GAO Calls For Takeover Of S&Ls

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The General Accounting Office today recommended that the government deal with the savings and loan crisis by promptly taking control of all failed institutions.

The GAO, the congressional auditing and investigative agency, told the Senate Banking Committee that regulators should place any of the 350 insolvent institutions remaining open into receivership whenever necessary until a decision can be made to liquidate them or merge them with stronger partners.

"Of fundamental importance, these institutions must be effectively isolated from the rest of the depository institutions industry to prevent them from competing with healthy institutions," said Charles O. Bowsher, the head of the GAO.

"Their operations must be limited to investing in high-grade securities, managing bad assets on their books and accepting deposits at prevailing market rates," he said. Bowsher said S&L regulators should enlist help from state officials and from federal regulators of commercial banks to accomplish this task. He said Congress must reach agreement as soon as possible on the S&L crisis, or this process could not get started.

"We estimate that to fully pay for (deposit) insurance losses and to put (the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.) back on a solid financial footing, it will cost at least $85 billion more than FSLIC currently anticipates receiving in revenue over the next 10 years," he said. "Delay will only increase this cost," Bowsher said.

Delay would also permit weak institutions to "squander our nation's wealth on questionable economic endeavors," weaken the entire financial system because healthy institutions must match the high interest rates paid by weak thrifts, and create pressure on regulators to lower standards for the entire industry to accommodate weak S&Ls, he said.

Wright Plans Pay Raise Vote

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Jim Wright, moving to limit political damage from a proposed 50 percent congressional pay raise, said today the House would vote next week on cutting the increase to 30 percent.

Wright said the House would also vote on banning members from receiving speaking fees and other honoraria. Because House members currently can retain up to 30 percent of salary in honoraria, those receiving the maximum would receive no actual raise.

"The House will vote next week to ban all honorariums and to cut the pay raise to 30 percent instead of 50 percent. That'll make it just come out even," Wright told reporters.

Wright, D-Texas, did not make clear whether the vote would take place before the raise for members of Congress, federal judges and top executive branch officials becomes law next Wednesday.

He hinted that the vote could come before then because a pay increase for judges cannot be reduced once it becomes law. The Senate planned to vote today or Friday, and was virtually certain to turn down the 50 percent raise, which would boost most congressional salaries from $89,500 to $135,000.

A 30 percent raise would hike the current congressional salary by $26,850, to a total of $116,350.

Wright said "of course there's always a chance" that his proposal would be defeated. But he said he was encouraged by answers given by 326 House members to a survey he conducted this week on the pay raise.

Without announcing the results, Wright said:

"They indicate that the members feel that they should give up the honoraria and they should substitute a straightforward, upfront way in which they would receive and all other people in the government would receive a decent raise, but not an exorbitant raise, and that they ought to vote to do it. I think it's upbeat."

Wright has tried to convince his colleagues for weeks to reduce the raise to 30 percent but told reporters previously the members were privately telling him they wanted 50 percent without a vote. The raise becomes law unless both houses of Congress vote to stop it.

Wright appeared to be going along with these private sentiments until he abruptly reversed course this week and ordered the survey. Aides said the speaker was tired of reading that he was stopping the will of a majority to vote on the raise.

An Associated Press informal survey of nearly a third of the 435-member House showed about 88 percent of those responding wanted a vote on the larger package.

Groups opposed to the increase said their own survey showed that slightly more than 60 percent would vote "no."

Meanwhile, House and Senate negotiators moved ahead Wednesday with separate but similar proposals to bar speaking fees and restrict other outside income should the raise become law.

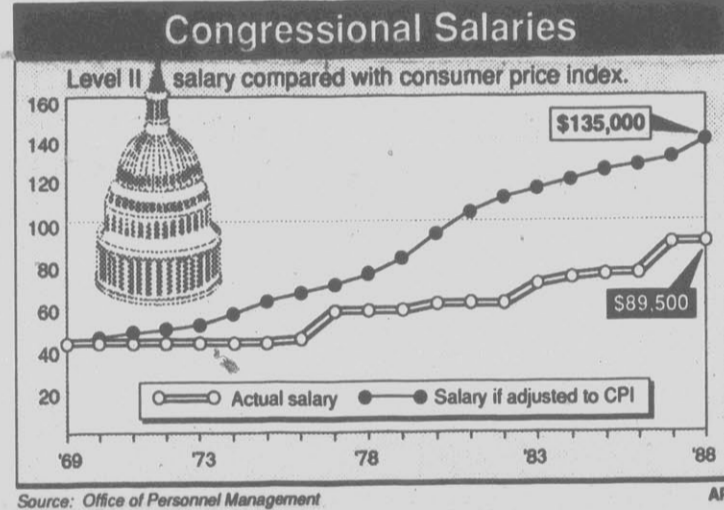

A bipartisan draft document, given to senators and obtained by The Associated Press, compared the

Jones Will Vote 'No'

U.S. Rep. Walter B. Jones Sr., D-N.C., says that, if he gets the chance, he will vote against the proposed congressional pay raise being debated on Capitol Hill.

In a telephone interview this morning from Washington, D.C., the Farmville Democrat said, "If given the opportunity I'm going to vote no. I think the increase is exorbitant."

The proposed 50 percent raise would increase the salaries of congressmen from $89,500 to $135,000, beginning Wednesday, unless both the House and Senate vote against it.

A salary increase of only 30 percent has been discussed in Washington to calm the fervor around the issue, but Jones said today he would oppose that, too.

"I think maybe a 10 percent cost of living increase would be fair," he said. "A huge increase is absolutely out of the ball park."

Cold Grips Northwest

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A blast of cold air out of Alaska brought snowstorms and plunging temperatures to the West and Midwest, triggering hundreds of traffic accidents and closing schools, and threatened to end the East's record warm spell today.

"Today was it. It will get seasonal," National Weather Service meteorologist Bill Scura said at Atlantic City Airport in Pomona, N.J., where a balmy reading of 69 degrees was one of 51 high-temperature records broken or tied in the East and South on Wednesday.

At least two people died in weather-related traffic accidents in Idaho and Oregon on Wednesday. Authorities in Coleraine, Minn., blamed minus 20-degree temperatures for the hypothermia death of a 31-year-old woman whose frozen body was found on a sidewalk.

Snow continued falling today from the Pacific Northwest to the northern Rockies, northern Plains, and upper Mississippi Valley, and was expected to spread to the Great Lakes. Freezing drizzle slickened roads from Missouri to Indiana. The foul weather was accompanied by equally foul temperatures in many places. In the Dakotas and Montana, where Gov. Stan Stephens declared a state of emergency, winds up to 40 mph produced wind chills as low as minus 90 degrees Wednesday.

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. — Punxsutawney Phil, that plump, pampered groundhog long touted as America's best mammalian meteorological prognosticator, saw his shadow today, predicting six more weeks of a "kinder and gentler" winter.

Phil's promoters, declaring today the 102nd Groundhog Day, roused the brown, bewiskered forecaster out of his lighted, heated burrow at dawn.

"In honor of America's new president, George Bush, the groundhog stood tall and proud. He spotted a thin, short shadow," Punxsutawney Groundhog Club President James H. Means told spectators gathered at Gobler's Knob, a wooded knoll about three miles south of Punxsutawney.

"The king of all groundhogs is returning to his burrow with a promise of a kinder and gentler winter," Means said.

Tradition has it if the weather-wise woodchuck sees his shadow, six more weeks of winter will follow. But if he doesn't, they say spring is just around the corner.

ECU Students Stricken By Flu Bug

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina University has had a higher number of reported cases of flu than several other universities in the state and seemingly more than other portions of the Pitt County community.

ECU last week reported to the State Division of Health Services' epidemiology section that there were 103 flu cases on its campus, while Duke University reported 93, North Carolina State, 68, and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, 25.

Dr. James McCallum, director of East Carolina University Student Health Services, said his office has seen considerable flu since Jan. 9.

with a peak appearing to occur last week. Some 138 cases were diagnosed among students between Jan. 9 and Jan. 27, he said. So far this week, about 70 cases have been seen, he said.

McCallum said he is seeing two sets of symptoms. Some people have high fever and aching while others have lower fever, but nausea and vomiting added to the aching.

He said his office has sent several titers of blood and throat cultures to state laboratories in Raleigh to determine what strains of flu are present here. No results have been returned so far.

He said he is recommending treatment for classic flu as rest and an aspirin substitute — not aspirin

Year 2007 Panel Identifies Challenges

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Striving toward excellence in education and reducing crime and drug abuse are key challenges facing Pitt County in the new century.

That was the consensus of participants of the Year 2007 Committee following the group's three-day strategic planning conference this week at the Trinity Center near Atlantic Beach.

Approximately 90 people, representing a cross-section of the public and private sectors, left Pitt County on Monday with a common purpose — to help formulate plans to enhance the livability, economic and cultural base of the area, and to better the quality of life for county residents by the year 2007.

Other areas agreed upon by the committee as requiring attention in the county include developing a comprehensive transportation system; improving recreational and cultural activities; increasing economic development; working towards maximizing the efficiency and effectiveness of county and municipal services; trying to reach full employment potential in the county, and continuing to recruit additional businesses while retaining those currently operating in the county.

Jerry Powell, 2007 Committee chairman, said the development of priorities during the three-day session is the beginning of a process whereby plans can be formulated and then implemented to reach the organization's goals.

The formation of the 2007 Committee was first announced by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce in October. The group was founded to help with strategic planning to assist citizens, business leaders and government officials in meeting the demands which will be placed on the county in the coming century.

The panel was named Year 2007 because it represents both the 100th anniversary of the Pitt Chamber of Commerce and East Carolina University.

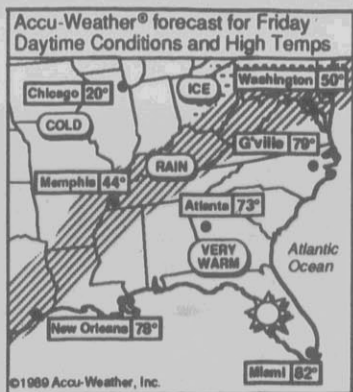

"I think the planning conference went very well," Powell said.

Participants started the session Monday by developing a committee "mission statement," according to Powell.

Fraud Reported

The Employment Security Commission of North Carolina has reported that 571 people were convicted of filing false unemployment insurance claims in the fourth quarter of 1988. The convictions led to the recovery of more than $440,000.

During 1988, more than $1.8 million was recovered in a record-breaking year for the commission's fraud unit after 1,564 people were convicted for fraudulently obtaining unemployment insurance benefits. This was nearly a 100 percent increase over 1987 figures.

According to the ESC, all claims for benefits are subject to audit and computers can scan about 200,000 claims each quarter and report potential instances of abuse.

Unemployment insurance fraud is a misdemeanor offense punishable by up to two years in prison and a fine of $1,000 for each week that benefits are falsely claimed.

Suggs Gets 45-Year Term On Heroin Charges

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A Greenville man with a prior conviction of trafficking in heroin has been sentenced to 45 years in prison after pleading guilty to several counts of trafficking in cocaine and heroin charges.

Judge David E. Reid Jr. of Greenville sentenced Dennis Ray Suggs, 33, 1917-B Kennedy Circle, to 45 years in prison and fined him $150,000. Suggs pleaded guilty to possessing, selling and conspiring to sell heroin in connection with an undercover State Bureau of Investigation drug operation last year.

In connection with a separate arrest, Suggs pleaded guilty to maliciously throwing sulfuric acid on law enforcement officers and to two counts of trafficking in more than 28 grams of cocaine.

Reid found that Suggs' 1981 conviction in Edgecombe County for trafficking in more than 4 grams of heroin was an aggravating factor in the case. Pitt County District Assistant Attorney Tom Haigwood said today is the first time he has ever prosecuted someone with a prior conviction of drug trafficking. Under the plea arrangement with the state, Suggs could have received a maximum of 60 years in prison.

His wife, Jackie Denise, and a daughter, Trechia Lynnette, are also charged with trafficking cocaine and conspiring to traffic cocaine. Neither of their cases has been called for trial this week.

According to testimony from SBI Agent J.C. Rea, he came to Greenville and purchased heroin from Suggs on May 3 and May 6 of last year.

Posing as a heroin dealer from Durham, Rea said he bought 34 packets of heroin for $700 in the first sale and 60 bags for $1,350 in the second transaction.

Greenville Police Officer Tommy Evans testified that officers also searched Suggs home Aug. 21 of last year after a tip from a confidential informant that drugs were being sold from the house.

During the search, officers discovered a bag containing about 38 grams of cocaine in rock form and about 10 grams of cocaine-based crack. They also found about 66 vials of crack, Evans said.

While officers were searching through a dresser drawer laid out on a bed, Evans said Suggs tossed a bottle of sulfuric acid on the evidence and the officers. Two officers suffered burns and permanent scarring, Evans said, and some evidence was destroyed.

In the Suggs home, there were vials, needles and other drug paraphernalia sitting out in the open in the kitchen and bathroom, Evans said, and he believed family members were aware that drug activity was going on in the house.

Reid and another Superior Court judge handed down several other prison sentences Wednesday in drug cases stemming from last year's eight-month SBI drug sweep.

After two days of testimony, a Pitt County jury found James Earl Jenkins, 42, 102 Glenda St., guilty of possessing, selling and delivering heroin. The jury also found him guilty of conspiring with his brother, Charlie Lee Jenkins, 41, 1802 McClellan St., to commit the crimes.

Special Superior Court Judge Sam Currin of Raleigh sentenced James Earl Jenkins to six years in prison and fined him $2,000. Currin also suspended another two-and-a-half-year sentence for five years. One of the conditions of the suspended sentence is that Jenkins must not associate with any known or previously convicted users or sellers of drugs.

Charlie Lee Jenkins and about 20 others indicted in connection with the SBI undercover operation last year were scheduled to stand trial this week, as two Superior Courts operated in Greenville.

Prosecutors have disposed of about a dozen cases, but Charlie Lee Jenkins' case has not yet been called for trial. He is charged with 36 heroin violations and operating a continuing criminal drug enterprise.

With James Earl Jenkins' conviction Wednesday, at least three people this week have been linked to conspiring with Charlie Lee Jenkins to sell heroin.

Charlie Lee Jenkins is the first person in Pitt County ever to face a charge of operating a continuing criminal enterprise, a felony which carries a possible penalty of life in prison and forfeiture of property obtained with drug profits.

The charge alleges that he conspired with at least five others to operate a drug ring and that he organized and profited from the scheme.

In addition to the conspiracy conviction Wednesday of James Earl Jenkins, another man also pleaded guilty to conspiring with Charlie Lee Jenkins to sell heroin.

David Earl Tripp, 38, 102-B W. Fifth St., pleaded guilty to three counts each of possessing, selling and conspiring to sell heroin. One conspiracy charge involved Charlie Lee Jenkins.

Reid sentenced Tripp to 15 years in prison and ordered him to repay $700 to the SBI drug fund. The charges against him stemmed from heroin sales to undercover SBI agents on April 11 and April 14 and May 4.

A third man, Forrest June Wilson of 605 Albemarle Ave., pleaded guilty this week to six charges involving heroin, morphine and cocaine. He was not charged with conspiracy, but under cross-examination, he said Charlie Lee Jenkins sometimes gave him heroin to sell. In return, Wilson said he would receive a packet of heroin for his own use.

In closing arguments in the case of James Earl Jenkins, his brother's name was mentioned several times by attorneys for both the defense and prosecution.

Greenville attorney John Savage, co-counsel for James Earl Jenkins, told jurors they should not convict his client just because his brother was heavily involved in drug sales. "He is not his brother's keeper," Savage said.

Attorney Milton Williamson of Greenville, who worked with Savage on the case, also argued that there was no evidence of conspiracy. He told jurors that testimony from law enforcement officers concerning Charlie Lee Jenkins' drug dealing should not hurt his client.

"Charlie doesn't happen to be here on trial today ...," he said, later adding, "James' mistake wasn't even being (at the house during the drug sale). His mistake is having Charlie for a brother."

When SBI Agent B.L. Fields arrived at a house on Fleming St. to buy heroin in the undercover operation last April 21, Charlie Lee Jenkins recognized her as a usual customer and directed his brother to sell her $240 worth of heroin, Assistant District Attorney Clark Everett said to the jury. When Ms. Fields entered the house, James Earl Jenkins conducted the transaction and accepted the money in exchange for 10 packets of heroin, Everett said.

Everett told jurors that the state was not asking them to convict James Earl Jenkins on the basis of his brother's actions, but on the basis of his own.

"On April 21, for one time in his life, God bless him, Charlie Jenkins didn't sell heroin ... this man (James Earl Jenkins) did," he said.

Reid also sentenced two others Wednesday.

Jerry Lloyd Cooper, 28, 505 Contentnea St., was sentenced to eight years in prison. Cooper pleaded guilty to two counts of possessing cocaine and two counts of selling cocaine in connection with incidents that allegedly occurred June 15 and July 15 of 1988.

Reid sentenced Carlton Ray Randolph, 33, 310 Conley St., to five years in prison. Randolph pleaded guilty to two counts of possessing heroin and two counts of selling the drug in connection with incidents that allegedly occurred last June 15 and July 26.

Tobacco Exports Climb, Imports Fall During '88

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILMINGTON, N.C. — Unmanufactured flue-cured tobacco exports rose last year for the first time since 1984 and imports declined, indicating buyers may have purchased more domestic tobacco for their products, agriculture officials say.

Exports through November, the latest figures available, totaled 233 million pounds, said Verner Grise of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Economic Research Service. That compares with 171.4 million pounds exported during the same period in 1987. Preliminary figures show total exports in 1987 at 225.3 million pounds, well below the 1978 high of 455 million pounds.

The 1988 export figures are inflated because of delays in shipments of tobacco bought in 1987 by Egypt and several other countries, Grise told the Wilmington Morning Star. If the figures on the delayed shipments are subtracted from total export figures, however, the result would still show an increase in exports, Grise said.

Total exports, including the delayed shipments, may be up to 20 to 25 percent, he said. Imports in 1988 fell 22.5 million pounds from the 162.8 million pounds that entered the United States in 1987, said Fred Bond, general manager of Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. For the 12 months ending Dec. 31, imports totaled 140.3 million pounds, he said.

The figures cover general arrivals, or all the tobacco that is inspected by the federal grading service, Bond said. He does not know how much of the tobacco went into bonded warehouses to be processed and shipped out again.

Tobacco manufacturers "said they were going to reduce imports," Bond said. Growers hope companies will buy domestic tobacco to replace the amount they were importing.

Despite the good news, export figures show that the U.S. market share to the United Kingdom and West Germany is steadily declining. "They have shifted purchases to other areas of the world" such as Zimbabwe and Brazil, Bond said.

Teacher Rushes Explosive Out Of School; Loses Sight

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM — A Durham High School chemistry teacher who ran from a chemistry lab with an explosive vial to keep it from injuring his students may have lost his sight when the container blew up in his face, school officials say.

Suryanarayana Chittilla and his students were arranging chemicals in a renovated laboratory Tuesday when water accidentally got into a vial of sodium metal. The combination can be explosive and forms lye.

"I didn't want the vial to explode in the school," said Chittilla, who grabbed the vial and raced from the laboratory filled with students. Windows in the laboratory could not be opened.

"I ran down the steps with flames coming out of the container," he said. "I reached the door and had my hand out to push the door open when the vial exploded."

Chittilla is being treated at Duke Medical Center for severe burns to his face and eyes. Doctors have told him he may not regain his sight.

Another teacher who washed out Chittilla's eyes after the blast was treated for burns when the caustic mixture got on her hands.

"We are deeply saddened by this," said principal Barbara Ellis. "I want people to know that we have teachers who are willing to risk their lives for the safety of students."

Dr. George Wylie, assistant superintendent of city schools, said there has been no official word on the condition of Chittilla's eyes.

"They will remain bandaged for a couple of days and then the doctors will give us some statement," Wylie said. "This is of great personal concern to me."

Wylie said he went to the school immediately after the accident.

"There was glass on the ceiling, the walls and the floor," he said. "It was a tremendous explosion. ... Were it not for his quick thinking, this could have been a very grave situation for more people."

Chittilla, a native of India, taught in Goldsboro and Onslow County before coming to Durham in 1985.

Electricity Knocked Out

HELENA, Mont. — Runaway railroad cars derailed and exploded early today, knocking out power to 37,000 people in and around Helena and forcing the evacuation of hundreds as the temperature dipped to 37 degrees below zero.

There were no immediate reports of injuries in the 4:48 a.m. explosion, which rocked houses up to three miles away as shattered windows in a nearby college and homes, officials said.

Report Says CIA Agent Had Bomb

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — The bomb that blew up Pan Am Flight 103 over Scotland was planted by Palestinian terrorists in the luggage of a CIA agent, a radio station said today.

David Johnson, head of the news department at Radio Forth, a commercial station in Edinburgh, reported the CIA officer was returning from Beirut with five colleagues after a mission to negotiate release of the nine American hostages in Lebanon.

In Lockerbie, Scotland, where the investigation into the Dec. 21 disaster is headquartered, chief inspector Gordon Ferrie said investigators had no comment on the report.

The report said its information came from Scottish police sources.

All 259 people on board the jet were killed when it exploded in the sky over Scotland.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

The Key

Hardison Amendments Hobble N.C.

It's time to unlock the handcuffs that fetter North Carolina's natural resources.

The key to those shackles is now in the hands of the State Senate. A bill co-sponsored by Pitt's Sen. Tom Taft would repeal the Hardison Amendments, a law which cripples North Carolina's environmental powers.

The Hardison Amendments are outdated and damaging in a state where natural resources play an enormous economic role. Their repeal is long overdue and the issue should be a top priority of the 1989 N.C. General Assembly.

The law, named for its author, former Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, prevents North Carolina from enacting any environmental regulations stricter than those set by the federal government. Since the legislation went into effect 15 years ago, the state has been unable to address environmental threats, particularly in air and water quality.

The result has been a state of helplessness against escalating pollution. The federal guidelines were devised as a kind of floor — a base for states to build their own set of environmental standards to address their own specific problems. Instead, North Carolina has used the federal guidelines as a ceiling.

That's dangerous in two respects.

First, being locked into minimum standards leaves the state powerless to stop pollution damaging to its environment and economy.

Second, it provides no incentive for specialists, those with expertise and insight into environmental issues, to actively monitor pollution and set suitable guidelines. Under the Hardison Amendments, the state blindly monitors conditions, without the advice of trained, knowledgeable experts. That's reverse of the preferred process. The state's experts should decide where to set the standards and the politicians should implement their advice. The Hardison Amendments remove the incentive to conduct precise research to determine what levels of pollutants cause damage to conditions unique to North Carolina.

In the East, where natural resources play an important role in the economy, the repeal of the amendments is especially significant. Coastal counties are dependent upon a quality environment to attract tourists and to support a profitable commercial fishing industry.

Threats to this quality environment abound. Close to home, Texasgulf Chemical's discharges of high levels of phosphorus into the Pamlico River have attracted sharp state concern. The industry has been cited and fined for air and water quality violations and a high incidence of fish and crab disease in the South Creek area prompted a re-examination of permitted discharge levels. A repeal of the Hardison Amendments would give North Carolina more flexibility in confronting industrial polluters.

If North Carolina is to protect its natural resources and the immense value they represent, it must have the power to set suitable standards. The Hardison Amendments are an impediment to such control. The bill demanding their repeal is a progressive, necessary move for a state with oceans, rivers, lakes, forests and mountains as assets.

Pickles, Corned Beef & Bailouts

You Don't Make Money By Putting It In Wax Paper

Art Buchwald

Those of you who have been wondering if the Bush administration has a sense of humor should be delighted to find out that it does. Recently, Secretary of the Treasury Nicholas Brady suggested that savings and loan depositors be taxed with a levy of 25 or 30 cents per hundred dollars. When Brady sent up the trial balloon, everyone in America laughed all the way to the bank.

How on earth did the S&Ls get into such a mess? Here is a typical case of what happened:

Mom and Pop Parker ran a delicatessen in Hillside Park. When business got slow, the Parkers decided to sell all of their cold cuts and potato salad and open an S&L instead. It was called The First Bonnie and Clyde Savings & Loan.

Pop Parker had no sooner opened the door when he received a call from his brother-in-law, Walter. "I need 30 seeded rolls, two pounds of corned beef, a dozen pickles and a boat-load of sauerkraut."

"Wait, Walter. I'm no longer in the delicatessen business. I'm in savings and loans."

"Why didn't you say so? I'll have a $10,000 note, $100,000 for a mortgage and line of credit from here to Oklahoma."

"Walter, your credit stinks. Why should I give you any money?"

"Because you're married to my sister, and when it comes to getting loans from an S&L, your family should come first."

Pop Parker had no choice but to extend all sorts of services to Walter.

Mom was behind the teller cage when her bridge partner, Mildred, walked in. Mildred said that she would like to take out a $50,000 loan to redo her bedroom.

"What kind of collateral do you have?" Mom wanted to know.

"Listen to Mrs. J.P. Morgan. When people go into banking they immediately forget their friends. You never asked me what collateral I had when I was holding the ace, king, queen and jack of hearts. If I had collateral, I would have gone to the Chase National where at least the pens don't smell of pickles."

"I'm making an exception for you," Mom said, "but don't go blabbing all over the neighborhood that the First Bonnie and Clyde S&L is a patsy when it comes to making loans."

Pop was wrapping the deposits in wax paper when Freddy Moonblatt walked in. Freddy and Pop were Masons and also played on the same softball team.

"Have you heard about the string of condos I'm building in Watershed?" Freddy asked.

"No, I haven't," Pop answered. "When did you go into building condos?"

"I just decided to when I saw who owned this S&L. I want to call it 'Parker Palace' after you and your lovely wife. I need $25 million in small bills."

"That could wipe the S&L out," Pop protested. "You don't make money in this business by putting it in wax paper. I'll pay 25 percent interest on the loan."

"That's a lot."

"I'd rather owe it to you than to strangers."

The upshot of this was that Mom and Pop Parker had taken care of their family, friends and acquaintances and wound up in the red to the tune of $40 million.

The Parkers weren't as disturbed as one might think. As Pop told the press when they were going under, "If we still had the delicatessen business, nobody would have bailed us out at all."

Tax Dollars: To Prisons Or Schools?

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH—This is one fine mess that North Carolina's prison system is in, and the solution will prove to be extremely costly to state taxpayers.

For the past several years, the state has faced dozens of lawsuits, filed by inmates, that claim that crowded conditions constitute the kind of "cruel and unusual punishment" the 8th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution forbids. The federal courts have agreed with those suing, and the state, concerned that the federal courts could take over the prison system, has been settling the lawsuits before trial. The settlements won't be cheap.

The latest settlement involves a lawsuit that covers 49 of the state's prison units. When this suit is resolved, it will raise to 62 the number of state prison units that will be moving toward compliance with federal standards in the 25 prisons not yet involved in a settlement, so they're planning to improve conditions in those units also.

The first legislative action is a $79 million package of construction and alternative punishment projects that was raced through the General Assembly late in January. In all, this assembly is being asked to spend $150 million over two years to improve prison conditions and to divert as many as 5,000 otherwise prison-bound offenders into alternative punishment programs.

Over the next eight years, total state spending to reduce crowding will be in the $600 million to $800 million range.

Maybe the scariest element of that estimate is that one of the leading negotiators for the state position, Sen. Aaron Plyler, D-Union, was unable to nail down a long term cost for the state. In an interview, Plyler first said the program would cost $75 million a year, then he said it would cost $800 million over eight years, or over six years, or over 10 years. Finally he conceded that it's all a guess. With inflation unknown, and the prison population unknown, the state can't really be sure how much it will cost to run a federally-approved prison system.

Part of the expensive new package will be one-time costs. The state will spend a great deal on new prison construction and on renovation, but then the state will be relieved of that burden. But with some portions of the package, those that pay salaries for increased numbers of parole and probation officers and prison guards, the costs are in the state budget for good.

The size of the package immediately drew the inevitable comparisons with the Basic Education Plan, the eight-year package that is designed to provide a minimum level of instruction for all children in the state. That program will increase annual state spending by an approximate $800 million a year, after eight years. Ever since the BEP was approved four years ago, legislators and gubernatorial candidates have been swearing that they will fund all eight steps of the plan, that they will have the resolve to make school improvement the first priority of state spending.

But the first spending item of 1989 already has become the prison system. The state has been forced to spend a big chunk of its limited resources on corrections and that only creates more pressure to cut back on the BEP. If the number one priority will be shown to have been just talk. Prison will have become the top priority of the state's leadership.

Understanding The Jest: Just One Thing, Over & Over

WASHINGTON — Pete Wilson, California's Republican senator, suddenly understands the jest that life is what happens to us when we are making other plans. Having just survived the rigors of a 20-month re-election campaign, his face should be wreathed with what senators call "a six-year smile": the certainty of six years before another rendezvous with the voters.

But Wilson's boyish brow is furrowed. He is under intense pressure to pack his bags, hit the road and run for governor of California in 1990.

The pressure on Wilson illustrates three things about contemporary politics. They are the seamlessness of the political seasons, the special importance of election years that end in "2" (1982, 1992) and the importance at all times of money.

The Republican incumbent, George Deukmejian, easily won re-election in 1986, but he does not want a third term. However, Wilson's achievement in winning a second term is not something to be lightly laid aside. Not since 1952 has anyone won a second term in the seat he holds. (It has been occupied by William Knowland, Clair Engle, Pierre Salinger, George Murphy, John Tunney and S.I. Hayakawa.)

But California's governorship is second only to the presidency among America's glittering political prizes. And possession of it is especially coveted by the national parties in the two years after each census.

In the 1980s, California, like New York in the 1940s, has been allotted 45 House seats. Its 47 electoral votes have been one-sixth of the total needed to win the White House. In 1992, California will have 53 electoral votes. Its projected six-seat gain in the House is part of the Sun Belt's gain — Texas and Florida three each, Georgia 2, and Arizona one. California Republicans know that many more than six seats can be gained if they can influence redistricting.

The Supreme Court's one-man, one-vote redistricting decisions require strict mathematical equality of population among districts. But that requirement leaves lots of room for gerrymandering. Politicians armed with computers have brought modern proficiency to the ancient art of drawing district lines to maximize the strength of the party doing the drawing.

In 1982, California gained two House seats, but Democrats enlarged their majority from 22-21 to 28-17. Granted, the party not controlling the White House usually gains in off-year elections, and the 1982 elections coincided with a severe recession. Still, artful redistricting helped Democrats, who controlled California's legislature and governorship.

To understand why do so many Republicans want to rely on Wilson so soon after his last race, begin with the basic fact (California is big) and the crucial variable (money).

The people pressuring Wilson want him to plunge in immediately because of his fund-raising experience and California's law about campaign giving. With more than one-tenth of the nation's population (nearly 29 million by 1990), California is a media state where a campaign eats money ravenously. Deukmejian spent $15 million in 1986.

Most candidates must spend huge sums just to buy "name recognition." Wilson has that, having run twice statewide for Senate and once unsuccessfully for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, and having been mayor of San Diego for a decade. In this he has an advantage over even Peter Ueberroth, who might be conscripted to run if Wilson declines.

California candidates can collect $1,000 from individuals each fiscal year. California's fiscal years end in June. Thus, for large last-minute assist from Ronald Reagan, Bush carried the state by less than three percentage points. That margin seems especially slight considering that California, which got a disproportionate share of defense spending during the Reagan buildup, stands to suffer disproportionately when Bush's austerity produces deep cuts in defense.

In 1990, California, Texas and Florida will elect governors. In 1992, those states will have 53, 32 and 24 electoral votes respectively. Their total — 109 — will almost equal the total (116) of Ohio, New York, Michigan, Illinois and Pennsylvania, which will lose a total of 11 House seats in 1992.

At the center of all this calculation and speculation stands a weary Wilson who, contemplating yet another campaign in the California nation, understands the jest that life is not one damn thing after another, it is one damn thing over and over.

Marine Sergeant Demoted After Conviction In Guard's Death

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAMP LEJEUNE — A Marine sergeant who was demoted to lance corporal for failing to account for a Marine who died after being abandoned in the Mojave desert expressed his regret to the victim's family.

Christopher Clyde was the platoon sergeant of Lance Cpl. Jason Rother, who was left behind after being posted as a road guide for a nighttime exercise at Twentynine Palms, Calif., last Aug. 30.

Rother, 19, of Minneapolis, was not reported missing for almost two days. His remains were found Dec. 4.

"I'd like to apologize to the Marine Corps, my regiment, my battalion, my officers and subordinates but most of all to the family of Lance Cpl. Rother and hope in time they can forgive me," Clyde said in a statement prior to sentencing on Wednesday.

Maj. Kent Smith, the military judge, ruled that Clyde was negligent by failing to follow policies, failing to report the status of his Marines and to properly account for the whereabouts and the welfare of his Marines. Clyde was found innocent of willful disobedience of an order.

Smith demoted Clyde to lance corporal, but ordered no other penalty. He could have ordered a reduction in rank to private, forfeiture of two-thirds of his pay for three months and confinement for three months.

Clyde, 28, of Mentor, Ohio, was the platoon sergeant of the 2nd Platoon, "K" Company, 3rd Battalion, 2nd Marines.

He had been charged with dereliction of duty and failing to obey an order directing him not to grant liberty to any of his men during the exercise.

Clyde maintained that he did nothing wrong and that he only reacted to the instructions of his superiors.

During his testimony at the general court-martial, Clyde admitted granting a liberty to Rother's squad leader, Sgt. Thomas B. Turnell, but said it was a mistake because of confusion over the liberty policy in effect.

The defense said that Clyde turned Rother over to the company executive officer, 1st Lt. Patrick Kline, for duty as a road guide. A vehicle assigned to pick up the guides failed to pick up Rother.

Defense Lawyer Capt. William Fisher told the court Rother's battalion commander, company commander, platoon leader and the battalion logistics officer didn't know where he was.

"Everyone in the chain of command but my client was an officer. My client knew where Rother was because he gave him to Lt. Kline and believed he would bring him back," said Fisher.

"Harry Truman said the buck stops here but it didn't stop here, it came all the way down to my client," Fisher said.

Capt. Robert Nunley, the prosecutor, contended that Clyde had ample opportunity to know Rother had not returned and should have been particularly concerned Aug. 31 when the operation officially ended and Rother failed to return — particularly after Rother had shown signs previously of heat-related problems in the desert.

"He screwed up and he screwed up in a major way," Nunley said during his closing arguments.

"We're not talking about Sgt. Clyde's standards, but what any reasonably prudent platoon sergeant would do under the circumstances," Nunley said.

A court-martial is scheduled to begin today for Turnell, 25, of Elrama, Pa. He is charged with dereliction of duty, willful disobedience of a lawful order and unauthorized absence.

Also facing charges in the case is 1st Lt. Allen V. Lawson, who is scheduled for court-martial on Feb. 7. He was in charge of assigning road guides during the exercise.

Guilford Has New Measles

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — A second case of red measles in Guilford County has been confirmed — this one involving a 28-year-old Greensboro woman who attended a chiropractic conference at Greensboro College about two weeks ago, health officials said.

But mass inoculations will not be given because it is unclear whether the woman was actually infectious while attending the Chiropractic Assistants Association of North Carolina conference Jan. 21 and 22, said Anna Schenk, health educator with the Guilford County Department of Public Health. Doctors believe the woman may not have been infectious until Jan. 23.

In Davidson and Forsyth counties, health officials and school administrators have canceled sporting events against schools in Cabarrus and Rowan counties where the bulk of the state's measles cases are centered. That precautionary measure should continue for at least two weeks or until no other suspected cases are reported in the southern Piedmont, officials said.

Greensboro College officials said Wednesday that no students were involved with the conference and no vaccinations are planned on campus.

Already, more than 1,000 students at Grimsley High School in Greensboro, Allen Jay Middle School and Southern Guilford High School in High Point have been vaccinated after possible exposure to measles.

North Carolina has reported more than 340 confirmed and suspected cases of measles in the past two months. The outbreak is significant because public health officials have long believed this disease had been brought under control through mandatory vaccination programs.

New Test Proposed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — First- and second-graders in North Carolina's schools could be given a new test next year that frees them from sitting down on two all-important days and filling in little circles on standardized exams.

The test, developed by the N.C. Department of Public Instruction and outlined Wednesday to a committee of the State Board of Education, puts more emphasis on teacher observations conducted up to three times a year.

Standardized exams, such as the California Achievement Test, are given over a period of two or three days, usually at near the end of the school year. They are used to assess student progress and identify remedial summer school candidates, academically gifted students and slow learners.

The General Assembly exempted grades 1 and 2 from taking the achievement test, but continued to require the exam for grades 3, 6 and 8. Some school systems still give the achievement test in the earlier grades, but for special purposes.

Under the new testing system, teachers can observe students two or three times a year, assessing math and communication skills. In the math portion, for example, teachers judge how well a second-grader counts beyond 100, counts by 2s, identifies odd and even numbers, and divides sets into halves — among other things.

The key factor is teacher observations made at different stages of the year, not a one-shot test.

The plan must be sent to the General Assembly for approval by March, and is expected to be available to school systems that opt to use it next fall.

IN THE STATE

Blackout

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — The lights went out all over Watauga County early today, causing phones to ring constantly at law enforcement agencies and stranding some in elevators at Appalachian State University.

"It's all over the county and we don't know why," a dispatcher at the Boone Police Department said just before he hung up to answer other calls. "I gotta go."

A dispatcher at the Watauga County Sheriff's Department said the power was out from 12:31 a.m. to 1:42 a.m.

Rape Verdict

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Randolph County jury has acquitted a former Asheboro High School bus driver of charges of second-degree rape.

Elliott Antonio Armstrong, 19, of Asheboro was charged with raping a 13-year-old neighbor in 1987 on a parked school bus. The girl, an eighth-grader at the time, was a passenger on the school bus Armstrong drove.

The jury of eight women and four men on Wednesday considered a charge of second-degree rape and a lesser charge of attempted rape.

Armstrong faced up to 40 years in prison.

Armstrong was expelled from Asheboro High School after the charges were made. He is now finishing high school in Guilford County.

Drug Conviction

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Donald Lamont Postell of Miami has been sentenced to 50 years in prison and fined $20,000 for conspiring to distribute more than 10 pounds of cocaine in North Carolina.

Both Postell and Alden Renard Washington were convicted in October of conspiring to distribute more than 5 kilograms of cocaine between January 1988 and last May. A kilogram is 2.2 pounds and can be worth $200,000 on the street, police say. As part of the conspiracy, about 6 pounds of cocaine was smuggled to Charlotte on an airplane, the indictment said.

Conviction

ELBERTON, Ga. (AP) — A Superior Court jury convicted Billy Shaw, 46, of Princeton, N.C., of the murder of his brother Wednesday after a one-day trial and three hours of deliberation.

Robert Edward Shaw, 39, of West Columbia, S.C., was shot to death Aug. 30 at the home of their uncle near Bowman. Billy Shaw was sentenced to life in prison.

Billy Shaw testified in his own defense that he remembered nothing about the shooting. He said he had been drinking and arguing with his brother since the night before the shooting.

Warrants Issued

DURHAM (AP) — Prison escapee Rodney Flynn McNeil has been named in 121 warrants obtained by Durham County sheriff's detectives on charges of breaking and entering, larceny and vehicle theft in Durham County.

The offenses occurred as far back as 1984 and as recently as last month, authorities said. They included the break-in and car theft at the home of Duke basketball coach Mike Krzyzewski last year and a theft of guns from the home of a sheriff's deputy, said Lt. G.B. McCorkle.

McNeil, 29, of Durham, also has told Durham police and investigators in Orange, Person, Granville, Wake and New Hanover counties about break-ins in those places since his arrest two weeks ago.

McNeil escaped April 17, 1985, from the Orange County Prison, where he had attained the trusty position of honor-grade cook. He had served 18 months of a 10-year sentence for breaking and entering.

Legislature Getting Bills From Both Parties To Eliminate 2nd Primaries

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Both Democrats and Republicans appear to be wooing the black vote by supporting elimination of second primaries in North Carolina.

Sen. Ralph Hunt, D-Durham, said earlier this week he was planning on sponsoring the bill, which has long been championed by blacks. But Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, got the jump on him by filing an identical bill Wednesday.

Johnson made no claims about having much Republican support, saying, "I haven't run this by the administration." But he admitted that GOP support could help Republicans draw black voters traditionally allied with the Democratic Party.

Hunt, however, said he wasn't worried about Republicans getting credit for the legislation.

"It doesn't matter who supports it so long as it passes," he said. "I'm not concerned about who steals whose thunder. ... It's the right thing to do."

Blacks have generally fared far worse in second primaries than whites — often suffering from low voter turnout even if they had more votes in the first primary.

Current law allows a candidate to call for a runoff if neither candidate receives at least 50 percent of the vote. That often is the case when more than two candidates vie for an office in a primary.

Johnson said the practice of having second primaries is uniquely Southern and was originally intended to discriminate against blacks.

"I think the time has come to put that behind us," he said. "We have some very able black politicians in Raleigh."

Johnson said the change also could save the state a lot of money.

"People have got a tendency to call for these things whether they've got a snowball's chance in hell," he said.

In other legislative action:

Insurance
State Insurance Commissioner Jim Long congratulated lawmakers for helping him curb runaway automobile insurance and liability rates, but he warned that health inurance may be the next area of concern.

Long told the House Commerce Committee health insurance rates may rise 20 percent to 40 percent a year for the next few years due to the federal government's cutbacks in health programs and changes in the health industry. He called for a state Medicare supplement to pick up the slack left at the federal level.

Long also asked for help with insurance fraud and arson, saying such problems cost North Carolinians $120 million a year.

In his four years in office, Long said the General Assembly successfully addressed a crisis in insurance availability and stabilized prices.

"North Carolina had the best response to commercial prices of any state in the nation," he said.

The state now ranks among the lowest in medical malpractice insurance rates and is ninth lowest in auto rates, with the final plank in an auto rate revision going into effect May 15, Long said.

When that law takes effect, North Carolinians will no longer face excessive surcharges for minor driving infractions. Under current law, for example, a driver who runs a stop sign can incur a 42 percent surcharge on top of the premium increase associated with the insurance points.

"It (the law) is starting to spread the risk to all of us," Long said.

Merit Pay
The Senate State Personnel Committee greeted its first look at a proposed merit-pay system for state employees with plenty of questions.

Committee members generally endorsed the concept of rewarding exceptional employees, but many wondered how the process would be administered and whether it would take the place of an across-the-board pay raise.

Sen. Joe Johnson, D-Wake, noted that the Legislature is looking at expanding a merit-based career ladder for teachers.

"Should not that same philosophy carry forward to those people who otherwise work in state government?" he asked.

G.C. Davis of the Office of State Personnel disputed Johnson's claim that seeking merit pay on top of a general pay raise presented a "mixed signal" from the administration.

"We have to balance the concerns of merit pay and the labor demand for people," Davis said. He said a 3-percent raise is necessary to keep state employees "competitive in the labor market," while another 1 percent could be used for merit pay.

Sen. Bill Staton, D-Lee, said he was concerned about rewarding people "for merely satisfactory performance."

And Sen. Dan Simpson, R-Burke, questioned how employees could appeal adverse decisions about merit pay.

Sen. Ralph Hunt, D-Durham, said he had similar concerns but was told, "This is what the employees want."

Sen. Fountain Odom, D-Mecklenburg, said he wanted to be sure a merit-pay plan was patterned after a tried and tested system in another state.

Panel Approves Plan To Drop Partisan Election Of Judges

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina should drop partisan election of judges and let the governor appoint them to head off a trend toward expensive, nasty judicial campaigns, a report to the General Assembly says.

But some members of the group that crafted the report say the proposed switch would create more problems than it would solve.

The Judicial Selection Study Commission put finishing touches on the report Wednesday and approved it 6-3. The chairman, Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, said he will introduce a bill incorporating the recommendations.

"It's going to be a tough bill to pass," Winner conceded.

Under the proposal, which would require a constitutional amendment, the governor would appoint judges of district, superior and appellate courts, subject to confirmation by the state House and Senate.

The judges would serve eight-year terms. After each term, their performance would be reviewed by the Judicial Standards Commission, which would recommend whether or not they should retain their posts. The Judicial Standards Commission investigates citizen complaints against judges.

The Legislature could overrule any commission recommendation by two-thirds votes of both chambers.

To be enacted, the new system would have to be approved by three-fifths votes in the House and Senate and receive majority backing in a statewide referendum, which the study panel said should be held this November.

In its report, written by a staff attorney, the study committee said its proposals "are essential to the maintenance of an independent and impartial judiciary. ... There is no time to lose."

The debate over how best to select judges is long running, but has intensified in the past two decades as the Republican Party has gained strength in North Carolina.

Researchers Link Dolphins' Death To Red Tide

By Paul Recer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Scientists say they are certain that a natural poison caused the massive die-off of bottlenose dolphins in 1987 and 1988, but they still are puzzled by the persistence of the deadly "red tide" that arose in the Gulf of Mexico and moved up the East Coast.

"We have never found this before in history," said Joseph Geraci, a wildlife specialist who headed a team of federal researchers.

Speaking at a news conference Wednesday, Geraci said laboratory findings confirm that the dolphins that died had eaten fish contaminated with a powerful poison, called brevetoxin, originating from the persistent bloom of red tide algae.

But North Carolina experts said they weren't convinced of the findings.

"People are starting to make mountains out of molehills," said Bill Bowen, area coordinator for the Marine Mammal Stranding Network of North Carolina. "Until (more) scientific research comes out, there's no way to determine who's right or wrong."

Gerald Scott, a federal fisheries expert, estimated that 50 percent of the dolphins living off the coast were killed, and said it could take 100 years for their numbers to recover.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration officials said laboratory findings "are unequivocal" about the cause of death, but just why the red tide made its rare and lethal invasion of the East Coast is not known.

Fisheries expert Ford Cross said red tides occur naturally, but are normally confined to the Gulf of Mexico where they arise and decline swiftly. But the 1987 red tide persisted for months, moved with the gulf current from the west coast of Florida and then was driven northward along the East Coast.

Cross said satellite photographs show that eddies of warm water lingered for long periods off the coast of North Carolina and neighboring states and that this may have enabled the algae to continue blooming. Occasionally, he said, the eddies would be shoved into coastal bays, bringing toxin-contaminated fish into dolphin feeding grounds.

A red tide is considered dangerous for oyster fishing in the gulf if the count of cells reaches 5,000 per liter of water, Cross said. During the time the dolphins were dying, he said, some tests along the North Carolina coast found cell counts of more than 20 million per liter.

Bottlenose dolphins are mammals that live in the water. They breathe air, give birth to live young and nurse their calves. The animal is highly intelligent and is popular in marine shows because it is easily trained and is long-lived.

During the summer of 1987, hundreds of dead and dying dolphins washed onto beaches on the East Coast, from Florida to New Jersey. The massive die-off alarmed officials and led to the formation of an investigative team of more than 100 scientists from several federal agencies.

Of the dolphins that washed up on the East Coast near the end of 1987, 84 were found on North Carolina beaches and in the sounds, said Rhett B. White, director of the N.C.

Aquarium on Roanoke Island.

Most of the dolphins washed up on the northern Outer Banks, particularly the Currituck beaches, between August and November 1987, he said.

White said most of the dead dolphins found were immature and older animals, while there were fewer of the "prime-of-life, healthy" ones. He equated it to an age breakdown of humans suffering from a flu epidemic.

Nevertheless, he said he was unsure whether the red tide was the cause.

"Because of the location of the red tide problem in North Carolina inside the sounds and interior waters, it may be difficult to tie that directly to the dolphin problem," he told The News and Observer of Raleigh, N.C.

Bowen said there were 98 dolphins that washed ashore in North Carolina in 1986, 48 during the fall of 1988 and eight in January 1989. "In some there were indications of the red tide disease, in some there was no indication," he said.

Geraci said it took the team 18 months and thousands of laboratory tests to confirm that red tide toxin killed the animals.

The dolphins, said Geraci, either "died as a direct consequence of the toxin" or were poisoned by it "and lived long enough to become weakened and susceptible to other organisms," such as bacteria, and viruses.

Scott said the poison seemed to affect younger dolphins, aged 3 to 6 years, more than others. Some nursing calves died from their mothers' toxin-poisoned milk. Scott said that though only 742 dolphin bodies were found along the beaches, it is likely that hundreds upon hundreds of others died unseen just offshore.

"The population was reduced on the order of 50 percent," said Scott. "The recovery to the original stock levels could take from 14 to 100 years."

Duke Posts Reward In Rapes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM — Duke University is offering $25,000 rewards for information leading to the arrest and conviction of those responsible for the rapes of two Duke employees this week as well as the rapes of students in November and December, officials said.

"All these incidents trouble and anger us," Duke President H. Keith H. Brodie said at a news release Wednesday. "We offer these rewards in the hope that they will encourage someone to come forward promptly with helpful information."

Duke also announced measures to increase safe-ride and escort programs and permit students freer access through the hospital when walking to dormitories. Employees arriving for work before dawn will be permitted to use yellow emergency phones to call public safety officers for rides, the release said.

Capt. Robert Dean, chief of detectives for Duke's Department of Public Safety, said his office has received 20 to 25 calls about the rapes on Monday and Tuesday. There are no suspects yet, he said.

Rapes have been reported on the Duke campus in each of the last three months. On Nov. 9, a student was raped at a campus apartment, police said. On Dec. 13, a student was riding a bicycle along Duke University Road in the early morning and was raped, authorities said.

Monday, two men assaulted a Duke employee in a parking deck at 8 a.m. and one of the men raped her. ON Tuesday at 6:30 a.m., a medical center employee was raped when she walked to work along a road, police said.

Selection Of Jurors For North Poses Problem In Finding Qualified Peers

By Mike Feinsilber
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a Washington courtroom, a judge is looking for that rarest of creatures — the person who barely knows anything about Oliver North.

The judge selecting jurors to try North is making some progress, but the question arises: Will the jury that results be a cross-section of the community, capable of rendering an informed judgment?

In the legal sense, it will be a jury of North's peers. The law only requires that it be a cross-section of citizens from which no one has been excluded by reason of sex, race or other arbitrary criteria. It need not be people comparable to North in any other way.

What Judge Gerhard A. Gesell seeks is a jury "ignorant" of North's activities — people so removed from world affairs during the summer of 1987 that they were unaware that North told Congress he had lied to it, believing his duty to his country required such deception.

Such searches are conducted to ensure that jurors do not enter a case prejudiced either for or against a defendant. But in North's case, it means the exclusion of an enormous number of potential jurors who, at one point or another, read or heard something about him.

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., who served on the Iran-Contra Committee and is a former state judge, said the exclusion of knowledgeable people as jurors "has inherent problems in it and raises real questions," but he doesn't know the answers.

He said some people simply don't watch television out of choice or because they are too busy. "On the other hand, you have the chance they didn't have any interest and you would think they're lacking in the necessary intelligence to serve on it," he said.

"Whether they will differ from normal, average jurors remains to be seen," he said. "If a man never saw anything of it, what type of individual is he?"

Others go further. Bill Moffitt, a well-known criminal defense lawyer, questions whether a fair verdict can be rendered by people who knew nothing about the Iran-Contra affair before stepping into Gesell's courtroom.

"I wouldn't want people who lived in Washington, the seat of government, on that jury who were so uninformed," said Moffitt.

"Are they going to be interested in what goes on inside the courtroom if they were so uninterested for so long on what went on outside it?"

Moffitt said justice would be better served if six of the jurors could be drawn from the uninformed and six from those who followed the Iran-Contra affair, though he concedes that is not practical.

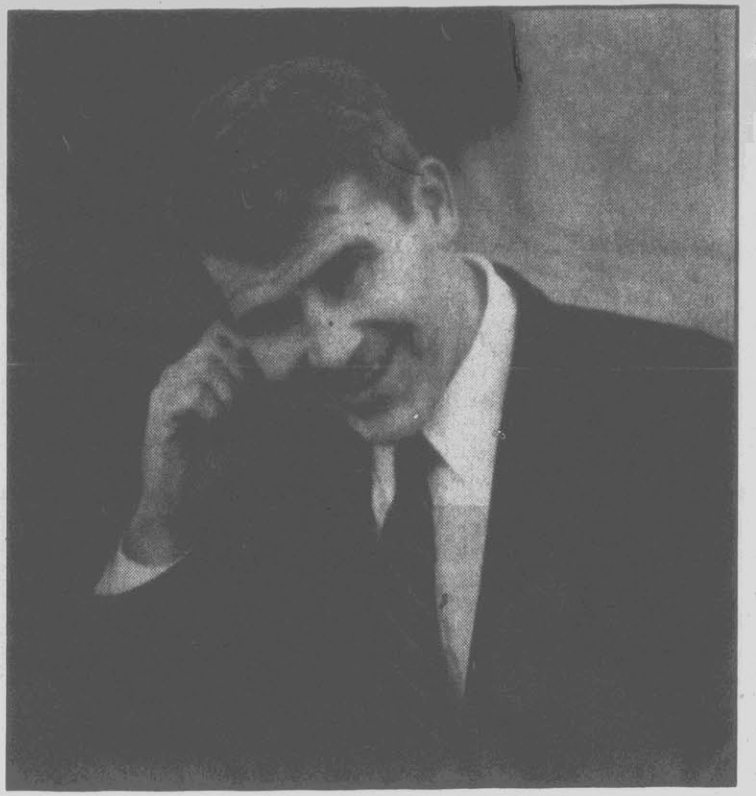

On the other hand, say some legal experts, the jury system works well even with jurors who, for whatever reason, arrive innocent of knowledge of the case.

"Jurors are asked to bring a certain common sense into the jury room and try to determine whether a particular story makes sense and look witnesses in the eye to tell who is telling the truth," said Philip Lacovara, a former prosecutor in the Watergate trial, another case drenched in publicity before it reached trial.

"It is not necessary for people to be highly educated or current in world affairs to make that assessment," Lacovara said.

"It's a burden to find qualified jurors, but I'm not saying it can't be done," added Wayne LaFave, a criminal law expert at the University of Illinois.

"Don't forget that all the pre-trial publicity hasn't been unfavorable," added Neal Sonnett of Miami, president-elect of the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers. "Don't forget the movement to pardon North. Not many people facing serious felony charges are asked to speak in support of the re-election of members of Congress."

The Associated Press

North tugs at ear as he leaves courthouse after second day

So the government has to be as careful about prejudiced jurors as the defense."

The jury's ignorance of North's activities is crucial because he was compelled to talk to Congress' Iran-Contra committees. In exchange, he was given limited immunity, a promise that his testimony would not be used against him in court.

Prosecutors developed their case independently and charged North with obstructing presidential and congressional inquiries, lying to Congress and shredding evidence.

For all the attention focused on North, Gesell, before the trial started, expressed confidence that an unknowing jury could be found to hear the facts and draw its own conclusions.

He said the same questions were raised in the Watergate case, but a jury was found, a verdict was rendered and justice was done.

Kemp Agrees To Cut Fees For Speaking By $55,000

By William M. Welch
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Former Rep. Jack Kemp has agreed to return or give up more than $55,000 in speaking fees after being told by a Senate committee he had apparently violated federal limits on outside income for members of Congress.

Kemp's nomination by President Bush to become secretary of Housing and Urban Development was before the Senate Banking Committee today, where it was expected to be approved and sent to the Senate floor for confirmation.

Kemp filed financial disclosure forms last week with the committee and the federal Office of Government Ethics reporting honoraria amounting to $67,350 above what House rules allow.

The Associated Press learned Wednesday that the staff director of the Democratic-controlled committee, Kevin Gottlieb, confronted Kemp personally last week with the apparent violation.

The former congressman from Buffalo, N.Y., agreed to return $16,000 in speaking fees and to forgo another $39,400 in fees not yet received.

He also deferred receipt of an additional $12,500 in fees earned in 1988 until 1989 to avoid violating the limits on honoraria congressmen can receive in any one year. The actions brought Kemp $550 below his 1988 limit.

A spokeswoman for Kemp, Mary Brunette, described the problems as "just a misunderstanding."

Gottlieb said the former congressman mistakenly believed that money received after leaving Congress was not covered by the House limits, even though it was for appearances made while a member of Congress.

Kemp filed an amended financial report with the Senate Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee and the U.S. Office of Government Ethics on Monday to reflect the changes. The changes were made without public disclosure by either Kemp or the Senate committee.

Kemp's aide and the committee acknowledged the changes in response to questions from the AP, which identified the problem in a review of Kemp's financial statements.

Kemp was subject to the House rules limiting all outside income, including honoraria, to 30 percent of his $89,500 congressional salary — or $26,850. In addition, a less restrictive federal statute limits honoraria to 40 percent of congressional salary, or $35,800.

In his original filing, Kemp reported receiving $119,000 in honoraria for 1988. He also reported giving $24,800 of the money to charity, which under House rules is not counted against the limit.

House rules also limit honoraria — fees for speeches or similar appearances — to no more than $2,000 per event. In his original filing, Kemp reported several well in excess of that $2,000 limit.

He reported receiving $30,000 for two appearances on the television show "Firing Line" in September and October, and $10,000 each for speeches to Hartford University, A.B. Laffer and Associates, and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. He also reported receiving $5,000 from World Trade Assoc., and $2,400 from Crosby Assoc.

Gottlieb said Kemp told him he believed the limits did not apply because he was leaving Congress and would not receive the checks until after he was out of office.

Southern Democrats To Seek Easier Transition For Brown

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Leading Southern Democrats are lining up to help Ronald H. Brown counter complaints about his liberal ties and smooth his transition to the chairmanship of the Democratic Party.

Govs. Ray Mabus of Mississippi and Bill Clinton of Arkansas planned to greet Brown as he opened a two-day swing through the region where his links to Edward M. Kennedy and Jesse Jackson produced the most objections from conservative Democrats.

An Associated Press survey of elected and party officials around the country found strong support for Brown, coupled with advice that he quickly establish his independence and demonstrate a commitment to keep the party in the political mainstream.

Brown's four rivals for the party chairmanship have dropped out of the race, leaving him a sure winner when the Democratic National Committee elects a successor to Paul G. Kirk Jr. on Feb. 10.

"He's a terrific guy and will do a great job," said Gov. James Blanchard of Michigan. But Blanchard also suggested that the task ahead for Brown will not be easy.

"I just think the party is in more difficult shape than it has admitted nationally," he said. "I think the general drift of the Democratic Party since the mid '60s has been downward nationwide. I think that large numbers of people are feeling that in the national scheme of things, we're not speaking to them."

While Democrats control the House and Senate and hold a majority of the nation's governorships, they have lost five of the last six presidential elections. Southern states have voted solidly Republican in recent presidential contests.

"If we want to win we have to bring the so-called Reagan Democrats home," said John Henry Anderson, the Georgia Democratic Party chairman. He called Brown "Jackson's man" but said the incoming party chairman will demonstrate his independence if he works hard to find a presidential candidate who appeals to moderate and conservative Democrats."

"He was not my choice," said Anderson, "but I look forward to working with him."

Louisiana Sen. John Breaux urged Brown to appoint a task force to address the concerns of party moderates.

"I think we should give him a chance to address the concerns of those who are out there," said Breaux, who is chairman of the Senate Democratic Campaign committee. "If he doesn't, then he'll be open to criticism."

Brown was Jackson's convention manager last summer and received credit for helping bring the session to a harmonious close. He was general counsel to the Senate Judiciary Committee when Kennedy was chairman and then served as deputy manager of the Massachusetts senator's 1980 presidential campaign.

Brown's ties to Jackson and Kennedy triggered suggestions he would make it more difficult for Democrats to shake an image that the party was too liberal.

Nurses Get The Word: Patients Like Humor

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

McMURRAY, Pa. — When Fran Solomon blows her whistle, bank presidents stand on chairs, attorneys howl and nurses roar like lions, blow passionate kisses and shoot the air with their fingers like gunslingers.

Ms. Solomon, a registered nurse from Berkeley, Calif., is a humor consultant whose mission is to rid the world of boredom and help employees lighten up and enjoy their work.

"Inside the crankiest, grumpiest, grouchiest person you know is a child who's dying to get out and enjoy himself," Ms. Solomon said Wednesday at a seminar for nurses at a nursing home in this Pittsburgh suburb.

"We're not proposing people tell jokes at work or create a circus," she said. "But we are proposing that people have an opportunity to express all that they are — from tears to laughter, the whole spectrum of feeling."

Ms. Solomon spreads her gospel of humor in lectures, conferences and workshops, and has looked for the funny bone in such unlikely places as the Army and AT&T.

Acting more like a stand-up comic than a consultant Wednesday, Ms. Solomon prodded her audience of 100 nurses and other health-care professionals into acting silly. She encouraged them to seek support by asking for a standing ovation or express boredom by making a sign that looked a lot like someone picking their nose.

Ms. Solomon said she knows many people may feel "this overwhelming urge to bolt for the door" when she requests particularly unusual behavior, so she doesn't require a response. Few people, however, just sat back and watched.

"I set up ground rules for people where they only do what feels safe to them," she said.

As she bounced from one routine to the next, trading one goofy mask for another, Ms. Solomon cited research that indicates humor can help in the healing process while stress can delay recovery.

"The prediction is that by the year 2,000, 80 percent of workmen's compensation claims will be stress related," she said.

"We need to find a new way of doing business in this country that supports people being whole, healthy, happy, satisfied, so that they come to work and find they really have an opportunity to express themselves, to impact the world, to make a difference. And humor is a part of that."

Research supports the theory that laughter is important for good health. Laughter releases endorphins, which are natural painkillers and help the body deal with stress.

Recent studies show that people who can laugh it up under pressure seem to have greater resistance to stress-related ailments, and that humor therapy helps relieve painful muscle-bone disorders and depression.

A good hearty laugh provides a mini-workout by exercising the diaphragm, thorax, abdomen, heart and lungs.

Ms. Solomon suggested nurses try a little humor on the job. Taking vital signs while wearing a clown nose or writing with a pen shaped like an eggplant can bring a smile to most people's faces, she said.

"Patients love it. Walk into a patient's room and tell a joke and everyone in all the beds will be paying attention, even the person who is hearing impaired," she said with a laugh. "Everyone wants to get into the act."

"I'm not ready to walk into a patient's room with a clown nose, but I think she reminded us that we need to lighten up," said Connie McCormick, a nurse from suburban Dormont.

Child Used As Shield Is Wounded

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A 3-year-old boy was shot and seriously wounded when he was picked up by a stranger and used as a shield during a gunfight, police said. The boy's mother watched, screaming, "Leave my baby alone!"

Greg Alvarez shouted, "Mommy, Mommy," just before a bullet struck his left arm and passed through his chest, said his mother, Modesta Alvarez.

He was taken to Brookdale Hospital, where he was listed in serious but stable condition, police said.

The shooting in the Cypress Housing Project occurred Wednesday afternoon when many residents were outdoors enjoying unseasonably warm weather, said a police spokesman, Sgt. John Clifford.

Police said it was unclear exactly what caused the gunfight but it appeared that two groups of youths got into an argument.

Eric Casseus, an 18-year-old Brooklyn man who suffered a minor gunshot wound, was arrested by police and accused of picking up the child and holding him against his chest as he fled gunmen, said another spokesman, Officer Edward Feeney. He was charged with first-degree assault and unlawful imprisonment, Feeney said.

Study Tends To Back Peary Claim He Was First At North Pole

By Lee Dye
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Polar explorer Robert E. Peary, whose legacy has been suspended in limbo the past few months as scholars debated over whether he should be ranked as one of the nation's leading heroes or one of its greatest frauds, got a little help Wednesday.

The non-profit Navigation Foundation said a mysterious document that surfaced last October does not prove that Peary lied when he claimed to have "discovered" the North Pole in 1909. The foundation concluded further that the numbers scrawled on the piece of scratch paper were grossly misinterpreted and, moreover, were not even from that expedition.

The foundation studied the document at the request of the National Geographic Society, which financed Peary's expeditions, because of growing doubt about the explorer's claims.

The debate has intensified considerably in recent months, partly because of the society's own National Geographic magazine, which published an article last September by British polar explorer Wally Herbert that questioned whether Peary had actually reached the pole.

The debate is a little harsher now than it was a few years ago, but it is not new. It began almost as soon as Peary returned from the frozen north 80 years ago. It has been fueled partly by nearly a total lack of evidence to support Peary's claim that he reached the pole with five companions and spent 30 hours there in an ice igloo that the six men built.

In his article in National Geographic last year, Herbert said he was "dismayed" that Peary's handwritten diary contained several blank pages covering the time when he claimed to have been at the pole, and there were no entries about the activities during that period. Particularly troubling has been the total lack of sextant readings that would have pinpointed Peary's position.

Instead, a loose piece of paper had been inserted in the diary, declaring "The Pole at last!!!"

Herbert, while concluding that the evidence is so inconclusive that the truth may never be known, suggested that Peary, who died in 1950, may have felt justified if he fudged a little.

Meanwhile, astronomer Dennis Rawlins of Baltimore, who published a book in 1973 in which he argued that Peary probably never reached the pole, came across a document that changed the entire tone of the debate. While researching another matter at the National Archives, Rawlins found a slip of paper that had been placed in the archives long after Peary's death.

The paper, in an envelope dated 1909, had a series of numbers scrawled on it, and Rawlins said he recognized them as readings from a sextant revealing that Peary never got farther than 88 degrees 15' north, or about 121 statute miles from the pole.

The document became available in 1984 when Peary's descendants unsealed his files, but no one paid any attention to the cryptic numbers.

There the matter stood until Wednesday, when the Navigation Foundation released an interim report on Rawlins' conclusions. After studying the document, the foundation concluded that "Rawlins' analysis is clearly incorrect."

The date, 1909, which had been scrawled on the envelope by someone other than Peary, was incorrect, the foundation concluded.

Retired Rear Adm. Thomas D. Davies, president of the foundation, said three experts evaluated the document and concluded that it was not even from the 1909 expedition.

While examining the files, the investigators found a letter in which Peary's daughter, Marie Stafford, told Bowman that her mother admitted she may have made a mistake when she dated the envelope April 7, 1909 — the day Peary claimed to have reached the pole.

Davies said the document amounted to "scratch paper," apparently used by Peary to calibrate his instruments during an earlier polar expedition in 1906. Davies told a press conference Wednesday at the United States Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md.

According to Davies, Rawlins mistakenly thought numbers on the slip of paper represented compass readings, but in fact they were "time sights" used to check the accuracy of Peary's three chronometers, precise timekeeping instruments used by navigators. Furthermore, the slip refers to the star Betelgeuse, which Peary could not have seen in April 1909, the foundation concluded.

Rawlins made the mistake, Davies said, because "he clearly was not trained in navigation."

"This piece of paper provides no evidence Peary faked his claim," Davies said. But it also says "absolutely nothing about whether Peary reached the pole."

In a telephone interview, Rawlins conceded that the foundation had found several mistakes in his interpretation of the document.

"It's (the foundation's investigation) a competent piece of work which presents an alternative interpretation," Rawlins said.

He insisted, however, that Peary's claim to have reached the North Pole is unfounded.

Whether he succeeded or not, Peary's fame meant almost as much to the National Geographic Society as it did to the explorer, earning the organization a prestigious role in scientific research. And Gilbert M. Grosvenor, president of the Society, was clearly irked annoyed Wednesday by Rawlins' claims.

"Suggesting Peary might not have reached the pole is one thing," Grosvenor said. "Declaring him a fraud is another."

So the debate continues.

U.S. Sends Gear To Aid Oil Cleanup

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SANTIAGO, Chile — Tons of equipment that left the United States on an Air Force transport with a team of clean-up experts headed for Antarctica today to tackle an oil spill that poses a major environmental threat.

The huge C-5 plane was bound for the southern city of Punta Arenas, where its cargo and the 15-member team will be transferred to a U.S. research vessel, the Polar Duke, the U.S. Embassy in Santiago said.

In the Antarctic, U.S. scientists were trying to catch floating oil barrels and propane containers near the spill, which was four miles in diameter and moving to the southwest, the National Science Foundation said.

The agency said in Washington that the Argentine supply vessel that released the oil after it ran aground and sank had carried 250,000 gallons of diesel fuel. It said an "incurable disaster" would result if all the fuel leaks into the pristine region's unspoiled waters.

In Buenos Aires, an Argentine navy spokesman insisted that the spill was not posing a serious ecological threat.

The Bahia Paraiso (Paradise Bay) ran aground on Saturday in the Bismarck Strait, about 600 miles south of the southern tip of South America and 1½ miles from the U.S. Palmer Research Station on the Antarctic Peninsula.

All passengers and crew were rescued, but the ship floated free in heavy seas and sank Tuesday, spilling barrels of oil and several hundred propane gas containers, said Jack Talmadge, a spokesman for the National Science Foundation. Another foundation spokesman in Washington, Jack Renerie, said most of the oil was in steel drums so the ecological threat may not be as big as originally feared.

However, "There's a bunch of free (drifting) oil down there," he said. "The slick has arrived at Palmer Station," a scientific outpost run by the foundation.

Talmadge said he was not sure if the oil leak was continuing.

"The water surrounding the ship is covered with a couple of centimeters (about an inch) of oil. There is a sheen of oil in a much wider area around the ship, including evidence of oil on the coastline of the several islands there."

"Wildlife has already begun to be affected," including krill, the small crustaceans that form the basis of the Antarctic food chain, Talmadge said.

"Birds which have eaten the krill are showing behavior differences," he said. "One dead penguin had been found as of a few hours ago."

A foundation statement said about 12,000 pairs of penguins and other sea birds nested in the area last year. "In a few weeks, hatching penguins will leave their nests and enter the now-fouled Antarctic waters, as will their parents."

In Buenos Aires, an Argentine navy spokesman said: "There could be a small stain" from the release of oil in the engine room of the ship. "Anything else, no," he said.

The ship was carrying tourists as well as fuel for several polar stations.

Arrest Of Black Suspect Triggers Riot In Tampa

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TAMPA, Fla. — Gunshots, rocks and bottles rained down on more than 100 police officers as they put down a riot triggered by the arrest of a black drug suspect who later died in custody, authorities said.

Wednesday night's three-hour disturbance was the third riot in the predominantly black College Hill section in two years and the second in Florida in two weeks.

A 22-square-block area of the neighborhood was cordoned off after the violence began as undercover officers struggled to arrest the 6-foot-3, 300-pound suspected cocaine buyer.

"The man fought us and punched one of our detectives three times in the nose," said Lt. Jesse James.

At least four officers received minor injuries, including the detective involved in the arrest, who suffered a broken nose, police said.

No other injuries were reported. Police did not say if any arrests were made, and no damage estimates were available.

A crowd, estimated at 150 at its peak, began to toss rocks and bottles at the officers. Before the violence was quelled, a grocery store was looted and set ablaze and a television news van was damaged by two shotgun blasts, police said.

The drug suspect, whose name was not released, collapsed in a police cruiser and died at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Neither hospital nor police officials would discuss the nature of his injuries, but police spokesman Steve Cole said no shots were fired. The suspect was carrying a derringer, a small pistol, in his back pocket, said Cole.

Gene Bexley, owner of Bexley's Bar-B-Q in the neighborhood, said youths looted a grocery store before it was set on fire.

"Once they broke it, it took 10 to 15 minutes and they cleared it out," he said. "Some went in, then things come flying out windows and doors."

The fire also forced choir members at nearby Deliverance Tabernacle Church to toss an organ and other valuables into a truck as a precaution.

A youth with a shotgun fired on a WFLA-TV van, said cameraman Eugene Moore.

"I knew he was empty after the second shot," said Moore, who was not injured. "I almost went back to get him. That's what made me mad. I guess the little guy was having a ball."

Mayor Sandy Freedman showed up at the northeast Tampa neighborhood wearing a formal gown.

"People who are out there and causing this are hoodlums," said the mayor, who had been attending an awards dinner.

The unrest apparently spilled over to a west Tampa housing project, where youths attacked firefighters called to extinguish fires in two trashbins.

In October 1987, rock- and bottle-throwing broke out in College Hill after a black teen-age girl was hit by a vehicle that ran off the road and the driver fled. Eight people were hurt and 11 arrested.

Violence also flared in February 1987 after a 23-year-old black man died while in police custody. A white police officer who had used a neck hold to subdue him eventually was cleared of wrongdoing and the neck hold was banned.

Last month, blacks in Miami rioted for several days after a police officer fatally shot a black motorcyclist who was being sought for speeding.

Botha Quits Party Job

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President P.W. Botha, who is recovering from a stroke suffered two weeks ago, resigned today as the leader of the governing National Party, the government said.

There was no immediate indication if Botha had any plans to step down as president. Doctors said today that Botha would need at least another month before he could consider returning to work.

Botha was replaced as party leader by National Education Minister F.W. de Klerk, who is considered one of the leading candidates to succeed Botha as president.

Botha became party leader in 1978 at the same time he was elected to prime minister. He became president in 1984 under a new constitution that abolished the post of prime minister.

U.S. Will Pass Up Annual Maneuvers To Ease Discontent In West Germany

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon, in a move designed to save money and quell West German discontent over the massive U.S. military presence there, announced Wednesday that it would scale back the principal military maneuvers that train American troops for a full-scale deployment to Europe in the event of war.

Under the shift, the Pentagon will cancel its planned 1989 "Reforger" exercise, normally held each year, and scale back the size of future Reforger exercises.

"Reforger," short for "Return of Forces to Germany," has been held at roughly yearly intervals since 1967, when Great Britain and the United States withdrew some of their ground troops and aircraft crews from West Germany. In making the withdrawals, the allies promised to send the forces back regularly as proof of the Western commitment to defend West Germany from a Soviet attack.

The Pentagon billed the change as an "enhancement," saying that the new plan will permit the U.S. Army in Europe to train more efficiently. But Department of Defense officials acknowledged that the changes were prompted by tight budgets and by the outcry in West Germany, where the United States has 250,000 servicemen and women, over the hazards of military training to the public.

The change also comes in the wake of Soviet announcements promising unilateral troop reductions from Eastern Europe. Throughout Western Europe, the Soviet proposals have raised hopes that the superpowers and their allies will begin to dismantle their armed confrontation at the borders of East and West Germany.

"There's obviously some political dimension here," said a senior Department of Defense official. The source added that some administration officials were concerned that the reduction could send a signal of faltering U.S. commitment to the allies at a critical time in East-West relations.

But military officials said the move was "purely monetary," and that they could train soldiers to fight in Europe more cheaply by making better use of simulators and smaller-scale exercises.

The cutback was proposed by Gen. William Galvin, the commander of U.S. forces in Europe, and had the enthusiastic backing of West German government officials, a Department of Defense source said.

"We're continually looking for ways to improve our training techniques, to get the maximum value from the funding available, and to minimize the impact of our training on the local population and the environment," said Department of Defense spokesman Cmdr. Mel Sundin. "Our goal is always to train 'smarter,' not less."

The Pentagon will conduct a smaller maneuver, called "Caravan Guard," in September 1989 to test its new training techniques.

Quayle Mingles With Heads Of State On Venezuela Visit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle today embarked on a second day of high-level meetings as he sandwiched get-acquainted sessions with heads of state around the inaugural ceremony for Venezuela's new president.

Quayle met this morning with Spain's prime minister, Felipe Gonzalez, and then with Brazilian President Jose Sarney.

The meeting with Sarney centered almost entirely on the Latin debt crisis and the one with Gonzalez on a range of U.S.-European political and security issues, said Quayle's press secretary, David Beckwith.

U.S. Ambassador Otto Reich said Quayle seems to be developing a good rapport and handling himself confidently in the meetings. He said the foreign leaders mostly want to ask questions about the Bush administration policies on the Third World debt situation and Central American conflicts.

"They like him. There is very good rapport. They think he's very open, obviously very interested in listening," Reich said.

Quayle has explained that the new administration's policies are still developing, the ambassador said. "He's explaining ... that the administration is less than two weeks old."

While Quayle held bilateral meetings upstairs in the Caracas Hilton Hotel, Cuba's President Fidel Castro met briefly with Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega in the downstairs lobby.

Quayle and the U.S. delegation are trying to learn more about a peace proposal that Ortega brought with him to Caracas, according to a U.S. official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Quayle will not meet with Ortega, Reich said, but the Nicaraguan shared his proposal in a meeting Wednesday with former President Carter and Perez. Carter declined to discuss details.

Reich said Quayle had no plans to meet with Carter, although the two did speak briefly Wednesday night at a reception held at the ambassador's residence.

Beginning his three-day Latin American trip Wednesday, Quayle warned that the United States will not look kindly on formation of a "debtors' cartel" to deal with the region's creditors, whose hold $440 billion in debts.

He met with Colombia's president, Virgilio Barco, with outgoing Venezuelan President Jaime Lusinchi and with Lusinchi's successor, Perez.

Quayle today continued his effort to meet as many heads of state as possible while he was here for the Perez swearing-in. The schedule included meetings with the presidents of Spain, Brazil, Costa Rica, Honduras, Peru and Portugal and a lunch with Caribbean leaders.

Michael Skol, a State Department Latin America specialist traveling with Quayle, said the vice president was taking a cautious approach.

"He's not saying too much when he shouldn't say too much," especially on topics for which President Bush's policy is still developing.

Quayle arrived on the Bush administration's first overseas diplomacy mission to find a atmosphere buzzing with talk of the region's financial crisis.

During his meeting with Perez, aides said, the two agreed to disagree on the Third World debt issue, but concurred on the need to push for democratic reforms in Nicaragua and Panama.

The Venezuelan leader has been active in promoting the idea of a coordinated Latin effort to deal with the countries' debts. The United States opposes any organization amounting to a cartel but is not ruling out other kinds of multilateral approaches, said Quayle's national security adviser, Carnes Lord.

Quayle told reporters the new administration is "absolutely opposed to the idea of a debtors' cartel."

Progress Reported

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — The foreign ministers of China and the Soviet Union agreed today that progress is being made in resolving the Cambodia conflict, which has hampered Sino-Soviet efforts to end a generation of strained relations.

The Soviet, Eduard Shevardnadze, also concurred with the Chinese position that international supervision will be needed to ensure peace in Cambodia after Vietnam ends its 10-year occupation of the Southeast Asian country.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Li Zhaoxing said Shevardnadze's nearly three-hour meeting with Foreign Minister Qian Qichen focused on Cambodia and did not touch on the main purpose of Shevardnadze's visit — setting a date for the first Sino-Soviet summit since 1959.

The meeting between Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Chinese senior leader Deng Xiaoping, expected this spring, is likely to be discussed when the foreign ministers meet again Friday.

Li quoted Shevardnadze as saying the process of settling the Cambodian question is "speeding up." Qian agreed, saying "the situation concerning the Kampuchean (Cambodian) question has been developing."

Qian said the three Chinese-backed resistance factions and the Vietnam-backed government should be allowed to solve the question of Cambodia's future free from outside interference.

Asked by reporters if Cambodia has ceased to be an obstacle to better Sino-Soviet relations, Li said: "Both China and the Soviet Union maintain that Vietnam should pull out all its troops from Kampuchea as early as possible. The two sides hold that the Kampuchean question should be given a fair and reasonable solution and for this purpose the two countries have been making much effort."

Hyundai To Develop Resort In N. Korea

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL, South Korea — In a joint venture unprecedented for the divided Korean peninsula, the south's Hyundai conglomerate has signed agreements to develop a tourist resort, shipyard and railroad plant in the communist north.

The agreement between the sometimes bitter rivals, reported by North Korea's media on Wednesday, is considered a business deal with political connotations because the north is still technically at war with South Korea.

The countries have no official ties. South Korean tycoon Chung Ju-yung, Hyundai's honorary chairman, confirmed today after returning from a 10-day trip to North Korea that he had agreed in principle with the north to undertake the projects along its east coast.

He was the first South Korean business leader known to have visited the north with the approval of both governments since Korea was split in 1945. The Koreans went to war in the early 1950s and have long remained at odds.

Under the agreement signed in the north's capital, Pyongyang, Hyundai and the North Korean government will jointly develop a resort around scenic Mount Kungang to attract South Koreans and foreigners, Chung said.

The Mount Kungang area, known for its beauty, is about 20 miles from the demilitarized zone that divides the Koreas.

Chung told a brief airport news conference that the two sides also agreed to jointly develop resources in Siberia and to jointly operate a railroad rolling stock plant and a shipyard, both at Wonsan in the north.

Yugoslavian Communists Ousted

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A meeting called by the Communist Party's Central Committee to stress unity ended after three days with the resignation or ouster of 20 senior officials, including a former party president.

Those who resigned late Wednesday from the 165-member policymaking Central Committee included Vidoje Zarkovic, Yugoslavia's party chief from 1985-1986, and three of the largely formal state presidency's nine members: Lasar Mojsvo, Stane Dolanc and Sinan Hasani.

The ouster of Zarkovic, a Montenegrin, had been demanded since street demonstrations in Montenegro last month that led to the replacement of that republic's entire ruling elite.

Ousted from the Central Committee after a secret vote were Azem Vllasi, former Communist Party chief of Kosovo, and Svetislav Dolasevic, the ethnically troubled province's senior Communist official.

Critics held the two responsible for not preventing intercommunal strife in Kosovo, where the ethnic Albanian majority is allegedly persecuting minority Slavs and forcing them to leave the province.

The three-day session ended without compromise on any of the political or economic issues convulsing this country.

No Suspect

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — There is no motive or suspect in the murder of a 72-year-old Moore County widow whose body was found at her home just outside Pinehurst on Monday afternoon, authorities said.

A sheriff's deputy found the body of Evelyn Williams in an open utility room in the garage area of her home, a Moore County Sheriff's Department spokesman said.

The woman's throat had been cut and authorities could not find her pocketbook, but robbery had not been established as the motive, the spokesman said.

Authorities said that Mrs. Williams, who took regular afternoon walks, had apparently been last seen at about 4 p.m. on Friday.

Princess Wows Fashion Elite

By Catherine Crocker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Britain's Princess Diana, arriving for a whirlwind tour, wowed the city's fashion elite before turning her attention to those at the other end of the social spectrum.

Awed fashion designers and retailers proclaimed Diana radiant and divine when she appeared at a party in her honor Wednesday night.

The 27-year-old princess, who had just arrived on her first official visit to New York, sounded equally impressed by her host city.

"It was marvelous, quite dramatic," she said when asked her first impressions of the city.

Diana's explorations were to continue today with a visit to the Henry Street Settlement, a 96-year-old community center that helps immigrants, homeless people and the elderly.

"She's a real-life person, not someone with a wand," day care director Karen Leslie explained to a dozen excited pre-schoolers Wednesday as they prepared for the princess' visit.

Diane was to visit the day care center and a homeless shelter at the settlement, which has served generations of poor people on Manhattan's lower East Side.

Tonight she was to attend the American debut of the Welsh National Opera, which will perform Verdi's "Falstaff" at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. As the Princess of Wales, she is patron of the opera company.

Irish-American activists opposed to British rule in Northern Ireland planned to demonstrate outside the opera performance. But Diana's first evening in the city was devoid of controversy.

The princess arrived on a British Airways supersonic Concorde flight at Kennedy International Airport at 5:49 p.m. Wednesday for her three-day visit. Her first public appearance was on the 50th floor of the Equitable Tower, where she attended a gala reception and buffet dinner hosted by Dawson International, producers of Scottish cashmere.

Before she arrived, guests received some last minute instructions from British Consul George Finlayson. "For British subjects it's protocol for the men to nod and the women can curtsy," he said. "For Americans, ever since the War of Independence, you can do what you want."

Many of the guests opted to shake hands.

The princess arrived wearing a gathered blue satin tunic over a black wool skirt with pearls at her neck.

"She looks divine!" exclaimed Jack Schultz, chief executive officer of B. Altman's department store. "She looks great in that color."

Designer Oscar de la Renta went further. "She has extraordinary looks and when you have extraordinary looks you can wear anything," he said. "With time, she will be one of the great well-dressed ladies of the world."

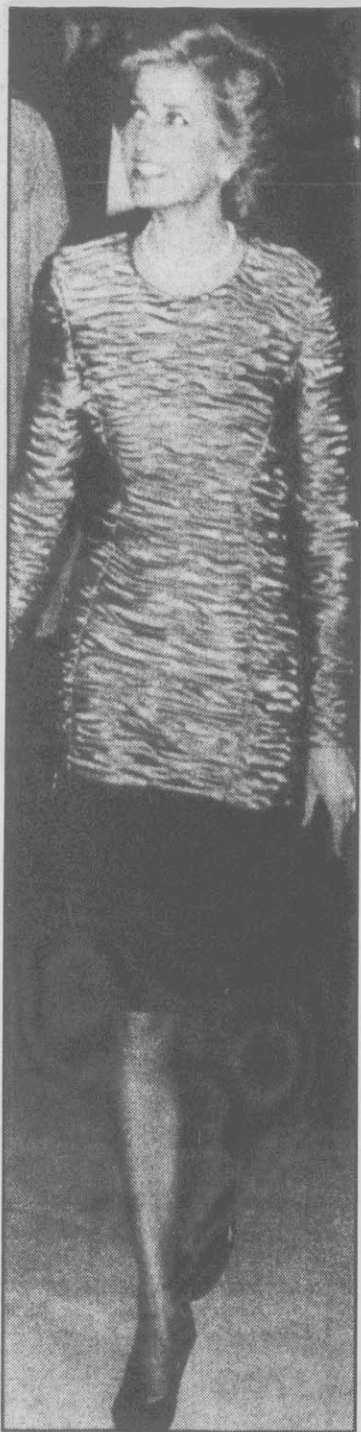

For Schultz, the gathering was bittersweet. His son, Thomas Schultz, was among a group of Syracuse University students who died in the December crash of a Pan Am jet in Scotland.

When it came his turn to greet Diana, Schultz pulled out a picture of his son and showed the princess.

She was "very sympathetic," said Irwin Joffe, president of Dawson International USA, who observed the exchange. "She said, 'I'm very sorry. He would not have felt anything.' She dealt with it extremely well."

This week's tour is the first lone official visit abroad by Diana since October 1985, when she went to the Royal Hampshire Regiment's base in Berlin.

The princess visited the White House during a U.S. tour in 1985 with her husband, Prince Charles, who remained in Britain this week. He will arrive in the United States on Feb. 16 for a four-day visit to Washington and Palm Beach, Fla.

Americans Discovering Anyone Can Clown Around

By Bill Kaczor
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PENSACOLA, Fla. — The activities coordinator at the Escambia County Nursing Home is a clown.

So is a professor of social work at the University of West Florida.

Ditto for one of the university's statistical research assistants, a retired Navy officer and a couple of preschool teachers in this Florida Panhandle city.

They are members of the Smilesmith Clowns and among thousands of Americans who clown around in their spare time.

Many, like the Smilesmith troupe, are ministerial clowns. The Smilesmiths started in the Presbyterian Church but have evolved into an ecumenical group with members of many denominations clowning for Christ.

"There's a little bit of clown in all of us. You just have to bring it out," said Martha Morgan, a Montessori teacher who becomes "Mo" when she puts on her clown makeup.

The Smilesmiths put on skits that have religious and secular messages, including anti-drug and anti-littering appeals. They have marched in parades, entertained at birthday parties and visited hospitals, mental institutions, nursing homes, schools and a soup kitchen where they served the food.

"That's the first time I've seen people go out laughing and smiling after eating" in a soup kitchen, said Dave "Pork Chop" Lawrence, a former naval aviator.

His wife, Marilyn, whose clown name is "Flash," coordinates activities at the county nursing home where she teaches clowning to the patients as a form of therapy.

Last November, about 30 patients, some in wheelchairs, put on their makeup and clown outfits to shout "Good Morning America" for a spot on the network television show of the same name.

Clowns across the country engage in similar activities. Some even have counseled prison inmates and a psychotherapist has developed what he calls "clowning."

The Smilesmiths hold workshops for would-be clowns and recently aided in an Elderhostel class at West Florida.

Dubbed "Clowning for Fun and Service," the class was led by Mary "Absorbine Junior" Hall who ordinarily teaches social work and uses clowning in her work with dying people.

By the end of the class, the elderly students were putting on funny hats, fright wigs, big noses and other clown gear. Then they sang, danced and pranced to "The Hokey Pokey," "Pop Goes the Weasel" and other ditties.

"It's a chance to be your other self, the one nobody knows," said one participant, Bob Smith of Silver Spring, Md.

About 20 years ago, clowns were seldom seen outside circuses, and even circus clowns were a dying breed. It had become a closed profession and most clowns were in their 60s.

Then, the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus established its Clown College in Sarasota. Students had to sign a contract to work for the circus for one year after they graduated, said Janet "Jelly Bean" Tucker in a telephone interview from her clown and balloon business in Hammond, Ind.

After working for low pay and under miserable conditions, many new clowns quit the circus and went into business for themselves, she said. They worked at birthday parties and other events and taught clown classes.

Clowning got another boost with the advent of clown ministries, said Ms. Tucker, who teaches clown arts at Purdue University and is director of clown ministry for the World Clown Association. She said more than 3,000 such groups exist across the country.

The Rev. Floyd Shaffer, a Lutheran minister from Roseville, Mich., and the Rev. Bill Peckham, a Methodist minister from Elkhart, Ind., are considered the pioneers of clown ministries.

Shaffer, looking for something to make services more exciting, found out that churches in the Middle Ages had clowns known as "divine interrupters," Ms. Tucker said.

Religious festivals would last for days at a time, she said. The divine interrupter would emerge from a small door behind the pulpit periodically to liven things up during the lengthy services.

The divine interrupters' repertoire included political humor that got them into hot water with the authorities. As a result, the little doors were sealed and the interrupters banished, she said. Ministerial clowns fall into two groups, Ms. Tucker said. Shaffer and his Faith and Fantasy ministry are an example of professionals who conduct large group services.

The others, such as Peckham's Holy Fools and the Smilesmiths, are volunteers who do one-on-one pastoral work such as visiting hospitals and nursing homes.

Growth in clowning of all sorts has been explosive.

"Our membership now is over 4,000," said Hunter "Mr. Boots" Stevens of West Bend, Ind., a director and past president of Clowns of America. He said membership has grown by 600 or 700 each year.

People get into clowning to help others and themselves, said Richard "Snowflake" Snowberg, an administrator at the University of Wisconsin-La Crosse. For the past nine years he has run a clown camp for adults that last summer attracted 482 students.

Many people who become clowns have recently experienced tragedy or other problems and some lack self confidence, Snowberg said.

Ms. Tucker said some are trying to lighten up their lives because they have straight-laced occupations. She cited a funeral director as one example.

"I can't count the number of people who I have taught to clown who quit seeing their psychiatrists," she said. "When you clown, it's the real you that comes out."

Prega-Phone Breaks Through

The last bastion of privacy isolating man from a telephone has fallen.

A march that has taken communication to the friendly skies, to hotel bathrooms, cars and hot tubs, has now closed the distance between an expectant mother and her unborn child.

That's right. You can now call abdomen-to-womb with an instrument called the Prega-phone, with no time limit and no installation charges. The only catch to it is that you never know when your party is on the line.

The phone is a bright yellow, three-part device with a mouthpiece and a funnel. The funnel is placed on the mother's abdomen and her voice is amplified.

Does it work? Ten thousand phone owners say it does. One mother said she recently underwent ultrasound treatment and was able to watch her unborn baby's reaction. When the baby heard her mother's voice, she made sucking motions and her heart rate increased. When her mother didn't speak, the baby didn't react.

With hindsight there is 20-20 vision, but knowing what I know now about my kids, I can imagine the way our conversation might have gone had I called them on the Prega-phone.

"Hello, Baby Heartburn? This is your mother. You busy? What do you mean you're putting me on hold? You do NOT have a call coming in on your other line. You don't HAVE another line. And don't even think of turning on that stupid answering machine. It's the worst impersonation of Annette Funicello I've ever heard."

"You eating good? You should be. I gained another six pounds this month. If you don't make your move pretty soon, I'm going to start buying my clothes at an upholstery shop."

"So, is there any reason why you're three days late? I am not trying to interfere with your life. I'm just asking. If someone told you you had to have a full set of teeth to come into the world, that someone is wrong. Don't worry your little head that people set drinks on my stomach at parties. That's Mommy's problem.

"I got your room all ready for your visit. I know you'll have friends to see and you'll want to go to school and college and call up friends and make plans to get married someday, but it wouldn't hurt you to hang around for 20 years or so and spend some time with Mommy and Daddy. Is that asking too much? We'll talk about it when you get here. Incidentally, where were you last Wednesday when I called? Out where?"

I've suspected for a long time that the umbilical cord is actually a cable hooked up to Ma Bell and MCI. That's why it's only a matter of time before a Prega-phone rings at 2 a.m. and the mother tells her unborn child, "It's for you."

College Tries Genealogy

By Lee Mitgang
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GETTYSBURG, Pa. — Colleges have tried many tactics to attract capable minority students and make them feel welcome: offered special scholarships, started support groups, hired counselors, overlooked low test scores.

At Gettysburg College, they're about to try genealogy.

Starting in March, this Lutheran-affiliated liberal arts school where just 40 of 1,850 students are black is opening an "intercultural resource center" where all students, but especially African-Americans, can learn how to research their family roots.

The two-story wood-frame center, when it is officially dedicated at a March 18 ceremony, will coordinate a campus-wide effort to help minority students develop self-awareness and confidence.

The ultimate aim: to break down the sense of isolation blacks often feel on this campus, help them be part of the mainstream and eventually use their self-awareness to strive for leadership roles.

Already, the center's bookshelves are packed with state census records from 40 states dating back to the early 1800s. Thick brown volumes contain ship passenger and immigration lists dating back to the 18th century. There are also genealogy guides for Germans, Italians, American Indians, Danes, Finns, Russians and English.

"I don't know that much about myself, and I want to know," said Dawn Hadnott, a 17-year-old freshman from Teaneck, N.J., one of several black students who told a visitor they were eager to get started on genealogical studies. "I think I have some Indian in me: my great-grandmother Moan."

"I think there's a lack of pride in the black community," said Troy Datcher, a 20-year-old junior who is president of the Black Student Union. "I think it can be rebuilt with a program like this. Maybe you can find out that you were related to someone famous."

At a time of racial tension on many other campuses, Gettysburg's aim is to foster toleration through appreciation and knowledge of cultural diversity, says Harry Bradshaw Matthews, the school's 37-year-old "dean of intercultural advancement."

If black students know more about themselves, the reasoning goes, they will be better prepared to fit into a college environment as minorities, and more inclined to stay the full four years. They might also be inclined to spread the word to their friends.

The new Gettysburg center is unusual on several counts. Probably no other school so small has focused such attention on African-American genealogy, according to James Dent Walker, a founder of the Washington-based Afro-American Historical and Genealogical Society. The much larger Temple University in Philadelphia houses the Charles L. Blockson Afro-American collection which contains over 40,000 items.

Second, Gettysburg pointedly chose not to name it an "Afro-American Center" or "Black Student Center," as many colleges have. The idea was to have a place on campus celebrating all cultures.

Finally, Gettysburg may be the first college to view genealogy as a vehicle for recruiting and retaining minority students.

Legal Advice Will Wash

Dear Abby: I rented my spare room to a college student in the fall of '87. Last May she gave me one day's notice and moved out, leaving behind some clothing, books, a bookshelf and her washer and dryer. (She also left her dog with me, but that's another story.)

Anyway, I wanted to rent the room to someone else, so I told her to get her stuff out by August. She came and took the stuff out of the room, but she left her washer and dryer in my basement. She said she was moving to an apartment, but she didn't give me an address or telephone number.

It is now January and I have no way of reaching this girl. Abby, I am not a storage company! Can I sell her washer and dryer? Or are they mine to keep? I want to make an office in my basement, but her washer and dryer are taking up space. I have no use for them as I have my own.

I should not have to place an ad in the paper to locate this girl. What are my legal rights? Going to a lawyer will cost me, and since she already owes me money, which I will probably never get, I don't want to spend any more. Although she paid me for keeping her dog, she still owes me for back rent. Her checks always bounce, and she is very irresponsible. What should I do? — Stuck In Pennsylvania

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Dear Stuck: Call your state or county local bar association. Someone there should be able to tell you what your "rights" are. You may also be referred to a low-cost attorney.

If the girl is still a student, you can locate her through the college. Then send her a registered letter advising her that if she doesn't remove her property from your basement within 30 days, you will dispose of it. That may jar her into action. Good luck.

Dear Abby: My husband drinks too much. I love this man, and hate to see him drink because I know what it's doing to him and I don't want to lose him. So, of course, I nag him.

He hates for me to nag him, so he tells me that he drinks because I am such a terrible nag.

Is there any hope for us? — North Dakota Nagger

Dear Nagger: Yes. Alcoholics Anonymous for him. And Al-Anon for you. If he refuses to go to A.A., you go to Al-Anon and learn how to deal with a man who refuses to go to A.A.

Your predicament reminds me of this Ogden Nash ditty:

"He drinks because she scolds, he thinks.

"She thinks she scolds because he drinks.

"But neither will admit what's true,

"That he's a sot and she's a shrew."

Dear Abby: Feeling that everyone deserves a fair shot, I decided to write to you to find out if a 15-year-old's opinions are important enough for your column.

We all know that deep down there is a little bit of prejudice in all of us.

My latest English assignment is to perform an "experiment" to find out how people perceive you — strictly by your appearance. People have a tendency to label others without even knowing them, which is unfair to the person.

Stereotyping and judging a person at first glance is a social barrier that we must learn to deal with and overcome. Are you interested in the results? — K.P. In Portland

Dear K.P.: You bet I am. For example, if you're planning to dress like a punk rocker, you can expect people to assume that you are a punk rocker. One's appearance is the first statement that a person makes to the public. It's the one that "labels" you.

Now, please tell me why anyone would intentionally want to wear a misleading label.

House To Vote On Pay Raise

latest House and Senate proposals on outside income.

Both packages would ban honoraria, including fees for speeches, appearances and articles, upon enactment of the raise.

Leaders in both houses have made clear that honoraria would continue if the pay raise is defeated because members don't want to suffer a loss of income. House members currently can retain $26,850 and Senate members $35,800 in honoraria.

The Senate plan includes a contingency that would permit retention of some honoraria if the raise is partially scaled back later.

The plans under discussion in both houses would permit such fees to be donated to charity on a member's behalf. The Senate plan would limit the donation to $2,000 per appearance and require members to list on financial disclosure forms the amount, the payer and the recipient of the donation.

Wright did not get full cooperation from his colleagues in his survey. House Republican Whip Dick Cheney, R-Wyo., told his hometown paper, the Casper Star-Tribune: "I didn't return the form. I don't do polls."

The Associated Press contacted 143 congressional offices and found 92 members publicly supporting a recorded vote on the pay raise. Only six said they were against it and seven were undecided. There was no response from 38 offices.

The survey released Wednesday by raise opponents, indicating 62 percent of House members opposed to the increase, was conducted by Public Citizen, a consumer advocacy group founded by Ralph Nader, and two conservative groups: the National Taxpayers Union and Coalitions for America.

The proposed honoraria plans would allow groups that invite members to an event to continue paying for travel. The Senate would direct its ethics committee to issue rules and regulations defining acceptable limits.

The House draft would prohibit members from receiving any pension benefits from honoraria given as a charitable donation. The Senate plan would go further, prohibiting conversion of any of the donations to a member's personal use.

The House plan would limit all outside earned income to 15 percent of a member's salary, half the current 30 percent.

The House also would end a provision in federal law that has allowed 190 House members, in office before 1980, to accumulate $39 million in campaign funds that could be converted to personal use. The measure would become effective in January 1991, giving House members one chance to retire with the money. The Senate already has a rule prohibiting such conversion.

Panel Cites Aims

That statement set the panel's mission — "To establish Pitt County as a center for excellence by providing an environment which maximizes quality of life (education, economic, environment, health care, culture, climate, social forces) and encourages all citizens to participate to the fullest of their potential."

"This will be accomplished through planned growth, shared resources, educational excellence, and mutually supportive governments."

Sue Hodges, director of planning and institutional research at East Carolina University, said the next step for the committee is to develop a timetable and strategy to implement the group's priorities.

Edgar Boyd, dean of students at Pitt Community College, said the conference was "an outstanding success — very timely and very organized."

"We see education as the key to economic growth and economic development in the county," he said. "We see it as the means by which we will prepare students to assume jobs of increasing responsibility in the various businesses and industries that are here and the ones that will come in the future."

Services assistant director, said ECU records indicate that there are just a few more than 300 students who have not yet been immunized or shown proof of immunization. She said only four of these live in dormitories. More than 7,000 measles shots have been given on campus in the past few days.

Class attendance beginning Friday will be monitored strictly, she said, in an effort to have remaining students who may pose a measles transmission risk go to Student Health Services for free vaccine.

"The conference facilities provided an excellent environment for strategic planning and open discussion. It enabled us to establish a reference base for our community on needs, priorities, a measure of how we are currently doing on those items and a discussion of who is currently doing what," he said.

"It will now allow the various entities to focus their energies on the same path to meet those needs," he said. "It gave us some definition and criteria of what we want our community to be in the year 2007."

"I thought it was a really outstanding workshop," said Pitt County Manager Kramer Jackson. "I believe it exceeded the expectations of anybody who was there. A lot of work was accomplished during the three days and I think we have developed an excellent plan."

The planning session was sponsored by the city of Greenville, Pitt County, Greenville Utilities Commission, Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce and East Carolina University.

Flu Strikes At ECU

because people in their teens and early 20's are subject to Reye's Syndrome which appears to be triggered sometimes by aspirin use. He said patients are encouraged to return for medical treatment if there are secondary bacterial infections. Conditions like pneumonia can result from untreated secondary bacterial infection, he said.

Dr. Edgar Boyd, dean of students Pitt Community College, said his office has had few absences because of flu reported. "PCC doesn't seem to have a major problem at this time," he said.

Some communities in North Carolina have closed public secondary schools in efforts to curb flu contagion. However, the problem in the Pitt County schools does not seem to warrant such action, school public information officer Barry Gaskins said.

A spokesman for Pactolus Elementary School said, "We probably have about three students out now who have serious cases of flu," she said. "Some others have been out for a day or two, but our absences aren't running that high for this time of year. We are having about 10-15 a day out of 430 students out with varying kinds of illness."

Gay Jenkins at D.H. Conley High School said she has noticed more flu this week than at any time this year. About 30-40 students a day out of a student population of 1,150 are coming back this week with notes from their parents saying they have had flu. Last week, there was some flu in the school, she said, but absences were at a minimum because of examinations Monday through Wednesday and then two school holidays.

Greenville Middle School secretary Janet Sorber said absences today are fewer than at any time this week. She said absences overall lately have been no higher than is usual for this time of year. She said she has heard little discussion of flu among students and does not believe it is a serious problem at Greenville Middle.

Some communities have also limited hospital visitation to protect patients and staff from infection.

Dave McRae, senior vice president of Pitt County Memorial Hospital, said PCMH has seen little flu among its employees and he does not believe there is a serious problem at the present time.

McRae said the situation will be watched and if there is need to cut back on visitation temporarily, it will be done. He said limiting visitation will be done only if the absenteeism among employees becomes high enough to call for closing beds or if it appears that visitors are bringing flu in to patients. So far it does not appear that either of these have occurred, he said.

Train Death

PEMBROKE, N.C. (AP) — Train crew members testified that they saw a woman pull onto a rural railroad crossing, back up to center the car on the tracks and get out just before the train slammed into her car.

A mentally retarded teen-ager, Sherry Marie Bullard, 16, remained in the car and was killed in the collision. The wreck occurred the night of Oct. 20 about a half mile west of Pembroke.

Jean Bullard Brewer was charged last month with manslaughter in her daughter's death.

Judge Herbert L. Richardson on Wednesday ruled there was "sufficient information to find that the death was not accidental" and ordered Mrs. Brewer bound over for trial. Richardson allowed Mrs. Brewer to remain free on $5,000 unsecured bond. She did not testify at the hearing.

Martin Wavers On Pay

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Martin said today he is having second thoughts about heeding advice to give the Basic Education Program higher priority than pay raises for teachers in his 1989-91 budget plan.

Martin also said he was open to discussions of a tax increase to generate money for teacher pay — but only in the context of implementing a career-ladder plan that would reward superior performance with salary increases.

The governor, who has drawn criticism from teachers for including no funds for a pay raise until April 1990 in his budget, noted that he had proposed halving the $113 million allocation for the BEP scheduled for 1990-91 in exchange for starting a 5.7 percent pay raise for teachers this July.

But the 15-member ABC overwhelmingly opposed any slowdown in BEP implementation, and Martin dropped the idea in submitting his budget.

At a news conference today, Martin said that might have been the wrong thing to do.

"In retrospect, I probably should have stuck with my own thinking on that," he said. "I decided instead to follow the advice of the Advisory Budget Commission and see if it would help to launch a good, healthy debate and it has done that."

Martin said when he dropped the BEP delay idea in mid-December, it seemed to have little support. But he said a number of legislators have discussed the possibility of delaying some BEP expenditures to make more money available for pay raises.

"I hope the Legislature can outdo me on the budget" by making spending cuts and taking other measures to start the 5.7 percent raise sooner than April 1990, he said.

The governor said he did not "have a great deal of enthusiasm" for tax increases "just to spend more money." But he said he would listen to anyone who wants to discuss raising taxes to generate money for statewide career ladder implementation, which would cost $300 million to $350 million.

Pirates Hold Off Indians

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Blue Edwards had the game that's come to be expected of him Wednesday night, but this time out, he got a little help.

Both Kenny Murphy and Reed Lose contributed 16 points each to go with 32 by Edwards as East Carolina downed stubborn William & Mary, 73-68, in the Colonial Athletic Association basketball race.

The Pirates were only able to shake the Indians late in the game, building up as much as an 11-point lead, but even then the Tribe put on a comeback that cut it to as little as four.

"I was pleased with our effort,"

Pirate coach Mike Steele said, "But not in the last two and a half minutes. That's one of the things about not having a winning tradition. We don't know how to handle winning."

Steele felt that Pirates started celebrating just a little too early, after having taken a 70-59 lead with 1:09 left in the contest. Lose had just scored a free throw on the first shot of a one-and-one and a lack of concentration caused Murphy to vacate his spot on the foul line after Lose had the ball for his second shot, negating his attempt.

After that, William & Mary was able to hack away at the lead, starting with a three-point goal by Matt O'Reilly.

The game had been tight throughout the first 36 minutes of play. ECU only pulled away in the period between four and one minute remaining. And both coaches pointed to different things as the key to the win for the Pirates.

"I thought Kenny Murphy's two straight three-point baskets were the key," Steele said. Those came between 7:15 and 6:30 of the second half, giving the Pirates a 54-49 lead.

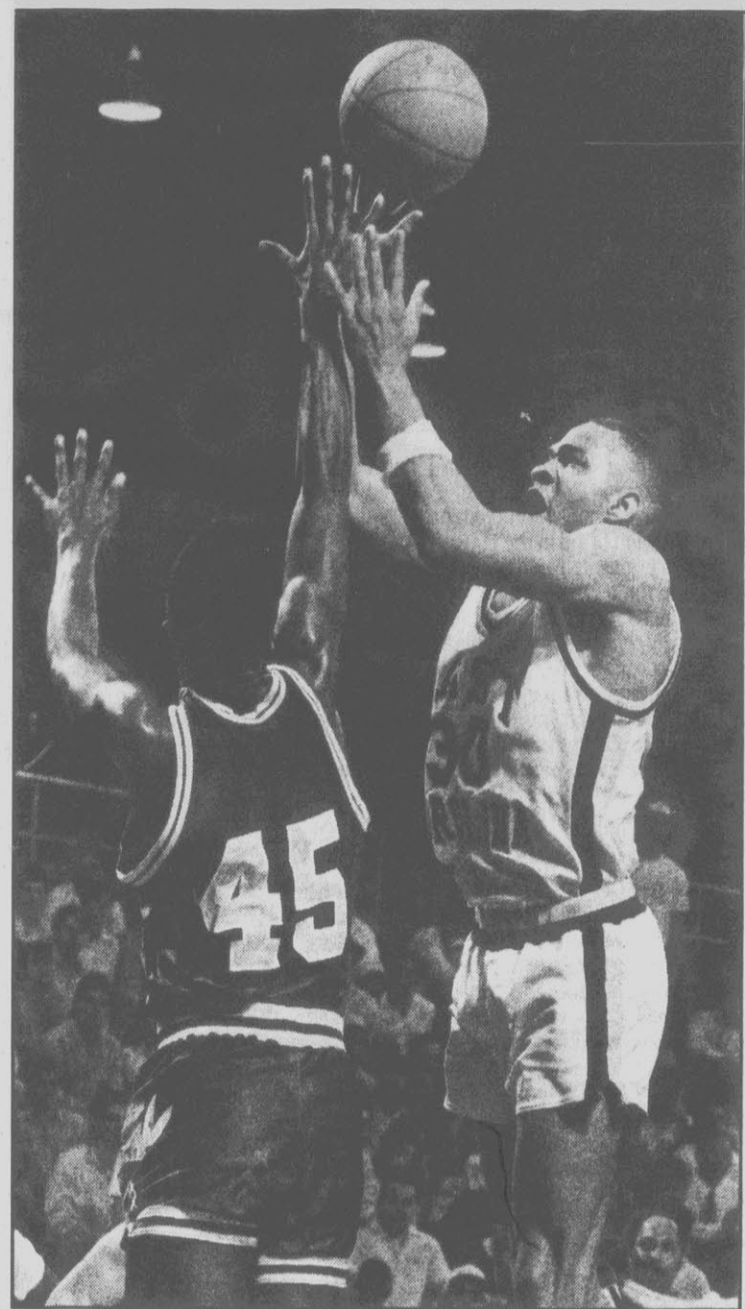

"Blue was the key," Indian coach Chuck Swenson said. "He got most of the key buckets. I'm impressed with him more than any player in the conference to date. I thought he got a real big bucket to put them up five on that turnaround."

That shot came with 2:00 showing and actually put the Pirates into a seven-point lead, 66-59.

Steele wasn't surprised by the closeness of the game. "With our size, we have to keep the games close to have a chance to win. But I could tell that we lost our intensity on defense late in the game, and it hurt us at the foul line. But we needed the win, and we've got to get better to have a chance at beating Richmond (Saturday)."

Steele said another key factor in the game was East Carolina's going to its man-to-man defense in the second half. "We had tried to change defenses on them and tried to keep the ball away from (Jimmy) Apple. But he still got loose, so we just went with the man and I think it worked for us." The Pirates had opened with

Hill Sits Early On, But Starts 2nd Half

Gus Hill was on the cover of the East Carolina program for Wednesday's game against William and Mary, but he wasn't in the starting lineup.

After averaging 19.0 points per game and earning Colonial Athletic Association Rookie of the Year and first-team all-conference honors a year ago, Hill has been in and out of the starting lineup this season. He has struggled with his shooting all year and was coming off a 3-10 performance in a 81-66 defeat at UNC-Wilmington Saturday.

Saturday he spent the first half of ECU's 73-68 win over the Tribe on the bench, watching and waiting. He started the second half and finished the game 2-8 from the field for four points while pulling down four rebounds.

"The biggest reason, to be honest, is that he played so poorly at UNC-Wilmington that we wanted to play other guys," ECU coach Mike Steele said. "Even though he was 2-8 he really didn't take a bad shot. He played well in the second half."

For his part, Hill took the demotion in stride.

"Other people are playing better than me right now," Hill said. "I (still) felt like I had a pretty good floor game tonight. My shots are just not falling so I just do things like rebound and pass the ball to help the team win."

"I felt like in the first half that is where we really got pounded and last game against Wilmington we got pounded. So I think right now that is where I can help the team. My shots will come one of these days."

For the year, Hill is averaging 13.4 points per game on 44 percent shooting from the field.

The Pirates, 10-9 overall and 4-4 in the CAA, have struggled at times this season. Senior forward Blue Edwards has been the focal point of the offense from the outset and has averaged 25.7 points a game, including 32 Wednesday against William and Mary.

The loss of 6-5 center Kevin Staples to disciplinary reasons in early January further handicapped a team that was lacking other consistent viable scoring threats. In the victories, the support has been there. In the losses, it hasn't. Against the Tribe, swingmen Reed Lose and Kenny Murphy took up some of the slack with 16 points apiece.

Tigers Bask In The Glory After Knocking Off Heels

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Clemson's Kirkland Howling seemed to be singing an Aretha Franklin hit after the Tigers upset third-ranked North Carolina.

"I couldn't believe they were No. 3 in the nation," Howling said as he basked in the postgame glory. "But it's time we get some respect, and after this they'll have to respect us."

Howling, who was coming off a 1-for-11 performance, hit a 3-pointer and a pair of foul shots in the last 53 seconds as the Tigers stunned the Tar Heels 85-82.

In other Atlantic Coast Conference action Wednesday night, Virginia upset No. 13 North Carolina State 91-71, East Tennessee State defeated Wake Forest 98-94, and Maryland defeated Maryland-Baltimore County, 78-66.

What made the the Tiger victory just that much sweeter was it came just days after six active players were suspended for violating the team policy regarding study hall.

All but one were back vs. North Carolina — and Clemson needed them all. Dale Davis was back, scoring a season-high 21 points and grabbing a career-high 21 rebounds.

So was Elden Campbell, who had 17 points. And there were guards Tim Kincaid and Marion Cash racing up the court. Kincaid had 12 points, while Cash had 10 assists.

North Carolina forward Steve Bucknall said the Tar Heels should have known they'd be in for a tough game.

"I don't think anybody was ready to play Clemson," said Bucknall, who had 15 points on five 3-pointers. "They lost six of their guys last weekend, and it should have been obvious they were going to come out and play their best game."

Clemson is now 13-5 overall and 4-3 in the league.

The Tar Heels are now 18-4 and 5-2 in the league, tied for first with No. 13 North Carolina State, which was upset by Virginia 91-71 on Wednesday. Virginia, which beat North Carolina two weeks ago, is 4-2 in the ACC.

Joining ucknall in double figures for North Carolina were J.R. Reid with 25 points and Kevin Madden with 19.

Derrick Forrest had 12 points for Clemson.

In Charlottesville, Va., Virginia defeated North Carolina State by taking advantage of an early first half lead.

"We didn't want to let them back in it, and I think we were able to accomplish that," Richard Morgan said after Virginia built a 25-4 lead midway through the first half lead en route to the 91-71 victory.

Morgan and Curtis Williams scored four points each as the Cavaliers used an up-tempo offense to jump from the gates while N.C.

CHARLOTTE — Robert Parish has seen enough of the Charlotte Hornets to know that it doesn't pay to take the expansion team for granted.

After a pair of competitive games at the Boston Garden, Parish muscled up on the road-weary Hornets, scoring 24 points and grabbing a season-high 24 rebounds in a 107-94 victory.

"Even though it's just an expansion team, I think they've got some good players on this team," Parish said. "If you take this team lightly, you can be embarrassed."

Parish saved himself and his teammates the heartache of losing to a first-year team early. He scored 14 of his points and grabbed 11 rebounds in the first quarter. The Celtics took a 31-18 lead and held off the Hornets for a 31-4 edge at the end of the period.

By frustrating the Hornets' inside offense, the Celtics led by as much as 13 points in the second quarter. That frustration, Parish said, extended to the Charlotte perimeter game.

"We did a good job of double-teaming their inside people, making them take the outside shot, and they weren't hitting them consistently," Parish said.

"We kept a lot of heat on ... their perimeter shooters. We tried to keep as much pressure on them as possible," he said.

The Hornets cut away at a 31-18 deficit in the first quarter and fought back to within 46-43 after a basket by Kelly Tripucka with 4:07 left before halftime, but six straight points by the Celtics, four by Kevin McHale, repelled the threat.

An alley-oop basket by Reggie Lewis at the buzzer gave Boston a 58-49 halftime lead.

Boston stretched the lead to 75-59 after a Jim Paxson basket at 5:21 of the third period, and another Paxson basket with 4:36 left to play gave the Celtics their biggest lead at 96-79.

"It was good for once to hold on, extend the lead and win," McHale said. "Any win on the road is a good win."

The road is where Charlotte had spent the last 10 days, and Coach Dick Harter felt that had an impact on his team's effort. The Hornets hit 33 of 88 field goal attempts and were outrebounded 61-47.

Paxson finished with 17 points, Lewis had 14, Brian Shaw scored 13 and Danny Ainge had 12 for Boston.

Michael Holton scored 21 points for Charlotte. Tripucka had 16, Rex Chapman had 13, Robert Reid scored 11 and Dell Curry had 10 points for the Hornets.

Clippers Are Stumbling Once Again

By Scott Ostler
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

With all due disrespect to the Miami Heat, it's time we recognized the Los Angeles Clippers as the worst team in professional basketball.

The Heat features a worse record, but that organization sprang into existence just months ago, whereas the Clippers have been around a long time. This is a team that has been decades in the unmaking.

It's just as well that the Clippers aren't struggling their way up into the middle of the NBA pack, because this is Hollywood, baby, a town that will not tolerate mediocrity.

Any attacks on the Clippers at this time are unfair, because they recently lost their best player and fired one of their best coaches, but who said life was fair?

I watched the Clippers crumble on television Monday night, losing to the Atlanta Hawks. The Clippers were out-scored in the second half by 27 points, on their home court.

Clemson Investigation Comes To Close

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — A Clemson University school official says he'll be glad to put behind him a recent scuffle that apparently involved members of the Clemson basketball team.

The university's police department on Wednesday completed its probe into the Jan. 21 incident.

Nick Lomax, vice president for student affairs at Clemson, said Wednesday the school would not take any action until the report had been studied.

Lomax said the school is anxious to put the incident behind it. "The length of the investigation has made it somewhat awkward," he said.

Department spokesman John McKenzie said Wednesday the report would be turned over to the solicitor's office today. Solicitor Joe Watson was out of town, so no legal action is expected until early next week.

Athletic Director Bobby Robinson and Coach Cliff Ellis could also discipline the involved athletes, according to school policy.

McKenzie said 22 people were interviewed in the investigation of the incident. McKenzie declined to say how many basketball players were interviewed.

Elden Campbell and Dale Davis were allegedly involved in the incident. The Anderson Independent-Mail has reported that players Jerry Pryor, Ricky Jones and Davis were interviewed.

The university police department had brought in the State Law Enforcement Division to aid in the investigation.

Security guards Michael S. Weatherford and Baron H. Morgan were involved in the incident, which occurred outside the Calhoun Court apartments where the basketball players live.

Morgan reportedly was treated for cuts and bruises at the Clemson University infirmary after the scuffle.

The solicitor's office — which turned back the original information and asked for a second investigation — will review the findings and determine what course of action should be taken.

"We feel we've taken this as far as we can go," McKenzie said.

Cox Defeats McDonald In Wrestling

NEW BERN — A.G. Cox Middle School defeated H.J. McDonald in a junior high school wrestling match Wednesday, 45-42.

Cox pins were recorded by Percy Rogers, Torrence Smith, Demetrius Lynch, Carter Chapman, Terry Turnage and Robbie Wilson and a decision was won by Shondiel Ruffin.

Cox finishes the year with a 13-0 record and will compete in a junior high school tournament on Saturday in Washington.

AYDEN — Ayden took a 58-22 win over A.G. Cox in junior high basketball action Wednesday.

Carl Artis had 31 points to lead Ayden, 11-0 on the year. In the girls' game, A.G. Cox defeated Ayden, 23-20.

Talladega Speedway Changes Its Name

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — The name of the Alabama International Motor Speedway has been changed to Talladega Superspeedway to more accurately reflect the track's location, President Mike Helton said Wednesday.

The name change is effective immediately at the 2.66-mile track, home of two of NASCAR's major races, the Winston 500 and the Talladega 500, scheduled this year for May 7 and July 30, respectively.

"Talladega Superspeedway more accurately reflects where we are located, and this facility certainly qualifies as a superspeedway," Helton said.

Jim Freeman, the track's public relations director, said the name change "has been in the discussion stage for several years, and the fact that almost everyone already refers to us simply as Talladega also had a major bearing on our decision."

The change, he said, "should make things simpler when referring to our facility."

Mayor George Montgomery of Talladega, located a few miles from the track, said he liked the change.

"The speedway is known around the world, and it makes us proud that the name of our city is now officially the name of the speedway," he said.

"We are also proud of the fact that the only major league professional sporting event in Alabama is at Talladega."

With the change, the track adopted a new logo, with the word Talladega in gold and the word Superspeedway in black. A black-and-white checkered flag also is part of the logo. Previously the track was known to many by its acronym AIMS.

Talladega Superspeedway is located just south of Interstate 20 about 45 miles east of Birmingham.

Beck Set To Defend His L.A. Open Title

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A victory here a year ago was much more than a simple win for Chip Beck.

"It was a turning point in my career," Beck said before opening defense of his title today in the $1 million Los Angeles Open.

Prior to winning the 1988 Los Angeles title, Beck was recognized by his peers as a good player; but just another good player among many on the PGA Tour.

"Now," said Curtis Strange, the 1988 Player of the Year and U.S. Open champion, "Chip Beck is the guy you have to look at every week, every time he starts."

"He's probably the favorite. If he isn't, he probably should be. He's not going to win every week, but you know he's going to be there," Strange said.

It all turned around in this tournament a year ago, when Beck broke through to his first victory in 10 seasons of PGA Tour activity. He went on to win another title a few months later, was runner-up in three other tournaments, won the prestigious Vardon Trophy for the low stroke average on the Tour and was second in money-winnings with $926,817.

"I feel like my career really started in the LA Open a year ago," Beck said. "It isn't enough just to be playing good to win golf tournaments. Just playing good isn't a strong enough base to support a really good player."

"You have to have the experience. You have to have the experience of winning before. You have to have that confidence within yourself that comes from winning and from experience."

"With that confidence within yourself, you can overcome many things."

"My first win was a long time coming. But I'm glad I didn't win sooner. If I had — if it had come too soon or too easily — I don't think I'd be the player I am today."

Oilers' Herzeg Looks For A New Challenge

HOUSTON (AP) — Ladd Herzeg, who had a stormy term as general manager while transforming the Houston Oilers into contenders in the NFL, says he is ready for a new challenge after resigning.

"I feel I've accomplished my goals in Houston and at this point in my life, I'm ready for a new challenge," Herzeg said in a statement released Wednesday night. "I know there is another mountain out there that needs to be conquered."

Herzeg, who already was executive vice president when he was named general manager in 1981, has been in control of the team since the Oilers fired Coach Bum Phillips after the 1980 season. Herzeg is leaving after helping the Oilers make the playoffs in the last two seasons.

"I want to thank (Oilers owner) Bud (Adams) for having confidence in me and for supplying me with sufficient time to get the job done. I want to wish everyone associated with the Houston Oilers the very best for the future," Herzeg's statement said.

But Oilers spokesman Chip Namias said he could not confirm whether Herzeg had resigned from.

Herzeg, whose five-year contract expired Dec. 31, said in his statement that it had been a "tremendous challenge to rebuild the Oilers into one of the elite teams in the National Football League. The fact that we have gone to the playoffs the last two years and won proves that the team has arrived. The fact that the so-called experts said we could not do it makes it especially gratifying for me."

"We fell short of our goal this year, but the Oilers were the youngest team in the playoffs, which indicates this team has a very bright future," Herzeg said. "This team is a definite Super Bowl contender."

Although he had success in rebuilding the Oilers, there also have been several non-football-related headlines.

In 1987, Herzeg allegedly was involved in an altercation in Buffalo with members of a wedding reception that was being held at the same hotel where the Oilers were staying.

Last season, he was the subject of a paternity suit and he was recently involved in a slapping incident involving a Houston Chronicle reporter at an exclusive Houston restaurant.

Herzeg resigned in the wake of the paternity suit in September, but his resignation was rejected by Adams.

Memphis State Rips Seminoles

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Sophomore Elliott Perry scored a career-high 33 points and no-miss Rodney Douglas had 17 points and 15 rebounds to lead Memphis State past No. 8 Florida State 99-82 in a Metro Conference basketball game Wednesday night.

The Tigers, 14-7 and 3-2, jumped to a 9-0 lead and were never threatened as the Seminoles shot just 35 percent and saw an eight-game winning streak end. Tony Dawson scored 22 points for Florida State, 16-2 and 4-1.

Memphis State led by as many as 19 points in the first half and by 87-58 late in the game.

The 6-foot, 155-pound Perry made 15 of 16 free throws and eight of 20 field goals. Douglas didn't miss a shot, hitting all seven field goals and three free throws.

Savage connected on 11-16 field goals in the game and 4-8 opportunities from the free throw line. Three other Lady Pirates also scored in double figures led by 13 points from Chris O'Connor, who also had nine assists. Sarah Gray and Irish Hamilton each added 10.

Tiffany Stone led William & Mary with 21 points.

After taking a 34-27 halftime lead, the Lady Pirates went up by as many as 17 points, 56-39, at the 9:25 mark of the second half. The Lady Tribe closed to as close as seven, 62-55, with four minutes to go but could come no closer.

The nine victories surpasses the total of eight won all of last season, and the four CAA wins doubles the total from last season for the Lady Pirates.

The Lady Pirates will be back in action Saturday on the road at Richmond.

Ernest Smith added 14 points for the Tigers, who made 37 of 59 shots for 63 percent. Memphis State had a 41-32 rebounding advantage.

Minnesota 76, No. 15 Ohio St. 73

At Minneapolis, Melvin Newbern, who missed a key one-and-one free throw with 59 seconds to play, made a driving layup with eight seconds left to put Minnesota ahead.

Ohio State had a chance to retake the lead, but Jay Burson was called for a double-dribble just before he hit a 15-foot jumper with three seconds left. In addition, the Buckeyes' bench was socked with a technical and Willie Burton hit both free throws.

Burton scored 13 of his career-high 30 points in the last eight minutes as the Gophers posted their third upset of a Top Twenty team in 19 days. Minnesota beat Iowa on Jan. 14 and Illinois last Thursday.

Burson, who entered the game averaging 23.4 points, was held to 12.

No. 1 Oklahoma 90, Kansas St. 82

At Manhattan, Kan., Stacey King scored 20 of his 27 points in the second half and Oklahoma held Kansas State to just two points in the final 3:23 after Fred McCoy's hook shot tied it for the Wildcats at 80-80.

Oklahoma's Terrence Mullins hit a 3-pointer for an 83-80 lead and Tyrone Jones followed with a basket and a key defensive rebound a few seconds later. Mullins scored 18 of his 21 points from 3-point range. McCoy and LaKeith Humphrey had 18 points apiece for Kansas State.

No. 5 Missouri 91, Kansas 66

Byron Irvin scored 22 points and Lee Coward added 19 and ignited scoring bursts in each half as Missouri won at Kansas for the first time since Jan. 26, 1983. Kansas failed for the second straight home game to get the 1,400th win in its history, a mark achieved only by Kentucky and North Carolina.

Milt Newton scored 14 points for Kansas.

No. 6 Georgetown 74, No. 10 Seton Hall 66

At Landover, Md., freshman Alonzo Mourning scored 17 points and ignited a second-half surge that enabled Georgetown to solidify its hold on first place in the Big East Conference. Georgetown led 40-39 when Mourning made a driving layup that triggered a 9-2 run.

Charles Smith scored 18 points for Georgetown, which avenged last month's loss to Seton Hall. This lossers which got 15 points from John Morton and 14 from Andrew Gaze.

Louisville 108, Virginia Tech 95

At Louisville, Tony Kimbro and Keith Williams scored career highs of 21 and 19 points, respectively, as the Cardinals won without star center Pervis Ellison.

Ellison sprained a ligament in his left knee in Sunday's loss to Ohio State. Felton Spencer started in his place, scoring 19 points and grabbing eight rebounds before fouling out with four minutes left. Keeny Payne added 20 points.

Bimbo Coles scored 36 points and Wally Lancaster 27 for Virginia Tech.

No. 14 Syracuse 90, Villanova 57

At Syracuse, Derrick Coleman scored 20 points and the Orangemen dominated with their inside game by scoring 17 straight points in the first half and avenging an earlier loss to Villanova.

No. 19 LSU 105, Mississippi 75

At Baton Rouge, Rickey Blanton hit a pair of 3-point shots to start a 26-14 run that closed out the first half. The loss snapped a four-game winning streak for Mississippi, which hasn't won five in a row since the 1937-38 season.

The Rebels led 21-19 when Blanton hit his first 3-pointer. Ole Miss went back in front 23-22 on a three-point play by Tim Jumper but Blanton made his second 3-pointer and LSU led the rest of the way.

Vernel Singleton led LSU with 23 points. Blanton and Chris Jackson had 21 points apiece.

previous 26 meetings against the Lakers, used an 18-0 run in the second quarter and coasted to a 114-97 victory Wednesday night.

Eddie Johnson scored 10 of his 32 points during the decisive spurt and Kevin Johnson added 23 points and 12 assists for the Suns. Magic Johnson just missed his 11th triple-double with 17 points, 12 rebounds and nine assists for the Lakers, but he was only 5-for-16 from the field.

76ers 114, Bullets 110

Philadelphia overcame another the absence of Charles Barkley and another outstanding performance by Bernard King to beat Washington.

Mike Gminski scored six of 26 points in overtime and a pair of backups-turned-starters, Shelton

Jones and Scott Brooks, had career highs. Jones had 20 points and Brooks 18 for the 76ers, who were playing without Barkley because of a sprained ankle.

Hawks 94, Jazz 93

Atlanta handed Utah only its fourth loss in 20 home games as Reggie Theus converted a pair of free throws with six seconds remaining.

Eric Leckner gave Utah a one-point lead with eight seconds left with a layup after a pass to All-Star Karl Malone was tipped away.

Trail Blazers 108, Clippers 107

Portland handed Los Angeles its 16th consecutive defeat as Kiki Vandeweghe scored a season-high 28 points, including three long-range jumpers in the final two minutes.

Pirates Top Indians...

a box and one on Apple, but he still led the Indians in scoring with 22.

The game was in contrast to Saturday night's loss at UNC-Wilmington when Edwards was about all the offense the Pirates mustered. But this time, Lose was loose underneath for some feeds from Edwards and Jeff Kelly, and Murphy hit three of four three-pointers and five of six overall.

"The coach just told me to start shooting," Murphy said. "In the first half, I didn't need to shoot. My problem is if I don't get my feet straight to the basket, I don't shoot well. Saturday night, I didn't. Tonight, I did. Coach just told me to set my feet and step in there," Murphy said.

Gus Hill, who did not play at all in the first half, came back in the second and although he hit only two of eight shots from the floor, played a much better game than he did at UNCW.

Both teams got off to slow starts. ECU didn't score until two and a half minutes had ticked off the clock, and the Indians went nearly a minute longer before O'Reilly made a three-pointer for a 3-2 lead. The lead bounced back and forth between the two teams throughout the first half. There were 17 lead changes and three ties before it ended up at 29-29.

East Carolina led by as much as three points on a couple of occasions and the Tribe never led by more than two. The half, appropriately, ended in a 29-29 deadlock.

Apple hit an 18-footer to give the Indians the lead again as the second half opened, but Murphy scored from underneath off a pass by Edwards and then Murphy added a three-pointer for a 34-31 lead for the Pirates. The Indians came back, however, and the lead switched hands seven more times until with 8:40 left, Apple's jumper gave the Indians a 45-44 lead.

Then, with 8:20 showing, Hill scored off a short hook and Lose added a layup 30 seconds later.

The Pirates never trailed again. Murphy followed with his two threes wrapped around a Ben Blocker jumper to up the lead to five. The Indians cut it back to three twice, but the Pirates continued to ease away, building the lead up to 11 on Lose's free throw with 1:09 left in the game.

For Edwards, it was another stellar night as he hit 13 of 20 shots from the floor and six of nine at the line for 32 points — the seventh time he's scored 30 or more this year. He also pulled in a team-leading nine rebounds as ECU held a 30-29 edge.

"I'm just taking what comes," Edwards said. "Early in the game, I was coming off screens and looking to pass, but the coach told me to start putting it up. It also cuts down on my turnovers."

Edwards' total brings his seasonal output to 494, the sixth best for a Pirate. He trails Oliver Mack's 1978-79 total by one point. His career total went to 898, leaving him just 102 short of becoming the 16th Pirate to reach 1,000.

Kelly, with five assists, moved his career total to 230, leaving him just two short of Cu Vanderhorst's career record of 2...

In addition to Apple's 22 points, Scott Smith added 14 and Curtis Pride had 11. One key factor in the contest was Greg Buzzell's failure to score. A usual thorn in the side of the Pirates, he was held to 0-6 shooting — all in the three-point range — from the floor and failed to convert his only free throw.

The win moves the Pirates to 10-9 overall and to 4-4 in the CAA. William & Mary drops to 3-16 overall and to 1-7 in the conference.

East Carolina returns to action on Saturday, hosting league-leading Richmond at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

NEW YORK — George Young, general manager of the New York Giants, once was shown an "all-star" team of big-name players who had been released in training camp. He was asked how many games it might win in the NFL.

"None," Young replied without hesitation. Young and the rest of the NFL's personnel people hope the same principle applies to the players whom the 28 teams left unprotected as the league's new free agency plan took effect Wednesday.

Although the official lists won't be released until late today or Friday, the drift has become clear the past few days as players acknowledge they've been told their status. Many of the players reportedly left unprotected are among the game's biggest names, most of them in their declining years.

They include Steve Largent of Seattle, the NFL's all-time leading pass receiver; veteran All-Pro center Mike Webster of Pittsburgh, the last holdover from the Steelers' Super Bowl teams of '70s; Charles White of the Los Angeles Rams, a one-time Heisman Trophy winner who led the NFL in rushing in 1987; three-time Pro Bowl guard Russ Grimm and 16-year defensive tackle Dave Butz of Washington; perennial All-Pro defensive tackle Randy White of the Cowboys; Otis Anderson of the Giants, the 11th leading rusher in NFL history; and such former Pro Bowlers as Wesley Walker of the Jets, Jim Burt of the Giants, Kris Collinsworth of the Bengals, E.J. Junior of the Cardinals and Joe Klecko of the Colts.

But most had the same reaction as teams tried to protect young prospects, knowing that other teams would be unlikely to pursue high-salaries who are well-settled in their home areas.

"I knew a long time ago they would do this," said Webster, who will be 37 next season. "They would be foolish not to put me on the list." "I understand why they're doing this, but it kind of hurts your ego a little bit," said Grimm, who will be 30 on May 2 and makes $450,000 a year. "Will I look around? I don't think I'll look that hard, but if the phone rings I'll answer it. Obviously, the Redskins don't look at this as a gamble on me. How many teams will pay that type of salary, and I'm getting on in years."

N.C. State, 14-3 and 5-2, was in its best start in the nine-year reign of Coach Jim Valvano.

Rodney Monroe had 15 of the Wolfpack's points, all on 3-point goals. Morgan led all scorers with 20 points.

John Crotty finished with 18 points and seven assists for Virginia, which also got 16 points from Brent Dabbs, 15 points and 12 rebounds from Bryant Stith and 10 points from Williams.

Monroe led N.C. State with 19 points and Brown had 18. Kelsey Weems contributed 11 for the Wolfpack before fouling out. Alvin West scored 20 points to lead East Tennessee State to its first victory ever over Wake Forest on Wednesday night.

The Buccaneers of the Southern Conference improved to 13-5 while Wake Forest fell to 9-9 after the game in Johnson City, Tenn.

And in College Park, Md., the Terrapins broke a nine-game losing streak with their victory over Maryland-Baltimore County.

Tony Massenburg and John Johnson combined for 55 points to lead Maryland, which improved to 7-12.

Johnson finished with 28 points while Massenburg added 27 points and 14 rebounds to survive a late charge by the Retrievers, 13-8.

Kenny Reynolds led UMBC with 19 points. His brother, Jeff, finished with 14 points.

Clippers ...

At the top of the telecast, play-by-play man Ralph Lawler noted that the Clippers "come into this game with a 14-game winning streak, make that losing streak."

Hey, a guy can dream. And make that 15 now, Ralph.

In the end, the Clippers' offense fell apart like a bad alibi. Lawler noted that the new coach, Don Casey, explained that he had the Clippers working so hard on defense in practice the previous week that the offense may have suffered.

The Clippers are like the college football player who showed his coach his latest report card: four F's and one D.

"Son, looks like you've been spending too much time on one subject," the coach said.

You have to like Casey's style, though. One of his first moves was to appoint Benoit Benjamin, co-captain of the team, joining captain Quintin Dailey.

On the surface, this is like naming Morton Downey Jr. headmaster of your charm school.

Shue had long since given up on Benjamin, and with no small justification. Shue benched Big Ben more than once and often begged team ownership to trade, sell or waive Benoit.

Japanese Soap Opera Sets Off Furor In Fundamentalist Iran

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NICOSIA, Cyprus — A Japanese soap opera is so much the rage in fundamentalist Iran that sacrilegious praise of its heroine during a live radio call-in program led to the imprisonment of four Tehran Radio executives.

An unidentified female caller had contended that the series' persevering protagonist is a better role model for Iranian women than the daughter of Mohammed, the founder of Islam.

Those remarks in this predominantly Shiite Moslem land of 50 million people triggered an outcry similar to John Lennon's remark during a 1960s news conference that the Beatles were "more popular than Jesus Christ."

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini angrily demanded the radio executives be punished for offending Islam and his wish was heeded.

Theology aside, the television show "Oshin," which depicts a girl's travails in devastated postwar Japan, is wildly popular among Iranians as they recover from their eight-year war with Iraq.

Traffic stops and blackouts are postponed during broadcasts of the serial, whose heroine, Oshin, suffers every imaginable hardship and setback.

The four executives were sentenced to prison terms by a Tehran court Tuesday for broadcasting the phone-in program.

Broadcast Director Mohammad Arab Mazar-Yazdi got five years and each of the three others —

Mahmoud Abulqasemi, director of Islamic ideology; Hamid Khunmeri, head of supervision; and Mohammad Rasekh, editor of ideological programs — received a four-year sentence and 50 lashes.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency said Khomeini had stressed in a letter to the state-run radio's director that "if proven there was a deliberate insult" the caller should "receive the death sentence."

The revolutionary patriarch's fierce reaction to the call underlined the religious passions that flow through Iran. But those passions have not kept the soap opera from captivating Iranian television viewers.

The drama, whose broadcasts began last year in Iran, was chosen by officials who thought Oshin an exemplary role model for Iranians suffering hardships that included Iraqi rocket attacks on Tehran and the loss of, by some estimates, a million of their countrymen.

It became an instant hit. Week after week, Oshin, struggles on despite food shortages and cruel relatives, loses her house in a fire, and faces trial after trial.

After Oshin's father died in one episode, an Iranian newspaper published a full-page obituary. Letters of condolence and telegrams poured in from all over the country.

When the heroine couldn't find enough rice to feed herself, sympathizers sent the TV station some of their own precious rice rationing coupons for her.

An Iranian schoolboy who recently traveled to Cyprus brought with him a prized possession: a pocket-sized poster of Oshin, which he said he bought outside his school for about $2.50.

Oshin has become a popular brand name for everything from shoes to electrical appliances. According to travelers from Tehran, it's also a favorite name for new-born baby girls.

Daily power outages, which last up to six hours in the larger cities, are never scheduled for Saturday nights, when Oshin is broadcast.

Just before the hour-long episodes, TV announcers ask viewers to switch off all unnecessary electric lights and appliances so the power supply will not be overloaded while the show is running.

One Tehran woman who experienced an unexpected blackout on Saturday recently while Oshin was showing, called a taxi to take her to another part of the city where the power was still on so she could see the show.

The driver raced her to a cafe, where both sat down to see the program over a cup of tea.

Tehran's hectic traffic grinds to a halt while Oshin is on TV.

"If you want to hail a taxi while Oshin is on you're out of luck," one traveler from Tehran said.

Thus, on Saturday, birthday of the prophet's daughter Fatima Zahra, when the woman who telephoned in to the daily "Family" radio program was asked whether Fatima Zahra was a fitting model for Iranian women, her answer was an emphatic "No."

"Fatima Zahra is not acceptable because she lived 1,400 years ago," she said. "I prefer Oshin."

Diane Sawyer Jumps To ABC To Co-Anchor News Program

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — It's official — it'll be the Sam and Diane show.

ABC News scored a major coup Wednesday by signing CBS "60 Minutes" correspondent Diane Sawyer to be co-anchor with Sam Donaldson on a new prime-time ABC News program scheduled to go on the air later this year.

"I think it's a great thing for us, and I think it's going to be a wonderful thing for her," said ABC News President Roone Arledge.

ABC also recently hired Chris Wallace away from NBC to be chief correspondent on the as-yet-untitled program that sounds something like a prime-time version of "Nightline," but with more time outside the studio.

Donaldson said he was "delighted" by the signing of Ms. Sawyer.

"From the very first time that I discussed this program with Roone Arledge months ago, we all understood if Diane would come to work at ABC it would be a tremendous asset," said Donaldson. "I always wanted Diane."

Ms. Sawyer said she was "grateful for every moment at CBS, but ABC is also a formidable news organization and this is a great creative adventure."

Madonna, Penn Reach Accord

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actress-singer Madonna and actor Sean Penn apparently have reached an amicable agreement to end their stormy three-year marriage and divide their property, court records show.

A divorce petition filed in Los Angeles County Superior Court cited irreconcilable differences and seeks restoration of the pop singer's former name, Madonna Ciccone.

It also said community property and financial obligations shared by the couple "have been disposed of by written agreement." No details were disclosed in the two-page petition filed Jan. 25.

Madonna publicist Liz Rosenberg said last week Penn would get the couple's Malibu home and the singer would keep their New York apartment. Madonna recently bought a $2.9 million Hollywood Hills home.

"That's it," Penn publicist Lois Smith said Wednesday. "She kept one and he kept the other."

Lear Forms New TV Venture

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

HOLLYWOOD — In a move that will bring one of TV's most successful and innovative producers back to the medium, Columbia Pictures Television announced Wednesday that it has formed a joint venture with Norman Lear's Act III Communications.

No financial details were disclosed, but the agreement calls for Columbia to retain all domestic and foreign distribution rights to programming produced by the new venture, Act III Television, which will operate "with total creative and business autonomy," according to the announcement.

"You can call it a deal with multiple zeros in it," Lear said in an interview Wednesday. "We want to do 360 degrees of television — concentrating on situation comedies, but not to exclusion of prime-time access (early evening), late-night and children's programming."

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You may find yourself all geared up with no place to go. A dilemma pops up that can produce impulsive behavior. Curb nervous energy.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Heaven can be a quiet evening at home over a favorite meal with someone you care about. Cooperation is paying off. You are getting along better with others.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Party time could get involved past midnight, so be certain that you keep tomorrow's commitment before you overindulge.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Some quiet time and relaxation will set the stage for a refreshing weekend. A reminder: Diet and health plans succeed when followed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Your expansive mood can set the stage for some socializing. Avoid someone who wants to part you from some of your money.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): You may prefer to duck out on some prearranged plans. Avoid a know-it-all person who does not deserve your attention.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Objectivity is missing today which can lead to self-doubt, uncertainty and prejudiced judgments. Stay with basic and familiar routines.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): People find you attractive which has more to do with your inner glow than appearance. You may be in the mood to spend money.

 Looking at all four hands, the play at four spades is simple. However, after a heart lead can you guarantee your contract, assuming trumps are no worse than 3-1, if all you could see is your side's assets?

North's jump to three spades showed a hand worth almost an opening bid and four-card support. South had more than enough to continue on to game.

West led the top of his heart sequence and, since there was no point to a holdup play, declarer took the ace. If trumps were 2-2, declarer could claim the contract regardless of the club situation, so he cashed the king-ace only to learn that he had a loser in that suit. The club suit now became crucial.

Looking at all four hands, it is obvious that declarer can pick up the clubs with two finesses. But that would be a foolish line to adopt since a 3-2 break with split honors is far more likely than the precise 4-1 distribution that actually existed. But declarer found a way to neutralize any distribution of the club suit.

He cashed the ace of diamonds and ruffed a diamond, then cashed the king of clubs. With his groundwork completed, he exited with a heart. The defenders did as well as they could by taking their two heart tricks, ending in the East hand. East cashed his high trump but, since a red-suit lead would give declarer a ruff-suff, he was forced to exit with a club; he chose the ten.

Declarer let that ride round to dummy's ace. Had West followed, declarer would have cashed the queen and claimed. But when West showed out, the finesse for the jack was marked and the contract was safe. Note that, had declarer not cashed the king of clubs early, he would have been faced with a guess in the club suit. South's line would have proved equally effective had clubs split 5-0, or if West held four clubs. Try it, if you don't believe us.
