S&L Fee May Be Imposed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady said today the administration is considering imposing a fee on customers of savings and loan institutions to help the federal government pay to insure the troubled S&L industry.

Brady, appearing on television interview programs, said plans under review include such fees as 25 cents for every $100 in deposits at a thrift and that the premiums would be used by the federal government to insure the deposits.

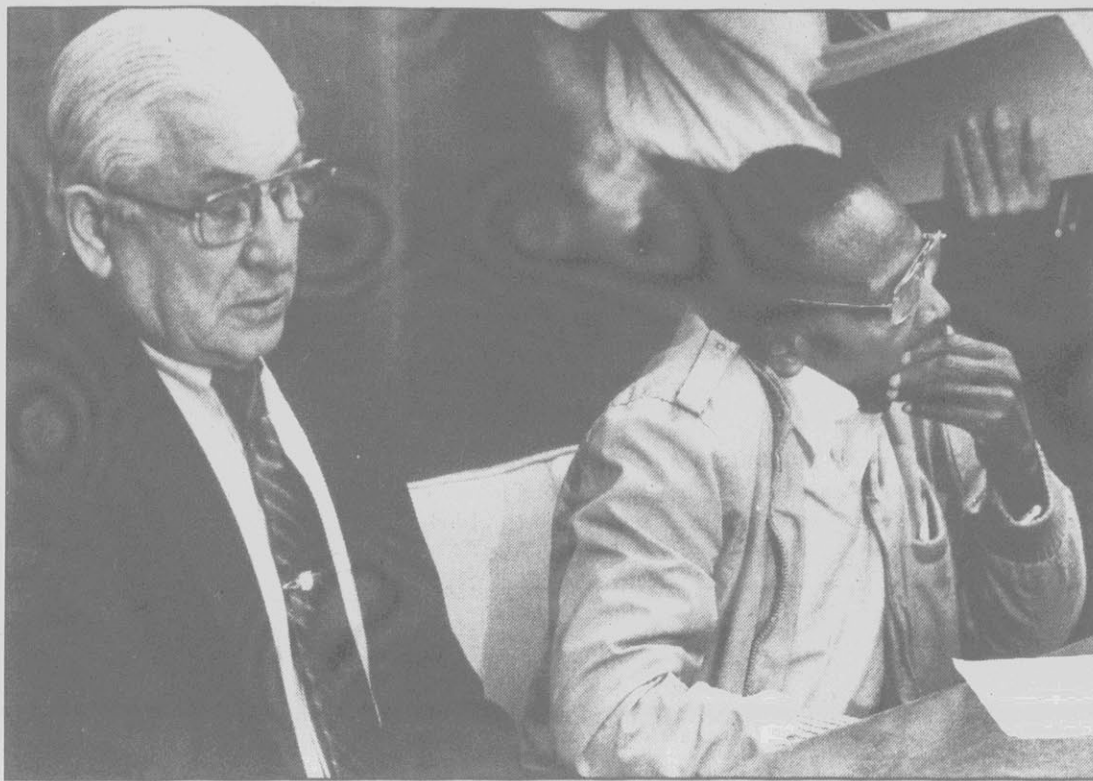

"That's just like any other insurance premium — revenue generation for services rendered," he said on ABC's "Good Morning America." "The important thing here is that the federal insurance on deposits is going to be continued."

Brady said administration officials have taken the plan to the chairmen of the congressional banking committees, Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., and Rep. Henry Gonzalez, D-Texas.

"They know how big this program is," he said. "They're giving us plenty of time to look at the options. They've been receptive."

Arthur Siddon, a spokesman for Brady, said the Treasury Department has not clearly defined the option. He said the fee mentioned by Brady could be imposed on depositors, or it could be paid by the institutions as an increase in the insurance premium they already pay.

Winterville Board Backs Firing Of Police Officers

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Winterville Board of Aldermen has voted to unanimously support the firing of two police officers and the disciplinary investigation of another.

At a special meeting Tuesday during the town's municipal meeting, the three-member board met in executive session for about 30 minutes before announcing its decision to the media and about 30 citizens.

The two officers, Harold Evans of Winterville and Ralph Whitehurst of Greenville, were initially dismissed Saturday morning by Chief Lester Smith for disciplinary reasons. Both men said they turned in their badges and equipment Saturday, and claim they were fired because they refused to follow an order from Smith not to ticket aldermen or their family members.

All three board members said they have never been aware of any policy that exempted them from traffic tickets, and they have never received special treatment from town police.

But Mayor E.C. Hines reiterated his opposition to the use of traffic tickets, saying officers could accomplish more by stopping speeders and talking to them about

Pitt Pressing Measles Shots ECU May Have Second Case

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The effort to inoculate Pitt County residents 32 or under against red measles continued today, despite a previously announced deadline of Tuesday afternoon.

Health officials said no more cases have been confirmed in the Pitt County area or anywhere in northeastern North Carolina, though blood work from two rash illnesses — one in Pitt and one in Dare County — have been sent to a state laboratory.

Most of the effort to curb a measles outbreak in the Greenville-Pitt County area similar to ones recently experienced in Rowan and Cabarrus counties has been centered at East Carolina University.

Kay Van Nortwick, associate administrative director of the ECU Student Health Center, said about 5,000 students have been inoculated since Friday and records are being examined to compile lists of students who will be directed to remove themselves from classes within the next few days if they are not inoculated.

Through Tuesday, another 677 were inoculated at the Pitt County Health Department, while another 1,300-plus were inoculated at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Charles Fennessy, hospital vice president for human resources, said no hospital employee needing measles inoculation will be allowed to return to work Thursday unless he or she has been inoculated. This message is out, he said, and he expected most inoculations to be completed today.

Prior to the beginning of the inoculation, there was one confirmed case in an ECU student. Now there is another suspected case, also in an ECU student, according to Mrs. Van Nortwick. Laboratory work on a blood sample from the second student has been sent to a state lab in Raleigh and a report is expected from the State Communicable Disease Control Branch.

Walter Council, regional inoculation program consultant for the state, said a blood sample from a Dare County resident having a rash illness has also been sent to Raleigh with results expected soon.

Mrs. Van Nortwick said this is the largest local effort to curb a communicable disease she has ever seen. She said the Student Health Center staff, which is also swamped with some 400 cases of flu, plus other routine work, would not have been able to do what it has done without the help of many volunteers. She said secretaries from throughout the campus and ECU School of Nursing and other students have pitched in to help handle the heavy load of administrative work that has been called for.

Every student's record has been examined to determine if he or she had the vaccine after 15 months of age, she said. Those who had not had to be contacted, if they did not come in voluntarily. Many had to obtain

Griffin Named Citizen Of Year

By Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Robert S. Griffin, Greenville plant manager at the Procter and Gamble Paper Products Co., was named recipient of the 1988 Outstanding Citizen of the Year Award, as presented by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Approximately 250 people attended the chamber's annual meeting and dinner Tuesday at the Hilton Inn.

The event also featured presentations from the 1988 and 1989 Chamber of Commerce chairmen and the presentation of the Outstanding Volunteer of the Year Award to local developer Bill Clark.

Griffin, a graduate of Rice University with degrees in chemical engineering, came to Greenville in 1976 as plant manager at P&G.

His accomplishments include serving as a member of the East Carolina University Foundation and Board of Directors; board of the Salvation Army, 1982-1989; board of the North Carolina United Way, 1982-1986; board of the Pitt County Mental Health Association, 1984-1986; Pitt County United Way president, 1979-1980, and general campaign chairman, 1983.

He has also served on the board of the Greenville Rotary Club and president, 1984-1985; past commissioner of the Pitt County Development Commission and the Greenville Redevelopment Commission; Advisory Board of the Center for Applied Technology, 1986-1989; board of the Pitt Community College Foundation, 1988-1989, and current member of Planter's National Bank board.

Griffin was also chairman of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce in 1981 and is currently co-chairman of the chamber's Human Relations Council and current member of the Chamber board.

Thomas L. Edwards, who presented the award to Griffin, said of the recipient, "Clearly, Greenville is a better place for he, and his wife Ann, having come to our community and for their commitment here.

"Through all these years, with his commitment when our chamber was floundering, he helped place strong foundation blocks that we could build this chamber and move it forward on a positive basis," he said.

Edwards also credited Griffin as instrumental in raising funds for the restoration of the Fleming House.

Bush May Add Visit To China

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — President Bush will make an official visit to China on Feb. 25-26, the official Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported from Beijing today.

The agency, quoting unnamed sources, said the two-day visit would follow Bush's trip to Tokyo to attend the funeral of Japan's late emperor Hirohito.

In Washington, White House spokesman Roman Popadiuk denied the report, saying, "There are no plans at this time."

China's Foreign Ministry has not yet confirmed the report on Bush's impending visit, but its spokesman has recently said that the U.S. president "would be welcome in China," Tanjug reported.

It said Bush will hold talks with Chinese officials on bilateral and other issues, especially political developments in the Far East.

Jones Gets Election Laws Panel

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

State Rep. Walter Jones Jr. has been named chairman of a subcommittee that will probably take up issues such as the length of time the House speaker may serve, veto power for the governor and whether judges should be elected or appointed in the state.

"I'm very pleased with my appointment (as chairman of the Subcommittee of Election Laws and Constitutional Amendments). We're going to be a very busy committee. I think we're going to take up some very important issues," Jones said today in a telephone interview from his legislative office.

"In my six years in Raleigh, now going on seven, I have been very interested in election and campaign reform, and I feel it's natural that I have this opportunity," he said.

In the past, Jones has pushed a campaign bill that would allow candidates for top statewide offices to participate in a public finance campaign program designed to hold down the cost of running for office. Last week, he also introduced a bill requesting a constitutional amendment limiting the speaker of the House from holding the post longer than two consecutive terms.

Most likely, there will also be legislation introduced this term dealing with how the state will conduct its presidential primaries and off-year elections, he said.

Social Services Seeks Ways To Boost Work

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Pitt County Board of Social Services says it wants to get on the "bandwagon" with today's popular issues, and it doesn't want to wait for a tragedy to do it.

The board, which met in a workshop session Tuesday, agreed to try several strategies to educate the public on the importance of social services. Suggesting that a Pitt County commissioner serve on the Board of Social Services and rallying support from advocacy groups were among the ideas discussed.

The discussion about making the public more knowledgeable about services stemmed from the board's review of the department's 1989-90 budget situation.

"We have a base budget that is $11,100 less than the base budget for last year," Director Ed Garrison said of county funds earmarked for the department.

The 1989-90 county share of the department's budget is $3.12 million, while the 1988-89 figure was $3.13 million. The department's total 1988-1989 budget is $6,941,600, said Lois Gray, administration officer.

While the budget for the department decreases, the clients served and the demand on employees increases, Garrison said.

"We've participated in some unique exercises to find ways to get the most mileage out of our existing staff," he said. The department cut several programs in August, expanded the responsibilities of its employees and moved the staff around to create private interviewing offices as mandated by law, he said.

"The AFDC program is where we've had our biggest problem," Debbie Ryals, eligibility director, said. No one has been hired for the program since 1983 while the case load has increased from 1,500 to 1,990.

For each of those cases, monthly

Tax Deadline Nears

Pitt County property owners have one week to list their property for tax purposes or face a late-listing penalty, said Jimmie Hardee, Pitt County's tax assessor. Hardee estimated that about 65 percent of the 60,000 listings expected had been made by mid-day Tuesday. The deadline is Jan. 31. Hardee said people listing by mail must have abstracts postmarked before midnight Tuesday, and those listing at various places throughout the county must list before the close of business on Tuesday to avoid a late-listing penalty. The tax official also cautioned owners of cars, trucks and motorcycles in the county to make sure the vehicles are listed for tax purposes with the tax supervisor's office. Under a law passed by the 1987 General Assembly, Hardee said, owners of vehicles not listed for tax purposes face a $100 per vehicle penalty.

Program Planned To Show Appreciation To Teachers

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A teacher appreciation program has been established by the Pitt County Educational Foundation. During its meeting Tuesday, Pat-sy Dukes, who served on the steering committee for the program, said, "Our purpose was to come up with a program that would honor the teachers of Pitt County."

She said the program will acknowledge the teachers as being special people while providing an avenue for personal development and training and resources of the community.

A steering committee of principals, assistant principals and industry representatives, to be appointed by Pitt County schools Superintendent Eddie West, will decide the name of the program, how the teachers are to be selected and the managerial duties of the program.

Area industries will be asked to host specific courses of the program. Ms. Dukes said. They would provide a course outline to the committee for review and approval, provide their facility, instructor and necessary material to conduct the class, and conduct the course during the evening hours.

Larry Seigler of Burroughs Wellcome has provided some curricula that may be used, she said. Topics include creativity and innovation, leadership training, taking the initiative and interaction.

The steering committee recommended that 30 teachers a year be selected for the program, which would run from six to seven weeks, Ms. Dukes said.

At the conclusion of the program, a graduation dinner and banquet will be held for the participants and their spouses. Each graduate will be presented a certificate of completion, and a survey will be conducted to evaluate the effectiveness of the program and to solicit ways it can be improved.

Betty Speir, coordinator of the foundation, said $16,000 was raised for 84 minigrants for innovative projects in the schools through talent programs throughout the county.

In addition, the Pitt County Arts Council has donated $800 to be used for minigrants, she said.

Linwood Mercer, chairman of the finance committee, said the foundation has $123,665 in endowment funds and pledges.

West outlined new efforts of the foundation, which include helping to establish the child development center at Third Street School as approved by the Pitt County Board of Education and networking industries and other organizations in planning schools for the future.

Board To Study 10th St. Project

A request to construct a multifamily development on 10th Street will be one of the items considered by the Greenville Board of Adjustment at its monthly meeting Thursday at 7 p.m. in the council chambers of City Hall.

The board will consider a request by B&C Associates for a special use permit to allow construction of a 48-unit multifamily development, using land use intensity development standards, at the southwest corner of Tenth Street and Charles Boulevard.

The 1.33-acre tract is zoned CDF (commercial downtown fringe). The board will consider a request by D.C. Development to amend a special use permit to construct a 168-unit multifamily development, using land use intensity development standards, on Lindbeth Drive, 750 feet south of the intersection of U.S. 264 and Lindbeth Drive.

Other agenda items include: a request by C.L. Summerlin for a special use permit to allow the operation of a flea market mall at the intersection of Riverbluff Road and N.C. 33 east, directly behind Putt-Putt Golf and Games; a request by Donald McLane for a variance to exempt 604 Millbrook from the first floor elevation requirements based on the 100-year flood; a request by The Pantry Inc. for a special use permit to allow gasoline sales in conjunction with a convenience store on the southeast corner of Memorial Drive and West Fifth Street, also.

A request by Pals of Greenville Inc. for a special use permit to allow the operation of a Bingo game center in the former King and Queen North building located on the west side of North Greene Street; a request by Dr. Mohamed Elsheikh for a special use permit to allow the operation of a family game center at 300 Southwest Greenville Blvd., and a request by Hostetler's Tennis Shop for a variance from the Zoning Ordinance to allow the placement of a freestanding sign at 218-C Arlington Boulevard.

ECU Will Develop Anti-Abuse Project

ECU NEWS BUREAU

A program to fight substance abuse with education is being established at East Carolina University under a $139,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Education.

The two-year grant will give ECU an office and full-time director to coordinate drug use prevention and education activities.

David A. Susina, a former residence counselor at ECU, will direct the program. A native of Birmingham, Ala., Susina has worked with alcohol and drug prevention efforts for the past six years.

Susina said the program will work closely with student groups such as Students Against Drunk Driving (SADD) and BACCHUS, a group that promotes responsible drinking. He said the program also will conduct workshops, coordinate national alcohol and drug awareness programs at ECU, provide referrals for people with substance abuse problems, offer a resource library, and organize campus chapters of alcohol awareness organizations.

The new program and office was established this month.

"We really want to stress the prevention and education aspect of substance abuse," said Susina.

"We feel like people have a background of use of substances by the time they come to college. We want to work with the students to help them make good and responsible decisions if they choose to use alcohol or drugs," he said.

The program is the result of a proposal written by a 14-member planning committee of staff, faculty and community professionals. Jerry Lotterhos, director of the alcohol/drug program in the ECU School of Allied Health Sciences, chaired the committee. Lotterhos said the committee first met in 1986 to develop a proposal for a comprehensive substance abuse program at ECU.

He said the thoroughness of the proposal and ECU's excellent track record with campus drug education efforts contributed to the approval of the grant. The $139,000 was the sixth largest among more than 300 grants approved for funding by the U.S. Department of Education.

Two other North Carolina schools — the University of North Carolina at Wilmington and Appalachian State University — received grants for similar programs.

Conley Band Students

Several D.H. Conley students will participate Feb. 3 and 4 in the All-State Band clinic at East Carolina University. They are Courtney Jones, Von Vanhorne, John McLawhorn, Valjeaner Stephenson, Tasha Phillips and Daniel Hodan.

The Board of Directors of Home Federal Savings & Loan would like to take this opportunity to thank the members of the Association, including depositors and borrowers, for another successful year. During 1988, the Association reached another important milestone by increasing assets to over $100 million. Net worth reserves were also increased to $5 million or 5.4% of deposits. This represents substantially more than the $3.2 million minimum required reserves for a savings institution of our size by the Federal Home Loan Bank. The board and management of Home Federal will continue to promote homeownership and thrift as its original charter set out in 1906.

To those who are not presently members of the Association, we invite and encourage you to call Home Federal for safe investments, a wide selection of loan plans, and courteous service.

 records from home, delaying the process.
 She said the only other preventive health effort of this magnitude she remembers was a 1986 project to implement state immunization laws on campus when students were also told they would be taken out of class if their inoculations were not up to date.

The irony, she said, is that the requirement then was that they have the measles vaccine at 12 months or afterward and many of them had it on or near their first birthday. The change in the law since then has caused vast numbers who were considered up-to-date on their inoculations then not to be now.

Mrs. Van Nortwick predicted that another 2,000 students and staff at ECU will need to be inoculated before it's over. She said inoculations will be given as long as they are needed, though she hopes that measures to take students out of class if they are not inoculated will speed the process.

Pitt County Health Director Tim Monroe said Health Department inoculations will also continue indefinitely. Most ECU Medical School staff and students who have needed inoculation have had it done at the Health Department, he said.

Asked why only people 32 or younger are being urged to be inoculated, Health Department Nursing Supervisor Linda Mayne said that state communicable disease branch guidelines say that people who were living before 1957 when there was no measles vaccine had measles or otherwise built up immunity. Also, there were mass inoculations of whole families, most of whom were older than 15 months, around 1957.

Council, who is recently back from special measles containment assignments in Rowan County and at Appalachian State University, said he and his staff are now helping out at ECU.

"ECU is doing a magnificent job," he said. "I think we have a good handle on the situation."

Across the state, the Associated Press reported that about 4,000 North Carolina State University students had not received the measles vaccination as of this morning. Officials said they could not determine how many students had been blocked from classes.

NCSU officials estimated 9,500 students had been inoculated since Monday.

At Duke University, officials were checking records and setting up an immunization program to begin Friday. While no measles cases have been reported at Duke, school officials said they expect to ask about 1,500 students to get vaccinations to protect against an outbreak.

Statewide, 59 measles cases have been confirmed and 176 are suspected, said William P. Nichols, assistant coordinator of the state's immunization program. Measles cases have been documented in 25 counties since the outbreak in Rowan County earlier this month.

North's Attorneys Issue Subpoenas To House Panels, Two Congressmen

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Attorneys for fired National Security Council aide Oliver L. North disclosed today they have issued subpoenas in the Iran-Contra case to three House committees and two members of the House.

North attorney Barry Simon said the subpoenas were sent to the House Intelligence, Foreign Affairs and Armed Services committees.

The two members of Congress weren't identified. Defense subpoenas also were issued for two unidentified House staff members.

Simon said legal challenges were anticipated by the House Intelligence Committee on grounds of relevance.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell said with regard to the two House members subpoenaed: "We're not going to pull them off the floor. We're going to have to approach this part of the case with some degree of accommodation."

North's trial is scheduled to get under way next Tuesday, although an interagency intelligence group is still reviewing classified documents that both the prosecution and defense want to use at trial.

The brief references to subpoenas by North's defense team came at a court hearing where prosecutors argued in favor of subpoenaing North's spiral notebooks, which he compiled on a daily basis while he was at the NSC.

Gesell said he would decide Friday whether North should be compelled to produce the notebooks, portions of which were turned over to Congress for the Iran-Contra hearings in 1987.

At the court hearing, Simon said the notebooks might be applied to the portion of the case alleging destruction of documents by North in November 1986 as the Iran-Contra affair was unfolding.

Simon said prosecutors might try to link references in the notebooks to documents that North allegedly destroyed before leaving the NSC.

Simon declined to acknowledge that the notebooks existed or were in North's possession, but he said North is entitled to Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination.

The notebooks also delve into North's assistance to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels and his involvement in the Reagan administration's secret arms shipments to Iran.

North took the last of the notebooks with him when he was dismissed on Nov. 25, 1986 after the diversion of Iran arms sale proceeds to the Contras was uncovered.

Independent counsel Lawrence Walsh has been trying to get the notebooks since well before North's indictment last year.

A subpoena for the material was issued through the federal grand jury investigating the Iran-Contra affair, but was withdrawn after North was charged, Walsh said in a court filing Monday.

Walsh said the notes are "presidential records over which the United States has complete ownership and control."

The notebooks could be used by prosecutors in an attempt to bolster the portion of the government's case alleging that North made false statements to Congress by saying that the NSC offered no tactical advice to the Contras and by denying that he used his influence to help move supplies to them.

North's notebooks describe successful efforts to obtain false end-user certificates from Guatemala stating that arms actually destined for the Contras were instead for the exclusive use of the Central American country to which they were being sent.

Jones Gets Post

"There is a great sense among House and Senate members of issues of that nature that will probably be introduced as legislation," he said. "I think we'll be a busy committee."

Jones said he has not decided on the specifics of the issue, but he is in favor of granting veto power to the governor. North Carolina is the only state in the country in which the governor does not have that power.

To make the change, voters would have to approve a constitutional amendment in the form of a referendum at the polls.

Legislative committees have also been studying whether voters should continue to elect judges in the state, or whether a merit selection committee or the governor should appoint judges.

Some type of legislation dealing with judicial elections will probably come from the House this year, he said, and it will come to his subcommittee.

House Speaker Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, also appointed Jones to positions on the House Rules Committee and an appropriations subcommittee dealing with capital outlay and special projects.

The rules committee addresses the working rules of the House and takes up procedural matters, Jones said.

The capital outlay subcommittee will deal with capital improvement projects and analyze requests for discretionary funding.

"I believe this committee will be charged with the responsibility to see that the taxpayers' dollars ... are spent wisely," he said.

Capital improvement projects for East Carolina University could possibly come to Jones' subcommittee, if they are recommended by a committee that oversees projects for the entire University of North Carolina system.

and semiannual reports have to be completed. The 14 people working in the program have an average of a 153 cases each, she said. "We're saturated."

The state average of cases per worker is 100 to 1, Ms. Ryals said. State officials said the program needed seven additional positions for the 1,850 cases in the department six months ago, she said.

"The staff is saying I can't do it in an eight-hour day," Peggy Chandler, chief of services, said. Employees have asked to work nights and on the weekends, "even though they're burning out very fast."

"I don't know what drives my people — commitment to get the job done or the threat of failure," Garrison said.

"That's very commendable, but it's certainly not the solution to the problem," board member Lillian Bradley said.

The solutions require money for more staff, Garrison said. But, "the emphasis is going to be on education or things considered more important than social services."

"I think it would be irrational to separate child safety and welfare needs from education," board member Melodie Thomas said.

"You can't separate a child's general welfare from education," Ms. Bradley said. "One impacts on the other, ... (but) there are some things that get to be on sort of the bandwagon of the day."

The board agreed to ask county commissioners for an additional $331,706 to fund mandated programs such as the Aid to Families with Dependent Children and the Medicaid programs. The money also will be used to pay for 10 additional staff positions and equipment purchases.

Recognizing that the county commissioners are being "tugged at their sleeves by every agency," board Chairman Sam Carson said, "It would take something dramatic" before the department would get the funds it needs to adequately function.

The board will have its regular monthly meeting Monday at 5:15 p.m. in the county office building.

Future Growth

Retirees Offer Golden Opportunity

One of the growth areas of the future is the increasing number of retirees who will be searching for locations to spend their leisure years and, in so doing, contributing to the economy of the area.

Many high-level management people and military personnel will retire early. With personal investments and large pensions they can afford what they want. As the bulge in population known as baby boomers moves along, it will eventually create a large group of retirees which will have economic impact just as they did at earlier ages. Business, professional services and even governments are gearing up to accommodate these anticipated affluent retirees.

Can Pitt County share in all this? There is evidence that private investors are already anticipating meeting the needs of these people with communities planned around activities that might appeal to them.

The prospects are exciting. Frequently people with high incomes have retired early. They are searching perhaps for relief from the cold and snow of the northeast. Certainly they want to escape the metropolitan traffic which requires that they drive for an hour or more to reach any destination.

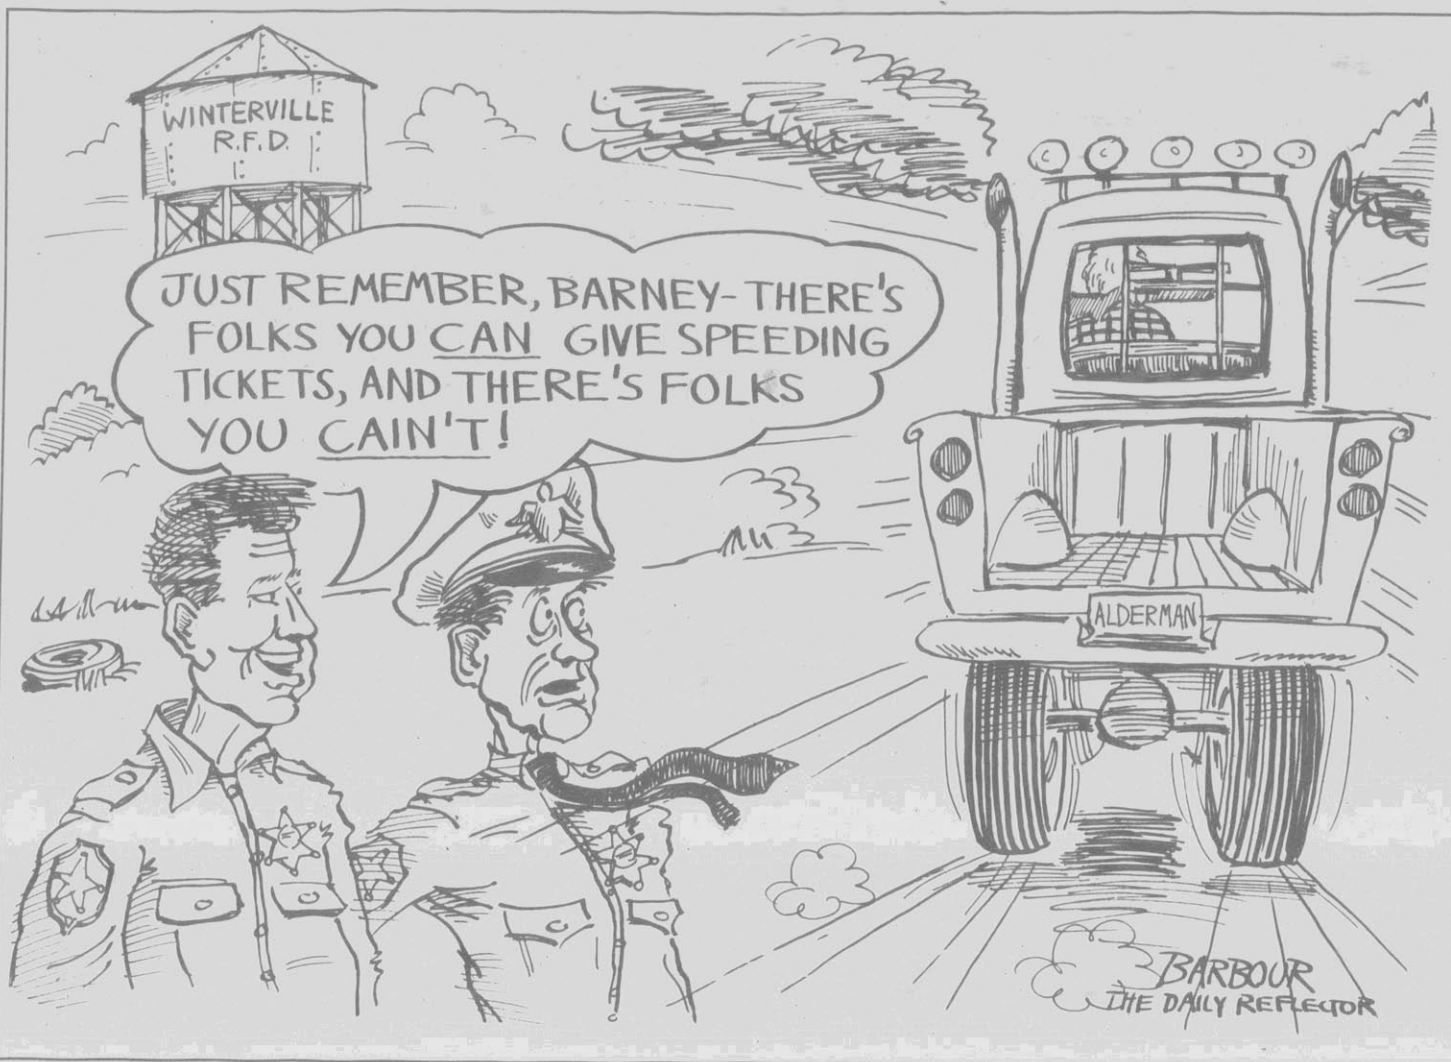

On the other hand they don't want to leave the cultural and sports events the cities offer ... and an absolute requirement is that the best in medical care be convenient.

There have been predictions that Washington, N.C., with its access to a huge body of water, would attract affluent retirees. It is entirely possible that the Washington-Greenville area in tandem can offer an unprecedented package that will attract to the area those looking for a new home.

Our area obviously has the kind of medical care that would be sought by this group. Cultural events abound on the East Carolina, as does collegiate sports. The water is there for those who want boating and we are developing golf and other activities which might appeal to those with the leisure time.

No new industrial or office buildings are required to accommodate this growth area. Yet the individuals involved will be a large economic force in any community. They also will have the expertise to contribute to government and community development.

If Pitt and Beaufort Counties want to look at an area which can bring new economic development, they need look no further than toward encouraging affluent retirees to come here. We have, after all, a lot to offer.

Coping With Jackson

David Broder

WASHINGTON — While the attention of the nation was focused on Washington and the inauguration of President Bush, the architect of the losing 1988 campaign unburdened himself of some thoughts up in Boston. John Sasso offered a few important lessons for the Democratic Party — especially on the subject of Jesse Jackson.

Sasso was Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis' top aide from 1980 onward and the man who shaped the basic blueprint Dukakis used in capturing the Democratic presidential nomination. Before the first primary, Sasso was exiled for his part in undermining the rival candidacy of Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr. (D-Del.). But, after Dukakis squandered his early lead, he brought Sasso back for the rescue effort in the final two months of the autumn campaign.

His speech last week departed from the long tradition of insiders' post-mortems on failed presidential efforts in being conspicuously short on self-serving alibis and parting shots at rivals on his own team.

He acknowledged mistakes for which no one but Dukakis and his aides were responsible: the parochialism of the Dukakis hierarchy, the failure to establish a clear campaign theme and a compelling case for political change, and the inattention to issues like crime and defense which touch on deeply held national values.

While decrying the "negative, distorting" ads Bush used against the Democratic nominee and faulting the press (justifiably) for its tardiness and reluctance to play "truth squad" on campaign ads, Sasso said Democrats should recognize "our own lack of a central and sustained theme created the vacuum...that allowed flags and furloughs to dominate."

Those appeals touched voters in ways that were incomprehensible to the people in Dukakis' Boston headquarters, because Sasso's successors assembled a campaign team of remarkable cultural and political insularity. While Cambridge and Boston dominated the Dukakis circle, Bush's team included people experienced in national campaigns and reared in Texas and South Carolina, barometers of the South, and the key states of California, Ohio, Michigan, New Jersey — and Massachusetts.

"Only by having a feel for the entire country," Sasso said, "can a campaign come up with the kind of insights and strategy — day by day and even hour by hour — that are essential to...winning."

Few Democrats will disagree with Sasso on those points, but what he said about Jackson will surely stir a debate. "After two elections...of watching Walter Mondale and Mike Dukakis strain to...develop some kind of solid political relationship with Jesse Jackson, only to see that relationship turn tense and even adversarial," Sasso said, "I think it is imperative that Democratic leaders, including Jesse Jackson, together decide to do things a hell of a lot better."

Sasso acknowledged the subject "is filled with emotion," but he said, correctly, that "in some ways voters even seem to judge the strength and skill and character of the Democratic candidate on how effectively he gets along with — or copes with — Jackson." With a mixture of admiration and exasperation, he recounted his own dealings with Jackson, a man who phoned at all hours of day or night, "always...full of ideas." He came to see Jackson as a man who "holds very fixed views — always important for a strong leader — and has a very exact ideological approach. Often, when he disagrees, he tends to see the differences in racial terms."

In dealing with such a man, Sasso said, the policy of turning the other cheek, practiced by both Mondale and Dukakis, has high costs. It was "a mistake on our part. Covering up sharp disagreements...was corrosive and draining....Jesse Jackson himself says he wants to be treated as other political leaders are treated. He is right. He should be and he is not."

One reason, unacknowledged by

Sasso, is that Jackson so easily dominates other politicians physically and psychologically when he is with them. Both Mondale and Dukakis seemed to shrink in his presence. But the other factor is liberal guilt. "The weight of historical injustice makes it extremely difficult for a Democratic candidate in any way to diminish Jackson, for the candidate seems at the same time to be criticizing a whole community who believe Jackson is the only leader who really stands up and fights for them," Sasso said.

Blacks are, of course, the Democrats' most loyal voting bloc. But Sasso is right in saying that the way for future Democratic candidates to acknowledge their debt to that community is not to stifle their disagreements with Jackson, but to "build bridges of their own...by campaigning vigorously in black communities."

"This is not to challenge Jesse Jackson," he said, a bit disingenuously. "It is to challenge black voters."

Sasso's advice is also a challenge to all those who would contest with Jackson for leadership of the Democratic Party in the next four years. From beginning to end, his speech is a major contribution to the Democrats' understanding the lessons of defeat.

Junk The Rules And Start Over

J. Wade Gilley

At its annual meeting in San Francisco, the National Collegiate Athletic Association narrowly passed a new rule called Proposition 42. This rule was designed to close a perceived loophole in a previous rule called Proposition 48, which established minimum academic standards for high school students receiving athletic scholarships (grants-in-aid).

Almost overnight, the new rule was being protested by several basketball coaches, led by Georgetown's John Thompson. Even though it will not be effective until 1990, which means that repeal or modification in January 1990 is an option, opponents of Proposition 48 jumped on the new rule with a vengeance. Their ostensible complaint is that it conflicts with another rule prohibiting recruited athletes from receiving other (nonathletic) forms of institutional aid. What they are really against is the original rule, Proposition 48.

This controversy points out two fundamental flaws in the NCAA's approach to doing business. As a classic cartel, the NCAA is frequently manipulated by individual schools or conferences attempting to improve their competitive edge by changing NCAA rules. Not only did the most recent controversy begin that way, but many NCAA rules have their genesis in cost-containment efforts that are rooted in efforts to restrict financial competitive advantages — e.g., "Let's us poorer schools put a limit on the number of football posters Alabama is allowed to print each year."

All of this rule-making has resulted in an overlapping, complex set of regulations now approaching the size of a major mail-order catalogue. This band-aid approach has complicated NCAA rules to the point where it actually encourages "guardhouse lawyer" coaches to be constantly searching for loopholes and conflicts.

Further, most of the rules directed at cost containment tend to hurt student athletes while allowing many wealthy coaches to go their merry way making money. This encourages cheating by both players and coaches.

For example, current rules do not allow grants-in-aid to provide a clothing allowance, a spending allowance or transportation to school and back home, as NCAA rules once did. Colleges are also prohibited from providing employment opportunities for student athletes, putting poorer student athletes in a financial bind and providing the incentive for cheating, especially as institutions and coaches become more affluent.

Many coaches are making hundreds of thousands of dollars from their positions — as long as they keep winning. It is small wonder then that a $300,000-a-year basketball coach faced with a dramatic drop in income if he loses the recruiting battles is willing to break a cartel (NCAA) rule (not a law) and offer a player cash under the table.

Not only is this approach to cartel building sully the reputation of collegiate athletics in the public eye, it is also corrupting young athletes and their coaches. It is teaching the wrong lessons.

My suggestion to the NCAA is to simplify. The following are a couple of specific ideas.

First, completely junk the existing grant-in-aid system with all its rules. Instead, restrict athletic grants-in-aid to tuition and fee waivers, perhaps limiting their number. All other financial aid for athletes would be need-based and would use the federal financial aid standards and forms. This would provide adequate assistance (much more than the current athletic grants-in-aid) for the truly needy students. In addition, once signing the federal forms and accepting federal aid (Pell grants, loans, etc.), students found to be taking money or support under the table would be violating federal law instead of some cartel rule. Together, adequate aid for the most needy and real penalties for cheating should discourage students from taking a payoff or, as is sometimes the case, demanding it.

And if colleges dump the money now being used for grants-in-aid, less the tuition and fee waivers, into the general financial aid program, athletes would not be taking money away from other needy students. The totals — students and dollars — would be roughly equal.

Second, the NCAA should also stop trying to set academic standards, dropping Propositions 48 and 42 and any other such rule, and letting institutions decide which students they want to admit. Instead, the NCAA should require two simple actions on the part of colleges and schools:

1. Each school should submit an annual report to the NCAA delineating the average SAT-ACT scores, high school class standings and average GPAs of the incoming freshmen in each of its sports and for the institution as a whole. These reports should then be made public. Thus, the only restrictions on John Thompson and Georgetown would be to publicly acknowledge any differences in the average SAT scores for the members of the basketball team and for the university as a whole.

2. To remain eligible once admitted, student athletes should be required to make sufficient progress each year to graduate within five years. Rules of individual institutions should govern, but the president would personally approve at the beginning of each semester a list of athletes eligible to participate in a sport and send the list to the NCAA. The NCAA should make the list public. This would put the president's credibility on the line. Hard evidence of false information being presented by a president should result in harsh penalties such as forfeiture of all contests in the sport and season in question. After all, a lying president is far worse than a cheating coach or a conniving student athlete.

Obviously, other opportunities for simplifying and reforming the NCAA rules exist, but these would make strong starters. They are simple, they send the right message to students and coaches, and they hold the presidents accountable.

Sens. Taft and Stamey sponsor merit increase bill

Prison Bill Wins Panel's Approval

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — More prison beds, expanded alternatives to jail and more probation officers are among provisions that won a Senate committee's approval in emergency legislation designed to settle lawsuits over North Carolina's prison conditions.

"The urgency in this legislation has to do with the timetables established in the settlement agreement," Sen. Dave Parnell, D-Robeson, told the Senate Appropriations Committee before its unanimous action Tuesday. "If the Division of Prisons is to be able to meet those deadlines — deadlines that were established with the blessings of the settlement committee — then immediate legislative approval is required."

The bill is the first installment of a five-year, $800 million plan to ease crowding in a system that has 17,400 inmates and an estimated 18,000 more coming in each year.

"That means we have more than 18,000 new releases each year," Parnell said. "The management of these numbers is putting a tremendous amount of strain on the criminal justice system and undermining, in many cases, the public safety."

Under the settlement, the state is committed to providing 50 square feet of space for each inmate by July 1, 1994.

Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, said the package sent to the Senate will cost $109 million in the first year and $150 million in the second. About $50 million a year will directly address problems at 49 of the state's 87 prison units named in the suit, said Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson.

"There's a possibility that we could, through probation and parole, divert 7,000 to 8,000 (inmates)," said Johnson. "It has that potential, but it depends on how much judges use alternatives."

Still, the overall number of inmates is not expected to drop, Johnson said.

"Our objective is to stabilize the population at 18,000," he said. "We will not see a reduction in the incarcerated rate. It is ... what we call managing the problem."

Specific provisions in the bill call for:

— Expanding the electronic house arrest program to 12 new locations for a total of 14. That would divert up to 2,800 inmates per year from the system, Parnell said.

— Expanding intensive probation parole by 10 teams, diverting more than 500 people from the prison system.

— Adding 288 more probation and parole officers, reducing case loads and allowing the diversion or early release of 3,000 people a year.

Broyhill Named

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Martin has appointed former U.S. Sen. Jim Broyhill, his longtime friend and political mentor, to succeed state Commerce Secretary Claude Pope, who is resigning because of health problems.

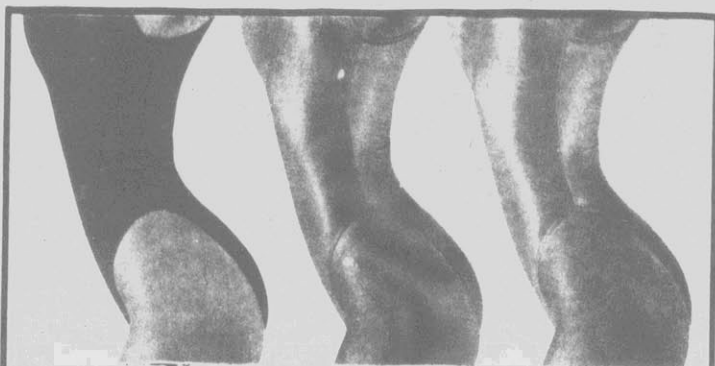

Martin announced the changes in a statement Tuesday, saying he regretted Pope's departure from a post that gained visibility in the 1988 campaign as the governor and his challenger, former Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, made economic development a major issue.

Pope "has done a masterful job of directing the Commerce Department and turning it into the best in the nation," Martin said.

The nature of Pope's illness was not disclosed in the statement. He abandoned a bid for the state Senate in 1986 because of prostate cancer, which he said then was in remission. He had back surgery last year.

"For reasons of personal health, I foresee future difficulties continuing the rigorous duties and opportunities of this great office," Pope said in the statement.

Pope is the second cabinet officer to step down since Martin's election to a second term Nov. 8. Natural Resources and Community Development Secretary Tommy Rhodes resigned in December and was replaced by Bill Cobby.

Taft Sponsors Bill To Give State Workers Merit Pay

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The inability of state employees to climb the merit pay ladder since 1982, when then-Gov. Jim Hunt froze the system because of a recession, has eroded morale, said supporters of a bill to reinstate such raises.

"Every day we are losing our best and brightest state employees to other employers due to the lack of a merit increase system," Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, said at a news conference Tuesday. "Managers have had no means to reward their good performers. There has been no financial incentive for employees to perform well."

The bill, crafted by a House-Senate study committee, would allow managers of the various departments and agencies of state government to reward deserving employees with pay increases. Merit raises would be based on performance evaluations designed to ensure fairness and avoid a "buddy system," sponsors said.

"State employees are willing to put their job performance to the test and to have a portion of their pay increase be based on their job performance," said Taft, co-chairman of the study committee.

The bill would direct the State Personnel Commission to recommend to the Legislature each year how much of the money appropriated for pay raises should be awarded across-the-board and how much should be reserved for merit increases.

For example, the commission might suggest that one-third of the pay increase be granted as merit raises and two-thirds to all employees or vice versa. Under the bill, the commission would have to recommend that at least 25 percent and no more than 75 percent be used for merit raises in any year.

Gov. Jim Martin called for restoration of merit pay in his 1989-91 budget. He suggested that employees receive a 3 percent across-the-board raise and a 1.5 percent merit increment for a total of 4.5 percent.

Taft said he hoped that improved tax collections and savings through spending cuts would allow as much as a 6 percent raise, which might include a 2½ percent merit increment.

As the House and Senate appropriations committees received initial briefings on the state's fiscal condition, several members said all government programs should be scrutinized for potential savings — including the Basic Education Program.

Martin proposed in December that the fifth-year, $113 million installment of the eight-year, $800 million BEP be cut in half because of an anticipated revenue slowdown in fiscal 1989-90. He withdrew the proposal in the face of strong opposition from the Advisory Budget Commission.

In his State of the State address last week, Martin said he had gotten the message not to touch "sacred cows," an obvious reference to the BEP.

Taft, Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, and Rep. Jo Graham Foster, D-Mecklenburg, said the BEP should not be considered untouchable.

They stopped short of endorsing the one-year, 50 percent cut suggested by Martin but said some components such as hiring more administrators and other "support personnel" might be delayed a year to leave more money for pay raises.

"Interest is right significant in that," Taft said.

Rep. Margaret "Peggy" Stamey, D-Wake, said some of the support workers were not ready to begin work anyway because their training and certification were not complete.

House Speaker Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, and House Appropriations Committee Chairman Dave Diamond, D-Surry, said it was too early to speculate on possible BEP cuts. Rep. C.R. Edwards, D-Cumberland, chairman of the House Education Committee, said the BEP was not a "sacred cow" but added, "I would hope we would not have to tamper with it."

Some Democrats Banned

RALEIGH (AP) — A pre-session agreement written by Republican House Leader Johnathan Rhyne and signed by Rep. Joe Mavretic meant several top legislators would lose prestigious posts before the first gavel fell.

The eight-page, 19-point memorandum was drafted after Rhyne of Lincoln County, Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, and others agreed to form a coalition to overthrow Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, and install Mavretic as speaker.

Reporters from two newspapers were allowed to read part or all of the agreement, the contents of which were described by sources to other reporters.

One point of the agreement asked Mavretic to agree that certain House members, whose names were mentioned during a meeting Dec. 30, 1988, with Gov. Jim Martin, at the Executive Mansion, wouldn't hold key legislative or committee posts if Mavretic became speaker.

"The Republicans, and rightly so, were scared to death that once they agreed to help us, things would be turned around on them and the same old people would be back in power," one Democratic member of the coalition said.

The agreement doesn't mention legislators by name but does make reference to the ones discussed at the meeting with the governor.

"Those persons discussed at our meeting Friday will not be appointed committee or subcommittee chairmen or vice chairmen because they have in the past demonstrated their opposition to such principles," the agreement said, referring to the general statements of fairness and openness that prompted 20 Democrats to join 45 Republicans in ousting Ramsey.

Mavretic Names Five More Panels

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — House Speaker Joe Mavretic has nearly completed implementing a reorganization plan that he says will spread power to more members yet leaves the bipartisan coalition that elected him firmly in control.

Mavretic announced the membership of five more committees Tuesday and was expected to fill Pensions and Retirement, the only remaining panel, today. Rep. Liston Ramsey, whom Mavretic replaced as speaker, has been mentioned as possible chairman of the committee, which might be downgraded to subcommittee status.

Named chairmen of committees were Reps. Roy Cooper, D-Nash, Judiciary; C.R. Edwards, D-Cumberland, Education; Pete Hasty, D-Robeson, Commerce; Dan DeVane, D-Hoke, Basic Resources; and Milton Fitch, D-Wilson, Public Employees.

Fitch is the only committee chairman who was not among the 20 Democrats who joined 45 Republicans in ousting Ramsey as speaker. He and Edwards are the only blacks among the 12 committee chairmen.

The only female chairman is Rep. Betty Wiser, D-Wake, of the Human Resources Committee. Other blacks and women have received subcommittee chairmanships.

The newly appointed chairmen "are another example of the new direction we've set for leadership in the House," Mavretic said at a news conference. "Through previous service, they have earned the respect of their colleagues and now have a full opportunity to serve their state."

He said the chairmen would "accomplish their jobs with vigor and honor. They are pledged to adhere to the principles of fairness and thoroughness. And they will invite more legislators to be involved in the process."

The appointments shed further light on Mavretic's plans for bringing new faces into positions of leadership and influence in keeping with the bargain he struck with the GOP delegation.

Members of his coalition comprise a majority on all committees and subcommittees. Ramsey and his chief lieutenants, including Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, have been stripped of power.

Some of the new chairmen and vice-chairmen are relatively inexperienced — two subcommittee chairmen are freshmen — but Mavretic said he had no qualms about their qualifications.

"The 120 members of the House and the 50 members of the Senate represent the most successful legislative candidates in North Carolina," he said. "Each and every one of them bring to the General Assembly a wealth of experience ... (and) the skills that are necessary to at least run permanent subcommittees."

Each of the subcommittees has bipartisan leadership, a requirement of the coalition agreement that promised the GOP 20 of the 50 standing subcommittees.

Among the subcommittees announced Tuesday was only one that will have a Republican chairman and a majority of Republican members: the Commerce Subcommittee on Banks and Thrift Institutions, whose chairman is Rep. Harold Brubaker, R-Randolph.

Sullivan Likely To Be Confirmed Despite His Support Of Abortion

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Anti-abortion lawmakers are concerned about the views of President Bush's choice to head the Department of Health and Human Services but concede they have little hope of blocking the nomination.

Instead, they are pinning their hopes on assurances by Bush transition officials that other top-level HHS jobs will go to anti-abortion activists.

"I'm assured all will be well in the end, but it's growing curiously and curiously by the day," said Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., a strong opponent of abortion who is still waiting to meet face-to-face with HHS Secretary-designate Louis Sullivan. Humphrey said he is concerned that some senators who have met with Sullivan in advance of his confirmation hearing next week report that the nominee personally supports the Supreme Court decision that legalized abortion — a view different from that of Bush, who says he wants the decision reversed.

Humphrey said he was not comforted by Sullivan's pledge that as a member of the Bush Cabinet he would back the abortion policies of the president, but that he sees little likelihood the nomination will be blocked.

"Let's put it plainly: Dr. Sullivan is the only black nominee to the Cabinet. It would be an embarrassment to the president, an embarrassment to the Republican Party, if the nomination encountered any trouble and we don't want that," Humphrey said.

"We want to make the best of the situation and that's what we've been striving to do by encouraging the White House to surround Sullivan with people experienced in government and who would actively support the president on abortion," he said.

Bush, in a bid to placate anti-abortion groups, will name Constance Horner as undersecretary of HHS, an administration source, declining to be named publicly, said today. Horner, director of the Office of Personnel Management under President Reagan, is considered acceptable by anti-abortion lawmakers.

The Horner appointment was initially reported by The Washington Post, The New York Times and The Washington Times.

Sullivan declined to comment on the developments Tuesday.

New Jury

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — A new pool of prospective jurors will be called in the court-martial of a Marine sergeant accused of dereliction of duty in the death of a lance corporal abandoned on a California desert.

A military judge dismissed the first panel on Tuesday, after the defense argued that a prosecutor might have influenced the selection of the pool members. The new jurors will be called today.

Capt. William Fisher, who is representing Sgt. Christopher P. Clyde in the court martial, presented testimony in a hearing at Camp Lejeune that it is unusual to have a lieutenant colonel and two majors on a 10-member jury panel.

"This is a tainted panel," said Fisher, arguing that the presence of the high-ranking officers was unfair. He filed a motion to put enlisted jurors on the panel.

Lumbee Bill

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Supporters of a bill that would give Lumbee Indians full status as a federally recognized tribe have renewed their efforts after the same legislation was blocked last year at the urging of a North Carolina congressman.

Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., whose district includes Robeson County, said Tuesday that he planned to introduce the bill.

"There are some preliminary items that have to be discussed before I introduce it to the House. We want to try to eliminate some of the problems and some of the opposition we had before," Rose said.

Drug Abuse

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Fort Bragg has the Army's lowest overall drug abuse rate, but cocaine use by post soldiers, spouses and dependents is rising at an alarming rate and must be brought under control, the post commander said.

"The marijuana rate is dropping, but the cocaine rate is skyrocketing," Lt. Gen. Carl W. Stiner, commanding general of Fort Bragg and 18th Airborne Corps, told post commanders and command sergeants major on Tuesday.

The number of positive results for cocaine in random urinalysis tests on the Army post rose from 226 in the 1986 fiscal year to 374 in 1987 to 545 in 1988, post officials said.

The number of positive results for marijuana use at Fort Bragg dropped from 2,288 in 1986 to 1,290 in 1987 to 905 in 1988, officials said.

Billboards

RALEIGH (AP) — State Highway Administrator George E. Wells has ordered the formation of a task force to review weaknesses and recommend changes in the Department of Transportation's regulation of the billboard industry.

In a memorandum to the state highway chief engineer, Earl H. McEntire, Wells said the task force should "thoroughly review the entire billboard issue."

McEntire said he had issued instructions Tuesday to DOT division engineers to get "in absolute compliance" with billboard regulations and policies.

Attorney Appeals

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A New Bern attorney suspended for two years by the N.C. State Bar Association is still practicing law and is appealing the suspension.

Reginald Frazier said Tuesday the suspension order that became effective Jan. 6 has not yet been certified and he is still able to practice law.

Following a Dec. 21 hearing, Frazier was suspended for tampering with a witness, according to N.C. State Bar Deputy Counsel Caroline Bakewell. He also received a concurrent 90-day suspension for neglecting a legal matter. The suspension order was made public Dec. 28.

The suspension stems from Frazier's failure to appear on his client's behalf at a small claims hearing in 1986. The client was forced to represent himself in the case, which he lost, the commission said.

State Postage

RALEIGH (AP) — State Representative John Tart of Wayne County says state agencies may be wasting thousands of dollars in mailing practices.

He complained to State Auditor Edward Renfrow about legislators receiving from one state agency a two-page letter in a 9 1/2-by-12 inch envelope with 85 cents in postage.

"I weighed the material and found it required only 45 cents in the large envelope. But, in a regular business envelope, the postage would have been only 25 cents. A conservative estimate is that this one letter cost our state $34.80 in wasted postage, plus the extra cost of the large envelope," said Tart in a letter to Renfrow.

New President

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Howard L. Wilburn was installed Tuesday night as the fourth president of Piedmont Bible College since the school's founding in 1945. Wilburn, 43, attended the school from 1968 to 1973.

Farmer Loans

RALEIGH (AP) — The Farmers Home Administration said Tuesday that 702 North Carolina farm borrowers with delinquent accounts have requested consideration for loan servicing options.

The loans are more than 180 days delinquent and the borrowers were notified in November that they had 45 days to request benefits under the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987.

Farmers will be considered for debt restructuring, reduced interest rates, deferral of FmHA payments for up to five years, and possibly a writedown of the amount of their FmHA debts.

Body Found

MOUNT AIRY, N.C. (AP) — The body of Alice Pack, 87, of Mount Airy was found Tuesday, a day after she was reported missing.

Police Lt. Danny Wood said Ms. Pack was an Alzheimer's disease patient who had been living with her daughter.

About 60 to 70 took part in the search, Wood said. He said the victim apparently died of exposure.

Seedling Theft

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Clyde man accused of uprooting 4,000 Fraser fir seedlings from the Blue Ridge Parkway pleaded guilty in federal court and received the maximum six-month sentence.

Blair Rathbone's sentence came two years after his arrest Halloween night 1986, when a state Highway Patrol trooper stopped Rathbone, 24, and a Burnsville man leaving the Parkway in a car with an expired license plate.

Inside the car, Trooper Fred Davis discovered the foot-high seedlings, later found to be missing from federal woods near Balsam Gap at U.S. 23.

"They were pulling up these seedlings for nursery stock and were going to sell them to a nursery," Balsam Gap District Ranger Tim Pegram said Monday. "It's unlawful to remove or be in possession of those things."

Car-Train Crash

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A Dallas, N.C., woman was killed Tuesday morning a train struck her car as she was driving around a railroad crossing gate, authorities say.

Judy Turner Ghorley, 30, was driving home from work at the General Tire plant in Charlotte when her car collided with a Southern Railway train. Her body was found outside the car. She had apparently tried to get out of the car just before impact, according to Mecklenburg County Police Capt. J.R. Haston.

"Best as we can tell the arms (at the train crossing) were down," Haston said. "There was a line of traffic going around the arms and the train came and hit her." No charges were filed, he said.

Bush Tries To Head Off 'Sleaze Factor'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush is naming a panel to recommend standards of conduct for government officials, in an attempt to ensure that he does not face the same allegations of an administration "sleaze factor" that dogged his predecessor.

Largely to counter such complaints about the Reagan administration, Bush during his campaign promised to create the panel as one of his first acts in office.

Bush today was scheduled to sign an executive order creating the advisory commission on ethics. It will be chaired by Griffin Bell, the former attorney general in the Carter administration, and Malcolm Wilkey, a senior judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington, the White House said Tuesday.

Other panel members will include former White House counsels Fred Fielding and Lloyd Cutler, and Washington attorney Jan Baran, said White House spokeswoman Alixe Glen. She said she could not confirm the two remaining names.

On Tuesday, Bush asked the director of the Office of Government Ethics, Frank Nebeker, to brief all senior administration officials on ethical and conflict-of-interest standards required of them, said White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater.

Bush had proposed during his campaign that such briefings be held on an annual basis, and Nebeker wrote to him on the day after the Nov. 8 election offering to conduct the sessions, said Fitzwater. Fitzwater said the 10-minute meeting with Nebeker on Tuesday was for "symbolic value" to emphasize the importance Bush attaches to ethical conduct.

More than 100 members of the Reagan administration, in which Bush served as vice president, were at various times accused of unethical or improper behavior. Two of President Reagan's closest advisers, Lynn Nofziger and Michael Deaver, were convicted of offenses associated with their lobbying after they left the administration, while a string of allegations against Reagan's longtime friend and attorney general, Edwin Meese III, battered the Justice Department.

Bush supported President Reagan's veto of ethics legislation passed by Congress last year, but said he wants to introduce his own package. It is expected to contain the same standards, where applicable, for Congress as it sets for the executive branch employees. Last year's package set differing standards.

The new commission will take testimony on simplification or expansion of current ethics rules, and will make recommendations to Bush for legislation on the issue.

Bush has put his White House legal counsel Boyden Gray in charge of coordinating ethics policy.

On Thursday the president will continue to spotlight the issue by meeting with senior executive employees to "emphasize the ethics provisions of the law and their responsibilities and what he expects of them," said Fitzwater.

On Friday, he will talk to the inspectors general of the government departments to emphasize their role in ethics enforcement.

Fed To Keep Tight Rein On Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan hopes to dampen fears of rising inflation with a promise that the Fed will keep a tight rein on the money supply.

Greenspan, in an appearance before the House Banking Committee on Tuesday, warned that strains on factory capacity and a tight labor market, particularly in the Northeast, are likely to keep inflation pressures bubbling in the near term.

As a result, the central bank's monetary policy should continue on the tight side, he said.

"The long-run costs of a return to higher inflation, and the risks of this occurring under current circumstances, are sufficiently great that Federal Reserve policy at this juncture might well be advised to err more on the side of restrictiveness than of stimulus," he said.

But, in response to questions, Greenspan also indicated that the central bank would like to lower interest rates if it can be done at some point without causing an acceleration in price increases.

REV. BARBARA HARRIS

Episcopal Bishops OK Harris Vote

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — The election of the first woman bishop of the Episcopal Church has been approved over some adamant objections, but church officials say they don't expect the misgivings to develop into a schism.

Tuesday's mail brought the 60th ballot required to give the Rev. Barbara C. Harris approval from a majority of the 118 Episcopal bishops around the nation, said the Rev. James Solheim, spokesman for the Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts.

Those votes ratified the Sept. 24 election of Harris by the Boston diocese. The selection of Harris, a former public relations executive who is black and was once divorced, sent tremors through world Anglicanism.

When she is consecrated Feb. 11 in Boston, Harris will become the first woman bishop elected by a 2.5 million-member church that believes its leaders to be direct successors of Christ's apostles.

"This is the first time in the history of our church that the full breadth of ministry is coming into focus," Bishop David Johnson said in a statement Tuesday.

Presiding Bishop Edmond Browning, who heads the church, said the consecration would be "momentous" and "a time of great celebration."

Supporters of Harris have said she is qualified for the job and her election will broaden the church's outreach.

Bundy Warned There Were Others Like Him

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STARKE, Fla. — Hours before his execution, Ted Bundy coolly traced his origins as a serial killer, describing how boyhood glimpses of violent pornography became "an addiction" that grew until his "destructive energy" exploded from fantasy into reality.

The 42-year-old law school dropout, whose bizarre mixture of intelligence, charm and homicidal bloodlust were the subject of five books and a TV movie, also warned before his execution Tuesday that there were others like himself.

"There are loose in the towns and their communities people like me today whose dangerous impulses are being fueled day in, day out, by violence in the media ... particularly sexual violence," Bundy said in a videotaped interview Monday.

Bundy, who after a decade of denial told detectives from four states that he had murdered 23 young women since the mid-1970s, said he deserved his punishment. His execution in the electric chair at Florida State Prison elicited cheers from more than 100 people who stood in a field across from the penitentiary.

"I don't want to die, I'm not going to kid you. ... (but) I deserve, certainly, the most extreme punishment society has. I think society deserves to be protected from me and from others like me," Bundy said in the interview with James Dobson, a religious broadcaster and psychologist.

He said between sobs he hoped the interview would spur society to protect itself from the widespread influence of pornography, TV violence, X-rated movies.

Although he said he felt remorse for the sex-related murders, which authorities believe could total 36 nationwide, Bundy said, "There is no way in the world that killing me is going to restore those beautiful children to their parents."

Handcuffed and sitting at a table across from Dobson, Bundy alternately sobbed and smiled during the 29-minute interview. He was dressed in the peach-colored, short-sleeved shirt worn by Death Row inmates.

He appeared to ponder each question carefully, sometimes pausing at length before answering articulately.

Dobson, who has a daily radio program heard on 1,200 radio stations, asked about the rape and murder of 12-year-old Kimberly Leach, for which Bundy was executed.

"What did you feel after that?" Dobson asked.

Bundy held his hands to his face, closed his eyes and thought for a long time before responding: "I can't talk about that right now. ... It's too painful. ... I can't begin to understand the pain that the parents of these children (felt).

"I don't ask them to forgive me. I'm not asking for it. That kind of forgiveness is of God."

Prodded by Dobson to explore the sources of his violence, Bundy said that during his murder rampages "the unique thing about how this worked ... is I still felt in my regular life the full range of guilt and remorse about other things."

But the murders, he said, were "compartmentalized" in his brain, a "very well focused, very sharply focused area that was a black hole that was like a crack and everything that fell into that crack hole just disappeared."

He emphasized he didn't blame pornography for his actions and took full responsibility. But he said hard-core pornography, fueled by alcohol, "guided and shaped" what he did.

"I have lived in prison for a long time now, and I've met a lot of men who were motivated to violence just like me. And without exception, every one of them was deeply involved in pornography," he said.

Claiming he was "essentially a normal person" who grew up in a good home, Bundy said:

"People need to recognize ... those of us who are or who have been so much influenced by violence in the media, in particular pornographic violence, are not some kind of inherent monsters. We are your sons and we are your husbands and we grew up in regular families. And pornography can reach out and snatch a kid out of any house today."

Soviets Say Quake Toll Below Estimate

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SHARORA, U.S.S.R. — Officials said today the death toll from an earthquake and mudslide in Soviet Central Asia was only about a quarter of the 1,000 originally estimated, and they called off efforts to find more survivors.

"We will transform the settlement of Sharora into a common grave with a monument to commemorate the victims of this catastrophe," said Khusain Kasymov, Communist Party chief in the Tadjikistan republic's stricken Gissar region.

He said there was no hope of finding more survivors in Sharora, where 52 homes were buried and 100 bodies were hauled from the mud and debris.

The republic's prime minister, Izzatullo Khayoyev, said 274 people were known to have died in Monday's pre-dawn quake, which toppled all 88 mud-brick dwellings in Okuli-Bolo and sent mudslides as high as 50 feet onto the villages of Sharora and Okuli-Poyen.

"There may be a difference of five or seven people in the casualties, but no more," Khayoyev said in an interview on a grassy hill overlooking Okuli-Bolo, 20 miles southwest of the capital, Dushanbe.

The official Tass news agency earlier made a preliminary estimate that up to 1,000 people died in the quake and mudslide. Officials on the scene did not explain the discrepancy in figures.

A day of mourning was declared in Tadjikistan, which borders China and Afghanistan. All flags were at half-staff, plays and concerts were canceled and restaurants were closed.

"The bitter truth is that nobody can be rescued from under a landslide provoked by the earthquake," Tass said.

But there were stories of miraculous survival.

Kholmurod Barotov, 17, of Sharora said his 6-day-old cousin survived the quake held above the torrent of mud by her father, who perished.

Hunt For Trapped Miners Pressed

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Buoyed by signs of life, rescuers braved deadly fumes today in an attempt to reach about 100 men believed sealed for nearly five days in a gold mine by a deliberately set fire and a collapse, officials said.

"Rescue teams have been working intensively through the night," Nazca police spokesman Juan Torres said early today in a telephone interview.

Three miners were found dead and three rescued Tuesday at the mouth of the Sol de Oro mine near Nazca, 230 miles south of Lima.

Energy Minister Jose Carrasco reported Tuesday that rescuers heard tapping from the tunnels, indicating someone was alive. He said rescuers "tapped the walls and heard a faint response."

Carrasco said there were conflicting reports of 15 to 200 miners trapped in the mine, which Nazca police Lt. Juan Robles said collapsed Monday after a fire ravaged wooden tunnel supports.

Rescuers reduced that number Tuesday to about 100. Robles said the men have been trapped inside the mine since Saturday, when fire prevented their escape.

Student's Special Effects Explode On Silver Screen

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Most movie-goers take for granted the fantastic special effects that producers create in motion pictures. But one East Carolina University student knows firsthand the lengthy process required in creating those marvelous and sometimes chilling scenes.

Paul Pisoni, a freshman at ECU's School of Art, was responsible for producing one of the many special effects in the film "Deep Star Six," currently playing at the Plaza Cinema.

The 21-year-old student helped construct a scene in the film in which a man is punctured in his back with a compressed-air shark dart. Subsequently, the actor's chest dramatically explodes.

Pisoni, who spent several weeks in Los Angeles working on the effect, said he was extremely pleased with the way the scene turned out.

"I loved it. I was afraid it was going to get edited out of the film," he said. "I was surprised actually, because it's a gruesome effect."

Pisoni was recognized as one of 22 special effects people, collectively called the "creature crew," in the closing credits of the $8 million Tri-

The film features a wide array of extraordinary special effects, including the film's antagonist, a nasty prehistoric sea creature.

To construct the exploding chest effect, Pisoni said he first made a cast of the actor's body, then created an assortment of molds and detailed-fiberglass sculptures.

He then painted the chest piece to look like the actor's skin, and the inside of the fiberglass cavity to create the illusion of blood when the effect exploded.

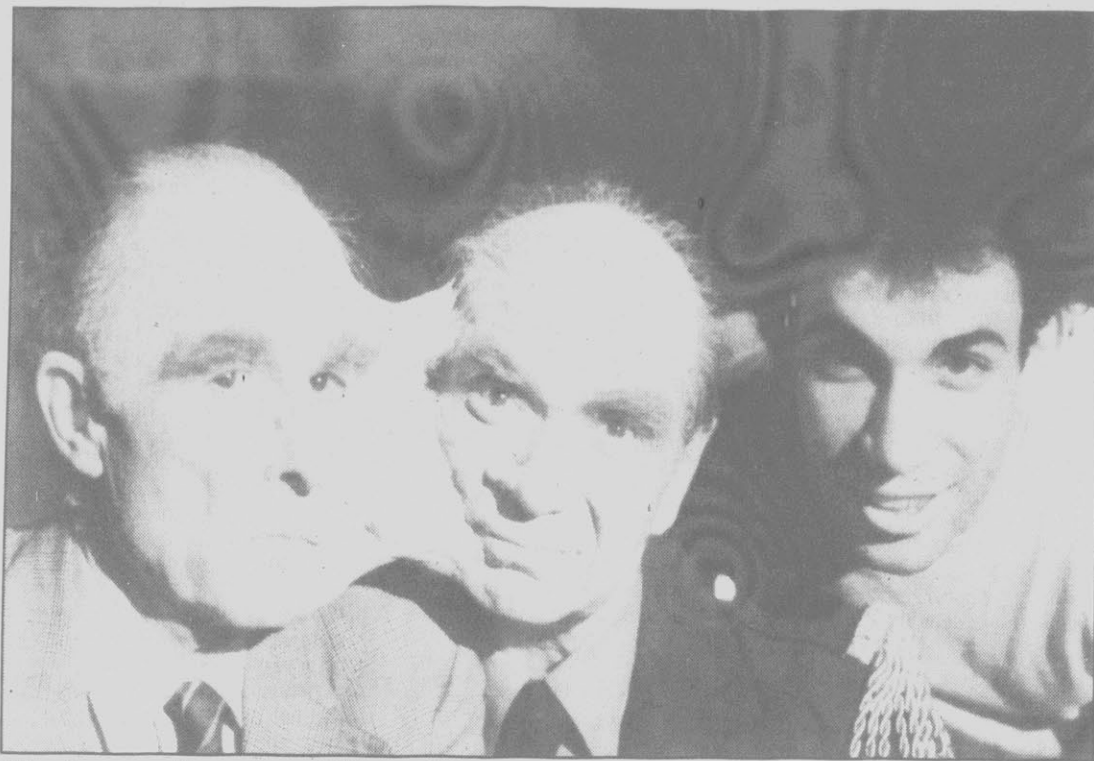

Pisoni first became interested in special effects when he was about 11-years-old.

"I started off making clay animation films," he said. "Then I picked up one of these horror magazines and I found that a lot more interesting."

Starting at age 16, Pisoni began to take correspondence courses which helped teach him all types of makeup techniques and gave him instruction in working with various materials.

One of the courses was offered by Dick Smith, a widely respected make-up artist. It was Smith's course which taught Pisoni the fine points of special effects makeup.

Pisoni was given an opportunity to practice what he learned on the set of the motion picture, "War" and was able to capitalize on that experience to help land an assignment on "Deep Star Six."

Pisoni poses with another of his creations, a set of Siamese twins

"Mark Shostrum (the film's special effects director) called me a couple days after he received pictures of my work. At the time he needed some people to help him out with "Deep Star Six." He was also working on "Phantasm II" at the time, so he hired me," Pisoni said.

Pisoni said it wasn't until Rick Baker received credit for his special effects work in "An American Werewolf in London" that the genre has received the appropriate recognition within those in the film industry.

"I think in the last eight to 10 years, special effects people are becoming the stars of these movies. They are becoming much more famous and well known," he said. "I think it's only been five or six years ago that they started giving Oscars to special effects makeup artists as a permanent award in the Academy."

Pisoni describes special effects as a combination of art, science and technical ability.

"You have to sculpt, you have to know how to paint, and make molds, then you have to know how to form the foam rubber, which is kind of tricky," he said.

"The mechanics to make this monster move in 'Deep Star Six' was an immense job. The creature was 17 feet long," he added.

Pisoni said he originally intended to jump right into special effects work professionally, but then decided to attend college to further his education.

"I may eventually, after college, try to get back into the motion picture industry in some way or another. I still love movies and I still like doing makeup. I think I'd like to go down to Florida because I understand they're making a lot of movies down there," he said. "Universal Studios is moving down there and Disney is building a studio there also."

Besides attending classes at ECU, Pisoni is employed at Carolina ortho-prosthetics.

He says his work with the artificial limb producer has provided him a heightened degree of professionalism and taught him the importance of perfection in sculpting.

"It's related because we have to take casts of people's legs so that we can form braces or mold artificial limbs that fit their specifications.

"I've learned a lot from my employer," Pisoni said. "He's very professional, very specific and exact about what he does and it's helped me."

Majority Votes Against Phone Solicitations

Dear Abby: I read with interest your columns about telephone solicitation, and agree it is sometimes a nuisance. But I am chairman of the fund-raising committee for a local symphony orchestra, and we could never survive without telephone solicitations. We write letters first, but most people ignore letters, so we resort to telephoning — and we do not give up until we have made five telephone calls.

I do not like to call people, and I can understand their irritation if they are interrupted in lovemaking or some other pleasantry. However, lovemaking can be resumed later — a dead symphony orchestra is not easily revived, so I continue to call.

Abby, any advice that can free me from having to call people to beg for money is welcome. — Lars B. Lofgren, M.D., Talent, Ore.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Dear Dr. Lofgren: Believe me to understand your problem, but I still maintain that the telephone is in the home for the convenience of the person who pays for it.

Read on, please:
Dear Abby: The problems created by aggressive telephone solicitation can be more than merely disturbing.

Not long ago, my wife, who is undergoing chemotherapy treatments for cancer, received a phone call from a local cemetery, telling her that she had "won" a cemetery lot worth $500!

She replied, "Thank you, but I am not ready to die yet!" She was visibly upset and wondered aloud if perhaps the American Cancer Society might have given them her name. Of course they had not, but it is apparent that some controls over telephoning people to solicit business are desperately needed. — Angry In Mansfield, Ohio

Dear Angry: My stand on telephone solicitation for any reason, which includes consumer researchers who want only to ask busy homemakers what kind of soap or cleanser they use, met with some angry responses from professional researchers. For example:

Dear Abby: You said, "Market researchers should find another way to gather information. Some people sleep at odd hours; others may be ill and don't want to be disturbed."

Abby, that response was the most uninformed response I have ever read in my adult life. Maybe it's time you considered stepping down to let a more rational, knowledgeable person give advice to the public.

Dr. George Gallup Sr. years ago reported that the most genuine responses are recorded in an anonymous telephone interview.

National companies need to know what consumers really think. Their survival depends on quality information. Our client list of manufacturers, retailers, banks and dentists are most interested in gathering information so they can better fulfill consumer needs. To say that market researchers should find a better way to gather information reflects your total ignorance of what telephone research really does.

I, too, grew up in Iowa, and it is obvious that you have lost the common-sense perspective associated with Midwesterners.

By the way, we get many more positive comments than negative ones from people our company has interviewed. It is with much sadness that I read your poorly thought-out column. — Professional Researcher, Charleston, S.C.

Dear Researcher: Sorry, I stand by my original opinion: Telephoning the general public either to sell something or to gather information for whatever purpose is an invasion of their privacy and should be abolished. Furthermore, my mail is running 100-to-1 in favor of my view. So, sue me.

Book Attempts To Ease Flyers' Fears

By Marcia Dunn
The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — After more than three years of being grounded by dread, a nervous but determined Phil DeHart boarded a plane a few days before Christmas so he could spend the holiday with relatives in Indiana.

He wouldn't have been able to get on that jet, he says, if it weren't for a new book designed to ease fearful flyers' fears.

"The book tells you, 'The more you understand something, the less you fear it.' I think that's one of the things that helped me," the 35-year-old painting contractor said.

"Fly Without Fear," a 172-page psychology paperback written by the directors of USAir's Fearful Flyers Program, is helping countless others cope with aviophobia or just plain apprehension. Studies show one in six Americans is afraid to fly, making it one of the two or three things people fear most. "It's the next best thing to the class that we do," said Capt. Frank Petee, a former pilot who is director of special projects for USAir.

Petee and Carol Stauffer, a clinical social worker, based "Fly Without Fear" on the seven-week program they launched here in 1975. Some 3,000 people have taken the course, and 97 percent of them report success.

The course is offered in only 10 U.S. cities a year so "when we get a call from someone in Minnesota and they're desperate like these people are, there's nothing to offer them," said Ms. Stauffer. "Now they have a book."

One person helped by the course was Patricia Hass, an editor at Dodd, Mead & Co., who asked them to write the book. Dodd, Mead released it in November but Petee and Ms. Stauffer have taken over distribution from the liquidating publisher.

Like the program, "Fly Without Fear" describes the mechanics of flying and the reason for turbulence. It also discusses the four main fears of flying: acrophobia, or fear of heights; claustrophobia, or fear of closed spaces; fear of crashing or dying; and fear of not being in control. It suggests relaxation techniques and other methods for overcoming them.

The book also emphasizes air safety. An average 18,000 commercial flights carry 1 million people daily in the United States, generally without incident, said Ms. Stauffer.

'Boss Lady' Wears Her Pink Hard Hat While On The Job

By Angela Lingerfelt Bland
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Gail Stewart, a construction superintendent from Dustin, Fla., says Greenville residents have been a little surprised to see her bringing a new 53-unit hotel out of the ground on Stantonsburg Road.

Wearing a pink hard hat and a necklace that says "BAD," she has been supervising eight employees and overseeing plumbing and electrical work at the East Carolina Inn. The hotel, designed for the Pitt County Memorial Hospital community, is scheduled for completion this summer.

Until then, Ms. Stewart says she and her dog, Zack, will be in charge of local labor hired by Rich Construction Ltd., a company based in Statesville.

"Zack climbs to the second floor and oversees all the work," she said during an interview in a trailer at the construction site. She claims the dog knows the Spanish language and barks one, two or three times when she says "uno," "dos" or "tres."

A construction supervisor for the past 10 years, Ms. Stewart says Rich Construction is "definitely an equal opportunity employer. We have a female electrician, too." Normally, she specializes in the completion of construction projects, but the new inn is "the first one I've brought out of the ground."

Originally from Mississippi, Ms. Stewart comes from a construction family and she and her husband are a team, but they do not work at the same sites. "I met my husband on a day it rained us out while I was on a construction site in Europe. We're both from Mississippi, about 100 miles apart, but we met all the way over in Europe."

Rich Construction hires local employees to work for her, and "I feel like I get respect from them, but I have to earn it. When people come here looking for work, they ask me, 'Where's the boss man?'" She said people are surprised to learn she's the "boss lady."

And people know the boss lady means business when they see her pink hard hat and "BAD" necklace, she says.

"Everybody thinks that my necklace means I'm bad, but it really means 'bound and determined.'"

Flowers Accent Pullover

Pure elegance best describes this unique but classic pullover with 'embossed' flowers scattered across the front. This dramatic effect is achieved by knitting the floral design in stockinette stitch against a backdrop of simple seed stitches. The flowers are then outlined in crochet or embroidery chain stitches for further contrast. French knots make up the centers.

It's rare to find such an exquisite design that can be made so easily and inexpensively from worsted-weight yarn. Very little shaping is required, and the generously cut sleeves set into the square armholes and the wide band of ribbing make this an up-to-the-minute fashion.

Designed to be a loose fitting garment, it has a gauge of 4 1/2 stitches to the inch, and easy-to-follow directions are written for sizes 30-32, 34-38 and 40-44 with finished bust measurements of 36, 42 and 48 inches respectively.

To obtain directions for making the flower-embossed sweater, send your request for leaflet number Z-012289 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit K-012289 by sending a check or money order for $18.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and yarn in your choice of lilac, coral or ecru.

Quite some time ago, I had a phone call from a lady in Bethesda, Md., telling me of a book she was planning to write on the history of American knitting. We have never met, but Anne L. MacDonald has become a "phone buddy."

Although I thought she had embarked on a monumental project, and even secretly wondered how much appeal such a book would have, I was truly delighted when I received one of the first copies of 'No Idle Hands - The Social History of American Knitting' (Ballantine, $19.95).

Any dedicated knitter will find this book utterly fascinating, but readers of this column will have a special interest in it. In the introduction, Anne writes: "To broaden and contemporize my research in American knitting, I interviewed dozens of knitting friends and knitters at workshops, conventions and seminars, inserted author's queries in knitting publications and asked for help from Pat Trexler, who generously published my questionnaire in 'Pat's Pointers,' her weekly column begun in the mid-'60s and nationally syndicated in newspapers around the country."

"The response, particularly from Pat's devoted followers, was so monumental that our mailman, exhausted from shoveling fat batches through the slot, rapped on the door and inquired, 'OK, I give up. What ARE you doing?'"

Among the interesting comments from others Anne includes in the book are: "I wasn't about to pay $350 for a sweater I could make for $30." "Our church group knits caps for children bald from chemotherapy." "Every time I wanted to reach for a candy bar, I grabbed my knitting instead—lost 10 pounds and gained five sweaters."

Starting with a chapter on colonial knitters right up to a final chapter on knitting now, Anne, with her warmth and love for the craft, writes with a style that makes this read more like a fascinating novel than a history book.

One of my favorite chapters was on the settling of the West and those pioneer women who went cross-country in covered wagons. Anne tells us: "One woman knit so many soft, warm socks on the plains that when she finally reached the Pacific Coast, she was importuned by sailors to trade them for Hawaiian curios, sugar, coffee and coconuts. Parting from them reluctantly, she remembered, 'Dusty days were knit into those socks and long drowsy days on the train trailing west, ever west, to meet the sea.'"

Check your favorite bookstore for this one—I think you'll love it. If it is not in stock, it can be ordered.

Group Backs Teaching Values

By David Briggs
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A major Jewish organization is calling for the renewed teaching of values in American schools, saying there's more cause for concern over moral confusion than over potential church-state conflicts.

A report by the American Jewish Committee says the organization has rejected the argument that values education could be "a smokescreen for teaching religious precepts."

The AJC, a leading Jewish civil rights organization, is encouraging schools to define, teach "and put into action" values that are at the foundation of a democracy.

"You've got to rely on good faith and the integrity of the teaching system," said Arnold Gardner, the organization's vice president and chairman of the task force that wrote the report.

"The easiest thing to do is (to say) let's not touch it because it's too risky," Gardner said. "I think it's a natural evolution of our attitude and the ability to distinguish between matters of religious faith and shared values."

The report, to be released next month, is considered significant because of the past reluctance of many groups representing minority religions to enter into the issue. A copy of the report was obtained by The Associated Press.

Marilyn Braveman, the committee's director of education, said she thinks the report could have been written two years ago, "but it wouldn't be received as well. There might not be a sense of urgency in it."

The role of the public school in teaching values is coming under increasing scrutiny as educators and others debate the effect of "value-free education." In a 1986 speech that focused national attention on the issue, Gov. Mario Cuomo said,

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pushed ahead today, extending Tuesday's runup to the highest levels since the crash of 1987.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 38.04 points on Tuesday, gained another 3.93 to 2,260.36 by noontime today on Wall Street.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 5 to 4 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 708 up, 572 down and 530 unchanged.

The Dow Jones industrial average's rise Tuesday to its highest level since before Black Monday Oct. 19, 1987 was widely seen as a big step in that direction.

The market also has been helped by a rising dollar in foreign exchange and falling interest rates in the long-term bond market.

Raychem climbed 1 1/2 to 33 and Smithkline Beckman rose 1 1/2 to 52 1/2 in active trading. Both companies reported better-than-expected quarterly earnings.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks edged up .08 to 162.07. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .45 at 319.19.

Volume on the Big Board came to 93.95 million shares at noontime, up from 82.10 million at the same point Tuesday.

the chamber's historically recognized history.

Griffin is a member of Jarvis United Methodist Church, where he has served as chairman of the administrative board from 1984 through 1985 and on other various boards and committees. He is married to the former Ann Page and they have three children and one grandchild. Griffin joined Procter and Gamble in 1961 following service in the U.S. Navy from 1958 to 1961.

Also on the meeting agenda were reports from Phil Dixon, 1988 Chamber chairman, and 1989 Chairman Chris McCoy.

Dixon said the previous 12 months represented a highly successful year for the chamber.

He cited significant gains made in strategic planning, chamber marketing, and improved relations with sister-cities as major accomplishments in 1988.

McCoy said, "Under Phil Dixon's leadership, we took the opportunity to dream for a better community and to plant the seeds of progress to make that dream a reality in years to come.

"There are numerous challenges and opportunities which face us in 1989," McCoy said.

"As a community we are faced with complex issues which have a far-reaching impact on all of us," he said. "No one organization, be it public or private, can expect to solve these issues alone. We must work together to face the challenges which lie ahead and make Pitt County a better place to live and work."

McCoy said in the upcoming year the chamber would become actively involved in a wide range of issues including long-range planning and economic development, substance abuse awareness and also human relations.

"We will make a concerted effort to understand the needs and issues facing the minority business person and will extend the hand of friendship and invite this untapped resource to join forces with our chamber to effect change in the workplace," he said.

Clark, president and owner of Bill Clark Construction Co. Inc., has been involved with the chamber for 10 years and was chairman of the board in 1987.

He is 1989 chairman of the Pitt County Development Commission and served on that organization's board of directors in 1986 and as vice chairman from 1986 through 1988.

Clark attended East Carolina University, receiving bachelor's and master's degrees in business administration. He was president of the Pirate Club in 1983-1984.

Board Backs Police Dismissals

their violation. Tickets, he said, only make everyone upset.

"I never have been one for writing tickets ... I believe a police officer is better off being a public relations man," he said, repeating the position he stated Monday. "I don't think tickets have really accomplished anything."

Evans, one of several people packed into the mayor's office for the press conference, shot back at Hines and said police officers are sworn to uphold all laws, including traffic laws.

"The state of North Carolina disagrees with you," Evans said to the mayor. "I took the oath of office ... and I abided by that."

Smith said he still is positive that he took correct action in firing the officers Saturday, and he said he knew there was the possibility that the move might attract attention from the media. While he is short-handed, Smith said he has hired two auxiliary police officers to assist in patrolling the town.

Evans and Whitehurst had been with the force for less than a year and were still subject to conditions of the standard probationary period. A third officer, Tony Summerlin of Winterville, who has been with the force about 14 months, said he has been restricted to desk duty for also opposing the chief's decree against ticketing aldermen. Summerlin may be dismissed at the board's next scheduled meeting in February, Hines said Monday.

Hines also said in an interview Monday that Smith had sole authority to fire personnel during the probationary period. But board members said Tuesday that their approval was necessary to make the dismissals official. Both men were fired effective Saturday, according to a statement prepared by the board and read by Alderman Willie Jones, who also serves as the town's police commissioner.

In order to fire an officer with more than one year of experience, such as Summerlin, Town Clerk Elwood Nobles of Ayden said the board would have to go through a more involved process.

Smith said Monday the two were fired because they went over his head and contacted aldermen when they did not have the authority to do so. He said there were other channels available through which officers could file grievances.

The chief declined to comment Tuesday on whether he ordered the officers not to write tickets, saying he would wait until the outcome of a State Bureau of Investigation inquiry, which was prompted by a request from Pitt County District Attorney Tom Haigwood.

Benny Rountree, state president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, attended the meeting Tuesday, and said the SCLC is supporting Evans and Whitehurst and feels they should be reinstated.

Both men have hired an attorney and Evans has said they will probably move forward with a lawsuit if they are not allowed to return to the force. The SCLC may provide funds for legal fees as well as moral support, Rountree said.

He also said he wants to organize a community meeting to rally residents around the cause. If needed, he said he would ask residents to boycott the businesses in which the aldermen are involved.

Aldermen John G. Weathington and Bobby Crawford and Mayor Hines are all involved with local businesses. Alderman Willie Jones, the only black member of the board, is retired.

One of the complaints Evans and Whitehurst have lodged is that the town needs to hire black officers. Evans said black officers would benefit Winterville, especially in situations involving black residents.

S&L Fee May Be Administered

The fee, or premium, could apply to just S&Ls or to both S&Ls and banks, he said.

L. William Seidman, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which insures deposits in commercial banks, told The Washington Post that the proposal was "the reverse toaster theory. Instead of the bank giving you a toaster when you make a deposit, you give them one."

Brady emphasized the plan has not been adopted by the administration — he said it hasn't even been presented to President Bush — and rejected suggestions that it would represent a tax increase for S&L customers.

"What we're doing is to examine all manner of options to pay for this savings and loan problem we have. It's a big problem. So we're discussing all kinds of things — insurance based premiums, various different kind of options like that," he said on NBC's "Today" program.

The Post, quoting unnamed sources, said the fee could raise $9 billion a year, which would cover interest payments on the $20 billion to $30 billion the government will have to raise for several years to close S&Ls and pay off depositors.

Another proposal, under which taxpayers would foot the bill for closing insolvent institutions, is being offered by the savings and loan industry's largest trade group. The proposal, released Tuesday by the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, would also cut the fee that thrifts pay for deposit insurance.

The proposal would give the Treasury responsibility for paying to resolve the cases of more than 350 insolvent, but still open, S&Ls.

Bush, in a meeting Tuesday with congressional leaders, said he would propose substantial revisions next month to Ronald Reagan's budget, including measures to deal with the savings and loan crisis.

The League proposal called for tougher regulation, but said S&Ls should be preserved as an industry separate from commercial banking. The recommendation, which the group plans to present at a congress-sional hearing Thursday, drew immediate criticism from members of the House Banking Committee.

Suns Overcome Stubborn Hornets

By Walter Berry
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHOENIX — The expansion Charlotte Hornets came to town without their leading scorer and Eddie Johnson knew that meant trouble for his Phoenix Suns.

Johnson scored 11 of his 31 points in the fourth period and the Suns withstood a late Charlotte comeback to beat the Hornets 106-103 Tuesday night.

Charlotte was playing for the second straight game without forward Kelly Tripucka, who didn't make the trip because of the flu.

Tripucka ranks 13th in the NBA with a 23.1-point average and has led the Hornets in scoring 26 times this season.

"They came in short-handed and those are the dangerous teams," Johnson said. "We seem to struggle against the expansion teams at home. We had to go down to the final minute to beat Miami (107-99 here Jan. 7) and struggled to beat Charlotte. They played a good game and had a chance to win it at the end."

The Hornets, who led 51-50 at halftime, trailed 102-92 with 3:36 remaining in the game after two free throws by Phoenix's Tom Chambers, who had 25 points.

But Robert Reid sank a jumper with 2:40 left and then hit a 3-point goal with 31 seconds to go to cap a 9-2 run and cut Charlotte's deficit to 104-101.

Kevin Johnson's jumper with seven seconds remaining made it 106-101 and Hornets' rookie Rex Chapman made two free throws with five seconds showing.

After the Suns' Jeff Hornacek missed two free throws, Charlotte forward Kurt Rambis grabbed the rebound with three seconds left and the Hornets called a timeout to set up for a 3-point goal. However, they could not get off a shot before the buzzer as they lost their fourth straight game and 18th in 20 road games.

Phoenix went ahead to stay 68-67 on Hornacek's jumper with 4:41 remaining in the third quarter.

Chambers and Eddie Johnson each had eight third-period points as the Suns took an 81-75 lead into the final quarter and improved their home record to 16-3 with their 13th win in the last 14 games here.

"These are the kind we have to win if we're going to be a playoff contender this year," Eddie Johnson said. "Right now, we're 10 games over .500. Nobody ex-

Magic A Solid Choice On All-Time Team

By Scott Ostler
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

It's time to rewrite the book on the all-time All-NBA team.

This brilliant idea came to me recently when I sat under the Los Angeles Lakers' basket at the Forum and watched Earvin "Magic" Johnson coming at me in living 3-D.

Usually when I go to a Laker game, I am seated in the rafters, in the main press section. No complaint. Broadcaster Chick Hearn sits up there. You can really see the plays unfold, watch the entire court. Great seats if you're a scout. I'm not a scout. I can't even read a compass.

But at the Lakers' game against the Houston Rockets, I lucked out and drew a seat on the baseline press row, normally reserved for the reporters who cover every game.

I had forgotten what a different sport it is when you're two feet away. The players sweat, curse, bleed, bellow, whine, punch, gouge, slap, grab and elbow. Some of them even play dirty.

They also do remarkable things, such as making baskets while their defender is doing all of the above.

The great thing about the end-court, front-row seat is that it is the best place in the world from which to view the most exciting sports

Leonard-Hearns Set For June 12 Fight

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — Eight years and some 20 pounds heavier than when they first met in their prime, Sugar Ray Leonard and Thomas Hearns will fight a rematch of their classic bout June 12 at Caesars Palace.

Promoter Bob Arum said late Tuesday that the Las Vegas resort had agreed to pay $8 million to host the fight, which will be for Leonard's 168-pound title.

Leonard will be guaranteed $13 million and Hearns $11 million, but both could make more if the fight does well, Arum said.

"I'm not saying these guys are as good or not as good as when they first met," Arum said. "But I'm sure it will be an even better fight than the first one."

Leonard rallied from near certain defeat in the September 1981 welterweight title bout to knock out Hearns in the 14th round in a fight that many boxing observers call one of the best ever.

Leonard hasn't officially signed for the bout, but Arum said

Leonard's attorney, Mike Trainer, has "agreed in principle to everything."

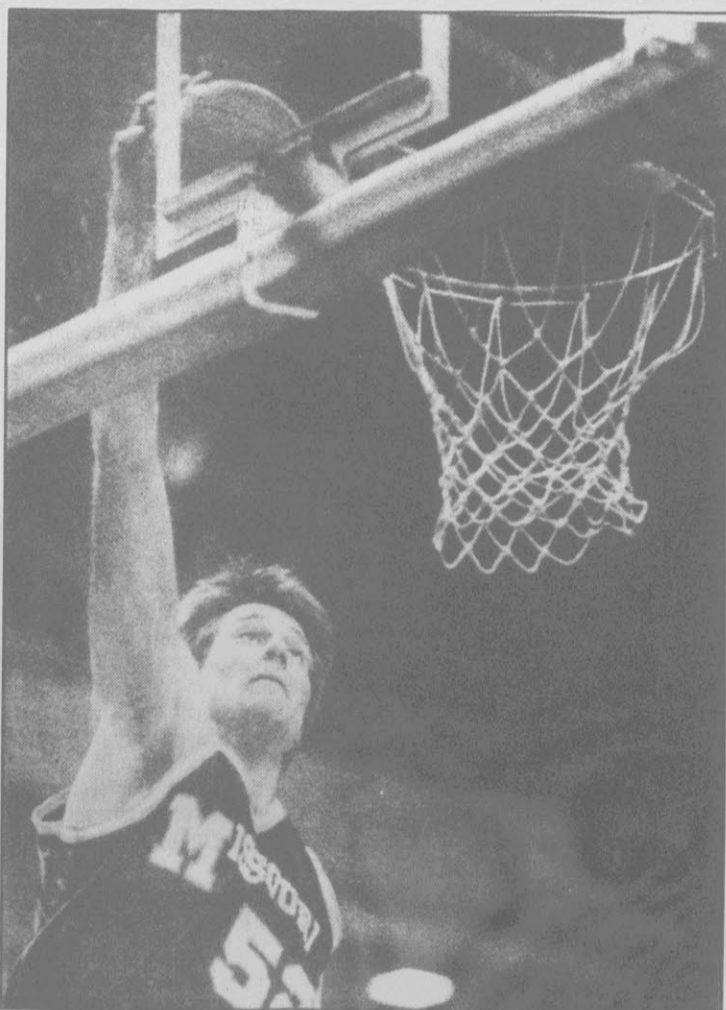

Trainer could not be reached for comment. He said Monday that no agreement had been made on the bout.

The fight has been in the talking stages for several months following Leonard's ninth-round knockout Nov. 7 over Donny Lalonde in a fight that won him both the World Boxing Council's super middleweight and light heavyweight titles.

The 32-year-old Leonard, who is 35-1, gave up the light heavyweight title after the fight, but agreed to a request by the WBC to hang on to the 168-pound crown.

Hearns, 46-3, has long clamored for a rematch with Leonard and has often expressed bitterness that Leonard would not agree to fight him again.

But Hearns is coming off an unimpressive performance in beating James Kinchen in a 168-pound fight Nov. 4, and was knocked out by Iran Barkley in the fight prior to that.

Church Helps Tigers Topple Terps

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Most college basketball fans know about Byron Irvin, the leading scorer for the fifth-ranked Missouri Tigers. But Greg Church is another matter.

Tuesday night, Maryland found out about Church. Starting only his second game of the season, the senior forward grabbed a career-high 17 rebounds and matched his best scoring mark with 17 points as the Tigers defeated Maryland, 87-73.

Irvin was the star in the second half for Missouri, scoring 20 of his 28 points, including 12 in a 19-5 run that the Tigers (17-3) used to rally for their eighth straight victory. But it was Church, starting after Doug Smith was sidelined by an ankle injury, who did the work in the first half.

"They probably saw me out there in place of Doug and said, 'Who's that guy?'" Church said. "They were concentrating on the other guys, and I got a few open buckets."

Church worked for most of those buckets, though. He scored 13 points and grabbed 11 rebounds in the first half, scoring six of Missouri's first 10 points, and 12 of the first 32. His free throws with 5:06 left in the first half gave the Tigers a 32-19 lead, the widest advantage they would have until the final minute of play.

Missouri still led 37-26 with 2:13 left in the half, but Maryland scored the final six points of the half to make it 37-32 at the intermission. The Terps opened the second half with a 17-6 run that gave them a 49-43 lead with 14:08 remaining in the game.

"At halftime, we told them to look to the basket and shoot," said Maryland coach Bob Wade. "We'd been trying to get the ball inside to Tony (Massenberg), and I think the other players forgot about themselves."

The Tigers responded to Maryland's surge with six unanswered points to tie the score at 12:15, then traded baskets until Lee Coward put them ahead, 56-5, on a three-point play at 10:11.

Newton Is Named Kentucky AD

Vanderbilt Coach Chosen To Help Wildcat Recovery From Scandal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Vanderbilt basketball coach C.M. Newton, with a reputation for running clean programs in more than 30 years as a coach and administrator, plans to continue in that manner as the new athletic director at the University of Kentucky.

"The opportunities and the challenges are great," Newton said Tuesday after his appointment was unanimously approved by UK's board of trustees.

"I want Kentucky to be a program that wins. I want a program that operates totally within the Southeastern Conference and the NCAA rules ... I want a program that doesn't sacrifice academic integrity."

Newton, 58, takes over the $13 million-a-year UK athletic program as a widely publicized NCAA investigation of the school's basketball program nears its conclusion.

"It's not an issue with me, and it's nothing I have any control over," he said of the 18 allegations lodged against the program by the NCAA.

The school is expected to respond to the charges by Monday and to meet before the NCAA's Infractions Committee in late April.

Asked if he thought the announcement of his appointment would send a message to the NCAA that Kentucky is intent on adhering to rules, Newton said: "I really don't know. I would hope honesty helps any situation."

Winfield, Steinbrenner Set To Settle Dispute

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Dave Winfield and George Steinbrenner are going to the arbitration table. Winfield's salary, however, is about the only thing not in dispute.

Rather than spend years in federal court determining who owes what to the Winfield Foundation, Steinbrenner and Winfield will let lawyer Michael Armstrong decide.

Earlier this month, Winfield sued Steinbrenner and the Yankees, claiming that they had not made $450,000 in payments to the foundation. Three days later, Steinbrenner countersued, charging Winfield failed to make at least $380,000 in payments and alleging that Winfield used the foundation to pay expenses for himself and friends.

Mike Lupica, a columnist for the New York Daily News, suggested in a series of columns last week that labor mediator Theodore Kheel be given the case. Steinbrenner accepted but Winfield balked because Kheel's son Robert, a partner of the law firm Wilkie Farr & Gallagher, represents the baseball commissioner's office.

Lupica suggested Armstrong as the arbitrator and Winfield accepted. Armstrong, a partner at Lord Day & Lord, Barrett Smith, was counsel to the Knapp Commission, which investigated corruption in the New York Police Department in the early 1970s. Armstrong is the former Queens district attorney and a former assistant U.S. attorney in Manhattan.

"The arbitrator chosen is an excellent selection, intelligent and fair," said Kenneth Warner, a lawyer for Steinbrenner. "The process will be much quicker and much less expensive and will result in a resolution that will get the money into the hands of the kids."

Herrmann Still Looking For Possible Solutions As Navy Continues Fall

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Pete Herrmann squatted in a baseball catcher's stance on the sideline in front of his team, his head drooping downward as he began to realize he was about to suffer a school-record 10th straight loss.

Herrmann, the head basketball coach at the U.S. Naval Academy, had hopes of snapping the winless streak with a win over East Carolina Monday night, until sophomore guard Erik Harris threw the ball out of bounds with under 20 seconds showing on the clock and his team trailing by five.

Navy ended up falling to the Pirates, 70-63, to fall to 3-13 on the year.

"The funny thing about that is he was the guy who got us back in the game with his 3-pointers," Herrmann said.

Harris hit a pair of key 3-pointers for the Midshipmen in the second half as they came from 14 points down, 51-37, to close to within two, 57-55.

Once Navy closed the gap, however, the game seemed to follow the same script as the Midshipmen's first six Colonial Athletic Association's losses.

"We made some key turnovers down the stretch," Herrmann said. "We have to respond in the tough time. We're in every league game. Every game we're there. We've just got to make the key plays.

Pete Herrmann

"We need to be more consistent and get good shots in clutch time. They (ECU) shot 58 percent for the game and we shot 43 and that's not gonna get you a win in a close game."

Another thorn in the side of Navy this season has been inconsistency at the free throw line. The Midshipmen, as a team, are only hitting 53 percent from the charity stripe. Senior Derric Turner, Herrmann's most experienced player when the season began, has had the worst of it. The 6-7 forward has missed his last 27 free throws. Against ECU, Herrmann chose not to play Turner at all.

Among the conference losses for Navy this year are a 76-74 overtime loss at home to league-leading Richmond. The Midshipmen had the Spiders down 14 points in the second half and never trailed in the game until the overtime period.

In Saturday's 72-64 loss to UNC-Wilmington, the Midshipmen went for over 10 minutes of the first half without a score, but still managed to fight back and have a chance for the win.

The loss to the Seahawks sort of typified the Midshipmen's season.

NFL In The Carolinas A Few Years Off

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The earliest the Carolinas could get a professional football team would be 1991 or 1992, Gov. Carroll Campbell says.

Campbell and North Carolina Gov. Jim Martin attended the Super Bowl over the weekend in Miami, lobbying NFL officials in hopes of persuading them to put an NFL expansion team in the Carolinas.

"We talked to a dozen owners," Campbell said Monday. "Two or three of them specifically said they would help us."

Campbell wouldn't identify the owners.

The location the two governors promoted would be a stadium between Rock Hill and Charlotte, N.C., Campbell said. Groups led by Charlotte Hornets owner George Shinn and Spartanburg business executive Jerry Richardson, a former NFL player, are seeking a team.

Campbell said the governors used several arguments for an NFL team, including:

- The two-state Carolinas market is bigger than other regions that are trying to get franchises.
- The drawing power of the Hornets, one of two new NBA franchises this year, already shows the Carolinas have a large market for pro sports.
- Carolinians are intensely interested in football.

Dean Dome Hasn't Cured UNC Ticket Ills

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — University of North Carolina athletic officials hoped the opening of the 21,444-seat Smith Center in 1986 would end complaints that there weren't enough seats for people wanting to see the Tar Heels play basketball.

But the Smith Center in the last week has begun drawing new complaints from students and professors who claim favoritism gives big donors or higher paid faculty the best seats.

The complaints began when students realized that of the 6,500 tickets set aside for them, only 1,750 were on the lower level of the arena. The students maintain that the athletic department promised them 2,000 seats in the lower level. Not so, says the athletic department.

Then, last Friday, faculty members objected to how their seats were assigned. Willis Brooks, a history professor, claimed in a faculty council meeting that seats were assigned on the basis of salary.

The council voted that a faculty committee on athletics investigate revising the formula that is used to determine faculty seating.

"Our first reaction was that we couldn't understand what the difficulty was this year," said associate athletic director Richard Baddour. "Why hasn't this been a problem before?"

The athletic department is considering the installation of bleachers on the floor of the arena to assuage the students, he said. But even if it does, it will not be until next year.

As for Brooks' complaint, Baddour said the faculty is responsible for developing its own formula for ticket seating.

"They are completely in charge," he said. "It's not the athletic department. We will institute whatever policy the faculty wants."

Baddour said it is not completely true that the best seats go to big-money donors of the school's booster organization, but the arena was built entirely with private funds and tickets were an incentive for donations.

McEnroe, Lendl Advance To Quarterfinals

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — John McEnroe and Ivan Lendl scored straight-set victories to set up a quarterfinal shootout in the $2.4 million Australian Open tennis championships. McEnroe defeated fellow American Aaron Krickstein, while Lendl ousted Amos Mansdorf of Israel.

Other winners included Sweden's Stefan Edberg over Australian Pat Cash; and Austria's Thomas Muster over Swede Magnus Gustafsson.

In women's play, fifth-seeded Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia upset three-time champion Martina Navratilova 6-2, 3-6, 9-7 to gain the semifinals. Defending champion Steffi Graf also moved into the final four by beating Claudia Kohde-Kilsch. Graf will face arch rival Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina, while Sukova plays Belinda Cordwell of New Zealand.

Wilson Surfaces At His Parents' Home

CINCINNATI (AP) — Stanley Wilson, the Cincinnati running back barred from the Super Bowl after a recurrence of substance abuse, contacted the Bengals to say he is with his parents.

Wilson was suspended by the NFL for the 1985 and 1987 seasons for violating the league's substance abuse policy. He was reinstated in April 1988 and played the entire season. He scored two touchdowns in the Bengals' 21-13 NFL playoff victory Dec. 31 over the Seattle Seahawks.

The Bengals brought Wilson back to the team's Miami headquarters hotel Saturday night and tried to make contact with medical personnel, but he left the room and walked down a fire stairwell. Wilson had not been heard from afterward until his call Tuesday to the Bengals' offices.

Wilson, a former University of Oklahoma star drafted in 1983, had at least three publicly reported drug rehabilitation treatments. They were with the Hazelden Foundation of Center City, Minn., in December 1983, and twice at Cincinnati's Christ Hospital during 1984.

Big East Suspends Players For Fighting

Candidates Lining Up For Newton's Post

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Candidates already are coming to the front to take over the Vanderbilt basketball program once C.M. Newton leaves the post to become the athletic director at the University of Kentucky.

Among those emerging as early favorites are longtime Newton assistant John Bostick, Auburn's Sonny Smith and Don Meyer, whose David Lipscomb University team is ranked No. 1 in the NAIA.

The Nashville Banner, the city's afternoon newspaper, reported in Tuesday editions that Newton has strongly recommended to Vanderbilt chancellor Joe B. Wyatt and Athletic Director Roy Kramer that Bostick be given the job.

Quoting an unnamed source, the newspaper said other candidates include Mike Montgomery of Stanford, Lon Kruger of Kansas State, Jim Crews of Evansville, Mike Dement of Cornell and Lee Fowler, a Vanderbilt graduate and former Memphis State assistant coach who is now an assistant athletic director at Memphis State.

The Banner said Auburn's Smith has privately expressed interest in the Vanderbilt position.

Vanderbilt assistant Ed Martin, who won more than 500 games as head coach at Tennessee State and South Carolina State, also is expected to receive consideration for the job.

Newton was announced as Kentucky's new athletic director Tuesday afternoon and is to assume his duties April 1.

Kentucky Board Requests Information

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The University of Kentucky Board of Trustees passed a motion Tuesday ordering that it be briefed on the school's planned response to 18 NCAA allegations against the university's basketball program.

The university's deadline for replying to the NCAA is Monday.

The trustees voted 18-6 in favor of a motion by Tracy Farmer that University of Kentucky president David Roselle give them an explanation of the responses to the allegations.

Roselle told the board that the university is showing responses to those named in the allegations before making any changes to the final report to the NCAA. He is expected to brief the board in executive session on Sunday.

The allegations include charges that Kentucky assistant coach Dwane Casey sent $1,000 to Claud Mills, the father of then-recruit Chris Mills, now a Kentucky freshman. Casey has denied sending the money, and the Millses have denied receiving it.

Other allegations include improper recruiting efforts and "academic fraud" by Eric Manuel, who was accused of cheating on a 1987 entrance exam.

"The university is notorious for not defending its own people," said former Gov. A.B. "Happy" Chandler, who voted in favor of the motion.

"I think the whole thing has been handled pretty badly," he added. "The NCAA (officials) think they were put on Earth to punish people and get paid for it. I've been through this before, and it's all been a disaster to the community."

Syracuse Snaps Big East Skid

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The first part of Boston College's game plan worked to perfection. The Eagles held No. 14 Syracuse to under 80 points.

"The score was kind of where we wanted it to be," Boston College coach Jim O'Brien said. "If it got up into the 80s and 90s, we knew we couldn't score enough points. I think we did the right thing."

It was the second half of the plan that went awry. The Eagles didn't score enough points themselves as Syracuse snapped a three-game Big East losing streak Tuesday night with a 72-60 victory.

"We don't care how it looks. We just care how we played," Syracuse senior guard Sherman Douglas said. "We couldn't afford any more losses."

The victory improved Syracuse's record to 16-4 overall and 2-4 in the Big East, and elevated the Orangemen out of the conference cellar, a spot now owned solely by the Eagles, 8-8 and 1-5. It was the fourth straight loss for Boston College, which has lost 10 in a row to Syracuse.

In its four conference defeats, Syracuse was held to 76 points by Pittsburgh, 73 by Villanova, 63 by St. John's and 62 by Connecticut.

"I don't think it's over," Douglas said of the way the Orangemen's opponents have been slowing down the tempo. "Teams are still going to play us the same way."

"Teams aren't going to now say 'Let's run with Syracuse' just because we won a game under 80 points."

Douglas led Syracuse with 19 points and nine assists.

Only two other ranked teams saw action Tuesday night. No. 5 Missouri defeated Maryland 87-73 and No. 20 Providence downed Miami of Florida 106-91.

Dana Barros, who finished with 17 points, gave Boston College its last lead at 28-27 with 7:31 to go in the first half. It was the Eagles' last field goal in the first half as Syracuse used a 10-2 spurt to build a 37-28 halftime lead.

Boston College pulled within 39-35 early in the second half, but Derrick Coleman scored a basket and a free throw and Matt Roe and Steve Thompson hit 3-point shots to push the Orangemen's lead to 48-37 with 15:06 to play.

Syracuse maintained a double-digit lead over the final 10 minutes.

"We had a lot of opportunities to win," Barros said. "In the last five minutes, we were still in the game. At the end, we just didn't make our free throws. That happened in the first half, too."

No. 20 Providence 106, Miami, Fla. 91

Carlton Screen scored 27 points and keyed an early second-half surge as visiting Providence crushed Miami to run its record to 15-2. The Friars also got 23 points by Marty Conlon and 15 from Matt Palazzi.

Eric Brown scored 30 points for the Hurricanes, 10-8.

Screen scored the final five points of the first half, giving Providence a 51-50 halftime lead. Four minutes into the second half, the Friars began a 19-3 run that included eight points by Screen.

Appalachian St. 73, Liberty 62

LYNCHBURG, Va. — Sam Gibson scored 22 points, four in the game's closing minutes, as Appalachian State defeated Liberty 73-62 Tuesday.

Liberty, 6-10, led 62-60 with 2:42 remaining when the Mountaineers, 13-3, ran off 13 unanswered points, four from Gibson, six from Kemp Phillips, and Rodney Peel's 3-pointer, to win the game.

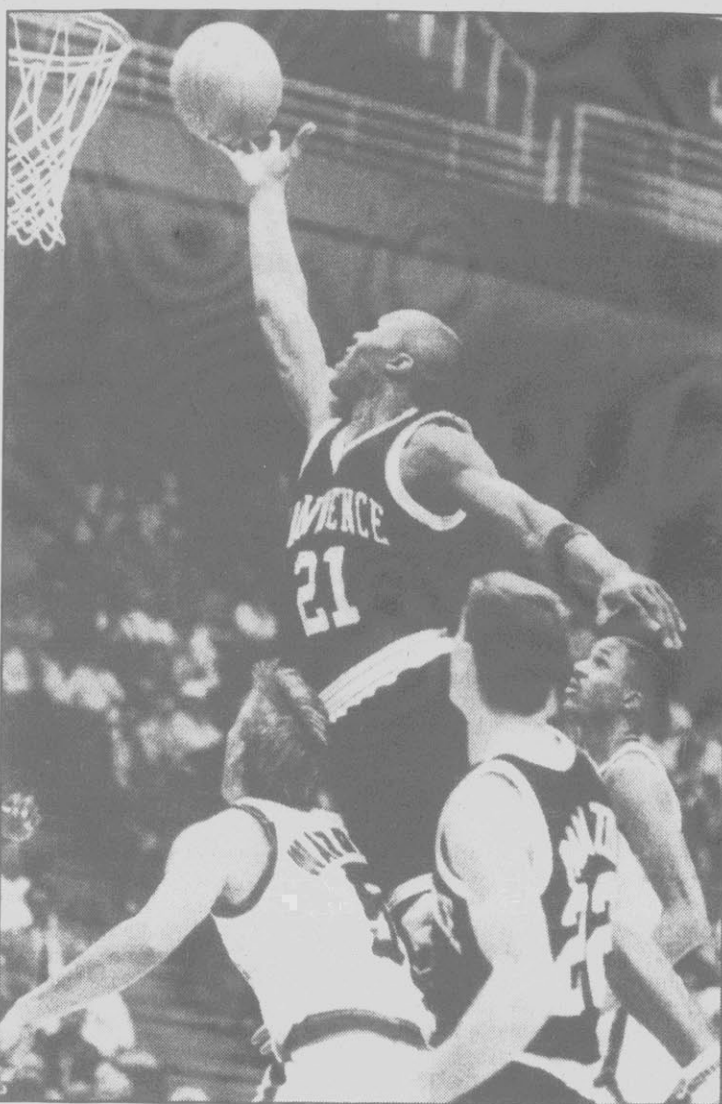

Ben Miller had 17 points and 13 rebounds for Appalachian State, while Phillips and Peel each had 13.

Liberty got 17 points from Bailey Alston and 13 points from Rodney Harden.

The game was tied twice in the second half after Liberty took a 31-29 halftime lead.

Macklin scored 17 points and keyed a second-half spurt to lead league-leading North Carolina Wesleyan to a 78-65 Dixie Conference victory over Greensboro on Tuesday night.

The Battling Bishops led 33-29 at halftime but saw the Hornets cut the margin to two points, 52-50, on a 3-pointer by Casey Turner with 10:36 remaining.

Macklin then scored from inside twice as N.C. Wesleyan extended the lead to six points with 8:40 left. The Battling Bishops then clinched the victory at the foul line, where they made 16 of 19 in the second half.

Travis Saunders scored 15 points, and Antonio Harris and Doug Hunt 12 apiece for N.C. Wesleyan, 11-6 and 5-0 in the conference.

Russell Anderson led Greensboro with 20 points. Turner and Jeff Dastmalchian added 14 points apiece for the Hornets, 8-7 and 2-2.

Board Will Debate An Investigation

panel's vice chairman and top staff to consider whether the board should investigate allegations against North Carolina State's basketball program.

Throughout the losing skid, Navy has suffered through periods of every game where it went scoreless. Against ECU, the Midshipmen went 4:07 without a score after cutting the Pirate lead to 57-55.

"The offensive droughts are really frustrating," Herrmann said. "It's nerve racking. The shots are there but they're just not going down."

Another loss for the Middies came at James Madison, when they fell 64-60. Navy had the ball in the final minute of that contest with a chance to score and go ahead.

"This game (ECU-Navy) scared me to death," East Carolina coach Mike Steele said. "They've been in virtually every game they've played. I don't think there's any doubt that they're gonna win some games. His kids play hard the whole game."

It wasn't too long ago, Herrmann looked on from the sidelines as positive school records were being set.

In his first year as head coach, after succeeding Paul Evans at the academy, Herrmann piled up a 26-6 record, thanks in part to All-American center David Robinson.

After Robinson's departure, Navy struggled during the early part of last season before rallying in the end. The Midshipmen won nine straight games at one point, didn't lose a game in February and finished with a 12-16 mark. That left Herrmann full of high hopes for this year.

Then in mid-summer, the bad news came. At the Naval Academy, students have the option after their second year to either withdraw with no obligation to the service or continue their education and owe the United States five years after graduation.

Herrmann already knew he would be without guard Cliff Rees, who averaged 13.9 points a game last year, due to graduation. He then learned 6-9 center Byron Hopkins (11.1 points per game) and 6-4 forward Matt Nordmann (11.3 points per game) weren't going to return to the academy for their junior year. Both transferred to George Washington University.

"We not only lost our leading scorers, but we lost our experienced players," Herrmann said. "Hopkins and Nordmann had experienced NCAA play as freshmen and would have given us some junior leadership. But now we're just having to work with smaller inexperienced players."

"It's really frustrating when I think back to last February," Herrmann said. "We didn't lose a game and had really come on strong at the end of the year. With the nucleus we had returning we were looking for a good solid year in the conference."

Herrmann knows it's possible to turn the tide with the Midshipmen, but he's just not sure how.

"Last year when we turned it around we knew we had sophomores that would be coming around," Herrmann said. "But we're just not getting any positive play this year. It's going to take a couple of wins to get the momentum started for us."

And as long as the Midshipmen are staying close in games, Herrmann knows there's a chance.

"You've got to go day to day, and you've got to get ready for the next one," Herrmann said. "I mean if we were getting blown out all the time and we weren't in the games, it would be a different story. I try to stay with them (the team) as much as possible with their confidence. They've just got to perform in that tough period of the game with a little more poise and a little more confidence."

Herrmann has enjoyed the experience of being on top. Now, he will be tested on how he can handle the pressures of last place.

Hershiser Runaway Award Winner

As Associated Press' Male Athlete Of Year; Canseco Distant Second

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
NEW YORK — Pitcher Orel Hershiser, continuing his award-winning ways, says being named The Associated Press Male Athlete of the Year "caps a year of fantastic awards."

The Los Angeles Dodgers' right-hander received nearly twice as many votes as his World Series rival, Jose Canseco of the Oakland Athletics, and became the first non-Olympian to win the honor in an Olympic year since Denny McLain in 1968.

"It is a tremendous honor to be recognized with an award which covers all sports," Hershiser said.

After last season's heroics, Hershiser was a unanimous choice as the National League Cy Young winner, was named Most Valuable Player in the NL playoffs and MVP of the Dodgers' World Series victory.

"From now on, my career will be divided into two parts — before 1988 and after 1988," he said.

Hershiser received 67 first-place votes and 465 points in the balloting done by sports writers and broadcasters on a 5-3-1 basis. Canseco, the first player to hit 40 home runs and steal 40 bases in a season, received 30 first-place votes and 233 points.

Heisman Trophy winner Barry Sanders, who set all-time college records for rushing yards and touchdowns, was third with 207, followed by Olympic swimmer Matt Biondi with 152, NBA star Michael Jordan with 91 and Olympic diver Greg Louganis at 59.

Finishing out the Top 10 in the AP voting were Magic Johnson of the NBA's Los Angeles Lakers, heavyweight champion Mike Tyson, golfer Curtis Strange and hockey star Wayne Gretzky.

The AP's Female Athlete of the Year will be announced Thursday.

Hershiser set a record with 59 consecutive shutout innings last season. He becomes the 22nd baseball player to win in the 58-year history of the award and the first since Dwight Gooden in 1985.

During the shutout streak, which broke Don Drysdale's hallowed mark, Hershiser celebrated two other events. On Sept. 15, his second son was born; the next night, he turned 30.

He finished the regular season with a 23-8 record and 2.26 earned run average. He pitched 24 2/3 innings in the NL playoffs against the New York Mets, getting a save in Game 4 and pitching a shutout in Game 7.

He pitched a three-hit shutout in Game 2 and a four-hitter in Game 5 of the World Series against Oakland.

In his final 101 innings, he allowed just five earned runs. He also won his first Gold Glove award and became the first pitcher to get three hits in a World Series game since 1924.

Canseco, the American League's unanimous Most Valuable Player, led the major leagues with 42 homers and 124 runs batted in. He batted .307 and stole 40 bases.

In the Athletics' five-game loss to the Dodgers, Canseco went 1-for-19. He hit a grand slam in his first at-bat before going into a slump along with the rest of the Oakland batters.

Sanders ran for 2,628 yards and scored 39 touchdowns in his junior year at Oklahoma State. He will return for his senior season, although the school has been placed on NCAA probation.

play in the world — the Lakers' fast break. Therefore, it is a great place to watch Magic Johnson operate.

Magic's teammates call him Buck, ever since he was a rookie and Norm Nixon referred to him as the young buck. For a different reason, the name still fits. Other point guards, like Isaiah Thomas and John Stockton, resemble pesky little bugs, dodging and darting. Magic, in wildlife terms, is more of a runaway buck, crashing through the forest.

He pounds the ball, he lowers a shoulder, he whirls and twirls. He directs traffic with one hand and slaps away his defender's hands with the other. The ball dribbles itself.

Against the Rockets, Magic had 17 points, 18 assists and 13 rebounds. Routine game.

What did surprise me that day, though, was that on at least three occasions, Magic threw a pass that caught a teammate unawares. Ten years into his NBA career, it would seem that there would be no way Johnson could still surprise a Laker with a pass.

You play on Magic's team, there are two cardinal rules:

1. Move.
2. Look.

In fact, that's the entire Laker play book. Just kidding, Riley. But the Lakers know that you must look for the ball when you're not open. The traditional basketball definition of "open" is Greek to Johnson. When you're on the court with Magic, you're like a truck-stop greasy spoon — always open.

"He never fools me," Byron Scott said. "One pass he threw to Mychal (Thompson) today was unbelievable. I could not believe it got through. But my first year, I learned that you always watch him."

It doesn't happen often, but that afternoon Magic caught Thompson, A.C. Green and James Worthy by surprise. They knew they had goofed. They knew Magic knew. And they knew that he knew that they knew, so they knew it was OK.

"They'll tell me, 'I'll get the next one, Buck,'" Magic said. Because the Lakers won the game easily, Magic could chuckle about the minor mix-ups.

"I'm thinking, 'After all these years, they should know me,'" Johnson said. "But hey, it happens. I'm making passes we hadn't did in a while."

Is he still inventing passes this late in his career?
"You don't be satisfied," Magic said. "You're always looking for ways to improve."

And seemingly he has improved his game this season. There's probably not much doubt now that Magic belongs on the all-time All-NBA starting five. In fact, this might be a good time to revise the entire team.

So I will.

Criteria? My team has to consist of guys who not only stunned and excelled, but who also raised the entire game to a new level for everyone. Each, in a different way, invented the wheel. My team: Elgin Baylor (forward). Translated playground flash and flair into NBA language. Opened the sport to a whole new style. Paved the way for Dr. J. This is no all-nostalgia team, by the way; Baylor's game would hold up today.

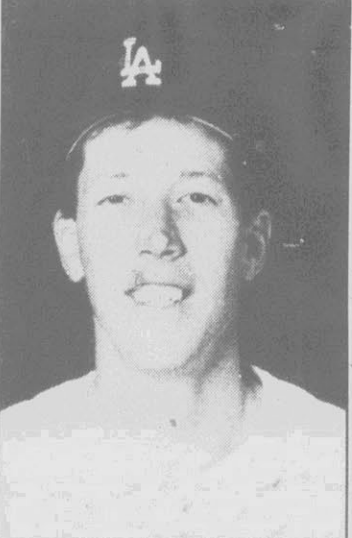

Larry Bird (forward). Individual statistics, team results, style, intensity. It breaks my heart to leave Dr. J off the team, but nobody said this was going to be easy.

Wilt Chamberlain (center). So dominating it was scary. Because of Wilt, they widened the key, changed the rules, finally succeeded in holding him to 50 points a game one season. The NBA game is better today, of course. Bring Wilt back in his prime right now and he'd only score 45 a game.

Michael Jordan (guard). While everyone else was trying to invent the wheel, Jordan showed up with a radial tire. Not a team player? We won't know until he gets a team. Look, I don't want to hear any rebuttals or equal-time pleas for Oscar or Jerry. Just roll the film.

Earvin Johnson (guard). A blend of Joe Montana and Minnesota Fats. Magic's personal view of a basketball game must be something like Dali's personal view of clocks.

If you don't like my team, pick your own. Meet you at the gym. Bring your trash and your cash.

Orel Hershiser

Charles "Jock" Sutherland, an assistant under Newton at Alabama from 1968-70, believes Newton is the right person for the position.

"The day he walks into the UK athletic department is the day the department and everything under his jurisdiction becomes white as snow," said Sutherland, now a radio commentator for Louisville basketball games. "If ever a job in heaven was made for a man, that was made for him."

Kentucky is the winningest basketball program in the country with 1,462 victories. The Wildcats also have won five NCAA titles.

University president David Roselle said Newton's contract will be for five years with an annual pay "slightly in excess of $100,000."

Roselle said bringing Newton, whom he called a man of "proven ability and the highest personal and professional integrity," into the athletic program "marks the beginning of a new day for UK athletics."

Newton was the unanimous choice of a six-member screening committee appointed by Roselle. None of the other nearly 60 applicants were interviewed by the panel, which met Newton in Bowling Green on Jan. 12. He was Roselle's top choice for the job.

Newton won't assume the post at his alma mater until April 1, and only after his Vanderbilt team completes its season.

"I have a whole lot to do with the basketball team until April 1," Newton said. "I'll assure you I'll be ready to go on the first of April."

Newton will replace Cliff Hagan, who served as athletic director for 13 years before resigning Nov. 15 amid the NCAA basketball probe. Joseph Burch has served an interim athletic director since the Hagan resignation.

"I think highly of him, and I think it's an excellent choice," Hagan said.

"I'm pleased," basketball coach Eddie Sutton said. "C.M. and I have been good friends for many years." Newton, who recently won his 500th game, coached at Transylvania University in Lexington from 1956 to 1968. He coached at Alabama from 1969 to 1980, when he resigned to accept a job as assistant commissioner of the Southeastern Conference. After holding that position, he returned to coaching in 1981 at Vanderbilt.

"He made it perfectly clear that if we had any success, it would be on the right side of the ledger," Sutherland said of his time with Newton at Alabama.

While at Alabama, Newton's teams won three consecutive SEC championships, and he won more games than any other coach in Crimson Tide history, compiling a 211-123 record.

Born in Rockwood, Tenn., and raised in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Newton was a letterman on Kentucky's 1951 national championship team.

"To be able to go back to your alma mater and head up a quality athletic program is like a dream come true," Georgia basketball coach Hugh Durham said. "I don't think it could happen to a more qualified or better person."

Williams scored a season-high 27 points. Denver, which has lost eight of its last nine games and nine straight on the road, wasted a season-high 43 points by Alex Ewing.

Adams began his record streak on Jan. 28, 1988. During the 79-game run, he made 193 of 530 long-range shots, including a record eight (in 12 attempts) against Milwaukee on Saturday night. But he was just 1-for-7 against Indiana on Monday night.

The Nets led 97-94 with 8:50 remaining when Williams scored five points to touch off a 14-4 spurt that gave New Jersey a 111-98 lead. The Nuggets came right back with a 13-2 burst and pulled within 113-111 with five seconds left. New Jersey's John Bagley preserved the victory with four free throws in the final 15 seconds.

Knicks 127, Lakers 117
Patrick Ewing's 25 points plus a tight defense down the stretch helped the Knicks win the battle of division leaders. The Knicks never led until Ewing's two free throws with 3:56 remaining put them ahead 114-113.

A jump shot by Ewing with 3:19 left put the Knicks ahead to stay 116-115 and Mark Jackson's two free throws with 2:46 to go made it 118-115 and proved to be the decisive points.

Knicks Hire On Schottenheimer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
KANSAS CITY, Mo., - Marty Schottenheimer doesn't talk like the coach of a football team that has won only eight games in two years.

"I'm not interested in rebuilding programs," Schottenheimer said Tuesday when he was introduced as head coach of the Kansas City Chiefs. "My principal reason for selecting this opportunity was I believe we can win, and win very quickly. Our goal for 1989 is to become the champions of the National Football League."

Schottenheimer resigned as Cleveland Browns' coach at the end of the season in a dispute with owner Art Modell. He signed a four-year contract for undisclosed terms with the Chiefs, a powerhouse in the 1960s who have had six head coaches and only one playoff appearance since 1971.

'Dream Factory' Manufactures Magic

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Christie Motteler lived through her dream of visiting Disney World where Goofy asked her to marry him, and Snow White danced by in the Disney Christmas parade and kissed her.

Bent from the pain in her diseased, 10-year-old body, Christie lifted her head from the pillows piled high on her lap in the wheelchair when the parade marched by. She smiled.

"They didn't think she was going to make it on the trip to Florida and back," said her mother, Linda Bell Shivers of Winterville, as she mentioned the letter she carried from Christie's doctors that described the cancer her body.

"She wanted to go so badly and her doctor was determined because she was so determined."

Determined, Christie and her family flew to Florida the week before Christmas where they saw the parade, visited the Epcot Center and saw other sites before returning to Winterville on Christmas Eve.

Christie not only made it through her dream but she celebrated Christmas and the coming of a new year before dying Jan. 12.

"I think the Dream Factory is a great organization for children that are ill to get their last wish," Mrs. Shivers said.

"Christie was the type of child that was determined," she said, describing how Christie won first place in the 100-meter dash at W.H. Robinson School after taking treatments for the cancer and how she had made the principal's list during the first six weeks of the school, even though she had to miss several days.

"She wanted to go to Disney

Group Grants Wishes Of Dying Youngsters

World," Mrs. Shivers said. "It's a nice organization for children like that to be able to go. It means a lot for the child to be able to get that wish."

The Dream Factory of North Carolina was established in November to grant wishes for critically ill children ages 3 to 18, said Kyle Braswell, area coordinator for the organization, and it will celebrate its establishment with a cocktail buffet Tuesday at the Hilton Inn in Greenville. The buffet begins at 6:30 p.m. Tickets are $30 per person.

"This our first fundraiser," Braswell said. He added that the buffet will be an annual kick-off for the program, which tries "to bring a ray of sunshine to a particular child and family that's been through suffering."

The trip to Disney World brought the sunshine to Christie, her mother said. "We hadn't seen her smile like that in a long time."

The concept of making dreams come true for critically ill children has been used to form several organizations, including the Dream Factory and Make a Wish, which is a national organization with state offices in Raleigh that serve eastern North Carolina.

The Dream Factory has 32

chapters nationwide. The local chapter is the only one in North Carolina, said Braswell, who also works with the ECU Medical Foundation. It was established in Louisville, Ky., in 1980.

The local chapter, with an 11-member board of directors and about 20 volunteers, was created during a jogging conversation, Dr. Gary Michels, a Greenville dentist, said.

Michels said he and Bob Adams of the East Carolina University Medical Foundation were jogging when they discussed the idea.

An Easter egg hunt held last year was the first step toward developing the program, Michels said. "It took from the Easter egg hunt to November to get this thing together."

All of wishes are granted through tax deductible donations to the Dream Factory, Braswell said. Volunteers who run the organization will serve on several committees including community relations, fundraising and special events and public relations and media.

"We try to grant at least one wish a month," he said.

The child's physician has to be involved in granting the dream to make sure the children are physically able to participate in the event.

"We try to grant every wish that comes in," Braswell said. "That's what we're all about."

Christie's trip was one of two trips the Dream Factory has sponsored to Disney World. There also has been a request to see a wrestling match, Michels said. "We're expecting almost anything" from taking trips to getting a particular toy to wanting to see famous people, he said.

For more information about the organization, call Braswell at 551-2238.

After 10 Years, 'Torch Song' Makes It To The Movie Screen

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The play "Torch Song Trilogy" began its award-winning history 10 years ago and only now is reaching movie screens? Why did it take so long?

The best explanation comes from Harvey Fierstein, who won two Tony awards in 1982 for writing and starring in the play: "I wanted to wait until it could be done right. It took finding the right producer, which I did about five years ago. Since Howard Gottfried had done Paddy Chayefsky films like 'Hospital' and 'Network,' I felt that if Chayefsky could work with him, so could I."

"Then my brother (Ronald, who is executive producer of the film) and I went around to the studios looking for financial support that would give us artistic control. Then we found New Line Cinema, which agreed to give us that control."

Three more years passed before Fierstein found the director he wanted, "a director that had the humor as well as the drama and the sensitivity for the story. A lot of directors were very frightened of male-to-male intimacy, and they felt you either had a drama or a comedy and you don't have big laughs in the middle of a scene where the audience is also crying." During his quest he discovered that the major studios did not have much interest, even though "Torch Song Trilogy" has been an international stage success.

"They liked the play, but they were afraid of the length; it ran four hours in the theater," Fierstein said. "They were scared that it might become an 'art film.' That's not what I wanted to make. I wanted to make a 'movie movie.'" gay lives, "Torch Song Trilogy" created a sensation from its birth at New York's La Mama Etc. in 1978. Fierstein took the leading role of Arnold Beckoff, a homosexual seeking respect from the heterosexual world, including his mother.

Spurned by his bisexual lover (Brian Kerwin), Arnold enters into a relationship with a young model (Matthew Broderick). They marry and decide to adopt a troubled gay teen-ager (Eddie Castrodad), a role Broderick originated on Broadway. All hell breaks loose when Arnold's mother (Anne Bancroft) arrives from Florida.

HBO Offers Spanish Soundtracks

By Felix Gutierrez
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Sergeant Joe Friday has asked for "just the facts" in many ways over the years, but this month he'll try something really different: interrogating bad guys in Spanish.

Dan Aykroyd, the star of the "Dragnet" movie, hasn't transferred to Mexico City. But Hispanics in key cities north of the border can see a Spanish-language version of "Dragnet" on Home Box Office.

Some HBO subscribers will be able to choose whether to hear a Spanish or English soundtrack to "Dragnet" and several other HBO and Cinemax features each month.

"There's a very large Hispanic population in this country, about 25 million people, which is equal to the entire population of Canada," said HBO Vice President Dick Beahrs. "Whereas many of them speak English as well as Spanish, many of them welcome the opportunity to use their first language."

To hear the Spanish dialogue, a viewer must subscribe to a cable company using the Spanish audio track and, in most areas, have a stereo TV with a second audio program switch. A special audio decoder, costing between $45 and $70, can be added to sets that don't have the switch.

There is no extra cost for the Spanish-language feed.

Twenty-one cable systems in seven markets are taking the Spanish audio, with 20 more set to start before May, according to HBO's Conception Lara. On board are some systems in and around Los Angeles, San Diego, Dallas, El Paso, San Antonio, Miami and New York.

Besides "Dragnet," HBO's January Spanish lineup includes "Empire of the Sun," "Ishtar," "Jumpin' Jack Flash" and "Something Wild." Cinemax is screening "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" and "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom," among others.

Hollywood movies have been dubbed in Spanish before for Latin American and U.S. Hispanic theaters, usually months after their English-language premieres. Recently, more movies have opened in both Spanish and English simultaneously.

In 1988, about 50 Hollywood releases, such as "Oliver and Company," "Baby Boom," and "Willow," were retrofitted with Spanish sound by Intersound, said Garry Morris, a spokesman for the dubbing studio.

About 31 percent of the Hispanic homes nationally take cable, according to Miami's Strategy Research Corporation, compared to the 53 percent of Anglo households.

But that might not translate into a boon for HBO.

Cable channel Galavision began as a pay Spanish-language movie and entertainment service, but switched to nearly all news last September. Earlier airings of Spanish-dubbed U.S. movies were unsuccessful.

"We carried 'Arthur,' 'Superman II' at the same time the other pay services did," said Galavision Vice President Starrett Berry. "We did not see a huge increase in subscribers as a result of that arrangement and we ultimately abandoned it."

bringing back some blocks of movies," Berry said.

More TV programs in Spanish means more competition for Hispanic viewers, long used to shows produced in Latin American. Last year both Univision and Telemundo, the two Spanish-language TV networks, beefed up U.S. production of programs in Spanish, not dubbed versions of English-language shows.

Frank Cruz, vice president and general manager of Telemundo's KVEA in Los Angeles, said his station had "very mixed results" in showing U.S. films in Spanish. "We found that our audience preferred to see Mexican movies, not the dubbed ones," he said.

In New York, Univision President Joaquin Blaya mentioned unsuccessful efforts by mainstream broadcasters airing Spanish simulcasts. Last Spring CBS pulled a Hispanic-themed situation comedy "Trial and Error" after a few weeks. The show was Spanish simulcast on radio in some cities.

"If we can judge by history the efforts that have gone to simulcasting to the Spanish community have not worked," said Blaya. He said Univision stations have aired Spanish-dubbed movies and "they didn't work either."

Nevertheless, KVEA's Cruz applauds HBO's move.

"HBO's entry into the Hispanic market is a good sign," Cruz said. "The more major companies that get into the Spanish-language market, the better it is for Spanish-language programming across the board."

Guitarist To Perform With ECU Orchestra

Guitarist Elliot Frank will perform with the East Carolina University Symphony Orchestra when the orchestra entertains Friends of the ECU School of Music and their guests at the 1989 Scholarship Gala.

The performance will be at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Greenville Country Club.

Players' productions, and he rightly treats the operettas as what they are: charmingly elegant period pieces. The precise style and individual qualities of each are lovingly re-created while the performers invariably seem to be as adept at projecting Gilbert's devastating humor as at singing Sullivan's delicious music.

The operetta tells the story of Frederick, an honest and handsome young orphan whose hard-of-hearing nursemaid apprenticed him to a "pirate" instead of a "pilot."

As the curtain rises, his term is nearly over, and the youth has vowed to leave piracy. This plan is complicated by the appearance of a clever major general and his huge family of beautiful daughters, who immediately attract the notice of the pirate band. One of these, Mabel, falls in love with the protagonist, as the major general practices a bit of deceit to evade the pirates.

Just as a band of police is about to capture the pirates, the pirates recapture Frederick: it has been discovered that his apprenticeship was to run until his 21st birthday, and since he was born on February 29 in a leap year, he has had only five birthdays. However, all is resolved happily in typical classic comedy fashion, with a few timely revelations, as right overcomes wrong and everybody is paired off to marry in the end.

While "Pirates," along with "H.M.S. Pinafore," "The Mikado," and other operettas by Sir William Gilbert and Sir Arthur Sullivan were designed to tickle the late 19th century fancy with their satiric portrayal of such Victorian institutions as the military establishment, government bureaucracy and the sentimental romantic ideals of the day, the humor continues to appeal to worldwide audiences.

Wright Auditorium is accessible to handicapped patrons and is equipped with listening devices for the hearing impaired.

The ECU Central Ticket Office, telephone 757-6611, ext. 266, is open weekdays from 11 a.m. until 6 p.m. Telephone ticket orders may be charged to major credit cards.

All In The Family

ROCHESTER, N. Y. (AP) — Chamber ensembles often have difficulty staying together because of the closeness and intensity with which they work.

The Ying Quartet, however, may have an advantage in longevity that stems from their upbringing. Siblings David, Timothy, Phillip and Janet Ying are all music students at the University of Rochester's Eastman School of Music. They aspire to become a professional string quartet.

"With family there are no surprises; we knew what we were getting into," says David. "We also accomplish more during rehearsals because we're not as polite to each other. Siblings can afford to be brutally honest."

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY Jan. 26

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Rest up and avoid fatigue as a result of an overloaded schedule. Plan for a fun weekend and include young family members.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Deal with those you trust, and avoid shady people. Credit can take a negative turn if abused. Be certain of your budget requirements.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Avoid pushing your good natured partner to the limit. Lack of tact may be remembered in the future. Try soft music and flowers.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Plan a garage sale to rid yourself of all the items you purchased at other garage sales. Put what you do have to good use.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Your mate's ego can be bruised if you fail to understand his or her point of view. Walk softly today, and take a candle-light approach.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Resist super salespeople who may have you buying what you really can't use. Depend on your intuition and good sense.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Making adjustments to a romantic tie could be painful but necessary. Believe in what you can and will do.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Current cycles favor loving relationships. Plan a local trip or outing even if you can't get to the Caribbean.

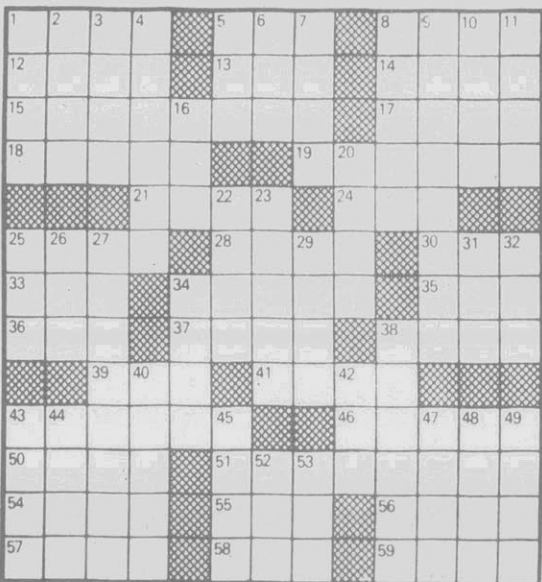

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Current love cycles flow and emotions run deep. Just a little enthusiasm on your part will open Cupid's floodgate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Make friendly overtures to associates. Give yourself credit for creative inspiration. Organization is the ultimate goal.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Make allowances for unplanned issues that crop up. A forgetful mood may cause you to lose something.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Those around you may seem impractical in their approach. Deal with emotional people as best you can.

You can't play bridge by rote. All those generalities you learn as a tyro serve only as guidelines in the play. On this hand you have to go contrary to two of those rubrics, depending on what line declarer adopts, if you want to be sure to defeat the contract.

Since South had showed minimum values, North was a trifle aggressive in the auction. His bid over game inquired about a club control. When South dutifully bid five no trump to confirm possession of the king, North opted for the no trump slam to protect his partner's monarch from immediate demise.

A low club lead would have given declarer no chance, but West was not clairvoyant. Declarer won the diamond lead in dummy and cashed the ace-king of spades. All he had to do to make his contract was to get to his hand so he could discard one of dummy's losers on his queen of spades, and the only suit to offer a means of transportation was clubs.

However, declarer was faced with a choice. He could play East for either the queen or ace of clubs. Since West might have led a club from the queen, he decided to play East for the lady and rely on a club finesse.

At trick four declarer led a low club. Now we know all about second-hand low, but if East had heeded that saw, declarer's ten would force the ace and the king would be the entry to hand. But if East flies in with the queen, there is no entry and the contract fails.

Now let's assume that, instead, declarer leads the jack of clubs at trick four. If East "covers an honor with an honor," the defenders are dead. If he plays low, declarer again is frustrated from gaining entry to his hand when West does his part by withholding the ace.

My Best Friend, Patrick

By Michael Lambe

The best thing that ever happened to me this summer was that a new friend moved to my neighborhood. It had been awful without a friend nearby. It seemed as if everyone lived in Lynndale. To see my friends, I would either have to be driven by my mom (something she did not enjoy) or I would have to bicycle across town (something I wouldn't do).

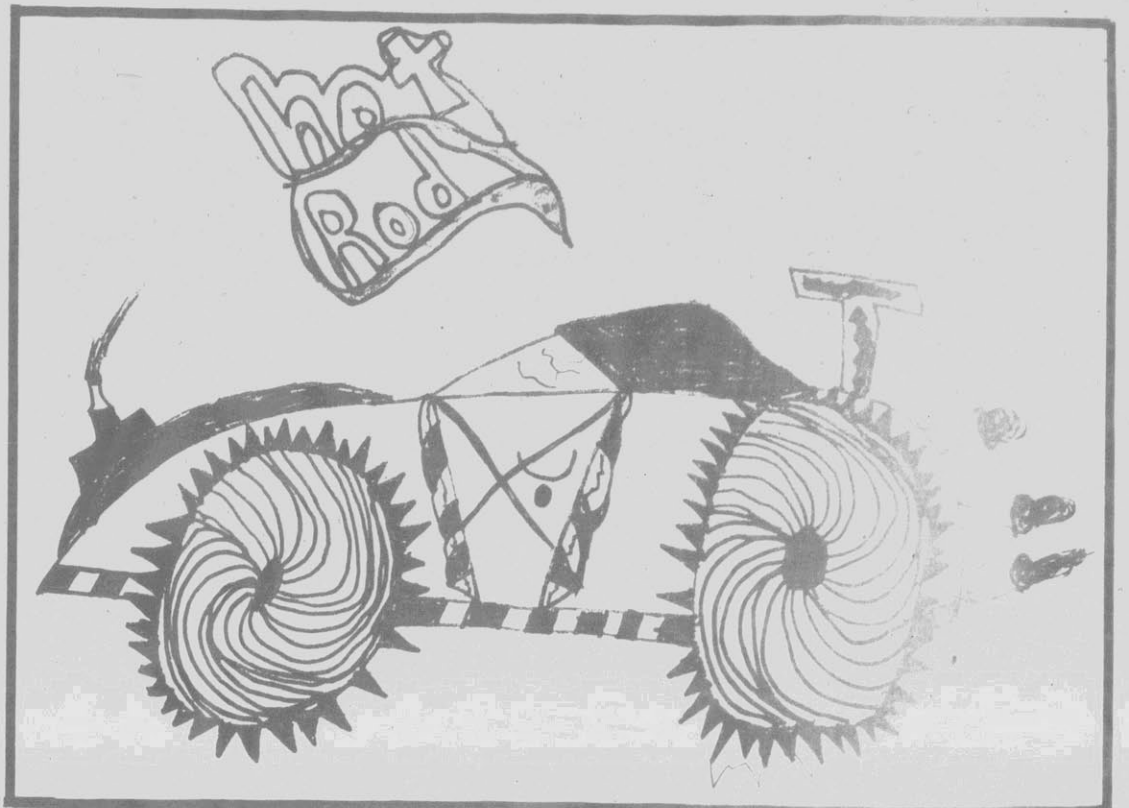

My new friend's name is Patrick. He lives about two houses away from me in walking distance. Thank God! I've known him about a month now. He lived in Sweden until he was two and then he moved to Rhode Island. He finally moved here to Greenville. Patrick has a little brother named Johann. He's a big pest but otherwise he's cool, too. Patrick, his mom and their whole family speak Swedish. It really annoys me when he and his mom speak Swedish and I can't understand them. Patrick is eleven years old. He is in the sixth grade but he acts like he's in the seventh.

He has a Nintendo, a remote control car, and tons of Lego's which I like fooling around with. Patrick has pure blonde hair which is shaved and he wears glasses. He can't do much during the afternoon when it's hot because he's just not used to the heat yet. He's started to collect baseball cards but his dad won't let him spend a lot of money until he's collected for a year. Patrick is one of my best friends. His moving here has to be one of the best things that ever happened to me this summer.

Your Heart

By Larlie Darden

Your heart can't be touched, and it is made of steel. I wish I could reach it to see how you feel

Your heart is cold inside, and it's not a bit close to being nice.

Keep it closed as long as you want, but don't let it be surrounded by ice.

Your heart is cruel and it always lies.

It's similar to time because it always flies.

Take your heart and dump it on someone who doesn't care. Because the hate in your heart is something I just can't bear.

Larlie Darden, 16, a student at D.H. Conley High School receives special mention.

If I Were President

By Jesse Summerlin

If I were president I would be a fair president. I would help get homes for the homeless and get the drugs off the streets. I would provide more jobs and lower taxes. I would make better schools. I would stop abortion and the killing of little children. I would have more policemen and stop teenagers from drinking. I would call for more blood tests before people get married. I would help put good doctors to the Ethiopian problem.

Jesse Summerlin, 9, a student at Elmurst School receives special mention.

Marty, The Chipmunk

By Deborah Nanney

One autumn day Marty, the chipmunk, was harvesting his acorns and nuts. He knew the winter frost was coming so he decided to gather his food into a pile. All of a sudden the wind started rustling. Marty heard a voice saying, "Help me!" Marty got his hiking gear and off he went to see whose voice it was. He was walking down a path when he heard "Help me!" again. Marty followed the voice. It was a squirrel. The squirrel said, "I am hungry." Marty gave it some apple cider. From then on, the squirrel and Marty were very best friends.

Deborah Nanney, 8, a student at Sara D. Brady School receives special mention.

Jack Frost Paints Leaves

By Mary Kathryn Swope

One starry night Jack Frost came by. He painted the dry, brown leaves white as marshmallow snow! He ran far away, laughing all the time.

The night passed quickly. When I got up, I saw the leaves. I called the police. I waited. They came in. I told them what I saw. They called a famous detective.

The detective studied the mystery. We could not solve the problem. We stayed up all night. We saw Jack Frost painting the leaves. The detective called the police. The police came and caught Jack Frost. He promised that he would not do it again. And he didn't. Mary Kathryn Swope, 8, a student at Third Street School receives special mention.

Squirrels

By Anne Chaffee

A squirrel is an animal that sleeps through the winter and wakes in the spring. He collects nuts so he won't starve through the winter. The bottom of his paws look like cats' feet. Squirrels climb very, very good. Squirrels make holes in trees to sleep in and put their nuts in. Sometimes they dig holes in your yard. Then they scamper away really fast and climb back up a tree. Sometimes you see two squirrels chase each other on one limb and then jump to another. They're really good jumpers. Their ears are like foxes' ears sticking up in the air. That's how squirrels live.

Rain

By Jeff Sarvey

I like the moisture of rain in the spring air. I like the sound of rain when it hits the roof. It slithers like a snake. I like the way it sits on a leaf. I like the way it hits on your head.

I like the way it runs down hills and makes a great big puddle.

Snow, snow, snow
Down, down, down

Melting, melting, melting
There it goes.

Crystal Ross, 12, a student at Falkland Elementary School receives special mention.

Today over 500 million acres of government land is supervised by the Department of the Interior. Established by Congress in 1849, the department is headed by a secretary of the interior. The secretary is 8th in line to become president and is appointed to the position by the current president. The appointment must be approved by the Senate.

The major task of the Department of the Interior is to conserve the land, water, wildlife, fish and minerals of the country. It also helps to protect the entire environment. The department employees (over 60,000) survey land and water resources, lease offshore areas for development and reclaim arid lands.

The Department of the Interior serves as the trustee or caretaker of the tribal lands which belong to the American Indians. In addition the department aids in the development of communities in the U.S. possessions and territories. It also helps to educate the people who live in these territories.

Williams Gets Serious About Funny Business

By JERRY SCHWARTZ
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Robin Williams traverses the country, ridiculing Republicans. Ronald Reagan is "the world's largest Muppet." Dan Quayle is "the Stepdorf candidate." George Bush is a political hypnotist. "Thousand points of light, watch de watch."

People laugh. They reward Williams with ovations. And they elect Bush.

"I don't know, I can't understand it," Williams said, in a recent interview. "Bush still got elected. ... It was like, 'What? Wait a minute, why?' I kept doing joke after joke, firing. Quayle is too easy. I mean, it's like shooting bullets into a dead horse."

He intends to keep on firing — at such targets as the Supreme Court ("some of what you see is trying to write the Constitution on an Etch-A-Sketch") and the imperial presidency (there is an effort to "turn Congress into this kind of benign boys club. They pass a law, and it's like ... 'What laws? We don't need no stinkin' laws.'")

The jokes keep coming, but there is an underlying seriousness to Robin Williams' wacky world. One measure is the political material that has been incorporated in his act in recent years; another is the charity benefits in which he participates.

This March he will appear on the third-annual HBO "Comic Relief" to raise money for the homeless; on Feb. 6, he will appear at a New York benefit to raise money for housing and for medical vans to treat homeless children, a project sponsored by singer Paul Simon. Tables for the show at the Sheraton Centre sell from $10,000 to $25,000. That kind of ticket puts a lot of pressure on a performer.

"You know the chicken's not what they're paying for," he said.

Williams, 38, is coming off his biggest screen success, "Good Morning, Vietnam," in which he portrayed an irreverent Saigon deejay. He's just completed work on a new film, "The Dead Poets Society," about a teacher at a private boys school in the 1950s.

But it was Williams' artistry as a stand-up comic that launched his career and made him an enormous success.

He's much in demand on the benefit circuit. His main charities involve AIDS and the homeless, and he finds himself turning down worthy causes.

"The problem is you don't want to end up being like someone who would go to the opening of an envelope," he said.

"You diminish your power; you also diminish your ability to help the cause if you start doing every cause. Then people go, 'Oh, it's him.' There was a time when I did do every benefit. 'Save the Shrimp' — he's there! 'People, people, listen — cocktail sauce is a horrible fate, people!'"

He tries to find out as much as he can about his causes and candidates. "You better know about it, or you'll get creamed. They'll start asking,

"Do you know his stand on the basic budget deficit?"

In a child's voice: "No. He's a nice guy though. Drives a good car."

He picks his causes from "gut feeling" and experience. He has watched as acquired immune deficiency syndrome struck his friends, a generation of performing artists. "It was everybody — choreographers, designers, everything, gone," he said.

He is proud of a "Saturday Night Live" bit he did on condoms.

"I was trying to reach people other than people who know about them, trying to reach 14 year olds: 'It's a balloon. I know, it's difficult. (blowing sound) Use it. Inflate it.

Put it on. It's a bathing cap of love. Don't be afraid.' 'Uh, well, I'll lose my sensitivity.' 'Yeah, you're real sensitive. SLAP! Wake up! Wise up, Sparkie!'"

Homelessness, too, is an issue he has observed personally. Most recently, while in New York to perform in Lincoln Center's production of "Waiting for Godot," he was stopped by panhandlers each night on the way to the theater.

"New York looks like Bombay," he said. "People are stepping over other people. Two people froze to death last night. You go to Grand Central Station and people are stacked like cord wood. People are stepping over them, and there's (Mayor Edward) Koch, kind of like Mayor (Elmer) Fudd, saying, 'I feel like de pwabwem will go away uhhhhhh.'"

He is shaken by the city shelters. "For me, the most horrifying thing is that there are children. You can't not be moved when you see a child in these shelters, when they're living in these big, open dorms," he said.

Children play an important role in Williams' thinking. He traces his involvement in causes to the birth of his son, Zachary, nearly six years ago. Fatherhood, he says, "connects you immediately with everything."

"I want the world to be at least slightly better for him, to make it a little bit better so that he will not have to live underground with a two-headed dog," Williams said.

He uses comedy, he said, "to lash out, to cut through things — to cut through the illusion of things, that everything is all right."

This is not always well received. Some audiences balk at political humor, and "they'll look like a deer in the headlights of a Peterbilt (farm equipment)."

Williams says there are few things that do not lend themselves to comedy.

"Part of being a comic is that you're forced to laugh at everything," he says. "It makes it difficult to live with one. ... There is dark humor, too. And everybody has

He tries to avoid cruelty — a line he admits to having crossed more than once. He describes a "bad comic-good comic" battle within.

"That's cruel, that's unnecessarily cruel," the good comic says.

"Yeah, but it's funny. Yeah, it's cruel, but it's REAL funny," says the bad comic.

"Yeah, but ya gotta laugh. Go with it. Don't be afraid!"

"No, no, no."

"Oh, shut up."

Then, says Robin Williams, the middle mind says: "Yeah, it's funny."

Stations Serve Blind Listeners With Volunteers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — The hottest shows on radio station RICB-FM are "The Inquirer" and the "Daily News."

The "Shoppers Guide Program," featuring supermarket specials, also is a biggie. And the talk show lines jam up anytime the guest is an ophthalmologist.

It's one of the largest, broadcasting 17 to 19 hours daily.

From downtown Philadelphia, the station reaches south to Maryland and north to Allentown, Pa., and has about 3,200 listeners.

The prime mission of the half-dozen paid staffers and 150 volunteers is reading newspapers, magazines and books to people who cannot read for themselves.

"Of course, visually impaired people can listen to ... other stations for news," says George Keil, station operations manager who also is blind, "but it's not the same as reading a newspaper. You miss a lot. You feel out of the mainstream of what's happening."

For two hours every morning, The Inquirer is read. Two hours each evening is spent on Philadelphia's other major daily, the Daily News. Listeners who pay $15 a year for a special receiver get a bit of everything — local and national news, horoscopes and columnists.

There are also programs devoted to reading neighborhood and suburban news and best-selling books and programs on business, sports and computers.

Coffee Sales Are Perking Right Along

Consumption Has Dropped But Specialty Sales Are Up

By Jonathan Susskind
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

"This little bean is the source of happiness and wit," the Englishman William Harvey remarked in an ode to coffee more than 300 years ago.

"And profit," he might have added today.

While consumption of coffee per person has dropped over the past 25 years, sales of specialty coffees — flavored beans and exotic varieties grown in 60 nations from Costa Rica to the Celebes Islands — are perking right along.

Only five years ago, gourmet coffee sales totaled about 2 percent of the market, but now the figure is somewhere between 7 percent and 10 percent, Gourmet Retailer magazine reported recently. With growth rates of 15 percent to 25 percent a year, specialty coffees could capture one-fifth of all coffee sales sometime in the next decade, the magazine said.

Why this caffeine-charged sales spurt? The same reasons that have driven the growth in many areas of the specialty foods trade — the adventurous American palate and the desire for all kinds of high-quality products. Add to that the growing-up of a generation that was weaned on soft drinks and is now searching for more adult (but still sweet and flavorful) beverages.

At coffee stores, department stores and gourmet shops, and even in many supermarkets, you can buy beans or ground coffee from Hawaii, Honduras, Ethiopia, Ecuador, even China, each with its own distinctive color, aroma, flavor and degree of "texture," the smoothness or robustness of the taste.

Buy a quarter pound of several varieties and prepare each separately after your next dinner party, serving in small coffee or demitasse cups so everyone can taste the different brews.

If you are trying these coffees for the first time, generally they should be served on their own — with milk, cream or sugar if desired, but without any gussying up from liqueurs or other flavorings, so that you can appreciate their subtle qualities.

Coffees flavored with anything from almond extract to raspberries also are in vogue. Their tastes, while not usually sweet, complement and contrast with sweet desserts quite well; try raspberry coffee with chocolate pie or vanilla coffee with orange pound cake.

Many of these coffees bear the taste of alcoholic beverages, such as Grand Marnier or Amaretto, which can be enhanced with the addition of those liqueurs or left as is for non-drinkers.

Roasters sometimes flavor coffee with the addition of liquid extracts that are absorbed by the open pores of warm, freshly roasted beans. Sometimes they instead use dry spices, nuts, fruit peels or powders, which persist feel cloud the ground coffee when it is brewed.

But if you don't buy already flavored coffee, it is easy enough to add flavors yourself during brewing.

Cinnamon is a favorite paired with coffee, but because its flavor is strong and unmistakable be careful — only ½ teaspoon per pot should be enough. Many people think cinnamon in coffee is better in combination with other flavors, such as vanilla or orange.

For cardamom coffee, put 3 whole pods per cup over the grounds. For anise coffee, use ½ teaspoon ground anise seed. For orange coffee, strip a 3- to 4-inch piece of zest — the colored part without the white bitter pith — from a clean orange and mix in with the grounds. For vanilla coffee, use a 2- to 3-inch segment of split vanilla bean.

Some of the many liqueurs and cordials that pair well with coffee are Cognac, Tia Maria, Kahlua, Grand Marnier, Sambuca, Frangelico, Vandermint, Anisette and Creme de Cacao. But if you are concerned about serving alcohol to guests, you can generally substitute extracts and flavorings. Many do contain large amount of alcohol by volume, but much less is needed because their flavors are stronger. However, because the strengths of the extracts may vary from brand to brand and because no two coffee brewers make the same strength, it is best to experiment before serving.

In the recipes that follow and other coffee drink recipes, the term "extra-strength coffee" means coffee brewed using 2 tablespoons of ground coffee (1 Approved Coffee Measure) to 4 ounces of water. The term "double-strength coffee" means coffee brewed using 4 tablespoons of coffee (2 Approved Coffee Measures) to 6 ounces of water. "Regular-strength coffee" is made with 2 tablespoons of coffee to 6 ounces of water.

The spiked brew with which people are most familiar is Irish Coffee, a combination of coffee, whiskey, sugar and cream. But making it the proper way is not as simple as mixing the ingredients. The sugar should be partly dissolved in the whiskey before adding the coffee. The glasses should be warmed. And the coffee is meant to be sipped through a head of cream that has been whipped but is not so stiff that it sticks to your nose.

This drink is worth the trouble, especially on a cold night in front of a warm fire. The recipe is from "The White House Family Cookbook" by Henry Haller (Random House).

IRISH COFFEE

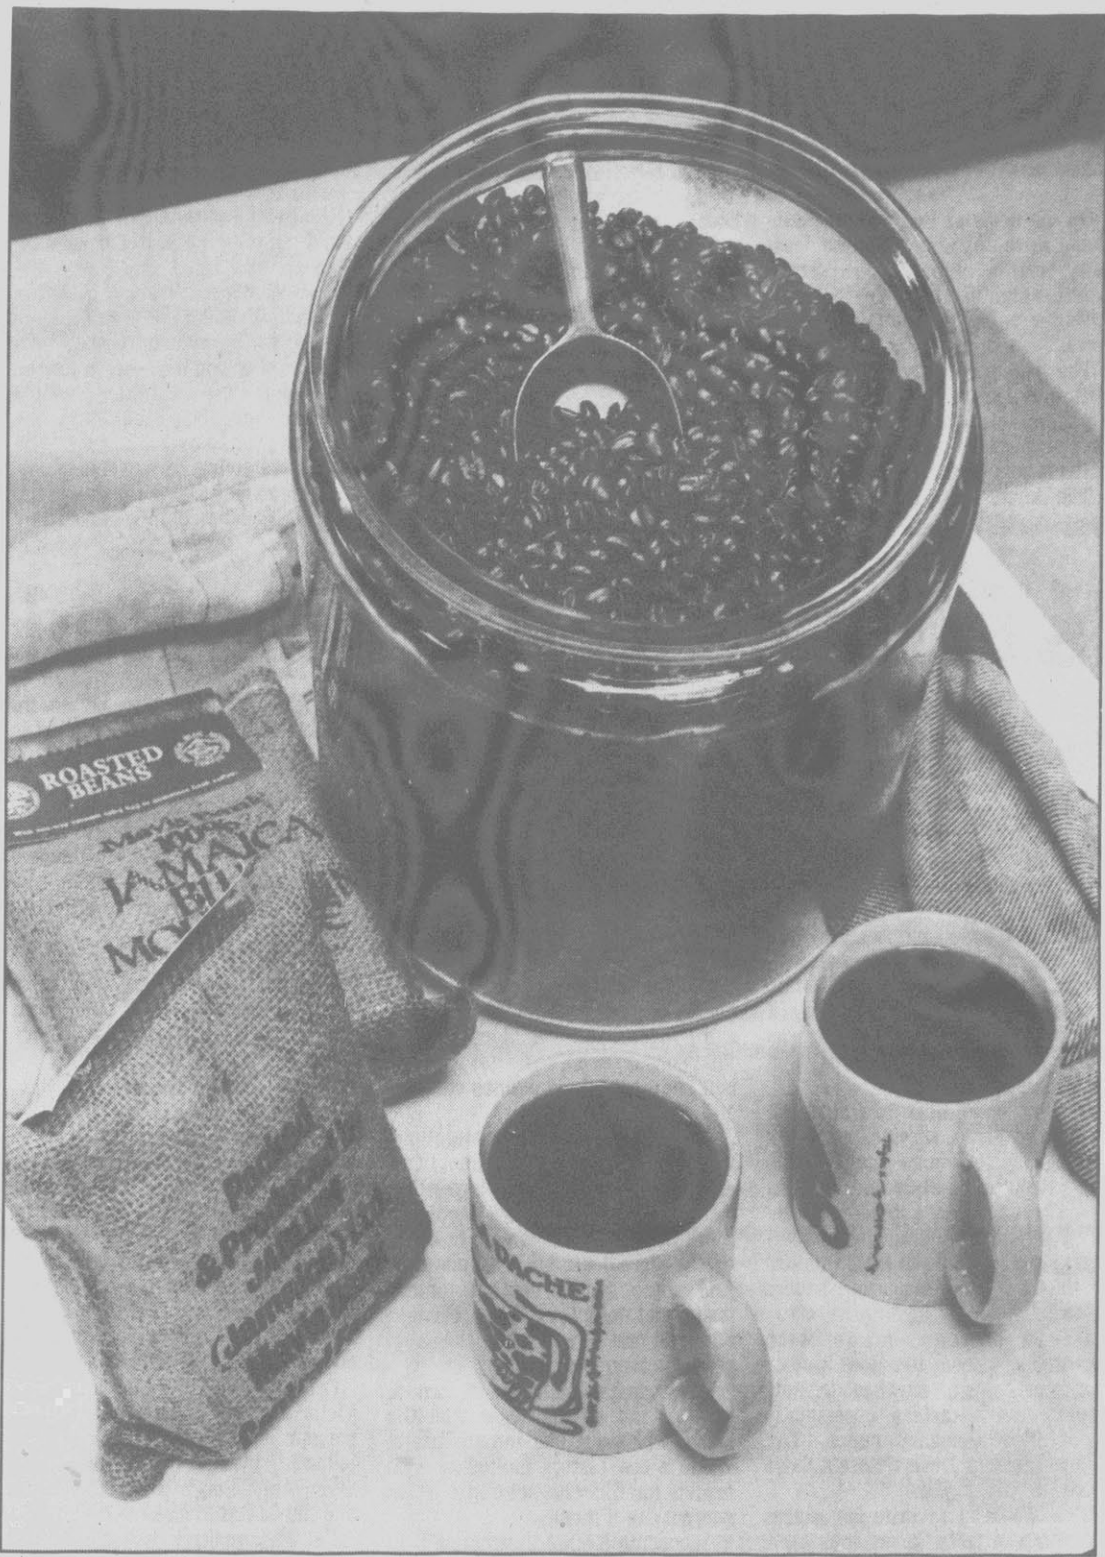

- 6 tbsps. heavy cream
- 4 small sugar cubes
- ½ cup Irish whiskey
- 3 cups regular-strength hot black coffee

Whip cream until thickened but not stiff and chill. Warm 4 Irish coffee mugs by rinsing in very hot water; dry thoroughly. Place 1 sugar cube and 2 tablespoons whiskey in each warm glass. Use the back of a spoon to crush each cube against the side of the mug. Pour ¾ cup hot coffee into each glass. Slowly pour thickened cream over the back of a spoon held just above the coffee. The cream should spread evenly over the top and fill the mug to the brim. Do not stir. Serves four. Serve at once.

The following is from "The Book of Coffee & Tea" (St. Martin's).

Americans may be drinking less coffee, but they are snapping up varieties grown in about 60 nations, pushing gourmet coffee sales from about 2 percent of the market to between 7 and 10 percent. The American palate, experts say, has gotten more adventuresome.

How To Brew The Perfect Pot Of Coffee

By Jonathan Susskind
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

1. Use fresh coffee, preferably whole beans ground just before brewing. Store bean and ground coffee in cans or heavy plastic bags in the freezer or refrigerator. Ground coffee keeps well for about one week, whole beans one month. After that, flavor deterioration begins, even at low temperatures.
2. The best brewing methods are, in order, drip, vacuum and percolation. Percolation boils coffee and extracts bitter flavors, but if you must use it, never brew less than three-quarters of the pot capacity or coffee will be weak.

3. Use the right grind for your method of coffee preparation.

4. Use fresh cold water, never hot water. Chemically softened and distilled water are not recommended.

5. In drip and vacuum methods, water should be boiled briefly and then removed from the heat. Brewing water should be between 185 degrees and 205 degrees, not boiling (212 degrees).

6. Use 2 level tablespoons of coffee to ¾ cup water for each cup of regular-strength coffee, 3 tablespoons to ¾ cup water for extra-strength coffee, 2 tablespoons to ¾ cup water for double-strength coffee.

7. With making coffee by the drip process, do not "run it through again" to extract more flavor; that causes bitterness.

8. Serve coffee as soon as it is made because flavor loss starts within minutes. Keep coffee on a warmer no more than 30 minutes or in a vacuum carafe up to an hour. Reheating or boiling coffee will change flavor.

9. Brush or wipe old ground from coffee grinders and clean coffee makers after each use with mild detergent or baking soda. Once a month, clean the coffee maker.

10. Freeze leftover coffee in ice cube trays for use in iced coffee.

- ½ cup firmly packed brown sugar
- ¼ tsp. each ground cinnamon, nutmeg, allspice and cloves

4 ½ cups of fresh hot extra-strength coffee

- ¾ cup rum
- ¾ cup light cream

Lemon and orange peel twists

Cream the butter and brown sugar. Blend in the spices. Add the hot coffee, followed by the rum and cream. Serve the grog in mugs, garnished with lemon and orange peel twists. Serves four.

The following recipe is from "The L.L. Bean Book of New England Cookery." Do not use try using a "pancake syrup" — real maple syrup is a must.

MAPLE COFFEE

- 8 cups regular-strength hot black coffee

- ½ cup maple syrup
- 8 cloves
- 1 stick cinnamon
- 8 whole allspice berries
- 8 tbsps. heavy cream
- 2 to 3 tbsps. confectioners' sugar
- ½ to 1 tsp. vanilla extract

Strain the coffee and pour it into a large saucepan with the maple syrup and spices. Heat the coffee to the barest simmer — it should do no more than "smile" — and keep it at this temperature for about 15 minutes. Combine the heavy cream with the confectioners' sugar and vanilla, and whip until peaks form. Strain the simmering coffee into demitasse cups or mugs, and top each with whipped cream. Serves eight.

The following two recipes are from the Coffee Development Group.

CAFE MEXICANO

- 4 tbsps. chocolate syrup
- ½ cup heavy cream

- ¾ tsp. cinnamon
- ¼ tsp. nutmeg
- 1 tsp. sugar

1 ½ cups extra-strength hot black coffee

Put 1 teaspoon chocolate syrup into each of 4 8-ounce cups. Combine cream, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon, nutmeg and sugar. Whip. Stir remaining ½ teaspoon cinnamon into hot coffee. Pour coffee into cups. Stir to blend with syrup. Top with whipped cream. Serves four.

CAFE DANTE

- 1 orange slice
- Hot chocolate
- Hot coffee
- Sweetened whipped cream

Grated orange peel or cinnamon
Place the orange slice in a mug. Add equal amounts of hot chocolate and hot coffee. Top with whipped cream and sprinkle with orange peel or cinnamon. Serves four.

The following recipe is from the Coffee Beanery, an Illinois-based chain of coffee stores.

COFFEE FRAPPE

- ½ cup brewed espresso
- ½ cup whole milk or half-and-half
- 1 tsp. sugar
- 1 drop vanilla
- Whipped cream, optional

Pour espresso into blender with milk or half-and-half. Add sugar and vanilla. Mix 30 seconds at maximum speed. Pour into demitasse cups. Add optional dollop of whipped cream. Four servings.

T-J Diet An Unbalanced Approach Losing Weight

Q. I gained a few pounds over the holidays and my co-worker gave me this diet guaranteeing I would lose 10 to 17 pounds in one week. He wants to wager on who will lose the most. Will the T-J Miracle soup really work? T.T., Greenville.

A. Everyone has been talking about dieting and exercise after the holidays. I began to think I was wearing a sign that said, "Tell me about your holiday weight gain." Let's hope all those confessions turn into safe actions.

The T-J diet was copied for me by five different people. It has no name, but I think everyone in town must now have a copy. The instructions tell you to eat fruit one day, all vegetables another day, a combination of fruits and vegetables one day, bananas and skim milk on the fourth day, beef and tomatoes the next day, beef and vegetables one day, and brown rice, fruit juice and vegetables the last day. The recipe for T-J Miracle soup is included.

I try to find some good in most diets, even those I don't like to recommend. There are two good things about this diet. First, I doubt you could follow it for seven days. That's good because it is not safe. Secondly, no one seems to be getting rich from this diet. This is not an effective diet to lose the fat you may have gained over the holidays. You may lose 10 to 17 pounds of water however. It says that you "will feel like a million in only 7 days." But, most of you will feel tired, irritable and ready to devour everything you see by the fourth day.

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

There are no reports that prove eating specific foods together, like beef and tomatoes, will magically make pounds shed. Oh yes, if you follow the plan, you will probably have gastric upset, and perhaps severe diarrhea. It says T-J Miracle soup has no calories, but we calculated that one recipe does contain about 600.

The nutrient content of the week's plan is unbalanced and may contribute to fatigue rather than abundant energy. If you overload your system with one specific food or nutrient, you can throw off your body's balance.

Rather than diet this way, why don't you join a class to learn about good eating habits and weight control. It's great that Addie Gore and the local Agricultural Extension Service is having a Noonlighting weight group. It's a successful program designed at N.C. State University and used in many other North Carolina counties. Other weight classes open to the public are offered at the Family Practice Center and Greenville Aquatics and Fitness Center. Many employers, too, are offering weight control classes. Watch for the class that best meets your schedule.

In the meantime, I want to repeat guidelines to assess the safety and effectiveness of a diet. Does it meet your nutritional needs while lowering calories; are foods, not pills or supplements, the basis of the diet; are forbidden foods kept at a minimum; is promised weight loss no more than 1 to 2 pounds per week; does it emphasize portion control; does it contain a sensible balance of protein, carbohydrate and fat; can you afford the diet; are healthful snacks allowed; is exercise a part of the diet; does the diet plan suggest you check with your family doctor; can you follow the diet for a long time (are you learning to eat for the rest of your life), and is the diet plan easy to follow whether at home or away.

The more "yes" answers you get, the more likely the diet is good.

Chip-Tasting 'Experts' Say The Blues Are Best

By Caroline E. Mayer
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

A chip is more than a dipper. It's a taste and texture unto itself.

So what do chip veterans — the weaned-on-Fritos, must-have-something-crunchy crowd — choose as their favorite tortilla chip?

Believe it or not, a group of self-declared junk-food addicts selected a health-food brand — Bearitos, made of organically grown corn and sea salt and available almost solely in health-food stores — as the top-notch brand.

In a blind taste test of 14 different traditional tortilla chips, Washington Post sports writers (certainly experts on what to munch during gripping games) unknowingly kept returning to Bearitos as the best-tasting chip.

"Balanced, good to eat during a tight game," declared self-declared chip expert Michael Wilbon after repeatedly sampling Bearitos between sips of cola.

But all is not lost to junk-food addicts. Three different chips manufactured by Frito-Lay Inc. — the nation's leading purveyor of snack foods — were close runners-up.

On the heels of Bearitos was Santitas, Frito-Lay's newest and least salty tortilla chip. Tasters scored Santitas high for its nice corn flavor, with one calling it the "chip of the week."

The older and more ubiquitous Frito-Lay brands of Doritos and Tostitos won third and fourth place, receiving an above-average rating of the 14 yellow corn chips tasted.

The loser, by far, was also the most expensive: Pecos Valley, a chip found at specialty-food stores at the price of $4.59 a pound. The other chips ranged in price from $1.90 to $3.50 a pound. In spite of the high price, tasters declared Pecos Valley "blah," "flat" and "too thick."

Also tested were two different brands of blue chips. Although one brand — Bearitos again — scored well in terms of flavor, the testers all said they would not serve them because of looks.

"Corn chips should not be blue under any circumstances," said one tester, obviously not a lover of trendy Southwestern fare. "Wouldn't they cause the nacho sauce to turn green and the salsa to turn purple?" he added.

Another chip fanatic compared the blue chips to "dead leaves. No one would eat them."

The credentials of the nacho-nibblers are beyond compare. As Wilbon noted, "Sportswriters are notorious junk-food eaters. When you are in the stadium boxes covering games, all the boxes have chips in them. You end up eating all of them — it's like dinner."

The testers sampled only tortilla chips with the traditional corn flavor. Flavored nachos were ruled out because they would mask the true corn taste.

For the most part, all the chips tested got high marks for crispness, although two stood out above the others: Snyder's of Hanover Tortilla Chips and Wyandot Tortilla Chips.

As for taste, however, there was a wide range of opinion — even for the same chip. For example, Tostitos was the only chip that won the highest rating in overall flavor, with two testers giving it an excellent rating. "Some chip!" one fan called the Tostito. No other chip received any excellent votes by testers, although many won votes for being very good. On the other hand, Tostitos also received one unacceptable rating and was criticized by several tasters for being either too bland or too oily.

Also a matter of taste, so to speak, was the shape of the chips. Some fastidious chip addicts automatically downgraded round chips, because they felt they looked mass-produced and therefore couldn't be as good as some of the other chips.

What did the standouts — Bearitos and Santitas — have in common besides the traditional triangular shape? Less salt.

Standouts: Bearitos Tortilla Chips, Santitas Lightly Salted Restaurant Style Tortilla Chips.

Below average: MOCTEC Brand Tortilla Chips, Old El Paso Nachips, Suncheros Original Tortilla Chips and Wyandot Tortilla Chips.

Unacceptable: Pecos Valley Spice Co. All Natural Tostadas. Of the blue-corn chips, Bearitos Blue Corn Tortilla Chips received high marks for flavor, while Blue Heaven Blue Corn Chips were criticized for being "tasteless," "way too salty" and "too thin and brittle."

Frito-Lay planned to launch two new Doritos ads during the Super Bowl this year. After all, Cobb notes, $1 billion of the 25-year-old Doritos brand is sold a year, making it second biggest selling dry-goods grocery item sold in America, just behind Campbell's soup.

That's a lot of chips!

...But Salsa Fans Go For The Red

By Carole Sugarman
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

We chose a chip, now we needed a dip. So the day after our tortilla-chip tasting, we gathered a group of self-styled salsa experts: Tex-Mex fans with fiery eyes and flame-resistant tongues.

The Washington Post newsroom volunteers blind-tasted more than two dozen commercially available bottled salsas, using Bearitos — the winning chip — as their dipper.

The tasting began with a sampling of six mild salsas (for those who prefer calm in their lives) and then moved on to the big time, a sampling of 21 hot salsas. Skipped over were the mediums, since not all companies make "medium" and several retailers reported "hots" as their best-sellers.

Tasters were eager — at least at first — to taste the hot salsas. Their fiery eyes soon turned teary and their iron tongues turned limp, but supplied with plenty of ice water, they behaved like true caballeros.

The most popular hot sauces were generally higher-priced specialty brands not commonly available at supermarkets. D.L. Jardine's Special Edition Texacante Medium Hot, made by a Texas company, and Simpson's were awarded top honors.

(D.L. Jardine's doesn't make a "hot" sauce — only "medium hot" and "extra hot.")

Tasters liked the two sauces because they tasted more than just hot. "Interesting balance," "hot and flavorful," "bright tasting," were typical of the comments made about both salsas.

The most expensive sauce sampled, Desert Rose (a thick sauce with the color and consistency of tomato paste) rated among the next rung of sauces. Tied with Desert Rose was Enrico's, a health-food brand, and Shotgun Willie's.

But you don't have to traipse all over town for a serviceable salsa. Among the top nine salsas, Chi-Chi's Restaurant Style and Hot Cha Cha Texas Salsa are more commonly available in standard supermarkets. Chi-Chi's, in fact, was one of the two least expensive sauces tasted.

Green salsas, made with tomatillos, green tomatoes and/or jalapenos, were only moderately popular, and tasters consistently noted their vinegary punch. Two tasters likened Desert Rose's Salsa Verde to "pickle relish."

The two least favorite hot sauces were Tree of Life Salsa, an organic product, and Cattlebaron's Hot Picante Salsa from Dallas.

Two tasters were perplexed with

Tree of Life: "What's wrong with it?" "Has something odd in it, can't place the flavor." And although Cattlebaron is made from a host of fresh ingredients, several tasters faulted the product for either tasting like "soap," "Worcestershire sauce" or "dead ketchup."

In fact, when choosing among salsas, you won't learn much about the product from the ingredients list. Bottled salsas, which generally have a canned taste, contain much the same ingredients: tomatoes, onions, jalapenos, garlic, vinegar, green bell peppers and sometimes carrots, cilantro or water.

The differences in formulations and taste depend on the amount of each ingredient. Less expensive salsas, for example, tend to contain more water and less tomato or other costly ingredients such as cilantro. And some salsas contain tomato paste, not tomatoes. Pace Picante Sauce is one, even though the label reads "tomatoes."

But even the inclusion of tomato paste is not an indication that the sauce will taste like tomato paste. While a few tasters faulted several brands for this characteristic, Pace was not one of them.

According to Dan Jardine of D.L. Jardine's, "Someone developing a recipe could use a combination of tomatoes and tomato paste and end up with a good recipe."

Like other manufacturers, Jardine uses fresh tomatoes when they are in season and canned when they are not and must keep close tabs on the jalapenos' heat, which can vary substantially depending on where and when they are grown.

For quality control, the company employs two jalapeno tasters — one who likes mild salsas, the other hot. Aside from its own label, Jardine's makes, among other brands, Shotgun Willie's and Williams-Sonoma, both of which rated among the top salsas in our tasting.

One ingredient that may produce a noticeable difference in taste is food starch used to thicken the mixture, which can result in a gluey consistency. Of the top nine salsas, only one — Casa Fiesta — contains a thickener.

Appearance may also be an indicator of taste, at least according to one taster. "What looks good is good," he observed, after years of preparing homemade salsa. "Bright colors mean bright flavors. Dead red or green means dull flavor." And "a whole lot of dull colors," he concluded, "means cognitive dissonance."

Since tasters were evenly divided between those who like their salsa hot and those who like it medium, it was not surprising that the choice for best "mild" was actually not very mild at all. Deep red and full of jalapeno flavor, El Rio Salsa Jalapena Mild had a substantial kick. It seemed mislabeled.

Reese Finer Foods, the company that makes the El Rio line, had no explanation for its spicy mild. "I haven't got an answer for that," said George Warner of Reese This is the same company that didn't know the difference between its Hot Inferno and Hot Superior sauces.)

Ortega's Thick and Chunky and La Victoria Chili Dip were the most popular of the truly mild milds, followed by Chi-Chi's Restaurant Style, Anna Lisa's Restaurant Style and Old El Paso Thick 'n Chunky.

Pet Inc., makers of Old El Paso, the market leader in the $300-million Mexican-sauce business, disputed the Post's taste-test results. In scientific taste panels with thousands of people, the firm's sauce always scores "well ahead of the competition," insisted Pet spokesperson Les Landes.

Mild and medium are the company's biggest East Coast sellers, and medium is its national best-seller. Old El Paso was not included in the hot competition.

In general, however, tasters found the mild sauces sweet, thin and too tomatoey — advantages or disadvantages depending on your point of view. For one macho taster, they were all "real nothings."

Here are the tasting results for hot salsas:

Standouts: D.L. Jardine's Special Edition Texacante Medium Hot Salsa and Dip, Simpson's Salsa, Enrico's Chunky Style, Shotgun Willie's Picante, Desert Rose Salsa, Williams-Sonoma Salsa, Hot Cha Cha Texas Salsa, Chi-Chi's Restaurant Style, Casa Fiesta Hot Picante Sauce.

Average: Pace Picante Sauce, Desert Rose Salsa Verde, La Victoria Salsa Victoria.

Below Average: El Rio Salsa Jalapena Green, Tree of Life Salsa, Cattlebaron Hot Picante Sauce.

And, here are the tasting results for mild salsas:

Mediterranean, Midwestern Cuisines Tops In '89

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Now's the time to pull out the crystal ball and make some predictions for 1989 food and taste trends.

Buzz words for 1989: Oat bran, Calcium, Boron, Beta carotene, Lemon grass, Fiber. Reduced-sugar fruit spreads, Hearty breakfasts, Cheesecakes, Yellow bell peppers, Cranberries, Real Cantonese cuisine, Honest food, Designer menus, Premium toasts.

FOOD & WINE magazine says one of the important innovations of 1989 and the 1990s will be the sous-vide process of warming precooked, never-frozen meals in plastic bags.

Unlike boil-in-a-bag products that are frozen, dried or chemically treated, sous-vide foods are cooked and placed in vacuum-sealed plastic bags that prevent deterioration for up to three weeks. They need only to be refrigerated and heated through for serving. Popular in France for the last 15 years, sous-vide foods will be available in gourmet stores in the United States for $2 to $6 a package, the magazine says.

New in appliances: steam ovens, such as those by Tefal, that cook rapidly and retain moisture, and extra-wide ovens (twice the width of the average model), such as those by Gaggenau, which are perfect for pizzas.

1989 promises to be the "year of the banana," according to FOOD & WINE magazine, with many new varieties making their appearance including manzanos, called apple bananas, from Central America; burros, chunky bananas with a square shape; red bananas, with a purplish skin and reddish tinge inside; and starchy plantains.

Beer drinkers will enjoy dry beer, introduced two years ago in Japan and now available in the United States. The brew is fermented longer, so more sugar is converted into alcohol, making for a drier tasting beer.

And for those who love coffee, the latest innovation is the "espresso pod," a kind of tea bag for coffee that is precisely measured, pressed and packaged to brew a perfectly intense cup of Italian coffee.

Among FOOD & WINE magazine's other predictions:

Mediterranean Cuisine: Mediterranean cuisine fits perfectly with today's low-cholesterol, high complex-carbohydrate diets. The emphasis is on olive oil, garlic, vegetables, legumes and seafood, instead of butter, cream and red meat.

Provençal: Look for classic dishes like bouillabaisse and olive-onion-anchovy pizza, which make use of black olives, garlic, tomatoes, capers, saffron, fish and fresh herbs.

Prosciutto: Look for genuine prosciutto from Italy. The federal government has lifted its ban on imported pork products, and lovers of the delicious cured ham from Parma will be able to enjoy the real thing.

Midwestern Cuisine: More folksy than New York, less radical than California, this down-home food is always served in generous portions and is exemplified by dishes such as corn chowder with country ham and Indian persimmon pudding with dried blueberries.

Anything Smoked: Anything smoked promises to be "hot" in 1989, including salmon, scallops, oysters, turkey, quail and venison.

Vegetables: We'll also see more jicamas in supermarkets, Asian pears year-round, cheaper shitake mushrooms grown in the United States, sun-dried tomatoes, fresh cilantro, sugar snap peas and "Champagne" grapes (actually a form of currant).

Executive chef Jon Jividen of Ridgewells Caterer of King of Prussia, Pa., includes "honest" food, "designer" menus and premium toasts among his taste-trend picks for 1989.

Jividen says "honest" food, also called comfort food, down-home cooking, or real food, is the result of the growing availability and appreciation of high quality produce, and the continuing movement away from overwhelmingly complicated ingredients.

"Honest" foods include fresh veal chops, pan-fried and lightly seasoned; homegrown vegetables, steamed and served with a little lemon or butter; homegrown herbs; and made-from-scratch biscuits.

"This is not steak mania," Jividen says. "It is rather a celebration of great ingredients prepared perfectly. There is elegance here, with simplicity."

Those who crave variety will find it in controlled "designer" menus with complimentary flavors unjumbled and separated into different courses or side dishes.

For example, instead of putting fennel into the veal marsala, Jividen says, veal marsala will be served as it was classically conceived, and the fennel will give flavor to the accompanying bread.

Other possibilities: a mesquite-grilled tenderloin will be left as is, with roasted peppers and corn bread on the side; pork roast may have caraway cabbage on the side; bouillabaisse will be complimented with a saffron pasta; fresh trout will have cashew bread and will be served with a wild mushroom timbale.

As for the trend toward premium toasts, Jividen says people are drinking less but better. Bars are being stocked with quality labels, and people are ordering cocktails with specific brand name liquors.

More requests are coming in for single malt scotch, ports, eau de vies, brandies, armagnacs and cognacs, he says, and people want to know the vintage of the wine.

Jividen says consumers are also very brand conscious with non-alcoholic beverages, asking by name for mineral and sparkling waters.

Fruit wines are becoming seasonal favorites — apple and pear in the fall, raspberry and blackberry in the summer, and plum in the winter.

Other taste trends noted by Jividen:

Breads: There is a demand for whole grain breads, and the average consumer has a well-developed vocabulary of special requests including oat bran, sesame, bulgur, classic rye, pumpkin, winter, summer and red wheat. Classic dinner rolls have shaped competition in crescents, biscuits, baguettes, brioches and petit pans. Cheeses and other savories are baked right in.

Pasta: Americans love pasta, and as the diversity in products has increased, so, too, has the demand. The selection now includes lemon pepper, tarragon, squid ink, onion, tricolored tortellini and fusilli, ravioli, rigatoni, lasagna and roulade sheets, spinach, egg and tomato cappellini and fettucine.

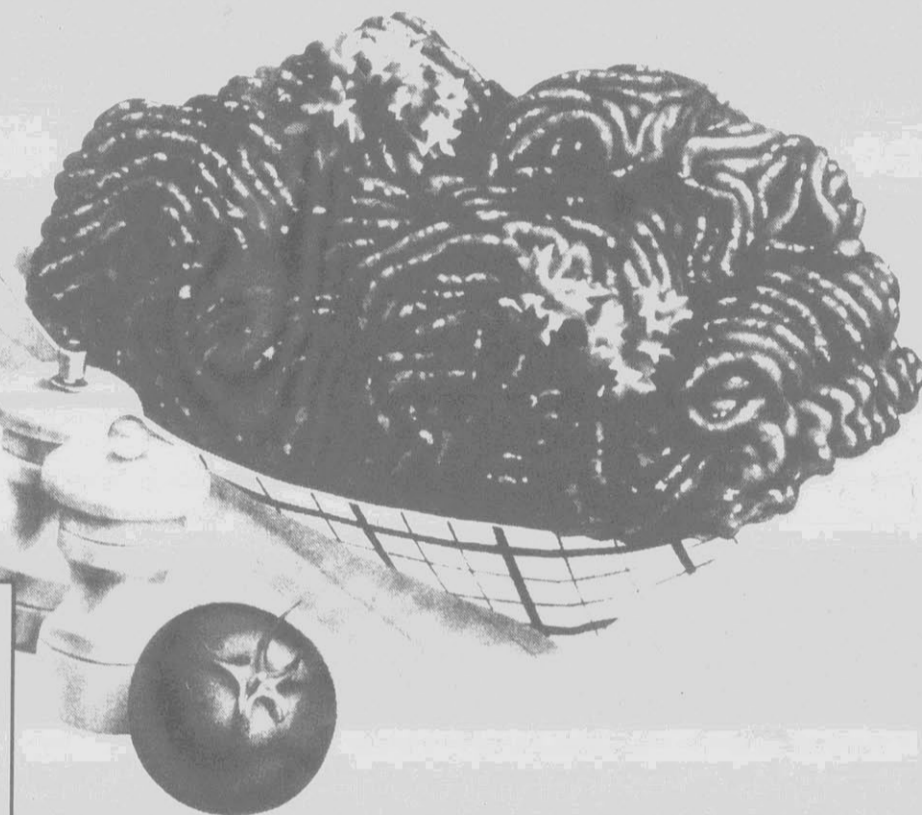

Turkey: Chicken won't wane in popularity, but turkey will gain as an equally inexpensive, versatile alternative. Expect surprises like turkey cutlets with plum brandy coulis; stuffed turkey legs with sausage and fresh herbs; and smoked turkey sandwiches with avocado, roasted peppers and olives.

A Few More Things From The Plate: Watch for more wild game including partridge, elk, reindeer, buffalo, rabbit and venison; greater use of edible flowers; more couscous, risotto, basmati and mixed bean dishes; "pepper-mania" including hot, sweet, red, yellow, green, purple, chocolate-colored, roasted, fried, steamed and stuffed; and new favorite international cuisines including African, Moroccan, Indian, Caribbean, Spanish and Soviet Georgian.
