Pitt Teachers Call For Unity On Pay

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Teachers in Pitt County say they have to unify to get what they want — to be treated and paid as professionals.

About 50 of the county's 1,200 teachers met Tuesday evening in the Jaycee Park administrative building to discuss plans to protest Gov. Jim Martin's proposal to delay pay raises for teachers and state employees until April 1990.

"We've got to quit, in a subtle way, pointing fingers," said Billie Lennon, a teacher at J.H. Rose High School. "You've got to unify all the teachers."

In a unifying effort, the teachers agreed to push for a pay raise through several avenues.

William Wahl, a teacher at E.B. Aycock Junior High School, said he has received verbal commitments from state Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr. of Farmville and state Sen. Bob Martin of Bethel to meet with teachers Monday at 11 a.m. Sen. Tom Taft and Rep. Ed Warren, both of Greenville, also said they may be able to attend the meeting, Wahl said.

"We want to ask them what do we need to do to help push this raise through this session," he said.

The place of the meeting will be determined once he has an estimate of how many teachers plan to attend, Wahl said.

After the meeting in Greenville, the teachers will travel to Raleigh to participate in an evening vigil in front of the Governor's Mansion with Wake County teachers.

The teachers wanting to participate in that event will leave from the Farm Fresh parking lot in Greenville Monday at 4 p.m.

Wahl said all teachers are encouraged to wear green armbands on their left arms Monday and Tuesday. "That's the symbol of money, (and) it would help the group as a whole to show unity among teachers."

"Those staying back can call legislators that night to let them know we're from Pitt County and we want them to push through a pay raise this session," he said. Teachers also agreed to write the governor and their legislators to bring attention to their concern.

With a billion dollars being spent for roads, "we deserve as much as roads do," Wahl said.

In their letters, phone calls and other communications with legislators, the teachers said they're going to ask to have their salary scale unfrozen and to receive at least a 10 percent raise.

Before the 1982-83 school year, teachers automatically received a pay increase or a "step" from the state of about $100 each year, depending upon experience. The legislature froze that scale after the 1982-83 year, but in 1985-86, it provided teachers with one or two "steps" in their salaries, based on experience.

Meanwhile, teachers have received cost-of-living increases.

SBI Official Says Drug Dealing Now Major N.C. Activity

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Drug dealers peddling heroin, cocaine, and marijuana in North Carolina have created a multibillion dollar underground economy, an assistant director of the State Bureau of Investigation said Tuesday at a convention in Greenville.

"It's almost a subculture that has developed," Charles Dunn said after addressing a group at the 12th annual conference of the North Carolina Association of Chiefs of Police, which was held at the Ramada Inn this week.

"They're not only pushing poison, they're ripping off the schools, the government as well as their neighbors."

"It's hard many times for us to recognize that (drug dealing) is in eastern North Carolina, that it's in the country, small towns and small cities. Really, in all parts of town," he said.

Dunn, who served as director of the SBI for several years in the 1970s, told the group of about 100 law enforcement officers that state and local agencies have done a superb job of battling drugs, but they are still losing the war.

"I'm amazed at how well we do with the number of people we have working."

"So much is being done by so few. We have about 20,000 law enforcement officers in North Carolina. Probably less than 500 are assigned full time to counteract the illegal drug systems."

"Law enforcement is doing a tremendous job with limited resources in fighting the drug war. But, we are still losing, and the job is becoming even more difficult," said Dunn.

Last year officers in the state made 19,000 drug arrests and destroyed about $300 million worth of marijuana plants, he said.

Under the marijuana eradication program, Dunn said officers have discovered marijuana plants in nearly every one of the state's 100 counties. Cocaine is the most popular drug in the state, he said, and crack and heroin are also in great demand.

"From my perspective, it seems as if the problem is getting worse, not better. The problem just seems to continue to grow," he said. "We have virtual drug stores on every corner (in every city and town) where people can buy an array of different drugs."

ECU Racial Events Stir Call For Laws

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Incidents involving black and white students at East Carolina University have prompted the state NAACP to seek laws to make racial or ethnic intimidation a criminal offense.

Dennis Schatzman, NAACP executive director, said the group will press the General Assembly during this legislative session to enact the misdemeanor, which would be punishable by up to a year in prison and a fine of up to $1,000.

The major incident at ECU that has caught the attention of the state NAACP happened April 3, 1988, he said.

Several white students allegedly shouted racial slurs to several black students, causing a fight that resulted in the suspension of a black student for two years, according to Schatzman.

The student was not allowed to present witnesses to testify at an ECU Honor Council hearing, he said.

Court records show that ECU students James B. Denmon, John V. Haar and J.W. Bennett filed simple assault charges against Teddy Matthew White of Monroe with the District Attorney's office as a result of the incident.

Haar also filed charges against White for damaging personal property — prescription glasses valued at $125. Jensen, who received a broken nose during the incident, filed charges of assault inflicting serious injury against White.

Found guilty of five counts of simple assault in Pitt County Superior Court the week of Jan. 23, White received a 30-day suspended sentence for each count, was put on two-year probation and was fined $922 in restitution fees.

In a separate incident, a black student in ECU's Student Government Association recently was showered with black and brown jelly beans during a meeting, Schatzman said.

Schatzman said he will discuss the ECU incidents during a press conference in Raleigh today where the North Carolinians Against Racists and Religious Violence will release its report on the rise in racism and racial violence in North Carolina.

Schatzman sent a letter to ECU Chancellor Richard Eakin in January accusing the university of handling the suspended student's case improperly. It said that the student did not get a fair trial, according to evidence given to the NAACP that indicated all of the students were guilty.

According to Schatzman, who received information from witnesses, the April incident began with white students shouting racial slurs to

Drug War Brings About More Cooperation

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The war on drugs, a major problem for law enforcement agencies all across the United States, has caused the Federal Bureau of Investigation to begin working much closer with local and state law enforcement agencies, the FBI's executive assistant director told members of the N.C. Association of Chiefs of Police Tuesday night.

John Otto, who for six months in 1987 served as acting director of the FBI, was the after-dinner speaker at a banquet that closed the 12th annual conference of the NCACP at the Ramada Inn.

Earlier in the day, David Fortson, chief of the Cary Police Department, was elected president of the association for the coming year.

Greenville Police Chief Jerry Tesmond, chairman of the International Association of Chiefs of Police's training and education committee, was elected to the NCACP board as a regional director.

Otto, who joined the FBI as a special agent in 1964 after service as a U.S. Marine, a deputy sheriff in his home state of Minnesota, and a police officer in California, said the bureau, over the years, had "drifted away (and was) not a close as we once were" to local law enforcement agencies.

But Otto, who rose through the ranks of the bureau, said "now, with our involvement with drugs," the FBI is again "working much closer" with local law enforcement officers.

According to Otto, the FBI was asked in 1982 to get into drug investigations and was allocated 430 agents to work drugs. Now, according to Otto, of the bureau's 9,600 special agents, "1,400 are drug agents."

But Otto said said the bureau's heavy involvement with the war on drugs "is taking away" resources needed for other criminal cases, such as property crimes, crimes of violence.

There is a "significant crack (a form of cocaine) and cocaine problem in North Carolina," just as in other states across the nation, Otto said.

The danger with cocaine and crack, Otto said, is that "kids can be addicted to cocaine the first time" they try it.

Otto praised Robert Morgan,

Jones, Other Tar Heels Reject Pay Raise

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Rep. Walter Jones Jr., a Farmville Democrat, joined North Carolina's other Congressmen Tuesday in voting against a 51 percent pay raise for Congress and top federal officials.

"He's pretty happy about the results," Press Secretary Carla Chandler said in a telephone interview from Jones' Washington, D.C., office today. "He felt it was just too high considering the deficit problem right now."

Jones was out of his office and not available for comment this morning.

The pay raise would have automatically taken effect at midnight Tuesday if the House had not voted 380-48 to stop it. The Senate had earlier voted against the pay hike.

President George Bush signed the measure several hours before the midnight witching hour, officially squelching the effort to raise salaries for members of Congress and federal District Court judges from $89,500 a year to $135,000, according to the Associated Press.

The bill also included raises for a wide range of federal employees and would have affected more than 12,000 people holding public jobs, including senior diplomats, top-ranking military officers and District of Columbia court officials.

The overwhelming public opposition to the pay raise helped defeat the measure, Ms. Chandler said. In Jones' 23 years in Congress, he has not seen any issue that generated more public input, she said.

"Over the last month, we've just been bombarded with phone calls and letters," Ms. Chandler said.

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, had proposed that the House allow the pay raise to take effect, then vote today to roll it back to a 30-percent raise. But, Ms. Chandler said Jones also felt that increase was too high. Jones would probably support a small raise along the line

Government To Take Over Ailing S&Ls

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Federal officials trying to contain the multibillion-dollar cost of the savings and loan bailout are mobilizing more than 1,200 regulators to take control of all remaining insolvent S&Ls over the next few weeks.

The massive government takeover was announced Tuesday as financial regulators scrambled to implement the first portions of President Bush's S&L overhaul package.

Meanwhile, the Bush proposals were receiving initial favorable reactions from Congress although some lawmakers said they had reservations about some aspects of the proposals, in particular the $40 billion estimated cost to taxpayers.

Officials of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., which insures deposits at S&Ls, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which performs the same function at banks, predicted that within a month they would have joint regulatory teams in place at approximately 224 insolvent S&Ls.

The government takeover will transfer control of the S&Ls to the federal regulators, who will oversee policy decisions made by local managers of the insolvent institutions.

In most cases government regulators will keep the insolvent institutions open until Congress funds a rescue package. At that time, the institutions are to be sold with government assistance to new investors.

These institutions have been allowed to stay open even though they were losing billions of dollars annually because regulators did not have the money to close them down.

The Bush proposal, in addition to revamping the government regulatory structure, proposes raising $90 billion to bail out insolvent institutions through a combination of $40 billion in tax dollars and higher insurance premiums paid by banks and S&Ls.

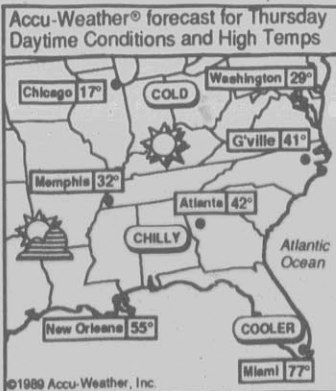

Both Senate Banking Committee Chairman Donald Riegle, D-Mich., and House Banking Committee Chairman Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, pledged on Tuesday that their committees would move quickly to vote on the Bush plan.

"When we are losing on the order of $33 million a day (from S&L operating losses), all of us are under enormous responsibilities to get this package done," Riegle said.

Gonzalez predicted his panel could vote on the proposal by the first week in March.

The government takeover of insolvent S&Ls had been urged last week by the General Accounting Office, which said the sick S&Ls were offering high interest rates to attract deposits, thus driving up costs for the healthy part of the industry and increasing the ultimate bailout cost to the government.

Hospital Workers Donate $286,502

Employees of Pitt County Memorial Hospital have given $286,502 to the Pride and Challenge Campaign of the Pitt Memorial Hospital Foundation.

The employees' contribution is the second major gift to be made during the $1.75 million campaign being conducted by the foundation.

Brenda Joyner, PCMH development officer and associate campaign director, said donations to the campaign will be used to "meet the challenge of providing funds for future medical equipment needs." She said that donations will be placed in an interest-earning endowment fund and only the interest generated from the contributions will be used to purchase medical equipment.

Mrs. Joyner said more than 1,700 PCMH employees learned about the campaign by attending one of the 90 information meetings held during all work shifts in November, December and January.

"I was extremely pleased with the way the employee division of the campaign was received," she said. "The employees really understand that this campaign is about preparing for the future."

Mitzi Moye, hospital wellness coordinator and vice chairman of the employee division of the campaign, said she is also pleased with the success of the fund drive. "Many people pulled together to orchestrate this campaign," she said.

The "hospital family" — PCMH trustees, Foundation Board trustees, administrative council, medical staff, employees, Greenville Service League and volunteers/auxiliary are the first people in the region served by the hospital to be approached for support. The business and industrial sector will be asked for support following this phase of the drive, said G. Henry Leslie, campaign chairman.

Brook Valley Zoning Cases Are Scheduled

Two matters involving the recently annexed Brook Valley subdivision will be among the items addressed at the Greenville City Council's regular monthly meeting Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the council chambers at City Hall.

The council will consider an ordinance to rezone two tracts of land located at the intersection of Oxford Road and N.C. 33 from RA-20 (residential/agricultural) to O&I II (office and institutional).

The Planning and Zoning Commission, at its Jan. 20 meeting, recommended denial of the request. A valid protest petition has been filed regarding the matter, requiring five affirmative council votes for passage.

Also to be considered is a request to establish a 25 mph speed limit on three of Brook Valley's major thoroughfares — York Road, King George Road and Oxford Road.

Although a public hearing is not required on speed limit requests, the council agreed at its Monday workshop to listen and consider citizen's comments on the matter Thursday.

Brook Valley entered the Greenville city limits on Dec. 31 following an involuntary annexation by the city.

Also to be conducted Thursday is a public hearing on an ordinance to amend the city's charter to increase the terms of office for the mayor and the council members from two to four years.

Meanwhile, the council will consider a request by Walter L. Williams to rezone two tracts of land located north of South Village Drive and east of Memorial Drive.

The request for Tract 1, involving .14 acres, seeks rezoning from R-6 (high-density residential) to CH (highway commercial), while Tract 2, .014 acres, seeks rezoning from CH to R-6.

Also to be considered is an agreement with the N.C. Department of Transportation for the installation of railroad crossing signals on Brownlea Drive at the Southern Railway crossing.

Other items to be considered include: sale of the "Swimming Pool" parking lot property on the southeast corner of Reade and Fifth streets to East Carolina University for $28,550; the issuance of a certificate of convenience and necessity to Eagle Cab Co. to operate a taxicab service; an application for a privilege license for Stereo Village Jewelry & Pawn Shop, located at 317 Arlington Blvd., and a request by the Greenville-Pitt County Convention and Visitors Bureau to amend the sign ordinance to allow the placement of travelers information signs for food, gas and lodging.

Farmville Board To Consider Bar On Town Staff

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

FARMVILLE — Town board members Tuesday heard a suggestion by Commissioner John Turner Walston that Farmville's administrative staff curtail any use of "professional assistance" without first consulting with commissioners.

Walston said the commissioners are never more than three weeks away from a regular board meeting nor less than 24 hours away from an emergency meeting where decisions on assistance can be made.

Walston said, "If it appears that this would not allow the staff to go outside for professional or specialized help, that would be my intent."

Walston declined to clarify what he meant by professional assistance, saying that what he meant should be clearly understood without his explaining.

Commissioners decided that the matter should be further discussed in a workshop meeting. The next workshop, they agreed, will be held

Feb. 15 and future workshops will be held the third Wednesday of each month.

Board members stressed that they will not take any action during a workshop session. They said there have been times in the past when they have taken action during workshops in order to avoid calling additional meetings, but they do not feel comfortable with that practice.

"I won't do it any more," Commissioner Marvin Speight said. "I'll get up and walk out first."

The board voted to allow the state driver's license examiners to use a portion of the old municipal building on North Main Street as its office.

Approval, contingent upon authorization by the town's May House Commission, was given for local landscaper David Starling to install shrubs, grass and trees around the May House at Pine and Main streets and for Billy Lovic to paint inside the facility and stain the exterior. The house is being renovated for use as a museum.

Local Eagle Scout candidate Michael Lovic was given permission by the board to erect a "Welcome to Farmville" sign on May Boulevard at Farmville's U.S. 258 entrance from the north.

Bids for street and utility improvements were approved. Street improvements include the last block of South Davis Drive, Davis Drive between Grimmersburg Street and Horne Avenue, Contentnea Street from Church to Pine streets; Moore Street from Zeno to George streets; South Walnut Street from Cotton to Railroad streets; George Street from Belcher Street to Horne Avenue; the town garage entrance and lot, Horne Avenue from George Street to May Boulevard, and from Main to Davis Drive, Walnut Street from Horne Avenue to Jones Street, Lang Street from Walnut to Main streets, and the access street and parking lot of the public works center.

Utility improvements include replacing water lines from Wilson to Grimmersburg; on Green Street from Grimmersburg to Horne; on Walnut Street from Cotton to Railroad; on Lang Street from Walnut to Main, and a sewer line from Marlboro to Guardian Care Nursing Home.

Two Williamston Men Charged

WILLIAMSTON — Two Williamston men have been charged in connection with an alleged Christmas Eve shooting spree that led to the resignation of the town's police chief.

Johnny Smithwick, 41, and Gene Bennett, 53, were arrested about 6 p.m. Tuesday, according to Martin County Sheriff Willie Rogers. He said Smithwick and Bennett were each charged with aiding and abetting shooting into an occupied dwelling.

James Thompson, 42, was removed from his duties as police chief Friday evening following his arrest by Martin County officers on a charge of shooting into an occupied dwelling in rural Martin County. Thompson resigned this week.

Rogers said he believes that Smithwick was driving a red and white pickup truck from which a volley of bullets were fired, hitting the home and five vehicles of Charlie and Mavis Whitaker the evening of Dec. 24.

The sheriff said he believes that Thompson fired the high-powered weapon into the dwelling and that Bennett was in the bed of the truck with Thompson.

The incident occurred near Church's Crossroads, the Martin County community in which Thompson's parents live. Rogers said he believes the issue that provoked the attack on the Whitakers' home involved a land dispute between the Whitaker and Thompson families.

Thompson is free on $1,000 secured bond with a probable cause hearing set for Feb. 20.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Keep It Short

Long Terms Promote Lethargy

Progress doesn't thrive in a stagnant stream, but decay does.

Sluggish water doesn't give rise to a clear, rippling flow. Instead, it supports decomposition. Similarly, long terms of office for elected officials create pools of lethargy that can smother a community, especially a rapidly-changing one.

That's why the citizens of Greenville should reject a proposal to lengthen the terms of its council members and mayor from two years to four years. That move could kill responsive government by making it very difficult for government to change as quickly as the community.

The public should say no to the proposal at a public hearing Thursday on the issue. Voters should tell their elected leaders in a firm voice that two years, not four years, is the best choice for Greenville. The reasons why are simple and obvious.

Greenville is a community where the rate of change is outpaced only by the quickstep march of problems created by this flux. To effectively address these problems requires flexible government. A board that sets policy and implements priorities has to be able to react to change quickly. If it doesn't, then the voters must be able to replace unresponsive leaders at the ballot box.

Two year terms for public officials allow the voters to do that. Four year terms don't. With four year terms, it takes a long time — too long a time — for the face of a public board to change significantly.

That's why four year terms foster stagnation. For progressive, urban areas like Greenville, that can be the kiss of death.

Consider the fact that all North Carolina's major cities — diverse, growing areas — have two year terms. Take a good look at the list: Raleigh, Charlotte, Wilmington, Fayetteville, Salisbury, Greensboro, New Bern, Winston-Salem. Only Rocky Mount has four-year terms. Clearly, two years is a period that allows dynamic communities to operate more efficiently.

Four years is a long time in the life cycle of a community. In Greenville, the demographics and economy have undergone a huge transformation in that period. To disregard that change or be unable to react to it would be unthinkable.

The public must let City Council know Thursday that no adjustment in terms of office is necessary. Short terms have created an active flow of leadership and prevented sluggishness. They work well for the community and make Greenville consistent with its peers. Keep them in place.

Bitter Pill

No Panacea, But Sound Treatment

As virtually its first official act the Bush administration has had to swallow a bitter pill. It has developed a plan for dealing with sick savings and loans which calls for new public and private financing that will protect depositors.

The plan, which was presented by Treasury Secretary Nicholas A. Brady, omits a direct tax on depositors, an unpopular proposal. Nevertheless newly proposed premiums will be a cost of doing business for all insured financial institutions and consequently must eventually be passed on to all customers.

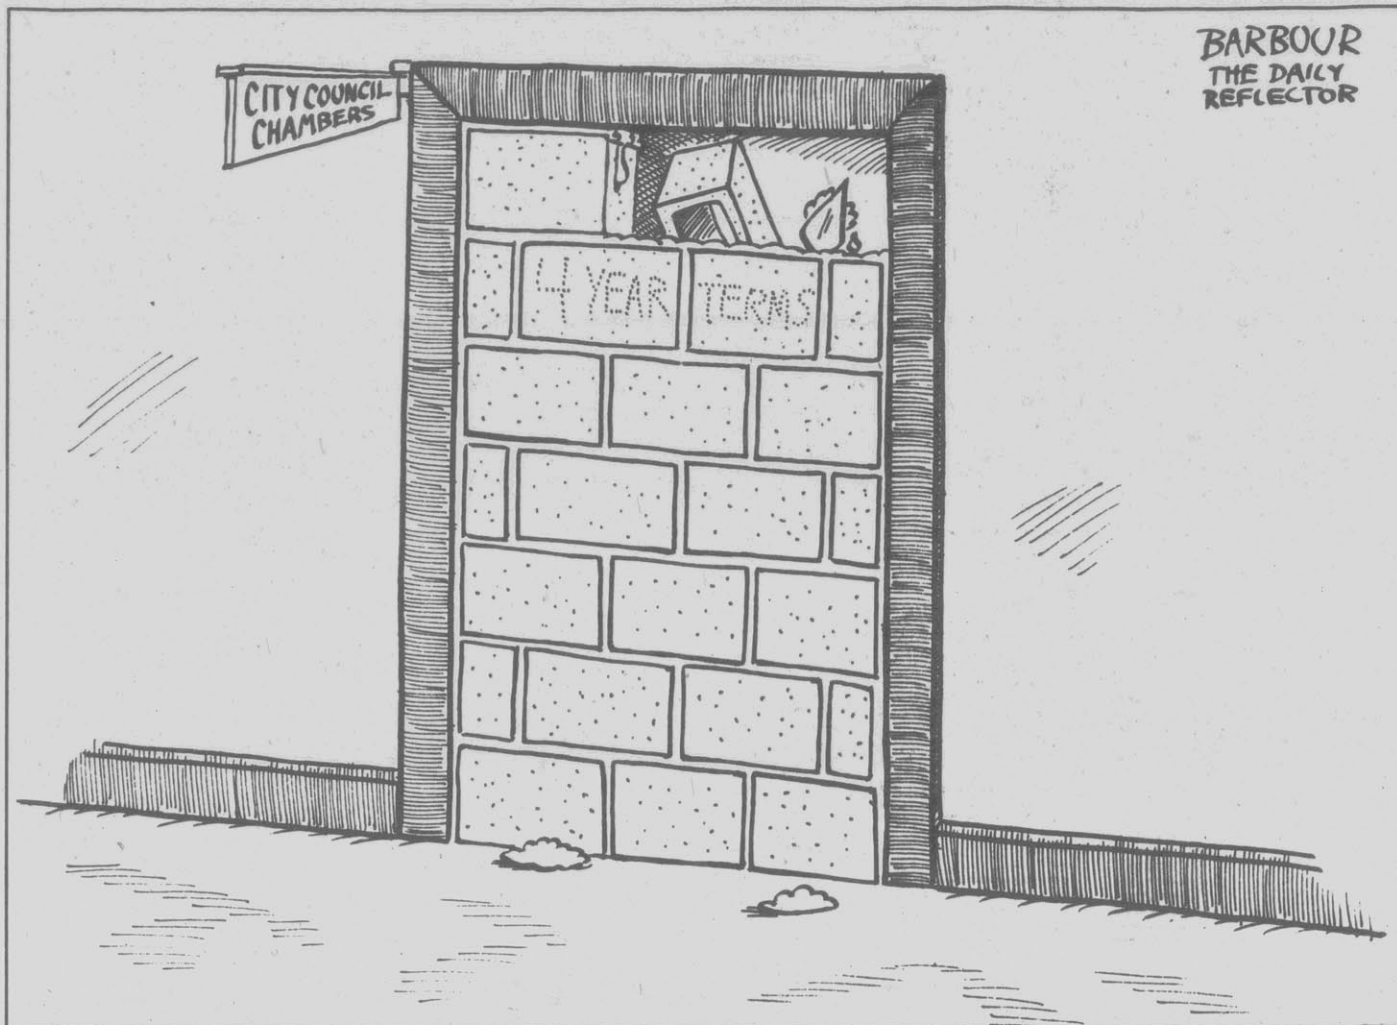

As part of a means to manage the number of failing savings and loans the plan being considered calls for increasing the insurance premiums paid by S&Ls from the current $2.08 per $1,000 of deposits to $2.30 from 1991 through 1994, and they would be $1.80 afterward. Banks' premiums would increase from 83 cents now to $1.20 in 1990 to $1.50 after.

The administration says the public will pay 54 percent of the cost over the 30-year span of the plan. Cost to taxpayers was estimated at $28.1 billion from 1989 through 1994. The taxpayers' cost would be $39.9 billion over a 10-year period. There is no doubt, however, that some of the additional costs to banks and S&Ls will be passed on to consumers.

The overview of it all is that well-run banks and S&Ls and their customers will pay for the poor management of others. Here in North Carolina the S&Ls and banks are presently largely sound — but the bill will inevitably come to everyone's door.

The new administration had no choice but to move swiftly. It was facing a problem which festered from the inattention of the previous administration. President Bush has assured all depositors that their federal insurance is sound. It is in the interest of all well managed financial institutions to see that assurance is upheld.

The nation has a major problem and something has to be done. There is no good or easy solution. The current proposal is at least fair. The Bush administration has developed a method of assuring the stability of the financial system. It may not be a panacea but it is a reasonable treatment for serious ills.

To the editor:

I was quite upset with Gov. Martin's announcement last week that teachers would have to wait until April 1990 for a pay raise.

To get a clear picture on salaries in the area, I decided to call our city to find out about the base salaries in this area. A city sanitation superintendent's base salary is $27,768. At this time, the position does not require any education beyond a high school degree. It does require years of experience and managerial skills.

A teacher in Pitt County will have to work over 19 years to get this same salary. This position requires a college degree as well as continuing education to keep a teaching certificate valid. Management of 25-30 children is one of the daily responsibilities involved. Each position is very difficult, but it does show where some inconsistencies occur.

We all want, expect and deserve good schools for our children, but this cannot happen when we continually put our education goals on hold. To get and keep good teachers, we must be able to pay them salaries which will enable them to support their families. We can no longer look at teaching as a second-income profession. If we want professionals, we must pay for them.

I strongly urge you to write to Gov. Martin and voice your concerns. Let us show our teachers and our children that we consider teaching one of the most important professions there is. It's time we take the responsibility for our future and not just sweep it under the rug for one more year.

To the editor:

I see now how to wire this thing up...

The 'thing' is the continual poor-mouthing of eastern North Carolina, the assignment of poverty-stricken status to our area, while, at the same time and from the same mouth, the statisticians are telling us how good it is to the west of us, comparatively.

I see a way to even it up, doing the best we can with what we have.

Secede.
Why not? Say, from I-95 to the Atlantic, secede from the rest of the state. Speaker Joe can do the necessary bill in the legislature and he could be the first governor and Edgecombe County could be the first capital. Walter could be lieutenant governor and Ed could be speaker of our House. The new state could be called Croacolorina (for our beginnings and for a favorite fish). We could use the pickup for our symbol, the hardcrab for our animal and the crow for our bird. We could have our own budget (with our share from the state total), our own environmental regs, our own coastal management, our own highway system, our own schools, and so on.

To finance the new state and to equalize the disparity between the haves of the West and the havenots of the East, we could establish a visa system so that anyone coming into the state would pay a visitor fee. Poor people would come free. Jobs would be created as toll stations and a border patrol would be established. Surely the haves would pay to get to our waters and our beaches, but if they chose to go elsewhere, we could foreclose on their beach houses and use them as affordable housing for our people.

It is the zeitgeist. Let us hear it for Croacolorina.

I write regarding the recent letter of Garry Nobles, unsuccessful applicant for a permit to establish a tattoo emporium in Downtown Greenville. I am glad to read that Mr. Nobles is committed to educating the public about his controversial profession. However, as president of the then Downtown Greenville Association, I can assure you that Mr. Nobles made no attempt to "educate," or even contact our organization regarding his proposal. Nor, it is my understanding, did he contact Evergreen or the Downtown Property Owners. We would have been delighted to hear Mr. Nobles' presentation. The Downtown community welcomes innovative, quality newcomers who can demonstrate a positive contribution to the area. To borrow a phrase, "a new breeze is blowing" in Downtown Greenville.

Sanford, Creosote & Onondaga Lake

WASHINGTON — The way people are talking, you'd think the members of the 101st Congress had been sitting around the past month, just waiting for their pay increases to take effect. Nothing could be further from the truth.

Our senators and representatives have been busy. It's true they haven't passed many bills. But they've introduced hundreds. And you've got to admit that's a good first step.

The lawmakers want to help. They want to provide more day care centers and Head Start programs for kids, better vocational education for teens. They want to offer more liberal earning limits for Social Security recipients and increased benefits for veterans. They want to raise the minimum wage.

While looking after all God's creatures, the lawmakers have not neglected Mother Nature. Extensions and improvements in the Clean Air Act were introduced in both houses. Acid rain got a lot of deserved attention, too. But my favorites are the bills that pick out particular pieces of the planet for rescue.

Sen. Alan Cranston (D-Calif.) got in early with legislation he's pushed for years to extend the protection of the federal government to 4.5 million acres of the California desert. Among the treasures in this sandy expanse are "an 11,000-year-old creosote bush which may be the oldest living organism on the planet Earth."

Cranston wants to protect the bush before some Hollywood agent uproots it for an appearance on the Johnny Carson show. In the last Congress, the Cranston bill was S. 7. This time, it's S. 11. "Seven, come eleven" is an old conservationist slogan.

Not to be outdone, Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan (D-N.Y.) introduced the Onondaga Lake Restoration Act, saying he was "determined" to make the rescue of that upstate New York lake "a model to the rest of the nation. Some might say that such an effort is hopeless. Not so...Cleaning up Onondaga Lake can show there are very few environmental problems that cannot be overcome."

Recognizing that "some may be not intimately familiar with the history of the lake," ex-Professor Moynihan recounted the sad tale. Early in the 1800s, before the discovery of Miami Beach, it was a "well-known aquatic playground." But for most of the last century, soda ash manufacturers dumped 25 pounds of mercury a day and unmeasured amounts of chemical sludge into its waters. The city of

David Broder

Syracuse also did unspeakable things with its sewage.

"For all practical purposes," Moynihan conceded, "the lake has been considered dead for as many years as most of us can remember." But now the soda ash plant has moved to Wisconsin (wake up, you Badgers, before it's too late) and "there have been small stirrings of hope that perhaps the lake can be reborn...But this will not come cheap."

'But Sanford is a first-termer and does not understand the protocol. He has the further disadvantage of having served as governor in a state which required him to really balance the budget. When he wanted to improve the schools, he had to raise the taxes to pay for it. He clearly doesn't understand how Congress works.'

When a Democrat says something "will not come cheap," one is wise to be on guard. Still, it was startling to read the next sentence: "My bill will provide $100 billion in federal funds for the lake." The figure was repeated in the next paragraph, but I believe it was a typographical error. Even the persuasive Pat Moynihan would think that a bit extravagant, and the fine print of the bill makes it look like he's seeking a mere $100 million.

After all these fine plans were outlined by their sponsors, it seemed positively churlish for Sen. Terry Sanford (D-N.C.) to come along in S. 101 and try to call off the party. His language can only be called extreme. "Nothing we have done, including implementation of Gramm-Rudman-Hollings (the three-year-old "automatic" deficit-reduction plan) has reduced our real deficit one dime. Under Gramm-Rudman-Hollings, we are merely dabbing at a nosebleed while blood is gushing from the jugular, threatening the strength of our great nation."

This kind of uncouth medical metaphor has no place in Congress — especially in the early weeks of the year, when so many enticing spending schemes are being hatched. But Sanford is a first-termer and does not understand the protocol.

He has the further disadvantage of having served as governor in a state which required him to really balance the budget. When he wanted to improve the schools, he had to raise the taxes to pay for it. He clearly doesn't understand how Congress works.

He has the temerity to propose that Congress create an operating budget for the government — separate from the interest payments on past debts and also separate from the surpluses in Social Security and other trust funds. It's those trust fund surpluses which allow Congress to claim that the real budget deficit of about $300 billion is only $155 billion.

Sanford's bill would require honest accounting and set a tight timetable not only for the elimination of the real deficit but for the accumulation of subsequent surpluses to start reducing the national debt. Further, in any year when the targets weren't going to be met, it would require that Congress vote on whether to make up half the shortfall by added revenues.

Somehow, I suspect that Onondaga Lake will be clean and that creosote bush twice as old before the Sanford bill becomes law.

House Panel Approves $80 Million Prison Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — The House Appropriations Committee unanimously approved a two-year, $80 million package Tuesday to ratify a consent agreement stemming from lawsuits over prison conditions.

Rep. Anne Barnes, D-Orange, called it a "no frills" package with a "strong indication" of being approved by the federal courts if passed by the General Assembly. The full House was expected to vote on the measure Thursday and enactment could come as early as Friday if the Senate concurs in a technical House amendment.

"This bill, as good a bill as it is, does not solve the problems that we have in our prison system," Ms. Barnes said. "But it is an important first step."

Major elements of the consent decree call for eliminating triple-bunking in state prisons by July 1 and establishing a standard of 50-square-feet per inmate by July 1, 1994. The legislative package would provide for 800 new beds and an expansion of alternatives to prison that could divert as many as 8,000 people into such things as intensive probation and house arrest.

In addition, a treatment center would be established at Cherry Hospital near Goldsboro to care for convicted drunken drivers who could be paroled after a 30-day treatment.

The legislation would take effect immediately upon ratification because it would let the Correction Department borrow money against next year's budget, Ms. Barnes said.

She reminded committee members that the long-term solutions to the problem still must be addressed.

"We need an incarceration policy," Ms. Barnes said. "We are continuing to address the symptoms and we need to get down to the cure of the disease."

Thornburg Says Emergency Prison Changes Could Generate Problems

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — While North Carolina's prison system faces federal pressures to reduce crowding and improve conditions, the General Assembly must keep the larger picture of the justice system in mind, the state attorney general says.

"Law enforcement has been doing a yeoman's job ... of bringing to the courts the people who are committing the crimes," Lacy Thornburg told the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Corrections Tuesday. "That means that more and more defendants are being brought into the court system."

Prosecutors and judges lack the staff to keep up with the surging caseloads, Thornburg said.

And judges "have the problem, once they sentence, of not knowing how long anyone they put into the system is going to be there," he said.

The General Assembly this session is handling emergency legislation to accommodate consent decrees arising from lawsuits over prison conditions. But Thornburg called on the committee to recognize the outcome of some emergency procedures.

Alternatives to prison, designed to relieve crowding by releasing more inmates to community-based parole or new programs like house arrest, can only go so far, Thornburg said.

"All of us, I think, agree that we should put behind bars those who constitute a danger to society," he said. "Ultimately, you have to face up to the fact that you have to provide space to incarcerate individuals who cannot function in society and constitute a threat to society."

Alternatives, including the increasing use of local jails for low-risk inmates, lead to more dangerous inmates at the state level, Thornburg said. With an expected increase in the prison population of 600 inmates per year, that means building a new high-security unit every year costing $50 million to $60 million, he said.

"The criminal justice system is somewhat like a balloon in that if you stick your finger in it at one point, you're going to get a bulge somewhere else," Thornburg said.

In other legislative action, a representative of the Beer and Wine Wholesalers Association used the first meeting of the House Government Subcommittee on Alcoholic Beverage Control to begin lobbying against an increase in the excise taxes on beer and wine.

Chris Valauri told the panel North Carolina already ranks fifth in the nation in such excise taxes at $1.20 per case — three times the national average.

But Rep. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus, the subcommittee chairman, asked several questions about the relative tax levels between liquor and beer and wine. He noted the tax on 8.8 million gallons of liquor brings in $66 million a year to the general fund, while the tax on 130 million gallons of beer raises only $62 million.

The excise tax on liquor was raised last session from 22.5 percent to 28 percent, increasing state revenues by $10 million. But officials told the committee the state continues to slow its liquor consumption by about 3 percent a year due to rising health consciousness, greater awareness of drunken driving, a higher drinking age and the higher price of liquor.

Compromise Sought On Road Proposals

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The House chairman of a joint committee developing a multibillion-dollar highway construction plan says he hasn't abandoned hope for a compromise before the panel holds what might be its final meeting.

Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, said he was continuing to seek a compromise with the Martin administration and with Sen. Bill Goldston, D-Rockingham, the study panel's other co-chairman.

Goldston has said he expects the committee to choose between three rival plans when it meets next Monday, but Hunter Tuesday said he hoped all sides would be in agreement by then.

"I hope we'll have one proposal," he said. "I think having three proposals will hurt us in the long run in trying to get a package together that everybody can get behind and support."

Goldston said he was willing to talk but was not optimistic. "I've received no calls," he said.

He and Transportation Secretary Jim Harrington are pushing similar plans designed to raise more than $6 billion over 12 years, which would roughly double the $375 million available annually for road building.

Both plans would authorize about $1 billion in bonds to purchase construction rights-of-way, levy a 2 percent automobile title transfer fee, and increase the gasoline tax, but by different amounts.

Currently, the motor fuel tax is 14 cents per gallon plus 3 percent at the wholesale level, which is passed on to motorists. Harrington proposes raising the wholesale tax to 7 percent (about 2 1/4 cents per gallon at the pump) and raising the flat portion of the tax by 2 cents, for a total increase of about 4 1/4 cents.

Goldston agrees with the 7 percent wholesale increase but prefers raising the flat tax by 3 cents per gallon, for a total boost at the pump of about 5 1/4 cents.

The Harrington and Goldston plans would devote a majority of the money to the network of four-lane roads, while also funding loop highways around major cities and the paving of all 9,500 miles of secondary roads traveled by at least 50 vehicles per day.

Hunter on Tuesday avoided specific discussion of his differences with the Goldston and Harrington approaches, but said he still was not satisfied that their plans would guarantee fair distribution of the money to all areas of the state.

"I'm trying to make sure we have a framework so that the members and the taxpaying public can see how the money's going to be spent and know that the highway projects they're interested in in their area are going to be funded," Hunter said.

He said House support of a package hinges on fair revenue distribution.

IN THE STATE

Court Limits Conditions On Developers

RALEIGH (AP) — A ruling by the state Court of Appeals could prompt local governments to change the conditions they place on developers, one legal expert said.

Instead of requiring developers to dedicate right of way or construct utilities, governments might assess fees tied to the impact of the development, he said.

The appeals court limited the conditions Tuesday that local governments may place on developers without paying them for the loss of their property rights.

The decision was the first by a state appellate court to adopt a test for deciding when certain conditions placed on developers amount to "taking" property, for which the Fifth Amendment requires compensation. The ruling applies to conditions known as exactions, which are imposed in exchange for allowing development.

There are four general types of exactions, said Richard D. Ducker, assistant director of the Institute of Government at Chapel Hill: dedication of land for parks, utility easements and right of way for streets; construction of improvements, such as sewer lines; payment of fees rather than complying with dedication or improvement conditions; and payment of "impact fees," which prorate the cost of public facilities serving the development.

Tuesday's decision may lead local governments to assess fees rather than impose other types of exactions, Ducker said.

Stage Debut

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — On the Duke University campus, it's almost — but not quite — as big as Blue Devils basketball. Dance superstar Mikhail Baryshnikov is making his dramatic stage debut playing a cockroach in an adaptation of Franz Kafka's "Metamorphosis."

The play, which has its official press opening today, has been a hot ticket ever since the box office opened in December. The first two days, 200 to 300 people waited in line for as long as four hours to buy tickets. Now the three-week run at the 640-seat Reynolds Industries Theater is sold out.

Nearly 30 percent of Duke's 10,000 students will see the show before the end of its run Feb. 25, Kumin estimates. Tour bus companies are bringing in theatergoers from neighboring states and a sizable press contingent has arrived, from as far away as Chicago and Dallas, to see the play before it opens on Broadway in March.

Measles

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina has been given $300,000 in additional funds from the Centers for Disease Control to be used for measles vaccines, and the state has identified an additional $750,000 that could be used if needed, officials say.

"We were given $1.5 million which was to last us for the 12 months from January to December 1989," Nancy Pedarek, a spokeswoman for the state Department of Human Resources, said Tuesday. "The measles epidemic has used pretty much of that."

Ms. Pedarek said the department petitioned for more funds from the CDC, which have been granted. She said the department has identified up to $750,000 in additional state money that could be applied if needed.

Measles cases have been reported in more than half the state's 100 counties.

Navy Dumping

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The two senior officers of the amphibious assault ship Nassau have been cited for dumping medical waste off the North Carolina coast last summer, the Navy said.

The Nassau's commanding officer, Capt. Robert P. Lucas, and the executive officer, Capt. Charles P. Vion, were taken to admiral's mast, a non-judicial hearing, said Lt. Cmdr. John Lloyd, a spokesman for the Atlantic Fleet Surface Force.

The results of the hearing were not disclosed because of the officers' privacy rights, Lloyd said on Tuesday. Lucas had been routinely relieved of command last month by Capt. Frank M. Dirren Jr. Vion remains aboard the ship, Lloyd said.

Such hearings could result in no punishment for the two officers or up to 30 days in quarters, plus forfeiture of half a month's pay for two months and admonition or reprimand.

A six-month Navy investigation found that the Nassau violated Navy regulations by dumping the waste within 25 miles of shore. Another Norfolk-based ship, the tank landing ship Newport, also dumped medical debris that washed ashore, but the dumping took place more than 25 miles from shore so none of its officers or crew were disciplined, Lloyd said.

Mavretic Baby

RALEIGH (AP) — The wife of state House of Representatives Speaker Joe Mavretic gave birth to a son Tuesday — just in time for the news to be announced during the House session.

Michael Kranifeld Mavretic was born at 2 p.m. at Wake Medical Center, according to a statement issued by the speaker's office. House members stood and applauded when the statement was read.

Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, was absent from the session to be with his wife, Raleigh lawyer Laura L. Kranifeld, whom he married last year. The baby weighed in at seven pounds, four ounces and has black, curly hair.

Lead Testing

ASHEVILLE (AP) — The University of North Carolina at Asheville has received a $15,000 grant from the Clean Water Fund of North Carolina to continue research into lead contamination in tap water.

The Clean Water Fund of North Carolina originally gave UNC-Asheville a $3,000 grant to fund the first stage of testing.

Of the more than 800 tap water samples analyzed at UNC-Asheville since the program began last summer, about 12.8 percent had lead concentrations over 20 parts per billion, threatening children and fetuses with possible brain damage and other ill health effects, said environmental sciences professor Rick Maas.

The initial testing spared 84 families from further exposure to dangerous levels of toxic metal, officials said.

Senate Panel Warned U.S. Subject To Terrorists

By Jay Arnold
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Advanced technology and centralization are making the nation's energy and telecommunications networks increasingly vulnerable to catastrophic terrorist attack, federal investigators say.

The government is ill-equipped to deal with such attacks, which could be carried out with conventional weapons, or even computers, by as few as a half-dozen assailants, a Senate Governmental Affairs Committee investigator said Tuesday following a yearlong investigation.

"In many cases, the consequences appear to be manageable; in a few cases, the consequences are potentially catastrophic," Charles C. Lane, a committee investigator, told a committee hearing.

The Associated Press this week reported that the Energy Department was quietly advising U.S.

companies of a growing threat of terrorist attack on vital domestic energy facilities and that it was pressing them to fortify their defenses.

An internal DOE report obtained by the AP said it was possible that potential Third World adversaries "could sponsor attacks on the energy infrastructure in the U.S."

It was learned that a special inter-agency task force has been created within the National Security Council to assess the vulnerability of U.S. energy systems and to study ways of minimizing the risk of supply disruptions caused by "techno-terrorism."

Lane said that while U.S. energy and telecommunications systems are robust and often redundant, they are vulnerable to multi-site terrorist attacks. And while the government is prepared to handle a major national security emergency, "there are no programs designed specifically" to deal with a telecommunications disaster.

The committee hearings are being held to study how well the federal government and industry are organized to repel attacks and sustain and repair vital energy, telecommunications and transportation sources.

John C. McDonald, who chaired a National Research Council committee that investigated the vulnerability of the nation's telecommunications system, told the committee that because long-distance networks rely upon "a very limited number of signal transfer points, a few well-placed hand grenades would crash major portions of the domestic long-distance networks."

But other witnesses were less alarmist about the effects of such attacks. Benham E. Morriss, deputy manager of the government's National Communications System, said he was "not complacent" about the dangers, but added: "I think the statements that have been made are vastly overstated."

Morriss acknowledged that the consequences today of communications disruptions can be much greater than in the past, "But I don't think from a national security point of view we've gotten into a worse situation."

Thomas A. Norman, representing the recently created National Security Telecommunications Advisory Committee, said the industry-government panel did not "share the degree of concern" of the other witnesses at the hearing.

Norman said the trend to more diversity in the telecommunications industry is good for national security and that technology advances are "making detection of troubles and restoration of our network even faster than... in the old days."

But McDonald said increasing dependence on new technology such as fiber optics and computer software and a trend towards centralization of facilities increases vulnerability.

He said his committee recommended "action to make critical network (facilities) more secure, reduce the concentration of network traffic and examine ways to provide more diversity in transmission facilities."

He said the government also should establish additional emergency plans using simulated disaster and recovery scenarios and should try to determine means of protecting public networks from "penetration by hostile users."

McDonald said the government has excellent contingency plans for disasters that cause massive loss of life, but "when it comes to the areas of economic disruption or social disruption, we feel that more needs to be done."

Committee Chairman John Glenn, D-Ohio, said he didn't want the government to play "Big Brother" and saddle the industry with more rules.

"But if we see vulnerabilities creeping in, we can't afford to stay out of it... if we're looking at the national security," Glenn said.

Lane said an effort is essential to identify and initiate measures to harden networks to withstand assaults and to make plans to recover services lost as a result of successful attack."

Mississippi Could Turn Profit Off Its $10 Billion Indebtedness

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JACKSON, Miss. — Mississippi let a debt of more than $10 billion build up during the past 148 years, but the state treasurer says he has an idea that could turn all the red ink into a gold mine for college students.

Back in 1841, Mississippi defaulted on $7 million in bonds issued to purchase stock in two state-created banks. While that antebellum debt was ballooning to more than $10 billion, state officials fended off repeated efforts by the British bondholders to get repaid.

Now, a London collection agency finally has given up the quest. And state Treasurer Marshall Bennett has cooked up a plan for the state to profit off the deal by selling the bonds as antiques.

"They've been an obscure part of Mississippi's history that has sort of been stored away in a vault," Bennett said, outlining the events that led to his proposal to fund scholarships with proceeds from the bonds.

Bennett said the seed for his idea was planted two weeks after he took office in January 1988, when the director of the Council of the Corporation of Foreign Bondholders called him from London seeking payment on many of the old bond certificates.

The debt collection agency had been hounding Mississippi treasurers ever since its founding in 1868. Most of the old Mississippi bonds are held by British investors.

But Bennett repeated that Mississippi wouldn't pay a penny on the bonds. He had no choice — an article in the 1890 Mississippi Constitution specifically prohibited repayment.

Last week, the bondholders' organization announced that it was going into liquidation.

"We are withdrawing from the fray and we shan't be pursuing the matter any longer," Council Manager Eric French said in a telephone interview from London.

In recent years, the only debts remaining on the council's books involved East Germany and Mississippi, French said. It didn't appear likely that either would ever pay off their debts.

French said it is theoretically possible individual bondholders might continue trying to get their money from Mississippi, but he wasn't aware of any such plans.

Bennett, meanwhile, explained that a small portion of the old bonds fell into the state's hands years ago. The bonds will never be redeemed, but he said the state could sell them to antique bond collectors.

He said $450,000 worth of the $7 million in bonds — 450 documents with a face value of $1,000 each — were donated in 1914 to Mississippi's institutions of higher learning by the Peabody Trust Fund, established by the late Massachusetts philanthropist George Peabody. The Mississippi treasurer holds the bonds in trust.

Bennett said most state College Board members and legislators over the years were never aware of the bonds.

Warming Trend Takes Over As Most Of Nation Returns To Usual Weather

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A slight warming trend today gave fruit farmers something to cheer about and held out the promise of a return to a normal winter for much of the nation after more than a week of record cold.

"The freeze-a-thon is over," the National Weather Service declared in San Antonio, Texas.

"It does seem to be a trend," agreed meteorologist Bob Johns at the weather service's Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

"It looks like we'll continue to have cold temperatures but it doesn't look like it'll be as extreme."

Not that spring is just around the corner. Temperatures today in most places were expected to be only slightly higher than those Tuesday, when records were set in dozens of cities.

The bitter cold was expected to linger in Colorado particularly, where it was 35 below zero early today in the town of Craig. And more cold weather came calling from Canada, moving into the northern Plains on Tuesday and heading toward the Great Lakes, where it was expected to hit late today.

At least 84 deaths have been attributed to the weather since Jan. 31, when bitter arctic air from Alaska made its way into the lower 48 states. In one such death Tuesday, an elderly woman who had more than $5,000 stashed in her plywood shack in Laredo, Texas, died of hypothermia.

In Idaho, where as many as 1,600 cattle and sheep have died in towering snow drifts, National Guardsmen in helicopters flew over the countryside to help ranchers search for surviving livestock. Few were found.

But in one indication of a thaw, the temperature in Fairbanks, Alaska, climbed above zero Tuesday for the first time in 26 days.

"It's been quite a while," Fairbanks meteorologist John Lingaas said. He predicted that the mercury, which hit 8 above Tuesday, would be into the 20s by Thursday.

Low temperatures in much of California climbed back above freezing early today, ending the crisis for the state's multi-billion-dollar agriculture industry.

Still, farmers said the freeze has already caused serious damage to some citrus crops, prompting increases in the wholesale price of oranges.

"The lemon crop in the San Joaquin Valley may have been obliterated," said Richard Pescosolido, farm manager for Sequoia Orange Co. in Exeter.

Washington state's $2.7 million apricot crop, the nation's second largest, was badly damaged by the cold, county extension agents said, and the state's winter wheat crop remains threatened. But in Texas' Rio Grande Valley, citrus growers said damage to their crops was light.

Study Says Salary Gap Is Smaller

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

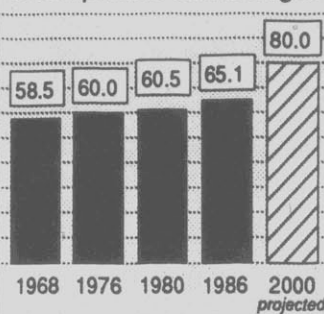

Women's earnings are catching up to men's far faster than the common wisdom suggests, argues a new Rand Corp. study being released Wednesday. Yet women's economic progress, the study says, is contributing to the break-up of the traditional family and the "feminization" of poverty.

The report by economists James P. Smith and Michael Ward — who raised a furor 4½ years ago with an earlier study they conducted on women's pay — projects that by the year 2000 women on average will be paid at least 80 percent of what men earn, up from 65 percent currently.

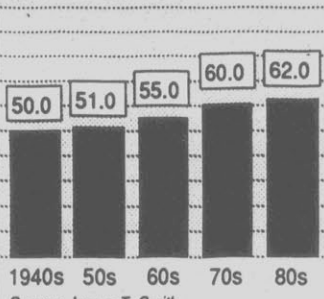

At the same time, they warn policy-makers to recognize that rising wages draw women into the work force and discourage child bearing — trends, they say, that destabilize the traditional family, contributing to rising divorce rates and the growing number of families headed by women.

And since it is among those female-headed families that poverty increasingly is concentrated, they say, leaders need to consider whether policies that encourage women to work are having unintended negative consequences. "One price of the very labor market success women have enjoyed may well be a less stable American family," says the study, which appears in the current issue of the Journal of Economic Perspectives.

Smith and Ward triggered controversy with their previous study disputing the widely held view that women had made few gains in closing the "wage gap" during most of the 20th century. In fact, they said, women's wages had risen more quickly than men's from 1920 through 1980 and promised to continue narrowing the difference through the end of the century.

Smith and Ward write that other studies have understated women's earning gains by failing to take into account the fact that, in the past, many women entering the labor force had few skills and less-than-average education. Such women workers got low wages, pulling down the overall average of women's earnings.

Their analysis, by contrast, finds that women have steadily been gaining more skills and education over time — gaining faster, in fact, than men — as the U.S. economy has paid less for men's skills in such areas as manufacturing.

The constant narrowing of the differences between the capabilities women and men bring to the job has had a dramatic effect in the 1980s, the study says. In 1980, women's earnings were 60 percent of men's. But by 1986, women were earning 65 percent of what men earned — "the largest and swiftest gain witnessed in this century," Smith and Ward write.

The gains, they predict, will continue. Not only will women's earnings continue to rise more quickly than men's, but women will take their place in leadership positions in the economy.

First lady reads to students at Philadelphia's Free Library

Grandmother Bush Takes Time To Read

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

PHILADELPHIA — The children at the Free Library of Philadelphia giggled when she read them the book, "The Terrible, Horrible, No Good, Very Bad Day."

But Tuesday wasn't that sort of awful time for Barbara Bush, who became a grandmother for the 11th time in the early morning and later launched her campaign as first lady to help combat illiteracy.

Noting that Pennsylvania has a 29 percent illiteracy rate and "every major city has a big problem," Mrs. Bush said in an interview that expanding the Head Start program for preschoolers to include maternal literacy and job training programs "just makes sense if those women aren't working. They don't want to be on welfare. They want to work."

But asked what she would do to implement such programs, she replied: "I'm not going to see that it happens. I'm going to work very hard to encourage people to see that it happens."

Referring to Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., who accompanied her, she added: "I don't feel my job is to do the senator's job or the president's job. I feel my job is to encourage the corporate and private sector to help, whether it's individuals or agencies or Rotary Clubs or Lions' Clubs."

Mrs. Bush visited Philadelphia to help launch its "Love Is Reading Together Week," a program that included members of Temple University's Institute on Aging conducting a discussion about the importance of intergenerational ties and stressing reading as a family activity.

When the question arose, "What's great about grandchildren?" Mrs. Bush raised her hand, was called on, and answered, "You can love them and read to them and send them home." The remark produced a roar of laughter.

Mrs. Bush noted that she and the president had become grandparents for the 11th time early Tuesday when Sharon Bush, wife of the Bushes' son, Neil, gave birth to 7-pound 2-ounce Ashley Walker Bush in Denver. Bush said they plan to visit the new baby in the next month.

Strangers Buy Food For Dancers

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BALTIMORE — As word spread across the United States that 59 Soviet ballet dancers were stranded here with their 15-city tour on the brink of being canceled, sympathetic strangers called long-distance with offers to pay for the dancers' meals.

Robert M. Pomory, president of the Lyric Opera House, where the dancers performed over the weekend, said that a woman from St. Louis had arranged for dinner to be bought for the entire company at the Belvedere Hotel, where they are staying.

The Lyric is paying for the dancers' rooms at the Belvedere through Wednesday, Pomory said.

A private foundation from New York also had donated money to cover the dancers' per diem (for daily meals), he said.

The company, the relatively obscure Donetsk State Opera and Ballet Theatre, from the Ukraine, was stranded here Sunday night after their California producers announced that private investors had pulled out of the three-month tour after the first stop in Baltimore.

Jan Urdzik, one of the producers, said that the investors refused to put up $200,000 for the tour after Soviet officials refused to allow three Soviet ballet stars, including

Tower Confirmation Effort Stalls Amid New Challenges

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Confirmation proceedings for Defense Secretary-designate John Tower were stalled today amid signs that President Bush's nomination of the former Texas lawmaker was in serious trouble with top Democrats on the Senate Armed Services Committee.

"I can only speak for myself, but I am leaning against the Tower nomination unless I can be convinced some perceptions I have can be disproven," Sen. J. James Exon, D-Neb., said in a telephone interview Tuesday night.

Exon said those perceptions are that Tower has not recovered "from what obviously was a drinking problem at one time," and that Tower's previous work as a defense consultant created a conflict of interest for the would-be head of the Pentagon.

Exon wouldn't name or number the other members of the committee who he says share his feeling. But The New York Times today quoted Exon as saying it was "a fair characterization" to say that Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., opposed the nomination.

Nunn was neither at home nor his office Tuesday evening.

The FBI, meanwhile is investigating a new allegation against Tower, who has been dogged by complaints of womanizing and excessive drinking. Exon said the investigation could delay the committee's confirmation vote until after next week's congressional recess.

The committee had originally hoped to vote on the confirmation last week, then had counted on taking up the confirmation today after receiving what was to have been the final FBI report before the new allegation surfaced.

The Times said the newest allegation dealt with Tower's financial dealings.

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., said Tuesday at a news conference that he and Nunn met at the White House with Bush, Chief of Staff John Sununu, Counsel C. Boyden Gray and Brent Scowcroft, the administration's national security adviser, to discuss Tower.

According to presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, the president told Nunn that Tower was an "excellent nominee and hoped there'd be a vote soon."

"He (Nunn) did not speak out against it or ask that it be withdrawn," Fitzwater said.

Warner had said earlier in the day that he had been briefed by the White House about what was expected to be the final FBI inquiry before the new allegation. He, in turn, briefed the GOP members of the committee.

"Obviously, there have been some unofficial briefings going on that I as chairman of the committee have not been part of," Nunn said.

The GOP senators said a preliminary FBI report provided no grounds to disqualify Tower.

But the separate GOP briefings angered Nunn, and may have helped push the Democrats toward opposition.

Tar Heels Vote Against Raise

of 4 percent, she said. Federal District Court Judge Malcolm Howard of Greenville, who has been on the bench about a year, said he receives the same salary as a member of Congress. Tuesday's vote directly affected his salary.

"The Congress (and) the federal District Court judges were, under this bill, to receive the same $135,000," he said.

It has been several years since federal judges received a pay raise, Howard said, but he would not comment on whether the defeated pay raise might discourage attorneys from seeking positions on the federal bench.

The Associated Press reported that several other North Carolina congressmen also said public concern played a major role in defeating the raise.

Rep. Steve Neal, D-N.C., said enacting the raise would have sent the wrong signal to the public as lawmakers work to reduce the budget deficit. But, he said it is important to keep congressional salaries high enough to attract the most qualified people.

"There will always be people who will run for Congress, no worry about that," he said. "But, I think in the long run you will attract better people if you pay adequately."

Rep. Tim Valentine, D-N.C., said he believes most members of Congress really wanted the raise but were pressured by voters to oppose it.

"I think it's the private opinion of most members of Congress that we'd like to have more money, but the people were dead-set against it. This vote turned out the way it did because the people were against it.

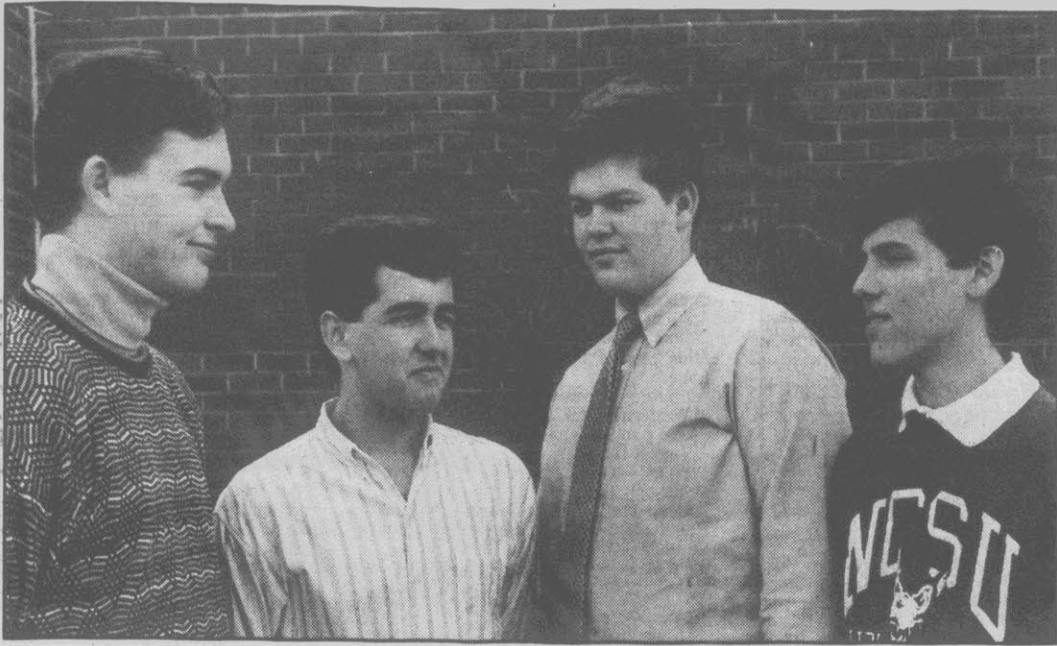

"It will be a while before Congress touches this issue again," he said.

Though all North Carolina Congressmen voted against the pay hike, Rep. Cass Ballenger, R-N.C., nearly ended up on the wrong side of the issue, according to the news service.

"I was at a public hearing and rushed onto the floor to vote," he said. "I pushed the 'No' button and then looked up to see everybody else was voting 'Yes.' I asked somebody if we weren't voting on the pay raise, and he said we were, but you had to vote 'Yes' for the resolution opposing the pay raise.

"So I had to go down to the front of the House and fill out a form to get my vote changed," he said.

The Pitt teachers suggest the state halt implementation of the Basic Education Program to get the money to pay them, if need be.

The BEP, which requires foreign language, theater arts, dance, visual arts, orchestra, physical education and earth science be offered to kindergarten through high school students, will cost the state about $800 million to fully implement by 1992, according to Kay Williams, assistant for public information for the N.C. Department of Instruction.

The teachers also agreed they do not want the Career Ladder Program implemented. The program provides a method of evaluating the performance of teachers, and based on their performance, the teachers advance to various levels and salaries.

The teachers are scheduled to meet Thursday to finalize their plans.

black students from a window in Garrett Dormitory.

Schatzman said White went to the room in Garrett and was invited inside where a fight occurred. He said a second fight took place outside the dorm.

Schatzman's letter to Eakin calls for White to be readmitted at ECU or that equal punishment be given to the white students involved.

He said that "the white students, with help from the university, pressed charges against the young fellow in the Pitt County court and found him guilty of simple assault."

"This is 1989, this is America, where you have to pay for somebody else's privilege to call you a nigger," Schatzman said.

"Black students in the university have lost faith and lack confidence in the university," he said. "It is clear that they have a double standard for black and white students."

If Eakin does not respond favorably to the NAACP's recommendations, "we will go to the University of North Carolina's board of directors and to Max Joyner, chairman of the board of ECU, and ask them to investigate," Schatzman said.

If that doesn't work, "we will go to the federal government to investigate civil charges, and I will call a press conference and tell every black student recruited to play at ECU to rethink that because it may not be safe for them to go there. I know how important black athletes are to places like ECU," Schatzman said.

Eakin said Tuesday that he had talked to Schatzman by phone on Monday and told him he would be sending him a response this week.

"To the best of my knowledge, the student disciplinary system functioned in the way it was intended to function and I found no exception in their process," Eakin said.

In This Haven Of Butterflies, The Builders Are Monarchs

By Miles Corwin
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

PACIFIC GROVE, Calif. — This community bills itself as "Butterfly Town U.S.A." and takes every opportunity to affiliate with the monarch butterfly. There is a Monarch Dental Group, a Monarch Mobile Home Park and a Monarch Restaurant. There is a Butterfly Grove Inn and Butterfly Trees Lodge.

Large metal butterfly wings adorn the Chamber of Commerce building. And each fall, all the kindergarten pupils dress as butterflies and parade through the main street of this Monterey Peninsula town.

But while tourists continue to flock to Pacific Grove searching for monarchs, the number of butterflies migrating to the town each fall has decreased sharply. In the last decade, dozens of trees where the butterflies used to gather have been destroyed to make way for development projects.

"When we moved here hundreds of butterflies covered our entire lawn. It was beautiful, a carpet of bright orange and black," recalled Betty Nixon, who moved to Pacific Grove 35 years ago. "But a few days ago I think I counted a total of six butterflies around our house."

In the 1970s, city officials placed a high priority on development and did not protect butterfly habitats, said Vice Mayor David Eaton. The City Council, at the time, assumed that if the trees where the butterflies gathered were cut down, they would just move to neighboring trees. Instead, many monarchs perished or left the area.

A number of other California communities have destroyed monarch habitats and seen a great decrease in butterflies. In the last three years, seven monarch roosting sites have been destroyed in the state to make room for housing tracts, business parks, horse farms and trailer parks, said Chris Nagano, chief entomologist for the Monarch Project, a private conservation group. Although millions of monarchs migrate to California each fall, their existence could be threatened if many more of the approximately 100 West Coast roosting sites are destroyed, Nagano said.

The Los Angeles-based Monarch Project is working to preserve remaining West Coast roosting sites. Volunteers visit roosts and affix small white tags to the wings of thousands of butterflies, said Nagano, a research associate at the Los Angeles Natural History Museum.

The tags give the address of the museum so

LAT/WP News Service

Monarch butterflies cluster on a eucalyptus tree people who find dead butterflies in fields and back yards can return the insects to the museum. Others see live butterflies and call the museum after spotting the tag. Nagano can then determine migrating patterns and population trends.

Last year, the state legislature passed a bill recognizing monarchs and their roosting sites as a unique resource in California. But there still is no specific protection plan for the butterflies nor any penalties for the destruction of roosting sites.

Mexico has been much more aggressive than the United States in protecting its monarchs, which migrate from eastern North America to an area outside Mexico City. It has established monarch reserves and instituted laws protecting its migrating butterflies.

American entomologists are concerned about the loss of the winter sites because the monarchs travel such a great distance and their journey is so remarkable. Monarchs migrate to the West Coast each fall from the Central Valley and from as far away as Utah, Nevada and Idaho. They fly thousands of feet above the ground, navigating by the position of the sun, searching for thermal air currents and then effortlessly gliding for miles. Butterflies have traveled up to 80 miles a day, Nagano said, and migrations of up to 4,000 miles have been recorded.

Monarchs would not survive the harsh winters of the inland states so they spend the fall and winter on the West Coast. The monarchs find their favorite groves of trees in California by seeking specific humidity and temperature conditions.

In the spring the butterflies return to the Central Valley or the western slope of the Sierra Mountains and lay their eggs on milkweed, the only plant caterpillars feed on. The monarch's bodies contain enough milkweed — a poisonous substance to birds — to protect them from predators. It is such an effective defense mechanism that other butterflies such as viceroys, which do not feed on milkweed, mimic the monarch's color pattern as a protective device.

Originally, when monarchs arrived in California for the winter, they roosted almost exclusively in Monterey pines. But about 100 years ago, the eucalyptus was introduced here from Australia, and most monarchs now prefer eucalyptus groves.

The Pacific Grove City Council is now more concerned about preserving monarchs, Eaton said, and has required a butterfly habitat study from a property owner who wants to build homes on a roosting site. A group of residents called Friends of the Monarch is trying to persuade the state to buy the property and turn it into a monarch reserve.

"We're either going to have to do something or we're going to have to change our name from Butterfly Town U.S.A. to something else," said Carol Arthur, founder of Friends of the Monarch. "Because once these butterflies are gone, they're gone. They're not something we can bring back."

Residents worry, Arthur said, that the butterfly soon will become an empty symbol in Pacific Grove. There are no butterflies left near the Butterfly Trees Lodge, because the adjacent roosting site was destroyed. And the proposed development project is on one of the two remaining sites in town. The Butterfly Grove Inn is adjacent to that site.

"If the project goes through there won't be any butterflies left near the Butterfly Inn either," said Vern Yaden, director of the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History. "All you'd have left of the butterflies would be the name. It would be like having a dinosaur village."

Snazzy Border Highlights Vest

Checkerboard vest features two types of yarn

A snazzy border reminiscent of checkerboard squares delineates the V-neckline and bottom of this knit cardigan vest. Two types of yarn (a solid and an ombre) and two stitches (garter and stockinette) are used. The variegated pattern on the body of the sweater is brought about by the ombre yarn. A solid color worsted-weight yarn is used for the contrasting squares in the border. This is a fascinating, fun-to-do pattern using intersecting yarns.

To obtain directions for knitting the Checkerboard Vest, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-020589 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-020589 by sending a check or money order for $26.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and yarns in wisteria shades.

Dear Pat: I'm a new, self-taught knitter, and I'm wondering about one thing in the pattern I am now working on. At one point, I am to decrease a stitch at each end of every other row several times. A different type of decrease is used at each end. It's no big deal, as I found I could easily do both, but I'm curious about this. Is there a good reason for it? — Alma S., Omaha, Neb.

Dear Alma: Yes, there is, because most decreases slant either right of left, and whenever pairs of decreases are used, as on either side of a V neckline or at each raglan sleeve seamline, the correct slant is important.

The most commonly used decrease — made by knitting two stitches together — slants from left to right. To achieve a professional look, the other end should slant in the opposite direction.

In most instructions for right-to-left slanting decreases, you will probably see this abbreviation: "sl 1, knit 1, pss0." Translated, this means to slip one stitch, knit one stitch and then pass the slipped stitch over the knitted stitch.

For many years, I seldom used this decrease because, when used at the beginning of the row, it did not seem to match the "knit two together" decrease used at the end of the row. Then one day I learned that I had been slipping the stitch knitwise, I liked the effect.

Another variation, the "slip, slip, knit" decrease (abbreviated "ssk"), also slants from right to left. To work this decrease, slip two stitches, one at a time, from the left-hand to right-hand needle, slipping them knitwise. Then insert the tip of the left-hand needle into the front of these two slipped stitches. You will notice that your needles are now in the proper knitting position, so go ahead and knit the two stitches together.

You can also achieve a right-to-left slant by simply knitting two stitches together through the back of the stitches. The effect achieved by each of the last three decreases is so similar that I suggest you try all three and select the one you prefer.

To slip a stitch, just pass the stitch from the left to the right needle without working it. Slipping knitwise means that you insert the right needle tip into the first stitch on the left needle as if you were going to knit it, while slipping purlwise means that you insert the right needle tip into the first stitch on the left needle as if you were going to purl it.

I should mention here that, with the above exceptions, when you are told to slip stitches, always slip them purlwise unless you are specifically told to do otherwise.

Summer Heat Cools Winter Love

Dear Abby: Last winter, I began dating a girl I'll call Janet. She said she loved me, too. We are both in college. In June, Janet went to Maine to work at a summer camp for the season. There she met a young man from Canada who had also come to work at the camp. Janet and Rolf soon became very close and started sleeping together. Everyone at camp knew it, and, naturally, it got back to me, which hurt me deeply.

After the camp closed, Rolf went back to Canada and Janet came home. She called me, of course, asking if we could get together. I was hesitant. While I still cared for her, I didn't trust her and I told her so. After much discussion, I agreed to see her again.

We had a long talk. Janet said she still loved me, but when two people are in love they should ask for nothing in return. She admitted to being intimate with Rolf, but insisted it had nothing to do with her feelings for me. She thought I should just forget about her camp experience and pretend it never happened. Abby, while I still love and forgive her, I don't think I can ever trust her again.

I need your advice. Were my expectations too high? Can girls love one person and sleep with someone else? Should I continue seeing her? And will things ever be the same between us again? — Hurting In Waukegan

Dear Hurting: Were your expectations too high? Obviously they were with Janet. Can girls love one person and sleep with someone else? You will have to define "love" — what it means to you, and what it means to Janet — but girls are capable of the same behavior as boys.

Continue seeing her only if it gives you more pleasure than pain. Things will never be the same unless you can truly forgive and forget, and then forget what you forgave.

Dear Abby: (I've read those words so many times, but never thought I'd be writing them.) I'm a third-grade teacher, and my class took your advice and wrote to our men and women in the armed forces over the holidays. Since we were studying Japan, we chose Okinawa. Abby, we heard from men and women in the armed forces in Okinawa who wrote such warm and wonderful letters to these children, we could not believe it!

One little girl received a fabulous Christmas gift from a Marine who received her letter. The mail from Okinawa touched these children's lives in a very special way.

Operation Dear Abby was the best thing we did this year. We have learned a valuable lesson in friendship, and the children have developed a deep sense of admiration and respect for our military. — Jeanette Convey, Pulaski Elementary School, East Newport, N.Y.

Dear Ms. Convey: Thank you for letting me know of your students' rewarding involvement with Operation Dear Abby IV. I plan to continue the tradition.

Confidential To Edward R. Lederer: If you served in the Korean War with Company L, 38th Infantry Regiment, 2nd Infantry Division, and were awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, please write to me.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Foreman Sentenced In Thefts

A Pitt County man has been sentenced to 30 years in prison after pleading guilty to three counts of armed robbery. The sentence gives him a total of 80 years to serve.

Mitchell Eugene Foreman, 38, Roberson Trailer Park, pleaded guilty Tuesday to robbing the Pic & Pay Shoe Store on Greenville Boulevard last March, the Buccaneer Theater at Greenville Square Shopping Center in February of 1988 and the Golden Coral restaurant on Greenville Boulevard. He also pleaded guilty to one count of possessing stolen property.

In all three instances, he allegedly threatened someone with a handgun. Superior Court Judge David E. Reid Jr. of Greenville consolidated the charges and sentenced Foreman to 30 years in prison.

That prison term will be added on to two consecutive 25-year sentences already imposed against Foreman.

Judge Herbert O. Phillips III of Morehead City sentenced Foreman in January to 25 years after Foreman pleaded guilty to robbing People's Bank on Stantonburg Road. He allegedly threatened a teller with a gun and stole $2,063 from the bank last May.

In December, Foreman was also sentenced to 25 years after he pleaded guilty to robbing the Arbogate Inn on Memorial Drive.

In addition to the armed robberies in Pitt County, Foreman faces similar charges that are pending in other eastern North Carolina counties. State law requires all armed robbery sentences to be imposed consecutively. Therefore, any new sentences will likely be added on to the 80-year term.

Director Resigns From State Panel

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Robert Hassell, program director of the North Carolina Crime Victims Compensation Commission since its inception, has resigned to develop a nationwide program designed to aid victims of crime.

Hassell announced his resignation Tuesday during the commission's bimonthly meeting, which was held in Greenville as part of the panel's continuing effort to visit all sections of the state.

Hassell reportedly is leaving the commission post to develop a course on "what constitutes contributory misconduct" that will be used nationwide in crime compensation programs.

He will be succeeded by his current assistant, Antony Queen.

The commission, which was organized last February, reviews all claims for crime victim compensation which amount to more than $5,000 or which appear to involve contributory misconduct on the part of the claimant.

According to A.A. "Dick" Adams of Grifton, chairman of the commission, the panel is trying to let citizens know that claims for compensation may be applied for by anyone who feels he or she has been an innocent victim of a reported crime which occurred since Aug. 13, 1987.

Monetary compensation usually covers costs of medical treatment not covered by insurance and amounting to more than $100 and loss of pay from work during recuperation from injury.

In his opening statements at a meeting in the Pitt County Commissioners Auditorium, Hassell said the commission has paid out more than $1.2 million since it began work about a year ago. Each claim averages $1,200, he said.

The docket brought to the commission Tuesday included 514 cases, but only about 25 amounting to more than $5,000 or appearing to have contributory misconduct on the part of the claimant were presented to the commissioners during the meeting.

Most of the claims were denied because the commissioners decided that, based on the information presented, they involved "contributory misconduct."

The next meeting will be held in Raleigh April 13, the commissioners indicated.

Among the commissioners, besides Adams, is Grifton resident Louis Pippin.

Anyone wishing to file a claim or obtain information may contact the N.C. Crime Victims Compensation Commission, P.O. Box 27687, Raleigh, N.C. 27611 or call 1-800-826-6200.

Jaguars Avoid Panther Threat

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

FARMVILLE — They're called free throws, but North Pitt couldn't buy one.

The Panthers had every chance in the world to knock off Eastern Plains Conference leader Farmville Central Tuesday in high school basketball action, but missed free throws sent them away with a 49-48 overtime loss.

The win lifts Farmville to 16-2 overall and 7-0 in the conference, while North Pitt falls to 8-11 and 3-5.

In the fourth quarter, which ended in a 43-43 deadlock, North Pitt missed three front ends of one-and-one situations in the final 1:11. And in the overtime period, the Panthers missed another trio of free throws on the front end of one-and-one opportunities. For the game, they hit only 3-13 at the charity stripe.

"If you break the game down into parts, then we did 85 percent of the things right that we needed to do to win," North Pitt coach Gregg Ashorn said. "The other 15 percent of the game was the free throws and we couldn't hit one. We just left one part out."

While North Pitt's failing was at the free throw line, the Jaguars were unable to put the game away because of missed layups.

With 1:30 left in regulation, Farmville's Jarvis Lang, who led all scorers with 17 points, missed a layup and a follow shot when the Jaguars were down 43-41. Reggie Barrett, who scored 10, then missed

East Carolina, George Mason Set To Meet In Televised CAA Game

East Carolina's Pirates take to the road for the last time this week in the Colonial Athletic Association with two important games starting tonight.

Tonight, the Pirates will be in Fairfax, Va., to face George Mason, a team which took an 86-74 victory over the Pirates earlier this year.

The contest will be telecast regionally over Home Team Sports (seen locally on cable channel 16), starting at 7:30 p.m.

In the first meeting between the two teams, East Carolina stayed with the Patriots until halftime, but in the second half, experienced poor shooting, especially from Blue Edwards, allowing the Pats to come on and take the win.

The Pirates, too, were surprised by GMU guard Mike Hargett, currently averaging 11.2 points a game. This time, however, the Pirates will be aware of him and will be guarding him.

Saturday, ECU moves on to Harrisonburg, Va., where the Pirates will be facing James Madison, looking for a fourth straight win over the Dukes, and their second this year over the Lefty Driesell-coached club.

A key point in tonight's game will be the first assist handed out by Pirate senior guard Jeff Kelly. Kelly is currently tied with Curt Vanderhorst for the career record in assists, both with 232. Kelly's next will give him the record, which he can continue to build the remainder of the season.

But for the Pirates to win at the Patriot Center will take more than Kelly's assists. The Pirates must have another productive night from Edwards, who scored 27 in the first meeting, and they must hold down not only Hargett but defending Player of the Year Kenny Sanders, who scored 23 in the first meeting. Sanders, now hitting 23.3 per game, is the second leading scorer in the conference behind Edwards, and has been named Player of the Week the last three weeks.

The Patriots also have two other players in double figures, including 6-7 sophomore Robert Dykes, hitting 10.3 per game and 6-3 junior guard Steve Smith, canning 12.8 per game.

Sanders is the leading rebounder for the Pats and in the conference with an 11.2 average.

East Carolina is led by Edwards, scoring 25.8 per game, while reserve Gus Hill is hitting 12.6 per game. Edwards is the leading rebounder for the Pirates with 6.6 per game. Mason is currently third in the league standings at 6-3 and is 11-9 overall. East Carolina brings in a 4-5 record, tied for fifth, while the Pirates are 10-10 overall.

Tribute Is Paid To Joe Morrison

By Rick Scoppe
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — They came to pay tribute to Coach Joe Morrison. More than 300 people packed Trenholm Road United Methodist Church to say goodbye to a coach remembered as a quiet, modest person who listened better than he talked.

"The greatest memorials to coaches are never stadiums, coliseum or won-loss records," the Rev. William Bouknight III said. "The most significant memorials to coaches are the persons they influenced."

"Because Coach Joe taught people to try harder, to preserve longer, to sacrifice more and to find a cause bigger than self, the world is better because he passed this way."

Sheppard Signs Again With Clemson's Tigers

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Former North Pitt standout Ashley Sheppard is recasting his lot with Clemson while a number of other area prep football standouts were expected to officially sign with the college of their choice today.

Sheppard, who graduated from North Pitt in 1988, originally signed with Clemson last year but wound up at Fork Union Military Academy this past season in an effort to shore up academic deficiencies. He had also considered North Carolina and Louisiana State but decided in the end to re-sign with the Tigers.

Fork Union coach John Shuman said Sheppard is still awaiting test score results to determine whether or not he will be eligible to play as a freshman next season under NCAA guidelines set forth in bylaw 5-1-(j) (more commonly known as proposition 48).

A 6-4, 230-pound linebacker, Sheppard was an All-State choice as a senior and played in the Shrine Bowl as well as the East-West All-Star game.

Rose coach Chip Williams has four players signing grants today as tailback Tim Moore, defensive end Carlester Crumpler and defensive back Don Thompson will play for East Carolina (see related story B-1) while offensive tackle Raleigh Fuller will attend North Carolina A&T.

Fuller (6-3, 230) was an All-Big East selection as a senior and a two-year starter for Rose.

Offensive tackle Greg Smith (6-2, 250) of Washington committed to ECU last week.

At North Pitt, offensive tackle Tony Hopkins (6-1, 260) may sign with North Carolina A&T. He was a three-year starter for the Panthers and played on four-straight playoff teams.

Rose quarterback Jamie Brewington received some recruiting interest but likely will wait until after baseball season to decide where to go to college.

Gulford College is pursuing a number of area players in Greene Central's Kris Radford, Wes Sugg and North Pitt's Billy Hardison.

Last year Quaker assistant coach Rex Sponhaltz, a former graduate assistant at ECU, signed three Pitt County players in North Pitt's Calvin Hunter, Rose's Barry Murry and Greene Central's Paul Grantham.

"With Hardison, it looks really good," Sponhaltz said. "There is a great deal of interest there. Wes Sugg and Kris Radford, we had them up here this past weekend and they seem to have a genuine interest."

Radford (6-1, 165) was a two-year starter at Greene Central and threw for over 2,000 yards in his career. He was the leading passer in the East-

Pirates Expect To Sign At Least 24 Prospects

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina expects to sign at least 24 players to football scholarships today, the first day of the national signing period.

ECU coach Bill Lewis received verbal commitments from 14 in-state players prior to the signing date, including three from Greenville Rose.

Heading the list of in-state signees are running backs Tim Moore of Rose, Victor McBryde of Red Springs and Derrick Pasley of Southern Durham.

Moore, an All-State selection in 1988, was named the Big East Player Of The Year two years in a row and rushed for 1,240 yards as a senior, after gaining just over 1,000 as a junior.

McBryde, a fullback, totaled over 4,000 yards during his career and played in the Shrine Bowl this past December.

Pasley gained more than 2,500 yards during his career at Southern Durham and played on three straight playoff teams.

Another local product, Rose defensive end Carlester Crumpler, earned All-State honors during his senior year and was a starter on two-straight undefeated Big East Championship squads.

Crumpler's father, Carlester Crumpler Sr., was a standout running back for the Pirates in the early 1970s and is still the leading ground gainer in school history.

Thirteen of ECU's signees are on the defensive side of the ball, including five linebackers. Brothers

Jeff and Willie Cooke of Sanford, head the list of linebackers headed for ECU.

Jeff Cooke was an All-Southeastern Conference choice for Lee County Senior this past year while Willie was a two-year starter for Chowan.

Jeff Cooke also received interest from North Carolina State, South Carolina, North Carolina A&T and Appalachian State.

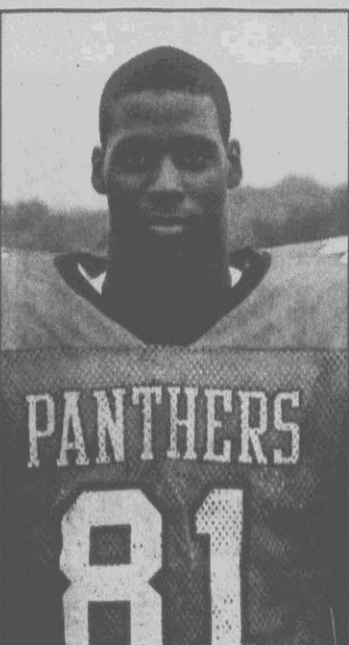

"They made him feel very important," Lee County coach John Green said of Cooke. "A kid has to feel like where he goes he can contribute and play. He really felt good about his decision. He's the one that has to go down there in August and sweat."

"The enthusiasm of the coaches was very impressive. They came to his wrestling matches and they had a good home visit."

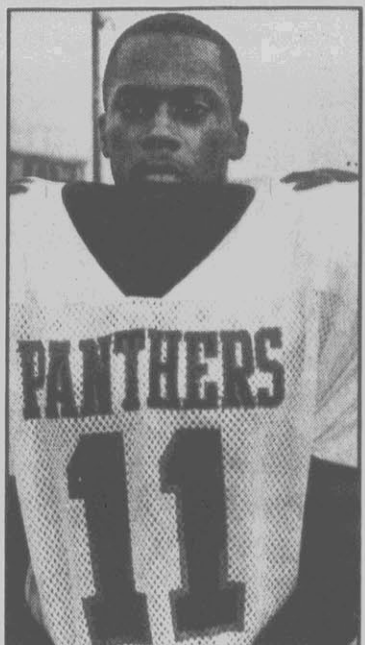

ECU picked up a late signee in Garner standout Levi Beckwith, who helped the Trojans to two straight Capital Area Nine Conference titles. Beckwith was also a starter at defensive back on Garner's state 4-A Championship team in 1987.

ECU picked up a trio of players from the Fayetteville area in Westover center Darryl Taylor; Byrd tight end Rodney Jones and Red Springs' McBryde.

Jordan Scores 32; Bulls Whip Hornets

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — For a short time, Michael Jordan didn't know where he was.

Then, midway through the third quarter, he showed he remembered.

After being knocked momentarily unconscious by a Bill Cartwright elbow in the first quarter, Jordan bounced back to score 14 of his 32 points in the final 7:03 of the third period to lead the Bulls to a 118-93 victory over the Charlotte Hornets Tuesday.

"It knocked me out for a little while," said Jordan, who went down with 6:54 left in the first period and returned with 3:09 remaining. "I didn't know where I was. I felt like a fighter."

The Bulls led by 10 at halftime, then extended it to 20 by the end of the third period.

With Chicago ahead by nine and less than eight minutes left in the third quarter, Jordan took control. He scored 14 points, including eight straight, as the Bulls outscored Charlotte 21-10 the rest of the period to take an 89-69 lead into the fourth quarter.

And for the first time this season, Jordan rested the entire fourth period.

"It felt good to get the rest," he said.

For once, the beginning of the game was more important than the end.

"I wanted to play especially well tonight because I haven't played well offensively against Charlotte in the other games," said Jordan, a native of North Carolina.

He had eight points in the first five minutes before being felled by Cartwright.

"I wanted to establish myself offensively," he said.

That was bad news for the Hornets.

Chicago, which led by as many as 30 in the fourth quarter, also got 17 points from Scottie Pippen while snapping a two-game losing streak.

Charlotte, which lost for the 21st time in 24 road games, was led by Kelly Tripucka, who finished with 27. Tripucka, held scoreless in the third quarter after scoring 22 in the first half, left the game midway through the fourth period, needing three stitches to close a cut above his left eye.

"This season has been a ball, but not on nights like this," Tripucka said. "We're trying to gain respect. There are going to be nights like this."

Bulls coach Doug Collins hopes for more nights like Tuesday.

"I wasn't laughing at halftime," said Collins. "I thought we were soft defensively in the first half. I challenged our guys to play defense like we're capable of. We did that in the second half and that's why we won."

Pippen was a major part of the defensive surge, collecting six steals in the second half to finish with seven. He also added seven rebounds.

"Scottie played well," Collins said. "I challenged him a little bit defensively. Small forwards have been lighting us up. It was nice to see him respond."

Charlotte coach Dick Harter is hoping his players will respond, also. Charlotte shot 34 percent in the second half (13 for 38).

"We've got to find some fighters on this team," he said. "We were outrebounded 29-13 in the first half and that made the whole game look lousy. And we have no post-up players. Defensively, we were so worried about Michael that their other players had a good game."

Bucks 115, Cavaliers 106

The Cleveland Cavaliers are learning that having the best record in the NBA means having the rest of the league gunning for you.

"Cleveland brings out the best against us," Milwaukee coach Del Harris said after the Bucks beat the Cavaliers 115-106 Tuesday night.

"This is very likely the best we've played for the simple reason that we played the best team. We looked at this game like a playoff-type basketball game."

"Teams are more prepared to play us now," said Cavaliers center Brad Daugherty, who scored 28 points. "There's no more sneaking up on people. Hopefully it will make us concentrate more and force us to be better players."

"We went into the game feeling something special," said Milwaukee forward Terry Cummings, who had 31 points and 11 rebounds. "This league is competitive. Everyone is so well balanced."

While Cleveland has surprised the NBA with a league-best 34-11 record, Milwaukee also has been a surprise with a 30-14 mark.

But according to the Cavaliers' Lenny Wilkens, the Bucks aren't a surprise to NBA coaches.

"If you go back early and read the papers, we all knew Milwaukee would play well and that you'd better not come in here thinking you're going to roll, because you're not," Wilkens said. "They're playing as well as anyone else, but they're just doing it very quietly."

The game had 15 lead changes and nine ties before Cummings and Ricky Pierce sparked a 21-10 Bucks spurt in the final seven minutes.

"We're playing with a lot of confidence," said Pierce, who had 10 of his 24 points in the fourth quarter. "We're playing great basketball."

Milwaukee trailed 96-94 before going on a 13-4 spurt — seven by Cummings and six by Pierce — for a 107-100 lead with 2:05 to go.

Ron Harper, the Cavaliers' leading scorer, managed only eight points, 12 under his average, after getting in early foul trouble. And forward Larry Nance was still feeling the effects of a four-game layoff from a tendon strain.

Knicks 117, Bullets 105

New York won its 17th straight home game and handed Washington its seventh consecutive road defeat as Patrick Ewing scored 12 of his 26 points in the fourth quarter and Charles Oakley added 22 points and 15 rebounds.

The Bullets, 3-19 on the road this season, led 88-85 early in the fourth period before a 17-5 spurt by the Knicks put them ahead 102-93 with 5:09 remaining.

Washington, which got 20 points from Jeff Malone, got no closer than four points thereafter.

Trail Blazers 134, Mavericks 125

Portland outlasted Dallas as Jerome Kersey scored a season-high 33 points and reserves Steve Johnson and Kiki Vandeweghe keyed a fourth-period rally.

The Trail Blazers, down by as many as 16 points, trailed 104-92 after three periods. Then Johnson scored nine of his 14 points in the opening 6½ minutes of the fourth quarter, including two consecutive rebound baskets that capped a 24-9 spurt and gave Portland a 116-113 lead.

Nets 109, SuperSonics 99

New Jersey beat Seattle for the second time in a week with a 25-11 second-half run.

Dennis Hopson scored 20 points, Buck Williams and Joe Barry Carroll each had 19 and Lester Conner had 13 points, 11 assists and 10 rebounds for the Nets, who snapped a three-game losing streak.

Jazz 96, Heat 77

Utah handed Miami its 21st loss in 22 road games behind Karl Malone's 26 points and John Stockton's 20.

Grant Long and Rory Sparrow had 14 points apiece for the Heat, which has lost eight of its last nine games overall and owns the NBA's worst record at 5-39.

Kings 114, Spurs 99

Sacramento broke a six-game losing streak by outrebounding San Antonio 67-51.

The Kings outscored the Spurs 17-2 in the last five minutes of the third period for an 83-69 lead. Kenny Smith scored seven of his 20 points during that spurt.

Ayden Captures Junior High Title

WINTERVILLE — Ayden Middle School downed A.G. Cox, 49-30, Tuesday to win the Pitt County Conference, Division II basketball championship.

Carl Artis led Ayden with 14 points while Orlando Peterson added 12. No one scored in double figures for Cox.

In the girls' game, Cox took a 31-17 win led by Kuykendall with nine points. Ayden's boys ended the year with a 13-1 record while the girls finish at 10-4.

E.B. Aycock defeated New Bern, 88-49, in a junior high school basketball game Tuesday.

Aycock was led by Troy Clemons with 15 points and Dwight Sheppard with 19. New Bern was paced by D.J. Godette with 16.

Aycock is now 7-1 and plays at Nash Central on Friday.

Bush Can't Stop ACC Telecast

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Even President Bush can't keep the North Carolina-North Carolina State college basketball game off Triangle television sets Thursday, officials said.

The game begins at 9 p.m., simultaneously with Bush's State of the Union address. WRAL-TV in Raleigh, which carries Atlantic Coast Conference games, announced last week it planned to carry the speech and join the game after the speech's conclusion.

But Ken Haines, executive vice president of Raycom Sports, announced Tuesday that WKFT-TV in Fayetteville will carry the game in its entirety. That means Triangle fans won't be in the dark for the beginning of the game. WRAL-TV still plans to join the game in progress, Haines said.

"We really worked it out with WRAL and WKFT," Haines said. "I think everybody wanted to do what would be best for the viewer."

"What makes it unusual is I cannot remember a time when two stations in one market carried the same ACC game at the same time."

WKFT-TV Channel 40 is an independent station.

New Confidence For Tom Watson

HONOLULU, Hawaii (AP) — A change of putters and a shift in attitude has renewed some of that old confidence and enthusiasm in Tom Watson.

"You wouldn't know it off last week (in the Los Angeles Open). I three-putted from three feet on the last hole.

"But I'm striking the ball well and I'm putting the ball well.

"I'm very enthusiastic," Watson said before a practice round for the $750,000 Hawaiian Open, which begins Thursday at the Waialae Country Club course.

It was in this tournament on this course that Watson had his first chance at victory.

The freckle-faced young man was called "The Kid" in 1973 when he led through three rounds, then let the title slip over the last 18 holes.

"I remember it very well," Watson said of that 16-year-old event. "I wasn't ready to win then. I wasn't able to handle it."

But he learned in a hurry. In the next 11 years he won 31 American PGA Tour titles and five British Opens, establishing himself as the premier player in the game.

In the last five years, however, he has won only once, the 1987 Nabisco championship. His game simply unraveled and came apart.

But Watson, his own most severe critic, said he sees signs of change.

"I changed putters after last week, just to give myself a different perspective. It really helped. I found I was much too closed.

"I'm really very excited about it right now," said Watson, now 39 and a recent inductee into the World Golf Hall of Fame.

"I'm expecting good things to happen, instead of hoping for good things to happen. There's a big difference in the two.

"Now, I just need a couple of good tournaments and I could be back to where I want to be. I'm expecting it to happen. And it could happen soon, this week or next week.

"There's no reason I can't win two or three tournaments this year. That's probably what I need to do to make the (12-man) Ryder Cup team (that will play Europe's best in England this fall).

"And I am going to make that team," Watson said.

Watson faces a 144-man field that includes defending champion Lanny Wadkins, PGA title-holder Jeff Sluman and Corey Pavin, who won this title in 1986 and 1987.

Some other leading figures in the chase for a $135,000 first prize are Chip Beck, South African David Frost, Ben Crenshaw, Paul Azinger and Larry Nelson.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by NBC.

Franco Settles For Less Than Asked

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds reliever John Franco settled for $232,500 less than he asked for, but can pick up more than $125,000 in bonuses, all because he didn't want to go to arbitration again.

Franco decided Tuesday, one day before his arbitration hearing was scheduled, to accept a $1.0675 million contract the club offered rather than attempt to obtain the $1.3 million he originally requested from the Reds.

"It's the most any four-year reliever was ever paid," said his agent, Bill Moore. "That's one thing we wanted to accomplish."

Franco can earn an extra $75,000 by repeating as National League Fireman of the Year, and $50,000 more by making the All-Star team.

"Yesterday was really a tough day for me to make a decision. I was on the phone with my agent until 12 midnight," Franco said Tuesday. "You don't know what arbitration is like until you go through it."

Franco lost a salary arbitration case last year, when he was paid $675,000. That hardly affected his play, however, as he set a team record with 39 saves, breaking Clay Carroll's 16-year-old mark of 37, and had a 6-6 record.

The Reds said they also signed left-handed pitcher Chris Hammond and infielder Lenny Harris. No contract terms were announced. Both players are on the team's 40-man winter roster.

Hammond was 16-5 and had a 1.72 earned run average last season with the Reds' Class AA farm team, the Chattanooga Lookouts of the Southern League. Harris, playing for the Reds' Class AAA affiliate, the Nashville Sounds, led the American Association with 45 stolen bases.

The remaining Reds awaiting arbitration hearings between now and Feb. 16 are starting pitchers Tom Browning, Danny Jackson and Jose Rijo, and outfielder Eric Davis. All but Rijo are demanding salaries of at least $1 million.

"I think it's important to know where they're going with Franco," said Browning's agent, Jim Bronner. "Until they know which way they are going with Franco, I don't think they're willing to talk seriously about settling cases with Tom or with Danny Jackson."

Jackson was 23-8 last season. Browning's 18-5 record included the first perfect game in Reds' history.

Reds General Manager Murray Cook said there isn't necessarily a relationship involving the remaining arbitration cases.

"Every day brings us closer to arbitration, but we will continue to work right through the deadlines. We're doing what we need to do to get things resolved if we can. Neither side is posturing any more. We're getting down to it," Cook said.

The Reds are offering Davis $1.15 million, but he is asking for $1.65 million.

Rijo wants $525,000, and the Reds are offering $375,000. Rijo's hearing is set for Feb. 13 in Chicago.

Jackson's hearing follows the next day in Chicago. Browning's is scheduled for Feb. 15 in Chicago. Davis' hearing is scheduled for Feb. 16 in New York.

ern Plains Conference during both his junior and senior seasons. He threw for 1,049 and six touchdowns during the regular season.

Sugg (6-1, 188) was a three-year starter at wide receiver for the Rams and this past season caught 25 passes for 317 yards.

Hardison was a three-year starter at defensive back for the Panthers and also started at quarterback during his final season. He had 46 tackles, three interceptions and two fumble recoveries during his senior year.

Radford has also received some interest from Lenoir Rhyne and probably won't sign until he has a chance to try out at both schools, according to Greene Central coach Spence Grantham.

At Ayden-Grifton, tight end Ronnell Peterson, offensive tackle George Fuller and running back Tony Reeves are all receiving interest from a number of schools, but probably won't sign a grant for some time.

Peterson is also a standout basketball player while Reeves suffered a severe knee injury in the second-to-last game of the regular season and is still in the process of rehabilitation.

Ayden-Grifton's James Woodard, who played linebacker and halfback for the Chargers, has received some attention from Elon, which recently saw some film on him and is presently looking into signing him.

Taylor, (6-4, 260) was coached by former ECU defensive back Reggie Pinkney and received a great deal of interest from Clemson after his junior season. The Tigers, though, backed off on Taylor during his senior year.

"It was a good lesson for him," Pinkney said. "Not being heavily recruited now has opened up his eyes. He got a lot of offers, but not from the size schools a kid of his size should have gotten.

"I think he's a steal. They are going to need him. East Carolina has the skill people. They need people in the trenches. He reminds me of Ray Donaldson of the Indianapolis Colts. I can see the raw talent."

Jones was a bit of a surprise for the Pirates. North Carolina State, Clemson and UNC had been considered the front runners.

At 6-3 and 230 pounds, Jones possesses the size and speed (4.6 in the 40) to be a dangerous tight end.

"They've been in the run and shoot and they need tight ends," Byrd High School football coach Bob Paroli said. "He might have seen an opportunity to play. I think a lot of it is the fact that the tight ends that come will be the ones that will play."

Westover kicker Rocco Wicks may also join the ECU team next year. ECU officials are trying to line up an academic scholarship for Wicks, according to Pinkney.

Wicks holds the Westover record for longest field goal of 47 yards set during his junior year.

Wicks' sister, Robin, is on the ECU women's swim team.

Pinkney said ECU was also interested in another Westover product, offensive lineman Dennis Tillman (6-4, 210), but were awaiting SAT scores to see if he qualifies academically.

a layup with 56 ticks left on the clock. And with 39 seconds left, Morris Foreman came up short on a jumper in the lane.

But after North Pitt's Randy House missed on a one-and-one opportunity with 35 seconds left, Lang scored with a turnaround shot on the baseline with 25 seconds left to knot the score at 43-43.

"North Pitt missed a lot of free throws that could have won it for them, but at the same time, we missed easy shots inside that would have put it away for us," Farmville coach Mike Terrell said.

In the overtime period, North Pitt had the chance to draw first blood with 2:37 left, but Reggie Daniels, who finished with 10 points, missed at the line.

Foreman then sank a pair of free throws to put the Jaguars on top 45-43.

After William Morning, who scored 10, countered with a layup at the other end, Barrett put Farmville back ahead, 47-45, with a follow shot at the other end.

The Panthers jumped back on top, 48-47, with 1:37 to play Calvin Grimes drilled a 3-pointer.

The Panthers then had two opportunities to put the game away, however, Daniels and Randy House couldn't sink the free throw.

Lang then moved inside, was fouled and knocked in two free throws with 25 seconds to play to make the score 49-48.

Morning tried a shot from the corner for the Panthers with eight seconds left in the overtime but came up short.

"I'm proud of our guys even though we lost," Ashorn said. "They played super defense. This is the first game that we've been in when we weren't supposed to win."

North Pitt kept the game close throughout, with the biggest lead for the Jaguars being a seven-point cushion, which came at the outset of the game when they jumped on top 7-0 with 4:41 left in the first period.

The Panthers closed to within 13-9 by the end of the quarter and had the game tied, 26-26, at the half.

In the third quarter, the Panthers jumped out by as many as five, 38-33, using a slow down offense.

According to Ashorn, the slow-down tactics he employed in the game weren't planned prior to tipoff.

"I came out here ready to play straight up," Ashorn said. "I thought I would try it (the slow-paced offense) as a new look. And it worked."

Terrell said he was also surprised by the tempo of the game.

"I thought they (North Pitt) would run up and down the court with us," Terrell said. "But they controlled the tempo and did a good job of it. We were never able to get a run going."

In the girls' game, Keisha Pilgreen scored 17 of her game-high 35 points in the fourth quarter to lead North Pitt to a come-from-behind 81-77 win.

Pilgreen's sister, Gwen, added 30 points, eight in the final period, to aid the Lady Pant-Hers. Donna Leggett also chipped in 10 points for North Pitt.

The win lifts North Pitt to 10-6 overall and 6-2 in the conference, while the Lady Jaguars fall to 11-7 and 4-3.

Farmville led 58-50 heading into the fourth quarter, but was outscored 31-19 in the final eight minutes.

Felicia Barrett led the way for the Lady Jaguars with 25 points, while Brenda Reid had 24. Vickie Best chipped in 11 and Monica Brown added 10.

North Pitt will be back in action Friday at home against C.B. Aycock and Farmville will play South Lenoir on the road.

Gryphons Slip Past Rose In OT, 54-50

ROCKY MOUNT — Rose High School's Rampants failed to score in an overtime period and Rocky Mount came away with a 54-50 Big East Conference basketball victory Tuesday night.

It was the second straight loss for the Rampants, who fall to 5-4 in the Big East standings.

Johnny Ebron was fouled on the final tick of regulation and sank both free throws to knot the score at 50-50 and force the overtime.

In the extra period, Rocky Mount controlled the tap and held the ball until 30 seconds remained then suffered a turnover. Rose missed a layup with 27 seconds to play and with 12 seconds to go, James Teel missed the front end of a one-and-one. Rocky Mount then came down the floor and scored, got the ball back and scored again in the time remaining.

"Free throws really hurt us," Coach Jim Brewington said. "They sent us to the line but we couldn't convert. When you make only 12 of 26, you're not going to win. We missed a bunch of easy shots, too. When Paul (Powers) doesn't score, we're not going to do well."

Rocky Mount pushed out into a 13-9 lead in the opening quarter of the game but Rose stayed close and came back to trail by only 25-24 at intermission. In the third period, Rose pushed ahead, 40-38, going into the final period, but was unable to hold on, finally bowing in the overtime.

Ebron and Carlester Crumpler each had 13 points to lead Rose. Copeland led Rocky Mount with 16 while Ricks added 12.

The loss drops the Rampants to 12-6 overall and to 5-4 in the conference. The Rampants are at home on Friday, hosting Wilson Beddingfield.

Sanders Remains Silent

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — Heisman Trophy winner Barry Sanders, showing the elusiveness that enabled him to set 20 NCAA records last season, refuses to say whether he will return to Oklahoma State University for his senior season or opt for the NFL.

Sanders was in Philadelphia on Tuesday to pick up the Maxwell Trophy as the outstanding collegiate player of the year. The Philadelphia Eagles quarterback received the Maxwell's Club's Bert Bell Award as the outstanding pro player of the year.

In Tuesday editions, the Wichita (Kan.) Eagle-Beacon quoted the 5-foot-8 Sanders as saying: "I'm planning on returning (to Oklahoma State). Right now I'm in school getting ready for next season and some exams."

But in Philadelphia, Sanders said, "I don't remember saying that. I've done a thousand interviews this year. I can't remember what I say." Sanders shattered 20 NCAA records last season, gaining 2,628 yards and scoring 39 touchdowns for an average of 232 yards and more than three touchdowns per game.

Sanders told The Associated Press on Sunday that he had made his decision, but was not ready to announce his intentions.

The 20-year-old Sanders was asked why he would want to return to Oklahoma State, which has been suspended for three years from bowl games and for two years from television appearances because of recruiting violations.

"It's my intent to get a degree," he said. "A lot of times I think I'm not old enough to go out in the world."

Sanders has been urged by his father and by his brother, Brian, a running back at Northwestern, to leave college and turn pro.

"My brother told me that he'd ring my neck if I don't leave," the running back said. "My father realizes that this is my decision. I have to make it. I'd like to make my father happy, but I'll decide."

Maryland Finally Gets Elusive ACC Win, 98-87

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — With its starting five playing 233 of a possible 240 minutes, shooting 60.4 percent from the field and making 17 of the last 18 free throws, Maryland is finally a winner in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

John Johnson scored 25 points, and Jerrod Mustaf and Tony Massenbourg added 24 apiece as the Terps snapped a seven-game ACC losing streak Tuesday night with a 98-87 victory over Clemson.

"This was almost a perfect game for us," said Mustaf, who made 11 of 16 shots. "We dictated how we wanted to play, even when we were behind."

The Terps rallied from a 58-51 deficit with 15:37 left as Massenbourg scored 21 second-half points, including 17 of the Terps' final 32.

"I was getting double- and triple-teamed," said Massenbourg, who made six of seven shots and nine of 13 free throws in the second half.

"Then we started making our outside shots. That was the difference. John (Johnson) was making his. Greg (Nared) made his. Dave (Dickerson) made his. That opened things up inside and made it easier to move around down there."

Maryland played its starting five the entire second half. Massenbourg, Mustaf, Johnson, Nared and Dickerson combined to hit 17 of their first 22 second-half shots and wound making 18 of 25 shots over the final 20 minutes.

The score was tied at 82 when Massenbourg converted a three-point play with 2:40 remaining that triggered a 16-2 run in which the Terps made 14 consecutive free throws as they improved their record to 1-7 in conference, 8-13 overall.

"We concentrated on what we're supposed to do to win, shoot free throws and protect the ball," Maryland coach Bob Wade said. "Someone has to rise to the occasion when you're down. We did that as a team tonight."

Clemson, which fell to 4-4 in the ACC and 14-6 overall, lost for the first time in 10 games in which it shot 50 percent or better. The Tigers shot 50 percent in this one.

"The bottom line was that we gave up 98 points," Clemson coach Cliff Ellis said. "With the exception of one stretch in the second half, we didn't have a defense that could stop Maryland. We scored enough points to win the game."

The game was the highlight of a light college basketball night in which no ranked teams played. Tonight, it will be No. 2 Georgetown vs. Connecticut at Hartford, No. 4 Louisville at Cincinnati, No. 12 Florida St. vs. South Carolina, 7 p.m., No. 14 Duke vs. Virginia and No. 20 Georgia Tech vs. Iona at New York.

Clemson got 20 points from Elden Campbell, 18 from Dale Davis and 16 from Derrick Forrest, but committed 12 turnovers to Maryland's five.

"We were dead-legged," Ellis said. "I don't know if it's because we played four games in nine days. It was a very good effort on Maryland's part. We didn't wear them down like we wanted to."

Wade didn't make his first substitution until there was 7:02 left in the first half. He brought in freshman Jesse Martin for five minutes. Mitch Kasoff and freshman Walt Williams, who had a broken finger bandaged up, were in for the final five seconds of the first half and that was it.

"Our rotation is very thin with (Cedric) Lewis out and with Williams in a splint," Wade said.

The Terps' starting five showed no signs of getting tired. In the second half, Maryland shot 72 percent, committed one turnover, and took control in the final three minutes.

"Everybody had a lot of energy tonight," Massenbourg said. "We were trying to run the ball and we don't have that many guys. We were able to run the break, get some easy baskets, which we haven't been able to do in the past."

That wasn't the only first for the Terrapins.

"I don't think anybody could feel what we're feeling right now," Nared said. "We just wanted to prove to everybody we could win an ACC game."

Other Games

In the Big East games it was Villanova 77, Boston College 69 and Providence 88, Pittsburgh 78.

Doug West had 16 points to lead five Villanova players in double figures as the Wildcats, 4-5 in the Big East, trailed 60-57 with 7:54 to play. Boston College's Dana Barrows made all five 3-point attempts and 11 of 14 from the field to lead all scorers with 28 points. The visiting Eagles lost for the eighth time in nine conference games.

At Providence, Matt Palazzi snapped out a shooting slump to lead the Friars to the victory that lifted them into a three-way tie with Seton Hall and Syracuse for second in the Big East. Palazzi had been 1-for-15 in his last two games before going for 72 points against the Panthers for 22 points. Brain Shorter's 27 points led Pittsburgh, 4-6 in the conference.

Princeton pulled into a first-place tie in the Ivy League with Penn after the 53-43 victory over the Quakers. Matt Lapin scored 14 of his career-high 16 points in the second half as Penn suffered its first loss in five league games.

Division II LeMoyné handed Army its fourth straight loss, 77-70, behind Andy Bechtle's 22 points.

When two struggling intrastate rivals meet there's usually a good game and Florida International and Central Florida didn't disappoint. Robert Rowe's follow with three seconds left in the second overtime gave Florida International a 105-103 victory. Florida International's Diego Garcia hit three 3-pointers in the final 1:37 of regulation to force the first overtime. Florida International improved to 6-14, while the Knights dropped to 5-15.

DePaul won its fifth in a row, 78-50 over Dayton on the road. Brad Nieman scored 22 points, including six of seven 3-pointers, to lead the Blue Demons, 15-9.

Oral Roberts beat Arkansas State 83-82 in overtime for its fourth straight victory. The Titans, who had lost 15 in a row at one point this season, improved to 6-16.

Israel Rejects U.S. Report Of Human Rights Violations

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Israel today rejected key conclusions of a State Department report alleging substantial human rights violations and said the report ignored the context of a violent civilian uprising by Palestinians.

A Foreign Ministry statement disputed the report's claim that soldiers who opened fire unnecessarily on Arabs were given lenient sentences and in some cases not punished at all.

The U.S. report, released Tuesday, says methods used by the army to halt the 14-month revolt had resulted in "many avoidable deaths and injuries."

"In spite of the constant provocations, the Israel Defense Force scrupulously maintains moral norms and human rights, and treats any exceptions with utmost severity," a Foreign Ministry statement said.

"The report does not take into consideration the overall context of the events and continuing provocations. The extreme elements ... directing the events use violence meant to be lethal," the statement said.

Foreign Ministry spokesmen said they would not respond to specific charges until studying the report thoroughly.

fering and bloodshed," said Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's spokesman Yossi Ahimeir. "We don't like situations where soldiers are confronting stone-throwers, but we have to defend our security."

Yossi Sarid, a parliament member of the liberal Citizens Rights Movement, called the U.S. annual report on human rights worldwide generally accurate.

"I am so sorry that in order to see our face we need a mirror held from so far away," he said on Israel radio. "I don't need the Americans to know that many arrests were made for political and not for clear security reasons."

"It's a fact that not all shooting is carried out in self-defense ... And there has been shooting done to punish, to frighten, to deter and even to get revenge."

Jonathan Kuttub, co-founder of the human rights monitoring group Al Haq-Law in the Service of Man, said the U.S. report was an improvement over past years when he claimed the State Department "whitewashed" Israeli actions in the occupied lands.

Kuttub said he hoped the U.S. government would reassess its $3 billion in annual military and economic aid to Israel in light of the report's findings.

"It's a matter of American dollars not going to a country that systematically violates human rights," said Kuttub, a Palestinian-American lawyer.

Kabul Regime Stands By Itself As Soviets Depart

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

MOSCOW — Soviet officials said Tuesday that tens of thousands of anti-communist rebels are planning to cut key roads and blockade provincial cities in Afghanistan following the final withdrawal of Soviet troops next week.

Soviet news reports and official briefings suggested that the Kremlin fully expects a sharp flareup in the fighting after the last Soviet soldier leaves Afghanistan on Feb. 15. But, despite verbal support for Afghan President Najibullah, there is no indication that the Soviets are prepared to take decisive measures to prop up his government if it comes under threat.

The official Tass news agency reported Tuesday that Moslem insurgents are seeking to demoralize government troops by shelling provincial towns and military outposts. The agency said that "dozens of mines and rockets" had hit the airport at Kandahar, Afghanistan's second largest city, during the past 24 hours.

Tass also reported that Afghan aircraft had pounded guerrilla positions in the southwestern district of Anjil. It said that government forces also carried out an operation to rout the rebels, known as mujaheddin, in Kunduz Province.

At a news conference here Tuesday, Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennadi Gerasimov said that the mujaheddin are concentrating their forces along strategic highways. He said that 30,000 insurgents are preparing to strike at the roads leading north toward the Soviet border from Kabul and the western city of Herat.

In a dispatch from Kabul, Tass said that the Afghan army had warned residents along the Salang Highway north of the capital to leave their homes because of the expected flareup in the fighting. A similar warning was issued by the Soviet army on Jan. 23, just prior to a massive bombardment of suspected guerrilla positions.

U.S. State Department spokesmen accused the Soviets then of pursuing a "scorched-earth policy" and killing hundreds of Afghan civilians. Soviet military leaders said their only aim was to open up departure routes for their troops and to allow convoys of food and fuel to reach Kabul.

Tass quoted the high command of the Afghan army as saying that "extremist opposition units" were continuing to attack the convoys. "If the criminal activity of the rebels is continued, the Afghan armed forces will undertake most resolute measures, the responsibility for which will rest fully with the opposition," the Army communique said.

New casualty estimates issued by Soviet authorities suggested that Soviet troops sustained heavier than normal losses during the 10-month withdrawal period, despite a reduction in direct combat operations. Many of the Soviet servicemen were reported to have been killed as a result of shelling by mujaheddin.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze told a news conference in Islamabad Monday that "up to 15,000 Soviet troops" have been killed in Afghanistan since the Soviet invasion on Dec. 27, 1979. This implies that nearly 1,700 Soviet servicemen have died since May 1 last year, when the last official figures were given.

According to Soviet news reports, there are now about 15,000 Soviet troops still in Afghanistan, down from 50,000 at the beginning of this year, grouped along the roads from Herat and Kabul. The commander in chief of the Soviet forces in Afghanistan, Lt. Gen. Boris Gromov, has promised to be the last Soviet soldier to cross the border on Feb. 15.

The youth newspaper Kom-somolskaya Pravda said that Gromov would step onto the "Friendship Bridge" leading to the Soviet border post of Termez at 10 a.m. that day (midnight EST).

"He will cross, without looking back. Then he will stand and make a speech — just for himself. It will last 1 minute 7 seconds. The speech will neither be written, nor will it be heard," the newspaper said, suggesting that the symbolic moment be carried live on nationwide television without any commentary.

Mediation Requested

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — A militant Tamil separatist group said today it has appealed to the U.N. Commission on Human Rights to mediate an end to the 5-year ethnic conflict that has claimed 8,500 lives in Sri Lanka.

The Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, the most powerful Tamil guerrilla group, also called for an immediate cease-fire and the withdrawal of the estimated 47,000 Indian soldiers on the Indian Ocean island.

Indian troops were sent to Sri Lanka in 1987 to disarm the Tigers in order to enforce an Indian-sponsored peace accord.

The Tigers initially accepted the accord but later reneged, resuming attacks on the country's Sinhalese ethnic majority and battling the Indian peacekeeping force.

The Tigers, in a letter to the U.N., claimed "Indian troops under the cover of 'peacekeeping' operations continue to engage themselves in a ruthless and brutal war against the innocent civilian masses, causing intolerable suffering to the Tamil people."

The Tigers accused Indian soldiers of committing torture, executions without trial and "extermination" of more than 200 prominent Tamils who opposed the 1987 accord.

In New Delhi, an Indian official rejected the Tigers' accusation, calling it "part of their usual propaganda."

A copy of the Tigers' appeal to the U.N. was sent by telex to news offices in Colombo from the guerrillas' information office in London.

Coup Leader Reshapes Army Command

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ASUNCION, Paraguay — Coup leader Gen. Andres Rodriguez sought to strengthen his new government by replacing about 30 military officers, including the commanders of the three army corps, with men of his own choice.

Rodriguez deposed longtime President Gen. Alfredo Stroessner in a bloody coup Friday, was sworn in as president, dissolved Congress and called national elections for May 1.

Stroessner, who had ruled the country for 34 years, has been exiled to Brazil and his name is being expunged from many civic monuments. He said Tuesday that he would spend the rest of his life there.

Leaders of four opposition parties say they need more time to organize for the elections, but government leaders on Tuesday rejected such appeals.

"The national constitution sets the time allowed" to choose a permanent successor to Stroessner, Foreign Minister Luis Maria Argana said. "And we already have given the maximum allowed."

Critics disagreed. The government "always cites the constitution when it is convenient for them," said Euclides Acevedo, president of the left-leaning Revolutionary Febrerista Party.

The opposition parties, three of which were never recognized by Stroessner and have never participated in national elections, will face the powerful ruling Colorado Party, which has won every Paraguayan election since 1947.

The opposition has demanded participation of all parties in the election, in particular the Communists, whom Rodriguez excluded by saying they were not democratic as stipulated by the constitution.

Opposition leader Domingo Laino said he thought it "probable" that Rodriguez would be the Colorado candidate. "It is a concentration of force," he said, by the ruling party and the armed forces in this landlocked South American nation of nearly 4 million residents.

Rodriguez, who is commander-in-chief of the armed forces, acted Tuesday to consolidate his power in the army, navy and air force, reassigning about 30 officers — ranging from the commanders of the three army corps to airport administrators — with his own choices.

The government decided to allow writer Augusto Roa Bastos, who has lived in exile since 1982, to return home. Roa Bastos, author of "I, the Supreme One," a celebrated novel about Paraguay's first leader following independence from Spain in 1811, is the nation's best-known author.

Also, the government permitted the weekly political newspaper El Pueblo of the Revolutionary Febrerista Party to resume publication. The weekly, which criticized and ridiculed the Stroessner regime, was closed by the government in August 1987.

Stroessner, 76, told a news conference Tuesday in Brazil that he would spend the rest of his life there because it "received me with kindness and hospitality." He is living temporarily in the remote interior city of Itumbiara, 270 miles southeast of Brasilia, the capital.

As many as 300 people reportedly died in last week's coup, but Rodriguez has said the dead and wounded together did not exceed 50.

Black Detainees Join In Hunger Strike

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — More than 100 blacks detained in Port Elizabeth have joined a hunger strike, a civil rights group said today, raising to about 300 the number of detainees threatening to starve themselves unless they are freed or charged.

The hunger strike, which began in the Johannesburg area on Jan. 23, represents one of the most dramatic challenges to the policy of detention without trial since the national state of emergency was declared in June 1986.

The nationwide civil rights group Black Sash said today that 105 detainees at St. Albans Prison in Port Elizabeth — many of them held since 1986 — began the hunger strike on Monday.

In a statement released today, the detainees said:

"Notwithstanding 32 months of continuous detention without trial, no case has been brought against us. ... We are left with no alternative but to take our lives into our own hands ... and to demand our immediate release from this dehumanizing detention."

They said in the statement that they would consume neither food nor liquids until their demands are met. An estimated 30,000 people have been detained without charge for varying periods during the state of emergency. An estimated 1,000 to 1,500 people remain in detention.

On Tuesday, the Law and Order Ministry declined to comment on reports that some of the detainees wrote an open letter to Adriaan Vlok, the law and order minister, warning him they would starve themselves to death unless freed.

The only government comment on the protest has been a statement from prison officials saying in part: "It does happen from time to time that prisoners go on so-called hunger strikes. The Prisons Services deals responsibly with such situations."

The hunger strike was started more than two weeks ago by 20 detainees at Diepkloof Prison, between Johannesburg and the huge black township of Soweto. About 170 more detainees at Diepkloof subsequently joined the strike, a group of detainees' parents said at a news conference Tuesday.

According to the Black Sash, the detainees at St. Albans Prison include more than 50 anti-apartheid leaders in their third year of detention, including prominent activists who helped organize a successful black consumer boycott in 1985.

Striking Workers Close Polish Coal Mine As Talks Over Economic Crisis Resume

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WARSAW, Poland — Talks between the opposition and government on ending of Poland's protracted economic crisis resumed today as a strike for higher pay closed a coal mine that supplies the country's largest electric power plant.

A partial work stoppage that began Monday at the Belchatow bituminous coal mine and power plant 90 miles southwest of Warsaw spread today to shut the mine at 12:01 a.m., state television and Solidarity reported.

The government said the strike at the mine could eventually threaten power supplies in central Poland but gave no details on when that might occur.

Television said 4,000 people were on strike, while the free trade union movement's information service in Warsaw said the number was 8,000.

The complex employs 12,000 workers.

At the Council of Ministers Palace, 40 people from the government and opposition began work on seeking a national consensus on economic reform and social policy.

The working group meeting is part of "round-table" negotiations that began Monday and are expected to last up to six weeks.

Solidarity wants the talks first to lead to the restoration of its legal status after a seven-year ban.

At the opening session, the government said Solidarity could be reinstated if the opposition agrees take seats in parliament, which Communist authorities would still control.

At Monday's talks, were not present at today's meeting.

A working group on trade unions is to begin meeting Thursday and a group on political reforms on Friday.

Wladyslaw Baka, the member of the ruling Politburo responsible for the economy, and Witold Trzeciakowski, an economist on a citizen's group formed by Walesa, were the senior participants at the talks.

Other government participants were Industry Minister Mieczyslaw Wilczek and Deputy Prime Minister Ireneusz Sekula. For the opposition, participants included Ryszard Bugaj, an independent economist and Gabriel Janowski, of the farmers' opposition group Rural Solidarity.

Chief government spokesman Jerzy Urban said opposition participants at the negotiations would not be asked to intervene to stop the Belchatow strike, but Walesa sent a representative to the strikers in an apparent bid to moderate the dispute.

The strike, because of its timing as the long-awaited talks get started, appears politically delicate for both the opposition and authorities.

Communist Party officials entered the talks despite internal opposition from hardliners, arguing that an agreement with Solidarity would help keep labor peace.

It appeared the strike, begun by local Solidarity activists, could become a test of the national leadership's ability to fulfill that implied promise. The workers seek a $59 monthly pay increase at a time of 60 percent inflation and chronic consumer shortages.

The workers' current wages are not known.

On Tuesday, Urban said 173 pay disputes were reported nationwide in January, three times higher than December, and that "alarming" wage pressures led to 39 strikes last month.

The complex where today's strike was occurring is part of a public coal-and-power monopoly formed last year during a government restructuring program that removed some industry from state control.

The government has warned against enterprises paying wages that exceed their financial earnings. Raises are supposed to come out of higher productivity.

social accord needed to tackle Poland's daunting economic crisis.

"We are witnesses to historic moments that will remain in our memory until the end of our lives. Long live Lech Walesa," Wegrarz added.

Since Solidarity was crushed in a December 1981 military crackdown and banned the next year, Walesa has rarely been allowed to address workers legally on state property.

But Walesa held a lively hour-long question-and-answer session with his constituents — the rank-and-file for whom he is trying to gain restoration of Solidarity's legal status in the round-table talks.

The rally was a reminder of the days during Solidarity's 16-month legal existence when Walesa traveled the country, captivating audiences with straightforward speeches explaining the need for free trade unions.

Walesa responded to Wegrarz's introduction with some easy-going banter.

'I'm Not That Elegant,' Says Walesa

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WARSAW, Poland — The featured guest at the government-run Institute of Building Techniques apologized to the crowd for his fancy blue suit.

"I wanted to say I'm not that elegant. I also work hard, I'm just a worker," Lech Walesa told the roughly 500 people in the audience.

The 45-year-old shipyard electrician who chairs the banned Solidarity free trade union movement won a round of applause Tuesday when introduced by institute director Marian Wegrarz.

"I want to welcome the great Pole, the laureate of the Nobel Peace Prize, Mr. Lech Walesa. It is a great honor that Mr. Walesa bothered to come to us the day after the session of the round table. Long live Walesa," said Wegrarz.

Walesa is leading the opposition delegation in historic "round-table" talks with Communist authorities that began Monday and seeks the restoration of its legal status in the round-table talks.

Then, speaking from a platform draped with a large Solidarity banner, he explained why he feels compelled to negotiate with the same authorities that crushed his movement and are widely distrusted by much of the populace.

"I'm doing everything to take advantage of all chances to build agreement, to build a better Poland. I think I won't let anybody cheat me. I think you will not let anybody cheat you," he said.

Henredon's Altopass plants employ about 900 people.

Henderson Jury Acquits Man

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
 HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. — A Henderson County Superior Court jury deliberated for about an hour Tuesday morning before finding Ricky Allen Remington innocent of murder in the 1980 shooting death of an Edneyville man.

Details Bring Duvall's 'Gus' To Life On TV

By Michael Hill
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

HOLLYWOOD — When Augustus McRae, Larry McMurtry's fascinating creation of a philosopher-cowboy who stands at the center of "Lonesome Dove," talks through Robert Duvall, he often begins with a gesture.

Duvall, his body as thin and muscled as cattle driven hundreds of miles over barren plains, sort of leans into the role of Gus McRae. When he starts to speak, his hands tend to go out first, as if they are finding a way through the air for the words that will follow.

"I tell you where I got those gestures," Duvall said recently at a press conference here. "I got them from Sammy Baugh, the old Redskins quarterback. He's got a place out in Texas. I visited him there and he uses gestures like that."

It is details like that, picked up by a careful observer and put to proper use, that are the tools of a great actor. There is no doubt that Duvall is one of this country's best.

"I was alerted to the project maybe six or eight months before we started principal photography," Duvall said. "So I got a little run on the part, which you so often don't. I was glad I did because there was a lot to learn. A lot to, kind of in a relaxed way, imbibe about such a guy and such a time of history."

'I think all actors, at sometime in their career, want to play Westerns...It's a part of America.'

Duvall can often appear big and sojid in his roles, but for Gus, he lost weight and brought over an Italian make-up artist to come up with the proper look.

"I've told people different things that I've done to prepare for this part, but I think what I really did was let the book be my guide for this character. As an actor, I found that McMurtry gave me what I needed to know. I mean, the script was great, but the book was the catalyst."

Duvall said he had not read McMurtry's novel when he was first contacted about the miniseries. He read the script first and then tackled the almost 1,000-page novel.

"I'm probably not as avid a reader as many of you all, but I read it in 10 days," Duvall said. "I mean, I couldn't put it down."

Word is that the producers of "Lonesome Dove" originally saw Duvall playing the part of Woodrow Call, the taciturn no-nonsense captain of the cattle drive who is Gus' oldest friend, but that Duvall held out for McRae. Tommy Lee Jones ended up playing Call.

"This is the kind of part I'd never done on film," Duvall, who often does play the strong, silent types, said of Gus. "I'd done a part like that on the stage, but it was a part I really looked forward to doing because it was something different for me, something new for me to do."

At the press conference, Duvall shared the stage with a half dozen other members of the "Lonesome Dove" cast, successful actors all, including another Oscar winner, Angelica Huston.

But everyone seemed to defer to Duvall, and their comments made clear why.

"I heard that Bobby Duvall had the script and was interested, so I figured I was interested, too," D.B. Sweeney, who plays Dish Boggett, said of how he got involved in the project.

"I was nervous the first day to work with Bobby because I respected him so much," Rick Schroder, who plays Newt, said. "But after the first day, he opened up and made me feel comfortable, there was no stopping me then because I had some confidence that I could get in there and touch elbows with the big boys."

There were stories of Duvall on location going out of his way to help other actors in scenes. He is said to have found an old song named "Lorena," the name of Diane Lane's character, which he would play to help her with emotional scenes.

When Huston's Clara had to read a moving letter from Gus, it was reported that Duvall would compose lengthy epistles, much more than the short letter she read, again to help her achieve the proper emotion.

Robert Ulrich, who plays Jake Spoon, said that he had just finished his third year of "Spenser: For Hire" and was fishing in Florida with orders not to be disturbed when his agent sent the "Lonesome Dove" script and phoned to make sure he read it.

"My agent said, 'You sure you don't want to do this?' and I said that I was awfully tired," Ulrich said. "And he said, 'Well, you know you do good work and I know you're good, but if you're good in a scene with Robert Duvall, they're going to say 'You know what, he's good.' My agent earned all his commissions with one."

Duvall said that he was especially attracted to the project because it was a Western.

"This attracts me more than 'The Godfather' did," said Duvall, who had an important role in that Mafia saga. "These people to me are more vauid and more interesting than organized crime in America."

"I'm not saying we did as good a movie as 'The Godfather,' but I think we did very well. And the book, 'Lonesome Dove' is a far superior book than 'The Godfather.' And, hopefully, we can come up to the book, equal it, or try to equal it."

"I think all actors, at some time in their career, want to play Westerns, from childhood on. It's a part of America. And you know, in a certain way, this was the definitive Western. I've done ones before, but I don't really have to do another one, because this was it."

Barbie Turns 30

Ageless Teen-Ager A Prom Queen No More

By Denise Gellene
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Barbie, the ageless teen-ager, is 30.

She has changed a good deal since she first appeared in a snug zebra-stripe swimsuit in 1959. Now a woman of the 1980s, she drives a sleek red Ferrari and lives in a posh brick townhouse. She has traded her high school letter sweater and megaphone for a business suit and tiny credit cards.

It seems that Barbie has grown up along with the "baby boomers" of the 1950s. A prom queen no more, Barbie is now a classic Type A superachiever: an astronaut-turned-surgeon and a former Olympic gold medalist who still finds time for her boyfriend, Ken.

But age has not slowed her down. Last year was Barbie's best ever. Mattel, based in Hawthorne, Calif., sold a whopping 20 million Barbies and her teen-age friends at about $10 apiece. There were Jewel Secrets Barbies, Perfume Pretty Barbies, Super Hair Barbies; not to mention companions such as California Dream Midge and Island Fun Miko.

With her staggering collection of clothes, cars, pets and friends, Barbie has emerged as one of the nation's most enduring toys. In 1988, Barbie was the second best-selling toy in America, behind the Nintendo video game system, according to Toy & Hobby World magazine.

Ninety percent of little girls between ages four and 10 own a Barbie, according to statistics from Mattel. And some little girls own a dozen or more.

By now, 500 million Barbies have been sold, enough to circle the earth 3½ times. Mattel figures that it sells an average of 54,000 dolls — Barbie, Ken and their friends — every day. She has fan clubs, collectors, even professors who study her. So prized is an original 1959 Barbie that she

'Real' Barbie And Ken Shun Namesakes' Image

By Denise Gellene
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — The Barbie doll may lead an enchanted life, but the "real" Barbie says she wants no part of it.

Barbara Handler Segal asserts that she is nothing like the 11½-inch teen-ager that was named for her 30 years ago and doesn't want to be. Oh sure, Barbie Handler liked the beach and had lots of friends, but so did, and do, many Los Angeles teen-agers.

"If the doll is like me, it is totally coincidental," says Segal, now 47 and a divorced mother of two, who says she has been trying to shake her Barbie doll image practically since the day her mother created the toy in 1959.

Three years later, her brother Ken's name was added to Mattel's roster, and Ken — now a New York real estate investor — also says he's nothing like his namesake.

"Ken doll is Malibu," he says. "He goes to the beach and surfs."

He is all these perfect American things." But when Ken was at Hamilton High School in Los Angeles, he "played the piano and went to movies with subtitles." Looking back, he says, "I was a nerd — a real nerd. All the girls thought I was a jerk."

The Handler children have long avoided the spotlight, but last week both agreed to speak briefly by telephone about growing up as, well, Barbie and Ken.

"I'm tired of being Barbie doll," says Segal, who was a 16-year-old sophomore at Hamilton High School when her mother, a founder of toy company giant Mattel Inc., created Barbie. As a teen-ager, says Barbara Segal, she didn't want to have "the best clothes or drive the best cars" that are showered on the Barbie doll.

Segal is grateful to her namesake for bankrolling a leisurely lifestyle that includes a lot of golf and tennis. But she is tired of being type-cast as the que," says Gary Ruddell, who publishes Doll Reader, a magazine for doll collectors.

Barbie's longevity amazes even her creator. "I never expected that she would last this long," says Ruth Handler, who founded Mattel with her husband and named Barbie and Ken after their own children. "So many of today's women were Barbie players. It kind of overwhelms me."

When other toy companies offer competition, Barbie seems to send them to doll oblivion. Over the years, Tressy, Darci, Dusty and Tammy have disappeared. Mattel's arch-rival, Hasbro Inc., was forced to give up on Jem, a flamboyant teen-age rock star. Now Hasbro, the nation's biggest toy company, is trying again with Maxie, a blonde teen-ager with her own boyfriend. But Maxie sales came to $20 million last year, according to industry sources, a small fraction of the $450 million spent for Barbie, her friends and possessions.

"We are very fortunate to have her," says John W. Amerman, Mattel chairman and chief executive. "We have toys that are very well known. But when all is said and done, Barbie is the cornerstone of our business."

Mattel pampers its star. It is giving her a black-tie-only birthday party next month in New York's Lincoln Center. Called a pink jubilee, the event will feature a lavish display showing how Barbie has changed through the years.

Even when Barbie isn't having a birthday, she gets VIP treatment. Mattel sponsors a Barbie Fan Club, which has 650,000 young members who receive Barbie magazine. The glossy publication is packed with details about Barbie clothes and dates.

Mother, Son Show Work At PCMH

The February show of art at Pitt County Memorial Hospital encompasses the work of a mother and her son. The show is exhibited along the corridors of the first floor of the hospital and can be viewed 24 hours daily.

Kay Clemens, quilter and founder of the Greenville Quilters Association, is displaying wall hangings in a variety of styles ranging from traditional to contemporary.

One example of her work is a fabric variation of the famous portrait of "Whistler's Mother." Noting that the mother had sat long enough with her hands idle in her lap, Ms. Clemens' depiction has the mama of Whistler learning to quilt. Another fabric hanging entails a rearrangement of the traditional "Seven Sisters" quilt pattern in a manner to reveal their different personalities.

The work of her son Richard is being exhibited at PCMH along with her wall hangings. His part in the show is comprised of a selection of watercolors.

The eldest of her five children, Clemens is a graduate of Rose High School. He attended the School of Art, East Carolina University as a design student after a tour of duty with the Army.

His watercolors are definitive in nature, with emphasis on the quality of light in the scenes he paints.

Director Draws On Experience For First Movie

By Hillel Italie
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — After reaching the 11th grade, Keith Gordon dropped out of school. So when at the age of 27 he had a chance to direct his first movie, "The Chocolate War," he drew upon a very different kind of education.

Gordon, who had acted in "Dressed to Kill" and "All That Jazz" among other films, remembered his conversations with such directors as Brian DePalma and John Carpenter. "That was film school, working with those people," he said. "I think there's no medium that's more immediate; it's just beginning to be scratched."

DePalma ("Body Double," "The Untouchables") directed Gordon in "Dressed to Kill" and "Home Movies."

"Brian's really a brilliant stylist," Gordon said. "He really took the time to explain to me why he picked a certain lens. ... That was Brian's contribution."

And from Carpenter ("Christine"), Gordon took some pointers on how to keep a film crew happy.

"Carpenter showed me how a set should be run. John never yells. His theory is, 'life is short and if we're not going to have a good time, you might as well pack and go home.'"

The turning point for Gordon came 20 years ago, when he saw Stanley Kubrick's science-fiction classic, "2001: A Space Odyssey."

"I thought, 'OK, that's what I'm doing.' I was haunted by it, had nightmares by it. I started going to off-beat things, foreign films. I found myself obsessed by stories that didn't have neat answers, that made me question things."

Gordon worked in the film library at the Museum of Modern Art, going through the museum's archives, and began appearing in school plays. But by the time he was in high school, he was ready to move on.

"I never did well with rules," said the director, just 16 when he left school.

His professional acting career had already begun the year before when he joined the National Playwright's Conference at the Eugene O'Neill Theatre. He worked in stage, television and films over the next few years but dreamed of being on the other side of the camera.

"It was always in my heart to direct," Gordon said. "To be honest, I thought I would be 45 or 50, not 27."

"The Chocolate War" is based on Robert Cormier's best-selling novel, which gives a lurid account of life at a Catholic school in Washington. Gordon, recalling his own unhappy experiences in school, was attracted to the issues dealt with in the book.

"I carried this book around in my head for 10 years. I wondered if stuff in the book was unrealistically harsh or vicious but I met people who had been sexually molested and repeatedly beaten up — stuff where your mouth is hanging open."

For years the book was passed around all the major studios, but when the rights finally became available, Gordon quickly snapped them up and persuaded Jonathan Krane, an independent producer, to back the project.

"The crew was young. My cinematographer was only a few years older than me," said Gordon, who completed filming in just 24 shooting days, for a cost of $700,000.

"The Chocolate War" stars John Glover as the sadistic Brother Leon, Wally Ward as the ruthless leader of a student gang and Ian Mitchell-Smith as a freshman caught up in the school's vicious atmosphere.

Following the example of Carpenter, Gordon made sure the crew, working on a limited budget, was properly appreciated.

"I'm almost proudest that we had a great time. Almost everybody who worked on that film said he never had more fun. On that kind of money, you'd be better be ... sure that they have a good time. Any director that doesn't avail himself of the talent around him is a fool."

He was tested early in the project. One day, after shooting for 15 hours, Gordon could sense that "the natives were restless."

"I made a speech, bought pizzas and shook everybody's hands. I made sure they were heard. I made the producer give everybody an extra $100 for such a long day."

When filming was over, Gordon gave himself high marks for his performance on the set.

"I was surprised how much fun it was. I expected to be more miserable, more panic struck," he said. "I discovered I'm pretty good in panic situations. Parking tickets I get nervous breakdowns, but on the set I was very clear-headed."

Gordon seems unlikely to drop out of the film world.

"Ultimately, you're realizing your own vision," he said. "It's collaborative, but also very personal. Film involves literature, music, acting and lighting. It's a wonderful chance to stretch yourself in every direction at once."

Statlers Together 25 Years

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — In 25 years of singing country music, the Statler Brothers have appeared in more than 400 cities, given 1,600 concerts and visited every state but Alaska.

They have performed for Presidents Nixon, Carter and Reagan. They've released 40 albums and won 42 music awards, including three Grammys.

But despite their prolonged popularity, lead Statler singer Don Reid says, "I guess we're just dull."

They've hardly stirred up a shred of controversy during their quarter century on America's stages. They are four family men with bedrock values appealing to the heartland with grassroots songs about love, nostalgia and growing up in small town USA.

Even though they are associated with a musical genre known for its songs about beer and bourbon, the Statler Brothers are shown on their current album cover sitting around a pitcher of lemonade.

"We try not to get involved in anything controversial," Reid said. "We entertain and keep it light. We leave the messages to Western Union."

Among their 51 hits are "Flowers on the Wall," "I'll Go to My Grave Loving You," "Atlanta Blue," "Elizabeth," "My Only Love," "Maple Street Memories," "Class of '57" and "Too Much on My Heart."

They won a Grammy Award in 1965 for their crossover hit "Flowers on the Wall" over other finalists that included the Beatles. Now the Statler Brothers are headed for the 1990s with a solid country sound and a legion of loyal fans.

In an intense industry of egos and constant changes, the foursome have recorded for Mercury-Polygram for 18 years and used the same producer, Jerry Kennedy, whom they affectionately call "the fifth Statler Brother." In November, they signed a long-term contract with the same label.

"We try to stay fresh and deliver something people can depend on," Reid said. "We're not out to shock or carry a message. We don't jump on fads. We try to be stable and make it quality."

The tightly knit quartet, taking their name from a brand of tissues, were discovered by country star Johnny Cash in the mid-1960s. They've had just one personnel change since then, when Lew DeWitt left the group because of illness in 1982 and was replaced by Jimmy Fortune, a former service writer at a car dealership.

Harold Reid (Don's brother) and Phil Balsley are the remaining two members. The two Reids and Balsley grew up together in Staunton, Va., a town of 22,000 where they continue to live.

"We're still close," Don Reid said.

Home Video Threat

If you could see a favorite film on your television set for under $5 by just dialing the phone, would you still go to the video store to rent a cassette?

Probably not. Pay-per-view, the service that requires consumers to pay for one program at a time, is being hailed as a threat to home video.

PPV is currently found in 15 million households and the numbers are growing — a statistic that represents an incredible potential loss of business to the retailers.

The caution for consumers, according to some industry experts, is that if PPV puts the video stores out of business, freedom of choice may become a thing of the past.

Namesakes Shun Dolls' Image

"real" Barbie doll. People inevitably hail her as the first Barbie doll. "I used to walk away," says Barbie. Now she says she just swallows hard, and smiles.

The Barbie doll never took up residence at Segal's home, either in her own generation or her daughter's. Segal was too old for dolls by the time it hit the market, and her daughter, Cheryl, liked outdoor games and never played much with dolls. "It sounds silly, I know," says Barbie. "But I am really not very well acquainted with Barbie doll at all."

Ken, now 44, balding, and married with three children, restores turn-of-the-century homes in Manhattan. He is finishing up a book on his family with a working title, "The Ken Doll Talks." His two daughters never played with Barbie or Ken, he says, and preferred stuffed animals. "If they had asked for them, I would have bought the dolls for them," says Handler. "But they never did."

Handler also has strong opinions about the doll. "I think of her as a bimbo," he says. "Like she hangs out at the beach and doesn't have a brain in her head."

Though the doll has helped make him a "millionaire several times over," Handler says: "It bothers me. I really don't like her."

Barbie and Ken's parents, Ruth and Elliot Handler, founded Mattel Inc. as an importer of inexpensive toys from Japan. They left Mattel in 1975 after a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation. Ruth Handler pleaded no contest in make sure she always looks her best. The designers travel to fashion shows in New York, Paris, London and Frankfurt to check out the latest fashion trends. If the designers can't find the cloth they want, they order special fabrics just for Barbie, such as the glittery nylon used for Holiday Barbie's red gown.

Barbie's first outfits included tailored suits and pill box hats made popular in the early 1960s by then-First Lady Jacqueline Kennedy. By the decade's end, Barbie wore miniskirts and fishnet stockings. She started the 1970s in boots and hot pants, later exchanging her mod look for glitzy disco outfits. And in the 1980s, of course, Barbie stocked up on designer clothes and exercise outfits.

Last year, her designers noticed that the breezy California look was popular, so they gave Barbie bright new beach clothes, roller skates and a pink surf-board shop. "We take an idea, glamorize it and it becomes Barbie," says Black-Perkins.

Barbie's designers work hard to create a glamorous image. "She would never be a waitress," says Black-Perkins. Cheerleading and baby-sitting are off limits. "Older teen-agers don't do those things."

Mattel's designers also have given Barbie a good life. Besides her townhouse, she has a carefully appointed $200 Dream House that has a toilet with "real flush action." She has a pet horse and several furry pet cats. She vacations at her very own tropical "island hideaway," where she relaxes in a hammock and plays with her pet toucan. She has a lot of friends — Midge, Whitney, Theresa and Christie, to name only a few.

What Barbie seems to lack is personality, and that is no accident. Mattel has intentionally said little about Barbie's character because the company wants little girls to decide what Barbie is like.

Not even Mattel's top executives can agree on who Barbie is. The toy company recently abandoned a five-month nationwide search for a "real" Barbie after painstakingly auditioning 84 girls. "We saw lots of lovely girls, talented girls, but we just couldn't agree on a human personification for Barbie," says Candace Irving, Barbie's official spokeswoman. "Everyone sees her a different way."

For years, Mattel resisted making a Barbie cartoon show so it wouldn't be forced to create an identity for the doll. But just over a year ago, Mattel featured Barbie in a two-part cartoon special with her musical group, the Rockers. The cartoon didn't reveal much about Barbie because she didn't do much besides sing and play musical instruments.

Susan Dickey, a graduate student at Texas Tech University who has written an article on Barbie for a professional journal, says that Barbie lacked "a sense of social commitment." Barbie didn't have a black friend until 1968, and, by then, "the civil rights movement had cooled a bit." A black Barbie didn't appear until 1981. Today, there are black Barbies and Latino Barbies, and she has black, Latino and Asian friends, too.

Yet Barbie's fanciful lifestyle and bland personality probably help make her a good toy, Dickey says. Barbie's abundant possessions and costumes "allow Barbie to be whatever the little girl wants her to be. The possibilities are endless."

Barbie seems to arouse strong emotions among women who once played with the doll. There are dozens of Barbie fan clubs around the country, and the annual Barbie convention draws hundreds of fans from such distant places as Norway and Japan. In Kenosha, Wis., two women publish a Barbie magazine that goes to 3,000 adult subscribers.

Barbie lovers concede they are a little obsessive. With her mother, 18-year-old Laural Christensen has accumulated 700 Barbies.

The Barbies — and their cars, houses and old schoolhouse — have overtaken a bedroom in Christensen's Westminster, Calif., home.

"She is so glamorous," says Christensen, who admires Barbie's wardrobe so much she sometimes wears people-size copies of Barbie's

Playwright Is Thankful

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Like all of John Arndt's plays, "Winterstorm" involves a transition from one state of being to another. But unlike his previous works, he says it is believable.

The difference, says Arndt, was a paralyzing accident he suffered at his home in Harrisburg and his subsequent journey toward recovery.

In April, Arndt fell 20 feet from a tree, injuring his spinal cord. He was paralyzed from the waist down.

Two months later, Arndt was told the paralysis was permanent.

Unwilling to accept the diagnosis, Arndt went to the Pledger Institute in Florida, one of many facilities which treated Sean Lavery, a New York City Ballet star who was left with one paralyzed leg after surgery to remove a tumor from his spinal cord.

Arndt's experience there helped his writing and changed his life "mentally, spiritually, as well as physically," he says. He says he believes he will someday walk again, and that falling out of the tree was not just an accident.

"I'm actually, in a way, thankful for the accident," he said. "It has really straightened me out."

dresses. "She can put on a pair of jeans and look like a million bucks."

Barbie is certainly not everyone's sweetheart. "What can you do with the doll besides play date and sit on a couch and look pretty?" asks Reverby, director of the women's studies department at Wellesley College who calls Barbie a "bimbo." "I don't want my daughter to think that being a woman means she has to look like Barbie and date someone like Ken."

Many feminists say that Barbie gives children a false idea of what its like to be an adult. "She represents an incredible sex stereotype," says Reverby, who disapproves of Barbie's exaggerated figure and leisurely lifestyle.

Mattel is sensitive to such criticism. When Barbie sales dropped in the mid-1970s, the toy company surveyed mothers and asked them what was wrong with Barbie. Many mothers responded that Barbie lacked ambition. What Barbie really needed, they said, was a job.

Mattel responded by giving Barbie not one job — but many. She joined the work force in 1983 as a McDonald's waitress. Then her career really took off. In 1985, Barbie was an astronaut. She returned to earth later that year as a veterinarian with a "puppy patient" to cure. Last year, she was lead singer for her own all-girl band.

Sheena Easton Steps Out To Sing Danceable Pop

By Mary Campbell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sheena Easton came to America from Scotland in 1981, singing uptempo pop.

"Since 1982, '83, my career has been dance-pop, and the new album is dance-pop," she says. "It wasn't that far a step from doing uptempo to doing more danceable pop."

The new album she refers to is "The Lover in Me," her first for MCA Records. It was No. 82 and climbing the best-selling pop chart on Jan. 28. The first single, the title song, was No. 16 and climbing the best-selling singles chart.

It's her first album in America in three years. Easton cut "No Sound But a Heart" for EMI America, which became EMI-Manhattan. In the shuffle, the album wasn't released and she couldn't record for a year. "EMI still owns it," she says. "I'm not legally allowed to go into details."

She has been heard from, though. Prince's 1987 hit, "U Got the Look," was a duet with Easton. She did commercials for a health spa and was on five high-profile episodes of "Miami Vice," as the bride of Don Johnson.

Her first single, "Morning Train," was a hit in 1980. The next year, she sang "For Your Eyes Only" in a James Bond film. "Since 'Telephone' was a No. 1 dance single in 1983," she says, "I followed it with 'Strut' and 'Sugar Walls.'"

"But my singing now has 100 more times a rhythm 'n' blues overtone than it did in 1983. Music in general has more r and b — if you do dance music. The new album has got great acceptance at black and urban radio stations."

Easton met Prince in 1985. He produced "101" and co-produced "Cool Love" on "The Lover in Me."

She says, "In 1984, when I was recording the album that had 'Strut' on it, I sent a message to Prince through an engineer working for us both to say I was a major fan and I would love to record one of his songs.

"Two days later he sent me the tape of 'Sugar Walls.' He'd just written it for me. We met for the first time in the studio when he produced it. We've written together some, if we come up with an idea. I write with a few people. Mainly, I write lyrics on my own and decide who I want to write the melody to it."

Easton, who has been divorced twice, has lived in Los Angeles since 1982. Easton was the name of her first husband.

She attended the Royal Scottish Academy of Music and Drama. She says: "It taught me how to be a drama student pretty well. It didn't teach me how to act."

"For the past few years I've been looking at scripts and talking about acting. Much to the chagrin of my film agent, I've never had the time to commit to any project. I tour six months. Recording can take nine months. Then I make videos, do press and tour again."

But, during Easton's time out from recording, her agent discovered that "Miami Vice" was looking for an actress to play Johnson's bride. Easton says: "The timing worked out well. It meant immediate filming. It was a short commitment. The role was small enough that I could cope with it and large enough to get attention. I went along and auditioned and got it and did it."

She auditioned opposite Johnson. "He was very active in the selection for this role," she says. The series' first choice was Lorraine Bracco, but she got the flu and Easton was summoned.

She says: "I've been singing with an American accent since I was 10 and I was prepared to talk with an American accent. The producers of the show liked the idea of the character being European. She had to be different to make this hard-bitten cop fall over and want to marry her."

She wasn't given the wedding dress, Easton says. "What would I do with it? Wear it to parties? They have a memorabilia collection they put on display in different cities. There was talk of it going in there. They bought the wardrobe, but I chose it."

Easton says that audience response was so good she was asked to stay on the show. "I was in preproduction for this album and I didn't want to be a regular on a TV show. Finally, I agreed to come down for two days to film a death scene. Somebody was getting at Don's character so they shot me in the back. You saw the person take aim and me collapse in Don's arms."

She was impressed with Johnson. "It'd be 4 in the morning and we'd been working 20 hours. He would crack jokes with the crew. He went out of his way to make me look good and feel comfortable. If I was a few inches off my mark he would adjust his position so that the camera could get me, instead of yelling, 'This girl is off her mark.' I appreciated that. Someone in his position doesn't have to do that."

The singer got acting offers after that but turned them down, continuing with the album. "If the perfect thing came along, I'd have to see if I could adjust my schedule," she says. "I'm continuing to look for supporting roles in good projects rather than leading roles in 'B' projects. I'm not in it to make a fast buck. I'm in it to learn the craft of acting and hopefully, in 10 years, I'll have learned enough to merit doing major roles."

"I don't foresee leaving recording. There's no reason to."

Easton has sung and made speeches for ecology causes and Rock Against Drugs. "Just thinking back 10 years," she says, "people used to say sex, drugs and rock in one breath. Drugs were considered a hip rock 'n' roll way to go. Now rockers are running 10 miles a day and keeping fit. Drugs are frowned on. When you make something socially unacceptable, people do it less."

Carolina Inn Is A Tradition In Chapel Hill

By Jim Schlosser
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHAPEL HILL — The Carolina Inn, with its long veranda, high columns and shady grounds, seems to have been here since the founding of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill two centuries ago.

Perfectly placed at a busy intersection near the oldest, prettiest part of campus, the inn has become almost as sacred as the Old Well, Davie Poplar and other symbols of the university.

Generations of students have dined in the inn's cafeteria. Faculty congregate there for coffee and philosophical bull sessions. Alumni stay in its rooms.

The lobby's Queen Anne sofas and wing chairs stay busy hosting impromptu chat-chats and confabs.

Understated elegance has been its trademark. The university's most honored guests are quartered in the Chancellor's Suite, with its large sitting room. The suite's guest book shows that Eudora Welty, the famous Mississippi writer, stayed there in October.

Other guests have included Jimmy Carter and George Bush, golfing great Jack Nicklaus and George Steinbrenner, the owner of the New York Yankees.

But the Carolina Inn today is not what it seems.

Opened in 1924, the inn has grown old. In some sections, floors creak and radiators hiss. Amenities such as a swimming pool are not to be found.

Worse, the inn has encountered the free-enterprise system. Competition is everywhere.

As a result, the names on its guest ledger are fewer.

The end of the inn is not in sight, but it needs help — about $6.5 million for improvements that would make it modern without destroying its charm. University officials are pondering how to get the funds.

"We were once the only game in town," says Edward Rehkopf, director of university hotel and conference centers.

Except for a few small motels on the outskirts, the Carolina Inn offered the only lodging in the once small, isolated village.

Over coffee in the inn's cafeteria, Rehkopf presents figures showing 24 new hotels with 3,550 new rooms have opened in the Triangle in recent years.

The Carolina Inn's average occupancy rate has dropped from more than 80 percent to about 70. Further decline may come when seven more hotels with 1,262 rooms open during the next two years, including one called the Chapel Hill Inn, only a few blocks from the Carolina Inn.

Seventy percent is still a good occupancy rate, considering most hotels hover in the 60 percent range. But a 10 to 12 percent loss has caused revenues to fall, while costs — mainly for labor — have gone up.

Because the inn is owned by the university, its employees are considered state employees, although their wages and benefits are paid from hotel revenues, not from the state treasury.

On the other hand, the inn doesn't pay property taxes or have to answer to a group of profit-hungry owners. And the inn didn't cost the state anything to start with.

It was built and operated for the first 11 years by wealthy Durham businessman John Sprunt Hill. Hill and his family — his son, Watts Hill of Durham, remains an influential North Carolina figure — donated the inn to the university in 1935.

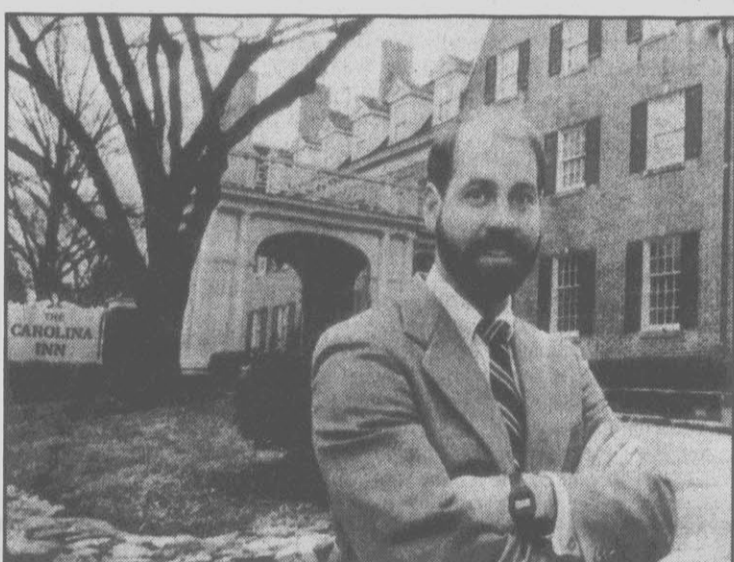

According to a plaque in the lobby, the Hills intended it as a "cheerful inn for visitors, a town hall for the state and a home for returning sons and daughters of alma mater."

The inn was expanded in the 1930s and again in the 1960s.

Some people, such as Bill Cochrane, wouldn't think of staying anywhere else because of its quaintness and proximity to town and campus.

"I've always liked the fact I can get in that friendly lobby, read the paper, then see a half-dozen friends come through the place," says Cochrane, a U.S. Senate staff member who is serving as president of the UNC Alumni Association.

Not everyone is so loyal. "We are competing against very modern facilities with large rooms with queen-size and king-size beds, large bathrooms and a lot of the things we don't have," says Rehkopf, who previously managed an old hotel at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point.

Several years ago, a feasibility study recommended the inn's oldest section be renovated and its rooms enlarged. Under that plan, the number of rooms would have dropped from 64 to 40.

When Rehkopf arrived 18 months ago, he decided the inn couldn't afford to lose 24 rooms. Besides, the inn's problems extend beyond the old wing.

Students Attend School Of Hard Rocks In Idaho

By David Bond
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MULLAN, Idaho — Students at the nation's only hard-rock mining school have found more than just hope for a new profession in northern Idaho's Silver Valley.

Breaking rock recently in their "underground classroom" at the Atlas Mine near Mullan, they also found silver.

Fausett, president of Fausett International, a mine-building company in Wallace, Idaho, helped organize the course through North Idaho College.

The find was small, a few "stringers" of lead and silver ore peeking through an otherwise barren quartz vein not far from the main tunnel.

But it was enough to pique the interest of the 30 students, who decided to skip lunch, stay underground and drill another round that day.

Instructors are miners like Al Wattula, who supervised construction of the No. 12 Shaft at the Sunshine Mine before he was laid off in 1982.

Bernie Knapp, North Idaho College vocational instructor and director of the new mining school, says more applicants were turned away than were accepted for the 30 openings.

Applicants were given intelligence tests and screened by a panel of mine supervisors from the Silver Valley.

"We want people that want to work," Knapp says. "It's three months of hard work, 40 hours a week, with no pay."

Each course lasts three months. Knapp says he has obtained enough state vocational grant money to last 18 months.

 The great ecdysiasts did not have to "take it all off" to excite their audiences—a partial strip was enough to fire the imagination. The same is often true at the bridge table.
 Arguably, North had enough for a forcing jump in hearts at his first turn. However, a jump raise of partner's trump suit always promises four-card support, so he used a delayed game raise instead.
 West led a low diamond, and a cursory examination of the North-South assets might lead to the conclusion that declarer was going to have to rely on the spade finesse for his contract. Careful timing, however, made the defenders do his work for him.
 The first key play was to duck the opening diamond lead. East took his queen and could do no better than return a diamond to dummy's ace. The ace and jack of trumps were cashed, leaving one trump outstanding. Next came the ace of clubs and another. The defenders were dead ducks.

 If West went up with the king of clubs, he would have killed one of his side's defensive tricks in that suit. He played low and East won, but that worthy was now well and truly enplayed. A spade return would be into dummy's major tenace; a diamond return would permit declarer to discard a spade while ruffing in dummy.
 What if East has the last trump as an exit card? Declarer is no worse off than if he had drawn the last trump himself. He must rely on the spade finesse for his contract. But his technique did give him a significant extra chance that paid a huge dividend.

What Is Love?

By Elizabeth Morris

Love is like a flower that is alone but sees flowers in another field.

always there, even when you don't need them.

Hate is being mad and sad, mad at someone, sad for yourself.

Why I Like America

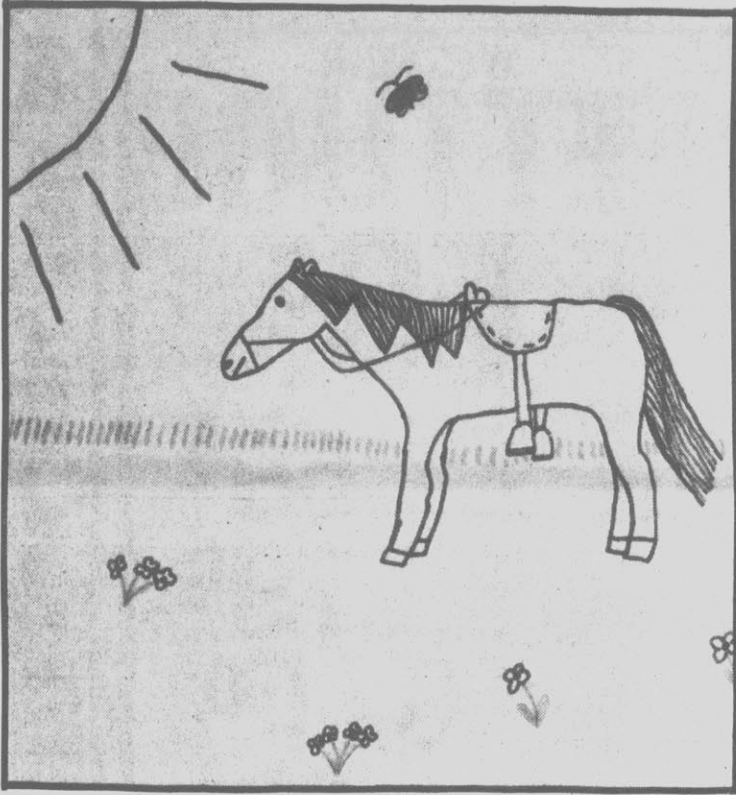

By Emily B. Tepper

America, America you are our peoples' dream.
You give us all the things we need,
Like water from your streams.
Our rights we have because of you,
Our freedom and our joy.

Your flag desires a certain respect
From America's girls and boys.
From the coastal plains to the state of Maine, our country is divine,
From the Pamlico Sound to ancient ruins not yet found,

I do believe our country is nearly perfect,
All the time!

I grow older
I remember how it used to be
I sit and watch the sky

Still holding on to my fantasy
I dream my dreams and love

As I'm sitting there.

For the remembrance of the life I had is in my heart somewhere.

Look around everywhere
From sea to shining sea
From the Pacific

It's the best place for me

America's dreams
America is free
America has the key
To being the best place to be

From the Sears Roebuck Tower

Facing The Cooking Oil Question

By Constance Ward
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

In today's health-conscious society, many people are careful to choose foods with oils that are low in cholesterol.

But that isn't always easy. Most of us consume as many as 19 types of oils and fats in our diets, including coconut, palm, butter, meat fats, corn, olive, sunflower, safflower, soybean, fish oils, cocoa, cottonseed, rapeseed and sesame.

Few of us actually know what all these oils are, but a basic education isn't hard to come by. And knowing which oils are good for you can help you avoid some of the common pitfalls which face consumers every day.

Linda Walker, of East Carolina University's Family Practice Center, agreed that understanding cholesterol and oils can be confusing. But, she said, some knowledge can help any consumer understand the difference between vegetable oil and lard, or animal fat.

Cholesterol is present in many of the fatty foods we like most, such as hotdogs and hamburgers, and though small amounts of cholesterol are essential for nerve cells, hormones and vitamin transport, most people take in more than they need.

The American Heart Association says no one's diet should be more than 30 percent fat. But, they say, the average American now takes in 50-55 percent fat. That can be dangerous. High cholesterol levels in the blood can cause narrowing of the arteries (atherosclerosis).

If you are cholesterol conscious, the best oil to select is a vegetable oil. "Cholesterol is only found in animal products," Ms. Walker said. Vegetable oils, she pointed out, are low in saturated fats, which raise blood cholesterol.

One way to recognize saturated fats, she said, is to notice that they harden at refrigerator temperatures; some monounsaturated and polyunsaturated fats turn semi-solid or remain liquid. She added that monounsaturated fats lower bad cholesterol (high density-lipoprotein, or HDL) and polyunsaturated fat reduces good cholesterol (low density-lipoprotein, or LDL).

Animal products are a major source of saturated fats. Examples are cheese, butter, milk, animal fat and low amounts in poultry and fish. But the vegetable category produces a few villains, too. Cocoa, palm, palm kernel and coconut oil contain more HDL cholesterol than all other foods. They are used in commercially baked goods, such as cookies, nondairy products, like whipped cream, and snacks, such as chocolate bars.

It's important to read labels, Ms. Walker said, to look for these oils. They're not visible like meat fats are.

Polyunsaturated fats are found in safflower, corn, soybean, cottonseed, sesame, fish and sunflower oils. They are found in common cooking oils. And though the fats in these oils does not raise cholesterol, it does lower the LDL, or good cholesterol. Still, they are a better alternative than oils with saturated fats.

Olive and rapeseed (canola) oils are used for cooking, and sometimes included in salad dressings. They're high in monounsaturated fats, which will lower HDL cholesterol levels. They are good substitutes for polyunsaturated fats.

If all this seems more confusing than it's worth, take heart. Diet can make a difference in lowering cholesterol.

The formula, Ms. Walker pointed out, isn't all that

Comparison Of Dietary Fats

Oil/Fat	Cholesterol mg/Tbsp	Saturated Fat	Polyunsaturated Fat (Linoleic Acid)	Polyunsaturated Fat (Alpha-Linolenic Acid)	Monounsaturated Fat
Canola Oil	0	6%	22%	10%	62%
Safflower Oil	0	10%	77%	Trace	13%
Sunflower Oil	0	11%	69%		20%
Corn Oil	0	13%	61%		25%
Olive Oil	0	14%	8%	1%	77%
Soybean Oil	0	15%	54%		24%
Margarine	0	17%	32%		49%
Peanut Oil	0	18%	33%		49%
Chicken Fat	11	51%		21%	47%
Lard	12	41%		11%	47%
Beef Fat	14	52%		3%	44%
Butterfat	33	66%		2%	30%

complicated. Put simply, we eat too many calories and too much fat. If we cut down on them, cholesterol will go down.

But that doesn't mean we should automatically go on a no-fat diet. Some fat, Ms. Walker said, is healthy. And the American Heart Association said we should have equal amounts of each type of oil to be healthy. Most foods have a mixture of the different types of oils.

"One (oil) isn't better than the other because people are different," Ms. Walker said. But, she added, it is a good idea to cut saturated fats, because they are linked to heart disease.

Still, consumers should not make the mistake of thinking all saturated fats are bad and all polyunsaturated fats are good.

"It is more complex and we don't yet have all the answers," she said. "Probably over the next years, we'll discover some of the saturated fats are healthier than others; some of the polyunsaturated fats are not as healthy as others."

Honor George For Dessert In February

February is cherry season — not on the trees, of course, but in the hearts of Americans who can't let George Washington's birthday go by without celebrating his famous cherry-tree chopping escapade. Cherry pies, cakes and cobblers seem an appropriate observance for the father of our country.

It's appropriate, too, that there be a second cherry season. Harvesting of tart, or sour, cherries (the best for cooking) begins around the Fourth of July and lasts a mere 20 days. Fresh sour cherries are very difficult to find even when they are in season. Sweet cherries, on the other hand, are generally available in markets for a longer period, from May through August, although the peak season is only mid-June to early August.

Fortunately, today's modern food processing techniques can give us cherries in February that retain a substantial measure of the flavor and nutritional quality of cherries picked last summer. Sour cherries are a good source of beta-carotene, a form of vitamin A that American Institute for Cancer research have associated with lower cancer risk.

Look for cherries packed in water rather than in sugary syrup, and you can control the amount of sweetness in your recipe. The following recipe shows how to celebrate Washington's birthday in a happy and healthy way.

This simple cake is a great way to enjoy the taste of cherries year round. It is delicious warm or cold, with a dash of milk on top or plain.

CHERRY DUMP CAKE

- 1 16-oz. can sour cherries
- 1 cup whole wheat flour
- 2 tsp. baking powder
- 1/2 cup honey
- 2/3 cup lowfat milk
- 2 tbsp. margarine

Melt the margarine in a 9-inch square baking pan. In a bowl mix the flour and baking powder with the honey and milk. Stir until the dry ingredients are moistened and blended. Pour the batter mixture into the baking pan, then spread the can of cherries and juice evenly over the batter. Bake the mixture at 350 degrees for 45 minutes.

This recipe uses whole wheat flour to add additional fiber to the cake. To learn more about the importance of fiber in reducing cancer risk, get a free copy of the booklet, "Dietary Fiber to Lower Cancer Risk," by sending a stamped, self-addressed, business size envelope to the American Institute for Cancer Research, Dept. DF, Washington, D.C. 20069.

Win At Losing In 1989

Q. I've done well with my New Year's resolution diet and lost weight, but I'm beginning to be tempted. What can I do?

A. Congratulations, you're trying to prevent a relapse. Relapse is the "in word" to describe falling back into your old eating habits which will lead you to regain all the weight you've already lost or raise your cholesterol. A colleague of mine at the university of Pennsylvania studies behavior modification and relapse prevention for both smoking cessation and weight loss. He has taught me a variety of things. First, distinguish between lapse, relapse and collapse. It's like playing the children's game "Chutes and Ladders." You can be moving along just fine and all of the sudden you experience a set-back and slide down the chute. But that doesn't mean that you can't win the game if you don't quit. So, you might have a temporary slip or set back called a lapse but it's an isolated event. For example, in the middle of your diet you feel the urge to eat everything in sight and do so. If in the morning you start on your diet again, you only had a temporary lapse. There are to be expected. Don't feel guilty about them, and you can move forward. Relapse is when you eat everything in sight, get mad at yourself, say what's the use and stop trying or quit. We want to prevent relapse because it leads to collapse.

To prevent collapse, you need to be aware of the situations which are high risk for you and avoid them. You have to find strategies that work for you to outlast the urge to eat. Often that means finding alternative activities for entertainment. If you have trouble doing this yourself, your family doctor may be able to work with you or refer you to a nutritionist or behavioral psychologist that can assist you in finding the ways that work for you. Most importantly, you need to be on a food pattern or diet you can follow for life. Otherwise, preventing relapse would be impossible.

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

We teach self-monitoring techniques that help some people prevent relapse. Keeping diary of all the food you consume helps some folks. You can keep a diary of the times you eat and the location you eat in as well as the people you eat or overeat with and the feelings you have. When you are feeling like a relapse, avoid those situations.

Here are some success strategies that another North Carolina nutritionist, Ann Tyndall, put in a book called "Slim and Sassy" for the Integration Insurance Company of Winston-Salem.

1. Wait five minutes before taking seconds. This will give you time to think about food before you eat.
2. Ask yourself, "Do I want this extra food more than I want to maintain my weight?"
3. Don't use food as a reward or gift.
4. Enjoy the food you eat.
5. Don't save the best for last.
6. At parties, sit far away from the food and drink.
7. Offer your guests leftovers as they leave.
8. At buffets, play your strategy. Look all that is offered before you serve yourself and decide what you really want; 8) At buffets, plan your strategy. Look all that is offered before you serve yourself and decide what you really want.
9. Give yourself time to eat. If you keep yourself too busy, you nibble all day and never sit down to eat.
10. Eliminate recreational eating. If you really have trouble with your weight, try to eat only when you're hungry and not when you're bored.

A Literary Cook Cherishes The Classics

By Nina Killham
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Jay Rogers likes to exchange recipes for drinks. Before cocktails at his dinner party, he pulls out a sheet of paper and asks, "In marble walls white as milk, lined with a skin as soft as silk, within a fountain crystal-clear, a golden apple doth appear. No doors there are to this stronghold, yet thieves break in and steal the gold. What am I?"

"An egg," he finally offers and hands his confused guests a drink.

An evening at his house continues in that vein; soft discourse, gin potions served in pewter goblets, telephone books curling into cinders in the fireplace.

In the house on Washington's Capitol Hill where he lives with old, soothing furniture, he cooks for friends and self alike.

"I eat, therefore I cook," he says, tucking away forever the notion of the bachelor slurping Oodles of Noodles, choosing a different flavor every night for variety. He'll saute vegetables ("real bachelor fare with lots of garlic and onions"), chicken, cod, catfish — but never spend more than 30 minutes cooking. "Once you get used to cooking, it's not much of an effort. You sort of put yourself on automatic pilot," Rogers says.

He does it all without the time-saving '80s conveniences — having not yet submitted to buying a microwave oven. "I'm not sure it would speed things up. Guess it's for the same reason I've resisted Cuisinarts. I see them as a modern invention that takes the sensuality out of cooking. You can't smell vegetables saute-ing in a microwave quite the way you can on the stove.

"In fact, I like to think that microwaves are to movies what stoves are to live plays — with stoves you can hear the vegetables talking in real live dialogue," Rogers says, in one of his many analogies of cooking to life.

It all started years ago with his Gilbert chemistry set, which would stink up the basement with the sour-egg smell of sulfur. "The idea of adding one more drop of something and watching the whole potion change colors was fascinating. Same thing with cooking. I remember making cranberry bread and adding sesame oil — my favorite oil. I put too much in, and it was disgusting."

Cooking is the logical extension of experimenting, he says. But with cooking, you get to eat your concoctions.

A note-taker from way back, he stores his recipes like archives — in two blue loose-leaf notebooks where they lie pasted, brittle and yellowing. He meanders through the pages looking for his gin drink and finally finds it. "Here we go, three parts gin, one part combination of lime juice, honey, vermouth, apricot brandy." The drink's source: "Dusk in Fierce Pajamas," by E.B. White.

He's a literary cook, keeping novels on his cookbook shelf and using them for recipes — "Heartburn" for Nora Ephron's Key lime pie; "Dead-Eye Dick" for Kurt Vonnegut's Suma de Chocolate. "Though Vonnegut says not to use it as a cookbook," he says, "I think it's a great cookbook. The fact that he's tinkered with them gives you license to tinker."

But his favorite cookbook to this day is "Joy of Cooking." He calls it the encyclopedia of cooking, "because it explains absolutely everything that the ingredients do — how eggs bind, how to thicken soups, how to clarify stocks."

However, he would never call himself a gourmet. "Gourmet sounds too busy, too precise. If there's one thing about my cooking, it's that it's not precise at all. I try to keep a notebook, but whenever I try to write down a recipe, I choke. I hardly ever measure.

"The term is not suited to what I enjoy in cooking, which is putting together different ingredients, going with the spirit of it rather than with the precision of it. I associate gourmet with a real attention to detail."

If there is one theme that has developed in his cooking, it's that he never lets leftovers escape. The Key lime pie, which he had the foresight to prepare in advance that morning, contains ricotta cheese that had been nearing the end of its useful life. "If I didn't do something with it, it would croak."

Born in Georgia, Rogers grew up in Iowa, spent two years at the Air Force Academy, and then switched to Syracuse for his last two years of college. "At the Air Force Academy, food is the only respite. That and skiing. The rest is work and drill."

He now works for MCI, in the industry marketing department, continuing, he says, "a crazy mating game between computers and telephones."

In his town-house garden, he grows fresh mint and basil. And from a white pot that sits in his pea-green living room, he nurtures a rosemary bush. He cuts a few sprigs of the spiky herb and serves them with the jalapeno Monterey Jack cheese set out for his famished guests. The combination is addictive.

Then he offers his guests beer or wine. He reaches for beer for himself. "It's yeasty; it tastes more like bread. I like the effervescence."

He enjoys giving dinner parties but says that a football gathering is probably the easiest way to cook for guests. "It's very episodic; you can go away and come back and not really miss anything."

The menu for the evening starts with a lemon-grass-flavored broth with shrimp, to be followed by his special grilled chicken with wild rice and asparagus. After retiring to the living room and relaxing by the fire, he passes around huge wedges of Key lime pie, which are demolished promptly.

Oh, he's had some wonderful disasters. For a birthday party he threw for himself once, he trucked all over Chinatown with a friend to buy some ducks and came home with a pair — their bills still attached.

Removing the bills, making the sauce and cooking the ducks took them two days. "But we must have come upon the secret for Goodyear's vulcanized rubber. These ducks were terrible. You pulled at the meat with your teeth, and it flapped back at you." Nonetheless, he will continue to experiment. If you eat, he says, you naturally have to learn to cook. "Not learning to cook is like enjoying letters but never writing back."

French's Plant Is Tops With Mustard Lovers

By Nancy M. Funk
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

SOUDERTON, Pa. — The pungent, sweet and spicy smell of yellow mustard permeates the air at the Durkee-French Foods plant in Souderton.

In the parking lot, you can smell the vinegar and spices blended to make the yellow mash beloved with hot dogs and pastrami on rye.

The Souderton plant is the largest manufacturer of mustard in the world. The 212,000-square-foot plant produces enough French's Mustard in a year to cover more than 10 hot dogs for every person in America.

It is a far cry from the old Philadelphia plant bought by Robert Timothy French in the 1920s to make Colman's mustard, hand-packed spices, birdseed, gravel and biscuits. French's eventually outgrew that four-story building and moved to Souderton in 1957.

The mustard maker has long since been owned by Reckitt & Colman of London. In 1987, Reckitt & Colman merged its Durkee Foods subsidiary with French's Mustard to form Durkee-French Foods. Durkee is a well-known spice manufacturer with operations in Bethlehem, Pa.

"The company wanted to make wet production in one plant and (powdered) sauces, gravies and spices in the others," said personnel manager Meredith K. Neely in explaining the merger.

The 133-employee Souderton plant, which had sales of roughly $40 million last year, is the company's sole producer of Bold 'N Spicy mustard, Mustard with Onion Bits, Mustard with Horseradish, Dijon mustard, Colman's Hot English mustard, as well as several others.

It is also sole producer of Durkee-French's newest product, Dip 'N Spread, a sweet dipping mustard that hit the supermarket shelves in March 1987. And generic and private-label mustards — particularly house brands for supermarket chains — are also made at the plant.

But by far, the company's most popular item is its well-known, bright yellow mustard in the plastic squeeze bottle. The plant manufactures more than 5 million of the 16-ounce bottles of that product per year.

There are splashes of the bright yellow everywhere in the plant — on machinery, on the floor where a bottle has accidentally shattered, and in the millions and millions of bottles themselves.

Automation has been the biggest revolution at the mustard plant. The company cut the workforce by about 10 percent in 1985 after installing state-of-the-art manufacturing machinery.

Before the equipment, most manufacturing lines had workers posted at stations throughout the assembly process. Now, workers are only needed at a line's front and back.

"It allows us to produce more cases in less time with fewer people," Neely said.

Like many manufacturers of food products, mustard producers enjoy peak production and sales periods. Sales are hottest when it is hot outside — from Memorial Day to Labor Day — the time Americans most frequently feast on grilled dogs and burgers.

Mustard making at the plant — a fairly simple process of mixing and grinding ingredients — begins with train cars filled with mustard seeds. The small, round seeds are pumped into four silos, three for yellow seed and one for the brown seed used for heartier mustards. Each silo holds 160,000 pounds worth.

In the plant's huge storage warehouse, 220-pound barrels of red pepper, onion powder and turmeric sit near sacks of dehydrated Chablis wine used in Dijon mustard.

The mustard seed is vacuum pumped into a spiral-shaped machine that cleans and separates it from useless hulls.

Three-hundred-pound barrels hold a variety of powdered spices that workers measure into tanks along with water and vinegar. The 800-gallon mixers tumble the ingredients, which are then piped into a neighboring room.

The mixed batches go to the company's "mills," which grind the seed and other ingredients into the smooth yellow paste.

After several other processing procedures, the mustard is stored in large tanks before heading to the assembly lines for packaging.

Dijon mustard, which composes only 5 percent of the plant's output, is made by a slightly different method.

Along with a variety of spices and vinegar, white wine is added to the Dijon recipe and the seeds are processed with different machinery to create a finer texture.

The finished mustard products are pumped from storage tanks to a machine that fills, caps and labels jars.

Empty jars and bottles enter a circular machine that pumps each jar full of mustard, then sends the jars along the assembly line to be capped, labeled and packed in boxes for supermarket use.

Crunchy Mix Is A Healthy Kids' Snack

By Nancy Byal
BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

Lower in fat and sodium than many snacks, this crunchy mix makes a great after-school or TV nibble. To trim preparation time, you can substitute a 6-ounce package of mixed fruit bits for the apricots and raisins.

FRUIT AND OAT NIBBLE MIX

- 1 cup rolled oats
- 1 cup mixed nuts
- 1/2 cup shredded coconut
- 1/4 cup toasted wheat germ
- 1/2 cup honey
- 2 tbsps. cooking oil
- 1/4 tsp. ground allspice
- 1 cup dried apricots, snipped
- 1/2 cup raisins

Stir together oats, nuts, coconut and wheat germ. Combine honey, oil and allspice. Drizzle half the honey mixture over oat mixture. Toss. Repeat with remaining honey mixture. Spread mixture in a 13-by 9-by 2-inch baking pan. Bake in a 300-degree F oven 30 to 40 minutes, stirring every 15 minutes. Remove from oven. Transfer to another greased pan; cool without stirring. Break mixture into bite-size pieces. Stir in apricots and raisins. Store in an airtight container. Makes 7 cups.
