Bush Is In: 'A New Breeze Is Blowing'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — George Herbert Walker Bush was inaugurated 41st president of the United States today, describing the nation at the end of the Reagan era as prosperous and at peace while adding, "a new breeze is blowing."

Bush was taking the noontime oath of office at the West Front of the Capitol.

"There is new ground to be broken," Bush said in the prepared text of his inaugural address. "I come before you and assume the presidency at a moment rich with promise. We live in a peaceful prosperous time but we can make it better."

Before him, former Indiana Sen. Dan Quayle took the oath as vice president.

The noontime transfer of power had to be as satisfying to Ronald Reagan as to Bush. Not since Dwight D. Eisenhower left office in 1961 had a president served the full two-term limit, and it had been 60 years since a president bequeathed office to a man of his own party.

Bush recited the 35-word oath of office in a formal and festive ceremony. He rested his left hand on a Bible used by George Washington at his swearing in 200 years ago.

More than 100,000 people spilled across the Capitol grounds to cheer the noontime transfer of power to Bush from Ronald Reagan, an extremely popular two-term president who was barred by the Constitution from seeking office again.

In his address, Bush began by paying tribute to Reagan, his political mentor of the past eight years. "On behalf of our nation," Bush said, "I thank you for the wonderful things you have done for America."

Promising a bright future, Bush said, "A new breeze is blowing — and a nation refreshed by freedom stands ready to push on: there is new ground to be broken."

"I am speaking of a new engagement in the lives of others — a new activism, hands-on and involved, that gets the job done," Bush said. "We must bring in the generations.

harnessing the unused talent of the elderly and the unfocused energy of the young. For not only leadership is passed from generation to generation, but so is stewardship. And the generation born after the Second World War has come of age."

His swearing in crowned a government career more than two decades long.

Reagan Pays Last Visit As President To Oval Office

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan paid a last, sentimental visit to the Oval Office today, dropped off a handwritten note wishing George Bush well, then left the White House with the words, "Keep the faith."

His comment came in response to reporters who asked if he had any final thoughts for the American people.

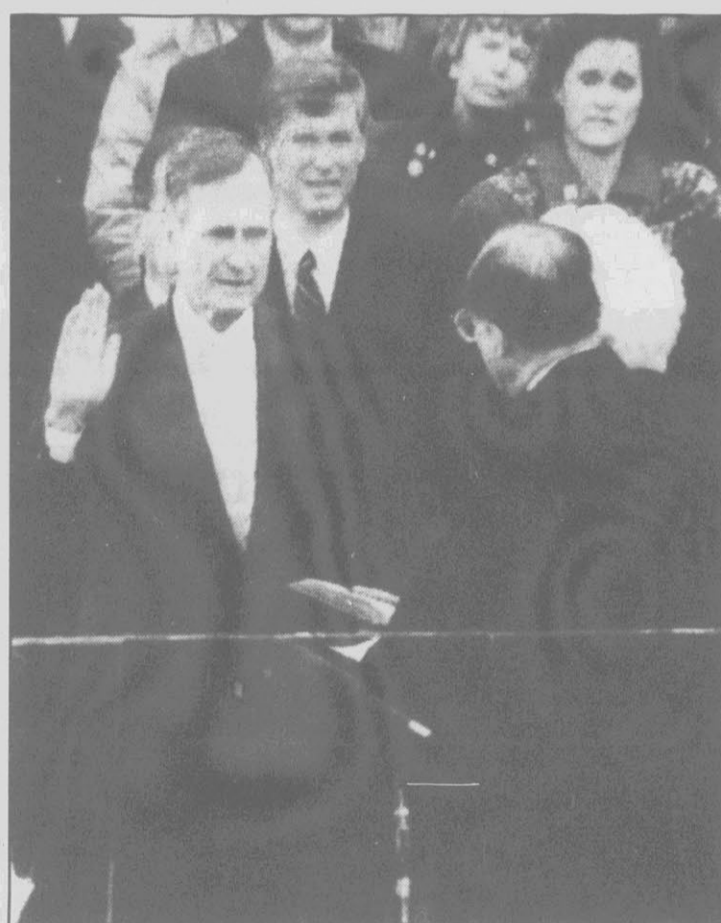

Earlier, softly calling out "goodbye" and waving to a small knot of staff members and journalists, Reagan walked for one last time down the colonnade that connects his West Wing office to the executive mansion.

Reagan visited the office he'd used as the nation's 40th president to check that all was in order and to leave the note for his successor, said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

As their final social event in the executive mansion, Reagan and his wife Nancy then treated Bush and his wife Barbara, Dan Quayle and his wife Marilyn, and the members of the congressional inaugural escort committee to coffee and pastries in the Blue Room of the executive residence.

Fitzwater, who was present in the Oval Office, said Reagan was greeted by his national security adviser Lt. Gen. Colin Powell.

Council OKs New Computer System

By Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Greenville City Council has agreed to follow a consultant's recommendation to sell a portion of the city's computer system and obtain a newer model with greater operating capacity.

The decision to upgrade the system followed a presentation Thursday by the East Carolina University Bureau of Business Research which outlined possible future steps for the city's data processing department.

After considerable discussion of the city's computer needs, the council agreed to sell its IBM S/38 system unit and tape drive and purchase two IBM AS/400 Model B-30 units — one to handle administrative functions and the other for police and fire/rescue workloads.

Also a part of the approved recommendation is the purchase of several commercial software packages, and increases in personnel in the data processing department.

Michael E. McLeod, who headed the recently completed needs analysis of the city's computer system, estimated the cost to implement the recommended option to be $1,169,864 over five years. The amount would cover new hardware, software, maintenance, training, and personnel salaries minus the monies netted through the sale of the old equipment.

However, City Manager Greg Knowles said the final cost to

Plane Loses Engine

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — The right engine on a Boeing 737 jetliner fell off shortly after takeoff early today, forcing the plane to return to O'Hare International Airport, officials said. No injuries were reported.

Piedmont Airlines Flight 1480 took off from O'Hare with 27 passengers and five crew members aboard, then returned for an emergency landing shortly before 8 a.m., said FAA spokesman Mort Edelstein.

"At approximately 1,000 feet, or just moments after takeoff, the right engine separated from the aircraft and landed on airport property," said Dave Shipley, a spokesman for U.S. Air Inc., which owns Piedmont.

The engine from the twin-engine jet fell in a field one-half mile west of the airport, Edelstein said.

"I know of no injuries or fire or ground damage from the engine," FAA spokesman Don Zochert said.

A witness gave a conflicting report of where the engine fell.

ECU Will Require Shots For Measles Hospital Also Taking Precautions

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The red measles outbreak that has hit several Piedmont counties may have spread to Pitt, health officials said today, and they are beginning required immunization this weekend at East Carolina University and Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

The officials said the service is also available for the public at the Pitt County Health Department.

Dr. Tim Monroe, Pitt County health director, said immunization records of all ECU students, faculty and staff are being reviewed. All those 32 or younger who either have not been vaccinated or were vaccinated prior to 15 months old are being contacted. These people, he said, are being told they must be vaccinated before Wednesday morning or they will be barred from returning to school and work.

The ECU Student Health Services office will be open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday and Monday and from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday to give free immunizations. The vaccine is being supplied by the state and the manpower and equipment is being supplied by ECU.

Monroe said a similar plan was developed this morning for Pitt County Memorial Hospital with workers 32 or younger there required to be immunized or provide proof of immunization at 15 months or after by Wednesday morning to avoid being barred from work.

The immunization at PCMH will be done in the hospital auditorium. Hours are today from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m.; Saturday and Sunday from

Mom Wins Plea To Let Son Die

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — A judge so overcome with emotion he had to leave the bench sided with the mother of a 12-year-old cancer victim, denying the father's request for risky surgery that may not prolong the boy's life.

"This ruling cannot be read as a condemnation of one parent over the other," Cook County Judge Thomas J. O'Brien said Thursday. "The evidence was overwhelming that both are loving parents."

Saying the boy "is tragically too young to die," O'Brien choked up after delivering his ruling and rushed from the bench to his chambers. He returned soon afterward.

The ruling gives Miriam Soloveichik the authority to determine her son's medical treatment in accordance with doctors' recommendations.

Doctors at Rush Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center, where Yisroel Soloveichik has been hospitalized since being diagnosed with brain-stem cancer two years ago, said he probably has less than two months to live.

Moshe Soloveichik, 39, the boy's father and an orthodox Jewish rabbi, had sought a surgical procedure to help drain fluid from the child's brain to relieve pressure.

The boy's father felt surgery "would prolong the boy's life without exposing him to any prolonged suffering," said Howard London, Soloveichik's attorney. Doctors, however, said surgery could be risky and may not prolong his life.

The boy is on a respirator and fed intravenously. He is unable to communicate or hear. O'Brien's ruling specifies that life support systems now in use are not to be withdrawn.

Jones Calls For Limits On Speaker

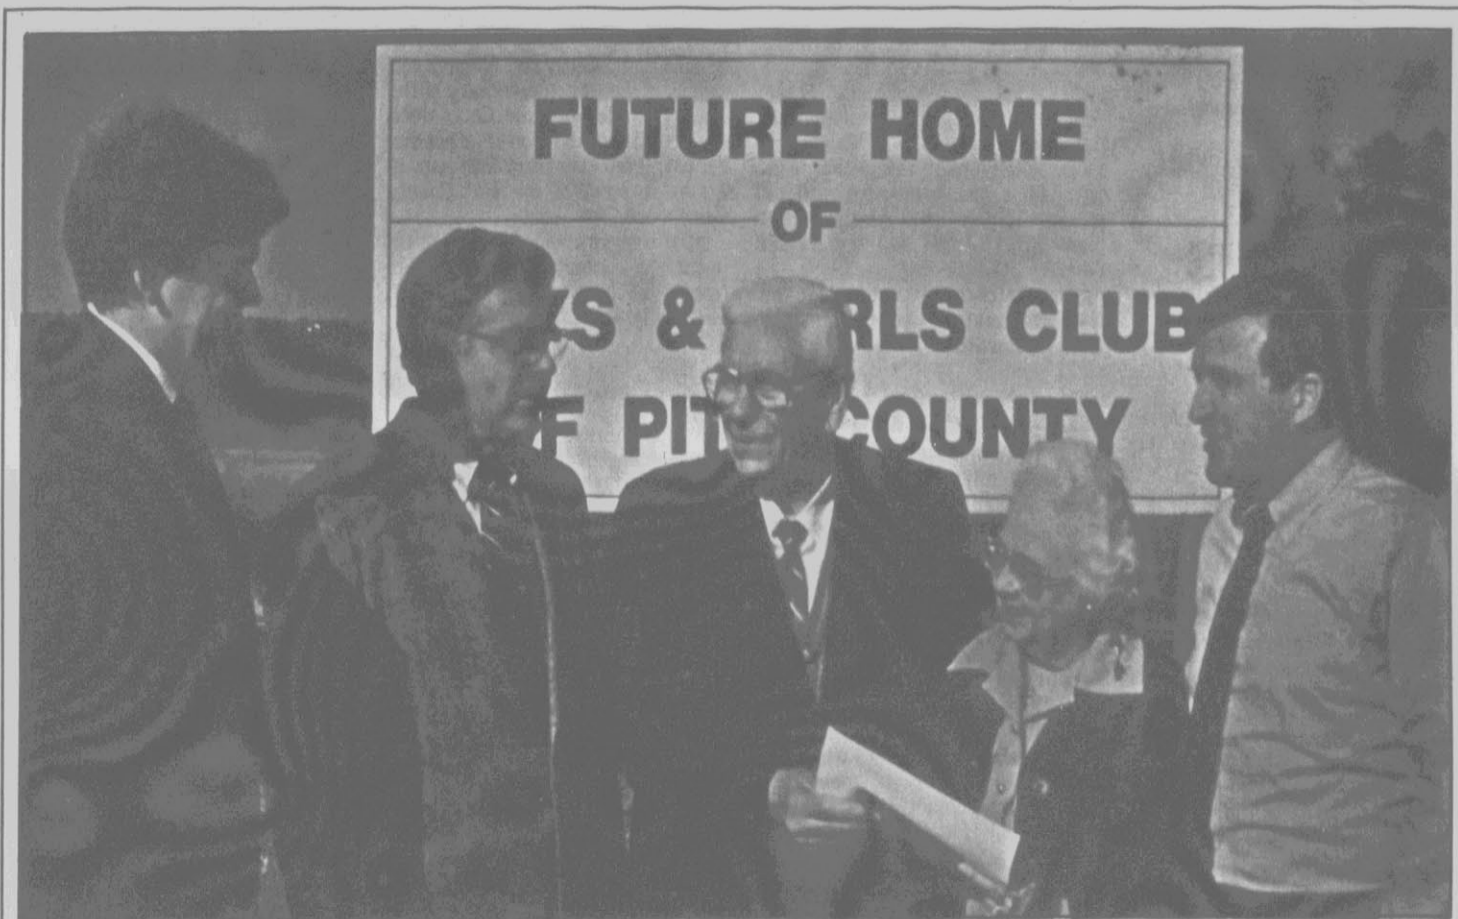

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

On the heels of Liston Ramsey's fall from power after four straight terms as speaker of the N.C. House of Representatives, Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr. of Farmville has introduced a bill to limit the length of time any speaker may serve.

"There is a great deal of support by both Democrats and Republicans for an amendment to limit the term of the Speaker of the North Carolina House of Representatives to four years, and a constitutional amendment is the means by which this can be achieved," Jones said.

Jones joined a group of 20 Democrats and 45 Republicans last week in ousting Ramsey and electing Edgecombe County Democrat Joe Mavretic as speaker.

In The Area

Public Hearing

The Alcohol-Drug Council of North Carolina and the Pitt County Council on Substance Abuse will hold a public hearing Monday at 7 p.m. in the Willis Building on First and Reade streets.

The council will define the needs of adolescent substance abuse service in this region, survey public awareness of current adolescent substance abuse services and discuss whether to raise the juvenile age in North Carolina from 16 to 18.

Discussions from this and similar hearings in the state will be used by the ANAC for presentations to agencies and committees of the legislature in February.

Anyone who would like to testify may sign up at the door or make advance arrangements, including submissions of texts, by calling Dotie Sabades at the Pitt County Council on Substance Abuse, 732-6847.

Substance Abuse

A seminar titled "Substance Abuse in the Workplace" will be held Wednesday from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Ramada Inn. The seminar is sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, the Pitt-Greenville Wellness Council and the Pitt County Council on Substance Abuse.

Speakers include Ann Hoff, substance abuse counselor at the TRAPS Goals Center; Theresa Edmond, coordinator of substance abuse services at the Pitt County Mental Health Center; Greenville Police Chief Jerome Tesmond; and Clifford Bailin, director of professional relations for Blue Cross-Blue Shield of North Carolina.

In early fall of 1988, local business completed a survey about substance abuse problems of employers and the programs that have addressed these issues. More than one-third of the respondents said 10 percent or more of their workers had serious substance abuse problems.

To attend, contact the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, 752-4101, by Friday.

Bicycle Stolen

Greenville police said the theft of a motorized bicycle was reported to the department Thursday.

Officer L.T. Gray said the vehicle was taken from 315 E. 10th St. in an incident reported at 11:07 a.m.

Aging Council Meets

The Pitt County Council on Aging Board of Directors will meet Monday at noon in the arts and crafts room at the Senior Center, 1717 W. Fifth St.

Spain Arrested

Greenville police arrested Reginald Eugene Spain, 21, of 2603 Cherokee Drive on charges of possession of marijuana and carrying a concealed weapon.

Officer E.L. Butts said Spain was arrested Thursday about 10:01 p.m. at the intersection of Fifth Street and Moyewood Drive.

Shoplifting Charge

Aaron Adolphus Taylor, 20, of 62 Matthews Trailer Park was arrested Thursday on shoplifting charges by Greenville police.

Officer J.G. Bridges said Taylor was charged in connection with the theft of three pounds of hamburger from the Foodland store at the Buyers Market at West End Circle about 2:12 p.m.

Dynamometer Tests

The Pitt Community College Rural Agricultural Assistance Center is giving free dynamometer tests Wednesday from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. at the Falkland Fire Department. The rain date is Jan. 30.

The test is designed to determine the maximum PTO horsepower of a tractor and to identify mechanical problems in the power train. Tractors with either 540 rpm or 1000 rpm PTO shafts can be tested.

Lyman Craft, chairman and instructor of the diesel mechanics program at PCC, will conduct the tests. For information, call Robert May, RAAC coordinator, 355-4214.

Scholarship Established

Julian and Jane Peebles of Raleigh have established the Peebles Family Alumni Honors Scholarship at East Carolina University in honor of their children, Michael, Karen, Lisa and Amy, all ECU alumni.

"Julian Peebles' generosity shows a strong commitment to higher education, and he hopes that his generosity will serve as an example and motivation for others, especially for his own children," said Donald Y. Leggett, assistant to the vice chancellor for institutional advancement.

The scholarship will be awarded for academic merit to an incoming freshman. The award will provide $1,000 annually for four years, as long as the recipient maintains the scholarship's academic standards.

Peebles is senior vice president of Davidson and Jones Development Co., Raleigh.

Simpson Chief Is Fireman Of Year

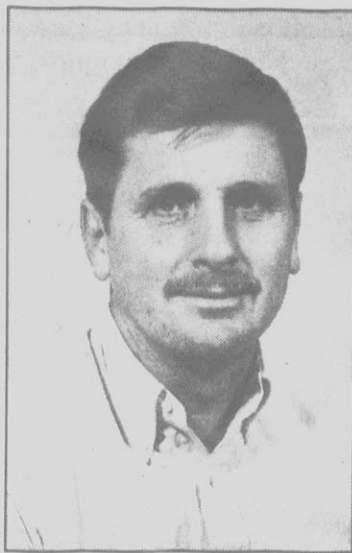

Johnnie Glenn Mayo, chief of the Simpson Rural Fire Department, was honored Thursday night by the Pitt County Fireman's Association as the Pitt Fireman of the Year.

Mayo, a Greene County native, has been a Simpson resident for 19 years, a member of the fire department most of those years and chief for two years. He is employed by Watson Electrical Contracting Co. of Greenville.

It was noted during the presentation that Mayo has been instrumental in his department's obtaining a state grant to develop a compressor and cascade system that can be used by his unit and other departments. He has been working on upgrading the department so residents of the fire district can qualify for less expensive fire insurance and has been an advocate of joint training for his department and others in the county.

The PCFA also commended Mayo for his volunteer electrical work for Salem United Methodist Church in Simpson, for his N.C. National Guard involvement, and for his voluntary support for the junior firemen of the community.

Mayo and his wife, Donna Porter

JOHNNIE MAYO

Mayo, have two sons, Tracey and Kevin.

Bill Stevenson of the N.C. Industrial Commission was the speaker for the event that was attended by about 280 people at Ayden-Grifton High School. The Ayden Fire Department was host.

ECU Will Assemble 300 For Youth School

ECU NEWS BUREAU

Three hundred pupils from predominantly rural schools in the eastern half of the state are being selected to attend sessions of the fourth annual Legislators' School for Youth Leadership Development at East Carolina University in June and July.

Nomination and information packets have been sent to principals and teachers in 51 counties and the selection of 150 students to attend each of two sessions will be made by a computer-generated random process.

The ECU Rural Education Institute, which plans and operates the summer residential program, said nominations must be submitted no later than Feb. 28 and students selected will be notified by March 31.

The 1985 General Assembly authorized the Legislators' School and funds scholarships for students to attend. The program is designed to target potential leaders of the future and to stimulate leadership, thinking and communication skills.

Under the legislation, students from predominantly rural areas have a greater chance, three to one, of being selected, according to the REI. A similar summer residential program, also with 300 students each year, is operated at Western Carolina University, Cullowhee, for the western half of the state.

REI said the first session at ECU this summer will be June 18 through July 6 for 150 10th- through 12th-graders. The second session will be July 9 through July 27 for 150 rising eighth- and ninth-graders.

The three-week sessions include living experiences on the campus of the university, workshops, field trips, outdoor activities, seminars, lectures, films, music and recreation. Resource persons from across the state participate in helping students enhance leadership, communication and critical thinking skills.

Medical Students Act

Students and faculty at the East Carolina University School of Medicine will use theater to draw attention to doctor-patient relationships in a project aimed at incorporating arts and humanities into medicine.

The Staged Reading Project of ECU will highlight medical issues and concerns in a series of evening literary readings today and Saturday at the Greenville Museum of Art and Tuesday at New Deli restaurant. A performance will be held Monday at 12:30 p.m. in the auditorium of the Brody Medical Sciences Building at ECU. After each performance, ECU humanities scholars will lead audience discussions.

In the first hour-long presentation, the student actors will dramatize "Face of Stone," the story of a physician's treatment of a difficult patient. Other presentations are planned for April, September and January 1990.

Sponsors of the project include the N.C. Humanities Council and the Duke Endowment.

Employment Assistance

Jim Hannan, manager of the Greenville office of the Employment Security Commission, said that the state is operating a federal program to assist people ages 55 and older in locating part-time or full-time employment.

As a part of the Job Training Partnership Act, the program is beneficial to both the older workers and to area employers, Hannan said.

Anyone age 55 or older who wants to work or any employers who think an older worker might meet their needs may contact Cyndi Phelps, 756-2686, or visit the office at 3101 Bismarck St.

Student Wins Position

Glennie Cain of Greenville has won a position on the equestrian team of Trinity College in Dublin, Ireland.

Miss Cain, a junior at Princeton University, is studying modern Irish literature this year in an international exchange program. She also is a member of the equestrian team at Princeton. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Cain.

State 4-H Jobs

State 4-H camping officials are accepting applications until March 15 for resident staff positions. The group needs 120 camp directors, instructors, cooks and general camp maintenance staff.

The jobs will run from June 2 until Aug. 12, for adults who work well with children. For information or applications, write Roland Flory, Box 7606, North Carolina State University, Raleigh, NC 27695, or call 737-3242.

Students Selected

Patrick Leary and Stacy McMillan of D.H. Conley High School have been selected by the awards committee for education to attend a conference on educational opportunities for minority students. These students are in the top 1 or 2 percent of all students in the country.

Summer programs, one to six weeks long, are in arts appreciation, math, engineering, science, languages and writing. Designed for students who excel academically, programs are offered at North Carolina State University, East Carolina University, the Bowman Gray School of Medicine, Appalachian State University, the University of North Carolina at Asheville, Wake Forest University and Western Carolina University.

Leary is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Leary of Vanceboro, while Ms. McMillan is the daughter of Bertha Boyd of Winterville.

Puppeteers Performed

W.H. Robinson Triad Enrichment Program puppeteers recently presented three plays for students their parents. Tracy Strickland, Lauren West, Laura Neal Brown and Renada Baker presented "A Witch Story."

Waters Visits Classes

Skip Waters of WCTI Channel 12 television in New Bern recently visited Gail Carraway's and Kim Daniel's fourth-grade classes at G.R. Whitfield School. He discussed the weather and distributed information on weather.

Students presented Waters with an appreciation certificate and a school cougar t-shirt.

Students in the career club recently visited Pitt County Memorial Hospital to learn about career opportunities. Other club students will visit the hospital Feb. 2.

Dr. Mel Markowski of the East Carolina University Department of Child Development and Family Relations met with parents Thursday to discuss ways to cope with family stress. Materials also were distributed to assist parents with discipline.

Outstanding Student

Joseph P. Rowland has been named an outstanding high school student of America and he will be included in the OHSAA Directory.

He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Joe Rowland of Jackson, Tenn., and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Rowland of Greenville.

Honorary Breakfast

About 151 students on the honor roll and principal's list at Greenville Middle School were invited to an honorary breakfast Thursday.

Students from Betty Scoopmire's seventh-grade social studies classes invited their families to a Chinese buffet at Szechwan Gardens to celebrate the end of their China unit. The students shared information on China with family members.

Community Club Meets

Hillsdale Community Club will meet Saturday at 4 p.m. at the home of Carrie Lee Mercer in Belvoir.

Motorist Is Injured Critically In Wreck

A Route 3, Vanceboro, woman was in critical condition in Pitt County Memorial Hospital this morning after her car was hit by a train Thursday one-tenth of a mile north of Vanceboro on State Road 1638.

Trooper S.F. Small said the car driven by Ethelene Shands, 50, was dragged 125 feet down the tracks and was demolished in the 1:40 p.m. accident.

Small said Ms. Shands was taken to Pitt Memorial around 2 p.m. by EastCare air ambulance. He said the Vanceboro Rescue and Fire departments responded to the call.

Small said the monitoring system of the Norfolk Southern freight train showed that the train was traveling at 35 mph at the time of impact. Witnesses said the train whistle was blowing from before an adjacent intersection past the one where the accident occurred. They said Ms. Shands' car stopped briefly beside the track, then proceeded into the path of the train, according to Small. The intersection had no signals, but the driver, traveling alone, reportedly lived within sight of the railroad tracks, Small said.

Frat Collects Used Clothing For Charity

ECU NEWS BUREAU

Some alligators, OPs, Polos and an assortment of castoff fad designer brands got the boot recently during a fraternity drive at East Carolina University to collect used clothing for charity.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon, a new social fraternity on campus, organized the project to collect used clothing from the brothers of 15 other social fraternities at ECU.

William Clay, an ECU student from Durham and a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, said the project was completed this week. He and other members of his fraternity made their final pickup of the clothes donated at each of the fraternities and turned them over to the Salvation Army.

The pickup on Wednesday produced two large plastic bags of clothing, while an earlier pickup in December filled five bags, Clay said. Donation boxes had been placed in each fraternity house with a request that fraternity members donate the clothes they no longer wear.

Clay said Sigma Alpha Epsilon is ECU's newest social fraternity. It is designated as a "colony" and must serve a probationary period before it is fully chartered by its national governing body. The 37 members hold their meetings in the student center.

Clay said he hopes the clothes drive and a highway cleanup project being considered for the spring will enable the organization to receive its charter by next fall.

Pharmacist Studies Drugs' Side Effects

ECU NEWS BUREAU

Episodes of confusion, disorientation and forgetfulness in the elderly, often thought to be signs of senility, may also occur as side effects from some medications commonly prescribed for the aged, a pharmacist at the East Carolina University School of Medicine suggests.

Dr. Doyle M. Cummings, assistant professor of family medicine and head of clinical pharmacy at the medical school's Family Practice Center, will further his study of the effects of commonly prescribed drugs on the elderly through a $125,000 project funded by the Kate B. Reynolds Health Care Trust of Winston-Salem.

The philanthropic organization awards $3 million each year to non-profit agencies in North Carolina involved in projects directed toward alternative and preventive health care.

Cummings' three-year project will include the development of a regional resource center for geriatric pharmacology. Through the center, continuing education programs will be offered to physicians who prescribe medication for their elderly patients.

"The elderly are the largest consumers of medication and are at the greatest risk for side effects from these drugs," said Cummings. "Previous research has shown that the elderly eliminate medication at a slower rate than younger adults; therefore, doctors and pharmacists need to pay special attention to the drug needs of this growing segment of the population."

Antihistamines, anti-depressants, sedatives and blood pressure medications can have dramatic side effects in elderly patients, Cummings said. Depending on the dosages, these drugs can also be responsible for falls, changes in behavior and delirium in some patients, he said.

In the project, Cummings plans to work closely with doctors to reduce toxicity in their elderly patients while continuing to treat their primary ailments.

"Our key emphasis is to heighten doctors' awareness of symptoms in elderly patients that may actually result because of their daily medications," Cummings said.

Mavretic Supporters Get Prime Leadership Posts In State House

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Members of House Speaker Joe Mavretic's bipartisan coalition received most of the leadership posts on three prestigious committees, but Democrats elected a supporter of former Speaker Liston Ramsey as House majority leader.

As the dust continued to settle Thursday from the bitter fight over the speakership, Mavretic unveiled the first members of a new leadership team that differs radically from the one that dominated the House throughout the 1980s.

Ramsey, whose eight-year reign as speaker ended last week, was appointed vice-chairman of a budget subcommittee — a position of minor influence.

But his longtime lieutenant, Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, was banished from the Appropriations Committee, of which he was chairman during Ramsey's reign. He was given a seat, but no chairmanship or vice-chairmanship, on the Finance Committee.

Rep. Dave Diamont, D-Surry, was named chairman of the Appropriations Committee, which deals with the state budget. Rep. Alex Hall, D-New Hanover, received the chairmanship of the Finance Committee, which handles tax matters. Rep. Harry Payne, D-New Hanover, was named chairman of the Rules Committee, which could exercise control over the flow of bills under Mavretic's revised organizational plan.

Diamont, Hall and Payne were among the 20 Democrats who joined with 45 Republicans to replace Ramsey with Mavretic.

Meanwhile, House Democrats elected Rep. Dennis Wicker, a Lee County attorney regarded as one of the Legislature's rising stars, to the newly created post of majority leader. Rep. Milton Fitch, D-Wilson, one of the 13 black representatives, was elected majority whip.

Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, said power would not be confined to his coalition.

"The work and power is dispersed throughout the committee system so that more legislators will be involved in the process, and power will be decentralized," he said.

Republicans, who were promised 20 of the 50 subcommittee chairmanships and proportional representation on all panels, received chairmanships of three of the seven Appropriations subcommittees and two of the five Finance subcommittees.

Additionally, Minority Leader Johnathan Rhyne, R-Lincoln, was named vice-chairman of the Rules Committee with Rep. Sharon Thompson, D-Durham.

"It feels real strange" for Republicans to be major players, Rhyne said. "But it feels satisfying. The job now is to do something with the leadership positions. It's much harder to do a good job than it is just to get to do the job."

Mavretic named Ramsey vice-chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Capital Outlay and Special Programs.

Wicker emerged as a surprise candidate for majority leader Wednesday night, although he said he had been urged to run before the session convened. The three candidates he defeated — Reps. Fitch, David Redwine, D-Brunswick, and Bruce Ethridge, D-Carteret — had campaigned for weeks.

Wicker was a Ramsey loyalist and publicly criticized the pro-Mavretic coup. He said his entry into the race was not engineered by the former speaker or his allies and that he didn't view his election as a victory for the Ramsey camp.

"My role is going to be one of trying to bring back together a party that has been torn apart by what has happened with the speakership issue," Wicker said.

He said he was on good terms with the pro-Mavretic Democrats. "I still disagree with what they did, but that's water under the dam and we need to move forward."

Wicker, 36, was climbing the ladder of power under Ramsey, who named him chairman of one of four Judiciary committees in 1987. Bright and articulate, he has been mentioned as a potential candidate for statewide office, possibly attorney general.

Diamont, 42, has served seven terms — three as a budget subcommittee co-chairman. Ramsey stripped him of the budget post in 1987 and gave him the less prestigious Natural and Economic Resources Committee, a move Diamont charged was retaliation for his open criticism of the leadership's tactics.

Dennis Wicker confers with Milton Fitch after elections

Wilson Legislator Named Majority Whip For House

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Supporters of deposed House Speaker Liston Ramsey flexed their muscles Thursday and elected Rep. Milton T. Fitch of Wilson to one of two newly created House leadership positions.

Fitch, in his third term, won the post of majority whip in a secret ballot vote among the 74 House Democrats. Fitch and Dennis Wicker of Lee County, who was elected majority leader, both supported Ramsey in the recent power struggle to win the speakership. But last week 20 Democrats joined forces with 45 House Republicans to elect Edgecombe County Democrat Joe Mavretic to the post.

As speaker, Mavretic created the positions of majority leader and whip, who serves as chief assistant to the leader.

Because both Fitch and Wicker supported Ramsey, it may appear that their election is an attempt to balance power in the House, Fitch said, but it is actually a true indication of what type of leaders the majority of House Democrats wants.

Fitch pointed out that just 20 Democrats left the flock to support Mavretic, but 54 Democrats supported Ramsey. When party members met together Thursday, the Mavretic coalition did not have the strength to elect one of its own.

"The coalition put together last week (to elect Mavretic) was not a majority of Democrats," Fitch said. "The majority whip and leader are those that represent the positions of the Democratic majority ... You can't really say (it's an attempt to heal the party), because 54 is a majority of 74."

Fitch, a past chairman of the Housing Committee, said Mavretic did not indicate whether he was going to vote for him for whip, and he still does not know what committee assignments Mavretic may give him. Fitch has served on about a dozen committees while in the House, including Judiciary, Finance and Insurance. Mavretic is expected to complete committee assignments on Monday, Fitch said.

Only one black House Democrat voted for Mavretic, and Fitch, who is black, said his election will "help to a degree" to ensure that minorities are involved in the legislative process.

Overall, the new positions of leader and whip will help foster Democratic policy and positions in the House, Fitch said, but he does not yet have an indication of what specific role he will play in lawmaking.

"I really don't have a feeling. But, both positions, I would feel, would have a large role in how the House operates."

"(My job) obviously will be to help further the Democratic policies and positions in legislation, as well as to be a means of communications with the Democratic leadership," Fitch said.

With the two new positions and a change in the committee structure, he said it is already clear that Mavretic will conduct business differently than Ramsey did.

"Obviously, they are operating a little differently now, purely from an operational standpoint," Fitch said. "From an organizational standpoint, the operation is different, because, the bill that is now referred to the Finance Committee, would then, according to the subject matter of the bill, have to go to a subcommittee."

Mavretic has sliced the number of standing committees to 12, but has created 58 standing subcommittees. Under each committee, Fitch said, there are about five subcommittees that are designed to allow lawmakers to examine a bill in more detail before debate begins on the House floor.

Every bill will now go to subcommittee, while in the past a bill only went to subcommittee if it needed revision or review.

Mavretic has been working for more than a week on committee assignments and the House is not meeting today, but Fitch said it is not entirely a case of slow work on Mavretic's part.

"In all fairness to the speaker ... trying to blend ... ideas and preferences among 120 people — you can't really do that in a matter of a day," Fitch said.

Under Ramsey, the House convened about one month later and the speaker usually worked out the committee assignments during January, Fitch said.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Settling In

A Time To Address Problems

The dust is calming from the Joe Mavretic takeover of the North Carolina House of Representatives speaker position. And Senate Democrats are settling in after stripping power from the Republican lieutenant governor.

After the shock of the most tumultuous opening day in the history of the General Assembly there still remains the stark reality that much work has to be done.

Four General Assembly members from Pitt County all agree that the largest problem will be the limited amount of funds which is available to meet all the pressing needs. Education, highways, state prisons and pay raises all around are matters making their demands on the state resources currently envisioned. There are also heavy demands for capital improvements for the state's university campuses.

'It is going to be a time when skilled leadership will have to develop rapidly and some discipline will have to be established ...'

Expenditures have been mostly tightly controlled by a small group of insiders in the past. That policy may continue. One of the arguments for close control of appropriations has been that full participation would lead to chaos and the Legislature would never develop a balanced budget.

Following all the turmoil of leadership changes, the bitter feelings which will linger in the Houses and the prospects of more critical needs than money available skilled leadership will be required to bring it all together.

House Speaker Mavretic will be working with a flimsy coalition of dissident Democrats and the Republican bloc. Outside that circle there are still bruised feelings. Overriding it all is the perceived opportunity for some lawmakers to leap in and get what they want out of the budget making process.

But beyond that opportunism, the 1989 session is a time when large problems must be addressed by legislators. That challenge, rather than the challenge of who gains control, is central to a successful session.

It is going to be a time when skilled leadership will have to develop rapidly and some discipline will have to be established, either along party lines or within the bipartisan bloc which has developed. That is quite a charge and if it is not met there will be a long session of the Legislature.

Reagan, Bush Break Old Jinxes

Reflector Analysis

By Woody Peele

Today at noon, George Bush became the 41st President of the United States.

And a pair of old presidential jinxes were laid to rest at the same time.

Ronald Reagan, who left office as Bush came in, is the first man elected to the presidency in a year ending in zero since 1820 to survive his term of office. John Adams, elected in 1800, and James Monroe, re-elected to a second term in 1820 were the only other men to have survived their terms.

Since Monroe, there have been eight men elected to our highest political office in years ending in zero, but only Reagan has survived to see his successor follow him.

In 1840, William Henry Harrison was elected to the presidency, and on Inauguration Day orated long and hard, caught pneumonia in the cold and died barely a month later, becoming the man to hold this nation's highest office for the shortest time.

Twenty years later, Abraham Lincoln was elected, then re-elected in 1864. But only a month after second term began, he fell victim to the bullet John Wilkes Booth fired into his brain.

In 1880, James A. Garfield became the next "man on the bubble," and was only in office three months before he was fatally wounded by a disgruntled office seeker. He hung on for three months before finally succumbing to the wound.

William McKinley, re-elected to a second term in 1900, became our country's third martyred president, fatally wounded by an anarchist six months after he began his second term.

In 1920, Warren G. Harding died after serving not quite two and a half years of his term. While the official cause of death was listed as food poisoning, there have been rumors that perhaps he was murdered by poison. One of those rumors even had his wife doing the dirty deed in retaliation for his having his mistress in the White House.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, who served longer than any other president, was elected to his third term in 1940, then re-elected to a fourth term in 1944. Less than three months later, he died of a cerebral hemorrhage.

John F. Kennedy was elected in 1960, but three years later, was shot to death in Dallas, the seventh consecutive man elected in a zero year to die.

Only one other president has died in office, Zachary Taylor, elected in 1848. He died after overeating on the Fourth of July.

The fact that Reagan was the oldest man ever elected to the presidency made many believe that he would, indeed, keep the string alive, but he fooled them, surviving an assassin's bullet, bouts with cancer, and the pressures of the office.

Bush, too, has snapped a jinx, that one associated with vice-presidents.

Today, he becomes the first sitting vice president to move up through election to the presidency since Martin Van Buren in 1837.

Early on, it was somewhat of a tradition to move up. John Adams succeeded George Washington, and Thomas Jefferson followed Adams, both having served as vice-president.

But after them, Van Buren was the next vice-president to be elected from the vice-presidency.

Not that others have not tried. A number of former vice-presidents sought to move up, but failed. Richard Nixon is the only other former vice-president to be elected to the office of president.

Others, John Tyler, Millard Fillmore, Andrew Johnson and Chester A. Arthur all succeeded following the death of the president, but failed to be elected when the term expired.

Theodore Roosevelt, Calvin Coolidge, Harry Truman and Lyndon Johnson were all elected to the presidency, but only after having held the office through the order of succession.

Gerald Ford, the only president who was never elected to either the presidency or vice-presidency but held both positions, failed in his only election bid.

But now comes George Bush, who served his term and moved up.

Over 140 years have gone by with pattern following pattern until today.

Today, the strings are broken.

Nancy-Reagan: Grit & A Goodly Measure Of Grace

BOSTON — Eight years ago, as Ronald Reagan was being inaugurated President of the United States, the woman beside him caught the eyes of a dear friend in the crowd. At that second, she remembers, "both of us were thinking the same thing: Nothing would ever be the same again."

She was right. Nancy Davis Reagan wasn't sworn in. She never held a public office. She wasn't paid a public salary. Nothing in the Constitution gave her power or place in the government. But from 1981 to 1989 she played the most public of private roles imaginable. She was the President's wife and the country's first lady.

Now Nancy is going home with the guy who brought her. What are the images she will leave behind, the photographs in our national scrapbook? The devoted wife staring in fixed adoration as her husband spoke. The fashion plate in Adolpho dresses and borrowed jewels, a second-hand Rose. The activist against drugs who drove home a three-word message to American parents and kids: Just say no. The fiercely loyal worrier and star-gazer who made her husband's enemies her own.

Ronald Reagan will be judged as President. Nancy will be judged — as women often are — by a much more elaborate set of criteria: wife, mother, presidential adviser, activist, woman.

From the very beginning, this first lady had little of the Teflon coating that protected her husband's surfaces from the painful scratches of public criticism. She was labeled frivolous one year and intrusive another. She was called a clothes horse in the first term and a dragon in the end. She was criticized for caring about china and for caring about Russia. For being X-ray thin and for being power-hungry.

In an era when all the images of women were in flux, the opinions about this woman were more than ambivalent. Those who admired her independent efforts against drugs often parodied her protective defense of her husband. Those who lauded her as a wife often lambasted her as an inner-circle adviser.

It is understandable if she looked out of that White House window and said, "Some days I have the feeling that if it's raining it must be my fault."

Every first lady has felt the heat of the White House lights. Dolley Madison was criticized for her snuff, Mary Lincoln for extravagance. Mrs. Roosevelt was called a busybody, Mrs. Truman reclusive. "Our expectations are unrealistic," says Sheila Tate who was Nancy Reagan's press secretary for four years. "There is a sense that everything the first lady does is subject to discussion. Most first ladies go through a baptism by fire. I don't care how well prepared they think they are."

Not even private problems stay on hold in the White House, nor do they stay private. A simple chronology of the life events in this first family reads like an entry on a stress chart.

In her time in non-office, Nancy Reagan had a husband shot and diagnosed with colon cancer. She lost her father and her mother and a breast to cancer. As a stepmother, she was for a time estranged from her stepson. As a mother, she has been alienated from a daughter whose novel was a thinly veiled attack. Through it all, she was expected to perform perfectly as hostess and wife and drug czarina.

There is no official transition team for first ladies, just boxes and moving vans passing in the driveway. The spotlight has already shifted from the Reagans to the Bushes, from the size and style of one woman's family and dress to that of another.

Still, Nancy Reagan's advice should be included in any non-job description passed from one resident to the next. "Once you're in the White House," she has said, "don't think it's going to be a glamorous, fairy-tale life. It's very hard work with high highs and low lows. Since you're under a microscope, everything is magnified. So just keep your perspective and your patience."

The woman who is leaving on the President's arm did that. And she did it with grit and a goodly measure of grace.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole introduces his wife Elizabeth to Senators sitting on confirmation hearing

Senate Panel Unanimously Approves Elizabeth Dole For Labor Secretary

By Matt Yancey
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Elizabeth Dole came closer to becoming the top woman in the Bush administration after promising senators she would implement a "growth plus" policy as labor secretary but avoiding specific answers on the minimum wage and job protection for new mothers.

The Senate Labor Committee on Thursday unanimously approved her nomination after a 2½-hour hearing in which Mrs. Dole outlined a policy to provide workers with the jobs and skills of the future.

While the former Transportation secretary and wife of Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., credited the past six years of uninterrupted economic growth for reducing the nation's jobless rate to a 14-year low, she said that is not enough for the future.

"The mission of the Labor Department must be to coordinate a strategy of growth plus — growth plus policies to help those for whom the jobs of the future are now out of reach because of a skills gap, family pressures or lack of supportive policies," she said.

Citing an aging labor force growing at a rate of only 1 percent a year with a shrinking supply of teenage workers, Mrs. Dole said the future offers unprecedented opportunities and challenges.

"We have within our reach the fulfillment of a long-awaited dream — that every American who wants a job can have a job," she said.

But to do it, she said, will require a coordinated effort by government, business, union, education and community leaders "to wipe out illiteracy and enhance skills through basic education, training and retraining."

Mrs. Dole, 52, was picked by Bush on Christmas Eve to be the only woman in his Cabinet, a role she also held in President Reagan's administration as transportation secretary from 1983 until October 1987.

Both she and Labor Secretary William Brock resigned from the Cabinet then to help her husband's campaign against Bush for the GOP presidential nomination. Reagan then tapped Ann McLaughlin for the labor post, where she filled a like role as the only woman in his Cabinet the last 13 months of his administration.

The committee's chairman, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said he expects Mrs. Dole's formal nomination, which will be submitted by Bush just after his inauguration today, to be voted on by the full Senate next week. Aides said Senate leaders were looking at Jan. 25 as a possible date.

During her hearing Thursday, Mrs. Dole successfully ducked several questions on the social legislative initiatives Democrats are likely to use to test Bush's promise of a "kinder and gentler America."

"I share your concern and look forward to working with you on that issue" was her answer to a wide variety of questions from senators trying to pin her down on the minimum wage, parental leaves, child care, health insurance and pension issues.

But she indicated she would follow the lead of her predecessor in "encouraging progressive work-family policies on the part of businesses and unions — rather than mandating solutions to the lowest common denominator."

Colleges Report Applications Up

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

College applications throughout North Carolina appear to be up significantly again this year — as much as 29 percent at one school — despite only a slight increase in the number of high school graduates.

University and college officials included in a spot check saw different reasons for the continued increase.

Most colleges still are accepting applications and officials caution that the increases may be due to students applying earlier. Some admissions offices are requiring students to apply earlier, in an effort to handle the flood of applications more efficiently.

At Appalachian State University in Boone, applications are up 29 percent from this time last year. The school has received 6,773 applications so far, while 5,260 had come in this time last year.

"I'm not sure if the increase is a real increase or an artificial one," said Joseph Watts, Appalachian State director of admissions. "The word has really gotten out to school counselors that students need to apply to get into certain colleges that have been in high demand."

Officials at other schools echoed Watts' comments, saying increases might not be as high when all the applications are in. But for now, figures show the following increases over this time last year:

— 21.3 percent at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, from 9,125 to 11,071.

— 16.3 percent at East Carolina University, from 5,841 to 6,792.

— 27.5 percent at UNC-Wilmington, from 3,946 to 5,031.

— 15.9 percent at North Carolina State University, from 6,900 to 8,000.

At Duke University, the number of applications has decreased 8.2 percent over this time last year, from 14,484 to 13,300. But the number of students who applied early — and thereby committed to go to Duke if they were accepted — was up about 9 percent, said Harold M. Wingood, senior associate director of admissions.

The increases follow a statewide trend. Between 1986 and 1987, applications to UNC schools rose 10.4 percent. Between 1985 and 1986, the increase was 11.2 percent, according to the Statistical Abstract of Higher Education in North Carolina.

Fort Bragg To Get $59.1 Million

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Fort Bragg would receive $59.1 million in military construction funds in 1990 under a $135.1 million Pentagon request for seven facilities in North Carolina, according to the Defense Department.

The bulk of Fort Bragg's portion — $32 million — would go for aviation maintenance hangars at Simmons Army Air Field.

The facilities would accommodate expansion of two helicopter units, the 82nd Airborne Division's 82nd Combat Aviation Brigade and 18th Airborne Corps' 18th Aviation Brigade, officials said. The corps unit has scout, utility and medium-lift helicopters, and the division unit's capabilities include attack, officials said.

"That's needed," Lt. Gen. Carl W. Stiner, commander of Fort Bragg and 18th Airborne Corps, told The Fayetteville Times. He said the corps aviation unit is in the process of building up to brigade level.

"We're trying to get ahead of the power curve for the need when all these other helicopter units come on board," he said.

Industries Want State Waste Site

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Industry groups urged legislators to renew efforts to build a hazardous waste facility in North Carolina in the wake of South Carolina's refusal to accept wastes from states that don't allow such disposal themselves.

The South Carolina ban, which will take effect March 1, also prompted some legislators to say the General Assembly will have to reconsider its decision to delay the siting of a hazardous waste incinerator and treatment plant.

"It does change the ball game," said Sen. Henson P. Barnes, D-Wayne, president pro tempore. "Some of us in the Senate have agreed to sit down next week and talk about what we need to do."

South Carolina Gov. Carroll A. Campbell Jr. said Wednesday that he would issue an executive order forbidding his state from accepting hazardous wastes that another state does not allow to be dumped within its borders. The action primarily affects wastes sent to the massive GSX landfill near Pinewood, S.C.

North Carolina industries shipped 176 million pounds of hazardous waste out of state in 1987, with about 60 percent of that waste going to South Carolina. Nearly all of the hazardous waste sent to South Carolina goes to the GSX landfill.

North Carolina law prohibits the landfilling of hazardous wastes until a comprehensive treatment plant is built. But legislators have repeatedly postponed efforts to build a treatment plant in the state, even though the state has only a few facilities for treating hazardous wastes that industries cannot handle on-site.

At the least, the ban could mean higher costs for prolonged on-site storage or shipment of wastes to the only other hazardous-waste landfill in the Southeast in Emelle, Ala.

But such shipments would be looked on with disfavor by Alabama Gov. Guy Hunt, who has lobbied to restrict the amount of out-of-state waste coming into his state.

"Obviously, it will have an adverse impact on industry," said Gail Rosenberg of the Chemical Industry Council of N.C. "We strongly recommend that the North Carolina legislature act to ensure the siting of a hazardous waste disposal facility by reinitiating the siting process."

Hunt's press secretary, Terry Abbott, said he didn't know whether the governor will put a similar ban on North Carolina wastes to head off wastes banned in South Carolina.

"It's something we'd have to look at to determine if the governor had such power," Abbott said. "It's difficult to predict what we'd do."

Federal law requires all states to certify by Oct. 17 that they can treat their hazardous wastes or that other states have agreed to do so.

Despite that deadline, the General Assembly imposed a moratorium last summer on the state's efforts to build a hazardous waste incinerator and treatment plant — unless a volunteer county stepped forward.

Two weeks ago, a legislative study panel recommended that the legislature continue the moratorium. The panel said the state should continue looking for other states who would take the wastes and try to develop a regional hazardous waste program.

"The study commission felt that a regional concept would be better," Barnes said. "Since this has changed, we'll have to deal with the change. We may not have time to get a regional program proposed and put in place."

Most waste authorities say the state has few chips to bargain with either in developing a regional program or in attracting a volunteer county.

"We would be thrilled with a volunteer, but at this stage we haven't seen anyone," said M. Darrell Hinnant, executive director of the state Hazardous Waste Treatment Commission.

If South Carolina goes ahead with the ban, Hinnant said, North Carolina industries would be forced to send much of their wastes to other landfills. Besides Alabama, the other nearest facilities are in Ohio, New York and Louisiana, he said.

"We hope the General Assembly will do something about this," said Anne T. Griffith, a lobbyist for the N.C. Citizens for Business and Industry. "If not, they should turn it over to the governor."

Gov. Jim Martin has urged legislators for several years to proceed with its plans for the treatment plant. He repeated that call in his State of the State address Tuesday.

"This will require prompt attention," Martin told legislators in his speech.

Correction

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — The Associated Press erroneously reported Jan. 5 that a report on poverty in North Carolina showed the level of poverty in eastern North Carolina was four times the state level.

The report actually showed that nearly half the state's poor residents live in eastern North Carolina. The statistic contained in the report released by the Eastern North Carolina Poverty Committee showed that 11.6 percent of all the state's residents live in poverty and that 43.6 percent of the state's poor reside in eastern North Carolina.

Drug Deaths

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Cocaine claimed at least 44 lives in North Carolina last year, more than twice as many as in 1987, according to figures released by a scientist at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Another 12 people died from combinations of cocaine and heroin and 12 more died of heroin alone, said Dr. Arthur McBay, chief toxicologist in the office of the chief medical examiner and professor of pathology and pharmacy at UNC.

"During 1982, we had only two deaths from cocaine," McBay said. "By 1983, it had risen to 11, and during 1987, there were 21 deaths directly attributable to cocaine."

Total fatalities from illicit drugs rose from 42 in 1987 to 73 in 1988. Deaths from prescription antidepressants like amitriptyline, doxepin and imipramine increased from 42 in 1987 to 52 in 1988, McBay said.

Poisoned Lunch

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — An Andrews High School student was arrested after police said he telephoned the school cafeteria claiming all the food had been poisoned, forcing officials to throw away about $2,000 worth of lunches.

Peter Frederick Arnold, 19, was charged with making harassing and threatening telephone calls. He was in the High Point Jail under $2,000 bond Thursday night.

Arnold, the younger brother of state Rep. Steve Arnold, R-Guilford, was charged with telephoning cafeteria manager Manilla Dunlap about 10:45 a.m. Wednesday and telling her that arsenic was in all the cafeteria's food.

Arnold, a senior, was expelled from school for the rest of the year and will not be able to graduate, said Owen Phillips, superintendent of the High Point school system.

Murder Arrest

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Lenoir County man has been arrested and charged with murder in connection with the strangulation death of a Duplin County woman last week.

Bobby Ray Moss, 31, of La Grange was arrested by Duplin County sheriff's detectives and agents from the State Bureau of Investigation. Moss was charged with first-degree murder and common law robbery.

The body of Pauline W. Sanderson, 55, of Warsaw was found Saturday by two squirrel hunters in the woods near Magnolia. When found she was lying on the ground with a sweater around her neck. The sweater was tied to a tree.

Doctor Sentenced

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — A Morganton physician was given a three-year sentence at a Gaston County work release center after pleading guilty Thursday to taking indecent liberties with a child under the age of 13.

Dr. Robert Carl Owens pleaded guilty in a plea bargain arrangement made in Burke County Superior Court this morning in which a charge of first degree sexual offense was dismissed in exchange for a guilty plea on taking indecent liberties with a child.

Owens, 35, will continue his internal medicine practice at his office, according to his attorney Dick Beyer. Owens was given immediate work release by Judge C. Walter Allen of Asheville.

Indictment

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (AP) — A six-count indictment has been handed down against a Gates County couple on drug charges, U.S. Attorney Margaret Currin said Thursday.

The indictments were handed down against Louis Norman Eason, 42, and his wife, Audrey Naomi Pretlow Eason, 38, by a federal grand jury sitting in Wilmington Wednesday.

According to Mrs. Currin, the Easons are charged with conspiracy, possession with intent to distribute and distribution of cocaine and marijuana.

According to Mrs. Currin authorities have seized about $806,475 in cash, four cars and two parcels of land belonging to the Easons, including their home. The cash seizure is the largest in the eastern district.

Growers' Agencies Seek Assessments

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — Flue-cured tobacco farmers in North Carolina may soon find themselves in the middle of a family fight, as two organizations seek the farmers' financial support for survival.

Both Tobacco Associates and the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina plan to ask the General Assembly for separate pieces of legislation that would put assessment fees before farmers in a referendum.

Tobacco Associates, the organization that promotes exports for the flue-cured growers, intends to ask for legislation that would authorize an increase in its current assessment of 10 cents per 100 pounds to 25 cents per 100 pounds of tobacco that farmers marketed.

Meanwhile, the Tobacco Growers

Association of North Carolina is proposing legislation that would allow tobacco farmers to vote for the first time on whether to assess themselves to support that association also, as a commodity organization for tobacco.

T. Carlton Blalock, the executive vice president of the Tobacco Growers Association, said that the group's board is proposing legislation that calls for a referendum on an assessment of up to 50 cents per 100 pounds. It would be earmarked as follows: the 25 cents sought by Tobacco Associates, up to 12.5 cents to Tobacco Growers, and up to 12.5 cents to the N.C. Tobacco Foundation for tobacco research projects, he told the Winston-Salem Journal.

But Kirk Wayne, the president of Tobacco Associates, said his board has taken the position that it desires no change in the present structure.

Court Orders Hatcher Arrested

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LUMBERTON, N.C. — Authorities will try to find Eddie Hatcher, whose arrest was ordered after he failed for the second time to show in Robeson County court on 14 counts of kidnapping for the Feb. 1 takeover of the The Robesonian newspaper office.

"We fully expect to get Mr. Hatcher back for trial in some point in time. We just have to go through the legal steps," District Attorney Richard Townsend said. "We'll do whatever it takes to secure Mr. Hatcher's presence."

Superior Court Judge Anthony

Brannon on Thursday ordered the arrest of Hatcher as a fugitive wanted on kidnapping charges.

Hatcher had been given until Thursday to surrender after he failed to appear for arraignment Tuesday in Robeson County Superior Court. Townsend said Hatcher did not surrender and failed to contact his local lawyer, Freda Bowman.

A spokesman for the Shoshone-Bannock Indian tribes in Fort Hall, Idaho, said Hatcher will remain on the Indian reservation until North Carolina officials prove in tribal court that Hatcher will receive a fair trial in North Carolina.

World Leaders And Press Praise Departing Reagan

Australian Paper Says He's 'Hard Act To Follow'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

President Reagan's farewell from office today produced celebrations by Nicaragua's Sandinista government, a gift horse from Canada and thanks from British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to a "true and perfect gentleman."

In the Soviet Union, the Communist Party daily Pravda published a lengthy article entitled "Reagan's Best Role" that credited Reagan with becoming more of a realist than an ideologue as his term progressed.

Correspondent Gennady Vasiliev noted that Reagan, "according to the general view, was not distinguished by the strong intellect of Roosevelt, the broad education of Kennedy, or even Carter's capacity for work."

But his opponents time and again underestimated him, Vasiliev said, and Reagan was leaving office a popular and successful president.

The Japan Times hailed Reagan as the "man of the decade," and an Australian newspaper called him "a hard act to follow."

In the Netherlands, the Rotterdam newspaper Algemeen Dagblad said the United States "found a much-wanted anchor in Reagan's straightforwardly conservative ideology of patriotism, military might and economic recovery."

In Managua, however, the leftist Nicaraguan government planned street parties, parades and political meetings to usher out Reagan, whose administration financed anti-government rebels since 1981.

"The workers will show their ingenuity to mock imperialism and the reactionaries in this country," the state Voice of Nicaragua said Thursday.

The Nicaraguan government says it hopes normal relations with the United States can be restored after President-elect Bush takes office.

In Yugoslavia, the leading daily Politika said today that "Reagan will be remembered as an unmatched political seducer" whose rhetoric Bush will never be able to match.

While Bush takes over the reins of power, Reagan plans to saddle a gift from the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Reagan put the cart before the horse Wednesday when he announced the gift would be sent to his ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif. Canada delayed confirming it until late Thursday — possibly because of a U.S. law preventing presidents from accepting gifts while in office.

In France, the daily Liberation devoted its entire front page to a photo, taken from the rear, of Reagan and his wife Nancy riding off on their horses. "So long, Reagan," read the caption underneath.

Queen Margrethe II of Denmark sent Reagan a farewell message. In London, Mrs. Thatcher bestowed verbal bouquets on Reagan in a note made public one day before Bush's presidential inauguration in Washington.

"You have been a great president, one of the greatest, because you stood for all that is best in America," she said.

"Your beliefs, your convictions, your faith shone through everything you did. And your unassuming courtesy was the hallmark of the true and perfect gentleman. You have been an example and an inspiration to us all."

In Sydney, The Daily Telegraph gave Reagan a similar send-off.

"His personal optimism ushered in a new era. He gave America a new sense of dignity and was an effective morale-boosting cheerleader.

"History will be kind to Mr. Reagan ... He will be a hard act to follow."

In Tokyo, the Japan Times said Reagan reigned over a "fabulously lucky time" for the industrialized world.

The English-language daily also credited Reagan for reviving "America's morale after the disasters of Watergate, Vietnam, two oil crises and the humiliation of the Iran hostage affair."

"As a result, we think that Mr. Reagan should be named 'man of the decade.'"

Pravda Says Reagan Had 'Best Role' Yet

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — The Communist Party daily Pravda today paid tribute to Ronald Reagan, saying he conducted the presidency — his "best role" — with a mixture of ideology and realism that led to substantive improvements in Soviet-U.S. relations.

Correspondent Gennady Vasiliev wrote that the man who in 1983 called the Soviet Union an "evil empire" was, "according to all external indications, leaving office as a completely successful political figure."

Pravda's article provided graphic evidence of the changes that have taken place in the Soviet Union's official view of Reagan, as his administration and the Kremlin under President Mikhail S. Gorbachev moved toward arms control agreements and a lessening of tensions.

Vasiliev wrote that Reagan had not managed to reduce the size of government, that he increased the federal deficit and spent more than $2 trillion on the military while failing to gain military superiority over the Soviet Union.

But he credited Reagan with lowering inflation and unemployment and setting the United States on one of its most prolonged periods of economic growth.

One paradoxes of the Reagan administration was improved relations with the Soviet Union despite the president's tough anti-communist stand, Pravda said.

As Reagan's term progressed, "It became all the more clear that Reagan was somewhat more of a realist than could be judged from his speeches, especially of the first years of his presidency," the article said.

Reagan gradually replaced the ideologues he brought with him to Washington in 1981 with pragmatists, including Secretary of State George Shultz, it said.

Archbishop Says Prayer For Waite

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — The archbishop of Canterbury today prayed for the safe release of his envoy, Terry Waite, whose fate remains a mystery two years after he left his Lebanon hotel to negotiate the release of foreign hostages.

"To observe a second anniversary is a disappointment, but we remain ever hopeful of his return," the Church of England's spiritual leader, Robert Runcie, said in a nationally broadcast sermon from a London church.

He also prayed for the release of all others "unjustly imprisoned" in Lebanon, where 15 foreigners are held hostage, including nine Americans.

David Waite expressed optimism his brother will be freed and said he was satisfied with official efforts to gain Waite's release.

"We are still optimistic," he said. "We believe Terry will be back with us again before the next year goes by."

Waite, 49, the policeman's son who became the personal emissary of Runcie, was last seen leaving the Riviera Hotel in Moslem west Beirut on Jan. 20, 1987, to meet with Shiite Moslem kidnapers.

He told his Druse bodyguards he did not want them to escort him to the clandestine meeting.

Sources said Waite was driven to the home of a Shiite physician, where he apparently was to make contact with Islamic Jihad, a Shiite faction holding American hostages.

According to the sources, it was there that the fate Waite often feared became reality: he was taken hostage.

No group has claimed to hold Waite or two other British hostages, journalist John McCarthy and teacher Brian Keenan, and no photographs or videotapes have been released to prove they are alive.

Britain's ambassador in Beirut, Allan Ramsay, said the men are probably being held in "deplorable conditions, deprived of freedom and most human contact."

"There is nothing to suggest they are not alive," he was quoted as saying by Britain's domestic news agency, Press Association. "We have indications which confirm that, though nothing very recent."

Hostages freed since Waite vanished have reported seeing a man in an underground prison they believed was the 6-foot-7 Waite.

New rumors about Waite crop up almost every week: He was killed trying to escape Shiite Moslem extremists who held him; he was smuggled to Iran in a coffin to stand trial as an American spy; he will be ransomed for $7 million.

On Thursday, John Lyttle, the archbishop's secretary for public affairs, was quoted as saying Waite "was wrong" to make a fifth mission to Beirut. Lyttle is leading the church's effort to free Waite.

Runcie also had expressed concern to Waite about his decision to travel to Beirut "but was convinced by his determination to go," church spokeswoman Eve Keatley said today.

"Terry brought hope to others in captivity," Runcie said during the sermon. "Let us trust that he, with all others held hostage, may be sustained by the prayers constantly offered not only at Lambeth Palace but in countless churches and homes."

Lambeth Palace is the archbishop's official residence. Prayer services also were being held for Waite in dozens of parishes throughout Britain.

In southeast London, the Rev. Henry Burgin held an all-day silent vigil at Waite's parish church, All Saints' in Blackheath.

In addition to Waite, 14 foreigners are held hostage in Lebanon.

Reagan Bows Out

"The world is quiet today, Mr. President," Powell told the president. Fitzwater said the last piece of paper Reagan signed was a letter to British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, thanking her for staunch support over the years.

On their last morning in the residence, the first couple spent a few quiet moments together in the private quarters, walking hand-in-hand down its long central hallway and spending a few moments in the Yellow Oval Room, where the windows overlook the Washington and Jefferson Memorials, said Mrs. Reagan's spokeswoman, Elaine Crispin.

As a present to Mrs. Bush, Mrs. Reagan left a large, long-stem orchid plant in the presidential bedroom, Mrs. Crispin said.

As the Reagans, Bushes and Quayles posed for pictures on the north porch of the White House, Bush was asked if he had any thoughts for Reagan on the president's last day in office. Only, Bush replied, "to wish him the very best as he leaves this job he did so well."

On the eve of his departure from the White House, Reagan expressed his confidence in both the nation and his successor, calling Bush "the man who should be in this office replacing me."

Before departing for Capitol Hill, the president and first lady also bade a private farewell to the household staff in the residence.

After Bush's swearing-in, the Reagans travel by helicopter from Capitol Hill to Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington, from where they will fly to Los Angeles.

On the eve of his inaugural, Bush and Reagan met privately for about 10 minutes in the Oval Office, reminiscing about their eight years together. Then the pair went next door to the Roosevelt Room to bid farewell to about 80 senior members of the White House staff, Fitzwater said.

"The president just said he wanted to thank everyone for eight years of work on his behalf," Fitzwater said, adding that Bush paid tribute to Reagan, saying, "I wouldn't be the president if not for my teacher here, and my friend."

Reagan told the group he appreciated Bush's support over the years, quipping, "George never took my pulse once."

The president spent his last full workday doing routine paperwork, giving interviews to reporters, and presenting the Medal of Freedom to Secretary of State George Shultz and former U.S. Ambassador to Japan Mike Mansfield.

Reagan's speech at the event was delivered in the patriotic vein that has marked his addresses for decades.

"There is nothing so precious and irreplaceable as America's freedom," Reagan said. "America's freedom does not belong to just one nation. We are custodians of freedom for the world."

And, he added, "George is the man who should be in this office replacing me."

In an interview with wire service reporters, Reagan acknowledged that he was leaving office frustrated over his inability to free Americans held hostage in Lebanon. "We don't know where they are," he conceded.

Even to the end of his presidency, Reagan said, officials continued to explore "quietly and privately" how to win freedom for the nine Americans. "There hasn't been a moment that this isn't on our minds," he said.

Bush Says 'New Breeze Is Blowing'

Yielding office after two terms, Ronald Wilson Reagan, 77, a one-time Hollywood actor and later the consummate Republican conservative, returns this afternoon to California. Stepping up from the vice presidency is Bush, 64, born to wealth and privilege, a decorated Navy combat pilot in World War II, Yale man, Phi Beta Kappa, Texas oilman and millionaire, congressman, U.N. ambassador, GOP chairman, envoy to China, CIA director.

In contrast to the formal attire of Reagan's inauguration in 1981, Bush donned a dark gray pinstriped suit. In a brief exchange with reporters before a morning church service, he said today meant "an awful lot" to him.

Bush previewed his inaugural address for several reporters, saying, "It will be just a broad appeal to the American people to pitch in and help. It'll be an expression of satisfaction about how far we've come as a nation, and a recognition that we've got a long way to go."

He said that in the first days of his administration, he would order a sweeping review of U.S. relations with the Soviet Union while making the federal budget deficit his top priority at home. He will meet Tuesday with leaders from Congress.

Organizers distributed 140,000 tickets to the inaugural ceremony at the West Front of the Capitol, and extraordinary security was in place.

The day dawned pleasant, with some wisps of clouds. Temperatures were in the 40s, nothing like the conditions that froze out Reagan's 1984 inaugural parade.

For the first time, people standing closest to the inaugural platform — nearly a third of the crowd — had to pass through metal detectors. So did everyone within a two-block area near the White House.

In a nod to history, inaugural organizers borrowed for Bush the Bible used for George Washington's swearing-in 200 years ago. It was loaned by a Masons lodge in New York. A Bush family Bible also was on hand.

A simple 35-word oath written into the Constitution marked the beginning of the Bush presidency:

"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the Office of President of the United States, and will to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

Reagan departed with his head held high, a significant exception to the presidents who preceded him: Carter, Ford, Nixon, Johnson.

His retirement produced celebrations by Nicaragua's Sandinista government, praise from Moscow and thanks from British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to a "true and perfect gentleman."

In the Soviet Union, the Communist Party daily Pravda published a lengthy article entitled "Reagan's Best Role" and saying that as Reagan's presidency progressed, "it became all the more clear that Reagan was somewhat more of a realist than could be judged from his speeches, especially of the first years of his presidency," the article said.

The Japan Times hailed Reagan as the "man of the decade," and an Australian newspaper called him "a hard act to follow."

In an address Thursday to young people, Bush exuberantly described the future. "I really feel this: Our best days are yet to come."

And at a star-studded gala, Bush told the black-tie crowd and a national television audience, "I expect that every one of the other 40 presidents pledged in his mind and soul to represent all the people. Well, this 41st president-to-be feels exactly the same way."

Bush seemed relaxed as he discussed his inaugural address Thursday with The Associated Press and several other news service reporters.

Smoking Linked To Heart Diseases

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Researchers reported today they have the first evidence directly linking smoking and heart disease, but tobacco industry officials rejected the claim, saying the illness can be tied to a number of causes.

The study's authors say smokers were three times more likely than non-smokers to have angina, or chest pains, and painless periods of inadequate blood flow to the heart.

An editorial accompanying the research in the Journal of the American Medical Association said the study was the long-sought "smoking gun" showing a link between smoking and heart ailments.

Gary Miller, a spokesman for the tobacco industry's Washington-based Tobacco Institute, disputed that, saying, "This is not really enough evidence to make such a claim."

Miller noted the study involved only two dozen smokers. Forty-one non-smokers also participated.

The study, based at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, was conducted by attaching a monitor to patients' hearts. The patients, all of whom had been diagnosed as having heart disease, wore the monitors for 24 hours while they went about their daily routines.

In tests from October 1984 to December 1987, the monitors showed 975 ischemic episodes, or periods of inadequate blood flow, 8 percent of which were accompanied by chest pains, the report said. The median number of episodes over 24 hours was three for smokers, one for non-smokers.

Dr. Andrew Selwyn, a co-author of the report and a Harvard Medical School associate professor, said ischemic episodes damage the heart temporarily and can lead to heart attacks.

But the short-term effects are "reversible and very treatable," the cardiologist said. "That's what makes it useful to show (the study) to patients and say 'Look, you haven't damaged your heart yet, so stop smoking now,'" he said.

"This is a solid piece of evidence you can show patients before they actually have a heart attack," Selwyn said. "I hope it's ammunition that doctors use to show patients as often as possible."

The Tobacco Institute spokesman, however, said "anything can cause these ischemic episodes." Caffeine, excitement can cause them."

Shots Are Required

7:30 a.m. to 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. to 6 p.m.; Monday from 6 a.m. to 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. to 6 p.m., and Tuesday from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. and 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.

ECU Medical School personnel 32 or younger also will be required to be inoculated or show proof of previous inoculation, but it had not been decided this morning whether they would use the PCMH site, the ECU site or a separate one.

The Pitt County Health Department on West Sixth Street will be open from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday and from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday for the general public. Anyone 32 or younger who believes he or she has not been immunized should visit, bringing shot records, Monroe said. The telephones will be manned during those hours for people to ask questions, Monroe said. The phone number is 752-4141.

Monroe said there is no evidence of exposure at Pitt Community College nor in the public schools so far. These areas are being closely watched, he said. Local physicians are required to report immediately any measles case diagnosed.

The two hardest hit counties in the state appear to be Rowan and Cabarrus, according to the Associated Press.

In Rowan County, nursing supervisor Martha Harrell said three more cases had been reported by late Thursday afternoon. Along with three cases reported late Wednesday, they brought the total to 163 cases in Rowan, where the outbreak began more than a month ago.

Monroe said the one case that has been diagnosed in Pitt appears to have had resulted from contact with someone who had been in Rowan County.

In Cabarrus County, health educator Dennis Joyner said a case of red measles was reported at First Assembly Christian School, prompting officials of the 500-student private school to check immunization records to determine how many students need to be revaccinated, the Associated Press said. The additional reports bring the number of red measles cases in Cabarrus County to 25.

Thursday, the Cabarrus County Health Department finished revaccinating middle and high school students whose records showed they had been vaccinated before they were 15 months old. The department revaccinated 522 students over two days at six middle and high schools, bringing the number of students revaccinated at on-site clinics to 1,245.

Other counties that reported cases include Caldwell and Stanly, where one case was confirmed. In Montgomery County, one case was diagnosed but will not be confirmed until doctors receive test results today, the Associated Press said.

The epidemic appeared in Wake County on Wednesday when an North Carolina State University student and a 31-year-old Wake County man were diagnosed with the illness.

"The one student that has a confirmed case has family in Rowan County," Dr. Leah Devlin, Wake County health director, told the Associated Press.

Monroe said the disease, known as rubeola or red measles, is spread through the respiratory system much like the common cold. Marked by a blotchy rash, cough, fever and pink eye, measles can spawn dangerous complications such as pneumonia or encephalitis, the inflammation of the brain or spine.

It is not the same disease as, rubella, or German measles, which is dangerous to pregnant women.

I-40 Shooting

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A Winston-Salem man was arrested and charged Wednesday with shooting at automobiles after three automobiles traveling west on Interstate 40 were hit by gunshots, police said.

Richard Allen Fulp Jr., 31, was charged with three counts of shooting into vehicles, said J.A. Shelton of the Winston-Salem Police Department.

Shelton said Fulp told police that he was trying to shoot stray cats with a .22-caliber rifle in woods next to his home — which overlooks the westbound lanes of I-40. Fulp told police that the stray cats were stealing food from his cats.

EVANS STREET EXTENSION GREENVILLE, 756-2629

Special Inaugural Service Scheduled

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Caring — for the people of America, for God's creation and for reconciliation of the nations of the Earth — is the credo of a special worship service marking the inauguration of George Bush as president.

A litany for it, expected to echo in many churches across the country at this suggestion, goes in part:

"O God of all goodness and grace ... grant us ... a teachable and humble spirit ... a heart that mourns with those who suffer ... faith that the world shall not be inherited by the violent ... but by those whom gentleness makes great."

At Bush's wishes, the worship is to crown weekend inaugural events this Sunday at the National Cathedral, the Episcopal center in Washington and the denomination of Bush and his family.

"He wants the inaugural to culminate not with fireworks but with prayer," his wife, Barbara, told planners.

Bush, his family and an ecumenical turnout of religious leaders, Protestant, Roman Catholic, Eastern Orthodox and Jewish, are taking part in the service, including Episcopal Presiding Bishop Edmund L. Browning of New York.

"Clap your hands, all people!" say the Psalms for the affair. "Shout to God with loud songs of joy! For the Lord, the Most High, is ... a great king over all the earth ... Sing praises to God, sing praises."

Copies of the liturgy have been sent to pastors of all kinds across the country, and Bush has written them an open letter, suggesting they hold similar Sunday morning services, afterward ringing church bells.

The hourlong service unfolds in three topical sections of concern — for Americans, for stewardship of the created earth and for world peace and friendship — each section with Scripture readings, litanies and sermons.

In the Washington service, Susan Baker, wife of Secretary of State-designate James A. Baker III, leads the litany of concern for America's people, which reads in part:

"Behold, O Father, our land, our America. Bless her always with sound strength and sure purpose," with "vision and courage to nourish and preserve her as a haven of freedom and justice and peace."

The Rev. Peter Gomes, a Harvard University minister and a black American Baptist, gives the sermon on that theme after Greek Orthodox Archbishop Iakovos of New York reads accompanying Scripture from James 2, which goes in part:

"Listen, my beloved brethren ... you shall love your neighbor as yourself ... If a brother or sister is ill-clad and in lack of daily food, and one of you says to them, 'Go in peace, be warmed and filled,' without giving them the things they need for the body, what does it profit?"

"So faith by itself, if it has no works, is dead."

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the book of I Samuel intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

SAMUEL AND SAUL

SAMUEL, FOLLOWING GOD'S ORDER, HAS TOLD SAUL HE WILL BE KING OF ISRAEL... THEN HE SENDS SAUL HOME AND ISSUES A COMMAND FOR ALL THE TRIBES TO MEET TOGETHER AT MIZPEH, NOW...

AND SO THE TRIBES OF ISRAEL GATHER AT MIZPEH FOR THIS GREAT OCCASION—A HOLIPIAY SPIRIT PREVAILS AS OLD FRIENDSHIPS ARE RENEWED—THERE ARE SONGS, GAMES, AND LAUGHTER....

Seminarians Learn About Other Faiths

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Students from 20 Roman Catholic, Protestant, Eastern Orthodox and Jewish seminaries in the Northeast are taking part in a program of mutual visits to discuss and learn about each other's faiths.

Ellen Charry, director of the program called "Theology in a Pluralistic Setting," sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews, says:

"The idea is for each of the students to have an opportunity to identify the distinctiveness of ... who they are ... and also adjust their thinking to take in a more realistic and full picture of who the others are."

Marcia Prager, a student at Reconstructivist Rabbinical College in Wyncote, Pa., who took part in recent conversations in Washington, at Howard University Divinity School and Catholic University of America, says:

"People who are going to be religious leaders, if they don't know how to listen, are going to be lost in an endless forest of misunderstanding that will only aggravate past wounds."

'Black Keys'

CHICAGO (AP) — A 30-second radio spot produced by an ecumenical media cooperative for broadcast in January in connection with the birthday of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., features his speaking these words:

"Life's piano can only produce the melodies of brotherhood when it is recognized that the black keys are as necessary and beautiful as the white keys."

'Cautious Hope'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Roman Catholic leader says the Soviet release of a Lithuanian bishop gives "cautious hope" of improved conditions for religion in the Soviet Union.

Concerning release of Bishop Julijonas Steponavičius from more than two decades of internal exile and his return to Vilnius, Lithuania, Monsignor Daniel F. Hoye, general secretary of the U.S. Catholic Conference, said it is an added "sign of improvement in the situation of the church."

Cost No Object For Bush Fans At Celebration

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Now, this is conspicuous consumption. The nation's capital has never seen a party quite on the scale of the five-day extravaganza now under way to celebrate the inaugurations of George Herbert Walker Bush and Dan Quayle as president and vice president of the United States.

The official events of the American Bicentennial Presidential Inaugural — including the parade, 13 balls (two have been added at the last minute) and 16 other "ceremonies and celebrations" — are estimated to cost between $25 million and $30 million in private donations. But the real amount of money being spent at the most expensive inauguration in the nation's history is much, much more.

Let's pretend. You and your spouse are devout Bush loyalists blessed with deep pockets and abundant energy. You want to go to every important event and, in your book, excess is never wretched. How much money can you spend here in five days?

For starters, let's assume you bought (as someone did) the Ritz-Carlton's one-of-a-kind package deal that includes five days in the hotel's presidential suite, a chauffeur-driven Rolls Royce on call day and night, a personal valet also on call 24 hours a day, dinner for 12 in the hotel dining room and daily fixes of champagne and caviar.

That puts your room and board at $15,000. Add to that:

$25,000 to rent a box for eight at last night's Kennedy Center inaugural gala.

$3,000 for dinner for two at one of the three inaugural dinners Wednesday night.

$350 for two tickets to one of the inaugural balls.

$40 for two tickets to a reception for the Quayles.

$160 for two tickets to the Indiana State Society, to further honor the Quayles.

$100 for tickets to two other state society receptions, because you are popular.

$200 for two prime-location passes for reserved seating along the parade route.

$60 for two tickets to the Young Americans Ball for your beloved daughter and her no-account boyfriend.

$70 for two tickets to Republican chairman Lee Atwater's Saturday night Young Americans Celebration.

$100 for two tickets to the hottest party of all, the Texas State Society's Saturday night black tie-and-boots buffet and dance.

$1,000 for room service and tips.

$2,000 for air travel.

$1,195 for an inaugural commemorative porcelain statue of an American Bald Eagle.

Grand total: $48,275.

Most people aren't spending that much, of course. But they aren't doing it on the cheap either.

There are perhaps 300,000 celebrating Republicans in town, and few are skipping. In an informal poll, Washington hoteliers and Republican officials estimated an average cost for one couple at between $3,000 and $10,000.

"I wouldn't call it ostentatious, but the level of affluence here this week is extraordinary," said Virginia Deuschl, spokeswoman for the Ritz-Carlton, which is packed with 500 Republicans whom Ms. Deuschl described as "a Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous Crowd."

"These are people who are used to having money and who are very comfortable with it," she added. "If you've got it, flaunt it, I guess."

Celebrants seem, as Ms. Deuschl suggested, comfortable with the scale of things. "I figure it's only once every four years, so we might as well do it right," said Kirk Henderson, who flew in from Taiwan for the week.

"Besides, as far as I know, it's not taxpayers' money. It's coming out of our pockets."

Washington businessman William Coloney, attending his sixth inaugural, said he doubted if this week's affair really cost any more than the 1960 inauguration of John F. Kennedy, once prices were adjusted for inflation. And anyway, he pointed out, lavish celebrations of power and wealth are nothing new. "Read your Roman history," he said.

Perhaps, but there are ample signs that this moment in American history — from last night's 750-performer Kennedy Center gala to tonight's 75,000-guest balls — is hitting the upper registers on the lavishness scale.

Who chose which designer for what dress fed fashion gossip this week

Bush-Quayle Dress Sets Fashion Flap In Motion

By Bettijane Levine
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — The first fashion flap of the new administration erupted this week, even before the inaugural oaths were read.

The convoluted question of what Marilyn Quayle, wife of the incoming vice president, wore, was to be answered today when she appeared for the day's events, from swearing-in through inaugural balls, in the just-announced hand-made original designs of three Los Angeles fashion students.

Trendy designer Victor Costa, whose dresses she was first reported to have chosen, could not be reached for comment. He was in Washington to attend the full schedule of festivities.

Heroes of this week's fashion drama are the three students at Los Angeles' Fashion Institute of Design and Merchandising, who were selected last November by Quayle to design her inaugural clothes.

Denise Ervin, Dan Caudill and Allison Miller have toiled on their historic sewing project ever since, without leaking a word to the press. Once the word got out Wednesday, the three said: "We were shocked. We're still shocked. We're very excited. We're thrilled." They were talking from Washington, where they've been holed up at a hotel for a week, putting finishing touches — and re-touches — on their designs.

Not so heroic, according to the vice-presidential press office, were designer Costa and some fashion press, who not only released incorrect news about Quayle's choice, but compounded the error by mentioning anything at all about Marilyn Quayle's inaugural clothes.

"We wanted no mention of Mrs. Quayle's choices until after the president-elect's wife announced hers," press aide Barbara Balzano said. "We did not want to look as if we're upstaging Barbara Bush, which is something of which we've already been accused."

Bush didn't make it any easier. Apparently in a whimsical mood, she told Women's Wear Daily on Monday, "I'm not telling. I don't know why, but I'm not. It's just fun not to." (The fashion trade paper nonetheless revealed in that same article, that New York designer Arnold Scaasi had designed the gown Bush would wear to the ball.)

The students got their job because Quayle wanted to advance the cause of America's student designers, Balzano said. Quayle first contacted the school's Washington branch, which doesn't have an advanced program and so forwarded her request to the main Los Angeles campus, where officials selected the three students most likely capable of doing the needed work.

"Sometimes I think our parents are more excited than we are. My mom cries every time I talk to her," said Allison Miller, 24, of Long Beach, Calif., who designed 10-year-old Second Daughter Corinne Quayle's inaugural outfit: a robin's egg blue wool dress and cream-color wool coat and beret.

Daniel Caudill, 22, who lives with his parents in Orange County, Calif., designed Quayle's swearing-in suit. It's of royal blue wool with dropped shoulders, intricate seaming, has a matching coat and modified bowler hat. Caudill says his school is considering this "a homework project, but it's harder than any homework we've ever had." Without their instructor, Hubert Latimer, Caudill said, "we might never have gotten through." Latimer is in Washington with the three.

Denise Ervin, 32, who designed the inaugural ball gown (but will not describe it "because we're waiting for Mrs. Bush to describe hers first") is from Omaha, Neb., where she was a costume designer at Omaha Community Playhouse for 11 years.

The three students are in the institute's Advanced Study Program, which has eleven students this semester and which they describe as being "like a fashion graduate school."

The students say that after being selected, they did preliminary sketches and assembled fabric swatches while in Los Angeles. Then they flew to Washington on about Dec. 7, where they showed their ideas to Quayle in her office opposite the White House. They saw her again on Dec. 8, when she selected the styles and colors she preferred. They then went home to sew, and returned a week ago for fittings and alterations. Their final fittings were Monday.

Folks Plead For Aid With Lost Tickets

By Jill Lawrence
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Only the three-piece suits, jewels, furs and high heels suggested that this was anything different from a line of people appealing traffic tickets or Social Security decisions.

But the folks who gathered in a convention center holding room had come from around the country to participate in George Bush's inauguration as America's 41st president, only to find that their tickets were missing.

"It's been tense," said volunteer Elizabeth Barton as she sifted through a stack of yellow "special assistance forms" marked "resolved."

"No one has actually come across the table and grabbed anyone, but people have cried and people have shouted. They've stomped on their coats. They say 'But I know some heavy people here.' Or 'I'm a doctor.'"

There was a multitude of "horror stories" in the Error Resolution Area on Thursday and Tom Keller had one of them.

A young Republican from Arlington, Va., Keller said his inaugural ball tickets were delivered to someone else when he wasn't home.

"We think it was a maintenance man who was walking out of another apartment," he said. "He signed for them and took them ... My date's on hold. I don't know if she's gone out and spent a lot of money on a dress."

Jeanine Heitman of West Palm Beach, Fla., ordered and paid for two ball tickets, but when she went to pick them up, there was only one.

Lynn Remeika of Bladensburg, Md., paid for two ball tickets with a check her bank said had cleared, but when she went to pick them up, there were none.

At least one couple departed for Washington a day too early.

"Their tickets are in Oklahoma," said volunteer Ann Green.

'Get A Good Look,' Mrs. Bush Says

By Donnie Radcliffe
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Barbara Bush gave her "Bush Blue" Scaasi suit jacket a tug and struck a model's pose.

"Speaking of glamor, I want you all to look at me," she told the Kennedy Center audiences who came to pay tribute to her Thursday morning.

"Please notice — hairdo, makeup, designer dress," she said. And then, mischievously warning that she wouldn't be a clotheshorse, she added: "Look at me good this week — because it's the only week."

But what a week, one already sprinkled with generous helpings of her "wicked wit," as Marilyn Quayle described it in introducing Barbara Bush to 6,000 fans at the "Salute to the First Lady" in three jammed Kennedy Center halls.

There, for $50 a ticket, Bush backers glimpsed a style Americans haven't seen in their first lady — in this century, at least.

An aide said later she had written her own remarks.

"I want to get one thing straight," Mrs. Bush said, her voice dripping with mock sarcasm. "All day long yesterday George Bush went around Washington telling everybody how hard, tedious and laborious (it was) for him to pack."

The crowd erupted with laughter. Doggedly, she continued: "I think George forgot that the minute you become president-elect everybody knows your every move. Now, who knows what George Bush did last week?"

"He went fishing," she finished, providing the answer with timing Bob Hope might envy, each of the three times she delivered it. "So much for the packing story."

There were moments, though, when her nervousness showed through. She stumbled in her thanks to Mstislav Rostropovich, National Symphony Orchestra music director, at the Concert Hall tribute.

"You say it," she flung back at Mrs. Quayle, standing a few paces behind. "I'm a little nervous. He knows I know him and love him."

At another point, she misidentified her son Marvin's wife as daughter "Doro" Bush LeBlond, but managed to recover and set the record straight: Her name is Margaret.

"You know, I've always said that I was the world's luckiest woman," Mrs. Bush said. "I have a husband I adore, five wonderful children, 10 grandchildren. And all my children, incidentally, married way above themselves."

The "daughters," as she calls her daughters-in-law Laura, Columba, Sharon and Margaret as well as Doro, accompanied her to each of the three salutes. Their husbands and the 10 Bush grandchildren were divided up among the three Presidential Boxes where they blew her kisses. In the Opera House, a Bush granddaughter, Noelle Bush, 11, teamed up with the Mora Arriagas Mariachi Band to play "Deep in the Heart of Texas," on her accordion and tambourine.

Also accompanying Mrs. Bush to each theater as introducer was Mrs. Quayle, wearing a bold turquoise floral print dress, with matching quilted jacket by Jeanne Marc.

Have A Note Before Lending

Dear Abby: You advise people never to lend money without getting a "note" stating the terms of repayment. But if the borrower is a flake, you'll have a hard time collecting, regardless of a written note — even with a court judgment.

In addition to a written note, a smart lender will secure collateral property. People are far less likely to walk away when something valuable can revert to the lender.

I should point out that many a borrower has every honest intention of repaying, but "times get tough" or other "unexpected bills" pile up. Whether planned or unintentional, a default turns that lender into a donor. Everyone should regard a loan — even to a friend or relative — as a business transaction, and treat it accordingly. — No Softie

Dear No Softie: You are right, of course. A good rule to follow: Lend no more than you can afford to lose. Or, putting it another way: Consider the money you lend a "gift," and if (or when) it's repaid, regard it as a present.

Dear Abby: OK, here goes: I am a gay man. A few years ago I had a steady relationship with a man I'll call Bruce. Due to pressure from his church group, Bruce married a woman, so I ended our relationship.

About a year ago, Bruce called to tell me he "missed" me and asked if we could resume our relationship (behind his wife's back, of course). I told him, no, we couldn't.

I have since heard from several reliable sources that Bruce has been sleeping around with several men, and he is not practicing safe sex.

Abby, his wife is a wonderful person and she knows absolutely nothing about Bruce's relationships with men. Should I tell her? — Michael (Not My Real Name)

Dear "Michael": The rumors

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

may be false, but because you heard them from several reliable sources, let's assume they're true.

Call Bruce and tell him what you have heard. Then urge him to tell his wife immediately. And tell him that if HE doesn't tell her, YOU will. And give him a deadline.

Dear Abby: I've never seen anything regarding answering machine etiquette — what kind of message is proper, and what is not. Are there any guidelines? I have heard some rather wild and crazy stuff on answering machines. Some are even X-rated. — Curious

Dear Curious: On your own machine, resist being clever, cute or original. Simply say, "Hello, you have reached ..." (then state your telephone number). "If you wish to leave a message, please do so — but please wait for the beep."

When leaving a message on someone else's machine, simply leave your name, the hour and day you called, and if you want the party to return your call, leave your phone number.

Dear Abby: Thanks for including the USS Midway in your America Remembers/Operation Dear Abby IV campaign. The response has been absolutely incredible! Our public affairs office has a bin full of letters from all over the United States. The guys here are thrilled.

I personally have written to a number of school kids, grandparents and former Navy men, and look forward to hearing from them in the future. — Timothy Furr, USS Midway, Yokosuka, Japan

MRS. PITTMAN

Couple Marries In Virginia

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. — The wedding ceremony of Catherine Marie Callo and James Arthur Pittman took place Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The Revs. Harry Grubbs and Brian Yanofchick performed the double-ring ceremony in Kings Grant Baptist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter A. Callo of Chesapeake, Va., and Mr. and Mrs. Stearle G. Pittman of Greenville, N.C. are parents of the bridal couple.

Natalie B. Chenault of Havelock, N.C. was matron of honor. Bridesmaids included Jan Hummel of Greenville, Michele Ench of Rocky Mount, N.C., Sherri Lee of Virginia Beach, and Doris Grubbs of Greenville. Lynn Pittman of Greenville was flower girl. She is niece of the bridegroom.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers were Stearle G. Pittman Jr. of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, Andrew Callo and Paul Callo of Chesapeake, Va., both brothers of the bride, and Gary Barlow of Havelock.

Organist Denise Burgess and soloists Shirley Fisher and Sam Combs presented nuptial music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white satin styled with a sweetheart neckline with illusion. Seed pearls and iridescent accents accented the gown. The chapel-length train was bordered with a schiffli lace border. Her fingertip veil was held in place by a wreath of flowers and seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of white roses and rosebuds.

The attendants wore tea-length gowns of teal-blue satin with lace overlays. Each carried a bouquet of pink rosebuds and carnations. The flower girl wore a long white dress of organza and lace. She carried a basket of pink rosebuds and carnations.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

The couple will live in Virginia Beach, Va.

The bride is a music therapist at Tidewater Psychiatric Institute in Norfolk, Va. The bridegroom is a band director in the Virginia Beach City Public Schools.

Mental Health Is Discussed

Some characteristics of people with good mental health were discussed at the Tuesday meeting of American Business Women's Association.

Dr. Frank Fuller was keynote speaker. He is former chairman of the department of counselor education at East Carolina University.

Susan Thornton, a Pirate Charter chapter member, gave a work-related talk about her work in the health sciences library at ECU.

Barbara Cleary, also a chapter member, was included in "Women in Business" magazine article. She produces and hosts a weekly radio program "Barbara King on Business."

Jean Verdick or Nina Redditt can be contacted for further information concerning ABWA in Greenville.

Meeting Place

Friday
8 p.m. — Narcotics Anonymous has open discussion at St. Paul's Episcopal Church.
8 p.m. — Alcoholics Anonymous traditions and step (newcomers) closed meeting at AA Building, Farmville Highway.

During the mid-1980s, West Virginia's future in the ski industry looked grim.

Mismanagement had forced the state's largest resort, Snowshoe, into Chapter 11 bankruptcy. Silver Creek, Snowshoe's neighbor on Cheat Mountain, was struggling through a rocky start-up phase and eventually filed for bankruptcy as well. Timberline experienced more openings and closings than a sliding glass door.

Only one major resort escaped the financial roller coaster. By sticking to a business plan based on controlled growth, Canaan Valley established itself as a popular destination for skiers who wanted consistent snow conditions and friendly service at a reasonable price.

Rather than embark on a complicated expansion campaign, Canaan Valley Resort, Inc., concentrated on improving its lift and snowmaking operations, a move that has paid for itself through a dramatic increase in customers.

Ski areas measure their success in part by counting skiers' visits (i.e. the total number of visits made by skiers during the course of the winter). Canaan Valley tallied 66,000 skier days during the 1983-84 season. Last year the resort came very close to doubling that number, thanks to a surge in group and convention business, and management expects that trend to continue.

Canaan Valley Resort is named for its location. Stretching 15 miles long by three miles wide, it is the highest valley east of the Rockies. It lies about two hours southwest of Cumberland, Md., at an altitude exceeding 3,200 feet — about 2,000 feet higher than the base elevation of either Killington or Stowe in Vermont. That altitude practically guarantees Canaan's average of 150 to 170 inches of snow, although this year's snowfall is down substantially.

Like many resorts in the south, Canaan Valley is also a place where families can have fun. Its competitive edge stems from its abundance of natural snow (complemented by state-of-the-art snowmaking) and enough diversity to offer something for everyone.

Cross country skiers can choose from 18 miles of foot-packed marked trails in Canaan Valley's state park or try nearby privately owned White Grass and Blackwater Falls Nordic Centers. Several White Grass trails wind through the Dolly Sods wilderness area and along the Weiss Knob ridge, peaking at 4,303 feet. An eight-mile trail links the state park with Blackwater Falls, and all three Nordic operations rent Telemark skis.

Twenty-one slopes and trails make up the Alpine complex. Four are deliberately set apart from the rest of the mountain so beginners can learn without worrying about more experienced skiers whizzing by.

Intermediate terrain ranges from gentle, narrow trails to a wide-open treeless ridge called The Meadows. More experienced skiers usually tackle the steep pitches of Gravity, an expert run cut straight down the fall line. Or, they drive a couple of miles north on Rt. 32 to ski at Timberline, resurrected two years ago by a Philadelphia surgeon named Frederick Reichle and his nephew, Frederick Herz.

Timberline can hardly be classified as a major resort, but it has the potential to surpass Canaan Valley in size and scope. Reichle and Herz own or have options to buy the entire mountain range between the two ski areas. If they develop it, Timberline will be the largest ski area in West Virginia and one of the largest south of New England. Its vertical drop of 1,084 feet beats Canaan Valley's by 234 feet.

Right now, six legitimate trails exist. The resort advertises 12, but half of them are either short crossovers or trails divided into a lower section and upper section. Timberline's longest and easiest trail, Salamander, stretches two miles around the edge of Herz Mountain overlooking Dolly Sods. It's an excellent warm-up run and the best spot for beginners and novices to hone their skills.

'Carolina Gold' Is Cultivation Hobby

By Bruce Smith
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HARDEEVILLE, S.C. — More than 300 years after it was brought to America, the rice which meant riches for colonial South Carolina planters is again under cultivation in low-lying fields washed with the scent of salt air.

At Turnbridge Plantation in Jasper County, just north of Savannah, Ga., Dr. Richard Schulze is growing Carolina Gold, a pure strain of rice brought from Madagascar 304 years ago.

Within five years of its arrival in Charleston in 1685, colonial planters were already exporting Carolina Gold — so named because of its tawny gold color in the field. Profits from the rice culture helped make Charleston one of the wealthiest cities in the colonies. But Carolina Gold hasn't been cultivated commercially in South Carolina for six decades.

Schulze, an eye surgeon with a practice in Savannah, started growing white rice 10 years ago to attract water fowl to the impoundments on his 400-acre plantation off the Wright River.

"Using the rice to attract the ducks was a dead loss," he admits, but added he found "I just enjoyed harvesting the rice."

Schulze said he spent a lot of time "trying to reinvent the wheel" as he worked with rice cultivation.

In his research on the subject, he kept encountering references to Carolina Gold. But Schulze said with the last commercial crop in the state grown in 1929, he wasn't able to immediately find any.

However, the Rice Institute in Beaumont, Texas, did have some of the rice and Schulze persuaded the U.S. Department of Agriculture to propagate some seed rice.

Schulze received a modest 14 pounds of the strain three years ago. His first harvest produced 64 pounds, which was replanted the following year.

The second harvest produced 470 pounds and the whole crop was replanted last spring. In the fall, those 470 pounds produced 10,000 pounds of rice.

Schulze, his wife, Tricia, and Julius Bing, a retired Government Printing Office employee who lives in nearby Hardeeville, handle the cultivation themselves.

"I had never seen rice growing in my life until we came over here and started this," says Bing.

"It's a hobby. It's something we do for fun," added Schulze. "There's also a lot of art in this. A lot of this stuff we do by intuition."

The rice is planted in the spring with a seed drill, and when the stalks grow to the proper height, the field is flooded.

In late summer, when the crop reaches maturity, the fields are drained and the rice is harvested with the help of a neighbor's combine, Bing explained.

Harvesting can be tricky. Farmers must harvest quickly when the plants reach maturity or else birds will make short work of the crop. But harvesting too soon after draining the field can mean a combine mired in the mud.

Schulze hulls the rice with a hull-ing machine dating to 1884 which he rescued from a warehouse in Ridgeville. Hulling is the process by which the outer gold shell of the rice grain is removed.

Ironically, Schulze can't sell in South Carolina the rice which once brought vast riches to the state.

State law requires rice sold for human consumption be enriched with vitamins lost in processing. Since those supplements are soluble in water, the law prohibits instructions on packages telling consumers to wash rice before cooking.

Since the antique hulling mill doesn't polish all the bran — the outside coat — off the rice, the 1.5 pound bags of Carolina Gold include instructions for washing first.

So Schulze donates the rice to the Savannah Association for the Blind which sells it across the border in Georgia for $10 a bag as a way to raise money. Association clients bag the rice which is shipped in large containers from Schulze, a trustee of the organization.

Schulze has no plans to increase production.

"We don't want to grow it to sell it," he said, adding, "If we did it would take all the fun out of it."

Rice was a major industry in South Carolina until the early 1800s when timber and cotton supplanted it.

With the westward expansion, the rice growing region shifted to the Mississippi River Delta, Schulze said.

Carolina Gold, unlike commercial hybrids, "is not the ideal plant to raise," Schulze adds, noting it's not very stable in the wind and has a lower yield per acre.

Carolina Gold can yield up to 1,200 pounds per acre whereas commercial rices can yield upwards to 9,000 pounds, he said.

First-Person Book Works For Author

By Dawn Mendez
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — Appalachian author Lee Smith says there's nothing unusual in using a series of letters to tell the story in her new novel, "Fair and Tender Ladies."

The single-person narrative has long been used by the women of West Virginia, Virginia and Kentucky, says Smith, a faculty member at North Carolina State University. Many of those Appalachian women, although uneducated, wrote throughout their lives, she says.

"Several years back, when I was teaching a creative writing class, I ran into a woman from the mountains called Lou Crabtree. I asked her if she had any other work, and she turned up with a suitcase full of stories."

Louisiana State University published some of those stories in a volume titled "Stories From Sweet Holler."

Smith also tells of a large packet of letters she bought for 75 cents at a garage sale.

"They were letters one woman had written to her sister over a lifetime. Writing for yourself was a very feminine thing. These women were interested in the process rather than the end product."

In "Fair and Tender Ladies," Smith uses a series of letters from protagonist Ivy Rowe to tell the story of a woman born in rural Virginia at the turn of the century.

For Smith, using the epistolary form was both a literary and academic challenge.

"I'm fascinated by the first person narrative and was anxious to explore it," she says, adding that in the end, the book appeared to write itself.

"Ivy took over," she says. "I was never conscious of writing the novel. It was the easiest thing I've ever done."

She acknowledges a strong autobiographical element in the novel, coupled with wholehearted sympathy for Appalachia and its people. Yet she says she understands why people often leave the area.

"These states have nothing to entice people to stay," she says. "If they stay and do well, they put their money elsewhere."

But she notes that diehard mountain people refuse to leave. Near the end of "Fair and Tender Ladies," Ivy prevents a businessman from mining her land. It is based on a true story.

"A man in Kentucky did the same thing; he said he was saving the land for his grandson in Vietnam," she says.

Smith was born in Grundy, Va., and has lived in much of the South. She now lives in Chapel Hill, N.C., and teaches literature at N.C. State. Her other novels include "The Last Day the Dogbushes Bloomed," "Something in the Wind," and "Family Linen." She also has a short story collection, "Cakewalk."

Critics have compared her writing to that of Flannery O'Connor and Eudora Welty. She downplays such praise, but she says she is thrilled that readers see her characters as authentic.

She says she would like to broaden the public's image of what real Appalachians are like, and she expresses some annoyance with the stereotype of the "stupid hillbilly."

"I wish people had more open minds," she says. "My Appalachia is a beautiful place with a history and music all its own. It's really another country."

Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were mostly steady and ranged from 97 to 99 1/2 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks dropped .90 to 2,238.21 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about 5 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 347 up, 552 down and 536 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 23.32 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Digital Equipment rose 1 to 105 1/2. On Thursday the company reported quarterly earnings that surpassed analysts' estimates.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks slipped .18 to 161.07. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .19 at 318.75.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 0.36 to 2,239.11.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by a margin of about 5 to 4 in nationwide trading of NYSE-listed stocks, with 814 stocks up, 643 down and 528 unchanged.

Speaker Bills Filed

Jones has requested that Mavretic consider him as a possibility to chair the Elections and Constitutional Amendments Committee, which is the panel that would deal with any constitutional amendment concerning the length of the speaker's term. Mavretic is expected to complete committee assignments on Monday.

The change could be accomplished by legislation, Jones said, but allowing the public to vote would have a permanent effect on the system.

"Since the power of the constitution is derived from the people, I feel that it is important that this issue be addressed as a constitutional amendment rather than as a rules change," Jones said.

At least two other House members have also introduced bills which would limit the length of time state officials may serve, according to the Associated Press.

Plane

out of one engine, and we saw it leaning, almost falling off, and then it fell off ... it was about a few hundred feet in the air and landed in a grassy part of the runway," Tom Waldinski, a city of Chicago worker told WBBM radio.

Two runways were shut down because of debris from the engine, but no delays of departing and arriving flights were reported, said a spokeswoman for the city's Department of Aviation who refused to give her name.

The engine was a JT8 turbofan manufactured by Pratt & Whitney, Zochert said. The engines of a Boeing 737-200 are mounted under each wing and the airplane is designed to fly on one engine.

Republican Rep. Robert Bradley of Iredell County introduced a bill Thursday that would limit the length of term for the governor, lieutenant governor and House speaker to four consecutive years in office. Democratic Rep. Albert Lineberry of Guilford County filed a bill last week calling for a gubernatorial veto power, limiting succession for the top three offices and requiring the governor and lieutenant governor to run as a ticket.

Mavretic said he supports the limit on his own office because it would help in his effort to spread power among a broad base of legislators, according to the Associated Press.

The speakership should be rotated, Jones said, because the speaker is not selected by a statewide vote. By changing speakers every four years, a representative from every district in the state could eventually have an opportunity to lead the House.

If the House and Senate approve the bill, Jones said he would like to place a referendum on the 1990 ballot that would allow the public to vote on the issue.

The strength of a constitutional amendment would discourage lawmakers from further altering the manner in which the speaker is elected, Jones said.

Bradley told the Associated Press that the high turnover in the top three offices in the past "has kept us in the downline positions honest and had kept virtually corruption-free government in North Carolina."

He said he doubts the succession issue will become tied with efforts to give North Carolina's governor veto power.

"I think the pawn in that negotiation will probably end up being the governor and lieutenant governor running as a team," he said.

Obituaries

Sugg
SNOW HILL — Mr. Drew Dixon Sugg, 96, of Route 2, Snow Hill, died Thursday.

His funeral will be conducted Saturday at 11 a.m. at Taylor-Edwards Funeral Home by the Rev. Leon Grubbs. Burial will follow in Westview Cemetery in Kinston.

Surviving are his wife, Lois Sugg; a daughter, Dixie Hart of Snow Hill, and a granddaughter.

The family will receive friends today from 7-9 p.m. Memorials may be made to the Greene County Rescue Squad.

Wells

Mr. James Shelton "Jimmy" Wells, 68, of 1501 S. Elm St. died Thursday.

His funeral will be conducted Saturday at 3 p.m. at Memorial Baptist Church by the Rev. E.T. Vinson. Burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery. Masonic rites will be accorded at the grave.

Mr. Wells, a native of Greenville,

Hornets Fall To Phoenix

Jeff Hornacek Leads Suns To Victory Over Charlotte

By Bill Barnard
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — One outstanding game is not going to change Jeff Hornacek's standing on the Phoenix Suns.

Hornacek, only the fifth-leading scorer on the team with an 11.7 average, hit 11 of 15 shots from the field and scored a career-high 28 points Thursday night, leading the Suns to a 126-112 victory over the Charlotte Hornets.

But Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said Tom Chambers and Eddie Johnson will continue to be the focus of the team's offense.

"Jeff's a solid player, but we don't usually play to him because we have a lot of offensive weapons," Fitzsimmons said. "Jeff was making his shots, but the guys we make sure get their shots are Tom and Eddie."

Fitzsimmons said he wanted Hornacek to take a few extra shots than usual because Charlotte's strength is the scoring of perimeter players Kelly Tripucka, Robert Reid and Rex Chapman.

"We wanted to make Tripucka, Chapman and Reid guard somebody and not just concentrate on their offense," Fitzsimmons said.

Hornets coach Dick Harter said Hornacek taught Chapman, a rookie, a few lessons.

"Hornacek had a great game, but he was playing against someone who is not yet ready to play defense in this league," Harter said.

Hornacek, whose previous career high was 24 points, said he is enjoying the Suns' 22-14 record.

"Everyone likes to score, but it's more fun that we're winning this year after winning 36 and 28 games my first two seasons," Hornacek said. "If I was scoring 25 a game, I wouldn't be happy if we weren't winning."

Phoenix, which already has surpassed last season's win total on the road, also got 31 points and 13 rebounds from Chambers and 24 points from Johnson, who scored eight during a key 10-1 third-quarter run.

Charlotte, which lost its fourth consecutive game at home, trailed 73-62 before Tripucka sparked a 12-2 spurt that brought the Hornets within one. Tripucka, who led the Hornets with 27 points, started the run with a 3-point goal and three-point play.

Phoenix, which was 6-35 on the road in 1987-88 and is now 7-11 this season, led 82-81 later in the third quarter before Johnson got hot, scoring eight points in just 2:48, helping the Suns rebuild a 92-82 lead. They led by as many as 15 in the fourth period.

"We've played well on the road this season and we didn't let the crowd affect us when they came back," Johnson said. "I was getting the ball and it kept going in."

"We missed some easy shots, that's about all I can complain about on our part," Harter said. "I wish we played better but I'm not sure how much better we could have played. Everyone was three or four inches taller or wider than us."

The Suns were playing their first game since a scheduled meeting at Miami Tuesday was postponed because of civil disturbances. It was the first NBA game postponed for reasons not related to weather since President Kennedy was assassinated in 1963.

Phoenix led 48-37 midway through the second quarter before settling for a 63-56 halftime advantage. Reid kept it close for Charlotte with 10 points in a span of 2:50 in the second period.

Kurt Rambis finished with 19 points and 16 rebounds for Charlotte. Cleveland 113, Indiana 106

Pirates Go On The Road To Face American, Navy

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina University's Pirates take to the road again in the Colonial Athletic Association, playing the first two games of a three-game swing before they return to their own Minges Coliseum.

Saturday, the Pirates will be in the national's capital to face American University in a 7:30 p.m. game in Bender Arena. Monday, they travel on to Annapolis, Md., to meet the U.S. Naval Academy in Halsey Pavilion, also at 7:30 p.m.

The road swing will continue on Jan. 28 when the Pirates travel to UNC-Wilmington. They do not return home until Feb. 1 when they entertain William & Mary in another CAA game.

East Carolina's women entertain American on Saturday at 7 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

The Pirate men are currently 2-2 in the league after dropping a 86-74 game to George Mason in Minges this past Monday. In that game, the Pirates led 46-43 at intermission, but shot only 33.3 percent from the floor in the second half as the Patriots outscored them 25-8 in the middle minutes of the period and went on to record the victory.

It was a bitter pill for the Pirates to swallow, as they had come off an outstanding performance in a 62-57 win over James Madison two nights earlier in Minges. "This makes the road trip even tougher," Coach Mike Steele reflected after the Mason loss.

East Carolina is 8-7 overall, having already equaled their total victories for last year.

In American, the Pirates face a strong Eagle team that surprised everyone in the CAA last year by finishing in a tie for second place. That earned Coach Ed Tapscott a share of the Coach of the Year honors in the CAA.

This year, the Eagles were the choice of the league's coaches to win the championship, but they are only 3-2 in league play, having lost to both Richmond and James Madison — both on the road. In Bender Arena, the Eagles are 7-0 for the season. They are 8-5 overall going into Saturday's game.

The Eagles come into the contest after a non-conference walloping of Florida International on Monday, 128-90.

American holds a 6-3 advantage in their series, including a 4-1 mark on the Eagle courts. The Pirates last won in 1986 when they took a 65-63 victory.

Last year, American won both of the games, taking a 75-69 victory in overtime and a 76-69 win in Washington.

In the first of the two games, the Pirates appeared to be a sure winner when Gus Hill, who had made 13 free throws in the game, went to the line with no time remaining on the clock and the score tied. But he missed the front end of a one-and-one with one second remaining, sending the game into overtime. The Eagles then took the victory.

That game was considered by many as the turning point for the Pirates, who had come into the contest with a 2-1 league record. After that, they lost five straight games, four in the league before winning again.

Blue Edwards continues to be the leading scorer for the Pirates, scoring 27 against Mason despite a terrible second half performance, where he made only three of 14 shots from the floor. Edwards is averaging 25.5 points a game and leads the Pirates in rebounding with a 6.7 average.

Hill is the only other Pirate in double figures with a 13.7 average.

American brings in five players with double figure scoring, led by 6-8 junior forward/center Ron Draper at 15.1. He's also the leading rebounder with an 11.7 average.

Others in double figure scoring include 6-6 junior forward Daryl Holmes, 14.0; 6-3 senior guard Dale Spears, 13.0; 6-1 sophomore guard Brock Wortman, 11.0, and 6-3 senior guard Chuck West at 10.1.

Navy also leads its series with the Pirates, 12-2, and East Carolina has never recorded a victory in Halsey. Last year, the Pirates split with the Midshipmen, winning 61-49 in Greenville and falling 90-88 in overtime in Annapolis.

Rose, Fike Meet In Key Contest

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

J.H. Rose High School has a chance to climb back to the top of the Big East standings with a win over unbeaten and league-leading Wilson Fike tonight at home.

The Golden Demons, ranked second in the east by The News & Observer, enter the game with an 11-0 overall record and a 3-0 mark in the league. Fike hasn't lost a regular season conference game since the 1987 campaign. Last year, the Golden Demons finished 14-0.

The Rampants are currently 10-3 and 3-1 and tied for second place in the conference with Northern Nash, who dipped to 11-1 and 3-1 following a Tuesday loss to Elizabeth City Northeastern.

In other county games, Eastern Plains Conference members Farmville Central, Ayden-Grifton and North Pitt will all be in action as will D.H. Conley in the Coastal 3-A Conference.

Farmville Central (11-2, 3-0) will host South Lenoir (0-11, 0-2), while Ayden-Grifton will be at home against Pamlico County (1-6, 1-1). North Pitt (6-7, 1-2) will be on the road at C.B. Aycock (6-7, 0-2) and Conley (9-4, 2-1) will travel to West Craven.

Longtime Fike coach Harvey Reid is looking at the Rose game as just another tough conference matchup.

"All of your conference games are always very big in the Big East," Reid said. "Anybody in this league is capable of beating anybody else. In fact, there may be seven other teams in this conference that are better than we are."

"I know coach (Jim) Brewington and the personnel there very well and I'm expecting a tough basketball game," Reid said.

Even though it is still early in the conference season, Brewington feels

Winning Has Helped Heal Rift Between Coach, QB

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Winning has healed the strained relationship between Coach Bill Walsh and quarterback Joe Montana, but the two remain respectfully distant from each other.

The 2,000-plus journalists who poured in to cover the Super Bowl can find little evidence of the quarterback controversy or the Walsh-Montana disagreement that nearly ruined the San Francisco 49ers' season.

The two biggest heroes of San Francisco's three NFC championships and two Super Bowl titles in the 1980s have lavished praise on each other all week.

On Thursday, Walsh said Montana "can make spontaneous plays in an instant. He can make things happen."

Earlier, Walsh called his 32-year-old quarterback "one of the truly courageous players of our time. He has nerve, instinct and a certain command ... He is the essence of the game itself, certainly with the injuries he's had, to come back as he has."

"I think that right now, right at this moment, Joe is at his very best as a football player," Walsh said. "And he has played exceptionally well in championship games, so we're counting on him for another great game on Sunday."

Montana has been equally complimentary, calling Walsh an outstanding innovator.

"Bill has been everything to me," he said. "I owe everything that's happened here to him."

The veteran coach, Montana said, "has a certain knack of getting the best from people that he

Wyche-Esiason Relationship Is Like A Stormy Marriage

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Cincinnati Bengals coach Sam Wyche likens his relationship with quarterback

Boomer Esiason to a marriage. Their run-ins have stamped them as an odd couple.

Esiason, a bold, outspoken passer, and Wyche, a quick-tempered coach, have locked horns repeatedly during their five-year working relationship with the Bengals. Their rift last season during the NFL strike became part of the fallout from a 4-11 season that threatened to leave a festering wound.

The story of how they've patched up their relationship this season also is the story of how the Bengals have evolved into a Super Bowl team in one year.

Receiver Cris Collinsworth said the players saw how Esiason and Wyche were trying to mend their relationship this summer. They watched and learned.

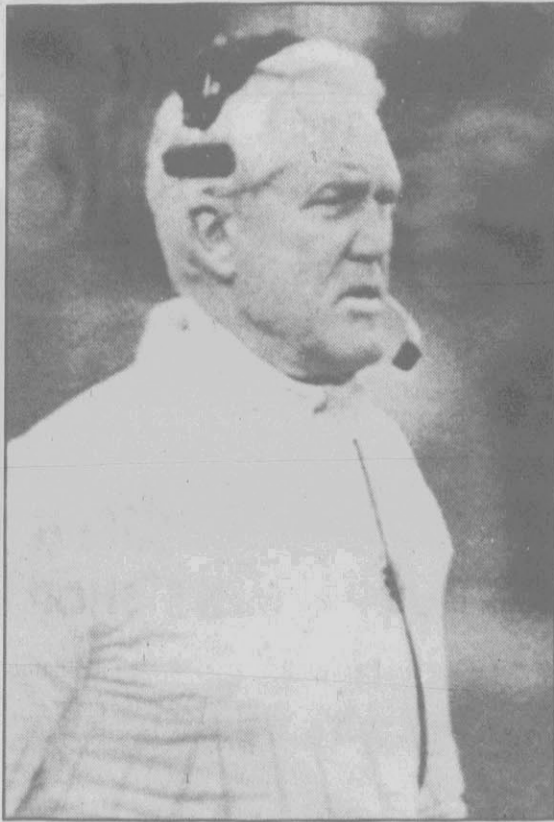

"The relationship between Sam and Boomer kind of set that apart, kind of got it off on the right foot," Collinsworth said. "They said, 'Well, if they can work that out, then whatever my little (problem) is, we can figure out something for that, too.'"

The problems between Esiason and Wyche go back several years.

In 1986, Wyche yanked Esiason from a game in Houston after he played poorly, replacing him with Ken Anderson. Esiason threw his helmet down after reaching the sideline and scattered cups of drink behind the bench in anger at being lifted.

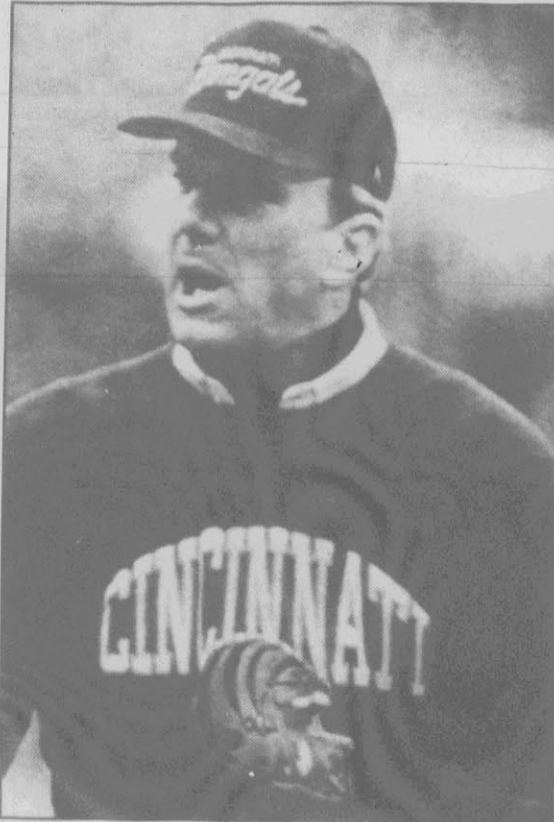

The problems worsened last year, when Esiason was the Notre Dame Player Collapses, Dies At Club

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Notre Dame football player Bob Satterfield collapsed at a local nightclub and died in the emergency room of a Niles, Mich., hospital, university officials said.

Satterfield, a senior who saw limited playing time in the 1988 season, had returned hours earlier from Washington, where the national champion Notre Dame squad had met President Reagan at the White House.

Rose Swimmers Sweep Four-Way Meet

GOLDSBORO — Rose High School's boys and girls swimming teams each came away with victories in a four-way meet held in Goldsboro Thursday.

The Rampants won their meet with 200 points while Northeastern was second with 92, Eastern Wayne had 36 and Goldsboro, 28. In the girls' meet, Rose had 129, Goldsboro 117, Northeastern 96 and Eastern Wayne 39.

Edward Chassin and Martin Barbee were both double winners for the Rose boys. Chassin won the 200-yard individual medley in 2:21.48 and the 100-yard freestyle in 50.83. Barbee took the 50 free in 23.97 and the 100 breaststroke in 1:11.13. John Carstarphen won the 200 freestyle in 1:56.41. The team of Chassin, Barbee, Carstarphen and Trey Stroud won the 400 freestyle relay in 4:00.43, while Stroud teamed with Park Williams, John Uhlmann and Bert Powell to win the 200 medley relay in 1:56.21. John Glienke won the 500 freestyle in 6:03.86 while Duke Bloyd won the diving with a score of 59.2.

Paula Song and Kathryn Barnhill were double winners for the girls. Song won the 100 free in 1:00.90 and the 100 backstroke in 1:11.40. Barnhill took the 50 freestyle in 27.90 and the 100 butterfly in 1:10.09. The two combined with Kristen Daugherty and Sarah Pearsall to win the 200 medley relay in 2:17.67. Daugherty also won the 200 individual medley in 2:43.40 while Pearsall teamed with J.J. McGalliard, Sarah Morris and Emily Davis to win the 400 freestyle relay in 5:13.62. Caroline Redding won the diving with a 48.5 score.

The Rose teams are each 10-1 and return to action on Feb. 8 at Minges pool, hosting Northeastern, Kinston and Goldsboro.

Ayden Nips Bethel In Junior High Action

BETHEL — Ayden Middle School gained a 51-50 basketball victory over Bethel Middle School Thursday.

Bethel was led by Raymond Perkins with 20 points while Terry Moore had 14. Ayden was led by Artis with 19 points.

In the girls' game, Ayden took a 27-5 victory over Bethel. K. Raspberry led Ayden with eight points.

Cox Outwrestles West Craven Middle School

VANCEBORO — A.G. Cox Middle School gained a 49-33 wrestling victory over West Craven Middle School Thursday in junior high school action.

Cox had pins recorded by Percy Rogers, Torrence Smith, Carter Chapman, Kendrick Ruffin, Terry Turnage and Neal Woolard. Decisions were won for Cox by Danny Via and Timmy Craft.

Cox is now 12-0 and return to action against H.J. McDonald on Feb. 1.

San Jose State Adds Walkons To Team

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Eight walk-ons replaced 10 San Jose State players who walked off the team after demanding dismissal of Coach Bill Berry.

Fullerton State defeated the re-cast San Jose State team 82-60.

Four of the eight replacements, who joined the four remaining members of the team, are football players. Only one of the fill-ins, 6-foot-9 Craig McPherson, a transfer from Santa Clara, has college basketball experience.

University spokeswoman Karen Rosenzweig said that Berry, in his 10th season at San Jose State, will remain at least through the end of the season and that the boycotting players' athletic scholarship status will be determined in the next week.

Premier Championship Set For Debut

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The Premier Championship will make its debut next October at Tanglewood Park.

The Forsyth County Park Authority approved a contract Wednesday to hold the Senior PGA Tour golf tournament on one of the park's golf courses.

Premier is the new name for what had been called the Vantage Championship. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. announced the name change last year to increase exposure for its Premier brand smokeless cigarette.

Senior Bowl To Eliminate Players' Pay

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Senior Bowl officials have ended a 39-year tradition of paying college all-star players money in addition to room and board for playing in the charity football game at Mobile.

The 40th annual game is scheduled for kickoff at noon Saturday in Ladd Memorial Stadium. Players on last year's winning team received $1,750 each, while the losers took home $1,500. There are 74 players in the lineup.

They will continue receiving board and $550 each for meals for their week's stay in the port city.

Senior Bowl president E. B. Peebles Jr. said Thursday the decision to stop paying players came after last year's game between the North and the South.

He said the decision was made without consultation with the NCAA, which has rules against college athletes accepting pay. But he said some conferences had expressed misgivings about the payments. Their scholarship requirements are a "hodge-podge" of different rules, he said, some prohibiting payments of any kind.

Judge Orders NFL To Pay USFL Fees

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A federal judge ruled that the National Football League must pay the now defunct United States Football League $5.5 million in attorneys' fees. The man who served as the USFL's commissioner said the ruling "further validates our antitrust charges."

The jury in the USFL's antitrust suit against the NFL found the NFL guilty of monopolizing the marketplace, but awarded the USFL only $1 in damages.

U.S. District Judge Peter Leisure of the Southern District of New York, in his ruling rejected the NFL's arguments that the USFL had lost a major portion of its case and therefore wasn't entitled to have its legal fees paid.

Suspended Player Was Readmitted

Valvano, Poulton, Player Reportedly Entered An Unusual Contract

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH, N.C. — An unusual contract involving a North Carolina State University basketball player, Coach Jim Valvano and the school's chancellor allowed the player to be readmitted after having been suspended because of poor grades, according to a published report.

In interviews with The News and Observer of Raleigh, several university officials acknowledged that such a contract existed, but would not identify the player.

Katherine Klein, an associate professor of psychology who served on the admissions committee in 1986-87 and who is now chairman of the panel, said she remembered the contract involving Chancellor Bruce Poulton, Valvano and the student. The student was suspended in the fall of 1986 and readmitted the next semester.

"Given the circumstances, I'm sure everyone on the committee thought it was the best way to handle the situation," the newspaper quoted her as saying in today's editions.

Asked if she thought the athlete had been given preferential treatment, Klein told the newspaper, "yes and no."

"Athletes are special cases. The committee was very sensitive to the fact that they have increased hours (of) practice, and many of them are not quite capable in (their) entering credentials. The university has a responsibility to support them any way they can get it," Klein told the newspaper.

C.D. Spangler Jr., president of the University of North Carolina system, said Poulton had confirmed Thursday that such a contract existed.

"Right now, I don't know the details," Spangler said. "I don't even know who it was about, and I'd prefer not to know."

The newspaper reported that it had obtained an unsigned copy of the contract that did not contain the player's name.

Poulton declined through a spokesman to comment. Valvano referred all calls to Becky French, N.C. State's counsel. French declined comment.

Questions about academic integrity at N.C. State have arisen in the wake of allegations on the dust jacket of the forthcoming book "Personal Fouls." The allegations, which included charges of grade changing, were published by the newspaper nearly two weeks ago.

The one-page document, titled "Contract between NCSU and the athlete for Spring semester 1987," was printed on the letterhead stationery of N.C. State's office of undergraduate admissions. It set forth 10 points of understanding involving the three parties.

In them, the athlete agreed to attend all classes and tutoring sessions and keep a "positive mental attitude."

In turn, the chancellor agreed that the university would provide tutors for each of the athlete's classes and would "be the liaison" between the faculty and the athlete's coaches. The athletic director agreed to suspend the athlete if there were unexcused absences from classes or tutoring sessions.

Anna P. Keller, director of admissions until August 1987, told the newspaper she did not remember the contract.

"I have no recollection at all of it," Keller said. "It went through the admissions committee."

George R. Dixon, NCSU's director of admissions, also said he was not aware of the contract. He said he could not recall an instance in which Poulton became involved in getting a student readmitted. The contract was approved several months before Dixon became admissions director.

Students suspended for poor grades may seek readmission, Dixon said. Occasionally, he said, administrators will readmit a student under a contract that defines what the university expects of the student.

No students have been readmitted under such contracts in the past two years, he said.

"Contracts are a very common occurrence in many, many universities," Dixon said. "It's a very common means of giving students motivation. The whole motive is to let the student know what the expectations are, and to reinforce that his performance at that point had not been to the level that would lead to graduation."

Normally, a readmission contract "would involve completing a certain number of hours at certain performance level," he said.

NCAA Presidents Ask For A Postponement

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MISSION, Kan. — Following a week of pressure from Georgetown John Thompson and others, the presidents of the NCAA and of its Presidents Commission decided to ask that Proposition 42 be postponed.

Proposition 42 was designed to tighten academic eligibility guidelines for freshman athletes. Thompson attacked the proposal because it mandates certain scores on standardized tests, which some say are biased.

The proposal was passed last week at the NCAA convention in San Francisco and Thompson refused to coach last weekend against Boston College and Wednesday at Providence.

At the request of Georgetown and the Southeastern Conference, a meeting was held Thursday to discuss "the wide range of academic, athletics and socio-economic concerns" arising from Prop 42's passage, an NCAA statement said.

Proposition 42 would change some of the requirements in Proposition 48, which went into effect prior to the 1986-87 school year. Proposition 48 requires that incoming freshmen have a 2.0 grand-point average and a minimum score of 700 on the SAT or 15 on the ACT to be eligible to play.

So-called "partial qualifiers," those who satisfy only one of the requirements, could receive a scholarship but, like a non-qualifier, couldn't play or practice during the freshman year and would sacrifice one year of eligibility.

Proposition 42 was designed to close the "partial-qualifier" loophole which, according to NCAA estimates, had allowed some 1,800 athletes to receive scholarships the last three years.

The NCAA Academic Requirements Committee "wanted no changes made in Proposition 48," the statement said, adding that "the majority of the Division I chief executive officers of the Presidents Commission concurred."

NCAA president Albert M. Witte and Martin Massengale, chairman of the Presidents Commission, "will recommend to the NCAA Council and the Division I membership of the Presidents Commission that legislation be introduced at the next convention to postpone any changes" until a study of Prop 48 is completed.

"In my judgment, the potential negative impacts that changes ... could have on young people who want to pursue a college education and participate in athletics outweighs any need to amend this legislation before all data on the first five years of the survey have been collected and studied," Witte said.

the game could go a long way in determining the conference championship.

"It's early in the conference season but one of the keys to having a shot at winning the conference championship is winning your home games," Brewington said.

Reid said the fact that his team is ranked as highly as it is doesn't mean a thing to him.

"To be quite honest, I don't have any idea where we are ranked," Reid said. "I don't look at the rankings and I try to encourage my players not to either. If you start putting emphasis on the opinions of people outside of the basketball team you may start believing opinions that don't coincide with those of the coaching staff."

The Golden Demons have been led in scoring this season by guard Jamie Watson, who is averaging 20 points per game, while the Rampants top scorer has been guard James Teel with an 11.8 average.

"Our scoring is pretty well balanced," Reid said. "We get a lot of help from Kendrick Lucas and Isaiah King inside. They're both averaging around 9 or 10 points a game and (guard) Maurice Williams is also scoring around 10 a game for us."

Brewington thinks the biggest key for the Rampants in the game will be cutting down on turnovers.

"We've just got to try and play our game," Brewington said. "Fike likes to force turnovers off their defense. We're going to need to get back on defense and stay in our game plan to be successful."

Pirates..

The Midshipmen are currently 3-11 overall record and a 0-5 league mark following Wednesday night's 72-59 defeat at William & Mary. They will entertain UNC-Wilmington on Saturday night.

Navy is led by 6-2 senior guard Joe Gottschalk with a 15.0 average and 6-6 sophomore forward Eddie Reddick, hitting 13.5 points a game. Craig Prather, a 6-5 senior forward, is the leading rebounder at 8.9, while Reddick is pulling 8.5 per game.

East Carolina's Lady Pirates will be at home Saturday night, attempting to snap a three-game nose-dive in the CAA. The Lady Pirates lost two games this past weekend, losing 72-46 to James Madison and 67-56 to George Mason.

Earlier, they had lost to Richmond, 67-58, to hold a 1-3 league record. Madison, Mason and Richmond are all tied for first place in the league standings without a loss. American was 3-11 overall and 1-2 in the league going into a Wednesday night game at Richmond.

East Carolina leads the series with the Lady Eagles, 8-3, but the three losses have all come in the last three games between the two.

The Pirates are led in scoring by Sarah Gray with a 16.0 average. Gray, who also leads the rebounding with an 8.4 mark, has scored in double figures in each of the women's 13 games.

The other other Lady Pirate in double figures is Pam Williams, hitting at a 10.2 clip.

Henson Doesn't Want No. 1 Hex

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Illinois coach Lou Henson is a worrier. Now he's worried his team might be ranked No. 1 in the nation next week.

"No one deserves the curse of being number one," Henson said after his undefeated and second-ranked Illini got by Northwestern 75-70 Thursday night. "Maybe the players want it and the fans want it, but it means nothing to me. You have everything to lose and nothing to gain."

Wyche...

team's union representative. He and Wyche traded harsh words during the strike, driving a wedge between them.

"It was pretty bad after the strike last year," Collinsworth said.

"I guess our relationship has been stormy at times, but I can only remember two times when it's really come to a boiling point," Esiason said. "That was a couple years back in Houston when he sat me on the bench when I felt it was unwarranted, and then last year during the strike when he had said some unkind things about us, and we had said some unkind things about him."

They agreed to keep their relationship on a business level when the strike ended. The hard times of a 4-11 season eventually brought them back together.

The two of them became the targets for fans' wrath. They wanted Wyche fired and Esiason traded.

The relationship was patched up when Esiason and several other players invited Wyche out to a comedy club near the end of the long season.

"We just sat around and had a good laugh, and I think in that light we all kind of thought about how ridiculous everything was that had happened last year," Esiason said. "Instead of pointing fingers, what we did was we kind of made light of the whole situation and how ridiculous everyone around us was acting, and how ridiculous we had been acting during that time."

Of course Henson was worried about the Northwestern game.

"We knew it would be difficult to win," he said. "Everything was set up for an upset. We were coming off the Michigan game and there was an article in Sports Illustrated on us, and that usually does it."

Henson was worried about Northwestern's Jeff Grose, and he had every right to be. Grose scored 20 points, including five 3-pointers.

But Kenny Battle and four of his teammates scored in double figures to lead the Illini to their 16th consecutive victory this season, including 4-0 in the Big Ten. Northwestern is 7-8 and 0-5.

The Illini may move into the top spot because No. 1 Duke lost to North Carolina on Wednesday night.

Elsewhere Thursday night, it was No. 16 Ohio State 102, No. 7 Iowa 91; No. 9 Arizona 97, Southern California 69; No. 10 UNLV 102, Utah State 80; No. 19 Indiana 61, Wisconsin 58 in overtime, and California 75, No. 20 Stanford 64.

"I've never seen Northwestern play better for 40 minutes," Henson said. "They would have beaten many teams tonight."

Three times Northwestern came within a point of the lead in the closing minutes, but the Wildcats were unable to tie it.

"When it came down to crunch time in the last three minutes, they were able to handle it and we weren't," Northwestern coach Bill Foster said.

Battle finished with 23 points, Kendall Gill 14, Steve Bardo and Lowell Hamilton 12 each, and Nick Anderson 10 for Illinois.

Northwestern led 39-38 early in the second half before Battle converted a three-point play. In one stretch, Battle outscored Northwestern 9-2 as the Illini took a 49-41 lead with 13:41 left.

The Wildcats, with Grose doing most of the damage, kept pressing, but Illinois, in line to take over the No. 1 ranking with a victory over Georgia Tech on Sunday, refused to fold.

Ohio State 102, Iowa 91

Jay Burson scored 26 points and Jerry Francis had 20 as hot-shooting Ohio State crushed Iowa in a Big Ten game.

The Buckeyes, 13-4 and 3-2, jumped off to a 12-0 start and led 54-44 at halftime. They then began the second half with a 13-4 run and never led by fewer than nine points in the game's final 35 minutes.

B.J. Armstrong had 23 points for the Hawkeyes, 13-3 and 1-2.

Ohio State hit 37 of 61 shots for 61 percent. Iowa was 33 of 83 for 40 percent, the Hawkeyes' worst shooting game of the season.

Arizona 97, Southern Cal 69

Sean Elliott scored 19 of his 26 points in the second half and Anthony Cook added 23 points to lead Arizona over Southern California. It was the Wildcats' fourth straight victory and improved their record to 7-1 in the Pacific-10 and 12-2 overall.

Arizona led 42-31 at halftime, then put the game away with an 18-2 run that gave them a 64-38 lead with 12:27 left. Elliott scored seven of the first nine points in the spurt.

Ronnie Coleman had 20 points and eight rebounds for the Trojans, who lost their fifth straight and fell to 0-5 and 7-9.

UNLV 102, Utah State 80

Stacey Augmon scored 22 points and Nevada-Las Vegas broke open a close game with a second-half surge to beat Utah State. The victory was the 11th in a row for the Runnin' Rebels, now 13-2 overall and 8-0 in the Big West.

UNLV led only 42-38 at halftime, but the Rebels opened the second half with a 10-2 spurt and led by as many as 23 points en route to the victory.

Utah State, 6-10 and 4-3, was led by Reid Newey with 22 points, including 15 of 16 free throws.

Indiana 61, Wisconsin 58

Jay Edwards scored five of his 27 points in overtime as Indiana held on to edge Wisconsin. It was the Hoosiers' 11th straight victory.

With Indiana leading 59-58, Wisconsin's Willie Simms was called for charging as he drove the lane. Indiana's Brian Sloan hit two free throws to wrap up the victory.

The Hoosiers, 14-4 and 4-0 in the Big Ten, have now beaten Wisconsin 18 straight times. The Badgers, 9-5 and 1-4 in conference play, have lost four straight games.

Danny Jones led the Badgers with 27 points.

California 75, Stanford 64

California upset Stanford as Leonard Taylor scored 21 points and grabbed 12 rebounds. Taylor led four Golden Bears in double figures as Cal, 13-5 and 4-3, snapped Stanford's eight-game winning streak. Stanford is now 13-4 and 5-2.

Cal scored 14 consecutive points and held Stanford scoreless during 5½ minutes late in the second half to take the lead for good.

Todd Lichti scored 18 points, his 57th straight game in double figures, to pace the Cardinal.

Other Games

At Fullerton, Calif., California State Fullerton defeated a decimated San Jose State 82-60. The Spartans had 10 players quit the team earlier this week, demanding the firing of Coach Bill Berry.

Against Fullerton State, San Jose State started three team regulars — Dwain Daniels, Tom Desiano and Jan Svoboda — plus football player Johnny Johnson and a former member of the Santa Clara University basketball team, 6-foot-7 Craig McPherson. The rest of the team consisted of three football players, one player who had been redshirted, the team's equipment manager and two students who have played intramural basketball.

Fullerton took the lead at 16-14 and never trailed thereafter.

Owners No Fans Of Arbitration Top Players And Owners Exchange Record Figures

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Nothing scares owners like salary arbitration. No wonder.

Orel Hershiser asked for $2.425 million and Roger Clemens, Dwight Gooden and Kirby Puckett also sought $2 million Thursday as players and clubs exchanged record figures, which were obtained by The Associated Press.

"There were several that shot for the moon to pressure clubs to file for a higher number or to go for broke at a hearing," said owners' consultant Tal Smith, who prepares cases for 11 teams. "I think some clubs made some bad deals to shy away from the process. They try to buy their way out of arbitration."

Of the 109 players who exchanged numbers, 23 asked for at least $1 million. Twenty-three are guaranteed at least doubling their salaries, an effect of the frenzied free-agent market and collusion rulings against owners.

"Whatever union official or player agent said salary arbitration is a no-lose proposition will certainly be proven right, judging by the numbers," said Barry Rona, head of the owners' Player Relations Committee. "I think the club numbers are high, but generally realistic in terms of today's market."

"One of the unfortunate problems with salary arbitration is that clubs, generally, carefully evaluate and put in very realistic salary numbers and the players know that they can, generally speaking, count on a very realistic club number," Rona said. "So they consciously highball in the hopes that they can either extract additional dollars in terms of a settlement or, if necessary, go to arbitration and reach new plateaus because they work on the assumption that they cannot and will not lose every case."

Hershiser, the Cy Young winner and World Series Most Valuable Player, was offered $2 million by Los Angeles. The Dodgers' offer was the most ever in arbitration, as is Hershiser's proposed $1.325 million raise.

"We're certainly happy with the number we filed," said Hershiser's agent, Robert Fraley. "And the club's number doesn't disturb me. The only way it disturbs me is it's a number we wouldn't sign for."

If Hershiser wins, he will be baseball's highest-paid player this year.

"If we go to arbitration the figure that we have presented to Orel certainly should not ... get anyone upset. It represents a $900,000 raise," Dodgers general manager Fred Claire said. "It would be one of the largest arbitration raises in history. No player has ever received a $2 million figure in arbitration."

"We're certainly not going to shy away from the significance of our offer because it is a great one," he said. "Our number is certainly of a record-setting fashion."

Arbitration hearings will be held Feb. 1-20, although a majority of cases are likely to be settled beforehand.

Last year, 104 players traded numbers — 14 seeking more than $1 million — but only 18 cases went to hearings. The Dodgers settled all 13 of their cases.

Cincinnati had the most players seeking more than $1 million — Eric Davis, Danny Jackson, Tom Browning and John Franco. Todd Worrell of St. Louis is guaranteed the biggest percentage raise, from $215,000 to at least $800,000, a 272 percent increase.

Still, some expected more.

"I think the club numbers for Hershiser, Gooden and Clemens are low," said Randy Hendricks, who, with brother Alan, represents Clemens. The two-time Cy Young winner, who made $1.5 million last season, asked for $2.36 million and the Boston Red Sox offered $1.9 million.

"The arbitration figures are one thing. The negotiation figures are entirely different," Boston general manager Lou Gorman said. "I'm still hopeful we'll get him signed. We'll continue to try to get things done."

Gooden, who lost in arbitration last year at $1.4 million, is seeking $2.079 million. The Mets countered with $1.675 million.

has to work with."

Walsh has maintained throughout this sometimes stormy season that the two have a close, cordial relationship. But Montana said after practice a week ago that they have not fully discussed all the circumstances surrounding their highly publicized difference of opinion.

"I hope someday after we're both retired we can sit down over a beer and talk about everything," Montana said. "But we're not able to do that now."

Their decade-long relationship dates back to when Montana was a rookie and Walsh was the first-year coach of a 2-14 team in 1979, tied for the worst record in 49ers' history.

When they helped bring the club its first league championships in the 1981 and 1984 seasons, it seemed a combination that couldn't go wrong — the masterful, analytical coach and his steely-nerved, clutch quarterback. But Walsh has a reputation of ruthlessly phasing out players when they show signs of age, and Montana believes he was unfairly victimized by this philosophy this season.

Walsh, who says now that the quarterback controversy was fabricated by the media, used the term as far back as last March in saying it had to be resolved. Steve Young had made a bid for the starting job with a strong performance after Montana faltered in the playoff upset loss to Minnesota last January.

Then after Montana was slowed by a series of back, elbow and rib ailments at the beginning of the season, Young started or relieved with the game in doubt in six games. Montana said he was healthy enough to play in four of those games. Walsh disagreed.

Montana said he was so shaken by the indecisive way with which the quarterback situation was handled that he refused to come out of games even when he was "dinged."

"The way it comes across to me," he said on Oct. 31, "is that Bill wants to play Steve. I just tried not to come out."

He even suggested that Walsh was trying to trade him.

Walsh defended his actions as taken because of Montana's health. He said recently that the quarterback had been weakened by a "dysentery-like" ailment at midseason that the team doctors said was reason to sit him down — all news to Montana.

Since Nov. 13, the 49ers have lost only once, and Montana's grip on the starting job is again secure. Walsh has been vindicated for having rested his quarterback, and Montana's spectacular game against Chicago in the NFC championship game speaks for itself. It will have to, because Montana refuses to talk about vindication or gratification.

"I'm sure, inside, he's going to be gratified, although he'd never admit to it," Montana's wife, Jennifer, told a reporter recently. "There are questions in the beginning from both the media or your coach, and they end up having to finish up with you when the going gets tough. I think it's nice."

If Walsh ends his coaching career after Sunday's game as many expect, Montana, a five-time Pro Bowl player, hopes it will be on an up note.

"It would mean a lot to us and to me personally if this were to be his last game," he said. "We'd want to win it for him."

"But I'm still not convinced it's going to happen," Montana said. "The media have been trying to retire him all year long."

NBA Roundup...

cord is the best in the NBA, beat the Indiana Pacers 113-106 Thursday night in Indianapolis.

After hitting 12 of 17 shots against Phoenix earlier in the week, Price made 12 of 16 against Indiana, including a pair of 3-pointers. That's a cool — make that hot — 72.7 percent over the two games.

"My shot was feeling good tonight and my teammates were going to me because they knew I was hot," Price said. "I've always believed that if you do well as a team, individual things will come."

Elsewhere, it was Chicago 112, Miami 108; Sacramento 112, New York 106; Seattle 124, Houston 108; Phoenix 126, Charlotte 112 and Washington 115, San Antonio 112.

Brad Daugherty added 25 points as Cleveland won its third straight game. The Cavaliers outrebounded Indiana 45-38 with Larry Nance grabbing 18 to go with his 18 points. Reggie Miller led Indiana with 24 points and rookie center Rik Smits added 20. Chuck Person had a triple-double for the Pacers with 17 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists.

Cleveland took the lead for good 32-31 with 9:33 left in the second quarter on a pair of free throws by Daugherty. The Cavaliers led by 12 in the third quarter before the Pacers cut it to 81-76 at the end of the period.

The closest Indiana got, however, was in the final period was 85-82 with 10:30 remaining.

"When Mark is shooting the ball like that you have to look at the guys who are looking to pass to him," Cleveland coach Lenny Wilkens said. "We do look him for him when he gets the hot hand, and that's what he did tonight."

Kings 112, Knicks 106

Kenny Smith scored 23 points, Rodney McCray 22 on 10-of-14 shooting and LaSalle Thompson 21 and Harold Pressley and Thompson blocked New York shots in the final 30 seconds.

New York's Patrick Ewing scored 12 of his season-high 38 points in the fourth period and Gerald Wilkins had 23.

The Kings, 11-24 overall, are 5-5 since Jan. 1 and the win over New York was their third over a division leader in that stretch. They also beat the Los Angeles Lakers and Houston.

SuperSonics 124, Rockets 108

Seattle outscored Houston 70-49 in the middle two periods and Xavier McDaniel scored 29 points points in helping the Sonics to their 14th consecutive home court triumph.

Houston led 30-25 after one period but Seattle hit 28 of 40 shots for 70 percent in the second and third quarters and opened a 95-79 lead. Dale Ellis' jump shot put the Sonics ahead for good at 39-38 and triggered a 22-12 run that gave them a 59-50 halftime lead.

Seattle broke the game open with a 16-7 run in a three-minute span of the third period for a 77-60 lead. Nate McMillan led the way with six points and two steals. Akeem Olatunji led Houston with 25 points, Otis Thorpe had 20 and Mike Woodson 18.

Bulls 112, Heat 108

At Miami, Michael Jordan scored

34 points for Chicago as Miami resumed its season after a one-game interruption caused by riots in a neighborhood near the Miami Arena. It was the Bulls' sixth straight victory and ninth in the past 11 games. The expansion Heat is 4-32, worst in the NBA.

The Bulls led 94-72 early in the fourth quarter and then withstood a rally by the Heat, which overcame a 29-point deficit to beat Indiana in its last game.

Miami's Rory Sparrow scored 11 points and Kelvin Upshaw 10 in the fourth quarter and Rony Seikaly made his first 3-point goal of the year with 35 seconds left to cut the margin to 110-108. Chicago's Craig Hodges hit two free throws with 10 seconds left. Sparrow led Miami with 27 points.

Bullets 115, Spurs 112

At Landover, Md., Jeff Malone scored 29 points for Washington and Bernard King added 22 and had a key steal in the closing seconds. San Antonio has lost seven straight games, including five on the road, and hasn't beaten the Bullets in the last five meetings.

Malone scored 15 points in the second half, including a pair of free throws that put the Bullets ahead 108-107 with 1:44 remaining. Washington got two free throws by John Williams and a layup by Steve Colter to take a 112-107 lead with 1:06 left.

It was 113-112, but King made two free throws with 12 seconds remaining, then stole Darwin Cook's pass to seal the victory. Alvin Robertson led the Spurs with 30 points.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY Jan. 21
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Harmony on the homefront sets the stage for a pleasant day. Contact those with similar interests for relaxation and fun.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Creative projects will come together if you accept your first idea as the best one. Self-doubt can interfere with completion.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Talk over plans with your mate and accept feedback. Contact friends for a social get together. Retire for the night at a reasonable hour.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): If the first part of this day falls short of expectations, you will find later activities stimulating and enlightening.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): No matter how you divide up household chores, someone is bound to be unhappy. Your mate's love is a splendid counterbalance.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Avoid getting upset by other hotheads around you. Plan for a quiet evening with someone you love and add a touch of originality.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): A surprise visit will highlight the day. Use your imagination and plan for light socializing. An important question will be answered.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Slide along in your dream world and share your intuitive ideas with others. It is a day to lay back and let the world go by.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): If the party gets dull, just leave. Trying to change the tempo will not get results. You will find friendship somewhere else.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): An upsetting period comes to a close, and calm is restored. Try not to blow emotions out of proportion today. Keep a sense of safety.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): You will be stuck with a useless day unless you organize the pack at home and get things moving. Compromise where necessary.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Use your imagination on creative projects. Offer someone friendship with no strings attached. Stay within familiar surroundings.

 In duplicate, this hand would have presented no problem. You would simply go with the odds and go down with the field. At rubber bridge, however, there is a sure-trick line, and you should adopt it. At this vulnerability, it could have been suicidal for West to contest the auction, but had he ventured a three-spade overall he would have landed in a four-spade contract that could be defeated only in the unlikely event of the lead of the ace of diamonds and diamond continuation. And East had neither the strength nor the shape to interfere over four hearts. West led the queen of diamonds, taken by the ace. Since with nine trumps in the combined hands the odds favor the drop, declarer led a heart to the king. When West showed out, there was no way to recover. With no losers in the minor suits, declarer can afford to lose two spade tricks and a trump. However,

Thriller Of A Day

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — Andrew Wigglesworth, a 10-year-old boy who lost a leg to a tumor, had a thriller of a day when he met rock star Michael Jackson in Los Angeles, then visited Disneyland with actor Martin Sheen.

"He was just awe-struck," Andrew's mother, Philippa, said of her son's meeting with Jackson in Los Angeles. Sheen, who met Wigglesworth last November when the boy appeared as an extra in a movie, arranged the trip for Andrew and his mother. He met them at the airport Tuesday and escorted them to meet Jackson backstage before a concert.

During the concert, Andrew stood up in the aisle and began dancing as Jackson performed the hit, "Thriller."

During the visit to Disneyland on Wednesday the youngster was mobbed by Disney characters.

For Sheen, making Andrew's dreams come true was simply "an honor."

In the end, Andrew couldn't decide what he liked best about the trip. "Everything was good," he said. "Everything."

Sinatra Gets Hook At Inaugural Gala

By Bill Carter
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

They held a gala for George Bush on TV Thursday night and many remarkable things happened:

A woman danced a ballet accompanied by a cello in prime time on a network; a 5-year-old kid played a fiddle; Dan Quayle got on the air — for about 30 seconds; the line "read my lips" appeared in fewer than 10 jokes; Chuck Norris spoke several lines without freeing any MIAs; Walter Cronkite introduced a rendition of "The Joint Is Jumpin"; Bob Hope told the best joke, and Frank Sinatra got the hook.

The hook for Sinatra? He shows up, willing to be followed on stage by a cellist, manages to work his way through "You'll Never Walk Alone" with his pride (and voice) intact and then finds himself without any accompaniment for an encore.

The night was filled with reaction shots from the Bushes, but not at that point.

It would have been interesting to see if the president-elect had changed his expression, which in general had stayed consistent all night, at least until he put on his glasses. (Question: Did he see much before that?)

Mostly he displayed the kind of face that seemed to be saying, over and over: "Well, gosh!"

The gala did feature a staggering array of talent, ranging from fine arts to Michael Davis juggling meat cleavers.

Even with its eclectic musical reach — a little "Phantom of the Opera," a little hit material from Anita Baker, a little Mormon Tabernacle Choir, a little Julio Iglesias (the rock genre was notably not represented, however) — the night leaned a bit heavily on tunes with a country twang.

The production team had promised stunning surprises. Few or none were noticeable, unless you looked closely. Then you might have caught a glimpse of Dan Rather, of all people, in a seat in the front row. Dan was apparently not close enough to the president-elect, however, to rouse fears of an impromptu — and spirited — oral exchange.

The event, billed as the Presidential Inaugural Gala, was broadcast live on CBS from the D.C. Convention Center. It was expected to add up to $9 million in ticket sales and revenues from TV commercials to help defray the estimated $25 million in costs for four days of privately financed inaugural festivities.

The night, itself, added up to about two parts gala and three parts goo — which is a familiar formula for TV galas.

Then again, few regular galas can boast bumpers (those thematic lead-ins to station breaks) read by Clint Eastwood. He provided authoritative readings of inaugural memories.

Too bad Clint didn't have the final word: "Read my lips: No more galas!"

Geraldo Joins Hispanic Firm To Buy TV Stations

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — TV talk show host Geraldo Rivera has joined comedian Richard "Cheech" Marin and other prominent Hispanics to form a company aimed at buying network-affiliated television stations.

Besides Rivera and Marin, the other principals in the new company — named Maravilla Communications — are Herman Badillo of New York; Marcelino Miyares of Chicago; and Tony Bonilla Sr. of Corpus Christi, Texas.

Badillo has a long history of public service and has served as a congressman, Bronx borough president and a deputy mayor. Miyares is president of Times Square Studio, one of the nation's only Hispanic-owned independent production facilities. Bonilla is chairman of the National Hispanic Leadership Conference.

At the announcement of the company's formation Thursday, the new owners said they would not be looking to buy Hispanic stations but planned to create a "community-oriented station."

Artist Draws Stars' Salute

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Artist Helen Frankenthaler was saluted by celebrities at a party marking publication of a definitive book on her career by a curator at the Museum of Modern Art.

Attending the affair at the Rainbow Room Pavilion on Thursday were writer Kurt Vonnegut, singer Judy Collins, writer George Plimpton, designer Pauline Trigere and writer Toni Morrison.

John Elderfield, the author of "Frankenthaler," is curator of the painting and sculpture department and director of the drawings department at the Museum of Modern Art.

A major retrospective of Frankenthaler's work will open at the museum in Manhattan on June 5 and then travel to Fort Worth, Texas, Los Angeles and Detroit.

Frankenthaler, an abstract painter, is known for her lyrical use of color and her stained-canvas method.

'Dolphin Cove' Is Special For Emotional TV Viewers

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Perhaps to welcome the Bush administration, CBS offers a kinder, gentler new TV series.

"Dolphin Cove," premiering Saturday, is a nice family drama with a splash of sophistication mixed in with all the sappiness. This is a show for people who still cry at the end of "Old Yeller," not cynics who watch "Miami Vice" in the secret hope that Tubbs will shoot Crockett.

Frank Converse stars as Michael Larson, a scientist who moves to Australia under the aegis of a wealthy businessman who wants to prove that dolphins are as intelligent as human beings.

If viewers aren't immediately caught up in the drama of Flipper fielding flash cards, there are the more accessible concerns of the scientists' two children — young Katie, who lost her will to speak after being in a car wreck that killed her mother, and David, a sulky teen-ager who wants to go home to his girlfriend in America.

Trey Ames ("A Year in the Life") plays David and Karron Graves is Katie. Nick Tate plays Baron Trent, the sponsor of the research project, who harbors a secret plan to salvage a valuable ancient sunken ship.

Peter Benchley, author of "Jaws," is one of the creators of the series, which is filmed on location in Australia. He also wrote the premiere, so it's hard to predict the quality of subsequent episodes.

Once the family arrives in Australia, they meet hired hand Didge (Ernie Dingo), an Aborigine who rides horses, flies a helicopter and generally helps explain the strange new land.

They settle in, sort of, to mosquito nets — "There used to be vultures, but the mosquitoes ate them," Didge explains — and pizza topped with alligator meat.

Larson dives into his work, but two bottle-nosed dolphins in his care only make fun of him by splashing him with water and squealing what apparently is dolphinese for "nyah, nyah, nyah." But they take to silent Katie and establish an E.T.-like rapport with her.

David, meanwhile, is appalled at being sent, in uniform, to St. Crispin's, which his father neglected to tell him is an all-boys school.

"The girls go to St. Somewhere Else," Larson explains. "Oh, good, St. Elsewhere. This gets better all the time," sulks David. The inside joke is a reference to co-executive producer John Masius, a former writer-producer on "St. Elsewhere."

On to high drama, though, when Katie's new therapist, Allison Mitchell (Virginia Hey), clumsily makes a reference to her own mother, causing Katie to run off and swim into the dangerous ocean. But it is we who are plunged into the depths — of Lassie-come-home-ness — when the wise dolphins leap a barrier and race out into the deep to rescue the mute child and her teacher.

If that's not enough to bring tears to your eyes, the episode ends with Katie watching an old videotaped home movie of her mother. (Count the number of fathers raising kids alone on TV, and it begins to look like moms are an endangered species.)

The dolphins might not speak English, but they sure know how to overact. If the series goes, they'll no doubt be demanding renegotiation of their contracts and greater creative control.

But the human characters seem a likable bunch, and "Dolphin Cove" is not a bad place to visit. And thanks to remote control you don't have to live there.

Newton Accepts Award

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — Saying he has achieved the public vindication that was his principal goal, entertainer Wayne Newton said Thursday he will accept a $5.3 million libel judgment against NBC — reduced from the $19.3 million awarded by a Las Vegas jury — rather than proceed with a new trial in Los Angeles.

But Newton will not be getting any money just yet — if at all. An NBC News spokesman in New York said Thursday that it still intends to appeal the award to the U.S. Court of Appeals. The appeals court could overturn or further reduce the award.

The case grew out of NBC network news reports by reporter Brian Ross in October 1980. A federal court jury in Las Vegas ruled that the network defamed the singer, who contended the news reports suggested that there was organized-crime backing for Newton's purchase of the Aladdin hotel-casino. Newton later sold the Aladdin.

The jury in Las Vegas awarded Newton $19.3 million in December 1986, but the trial judge later reduced the award. Newton appealed the judge's reduction and, following a series of hearings, was given the option of accepting the smaller award or trying the case a second time in Los Angeles federal court. Newton had wanted to limit the issues of any new trial to the size of the award, but on Dec. 28, a federal judge in Los Angeles ruled for NBC's contention that the "intertwining" issues of liability and damages should be determined by the same jury, meaning Newton would have to prove defamation again.

Newton had until Feb. 1 to announce his decision.
