Teachers Mass 4,000 Strong For Pay Protest

By John Flesher
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — More than 4,000 teachers, many carrying posters and wearing green, packed an arena at the state fairgrounds today to denounce Gov. Jim Martin's proposed one-year salary freeze and call instead for a raise of more than 10 percent.

Velma Leake, president of the Charlotte-Mecklenburg NCAE chapter, drew a roar from the crowd when she said teachers not only wanted a cost of living increase but a 10 percent pay raise this year.

"We are here to talk to our legislators and ask them to have the courage to unfreeze our salaries and to place teachers on the steps they reflect in years of experience," said Ms. Leake, who is scheduled to meet privately with Martin after the rally.

The protesters filled all 4,768 seats in the arena, and the parking lot was jammed with buses, vans and cars bringing teachers from across the state, including the Charlotte-Mecklenburg teachers who came up with the idea. Teachers from several other counties, including Robeson, Cabarrus and Bladen counties also were taking part in the rally. Teachers from other counties, including Pitt, protested Monday night.

Ms. Leake said it was appropriate that the teachers meet in the James B. Hunt Jr. Horse Arena, which was built while Hunt was governor and teacher salaries were frozen.

"Our money built this facility," she said as the crowd stood and roared.

The teachers, some wearing facsimiles of dollar bills for corsages and others in green sweatshirts or T-shirts, carried posters urging state leaders to "Defrost Our Salaries."

Others carried similar messages: "We believe in the 3 Rs: Raise, Raise, Raise," "Have a Heart. Loving To Teach Doesn't Pay The Bills," and "Teachers Can't Live On Apples Alone."

The teachers invited Democratic House Speaker Joe Mavretic to speak to them before their march to the capital, but the governor's office said teachers spurned an effort by Martin to address the group.

The protest closed the Bladen County school system, where a secretary at the school board office said most of the county's teachers had come to Raleigh for the protest.

The Bladen County school board, in an emergency session last Thursday, voted to add an extra day to the school year since more than 150 teachers had requested today off for the protest and only 90 substitute teachers could be found in the small, rural county.

"This will allow our teachers to go to Raleigh without facing the financial burden of paying for substitutes and worrying about their students," said school board chairman Dawson

Study Panel OKs Highway Projects

RALEIGH — After 16 months of debate, the Highway Study Commission has approved recommendations for construction projects that would spur economic development by bringing four-lane roads to all parts of the state.

The panel agreed Monday to pay for loops around major metropolitan areas and to pave 10,000 miles of secondary roads in the first 10 years of the plan, with the remainder to be paved in the succeeding five years.

Rep. Gerald Anderson of New Bern, a member of the study commission, said there are about 12,000 miles of unpaved secondary roads in the state. "Under our proposal, we would pave 10,000 miles of them in the first 10 years. The additional 2,000 miles would be paved as the traffic count reaches 50 vehicles per day, on a first-come, first-served basis."

Included in the package for the east is a four-lane U.S. 64 from Tarboro to Manteo; a four-lane interstate standard U.S. 17 midway between Greenville and Washington, from Virginia to South Carolina, and the upgrading of U.S. 264 from its intersection with I-95 west of Wilson to Greenville, to interstate standards, including interchanges and bypasses at Wilson and Greenville.

Sen. Tom Taft of Greenville said this morning, "The meeting was encouraging in that it was the first formal action in the legislative journey toward successful enactment of this road construction package."

"There's a lot of hard work left," Taft said. "But I believe the foundation has been laid over the last four years to bring this much needed program to fruition in this session of the Legislature. I am working hard behind the scenes for its passage."

House member Ed Warren of Greenville said, "We've been working together on this. There are some very good things in it and I think it's a good package."

"The eastern part of the state will benefit tremendously," he said.

According to Anderson, who has been pushing for good roads for the

Legislators Say Public Cry Needed

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Area legislators told Pitt County teachers Monday that they support the educators' efforts to get more money in their pay checks, but it's going to take a "ground swell" of public support to get the pay they want.

About 70 teachers met with state Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, and Reps. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, Walter B. Jones, D-Pitt, and Gene Rogers, D-Martin, in Greenville to discuss Gov. Jim Martin's initial proposal to delay an increase in the salaries of teachers and other state employees until 1990.

In addition to the meeting in Greenville, a group of Pitt teachers traveled to Raleigh on Monday to participate in an evening vigil with Wake County teachers at the Governor's Mansion. They wore green armbands and carried signs to express their concern about teachers' salaries.

"I've never seen the Legislature do everything the governor wanted or didn't want," Jones said in Greenville, explaining that the governor's proposal has not been adopted by the Legislature.

"We do support a raise for teachers, but it is a difficult budget year," Jones said.

Recently, Martin said he would ask the General Assembly to adopt a pay increase of about 4.5 percent for teachers and state workers this year.

But Pitt teachers said Monday that a raise of only 5 or 6 percent will not make their salaries comparable to those in industry.

"With only a 5 or 6 percent increase every year, we never get caught up with industry," William Wahl, a teacher at E.B. Aycock Junior High School, said. "Where are we going to go if we only get 5 or 6 percent?"

The Pitt teachers are asking for a raise of at least 10 percent and that their salary scale be unfrozen. They suggest the state halt the implementation of the Basic Education Program to get the money to pay them, if need be. They also do not support the implementation of the Career Ladder Program, which is being

Khomeini Order: 'Kill'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini today ordered Moslems to seek out and kill the publishers and author of "The Satanic Verses," an acclaimed novel many Moslems consider blasphemous.

"Whoever is killed doing this will be regarded as a martyr and will go directly to heaven," Tehran Radio quoted Khomeini as saying when he "sentenced" author Salman Rushdie to death.

Indian-born Rushdie, who denies the book blasphemes the faith he was born into, today told the British Broadcasting Corp. that he takes the threat "very seriously indeed" and may consider asking British authorities for protection.

But he added, "It seems to me that Islamic fundamentalists could do with a little bit of criticism right now."

In violent demonstrations against the book, at least five people have been killed in Pakistan and one person in India when police fired into stone-throwing mobs.

The book is banned in those countries, as well as in South Africa and some other Islamic nations. Protesters want the book banned in the United States.

Rushdie, interview from London.

said he regretted the violence. But he told CBS "This Morning":

"Frankly, I wish I had written a more critical book. I mean, a religion that claims, that is able to behave like this; religious leaders, let's say, who are able to behave like this, and then say that this is a religion which must be above any kind of whisper or criticism, that doesn't add up."

Tehran Radio quoted Khomeini as saying:

"I would like to inform all the intrepid Moslems in the world that the author of the book entitled 'Satanic Verses'... as well as those publishers

Union Carbide Accepts Bhopal Settlement

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW DELHI, India — The Supreme Court today ordered Union Carbide Corp. to pay the Indian government $470 million for the 1984 gas leak in Bhopal that killed more than 3,300 people — the world's worst industrial disaster.

The payment is to be made by March 31 as "full and final settlement of all claims," said Gopal Subramaniam, an attorney for the Indian government in its suit against the Danbury, Conn.-based corporation.

India sought damages of $3 billion for the leak of methyl isocyanate at the Bhopal pesticide plant, which is operated by Union Carbide's Indian subsidiary. The civil suit, in which more than 500,000 people filed for compensation, bogged down in legal maneuverings in a series of Indian courts.

Subramaniam said India agreed to drop all criminal charges against Union Carbide officials as part of the settlement.

Warren Anderson, former Union Carbide chairman, was charged with culpable homicide in the disaster.

South Ayden Group Seeks Police Help

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

AYDEN — When Horace Stewart left his convenient store on South Lee Street on Monday afternoon, he said a man was urinating in a trash can right in front of the store.

Even when Stewart shouted at the man, he said he didn't stop. He said the response he received was: "Hey, I got my rights. I can do that in public."

With folks showing that type of disrespect for the law, Stewart and about 65 other residents of south Ayden said Monday night at the town commissioners' meeting they do not know how to go about solving the chronic problems of loitering, gang fights, drug dealing, trespassing and vandalism.

"We're up here tonight ... to ask the town commissioners to tell us what we can do and what we can't do," Stewart said to the board.

"We'd like some advice on this thing."

Stewart and others said problems in the mostly black area, known as "The Block," have been going on for years, but the level of fear among residents is growing higher than ever.

Annie Dudley of East Barwick Street said she and others are afraid to go to evening church services because of the gangs that hang out on the streets and in vacant lots at night. Street lights help, she said, but someone has shot out several lights.

James Hunter said his pool room on Barwick Street has been broken into five times in the last year, and no one has been charged with the crimes, even though he claims residents know the identity of the culprit.

Town officials said they were aware of the problems in the area, and they are pleased the residents want to change things.

Board Member J.J. Brown, the only black commissioner on the panel, said he was pleased to see so many residents overcome their fears of getting involved and come to the meeting.

"I'm surprised, and I'm elated that you're here. It inspires me and gives me courage," Brown said.

Ayden Police Chief Tim Phillips said he was also glad to see the interest in improving the community.

"I'm glad to see this many folks

Bar To Nominate Public Defender Slate

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Pitt County Bar Association is scheduled to nominate candidates for the office of public defender at its regular monthly meeting on Feb. 21.

The four-year term of Pitt County Public Defender Robert L. Shoffner Jr. of Greenville ended Dec. 31, and, under new legislation, the resident Superior Court judge in the county is to appoint someone from the list of candidates nominated by the bar.

Shoffner said today he would like very much to continue working as the public defender, and, so far, he is not aware of any other attorneys who are seeking the position.

"If somebody else were interested, they could throw it right onto the floor (at the meeting Tuesday). It could be anything from a hotly contested thing to no problem. I don't know at this point. I haven't heard anything about it," he said.

Under the old system, the governor appointed the public defender from a list of candidates nominated by the bar. Former Gov. Jim Hunt appointed Shoffner to the post, which he took over Jan. 4, 1985, but later that year the General Assembly revamped the system and took the appointment power away from the governor.

Presently, the bar must meet before Feb. 24 and select up to three candidates by written ballot, according to an order mailed out this week by Franklin Freeman Jr., director of the Administrative Office of the Courts. From that pool, Superior Court Judge David E. Reid Jr. of Greenville will appoint someone to serve as public defender.

"I don't anticipate any change," Reid said. "I have not heard anybody say anyone else covets the position. It's gotten to be unbelievably demanding because of the caseload." Shoffner will continue to serve as public defender until the new appointment is made, Reid said. The appointee will serve the remainder of a term that expires Dec. 31, 1992.

Michael A. Colombo of Greenville, president of the Pitt County bar, also said he does not know of anyone likely to oppose Shoffner.

"I have not heard from anyone except Bob regarding an interest in the position," he said. "I think, generally, there is a feeling of satisfaction in the job he has been doing."

ROBERT L. SHOFFNER JR.

Greenville attorney Melanie Hite-Clark, secretary of the Pitt County bar, said usually about 30 to 40 lawyers attend the monthly meetings. But, with the nomination process set for this month, she hopes more will attend. There are about 140 members of the Pitt bar, she said, and all have been contacted by mail about the meeting.

A graduate of the School of Law at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Shoffner began practicing law in Greenville in 1971. With the most recent expansions in the public defender system, there are now 10 defenders across the state.

The position of Pitt County public defender was created in 1981, Freeman said, and it originally served Pitt, Carteret, Craven, and Pamlico counties. In 1983, the service was limited to Pitt and Carteret counties, he said, and attorneys from the private bar handled indigent clients in Craven and Pamlico counties.

But, as of Jan. 1, Shoffner began serving only Pitt County, and another position was created to serve Carteret County, Freeman said.

Public defender terms are four years, the same as district attorneys, and the two positions are also on the same pay scale. However, district attorneys and judges must win office in popular elections while public defenders are always appointed.

"This is politics of a different sort," Shoffner said. "You have to be nominated by the bar... and Judge Reid has to make the appointment from that list."

Settlement Reached In Bhopal

Slack, told The Associated Press by telephone from his New York home that Union Carbide has accepted the $470 million judgment and March 31 deadline.

"This is a just and fair settlement," Subramaniam told a reporter outside the Supreme Court chambers.

Slack said the court's order "was based on its review of all pleadings in India and the U.S., applicable law and facts, and the enormity of human suffering that requires substantial and immediate aid."

A source close to the case, speaking on condition of anonymity, said an important element of today's settlement was that it called for a speedy, "lump sum" payment and was designed to end further judicial proceedings, including the charge against Anderson.

In November 1987, both sides came close to accepting an out-of-court settlement of $500 million. But that amount would have been paid over a decade or more.

Today's settlement came as a surprise when the court reconvened after lunch, Press Trust of India reported.

The news agency said Chief Justice R.S. Pathak suddenly interrupted Union Carbide lawyer F.S. Nariman to say the court had reviewed the case in detail and considered it "pre-eminently fit for an overall settlement in view of the acute suffering of the victims."

Press Trust of India and United News of India said Pathak told the court the case should be settled and set the $470 million figure. PTI said both sides immediately agreed.

Slack said the court directed the parties to submit a detailed agreement by Wednesday.

According to India, at least 3,329 people died after inhaling the deadly gas that leaked out of the pesticide plant on Dec. 3, 1984, and drifted over Bhopal. Many of the victims lived in shantytowns around the plant.

The government says people continue to die from exposure to the gas at a rate of at least one a day.

More than 20,000 people were injured by the gas, according to government statistics.

The Indian government maintained the disaster was caused by negligence.

Winterville Police Maintain Silence As Citizens List Alleged Injustices

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Community outrage over alleged wrongdoings within the Winterville Police Department surfaced again at Monday's meeting of the town's Board of Aldermen.

And while a State Bureau of Investigation probe of the firing of two Winterville law enforcement officers continues, town officials are maintaining a simple policy towards the entire matter: silence.

Approximately 20 people, including the chairman of a Winterville citizens panel, gathered in the municipal board room Monday to discuss alleged injustices within the governmental operations of the community.

The allegations stem from the January, firing of two Winterville police officers.

Police Chief Lester Smith fired officers Harold Evans and Ralph Whitehurst on Jan. 21 for what Smith referred to as disciplinary reasons. He said the two, along with Officer Tony Summerlin, had gone over his head and contacted the aldermen concerning a grievance.

Smith said the two policemen acted without proper authority and their actions did not proceed through established channels of communication.

The fired officers maintain their positions were terminated after they refused to follow Smith's orders not to issue traffic tickets to aldermen or their family members. The officers also claim Smith ordered them to stop specific drivers whenever they were spotted traveling through town.

The SBI began an investigation of the officers' allegations following a request from Pitt County District Attorney Tom Haigwood.

Bill Dinkins, chairman of an ad hoc citizens committee looking into the matter, told aldermen Monday he has received over 100 phone calls from town residents concerning the current state of city affairs.

"The people who have phoned me feel shocked that this is how the system works," he said.

Dinkins told the board he does not understand how the alderman can act simultaneously as the town's governing body and as the grievance committee.

"It really looks bad that you have an employee of the town that was fired because he didn't get his police chief's permission to come to the board — and the board is the grievance committee," Dinkins said.

"I feel if the results (of the SBI investigation) are not in the police chief's favor and (the board) backs the police chief 100 percent, then that leaves everybody standing out in left field somewhere," he said.

Meanwhile the mayor and aldermen refused to answer any questions from those attending the meeting in regards to the incident.

"We still have not heard from the SBI and until we do — it's no comment," said Mayor E.C. Hines.

Fired Officer Ralph Whitehurst, who also attended the meeting, complained of the city officials' tight-lipped policy.

"You can see right in the meeting that people aren't getting their questions answered," he said. "It obviously appears they're trying to cover something up and you just can't work like that when you work in a community."

"You have to work with the public and answer their questions and it's not being done," he said.

Winterville resident Vivian Harris was one resident who went to the meeting prepared with questions.

She demanded an answer from the

GM Says Earnings Up 67%

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DETROIT — General Motors Corp. today reported its fourth-quarter 1988 earnings soared 67.3 percent over the same period the year before, and last year's profits set a company record, based in part on record overseas net income.

The nation's largest automaker said it earned $1.39 billion, or $4.25 a share, in the final three months of last year, compared with $836 million, or $2.36 per share, during the same time in 1987.

For all of 1988, GM said it earned

$4.86 billion, or $7.17 per share, up 37 percent from 1987 earnings of $3.55 billion, or $5.03 a share. GM's previous annual earnings record was $4.5 billion in 1984.

The figures for earnings per share are on the basis of a 2-for-1 stock split that was declared Feb. 6 and will be paid March 31.

Last year's annual figures reflect the effect of a $224 million accounting change that boosted earnings, the company said.

Sales for the quarter amounted to $28.9 billion in 1988, up 8 percent from $26.4 billion during the same period in 1987. Annual sales in 1988 came to $110.2 billion, up 8.3 percent from $101.8 billion in 1987.

The earnings include profits announced Monday by GM's three largest subsidiaries — General Motors Acceptance Corp., GM Hughes Electronics and Electronic Data Systems Corp.

The company said EDS and GM Hughes earnings for 1988 were records, GMAC's was the second-highest in history and the corporation's North American operations, which have been sagging in recent years, showed increased earnings.

Highway Proposals Approved

east as a member of the study commission, said "we'll have one more meeting ... possibly next week," to put the finishing touches on the commission's recommendations.

"What we have agreed on," Anderson said, "is to have a strategic system of highways across this state so almost everyone will be within 20 minutes or so of a four-lane highway."

Anderson said "it will mean more economic development, better educational opportunities, better jobs, better pay, more accessibility," for Eastern North Carolina.

The commission also agreed to avoid issuing any bonds, recommending that the legislature use taxes on motor fuels and on the transfer of motor vehicles to raise money for a new Highway Trust Fund.

The commission also agreed to avoid issuing any bonds, recommending that the legislature use taxes on motor fuels and on the transfer of motor vehicles to raise money for a new Highway Trust Fund.

Transportation Secretary Jim Harrington last week called for a $1 billion bond issue as part of what Gov. Jim Martin called a "trial balloon" package.

As funds accumulate, 61 percent would be earmarked for strategic corridors, with 26 percent for loops, 6.5 percent for secondary roads and 6.5 percent to help municipal governments build roads.

Toll roads would be studied under the commission's proposal, but would not necessarily be put in place.

Sen. Bill Goldston, D-Rockingham, commission chairman, gave some examples of how much the program would cost if his version were eventually adopted. Goldston is calling for an increase of 3 cents a gallon on gasoline, a 2 percent levy on the transfer of motor vehicles and a 4 percent tax on the average wholesale price of motor fuel.

Someone who drives 10,000 miles a year and gets 18 miles per gallon would pay an additional $27.75 a year for gas and about $135 in transfer fees if they change cars every three years, Goldston said. That would be about 1.33 cents per mile driven.

A trucker who drives 100,000 miles a year and gets six miles per gallon would pay an additional $833 a year for fuel and $401 in transfer taxes.

Singletary. "The board just wanted to let the teachers know that they have our support."

Bobby Etheridge, superintendent of public instruction, was confident the message would be heard. "I think the General Assembly is going to be receptive to giving these folks a pay raise this year," he said. "They've always done it in the past and I think they see the need is there."

Of Mavretic, "It's interesting that he's become such a vocal opponent to the governor," said Martin spokesman Tim Pittman. "(Mavretic) owes a lot of his current support to the executive branch ... that's an ironic twist. I think the governor feels like they had established a working relationship in December and January and the speaker seems inclined to disrupt the relationship ... It's a feeling of disappointment on the governor's part."

Pittman said the governor wanted to speak to the teachers at the fairgrounds before the downtown march. But "the NCAE said they didn't want the governor," Pittman said.

"Instead of trying to bully our way onto the program" the governor decided to go to the fairgrounds and meet teachers as they arrived, he said.

At 12:30 p.m., Pittman said, the governor would meet with a Charlotte teacher privately in his office.

Although the largest march was planned for today, some teachers didn't wait and confronted Martin and legislators Monday.

"It's time for a revolution," said Michele Bryant, a third-grade teacher from Raleigh. "All we're really asking for is respect."

Ms. Bryant was among hundreds of teachers who decided not to wait for today's demonstration. They massed in front of the Legislative Building prior to the House and Senate sessions Monday night, then marched two blocks to the Executive Mansion.

Martin stepped outside the iron gates and mingled with the teachers for about half an hour and tried unsuccessfully to address the crowd. He planned to greet up to 5,000 teachers this morning as they gathered at the State Fairgrounds for the trip downtown.

"I'm trying to buy my first home now, and not pay rent, but I can't afford that being single and making the pay I'm at," a woman told Martin, her voice trembling. "When's it going to end?"

"I'll try to do the best I can," Martin replied.

He tried to make himself heard over the din. But when teachers at the rear shouted repeatedly that they could not hear, he said, "I'm not going to try to out-shout everybody," and went inside.

The group that demonstrated Monday night included teachers from Wake, Pitt, Harnett and Lee counties. Some said they came early because they wanted to be in school today.

"I've been teaching 16 years and I'm making $21,000," said Tony Banks, a middle-school teacher from Pitt County. "The garbage can man makes more than I do. I'd like to send my kids to college."

The teachers carried signs with slogans such as, "Pay the price — thaw the ice," and "Pay me, I'm worth it." One child held a sign reading, "My dad is a teacher and I'm hungry."

Teachers' outrage has grown since Martin unveiled his proposed 1989-90 budget last month. The spending blueprint recommended no pay raise for teachers until April 1990, when a 5.7 percent increase would take effect. Martin says a slowdown in tax collections required him to impose the temporary freeze.

At a "summit" gathering of legislative and education leaders Monday, the governor said he will submit a revised plan that would call for a 4.5 percent raise starting as early as October. But teachers who joined the evening protest were not mollified.

"That's still just crumbs," said Rita Elliott, another Pitt County middle school teacher. She said a sanitation supervisor with a high school education in her county earns a starting salary of $27,000. Teachers must work 19 years to get that much, she said.

John Wilson, a special education teacher from Raleigh, said he had not seen teachers so upset since former Gov. Jim Hunt imposed a pay freeze in 1982.

"We've gotten piddly increases ever since then ... and we're fed up," Wilson said.

Teachers said they would not be satisfied unless the Legislature lifts the eight-year freeze on their salary schedule, enabling them to earn more with longevity. Currently, starting teachers can earn as much as teachers who have worked several years, they said.

piloted in several school systems across the state.

Martin's second proposal asks the Legislature to delay about half of the proposed $800 million increase in the BEP to pay for the salary increases.

"We're ready to look at the BEP for adjustments in midterm," Taft said. "We're not going to throw out the BEP. There's a lot of good there."

The Career Ladder Program and the current salary schedule also will be reviewed, the legislators said.

But, to get more money for teachers' salaries is going to take "a major infusion of money and state commitment," Taft said.

Taft said it takes about two years to develop a consensus across the state to back major issues.

"It's going to take more than meetings like this to get people enthusiastic," he said. "You have to put your elbow and shoulder to the grindstone, work through them, let your demands be known. It's a long-term process. It's not going to happen that quickly."

The teachers need to develop a "ground swell of public opinion" in support for their salary increase, Rogers said. He suggested they begin with the business community.

"Every CEO (chief executive officer) talks about education and how important education is to them. Attach yourself to the business industry," Rogers said.

Taft also suggested the teachers work with the education committee of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce to develop their support.

"We've got a lot to do here in Pitt County" in developing support for education, Donna Maxwell, a parent, said in discussing how Pitt County commissioners denied the request of the Pitt County Board of Education for a bond referendum.

Jones told the teachers, "Don't stop with this meeting. You are a force. Your strength is here in Pitt County and surrounding counties."

A Democratic state representative said the teachers' demonstration might backfire.

"A lot of people are going to see this on TV and ask why these folks are up here instead of home teaching," said the lawmaker, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Martin Promises Compromise

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Hoping to calm unhappy teachers, Gov. Jim Martin said he will make a temporary slowdown in the Basic Education Program the centerpiece of a revised budget plan that will include more money for pay raises.

During a "summit" meeting of legislative and education leaders Monday, the governor said he had decided to seek a 4.5 percent pay increase starting in October and possibly earlier.

He said he would resurrect a plan he floated and abandoned in December. It called for using half of the $113 million scheduled for BEP implementation in 1989-90 to speed up a pay increase for teachers and other state employees.

"We should do everything we can to keep our employees from having their pay eroded by inflation," Martin said.

A one-time windfall from the RJR-Nabisco sale will be another key component of the revised budget plan, which Martin said he will submit in April or May. If capital gains tax payments from the sale total $53 million, the money could be combined with the diverted BEP funds to start the raise in October.

The budget he proposed in January envisions a 5.7 percent raise, including merit pay increments for some teachers, beginning in April 1990.

The governor convened the summit on the eve of today's planned march on the state capital by up to 5,000 teachers upset over what they see as Martin's call for a nearly year-long pay freeze.

Members of the summit group, which Martin said will meet monthly to discuss education issues, include the bipartisan legislative leadership and the heads of the secondary school system, the community colleges and the University of North Carolina.

Martin told the group Monday he was searching for a broad agreement on what the state's priorities should be.

He distributed a list of questions, such as whether expanding programs or raising salaries should have a higher priority and what methods should be used to close the 12 percent gap between North Carolina's teacher pay and the national average.

Fresh Start?

Tower Should Withdraw His Name

American taxpayers have already been short-changed for their defense dollars during Ronald Reagan's administration. They shouldn't be asked to pay for the same mistakes again.

John Tower should withdraw his name from nomination for secretary of defense and dispel the noxious cloud of doubt that would occlude that department's reputation should he take the helm.

Tower's nomination was not appropriate. There are simply too many questions surrounding his involvement with defense contractors accused of overcharging and just plain gypping the federal government. These connections make his presence in the defense department a clear conflict of interest.

Bush made a poor choice by selecting Tower. The new president pledged a fresh start — a new era of integrity in the executive branch. Yet Tower's reputation is blemished by alleged improprieties. He has not been satisfactorily cleared of his connections to unscrupulous contractors that took advantage of a lax defense department to make big bucks.

Those are not charges that can be ignored or dismissed. They are not charges that belong behind the name of the man directed the nation's military.

For that reason, Tower should withdraw his nomination. He should end the speculation over wrongdoings and clear the name of the Bush administration. That would allow Bush to make another choice — one that could bring the level of dignity, impeccable judgment and rectitude the position requires.

The Department of Defense has a fat roll of bills. It spends a huge chunk of the taxpayer's dollar. Even more significant, it is charged with operating the machinery that defends the world's largest, most powerful democracy against threats to its continued strength. This is not a casual duty.

And it is not one that should be compromised by questions about its integrity.

The defense department suffered inexcusable scandals during the inattention of the Reagan administration. Tower has been linked to those improprieties. He should remove himself from nomination to a position where his presence could further corrode an important department's effectiveness.

No Act

Determination Balances Budgets

President Bush has told Congress he has his own ideas on the budget — and the Democratic controlled Congress is mulling them over.

In his address to Congress the new president reiterated his desire to reduce the deficit and to enact no new taxes.

While he discussed some increases in social programs, the Democratic controlled Congress was concerned about an apparent cut in the Medicare insurance program, which affects mostly the elderly, and his own commitment to the Star Wars missile defense program.

On the other hand the $1.16 trillion budget would freeze defense spending at $300.3 billion for fiscal 1990 compared to $298.2 for fiscal 1988. Spending for Social Security would increase from $232.2 billion to $246.6 billion and expenditures for education, jobs and social services would remain almost level at $36.5 billion. Transportation would increase slightly at $29.1 billion. Agricultural spending would decrease from $20.9 billion in fiscal 1989 to $15.5 billion in fiscal 1990.

Bush would increase spending for basic research, enact urban enterprise zone legislation to rejuvenate inner cities and increase by $1 billion the funds for the war on drugs.

There would be tax credits for low income working mothers' child care and a tax credit to couples who adopt children.

If the administration's income predictions hold, the budget deficit would be $91.1 billion for fiscal 1990. While that is a move in the proper direction, there are no assurances that dips in the economy won't affect the positive economic predictions.

We have yet to see where the thrust of the Bush administration will take us. Carrying out his kinder gentler America theme, he proposed some relief for low income groups. Recognizing that American can't forever continue pumping up its defense budget he proposed a freeze there.

The President's efforts at deficit reduction are suspect, however. The nation has watched projected deficits become larger before. It has heard, too, calls for constitutional amendments requiring a balanced budget, just as President Bush issued. The reality is that balancing the budget is more a matter of determination than a constitution amendment. If the Congress and the president determine to do it, it can be done.

Under Reagan's Opaque Umbrella

WASHINGTON — Somewhere in George Bush there's a pragmatist straining to get out. After a presidential campaign in which he ran as Ronald Reagan's ideological son and heir, Bush used his televised speech to Congress to nearly repudiate his predecessor — an attempt at fratricide that he does not yet have the heart to pull off.

Like the Soviet Union, the United States has entered its glasnost period. Words and programs that went unmentioned in the previous eight years are suddenly being uttered. Bush would provide money for the homeless, the very people who Reagan said preferred to sleep on grates and were, anyway, crazy. The President would enrich the Head Start Program, the very same effort to help poor kids that Reagan once tried to kill.

The environment got mentioned. We were promised our beaches would be free of hypodermic needles. The inner city and its slums got some notice. Enterprise zones were suggested. Child care would get some money and education would get more aid. Acid rain, a drizzle that Reagan could not see from under his ideologically opaque umbrella, would be eradicated. The problem, Bush said, has been studied long enough.

Like Mikhail Gorbachev in the beginning, Bush has been cautious about repudiating his predecessor — what's his name. His repeated calls for high ethical standards, his vows to cooperate with Congress, his attention to civil rights have all been a distinct departure from the let-them-eat-cake ethic of the Reagan era. His speech before Congress was more of the same, but it was, really, more a statement of intentions than a real program. Like Gorbachev, Bush has been hobbled by the past. He can't quite repudiate it nor can he ignore its baleful consequences.

Richard Cohen

Bush has several problems in this regard. First, he is wedded to the supply-side nonsense of the Reagan era. He cannot raise taxes. This was his campaign incantation, his most solemn vow and patrimony. But without a tax increase, Bush cannot fully fund the programs he has outlined. For instance, self-proclaimed education President that he says he is, Bush nevertheless added only $250 million to the $20 billion Reagan had already proposed for schools.

Over and over that's the case. For the homeless, Bush has promised money for shelters. Fine. But the homeless problem is a direct consequence of the unavailability of low-cost housing. For that — an expensive proposition — Bush has proposed nothing. Enterprise zones may be a nifty idea for revitalizing inner-city neighborhoods, but they should be just one component of an overall effort to salvage both buildings and people. Here, too, Bush stopped short of doing more than, really, uttering a wish.

A second problem for Bush is that his programs seem to have come out of nowhere. With few exceptions — a hint here, a remark about a kinder, gentler nation there — Bush campaigned as an orthodox conservative. He did nothing to educate the American people in the need for the programs he has outlined and he cannot claim that he is implementing a mandate. His mandate, such as it is, is brief: He will not raise taxes, he will continue the policies of Ronald Reagan and he is not Mike Dukakis.

Third comes a question: What has Bush been all these years? How was it possible for the man, who now asks for more money for Head Start, to have sat quietly when Reagan attempted to kill the program? How could a man who now speaks movingly and convincingly about the homeless have kept his trap shut when Reagan blamed them for their plight? How could someone who now declares war on acid rain, professes love for clean beaches and sympathy for the poor, have served a President who didn't care if the homeless slept on the beaches and, for good measure, had their skin pitted by acid rain?

Is this a sign of weakness, a lust for office at the expense of principle? Or does it signify strength, the patience to wait until the time is right? The next four years will provide the answer. But we need not wait that long to see that Bush has a terrible conflict: He wants to go where his wallet will not take him. He will raise expectations but be unable to fulfill them and that, in the end, may be his undoing. Reagan's message was a simple one. He said over and over that nothing much need be done. Bush says plenty needs to be done but there's not enough money to do it.

Bush is crippled by an internal conflict — the desire to keep taxes low and yet have the government do more. The two are incompatible, a conflict based on the contradiction between Reagan dogma and the needs of the country. Before the real Bush can emerge, he first has to reject the Reagan within him. Until then, he remains what he chose to be for eight years — a creature of Ronald Reagan.

The Not-Ever-Final Line

BOSTON — By now there is a familiar ring to these tales. They have become our morality plays, although we don't use the word morality or talk in terms of sin and redemption.

These days we prefer a more medical model for our stories of conversion and salvation. They are illnesses. We treat them. Our tales begin with confession but are supposed to end with cure.

Hi, my name is Jane and I was once a bulimic but now I am an exercise guru. Hi, my name is Betty and once I was a drug and alcohol abuser but now I have a clinic named after me. Hi, my name is Oprah and I was a food addict but now I am a size ten. Hi, my name is Drew, at 12 I was a cocaine addict and at 13 I am a recovered drug addict.

True to the form, our morality plays are required to close on such an upbeat note. The weak have found strength, the troubled have been treated, the patients have become proselytizers, the fallen have risen. The End.

'But what is missing from the stage is what happens the morning after release, the month after the cover story, the year after the cure.'

But what is missing from the stage is what happens the morning after release, the month after the cover story, the year after the cure. We don't always see the difficulty of leading a stressful life without another and most public postscript.

Now we are seeing it. Hi, my name is Kitty and I was an amphetamine addict. I am still chemically dependent.

Last week, when Gov. Dukakis announced that his wife had gone to a treatment center for alcohol abuse, it was as much a page one story as the news of her earlier addiction to diet pills. "There were a limited number of episodes — two or three —" said her husband somberly, "in which she clearly had been drinking excessive amounts and it was obvious."

Do a "limited number of episodes" make an alcoholic or alcohol abuser? Could she have become dependent on liquor in a matter of months?

The weekend before she went into the preplanned treatment, the Dukakis family had dined genially at a local restaurant. The week before that Mike and Kitty had delighted in their new status as grandparents. Not even her press secretary had seen Kitty Dukakis with more than a glass or two of wine on the trail. A physical addiction to alcohol takes time.

But whatever the skepticism about the diagnosis of alcohol abuse, there was no friend or neighbor who doubted the diagnosis of stress. There isn't a name for the letdown that comes from losing. There isn't an officially designated post-campaign stress syndrome. That doesn't make it less real.

The morning after the election, Mike Dukakis went to Beacon Hill and back to work. Kitty stayed home. There was no plane for her to catch, no schedule, no staff.

The governor used a desk full of paperwork to push away any shadows of depression or introspection. Call it work therapy if you like that terminology. It's his way. For weeks he looked gray around the gills, not quite well. When he suddenly announced that he wouldn't run for governor again, I was not the only private citizen who thought he should have waited until the mourning period was over to make such a decision.

But if this husband deals with loss by closing the door and moving on, his wife is a muller, a stewer, a worrier. It's not that easy for her to let go of the past or its mistakes. Even her work — the book, the speeches — were about that past.

The differences between this caring couple, like those in any marriage, can be both strengths and weaknesses. He is the rock and she the roller coaster. In good times he provides steadiness and she provides energy. In bad times, a rock can look awfully hard and a roller coaster can have some scary highs and lows.

It is worth noting how much more we worry about the person losing control than the person holding tight, tighter, tightest. It is also worth noting how rarely we allow prominent men into our morality plays. During this nasty campaign, Dukakis was actually accused of once seeking psychiatric help.

A candidate for President cannot admit depression anymore than a candidate for the Supreme Court could admit to smoking marijuana or a candidate for the Cabinet could admit promiscuity. Hi, my name is John and I'm a womanizer.

Kitty Dukakis is most certainly not an alcoholic, but chemical dependency, as her husband said, comes in a liquid as well as a solid form. This was a time of great stress, a letdown that wouldn't let up. She looked into the wine glass and read the early warning signs.

On the road, Kitty Dukakis used to tell her audiences that an addict is "never recovered, but always recovering." This is the not-ever-final line of our morality play.

IN THE STATE

Hatcher
POCATELLO, Idaho — The Shoshone-Bannock Tribal Court has received an extradition request from North Carolina for Eddie Hatcher, a Tuscarora Indian wanted for kidnapping in that state, a court official says.

The extradition notice was received from North Carolina Gov. Jim Martin at 11 a.m. Monday, said Robert Gonzales, court administrator.

"At this time, no tribal court officials have been contacted by Mr. Hatcher to determine if he is still within the confines of the Fort Hall Reservation," Gonzales said.

Chief Tribal Judge Charles Lohah will review the document, allowing enough time for North Carolina authorities to visit Fort Hall to respond to any allegations that might be raised in the Sho-Ban court, Gonzales said.

Lohah issued an arrest warrant for Hatcher on Friday after he failed to appear at a court hearing. Hatcher is wanted on 14 counts of kidnapping stemming from the February 1988 takeover of the Robesonian newspaper in North Carolina.

Resignation

DURHAM (AP) — Larry Coble will step down as superintendent of the Durham County school system to accept a similar post with the Winston-Salem-Forsyth County system.

Spokeswoman Donna Oldham said the Winston-Salem-Forsyth school board decided to offer the job to Coble after an eight-hour executive session Sunday to discuss the three finalists for the positions. Coble will begin working for the Winston-Salem schools in May, Ms. Oldham said.

Apartment Fire

GREENSBORO (AP) — A Greensboro apartment suffered $150,000 damage after a fire early Monday, and a resident of the complex was charged with arson, authorities say.

No one was injured. The fire at Lincoln Green Apartments was discovered by a security guard, who noticed a small fire set on straw at the apartment clubhouse. Another fire was found at

RJR's Chief Will Resign

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — Four days after the resignation of F. Ross Johnson, his partner in the failed attempt to take RJR Nabisco Inc. private in a leveraged buyout last fall, Edward A. Horrigan Jr., said he would resign effective March 1.

Horrigan, 60, the chairman and chief executive of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., joined RJR in July 1978 as the chairman and chief executive of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco International.

He had been a candidate to replace Johnson as the chief executive of RJR Nabisco under Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co., which bought about 74 percent of the RJR stock in a tender offer completed Thursday. Johnson resigned Thursday when KKR took control.

Some Winston-Salem businessmen had said that Horrigan had a good shot at the job because of his experience and expertise in the tobacco business, which will be the nucleus of the new RJR after KKR sells off much of the food business to pay down the debt that it incurred in the $25 billion buyout.

Others noted the declining market share of cigarettes made by R.J. Reynolds Tobacco USA and speculated that KKR might hold Horrigan accountable, especially since Philip Morris USA, Reynolds' main competitor, continued to gain market share.

Reynolds' share of the domestic cigarette market dropped to 31.87 percent last year, from 32.5 percent in 1987. This came in a year when Philip Morris increased its share to 39.3 percent, from 37.8 percent the year before.

Horrigan said in a statement Monday that he will continue to live in Winston-Salem.

an apartment building where six units sustained damage.

Percy Mayfield Smith, 37, was charged with first-degree arson. He was held in the Guilford County Jail under $100,000 bond.

Peace Gift

RALEIGH (AP) — Peace College will receive a gift of $2.5 million from a Durham couple — the largest single contribution in the school's history.

Perry A. Sloan Jr. and Lillie Duke Clements Sloan established a trust in late January for the school, Peace College officials announced Monday.

The gift was given in the form of a unitrust, which means that interest is paid to the donor until death, when the money reverts to Peace College, a two-year college for women.

Indicted

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The Forsyth County grand jury indicted a Winston-Salem police officer Monday on charges of rape and taking indecent liberties with a minor.

Anthony Tyrone Stover, 30, a patrolman for the police department for more than seven years, is charged with two counts of first-degree rape and three counts of taking indecent liberties with a minor. All the counts involve the same child, who was 8 years old when the indictments say the abuse started.

Winston-Salem Police Chief George L. Sweat said Stover was no longer employed by the police department.

Dentist

RALEIGH (AP) — A former dentist who had practiced in Raleigh and Roxboro was sentenced Monday to six months in a treatment center and fined $4,000 on charges that he had obtained a controlled drug for himself and a dental hygienist.

Gerrard Scott Hunt of Raleigh was sentenced by U.S. District Judge James C. Fox, who also put him on five years probation and ordered him to perform 16 hours of community service per month. He pleaded guilty in October to conspiring to dispense and distribute Fiorinal and to using an expired federal registration number to dispense and obtain the drug.

The hygienist, Lisa Kay Rogers, was sentenced to four months in a treatment center, fined $4,000, placed on five years probation and required to perform 16 hours of community service per month.

Senate Delays Final Vote On Plans To Control Disposal, Use Of Fetuses

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A dispute over the potential effect of allowing the use of fetuses in the manufacture of drugs delayed a final Senate vote on a bill that would require proper disposal of abortion remains.

The Senate was scheduled to take further action on the measure today. If approved, it goes to the House.

Sponsored by Sen. A.D. Guy, D-Onslow, the bill requires that doctors who perform abortions dispose of the remains through burial, cremation or incineration.

It is designed to ensure that the fetuses are not dumped in garbage cans or landfills or otherwise treated disrespectfully, said Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, a supporter.

"If you have ever seen a fetus as 16 weeks or better, you've seen a beautiful body," Harris said.

The bill was amended by the Senate Human Resources Committee to make clear that the measure would not prohibit using fetuses for medical research. Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, offered an amendment Monday to stipulate that use of fetuses in making pharmaceuticals also would not be proscribed.

Taft, whose district includes a pharmaceutical company, said he had been told that a drug used in treating Parkinson's Disease contains fetal material. "We wouldn't want the people of North Carolina to be deprived of drugs such as those that treat Parkinson's Disease," he said.

Sen. Betsy Cochrane, R-Davie, said she feared the amendment would open the door to making aborted fetuses an ingredient in cosmetics. Taft said he did not think that would happen.

"There's no hidden agenda with the addition of these words," he said.

Harris said the bill was being amended too much. "You've just about tore this bill all to pieces," he said.

The Senate agreed to delay action on the recommendation of Sen. Sandy Sands, D-Rockingham, who said it would allow time to clarify Taft's amendment.

Senate President Pro Tem Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, and House Speaker Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, said they will begin holding weekly joint news conferences outside Raleigh.

The first stop on their state tour, tentatively scheduled to last until May, will be next Monday in Greenville.

For the past several weeks, Barnes and Mavretic have been meeting with reporters once a week as part of the Legislature's effort to improve its public image.

Barnes said the plan was for him and Mavretic to conduct "open forums" for local government officials and the public, followed by news conferences with local newspaper, radio and television reporters.

He said that the meetings will be held around the state and that, if necessary, the travel expenses would be paid with tax dollars.

"That was one of the things discussed at the Democratic caucus. That the Legislature should get out more," he told reporters. "At the last election, some of the folks felt we were too close to what we were doing down here and should be a more open legislature."

Loophole In DWI Law Allows Some Drunken Drivers To Avoid Penalty

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — Hundreds of drunken drivers across the state have benefited from a ruling in June 1988 by the state Supreme Court that has enraged magistrates and law enforcement officers.

"The problem is down in Raleigh, North Carolina, at the Supreme Court," Guilford County Deputy Larry Vick said.

It was Vick who was working May 22, 1988, when he realized a single light approaching in the darkness on U.S. 220 was a car with one headlight burning, not a motorcycle.

He also realized it had strayed into his northbound lane. Vick, on patrol for the Guilford County Sheriff's Department, steered his cruiser onto the shoulder near the intersection of N.C. 150 to avoid a collision, then whipped it around and began following.

As he recalls the episode, the southbound vehicle turned east onto Scalesville Road and ran several other cars off the highway before Vick could pull it over. The car finally stopped when it turned into a driveway and plowed into a hedge, Vick said.

Behind the wheel was Roger Dell Hemingway, 43, who registered a near-fatal 0.39 alcohol level on the Breathalyzer. He was charged with driving while impaired.

"I said in court I didn't think he should get off, but that I thought the law didn't leave me any choice,"

District Judge Lawrence McSwain, who heard the case, told the Greensboro News & Record.

The high court's Knoll decision says defendants held by magistrates until they sobered up were denied a chance to obtain evidence, such as an independent blood test, or to find witnesses who could testify to their conditions.

The justices ruled pretrial detention of drunken drivers is improper unless the defendant is so disruptive he can't be processed, is unconscious, is "grossly intoxicated," or can't understand his rights as explained by the magistrate.

The ruling also noted magistrates can release DWI defendants on a secured or unsecured bond, their written promises to appear or into the custody of friends or relatives. The ruling even suggests a defendant with enough money could get a taxi home.

Magistrates have difficulty believing drivers who were so drunk they had to be detained until they could understand their bond hearing would be in any position to seek evidence in their cases. They also wonder how many defendants released to taxi drivers would go directly to their cars and continue driving.

Hemingway registered more than 0.30 on the Breathalyzer and was taken to Moses Cone Memorial Hospital, as is the sheriff's department's policy. He refused treatment, however, and was taken before magistrate Phyllis Coates, who apparently believed he was too drunk to understand his rights as she explained them.

She wrote across the warrant "too intoxicated" and ordered him jailed for several hours to sober up. He was then brought back and his rights explained.

Because magistrates are required by law to make sure defendants understand such details as conditions of pretrial release, it was not unusual before the supreme court ruling for them to jail defendants for several hours.

After the high court's ruling, though, defense attorneys across the state seized on it to win dismissals for their DWI clients. McSwain granted defense attorney Pinkney Moses' motion to drop the charge against Hemingway. Efforts to reach Moses and Hemingway were unsuccessful.

"There was no testimony that he was in any way disruptive, that he was dangerous to anyone," McSwain said. "I can't assume that he's going to get in his car and drive off."

"Our job is to do what we know we're supposed to do, regardless if it's unpopular," he said, referring to his fellow judges.

He said some of the magistrates powers regarding DWI defendants are still unclear and will remain so until the Supreme Court or the General Assembly offers further clarification.

Court Hears State Appeal To Keep Right To Set Environmental Fines

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A lawyer for the state urged the state Supreme Court to reverse a lower court ruling that could strip state agencies of the power to set fines for polluters and others who violate state laws.

The agencies' authority to assess fines, or civil penalties, often is the only effective deterrent that can be imposed by the state, Special Deputy Attorney General Daniel F. McLawhorn told the state's high court on Monday.

But lawyers for the developers of a subdivision in Caldwell County, who are fighting a fine of $4,200, contended that the state constitution does not permit the General Assembly to grant that authority to state agencies. That authority is judicial in nature and may not be delegated to state agencies, the lawyers said.

The arguments came in the state's appeal of a ruling by a panel of the state Court of Appeals, which held that the state constitution does not allow a state agency to impose any fine that varies in the agency's discretion. That decision, handed down in November, has threatened the fine-setting authority of a myriad of state agencies.

The Appeals Court panel based its decision on a 1968 ruling by the state Supreme Court, which rejected a fine, varying from a nominal sum to $25,000, imposed by the state insurance commissioner. A key issue argued Monday was whether the Appeals Court panel correctly applied the 1968 ruling, known as Lanier vs. Vines. McLawhorn argued that the ruling had a narrow focus, dealing with one specific fine, and should not have been "broadly read" by the Appeals Court to prevent agencies from having the authority to decide the amount of civil penalties.

The section of the constitution in question states that "the General Assembly may vest in administrative agencies ... such judicial powers as may be reasonably necessary ... to the ... purposes for which the agencies were created." In Lanier vs. Vines, the state Supreme Court said there was no reasonable necessity for the insurance commissioner to have the judicial power to impose "a monetary penalty, varying, in the commissioner's discretion, from a nominal sum to $25,000 for each violation."

McLawhorn argued that under that decision, grants of judicial authority to a state agency should be reviewed case by case. And the fine against the Caldwell developers, under the Sedimentation Pollution Control Act, was reasonably necessary, he said. Under the act, the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development may fine a violator up to $100 a day.

If state agencies were given no discretion in imposing fines of varying size, he said, some developers would decide to pay fines as a cost of doing business and continue to violate pollution laws.

The Caldwell County developers were fined in connection with their construction of a street in the subdivision. Their lawyers, W.P. Burkheimer and J. Michael Correll of Lenoir, contended that no administrative agency created after the constitution was amended in 1962 may be given any judicial authority, including the power to determine the size of fines.

"If you are going to allow the administrative agencies to do what should be done by the courts, I think we have to amend the constitution," Burkheimer said. "Even if it's reasonably necessary, which we do not concede, it is not allowed by the constitution."

Correll told the justices that administrators who impose fines have "non-judicial temperaments, non-judicial minds."

Clerk Portia Jenkins opens mail at Philadelphia dead-letter office

Carelessness Is Chief Cause Of Dead Letters

By Dana Priest
LAT/WP NEWS SERVICE

PHILADELPHIA — No, the Christmas package you sent your relatives wasn't sucked into a black hole in space. No, the post card from Hawaii wasn't carried out to sea. And, no, the bill the telephone company sent a month ago wasn't chewed up by a dog.

They're probably in Philadelphia. Just across the street from the 30th Street Train Station, in the main Philadelphia Post Office, is a room the size of a basketball court where all the lost letters and packages from the Washington metropolitan area, and 11 states, end up.

It is one of seven such rooms in the country where U.S. Postal Service clerks are allowed to open your mail.

What they find can only be described as a commentary on the curious state of American life: Bibles, drugs, dirty clothes, mortgages and insurance policies, scraps of food in plastic containers and lots of odd containers — peanut tins, coffee jars and plastic pill bottles — filled with pennies. Nationwide, about $872,000 in cash was taken out of undeliverable letters and put into the Postal Service coffers last year.

It's no wonder why much of the mail arrives at the Philadelphia office: Millions of the envelopes here have no street address, or the city or state has been left off. Some are addressed in a foreign language and others are completely blank.

The most common error, postal officials said, is incorrect address and no return address.

"You'd like to return their mail, you'd like to return their check," said clerk Gerard Insall, as he ripped open greeting cards and threw them one after another in the trash can at his feet. "You feel bad when you can't return a Mother's Day card, a Father's Day card, their bills. It doesn't seem to end."

About 89 million letters and packages were lost last year, according to the Postal Service. Thirty percent of those were eventually delivered or returned.

Clerk Pearl Banks receives about 150 mail tracers requests each day. She spends half her day hunting down the items people list on the forms. "I don't find something every day, but there's other people looking," she said. "Last time I found something was a couple of months ago."

Postal clerks in Philadelphia and the other six offices discard bulk business mail and post cards with the wrong addresses, no forwarding addresses, and no return addresses. They also throw away correspondence that contains no identifying addresses inside. This time of year, that means thousands of Christmas cards.

Cash and items worth $20 or more are recorded and saved for 90 days. If an item is not claimed — either through a tracer form available at post offices, or a phone call or letter describing it — it is kept by the Postal Service. Items worth more than $500 go directly to the New York dead-letter office for storage.

Once every several months, the Philadelphia office auctions off unclaimed items such as cameras, television sets and figurines. It gives perishable foods, toys and used clothing to local charities. Unclaimed valuables such as credit cards are shredded.

The journey to the dead-letter office starts at the local post office, where the mail carrier collects incomplete and undeliverable letters and sends them to a regional mail processing center. Such letters from Northern Virginia, for example, end up in Phil Heine's hands.

Heine is a "nixie" clerk at the huge Northern Virginia processing center at Merrifield. For eight hours-a-day he tries to determine things such as what one sender meant when he wrote "Gilboa, W.V." on an envelope. He's not allowed to open a letter, so he's left with few clues.

"You've got to know how to read the writing, or know the town with no state," said Heine. "As long as we have a town and a street, we're supposed to deliver it."

It is not only individuals who are responsible for the volume of letters that arrive here. Heine displayed hundreds of telephone bills with no address in the cut-out envelope window.

On Oct. 14 the Internal Revenue Service sent a letter to someone, somewhere in Pennsylvania.

The unopened letter came back to the mail carrier with "person no longer at this address" written on it.

The IRS had no return address in the left-hand corner. Three months later, on Jan. 13, the letter made its way to the Philadelphia dead-letter office, where a clerk opened it and found a return address.

"I say to myself, why don't they put their name on it," said clerk Mary Jackson.

"I really think they should be more careful," she said.

Abuse Is Unacceptable

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: The YWCA of Walla Walla, Wash., is putting together a pamphlet on battered women. This pamphlet will be used to solicit funds for our women's shelter and residence. We want to use some pictures of women who have been beaten, but have great difficulty finding any. (Most battered women are afraid to have their pictures published, especially if they are trying to get away from their abuser.)

In March 1986, you ran a letter from "Rae B. in Idaho," a battered woman who had sent you some pictures of herself after she had been badly beaten. She asked you to publish those pictures. You did not publish them, but I hope you will permit the YWCA to use those pictures if you still have them on file.

Helping battered women is one of our YWCA's main projects. — Donna Jones

Dear Donna Jones: I have not seen those pictures since I showed them on the Phil Donahue show (my fault, not theirs), but Rae B. must have another set because she used them as evidence in court. Unfortunately, I have been unable to locate her, but if she reads this, I hope she contacts you. Meanwhile, thank you for sending your family violence report. I think Rae's letter is worth repeating. And here it is.

Dear Abby: In March I read a letter in your column from a parent whose daughter had actually been beaten to death by her boyfriend.

I am enclosing photos of myself after the brutal beating I received from my husband of 11 1/2 years. It was the first time he had physically harmed me, although he had threatened me with a knife several times. These past five years I lived in terror of him, but didn't know how to get away without getting myself and my three children killed.

The assault occurred in a public place at 3:30 p.m. I asked him to meet me there because I was going to tell him I was leaving him, and I thought it would be safe. I was wrong. He nearly killed me. In addition to severe body pummeling, I suffered a broken nose, a blowout fracture of my right cheek, severe eye damage, broken teeth, bruises and numerous hematomas on my head, which became swollen to three times its normal size!

Your advice, "File charges, and run as though your life depended on it," was good.

I ran to a shelter provided by the Women's Advocates, a rape crisis and intervention group. I also pressed charges. My husband was sentenced to an indefinite term not to exceed 10 years. He must serve 120 days at a correction facility, where he will be evaluated; then there's a possibility that he will be released.

He offered to give me everything I wanted in the divorce if I would drop the charges against him. I refused. I am glad I stood my ground because now it has been publicly validated that wife-beating is unacceptable.

Abby, you have my permission to use my name and publish these pictures. Do whatever is necessary to let women everywhere know that they do not have to tolerate physical abuse! Urge them to contact the Women's Advocates or other local crisis intervention groups. Don't back off, and above all, never go back! — Rae B. in Idaho

Dear Rae: I cannot publish your pictures, but I can tell you that my staff and I were horrified by them. The damage to your face and body defies description.

Now a word to all women: Under no circumstances should you tolerate a rough shove, a punch, a slap, a twisted arm or any kind of physical abuse from a husband or boyfriend. It's a clear signal that his controlled anger could eventually escalate into more severe punishment.

Most women remain in abusive relationships because they are financially dependent. So, women, complete your education; learn a trade or a profession so you can support yourselves and will never be forced to tolerate abuse because you can't afford to leave.

First Valentine Is Recalled

I am always saddened when adults take a simple holiday for children and screw it up.

What began as a presentation of simple gifts to delight and surprise children around the Christmas tree has culminated in a woman opening up six shrimp forks from her dog, who drew her name.

The tradition of little children wandering through the darkness in makeshift fright costumes on the eve of Halloween has given way to adult parties of such magnitude an entire industry has evolved to clothe them.

It is small wonder that Valentine's Day struggles to remain a day for young lovers, a day when the human heart is made out of chocolate and naked cherubs defy the February chill to send out their arrows.

Whenever adults speak of Valentine's Day, they go back to their youth. They go back, as I do, to a small classroom in the second grade. They go back to Miss Dawkins, who put a large cardboard box on her desk a week before. It is covered with red hearts made out of construction paper and ribbon of crepe paper. All week long I have watched my classmates drop in their fistful of secrets. Everyone but Ray Deger.

At Wits End

On Valentine's Day, just minutes before Miss Dawkins is to distribute the cards, Ray drops his in. My heart stops beating. Would the love I felt for him be returned, or would I be left to trudge through life alone, rejected, unloved?

Miss Dawkins takes an eternity to pass out the valentines. The ones stacked before me hold no interest. There can't be more than two or three left in the box when she calls out my name. It is signed "Ray." My eyes dissect the card for hidden messages. There are two bears kissing one another, with three hearts poised above their heads. The message says, "I Care for You."

There is no doubt in my mind — I was one of the bears and Ray was the other one. Professionally, my eyes take in that there are no erasures or smudges, so the card is new, bought just for me. Sylvia Prishold points out later that his mother signed it. That's all she knows. It's his signature, all right.

There have been other Valentine's Days, days of candy hearts and even roses at $80 a dozen. My children brought me homemade valentines that held awkward messages of love. My husband has showered me with all kinds of remembrances throughout the years celebrating his devotion.

But the day will never again recapture that breathless moment when Miss Dawkins handed me the small valentine from Ray Deger declaring, "I Care for You." He had never spoken to me before that day, and he was never to speak to me during the four years we went to grade school together.

The moment belonged only to a phenomenon called Valentine's Day.

Three Die As Medical Helicopter Crashes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TYLER, Texas — A medical helicopter crashed and burned after striking a high-voltage line in rain and fog, killing the pilot and two nurses, authorities said.

The Flight for Life helicopter, leased by Mother Francis Hospital of Tyler, was en route to Pittsburg Medical Center to pick up a patient for transfer when it crashed Monday night, said Stacy Gill, communications operator for the Texas Department of Public Safety.

The wreckage was scattered over several acres in a wooded area about three miles north of Tyler in East Texas, she said.

The pilot was identified as Gerald A. Morgan Sr., 46, of Houston, said hospital spokeswoman Beverly Mason.

The registered nurses were identified as Jeanne Lackey, 29, of Lindale, and Kathy Ohnheiser, 31, of Haltom City, Ms. Gill said.

The helicopter left the Tyler hospital at 10:14 p.m. and notified authorities four minutes later that it was returning because of bad weather, Ms. Gill said. There was rain and fog in the area.

At 10:23 p.m., a Smith County resident telephoned authorities to notify them of a fire and they discovered the crash.

The crash site was being guarded by Smith County deputies pending the arrival later today of investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board and the Federal Aviation Administration.

Ms. Mason said the helicopter, a twin-engine BK-117, came from U.S. Jet Aviation of Washington, D.C.

Ayden

here. I've been trying to get something going on down in south Ayden for some time," Phillips said. "We have taken guns, bats, knives, drugs, and drug paraphernalia (in connection with incidents in the neighborhood)."

Town officials asked residents to cooperate as much as possible. If trespassers remain on public housing property, which the town owns, officers can force people to leave. But, if incidents occur on private property, residents must be willing to report the crime and to testify in court, Phillips said.

"We want to do the best we can in south Ayden. But, you've got to help us. You've got to call us. I cannot correct a situation if I'm not aware of it," Phillips said. "When it involves you personally, you've got to be willing to testify."

Several residents were reluctant even to give their names to a reporter for interviews. The offenders in Ayden often carry weapons, they said, and it would be dangerous to report drug dealers. "The criminals, they read the paper, too," one man said.

Several residents said the people who hang out around Barwick, Lee, High and Venters streets range in age from 12 to 50 years old. People from out of town are the ones suspected of bringing drugs in, several said, and young school-age kids seem to be helping sell the drugs. Automobiles with out-of-state license plates are also common in the neighborhood, they said.

Phillips said the officers have made some headway against the drug situation, but a lack of funding and manpower prevents officers from making large undercover buys. A group of Jamaican dealers had settled in Ayden, but law enforcement officials were able to take action, and the group has since moved on to Washington, N.C., Phillips said.

But, he said, the word is that another group of Jamaicans is reportedly moving from Kinston to Ayden.

Without a grant or special help to battle the situation, the police force is just not able to undertake a large scale drug operation, he said. But, Phillips stressed that he wants to help rid the town of undesirables. To accomplish that, he said residents must be willing to get involved.

Because statutes like the town's old vagrancy law have been declared unconstitutional, Phillips said officers cannot arbitrarily order loiterers to move along. Officers must have probable cause, he said.

Also, if folks are loitering or trespassing on private property, the offenders usually disperse by the time police arrive. Because of that, property owners must be willing to report the incident and testify.

"Let me say we're concerned. We might not move as fast as ya'll would like us to move," Ayden Mayor Marvin "Bear" Baldrice said. "But, you people, our citizens, have got to help (the officers) out ... They can't be everywhere all the time."

Kohl Wants Compromise

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BONN, West Germany — Chancellor Helmut Kohl met with Secretary of State James A. Baker III and suggested the compromise move of producing new short-range NATO nuclear missiles but putting off their deployment.

The chancellor also said publicly for the first time Monday that West Germany wants a disarmament mandate built into NATO strategy that would scuttle deployment plans if progress is made on reducing the Soviet advantage in conventional weapons.

Kohl faces stiff public opposition to deploying upgraded battlefield nuclear missiles on West German soil.

During his meeting with Kohl on Monday, Baker appeared to soften U.S. demands that NATO endorse a deployment plan this spring.

The new U.S. secretary of state, on an eight-day tour of NATO countries, said the two agreed during a "very, very friendly" talk to negotiate differences over the NATO plan to develop, produce and deploy new missiles to replace the aging U.S.-made Lance missiles.

Kohl told reporters individual countries' decisions to make the short-range missiles could be approved and contained in a NATO strategy statement expected this spring, while the West German decision on whether to accept the new rockets could be made later.

Kidnapped Premier Back Home Safely

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRUSSELS, Belgium — Kidnappers released former Prime Minister Paul Vanden Boeynants and he returned home "safe and sound" today after a month in captivity, the Justice Ministry said.

Unconfirmed reports said the family of Vanden Boeynants, a wealthy businessman, paid a ransom of as much as $5.1 million.

The 69-year-old Christian Democrat was freed late Monday near the railway station in Tournai and took a cab to his Brussels home 50 miles away, said Brussels deputy prosecutor Andre Vandorand.

There was no immediate explanation of where or under what conditions he had spent the month. The Justice Ministry said in a statement that "Mr. Vanden Boeynants has returned safe and sound."

Investigators said they questioned Vanden Boeynants, whose career has been tainted by scandal, and were satisfied he had been kidnapped.

"Mr. Vanden Boeynants will make a public statement in the coming days but give him the time to rest," Vandorand said.

A group calling itself the Socialist Revolutionary Brigade had said it kidnapped him, and demanded a ransom. The group demanded a $790,000 ransom, two-thirds of which was to be distributed to the needy.

The Brussels daily Le Soir reported in its moon edition today that the family paid between $2.5 million and $5.1 million to the abductors on Monday. The Belgian news agency Belga also reported a ransom had been paid but gave no amount.

Investigators said last month they would not prevent the family from paying a ransom. "It is a free country," one official said at the time.

Le Soir said investigators believe Vanden Boeynants' abductors fled to France. Tournai is a few miles from the French border.

Death Order Issued

who were aware of its contents, are hereby sentenced to death."

The patriarch of the Islamic revolution said in a decree that the book was "compiled, printed and published in opposition to Islam."

The Iranian government declared Wednesday a "day of national mourning ... in protest against the new conspiracy of the great Satan (the United States) to publish poisonous and insulting subject-matter concerning Islam, the Koran and the blessed prophet."

Muslims honor the prophet Mohammed as God's messenger who brought Allah's revelations to mankind in the Koran, the holy book of Islam.

The name of Rushdie's novel is derived from the verses Mohammed removed from the Koran on grounds they were inspired by Satan.

The campaign against the book turned violent over the weekend.

At least five people were killed and more than 80 injured Sunday when police fired on a mob trying to storm the U.S. Information Center in Islamabad, the Pakistani capital.

In Srinagar, summer capital of India's northern Jammu-Kashmir state, police killed at least one demonstrator today when they fired at an angry crowd, according to United News of India agency. Jammu-Kashmir is India's only predominantly Moslem state and it borders mainly Moslem Pakistan.

In Srinagar and Anantnag, 60 miles to the southeast, protesters' stones stopped traffic. Police charged the mobs with steel-tipped bamboo canes and resorted to tear gas to quell demonstrators in Srinagar, said the agency.

Most leaders of the protest acknowledge they have not read the novel, which is a complex allegory on the birth of religion and Britain's attitude toward residents from its former Indian empire.

"The book that is worth killing people for and burning flags for is not the book that I wrote," Rushdie told The Guardian of London newspaper Monday. The book originally was published in London, where the novelist lives.

Its protagonists are an Indian movie star and a British TV personality, both passengers who fall from an airliner blown up by terrorists en route from India to London.

They are presumed dead but they survive, or are reborn, and take on the attributes of the angel Gabriel and Satan.

Hoyas Roll Past Syracuse

West Virginia Wins Again; Iowa Defeats Ohio State

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LANDOVER, Md. — Georgetown guard Charles Smith makes his share of baskets, but it's his defense that earns him points in the eyes of Coach John Thompson.

Smith stymied Syracuse playmaker Sherman Douglas in the second half Monday night, holding him without an assist to help No. 4 Georgetown tighten its hold on first place in the Big East with a 61-54 victory over the sixth-ranked Orangemen.

Douglas, the Big East career assist leader, finished with almost as many turnovers (five) as he did assists (six) and missed 10 of 15 shots from the floor before fouling out.

"I thought the key was that Smitty did a great job on Douglas," Thompson said. "Smitty got his scholarship on defense — he knows how he got here."

In the only other college basketball games involving Associated Press Top Twenty teams, Darryl Prue scored 21 points as No. 14 West Virginia defeated St. Bonaventure 80-72, extending the nation's longest winning streak to 19 games — including 13-0 in the Atlantic 10 Conference, and Roy Marble scored 18 of his 24 points in the first half and B.J. Armstrong added 20 to pace No. 15 Iowa over No. 16 Ohio State 83-75.

Led by Douglas' six assists and 16 points by Derrick Coleman, Syracuse held a 30-28 halftime lead over Georgetown. But Smith took over in the second half, scoring five of his 16 points in a 13-3 burst after the intermission that gave the Hoyas a 41-33 lead.

Syracuse, which had a seven-game winning streak snapped, never got closer than four points after that and scored only 24 points in the second half in its lowest-scoring outing of the season.

"Sherman does so much for them," Thompson said. "He gets the offense moving, he throws alley-oops, he gets them in transition."

Normally, yes. But Smith put a stop to all that.

"We didn't get very many fastbreak opportunities," Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim acknowledged. "Smith had something to do with that."

Said Smith: "Defense is the key to our victories. You can come to the game without a jump shot, but you can't show up without defense."

The victory enabled the Hoyas, 19-3 overall and 9-2 in the conference, to move two games in front of second-place Seton Hall. Syracuse is 21-5 and 7-5.

Perhaps as important as Smith's defense on Douglas was the job the Hoyas did on Coleman, who had only six second-half points, finishing with 22.

"We were switching up on him," said John Turner, who joined freshman Alonzo Mourning in guarding the Syracuse center.

"They didn't do anything different in the second half, but we didn't get him the ball enough and he missed some easy shots," said Syracuse forward Billy Owens, who missed a few himself (1-of-9).

Smith's offense was vital in helping Georgetown take the lead in the second half. His 3-point shot highlighted the pivotal spree in which Georgetown grabbed an eight-point lead with 13:36 remaining.

Syracuse, which made only two baskets in the opening nine minutes of the second half, both by Stephen Thompson, cut the lead to 53-49 with 3:08 left. But Smith's 17-foot jumper made it 55-49 and moments later his breakaway basket gave the Hoyas a secure 58-50 advantage with 1:21 left.

Georgetown used runs of 7-0 and 6-0 to go in front 24-14 with 8:28 left in the first half. Coleman then hit a short jumper to ignite a 16-4 spree that gave Syracuse its two-point halftime lead.

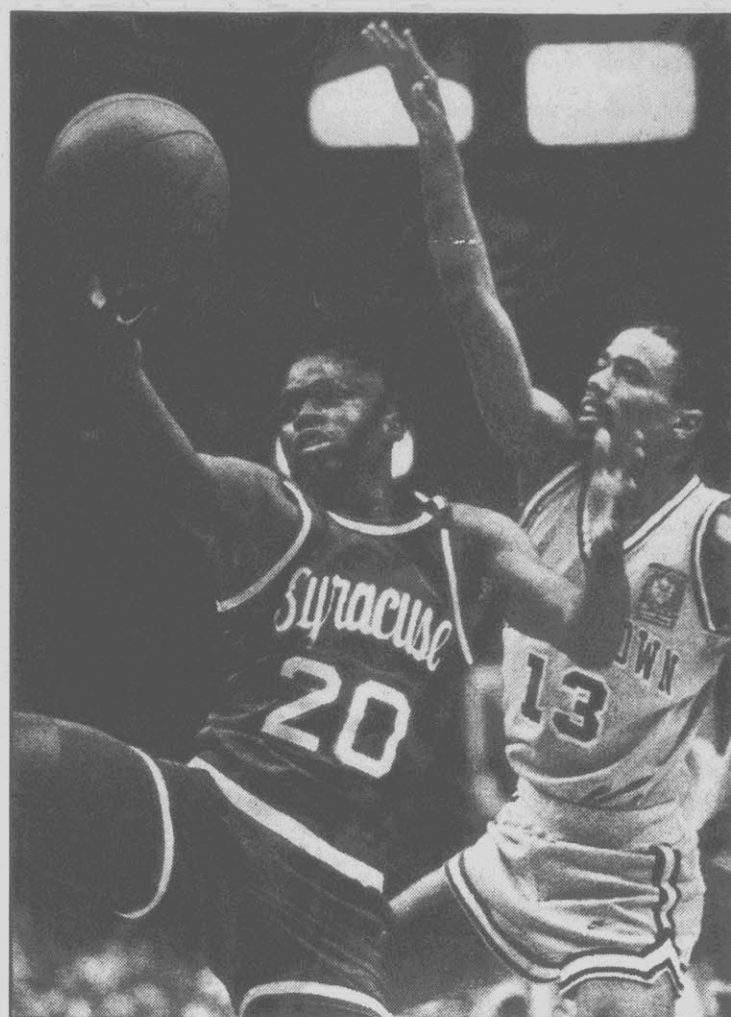

Smith's jumper from the foul line opened the second half, and a minute later Mourning connected on a hook shot over Coleman to give the Hoyas the lead for good.

Mourning scored 14 points as Georgetown stretched its home-winning streak to 18 games. Syracuse, which has lost six straight to the Hoyas, is 0-9 in the Capital Centre.

Syracuse's Sherman Douglas shoots against Charles Smith

Conley Girls' Coach Keith Gould

Tim Chandler

Valkyries Make Progress

At the beginning of the season, nobody would have thought that D.H. Conley's girls basketball team would be fighting for the championship in the Coastal 3-A Conference after coming off a 6-18 record last year.

But 20 games later, the Valkyries are as much in the hunt as anyone else in the league.

Conley is currently 15-5 overall and 6-3 in the conference, one-half game behind West Craven and West Carteret. Both stand at 6-2 in the league.

The Valkyries can inch even closer to the top tonight when they square off against West Craven at home.

First-year coach Keith Gould is, no doubt, happy with the progress made, but he wasn't exactly sure what to expect the first day he went to practice back before the season started.

"The first day of practice was definitely different," Gould said. "It was different because I didn't know how to approach the girls. But I think the girls respected me."

"I tried to coach them just like I do the boys and I don't think it would have worked out if I had done it any differently," Gould said. "I told them that I didn't care about what they had done in the past, we were going to start with a clean slate and work from there."

Gould had earned the respect by serving as assistant coach for the Conley boys teams that had won the state title in 1987 and finished second in the east last season. He had also served as assistant football coach since joining the Viking staff in 1983.

"I think the biggest thing I had to overcome was the mental approach," Gould said. "I think early on we might have played above our head. We beat Farmville (Central, 44-39) in our first game of the season and that was a big mental boost. They were looked at as one of the best teams in their conference (Eastern Plains)."

"Then we went to North Pitt and were in the game until the end (before losing, 50-46)," Gould said. "And that was positive because the girls had lost bad to them the last couple of years."

Gould said he isn't sure what would have become of his team if they hadn't pulled out the win over Farmville in the opener.

"I think if we had lost that game, we would have been in trouble," Gould said. "By winning, it gave them confidence in me and what I was trying to accomplish."

The girls weren't the only ones who gained confidence in Gould, the administration at Conley did too.

"Obviously with the record, he's done an outstanding job," Conley athletic director Walter Claybrook said. "There's two ways to look at it. Number one is the record itself and the individual job Keith has done coaching the girls. But he was also left with some talent from last year's team."

"But even with the talent he was left, he had to take them and teach them

Dunn Says He's Man For Job

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — South Carolina officials have not confirmed reports that they intend to meet with Dick Sheridan of North Carolina State about filling the head football coach position, but Joe Lee Dunn says he's the best man for the job.

"The university is not in a position at this time to talk about any details concerning discussions between university officials and a potential successor to Coach Joe Morrison," South Carolina said in a statement Monday.

The Greenville News reported Sunday that a meeting with Sheridan could come as early as Monday or Tuesday.

Joe Morrison, South Carolina's coach for the past six years, died Feb. 5 of a heart attack after playing racquetball. He was buried Thursday in his hometown of Lima, Ohio.

Meanwhile, Joe Lee Dunn, assistant head coach and defensive coordinator at South Carolina, said Monday he thought he was the most qualified candidate to replace Morrison.

"I've already expressed the opinion that I felt like I was the best guy for the job but they're the ones that have got to make that decision, not me," Dunn said, referring to university officials.

Sheridan, Dunn and former East Carolina head coach Art Baker are believed to be under consideration for the post.

N.C. State Athletic Director Jim Valvano, who gave South Carolina officials permission to talk to Sheridan, said he is concerned about the effect controversy surrounding the Wolfpack basketball program might have on Sheridan's talks with South Carolina.

"It would be unrealistic to think it won't have any effect or impact on Dick's thinking," Valvano said.

N.C. State's basketball program came under scrutiny after reports surfaced in January about the forthcoming publication of a book critical of Valvano and detailing alleged abuses at N.C. State.

Baker, a Sumter native, coached East Carolina from 1985-88 and compiled a 12-32 record. He left at the end of last season and now serves as South Carolina's associate athletic director and director of the Gamecock Club, an athletic booster organization.

Bakker, who also coached at Furman and The Citadel, spoke highly of Sheridan on Monday.

"I worked with Dick five years at Furman and three years in high school" in South Carolina,

Patched-Up Lady Pirates Top Pats

Miller, O'Connor Help Make Pierson's Birthday Party A Happy One

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina University's women put together a patched-up lineup against a patched-up George Mason lineup and came away with a 71-60 Colonial Athletic Association basketball victory Monday night.

The Pirates were — at the start — without the services of off-guard Chris O'Connor, who suffered a severe sprained ankle Saturday night in the 63-53 loss to league-leading James Madison. Rose Miller started in her place and turned in a 13-point, six-rebound performance.

Then, Gretta Savage, who missed part of the JMU game with a knee injury, went down again and O'Connor came to the rescue, playing 19 minutes and scoring 11 points.

It all added up to a fine birthday present for ECU coach Pat Pierson, who said it was the best present she could have gotten. "They gave me a present before the game," she said of the team. "I told them they knew what I really wanted."

So they went out and got it for her. "The kids were really emotionally up for the game," Pierson said. "We were concerned about the injury to Chris, even though she thought she could play. We went with Rose and she gave us a great game."

"Then, when Gretta went down, Chris responded. She played with a lot of pain, but with a lot of heart, too," Pierson said.

"It really hurt a lot," O'Connor said. "They really had it taped up good though. I was on crutches all the time before the game. But I had to play."

George Mason, too, was without one of its starters. The Lady Patriots, who beat ECU in their first meeting of the year, 67-56, lost point guard Debbie Taneyhill, with a broken thumb against UNC-Wilmington on Saturday.

"I don't think it hurt them that much," Pierson said. "They had been using her and (Earlisha) Dill about equally." Dill, who went most of the way at the point, scored 11 points before fouling out.

"I think our defense was the key," Pierson said. "We really played well. I thought Pam (Williams) did a great job on (Cindy) Baruch." Baruch, who leads the Lady Pats with a 19.5 average, scored 15 to lead Mason, but she hit only seven of 20 shots from the field.

Both teams were cold at the start. East Carolina scored on a Savage shot after just 17 seconds, but neither team scored over the next couple of minutes. ECU scored again on a jumper by Irish Hamilton with 16:42 showing and again on two free throws by Sarah Gray at 14:12. O'Connor hit a jumper and Miller made a turnaround jumper for a 10-0 lead with 12:45 left.

Mason finally broke the ice with 12:21 remaining in the half on a jumper by Baruch off the baseline.

Mason cut it back to seven, 16-9, before East Carolina scored seven straight to take a 23-9 lead with 7:18 left.

Mason rallied once again, this time, cutting the lead to as little as five, 32-27, before Williams made two free throws and Tonya Hargrove hit a jumper for a 36-27 halftime lead.

ECU moved out by 13 early in the second half, but Mason again rallied

Trinity Takes Sweep Over Falls Road

Trinity Christian School took a pair of high school basketball games from Falls Road Christian of Rocky Mount Monday night. Trinity won the boys' game, 67-47, and nipped the Falls Road girls' 31-26, in their game.

Trinity inched out into an 11-8 lead in the first period of the boys' game, but then sped away to a 31-14 halftime lead. They increased that to 46-24 in the third quarter and coasted home.

Kirk Welch led the way with 22 points and also pulled in 19 rebounds. Kreston Welch added 15 points. Brian Johnson led Falls Road with nine points.

In the girls' game, Trinity led 7-4 after one period and built up a 16-10 halftime lead. The Lady Eagles saw that vanish in the third period as Falls Road outscored them 13-6, taking a 23-22 lead. But Trinity outscored their foe, 9-3, in the final period to pull out the win.

Becky Stocks led Trinity with 10 points while Laura Smiley led Falls Road with 12.

Trinity's girls are now 7-4 on the year while the boys are 16-4. Trinity plays at home against Neuse Christian on Friday.

Houzer Earns CAA Weekly Honor

RICHMOND (AP) — North Carolina-Wilmington's Larry Houzer and Richmond's Julie Jones have been named the Colonial Athletic Association's players of the week, the league announced Monday.

Houzer scored 26 points and grabbed nine rebounds last week in a 68-64 victory over Richmond. He scored 26 points and pulled down five rebounds in a losing effort against George Mason.

Houzer is second in the CAA in field goal percentage at 56 percent, fifth in free throw percentage at 82 percent and sixth in scoring, averaging 16.0 points per contest.

Jones led Richmond to three victories last week, scoring 47 points in the three games. She shot 65 percent from the floor on 17-of-26 shooting and made 12 of 15 attempts from 3-point range for 80 percent.

St. Paul's Tops St. Peter's Cagers

St. Paul's of New Bern gained a 43-24 basketball victory over St. Peter's of Greenville.

Ryan Williams led St. Peter's with 12 points.

St. Paul's girls also came away with a victory, taking a 19-12 victory. Katie McPherson led St. Peter's with six points.

UNC's Lebo, Williams Out With Injuries

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Starting guard Jeff Lebo will not play in eighth-ranked North Carolina's game against Old Dominion on Tuesday, and starting center Scott Williams is doubtful, team officials said Monday.

Lebo, a 6-foot-4 senior from Carlisle, Pa., suffered a small fracture of his left foot in Sunday's 85-67 victory over Virginia. In January, Lebo sprained an ankle against Virginia and missed three games.

"These are two different injuries, which just happened to be in the same foot," said Dr. Joseph DeWalt, North Carolina's team physician.

Williams, a 6-10 junior from Hacienda Heights, Calif., slightly separated his shoulder while blocking a shot in Sunday's game.

"Scott is in pain right now and could not play if the game were Monday," DeWalt said. "I would say he is doubtful for Tuesday."

DeWalt would not say if either player would be available for Thursday's Atlantic Coast Conference game with Wake Forest.

It is the latest in a string of injuries for the Tar Heels. Starting forward J.R. Reid missed the first month of play due to a foot injury.

"This year has been extremely frustrating," said North Carolina coach Dean Smith. "Because of our many injuries we haven't had our whole team together very much."

"To lose someone of Lebo's ability and with his leadership is even more devastating. We'd like to have all eight of our recruited players available for some length of time. So far, that hasn't happened," Smith said.

Lebo is North Carolina's third-leading scorer with a 14.0 average, and leads the team in 3-pointers with 48. Williams is averaging 11.5 points and leads the team with 7.0 rebounds per game.

UNCW Rallies To Defeat JMU, 69-63

HARRISONBURG, Va. (AP) — Scott Tierney sparked a decisive second-half run with back-to-back 3-point goals, and North Carolina-Wilmington rallied to beat James Madison 69-63 in a Colonial Athletic Association game Monday night.

The Dukes led 59-55, but N.C.-Wilmington scored nine unanswered points to take their first lead of the contest. Tierney started the run with his 3-pointers, and Larry Houzer — who scored all 18 of his points in the second half — capped the spree with a free throw for a 64-59 lead with 57 seconds left. The Dukes, 14-11 overall and 5-6 in the CAA, came no closer than three the rest of the way.

James Madison led 32-27 at intermission and boosted the margin to 48-38 on a dunk by William Davis with 12:12. Davis was assessed a technical foul on the play for hanging on the rim, and the Seahawks responded with a 15-5 run to tie the game at 53 on a pair of free throws by Houzer.

The Seahawks improved to 12-11 and 7-4.

Joe cherry added 12 points for the Seahawks, and Tierney finished with 10.

Claude Ferdinand led the Dukes with 14 points. Anthony Cooley had 13 and Troy Bostic finished with 12.

Cavs Land Prep Football Sensation Kirby

TABB, Va. (AP) — Top high school prospect Terry Kirby says he knew all along he wanted to play football and basketball for the University of Virginia.

But the Tabb High School senior kept recruiters in suspense for months while he weighed offers from from nearly every major college in the country.

Kirby, a running back regarded as the top high school football prospect in the country, said Monday he picked Virginia over four other finalists because of its academics, its closeness to his home and its coaches.

"It's always been my top choice, but no one ever knew that," he said at a news conference in the high school auditorium.

Just to be sure he wasn't making the wrong decision, Kirby listened to the wooing from countless colleges and narrowed his choices to Virginia, Clemson, Alabama, Georgia and Penn State.

Kirby said he treated the recruiting as a big game, and he had a little fun in announcing his decision, too.

Kirby, 19, told the crowd of reporters, classmates, teachers and administrators that his first two goals are to complete a winning season in basketball and his senior year in high school.

"Third is to prepare myself mentally and physically to do my best in helping Virginia beat Notre Dame," he said before he was drowned out by cheers from the audience.

In the first game of the 1989 college football season, Virginia will meet national champion Notre Dame in the All-American Kickoff Classic in East Rutherford, N.J.

George Welsh, Virginia's football coach, said he expects Kirby to play.

Sooners Suspend QB Thompson

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NORMAN, Okla. — Oklahoma, plagued by a series of unrelated incidents since being slapped with a three-year probation, was jolted Monday night when FBI agents arrested starting quarterback Charles Thompson on a federal complaint of selling cocaine to an undercover agent.

Thompson, whom Coach Barry Switzer had suspended earlier in the day, is scheduled to appear before a U.S. magistrate today. U.S. Attorney Bill Price said he faces up to 20 years in prison and $1 million in fines if he is convicted.

Price said Thompson's arrest culminated a six-month investigation. Thompson allegedly sold 17 grams of cocaine to an FBI agent for $1,400 on Jan. 26.

Thompson thus becomes the fifth Oklahoma football player to be suspended since the NCAA placed the Sooners' on three years' probation in December, mostly for recruiting violations.

The NCAA also chastized Switzer for failure to "exercise supervisory control" over the program.

Switzer said he would "say nothing more at this time about the matter" when he suspended Thompson Monday afternoon.

"I just said I'm not gonna discuss it anymore," Switzer said later Monday evening. "I've made my decision, and that's it."

Athletic Director Donnie Duncan and Interim President David Swank could not be reached for comment.

John Underwood, assistant athletic director, said he learned about Thompson's arrest when he returned home about 10 p.m. CST and turned on the news.

"I'm shocked, just like everyone else," Underwood said. "Barry had made a statement this afternoon (about the suspension), but I'm not always privy to a lot of that information."

"I'm just shocked and saddened," Underwood said, referring further questions to Switzer or Duncan.

The Sooners' woes started in Orlando, Fla., when some players allegedly trashed a hotel room where they were staying during the week leading up to the Citrus Bowl against Clemson.

On Jan. 13, starting cornerback Jerry Parks allegedly wounded teammate Zarak Peters following an argument in the athletic dorm. Parks was suspended from the team and charged with shooting with intent to injure. He is at home in Fort Bend, Texas, awaiting his preliminary hearing.

Last Friday, Nigel Clay, Bernard Hall and Glenn Bell were charged with first-degree rape in a Jan. 21 incident, also in the athletic dorm. They were suspended from the university for two years, but can appeal the decision, pending the outcome of the proceedings.

When Switzer was asked if it was a difficult decision to suspend Thompson, who took over for Jamelle Holieway midway through last season, he said, "No, not at all."

Sanders Family Looking To NFL Officials About Rights

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OKLAHOMA CITY — Nothing has been ordinary about Heisman Trophy winner Barry Sanders, and that includes the problem he could present the NFL should he decide to forego his senior year at Oklahoma State, his father says.

William Sanders, who has urged his son to take advantage of his success and apply for a supplemental draft, said he shopped that prospect around last week with league officials.

"They said they've never had a case like Barry's before, and that they would like him to submit a letter explaining his circumstances," Sanders told the Atlanta Constitution.

Should Sanders go to the NFL next fall he would be the first routine college junior to make such a jump.

Although several players with remaining college eligibility have applied and been selected in the NFL's drafts, most had graduated early, reached their fifth year of college or somehow had their eligibility stripped.

Sanders' father said he wanted to find out straight from the NFL what his son's rights are.

"The NFL people didn't give me any indication whether Barry would be allowed into the league," he said. "They wanted to raise the possibility that Barry may not get in."

NFL spokesman Joe Browne confirmed that William Sanders met Wednesday with Jay Moyer, the league's executive vice president.

"It was strictly an informational meeting about our eligibility rules," Browne said.

Sanders said through Steve Buzard, sports information director at Oklahoma State, that he would have no comment on his father's visit.

Sanders initially said he would return for his senior year at Oklahoma State, where a four-year probation would keep him off television next year. However, he recently said he had made a decision — but was keeping it to himself — about his future. His father said even he doesn't know, nor does he want to.

"He's definitely made up his mind about what he's going to do," the elder Sanders said Monday. But he said he asked Barry not to tell him until a day or so before announcing his intentions.

"That way I can say I don't know" and be telling the truth, the elder Sanders said.

Sanders said he planned to go to Stillwater, Okla., to talk to his son and tell him what he learned from the visit with NFL officials.

In the meantime, the elder Sanders is fending off dozens off calls from people wanting to represent Barry. Collegiate players are forbidden to negotiate with professional agents.

The father said it was not so much the probation but his son's marketability behind his hope that his son would forego his senior year at Oklahoma State.

"He can't go any higher," William Sanders said. He noted, as he had in an earlier interview, that his son could always return to complete his education.

Should he be cleared for the NFL, Sanders could, in effect, choose to go in the regular draft in late April or delay his announcement for a supplemental draft in July, in which he might go to a different team.

Some legal experts have questioned whether the NFL rule prohibiting the drafting of underclassmen would hold up in court if challenged by a would-be player. William Sanders, however, told the Atlanta Constitution, "I don't want to talk about any possible lawsuit."

what winning is about and what it takes to win. From the beginning of the year, I've watched the team improve. Early on, I thought they would fall apart and blame each other, but they've continued to play together and that's the biggest positive thing you can have."

As the season has worn on, Gould claims his appreciation for the girls team has grown more and more.

"I'm not so sure that it isn't a little easier to coach the girls," Gould said. "The individualism on girls team is not as high. Most of them don't have big dreams of playing past high school and they're not worried about being the star out there on the court. And that makes it easier to mold them into a team unit."

In fact, Gould points to his bench as the biggest supporters of the team.

"We've got some freshmen that don't play a lot, but they understand," Gould said. "We've talked about in practice how important it is for them to have a lot of enthusiasm and pull hard for the other girls."

"There are going to be some games when they won't play and they realize that," Gould said. "And they handle that well, and I'm not so sure that guys adjust to that role as easy."

As the wins began to mount up, so did the support from the student body.

"The students have really gotten involved," Gould said. "But when you're winning, everybody likes to see that. But the girls appreciate the crowd, it makes them feel important too."

"I think the students are starting to realize that the way we play isn't the same style of old girls basketball where you walk it down the court and have games in the 30s," Gould said. "We like to play an up-tempo game in the 50s and 60s."

The Valkyries cupboard won't go bare after this season for Gould either. Senior forward Charlene Dawnport (7 points and 8 rebounds) is the only graduating player.

Coming back next year will be four starters, including junior Glenda Hardy (11.4 points, 8 rebounds) and sophomore Lendora Tyson (19.4 points, 14 rebounds).

"Right now we're in a good situation to go the playoffs this year and possibly win the conference championship," Gould said. "And next year, we'll have the same type of goals, with the conference championship being emphasized more."

Who would have thought it?

to run some plays to get me the ball," Prue said. "I've played a lot of wing (outside) this year, and with Chris (6-6 power forward Chris Brooks) down low, I guess they think Chris is more powerful than I am. I like it. I know play's going to come to my side when they do that."

"The key to our club is balance," Coach Gale Catlett said of the 20-2 Mountaineers. "We've got four guys in double figures tonight and one of our best scorers (Steve Berger) only scored eight points."

St. Bonaventure coach Ron DeCarli said the Mountaineers "have the inside strength and excellent guard play. That's why they're (in the) top 15."

Prue said the Mountaineers "still have things to prove. They say we haven't played against anybody, but we beat Pittsburgh and they've beaten some good teams in the Big East. They were calling us overachievers, which we're not. I guess we have to prove to everybody we deserve to be up there."

With West Virginia ahead 40-35 at halftime, Prue scored six of the Mountaineers' first 10 second-half points in a 10-4 burst. It was 56-43 when the Bonnies rallied with 10 consecutive points. West Virginia then settled down and outscored St. Bonaventure 16-7 in the next five minutes.

Rocky Llewellyn led the losers with 20 points, 16 coming in the first 14 minutes. West Virginia used a 14-0 run to erase a 33-26 deficit.

Iowa 83, Ohio St. 75

At Iowa City, Iowa improved to 18-6, while Ohio State dropped to 17-7. Both are 6-5 in the Big Ten.

Iowa led 44-43 at halftime and scored the first 11 points of the second half. But Ohio State retaliated with a 10-0 spurt and got within 55-53. Iowa then scored eight of the next 10 points, taking a 63-55 lead on B.J. Armstrong's two free throws with 9:43 remaining.

The Buckeyes got within 76-73 layup with 47 seconds left, but Ed

Horton hit the front end of a one-and-one and Armstrong made all six free throw attempts in the final 36 seconds.

Ohio State's Jay Burson, who had made only 18 of 54 field goal attempts coming into the game, broke out of his shooting slump with 25 points.

Roy Marble led Iowa with 24 points and Armstrong added 20 while equaling his career high of 12 assists.

Others

— Scott Haffner scored 33 points to lead Evansville, 18-3, past Cincinnati 83-69. Evansville, which shot 56 percent (30 for 54) broke a 47-47 tie with seven straight points.

— Lionel Simmons had 27 points and 16 rebounds and Doug Overton had 18 assists as La Salle defeated Holy Cross 101-82. Jack Hurd added 24 points for the Explorers, 21-4 overall and 12-1 in the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference. Leading 60-54 with 14:27 left, La Salle scored 13 straight points.

— Paul Guffrovich's four free throws in the final 14 seconds lifted Wichita State into a tie for first place in the Missouri Valley Conference with a 66-62 win over co-leader Creighton, which led 30-17 late in the first half. John Cooper led Wichita State with 18 points.

— Don Mann made a school record 8-of-11 3-point shots as Murray State defeated Tennessee State 89-80. Mann and Jeff Martin each scored 28 points. Victor Fraley led the losers with 27 points, including 7-of-13 3-pointers.

— Randy Henry hit a baseline jumper that put Middle Tennessee ahead for good and the Blue Raiders held on for a 111-105 overtime victory over Austin Peay. Middle Tennessee is 18-6 overall and 8-1 in the Ohio Valley Conference.

— Rodney Peel scored 25 points as Appalachian State defeated The Citadel 86-72 and tied Tennessee-Chattanooga for first place in the Southern Conference. Appalachian State is 18-5 and 7-4.

Ridley To Fill In For Elliott At Daytona

'About as long as it took to say OK,' he said Monday after completing his first practice laps in the Coors-Melling Ford Thunderbird at Daytona International Speedway. If being among the favorites to win the race excited Ridley, the 1980 Rookie of the Year, whose only Winston Cup victory came nearly eight years ago, it didn't show.

A lack of a caution early in the race - a rarity at Daytona - could all but destroy Ridley's hopes of winning. Under a caution, it is likely that a driver change can be made without losing a lap. Under the green flag, a loss of a lap or two is probable. Despite Elliott's injury and the team's decision to protect itself in the points race, Ridley does not believe he will be told to cool it.

problems and Ridley breezed home for what also is car-wreener Junie Donlavey's only Winston Cup victory. With any luck, Ridley will be a contender Sunday.

Dunn Says... 'I know he's a good coach and everything,' Dunn said. 'It doesn't make any difference to me as far as Dick Sheridan goes. The only thing I can go by is the last two years we've played them, we've had probably the easiest time against them as we've had with anybody,' Dunn said.

 Some rudimentary knowledge of probabilities can be of help in choosing which of several lines you should adopt. However, quite often logic will serve you just as well.

The auction was the simplest in bridge. With 10 points and a balanced hand facing a 16-18 point no trump opening, North bid what he thought he could make.

West led his fourth-best heart, won by dummy's king. With only eight tricks in sight, declarer decided he would try to establish a club as his game-going trick. He came to hand with a diamond and led a club to the nine.

In with the ten of clubs, East returned a heart and West made a fine play when he allowed declarer's ten to hold the trick. No matter what declarer did now, the defenders were bound to win a black-suit trick and then they could cash three heart tricks to beat the contract.

Declarer went after the wrong suit—he should have tackled spades. With eight sure tricks, two finesses in that suit were a 3-to-1 favorite to produce the fulfilling trick. But without a knowledge of higher math, how could declarer know which line offered the better chance?

To produce an extra trick in clubs in time, declarer needed to find West with either K-10 or Q-10; in other words, with two of three missing cards. To score an extra trick in spades declarer needed only to find East with one of two cards—the king or queen. It does not require a mathematical genius to know that the chances of finding a player with one specific card are greater than of finding him with two.

British Actress Wins Lead In PBS Series On Germany

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Elizabeth Hurley wasn't intimidated by her first screen test, because she didn't think she had a chance of being cast in the title role of the PBS miniseries "Christabel."

The 22-year-old British actress thought she was too young for the role of Christabel Bielenberg, the Englishwoman who married a German lawyer on the eve of World War II. Together they resisted and survived the Nazi regime.

The four-part BBC drama airs in one installment per week, beginning Sunday on PBS' "Masterpiece Theatre."

Hurley was selected over hundreds of other actresses for the role, even though her only prior experience was a four-minute part in the anthology movie "Aria," some TV commercials and roles in episodes of "Inspector Morse" and "Rumpole of the Bailey."

"The screen test was a difficult scene where she (Christabel) is interrogated by the Nazis," Hurley said in an interview during her first visit to Los Angeles. "It was a heavy scene. I wasn't nervous because I didn't think I'd get it. I was up against some well-known actresses. I was too young. The producers only saw me because I had a good agent."

The screenplay was adapted by leading British television scriptwriter Dennis Potter ("The Singing Detective") from Mrs. Bielenberg's autobiography "The Past Is Myself." Mrs. Bielenberg and her husband now live on a farm in Ireland.

Stephen Dillon, also an unknown actor, plays Peter Bielenberg, who sent his family to hide in the Black Forest and joined the Resistance.

Christabel Bielenberg, said Hurley, "could have gone back to England, but she chose to stay in Germany with her husband. Her husband was anti-Hitler and joined the Resistance against the Nazis, for which he was imprisoned. Most of his friends were hanged. It was thanks to Christabel that he survived."

"She volunteered for interrogation by the Gestapo. She went to the concentration camp where her husband was held. She was questioned six to eight hours and during that time managed to persuade the Gestapo to let her husband go. She put herself in the lion's den. It was an incredibly brave thing to do. Later, they hid in the Black Forest."

Hurley was in Los Angeles to promote the miniseries, but she also stayed over for some job interviews.

SAN FRANCISCO — Wanna be another Springsteen? Maybe Madonna II?

Twenty-five people this summer will get the chance to learn how from those who have already made it in the music biz during the first Rock 'n' Roll Fantasy Camp.

"It'll be a total immersion into the world of a rock 'n' roll star," said the program's creator, Gilbert Klein, who modeled the idea after baseball camps in which fans get to play alongside major leaguers.

After getting coached by real-life rockers, "campers" will live the dream of everyone who ever played in a garage band: performing at San Francisco's legendary Fillmore auditorium.

Guitarist Craig Chaquico of The Starship will be among the professional musicians instructing the aspirants, who must only be "competent" performers, Klein said Monday.

While claiming he could not yet release the names of other participants, "everyone we've spoken to has been enthusiastic about it," he added.

Klein said the camp, to be held Aug. 20-27, is partly for musicians who want to break into the business, "but it's mainly aimed toward people who are doing it for fun and have another profession they do."

Klein fits the latter description himself. The owner of a combination nightclub-bowling alley in the city's Haight-Ashbury neighborhood, he is a rock 'n' roller from way back.

He played in a band on New York's Long Island 20 years ago and several years ago formed a group, Buzzin the System, with some of his employees.

"Once you've played, you never forget your instrument and you never get rock 'n' roll out of your system," he said.

Would-be campers must be 21, sing or play an instrument and submit an audition tape with five songs. Participants must at least be able to bang out the chords of such simple rock songs as "Proud Mary," said Klein.

"You have to have some competence. But the best players won't necessarily get into camp," said Klein, who said he would look for a good variety of performers.

The chosen amateurs will be divided into five bands, according to musical tastes, and will spend three days rehearsing, two days recording and putting the tracks together and a day doing sound and light checks at the Fillmore — one of those less-than-glamorous but necessary routines of the music business.

After the Fillmore concert Aug. 26, participants will take home audio tapes of their camp band and a video of the band in concert.

Klein, who plans to expand the camps nationally and internationally, figures there are a lot of wannabes happy to pay the $3,500 fee, which includes lodging.

Citing figures from the National Association of Music Merchants, Klein pointed out that since 1960 more than 20 million guitars have been sold.

RADNOR, Pa. — Six-foot-3, 260-pound John Goodman remembers the time when he could party with impunity and not be noticed.

"I guess that changes now," the chubby husband in ABC's new hit "Roseanne" said in this week's TV Guide.

"I got to be a little more careful," he said, recalling that people now are hounding him for autographs and some are even propositioning him.

Chapman, Jackson Win British Awards

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — American singers Tracy Chapman and Michael Jackson were named best female and male international artists at the British Record Industry Awards.

Rock stars Phil Collins and Annie

Lennox won awards for best British artists, and singer Cliff Richard accepted a lifetime achievement award at Monday's ceremony at Royal Albert Hall.

Jackson did not appear and a thank-you video he taped in Los Angeles was not shown because of a technical problem.

The Four Tops accepted the award for the eccentric superstar and apologized to the audience of 1,500 for his absence. Jackson also won the music video award for "Smooth Criminal."

Chapman also was unable to attend to accept her awards, which included best international newcomer.

Lennox, who sings solo and with Dave Stewart in the group the Eurythmics, was making her first appearance since she delivered a stillborn baby three months ago.

She said she planned to begin recording again in the spring.

Other winners included the Irish group U2 for best international group; Erasure for best British group; and Fairground Attraction's single "Perfect" for best British single. Fairground Attraction also won best British album for "First of a Million Kisses."

The pop group Bros won best British newcomers and the English Concert Orchestra and Choir won for best classical recording.

Concert

NEW YORK (AP) — Tenor Placido Domingo and cellist-conductor Mstislav Rostropovich head the bill for a classical music concert to benefit the Soviet-Armenian Earthquake Relief Fund of the American Red Cross.

Tickets range from $15 to $1,000 for the Feb. 21 Carnegie Hall concert, whose principal planners are Domingo, the Soviet-born Rostropovich and conductor Lorin Tjeknavorian.

Other performers scheduled include bass Paata Burchuladze, pianists Alexander Toradze and Vladimir Viardo, sopranos Mirella Freni and Aprile Mollo, bass Samuel Ramey, and newcomers Vadim Repin, a 17-year-old Soviet violinist, and soprano Kallen Esperian, a University of Illinois graduate.
