending across many military and political officials from North Carolina to the Pentagon, all received the same response. So with deep sorrow, we laid our father to rest with all the honors the law would allow: a flag-covered coffin and a single soldier to present the flag (The Flag was folded by the mortician, a veteran himself, and his son.)

Perhaps we should be more understanding since our deficit is so enormous and Congress is trying to find ways to cut the budget and we certainly agree that not all veterans can be buried in Arlington National Cemetery. However, it causes us much anguish to discover that we have legislation prohibiting full military funerals for the men who with their own blood helped to make this "the land of the free and the home of the brave."

Conservatism Comes Of Age

WASHINGTON — George Bush's inauguration bash is wrapped less in red, white and blue bunting than in gray worsted. By the composition of his Cabinet, heavily weighted with people who have carried the weight of office before, Bush has completed a process that Ronald Reagan began.

It is the transformation of the Republican Party. The party now is reconciled to the reality of modern government's role in life. Republicans recognize that governance is a dignified, difficult, learned vocation for seasoned professionals such as Bush has chosen.

Reagan's contribution to this process was his almost complete acceptance of the welfare state that evolved at a remarkably steady pace under his predecessors of both parties for half a century. Republicans remain free to talk like Jeffersonians, celebrating that government which governs least. But they live in, and want to be the dominant party in, Hamilton's America. It has a strong central government that requires a professional political class for the executive branch.

Until recently, conservative ideology caused many Republicans to regard service in Washington as akin to jury duty. Perhaps it had to be done, but it was not supposed to be fun or fulfilling or for long. Bush's remarkably seamless transition testifies to a change.

The passage into the Bush era began well before the election, with the installation of Bush supporters at Treasury (Nicholas Brady) and Justice (Richard Thornburgh). It speaks well of Bush's self-confidence that he has not been afraid to cobble together a large part of his administration from material at hand in Reagan's Washington. The most interesting person in the upper reaches of Bush's administration — Richard Darman — has been here before. Indeed, he barely left.

During last autumn's campaign, conservatives sent delicious thrills of terror down one another's spines by saying, "If Dukakis is elected, the government will fall into the hands of intellectuals grown in that hothouse of unreality, the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard." Bush won, but the government is to a considerable extent in the hands of card-carrying Kennedy-schooler Darman, 45, who is head of the Office of Management and Budget.

A graduate of Reagan's White House and Jim Baker's Treasury Department, Darman is devising a strategy for complying with Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction targets. Darman is the right man to test Bush's theory that we can grow our way to sufficient balance in the budget.

Darman believes that recessions are not necessary, are not inherent in the cyclical working of capitalism. Rather, recessions happen because policymakers in the public and private sectors make mistakes. The science of economics and the art of business management are sufficiently advanced that such mistakes can be avoided indefinitely. If he is right, then Bush is right: No new taxes are needed. We shall see. For now, Darman is the most intellectually self-assured man Washington has seen since Darman's boon companion, David Stockman, went off to write his kiss-and-tell memoirs, which told the sad story of Stockman's misplaced certitude.

As Bush begins, the most alarming imbalance in Washington is not budgetary, it is institutional. Bush, the model of the Republican man of government, must win for the executive branch the struggle for supremacy.

Bush is the first President in 12 years who has served in Congress. Under Carter and Reagan, Congress, already provoked by Nixon, grew more assertive and grasping. Bush may think he can work well within the system that candidate Reagan a decade ago denounced as "the Washington buddy system." Bush may think the get-along-by-going-along approach is just the application of kinder-and-gentler-ism. But it is a recipe for continued congressional ascendancy.

Bush should remember that he is the beneficiary of the great change wrought by the advent of broadcasting and other technologies of mass mobilizations. Presidents have only recently acquired political weight because of broad participation in presidential elections. Malcolm Shaw, a British professor of politics, says it was not until the 1920s that Presidents were elected by receiving the votes of more than 10 percent of the "free population." Even the "strong" Presidents received less — Jackson (5.8 in 1832), Lincoln (6.8 in 1860), Cleveland (8.8 in 1884), Teddy Roosevelt (9.3 in 1904), Wilson (8.9 in 1916).

Today the executive branch is more suited than Congress to Republicans who regard governance as a profession, rather than something akin to jury duty. The size of the modern presidential electorate facilitates and justifies "energy in the executive" which is "a leading character in the definition of good government." So said Hamilton. His hour has come 'round at last as a conservatism come of age.

Legislature Expected To Act Quickly On Prisons

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — As Gov. Jim Martin's administration scurried to win legislative approval of a consent decree stemming from crowded prisons, some officials were unsure how quickly it could be enacted.

Ward Purrington, Martin's legislative liaison, said Wednesday the bill would be ready for introduction today — in the Senate at least. The House continued to work on a new committee structure, with chairmen still to be named.

"We want it considered expeditiously, but what that means depends on the circumstances," Purrington said.

Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, president pro tem of the Senate, said some legislation should be approved within a week, although the funding would be included in the budget bill that comes out at the end of the session.

"When we have to move fast, we can do it," he said.

Martin told lawmakers in a message delivered Wednesday that the prison system "continues to be unacceptably overcrowded."

"Based on anticipated future inmate populations, it will remain so unless material changes in the system are made," he said.

Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson said in a prepared statement, "I am confident that, after careful consideration, the members of the General Assembly will ratify this agreement and provide the Department of Correction with the funds necessary for its implementation."

Martin said implementation of the recommendations would take six to 18 months from the time the package is enacted.

The General Assembly is being asked to ratify a court settlement ending a lawsuit over conditions in 49 of North Carolina's 87 prisons. Major elements call for eliminating triple bunking by July 1 and establishing a standard of 50 square feet of living space for each inmate by July 1, 1994.

To work toward those goals, Martin's package calls for $50.8 million over two years to provide 800 new prison beds. Another $28.2 million would pay for alternative-sentencing programs that would divert 7,800 people from prison.

The new package will bring to 3,782 the new beds built in response to the lawsuit, including those approved in the last General Assembly session.

Martin also has asked lawmakers to increase the cap at which low-risk inmates must be released to reduce crowding from 17,460 inmates to 17,640. And he wants to give the Parole Commission latitude to exclude convicted drunken drivers, drug dealers or sex offenders from consideration for early release under the cap legislation.

The plan also calls for: — $48.4 million in two years to build 604 beds at the Nash, Franklin, Johnston and Sampson prisons and dayrooms at several prisons covered in the lawsuit.

— $14.8 million to expand regular probation programs.

— $5 million for a bed-treatment center at Cherry Hospital in Wayne County, to which people convicted of driving while impaired could be paroled for completion of a 30-day treatment program.

— $3.7 million to expand electronic house-arrest programs to 12 counties, including Guilford.

— $2.7 million to expand the intensive probation program.

— $1.1 million to establish a 90-day boot camp that would serve 100 committed youthful offenders between the ages of 18 and 22.

The litigation, originally filed in U.S. District Court in June 1985, was consolidated with other inmate lawsuits into a class-action suit against all of the Division of Prisons' field prison units. The constitutionality of the conditions of confinement, particularly in regard to inmate crowding, has been a major focus of the suit.

North Carolina, in entering the agreement, did not admit liability in any of the issues raised in the suit nor did the state admit any constitutional violations.

Beyond construction, the consent decree calls for several program improvements for inmates. The Division of Prisons would review the quality of medical care, general population inmates would have more visitation privileges and fire-safety would be improved.

IN THE STATE

Gorilla Pregnant

ASHEBORO (AP) — Hope, the only female lowland gorilla at the North Carolina Zoological Park, is pregnant, and officials are expecting the first gorilla birth at the zoo in February or March.

An ultrasound test performed Jan. 10 showed a fetus with a skull about three inches wide and a regular heartbeat, said Robert L. Fry, the director of the N.C. Zoological Park Council.

"Zoo officials had thought Hope was pregnant in the spring of 1987. When the delivery date passed that summer, an ultrasound test was done that showed she was fat, not pregnant."

The expectant father is Carlos, 18, who has been on breeding loan to the N.C. Zoo from the Memphis Zoo and Aquarium since May 1986.

Obscenity Charges

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — An Iredell County Superior Court judge sentenced Yates Bell Hager to five years in prison on an indecent liberties charge involving a 12-year-old girl, and four counts of delivering marijuana to minors.

Hager, 47, also received a 10-year sentence Wednesday on 27 counts of disseminating obscenities, or showing pornographic materials; one misdemeanor count of contributing to the delinquency of a minor, and one count of selling alcohol to a minor in Hager's Troutman home.

Superior Court Judge James Davis suspended five years of the 10-year sentence on Wednesday, and ordered that Hager spend the rest of that sentence on supervised probation after the active sentence.

Hager also was fined $6,000 and must pay an additional $3,400 in court costs.

Video Network

ASHEVILLE (AP) — The University of North Carolina at Asheville has joined a statewide video network that allows students and faculty to see and talk to each other even though they might be several hundred miles apart.

Headquartered at the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina in the Research Triangle, the two-channel network is the only one of its kind in the world, said Alan Blatecky, Microelectronics Center's director of university programs.

The link also ties UNC-Asheville into a statewide network of more than 1,000 computers — via a high-speed data path — that next year will include the new Cray Super-computer set for installation in Research Triangle Park.

A $5.7 million General Assembly appropriation funded construction of the network line.

Coalition

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina AIDS Service Coalition has criticized Gov. Jim Martin's budget, saying it has ignored the recommendations of the state's AIDS task force.

A news release from the coalition said Martin's failure to include any program for AIDS in the budget is "a deeply troubling insult" to the almost 20,000 North Carolinians who have the disease.

"The coalition believes that in a $22.8 billion budget where $8.5 million can be found for the zoo, something can be found to help stop AIDS, provide humane care for people who are dying, and to reduce the cost of the nation's number one health crisis," the release said.

The AIDS Task Force recommended $14,653,000 to control AIDS, which was later reduced to $10,238,515 in recognition of the projected revenue short-fall, the release said.

Motel Killing

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — The bloodied, battered body of a 55-year-old man was found Wednesday in a motel room, and police are investigating the death as a homicide.

The man was apparently beaten to death, county Coroner Don Conrad said.

Police were called to the Regal Inn at about 11:30 a.m. after a motel employee discovered the body.

Conrad said the room was in disarray "like there'd been a fight."

Guilty Plea

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Mark Anthony Loudermelt, who had just completed law enforcement training and was to begin work as a jailer for the Burke County Sheriff's Department, pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor marijuana charge and received a two-year suspended sentence.

Loudermelt, 23, pleaded guilty Tuesday in Burke County Superior Court to maintaining a dwelling for use or storage of a controlled substance.

In a plea bargain arrangement, he was given a two-year suspended sentence, three years probation and a $500 fine by Judge C. Walter Allen of Asheville.

Authorities found 106 marijuana plants, mostly seedlings, on property he owned.

Some Legislators See Budget Plan As Effort To Cooperate With Solons

By John Fleisher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Martin's decision to withhold specific recommendations on spending some of the $22.8 billion in his 1989-91 budget drew criticism from one legislator, but others said it reflects a desire to cooperate.

"He's got the basic numbers there ... but he's giving us room to fit the money with the needs," said Sen. Marc Basnight, D-Dare, chairman of the Senate Base Budget Committee. "It looks like he has a desire not to be so ironclad. I think he did a pretty good job."

But Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, former chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said Martin was trying to duck politically sensitive decisions.

"I've never known there to be so many questions left hanging," Watkins said Wednesday. "He's saying what we need and then saying 'I don't know where the money's coming from.'"

Martin avoided specificity, for example, on such touchy questions as how much of the delayed 5.7 percent pay increase for teachers should be awarded across-the-board and the amount of a proposed tuition increase for the university system and community colleges.

Instead, Martin proposed establishing several "reserve funds." He left it to the General Assembly to decide how to allocate the money or, in the case of tuition and fee increases, how much new revenue should be generated.

Rep. Dave Diamond, D-Surry, whom sources say is likely to succeed Watkins as Appropriations Committee chairman, voiced no resentment of the governor's lack of specificity.

"Those are the tough decisions and they're the ones he wants the General Assembly to make," Diamond said.

Martin outlined his spending program Tuesday during his State of the State address. With only $233 million available for permanent additions to the budget in 1989-90 and $435 million for 1990-91, he proposed funneling most of the new revenue to public schools.

But in addition to endorsing full funding of the fifth- and sixth-year installments of the Basic Education Program and specific appropriations for prospective teacher scholarships, experimental preschool for 4-year-olds and drug prevention programs, Martin left these issues open:

— How much of an across-the-board pay increase to award teachers. The governor called for a reserve fund of $35.8 million for 1989-90 and $143.4 million for 1990-91 to cover teacher compensation increases — enough for a 5.7 percent across-the-board raise beginning in April 1990.

However, the governor also said that money for higher teacher pay under the Career Ladder Program should come from the compensation reserve. Martin wants the program, now under way in 16 school systems, to be implemented statewide by 1991.

That raises the question of how much of the pay increase will be distributed across-the-board and how much will go for career-ladder increases, which would vary from one teacher to another.

In contrast, Martin also proposed a reserve fund for other state employee salary increases but recommended a specific breakdown: 3 percent across-the-board raises and 1.5 percent for the restoration of merit raises.

— How to allocate funds for improved services for the elderly. Martin recommended reserve funds of $6 million the first year and $8 million the second for the elderly and said it might be spent on such programs as helping Alzheimer's disease patients, developing senior centers and in-home support but made no specific allocation proposals.

— How specifically to spend money for state park improvements ($10 million reserve) and treating and disposing of hazardous and low-level wastes ($16 million reserve).

— The amount by which tuition should be increased within the University of North Carolina and community college systems.

Martin's decision not to recommend specific appropriations in these and other areas was not an attempt to duck potentially controversial decisions, Deputy Budget Director Marvin Dorman told reporters in a briefing Tuesday.

"I think the governor did bite the bullet," Dorman said. "You can make a very specific recommendation and know that people are going to disagree with it, or you can make a statement about your intent, then sit down during the session and with the legislative leadership ... and work out a way to fund it."

Environmentalists Look For Change

RALEIGH (AP) — Environmentalists hope that changing public attitudes will spur legislative approval of their program this year, beginning with bills to allow tougher state anti-pollution regulations and protect coastal resources.

Legislators planned today to introduce bills to repeal laws from the 1970s that prohibit state regulators from imposing tougher environmental rules than those on the federal level and to combat haphazard coastal development.

Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, is sponsoring the bill to repeal the so-called "Hardison amendments," named for their sponsor, former Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir.

The amendments prohibit state agencies from making rules regarding water quality, air quality and hazardous waste treatment that impose stricter standards than those set by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

"I think the state, as much as it can, ought to take control of its own destiny," Winner said Wednesday.

Hardison ran unsuccessfully for lieutenant governor last year, ending his 16-year Senate tenure. Some environmentalists have voiced hope that his absence will make repeal of the Hardison amendments easier.

The coastal protection bills, among other things, would specifically prohibit the governor from appointing developers to spots on the Coastal Resources Commission that had been designed for people with a different orientation.

Holman said Martin had appointed developers to two positions on the commission reserved for local government officials.

Another bill would increase the amount of coastal land afforded special protection from environmentally damaging development.

"We're in a race against time at the coast," Holman said. "Development is accelerating and it's important for state conservation to accelerate. North Carolina should learn from the mistakes of other states and protect its coastal resources."

Winston-Salem Bans Signs On I-40

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — The Winston-Salem Board of Aldermen approved a ban on billboards along 11 miles of Interstate 40 yet to be built, rejecting the argument from R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. would infringe on its already limited right to advertise.

"We understand that the main stream of progressive communities have sign controls that are much more stringent than ours," Alderman Martha Wood said, explaining the majority's vote. "It was an understanding of where true economic development is."

After more than four hours of debate, the board voted 5-3 to ban billboards along 11 miles of highway that will be the new Interstate 40 when completed in 1992.

In doing so, the board rejected Reynolds' argument along with those who said the ban would cripple local businesses, impair minority employment, and stunt economic development.

But for dozens of residents who packed the aldermen's meeting, the issue took on an "us against them" quality as people implored the board to get out from under the yoke of Reynolds, Forsyth County's largest employer and the dominant local force for generations.

"We want you to represent us," Lisa Menefee told the board. "We appreciate what Reynolds has done for us. But we want to break free from them. We are not a company town any more."

For its part, Reynolds expressed concern that a negative billboard vote in its hometown could hamper efforts to fight bans in other communities nationwide. Already more than 1,000 communities have banned or restricted billboards on the assumption that a less cluttered environment enhances quality of life and thus is good for business.

Eight Folk Artists Win Heritage Awards

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Eight folk artists from around the state were honored Wednesday night as the first recipients of the North Carolina Folk Heritage awards.

The N.C. Arts Council Folklife Section decided last year to recognize significant, long-term contributions to arts rooted in traditional and ethnic North Carolina cultures. Patric Dorsey, secretary of cultural resources, presented the awards, which carry a $2,000 cash grant for each recipient, before a program of live and videotaped performances by the four musicians who received awards.

"It's an odd value for us to take for granted wonders found in our own back yard," said George Holt, director of the Folklife Section. While increasingly efficient transportation and modern conveniences benefit the state, Holt said, "they have eroded the unique character and cultures of our regions."

The Arts Council will present several awards each year and consider all nominations, he said.

The winners included two blues guitarists, Etta Baker of Morganton and Thomas Burt of Durham. Ms. Baker has contributed to the style characteristic of Southern Piedmont Afro-American blues, while Burt, a member of Durham's flourishing blues community from the 1920's to 1940's, played regularly with legendary Durham blues performers Sonny Terry, "Blind Boy" Fuller and the Rev. Gary Davis.

Another musician, Mars Hill fiddler Thomas Hunter, received the award after a career that included professional performances in the 1930s, his own folk band in the 1950s and several recorded albums. Doug Wallin, an Appalachian ballad singer from Madison County recently featured on "CBS This Morning" and in Smithsonian Magazine, was recognized for his traditional, unaccompanied ballads and hymns learned from community members.

Also honored were Dorothy and Walter Auman, traditional potters from Seagrove credited with making south central North Carolina's pottery nationally prominent. Two basket makers from Cherokee, Emma Taylor and Eva Wolfe, were the final recipients. Ms. Taylor has demonstrated her craft at the World Craft Council in Kyoto, Japan, and Mrs. Wolfe was the first Cherokee artist to have work displayed in a national exhibit.

New Jersey Police Look For Passenger

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WOODBIDGE, N.J. — A North Carolina man whose car was stopped on the New Jersey Turnpike faces drug charges because cocaine was found in the possession of one of his passengers, who was shot and killed after fighting for a state trooper's gun, police say.

Meanwhile, state police searched Wednesday for a second passenger who escaped during the incident, said Lt. Barry Roberson, a state police spokesman.

Also on Wednesday, police scoured the turnpike area where the luxury car was pulled over Tuesday afternoon, looking for weapons possibly carried by the three men in the car, Roberson said.

The driver, Bernard Hicks, 37, was arraigned Wednesday night before Woodbridge Municipal Judge John J. Cassese, who set bail at $15,000. Hicks is charged with possession of 5.6 ounces of cocaine, worth about $6,600.

Hicks, wearing a red shirt and gray slacks, told the judge that his current residence was Winston-Salem, N.C., not Greensboro, as listed on the arrest complaint. Hicks told the judge he has been married for 16 years and has one child.

Hicks also faces charges of possession of marijuana under 50 grams, driving with a revoked license, speeding, and possession of narcotics paraphernalia, police said. Hicks was taken Wednesday night to the Middlesex County Adult Correctional Center.

The cocaine was allegedly found in the pockets of the dead man, but when such a large amount is found, everyone in a car is charged with possession, Roberson said.

The dead man was identified

Wednesday as Geno H. Barber, 46, of Advance, N.C., said Capt. Thomas Gallagher, a police spokesman. Barber was on parole for two convictions for bank robbery in 1976, police said.

An autopsy completed Wednesday showed Barber died of a gunshot wound to the left side of the chest, Gallagher said. It also showed that he was hit by a bullet in the upper right thigh and his hand had traces of powder and evidence of a wound that appeared to be caused by the recoil of a gun, Gallagher said.

"It indicates there was a struggle for the gun," Gallagher said.

The car that was pulled over had North Carolina plates, and was registered to Leronia Hairston, of Winston-Salem, N.C., Roberson said. Ms. Hairston, whose age was unavailable, is Hicks' mother, Roberson said.

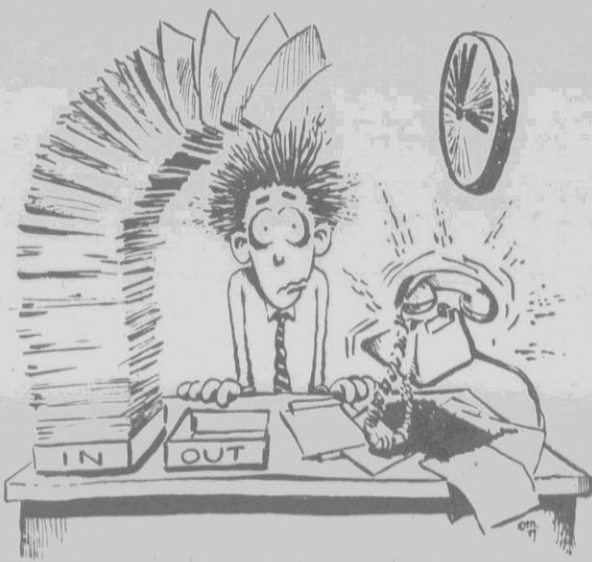

About a half-dozen investigators were assigned to pursue leads in finding the missing man, Roberson said. Police do not know the identity of the missing man, he said.

Gallagher said late Wednesday that the search of the turnpike area was completed for the day.

A black, two-door sports car that was stolen shortly after the shooting from the parking lot of a restaurant less than a half-mile from the scene still had not been recovered Wednesday afternoon, Roberson said. Police were trying to determine whether the missing man was connected with the stolen car.

Tollbooth collectors along the turnpike and the Garden State Parkway were given a description of the man, who is about 6-feet-tall and weighs 200 pounds. State police also notified authorities in New York and Pennsylvania of the man's description.

DOT Suspends Plan To Cut Subsidies For Rural Flights

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Transportation Department is putting a 60-day hold on its plan to cut back subsidies that allow airlines to operate unprofitable routes in rural areas, saying it took the action to give Congress time to look for more money.

Department officials cited a $6.6 million budget shortfall last month in proposing to sharply curtail the "Essential Air Service" program. Under the program, the federal government subsidizes flights to and from 155 small cities that would probably not otherwise have air service because the routes are not moneymakers.

DOT originally said it hoped the cuts could take effect on March 1, following a public comment period. But the plan was swiftly attacked by lawmakers, and the department said Wednesday it yielded "in response to requests from members of Congress."

"Because the shortage is only $6.6 million, I thought there was a very good chance that Congress would restore the money to avoid the loss of airline service," Rep. Bob Davis, R-Mich., said Wednesday. "The major problem was the timing."

Now that the program has been given a 60-day reprieve, Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said, "I believe that additional funds can be found within the budget, and it would be premature for the Transportation Department to disrupt essential air service without exploring the opportunities for supplemental funds."

Despite the postponement of the cuts, Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., said he still planned to introduce a resolution asking the department to keep the subsidies intact until Congress can come up with the $6.6 million.

He and Byrd said the subsidies were critical to West Virginia's economic growth.

But DOT warned that action must come soon because the longer the program proceeds at current financing levels, the harder it will be to achieve savings later.

"If the funding issue is not resolved by early June, a notice to all subsidized Essential Air Service carriers will be necessary indicating that no funds will be available beyond mid-July," the department said.

The department had earlier proposed four likely plans for coping with the cuts. One of them, considered the harshest by some, would cut 53 cities out of the program. One-third of those cities are more than 100 miles from the next nearest airport.

States that would have been hit particularly hard by the cutbacks included Arizona, Arkansas, California, Indiana, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, New York, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Texas and West Virginia.

Miami Leaders Hopeful Worst Of Rioting Is Over

By Scott McCartney
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Police patrolled in caravans and monitored only occasional gunshots, fires and window-breakings early today. City leaders, who set up a panel to investigate the shooting blamed for two nights of racial rioting, expressed hope that the worst was over.

"Things are very calm," Police Chief Perry Anderson said late Wednesday on ABC-TV's "Nightline." "It's contained."

About 50 people were arrested by 1 a.m. today, but it was a night of marked contrast to Tuesday, when 325 youths were taken into custody, most for looting.

"There's nothing left to loot in there, and they've already shot out most of the street lights," said Coral Gables police Sgt. Wayne Harris. He was part of a 26-man force assembled to sweep the adjacent Coconut Grove neighborhood on Miami's south side after seven or eight gunshots were heard and two Molotov cocktails were tossed into roadways.

The sweep was called off, however, because the area quieted.

A few highway exit ramps remained blocked, and parts of Miami were still cordoned off at night.

In the Liberty City area on the city's north side, police received reports of car fires, smashed store windows, a minor fire at a fast-food restaurant and some rock- and bottle-throwing.

And in the Overtown section just north of downtown, where the riots began Monday night, a police "field force" took time for box lunches and television viewing on the hoods of squad cars.

City commissioners, meeting in emergency session Wednesday, appointed a panel with subpoena power to investigate the fatal shooting of an unarmed, 23-year-old black motorcyclist by a Hispanic policeman. And the sister of the motorcyclist's passenger, who died after the vehicle crashed, made a televised appeal for an end to the violence.

The rioting that followed the killing has left one person dead, eight shot, about 20 buildings burned and numerous others looted in the black neighborhoods.

It also has left image-conscious city officials scrambling to minimize the impact on Sunday's Super Bowl. The Cincinnati Bengals remained at their downtown hotel, just blocks from the Overtown disturbances.

"What has happened the last two days has certainly taken the glitter off the Super Bowl," said Dick Anderson, a former Miami Dolphin player and chairman of a host city committee spending $2 million this week to enhance Miami's image.

"That's really what life is over there," said Bengals quarterback Boomer Esiason. "It really puts this game in perspective."

Police deployed about 450 officers, and worked to meet sporadic outbreaks of violence with shows of force. "Field forces" of officers clad in bullet-proof vests and riot gear were stationed on the edge of the riot-torn neighborhoods. Caravans of squad cars raced through the areas, and SWAT teams searched for troublemakers.

"We hope we can normalize and go back to routine patrolling," said Deputy Police Chief Walter Martinez. "We don't like being out here 12 hours and being shot at."

Black leaders warned Mayor Xavier Suarez before the commission meeting Wednesday that their community would no longer accept empty promises and business as usual.

"The word is out that there will be more disturbance," said the Rev. William Washington. "Now we've got to act and act quick."

Commissioners unanimously approved the special panel to investigate the shooting of Clement Lloyd, who was speeding with a friend, Allen Blanchard, through Overtown. Blanchard died in a hospital Tuesday of injuries from the motorcycle crash.

After discussions, the commissioners approved a suggestion by Miller Dawkins, the lone black on the five-member commission, who wanted a board consisting of five policemen and five Overtown residents, with the mayor as chairman.

Dawkins said the board will not satisfy the young people throwing rocks and bottles, and he appealed to them for time.

"I'd like to tell them to give us a chance to work this out, and to work on all our other ills, such as poor housing, poor education, joblessness," he said. "And they have to work with us instead of creating other problems like they are doing now."

The FBI, the State Attorney's Office and the police internal review board are also investigating the police shooting. William Lozano, 29, the Colombian-born police officer who shot the motorcyclist in the head, was relieved of duty with pay pending the investigation.

Anderson said on ABC's "Nightline" that his department had "major concerns" about the shooting.

"There seem to be some unusual circumstances," the police chief said.

Claudia Lubrin, Blanchard's sister, went on local television to "plead to the Overtown people that they stop the riots."

Trump Wins Right To Acquire Shuttle

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Donald Trump's quest to acquire Eastern Airlines' northeastern shuttle for $365 million cleared a key regulatory hurdle as the U.S. Department of Transportation gave tentative approval to his operating plans.

The Transportation Department on Wednesday said it has concluded that Trump's proposed plans are financially sound and his key personnel possess the managerial and technical ability to carry them out.

"Essentially, we've tentatively approved a fitness certification for Trump to operate the Trump Shuttle," said Hal Paris, a Transportation Department spokesman. "We are allowing any interested parties who have objections to file them within the next 15 days. Then there's a seven-day period to respond to any of those objections."

The Federal Aviation Administration still must certify that the planned shuttle operation is safe before the deal is final.

Texas Air Corp., Eastern's Houston-based holding company, has been trying to sell the profitable shuttle, arguing that it needs cash to survive.

A federal judge approved the sale last month over objections of labor leaders who had challenged it as a union-busting tactic. The carrier's unions argue that the shuttle sale is part of a plan by Texas Air to dismantle Eastern Airlines, whose 30,000 employees are represented by three militant unions.

The shuttle makes hourly flights among Boston, New York and Washington. Trump announced an agreement to purchase it on Oct. 12, 1988.

He plans to rename the service the Trump Shuttle.

Light Quake Hits California

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — An offshore quake jolted Southern California, shattering windows in ritzy Malibu, briefly knocking out power to 100,000 customers and reverberating with dozens of aftershocks today.

No major damage was reported from Wednesday's 10:54 p.m. tremor, which was centered 30 miles southwest of downtown Los Angeles in Santa Monica Bay and swayed downtown skyscrapers.

"It's the strongest earthquake I've felt in 14 years of living in Los Angeles," said Rick Cziment of Los Angeles. "It actually scared me. Our house went dark. My daughter woke up and began crying."

Firefighters in Manhattan Beach attributed one injury to the 5.0-magnitude quake when a woman fell on her nose. No other injuries were reported.

"At this point, it looks like we got off pretty well," said Michael Gurein, spokesman for the state Office of Emergency Services.

Rubble from about a dozen rock slides blew out tires on at least four vehicles traveling the narrow, twisting Malibu Canyon Road that leads to the swank Malibu beach colony, 30 miles southwest of Los Angeles, said sheriff's Sgt. Bill Hutton. The road remained open.

Prisons Director Stabbed To Death

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALEM, Ore. — Oregon's director of prisons was found stabbed to death outside his office at the state psychiatric hospital, authorities said.

Corrections Department Director Michael Francke, who was found early Wednesday, died of a stab to the heart, state Medical Examiner Larry Lewman said. No arrests had been made by Wednesday night, said Marion County District Attorney Dale Penn.

Francke, 42, was killed sometime before midnight Wednesday, Penn said.

"This is a sad day for Oregon," Gov. Neil Goldschmidt said as he ordered flags to be flown at half-staff. "Michael Francke dedicated his life to making Oregon a safer place to live."

Since taking the Oregon post, Francke had been grappling with a heavily overcrowded prison system that led to many felons serving little time behind bars. The inmate population, in a system designed for 2,800 inmates, recently hit 5,000.

Goldschmidt named Francke, former director of the New Mexico Corrections Department, to the Oregon post in May 1987.

Before coming to Oregon, Francke served as a state district judge in New Mexico from 1980 until he was named that state's corrections chief in 1983. He also served as an assistant and deputy attorney general in New Mexico from 1975 to 1980.

"All New Mexicans are indebted to Michael Francke and mourn his tragic death," said Toney Anaya, who was governor when Francke was named to head the New Mexico corrections system three years after 33 people died in a bloody prison riot there.

Francke directed New Mexico's efforts to comply with a federal court decree that forced a reduction in the state's prison population.

Goldschmidt said Dick Peterson, the department's director of institutional operations, would serve as interim department director until a permanent replacement for Francke could be found.

VMI Cadets Admit Holding Up Armored Car

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Two military school cadets admitted donning rented police uniforms to hold up an armored car, then escaping with $4.5 million in a heist planned by the father of one of the cadets, authorities said.

The Virginia Military Institute cadets were arrested Wednesday on campus.

"We're all just in shock, of course," said Col. Leroy Hammond of Virginia Military Institute of Lexington, Va. "It's just so completely uncharacteristic of the young men we have here. We're particularly proud of our honor system here, our young men's integrity."

Also arrested Wednesday was Robert J. Jasinski, 51, of Boonton, who worked as a part-time driver for the Coin Depot Armored Car Corp. of Elizabeth.

His son, William T. Jasinski, 22, and Bryan Smals, 21, of Columbus, Ohio, rented police uniforms from a costume store while on their Christmas vacation and held up the armored car, said John McGinley, head of the FBI's Newark office.

McGinley told a news conference that the elder Jasinski met the hijacked armored car in a rented van, to which the money was transferred.

Most of the money was recovered from an attic crawl space at the home of a woman acquaintance of the elder Jasinski, said McGinley. He said the woman, whom he did not identify, did not know what Jasinski was storing and did not participate in the holdup.

The cadets appeared at a hearing in Roanoke, Va., on Wednesday night, where they were ordered held without bond pending their transfer to Newark.

FBI agent Frank Butler said Jasinski, a VMI senior, and Smals, a sophomore, confessed to the heist when they were questioned at VMI following their arrests, and both cadets admitted their guilt at the bond hearing.

"The complaint is correct, sir," Cadet Jasinski told the magistrate.

Robert Jasinski, a retired telephone company worker, was arrested at his home and held in lieu of $400,000 bail, set by U.S. Magistrate Ronald Hedges. Edward Hartnett, an attorney who represented Jasinski at the hearing, said he had no comment.

The three were charged with interference with commerce by threats or violence, which carries a maximum 20-year prison term.

The complaint said Jasinski was interviewed by an FBI agent on Tuesday and at first denied the allegation. He later admitted planning it and implicated the cadets, the complaint said.

McGinley said an investigation of employees after the robbery was "instrumental" in a cracking the case. He said the elder Jasinski drove the same route as the truck that was robbed. McGinley did not elaborate.

Authorities said the two robbers held up three employees of Coin Depot on Dec. 22 as the employees parked an armored car behind the First Fidelity Bank. The car was to bring the cash to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

They handcuffed the employees and drove them to an industrial park, abandoning them unharmed.

The FBI says the two suspects wore police-type clothing, including three-quarter length blue nylon coats with fur collars, blue police caps and badges. Investigators were seeking pieces of a sawed-off shotgun used in the robbery and later destroyed, authorities said.

Magruder Heading Honesty Campaign

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Honesty is not only the best policy, but organizers of a new citywide ethics campaign hope their efforts make it the only policy.

The Columbus Commission on Ethics and Values, headed by the Rev. Jeb Stuart Magruder, a former Watergate co-conspirator, on Wednesday launched its "Take an Honest Look" campaign, which is aimed at prompting discussion and thought on the value of honesty.

"How do you do it? We decided we would take one issue at a time," Magruder said. "Ethics is a minefield in our society. Yet everybody is getting into it ... saying we need to do something."

The privately funded, $75,000 campaign is aimed at residents, government officials, business people, schoolchildren, and religious and civic groups. Plans include public forums, school projects, promotional billboards and television spots, and an honesty test to be distributed to all askers.

Magruder, now a Presbyterian minister, was deputy director of communications in Richard Nixon's administration and deputy director of Nixon's Committee to Re-elect the President in 1972. He spent seven months in prison after he admitted destroying records and committing perjury in the Watergate scandal. He now serves at First Community Church in suburban Marble Cliff.

He said his past was the perfect recommendation for his role with the commission, which was formed in early 1988. And he says he sees nothing funny in jokes circulating about his participation in the ethics campaign.

"I've dismissed it. There are cynics always," he said. "In a sense, I'm uniquely qualified to deal with the issues we've talked about."

Magruder was appointed to the commission by Mayor Dana Rinehart, who has been embroiled in an investigation into allegations that he sexually assaulted a baby sitter while he was Franklin County treasurer in 1978.

Rinehart's case went to a grand jury, but he was never charged. However, the investigation was renewed last year when news reports questioned how the initial investigation was handled.

The mayor, who attended the news conference, said he has heard cynical comments from some members of the news media and politicians about his involvement with the panel.

"I don't care what people say. Take my personal situation. I take the attitude of my 15-year-old daughter. They have a problem, I don't have a problem," Rinehart said.

The honesty campaign's chairman, William Bennett, president of Bank One, said it won't "draw conclusions, point fingers or make judgments," but was intended to raise consciousness about honesty.

Feds Let 5 Banks Underwrite Corporate Debts

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Five of the nation's largest banks will be able to underwrite corporate debt as a result of a Federal Reserve Board decision that was praised by the banking industry but condemned by congressional critics.

In addition to expanding the type of underwriting permitted by banks, the seven-member board said it would decide in a year whether to allow banks to underwrite stock as well.

The five bank holding companies affected are Citicorp, the nation's biggest; Chase Manhattan Corp.; Bankers Trust New York Corp.; J.P. Morgan & Co. Inc., and Security Pacific Corp.

The Fed's decision fits in with a trend in recent years in which advances in bank deregulation have come through administrative and court decisions. Congress is fragmented on the issue and failed last year to pass comprehensive legislation restructuring the financial system.

In 1987, for example, the Fed approved bank underwriting of municipal revenue bonds, commercial paper, mortgage-backed securities and securities backed by consumer loans.

On Wednesday, the Fed said bank holding companies may only conduct securities underwriting through a separate subsidiary regulated by the Securities and Exchange Commission. And, it said, the subsidiary may earn no more than 5 percent of its revenue from underwriting activities authorized Wednesday and in 1987.

The rest of the revenue must come from other types of business, such as the underwriting of general obligation bonds issued by municipalities and of U.S. government securities, two areas that have always been open to banks.

"This should increase competition in the financial services industry and lower cost for consumers and businesses," said Donald Oglivie, executive vice president of the American Bankers Association, a trade group.

But Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich. and chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, said "this is the kind of irresponsible behavior that gave us the savings and loan crisis and brought about the 1929 crash."

"It's troubling that regulators would go ahead and legislate simply because Congress hasn't done what they wanted it to. It's galling," said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., a member of the House Banking Committee.

Suspect Sips Beer As Cop Searches Car

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANITOWOC, Wis. — Authorities towing away the car of a man being sought in a sexual assault case found him in the trunk with a beer in his hand and a big grin on his face.

"I just stepped back and watched him get out, and I said, 'You son of a gun,'" said Detective James Boreman.

A 19-year-old woman reported she was sexually assaulted by a man who gave her a ride home from work Tuesday night.

Officers found the man's car, but could not find him, Boreman said.

Boreman said he was inspecting the car at the police garage when he heard a voice say, "It's about time. I wondered if you guys were ever going to come down."

Boreman said he opened the trunk and watched the man roll out with "a big grin on his face."

"He had a Stroh's while he waited," Boreman said. "There were 33 more that (he) could have had."

The 28-year-old man was arrested and later released on bond, but was not formally charged.

Boreman said the man likely spent about four hours in the trunk.

On Sept. 10, 1813, an American naval force under Commodore Oliver H. Perry defeated the British in the Battle of Lake Erie during the War of 1812. Reporting on the victory, Perry messaged: "We have met the enemy and they are ours."

Fireworks, White Lights Launch Inaugural Rites

By Donna Cassata
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Bursts of fireworks, thousands of flickering white lights and strains of American music heralded the start of five days of inaugural festivities marking George Bush's succession to the presidency.

Bush and Vice President-elect Dan Quayle joined their wives, children and grandchildren Wednesday on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial for the opening event in a jam-packed series of inaugural galas, balls and tributes.

"Let this inauguration be a time to celebrate who we are and let it also be a time to remember who we can be," the president-elect told the thousands who gathered around the memorial. "Let us rekindle the flame of confidence and commitment so that together we can accomplish the great goals we have yet to achieve."

As twilight neared on an almost balmy January day, the pageant of colors began. Four members of the Army Golden Knights, trailed by yellow and black parachutes, softly landed in a designated area near the memorial. Bush later lit a torch and then called on the crowd for their "thousand points of light."

In a tribute to the president-elect's campaign theme, the inaugural committee distributed hand-size flashlights to those who surrounded the memorial and spilled over to the park area known as the mall. Officials at the event estimated the crowd at 40,000 but Officer Raymond Meks of the U.S. Park Police said the total was about 250,000.

The president-elect sought to define the slogan, telling the crowd that the "thousand points of light" are "individuals doing their part to make America a better place to live."

"Ladies and gentleman, it is the ambition of my presidency to make these thousand points of light shine brighter than ever before and where today there is darkness let us work together to bring light to shine on all of God's children," Bush said.

As the president-elect, his wife, Barbara, who was garbed in a bright red coat and a Stars and Stripes scarf, and the Quayles walked up the memorial steps, flashes of red, white, blue, purple and orange filled the skies from a dazzling fireworks show across the mall.

The celebration provided a military show with a flyover of 21 Navy jet fighters, a range of country and pop music from the Gatlin Brothers, the Beach Boys, Sandy Patti, Lee Greenwood and Up with People and a bit of family charm.

As the Beach Boys belted out their 1960s hits "Help Me Rhonda," and "Barbara Ann," a few of the Bush grandchildren, who had watched the show on their parents' laps, stood up and danced.

Among the thousands who had come to the event were members of police departments from Boston and Springfield, Mass., and New York City, who had endorsed Bush's candidacy during the campaign.

"This is something that happens once in your life," said Officer Anthony Lagoda of Brooklyn, N.Y. "I'm more proud than nervous." Members of New York's finest were invited to march in Friday's parade.

And the flashlights for the "thousand points of light" received high marks from those in attendance.

Janet Alexander, an artist from Spain who worked for the campaigns of President John Kennedy and former Democratic candidate Walter Mondale, said the flashlights were "very effective, meaningful."

Robert and Rodney Corn of Roswell, N.M., received an invitation to the festivities from the Republican National Committee after their county of Chavez voted 82 percent GOP.

The flashlights indicated that Bush will carry his theme through the presidency, according to Robert Corn. "He means what he says," Corn said.

Wet Eyes Mark Reagans' Farewell To Long-Time White House Staffers

By W. Dale Nelson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — It is a time of tears and farewells at the White House as the eight years of the Reagan administration near their end.

On Wednesday, there were wet eyes galore in the East Room as hundreds of White House staffers turned out to say farewell to the president and first lady Nancy Reagan.

On Friday, just before going to the Capitol for President-elect Bush's inauguration, the Reagans will repeat the scene in a private meeting with the household staff at the presidential residence.

"These are people that have served the president and first lady for eight years, in most cases, in the residence," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said. "They will talk personally and privately Friday morning."

If it's anything like Wednesday's event in the East Room, it will be an emotional affair.

The get-together began with cheers and applause from the estimated 350 to 400 aides as the president and first lady entered.

White House Chief of Staff Kenneth Duberstein, who was a White House lobbyist in the beginning of the Reagan years, spoke for the staff, telling the Reagans, "You have allowed us to be part of your lives and you are very much a part of ours."

Gifts were given: riding tack for the president, an avid horseman; a gold and enamel box for the first lady's box collection; and even a replica of the White House for the presidential dog, Rex.

"He's already taken over this White House," said the president. "I'm glad he's got one of his own now. And you know something? He doesn't get kicked out of it after two terms."

In a more serious vein, Reagan told his aides, "We were all revolutionaries, and the revolution has been a success."

Elaine Crispin, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, said, "We have been proud to call you our first lady, or Nancy, or, as that taxi driver in New York said, 'a real classy broad,' but it's been awfully nice to call you a friend."

When it came the first lady's turn to speak, the tears that had been welling in her eyes were coursing down her cheeks.

"Elaine said I should say something, but I'll never get through it," she said. "See?"

Then she just said, "Thank you," and she and the president made their way through the room to the Cross Hall of the White House, shaking hands and exchanging hugs with well-wishers as they went.

It was the second sentimental occasion for the president in one afternoon.

Earlier, he met with the championship Notre Dame football team, renewing a tie with the school that began with his role as gridiron star George Gipp in the movie, "Knut Rockne, All-American."

"My life has been full of rich and wonderful experiences," the 77-year-old president said. "And standing near the top of the list is my long and honored association with the University of Notre Dame and its legendary hero Knute Rockne."

Then, paraphrasing the line from the movie that has become his political watchword, he said:

"Right now, I can't help but think that somewhere, far away, there's a fellow with a big grin and a whole lot of pride in his school. And he might be thinking to himself that maybe you won another one for the Gipper."

Insurance Official Covers Inauguration

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A. LeConte Moore's role at the presidential inauguration won't be apparent unless terrorists attack, the parade floats collapse, thieves steal the 10,000-gallon cowboy hat or wind tears the 20-by-40-foot flag off its staff.

As insurance man for the Presidential Inaugural Committee, Moore hopes none of these remote possibilities will ruin the event, protected with special policies arranged by his company, New York-based brokerage Marsh & McLennan Cos. Inc.

"I don't want claims. I don't want people to get hurt," Moore said in an interview. "I don't want PIC to be sued. I don't want the insurance companies to have to pay the claims."

Although the insurance companies can't blame him if there are claims, Moore said he wants to stay on their good side.

"You can always find another client; you can't always find another insurance company," said Moore, vice president of the company's Entertainment & Leisure Division.

Moore is securing policies from approximately 25 other insurers, including the Gulf United Corp., the Chubb Group and the American International Group. The complete insurance package is said to be costing the committee between $300,000 and $400,000.

Moore declined to specify the price tag but described it as "an incredibly cost-effective deal, considering the terrorism risk now."

General liability insurance, Moore's biggest concern, would cover personal injury in the event of a terrorist attack. Liability covers other contingencies as well, ranging from collapsed spectator bleachers to food poisoning at a post-inauguration cocktail reception.

Moore declined to specify how much coverage is provided, saying disclosure could invite frivolous lawsuits.

"You can get lawyers hovering like vultures around a carcass," he said.

What happens if Bush is injured? "I doubt the president would sue his own committee," Moore said.

If inaugural history is any indication, things can go wrong.

Protesters Stage Counter Activities

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — As thousands of Republicans jam the city to celebrate George Bush's presidential inauguration with balls and banquets, protesters are staging events on the streets to mark their anger at GOP policies.

The Counter-Inaugural Coalition for a People's Agenda — a gathering of 80 groups ranging from the Gray Panthers to the Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador — launched its activities Wednesday evening with a soup kitchen, dubbed a "banquet," on the plaza in front of Union Station.

The intended audience was the 2,500 Republican faithful who were climbing out of limousines and taxis at the Union Station entrance for a lavish, $1,500 per ticket feast of Maryland crab and roast veal.

About an hour before the official Union Station dinner was to begin, several hundred of those who had enjoyed their free meal of hot chili and rice, tortilla chips, salad and apple cider started shouting at the gala guests some 100 yards — and two police lines — away.

"The extravagance of George Bush's inauguration — by far the most expensive in U.S. history — demonstrates how far removed the Bush-Quayle administration is from the concerns and worries of most American people," said Lisa Fithian, a spokeswoman for the protesters.

The protesters' signs reflected their varied interests. One banner read, "House the Homeless, Aid the Poor, U.S. Out of El Salvador."

"What about the homeless?" they screamed in unison. "Fifty-thousand dead from AIDS. Where was George?"

Shuttle Cleared For Feb. 23 Ride

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The engine and tile problems of the last space shuttle mission have been resolved and the Discovery probably will be launched into orbit on Feb. 23, said the director of the Kennedy Space Center.

"We feel we have a good understanding of those problems and can move ahead," Forrest S. McCartney told reporters Wednesday.

Atlantis returned from orbit last month with severe damage to about 200 of 28,000 tiles that protect it from re-entry heat. And during post-flight inspection, two small cracks were found in a bearing unit in a high-pressure engine turbopump.

The tile damage resulted when insulation hit the shuttle during liftoff after stripping away from both the external fuel tank and the nose cone of one of the solid fuel booster rockets, McCartney said.

The fuel tank was the oldest one ever flown on a shuttle, it had gone through some earlier test fueling cycles and some of its insulation had been repaired before flight, he said.

"We feel we don't have those problems with the next tank because we have better bonding which we have subjected to pull tests," McCartney said.

The nose cone insulation has been strengthened, he said.

Engineers believe the bearing cracks were caused by stress corrosion, apparently resulting from moisture that somehow got into the metal, McCartney said.

He said the problem appears to be unique to Atlantis' turbopump and that inspection of Discovery's turbopumps have cleared them for flight.

Discovery is set to make the third shuttle flight since the explosion of Challenger three years ago. During five days in orbit, the five-man astronaut crew is to deploy a communications satellite, conduct experiments and photograph damage that man and nature have caused to the Earth.

Consumer Inflation Holds At 4.4 Percent

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Consumer prices rose 4.4 percent in 1988, the same as a year earlier, as hefty, drought-induced increases for groceries offset stable energy prices, the government said today.

Worry about inflationary pressures preoccupied many economists last year, but that pressure has not produced an acceleration in inflation thus far.

The 4.4 percent gain in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index matched the 1987 increase, which was the highest since 1981 but was four times the 1.1 percent rate in 1986, a 25-year low.

A 0.3 percent rise in the index in December, which followed a 0.3 percent November increase, helped inflation finish the year at a moderate pace.

The summer drought, which shriveled crops and seared pastures, pushed food prices for the year up 5.2 percent, the steepest rise since 1980.

Poultry and egg prices jumped 17.9 percent and 16.5 percent, respectively, because of the drought.

On the other hand, beef and pork prices, which rose for the first six months of the year, fell during the second half as farmers sent more animals to slaughter as a way of avoiding high feed costs.

Energy for the year rose only a slight 0.5 percent following an 8.2 percent jump in 1987. Still, they were far below levels before the 1986 oil glut, when energy prices plummeted 19.7 percent.

Fuel oil prices jumped 2.8 percent in December after falling for six consecutive months. Despite the December advance, the price was 6.3 percent below that of a year earlier. Electricity charges rose 1.1 percent for the year, while natural gas was unchanged.

Gasoline prices were 1.1 percent lower than a year ago. Price increases for new and used cars also were moderate, 2.1 percent and 3.4 percent, respectively. However, the prices of auto insurance and of financing car purchases took steep jumps of 8.4 percent and 8.3 percent, respectively.

The cost of medical care, up 6.9 percent, also rose faster than the general inflation rate last year.

Tobacco prices posted one of the steepest rises of any subcategory, up 9.4 percent for the year.

Clothing prices rose 4.8 percent overall, with men's and boys' apparel up 6.0 percent and women's and girls' clothing up 3.4 percent.

December's 0.3 percent increase left the price index at 120.5 percent of its 1982-84 base, meaning that a hypothetical selection of goods costing $100 during the base period would have cost $120.50 in December. That figure was up 30 cents from November.

President Reagan, who is preparing to leave office Friday, has listed the taming of inflation as one of his proudest accomplishments. Under his predecessor, Jimmy Carter, the nation saw double-digit price increases of 13.3 percent in 1979 and 12.5 percent in 1980.

Many economists worry that the country may be in for a taste of the bad old days this year. They say tight labor markets and rising factory operating rates will inevitably lead to higher costs for consumers.

Gorbachev Plans 12 Percent Cut In Soviet Forces

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — In his most detailed explanation of planned reductions in the Soviet Union's armed forces, President Mikhail S. Gorbachev said troops will be cut by 12 percent and the military budget trimmed by 14.2 percent.

In a meeting Wednesday with visiting dignitaries, Gorbachev also rebuffed suggestions that only obsolete tanks would be destroyed. The Soviet leader said his plan to cut the armed forces by 500,000 troops in two years, first announced in his speech to the United Nations last month, would bring a reduction of 240,000 soldiers in the European theater, 200,000 in Asia and 60,000 in the southern Soviet Union.

Gorbachev also said the production of arms and military supplies would be slashed by 19.5 percent and 10,000 tanks would be eliminated in Europe, of which "5,000 will be physically liquidated, and the others transformed into towing vehicles for civilian needs or into training simulators."

He accused some in the West of disparaging the unilateral Soviet move by claiming that only obsolete armored vehicles would be destroyed.

"Here's the way it is: We will withdraw 5,000 of the most modern tanks from our military groups," Gorbachev said.

The Soviet leader gave the details in a meeting with former U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, former President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France, former Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone and other visiting dignitaries.

His remarks, distributed by the official Tass news agency, were the most detailed explanation yet of the planned Soviet cuts, which he announced Dec. 7 in a United Nations speech.

"Of the 500,000 men, by which the army and fleet will be reduced in two years, 240,000 will come from the European part of the country, 200,000 in the east, and 60,000 in the south," Gorbachev said.

Gorbachev also said the second phase of the withdrawal of Soviet military units from Mongolia, a Moscow ally, will begin soon, and that they will be cut by 75 percent. A Soviet air force group stationed in Mongolia will be liquidated, he said.

He also said many Red Army units of an "offensive character" will be withdrawn from Eastern Europe.

By Jan. 1, 1991, all remaining Soviet units stationed on the territory of Moscow allies in that region will have taken on "an exclusively defensive character," he said.

On Monday, a Soviet general was quoted as telling Austrian television that his country's unilateral withdrawal from Eastern Europe will begin in April.

Deputy Defense Minister Vitaly Shabanov was quoted as saying the partial withdrawal of 50,000 troops from Hungary, Czechoslovakia and East Germany, announced by Gorbachev in his U.N. speech, will take place in two phases.

The first phase will be complete this year, and the second in 1990, Austrian television reported Shabanov as saying in an interview with its Moscow correspondent.

About 600,000 Soviet troops are currently stationed in the East Bloc, the bulk of them in East Germany.

Soviet Reforms Lead To Higher Crime Rate

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet crime rate rose nearly 17 percent last year as Mikhail S. Gorbachev's reform programs unwittingly contributed to a rash of assaults, robberies and theft, according to an interview published today.

While final statistics are not yet available, "even without them it is clear that crime in 1988 grew consistently and quickly from month to month," Interior Minister Vadim Bakatin was quoted telling the Communist Party newspaper Pravda.

"And as a result, the growth of illegal activities as measured by criminal investigation was 16.9 percent. Robberies, assaults and theft of personal property increased in frequency by more than a third," he was quoted as saying.

Attacks on police increased and street crime rose by more than 40 percent, he said.

Bakatin supervises the Soviet Union's uniformed police. In his first major interview since taking over in October from Alexander Vlasov, he said police themselves were often corrupt and ill-prepared to fight crime.

Vlasov was made premier of the Russian republic and promoted by Gorbachev to non-voting status on the party's ruling Politburo.

Under Gorbachev, officials and the state media have been more open about reporting drug abuse, prostitution and other crimes, including details of criminal investigations. But Bakatin's half-page interview in Pravda was an important admission that reform has brought problems as well.

While making Soviet society more open, Gorbachev's reforms have created "complicated, at times painful processes of self-cleansing, an increase in civil and ethnic self-awareness," he said.

Two republics where ethnic awareness is growing most rapidly, Latvia and Estonia, headed the areas Bakatin named where crime is growing most rapidly. He also cited several times the violence between Armenians and Azerbaijanis, where Interior Ministry troops were called in to restore order.

The interior ministry said many criminals released from labor colonies under legal reforms have been unable to find work because state industries are cutting back their workforces to meet efficiency demands of Gorbachev's economic reforms. Some return to crime.

Bakatin also said police have proven ill-prepared to cope with organized crime that is seeping into the cooperative movement of private enterprise, which Gorbachev has encouraged to provide goods and services not available under the state economy.

Arafat Calls For More Confrontation With Israelis

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NICOSIA, Cyprus — PLO chairman Yasser Arafat today called for more confrontation in the 13-month Palestinian uprising to counter harsher tactics by Israeli troops in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

In a statement issued by the PLO news agency Wafa in Nicosia, Arafat addressed "The Unified National Command" of the uprising and "popular committees, students in schools and universities, and residents of (refugee) camps and towns and villages."

Israel, Arafat said, has escalated its "Iron Fist" policy to try to crush the rebellion, "forgetting that our people had decided from the beginning to continue the uprising until the end of the occupation."

"So let us have more confrontation against the Zionist occupation and the Fascist hordes of murderous settlers."

"In our steadfastness and faith, the enemy faces its inevitable dilemma, from which the way out is the retreat of its forces from the occupied lands," Arafat said.

During the uprising, or intefadeh in Arabic, which began in December 1987, Palestinians have attacked Israeli soldiers and Jewish settlers with stones and firebombs and, in rare instances, with guns and knives.

At least 362 Palestinians and 15 Israelis have been killed.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin of Israel on Tuesday announced tougher measures to deal with the uprising, including increasing the number of soldiers authorized to shoot at demonstrators and allowing soldiers to fire plastic or rubber bullets at stone-throwers as they flee.

Jaruzelski Wins Vote

WARSAW, Poland — Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's government won a confidence vote after offering to resign as a divided Communist leadership appeared to back its offer to conditionally reinstate Solidarity.

The party's governing Central Committee wrestled during more than two days of acrimonious debate over conditions for restoring legal status to the free trade union movement — Poland's most potent opposition force.

At the Aqua Driving Range on the Shores of the Sacramento River, the aim is to hit the water, not to avoid it

Here, All Drives Go Into Drink

By Charles Hillinger
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

REDDING, Calif. — Emery Belyea hit a couple dozen golf balls off the tee. Every ball went into the drink.

Belyea didn't get upset. He didn't swear. He didn't toss his club in anger.

Quite to the contrary he was rather pleased with himself. So was his wife Jeanne.

"You're really hitting the ball exceptionally well," Jeanne said.

Emery was all smiles.

The fact that he hit every ball into the water meant nothing to him.

Belyea was hitting 'em at the Aqua Driving Range in this Northern California city.

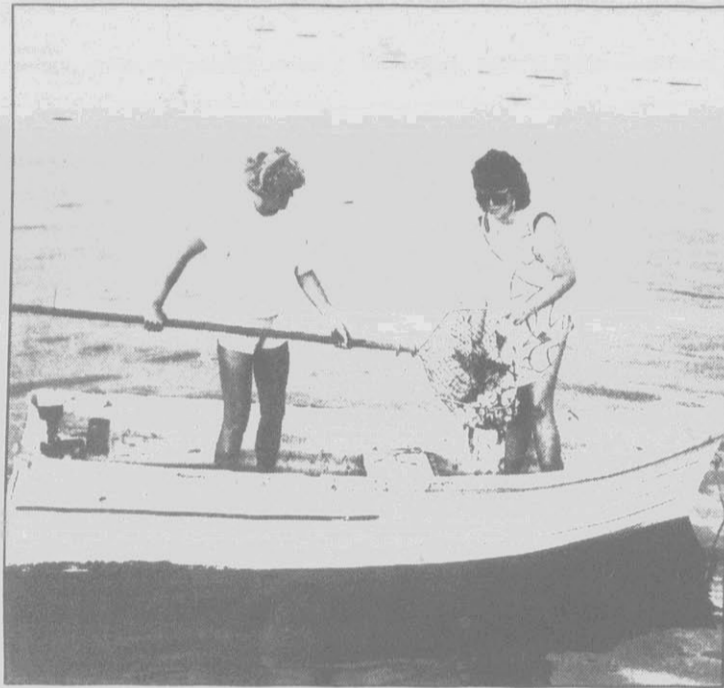

The 17 tees at the Aqua Driving Range are on the Western shores of the Sacramento River. The river is a quarter of a mile wide at this location in Redding.

Every ball hit at the driving range lands in the water. But the balls don't sink.

Especially made by McLaughlin Golf Ball Company in Crown Point, Ind., the balls have less compression than regular golf balls. The balls float.

Twice a day owners Dave and Sheri Nelson, their daughter Cindy, or others at the driving range on the river go out in a boat and scoop the balls out of the water with a fishing net.

A 3-foot-wide net attached to emp-

Specially made floating golf balls are collected with nets ty metal drums 240 yards from shore and bordering each side of the driving range prevents the balls from floating downriver to Sacramento.

"One time I lost $900 worth of golf balls when a beaver poked a hole through the net," recalled Nelson.

Any golfer hitting a towering drive over the net pays Nelson $1 for the lost ball. "The balls cost me 80 cents each," he explained. "If I catch someone knocking a ball out of the range I collect a $1 from that person."

Because the balls are low-compression, the distance the ball travels is about 10 percent less than a regular ball.

"The big hitters gladly pay the dollar. It's a thrill," said physician Dave Civalier, a regular on the range. "I hit one over the net once.

It made my day. Some of the big hitters slip in a regular ball into their bucket and drive it over the net to make themselves look good."

Asked what effect hitting practice balls into the water has on his game when he plays a waterhole on the golf course, Dr. Civalier said:

"No effect. Waterholes are just as intimidating for me after hitting buckets of balls into the Sacramento River as they always are."

"It's all psychological," insists Belyea. "I get near a water hazard on the course and I'm convinced I'm going in. It's like Murphy's law. When you're near water, the water has a tendency to attract your ball."

There is no roll on this driving range. Just a big splash or low balls skipping over the river like pebbles.

The driving range is popular with the lunch bunch. At noon break many eat by the water and hit a bucket of balls.

On rare occasions a golfer will hit a ball and his or her club will slip from their hands and fly out in the water.

"It is virtually impossible to retrieve a club" from the weedy, silty river bottom, Nelson said. "There must be at least 100 clubs on the bottom. I have hired scuba divers to dive and try to find the clubs. Even scuba divers with giant magnets. No luck."

He said he has never seen another driving range over water but has been told there are a handful scattered around the country.

A Matter Of Coordination

All my life I have been looking for a sport that features a cute outfit that I can wear to do my grocery shopping, requires no more effort than putting one foot in front of the other, allows me to keep my next meal strapped to my back, and offers the cheap thrill of having someone breathe heavily behind me.

I've found it! Cross country skiing. Imagine. No ambulance parked at the bottom of the hill. No tents at the finish line offering blankets and intravenous feeding. No standing around trying to find your pulse to see if it is accelerated.

I know there is a lot of curiosity about cross country skiing, so I will try not to get technical.

As with any sport, basically what we are talking about is coordination.

Fats are the most concentrated source of calories in foods. A teaspoon of margarine has 36 calories, while a teaspoon of pure sugar has 16 calories.

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

I cannot tell you how important it is to coordinate your entire outfit at one time. The knickers should fit well and be something eye-catching, preferably matching one's lightweight jacket. A cotton turtle-neck or scarf tucked smartly under a blouse is a nice touch. Socks should be dark to help keep the calves from looking like piano legs. A lot of people wear thermal underwear, but personally I find it too warm for the supermarket.

What I really love about the sport is that you don't have to wear those awful caps that flatten your hair and make it look like an unmade bed. I prefer earmuffs.

Another tip is to avoid needless exertion. That is why I fry my chicken the night before and pack the knapsack with small bread-and-butter sandwiches, Thermoses of hot soup and hot chocolate, candy bars and, of course, a corkscrew.

Setting your pace as you go is very important in cross country skiing. If you tear off in a kick-glide movement the way you are supposed to, you will never meet anybody.

As with most sports, cross country skiing improves with time and practice. After a while, you learn that if you look too frightened to move, someone will clamp your skis on for you, pull your gloved hands through your poles and never leave your side.

As for the promise of great personal satisfaction, I wouldn't know. Maybe I will discover that next week when I venture out of the parking lot.

Telephone Puts Teens In Touch With Sex Advice

By Allan Parachini
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

A Delaware telephone number that offers frank talk about sex has been flooded with calls — many of them presumably from young men.

But state officials, rather than being in an uproar, are pleased by the heavy traffic on the toll-free "In Touch" line, which offers advice on such topics as "How to Score."

It is part of an innovative program by the Delaware Division of Public Health to educate what has been the toughest to reach and most poorly informed group on human sexuality: teen-age males.

With posters and brochures, health officials have tried to entice teens to call "In Touch" to listen to 50 tapes with such titles as "How to Score," "How to Say 'No,'" "Big Muscles and Manhood," and "What She Would Tell You If She Could."

So just what do callers hear? After punching in a code for "How to Score," for example, a man's voice tells them: "You want to get lucky, right? You want to get what you want. If you're a man, you want to get a little ... from whomever OK? You know what that means ..."

"We interviewed some incredible studs on this one and here's what they said: One said he held off (having sex) because he learned — correctly, by the way — that, if you try to make love under pressure and you don't know what you're doing, it's usually not very satisfactory."

"Another said he took care of his urges by himself. Not a bad idea, by the way. And he kept on having great fantasies and really enjoying them, without acting on them."

That message might not have been exactly what some callers might have expected, especially based on the tape's title.

But "if we came up with very clinical titles, the kids wouldn't be interested," said Lucille Siegel, director of Delaware's Office of Adolescent Health Services. "What we tried to do is come up with titles to the messages that would encourage kids to call up and listen."

"They think it's going to tell them how to go find a boyfriend or a girlfriend. In fact, it gets into things related to peer pressure and issues like whether you have to have a lover or a sex partner to be cool and accepted."

That the "In Touch" line has become so popular since it began in 1986 — it now receives nine calls an hour on weekdays in the peak period from just after school ends until dinner time — has attracted national attention.

Siegel, who recently published a brief essay describing the program in the American Journal of Public Health, said that her agency had received inquiries about it from agencies across the country.

Why? Siegel and Planned Parenthood chapter officials nationwide said it is frustrating trying to educate teen-age males, because the American ethic requires them to pretend to friends and peers that they know about sex, and that they are experienced with it.

The privacy of the call-in service, Siegel said, is one of the reasons why the program is so popular.

Members will tour the UCP Center at 12:30 p.m. Tuesday. They will also help with an upcoming auction.

The Book of Beta Sigma Phi was reviewed by Vickie Marcus. A contribution was made to international endowment fund.

An afternoon movie social will be held Jan. 28. A program on sweat-shirt making will be given at Tuesday's meeting at the home of Barbara Long.

which can be reached only by callers in Delaware, allows teen-agers to maintain appearances for their peers while still providing them accurate information they can relate to, Siegel said.

The program — funded by a federal grant that pays for the phone machinery, production of tapes and a statewide advertising and promotion campaign linked to high school sex education courses — had its genesis in a similar service once run by the Los Angeles Planned Parenthood chapter, Siegel said.

That program, which a Planned Parenthood spokeswoman said went out of existence six years ago, was less extensive. Baltimore's Planned Parenthood, and chapters in San Diego and California's Marin County and at least one county health department in Virginia have run similar programs, though none as explicit as Delaware's.

Though the Delaware tapes are explicit, they are carefully made. They are reviewed by a panel of several dozen representatives of church and community groups.

None of the 50 tapes focuses on abortion — a recognition that that topic, especially for a public agency, is too controversial for the call-in format.

Because of its format, statistical records can't determine the sex of the callers. But 42 percent of the callers, who push buttons to ask for specific tapes, requested selections designed for a male audience; 35 percent of the callers requested tapes on female-oriented topics; and 23 percent heard tapes considered neutral.

Despite extensive local media publicity about the program, there have been no complaints about it from any group, said Barbara Ryan, director of education for Planned Parenthood of Delaware, the agency that houses the "In Touch" answering machine.

The service, Ryan said, must be filling a large, unmet need because the machine "is going all the time."

"How to Score" is the most popular selection, and it, like the other messages, contains a carefully structured, classical series of public health messages.

In addition to thinly veiled references to sex, seduction and masturbation, "How to Score," for example, also advises about: effective birth control; religious and other concerns about sex, masturbation and sex among unmarried teens; and the importance of caring, communicative relationships over sexual flings.

It closes with a quiz on responsible sex and ends with the male voice observing: "So how did you score? Or, how important is scoring to you? Unless you scored well on this little quiz, you may need some work before you get lucky. If not, you may be just very unlucky and your partner may be, too."

Appalling, Cartoonist Finds, Is Appealing

By Richard Harrington
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Matt Groening's imagination has been hellish from a very early age.

"My first national publication was in the third grade," the cartoonist says. "I won a short-story contest in Jack and Jill magazine, a finish-this-story about a little kid on Halloween who went up into his attic, bumped his head and said, 'Now I know what I want to be' — and then you finished the story."

"Most kids wrote 'I wanna be a cowboy,' or 'a fireman.' In mine, the kid struck his head and he died and they boarded up the attic, and every year on Halloween he'd come down and eat dinner in silence with his family and then go back up to the attic."

"And they printed this in Jack and Jill magazine. Unfortunately, the prize was going on the local version of 'Romper Room,' which was a total humiliation when you're in the third grade, because that's for 5-year-olds. They tucked the microphone in my face, and I said, 'I don't know what to say; I don't know what to say,' and I wouldn't talk because I felt so bad."

These days, Groening isn't feeling so bad — a six-figure income no doubt eases the pain — and he's doing a fair amount of talking about himself and the altered egos who inhabit his darkly cynical "Life in Hell" strip, currently syndicated in more than 70 weeklies.

In Washington recently for a book-store session promoting his fourth compilation, "Childhood Is Hell," Groening didn't just sign his books, he doodled them, taking the time to enliven inside covers with his thermonuclear family: bucktoothed, google-eyed Binky, the tragic Everyrabbid and perennial victim; Sheba, Binky's betrayed-betraying and therefore perpetually irritable girlfriend; Bongo, their illegitimate, perpetually panicked, one-eared son; and, of course, Akbar and Jeff, gay identical twins whose entrepreneurial energies would put Donald Trump to shame.

There's the universe of obsessions that have defined Groening's books — childhood, school, love, work and, underneath everything, death. (Here's Binky offering solace when Bongo suddenly starts thinking about life after death: "You're afraid there's no heaven. But look on the bright side — there's no hell, either... except this one.")

It's a topsy-turvy world in which lovers and friends can't be trusted, parents are out of control, kids are uncontrollable, students are terrorized by peers and teachers alike — and where everyone seems to be at the mercy of forces beyond their ken, looking for answers without having any idea what the questions are. It's funny and fatalistic, rude and revealing, touching raw nerves, funny bones and heartstrings all at the same time.

Washington Post/Dudley M. Brooks

Matt Groening, author of comic strip, 'Life In Hell'

Groening's drawings are, at best, primitive, serving mostly as a vehicle for highly focused writing that melds social commentary and pure entertainment. Binky and company don't actually have much personality of their own, and they are more appalling than appealing.

Mostly they talk, ruminate, whine, advise and worry; they're mouthpieces for Groening's wired barbs, the Charles Redmans and Phyllis Oakleys of the counter-culture.

And they don't sleep well at night. It's the human condition revealed by rabbits. The strips are community mirrors — look in there and you'll see not only yourself, but all too many of the people you know.

Which may be why for two hours, the left-handed Groening — a big, bearded, graduate-student type — has been taking his time personalizing various books and attending to the tales of his customers, quite a few of whom seemed to be buying "Love Is Hell" because they had ex-es to grind.

Sitting unnoticed on a step behind the book table is another cartoonist, one whose "Ernie Pook's Comeek" often appears in the same publications with "Life in Hell."

Like Groening, Lynda Barry draws in a crude style that sometimes obscures the wit and compassion of the writing. There's an old friendship — they went to the same college in Washington state in the mid-'70s, where their work first appeared in the student paper — and now two of the leading lights in avant-cartooning are headed for a bite at the Kozy Corner, which sounds like a comic invention but nestles at a near-by corner.

"This is very odd," Groening says. "She's going to be able to correct me when I make up stuff."

"I've been drawing all my life," says Groening, 34. "My father, Homer, was a cartoonist when I was very young, and later he was in advertising, so we got every kind of general-interest magazine in the country. I looked at a lot of cartoons in The Saturday Evening Post, Punch, The New Yorker, and even before I could read, I liked looking at the drawings. And since we used to have lots of sketch pads and pens lying around the house, I just took it up myself."

Growing up in Portland, Ore., in a house situated between an abandoned zoo and its successor, Groening also grew up the middle of five children, a vantage point that let him experience sibling abuse from both directions (a theme invoked most directly in "Lies My Older Brother and Sister Told Me" and "Lies I Told My Younger Sisters"). Much of "Life in Hell" is elaboration and invention based on Groening's childhood.

"Most of us have forgotten what it was like to be in school," he says in "Childhood Is Hell." But "I took notes."

Indeed, part of that book is based on Groening's fifth-grade diary, kept "because I got in trouble so much, and I wanted to have a record of that time to look at later to see whether I was right or not." A typical entry: "Not too many guys got into trouble today. I did."

Groening and Barry have already exerted an influence on younger cartoonists, though they emphasize — gladly — that no one is copying them. "I can't even copy me," Groening says.

In the meantime, "Life in Hell" continues, and Groening is promising at least one change in direction.

"My strip started when Reagan was running for president in 1980, so 'Life in Hell' was an appropriate title," he says. "I swore that if George Bush lost, I was going to change the name of the strip to 'Life Is Swell.'"

"My hopes had gotten up, and now I'm angry. My new slogan is 'Impeach Quayle First' — so, yes, my strip will become more political."

Fairy Tales Should Banish Wicked Stepmother Image

Dear Abby: I recently married a widower who is the father of three young children, so now I am a stepmother. I love these children and they love me, but here's the problem:

I hope you won't think I am being childish or silly, but while reading bedtime stories to the children, I am deeply hurt when I come across a character in the story who is described as the "wicked stepmother." Abby, this is terribly unfair to all the kind and caring stepmothers.

Is there anything we can do to stop perpetuating this ugly myth? How can we good stepmothers combat the "wicked stepmother" label? — A Not-So-Wicked Stepmother

Dear Stepmother: Don't take the "wicked stepmother" label personally. She's been in the fairy tale literature for generations, and until and unless a more contemporary author of bedtime stories replaces her with "a kind and loving" stepmother, all you good stepmothers will have to let your deeds speak for themselves.

There must be a special place in heaven for those noble women who have chosen to raise another woman's children. And if there isn't, there should be.

Dear Abby: My father left our family when I was a young girl. (I am now 26 years old.) He changed

Dear Abby

his name and cut off all family ties. It's been nearly four years since I've heard from him — but that doesn't stop him from putting my name and telephone number on all of his hospital forms as "next of kin." The only reason I know of his recent heart attacks (he's had three) is because the hospitals have called me numerous times regarding information as to his whereabouts for non-payment of his bills.

I realize this may sound cold, but I want nothing to do with this man. My concern is, when he dies, am I financially responsible for his funeral expenses or any of his unpaid bills? He and my mother are legally divorced and everyone else in the family feels the way I do about him.

What should I do? Please hurry your answer. — Concerned In California

Dear Concerned: According to Arthur Groman, my legal consultant, there are specific provisions in the law of California governing the obligation of children to support their parents who are in need. There is also a provision of law that any adult person abandoned by a parent prior to the age of 18 may bring an action to be relieved from the obligation of support. Because of the nature of these laws, you should consult a California attorney.

Dear Abby: My husband and I have a daughter who is 14 years old, and already she is 6 feet 2 inches tall. We have heard that she will continue to grow until she is 16 years old.

She feels very self-conscious being so tall for her age. Abby, can anything be done to stop her from growing taller? — Worried In Hawaii

Dear Worried: Ask your family physician to arrange a consultation with a pediatric endocrinologist. In recent years, the medical profession has learned much about how to "discourage" (as well as "encourage") growth.

Confidential To "Eunice In Newark": All men do not cheat on their wives. But it's a fairly safe bet that the man who says they do cheats on his.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 6910, Los Angeles, CA 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed some spotty gains today.

At 10 a.m. on Wall Street the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials stood at 2,238.75, unchanged from Wednesday's close.

But gainers outnumbered losers by about 6 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 534 up, 439 down and 537 unchanged. Other market indicators advanced slightly.

Volume on the Big Board came to 28.55 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The Labor Department reported that the consumer price index rose 0.3 percent in December, bringing the increase in the index for all of 1988 to 4.4 percent.

Housing construction fell 2.2 percent in December, ending 1988 on a flat note after three consecutive monthly increases, the government said today. The Commerce Department said the weakness in December helped drag down housing construction for the entire year to 1.49 million units, the poorest showing for the housing industry since the recession year of 1982 when 1.06 million units were built.

Compaq Computer climbed 2 to 62 1/2, in active trading. The company said its sales and earnings for the fourth quarter were likely to exceed analysts' estimates.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .06 to 161.07. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .35 at 308.57.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 24.11 to 2,238.75, surpassing the recovery peak of 2,226.07 it reached last Friday.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by more than 2 to 1 on the NYSE, with 1,038 up, 463 down and 459 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 187.54 million shares, against 143.93 million in the previous session.

Drought Is No. 1

Nevertheless, 70 percent of the nation experienced "extensively warm and dry conditions," he said. Wheat, corn and soybean production fell by 30 percent to 40 percent.

Agricultural losses throughout the United States totaled $30 billion even though all the damage has not yet been tallied, including the drought's effect on feed development, the livestock industry and the consumer, who faces an increase of 2 percent to 4 percent in food prices, Changnon said.

Summer high temperatures set records for any date in 13 percent of the country, contributing to an estimated 10,000 deaths related to heat stress, Changnon said.

The most long-lasting effects will be losses to the environment, Changnon said. The populations of certain species of wildlife in the Mississippi River basin were reduced by 5 percent to 30 percent. The damage due to forest fires was the greatest on record.

Changnon and the other researchers did not give details of how they derived their figures on the drought's severity.

Falling water levels in the Mississippi River stopped barge traffic in June and July, greatly disrupting shipments of coal, grains and petroleum products.

The researchers agreed it was impossible to say whether the drought was evidence that the global warming known as the greenhouse effect was beginning to take hold.

Stephen H. Schneider of the National Center for Atmospheric Research in Boulder, Colorado, said that the greenhouse effect could be expected to increase the severity of droughts but not their frequency.

Whether the drought of 1988 was intensified by an underlying greenhouse effect or was just caused by unusual seasonal weather variations cannot be determined, he said.

Botha Appoints Acting President

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — President P.W. Botha, who was hospitalized after suffering a stroke, today named Chris Heunis, a longtime ally and a government minister, as the acting president, Botha's office said.

Heunis, the senior-ranking Cabinet minister, served as acting president for several days last year while Botha was traveling in Europe. It was not immediately clear how long Heunis would remain in the post.

Heunis, the minister of constitutional development, is considered a mainstream member of Botha's National Party who would be unlikely to seek any major changes in policy.

"We will continue within the parameters laid down by the state president," Heunis, 61, said at his swearing-in ceremony.

Botha, who turned 73 on Jan. 12, suffered the stroke Wednesday morning and was taken to No. 2 Military Hospital in the Cape Town suburb of Wynberg.

Botha's office and hospital oficials said the president was in stable condition today and did not disclose any additional details.

But the Afrikaans-language newspaper Beeld said Botha was suffering from muscle weakness on one side of his body. Beeld, citing unidentified doctors, said without elaborating that the muscle weakness was not a "total paralysis."

Botha's spokesman, Jack Viviers, told the government-run South African Broadcasting Corp. this morning the president "spent a very restful night. His condition has stabilized further."

"There are no complications I know of," Viviers added. "All indications point to the fact that it was a mild stroke."

Botha was taken today to the nearby Constantiaburg Clinic for additional tests and was returned to the military hospital later in the day.

Heunis was sworn in this afternoon at Tuynhuis, the state president's official residence and office in Cape Town.

dreds of homeless people protested outside the lavish banquets held for Republican boosters. Protesters outside one banquet at Union Station chanted "Feed the poor, not the rich."

"America is strong once again, but the job is not complete," Bush said at the Lincoln Memorial. "Some are still hurting. And we care."

Echoing a goal outlined at his victory celebration in Houston on election night, he declared: "I will try to be a president of all the people."

After a whirl of late-night partying on Wednesday, the president-elect planned a more subdued day today as the public inaugural festivities continued unabated.

The centerpiece of the day's activities is a $9 million nationally televised inaugural gala tonight before a black-tie audience of 12,000 people at the Kennedy Center.

The gala, to be attended by both Bush and Vice President-elect Dan Quayle, will include entertainment by some of the biggest stars in show business, including singers Frank Sinatra, Anita Baker, Julio Iglesias and Loretta Lynn; ballet dancers Susan Jaffe and Mikhail Baryshnikov; actor Chuck Norris; cellist Yo Yo Ma; and the Mormon Tabernacle Choir.

Bush also was to attend a morning youth inaugural celebration, was viewed as a possible drop-in guest at a salute to Barbara Bush and planned a private dinner in the evening with family and friends.

Missile Cutbacks

Referring to recent NATO statements that modernization of the West's short-range nuclear missiles is possible, Shevardnadze said the Kremlin regards those plans as "a step backward" in arms control.

Shevardnadze said the Kremlin foresees a summit meeting of the leaders of all 35 countries participating in the Vienna meeting as "objectively necessary."

In a wide-ranging speech on the final day of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, Shevardnadze paid tribute to his departing American counterpart.

"Since the U.S. Secretary of State, George Shultz, is leaving his post tomorrow, I shall permit myself to pay tribute to him for everything that he endeavored, managed to do, and achieved in our common efforts," he said.

However, Shevardnadze criticized comments made by Shultz and other Western foreign ministers in their speeches as "fault-finding," full of accusations and hazardous to the general spirit of trust and cooperation embodied in the Vienna accord.

But Shevardnadze said "fortunately enough," they were the exception.

The Soviet foreign minister praised the Vienna agreement, aimed at enhancing human rights and religious freedom, as an achievement born of cooperation and an indication of hope for the future.

"The Vienna meeting has shaken up the Iron Curtain, weakened its rusty support, made new breaches in it and hastened its corrosion," Shevardnadze said.

He made no mention in his speech of the Berlin Wall or other specific points of contention between East and West that prompted Shultz and others to claim human rights restrictions persist in the East bloc.

After a meeting with Shevardnadze, Italian Foreign Minister Giulio Andreotti announced that Gorbachev will make an official visit to Italy in November.

No Soviet Communist Party chief has ever visited Italy and analysts said the visit could set the stage for a historic meeting with Pope John Paul II. The Vatican has always said the Pope would be open to such a meeting.

Thompson Walks Again; Hoyas Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Georgetown Coach John Thompson, continuing his protest of NCAA Proposition 42, wasn't in Providence, but Charles Smith was. And that wasn't good news for the home team.

Georgetown overcame Providence 80-77 Wednesday night when Smith hit a five-foot jumper from the right baseline with five seconds left and two technical foul shots with one second to go after Providence called a timeout even though it had none left.

Smith, who scored 35 points, also enabled Bobby Winston to make a layup that cut Providence's lead to 77-76 with 45 seconds remaining. Smith saved a ball that was headed out of bounds near midcourt by knocking it off Providence's Carlton Screen and into Winston's hands.

"I said from day one, this is Charles Smith's team," Providence Coach Rick Barnes said of the senior guard. "He was the man for them down the stretch."

Hoya freshman center Alonzo Mourning disagreed.

"This is not Charles Smith's basketball team," he said. "This is Georgetown's basketball team and, really, Coach Thompson's."

But Thompson, choosing to fight for a principle rather than a Big East victory, wasn't there to see his team score the game's last nine points. He sat out his second consecutive game to protest Proposition 42, a rule passed last week by the NCAA convention that tightens entrance requirements for athletes.

But Thompson did give Craig Esherick, his assistant who filled in for him, some advice three hours before Wednesday night's game.

"He said, 'Craig, if all else fails, give Smitty the ball,'" Esherick said. "It wasn't a bad strategy. It wasn't my strategy. It was Coach Thompson's strategy."

That strategy improved Georgetown's record to 13-1, 3-1 in the Big East. Providence, which lost its 20th spot in the rankings by falling to Villanova Saturday night, dropped to 13-2 and 3-2.

Georgetown missed its first 12 shots and trailed 48-37 at halftime and 61-51 with 12:28 left. After taking its first lead, 65-64 on Winston's layup with 7:29 to go, it fell behind 77-71 as Providence capped a nine-point run with 1:50 remaining.

Georgetown, which got 10 points from Jaren Jackson, made 16 of 38 shots in the first half but 17 of 30 in the second.

Tar Heels Clobber Duke

North Carolina State Rolls Over Wake Forest, 82-64

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM — Just when it appeared time to start writing off North Carolina's basketball season, the 13th-ranked Tar Heels arose to show top-ranked Duke they were far from becoming history.

Stung by a 106-83 loss to Virginia and an injury to point guard Jeff Lebo, North Carolina closed ranks and handed the unbeaten Blue Devils a 91-71 loss, their worst beating in Cameron Indoor Stadium since the Tar Heels took a 105-81 victory on the same court six years ago.

The loss ended Duke's victory run at 13 and was its first Atlantic Coast Conference loss after three victories.

"We showed that we are competitors," said center Scott Williams, whose 22 points were part of a Tar Heel offense that pounded the ball inside and took a big edge in rebounding.

"Through our adversity, the Tar Heels are going to get even stronger," Williams said.

Meanwhile, Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski suggested that maybe the streak of victories was headed for a close.

"It's kind of like we have been dodging a bullet and we got hit by an artillery shell," Krzyzewski said.

Three North Carolina players have had to sit out part of the season with injuries. J.R. Reid missed the beginning with a broken bone in the left foot and Williams sprained an ankle just before Christmas. Lebo's injury, suffered in the loss to the Cavaliers, was expected to have the most devastating impact.

Instead, the Tar Heels relied on Reid and Williams to take control of the boards, and King Rice to run the offense in Lebo's absence. All three came through when needed.

Williams grabbed 11 rebounds, eight in the second half. Of his five field goals in the second half, four were second-chance baskets off missed shots. Reid, in his third week of action since his injury, played 18 minutes, scored 13 points and had 10 rebounds.

Rice, whose abilities as a point guard have been questioned, scored 14 points, 10 of them at the free throw line and eight of those in the last 2½ minutes. He even ran the four corners, which Coach Dean Smith pulled out of mothballs to help keep a big lead and protect some of his foul-plagued players.

"I haven't been reading the articles about what everybody was saying," Rice said. "I just thought that I had to play hard. I don't look at it like I had to prove anything. I just wanted to play hard and have a good game."

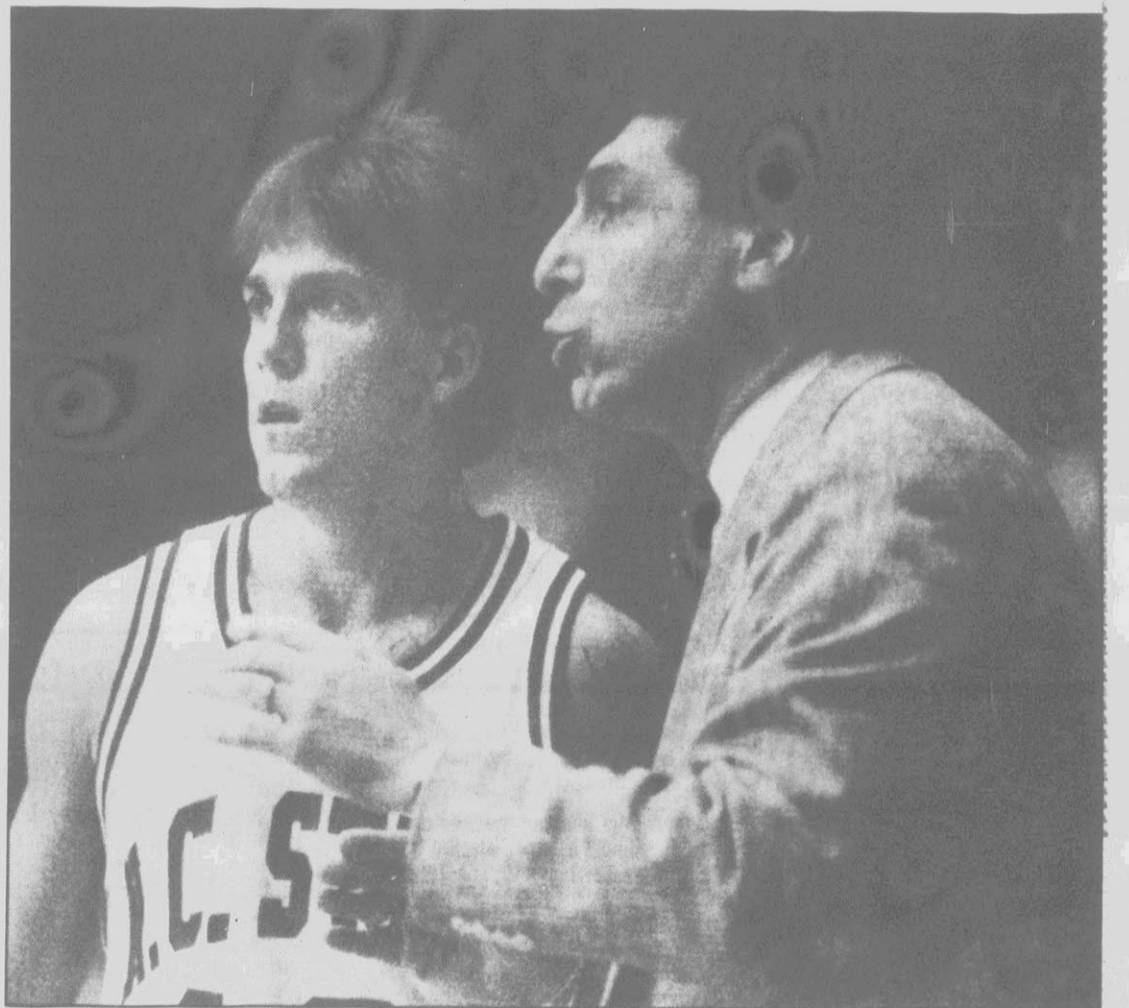

Running up a 10-point lead midway through the first half, North Carolina held a 39-34 halftime lead. The Blue Devils retaliated with a 9-0 run, capped by a Robert Brickey layup with 17:46 remaining, for a 43-39 lead, its first advantage since the opening basket.

"That run we made in the second half off of our defense ... was almost bad for us," Krzyzewski said. "It put us in a state of mind that we were going to score on layups and score right away."

After the Tar Heels took a

Not Everyone Is Against Prop 42

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

John Thompson and many other college coaches and administrators don't like Proposition 42 and want another chance to vote against it.

Not everyone, however, is opposed to the controversial NCAA rule that would stop awarding athletic scholarships to high school graduates who fail to reach minimum academic standards.

"I disagree wholeheartedly with Thompson," University of Colorado faculty representative William Baughn said. "It's not aimed at blacks. It's to get people ready for college."

"I'd like to see young people ready to come to a university," he said. "The standards are minimal. They can go to community colleges to make the grades and still play two years at a Division I school."

Baughn voted in favor of Proposition 42 twice last week. The rule was defeated 1591-51 a week ago Tuesday at the NCAA convention in San Francisco, but passed 163-154 the next day.

Proposition 42 prohibits athletic scholarships for incoming freshmen who don't have both a 2.0 grade-point average in high school and a minimum score of 700 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test or a similar score on another test. The measure takes effect Aug. 1, 1990.

Thompson, the Georgetown and U.S. Olympic basketball coach, is so angry about Prop 42 that he has

Walsh Looks For Success With Pass

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — San Francisco's "other" receivers have escaped heavy coverage by the Super Bowl media in comparison to the extra people assigned to swarm around Jerry Rice.

The 49ers hope the same holds true against Cincinnati at Joe Robbie Stadium on Sunday.

If Rice doesn't recover sufficiently from an aggravated right ankle sprain, they will have to create another deep threat or rely exclusively on Joe Montana's short game in passing situations.

Coach Bill Walsh says that regardless of anyone's health, the 49ers want to throw about 30 passes and complete 20 of them.

"That's what it'll take to play effectively against the Bengals," he said, "because we know the Bengals have a great offense and will be most likely moving the ball well themselves."

There's nothing wrong with a dependence on short passes, according to tight end John Frank, who happens to be one of its prime beneficiaries.

"People tend to forget that that's the way the 49ers have done well in recent history," the five-year veteran said Wednesday.

Ball control is something Joe's master at."

Montana may have to be masterful without his primary weapon at full strength against the Bengals.

With four days remaining until the game, Rice said the ankle was 85 percent healthy, or about what it was after he first sprained it Oct. 16 against the Los Angeles Rams. In the next four games, he couldn't make cuts or play bump-and-run and totaled only 206 receiving yards and one touchdown.

Who will take up the slack if the All-Pro receiver isn't close to the form that has netted him five touchdowns in two playoff games?

There will be a distinct falloff to whomever does.

It could be wide receiver Mike Wilson, who caught a career-high 33 passes in the regular season but none so far in the playoffs. Or John Taylor, limited to 14 receptions before making six in post-season victories over Minnesota and Chicago.

It may be running back Roger Craig, who had a team-high 76 receptions but none longer than 22 yards.

Bengals Can Win With Run Or Pass

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Cincinnati Bengals Coach Sam Wyche, an amateur magician, has allowed his team's passing game to do a vanishing act in the playoffs.

Once known for their high-tech air attack, the Bengals have become a blue-collar running team in their climb to the Super Bowl. They've had under 100 net yards passing in three of their last four games, throwing sparingly.

A big question going into the Super Bowl is whether the passing attack has gone too far into hibernation to come alive if needed against the San Francisco 49ers.

Quarterback Boomer Esiason doesn't seem worried about having to pull out a win with his arm if the 49ers shut down the ground game.

"Yeah, we can win (by passing)," he said. "Sure running's a big part of it, but there have been games we've played this year where we've had to throw and we've won."

"I mean, we have 28 touchdown passes, so something's going right."

The passing game was doing just about everything right as the Bengals opened the season 6-0. Esiason threw 17 touchdown passes in his first seven games, and receivers Eddie Brown and Tim McGee formed the NFL's most dangerous tandem in the early going.

Esiason's maturation as a quarterback and Brown's improvement as a clutch receiver helped the passing game evolve into a quick-strike attack that can put up points quickly and avoid mistakes.

Esiason's ability to handle the Bengals' sophisticated no-huddle attack and his leadership on the field helped make him the league's MVP. Wyche says Esiason has a better grasp of the mental part of quarterbacking in his fifth season.

"He's become a better decision-maker on the field," Wyche said. "He doesn't try to force the ball down the field."

Esiason has put in more preparation time this year, filling a notebook with observations about opposing defenses. The improvement has been obvious.

"He did an excellent job of running their offense," 49ers defensive back Ronnie Lott said.

boycotted both games the third-ranked Hoyas have played since last week. Several critics say the rule is biased against minorities and have called it racist.

Grady Bogue, interim chancellor of Louisiana State University, disagrees.

"It seems a strange perspective that assumes that poor students and minority students are only enrolled on basketball and football teams," Bogue said Wednesday in New Orleans. "We have thousands of them enrolled in this school that are doing well in college. You cannot conclude that this rule does damage to the poor and minorities."

"A student who fails to obtain an athletic scholarship is not deprived of a college education. We have junior colleges and public colleges and universities that educate thousands of poor and minority students every year," he said. "I don't know if a basketball player who doesn't get a scholarship will go to college or not, but I do know that if they want to, they can."

Bogue's views are completely opposite those of LSU basketball coach Dale Brown, one of the rule's most outspoken critics.

Proposition 42 was written and sponsored by the Southeastern Conference, which had voted to phase it in unilaterally among its 10 member schools even if the NCAA as a whole didn't follow suit. LSU is a member of the SEC and so are the University of Georgia and University of Kentucky.

Charles Knapp, president of the University of Georgia, earlier this week called the proposal "a modest step in some ways, but an important step." He said there were "a lot better ways of promoting cultural diversity on campus besides athletic scholarships," such as hiring more faculty and providing more academic scholarships.

Knapp also said standardized tests are "imperfect measures, but they are used by all colleges and universities across the country to assist the admissions process."

"In my view, it is not a matter of cultural bias, but rather a matter of a young minority student, particularly blacks, coming into tests with less preparation than majority students," Knapp said. "We've clearly got an educational crisis in this country. That has been pointed out again and again in reports like 'Nation at Risk.' And we are seeing that reflected, rather than a demonstrated cultural bias, on SAT tests. Obviously, I don't believe it (the SAT test) is racist, and a majority of presidents of institutions that passed it (Proposition 42) in San Francisco don't believe it is racist."

throw as many crazy passes," Escherick said.

Providence, led by 20 points from Eric Murdock and 13 each from Marty Conlon and Abdul Shamsiddin, hit 18 of its 34 shots in the first half but only eight of 26 in the second.

Oklahoma 123, No. 17 Kansas 95
Mookie Blaylock scored 30 points and Stacey King had 23 in Oklahoma's rout of Kansas. It was the first game between the Big Eight teams since the NCAA championship game last season when Kansas upset the Sooners.

"I'm not going to talk about last year," Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs said. "Sure, I'd like to have had the same results, but that's behind us now."

The 123 points were the most ever scored against Kansas. The previous record was 115 by Kentucky in 1970.

Blaylock, who also had 12 assists and five steals, now has 1,000 points in his two-year career at Oklahoma.

Milt Newton paced Kansas with 22 points.

Florida St. 112, Arkansas 105, OT Reserve Derrick Mitchell missed

the front end of a one-and-on with six seconds left in regulation and the score tied at 100, but scored all seven of his points in overtime as Florida State downed Arkansas.

Mitchell's two free throws with 4:14 left in overtime put the Seminoles up 102-100, Florida State's first lead since it was ahead 73-72 with 11½ minutes to go.

George McCloud led the Seminoles with 28 points. At 13-1, it's the best start in school history. The Razorbacks are 10-4.

Tennessee 83, Florida 76
Dyron Nix scored 19 of his 29 points in the second half to lead Tennessee past Florida. The Volunteers improved to 12-2 and lead the Southeastern Conference with a 5-0 record. Florida fell to 8-9 and 2-4.

Nix scored Tennessee's first nine points of the second half, but the Vols could not pull away as Dwayne Schintzius and Livingston Chatman kept the Gators close. Schintzius finished with 28 points and 12 rebounds, and Chatman had 19 points.

The Vols' biggest lead of the second half was 14 points on two occasions.

"That's why he's the MVP."

Esiason led the NFL's passing ratings every week of the regular season. One of his most impressive statistics is his average yards per completion: 9.2, tops in the league.

He achieved that with his strong arm, convincing play-action fakes and the speed of McGee and Brown.

"All of them can beat you," 49ers defensive back Don Griffin said. "Brown has been making big plays all year and piling up a lot of yards."

Brown set a club record with 216 yards receiving against Pittsburgh. He has been most dangerous when Esiason makes a good fake handoff, bringing the safeties toward the line of scrimmage and leaving Brown with one-on-one coverage on a deep pattern.

The Bengals' emphasis on running has reduced Brown's statistics recently — he hasn't caught more than two passes in any of his last seven games. But he remains a deep threat that keeps defenses wary. He finished the season as the AFC leader with 53 catches for a conference-high 1,273 yards.

"He's been incredible, a big-play receiver," Esiason said.

"He's not going to catch 80 passes; he's going to catch about 60 passes. And when he catches them he's going to make big plays."

"He's one of the unselfish people on this team, because you'd think a player of his caliber would want the ball more."

McGee played well enough at the start of the season to displace veteran Cris Collinsworth, who was sidelined with a pulled hamstring and then had to settle for a backup role when he became healthy.

"Their wide receivers are very talented, very fast and they're smart," Lott said. "To play for Sam Wyche you've got to be smart to play receiver. They do some creative things other than just running patterns. They're smart, they understand what Boomer's trying to do on the football field, and they get open."

Esiason also has running back James Brooks and Pro Bowl tight end Rodney Holman as secondary targets, giving the Bengals a well-rounded passing attack.

The Bengals' receivers also have excelled in another area this season — blocking for the running game. McGee's work against Buffalo's Derrick Burroughs prompted the defensive back to retaliate and draw an ejection from the AFC Championship.

"They're real good blockers," 49ers cornerback Eric Wright said. "And if you don't watch it, they'll go by you. They try to get defensive backs frustrated, like McGee did (with Burroughs). They do a great job at that."

timeout, North Carolina came back with six straight points. Duke answered with three baskets of its own, the last a 3-pointer by Phil Henderson with 14:50 left, for a 50-45 lead.

North Carolina charged back and took the lead for keeps. A 13-2 run gave the Tar Heels a 58-52 edge and the runaway was on with the lead growing as big as the final margin on the strength of 15 of 19 free throws in the last 10 minutes.

"I knew, coming into the game, knowing Dean's teams, coaching against them the last nine years with a lot of adversity, a winning program responds," Krzyzewski said. "They came out and played a magnificent game."

Brickey, who went out briefly with a shoulder injury, led Duke with 20 points. Henderson scored 16 points and Danny Ferry, playing in obvious pain from a lower back injury, had 14 points.

N.C. State.....82
Wake Forest.....64

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State coach Jim Valvano said the only constant he's looking for from his team is ultimate effort, usually something the 15th-ranked Wolfpack are expected to produce at tournament time.

But it's mid-season and N.C. State, 12-1, is on a roll, downing Wake Forest 82-64 Wednesday night for its 10th straight victory and 3-0 first-place start in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"Effort is the only constant you can control. If the effort is there you have to be happy," said Valvano.

Chris Corchiani, who scored a career-high 22 points, and Brian Howard led a fast-breaking Wolfpack attack in building a 16-point halftime lead.

"We told the kids we were going to try to up tempo and keep it going, but we would have to play more players," said Valvano, who used four substitutes. "The game plan was to run a lot. Wake (Forest) is quick ... and we wanted to keep on running because we have a little more experience."

The Demon Deacons took an early six-point lead, but the Wolfpack press, led by Corchiani, forced 13 turnovers, many of which were converted into layups.

"What we wanted to do was stay in touch with their shooters," Valvano said. "I just feel so strongly about trying not to allow the other club's best scorer ... to knock in those 3-pointers. We played a little more traditional ... in that we picked them up more full court. We wanted to try to bother him (freshman point guard Derrick McQueen) a little bit up the court and make them make a lot of decisions."

"We missed some makeable shots early, then seemed to get anxious offensively, taking bad shots and simply not passing or catching the ball very well," said Wake Forest coach

Bob Staak, whose club fell to 8-6 and 1-4.

A layup by Howard, who scored 12 of his 17 points in the first half, with 7:47 left before halftime gave N.C. State a 27-18 lead. Over the next seven minutes, the Wolfpack went on a 16-5 run to built a 20-point margin.

During the run Howard, Corchiani and Avie Lester each had four points.

Corchiani, a sophomore guard, hit every shot he attempted in the opening period, including four from the field and two from the free throw line.

Wake Forest shot 27.2 percent from the field in the first half, hitting 10 of 37 shots.

The Demon Deacons closed to within 69-60 with 3:26 remaining on a 10-foot jumper by Sam Ivy, but Corchiani hit four straight free throws, Kelsey Weems scored on a dunk and Rodney Monroe hit a 3-pointer to give N.C. State a 78-60 lead with 1:54 left.

Corchiani scored 17 points earlier this season against Columbia. Monroe added 19 points for the Wolfpack.

Chris King led Wake Forest with 15 points, while Ivy and McQueen had 14 each.

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson Coach Cliff Ellis said the Tigers were only practicing against non-conference foe Youngstown State.

The Tigers defeated the Penguins 104-74 Wednesday night in a game Ellis described as "practice" after playing four Atlantic Coast Conference games in a row.

"There were some things I think we needed to touch up on, and we did that," Ellis said. "We went out and played hard and were able to get some guys in that deserved to play."

Eldon Campbell led five players in double figures with 24 points for the Tigers' fourth straight victory.

Campbell scored 19 in the first half as the Tigers, 11-3, took a 50-28 lead.

Youngstown State, 1-15, ran off seven straight points to open the second half and trailed 50-35 with 18:10 left. But Clemson followed with a 15-0 run to open a 65-35 lead with 14:49 remaining. Campbell, Marion Cash and Ricky Jones each scored five points during that stretch.

The Tigers' biggest lead was 100-62 with 3:13 to go.

Youngstown State, which lost for the sixth consecutive time, led only once, at 4-2 after about one minute. Clemson then scored 19 of the next 21 points for a 21-6 lead with 12:15 left in the first half.

David Young had 15 points for Clemson while Dale Davis added 14. Cash scored 13 and Jones 11.

Todd Lark paced the Penguins with 21 points. Vince Marrow scored 15 and Shane Johnson added 12.

Youngstown State coach Jim Clemons praised the Tigers' frontline, particularly Campbell.

"They proved to be the best team we've played all season," Clemons said. "They blocked a number of our shots. I thought Eldon Campbell played very well."

Campbell had seven of Clemson's 12 blocked shots.

Clemons also cited Young's outside shooting as a determining factor.

"They sprang David Young upon us. We wanted to play zone and make them shoot over us," he said.

Young was six-of-nine, including three-of-four from 3-point territory.

Georgia Tech.....88
Alcorn State.....63

ATLANTA (AP) — Coach Bobby Cremins of Georgia Tech says that in some games Dennis Scott develops a kicker's syndrome.

Georgia Tech's long-shot specialist didn't have that problem Wednesday night, hitting five of six 3-point baskets to score 23 points and lead the Yellow Jackets to an 88-63 victory over Alcorn State.

"When he shoots the ball well we are a different ball club," Cremins said after the Yellow Jackets, 11-4, took their first victory in the last three games.

"He doesn't have to shoot it much, he just has to shoot it well," Cremins said. "He's a shooter and when he doesn't shoot the ball well, he goes into what I call a 'kicker's syndrome.' When a kicker's not kicking field goals, they lose confidence and go into a shell. It's the same thing with Dennis. When he doesn't shoot the ball well he goes into a shell."

"I think he's kind of right," Scott said when told of Cremins' assessment. "But I never lose my confidence. Even when I miss two or three in a row I keep shooting. Shooting is confidence."

Scott had 17 of his points in the first half when Georgia Tech surged to a 50-34 lead. Tom Hammonds added 16 points in the first half, then sat out the second half with a bruised right shoulder.

Hammonds said he would be fine and definitely would be in the lineup when Georgia Tech meets second-ranked Illinois on Sunday.

Johnny McNeil added 15 points, Brian Oliver 13 and Anthony Sherrod 10 for Georgia Tech.

North Carolina Defeats ECU Swimmers

CHAPEL HILL — The University of North Carolina's swimming teams handed East Carolina a pair of defeats Wednesday, but the Pirates still managed to turn in some positive performances during the afternoon.

The UNC men took a 149-89 win in their meet while the Lady Tar Heels beat the Lady Pirates, 134-96. The loss was the first in dual meet competition for the men, now 8-1, while the women fall to 7-2.

ECU freshman Jennifer Muench set a new varsity and freshman record in winning the 400-yard individual medley. Her time of 4:42.40 broke and eight-year-old ECU mark.

Page Holt was a double winner for the Pirates, taking the 100-yard freestyle in 54.92 and the 200 freestyle in 1:57.44. Sherry Campbell also won two events, taking both the one and three-meter diving with 263.85 and 287.25 scores, respectively. The latter was a new varsity record for the Pirates.

Meredith Bridgers won the 100-yard breaststroke with a new varsity record of 1:06.03.

The ECU men won three events on the day. Raymond Kennedy took the 100 breaststroke in 59.92; Mark O'Brien won the 100 backstroke in 55.10, and J.D. Lewis captured the 500 freestyle in 4:44.54.

East Carolina will close out its dual meet season on Saturday, hosting Duke University at 2 p.m. in Minges Natatorium.

Pitt Paladins Defeat Wayne By 82-51

GOLDSBORO — Pitt Community College overcame another slow start and rolled to an 82-51 basketball victory over Wayne Community College Wednesday night.

Both teams had trouble at the start, with Pitt holding a 2-1 lead after four minutes of play. But after that the Paladins began to warm, building up a 13-4 lead. Wayne rallied, however, trimming it to 16-13 with 8:28 left. Pitt, however, pulled away again, taking a 34-21 halftime lead.

In the second half, Pitt opened with a 20-2 string, breezing out to a 54-23 lead to put the game away.

"We played our best team basketball of the year," Coach Charles Coburn said. "We shot 70.6 percent from the floor in the second half and were very, very patient. We've put in a new offense and I think that had something to do with it."

Ricky Congleton led Pitt with 33 points while Don Hutson added 13. Steve Whitley led Wayne with 16 while Tim Williams had 12.

Pitt improves to 5-12 overall and will play host to Fayetteville Tech at 2 p.m. Saturday.

Davis Leads Bucks To Win Over Hornets

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MILWAUKEE — Welcome home, his teammates told Mark Davis. "It's good to be back," he said Wednesday night after helping Milwaukee to a 118-106 win over the Charlotte Hornets in the Bucks' final home game before a six-game road trip.

The Bucks, who released Davis on Dec. 16, needed the 6-foot-5 guard and his instant offense Wednesday night. They had two starters, Larry Krystkowiak (groin) and Sidney Moncrief (leg), and their top draft choice, Jeff Grayer (knee), on the bench in street clothes with injuries.

Davis was more than willing to fill in, scoring a career-high 17 points in 27 minutes.

"It was tremendous for a guy who just flew in on Sunday, but the difference was we had him in training camp," said Bucks Coach Del Harris.

Davis, who returned to the CBA La Crosse Catbirds after he was cut and then signed two 10-day contracts with the Phoenix Suns before returning to Milwaukee, was happy to get the chance.

"Earlier, the coach told me to be ready, so I got myself ready. I prepared well to play," Davis said. "We just executed the offense. I was able to get open and my teammates responded well. I got a lot of easy baskets."

Davis had 11 points in the second quarter, helping the Bucks work back from a seven-point deficit after one period to a two-point halftime lead.

Then veterans Jack Sikma and Terry Cummings combined for 10 points in a 15-4 run to start the second half and Milwaukee was up by 13.

Leading by 12 after three quarters, the Bucks got a one-man run of 10-0 by Ricky Pierce, who hit five straight baskets, and Charlotte was finished.

Cummings had 26 points and Pierce 18 — 12 in the fourth quarter as Milwaukee beat Charlotte for the third time in as many meetings.

Warriors 133, Knicks 119
The New York Knicks were done in by several hot hands and a lot of cold ones.

The hot hands belonged to Golden State's Winston Garland, Mitch Richmond and Chris Mullin, who combined for 92 points on 33-of-48 shooting. The cold hands were those of the Knicks, who made only five of an NBA record 28 3-point shots and were only 20-for-36 from the foul line to Golden State's 32-of-38.

The result was a 133-119 victory for the Warriors, who own a six-game winning streak for just the second time in 10 years. The Knicks had a five-game winning streak snapped as they began a seven-game road trip.

Garland (10 of 13) and Richmond (10 of 15) scored 31 points apiece and Mullin (13 of 20) added 30 for Golden State. It was the second time this season that three players on the same NBA team scored 30 or more points. Last Dec. 27, Atlanta's Reggie Theus scored 32 and Moses Malone and Dominique Wilkins 30 apiece — also against the Knicks.

Lakers 111, Clippers 90
At Inglewood, Calif., a pair of 3-point shots by Michael Cooper paced a 10-0 fourth-period run that helped the Lakers remain the NBA's only unbeaten home team.

Despite dressing only nine players, the Clippers, who suffered their 11th consecutive setback, trailed only 85-79 with 8:12 remaining when the Lakers' 10-point burst in less than two minutes broke it open.

Magic Johnson scored 19 points and added 13 assists for the Lakers while James Worthy had 16 points and a season-high 15 rebounds. Quintin Dailey paced the Clippers with 19 points.

Mavericks 102, Nuggets 92

At Dallas, Mark Aguirre scored five of his 26 points during a 16-2 first-period burst. The Mavericks made eight of their first 13 shots in building a 15-point lead and never led by fewer than 10 points over the final three periods.

Rolando Blackman added 22 points as the Mavericks won their second consecutive game after seven straight defeats. Danny Schayes had 20 points for the Nuggets, who dropped their seventh straight game on the road, equaling their longest road losing skid over the past three seasons.

Pistons 103, Nets 90

At Auburn Hills, Mich., Vinnie Johnson's four points during a 13-1 run midway through the fourth quarter let Detroit pull away. The Pistons are 15-1 when holding their opponents under 100 points: New Jersey is 2-13 when scoring less than 100.

After trailing almost the entire game and never leading, New Jersey pulled within 84-82 on a basket by Buck Williams with 8:48 left. Detroit got a basket from Dennis Rodman and two free throws by Michael Williams to make it 88-82.

76ers 115, Celtics 104

At Philadelphia, the 76ers spotted Boston a 12-0 lead and then stormed back behind Ron Anderson's career-high 36 points, including 17 in the final period.

The Celtics led 83-80 at the start of the fourth quarter, but Philadelphia scored the first seven points in an 11-2 surge and took a 91-85 lead with 9:11 left. The Celtics got within three points five times, the last at 102-99 with three minutes remaining. The Sixers then outscored Boston 8-2 with the help of two field goals and a pair of free throws from Anderson.

Thursday Notebook:

Edwards Ranks Sixth In Scoring

East Carolina senior forward Blue Edwards currently ranks as the ninth leading scorer in the nation with a 25.5 scoring average.

Edwards, a 6-5 Walstonburg native, is the third highest ranked senior scorer in the NCAA Division I rankings behind Brigham Young's Michael Smith and Oklahoma's Stacey King. Smith is averaging 26.5 points per game and King 25.8.

Loyola-Marymount's Hank Gathers leads all scorers in Division I with a 33.9 point per game clip, while Louisiana State freshman sensation Chris Jackson is next with a 27.7 clip.

Prior to this past weekend, Edwards was the leading senior scorer in the country and was in the sixth position overall in scoring. In the Pirates' 62-57 win over James Madison Saturday, Edwards scored 23 points, while he chipped in 27 in the 86-74 loss to George Mason on Monday.

Edwards' scoring stats lead the Colonial Athletic Association. George Mason's Kenny Sanders, last year's conference player of the year, is second in scoring with a 23 point per game average and Richmond's Mike Winiecki is third with a 19.5 average.

Edwards also ranks fourth in the CAA in field goal percentage with a 54.7 percent average and eighth in free throw accuracy at 74.1 percent.

Dillahunt Has Shot For Ring

Former East Carolina defensive back Ellis Dillahunt certainly can tell a story of rags to riches.

Dillahunt, who suffered through an 11-33 career while at East Carolina, now has a chance to win a Super Bowl ring if the Cincinnati Bengals defeat the San Francisco 49ers Sunday in Super Bowl XXIII.

Dillahunt, who was drafted in the 10th round last year, is on the injured reserve list, but if the Bengals win he'll still carry home an extra $36,000. Even if they lose, Dillahunt will pocket $18,000.

Valvano Extends Winning Streak

North Carolina State's 82-64 win over Wake Forest Wednesday provided Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano with the longest regular-season winning streak of his N.C. State coaching career.

The victory over Wake Forest extended the State winning streak to 10 straight games. The nine-year coach's previous best was a nine-game streak during the 1984 season.

Valvano's longest streak ever was a 15-game streak which included the run to the national title in the NCAA tournament in 1983 and the beginning of the 1984 campaign.

Duke Fails First Top 20 Test

In its first test against a top 20 opponent this season, Duke University came out with a failing grade Wednesday as 13th-ranked North Carolina belted the top-ranked and undefeated Blue Devils, 91-71.

North Carolina, which has played what is ranked as the fourth toughest schedule in the country by USA Today computer rankings, may have been better prepared for the game. The Tar Heels have faced top 20 opponents such as Missouri, Arizona, Iowa and Stanford to name a few in the pre-season, while the Blue Devils have spent most of their time beating up on teams like Cornell, Davidson and William & Mary.

The Tar Heels, whose schedule is outranked by only Temple, Western Michigan and Oral Roberts, received a 82.15 rating in the poll for the toughness of their schedule, while the Blue Devils have a schedule rating of 71.67.

UNC-Wilmington Tickets Available

A limited number of tickets are available at the ECU ticket office for the Pirate basketball team's Jan. 28 CAA showdown at UNC-Wilmington. The tickets will remain on sale until Friday at 5 p.m.

The game, which is usually a sellout, will be televised live by Home Team Sports.

McNeill Wins Indoor Sprint

East Carolina's Eugene McNeill won the 55-meter dash at the Father Diamond Invitational on Jan. 15 in Fairfax, Va.

McNeill won with a time of 6.32, edging past St. Augustine's Tarrell Carpenter by 1/100ths of a second.

The Pirates' Ike Robinson also ran in the 55-meter event as well and finished in the fifth position with a time of 6.44 seconds.

'Rambo' Author's Father-Son Theme Surfaces In Miniseries

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Those who only know David Morrell's work through the Sylvester Stallone "Rambo" movies based on his books probably don't grasp the subtle subtexts.

But most of his 13 books, including the best-seller "Brotherhood of the Rose," now an NBC miniseries, revolve around father-son relationships.

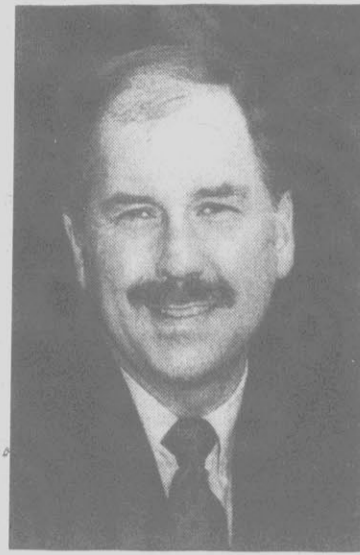

"Brotherhood of the Rose," a four-hour, two-part miniseries, is scheduled to air Sunday after the Super Bowl and conclude Monday. It stars David Morse and Peter Strauss as orphans trained by their adoptive father (Robert Mitchum) to be assassins. But the father eventually betrays them.

The original "Rambo" was based on Morrell's 1972 book, "First Blood," about a Vietnam veteran who turns against the society that slights him. Even Rambo is a surrogate son. His former commander, Col. Trautman, played by Richard Crenna in the movies, is the father figure.

Though he is known for writing in the action-adventure genre, Morrell has written a book called "Fireflies" about the death last year of his 15-year-old son, Matthew.

"I've had more response from that book than anything else I've written," he said. "I've heard from people with pain. It's about a child who died and my grief. I was in a state of crisis. I was trying to make sense out of the irrational."

"Fathers and sons have been a major theme of my work. My father was a flier in World War II and was shot down over France. I never knew him. I grew up with a strong sense of something missing. I write about male bonding between an older man and a younger man. I grew up without a father, and now I must live the rest of my life without a son."

Morrell said the germ of "Brotherhood of the Rose," was a casual remark by an intelligence source who told him the primary recruiting ground for assassins is orphanages.

"I got very interested when I heard that," said Morrell. "I said, 'What an idea for a book!'"

The father figure in "Brotherhood of the Rose," he said, "doesn't perceive of himself as a villain. He's with the government but sort of operates in a world of his own. The crux of the story is that these two young men were programmed as assassins."

"But what happens is that at a certain point they discovered he didn't love them, that he had been using them. It turns into a chase as the two students stalk the old pro. It's the sons against the father. It's almost like a Greek tragedy."

"Brotherhood of the Rose," directed by Marvin J. Chomsky, was filmed in New Zealand. That island country, with its varied scenery, stands in for Thailand, Panama, the United States, France and England.

Morrell said he is pleased with the results "because it gets in the action as well as the characterizations." He said he has no complaint about the "Rambo" movies, but does wish the characterizations weren't usually sacrificed in favor of the action.

Morrell was a professor at the University of Iowa for 16 years until he resigned in 1986 to devote all his time to writing. "I had full tenure as a professor, but I said I'd done that," he said. He decided to remain in Iowa City.

He said he is lucky "people buy what I write. I can live anywhere I want."

Morrell said his research in preparation for writing included attendance at the National Outdoor Leadership School in Lander, Wyo., and the G. Gordon Liddy Academy of Corporate Security and Private Investigation.

The outdoor school taught him about survival in the wilderness. In the final three days of the course he and his classmates had to reach a certain point on the map. But to get there they had to climb a mountain range in winter with no food. He lost 30 pounds in three days.

The other course, taught by former Watergate conspirator Liddy, trained him in corporate security and investigation. The school no longer exists.

Actors In New James Bond Movie 'Give' To Help Film

By Richard Herzfelder
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEXICO CITY — Something there is about an actor who loves the act of giving, so it was nice to find a bunch of "Santa Clauses" running around the set of the new James Bond movie, "License Revoked."

Timothy Dalton "has been very giving as an actor," said Robert Davi, forgetting for the moment that his villainous character spends the last part of the movie trying to grind Dalton-Bond into cocaine dust.

"I don't think you can create anything if you don't give," returned Dalton, who manages to give Davi's character a hole in the head.

"He's very professional, very focused," said Carey Lowell of Dalton, shortly after saving Bond from a fate worse than coke. "It's better than working with somebody who doesn't give a damn."

Seriously, now. "I would loathe a concept of work in which people are competing with each other," said Dalton. "I think it is a two-way process. It is a game where you throw something at somebody and they throw it back at you."

In other words, these actors say, this is how they work. They have nothing to give but themselves, and that can be scary. But if an actor holds back, if nothing is given, nothing can be thrown back.

"It's probably true that some actors see it as a competition, but it seems very ungenerous to attempt to deny to another actor the tools with which to work," Dalton said. "I think if you look at any really good actors, you'll find them all very giving."

Lowell, whose face has decorated the covers of Vogue and Mademoiselle, understands that concept as one of the differences between modeling and acting.

"It's different from modeling because you don't have to give to the camera. You give to the actors instead," she said. And if you give only to the camera? "In a film, if you're static it shows immediately. It's difficult."

To hear these people talk, you'd think making moving pictures was fun, not long hours of work, intense concentration, weird situations. Just what does an actor think about while hogtied on a conveyor belt, waiting to be ground (almost) to magnesium dust (that's what they use as a stand-in for cocaine).

"When you're in the thick of it you have to think of what to do in the scene. You've got to be on form and on key and concentrated," said Dalton.

The effort to maintain concentration is why he has a reputation for being difficult for outsiders to talk to on the set.

"If you can't get it right you don't get a moment to do it again," he said. "You just don't get a moment to do it again."

Now let's back up. The film is "License Revoked," and it is due for release in the summer. James Bond loses his license to kill and goes off the reservation to avenge his friend, CIA agent Felix Leiter, who gave his leg to some sharks with the help of Franz Sanchez (Davi), an evil drug lord modeled a little bit on Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, de facto ruler of Panama who has been indicted on drug trafficking charges in the United States. He is foiled with the help of...

Pam Bouvier (Lowell), a former pilot for the CIA who worked with Leiter and who saves Bond and helps gift-wrap Sanchez at Mexico City's Churubusco Studios under the direction of John Glen.

Dalton, 42, is a classically trained actor who has established his ability to play all kinds of roles — everything from Shakespeare's "Richard II" to the male lead opposite Mae West in "Sextette."

That range is the envy of Lowell and Davi.

"Unfortunately, I always have to play a beautiful girl. Now I want to do something less stylish," the 27-year-old Lowell said.

Davi, 35, would like to go up the style scale, not down, and to that end he's trying to push the envelope on the Bond villain bit.

"This guy could be a friend who you think it'd be nice to have a drink with, but after the last sip he stabs you. It kind of makes him fun to play," said Davi.

Hall Of Fame Inductions Turn Into Rock 'N Roll Jam Session

By Mary Campbell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Mick Jagger, natively dressed and short-haired, stood on a stage at the Waldorf-Astoria and reflected humbly on his passage from irreverent "bad boy" to revered relic in the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame.

"Tonight we're on our best behavior and we're being rewarded for 25 years of bad behavior," the Rolling Stones' leader said Wednesday night at the fourth annual induction ceremony, at which Dion, Otis Redding, Stevie Wonder and the Temptations also entered the Hall of Fame.

Along with a rare appearance by the reclusive Phil Spector, who was inducted into the Hall's non-performer category, Jagger sounded the evening's high note when he promised in his acceptance speech, "We're not quite ready to hang up the number yet."

The theme of a Stones reunion was taken up by the Who's Pete Townshend, who in inducting the group alternately teased and praised them, concluding, "Don't try to grow old gracefully. It wouldn't suit you."

"Will the Stones ever work again? If it wasn't for the vast sums they can make, they might not bother," Townsend said. "Luckily for us fans then that Mick has such expensive tastes."

"No more gags. The Stones are the greatest. Although they're all friends, I'm still a fan."

The four Stones present — Jagger, Keith Richards, one-time Stone Mick Taylor and his replacement Ron Wood — participated in an after-midnight jam session of inductees and presenters that followed the awards.

At one point, Richards played guitar directly behind Jagger, but the two, who've rarely been on stage together in recent years, didn't perform face to face. Jagger sang with Tina Turner and Little Richard, both presenters.

Bruce Springsteen, who was not part of the ceremonies, sang "Crying" in tribute to Roy Orbison, a previous Hall of Fame inductee who died late last year.

Wonder, inducted by Paul Simon, was accompanied on stage by his son and daughter. He said his selection made him want to "forever, till we die, give as much as we can."

Daryl Hall and John Oates introduced the Temptations by striking up "Don't Look Back," when five Temptations came on and took up the tune. The five original members, Otis Williams, Melvin Franklin, Eddie Kendricks, the late Paul Williams and David Ruffin, were inducted along with new member Dennis Edwards.

"This is about the past blending into the present," said Hall.

To be eligible for induction into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, musicians must have made recordings more than 25 years ago. The inductees were picked by more than 150 performers, producers, writers, record executives and broadcasters. A building is to be built in Cleveland, with a projected opening in 1992.

Dion, who named his group the Belmonts after a Bronx avenue, was inducted by Lou Reed and evinced delight at his selection, calling it "amazing."

"Rock 'n' roll has sure changed since my heyday," said the singer, who has a record-coming out in March. "I think, all told, 'The Wanderer' made me a little over $14,000. Over there, Bruce has $42 million on him. I'm joking around. You guys don't know what this means to me."

Little Richard was, as usual, outrageous as he inducted the late Otis Redding.

He called Redding "a pillar of rock 'n' roll. The first time I heard him since 'Lucille' I thought it was me. He was one of the greatest singers and composers that ever lived and that is including me, Jimi Hendrix, the Beatles, James Brown."

Redding died in a plane crash Dec. 10, 1967, while on tour. His widow, Selma, accepted his statue.

Ms. Turner inducted Spector, the celebrated record producer who defined a musical style with early '60s hits like "Da Doo Ron Ron" and "And Then He Kissed Me." Living up to a reputation for eccentricity, he arrived on stage surrounded by three bodyguards and departed with them, without pausing for photographs.

This year's inductees as pre-rock influences on rock and roll were the late Bessie Smith, whose son Jack Gee and granddaughter Beverly Clark were present; the Ink Spots, with the widows of Ivory Watson and Bill Kenny accepting; and the Soul Stirrers, a gospel group founded in 1934.

North's jump over game showed a good hand with slam interest but no control to cue-bid outside the suits he had already bid. South ventured on to the grand slam knowing that, at worst, his contract would hinge on a club finesse. Opposite the right hand it could be a laydown.

While South might have been guilty of overbidding, he was certainly culpable of underplaying. He won the diamond lead in hand, drew two rounds of trumps ending in dummy and discarded two clubs on the high spades. Next came the club finesse—down one.

South could have improved his chances considerably. The odds on the missing spades splitting 4-4 are about 33 percent, and the table has just enough entries to test the suit before declarer commits his fate to the club finesse.

At trick two declarer should cross to the nine of trumps and ruff a spade. The ten of hearts provides a second entry for another spade ruff. Now declarer can get back to the board with the ace of hearts to cash the ace and king of spades for two club discards.

When spades split 4-4, declarer can discard his queen of clubs on the long spade. And should spades turn out to have been 5-3, declarer has lost nothing. He is in dummy, and can fall back on the club finesse for his contract.

Former Marines Return To Khe Sanh

By George Esper
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KHE SANH, Vietnam — Twenty-one years ago in what is now only a heap of red dirt, U.S. Marines were crying out, "Corpsman! Corpsman! We've got wounded here!" as hundreds of artillery shells rained in on them.

It was here at Khe Sanh that U.S. Marines withstood a 77-day North Vietnamese siege in the winter and spring of 1968 in a classic battle of the Vietnam war, suffering more than 200 men killed and 1,600 wounded out of a garrison of 5,500.

Six of their former comrades, some of whom fought here, returned Tuesday to walk the same battlefield still strewn with shell casings and other leavings of war and to honor the men who died.

Standing in the fog-shrouded valley, in what was once the center of the base, restricted to a red dirt road because of land mines still around the area, surrounded by children, the Marines unfurled the American flag.

"There is no greater love than a man to give his life for another man," said Frank Noe, 40, of Stoughton, Mass., who served at Khe Sanh during the start of the siege. He then led the others in The Lord's Prayer.

"God bless all of those who gave their life at Khe Sanh," Noe said after the brief ceremony. "It's just a shame so many guys lost their lives not only here but all over the country."

"This was a hellhole, a pretty scary place to be. I sort of get that eerie feeling I had the last time I walked through this place. It brings back a little of that, especially with all this fog around."

All six were deeply moved as they visited Khe Sanh, one of a string of bases at which they served just below what was once the demilitarized zone that divided Vietnam into North and South at the 17th parallel during the war. The country was reunified in 1975 when the Vietnamese communists' victory.

Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the former commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam, once characterized Khe Sanh as an important cork that bottled up North Vietnamese troops from moving eastward the south's populated coastal regions.

The Americans abandoned Khe Sanh after the siege was lifted and engineers from the 11th Marines, a battalion in which five of the men revisiting the site served, bulldozed the base.

The battalion planted 100,000 land mines, and the six Americans came to Vietnam to help get rid of those that remain concealed.

They do not carry any equipment, but wanted to point out likely sites where mines may be concealed.

"This is a trip for me and all the other veterans to put this time in our lives to rest and say the land's at peace, the war's over, there's reconciliation between Vietnamese and Americans," said Mike Wallace, a 41-year-old farmer from Langdon, Kansas.

"I think we feel true peace now," said Gene Spanos, a 39-year-old police lieutenant from Rosemont, Ill., who organized Vietnam Revisited.

"If we could just say this to every Vietnam veteran who served in Vietnam that, 'Peace is here, peace should be at home amongst us all.' They should have their own peace. There's no more war here. It's over with."

The Marines were on an unofficial goodwill mission of their own that they planned for more than a year. In inspecting their former bases, they found that land mines they planted more than 20 years ago to protect them from attack still posed a danger to civilians.

"This is just a moment in our life we're always going to treasure, a chance to come back," said Spanos.

"It unloaded some excess baggage that I didn't really know I was still carrying around," said Nate Genna, a 41-year-old maintenance man from Boston. "We did confirm some serious problems do exist here as a result of our actions and we want as much attention brought to them as possible."

William Johnson, a 41-year-old electric sign maker from Manchester, Conn., said it was a good feeling for him to return without any fear of danger.

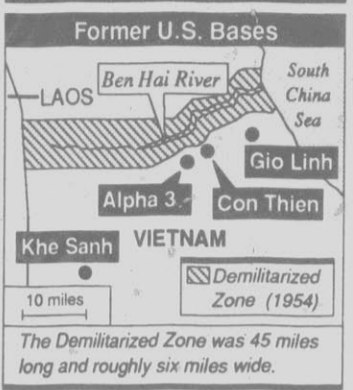

"I feel some reward by this trip," said Johnson. "I feel I have first-hand information about what's happening here, the chance of people being injured in certain areas. These are questions I've had. It's people that had nothing to do with the war that are suffering. It's 20 years later, there's no war going on and children who weren't even around during the war are exposed to danger."

Some of the men picked up Khe Sanh war remnants as mementos to take home, including a rusted American helmet.

As Johnson left the base, he picked up a piece of scrap metal, the remains of a mess kit, and cradled it in his hands.

"Scrap metal," he said as he gazed at it, "but this was somebody here 20 years ago, a soldier eating."

Perhaps one of his fallen comrades.

The Demilitarized Zone was 45 miles long and roughly six miles wide.

Human Testing Of Electric Heart Could Start In Late 1990s

By A.J. Hostetter
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HERSHEY, Pa. — Clarisse, a calf with an electric heart, is one sign that political fighting over federal funding hasn't stopped researchers trying to develop a permanent replacement for as many as 400 diseased hearts a year.

Clarisse got her heart Dec. 8, about eight months after the National Institutes of Health decided to suspend $20 million in contracts for research on a permanent artificial heart — and six months after the NIH reversed itself.

Dr. Claude Lenfant, director of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute — a part of the NIH — questioned in May whether more than a decade of research would lead to a permanent heart that the body wouldn't reject.

Under pressure from members of Congress, Lenfant said in July that the contracts would not be suspended. The five groups funded are Hershey Medical Center of Pennsylvania State University; the University of Utah; Abiomed Inc. of Danvers, Mass., working with the Texas Heart Institute of Houston; and Nimbus Co. of Rancho Cordova, Calif., working with the Cleveland Clinic.

"Clearly, there is controversy in the medical community over whether or not the artificial heart is the right device," Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., said recently. "If funding is cut off now, we will never know if the artificial heart was the right answer."

Researchers at Penn State and Utah have been working since the mid-1970s on electrical versions of the air-driven, or pneumatic, heart first implanted in Seattle dentist Barney Clark in December 1982 at the University of Utah.

Recipients of air-driven hearts remain mostly bedridden in hospitals, linked by tubes to large compressors, unless they get human heart transplants. Recipients of the electric heart will be able to walk, exercise and even work.

"The advantage of these hearts is that you'll be able to put everything inside the patient's chest except the battery," said Gerson Rosenberg, assistant chief of Penn State's division of artificial organs.

"Nobody is ever saying that this is going to be as good as a natural heart, that this patient is going to forget he's got it and go on to live a normal life. That's not true," Rosenberg said.

Because the devices must meet specific requirements — such as pumping eight liters of blood a minute — designs are similar at all five research facilities. The Penn State device, which has the size and heft of a squared softball, has a 10-pound, rechargeable battery pack on a waist belt. A battery in the heart will let a recipient take off the external battery for up to 45 minutes.

The device, designed to last about five years, probably will cost about the $80,000 to $100,000 that a heart transplant costs, Rosenberg said.

Hershey began testing its electric models in animals in 1983. One implanted Jan. 8, 1983, in a calf named "E.T." — short for "Electric Total" — enabled the animal to live 222 days — a record on any electric artificial heart.

Since then, the device has grown smaller — closer in size to a human heart — as researchers make use of advancements in a miniaturized electronics.

Rosenberg said he expects human tests to begin in the late 1990s. Researchers had hoped to start the trials in the early 1990s, but scaling down the electronics proved more difficult than expected.

Despite the delays in perfecting a permanent heart, there have been benefits from the research, including better knowledge of drugs to prevent heart disease or strokes, improved design on commonly used artificial heart valves, and better techniques and materials for use in cardiac bypass surgery.

Rosenberg said the progress that's been made against heart disease is unlikely to eliminate the need for artificial heart research.

"I don't think anything would please the people working on the artificial heart more than to hear that something was discovered to prevent all that," he said. "But I doubt that that will happen."

The Electric Heart

Researchers are working on an electric heart which will be powered by a 10-pound rechargeable battery pack belted to the patient's waist. The new heart will enable recipients to lead more active lives than is now possible with air-driven artificial hearts.

Designed for permanent replacement, the device will cost about the same as a heart transplant, $80,000 to $100,000.

An internal battery will enable the patient to take off the external battery pack for up to 45 minutes.

New Surgery Halts Strokes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MONTEREY, Calif. — A new kind of surgery can correct a common heart rhythm abnormality that is the underlying cause of 225,000 disabling strokes in the United States each year, its developer said.

The experimental procedure cures a disorder known as atrial fibrillation, which affects an estimated 1.5 million to 2 million Americans.

Although the strokes that result from this problem can sometimes be prevented with blood-thinning drugs, that treatment is often ineffective and may itself cause unwanted bleeding.

The new technique was developed by Dr. James L. Cox of Washington University School of Medicine, who described it Wednesday at a meeting of the American Heart Association. Slices are made in the atria, the two upper pumping chambers of the heart.

Cox has performed the operation so far on three people, and all of them have been completely free of the disorder since their surgery.

Garlic And Onions May Reduce Cancer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Garlic and onions can put a crimp in your social life, but they also could provide unexpected protection against cancer, according to a study published by the National Cancer Institute.

The study compared foods eaten by stomach cancer victims with the diet of healthy people in Linqu, China. Researchers found that the strong-smelling vegetables "can significantly reduce the risk of stomach cancer."

Published this week in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute, the study says researchers used questionnaires to compare the dietary habits of 685 patients with stomach cancer with those of 1,131 other people, matched by age, gender, occupation and education, who had no diagnosed cancer.

People in the control, or cancer-free, group each year consumed at least 25 and sometimes more than 50 pounds of allium vegetables, a genus which includes onions, garlic, leeks, chives, ramps and scallions.

The cancer patients generally ate less than 25 pounds of the vegetables.

The study also found that the risk of stomach cancer declined as the habitual consumption of such vegetables increased.
