Schools Say Classes Will Go On

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Plans made by teachers in Pitt County to rally against Gov. Jim Martin's proposal to delay their pay raises should have little effect in the classroom Monday.

Principals and other school personnel of the school system contacted by telephone this morning said the number of teachers applying for a personal leave day Monday has been minimal.

A group of about 50 teachers decided Tuesday to meet with district legislators Monday at 11 a.m. about their concerns on Martin's proposal to delay pay raises for teachers and state employees until April 1990.

A group also plans to travel to Raleigh on Monday evening to participate in a vigil outside the Governor's Mansion with teachers of Wake County.

Janie Manning, principal at Bethel Elementary School, said today no teachers in the school have applied to take the day off. "I'm not expecting them to," she said.

Many of the teachers in the school are active in the North Carolina Association of Educators and "I think they're planning a different approach to it," Mrs. Manning said. Farmville Central High School has granted one personal leave day for Monday, principal Charles Long said.

But, "I think my teachers are looking at other methods" for protesting the salary proposal, he said.

"We have approved three teachers for personal leave" on Monday, said Ike Baldree, principal of D.H. Conley High School. "They may or may not be going to Raleigh," he said.

About 10 teachers at E.B. Aycock Junior High School have requested personal leave for Monday, said

Martin Calls Education Summit On Pay Issue

By F. Alan Boyce
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Martin's call for an "education summit" to address the teacher-pay issue quickly drew criticism as an attempt to spread the blame on the eve of an angry teacher protest in Raleigh.

"It seems to me that what we see is a quick reaction to try to put some oil on the water of a public relations disaster which is honestly earned," said House Speaker Joe Mavretic upon hearing Wednesday of the governor's plan to hold the summit Monday afternoon. On Tuesday, as many as 2,000 teachers are expected to demand an explanation of Martin's plan to delay implementing a 5.7 percent raise until 1990.

Mavretic said Martin should be held responsible for his campaign promises of better education.

"The media hype and the media rhetoric in the campaign has gotten people elected to offices in North Carolina without substance," he said. "And now it's time to find out what the hoopla means."

"I want the individuals who campaigned in the executive branch on better education and better schools to put their money where their mouth is," Mavretic said, adding that he wants to governor to say how much money he wants for salaries and where it ought to come from.

Martin, in a letter to state Board of Education Chairman Howard Haworth, acknowledged the meeting would anticipate the arrival of "delegations from many areas of the state" seeking more money for teachers.

"It is important for this group to search for a consensus on the issue of better pay for teachers and state employees, so we will be prepared to discuss these issues when teachers' groups arrive in Raleigh on Tuesday," Martin said.

Among those invited to participate in the summit were Haworth, Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner, state Schools Superintendent Bobby Etheridge, University of North Carolina President C.D. Spangler, Community College President Bob Scott, Mavretic, Senate President Pro Tem Henson Barnes and "a suitable bipartisan

Ayden Man Gets Heart Transplant

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Ayden area resident Bill Johnson received his long-awaited transplanted heart Tuesday night in a Richmond, Va., Veterans Administration hospital.

Johnson's wife, Virginia, said in a telephone interview this morning that they learned a heart was available about 3:30 p.m. Tuesday. Johnson, chauffeured by his daughter, Kathy Smith, was headed toward Richmond less than an hour later.

Mrs. Johnson said the donated heart — she understands it was from New Jersey — arrived at the Richmond hospital about 10:30 p.m. Surgery began immediately and lasted until well after midnight.

"Bill is in isolation now and he's hooked up to every machine imaginable, with at least one nurse and sometimes two with him at all times," she said. "We saw him through a glass partition yesterday (Wednesday) morning and I was surprised at how aware he seemed when he waked up. He couldn't talk, of course, with all the tubes down his throat. And he lapsed real often into what seemed like a light sleep."

"This morning they said they took him off the respirator for a few minutes and he did fine," Mrs. Johnson said. "By the first of the week they say, if all goes well, they'll have him up walking around."

A housebuilder, the 55-year-old Johnson has been a heart patient since 1983. He had a heart attack in Pitt County Memorial Hospital on June 20 of 1983 and since has had numerous related problems, including difficulties which put him in the VA Hospital in Durham for several weeks in January 1988. He was declared a heart transplant candidate last spring.

Since then he and his wife of 36 years have been waiting for the phone to ring summoning him to Richmond for a new and healthier heart.

"It's been a tough five years since we first realized Bill was sick, seemingly down hill most of the way," Mrs. Johnson said.

"Bill's still on the critical list now and we know it's possible his body will reject the new heart. But this is what he wanted to do and we really

Booming Overseas Market Gives American Tobacco A New Outlook

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina University Chancellor Richard Eakin said the actions taken by the university to settle an incident involving black and white students "should not be disturbed."

Eakin made his comments in a letter Wednesday to Dennis Schatzman, state executive director of the

New Turkish brand cigarettes are made with tobacco produced in the United States

ing an American-blended cigarette, the president of Tobacco Associates Inc. said Wednesday in Greenville at the 31st annual meeting for District 6 of the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp.

"It went on the market in December, and they cannot keep the shelves full the demand is so great," said Kirk Wayne of Washington, D.C.

"It's the most popular thing that's hit their market," he said. "We're very pleased with the product."

With domestic tobacco consumption declining at a rate of 1 or 2 percent a year, Wayne said the growth in the tobacco industry is due to the booming overseas market. The new Turkish cigarette, "Tekel 2000," represents the first time U.S. officials have convinced a foreign country to create a blended cigarette on a large-scale operation, Wayne said.

To begin production, the government ordered nine million pounds of U.S. tobacco. Currently, the Turkish factory has the capacity to use 1,500 metric tons of U.S. tobacco a day, he said, and the government soon will be doubling that amount.

Of that, more than 55 percent of the leaf is flue-cured tobacco. Pitt County is one of the top flue-cured tobacco producing counties in the nation.

To decide on a name for the cigarette, Wayne said the Turkish government held a nationwide contest and awarded a cash prize to the winning suggestion. "Tekel" is an acronym for words which mean Turkish State Tobacco Monopoly.

Eakin Says Race Incident Closed

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

NAACP. Schatzman had written Eakin in January to accuse the university of mishandling the case of a black student suspended in the incident on April 3, 1988.

Schatzman, who says he received information from witnesses, claimed the incident began with white students shouting racial slurs to black students from a window in Garrett Dormitory.

Schatzman said the suspended student went to the room in Garrett and was invited inside where a fight occurred. He said a second fight took place outside the dorm.

Court records show that ECU students James B. Denmon, John V. Haar and J.W. Bennett filed simple assault charges against Teddy Matthew White of Monroe with the Pitt County District Attorney's office as a result of the incident.

Haar also filed charges against White for damaging personal property — prescription classes valued at $125. Jensen, who received a broken nose during the incident, filed charges of assault inflicting serious injury against White.

In his letter, Schatzman called for White to be readmitted at ECU or that equal punishment be given to the white students involved.

But Eakin said there is evidence of violence on White's part in the incident, and there is no evidence, not even a complaint from White, against the other students.

"It is a matter of public record that Mr. White's role in this incident led to his conviction of five counts of assault," Eakin says in the letter.

"One of the victims assaulted suffered a broken nose and another suffered serious head lacerations. It was reported that Mr. White assaulted the victims following verbal provocation from students in Garrett Hall. Verbal provocation, however, cannot excuse Mr. White's violent reaction. Tolerance of this behavior would make it more difficult to maintain a safe campus," Eakin wrote.

"I do believe that Mr. White was provoked in some manner and I do not condone verbal provocation. Still, there was no evidence in our records to show that any identifiable person uttered racial slurs. There was no record of a complaint by Mr. White that any specific person racially harassed him. There was no substantial evidence in the record to establish that persons other than Mr. White should have been charged with disciplinary offenses," Eakin said in the letter.

Schatzman said the letter was read to him over the telephone this morning by university attorney Ben Irons.

"I'm sending a letter to Max Joyner asking that he step in,"

Contracts Scheduled

The state Board of Transportation is expected to award a contract for the second phase of the U.S. 264 bypass at Farmville at a meeting Friday in Raleigh.

The cost of the project — grading, drainage and structures, including an interchange at the U.S. 258 intersection, from west of U.S. 238 to the Farmville East Thoroughfare — has been set at $4.6 million.

Contracts for the first phase of the bypass, the four-lane U.S. 264 west of Farmville to west of U.S. 258, were let in February 1988. That $4.25 million project, including grading, drainage and structures, is scheduled for completion by Nov. 1.

The final phase of the Farmville bypass project will include paving.

Expo '89 Will Use Theme Of 'Boomtown Biz'

By Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

"Boomtown Biz" has been selected as the theme for this year's Greenville-Pitt County Expo set for April 6-8 at the New Greenville Warehouse, located on N.C. 33 north of the city.

Sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, the exposition is designed to showcase the role of business in the area's economy and to provide companies an opportunity to display and advertise merchandise and services.

Chamber officials said today that 25,000 people are expected to attend the fifth annual springtime event.

"We are expecting to have over 200 booths for exhibitors to rent and show their products and advertise their services this year," said John Miller, who will be Expo co-chairman along with Laura Smith.

A variety of businesses and organizations will be participating in Expo '89, Miller said, including automobile dealerships, area retailers, banks, restaurants and real estate firms.

The exposition will also feature assorted activities suitable for the entire family, according to Ms. Smith.

"Exhibitors will have special drawings for giveaways and that type of thing," she said. "In addition to that, in the evening we plan to have a different band performing every night. We hope to have some beach music and some country and western — a variety of music which will appeal to all types of people," she said.

Ten concession stands will provide Expo visitors with all types of food, she said, including popcorn, cotton candy, as well as fried chicken and barbecue.

"Everyone can come out and have dinner at the Expo as well as seeing all the booths and displays," Ms. Smith said.

Chris McCoy, Chamber of Commerce chairman, said "Boomtown Biz" was selected as the theme of Expo '89 as a reflection of the local business environment.

"We feel that Greenville is in essence a boomtown in eastern North Carolina," he said. "We want

Chinese Studying Du Pont Operation

Thirty-six visitors from the People's Republic of China are spending part of the winter in eastern North Carolina as part of a corporate training exercise.

The Far East travelers, who are staying at a Greenville apartment complex, are in the area as a result of a three-month training program sponsored by Du Pont.

The visitors are employees of the Shanghai Petrochemical Complex (SPC), a company located in Jinshan, China, an industrial complex approximately 40 miles south of Shanghai.

The employees arrived at Du Pont's Kinston site on Jan. 24 to study several areas of the "Dacron" polyester plant.

William Bentley, Du Pont technology transfer supervisor, said the trip originated following an agreement between the two companies in January of 1987.

The contract provides the Jinshan-based organization with textile fiber technology and used equipment from two Du Pont plants and training at the Kinston location.

"This training will prepare them for the start-up of their new plant in Jinshan in the fourth quarter of 1989," Bentley said. "This project will enable the Chinese to meet their growing demand for synthetic fibers."

Bentley said Du Pont began selling technology in 1974 with the objective to establish the company as a "window on the world."

"The goodwill we have generated through technology sales has opened doors for sales of other Du Pont products," he said.

Jimmy Register, Du Pont training and activities coordinator for the project, said the Chinese have been impressed with the training at Du Pont.

"Initially they thought the training would be more structured but they were pleased to find a very informal atmosphere here," he said.

"They are also impressed with the technical expertise that the instructors have demonstrated," he said.

ECU School Presents Teaching Awards To 6 Of Its Graduates

ECU NEWS BUREAU

The school of education at East Carolina University has honored six of its graduates with teaching awards for service and contributions to education.

Those honored in ceremonies this week include a county school superintendent, a high school science chairwoman, a junior high teacher of English and history, a music teacher in elementary grades, an American Indian who is principal of his school, and a former newspaperman turned elementary school teacher.

Receiving the annual ECU Council for Teacher Education Awards were:

Mona Manning Boyd of Williamston, a general music teacher in Martin County schools; Frederick I. Denning, superintendent of schools in Camden County; Margaret C. Gray of Greenville, science departmental chairwoman at West Craven High School, Vanceboro; David Michael Milligan of Washington, N.C., a fourth-grade teacher at Chocowinity; Patricia Williams Shepard of Greenville, English and history teacher at E.B. Aycock Junior High, and Noah Woods of Pembroke, principal of Magnolia School at Lumberton.

The awards were presented at the seventh annual James W. Batten Distinguished Lecture and Awards program. The lecturer was Dr. Linda Darling-Hammond, director of the Rand Corporation's Education and Human Resources Program, who spoke on "School Reform and Teacher Professionalism."

The awards were established by the council which governs all teacher education programs at ECU and are presented on the basis of length of service, contributions to the field of education and excellence in teaching. Recipients are selected by a committee which screens nominations.

Mrs. Boyd, a 1967 graduate of Williamston High School, received bachelor's and master's degrees in music education at ECU and has taught in the Martin County schools since 1971. She has taught piano, choral music, general music and music appreciation, and was recently selected Teacher of the Year in Martin County.

Denning, who holds bachelor's, master's and education specialist degrees from ECU, has been superintendent in Camden County since 1987. He is a former principal at high schools in Williamston, Burgaw and Delco, an assistant principal at Pine Forest in Fayetteville, and has taught in Windsor and Roper. He began his teaching career in 1968.

Mrs. Gray earned a bachelor's degree in science education at ECU in 1958 and a master of arts in education degree in biology in 1976. She taught physical science in elementary and high schools in Williamston, Winterville and at Farm Life, Vanceboro, until 1971 when she went to West Craven High School. In addition to chairing the science department, she teaches chemistry and biology.

Milligan, 1952 journalism major at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, gave up a career of nearly 25 years in newspaper work to earn degrees in intermediate education at ECU and has taught at Chocowinity since 1978. For 15 years he was city editor of the Washington, N.C., Daily News and from 1970 to 1976 was editor and publisher of the weekly Beaufort-Hyde News at Belhaven.

Mrs. Sheppard, a native of Columbus County, is the wife of Dr. Moses M. Sheppard, professor and chairman of science education at ECU. She has a degree in grammar grade education and a master of arts in elementary education from ECU. She has taught English, history and math at high school in South Norfolk and Great Bridge, Va., and at Greenville Junior High and E.B. Aycock Junior High in Greenville for more than 25 years. She has been at Aycock since 1969.

Woods has a bachelor's degree in elementary education from Pembroke State University and the master of arts in educational administration and education specialist certification from ECU. He was principal of Oxendine Elementary School in Maxton for 10 years before becoming principal at Magnolia School, Lumberton, in 1978.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Skyward

PGV Earned Its Wings In The 1980s

The upcoming terminal expansion for the Pitt-Greenville Airport will remove a major impediment to the growth of a resource that can propel the economy of the community skyward.

The current terminal building is inadequate to serve the two airlines that provide 15 flights daily to Raleigh and Charlotte. It simply was not designed for the scope of air traffic it now supports. Passengers waiting for flights must crowd into a small waiting area. Often, flyers must wait in line with those picking up incoming passengers. There is no covered baggage area protected from inclement area.

But with the approval of $90,000 in local funds by the City Council and the County Commission, along with accompanying funds from state and federal coffers, the airport is ready to let bids for a 11,000 square foot, $1.3 million addition to the terminal.

The construction comes none too soon.

After increasing its business tenfold from 1982 to 1987, boardings at PCV grew another 15 percent in 1988. Contrast that figure with a 9.6 percent drop in boardings at nearby Eastern Regional Jetport in Kinston, and the potential of Pitt's airport becomes obvious. So does the need for a larger terminal.

What is less visible, but equally real, is the impact of a booming airport on the county's economy. PGV is a vital transportation link with major metropolitan areas. This connection feeds growth and brings dollars and jobs to Pitt. Expanding it is imperative.

With the terminal construction a reality, the community must now further its investment and protect the area around the airport from inappropriate development. The facility must have room to expand to meet future needs, for its current location is a key to its success.

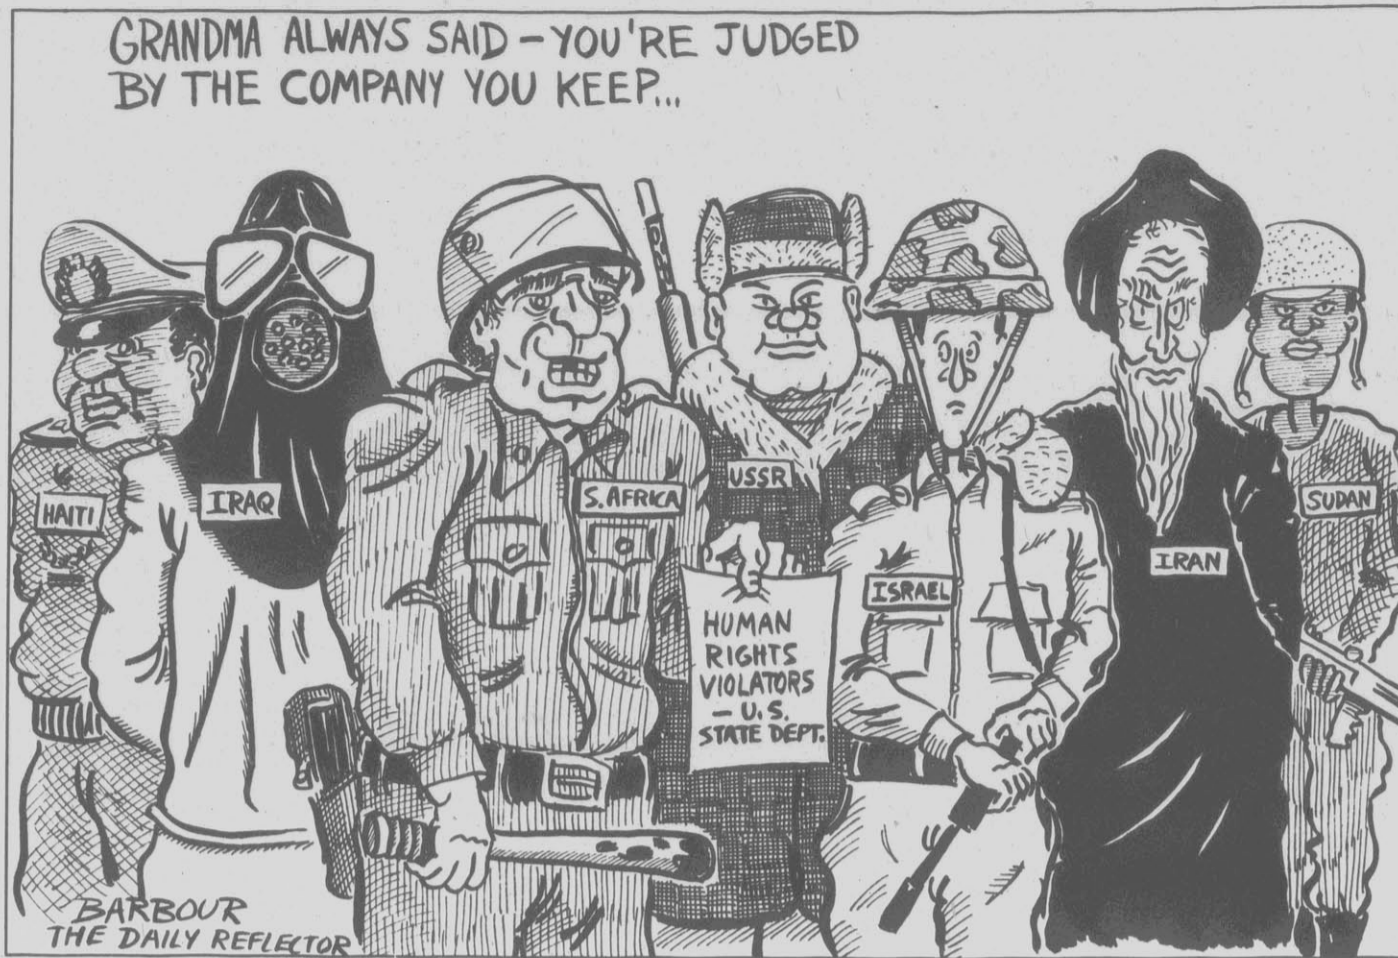

The airport is minutes from downtown Greenville and from the county's industrial park. It is central to the county and located on a major, four-lane thoroughfare. The facility is convenient to the community it serves, and should remain in its current location.

But to so do will require careful land use planning around the facility — planning which is already under way. Already, there are conflicts — residents of a nearby subdivision understandably resent the noise a thriving PGV has forced on their neighborhood. In addition, the airport has a limited amount of property for expansion. More land will be needed to accommodate future growth.

These are the next charges facing airport officials and community leaders — to avoid future conflicts and to insure the facility the space it needs to serve the community.

The airport has earned its wings in the 1980s. The new terminal will provide the craft in which PGV can soar into the next century. Now, the proper ground support to sustain that flight is essential.

Not A Liar But A Fraud?

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — An open letter to House Speaker Joe Mavretic:

You promised us you'd be different, Joe, and already you've fulfilled that promise.

That press conference you held with Senate President Pro Tem Henson Barnes last week was a real departure from past practice. Imagine that! A politician being candid enough to admit that he has in the past, and will in the future, deceive the press corps and, through their reporting, deceive the public — all to accomplish his own political ends. It must be the new Mavretic openness that you've been talking about.

Let's take a minute to recount what you said. This letter is being shared with a few readers of North Carolina newspapers, by the way, and some of them might not have read the wire story about the press conference. You were asked if there had been a written pact, a verbal pact, or just a knowing wink between you and other dissident Democrats, to deceive the press, public and other politicians about the recent overthrow of Liston Ramsey as House speaker. You responded, "I don't know of anything written, but we were as deceptive as we thought we had to be to pull it off ... There was no question that we had to be tight with our own security."

Maybe that's why, when I asked in December if you were running for speaker you said "no." That wasn't a lie because at the time you weren't running for speaker, you were just part of the cabal that later selected you as the leader of the plot to overthrow Ramsey.

In your press conference last week, you said, "We tried not to answer your (press) questions, to deflect them, to evade them and I think we did it very successfully." You were successful with me, Joe, because after you said you weren't running for speaker, you went further to say that you were supporting Ramsey for another term. I didn't ask you that, Joe, you volunteered it. Was that a deflection? An evasion? Or, a no-answer?

In your press conference, you said that in the future "if I need to practice deception, I would do that. But just stand up and outright tell you a lie? I am not going to do that."

Webster's dictionary defines "deception" as "an illusion or a fraud." If you prefer to known as a fraud rather a liar, that's your business.

Joe, you say that you're not satisfied with the image of the General Assembly and that is why you've hired a new press secretary, why you're holding these weekly press conferences and why you're going to be so much more accessible to the press than was your predecessor.

Well, you've done a great service to the assembly with your candid admission that you're fully prepared to try to deceive press and public from now on. The people of North Carolina, being suspicious of government, hold a healthy skepticism about the veracity of political statements — and of what they read in the newspaper, I should add. And now you've confirmed their skepticism. Right from your own mouth, they've heard that what you're saying might not be highly credible, it might be a deception. Maybe you deceived us last week, and you plan to tell only the truth from now on.

You're expected to seek another term as speaker in 1991, and there's a lot of speculation that an ambitious guy like you will try to run for statewide office in 1992.

Over the next four years, Joe, don't be surprised if press and public don't always trust your word. In the back of our minds, we'll always be wondering if you're trying to deceive, evade or just not answer.

The Umbilical Touch-Tone Connection

BOSTON — My grandfather had a six-pack of sisters who lived on the other side of the continent. When he got a telephone call from San Francisco, he never once said "Hello," or "How are you?" He picked up the receiver with one stock greeting: "What's wrong?"

Long distance was for disasters. Good news could wait for the mail; bad news came by phone.

Throughout my childhood, it was clear that these lines were not for conversation but for announcements. We were as likely to reach out and touch someone by telephone as we were to communicate by using a cattle prod. Casual phoning was as rare as casual sex.

Today, however, I do not answer the phone saying, "What's wrong?" I answer it saying, "Yes, I will accept the charges."

As a parent I have learned that the marketing miracle of the age — the century's greatest scam — is the success of the telephone company in selling something as ephemeral as conversation. They have convinced a generation of young Americans to casually, nay whimsically, use the phone.

It isn't only an extra-terrestrial creature who yearns to "Phone Home." Our own little earthbound kiddies learn their telephone numbers before they learn to count change. In the best Sesame Street style, they have their priorities straight: digits before dollars. And long distance is just three little digits.

The business plot comes into its profitable peak when our young move to another area code and join that expensive subspecies known as college students. Having spent high school attached umbilically to the extension cord, they move into a dorm where they are immediately entrusted with the one thing we withheld: their own touch-tone.

What they do with it can only be explained through a series of anecdotes that lurk in the telephone bills gathered for the Annals of Collegiate Communication. (1) A long distance call in pursuit of someone else's long-distance number. (2) A call from a panicky young cook who needs to be talked through a creme anglaise. (3) A call from an operator checking if the child in city A could call the friend in city B and charge it to the parent in home G. G as in Goodman.

The building of a truly impressive phone bill, one that rivals the cost of tuition, is not all the fault of the telephone company and its diabolical direct-dialing. The university colludes in this. It brings together students who do not ordinarily live anywhere near each other.

Love also rears its expensive head. Researchers have determined that it is biologically impossible for a college student to fall for someone who both summers and studies in the same area code. Accountants calculate that a relationship with the girl next door would save the average college family $89.56 each quarter. There are two such families in existence.

In any family, the time comes for a serious conversation about casual phoning. No problem. You will find them absolutely cooperative, even happy to discuss the matter at great length — which is to say, at long distance.

Michael Dukakis Did What Other Democrats Didn't

WASHINGTON — The Democratic Party, the party of William Jennings Bryan and Adlai Stevenson, might do it again. Some Democrats believe 1992 could be a trip down memory lane with Michael Dukakis.

Even before Kitty Dukakis' latest troubles, it probably seemed improbable that he would run again (as he did, successfully, after losing the Massachusetts governorship). Surely, Democrats would not nominate him again. Some Democrats are not so sure.

Losing with Dukakis was not, as losing three times with Bryan was, an exciting moral crusade. And in 1988 Democrats were denied "the Adlai Stevenson consolation." Democrats who were "madly for Adlai" in 1952 and 1956 could say each time, "at least our stylish hero won an aesthetic victory."

Dukakis made George Bush the first presidential candidate in the history of polling to have a net disapproval rating at some point in an election year and still win. Bush won because in three months Dukakis managed to go from a 4-to-1 approval rating to a decisive defeat. Surely, you say, Democrats have learned. There are serious Democrats who know Dukakis and know their party's nominating process and who say: Do not underestimate his tenacity or its peculiarity.

The nominating process has its own inner logic and momentum. The Democratic Party is now essentially a party of blacks and white liberals who are disproportionately public employees. Since the election, Senate Democrats have chosen as their leader a Northeastern liberal (George Mitchell of Maine) and a black Washington lobbyist, Ron Brown, has captured the party chairmanship. Jesse Jackson probably will lead in preference polls for the Democratic nomination as late as early winter, 1991. If Dukakis runs, he probably will be second, far in front of whoever is third, in part because of name recognition.

President Bush and many members of his Cabinet are treating Jackson as leader of his party, mischievously making sure his political weight increases. These Republicans are not political rookies. As Horace Busby notes, Bush is the first President to have served as chairman of his party, and his Cabinet includes his campaign manager (James Baker), his early campaign adviser (Nicholas Brady), one of his prominent rivals for the nomination (Jack Kemp) and the wife of another rival (Elizabeth Dole). When they meet with Jackson as though he is the leader of the loyal opposition, they know they are sowing trouble for the loyal opposition.

Jackson will have a third or so of the party behind him and, if there are two or more white candidates on Super Tuesday (if there is a Super Tuesday), he may win that event. Jackson now has such political weight that by early April, 1992, the anti-Jackson vote is apt to swing toward a single candidate. That is what doomed Al Gore's 1988 candidacy. In the New York primary, he found himself standing in the disappearing middle, getting just 10 percent as Dukakis became Mr. Not Jackson.

Could Dukakis do it again? The party's supposed stars — Gov. Cuomo, Sens. Bradley, Nunn and Robb — again might not enter the race. Already some Democrats are saying, yet again, that the party's message is fine, but a bigger turnout is the key to victory.

In 1988, voter turnout was the lowest percentage since 1924. But Ruy A. Teixeira, writing in Public Opinion, shows that even if you assume, wildly, that blacks and Hispanics, who had lower turnout rates than whites, had a turnout rate 10 points higher than whites in 1988, Dukakis would have gained only 4.3 million votes. He lost by 6.9 million. And one survey of voters and non-voters shows that if every eligible American had voted, Bush's victory would have been even more decisive.

Voters under 30 are today the most Republican voters. In 1988, 40 percent of all non-hyphen voters were under 30 and surveys indicate that these young non-hyphen voters were even more pro-Bush than those who voted.

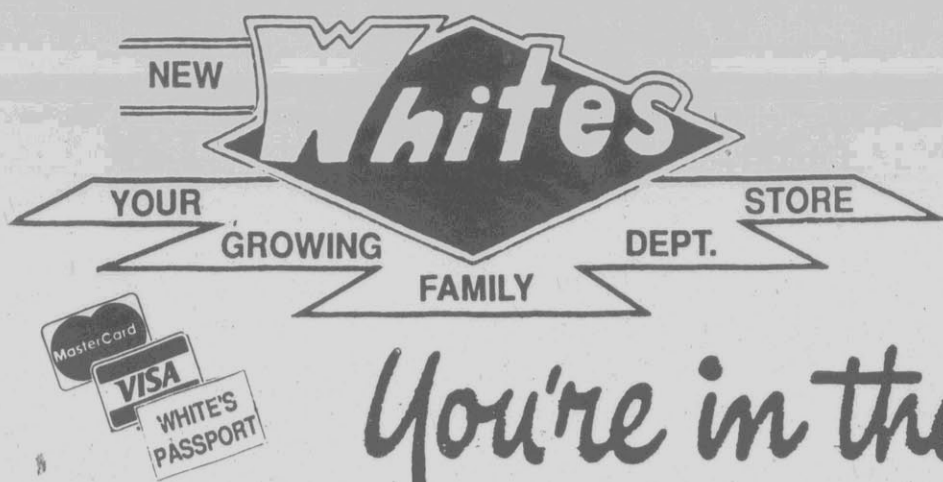

But the 1990 elections are apt to boost Democratic confidence. Stuart Rothenberg writes (also in Public Opinion) that only once since the Civil War has the party holding the presidency gained House seats in off-year voting.

And although Democrats have a five-seat Senate majority, more Republicans than Democrats (18-16) are up in 1990. Republicans have had net gains in the Senate in only two of the last nine elections (1978 and 1980) and probably will decline in 1990.

So Democrats, including Dukakis, may feel a sense of confidence as they think: Thomas Jefferson was the only sitting vice president to be elected President and then win re-election, and Bush is no Jefferson. True. But trust the Democrats to find a way to make an opponent seem like Jefferson.

Say what you will in disparagement of Dukakis, in 1988, he did what supposedly stronger Democrats did not do. He ran. Unless new candidates representing other constituencies come forward, and there is no guarantee that they will, the party's immediate future may resemble its recent past.

River Fight Turns Into Booze Battle

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — If a North Carolina paper mill can't dump into the Pigeon River, then North Carolinians shouldn't be able to gulp Tennessee liquor, according to a bill filed by two Tar Heel legislators.

Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, said he wanted to signal Tennessee's leaders that their decision to deny a variance on water quality standards for Champion International's Canton paper mill would have economic ramifications for both states.

"I'm not trying to knock them to their knees," he said. "The basic problem is they don't think they have anything to lose, no economic loss."

Winner and Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, filed a bill Wednesday that would ban the sale in North Carolina of liquor manufactured in Tennessee or purchased from a Tennessee vendor. Rep. Charles Beall, D-Haywood, is expected to introduce the measure in the House.

The bill quickly inspired jokes and puns in the halls of the Legislative Building, including talk of "fighting fire with fire water."

"There's no revenge involved," Swain said, tongue in cheek. "I just think that ol' Tennessee liquor is bad for people."

But the bill's wording leaves no doubt it is the latest salvo in an increasingly bitter feud between the states over Tennessee's refusal to grant Champion International a permit for discharging wastewater into the Pigeon River, which flows from North Carolina into Tennessee.

"The state of Tennessee has imposed water color standards on rivers flowing into Tennessee which are technologically impossible for the plant of Champion International located in Canton, N.C., to meet," the bill states.

A plant official announced this week that its operations would be scaled back, putting 1,000 people out of work.

"I think it would do well for Tennessee to be aware of the fact that it's to their benefit to be a good neighbor," Swain said. "They at least temporarily forgot that."

The bill accuses Tennessee of renegeing on an agreement to grant Champion an exemption to that state's environmental regulations in exchange for a promise to invest $300 million in modernizing the plant and reducing the degree of color it adds to the river water.

Winner, chairman of the Senate Rules Committee, said he would refer the measure to the Judiciary I Committee, of which Swain is chairman. He said there would be no quick vote in hopes that McWherter reconsiders his ruling.

But Ken Renner, spokesman for Tennessee Gov. Ned McWherter, said that's not likely.

"What North Carolina does, I guess, is North Carolina's business," he told the Asheville Citizen. "About the only similarity between Tennessee whiskey and Pigeon River water is they're about the same color."

A spokesman for the Jack Daniels distillery in Lynchburg, Tenn., said he was only vaguely familiar with the Champion controversy.

"What are they doing that for?" said Roger Brashears when told about the bill. "We don't mess in politics."

Asked how the company would view a ban on its whiskey in North Carolina, Brashears said, "We're not too happy, I don't guess. It don't make us too pleased."

The distillery employs about 350 people, Brashears said. He could not say how much Jack Daniels whiskey is sold in North Carolina.

Railway Buff Wants Routes Protected

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — In two or three decades, North Carolina could be criss-crossed with dozens of high-speed rail lines shutting commuters between major cities — but only if lawmakers start protecting the necessary rights-of-way, officials say.

Mark Sullivan, a planner with the North Carolina Rail Program, told a joint meeting of the Senate Transportation Committee and the House Infrastructure Subcommittee on Railways, Airports and Water on Wednesday that 800 to 2,000 miles of railroad rights-of-way are threatened.

"Twenty to 30 years from now, we're going to be depending on those corridors to move people as well as goods, and if they're not there, we can't do it," he said.

Sullivan and Larry Sams, director of the Rail Program, unveiled maps of North Carolina showing proposed high-speed rail corridors between major cities and shorter commuter rail lines that would offer convenience while taking some of the pressure off the highways.

It would be much cheaper to acquire rights to those stretches now, Sullivan said. But he added, "We don't have the tools or the mechanism to save these easements right now."

Even with the current battle to find enough money for major highway improvements, Sullivan said he hopes the legislature will at least be able to help salvage five sections of rail that were recently abandoned.

"Basically, we're going to lose these corridors, 58 miles of them, by July if something isn't done," he said.

Sullivan said he wasn't sure how much money it would cost to save those sections or to protect the rest of the land that might be needed in the future.

"It depends on how you save them, how many of them you save and what funding mechanism is the best way to save them," he said.

Senate Panel Agrees Veto Should Go Before People

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A Senate committee sidestepped partisan issues and began to sketch out a version of gubernatorial veto that might go before North Carolina voters as early as next year.

The Committee on Constitutional Amendments unanimously voted Wednesday that some form of veto should go to a statewide referendum. The panel voted 7-5 to let the legislature override a veto with three-fifths of the members present in each house. By the same vote, the committee agreed to allow 10 calendar days for the governor to veto a bill.

Pocket veto, which would let the governor kill a bill simply by not signing it, was unanimously defeated.

Sen. Jim Ezzell, D-Nash, chairman of the committee, said he was pleased with the panel's progress on a "menu" of veto-related issues. But he said he expects more controversy next week.

"I think that when we get into line-item (veto), they're going to take most of that meeting (to make a decision)," he said.

Also pending are decisions on whether the governor can veto resolutions on internal legislative matters, legislative appointments to such bodies as the University of North Carolina Board of Governors and decisions on how to map legislative districts in light of each U.S. Census.

The committee also has to decide whether the final veto bill would affect the current governor if approved in a statewide referendum.

Even with those decisions made, Ezzell said he plans to hold the bill in committee while members decide whether to address trade-offs among the three branches of government including a single term for the governor, confirmation of gubernatorial appointments, four-year terms for legislators and merit selection of judges.

"We don't know yet what else is coming," he told the committee. "We may not be able to wait until we get everything in to decide."

Ezzell noted that while the Senate is reviewing three veto bills, the House has seven proposed constitutional amendments that include various packages of government-balancing issues.

Ezzell predicted the package agreed on by his committee would have wide support in the Senate.

"This group is very representative of the membership," he said.

Most of the committee's debate came over the override provision. Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, proposed the three-fifths vote of members present in his bill, but others favored a two-thirds vote of members present or two-thirds of those elected to the House and Senate.

Winner made it clear he would not be swayed.

"I think we ought to be very careful about putting the governor in a position ... where his power is such that you're almost approaching, to me, monarchy," he said. "My purpose in having a veto is to check the General Assembly from doing something wild. If you make the thing too strong, you're going much farther than that."

Deputy Run Over By Car

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AURORA, N.C. — A Beaufort County sheriff's deputy was injured when a man on whom he was trying to serve a warrant commandeered his patrol car, pushed him from the vehicle and ran over him, authorities said.

Deputy Billy Wright suffered cuts, bruises and lacerations in the incident near Aurora at about 8 p.m. Wednesday, said Michelle Sparrow, a supervisor at the Beaufort County sheriff's department.

Wright was being treated in the emergency room at Craven County Hospital in New Bern. He was being X-rayed to determine if bones had been broken.

"The officer was assaulted. He was trying to serve a warrant, and there was a fight," Ms. Sparrow said.

"The guy got in the deputy's car, he struggled with the deputy and the officer was pushed from the car. Then the assailant took the car and ran over the deputy," she said.

Wright was conscious throughout the incident, Ms. Sparrow said.

NCSU Wins $12 Million Grant For Waste Research

By Michael Hobbs
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A center at North Carolina State University that will research ways to eliminate some hazardous industrial waste drew praise from environmentalists and legislators, who said it indicated an emphasis on reduction rather than treatment.

"I believe it's good news because the state and the EPA are going to invest in pollution prevention and waste reduction and environmentalists believe pollution prevention and waste reduction should be our top priority," said Bill Holman, an environmental lobbyist.

"Our priorities have been skewed toward treatment," Holman said. "This is a shift in the right direction."

House Speaker Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, said: "The progress we make in waste reduction is a positive government program."

The Environmental Protection Agency has awarded the school an eight-year, $12 million grant to support the EPA Research Center on Waste Minimization and Management and its research, the officials said. Gov. Jim Martin and university officials announced the center Wednesday, and a formal announcement by the EPA is expected today in Washington.

"Again, North Carolina has been recognized for leadership in the environmental area," Martin said during a news conference at NCSU. "We must do everything possible to protect our environment and to protect our citizens. The best place to begin is with research."

Michael Overcash, an NCSU chemical engineering and director of the new center, said the school was chosen after a stiff competition involving "every university of any size" in the nation.

NCSU was chosen by the EPA as a Hazardous Substance Research Center for a region including the Southeast, Texas, Oklahoma and Arizona. The agency also has chosen four other universities around the nation to head up other research programs on hazardous substances. The five centers will get money through the EPA's Superfund.

Overcash said the center will coordinate waste research under way at NCSU, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and Texas A&M University. He said funding for the center will also come from the state of North Carolina, Texas A&M and from industries.

"Our goal is to find better ways of manufacturing that are cost-efficient and that minimize waste," Overcash said.

He said industry currently spends about $75 billion each year complying with environmental regulations. He said he believes it is possible to trim that amount by 25 percent, saving industry, and eventually consumers, around $20 billion a year.

"It's a good goal," Overcash said. Overcash said the work of the center will involve eight NCSU faculty members. The NCSU researchers will focus on waste reduction in industry.

Five faculty members will be involved at both UNC-CH and Texas A&M. UNC-CH research will focus on treatment of hazardous substances that cannot be eliminated, while Texas A&M researchers will look at long-term containment of hazardous wastes.

NCSU spokeswoman Rosalind

Reid said North Carolina will contribute about $150,000 each year for the center and its research with around $100,000 coming from Texas A&M and about $35,000 from industry.

Overcash and other officials said the NCSU research will be housed in existing buildings on the Raleigh campus but that a new engineering building being planned for the school's Centennial Campus may house the center in the future.

Projects planned by the center include:

— Developing techniques for reducing the output of hazardous substances — such as dioxin formed in pulp and paper making — by chemical manufacturing industries. Researchers will look at how these substances are formed and explore processes to reduce them.

— Ways to recover volatile chemicals that escape during manufacturing or to substitute other substances.

Griffith Visit

MOUNT AIRY, N.C. (AP) — More than 500 fans of "The Andy Griffith Show" plan to visit Mount Airy — the inspiration for the fictional town of Mayberry — on May 13, officials said.

The trip will be part of the national convention May 12-14 of the Andy Griffith Show Appreciation Society, said John Meroney, the president of the Winston-Salem-based group.

Convention-goers will board buses in Winston-Salem and follow a replica Mayberry squad car to Mount Airy, Meroney said.

Once in Mount Airy, fans will get a chance to visit the inspiration for Floyd's Barber Shop and also see Griffith's boyhood home, Meroney said.

Switch Urged

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner urged fellow Republicans Tuesday night to convince Democrats to switch parties and also to make North Carolina the leader in the war on drugs.

Gardner's comments came as 200 people gathered for the Orange County GOP's precinct meeting.

The GOP's increased power was evident in the election of Joe Mavretic as speaker of the state House, Gardner said. "His election represents the first fruits of a two party government in this state, and you will have a better government because of it."

Bridges Closed

HIGH POINT (AP) — Deteriorating concrete has forced city officials to close two downtown bridges to trucks and buses, sending furniture executives out scouting new routes to downtown showrooms before the April furniture market.

The closing of the Hamilton and Wrenn street bridges to trucks and buses will also mean that city workers can't drive salt trucks over the bridges when it snows.

The furniture market opens April 6, but trucks of furniture for the displays will begin arriving next month.

"It adds a new dimension to plans for the April market," said Rick Barentine, executive director of the Furniture Factories' Marketing Association. "If the bridges are unsafe, we don't want to endanger people coming to the market."

Chemical Found

GREENSBORO (AP) — Traces of cancer-causing polychlorinated biphenyls have been found in a downtown Greensboro building being renovated for use by arts groups, city officials say.

The building, formerly owned by the Greensboro News Co., was sold to the city in 1976. Under federal law, the Greensboro News & Record could be forced to pay part of the cost of cleaning up the PCBs, the newspaper reported Wednesday.

"We're not talking about a spill or a massive amount at all," said Jim Baugh, deputy city manager. "What we found wouldn't suggest in any way that the building would not be safe, that it couldn't be cleaned up in the areas that have this material."

State officials and the Environmental Protection Agency have been notified, Baugh said.

Sanford Sued

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — A Caldwell County woman has filed a federal lawsuit charging that she lost her business because of inaction by Sen. Terry Sanford and four other federal government officials.

Candis O. Ray, 71, filed the suit Feb. 1 in U.S. District Court in Statesville. It named as defendants Sanford; Paul Vick, Sanford's administrative assistant; John C. Stennis, retired chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, and Sens. Howell Heflin and Malcolm Wallop, chairman and vice chairman of the Senate Ethics Committee.

The suit, which seeks damages of $10 million, charges the defendants with ignoring her allegations that U.S. Senate rules were ignored. She contends in the suit that they failed to investigate and act upon her claims against Sen. William Proxmire.

A lawsuit filed by Ms. Ray against Proxmire was dismissed in 1977. That suit had charged that Proxmire used his influence to promote his wife's sightseeing firm, and that action forced her own tour company, Candis O. Ray and Associates, out of business.

Wrists Slashed

SYLVIA, N.C. (AP) — A Cashiers church's youth leader slashed both his wrists with a pocket knife this week after being arrested on sex-offense charges by Jackson County law officers, police said.

Douglas Alfred Hawkins, 42, was listed in good condition at Memorial Mission Hospital on Wednesday after undergoing reconstructive surgery on his lacerated wrists, according to a hospital spokesman.

Hawkins is charged with four counts of taking indecent liberties with children and two counts of first-degree statutory sexual offense.

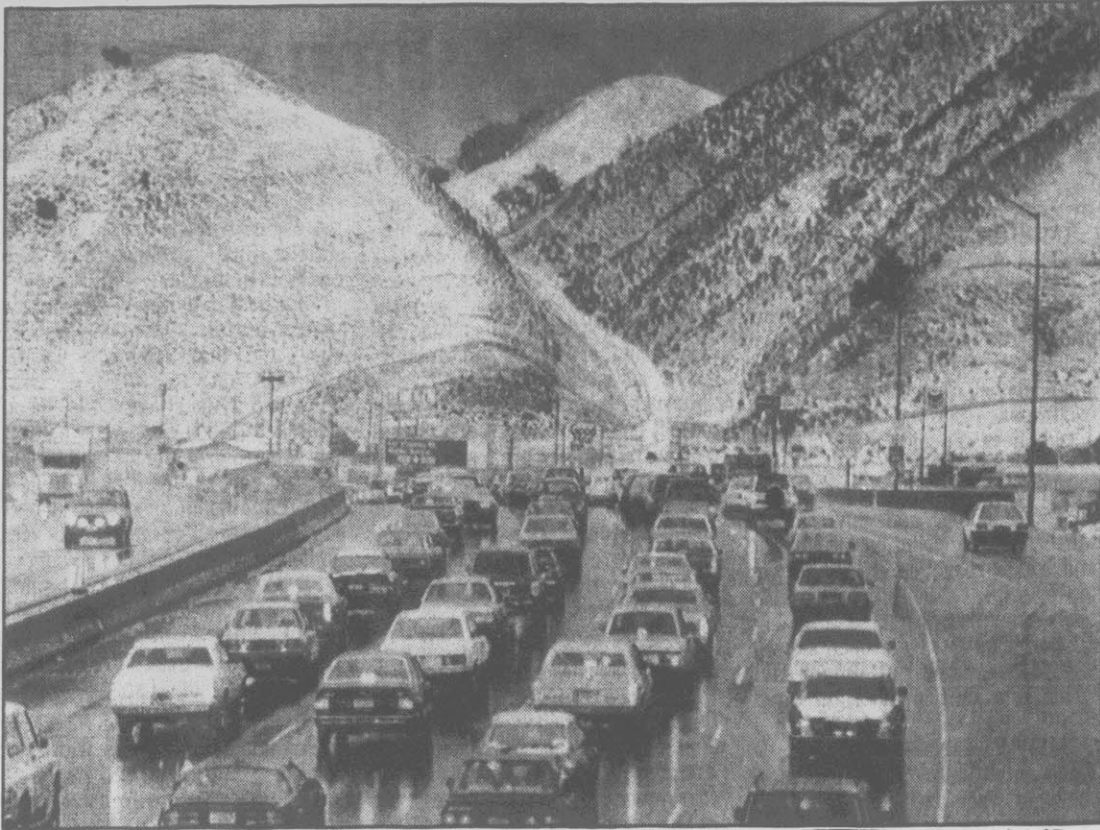

The warrants allege that the incidents, involving two boys under the age of 13, occurred between August 1988 and mid-January 1989.

Storage Facility

WHITEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Tobacco Growers Services board of directors plans to continue running a storage operation although the firm sold its $2.6 million processing facility at Fuquay-Varina last year.

The firm is a subsidiary of the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp., a grower-owned co-op that buys tobacco that fails to receive bids higher than the federal price support. The tobacco is processed, stored and later sold to repay loans from Commodity Credit Corp., the financial arm of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Stabilization's board of directors also acts as the board of directors of Tobacco Growers Services.

Motorists make way along rare snow-wet highway after storm blanketed Los Angeles area

Rare Storm Leaves Snow In Suburbs Of Los Angeles

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — A rare Southern California snowstorm threatened crops, wreaked havoc on freeways, and stranded motorists. Millions of people were absolutely delighted.

"I think it's very cool," said 11-year-old Laura Ruhland of Santa Clarita, 35 miles northwest of Los Angeles. "The trees outside all look like Christmas."

The storm, the latest product of a relentless arctic cold front, blew snow and ice across Southern California on Wednesday after smashing low-temperature records throughout northern and central California and around the nation.

Although temperatures rose moderately in most parts of the nation, the Alaskan front refused to die. Strong winds and cold weather poured into the Great Lakes, leaving snow drifts 10 feet high in northern Michigan. Snow also fell early today in Utah, Nevada and New York.

Cold weather was blamed for the deaths of 26 people in northern Mexico, where temperatures have dipped into the teens. Citrus growers conducted an emergency harvest of oranges, grapefruit and tangerines but said it was too early to tell how much of Mexico's citrus crop had been damaged.

In Southern California, the cold sent natural gas use to record levels and killed citrus and floral crops, threatening to raise the cost of an orange or a Valentine's Day bouquet.

Near-freezing temperatures early today forced street people into shelters, and the cold apparently claimed a transient's life in Fontana, 50 miles east of Los Angeles.

An accident on an icy road killed one person in Redlands, about 65 miles east of Los Angeles. The Alaskan weather has been blamed for at least 91 deaths since moving into the lower 48 states on Jan. 31.

Blowing snow shut Interstate 5, California's main north-south highway. Hundreds of truckers were stranded there and at other road closures, the Highway Patrol said.

"Interstate 5 is closed and it's going to be closed for quite a while," CHP Officer Bob Weaver said late Wednesday.

The Antelope Valley Freeway, which runs northeast from the San Fernando Valley to Palmdale, was also closed for much of the day.

Snowfall measured up half a foot in suburban Granada Hills, Simi Valley, West Hills, Thousand Oaks and Tarzana, closing schools and freeing students to frolic with makeshift sleds and snowmen.

In Granada Hills, about 25 miles northwest of downtown, children used trash can lids and cardboard boxes as sleds.

"It was all black and ugly and horrible," said young Mary Ellen Crosby. "Now it is all white and glistening and beautiful."

Winter-weary tourists who had flocked to Palm Springs for fun in the sun were thoroughly disheartened as temperatures hovered at 45 degrees and errant snowflakes melted into hot tubs and swimming pools.

"I was hoping to play a little tennis, but the weather's disappointing," said Spencer Videon, a 50-year-old businessman from Aspen, Colo.

In Las Vegas, smart money was betting more snow would fall today, after the gambler's mecca was dusted with a light snowfall Wednesday.

The Department of Energy postponed an underground nuclear test scheduled Wednesday at the Nevada Test Site. Monitoring aircraft wouldn't have been able to track any accidental release of radiation while it was snowing, said DOE spokesman Jim Boyer.

In central California, snow was reported in Bakersfield and elsewhere in the San Joaquin Valley.

Asparagus growers in the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys reported frost damage. Small farmers who grow leaf lettuce also were hurt, but Southern California growers generally were spared, said Clark Biggs, a California Farm Bureau Federation spokesman.

"They didn't get real cold temperatures in citrus areas overnight," Biggs said. "We've had damage but you couldn't call it disastrous."

Still, many growers and packers said lemon groves were hard hit by the cold wave, with some early estimates saying up to 35 percent of the crop may have been damaged.

California is the nation's top producer of lemons, a crop valued at $152 million in 1987. It will take about a week to 10 days for an accurate assessment of the frost's damage.

Dad Burns Himself, Two Kids

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FLOWOOD, Miss. — A woman had an amiable conversation with her ex-husband an hour before he apparently locked himself and the couple's two children in his truck and burned all of them beyond recognition, police said.

Benny Bilbrew, 29, pulled into the parking lot of Woman's Hospital in Flowood, where his ex-wife was working, shortly after noon Wednesday, police said. He then poured gasoline over his son Benny Carl, 6, and daughter Fecia, 5, and himself and ignited a fire, authorities said.

Investigators believe the children were killed before the father, a self-employed concrete worker from nearby Jackson, pulled into the parking lot, said Deputy George McKay, an arson investigator for the Rankin County sheriff's department.

"I don't know anybody's children who wouldn't scream and holler ... if someone was rendering these children helpless. Someone would have heard them scream. There are people in this parking lot all the time and on the road," he said.

"We feel they had met their demise before they ever came to this parking lot."

Bilbrew's ex-wife, Connie Bilbrew, a hospital cafeteria worker, told authorities he called her about 1½ hours before the bodies were found burned beyond recognition.

"There was nothing indicating what was ahead," said Flowood police Lt. Johnny Watkins. "He was not violent on the phone and there was nothing out of the ordinary."

There were no witnesses to the setting of the fire, and Bilbrew and the children were dead when rescuers arrived.

"I certainly think it was deliberately set," said McKay. "Someone poured the gasoline on them. ... I would have to say the adult poured the gasoline."

McKay said hospital personnel noticed the fire only after the explosion of some shotgun shells sitting in the locked, burning truck. He said no gun was found in the truck, although a knife was recovered. He also said no gasoline container was recovered.

Manson Denied Parole Request

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. — It is highly unlikely Charles Manson will ever be freed, the chairman of the state parole board said after the panel refused to release the notorious mass murderer for a seventh time.

"He's still at war with society and definitely a danger ... but anything is possible," Albert Leddy, chairman of the three-member Board of Prison Terms, told reporters after announcing Wednesday that Manson will remain at San Quentin Prison at least three more years.

Manson, leader of a cult-like "family" that in 1969 went on a grisly month-long murder spree, killing actress Sharon Tate and eight other people, was denied parole by a unanimous vote.

Manson declined to attend the hearing after complaining about being held in handcuffs and a waist chain that was too long. The panel offered to let him come in without chains, pending approval by the warden, but he declined, said spokesman Vernell Crittendon.

"He is vicious and he is terrible," Steven Kay, a deputy district attorney from Los Angeles, told the panel. "He certainly is one of the most vicious killers we have ever had in the history of our country."

Leddy said parole for Manson was rejected because of the nature of the slayings, many of which involved torture and mutilation; an extensive criminal history dating to childhood; an unfavorable psychiatric report; disciplinary problems in prison; and no indication his behavior would change if he were released.

Outside the prison walls, three men and a woman dressed in black demonstrated in favor of Manson's bid for parole, waving signs, one of which read, "Find A New Boogiemán, Give Charlie A Break."

"It's sort of a human rights thing," explained demonstrator Tina Williams of San Francisco. "Everybody in America should be allowed a fair hearing and he didn't get one."

Kay told the board he doubted Manson was seriously interested in being paroled. On previous occasions, Kay said Manson indicated he would like to be paroled to Death Valley with spiders and snakes, or else be sent to outer space.

CHARLES MANSON

At his last parole hearing three years ago, Manson said he was a "force of darkness" and had been spending his time fashioning scorpion dolls to unleash "torment" into the world outside.

Kay also told the board that since the conviction of Manson and many of his followers, the state has received 352,000 letters and petitions from people opposed to their paroles.

Leddy said it is "highly unlikely" the murderer ever will be freed.

Manson was convicted of masterminding the 1969 Los Angeles slayings of Miss Tate, coffee heiress Abigail Folger, hairdresser Jay Sebring, Polish filmmaker Voityk Frykowski, Stephen Parent, musician Gary Hinman, stuntman Donald "Shorty" Shea and Leno and Rosemary LaBianca.

Manson, saved from the gas chamber by a state Supreme Court decision overturning California's death penalty law, is serving a life prison term.

Vets Build Viet Clinic

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BANGKOK, Thailand — A group of former U.S. soldiers, hoping to "deliver an olive branch of peace," have begun to build a medical clinic in rural Vietnam, information received today from the veterans said.

Although a number of veterans groups have returned to Vietnam, the clinic at Vung Tau in southern Vietnam is the first known development effort by former U.S. servicemen.

A news release from the Veterans-Vietnam Restoration Project said a ground-breaking ceremony for the 10-room facility occurred Saturday with veterans Ruben Gomez and Gordon Smith and Vietnamese medical official Dr. Nguyen van Rep taking part.

Plans call for a dozen veterans, who include carpenters, electricians and architects, to spend about 10 weeks building the clinic with their own hands. The cost of the project is estimated between $60,000 and $100,000.

At the ceremony, the veterans said they had begun "to deliver an olive branch of peace to the people of Vietnam."

"It is hoped the group's efforts may soften the hard edge of American policies towards Vietnam, and eventually lead to a better understanding and improved relationships," the release said.

Gomez, a 47-year-old computer software technician from Santa Cruz, Calif., served as a combat infantryman in Vietnam. Smith, 38, of Monterey, Calif., saw Vietnam duty with the air force and is currently a building contractor.

Derailment Kills Man

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WEST FARGO, N.D. — A train crew member was crushed to death and three others were injured when a 28-car freight train carrying automobiles and trucks derailed near a stockyard, authorities said.

Sixteen of the rail cars left the track Wednesday near the West Fargo Stockyards, said Al Morin, a spokesman for Burlington Northern Railroad.

What caused the derailment was under investigation.

The names of the victims, identified as members of the train's crew, were withheld pending notification of relatives, the Cass County sheriff's department said.

Witnesses said the dead crew member was crushed in the accident.

The injured were taken to St. Luke's Hospitals-MeritCare in Fargo. None was in critical condition, said Kathy Borge, a hospital spokeswoman.

The train, originating in Dilworth, Minn., and bound for the Pacific Northwest, had 12 cars carrying automobiles and one loaded with trucks, Morin said.

Witness Says Mob Involved In Bingo

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Organized crime will dominate all gambling on Indian reservations in 10 years unless the federal government acts swiftly, a former Mafia figure who ran tribal bingo games contends.

"Anytime there's easy money, the mob will jump in," said the witness, who wore a gray hood and testified behind a screen in his appearance Wednesday before a special investigative unit of the Senate Select Committee on Indian Affairs.

The witness, whose voice was altered electronically to disguise his identity further, said the Bureau of Indian Affairs has been useless and the FBI is uninformed when it comes to infiltration by La Cosa Nostra on reservations.

Anthony Daniels, deputy assistant director of the criminal investigation for the FBI, had told the panel earlier that "allegations of LCN involvement sometimes exceed actual fact."

He said that with the exception of one case in Miami, in which the FBI has discouraged the mob's penetration of a Seminole Indian gambling operation, "none of the other past cases ever materialized to what I'd consider a substantial and consistent threat."

The secret witness disagreed. "The FBI is wrong," the witness said. "They are not getting the right information from whatever source they are getting it."

He said he knew from meetings with organized crime members and operators of other Indian gaming operations that Mafia infiltration of the reservations is widespread and growing.

"In 10 years it will be totally out of hand," he said.

He said Indian reservations are seen by organized crime families as "wide open, no regulations, no controls."

Bingo is the most common form of legalized gambling on Indian reservations.

The witness said he is familiar with 90 Indian gaming operations and knows that 12 of them are run by organized crime families. He said 50 percent of the operations have some link to organized crime, usually through the purchase of supplies from Mafia-owned companies.

He named the Pittstown, Pa.-based Bufalino family, the New York City-based Lucchese family and the nationwide Meyer Lansky network as those primarily involved with Indian gambling.

"The Indians need help," the witness said. "Organized crime is destroying the reservations."

He said a police force should be formed under federal control that could supply the Indians with information they need about the bingo managers suspected of having ties to organized crime. He said the police force should have authority to look at the books kept by gaming managers.

When Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., told the witness that under a federal law passed last year regulating Indian gaming, federal authorities could inspect gaming records, the witness said he was told differently.

He said that the FBI once visited his reservation, but he told them to leave and they complied.

The witness said he managed a bingo operation on a large reservation in the western United States for one of the major organized crime families.

He said he skimmed $1,000 a week from the operation to pay the chief and hired most of the chief's family in the hall, but that the tribal leader and members of the council didn't know he was working for the Mafia.

The witness said the Mafia's method of operation is to set up bingo management companies that appear to be legitimate.

Robber Seeking Disguise Nabbed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. LOUIS — A man who used a variety of disguises to commit a string of robberies in recent months was arrested at a novelty shop where he returned to replenish his supply, authorities said.

After his arrest, Steven Fleenor, 30, confessed to robberies at a bank and four restaurants in the St. Louis area, detectives said Wednesday. More than $22,000 was taken in the robberies, Sgt. Dan Saitz said.

The suspect posed as a woman, a bald man with a mustache and an elderly man with false teeth. But detectives used a false mustache abandoned during a thwarted bank robbery and police chase Jan. 31 to identify the source of the disguises as Gibbol's Novelty and Costumes.

The detectives asked the owner of the shop to notify police if the suspect returned, and he did, on Tuesday.

"He said he was with a local theater group connected to a small church," manager Conrad Dunn said. "He was real pleasant, a real nice guy."

Democrats Analyze Loss Of South To GOP

By Donald Rothberg
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Democrats are taking an unhappy look back at their latest presidential election defeat with the outgoing party chairman conceding that once again "we have had our clock cleaned in the South."

Ending his four-year term as party chairman, Paul G. Kirk Jr. told the Democratic executive committee on Wednesday, "we can't afford for a moment to write off the South" and expect to win presidential elections.

"We have had our clock cleaned in the South in the past several presidential elections," he said.

Pollster Peter Hart told the group that in the 1988 election, Republican George Bush won all 155 electoral votes in the South against Democrat Michael Dukakis.

"You can't start out any game behind 155-0 and be competitive," Hart said, blaming the loss in large part on the Democrats' preference for programs over values.

Kirk said he believed the South could be won by "the right messenger with the right message."

Those assessments of the party's failure to attract support in the South came as the Democrats gathered to elect Ronald H. Brown as Kirk's successor. Brown will be the first black to be chairman of a major political party.

He easily defeated four rivals for the post and will be unopposed when the Democratic National Committee votes on Friday.

Despite the ease of Brown's victory in the chairmanship race, there were lingering questions about the impact his election will have on the party in the South.

"Will it help?" asked Atlanta-based pollster Claibourne Darden.

"The answer is no. What can Ron Brown do to help the Democratic Party? Bring the liberal vote to it? It's already there."

"Bring the black vote to it? It's already there."

Merle Black, professor of political science at the University of North Carolina, said Republicans would use Brown's election to put out the message to Southern whites that

"the Democratic Party now is the party of blacks."

Still another analyst of Southern politics, Larry Sabato of the University of Virginia, said Brown's election could cause problems for Democrats in the region "not so much because he's black, but that he's tied to the twin devils, Ted Kennedy and Jesse Jackson."

Brown is a former aide to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts and was a top adviser to Jesse Jackson in the closing stages of his 1988 campaign.

Hart told the Democrats they also must learn to appeal to white Protestant voters and the middle class. "We have to be able to talk to them," he said.

He said white Protestants make up about 48 percent of the electorate and that the Democratic ticket lost their votes by a 2-1 margin. About 40 percent of the electorate are middle-class voters and they went Republican by a margin of 55-to-44, Hart said.

As for the South, Hart said, it wasn't enough for the Democrats to hold their nominating convention in Atlanta and pick Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen as the vice presidential nominee.

The Republican ticket prevailed by running on values such as law-and-order and a strong defense, while the Democrats ran on programs, he said.

"We've got to be able to get from programs to values," he said.

He also said the Democrats tend to "ignore what we don't do well" and for that reason failed to make a strong case for national defense.

Justice Department Appeal Adds Delay To North Trial

By Pete Yost
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The judge in the Iran-Contra coverup case of Oliver North says constant interruptions by government intelligence agencies threaten to turn the proceedings into a "cuckoo clock trial."

The latest delay came Wednesday when the Justice Department interrupted jury selection to demand that it be allowed to censor the defense's evidence.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell rejected the demand, but the department filed a notice of appeal Wednesday night with the Circuit Court of Appeals.

At issue is whether national security will be threatened by disclosure of classified information during North's trial on charges of shredding evidence and lying to Congress in an attempt to cover up the Iran-Contra affair.

The Justice Department, prodded by the National Security Agency and CIA, is seeking authority to screen and block disclosure of classified material.

"There is some information that cannot be put back in a bottle," said Deputy Assistant Attorney General Stephen Saltzburg.

But Gesell said prior rulings in the case already have addressed the issue and installed security safeguards — without damaging North's right to a fair trial.

"This is not a trial of national security; it's a trial of Oliver North," the judge said.

Gesell said he wasn't going to tolerate a "cuckoo clock trial" which would be constantly interrupted by reviews of classified material before it is introduced in the courtroom.

The Justice Department quickly entered an appeal notice with the circuit court, and spokesman David Runkel said the department's filing could be made there sometime today.

The department wants a court order saying that North cannot disclose any classified information unless it is explicitly approved by the court and if the government has no objection to the disclosure.

In arguments before Gesell on Wednesday, the Justice Department said North has failed to meet standards required by the Classified Information Procedures Act.

It said notices from North, which are supposed to spell out what classified material he plans to use at trial, have been "either totally useless or at best minimally informative."

Further, it said, "the court has not ruled on what particular classified information is relevant to the issues that will be tried, and whether it is admissible on some or all issues."

Gesell was angry over the delay as jury selection neared completion.

"You can't ride this horse in both directions," the judge said. "You can either move to protect national security or you can move to a fair trial. Congress says that if push comes to shove, a trial judge has one option, to move toward a fair trial."

Gesell ruled on Jan. 19 that North could introduce classified information if it tends to show that his purpose was not to break the law, or if it tends to show that statements made by government witnesses are false or misleading.

He also authorized North to divulge information about coverup attempts by other officials, and about the Reagan administration's attempts to have other countries provide military assistance to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels after Congress banned U.S. aid.

Independent counsel Lawrence Walsh, whose office is prosecuting North, opposed the Justice Department motion. Walsh said he does not believe that North attorney Brendan Sullivan intends to "trick or trap this court at the expense of national security."

Walsh proposed a less drastic course, seeking a court order applying some additional restrictions on classified material North could use in opening statements, cross-examination or at other points in the trial. For example, the prosecution was required under a Dec. 12 ruling to require substitutions for the names of non-Central American countries providing assistance to the Contras.

Walsh said Gesell should make it clear that the defense is bound by that restriction as well.

GAO Says Nuclear Cleanup Would Leave Some Hazards

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Energy Department's $81 billion plan to modernize and clean up nuclear weapons plants over 20 years would save the nation's production of war devices but fail to remove all environmental hazards, the head of General Accounting Office says.

"Modernization activities would essentially be completed by 2010, and the nation would have a revitalized weapons complex," Comptroller General Charles A.

Bowsher told a congressional hearing Wednesday. "However, problems in the environmental area would still be with us."

Bowsher told the House Budget Committee it would take up to $155 billion over 30 years to modernize the industry, clean up closed plants and protect the environment from radioactive contamination.

Material for nuclear weapons is produced at reactors and other facilities in a dozen states, but has effectively stopped because of safety concerns at reactor sites in Washington state, Nevada and South Carolina.

Energy officials told another congressional committee last week they hope to get the tritium-producing reactor at the Savannah River site in South Carolina back in operation before the end of the year, but may not be able to do it that soon. The reactor has been out of operation since August when an unexplained power surge caused it to shut down and other potential hazards were discovered.

Husband Asks Court To Allow Abortion To Save His Wife

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The husband of a comatose woman begged an appeals court to let him end his wife's pregnancy to save her life, and said in an interview that anti-abortionists who oppose him are "ripping my guts out."

"I implore this court not to permit these two strangers to delay my decision," Martin Klein said in an affidavit submitted to a state appeals court Wednesday.

Klein, a 34-year-old accountant from the Long Island suburb of Upper Brookville, wants to be named guardian of his wife, Nancy, so he can authorize an abortion that several doctors said could aid in her recovery.

But anti-abortion activists John Short and John Broderick have sought to block him, saying that aborting the fetus will not improve Mrs. Klein's chances and will harm her psychologically. They have applied to become her guardian to prevent the abortion.

Klein was awarded the guardianship Tuesday in a state trial court, but the decision was stayed pending an appeal by Short and Broderick.

At the appellate hearing, Klein's attorney, Sidney Schutz, called Short and Broderick "intruders, strangers" with no right to decide Mrs. Klein's fate.

But Mary Spaulding, Short's attorney, countered that it was a conflict of interest for Klein to be named guardian. She said the abortion would violate his wife's wishes.

Mrs. Klein "had planned this pregnancy, she was looking forward to this pregnancy and was happy about it," Ms. Short said. "The issue is not the right to an abortion, but the right to procreate and have children."

In his affidavit, Klein said: "For nine years, my wife and I have lived a happy and devoted life together. I know her wishes and priorities, including her own survival and recovery in view of the welfare of our 3-year-old daughter."

The five-judge appeals panel is due to make its decision by the end of the week. Short, founder of the Long Island Right-to-Life group, pledged to take the case to the U.S. Supreme Court if the panel ruled against him.

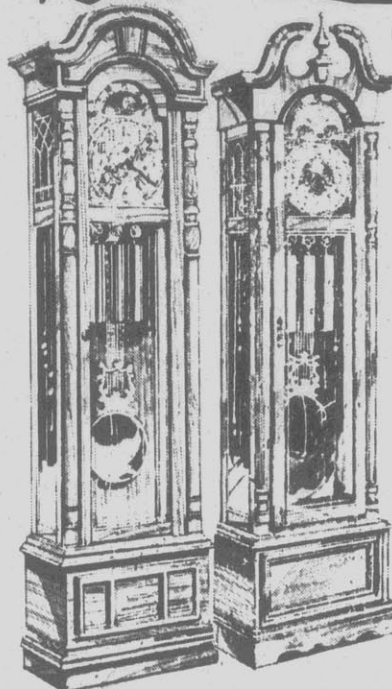

"At least the fetus is one day older," Short said. "If we keep it going, she will be a newborn, alive child. If Nancy Klein dies and the baby lives, she will have an extension of herself in the baby."

Applications Down At Several Colleges

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Freshman applications are down at top colleges around the country for the first time in years, the likely outcome of a dwindling number of high school graduates and ever-higher tuitions, admissions officers say.

The decline in graduating high school students is considered the prime culprit, according to more than a dozen admissions officers interviewed since Feb. 1, the deadline for fall freshman applications at many of the nation's most competitive schools.

"Since this is happening to everyone, the best guess is that it's demographics," said Michael C. Behnke, admissions director of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where applications are down 10 percent from a year ago.

But some officials suspect that students and their families may finally be reacting to tuition increases that have consistently exceeded the nation's overall inflation rate throughout the 1980s.

"I think there's a great possibility that tuitions are a part of it," said Linda Davis Taylor, admissions director of Amherst College, where applications are off by 4 percent from last year. "I don't know of any topic that's being discussed more by boards of trustees."

The number of high school seniors has dropped steadily from 3 million in 1980 to 2.76 million in 1988, and is expected to bottom out at 2.44 million by 1992.

An unexpected increase in the ranks of older students and higher percentages of high school students attending college helped offset the decline in the number of 18-year-olds. Thus, to the surprise of many, college enrollments grew from 12.1 million to 12.5 million since 1980, and were up at 54 percent of the nation's colleges and universities, according to an annual survey by the American Council on Education.

But college officials believe that the drop in applications for next fall's freshman class is the first sign that the long-expected decline in enrollment is about to arrive.

Harvard University spokesman Peter Costa estimates a 5-10 percent drop in applications, the first such decline in at least two decades. Brown University and most other Ivy League schools are reporting similar declines.

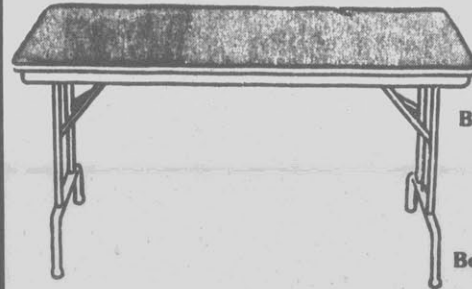

Stanford University's fall applications have dropped 6 percent, from 15,828 to 14,869, according to Lynne Madison, assistant dean of undergraduate admissions.

At University of California at Berkeley, applications are also down, from 21,944 to 20,835 for next fall's entering class.

"I consider this a yellow light. We all kind of anticipated this," said Bradley Quin, admissions director of Lafayette College in Easton, Pa., where applications are down about 5 percent. "I don't mean to imply that we're not concerned. This is a competitive business, and it's going to make it that much harder to increase the quality of our classes."

Soviet Publication Attacks Gorbachev

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — A Leningrad magazine has published a daring attack on the Soviet Communist Party, including unusually pointed criticism of the way President Mikhail S. Gorbachev is running the country.

Sergei Y. Andreyev, the author of the essay in the January edition of Neva, said Gorbachev's reforms have failed to solve the Soviet economic crisis.

The article is one of the harshest and most detailed attacks yet on the Communist system, Gorbachev and "perestroika," his reform program.

Andreyev said in the literary and political magazine that Gorbachev's reforms are seriously hampered by what he called a "new class."

"All decisions of the upper powers are carried out only to the extent that they are advantageous to the new class,"

W. Germany Bans Neo-Nazi Group

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFURT, West Germany — The government today banned a neo-Nazi organization from fielding candidates for municipal elections next month, and police searched members' apartments nationwide.

The ban of National Rallying, which was formed last summer, comes amid fears of a resurgence of right-wing extremism.

"This blow against the neo-Nazis should be a renewed sign and an unmistakable warning signal," Interior Minister Friedrich Zimmermann said in a statement. He said the country "is not about to become a roaming ground for right-wing extremists."

The organization's goals include the expulsion of foreign workers and people seeking asylum in the country.

Zimmermann said officials were attempting to seize any property belonging to the 170-member group, which is headed by long-time neo-Nazi activist Michael Kuehnen. He said police had staged coordinated raids on apartments belonging to the National Rallying in Bavaria, North Rhine Westphalia and Hesse states.

Hesse State Radio in Frankfurt said that among the items confiscated in a search in suburban Langen were banners with Nazi swastikas and neo-Nazi brochures.

Zimmermann said National Rallying was banned because "it damages with its open profession of neo-Naziism the reputation of the Federal Republic."

Dancers Give 'Thank You' Show

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE — A Soviet dance troupe gave a free performance to thank the city that helped feed and house them after investors ended their support for its U.S. tour. At show's end, the dancers had a suitcase full of $4,000 in donations.

"The dancers want the people of Baltimore to know this is from the bottom of their hearts," said Robert M. Pomory, president of the Lyric Opera House, where Wednesday night's benefit performance was staged.

The Donetsk Ballet troupe's financial troubles began when a group of California and Mexican investors withdrew $200,000 last week upon learning that dancers from well-known Soviet dance companies couldn't leave the Soviet Union to join the planned 15-city tour.

"It's tragic what's happened," said John Talbott of Baltimore as he dropped a check in the wicker suitcase at the entrance to the Lyric Opera House during the free performance. "A lot of America is going to miss a really exciting classical troupe if they are not supportive."

The decision whether the tour continues apparently rests with Howard Gilman of the New York-based Howard Gilman Foundation, which also has provided expense money for the dancers' stay in Baltimore.

The Donetsk, a troupe of Ukrainian ballet dancers mostly under the age of 25, played to nearly empty houses here last weekend. But when word of their plight got out, arts patrons rose to the occasion, providing money for hotel bills and meals.

While the admission was free Wednesday, the audience of 600 was asked for donations to help defray expenses for the dancers and as a show of support for continuation of the tour. About $4,000 was raised, Pomory said.

The dancers originally were scheduled to remain in the United States through April and had performances booked in Detroit, Chicago and Columbus, Ohio. They arrived in late January and their first performance was Feb. 2 in Baltimore.

Panel Wants Tobacco Regulated As Drug

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Joining the growing momentum in the nation against cigarette smoking, a presidentially appointed advisory panel recommended Wednesday that tobacco be classified and regulated as a drug and that smoking be forbidden in all public areas, including the workplace, schools, airlines and other forms of public transportation.

"Eradication of tobacco use is essential and would have measurable results in reducing cancer mortality," said the National Cancer

Advisory Board in a report prepared for the federal government's National Cancer Institute. The board, which conducted five public hearings in cities across the nation, said that "the importance of eliminating smoking and other tobacco use was the most frequently repeated theme among a cross-section of witnesses."

Dr. Samuel Broder, director of the National Cancer Institute, said in an interview that the board's proposals should "be seriously looked at" by policy-makers, although he believed that all Americans have "to get into the act and recognize they have responsibility for their own health." Helene G. Brown, a member of the board — which was created by the National Cancer Act of 1971 to advise the director of the institute and other federal health officials — called regulation of tobacco by the Food and Drug Administration "priority No. 1" and said that if tobacco were treated as a drug "you would only be able to use tobacco ... in your own home" or where it was specifically permitted.

Walker Merryman, vice president of the Tobacco Institute, which represents the tobacco industry, called the board's recommendations "more of the same," saying: "I don't see anything new or different in them. It seems to me that their wish for FDA control would be in the speculative hope that the FDA would then be forced to ban the product. I think they are just off on another neo-prohibitionist tier."

The Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act of 1938 specifically excludes tobacco and alcohol from FDA regulation, and it would presumably take some Congressional action to give the agency new authority. Currently, the FDA can only regulate tobacco products if a health claim is made. An FDA source said Wednesday, however, that he believes Congress "might not necessarily be opposed" to giving the agency regulatory power over tobacco, although "we don't really have any niche right now that we could put it (tobacco) in, and it is unrealistic to think that we would take it off the market."

Many of the other panel recommendations have already been implemented to some degree across the country. Smoking is prohibited on all domestic flights of two hours or less.

Exports Give American Tobacco New Lease On Life

The project has opened up a whole new arena for tobacco exports, he said.

Previously, the Turks manufactured cigarettes using only oriental leaf. With the success in Turkey, several other countries, such as Thailand, South Korea and Taiwan, are now considering similar projects, he said.

"They're anxious to do this. I just returned from there, and my associate is going to be returning to all three of those countries at the end of March with blending consultants, engineering consultants and our production consultant to evaluate what their needs are at this time and identify projects that we can cooperatively work together on and produce a quality cigarette product based on U.S. tobacco," Wayne said.

"Bulgaria has made similar inquiries, and this is the thing we are now proceeding in. It's a very exciting area, and it's demonstrating direct results for the farmer," he said.

The organization is also establishing leaf grading schools in Spain, Bulgaria and other European countries, he said.

Currently, over half of the U.S. flue-cured crop is exported, and it generates more than $1 billion each year, according to Tobacco Associates leaflets.

Though Japan remains the top importer of U.S. cigarettes, Great Britain, Egypt, Spain and Italy are also large customers. Overall, exports of U.S. leaf and cigarettes generate about $4 billion a year in revenue, said Charles King, president of the state office of Tobacco Associates.

With success of the buyout program and the growth in exports, the U.S. government has increased the farmers' quotas for the third straight year.

Before 1987, the quota dropped six consecutive years and Stabilization was stockpiling as much as 800 million pounds of tobacco, said Fred G. Bond, chief executive officer of Stabilization.

The federal government increased the quota 18 percent for 1989. But, the effective quota increase, which takes into account how much excess leaf will be carried over to this year, is set at 11 percent, Bond said. He predicted the quota would also rise in 1990.

Currently, only about 121 million pounds of unsold tobacco remains in storage, and Bond said, under the ongoing buyout program, the existing leaf will be sold to manufacturers well ahead of schedule.

The price support for 1989 will rise over 2 cents per pound, he said, to $1.468.

Farmers also need to be careful in applying pesticides and chemicals to the leaf, Bond said, because some levels last year were too high. Several European countries have considered banning all tobacco containing residue above a specified level, and the United States could lose export revenue if the tobacco does not meet requirements.

Wayne said there are still some refinements to be made regarding the taste of the Turkish-American cigarette. Nevertheless, the product is outselling the Turkish brand.

Tobacco Associates, which promotes U.S. tobacco throughout the world and is partially financed by an assessment on the tobacco growers, was able to establish the Turkish operation by qualifying for federal grants designed to increase U.S. exports.

"It was because we were able to access the congressionally mandated funds in this targeted export assistance. Prior to that, we did not have the financial resources to even offer (to help establish an American-blended product)," he said.

Because the grants require the agency to put up matching funds to obtain the grants, Wayne said Tobacco Associates is currently at a standstill and cannot apply for additional money. The group's board of directors has proposed increasing the assessment levied against growers to generate added revenue. The assessment is not to exceed one-fourth of a cent per pound.

Artists' Rights Are At Heart Of Court Case

By Suzanne Muchnic
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Who owns the copyright to an artwork — the artist who created it or the group that commissioned it?

The question will be answered in an upcoming U.S. Supreme Court case that could be a bonanza for free-lance creators and a disaster for business.

Community for Creative Non-violence vs. Reid may sound like a street fight, between an advocacy group for the homeless and a sculptor from Baltimore. But the argument over who owns the copyright to James Earl Reid's socially critical Nativity scene, "Third World America," is shaping up as a battle between the creative and corporate forces of America.

The case involves a cast-polymer-and-fiberglass, life-size sculpture that depicts a homeless family seeking warmth on a steam grate. Instead of portraying a traditional Holy Family, Reid has created a crèche of street people: a mother, father and baby who keep their belongings in a shopping cart.

The Community for Creative Nonviolence, headed by Mitch Snyder, an advocate for the homeless, commissioned the piece for Washington's 1985 Christmas celebration, Pageant of Peace. The two parties didn't sign a contract but agreed that Snyder's group would pay as much as $15,000 for materials and the artist would donate his time and expertise.

A legal dispute over the copyright to "Third World America" erupted when the group wanted to send Reid's sculpture on tour and published pictures of it on greeting cards and calendars to raise funds for the homeless. The 46-year-old artist says that he is sympathetic to problems of the homeless — and his donated time supports that contention — but he believes that the reproductions misrepresent his work and that profits from reproductions of his work are rightfully his. Snyder contends that Reid became greedy when he saw an opportunity for profit, but Reid says that he is simply trying to support his own family.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit ruled that Snyder's group, which owns the sculpture, must share the copyright with Reid. Snyder appealed to the Supreme Court, which plans to hear oral arguments for the case in late March.

Meanwhile, arts advocacy groups have lined up behind Reid, while major publishers and computer companies have weighed in for Snyder.

On Snyder's side are Time Inc., the New York Times, the Magazine Publishers Association; the Hearst Corp., Information Industry Association, Computer and Business Equipment Manufacturers Association (representing Eastman Kodak Co., NCR Corp. and Apple Computer Inc.) and Intellectual Property Owners Inc. (a trade association that includes IBM, Dow Chemical Co. and Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing). In general, those groups argue in briefs filed with the Supreme Court that a decision for Reid would stifle their creativity and flexibility in working with free-lancers.

Supporting Reid are about 50 groups of artists, writers and arts advocates such as Volunteer Lawyers for the Arts, Copyright Justice Coalition, Graphic Artists Guild and Advertising, Photographers of America. A Washington-based group called Artists and Writers Copyright Committee; The James Earl Reid Legal Defense Fund has been organized to raise money for Reid's legal expenses, which are expected to total about $70,000 to $80,000. But the most significant development, according to Joshua Kaufman, Reid's attorney, is that the solicitor general has filed a brief on behalf of Reid. The Supreme Court often follows the solicitor general's viewpoint in difficult cases involving federal law.

Why such a high-profile tussle? And why has a citizens' action group allied with corporate giants? It all boils down to economics.

If the court rules in favor of Snyder, commissioners of free-lance artists, photographers, writers and computer program designers will probably continue to control copyrights to free-lance work — and reap profits from reproductions of it. If Reid wins, free-lance creators stand to gain those profits for themselves. Estimates of the potential loss to business — and gain for artists — run as high as $43 billion.

"This is the most important artists' rights case of the decade," said Robert Bedard, director of ArtPac, a Washington-based group that lobbies for legislation in support of artists.

At issue in the case is the "work-for-hire" doctrine in the Copyright Act of 1976. The doctrine is considered the law's major "pitfall" for artists by Tad Crawford, author of "The Visual Artist's Guide to the New Copyright Law." The act stipulates that an employer or other commissioning party owns the copyright in a "work-for-hire" situation as if he were the creator of the work. (In the pending Supreme Court case, Snyder contends that he directed the creation of the sculpture and is therefore entitled to be considered its creator, while Reid dismisses the claim as absurd.)

According to the act, "work for hire" is work done under a contract that gives the copyright to the employer, but in practice many artists have effectively relinquished copyrights without signing such contracts. Kaufman estimates that 95 percent of commissioned free-lance work is done without contracts.

"An artist's copyright comes into existence at the moment of creation," Victoroff said. "In the case of a photograph, that moment occurs when the picture is developed and fixed in a tangible medium in which it can be visually perceived. For an employer to get the copyright from the artist, he must have one of two things: a written 'work-for-hire' contract (whereby the artist relinquishes the copyright to the employer) or an employment situation in which the employer pays the artist a salary, takes out withholding tax and provides workman's compensation insurance, disability insurance and all the good things of formal employment.

"But it doesn't work that way in real life. Artists are mostly free lance and in the past they have been triple losers: They haven't had contracts, fringe benefits or copyrights," Victoroff said.

Roy Nimmo, 78, drained his San Marcos, Calif. swimming pool to put in his model train layout

He Is Engineer Of The SP&R

By Tom Gorman
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

SAN MARCOS, Calif. — Seventy-eight-year-old Roy Nimmo has taken the plunge into model railroading.

He is the self-appointed superintendent of the SP&R — as in Swimming Pool & Roy — Railroad. Daily, Nimmo walks out of the back door of his home here in northern San Diego County, and climbs down into his swimming pool-sans-water, where he immerses himself in a world of HO-scale locomotives, freight and passenger cars, country towns, farms and a ski resort.

At his control console, he eases two long trains out of their spur lines and into opposing directions along his main line, timing it perfectly so they meet at a siding where they pass one another. He nudges a rheostat switch and the enclosed patio is filled with the sounds of clanging crossing bells, train whistles, released steam and the clickety-clack of trains on tracks.

Sure, there are bigger railroad layouts.

But not many are inside swimming pools.

Nimmo was smitten by model railroading in 1975, after he retired as a heavy equipment operator for a pipeline contractor. He initially set up his little train layout in a 14-foot-square shed in the backyard of his San Marcos home, where he and his wife, Phyllis have lived for the past 30 years.

Five months later, Nimmo began jealously eyeing the weather-protected swimming and exercise pool, which the couple had been using less and less. It is 12-by-28 feet, and measures three feet deep at one end, five feet deep at the other.

"We were having lunch one day and he said, 'You know, we're not using that pool a whole lot. We can drain it and I can put in a beautiful sunken garden for you — or we could put the trains in there,'" Phyllis Nimmo said with a smile.

"So I said, 'Go ahead, bring your trains in.' He had the pool drained the next morning," she said.

In fact, Phyllis Nimmo is hardly a railroad widow. She hand-painted each of the 640 tiny human figures that are stationed about the layout, helped shape the mountains and hillsides and even painted the backdrops to the layout — by leaning over the side of the swimming pool and painting upside down.

"When you get older you need an active interest," she says. "That's what's wrong with so many older people: They don't have a hobby. And I can think of a lot of worse things that Roy could be doing than this."

Nimmo has lost track of how much track he's laid, or how many locomotives, passenger cars and freight cars he has purchased or reconstructed over the years after countless visits to hobby stores and swap meets.

There are maybe 120 passenger and freight cars. Probably 30 or 40

— maybe 50 — locomotives, representing the most contemporary Amtrak edition to the steam locomotives of the 1860s. More than a dozen complete trains are located on sidings around the layout.

Then, there's the attention to detail on the trainboard itself: the coal bunker rigged by Nimmo with a chute to actually dump little black stuff into the coal tenders; the helicopter and single-engine airplane — HO scale, of course — with propellers that actually whirl on cue; the snow-removal locomotive with a blower fan that actually spins; and the movie theater complete with fiber-optic lighting for that special marquee twinkling effect.

"The 'African Queen' has been playing there for a long time," Phyllis Nimmo quips.

The Nimmos love showing off the SP&R Railroad to visitors. Their home is a tour stop for serious model railroaders who come to San Diego for conventions; tour buses have pulled into his driveway with loads of senior citizens on a day's outing; and local school children are frequent visitors.

The greatest advantage of a swimming pool layout, he says, is that it offers great, unobstructed viewing of the entire layout from above. The drawback, of course, is that it makes future expansion plans difficult.

Unless, maybe, the Nimmos decide to add a spa line.

Sugar In Medicine Can Cause Cavities

CHICAGO (AP) — A spoonful of sugar may help the medicine go down, but it also can contribute to an unusually high number of cavities found in chronically ill children.

Researchers at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto looked at the medication schedules for 20 chronically ill children who were prescribed liquid medicine which contained 30 to 70 percent sugar.

Parents were so concerned, they said, with treating the illness that regular brushing was neglected.

"This isn't unusual," says Dr. Cheryl Sheets of the Academy of General Dentistry. She suggests that parents be certain to reinforce regular brushing and flossing habits, especially when children are ill, to avoid future dental problems.

Bride Angered By 'Ill-Bred Clods' Who Ignore RSVP On Invitation

Births

Dear Abby: There have been numerous letters in your column from grandparents, parents, etc., who are angry and hurt because their gifts have not been acknowledged. Most of these letters were directed to teen-agers or young adults, but, Abby, the younger people are not the worst offenders when it comes to common courtesies and social amenities.

My husband and I were married last June in a semi-formal outdoor wedding. Several months prior to the wedding date, we placed an order for printed wedding invitations, reception cards and response cards. The response-card envelopes had my return address printed on them and a postage stamp, too. We mailed our invitations four weeks before our wedding. Out of the 100 mailed to "adults," exactly three were returned!

Most of those invited showed up — for the reception, but not the wedding.

When I asked a few of them why

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

they didn't mail the response card back to me, they each said, "Oh, you knew we'd be there." Abby, there is absolutely no excuse for this kind of behavior. I am still fuming and hope that you will print this so that all of them will recognize themselves for the selfish, ill-bred clods they are. Don't use my name or it will start another war with my mother. She thinks I should not have been angry — just forgiving. — Disgusted

Dear Disgusted: You are not alone. Every bride and hostess report the same frustration when their R.S.V.P.s are ignored. The only solution is to telephone those who have failed to respond and ask, "Are you planning to attend?"

Dear Abby: My mother started showing your column under my nose when I was about 12. I'm 43 now and have been an avid reader over the years.

I've often thought about responding to some of the letters in your column, but procrastination always won out. The letters you received in response to "Bereaving, Too" resolved a huge personal problem for me — and that is why I am writing.

My mother died three years ago. Since that time, on her birthday and wedding anniversary, I never knew whether to call my dad, send a card, or what. I would think about him days before and days after those special dates, but I always ended up doing nothing for fear of upsetting him — or "reminding" him.

I know now that I would not be "reminding" him of anything — Dad is the type who even remembered the anniversary date of when he and Mom met. (They were married just short of 40 years.) I've felt so guilty and uneasy about ignoring those dates, but no more!

Love to you, Abby, and to your readers who helped me change my mind. — A Decision Well Made, Grants Pass, Ore.

Dear Abby: I had to write and set you and "Flabbergasted" straight. "Flabbergasted" was upset because her doctor, who had been her doctor for years and had brought all her children into the world, didn't know that she wore dentures. You seemed equally shocked, Abby, saying that this information should be on the patient's chart.

Please! Most physicians see an average of 20 patients per day, or from 100 to 120 per week.

We must constantly cram new information into our heads and select the most important to remember. Please, don't reinforce the public's unrealistic expectations of us. We are only human. — Michigan M.D.

The Nation Responds To Her Sweet Refusal

It was a scenario for Miss Manners. I was sitting at a dinner table when the hostess proudly slipped a plate in front of me that was a national monument to sugar. "Try this," she cooed.

As discreetly as possible, I said, "No dessert, thank you."

Her body froze. Conversation at the table halted. Forks were left poised in mid-air. It was as if Louis Rukeyser just announced what stocks to buy in '89.

The moment did not pass quickly. The hostess had 75 reasons why I should have her dessert, beginning with, "I spent a fortune on the fresh raspberries," and ending with, "One little bite won't kill you." I explained that I'm not a big dessert fan and cut down where I can.

Within minutes I went from a "guest" to a "cause," like abortion, gun control or smoking. I figured out this is how a major movement begins. Everyone at the table chose a side and expressed an opinion. Eventually, I knew one of them would write a letter to the editor of the paper on our God-given rights to turn down dessert without the whole table turning ugly.

This letter would then come to the attention of the local television station, which smelled a disease-of-the-week. The people at the station would call in medical doctors who would question the hormones of someone who consistently turns down desserts and suggest it probably could be linked to PMS.

USA Today would eventually counter with a front-page poll on how many men/women do not eat desserts and how many dinner parties worldwide have been ruined by guests who refused the last course.

In a matter of weeks, Oprah, Phil and Geraldo would fill their studios with non-dessert eaters vs. hostesses. One hostess would smash Geraldo in the face with a six-layer strawberry torte.

All three major networks would have something "into production" on it, possibly a movie with twins, one who refuses to eat dessert and the other who eats her sister's to save her from embarrassment. The twins would be played by Lee Remick and Roseanne Barr.

The drama of one woman who doesn't eat dessert would culminate when the first lady, Barbara Bush, announces that her No. 1 priority will be to focus attention on the rights of people who think they can lead rich, full lives without a dessert at the end of each meal. She will launch her "Just Say Stuff It!" campaign with buttons and celebrity promos.

As I sat there in front of the mound of phyllo dough, nuts, whipped cream, fresh raspberries and ice cream, I thought about the impact of my decision. Does this country need yet another cause to tear its people into two factions? I made my decision.

Smiling, I said, "Well, maybe just a bite!"

A Tax Loophole Inspired This Architectural Style

COUNTRY HOME MAGAZINE

The Second Empire style may be the only architectural fashion inspired by a tax loophole.

At one time the French government reportedly levied taxes on buildings based on the number of floors or stories. Attics, however, were exempt. To circumvent the tax, this style evolved as a way for builders to construct an entire level of living space that, from the outside, was disguised as an attic by a steep mansard roof.

Although the tax-based inspiration may be only an apocryphal tale, it does serve to highlight a great virtue of Second Empire design: Hiding the upper story under the roof makes a building look shorter and less massive than it actually is. The impressive mansard roof widely associated with this style is itself an extremely graceful crowning touch for a family residence or commercial building.

The distinctive mansard roof form was named for Francois Mansart, the 17th-century French architect credited with its origination. Its use was widely revived in 19th-century France during the reign of Napoleon III (1852-1870), the period of France's Second Empire, from which the style takes its name. During this time, Napoleon commissioned Baron Georges Eugene Haussmann to replan and rebuild Paris. It was Haussmann who produced the distinctive scheme of radial boulevards which cut through the city's older neighborhoods. When new houses, apartments and commercial buildings were built along these boulevards, they often had mansard roofs.

This massive rebuilding of Paris gained worldwide attention and soon the Second Empire style was imported into the United States as the latest Parisian fashion.

Unlike such popular preceding styles as Greek Revival and Gothic Revival, this style did not look to the past for inspiration but instead to contemporary buildings designed in France. In the American version, everything beneath the roof — door, window and porch details — was borrowed from the Italianate style, which had become fashionable a decade earlier. Most noticeable Italianate borrowings are the ornate brackets that show at the cornice line.

The mansard roof allows room for many subtleties in design. The most visible characteristic is the profile. Some Second Empire roofs have convex curves which make them appear to bulge. Less expensive houses may have a straight line to the roof.

Decorative patterns frequently are designed into the roofing material. In houses with slate-covered mansard roofs, different colors of slate often were used to create elaborate patterns.

Dormer windows are always present in this style for they are the only means of providing light and ventilation in the upper floor.

School Session Draws Criticism

group of four to six colleagues (in the House and Senate) chosen in consultation with the minority leadership.

Mavretic said he would not attend the summit, which Martin said would start a monthly series of such meetings.

"I think it's a little bit cynical, to tell you the truth, to have a summit meeting the night before a thousand or so people are going to come to Raleigh to demonstrate, I hope, in front of the Capitol and the mansion, because that's where this problem originated," he said.

Barnes was a bit more conciliatory, although he, too, noted where the blame for the pay raise issue lay.

"Hopefully, we'll all get together and be singing out of the same psalm book," he said. "The legislature, if you remember, has been the one that's pushed generally on behalf of teachers. He's hoping that the good will around the legislature will rub off on his side of the aisle for a while."

Martin also invited representatives of the North Carolina School Boards Association, the N.C. Association of County Commissioners, the N.C. Association of Educators, the N.C. Association of School Administrators, the N.C. Association of Office Personnel, the N.C. American Federation of Teachers, the State Employees Association of North Carolina, the N.C. Public School Forum, the P.T.A., the N.C. Association of Teacher Assistants and the Business Committee for Education.

Former Rep. Paul Pulley, representing the NCAE, said he was pleased at Martin's apparent change of heart.

"The teachers are upset and rightfully so," he said. "As our elected representative, he must participate in finding revenues to live up to his promises, because good education is the way the state can move forward."

ECU

Schatzman said this morning. "If that doesn't work, we'll go higher."

Joyner is the chairman of the ECU Board of Trustees.

Schatzman said he agrees that the incident may not have warranted White's violent behavior, but he contends that the white students acted against university policy in making the racial comments.

And White did complain to authorities about the verbal abuse, Schatzman said. "He complained to the arresting officers when he turned himself in. He complained to Dean (Ronald) Speier. He complained to the Honor Board. He complained to Chancellor Eakin," he said.

"They did not care to investigate this situation," Schatzman said. "They have not interviewed the black witnesses as if the black witnesses are not to be believed at all."

"How can you have a fact-finding (investigation) when you don't interview everybody involved," he said.

Larrie Lockamy, the school secretary. Sixteen teachers originally had applied for a personal leave, but six teachers have withdrawn their applications, she said.

"Each teacher annually receives two days of personal leave, if they work the full year," said Leck Keeter, associate superintendent for personnel services for Pitt County schools. "It's really a half day every two and half months is what they actually earn."

"They have to request this leave through the principal. That's the only avenue that I know that would be available when students are in session," he said.

"Whenever they take personal leave, then the amount to pay the substitute is subtracted from the teacher's salary, either $35, $45 or $52 depending upon the qualifications of the substitute.

"Each individual school has the responsibility of securing the substitutes. We approve the substitutes and we send out a monthly list. We have probably close to 400 substitutes on our list," Keeter said.

"We require all substitutes to have some training, workshop orientation and or of course we ask the principals to secure the best qualified substitute on the list first."

Teachers planning to participate in protest events Monday will meet today at 7:30 p.m. in the Jaycee Park administrative building, according to William Wahl, a teacher at E.B. Aycock Junior High School.

Tower Faces Longer Delay

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — John Tower's nomination as defense secretary hit the rocks as senators postponed a confirmation vote for nearly two weeks while the FBI investigates allegations about his drinking and his financial ties with military contractors.

The chairman and ranking Republican member of the Senate Armed Services Committee met for two hours Wednesday afternoon with White House counsel C. Boyden Gray to discuss the FBI investigations and then closeted themselves with Tower for 90 minutes.

The Washington Post quoted an unnamed administration source as saying Tower presented the lawmakers with statements from his doctors that he does not have a disabling alcohol problem.

After meeting with Gray, committee chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said he still had "serious concerns" that would prevent him from voting in favor of Tower's nomination.

But President Bush stood by his nomination of the former Texas senator to head the Pentagon.

"If somebody has something other than rumor and frenzied speculation, please get it to the FBI or get it to the White House staff, or certainly get it to the committee in the Senate. But let us be fair enough that we do not deal in rumor after rumor," Bush said on a day punctuated by news conferences and unexpected Capitol Hill meetings about the Tower nomination.

Cause Of Plane Crash Sought

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VILA DO PORTO, Azores Islands — Salvage workers today trudged across a muddy mountainside searching for bodies and clues to explain why a pilot steered his Boeing 707 straight into the peak, killing all 144 people aboard.

At least 90 bodies have been recovered, along with one of the jet's two flight recorders, said Olivia Baptista, a spokeswoman for the Vila do Porto town council.

"There are no survivors," she said in a telephone interview with the Associated Press in Lisbon. She said 40 to 50 bodies were found today and 50 were found Wednesday, shortly after the crash.

The smell of oil hung in the damp air, and a light rain fell on debris that included playing cards, a book of fairy tales and vacation clothing, still neatly folded.

The U.S. charter plane, carrying 137 Italian vacationers and a seven-member American crew, was preparing for a refueling stop on Santa Maria island when it slammed into 1,794-foot-high Pico Alto mountain. It was headed to the Caribbean.

Civil aviation officials said the 20-year-old jet had a history of minor service problems.

Access to the wooded crash site was very difficult, said Jose Martins Freitas, chief of the Azorean rescue services. "The ground is slippery, and it's foggy," he said.

The Italian government sent a plane to the Azores with medical personnel and firefighters to help salvage efforts, and the Vatican said today Pope John Paul II issued a message of sympathy for relatives of victims.

Witnesses said the plane hit a slope, bounced over a road, lost an engine and crashed into the mountain. Bodies were spread in an area with a 1.8-mile radius about 24 miles northeast of the airport.

Construction worker Jose Barro said he and the village priest, heard the crash and ran to the site. "We tried to find someone alive to get them out," he said. "But we only found dead bodies."

Mason Rolls Over Pirates By 83-65

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

FAIRFAX, Va. — East Carolina's efforts to move into the upper division of the Colonial Athletic Association basketball standings met a resounding thud Wednesday against George Mason.

The Pirates suffered through a disastrous late first-half stretch and never quite recovered as the Patriots rolled to a 83-65 win.

ECU came into the game tied for fifth with James Madison at 4-5 in the league. GMU possessed second place at 6-3. Now the gap between the two has grown.

GMU, 12-9 and 7-3, came out sluggish early on, but went on a key 7-0 run with about four minutes to go in the first half to take control of what had been a tight contest.

"Everything was just sluggish," Patriot forward Kenny Sanders said. "It was just one of those nights where we just staved off slow."

Blue Edwards, who had 27 points on the night, scored inside to pull ECU within 28-27 with 5:18 left in the half, but Earl Moore countered for GMU on a wide-open jumper from 17 feet to make it 30-27.

Edwards was fouled on a follow shot at the other end and hit the front end to make it 30-28. He missed the second but ECU's Stanley Love grabbed the rebound and shoveled the ball to teammate Gus Hill. Hill powered in for the bucket but was called for charging, negating the score.

Down at the other end, Steve Smith nailed a three-pointer to make it 33-28 with 4:30 left.

ECU worked the ball into Hill again, but he got called for another charge, giving the ball back to the Patriots.

Edwards came up with a steal on the in-bounds play but GMU's Kevin McNamara stole it right back and fed Chuck Broadnax for a jumper to make it 35-28.

It was a seven-point blow from which ECU never fully recovered.

"Where we got blown out was in the first half where Gus gets two charging calls," ECU basketball coach Mike Steele said. "That's an eight-point swing. Then we've got everybody ahead of us and Blue doesn't pick up a loose ball and instead gets stripped and one of their kids hits a three."

"That's seven points for them and it takes six points away from us. You can't beat people on the road like that. We can't beat anybody like that."

The half ended with the Patriots ahead, 42-34, but GMU began the second 20 minutes like they had ended the first 20 — on a roll.

Sanders, last year's CAA player of the year, scored the first six points of the second half prompting an ECU timeout with 18:05 left and the score 48-34.

The pep talk did little good. Sanders scored again to make it 50-34 before Edwards hit inside with 16:55 left to make it 50-36.

"Our kids came out and played hard," GMU coach Ernie Nestor said of the second half spurt. "We got the ball to Kenny."

"In the first half, they did a good job on the offensive boards (ECU held an 18-11 rebounding edge at halftime). We eliminated that in the second half."

Actually, ECU outrebounded GMU 35-27 for the game, but it mattered little because the Patriots hit 57 percent from the field while ECU shot only 46 percent.

Sanders ended the game with 23 points and 11 rebounds, but he got help from center Robert Dykes with 16 points and Smith, who chipped in 15 points on 6 of 9 shooting from the field, including two three-pointers.

Edwards, meanwhile, was again a one-man show, hitting on 10-15 from the field while pulling down eight rebounds.

Hill had 14 points off the bench, but struggled from the field with a 5-17 performance.

"Gus was 2 for 12 in the first half, but really he had open shots. He just didn't hit them," Steele said.

Love was also in double figures with 12 points, but eight of those came after intermission when the Patriots were in control.

"Blue Edwards is a great player, but one man can't beat five," Sand-

Duke Rips Virginia, 85-66

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM — Duke has apparently overcome the problems that resulted in its slide from No. 1, but Danny Ferry says now is not the time for the 14th-ranked Blue Devils to relax.

"I think we all need to realize that we can still improve on this," said

Ferry after the Blue Devils took an 85-66 victory over Virginia in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"We have a tough schedule ahead of us, and if we're not playing our best, we're going to get our heads handed to us a couple of times more," Ferry said.

The Cavaliers were riding the crest of a six-game winning streak, but it was Duke's defense that brought that trip to a dramatic halt.

Playing a man-to-man defense, the Blue Devils pressured Virginia into poor shots and a 10-for-31 field goal performance in the first half. That defense forced Richard Morgan into many off-balance jumpers, and instead of helping the Virginia offense, he hurt it a few times.

"A big game like this, I really wanted to do all I could to help, and I really didn't help the team any because of my bad shot selection," said Morgan, who was held to 13 points, eight below his average. He hit three of 18 field goals.

"I pretty much didn't play well anywhere," he said. "It was just Duke's night and not ours, and it was everybody else's night and not mine."

Quin Snyder was one of the three people assigned to keep Morgan in check, and Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski made the instructions explicit.

"The way coach told us to play him was to just pressure his shot and try to make him put the ball on the floor, not give him that standing jumper because he'll shoot right in your face," Snyder said. "We wanted to make him put the ball on the floor and try to create some stuff."

While creating havoc for Virginia's offense, Duke was hitting 64.3 percent of its field goals as it sent the Cavaliers to their 14th straight loss in the series, a streak going back to the first round of the 1983 ACC tournament.

Duke, which shot 62.5 percent for the game, climbed to 16-4, 5-4 in the ACC. Virginia, 13-7 and 5-3, saw a six-game winning streak end.

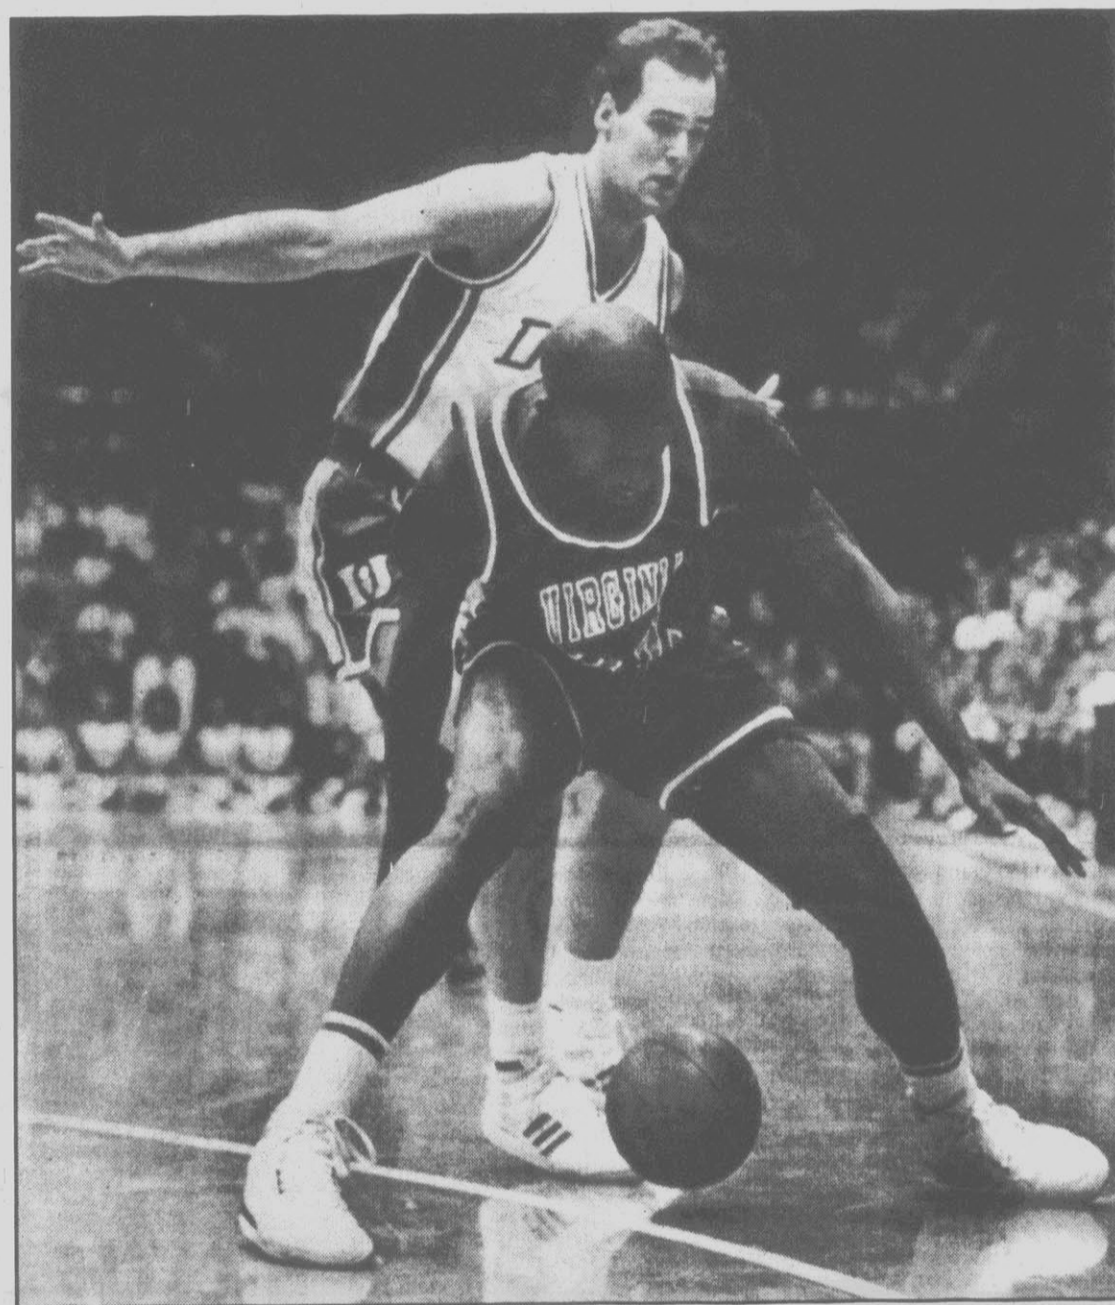

Virginia's offense struggled, hitting two of its first nine shots. Duke took advantage and ran up a 33-16 lead after two free throws by Robert Brickey with 6:47 left before halftime.

Duke pushed the lead to 20 on two occasions, the last a 43-23 edge on a Snyder basket with 3:15 left in the first half on the way to a 49-32 halftime lead.

Ferry scored six straight points midway through the second half to help give Duke a 71-48 lead with 10 minutes remaining. Duke didn't score again until a Phil Henderson basket with 6:45 left to play, but the Blue Devils then held a 73-53 edge.

Virginia, shooting 34.8 percent, was no closer than 13 points in the second half.

Savage Leads Lady Pirate Win

DOVER, Del. — East Carolina University got a career high of 26 points from senior center Gretta Savage and defeated Delaware State, 87-66, Wednesday night in a women's basketball game.

The Lady Pirates had little trouble in disposing of their opponent, taking a 41-26 lead at the end of the first half of the game. East Carolina canned 56 percent of their shots in the first half while holding the Lady Hornets to just 34 percent.

As a measure of Delaware State's desperate attempts at rallying, the Hornets put up 15 three-point shots in the second half after just one try in the first half. They converted on six of those shots.

The Lady Pirates attempted only two three-pointers, hit none, but didn't really need them.

Savage, connected on 12 of 20 shots from the floor adding two of three free throws. She pulled 11 rebounds and blocked three shot attempts.

Teammate Sarah Gray also had a good night inside, hitting on nine of 11 shots from the floor for 19 points. She also pulled 11 rebounds as the Lady Pirates held a 47-36 advantage in that department.

East Carolina also was sharp in its floor play, earning 36 assists on 39 baskets in the game. Pam Williams led the way with nine while Chris O'Conner had eight and Irish Hamilton had seven.

East Carolina forced Delaware State into 22 turnovers and had 12 steals. ECU, however, committed 24 turnovers.

Barbara Burgess led the Hornets with 20 points while Seaphany Nolan added 13 and Shervon Hunter had 10.

East Carolina is now 10-9 while Delaware State falls to 11-10.

The Lady Pirates travel on to Washington, D.C., today, facing Howard University in a game this evening.

Pirates Sign 25 To Grid Grants

Lewis, Staff Clear First Hurdle; Set To Begin Year-Round Search

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina University football coach Bill Lewis has cleared the first hurdle set before him.

The first-year coach began yesterday's national signing day with the hopes of inking 25 prospects for the 1989 team. By day's end, the list was completed.

"For the time we had allotted and where we were when we started, we are pleased with the quality players we managed to bring in here," Lewis said. "We hope to now begin a year-round recruiting program which should help future classes improve even more. We're gonna take a few days off now, but we'll begin recruiting Monday for next year."

ECU Athletic Director Dave Hart said the success of the recruiting this year can only be measured in the work habits of the coaches at this point.

"I think you probably measure success at this stage on the work habits and the commitment of the coaches during the visits," Hart said. "If you look at who they visited, you'll see that they not only went after the skilled athletes but also those skilled academically too."

Heading the list of signees are J.H. Rose running back Tim Moore (5-9, 215), Red Springs fullback Victor McBryde (6-0, 215), Southern Durham running back Derrick Pasley (6-1, 190), Fayetteville

Douglas Byrd tight end Rodney Jones (6-3, 230), Baton Rouge, La., tight end Ike Pullett (6-4, 230) and College Park, Ga., wide receiver Clayton Driver.

Moore, a two-year starter at Rose, rushed for over 1,000 yards in each of his last two years in leading the Rampants to a pair of 10-0 regular-season finishes. He was named to the Associated Press All-State team and gained honorable mention All-America status from USA Today.

McBryde gained over 3,500 yards during his career at Red Springs High School and was a member of the Shrine Bowl tea this season.

Pasley rushed for over 2,500 yards in three seasons at Southern Durham and has been clocked at 4.5 in the 40. Pasley chose ECU over Duke, Wake Forest, Penn State, Michigan and Illinois.

Jones, who was also touted by N.C. State, Clemson, Wake Forest, UCLA and North Carolina, was a three-year starter at tight end in high school and has been timed at 4.5 in the 40.

Pullett was an all-district choice in Louisiana and was named to the All-East Baton Rouge Parish as a defensive end. Pullett was also recruited by Tulane and Southern Mississippi.

Driver runs a 4.55 40.

"I don't like to single out any player or players from a recruiting class," Lewis said. "I think it is very unfair to the people we have coming in. There is not a player on that (recruiting) list that we aren't happy to have in our program. What we like to hope for is a group impact by all the players."

Of the 25 players recruited by Lewis' staff, 11 came from North Carolina.

"We feel confident that we worked the entire state as hard as we could in the time that we had," Lewis said. "We did not leave the state of North Carolina until we felt we had gotten all we could from it. Once we worked through the state, we expanded into South Carolina and Georgia and north to the Tidewater area, Pennsylvania and New Jersey."

Hart was also pleased with the amount of in-state recruiting accomplished by Lewis and his staff.

Lenoir Rolls Over Pitt, 100-79

KINSTON — Lenoir Community College pulled away from Pitt Community College in the second half and rolled to a 100-79 basketball victory Wednesday night.

The two teams battled on even terms throughout the first half with each earning small leads. But with 15 seconds left in the period, Michael Parks hit a three-pointer to give Lenoir a 37-34 halftime lead.

In the second half, Pitt got off to a slow start and Lenoir came out gunning and simply ran away from the Paladins.

"We didn't play good defense in the second half," Coach Charles Coburn said. "We weren't getting back on the fast break and that killed us."

Parks led the Lenoir scoring with 27 while Mark Creech had 20 and Darren Rowe added 13. Don Hutson led Pitt with 29 points while Ricky Congleton added 26.

Pitt falls to 6-18 on the year and will travel to Petersburg, Va., on Saturday to face Richard Bland Community College.

Former Farmville Coach Quits Post

Gene Brewer, former head football coach at Farmville Central, has announced that he will give up that position at South View in Fayetteville, where he has been for the past eight year.

Brewer led Farmville Central to several conference championships, and advanced into the playoffs, knocking off Tarboro's Kelvin Bryant team.

Brewer moved on to South View in 1981, where he compiled a 16-63-1 mark, posting only one winning season — the only winning season in the school's 17-year history. He was named Coach of the Year in the Mid-South Conference that season, 1985. He was 95-32-2 at Farmville Central.

Brewer cited personal and health reasons for his decision to quit the coaching ranks. He will continue to teach in the Cumberland County School System.

SBI Asked To Assist In NSCU Probe

RALEIGH (AP) — A commission investigating the North Carolina State University basketball program has asked the State Bureau of Investigation to assist in its probe, the panel's chairman said.

"The commission has no evidence of any criminal misconduct, and this is not a criminal investigation; but, we wanted the best investigative talent available," Sam Poole, chairman of the panel, said Wednesday. "Therefore, we requested that agents be assigned to the commission, and they will be working under our supervision."

The investigation was prompted by published reports about a forthcoming book, "Personal Fouls," by Peter Golenbock, from Simon & Schuster's Pocket Books division.

The News and Observer of Raleigh obtained a dust jacket of the book, and published details of its contents. The dust jacket description charged that the Wolfpack program, headed by coach and athletic director Jim Valvano, made payments to players, had grades changed and kept secret the results of drug tests, the newspaper said.

Valvano and university officials said the allegations are not true and have sought an NCAA investigation.

In addition, University of North Carolina System president C.D. Spangler appointed a commission, chaired by Poole, to investigate the NSCU basketball program. Poole is vice chairman of the UNC Board of Governors.

A spokesman for the publisher of the book told The News and Observer of Raleigh on Wednesday that the book was "moving toward publication" but declined to name a date.

Publisher Adam Rothberg said this week he did not know when the book will go on sale.

Promotional material issued by the publishing house had said the book would be released in mid-February.

Ga. Tech Player Charged After Fracas

ATLANTA (AP) — A Georgia Tech linebacker was freed on bond after being bound over to Superior Court on aggravated assault charges connected with a January fracas at a pizza parlor near Tech's Atlanta campus.

Kevin Salisbury, 21, of Duluth was bound over during a Wednesday hearing before Atlanta Municipal Court Judge Andrew Mickle. A Fulton County grand jury will consider the case and may take action in about four weeks, said Assistant City Solicitor Cynthia Harrison.

If convicted of the felony, Salisbury could face up to 20 years in prison, Ms. Harrison said.

Two of Salisbury's teammates, offensive linemen Mike Mooney, 19, of Mount Airy, Md., and Jim Lavin, 20, of River Ridge, La., were fined after they pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct charges.

All three players were accused of harassing Georgia Tech student Lisa Steffe of Tucker, her date and three female companions Jan. 18 at a pizza restaurant near the Georgia Tech campus. Ms. Steffe said the fight began when she threw beer in Mooney's face after the players made lewd comments to her and her friends.

Late Free Throw Lifts Rams

SNOW HILL — Greene Central forced a turnover in the final seconds of play and scored a free throw with no time left on the clock to take a 63-62 non-conference basketball victory over West Craven Wednesday night.

With the game tied at 62-62 and time running out, West Craven controlled the ball until 10 seconds were left, then called a time out to set up its final play. But on the in-bounds play, the Eagles turned the ball over Greene Central recovered it with six seconds to go.

Reggie Atkinson was then fouled just milliseconds before the horn sounded and he hit the front end of the one-and-one to give the Rams the victory.

Greene Central had built up a 19-14 lead in the first period only to see the Eagles rally to tie it at 36-36 at the half. The Rams moved back out in the third period, 54-48, but the Eagles rallied once more to tie it up before Atkinson's fateful shot.

"In our situation, I've got four other players I can dump the ball to."

ECU's lack of alternative scoring was especially evident during GMU's key runs late in the first half and early in the second half.

"I think in the last five minutes we haven't been too consistent," ECU guard Kenny Murphy said. "We had three unforced turnovers there then they go down and score. That's an eight point swing. We were trying to play unselfish, maybe too unselfish and we didn't take shots when we had them. That's hurt us."

ECU did make a run in the second half, narrowing the gap to 11 with just under five minutes to go, but that was as close as it would get.

Lose and Hill were both in foul trouble most of the second half and eventually fouled out, making any comeback hopes a long shot.

"We did a horrible job of adjusting to the officiating," Steele said. "The fouls on Gus were fouls. I'd have called them too. But when the calls are close, guys have to adjust. We didn't do that."

ECU point guard Jeff Kelly had three assists which gave him 235 for his career, a school record. But he was pressured hard by guards Moore and Mike Hargett and suffered through five turnovers.

The loss dropped the Pirates to 10-11 overall and 4-6 in the conference, a half-game behind James Madison, the Bucs' next opponent Saturday in Harrisonburg, Va.

Jackson Leads Hoyas To Big East Victory

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jaren Jackson scored eight of his 18 points during the first 7:52 of the second half and Georgetown went on a 20-10 run to pull away for the 70-58 victory at the Hartford Civic Center.

Georgetown led 30-26 at halftime then Jackson made a 3-pointer and a three-point play and Alonzo Mourning and Anthony Allen had five points each during the decisive run as the Hoyas expanded their lead to 50-36 with 12:08 remaining.

"We can win ugly," Georgetown coach John Thompson said. "There were times last year when we might have lost a game like this. That's a good sign, especially on the road."

The victory improves the Hoyas to 18-2 overall and they hold first place in the Big East at 8-1. Connecticut, led by Phil Gamble's 19 points, fell to 12-7 and 3-6.

Louisville 69, Cincinnati 66
Louisville trailed for most of the game before overtaking Cincinnati to keep its conference road record perfect after four games.

The Bearcats led for 37 minutes before Pervis Ellison scored the tying and go-ahead baskets for the Cardinals, 17-4 overall and 6-1 in the Metro Conference.

"UC played well but we were ahead when the buzzer went off. That's all," Cardinals coach Denny Crum said. "We didn't give them anything. They let us get into the game. Our guys executed right down in the stretch. Experience has a lot to do with it."

Ellison finished with 17 points and seven rebounds, while Cedric Glover led Cincinnati, 16-5 and 1-5, with 19 points, all but three in the first half.

Florida State 88, S. Carolina 72

Tony Dawson scored 20 of his 30 points in the second half as the Seminoles won their third Metro Conference game in five days and are now off until Feb. 16.

The Gamecocks trailed 61-59 when Dawson started the Seminoles on a decisive 17-4 run with two free throws and a 3-pointer.

Florida State, which outrebounded South Carolina 51-31, improved to 19-2 overall and 7-1 in the league, and kept its half-game lead over Louisville.

South Carolina, led by John Hudson's 19 points, dropped to 13-7 and 3-3.

Other games
Bimbo Coles scored 38 points, grabbed nine rebounds and handed out five assists to lead Virginia Tech to an 84-76 victory over North Carolina-Charlotte.

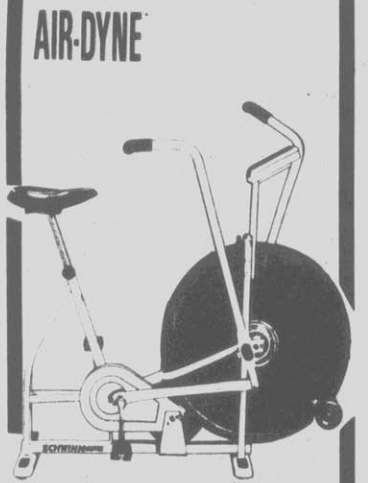

Lamont Hannah made both ends of a 1-and-1 with no time left to give Miami, Ohio an 83-82 victory over Ohio University.

Michael Ansley's 8-footer with four seconds remaining lifted Alabama to a 55-54 victory over Mississippi.

Free Throws Easy For 5-7 Kepner

By Ed Schuyler
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The foul shot. It makes big men shake, and coaches cry.

The Syracuse Orangemen do wonderful things with a basketball until it comes time to shoot fouls. Then they launch the ball toward the hoop as if it were a watermelon.

If you painted a line 15 feet from the ocean, which is the distance the foul line is from the basket, Wilt Chamberlain, who was one of the greatest scorers the game has ever known, would have gotten the ball wet only about half the time.

"It's just concentration, once you learn how to get it up there," said Valerie Kepner, a record-breaking foul shooter for the Baldwin-Wallace women's team.

The 5-foot-7 Kepner holds Division III records of 43 free throws in a row in a season and 51 consecutive overall. Her 51 also is a Division II career record.

"I was playing basketball in the seventh grade," said Kepner, of Hartford, Ohio. "I started playing to get out of chores. My father had a dairy farm. There were early chores, in-between chores and late chores.

"I just practiced," she said of her knack for foul shooting. "My (three older) brothers showed me how. Every time they had a shot, I had to shoot also."

Teams often call timeouts to make opposing foul shooters freeze when they step back to that hated line. It's sometimes called a charity stripe, but it often exacts a terrible price in pride.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
RALEIGH — A report showing that 10 of 12 members of the North Carolina State men's basketball team are in academic trouble has disturbed school officials and officials with the University of North Carolina system.

"It's embarrassing to me, and I suspect it's embarrassing to the entire university system," said William A. Johnson, a Lillington lawyer and former chairman of the UNC Board of Governors.

Johnson is a member emeritus of the panel that sets policy for the 16 UNC campuses.

Released Tuesday, the report showed that seven of the 10 Wolfpack players who have been placed on academic warning are one step from being suspended.

By comparison, none of the 17 players at UNC-Chapel Hill is on academic warning. Two of fifteen players at Wake Forest University are on academic probation. UNC system President C.D. Spangler Jr. also expressed concern about the NCSU report.

"There is no question but I would wish that students would live up to their potential," Spangler said Wednesday. "Naturally being on a major league athletic team requires a lot of time to participate in those athletic activities, and it does conflict to some extent, I feel certain, with academic efforts."

While 10 of 12, or 83 percent, of Wolfpack players currently are an academic warning, a much smaller percentage of N.C. State undergraduates is in the same predicament.

About 17 percent of N.C. State undergraduates typically are under an academic warning at any time, said Nash N. Winstead, NCSU's provost and top academic officer.

There are two types of academic warning at NCSU. Academic Warning I means a student's grade-point average has dipped below a 2.0 — or a C average — on a 4.0 scale.

Academic Warning II, which is one step away from suspension, means that a student's grades have dipped below either a 1.25 or a 1.95, depending on how many courses the student has completed. The longer a student remains in school, the higher his grade-point average must be to avoid a warning.

N.C. State Chancellor Bruce R. Poulton declined to comment Wednesday on the report about the academic status of basketball players. He said he had not seen it.

Jim Valvano, basketball coach and athletics director, did not return a reporter's telephone calls. The News and Observer of Raleigh reported.

Winstead, however, said he was not happy with the figures.

"I'd prefer that there would be fewer players (under an academic warning), but we're working with them as hard as we know how to ensure that they succeed."

Elizabeth M. Suval, chairman of the N.C. State faculty senate, said she was troubled by the wide difference between the percentage of basketball players who are under an academic warning and the rest of the student body.

"I think that the most important thing we can do is make sure all of our students have the maximum opportunity while they're here to be successful," she said. "I am really concerned about basketball players in general and the kinds of pressure they're put under."

Meanwhile, an N.C. State official said Wednesday that a "paper trail" of documents and other records should be available to show that recent allegations of improper grade changing at the university are false.

In response to a question, however, N.C. State Registrar James H. Bundy acknowledged that it was "not absolutely impossible" that failing grades for a former Wolfpack basketball player were changed improperly in 1985, as a former NCSU professor has asserted.

"Somebody would have to have gone through a tremendous amount of difficulty to (improperly change grades) for any student," Mr. Bundy said. "We treat grades like a bank treats your money. You don't want anybody messing around with your money."

Richard A. Lauffer, formerly a professor at N.C. State, has said that three failing "no credit" grades on former Wolfpack player Chris Washburn's transcripts were changed to "D's" in 1985 and that he had complained about the changes to N.C. State Chancellor Bruce R. Poulton. N.C. State officials have denied any wrongdoing.

Bundy said his office had given copies of Washburn's transcripts last month to an investigator for the NCAA and to NCSU's academic deans.

The deans later issued a report saying that despite the allegations of Lauffer that the grades were changed, they could find no evidence of impropriety. The NCAA has not released a report on its inquiry into the allegations.

"I'm really pleased for my team because they are really starting to play much better defense," Krzyzewski said. "The defense is initiating some positive play on the offensive end."

Virginia coach Terry Holland put the loss in simple terms.

"Duke played very well and we played poorly," he said. "They pretty much kicked us at every spot tonight. There wasn't much we could do about it."

Henderson, Snyder and John Smith had 11 points apiece for Duke. Alaa Abdelnaby scored 10 for the Blue Devils. Matt Blundin and John Crotty had 10 points each for Virginia.

Georgia Tech.....78
Iona.....69

NEW YORK — Tom Hammonds and Dennis Scott, who have been carrying No. 20 Georgia Tech all season, gave coach Bobby Cremins a homecoming present as well as a victory.

Hammonds scored 28 points and Scott had 24 Wednesday night and the Yellow Jackets held off pesky Iona 78-69 at Madison Square Garden, the most famous basketball court in Cremins' hometown.

Things didn't look good early for Georgia Tech, however.

"We were in serious jeopardy of losing and I was in serious trouble with my relatives," Cremins said. "We were in trouble even with a good run early."

The Yellow Jackets, 15-7, jumped to a 15-9 lead but Iona, 10-13, led 36-30 with 3:23 left in the half. A banked 3-pointer by Iona's Chip Langdon sent the teams off for intermission tied at 40-40. Hammonds had half of Georgia Tech's points.

"Tommy was carrying us, and I told Dennis at halftime that he had to get going offensively and he hit some big jumpers as well as making big plays defensively," Cremins said.

Iona led 54-48 with 12:40 to play but Scott scored nine of the Yellow Jackets' next 13 points and his side jumped with 8:18 left gave Georgia Tech the lead for good 61-60.

Hammonds followed with a three-point play and Scott's dunk with 6:11 left built Georgia Tech's lead to 66-60.

"At halftime, Coach got on me and said I wasn't playing hard and I was lackadaisical," said Scott, who made seven of 10 shots in the second half while scoring 16 points. "In the second half I dug down deep and came out doing the things Coach wanted me to do."

"Every big win we've had has come because of big efforts by Tommy and Dennis," Cremins said. "They are our nucleus and they are playing great."

The Yellow Jackets made five of six free throws in the final two minutes and extended the lead to as much as 78-67 with 1:17 left.

Langdon led Iona with 13 points while Nestor Payne, Glenn Grant and Sean Green had 10 each.

"I was pleased with our effort," Iona coach Gary Brokaw said. "Whenever you play a Top Twenty team and your team gives you a great effort as our kids did tonight, you have to be proud of them."

Cremins, who attended high school in New York but played collegiately at South Carolina, knows how important his connection with his hometown is.

Sitting in the stands was Kenny Anderson, New York State's all-time leading scorer at Archbishop Molloy and a signee with the Yellow Jackets.

"Kenny Anderson is the future at Georgia Tech and these guys helped recruit him," Cremins said gesturing toward Hammonds and Scott, who lead the team in scoring at 21.4 and 19.0, respectively. "Kenny's going to be a great one. I just wish Tommy was coming back."

Cremins said he took the senior forward from Crestview, Fla. to his former neighborhood the last time the Yellow Jackets were in New York.

"I took him to the South Bronx and he couldn't believe people lived there," Cremins said. "I just want to bring him here so he gets the kind of media attention a player of his caliber deserves."

Chief Justice Says State Should Appoint Judges

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Warning of increasingly bitter and expensive campaigns, North Carolina Chief Justice Jim Exum told the Legislature that partisan judicial elections should be replaced with gubernatorial appointment of judges to avoid damaging the court system "beyond repair."

"We need an appointive system in order to maintain the quality, the independence and the impartiality which we now enjoy in the courtroom," Exum said Wednesday in "State of the Judiciary" speech to a joint General Assembly session.

Exum also urged lawmakers to fund more judgeships and judicial system personnel, saying district attorneys, court clerks and other officers were staggering under a mounting work load.

And he asked for higher salaries for judges, whom he said were "becoming demoralized, if not angry" over the widening gap between their pay and the money that practicing attorneys earn.

Raising an issue that has produced fierce debate but no action in recent years, Exum said he was alarmed by a trend toward "politicization" of the judiciary.

A Democrat and former legislator, Exum said his longtime support of an appointive system has solidified in recent years with the Republican Party's growth and the increase in judges' visibility.

"Unless we change our system, the future will bring more and more political contests for judicial positions in this state," Exum said. "The contests will be fought along partisan, political lines as well as along ideological and philosophical lines."

"I cannot think ... of anything more destructive to the independence and impartiality of our judiciary than regular judicial campaigns fought along these lines."

A legislative study commission has endorsed a system under which the governor would appoint judges, subject to confirmation or rejection by the state House and Senate. Even its strongest supporters say the plan will meet fierce resistance.

In support of the proposed change, Exum cited recent developments in Texas, one of nine states that choose judges in partisan elections. Seven Supreme Court justices there were up for re-election in 1988 and each candidate spent more than $2 million, he said.

In testimony before the North Carolina study commission last fall, Texas Rep. Bruce Gibson said people who go into court there worry about whether their party affiliation differs from the presiding judge and whether their attorney contributed to the judge's campaign.

Exum warned that campaigns similar to those of Texas were about six years away in North Carolina. He cited his own experience in 1986, when he resigned as an associate justice to run for chief justice after Gov. Jim Martin appointed Republican Associate Justice Rhoda Billings to replace retiring Chief Justice Joseph Branch.

A GOP committee mounted an independent campaign on Mrs. Billings' behalf, attacking Exum as a liberal who opposes the death penalty and is soft on crime.

Exum and other Democratic candidates were elected, but the experience left a bitter aftertaste and galvanized support for changing the system.

While partisan elections are appropriate for the executive and legislative branches, "the judiciary must march to a different drummer," he said. "The motivating force which drives the judiciary must be principle, not politics."

He said, "The road to popularity, political or otherwise, is not paved with judicial decisions, however, principled or right they may intrinsically be."

Exum said he was not naive enough to believe that politics could be removed from the judicial selection process. But the system recommended by the study committee "puts the politics where it belongs" — in the executive and legislative arenas where officeholders can be held accountable at the polls, he said.

The chief justice also sought support for his budget request, which totals $28.3 million over the next two years. Its highlights include money for six additional Superior Court judges, 23 District Court judges, 33 assistant district attorneys, and 89 deputy court clerks.

"Without the additional increases in personnel we now seek, our courts soon will simply not be able to perform adequately," Exum said.

He requested these salary increases:

— From $79,668 to $90,000 for Supreme Court justices, a 12.5 percent increase.

Film Examines Early Life Of Young Charlie Chaplin

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — It was not by happenstance that Charlie Chaplin chose to face the world as the Little Tramp, says Ian McShane, who plays the late director's father in a miniseries for PBS' "Wonderworks."

"Chaplin at one time was the biggest star in the world," said McShane. "His upbringing in bitter poverty was Dickensian. Because of that, he became the Little Tramp, the little man facing insurmountable odds."

"Young Charlie Chaplin" examines the early life of the comic actor in a London slum around 1900. It will run in three parts on "Wonderworks," beginning Saturday and continuing Feb. 18 and 25.

McShane plays Charles Chaplin Sr., a second-rate song-and-dance man who preferred women and his drinking companions to his family. Joe Geary plays young Charlie, Twiggly is his mother, Hannah, and Lee Whitlock is his half-brother, Sydney. The three-hour show was originally made for British television.

"In real life, the father deserted the family when Charlie was 1," said McShane. "We take dramatic license, and he hangs around until he dies a horrible alcoholic death. In reality, he died of dropsy, and he did see Charlie before he died."

After his death, the family is forced to move into a basement flat. Both boys are in and out of workhouses. The mother, who was mentally ill, spent time in asylums until Chaplin brought her to this country in the 1920s.

"Our story makes a connection with the English music halls. His mother was also a singer. She used to say to Charlie, 'There's a man passing outside. Make up a story about him.' Charlie was a very sentimental performer because of his music-hall background. Later, when he made talking pictures his voice was very put-on because of that background."

The show also stretches credibility by suggesting that Chaplin learned some of his most famous comic routines from his father.

"I get to sing and dance a little," said McShane. "I do a thing with the cane and hat. I also do a number with the finger rolls that Chaplin did in 'Gold Rush.' He stuck the forks into the finger rolls and made them dance. It looks easy until you try it."

The miniseries was filmed partly on location in south London, where Chaplin grew up. Most of it was filmed on a set built outside of London for the "Jack the Ripper" miniseries starring Michael Caine. The set was a re-creation of a turn-of-the-century London neighborhood.

McShane grew up in Manchester and worked in England for a number of years before moving here. His father was a professional soccer player for Manchester United.

"I never had any contact with show business until I was influenced by a teacher in school," he said. "He suggested I study acting, and I tried out for drama school and was accepted."

He made his first movie, "Wild and Willing," in 1962 while still at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts. In "Jesus of Nazareth," he played Judas and in "Roots" he was the Englishman who won Chicken George in a cockfight. This season he was in "War and Remembrance" and "The Great Escape: The Final Chapter."

Currently, he is starring as director-screenwriter Don Lockwood on CBS' "Dallas." It's his first time on an American series.

"I'm brought in by Sue Ellen to make a movie on the life of J.R.," he said. "She buys a movie studio. I haven't had any confrontations yet with J.R., but I think something is coming up. He eyed me suspiciously at the wedding. He doesn't know what I'm doing with his ex-wife."

McShane has starred in several series in England. In "Gunsmith" he was a policeman who was sent to prison and became a private detective in Spain.

'Lonesome Dove' Success Helps All Three Networks

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — It didn't look like happy trails for CBS, but "Lonesome Dove" has ridden to the rescue.

The success of CBS' four-night Western has not only boosted morale at the third-place network, but sent audience shares of CBS, ABC and NBC soaring into the 80s in a season that has been averaging percentages in the 60s.

On his CBS talk show Tuesday, Pat Sajak told his audience they might find it a little warmer than previously.

"With the success of 'Lonesome Dove,'" he said, "CBS has turned the heat back on in the studio."

"Lonesome Dove" has more than met CBS' guarantee to advertisers. Televisions in an estimated 25.7 million homes were tuned to CBS for the series' first installment.

Instead of the less-than-30 share the network expected, the miniseries is headed for an average share closer to 40. The share is a percentage of televisions in use.

"It's performing significantly better than we anticipated, though obviously we had great hopes for it because of the quality," said David Poltrack, CBS' vice president for marketing. "The recent patterns of television viewing would create a healthy skepticism in terms of response, and we're very pleased."

The audience reception shows that networks can still put on good programs and people will watch.

"Lonesome Dove," Tom Shales of The Washington Post enthused, "is enough to give one new respect for the miniseries, new respect for Texas, new respect for CBS, and even new respect for television. There is almost never anything this good on network TV."

"It is the best Western ever on the small screen," wrote Art Chapman of the Fort Worth (Texas) Star-Telegram. "It is the best miniseries we have seen in 10 years. And it is the best overall show of the last few seasons."

The four-part series that concluded Wednesday night is based on Larry McMurty's 1985, Pulitzer Prize-winning novel of the same name.

The tale of life, death and love on a Texas-to-Montana cattle drive had an all-star cast, including Oscar winners Robert Duvall ("Tender Mercies") and Anjelica Huston ("Prizzi's Honor"); Emmy winner Tommy Lee Jones ("Executioner's Song"); Diane Lane, Robert Urich, Ricky Schroder, Danny Glover, D.B. Sweeney, Chris Cooper and Glenn Headly.

"What it tells you is basically that quality will bring out audiences," said Poltrack. "Now on the other hand, you don't run out and make 10 miniseries based on this, because you have to realize you're dealing with a Pulitzer Prize-winning book, an extraordinary production, extraordinary acting."

"I think the Robert Duvall performance will go down in history as one of the great television performances of all time. When you have that kind of combination you're going to be successful."

Alan Wurtzel, ABC's vice president for research, said: "I would say it's a little dangerous to draw any conclusions about the future of either Westerns on television or the future of the long miniseries on television, based on one case. ... I think if there's nothing else you learn in television it's that there's always the exception to the rule."

Last season, the networks began fretting about the loss of viewers to cable options and videocassettes. The slide stopped, at least for this week.

Sunday night's premiere of "Lonesome Dove" had a 28.5 rating and a 42 share and was the highest-rated show of the week, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co., whose weekly ratings compilations run Mondays through Sundays. Each rating point represents 904,000 U.S. homes with televisions. Monday and Tuesday's installments drew a 37 share each.

ABC and NBC might have lost the time period to "Lonesome Dove," but the competition was not doing badly, and a hit for one is ultimately good for all three networks.

"It's always been my contention, as far as the network business is concerned, three healthy networks are really preferable. I would just like to be the healthiest of the three, but it's really to no one's advantage to have one or two networks not performing well," said Wurtzel.

Poor programming on any network chases viewers to cable and video alternatives, he said.

But there's also a sense of tipping the hat when a competitor comes up with something really special. "Lonesome Dove," Wurtzel said, "is an excellent, very, very well-done show, and I think it deserves to get viewers."

Court Clears Way For 'Amos 'n' Andy'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. — Amos 'n' Andy, the comic characters who made "holy mack'rel" an American catch phrase but deeply offended many blacks, may be coming out of retirement for a Broadway revival.

A federal appeals panel has cleared the way for writer Stephen Silverman to produce a stage show based on the famous pair, who were featured on one of the most famous radio and television shows of its era.

The duo's Broadway debut still could be stopped if CBS, which owns many of the rights to the characters, takes the case to the U.S. Supreme Court. George Schweitzer, senior vice-president of communications for CBS, said the network was reviewing that option.

But Silverman, who wrote the script for "Fresh Air Taxi," a musical stage show that takes its name from the company Amos and Andy ran, said he was going ahead.

"I've rewritten the script and now I'm looking for a producer," he said Wednesday, two days after the 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals overturned a lower court decision on trademark rights to the characters.

The "Amos 'n' Andy" show was introduced on radio in the 1920s, when the black characters were all played by whites.

Andy Brown, Amos Jones, Algonquin J. Calhoun, Kingfish, Sapphire and the show's other characters came to television on CBS in 1951 and were portrayed by blacks.

CBS pulled the show off the air in 1964 in response to complaints by black viewers who were offended by the ethnic stereotyping of the characters.

Silverman, a former newspaper columnist who wrote the recent "The Fox that Got Away" and an upcoming biography on director David Lean, said he first thought of an "Amos 'n' Andy" musical in 1981.

He said he tried to contact CBS over use of the characters but was continually rebuffed or ignored.

In a lawsuit filed in 1984, Silverman argued that CBS had abandoned its trademarks by no longer using the characters.

In August 1987, U.S. District Judge Gerard Goettel ruled in favor of CBS, saying that although the network had not used the properties or revealed plans for their use, it wanted to hold the option.

But the three-judge appeals panel noted that when the issue came to court, the "Amos 'n' Andy" trademarks hadn't been used for 21 years.

The judges ruled that the trademarks cannot be protected if use was discontinued for more than 20 years. "A bare assertion of possible future use is not enough," the panel said.

The judges did uphold the network's rights to all scripts produced after 1948, when CBS purchased the rights from the show's originators.

But the ruling allows Silverman or anyone else to use any characters connected with the show before 1948, as well as such phrases from the show as "Holy Mack'rel," "Ain't dat sumpin'" and "Scuse me for pro- trudin'."

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY Feb. 10

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Relationships are in the spotlight. The morning is energetic and spurs a feeling of confidence that draws others to you.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Intuition is at its best today, especially in the evening. Act on your hunches, and be willing to organize them into action and purpose.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): There is an air of rebelliousness in your nature today. You are not content with the status quo and wish to implement your way.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You prefer a one-to-one approach today. Working with others may not go well, resulting in irritation. Bend a little.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Act first and think later? You know the results when you do that. Love can come calling, so be prepared to handle the situation.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Expect to hit some foul balls, but have faith that you will not strike out. Keep swinging to build continuing results.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): You may be admired by a VIP as a result of your harmonious ways. There is a strong possibility of receiving a last minute invitation.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): A new relationship has some flaws, but don't discard it yet. Enjoy it and let it grow with time. Luck is on your side.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): A picky-picky VIP may be on your case. Handle criticism with tact. An angry fuss won't make matters any better.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Love is with you. Enjoy it and refrain from questioning success. A too-good-to-be-true philosophy carries the seeds of failure.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Domestic problems ease. You may be feeling sensually needy. Expect important news about your mate's finances.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Mental pressure could make you feel dragged out. Accept a social invitation if offered. You will get a second wind later in the day.

The bidding:
 North East South West
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠
 It is hard enough for the defenders to take all the tricks to which they are entitled. But sometimes even that is not enough. That's when you have to make bricks out of straw.

North had an impossible rebid to make. To jump to three hearts he really needed a fourth heart; and a leap to two no trump was not ideal without a club stopper. We really don't mind which of the two lies you would choose to tell—on this hand the final contract would be the same, and there's no telling which will turn out right in other cases.

West led the king of clubs, and East paused to take stock. Declarer had to have the ace of hearts for his two bids, so realistically three tricks in the black suits were all the defenders could expect unless West held the jack of hearts. However, East knew that trumps were breaking badly for declarer, and he was able to use that knowledge to pull off a slick swindle.

Instead of making the normal play of encouraging a club continuation by playing the nine, East overtook the king with the ace and returned the nine. To all the world, declarer included, it looked as if East held a doubleton club. West was certainly taken in, because he took the queen of clubs and led a third round of the suit.

Declarer was not going to let East score a cheap ruff, so he trumped in dummy with the queen, which would have been perfectly safe against a normal trump distribution. When his right-hand opponent followed with a third club, declarer began to have an inkling of what was about to befall. And when West showed out on the first round of trumps, it was confirmed—down one.

USDA Says Farmers' New Borrowing Ability Points Up Recovery

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Farmers are able to borrow money again, and the Agriculture Department says it's a good sign that the battered agricultural economy is well on its way to recovery.

"The large paydown in farm debt held by major farm lenders appears to be over, and debt is expected to grow 1.5 percent to 3.5 percent in 1989," the department's Economic Research Service said. "Farm loan demand strengthened in the past year and should continue to expand in 1989."

Moreover, the agency said Wednesday in a report, commercial banks that specialize in farm finance are doing well compared with the mid-1980s. By last summer, their returns on equity were up 40 percent from 1987 and more than 150 percent above 1986.

"The improving farm economy will save more agricultural banks from failure in 1989," the report said. "Failures, after setting a post-Depression record of 75 in 1987, fell to 41 in 1988, and may be the same to sharply fewer in 1989."

Total bank failures, including agricultural institutions, may "be closer to 100" in 1989 instead of more than 200 in each of the previous two years, the report said.

At the height of the recent financial crunch, as plummeting land values cut sharply into assets, thousands of farmers owed so much that they couldn't qualify for additional credit to pay bills.

With the lid on further credit, farmers often liquidated or culled livestock herds, sold commodities held in storage and took other steps to reduce debts. As this paydown took effect, banks and other lending institutions have eased back.

As a result, the report said "cred-worthy farmers should have ample access to operating credit" for spring planting and other production expenses this year.

"Farm lenders are optimistic about financial conditions despite the (1988) drought and do not think it will sidetrack the farm recovery," the report said.

Major farm lending groups reported stronger portfolios in 1988 and fewer farm loan delinquencies, loan charge-offs and foreclosures, it said. An exception was the department's Farmers Home Administration, which makes loans to the least creditworthy producers, but "indications are that it too is coming to grips" with its problems, the report said.

A major reason for the favorable farm financial outlook this year was said to be the continued strength in crop and livestock commodity sales.
