Board OKs Project On Lindbeth Drive

The Greenville Board of Adjustment agreed at a call meeting Thursday at City Hall to allow construction of a multifamily development on Lindbeth Drive.

The board approved a request by D.C. Development to amend a special use permit in order to construct a 168-unit, multifamily development using land-use-intensity development standards on Lindbeth Drive, 750 feet south of the intersection of U.S. 264 and Lindbeth.

The property contains 8.65 acres and is zoned for R-6 (high-density residential) usage.

Other action taken by the board Thursday included: approval of a request by Donald McLane for a variance to exempt 604 Millbrook from the first floor elevation requirements based on the 100-year flood; approval of a request by Pals of Greenville Inc. for a special use permit to allow the operation of a bingo game center in the former King and Queen North building, located on the west side of North Greene Street, and a request by Dr. Mohamed Elsheikh for a special use permit to allow the operation of a family game center at 300 Southwest Greenville Boulevard.

The board denied a request by C.L. Summerlin for a special use permit to allow the operation of a flea market mall at the intersection of Riverbluff Road and N.C. 33, directly behind Putt-Putt Golf and Games.

Several items were continued until a later meeting. They included: a request by B&C Associates for a special use permit to allow construction of a 48-unit, multifamily development using land-use-intensity development standards at the southwest corner of Tenth Street and Charles Boulevard; a request by Hostetler's Tennis Shop for a variance from the Zoning Ordinance to allow the placement of a freestanding sign at 218-C Arlington Boulevard, and a request by The Pantry Inc. for a special use permit to allow gasoline sales in conjunction with the operation of a convenience store on the southeast corner of Memorial Drive and West Fifth Street.

The special call meeting was held to consider items on the agenda of the board's January meeting that was postponed due to a lack of a quorum of voting members.

Institute Participant

Janice Faulkner, director of the East Carolina University Regional Development Institute, will be one of 50 participants from 17 economically stressed counties in the Rural Economic Development Institute.

The institute is one of two leadership programs that will be piloted by the N.C. Rural Economic Development Center to help rural leaders gain the expertise they need to create jobs and bolster economic growth in their communities.

The institute will be administered by the rural center and the Institute of Government in Chapel Hill during May and June.

The Rural Leaders Program will focus on 30 new and emerging leaders in seven southeastern counties. About $216,000 has been allocated by the rural center for both programs. The money will be used for curriculum development, faculty and trainer salaries and fellowships for participants.

Director Appointed

Eugenia H. Yount of the East Carolina University School of Nursing faculty has been appointed director of the RN-BSN Outreach Program, according to Dr. Emilie D. Henning, dean.

Ms. Yount will direct the counseling and advising of registered nurse students enrolled in the ECU-Carteret Community College collaborative program in Morehead City and a program for nurses in Goldsboro.

'Big Chill' Gnaws New, Deeper Bite In U.S. Midsection

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Freezing drizzle ushered the Big Chill of '89 deeper into the nation's midsection and toward the East Coast today, turning highways into glaring stretches of ice and draping trees and power lines in a hardened coat.

The frigid air mass that spilled into the lower 48 states from Alaska earlier in the week brought more snow today to the weather-weary Pacific Northwest and northern states, threatening crops and endangering newborn livestock.

The cold spell has closed schools, disrupted travel, and caused power outages at a time when electricity is in high demand. Wind-chill readings between 60 and 80 degrees below zero were common across much of Montana and the Dakotas.

Stretching across a roughly triangular area from the Pacific Northwest to Texas to New England, the air mass is pushing southward, but at a slower pace than earlier in the week, said Brian Smith of the National Weather Service.

"It's moving quite a bit slower now. We're not getting the really rapid changes in temperatures that we were," Smith said today.

The below-normal temperatures are expected to linger until the middle of next week.

Schools in Montana, Nebraska, Washington state, Kansas and elsewhere told students to stay home today because of the snow and cold.

"There's no sense messing with this stuff," said Oswego, Kan., school Superintendent Ed Sink, who closed his schools.

State-government workers were expected back at work after being sent home at midday Thursday by Montana Gov. Stan Stephens. The capital, Helena, also had to cope with a train explosion that forced the daylong evacuation of thousands of people and left some without power with 38 below zero temperatures.

The cold chased out what had been an unusually warm January in many parts of the country. Bostonians enjoyed a record-high 66 degrees Wednesday. Twenty-four hours later, the city shivered in 31 degrees and freezing rain.

Six record lows for the date were posted Thursday and early today a record of 14 below zero was set in Goodland, Kan.

At the same time as northern states experienced staggering lows on Thursday, the southeast corner of the nation was hitting record highs. Nearly 30 records were set, including 80 degrees in Charlotte, N.C.; Norfolk, Va., 80; and Wilmington, N.C., 80.

At least four traffic fatalities were blamed on the weather, which slickened highways in a band of freezing rain from Texas to Vermont. In Edmonds, Wash., a 35-year-old utility worker died Thursday when he fell while trying to repair a downed power line.

Two men died of exposure, one in Martin, S.D., and the other in Great Falls, Mont. In Seattle, where snow is rare, a 12-year-old girl died of head injuries suffered in a sledding accident Thursday.

But a life was saved in North Dakota when searchers Thursday found a 16-year-old boy who got stranded three days before while driving to his family's farm. Bennett Stebleton of rural Egeland had only a stocking cap, light jacket, sweatshirt and car mats to keep him warm.

"He's quite a courageous young man," said Dr. William Norberg at St. Luke's Hospital in Fargo, where Stebleton was taken with frostbitten feet and hands. Overnight temperatures in the area had plunged to 30 degrees below zero.

The Alaskan air mass also delivered a rare snowfall to parts of northern California.

"There was snow right down to the beach in Trinidad Harbor," Yvonne Lewis, deputy city clerk at the tiny fishing town 300 miles north of San Francisco, said late Thursday. "It was nice; the kids loved it."

Farmers in Washington state worried that the cold would damage their fruit trees. Some growers in the Yakima Valley activated wind machines in orchards, said extension agent Mike Willett. The machines are designed to draw warmer air from 50 to 100 feet above the ground down into orchards, he said.

Montana ranchers said cattle were giving birth to calves that died from exposure within hours.

One rancher, Dr. George Ingham, said he lost two calves.

"We had one up and nursing, and came back and that big 100-pounder was dead," Ingham said. "It's the wind chill out on this prairie."

Princess Diana captivates tot at New York day care center

Diana Winds Up New York Tour

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Princess Diana made a triumphant but exhausting tour of New York City that embraced both its homeless and high-and-mighty, and by most accounts the only people she failed to charm were 400 Irish-American protesters.

The 27-year-old princess, described as tired and perhaps a little homesick, was to head home to England today after visiting Harlem Hospital and meeting children with AIDS.

"She is a beautiful woman — strikingly beautiful — who has taken the world by storm," Mayor Edward I. Koch exclaimed after meeting the princess Thursday night at the Brooklyn Academy of Music.

Diana was at the Brooklyn concert hall to attend the American debut of the Welsh National Opera, after which she returned to Manhattan and dazzled guests at a gala dinner in her honor at the World Financial Center.

Earlier, she visited a family's apartment at a Lower East Side shelter for the homeless and browsed at the giant FAO Schwarz toy store.

"I dreamed about this last night," said Wanda Morales, who shook Diana's hand. "It was better (than the dream). It was really better. We can hold our head up high and say, 'Princess Diana came to the Lower East Side.'"

Cheering crowds turned out at each stop to glimpse the princess. The lone note of dissent was heard outside the opera performance, where more than 400 protesters chanted "IRA, IRA" and waved signs denouncing the princess.

Conviction

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Alfred Ray Vance has been convicted of second-degree murder in the death of a Winston-Salem man more than 14 months after he was injured in a wreck that prosecutors said was caused by Vance's drunken driving.

Vance was sentenced to 20 years in prison Thursday. After the sentence was imposed, Vance's attorney announced he would appeal the conviction.

The jury found Vance guilty in the death of Lanny Lee Bradley, 54, who died of pneumonia May 3 in Forsyth Memorial Hospital. Dr. Lew Stringer testified that the pneumonia was directly related to a debilitating head injury that Bradley suffered in a two-car collision shortly after midnight March 11, 1987.

Vance, 27, was convicted in August 1987 of manslaughter in the deaths of two others — including Bradley's wife — in that same wreck. He was sentenced to nine years in prison.

Seoul Papers Report Secret Negotiations Aimed At Meeting Of Korean Leaders

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL, South Korea — South Korea and North Korea have held secret negotiations recently on improving relations and discussed the possibility of a meeting between their leaders, newspaper reports said today.

The reports come two days after the announcement of an unprecedented trade agreement involving North Korea and the South Korean conglomerate Hyundai. The Seoul government said today the agreement may pave the way toward national unification after 44 years of bitter rivalry.

Local newspapers quoted an unidentified government source as saying the secret talks were held overseas and covered most major issues between the countries.

The most recent talks, the newspapers said, were in Singapore last week between Park Chul-un, a special secretary to South Korean President Roh Tae-woo, and an unidentified senior North Korean official.

During his stay in Singapore from Jan. 24 to Jan. 30, Park met with his North Korean partner several times and discussed major pending issues, including a proposed summit between the two Koreas, the reports said.

The newspapers quoted the government source as saying the summit could take place by the end of this year.

Last month, Roh renewed a proposal that he and North Korean leader Kim Il Sung meet to discuss the future of the Korean Peninsula, which has been divided into the communist North and capitalist South since 1945.

The reported secret talks coincided with the historic visit to North Korea by a leading South Korean industrialist to discuss direct investment and joint venture projects.

Chung Ju-yung, founder and honorary chairman of the giant Hyundai group, was in North Korea from Jan. 23 to Feb. 1 as a guest of the government.

He announced Thursday he had agreed with North Korean officials to undertake several joint venture projects in that country, including a shipyard, a railroad plant and development of a tourist resort.

Newspapers quoted unidentified government officials as saying tours would be available later this year to the planned resort area, a rugged scenic region 20 miles north of the eastern boundary of the zone separating the Koreas.

The Seoul government said it would propose special legislation to facilitate the projects.

In a statement today, the government said "in principle takes a favorable view of the proposed projects, regarding them as possible pilot projects that could contribute to efforts to achieve national unification."

Chung was believed to be the first South Korean business leader approved by both governments to visit the North Korean capital of Pyongyang since the division of the peninsula.

North Korea's participation in the deal is seen as an attempt to revive its sagging economy. The North reportedly owes about $5 billion to East bloc and Western nations.

Figures published today and attributed to the South Korean government showed North Korea with a trade deficit of $720 million in 1987. Exports were listed at $1.67 billion and imports at $2.39 billion.

The agreement, in the form of a protocol, was signed by Chung and Choe Su Gil, director of North Korea's Taesong Bank and consultant to the state-run Korean Association of the Promotion of Asian Trade.

Officials, requesting anonymity, also said the government had ordered a special study of the security problems involved in trade and personnel exchanges with the North.

Under South Korean law, contact with North Korea is a violation of national security. The two nations are technically still at war since no peace treaty was signed at the end of the three-year Korean War in 1953. Each claims to be the sole legitimate government of Korea.

Finance Ministers Skeptical Of Bush Plan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration, playing host to its first big international gathering, got a skeptical reception today from allied finance ministers over the ability of the president's "flexible freeze" plan to reduce the federal budget deficit, participants said.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady was holding two days of closed-door discussions with his foreign counterparts. The sessions began late Thursday and continued through dinner.

Finance ministers and central bank presidents from Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Canada and Italy rushed from their limousines into the Treasury Department building today without speaking to reporters kept across the street by police.

But French Finance Minister Pierre Berezogov told reporters at a breakfast meeting that Brady had given the group assurances that the administration was committed to reducing the budget deficit and would meet the $100 billion deficit limit for the upcoming fiscal year required by the Gramm-Rudman law.

The deficit for fiscal 1989, which ends Sept. 30, is expected to top $160 billion.

Berezogov said Brady stressed that the administration saw the reduction of the deficit as a "very important" commitment.

However, a senior Canadian official said the other finance ministers displayed much skepticism about the chances of success of President Bush's "flexible freeze," his campaign proposal to bring down the deficit without new taxes by simply holding overall spending growth to the level of inflation.

The Canadian official, who briefed reporters on condition of anonymity, said other finance ministers expressed doubt to the Americans that the proposal could work because it was based on extremely optimistic economic assumptions, involving steep declines in interest rates.

The official said there was also discussion at Thursday's dinner meeting by the so-called Group of Seven over the problem of Third World debt and the need for West Germany and Japan to do more to reduce their huge trade surpluses.

Berezogov said France hoped the United States and the other countries would be willing to set up new machinery to guarantee interest payments on the debt.

Welcome War

Instruction Cuts Battle Waste

State Superintendent Bobby Etheridge fired the first round in the battle against bureaucratic waste when he announced staff cuts in the state Department of Public Instruction.

Now, he must reload his cannon and keep the shots coming steady.

Etheridge recommended eliminating four top administrators, about 30 division heads and numerous secretaries. He also proposed slicing the number of workers in the state's regional education centers by 40 percent, from 200 to 120.

In addition, the new superintendent placed sensible limits on the number of assistants administrators can employ. Currently, some offices have as many as 20 clerks. That's ridiculous. There's no reason an administrator needs more than 3-5 clerks, the number Etheridge reasonably suggested.

The reorganization and reassessment of school resources is a laudable move. The Department of Public Instruction is one of the most top heavy in the state — former State Superintendent Craig Phillips saw to that. Phillips' empire-building was no secret. He stockpiled manpower like a farmer storing hay for the winter, creating one of the largest departments in the state.

While schools must have the personnel to work toward excellence, this burgeoning bureaucracy unnecessarily burdens taxpayers. Reduction is right on target and Etheridge's plan hits the bull's eye.

But the proposal was merely a first step. It is important for Etheridge to follow through with his plan to dismantle an unmanageable work force and redistribute the human resources.

Equally significant is his proposal to include minorities and women in top administrative positions. The department is dominated by white men. Etheridge's pledge to provide more diversity is a sound move. He must keep these changes moving.

North Carolina's new superintendent has shown the state he does not intend to accept extravagance. With these proposed cuts he has sent a message — that positions must be justified, essential and productive. Etheridge has let the state know he will not allow the excesses of the past unnecessarily deplete tax coffers. That's a welcome war against waste.

His challenge now is to keep the charge going. He must resist the temptation to tear down one kingdom, only to build another in its place.

'Etheridge has let the state know he will not allow the excesses of the past unnecessarily deplete tax coffers. That's a welcome war against waste.'

Give Drug Dealers A PAW

WASHINGTON — A question for President Bush's new drug czar, William Bennett: How goes the war on drugs?

Bennett is smart enough to know the answer: It goes about like the late and unlamented war in Vietnam. The interdictions are impressive, the body count awesome, and the official projections encouraging.

And we're losing it hands down.

Recent press reports tell the story. The U.S. Customs Service, in just the single quarter ending Dec. 31, seized nearly 23 tons of cocaine.

That, by any measure, including its estimated street value of $4 billion, is a lot of coke, and the customs people are to be commended.

But then there is this story: D.C. General Hospital, the public facility that treats most of the victims of Washington's street violence, had to close its doors to new victims this week. The reason? More knifings and shootings — most of them drug-related — than the huge hospital could handle.

The local prison was bulging at the seams even before a recent fire exacerbated the problem of where to put convicted drug offenders. For the second straight year, this city is racking up homicides — again mostly drug-related — at the rate of more than one a day.

That's a terrific body count. As for projections, a spokesman for the Drug Enforcement Agency said, in eerie echoes of Vietnam, that production of cocaine in such places as Colombia, Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador is decreasing. Thus, he said, the record-level interdictions by Customs reflects an actual cut in the amount of cocaine entering the country, not just a reduction in an increasing supply.

But for our drug-plagued streets, the interdictions, the body counts and the projections don't mean diddly. The seizure of 45,530 pounds of cocaine in a single three-month period — 138,808 pounds for all of 1988 — didn't make a dent in the domestic drug traffic. Those who know about these things say there was even a drop in the street price toward the end of the year.

The facts of the situation would seem to force Bennett to either of two conclusions: Either we're fighting the wrong war, or else we are fighting it on the wrong front.

Partisans of both views begin with the same premise: that the staggering amount of money to be made in drug trafficking accounts for both the persistence of the trade and the alarming increase in drug-related violence. It's hard to imagine an attack on the supply side of the problem that could possibly work.

William Raspberry

Those who say we're fighting the wrong war advocate straightforward surrender. Legalize drugs, they say, and thereby take the huge profits out of the drug traffic. That wouldn't eliminate drug use anymore than the repeal of prohibition ended alcohol consumption. But it would separate drug use from the money-related violence that is tearing communities apart the country over.

Bennett, who as secretary of education revealed himself as something of a moralist, will probably reject that view.

The only thing left, so far as I can see, is a campaign to deprive the drug traffickers of their customers.

And how might that be accomplished? The usual ideas revolve are either education or user sanctions — for example, confiscation of cars used by drug buyers.

William B. Davis, late of the State Department, a former federal narcotics agent and now head of a group of international corporate advisers called Wisdom, Inc., has another idea: the PAW.

"It might sound wicked, but I assure you it would be very effective," Davis said in a recent speech to the Washington Bar Association. It would require new legislation. Anyway, here is his proposal:

If a person is convicted of selling drugs or of causing children to sell drugs on his behalf, a mandatory PAW should be added to any sentence. A one-year sentence would carry the additional penalty of a PAW each Saturday for that year. A suspended sentence would require at least one PAW before release.

And what is a PAW? Well, the "P" is for "public" and the "W" is for "whipping." You can probably figure out the rest of the acronym. Says Davis:

"If a prisoner has to spend all week long thinking about the PAW he is going to get Saturday morning — in the prison courtyard with people looking at him through the fence — he would resolve not ever to do anything that would cause him to go to jail again."

Davis, who knows that the "bleeding hearts" (a group that, in this case, might even include Bennett) would oppose his plan, but he says it's straight from the Bible.

"It says in Proverbs 26:3, 'A whip for the horse, a bridle for the ass, and a rod for the fool's back.' Believe me, anyone who knows in advance that he is going to get a PAW if he is caught selling drugs, and then goes ahead and sells some, has got to be a fool, and he deserves exactly what the Bible says he should get."

The Shifting Taboos Of The Modern American Tribe

BOSTON — I used to think that only primitive tribes had detailed taboos to dictate the way they ate and dressed, had sex and raised children. I used to think that medieval people were the ones who based their daily decisions on the intricate instructions of shamans. The modern American tribe didn't need detailed codes of behavior. evidence." But our focus on these matters is religious in its intensity. So I wonder if we haven't just shifted our loyalty from one group of experts to another. I wonder if we haven't just shifted our anxiety from one set of observances to another. Our faith is most obvious in our eating habits. Americans have become students, or should I say followers, of an expanding list of do's and don'ts that rivals the longest menu. Under the eye of our new medical priesthood, we have adopted proscriptions more rigid than those of a Muslim or Hindu. We keep healthy, a cuisine far more demanding than keeping kosher.

How would an anthropologist analyze the way food is taken as medicine in our tribe? For breakfast we cut up potassium over fiber and pour calcium on top. We eat Oat Bran for our heart and carrots for our colon, protein for the brain and complex carbohydrates for our mood.

We follow advice as if our life depended on it. Instead of memorizing the saints or gods who have power over our troubles, we learn by rote the ingredients that will lower and reduce the chances of heart disease or cancer. We are taught to follow the commandments: Thou shalt not smoke. Thou shalt not sprinkle thy food with salt.

The elite of our scientific hierarchy pour over the entrails of their computer data. We hear them argue now over interpretations the way medieval rabbis argued over the Talmud. Estrogen, says one, may increase the odds of breast cancer and decrease the chance of osteoporosis. It may, says another, heighten the possibility of cancer of uterus and reduce that of heart disease.

As lay people we worry about these arguments between scientific sects the way our ancestors worried about the struggles of the Reformation. In the past, those who followed a false doctrine believed they would face a hellish future. In the present, taking sides may be a matter of life and death.

We even judge human behavior differently now. A researcher at a recent American Heart Association meeting reported that angry and cynical people were five times as likely to die before they turned 50 than calm and trusting people. The old moral virtues have been transcribed into health commandments.

We are less likely to count our sins and more likely to calculate our risk factors. What's at stake is not the hereafter but the here-and-now.

How much freer, then, is our tribe? We don't have to worry about insulting a god that lives in a tree or stream. We don't have to guide our lives by the need to appease a spirit. But we, like they, try to mollify the great unseen powers by increasingly cautious behavior.

For all our sophistication and knowledge, public attention to the taboos of contemporary life comes from the same roots as those of our ancestors. It grows out of anxiety and the pursuit of safety. It turns out that we share something with these ancestors: a thoroughly ancient and thoroughly modern desire to cheat fate.

S&L Mess Shows Need For Reregulation Of The Industry

Ernest Furgurson

WASHINGTON The ooohs and ahs with which inside Washingtonians greeted the experienced, thus supposedly savvy Bush cabinet have dwindled away as we watched the new administration's handling of the savings and loan mess.

Apparently the White House is backing off the idea of making the customers pay directly for the chicanery and incompetence of the S&L gamblers it's still getting the bad political reaction, but without solving the problem.

In the longer run, out of the whole thing must come reregulation of the industry. That flies in the face of Bush's public commitment as head of the Reagan administration's task force on deregulation. But as he has made clear, a new breeze is blowing, and if it reverses the anti-consumer trend of the past eight years, that's a bonus we didn't count on so soon.

Charging depositors 25 cents per $100 on their bank and S&L accounts may seem trivial in dollars and cents. It knocks a quarter of 1 percent off whatever interest rate the customer is getting; if he has the maximum insured amount of $100,000 in the bank, it costs him $250 a year. If he has that much in savings, he can afford it.

But it's not the amount that caused such a flap. Nor is it the fact that boosting depositors' "insurance" fees that way would constitute a tax increase, regardless of what Secretary of the Treasury Nicholas Brady calls it. Accusing the new president of backing down so soon on his "no new taxes" pledge is predictable politics, but that's not the root of the issue.

The root of it is fairness.

Before the national S&L crisis became apparent, we had a glaring example of unfairness in Maryland. There, former Gov. Harry Hughes was blamed by voters for the collapse of a few S&L operations while he was in the State House. He was not the state's supervisor of S&L's. When the mess was realized, he took a strong personal hand in cleaning it up. But it happened on his watch, and so voters denied him a further political career.

The current widespread S&L crisis happened on Ronald Reagan's watch. He wasn't the cognizant official, but he came in promising to loosen federal regulations everywhere. When the mess was realized, his appointees started trying to clean it up, but they haven't fully succeeded yet. The main impact is another $100 billion or so of debt atop the colossal deficits with which he blessed us. Yet not a syllable of blame has been laid on our departed chief executive.

This scandal happened because hundreds of S&L managers across the country took advantage of deregulation to become high rollers with their depositors' money — not all of them, of course, but enough to cause the worst banking crisis since the Great Depression. But it is the depositors, and all taxpayers, who will have to bail them out. The hundreds of millions in tax writeoffs awarded big-time investors who bought up ailing S&L operations at year's end will be made up by folks like you and me.

That's not fair. Sen. Alan Dixon, chairman of the subcommittee on consumer and regulatory affairs, maintains that the high rollers who got us into this mess should be targeted before ordinary citizens. "We ought to be seeing to it that those people who are (still) driving around in Jaguars and have big yachts and belong to fancy country clubs come up to the bar now and pay up," he says. Many S&L executives are personally liable, Dixon asserts, and "we ought to be getting after them." Furthermore, states that are still liberalizing rules on S&L's are endangering their customers' savings and should be restrained, he says. "We ought to be putting some money into the FSLIC (Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation) and reducing the number of thrifts in the country, getting rid of the bad ones and supporting the good ones."

Ninety-nine percent of taxpayers would feel better if the government auctioned off those Jaguars and yachts to help bail us out, and slapped the more flagrant operators into prison. It might discourage others who see S&L's as a fast-buck opportunity slightly more respectable than drugs, rather than a conservative community institution. But it wouldn't pay off the debt those operators — and, let us note, many merely unlucky or incompetent managers — have run up for the nation.

Rather than the rudely received plan for a direct fee on depositors, the administration is likely now to push for increased "premiums" to be paid by banks and S&L's — which will then pass the cost on to their customers. It isn't fair, but the taxpayers are ultimately the only source of serious money in this world.

Why Make The Poor Beg?

Alvin Schorr

Now that welfare has been reformed (or so it has been declared), we turn our attention to other candidates for the dole. Notable on the agenda are savings and loan associations and agencies charged with cleaning up industrial pollution and waste from atomic energy produced for defense purposes. And it is still rumored that Third World countries will default on their debt and that our commercial banks will then queue up for a bailout.

Was it Michael Harrington who first described the American system as "socialism for the rich?" It is a peculiar advantage of current welfare for the rich that it need not traverse the congressional budget process in the same way as welfare for the poor. Its costs are presented to Congress as a result of de facto regulatory or industrial decisions or failures to decide.

So far the S&L foul-ups appear to have cost someone (you and me, ultimately) $38 billion, and the total bill is heading for $100 billion. Estimates for pollution and defense-related atomic energy cleanups also approach $100 billion each. How much is $100 billion? It would pay the nation's welfare bill for the next 10 years. At $75,000 each, it would provide 1.3 million subsidized housing units, making a considerable dent in homelessness (however one counts it). But who expected socialism for the rich to come as cheap as prenatal care, child welfare or food supplements, anyway?

Just whom do the S&L rescues rescue? Those who have deposits of more than $100,000. (This has been explained publicly several times, so it is now clear to you — isn't it? — why these uninsured depositors are being rescued.) And, of course, the stockholders — the very people who played roulette with money that belongs to depositors and is guaranteed by the government — are rescued, too.

It is academic or theological and trite to say that such disparities illuminate the American value system. We rescue the poor in small ways and the rich grandly, suiting succor to station. More down-to-earth considerations also operate. The rescued — tick them off in your mind — represent powerful political and financial interests. Naturally they are regulated by agencies and people to which and to whom they are closely linked and who are deeply sensitive to the risks to the country of failing to sustain them. I am not charging conflict of interest (having no knowledge of that), but only that with respect to these poorly or recklessly managed institutions the regulators and Congress are not simply socialists; they are bleeding hearts.

One may come to two ideas concerning what to do. First, we might have welfare and Medicaid and such programs regulated by the friends or associates of recipients. Just as the regulators from industry understand the effects on the country of failed business institutions, former recipients would understand the effects on the country of children with not enough to eat and families with no place to sleep, and they would meet those needs.

Alternatively, Congress might enact a law of common sense and proportionality. Because the poor make up 14 percent of the population, every $10 billion government rescue of business would be charged $1.4 billion to be fed into programs on behalf of the poor and powerless. For popular purposes, the legislation might be known as LPF — the Level Playing Field Act.

The Briar Patch

Jerry Knight

WASHINGTON — Sometimes William Seidman, head of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., sounds a lot like Brer Rabbit.

Please don't throw me in the briar patch, Seidman says. Don't merge the FDIC with the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. Instead of merging the two deposit insurance funds, Seidman says, the best way to fix the FSLIC would be to split the S&L insurance fund off from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and make it an independent agency, with status and power equivalent to the FDIC.

In a lengthy and sensible study of what should be done about deposit insurance for the decade, the FDIC makes creation of "a stand-alone FSLIC ... financially and administratively independent" its No. 1 recommendation.

Of course, there are other options, the FDIC study notes. Congress might want to completely rewrite the federal bank regulation and deposit-insurance system, combining the FDIC and the FSLIC in the process. Or it might want "an administrative merger" of the FSLIC and the FDIC that would have the FDIC take over management of the savings and loan cleanup.

That is not the FDIC's recommendation, Seidman insists. No, Brer Fox, not into the briar patch with the S&Ls.

But Seidman knows the FSLIC's credibility is long gone; the agency is trusted by neither Congress nor the public. Depositors have come to view the FSLIC seal on the door of a financial institution as a warning, not a symbol of safety. Outraged by the agency's uncontrolled, unaccountable bailouts, Congress isn't about to give the FSLIC more independence and authority, nor is it going to wade into a total rewrite of banking regulation until the S&L crisis is under control.

That leaves the FDIC's second choice as the only alternative, as far as most people involved in banking policy-making are concerned: some kind of "administrative merger" that would put the FSLIC under the direction of someone who can be trusted. Someone like Bill Seidman.

Seidman last year managed to preside over the worst year in the history of the deposit-insurance fund without getting stuck on the tar baby that trapped bank board chairman M. Danny Wall and the FSLIC. Seidman closed down more banks than ever, saw the FDIC fund ring up its first loss, and came away without damage to his own reputation or that of his agency.

Many key FSLIC officials would have to be kept in their jobs after any "administrative merger" of the two agencies. The FSLIC actually has more experience than the FDIC at putting together multibillion-dollar mergers, cleaning up crooked institutions and managing repossessed real estate, but the FDIC has the political savvy and credibility that are needed to restore public confidence.

Chief economics adviser Beryl Sprinkel might be willing to talk about reducing the $100,000 deposit insurance coverage, but Seidman knows better. The $100,000 limit doesn't mean much anyway, because last year 99 percent of all depositors were protected, regardless of the size of the account.

Sprinkel failed to appreciate not only that cutting deposit insurance is a political non-starter, but also that it is a dangerous balloon to float at a time when depositors are already nervous about their money.

Ditto for Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady's idea of taxing depositors to pay for the S&L bailout, which is not all that different from what the FDIC proposed a few weeks earlier. The FDIC suggested raising money indirectly by broadening the base on which deposit-insurance premiums are collected, making banks pay insurance premiums on their foreign deposits, which technically are not insured, but in fact are covered because the FDIC usually protects all depositors.

Seidman once again showed his savvy by calling the Brady plan "the reverse toaster theory. ... Instead of the bank giving you a toaster for making a deposit, you give them one."

Pollution Plan Dies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Opposition from environmentalists and state regulators has scuttled a proposed compromise on the thorny issue of whether North Carolina should be allowed to set its own anti-pollution standards.

A tentative agreement hammered out by a representative of two environmental groups and lobbyists for several business organizations could have buried rulemakers in court challenges, critics said.

"Back to the drawing board," said Bill Holman, lobbyist for the Sierra Club and the Conservation Council of North Carolina. He was the environmental lobbyist who helped craft the compromise, which Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, had planned to present to the Senate Environment and Natural Resources Committee on Thursday.

Winner, unhappy that the compromise fell apart, declined substantive comment but said he was hopeful that an agreement could be reached.

"I feel ... that we will ultimately pass something," he said. "We're just going to delay it awhile."

Veto Hearing

Four Former Governors Say Veto Needed For State's Chief Executive

No Opposition To Veto Appears During Two-Hour Legislative Hearing

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Martin and four former governors appealed for more responsible government as the General Assembly appeared willing for the first time to let North Carolina join the 49 other states with gubernatorial veto.

"On the tough issues of the day, too often the courageous positions have to be taken by the legislators who too often must stand alone," said Martin during a two-hour public hearing on the veto.

Former Gov. Jim Holshouser called the veto power a "two-edged sword," saying that without it "if those of us sitting in the governor's office didn't like what you did we said, 'Those fools over there in the legislature have done it again,' and put it all off on you."

Unlike previous public hearings in earlier sessions, this one had few negative comments about the veto. Most of the discussion centered on how the veto would work and what trade-offs might be needed to keep the three branches of government in balance.

Sen. Jim Ezzell, D-Nash, whose Committee on Constitutional Amendments held the hearing on three Senate veto bills, said the change of heart on the issue was due to public pressure.

"It has been made such a political issue that all legislators are getting telephone calls and mail and whatever from their constituents saying, 'Let the governor have the veto,'" he said. "So I think that's why it's being re-examined and I think that's why we're seeing less and less opposition."

Two political scientists — Thad Beyle of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and Abraham Holtzman of N.C. State — described veto power in other states and how North Carolina stacks up.

"There's a lot of constraints on our governorship that are not placed on other governors," said Beyle, who said North Carolina's governor is one of the weakest in the nation.

Beyle said less than 5 percent of legislation is vetoed in other states, with 4 percent to 6 percent of the vetoes overridden.

Forty-three states have line-item veto, he said, with most adopting a two-thirds override.

Holtzman said the advantages to the veto are often overshadowed by the major power shift created through the governor's ability to threaten bills.

"It's his chance to say to a member of a legislature, 'You play ball your way and I'm going to veto your bill,'" Holtzman said.

Ezzell said his committee will begin examining the bills Wednesday and hopes to vote on some package in three to four weeks.

"There will be some trade-offs," he said, adding that they could include limiting the governor to a single six-year term, increasing legislative terms from two years to six years and giving the General Assembly confirmation powers over more gubernatorial appointments.

In addition, "I think that the legislature is going to look favorably at letting the governor and lieutenant governor run as a team ... after the primary," Ezzell said.

Several speakers touched on those issues as well as various forms a veto may take.

Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., a former governor, said in a statement delivered by spokesman Sam Poole that he favors a veto linked to single terms for the governor, lieutenant governor and speaker of the House.

Sanford said that with succession, "the governor is inclined, quite naturally, to put off difficult decisions until his second term."

Former Gov. Bob Scott called for a line-item veto with a two-thirds override by the House and Senate. He said the matter of succession should be on the same ballot with the veto issue, but not on the same referendum.

The current governor's main concern was that a veto, preferably line-item, be effective immediately after the people approve the referendum.

"There certainly would be no reason to postpone it except, perhaps, as an intended or unintended affront to a particular sitting governor," Martin said.

He called for a two-thirds override and said the issue of succession could be put before voters separately "if you feel that will help those who are opposed to it" change their minds.

Holshouser, now Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner's legislative liaison, also called for letting Martin wield the veto if approved "lest the voters perceive it's pettiness on the part of the legislative branch towards the executive branch."

Like Gardner, Holshouser supported a line-item veto with a two-thirds override and also said gubernatorial succession could be considered as a trade-off to get the veto approved.

Former Gov. Jim Hunt said he favors copying the federal system with no line-item veto and a two-thirds override.

"I'm very concerned that we don't have the governor being the legislature," he said.

Hunt said the knowledge that the governor has the veto will make the legislative process work better, fostering cooperation. And he proposed leaving the issue of succession alone, saying, "If you don't work very hard in your first term ... you aren't going to get elected to your second term."

Former Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan urged lawmakers not to give the veto to the incumbent governor, saying it might raise questions about the motives behind the effort while giving the governor power over the important redistricting decisions to be made in 1991 — decisions that will shift the number of lawmakers representing various areas.

Hunt tried to put it all in perspective.

"It's awfully easy to talk about it in terms of the governor's power versus the legislature's power," he said. "... But I would appeal to you to consider what's best for the people of North Carolina."

Panel Begins Study Of Proposed Overhaul Of State Tax Structure

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Tax simplification, better enforcement and fairness to the poor were the key issues as a House subcommittee got its first glimpse of a bill to base North Carolina's income tax on the federal law.

The bill proposed by the Tax Fairness Study Committee would be the first major overhaul of the state's income tax structure in 50 years, said Rep. Sharon Thompson, D-Durham.

"Because of that, there has been a financial burden on our lower- and middle-income taxpayers," she told the Finance Subcommittee on Ways and Means Thursday.

For example, while the average per capita income in North Carolina has risen from $323 in 1937 to $13,314 in 1987, the threshold for paying taxes has remained at $2,000. The proposed change would exempt those under the federal poverty line from paying state income taxes.

Changing the tax code so taxpayers pay either 5 percent or 8 percent of their federally adjusted income would make it much simpler to file state tax returns and would improve both compliance and tax-law enforcement, Ms. Thompson said.

"When South Carolina changed in 1985, the error rate dropped from 20 percent to 4 percent," she said.

David Crotts of the Fiscal Research Division said that a family of four with two working parents would be able to make $13,000 a year without paying taxes — up from the current threshold of $6,000.

Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, who filed an identical bill in the Senate, said he is certain the matter will be approved if the House goes along with it. Winner spent most of last session educating the Senate on the concept but decided not to push for enactment until this term.

In other legislative action:
Lottery
The House Finance Subcommittee

on Ways and Means heard brief descriptions of two proposed constitutional referendums that would establish a statewide lottery in North Carolina, but did not vote on the issue.

Rep. Dave Redwine, D-Brunswick, sponsor of one of the measures, said it had a "50-50 chance" of winning the subcommittee's approval. But he said he might be able to reverse an unfavorable action before the larger Finance Committee.

"On something like this, there's safety in numbers," he said after several subcommittee members voiced objections to the idea.

Redwine and Rep. Frank Rhodes, R-Forsyth, have introduced lottery bills. Rhodes' bill calls for the proceeds of a lottery to go to public education for the first five years, then to the general fund.

IN THE STATE

Teacher Robbed

HIGH POINT (AP) — A 41-year-old elementary school teacher gave two robbers a lesson in toughness this week when they tried to steal her purse at a High Point mall, police said.

Mintie Saintsing of Thomasville lost $100 on Wednesday after one of the female robbers flashed a gun, but she was able to recover her purse and billfold by chasing and tackling both of the robbers, according to police reports.

Ms. Saintsing was standing inside the mall when a woman came up and asked her the time. When Ms. Saintsing looked at her watch, the woman grabbed her purse and started to run out the back door, police said.

Ms. Saintsing chased her and, in the lot behind the mall, tackled her. Another woman, apparently an accomplice, then picked up the purse and ran. Ms. Saintsing chased the second thief, tackled her, got the pocketbook back, and was struggling for her billfold when the billfold opened and her money fell out, authorities said.

The second woman then got the money and ran, police said.

Groups found in violation of the federal regulations could face a maximum penalty of up to six months in prison, a $5,000 fine or both.

Power Outage

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — A power failure which knocked out lights in Watauga County early Thursday was caused by a woodpecker who had carved out a nest in a 90-foot power pole, utility officials said.

Bob Bumgarner, general manager for the Watauga district of Blue Ridge Electric Membership Corp., said crews found the broken pole on a 110,000-volt transmission line in Ashe County near Jefferson.

More than 22,000 customers in Watauga County were left without power for about 70 minutes after the 12:30 a.m. outage.

Officials at Appalachian State University said some students were trapped in elevators at dormitories when the power went out, but all were freed by security officers and no injuries were reported.

Housing Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. David Price, D-N.C., introduced legislation Thursday that would lower downpayments for first-time homebuyers in an effort to make housing more affordable for young families.

The Home Ownership Assistance Act of 1989 could reduce by 30 percent the downpayment on mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration, Price said.

The bill, which has 52 co-sponsors, would also increase the percentage of a home's value that the FHA can insure.

Suspension

MOUNT OLIVE, N.C. (AP) — A 15-year-old student who was caught carrying a concealed weapon at school has been suspended for 10 days and will be recommended for expulsion, Mount Olive Junior High School Principal C.B. Price Jr. said Thursday.

The .22-caliber target pistol discharged into the ceiling in the school's main hallway Tuesday morning, Price said. No one was injured.

The 10-day suspension is the maximum penalty a principal can give. Price said he will recommend that the board of education expel the student for the rest of the school year.

Lucky Teen

WARRENSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — When Kim Darnell was out trying to convince her relatives and neighbors to buy magazines, winning $100,000 wasn't something she expected for her efforts.

But the 17-year-old Northwest Ashe High School student did just that Wednesday, and took home the first installment: a $5,000 check.

Ms. Darnell and 500 classmates at Northwest Ashe had been called for a mysterious special assembly. When her name was called, she noticed that her parents were also there. As whoops went up from her classmates, she walked dazed onto the gymnasium floor and hugged her parents.

Then she hugged four company representatives of Quality School Plan Inc. who gave her the money. She hugged the school principal, the assistant principal and anyone else within reach.

Michael A. Pezza, the vice president of the company, based in Richfield, Conn., a subsidiary of Reader's Digest Association Inc., and David W. Abernathy, a district sales manager from Winston-Salem, gave Ms. Darnell an oversized check representing $5,000 a year for 20 years.

The Voice On The Line

RALEIGH (AP) — When residents of other states telephone this spring to ask about vacation prospects in North Carolina, the friendly voice on the other end will belong to someone who cannot travel very far herself — at least, not legally.

Beginning in March, inmates at the North Carolina Correctional Institution for Women will field inquiries for the state Division of Travel and Tourism, Gov. Jim Martin announced Thursday.

The 16 or so women will be instructed about vacation opportunities in the state and how to dispense advice, the governor said. The program should provide valuable job training for the inmates while improving the efficiency of the tourist-inquiry service, he said.

"This is a win-win program for the taxpayers, the inmates and state government," Martin said. "This program will provide the travel office with twice as many toll-free operators as they employ, and it will train the participating inmates for jobs in computer data entry, telemarketing, and travel and tourism."

The inmates selected for the program will spend the next eight weeks studying state history, geography, highways, attractions, events, accommodations and other relevant subjects, Commerce Secretary Claude Pope said.

"Once on the job, the women will be supervised closely at all times, and they will understand that their phone conversations will be closely monitored," Pope said.

Inmate labor has been used successfully for similar tasks in other states, he said.

Champion Says Halifax Plant Still On

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Plans by Champion International Corp. to someday build a billion-dollar paper mill in eastern North Carolina play no part in the company's current decision to curtail operations at its 80-year-old Canton plant, officials say.

A 2,000-acre tract near Halifax will likely house Champion's next paper mill, spokesman Bob Turner said this week, but such a decision is years away and unrelated to the Canton operation.

"Plans for a mill in Halifax have always been predicated on the assumption that a mill would always be in Canton," Turner said from Champion's headquarters in Stamford, Conn.

Champion's announcement last week that it would reduce its 2,000-man Haywood County workforce by half and possibly close the Canton mill renewed speculation that a move to Halifax was imminent.

Champion currently operates a brown paper mill 10 miles north of Halifax in Roanoke Rapids, and five years ago bought the 2,000-acre tract farther down the Roanoke River just outside Halifax.

"We have said since then (that) we are owning it for the purpose of building an entirely new mill — if we ever build a new mill," Turner told The Asheville Citizen. "Is the Canton decision affecting this? No, not in any way."

Champion Chairman Andrew Sigler announced last year that Champion would delay until the mid-1990s any plans to build a $1 billion bleached pulp and paper mill in Halifax.

Champion's Canton mill produces bleached pulp and paper, providing 25 percent of the envelope paper in the United States and a third of the U.S. market in milk and juice cartons.

A cutback in production at the Canton mill would force Champion to pick up the slack, possibly through existing mills in Pensacola, Fla., or Courtland, Ala., Turner said. Those mills are capable of producing the envelope paper and liquid packaging board, although the Canton mill is currently Champion's only source of such products.

The Roanoke Rapids mill, built about the same time as the Canton mill 80 years ago, also is up for a renewal of its wastewater discharge permit. Unlike the Canton mill, however, the Roanoke Rapids plant faces no numerical color standard in the Roanoke River.

The Environmental Protection Agency imposed its 50 color-unit measure on the Pigeon River four years ago when North Carolina refused to set a numerical standard. Less specific state rules require only that an industry not discharge darkened effluent that would prevent "intended uses" downstream.

The 50-unit standard is the sticking point that Champion claims it cannot meet on the Pigeon River.

Tennessee, into which the river flows, refused two months ago to ease that requirement in its state.

Jim Sheppard of the N.C. Division of Environmental Management said the Roanoke Rapids mill is unlikely to face such difficulties in receiving its five-year permit.

"They've got more water for dilution than the Pigeon does," he said Thursday from Raleigh. "The Pigeon is just in an unfortunate place."

Champion officials have long said that a mill the size of Canton's would not be built today on a river the size of the Pigeon.

State School Board Challenges Etheridge's Leadership Role

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The new state superintendent of public instruction, found his role, authority and independence called into question during a tense 90-minute discussion with the state Board of Education.

Board members questioned Bobby Etheridge about his commitment to teacher merit pay, his efforts to revamp the state's teacher salary schedule, the effect his staff reorganization is having on morale and the salary he proposed for his new chief deputy.

The discussion focused on whether the superintendent has authority to initiate policies that depart from those set by the board, and it raised old questions about the leadership structure of public education.

A majority of the 13 members on the board, including Chairman Howard H. Haworth, were appointed by Gov. Jim Martin, a Republican. Etheridge, a Democrat, was elected. Haworth and Etheridge each have said they consider themselves the chief spokesman for public education in the state.

Several board members said Thursday's discussion revealed an inherent flaw in the leadership structure.

"It is just a structure in itself set up to cause conflict," said board member Cary C. Owen of Asheville.

Edwin M. Speas Jr., special deputy attorney general for education, said that under state law, the board's role is to set policy and the superintendent's job is to carry it out.

"I don't see how you can implement a policy one way if you have a parallel policy going another way," said board member Kenneth R. Harris of Charlotte.

Under the state constitution, the state Board of Education supervises and administers the public school system as well as the state funds used to run it. The superintendent works under the board as the administrative head of the state Department of Public Instruction. He is also the secretary and administrative officer to the board.

Etheridge differs with the board on the career-ladder program offering teachers higher pay for superior performance. He also has vowed to revamp a disputed teacher salary schedule, although the board has launched a study to do the same thing.

Noting other groups also are proposing salary revisions, board member Donald Pollock, an attorney from Kinston, asked Etheridge why he was going to do yet another. The superintendent said he was seeking a consensus among those groups.

On Thursday, board members also asked Speas whether the superintendent had the power to initiate his own career-ladder and salary-schedule plans. Speas said he could propose such plans, but the board had the final say on whether they became policy.

But Etheridge still is free to take

Teacher Still Has Vision After Blast

DURHAM — A Durham High School chemistry teacher whose face and eyes were burned when he raced from a laboratory with an explosive vial has blurred vision, but was not blinded, his son said.

Venkat Chittilla, 27, who completed medical school in India and is in the United States applying for a residency in pediatrics, said doctors at Duke Medical Center took the bandages off his father's eyes Thursday.

"They took a look today and said that his eyes are improving, but that we have to wait. His vision is blurred," the son said.

Suryanarayana Chittilla and his students were arranging chemicals in a renovated upstairs laboratory about 8:30 a.m. Tuesday when water accidentally got into a vial of sodium metal. The combination can be explosive and forms lye.

Chittilla said when he saw what had happened, he immediately grabbed the vial and headed for the stairs.

"I ran down the steps with flames coming out of the container," Suryanarayana Chittilla said from his hospital bed. "I reached the door

Sanford Wants Tax Break Axed

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., has introduced a bill that eliminates a tax break that encourages large-scaled leveraged buyouts and could penalize the new owners of RJR Nabisco Inc. as much as $1 billion.

Sanford wants the bill, which he introduced Thursday, to take effect at the beginning of this year, in order to cover Kohlberg Kravis Roberts and Co.'s purchase of RJR Nabisco.

The bill was sent to the Senate Finance Committee, which recently concluded a series of hearings on LBOs and corporate debt. Witnesses at those hearings agreed with Sanford that the tax code is skewed in favor of corporate debt, said an aide to the committee's chairman, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

The aide, who asked not to be identified, said that Bentsen would like to correct that flaw in the tax code.

Under current law, the interest on corporate debt is tax-deductible. Sanford's bill would limit the deduction for "stock acquisition interest" to $5 million. The bill exempts routine corporate purchases, as well as those buyouts that do not rely on massive loans.

Bush Plans Action Next Week On Thrift Crisis

By Dave Skidmore
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush said today that any plan to rescue the troubled savings and loan industry "is not going to be popular" but he pledged that the government will continue to guarantee the safety of insured deposits.

Bush met at the White House with Democratic and Republican leaders of Congress to seek their ideas on how to resolve the S&L crisis.

"We've got a big problem in the savings and loan industry," Bush told the lawmakers, meeting in the Cabinet Room. "There are no easy answers, no worrying about blame — plenty to go around. I want to see the problem solved."

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, and Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, pledged their cooperation in seeking a solution.

Setting out a timetable for producing an administration plan, Bush said he will meet Saturday with Treasury Department officials to hear their final recommendations and then early next week reveal the course he will take.

Nevertheless, Bush told the congressional leaders, "you're not being presented here with a stacked deck. We need ideas and if we're overlooking something, we want to know what it is."

The president said, "Whatever we come up with will not be popular. And I expect then whatever you come up with will not be popular. But we've got to get on and get the problem solved."

"We want to work with you. This is a serious problem," Mitchell told Bush.

The administration is worried that advertisements from banks in three states questioning the safety of savings and loan accounts may needlessly scare depositors who are already worried.

White House Chief of Staff John Sununu, who was present at today's meeting, criticized the ads Thursday at a private, hour-long meeting of Bush and five S&L and bank trade associations, said Frederick Webber, president of the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, who attended the meeting.

Sununu, waving copies of several of the ads, said, "Gentlemen, it is absolutely, unequivocally irresponsible to have placed those ads," according to another participant, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

At today's meeting, Bush did not mention the ads but said, "The safety of those deposits is guaranteed, will continue to be guaranteed and there should be no feeling around the country that some solution will do anything to diminish the credit of the United States being behind the deposits, the FSLIC, FDIC, whatever it is."

The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation insures deposits at S&Ls and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation insures those at commercial banks.

Mary-Liz Meany, a spokeswoman for the American Bankers Association, said Sununu gave the association copies of advertisements placed by banks in Texas, Arkansas and Kansas.

"We are going to call the banks and inform them of the concern in Washington and the sensitivity that they might not be aware of," she said. "We made a promise to the administration that we would certainly monitor it and we agreed with their concern."

Bush did not speak at the meeting about the ads or reveal any preference among the many options for addressing the S&L crisis, according to participants.

"He was there to learn from us and he's a good listener," Webber said. "It was very gratifying. The man is personally involved in this."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said proposals in the president's address to Congress Thursday "will be pretty specific. You'll know exactly what our proposal is."

The spokesman outlined the "basic points" guiding the president:

- insured savings must be protected.
- current problems must be solved and losses stopped.
- permanent reforms preventing a recurrence must be enacted.
- the deposit insurance system should be put on a sound financial footing.
- cleanup costs must be equitably allocated.

Sununu's anger over the advertisements underscores the administration's concern that the debate in Washington over how to pay for the S&L crisis has unnerved some thrift depositors.

Last week, regional Federal Home Loan Banks reported higher-than-expected S&L withdrawals after Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady and other administration officials discussed a suggestion that depositors pay a fee to raise money for the S&L bailout.

Meeting participants said Bush stressed, as he did a week ago in a nationally televised news conference, that the deposits are backed by the full faith and credit of the federal government. He planned to make the same point in his speech next week.

But Mark Riedy, president of the National Council of Savings Institutions, added: "The feeling in the meeting was this is a serious situation. By the time it gets to be a real run, it's too late."

On Capitol Hill, Charles O. Bowsler, head of the General Accounting Office, urged the government to take prompt control of the 350 remaining insolvent, but still open, S&Ls after agreement is reached later this year on a bailout and reform package.

The congressional auditing and investigative agency said Congress should provide a plan to raise $85 billion over three years, coupled with a reform package. At that point — which some senators say may be as late as the fall — regulators should take control of institutions, placing them into receivership as necessary.

In testimony before the Senate Banking Committee, Bowsler criticized regulators' current approach of using promissory notes and loss guarantees to conserve cash and spread rescue costs over 10 years.

In another development, the House Banking Committee released a long-awaited report from the GAO that turned up six instances in which independent accounting firms "did not adequately audit" institutions that later failed.

The GAO said "auditing and reporting problems (were) significant enough (in six cases) to warrant our referring the CPA firms performing the audits to regulatory and professional bodies for their review."

Washington Breathes Easier As President Shakes Off His Cold

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush says he is much better, thank you, and so all Washington can breathe a sigh of relief and put William Henry Harrison out of mind.

Bush caught a stubborn cold a few days after taking office two weeks ago, and it was the sort thing that calls attention to itself in a new president.

His voice turned raspy, and he apologized to an audience of sailors in Norfolk, Va., Tuesday for "just croaking away." On Wednesday he lost his voice altogether to laryngitis, and greeted guests at a diplomatic reception that night in a bare whisper. He canceled a speech, looked flushed, said he was taking antibiotics for an ear infection, and kept saying it was only a cold.

But, "I'm a totally new man," he reported Thursday. "All well. Totally recovered."

Bush likes to compare himself to Martin Van Buren, but it was Van Buren's successor in the White House, Harrison, who came uneasily to mind.

Harrison, 68, gaunt, malnourished and apparently suffering from ulcers, delivered the longest inaugural address on record — one hour and 45 minutes — in cold, blustery, wet weather on March 4, 1841. A month later, he was dead in the White House.

He refused to wear a hat or coat when riding a horse to his inauguration and then, despite the weather, declined to shorten his 8,578-word speech. He led a parade back to the White House and that night attended three inaugural balls. He caught a cold.

Harassed and fatigued from the demands of office seekers, he was unable to shake it off. No help was offered by the environment of a poorly heated White House.

According to "Medical Cover-Ups in the White House," by Edward B. MacMahon, a doctor, and Leonard Curry, a journalist, published in 1987, Harrison — like many presidents — was given inadequate care.

"American presidential history is filled with examples of medical treatment that has ranged from questionable to downright incompetent," the authors say.

By March 27, Harrison, who had avoided standard medical treatment all his life, was willing to submit to the doctors.

He and they both "knew that the diagnosis — pneumonia of the right lower lobe of the lung with congestion of the liver — constituted, in those days, a fatal complication," the book says.

The doctors first blistered the skin on the right side of his chest, then applied suction cups to draw out what they considered to be the offensive substance making the president ill. That weakened him.

Next they induced vomiting, gave him castor oil to purge his bowels and finally gave him sedatives in the form of opium and brandy. As a last resort, they tried a Seneca Indian remedy, Virginia snakeweed. It didn't work, either.

Bush's treatment was presumably more medically relevant than Harrison's and presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater was able to pronounce his boss fit Thursday afternoon.

"His prognosis is excellent," he said. "He's in good shape. His voice is getting stronger. He feels well."

Senate Panel Delaying Tower Vote To Check Concerns Over Lifestyle

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A Senate panel will extend its investigation of John Tower after new allegations surfaced about President Bush's choice for defense secretary, reportedly concerning his drinking habits and relationships with women.

Tower, a onetime chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, had appeared on a clear path to confirmation after telling his former colleagues he had no alcohol problem and would not be swayed by past business ties with defense contractors.

But the chairman of the panel, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said that the committee received new accusations Wednesday afternoon and evening as did the White House, and both forwarded them to the FBI.

Nunn interrupted a committee hearing on another matter Thursday to announce that an expected vote on the Tower nomination that day had been postponed.

"The file is still not complete and there are members now who have made a request to review certain items in the files, so we will not be voting today," Nunn said.

Nunn and the ranking Republican on the panel, Sen. John Warner of Virginia, later met with the FBI and Sherrie Marshall, assistant to White House counsel C. Boyden Gray, to discuss the new information.

"It's not over till it's over," Nunn said. "The investigation is not over until all serious allegations have been checked, and that's the process we always follow."

Nunn refused to describe the allegations or identify the source. But Sen. James Exon, D-Neb., said the committee would tend "to give more weight to sources who don't have an ax to grind."

The new allegations involve reports of womanizing and drinking, according to network and newspaper reports.

The Washington Post, quoting unnamed sources involved in the investigation, said the allegations dealt with "incidents of a relatively recent nature that had previously been unreported to the FBI." An unidentified woman who worked with Tower in Geneva told CBS on Thursday that she had seen Tower chase a secretary around his desk.

Further delaying the vote was the request by two unidentified committee members to review the FBI report. Previously, only Nunn and Warner had read the report.

Warner said he hoped the committee would be able to vote next week, possibly Monday, on the nomination.

"My hope is that this is the very last chapter in the analysis of new information," Warner said.

Exon said he believed the nomination was "still in question," but not in jeopardy. Another committee member, Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., said he didn't think Tower was in trouble, but rather was "just strung along."

At the White House, Bush spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the administration had only sketchy information about why the committee wanted more time. "Obviously the president has confidence in Mr. Tower," Fitzwater said. "He urges prompt consideration of his nomination."

Tower, who has been divorced twice, is now single. He has been accompanied to the confirmation hearings by his companion, Dorothy Heyser.

Kemp Appointment Approved By Senate

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Former Rep. Jack Kemp, retired congressman Manuel J. Lujan and two other high-level nominees were approved in the most recent Senate votes on President Bush's appointments, with Kemp becoming secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development and Lujan becoming secretary of the Interior.

Also confirmed Thursday were Michael J. Boskin, to be chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, and William J. Reilly as head of the Environmental Protection Agency. The vote for each of the nominees was 100-0.

Kemp won unanimous approval by the Senate Banking Committee earlier in the day and his nomination was sent quickly to the Senate floor for final action.

His approval came after the former New York Republican congressman agreed to give up more than $55,000 in speaking fees after being told he had apparently violated federal limits on outside income for members of Congress.

Lujan, 60, was a 20-year member of Congress from New Mexico until his retirement last year.

He was approved 19-0 by the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee on Wednesday.

Bumps Come Costly On Small Cars

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Minor accidents that would have caused no damage to a 1981 small car can bring a big repair bill for 1989 models, according to insurance industry tests.

The Insurance Institute for Highway Safety intentionally crashed 19 new 1989 two-door cars at 5 mph into two flat barriers, once going forward and once backward, and then bumped the front end of each car into an angle barrier and the back end into a post.

Damage estimates calculated in January ranged from $3,445 for an Isuzu Impulse to $434 for a Geo Spectrum.

Identical tests on a new Ford

Escort in 1981 caused no damage, institute spokesman Brian O'Neill said Thursday.

A 1989 Ford Escort suffered no damage in the straight-on barrier tests but the repair cost after the other two tests totaled $1,481.

O'Neill said the low-speed tests were conducted over the past month at test facilities in Hartwood, Va., using new cars purchased anonymously by the institute, which is financed by the insurance industry.

The highest repair estimates were for the Isuzu Impulse, the Daihatsu Charade at $3,047 and the Honda CRX HF at $3,040. The least damaged cars after the Geo Spectrum were the Toyota Corolla with $495 in damage and the Plymouth Colt with $642.

Prior to the 1983 model year, federal law required that cars sustain no damage in 5 mph front and rear barrier tests. For newer models, the standard was lowered to 2.5 mph.

Nine cars sustained no damage at all in the front and rear barrier tests in the 1989 study but all were damaged when nudged up against the angle barrier and pole.

Ford Motor Co. spokeswoman Joyce Stinson said the difference in damage to the Escort is due to changes in the model.

Exotic New Age Believers Stress Natural Forces

By George M. Cornell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — On a leather strap around the young woman's neck hung a plum-sized chunk of quartz.

"It puts a circle of power around you that keeps you feeling protected," said Marybeth Stroebel of Jersey City, N. J., a graphic artist for a Manhattan advertising firm.

"The crystal shields you," she said. "If you know how to get in tune with it, it helps you be more safe and calm when you encounter some unpleasant situation. It's electromagnetic, you know."

Such minute energy pervades the known universe, including every piece of earth, but an esoteric view of the New Age movement is that quartz crystals give off a soothing, guarding aura.

This is among an effusion of the movement's exotic ideas — extra-terrestrial beings, reincarnation, out-of-body experiences, "rebirthing tanks," mantras and "channeling" wisdom from the ancients.

It's "a hybrid mix," says Russell Chandler, author of one of the most comprehensive, balanced books yet on the movement, "Understanding the New Age," issued by Word Publishing.

"Some of its kookier fads may have peaked and be passing," he said in an interview. "But the fallout of New Age thinking and its impact is going to be around for a long time."

"Many of its subtleties have penetrated the entire culture. It's very attractive and seductive, promising quick spirituality. Its eclectic appeal resonates with a lot of people in our pluralistic society."

He said the movement's key premise, "in simple terms, is that everything is God and God is everything and we can become God. That's the point of all the techniques to attain altered states of consciousness."

Asked if such playing God wasn't the biblical wrongdoing of Adam and the Tower of Babel — and of tyrants of history — Chandler said it was. "It's all right there in the opening chapters of Genesis."

However, he said New Agers don't see God in the Judeo-Christian sense as a supremely personal sovereign who reveals his truth through history, but as an impersonal "it," an "energy force that penetrates the universe."

"God is a sort of loose energy ball rattling around the universe," Chandler said. "Of course, you can't derive the Ten Commandments or any ultimate standards from a loose energy ball."

He terms such "moral relativism" a fault of the movement, saying its notion of reincarnation puts "a different spin on lying, stealing, adultery, even murder," since victims are assumed coming back unharmed in another life.

However, Chandler emphasized that the movement is varying and fluid. "You sign no creed. People buy into it at different levels," he said, espousing only bits or much of it.

"It has no coherent organization or headquarters that issues pronouncements or any single leadership," he said.

But it does have key theoreticians and "hard-core strategists," he said, and is promoted in psychic fairs, seminars, therapies and publications, its ideas sprinkling TV and movie fare and even business motivational training.

"Shirley MacLaine is kind of the high priestess of the movement," he said, noting that her TV appearances and books made most people aware of it.

Its slogan: "You create your own reality."

Chandler, 56, an award-winning religion writer for the Los Angeles Times, took an eight-months leave for researching the movement, interviewing both its critics and fervent followers.

He says it holds that "everything is one vast, interconnected process," that the "cosmos is pure energy," that "all is one," that individuals can attain "higher selves" and the world gain unified harmony.

"Humanity is deified, death is denied and ignorance — not evil — is the enemy," Chandler writes of the movement.

He says New Agers believe the world nears a "profound breakthrough" when the "limited, finite Old Order will give way to a glorious, unlimited New Order of peace, prosperity and perfection."

"Thousands of New Age activists seek to transform society through New Age precepts," he writes. As the year 2000 approaches, he adds, "New Age millennial expectations will likely crescendo to fever pitch."

Bishops Urge 'Peace With Justice'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Another religious voice — this time from U.S. and Latin American Methodist bishops — has sounded a plea to governments to keep hands off Nicaragua and be "peacemakers and not peacebreakers."

After extensive talks, the bishops this week declared "peace with justice" is possible, but must recognize "each nation's right to determine its own destiny" without interference.

This is a long standing demand of most major Christian leadership, Protestant and Roman Catholic, in opposing outside military intervention in strife-torn Central America.

Pageant Participants Have Busy Schedules

Her Costume Honors ECU

By Angela Lingerfelt Bland
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Miss North Carolina Jackie Padgett has been packing almost everything she owns, including a pirate outfit, in preparation of her departure Saturday for Mobile, Ala. She will spend almost a month there getting ready for the Miss USA Pageant.

"I'm leaving Saturday morning bright and early and I will be there until March 1," she said in an interview Thursday. "I'm ready to get the show on the road."

An East Carolina University senior, she will wear a pirate outfit as her state costume in honor of ECU and North Carolina's Outer Banks. She and 49 other beautiful girls from 50 states will spend the month rehearsing television production numbers, sightseeing, attending dinner parties with dignitaries, attending conventions and doing promotions.

"I understand from past Miss North Carolina's that they keep you busy from sunrise to midnight everyday," Miss Padgett said. "They try to cram in as many activities as they can, but it will be a lot of fun."

A native of Hobgood about 35 miles north of Greenville, she is the daughter of Julian and Mary Ellen Padgett, who live the Halifax County town with a population of 300 people. She has been earning a degree in clothing and textiles from ECU and expects to graduate in December, then pursue a career in the fashion industry.

"Greenville's my second home," she said. "I've been here five years and I love this community." She is taking the semester off from school this spring because of her month-long stay in Mobile.

And "just being there" — in Mobile — is what she is looking forward to the most. "It's going to be so exciting to me because I have watched the Miss USA pageants since I was a little girl. It will be thrilling to live it first-hand," Miss Padgett said.

She also is looking forward to meeting Dick Clark, the master of ceremonies for the competition to be aired Feb. 28 on CBS. On that night, the 10 semi-finalists will compete in evening gown, swimsuit and interview competitions. The semi-finalists are to be chosen Feb. 23 after 10 days of preliminary competition, which Miss Padgett's parents and sister plan to attend.

If she is crowned Miss USA, she will win $400,000 in cash and prizes and immediately begin her year-long reign.

Jackie Padgett prepares to leave for Mobile, Ala.

"As soon as you win, the very next day you move to Los Angeles for the reign, where the Miss Universe headquarters are," she commented. "If I won, I would be spending about 90 percent of my time traveling throughout the U.S.A. doing appearances and meeting people."

Miss Padgett said she feels fortunate that has the opportunity to represent North Carolina in the national event. As Miss North Carolina, she has used her title "to try to be some type of role model for children and adolescents."

If she does not win, she will continue her activities with Pitt County Memorial Hospital's Dream Factory and present programs to kindergartners through second-graders in Tarboro.

"I will continue to present programs on self-confidence, which I feel is very important," she said. "I have spoken to a lot of groups on how to be a winner at life and about believing in yourself and reaching your goals."

She thinks the concept is important "because in eastern North Carolina, some kids don't get the nurturing they need and they suffer from low self-esteem. High self-esteem increases your happiness."

Miss Padgett plans to keep a diary of her daily activities in Mobile.

"I think it will be neat to open the diary 10 years from now and relive everything we did," she commented. "If I have time."

Competition Opens Today

By Lane Dunn
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Since being named Pitt County's Junior Miss in 1988, Courtney Jones has hardly had time to stop and catch her breath.

She has been preparing to leave for Greensboro, where she will participate in the week-long North Carolina Junior Miss Program. The program starts today and ends Feb. 11 at 8 p.m. with the grand finale, the selection of the N.C. Junior Miss.

The event will feature 36 high school seniors from across the state who will compete for scholarships. The areas of competition are scholastics, creative talent, physical fitness and poise and appearance.

Events are scheduled for the week include a reception, various performances and the arrival of America's Junior Miss, Kristen Logan. Miss Jones said that it will be "quite an honor" to meet her.

Another event scheduled for the week is the "Be Your Best Self" program at General Greene Elementary School, an event that Miss Jones is particularly interested in. It involves working with young people and stresses being an individual and making decisions.

"Most importantly, it just tells young people to be yourself," said Miss Jones, daughter of Glennis Jones. She is a senior at D.H. Conley High School.

She said she is confident about the interview portion and her classmates have been helping by quizzing her on current events and offering advice.

She is most worried about the physical fitness portion of contest. Contestants are required to do a seven-minute aerobic routine and the judges have the option to see it again. "I know I couldn't last two times," she said. She also is worried that she might mess up her piece for the creative arts portion, which is a tenor saxophone performance of "Yakety Sax" by Boots Randolph.

Since being named Pitt County's Junior Miss, she has had a full calendar and has represented the program at functions such as the Ayden Collard Festival and the Grifton Shad Festival. She also is involved with the 1989 local Junior Miss competition, as well as giving speeches and participating in "Be Your Best Self."

Miss Jones plans to attend East Carolina University next year. At Conley, she is the president of the senior class and the Latin club. She has received numerous honors, including Who's Who in American High School Students, Who's Who in Music in American High Schools, the All-State Honors Band and the All-District Band for six years.

She attended Governor's School East in 1987 and Girls State in 1988. Also in 1988, she attended a marching auxiliary camp and was selected to be on the All-American Performance Team. This gave her the opportunity to march at the Hall of Fame Bowl in Florida and the Maui Classic in Hawaii, but she was not able to attend either event.

Miss Jones has received an enormous amount of support for the competition. She said her mother is just as excited as she is and even plans to work with the Junior Miss program in the future. Her classmates have also been helpful.

Pitt County's Junior Miss, Courtney Jones

"They're behind me 100 percent," she said. "Some will be attending the program to support me."

Miss Jones' host family for the week will be Mr. and Mrs. Howell Reddick. Christy Harris, a contestant from Raleigh, will be her roommate. The two have met twice recently to work on portions of the program and discuss ideas for "Be Your Best Self." Miss Harris' grandfather, Lyman Harris, lives in Greenville.

Miss Jones said she will be "totally shocked" if she wins the competition. "That would be the icing on the cake, but just being a part of the Junior Miss Program on the local level is just as special as winning," she said. "I'm going to the program hoping to make a lot of new friends and gain some self-confidence."

Miss Jones will carry with her a city of Greenville plaque to present to the Greensboro Jaycees, the sponsor of the Junior Miss program. The plaque is a gesture of friendship and appreciation from Greenville to the Jaycees for their efforts in producing the program.

Anyone wishing to write Miss Jones while she is in Greensboro should address their mail to 418 Beverly Place, Greensboro, N.C. 27403. Tickets for the competition will be available at the door.

Knicky Added Laughter

Dear Abby: About the church organist who was upset because the guests talked before the wedding ceremony and applauded afterward: I wonder what she would have thought of our wedding?

David and I wanted a happy, joyful wedding, so we set a light-hearted tone to the ceremony by having Knicky, our female Labrador, serve as the ring bearer.

We had the rings in a beautifully decorated basket. Knicky was to hold the handle of the basket with her teeth and come down the aisle on cue. All went well at the rehearsal, but at the wedding, Knicky got excited when she saw us at the altar and she ran down the aisle, leaving the basket behind.

You can imagine the laughter! But this in no way detracted from the seriousness of our commitment. The guests were quiet and attentive when David and I exchanged our vows, and I have never felt more moved and reverent. It was very fitting when all the guests burst into laughter after the ceremony. — Jenny Knickerbocker, Bozeman, Mont.

Dear Jenny (And David): Congratulations and all good wishes. May your life together be filled with love and laughter.

Dear Abby: I read with interest the letter from the woman who, when asked, "How are you?" didn't want to lie about her physical condition, so she responded with a long-winded health report.

Her answer could have been: "I'm too young for Medicare and too old for men to care."

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Dear Jeanne: Wrong. Many women would be offended by the inference that when women are no longer "young," men will cease caring about them.

And as if that weren't enough, the feminists would be offended by the implication that unless men care about them, they have little value.

Dear Abby: My common-law husband has a big problem with drugs, but he denies it. He says it isn't a problem because he doesn't do the heavy stuff — he only smokes pot. Abby, he smokes a lot of pot. He gets moody, slurs his words, has an "I don't care" attitude and his memory is poor. He keeps saying he can quit if he wants to — but I don't believe he can.

Abby, he is the father of my 2-year-old twin girls and a 10-month-old boy. I am getting so disgusted with him I want out of this relationship, but I really love the guy. What should I do? — Chuck's Woman

Violent Intrusion Caused Changes In Their Lives

By Nancy Shulins
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MONTGOMERY, Vt. — Mike and Harry Dutchburn shared a life as predictable as January's blizzards and July's blackberries. Awake by 4 and asleep by 9. Off to the barn at 4, 2 and 5. Errands once a week: St. Albans for parts, Newport for fertilizer, John Deuso's store at the crossroads for potatoes, hot dogs and bread.

In a weather-beaten farmhouse on a lonely stretch of highway 10 miles from Canada, the brothers passed their evenings in unmatched armchairs in a kitchen papered with sailing ships and maps of the world.

The wallpaper was hung by a sister years ago. Mike, 77, and Harry, 79, likely would have chosen pictures of cows over maps of a world they've had precious little to do with, until it burst in on them one January night.

Anyone in town can point out the Dutchburn place, with its blistered white paint and drawn shades. Surrounded by open fields, house and barn sit near the road on a curve that's unexpectedly tricky. Mike and Harry have lost track of the cars they've pulled from the mud over the years, a habit of helpfulness that was to cost them.

From their kitchen window, they can see their hillside birthplace, the only other home they've ever known. They still remember moving day, June 15, 1915, just as they do every journey away from home ever since: their brother's funeral in Massachusetts in 1944; Mike's trip to their sister's in Michigan in 1960; the 65-mile drive with their niece, Sandra Lyon, to Burlington a year and a half ago. Harry hadn't been there for 40 years.

Except for pies and cookies from Grandma's Bakery in Richford, the Dutchburns' list of indulgences is shorter than the list of their trips: an aborted attempt at cigar-smoking in 1940 (Harry), and two chug-a-lugged bottles of gin in 1939 (Mike).

"We don't owe anybody," says Mike. "We pay cash or we do without. We go right along. That's our way."

The Dutchburns' ways — modesty, hard work and thrift — were common knowledge on the frugal little farms of Franklin County. So was their habit of carrying large sums of cash.

On the last day of January 1986, the ways of the world — violence, cruelty and greed — were brought home to the Dutchburns by two strangers who called them by name.

They pretended to be out of gas. The Dutchburns didn't have any, but Mike climbed out of his narrow iron bed in the middle of the night. By the time he'd walked the few steps to the kitchen, the two men had kicked in the door.

"You shouldn't be here," Mike told them. He got hit in the face. Harry, who had $7,000 in his shirt pocket, walked in right behind him and got hit in the head with the thick maple cane he used to prod cows.

Mike put up a fight, but it was over in less than five minutes. Afterward, Mike says, "the kitchen looked like you'd cut a bunch of hens' heads off and let 'em fly."

Five minutes was all it took to teach two old men about fear. The fear never left them, not even after the robbers went to jail.

"I don't sleep anymore. I hear the cars all night. You don't forget it," says Mike. He only has to look at his brother to remember. Harry's right eye hangs like a crooked picture in his face. It swells and weeps in the cold; since the beating, he no longer goes out to do chores.

The cane hanging on its peg is another reminder. So are the dents it left in the old Kelvinator in the kitchen. "They could have taken the money," Mike says. "There's no sense beating a person up."

He rubs the dents gently. "It's the people in the world that's changed," he says. "They don't care who they take from."

Detective Sgt. Bill Northrup, an 18-year veteran of the Vermont State Police, calls it "as brutal as any homicide I've ever investigated."

Except that it wasn't a homicide. The Dutchburns survived.

They just didn't recover.

Mike Dutchburn lay for 3½ hours on the kitchen floor after the beating, afraid to move. Harry was unconscious. When Mike saw a light go on next door at dawn, he crawled out to his Chevy pickup and drove half a mile to the neighbor's.

When their niece got word at 5:30 that morning, she drove straight to Montgomery. At the farmhouse where she'd spent childhood vacations petting calves and eating ice cream, Sandy Lyon found two state police troopers in a kitchen splattered with blood. In her uncles' hospital room, she says, "I didn't recognize either one of them."

Lyon, a bank teller with three grown children, has the manners of a Sunday school teacher — until she talks about the beating. Then she starts saying "hell" a lot.

She remembers two strong, handsome men who teased and spoiled her.

"They were easygoing. They took you for who you were. Mike pulled my pigtales. Harry was the perfect image of my dad, who died when I was 17."

Since the beating, she says, "Harry has been to the barn once. Mostly, he sits there and broods. They're withdrawn now. They have that constant fear. Any little noise on the porch and they're petrified."

Harry lets Mike take him to the barber, but outings are rare. He has trouble climbing into the truck; his back, like his brother's, is bent from years of work in the low-ceilinged barn.

The money Harry carried in and out of that barn, the money ripped out of his pocket, helped lead police to the attackers.

"You spend 20 hours a day in a barn," Northrup says, "and your money will smell like a barn."

Salesmen at Champlain Chevrolet in Enosburg knew that smell. It had lingered long after Mike Dutchburn drove off in his new pickup truck. They finally tracked it to the cash in the safe.

Northrup alerted all Vermont banks and stores to be on the lookout for hundred-dollar bills with "a strong barn odor." That led to some of the Dutchburns' money. The money led to one of the men.

Judge Frank Mahady can still picture the two stooped figures in faded green work clothes who shuffled into his Burlington courtroom as if from another century to talk sorrowfully about locking doors and mistrusting strangers.

Harry told of no longer being able to work. "The best part of my life is gone now," he said.

Mahady listened patiently as the Dutchburns and their niece tried to explain why two years and eight months in jail — the terms of a proposed plea agreement — didn't feel much like justice.

"There is a very fundamental right, the right to be simply left alone," the judge said finally. "It is so important and so basic it doesn't have to be set forth in any documents. That basic, fundamental right was taken away. That's unpardonable."

Mahady isn't known for rejecting plea bargains. "To the hard right," he says wryly, "I'm known as 'the criminal's judge.'"

He made an exception in the case of Darrell Clark, 39 and unemployed, with a record of larceny and assault. In July 1987, Mahady gave Clark five to 10 years in jail. Another judge gave Louis Gilbeau, 33, a stainer at a furniture factory, eight to 10 years, with all but five suspended.

Both men can expect to serve three years and nine months. "A rope around the neck would've been better," says Harry.

He and Mike spent three days in the hospital after the beating, then signed themselves out. The doctors wanted to keep them longer. The Dutchburns had had enough doctoring.

They opened a checking account and had telephones installed in the house and barn. Then they shut themselves up behind new deadbolt locks.

The house still looks sealed. Vulnerable and exposed alongside the highway, it could be abandoned but for the truck in the driveway and the two figures sitting still as statues in the kitchen.

They greet prolonged knocking with silence. Eventually, they respond to introductions shouted through the locked door.

The gray sky is spitting snow, but inside an ancient stove warms the kitchen. Harry's gold plaid chair is stationed by the side window. Mike's green vinyl recliner guards the door. A Holstein and her calf watch over them from a wall calendar, courtesy of Eastern Milk Producers.

A paper bag worn thin as tissue paper holds their memories. One ghostly snapshot shows two hardy young farmers in matching coveralls and caps sharing a joke. Side by side, they are broad-shouldered and handsome, heads tipped back, mouths stretched wide, eyes crinkled shut.

Slowly, stiffly, Mike hands the picture to Harry. Out of their armchairs, both men are curved like question marks, fragile figures who move gingerly about the kitchen.

All along the valley in farmhouses much like the Dutchburns', doors and windows left unlocked for decades were bolted and sealed that winter, and shotguns put away for next hunting season were retrieved.

Franklin County's 37,000 inhabitants had known crime, but mostly of a different sort: patches of marijuana tucked away in a field, or burglaries of unoccupied vacation homes owned by out-of-state skiers. Not the sort of face-to-face crime that has people afraid to come to the door at night.

"There was talk of forming a posse. There was talk of lynching and tarring and feathering — an old-fashioned killing party," Sandy recalls.

"No hole is deep enough, no rock big enough, to hide scum like you," neighbor James McGrarty wrote in a letter in the Franklin County Courier. "I promise you, we'll find you and I pray to God the police do before I or the other people in our town of Montgomery do."

Eventually, things quieted down. Two men went to jail and life went back to normal. Except for Mike and Harry.

This month brings another reminder. A lawsuit they filed against their assailants goes before a district court jury. "It's the principle," Sandy says. "My uncles are never going to be better. Why should two innocent people have to live this way?"

The prospect of once again facing their attackers weighs on the Dutchburns. They try to make light of it. "We've gotten used to going to court," Harry says, grinning faintly.

There is no getting used to the locked doors. Or the fear.

Not long ago, yet another driver missed the curve by the Dutchburns' and spun off the road into the field. He pounded on their door for a long time, but Mike and Harry sat very still. Eventually, he went away.

ECU Plans Outlined

planning process will include examining the possibilities of a wide range of doctoral programs.

In an interview after the meeting, Eakin said he could not identify specific areas that need improving until the strategic planning study is complete, which will likely be in the summer of 1990. But, he said he is pleased with the current status of ECU.

"I think that the faculty and staff of the university are doing a wonderful job of being good stewards of the taxpayers' dollars," he said. "I'm just very appreciative that in the state of North Carolina we have such excellent tax support, which allows us to keep our tuition low."

Some lawmakers have discussed raising tuition at state universities to generate more revenue, but Eakin said the low cost of quality education is what makes the UNC system unique.

"It sets us apart, I believe, as one of the truly outstanding systems in the country," he said.

Eakins told the committee that the university also is continuing to pursue funding for additional buildings on campus.

"Physical planning is also being addressed and accentuated in the interest of accommodating future growth, preserving the state's already substantial capital investment and enhancing the basic character of the campus," he said.

Pitt County lawmakers have filed bills in the General Assembly requesting funds for a new library at ECU, land acquisition and construction of the first phase of a regional activities center.

But, Thursday's meeting will not have a direct effect on capital projects for this year, UNC system President C.D. Spangler Jr. said after the meeting.

At the start of the budget process, Spangler met with institution heads to learn of their needs. He then developed a list of budget requests and presented them to the UNC Board of Governors. In turn, that group presented Gov. Jim Martin with its formal budget request about 60 days ago, and Spangler has been lobbying lawmakers in support of the budget.

Later in the session — after lawmakers have allotted funds for continuing operations and faculty salaries — the General Assembly will consider the issue of new buildings on campuses, Spangler said.

"We've entered a base budget, trying to explain and preserve what they have given us in the past and to justify those expenditures," Spangler said. "We shall be here in the future talking about the other items ... The General Assembly, very appropriately, considers what's been done in the past as what takes priority for the funds they have. And they have limited funds."

"They tend to wait until they have the total economic picture in hand (before allocating money for new buildings)," he said. "It's a common sense process."

As for capital improvements, ECU officials have listed the new library as the No. 1 priority, and Spangler said it is included in the Board of Governor's request.

"Everyone understands (the new library) is of paramount importance. It is part of the overall capital improvement requests. But the Board of Governors does not put the capital improvement requests in an order of priority. They say they're all important, and eventually we would get them all," he said.

Some lawmakers who will most likely have an important vote in where the money goes attended Eakin's presentation, including Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Marc Basnight, D-Dare, and House Appropriations Committee Chairman Dave Diamond, D-Surry.

Rep. Howard Chapin of Washington, N.C., told Eakin he was pleased with the progress of the university.

"They're doing everything so good I don't really have a question," Chapin said to Sen. Marvin Ward of Winston-Salem, who presided over the meeting.

Chapin said he has long been concerned about the lack of communication between university officials and public school officials, but Eakin has stepped in and provided a link. Later this month, ECU officials will travel to Beaufort County to meet with school administrators, Chapin said.

Dr. William Laupus, the first dean of the ECU Medical School who retired last fall, said the medical school has worked diligently in pursuing its three main goals: improving primary care in rural communities; providing regional medical care for eastern North Carolina, and creating opportunities for minorities to attend medical school.

About 25 percent of the graduates of the medical school have entered family medicine, Laupus said, a figure that represents the fourth highest percentage among the 127 medical schools in the nation.

Presently, about 14 percent of the medical school students are minorities, Laupus said, and much progress has been made in providing opportunities for minorities.

"Our commitment to this program has been undying," he said to the committee.

Laupus, who has announced he will also retire this year from his position as vice chancellor for health sciences, said it appears that the School of Allied Health needs to be expanded to offer master's degrees in physical therapy.

"This is an area where there is a demonstrated need of individuals ... of the population," he said.

Jobless Rate Goes Up Slightly In January

ings of nonsupervisory employees climbed by 0.6 percent, or 9 cents, while average weekly earnings rose 1.2 percent in January. Those figures are adjusted to reflect traditional seasonal changes in the employment picture.

In another sign of continued economic strength, the manufacturing work week rose by 0.1 hour to 41.0 hours and average factory overtime held steady at 3.9 hours.

Janet Norwood, commissioner of the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics, said it was difficult to interpret the January data because of the seasonal pressures on the economy usually triggered by colder weather and the passing of the Christmas season.

"Supported by January's mild weather and an economy that continues to grow, many of the usual seasonal job reductions did not take place this year," Ms. Norwood said in testimony prepared for the Joint Economic Committee of Congress.

Because of the 865,000 gain in the number of Americans seeking jobs last month, the unemployment rate edged up slightly despite the job growth. Of the 123.4 million people in the labor force last month, 116.7 million had jobs and 6.7 million were seeking employment, the government said.

A separate government unemployment rate that includes the nearly 1.7 million members of the armed services stationed in the United States also was 5.4 percent in January, like the civilian rate up 0.1 percentage point from December.

In the civilian economy, the jobless rate among whites remained unchanged in January at 4.6 percent; the rate was 4 percent for white men and 3.9 percent for white women.

The civilian unemployment rate among blacks climbed to 12 percent in January from 11.6 percent in December, while the jobless rate among black teen-agers jumped to 34.5 percent from 29.6 percent.

There also was an increase in unemployment among Hispanics, from 7.6 percent in December to 8.4 percent last month.

The robust report on the job market comes on the heels of several other reports this week suggesting continued economic growth — at rates some economists believe are too high to ward off inflation.

Today's unemployment report was the first of the Bush presidency and came just four days before the Federal Reserve's open market committee meets to set monetary targets for the new year.

Earlier this week, the government reported its index of leading indicators, its main economic forecasting gauge, climbed 0.6 percent in December. Also out this week were reports that construction spending rebounded and jumped 2.2 percent in December and that personal income rose 0.9 percent in the final month of 1988.

Last week, the government reported a 2 percent gain in the gross national product for the fourth quarter of 1988 and a 6.4 percent December jump in durable goods orders.

"There statistics on the economy continue to flash green," Allen Sinai, chief economist for the Boston Co., said Thursday. "There is no stopping this economy."

Program a higher priority than raising salaries.

He reiterated his opposition to raising taxes for an across-the-board pay increase.

"It does not have much appeal to raise taxes just to keep spending more money on doing the same thing that we're doing," he said.

But he said his message to teachers was that "if they want to talk about a tax increase, then come and talk to me about how we would go statewide with incentive pay, performance-based pay, the career ladder, so that we can offer that opportunity for promotions to every teacher in our system who wants it."

The governor stopped short of advocating a tax increase, but his willingness to discuss one appeared to depart from previous statements in which he had ruled out higher taxes this year except to raise money for highway construction.

The Republican governor, who was re-elected in a landslide last Nov. 8, has been stung by reaction to his pay proposal.

Critics have noted that he campaigned on a promise to try to boost North Carolina's teacher pay to the national average by 1992. Martin said Thursday he intended the career ladder to be the vehicle for reaching the national average.

Theft Charges Filed

The Pitt County magistrates office this morning said that charges were made Thursday afternoon in a Jan. 25 Winterville break-in. The charges were filed by Chief Smith, according to Ed Turcotte of the magistrate's office.

Smith confirmed today that he had filed the charges and he said arrests have been made by his department.

Smith said that Curtis Daniels, 18, of Boyd Street was charged with breaking into Mrs. Everett's house. Lindi Harper, 41, of Railroad Street, Winterville, was charged with receiving stolen goods in connection with the break-in, according to the chief.

Cheesy Birthday

RALEIGH (AP) — Fifty cheeseburgers from a Siler City grill made their way to the state Senate on Thursday in celebration of the birthday of Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, who turned 66.

The burgers were a gift from a colleague, Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, who made the two-hour trip to Siler City and back Thursday morning in time to surprise Rauch at a luncheon party.

hydrogen peroxide, which also exploded. But a second hydrogen peroxide car was coated with ice in the frigid cold, apparently preventing it from exploding.

Only two minor injuries were reported, which Spengler termed "miraculous," adding, "We are all speculating what a disaster we'd have had if that had happened at the rush hour."

It was one of two major train derailments in Montana on Thursday. In the second, 52 Burlington Northern grain cars derailed near Glacier National Park, spilling more than 5,000 tons of corn and blocking tracks in both directions. The derailment forced Amtrak to suspend service indefinitely between Minnesota and the West Coast.

The explosions in Helena scattered debris for a quarter-mile radius, showering a nearby college campus and sending a 1,500-pound coupling unit through a dormitory roof. Windows were blasted out of homes and businesses up to two miles away.

Smith said Daniels was arrested by Winterville police at his home Thursday at 6:50 p.m., while Harper was arrested today about 7:30 a.m. at his residence.

Daniels, whose secured bond was $1,500, was released from the Pitt County Jail this morning, Smith said. Bond for Harper, who was to have a hearing today, was set at $5,000.

While disputing the understaffing claim, Smith acknowledged the SCLC officials for their assistance. "We got together last night (Thursday)," he said, "and pooled their information and the information our officers had already come up with. Together we had plenty of evidence for good strong arrests."

A seven-member citizens committee has been formed in Winterville to act as a buffer between the town's board of aldermen and residents. Winterville Mayor E.C. Hines questioned the need for such a panel but said he has asked town officials to investigate the possibility of setting up such a group to hear grievances.

At the request of Pitt County District Attorney Tom Haigwood, the State Bureau of Investigation is investigating the Winterville police situation.

Georgia Tech Pops Duke

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Coach Bobby Cremins of Georgia Tech was convinced his team couldn't win with Tom Hammonds on the bench. "For some reason we held on," Cremins said Thursday night after Hammonds missed just over seven minutes of the second half because of four fouls. "Matter of fact, I think we built a lead, which was amazing without Tommy in the game."

Dennis Scott, more noted for his long range shooting, took up the slack inside, hitting a couple of baskets, but it was Scott's nine points in the final 2:40 after Hammonds reentered the game that carried the Yellow Jackets to an 81-76 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over 12th-ranked Duke.

Scott and Brian Oliver each scored 20 for the Yellow Jackets, 13-6 overall and 3-2 in the ACC, and Hammonds added 17.

Georgia Tech led by four when Hammonds when to the bench with 12:27 to play, built the lead to eight, but then saw it slip back to four when Hammonds returned with 5:10 to play.

Scott's two free throws with 2:40 left gave Georgia Tech a 70-66 lead and after Danny Ferry countered for Duke, Scott hit his only 3-pointer of the night in eight attempts, giving Tech a 73-68 advantage. He had four more free throws down the stretch. Ferry scored 27, including 11 in a row in one stretch, for the Blue Devils, who lost for the fourth time in five games and fell to 14-4 for the year and 4-4 in the conference.

"Scott has some great inside shots tonight," Cremins said. "He showed he could do a lot of things besides hit the 3-pointer. He played with a lot of class. He was outstanding."

"I don't think the two teams could have played any harder," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "I think the game was really decided on their free throw shooting and our lack of free throw shooting because the effort was certainly matched by both teams."

Georgia Tech hit 24 of 32 free throws, Duke only 10 of 21.

"I thought Scott's play inside when Hammonds was out was a big factor," the Duke coach added.

"I really thought we were going to lose it," Cremins said. "We had a five-point lead, a seven-point lead. We were playing our guts out, but I just couldn't get over we were turning the ball over."

It was Georgia Tech's fifth consecutive home floor victory over Duke in the series and came before the largest Alexander Coliseum crowd in history — 9,206 — bettering the previous mark of 9,117 against Duke last year.

Pirates Seeking Revenge Against No. One Spiders

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina's Pirates seek to do something they haven't done this year against the Colonial Athletic Association's basketball leader Saturday night — win two league games in a row.

The Pirates, 4-4, have almost alternated their wins with losses. Only once, against George Mason and American, did the Pirates drop two in a row. Prior to that, and since then, they've alternated wins and losses.

The Spiders bring in a 7-0 Colonial record — surprising everyone after having been picked for the lower division in the conference. Coach Dick Tarrant lost heavily from last year's squad, but has put together a winner from the remains, centered around 6-0 junior point guard Ken Atkinson, 6-8 senior front-court player Mike Winiacki and 6-4 junior swingman Scott Stapleton.

Winiacki was a reserve last year, averaging 6.7 points a game and 3.8 rebounds. But this season, he's scoring at a 19.5 clip, third best in the CAA, while pulling down 8.2 rebounds, sixth in the conference.

Atkinson is scoring 14.3 points a game, 2.8 assists and leads the conference in steals with 1.9 per game.

Eric English, a 6-2 senior guard is averaging 10.2 points a game, while Stapleton has a 10.0 even average.

In recent games, the other starter has been 6-9 freshman forward Jim Shields, hitting 2.0 points a game.

Benjy Taylor, a 6-2 senior guard from Jacksonville, sees a lot of action for the Spiders, and averages 5.6 points a game.

The game is the second between the two teams. Richmond won the first, in Richmond, 83-56. That was the first game the Pirates played after losing forward Kevin Staples, suspended from the team the afternoon before the game after he was charged with the theft of textbooks from an ECU residence hall.

In that game, Blue Edwards was held to just 16 points. Reed Lose and Gus Hill also scored 16 in the contest.

Edwards played only 23 minutes in that contest before fouling out —

Saturday's Game:
East Carolina vs. Richmond
Probable Starting lineups:
Richmond:
C — Mike Winiacki (6-8 Sr. — 19.5 ppg, 8.2 rpg)
F — Jim Shields (6-9 Fr. — 2.0 ppg, 2.2 rpg)
F — Scott Stapleton (6-4 Jr. — 10.0, 5.0 rpg)
G — Ken Atkinson (6-0, Jr. — 14.3 ppg, 2.4 rpg)
G — Eric English (6-2 Sr. — 10.2 ppg, 2.3 rpg)
East Carolina:
C — Stanley Love (6-5 So. — 4.8 ppg, 3.6 rpg)
F — Blue Edwards (6-5 Sr. — 26.0 ppg, 6.6 rpg)
F — Reed Lose (6-3, Jr. — 7.6 ppg, 3.6 rpg)
G — Jeff Kelly (5-9 Sr. — 2.5 ppg, 4.3 rpg)
G — Kenny Murphy (6-3 Sr. — 8.3 ppg, 4.3 rpg)

Notes: In the last meeting between these two, Richmond took a 83-56 win as Eric English hit five three-point baskets en route to a 23-point night... ECU point guard Jeff Kelly needs three assists to break the record for ECU career assists... If Blue Edwards scores his average (26.0 ppg) he will move into fourth place on the ECU career scoring list... Richmond has won the last five games in a row in the series.

after what Coach Mike Steele called two questionable calls.

English led the Spiders with 23 points while Winiacki had 18 and pulled 10 rebounds.

Edwards, who has not been under 20 points since the Richmond game, has upped his average to 26.0 per game after two 30-plus outings. He's also improved his team-leading rebound average to 6.6 a game.

Other starters are expected to be Lose, averaging 7.6 points, Stanley Love, 4.8, Kenny Murphy, 8.3, and Jeff Kelly, 2.5. Kelly, averaging 4.3 assists per game, is expected to surpass the school career record for assists during the evening. He currently has 230, leaving him just three shy of passing Curt Vanderhorst, who had 232.

Richmond comes into the game with a 13-7 overall record, having defeated Virginia Military Institute, 87-79, Thursday night. The Pirates enter after a 73-68 victory over William & Mary in a CAA game on Wednesday.

Richmond leads the series between the two schools, 33-21, although the Pirates have a 13-10 edge in Minges. Richmond, however, has won the last five games in a row between the two schools.

The game is the last of the current home stand. The Pirates begin their final road trip of the regular season on Wednesday at George Mason, then travel on to James Madison on Feb. 11. After a road game against Campbell in Fayetteville on Feb. 16, the Pirates close out the regular season with home games against American, Navy, Liberty and UNC-Wilmington.

Meanwhile, ECU's Lady Pirates will be on the road against Richmond, facing the Lady Spiders in a 7:30 p.m. at Robins Center in Richmond.

The Lady Pirates take an 9-8 record into the game, 4-3 in the Colonial. Richmond entered the week with a 13-3 overall mark and a 5-1 CAA record.

Like the men, the Lady Pirates will be meeting Richmond for the second time. The Lady Spiders won the earlier game, in Minges, 67-58, in a hard-fought game.

Guidry, Yanks Come To Terms

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK (AP) — Left-hander Ron Guidry has come to terms on a one-year contract that will keep him with the New York Yankees, the club said today.

Guidry, 38, became a free agent last December when the Yankees failed to offer him a contract. His agent had been dealing with other clubs, including the Minnesota Twins and Toronto Blue Jays.

Will the Indianapolis Colts, who failed to plug a hole at nose tackle with veteran Joe Klecko, try again with Bob Golic or Jim Burt?

Will the Los Angeles Raiders try to shore up their depleted offensive line with Russ Grimm?

Will the Chicago Bears go after 36-year-old Mike Haynes to plug a hole at cornerback and could Bobby Beathard convince Harry Carson to eschew his announced retirement to fill Washington's middle linebacker spot?

Or will the prime beneficiaries of the NFL's new free-agent rules be young unknowns ferreted out by Beathard or Carl Peterson, the new president of the Kansas City Chiefs?

"They'll strike like sharks," agent Harold Lewis said of the Redskins. That's because there's fresh meat in the water."

In fact, as the names of that meat — the 619 NFL players who are now unconditional free agents — was made public Thursday, the meat seemed more seasoned than fresh.

Just about every player in the league over 30 was on it — barring some regular quarterbacks and a few other stars to valuable to lose. It included an entire All-Pro roster from a decade ago and even one recent hero — Jim Breech, whose three field goals accounted for most of Cincinnati's offense in its 20-16 Super Bowl loss to San Francisco on Jan. 22.

Four former East Carolina football players were among those left unprotected by the National Football League owners and declared free agents.

Those who failed to make the protected list with their clubs included Reggie Branch and Steve Hamilton of the Washington Redskins, Ellis Dillahunt of the Cincinnati Bengals and Vinson Smith of the Atlanta Falcons.

Several other former Pirates maintain their position with their respective clubs. They include Stefan Adams with the Los Angeles Raiders; Ernest Byner with the Cleveland Browns; Terry Long with the Pittsburgh Steelers and Tootie Robbins with the Phoenix Cardinals. William Frizelle, a Greenville

Black Expected To Get NL Post

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Forty-two years after Jackie Robinson broke baseball's color barrier on the field, Bill White is about to break it in the executive suite.

White today will be named to succeed A. Bartlett Giamatti as National League president, becoming the first black to head a major professional sports league in the United States, The Associated Press learned on Thursday.

White, a six-time All-Star first baseman with the New York and San Francisco Giants, St. Louis and Philadelphia, and a broadcaster with the New York Yankees for 18 years, was chosen Thursday by the five-man search committee, several sources said.

NL owners were expected to elect White in a telephone conference call today. He would become league president on April 1, when Giamatti succeeds Peter Ueberroth as commissioner.

"We're coming to New York and we expect a positive announcement," White's lawyer, William Eastburn III, said Thursday.

White, interviewed in St. Louis by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch Thursday night, said his chance to become the first black league president did not enter his decision.

"I didn't even think about it," he said. "You just do the job whether

'Fresh Meat' In The Water As NFL Teams Free Players

Rose graduate playing with the Philadelphia Eagles, was also protected by his club.

For teams that could protect 37 players each, it was obviously a case of protecting young talent first, and hoping the high salaries or injury problems of the older players will keep them from being bid on.

But the question remains, will they be signed.

"I think you'll see some action," said John Jones, spokesman for the NFL Management Council, which formulated the plan in an attempt to satisfy Judge David Doty, who is presiding over the antitrust suit filed by the union after its 24-day strike in 1987.

"I don't think anyone knows how much there will be."

Although the new system has its complexities, the basic formula is this:

Each team can protect 37 players, including those whose contracts have technically expired. Any team offering them a contract would be required to give the old team right of first refusal and, if it overcomes that barrier, compensate the old team with draft choices, as the Redskins did with two No. 1s when Beathard signed Wilber Marshall of the Bears a year ago.

The rest of the players from the active roster and various reserve lists an average of 22 per teams — would then be free to sign with any other team without compensation until April 1, when they revert back to their old teams.

Overall, a total of 619 players are unprotected. An additional 254 are conditional free agents with compensation, leaving 873 of the 1,655 players in the NFL technically free for now.

Of the 619 free agents, just 270 have less than three years experience in the league. And 228 started at least one game last season.

Most of those are the biggest names, who fall into several categories:

There are Super Bowl veterans like Haynes, Todd Christensen, Rod Martin and other key Los Angeles Raiders from their last Super Bowl champion in 1983 as well as mainstays from the Super Bowl champion Bears (1985), Giants (1986) and Redskins (1987). Washington's unprotected list included Timmy Smith, who rushed for a Super Bowl record 205 yards as a rookie a year ago but was overweight and out of favor this season.

Several regular kickers, including the Bahr brothers, Matt of Cleveland and Chris of the Raiders, Breech and Denver's Rich Karlis, who missed two field goals in the 1987 Super Bowl.

Such past stars as Denver's Tony Dorsett and Mark Haynes; Washington's Grimm; Tight end Ozzie Newsome of Cleveland, which left its entire starting defensive line of Golic, Sam Clancy and Carl Hairston unprotected; Cincinnati's Cris Collinsworth and Reggie Williams; the Raiders' James Lofton; the Rams' Charles White and Dallas' Randy White. All are over 30 and some, like Williams, a Cincinnati city councilman, have overriding reasons to stay in their communities.

Numerous injury risks, like one-time perennial All-Pro center Dwight Stephenson of Miami, whose career is in jeopardy because of a knee injury that caused him to miss all of last season; nose tackle Jim Burt of the Giants, who has chronic back problems and linebacker Bob Crable of the Jets, who underwent reconstructive knee surgery last season.

It did not include Steve Largent, the NFL's all-time leading receiver, originally reported to be on the Seattle Seahawks' unprotected list.

The 34-year-old Largent remained among the 37 players to whom the Seahawks retained rights.

How much bidding will there be? Agents for some of the unprotected players reported they had already been contacted by Beathard or other Washington representatives and Tex Schramm, president of the Dallas Cowboys, whose 3-13 record was the league last season said:

"We're going to be very active."

Other teams are likely to go after players only as a retaliatory gesture if someone takes an unprotected player they still want. Still others, like AFC champion Cincinnati, a team known to be tight with its bank

McHale Joins Those Praising Hornets

CHARLOTTE (AP) — It seems that everyone who plays or coaches against the Charlotte Hornets has nothing but rave reviews for the team, crowd and arena, and Boston's Kevin McHale has joined the growing list of admirers after the Celtics' first regular-season trip to North Carolina.

The Celtics downed the Hornets, 107-94, Wednesday night, but got a taste of Charlotte's enthusiasm. Once again, the Charlotte Coliseum was filled to capacity, with many of the 23,388 fans wearing "Hugo Hats," which were designed after the team's mascot.

"I think this is a great crowd and a fantastic new building," McHale said. "People in Charlotte should be proud of this building and the Hornets."

It was not a great night for the Hornets, who were coming off a West Coast road trip. McHale said with a little bit of time, that could change.

"The Hornets have some quality players now, and, who knows, with a couple of lottery picks, they could be a real quality team in a couple of years," he said.

The starters are having trouble scoring for the Hornets.

Against the Celtics, Charlotte's five starters hit 17 of 50 field goal attempts, accounting for 57 of the team's 94 points.

Rex Chapman tried the most shots, 18, and hit five. Michael Holton, who appeared frustrated in the fourth quarter, hit eight of 11 field goals and led Charlotte with 21 points.

By comparison, Boston's starters hit 29 of 62 field goals, accounting for 72 points out of the 107 it scored.

In 44 games, the Hornets are averaging 103 points per game. The six players who have started more than half the 44 games are averaging 67 points a game.

Robert Reid failed to start for the first time after 43 games. Against the Celtics, he hit four of 15 field goals and added three free throws for 11 points. Reid is averaging 15.5 points per game.

It took 15 games for Charlotte to set an attendance record for expansion teams. Next in sight is the NBA single-season record for attendance.

The 16th sellout at the Charlotte Coliseum Wednesday night raised the total attendance for the year to 482,148, which is slightly above 98 percent of capacity for the new arena.

Allison Undergoes Additional Surgery

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Bobby Allison, recuperating from serious injuries suffered last June in a race crash at Pocono International Raceway, underwent additional surgery Thursday to remove four steel rods from his left leg.

Eddie Gossage, a spokesman for the Miller High Life Racing Team, said Allison, 50, also had a shunt, installed to drain fluid buildup inside his skull following the accident, removed during the four-hour operation.

The longtime NASCAR stock car star, a former Winston Cup champion and winner of 84 races, was originally treated at the Lehigh Valley Medical Center Hospital after the crash.

He then went to a hospital in Birmingham, Ala., near his home in Hueytown, Ala., before being released Oct. 3.

Despite continued physical therapy since his release, Allison has suffered severe pain from the injuries to his left leg. Gossage said doctors have told Allison this latest surgery should relieve some of that pain.

Allison will be on crutches for several weeks.

Kentucky Nixes Coach K Talk

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — University of Kentucky President David Roselle said Thursday he was not aware of a television station's report that said the head basketball coach at Duke University would be offered that post at Kentucky.

WSOC-TV in Charlotte, N.C., reported Wednesday that Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski had talked with Kentucky about the job. Harold Johnson, sports director at the station, quoted sources as saying the job, held by Eddie Sutton, would be offered to Krzyzewski at the end of the season.

Krzyzewski had no comment Wednesday, Johnson said. "No one's been authorized to make that contact," Roselle told reporters following a speech to the Louisville Rotary Club, "but it wouldn't surprise me if somewhere along there somebody said we'd like you to be at UK. He's (Kryzewski) a great coach."

The men's basketball program at Kentucky is under investigation by the National Collegiate Athletic Association, which has lodged 18 allegations of wrongdoing against it.

Irwin Just Glad To Be Playing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The comments varied with the viewpoint in the first round of the $1 million Los Angeles Open.

"Cold and windy," said Gene Sauers, whose 4-under-par 67 in the worst of the weather provided him with a share of the lead Thursday.

"A very stern test," said Mike Reid, whose 68 left him one shot back. Both played in the afternoon half of the field, which was afflicted by cold, blustery, biting winds.

Hale Irwin also played in the afternoon.

"A wonderful day," the 43-year-old veteran said.

But he was looking at it from a different angle; concerned not so much with a score but with such things as eyesight and life.

"It does get your attention. It puts things in perspective," said Irwin, who narrowly escaped serious injury when struck in the forehead — less than an inch from his right eye — by a wayward shot from the club of an amateur in Wednesday's pro-am.

"I'm very fortunate, very lucky. It could have got the eye," Irwin said. "It could have got the temple."

As it was, he suffered a gash on the forehead, was rushed to a hospital where "10 or 12 stitches" were taken, he said. He was held for observation for a time, then released.

"They wanted to keep me for a while, wake me up every hour just to be sure they COULD wake me up. They were concerned about possible after-effects. But I went back to the hotel," he said.

"I left a wake-up call for 2 (a.m.) and told 'em if I didn't answer to come and get me."

Except for a headache, however, there were no ill effects, he said, and he was able to play in the opening round, shooting a solid 70.

"Uncomfortable but not unplayable," he said.

"Now, I've been on both sides of it. I've hit people and it's scary. I've been hit and it's scary. One is more painful than the other. One is more worrisome than the other," Irwin said.

"I'm very lucky just to be playing," he said.

While Irwin was counting his blessings, most of the rest of the field was talking weather, which grew colder and more windy as the day went on.

"It seems like we got a pretty good break playing early," Steve Pate said.

"There wasn't a breath of wind out there for the first nine holes, but it was beginning to pick up when we finished," said Pate, a two-time winner last year who shared the first-round lead with Mark Brooks and Sauers.

Sauers agreed.

"It was about two shots harder in the afternoon," said Sauers, who moved into a tie with a 25-foot birdie putt on his 17th hole. It came as a mild surprise, he said.

"I don't like the wind and the cold," he said. "I usually don't play my best in these conditions, but today it just seemed to go my way."

Purdue Upsets Illini, 76-72

Boilermakers Snap Four-Game Skid With Shocker

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

For one of the few times this season, the Purdue Boilermakers measured up.

Purdue, which won the last two Big Ten titles, snapped a four-game losing streak, including three straight at home, with a 76-72 victory over No. 2 Illinois on Thursday night. Melvin McCants sparked the upset with 12 of his 16 points in the second half.

"We were very determined to win because we lost four in a row and most of the guys were down," McCants said. "We had decided in order for us to come out and compete with other teams and improve, we had to come out and have a great performance."

Which is what Illinois coach Lou Henson said he saw.

"I think it's one of the finest games I've seen them play," he said of the Boilermakers. "Purdue played great. They had a super game."

Purdue, which brought a 50-percent shooting mark into the game, slowed the tempo, working for an open shot. The Boilermakers shot 71 percent in the first half and 61 percent for the night, connecting on 27 of 44 shots.

But it was what they did without the ball that was crucial, Coach Gene Keady said.

"Defensively, we did a little bit better job than we've been doing," said Keady, whose Boilermakers yielded 106 and 99 points in the last two games.

Another ranked team that fell Thursday night was No. 12 Duke, an 81-76 loser at Georgia Tech.

Among the ranked teams that escaped the upset bug Thursday night were No. 4 Arizona, No. 9 Iowa, No. 18 West Virginia and No. 20 Stanford.

Arizona beat California 86-59, Iowa took Northwestern 102-84, West Virginia won its 15th straight, 79-71 over Rhode Island, and Stanford defeated Arizona State 75-60.

The Boilermakers' torrid shooting kept them in contention in a game that was tight all the way, with neither team leading by more than five points. They took their biggest lead of the second half at 69-65 on Ryan Berning's two free throws with 2:31 remaining, then held off the Illini, 18-2 and 5-2, who pulled within two points twice after Berning's free throws.

Purdue's Tony Jones had 22 points while Lowell Hamilton led Illinois with 18.

Arizona 86, California 59 — Sean Elliott hit six 3-pointers and scored 26 points as Pac-10 leader Arizona improved to 10-1 in the conference and 16-2 for the season.

The Wildcats led 35-30 at the half and Cal cut the score to 35-34 early in the second half. Then Elliott hit his first of five second-half 3-pointers to trigger a 12-3 run for a 47-37 lead.

The Wildcats held visiting Cal scoreless for the final 6:36 while scoring the last 16 points.

Elliott increased his Pac-10 career scoring total to 2,224 points, second-best to the 2,325 points by Lew Alcindor (now Kareem Abdul-Jabbar) of UCLA.

Iowa 102, Northwestern 84

At Iowa City, Ed Horton took charge in the second half with 20 of his 24 points as Iowa improved to 16-4 overall and 4-3 in the Big Ten. Roy Marble added 19 points.

The Hawkeyes led 76-74 with 9:24 left, then outscored the Wildcats 4-4, while hitting eight of nine foul shots.

"Horton was really a problem for us. We don't have a lot of power inside," Northwestern coach Bill Foster said.

Northwestern's Walker Lambiotte had 34 points.

W. Virginia 79, Rhode Island 71

The visiting Mountaineers had too much for Rhode Island down the stretch. Steve Berger scored 19 points, including the go-ahead 3-pointer, as West Virginia, 16-2 overall and 10-0 in the Atlantic 10, set a school record of eight straight victories on the road. West Virginia's 15 consecutive victories is the longest streak in the nation.

"URI played a heck of a game," West Virginia coach Gale Catlett said. "Our trouble came because Rhode Island played so well."

Stanford 75, Arizona St. 60

Todd Lichti scored 11 of his 30 points during an 18-5 spurt in the second half that was decisive for visiting Stanford. Lichti became the second-leading scorer in Pacific-10 games.

The senior guard and Stanford's all-time leading scorer, has 1,199 career points in Pac-10 games. He's behind only Reggie Miller of UCLA, who had 1,234.

Lichti has 2,102 career points overall, jumping from sixth to third place as he, too, chases the mark of Alcindor.

"Todd Lichti. Is the guy unbelievable or what?" ASU coach Steve Patterson asked. "I thought we played well against him but he still got his points."

Other Games

Duane Donald hit a layup with 16 seconds left to give Southeastern Louisiana a 56-53 victory over Pan American that ended its 16-game losing streak.

New Orleans shattered Louisiana Tech's 22-game homecourt winning streak with a 64-54 victory. Willie Richardson scored five of his game-high 21 points in the final 1:47, during which New Orleans went on a 10-0 surge.

Trent Jackson hit a 14-foot jump shot with 1:10 left in overtime and Wisconsin stayed ahead for a 69-64 Big Ten victory over Michigan State.

Mark Macon scored 24 points and Temple survived 14 3-point goals by St. Joseph's for a 79-71 victory. Duane Causwell added a career-high 18 points for the Owls, while freshman Craig Amos had a career-high 25 points for St. Joseph's.

Jamere Jackson scored 23 points including 10 of 10 free throws, leading Notre Dame to an 83-68 victory over Marquette. Notre Dame hit 24 of 29 free throws, its best shooting of the season and well above the team's 62 percent average.

Alec Kessler scored 28 points, 16 in the final 10 minutes, as Georgia rallied from a 10-point deficit to defeat Auburn 75-62, the Tigers' ninth consecutive Southeastern Conference loss.

Josh Grant scored 24 points and Mitch Smith 20 as Utah defeated Brigham Young 90-86 in the Western Athletic Conference.

you're red, yellow, purple or whatever."

White had not been mentioned publicly as a candidate for the job until Tuesday when the Daily News reported he would get it. When he does, he will join American League president Bobby Brown as former players who rose to head their leagues.

White said he was contacted about 10 days ago by Ted Jadick, who is with a "head-hunting" firm out of New York and Chicago.

"He wanted to know if I was interested. It really took me by surprise. He put me in touch with the baseball people. And we've been looking at each other ever since," White said.

White said he had been thinking about the pressures of the job and the loss of freedom it would entail.

"I had a lot of security with the Yankees," White said. "I lead a very nice life now. I only work 90 days broadcasting. I can go fishing, drive my truck, cut the grass and wear overalls. I can't do that with this job. It's a 24-hours-a-day job. Things happen on the (West) Coast and you've got to be with it even if it's late at night."

"It's going to be hard to leave that comfort of broadcasting," he said. "I don't think overalls would go over too big on this job."

Hall of Famer Hank Aaron, an Atlanta Braves vice president and baseball's top black executive, was pleased with White's selection.

"Quite naturally, I'm very happy," Aaron said. "I don't think they could have found anyone more qualified than Bill White. Bill White is a baseball man. He knows baseball. There will be nothing that will be a surprise for him."

Simon Gourdine, a former NBA deputy commissioner who had been the other remaining contender, was told Thursday that he no longer was being considered.

"I was very fairly treated by the search committee and was given every opportunity," Gourdine said. "I congratulate Bill White," Gourdine said.

Phil Rizzuto, White's broadcasting partner, said breaking barriers was important to White.

"He felt this was important for baseball, for himself and for blacks in general," Rizzuto said.

Kentucky Prexy Wants To Protect 'Cat Integrity

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — The University of Kentucky's investigation of 18 NCAA allegations of wrongdoing against the men's basketball program is aimed at protecting the integrity of the institution, its president says.

"The correct way to do this investigation ... is to do it well, to do it right, to do it honestly and to protect the integrity of our great university," David Roselle told a crowd of about 300 during a meeting Thursday of the Louisville Rotary Club.

Kentucky could face a ban on television appearances, a ban on post-season play, a reduction of available scholarships and a ban on off-campus recruiting due to the current allegations.

The president briefed the group on the basic chronology of events since April 1988, when a Los Angeles newspaper reported that $1,000 had been found in an Emery Air Freight envelope sent from Kentucky assistant basketball coach Dwane Casey to the father of then-recruit Chris Mills.

"That immediately led to my distress about the very future of Kentucky basketball," Roselle said. "My distress level was heightened a little bit because the University of Kentucky had had an earlier encounter with the NCAA."

Just one month previous, the NCAA publicly reprimanded the school for not fully cooperating with an investigation prompted by a Pulitzer Prize-winning series in the Lexington Herald-Leader that detailed alleged cash gifts to players and other abuses dating back to the early 1970s.

The university could have been placed on probation or suspended had those allegations been proven, but instead was ordered to monitor athletic expenditures and report results to the NCAA for the next three years.

"We were told ... that further violations of any NCAA regulations would be grounds for ... imposing more severe sanctions," Roselle said.

In addition to the Casey-Mills situation, other allegations include improper recruiting efforts and "academic fraud" by Eric Manuel, who was accused of cheating on a 1987 college entrance exam.

Roselle said in his 20-minute speech he believes there is a "misconception" that Kentuckians would like the university to conduct its investigation in a "dishonest, cover-up kind of way."

"My mail certainly doesn't indicate that," he said. "My telephone certainly does not indicate that. My conversations certainly do not indicate that."

NFL Frees Players...

account, is likely to sit back and do nothing.

But others besides Washington and Dallas will be active.

They include San Francisco, Chicago, Cleveland, Denver, Indianapolis, the Los Angeles Raiders, New York Giants, New Orleans; Seattle, under hungry new owner Ken Behring, and the Chiefs under Peterson, who developed a Beathard-like reputation in assembling that talent that brought the Philadelphia-Baltimore Stars two of the three USFL titles.

But the styles will be different.

Beathard is likely to pursue young players and so is George Young of the Giants, one of his close friends, who is likely to sign fewer free agents but end up with the same number on the roster. Both men left unprotected a number of veterans and protected several unknown first- and second-year players, perhaps to guard against each other.

The Raiders, on the other hand, might be interested in shoring up their weak offensive line with Grimm or Billy Ard of the Giants, both aging but still capable of producing a couple of good years. The Colts, might do the same with Burt and Golie.

How successful will that be.

"I question how much you're getting when you're looking at a teams 42nd, 43rd, 44th and 45th players," said Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFLPA, which has adamantly opposed the plan and is seeking an injunction from Doty to stop it.

That's where judgement will play a critical role and that's why Beathard is so feared as a judge of talent — he's shown in the past to unearth talent like Sanders, Gary Clark, Smith and Mark Rypien and turn them into productive players.

But some agents also questioned what will happen if too many teams get into the act.

"I can see three or four guys going after some rookie who spent last year on injured reserve and has yet to play an NFL game," says one agent, who asked not to be identified.

"All they see is potential. But if they're all bidding, what kind of salary are they willing to pay for that potential. If the team didn't protect a player from guys like Beathard and Peterson, how good can he be?"

Putting it another way, if there are sharks out there, is there enough shark bait?

That's the question that will determine the worth of the system.

Knicks Win 1st Straight At Home

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The New York Knicks again performed their magic act at Madison Square Garden, where even the NBA's top teams tend to disappear.

"We were so pumped up, we were flying," Gerald Wilkins said after scoring 21 points as the Knicks beat the Cleveland Cavaliers 125-109 Thursday night.

The Knicks led the entire way in the meeting of Eastern Conference division leaders. They won their 16th straight home game and are 19-1 this season at the Garden.

The Central-leading Cavaliers are 32-10, the best record in the league. But they never got going against New York, 29-16 and in first place in the Atlantic.

"We're a good team and they're a good team. And when you play a team that good, you've got to play hard. They just played a lot harder than we did," Cleveland's Ron Harper said.

In other games, Chicago beat Sacramento 109-98, Seattle defeated Miami 100-93, Denver defeated Atlanta 112-103 and Golden State stopped New Jersey 127-113.

Trent Tucker broke his own team record for 3-point baskets, helping the Knicks win. His 70th 3-pointer this season came during a 13-2 burst that closed the first half and put New York ahead 65-50.

Patrick Ewing added 21 points and Charles Oakley had 16 points and 13 rebounds for the Knicks, who have won two of three games against Cleveland.

Mike Sanders scored 30 points and Harper had 23 for the Cavaliers.

Cleveland played without All-Star forward Larry Nance, who has a strained tendon in his left foot. Nance blocked a team-record 11 shots the last time the clubs played, a 104-96 victory by Cleveland on Jan. 7.

"Tonight, we knew there was no one there to block us," Wilkins said. "When we get on that type of roll, it's hard for any team to stop us."

Bulls 109, Kings 98

Michael Jordan scored 40 points and rallied Chicago over Sacramento.

Jordan, held to nine points in the first half, scored 15 during a 22-7 spree in the third quarter as the Bulls overcame a 55-46 deficit.

Horace Grant had 13 points and 18 rebounds for Chicago. The Bulls won for the ninth time in 12 games.

SuperSonics 100, Heat 93

Dale Ellis scored 32 points and Derrick McKey keyed a fourth-quarter burst as Seattle sent Miami to its seventh straight loss.

The SuperSonics led 83-79 before going on an 11-2 run. McKey scored nine of his 19 points during the surge.

Seattle shot 12-for-12 from the foul line in the fourth quarter, with McKey making nine.

Billy Thompson scored 19 points for the host Heat.

Warriors 127, Nets 113

Mitch Richmond had 32 points and nine rebounds and Ricky Teague got 22 points and 10 rebounds as Golden State beat New Jersey for its seventh straight home victory.

The Warriors, trailing by seven midway through the third quarter, scored the first seven points of the fourth quarter for a 101-92 lead.

Lester Conner had his first career triple-double for the Nets with 13 points, a career-high 11 rebounds and 13 assists. Dennis Hopson led the Nets with 25 points and Mike McGee and Chris Morris each had 21.

Nuggets 112, Hawks 103

Alex English scored 36 points and Fat Lever recorded his fourth triple double of the season as the Denver Nuggets held off a fourth-quarter Atlanta rally.

Atlanta, which played without injured Dominique Wilkins, pulled within 99-98 with 4:03 to play after trailing by as many as 20 points early in the third quarter.

But the Nuggets, who won for only the fourth time in their last 14 games, outscored the Hawks 9-1 to secure the victory.

Moses Malone had 19 points and 20 rebounds for Atlanta. Reggie Theus added 22 points for the Hawks.

Tampa Police Arrest Nine In 2nd Night Of Violence

By Pat Leisner
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TAMPA, Fla. — Riot police arrested nine people during a second night of arson and rock-and-bottle throwing that erupted in a mostly black neighborhood following reports a suspected drug dealer died in police custody.

"The message is very clear. You come over here and incite riots, you're going to get arrested," said Mayor Sandy Freedman after police controlled the disturbance Thursday.

About 70 police officers cordoned off the College Hill neighborhood for nearly three hours after sunset. An officer hit by a brick, Sgt. B.J. Curry, was treated at Tampa General Hospital and released.

"It was very sporadic. Nothing on a major scale. It was kind of hit and run," said Sgt. Walter Sluga.

The Tampa incidents came as residents and officials in Miami seek to maintain calm in the city's Over-town and Liberty City districts, the scene of three days of rioting last month following the fatal shooting of a black motorcyclist by a policeman.

The College Hill neighborhood, the site of at least a half dozen violent outbreaks in the past two years, erupted in a three-hour melee Wednesday night following the drug arrest of Edgar Allen Price, 40, who later died of a cardiac arrest.

"People feel trapped and they're ready to explode when something even looks like brutality," said Elliott Johnson, pastor of Blessed Hope Ministries two blocks from a looted grocery store. "We're still sitting on a keg of dynamite down here."

A mob of youths began throwing rocks and bottles at the officers who struggled to subdue Price, a 6-foot-3, 300-pound black man from Houston. Eight officers were finally called in to capture Price in the living room of his girlfriend's mother.

The girl's mother, a heart patient with a pacemaker who uses a walker, ended up under the pileup on the floor. She was not injured.

Price, who suffered a two-inch gash in his head during the struggle, began experiencing heart trouble in a police cruiser shortly after his arrest. He died about 90 minutes later at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Police said Price was not beaten or choked during the arrest, and an autopsy was being performed to substantiate the cause of death.

"We wanted to dispel any rumors we beat a man to death," said Police Chief Austin McLane.

Dr. Charles Diggs, an assistant Hillsborough County medical examiner, said preliminary autopsy results suggest Price may have suffocated in the police cruiser because his breathing was constricted due to being handcuffed.

Price was carrying 25 pieces of crack cocaine and a loaded .25-caliber derringer in his pockets, said police spokesman Steve Cole.

Price was sentenced in 1974 to 50 years on a Texas robbery conviction and also had a 1967 robbery arrest on his record, said Cole. He did not know the disposition of that case.

During Wednesday night's unrest, an estimated 75 young people threw rocks and bottles, fired at least two gunshots at a television news van and looted and burned a grocery store. Officials cordoned off four intersections in the 22-block housing development and summoned 100 police officers and 30 firefighters.

At least four officers received minor injuries, and a 21-year-old man was arrested on charges of inciting to riot, disorderly conduct and drinking in public.

There was no official estimate of the size of the crowd involved in Thursday's unrest, although it was believed smaller than the 50 to 75 youths believed involved in Wednesday's unrest. Among the nine people arrested were four members of the African People's Socialist Party from St. Petersburg.

Last April, a crowd of 400 threw rocks and bottles following the arrest of a robbery suspect in the neighborhood, and violence erupted in February 1987 after a 23-year-old black man died in police custody. A white police officer who used a neck hold to subdue him eventually was cleared of wrongdoing, but the neck hold was banned.

Quayle uses earphones to pick up translation during inauguration ceremonies in Caracas

Quayle Says Carter 'Complicating' Peace

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

CARACAS, Venezuela — Vice President Dan Quayle, clearly irritated on his maiden diplomatic mission by the high-profile role assumed here by Jimmy Carter, Thursday brusquely accused the former president of "complicating" peace efforts in Central America.

Carter, who was invited by Venezuela's president, Carlos Andres Perez, to attend his inaugural ceremonies here, has been actively promoting the resumption of regional peace efforts by suggesting changes in U.S. policy toward El Salvador and discussing alternative plans such as Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega's latest offer to repatriate anti-Sandinista rebels.

"Obviously, when you have former presidents meeting with heads of state that we don't meet with, it has a chance of complicating matters," Quayle said at a news conference. Perez, Carter and Ortega met Wednesday, the day Quayle arrived here, and significant attention was focused on Ortega's proposal. Thursday, members of Quayle's entourage were markedly cool toward the Nicaraguan initiative.

About 20 heads of state have converged on Caracas to see Perez sworn in to be president of Venezuela for the second time, after a first term that ended in 1979. In his inaugural address Perez said he will insist on a "relationship based on agreement and collaboration" between the United States and Latin America, instead of what he called "the anti-historical relations of subordination" of the past.

Quayle praised Perez's speech as "right on target."

Carter's comments on El Salvador, where Quayle is scheduled to meet with government and other leaders Friday, seemed particularly irksome to the vice president and his aides. At a reception for Quayle Wednesday night, the Georgia Democrat said it was his "fervent wish" that the new administration "relies on economic pressure" to further the cause of human rights. Elsewhere, he was quoted as using the phrase "economic persuasion" in urging tougher action against what he called "dozens of criminals who have committed atrocities who are still active in El Salvador politics."

Asked whether any sort of economic sanctions should be used against El Salvador to further human rights, Quayle said "absolutely not," and added that such statements are "complicating matters" in the region.

Informed of Quayle's remarks,

Robert Pastor, a former Carter administration official who is traveling with the ex-president, said of Quayle, "I'm sorry he's confused. It wouldn't be the first time. Everyone knows we are not speaking for the U.S. government. People know he (Carter) is not the president, but they are interested in his views."

Quayle's critique of Carter was an unusual diversion from a day planned to showcase the new vice president in both diplomatic and crowd-pleasing settings. Quayle held individual meetings with the leaders of Spain, Brazil, Costa Rica, Honduras, Peru and Portugal. He lunched with Caribbean leaders and took an unscheduled midday stroll through a crowded plaza where he was greeted with shouts of "Quay-lee, Quay-lee."

Perez, in his address Thursday morning, pledged to push for regional peace in Central America and to aid a return to democracy in Panama, now controlled by strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega. Elections there are scheduled for May 7.

Perez, 66, a Social Democrat who is admired by other Latins as a hemispheric leader, called for an organization to include both industrialized creditor countries and Latin American debtors to reduce the region's financial burdens by buying back some of their debt. Although Venezuela has paid $25 billion in debt service in the past five years, its government still owes $25 billion, Perez said.

Perez called for a summit meeting this year of leaders of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. He also made a veiled criticism of Ortega and Cuban President Fidel Castro, who were sitting in the audience. "The utopias have fallen into bankruptcy," Perez said.

After the ceremony, Carter approached Castro and the two talked briefly.

Meanwhile, further details emerged Thursday of the proposal Ortega presented Wednesday to President Jose Azcona of Honduras. The Nicaraguan government has asked the Honduran armed forces, Nicaragua's enemy for the past decade, to collect the weapons of the Nicaraguan Contra rebels camped in sanctuaries in southern Honduras.

A four-month process of repatriation of the Contras would be supervised by the Organization of American States, the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, and the International Red Cross. The Sandinistas proposed to work with Honduras to solicit international aid to help the Contras get settled in their homeland, and to provide land and farm credits for them in Nicaragua.

While the Contras come home, the Sandinista government proposed to free all its political prisoners. No other democratic reforms were specified in the proposal.

Although Quayle was noncommittal on the plan, repeatedly saying he has seen no outline and gotten only a general view of it, senior aides traveling with him dismissed it. "It does not appear to be a serious enough plan," said one senior official.

Bush Pledges U.S. Help To Japanese

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Japanese Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita is winding up his Washington visit, buoyed by President Bush's promises of cooperation on difficult trade and military issues facing the two economic superpowers.

After meetings today on Capitol Hill and lunch with Secretary of State James A. Baker III, Takeshita heads for the West Coast — and a reunion next week with former President Reagan.

The prime minister, during his morning visit with congressional leaders, was likely to hear expressions of concern about an $8 billion joint project to build jet fighters.

The project has been criticized on Capitol Hill as a giveaway of U.S. technological expertise and some members of the Senate have called on Bush to cancel U.S. participation.

Bush, in his first White House meeting with a foreign leader, took pains Thursday to ease strains with the economically powerful ally.

"Continuity will ... be the mark of relations between the United States and Japan. On occasion, we may have differences. But these are the differences of friends," Bush said. "Simply put, we respect one another. We need one another."

Takeshita also emphasized the positive, saying the White House meeting "marked a new start for U.S.-Japan cooperation."

In an effort to smooth over strains caused by America's $50 billion-plus trade deficit with Japan, Bush vowed to try to drive down the U.S. budget deficit while Takeshita promised that Japan would work to open its economy to more U.S. imports.

The two leaders also pledged to assist the Philippine government of Corazon Aquino and said they will continue to consult closely on policies toward the Soviet Union, the Middle East and Latin America.

According to aides, the two leaders dealt mainly in generalities in their 2½-hour talk, and skirted detailed discussions of the fighter project or a Japanese proposal for a high-level panel to resolve trade disputes.

However, Baker and Japanese Foreign Minister Sousuke Uno did take up both subjects, according to Gaston Sigur, the assistant secretary of state for East Asian affairs, who briefed reporters on the meeting.

Baker told Uno that "we do have very good mechanisms right now" for resolving trade disputes, but that the United States is willing to engage in talks with Japan to "see whether there are other things that should be done," Sigur said.

Sigur also said that the Bush administration is reviewing the agreement with Japan for the jet fighter project and that no decision on it has been made.

Under the agreement, General Dynamics of the United States and Japan's Mitsubishi Heavy Industry would join forces to build FSX jet fighters.

The Japanese government says it needs a final go-ahead from the United States by March 31 to put money for the project into its budget.

Japan has been the target of complaints from Capitol Hill that as a major world economic power, it has failed to contribute enough to its own defense.

Bush touched on this subject indirectly, saying: "I noted the importance of allies assuming greater responsibilities in the cause of peace. The prime minister and I agreed that these responsibilities take many forms."

China Invites Gorbachev To Visit Beijing This Year

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — The Chinese government has officially invited Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to China, setting the stage for the first Sino-Soviet summit in 30 years.

The Foreign Ministry said in a statement today that Foreign Minister Qian Qichen extended the invitation in talks with his visiting Soviet counterpart Eduard Shevardnadze, who "accepted the invitation and expressed his gratitude."

No date for the visit was given, although it is widely expected to take place this spring. Qian said earlier today that Shevardnadze would announce a date at a news conference Saturday before he leaves China for Pakistan.

Gorbachev will be the first Soviet leader to visit China since Nikita Khrushchev met Mao Tse-tung in Beijing in 1959, a year before rapidly deteriorating bilateral relations led to an end of Soviet technical and military aid to China.

The Soviet president's meeting with 84-year-old Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping would help return Sino-Soviet political ties to a normal status after three decades of hostility and mistrust.

Shevardnadze, the first Soviet foreign minister to visit China in 30 years, arrived Wednesday for a three-day trip to iron out final details for the summit. He held two rounds of talks with Qian and also conferred today with Premier Li Peng. He is to meet Deng in Shanghai Saturday morning.

The Foreign Ministry statement said Qian pointed out during the talks that "China and the Soviet Union should establish a new type of state relationship with each other" based on principles of equality and peaceful coexistence.

Qian "stressed that China pursues an independent foreign policy of peace and that the normalization of the relations between China and the Soviet Union should not prejudice their respective relations with other countries," the statement said.

China repeatedly has emphasized it will never return to its relationship of the 1950s when the Soviet Union played a big brother role to the new Communist state in China, providing it with economic aid and guiding its foreign policy.

Beijing also has assured the United States and other Western states with which it enjoys increasingly important economic and strategic ties that there is no possibility of a future Sino-Soviet alliance.

Earlier today, Shevardnadze canceled a planned tour of the Forbidden Palace amid speculation he might meet Cambodian resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk, who now resides in the Chinese capital.

China long has insisted that Soviet financial backing for Vietnam's 10-year occupation of Cambodia is the major obstacle to normalizing Sino-Soviet relations.

Qian, in a banquet speech Thursday night, said the two sides had reached general consensus "on many aspects of the problem," including the need for Vietnam to pull out its troops and for some kind of international supervision after Vietnamese troops leave.

China is the main backer for the three-party resistance coalition battling the Vietnamese in Cambodia. It supports the introduction of an international peacekeeping force after Vietnam's departure, an idea Vietnam has rejected.

In his banquet speech Thursday, Shevardnadze called for joint ventures, cooperation in science and technology and the transformation of the Sino-Soviet border into a region of "peace, friendship and good-neighborly cooperation."

The Soviet Union was China's political mentor and main economic benefactor during the 1950s, but relations deteriorated over ideological and strategic differences and the two countries fought a short border war in 1969.

Economic and cultural contacts gradually have increased in the 1980s, but normalization of political and party relations has been stalled by the issues of Cambodia, the Soviet incursion into Afghanistan and the highly militarized border.

Relations have improved rapidly in the past year following Soviet announcements it is withdrawing from Afghanistan and reducing its troop strength in Asia, and with progress in efforts to end the Cambodian conflict.

Laurel Says Marcos Visit Could Help

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONOLULU — Philippine Vice President Salvador Laurel said the return of exiled leader Ferdinand Marcos, hospitalized here in critical condition, could reconcile the Filipino people and affect the nation's political stability.

In a statement released Thursday night by his secretary, Laurel, who visited the 71-year-old Marcos without the blessing of Philippine President Corason Aquino, said he was convinced Marcos was near death and should be allowed to come home.

"Whatever our past differences and conflicts, the reality is that the crisis in this man's life can seriously affect political stability of the Philippines. Now is the time for compassion and forgiveness in order to achieve much needed unity among all Filipinos," he said.

"In addition, as vice president, I feel I can communicate with all appropriate parties in the Philippines and in the United States to assist in resolving the matter of Marcos' return," Laurel said.

Laurel said he was called on to help by the Marcos family. The former leader also addressed a letter to Aquino asking her to allow him "to die in the Philippines."

Aquino, who has repeatedly refused to allow Marcos to return, said she had not received the letter and declined to say how she would answer his request.

"I can just make a decision once I know what the letter is all about," she told The Associated Press in Manila.

The Marcoses are under U.S. indictment for allegedly plundering his homeland of more than $100 million and stashing much of the money in the United States.

Marcos remained in critical condition in the intensive care unit of St. Francis Medical Center early today, but one lawyer said he was buoyed by Laurel's visit and doctors' said his fever had subsided.

He underwent emergency surgery Wednesday because of fluids building up in his lungs, and was breathing with the assistance of a respirator. Hospital spokeswoman Norma Kop said Marcos is alert but unable to talk because of the respirator.

Laurel conceded his was a personal, not official, visit, but said he would make a full report to Aquino.

"I'm here on my own, but I told Mrs. Aquino I was coming," he said.

His son, Ferdinand Jr., said he relayed the letter to Mrs. Aquino asking that his father be allowed to return to the Philippines.

"I come to request nothing more than the basic human right of all Filipinos to die in the Philippines," he wrote. "It is self evident in this age of enlightenment that no civilized nation would deny a citizen the right to die in his homeland."

"I therefore hope that you can see beyond your personal feelings, and by showing compassion, act to reconcile rather than further divide the nation. I am also certain that your action now will permit President Bush and the American federal courts to allow this, my father's final journey."

Najib Says Regime Stronger Than Ever

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KABUL, Afghanistan — President Najib said his government is "mightier than ever" and can defend itself after the Soviet army leaves this month, but Pakistan-based insurgents said the Marxist regime won't last more than weeks.

The embattled Najib also told reporters Thursday he sees movement toward a political settlement that could avoid a violent showdown with the Moslem guerrillas.

Meanwhile today, a convoy of about 100 Soviet tanks and armored trucks began to move up the Salang Highway toward the Soviet border but poor winter weather was impeding their progress.

Soviet troops are due to be out of Afghanistan by Feb. 15 under the terms of a U.N.-brokered accord signed last year.

The Afghan army is "mightier than ever ... can defend the country against any onslaught, and we will prove it," Najib said at a two-hour news conference at the Foreign Ministry, in a room unheated because of the fuel shortage in the capital.

As he spoke, another Red Army convoy of trucks, armored vehicles and tanks moved out onto the Salang Highway that runs 260 miles north to the Soviet border.

In Peshawar, Pakistan, border headquarters of a seven-party insurgent alliance, a guerrilla leader predicted Najib's regime would collapse shortly after the Soviet military withdrawal.

"The regime will fall in weeks, not months," Gulbaddin Hekmatyar, leader of the guerrilla group Hezb-i-Islami, told a news conference. He said the insurgents would not have to attack the cities.

Speaking of a possible political settlement with the rebels, Najib said his Communist Party must be part of any future government. "Any attempt to exclude" the party "and its allies from a coalition government will be in vain," he said.

The guerrillas have rejected offers of settlements based on that assumption and say they are forming a council to choose an Islamic government.

Burmese Jet Strikes Tree During Takeoff

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RANGOON, Burma — A Burma Airways jet taking off from Rangoon's Mingaladon Airport struck a tree and crashed today, killing 26 people on board and injuring three, state radio said.

Four people on the ground also were injured when the turboprop jet crashed near housing for families of air force personnel, Radio Rangoon said.

The radio gave engine failure as the cause of the crash, Burma's fourth since mid-1987, and said the accident was being investigated.

It said the plane failed to gain height and hit a 15-foot tree shortly after taking off on a flight for Kengtung, 380 miles northeast of Rangoon. The plane then swerved to the left and plowed through trees and electric lines, it said.

The aircraft, a Dutch-made Fokker 27, carried 25 passengers and four crew members. The radio report did not identify the three survivors.

All on board were presumed to be Burmese nationals since Kengtung is normally off limits to foreigners due to security problems in the area.

Burma Airways has lost four Fokker 27s since June 21, 1987 when 45 people were killed after take-off from Heho airport in the Shan States.

All 49 people on board were killed near Pagan in central Burma in a crash on Oct. 11, 1987.

Hagman Wants To Take 'Dallas' To Soviet Union

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev meets the ultimate capitalist, J.R. Ewing?

If Larry Hagman has his way, the meeting will become a reality in March when "Dallas" is tentatively scheduled to go on location in the Soviet Union and Europe.

Hagman, as well as regulars Patrick Duffy, Cathy Podewell, Sheree J. Wilson and George Kennedy, are tentatively scheduled to leave in March — the final decision has not yet been made. If it's a go, they will film scenes for "Dallas" in the Soviet Union, Austria and West Germany.

"I have no idea what the story will be," said Hagman, who this season became co-executive producer of the series with Leonard Katzman. "I don't think we'll know until Leonard finishes scouting the locations."

"But, Russia exports more oil than any other country, including Saudi Arabia and Iran. It's their only source of hard dollars. So I think J.R. may do a little dealing."

And might J.R. seek an audience with Gorbachev? "Don't think we aren't trying! If we could just touch flesh just once. I'm all for it."

It wouldn't be the first overseas trip for "Dallas," now in its 12th season. Victoria Principal and Linda Gray went to Hong Kong a few seasons ago.

"It'll be fun," said Hagman. "It'll generate some interest."

Hagman became co-executive producer in September, a title offered by Lorimar Television, but he acknowledges it's mainly an excuse. "They had to find some way to pay me more money," he said. "It was a means of paying me the executive producer's salary, if you want to know the truth."

Hagman declined to say what his salary is but said an estimate by "Entertainment Tonight" that he was making $150,000 a week was below the mark.

The title "makes me feel more powerful," he said, laughing. "I did pick my new leading lady this year. I auditioned all the women and selected Cathy Podewell. She's a joy."

J.R. married Cally Harper, played by Podewell, earlier this season in a shotgun wedding.

Discussing how long he would stay with "Dallas," Hagman said, "It's a sinecure, let's face it. I enjoy it and I make a lot of money. I work three days a week and laugh all day long."

They pay me what some countries make. Why move on? The chance of another TV show making it is awfully tough, and at my age, why risk it?"

"And why should I go into movies? I don't know of any movie actor who makes as much as I do. I'm willing to stay with 'Dallas' as long as it goes on. We entertain people. Millions of people watch this show."

Hagman has used his influence, both as star and co-executive producer, to change the direction of "Dallas." He was instrumental in persuading Patrick Duffy to return to the show and in getting Charlene Tilton back in her role as Lucy.

Duffy left in 1985 after Bobby Ewing was struck and killed by an automobile. Hagman felt the tension between J.R. and Bobby was missed. Duffy returned in 1986 in the famous "dream" episode, in which his death — and the entire season — were explained away as a dream by Pamela Ewing. Victoria Principal, who played Pamela, has since left the series. Hagman also tried to get her to return.

"I wanted to get the show back to the family," said Hagman. "I think it's best when we're all together. The reason Bobby and J.R. went to Arkansas, where J.R. ended up getting married, was to get us out and doing something physical."

"It got us out of sitting around the boardroom making deals. There'll still be that undercurrent, but it has to be interesting. Maybe we can make a deal with the Russians."

Has J.R. changed over the years? "As an actor you sometimes paint yourself into corner you don't anticipate until later," he answered. "J.R.'s not as raw as he was. He's still amorous. He married this young girl."

Stars' Families Unveil Sculpture

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PORT ARTHUR, Texas — Thirty years after the music died, the memories of rock 'n' roll stars Buddy Holly, Ritchie Valens and J.P. "Big Bopper" Richardson are being revived here in sculptures as big as life.

Relatives of Holly and Valens arrived in Port Arthur on Thursday for a private showing of the sculptures, to be followed by a public unveiling and concert in Beaumont today on the 30th anniversary of their deaths.

"This is really an honor," said Maria Elena Holly, Holly's widow. "I have no words to express. It is very touching. He would be so proud. He would be crying to be in such good company."

"There's no way I can express," said Bob Morales of Watsonville, Calif., Valens' brother. "He'd love it. It's the most beautiful thing he could see."

The musicians were killed on Feb. 3, 1959, when their small plane crashed in bad weather near Clear Lake, Iowa, en route to a concert date in Fargo, N.D.

At the time, Holly was a giant on the fledgling rock'n'roll scene and his death became known as "the day the music died." Valens was a budding star famous for his hit "La Bamba."

Richardson, who was from Beaumont, was known as "The Big Bopper" and recently had earned a gold record for his hit song "Chantilly Lace."

Concerts Canceled

GILROY, Calif. (AP) — Jazz musician Dave Brubeck has canceled appearances for a few months because he's scheduled for coronary bypass surgery next week.

The 68-year-old Connecticut resident will have the operation Wednesday at Yale University Hospital in New Haven, Russell Gloyd, Brubeck's manager and conductor, said Thursday.

Brubeck could resume limited travel and performances in a couple of months, he said.

Shooting Starts

CINCINNATI (AP) — Actor Tom Selleck begins shooting his prison movie "Hard Rain" this weekend, using a Civil War-era former city workhouse for a location.

The movie, set at the closed Hamilton County jail, will be off-limits to outsiders.

The film will also be shot partly at the field house of suburban Norwood High School. The moviemakers project an 18-day filming schedule, with shooting to start Saturday at the jail.

CBS Uses 'Lonesome Dove' To Launch TV Sweeps Era

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Diane Lane was apprehensive about the reception awaiting her in Texas when she arrived for her role as a "sporting gal" in the CBS miniseries "Lonesome Dove."

One of her co-stars in the epic Western story is Tommy Lee Jones, who was her husband and a tough gambler in her last movie, "The Big Town."

During the filming of that movie, she says, Jones "was so deep into his character that I was a little intimidated. When I finished my part I left without saying goodbye. I was a little worried how he would greet me when I got to the 'Lonesome Dove' set. Well, he swung me around and said, 'How are you, darling?' I'd never seen him so jovial. People looked and I said, 'He's my ex-husband, you know.'"

In the miniseries, Lane stars as Lorena Wood, the town prostitute at the Dry Bean Saloon in Lonesome Dove, Texas. Most of her scenes are with Robert Duvall.

The four-part miniseries, based on the Pulitzer Prize-winning novel by Larry McMurtry, kicks off the February sweeps for CBS on Sunday and is continued on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Jones and Duvall both play former Texas Rangers who run a small ranch called the Hat Creek Outfit. They are almost opposite in their personalities. Jones is Woodrow F. Call, who is sullen and taciturn, while Duvall is Augustus McCrae, who is charming and philosophical.

The story centers on an arduous cattle drive to Montana, which becomes a metaphor for life itself, with all of its adventures and triumphs and failures and its diverse and clashing personalities.

Lorena persuades another former Ranger to take her along after the trail drive. She is kidnapped by a renegade Indian, raped and sold to a band of traders. She's rescued by Gus.

Bill Wittliff wrote the screenplay, based on McMurtry's novel, and Simon Wincer directed. It also stars Danny Glover, Robert Urich, Frederic Forrest, D.B. Sweeney, Ricky Schroder and Anjelica Huston.

"I was one of the last people cast," Lane says. "I loved the role and I loved her relationship with Duvall."

Lorena, she says, is "a very introverted character and that can be difficult to play on a TV schedule. I thought it would be a great challenge."

"Lorena loves Gus but she's not in love with him. Sex has been such a bitter experience for her. She loves him like a father figure. But it's more than that. He loves her completely. He knows her better than she knows herself. She's powerless to resist his love. She could win a fight with a dragon, but there's no point in fighting Gus."

Lane says she cannot imagine any other actor playing Gus. Duvall has a way with dialogue she felt might sound licentious coming from another actor.

"The first scene we filmed is the first one you see in the miniseries," she says. "It's a poker game that will decide whether I'll get into the poke with him. He cheats, of course."

"Lorena is the true cliché whore with a heart of gold. She's not a conniving person. She wishes she was because everyone else is. One reason I wanted to play her is that I've played so many conniving women. That's more of a cliché than the whore with the heart of gold."

Much of the miniseries was filmed near Del Rio, a border city in Texas, where the cast frequently crossed over the border for authentic Mexican food. Crossing back was sometimes more difficult after a few margaritas, she says.

When she's not acting, Lane lives near Augusta, Ga., with her husband, actor Christopher Lambert.

They met when they did a tango together on a TV show when she was promoting "The Cotton Club" and he was promoting "Greystoke: The Legend of Tarzan, Lord of the Apes."

Lane grew up in New York. Her father, Burt Lane, was a theater workshop director, who gave her an early introduction to the stage. Her mother was a singer and model. She made her film debut at the age of 13 with Laurence Olivier in "A Little Romance."

She also starred in "The Outsiders," "Rumblefish," "The Cotton Club," "Cattle Annie and Little Britches," "To Elvis With Love," and "Streets of Fire."

"I started as a baby in an experimental, avant-garde play," she says. "It was like a tribal opera. It was a trilogy of Greek tragedies. Once I got into acting my father was beyond instrumental in keeping me in the business. I was doing plays and homework and touring. It was too much for one person. He was there to carry me through."

'Columbo' Returns On Monday

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — "Columbo" is back, but the first in a series of new two-hour movies, kicking off "The ABC Monday Mystery Movie," sputters like that old Peugeot the rumpled detective drives.

Peter Falk is back, but the plot seems to be a "Murder, She Wrote" episode stretched into two hours. Was the show always this dull? Did it just seem more interesting in the 1970s?

The following week, Burt Reynolds also returns to the small screen in his share of the three-movie rotating wheel, "B.L. Stryker." His show is a "Miami Vice" episode stretched into two hours, but Reynolds is well-cast as a beer-swilling ex-cop who has come home to Palm Beach after losing his cool, and his badge, in New Orleans. He's helped by some spunky writing and a fine supporting cast that includes Rita Moreno and Ossie Davis.

Falk, bless his heart, is so overjoyed to be back in his old raincoat, he overplays the part, shrugging, shuffling and flailing like Ronald Reagan with reporters shouting questions at him. He seems too conscious of the character. You know how little kids are unintentionally cute, but then they get older and start trying to be cute, and they're not?

At least the producers knew not to mess with the formula, which is exactly the same. First we see the murder, then, silly us, we worry whether Columbo will figure it out. This is an open mystery — the audience knows the answer but the hero doesn't — and they're difficult to write. In the premiere, the villain is a psychic, played by Anthony Andrews, who beheads a magician (Anthony Zerbe) who threatens to expose him as a fake.

After about a 30-minute setup, we return from a commercial break to a darkened street. The familiar coughing car lumbers into the frame. Inside, a dark figure lights a cigar. Columbo! There's even an appropriate pause apparently designed so viewers can stand and applaud in their living rooms.

From there on, though, the plot wears as thin as that raincoat that was once rumored to be hanging in the Smithsonian Institution. It actually has been in Falk's closet.

 To double a freely-bid slam for penalties is an act of folly. If the opponents are relatively sane, the most you can hope for is down one, or with bad breaks, down two. It is far more sensible to follow Theodore Lightner's advice and use the double as a lead-director, calling for an unusual lead, generally dummy's first-bid suit. But even that can backfire once in a while.

The two criteria for a jump shift are a self-sufficient suit of your own or a fit for partner's suit—South's hand qualified on both counts. When West doubled seven clubs, South realized there was the danger of a ruff, so he corrected to seven no trump.

West led a heart, declarer inserted dummy's ten and East made a good play when he withheld the king—not that it made any difference. Declarer won the ace and took two rounds of clubs, ending in dummy. Now declarer made West pay a heavy price for his double.

If West could ruff a diamond, that meant that East held five diamonds headed by the ten, and the suit was not going to run. So declarer led dummy's singleton diamond and, when East followed low, he finessed the nine! As a result, he had no problem collecting all the tricks.

With hindsight it is easy to say that West would have done better not to double seven clubs. East might have led a diamond anyway, allowing West to set the slam with a ruff. In all honesty, though, we must admit that we, too, would have doubled with the West hand—and suffered the same fate.

Team Plans North Pole Trek

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OTTAWA — An international expedition plans to walk 483 miles across the ice to the North Pole to dramatize the hazards they believe are threatening the Arctic.

The team, which includes members from Canada, the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain, Japan, Australia and West Germany, hopes to set out on the 65-day trip around March 10-15 from Cape Columbia, Canada's northernmost point of land on the Arctic Ocean.

The American in the group is Darryl Roberts of the Bronx, N.Y.

"Everyone has to understand that this is not walk in the park," said Peter Baird, the Canadian liaison for the Icewalk expedition. "This is a life-threatening project."

The expedition is led by Robert Swan, the British explorer who walked to the South Pole with two other men in 1986. A successful completion of the northern trip would make him the first on record to walk to both poles.

Baird is an administrator and will not be among the eight-member team that walks to the North Pole.

His Ottawa company, the Conexus Research Group, served as the managers for the Canadian-Soviet ski expedition that crossed the arctic ice cap last year to widespread acclaim.

Baird had no easy explanation for why adventurers seem to keep trying to come up with new projects and goals in the arctic.

"Who knows what motivates them?" he said. "It's an athletic thing, clearly, in some ways. It's the right to say you're first. ... And some sort of declaration that the human spirit is still alive and kicking."

At around the time the Icewalk begins, another expedition will have already started, if all goes on schedule, on a dog-sled trek across the frozen Bering Strait separating Alaska and Soviet Siberia. The purpose of the trek by a U.S.-Soviet team of 10 men and two women is to call attention to the common cultural heritage of the indigenous people living on both sides of the strait. The two-month expedition is scheduled to depart from Anadyr, Siberia, on March 1.

Egg Producers Cut Flocks For Profit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's egg producers are shipping lazy hens off to the soup factory in an effort to reduce flock sizes, but even those stern measures are unlikely to return quick profits to the battered industry.

Department economists say that losses to egg producers in 1988 were the highest since USDA began keeping those financial records 17 years ago.

As of Jan. 1, the hen flock that produces table eggs — the kind in cartons — was estimated by USDA at 233.4 million birds, 6 percent fewer than a year earlier. Overall hen flocks, including hens producing eggs to hatch new chicks, declined 5 percent to 271.3 million birds.

"This was the largest liquidation of layers since the avian influenza outbreak in 1983," says economist Robert V. Bishop.

Egg consumption is expected to continue its decline to around 235 eggs per person this year from an average of about 243 in 1988 and 259 in 1984, according to the department's Economic Research Service.

"Health concerns relating to cholesterol content may be affecting egg consumption," the agency said in a recent report. "At the same time, egg producers have spent little money on changing the image of eggs or convincing consumers that eggs are not just for breakfast."

Meanwhile, egg prices at the farm were erratic at times in 1988 but wound up the year averaging 62.1 cents per dozen, about the same as in 1987.

But production costs have risen in recent years, and in 1988 producers nationally lost an average of 5.2 cents per dozen.

All states have some commercial egg production, even Alaska with an output of about 700,000 eggs last year.

U.S. Airlifting Children From Quake Area

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The United States, cooperating with the Soviet Union on a humanitarian airlift for the first time since World War II, Thursday began evacuating 36 children injured severely during the Dec. 7 earthquake in Soviet Armenia to the United States for extended medical treatment.

State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman announced that a U.S. military transport flew from Moscow to Frankfurt with the first five of "the critically ill children who have suffered the loss of limbs and can benefit from specialized care in the United States."

Redman added that another 31 children will be flown to Frankfurt by U.S. military aircraft from Yerevan, the capital of Soviet Armenia, early next week. The children are being evacuated under a program arranged by Project Hope, a private, nonprofit, international health, education and training organization with headquarters in Bethesda, Md., and Millwood, Va.
