Teachers Plan Meeting Monday With Legislators

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

About 43 teachers in Pitt County have confirmed their plans to attend a meeting with local legislators Monday to voice their concerns about Gov. Jim Martin's proposal to delay pay raises, according to a local teacher.

"We're hoping for at least 50 to 75," William Wahl, a teacher at E.B. Aycock Junior High School, said this morning.

The Pitt teachers have spent the week preparing to protest Martin's proposal to put off pay raises for teachers and other state employees until April 1990.

The educators are scheduled to meet with state Reps. Walter B. Jones Jr. and Ed Warren and Sen. Tom Taft at 11 a.m. Monday at Parkers Barbecue Restaurant on Memorial Drive in Greenville.

Principals and other school personnel said Thursday that the number of teachers applying for a personal leave day Monday has been minimal.

However, according to teachers who met Thursday at the Jaycee Park administrative building, arrangements have been made so that teachers not attending Monday's luncheon will work through their planning periods, covering for their co-workers who are planning to attend.

A group of teachers is also planning to travel to Raleigh on Monday afternoon to participate in an evening vigil with Wake County teachers at the Governor's Mansion.

The teachers are meeting at 4 p.m. in the Farm Fresh parking lot in Greenville and will travel to Raleigh as a group.

On Monday, the teachers are going to ask legislators, "What can we do to help you," Wahl said at Thursday's meeting.

In addition to a raise this year, the teachers are asking to have their salary scale unfrozen and to receive at least a 10 percent raise with the unfrozen salary scale.

If the salary scale remains frozen, they expect an increase in their salaries beyond 10 percent.

In the 1980-81 and the 1981-82 school years, teachers automatically received a pay increase or a "step" from the state of about $100 each year, depending on the grade level they taught and their experience. The legislature froze that scale after the 1982-83 year, but in 1985-86, it provided teachers with one or two "steps" in their salaries, based on experience and the grade level they taught.

Meanwhile, teachers have received cost-of-living increases along with other state employees as provided by the General Assembly.

Panel Says Colleges Require $135 Million

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The N.C. Community College System needs an additional $135 million per year to provide education and training to its workforce in the wake of economic and educational changes.

In a recent report, "Gaining the Competitive Edge: The Challenge to North Carolina's Community Colleges," the Commission on the Future of the N.C. Community College System says the state needs to raise the annual per-pupil expenditures in North Carolina from the state average of $3,321 to the national average of $4,439. That is an annual increase of $135 million, or 33 percent.

The commission proposes that its recommendation be phased in over a six-year period beginning in 1989.

Commission chairman Sherwood H. Smith Jr., chairman and president of Carolina Power and Light

Co., presented the report to the state Board of Community Colleges Thursday evening in Raleigh and to the trustees of the individual colleges via satellite.

"The community colleges have been our gateway to economic growth and opportunity," he said.

"For 25 years, they have given us a competitive edge for economic and educational progress. If we are to keep that edge, we must take action now. Already we are falling behind in key areas," Smith said.

"The recommendations and challenges of the commission are very relevant to Pitt County and Pitt Community College," said PCC President Charles Russell.

"They re-emphasize our mission of providing vocational and technical education, general adult education and access to higher education in four-year institutions through our college transfer program.

"To accomplish our mission and the challenges and recommendations of the commission, it will take additional state funds for present

Contracts Awarded For Farmville Bypass

By Stuart Savage
 Reflector Staff Writer

A $4.6 million contract for grading, drainage, fencing and structures on the U.S. 264 bypass at Farmville, from U.S. 258 to the Farmville East thoroughfare, was awarded in Raleigh today by the N.C. Board of Transportation.

Randy Doub of Greenville, a member of the transportation board, said the $4,607,385 contract for work on 3.067 miles of the bypass, including an interchange at the U.S. 258 intersection, was awarded to Carlisle Contractors of Autryville.

According to Doub, work on the project could begin in March, with completion scheduled for Nov. 1, 1990.

Completion of this new grading and structures contract, Doub said, will be in conjunction with the grading and structures contract work presently under way west of U.S. 258. The present $4.25 million project west of U.S. 258, which started in 1988, is scheduled for completion Nov. 1 of this year.

Once both of the grading and structures contracts have been completed, Doub said, a final paving contract will be awarded.

"The award of the contract today was another important step to ensure a quality four-lane highway between Greenville and Wilson," Doub said.

In addition to the U.S. 264 project, Doub said the board approved $150,000 in construction money for intersection revisions at Secondary Road 1709, Arlington Boulevard and N.C. 43 at Bells Fork. "These funds will be spent in conjunction with the revised thoroughfare plan and private development construction" of Arlington Boulevard, the transportation board member said.

Doub said other local projects approved by the board today included:

— $7,500 for construction of a turn lane on N.C. 43 (Charles Boulevard) near the new addition to The Plaza shopping center (the developer will participate in the project by paying $17,500 for a traffic light).

— $40,000 for widening Memorial Drive for turn lanes at the intersection of Chestnut Street in conjunction with the construction of the extension of Moye Boulevard to Memorial Drive.

— $30,000 for improvements to N.C. 102 from Verna Avenue to Washington Avenue (.21 mile) in Ayden.

— And $16,860 for construction of a school bus drive and stabilization of the bus parking area at Wintergreen Elementary Schools. These funds were appropriated from the access and public service road fund, Doub said.

Bush Offers To Work 'Day And Night' To Cut Deficit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Democratic-controlled Congress began adjusting to life under a new Republican administration today after receiving President Bush's call for no new taxes, increases in scattered domestic programs and an offer to "work day and night" to tackle the deficit.

"The people didn't send us here to bicker," the new president said Thursday night in a nationally televised speech before a joint session of the House and Senate. "It's time to govern."

Initial Democratic reaction to the new president and his $1.16 trillion budget was cordial but wary. Republicans cheered when he renewed his campaign call for a cut in capital gains taxes. Most Democrats sat silently in their seats.

Fights also are likely over Bush's proposed $5 billion cut in the Medicare insurance program for the elderly, and his renewed commitment to the Star Wars missile defense program.

Democrats promised cooperation — and left it at that.

"That does not mean obedience. It does mean our honest help and our very best advice," said Speaker Jim Wright of Texas, who presides over a House with a 261-175 Democratic majority.

Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole termed the president's budget blueprint "not the final answer, it's the starting point." He added, "Congress can swat it away, or it can grasp the president's hand in the true spirit of cooperation."

The Bush budget envisions a deficit of $91.1 billion, beneath the $100 billion mandated in the federal anti-deficit law. But Bush's deficit figure is predicated on rosy economic assumptions carried over from the Reagan administration — assump-

Four Speak Out Against Longer Terms For City Council, Mayor

By Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Only four people presented opinions at a public hearing Thursday regarding a proposal by the Greenville City Council to lengthen the terms of the mayor and council members from two to four years.

On Jan. 12, the council approved a resolution of intent to double the length of the office terms. As part of the legal process to change the city charter to provide for such a change, the council was required to conduct a public hearing on the matter.

None of the four people speaking at the hearing favored the proposed change.

John Howard, a former City Council member, said he opposes four-year terms with the terms beginning simultaneously.

"(This would allow) the possibility that an entirely new council and mayor could be elected at one time. If this group should prove to be undesirable, the city would suffer for as much as four years or until the next election," he said.

He suggested that if the council

Wholesale Prices Mushroom

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Wholesale prices skyrocketed at an annual rate of 12.7 percent in January, the biggest monthly surge in more than three years, the government said today.

The Labor Department said the steepest increase in food prices in a year combined with the largest rise in energy prices in two years to push up the Producer Price Index 1.0 percent last month.

It was the biggest increase since an identical surge in October 1985. The index hasn't risen faster in a single month since April 1981, when it shot up 1.1 percent.

The large gain surprised analysts, who were expecting a moderate 0.3 percent to 0.4 percent increase.

Dirk Van Dongen, president of the National Association of Wholesaler-Distributors, called the report "very troublesome."

With rising prices at the intermediate and crude levels likely to trickle down into further increases for finished goods, "we've got some high numbers ahead of us," Van Dongen said.

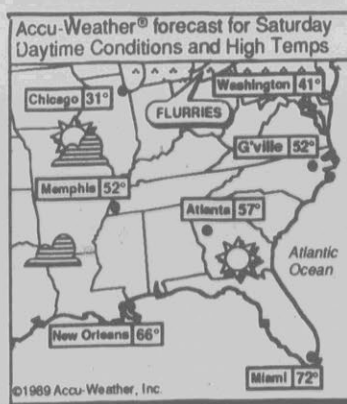

Economist Robert Brusca of Nikko Securities Co. International

Inc. predicted in advance of the report that any increase substantially higher than 0.4 percent could roil financial markets.

In December, wholesale prices climbed at half the January rate — a still brisk 0.5 percent. That was revised up from an earlier estimate of 0.4 percent.

For all of 1988, the Producer Price Index rose 4.0 percent, the steepest climb in seven years and nearly double the 2.2 percent increase posted in 1987. Economists are looking for a slightly faster rate of increase this year.

Kirby Will Head '89 United Way

The United Way, under 1988 president Mike Renn and campaign chairman Mac McCarley, exceeded its campaign goal of $1.1 million by raising a record $1,153,283.

During the annual meeting at the Greenville Golf and Country Club, Edgar W. Kirby III, city executive with NCNB National Bank in Greenville, was named as the president of the Pitt United Way for 1989.

provide our agencies with the necessary resources to assist the people of Pitt County."

In total, the Pitt United Way will support 37 agencies in 1989.

Three campaigns — Simpson Industries, Pitt County schools and Pitt County offices — received Gold Medal Awards for the most outstanding campaigns.

Simpson Industries, led by campaign chairman Ray Woods, doubled its previous years' contributions, while Pitt County schools, led by chairman John McKnight, achieved 183 percent of the division's campaign goal.

Pitt County offices, led by chairman John Bulow, also ran a successful campaign, reaching 191 percent of its goal.

In addition to Kirby, other officers named for 1989 included: Joe Gantz,

A Safer Crossing

The Greenville City Council on Thursday approved an agreement with the N.C. Department of Transportation to provide two standard, flashing red warning signals on Brownlea Drive at the Southern Railway crossing. Nearby residents said the crossing was unsafe after several accidents occurred there during the last five years. Glen Whisler, city transportation manager, said the signals will be installed in the next 18 to 24 months at an estimated cost of $65,000. The Federal Highway Administration will pay 90 percent of the costs with the city covering the remainder.

City County Delays Action On Brook Valley Rezoning

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A request by a developer to rezone property at the entrance to Brook Valley subdivision was continued Thursday by the Greenville City Council after the board faced a large group of disgruntled homeowners who opposed the petition.

However, the council did approve a request to lower the speed limit on four of Brook Valley's major streets.

The actions concerning the recently annexed subdivision off N.C. 33 were taken as the council faced one of the largest crowds assembled for a monthly council session during the current panel's two-year term.

Developer Bill Clark of Greenville has requested that two tracts of land located at the intersection of Oxford Road and N.C. 33 be rezoned from RA-20 (residential/agricultural) to O&I II (office and institutional).

The city's Planning and Zoning Commission, after considering the request, had recommended by an overwhelming vote that the rezoning petition be denied. However, the city's development staff indicated it found no objection to the request for office land use.

Clark said that with the proposed widening of N.C. 33 and the subsequent increase in traffic, O&I II zoning at that location would be a suitable buffer to adjacent residential land uses. He also argued that the two tracts are unsuitable for any type of residential development.

Clark expressed a willingness to give one of the tracts of land to the Brook Valley Homeowners Association as part of a proposed mutual agreement to have the other tract rezoned.

But one resident of Brook Valley told the council that the association's legal ability to acquire property is questionable.

Another resident, Mary Alice Yarbrough of Glen Court, argued that development of the tract with uses allowed under O&I II zoning would increase traffic into the subdivision and create safety problems for children.

Charles Moore of Dundee Lane said the proposed zoning would eventually result in accidents at that intersection and trees being cut down.

Thomas Farwell of Dundee Lane and Julian Vainright of King George Road also spoke in opposition to the request.

After considerable debate, Council member Bill Hadden offered a motion, which the council unanimously accepted, to continue the matter until a later date.

"I hope that we can get all of you folks together and the developer and take another half hour, whatever it takes, to talk this through," Hadden said.

Meanwhile, Carter also proposed that the council take a trip to the area to "get a better understanding of the situation."

Later in the meeting the council approved a request to establish a 25 mph speed limit on four of Brook Valley's main thoroughfares — York Road, King George Road, Oxford Road and Windsor Road. Previously the speed limit on those corridors was 35 mph.

Meanwhile, the council approved a request by Walter L. Williams to rezone two tracts of land located north of South Village Drive and east of Memorial Drive.

Tract 1, involving .14 acres, was rezoned from R-6 (high-density residential) to CH (highway commercial) and tract 2, .014 acres, from CH to R-6.

Oil Data Incorrect

Information published in Wednesday's food section about cooking oil was erroneous.

High density lipoprotein, or HDL, is, in layman's terms, good cholesterol. Low density lipoprotein, or LDL, is more responsible for clogging arteries.

Animal fats tend to elevate the blood's level of LDL, as do cocoa, palm, palm kernel and coconut oil.

All unsaturated fats tend to lower the blood cholesterol level, but nutritionists think that monosaturated fats may have a slight advantage over polyunsaturated fats. They don't tend to lower the good cholesterol as much as the polyunsaturated fats do.

Oils containing a higher percentage of monounsaturated fats include olive and rapeseed (canola) oils, which are used for cooking, and sometimes included in salad dressings. They're good substitutes for polyunsaturated fats.

All vegetable oils, with the exception of those containing coconut and palm oil, are cholesterol free. Animal fats, on the other hand, do contain cholesterol.

Bond Set For Teen-Ager In Robbery

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A Superior Court judge has set a $25,000 bond in the case of a 15-year-old Greenville girl charged with stabbing and robbing a Farmville woman.

Judge David E. Reid Jr. of Greenville set the bond Thursday for Melissa Stroud, 15, who has been held in a Pitt County juvenile detention center since authorities arrested her in Georgia and brought her back to Greenville.

Miss Stroud and Gary Patrick McBennett, 30, Lot 15 Watkins Trailer Park, Farmville, are accused of stabbing and robbing Elsie Jones Mazingo of Route 2, Box 176-B, Farmville on Nov. 10 of 1988.

Miss Stroud is charged with armed robbery and assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill and inflicting serious injury. The cases will likely be sent to the grand jury for indictment on Monday, Pitt County District Attorney Tom Haigwood said.

As conditions of her bond, Reid ordered that Miss Stroud could only be released into the custody of her father, she must abide by a dusk-to-dawn curfew and she must not have any contact with either of the co-defendants in the case.

According to court files, Miss Stroud, McBennett and Larry Eugene King Jr., 22, Route 2, Box 172-D, Farmville, allegedly conspired Nov. 9 to commit the crimes.

Miss Stroud and McBennett allegedly took $1,995 from Mrs. Mazingo. Both are also accused of participating in the stabbing. Mrs. Mazingo suffered serious injuries to her chest and arms and had to receive emergency medical treatment, according to court files regarding McBennett's case.

McBennett, who is being held on $220,000 bond, was indicted Jan. 23 on charges of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill and inflicting serious injury; conspiracy to commit armed robbery and murder; armed robbery, and taking indecent liberties with Miss Stroud for sexual gratification.

By law, anyone under 16 years of age entering the state's court system is considered a juvenile and ensuing court action is not available to the public or the media. But a District Court judge in Pitt County Juvenile Court has granted a motion from the state to transfer Miss Stroud's case to Superior Court, which is open to the public.

Her bond hearing Thursday was held in open court, and prosecutors and her defense attorney briefly described a few details of the case for Reid.

Miss Stroud's attorney, John Smith of Greenville, has appealed the decision to transfer the case to Superior Court. He has 60 days from the time of the appeal to file the motion with the state Court of Appeals. He said he believes it is in the best interest of Miss Stroud to keep the case in Juvenile Court.

"For any juvenile I would try to keep it in Juvenile Court, not just Melissa," he said.

Because of the appeal, Pitt County clerks would not release Miss Stroud's court files. Court officials said if the indictments are returned Monday, they will be public record.

In spite of the appeal, Haigwood indicated he might make an effort to proceed with the case in Superior Court. McBennett and King are scheduled to enter pleas at their arraignment on Feb. 27, according to court records.

Smith said he was not aware of any trial date set for Miss Stroud or the co-defendants, and he would likely oppose any effort to move Miss Stroud's case along before his appeal is answered.

King was indicted Jan. 23 on charges of conspiring to commit armed robbery and conspiring to commit armed robbery and murder. His participation allegedly occurred only on Nov. 9, the day before the actual crime. He has been released on a $5,000 secured bond and a $5,000 unsecured bond.

Council Kills Effort To Erect Signs Pointing To Hotels

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Greenville City Council has stomped out an effort by the Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority to erect informational signs along U.S. 264 to direct travelers to lodging, food and gas.

By a 5-1 vote, the council opposed the proposal submitted by Al Nichols, executive director of the authority. Only Council member Bill Hadden, who praised the authority for its contributions to the city's development, cast a vote in favor of the project.

Art Thompson, manager of the Hilton Inn, is a member of the authority and helped develop the sign proposal. He said he never expected the issue to become so contested.

"A year ago, I thought it was a pretty simple request, but it turned out to be less than that. But I understand (the council's) decision," he said.

Nichols, who took his post in February of last year, has been working on the sign project with the authority for more than 10 months. The group began work on the project after hotel managers expressed concern that motorists using the new stretch of U.S. 264 might be steered past the majority of the city's hotels and restaurants.

It appears, however, that the hotels have not suffered considerably. At the authority's monthly meeting Thursday night, Nichols said revenue from the occupancy tax generated by area hotels from July 1 through Dec. 31 of 1988 jumped 11 percent from the same period in 1987.

The hospitality industry is expanding for several reasons, Thompson said, including the city's marketing efforts and the growth of the region.

Still, he said the informational signs would have helped improve business.

"I think the (market) could grow more if we could capture some of the people traveling through the area," he said.

Nichols, who was out of town today, said Thursday before the council's vote that hotel managers had complained about losing customers last year.

"The hotels like the Hilton and the Ramada have advertised they are on the bypass, and they used to be on what was called the bypass ...," Nichols said. "When I think about myself, and you know I'm in the travel industry and I did win the pathfinding merit badge in the Boy Scouts, ... but I'm terrible with directions. When I go into a strange town, I'm lost ... I think strange people coming into town need effective guidance," Nichols said.

The new highway, which was opened in 1987, brings travelers into the city by Pitt County Memorial Hospital instead of along Greenville Boulevard where the Hilton and Ramada are located.

Because U.S. 264 is not an interstate highway, the state Department of Transportation initially declined to erect the signs. The authority then worked to get the City Council to override the county's restrictive billboard ordinance and allow two signs to be erected along the highway: one near ABC Moving and Storage and another near the Holiday Inn at the intersection of U.S. 264 and Memorial Drive.

Under the proposal, the second sign would have instructed motorists to turn right for food, lodging and gas and left for food and gas.

In December, the city's Planning and Zoning Commission also voted against the plan, claiming it would set an unwanted precedent. The planning staff cited that there are about 95 restaurants, 14 hotels and 35 businesses selling gasoline in the city, and it would be difficult to place signs so that all businesses benefit.

The commission also questioned whether the signs are needed at all, pointing out there are three hotels, including the Holiday Inn, six restaurants and two gas stations within sight of the proposed second sign.

"The main reason we need them at that point is that ... yes, they may see the Holiday Inn there, but they may think, well, there are other hotels down the way (out of town). Maybe they heard there was a Hilton in town. Maybe they heard there was a Ramada, and maybe they're looking for another hotel," Nichols said Thursday night prior to the City Council vote.

Stabbing Victim Dies After Suspect Freed

A victim of a stabbing incident Wednesday near Haddock's Crossroads died this morning and Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson said the man accused in the death was released Thursday night on a $10,000 bond.

Law enforcement authorities are searching for Kenneth T. Perry, 24, Tyson said. When Perry was arrested, he gave deputies two different addresses, Tyson said. One was Box 691, Oxford. The other, Lot 15 Spring Valley Trailer Park, Route 1, Winterville. Perry was probably living in the county, Tyson said.

Perry allegedly stabbed Grant Andre, Route 2, Snow Hill, after the two had an argument in the trailer park Wednesday, Tyson said. Two witnesses said Perry came at Andre with a butcher knife, Tyson said.

Andre had been listed in serious condition at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Perry was initially charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, inflicting serious injury, and held on a $1,000 bond, Tyson said.

A judge increased the bond to $10,000 Thursday, he said, but Perry made the bond that night and was released from the Pitt County Jail, Tyson said. Authorities are now searching for Perry in order to serve a murder warrant, Tyson said, and Perry would likely be held without bond.

Raise Dies, But Problems Remain

Congress deserves one cheer for upsetting a 50 percent raise for its members, and the president deserves the same for reluctantly signing the measure.

It was the wrong plan at the wrong time. It was poorly managed and it caused a public uproar which forced the election sensitive congressmen to vote it down.

But is the problem solved? Not exactly.

In the first place the nation's senators and congressmen should have raises on a periodic basis. If they don't, the United States will have a Congress in which a person of moderate means cannot serve. Some very capable people simply can't afford to serve in Congress at current salaries if they don't have independent finances.

Second, Congress has not solved the problem of payment from outside sources for speech making and other activities. Some members of Congress receive significant amounts of income for showing up at conventions and such and offering a few words. Then the question becomes whether the congressman is being paid for his words of wisdom, or for future favors. It is a question of public perception.

Third, pay raises for federal judges and other high government positions were tied to the measure which would have increased congressional salaries. Those raises, too, went down with the legislative increases. That is not a situation which can be left as it is. If the nation wants the best talent available for federal judgeships it will have to provide salaries which will attract and retain such people.

An outstanding attorney might enjoy the prestige and position that goes with a judgeship. He or she might get more satisfaction in presiding over federal court than serving with a Wall Street law firm. As some point, however, each will have to make a choice as to whether they will continue making a financial sacrifice to serve as a federal judge or accept a lucrative offer to join a prestigious law firm.

Congress still must develop some formula which provides for reasonable pay increases for future members of Congress, one that at least tracks inflation. It must find some way to avoid the perceptions that outside income creates. And it must provide pay increases for federal judges and other key government employees. Members of Congress are snakebit now following the recent salary fiasco. Nevertheless, the problems of inadequate salary remain.

Not Working

Communist Economies Hit Brick Wall

All over the world the Communist approach to controlling the economy seems to be a theory which doesn't work.

Communism was advanced as a system which would create a worker's paradise. The government would own everything, workers would produce and there would be no need for great wealth because all needs would be provided for.

The Communist countries became adept at building huge war machines, and even developing the technology to support military power. Unfortunately precious little of the fruits of productivity filter down to the masses. Today, instead of the vaulted workers' paradise, most Communist rulers find themselves faced with dissatisfaction among their people.

The flagship Communist nation, the Soviet Union, is recognizing that its people cannot forever be kept under control unless there is abatement of long food lines, lack of consumer goods and repression of freedoms. Thus comes the philosophy of glasnost.

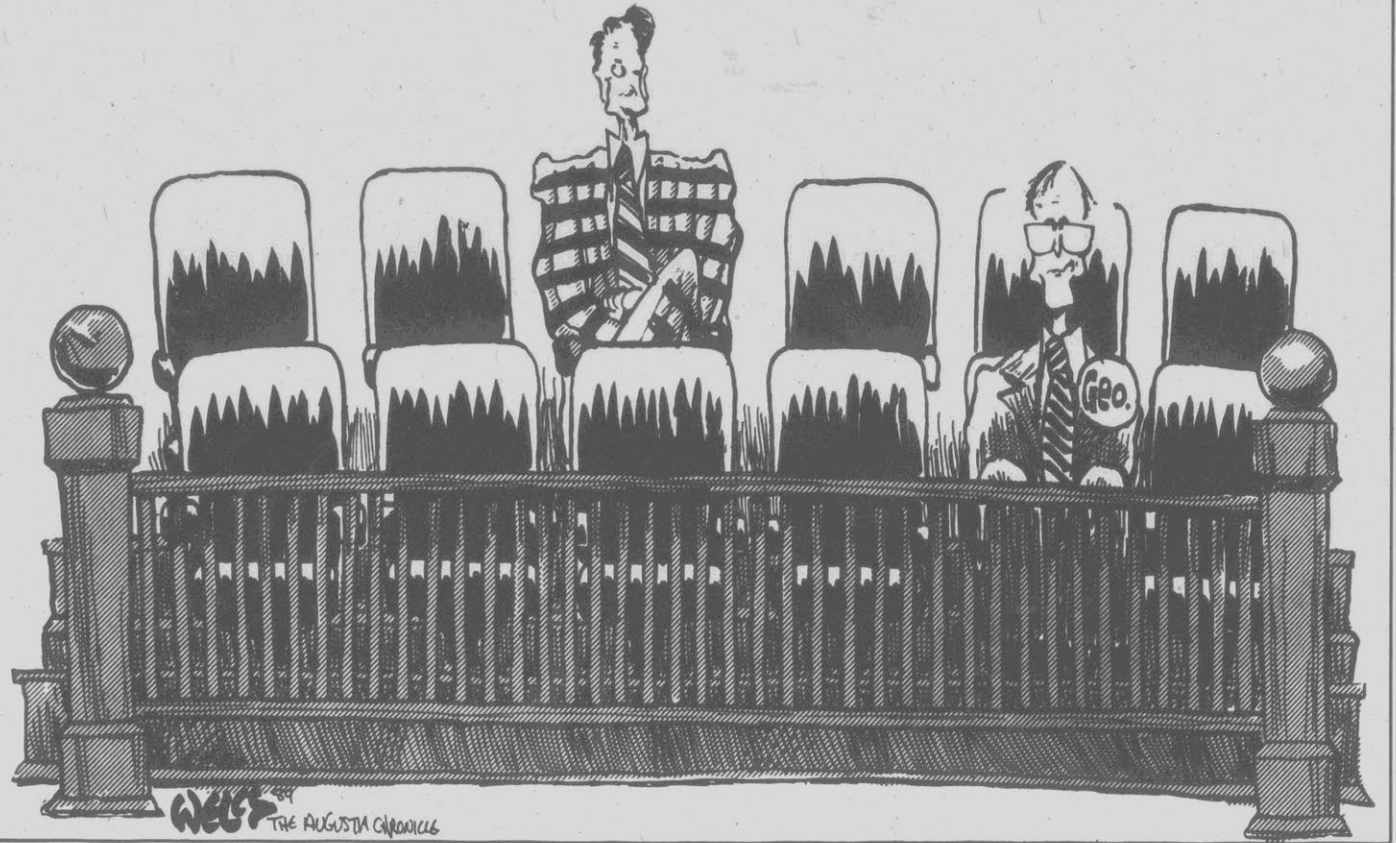

In Poland the economic situation is seen as virtually hopeless. Reportedly many people feel that until there is an economic upheaval there will be no change in their somber lives. Albania lives in a state of repression. Cuba exists only with heavy subsidies from the Soviets, something the supporting nation can ill afford.

The one thing the Communist planners failed to take into account in planning their societies was incentive. The profit motive provides incentive.

Today we are seeing an unraveling of the Communist theories which have plagued the world since 1918. It would be unrealistic to assume these societies will be dismantled. They already are, however, allowing some private initiative.

Finally the Communist nations have been forced to recognize they must trade with the more productive capitalistic nations. Their societies won't survive otherwise. In essence we are seeing a new world revolution which will vastly change economy in a way that has not happened since the Russian revolution.

DISAVOWING ANY PRIOR KNOWLEDGE OF THE IRAN-CONTRA AFFAIR, TWO QUALIFIED JURORS ARE QUICKLY SEATED IN THE OLIVER NORTH TRIAL...

The Honeymoon Vessel Is Adrift

WASHINGTON — In our latest report from the Maid of the Potomac (Washington's boat for political honeymooners), we must sadly report that the vessel is adrift. Amidst the billing and cooing has come word that two of George Bush's Cabinet nominees are in trouble. What this honeymoon needs is a visit from a mother-in-law: Someone has to take charge.

Bush, it seems, just couldn't do without John Tower. The Secretary of Defense-designate is giving womanizing a bad name. If the allegations are true, Tower's seduction technique seems to be borrowed from Hulk Hogan. He lunges, he chases, he reaches and he grabs. Two out of three falls and he has his woman.

The Tower debacle could well have been avoided. When Tower's name first surfaced soon after the election, so did allegations of insobriety, womanizing and, of course, conflicts of interest. Attempts were made to block the nomination, but Bush persisted. In doing so, he chose a man who has spent 2 1/2 years since leaving the Senate doing business with firms who do business with the Pentagon. By peddling his influence, Tower made what is usually considered a nice living: more than $750,000 in fees from defense contractors.

If Tower were not a former senator, his activities as a lobbyist and weapons pusher might already have doomed his chances of confirmation. But he had other strikes against him as well. An arrogant and imperious figure, Tower has made enough enemies that some of them have given the Senate incredible testimony.

In short, Bush's decision to nominate Tower (given all the accusations) is well nigh inexplicable. Surely in a nation of almost 250 million people, there are others who can run the Pentagon. It hardly matters now if Tower is embarrassed into withdrawing his nomination or is confirmed: He is damaged goods.

The outcome of his nomination could well have been foreseen.

But we have seen this sort of thing before. Absent a stern mother-in-law figure, Bush relies on his own judgment — and then freezes. This is why Dan Quayle is now the vice president of the United States, a proposition that gets no less scary with the passage of time. Everywhere he goes, everything he does, is described by some administration leaker as yet another opportunity to season the young man. The conclusion is inescapable: The United States, like some monarchy, is stuck with an unworthy heir.

Next we turn to Louis Sullivan, Bush's nominee for the Department of Health and Human Services. Sullivan's nomination is also on hold. In the first place, the poor man seems befuddled by the issue of abortion. Twice now he has been forced to recant semi-private (nothing is private in Washington) assurances that he is content with the abortion law as it is. This has given anti-abortionists absolute fits and forced Sullivan into two brain-washing sessions, although, as Eugene McCarthy once said of George Romney, a light rinse might have done it.

Three of Bush's major personnel decisions have come a cropper. That could just be happenstance. But there is a common thread here—and it is an ominous one. Quayle and Tower were Bush's personal choices, chosen because he feels comfortable with them. He brushed aside all objections, even though in both cases they were consequential. And having made his decisions, he stuck with them, confusing stubbornness with decisiveness. As for Sullivan, his credential comes from Barbara Bush, who both likes and admires the man. Here, too, Bush has ignored all signs that the man is not up to the job.

As a result, the honeymoon vessel is adrift. It seems to lack a sense of direction, an ability to frame a message and stick with it. It finds itself embroiled in controversies that could well have been avoided. We are beginning to wonder about the judgment of the groom. From the deck of the Maid of the Potomac, I have to report that all is not well. There may be deep doo-doo ahead.

How Will They Fill The Blanks?

BOSTON — The conversation began, as many of them do, with the following phrase: When we were your age....

The group around the dinner table were women, two generations of them. The topic was relationships and pretty soon we came to the edge of the generation gap.

When we were your age, a single woman couldn't get birth control.

When we were your age, abortion was illegal.

When we were your age, sex was a very risky business.

When we were your age, all of our friends were thinking about marriage.

The four younger women in their college garb of sweaters and pants leaned forward to listen. It was late and we had met them in the city for wine and pasta. But suddenly, it was as if these young women were in nursery school and we were the adults who came to tell them a story they'd never heard.

One of the older women wondered gently if this was what the experts meant by cultural illiteracy. Her guests were women born during the years just before and after Bobby Kennedy was shot. On a pop quiz, they couldn't identify Da Nang, or name a member of the Nixon Cabinet, or define "Clean for Gene." All they knew of pre-sexual-revolution America was what they had seen in "Dirty Dancing."

Ellen Goodman

The other woman was sure her young dining companions had heard all this before, but it just hadn't registered. What is it that they say about sex talks between adults and children? Answer what is asked, no more, no less. The young will find out what they need to know. In their twenties, these young finally needed to know about then and now. When we were their age.

But as the evening wore on from wine to coffee, it became apparent to both of the delegates from the older generation that we were talking from one vantage point and they were listening from another. We were telling tales from the bad old days. They were listening with nostalgia. We were sure that they had much more freedom than we'd had. They were not.

I have thought about this exchange more than once since that dinner. Thought about the new realities of these young lives. About the brief blip of freedom — for better and worse — that can be seen receding. About what it's like to be twentysomething.

We were denied access to birth control by the law. Their access is now limited by anxiety. The pill that eased so many minds of short-term worries about pregnancy now comes with a set of long-term worries about breast cancer.

Legal abortion assured women that their lives would not be changed irrevocably by a single accident or error, one act of passion or victimization. Now that too is at risk. In the morning paper, there is a pro-choice ad that says: "After 16 years of safety, time is running out."

Sex and safety do not come in the same package. What does it mean to be twentysomething in the AIDS era? What does fear do to sexuality? Some women find it easier to say no than to say "condoms." Others wake up the morning-after wondering not if they are pregnant, but if they are infected.

As for young marriages, it is an article of faith among my generation that it is better to wait than to end up, as we often did, divorced. It is an article of faith among mothers that their daughters should start careers first rather than wake up, as we did, unskilled. But the pressure on the women to plan their lives with split-second timing and an eye on the biological clock begins younger and younger. At twentysomething, they look ahead, as we did not, and see their thirtysomething sisters who are often stressed or lonely or in line at the fertility clinic.

From their vantage point, an early marriage may seem less like a risk than a shelter. Even in this age, they are the keepers of sexuality and fertility who feel many of these pressures more than the men in their lives.

Does this all sound too worrisome? If the quartet we dined with are any example, the younger generation of women is more self-confident, stronger, far more introspective than mine. They don't take much for granted. They don't live by a set program.

But it is not an easy time. Not at all. And sometimes I wonder how this generation, more pressured than you might imagine, will fill in the blanks as they tell their own children, "When I was your age...."

Prisons

RALEIGH (AP) — The quick passage of a bill to improve North Carolina's prison conditions drew more attention than the provisions in the bill as the House approved it with minor amendments.

The House voted 108-2 Thursday to approve the two-year, $80 million package that authorizes actions arrived at in a court settlement over inmate lawsuits.

Rep. Michael Decker, R-Forsyth, had few questions about the bill, but he said he was "incredulous" that such an important matter "should not be debated on this floor or discussed in any manner."

The bill was returned to the Senate with two House amendments. If the Senate concurs, it would likely be enacted Monday night.

Hunger Strike

DURHAM (AP) — A student began a hunger strike this week to protest the use of live dogs that are later killed in surgery at the Duke University Medical Center.

Sprague Cheshire said he began the strike after his request to be exempted from the lab was denied by Medical School officials.

Cheshire said he explained his ethical objections to Vickey Scott, his faculty advisor, and Dr. Doyle Graham, Dean of the Medical School. Cheshire said he was at first told alternative course work, meaning personal instruction from a physician, would be acceptable, but was then told by Graham that no exception would be made.

Helms Dinner

RALEIGH (AP) — Prominent North Carolina Republicans will host a fund-raising dinner for Sen. Jesse Helms this month, an event that is being billed as the start of his 1990 re-election campaign.

"It's sort of a combination to encourage him to run and to kick off the campaign," Carter Wrenn said. Wrenn is the executive director of the National Congressional Club, Helms' Raleigh-based political organization.

Helms has yet to announce whether he will seek a fourth term in the U.S. Senate, although his campaign committee for 1990 raised and spent more than $1 million last year.

Mobil Drilling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Martin administration has told Congress the federal government should require more detailed environmental assessments before allowing Mobil Oil Corp. to begin exploratory drilling for natural gas off the North Carolina coast.

"We need complete, up-to-date environmental information and a thorough analysis of Mobil Oil Corporation's proposed exploratory oil and gas activity," Bill Cobey told the House appropriations subcommittee on the interior.

Cobey, a former congressman, is secretary of the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

Hendon Group Plans To Release Balloons

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONG KONG (AP) — A former U.S. congressman from North Carolina sailed today for the South China Sea to launch about 1,000 helium balloons toward Vietnam and Laos carrying messages offering rewards for American prisoners of war.

Billy Hendon and three relatives of U.S. servicemen missing in action left the Royal Hong Kong Yacht Club in mild weather on a 65-foot boat that once carried Vietnamese refugees to asylum in this British colony.

Hendon said late Thursday he plans to sail at least 200 miles south of Hong Kong to encounter air currents that will send the balloons to Laos and Vietnam, where he believes hundreds of missing Americans remain imprisoned 14 years after the war in Indochina ended.

The balloons will carry messages that say in local languages: "Bring an American prisoner to freedom and you will receive a huge prize in return," Hendon said.

He said anyone who can free and bring to U.S. custody an American prisoner of war would get a $2.4 million reward, pledged by 21 members of Congress and others.

Hendon, 44, a two-term Republican congressman from North Carolina who was defeated in 1986, is a member of a POW Publicity Fund formed by families of missing men and others to advertise the reward offer.

Accompanying Hendon are Elizabeth Stewart of Washington, Bobby Bischoff of Wilson, N.C., and Jeffrey Donahue of Cocoa Beach, Fla., whose fathers are among the U.S. servicemen reported missing in action. The group expects to return to Hong Kong on Sunday.

"This is no joke, we're spending a lot of time and a lot of effort here," said Hendon, who previously traveled to Thailand to float balloons with the reward offer down the Mekong River, which forms the border with Laos.

"We're not here to argue whether POWs are still there or not. We are convinced they are," he said. "Our job is to help solve the dilemma."

The U.S. government says it has been unable to prove that Americans remain captive from the war in Indochina. But it says the possibility cannot be discounted and investigations continue.

Illegal Signs Dot Highways

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The state Department of Transportation has discovered more than 500 illegal signs and billboards on North Carolina's major highways, including some that should have been torn down years ago when their permits were revoked.

DOT Chief Engineer Earl H. McEntire said he was shocked by preliminary reports he had received from division engineers, who are checking thousands of miles of highway for illegal signs.

"I didn't realize we had that many," he said.

McEntire ordered the statewide survey of illegal billboards Jan. 25, after The News and Observer of Raleigh reported instances in which DOT revoked billboard permits for violating regulations but failed to force the owners to remove their signs.

He said Thursday that he had given the 14 division engineers until March 3, extending the first deadline of Feb. 3, to complete their survey of illegal signs. DOT has taken steps to remove illegal signs or bring them into compliance, McEntire said.

Results from the initial survey varied widely among DOT's 14 divisions.

Division Three (Brunswick, Duplin, New Hanover, Onslow, Pender and Sampson counties) reported 212 illegal signs, the most in the state, while Division 12 (Alexander, Catawba, Cleveland, Gaston, Iredell and Lincoln counties) reported none.

McEntire said some division engineers had misunderstood his memo requesting the survey and had additional work to do. Also, he said he had not given engineers enough time to check the 5,420 miles of federally funded highways on which DOT regulates billboards.

The list of illegal signs reported to the chief engineer included a sign on the U.S. 220 Bypass in Randolph County, owned by Voncannon Fence Co., that had ignored by DOT since 1972, the beginning of North Carolina's program regulating outdoor advertising.

"The owner refused to (get a) permit or remove the sign," District Engineer Lex A. Kelly wrote in his report. "Legal assistance was requested to remove the sign, but no action was taken."

Kelly also cited a Rex Oil Co. sign, also on the U.S. 220 Bypass in Randolph County.

AFT Chief Says Reforms Needed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Educators, government officials and the public must realize just how much education reform is needed in the United States, says the president of the American Federation of Teachers.

"None of us will be willing to invest the effort that is needed unless we realize just how bad things are," Albert Shanker said in a luncheon address at North Carolina State University on Thursday.

"If we had no school system and we had to build one, no one would build the one we have today," Shanker said. "We ask students to sit for five hours a day. How many adults can do that?"

Shanker's speech was part of a forum called "Education for a Competitive Society." The two-day forum drew more than 1,000 educators and government and business leaders primarily from North Carolina, but also drew some from out of state, said NCSU spokeswoman Lucy Coulbourn.

Other leaders also warned that America will lose its standing as the world's economic leader if the nation's education system does not change dramatically.

"It could be we are poised to see a real income decline if radical improvements to education are not made," pollster Louis Harris said.

"If we cannot cut it I can guarantee you our standard of living will fall," Harris said.

Harris' comments were echoed Apple Computer, Inc. president and chief executive officer John Sculley, New Jersey Gov. Thomas Kean, former N.C. Gov. Jim Hunt, N.C. Superintendent of Public Instruction Bob Etheridge and others.

"The hard truth is that there have been few substantial changes in American education while the world around us has changed dramatically," Harris said.

Sculley said the American economy is threatened by what he described as the failure of the educational system to prepare people to work in an information society.

"We're not talking about trying to save a segment of the society. We're saying our entire middle class economy is at risk," Sculley said.

Etheridge praised education reform programs that have been established in North Carolina, such as the Basic Education Plan. He said his department is considering eliminating some restrictions in the state education budget so that local school officials will have more flexibility in making spending decisions.

PUBLIC HEARING NOTICE

Public Hearing to consider the adoption of a Zoning Ordinance Amendment and rezoning request for the Town of Bethel.

The Town Board of Commissioners of the Town of Bethel will hold a public hearing on the 21st of February, 1989 at 7:30 o'clock in the evening in the Town Hall. The purpose of the hearing is to seek comments on a proposed new Multi-Family Zoning District (MR) and a rezoning change for two areas on the official zoning map of the Town of Bethel. All interested citizens are invited to attend.

The proposed Zoning Map and Text Amendments are displayed for public inspection during regular business hours, Monday-Friday, 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. at the Town Hall, Town of Bethel, North Carolina.

programs and additional funds for construction facilities at PCC," Russell said.

"The commission on the future has identified the areas that should be changed," said Kay Whichard, acting vice chairman of the PCC Board of Trustees. "Now, the community colleges must adapt to meet the needs of the workers by making these changes. The colleges must secure more financial aid in such a way that the financial burden will be realistic and the support adequate for the task. It's a mammoth, but exciting challenge for the citizens of our state."

The report says the current level of funding is too low to allow the state to provide the technical and vocational education required to maintain a competitive workforce and to reach the state's undereducated citizens.

Most of the additional funds would be used to improve the quality of community college instruction through increased faculty salaries, professional development programs and the development of innovative teaching methods.

Community colleges also should focus on tracking student progress and demonstrating measurable results toward improving the economic and educational climate in the state, the report says.

In addition, colleges need to disseminate new technologies and promote small business development by providing customized training to help businesses upgrade the productivity of their workforce, by providing expert assistance to key industries in the state through a specialized technology center and by providing a small business network for each community college, the report says.

According to the report, partnerships between the public school and university systems need to be established to provide a comprehensive education system for state citizens.

The 23-member commission was formed in November 1987 to establish an agenda for policies and actions over the next 25 years.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the book of I Samuel intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

SAMUEL AND SAUL

AT LONG LAST SAMUEL BRINGS SAUL BEFORE THE ASSEMBLED TRIBES OF ISRAEL TO ANOINT HIM KING, AS THE LORD HAS DIRECTED....

NOW, EVEN AS THE LORD HAS COMMANDED ME TO DO, I BRING BEFORE YOU SAUL- CHOSEN BY GOD!

WE HAVE REJECTED THE LORD TO RULE OVER YOU AND HAVE ASKED INSTEAD FOR A KING!

...AND SAMUEL PREPARES TO ANOINT SAUL WITH OIL...

NOW, AMIDST CRIES OF "GOD SAVE THE KING" SAUL STANDS BEFORE ALL ISRAEL, HANDSOME, MODEST, TALLER BY A HEAD AND SHOULDER THAN ANY OTHER MAN. IN THIS, HIS GREATEST MOMENT-ALL OF WHICH HAS BEEN RECORDED IN I SAMUEL, CHAPTERS 8,9,10.

Vatican Criticizes Apartheid, Bias

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
VATICAN CITY — The Vatican today attacked South Africa's apartheid system as "the most marked and systematic form" of racism in the world and urged efforts to stamp out all forms of prejudice.
In a major document on racism that took the unusual step of mentioning countries by name, the Vatican also said "much still needs to be done" to wipe out racial prejudice in the United States, although it cited the country as one of the most racially mixed societies in the world.
Examining the history and causes of prejudice, the 45-page document warned of possible new forms of racism, saying modern science could be exploited by "apprentice sorcerers" seeking to produce human beings selected by race.
The document, entitled "The Church and Racism: Towards A More Fraternal Society," was written by the Vatican's Justice and Peace Commission at the request of Pope John Paul II.

John Paul has said conditions are not ripe for a papal visit to South Africa.
"Racism still exists and continually reappears in different forms. ... It is a wound in humanity's side that mysteriously remains open."
French Cardinal Roger Etchegaray, head of the commission that prepared the document, last year toured South Africa, where a white minority government has administered for some 40 years a system of racial segregation known as apartheid.
In South Africa, apartheid establishes a racially segregated society in which the 26 million blacks have no vote in national affairs. The 5 million whites control the economy and maintain separate districts, schools and health services.

John Paul has said conditions are not ripe for a papal visit to South Africa.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market fell sharply today, faced with new worries about inflation and the federal budget.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials tumbled 17.86 to 2,305.18 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than 4 to 1 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 187 up, 811 down and 419 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 34.03 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The Labor Department reported this morning that producer prices of finished goods jumped 1 percent in January, for their sharpest rise since they posted a similar increase in October 1985.

The figure came in well above advance estimates on Wall Street, and touched off new concerns on Wall Street about the inflation outlook.

Speculation quickly intensified about whether and when the Federal Reserve might tighten credit further in its campaign against inflation.

Prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, fell about $10 for each $1,000 in face value.

Analysts also cited some disappointment among traders over President Bush's budget message Thursday night, saying it didn't live up to hopes that it would contain forceful new ideas about how to straighten out the government's budget.

Terms

decides to choose four-year terms, that the council should make the terms staggered.

Mary Alsentzer, representing the League of Women Voters of Greenville-Pitt County, said the league favors two-year terms.

She said the league believes a shorter term encourages change and the influx of fresh ideas into city government. She said it allows citizens an opportunity to replace ineffective leaders more often and more accountability would subsequently be demanded from elected officials.

Ms. Alsentzer also said the League would likely attempt to obtain the signatures of 10 percent of the city's population to legally have the matter put before a vote of the people.

Jack Richardson, stating the official position of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, said the chamber feels it appropriate that the matter be placed on a referendum for a decision by the voters at the next general election.

The Rev. David S. Hammond stood before the board and demanded to know: "What exactly is the pressing need to change the length of the terms at this time?"

Mayor Ed Carter told Hammond the council members had decided in 1987 to make the terms a part of their objectives to be reached by the end of their tenures.

But in an interview today, Hammond said his question still remains unanswered. "Why all of a sudden has this issue come to the forefront?" he said. "When the mayor and these council members ran for office, I do not recall any of them making the length of office terms as a campaign issue."

Congress Cordial But Wary To Bush

tions of continued strong growth that many economists question.

The president's speech was not a State of the Union address in the literal sense. But it served as one, from the pageantry of a House chamber filled with lawmakers, the diplomatic corps, Supreme Court justices and hundreds of guests, to the breadth of his remarks.

"We Americans have only begun our mission of goodness and greatness," he concluded.

Bush said he would "proceed with caution" in his dealings with the Soviet Union, but said, "We will not miss any opportunity for peace." He vowed to work for the elimination of chemical weapons and said he would "stand firm" for democracy in Nicaragua and elsewhere in Central America.

The new president called for trimming $2.6 billion from President Reagan's final Pentagon budget, adding a few programs for education, aid to the homeless and the environment, all areas that fit in his campaign promise of a "kinder, gentler nation."

However, his overall education budget would fail to keep up with inflation, and his child-care credit is limited to only the poorest of families — those making $10,000 a year or less.

He urged enactment of measures to revitalize inner cities, declared a fiercer war on drugs and took a page from Jesse Jackson's campaign text when he said to kids living in the inner cities: "Keep hope alive."

Bush's Pentagon spending plan calls for an increase next year that would allow spending to rise with inflation but no higher. "After that increases above inflation will be required," he said.

In their immediate post-mortems on Thursday night, Republicans and Democrats alike predicted that Bush's spending blueprint would pave the way for negotiations with Congress.

"The Bush budget is a tough one giving first priority to deficit reduction," Rep. Bill Frenzel of Minnesota, senior Republican on the House Budget Committee said. "It will be subject to lots of negotiation, but it is an important step toward a deficit solution."

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas., who joined Wright in delivering the official Democratic response, said his party will work with the president. "That doesn't mean we won't disagree. There'll be some sharp, principled disagreements among Democrats and Republicans over one of the greatest challenges America has ever faced," he said.

When it came to the budget, Bush did not claim to have the final solution.

He said he and his team "are ready to work with the Congress, to form a special leadership group, to negotiate in good faith, to work day and night — if that's what it takes."

There were discouraging words for the president from Democrats who vowed to fight any cuts in Medicare, and Rep. Dan Rostenkowski said he would use his chairmanship of the House Ways and Means Committee to contest cuts in the capital gains tax.

Not all Republican were entirely pleased, either.

"It's not immediately apparent how all those initiative are going to be paid for, even with the defense freeze. Maybe that will become apparent tomorrow," said Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H.

One Democrat, Sen. Dale Bumpers of Arkansas, chided Bush for straying too far from conservative doctrine.

"It's a much kinder, gentler budget. His speech could have been delivered by any Democrat," he said. "His problem will be getting it through his party. Ours will go along with 70 or 80 percent of it."

Wolfpack Thrusts Adversity Aside At Expense Of Carolina

By Tom Foreman Jr.
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Two losses and a little more adverse publicity served to help 17th-ranked North Carolina State regain some much needed momentum at the expense of No. 6 North Carolina in a 98-88 victory.

Playing under the cloud of allegations of wrongdoing in the Wolfpack basketball program for the last month, N.C. State was shocked again this week by a report issued by school officials which said 10 of the 12 current team members are not in good academic standing.

Just as one month ago when the allegations printed on a dust jacket were published in a Raleigh newspaper, the Wolfpack responded to the adverse news with intense practices, a strong performance against the Tar Heels and, according to Chucky Brown, a tighter relationship among his teammates.

"I think the tough practices woke everyone up, and then with all the negativity in the atmosphere, it really brought us closer together again. That helped us a lot," he said.

Asked if the team plays better with adversity, Brown replied, "We have to because it seems like everybody's trying to pound us. We just have to stick together."

Brown had career highs of 29 points and 16 rebounds and he led five players in double figures. Rodney Monroe shrugged off foul trouble to score 24 points, reserve Kelsey Weems had 17, and 12 points each for Brian Howard and Chris Corchiani.

The Wolfpack simply ran away from the Tar Heels, using an early spurt to take command and getting another run late in the first half to run up a big lead.

North Carolina, with just five points in the closing five minutes of the first half, battled back to within nine before running out of steam and time.

"I thought the kids played a great game tonight," N.C. State coach Jim Valvano said. "I thought we had lost a little of our spirit over the last month, but tonight they reached back and came up with a great effort."

North Carolina cut a 10-point deficit to 21-17 after Steve Bucknall's 3-point basket with 10:49 left in the half. But Brown's follow shot and two 3-point shots by Monroe ran the lead back to 29-17 with 8:53 left in the first half.

When Monroe picked up his third foul with four minutes left in the period, Weems took over and scored three straight baskets in an 9-0 run to give N.C. State a 46-30 edge just before intermission.

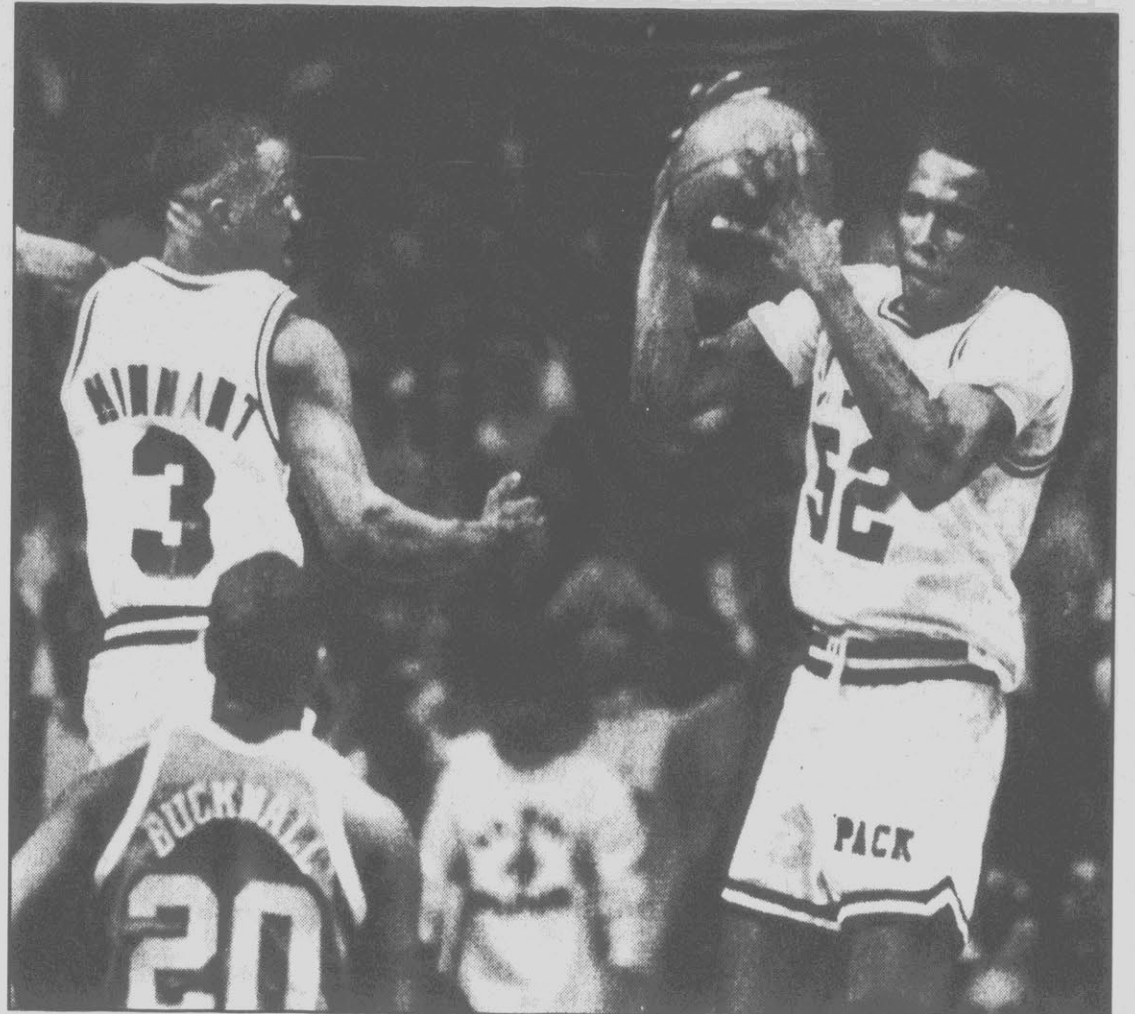

"We had two offensive fouls and a missed layup where we bobbled the ball," North Carolina coach Dean Smith said. "We lost the ball on five of six possessions without getting a shot. That was a crucial time in the outcome of the game."

N.C. State led by as much as 69-48 after a Brown layup with 11:51 left before the Tar Heels put on a last-ditch charge, pulling to 87-78 on Pete Chilcutt's 3-pointer with 3:22 left.

"They exposed a lot of our weaknesses tonight," Smith said. "We need to keep working and trying to get a little bit better."

"It was a disappointing loss for us. Maybe we can regroup. I think we will," Smith said.

Jeff Lebo had 22 points for North Carolina, 20 in the second half and 11 in the last six minutes. Bucknall and J.R. Reid had 14 apiece, Rick Fox had 12 and Scott Williams 10 for the Tar Heels.

Pirates Pay Visit To Madison, Driesell

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

FAIRFAX, Va. — Heading into Saturday night's game against James Madison, East Carolina basketball coach is just hoping his team shows up.

The Pirates, 10-11 overall and 4-6 in the Colonial Athletic Association, are coming off an 83-65 loss Wednesday at George Mason.

"I don't even think I'm as concerned with James Madison as I am with our own team," Steele said. "We had good practices before the George Mason game. Then we come out and we're as flat as can be."

"We need to figure out as a team how to consistently improve our play on both ends of the floor."

The game will be a battle for fourth-place in the CAA as the conference season comes to a close.

JMU, 13-10 and 4-5, is one of the few teams in the conference which doesn't have an overwhelming height advantage over the Pirates. Both teams go with front-court players in the 6-5 range.

The Dukes, in their first season under former Maryland coach Lefty Driesell, are led by freshman guard Williams Davis (16.2 ppg) and swingman Claude Ferdinand (11.9 ppg).

"Davis is a good player," Steele said. "He hurt us down there. Ferdinand also scored for them in the first half."

Davis, however, usually doesn't start for the Dukes. JMU usually brings him in off the bench. In his stead, JMU usually starts Troy Bostic, averaging 9.1 points a game.

Kenny Brooks, their point guard, is averaging 11.6 points a game and 3.7 assists.

"They look to press you and get after you defensively. We've got to improve on handling the ball and we have to get the ball to Blue (Edwards). When he passes, other guys have to catch it and shoot it."

Another big factor for the Dukes is the defensive play of center Barry Brown, who has blocked 60 shots this year - best in the CAA. To put that into prospective, ECU's leader is Edwards with 11, and the Pirates have only 25 as a team.

Last year, ECU's 68-65 win over the Dukes in Harrisonburg was ECU's lone CAA road win during an 8-20 year.

Edwards (26.0 ppg) had 27 points against GMU while Hill added 14 and Stanley Love had 12.

ECU has been unpredictable all season and has failed to win two games in a row since December.

"We haven't jelled yet," Steele said. "We haven't been able to put three or four good games together, we haven't been able to put two good games together."

The game could take on added dimension should the two teams end the season tied. A victory by ECU would give the Pirates a sweep of the Dukes for the second year in a row, giving them a seeding advantage in the event of a tie. ECU will be aiming for its fifth straight win in the series, but it has won but once in Harrisonburg, losing six in a row prior to that on the JMU court. The Dukes lead the series, 10-7.

JMU comes into the game off a win over Shippensburg, 81-51, Wednesday, the same night the Pirates were bowing to George Mason, 83-65.

The game is the final road contest in the league for the Pirates. They have only a Wednesday night date at Fayetteville with Campbell remaining on their road schedule. They then close the regular season with four home dates, three in the CAA against American, Navy and UNC-Wilmington. They also have a non-conference game with Liberty University.

Lady Pirates Defeat Howard

WASHINGTON, D.C. — East Carolina's Lady Pirates, playing their second game in as many nights, lost some of their shooting touch, but had enough left for a 54-50 victory over hosting Howard University on Thursday night.

The Lady Pirates shot 59 percent in beating Delaware State, 87-66, on Wednesday night in Dover, Del., but fell off to only 32 percent against the Lady Bison. Fortunately for them, however, they held Howard to just 30 percent.

"We hit 12 of 13 at the foul line, and that was the key to the game," Coach Pat Pierson said. Howard made good on just seven of 15 and that made the difference.

Howard held a slim 41-40 rebounding edge over the Pirates, who were led in that department by Sarah Gray, who pulled 14. Pam Williams added eight and Gretta Savage had six.

Karen Abrams led Howard with 14 rebounds. Gray and Savage each scored 16 points to lead the Lady Pirates, while Rose Miller came off the bench to score a career high 14 points in the game.

Karen Wilkins led Howard with 14 points while Felicia Oliver added 13 and Abrams had 11.

The victory was the second in a row for the Lady Pirates and the second in two nights over and MEAC team. It upped the ECU record to 11-9 on the season while Howard fell off to 8-13.

East Carolina will return home for a two-game Colonial Athletic Association stand starting Saturday. That night, the Lady Pirates will host league-leading and nationally ranked (USA Today) James Madison. Monday, they play host to George Mason.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

FAIRFAX, Va. — All Jeff Kelly ever wanted was a chance to prove he could play, an opportunity to quiet the skeptics who doubted his abilities.

Now a senior on the East Carolina basketball team, Kelly has established himself as the Pirates' point guard after being a bit player during the first three years of his career.

Success has been a long time coming for the senior from South Orange, N.J., but after three trying years, Kelly is finally feeling comfortable on the basketball court again.

He broke the ECU career assist record of 232 with a three-assist performance in a 83-65 loss to George Mason Wednesday, but that mattered little to Kelly.

He had an off night. He turned the ball over five times and his team lost.

"It was nice to break the record, but I didn't do a good job of handling the ball," he said. "Up till now, I've done a pretty good job of protecting the ball, but I've had two bad outings — against George Mason and against UNC-Wilmington — and both of them have been losses."

Saturday, Kelly and the Pirates get a chance to redeem themselves when they take on James Madison in Harrisonburg, Va. in a Colonial Athletic Association contest.

Despite the loss to GMU, which dropped the Bucs to 10-11 overall and 3-5 in the CAA, Kelly is happy just to be out on the court, controlling his own destiny.

"I'm glad I'm getting the chance to play," he said. "I don't know if I can say I'm vindicated. Sometimes, I wish my career would have gone better, but I can't look back. I've tried real hard. I've worked on my game. I've done the best I can do."

Along the way, Kelly has played for two coaches and with enough teammates to fill four different starting lineups.

Prior to this year, he has had 21 different teammates in three years. That is an average of almost seven roster changes each year.

Kelly was recruited to ECU out of Columbia High School by Charlie Harrison, but after his sophomore year, Harrison resigned and was replaced by Mike Steele.

Between a coaching change and what seemed to be a revolving door of teammates, Kelly learned some harsh lessons about the realities of big-time college athletics.

"I think a lot of kids have the idea that you just come to college and play, that it's just like high school," he said. "But coaches have to win and if they don't win they are gone, even if that is the coach that recruited you."

At 5-9, Kelly is more often than not at a size disadvantage. He hasn't been much of a scorer at any time in his career and currently averages only 2.5 points per game. His career high is 12 points.

But he is a steady ball handler and his turnover-to-assist ratio is better than 2-1 this year. He has become the kind of point guard Steele wants.

"All of us wish he would shoot it more," Steele said. "But he has improved from one year to another into what we want in a point guard, both on the floor and off it."

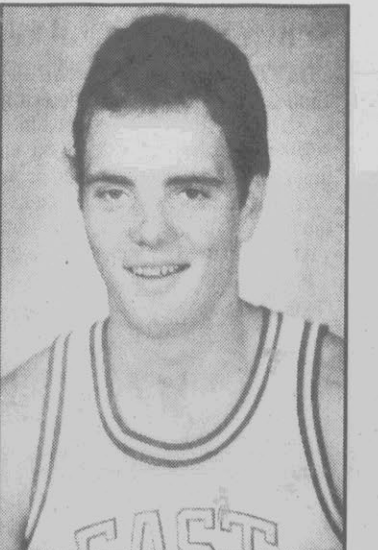

There were doubts, however. "We hoped he would (develop)," Steele added. "But to be honest with you, he had a long way to go. Nobody has ever questioned whether Jeff plays hard or not. They've questioned whether he could make good decisions or play under control."

He has done that this year. The son of a coach, Kelly is the youngest of five Kelly boys, all of whom have played basketball.

His father was the coach at St.

Conley, Havelock Clash In Key Game

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Coastal 3-A Conference season is just past the halfway mark, but the winner of the Havelock-D.H. Conley game tonight will have the upper hand to win the title.

The Rams and the Vikings both enter the game, which will be played at Conley, sporting 7-1 marks in league play. Havelock is 12-6 overall and Conley is 15-4.

In other area games tonight, J.H. Rose will host Wilson Beddingfield, Farmville Central travels to South Lenoir, Ayden-Grifton plays at Pamlico County and North Pitt plays at home against C.B. Aycock.

In the earlier meeting between Havelock and Conley, the Rams came out on top, 66-65, when Vincent Norris hit a 15-foot shot with two seconds left.

The Rams controlled the game throughout the first three quarters, leading 30-21 at the half and 44-35 heading into the fourth period.

"They (Conley players) know that they could have won the last game,"

Viking coach Cobbie Deans said. "The way we came back in the fourth quarter gave us a lot of confidence. I think that may have been the turning point of the season for us."

Havelock's only conference loss came Tuesday night when they fell to East Carteret 65-61.

"We're going to keep doing the same things we've been doing all year," Ram coach Shelly Marsh said. "And hopefully we'll do them better than we did Tuesday."

Havelock will start a trio of seniors along with a pair of sophomores in the contest. Norris, a 5-7 sophomore, and senior Isaac Barrett (5-9) will start at the guard spots, while senior Ledell George (6-1) and sophomore Linster Frazier (6-2) will get the nod at forward. Senior Anthony Robinson (6-9) will start at center.

Kimbrew Morris, a 6-4 senior forward, normally starts opposite George at the forward spot, but will miss Friday's game with an ankle injury, according to Marsh.

For Conley, junior Bershaun

Thompson (6-3) and senior Stacey Green (6-0) will start at guard, while juniors Paul Merritt (6-4) and Terry Williams (6-3) will get the nod at forward. Junior Martin Patrick (6-3) will start at center.

The Vikings will also employ the use of junior forward/center J.J. Stephenson (6-4) and sophomore guards Junior Farrow and Jason Wing off the bench.

"I'm real pleased with the leadership we've been getting," Deans said. "With the help we've been getting off the bench, we're not afraid of one of our starters getting into foul trouble. Jason, Junior and J.J. can all step in and control the tempo like we need to."

Deans feels the key to stopping the Rams is controlling the offensive output of George. The recent N.C. State football signee averages 24.7 points a game and had 20 in the last meeting. George has been suffering from a virus this week, according to Marsh and may not be at 100 percent.

"To hear that he's been sick makes me worry," Deans said. "He's just a great natural athlete and when you have a athlete like that, he's going to reach down and find what it takes to have a good game. In the last game, I felt like we did a good job of defending him and he still comes away with 20 points."

Marsh is looking at tonight's matchup as the possible determinant of the regular season champion.

"The game is important because it's for the conference lead," Marsh said. "The winner could very well end up as the conference champion."

Deans, on the other hand, is approaching the game as just another conference game.

"I'm not playing this up as a big game," Deans said. "I just want our kids to play like they have the last four or five games."

"The kids are smart enough to know that this is a big game," Deans said. "I just want our kids to play hard and concentrate at both ends and I think we'll be all right. I like for them to play the best they can and concentrate on what they're doing and when they do that, the winning will take care of itself."

The Pirates won only one event on the day, the 400-yard medley relay. The team of George Walters, Raymond Kennedy, Andy Johns and Erick Hoyos swam home in 3:29.60 to win the event.

Other placings by the men included: the 200 freestyle relay team of Hoyos, Billy Haughton, Nick Pelligrino and John Springer, fourth in 1:27.20; J.D. Lewis, third in 4:37.81, Andy Jeter, fourth in 4:39.50, Mark Cook, fifth in 4:40.20 and Johns, sixth in 4:39.50 in the 500 freestyle; Ted Christianson second in 1:55.80, Springer third in 1:56.41, Kennedy fourth in 1:56.50 and Tom Holston fifth in 1:46.40 in the 200 individual medley; Hoyos fifth in 21.87 in the 50 freestyle and Perry Smith 13th in the 1-meter diving in 308.16.

Navy leads the women's standings with 247 while Madison was second with 181. William & Mary was third with 153 followed by East Carolina with 137, American with 124, Wilmington with 99 and Richmond with 94.

The 200 freestyle relay team of Carolyn Green, Leslie Wilson, Wendy Smith and Erin Reilly finished sixth in 1:45.10. Green was fifth in 5:12.10 and Chantal Morris was sixth in 5:12.20 in the 500 freestyle; Wilson was eighth in the 200 individual medley in 2:12.78, the 400 medley relay team of Smith, Meredith Bridgers, Patti Walsh and Page Holt were fourth in 4:05.10, while Sherry Campbell was fourth in the 1-meter diving with a score of 389.10.

Jennifer Muench, in the consolation heat of the 200 IM, finished ninth in 2:12.71 but set a new freshman and varsity record for the Lady Pirates.

"The guys are swimming great and I hope they can keep it up," Coach Rick Kobe said. A lack of depth is hurting the women in their quest for the title.

The meet continues through Saturday.

Whitfield Girls Win League Title

GRIMESLAND — G.R. Whitfield swept a pair of junior high school basketball games from Chicod Thursday.

In the boys game, Whitfield took a 59-29 victory over Chicod. Whitfield was led by Alkiwaun Thompson with 16 points, while Isaac Blount had 13. Chicod was led by Michael Moore with 13. Whitfield finished with a 7-7 overall record and 4-2 in the conference.

Whitfield won the girls' game, 36-28. Lakeesha Simpson led Whitfield with 16 points while Shannon Thomas added 10. Chicod was led by Page with 10.

Whitfield's girls end at 8-6, 6-0 in the conference, winning the divisional championship.

Schrader Draws Pole For Busch Clash

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Ken Schrader drew the pole position in a blind drawing Thursday to determine the starting lineup for Sunday's Busch Clash NASCAR race at Daytona International Speedway.

Winston Cup rivals Bill Elliott and Rusty Wallace drew the last two starting positions in the 13-car field of pole winners from last season.

"I was thinking about it when I saw Bill draw 13th," Wallace said. "I thought, 'Wouldn't that be something if I got 12th?' It's kind of funny. All last year we ran one-two and, son-of-a-gun, here we are again."

Ricky Rudd will start next to Schrader in the front row for the $230,000 race.

'Personal Fouls' Set To Go On Sale

RALEIGH (AP) — The book "Personal Fouls," billed by its publisher as an inside look at North Carolina State University's basketball program, will be distributed to booksellers next week, area book dealers said.

C. Robert Guy, manager of Triangle News in Durham, said a representative of Simon & Schuster told him Thursday that copies of the book would be shipped beginning Monday.

"Simon & Schuster notified us that the shipping date was the 13th, as originally planned," Guy said.

Guy said he had received a call Thursday from Alvin Williams, a Simon & Schuster representative in North Carolina, and had been told of the shipping schedule.

Williams said in a telephone interview with The News and Observer of Raleigh that he did not know when the book would be shipped.

"I don't want to say it's not true. It's not out of the realm of possibility. I don't know anything about that at this point in time," said Adam Rothberg, a spokesman for Pocket Books, a division of Simon & Schuster.

Promotional material for the book has touted the book as an inside look at Coach Jim Valvano's 1986-87 Wolfpack squad. A copy of the book's dust jacket, which was obtained by The News and Observer in January, contained allegations of corruption within the program.

The jacket reported that, among other things, players had received cash and cars and had positive drug tests kept secret; that players had received drugs to mask positive drug tests; and that millions of dollars raised by the private Wolfpack Club booster organization had been distributed secretly by Valvano and the club.

N.C. State officials have denied any wrongdoing and attorneys for the university have threatened to sue Simon & Schuster.

Hill Leading Senior PGA Tourney

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Professional golf has been a losing proposition for Mike Hill, who's hoping the best days of his career are ahead of him on the Senior PGA Tour.

Hill, returning from an eight-year layoff from full-time competitive golf, shot a 5-under-par 67 Thursday to take a two-stroke lead over Al Geiberger after the opening round of the PGA Seniors Championship.

"I felt like if I could shoot 72 or 73, that would be a pretty good score," said Hill, who had six birdies and one bogey on the 6,530-yard Champion course at PGA National.

"I think it's pretty amazing," he added. "It sort of tickled me to show myself that I could still play."

A three-time winner in 16 seasons, Hill played a limited schedule for five years before leaving the regular PGA Tour altogether in 1986.

He returned to his 150-acre farm in Brooklyn, Mich., and later bought a nine-hole golf course he operated in his hometown while awaiting his 50th birthday and the chance to play with the seniors.

Michigan Tops No. 8 Iowa

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

If you're playing Michigan and the Wolverines have 99 points, pull the plug. Turn out the lights. You don't have a chance.

The 10th-ranked Wolverines' 108-107 double overtime victory over No. 8 Iowa on Thursday night was their 50th in as many games when they went over 100 points. Fifty and oh. There seems to be an obvious trend developing here. When a team scores more than 100 points it better win the game.

It was the eighth time this season Michigan has gone over 100 points and the last time the Wolverines did lose in triple figures was a 116-103 defeat to Purdue in the 1969-70 season.

The latest high-scoring victory came as Loy Vaught scored Michigan's final six points, including the game-winning layup with two seconds to play. The heroics came after Michigan blew an 18-point lead over the final 9½ minutes of regulation.

"You can say we blew the lead, but I'm going to tell you, Iowa is relentless," Michigan coach Bill Frieder said. "They've got depth. They didn't play fairly well in the first half, but they were really relentless in the second half."

The overtime was the Wolverines' chance to show they could come back.

Frieder said his team kept its poise after falling behind by six points in the first overtime and five in the second.

"You have to give my kids credit for hanging in there right to the end," he said. "I thought we did a great job in the last three minutes and in the overtimes of getting our timeouts and regulating the fouls."

In other games involving Top Twenty teams, No. 1 Arizona beat Oregon 78-57, No. 5 Oklahoma downed No. 3 Missouri 112-105, No. 17 North Carolina State defeated No. 6 North Carolina 98-88, No. 7 Illinois held off No. 16 Ohio State 62-60, No. 13 Indiana cruised past Northwestern 72-56, No. 15 West Virginia extended the nation's longest winning streak to 17 games with an 81-73 victory over Marshall, No. 18 Stanford beat Washington State 65-53 and Fullerton State defeated No. 19 Nevada-Las Vegas 93-92 in overtime.

Glen Rice led Michigan, 18-4 overall and 6-3 in the Big Ten, with 24 points, while Sean Higgins scored 22, including three 3-pointers in the first overtime.

"Anytime you work that hard, come that close, it is a tough loss," Iowa coach Tom Davis said after his team fell to 17-5 and 5-4 and suffered its first loss in 12 home games. "They just don't come much tougher than that."

Senior Roy Marble led Iowa with a career-high 32 points after going 1-for-7 and scoring only two points in the first half. B.J. Armstrong and Ed Horton added 19 points each for the Hawkeyes.

Marble's jumper and Matt Bullard's three-point play after an offensive rebound gave Iowa a 105-100 lead with 2:19 left in the second overtime. But Iowa got only one more field goal the rest of the way and Vaught took charge.

Arizona 78, Oregon 57

Arizona was forced to find another source for points when the Ducks held its all-time leading scorer, Sean Elliott, to just 10 points. The Wildcats, 18-2 overall and 12-1 in the Pac-10, led 39-33 at halftime when Matt Muehlebach scored the first eight points of the second half and the rout was on.

Anthony Cook led Arizona with 20 points, while Frank Johnson, Richard Lucas and Keith Reynolds led the Ducks, 8-13 and 3-8, with 12 points each.

Oklahoma 112, Missouri 105

It was impressive Missouri even stayed close considering Tigers coach Norm Stewart was hospitalized after blacking out on the team flight earlier in the day. He was suffering from a bleeding ulcer and fatigue. Six-year assistant Rich Daly had little time for his head coaching debut against the Sooners at home, who had won 24 in a row and 88 of 90 at Lloyd Noble Center, which was filled with a record crowd of 11,734.

Not only did Missouri stay close, the Tigers, 20-4, led 21-5 five minutes into the game. The Sooners, 20-3, settled down and eventually rode Stacey King's 32 points, including a three-point play with 55 seconds left, to earn a tie for first in the Big Eight at 6-1 with Missouri, which had an 11-game winning streak snapped.

The score was 53-53 at halftime, and the largest lead for either team was four points until the closing minutes.

Byron Irvin led Missouri with 22 points.

Illinois 62, Ohio St. 60

Illinois' Steve Bardo held Jay Burson under 10 points for the first time in 34 games and the Buckeyes missed a couple of chances for a tie in the final seconds. Illinois improved to 19-3 overall and remained tied for second in the Big Ten at 6-3, 2½ games behind Indiana.

Burson, who entered the game averaging 20 points, made just three of 11 shots from the field and finished with nine points.

Nick Anderson's 22 points led the Fighting Illini, who didn't clinch the victory until controlling a loose ball with one second to play after the Buckeyes' Jerry Francis and Perry Carter each missed jumpers in the final seconds. Ohio State, which was led by Carter's 15 points, dropped to 16-6 and 5-4.

Indiana 72, Northwestern 56

Jay Edwards scored 18 of his 24 points on 3-pointers as the Hoosiers won for the 16th time in 17 games and remained 2½ games in front in the Big Ten race at 9-1.

Indiana, 19-5, broke from a 35-35 tie with a 10-0 run that was started by freshman Eric Anderson, who also had 24 points. Freshman Evan Pedersen led Northwestern, 8-12 and 1-9, with 18 points.

W. Virginia 81, Marshall 73

The Mountaineers extended the nation's longest winning streak to 17 games but they weren't impressive in putting away their intrastate rival. Ten straight points by Marshall, 10-11, cut West Virginia's lead to 49-46. But Darryl Prue, who finished with 22 points, scored six of them in the Mountaineer's 11-0 run that pushed the lead to 60-46. The Thundering Herd was led by John Taff's 24 points.

Stanford 65, Washington St. 53

An 11-1 run keyed by defensive specialist Bryan McSweeney led the Cardinal to the home victory. Stanford, 18-5 and 9-3, led 49-46 with 5:05 remaining when McSweeney made three big plays in the run that kept the Cardinal two games behind Arizona in the Pac-10 Conference.

Todd Licht led Stanford with 20 points, while Brian Quinnett led Washington State, 7-13 and 2-9, with 14.

Fullerton St. 93, UNLV 92

Wayne Williams nailed a 95-foot 3-pointer at the buzzer in overtime to give the Titans their first victory over the Runnin' Rebels in 15 games and nearly six years.

The last time Fullerton State beat Nevada-Las Vegas was on Feb. 24, 1983, and the Titans have won three of 23 games in the Big West Conference rivalry.

Williams' winning shot came after Nevada-Las Vegas' Stacey Augmon made one of two free throws with four seconds left. The Runnin' Rebels have lost three of their last four games to fall to 15-6 overall and 10-2 in the conference.

The Titans, 10-10 and 5-6, needed another 3-pointer — the first of senior forward Derek Jones' career — with five seconds left in regulation for the 83-83 tie that forced the extra five-minute session.

Cedric Ceballos led Fullerton State with 26 points, while David Butler's 26 topped the Runnin' Rebels.

Jabbar Joins All-Star Team

HOUSTON (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar is a member of his 19th NBA All-Star team, but it took an injury to Los Angeles Lakers teammate Magic Johnson to get him there.

Abdul-Jabbar, who will retire at the end of his unprecedented 20th season, was selected Thursday by NBA commissioner David J. Stern to replace Johnson on the Western Conference team.

"Kareem Abdul-Jabbar had received the next highest total of votes from the NBA coaches in their selection of the All-Star reserves," Stern said. "But, more importantly, his participation in one more All-Star game is a fitting tribute to his unequalled NBA career."

The 39th annual All-Star game will be played at the Astrodome on Sunday.

Kelly Endures, Succeeds..

Peter's. His brother Bobby was the starting point guard on the powerful St. John's teams of the early 1980s. His brother Kevin played at Farleigh Dickinson while his other brothers, Owen and Sean, were both standout high school players.

As a high school junior, Kelly played alongside brother Owen on a powerful Columbia team that included Mark Bryant, now a rookie with the NBA's Portland Trail Blazers. As a senior, he averaged 17 points and five assists a game and was a Street & Smith Honorable Mention All-American.

When it came down to choosing a college, Kelly had more than a few choices and in the end considered Northeastern, Jacksonville and ECU. He chose ECU because he thought he could come in and play right away.

Instead, he sat on the bench behind Scotty Hardy and his freshman year soon developed into a nightmare. But it was more than just adjusting on the basketball court. Kelly also had to adapt off it.

Having grown up in the shadow of New York City, Kelly encountered culture shock when he arrived in Greenville. He chose to wear No. 55 as a freshman and his favorite outfit of off-the-court clothing consisted of army fatigues, a tee-shirt and bright orange running shoes. He stood out in a crowd.

"I was pretty lost," he said. "I didn't really make the adjustment. I thought it was going to be a big vacation compared to living in New Jersey. I was pretty comical. I shut myself off. I got a 3.6 grade point my first semester. I didn't come out of my room except to go to class or play basketball."

"I wanted to go home a couple of times. I'd done some hitchhiking in my time. There were a couple of nights where I had my bags packed, but I knew my father would have strangled me."

By the end of the year, Kelly decided to transfer and over the summer and signed a letter of intent to play at St. Peter's in Jersey City, N.J.

At the last minute, he decided to return to ECU. His girlfriend, Jane Wilson, helped him make the choice.

"Jane helped me," he said. "She befriended me right away. I had met her while in high school, but I didn't know she was going to ECU. She helped me make a decision. She asked me where would I be going if it wasn't for basketball? I came to a decision that I'd rather be in at ECU than in New Jersey."

But that didn't change things for Kelly as far as basketball was concerned.

He came back ready to play as a sophomore. One afternoon at a football game he was thumbing through the program and came to an ECU basketball prospectus that said junior college transfer Howard Brown was going to be the Pirates' new point guard.

"That got my confidence knocked down," he said. "Coming in, it seemed like everybody had their mind made up. But we were doing real well. We were 7-2 at one point so I accepted my role. I was happy. We had a good team, but then we had some problems."

The team bottomed out, finishing 12-16.

Brown started most of the games that year but discipline and legal problems prompted his departure from Greenville.

The following year was Steele's first and Kelly again found himself competing for a spot with a newcomer. This time it was incoming freshman Jimmy Hinton. The two split time all last year and during the beginning of this year. But Hinton quit the team in December over a lack of playing time and difference in philosophy with the ECU coaches.

That left only Kelly and he has responded. Of his 235 career assists, 86 have come this year alone. Sure, he doesn't shoot much, but in reality, Kelly said scoring is not his main responsibility in the Pirates' offensive scheme.

"It's a giant misconception," Kelly said. "They don't understand what is being asked of me by Coach Steele. In the James Madison game last time (which ECU won, 62-57), the score is tied with about two or three minutes left and I'm open behind the three-point line and the guy is playing me a little loose, but he could get on me pretty quick."

"Everybody in the stands is yelling shoot, shoot, shoot. The only person not yelling that is Coach Steele. You have to go to the people that are scoring and we've got Blue Edwards and Gus Hill on the team. Sure I'd like to shoot. You hit that shot and you're a hero. But in the scheme of things to win basketball games at ECU we need to get the basketball in the hands of Blue Edwards. As short as we are, every possession is important. You can't just take a shot and pound the backboards. We don't have the size. Every possession is important and we have to get a good shot."

And the main responsibility for making sure that happens falls on to Kelly's shoulders. So far, he's fulfilled his part of the bargain.

Tower leaves Washington hotel for confirmation rounds

Tower Nomination Awaits Panel Vote

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — John Tower's nomination as defense secretary was in limbo today as Congress left town for a week-long recess, with many Democrats saying they need answers to questions about Tower's conduct before they can make a decision.

Tower, meanwhile, didn't shy away from the spotlight, appearing Thursday night with President Bush at a joint session of Congress where Bush unveiled his budget for fiscal 1990, including a slowdown in defense spending.

White House aides said Tower has been advising Bush on military and budget issues, and sat next to Bush at a Cabinet meeting to review the new budget.

In contrast to the Democrats, Republicans rushed to support Tower, saying that he was the victim of unfounded allegations and rumors.

After Bush's speech, Congress adjourned until Feb. 21, the first day the Senate Armed Services Committee could vote on the nomination of Tower, a former Texas senator and one-time chairman of the panel.

Tower would have to be confirmed by the full Senate before he could officially take control of the Pentagon, which is being run on an acting basis by William H. Taft IV, deputy defense secretary under former President Reagan.

Senate leaders agreed late Thursday to bring Tower's nomination to a floor vote in an expedited fashion after the holiday, assuming investigators have finished their work, according to Walt Riker, a spokesman for Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

Others in the meeting were Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the armed services committee, and Sen. John Warner, R-Va., the panel's ranking Republican.

One deadline facing the new defense secretary is arriving within 60 days at specifics on how to achieve $6.4 billion in reductions in Pentagon spending. Bush's spending plan cuts that amount from the Reagan administration budget unveiled last month.

The most recent holdup in Tower's protracted nomination process came when Nunn postponed the vote after the White House said the FBI needed more time to investigate allegations of a financial nature.

Nunn, who has said he could not support Tower if a formal vote were taken today, repeated on Thursday that he needs additional information.

Congressman Backs Fairness Doctrine

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Broadcasters are going to have a tough time convincing Congress they can provide balanced coverage of controversial issues without a new Fairness Doctrine, a congressman says.

Rep. Matthew J. Rinaldo, R-N.J., said at a hearing Thursday that the doctrine from 1949 until its repeal in 1987 served as a mild reminder to broadcasters "of their obligations under the law."

"It is not the unblinking eye of government on our broadcasters," said Rinaldo, the ranking minority member of the House Commerce and Energy telecommunications and finance subcommittee.

Rinaldo added that while he was encouraged by broadcasters' performance since the Federal Communications Commission repealed the doctrine, "I think the facts of life are such that they have ... a long way to go before they're going to convince Congress that the doctrine is not needed any longer."

In repealing the doctrine, the FCC said it violated the First Amendment and did not serve the public interest. Broadcasters appearing before the subcommittee Thursday argued that the doctrine was a "chilling" restraint on broadcast journalism and was an anachronism in an era of new technology and media diversity.

John Spain, news director of WBRZ-TV in Baton Rouge, La., said the mere threat of a Fairness Doctrine complaint can make broadcasters hesitant to cover controversial issues.

"The time and money stations expend whenever licenses are threatened by a fairness complaint clearly inhibits and harasses broadcasters," Spain told the panel.

But Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., the subcommittee chairman, said writing the Fairness Doctrine into law would be the subcommittee's first order of business.

"The Fairness Doctrine did not chill broadcaster speech, nor did it infringe on broadcasters' First Amendment rights," Markey said. "The Fairness Doctrine did, however, ensure that broadcasters did not infringe the First Amendment rights of the rest of us — those of us without broadcast licenses."

Commerce Committee Chairman John D. Dingell, D-Mich., reintroduced a Fairness Doctrine bill when Congress returned to Washington in January. Congress in 1987 passed a bill to make the doctrine a law, but President Reagan vetoed the measure. The House passed the measure again, but it did not come to a vote in the Senate.

Quayle Heads Regulatory Panel

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Vice President Dan Quayle has a new responsibility in the Bush administration, heading a Council on Competitiveness to deal with regulatory questions affecting U.S. industry.

President Bush announced creation of the council in his budget message Thursday night to Congress.

Bush gave few details, except to say that the vice president would be the chairman of the council and that others on it would be the members of the Cabinet "most involved with competitiveness issues and problems."

The budget description said the council will continue the work of the Council on Regulatory Relief, a panel that Bush headed when he was vice president under President Reagan, and will review regulatory issues bearing on the competitiveness of American industry.

"Barriers erected by government — regulatory and otherwise — can frustrate innovation and the translation of technological and scientific discoveries into marketplace production and distribution," Bush's budget message said.

Today, Quayle was travelling to Florida for a pair of speeches in which he planned to discuss his trip last week to Venezuela and El Salvador, the first foreign mission by a Bush administration official.

Quayle was speaking to the Anti-Defamation League conference in Palm Beach, and later to a dinner of the Cuban-American Bar Association in Florida.

The vice president has said that with very few ongoing assignments from Bush, his principal role is to be an adviser to the president.

Besides the new competitiveness council, Quayle's only official duties are to head the national commission on space and to preside over the Senate.

Quayle represented the United States last Thursday at the inauguration of Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez, where he held get-acquainted talks with several heads of state.

He also visited El Salvador, where he delivered a stern message on the need for improvement in that country's human rights record.

Brothers Buried Side By Side

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MADISONVILLE, Ky. — Vicky and Bill Bates buried their young sons side by side in twin white caskets, taking scant comfort in knowing that the boys, inseparable in life, had died together when they drowned in an icy pond.

"I know those little guys are arm in arm somewhere," Mrs. Bates said. "Everything Chad did, Adam did ... They always were together."

The boys were buried Thursday, three days after drowning in the pond on their parents' farm near Madisonville.

"It is not how long the blossom lasts," the Rev. John Meredith said during the service. "It's whether we loved it before it's gone. And we certainly can say we did love these boys."

Family, friends and classmates from the Roman Catholic elementary school which the boys attended wept quietly as Bates leaned over the caskets to kiss his boys goodbye.

Chad, 9, and Adam, 7, went out to play on the farm Monday after being forced to stay home from school because of icy roads in western Kentucky. They drowned after being in the pond about 35 minutes, authorities said.

to retired workers. Twenty-one percent of the companies pick up the entire tab, while 74 percent of the retirees pay less than half of their bills, according to the survey done by the Wyatt Co., a consulting firm.

Current accounting rules do not obligate companies to report estimated retiree benefit expenses or to reserve money for them. They have to report such expenses only as they are paid.

Democrat Ronald Brown Steps In As First Black Party Chief

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Ronald H. Brown is stepping in as chairman of the Democratic Party with a pledge to reach out to the moderates and conservatives who opposed him because of his ties to Edward M. Kennedy and Jesse Jackson.

As he made the rounds Thursday of meetings of party officials, Brown acknowledged that many Democrats had been reluctant to support his bid for the chairmanship.

It no longer mattered, he said, whether people were early supporters or late. "Most of all we've got to be united as a party."

Brown, who will be the first black to lead a major party, was one of five candidates when he started his bid for the chairmanship. He quickly outdistanced his opponents and was unopposed as the Democratic National Committee prepared to elect a successor today to Paul G. Kirk Jr.

A 47-year-old partner in one of Washington's largest and most politically active law firms — Patton, Boggs & Blow — Brown was deputy manager of Kennedy's 1980 presidential campaign and then served as general counsel and staff director of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

He was a top adviser to Jackson in the late stages of his 1988 presidential campaign and was given credit for helping unify the party at its Atlanta convention last summer.

Brown grew up in Harlem where his father was manager of the Theresa Hotel. But his parents, both graduates of Howard University, sent their only child to predominantly white schools on Manhattan's Upper East Side.

That pattern continued into college, where Brown was the only black in the class of 1962 at Middlebury College in Vermont.

"I have maintained a significant interest in politics over the years," Brown wrote in autobiographical notes for his 25th reunion yearbook at Middlebury.

His involvement with the liberal wing of his party was the focus of much of the opposition to Brown when he announced his bid for the chairmanship.

But once he clinched the job, even his most vocal opponents rallied around the chairman-to-be.

"I say let's give him a chance," said John Baker, chairman of the Alabama Democratic Party, who once threatened to boycott the national party if Brown became chairman.

"A lot of Democrats feel excluded, feel rejected," said Baker. "They feel there's no room in the party for them because they are moderate or conservative in philosophy."

The Alabama chairman said it would be "helpful, first of all, if he'd acknowledge that we've got that problem."

Brown did just that.

"The South is crucial to the future of the Democratic Party," Brown told a meeting of the Southern Caucus of the Democratic National Committee.

"I don't want to be the chairman of a party that writes off any region of the country," he said to Democrats aware their presidential candidates have received none of the South's electoral votes in the last two elections.

Brown urged Democrats to "speak forcefully" on defense, crime and drugs, issues he said are in the forefront of voter concerns.

Flu Hits Nation Coast To Coast

ATLANTA (AP) — The winter flu season has hit full stride from coast to coast, and 1989 is shaping up as a fairly typical year for the annual scourge, according to the federal Centers for Disease Control.

"There have been numerous outbreaks requiring closings of schools, and where everybody's feeling miserable," Dr. Robert Cannon, a CDC viral specialist, said Thursday. "I wouldn't feel uncomfortable saying there is an 'epidemic' of influenza. Of course, there is every year."

Last week, for the second week in a row, the percentage of deaths attributable to either pneumonia or influenza exceeded the expected statistical standard for this time of year, Cannon said.

In the first week of the month there were 982 deaths attributed to the two illnesses in the 121 U.S. cities the CDC regularly monitors. The agency does not compile separate statistics for flu alone. During the same period last year, 820 people died.

Flu hits its highest level during the winter months in the United States, and the level "has reached about as high as it was last year," Cannon said. "It's a typical year."

Researchers with the Atlanta-based CDC don't keep track of exactly how many people have influenza, or "flu-like illness," or even pneumonia. What they do know is that states from coast to coast have reported at least some confirmed flu cases.

The 1988-89 flu vaccine, recommended by the CDC, contains protection against three different flu strains seen late last winter: the Victoria flu, the Sichuan flu and the Taiwan flu.

All three appear to be back this year, with the Victoria flu seen most frequently, Cannon said.

Webster Contends Western Europe Helped Develop Chemical Weapons

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — CIA Director William H. Webster said Thursday that Western European companies had knowingly played a crucial role in developing chemical weapons not only in Libya, but also in Iran, Iraq and Syria.

In what he termed an "equally disturbing" trend, Webster told a Senate committee that foreign companies were helping Third World nations develop ballistic missiles to deliver chemical and biological weapons that some of those countries see as the "poor man's answer to nuclear weapons." Webster did not identify the companies.

The Los Angeles Times reported Wednesday that U.S. officials had concluded that West Germany's largest aerospace company, Messerschmidt-Boelkow-Blohm, and SNIA-BPD, a subsidiary of the Italian industrial giant FIAT, had played a key role in a joint Argentine-Egyptian project to develop a medium-range ballistic missile.

Iraq, according to U.S. officials, had provided financial backing for the two-stage, solid-fuel Condor-2 missile, which is expected to have a range of up to 800 miles. Some analysts expect the first test launch in the next two to three months.

A spokesman for SNIA-BPD, Gualberto Ranieri, said Thursday that the company had never transferred missile technology to Egypt, Libya or Iraq and had ended its cooperation with Argentina's rocket development program in 1985. Ranieri said that FIAT and its subsidiaries had not participated in the Condor-2 project.

As Webster testified before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, five members of the House of Representatives introduced a bill to impose sanctions on U.S. or foreign companies selling restricted ballistic missile technology. Several similar bills proposing sanctions against companies aiding chemical weapons programs are already before the Congress.

At the same time, a senior West German official, responding to evidence of German companies' involvement in spreading advanced weapons technology in the Middle East, met in Washington with U.S. officials for talks on export controls.

The U.S. government's disclosure last month of a German — and to a lesser extent, Japanese — role in a Libyan plant chemical weapons plant has galvanized political interest in Washington in the growing spread of such cheap and simple weapons of mass destruction, particularly in the volatile Middle East.

In his appearance before the Senate committee, Webster reaffirmed the U.S. conclusion that West German and Japanese companies had played a key role in building a Libyan chemical weapons plant that intelligence analysts believe to be the single largest in the Third World.

Cargo Ship Sinks After Collision

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — A cargo ship with 46 crew members sank today after colliding with a Miami-based cruise ship off the northern Cuban coast, the U.S. Coast Guard said. Four sailors were missing.

At least one crew member of the 320-foot Cuban ship Capitan San Luis was injured in the 6 a.m. collision with the Celebration cruise ship, said Coast Guard spokesman Jeff Karonis.

The 734-foot, Liberian-registry cruise ship reported only minor damage and was participating in the search for more survivors, Karonis said.

Forty-two of the cargo ship's 46 crew members have been rescued, he said, including one whose foot was severed.

The rear of the cargo ship, designed to carry cement, sank immediately after the collision, Karonis said.

Poll Shows Women Take Life Easier

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Today's generation of affluent women between the ages of 40 and 65 are confident and relaxed in contrast to the "mad housewife" of the 1960s, according to a new poll.

Ninety-five percent of the women who responded to the poll, released Thursday, take pleasure in their lives and 94 percent believe they can get what they want from life, now and in the future.

Fifty-nine percent said they are experiencing the best years of their lives, the survey said.

"Women of this age defy and debunk every myth about them," declared Lear's magazine, which commissioned the poll by Lou Harris and Associates. "The great majority believe they are richer, stronger, more accomplished, more serene and happier than they have ever been."

"The portrait that emerges ... shows a confident, relaxed generation of women — in sharp contrast to the 'mad housewife' of the 60's — who enjoy life and believe it is possible for them to get what they want out of it," said the survey.

The pollsters, using random-digit dialing, interviewed 701 college-educated women, ages 40 to 65, whose households earned at least $40,000 a year. The nationwide survey, with a margin of error of plus or minus 4 percent, was conducted from Aug. 30 to Oct. 3.

The women reported that the best things in life are, indeed, free. Ninety-four percent consider a strong identity to be very important to a high quality of living, including 43 percent who consider it to be "absolutely essential."

Fifty-three percent ranked love as the most important thing in life; 97 percent ranked it "very important."

 It is all very well to contract for nine tricks at no trump. But that presupposes your ability to collect the required number of tricks. South didn't quite fulfill that condition on this hand from a rubber bridge game.

South's hand is a nightmare—a balanced powerhouse with an unstoppable major suit. His way of handling the matter was as good as any. His method of playing the hand, however, left something to be desired.

West led the top of his club sequence, and the play did not take long. Declarer won in hand, crossed to the king of hearts and finessed the ten of spades, losing to the jack. He won the club return, re-entered dummy with the ace of hearts and tried another spade finesse. When that, too, lost, declarer could come to no more than eight tricks.

It was most unlucky to find both missing spade honors wrong—East was a 3-10-1 favorite to hold either the king or the jack. And double-dummy declarer can make the hand by stripping West of exit cards and then throwing him in with a diamond to force a lead up to the ace-queen of spades. However, there is a sure-trick line available against any distribution.

Look at the spade spots. Declarer is missing only two key spades. He can set up a second trick in spades by force, regardless of the location of the defenders' honor cards in the suit. After winning the first trick, declarer should simply bang out the ace and queen of spades, forcing out the king. When he next gains the lead, he continues with the ten of spades to set up the nine while there is still a heart entry on the table.

Akihito Opens Japan's Parliament

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Japan's parliament resumed business today with an address by Emperor Akihito as it faced the prospect that a stock scandal would stall debate on the government's budget for the next fiscal year.

The legislative body opened its regular session with the new monarch's first appearance in the Japanese parliament since he ascended the Chrysanthemum throne following the Jan. 7 death of his father, Emperor Hirohito.

The 55-year-old monarch, clad in a formal morning suit, said Japan is expected to promote world peace and prosperity and act as a nation that cherishes culture and nature.

"I sincerely hope the Diet will fully perform its mission as the highest organ of state power," Akihito said in his brief speech.

Later today, Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita and other top officials of the majority Liberal Democratic Party addressed the parliament, or Diet.

Takeshita reiterated earlier pledges for political reform to "restore the people's trust in politics."

"All of us who have positions of responsibility in politics are being called upon to take the initiative in exercising restraint ... and in ensuring that our positions are upright," Takeshita said as members of the political opposition jeered.

Iranians Say They Took 'Too Big A Bite'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Top Iranian officials say their country took "too big a bite" trying to defeat Iraq, and pointed to U.S. intervention in the Persian Gulf as having tipped the scales in their war against Iraq.

In a series of unusually frank interviews with the official Islamic Republic News Agency, President Ali Khamenei, Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani and Chief Justice Musavi Ardebili also said the Islamic revolution is still a long way from achieving its goals.

The comments on the Iran-Iraq war were the first by senior figures to shed light on the inner workings of Tehran's military planning and its eventual decision to accept the U.N.-mediated cease-fire last summer after eight years of fighting.

The interviews, monitored in Nicosia in recent days, came as Iran celebrates the 10th anniversary of the Islamic Revolution with the leadership divided over the country's future.

IRNA quoted Rafsanjani, also acting commander-in-chief of Iran's army, as saying of Iran's aim of military victory: "We took too big a bite."

"Yes, we wanted something, but were not able to get it, and that was military victory. If we had moved with a bit more planning maybe it would not have been so far off," he said.

Rafsanjani is considered the second most powerful figure in Iran after spiritual leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Ardebili noted that Iran suffered a severe jolt when the United States and several European navies intervened in the Persian Gulf to protect shipping from Iranian attack.

"We saw that the United States was prepared to send its navy into the Persian Gulf and pull the world along with it," he said. "We had not taken that into account."

He noted: "I am among those who believe that the war should have been stopped after the liberation of Khorramshahr."

The Iraqis were driven out of that southern Iranian port city on the Shatt al-Arab waterway in 1982, nearly two years after they invaded Iran following border skirmishes.

Tehran accepted a U.N. cease-fire resolution last July after a series of battlefield defeats. The cease-fire took effect Aug. 20.

Jamaica Returns Manley To Power

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KINGSTON, Jamaica — Michael Manley, who once courted Cuba but now seeks U.S. support, returned to Jamaica's helm today after trouncing Prime Minister Edward Seaga in elections marred by gunfire and charges of fraud.

With 65 percent of the ballots counted, the government-run Jamaica Broadcasting Corp. network declared Manley's party the winner of at least 34 of Parliament's 60 seats. Seaga's party had taken eight seats and 18 seats were undecided.

The party winning a majority of parliamentary seats forms the government for a five-year term. Seaga's party now holds 60 seats.

The latest returns today showed Manley's left-leaning People's National Party leading Seaga's right-of-center Jamaica Labor Party by a 57 percent to 43 percent margin, or 429,680 votes to 324,486.

The balloting was Jamaica's first nationally contested election since 1980, when an estimated 700 people were killed in political violence over a nine-month campaign.

The killing of a pregnant housewife Thursday raised to at least 12 the number of people killed in politically related violence since the campaign opened Jan. 15. Seaga said Glenna Williams was shot a minute before he arrived to vote in Kingston.

The campaign had been shortened to just over three weeks because of fears of violence at the height of the island's tourist season. Tourism, the main industry, has bounced back after Hurricane Gilbert raked the island on Sept. 12, killed 45 people and left about $1 billion in damage.

Across the Caribbean island, about 10,000 police and soldiers were deployed to maintain order at more than 6,000 polling stations, but skirmishes broke out.

Many polling stations closed early because of violence, and soldiers fired shots and used tear gas in many instances to break up arguments.

Attacks were confined mainly to slums in Kingston, the capital.

The Godfather Of Soul Pleads His Case

By Ron Harris
LAT-UP NEWS SERVICE

It was day 49 of his six-year prison stretch, and inmate No. 155413 had finished his morning duties.

Inside State Park (S.C.) Correctional Institute, a hospital transformed five years ago into a minimum security facility, the Godfather of Soul, had risen at 5 a.m. to help prepare breakfast for about 150 mostly older prisoners.

As he does every day, 55-year-old James Brown — sentenced for failing to stop for a police car, a felony in South Carolina — later telephoned his wife and his Augusta, Ga., office to confer with the staff assigned to maintain operations. There were calls to Universal Attractions, his booking agency for some 30 years, his record label, Scotti Bros. Records, other associates and friends, including the Rev. Al Sharpton. On this morning, he also returned a reporter's call.

Prison, Soul Brother No. 1 said with customary bravado, might slow him down, but he will be damned if it is going to stop him.

"I've been in slavery all my life," Brown said via the prison telephone. "Ain't nothing new. It just means I don't have to answer a whole lot of phone calls. Ain't nothing changed for me but the address. I'm not worried. I feel fantastic. I'm James Brown 24 hours a day."

"I just glad I'm in this business. I can take one song and it's restoration for my whole career."

But as much as Brown tried to maintain a positive and upbeat attitude, there was a weariness to his voice and a bitterness in his comments.

"I'm a little disgusted. I feel that I haven't been treated fair, no justice for the things that I've done over the last four decades. I did the 'Don't Be a Dropout' campaign with Vice President (Hubert) Humphrey. I stopped the riots. I always tried to help. Had it been a man of another race, he wouldn't be where I am. There's no doubt about it. They wouldn't have allowed it."

"I feel sad for Dr. (Martin Luther) King (Jr.). I feel sad for Elijah Muhammad, Malcolm X, Benjamin Bannaker because they fought for nothing. We're right where we were in 1968 when Dr. King died. The only thing is, we had jobs then; now we don't have jobs. When is America going to wake up and live and stop discriminating?"

Brown said that he has been moved by the hundreds of letters that have flooded into the prison, but he notes with some irritation the lack of support from his peers in the music business.

"The only entertainer who has spoken with me is Little Richard," he said. "The rest of them is jiving. The ones I helped personally, which is about 90 percent of the entertainers, I don't even think about them. I don't even wait for their help."

It was almost inevitable to some, while inconceivable to most that the musical legend and cultural hero known as Mr. Dynamite would wind up where he started 39 years ago — alone, behind bars, a convicted criminal with an uncertain future.

Like many of Brown's friends, Fred Daviss, Brown's finance manager for nearly 15 years, saw it coming. When Daviss stopped by Brown's office in Augusta a week before the incident that landed Brown in prison, he saw a different man.

"It wasn't the James Brown I know," Daviss said. "He was totally out of it. I had never seen him high in the office before. I told his wife, 'We've got to get him some help or he's going to wind up in bad trouble.'"

Around the country, fans and friends have been mounting efforts to get Brown out of prison. Last month in Augusta, Brown's attorneys won an important first step when the judge there ruled that an additional six-year sentence would run concurrent with his present term.

Brown still faces a hearing on the violation of probation for a previous drug and traffic conviction. If that is set aside, Brown's earliest release could come through a work-release arrangement. Outside of that, Brown comes up for probation in August 1991.

Meanwhile, in New York, record producer Van Silk and rap artist Mellie Mel have launched a "Free James Brown" movement, complete with black-and-white buttons. They are hoping to get one million signatures to persuade South Carolina penal authorities to show leniency. Plans are also under way for a James Brown benefit concert. Silk said. Numerous radio stations in urban areas around the country have launched letter-writing campaigns.

Brown said that he had hoped that it would not come to this.

"I thought the president (Ronald Reagan), since I supported him, would step in and help me," he said. "I served on his task force for the last seven years. Mr. Bush is in now. I figure then when they get around to it, they will come to my aid. Hopefully, they will understand that there is a man in jail for nothing. All of those other people that got in trouble and got out, I'm asking that they straighten out my business so I can get out and help the Afro-American culture in this country, bring them some ideas, like I did in the '60s and '70s and '80s."

"It's hard to believe that when a man outdoes Beethoven, Bach and Brahms, they don't have a place for him."

Beatlemania Celebrates Its 25th Year

"They were doing things nobody was doing. Their chords were outrageous, just outrageous, and their harmonies made it all valid. ... Everybody else thought they were for the teenyboppers, that they were going to pass right away. But it was obvious to me that they had staying power. I knew they were pointing the direction where music had to go." — Bob Dylan.

NEW YORK — The Plaza Hotel was in for a jolt when four mopheads from Liverpool settled in a 12th floor suite for a short winter's stay in February 1964.

They dove into room service: J&B Scotch with Coca-Cola. They binged on "jam butties" (butter and jelly sandwiches), corn flakes and ice cream, and left bowls full of stubbed out "ciggies." The first morning, 37 sacks of mail arrived. And girls.

Lots of girls. Screaming, screeching, silly schoolchildren who would kill their grandmothers for a glimpse of John, Paul, George and Ringo.

The lasses dressed as chambermaids and tried to sneak into the suite. They posed as record company representatives. Anything. They stormed the hotel's revolving doors only to be dumped unceremoniously on the street with legions of their shrieking sisters.

It was the first magical mystery tour for The Beatles. They landed at Kennedy Airport on Feb. 7 to make their legendary first appearance on "The Ed Sullivan Show" on Feb. 9.

For 15 days, the country became inflamed with Beatlemania, and it would be years before the fever would die down.

They were cocky and sure at their news conferences. At one, John Lennon was asked how much money he expected to earn during the tour. His response: "About half a crown. Depends on the tax. How much have you got?" And to what did they owe their success? "Good press agent," John replied.

Ringo Starr was asked what he thought of Beethoven. His reply:

"Great. 'Specially his poems." It was a lark.

No one at that moment realized the rich gift and legacy to emerge from the four musicians. They went on to sell more than any group in pop history. Indeed, after their appearance on "The Ed Sullivan Show," the Beatles sold 2.5 million records in the United States in less than a month.

Lennon is dead now, shot outside his Manhattan apartment building on Dec. 8, 1980.

George Harrison lives with his second wife, Olivia, and 9-year-old son, Dhani, in a fortress-like Gothic mansion with spires and turrets at Henley-on-Thames in western England. He has lived out of the limelight for nearly 20 years, but reemerged somewhat in 1987 to give his first full concert in 15 years in July at Wembley Arena and to record a hit single, "Got My Mind Set On You," which topped the U.S. Cash Box music chart in January 1988.

He also has recorded with Bob Dylan, Roy Orbison and Tom Petty in a tongue-in-cheek group known as the Traveling Wilburys, and he is co-owner and an executive producer of the independent British film company, Handmade Films ("The Missionary," "Life of Brian").

Starr spent five weeks in an American alcoholism clinic last fall with his wife, actress Barbara Bach. They live in a secluded estate near Ascot in southern England. He became the first Beatle grandfather when his 20-year-old son, Zak Starkey, eldest of three children from his first wife, Maureen, became a father on Sept. 7, 1985.

Paul McCartney is working on an album, which includes some songs co-written by Elvis Costello, to be released later this year. He has too many commitments to consider the 25th anniversary, his spokesman Bernard Doherty said. "There have been a number of anniversaries in recent years. There will be lots of anniversaries coming up. He's still very busy making music."

McCartney said in a live radio phone-in on the BBC's Russian Service last month that the Beatles will never be revived because "to find a replacement for John is impossible."

McCartney has four children. His family lives on a fortified forest estate in Sussex in southeast England.

But in 1964, the Beatles had scarcely begun. Although wildly popular on the continent, the fabulous four and their records did not catch on in the United States until Jan. 17 when "I Want to Hold Your Hand" hit No. 1 on the Cashbox chart.

Within a year, they grossed $1.6 million in the first week's showing of their movie, "A Hard Day's Night," and Lennon's kooky book, "In His Own Write," climbed best seller lists overnight. In rapid succession, they made six hit albums, including 1967's anthem to the Summer of Love, "Sgt. Peppers Lonely Hearts Club Band."

"Sgt. Pepper" sold 2.5 million records in its first three months and stayed on the charts for a staggering 113 weeks. Capitol Records estimates the album's worldwide sales at 15 million since 1967.

This alternately melancholy, terrifyng and exhilarating record captured as no other the complex textures of its time: a supercharged, corrosively contradictory summer when hippies grooved at the Monterey Pop Festival, black emotions exploded in riots in Detroit and Newark and a war grew bloodier in Vietnam. Youthful listeners somehow heard all of this in "Sgt. Pepper," an album whose themes included Eastern culture, sweet and terrifying psychedelic fantasies, the widening gulf between young and old and, above all, loneliness.

To me, the Beatles created an excitement about being in the business itself," says songwriter and performer Christopher Cross. "They stick out to me as the greatest thing in pop music. Paul McCartney has always been, and remains, my biggest influence of all time because of song structure. He and John taught me how to write songs."

Cross, who won four Grammy Awards in 1981 for his song and LP, "Sailing," was 12 when he saw the Beatles on "Ed Sullivan."

The CBS press release heralding the Beatles' first appearance in the United States was, in retrospect low-keyed. It identified them as "The Beatles of London" — a "wildly popular quartet of English recording stars."

Sullivan, more animated than usual, handled the squealing audience as a father would a hyperactive child. He gently shushed them and made the girls promise to stay in their seats. He told the audience Elvis Presley had sent a wire wishing the Beatles "a tremendous success" in our country, introduced a commercial for Aero Shave and then swept his arm through the air as the curtain parted.

There was Paul, 21, wide-eyed and boyish, feverishly working the bass guitar and singing "All My Loving" at one microphone. George, 20, was on lead guitar. John, 23, on rhythm guitar, harmonized at another microphone. Ringo, 23, sat high above them on a platform, pounding out beats on the drums.

Paul soloed on "Til There Was You" from the Broadway show, "The Music Man." Later, after a magician did card tricks and Georgia Brown sang songs from

"Oliver," the Beatles returned with the Lennon-McCartney song, "She Loves You."

They were fresh and school boy neat in their Edwardian jackets, shirts and ties. Their hair, considered outrageously long at the time, fell in agreeable bangs across their foreheads and stopped somewhere mid-neck. The Beatle hair style eventually became as conservative as a crewcut.

After the Sullivan show, the Beatles played the Washington Coliseum in Washington, D.C. On Feb. 12, they played Carnegie Hall, where fans drowned their music in screams.

Three years later, the Beatles began to show signs of weariness and drifting apart.

In 1970, a year after the critically acclaimed "Abbey Road" was released, McCartney came out with a solo LP and a self-interview critical of the other Beatles. The LP and movie, "Let It Be," came out and by the end of the year, the group dissolved.

Bored, He Gave Up Journalism For Acting

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Meshach Taylor might never have become an actor, or found his way onto CBS's "Designing Women," if he hadn't gotten bored as a political reporter.

Taylor co-stars on the hit comedy show as Anthony Bouvier, the only regular man among the four beautiful women.

He started acting in community shows in New Orleans, where his father was dean of students at Dillard University. He continued doing roles in Indianapolis after his father moved to Indiana University as dean of the college of arts and sciences.

An early marriage while attending Florida A&M University forced Taylor to look for work. Later, when his first daughter was born, he moved back to Indianapolis.

"I got a flunky job on an FM station," he said. "They had no news at night, so I figured I could do a three-minute news report. I was the only black person at the station so they let me do it. I became a 'rip and reader.' It expanded to five minutes."

"Pretty soon I was working days. I was on the political beat with experienced reporters. Then I became the State House reporter. It was interesting for a while. But once you get involved in Indiana politics you see what a yawn it is."

After that, he set up a black arts theater to keep kids off the street, then joined the national touring company of "Hair." His acting career was launched. After "Hair," he became a part of the burgeoning theater world in Chicago and stayed for eight years, until 1979.

Taylor played the assistant director in "Buffalo Bill," the short-lived

NBC show in 1983-84 about an unbelievably arrogant and self-centered talk show host played by Dabney Coleman.

He did guest star roles on such shows as "Lou Grant," "The White Shadow" and "M-A-S-H." It seemed that his role on "Designing Women" would also be a one-shot for producer Linda Bloodworth-Thomason.

"It was for the Thanksgiving show, about half-way through the first season," Taylor said. "Linda said if the character goes I'd be back. I was off the next week, then I went back the next week and I've been there ever since. My first show I was just an ex-con on a work-release program."

Sometimes real life works its way into the shows.

"We were doing some promotional work in Lubbock, Texas, and somehow Delta Burke and I got booked into the same hotel suite," he said. "I said I was a married man. So, I called my wife and she called her boyfriend, Gerald McRaney. When we got back I told Linda and she put it into a show. We got stranded at a motel during a blizzard and ended up in the same bed. Another time, I had to help Delta get dressed."

Taylor's role on "Designing Women" has grown, as Anthony has grown into a more responsible person. He's now studying and will soon have his college degree.

"The role's gotten more substantial, both in the amount of work and in the depth of what Anthony says," said Taylor. "He's not just the wisecracker."

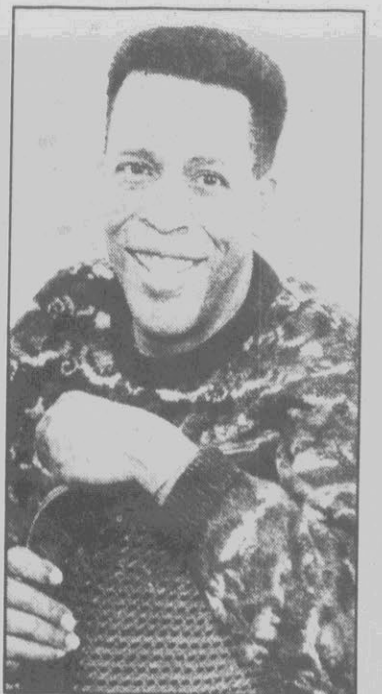

Taylor said he was much too young when he got married in college. "I never considered I'd have to get a job," he said. "What kind of a job can a black man without a college education get in Tallahassee? I got a job in a crate factory on the night shift, making $1.35 an hour. There were no safety precautions."

"It was a nightmare. The people who ran the place couldn't handle that I was working and going to college. That was too much ambition for a black man. My next job was a bellman at a hotel. Everyone else was a bellboy, but since I was in college I was a bellman. That was a good job."

Taylor also has been in such movies as "A Wedding," "Stoney Island," "Damien: Omen Two," "Another Saturday Night," "House of Games" and "Mannequin." A sequel to "Mannequin," a comedy remake of "One Touch of Venus," is in the works.

Taylor lives in Los Angeles with his second wife and three daughters, one from his first marriage.

Author Writes Book To Change Old Stereotypes

By Paul Nowell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — Warren Moore hopes her new book will help to erode the hackneyed image many Americans still have of the people who call the most remote regions of the southern Appalachian Mountains their home.

"The stereotype is they're lazy, barefooted hillbillies," said Moore, a native of North Carolina who now lives in New York City. "I had gone to the mountains of North Carolina all my life as a summer person, and this wasn't the view I had at all."

Moore, an educational consultant, spent years interviewing and photographing hundreds of residents of the Blue Ridge and Great Smokies for her new book, "Mountain Voices."

What started off as a summer project nearly a decade ago turned into a passion for the 38-year-old Moore.

"I spent most of my time on the dirt roads where the blacktop had ended," she said in a telephone interview. "I wanted to see what they had to say. I found out how little I did know about these people."

Moore, who was teaching at a private school in New York when she started her research, found herself going back to the southern Appalachians every chance she got. Then she would bring back her tape-recorded interviews and sit up all night and listen to the words of the people she met.

"I realized I needed to capture it before it was gone," she said.

Moore took a leave of absence from her job and took an apartment in her hometown of Greensboro. She continued to teach two or three days a week and arranged her work schedule so she could spend weeks up in the mountains.

"I became caught up in it," she said. "I wanted their voices to be heard."

Using contacts from family and friends, Moore gained the confidence of people who do not typically give interviews — farmers, homemakers, coon hunters, mountain musicians, craftsmen and Cherokee Indians.

"I found the people are very different from one area to another," she said. "There's lots of different kinds of people. You don't get that from any stereotype."

"These people are very private individuals," she said. "They need to get to know you before they open up."

Moore would begin her conversations by saying that her intention was to portray the mountain residents on their own terms.

"I wanted their views, their opinions," she said. "I wanted them to talk about themselves."

That is why the format of the book comes across like an oral history. The message is not lost in the retelling — instead it comes across in the words of the people themselves.

Moore put thousands of miles on her Subaru stationwagon, visiting the remote homes of people, some whose ancestors had come to North Carolina's mountains hundreds of years earlier.

"This is the nuts and bolts of social history," she said. "So much of what they had to say is lost."

Some of the homes and farmhouses she visited had no running water. Outhouses were commonplace. In her travels, Moore came to treasure the quiet dignity and common sense of the people she met.

"These people make quite good philosophers," she said. "They realize what is important. If something is difficult, they make a joke about it and go on with their life."

People like Bea Hensley, a blacksmith from Spruce Pine.

"My theory is that you were born to live and not make a living," he says in the book. "Making a living comes secondary. Anyone can make a living. Not everybody can live.

Letha Hicks, a character in 'Mountain Voices'

And your monetary value doesn't have anything to do with it."

The book's foreword was written by Sam Ervin Jr., the late U.S. senator from North Carolina who is perhaps best known for his role in the Watergate hearings in the 1970s.

As a child in Morganton and later as an attorney, Ervin became good friends with a number of "mountaineers."

"As a youth, I got to know others when I fished for trout in mountain streams. As a young lawyer, I met multitudes of them while helping my father try cases in mountain courts," he wrote. "Over the years, I formed enduring friendships with men of the mountains whose strength matched their beautiful mountains."

For that reason, Ervin wrote, he always resented outsiders who "neither knew nor understood the mountaineers, and who wrote books characterizing them as stereotyped identical beings whose vices vastly outweighed their virtues."

Ervin said Moore did not repeat the errors of other writers.

"In gathering materials for her book, she visited men and women of the mountains who were the product of generations of privation and isolation in their homes and places of work, acquiring an understanding, affection and admiration for them, and interviewed them respecting their own experiences and what their ancestors told them about theirs," he wrote.

Moore believes the book should help clear up some of the misconceptions about the people who inhabit the mountains of western North Carolina.

Like education. "They are portrayed as people who didn't go to school and who don't send their kids to school," she said.

Instead, the offspring of some of the people she interviewed had graduated from college. Some had gone on to graduate school.

As the years went on, Moore became attached to the people she met. "This isn't my book, it's theirs," she said. "Every one of them is special in their own way. These people are my best friends and I care about them."

Ski Bums Can Sunburn As Easily As Beach Bums

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Skiers are just as likely as beachgoers to get sunburned and suffer premature wrinkling or even skin cancer, says James Leyden, a University of Pennsylvania dermatologist.

Leyden says that although more of the sun's harmful ultraviolet rays reach the earth during the summer months, "UV dosage increases by about 5 percent for every 1,000 feet above sea level, and the snow reflects up to 90 percent of these rays, thereby intensifying the potential for skin damage."

Leyden, a consultant for Avon Products, suggests that skiers use a sunscreen with a sun protection factor of at least 15, paying special attention to sun-sensitive spots such as the nose, ears and eye area. Apply sunscreen at least 15 minutes before going outdoors to allow it time to form a more uniform barrier.

He suggests wearing sunglasses that offer maximum UV protection. Eyelids are not only prone to burn, he says, but recent studies have linked cataracts to sun exposure.

Two-Year Camp Rescues Troubled Boys

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WARM SPRINGS, Ga. — The tow-headed youngster, the collar of his brand-new camouflage coat turned up to thwart the late-morning chill, was stumbling with the mechanics of opening a can of Spam.

"What is this stuff, anyway?" he asked Adam, like Shane, a 12-year-old, and like Shane, a resident of the state-funded Roosevelt Wilderness Camp, an outdoor therapeutic program for boys, located on almost 600 acres of woodland atop Pine Mountain.

"You've never eaten Spam," Adam said in a teasing fashion, glancing over his shoulder in the direction of camp director Mike Angststadt. "He's never had Spam, Chief Mike."

Adam took the can from Shane, showed the new arrival the best way to open it, then dumped the ingredients onto a paper plate.

Shane gave the meat a disgusted look, then tried to force a smile. "What else do we get for lunch?"

Getting used to Spam probably won't be the last adjustment the "new boy" from Sylvania will have to make as he spends the next two years far away from civilization.

"I already miss my bed back home," said Shane, who like the rest of the boys suffers from behavioral problems which counselors feel can be cured with large doses of clean air, icy mountain water and love.

Shane wasn't about to admit it — few boys his age do — but the new boy spent much of his first night, alone on his cot in a three-boy shelter, hidden by huge pines from the rest of humanity, a pillow muffling his sobs and soaking up his tears.

"The new boys do a lot of cryin' at first," said Rejean, a Columbus boy whose tears dried long ago. "But they get over it."

There were 16 boys in the camp on recent day — 20 slots are allotted — and they range in age from 12 to 17. The program could be mistaken for an Outward Bound class, for the young men in their hiking boots and work clothes could just as easily be the sons of privilege as the sons of disrepair, boys whose prior environments are oftentimes as dangerous as the white water rapids they are taught to ride.

"Many of them have been sexually abused, most of them beaten by one or both parents," says Angststadt, a 36-year-old Philadelphian, who has been involved in social work since his college days. "It's safe to say all the boys here have emotional problems. They're introverted, suffering from poor self-concept, and they all need plenty of counseling."

Few are juvenile offenders, as many Warm Springs residents feared six years ago when the camp began to take form in Meriwether County, though trouble is no stranger to any of them. Most of them have been through the system.

The boys, black and white, come from all walks of life. Jeremy, 16, of Warner Robins, is the son of a physician and an attorney, one of the few in the camp who could actually afford an Outward Bound course, a lad who would like to become an architect and maybe "a counselor on weekends." Others, however, come from families deeper down the socio-economic ladder. Many have experimented with drugs. One wrote his father in care of the state penitentiary. All wear emotional scars, though they hide them well.

Jeremy, like Shane, didn't know what to expect upon his arrival at the OTP almost two years ago. "I'd always liked the woods and the outside, but I was so scared of the dark that I wanted to go home the first night."

"Since this is a volunteer program, the boys are free to leave anytime they want," said Angststadt. "But few do; most of them stay here until they graduate and are ready to be returned to society."

The program, administered by a staff of 18, is, of course, not for every boy. A screening committee judges each case and decided which boy would most benefit from such an experience.

The camp's "cure" rate isn't perfect, said Angststadt. "We really don't have any hard numbers but we do feel we've helped over 70 percent of the boys who have gone through the program over the years. We have multi-family therapy groups which meet once a month, which we hope prepares the families for the day their son returns home." Families are required to participate in these counseling sessions and other parenting workshops.

Wilderness living is the key to the entire program. The boys live in shelters they've constructed themselves, heavy canvas keeping out the elements, a wood-burning stove keeping out the chill. They cook their own food. There is no electricity, no running water. All of life's conveniences are at least a mile away, at the office, or at the school, or at the combination shower-laundry-tool shed-equipment storage building.

Her Husband's Mistress Is Not Very Selective, Easy To Turn On

Dear Abby: This is for the lucky lady in Fort Worth with the perfect marriage. I hope you get on your knees at least a dozen times a day and thank the good Lord for your good fortune.

My husband has a very unusual-looking mistress. She's 40 inches wide and 36 inches tall, and her name is TV.

He looks at her picture at least six hours a day. He starts looking at 6 o'clock in the evening and doesn't stop until midnight! That's Monday through Friday. On Saturday, he joins her at 4 p.m. and stays until 1 a.m. on Sunday morning. On Sunday, he stares at her picture from 12 noon until 12 midnight.

This man is only in his early 40s. I am 36. Everyone tells me how crazy I am. I can't seem to get this man out of my system. Maybe I'll get some suggestions from your column. — No Name

Dear No Name: Your husband's "mistress" is very easy to turn on,

Dear Abby

and she's not very selective — she's there for anyone who hasn't anything better to do. (By the way, she entertains women, too.) But she's not your problem — your husband is.

Does he turn to her because he's bored? What are his options? Have you discussed it with him? Don't you have any friends? What are your interests? How about his? Get some communication going and perhaps instead of looking, he (and you) should both be listening — to a marriage counselor.

Dear Abby: Each time we invite a certain couple to our home for a party, they make a point of getting in touch with me or my wife to find out who else is coming.

Is it proper for them to inquire, and should we simply tell them, as we have in the past, and try not to let it bug us? — Bugged In Wooster, Ohio

Dear Bugged: It is not proper to ask "who else" is coming. And since it bugs you, you are under no obligation to disclose your guest list.

Because it's rude to point out a person's rudeness, you could respond lightheartedly, "Pope John Paul and Mother Teresa are trying to clear their calendars" — or something equally preposterous.

Dear Abby: Please join me in a personal crusade to stop adults from teaching their children that a policeman is the enemy. I've been a law enforcement officer for eight years and have seen how children fear police officers, and it disturbs me.

Last week, while in uniform at a local hospital, I overheard a father scolding his 5-year-old son who was crying. Then the father took the boy by the hand and led him over to me, saying, "You see this policeman? Well, if you don't stop crying, he is going to put you in jail — that's what they do to little boys who cry!"

Well, the boy stopped crying, and now I'm waiting for the complaint the father will probably make to hit my chief's desk. The father was upset with me for admonishing him in front of his son for having made me the bad guy.

Please help me to bring back the saying, "The policeman is your friend." It may help to save a child's life. — Savannah Cop

Dear Cop: When my children were in grade school, the police department sent officers into their classrooms to teach the children that the police officers were their friends. If Savannah doesn't have such a program, it should have.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Hong Kong Officials Consider Banning Tradition Of Flogging Some Criminals

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONG KONG — In the waning days of British colonial rule, Hong Kong's government is mulling whether to ban flogging, a criminal punishment that critics claim is a cruel remnant of a bygone era.

"We believe it is cruel and inhumane and degrading," says Andrew Stables, chairman of the local Amnesty International that has asked the government to end flogging.

Flogging, also known as caning, was common during the heyday of the British empire. It was abolished in Great Britain 40 years ago, but Hong Kong continues to use the rod, though sparingly.

In 1952, there were 476 offenders, mostly juveniles, flogged in the colony. The number fell to 20 by 1979, and only one criminal was whipped last year.

Among crimes that can carry a sentence of caning are robbery, assault, weapons possession, rape and piracy.

Only men can be flogged and "the instrument used shall be a light cane or rattan of a type approved by the governor." The number of strokes cannot exceed 18.

Caning generally is administered in a prison room out of sight of other inmates and the public. It is carried out by a corrections official in the presence of a doctor, who examines the offender to be sure he can take it. The prisoner is bent across a padded bar, his arms secured and his loins covered by a canvas cloth as his bare buttocks are lashed.

One magistrate, speaking with anonymity, recalls viewing black-and-white photographs of an offender who had received six strokes:

"The wounds that I saw were quite considerable. The skin was open and apparently to some ... depth. I can remember being fairly horrified."

Critics of caning argue the punishment is not only barbaric but ineffective.

Nihal Jayawickrama, a senior law lecturer at the University of Hong Kong, says researchers have found "that people on whom (flogging) is imposed continue to have a very deep-rooted grievance against the community for the humiliation they have had to undergo."

Although a committee set up in 1965 to examine corporal punishment recommended that caning be abolished, the practice is approved by many of Hong Kong's 5.7 million people.

World Beat Is Finding Its Own Place With Western Musicians

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

"Calling out around the world; are you ready for a brand new beat?" So inquired Martha Reeves in her 1964 hit, "Dancing in the Street."

But the rock 'n' roll and rhythm and blues she spoke of, born in the United States and reshaped in Great Britain, has mostly kept its base in the two countries since the sound's modern inception more than 30 years ago, making for a painfully closed, xenophobic, Anglo-American world.

Of course, rock 'n' roll has spread across the globe enough to enable the farthest pockets of civilization to enjoy the strains of the Police or the Beatles.

But now, possibly out of a yearning for something new and different in an increasingly recycled field, sounds from beyond the English-speaking world are being heard as part of Western pop music.

Partly because of the nudging of the West's biggest stars, some of the best-known recording artists from the other side of the world are getting big label contracts here.

"It's definitely the sound of the '90s," proclaims Richard Farris Thompson, a professor of African and Afro-American art at Yale University whose book "African Art in Motion" influenced David Byrne of the Talking Heads.

"It's a functioning fact that the three major world capitals — Paris, London and New York — are filled with Africans and Caribbeans, so you are going to hear that music," Thompson says.

As a result, international music has moved from the dusty back corners of record stores to more prominent locations, where this world beat, whether it is from the deepest reaches of the bayou or the far-flung mountains of Bulgaria, is creeping into domestic record, tape and CD collections.

Indeed, some of these singers from faraway places are now enjoying what is considered by some in America to be the pinnacle of recording success: TV commercials. Ladysmith Black Mambazo, the seductively crooning and high-stepping vocal group that Paul Simon helped introduce to Western audiences through his popular "Graceland" album, is featured in a Pepsi commercial; and the flamenco stylings of Gipsy Kings appear in the much-touted new George Michael spot for Diet Pepsi, which premiered recently.

Still, the sound is not exactly burning up the charts here yet. The biggest world-music breakthrough here seems to be for reggae, which is just now gaining acceptance in its full-strength version, after being a reliable pop-music spice for 20 years.

And there is a growing catalog of various African sounds available, from the infectious juju music of King Sunny Ade, recently released in live form on compact disc, to the harmonies popularized on "Graceland," to the mbaqanga on "The Indestructible Beat of Soweto," named the best album of 1987 in a Village Voice critics poll.

A global perspective has been used for years by Western performers from Peter Gabriel to Paul Simon to Sting to Linda Ronstadt. The Talking Heads' album "Naked" is only the latest example of a marriage of Western pop and world-beat feel.

Foreign influences in domestic pop has heretofore surfaced only in styling — such as in the bossa nova beat of Sade, or the jazzy sounds of Polish-born and London-based singer Basia.

Karl Malden Says Role In Hijacking Film Symbolic Of Senseless Violence

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — For Karl Malden, the role of a man in a wheelchair murdered by hijackers of the cruise ship Achille Lauro, is more than an acting job, it's an attempt to remind people of terrorism's senseless violence.

"I just didn't want people to forget this man in a wheelchair was thrown overboard," Malden said. "We forget very easily."

"The Hijacking of the Achille Lauro," a dramatization of the 1985 terrorist attack, airs Monday on NBC.

Malden plays Leon Klinghoffer, a 69-year-old Jewish man from New York who was shot and tossed overboard when four Palestinian terrorists boarded the Italian cruise ship and took more than 500 people hostage for three days.

"It's not a long part, but it's an important part, because he's the only one that gets killed on the whole boat," said Malden, who was in Nashville for two weeks teaching acting at Vanderbilt University.

Malden, an actor for more than 50 years, won an Oscar for "A Streetcar Named Desire" in 1951 and starred in the TV series of the 1970s, "Streets of San Francisco." He more recently played the crusading father of a murder victim in the miniseries "Fatal Vision" and played Barbra Streisand's father in the film "Nuts."

Malden said he wanted to be part of "The Hijacking of the Achille Lauro" to honor the death of an innocent victim.

"His death is a symbol to the world of the senselessness of terrorism," he said.

Klinghoffer and his 58-year-old wife, Marilyn, took the trip because she was told she had cancer and only had a short time left to live, Malden said.

"It's ironic. She was the one who was supposed to die first," he said. "But he was killed, and she lived another six months after that. That's what fascinated me about it."

The pirates had threatened to kill passengers one at a time and blow up the luxury liner if 50 Palestinians imprisoned in Israel were not released.

But Malden said Klinghoffer, who was partially paralyzed by a stroke, was singled out for death because of his wheelchair.

"It was hard to manipulate. It was hard to get him to go from place to place," he said.

When the elderly man was ordered to move along with a group of other captives, he became frustrated and lashed out at the terrorists, Malden said.

"He told them 'to hell with them' and that's when something happened and one of them pulled out a pistol and shot him. They threw him and the wheelchair overboard."

The two-hour drama is also the story of Marilyn Klinghoffer, played by Lee Grant, who courageously endured her fear and the loss of her husband, Malden said.

"When they were caught, the Italians asked her to go and finger the people who were caught, and she did," he said.

Stuttering Linked To Brain Flaws

By Lee Siegel
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Stuttering, once thought to be psychological, has been linked to brain abnormalities by scientists who hope to understand many disorders by making 3-D videotapes of the brain in action.

Subtle irregularities in electrical activity and blood flow were found in brains of 60 percent of stutterers, whose speech is broken by abnormal pauses, repetitions (st-st-stuttering) or prolongations (sssstuttering) of sounds, said audiologist Terese Finitzo, who directed the University of Texas studies.

She said similar brain abnormalities were detected in 84 percent of people with spasmodic dysphonia, in which malfunctioning vocal cords produce a hoarse, strained, strangled-sounding voice.

The Dallas scientists studied 20 stutterers and 77 people with spasmodic dysphonia by examining magnetic resonance imaging pictures of brain anatomy. Unlike CAT scans, which use X-rays, the technique uses a giant magnet and radio waves to make pictures of organs.

The scientists also made maps of brain electrical activity as measured by electrodes on the head; and images of brain blood flow.

But they also developed a way to process the two-dimensional maps of brain electrical activity to pinpoint the location of that activity.

That let them superimpose the brain anatomy and electrical activity images, then string them together on videotape to make "an animated movie or cartoon, so as electrical activity progresses you can see it moving through the brain" in three dimensions, said Dr. Kenneth Pool, a neurologist in the Texas group. Blood-flow images will be added later.

Such technology might help scientists understand how the brain works, and perhaps eventually how to better diagnose and treat speech defects, mental illness, epilepsy, dyslexia, Alzheimer's and Parkinson's diseases, post-stroke speech loss and other disorders, Pool said.

The technique "is expected to radically alter (brain) disease evaluation and management for neurologists, psychiatrists and neurosurgeons," said a news release from the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

Scientists have long believed that the speech impediments were psychological. But in recent years, many have linked the impediments to brain malfunctions that can be aggravated by psychological stress.

That view is supported by findings of the government-funded, $2 million Texas research outlined by Finitzo, Pool and colleagues Monday at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The studies also suggest the speech defects have many causes, because not all the patients had brain abnormalities, Pool said.

About 1 percent of Americans stutter to some degree. Spasmodic dysphonia is uncommon, although there are no reliable estimates, Finitzo said.

Stutterers and people with spasmodic dysphonia often receive speech therapy to learn to slow down, breathe differently or otherwise alter their speaking habits, but for many "the benefits are minimal," Pool said.

He said patients are relieved when told their stuttering or spasmodic dysphonia is physical.

"We've had people say, 'Thank God it's not my fault.' They don't have to feel responsible for it, (even) if everybody's telling them, 'If you just relax you can speak better,'" he said.

Arnold E. Aronson, head of speech pathology at the Mayo Clinic in Minnesota, said there are several forms of the speech defects and that people whose stuttering is psychological may get improper treatment if they believe otherwise.

Aronson questioned the reliability of the Texas team's methods, saying they were biased by preconceptions and studied too few patients.

Robotic surgical equipment is linked up with a model head in effort to perfect new surgery

Doctor Hopes To Use Robot In Eye Surgery

By Woody Baird
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — A Memphis surgeon is trying to build a robot to mimic his slightest touch, in hopes that one day he can perform the most delicate of eye operations by remote control.

Dr. Steve Charles has been working on his robot project for about a year, and if he finds the money to continue, he expects in another year to have equipment ready for testing on dummy eyes in the operating room.

He and his chief assistant, electrical engineer Roy Williams, have focused to date on equipment design and feasibility studies. The project has cost about $300,000 so far, Charles said.

The idea is to put together a system of machines that will take a surgeon's touch, soften it and make it more precise.

"Nobody else now is working on robotics operated by a human being where it mimics his motions but downsizes them," said Charles, 46.

An eye surgeon interested in medical engineering throughout his career, Charles said his latest project has attracted the interest as well as the consulting assistance of several engineers and physicians from around the country, including specialists with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Air Force.

The machinery would allow a doctor to view his patient's eye on a TV screen while performing surgical movements with tools similar in concept to joysticks used for video games. The movements would be mimicked by small mechanical arms that would actually perform the surgery.

The equipment uses three groups of machines and supporting computers.

"One (group) would be analogous to a person's head and eye muscles that positions the microscope (through which the surgical site is viewed). The other two robots position the surgical tools to work on a dummy head with dummy eyes in it," he said.

An engineering student in undergraduate school, Charles specializes in micro-surgery that often requires removal of tiny scars from the retina of a patient's eye.

The equipment he hopes to perfect would not only make a doctor's movements more exact, but could also allow a surgeon to operate on a patient hundreds or even thousands of miles away, perhaps in remote areas or on a space station orbiting the earth.

Medical personnel would be required on the scene to set up the equipment and monitor the patient, but the surgeon could be elsewhere, Charles said.

Charles operates on eyes, but the equipment could be adapted to other delicate surgery as well, he said.

While such remote surgery is one of the more colorful possibilities of his project, Charles said, the main purpose is to develop equipment to help surgeons become more precise in their work.

"Robots that are manually operated now are for things like fixing up nuclear reactors, picking up submarine parts at the bottom of the ocean or black boxes after airplane crashes, the hazardous environment stuff," Charles said.

"They're like great big gorillas. Now, we'll have a guy that is more precise than the most precise watchmaker or surgeon ever was."

In conjunction with his medical offices, Charles has set up an outfit called the Center for Engineering Applications and has signed up Williams, 31, to handle the day-to-day lab work.

Charles, a member of the surgical staff at Baptist Hospital in Memphis, has gotten early funding help from the Baptist Memorial Health Care Foundation.

Your Neighbor's Cold Could Be Like Yours

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Sniff. Hack. Honk.

If it seems to you that you have the same exact cold as everybody you know — maybe the throat's not too bad, but the sneezing is relentless, or the cough is terrible but the sniffles haven't shown up — you're probably right.

There are "a couple of hundred" viruses that can cause the common cold, according to Dr. Larry Anderson, a virus specialist with the national Centers for Disease Control. "There will be a range, of maybe more than one agent, circulating at a given time — but you also may have one predominant virus."

And a certain virus, he said, "will have certain types of symptoms."

Thus, it's not surprising when everyone in the office is spreading what comes to be known as "the same cold."

"They're likely to have the same virus," Anderson said.

During the winter, a particular influenza strain often comes to dominate the flu season from coast to coast. A particular cold virus, however, doesn't usually spread that far, Anderson noted: "By and large, other viruses don't spread in a national pattern like flu does."

The cold going around "may vary from community to community, or even from time to time within the community," he said. "There can be one, or several types of rhinoviruses causing the colds."

There are a number of government agencies doing research on the common cold — one of the most loathed diseases around, albeit not the most serious.

The CDC and the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases study colds. The Food and Drug Administration evaluates cold treatments. Even the National Center for Health Statistics keeps some facts and figures on the disease-related impact of colds.

Solar Pump Helps In Irrigation

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A solar-powered pump that tracks the sun through the sky with an array of mirrors could be useful for irrigating fields and in out-of-the-way places where maintenance is difficult.

A 36-square-foot array could provide power to pump 16,000 gallons of water a day, enough to irrigate 5 to 10 acres, said Khanh Dinh of Alachua, who began developing the pump after he left Vietnam in 1975 and got a $75,000 National Aeronautics and Space Administration grant for the project in 1982.

Vietnamese farmers need an effective way to irrigate rice paddies without using diesel-fueled pumps.

Dinh said his pump would cost about $5,000, compared with about $1,000 for a diesel pump. Over 10 years, he estimated the diesel pump would cost $13,000 in fuel and maintenance; the solar pump would need little maintenance.

University of Florida researchers are monitoring Dinh's pump before hooking it to an actual irrigation system. Irrigating farm fields requires a constant flow of water, which is difficult for a solar system, said Dorota Haman, an assistant professor in the Agricultural Engineering Department.

Researcher Challenges Old Theories About Sharks

By Richard Cole
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — Samuel Gruber wants to change the perception of sharks as prehistoric, and says the ocean-going killing machines have a complex immune system that could become an "antibody factory" for humans.

Gruber, a University of Miami biological oceanographer, has been intrigued with sharks since an underwater encounter with a hammerhead in 1958.

"After 30 years of studying them, the most astonishing thing I've found about sharks is that they are so sophisticated. They have so many systems that are in higher animals, that if you didn't know better, you'd think that — like the whales — they evolved on land and went back to the sea."

Gruber studies the lemon shark, unique because it can survive while motionless in the water, making observation easier. Among the oddities he has observed are its eyes — which differ among various sharks — its reproductive system and its "highly generalized but extremely powerful" immune system.

Sharks' eyes are unusual because some can close like a human's and others are covered by a transparent nictitating membrane, Gruber said. "That's just totally unheard of in fish. Sharks have eyes more or less like a cat's, with split pupils. It certainly cannot be explained."

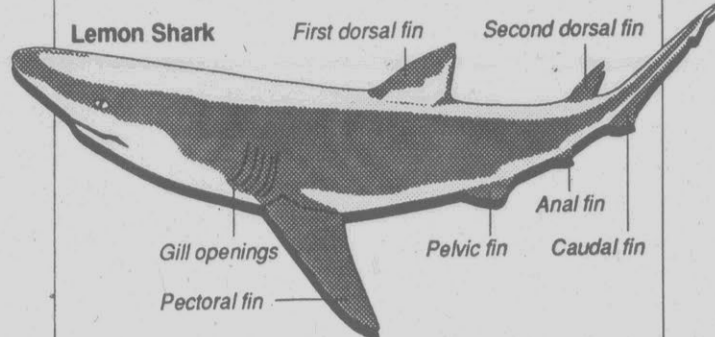

The reproductive system more closely resembles a mammal's than a fish's.

The lemon shark takes up to 15 years to reach sexual maturity, then

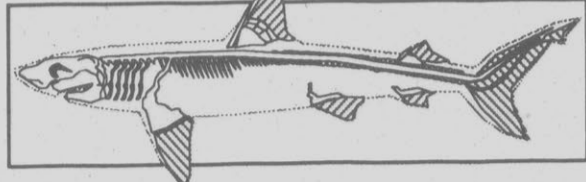

Sharks

Samuel Gruber is redefining biologist's views of sharks. Clues to treating AIDS and cancer are now being discovered in the shark's immune and skeletal system.

Because of the shark's extraordinary ability to produce large quantities of antibodies when attacked by disease, it may be useful in treating AIDS. Sharks even have antibodies to diseases they would never be susceptible to, such as human smallpox.

Typical Shark Skeleton

Researchers have isolated a protein in the skeletal system, which when injected into cancerous tumors causes them to dry up and die.

Source: Samuel Gruber

gives live birth to a dozen pups every other year. While fish lay thousands of eggs, the shark gives birth complete with placenta and umbilical cord.

Only three of the dozen pups are likely to survive two years, which has profound implications for human treatment of sharks, which many people still see as a dangerous pest or, at best, a source of meat, Gruber said. "You want to exploit that resource, but you want it renewable. While a pair of salmon can lay 10,000 eggs and reproduce its entire species, sharks and whales can only have a very low number of young after a very, very long period of time."

That means they are surprisingly fragile as a species; traps off South Africa have virtually eliminated sharks in only a few years. That would have a disastrous effect on many other species, Gruber said. Sharks are predators, and essential to evolution by eliminating weaker members of species.

But humans might have even more reason to mourn the loss of sharks.

Products from sharks' immune system have shown promise in treating diseases, he said. "They are not only able to make antibodies, they already have antibodies to many disease that they would never see or get, such as human smallpox. Why this is I don't know."

When attacked by a disease, sharks generate huge amounts of antibodies, making them a potential factory for helping humans fight diseases like AIDS or cancer, he said. "If we could keep a number of sharks and raise antibodies, then each person could have his own shark, his own antibody factory."

There is evidence of cancer-fighting potential in the shark's skeleton, Gruber said. "Researchers were actually able to isolate a protein that when injected into the tumor would cause it to dry up and die."

Side effects make such treatment impractical for humans, but Gruber is interested because he suffers from a cancer of the lymph system that causes his joints to swell. He goes regularly to California for an experimental treatment that involves injections of rat antibodies.

Despite cancer and occasional accidents including a mangled hand, nearly drowning and having a shark almost tear his leg off, Gruber said he intends to continue his underwater research. "We owe it to the world to study something like the shark. And you can't do it from the top of a hill with field glasses."

Pollen Supplier Has People Climbing Trees As Collectors

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LUTHER, Okla. — All Karl White could get with his degree in biology was a job climbing trees to collect plants.

But the job happened to be for a company pioneering in allergy work in the middle of hay-fever country, and now other people are climbing trees for him.

His Crystal Labs supplies 40 percent of the powdered mold, pollen and other allergy villains purchased by labs that make allergy tests and vaccines.

"Oklahoma is really the center point of all hay fever," White said. Within 500 miles are deserts, trees, hills and mountains, not to mention the Johnson grass and ragweed that flourish in the state itself.

The location may be perfect and the business lucrative, but White says it also federally regulated, highly seasonal and workers can face some unexpected hazards when they venture into the wild collecting specimens.

White, who has degrees in biology and chemistry from Central State University, began his career climbing trees to collect plants for the former Stemen Laboratory of Oklahoma City, one of three labs started in the late 1920s to produce mold and pollen powders.

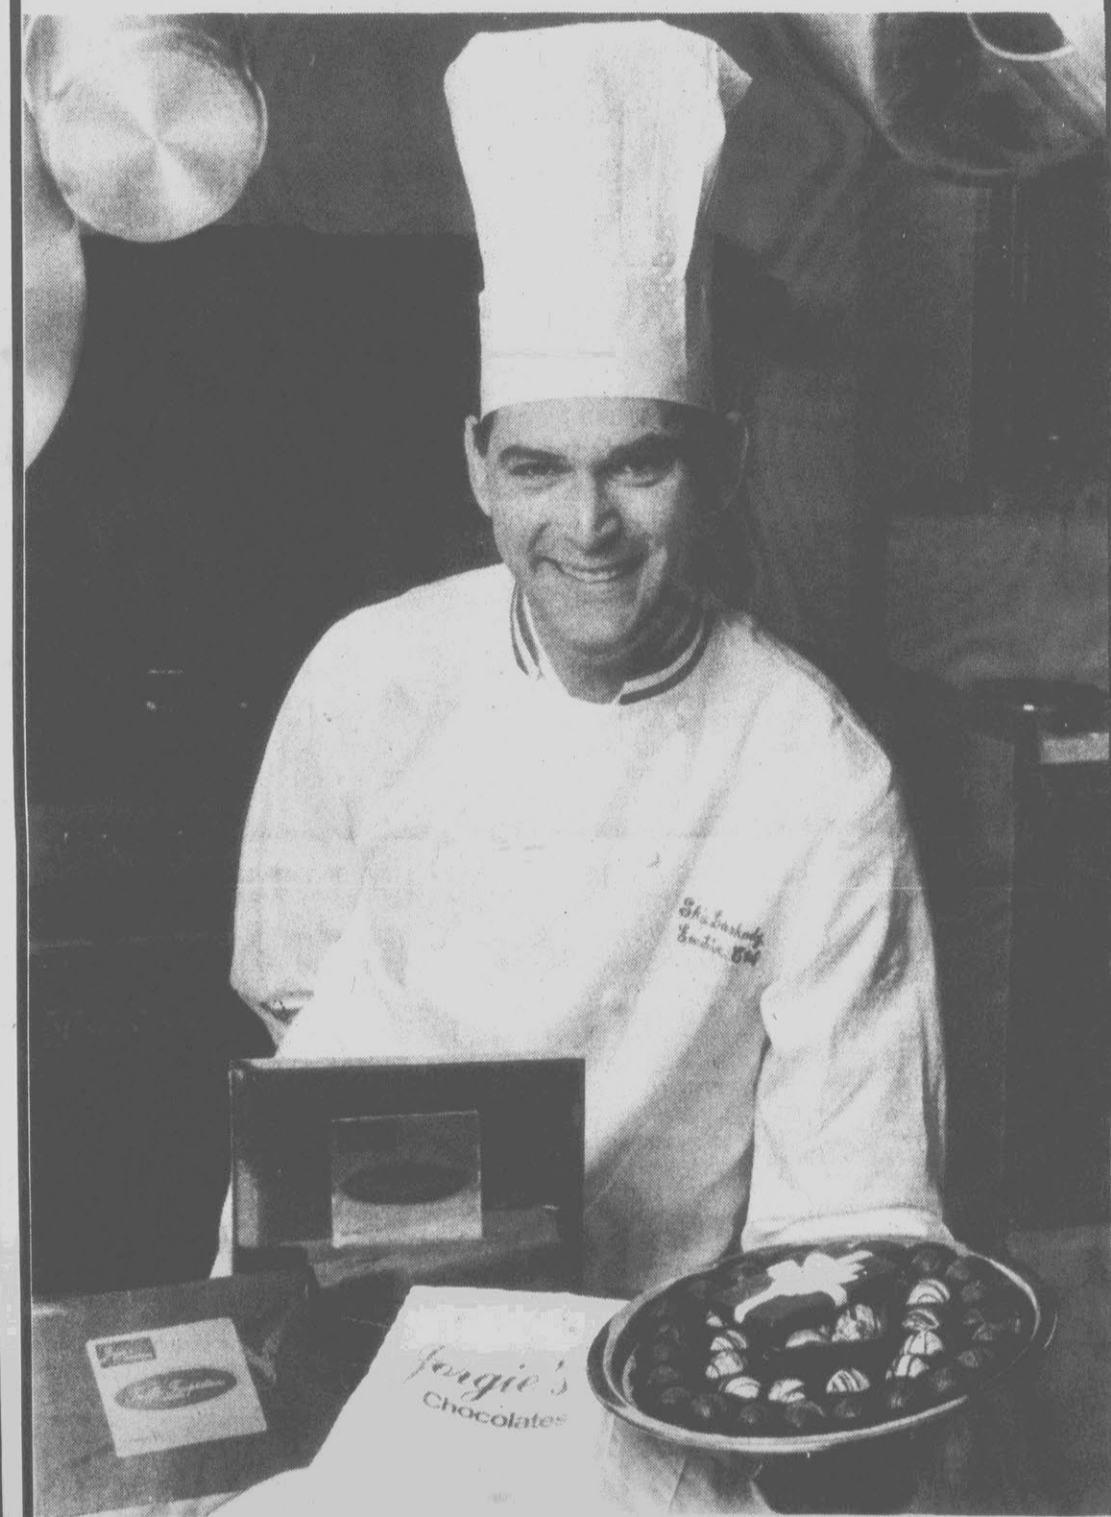

"I was making minimum wage. I was very disappointed in biology because you couldn't get a job in biology."

He eventually started his own business in Edmond. Now relocated to Luther, it produces up to 1,100 pounds a year of powder from pollen, mold, animal skin, insects and food. His most expensive product is mites, a major part of house dust; the tiny bugs crushed into pure powder sell for about $3,000 an ounce.

Individual components of household dust will be in increasing demand, White said, because the Food and Drug Administration is moving to halt the use of the mixtures in which the components aren't exactly known, and to make vaccines specific to each component.

The FDA three years ago halted the use of a household insect mixture, he said, adding that he expects similar action on dust within the next three to five years, depending on the availability of individual components.
