Board Members Oppose In-State Tuition Jumps

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Members of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors told state lawmakers gathered in Greenville today that they oppose an in-state tuition increase because it would not generate enough revenue to boost faculty salaries.

"I think while it may sound good to say: 'OK, we're going to increase this tuition ... to take care of the faculty salaries we need,' it's really not very practical," board member David J. Whichard II of Greenville said before a group of about 30 lawmakers, East Carolina University administrators and UNC system officials.

The group met at the Willis Building for a briefing on a budget request submitted by the board to the General Assembly.

Board members Charles Evans of Nags Head and Joe Thomas of Vanceboro also spoke out against a tuition increase for in-state undergraduate students because it would not generate a sizable amount of revenue.

"I think we ought to be real careful," Evans said.

Sen. Marc Basnight of Manteo, a Democrat who chairs the Senate Appropriations Base Budget Committee, said the board members' statements would have a cooling effect on discussions in the General Assembly to raise in-state tuition.

"Well, obviously what I'm hearing (about) tuition increases is, even if we can't increase faculty salaries, (we should not raise in-state tuition). It will really cool conversation in the Senate," he said.

If tuition rises 10 percent for every student in the system, it would

Lawmakers Ponder Impact Of Protest

More than 2,500 teachers, including a number from Pitt County, are expected to be in Raleigh Tuesday to protest a recommendation by Gov. Jim Martin to delay a pay raise until April 1990.

However, House member Ed Warren of Greenville said this morning that the protest "won't have a lot of impact on me. My position is that education is a top priority and I am supporting an increase for teachers and state employees. I can't speak for other members (of the General Assembly)."

Warren, who said he was to meet with a group of teachers today at 11 a.m., said "there's no problem with me. I plan to be a part of some legislation to see that (a pay raise) is carried out."

Tuesday's planned demonstration, Warren said, "will not have a lot of impact on me. My commitment is still there."

Senator Bob Martin of Bethel said, "I think it will do some good. It will point out the lag in raising teachers to a competitive level. That should have been done over the past few years and it has not been done."

But Martin questioned whether a gathering of teachers will cause the General Assembly to take action this year.

"At this time, we're dealing with an unknown. The Martin administration made up the budget almost entirely in the unknown, as to the revenue picture. They used only estimates."

"By June," Martin said, the General Assembly "will have pretty definite figures. I'm hoping the revenue picture will improve so we can

Judge Sends North Jury Home

By Pete Yost
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The judge in Oliver North's Iran-Contra trial today sent the jury home and scheduled a hearing for Tuesday on a proposed agreement for additional national security safeguards that could allow the case to go forward.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell indicated he is in no hurry to rush to trial, referring to the administrative stay issued at the Justice Department's request Sunday by Chief Justice William Rehnquist.

The full Supreme Court on Friday is to consider the Justice Department's request to delay the trial.

"You're still jurors in this case, of course," Gesell told the panel. "You will be advised as soon as the court knows whether the case is allowed to go forward or not. I regret the inconvenience this will cause you."

Hours after Rehnquist issued the stay, the Justice Department announced it had reached an agreement with independent counsel Lawrence Walsh to seek additional controls from Gesell designed to protect the government against disclosure of sensitive national security material by North, a former White House aide.

The Justice Department said it will ask that Rehnquist's stay be vacated immediately if Gesell approves the agreement.

Gesell scheduled arguments on the agreement for 1:30 p.m. Tuesday. He told the jurors to "call in tomorrow after 4" to see whether they are to be given a reporting time for court.

The judge and lawyers for North and the independent counsel's office, which is handling the prosecution, then went into a closed session to discuss an undisclosed matter touching on national security.

Walsh and the Justice Department had been in conflict since last Wednesday, when the department began seeking an order that would impose tight restrictions on classified material that North wanted to present at trial.

Gesell rejected the proposal and accepted more moderate controls offered by Walsh, who said he wanted to proceed with the trial immediately. On Thursday, the Justice Department went to court to try to delay the trial.

The department said it had concluded, and that Walsh concurred,

U.S. Center In Pakistan Under Guard After Rioting

By Bryan Wilder
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — Moslem students marched in several cities today to denounce the United States because of a book they consider blasphemous and to protest the killing of five people in rioting Sunday.

Hundreds of police stood guard in Islamabad near the U.S. Information Center, which nearly 3,000 Moslem fundamentalists stormed Sunday. Five people were shot to death, 83 people were injured and at least 65 people were arrested in the three-hour melee.

The militant demonstrators alleged the center's library contained the 1988 novel "The Satanic Verses" by Salman Rushdie. Moslems say the book is blasphemous because it suggests the prophet Mohammed was fallible, and Pakistan and India have banned the novel.

U.S. diplomats, who say the library does not have Rushdie's book, ordered the information center and the U.S. Embassy closed at mid-day today for fear of renewed violence.

About 300 Moslem theology students and political opposition leaders chanted "Rushdie should hang" during a march today in Rawalpindi, where most stores were closed in mourning for those killed Sunday.

Witnesses said small groups of young men hurled stones at shops that remained open. There were no reports of injuries.

There also were demonstrations outside the U.S. consular missions in Lahore and Karachi. No violence was reported.

Three Americans and 15 Pakistani employees were in the U.S. Information Center when it was attacked Sunday by protesters yelling "God is great!" Police repeatedly fired at the demonstrators, who hurled rocks and bricks and burned an American flag.

"The staff is traumatized," said a U.S. diplomat who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The U.S. Embassy advised Americans in the capital to exercise "extreme caution."

American diplomats said they were puzzled that the United States was singled out by the protesters, as the Indian-born Rushdie lives in Britain, where his book first was published in September.

The embassy wishes to emphasize that the United States government in no way supports or associates itself with any activity that is in any sense offensive or in-

Hunt Advised To Miss Race For U.S. Senate

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The Republicans are on a roll, the Democratic Party is floundering and the time isn't right for former Gov. Jim Hunt to wage another campaign against Sen. Jesse Helms in 1990, some longtime Hunt supporters say.

"His strongest supporters are coming up to me and saying, 'God, don't let him run. This isn't the year,'" a Hunt adviser who asked not to be identified told The Charlotte Observer.

"The ones (supporters) I talk to tell me he shouldn't do it because the timing may be a little bad," said former state Sen. Jim Garrison, who served on the state Board of Transportation under Hunt.

Hunt's first race against Helms in 1984 is well remembered. The bitter and rancorous $26 million contest wound up being the most expensive Senate race in history at that time. Hunt lost to Helms 48 percent to 52 percent.

"It's very hard to come back after a defeat like that," said Liz Hair, who worked on Hunt's campaign in Mecklenburg County.

Another longtime Hunt supporter, who also asked not to be identified, is more to the point: "Politically, Hunt is out of step. The electorate is changing, the state is changing and people are tired of him. ... The time is right for a new face: an urban person, a woman, a black."

In Democratic political circles statewide, other names are supplanting Hunt's as better possible Senate candidates. Chief among them: Raleigh lawyer Wade Smith, former chairman of the state Democratic Party and D.G. Martin, formerly of Charlotte, who's still thought of as a charismatic candidate despite losing two races for Congress to Republican Alex McMillan.

Also frequently mentioned: Former Charlotte Mayor Harvey Gantt, former N.C. Administration Secretary Jane Patterson, Attorney General Lacy Thornburg, and U.S. Reps. David Price and Tim Valentine.

Hunt, in a telephone interview last week, bristled at this call for new faces.

"People can talk all they want to about new faces — and I believe in encouraging fresh faces," he said in an interview published Sunday in the Charlotte Observer. "But what the Democratic Party needs is to win. That's what the Democratic Party needs."

Hunt said a lot of people are encouraging him to run. But he acknowledged that he's also heard "the climate" argument from several others.

"And the political climate for Democrats is tough right now," he said. "That doesn't mean it'll stay that way and that doesn't mean a well-run campaign can't win."

Still, at a time when Helms is gearing up his campaign for a fourth term, Hunt is doing virtually nothing to indicate that a second Helms-Hunt contest will happen.

"To my knowledge — and I think I would know — there's zero activity out there for Hunt," said John Bennett, who coordinated the Hunt campaign's $12.2 million fundraising effort in 1984. "There won't be until he makes up his mind about whether to run." So far, Hunt hasn't raised a dime for a 1990 Senate race, Bennett said.

No polls have been commissioned, said Harrison Hickman, the Washington-based pollster who says

Panel Blasts Sloppy Research

By Paul Recer
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — An "excessively permissive" attitude by institutions tends to allow careless and sometimes even fraudulent medical research, a national Institute of Medicine committee reported today.

The committee, empaneled to study misconduct in biomedical research, said better research standards and systematic ways of investigating laboratory irresponsibility are needed.

"Although the committee believes that serious misconduct in science is rare ... it concludes that institutions fail to detect and correct early deviant behavior primarily because of an excessively permissive research environment that tolerates careless practices," the committee report said.

Funding pressures and an over-emphasis on publication of research in scientific journals also encourage what the committee called "substandard practices."

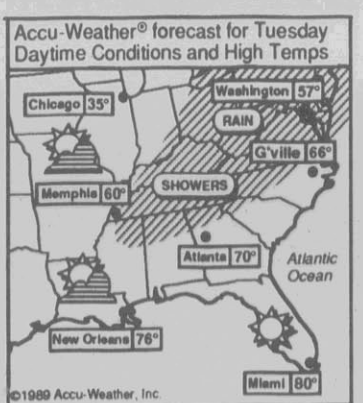

The Institute of Medicine, chartered by the National Academy of Sciences, organized the 17-member committee in 1987 after a series of fraudulent and careless laboratory reports had come to light. The committee was charged with developing proposals to strengthen professional standards in the nation's federal and academic laboratories.

Few institutions, the report said, have explicit research guidelines and this allows the system "to tolerate substandard activities by a small number of individual investi-

Citizens Visited Schools

Seven members of the community recently visited D.H. Conley High School to view a typical school day, the administrative operation and various programs. The visitors were Brenda Adams, Ted Cox, Ronald Evans, Blanche Forbes, Mary Little, the Rev. Alonzo Mills and Clarence Moore. Ike Baldree, principal, asked them to tour the school in order to foster communication between the school and the community. The visitors were identified as key community people with an interest in education.

Vocational Week

D.H. Conley High School is celebrating "National Vocational Education Week" through Friday.

Vocational teachers will wear T-shirts depicting the slogan "Learning a Living," which is the theme of the state vocational education program. Future Business Leaders of America will serve refreshments to faculty as they view a video explaining vocational education programs and clubs available at Conley. The vocational classes will view the video during the week. Teachers will be given small gifts from students and brochures titled "Vocational Education: The Word is Out" will be distributed to students and faculty.

Pactolus Activities

The Parent Teacher Organization at Pactolus Elementary School will meet Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the school gym. Students will present a physical education program under the direction of Vickie Biagini, the physical education teacher. Brenda Spencer, an art teacher, recently was awarded a mini-grant by the Pitt County Educational Foundation to purchase a set of art prints. Jerry Everhart recently discussed science projects with fourth-grade students. He demonstrated the steps of creating a successful project to prepare students for a science fair in the spring. Tonya Purdue's class celebrated the birthdays of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln by sharing facts about the presidents. Primary students are researching bears in the media center. Kindergarten students learned facts about bears and dictated bear reports to the class. The reports were typed into a computer, using the Talking Textwriter program. Volunteers have contributed 35.5

hours of service to the school since Christmas. The school celebrated "National School Counseling Week" with several activities, including a recognition of students for their attendance, career awareness classes, brochures, banners and posters.

Elmhurst School Events

Kindergartners in Amy Ennis' class at Elmhurst School are learning about weather by recording the weather on a weather chart, making rain gauges and making weather hats. Phillip Williams, meteorologist at WNCT-TV, visited the classes. Students also celebrated "Red Day" and the birthday of Clifford the Big Red Dog by writing a story about Clifford. In studying a unit on dental health, students made tooth name tags, tooth puppets and tooth puzzles. Students also visited a dentist's office, where they saw the "tooth fairy" and performed the skit, "A Toothful Story."

Hunt Gets Advice

he's ready to go out in the field whenever Hunt gives him the word. Hickman did polls for Hunt in 1985 when he contemplated a Senate run against John East, who later died in office. Hunt also hasn't gathered together former supporters. "I'd do anything for the guy," said one Hunt adviser. "But, if I had to bet money on whether he would run, I'd say 'no.'" In contrast, Helms' campaign committee raised more than $1 million last year, spending some of it on radio ads. This year, the committee has hired a direct-mail fundraising firm. And, on Feb. 25, top North Carolina Republicans will gather at the North Raleigh Hilton for a $500-per-person fundraiser for Helms. "We're in the early stages of organizing a campaign," said Carter Wrenn, executive director of the Helms-allied National Congressional Club. "I feel pretty confident he (Helms) is going to run." At this point in 1983, both Helms and Hunt were actively running for the Senate. By November 1984, the two sides had spent much of the record $30 million they raised on some of the nastiest campaign ads in TV history. Phil Baddour, a Goldsboro lawyer who is close to Hunt, said some of those arguing against a reprise of the tough 1984 contest are saying so because they're tired, not because Hunt couldn't pull it off this time. "Some of that talk is a personal reluctance to go through another race like the last one, which was almost all-consuming," Baddour said. "It's not based on any factual analysis of his chances." However, Hunt's financial supporters say it would be difficult for the former governor to raise as much money in 1990 as he did in 1984. "A sitting governor has a leverage in that area," said Wallace Hyde, one of Hunt's top 1984 fundraisers. "With him out of office, it'd be harder." At 51, Hunt is still young enough to skip the 1990 race and reenter politics later. By all reports, he's enjoying his lucrative Raleigh law practice and has entered the cattle business.

Soviet Editor Tries Hand As Reporter In Nashville

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, N.C. — Small-town life in the USSR isn't so different from rural life in North Carolina, says a Soviet journalist who is getting a taste of Southern life — and barbecue — while reporting for a twice-weekly newspaper in Nash County. "I come from a similar background, from a smaller place in the southern USSR," said Alex Podakin. "Seeing this kind of country, the commodities, is all very similar to that. Life like it is here is very familiar, even though I left the small town for Moscow 30 years ago."

Podakin, the managing editor of the North American section of the Novosti Press Agency in Moscow, is spending two weeks as a reporter for the twice-weekly Nashville Graphic under an exchange program sponsored by the National Newspaper Association. The Graphic's editor and publisher, Hal Sharpe, earlier spent two weeks in the Soviet Union. In his first few days in the United States, Podakin got a sampler of small-town Southern life — local government meetings, civic clubs, the chamber of commerce ... and barbecue.

"That was a great experience — sort of 'Eat it or else,'" Podakin said of his first taste of the spicy Southern pork dish. "So far, it has been OK. We have something like it in the Soviet Union, only not mashed up. It is like what you call shish-kabob, bits of meat on a stick with a sauce."

Podakin's two-week visit includes a whirl through the Rotary, Lions and Kiwanis clubs as a guest speaker, town council meetings, school board meetings, radio talk shows and high school and college basketball games.

And, small towns being small towns, he has met lots of curious people on the street who stop him to ask questions.

"I presume they might be puzzled about me being here, but all I have gotten are smiles, friendliness and a great deal of interest," he said. "People are just trying to find out answers to lots of questions. They have been deprived of this kind of contact for so long. It's like a thirst being quenched."

Podakin said he had only one disturbing experience — a breakfast meeting with the fiercely anti-communist John Birch Society in Rocky Mount last Thursday.

"This was just about the way I expected it to be," said Podakin, who said society members blamed the Soviet Union for everything from "rain in the jungles to snow in Alaska."

"I had a little hope deep in my heart that maybe they had changed a little bit since perestroika, but to my surprise they are still the same," he said. "It makes me wish I didn't understand the language so well. Then I could sit there and not know what is being said."

"One thing I will tell our Soviet journalists when I go home is that they have done a good job setting out what the rhetoric, the goals of this society are," said Podakin, 48. "My only experience with them was what I had read in the Soviet press and it appears it was accurate."

"My surprise there was they seemed to be proud of being narrow-minded and keeping the rhetoric of the past," he said. "I was disappointed, but it was important that I experience it. That is all part of America, too; that is reality and there is no use to run from it."

The local government meetings, he said, remind him of home.

"A lot of things are not so far away as they might seem — the bureaucracy, the red tape, like we have," he said. "And the local governments are facing the same sort of problems we are — improving roads and schools, breakfasts for school children, lights for streets. These are the same things our people are dealing with."

Podakin, who previously served as a press and information officer at the Soviet embassy in Canada, said Soviet premier Mikhail Gorbachev is taking a big risk with "perestroika," the loosening of restrictions on Soviet society and improved relations with the West.

"The two largest, strongest countries in the world, learning to change their dealings with each other," he said. "How much risk does that involve? Two countries that huge, that powerful, that scary, having had for years so much mistrust, that is a risky venture to change."

"But in the wake of his (Gorbachev's) success with the U.S., I am trying to achieve some of the same things in a smaller place, on a smaller scale," Podakin said, chuckling.

Podakin said he had not had much time to consider what souvenirs he will take back home with him from rural North Carolina.

"All I have done is work, work, work," he said, casting a glance at Sharpe and laughing. "You capitalists ..."

"I have to write a letter to my son, which I haven't done yet, because he wants an American stamp," he said. "And he also wants ... one of those games with a handle ... a computer game."

Podakin has acquired some matchbooks, a YMCA tee-shirt — "in red, an appropriate color" — and intends to take a bottle of "Rebel Yell," a Kentucky bourbon, back home with him.

He says big cities may be alluring to foreign travelers, but he has no regrets about spending his first trip to this country in a small town.

"My most strong impressions of the U.S. are coming from here," he said. "This, for me, is the United States. This is my United States."

Seminary Report Blames Faculty

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WAKE FOREST — Conservative trustees at Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary say they have been wrongly accused of causing the seminary's problems, and have been victimized by a smear campaign.

"A fair evaluation of the seminary's situation reveals that no reasonable threat to academic freedom exists at the school," the trustees say in a report to an accrediting group.

"The public opinion campaign initiated by the faculty was an attempt to intimidate the trustees from offering changes at the institution in accordance with the direction of the Southern Baptist Convention," the report says.

The report says former seminary President Randall Lolley and the school's faculty have created conflict by trying to exclude professors and administrators with differing theological viewpoints, seminary trustees say.

"The whole situation is we have a faculty who is much more liberal than the faculty we envisioned which (would) represent the constituency of the Southern Baptist convention," said Robert Crowley, chairman of the trustees.

A committee of trustees appointed by Crowley submitted the report — a copy of which was obtained by The Winston-Salem Journal — in response to an investigation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

In the report, the trustees say the association treated them unfairly and that the group was deceived by the faculty and former administrators.

Southeastern is operated by the 14.7 million-member Southern Baptist Convention. In October 1987, Lolley, a dean and six other administrators resigned in protest of efforts by new trustees at the school to ensure the teaching of biblical inerrancy, a belief that the Bible is literally true. Some students also have left.

In January, the current president of the seminary, Lewis Drummond, announced that he would nominate Russ Bush, an inerrantist from Texas, as the new academic dean.

The faculty has since voted unanimously against Bush.

That same month, the accrediting association gave the seminary until December to meet accreditation guidelines, which include faculty involvement in selecting deans. The seminary was asked to develop a plan by July 1 that would address violations of academic freedom and tenure. The Association of Theological Schools, another accrediting agency, requested a similar report.

The trustees' report responding to the Southern association has been criticized by some trustees because it was submitted without the approval of the entire board. The response, submitted Dec. 10, will have to be approved at the trustees' meeting in March.

The trustees' report blames Lolley and the faculty for the seminary's problems. The report repeatedly says Lolley failed to provide proper leadership and to act as a conciliator, and that those failures resulted in the current impasse between the convention, trustees, faculty and administration.

In a telephone interview, Lolley said he has not seen the confidential report. He added that if he does figure prominently in it, he should be allowed to read it and make an appropriate response to the trustees.

"I believe I deserve that," he said.

The report says the conservative trustees only wanted to bring the seminary in line with the decade-long project of its "owner," the Southern Baptist Convention. The convention, it says, wants all its agencies and institutions to allow for greater representation of the belief in the inerrancy of the Bible. Southeastern, unlike the other five Baptist seminaries, has not learned to live with the changes, the report says.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

A Quick Fix

Lottery Just A Roll Of The Dice

North Carolina shouldn't gamble on its future. Legalizing a state lottery and pari-mutuel betting amounts to nothing more than taking a chance on North Carolina's financial fate. The odds are against long term gain from either practice.

That's why the state's lawmakers should kill any bill in the 1989 General Assembly that attempts to implement a lottery or legalize gambling — just as they soundly did in years past. There are undesirable economic and aesthetic effects that cannot be overlooked.

A lottery is an easy way to raise a sizable chunk of revenue, there's no question about it. Only those that want to participate in this fund raising do and the state benefits from these voluntary contributions.

But the fact is, easy money isn't a sound way to generate revenue. A lottery is essentially a tax on the poor. Its prey are those citizens least able to afford being victimized. A lottery promises riches it seldom delivers — a cruel proposition.

Consider this: who is most likely to spend $2 or $5 or whatever on a chance to win $1 million. An affluent person or an unemployed or disadvantaged person unable to otherwise make a decent living?

Who would buy a ticket first, a successful entrepreneur or an up-to-his-ears in debt farmer? The answer to both questions is obvious. Economics would motivate a poorer person to take a chance on winning a bundle.

In addition, a lottery is unfair because it takes a disproportionate share of the poorer person's income. If tickets are $2, then $2 is a larger percentage of a $8,000 or $12,000 a year income than it is a $30,000 or $40,000 a year salary.

There are sounder ways to put revenue in North Carolina's coffers and lawmakers should make sure they find them. A state lottery is a quick-fix approach to fundraising and won't provide a permanent solution of locating needed dollars.

In addition, pari-mutuel betting — frequently tied to legislation attempting to legalize a state lottery — has proved disappointing to states that have allowed it and North Carolina's lawmakers should recognize this reality. Proponents cite increased economic prosperity from tourist dollars but ignore the fact that most gambling establishments suck these dollars from local pockets by providing the visitor with all his needs — from lodging to food to transportation.

North Carolina has a history of sound financial operation. Its leaders have copiously and correctly avoided revenue raising schemes that pump quick bucks into public coffers.

They should continue this judicious approach. Legalizing a state lottery and gambling is no sure bet for riches. It is just a roll of the financial dice.

'A lottery is essentially a tax on the poor. Its prey are those citizens least able to afford being victimized. A lottery promises riches it seldom delivers — a cruel proposition.'

To the editor:

While duplicating a math test, I noticed an ad placed on our workroom bulletin board. It read:

"Babysitting — $1.75 per child-per hour. We have had Red Cross and 4-H babysitting courses. Please call any one of us any time." It was signed by a group of our fifth grade girls.

I pondered the thought. I have 23 students in my class. ($1.75 x 23 equals $40.25 per hour) I have them from 8 a.m. until 3 p.m. I'm usually at school until 4:30 p.m. planning, having meetings or grading papers, but we won't count that time. Wow! I'd make $281.75 a day! If I only got paid for the 180 days I have the children, why I'd make $50,715 (I could still keep the summer job I have had for years to carry me through the summers).

Oh, I'd have to change the ad a bit. I have a master's degree and am currently working at night on my education specialist degree (six-year) And, yeah, I'd even do my best to use my knowledge and 15 years' experience to help them become competent in the Three-R's. Wow, almost a $29,000 raise just for "babysitting"!

Don't children have a unique way of putting things in perspective?

To the editor:

There ought to be a law against it. The other day when my mail was delivered, to my utter amazement, I had received the most obscene, disgusting piece of literature that you can imagine. On the front was a horrible picture of some kind of fishy/serpentine multi-colored dragon. Opening it up, I saw even more gross pictures and a caption which read, "Bible Prophecy, Revelation and the Beast: A Bible Study Spectacular." The words were even more obscene than the pictures. Honestly, I was offended that someone would have the audacity to pollute my postal delivery box with this kind of spiritual pornography. Regrettably, I brought the piece of trash into my house thinking to write the sender a stern letter requesting that he retain his garbage for his own can. Unfortunately, my 8-year-old son caught a glimpse of it and asked me what it was. When I explained it to him and told him what I proposed to do, he understood and went back to what he had been doing. Then my 4-year-old son came along and saw it as well. He seemed to have the best prospective. After I had explained what it was to him, he simply asked, "Why don't you throw it away?" I took his advice.

Pay Raises For Production?

Art
Buchwald

There has to be a solution to the congressional pay gridlock. Congressmen and senators need more money and the taxpayer is adamant about not giving it to them.

There are some people who are against the raise because they think it's too much. Then there are others who are against it because this is the first time in their lives that they have been in a position to turn down (ital) anyone (unital) for a pay increase. Consequently, they want to make the most of the opportunity.

My taxi driver is one of them. "I say no raise," he declared, as we started out for the office. "They get too much money anyway, and they don't do a thing for it."

"That's a harsh judgment, Rico. Many legislators work day and night, and then have to travel long distances on weekends in order to give the American people the best laws that money can buy. Would you prefer that they be paid the same wages as the workers at McDonald's?"

"They tried to sneak the raise in behind our backs because they were too chicken to vote on it up and down. If Congress had come to me and said, 'Rico, we need this to educate our children and feed our families,' I might have given them the increase."

"That's very good of you, Rico. How many raises have you handed out in your life?"

"That doesn't matter. I'm a good judge of character, and I know when someone should have a pay increase and when they shouldn't. I read the papers like everybody else. Besides, I never thought an across-the-board raise was a good idea. I'd like to see the lawmakers paid on a piecework basis. Members of Congress would be rewarded according to their level of production. If a legislator shows up every day on the Hill, he is given a standard fee. If he introduces a bill in Congress, he gets an extra amount for it, and if the bill is passed, he receives a bonus."

'Members of Congress would be rewarded according to their level of production.'

"Would you give them anything for attending a PAC breakfast to raise money for their election campaigns?"

"No, they would be on their own for all fund-raisers. At the same time I might offer them a fee for going to a prayer breakfast."

"How much should they get for waging a filibuster?"

"In that situation we would be very generous because it puts a lot of wear and tear on the body. I'd also pay piecemeal for those who give speeches on the floor of the Senate, but I would like to see a system whereby the person making the shortest speech gets the most money."

"Would I be correct if I presumed that each time a representative voted, he'd get a stipend?"

"Yes. I'd have the sergeant at arms sit at a table and pay everyone in cash as they came down the aisle."

"Rico, I think you're on to something. No one has ever thought of compensating lawmakers for what they actually did — not even Trotsky."

"It's the only way Congress is going to get a raise from me."

"You're a good man and a fair man, but suppose they don't accept your plan?"

"They have no choice. I don't think anyone has been fairer than I have to the people on Capitol Hill. But I can't justify throwing money away on large pay raises when there are so many potholes in this country still waiting to be filled."

The Second Shot Should Be Fired By The Universities

WASHINGTON — The continuing debate over Proposal 42 reminds me of the earlier debate over school busing. Once again we're arguing answers without having agreed on the question.

Is the National Collegiate Athletic Association's proposal to ban scholarships to athletes who cannot pass a university's basic entrance requirements a good thing? It is like asking a partisan of the desegregation wars whether busing is a good thing.

Good for what?

What is the question? The most efficient means of getting children to school? Of achieving school integration? Of desegregating the general society? Of ending racial discrimination? Of improving the education of black children?

You can't reach a reasonable conclusion as to the efficacy of busing until you first agree on a goal.

And so it is with Proposal 42. Proposal 42, in case you came late to the debate, is the other shoe of which Proposition 48 was the first. The earlier measure forbade freshmen at big-time NCAA schools from playing competitive sports if they failed to maintain at least a C average in core curriculum in high school and scored less than 700 (out of a possible 1600) on the Scholastic Aptitude Test. A college could award an athletic scholarship to a youngster who failed to meet one of these requirements, but he would not be allowed to compete athletically until he brought his grades up to par.

William

That's the first shoe. The second — Proposal 42 — would prevent the college from awarding the scholarship in the first place.

Is it a good idea? The question simply cannot be answered until we address its implied antecedent. Good for what?

Is the goal to change the practices of high-school teachers? To change the academic attitudes of high-school athletes? To punish academic sluggards? To keep more selective universities from having to compete against the poor-student-brilliant-athlete from less selective universities? To make the teams more racially representative of their student bodies? To keep poor academic performers out of college? To keep colleges from exploiting athletic gifted non-scholars? To disabuse young blacks of their dreams of careers in professional sports?

Which goal — which combination of goals — can we agree on? And how would Proposal 42 serve that interest?

Maybe you are all for making high-school athletes wake up to their academic responsibilities but totally uninterested in the racial makeup of college football and basketball teams. Maybe you believe that SAT scores tend to be poor predictors of academic performance of black collegians (the average SAT score for black freshmen is only 739, though most of them perform reasonably well in their college course work), but still wish to have them understand that they cannot slide through college on athletics alone.

'What would I propose? I'd keep Proposition 48, as a warning to high-school goof-offs. But my second shot would be across the bow of the universities.'

My own view is that any high-school student who cannot maintain a C average probably isn't trying. I also believe that virtually any youngster of normal intelligence can, if taught to handle standardized tests, score 700 on his SATs. If a college believes that a student who fails to meet these requirements can, with help, be brought up to academic speed during an academics-only freshman year — and if that college is willing to gamble an athletic scholarship on such a student — then what's the harm? I accept Proposition 48.

But suppose the college fills that freshman year with fluff courses — Theory of Golf or Volleyball 101? It happens, but the solution is to punish the offending university, not the student.

Nor does it make sense to me to take away the one thing — athletics — that keeps some youngsters feeling good about themselves in the expectation that doing so will turn him into a collegiate scholar. It's just as likely to turn him into a high-school dropout.

What would I propose? I'd keep Proposition 48, as a warning to high-school goof-offs. But my second shot would be across the bow of the universities.

If a freshman cannot meet eligibility requirements during a year's special help in such core subjects as math and English, then he would not be athletically eligible his sophomore year. The college would have wasted its athletic scholarship.

If that didn't put an end to nonsense courses, I'd be prepared to force a college to reduce by one the number of its athletic scholarships for every student who failed to graduate in five years.

As you can see, my question — which Proposal 42 does not answer — is a simple one: How to give athletically gifted students the opportunity to trade their athletic gifts for a college education and to prevent the colleges from renegeing on their end of the deal.

We Have 11 Involved Leaders Supporting Our Commitment To Performance.

There are no limits for the committed person.

We, the leaders of First Federal, embrace an unquestionable commitment to the organization we have promised to manage.

We have shaped First Federal and its success by following one guiding principle: to create a noticeable winning environment for our customers, employees, shareholders and the community we serve.

Each year we work to improve on our performance. In 1988, we strengthened our financial reserve, enhanced our products, improved our services and consulted with our customers. Every working day we call dozens of customers just to ask if they are happy with the job we are doing and to find out how we can do a better job.

One measure of our success has been our enviable financial performance. First Federal is a sound financial institution. Our impressive earnings record has been matched by steady asset growth and a strong capital position.

Another important success indicator has been the "very good or excellent" service rating we have received from 97% of our customers during the past year. Thank You!

The directors, management, and staff at First Federal wish you all success in 1989. Working together we will make our goals and yours a reality. That's our commitment.

Mernick, Trustee Begin Joint Heritage Operations

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORT MILL, S.C. — Stephen Mernick begins operation of Heritage USA along with the bankruptcy trustee today, but the Toronto businessman isn't expected to take a direct interest in the day-to-day operation of the Christian campground.

The joint operation will last until the closing — 30 days at the earliest.

As of today, Mernick is responsible for any losses on the facilities at Heritage USA and would receive any profits. Under joint management, Mernick will need bankruptcy trustee M.C. "Red" Benton's approval for actions he takes at Heritage USA.

"But that won't be a problem," Benton said, indicating that Mernick would pay for any changes he wants to make.

Mernick plans to visit Heritage USA once a week for the next couple of weeks, Benton said. And he planned to have two or three of his own employees working at Heritage USA full-time.

One will work at the hotel, one will work with the satellite television network, and another may work in the legal department.

The transition period will give the employees more security, Benton said. "I think it's an employee morale situation as much as it is a monetary one," he said.

Benton said Mernick has given no indication he plans to sell PTL's assets. Benton said Mernick will disclose his plans for the facility once they are made.

"He doesn't want to speculate or go off half-cocked," Benton said. "He's been delaying coming in and doing his exploratory work until his order for the purchase was final."

The joint management is the latest chapter in changes at PTL's Christian retreat since Jim Bakker resigned amid a sex and money scandal in March 1987.

The PTL ministry filed for bankruptcy reorganization in June 1987. The non-profit ministry arm is now separate from PTL's assets, which include the hotel, the water park, the television network and all the Heritage USA property. Those assets are what Mernick is buying for $65 million.

Benton predicts Mernick will lose as much as $200,000 a month in February and March, because occupancy will be down even further at the hotel.

Mernick's Toronto spokesman, Tom Reid, says Mernick sees PTL as a place he can turn around. Mernick bought the troubled Firestone Canada Inc. tire plant in Hamilton, Ontario, last year for the same reason, Reid said.

"He looks at what he sees as a general malaise, and he always looks for the potential," Reid said. "He's very optimistic and a very hardheaded businessman."

Mernick, 34, has a garbage-disposal company, landfill site, wastewater treatment business and travel company, Reid said.

Mernick also has several real estate developments his parents began building 40 years ago, Reid said.

N.C. Firms Scramble To Find Sites For Hazardous Wastes State Hopes S.C. Will Change Stance

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

North Carolina officials are preparing a bill they hope will let Tar Heel industries continue to ship hazardous waste to a South Carolina landfill, but with a ban just weeks away, many industries that ship waste to the landfill are getting frantic.

"We are now scurrying to find alternate sources for our hazardous waste," said Ron Mensik, vice president of operations for Watts Regulator Industries Inc. in Rutherford County. "It's going to be an extreme expense to us."

The legislation, requested by Gov. Jim Martin, would resume a search for a site for a hazardous-waste treatment plant and would repeal a four-year ban on the disposal of wastes within North Carolina.

Suspension of a site search by the 1988 General Assembly and the disposal ban helped prompt South Carolina Gov. Carroll Campbell last month to issue an order, effective March 1, barring waste from North Carolina and eight other states not searching for their own waste disposal site.

About 200 to 300 North Carolina businesses send their hazardous wastes to the GSX Chemical Services landfill in Sumter County, S.C.

"It's a question of whether it's sufficient," said Linda Little, executive director of the North Carolina Governor's Waste Management Board. She said the bill doesn't provide something else South Carolina officials want: repeal of a law that bars a proposed waste-treatment plant near Laurinburg by severely restricting its discharge.

In addition, unless North Carolina can demonstrate to the federal government by October that it can handle its own wastes, it faces a loss of "Superfund" cleanup money.

A spokesman for Campbell reacted favorably Friday toward the proposed North Carolina legislation.

"I can tell you ... that proposed legislation would be viewed as very encouraging by the governor's office," Tucker Eskew said, but he cautioned that South Carolina officials must review the provisions before making any decisions.

Little said other provisions would:

— Give Martin power to appoint a nine-member Industrial Waste Management Commission that would pick a site for a treatment plant by March 1990.

— Set a Jan. 1, 1993, deadline for operating a waste-treatment plant.

— Build waste facilities to complement those in other states.

Martin last month asked the legislature for authority to find a site after the legislature halted a search by the Hazardous Waste Treatment Commission. Residents in Lee, Rowan and other counties protested when they learned their communities were candidates for a waste site.

But some members of the General Assembly, including House Speaker Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, say they want the legislature to take the lead in solving the problem.

"I think the deadline from the governor of South Carolina is saying let's get off the dime and move forward," Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, said in an interview published Sunday in The Charlotte Observer. "I'm not intimidated by his statement of his March 1 deadline. I really have some legal questions about his ability to do that."

IN THE STATE

Bus Contract Rejected

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The negotiator for Charlotte's bus drivers and mechanics still believes a strike can be averted, even though union members voted overwhelmingly to reject the city's latest contract offer.

"We were having a problem out of some of our members wanting to strike today," Fred Warlick, chief negotiator for United Transportation Union Local 1715 said after two thirds of the local's 230 members voted Sunday to reject a 20-cent hourly pay raise.

About 35,000 passengers ride Charlotte Transit buses each work day. A two-year contract covering 264 drivers and mechanics expired at the end of January.

Warlick said a federal mediator promised to arrange a meeting for Monday. But David Hines, president of Transit Management of Charlotte Inc., which manages the bus system, said late Sunday that no union official had contacted him about a meeting.

New N.C. Junior Miss

GREENSBORO (AP) — Seventeen-year-old Heather Whitaker of Asheville was named North Carolina's Junior Miss 1989 at Greensboro's War Memorial Auditorium on Saturday night.

The first runner-up was Amy Gage of Durham.

Theresa Robinson, 17, of Greensboro, a senior at Southeast High School, was the second runner-up, and Michele Baird of Asheboro, representing Randolph County, was third runner-up.

Jennifer West of Kinston was fourth runner-up.

Miss Whitaker was a preliminary winner in the youth fitness and poise and appearance categories of the two-night program, sponsored by the Greensboro Jaycees.

Miss Whitaker won a $4,000 scholarship and will compete in the national Junior Miss competition.

Identity Problem

CHARLOTTE (AP) — North Carolina's sweet potato growers may soon be in the throes of an identity crisis.

Just last month, they finally got rid of the name "yam" from their trade group to more accurately reflect what they produce. The state grows no yams, but its $60 million crop produces 40 percent of the nation's sweet potatoes.

Now the federal government is throwing in another twist. It has decided that sweet potato is really one word: sweetpotato. The U.S. Department of Agriculture is apparently worried that somebody might think a sweet potato is an Irish potato that's sweet.

The USDA wants the state's growers, and their trade group, to go along with its idea. The N.C. Sweetpotato Commission has agreed, says Billy Yeargin, executive director of the group.

But the Sweet Potato Council of the United States, a Washington-based grower group, says the two-word spelling is a matter of principle.

Fire Damages Units

WILMINGTON (AP) — A fire damaged eight apartments and four townhouses at a Wilmington complex Sunday afternoon, but no injuries were reported, authorities say.

The fire apparently started in the rear of an apartment at the south end of the Governor's Square Apartments, according to Chief T.D. Eason of the Wilmington Fire Department. Fire investigators still were searching for the cause Sunday night.

Neighbors saw the smoke and called firefighters around 3:40 p.m.

Although smoke filled the affected townhouses and apartments, most of the fire damage was restricted to the upper floors except in the apartments next to the one where the fire started, Eason said.

Bakkers Have Grandson

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP) — Jim and Tammy Bakker's daughter says she had been praying for a boy, and that's just what she got when she gave birth during the weekend.

James Martin Chapman was born at 1:32 a.m. Saturday, to Tammy Sue Chapman, 18, and her husband, Doug Chapman, 26. The 6-pound, 10-ounce boy was named partly after his famous, televangelist grandfather.

Mother and baby were in good condition at Piedmont Medical Center, hospital officials said.

"I had been praying for a boy, and the Lord gave me what I wanted," a tired but happy Mrs. Chapman told The Herald newspaper of Rock Hill in a telephone interview.

The baby was born with thick black hair, "just like Sue's. Everything looks perfect," said Chapman.

Rock Hill obstetrician F.M. Lemmon, said the delivery was free of complications.

"Everything was very normal. She did beautifully," he said.

The couple named their son for Bakker; Chapman, whose middle name is Martin; Chapman's father, who also is named Martin; and Chapman's stepfather, James.

Brown greets delegates in Sacramento where he was elected state Democratic chairman

The Associated Press

Brown Back In Politics As State Party Leader

By Doug Willis
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Jerry Brown is back in the political arena after a six-year absence, promising as state Democratic chairman to combine old-fashioned organizing and modern electronic marketing to expand party ranks.

The 50-year-old former governor and two-time candidate for the Democratic nomination for president won his first election in more than a decade by defeating investment banker Steve Westly, a longtime volunteer unknown outside of party circles, by 1,591 votes to 777 at the state party's annual convention Saturday night.

"It feels very good. It feels great. It's been six years, but it feels like six months," Brown said as he ended the self-imposed political exile that followed his loss to Republican Pete Wilson in the 1982 U.S. Senate race.

The vote for the previously obscure unpaid post of party chair was Brown's first election victory since he won his second term as governor in 1978. He lost a series of presidential primaries in 1980 and then was defeated for the Senate in 1982.

He said he hopes to run for other, unspecified offices, but not during his current four-year term.

Brown said he is seriously devoted to "the nuts and bolts of party work," and he set an agenda that included redefining Democratic constituencies, reviving the local Democratic clubs that thrived in the 1950s and utilizing computer and telephone marketing strategies of the 1990s.

"It's my objective to build a party that links together the elected officials and the grassroots activists," he said.

"We have to energize and mobilize that party of non-voters, who are our natural clientele. Many are low-income voters who have not had a strong connection with the voting process," Brown said. "At the same time ... we have to reach out to the suburban voter and those who have been tending in the Reagan era to go against our candidates."

Westly argued that Brown would be "a lightning rod for political criticism," breathing new life into Republican attacks against controuversal events of Brown's tenure as governor, such as his appointment of unpopular former Chief Justice Rose Bird.

Other critics said Brown's notoriously chaotic administrative style didn't suit the detail-oriented duties of a state chairman, and they questioned Brown's new interest in a formal party structure that he shunned when he was governor.

Newspaper Says Astronauts Got Medical Waivers To Fly

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — The astronaut who commanded the first shuttle mission since the Challenger disaster had a kidney stone, which should have kept him from space, a newspaper reported.

Another astronaut who is scheduled to command a November mission is colorblind, a reason for flight disqualification, but received a waiver to fly, the Houston Chronicle reported Sunday.

The Johnson Space Center medical qualification board recommended last year that Discovery commander Frederick H. Hauck be disqualified because of the kidney stone but was overruled by Rear Adm. Richard H. Truly, NASA's associate administrator for flight operations in Washington, the newspaper reported.

The board also said Daniel C. Brandenstein, chief of the astronaut corps, failed an eye test in 1987 but received a waiver after Truly interceded, the newspaper reported.

A chief NASA administrator said no rules were broken in allowing the astronauts to fly.

"There have been no special dispensations and there has been no favoritism and there have been no medically disqualified astronauts assigned to the space shuttle missions," said Aaron Cohen, Johnson Space Center's director.

The newspaper said it obtained the information from members of the Flight Crew Operations, which includes the astronaut office, and the Space and Life Sciences Directorate, which includes the flight medicine clinic and medical operations branch at the space center.

Truly declined to comment on individual medical cases, but said: "I try to do two things. I try to make sure from the management view that the (medical) process works, that individual health problems are treated fairly by the (medical qualification) board and management, and secondly to protect the rights of the individual involved, and the major objective is to get healthy astronauts to the launch pad for the mission."

During October interviews and last week, Hauck and Brandenstein would not discuss their medical records, the newspaper said.

The Space Medicine Board grounded Hauck early last year because of a kidney stone problem; the recommendation was overruled and subsequently reversed, the newspaper reported.

Brandenstein failed the Farnsworth Lantern color perception test in 1987, but received the only waiver ever issued to an astronaut for color blindness, it said.

The approximately 2,000 circuit breakers and switches on the shuttle orbiter are color-coded, and some are used in the launch and re-entry, an unidentified source told the newspaper.

Brandenstein is scheduled to command the Columbia space shuttle in November. He has flown on two previous shuttle flights, in 1983 and in 1985.

Hauck flew on shuttle flights in 1983 and 1984, as well as commanding Discovery's September mission. He has said that the Discovery flight was his last shuttle flight.

The Chronicle said Hauck underwent a lithotripsy at Houston's Methodist Hospital in April to dissolve a kidney stone. The process, however, doesn't guarantee that another kidney stone will not form.

Porthole Cracks Halt Flight Concorde Returns To Paris For Repairs

PARIS (AP) — A supersonic Concorde jet en route to New York with 69 passengers returned to Paris after cracks appeared in a porthole as the plane was about halfway across the Atlantic, Air France said today.

Air France Flight 001 was at 59,000 feet and had just reached supersonic speed Sunday when the cracks were noticed at the top of the outermost of four glass plates in one porthole, said Air France spokesman Laurent Kressman.

He did not know who first noticed the cracks about 90 minutes into the 3 hour and 45 minute flight.

The pilot slowed the jet, dropped to 32,000 feet and returned to Charles de Gaulle airport, Kressman said.

Passengers were put aboard another Concorde, but the plane was delayed and travelers on the high-tech jet arrived about nine hours after the normal trans-Atlantic Air France flight to New York.

"They were not very, very happy," said Kressman.

The window was repaired and the jet was scheduled to make its regular 11 a.m. flight today, he said.

Conrail Chief Dies

BALTIMORE (AP) — Richard D. Sanborn, Conrail's chairman, president and chief executive officer, died Sunday of an apparent heart attack at age 52.

Air France has seven of the 100-seat supersonic jets. British Airways has just completed a maintenance check on its seven jets after small cracks were found in the roof structure of one plane.

Lawyer Says Teens Implicated Mrs. Mandela

By Laurinda Keys
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa

—A lawyer for three teen-agers said today his clients have told him Winnie Mandela was "involved in the events" when they were abducted from a church home and beaten by her unofficial bodyguards.

The statement by prominent anti-apartheid lawyer Geoff Budlender came one day after a newspaper reported that Mrs. Mandela, the wife of jailed African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela, took part in the alleged beatings.

Mrs. Mandela, 54, has denied the accusations contained in the Sunday Star, a Johannesburg newspaper that opposes apartheid. She has implied they were fabricated to hurt her husband.

Later today, an attorney who had been acting for Mrs. Mandela, Krish Naidoo, announced that he had resigned as her representative. He did not give a reason when reached by telephone by The Associated Press.

However, The Star quoted him today as saying "I felt it was not within the scope of my work to deal with the Mandela crisis."

The three boys, who are considering legal action, gave Budlender statements about what happened to them but have not authorized him to release details, he told the AP.

The boys were released from Mrs. Mandela's home after intervention by community leaders. But a fourth boy, 14-year-old Stompie Seipei, has been missing since Jan. 1 and his body was reportedly found last week.

Budlender said his clients "say they were abducted... and they were all assaulted on the first night. They say she (Mrs. Mandela) was involved in the events on the first night. They say Stompie was removed from them a day or two afterward and they never saw him again."

Mrs. Mandela has denied that she was at her home when the bodyguards, known as the Mandela United soccer club, brought the boys there. She has said they were taken from the Methodist Church house to protect them from sexual abuse, a charge the church said it has investigated and found false.

Community leaders in Soweto, a black township outside Johannesburg, and officials of the Methodist Church have accused the soccer club of abducting and beating the four boys last month.

The Citizen, a Johannesburg daily, quoted Zindzi Mandela as saying her mother would hold a news conference after visiting Nelson Mandela, who is held at a house on a prison farm near Cape Town.

An aide in Mrs. Mandela's office, who would not give his name, said she would hold a news conference Wednesday.

Zindzi Mandela was quoted as saying her mother planned to sue The Star and The Weekly Mail, an anti-apartheid newspaper that reported Friday that the body of Stompie Seipei had been found.

Police have been unable to confirm that report.

The Star said one of the four youths escaped from Mrs. Mandela's house and alerted community leaders meeting at a nearby Methodist church.

A well-known anti-apartheid physician, Dr. Abu Baker Asvat, went to the house, saw the beaten boys "and warned that Stompie had been so badly assaulted that he would not live," the newspaper said.

The next day, Asvat was slain at his Soweto clinic by two young men pretending to be patients. Police are investigating the killing to determine if it was linked to the Mandela controversy.

Mrs. Mandela has denied any wrongdoing and rejected reports of discord with her husband, the most popular leader among South Africa's disenfranchised black majority.

She told CBS News last week that no Mandela United members were involved in Stompie's disappearance. She was quoted Sunday by City Press, a black-oriented newspaper, as acknowledging that the boys had been taken to her home but saying she was not present.

City Press quoted Jerry Richardson, who describes himself as Mandela United's former coach, as saying he had beaten the boys to make them admit that they had been sexually molested by a white Methodist minister.

The president of the Methodist Church, the Rev. Stanley Mogoba, said the allegations of sexual abuse against the Rev. Paul Verryn were fabricated.

The exiled leadership of the African National Congress has urged Mrs. Mandela to disband Mandela United. She says the team has been disbanded but that about eight young men continue to live at her house.

Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok has appointed a senior police commander to investigate.

Nelson Mandela, jailed since 1962, is serving a life sentence for sabotage and plotting to overthrow the white minority government.

Anti-Apartheid Leader Joins Detainees In Hunger Strike

By David Crary
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The Rev. Allan Boesak, a prominent anti-apartheid leader, said today he has begun an indefinite fast in solidarity with black detainees staging a hunger strike to demand their freedom.

"None of us wish to die," Boesak said in a letter to Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok. "But if this is the road we must take to make you and your government understand the evil of your ways, we will take it."

Nearly 300 detainees held without charge are participating in the hunger strike, including some who have not eaten for three weeks. Thirteen reportedly have been hospitalized.

Police headquarters said today that news articles about the physical condition of the hunger strikers might violate state-of-emergency regulations, which prohibit unauthorized reports about the status of detainees, unrest, security force actions and a broad range of statements the government considers subversive.

Police also have banned any public meetings intended to show support for the hunger strikers. But Boesak, a mixed-race minister who is president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, said he planned to hold a solidarity church service this week.

The hunger strikers, who demand to be freed or charged, include 105 detainees at St. Albans prison in Port Elizabeth and about 170 at Diepkloof Prison outside Johannesburg. Some have been held without charge since the state of emergency was declared in June 1986.

Boesak released a copy of a letter he has written to Vlok explaining his decision to fast in support of the hunger strikers.

"Their action is a dramatic one which could have fateful consequences for all of us in this country," said Boesak, 43, who was detained for three weeks in 1985 for anti-apartheid activities. "It is in itself an extraordinary indictment of your government, most especially your system of detention without trial."

"Fasting until death is not part of my religious or ecclesiastical tradition," Boesak said. "But I cannot stand idly by and watch those who are struggling for justice in South Africa starve themselves to death... I now know what God wants me to do."

Boesak said: "I know first hand of the pain and uncertainty of the terror of solitary confinement and the unspeakable indignity and fear it brings."

He called on other South Africans to join the hunger strike.

American Bird A Hit

LONDON (AP) — More than 2,000 people invaded a housing development to see a little American bird, the first golden winged warbler recorded in Europe.

At one stage Sunday, police with bullhorns had to control the crowd as the birdwatchers, equipped with binoculars, telescopes and cameras, strained for a glimpse of the warbler at Maidstone, Kent, 40 miles southeast of London.

Some of the visitors were from Belgium and the Netherlands.

Ian Mills, a British visitor who traveled 270 miles to be there, said "I've been all over the country to look at rare birds and a crowd of a few hundred is not unusual but I've never seen anything like this."

"There were well over 2,000 people present when I was there and at times roads were choked and traffic could hardly move," he said.

"This must have been the largest gathering of bird-watchers to look at one bird there has ever been," said Richard Millington, a spokesman for the Birdline telephone information service, whose report about the warbler drew the crowds.

The warbler is thought to have been blown across the Atlantic in the fall of 1988 while migrating from its breeding territory in the northeastern United States and southeast Canada to Colombia and Guatemala for the winter.

Designers Praise The Simple Style Of Barbara Bush

By Robert M. Andrews
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Barbara Bush's fashion style is the perfect match for a no-nonsense Yankee patrician who favors the quiet elegance of a strand of pearls over eye-popping rhinestones and sequins.

"I'm not going to turn into a glamorous princess," Mrs. Bush remarked last summer. And after eight years of Nancy Reagan's high-gloss look, conservative New York fashion designers are breathing a sigh of relief.

"She brings a New England classic tradition to the White House instead of Hollywood glitz," said Gerald Brenner, a vice president of Adele Simpson's salon on Seventh Avenue, where Mrs. Bush has shopped for years.

"She likes simple, uncluttered clothes," Brenner said in a telephone interview. "I think she's sensational. There's nothing phony about her. She's a very nice, down-to-earth lady who happens to be very bright. She always looks good."

Canadian-born couturier Arnold Scaasi, who designed most of Mrs. Bush's wardrobe for inauguration week, says the new first lady dresses to please herself.

"I don't think she's ever going to follow the fad," Scaasi said in a telephone interview from New York. "She's going to wear what looks well on her, what suits her."

The designers say Mrs. Bush prefers classical, traditional clothing — shirtwaist dresses, three-piece suits and the like — and likes all bright colors, especially blue. Her dresses cover the knee, no matter whether hemlines are rising or falling.

Her trademark is a triple strand of pearls. "They're fake, and she'll be the first to tell you that," said Brenner.

"I think she has very good taste," said Scaasi. "She knows very much what she likes and what she doesn't like. She feels good about herself. She's a very warm, very open and very intelligent woman with a great sense of humor. She approaches dressing that way, too."

The first lady's press secretary, Anna Perez, said Mrs. Bush declined to discuss her fashion preferences with a reporter.

"She likes to look attractive, like most other women, but it's not a consuming passion in her life," Ms. Perez said. "She'd rather talk about other things."

Bill Blass, another of the first lady's favorite designers, agrees.

"I don't think clothes will be her preoccupation," he said recently. Blass designed the simple, teal-blue wool coat and collarless, cream-colored wool dress that Mrs. Bush wore to her husband's swearing-in as president.

Mrs. Bush, 63, wears a size 12 and laughingly calls herself "a full-figured woman." She wears the lightest of makeup, eats heartily, laughs boisterously and enjoys a good joke, often at her own expense.

"What you see with me is what you get," she says.

She recently told reporters that her style is getting some public applause.

The Associated Press

Mrs. Bush wears classic styles with her trademark pearls

"My mail tells me a lot of fat, white-haired, wrinkled ladies are tickled pink," she said. "They're very sweet. I think it makes them feel better about themselves. I mean, look at me — if I can be a success, so can they."

She poked fun at her appearance again during a pre-inaugural "Salute to the First Lady" at the Kennedy Center.

"Speaking of glamor, I want you to look at me very carefully," she told her audience as she opened the jacket of her Scaasi-designed blue suit.

"Please notice the hair, the make-up, designer clothes," she said. "I want you to watch me all week and remember — you may never see it again."

Silent Husband Has Needy Wife

Dear Abby: I'm sure I'm not the only woman with this problem, so maybe you can help many others if you answer this in the paper.

My husband never gives me a compliment. When I ask, "How was dinner?" he says, "I ate it, didn't I?"

If I ask, "How was our lovemaking?" he says, "I come back for more, don't I?"

If I ask, "How do I look (new dress)?" he says, "If I tell you that you look nice, you'll expect it often."

Abby, how I long for just one small compliment once in a while — a kind word, a show of affection from this man.

Perhaps someday, somewhere, some other man will discover how hungry I am for a little reassurance, and he will fill that need. Then, my husband will come home from work

Dear Abby

and I will be gone, and he will never know why. — Needy

Dear Needy: Usually those who are unable to compliment others have never been complimented themselves. And those who have never felt loved have difficulty expressing it to others. Don't be so hard on your non-verbal husband. Tell him gently how much you long for a compliment. Don't suffer silently and hope that one day some other man will discover your need and fill it. Verbalize. It will help your husband to become more verbal.

Dear Abby: There are a few things I would like to bring to people's attention about motels, since I live at one and work as a desk clerk there.

A motel is for sleeping, and is not the same as an apartment building! Please check into your room as quietly as possible. Your next-door neighbor may be trying to take a nap. Or he may be staying at the motel because he is working the night shift in the area.

Horn blowing, for any reason, is thoughtless! If you have friends visiting you in your room, please remind them not to blow their horn as they pull away. Of course, that goes for checkout the next morning. Please leave quietly.

Don't be the guy who empties his ashtray in front of his motel room. There are receptacles handy for that purpose.

Ah, yes, the pool! Please leave your loud radios in your room. Not all the swimmers want to hear the latest heavy metal rock songs.

If you have a wake-up call, please don't hang up the phone in the desk clerk's ear!

Heed these suggestions, and the desk clerk can say with conviction, "It's been a pleasure serving you."

Dear Desk Clerk: Good tips for guests. And speaking of tips, please leave something for the maid. Her job is one of the most demanding and least rewarding.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 6940, Los Angeles, CA, 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Buy Best Piano You Can Afford

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — Buy the best piano you can afford for your budding young player because making music on a quality instrument is an important part of keeping him interested, according to the National Piano Foundation.

The foundation offers these tips to help guide your purchase:

— Prices will vary depending on size, age and quality. Remember that the average life of a piano is about 40 years, and pianos depreciate very little. Spending a little more today for a higher-quality piano will reward you over the years by supplying better tone and performance for your child's efforts.

— Consider buying this first piano with a rental-purchase plan, an option many dealers offer. Under this arrangement, you rent the piano for a monthly fee plus delivery charges. When you decide to purchase the piano, your monthly rental fees may be applied to the purchase price. Such plans vary from dealer to dealer so be sure to ask for specifics.

— Talk with experts before you buy. Your child's piano teacher and his or her tuner are valuable sources of information about what to look for when buying a piano. Ask them to accompany you while shopping, too. They may charge a slight fee, but their advice will be well worth the cost if you've never purchased a piano before.

— Be especially careful if you decide to buy a used piano. Used pianos are much like used cars. Some are real finds, and some are real lemons. Hire a tuner to fully inspect any used piano you are seriously considering.

— Include your child in the purchase decision. He will spend years at this piano, and you will want them to be rewarding ones. A piano your child likes will be played much more frequently.

Once you buy a piano, give it some time to get acclimated to the environment of your home. You can expect to tune a new piano up to four times during the first year, then at least twice each year.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 53.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. 87 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a final weighted average of 53.85 cents. The market is steady and the live supply is adequate for a moderate demand. Average weights are desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina 2,107,000, compared to 1,966,000 last Monday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn mostly 1 cent higher, at mostly $2.75-$2.96 in the East; mostly $2.96-$3.01 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 6-11 cents lower at mostly $7.25-$7.40 in the East; mostly $7.10-$7.18 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly $4.03-$4.09; new crop corn $2.45-$2.70; new crop soybeans $6.72-$6.83; new crop wheat $3.50-$3.83. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were mostly steady to 1/2 percent higher and ranged from 97 percent to 100 1/2 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly today in a carryover of selling from last week. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 7.86 to 2,278.21 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 315 up, 744 down and 466 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 26.05 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Losers among the blue chips included Eastman Kodak, down 3/8 at 48; General Electric, down 1/8 at 46 1/8, and American Express, down 1/4 at 29 3/4.

But International Business Machines rose 3/8 to 125 3/8 and American Telephone & Telegraph was up 1/8 at 31 3/4.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell 47 to 163.54. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.17 at 321.60.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 36.97 to 2,286.07, extending its loss for the week to 45.18 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by more than 4 to 1 on the NYSE, with 300 up, 1,221 down and 446 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 173.56 million shares, down from 224.22 million in the previous session.

that "the trial could not go forward without an additional protective order."

Walsh had initially opposed further restrictions on evidence in the trial, but the department had countered with a threat to invoke the Classified Information Procedures Act, which gives the attorney general broad power to prevent disclosures. Such a move could make any trial of North impossible because his lawyers argue they could not present an adequate defense.

It wasn't known how quickly Gesell would rule on the motion. Since Rehnquist issued the stay, Gesell is expected to send the jurors home until he does rule.

department said it believes that "the joint motion will resolve any remaining differences" with Walsh regarding the handling of classified information.

The Justice Department said that without an additional protective order, "it will be impossible during the defense's opening statement and presentation of evidence to protect against the unnecessary and uncontrolled disclosure of classified information."

The department said that "an enormous number" of the 300 classified documents North may use at his trial "are not yet clearly covered by a protective order of the court."

Gesell issued rulings Dec. 12 and Jan. 19 spelling out how much censorship could be applied to classified material that the prosecution and defense planned to use at trial.

Tuition Hikes Opposed By Board Members

translate into 1 percent pay raises for faculty members, Whichard said. To achieve a 10 percent raise, tuition would have to rise about 100 percent, he said.

William E. Dansey Jr., a member of the ECU Board of Trustees, said all 132,000 students in the UNC system would have to pay about $500 more in tuition to generate the revenue necessary for an adequate pay increase.

Another option — increasing tuition for graduate students — would handicap North Carolina schools in their nationwide battle to land the most prestigious scholars, Whichard said.

"This could really cripple the universities if we increase the graduate tuition," he said.

ECU sponsored the briefing on behalf of UNC system President C.D. Spangler Jr., who has asked officials from the 16 institutions in the system to review the board's budget request.

ECU Chancellor Richard Eakin, who presided over the meeting, said the budget request calls for $67.9 million next year and $114 more the following year for salary increases. These 12 percent and 8 percent increases would come on the heels of three consecutive years in which faculty raises topped out at 5 percent.

Without the pay raises, Eakin said the UNC system likely will stumble.

"We are beginning to slip behind those state systems we like to think we are competing against," he said. "(If salaries are not increased), we could go into a real tailspin."

The board of governors' budget request does not call for a tuition increase for in-state students, but out-of-state tuition would rise 8.5 percent, Eakin said.

When Basnight asked Eakin if the General Assembly should consider an increase in in-state tuition if it appears to be the only way possible to fund the faculty pay hikes, Eakin said he still would strongly oppose the move.

"I do believe we have built a system that is extraordinary," Eakin said, arguing that North Carolina should hold to the tradition of offering affordable higher education to its residents. However, with state coffers bare, he said he realizes lawmakers may consider the move.

"Obviously, this is going to be a very difficult session of the General Assembly. It may be a pragmatic, political reality that it could be necessary that the General Assembly would have us seek an increase of in-state tuition," he said.

Under the state constitution, the state has a mandate to offer higher education for residents as close to free of charge as possible, Whichard said, and that is also a factor in the board's opposition to the increase.

"Public education shall be as near as possible free of cost. Even from a pragmatic standpoint, we can't ignore the constitutional mandate that we have in North Carolina regarding higher education," Whichard said.

In response, Basnight said lawmakers understand that goal, but they are searching for ways to fund the budget requests.

"I agree with that. But let's all understand this is a tremendous increase in revenue," Basnight said.

In addition to funding requests for faculty salaries, enrollment increases, operational costs and campus improvements, the board has asked for $508 million in capital improvements. Eakin said university officials across the state realize all projects cannot be funded this year, but he believes it is important for lawmakers to know the plans of the institutions so they may provide funding in the future.

Locally, the board has requested $24 million for an addition to ECU's Joyner Library.

"First and foremost, let there be no question about this ... I believe that the addition to Joyner Library has to be head and shoulders above any other capital request we have," Eakin said. "We must have new library facilities."

The university has run out of room for new books, Eakin said, and has been forced to remove seating and tables to make space for shelves. Less than 800 seats remain in the library, which serves more than 16,000 students.

Max R. Joyner Sr. of Greenville, chairman of the board of trustees, said ECU ranks 15th out of 16 in capital improvements per student over the last decade.

In the last 10 years, the state spent more than $15,000 per student at the N.C. School of the Arts and more than $3,600 per student at North Carolina State University, but it spent less than $2,200 per student at ECU, he said. The ECU figure includes funding for the medical school.

"We're not asking for more than our fair share. We'd certainly like, in the future, to get our fair share," Joyner said.

When Basnight asked Eakin what a fair share of the funding would be, Eakin said money for the library is a must.

"Obviously, I would be very disappointed if we didn't have the library funded this session," he said. The board also has requested $12.5 million for the first phase of a

"My heart is bleeding for Pakistanis who fell victims to the conspiracy of forces which are bent upon weakening the democratic government on the one hand and on the other hand for those who lost their lives due to an unwise administrative action," she was quoted as saying by the official Pakistani news agency.

The official English-language newspaper, the Pakistan Times, questioned the motive of the protesters.

"It is hard to see how (the United States) became the prime object of mob anger in the present case when both the author and the first publication of the book belonged elsewhere," an editorial said.

Senator Tom Taft suggested that the planned protest "certainly is heightening the awareness of legislators about their needs and concerns."

"I share the frustration teachers feel about the possibility of no pay raises and I'm doing all I can, as well as other legislators from Pitt County, to find the money."

Taft said, "The state has to find the money to insure excellence in education, even in difficult years."

RESOLUTION IN MEMORY OF C. D. LANGSTON
January 18, 1989

WHEREAS, The Local Board of Directors of First Citizens Bank (Greenville-Winterville) acting in formal assembly and speaking in behalf of its officers, its employees, its customers, and its friends wishes to express their profound sadness in the passing of their fellow director, Chairman of the Board and Regional Vice President, the beloved C. D. Langston; and,

WHEREAS, the fact that our community, state, and region have lost a faithful and compassionate humanitarian, a wise and understanding counselor, a warm and hospitable neighbor, an astute and upright businessman, a loving and kindly father, and an humble Christian is well known and widely recognized; and,

WHEREAS, C. D. Langston, while grasping the complexity of existence in the simple life and sought to serve and support his brother man in sharing his joy in living; and,

WHEREAS, C. D. Langston supported loyally his community, its institutions of learning, its churches, its serving agencies, its wholesome development, its people, and its spiritual growth; and,

WHEREAS, The Local Directors of First Citizens Bank (Greenville-Winterville) join with the community in expressing their sorrow at the passing of C. D. Langston, however with the certain knowledge that he in whom C. D. Langston placed his faith, continues to uphold his end and us by His grace. Therein do we find comfort.

NOW THEREFORE, be it resolved that a copy of this resolution be spread upon the minutes of this Local Board of Directors meeting and that a copy be presented to the family of the late C. D. Langston and be displayed in the Greenville and Ayden newspapers.

Approved this 18th day of January, 1989, by the Local Board of Directors of First Citizens Bank (Greenville-Winterville).

regional activities center for the area. The board has proposed a plan in which local governments would provide matching funds for the center, but state Rep. Ed Warren of Greenville said he will push for full funding by the state. The state has fully funded similar projects in other cities and should do so in Greenville, he said.

With state lawmakers under fire to find money for teacher pay raises and new prisons, Eakin acknowledged that he has no idea where the $12.5 million will come from.

The UNC system must also catch up with the rest of the country in computer resources, Eakin said. The board has requested $8.9 million for academic and administrative computing.

"We, as a state, have a ways to go to catch up in the state-of-the-art computers," Eakin said.

Heels Gain Revenge On Cavaliers, 85-67

UNC's J.R. Reid waits for a pass from Steve Bucnall as Virginia's Brent Dabbs defends

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

CHAPEL HILL — North Carolina took a step toward erasing a painful memory Sunday with a 85-67 win over Virginia.

The last time these two teams met on the basketball court, Virginia's Richard Morgan was playing on a different plane, canning three-pointers left and right en route to a career-high 39 points as the Cavaliers handed the Tar Heels a 106-83 shellacking.

It was a performance that was contagious as Virginia's bench came through with 43 points of offensive support in the win.

But as hot as Morgan was that Jan. 15 afternoon, he was just as cold this time around. He got many of the same shots but hit on only five of 22 attempts (including a 2-15 showing from three-point range) and scored 12 points.

"Richard didn't wait for the real good one, and then he had trouble when he finally got a good one," UNC coach Dean Smith said. "He didn't get many that we weren't running at him, but it wasn't the same guy I saw in early January."

"We pretty much just played better defense than we did at Virginia. Our scramble was more effective here than it was up there. Actually, the scramble is effective if they take a quick shot and they did take a quick shot at Virginia, but they made it. You aren't supposed to make all the quick shots you take outside."

As the trigger man for the Cavaliers' offense, Morgan's shooting woes were crippling.

"They are concentrating on him more and there are some things that we can do to improve the shots he gets," Virginia coach Terry Holland said. "Today he had some pretty darn good shots that did not go in. We can't do anything about those."

As a team, Virginia hit only 34 percent from the field compared to 62 percent for UNC.

The Tar Heels took command of this one early on, going on a 9-0 spurt three minutes into the game that put them ahead by a sizable margin.

"To beat a team like North Carolina, particularly the way they were playing today, we have to have a great effort from all five spots," Holland said. "We did not get that today. We played hard, I thought, pretty much the whole 40 minutes. They may have backed us off a little bit in the first half right when the game opened up."

Morgan hit one of his two three-pointers on the day with 17:40 remaining to pull the Cavaliers within 10-5, but Rick Fox worked free for a dunk at the other end to make it 12-5.

Morgan misfired on the next time down and UNC's Pete Chilcutt grabbed the miss. With 16:15 left in the half, Steve Bucknall hit a three-pointer for a 15-5 UNC lead.

After trading a number of possessions, Scott Williams blocked a shot by Brent Dabbs and eventually scored at the other end for a 19-5 lead.

UNC led at the half, 44-32. "We didn't have to go into a catch-up game," Fox said. "We were ahead. We jumped out and we let them know we were here to play. It was about time, I think. We kept our confidence. We made little mistakes but we made big plays also."

"I think we were more conscious of Morgan and we wanted to get the ball inside and I think we got them in foul trouble which helped."

The Tar Heels' leading scorers, Kevin Madden and J.R. Reid, didn't really see the ball that much as the Cavaliers packed the inside lanes. Reid ended up with 10 points while Madden had eight. Reid, in fact, fouled out with 7:08 remaining but it was a non-factor.

Bucknall led the Tar Heels with 19 points while Fox, starting in place of Madden, had 14 points. Jeff Lebo had 12 while Williams added 11 and 14 rebounds.

"Williams I thought was very active throughout the game and was important to the win," Smith said. "I thought Rick Fox seemed to get his confidence back."

"I'm sorry J.R. didn't get to play more (due to) foul trouble. When we got him the ball three times he got two. You have to give Virginia's defense credit."

"We have other people who can score. I'm not concerned. If we're Ickey Woods has his shuffle, and so does college basketball. For the fifth straight week, there's a new No. 1.

"When you really got down to it, and I had to be fair, I'd probably put us in there," Coach Billy Tubbs said after No. 5 Oklahoma beat top-ranked Arizona 82-80 Sunday.

Today, the Associated Press poll did, too.

With then-No. 2 Georgetown, No. 3 Missouri and No. 4 Louisville all losing in the last few days, the Sooners moved back on top.

"We volunteered last week," Tubbs said. "Any time you need us for No. 1, we'll do it. Someone's got to do it."

Arizona, Duke, Illinois and Oklahoma have been bounced from No. 1 in four consecutive weeks. For three straight weeks, the nation's three highest ranked teams have each lost.

In other games Sunday, UCLA beat No. 4 Louisville 77-75, No. 6 North Carolina defeated Virginia 85-67, No. 13 Indiana got past Purdue 64-62, No. 19 Nevada-Las Vegas downed No. 17 North Carolina State 79-70 and No. 18 Stanford beat Washington 82-74 in overtime.

On Saturday, Pittsburgh stopped No. 2 Georgetown 79-74, No. 3 Missouri beat Kansas 93-80, No. 7 Illinois topped Northwestern 86-69, Wisconsin surprised No. 8 Iowa 65-54, No. 9 Syracuse trounced St. John's 92-69, Minnesota tumbled No. 10 Michigan 88-80, No. 11 Seton Hall defeated Villanova 83-77, No. 14 Duke routed Maryland 86-60, No. 15 West Virginia beat Penn State 100-67, No. 16 Ohio State held off Michigan State 81-75, and No. 20 Georgia Tech topped Wake Forest 75-70.

Oklahoma, 21-3, won its 27th straight home game. That includes a 112-105 victory over third-ranked Missouri earlier in the week. This

UNLV Avoids Pack Rally To Claim Win

RALEIGH — The final minutes of Nevada-Las Vegas' game with North Carolina State were a flashback for Runnin' Rebel coach Jerry Tarkanian.

Free throws weren't dropping for his team and 3-pointers were falling for the Wolfpack, and Tarkanian saw scenes of Thursday night's game against California-Fullerton.

Nineteenth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas lost that game, but the Runnin' Rebels used defense down the stretch to beat No. 17 N.C. State 89-80 on Sunday and snapped a 17-game home winning streak dating back to last season.

"Really, Fullerton was a nightmare for me," Tarkanian said. "I'll never get over that as long as I live."

"We're worse than any team I've ever heard of at the free throw line and it just killed us. I thought it was going to kill us at the end of this game. It was like a nightmare when they kept fouling us."

The Runnin' Rebels were nursing a five-point lead when they missed the front-end of two one-and-one situations in the final minute. But their defense created turnovers that offset the misses.

David Butler scored 21 points and Stacey Augmon added 20 to lead Nevada-Las Vegas.

Butler's 15 first-half points contributed to the Runnin' Rebels' 15-point halftime lead, and Augmon's 12 points in the second half helped Nevada-Las Vegas stave off an N.C. State comeback.

Nevada-Las Vegas got off to a 26-9 start and held a 49-34 lead at halftime.

The Runnin' Rebels held on to a 63-52 lead with 12:37 left on the strength of Augmon's shooting. The 6-foot-7 sophomore forward scored 10 of Nevada-Las Vegas' first 14 points in the second half.

The 1988-89 basketball season is winding down. There are only a couple of more weeks left before the tournaments begin, and East Carolina's Pirates probably won't make the goal that many pre-season prognosticators gave them.

Coming off last week's road trip, the Pirates are only 10-12, with four home games left to play along with one road contest. They are thus guaranteed only six more games, counting the first round of the Colonial Athletic Association tournament.

To ensure a winning regular season, the Pirates must win four of the five before the tournament. The odds of that aren't great although it definitely is a possibility. The Pirates have the home-court advantage against American, Navy, Liberty and UNC-Wilmington. They also have already beaten Campbell, the one team they have left on the road. Ironically, that game may turn out to be the key. A Pirate loss in that, since it is the next game, would send the Pirates into a four-game dive with a tough conference game against American coming up.

American still has a shot at winning the regular season championship, but has a key game with Richmond ahead.

This may be the scenario for the finish: Richmond, American and George Mason all tied at 11-3, followed by UNC-Wilmington, James Madison, East Carolina, William & Mary and Navy, in that order.

ECU, however, has the best chance to be the master of its own fate, with all of its remaining league games at home.

Time will tell.

It's going to be interesting to see what happens at the University of South Carolina in the wake of the tragic death of Coach Joe Morrison.

According to the best reports we've heard, the South Carolina people would love to have N.C. State's Dick Sheridan. And, according to best reports, Sheridan would like nothing better than a return to his alma mater.

However, the timing may not be right. Sheridan has just turned down the head coaching position at the University of Georgia, citing a "commitment" to N.C. State. He would really look bad if he left there now.

But, if the stories are true that Sheridan really wants the job, it might be his last chance. He is said to have been a leading candidate for the job before Morrison was hired but withdrew, feeling he was not quite ready for that level of competition.

If he turns it down this time, will he get another chance down the road? One South Carolina official told us earlier this year that there were still some USC people who remember that, and not fondly.

Sheridan would probably be willing to take the job eight months from now, when the 1989 season is over. He would be able to leave State gracefully then.

So the ball may be in South Carolina's court to appoint an interim coach to

West Topples East In All-Star Game

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — Coach Pat Riley had the best seat in the house for watching the next generation of superstars in the NBA.

He saw the new wave, led by Utah's Karl Malone and John Stockton, take a few plays from the Jazz playbook as the West beat the East 143-134 Sunday in the NBA All-Star game at the Astrodome.

"Stockton, Dale Ellis and Malone are showing us that we are seeing the changing of the guard in the league," Riley said. "The young stars are really making their impact."

The West started the game in a gallop and had taken control by the second quarter with Stockton feeding passes to Malone.

Riley also gave the record crowd of 44,375 what they wanted by sending retiring Kareem Abdul-Jabbar onto the floor for the final time in an NBA All-Star game.

Abdul-Jabbar played 13 crowd-pleasing minutes and it didn't matter to the fans that he didn't score until two seconds remained in the half and he connected only once with his famous sky hook.

"I just wanted see him hit that sky hook before it was over," Riley said. "He thought it might be his last chance."

Abdul-Jabbar replaced Akeem Olajuwon of Houston in the final minutes of the game and finally hit a hook, his only field goal of the game.

"I wanted to see me get a field goal too," Abdul-Jabbar said. "It might be my last chance."

Malone, voted the game's most valuable player, scored 28 points, including 8-for-9 shooting in the first half.

Isiah Thomas of Detroit scored 19 points and Philadelphia's Charles Barkley added 17 points for the East.

Ellis, $20,000 richer after winning the long distance shooting contest on Saturday, scored 27 points for the West.

Stockton scored 11 points and had 17 assists for the game, including an All-Star record nine assists in the first quarter.

Stockton finished second to Malone in balloting for MVP after replacing Magic Johnson as the West's starting point guard.

"Magic is the best point guard in the league," Stockton said. "None can ever replace him. Today was just one of those days when I saw the floor real well and everybody just anticipated the passes."

After Johnson had to withdraw from the All-Star game because of a hamstring injury, Riley decided to take a few pages from Utah's play book.

"As soon as I learned that Magic wouldn't be there, I switched to the Utah Jazz offense," Riley said. "Stockton really did a good job of running the team."

The West took control over a two minute span of the first quarter.

Starting from a 12-12 deadlock, the West outscored the East 13-2, jumping to a 25-14 lead.

In that run, Stockton had four

Ken Schrader takes the checkered flag in Sunday's race

Schrader Holds On To Win Busch Clash

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Ken Schrader bears little resemblance to teammates Darrell Waltrip and Geoff Bodine — except when he's on the race track.

Schrader is as quiet and self-effacing as Waltrip and Bodine are outspoken and controversial.

But the native of Fenton, Mo., who now makes his home in Concord, N.C., is making plenty of noise at Daytona International Raceway.

Schrader, who won his first Winston Cup race last July at Talladega, Ala., came up with his richest payday Sunday, earning $75,000 in winning the Busch Clash, a 20-lap sprint for last year's pole winners.

The victory came on the heels of a fast lap of 196.997 mph on Saturday that earned Schrader the pole position for the Daytona 500 for the second straight year.

"We'll know come (next) Sunday if this has been the best week of my racing career," Schrader said after he held off Davey Allison and Terry Labonte to win the Clash.

"This (race) didn't pay any points. It was worth $75,000, but winning on Sunday would be worth a lot more than that."

Schrader started from the pole Sunday in the 13-car race after picking the top spot in a blind draw.

He kept his Chevrolet Monte Carlo in front until Waltrip's Chevy drove past on lap four.

Gymnastics Club Competes At Sectional

GREENSBORO — A trio of girls from the Greenville Gymnastics Club fared well in a Class II qualifying sectional held at the North Carolina Gymnastics Academy in Greensboro this weekend. Jennifer Mohror won first place in the all-around competition of the girls 15 & Over age group with a combined score of 64.20. Mohror finished first in floor exercise with a 17.40, first on the balance beam with 15.20, first in vaulting with 17.10 and second on the uneven bars with a 14.50. In the 12-14 age group, Diane Dorney took third place overall with a mark of 63.40. Dorney was second in the floor exercise with a 17.35, fourth in vaulting with 16.4, fourth on the uneven bars with 15.0 and sixth on the balance beam with a 14.65. Also in the 12-14 age bracket, Katherine Daniel was fourth on the balance beam with 14.75, and sixth in floor exercise with 16.10.

South Carolina To Meet With Sheridan

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — University of South Carolina officials will meet early this week with Dick Sheridan of North Carolina State to talk about the Gamecocks' vacant head football coaching position, a Greenville newspaper reported Sunday. The Greenville News said the meeting with the Wolfpack's football coach could come as early as Monday or Tuesday, but school officials from both South Carolina and N.C. State were unable to confirm that a meeting had been scheduled. The News did not say how it obtained the information. Joe Morrison, South Carolina's coach for the past six years, died Feb. 5 of a heart attack after playing racquetball. He was buried Thursday in his hometown of Lima, Ohio. Sheridan, 47, is a graduate of South Carolina and native of North Augusta. He served as head coach at Furman before moving to N.C. State in 1986 where he has compiled a 20-13-2 record and a pair of Peach Bowl berths in three years. He confirmed early last week that he had been "unofficially" contacted by South Carolina representatives. But he would not discuss his plans. Sheridan turned down an offer in December to become coach at the University of Georgia. In addition to Sheridan, South Carolina assistant head coach and defensive coordinator Joe Lee Dunn and former East Carolina head coach Art Baker are believed to be under consideration for the post. Baker, a Sumter native, coached East Carolina from 1985-88 and compiled a 42-56-1 record. He left at the end of last season and now serves as South Carolina's associate athletic director and director of the Gamecock Club, an athletic booster organization.

Lendl Tops Gilbert To Win Volvo Title

CHICAGO (AP) — Brad Gilbert had the sinking feeling he was at mid-reel of yet another screening of "Ivan The Terrible" and helpless to change the ending of a movie he'd already seen too many times. "His backhand passing shot always gives me trouble. I saw a lot of those go by," Gilbert said after Ivan Lendl overcame a rocky start and the 20th-ranked American 6-2, 7-6 (7-3) to claim the championship of the $350,000 Volvo-Chicago Tennis tournament Sunday. "Unfortunately, the forehand to most guys' backhand is my best shot," Gilbert added. "But then, most guys are not Ivan Lendl." And even on his worst days, Lendl, the world's No. 1 player and already victorious in last month's Australian Open, 1989's first Grand Slam tournament, is better than most guys on their best days. He definitely began as though Sunday was an off day, lethargic and still obviously feeling the effects of having had to stave off two match points in a late Saturday night semifinal win over defending champion Tim Mayotte. But he also came in having subdued Gilbert in all 14 of their previous meetings. "We basically play the same game. We rally, then get the short ball, hit the ball hard and come in to the net," said Lendl. "But I think if you take most of the aspects of the game — serve, stamina, forehand, backhand, all of it — I'm just a little bit better." "And if you put that all together, it makes a huge difference." But not in the early going. Gilbert, who gained the finale by dispatching Argentine Horacio de la Pena, opened the match with two of his five aces and one of the five service winners he collected on the day — and still lost his serve. Just as quickly, Lendl gave the break back. But, uncomfortable with the gift, Gilbert promptly dropped four straight points — three on unforced errors — and Lendl moved from a 2-1 advantage to a decisive 5-2 lead with another break in the seventh game. He served for the set and won it with a backhand passing shot that was typical of his dominant ground strokes at that juncture of the match. And when Lendl broke Gilbert in the opening game of the second set, he appeared on the fast track towards the $60,000 first-place prize. "Then he got derailed." "I was trying hard, but I wasn't playing with a game plan. That's why you saw so many strains in my matches this week," Lendl said. "I just hit the ball hard and if goes in, it goes in," he added, "and if it doesn't, it doesn't." Few enough did to enable Gilbert to climb back into the match. The American turned breaks in the fourth and sixth games into a 4-2 advantage. But then Gilbert, who wound up taking home $25,000, suffered a meltdown of his own. Lendl's break in the seventh game put the match back on service and, ultimately, into the tiebreaker. There, Lendl won the first three points, rolled quickly to a 6-3 advantage and put the match away with a cleverly disguised half-volley off the forehand side. And the ease with which he finally put Gilbert away should worry future opponents. "I'm still winding down from the Australian," said Lendl, "and I haven't really done any serious training since then. I just took this match as fun and treated it that way." Americans Rick Leach and Jim Pugh earned $10,000 for their 7-5, 6-4 win over Andres Gomez of Ecuador and Nicolas Pereira of Argentina. The losers split $5,000.

Borg Denies Reports Of Suicide Attempt

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Calling rumors that he tried to commit suicide "ridiculous," five-time Wimbledon champion Bjorn Borg expressed optimism about his future. Borg was hospitalized in Italy last week and had his stomach pumped. The incident first was reported as a possible suicide attempt. "I'm fine. I'm well off. I have made money on tennis. ... There is really no reason for me to think about suicide," Borg said in an article in the newspaper Expressen. He said he fell sick after eating frozen fish at his fiancée Loredana Berte's Milan apartment. In an attempt to fall asleep despite the nausea, he took "a few" sleeping tablets. "If you take 60 sleeping pills, you don't walk out of the hospital a couple of hours later. That's ridiculous," Borg said, speaking at his parents' home at Cap Ferrat, Monaco. Borg, 33, also said he planned to play tennis with American President George Bush at the White House the first week in May. In explaining why he quit playing tennis in 1983 at the top of his career, he said life had become "empty and monotonous." "When I was 20, 21 and 22, there was only tennis. But when I turned 25, 26, I started to worry and think 'what happens when I'm 35?'"

AP Poll Has New No. 1 Again

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Oklahoma regained the No. 1 ranking in The Associated Press college basketball poll today, the fourth consecutive week a new team has taken over the top spot.

The Sooners, who held the No. 1 ranking for one week before dropping to fifth in last week's poll, pulled an impressive double to reclaim it, beating No. 3 Missouri and top-ranked Arizona in four days.

Oklahoma, 21-3, received 58 first-place votes and 1,273 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters to easily outdistance Arizona, 18-3, which dropped one spot with two first-place votes and 1,162 points.

Duke had held the No. 1 ranking for nine weeks before falling and setting off the month of weekly top-ranked teams.

Illinois followed but lost at Minnesota. Oklahoma was next but lost at Oklahoma State. Arizona followed and was knocked from the top spot by Oklahoma's 82-80 victory on Sunday.

It was another week of parity in college basketball as 12 members of the Top Twenty lost a total of 14 games, five suffered by the top four teams. Five different teams were named No. 1 on the 64 ballots cast.

Last week, six teams were tabbed No. 1.

Missouri, 21-4, remained third despite the loss to Oklahoma, receiving two first-place votes and 1,096 points. Georgetown, 18-3, dropped from second to fourth after losing to Pittsburgh 79-74. The Hoyas had 1,001 points, 13 more than Illinois, 20-3.

The Fighting Illini, who were seventh last week, had 988 points to edge Syracuse, 21-4, which received 974 points. The Orangemen, Fighting Illini and Oklahoma were the only members of last week's Top Ten not to lose last week.

Florida State earned its highest ranking of the season as the Seminoles, 19-2, were seventh with one first-place vote and 813 points. Florida State had reached eighth two weeks ago.

North Carolina, Indiana and Louisville rounded out the Top Ten.

The Tar Heels, 19-5, received 791 points in dropping one spot, while Indiana, 20-5, rose from 13th to ninth with 752 points.

Louisville, which lost two of three games last week to fall to 17-5, dropped from fourth to 10th with 731 points.

Duke, 17-4, led the Second Ten with 641 points that included the final first-place vote. The Blue Devils were followed by Seton Hall, Michigan, West Virginia, Iowa, Ohio State, Stanford, Nevada-Las Vegas, North Carolina State and Louisiana State.

Last week's Second Ten was Seton Hall, Florida State, Indiana, Duke, West Virginia, Ohio State, North Carolina State, Stanford, Nevada-Las Vegas and Georgia Tech.

Louisiana State, 17-6, is the only new member of the poll as the Tigers replaced No. 20 Georgia Tech, which lost to Virginia last week 78-71.

Louisiana State broke the 100-point mark in both its victories last week, beating Auburn 104-91 and Tennessee 122-106. Freshman Chris Jackson led the Tigers, who are in first place in the Southeastern Conference, against Tennessee with 50 points.

Madison Basebatter Found Dead Sunday

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HARRISONBURG, Va. — James Madison officials say they are investigating the death of a sophomore baseball player who apparently killed himself over the weekend.

The body of pitcher Dan Haycock, 19, was discovered at the school's baseball stadium about 10 a.m. EST Sunday, university officials said. "We're all just as shocked as we could be," James Madison coach Brad Babcock said.

According to university spokesman Fred Hilton, James Madison police are investigating the death, which is being treated as a suicide. Officials said Haycock apparently shot himself in the head with a 12-gauge shotgun early Sunday.

Hilton said Haycock had been arrested and charged with driving under the influence of alcohol about 2 a.m. Sunday after leaving an off-campus party for the team.

Teammate and roommate Steve Schwartz said Haycock did not appear unhappy or depressed.

"He was happy ... a nice guy, one of the boys," Schwartz said. "I couldn't see anything that would have brought this on, except for the fact that baseball, to him, was everything and the fact that he got caught for a DUI ruined all his hope."

Haycock, who was in contention for a starting spot in James Madison's pitching rotation this season, posted a 2-2 record last year with an 8.17 ERA in 11 games with the Dukes.

trying to get the ball into Kevin or Scott or J.R., I'm satisfied."

Really, UNC never missed him. "That's going to happen," Reid said. "Virginia is a good defensive team and they did a good job on post defense. They really sagged back on us but the other guys took up the slack."

Virginia's front-court of Matt Blundin, Dabbs and Stith, along with reserves Jeff Daniel and Kenny Turner, did its best to keep a body on Reid and deny him the ball. It opened things up for others like Fox, Bucknall and Williams.

"In college basketball, you can stop anybody who shoots," Smith said. "You have to give up some things and they played off our passers and we could have had all the shots we wanted. We were stubborn some and I'm glad we were. We screened for him and they did a good job. Sometimes you have to give credit where credit is due."

The closest Virginia got from their seven points at 49-42 with 14:44 left in the game, but that spurt was shortlived.

King Rice fed Williams for a basket. After a free throw by Virginia's Bryant Stith, Williams then added a tip in for a 53-43 lead and UNC was never in trouble again. The lead went as high as 22 points at 84-62.

Other than that, Virginia never rallied in the second half. Stith (20 points) and Blundin (16 points) were the only Cavaliers enjoying any success offensively. Board play, too, hurt Virginia's hopes as UNC held a 50-43 edge.

"When we go straight man to man and don't do a lot of trapping we are in better position to get the rebound," Reid said. "I think today, with Crotty out there, we did a lot more straight man to man and it worked for us."

After winning six straight, including the romp over UNC at home, Virginia has found life on the road tough. This was their second straight loss on the road, including a 85-66 loss at Duke Feb. 8.

"Whether or not that is consistent with most teams I don't know," Holland said. "But it certainly has become a factor with us. So it's important for us to find a way to play well on the road."

"It's very difficult to win on the road against good teams. Right now everybody in the league is pretty darn good and every road win you get you walk away and say, 'Thank the Lord.'"

UNC moves to 19-5 and 6-3 in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Virginia falls to 13-8 and 5-4.

serve through the 1989 season. If that's what they do, Sheridan's stock automatically goes up.

There were rumors just before Morrison's death that former East Carolina coach Art Baker might be named offensive coordinator for the Gamecocks. It's also been said that Baker might likely hold that same position on a Sheridan staff, should that occur.

Now, the talk is that Baker could end up with the interim head coaching position. Al Groh, who also has head coaching experience, seems to have fallen on hard times with the Gamecocks and probably won't be considered. Defensive coordinator and assistant head coach Joe Lee Dunn is another top candidate, and just might earn the head job on his own.

It all depends on whether the Gamecocks really do want Sheridan and whether they will wait a year for him.

assists and Malone hit three baskets in a row.

The West led 47-31 at the first quarter and its biggest lead was 76-45 with 3:53 left in the first half.

"In the locker room yesterday (Saturday) before practice, most of the team had that look in their eye," Malone said. "Last year, a lot of us were just happy to be on the West squad and a part of the All-Star game."

"But this year, we wanted to win it. We were determined to give it our best shot."

The East rallied in the second half to make the final score respectable, led by Chicago's Michael Jordan, who scored 16 of his 28 points in the second half.

The East reduced its deficit to 123-116 with 5:56 to go in the game, setting the stage for a close finish.

But the West's 9-0 spurt ended the East's hopes. Ellis hit a basket and a free throw, Malone hit a 20-foot jumper followed by Ellis' dunk and another dunk by Malone.

"We got off to such a slow start, we just couldn't put the ball in the hole," Jordan said. "We were down by 20-plus points at the half and that took some of the luster off the game."

The West led 87-59 at halftime, breaking the record of 86 first half points set by the West in 1962.

But the Wolfpack rallied, using a 14-5 run to cut the deficit to 68-66 with 7:12 left. Sophomore Rodney Monroe, who finished with a career-high 37 points, hit two 3-point jumpers and a 12-footer to spark the run.

"At times we felt it slipping away," Augmon said. "Everything was going for them. We had to stay calm and put the ball in the hole."

The defensive effort shut down the Wolfpack comeback.

Nevada-Las Vegas used strong inside play by Butler and reserve center James Jones to build the lead to 80-72 with 1:32 left, and N.C. State couldn't pull closer than three points down the stretch.

"I don't want to take anything away from them, but we weren't as fired up as we needed to be in order to beat an outstanding team like Nevada-Las Vegas," N.C. State coach Jim Valvano said.

"Rebounding is somewhat part emotion," Valvano added. "I thought in the first half, we were terrific. Jerry's team was terrific and we didn't move or hit the glass. We lost the game in the first half."

Greg Anthony added 14 points for Nevada-Las Vegas, now 16-6, and Anderson Hunt had 13.

Monroe scored 16 second-half points — 12 on 3-point jumpers — to lead the Wolfpack, 15-5. Chris Corchiani finished with 16 points.

Jordan, Thomas Highlight All-Star Game

By Hal Bock
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — They keep score at All-Star games because somebody has to win and somebody has to lose. The point of these events, though, is not the score, but the show.

So forget that the West beat the East 143-134 in Sunday's NBA convention of the best basketball players in the world and remember instead that one magic moment when Isiah Thomas and Michael Jordan grabbed this game by the lapels and took it into their own little world, a private place populated by precious few mortals.

These two learned their basketball in entirely different worlds, Thomas a product of the concrete courts in Chicago's inner city, Jordan a country kid from rural North Carolina. Both led their colleges to NCAA championships before moving into the NBA early. And both share a special sense, an understanding of creativity and spontaneity that marks them as special.

On Sunday, for one wonderful instant, they put it on display.

The West All-Stars were in the midst of a record first half scoring surge that would produce 31-point lead and a halftime bulge of 87-59. The West made 60 percent of its shots in the first 24 minutes. One of the rare misses, however, set off the Thomas-Jordan show.

When Akeem Olajuwon missed a six-foot shot in the lane, Kevin McHale pulled down the rebound for the East. He looped the ball the other way and suddenly Thomas swooped down on it, like a hawk dive-bombing its prey. A step behind him was Jordan.

There was no one back to defend for the West, so the play evolved into a two-on-none break. It was an innovation for two of the game's most innovative players to do their thing. They did not have to be asked twice.

Thomas caught up with the ball and dribbled once and then again as he advanced on the basket. The logical thing to expect was a layup, an easy two points. That would be conventional. Isiah Thomas is a lot of things. The last one, though, is conventional.

So there was perhaps one more dribble and then Thomas launched a bounce pass, not to Jordan, but to the basket. He slammed the ball to the floor so that it bounced high and kissed the backboard.

Right behind it, here came Mr. Jordan.

Twice before, Thomas had tried the play and it had missed. This time, though, Jordan was on the fly and this time it would not miss.

"When you're down 20 points, it doesn't look like you have a chance to win the game, so you just want to entertain the fans," Thomas said. "The game is for the fans. I wanted to make sure they had a good time. They probably saw some things they hadn't seen before."

Indeed.

Jordan, it seems, has seen or done everything before. He was ready for Thomas' wrinkle. He soared toward the basket from the right side, taking off as if propelled by jets, his tongue out. That is a telltale sign of his concentration, a tipoff to pay attention because something special was about to happen.

As the ball came off the board, Jordan grabbed it with his right hand in one magnificent motion.

Now he drove it down back through the basket for a slam dunk, the perfect marriage of power and grace, basketball's ultimate exclamation point.

Newton's law of gravity brought

Jordan back down to earth, his legs spread wide, his face contorted in the little boy grin that told you he knew he had done something special, something above the ordinary, something All-Star games are all about.

Score two points for the East. It should have been more. You ought to get two points for ordinary layups and jump shots. For what Thomas and Jordan did, two points seemed like they had been short-changed.

Thomas finished the game with 14 assists, several on baskets by Jordan, who had 28 points including a few more of those fly through the air with the greatest of ease shots.

The one they'll remember best, though, was the two-on-none when they made the ultimate statement of All-Star creativity.

Mailman Delivers Message Sunday

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — The Mailman finally got his stamp of approval.

Karl Malone is not considered a superstar in the class with Magic Johnson, Larry Bird, and Michael Jordan. But he's a lot closer to that status today after delivering a powerful performance in the NBA All-Star Game on Sunday.

Malone's effort put a national spotlight on him that he doesn't receive that often playing in Salt Lake City for the Utah Jazz.

He contributed 28 points, three coming on resounding slam-dunks, and had nine rebounds for the West in a 143-134 victory over the East.

It didn't hurt Malone's bid for superstardom that the game was on national television and an All-Star game record 44,735 were in the Astrodome.

"I read a story that said this game wouldn't be the same without Magic and Bird (both injured)," Malone said. "I cut that article out. It inspired me because I disagreed with the article totally. The NBA has a lot of great athletes."

Malone knows he isn't a household name yet although he is starting to make the covers of some national magazines based on his play in the NBA playoffs last year.

He's not in a television market like New York, Los Angeles, and Chicago.

"I may be from the big country but for one day, I'm king of the city," he said. "There are probably a lot of people saying 'Who is that guy?'"

Malone was magnificent in the NBA playoffs last year as the Jazz took the Los Angeles Lakers to seven games in the Western semifinals before losing.

He averaged 29 points per game and drew the respect of the Lakers' Pat Riley, who was also the West coach in Sunday's game.

"You can see the changing of the guard in this league and Malone is certainly one of those coming on," Riley said.

Malone did it the hard way.

His family couldn't afford a hoop during childhood days in the rural community of Mt. Sinai, La. Karl was the second youngest of nine children.

His mother, Shirley, improvised by holding her arms in a circle so Karl could practice shooting baskets in the backyard.

Her reward on Sunday was sitting on the MVP podium with her son.

"I brought my mother to sit up here with me today for a reason," Malone said. "When she was serving as a basket by holding her arms to her chest a lot of people would pass by and laugh."

"They would say 'what is she doing, he's never going to amount to anything.' Well, I guess they were wrong."

The 25-year-old Malone wasn't a highly sought player coming out of high school. He attended Louisiana Tech where his power game caught the eye of NBA scouts.

It was so powerful that Malone twice shattered glass backboards.

Malone's reputation spread when the sports information director mailed pieces of the backboard to sports editors across the country.

About that time, Malone was nicknamed "The Mailman" because he always delivered crucial points in a game.

Malone also developed a reputation as moody player. The 6-foot-9, 250-pounder wasn't selected until the 13th pick of the NBA draft by the Utah Jazz. The Dallas Mavericks, for example, passed over him for what they perceived as a "clubhouse lawyer" reputation.

Malone had 22 points and 10 rebounds last year in his first All-Star game.

He started for the West on Sunday on the basis of his 22 points and 10 rebounds per game this season.

Malone admits he raised his game to another level when John Stockton became his teammate.

Stockton, who had 17 assists including six on Malone baskets, should have shared the MVP award, Malone said.

"I wouldn't have been disappointed if John had won it. I'd like to split it down the middle," Malone said. "It would have been great to see anybody from the Jazz win it."

Malone now awaits to be discovered by Madison Avenue.

He's colorful: Malone owns two 18-wheelers, has been a deputy sheriff, and wants a second career as a body builder.

Ebony and Playboy magazines are talking to him about features.

Sunday's All-Star game could be the day Malone will mark down as the beginning of his superstardom.

Sauers Claims Hawaiian Open Title

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONOLULU — It's been a great three weeks, Gene Sauers said.

"First, my son, Gene Jr., was born Jan. 23," he said. "Then I finished fourth in LA" and won $41,333.

"Then this."

"This" was his one-stroke triumph in the Hawaiian Open, only the second victory of his six-season PGA Tour career.

It was worth $135,000 and completed the most productive two-week period of Sauers' career. Sauers has some of it earmarked.

"I've got to put that boy through college," the Savannah, Ga., native said.

On a more immediate basis, his birdie-birdie finish in the weather-shortened tournament put him halfway to a seasonal goal.

"I'd kind of set a goal for myself, to win two tournaments this year," Sauers said Sunday. "I've won one. Now, I've just got to buckle down and see if I can go on and win another one."

And it could come soon, Sauers suggested.

"I like these Bermuda grass greens," he said. "I'm from the South and that's the kind of greens I grew up on. That's the kind I usually play my best on."

And it's the kind he'll play in his next four starts. Sauers, who is taking some time off this week, ticked the off: "Doral, Honda, Bay Hill, the Players Championship. I like all of them. And I've played all of them pretty good before," he said.

While Sauers was considering what might be, David Ogrin was thinking of what might have been.

"I'm in shock," said Ogrin, the principal casualty of Sauers' chip-in birdie on the 18th hole. "I feel just like I did when I lost to Hal Sutton in that playoff in Memphis '83."

That was Ogrin's best chance for a victory before he and Sauers went to the tee on the final hole at the rain-soaked Waialae Country Club. At that point, Sauers held a one-stroke lead, secured when he holed a 12-foot birdie putt on the 17th.

On the par-5 18th, Ogrin put his third shot about 10-12 feet below the cup, in prime position to make birdie. When Sauers bounced his third shot off a photographer behind the green, the advantage appeared to shift to Ogrin.

Sauers, however, pulled a sand wedge from his bag — while television commentator Lee Trevino was insisting that the putter would be more appropriate — and chipped the ball into the cup for the birdie that won it.

It finished off a 7-under-par 65 and completed the best 54-hole total on the tour this year, a 19-under-par 197.

Nicklaus Earns Cash, Pride In Australian Skins Game

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PORT DOUGLAS, Australia — Jack Nicklaus made it a worthwhile trip to Australia, for his pride and pocket.

Nicklaus won $254,250 over two days in the inaugural Australian Super Skins golf tournament, finishing ahead of Curtis Strange, Greg Norman and Isao Aoki.

"I feel terrific," he said. "I haven't been in a winning situation too often recently, but the adrenaline still pumps."

Nicklaus, 49, birdied three of the first nine holes Sunday to win $126,000. He got an additional $33,250 when the final five holes and two playoff holes all were split.

Nicklaus said he had not been troubled by a back injury that threatened his career last year.

"I hardly felt my back at all," he said. "I'm pleased with the way I played."

Strange, the U.S. Open champion, won $173,250. Norman, of Australia, got $132,750 with a strong finish, while Aoki, of Japan, collected $47,250.

Norman made an 18-foot birdie putt on the second playoff hole, but Nicklaus, winner of 18 major titles, sank a four-footer to tie the hole and earn each player $33,250.

There was no provision in the rules for a third playoff hole. The total purse was $607,500 in the richest skins tournament ever. The event was patterned after the popular American version.

Under the skins format, prize money for each hole increases unless the hole is won outright.

Holes one to nine over the 6,890-yard course were worth $9,000 and 10 to 18 $13,500. Holes 19 to 27 offered $18,000 and the final nine holes were worth $27,000 each.

Nicklaus and Strange each won $94,500 Saturday, the opening day of the 36-hole event over the par-72 Mirage Country Club course.

Mowry Sinks Five-Foot Putt On 18 To Win In PGA Seniors

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. — Larry Mowry buried an unhappy period of his life a few years ago and is eyeing an even brighter future than he imagined possible.

Mowry won the 50th PGA Seniors Championship Sunday, making a five-foot putt to save par on the last hole to capture the most significant victory of his career since completing a 90-day treatment program with Alcoholics Anonymous 10 years ago.

"This whole thing probably won't sink in until they send me off the tee in Tampa and announce me as the PGA Seniors champion," Mowry said, looking ahead to next weekend's tour event.

"Nothing like that has ever happened to me. I've been announced as Colorado Open champion, Florida Open champion and some others, but this is a major," he added. "This gets a big monkey off my back. I think a lot of people will recognize me now."

The former mini-tour standout doesn't talk a lot about the drinking problem he had in the days when he carried liquor onto the golf course in a soft-drink bottle. Instead, he speaks with optimism about what's ahead for a 52-year-old who says his game is just beginning to blossom.

"It's almost like I've lived two lives. That other person is dead as far as I'm concerned. I buried him a long time ago," Mowry said after shooting 65 in Saturday's third round. "I'm just starting to learn who this fellow is."

Mowry didn't play near as well Sunday but was good enough to hold off Al Geiberger and Miller Barber by one stroke. He shot 1-over-par 73 in the final round yet didn't back in to the victory.

Study Says Teen Survey May Predict Alcohol Abuse

By Malcolm Ritter
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A questionnaire assessing beliefs about alcohol can identify adolescents who are likely to drink excessively within a year of taking the survey, a study says.

The 90-item test also may indicate what steps would best help each individual avoid problem drinking, researchers said.

Junior high school students who believed alcohol could help them think or improve their physical coordination tended to be at particular risk, said Mark Goldman, a psychology professor at the University of South Florida in Tampa.

His study in this month's Journal of Consulting and Clinical Psychology is the first demonstration that a measure of psychological dependency can predict later alcohol use and tendencies toward problem drinking, said G. Alan Marlatt, director of the Addictive Behaviors Research Center at the University of Washington in Seattle.

"It's certainly a very exciting development," he said.

Peter Nathan, director of the Rutgers-affiliated Center of Alcohol Studies in Piscataway, N.J., said the study represents an advance in identifying "what looks like a rather important difference" that distinguishes early adolescents at risk of an alcohol problem.

The predictions were not perfect, but Nathan said their accuracy was "pretty impressive."

Since writing the paper, Goldman said, researchers have found the questionnaire also indicates risk of problem drinking within two years and possibly three.

The questionnaire measured how strongly students believed that alcohol could help them relax, be sexier, think better, enjoy social gatherings more, or perform better socially or athletically.

Prior research shows that such expectations strongly affect the way a person behaves after drinking, quite apart from chemical effects of alcohol, Goldman said.

The research followed the theory that "the stronger they believe that alcohol has those positive effects, the more at risk they are for problem drinking," said Goldman.

But if such beliefs can be undermined early, it might reduce the attractiveness of alcohol and prevent problem drinking, he said. The questionnaire may help by pinpointing the key beliefs that put individual teen-agers at risk, he said.

For example, a teen who looks to alcohol for axation can be taught other methods, or perhaps stress in his life can be removed, Goldman said.

The most predictive part of the questionnaire measured the belief that alcohol improves social performance.

"It's what you'd expect an adolescent to find important, which is how you get along in the social scene," Goldman said.

Another risky belief was that alcohol "makes you think better and maybe perform better" physically, he said. "Believe it or not, these kids think you might drive better under the influence of alcohol. Those are the kids who are really seriously at risk."

The researchers gave the questionnaire and a confidential survey on drinking to 871 students in seventh and eighth grades, ages 11 to 14. A year later, the researchers were able to collect data on the drinking habits of 637 of them.

In that intervening year, the percentage of students who got drunk at least twice jumped from 10 percent to 25 percent. And while 7 percent said in the first survey that they had consumed 12 beers or more at a single sitting, the number rose to 20 percent a year later.

Those measures and others such as alcohol-related fights, crimes and trouble at home or school were used to define problem drinking. Analysis showed that the incidence of problem drinking by the students was significantly related to how they had answered the questionnaire a year earlier.

The relationship also appeared for the 550 of the 637 students who had not reported any sign of problem drinking at the beginning of the year.

The other researchers in the study were from the University of Wisconsin Medical School, Wayne State University in Detroit and Hope College in Holland, Mich.

Former Rep. Hendon Hoping Balloons Will Aid POW Effort

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONG KONG — A former U.S. congressman who helped launch balloons bearing offers of a $2.4 million reward for the release of American prisoners of war said Sunday he is confident the balloons will reach Vietnam and Laos.

William Hendon, 44, said he and relatives of three American servicemen missing from the war released 600 to 700 balloons from a trawler 40 miles south of Hong Kong and 375 miles off the Vietnamese coast over the weekend.

"Our balloons will stay up 36 hours and I feel confident some will land in Laos and Vietnam," Hendon said in an interview.

Each helium-filled balloon carries a message in Vietnamese and Laotian offering the reward in cash or gold to anyone who turns over to U.S. custody one or more American prisoners of war.

Hendon, a two-term Republican congressman from North Carolina defeated in 1986, said his POW Publicity Fund is convinced U.S. servicemen still are being held captive in the two countries, 14 years after the conflict ended.

The U.S. government says it has been unable to prove that any of the 2,383 Americans listed as missing in action are held prisoner, but it says the possibility cannot be discounted, and investigations continue.

Vietnam and Laos deny holding U.S. servicemen.

Hendon's group was formed by families of the missing men and others to advertise the reward pledged mostly by 21 members of Congress.

The former congressman was accompanied by Elizabeth Stewart of Washington and Bobby Bischoff of Wilson, N.C., whose fathers are among missing U.S. servicemen, and Jeffrey Donahue of Cocoa Beach, Fla., whose brother is missing.

Debate Continues Over Jet Fighter Deal With Japan

By Barton Reppert
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A potential battle is brewing between Congress and the Bush administration over plans to transfer to Japan $7 billion in advanced aircraft technology developed for the U.S. Air Force's F-16 fighter.

The controversy over Japan's proposed FSX warplane casts a shadow over last week's summit visit by Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita, the first foreign leader to be hosted at the White House since President Bush took office.

Under the pending agreement, St. Louis-based General Dynamics would join forces with Japan's Mitsubishi Heavy Industries to co-develop and co-produce a new-generation Japanese fighter, for deployment in the late 1990s.

Proponents say the deal is the best that could be negotiated in view of Japanese refusal to buy wholly American-built planes, and that it fosters beneficial technology transfer in both directions with Japan while generating income and jobs for U.S. industry.

Critics, however, contend the agreement amounts to a technological giveaway that will enable the Japanese to compete more effectively against this country in the global aviation market. They argue that Tokyo should purchase American-made fighters to help offset the $50 billion U.S. trade deficit with Japan.

The FSX issue surfaced during a Capitol Hill meeting Friday between Takeshita and Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., and a group of other senators involved with trade and foreign affairs.

During the closed-door meeting, questions over the proposed deal were raised by Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., according to Japanese officials who briefed reporters after the session.

Danforth was among 12 senators who signed a letter to Bush urging that his administration conduct a complete review of the FSX agreement, which had been negotiated under the Reagan administration.

The letter, organized by Sens. Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M., and Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said the deal posed complex issues including defense burden-sharing and the "long-term impact on the health and competitiveness of the American aerospace industry, the only high technology area in which the United States remains the undisputed world leader."

"We are requesting that you order a complete review of the FSX program within the administration, including the departments of Commerce, Labor and Energy, as well as the Office of the Trade Representative and the White House science office," the senators told Bush.

After the letter went to the White House, Secretary of State James A. Baker III said at a meeting Thursday with Japanese Foreign Minister Souda that the administration was, in fact, reviewing the jet fighter project and no decision on it had been made.

Japanese officials said Uno urged Baker to process a license quickly and notify Congress of the technology export. The Japanese have said they want to start the project before March 31, the end of their fiscal year.

A memorandum of understanding on the FSX was signed last November by U.S. and Japanese officials. Once the administration finally certifies the agreement, Congress would have 30 days in which it could vote to disapprove the deal.

Fueling the controversy over the FSX was an article Jan. 29 in The Washington Post by Clyde V. Prestowitz, a former Commerce Department official and outspoken advocate of a hard-line U.S. stance in negotiations with Japan.

Prestowitz said the deal would increase the U.S. burden of defending Japan "by diverting scarce Japanese defense dollars ... from immediate procurement needs into a 10-year project."

Also, he wrote, "it will transfer technology developed at great expense to U.S. taxpayers at very low cost to a country whose primary interest is not defense but catching up with America in aircraft and other high-technology industries."

Alvin A. Spivak, a spokesman for General Dynamics, responded that under the deal American industry — including the No. 2 U.S. defense contractor and other companies — will receive 35 percent to 45 percent of the $1.2 billion being spent on development of the FSX as well as a comparable share of the $5 billion production program.

The agreement offers a chance "to provide jobs for American workers and to bring many hundreds of millions of dollars into the American economy that otherwise would stay in Japan if they were to develop their own fighter aircraft," he said.

"Know what? Everybody in our family has a birthday in the same year."

Horoscope By Bil Keane From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY Feb. 14

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Mingle with those who are upbeat and on your wavelength. Your energy and enthusiasm are high. Make new social contacts.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): This day can be exhausting unless you remain organized. Make a priority list so as not to overlook an important matter.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Avoid negative criticism and arguments that leave an unfavorable impression. Use your communication skills wisely.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Are your complaints justified? You may be challenged by others when you act out emotions without tact.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): You can act to advantage today if you take the initiative. It may be difficult to arouse yourself to action. You may prefer relaxing activities.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): This is the time to make a good impression on a VIP who has you in sight for advancement. Your feelings for others are sincere.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): There is an element of sacrifice in the way you let others intrude on your life. It is impossible for you to solve everyone's problems.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Current affairs are trivial, take up valuable time, lead nowhere and can have you bogged down. Stay with objectives that have importance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You have been driving yourself harder than usual. Understand your limitations. Confide in a trusted friend who can help you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Concern yourself with your own personal goals. Inner tension is created when you neglect your own potential and talents.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): You will give full effort today in whatever you undertake. Recognition comes when you don't expect it. Stay on the present course.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Work behind the scenes and develop new skills that will lead to job success. Patience will be required.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A762 ♥932 ♦K ♣J10652
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Dbl ?
What action do you take?
A.—Since East's double is primarily a takeout for the major suits, there is no point to showing your weak spade suit. And why venture two clubs? Although you have the values for one no trump, your hand is unbalanced, so all you can do is pass to see how the auction develops.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ4 ♥AKJ762 ♦73 ♣Q9
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—This is borderline. If you have a partner who might drop the bidding in two hearts, jump to three.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ4 ♥AKJ762 ♦73 ♣Q9
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—The fact that your queen is now in partner's suit makes a world of difference—it is probably worth a full trick. Now a jump to three hearts (or a reverse bid of two spades, if you like the fancy stuff) is clear cut.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠762 ♥AQ6 ♦Q5 ♣AJ1092

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♣ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
1 NT Pass 2 ♥ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—The fact that you have a minimum opening bid and excellent second suit support for partner's three-card suit doesn't relieve you of the obligation of finding your side's best spot. Partner's first-bid suit is at least as long, and probably longer, than his second, so you must correct to two spades despite the disparity in the strength of your holdings.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ5 ♥AQ ♦AKQ1087 ♣63
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1 ♥ Dbl Pass 2 ♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—We suppose that the theoretically correct bid is a jump to three diamonds. However, if you are going to play for nine tricks, why not at no trump? There is no guarantee that you can make three no trump, but it's certainly worth a shot—especially since you're likely to get a heart lead.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠6 ♥A105 ♦AKJ ♣AQJ762
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with three spades. What action do you take?
A.—Not an ideal hand, but who promised you that life would be a bowl of cherries? Double, despite the fact that you lack a fourth heart. Ideally, you hope partner will pass or bid three no trump. Should he bid four hearts, pass and hope for the best. At least the spade ruffs will come in the hand with short trumps.

Berlin Film Festival Prompts Look At Troubled War Years

By Carol J. Williams
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BERLIN — Fifty years after the outbreak of World War II, the 1989 Berlin International Film Festival has paused for reflection on the conflict that divided Europe and is probing the scars it inflicted throughout the world.

The 39th annual film event has set no specific war theme for this year's contest and will in fact exhibit some prominent entries delving into unrelated subjects, such as Alan Parker's "Mississippi Burning" and Barry Levinson's "Rain Man."

But the festival, which opened Feb. 10, has coupled the Golden Bear competition with a retrospective marking what would have been the 100th birthday of German-American producer Erich Pommer, and a showing of films made in 1939 that appear to have inspired European filmmakers to take another look at those troubled times.

As a tribute to Pommer, who fled Nazi Germany the year Adolf Hitler took power and returned after the war to rebuild the nation's film industry, the festival will screen 34 of the prolific producer's works, including "The Blue Angel" starring Marlene Dietrich, and several films directed by his lifelong associate Fritz Lang. Pommer died in Los Angeles in 1966.

The wartime thread running through the festival is enhanced by the memorial series "Europa 1939," which resurrects 50 films produced that year in 10 European nations, giving audiences a full taste of the society, culture and politics of a continent on the brink of disaster.

An accompanying forum for young filmmakers likewise breathes in the historical atmosphere of Europe a half century after Hitler's march began. Max Ophuls' critically acclaimed documentary, "Hotel Terminus" recounts the role of Lyon Gestapo chief Klaus Barbie. American filmmakers have offered "Lodz Ghetto," about the largest Jewish ghetto set up by the Nazis, and "Vienna Is Different," confronting Austrians' historical consciousness following the exposure of Austrian President Kurt Waldheim's Nazi past.

The 12-day festival combines the international competition for the award for best new feature film with a number of other contests, premieres, exhibits and markets to draw thousands of the film industries most prominent directors, producers, cinema operators and film buffs to Berlin.

Among the dozens of films to be shown for the first time outside their country of origin are Woody Allen's "Another Woman," and the first-ever joint film production by East Germany and West Germany, "The Break," which follows the chaotic lives of a handful of Berliners in 1946.

While East Germany has failed to embrace the broader freedoms "glasnost" has brought to the arts in much of the Soviet bloc, West German filmmakers and other artists are hoping "The Break" signals a new willingness among their socialist countrymen to work together in cultural and entertainment fields.

Twenty-two full-length feature films are entered in the main competition, with U.S. filmmakers out front with four entries.

In "The Summer of Aviya," directed by Israel's Eli Cohen, a young girl learns to cope with the mental instability of her mother, a survivor of the Auschwitz concentration camp.

Japanese director Yoji Yamada conveys in "Hope and Pain" the post-war resettling of some school children and their eventual rebellion against the imposed American order.

"American Stories," from Chantal Akerman of Belgium, relates tales told by those who fled war-torn Europe from their perspective as immigrants in New York, and China's "Evening Bell" by director Wu Ziniu recounts a last-ditch attempt by Japanese troops to escape capture in the final days of World War II.

Entries from the United States include "Mississippi Burning," a fictionalized account of the murder of three civil rights workers in the 1960s; "Talk Radio," Oliver Stone's story of a late-night talk show host driven by ambition to exploit his lonely listeners; "The Accused," Jonathan Kaplan's account of a gang rape and its legal aftermath; and "Rain Man," about the relationship that evolves between an autistic man and his self-seeking younger brother.

Film Critics Siskel, Ebert Plan Special On Highlights

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — Amid the tackiness of the recent syndicated television convention here were those defenders of good taste, or at least good entertainment, film critics Roger Ebert of the Chicago Sun-Times and Gene Siskel of the Chicago Tribune.

Head To Head

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC's Johnny Carson is holding his own against CBS' Pat Sajak, though the newcomer is doing better than most who have taken on the king of late night.

In the most recent A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings, during the hour when the two shows are opposite each other (Sajak's 90-minute show is a half-hour longer than Carson's) "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson" had an average rating of 5.9 and a 19 share. "The Pat Sajak Show" had a 4.1 and 15 share. Each rating point represents 904,000 homes with televisions. The share is a percentage of sets in use.

During the last half-hour of "Sajak," which is opposite the first half-hour of "Late Night with David Letterman," Letterman, too, is prevailing. In the most recent Nielsen, "Sajak" had a 2.8 rating and Letterman a 3.4.

Star Watchers

ROME (AP) — Robert Urich, who starred for years as detective Dan Tanna on "Vegas" before starring for years as detective Spenser on "Spenser: For Hire," recently found that fame has no boundaries.

During a visit to Rome with his family, they toured the Sistine Chapel where signs galore warned, "No Flash Pictures." Urich said he was appalled by a sudden flash from a camera and turned to see who had tried to take an illegal picture of Michelangelo's masterpiece. A group of Italian students had taken the picture of HIM, and pointed and cried out, "Dan Tanna!"

Urich, of course, most recently participated in the triumphant "Lonesome Dove" on CBS.

Benefit For Homeless

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer-songwriter Paul Simon's "Graceland" album will be reprised this week as musicians, comedians and politicians get together in a fund-raiser for charity.

Hugh Masekela, Ladysmith Black Mambazo and other musicians will join Simon on Thursday night in a benefit performance for the homeless. Tickets start at $1,000.

Robin Williams and rhythm-and-blues singer Ruth Brown also will perform, and Gov. Mario Cuomo is scheduled to speak.

Proceeds will be divided between Simon's Children's Health Fund, which provides health care for homeless children in New York City, and the HELP Organization, which builds transitional housing for homeless families.

In a "cave" Buena Vista Television had constructed in back of the exhibition hall, the two critics took up their places in front of a snackbar and popcorn machine to announce that next month they will tape a one-hour retrospective of great moments from their movie review show.

Originally, they were paired on the PBS series, "Sneak Previews," but more recently in the syndicated series "At the Movies" and "Siskel & Ebert & the Movies." The clips retrieved from 12 years on the air together will be titled "Siskel & Ebert's 500th Show Celebration."

"We don't know if it's the 500th show," said Ebert. "It's around the 500th show. It sounded better than 'Siskel and Ebert's 503rd Show Celebration.'"

They said the highlights of the special, to air in June, will include best arguments; outtakes; collections of parodies of the pair, such as the one in the movie "Hollywood Shuffle;" best and worst films; and interviews with stars who get to say what they think of the critics.

Long-time competitors in the Chicago newspaper market, Siskel and Ebert became an underground hit when they first began bantering on public television. They later left public TV for a more lucrative syndication deal. As evidenced by their appearance at the National Association of Television Programming Executives here, they have gotten an effective standup routine down pat, too.

Since the beginning when a scruffy pooch leaped into the seats to announce the weekly "Dog of the Week" — the week's worst movie — they have co-starred with a collection of critters.

Siskel recalled that when the dog was replaced with a skunk, the striped bearer of cinema symbolism did not immediately recognize the importance of facing the camera, so the director had to frequently call for someone to "spin the skunk." "I thought, 'I'm on a show where they spin the skunk,'" Siskel recalled with distaste.

Ebert remembered an animal handler who wanted to use a turkey vulture in the role. "My only regret is that we never got to work with a vulture," he said wistfully, noting in an aside to Siskel, "or at least YOU didn't."
