Soviet Claims Castro Urged Khrushchev To Strike

By Michael Putzel
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — At the height of the Cuban missile crisis, Fidel Castro was convinced a U.S. invasion was imminent and urgently asked Soviet leader Nikita S. Khrushchev to launch an immediate nuclear strike against the United States, a key Soviet source reportedly told some American colleagues.

The Cuban leader was said to have sent his message to Khrushchev after spending the night of Oct. 26, 1962 in the bomb shelter of the Soviet embassy in Havana, so convinced was he that war was about to break out.

Castro supposedly told Khrushchev the invasion would come within 48 hours.

The account from the Soviet source was relayed by Pierre Salinger, who was President Kennedy's press secretary at the time of the 1962 crisis. It came from a weekend meeting in Moscow of U.S., Soviet and Cuban participants and scholars who have studied the world's brush with nuclear war 26 years ago.

Salinger would not identify the Soviet official, who was said to have imparted the information in a private conversation, and the account was later denied by at least two Soviets who took part in the conference.

Among the revelations for Americans attending the session was a Soviet general's disclosure that 20 missiles and warheads — which he said constituted one-third of his country's nuclear arsenal at the time — were on Cuba at the time. However, he and another Soviet official said the warheads had not

Crash In Alaska Kills 8 Soldiers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FAIRBANKS, Alaska — A C-130 crashed into a snowbank and split in two during a landing in a thick, icy fog, killing eight Canadian soldiers heading to a major U.S.-Canadian military exercise, officials said.

The Canadian Hercules C-130 was carrying eight crewmen and 10 special service paratroopers from Edmonton, Alberta, when it crashed just short of the runway at Fort Wainwright's airfield, said U.S. Army Capt. Jim Rodgers.

"The weather was quite bad," said Rodgers. At the time of the crash, he said, a thick, icy fog blanketed the runway and the temperature registered around 60 degrees below zero.

Six of the troops aboard were pronounced dead on arrival at Bassett Army Community Hospital on the base and two others died while receiving treatment at the hospital, Army Maj. Sherrel Mock said.

Three soldiers were in critical condition, one was listed as stable, and the remaining six had minor injuries but were being held for observation, Mock said.

After the crash, Mock said, Canadian officials canceled their forces' participation in the exercise, Brim Frost '89, and recalled remaining Canadian aircraft and servicemen.

Investigators, including explosives experts, examined the wreckage overnight, Mock said. The plane's cargo included training ammunition.

The four-engine Lockheed Corp. turbo-prop aircraft, one of the longest-running planes in continuous production, generally is not designed for the cold weather, said H. David Crowther, vice president of corporate communications in Calabasas, Calif.

Mayor: Citizens Panel Unnecessary

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Winterville Mayor E.C. Hines said he believes the town does not need a newly formed citizens' committee, but he has asked town officials to investigate the possibility of establishing such a group to hear grievances.

"I want to find out the purpose of it and what it's all about, before I go any further," Hines said today in a telephone interview. "Right now, the way it looks, we don't need it ... but, if we feel it's something good, then we'll put it before the board and discuss it anyway."

About 50 people upset at the recent firing of two of the town's police officers gathered Thursday and formed a seven-member committee to act as a buffer between the town's Board of Aldermen and residents.

Citizens or town employees who have complaints could come to the committee without the fear of being dismissed for voicing grievances, said Bill Dinkins of Winterville, who was elected chairman.

Dinkins and the committee asked Hines to schedule a meeting between the committee and the board, but Hines said today there will be no special meeting called. Instead, Hines said the board will address the issue at its next scheduled meeting Feb. 13.

Hines said the Board of Aldermen acts as the town's grievance committee and performs an adequate job, but Dinkins said he believes the town needs a new type of grievance committee.

"Something needs to be done. It's plain and simple. What they've got right now doesn't work," he said.

Party Lead By Former Nazi Grabs Seats

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BERLIN — A former Nazi SS soldier has shocked West Germans by leading a tiny right-wing extremist party to a strong showing in West Berlin state elections on a platform of ridding the city of foreigners.

Sunday's vote also will send two members of the Republican Party to the federal parliament next year, the first time that the extreme right will be represented in Bonn since 1953.

"Kick out the Nazis, foreigners stay," several thousand people chanted as they marched through West Berlin late Sunday to protest the Republican Party's success.

In the balloting, Chancellor Helmut Kohl's governing Christian Democrats lost their majority in West Berlin's legislature and said they now plan to form a governing coalition with the left-of-center Social Democrats. Kohl told the ARD television network that he was "alarmed" by the showing of the Republicans.

The 5-year-old Republican Party captured 11 seats in Sunday's voting for the 138-member West Berlin state legislature. West Berlin is considered a state under the West German system, but its representatives in the national parliament have limited powers.

Former Nazi SS soldier Franz Schoenhuber, the Republican leader, had led a campaign to oust Turks and other foreign workers from West Berlin. Foreigners make up about 10 percent of the city's population of 2 million.

West Germans often have expressed concern about the growing number of foreigners in their country, but Sunday's vote provided the most dramatic example in years of a major election success for a party with strong opposition to foreigners.

It was the first state election in West Germany since the October death of Governor Franz Josef Strauss of Bavaria, the arch-conservative who is credited with keeping smaller right-wing extremists groups in check. Many people had predicted his death would create the possibility for the smaller rightist groups to have a shot at success.

Schoenhuber, 66, told rallies during the election campaign that the Christian Democrats were "drifting

Personal Income Increased

By Nancy Benac
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Americans' personal income rose 0.9 percent in December after a slight decrease during the previous month, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said income rose $37.1 billion to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $4.2 trillion last month, following a decline of 0.2 percent in November and a 1.5 percent increase in October. November's decrease had been the first since January, when incomes dropped 0.4 percent.

Personal income for all of 1988 was up 7.5 percent from the previous year, the biggest increase since a 9.5 percent rise in 1984.

The December increase was bolstered by an increase in farm subsidy payments. Excluding those subsidies, personal income rose 0.8 percent in December and 0.5 percent in November, both fairly strong gains.

October's unusually large 1.5 percent jump in personal income also had been boosted by a surge in farm subsidy payments and bonuses to auto workers.

Personal consumption spending, which includes everything except interest payments on debt, rose 0.9 percent in December to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $3.34 trillion last month after a 0.3 percent gain a month earlier.

The biggest increase in spending last month was for durable goods — "big ticket" items expected to last three or more years. The category rose 4.1 percent, followed by a 0.7 percent increase in spending for services and a slight decrease in spending for non-durable goods.

Disposable, or after-tax income, declined 0.9 percent in December following a 0.3 percent decrease a month earlier that was the first

Mild Weather Fine With Most People

By Jerry Raynor
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The extended period of exceptionally warm, dry weather during the past two weeks has not caused too much concern for farmers in Pitt County, and the spring-like conditions have brought out large crowds to use area recreational facilities.

Mitch Smith, director of the Pitt County Agriculture Extension service, said "the number one concern at this time is that of tobacco farmers. Traditionally, farmers prepare seed beds a little on the early side. With this warm weather, and especially if it continues, tobacco plants will be ready for transplan-ting ahead of the normal dates of transplanting.

"Another thing, since it's been sort of dry along with being warm, farmers who have not taken action to provide the seed beds adequate moisture may find that the dryness tends to kill or retard the germination rate of the seed."

Altogether, Smith said, "tobacco seed beds need pretty close attention at this time."

In regard to local farming, home gardening and trees, Agriculture Extension Agent Sam Uzzell said, "farmers had excellent conditions to go ahead with land preparation prior to planting field crops. It's also an ideal time for tree reforestation.

One sector that could result in loss or damage, Uzzell said, "is that of flowering bulbs, ornamentals, trees and fruit trees. There's not too much, however, that can be done except to keep things watered well at this time."

"If this warm weather continues without a gradual cooling, chances are that the yield of peaches will be less. Peaches need some cold weather to adequately set the buds. If that doesn't happen, the yield can be less."

"For fruit trees and flowering bulbs and ornamental flowering shrubs," Uzzell said, "a sudden snap of very cold weather will be damaging. We can only hope that this will not happen."

Greenville, Boyd Lee, executive director of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, said "these past few days have really seen a tremendous upsurge in the use of all facilities."

"At River Park North, the weather, combined with two teacher work days last Thursday and Friday, resulted in capacity use of picnic tables along with long lines of visitors waiting to get into the science and nature center."

"Always, the first nice days of winter bring people out, but this year is the earliest I can remember this has happened. Not only at River Park North, but at the other parks

Mayor Feels Town Doesn't Need Panel

But, Dinkins said his role in forming the committee may decrease.

While he said he will most likely attend the board's regular meeting next week, he will allow the committee to vote and make its own decisions. If the aldermen do not agree with the requests, he said he will probably pull out of the committee.

"The only thing I know is: as a group ... we've about run all the course I want to take ...," he said. "We'll wait until voting time, and we'll do our thing then."

Because of the publicity of last Thursday's meeting and his participation, Dinkins said he received about 15 telephone calls Friday, one of which he felt was life-threatening.

Police Chief Lester Smith fired officers Harold Evans and Ralph Whitehurst on Jan. 21 for what he called disciplinary reasons. He said the two men and Officer Tony Summerlin went over his head and contacted aldermen when they had no authority to do so. They did not go through the proper channels to file the complaints, he has said.

Summerlin, who is still on the force, said he has been told he will be fired at the board's next meeting if he does not resign.

The officers claim they were fired because they refused to follow Smith's order not to ticket aldermen or their family members. The men also claim Smith ordered them to stop certain people anytime they were spotted driving in Winterville. Evans said he believes the practice constitutes harassment.

At the request of Pitt County District Attorney Tom Haigwood, the State Bureau of Investigation is conducting an inquiry into the allegations.

Hines and the town's three aldermen claim they knew of no policy giving them special treatment, but Hines has said tickets accomplish little or nothing in small towns. Smith has declined to comment pending the SBI investigation.

The main reason the town does not need a new citizens' committee, Hines said, is because the aldermen act as a grievance committee.

The group hears complaints concerning situations where employees and bosses cannot settle a disagreement. To get a grievance heard, Hines said an employee should ask his boss for permission to file a complaint.

When asked what an employee should do if a boss denies permission to file a grievance, Hines said, "That's something we've never had."

Hines said he does not believe the current system discourages employees from asking their bosses for permission to file a complaint or causes employees to fear being dismissed.

All three officers have said they voiced opposition to the ticket policy when Smith gave them the orders at a meeting Jan. 19.

Hines said he has asked Town Planner Alan Lilley to investigate whether citizens' committees exist in other towns and how they operate. Lilley also will try to speak with officials at the North Carolina Institute of Government in Chapel Hill, Hines said.

Several non-Winterville residents and members of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference attended the meeting Thursday, and some supported drastic action such as filing a federal lawsuit, firing town officials or boycotting area businesses.

Golden Frinks of Edenton, regional director of the SCLC, said he would lead a group to the streets to take over the town.

Such ideas have upset some Winterville residents who want to make sure the residents of the town decide the future of Winterville, Dinkins said.

Dinkins said he does not believe any officials need to be fired. If new officials are hired or elected, the town will probably continue to have the same problems, he said, unless an independent committee is formed to hear grievances.

He said he does not want to see a boycott or any more meetings with non-Winterville residents playing a large role.

The main complaint he has with the town, he said, is that Smith acted too quickly in firing the officers, who were on the standard one-year probationary period. The aldermen approved the firings last week.

New officers almost always will make mistakes, Dinkins said, and the town should work with new employees to build a quality, veteran police force.

Joel Steinberg Optimistic As Jury Resumes Deliberations

By Samuel Maul
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — For the first time since jurors began deliberating his fate a week ago, Joel Steinberg entered the courtroom smiling amid speculation that he had been acquitted of the most serious charge — murder — he faces in the death of his illegally adopted daughter Lisa. Steinberg, a disbarred lawyer, is accused of fatally beating the 6-year-old girl he and his live-in companion, Hedda Nussbaum, had illegally obtained at birth from a Long Island teen-ager and raised as their own. The death of Lisa Steinberg, raised in an upper-middle-class family, has focused a new light on the issue of child abuse, and the case has received international attention. Jurors were to begin their eighth day of deliberations today, amid speculation that they had acquitted Steinberg of second-degree murder and were considering the less serious charges of first- and second-degree manslaughter. Steinberg faces four charges: second-degree murder; first-degree manslaughter; second-degree manslaughter, and criminally negligent homicide. Steinberg grinned broadly as he entered the courtroom shortly before 8 p.m. Sunday, when the judge sent the jurors home for the evening.

Several hours earlier, the jury had sent out a note asking for clarification of the terms "intent" and "serious physical injury" — elements of manslaughter. State Supreme Court Justice Harold Rothwax had told jurors not to consider manslaughter unless they unanimously acquitted Steinberg of second-degree murder. Defense lawyer Ira London said Steinberg, 47, feels the jury is giving him "a fair shake. ... What we feel good about is that this has not been a lynching." Today, the jury was to rehear about two hours' worth of testimony they had requested concerning Steinberg's actions between the time Lisa was injured on Nov. 1, 1987, and the next morning, when Emergency Medical Service workers were called and took Lisa to a hospital, where she died several days later. That testimony includes statements from police officers, EMS workers and hospital employees who had testified about Steinberg's explanations for Lisa's condition and his reaction to her prognosis. The jury also specifically asked to rehear Ms. Nussbaum's testimony of what happened the night Lisa was injured. Among other things, Ms. Nussbaum testified that Steinberg told her he hit Lisa, which he has denied. The last note the jury sent out Sunday indicated that they were considering the possibility that there was no intent on Steinberg's part to cause injury to Lisa. Second-degree manslaughter does not include an element of intent, but is the reckless disregard of a substantial risk of death to another, such as Steinberg's delay in getting medical help for Lisa. First-degree manslaughter is applicable when a person intends to seriously injure someone and in the process, the victim dies.

'Jobs In Abundance'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush today predicted "jobs in abundance" in the years ahead and called for a new spirit of volunteerism in America. "John Kennedy challenged us to ask ourselves what we could do for our country," Bush said at a swearing-in ceremony for Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole. "And let us each day ask, what can I do for another person? How can I make someone else's load a little lighter?" Bush said government service "plays a vital role, but it must complement individual service." Bush began the second week of his presidency nursing the persistent cold that had forced him to cancel a Sunday visit to the presidential retreat at Camp David with House Speaker Jim Wright. "Pardon my voice," a hoarse

Bush told his audience at the Labor Department. He told the gathering, largely made up of Labor Department employees, "You look out for the working people of America." "I want this administration to be about working people," he added. "Part of that will be excellence and responsiveness in government. Part of that will be holding the line on taxes. And part of it will be a new volunteerism: people helping people." "...I think of the secretary who after a day at the office takes the time to volunteer and help a child in the neighborhood learn how to read," he said. With her husband, Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., at her side, Mrs. Dole picked up on Bush's theme of volunteerism and budget restraint.

Puppy Swallows Steak Knife

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BROOKSVILLE, Fla. — For a week, the owners of Pixie, a normally playful puppy, didn't know why she had slowed down and would whine anytime she was picked up. The answer came when a veterinarian removed the 7-inch long, serrated steak knife the dog had somehow swallowed.

"If I had known a knife was in her, I would have freaked," said owner Tony Strollo. The English bulldog-German shepherd mix was less than 2 months old and weighed just over 10 pounds when she wolfed down the knife, probably on Jan. 14. The knife apparently fell on the floor during a meal and nobody noticed. Strollo's wife, Barbara, said. No one, that is, except Pixie. Teeth marks found later on the knife testify to the fact the puppy gnawed at it before she swallowed it. Dr. Jo Ann Helm, a veterinarian, who found and surgically removed the utensil Jan. 21, said the knife lay neatly packaged down Pixie's throat, with the handle pushing down on the stomach. The first signs that something was wrong came when the pup tried to cough something up, but nothing happened. Then Pixie started acting funny. She couldn't coordinate her front legs, and she would give a tiny yelp when people picked her up, the Strollos said. A first trip to the vet revealed nothing. X-rays were taken on a return visit and clearly showed the knife. "Dogs swallow anything ... panty hose, balls, sticks," Ms. Helm said. "Just like a young human child, a puppy explores with its mouth."

Party Grabs Parliament Seats

Further and further to the left." The Republicans won 7.5 percent of the vote on Sunday, according to nearly complete official returns. The Christian Democrats won 38 percent of the vote and 55 seats, losing 12 seats from the last election four years ago. Christian Democratic Mayor Eberhard Diepgen's coalition partners, the Free Democrats, lost all 12 of their seats by failing to muster the 5 percent of the vote necessary for representation. The Social Democrats won 37 percent of the vote for 55 seats and the left-wing Alternative List party won 17 seats with a 12 percent showing, a gain of two seats. Diepgen said the Republicans' successful bid to enter the legislature "should not be allowed to cast the city and its residents in a false light." West German news media reacted with shock to the results in West Berlin.

The Frankfurt-based Hesse State Radio broadcast a special report today that which concluded that while the Republican Party showed far-rightist tendencies, it was far from the Nazi party that gained hold in Germany in the 1920s. The Republican Party was formed in 1983, and its previous best success was a 3 percent share of the votes in 1986 state elections in traditionally conservative Bavaria. Sunday's surprise success will send two Republican Party members to the federal parliament after national elections next year. West Berlin's 22-member delegation in the federal parliament can vote in committee but has very limited voting rights in full sessions. They will be the first right-wing extremists in the Bonn assembly since 1953. The German Reich Party had five members during the first West German legislature starting in 1949.

Just under 80 percent of West Berlin's voters cast ballots on Sunday, according to television forecasts, compared with 83.6 percent in 1985. West Berlin is a separate state of West Germany surrounded by East German territory. It was formed from Western zones of Berlin occupied by the Allied forces in World War II. Weather (Continued from A-1) including the Town Common, lots of people turned out for outdoor activities. 'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

A Package

All County Offices Are Squeezed

Don't stop with one, Pitt County. Go for the whole package.

Pitt needs a central government complex for all public offices, not just the agricultural concerns.

At a meeting Thursday the board agreed to look into funding an office building to house the county's now-scattered agriculture office. While the need to consolidate these concerns is indisputable, the county's office requirements extend far beyond this one aspect.

Every branch of county government is cramped, and many are fragmented, with offices scattered here and there. To address only the problems of agriculture would be short-sighted.

Just look at the facts. Pitt is already thousands of square feet short on office space. If current growth continues, and it should, the county needs 69,000 square feet of office space by 1993 to keep pace. Much of that expansion comes from a booming court system, where space is especially critical.

Also, offices are spread out across Greenville, inconvenient and confusing to taxpayers who use these public services. Agriculture is a good example. The Agricultural Extension Service is housed at the county office building on West Fifth Street. But the federal Agricultural Stabilization Service, Soil Conservation Service and the Farmer's Home Administration are downtown, several miles away from the Extension Service.

There are sound economic reasons to address the issue.

The rent paid on these facilities is expensive — $77,000 per year for agriculture offices alone. Utility bills are steep. Most rented offices aren't housed in modern, energy efficient buildings.

These cost factors, combined with the pressure vigorous growth continues to place on the county's services, make a long-term, all-encompassing approach to office planning the only feasible solution. The current deficiencies are the result of patching the holes — doing a little here and a little there to meet needs — instead of addressing the source of the difficulty.

That approach is no longer adequate and it is time for the county's leaders to recognize it.

Sure, it will cost money to plan and build a central office complex. But the long range return on this investment will be efficiency and improved services. Pitt can no longer afford not to plan for the future. It is time to devise a broad-reaching means of placing public services within the easy grasp of the taxpayers who fund them and use them.

And that means a centrally-located, modern government complex that consolidates all public offices. It doesn't mean building just an agriculture complex. That's simply more of the same tactics that placed the county in the current office space squeeze.

'Every branch of county government is cramped, and many are fragmented, with offices scattered here and there.'

WASHINGTON — My apartment blinks. It blinks in the morning and it blinks at night. It blinks when I'm away and can't do anything about it and it blinks when I'm home and I ought to be able to do something about it. The VCR blinks in green and the telephone answering machine blinks in red — the winking of electronic wiseguys who don't do what they're supposed to do but know I can't do anything about it.

With the VCR, I could do what a friend of mine does — cover the little light with cassette sleeves. It is far simpler than reading the instructions. With the answering machine, I don't know what to do. It blinks and winks and, often, feeds me messages from months ago. Sometimes I call the machine to get messages and instead of getting my recorded greeting, I hear a fragment of a message — "and please call me soon because it's important. Bye." Who? What's important? In the dark, the machine winks mockingly.

Molly Ivins, columnist for the Dallas Times-Herald, is an aficionado of the Miss America pageant. From time to time, she threatens to enter. In the talent category, she's said, she will program a VCR. Unless the contest is fixed, there's no question that Ivins should win. Such a talent is infinitely more valuable than throwing a baton into the air and I, for one, will be looking when she attempts it. God knows, I could not tape it.

My friends are an educated bunch, yet few of them can program a VCR. Some of them take a swipe at it. They set the machine to tape whole evenings of television, hoping they will get what they want. Having done that, sometimes with success, they then can't figure out how to turn off the machine. One friend's VCR goes on promptly at eight and quits at ten. It has been doing that for weeks. VCRs once programmed and then disconnected, blink the same time: Because of VCRs, the local time all across America is always 12:00.

I refer to these machines as human because they represent the ultimate in egalitarianism: We all now have a servant problem. Now we all can know what it is like to pay for help and receive nothing but problems. Of course, a machine's aunt cannot die (day off) and it cannot insist on taking off every government holiday. But the false promise is there — the suggestion that a burden will be lifted when, in fact, just another will be substituted.

Why don't you read the directions? I hear you ask. I have — just once. I will not read them again because I should not have to. I think that having programmed my VCR one time, I should always be able to do it. That, though, is not the case. Instead, just to tape a program I will never have the time to see anyway, I have to find the directions (no easy task) and them read them. Something that was supposed to save me time instead consumes it. It ain't right.

I had a car with so many little buttons on the radio that I couldn't figure out how to find a station. Some of the buttons seemed to do the same thing.

Richard Cohen

Hit one and the radio scanned. Hit another and it scanned. Punch the knob and it scanned. The radio also had an equalizer which had more lights than the wall of a missile center. I could never figure out what it did.

I have an answering machine at home. I have one in the office. I call one machine and wish it could call the other and tell it to shape up. Sometimes I get a computer call. In the old days, I was always able to hang up. Now I have to listen to the whole message just to get to the next message. In the future, an answering machine will fall for some salesman's spiel: When you get home, you'll find aluminum siding.

Codes clog my brain. I have one for the answering machine in the office, another for the one at home. There is a code for my car radio so I can take it out of the car and put it back in. I have one for the bank machine and still others for credit-card machines I pass in airports whose codes are lost

'Codes clog my brain. I have one for the answering machine in the office, another for the one at home. There is a code for my car radio so I can take it out of the car and put it back in. I have one for the bank machine and still others for credit-card machines I pass in airports whose codes are lost because I hid them in "the safe place" recommended by the company and now cannot remember where.'

because I hid them in "the safe place" recommended by the company and now cannot remember where. I have codes for all my frequent-flyer plans, and nightmares that I will give the bank machine the wrong code, cancel all my messages at home and blow up my car radio. My answering machine gives me messages that I return to other machines. In due course, my call is returned and my machine gets it: Electronic Ping Pong.

I do not want to go back to a simpler life. I will not stand in the way of progress. The various machines that sometimes bedevil me also make my life easier. This column, for instance, was written in Los Angeles on a portable computer. I love this little machine because it has made my life easier, and I know how to work this one.

Mid-'70s Banking 'Reform' Turns Into S&L Debacle

Donald Burns

The search for scapegoats over the thrift industry debacle has targeted current and previous federal and state regulators, greedy acquirers of insolvent thrifts, incompetent and-or criminal S&L managers, Congress and the president. While there certainly is enough blame to go around, nowhere does one see any references to what started the slide down: the banking industry "reforms" of the mid-1970s.

The modern savings-and-loan industry was created as a source of relatively cheap loans to enable the average person to own a home. The benefits of homeownership to the owner, the building industry, the building-trade unions and the scores of businesses that thrived on it are too obvious to describe at length. But it is important to understand the fundamental reasons the industry did such a good job for so long. In addition to account insurance by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., regulation by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the states, federal regulations prevented banks as well as S&Ls from paying market rates of interest on their deposits. This enabled S&Ls to offer mortgage loans at lower rates than would have been possible in a free market. In other words, predominantly older, well-to-do account holders subsidized mostly younger homeowner-borrowers.

In the wake of post-Vietnam inflation, short-term interest rates soared over 20 percent — consistently well above what banks and S&Ls were legally able to pay to most depositors. Billions flowed out of these financial intermediaries into direct market instruments, such as bonds and T-bills, and into money-market funds, which combined high rates and easy accessibility. When these funds were paying over 15 percent, little wonder that the smart money deserted the intermediaries, then paying little more than 5 percent to most depositors.

At the same time, Congress and the Carter administration came under increasing pressure to lift the ceilings on interest rates that could be paid to small accounts in banks and S&Ls. This pressure came significantly from the elderly, who often maintained substantial balances in federally insured accounts but could not qualify for the market rates being paid by banks to depositors with more than $100,000 in their accounts. Doctrinaire economists within and outside the administration added their voices, arguing that the "free market" should decide levels of interest rates. Controlling the rates paid by money-market accounts to ease the outflow from banking institutions was considered as a strategy and abandoned.

The sequel was predictable. Gradually interest ceilings were taken off banks and savings and loans. Banks, with sources of income (mainly short-term commercial loans) that could quickly adapt to their changing cost of funds, survived. Savings and loans, with long-term fixed-rate mortgages as their main asset base, had to change. Faced with paying higher interest or losing their depositors, they had to increase their income. Part of the problem was addressed by a gradual switch to variable-rate mortgage loans, which allowed their income from such loans to slowly and imperfectly track interest rates as they rose and fell. But eventually, S&Ls had to move away from what they knew — mortgage lending — and what justified their existence in the first place, into areas that offered higher returns faster.

Is it so surprising that these higher returns involved higher risk, made even riskier by the fact that the lenders were often not experienced in these types of loans?

Donald E. Burns is a former secretary of the California Business and Transportation Agency and assistant general counsel of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Penthouse Says Swaggart Recruited 2nd Woman For Sex Acts

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS — A stripper performed explicit sexual acts for Jimmy Swaggart while he was involved with a prostitute, Penthouse magazine says, but the television evangelist's attorney called the story a fabrication.

Catherine Mary Kampen said Swaggart gained her trust as a spiritual adviser, then emotionally manipulated her into acting out his sexual fantasies, the magazine said in its March issue.

"The whole thing's made up," Swaggart attorney's Phillip A. Wittman said Sunday.

Wittman said Swaggart would file a libel lawsuit, probably this week, against the men's magazine.

"Jimmy Swaggart doesn't even know Miss Kampen," said Wittman. "He's never met her, never seen her."

Wittman said Swaggart was returning home to Baton Rouge from a weekend crusade in Atlanta.

According to Penthouse, Swaggart approached Kampen, a homemaker and performer of striptease telegrams, at a roadside telephone in July 1987.

Kampen said Swaggart told her he could help her with her marriage and personal life, and promised to help her financially while demanding she perform sexual acts for him.

Like Debra Murphree, the prostitute whose account Penthouse published in July, Kampen claimed that Swaggart asked her to perform explicit sex acts while he watched.

Murphree said Swaggart wanted her 9-year-old daughter to watch them have sex; Kampen said the evangelist asked to have sex with her 13-year-old daughter.

Like Murphree, who said she was involved with Swaggart from October 1986 until October 1987, Kampen claimed she posed for Swaggart but kept her daughter away from him.

Unlike Murphree, who said she and Swaggart attempted to have sex one time, Kampen told the magazine she and Swaggart never had sex during their six-month relationship.

She said she asked him if he wanted to.

"And he said, 'Oh sure, but that would be cheating. What we're doing here is just playing — it's fun and games, it's not cheating. You understand that, don't you,'" Kampen quoted Swaggart as saying.

Wittmann said his law firm conducted its own investigation of the allegations after Penthouse asked about them more than a month ago.

"We advised Penthouse that in our view the story was a fabrication, and we were under the impression that they were not going to release the story," he said.

"They in fact had asked us for further information which we were in the process of assembling for them," said Wittmann, adding that he was shocked the story had been published.

Last February, Swaggart confessed that he had sinned against his church and his wife, but never gave specifics.

Murphree has said Swaggart was talking about her, but Kampen said she thought Swaggart was talking about her.

Swaggart was defrocked by the Assemblies of God in April because he disobeyed the Pentecostal denomination's order that he not preach for a year and returned to the pulpit three months later.

Press Aide James Brady Is Retiring

JAMES S. BRADY

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — James S. Brady, who remained on the government payroll as Ronald Reagan's press secretary for nearly eight years after being severely wounded in an assassination attempt, is retiring.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said this week that President Bush talked with Brady's wife, Sarah, about the former press secretary's retirement plans before his inauguration.

"At the end of the (Reagan) administration he and Sarah had put together a retirement program ... from a number of various outlets," Fitzwater said.

Brady, 48, who has held a variety of government jobs since coming to Washington in 1968 as a communications consultant to the House, is entitled to a government pension.

He was shot in the head on March 30, 1981, during an attempt on Reagan's life, and uses a wheelchair.

Reagan kept him in the title of press secretary and he continued to receive his salary of $89,500 per year as an assistant to the president.

He reported to the White House about one day a week to visit with associates, sign autographs and pose for pictures.

Deputy Press Secretary Larry Speakes became the chief White House spokesman with the title of principal deputy press secretary. When Speakes resigned in 1987, Fitzwater was named spokesman with the title of assistant to the president for press relations.

In announcing on Nov. 29 that he would retain Fitzwater as his spokesman, then-Vice President Bush restored to him the traditional title of press secretary.

Asked at that time whether Brady would have a role in the new administration, Fitzwater said, "I know the vice president is very interested in Jim and concerned about his well-being" and that Bush and his advisers "have some ideas of things they would like him to do."

When asked about this again on Monday, Fitzwater said that before his inauguration Bush "talked to Sarah about it, and so did I, and a number of people are interested in putting together whatever they would like to do."

"Let's just say we're talking to Jim and we'll see what can be worked out, but something that protects his retirement system in the planning that they have done privately," he said.

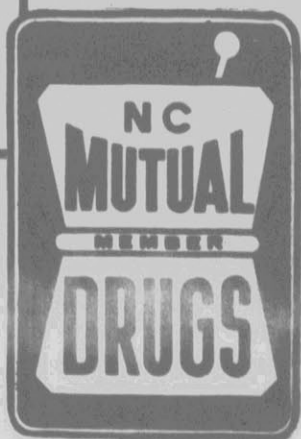

The White House press office said Mrs. Brady was not available to talk to a reporter about the retirement plans.

Educators' Views Differ On Pupil Assignments

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

While some North Carolina educators support Martin's proposal to give parents more say in where their children attend school, others say it will jeopardize 19 years of racial balance.

Around the nation, more and more experts say allowing parents to choose schools is the best way to desegregate schools. It breaks the link between neighborhood and school, they say, creating competition and higher-quality schools.

But it didn't work in Little Rock, Ark.

"It was phenomenally expensive and a bureaucratic nightmare," says schools Supt. George Cannon. "It was chaos."

The plan was supposed to create high-quality specialty schools that would lure whites back to a system that is more than 60 percent black. And it was supposed to painlessly desegregate schools in poor black neighborhoods where whites were loath to go.

But during the 1987-88 school year, about 1,000 white students left the 23,000-student system for private schools, mostly because they couldn't get the assignments they wanted. Eight inner-city elementary schools became "racially identifiable," or more than 80 percent black.

Beginning in September, pending the approval of U.S. District Judge Henry Woods, the Little Rock school system will revert to a new system of mandatory assignments after two years of controlled choice.

The new plan will desegregate schools through busing, and will reward integrated neighborhoods by keeping children in neighborhood schools. The plan won't eliminate the all-black schools, but it will give them double-funding to improve education quality.

"Little Rock is an anomaly," says Michael Alves, a Boston expert on controlled choice. "Little Rock is going backwards. It is dismantling choice, while everyone else is going forward and looking to choice."

But in Cambridge, Mass., giving parents a choice worked. The home of Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology has 9,000 public school students and one high school.

In 1979, Cambridge began a controlled-choice program that became the nation's model.

"Cambridge was an ideal setting to introduce innovation," says Michael Alves, a Boston expert on school choice.

Today, all schools reflect the racial balance of the community — 50 percent white, 35 percent black and 15 percent Asian and Hispanic. Test scores are higher, parents are more involved and 90 percent of the city's children attend public schools.

Before the program began, only about 75 percent attended public schools.

"It was a relatively painless way to desegregate," says Charles Glenn, executive director of the Massachusetts Office of Educational Equity.

Alves says choice is any program that allows parents to select a public school. But there are varying degrees.

In Minnesota, students may choose any school in the state. Cambridge, Mass., allows parents to choose any school in the district, within racial balance guidelines. In North Carolina, qualified students from around the state may apply to the N.C. School of Science and Math in Durham. Charlotte-Mecklenburg holds a lottery to fill the spaces in its seven optional schools and programs.

"Choice is becoming such a fireball," says Kim Moyer, a spokesman for the Education Commission of the States. "The theory behind it is the competition schools will face will help them improve. We've got the free market everywhere else in our life, why not put it in the schools. It can be good, and it can also be very dangerous if it's not developed to meet a state's or city's needs."

Right Or Wrong, Lawyer Ads Increase

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — Advertisements for lawyers used to be considered somewhat gauche, but attorneys are pitching their services in print, on television, radio and billboards these days — and direct mail could be next.

The State Bar, which licenses and disciplines lawyers, is considering relaxing advertising rules in the wake of a U.S. Supreme Court ruling last summer.

The proposed rule change would allow lawyers to send brochures or other advertisements directly to accident victims and other groups of people who might need legal services. Face-to-face solicitations still would be prohibited.

The proposed changes don't sit well with the N.C. Bar Association, a voluntary organization that provides educational programs for lawyers.

The group passed a resolution last year opposing efforts to expand or extend permissible areas of advertising, such as direct-mail solicitation.

The resolution concluded that advertising, "opposed by an overwhelming majority of lawyers," had eroded professionalism and was contrary to the best interests of the justice system.

"I'd just as soon see no advertising by lawyers, but that's my personal opinion," said Richard Thigpen Jr. of Charlotte, president of the state Bar Association. "But lawyer advertising is a fact."

Robert G. Baynes began to practice law after graduating from law school in 1964 during the days when a bold-face listing in the telephone book was controversial.

"We were educated in an era when the rules said, 'Thou shalt not advertise,'" said Baynes, a Greensboro lawyer and president of the State Bar.

Twenty-five years later, lawyers are pitching their services in the Yellow Pages and in newspapers, on television, radio and billboards. If there is a medium, lawyers are using it to get their names and messages out.

"LOSE 175 POUNDS FAST," says one lawyer's newspaper ad. "Uncontested Divorce — $65."

"BLUE LIGHT SPECIAL. Traffic & Criminal-District Court — $225."

In a 30-second TV spot, the announcer asks: "Have you been injured in an automobile accident? You may be entitled to money damages."

Don Griffis, a partner in a Winston-Salem-based advertising agency that developed a series of award-winning print ads for lawyers, estimated that 40 percent of all lawyers use some form of radio, TV, newspaper or billboard advertising.

Lawyer advertising began to blossom after 1977, when the U.S. Supreme Court told the bar that preventing lawyers from advertising in newspapers violated the Constitution. Then, in 1986, the Supreme Court extended the right to advertise to radio and television.

"What we really want to do is protect the public from the unscrupulous lawyer who would take advantage of families whose loved ones are the victims of a tragedy, such as an airplane crash," Thigpen said.

But many lawyers who advertise say it's strictly business.

William Horsley, a Greensboro lawyer specializing in personal injury and product liability cases, isn't arguing with success.

His firm ran 30-second spots on two Triad television stations last September and October. The goal was to increase name recognition and to find out how much business TV ads could bring.

"It works," said Horsley, a partner in Donaldson & Horsley. "We couldn't get any work done for the telephone ringing."

Because the ads were so successful, Horsley said his firm plans to set aside more money in this year's budget for advertising. "It's a six-figure amount," he said.

Both Horsley and Lewis estimate that 20 percent to 25 percent of their annual operating budgets will be spent on advertising this year.

Woman Dies In Fire

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — An 18-year-old woman died Sunday morning after a mobile home caught fire in a community off U.S. 401 south of Fayetteville, authorities said.

The body of Nicole Bub was found in a rear bedroom of the mobile home about 8:30 a.m., authorities said. The body was sent to Chapel Hill for autopsy, authorities said.

Two other occupants of the mobile home, Mrs. Bub's husband and her sister-in-law, escaped unharmed, authorities said.

The cause of the fire was not known Sunday night, authorities said. The fire is under investigation by the Cumberland County Sheriff's Department.

Members of the Lake Rim Volunteer Fire Department responded about 7:30 a.m. after a neighbor reported the fire, authorities said. The fire was first noticed in the living room area by neighbors, officials said.

Officer Injured

GASTONIA (AP) — A 5 1/2-year veteran of the Gastonia police force was listed in satisfactory condition after he was run over and dragged 43 feet by a van Saturday, officials say.

Robert N. Holland, 31, was being treated at Gaston Memorial Hospital for a shattered left leg.

Warren Tyron Jones, 21, of Rock Hill, S.C. was being held in the Gaston County Jail on charges of felonious hit and run, and one count of assault with a deadly weapon — the van — with intent to kill, inflicting serious injury.

He also has been charged with possession of stolen goods, two counts of assault with a deadly weapon and 11 traffic citations resulting from a high-speed chase that ended on Interstate 85 near Kings Mountain.

Rock Hill police have been searching for Jones since Nov. 25, 1988. Jones' driving violations charges are running a red light, four counts of running a stop sign, driving without a license, speeding to elude arrest, not stopping for police, driving while intoxicated, speeding and reckless endangerment.

Holland was injured soon after he and officer K.E. Shepard stopped to investigate a van which matched the description of a vehicle that had been stolen.

The driver apparently panicked when Holland approached the van and fled, said officer D.E. Toomey.

'Hate Crimes' Said Up In N. Carolina

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — There were at least 53 "hate crimes" in North Carolina during 1988, an increase over previous years, a Durham-based civil rights organization says.

The cases "include attacks against blacks, native Americans, Jews, homosexuals and white advocates or activists," said Mab Segrest of North Carolinians Against Racist and Religious Violence.

There were 48 reports in 1987, 40 in 1986 and 31 in 1985, she said.

Five anti-Semitic incidents occurred in North Carolina in 1988, after none in 1987, Ms. Segrest said. Three of those occurred in Rocky Mount.

She said that vandals broke stained-glass windows in a synagogue on Sept. 29 and that the next day someone disrupted a service by banging on the synagogue door. A car sped away when worshippers checked outside the building, she said. Vandals defaced the same synagogue Oct. 4 with anti-Semitic graffiti, she said.

Ms. Segrest said her group had borrowed a definition used by the California Racial Ethnic and Religious Task Force.

"It defines a hate crime as any act to cause physical injury, emotional suffering or property damage which appears to be motivated all or in part by race, ethnicity, religion or sexual orientation," she said.

The group also uses criteria suggested by the federal Justice Department, which include the language used by an assailant, the absence of an apparent motive or provocation, the severity of the attack and the previous history of the suspect, or the area where the incident occurred.

Ms. Segrest said the Justice Department also said "common sense" should be used. The display of a burned cross or a swastika, for instance, would be a strong indicator, she said.

Several factors are involved in the increase of incidents, Ms. Segrest said.

North Trial On Felony Charges Starts Tuesday

By James Rowley
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Former presidential aide Oliver L. North goes on trial this week on 12 felony charges that have survived months of legal maneuvering following his indictment in connection with the Iran-Contra affair.

Since his indictment last March, North's lawyers won dismissal of four of the original 16 counts — including the key charges arising from the diversion of U.S.-Iran arms-sale profits to the Nicaraguan rebels.

But the retired Marine lieutenant colonel still faces a host of other charges that carry a maximum possible sentence of 60 years imprisonment and fines totaling $3 million. His trial is set to begin Tuesday.

The dismissal earlier this month of charges that North conspired with former national security adviser John M. Poindexter and two arms dealers to finance the "secret war" in Nicaragua with arms-sale proceeds basically leaves allegations that he covered up his activities by lying.

The former National Security Council aide is charged with making false statements to congressional committees in 1985 that were investigating reports he and others were helping the rebels in violation of a ban on such assistance.

Three false-statement and obstruction charges allege that North prepared false responses to written queries from congressional committees. The letters denying that North or other NSC staffers were improperly assisting the Contras were signed by Robert C. McFarlane, then national security adviser.

McFarlane pleaded guilty to misdemeanor charges of withholding information from Congress and is expected to testify against North as a witness for Iran-Contra prosecutors.

North also is charged with obstructing an August 1986 inquiry by the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. He is accused of falsely denying, during a meeting with panel members at the White House, that he helped the Contras.

Four other obstruction and false statement charges stem from actions North allegedly took after the Iran-Contra affair became public in November 1986.

He is charged with obstructing the presidential inquiry ordered by President Reagan by making false statements to then-Attorney General Edwin Meese III and by destroying National Security Council documents while Justice Department investigators were conducting the probe.

The false statements included North's denial that the NSC staff was involved in the diversion of arms-sale profits to the Nicaraguan rebels, known as Contras, the indictment charges.

An obstruction of Congress charge alleges that North helped prepare a false chronology of the U.S.-Iran arms sales for an appearance by Poindexter before the House and Senate intelligence panels.

Prosecutors also hope to prove that North personally benefited from his involvement with the Iran-Contra affair. North is charged with accepting the installation of a $13,000 security fence around his Great Falls, Va., home that was allegedly paid for by arms dealer Richard V. Secord, another co-defendant. The offense carries a two-year sentence.

One of the four charges dropped against North was an allegation that he prepared false documents to obstruct the grand jury's investigation of the fence. U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell ruled that the charge was legally defective because the alleged obstruction occurred a month before the Iran-Contra grand jury was impaneled on Jan. 28, 1987.

He is also charged with converting to his personal use at least $4,300 of the $90,000 in travelers checks that Contra leader Adolfo Calero gave him to help defray costs of helping the rebels.

That offense carries a 10-year sentence and a $250,000 fine. Most of the other charges carry five-year sentences.

'Night Stalker' Trial Set To Begin

By Judy Farah
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Security has been tightened for the trial of Richard Ramirez, the drifter accused of 13 Satanic slayings in the "Night Stalker" serial murder case that terrorized California four years ago.

Deputy District Attorney Philip Halpin was scheduled to give the prosecution's opening statement today, six months after jury selection began.

Superior Court Judge Michael Tynan told the 12-member jury to anticipate two years of testimony.

When the courtroom opens, spectators will have to pass through metal detectors, similar to the devices used in airports. Ramirez will be restrained by leg shackles while seated in court.

Halpin requested extra security measures last August when the Sheriff's Department informed him Ramirez had allegedly threatened to kill him in court with a smuggled gun and then turn it on spectators.

Ramirez, 28, a pale, shaggy-haired drifter from El Paso, Texas who was arrested after an angry mob chased him down, is charged with 13 counts of murder and 30 other felonies, including rape, robbery and attempted murder stemming from the 1985 crime spree. He could receive the death penalty if convicted.

His trial was recently delayed by a controversy over the racial makeup of the jury. The defense had accused prosecutors of systematically excluding Hispanics and black women while the prosecution had accused the defense of excluding whites and Asians from the jury. Six Hispanics and six blacks were impaneled.

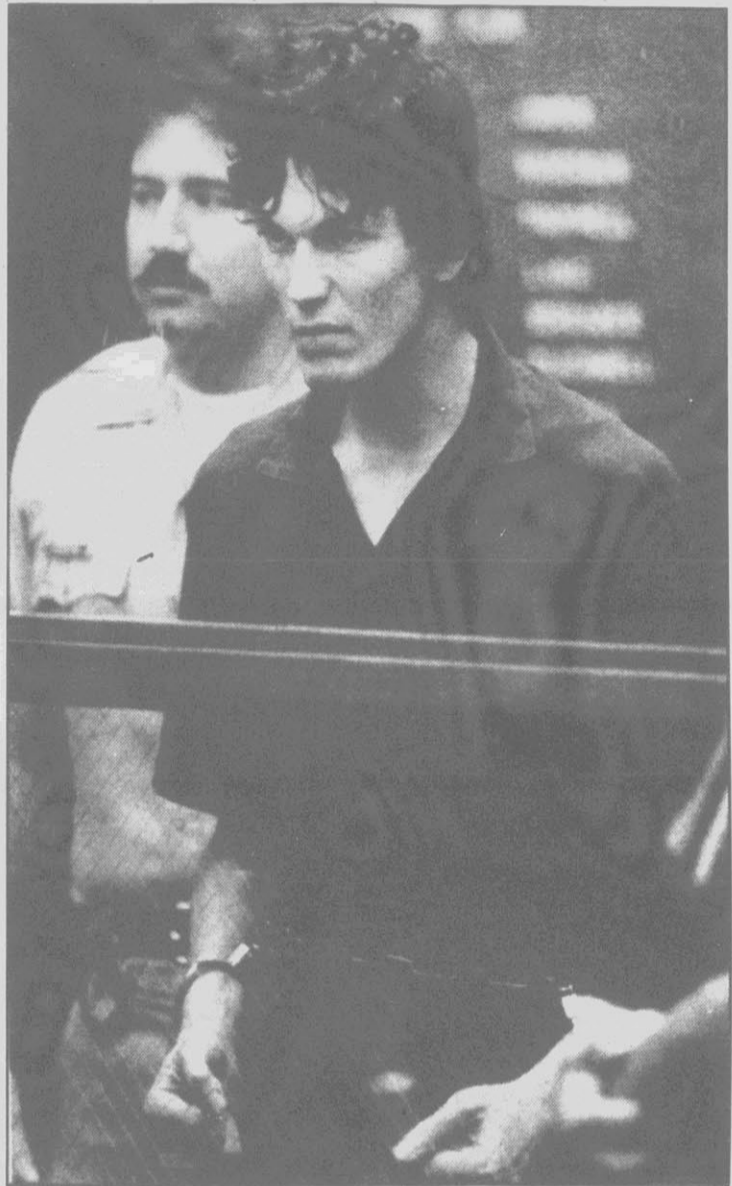

The unpredictable Ramirez once yelled "Hail, Satan!" in court and flashed an inverted pentagram, a five-point star often associated with devil worship, on his palm. He has been more subdued recently and taken to wearing black clothing and sunglasses that he uses to peer at the crowd.

The charges stem from a 1985 summer crime spree in which a nocturnal killer entered homes through unlocked windows or doors, raped women, killed both men and women with execution-style gunshot blasts to the head and stole jewelry and other valuables.

The killer was dubbed the "Night Stalker" by the press and fear swept the city, then throughout the state as the crimes spread north to San Francisco and south to Orange County, where Ramirez also is charged.

The crimes were especially gruesome. One of the victim's eyes was gouged out and several females testified the killer made them "swear to Satan" as they were being sexually assaulted.

Ramirez was arrested after he was chased and beaten by an angry east Los Angeles mob during the 1985 Labor Day weekend. His picture had just appeared in newspapers as the prime suspect in the "Night Stalker" crime spree.

Executives Targeted

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Officials trying to bail out the fund that insures deposits in federal savings and loan institutions should go after executives of those institutions who contributed to the problem, and get rid of unsound institutions, the chairman of a Senate Banking subcommittee said today.

"We ought to be seeing to it that those people who are driving around in Jaguars and have big yachts and belong to fancy country clubs come up to the bar now and pay up," Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., said on "CBS This Morning."

"There are a lot of people that were executives of thrifts around the country that are personally liable and we ought to be getting after them," said Dixon, who heads the Banking subcommittee on consumer and regulatory affairs.

"We ought to invoke safety and soundness rules against states that are liberalizing investment laws for thrifts and endangering the security of those institutions," he continued.

"And we ought to be putting some money into the FSLIC (Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. fund and reducing the number of thrifts in the country, getting rid of the bad ones and supporting the good ones."

Asked if there was any chance Congress would approve a proposal floated by the Bush administration to charge depositors at banks and S&Ls a fee of 30 cents per $100 deposited to help pay for insurance, Dixon said "none whatsoever."

"I haven't heard of anybody that likes the idea and I think that idea is born dead," he said.

White House chief of staff John Sununu said Sunday that the proposal remains a live option despite widespread congressional and industry opposition. He also said on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley" that "there are a variety of options being examined."

Noting that financial institutions have long paid a fee for federal deposit insurance, Sununu said the plan under study was simply a matter of "taking the current fee and adjusting it to affect the reality."

Radical students hurl firebombs at riot police Sunday in Seoul, South Korea

Radical Students Battle Police Over U.S. Exercises

By Barry Renfrew
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL, South Korea — Riot police charged into crowds of radical students, who hurled firebombs and screamed "American troops get out!" as they tried to march through Seoul to demand the removal of U.S. troops.

Several troopers were set on fire in Sunday's protest as the bombs exploded in balls of orange flame. Armored vans sprayed tear gas at the protesters and police had to charge three times to block them from marching through the city.

Police officials had no immediate word on arrests or injuries. They said 10,000 police were deployed across Seoul to block the protest.

The violence Sunday began when about 6,000 labor union activists and radical students tried to march to the city center following separate rallies.

Workers and students, marching to the beat of brass gangs and drums, called for the fall of President Roh Tae-woo's administration and the arrest of former President Chun Doo-hwan on corruption charges.

Police halted the marchers after several hundred yards. Shoving and pushing occurred, but the marchers could not get through.

Students then attacked police. Fighting lasted more than one hour. The labor activists, who were protesting against the government's alleged exploitation of workers to produce cheap exports, did not take part.

Earlier Sunday, several youths hurled firebombs at a court building and yelled radical slogans before fleeing, police said. The bombs caused slight damage but there were no reports of injuries, they said.

Dissident leaders who addressed the student rally, which attracted fewer than 2,000 people, demanded the removal of the 42,000 U.S. troops based in South Korea under a mutual defense treaty.

They also demanded an immediate end to annual U.S.-South Korean military exercises. The drills practice bringing in U.S. reinforcements in the event North Korea invades again. The communist North's 1950 invasion started a three-year war.

The radicals, who lack broad public support, contend the United States supports military rule in South Korea and keeps troops in the nation to block reunification with the North.

Roh, a former general, took office in February 1988 after winning presidential elections. He succeeded Chun, another former general, who took power with military backing in 1980.

Ortega Unwraps 1989 Plans

By Doralisa Pilarte
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — President Daniel Ortega can expect little support from Nicaragua's business community — support he sorely needs to salvage an economy in crisis — as he unveils his government's economic plan for 1989.

The austerity package Ortega was to announce today reportedly includes a three-month wage and price freeze aimed at curbing inflation, which the president says reached 20,000 percent last year.

The Sandinista government has desperately sought the support of capitalists and workers to brake Nicaragua's rapid slide into economic chaos.

"There's a general awareness that the problem belongs to the whole country," and that the government alone cannot rescue the economy, said Bayardo Arce, a member of the ruling Sandinista National Directorate.

"We must establish a harmony of interests, outlining the responsibilities of the government, private enterprise and workers, so we can face the country's problems," he said in an interview.

On Dec. 31, the president announced sweeping budget cuts for the Defense Ministry and security forces. The government has not said how many jobs will be eliminated as a result of the cuts.

Opposition leader Enrique Bolanos, a cotton grower and former president of the Superior Council of Private Enterprise, said Nicaraguan business leaders would not support the plan because they distrust the Sandinistas.

"The government is saying to us, 'We're drowning, toss us a lifesaver,'" Bolanos said in an interview. "But this time all we're going to throw them is an anvil, so they finish sinking."

Ortega has fared little better with labor organizations.

A meeting Saturday between Ortega and labor groups that was to be open to the news media suddenly was closed, indicating negotiations were not going as smoothly as the president had hoped.

During a similar meeting Jan. 15, which was open to the media, labor leaders complained about numerous layoffs of government workers.

Sharp currency devaluations and official price hikes have cut Nicaraguans' purchasing power. This month, the official exchange rate has gone from 920 cordobas to the dollar to 2,300 cordobas per dollar. The minimum wage is 3,748 cordobas a day, about $1.63.

3 Die As Bomb Destroys Car; Party Chief Unhurt

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A car bomb exploded today in Christian east Beirut as right-wing Phalange Party chief George Saade drove by in a motorcade. Police said three people were killed and 17 wounded.

They said Saade, 57, escaped unscathed though his car was damaged.

Saade was riding in a bullet-proof Alfa Romeo and escorted by three carloads of bodyguards. Two bodyguards were among those killed.

No group claimed responsibility for the attack. Saade's party is a major force in the Christian camp that has been fighting against Syrian-backed Moslems in the nearly 14-year-old civil war.

The motorcade on a wide boulevard near a cemetery in the Furn el-Shubback residential district when a red Renault packed with 110 pounds of TNT blew up at 10:30 a.m., police said.

As ambulances raced back and forth at the scene, a woman dressed in black ran over glass shards littering the street screaming hysterically.

"Where is he, where is my cousin," she shouted as tears welled down her face. "I lost my only son in a damned car bomb last year and now my cousin."

Rescuers then told her that her cousin, one of Saade's bodyguards, had suffered only minor injuries. The bodyguards refused to say who she was, but one said she was still wearing black in mourning for her lost son.

About 10 cars were destroyed in the blast, including two vans belonging to Middle East Airlines, the country's national carrier.

An hour after the blast, Saade reassured his partisans in a statement broadcast live over the Phalange's radio station, Voice of Lebanon.

"My car was destroyed but I wasn't hurt, praise be to God," Saade said.

"I don't believe I was the target of an assassination attempt because no one could possibly have known that I was going to be driving through this particular area," Saade added.

"The route I took this morning is not the road I usually take to my office," Saade said. "I decided only minutes before leaving my house to take this route to visit (police chief) Brig. Antoine Nasr to offer my condolences for the death of his mother."

He said he believed the car bombing was aimed at disrupting efforts by the Arab League to resolve a political crisis that threatens to formalize the partition of the country.

An Arab League committee is trying in Tunis to reconcile Moslem and Christian government leaders to resolve the crisis that has prevented parliament from meeting to elect a head of state.

The term of President Amin Gemayel's, a Christian, ended Sept. 23.

Elias Elias, commander of Saade's 12 bodyguards, told reporters he and other surviving comrades "ringed Saade's car, firing in the air to prevent any one from approaching while we helped him out of his damaged car."

"We then put him in another car and sped off," he added.

It was the third car bomb in Lebanon this year. Eight people were killed and 30 wounded in the two previous blasts since Jan. 13.

Police say 116 people were killed and 488 wounded in 20 car bombings in Lebanon last year.

Tehran Tames Traffic

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Order may truly be emerging from chaos in Tehran's traffic-jammed streets, which have long been a lethal cross between a rodeo and the Pamplona bull run.

"It's unbelievable, but it's true. Traffic in Tehran is getting organized," Iran's official and normally staid Islamic Republic News Agency reported on Sunday.

The agency, monitored in Nicosia, reported that for the first time in years authorities are trying to regulate traffic in the capital of 7 million.

During the eight-year war with Iraq, halted under an Aug. 20 ceasefire, traffic problems were left to sort themselves out.

Motorists flagrantly disregarded normally accepted rules of the road, usually reducing traffic to a crawl on main thoroughfares. Pedestrians and cyclists wove with almost suicidal abandon between trucks and buses on fume-choked streets.

On Sunday, Tehran's traffic department began supervising the city's 10 busiest intersections in an apparent move to end the pandemic, IRNA said.

Taxis and buses stopped exactly at their designated stations, cars halted at traffic at pedestrian crossings and at red lights and pedestrians waited for the green light or used long-forgotten pedestrian bridges," IRNA reported.

It quoted a Tehrani motorist, Siros Rasooli, as saying with astonishment in the teeming Azadi Square: "For the first time I saw people ... waiting for the traffic lights before crossing the street."

Shadow Of Malcolm X

Eldest Daughter Wages Her Own Quiet War Against Image Of Slain Civil Rights Activist

By Nikki Finke
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

How old is she?
"I don't talk about that."
Where does she live?
"I'm bicoastal. That's all I'll say."
Is she married?
"That stuff I keep to myself."
But isn't she wearing a wedding ring?
"One shouldn't assume anything."
With that, Attallah Shabazz smiles. Or, at least, the corners of her mouth turn up ever so slightly, though her eyes still look sad. "Two things I don't talk about are my immediate, domestic, private life and my age," she says matter-of-factly. "I'm exceedingly private."

Then the eldest daughter of slain black activist Malcolm X explains why.

"You have to understand that my life is different than that of a person who is descended from a movie star. You have real things like kidnap attempts, assassination attempts. I mean, I was there. I was present when my father was killed."

It was Feb. 21, 1965, when the man who called himself El-Hajj Malik-El-Shabazz, born Malcolm Little but known as Malcolm X to the world, was assassinated in New York's Audubon Ballroom.

As her mother shouted, "They're shooting my husband!" grade-schooler Attallah watched her father collapse and die. Only she expected him to get up again, just like the gunned-down cowboys on "Bonanza" she used to watch with fright until her father reassured her one day that they were only pretending to be dead.

No doubt that experience is one reason she keeps the world at arm's length despite leading her life in the public eye as a producer, actress, playwright and lecturer.

Of the six daughters of Malcolm X, she is the one who knew him as the sensitive and sentimental "Daddy" when he was alive, the one who was most affected by the pain and the paranoia that plagued her family after his murder, and the one who now continually confronts and tries to correct the world's image of him that she says time and ignorance have combined to malign.

"Usually, I'm judged by that negative image," states Shabazz, who takes great care to present to the outside world, in her words, the veneer of "a certain peacefulness."

"I can't think of looking at the (Gary) Hart kids and assuming they're all going to be footloose. But people see me and assume that because of my father I'm going to be politically so left that I have a tilt in my walk. Or that I wouldn't like white people, which is not what I was brought up to believe. Or that my hair is braided to make a statement instead of as a convenience. Or that I'm on the quiet side because I'm too serious as opposed to shy."

The reason is that, unlike his contemporary, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., history has not been kind to the memory of Malcolm X.

While King is hailed as a hero in most quarters, and his birthday is now a national holiday, Malcolm X has never been so honored.

Yes, the autobiography he wrote with Alex Haley of "Roots" fame is still read on college campuses. And, yes, his espousal of black liberation is still hailed as a precursor to the black pride movement.

But what is most remembered about Malcolm X undoubtedly is the fear he sparked in the early 1960s because of his eloquent tirades against the oppression of blacks in American society.

And what is most forgotten is how, after making a pilgrimage to Mecca just a year before his murder at age 39, Malcolm X broke with Black Muslim leader Elijah Muhammad's doctrine of black-white separation, adopted the religion of orthodox Islam, and began to speak out about the possibility of racial integration. Today, many historians believe that one of the tragedies of Malcolm X's death was that he did not have time to pursue his goal.

"There are many people in this country, especially older people, who see Malcolm X as not the black shining prince that he was among his people but as a hate monger," says Susan L. Taylor, editor in chief at Essence magazine.

"Even today, I don't think the majority of white Americans have a full appreciation of what Malcolm X was. Where are the monuments to Malcolm X? Where are the memorials? And Attallah recognizes who she is in history

Attallah Shabazz, the daughter of Malcolm X, keeps the world at arm's length despite leading her life in the public eye as a producer, actress, playwright and lecturer.

LAT-WP News Service

and what her mission is because of this."

"It's easier to digest Dr. King than to digest my father," Shabazz says wistfully. Then her voice drops to a whisper. "The world doesn't know who it killed."

The world knows even less about the children Malcolm X left behind. Always, it seems, Shabazz has lived her life as the "daughter of..." How difficult that has proven to be is evident when she goes on the lecture circuit. Every time she speaks to a group, "I don't know how I will be received," she acknowledges.

Malcolm X's relationship with his eldest daughter — whose name means "gift of God" — was special by all accounts, even down to their uncanny resemblance. "She is so much like him," marvels Alex Haley, who is Shabazz's godfather. "I call her Little Red sometimes because her father was Big Red. And they even have the same ear-to-ear grin, though I have seen it on her much more often than I ever saw it on him."

When he didn't smile, he was no doubt worrying about his family. Always, Haley recalls, "there was danger because of her father's activities. All the family grew up in the shadow of that. But Attallah was the eldest and knew it better than the others."

Like the day the family's house in Queens, N.Y., was bombed by Malcolm X's enemies a week before his murder, "They meant to kill us all," Shabazz recalls. "One of the Molotov cocktails didn't go off, which allowed us to exit through the back door. They tried to say my father did it himself. At the time, people actually believed things like that about him."

Shabazz wants to make it clear that while her father may have been hated by the world at large, he never introduced that emotion into their household. "I never had a hate or dislike for whites. That information never came into my house regardless of what he seemed to represent to the public," she says. "In my house we had a well-balanced view of people because my parents edited a lot of the negative stuff."

Haley describes Shabazz as "a citizen of the world" because of her upbringing at home and her education at the United Nations International School alongside children of diplomats. "She loves her fellow human beings, and that's very central to her," he maintains.

That, no doubt, explains why she and her mother have publicly distanced themselves from Louis Farrakhan, the Black Muslim minister widely criticized for his anti-white, anti-Semitic and overall inflammatory views, who has repeatedly claimed the mantle of Malcolm X's power by telling audiences he used to be known as "Malcolm's little brother."

Straying Boyfriend Left Her Full Of Guilt

Dear Abby: I am beside myself with guilt. On the last night of my visit to a childhood friend who now lives in another city, her live-in boyfriend woke me in the middle of the night, and I let him make love to me. As far as I can tell, my friend had no idea (he left her sleeping in their room). I don't know why I didn't stop him — especially since we used no protection and I could have even gotten pregnant! Maybe I was lonely or resented her having someone since I've been unlucky in love. I wouldn't consciously have planned this, yet I responded to him positively.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

The next evening, when we were alone for a minute or two, I told him I felt guilty over what had happened. He seemed to feel the same, and told me that he liked me and he enjoyed it, but we should not repeat the occurrence.

I tried to act normal with my friend, but felt miserable inside. I've betrayed her trust and don't deserve her friendship. Additionally, I am aware that the man she loves and hopes to marry would cheat on her in such a low way — with her friend, in her house!

Should I tell her? What if he tells her later? What if they decide to marry — shouldn't she know the truth about this man? He played the field earlier in their relationship, but she believes he's true to her now. What if I'm pregnant?

Abby, I am ashamed to admit that I was flattered by his coming to me — but I am more ashamed of having betrayed a friend. I don't want to tell her to hurt her, but I don't want to lose her friendship if she finds out later. What should I do? — Feeling Rotten

Dear Feeling Rotten: You can deal with the "what ifs" ("What if he tells her later?" and "What if I'm pregnant?") if and when they become realities. The imminent question at hand: Should you tell your friend that her live-in lover came to your bed in her home, and you let him make love to you?

Obviously you are considering telling her, but I urge you to examine your motives. If you were to tell her, she'd probably kick him out, and end her friendship with you. That would leave him free to come to you, which could be what you (unconsciously) want since you have no man in your life. You could rationalize telling her by saying, "If I were living with a cheating man, I would want to know."

As I see it, you're damned if you do, and she's damned if you don't. Readers, how would you vote on this?

Dear Abby: My husband and I went out to eat breakfast at a nice cafe the other morning. On the plate was an orange slice for garnish.

After finishing my meal, I ate the orange slice. My husband said, "You aren't supposed to eat the orange slice — it's for decorating, not for eating."

I said, "Oh, bull!" Then I picked the orange slice off his plate and ate it. He gave me a rather disgusted look.

I noticed a well-dressed man seated near us eating his orange slice, so I pointed it out to my husband. He said, "Well, that man apparently doesn't know better either."

When we got outside, I told my husband that I was going to write to Dear Abby and get the facts. He said, "Go ahead." So here I am.

What are the facts, Abby? — Phoenix Orange Lover

Dear Orange Lover: The orange slice was placed on the plate for garnish — or "decorating," as your husband put it. However, when the decoration is edible, it's proper to eat it.

Servicemen Die In Alaska Air Disaster

U.S. and Canadian investigators had not determined whether weather caused the crash, Mock said.

"We've been landing aircraft for the past two weeks in the same conditions," said Mock. "The runway, as far as I know, was not icy."

The troop transport plane's last contact with the control tower was at 6:47 p.m. (10:47 p.m. EST). There were no distress calls from the plane before it crashed a few minutes later, Mock said.

The plane split in two after the crash and there was no evidence of fire, Rodgers said.

It was the second of three Canadian planes heading to the exercises Sunday. The first landed safely at Wainwright; the third was diverted to Fairbank's civilian airport.

The plane took off from Edmonton's Namao Base, said Luigi Rossetto, a Canadian Forces spokesman.

The soldiers belonged to Force Mobile Command and were part of a 500-man paratroop force that was to support the 1st Brigade, 6th Infantry Division (Light), in a major land battle that is the centerpiece of the Brim Frost ground exercises near Fairbanks.

About 26,000 servicemen, 120 aircraft and 1,000 vehicles from the U.S. Army, Air Force, Marines, Coast Guard, National Guard, reserve units and Canadian Forces are participating in the cold-weather training exercise. The $15 million exercise began Jan. 20 and is scheduled to continue through Feb. 1.

The giant Lockheed C-130, which has a wingspan of more than 130 feet, is a military workhorse that's used to transport troops and equipment. First delivered to the U.S. military in 1956, they have been involved in several crashes in recent years.

In June, a C-130 plunged into a soybean field about a mile short of the airport in Greenville, Miss., killing six Air National Guardsmen aboard as they completed a series of touch-and-go landings.

A C-130 also practicing touch-and-go landings crashed in September 1986 at Fort Campbell, Ky., killing three of the five National Guardsmen aboard. A survivor said the plane had lost an engine.

In March 1985, a C-130 from Little Rock crashed near Fort Hood, Texas, killing six crewmen.

That same month, two C-130s collided near a base in Edmonton, killing 10 Canadian servicemen.

On May 12, 1982, seven airmen were killed when a C-130 exploded and crashed near Judsonia, Ark.

Castro Urged Strike

been mounted on missile launchers and were not ready for firing.

An American source said, however, that he and other former U.S. officials learned for the first time at the conference that the warheads not only were on the island but could have been mounted and fired within hours. The source asked not to be identified.

The New York Times today quoted unnamed Americans as saying the report about Castro requesting the nuclear strike originated with Sergei Khrushchev, son of the former Soviet premier. It said Sergei Khrushchev subsequently denied making the comment.

The report also was denied by Aleksandr I. Alekseyev, Soviet ambassador to Cuba in 1962.

Salinger, in a telephone interview with The Associated Press and on ABC News, for which he is a special correspondent, said the conference that brought together participants from all three sides for the first time showed the world was "closer to nuclear war than we believed at that time."

Other participants said the discussions also disclosed the Soviet nuclear arsenal was smaller than American intelligence believed at the time and that there were four times more Soviet troops in Cuba than the Kennedy administration thought.

A Cuban official disclosed that 270,000 Soviet and Cuban troops had been ready to go to war with the United States and that 100,000 casualties were expected, former U.S. Defense Secretary Robert McNamara said Sunday.

At a news conference wrapping up the conference Sunday, he said the figures on Cuba's war readiness and casualty estimate were provided by Jorge Risquet, a member of Cuba's ruling Politburo.

McNamara said that of the troops, 40,000 were Soviet, four times higher than U.S. intelligence estimated at the time.

Risquet cited the figures to show his country seriously believed that a U.S. invasion of his island was imminent. McNamara said no such invasion was ever contemplated, but speaking of the Cubans, he added: "If I had been in their shoes, I would have believed the same thing."

American officials have said they were never sure whether any Soviet nuclear warheads had actually reached Cuba but that they assumed they had.

Col. Gen. Dmitri A. Volkogonov, director of the Defense Ministry's Institute of Military History, said 20 Soviet nuclear warheads were on Cuba during the crisis and another 20 were headed there aboard a Soviet ship that was caught in the U.S. naval blockade.

Volkogonov made the remarks in a closed session of the conference Saturday, and they were reported to the AP by Raymond Garthoff, who was a State Department official at the time of the crisis.

Garthoff, now a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution in Washington, said Volkogonov reported 20 nuclear missiles were on Soviet territory targeted at the United States. The total stockpile of Soviet nuclear warheads designed to fire on the United States at that time was 60, Garthoff quoted Volkogonov as saying.

Volkogonov said the warheads in Cuba were not ready for firing, and Viktor G. Komplektov, a deputy Soviet foreign minister, said their presence on the island did not mean they would be put on launchers in preparation for attack.

"At no time, not before, not during the beginning of the crisis, or in the most acute moments of the crisis, neither from the Soviet command there in Cuba nor in Moscow was there, or could there have been an order to mount nuclear warheads on the missiles," he told reporters.

Khrushchev eventually withdrew the missiles in exchange for President Kennedy's pledge not to invade Cuba.

Just Kidding

NEW YORK (AP) — David Letterman says he really isn't out to make fun of guests on his "Late Night" show, despite his reputation for being condescending.

"It used to trouble me that people thought our sole purpose for being in business was to make fun of people," Letterman said in an interview in this week's Time magazine. "Unfortunately, there is no joke that does not make fun of somebody. I try to make it, as often as not, me or the show or somebody in our little group. So if we say something that looks like we're making fun of somebody else, it's in the spirit of everything."

Soviet Spacecraft Orbits Mars

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — An unmanned Soviet research probe is orbiting Mars on a research mission to learn more about the planet's climate and soil, the official news agency Tass reported.

Phobos II went into orbit Sunday after a six-month, 111-million-mile voyage from Earth, Tass said.

The spacecraft is carrying instruments and experiments prepared by 12 countries and the European Space Agency. Soviet officials say the mission will help them prepare for a manned mission to Mars in the early 21st century.

Phobos II was launched July 12 in an ambitious program to unlock mysteries of the Red Planet and its largest moon, Phobos.

The probe is supposed to record daily and seasonal temperature changes on Mars, make a temperature map of the surface, and identify areas where the soil is permanently frozen, Tass said. Data on the planet's minerals and atmosphere also will be collected.

The spacecraft is to approach within 50 yards of the moon Phobos in early April to analyze its soil with a laser and drop two small landing craft onto the surface.

The Phobos program is the most ambitious of nearly 20 U.S. and Soviet unmanned missions to study Mars, believed to be the planet most like Earth after Venus.

But problems have marred the $480 million mission.

In September, a Soviet ground controller sent an erroneous computer command to a sister ship called Phobos I. That spacecraft, launched July 7, froze in space and ground controllers have been unable to communicate with it.

Blue And Who?

Monday Notebook:

When the 1988-89 basketball season got underway, there were high hopes in the East Carolina camp for a good season. Blue Edwards was returning and many people thought he might be a viable candidate for Player of the Year in the Colonial Athletic Association.

Also back for the Pirates was Gus Hill, who was the league's Rookie of the Year last season. Add to that an experienced — if short — group of players who struggled last year but seemingly learned what it takes to be a winner.

Pre-season forecasts were for an upper-division finish for the Pirates, and maybe even a challenge for the championship.

Thus far, it's been a mixed showing. The Pirates have a 9-9 record overall record and a 3-4 mark in the CAA at the midpoint of the conference schedule. That's an improvement of one win over all of last year.

Certainly, there is no doubt that Edwards has established himself as the conference's most outstanding player. He leads the league in scoring, and has left coaches wondering what to do with him when it comes to defense.

UNC-Wilmington thought it had the answer Saturday night in the second half. Edwards scored 23 points in the first period, tying the Trask Coliseum record. He added 13 more despite being double- and triple-teamed every time he got the ball. UNCW's attempts to keep him from scoring are easily reflected in the fact that he scored 13 points on 15 tries at the foul line. His 36 point total broke the old Trask record of 35, set by American's Frank Ross and UNCW's Denny Fields.

"There's no question in my mind that he's the best player in the conference and deserves to be Player of the Year," UNCW assistant athletic director Jim Bass said. "The only question I have is whether the Virginia press will vote for him."

But while Edwards is performing just as expected, the rest of the Pirate cast has been jekyll-and-hyde all season long. Just when one might expect the Pirates to catch fire and storm along, they seem to disappear.

Certainly incentive had to be there Saturday night. The Seahawks had won the last eight games in a row from the Pirates and ECU hasn't won in Trask since 1984.

But Hill, who is either on target or woefully off, was the latter Saturday night. He continually forced up shots that you knew were coming well before he made his move to the basket. Stanley Love was handicapped by fouls and spent most of the game on the bench. He ended up with 21 minutes, but most of those came after the Seahawks had put the game on ice.

Jeff Kelly and Kenny Murphy had atypical games. Kelly, usually the ice-man with the ball, committed five turnovers — he had only 20 in the previous 17 games. Murphy didn't even attempt a shot in the first half and took only three in the second, missing all three. Between him and Kelly, they were 0-7, and for that reason, UNCW simply left them alone and concentrated on stopping Edwards.

Being a shorter team, the Pirates must use their fundamentals to the fullest to block out on the boards and force taller opponents to go over their backs to get the ball. "They never called a rebound foul tonight," ECU coach Mike Steele said in his post-game comments, "guys going over our backs — and they had no reason to. We didn't block guys off the boards. We've got to put ourselves in position when we can tell the officials, look, they're going over our backs. Last year, (Larry) Houzer had several fouls going over our backs because we were blocking them off the boards. This year we didn't do that."

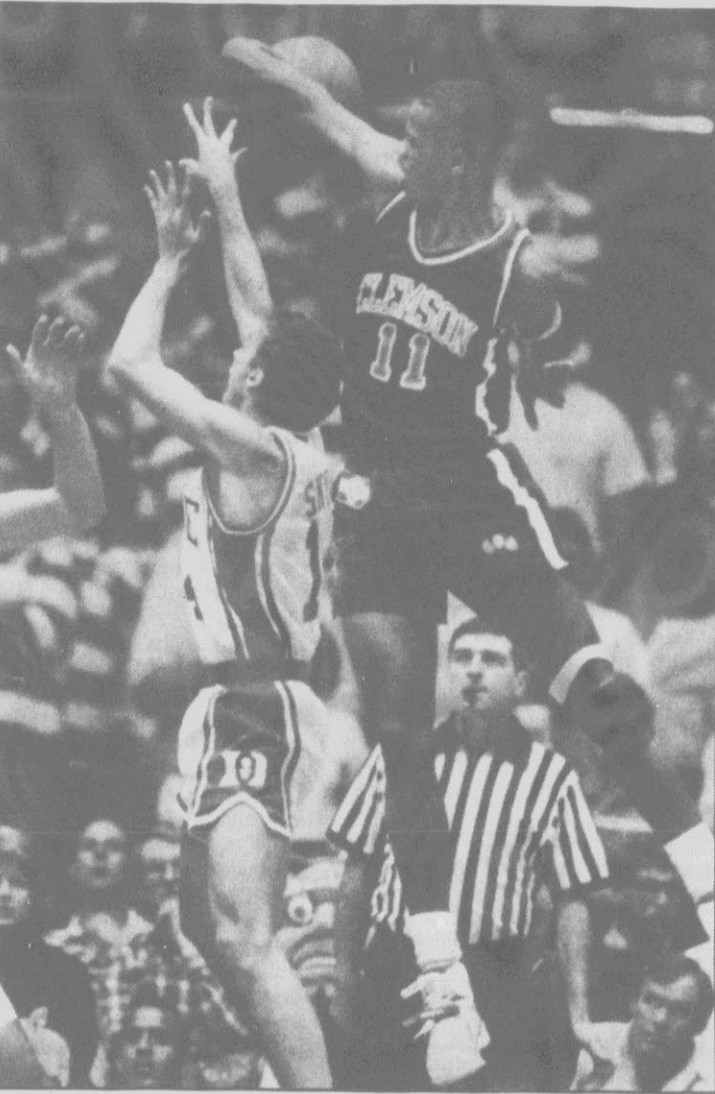

Except for Reed Lose — and must of his offense came late in the game, six of his 10 points in the final five minutes — the Pirates got nothing off the bench either. Casey Mote added six points — four of those in the final five, and the rest added nothing.

Steele, in looking for some kind of help, at one time had a lineup on the floor that consisted of Edwards, Murphy, Brooks Bryant, Mote and Jeff Perlich.

For the first 15 minutes of the game, the Pirates looked good — although again, Edwards was providing nearly all of the scoring. But after that, it

Duke's Quin Snyder is blocked by Clemson's David Young

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

DURHAM — Nobody thought it would be close and it wasn't.

Duke rebounded from a three-game losing streak by pouncing a suspended-ridden Clemson team, 92-62, Sunday in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball action.

Tiger coach Cliff Ellis announced Saturday that six active members of the Clemson team would be suspended from Sunday's game for violation of basketball team policy regarding academic study hall rules.

The suspended players included starting center Elden Campbell (16.4 points per game), starting point guard Marion Cash (96 assists), forward Dale Davis (11.2 points and 7.9 rebounds per game), guard Tim Kincaid, guard Donnell Bruce and center Rod Mitchell. Sean Tyson, a red-shirt forward, was also suspended.

"It (the suspensions) just has to do with violation of policy in study hall, that's all I'm going to state," Ellis said. "The game of life is more important than the game of basketball. The wins and losses go in my record book, not theirs. But it's important to me that our guys understand what the game of life is about."

"There are rules that are set forth for them to follow," Ellis said. "Even though the loss will go down in my record book, I hope the win will come out later down the road. You see so many times athletes in this game today as they go further, 10 or 15 years down the pike, making mistakes in life and if I don't do my job as a teacher as well as a basketball coach then I have failed."

The suspensions left the Tigers, 12-5 overall and 3-3 in the ACC, with only seven players dressed out, one of which was sophomore team manager Dennis Hopf. Hopf played only two minutes in the game and failed to score.

Duke opened up the game as if it would blow the Tigers right out of Cameron Indoor Stadium, taking a 16-6 lead by the 14:23 mark.

The Blue Devils, 14-3 overall and 4-3 in the league, pushed the lead to 12, 23-11, with 11:43 left when Phil Henderson buried a jumper from the wing.

The Tigers then reeled off eight straight points, keyed by five points from Ricky Jones, who finished with 11, to close to within 23-19 with 8:59 showing on the clock.

After Robert Brickey, who scored 19 points, connected on one of two free throws, David Young, who also scored 19, countered with a 3-pointer for the Tigers to make the score 24-22.

Brickey then answered at the other end with a turnaround on the baseline before the Tigers' Derrick Forrest canded a 3-pointer to cut the margin to one, 26-25 with 7:34 left to play.

Clemson then had four opportunities down the court to take the lead, but failed.

State Streaks Past Maryland, 90-67

Pressure Defense Late In 1st-Half Sends Maryland To Defeat

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — The 15th-ranked North Carolina State Wolfpack struck quickly and with deadly results.

The Wolfpack's 12th victory in 13 games, a 90-67 decision over Maryland, was sealed late in the first half with startling swiftness.

Maryland, playing without freshman starter Walt Williams, who suffered a broken finger, found itself even more vulnerable when point guard Greg Nared picked up his third foul with 4:57 left in the half.

That's when N.C. State used its pressure defense to overwhelm the Terrapins.

"That's part of tempo," said N.C. State sophomore guard Chris Corchiani. "We know that when we press we're going to give up some baskets, but we're going to get some, too. We turned up the pressure and it got us two or three baskets at the end of the first half."

The Wolfpack turned a 37-31 lead into a 44-31 lead with three steals and three layups in the half's final 78 seconds.

"They turned up the pressure," Maryland coach Bob Wade said. "We turned the basketball over. We were within six points or something. They cost us, those steals. Instead of going into halftime down under 10, we were down by 13."

The Wolfpack continued the assault with a 14-1 run early in the second half for a 60-36 lead with 13:46 to play, making it a 23-5 spurt in all. N.C. State led by as many as 28 points at 76-48 with 8:59 left. Maryland never got closer than 21 points the rest of the way.

"We felt that with Williams hurt, giving Maryland a little less depth, we had to keep the tempo up," said N.C. State coach Jim Valvano. "We're a small team. We can't let people play a half-court game and pound the ball inside."

Brian Howard and Rodney Monroe each scored 19 points and Chucky Brown added 18 for the Wolfpack, which improved to 14-2 and moved into a tie for the Atlantic Coast Conference lead with North Carolina at 5-1.

The victory also gave Valvano another respite from allegations stemming from a forthcoming book by Peter Golenbock of numerous wrongdoings within N.C. State's basketball program.

"We're handling it as best as we possibly can," Valvano said. "The kids are doing a better job than I am. They are getting me through it. There's a lot of emotion in the lockerroom. Everybody cares about each other and that comes through on the court."

Maryland's problems also come through on the court. The Terrapins have lost nine in a row — second in school history to a 21-game slide that finished the 1940-41 season — and have yet to come up with an answer for the kind of pressure they faced against N.C. State.

Oklahoma Survives To Get The Top Spot

By Jim O'Connell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Oklahoma earned its first-ever No. 1 ranking in The Associated Press college basketball poll today, capping a week that saw the top three teams all lose one game.

The Sooners, 17-2, jumped from fourth to the top spot after victories last week over Colorado and Nevada-Las Vegas and became the third team to be ranked No. 1 this season.

They received 32 of the 66 first-place votes cast by the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters and finished with 1,272 points to edge Illinois in the balloting.

"We're honored and delighted to be ranked first in the poll," Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs said Sunday night. "I think every team wants to do two things, one, win a national championship and second be ranked first in the AP poll. This is certainly a milestone for our program and our hard work and persistence have finally paid off." Illinois, which became No. 1 for the first time in 37 years, held the top spot for just one week as the Fighting Illini lost to Minnesota 69-62 before rebounding for a victory over Indiana.

Illinois, 18-1, was named No. 1 on 25 ballots and had 1,226 points.

When Illinois lost on Thursday night, it appeared Georgetown would move up one place to the top spot, but the Hoyas were upset by Louisiana State 82-80 on Saturday.

Louisville was next in line for a chance at No. 1, but the Cardinals lost at home to Ohio State 85-79 on Sunday.

To show the wide range of opinion on who deserved the top ranking, six teams received first-place votes.

North Carolina, 18-3, jumped from seventh to third with four first-place votes and 1,074 points, 19 more than Arizona, 15-2, which improved two places and was named No. 1 on one ballot.

O'Meara Takes Win Kite Finishes Second Once Again

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Two strokes in two tournaments at Pebble Beach have cost Tom Kite $351,000 in the last two months.

He was a playoff loser to Curtis Strange in the rich Nabisco Championships in November.

And he became a runner-up again — a one-shot loser once again — when Mark O'Meara's 10-foot birdie putt found the cup on the final hole of the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am on Sunday.

"This is not a lot of fun," Kite said. "Finishing second the second time around is much tougher," Kite said. "This hurts. It really hurts. I'm very disappointed."

It was clear that he wasn't talking about the money, the $351,000 difference in winning and finishing second in the two tournaments, but was referring instead to another title that eluded his grasp. "I had my chances," Kite said. "I didn't do what needed to be done and Mark did."

As it does so often in the tournament that formerly was known as "the Crosby," it all came down to the 18th hole.

They were tied for the lead when first Kite, then O'Meara came to that picturesque expanse bordered by cliffs overlooking the surf of Carmel Bay.

Kite, who had overcome a string of three consecutive bogeys to regain a share of the lead, could do no better than par. He tallied up his 3-under-par 69, signed his card and was standing by the green when O'Meara played the hole.

O'Meara, who won this tournament in 1985, put his approach some 10 feet from the cup and had that putt to break a four-year victory drought on the American PGA Tour.

"When that sucker was four or five inches from the cup and I knew it was in, I almost had a heart attack," O'Meara said.

Lendl's Hard Work Pays Off

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MELBOURNE, Australia — For Ivan Lendl, it's on to Wimbledon. Twelve months of hard work paid off for Lendl on Sunday when he finally captured one of the two Grand Slam tennis titles to elude him. Lendl routed fellow Czech Miloslav Mecir 6-2, 6-2, 6-2 to win the Australian Open title, making good a pledge he had made a year before.

Lendl was devastated by his loss to Australian Pat Cash in the semifinals of the Australian Open last year and vowed to make amends, said his coach, Australian Tony Roche.

"He really expected to win last year and was devastated," Roche said. "This time Ivan was in peak physical shape and was a far more relaxed person."

"He deserved the title because he worked so hard in his build-up and served so well for the whole fortnight."

Lendl gave former Wimbledon doubles champion Roche, his coach for the past five years, much of the credit for his victory.

"Tony knows when I'm tired and he knows when to push me a little more," he said. "It's great to work with someone who has me feeling fit and good."

Lendl now has won the U.S. Open three times, the French Open three times and the Australian Open once.

He has twice been beaten in the Wimbledon final and that tournament now is his number one priority.

The victory lifted Lendl to No. 1 in the computer rankings, a spot he held for three years before Mats Wilander of Sweden dislodged him by winning last year's U.S. Open. Wilander, who slumped after becoming No. 1, was eliminated in the second-round here by Ramesh Krishnan of India.

Rose's Fuller Announces For N.C. A&T

GREENSBORO — North Carolina A&T officials have announced that they have received a verbal commitment from Rose High offensive lineman Raleigh Fuller to play football for the Aggies next season.

Fuller (6-3, 230) was a two-year starter on back to back Big East Championship teams.

"Raleigh is probably one of our top prospects," said Aggie assistant coach Joe Godette, a Greenville native who played for Rose in high school. "He's the type player and program to get our program to be where it needs to be. He played on an outstanding football team and we feel he's one of the top prospects to come off that team."

Before choosing A&T, Fuller had narrowed his choices to the Aggies, South Carolina, East Carolina and Appalachian State.

Valvano Denies Contact With L.A. Clippers

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — North Carolina State basketball coach Jim Valvano denied Sunday that he had talked with the Los Angeles Clippers about the NBA team's head coaching job.

"I'm still not sure exactly how all of that talk got started," Valvano said in an interview after his team's Atlantic Coast Conference victory over Maryland in Cole Field House.

Clippers General Manager Elgin Baylor also denied that team officials had talked to Valvano.

"Absolutely not," Baylor told the News and Observer of Raleigh when asked if Valvano had been called. "We have not talked to anyone," he said. "Don Casey is our coach for the rest of the season."

The newspaper reported Friday that Valvano twice had been contacted by the Clippers, who wanted to know whether he would be interested in becoming a candidate to replace fired head coach Gene Shue. Casey was named the Clippers' interim coach after Shue was fired.

Valvano said in the postgame interview, "There is absolutely no way in the world that I would be involved with job talks with anyone in the middle of the season, much less the middle of this particular season."

Pitt led at the half, 27-25, but UNC rallied to take a 32-30 with 16:28 remaining. Pitt tied it twice more over the next few minutes before UNC went ahead to stay.

Stewart Reportedly Criticized Nee

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Missouri Coach Norm Stewart told Nebraska basketball fans during Saturday's Big Eight Conference game they have a "bush-league" coach in Danny Nee, a published report said Sunday.

Stewart criticized Nee in statements he made to the crowd behind the bench at the Bob Devaney Sports Center, according to a column written by Omaha World-Herald sports editor Michael Kelly.

The comment was made after Stewart drew boos when he called a timeout with a 17-point lead and 23 seconds remaining in the game, Kelly said.

When the booing subsided, Stewart turned to Husker fans behind the bench and said: "When your bush-league coach gets his (expletive) act together, then we'll stop pounding you."

Kelly said Stewart's comment was heard by Marlon "Buster" Griffing of Lincoln, who often serves as a correspondent for the newspaper and was assisting with the Raycom Sports telecast of the game. Griffing said the taunting was witnessed by many.

Nee said later, "I can't respond."

No. 5 Missouri won the game 89-72, its ninth victory in a row. During the post-game news conference, Stewart also made public comments apparently critical of Nee.

"We were playing a ballclub that had a lot of people back (from last year) and for some reason they're not winning," Stewart said. "You worry about a ballclub that's got a lot of people back and they're not winning."

Cards' Ellison Goes Down With Knee Injury

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Louisville center Pervis Ellison, the team's leading scorer and rebounder, suffered a sprained medial collateral ligament in his left knee late in the first half of Sunday's game against No. 17 Ohio State.

Ellison went down with less than a minute remaining in the half while going for a loose ball. His knee was then immobilized before he was helped off the floor by two teammates.

Kenny Klein, the school's sports information director, said Ellison was taken into the locker room where he was receiving whirlpool treatment.

Klein said there was apparently no tear of the ligament.

Asked if Ellison would need to be hospitalized, Klein said, "Not right now, but he'll be checked on later."

Ellison, who is averaging almost 18 points and more than eight rebounds per game for the third-ranked Cardinals, had scored six points before leaving Sunday's game.

Louisville led 41-37 at halftime.

Ohio State Tops Louisville, 85-79

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Jay Burson scored 29 points and No. 17 Ohio State rallied Sunday for an 85-79 victory over No. 3 Louisville, which lost center Pervis Ellison to a knee injury just before halftime.

The loss snapped Louisville's 14-game winning streak and likely prevented the Cardinals, 14-3, from taking over the No. 1 spot in the Associated Press Poll. Top-ranked Illinois and No. 2 Georgetown had lost earlier in the week.

Ellison, the team's leading scorer and rebounder, sprained the medial collateral ligament in his left knee while scrambling for a loose ball and had to be helped off the court. He had scored six points up that point.

Kenny Klein, Louisville's sports information director, said there apparently was no tear of the ligament, and he did not know if Ellison would be hospitalized.

Ohio State, which trailed 51-41 early in the second half, took its first lead since early in the game, 68-67, on Burson's driving layin with 4:15 remaining.

Burson and Eli Brewster then hit jump shots to cap a 13-3 outburst that gave the Buckeyes a 72-67 advantage at the 3:22 mark.

Louisville got no closer than two after that.

Jerry Francis added 15 points and Brewster had 10 for Ohio State, 15-4.

LaBradford Smith scored 23 points and Tony Kimbro added 16 for Louisville.

Kimbro scored six points during a 21-5 run early in the first half that gave Louisville a 26-13 lead with 12:30 remaining.

Ohio State then switched from a man-to-man defense to a one-two-two zone and scored 16 of the next 20 points to pull within 30-29 at the 5:28 mark.

Louisville led 41-37 at halftime.

Michigan.....99 Purdue.....88

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Glen Rice scored 20 first-half points, including three 3-point shots, as No. 10 Michigan raced past Purdue 99-88 in their nationally televised Big Ten game Sunday.

Rice, Michigan's No. 4 all-time scorer, missed only one of his eight shots in the first half. The 6-foot-7 senior forward, who also had five of his team's 13 rebounds in the first half, finished with 34 points.

The Wolverines, 16-4 overall but just 4-3 in the conference, snapped a two-game losing streak pulling away with a 10-3 spurt that gave them a 26-15 lead with 9:26 left in the first half. Purdue never got closer than seven points again and trailed 48-33 at halftime.

Purdue fell to 9-11 overall and 2-5 in the conference after dropping its third home game in a season for the first time since 1985.

The Boilermakers managed two spurts in the second half, pulling to within 10 and nine points. Stephen Scheffler, who led the Boilers with 19 points, sandwiched a three-point play and two free throws around a jumper by teammate Keith Stewart that left Purdue trailing 68-58 with 10:01 to play.

But the Boilermakers turned the ball over on their next possession. Michigan then got two straight baskets from Loy Vaught.

Another seven-point Purdue streak left Purdue trailing 87-78 with about two minutes remaining. Rumeal Robinson, who had 15 points, hit a layup for Michigan and Rice made a pair of free throws with 1:53 left to give Michigan a 91-78 advantage.

Mark Hughes finished with 17 for Michigan and Vaught had 14. Tony Jones scored 17 for Purdue, while Jimmy Oliver had 14.

Arizona.....72 Stanford.....52

TUCSON, Ariz. — Sean Elliott scored 31 points and his teammates shut down Stanford star Todd Lichti as No. 6 Arizona defeated the No. 19 Cardinal 72-52 Sunday to take a two-game lead in the Pacific-10 Conference.

Elliott, who entered the game with a 21.7 average, got 18 of his points in the second half after Arizona led 31-21 at intermission. He was 9-for-13 from the field, hit 12 of 15 free throws and had nine rebounds.

The win left Arizona at 9-1 in the Pac-10 and 15-2 for the season. Stanford fell to 15-5 overall and 7-3 in the conference.

Elliott's performance gave him 2,218 points for his career, second in Pac-10 career scoring to Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of UCLA, who finished with 2,325, finished the game with 2,218.

Lichti, who came in averaging 20.4 points and 13 attempts, finished with 11 points on 2-for-5 shooting and broke into double figures with 1:24 remaining when Arizona led 68-50. He was guarded by Matt Muehlebach for most of the game.

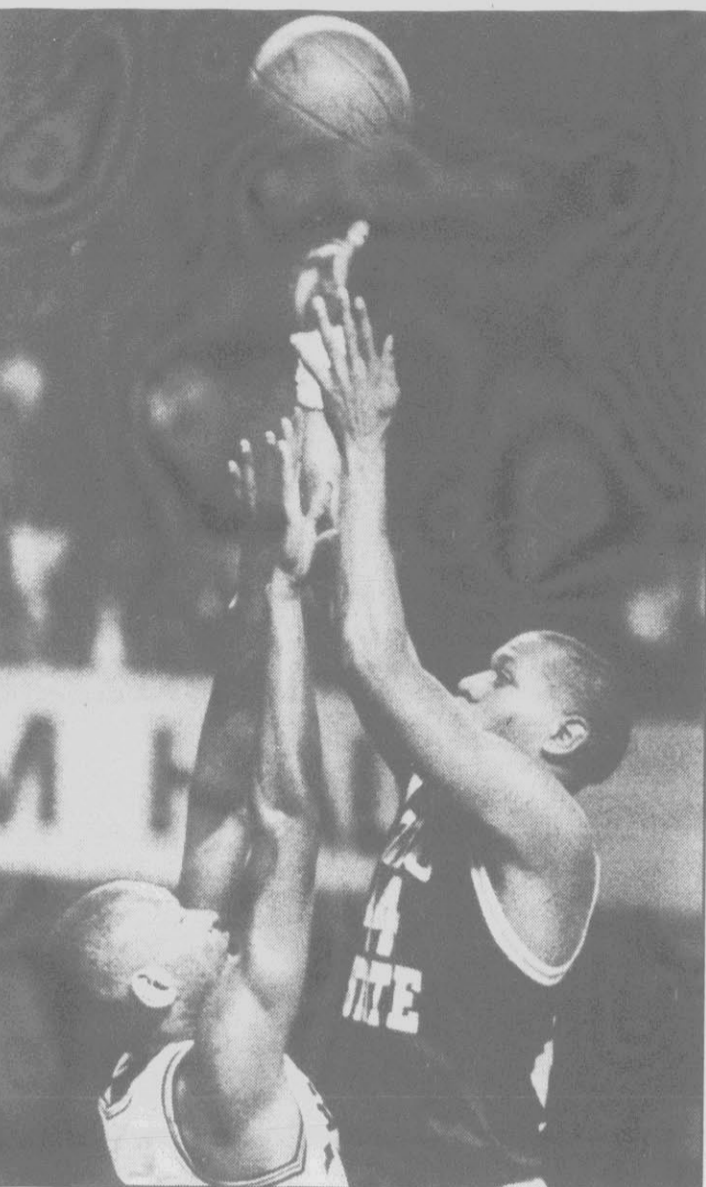

The 52 points were the fewest Arizona has allowed a Pac-10 opponent this season. The Cardinal shot 41.9 percent, Arizona 48 percent.

An Elliott dunk with 3:04 gone broke a 4-4 tie, and Ken Lofton hit a 3-pointer after a Stanford turnover, then added a layup off a steal for an 11-4 Arizona lead. Stanford never got closer than within three points at 18-15 on Lichti's first two points, a pair of free throws, with 9:25 to go in the half.

But Arizona went on a 10-3 run over the next 6½ minutes, with Elliott getting nine points.

Jud Buechler and Lofton has 13 points each for the Wildcats, while Howard Wright led Stanford with 14.

Ohio State's Jerry Francis shoots over Kenny Payne

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Jamere Jackson hit three 3-point goals Saturday and scored 15 points to help Notre Dame overcome Mike Vreeswyk's game-high 17 in a 64-60 defeat of Temple.

LaPhonso Ellis, whose five points were his lowest point total this season, hit two free throws with 20 seconds remaining to seal the win for Notre Dame, 10-3. Temple fell to 9-7.

Mark Macon, who finished with 14 points, missed a 3-point shot in Temple's final scoring attempt.

Joe Fredrick, who scored 14 points for Notre Dame, gave the Irish the lead for good with a field goal with 1:46 left.

The lead had changed hands eight times, with six ties, in the second half when Temple's Duane Causwell and Vreeswyk hit consecutive field goals to give the Owls a four-point lead.

The Irish came back with six straight points, including a Jackson 3-pointer, but Macon tied it again with a pair of free throws before Fredrick hit the go-ahead goal. Temple led through most of the first half, building a nine-point margin at one point, before Notre Dame captured a 27-26 halftime lead on a Daimon Sweet field goal with 25 seconds left.

The lead changed hands twice late in the half after Notre Dame rebounded with a 14-4 streak, aided by two field goals and a pair of free throws from Keith Robinson.

Notre Dame took a brief early lead in the first half on field goals by Jackson and Robinson while Temple went scoreless in the opening four minutes. Kilgore then scored nine points in a 18-4 streak for what proved to be Temple's largest lead of the game.

Temple grabbed 12 steals and took the ball on 17 Notre Dame turnovers in the half, but shot only 40 percent and were dominated by Irish rebounding.

Missouri, 18-3, stayed fifth. The Tigers had three first-place votes and 1,048 points.

Georgetown, which fell to 15-2 with the loss to Louisiana State, dropped from second to sixth with 1,019 points and the final first-place vote.

Louisville was seventh with 1,011 points after having its 14-game winning streak snapped and falling to 14-3.

Florida State, 16-1, moved from 11th to eighth with 797 points and Iowa, 15-3, jumped from 12th to ninth with 651 points, 13 more than Seton Hall, 18-2, which rounded out the Top Ten after being ninth last week.

Michigan dropped one spot to lead the Second Ten and was followed by Duke, North Carolina State, Syracuse, Ohio State, Nevada-Las Vegas, Indiana, West Virginia, Louisiana State and Stanford.

Duke had held the No. 1 spot in the preseason poll and for the first nine weeks of the regular season. The Blue Devils, however, lost three straight games over the past two weeks and have fallen to the Second Ten.

Last week's Second Ten was Florida State, Iowa, Nevada-Las Vegas, Syracuse, North Carolina State, Indiana, Ohio State, Kansas, Stanford and Providence.

Pirates' Woes ...

was a steady collapse, leaving fans questioning just what has happened to the team that had all that promise at the start of the season.

Edwards and Kelly continue to move up in the ECU record books. Edwards now has 462 points, moving him into eighth place on the single season list. He now trails Curt Vanderhorst, who scored 476 in 1984-85. If his average continues, he could break the school record of 699 held by Oliver Mack in 1977-78.

Edwards' career total of 866 leaves him just 134 short of becoming the 16th Pirate to reach 1,000 for a career. If his average holds, he could move up to anywhere from ninth to fourth overall.

Edwards and Kelly are tied for seventh in career steals with 62, trailing Scott Hardy with 64. Kelly also is just eight short of breaking the career assist record of 232, held by Vanderhorst.

Kelly could break the record during the next two home games, against William & Mary Wednesday or Richmond on Saturday.

Hill, if his pace continues, could surpass 1,000 either against Campbell on the road or American at home on Feb. 18.

Clemson's suspended basketball players look on Sunday in Durham as Duke rolls to win

Duke Romps By Tigers ...

on a follow shot inside with 5:04 left to make it 28-25.

"Everybody (fans) around here perceived that it was going to be a cakewalk," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "And three of their kids are starters that played today. And they're darn good basketball players. I thought we were in for a tough game. When it was 26-25 I thought maybe some of our guys thought that way (that it was going to be a cakewalk)."

Duke then smacked the floor with their palms on defense and went on to take a 40-31 halftime lead thanks to 14 Clemson first-half turnovers.

"It (the hand slapping on defense) was done completely by the players," Krzyzewski said. "That sort of thing would be a gimmick if it were orchestrated from the bench. It could only be successful if the players do it and they mean it. I thought it was very appropriate."

The second half belonged solely to the Blue Devils as they pressured Clemson defensively from the outset and went on a 30-4 run to grab a 70-35 lead by the 10:18 mark.

"We were really pleased with our effort especially in the last four minutes of the first half and throughout the second half," Krzyzewski said. "We just played extremely hard and played defense more like we're capable of playing."

"I was especially pleased with our senior leadership tonight. I thought (Quin) Snyder (19 points) and (Danny) Ferry (10 points) were emotional. They played a little bit past their limits condition-wise and really set a good example. We need that kind of leadership."

Ferry felt that the difference in the game was the Blue Devils' emotion throughout.

"When we start to turn on the emotion, things started to turn around," Ferry said. "Hopefully now, we'll see that's what kind of team we have to be. I'm emotionally and physically exhausted but it feels good. I think everybody feels great about the way we played the last 25 minutes."

Clemson, playing mostly against Duke's reserves managed to trade baskets the rest of the way, but the damage had been done. Jerry Pryor, who finished with 11 points for the Tigers, scored eight points in the final eight minutes.

"Our guys played hard," Ellis said. "You've got to give credit to Duke. They did what you want to do in this situation. They pressured us defensively and wore us down. We played a good first half and in the second half they just wore us down. Their offensive rebounds and our turnovers made the difference in the game."

Duke outrebounded the Tigers 44-32 and Clemson wound up with 28 turnovers for the game.

The Tigers, who play North Carolina Wednesday, will go back to practice with the suspended players today, according to Ellis.

"We're going to try to go back to work, but I'm not lifting anything until Wednesday night," Ellis said. "One suspension, in the case of Bruce, who is not here, is until further notice. He is not kicked off the team. I told them that I suspended them for the minimum of one game dependent upon how I see they react. If I think they've got the idea about the game of life, they'll be back."

Duke will be back in action Thursday on the road against Georgia Tech.

Rice's Sour Grapes Spoil 49ers' Super Bowl Victory

Joe Montana's Troubles May Just Be Beginning

By Scott Ostler
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Joe Montana! You've just directed the San Francisco 49ers to another Super Bowl championship with a record-smashing display of passing and leadership! You have cemented your place in history as the quarterback of the '80s and one of the all-time clutch-stupendo greats of football! What are you going to do now?

Are you going to Disneyland? Or will you simply duck quietly out of sight?

I think Plan B is the ticket. Joe, Forget Disneyland. Mickey Mouse and Goofy might go into a sulk because you're getting all the attention.

"Just because we're not hotshot football stars," Mickey and Goofy would say, "is no reason for everyone to treat us like animals."

Your genial Disneyland guide would write a book, telling all. How you tossed a candy-bar wrapper that missed the wide-open litter can by 5 feet, and how you sadistically refused to let your daughter have that huge lollipop she cried and begged for.

Hey, Joe, pack up your wife and kid and head for a Tibetan mountaintop. It's the off-season there — great rates, no phones. Go somewhere far away, because things are already getting ugly around here.

First of all, your partner in crime has turned on you, Jerry Rice!

The day after the Super Bowl, Rice was in a deep funk, bitter and depressed. Why? Because he has not cashed in commercially on his Super Bowl most valuable player award.

"I would say it's the media's fault because they're not getting my name out there," Rice said. "If it were Joe Montana, Dwight Clark, it would have been headlines all over."

Wonder how Rice thinks the MVP is chosen; by vote of the stadium hot-dog vendors?

The football media, which is about 98 percent white, votes on the award.

The media declared Rice to be the winner, even though in this observer's humble opinion, the 49ers quarterback was clearly the MVP.

Joe, apparently what's bothering Jerry is that he got the MVP but you got the "I'm going to Disneyland" commercial, $50,000 for four words. That selection, of course, was made before the game. It seems logical that the Disneyland people offered the spot to a two-time Super Bowl MVP quarterback, rather than to a wide receiver who says that his injured ankle is so sore he can't cut on it.

I can understand Rice being ticked off if he hasn't landed a bunch of big endorsement contracts. I can even forgive him blaming it on media racism, even though that's a cheap, malicious cop-out.

What I can't understand is him dragging your name into the dirt, Joe. Who threw the guy all those passes?

I'm not saying that Rice should be grateful. But it has been a great partnership, like Rogers and Astaire, and it would've been nice for Jerry to leave you out of it when he was lashing out at the injustice of it all.

Rice, I'm sure, will get his commercial due, although I don't like his chances of signing a fat deal with Subaru. The MVP award winner is given a new Subaru, and when Rice was handed his keys, he sighed, "I've got so many cars. I don't know what I'll do with a Subaru."

Shoot, he could give it to his mailman. He could fill it with dirt and make it into a planter. He could donate it to the homeless; with its fold-down bucket seats and roomy trunk, it probably would sleep 10.

On behalf of the nation's press, I apologize to Rice for cluttering his driveway.

Meanwhile, another problem lurks on your horizon, Joe. I hear that your ex-wife, Cass, has written a steamy book about the marriage and divorce, that is (according to a publicist) "laced with Joe's emotional and highly revealing love letters."

What I want to know, Joe, is how you could have walked out on a classy lady like this. The incredible courage of this woman, granting the public access to these vital and socially relevant documents, even though doing so might cause embarrassment to you.

Joe, didn't anyone ever tell you? If you plan to get rich and famous, don't send letters to your sweetie, send Candygrams.

Say, Joe, isn't this the same ex-wife who tried to keep your Super Bowl MVP trophy and your Super Bowl ring? When the Joe Montana Museum is built, this lady has to be the leading candidate for curator.

Fortunately, you're an optimist. Joe, I'm sure you're grateful that your first wife hasn't written a book yet, or that your retiring center, Randy Cross, hasn't accused you of hogging the headlines, or of having cold hands.

Still, it doesn't seem right.

Your head coach quits on you this season, tries to demote you to second string, and when you beat back the challenge, he blames all the controversy on — guess who? — the media.

You fight off shoulder and back and elbow problems, take injections, play hurt and never say a word, even when your back surgeon announces that you're putting your life on the line by continuing to play.

In the end, on the last play of the season, you're firing an amazing rifle-shot touchdown pass to some guy we've never heard of.

And nobody is surprised, because you've been doing pretty much the same thing for 10 years.

That's the way the movie would end, with a freeze frame on that moment of victory in the Super Bowl.

Cunningham Leads NFC To Victory

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONOLULU — Randall Cunningham says he'll be back for next year's Pro Bowl, even if he's not voted into the NFL's all-star game.

"I'm coming back for sure, whether I pay myself or come with the Pro Bowl," the Philadelphia Eagles quarterback said Sunday after winning the Pro Bowl MVP Award in his first trip to the league's season-ending contest.

"Hawaii is great, the weather is nice, the people are nice, there are no negatives here."

In addition to having a fun week, Cunningham completed nine of 14 passes for 83 yards and picked up 49 yards on two rushes to help the NFC to an easy 34-3 victory over the AFC All-Stars.

"I always hoped to be just selected for the Pro Bowl," he said when asked if he had thought about winning the MVP Award.

"I thought Herschel (Walker) had a good chance to win it because he had two touchdowns."

Cunningham doubtless earned some MVP votes with his talent for improvising.

On one busted play, he had the ball knocked from his hand, chased around after it and finally grabbed it, then fired an 11-yard completion to J.T. Smith.

"He's a heckuva athlete, period," said Mike Ditka of the Chicago Bears, the NFC coach.

Walker, of the Dallas Cowboys, scored on runs of 4 and 7 yards.

"We've taken the short end of the stick the past couple of years," Walker said, referring to the NFC's losing the two previous Pro Bowls.

"We were fired up this time."

Neal Anderson of the Chicago Bears was another offensive standout for the NFC, accounting for 102 yards. He gained 85 yards on 13 carries and caught two passes for an additional 17.

Ditka said he figured his main job in coaching the NFC All-Stars, who collected $10,000 each to the losers' $5,000 cut, was not to mess things up.

"I just wanted to keep it simple, let them have fun and let them show their talent. With the talent we had, it would have taken a lot of bad coaching to mess it up."

Houston quarterback Warren Moon, in his first Pro Bowl appearance, led the AFC with 13 completions in 20 attempts for 134 yards.

But after going 10-for-11 for 98 yards in the first half of his initial Pro Bowl, Moon was pressured by the NFC defense in the second.

"When you get behind, the defense comes right at you," Moon said. "They know you have to throw the ball."

Marv Levy of Buffalo, the AFC coach, said, "We played a lackluster game. I feel badly. You don't play any game, including an All-Star game, without wanting to win."

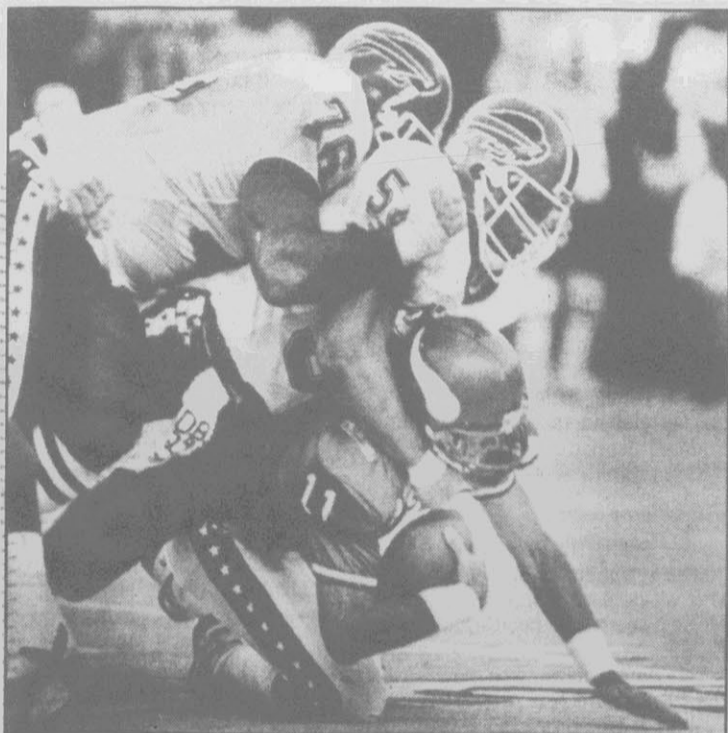

"As we didn't make the plays, our enthusiasm waned; as they (the NFC) made the plays, their enthusiasm increased."

"It's very disappointing to me, getting beat that badly," said Kansas City strong safety Deron Cherry of the AFC. "I take a lot of pride in being here."

"You have fun during the week, but you have to be ready to play on Sunday."

The NFC defensive unit played very well, logging six quarterback sacks — two by Reggie White of Philadelphia — and holding the AFC to 167 yards.

"Coach Ditka set the tone in his pre-game talk," safety Ronnie Lott of the 49ers said. "(Ditka said) 'Play hard, have a good time and do your best to represent the NFC.'"

Daniel Forces A Playoff Round

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOCA RATON, Fla. — It was the confident veteran against the young upstart, but Beth Daniel wasn't claiming the advantage over Dottie Mochrie.

The former Furman University students who starred at the school in different decades played four holes of a sudden-death playoff in the LPGA Oldsmobile Classic before play was suspended because of darkness Sunday night at Stonebridge Golf and Country Club.

Daniel, looking for her 15th tour victory but first in nearly four years, looked and sounded like a woman on a mission after overcoming a two-shot deficit on the last hole of regulation.

Stars Offer Quake Aid

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — A cast of stars including Liza Minelli and Ben Vereen brought their talents together to record the song "For You, Armenia" and make a TV special to help earthquake victims in Soviet Armenia.

Most of the profit will be given to the Armenian Relief Society for direct donation to victims of the quake that left about 25,000 people dead and 500,000 homeless.

"We can do what we usually do in life to raise money," Miss Minelli said Sunday before stepping into a recording studio at Paramount Pictures. "We can't do anything politically. When I saw the disaster in Armenia I thought I was going to die."

Pia Zadora, Irene Cara, Connie Stevens, Ray Parker Jr. and members of the Doobie Brothers and Toto were among the nearly 100 performers who collaborated on "For You, Armenia."

The song was written by songwriters Charles Aznavour and George Garvarentz and translated from French to English by Paul Williams.

Michael Masser and Joel Cohen are producing the record and Peter Bogdanovich and Laszlo Kovacs will film the one-hour documentary and a music video.

'Working Girl,' 'Rain Man' Top Golden Globe Winners Awards Provide Oscar Momentum

By John Horn
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — "Working Girl" and "Rain Man" emerged as top Oscar prospects after they dominated the Golden Globe awards, which often serve as predictions for the Academy Awards.

ABC's mega-miniseries "War and Remembrance" dominated the awards for television excellence.

Tom Hanks and Dustin Hoffman won top male acting awards, and Melanie Griffith won for best comic actress. In a three-way tie, Shirley MacLaine, Jodie Foster and Sigourney Weaver each were honored for best dramatic actress during Saturday night's ceremonies.

Actor Clint Eastwood got the directing trophy for "Bird," beating out Mike Nichols of "Working Girl" and Barry Levinson of "Rain Man."

Other pre-Oscar favorites were Golden Globe losers.

The civil-rights film "Mississippi Burning" and the Australian melodrama "A Cry in the Dark" each had four nominations but left empty handed.

"Running on Empty" went in with five nominations but got only one, a screenplay award for Naomi Foner, and "The Accidental Tourist" and "Who Framed Roger Rabbit" got none.

The best foreign-language film went to Denmark's "Pelle the Conqueror."

The Golden Globes, presented annually by the 80-member Hollywood Foreign Press Association, is viewed as a barometer for movies in contention for the Academy Awards. Oscar nominations will be announced Feb. 15.

Although considered less prestigious than the Academy Awards, the Golden Globes attract major stars to the ceremony and play a crucial role in film advertising campaigns and in setting the stage for the Oscars.

In 1988, "The Last Emperor" won Golden Globes for best dramatic motion picture and best director, and then went on to win movie and director Oscars. Cher, Michael Douglas, Sean Connery and Olympia Dukakis all won top Golden Globes and Oscars in 1988, too.

One recent noted exception was in 1986, when Steven Spielberg won a Golden Globe for directing "The Color Purple," but did not win an Oscar.

"Rain Man," the chronicle of a scheming car salesman who learns to understand his autistic brother, won two Golden Globes: best dramatic motion picture and top dramatic actor (Hoffman).

"You are everything an actor could ever hope for," Hoffman said in an emotional acceptance speech giving special thanks to director Levinson.

Miss Weaver won as best supporting actress in "Working Girl" and tied for best dramatic actress in "Gorillas in the Mist: The Adventure of Dian Fossey."

There were several ties, including a three-way split for best actress in a dramatic motion picture. Miss Weaver split the prize with Miss MacLaine of "Madame Sousatzka" and Miss Foster of "The Accused."

Hanks, who played a teen-ager whose body grows up overnight in "Big," and Miss Griffith, the savvy secretary yearning for a better job in "Working Girl," got the comedy acting trophies.

For Miss Griffith, the daughter of actress Tippi Hedren, her award marked a milestone in what she has described as an arduous career.

"I've been an actress for 16 years, and it's the first time I've ever won anything," Griffith said.

"This is probably the happiest I've been in my whole life," she said of her award and imminent remarriage to Don Johnson.

Actor Martin Landau took the trophy for best performance by an actor in a supporting role for his appearance in "Tucker: The Man and His Dream." Francis Ford Coppola's study of American car maker Preston Tucker.

In television categories, ABC-TV's "War and Remembrance" won three trophies. The epic won as best TV miniseries, and John Gielgud and Barry Bostwick tied for best supporting actor in a miniseries.

Jill Eikenberry, Michael J. Fox, Ann Jillian, Candice Bergen, Judd Hirsch, Richard Mulligan, Katherine Helmond, Ron Perlman and the shows "thirtysomething" and "The Wonder Years" also won TV honors.

The honorary Cecil B. DeMille Award for outstanding contribution to the industry went to Doris Day, star of such films "The Pajama Game," "The Man Who Knew Too Much" and "Pillow Talk" and TV's "The Doris Day Show."

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY Jan. 31

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Contacts from the past could lead to new adventure and romance. Make long range plans for travel and recreation.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Your usual sense of practicality may not be functioning up to par today. Get all the facts and stay objective with important decisions.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Off the wall comments which are abrasive tend to develop enemies rather than allies. A friendly approach will bring results.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Be prepared to redo what has already been done. A second look at options available will give you the answer.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Someone you meet can give you new information that will solve a problem. You have excellent ideas for getting ahead.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Concentrate on what has been going right. Rely on yourself and avoid those who are unreliable and careless.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Disregarding the cost of social activities can bring a month-end financial frenzy. Make new rules to correct your situation.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): With budgets under control, this is a favorable time to spend money for improvements. Good news can cause you to increase your efforts.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): A secret meeting this evening can bring a surprise. There is a tendency to let expectations of what others are supposed to do to make you happy get unrealistic.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Take what you overhear with a grain of salt. Avoid involving yourself in gossip that has negative strings attached.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Spending and credit binges will influence future plans. Hold the line on finances now to produce cash for future necessities.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Prepare to ignore mindless criticism that has its roots in jealousy. Stay with responsible responses until things blow over.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠ Q63 ♥ 1083 ♦ 42 ♣ QJ954
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♣ Dbl 1 NT Pass
 Pass 2 ♣ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Partner's cue-bid is still for takeout—had he held a club suit, he would not have doubled originally. Therefore, you can't pass; you must bid your longer of the other three suits. Since you have to choose a three-card suit, make the cheaper bid—two hearts.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠ J9852 ♥ 102 ♦ Q103 ♣ A42
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 NT Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—You have just enough to invite game should partner have a spade fit and a maximum. To start, use the Stayman Convention by bidding two clubs to probe for a major-suit fit.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠ J9852 ♥ 102 ♦ Q103 ♣ A42
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 NT Pass 2 ♣ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Bid two spades. Since you could have bid two spades directly with a weak hand, this sequence is invitational and forcing to two no trump or three of your suit, assuming you are using the original version of the Stayman Convention. Partner can correct to no trump with a doubleton; raise to three spades with a minimum and three-card support, or four spades with a maximum.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠ J9852 ♥ 102 ♦ Q103 ♣ A42
 The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 NT	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	?	?

What do you bid now?

A.—While your hand has been improved by the fact that partner has a four-card spade suit, you don't have enough to commit your side to game. Complete the invitational sequence by raising to three spades, asking partner to bid game with a maximum opening.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠ A76 ♥ A10762 ♦ K10854 ♣ Void
 North East South West
 1 NT Pass 2 ♣ Pass
 2 ♦ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?

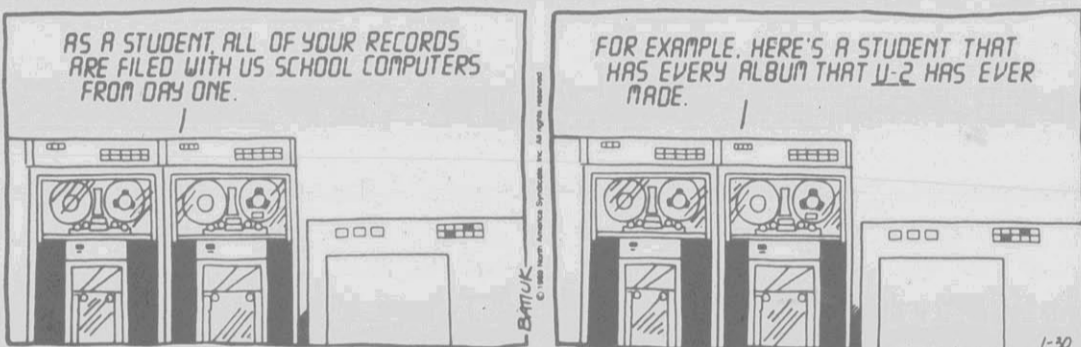

A.—If you find a fit, you are in slam territory; if not, you might not want to proceed beyond three no trump. A jump to three hearts could take the auction too high to allow for orderly investigation, so if two hearts is forcing in your methods, that's all you need do for the moment.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠ A76 ♥ A10762 ♦ K10854 ♣ Void
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 NT Pass 2 ♣ Pass
 2 ♦ Pass 2 ♥ Pass
 2 NT Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
A.—Partner does not have three hearts, so he must have at least three diamonds. Since a change of suit by you is forcing, just bid three diamonds to see what action partner takes.
