Bush S&L Plan May Hit Taxpayers, Institutions

By Dave Skidmore
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush is putting together a plan to bail out the savings and loan industry, and many are predicting he'll ask taxpayers and financial institutions to share the cost of paying off billions of dollars in borrowing.

Bush, who spent the weekend at the presidential retreat in Camp David, Md. listening to advice from top advisers, could make his decision known as early as today.

White House aides, speaking on condition of anonymity, say they do not expect the final package to include a much-criticized proposal to levy a fee on depositors of about $2.50 for every $1,000 in their accounts.

Instead, trade association officials and members of Congress who have spoken with the Treasury Department predict the plan will feature these elements:

—Borrowing, in the form of bonds, of about $50 billion over the next three years.

—Money from a mixture of sources, including taxpayer dollars and insurance premiums from S&Ls and banks, to pay $7 billion to $9 billion in annual interest on the bonds.

—An administrative reshuffling that would include a separate apparatus to sell off insolvent S&Ls, a recapitalized insurance fund for healthy S&Ls and a regulatory agency, perhaps under the control of the Treasury Department.

There has been little disagreement over borrowing the S&L cleanup money. The much more difficult problem is figuring out how to pay the interest on the bonds.

Instead of the deposit fee, insurance premiums paid by the institutions — currently 83 cents per $1,000 for banks and $2.08 for S&Ls — probably will be increased.

The increase mentioned, at least before Bush reviewed the plan, would bring the premiums to about $1.80 per $1,000 for banks and $2.50 for S&Ls. That would raise about half the $7 billion to $9 billion needed each year.

Another option would be to siphon off interest earned from money deposited with the Federal Reserve. Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan has opposed this. He argues that the Fed pays its income into the general treasury anyway and that siphoning off interest would merely inflate the budget deficit.

Commercial bankers have vociferously opposed being made to help pay for problems in a competing industry. They do not want any mingling of their insurance fund, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., with the S&L fund, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.

But, they probably would accept higher premiums for a limited period, say three years, if the money went to build up the FDIC, which has had its own less publicized and less severe problems after paying to close or merge 217 banks last year.

FDIC Chairman L. William Seidman told a group of Illinois bankers in Washington on Friday that the fund will report a balance of about $14 billion for the end of 1988, down from $13.3 billion a year ago.

Even though the premiums paid by banks would stay with the FDIC, for budget purposes the money would count as revenue to the general fund. Under the arrangement envisioned by Budget Director Richard Darman,

Model Teaching Program Keys On Planning Ahead

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A student in the Model Teaching Program at East Carolina University said she already has learned a valuable lesson in teaching students: Be prepared.

"Planning is so important," said Lisa Mayo, a student of the ECU School of Education and a resident of Winterville. She is a student teacher in Nancy Williams' fourth-grade room at Wintergreen Elementary School.

Ms. Mayo said she must provide lesson plans for classes a week before she teaches the students. The plans not only help teachers stay on track with what should be taught, but the students benefit most from the planned curriculum, she said.

The Model Teaching Program "came about because the North Carolina Legislature was concerned about the training of teachers," Kathryn Lewis, an assistant in the program at ECU, said.

The Board of Governors' Task

Force on the Preparation of Teachers, appointed in September 1985, made recommendations on how to improve the preparation of classroom teachers in the state.

The Model Clinical Program Grants, funded by the General Assembly, stemmed from those recommendations.

Former City Officials React To Term Plan

By Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

With the Greenville City Council scheduled to conduct a public hearing Thursday on whether to extend the terms of the mayor and the council from 24 to 48 months, previous city officials voiced their opinions today on the controversial proposal.

On Jan. 12, the council approved a resolution of intent to double the terms of office for the members of the city's governing body from two to four years, with the terms for all six council members and the mayor to begin simultaneously.

As part of the process to change the city's charter to accommodate such a motion, the council must first conduct a public hearing on the matter. That hearing will be held Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at City Hall.

Paraguay Leader Denies Involvement With Drugs

By Bruce Handler
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ASUNCION, Paraguay — President Andres Rodriguez today said reports linking him to drug trafficking are false, and he said he will try to curtail cocaine shipments through his country.

Allegations that he protects or sponsors drug shipments "were spread by people trying to defame me," Rodriguez told foreign reporters at the National Palace. "I have nothing to do with it."

The 65-year-old army general took power Friday in a coup that ousted Gen. Alfredo Stroessner, who ruled for 34 years as president and commander-in-chief of the armed forces.

Stroessner left Paraguay on Sunday to the jeers of "Dictator Get Out!" and went into exile in Brazil. He was in a remote farming town in central Brazil, and the foreign ministry said today he would remain there indefinitely.

As soon as Rodriguez was sworn in Friday, talk began about allegations he allowed drug traffickers to use Paraguay to move cocaine out of South America.

The Buenos Aires Herald commented in an editorial Saturday: "There are reasons to link him (Rodriguez) to the rampant corruption and even the drug trafficking under the Stroessner regime.... Yesterday's events (the coup) might not improve the system and could even make things worse if Rodriguez becomes the Manuel Noriega of the region."

Noriega, Panama's military ruler, was indicted on drug trafficking charges in the United States last year. He has denied the allegations.

A high-ranking foreign diplomat acknowledged rumors that Rodriguez allowed traffickers to use an airstrip he owns near the border with Bolivia, but said: "Absolutely no proof of that has ever been offered."

On Sunday, Rodriguez pledged to "guarantee all freedoms and total democracy" in the nation of 4 million.

"I will call general elections within 90 days," he said moments after Stroessner's flight to exile lifted off.

On the observation deck at the President Stroessner International Airport, about 250 people hooted, jeered and clapped as the 76-year-old Stroessner and family members boarded a Paraguay Airlines Boeing 707.

Some, flashing the V for victory sign, chanted in unison, "Adios! Adios!"

The two black limousines that carried Stroessner's entourage to the

Thornburg: Prison System, Case Loads Should Be Priorities

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

State Attorney General Lacy Thornburg said today that he hopes the General Assembly will move to solve problems with prison overcrowding and the backlog of cases in the courts of North Carolina.

Speaking at the 12th annual conference of the N.C. Association of Chiefs of Police at the Ramada Inn in Greenville this morning, Thornburg suggested that police departments in the state are doing their job in arresting law breakers. But he said other elements of the criminal justice system are "not able to keep up."

The state's district attorneys and the courts need additional manpower to try the backlog of cases in the courts, said Thornburg, who suggested the prison system needs to be expanded to house those convicted of crimes. "They need to understand," he said, that those that are "a danger to society don't need to be on the street."

"I hope the General Assembly will do something about it. It comes down to a question of where you are going to put your priorities."

As attorney general, Thornburg is responsible for the State Bureau of Investigation. And he told the chiefs, "We recognize the SBI is an assisting agency." But he said the agency needs more resources to respond to the number of requests for assistance.

He expressed support for more agents and more "buy" money to work drug cases and additional SBI agents to work with local departments on other crimes.

He also said the N.C. Justice Academy at Salemburg needs additional classroom space and instructors to meet the training needs of law enforcement departments

BBB Serving Counties In Eastern N.C.

Since the Better Business Bureau of Eastern North Carolina opened an office in New Bern in August, more than 200 businesses in Pitt, Beaufort, Carteret, Greene, Jones, Onslow and Pamlico counties have become members, according to Judy Via, membership representative.

The bureau, a non-profit organization that began in 1912, is headquartered in Arlington, Va., and has more than 200 offices nationwide. It is operated by members and supported through a board of directors.

"Services in this area actually grew out of inquiries," Ms. Via said. "(The bureau in) Raleigh was getting up to 114 calls a day from people in this area and they simply could not handle the work load. People needed to have a bureau closer so they would not have to go to Raleigh for arbitration of settlements."

She said the bureau's services include mediating between businesses and consumers, providing information to consumers and businesses about advertising, organizing contributions and alerting people to frauds or scams in the area.

"The BBB investigates anything from the most minute to the biggest fraud," she commented.

Members, who are identified by a plaque and decal displayed at their businesses, agree to cooperate with the bureau when they join.

Consumers and businesses with questions or complaints may call 1-800-222-0950. For information or to join the bureau, call 355-7112.

Blind Faith

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — A man already convicted for negligence in the death of a Marine left in the California desert says he would have never let his squad leader off if he knew the man was unaccounted for.

The testimony of Sgt. Christopher Clyde came as the final witness in the court martial of Sgt. Thomas Turnell.

"I believed all the men were present or accounted for," said Clyde in questioning by government prosecutors.

Clyde was convicted of negligence for allowing Turnell special time off and for the failure to account for his men.

Clyde told the court he had blind faith in the commissioned officers of the unit. When asked why he had not questioned the whereabouts of Lance Cpl. Jason Rother, admitted he should have asked more questions at the end of the exercise and the end of the need for the special road guides.

Clyde was not as talkative during his testimony in this trial as he was during the first court martial and his testimony then.

He was on the stand for less than an hour and a half, compared to the three hours during his trial.

Men Fall From Scaffold

Rescuers attend to Leonard Wade of Jacksonville who fell from a scaffold this morning while working with Thomas Long Construction Co. of Beulaville on a construction project at Willoughby Park in Greenville. According to Mike Parker, who also fell from the scaffold, the board of the scaffold broke and the two men fell from about midway of the second story of the building to the ground. Wade was treated in the emergency room at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Parker was not hurt in the incident.

Folly Beach Might Land Big Littleneck Clam Bed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FOLLY BEACH, S.C. — Folly Beach may become the home of the world's largest littleneck hard clam bed — a facility that would produce 36 million clams annually, Mayor Richard Beck said.

Beck said International Mariculture Resources, a Newport Beach, Calif., investor, has identified an area on the northeast end of Little Oak Island in the city just south of Charleston as an ideal site for the facility.

Beck said the project, which would require a city zoning change, would include a one-story building surrounded by trees.

"You wouldn't be able to see it if you didn't know it was there. It seems extremely positive at first glance," he said.

Construction of the Little Oak Island Mariculture Center would mean a zoning change for 3.4 acres currently zoned for single-family structures, officials said.

Beck said International Marine Resources President William Butcher and Vice President Grant Knox have met with the city's planning and zoning board to request the change.

The board will hold a public hearing on March 6.

Meanwhile, Butcher is scheduled to present the information to the town council at its regular meeting on Tuesday.

The project, which will cover about 300 acres including high ground, marsh and waterways, will employ 65 people by 1995 and have a revenue of about 7.2 million, according to company projections.

Company officials selected the Little Oak Island site after reviewing more than 20 potential sites on the East Coast. It's the preferred site because of water quality and access to transportation, officials said.

If the project gains the backing of Folly Beach, plans are to buy and plant 1 million clams near Little Oak in June, begin construction in November and operate at 50 percent by March of 1990.

Generally, hard clam fisheries have been centered along the Atlantic Coast from Virginia to Massachusetts, but they have not been able to meet demand for clams.

Littleneck clams are normally found in waters with relatively high salinity from Maine to Florida. It takes 24 to 30 months for the clams to grow to market size.

John Manzi, a senior marine scientist with the state Department of Wildlife and Marine Resources said department officials have been discussing the project with the company for about a year.

"From my standpoint and department's standpoint this is the type of industry we would like to foster in state of South Carolina," Manzi said. "It creates jobs, a food product and enhances recreational resources."

Manzi said most development in small communities is a threat to the environment, "but an industry like this is really extremely compatible with it."

He said the center would also enhance recreational fishing in the area because the clams would be planted in cages in mud flats where oysters do not grow.

"They are not taking up a habitat that oysters would normally take up," he said. "There is also pretty good evidence that these structures work as in-shore artificial reefs. When the clams start to grow, it will attract other animals and fish."

Man Drowned

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A Buncombe County man drowned in a Georgia river while trying to swim across it, authorities said Sunday.

David B. Shook, 39, apparently was pulled under by a strong current Saturday as he tried to swim across the 100-yard-wide Oconee River in East Dublin, Ga., according to Lt. Yates Ware of the Laurens County (Ga.) Sheriff's Office.

Shook was seen struggling in the water shortly before he disappeared, Ware said. The body was found more than an hour later two to three miles downstream, Ware said.

Shook, a construction worker, had moved to Laurens County about a week ago, Ware said.

"He apparently didn't know how treacherous the current is," Ware said.

High prices for soybeans resulted in a profitable crop for most area soybean growers last year. Low crop inventories due to last year's drought may mean higher prices will hold for the 1989 crop.

Even though soybean planting time is a number of months away, growers should begin to think about factors regarding profitable soybean production at this time. Two topics very important to soybean production — variety selection and nematodes — will be discussed in detail Feb. 8 at the Pitt County corn and soybean meeting.

Feeding of nematodes on soybean roots reduces plant vigor and root growth and lowers the natural resistance of plants to other pathogens. In heavily infested fields, plant growth appears uneven, usually with distinct areas of stunted, chlorotic plants. Since chemical control is not normally economical, other means of controlling nematode populations in soybeans are recommended.

Nematode samples should be taken in the fall when populations are normally the highest so that problems can be detected. Rotation with nematode-resistant soybean varieties and nonhost crops are the best means of control. Nonhost crops include corn, small grain and cotton.

Variety selection can be one of the most important decisions made and can mean the difference between a good soybean yield and a poor one. Surveys indicate many Pitt County growers plant high-yielding varieties, but others still need to utilize available variety information in making the decision on which variety to plant. Each year, the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service has official variety test information available to growers. Growers should utilize this information relative to their situation.

Two or more varieties should be planted on large acreage. Using varieties with differing maturity dates can help reduce weather risks. Farmers with large acreages of tobacco, cotton or peanuts may want to avoid Group 5 varieties due to potential harvest delay problems. Group 6 or Group 7 varieties should be planted for double crop situations.

For information on these topics, attend the meeting Feb. 8 or call the PCAES at 830-6361.

Last Convoys Head North

By Sharon Herbaugh
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KABUL, Afghanistan — The last Red Army convoys abandoned their garrisons and headed north for home today, Soviet officials said, bringing to an end a nine-year mission that cost more than 13,000 Soviet lives.

Hundreds of Soviet troops guarded the airport of the war-weary Afghan capital as military transports ferried in loads of grain and other supplies to help ease food shortages caused by guerrilla blockades.

In Moscow, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda reported "the last Soviet soldier left Kabul" on Sunday.

But Soviet officials in the city said about 1,000 troops would remain at the airport until the end of the week.

In neighboring Pakistan, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze met with Pakistani officials but said today the talks failed to find a way to peacefully end the Afghan war. He said the Soviets will continue to support Afghanistan's Marxist government but would not send troops back into the country.

Under a U.N.-brokered accord, all Soviets forces are to be out by Feb. 15.

Soviet diplomats said Red Army troops in the western city of Shindand left their garrison, the remaining Soviet military complex in the country.

The diplomats, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the soldiers headed over the weekend toward Herat to meet a convoy there and were expected to reach the Soviet border Wednesday or Thursday.

Pravda said Soviet troops had by Sunday removed defensive checkpoints on the Salang Highway to about 50 miles north of Kabul at the end of a tunnel that cuts through some of the roughest terrain on the withdrawal route.

Pravda said insurgents did not fire on Soviet convoys on the highway, the only land route to the Soviet border from Kabul. But four avalanches crashed down on retreating columns Sunday, killing three Soviet soldiers and injuring a fourth, the paper said.

Three officers were also injured by "terrorist grenades" in a Kabul suburb Sunday as the Soviets handed over motor vehicles to the Afghans, the newspaper said.

throughout the state. At present, he said, "we are able to meet only one-third of the requests for training needs."

"I feel good about the potential of what's going on in Raleigh," with the General Assembly, Thornburg said. But he urged the chiefs to talk with their General Assembly representatives and encourage them to support improvements for the criminal justice system.

Charles Reynolds, chief of the Dover, N.H., Police Department and president of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, also spoke at the session.

Reynolds said the association represents 14,000 chiefs in 67 countries and that it "is as good as we make it." Suggesting that the IACP is "the professional voice of law enforcement," he encouraged participation at both the state and national levels.

"We must build a foundation of strength," Reynolds said, and "speak clearly on the subject of crime. We are experts on crime. We must speak about the seriousness of drugs ... the most serious domestic problem today. We must go to congress and request ... insist!" that the problem be dealt with.

"We see the best in people...the worst in people," Reynolds said. "We, the police, are doing our jobs. We need to do our best to see that the expectations of the people are met."

Reynolds also voiced support for Greensboro Police Chief Silvester Daughtry of Greensboro, who is a candidate for sixth vice president of the IACP. That election is scheduled for IACP's annual conference in October in Louisville, Ky.

Greenville Police Chief Jerry Tesmond, chairman of the IACP committee on education and training, introduced Reynolds.

New Bern Chief Jerry Welch, a member of the IACP education and training committee and president of the NCACP, presided at the session.

She also said the argument that four-year terms mean candidates don't have to spend large sums of money on election campaigning every two years simply doesn't hold true.

"Since we have a district system now, it's not as much effort to run for re-election because you're not seeking votes from all over the city," she said.

Ms. McGrath says she believes this council's decision to move toward four-year terms is another example of this council's tendency to isolate themselves from the public.

"They have those workshop sessions in that upstairs conference room and they cram everyone they can in there. Why don't they have their meetings in the council chambers? Why don't they make the public feel like they're welcome?" she said.

"We used to have the council chambers full when I was on the council and the people who came to the meetings felt involved in what was going on in the city," she said.

Former mayor and council member Janice Buck, who plans to attend the hearing Thursday, said she has "mixed emotions" on the two-year term versus four-year term issue.

"I would really like to wait to hear what the public has to say regarding the matter," she said.

Plan Draws Talk

reservations about the proposed changes.

"I would be opposed to a four-year term if I had anything to do with it," Garner said.

Four years, Garner said, is simply too long to endure a poor administration in the event that ineffective leaders should somehow enter office.

"If elected officials do a good job, then they usually return to office," he said.

John Howard, who served as a council member for six two-year terms, says he is "absolutely opposed" to the charter amendments that this particular council, led by Mayor Ed Carter, is proposing.

"If they do decide to go to four years, then I believe they need to have the terms staggered," Howard said. "If you have the terms staggered, then you will always have some continuity on the board with at least half the council members staying on the board and retaining some experience."

Howard also is strongly opposed to a four-year term for the mayor.

"I think the mayor should be accountable every two years," he said.

Millie McGrath, a council member for five two-year terms, said she prefers two-year terms because officials are more accountable to their constituents.

Simmons Jurors Called

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CLARKSVILLE, Ark. — Ninety people were summoned as potential jurors as the trial got under way today of a man accused of killing 14 family members.

R. Gene Simmons, 48, already is on death row after his murder conviction on May 12 for the Dec. 28, 1987, shooting of two people in Russellville, including a woman said to have refused his romantic advances.

The new trial is for the shooting and strangulation deaths of Simmons' wife, Becky, 46; their seven children; two of the children's spouses; and four of Simmons' grandchildren, one of whom relatives say he fathered by one of his daughters.

The bodies of Simmons' relatives were found Dec. 28-29, 1987, at Simmons' house near Russellville, which is 25 miles southeast of Clarksville. The trial was moved to Clarksville because of pretrial publicity.

Pseudo Spring Is Long Gone

The spring-like days and nights that have set record temperatures in Pitt County during the past two weeks ended Saturday with a high reading of 53 degrees, which was 30 degrees lower than Friday's high of 83 summery degrees.

John Benson, instrumentation technician at the Greenville Utilities Water Plant, reported that Friday's high of 83 was coupled with a night low of 53 degrees.

On Saturday, as a big cold front moved eastward across the nation, Pitt temperatures reached a low of 34 degrees.

The readings Sunday dropped even more, registering a high of 35 with a low of 31, just at the freezing point, early this morning.

Benson said the rainfall was slight, registering less than an inch since the slow light rain moved in.

For Pitt County farmers, the cooler weather plus the slow rain "is a most helpful development," according to Pitt County Agriculture Extension Agent Sam Uzzell.

"This change to cooler weather will hold the buds of peach and other fruit trees closed. It will be helpful, too, in slowing down the growth of tobacco plants in seed beds. The rainfall, though not much, is very much needed and especially good since it's a slow, soaking type of rainfall."

"This drop in temperatures is what has been needed," Uzzell added. "Things are looking good and we can only hope there will not be a sudden plunge of cold down into the teens."

TREATMENT FOR 'NON-SUPPORT'

Even if you use the best oral hygiene techniques at home, it may be difficult to keep harmful bacteria from attacking two of its favorite targets: your teeth and your gums. Tooth decay and gum disease are the result, and, if left untreated, may threaten loss of teeth.

In a healthy mouth, each tooth sits firmly in its socket, separated by a thin membrane or ligament composed of millions of fibers as well as blood vessels, nerves, lymphatics, and cells. The purpose of the ligament is to prevent the tooth from being too tightly compressed in its socket. If your gums are healthy, they attach to your teeth just above the bone crest. This is where the uppermost portion of the root emerges from the bone.

Even in healthy gums and teeth there is a space between gum and tooth. If this space should be attacked by bacteria, both tooth and gum as well as supporting bone may be threatened. That's why prompt treatment of any signs of gum disease is recommended.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

The Blueprint

Lofty Ideals For Capable Community

It looks good sketched out neatly on paper, the plan for Pitt County's future. Quality of life, economic acceleration, full employment.

Add in excellent education, diminished crime and drug abuse and better recreation and the picture becomes extremely attractive. It also becomes very ambitious.

A community with these goals has high ideals. It has aspirations of wealth, fulfillment for its citizens, care for its needy and protection for its environment.

Those are lofty goals but not too exalted for Pitt County. They have always been in the county's agenda — at times unarticulated — and stand behind many of the actions of its government and citizens.

Now, these high ideals have been formalized by a panel planning for the year

2007. A group of leaders representing a cross-section of the public and private sectors brainstormed last week and put these often unspoken goals on paper. By doing so, they committed themselves and their community to a difficult task — addressing the needs of a diverse and expanding county through careful molding of services and resources.

While that is a brave agenda to put on paper, the real challenge is to turn this neatly-drawn draft into reality. That charge, however, is none too steep for a county with the assets that Pitt boasts.

It will require hard work and coordination from all corners of the community. These objectives can't be met just by business or industry or professionals. They can't be achieved merely through public services. No, these goals can be fulfilled only if public, private, rich, poor, white collar and labor interests work together.

And these ends can't be achieved just by Greenville or by Pitt County or by East Carolina University or by public schools. No, to be successfully met, all entities must cooperate. Progress that benefits each citizen isn't the result of a controlled experiment. It doesn't occur in a vacuum, it occurs in a dynamic environment, where factors interact.

Reaching high ideals will require adherence to these publicly-set goals when formulating public policy. Leaders must give them priority when making the difficult choices that face the community. Citizens must demand this dedication from their officials.

The year 2007 is 18 years away. Pitt County will be well into the 21st century. Two of its assets, East Carolina University and the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, representing diverse and important community interests, will celebrate their 100th anniversaries that year. It is an appropriate interval to stop and assess advancement, and it is correct to place the communities' expectations on paper.

But those aspirations are only a stencil of the county's potential. The work of the panel that set them is the beginning. Getting the community to unroll this blueprint and put the planks of progress together is the real goal.

'Those are lofty goals but not too exalted for Pitt County. They have always been in the county's agenda — at times unarticulated ...'

HAVE YOU EVER HEARD OF OLIVER NORTH? DID YOU WATCH HIS TESTIMONY ON TV? DID YOU READ OR SEE ANYTHING ABOUT THE IRAN-CONTRA HEARINGS? HAVE YOU EVER HEARD OF IRAN-CONTRA? WERE YOU ON MARS ALL DURING 1987?

From M Street It's Long Distance

WASHINGTON — Democrats have almost completed their quadrennial exercise of licking their wounds and looking backwards, and are feeling hopeful. Hopefulness is, as a wit said, the feeling that the feeling you have is not permanent. Democrats are ready to turn briskly to the business of losing the 1992 election, and some of them believe that the coming election of Ronald Brown as party chairman will be a big step in that direction.

There are moments, and this is one, when people who know better make themselves believe that party chairmen are hugely important in presidential politics. Brown is part of the Democrats' problem, but his principal significance is as a symptom.

Brown, who is black, was deputy manager of Ted Kennedy's 1980 insurgency against incumbent Democratic President Jimmy Carter. In 1988, from late in the primaries through the convention, Brown was the organizing force in something almost impervious to organizing force: Jesse Jackson's campaign.

Brown joined Jackson at the urging of many Democrats who thought he could modulate Jackson. Because of that urging on of Brown, the party can hardly round on him now and say that his association with Jackson disqualifies him from being party chairman.

George Will

That would be "unfair," and Democrats value fairness above all other things.

Some Democrats comfort themselves with the thought that Brown is just the person to "stand up to Jackson." But a fight with Jackson — one of several fights Democrats desperately need — can hardly be waged by the party chairman. And, anyway, there is nothing about Brown, a Kennedy-Jackson liberal, that indicates he is inclined to fight.

True, Brown does want to reverse a rule change that Jackson does not want reversed. Brown wants to restore to members of the Democratic National Committee their stature as convention delegates. That is not surprising: Those are the people about to elect Brown.

But Brown shows no sign of wanting to undo what he helped win on Jackson's behalf at the Atlanta convention. There, as concessions to Jackson, the party made rules changes that (to oversimplify just a bit) require almost pure proportional representation. Under such a system a candidate who wins, say, seven percent of the vote in a state primary gets seven percent of the delegates.

Pure proportional representation is a recipe for multiplying factions and prolonging competition. It is approximately the system the Israelis have. They also have a saying: "Two Israelis make three factions."

Tom Donilon is a veteran of many Democratic rules debates, which are of Talmudic complexity. He argues that whatever else good rules accomplish, they should help the party "get to closure," expeditiously. The likelihood of winning the general election is inversely proportional to the time it takes the party to pick its candidate. Brown is not likely to lead a fight to restore such rules.

The real problem with Brown is not the way he looks to others — not his color — but the way he looks at the country. He is a lawyer-lobbyist for Washington's archetypal lawyer-lobbyist firm, the one with the Dickensian name of Patton Boggs & Blow. Its offices are on M Street. On a clear day Brown can see all the way to K Street, where other lawyer-lobbyists play.

That is a perfect neighborhood to play in if you want to forget how to think about voters as real flesh-and-blood individuals, and to learn to think only of groups. The theory there is that everyone is a member of a group, every group has an organization and every organization has a leader who has an office on K Street. Or M Street.

A news story on Brown contains this delicious passage: "Actually, Mr. Brown is more Eastern Establishment than extremist. He has a telephone in his car...." Oh, well, then everything is fine. But who is he calling?

Of course Brown is no "extremist." What is wrong with him is what makes him perfect as Democratic Party chairman perfectly representative, that is, of party activists. It is that he describes the party as "the last best hope in this country for dealing with issues of race, sex, religion and ethnicity."

Perhaps the party is that. It is hard to know because it is hard to know precisely what is the "issue" of sex, or what constitutes "dealing with" ethnicity. Brown's list of vital issues reads like the spring-semester seminar curriculum in a college sociology department.

'The real problem with Brown is not the way he looks to others — not his color — but the way he looks at the country. He is a lawyer-lobbyist for Washington's archetypal lawyer-lobbyist firm,

Marvelously, when listing the issues that Democrats can deal with, Brown omitted the two issues that matter most to most voters: peace and prosperity. He can check that by calling a voter on his car phone. From M Street, it will be a long-distance call.

Brown Has Talent. But Is It The Right Talent?

WASHINGTON — If you read the news stories, the most significant facts about Ronald H. Brown, who will be elected this week as the new chairman of the Democratic National Committee, are these: He is Jesse Jackson's former convention manager and he will be the first black to occupy the top post in either party.

David Broder

That's accurate but misleading, as a lot of journalistic labeling tends to be. The 47-year-old Washington lawyer-lobbyist crossed the racial divide in American society early in his personal life, attending a private Manhattan high school and overwhelmingly white Middlebury College in Vermont. Though he once worked for the National Urban League, he has built his political career, not on a black base but as a classic power broker.

In 1987 and 1988, Brown turned down repeated requests to run Jackson's campaign for the nomination. He took over only after it was clear that Jackson could not win but needed someone well-connected to negotiate the best terms for a cease-fire. What Brown accomplished at the Atlanta convention was at least as much in the party's interest as in Jackson's. He is not bragging when he says that his conciliation efforts "played a part in turning a potential disaster into a love-in."

Chances are, Brown will have an early opportunity to dramatize his contention that he is "not a stalking-horse" for Jackson. In an interview, he confirmed that last week he had promised Illinois Democratic leaders that he will support the Democratic nominee for mayor of Chicago this spring. If the primary later this month follows form, that pledge means that Brown will find himself backing Cook County state's attorney Richard M. Daley, who is white, against the man who will almost certainly have Jackson's support: black alderman Timothy C. Evans, who is running as an independent on a party named for the late mayor Harold Washington.

"I'm not uncomfortable" at the prospect of backing the son of the old boss against a black activist, Brown said. "As chairman of the party, you have a different role."

If Brown will have no difficulty proving himself a party man, it remains to be seen if he will provide the answer to the party's woes. He has consciously patterned his bid for the chairmanship on the model set by retiring DNC chairman Paul G. Kirk, Jr., who was his boss in Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's (D-Mass.) challenge to President Carter in the 1980 primaries.

Carter and the Southern moderates won that battle, but Kennedy has won the war. The men he and his liberal labor allies recruited to do battle against the beleaguered President have fastened a firm hold on the national party machinery. And, unsurprisingly, the last two party nominees have turned out to be Northern liberals as well.

In terms of character, charm, candor and competence, what was said exactly four years ago in this space about the election of Paul Kirk can be said equally of Ron Brown. Once again, "The Democrats have found themselves a national chairman better than they know — maybe better than they deserve."

Kirk set new standards in fund-raising and plowed the money back into building state and local party organizations. His effort helped cut off any George Bush coattails in last November's election and left many Democrats believing, as Brown said, "We are not a party in shambles. The sky has not fallen in on us."

Brown says he too will try to shape the DNC as "a campaign organization, not a bureaucracy." He says he will leave Kirk's ban on official ethnic and racial caucuses undisturbed, avoid any protracted fight on party rules (as Kirk did in the last cycle) and refuse to revive the midterm policy conferences held three times before Kirk canceled the one scheduled for 1986.

That determinedly non-ideological approach is comfortable to Democratic incumbents at all levels. They figure they can be re-elected on their own hook if their party just doesn't go out of its way to make itself obnoxious.

It's a question, though, whether such complacency is anything more than a prelude to another presidential defeat. Congressional Democrats actually gave themselves a "victory party" the night before Bush's inaugural, celebrating the 35th and 36th consecutive years of unbroken control of the House of Representatives.

Democrats run their presidential races on the left. They lose. And then, once again, they say there's no need to debate policy.

Ron Brown will have no problems proving he's his own man — as capable in his way as Paul Kirk. Whether his hands-off attitude makes him the right man to help the Democrats capture the White House is another question.

Proposed Denver Airport Having Trouble Taking Off

By Julia Rubin
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER — A proposed $3 billion airport, which survived one election and appeared ready to fly last spring, has run into turbulence again. The new airport, which would be the first such major project planned in the United States since Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport opened in 1974, is again the subject of debate, and faces the threat of a second referendum.

Meanwhile, federal investigators are looking into the dealings of some land developers associated with the project.

"I am frustrated with this state and this community not getting its act together. We can debate ourselves to the tail end of the line," said Gov. Roy Romer.

"My frustration with the city of Denver is, for God's sake, you've been working on this for seven years and sent me and some others out to represent you to a neighboring county (Adams) and then, whoops, the rug came out from under us."

Romer and other proponents, including Denver Mayor Federico Pena, contend the airport, scheduled for a July groundbreaking, will ease a projected national air transportation crush and boost Colorado's sagging economy. Stapleton International Airport is too small and has a flawed runway design, they say.

Opponents, including the two major airlines that serve Denver, have called the new airport a waste of money engineered by "fat cats," and point to declining traffic at Stapleton in the last two years.

The squabbling could cost the city federal funds that would help build the airport. The city has asked the federal government for $500 million to help offset the estimated $1.7 billion cost of the first phase of construction.

Adams County voters agreed last May to annex land northeast of Denver to the city for the airport. Pena ordered a national advertising campaign that boasted, "The world's largest airport is now off the ground," and promised the new airport would be operational by the mid-1990s.

Three months later, the city sued

Continental and United airlines for judicial approval to use Stapleton revenue to help finance the new airport.

And then in January, former Denver Democratic Party Chairman Dick Young and former state Sen. Bill Chenoweth spoke out against the city's plans, reviving the opposition and threatening to start a petition drive to put the issue to a vote. A newspaper poll showed most residents favored a second referendum.

Young said the decision to build the new airport instead of expanding Stapleton was made "in the closed rooms and the boardrooms and the hidden rooms, by the people who are going to make the money off what I consider the greatest boondoggle of all time."

At the heart of the investigation by the FBI and the Transportation Department is an alleged cash payment of $2,500 to former Adams County Commissioner Steve Cramer from a developer weeks before Cramer helped rezone a key parcel of land near the new site.

Cramer denied receiving the payment, and said the decision-making that went into the airport plan was too complex to be manipulated.

The Denver City Council has scheduled a Feb. 21 vote on whether to endorse the new airport.

The airport ultimately will need approval from the Federal Aviation Administration, which also would provide federal funding. The FAA has supported construction of the new airport to help ease future crowding in the nation's transportation system.

The FAA released a draft environmental impact statement last week that approved the new airport based on Environmental Protection Agency findings.

The EPA said it still had some reservations about the new site, including the possibility of increased air pollution.

FAA officials said they expected to issue a final environmental impact statement this summer, and will decide before then whether to approve Denver's airport layout plans.

Baptist Factions Continue Feud

Moderates Say They Are Ready To Pull Out

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chafing from a decade of leadership by conservatives, some moderate Southern Baptists are ready to pull out of the largest Protestant denomination in the United States.

A moderate faction called the Southern Baptist Alliance has acquired a headquarters in Washington and a paid director, encouraged churches to divert their funds from conservative causes, and drafted plans for a separate seminary.

When you've taken these steps, "then you have gone a long way down the road to becoming a separate denomination," Jack Harwell, editor of the moderate Baptist monthly "SBA Today" told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

The director of the Southern Baptist Alliance, Stan Hastey, acknowledged that a split is possible.

"I wouldn't have taken this position if I were not willing to contemplate the prospect of such an arrangement," he said.

"It sounds as if they're heading toward a completely separate denomination," said The Rev. M.O. Owens, leader of the Conservative Carolina Baptists.

One skirmish involves two major revivals scheduled one month and 95 miles apart.

On one side is the Rev. Bailey

Smith, the former Southern Baptist Convention president who gained notoriety for saying "God doesn't hear the prayer of a Jew," who is planning a Charlotte revival with the Rev. Jerry Falwell and a cast of prominent Baptist leaders.

On the other is the moderate controlled North Carolina Baptist State Convention, which is sponsoring a two-day evangelism conference that begins today in Greensboro. The convention's newspaper, the Biblical Recorder, refused to advertise Smith's March 8-10 event.

"Bailey Smith's evangelism organization is an independent para-church operation," the Rev. R.G. Puckett, editor of the Biblical Recorder, said in an interview published Sunday in The Charlotte Observer. "It is in the same category with PTL, the 700 Club, Oral Roberts and Jerry Falwell. I would not advertise for any of them."

Observers say the skirmish is making yet another crack in a crumbling wall.

The Rev. W.W. Finlator, a member of the Alliance and retired pastor of Pullen Memorial Baptist Church in Raleigh, said: "If Baptists ever came to grips with their true identity and their traditions and their history, they would find it impossible to live together, to coexist, with fundamentalists. They would discover that fundamentalists are just not Baptist."

The battle of power and the Bible turns on the question: Who is a Baptist?

Conservatives — whom some call fundamentalists — take a stricter approach to the Bible, which they say is literally without error. Most say that Adam and Eve were real people and that God never intended to have women in the pulpit.

"For the liberals, basically, the Bible is a big theological cafeteria, and you just go through and pick and choose what you want," said the Rev. Robert Tenery, who edits a conservative journal.

But James Baucom, whose father, grandfather and great-grandfather were Southern Baptist preachers, disagrees.

"It's not just an issue of rooting out liberalism, because Southern Baptists wouldn't know a liberal if they saw one," said Baucom, a student leader at Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary in Wake Forest. "This is a political battle."

The battle has been going on for most of this century. Conservatives have been on top for the last decade. They control six seminaries and a $145.6 million annual core budget, called the Cooperative Program.

Officers Say Crack Use On Rise In N.C.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — "Crack" cocaine has been linked to three homicides in the past five weeks in Greensboro, and Dunn police say it's the reason a man was beaten to death with a brick last summer on a city street.

"I've had many a junkie tell me, you suck on that pipe one time and you're in love. One time," said Michael Grimes, a Wilmington-based agent for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration. "They're just going to get hooked. Period. All of them."

Law officers say crack, long the scourge of New York and Washington ghettos, is commanding a growing share of the drug trade in towns and cities across North Carolina.

"We're seeing more homicides, more crimes of violence related to the drug. Some of the killings we've seen in armed robberies came because people were on it and overreacting," Charles Dunn, deputy director of the State Bureau of Investigation, told The Greensboro News & Record. "Some of the child abuse cases we're seeing are tied back to it."

"It's the growing way to use cocaine in the state," Dunn said.

Crack, a pure granular form of cocaine that is smoked, made its debut in the state about two summers ago, brought north from Florida by migrant farm workers, drug-enforcement officials guess.

Since then, it has gained a foothold in several small towns and counties flanking Interstate 95 and spread west to the Piedmont. As in big cities, users tend to be poor blacks in their teens or 20s who can't afford powder cocaine.

Crack, which takes its name from the "cracking" apart of one rock-hard chunk from another, usually costs about $20 for a tiny bag of two or three chunks, but comes as cheap as $8 a bag. What the buyer gets is an intense high that lasts 15 to 20 minutes.

Last week, Greensboro police say, 20-year-old Christopher Caviness bludgeoned his 45-year-old father, Charles, to death with a lead pipe while the elder Caviness was in bed. Police say Christopher Caviness, who has been charged with murder, killed his father while stealing money to buy more crack during a night-long binge.

Two other Greensboro homicides since Dec. 30 are attributed to crack deals gone sour, police said.

Beginning in spring 1986, chemists in the SBI's drug-testing laboratory tried to list all of their crack cocaine receipts separately from powder cocaine but returned to a single classification in January 1987.

"We stopped when so much of it started to be crack," said Ralph Keaton, an assistant deputy director of the SBI. "It's just mushroomed."

Of about 1,100 drug samples sent to the lab each month, about half are cocaine, and of that portion, typically 20 to 40 are crack, Keaton estimates.

Among the counties sending a disproportionate number of crack cases to the lab: Harnett, Johnston and Nash, all in the east and all temporary homes of large numbers of migrant farm workers during the spring and summer.

"It was introduced here, and I guess a lot of people liked it," said William D. Powell, police chief in the Harnett County town of Dunn since June 1987.

Last year, more than 100 of the 159 drug arrests in the town of 10,000 involved crack.

"I had seen crack only once or twice before I came here. I've seen it so much now I'm sick of it," he said. "I hate to say it, but we almost like to get a marijuana or regular cocaine case. It's like a change of pace."

Guard Injured

RALEIGH (AP) — A guard at the Triangle Correctional Center was injured Sunday afternoon when he was struck by a metal box thrown by an inmate, a Department of Correction official said.

An inmate in the single-cell area of the prison was "making noise and throwing things out of his cell, that sort of thing," said David Guth, a spokesman for the department.

The officer, Joel Holt, was taken to Rex Hospital, where he was being treated Sunday afternoon in the emergency room. A nursing supervisor said no condition report was available because the officer was still being examined.

"He has taken some stitches," Guth said. "He has talked with the unit. He appears to be doing fine. No determination has been made on whether he'll be spending the night."

Martin County Fatality

RALEIGH (AP) — A Jamesville man was among at least 10 people who died in North Carolina traffic accidents during the weekend, the Highway Patrol said.

Joseph Alexander Moore, 51, of Jamesville died Sunday of injuries he suffered Saturday night when he walked into the path of a car on a rural road in Martin County.

Winford Gaskins, 67, of Vanceboro, was killed Friday night when the car in which he was a passenger ran a stop sign and collided with another car on N.C. 102 east of Ayden, the patrol said.

William Frederick Letley Jr., 28, of Knightdale was killed at 6:20 p.m. Saturday when he was struck by two vehicles on a rural road five miles south of Bunn, the patrol said.

James Rivers, 64, of Warsaw was killed Saturday morning when the car he was riding in struck a fire hydrant and tree off a Duplin County road.

Kermit Lee Godfrey Jr., 18, of Sunbury, was killed when the car he was driving ran off U.S. 158 near Sunbury early Saturday and hit a culvert.

In Harnett County, Wesley Mack Wester, 21, of Fuquay-Varina, was killed Saturday night when the car in which he was riding ran off a rural road near Coats and struck a ditch.

Todd Kyle Herring, 17, of Cove City, died Saturday night when his car ran off a rural road in a curve and struck a tree. The accident occurred 14 miles west of Cove City in Craven County.

In an accident in New Jersey, Alice Lorraine Montoya, 50, of Durham and Meredith C. Findlay, 41, of Danbury, Conn., were killed when a stolen car driven by two teen-agers sped the wrong way on Interstate 78 and smashed into their car Friday night, officials said.

In other North Carolina accidents, Henry Roosevelt George, 82, of Chadbourn died at 9:20 p.m. Friday when the car which he had parked on U.S. 74 two miles west of Whiteville was struck by another vehicle, troopers said.

The patrol said Lewis Melvin Harding, 57, of Wagram was killed late Friday night when the car he was driving ran off a state road south of Laurinburg, struck a utility pole and overturned.

The death toll for 1989 stands at 102, compared with 111 at the same time last year.

Hunting Death

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — A 23-year-old Hickory man was fatally shot by a hunting companion while hunting crow with two friends, Catawba County authorities said.

Stewart Franklin Travis was hunting in Catawba's Mountainview community on Saturday, said Capt. Paul Haynes of the Hickory Fire Department.

Travis was kneeling in front of a companion and stood just as the man fired his shotgun around 11 a.m., said Haynes.

Ice Plant Burned

CHARLOTTE (AP) — An abandoned ice plant in Valdese that has been closed for 15 to 20 years was destroyed Sunday by a fire, the cause of which has not determined, authorities say.

The fire broke out about noon at the two-story concrete-block and wood plant, said Valdese Fire Chief Ernest Bertalot.

Firefighters were called to the building at 12:13 p.m. and found smoke and fire rolling out of second-floor windows.

New Cigarette

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. will begin test marketing aromatic Chelsea brand cigarettes in three states in April.

The Winston-Salem tobacco manufacturer is aiming the new product at women and will use scented scratch-and-sniff ads as part of the introduction in Nevada, southern Florida and eastern Pennsylvania.

The sweet scent, which an RJR spokesman likened to a vanilla smell, is released from a new type of rolling paper when the cigarette is lit. Otherwise, the new low-tar brand is like traditional cigarettes.

Poll: Muscovites, Americans See Era Of Good Will

By Gary Langer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A U.S.-Soviet public opinion poll has found good will among residents of Moscow and four American cities, despite fears over their nations' longstanding rivalry.

Majorities in Moscow and in the U.S. cities saw the superpowers as friendly, the survey found, and more than eight in 10 agreed the two nations were entering "a new era of peace and cooperation."

At the same time, nearly four in 10 Muscovites saw the United States as a serious threat to their nation, and as many or more of the Americans saw the Soviets as a threat to the United States, the survey found.

The poll was sponsored by WCVB-TV in Boston, the Detroit Free Press, the Daily News and WBSZ television and radio in New York, and KRON-TV in San Francisco. It was conducted by telephone Dec. 15-25 among approximately 1,000 adults each in Moscow and

New York and about 600 each in Boston, Detroit and San Francisco. It had a 3-point margin of error for the larger samples, 4 for the smaller ones. The results were published last week.

The survey measured social as well as political views, providing for comparisons of the beliefs and lifestyles of the Soviets and Americans in the cities where it was conducted.

Muscovites, for example, were considerably more confident in their government, with 37 percent saying they always can trust it to do what's right. Just 6 percent of the Americans said the same of their government.

But more of the Americans had great pride in their nationality. Depending on the city, about seven in 10 said they were very proud to be Americans. In Moscow, four in 10 were very proud to be Soviets.

The Americans were far more content with the goods and services available to them and more positive about their economy. More than half said their lives had improved in recent years, compared with 37 percent of Muscovites.

Among other findings: —The Moscow residents socialized less frequently than the Americans and were far less likely to eat in restaurants or attend sporting events. Nearly half the Muscovites said they never exercised; no more than a quarter of the Americans said that.

—The Muscovites were far more avid readers than the Americans, with 61 percent saying they sat down to read a book almost daily. That was twice the number of daily readers, for example, in Boston.

—American respondents were more aware of several international figures. Nearly four in 10 of the Muscovites said they had never heard of Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi and a quarter said they had never heard of Pope John Paul II or Ayatollah Khomeini of Iran.

—Far more of the Americans said they had a family member or a friend who had at some time had a drug problem — 26 percent or more, compared with just 3 percent in Moscow. Although more Americans also said someone close to them drank too much, pollsters said the Muscovites could have been holding back on that question because of a government crackdown on alcohol abuse.

—At least two-thirds of the Americans said religion was important in their daily lives, compared with just 13 percent of Muscovites. Eighty percent or more of the Americans in each city believed in God, compared with 10 percent of the Moscow residents.

—Majorities of the Muscovites and Americans alike said the United States offered better health care and was ahead in science and technology. But they also agreed the United States had more discrimination against minorities.

Whatever their nations' differences, at least three-quarters of the Americans in each city said they had a generally favorable impression of the Soviet people. Similarly, eight in 10 Soviets thought well of Americans.

The survey was conducted in the United States by two polling companies, Market Opinion Research and Marttila & Kiley, and in Moscow by the Institute for Sociology, a branch of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, with monitoring by the U.S. pollsters.

Ethics Chief Not Backing Off Dual Role Under Bush

By Carolyn Skorneck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush's point man for ethics policy says he plans to remain chairman of a multimillion-dollar communications company while serving in the White House, a dual role that would have violated Reagan administration policy.

C. Boyden Gray, who has been Bush's counsel since 1981, says he plans to continue serving as chairman of the family-owned company, Atlanta-based Summit Communications Group Inc., although he has asked not to receive any reimbursement for doing so, according to The Washington Post and The New York Times.

Bush has said repeatedly that he wants tougher ethical rules than those he inherited from his predecessor. The White House, through spokesman B.J. Cooper, declined to comment Sunday on Gray's plan.

The Reagan White House had a policy that no White House officials should accept outside earned income or serve on the boards of outside corporations, Frank Q. Nebeker, director of the Office of Government Ethics, said Sunday. This policy was mentioned in a 1983 written advisory opinion by the ethics office that was distributed to all government ethics officials, including Gray, the Times said.

Gray was not bound by those rules when he worked for the vice president, whose policy was more lenient, and he was paid several hundred thousand dollars over the eight years for serving as chairman of the company that owns at least a dozen radio stations and has about 130,000 cable subscribers in the South.

He reported the income on his financial disclosure forms. More recent forms have also disclosed payments for his work as co-executor of the estate of his father, who died in 1982.

Gray told the newspapers that he stopped accepting payment from Summit for his work at the beginning of the year.

"Due to my promotion and due to the policies enunciated by (Bush) during the presidential campaign, I cannot and I will not take outside income and so have instructed the family company," he said.

Bush made a campaign pledge in July that his appointees would not accept any outside income, but he did not address the problem of serving on outside corporations' boards. Last week, Bush appointed an eight-member commission to review government ethical standards, including conflict-of-interest law. Bush has not yet named a White House ethics officer, but Gray has been serving informally in that role since before the inauguration.

Gray, who has an unpublished telephone number, could not be reached for comment Sunday, according to the White House. His deputy, John P. Schmitz, as suffering from back problems and was unavailable, said Schmitz' mother.

Gray told the Post that he has avoided conflict-of-interest problems by recusing himself since 1981 from any matters concerning communications. He also said he had no conflict because he was not Summit's chief executive or operating officer. He said he devoted four to six days a year to overseeing the company.

Ninety-three percent of the company's stock is owned by a trust administered by Gray and his brothers, the Times reported.

Nebeker declined to say what Gray should do about his chairmanship of Summit to meet White House ethics standards, saying: "I'm not prepared to make any suggestions to him at all."

Peter F. Watson, who worked with Gray on presidential transition matters, defended Gray on Sunday.

"All I can say is, during the several meetings I participated in with him and his staff dealing with ethics issues, I have never seen anybody more concerned not only with strict compliance with ethics issues but indeed, nobody was more sensitive as to the appearance issues as well," Watson said.

"Specific communications issues did come up during transition and he immediately advised everyone in the room that he was not to be involved in those issues," said Watson, an attorney who now works for the Overseas Private Investment Corp.

Timothy Muris, who worked on the FCC transition, also attested Sunday to Gray's recusal from communications matters. "Boyden never had any conversations with me about the FCC," he said.

Nebeker said he met with Gray on numerous occasions after the November election and before the inauguration to discuss matters concerning ethics and Gray's financial disclosure.

"I apprised him of the existence of the 15 percent rule," a law under which officials above a certain salary are prohibited from earning an amount equal to more than 15 percent of their government salary in outside earned income such as wages or other compensation, Nebeker said. Interest and dividends are not included.

Blind Students Get A Valuable Lesson In Self Confidence

By Janet McConaughy
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS — Ernestine Morais and her classmates were having as much fun grabbing for beads as anyone at the Carnival parade. But they came for a serious lesson.

"This is one of our biggest confidence builders. Mardi Gras is the ultimate," said Joanne Fernandez, director of the Louisiana Center for the Blind. "If you can travel through a Mardi Gras crowd, you can go through any crowd and you can go to any place."

And even though they couldn't see the gaudy floats or the plastic beads and aluminum doubloons thrown from them, the members of her group were having a blast.

"It's a lot of fun. Time just to cut loose and anything goes," said Ms. Morais, of Central, Calif. "California has nothing on New Orleans. We look like we're throwing a tea party compared to down here."

The 15 students and seven staff members were among thousands braving the cold weather Sunday for the 11 parades that rolled through the New Orleans area.

Crowds surged into the French Quarter between parades, ready to rock on Bourbon Street. Bar and restaurant owners said the chilly weather was helping them by pushing people indoors.

Police expect this will be the city's biggest Mardi Gras, with 1.7 million revelers lining the streets and jamming the French Quarter on Fat Tuesday, the last blowout before the solemn season of Lent. Authorities said 1.5 million people attended the 1988 celebrations.

Despite a misty fog Sunday, the crowd was 10 deep for the popular Bacchus parade, led by comedian Billy Crystal as this year's god of wine and revelry. He threw handfuls of aluminum doubloons to the sea of arms waving beseechingly below, stopping only to pull out a video camera to shoot pictures of the crowd.

It was cloudy and drizzling with temperatures in the 40s, and the National Weather Service predicted slightly colder temperatures for today and Tuesday. Two parades compete tonight with fireworks as Rex, styled King of Carnival by one of New Orleans' oldest parading groups, arrives by riverboat in the French Quarter.

The long Carnival celebration began Saturday, highlighted by the "super parade" of Endymion with celebrity riders — singers Daryl Hall and John Oates and child television star Fred Savage of "The Wonder Years" — on floats.

During the weekend parades, three people were injured, but not seriously, authorities said.

Adams Photos Provide Look At Manzanar Camp

By Robert M. Andrews
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The chance discovery of a cache of nearly forgotten photographs by Ansel Adams has yielded a new book with a haunting insider's view of the internment camps where more than 120,000 Japanese-Americans were held captive during World War II.

The insider was Adams himself, the renowned scenic photographer who left Yosemite National Park with his cameras in the fall of 1943 to visit an internment camp at Manzanar, in the wind-swept desert along the eastern edge of California's Sierra Nevada.

It was there that Adams made his first — and only — attempt to shoot a photo documentary. The photographer, sympathetic to the plight of the innocent inhabitants, published some of the pictures in "Born Free and Equal," a book he later wrote about Manzanar.

But the wartime public's reaction was hostile. Copies were burned in protest, and the photographer's shows were canceled. Adams let the copyright expire, and gave the negatives and hand-signed prints to the Library of Congress in the 1960s.

Not long after Adams' death in 1984, Peter Wright, a news photo editor at The Associated Press in Washington, was spending his day off rummaging through the library's vast collection of original photographs and negatives.

Wright came across a catalogue card listing the negatives of Adams' "Manzanar" pictures. Curious, he asked to see them.

"Up came about a dozen cases of 11-by-14 prints, about 240 of them, all hand-signed by Adams along with the negatives," Wright said.

"It was unbelievable. These pictures had been mentioned in several books about Adams, but I had only seen one or two of the published prints. Suddenly to see the whole collection was amazing."

Now, with access to rare and highly valuable photographs hidden away in a vault at the Library of Congress for two decades, Wright turned to friend John Armor, a constitutional lawyer who has studied the legal controversy over the wartime internment of Japanese-Americans.

Together, they reviewed piles of documents at the National Archives and the Library of Congress — some of them only recently declassified — and wrote a book illustrated with 90 of Adams' photographs from the Manzanar camp.

"Manzanar," containing a lengthy foreword by novelist John Hersey entitled "A Mistake of Terrifically Horrible Proportions," was published last November by Times Books, a division of Random House Inc.

All the principals who contributed to the book felt outrage at what happened to the more than 10,000 Americans of Japanese descent who were rounded up as security risks and shipped to Manzanar in the spring of 1942, a few months after Pearl Harbor.

Thousands more were herded into nine other "relocation centers" in California, Arizona, Utah, Colorado, Wyoming and Arkansas. They were crowded into tarpaper barracks, used communal toilets and had no telephones or automobiles, many of them staying there for 3½ years.

"So much we left behind," said one inmate, "but the most valuable thing I lost was my freedom."

Though invited to Manzanar by the camp director, an old friend, Adams was forbidden to photograph the barbed-wire fences or the guard towers with searchlights and machine guns that surrounded the camp.

Jonathan Segal, editorial director of Times Books, said in a telephone interview from New York that he was "shocked" when he saw Adams' photographs.

"I thought ... what did these people do wrong?" Segal said. "Who had the authority to do this? Where was our moral courage, our American principle of you're innocent until proved guilty?"

In his foreword, Hersey called the government's internment policy "the bitterest national shame of the Second World War for the sweet land of liberty."

Hersey, 74, is the Pulitzer Prize-winning author of "Hiroshima," published in 1946. In an interview from his Key West, Fla., home, Hersey saw no parallel between the United States' atomic bomb attack on that Japanese city and its internment of Japanese-American citizens at home.

Diplomatic Woes Hinder Return Of MIA Remains

By Christopher Callahan
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A year ago, the hopes of families of U.S. servicemen shot down over Cambodia during the Vietnam War were buoyed by Phnom Penh's declaration that it was prepared to hand over the remains of 83 airmen to American officials.

But a diplomatic stalemate, which some congressmen blame largely on State Department inaction, has prevented the return of the bodies and dimmed hopes for a return any time soon.

"They've made these gestures in the last year to turn remains over and so far the good faith hasn't been followed up on," said Rep. John G. Rowland, R-Conn. "There's (the remains of) 80 American soldiers over there ... and we're tripping over bureaucracy."

During a January 1988 trip to Southeast Asia, Reps. Robert C. Smith, R-N.H., Frank McCloskey, D-Ind., and Rowland were told by Tep Henn, Cambodia's ambassador to Vietnam, that the Cambodian government had the bodies of the American servicemen and would return them to U.S. officials. The condition: the administration would have to make the request directly.

The lawmakers lobbied the State Department and enlisted the help of senior legislators, including the late Rep. Bill Nichols, D-Ala., chairman of the House Armed Services investigations subcommittee.

But the administration agreed only to send a message through a third party, the International Red Cross. The United States does not recognize the Cambodian regime of Premier Hun Sen, installed by Vietnam after Pol Pot and his brutal Khmer Rouge regime were driven from power by Vietnamese forces in late 1978.

"We do not have diplomatic relations (with Phnom Penh) and we don't recognize it, so any diplomatic approach would be inappropriate," said Alex Almasov, an east Asian specialist at the State Department.

The congressional critics point to diplomatic contact with Vietnam over soldiers missing-in-action there.

"We don't recognize Vietnam but we're constantly interacting with them," Rowland said. "Half the Congress has been over there" as well as special U.S. emissaries.

"We've picked up remains from Libya and they're not exactly our friends either," he said. "We allowed them to get some political mileage."

While Cambodia is essentially a satellite of Vietnam, diplomatic contact with Phnom Penh is a more delicate matter than dealing with Hanoi, which is largely accepted despite the lack of diplomatic ties.

In Cambodia, three rebel groups including the Khmer Rouge headed by Pol Pot and two others supported by U.S. aid have been fighting to overthrow the Vietnam-installed government. With Vietnam's pledge to withdraw its troops from Cambodia, Hun Sen is desperately seeking legitimacy for his government.

Earlier this year he visited Bangkok for the first time for negotiations with Thai leaders to seek a resolution to the 10-year conflict.

State Department officials fear that the Phnom Penh government would simply use U.S. contact over the MIA issue as a political tool.

"Obviously what the Phnom Penh regime wants from us is some sort of diplomatic approach that would confer some sort of legitimacy on them," Almasov said. "Since we feel the MIA issue is a humanitarian one and since we have made it clear that we are prepared at any time to receive the remains they say they have, we feel they should respond positively."

The GOP congressmen say they are well aware of Hun Sen's political motivations, but they believe that direct contact over the remains alone would not seriously affect American foreign policy in Southeast Asia.

Petty Offenses

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Cutting into line at a bus stop or into a ticket line at a subway or train station is now punishable by fine in South Korea.

So is displaying "visibly unpleasant living things" such as snakes or worms for sale on the street.

The formerly simply discourteous, or distasteful, practices are on a new list of petty offenses — with transgressors subject to an official warning and a $5.75 fine. The new list was released last weekend by the National Assembly and its additions are expected to become law.

Other new offenses include luring customers to buy "supernatural potions" by claiming they can cure and prevent illness.

Also new to the list of 21 petty offenses is disobeying officials in times of emergency, such as a snowstorm, fire or traffic accident, and neglecting one's duty for public safety, such as making sure street lamps are turned on.

Turning off lights at public gatherings and failing to repair a house that is dangerous to passersby, or a structure that may fall over, will draw also fines.

Cleric Says Militias Banned Kidnapping

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Rival Moslem militias in Lebanon have banned the kidnapping of foreigners as part of a peace pact, a senior Shiite Moslem cleric was quoted as saying.

Sheik Abdel Amir Kaban, the Shiites' top religious judge, was quoted by the conservative daily newspaper al-Anwar Sunday as saying the agreement was part of a pact signed by the mainstream Amal militia and the fundamentalist Hezbollah group in Damascus, Syria last week.

"It is impermissible for anyone from now on to kidnap any foreigner, because the accord calls for preserving the United Nations peacekeeping forces and the foreign humanitarian organizations," Kaban was quoted as saying.

"Foreigners should have a role in Lebanon," he said.

One of the hostages is U.S. Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins, who was kidnapped Feb. 17, 1988 while serving as chief of an observer group attached to U.N. peacekeeping forces in Lebanon.

The Damascus peace accord halted a nine-month war between the pro-Syrian Amal and the Iranian-backed Hezbollah, or Party of God, in which more than 500 people were killed.

The two factions were fighting for dominance of Lebanon's 1 million Shiites, who make up the country's largest single sect.

Kaban, who heads Amal's religious affairs department, was a member of its delegation at the Damascus talks.

He was quoted as saying the Damascus talks did not address the fate of the 15 foreigners missing and believed held hostage in Lebanon.

So A Chiropractor is Really A Family Doctor?
Yes.

HERE'S WHY... Most people think of doctors of chiropractic as specialists in treating health problems of the back and spine. And they are, for chiropractors have been extremely effective in relieving pain and getting people back on their feet without drugs or surgery.

But doctors of chiropractic do more. They diagnose to determine whether other illnesses may be related to structural problems, which often is the case.

Chiropractors take an interest in your total health and well-being. And if a problem is indicated which requires specialized treatment, the doctor of chiropractic will refer you to the appropriate health specialist.

You can depend on your chiropractor as a health advisor for every member of your family.

A Well-Dressed Rocker Links Up In 'Chain Mail'

By Jeannine Stein
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — What will the well-dressed rocker be seen in next year? Jeans are tired, leather chaps are de classe and leopard-print spandex is too early '80s.

The latest in strut-your-stuff gear is — chain mail.

Once the stylish material for bellicose knights, chain mail has made a comeback, albeit centuries later (with brief resurgences in the '60s and mid-'70s).

One person responsible for its reappearance is Michael Schmidt, a 25-year-old rock 'n' roll zealot and former jewelry designer who turns chain links into body-clinging dresses, skirts, bathing suits and ornamentation on leather pants, patent leather coats and leather and jeans jackets.

His selective clientele includes Cher, rockers Iggy Pop, Jon Bon Jovi and the Cult, for whom he is designing a line of clothes for their upcoming tour. His clothes sell for $1,500 to $1,800 here, and they also are sold in New York.

Schmidt discovered chain mail years ago while researching a line of pre-Edwardian jewelry.

"I thought it was really interesting," he says while dangling his long legs from a perch on a plywood table in his laboratory, where he and two full-time assistants transform aluminum wire into chain-mail links.

"I had seen chain mail before, but it didn't strike me at the time as being feasible," Schmidt says, brushing back wisps of long brown hair from his angular face. "But since I had been doing jewelry, and I had worked enough with metal and did fine design work, I knew I could figure out intricate patterns."

He concedes, however, that at first he was "very naive" about the process: "I was working in brass and doing very small links, so it ended up being heavy and time-consuming. It didn't hold up very well and eventually fell apart. But I knew I was onto something cool. It made immediate sense to me, and metal as a fabric wasn't being done."

Eventually Schmidt found the time and the money to invest in perfecting the chain-mail links and the linking designs that he turns into dresses (worn with a fabric sheath underneath) and details on outerwear and pants.

"It's such a great fabric," he rhapsodizes, "but it shouldn't work. It shouldn't work but it does, and it's so cool — cool because the mesh expands and contracts around the contours of the body."

He picks up a copy of the French Harper's Bazaar and flips it open to a spread of the latest collection of Paco Rabanne designs. They are dresses done in chain mail and metal.

"Paco Rabanne did it in the '60s, and the interesting thing is, he's doing it again," says Schmidt, who calls Rabanne "the master, the genius. He's a forerunner of this thing, and the fact that he's doing it again acknowledges that there are possibilities for it."

Born and raised in Kansas City,

Schmidt says he has been designing clothes since high school, when he made his prom date's dress.

"It was gold lame and black," he recalls, laughing, "and I thought it was quite fabulous at the time. I was always into fashion and I was always into rock 'n' roll."

His chain-mail dresses were featured in a store window one fateful night two years ago when Cher happened to walk by.

She bought one, and Schmidt's life hasn't been the same since.

Through Cher, Schmidt met rocker Jon Bon Jovi, and through other connections ("It's an incredibly small world, it's tiny") he hooked up with Iggy Pop and INXS. Also wearing Schmidt's chain-mail designs are Kim Basinger, Elton John and Ozzy Osbourne. Five months ago, he opened a studio in Los Angeles after he realized that he would be closer to the entertainment industry on the West Coast.

His modus operandi for clothing a band goes like this: "Usually the band has very specific ideas of what they want — a great pair of leather jeans, and I do special things, too, like detachable linings, so they can wash them on the road. But I don't inject any of my ideas first."

"Once they're confident that I'm not out to make them look different from what they're comfortable with, and the quality is good, and we have a rapport, then I start easing them into a direction I think would be good for them. I don't dictate, but I do suggest," he says. "I can work only with people to whom I respond to musically. I'm sort of an elitist that way. And I prefer at this point to stay small and exclusive and have to be sought out, as opposed to being everywhere."

Schmidt has plans for expanding his line of rock 'n' roll gear and is experimenting with leathers, fine metal mesh and a smaller chain link.

He takes a swatch of shimmering black metal fabric and holds it under the light. "Isn't that beautiful?" he says. "Cher would look great in that."

Most of his clients, Schmidt says, "have really great style, like Cher, and Ian Asbury of the Cult. I'm trying to bring everyone back to where the music is the outstanding part and the clothes are sort of the backdrop. As wild as my things seem, they're not really. I think they bring out the wildness in a performer."

Teen Scared By Child With Crush

Dear Abby: I've been helping a friend do some carpentry work at his house lately, and I've noticed that his 8-year-old daughter has a crush on me. I'm 18, so the most attention I paid to her was to let her help me with some small jobs and engage in some man-to-kid conversations during the breaks.

Today, while I was bent down tying my shoestrings, she grabbed me around the neck and tried to kiss me! I quickly pulled away by standing up and getting out of her reach and went right back to work.

Other girls have had crushes on me and got rather aggressive, but I've never had a girl this young come on to me the way this girl did. Now I worry that one day she might do this to the wrong guy, and, for want of a better word, get herself raped.

I think nature is sending this little girl mixed signals, and I don't know whether to tell her parents or to tell her myself. I don't want to get her in trouble with her parents, but I'm not sure it's my place to tell her what could happen to her if she tries to kiss the wrong guy. What is your advice? — Concerned

Dear Abby

Dear Concerned: First tell her that you think she's a nice little girl, and you were quite upset when she tried to kiss you because she could get into a lot of trouble with that kind of behavior. Tell her that you don't have time to explain the danger of that kind of conduct, but you are going to ask her parents to have a talk with her. Then tell her parents.

This child doesn't need punishment — she needs to be warned. Please take my advice. If she were your child, I'm sure you'd want her to know.

Dear Abby: I had to write and tell you about my story of love and forgiveness. I am white and my wife is black. Fifteen years ago, when we got married, my mother disowned me and cursed my wife's existence. She never acknowledged any of my three children. She just cut me out of her life as though I had died.

Two and a half years ago, my mother was stricken with a debilitating form of cancer, and it was obvious that she would have to go to a nursing home. Although there are five of us siblings in the family, none of the other four volunteered to take her. My wife came forward and said no one in her family would go to a nursing home as long as we had a home.

At first it wasn't easy, but my wife and mother eventually developed a very special relationship. When my mother couldn't dress herself, my wife dressed her, and when Mom couldn't feed herself, my wife fed her. During those two years, my wife never complained.

Mom told my wife many times how sorry she was for all the years she wasted. Best of all, our children grew to know and love their grandmother before she died. I feel very blessed. Sign me ... Blessed In The Midwest

Dear Blessed: Your letter calls to mind that wonderful definition of "forgiveness" by George Roemisch: "Forgiveness is the fragrance of the violet which still clings fast to the heel that crushed it."

CARPET NOT STAIN RESISTANT?... NO WORRY!

No doubt you've heard of the revolutionary new stain-resist carpet; but, as luck would have it, your new carpet was purchased just before "stain-resist" came on the market. Probably has something to do with Murphy's law...

So what do you do now? Suffer in silence while your neighbor brags about the spilled cup of Kool Aid that didn't stain HER new carpet?... hand out extra napkins to all your dinner guests?... ban all three-year-olds who drink Kool Aid and fruit juice from your home?... How about practicing some of those dramatic diving saves you've seen made by that lovely (if not overly conscientious) homemaker on TV?...

NO! Now there's Master-series™ from Du Pont. That's right: the same people who gave you Stainmaster™ carpet have come up with an exciting new treatment to make most non-stain-resistant nylon carpet virtually stain proof! And it not only works on your nylon carpet, it also provides high levels of stain protection on those easy-to-stain woods.

It's available only through trained, licensed professional cleaners (refer to the phone number at the bottom, if your wondering who!), and it can be applied following our normal, thorough, extraction cleaning process. Upon drying, voila - your carpet's now stain-resistant!...

And now YOU can brag!

A corrective hair treatment deals with the hair shaft, not the scalp. Dry and damaged hair can be greatly improved by conditioners. Hair treatments are especially beneficial and extremely important when given approximately a week or 10 days before, and a week or 10 days after, a permanent wave, tint, lightener, toner, or chemical hair straightening treatment.

Bush May Ask Taxpayers To Share Costs

that would free up several billion dollars of taxpayer money, which could be spent without adding to the budget deficit, a government source said.

Another financing problem is how to sell the bonds without inflating the government's already huge $2.7 trillion national debt.

Lessons Learned

Other model clinical program grants have been given to Appalachian State and N.C. State universities, the University of North Carolina at Asheville, UNC-Chapel Hill and UNC-Charlotte.

This is the first year of the program at ECU, which is being funded through a $57,000 grant, Ms. Lewis said.

The 18 ECU students participating in the ECU program "are placed in classrooms in the Pitt County schools with mentor teachers," Dr. Beverly Swanson, director of the program at ECU, said.

"The goal of the project is to develop collaboration between the public schools and the university," she said. "Planning and implementation of the program has been collaborative."

For example, the students may participate in a theory and philosophy seminar at the university about how to group students, and they may get hands-on experience in the process within the public school, Dr. Swanson said.

The students took classes at ECU and worked in the classrooms during the fall semester. During this semester, they're spending most of the time in the classrooms. School and on-campus seminars are being taught by university and school teachers to follow up and reflect on classroom experiences.

"Another guiding principle of the program is to empower teachers, to give them power in the classroom to train teachers," she said.

It is the professional responsibility of teachers to help students learn teaching skills, Ms. Williams said. "I think (the program) has worked very well."

While students in the traditional student-teacher program are in the classroom for only 10 weeks before graduating, the students in the Model Teaching Program are in the classrooms for a full year.

"These students will teach so much more. It will help make their first year of teaching so much easier, and it'll make it easier on their students during the first year," Ms. Williams said.

Ms. Mayo said she teaches a couple of classes each day, building toward teaching a full day.

The public school teachers, who volunteered to be mentors and were chosen by their principals, were trained in clinical supervision this summer. Other Pitt County schools participating in the program are Elmhurst, Pactolus and G.R. Whitfield. Each school receives $200 per student teacher, Ms. Lewis said.

"The students are provided quality field experience (in a year) in contrast to the traditional program where they only spend 10 weeks in the classroom," Dr. Swanson said.

"It's an outstanding experience for these young people," Ms. Lewis said. For example, the students will be presented a lecture from a representative in the state Department of Public Instruction on how the department is structured, and local public school personnel has presented information on services available to teachers. The students also have toured the school system's central office.

In addition, Ms. Mayo said she will spend time with Principal Clarence Gray and other school administrators to become more familiar with their roles.

"The traditional student teacher simply goes out to the schools 10 weeks and teaches 10 days," Ms. Lewis said. "We're trying to close the gap of perceived deficiencies of public school teachers."

The students volunteered for the program, which requires a flexible daytime schedule, transportation and the ability to professionally dress. They are not paid for the work with money or academic credits at ECU, but "the experience is worth it," Ms. Mayo said.

airport were accompanied by truckloads of soldiers in combat gear.

Stroessner did not acknowledge the crowd and made no final gesture.

Stroessner flew to Campinas, 290 miles southwest of Rio de Janeiro, then took a Brazilian air force plane to the rural town of Itumbiara, 800 miles northwest of Rio, a Brazilian Foreign Ministry communique said.

The deposed dictator, accompanied by a son and daughter-in-law, three security guards, a Brazilian diplomat and 12 aides, was staying in a guest house owned by the government-run Furnas electric company, the communique said.

Brazilian Ambassador Orlando Carbonar told The Associated Press that his nation granted Stroessner asylum on humanitarian grounds. Stroessner owns a beachfront mansion in the Atlantic coastal resort of Guaratuba.

The new government quickly promised democratic reforms, including allowing opposition parties to participate in elections.

Foreign Minister Luis Maria Argana told reporters Sunday the government would issue a decree "within a few days" dissolving the two-house Congress, and would call for presidential and legislative elections within three months.

One opposition leader suggested that elections be delayed because his group and others needed time to organize to have any chance of defeating the entrenched Colorado Party, which has been in power since 1940.

"If Gen. Rodriguez is realistic, he should stay in power for a minimum of two years and make changes in the electoral law that will permit the organization of parties, and then call elections on the basis of equality," said Fernando Levi Rufinelli of the Liberal Party.

Under current law, the ruling Colorado Party is guaranteed two-thirds control of Congress, with the remaining third split between the two other political parties recognized by the former government.

The death toll from last week's coup has been estimated at up to 300, but no official figures have been given.

SENSIBLE RULES
CLEVELAND, Miss. (AP) — Mike Robbins, the coach of a Little League baseball team here, has some rules for his players that are being held up as a model code for young athletes.

- 1 — Never criticize a teammate. Win or lose together.
- 2 — Do not belittle anyone on the opposing team. Try to treat your opponents as friends.
- 3 — Do not argue with or make derogatory remarks to the umpires. Remember it's your performance that determines the outcome of a game.

A way around that is to cover the principal of the bonds with several billion dollars in retained earnings at the regional Federal Home Loan Banks, which are owned by the industry. That way, only the annual interest paid on the bonds would be "on-budget."

As a way of easing the pressure to push more of the cost onto financial institutions, bank officials are pushing the notion that any spending from general revenue should be exempt from Gramm-Rudman budget deficit limits, because the S&L problem developed over a period of years.

However the money is raised, Congress and the administration are sure to assume more control over how it is spent. Members of Congress have complained bitterly about S&L regulators' power to write promissory notes committing the government to vast expenditures that the regulators cannot pay — in effect writing checks that Congress later will be forced to cover with appropriations.

The plan, at least before the weekend session, called for the FDIC to assume control of both the S&L insurance fund and the fund to liquidate the 350 remaining insolvent S&Ls.

A separate oversight board, perhaps headed by the Treasury secretary and including congressional appointees, would give the administration and Congress much more direct control of S&L rescues.

Richard C. Breeden, Bush's key adviser on S&Ls, has been pushing strongly to move what's left of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board into the Treasury Department, giving the administration much more direct control over S&L regulation.

That's similar to the system for commercial banks, where the regulatory agency, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, is part of the Treasury.

Other likely recommendations would require S&L owners to put up more of their own money, force S&Ls to keep more cash reserves for liquidity, limit the amount they can loan to a single borrower and more strictly control who can buy or start an S&L.

Chief Is Charged

Thompson is accused of firing a high-powered rifle between 10:15 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. into the home of Charlie and Mavis Whitaker and their son, Kenny, at the Church's Crossroads community.

Mrs. Whitaker said she was in bed in a back bedroom at the time and her son was not at home. She said her husband, 57, had just walked past a picture window in the den, which was hit by one of the bullets.

Another bullet shattered a window of an unoccupied front bedroom. Other blasts tore into bricks on the front of the house and hit five cars and a truck parked near the house, investigators said.

Whitaker told investigators he found nine places on his house that were hit and he found 15 empty cartridges on the road about 50 feet in front of his house. He said estimates of damage are $835 to vehicles and $15,480 to his house.

Mrs. Whitaker said that witnesses in the area at the time said they saw a red and white pickup truck with two men in the back and "at least a driver" in the front. Thompson, a Williamston resident whose parents live in the same community as the Whitakers, owns a red pickup truck.

Whitaker told investigators that there has been a long-running dispute over property lines between his farm and adjacent property owned by Thompson's family. "But that line was run several years ago," he said, "and I never had any serious words with his daddy about it. It was just a matter of having some surveyors find out where the line really was, instead of depending on a 'tree to tree' line like people used to do."

The sheriff, who said investigation has been constant since Christmas Eve, said he was "surprised, very surprised" when his office's joint investigation with the State Bureau of Investigation began to point to Thompson as a suspect.

He said Thompson has made no statement and posted the $1,000 bond required of him immediately after the arrest. He would not comment on who he believes the others said to have been in the truck were, but did say that the investigation is "still open."

Williamston Mayor Thomas Brandon III acted Friday night to relieve Thompson of his police chief duties. Williamston commissioners are scheduled to act further on the matter in a 7:30 p.m. meeting today.

Police Capt. Curtis Roberson of Williamston was named acting chief Friday.

Williamston City Manager John Boykin said this morning that there is a possibility that Thompson will tender his resignation before or during tonight's commissioners' meeting. Thompson has worked in the Williamston Police Department since he was 22 years old. His salary as chief is about $24,000 a year, Mayor Brandon said.

Whitaker said he understands the gun used in the incident may have been owned by the town of Williamston and issued to the Williamston Police Department.

Sheriff Rogers did not comment on ownership of the gun, but did say it has been confiscated.

USC football coach Joe Morrison died of a heart attack

Morrison Dies Of Heart Attack

By Rick Scoppe
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — South Carolina coach Joe Morrison, who brought the Gamecocks into the national spotlight with success on the football field and controversy off it, died of a heart attack Sunday after playing racquetball with three friends. He was 51.

Morrison had been playing racquetball at Williams-Brice Stadium for about a half hour with defensive coordinator Joe Lee Dunn, attorney Edward "Punky" Holler and businessman Ken Wheat before he suffered what Providence Hospital spokeswoman Dawn Catalano called a "massive heart attack."

Morrison, who had a history of heart problems, was taken to Providence, arriving at 8:44 a.m. but unconscious. He was pronounced dead at 9:04 p.m., Catalano said.

Morrison was not feeling any pain but did have a "small, funny sensation near his elbow" after playing racquetball, Athletic Director King Dixon said. But when the players shook hands they noticed Morrison's hands were "awfully cold," Dixon said.

Dunn called trainer Terry Lewis, who in turn contacted a team doctor, who checked Morrison's pulse and heartbeat, Dixon said.

"I think they were well within the range when the doctor got there. But they prevailed upon Joe to spend the night in the hospital to have a complete check, which Joe agreed to," Dixon said.

First, however, Morrison decided to take a shower. But during the shower, he collapsed. He was found there by one or more of his playing partners, who began performing cardiopulmonary resuscitation on the coach, Catalano said.

Morrison, a smoker, underwent a surgical procedure for removal of a blockage in a coronary artery in March 1985.

Dixon said Morrison, who had been on the road recruiting almost constantly since the season ended, had been sick about a week ago with a flu or virus that had left him "feeling awfully weak."

"Coach Joe Lee Dunn said he had never seen Joe feel so badly in his life physically," Dixon said.

Morrison, who played in the NFL for the football Giants from 1959 to 1972 as a running back and an end, came to South Carolina after previous coaching stints at both Tennessee-Chattanooga and New Mexico. Morrison's career record was 101-72-7 over 16 seasons.

He was 39-28-2 in six seasons at South Carolina, including 8-4 in 1988, when he took the Gamecocks to the Liberty Bowl, where they lost to Indiana 34-10. South Carolina has never won a bowl game, losing all eight it has played.

The season was a controversial one, however. The Gamecocks faltered near the end, losing four of their last six games. That came on the heels of allegations by former Gamecock defensive lineman Tommy Chaikin.

Death Of Joe Morrison Shocks S.C.

By Rick Scoppe
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — South Carolina coach Joe Morrison was a "giant" in the coaching profession who quietly went about the business of putting winning teams on the field, Athletic Director King Dixon says.

Dixon and others at the university were stunned by Morrison's death Sunday night. Morrison, 51, died of a heart attack after playing racquetball with defensive coordinator Joe Lee Dunn and two other friends.

"I can't believe it. I would say our entire athletic department is in a state of shock," Dixon said during an interview this morning. "When a giant comes across your life and all of a sudden disappears without any warning, it leaves you in a state of shock."

University President James B. Holderman called Morrison's death was a "tragic loss."

"He brought great distinction to our football program in the six years with the university," Holderman said. "He was a good friend and a valued and treasured member of the Carolina community."

"He did as much if not more than anyone else in the history of Carolina football to put it on the map. He brought it to national rankings. ... He had more bowl seasons invitations than anybody else."

Dunn, obviously upset, said Morrison "had been a dear friend for 16 years."

"He was like a brother," he said. Dunn declined further comment but did ask a reporter to call him at his office this morning.

Clemson coach Danny Ford said Morrison was more than just a coach.

"Certainly the many friends that he made during a colorful professional career as well as in the coaching ranks will agree that he touched many young people during their formative years, and they will be better people for it," Ford said.

Monday Notebook:

"We felt like if we could hold Blue Edwards to his average, we'd have a chance to win," Richmond coach Dick Tarrant said after Saturday night's game with East Carolina.

The Spiders did hold him to 21 points, five below his average, and — for them more importantly — they won, 56-54.

"That's a man-child," Tarrant said of Edwards. "He's a man among boys."

The Spiders were the last team to hold Edwards below 20 points on his roll through his senior year. He scored only 16 points against the Spiders in Richmond, but has averaged 26 a game since then, with a low of 21 and a high of 36.

And Tarrant has joined the growing list of those who have praised him as a true candidate for the Colonial Athletic Association's Player of the Year.

Ballots for that and other conference honors were mailed out this past week and will be returned just before the CAA's tournament in Hampton, Va. Edwards has seven more games to prove that the honor is his.

Going into Saturday's game with the Spiders, Edwards was the top scorer in the conference and 10th in the nation, averaging 26.0 per game. He also leads the Pirates in blocked shots, 3-point field goal percentage and rebounds. He is second on the team in steals, field goal percentage and assists.

He's already been Player of the Week twice, and he's scored 30 or more in seven games. Only three times has he been held below 20 and his low output was 10 against Duke.

By the end of this year, he could be the school's single season scoring leader, will become the 16th Pirate to score 1,000 points, but only the second to do it in two years. He could also end up as the top career percentage shooter and be in the top 10 in career steals and blocked shots and might even make the top 10 in career assists.

Charles Bloom, ECU's sports information director, likes to work with statistics, and he's come up with some that show Edwards' worth.

The first category is for total offense. It adds a player's total points plus his assists times two (each assist leads to at least a two-point basket). Then, the total from that is divided by the team's total output to see what percentage of points the player is responsible for.

Edwards, with 494 points (prior to Saturday), had 53 assist for a total of 600 points, 43.6 percent of ECU's total. Closest to him in the CAA was UNC-Wilmington's Antonio Howard with 34.8 percent.

Bloom's second category is for offensive productivity. It adds points per minute played, rebounds per minute played, assists per minute, less turnovers per minute.

Edwards' total in this is 100.2 while American's Ron Draper is second with 95.2 and George Mason's Kenny Sanders is third with 86.1.

Edwards, in the last CAA statistical release, was present in five categories, more than any other player in the conference, Bloom adds.

Stats are great, I guess, but I know what I've seen too. I've seen Edwards play 13 times this year. I haven't seen everyone in the conference, but I've seen most of the "biggies."

No contest. When the time comes, my ballot for CAA Player of the Year will read "Blue Edwards."

Duke Tops Irish Win Helps Blue Devils' Recovery

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Duke's thrashing of Notre Dame may have awakened the Blue Devils from a nightmarish two weeks.

"It was really good to win, because we've had a tough couple of weeks," said forward Danny Ferry after No. 12 Duke's 102-80 victory Sunday over Notre Dame.

Duke, 15-4, stifled a second-half threat by Notre Dame, 12-4, then produced a scoring streak that put the game out of reach.

"For the first time this year, I thought we played a good 40 minutes of basketball," said Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski.

Ferry ignited the streak with a 4-point play and added seven more before the 20-2 run stifled a Notre Dame rally and left the Irish trailing 78-56.

Duke had lost four of its last five games, scoring less than 80 points in each defeat and tumbling from the No. 1 ranking. Early in the second half, it appeared the Blue Devils might be in trouble again.

Notre Dame rallied from a 16-point halftime deficit with 12 unanswered points, four from LaPhonso Ellis, to open the half.

"Our backs were against the wall," said Jamere Jackson, who scored 20 for Notre Dame. "We knew if we didn't come out fighting in the second half, then the game would have been over the first two or three minutes."

Ferry found himself sitting on the Top Prep Players In Region Await National Signing Date

CHARLOTTE — Chuckie Burnette and Tyrone Gibson will be on opposite sides of the line in Atlantic Coast Conference football wars, but for now they stand together as the top college football prospects in the Carolinas.

Burnette, a 6-0, 180-pound quarterback, passed Burlington Cummings to the state 3-A high school championship last fall. Gibson, a 6-3, 220-pound linebacker, led Hartsville to its second straight South Carolina 4-A Division II title.

On Wednesday, they are expected to sign national letters of intent with rival ACC schools. Burnette is expected to go to North Carolina, where he will be called on to help breathe new life into a program that has had just one winning season in the last five years. Gibson reportedly will sign with Clemson, where he hopes to carry on the Tigers' rich tradition of tough defense and ACC championships.

Most of the top players in the two states have received national recognition. Among the top five are two Parade magazine All-Americans — wide receivers Pedro Cherry of Bertie and Julius Reese of Mount Tabor, second-team USA Today All-American offensive lineman Mark Dixon of Ragsdale and defensive lineman Eric Swann of Western Harnett.

Among South Carolina's best are Stacy Seegars of Andrew Jackson plans to join Gibson at Clemson. Ernest Dye of Greenwood, Chris Mazzyk of Lower Richland and Jonathan Perry of Orangeburg have not made oral commitments.

Burnette will leave Cummings with the state record book in tow, owning career marks for passing yards (6,473), attempts (693), completions (408) and touchdown passes (52). He threw for a record 3,240 yards last season, including 310 in the state championship game.

"I think if Chuckie continues to grow and learn as he did here at Cummings, his potential is unbelievable," said Cummings coach David Gutshall. "He has all the tools, a strong arm, quick release, tremendous accuracy, great vision and quick feet."

Cavs Romp Hornets For The Third Time

By Paul Nowell

CHARLOTTE — The Cleveland Cavaliers gave the expansion Charlotte Hornets Hard Lesson No. 3 on Sunday on what it takes to win in the NBA.

Led by Ron Harper's 25 points and Brad Daugherty's 23 points and nine rebounds, the Cavaliers routed the outmanned Hornets for the third time this season, 110-91.

The Cavaliers also beat the Hornets by 40 points on opening night and by 24 on Dec. 28 in Cleveland. Their victory Sunday improved their record to 34-10, tops in the league.

"There's no mystery about it — they are for real," said Charlotte forward Kelly Tripucka.

With 7-foot-1 center Daugherty scoring almost at will from the inside and guards Harper and Mark Price hitting consistently from the outside, the Cavs took a 30-point lead early in the second half by outscoring the Hornets 33-13 over a nine-minute stretch.

The Hornets, who trailed the entire game, were never able to get any closer than 14 points as all five Cleveland starters scored in double figures.

"It's a great group," said Cleveland coach Lenny Wilkens, who will coach the Eastern Conference in next week's NBA All-Star Game. "They like each other and they work hard all the time."

It should be no surprise that Wilkens will be bringing three of his

Charlotte Imposter Is Nabbed

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — A man who walked into the Charlotte locker room Sunday before the Hornets game against the Cleveland Cavaliers was arrested after he tried to put on Rickey Green's uniform.

Charlotte forward Kelly Tripucka said he first believed the man was a reporter.

"After about five minutes, he moved over to Rickey's locker and he started getting undressed. I was laughing at him. I said, 'What's this guy doing?' Nobody knows him and he's got his pants off," Tripucka told The Gaston Gazette.

Tripucka said the man then began looking through Green's bag, and Tripucka then called for Terry Kofler, the Hornets trainer, who asked the man what he was doing.

"He said, 'See this, it says Green. That's who I am,'" Tripucka quoted the man as saying. "Then he said, 'Can I have a pair of seven-and-a-halfs (basketball shoes).'"

Security officers and Charlotte police were then called in. Edward Paula, 27, of Wilmington, N.C., was arrested for trespassing, and was later released on an unsecured bond.

"I just wanted to make sure he didn't have a gun," Tripucka said. "When he had his pants off, I could see he was unarmed."

Cleveland guard Mark Price said the man spoke to him as police led him away.

"I saw them take him out and he said to me, 'Price, I'm going to shut you down,'" Price said.

"He was determined to get dressed and get ready for the game," Tripucka said. "The sad thing is we probably could have used him."

The Hornets lost 110-91.

Speculation On OSU's Sanders' Future

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Heisman Trophy winner Barry Sanders said Sunday night he has made a decision about whether he will return to Oklahoma State for his senior season but declined to say what that decision was.

"I'm not discussing that right now," Sanders told The Associated Press by telephone from Stillwater, Okla.

The Dallas Morning News reported Sunday that Sanders, a junior, has told one NFL team that he definitely would turn professional. Since Sanders has never redshirted, he would not be eligible for the regular NFL draft this spring. However, he could apply for the summer supplemental draft.

Sanders, who set national records last season by rushing for 2,628 yards and scoring 39 touchdowns, previously had said he had no intention of leaving Oklahoma State even though the Cowboys recently were placed on four years probation by the NCAA.

Asked whether it was unfair to say that he was wavering on his original statement that he would return, Sanders said, "It's unfair to make any opinions or speculation on it."

Asked when he would make a decision, he said, "I've already made it."

Oklahoma State coach Pat Jones, contacted at his home Sunday night, said he has been too busy with recruiting to discuss the matter with Sanders in recent weeks.

Jordan Will Sit Out NBA Dunk Contest

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Michael Jordan, winner of the last two NBA slam dunk contests on All-Star weekend, said Sunday he will not compete in Saturday's event in Houston.

Jordan said a knee sprain he suffered on Jan. 24 still is causing some swelling, although the injury didn't make him miss any games.

Jordan, who leads in the NBA in scoring and steals, will play in the All-Star Game next Sunday in Houston, but doctors said the extra pounding his legs take in a slam-dunk contest make his participation too risky.

If Jordan were taking part, it would have been the first time the champions in every previous slam-dunk contest have faced each other.

Spud Webb, Dominique Wilkins and Larry Nance are scheduled to compete. Webb won in 1986, Wilkins in 1985 and Nance in 1984.

Nance has not competed since he defeated Julius Erving at Denver.

ASU Guard Phillips Lost Indefinitely

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Appalachian State junior guard Kemp Phillips suffered a chipped bone in his right ankle during practice Sunday and will be lost for an indefinite period, school officials say.

Phillips, who had started 63 straight games, was averaging 11.6 points per game, and was the Mountaineers' second leading scorer.

Appalachian State sports information director Rick Covington said Phillips injured his ankle during a practice at the Tennessee-Chattanooga Arena, where the Mountaineers were preparing for a conference basketball game with the Moccasins on Monday night.

"He just came down on it wrong," Covington said. "We won't know how long he'll be out until the orthopedic surgeon sees him in Boone."

Sawyers' Defection Kills Petty Piece

LEVEL CROSS, N.C. (AP) — Count Richard Petty as one of the casualties of Diane Sawyer's defection from CBS to ABC.

A "60 Minutes" segment on Petty hosted by Sawyer and scheduled to be aired Feb. 12 apparently has been scrapped, according to Petty.

Petty said that he was informed Friday morning by a 60 Minutes executive that the segment, which has been in production for about six months, had been pulled in the wake of Sawyer's signing with the rival network.

"As far as I know it's off right now," Petty said. "Since she's gone over to ABC, they said they don't want to show anything with her involved."

While Sawyer had completed her involvement with the Petty segment, production and editing crews were putting the finishing touches on the piece, according to Petty.

"Steve Sheppard, the guy who was producing it, said they were going to go ahead and finish the show and tape it for us," Petty said.

While the segment apparently will not be shown on 60 Minutes, Petty said Sheppard told him there is a possibility that portions of it could be re-edited and used as a CBS Sports feature, possibly during the network's telecast of the Daytona 500 on Feb. 19.

Mariners Come To Terms With Bradley

SEATTLE (AP) — The Seattle Mariners have come to terms with catcher Scott Bradley on a one-year contract, the Mariners said Saturday.

The contract is worth $290,000, a raise of $130,000 over last season, The Associated Press learned. Bradley, who played for the North Carolina Tar Heels, had asked for $330,000 and the American League club offered $225,000.

In addition, Bradley can make $30,000 in incentives: $10,000 each for reaching 85 games and 300 plate appearance, 100 games and 350 plate appearances, and 130 games and 455 plate appearances.

Bradley, 28, batted .257 in 103 games last season, with 335 at-bats and 86 hits, including four home runs and 33 RBI.

U.S. Completes Sweep Of Paraguay

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Already assured of victory in its first-round Davis Cup match with Paraguay, the United States completed a 5-0 sweep with a pair of singles victories Sunday.

Andre Agassi defeated Francisco Gonzalez 6-2, 6-4 and Michael Chang beat Hugo Chapacu 5-7, 6-0, 6-1.

Ken Flach and Robert Seguso swept Gonzalez and Victor Pecci 6-1, 6-3, 6-4 in a doubles match on Saturday to clinch the victory, which avenged a 1987 loss to Paraguay in Asuncion. The U.S. will face France in the quarterfinals in San Diego.

In other first-round world group matches: Sweden beat Italy 4-1, Spain edged Mexico 3-2, France defeated Israel 4-1, Austria blanked Australia 5-0, West Germany blanked Indonesia 5-0, Czechoslovakia defeated Soviet Union 4-1 and Yugoslavia beat Denmark 4-1.

Other quarterfinal pairings are: Sweden vs. Austria, West Germany vs. Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia vs. Spain.

Breland, Starling Take Welterweight Titles

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Marlon Starling of New York and Mark Breland of Hartford, Conn., each captured welterweight titles at the Caesars Palace Sports Pavilion Saturday night.

Starling, 44-5-1, stopped Lloyd Honeyghan of Britain at 1:19 of the ninth round and became the World Boxing Council champion. Honeyghan is now 33-2.

Breland, 23-1-1, became the Boxing Association champion for the second time when he stopped Lee Seung-Soon of South Korea at 54 seconds of the first round.

Starling and Breland will face each other in April or May. Starling won the WBA title with an 11-round knockout of Breland in 1987 and kept it when he and Breland fought a draw last April 16. Starling lost the title on July 29 to Thomas Molineras, who relinquished the title in January.

Court Action Could Help Raleigh

RALEIGH (AP) — Raleigh city attorney Thomas A. McCormick Jr. says action by either the U.S. Supreme Court or Congress could remove the antitrust exemption for baseball, which could help the city's chances of winning a fight against the Durham Bulls.

"The exemption was judicially made and never acted on by Congress," he said. "And judges can reverse their rules."

It is unclear whether the city will participate in filing a suit, but McCormick is investigating its chances for success.

McCormick disputed arguments that a lawsuit would be difficult to win because the Supreme Court has ruled that any antitrust regulation of baseball must come from Congress.

Raleigh's efforts to land a profession team have been stymied by a rule blocking a new minor-league team from locating within 35 miles of an existing franchise — in this case, the Durham Bulls. That rule is possible because baseball is exempt from antitrust laws that would prevent other businesses from keeping out competitors.

The Supreme Court last considered the antitrust exemption for baseball in Flood vs. Kuhn in 1972. The court opinion held that any change in the long-established judicial exemption of professional baseball from federal antitrust laws was a matter for Congress, not the Supreme Court.

Wildcats Stake Claim For No. 1

What's more difficult in college basketball — getting to the top or staying there?

For the second straight week, the nation's three highest-ranked teams all lost. This time, it was No. 1 Oklahoma, No. 2 Illinois and No. 3 North Carolina caught in the trifecta of trouble.

"I think we probably played as well as we can play," Illinois coach Lou Henson said after falling to No. 9 Iowa 86-82 on Sunday.

On Saturday, Oklahoma State stopped Oklahoma 77-73. The Sooners lasted only two games after reaching No. 1 for the first time. Earlier in the week, North Carolina got bounced by Clemson.

Last week, then-No. 1 Illinois, No. 2 Georgetown and No. 3 Louisville each dropped.

Fourth-ranked Arizona might be next at the top. The Wildcats won Sunday, 85-68 over Washington.

"I personally don't think we're playing as well right now as some teams in the country," Arizona coach Lute Olsen said. "I saw Georgetown on television and they looked awesome."

But Arizona All-American Sean Elliott disagreed.

"I think we should be No. 1, why not?" he said after scoring 21 points Sunday. "I like the idea of going into Oklahoma No. 1."

Arizona, 17-2, plays at Oklahoma next Sunday.

In other games Sunday, No. 6 Georgetown beat Villanova 69-55, No. 12 Duke downed Notre Dame 102-80 and No. 18 West Virginia extended the nation's longest winning streak to 16 games with a 60-58 victory over Rutgers.

On Saturday, No. 5 Missouri defeated Kansas State 73-68; No. 7 Louisville topped Memphis State 101-85; No. 8 Florida State rallied past Cincinnati 66-65; No. 10 Seton Hall routed Boston College 105-82; No. 11 Michigan beat Michigan State 82-66; DePaul surprised No. 13 North Carolina State 81-74; No. 14 Syracuse trounced Pitt 103-80; UC Irvine stopped No. 16 Nevada-Las Vegas 99-98; No. 17 Indiana beat Minnesota 66-62; Mississippi State upset No. 19 Louisiana State 96-79; and No. 20 Stanford beat Florida 84-66.

No. 9 Iowa 86, No. 2 Illinois 82 Ed Horton had 26 points and 17 rebounds as Iowa beat visiting Illinois in the Big Ten.

Iowa used a 17-2 burst in the first half and, after the Illini tied it in the second half, pulled away behind B.J. Armstrong's 24 points.

The Hawkeyes are 17-4 and 5-3 in the conference. Illinois, 18-3 and 5-3, fell for the third time in four games since starting guard Kendall Gill was lost with a broken bone in his left foot. Nick Anderson scored 25 for the Illini.

No. 4 Arizona 85, Washington 68 Anthony Cook got 23 points as Arizona streaked past Washington in the Pacific-10 game.

Arizona led 72-66 with 1:14 left before going on a 13-2 burst. The visiting Wildcats are 11-1 in the conference. Washington is 9-11 and 5-6.

No. 6 Georgetown 69, Villanova 55 Jaren Jackson scored 27 points and Alonzo Mourning, leading the nation with 5½ blocked shots per game, stopped eight as Georgetown beat Villanova in Philadelphia.

The Hoyas, 17-2 and leading the Big East at 7-1, scored 10 straight points midway through the first half to take the lead for good.

Tom Greis scored 18 points for Villanova, which shot just 33 percent from the field. The Wildcats slipped to 12-10 and 3-6.

No. 18 West Virginia 60, Rutgers 58. Backup center Wade Smith banked home a five-foot shot with 2:44 to play for the game's final points as West Virginia held off Rutgers.

West Virginia, 17-2, kept Rutgers scoreless for the final 4:22 and scored the game's last five points to remain 11-0 in the Atlantic 10 Conference.

Rutgers, 8-11 and 6-4, missed its last chance when Craig Carter's driving 10-foot bank shot bounced off the rim at the buzzer.

points and 18 rebounds, was fouled while attempting to rebound teammate Todd Alexander's missed jump shot from the baseline.

Puddy had missed the front end of two one-and-one situations in the final seven minutes but the senior center hit both shots in the final second.

SMU held a 63-52 lead with 4:12 left before N.C.-Charlotte went on a 14-3 run to tie the score at 66 with 24 seconds remaining on Henry Williams' jump shot in the lane.

Eric Longino scored seven points during a 16-0 run early in the first half, giving the Mustangs an 13-point lead.

The 49ers pulled within 27-21 with 5:01 left in the first half on Williams' 3-point jumper, but reserve point guard Roderick Hampton scored two baskets in the final minute of the half to give the Mustangs a 35-25 lead at halftime.

Williams led the 49ers with 17 points and Cedric Ball added 16.

Alexander and John Colborne had 15 points each for SMU.

Calcavecchia Takes L.A. Open Title

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Mark Calcavecchia said he would be glad to give up his second victory in the last three weeks.

"If I could trade it, I'd let him win by one again if I could beat him in the Ryder Cup," Calcavecchia said Sunday after he had turned back Sandy Lyle and scored a one-shot victory in the Los Angeles Open.

"I didn't know I had it in me," said Calcavecchia, who is rapidly establishing himself as one of America's premier performers.

He won the Australian Open in November, scored a seven-shot triumph in Phoenix two weeks ago and took over the PGA Tour's money-winning lead with $358,952 after pocketing $180,000 Sunday.

This one, the fifth of his PGA Tour career, came at the expense of the Scot who beat him in the Masters last year with a magnificent shot from a fairway bunker.

"It never even crossed my mind," Calcavecchia said.

"Sandy's a great guy, a great player. How can you be mad at a guy who hits one of the great shots in history and then makes birdie on top of it?"

"There was no revenge factor involved. I was just trying to win the golf tournament. It wasn't important to me that I beat Sandy. It didn't matter whether he was second or third or 50th.

"I wasn't trying to beat Sandy. I was just trying to win," Calcavecchia said.

He did, compiling a final-round, 3-under-par 68 in biting cold and coming from two shots back. He won with a 272 total, 12 under par on the Riviera Country Club course that was still wet from the rains that disrupted play Friday and Saturday.

But he also said he would trade the victory for an American triumph in the Ryder Cup matches against Europe's best at Sutton-Coldfield, England, Sept. 22-24.

"That's my No. 1 goal this year," Calcavecchia said, repeating his remarks made after his Phoenix victory.

Calcavecchia is certain to be on the 12-man American team and Lyle will be a member of the European team. The United States dominated Ryder Cup competition for decades before the Europeans won the last two matches.

"I was on the team that lost the last matches. I want to win that back more than anything," Calcavecchia said.

Lyle, two shots ahead after the day-late finish of the third round, could do no better than par-71 over the final 18 holes and finished one stroke back at 273.

Hale Irwin, who had a share of the lead when play was halted by darkness Saturday night, made a remarkable comeback from a pair of double bogeys and was third at 274. His last-round in 68 included five birdies in a seven-hole stretch on the back nine.

Steve Pate, who chipped in for birdie on the final hole, tied for fourth at 276 with Gene Sauers and Phil Blackmar. Pate had a closing 70 and Blackmar 69.

bench while Notre Dame pulled within four points.

"I was missing the easy shots, forced a shot, and Coach K sat me down just to get my composure back," he said. "That got my mind set in the right direction, and I could go out and play with the team."

Ferry quickly returned to play, helped stall the Irish drive, then converted on the 4-point play, and the Blue Devils took control.

"You can't let them do that," Jackson said. "Once you get them down, you have to bury them. We had them wondering for a while."

Joe Fredrick led Notre Dame with 21 points, while Alaa Abdelnaby scored 15 for Duke and Phil Henderson added 14.

Ellis, Notre Dame's leading scorer with a 15.1 average going into the game, was benched after he fouled twice within 20 seconds seven minutes into the game. He returned with five minutes left in the half and finished the game with nine points.

Notre Dame took a three-point lead early in the first half on a five-point burst, but the Blue Devils came back with five and never trailed again.

Duke built a seven-point lead, then hit a 12-3 scoring streak, with four points apiece from Henderson and Christian Laettner, to open a 52-36 halftime lead.

Abdelnaby provided Duke's early offense, scoring the Blue Devils' opening eight points on four field goals.

President Is 2nd To ACC

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's basketball season in Atlantic Coast Conference country, and that means President Bush may be benched by the game of the week: North Carolina vs. North Carolina State.

The president begins his State of the Union address at game time, and the conflict has some North Carolina television stations debating their courses of action. At least three stations have decided to run the game live from beginning to end.

One program director said his station asked Raycom Sports and Entertainment to ask ACC officials about changing the 9 p.m. start but the league declined.

WRAL-TV in Raleigh has decided to show the presidential address live and join the game in progress. President Bush's speech is scheduled to last 25 minutes. In basketball time, that's the opening minutes of the first half.

L.A. Clippers Are A Study In Futility

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — If championship teams are indeed both good and lucky, the Los Angeles Clippers have the worst of both worlds.

The Clippers, a study in sports futility, are both bad and unlucky.

They've consistently been one of the NBA's worst clubs despite making 12 coaching changes in the '70s and '80s, getting enough high draft picks to stock a couple of teams and even trying three different cities — Buffalo, San Diego, Los Angeles — and a name change, from the Braves to the Clippers.

While the Lakers, led by Magic Johnson, pack the Forum and win championships across town, the Clippers continue to wallow in defeat while often drawing crowds that leave fans with an ample selection of empty seats to choose from.

Even when things go right for the Clippers, they still go wrong. Take the case of Danny Manning.

In a moment of rare good fortune, the Clippers actually won something last summer — the right to pick first in the NBA draft.

So they snapped up Manning, the Kansas star who figured to give their club both some instant and future credibility.

They lavished a $10.5 million, five-year contract on Manning, watched their season ticket sales double, and started making plans for the playoffs.

But, as Clipper luck would have it, Manning suffered a season-ending — and possibly career-threatening — knee injury on Jan. 4. If they're lucky, he'll be able to return some time next season.

And, in keeping with the scheme of things, the Clippers, unlike most NBA teams, didn't buy insurance on Manning, so they're stuck with paying his salary, regardless of how long it will take him to come back.

After a respectable start this season, the Clippers' optimism seemed to go down with Manning.

They haven't won a game since he was injured, and will take an 18-game losing streak, two short of the NBA record set by the 1982-83 Philadelphia 76ers, into tonight's meeting with Dallas at the Los Angeles Sports Arena.

On the positive side, at 10-35, the Clippers — for a change — don't have the NBA's worst record. But only the expansion Miami Heat, at 5-38, has won fewer games. The other expansion team, the Charlotte Hornets, is 12-34, 1½ games better than the Clippers.

Notably, and somehow appropriately, the Clippers earlier this season provided both the Heat and the Hornets with their first-ever NBA victories.

In addition to being unlucky in the past, the Clippers may have been unwise.

Among their high draft picks in recent years was center Benoit Benjamin, the third selection in the 1985 draft. A player of immense potential, Benjamin has proven to be consistent in only one area, inconsistency.

Even when they did pick well in the draft, the Clippers often followed with other mistakes.

Among the players they've traded away since 1977 have been forwards Tom Chambers, Terry Cummings, Adrian Dantley and Michael Cage; center James Donaldson and guards

Byron Scott, Ricky Pierce, Mike Woodson and Craig Hodges. Adding injury to insult, the Clippers also have had more than their share of long-lingering ailments over the years.

At least four other Clippers, including 1980 first-round draft pick Michael Brooks, have suffered injuries similar to Manning. None of the players were the same after surgery.

The Clippers, who haven't been in the playoffs since 1976, recently fired Coach Gene Shue for the second time (he also coached them in San Diego), and elevated assistant Don Casey to the top job.

Casey, much to his chagrin, has picked up right where Shue left off, continuing the Clipper tradition.

The new coach, named Jan. 19, has yet to win a game, going 0-for-7.

players with him to Houston — Daugherty, Price and Larry Nance, who sat out Sunday with a strained tendon.

Wilkins did not mince words when asked if he felt Harper, the Cavaliers leading scorer with a 19.8 average, should have been named to the All-Star team.

"He was disappointed," Wilkins said. "I told him to let every game he plays to be his statement that 'I deserved it. I'm All-Star quality.' Then they can't ignore him."

The Cleveland backcourt was too much for the Hornets on Sunday, as Harper and Price shot a combined 19 for 28 from the field, including three out of five from three-point range.

Price finished with 20 points, including two three-pointers. "He (Price) is tough and smart," said Charlotte coach Dick Harter. "After Magic (Johnson), I don't think there's a better guard in the league."

Daugherty, who played his college ball at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, hit nine of 14 shots and dished out six assists.

"Our biggest problem was the ball going into Daugherty, that's when I knew we were in trouble," said Harter. "We had no answer to their center, Daugherty was scoring layups at will."

Harper said the Cavs will be even better when Nance returns to the lineup.

"When we get healthy we will be a good team," he said. "Nance's injury hurts us. When we get him back and work on our half court game there is no telling how good we will be."

John Williams scored 12 points and grabbed 10 rebounds and Mike Sanders added 10 points for the Cavs.

Kurt Rambis led the Hornets with 16 points and eight rebounds. Tripucka came off the bench to score 14 and Robert Reid added 13.

The Cavs pulled away midway in the third quarter by scoring eight straight points, four by Harper, and went on to increase their lead to 95-65 on another basket by Harper with just over 10 minutes remaining in the game.

Pistons 113, Bulls 102

Detroit beat Chicago for the fourth time without a loss this season as Isiah Thomas scored 11 of his 19 points down the stretch, stopping a Bulls' rally.

Scottie Pippen, John Paxson and Michael Jordan hit consecutive 3-pointers as the Bulls cut a 10-point deficit to 93-89 with 6:46 remaining.

Lakers 134, Nets 116

The Los Angeles Lakers are back in sync, largely due to the improved play of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

Removed on the way to the bench a month ago, Abdul-Jabbar has responded by scoring in double figures in his last 11 outings. He had 18 points Sunday night in a 134-116 victory over the New Jersey Nets.

His first basket, a 10-foot sky hook from the baseline just 22 seconds into the game, pushed him over the 38,000-point mark, nearly 7,000 ahead of runner-up Wilt Chamberlain on the all-time list.

Magic Johnson had 27 points and 13 assists, James Worthy had 22 points and Orlando Woolridge 20 for the Lakers.

SuperSonics 89, Celtics 87

Seattle held Boston to 14 points in the fourth quarter and Derrick McKey's two free throws with six seconds left capped a rally from a seven-point deficit with less than four minutes remaining.

Dale Ellis scored eight of his 30 points down the stretch for the Sonics. His layup tied the score 87-87 after the Celtics turned over the ball with 44 seconds left on a 10-second violation.

Heat 102, Kings 98

Expansion Miami won for only the fifth time in 43 games when Jon Sundvold scored eight of his 20 points in the final three minutes after the Heat blew a 17-point lead against Sacramento.

With the Heat trailing 94-90, Sundvold hit a 3-pointer with 2:41 left to pull Miami within one. After two free throws by the Kings' Rodney McCray, Sundvold hit a basket, was fouled by the Kings' Kenny Smith and added a free throw to tie the game with 1:52 remaining.

Rockets 124, Nuggets 112

Houston had eight players in double figures in its victory over Denver.

The Rockets outscored Denver 44-31 in the second quarter by shooting 76 percent from the field, extending a 32-26 lead to 76-57 at the half. Houston's halftime total was its biggest of the season.

Porsche Claims Win In Daytona 24 Hours

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — The unusual mixture of revenge and a tribute to a fallen friend were the major motivating factors that resulted in the latest Porsche victory in the Daytona 24 Hours.

Derek Bell of Britain, Bob Wollek of France and American John Andretti combined to drive a Porsche 962 to victory Sunday at Daytona International Speedway.

Bell, who twice won America's most prestigious sports car endurance event as a teammate of the late Al Holbert, the five-time IMSA champion who was killed in the crash of his private plane last September, said the race was dedicated to his friend and colleague.

"This was a little bit special to me, especially with Al Holbert dying last year," said Bell, who also has won the 24-hour race at LeMans, France five times. "I thought about Al quite a bit this week. He is missed."

Car-owner Jim Busby, whose cars battled Holbert on the racetrack for years, said, "He was a friend as well as a competitor. I'm proud we're able to carry on for him. It was an inspiration to our whole team and all these drivers."

The revenge factor may have been even more important, though, with the 962s no longer being produced by Porsche and the new, state-of-the-art Jaguars and Nissan GTP-ZX cars looming as the wave of the future in endurance racing.

Tom Walkinshaw's Jaguar team ended Porsche's string of 11 straight Daytona 24 Hours victories last year with its new XJR-9 prototype.

Wollek, who drove the final two hours, holding off the second-place Jaguar XJR-9 of Jan Lammers of The Netherlands, John Nielsen of Denmark, Andy Wallace of Britain and Price Cobb, said, "I was just fighting against the Jaguars."

"They won last year; we won this year. It was just revenge," added Wollek, like Bell a three-time winner of this event.

Bell said, "He's talking on behalf of all the Porsche teams when he says that."

Andretti, the nephew of longtime racing star Mario Andretti, whose own Porsche entry went out of the race late Saturday night with mechanical problems, became a first-time 24-hour winner.

"It's a great start for '89 and a great start for this team," he said. "It says a lot for the crew. We had nothing but trouble and this team was able to pull it all together."

The trouble Andretti referred to came prior to the race when the team found its engines underpowered and experimented with several different setups before finding the right combination of engine and turbocharger.

Busby, whose team had not won a race since 1985 and who never had won here, said, "We've done everything we can do for 15 years to try and win here," the jubilant Busby said. "I think we've had more seconds and thirds than anybody in history. We've led more laps than anybody, but we finally led the right ones."

Wollek crossed the finish line just 1 minute, 26.665 seconds ahead of Lammers in the second-place car. The winners completed 621 laps and covered 2,210.76 miles and averaging 92.009 mph.

The finish was the closest in the 22-year history of the Daytona 24 Hours, breaking the previous record of 1:49.150 set in 1986 when a 962 driven by Bell, Holbert and Al Unser Jr. nipped the Porsche of A.J. Foyt, Danny Sullivan and Arie Luyendyk of The Netherlands.

The 962 now has won four of the last five 24-hour events on Daytona's 3.56-mile road circuit.

The total laps and miles were far short of the race records because the event was stopped for nearly four hours in the early morning due to a dense fog that cut visibility to less than 100 feet.

The winners will share about $69,500.

It was the 50th IMSA victory for the 962 model since its introduction in 1984. It was also the 17th Porsche victory in 22 Daytona 24 Hour races. No other manufacturer has won the race more than once.

Besides the three Jaguars that were in the race, the Porsche teams had to contend with the Nissan GTP-ZX which carried Australian Geoff Brabham to nine victories and IMSA Camel GT championship last season.

With Luyendyk, former Holbert teammate Chip Robinson and Michael Roe of Ireland sharing the cockpit with Brabham, the Nissan led the race for more than 11 hours.

It eventually succumbed to mechanical problems in the 20th hour after leading as late as the 19th hour.

"I've got mixed emotions really," Brabham said of Nissan's showing in its first 24-hour event. "I think it's disappointing to get so close after getting so far."

"On the other hand, we scared a lot of people."

Only 26 of the 68 starters were running at the end.

The season-opening IMSA race drew about 45,000 spectators.

Bill White

O'Malley, Search Committee Praised For Naming Of White

By Hal Bock
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The appointment of Bill White as president of the National League was a bold step by baseball, a statement that in this sport at least, a man's race is entirely secondary, that in this sport, a black man can be in charge.

For that, Peter O'Malley and the search committee must be applauded, despite their disingenuous insistence that White's color had nothing to do with him getting the job.

O'Malley would have you believe then that White's race is purely coincidental, that the stimulation of baseball's long-dormant conscience by Al Campanis' sociological observations almost three years ago, had nothing to do with the selection. And the fact that the only candidates were also minorities was, of course, simply another coincidence.

Baseball, so often stuck in social Darwinism, saw the NL presidential vacancy as an opportunity to change the long-standing time warp that Campanis' comments represented and, to its credit, it seized the chance.

White, too, shrugged off the issue of his race. But the fact of the matter is he is taking a substantial salary cut from his broadcast income, stepping back economically so that a whole class of this nation's people may step forward.

So, for the first time, a major sports league has a black as its president. That's certainly a plus. The minus, though, is that baseball's organizational structure reduces the office to a largely ceremonial post.

The job description is simple: Sign the basebells, fine or even suspend perpetrators of occasional misdemeanors, keep an eye on the umpires and schedule, and otherwise stay out of the way. When the serious stuff comes down, like labor negotiations with the players, the league presidents and even the commissioner are kept out of the line of fire. It's like England, where Queen Elizabeth is in charge but Margaret Thatcher runs the show.

That could be a bit of a problem for White, who is not exactly a wallflower. He is an articulate man with definite opinions and can't be expected to stop speaking out on issues just because he's been thrust into baseball's penthouse.

His appointment, while on the surface an important step in the right direction, can not be interpreted as the completion of baseball's equal opportunity obligations. There can be no congratulatory back-slapping, no sense of having accomplished all that needs to be done.

What White does is give blacks representation not only at the bottom of the baseball totem pole with players on the field, but at the top as well, in the commissioner's executive suite. What still is missing is input in the middle.

NFL Scouts Check Out Latest Supply Of Collegiate Stars

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — NFL scouts have left Indianapolis with their notebooks full of the stats, speeds and sundry other details waiting to be digested after four days of testing former college football players at the league scouting combine.

But more than 300 players, however, won't get their report cards until April 22, the day of the NFL draft. The scouts were characteristically tight-lipped when it came to discussing whose stock may have risen during the closed workouts at the Hoosier Dome.

"I don't want to get that specific," said Bill Tobin, vice president of personnel for the Chicago Bears.

Mike Hickey, the director of player personnel for the New York Jets, simply said he didn't want to discuss it.

Gil Brandt of the Dallas Cowboys, who are expected to make former UCLA quarterback Troy Aikman the No. 1 pick in the draft, explained that the competitiveness of the league makes it impossible to go into the details of individual impressions of those hoping to be playing in the NFL next year.

Tobin spoke only in generalities. "Basically, what we get out of it is the physicals: How healthy is the guy, what's the prediction for his career span," Tobin said. "We do that through our doctors and trainers, giving us the opportunity to view each one, going over their medical history. That's the No. 1 thing the Bears get out of it."

The combine also allows the teams to obtain consistent running times since "conditions are the same for everybody running," Tobin added.

"Prior to this, we have confirmed times for a majority of players, but they're under different circumstances: some on AstroTurf, some on tracks, some on grass fields, some against the wind, some when it's cold, some when it's hot."

"When we get them all at one location, your times are all under the exact same conditions, the same watch, same finger, same running conditions. This, we feel, is an advantage, because you can truly compare one guy's speed" with another's, he said.

The scouts also evaluate off-the-field performance, Tobin added.

"We see the attitude and promptness of the individual, how courteous or how arrogant he is. We see their personal actions," he said. "As far as determining if they are or aren't football players, we've already done that through our scouting throughout the year."

Brandt, the Cowboys' vice president for personnel development, said the biggest thing the combine does is give players from smaller schools an added opportunity to demonstrate potential.

"There are always some players that look better than people anticipated, possibly because they were in programs that don't receive a lot of attention during the season," Brandt said.

"The combine also gives each team's medical staff a chance to give an extensive physical examination and doesn't force the player or team to do a lot of traveling to make that information available."

Brandt did share a few observations about the combine.

Maria Walliser celebrates her win in the World Alpine Championship ski race Sunday came up Sunday after Walliser won a second straight World Alpine Ski Championships downhill race in smashing style. She flashed down the international course on Vail Mountain in 1 minute, 46.50 seconds, beating Canada's Karen Percy by a spectacular 1.5 seconds. Karin Dedler of West Germany, who started 17th in the field of 32, was a surprising third, just .01 seconds behind Percy.

Walliser Claims Second Straight Downhill Title

Talk of Walliser becoming an actress "started two years ago in Crans-Montana when an actor from Switzerland wanted to have me in a new film. But I think ski racing and being an actress at the same time is not possible. I have to finish my ski career first and then I will see what offers I can have.

"I think for the moment, no Hollywood, no film career, not now."

Morrison Collapses, Dies ...

In a story in Sports Illustrated, Chaikin, who played at South Carolina from 1983 to 1987, said he and other players used steroids and about half of the 1986 team used the muscle-building drug. Chaikin also said some players used drugs such as cocaine and LSD.

Morrison said he had heard rumors some players might have been using steroids but the allegations were never substantiated. The allegations by Chaikin have prompted a grand jury investigation that is expected to continue when jurors reconvene later this month.

University President James Holderman said he didn't think Morrison was under any added pressure this year. "I don't think he was under any more stress than any football coach was under," Holderman said.

Dixon agreed. "I did not detect any more stress on Joe this year," Dixon said. Morrison's private life was the focus of intense scrutiny two years ago when it was learned he had had a child by a woman he began seeing while he was at New Mexico. The woman, Barbara J. Button, moved to South Carolina after Morrison became head coach here.

Morrison acknowledged he was the father of Ms. Button's daughter, Lisa Nicole Morrison, who was born June 12, 1982 in Albuquerque, N.M. Despite the controversies, Morrison was known as a winner as a coach and a player. Morrison's best year at South Carolina was in 1984 when he was named the 1984 Walter Camp national coach of the year. South Carolina went 10-2 that season, losing to Oklahoma State 21-14 in the Gator Bowl.

Morrison began his coaching career at Tennessee-Chattanooga after former Giants teammate Sam Huff recommended him for the job. The Moccasins went 4-7 in each of his

Wyche Giving Time For Cincy Homeless Shelter

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — A homeless man named Toby is one of those touched by Cincinnati Bengals coach Sam Wyche's efforts to do something for the needy. Wyche spoke with Toby during a recent visit to a homeless shelter. Wyche had a meal with the needy and gave them support. "Here's a guy who's on top of the world — a guy who could really turn his back and no one would blame him," Toby said. "And here he is, worried about me."

Wyche is using his popularity as a speaker this winter to do something about the homeless in Cincinnati. He's charging $5,000 for a speaking engagement, with the money going directly to organizations that help the needy. He's also made visits to the shelters to meet with the people.

The idea of using his sudden demand as a public speaker to help the homeless came to Wyche at the end of last year.

He's also gotten directly involved with the shelters. He recently met with representatives of the various shelters and agencies to discuss how to use the $60,000. He and his wife Jane have visited the various shelters.

"Our immediate concern — other than with Joe's and JV's (Morrison's wife) family — is with these very fine young men that we've extended grant-in-aids to in the past several weeks," Dixon said. "We want to very quickly reaffirm to these young men and their families that we plan to honor those commitments, more so than ever."

"These young men that have indicated orally that they would come to the University of South Carolina ... in essence will be legacy of Joe Morrison, and mean more than ever to the football program."

Morrison's death came just three days before national signing day. The nation's high school seniors will be signing letters of intent with colleges and universities Wednesday. Dixon said the coaches would be on the telephone this morning reassuring Gamecock recruits of the school's continued interest in them.

USC Coach Mourned ...

Dixon agreed, saying Morrison was a "remarkable person." "I held him in high esteem. He was never one to complain. Joe produced," Dixon said. "He was dedicated to winning. He was an extreme competitor. I believe that Joe was at the University of South Carolina at the right time, at the right place."

"There have been many fans at the university that have always hoped that we would play better than .500 ball. Joe turned that around. And we'll always be grateful to him. Now, it's what we do to the foundation that Joe has left for us."

"He has showed us a way in which we can be very successful in our football program. He has gotten us exposure as never before ... so we can recruit with the best of them."

"He was a great leader, a great man. He was a quiet motivator who didn't have to say much to get his point across," he said. "The public didn't know how warm he really was. Only the coaches and the players who were close to him knew what a kind and generous person he was."

Melon Grower Eyes Marketing Strategy

By Elliott Minor
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CORDELE, Ga. — Americans soon may see watermelons dancing across their television screens if Buddy Leger has his way.

He wants growers and handlers to contribute a small slice of their profits to do for watermelons what the California Raisins have done.

The commercials featuring the dancing and singing raisins have helped increase raisin consumption by 13 percent and wholesale shipments by 9 percent, said Leger, co-chairman of the National Watermelon Association's research and promotion committee.

"What's wrong with dancing watermelons?" he asked during a recent interview in this southwest Georgia town. "Advertising is the name of the game. We're just trying to bring the consumer's attention to a good product."

Watermelon growers and handlers in 48 states will vote by Feb. 21 on a proposed U.S. marketing order that would authorize an assessment of 2 cents per hundred pounds to promote the crop.

The assessment would be levied on growers with 5 acres or more and on handlers. Those who feel the program isn't helping could apply for a refund.

Watermelons are important to farmers because they provide a source of cash that helps them finance their main crops.

"Traditionally, people buy watermelons on Labor Day, Memorial Day and the Fourth of July," said Leger. "We need this funding to promote watermelons not just on holidays, but all during the growing season."

Watermelons and cantaloupes generate about $18 million a year for farmers in Georgia, which ranks third in production. Florida and Texas rank first and second, respectively. California is fourth.

Deliberate Derailment

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — A quick-thinking railroad engineer threw his coal train into reverse and deliberately derailed it Sunday after his brakes failed on a hill as the train sped into town, authorities said.

Sixty-four of 66 cars and three locomotives were knocked off the track, but no major injuries were reported.

"He picked a pretty good spot to do it at. It's not really populated in that area. The only damage is to train property," said Colorado Springs police officer Charles Pizzitola.

The engineer, G.L. Romero of Littleton, realized he couldn't stop, so he threw the train into reverse, forcing it off the tracks at about 8 a.m., Pizzitola said. Romero suffered a minor hip injury.

"Evidently the engineer lost it at Monument (Hill) and knew he was out of control," Pizzitola said. "When he got down through the Air Force Academy, they were really going. He couldn't brake it down."

"He got to a point and remembered something he learned in engineer school that said to throw the sucker into reverse, and he did. And everything came apart at that time," he said.

The train was going 47 mph when it derailed, police said. The accident occurred in the northern part of town, which is largely an industrial area.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

"Is grape juice very 'spensive, Mommy? Jeffy spilled his on the rug."

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY Feb. 7

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You can be easily manipulated today and vulnerable to sweet talk. Respond to those who have your best interests at heart.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): This can be a great day to open the door to meaningful change. A creative approach can be linked to something you enjoy doing.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Agreements made today have a fine chance for success. Your awareness level is high even though some self-doubt may stand in the way.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): All systems say go, but be organized about it. Make good use of an easy day which should move along hassle-free.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): You may feel disagreeable with other people's ideas. This can lead to heated discussions that have a negative potential.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): If you are involved with science, this can be a most creative day. Take an inventory of your emotional needs and bring your lifestyle in step.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): This day would be best to sit back and take it easy. Hold to your diet, or weight gained will become public knowledge.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Analyze your goals and include short term as well as long term objectives. Plan to attract people who reflect strength and character.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Inharmonious aspects suggest that your ideas are too elaborate for your pocketbook. You receive a romantic invitation today.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Schedules may be hard to keep, so leave early to be on time. Important people will expect full attention, so be prepared.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Steady progress toward career goals are beginning to show. Expect some delays and tough decisions before the final curtain call.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Not a favorable day for people contact or communications. Utilize your time with personal and private concerns that do not include others.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠A1043 ♥K ♦AK8742 ♣QJ
 Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
 A.—While you have a very good hand, you have no fit for partner and your suit is not self-sufficient. For the moment, two diamonds is adequate. Beware of a potential misfit.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠A1043 ♥5 ♦AKQJ42 ♣93
 Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
 A.—This time you need have no fear about a possible misfit—your diamond suit stands on its own merits; it can serve as the trump suit even if partner is void! Jump to three diamonds to flash the slam signal at once, despite the fact that you have no support for partner.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠KJ ♥A108643 ♦10 ♣A1092
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♥ Pass 2 ♦ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—What's the problem? Just re-bid your six-card suit—two hearts. You are not strong enough to bid three clubs, which is a "high reverse" and shows extra values.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K6 ♥KQ107 ♦QJ762 ♣A7
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
 2 ♠ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Even though it is unlikely that partner has four hearts, there is no reason why you should not complete the picture of your hand. Bid three hearts. You have no tenaces, so there is no reason why you should want to declare no trump, if that is to be the final resting place.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠762 ♥K10 ♦AQ93 ♣A654
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 3 ♠ Dbl Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Since partner is likely to have length in both majors, chances for any large offensive bonanza should be discounted—we would be more interested if our red suits were reversed. It is simply a question of whether to convert for penalties. Although we are still 2-to-1 favorites to win the rubber, we feel a bid of three no trump has more to gain, but we don't fault anyone for electing to defend by passing.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AJ6 ♥1098 ♦543 ♣Q743
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♥ 1 ♠ 2 ♦ ?

What action do you take?
 A.—The modern way is to treat partner's overall as if it were an opening bid. Since you would have raised an opening bid of one spade to two spades, make that bid now.

'Great Escape' Goes To Spots Travelers Can Afford To Visit

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The syndicated travel show "The Great Escape" takes you to wonderful places around the world, but co-host Bob Chandler admits that everything is not quite what it seems.

"This show is geared for the consumer," said Chandler, a former pro football player who is co-host with Michelle Russell. "We don't offer vicarious travel, like 'The Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous.' We occasionally do an upscale place, but mostly we tell people about places they can afford to visit. A part of any successful show is knowing what your direction is. Our direction is to go to places that are easily accessible and that are good."

So, you will rarely hear a discouraging word.

"We don't go out of our way to say something is bad or to be critical," said Chandler. "If we run into a situation we don't like, we'll handle it by omission. We're not selling out, and it's not because we're afraid of losing our tradeoff. It's just that our goal is that we're looking only for the great places to visit."

"We get tradeoffs in the form of free travel and accommodations. We're up-front about that. We've got two hosts and four camera crews going all over the world and it's the only way we could afford it."

"It's common practice for television shows to accept free travel and accommodations, but federal regulations require that such arrangements be acknowledged on the air."

Each weekly half-hour show visits three places: a feature destination that's usually foreign, a Discover America segment and a weekend escape.

Chandler has spent a large part of the past few years on the road. First as co-host of "Two on the Town," a magazine show for KCBS-TV in Los Angeles, and for "The Great Escape."

He had been a sportscaster after his football career. He was a wide receiver for the Buffalo Bills and played in Super Bowl XV for the Oakland Raiders. He earned a law degree while playing professional football.

"For this show we're on the road 10 to 15 days, then we're home for about the same time," he said. "It's tough to complain about this job. People say, 'You kidding? You get to travel everywhere.' They don't see us packing 18 trunks of equipment, checking into a different hotel every night. I was out once last year for 27 days. We were in seven different locations."

Chandler said "The Great Escape" uses only original footage, taped around the world. The only exception was one minute of the Follies Bergere at Las Vegas.

"We get offered a lot of footage," said Chandler, "but one of our strengths is our cameramen. We have four crews and they frequently work without a host or correspondent. Besides Michelle and myself, we have used correspondents in Australia and Europe."

"I've been just about everywhere," he said, "but when we start traveling again in March I hope we go to the Orient. The funny thing is, before this I'd only been out of the United States once."

"The great thing is you learn a lot about the areas. You have to do research. And when you get there you get involved with the people. You get to see a lot more than tourists do."

Survey Says 'Nightline' Leans Toward White Conservatives

By John Horn
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Ted Koppel said he welcomed a study released today that found his late-night news show, "Nightline," favors white conservative men as guests, but he added the report's authors were wrong to criticize the show.

The guest list merely reflects the government that "Nightline" covers, he said.

The study of almost 2,500 guests on more than 850 episodes of the ABC-TV show found that 89 percent were men and 92 percent were white.

It also found that the 9-year-old news interview program virtually ignored labor unions, environmental and consumer advocates, anti-war activists, the working class and those who oppose U.S. foreign policy.

"I like studies like this," Koppel said. "I'm happy to see them, whether they are from the right or the left. They do give us an opportunity to re-examine what we do, how we do it."

"And sometimes it's quite true we get into a rut."

The survey, commissioned by the liberal media watchdog group Fairness & Accuracy in Reporting, was conducted by Boston College sociologists William Hoynes and David Croteau.

"Nightline," which has won two dozen Emmys and is seen by more than 5 million viewers nightly, is widely perceived as one of television's most influential news programs.

The findings challenge "Nightline's" reputation for impartiality, said Jeff Cohen, executive director of FAIR.

"When you see the same pattern week after week, it becomes a political bias," Cohen said.

Although welcoming the study, Koppel challenged its implications.

"I think FAIR makes a great mistake ... (when it concludes) that simply by looking at a guest list, you know what the substance of that program was," Koppel said. "We are accused of putting on the establishment. Yes, we are guilty. That is what we do."

He said his guest selections simply reflected former President Reagan's conservative appointees and that a liberal administration would yield a biased guest record in the opposite political direction.

"What you do is bring on the architects of U.S. foreign policy and hold them to account, which is what we try to do on this broadcast," Koppel said.

"And never is it suggested that I might ask (the guests) a tough question once in a while. Never is it even suggested that if you want to criticize U.S. foreign policy, you don't bring on the opponents of U.S. foreign policy and let them speak their minds."

"Nightline" Executive Producer Richard Kaplan also criticized the study, but conceded that it pointed out a narrow focus regarding guests. Kaplan said he gave copies of the report to his staff.

The study examined 40 months of "Nightline" episodes from January 1985 to April 1988.

The analysis showed that the show's most frequent guests were all conservative leaders.

Former secretaries of state Henry Kissinger and Alexander Haig topped the list with 14 appearances each, followed by television evangelist Jerry Falwell and former State Department official Elliott Abrams with 12 appearances each.

Selleck Fans

CINCINNATI (AP) — Actor Tom Selleck cheered a small group of loyal fans who braved freezing temperatures to wait for a glimpse of the star outside a jail where he is working on a film.

"Hello, hello, nice to see you all," Selleck said Saturday leaning out the front door of Cincinnati Workhouse during a break in filming "Hard Rain." Selleck plays a man sentenced to prison after being framed by corrupt police. He was wearing blue prison jeans and shirt and had a glob of purple makeup over his right eye.

"I'm suppose to look like I've had a fight," he explained, before going back inside the 120-year-old prison.

All filming in Cincinnati is being done inside the Workhouse, where a cellblock has been renovated for the movie, said Ellen Pasternack, a spokeswoman for Walt Disney Productions, which is making the film.

Emotional Visit

LONDON (AP) — Ballerina Natalia Makarova says her first trip to the Soviet Union since defecting 19 years ago was better than she could have dreamed, despite the sadness of having to leave her mother again.

"The welcome I received was beyond any expectation. It couldn't even have been like that in my dreams," Makarova said on her arrival Sunday at Heathrow Airport.

The 48-year-old ballerina defected in 1970 to perform modern dances not staged in the Soviet Union.
