Many N.C. Residents Lose Power

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Many North Carolina students have the day off from school today, and others got to sleep late before trudging through the snow, but rain and warmer temperatures should take care of most of the white stuff before the day is over, forecasters say.

The storm began Friday and many counties got an extra 2-3 inches of snow Saturday night. Henderson found itself digging out from under 17 inches.

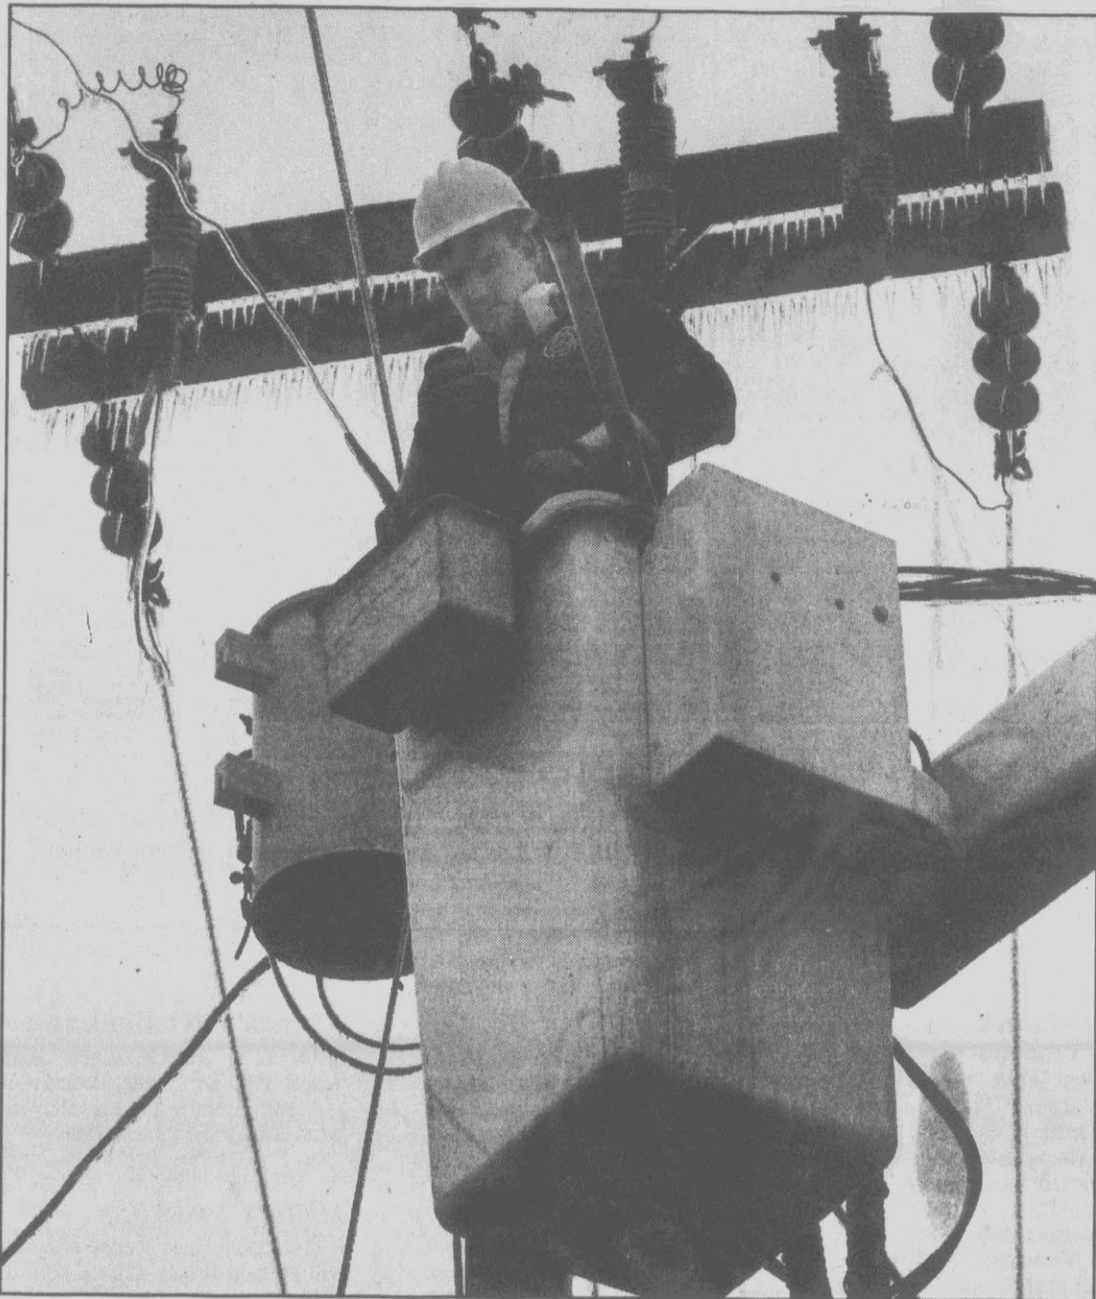

"There's no way to prepare for a 17-inch snowstorm," said James Morgan, Henderson's superintendent of public works. "I've got three plows, three motor graders, a sand truck. In normal snows, we can take care of it."

Once the storm subsided, the inclement weather didn't leave the state without a fight. As moist air moved into North Carolina on Sunday night, dense fog covered many parts of the state. And overnight temperatures that fell below 32 caused icy roads this morning.

Meanwhile, thousands of North Carolinians were still without power Sunday.

"It's kind of like doing the two-step," said Police Chief J.R. Peterson of Smithfield, where a fire at the town's electrical substation left 9,000 residents without power. "You do two steps forward and take one step back. When you get power restored to one place it goes out somewhere else."

The bad effects of the winter ice storm that struck Greenville over the weekend were lessened by the around-the-clock efforts of many employees at the Greenville Utilities Commission.

Malcolm Green, general manager of Greenville Utilities, said approximately 80 to 90 percent of GUC customers experienced an interruption of power sometime over the weekend.

"Roughly 28,000 customers experienced a power outage of one hour or less, while approximately 7,000 were without power longer than an hour," he commented.

Green said residents first encountered power problems early Saturday morning.

"The power outages were mostly caused by the heavy weight of the ice on tree limbs. Those limbs were falling on the lines, cutting off power to customers," he said.

During an eight-hour period on Sunday, GUC recorded over 1,000 telephone calls received through the switchboard number. That did not include calls to the engineering number or the published emergency number.

"We received over 3,000 calls total over the weekend," he said.

Green said throughout the emergency, GUC had personnel stationed at eight telephone lines.

"All of our available work force was called in to help, including water, gas and sewer personnel, and to assist in restoring electrical service. We also used departmental secretaries, cashiers, billing clerks and other office personnel to answer telephones and deliver food and coffee to crews on the outlying job sites," he said.

Green said the average GUC worker spent 18-20 hours working each day during the weekend.

"We staggered the shifts so that we had people working continuously since Saturday," he said.

Green said that due to the large amount of work involved, electrical crews and tree cutters were brought in from Fayetteville Public Works and the High Point Electrical Department.

He said that as of 11 a.m. today, approximately 500 GUC customers are still without power.

Pitt Towns Suffer Power Blackouts From Ice Storm

By Carol Tyer

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

FARMVILLE — Tree branches broken by the weight of ice caused extensive damage this weekend in virtually all Pitt County communities, with Farmville, Bethel and Fountain experiencing total blackouts of electricity Saturday and Sunday.

And early this morning, areas served by the Farmville-Fountain and Pitt and Greene Electric Membership Corporation were again without power. According to Malcolm Green of the Greenville Utilities Commission, a major CP&L transmission line broke at 10:40 a.m. between Wilson and Farmville.

Farmville's and Fountain's first blackout lasted from about 10:30 p.m. Saturday until about 9 a.m. Sunday, while Bethel's lasted from about 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday.

"We never had a total blackout over the weekend," said Ayden Town Manager Don Russell, "but we had a lot of cold and hungry people and our people did a wonderful job trying to keep one step ahead of the ice."

Oliver Murphrey, the Farmville commissioner who chairs its utilities committee, said, "I've never seen a total blackout in all my 45 years in Farmville, and I've also never seen people be more cooperative."

Murphrey said that when service in the Farmville area started failing Saturday about noon, efforts were made to spread the word that anyone who needed to go to a warmer place would be transported to Greenville motels by the Farmville Rescue Squad. A few people accepted the offer, he said, but most either stayed in their own homes or doubled up with friends and relatives who had non-electric heat sources.

Americans Die In Crash

By Hari S. Maniam

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia — A private U.S. cargo jet crashed into a hillside in fog near the city's international airport, and police said today that the bodies of two of the four dead American crewmembers were recovered.

A witness reported seeing a huge explosion in wooded hills 10 miles from Subang International Airport, where authorities said the jumbo jet was headed with the crew and a cargo of clothing and mail.

Officials said the cause of the Sunday morning crash of the Flying Tigers Boeing 747 was not immediately known.

Police recovered the jet's flight data recorder. Company, Malaysian and U.S. investigators planned to investigate.

Ann-Marie Hennessey, a spokeswoman for the Los Angeles-based Flying Tigers, said in a telephone interview that although it was foggy at the time of the crash, the crew reported no problems to the control tower.

Common Market Nations Recall Envoys

By Jeff Donn

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The 12 Common Market nations today said they will recall their ambassadors from Iran to protest the novel have been removed from some bookstores' shelves in the United States and Japan. Fearing attacks, some Western publishers have decided not to print the book.

In Washington on Sunday, Secretary of State James A. Baker III called the death threat "intolerable" and an obstacle to Iran "rejoining the community of civilized nations."

In New York, Roman Catholic Cardinal John J. O'Connor implied that Catholics should shun the work because it offends Moslems, but criticized the death threat. O'Connor said he had not read the book.

President Ali Khamenei of Iran had sought to defuse the crisis over Khomeini's death decree by saying Friday that Rushdie's life might be spared if he apologized and repented.

In an apology issued Saturday, Rushdie said: "I recognize that Moslems in many parts of the world are genuinely distressed by the publication of my novel. I profoundly regret the distress that publication has occasioned to sincere followers of Islam."

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said at one point Saturday that the apology from the 41-year-old writer was probably sufficient to warrant a pardon, but it later retracted the statement as only the opinion of one of its writers.

On Sunday, IRNA quoted Khomeini as saying: "Even if Salman Rushdie repents and becomes the most pious man of all time it is incumbent on every Moslem to employ everything he's got, his life and wealth, to send him to hell."

Khomeini said the "imperialist foreign mass media are falsely alleging that officials of the Islamic Republic said that if the author of 'The Satanic Verses' repents, the execution order against him would be abolished. This is denied, 100 percent."

Neither Khomeini's statement nor IRNA in any of its reports Sunday referred to Khomeini's suggestion of a reprieve, reflecting a widening rift in the Iranian hierarchy over the affair and their country's relations with the West.

Pragmatists in Iran have been pursuing closer ties with the West and help in rebuilding an economy wracked by its eight-year war with Iraq.

The threat against Rushdie has tray his government as enjoying broader support.

Government sources speaking on condition of anonymity said Sharq resigned for "medical reasons."

One source, an official in both the government and the party, said Sharq met Najib and agreed the president should head the Cabinet during the state of emergency declared Saturday.

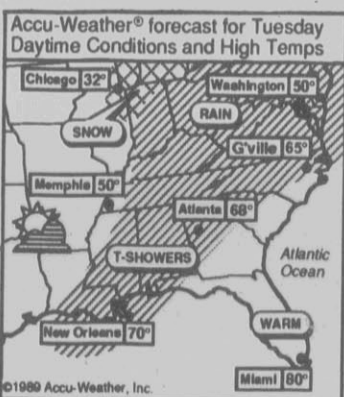

The 20-member Supreme Military Council for the Defense of the Homeland, which is also headed by Najib, met today to map strategy to continue the battle against Moslem guerrillas.

Planning Agenda Set

A proposed ordinance to extend the city's extraterritorial planning and zoning jurisdiction one mile southeast of Greenville will be discussed by the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at City Hall.

The proposed ETJ area includes 1,600 acres southeast of SR 1725 between N.C. 33 and N.C. 43. Approximately 850 property owners would be affected by the action.

The city's development department is proposing that the property be brought into the city's planning jurisdiction in the RA-20 (residential/agricultural) zoning classification.

The department also is proposing to give affected property owners a six-month period to petition for rezoning without having to pay a filing fee.

An ETJ is a designated area outside the corporate city limits set aside for physical planning and implemented through zoning and subdivision regulations.

Also to be discussed is a proposed amendment to the zoning ordinance to allow residential development in the CD (downtown commercial) and DM (downtown mall) zoning districts.

The discussion will include recommendations of a planning and zoning commission subcommittee formed to study multi-family housing downtown. The subcommittee consists of members of the planning board, the Greenville Parking Authority and Evergreen of Greenville Inc.

The commission also will discuss updating the city's thoroughfare plan. Darrell Hensdale, a transportation planning engineer with the N.C. Department of Transportation, will explain the planning process and provide a status report.

The commission also will consider an amendment to the zoning ordinance which would implement the recommendations of a city council subcommittee that examined permitted and special uses in the medical district.

The commission also will discuss a development department study which evaluated the amount of undeveloped MD-2 (medical support facilities) and MD-3 (office and institutional) property in the medical district.

Other items to be considered include a request by Park West Properties to rezone a 29.14-acre tract, located south of U.S. 264 and north of SR 1200, from MD-7 (low-density residential) to MD-3; an ordinance submitted by the development department regarding current surety requirements for subdivision improvements; a request by Collice C. Moore to close a portion of an unnamed street in the Westwood Subdivision; an ordinance to delete a section of the bufferyard regulations which conflicts with another section; a request by Bill Clark Construction Company to annex 3.47 acres adjacent to Quail Ridge Road, and a request by D.C. Development Company to annex 1.08 acres west of Lindbeth Drive.

Five Schools Closed

Ice storms knocked out power in several areas of Pitt County over the weekend and five schools in the Farmville area were closed today.

Barry Gaskins, public information officer for Pitt County Schools, said Falkland Elementary, Farmville Middle School, H.B. Sugg Grammar School, Sam Bundy Primary School and Farmville Central High School were closed today due to power outages.

Students in the Farmville attendance area will probably have to make up the missed day later in the year, Gaskins said.

The remainder of the system operated on a normal schedule and all schools in the county are expected to be open Tuesday.

Lecture Scheduled

The role and mission of black hospitals from 1920 to 1940 will be discussed today at 7:30 p.m. at a free, public lecture at the East Carolina University School of Medicine in the Brody Auditorium.

The lecture, titled "Black Hospitals: A Battleground for Political Ideology, 1920-1940," will be presented by Dr. Vanessa N. Gamble, assistant professor of health policy and management in the division of public health at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

She also is scheduled to present a public talk titled "The Negro Hospital Renaissance: The Black Hospital Movement, 1920-1940" at 2 p.m. in the Brewster Building.

Her presentations, held in observance of "Black History Month," is co-sponsored by the department of medical humanities and the ECU chapter of the Student National Medical Association.

COUNTY EXTENSION DIRECTOR

Since the Nor-Am Chemical Company has decided not to pursue re-registration of Enide 90W for 1989, tobacco farmers will find their options for weed control limited on the plant bed this year. This decision was based on the high cost of re-registration and the fact that its label expiration means other companies could produce this herbicide. Enide 90W purchased at farm supply dealerships is still legal for use in 1989.

Last year, 85 percent of the tobacco farmers in Pitt County used Enide 90W on their plant beds. This application is usually made with Ridomil at seeding. With the loss of this product, there is no herbicide labeled for use on the plant bed. Growers must depend solely upon the methyl bromide treatment for their weed control program.

While Enide 90W has no replacement on the plant bed, Devrinol can be a suitable replacement as on the over-the-top field treatment. Although Devrinol cannot be used for weed control in the plant bed, its performance in field situations is similar to Enide 90W in control and is equally as safe in terms of crop injury. The one difference between these two products is the more restrictive label of Devrinol 50W in crop rotations. Growers who are going to substitute this product as a over-the-top treatment for Enide 90W should read the label before application of this product. Over-the-top treatments of herbicides are recommended when weed pressure is classified as low to moderate and not in fields with histories of severe weed problems.

High School Seniors Interview For University Scholar Awards

Thirty-four outstanding high school seniors from across the state were interviewed this weekend by screening committees for the University Scholar Awards at East Carolina University.

From a group of 12 finalists to be selected for interviews at ECU on March 18, seven 1989 University Scholars will be chosen to receive full, four-year academic scholarships beginning next fall.

The University Scholars Award program, in its fifth year, is the most prestigious scholarship program at ECU with each award provided by a private endowment of at least $40,000. The recipients will be announced in late March, ECU officials said.

The screenings were done by region, with two sets of students being interviewed in Greenville, one in Greensboro and one in Raleigh. Three finalists and an alternate will be selected from each group for the March interviews.

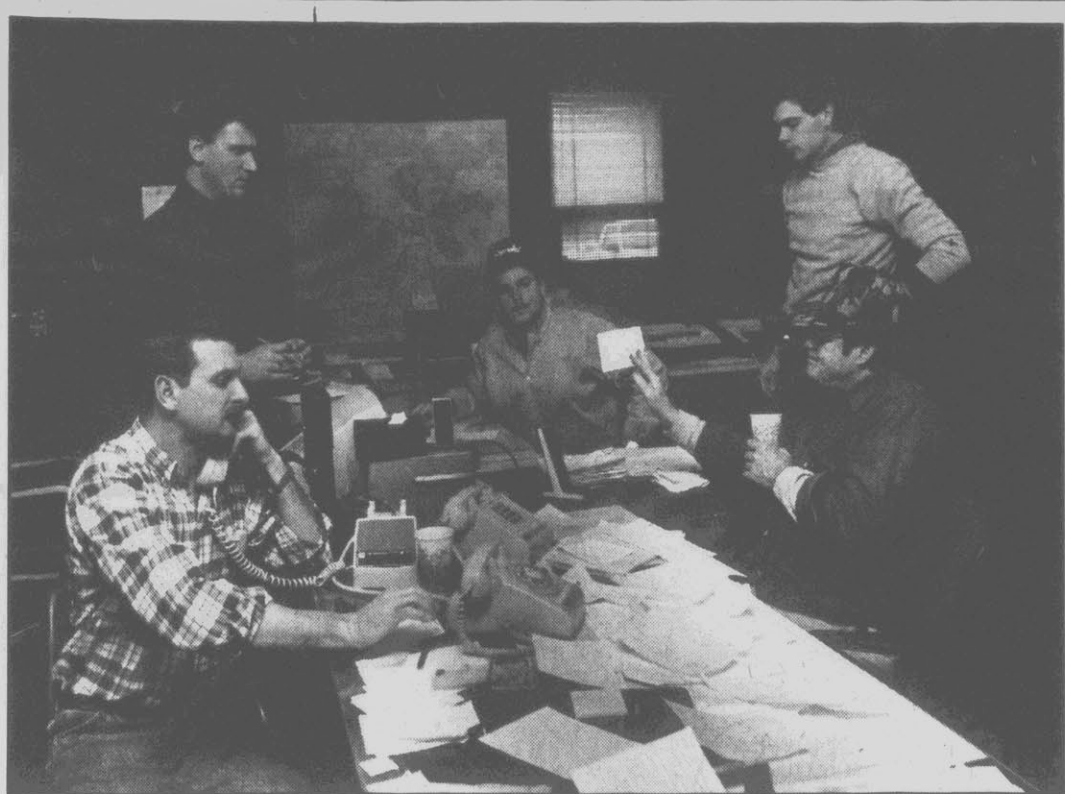

The University Scholars Awards are based on scholastic achievement and leadership potential. Nominations are made by local alumni and school committees.

Interviewed in Greenville were Kathy Lynn Hill, Rt. 1, Box 388, Jamesville, Williamston High School; Robert Richard Gilbert Jr., Box 42, Shawboro, Currituck County High School; Cynthia Renee Justice, 203 Aberdeen Drive, Washington, N.C., Pungo Academy; John R. Wrecks Kill Three

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Three fatalities on North Carolina roads were reported to the Highway Patrol over an icy and snowy weekend, the state Highway Patrol said today.

Sean L. Bryant, 22, of New Bern, died at 5:38 a.m. Sunday when the car he was traveling in struck a bridge abutment on a rural road in Craven County.

Dolores Rose Czarnacki, 31, of Fort Mill, S.C., died Saturday afternoon on N.C. 51 in Mecklenburg County when she lost control of her car on an icy road and struck another vehicle.

Ralph Hagan Gamble Jr., 37, of Waxhaw, died at 6:30 p.m. Friday when his car was hit in the back by another car while Gamble tried to turn into a driveway in Union County, troopers said.

In Horry County, S.C., Thomas Bobby Boswell, 29, of Burlington, was killed at 1:50 a.m. Saturday when he was hit while walking on a state highway 3.5 miles west of Myrtle Beach.

POCKETS YOU DON'T NEED

Having pockets in coats and trousers are a much appreciated convenience. When your teeth develop pockets around the gum line, watch out! You may not have the teeth very long if periodontal gum disease is the culprit.

One of the unfortunate aspects of this disease is that you can have it without realizing it. That's one reason why regular dental checkups are recommended. When periodontal disease is allowed to progress over a long period of time, it eventually will attack the bone and ligament. The periodontal pocket, filled with destructive bacteria, continues to get deeper, putting more and more pressure on the tooth and causing it to loosen. When bone loss has reached a certain point or when the tooth begins to abscess, it may be beyond saving and have to be removed.

Don't give gum disease a chance to do its destructive work in your mouth. Get the regular checkups you need for good dental health. If you have any signs of a gum disease problem. Call our office today for an appointment. We will be glad to discuss treatment possibilities with you.

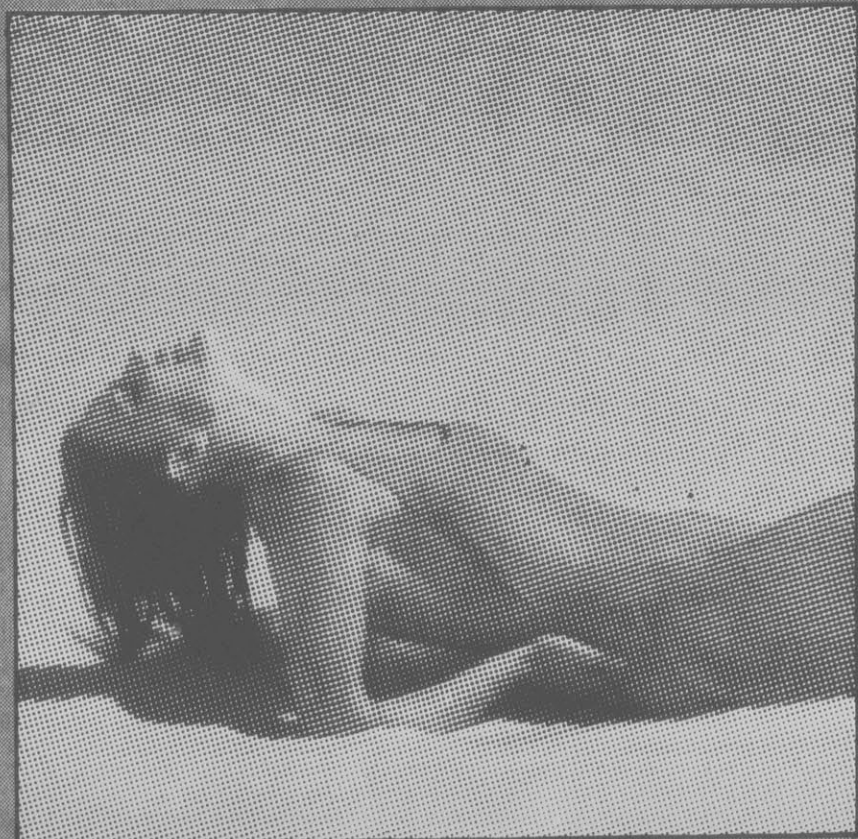

Note:
We welcome new patients, both children and adults.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

New Area

From Parking Lot To Entrance

After years of negotiation the city has decided to transfer a small parking lot at the southeast corner of Reade Circle and Fifth Street to East Carolina University.

The property is known as the swimming pool property because, many years ago, a municipal pool was located there. The pool was eventually abandoned and when parking became critical in the downtown area the pool was filled with dirt and made into a parking lot.

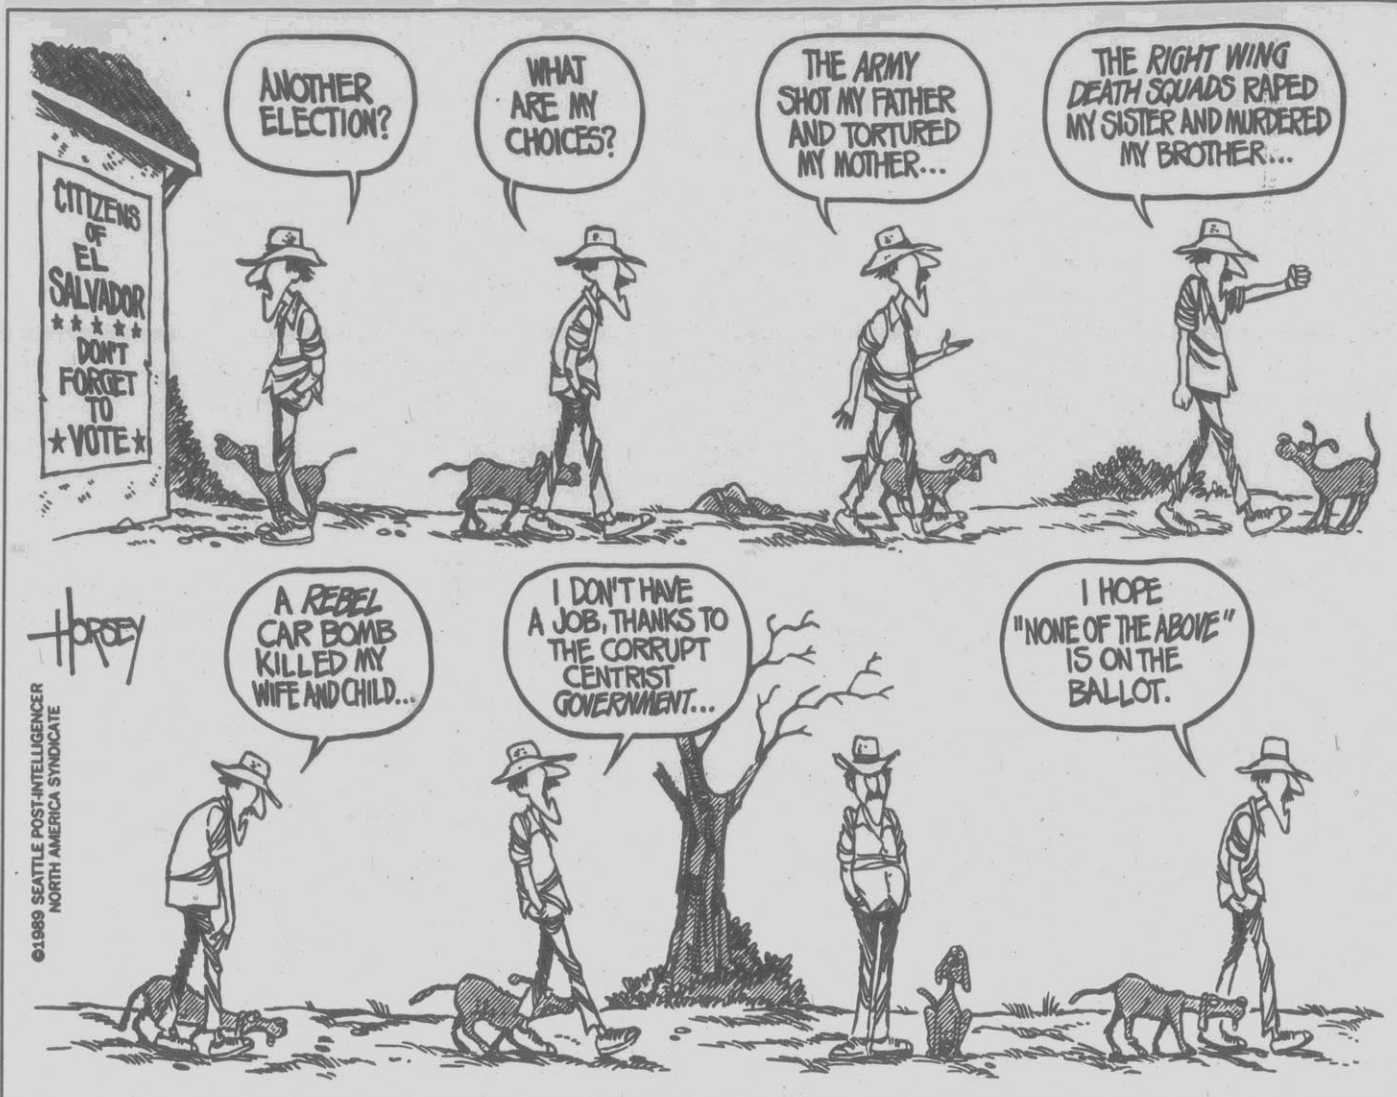

A part of the improvements to the central business area called for the construction of Reade Circle adjacent to the university campus. That was done and its right of way took up a considerable portion of the swimming pool parking lot. There were a few spaces left, however, and until now the city has been reluctant to part with the property.

'It will provide a suitable entrance to the university campus, as well as furnishing an attractive park-like area off Reade Circle and Fifth Street.'

The council was persuaded to do so with the university's assurance that the small parcel will be beautified as a park area. It will provide a suitable entrance to the university campus, as well as furnishing an attractive park-like area off Reade Circle and Fifth Street.

It is a good move on the part of both the city and the university. The property is adjacent to the original portion of the campus and once was considered the beginning of the university property. East Carolina also owns the land directly across Fifth Street from the proposed park. That was once the Greenville High School property and was sold to the state for university use in an urban renewal exchange.

Greenville won't be losing very many parking spaces by transferring the property to East Carolina University. On the other hand, the downtown area will be gaining an attractive park area which will be maintained by the university. There's no way either the city or the university can lose on this exchange.

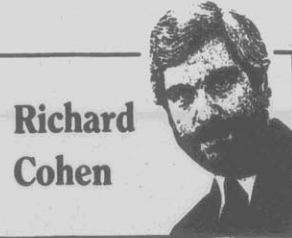

Israel's Slippery Banana Peel

WASHINGTON — The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith has started a "PLO Watch." AIPAC, Washington's foremost pro-Israel lobby, also has its eye on the Palestinian Liberation Organization. It, too, calls its effort "PLO Watch." What a neat metaphor for the Israeli side of the Middle East mess. It not only has run out of ideas, it has even run out of names.

But it is ideas that matter and, with Israel and some of its supporters, wish has replaced thought. The wish is that the PLO will prove itself a phony, that the recent declarations of chairman Yasser Arafat will be proven to be lies. He said he would end PLO terrorism, both inside and outside Israel. At least two important Jewish organizations are out to prove he didn't mean what he said.

They didn't have to wait long. Arafat has threatened the life of any Palestinian who attempts to put an end to the uprising on the West Bank and Gaza strip: "Whoever thinks of stopping the intifada before it achieves its goals, I will give him ten bullets in the chest." With that, the mayor of Bethlehem, Elias Freij, reconsidered his call for a truce. Ten bullets are at least nine too many.

Subsequent alerts from the two

Richard Cohen

PLO Watches will undoubtedly report that the PLO sent nine guerrillas heading towards Israel's northern frontier. They were intercepted and five were killed in southern Lebanon by Israeli troops. At least three of the dead were members of George Habash's Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a radical PLO group at odds with Arafat. Was this an attempt at terrorism or were the PLO fighters intent on hitting a military target? We don't know and, for some, the distinction is without a difference.

The United States, Israel and American-Jewish groups are right in insisting that the PLO honor its commitment to end terrorism. After all, it is the lives of innocents we are talking about and the PLO has quite enough of their blood on its hands. From the murder of Israeli Olympic athletes at Munich, to the shooting of the hapless Leon Klinghoffer aboard the Achille Lauro, the PLO has compiled quite a record. Little wonder that many Israelis have no tolerance for sophisticated analysis of who and what the PLO represents. To them, they are all "terrorists."

Charlie Chaplin knew that it's not funny when a hobo slips on a banana peel. But it is funny when a top-hatted swell does. For about the same reason, Israel's human-rights abuses get more attention than do those of the Arab states. Take Iraq. Israel has not used poison gas against its own population. Israel does not go in for summary executions and Israel is a democracy, and not a thugocracy with the moral compunctions of a drug pusher.

But that does not change the fact that Israel has just been cited by the State Department as a human-rights abuser. Soldiers testify to a policy of summary beatings and occasional torture. The homes of dissident Palestinians are blown up. Certain Palestinians have been deported — from their own land, incidentally. A restive population in the West Bank and Gaza is kept under control by repression. This is not a pretty picture.

Yet, somehow, Israel seems to believe that all this will go away. So far Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's plan to deal with the intifada has been limited to unauthorized leaks and communique by body language: a shrug, a wince, a stiffening of the body. Proposals he once rejected outright — a United Nations-sponsored peace conference, for instance — he now indicates he might accept. His one clear declaration is aimed at the United States: Stop talking to the PLO.

But why? What would be accomplished? For years, the official Israeli position has been that the PLO does not represent Palestinians. Hogwash. It does, and the United States to its credit has finally come to terms with reality. Now it is Israel's turn, but instead of doing that, it seems only to yearn for the past — the good old days when the PLO was a pariah. But ultimately and in some form, it will have to deal with the PLO. You can only make peace with your enemy.

Of course the PLO bears watching. But those who do only that, while advancing no peace plan of their own, miss an important point. The rest of the world is watching Israel. And what it sees, if it cares for Israel at all, is enough to break your heart.

Don't Be Fooled By A Thug Wearing A Holy Man's Garment

Amos Perlmutter

The furor — both carefully calculated and calibrated as well as hysterical — in the Moslem world over Salman Rushdie's "The Satanic Verses" is a potentially murderous example of Islam's shrill intolerance and an illustration of the danger of fundamentalism when it embodies the power of a political state and organization.

Islam as such, with all of its schisms, offshoots and splinters, remains a religion — a way of life, a code of ethics, a particular mode of human behavior and existence — just the same as Judaism and Christianity. In addition to having in common a tone of piety in their scriptural framework, all three religions have at one time or another been noted for outbursts of intolerance, authoritarianism and schismatic convulsions.

Despite a history spotted with spontaneous persecutions, none of the three great religions' leaders, philosophers and theologians ever officially preached a doctrine of specific assassination, as did the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini when he called for the death of Rushdie, his publishers and any others who may have had something to do with the publication of his novel.

Murder, assassination and mass executions become official doctrine when religion becomes tied to the state, when it becomes the state, and religious intolerance mixes with pervasive xenophobia and a political struggle for supremacy between the secular and theological forces.

There is historical precedent for the kind of behavior we are witnessing in Khomeini's Iran. The Spanish Inquisition is one case in point: In the name of Spanish imperial ambition and national unity, a highly systematic and elaborate effort at mass murder, exile, torture, excommunication and forced conversion took place, wrapped in a thin gauze of legality as represented by canon (church) law. A totalitarian state authority, which dominated and exploited the Roman Catholic Church, sanctified its crimes by religious motivation and a claim to holiness.

Small wonder that today's democracies have as a basic precept the separation of church and state, and that the Soviet Union and other communist societies render churches either non-existent or powerless.

State-organized Islam is not the Islam of believers, the pious followers of Allah. Rather, it is an Islam dominated and submerged into a secular political system. But it is the doctrine, the practice and international behavior of the Islamic state that should be questioned and examined here. In the name of Islam, the state condones and decrees the most vicious acts of fundamentalist terrorism. Khomeini's followers believe that they have achieved the ideal Islamic state. What they have achieved is another in a long line of totalitarian states — a danger to the rest of the world.

This Islamic state hungers to gain revenge on its "oppressors," its Christian, Western and Soviet masters of time past. The function of the Islamic-dominated state is to annihilate and eradicate the nonbelievers, the foreigners and the blasphemers, which is one of the reasons why "The Satanic Verses" is such an ideal target. Islam at its most fundamental is totally intolerant. It cannot abide ridicule, irreverence or what it perceives as blasphemy. This is true in its approach to art, even if it is unfamiliar with the work itself, which is surely the case here.

In contrast, Israel is a Jewish state but its society and politics are secular. Israel is dominated by a democratic and secular government and its political leaders are neither rabbis nor religious judges. Khomeini, however, is a head of state who decrees Islamic laws. His Iran is run according to the Islamic traditions. Israeli political leaders are not authorized religious figures nor do they presume to legislate Jewish religious rights. Israeli society has historically been resistant to the efforts of its own fundamentalists to gain political power and legislate religion.

In a religious totalitarian society, the riots, killings and calls for assassination have a political motivation, too. Khomeini has recently been repeatedly criticized and questioned by his designated successor. When a leader, a political leader, is in trouble he seeks scapegoats and distractions, hence the rather convoluted process by which the Great Satan, the United States, is blamed for a book written by an Indian and published originally in England.

This sort of process is also true in Pakistan, even though today it is ruled by a moderate Moslem, Benazir Bhutto. Moammar Gadhafi, no devout mullah, still represents a version of the fundamentalist-dominated state. Although shorn of the ayatollah's original message, Libya does practice Islamic terrorism, motivated by anti-Western, anti-Christian and anti-Semitic attitudes.

Stripped of its religious message, Khomeini's call for the assassination of a Moslem author is nothing less than a declaration of war against human rights and international order. It does not echo Allah but Adolf Hitler and every other head of a totalitarian state who sought dominion over his neighbors and the world.

Political leaders East and West must join forces to combat this perversion of Islam. Totalitarian Islam is no less dangerous than secular totalitarianism. When a mullah calls for murder, he is no less a thug for wearing a holy man's garment.

To Find Out How To Teach, Listen To Teachers

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — Teachers, principals and parents have been saying it for years. Now some of the nation's foremost thinkers on education have joined them: For America's schools to improve, they must be run from the ground up, by people at the local schools.

At the Emerging Issues Forum at N.C. State University this month, that was the key message provided by a number of speakers. An educational system that is huge and unwieldy, one run by bureaucrats in a state or national capital, will not educate students as well as one run locally, by people able to shape and mold a system to local needs.

John Sculley, chief executive of Apple Computers, said that the future of American business and of American education both relied on people being freed from the constraints of large institutions. The days of assembly line work, where everyone does the same job every day for years, are over. The new worker in America will have to think critically and work on his own.

The same is needed in education, Sculley said. Teachers must be freed from the rigidity of a massive bureaucracy to teach as they determined in best for each student.

Iris Carl, a nationally recognized teacher from Houston, Texas, said the nation's schools have become too standardized, too oriented towards serving the prototypical student. And Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers, had the audience howling in laughter as he tried to imagine a business run with the rigidity of the standard American classroom.

The remarks of these and other panel members came as North Carolina is enmeshed in local autonomy battles on a number of key fronts. The first is the Career Ladder merit pay plan of Gov.

Jim Martin, another is the Basic Education Plan, and the third is the plan of new Superintendent of Public Instruction Bob Etheridge to reduce state regulation of education.

Martin's plan breeds standardization. Teachers across the state have been instructed to use one form of classroom instruction—something called the six-point plan. It doesn't matter if that teacher is better suited to another method, or if the students in her class would be better served by another approach. The Martin Career Ladder standardizes teaching so that evaluation of teachers can be standardized. It's cookie cutter education.

The Basic Education Plan also imposes problems from the top. Along with the many new resources that the plan brings to local schools come rigid rules. Teachers are beginning to complain that new classes in the arts are taking away teaching time from reading and writing. The need is not to cut out the art and music classes, but to allow teachers to teach the arts while they're teaching reading and writing. Reading about the Great Masters and writing a paper on them might be a good idea.

Hopes are high that Etheridge, who inherited DPI's bloated bureaucracy from Craig Phillips, the former superintendent, can reduce administrative staff. If the General Assembly would give more control to local boards and to local schools, then the number of bureaucrats in Raleigh and the eight regional offices could be reduced. The savings might even be plowed back into more teachers, or better teacher pay.

The state does not need to abandon its role in education. It would be foolhardy to pay the bills without demanding accountability. But, as the N.C. Public School Forum recently suggested, the day is here for the state to set the standards it expects of students, and to leave it to teachers and principals to determine how to get the kids there.

Police Arrest Four At Mandela Home; Bloodstains Said Found

By Laurinda Keys
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Just days after anti-apartheid leaders downed Winnie Mandela over allegations her bodyguards killed a young black, police raided her home, arrested four men and reportedly found bloodstains.

State-run Radio South Africa said the four men arrested in Sunday's pre-dawn raid were bodyguards of the wife of jailed African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela.

"We have found fingerprints and blood samples which will be sorted out in the laboratory," said Maj. Gen. Jaap Joubert, who is leading the investigation into the murder of 14-year-old black activist Stompie Seipei.

He said police would try to prove in court that some young men belonging to the so-called Mandela United Football Club, whose members live at Mrs. Mandela's home and act as her bodyguards, had assaulted the boy who died.

Three Soweto men who are represented by an anti-apartheid attorney have said club members abducted them and Seipei and beat the four at the Mandela house. They claim Mrs. Mandela "was involved" but have not elaborated.

Mrs. Mandela declined to answer reporters' questions on the police raid. She has suggested the whole case results from an effort to discredit her.

Speaking of the raid, Joubert said, "This is a thorough search of the premises where the alleged attacks and assaults took place, according to witnesses." Seipei's body was found last month with a slit throat, dumped in Soweto, the sprawling black township outside Johannesburg.

The scandal over Mrs. Mandela's bodyguards has seriously damaged the credibility of a woman who had been at the forefront of the fight to end white minority rule in South Africa.

Her husband, jailed for 37 years, is the country's most revered black nationalist leader.

On Thursday, major anti-apartheid leaders repudiated Mrs. Mandela because of her association with the soccer club. The president of the exiled African National Congress also publicly criticized her.

The Rev. Frank Chikane, general secretary of the South African Council of Churches, told a news conference Saturday that Mrs. Mandela had decided to remove the bodyguards from her home at her husband's instruction.

Police released a videotape of their raid on the Mandela house. It showed officers, without gloves, searching trunks of clothing, leafing through photograph albums and collections of ANC literature, and lifting up what appeared to be blood-soaked sneakers, a knife and a pair of gardening shears.

Authorities also removed clubs and whips.

The camera focused on spots on the walls of rooms where the detained men lived. Radio South Africa said the spots were bloodstains.

Mrs. Mandela, 54, has denied being at home when the three men and Seipei brought there. But she has defended their abduction and said they probably were slapped to get them to talk about alleged homosexual activities at the Methodist Church residence where they lived. The church denies her allegations.

Joubert said one of those detained during the 4 a.m. raid was Jerry Richardson, identified as the club's coach. Others arrested at the house were not named, but Radio South Africa said they were Mrs. Mandela's bodyguards.

The policeman said authorities also arrested two other men elsewhere in Soweto, who will be charged with murdering Soweto's Dr. Abu Baker Asvat. Community leaders have told newspapers that Asvat examined Seipei after he was beaten. Mrs. Mandela said Asvat was a witness to her charges of sexual abuse.

Police also raided five other locations connected with Mrs. Mandela, including the home of a free-lance journalist, Joubert said. He did not identify the others.

The alarm went off and dogs barked as policemen entered Mrs. Mandela's property, according to the film. It shows Mrs. Mandela, her daughter, Zindzi, and grandchildren in their bathrobes.

Richardson was filmed in his underwear, putting on his pants and shirt while a policeman asked him to identify men who ran away when the raid started.

State television broadcast those scenes from the film, which police made available to foreign reporters the same day. They do not usually release material so quickly.

Wreckage Of Plane Spotted

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CORONA, Calif. — The wreckage of a twin-engine plane believed to be carrying 10 people was spotted early today in the Santa Ana Mountains by a news helicopter, a sheriff's spokesman said.

Pilot Bob Tur of KNX-AM, a Los Angeles radio station, said it appeared the plane crashed directly into a hillside at about the 2,200-foot level, scattering wreckage over a small area. There didn't appear to be survivors, he said.

Riverside County Sheriff's Sgt. Jim Hopkins confirmed that the plane had been spotted by a news aircraft around 6:30 a.m. He said it was near Pleasant Peak, where searchers had worked overnight.

The Cessna 402 left Las Vegas at 11 a.m. Sunday and was due at Orange County John Wayne Airport at 12:30 p.m., said Civil Air Patrol Lt. Col. Ed Crankshaw.

Four CAP ground teams searched through the night near 4,000-foot Pleasant Peak on the Orange-Riverside county line because the plane disappeared from radar at about 2,100 feet near the peak, CAP Lt. Harriet Aceves said today.

The identities of the people believed aboard the plane were withheld early today, pending notification of relatives, but all were reported to be from Las Vegas, she said.

Controllers talked to the pilot shortly after noon as the plane was inbound to Orange County but there was no subsequent emergency declaration from the pilot, officials said.

Federal Aviation Administration duty officer Rich Tornquist said the pilot noted in a flight plan that there were 10 people, but he cautioned that did not mean all had boarded.

Pleasant Peak is in the Cleveland National Forest, 45 miles southeast of Los Angeles and 20 miles northeast of the Orange County airport.

Lawmakers To Review Bills Fine-Tuning Safe Roads Act

By John Fleisher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A senate subcommittee will begin reviewing this week a set of bills designed to toughen the 5-year-old Safe Roads Act, which some people say is not the deterrent it once was.

"It's a pretty strong law," said Ward Purrington, Gov. Jim Martin's chief lobbyist. "It's worked fairly well, in most people's opinion. But there are things that can be done to make it more effective in saving lives."

The package, the result of a year of research and hearings that began in November 1987, is designed to fine-tune the state's driving-while-impaired laws. The 1983 legislation addressed topics as diverse as the minimum drinking age, plea bargaining and sentencing, license suspension and liability of alcoholic beverage vendors.

Tightening the law is among Martin's top legislative priorities this year, Purrington said. The governor supports the study committee program, which is similar to a plan developed separately by the Governor's Highway Safety Committee.

At Martin's request, another half-dozen bills not included in the study committee package will be introduced this week, Purrington said.

Alcohol-related wrecks declined 28 percent in North Carolina between 1982 and 1986, according to the study committee's report to the General Assembly. The most dramatic reduction occurred as the Safe Roads Act was being debated and immediately after it took effect.

Arrests also declined, but the conviction rate of those who were caught rose, according to John H. Lacey of the Highway Safety Research Center at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

However, statistics indicated a "leveling off of the effectiveness" of the law by 1987 as the novelty faded and attorneys learned to exploit its "ambiguities or loopholes," the report said.

Martin submitted 10 bills to tighten the law in 1987, but most were bottled up in a Senate committee. After the session, they were forwarded to the study panel and most were incorporated into the package that has been introduced and referred to the Senate Judiciary I Committee.

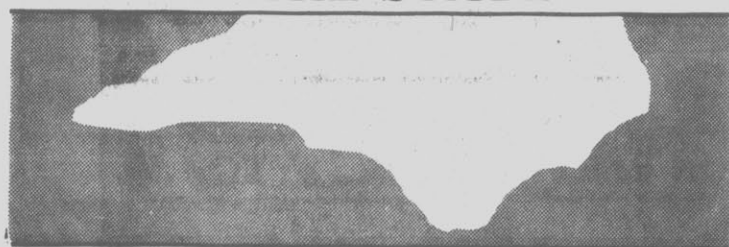

The chairman, Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, last Thursday created a subcommittee to review the bills. Its chairman is Sen. George Daniel, D-Caswell, who said the public support that spurred passage of the 1983 law is welling up again.

"There's no question that the mood is felt out there," Daniel said. "It looks like every time you pick up a piece of print media, there's something involving DWI in it."

Among the proposals in the study committee package:

- Lowering the threshold at which a person legally is considered intoxicated from a blood-alcohol level of 0.10 to 0.08. For drivers of commercial vehicles, the threshold would be 0.02.
- Stiffer fines. Under the 1983 law, convicted drunken drivers are placed in one of five sentencing categories based on factors such as whether they had any prior convictions. Each category has a prescribed punishment, such as jail time or community service and a fine.
- The bill would boost the fines at each level. At "level one," the most severe, the fine would increase from a maximum of $2,000 to a minimum of $3,000 and a maximum of $5,000. At "level five," the least severe, the fine would change from a $100 maximum to between $250 and $500.
- A ban on open alcoholic beverage containers in the passenger sections of motor vehicles, except buses that transport 15 or more people. Currently, the ban covers only spirituous liquor and fortified wine, not beer or unfortified wine.
- Immediate revocation of the driver's license of a person convicted of homicide involving a motor vehicle.
- Additionally, there are numerous technical provisions clarifying sections of the Safe Roads Act, such as a requirement that a minor with a provisional driver's license who is caught driving drunk forfeit the license for at least 45 days. The length of the suspension is unclear under existing law.

Child Shot

GREENSBORO (AP) — A 12-year-old Burlington child was shot and seriously wounded Sunday after he threw a snowball at a passing car, authorities say.

Travis Jones was shot in the chest about 11:45 a.m. with a small-caliber handgun, according to Burlington Police Patrolman A.M. Adams.

Thirty minutes later, police charged Mark Anthony Yellock, 19, of Burlington with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, inflicting serious injury and carrying a concealed weapon, Adams said.

Yellock was in the Alamance County Jail Sunday night under $101,000 secured bond.

The boy was transferred later from Alamance Memorial Hospital to North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill, where he was in intensive care late Sunday.

Missing Contractor

RALEIGH (AP) — Investigators and relatives of Hester Maynard Keith Jr. are giving up hope that the 48-year-old Wake County contractor will ever be found alive.

"My feeling is that somebody killed him," said Robert T. Hedrick, a Raleigh lawyer who was a friend and represented him in business. "Why, I don't know."

The last time anyone heard from Keith was the morning of Feb. 18, 1988, when he called his secretary by mobile telephone to say he would pick up some loan papers at a local bank.

His truck was found five days later on an abandoned railroad bed in Chatham County. There was no blood, no sign of a struggle. Nothing appeared to be missing except Keith's briefcase.

His wife, Patsy, and their two children say the past year has brought agonizing worry and fleeting hope. The family is offering a $5,000 reward for information leading to the discovery of Keith or his body. It does not hinge on an arrest or conviction.

Building Catches Fire

SYLVA, N.C. (AP) — A fire Sunday in the Community Services Building in Jackson County could put a number of programs out of commission for several days, including one which feeds senior citizens in a six-county area.

The Mountain Projects Food Service Program, which supplies meals to the Older American's Program and Headstart in Haywood, Jackson, Swain, Graham, Cherokee and Clay, rents the kitchen in the building. Meals are prepared there and taken to the various counties on a daily basis.

The 11 a.m. blaze began when water leaked into the main electrical panel on the second floor of the building, according to Jackson County Fire Marshal Leroy Woodard. Water from rain and snow this weekend leaked into the panel box, Woodard said, adding to a problem already existing.

Roofers from Wells and West of Murphy had been on the job Friday repairing the roof. Bad weather stopped the work, and employees from the building were asked to leave around 4 p.m. when some major water leaks into the building were reported, said County Commission Chairman Wayne Hooper.

State's Coastline Viewed As 'Smuggling Paradise'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILMINGTON — Illegal drugs have become a significant segment of the North Carolina economy, with marijuana estimated to be the No. 1 cash crop in the state and the Tar Heel coastline called a "smuggling paradise."

"During the pirate days, North Carolina was supposed to be the ideal place for smuggling because it gave them a place to attack and there were so many places to go and hide," said Bruce Marshburn, deputy director of the N.C. Governor's Crime Commission.

The 301-mile stretch from the Virginia to South Carolina border makes North Carolina's coast the seventh-longest in the nation. More notably, a vessel working its way up the path of bays, sounds, inlets and connecting rivers will find 3,375 miles of shoreline where boats and their cargo can hide.

That geography has made the state an ideal transshipment point for drugs heading north to metropolitan areas like New York City and Philadelphia.

Nearly gone are the clumsy "mother ships" that made large seizures a hallmark of the late '70s and early '80s. Now, smaller, sleeker boats migrate north with flattened bags of white powder whose value will multiply as many as 10 times as they're distributed.

"In its pure form, it comes up in small boats, each carrying a small load," said Emilio "Skip" Garcia, resident agent in charge for the federal Drug Enforcement Administration's Eastern District.

"If he's a good trafficker, what he'll do is get several small boats and put 10 or 20 kilos on each boat," Garcia said, calling the Tar Heel coast a "smuggling paradise."

The Cape Fear River, Lockwood Folly Inlet and Morehead City and Beaufort areas have historically been popular smuggling stops, said Johnnie D. Taylor, resident agent in charge of the investigations division of the U.S. Customs Service. Taylor, based in Wilmington, supervises investigations for North Carolina.

Customs is empowered to search any ship that's been in international waters — more than three miles out — as well as crew members who act like they're trying to hide drugs.

Though Wilmington's port has fewer than one freighter a month from a South American country, Customs has within the past 18 months caught a number of cocaine "mules," said Richard Christenbury, a criminal investigations supervisor with Customs.

Maritime mules are carriers who wear the drug, usually without the captain's knowledge, rather than stowing it on the ship.

Air drops also are popular when bringing in kilogram amounts of cocaine.

"North Carolina is the farthest point north that a twin-engine plane can fly from a source country without running out of gas," Taylor said. Only a few planes have ventured farther, using collapsible tanks that allow refueling while airborne, he said.

One of the largest recent cocaine seizures was 120 pounds, recovered in June 1987 from a load more than three times that large, Taylor said. The cocaine was dropped in duffel bags into the ocean off Topsail Island.

Air drops where the pilot can see his target and what's surrounding it are generally considered "safer" for the smuggler, Ronald D. Meyer, resident agent for Coast Guard investigations in North Carolina said.

"It works real well because the pilot doesn't necessarily know the person who's waiting, and that person doesn't necessarily know the pilot, so they insulate themselves from prosecution," he said.

Remote farmland and wooded areas, as well as abandoned air strips, also have become hot drop sites. North Carolina has more than 500 airports; 200 are unregistered, though not all are used for depositing cocaine.

Of all the routes smugglers use, highways are perceived by many law enforcement as pulsing veins constantly carrying cocaine. For several years, Interstate 95 has been known as the "cocaine corridor."

But agents admit that while catching smugglers in planes and ships is more difficult, they usually carry the biggest loads.

Former Klansman Fighting To Sit In Legislature

By Linda Ashton
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS — Former Klan leader David Duke, who won election as a state representative even though President Bush and former President Reagan endorsed his rival, denounces a threat to banish him from the GOP as "un-American."

Duke says blacks and Jews have nothing to fear from him. And he's urging the Louisiana Legislature and the Republican Party to accept that he has changed since his days as grand wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan in the 1970s.

"I repudiate any racial or religious intolerance. Any group — racial or religious — has nothing to fear from David Duke," Duke told a news conference Sunday following his narrow victory over homebuilder John Treen on Saturday.

Still, Duke did not mince words on where he stands on civil rights.

"I'm for getting the government out of our personal lives. I'm not for any law for segregation or integration," he said. "The right not to associate is just as precious as the right to associate."

Duke, 38, edged the 63-year-old Treen for the House seat from the nearly all-white district in Metairie, a New Orleans suburb. Duke got 8,459 votes, or 50.7 percent, and Treen 8,232, or 49.3 percent.

Duke registered as a Republican two days before qualifying for the race. After his stunning success in beating six other candidates in the Jan. 21 primary, the national party sent three advisers to help his opponent and persuaded Bush and Reagan to endorse Treen.

U.S. senators, the governor and other community leaders of both parties warned that a Duke victory would ruin the state's reputation and harm already tenuous race relations. Jewish organizations decried his candidacy, and the archbishop of New Orleans warned voters to choose cautiously.

Shortly after Duke was declared the winner Saturday night, National Republican Chairman Lee Atwater denounced the outcome and vowed to have him censured and barred from using the GOP name, an unprecedented step.

"David Duke is not a Republican," Atwater said in a statement. "He's a pretender, a charlatan and a political opportunist who is looking for any organization he can find to try to legitimize his views of racial and religious bigotry and intolerance."

Duke responded, "Is he going to censure me for my past? How many Republicans, how many Democrats have done controversial things in the past? The actions of Mr. Atwater are really un-American."

Duke's election also was condemned by civil rights leader Jesse Jackson. He called it a symptom of a national problem of racism that "the entire nation has to deal with."

Several state lawmakers said they expect an attempt in the Legislature to refuse to seat Duke by challenging his residency, but he dismissed allegations that he hadn't resided in the district for the required one year as "frivolous."

It would be the first time the House has ever taken such action. The Legislature convenes for a special tax session Wednesday.

"The political process must remain inviolate," Duke said. "The men and women of good will in the Legislature will not tolerate any challenge of this nature."

"It all depends on what the majority of the House wants to do," said House Speaker Jim Dimos of Monroe. "Unless someone makes a motion to disqualify him, then he will be sworn in. I know the people in his district elected him by a small margin, but he still was elected and has to be treated as a member."

Some legislators said they believe a challenge of Duke's credentials will go nowhere.

"I expect there will be a movement," said Rep. Jim Donelon, a Republican who represents an area near Duke's. "I expect it will fail. And I do not have enough information yet to say exactly what my position will be."

Rep. Alphonse Jackson, a Shreveport member of the Black Caucus, said he would have nothing to do with a challenge.

"If the people down there want him," Jackson said, "they deserve him."

Barge Accident Dumps Gasoline Into Ohio River

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — An estimated 40,000 gallons of gasoline spilled in an Ohio River barge accident should dilute quickly in the rain-swollen river without tainting water supplies or harming wildlife, officials say.

"No impact has been observed thus far," said Rich Carter, assistant chief of the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency's Office of Emergency Response.

Seven barges carrying gasoline from an Ashland Oil Inc. refinery in Ashland, Ky., to a terminal on the Cincinnati waterfront broke free from a tow Sunday morning and struck a railroad bridge piling within view of downtown Cincinnati.

Ashland spokesman Roger Schrum and the Coast Guard said two of the barges leaked gasoline.

The Ohio crested Saturday inches above flood stage and was falling today. Carter said the swift flow prevented any recovery of the gasoline but also should keep the spill from having much impact on water supplies or aquatic life.

The spill occurred downstream from intakes for Cincinnati's water supply, officials said. Gasoline tends to float on the water's surface, and authorities said water systems that draw from the river could close their intakes until the spill floats past.

Officials in Louisville, about 100 miles downstream, were notified of the spill. Steve Samuels, production supervisor with the Louisville Water Co., said carbon had been added to water at one plant as a precaution to absorb any gasoline.

Don Fitzpatrick, a spokesman for the Indiana Department of Environmental Management, said the spill should reach the Louisville-New Albany, Ind., area by this evening if it doesn't evaporate first.

All other downstream communities close to the spill draw their water from wells or underground aquifers, Carter said.

The leaking barges were being drained of their remaining gasoline Sunday night at an Ashland facility in Cincinnati and at a Standard Oil Co. facility in nearby Bromley, Ky., Carter said.

River traffic was flowing normally by afternoon, said Coast Guard Lt. Chuck Polk. Investigators were trying to determine what caused the barges to hit the Norfolk & Southern Railroad bridge, he said.

The bridge was not damaged, said Herb Nugent, terminal trainmaster for Norfolk & Southern.

Sunday's spill briefly created an overpowering stench of gasoline along the riverfront.

"It was nauseating. It would give you a headache," said Marian Johnson of God's Shelterhouse, a Cincinnati home for the needy near the riverfront.

DEVELOPER OF GAS SAVER AWARDED $22,000

BOSTON — With the oil glut worse than ever and OPEC ringing its hands, the Federal Courts have awarded a fee of $22,747 to National Fuelsaver Corporation of Boston, developers of the Platinum Gasaver.

The Gasaver, which takes only 10 minutes to install, releases microscopic quantities of platinum into the air-fuel mixture entering the engine.

Platinum has the unique ability of making unburnt fuel burn. With platinum in the flame zone, you increase the percentage of fuel burning in the engine from 68% to 90%.

Normally, that 22% of the fuel would only burn if it came in contact with the platinum coated surfaces of a catalytic converter. Unfortunately, this converter process takes place outside of the engine, where the energy produced is lost.

With the Gasaver dispensing platinum into the combustion chambers, 22% more of each gallon burns inside the engine so that 22% fewer gallons are required to drive the same distance.

The process works on both leaded and unleaded gasoline, and meets the emission standards of all states.

In concluding the government's five-year administrative procedure studying the Gasaver, the Federal Court stated: "National Fuelsaver Corp. and various independent parties have used a variety of methodologies to test the value of Gasaver. These independent parties often make stronger claims for the Gasaver than does its developer, National Fuelsaver Corp."

The government had already confirmed in 1984 that the Gasaver raises the octane of gasoline, eliminating the need for premium fuel.

Joel Robinson, the developer, commented: "We've already sold over 100,000 Gasavers. Ironically, we find more people buy the Gasaver for its third benefit of cleaning out carbon to extend engine life than buy it for its fuel savings or octane boosting."

Hostages Remembered

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PONTIAC, Mich. — Relatives of U.S. and British hostages in Lebanon joined 100 people at a candlelight tribute honoring the captives and appealing for their release.

Seven relatives helped light candles for each of the 10 hostages believed held in Lebanon at Calvary Missionary Church on Sunday night. A photo of each of the hostages was displayed.

"Any time people band together for the hostages and make an outward show of support for them, it's important to us. Because it shows the United States government that they have a mandate from the people to free the hostages," said John Anderson, the brother of hostage Terry Anderson.

The tribute, which featured religious and patriotic music, took place on the first of two days of observances in this city 20 miles northwest of Detroit.

Sirhan ponders a question during interview in prison

INS Set To Reveal Plan For Central Americans

By Joel Williams
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BROWNSVILLE, Texas — Under a new plan going into effect Tuesday, Central Americans — who have been pouring into south Texas by the thousands — will be jailed immediately if their applications for asylum are denied, a newspaper says.

U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service spokeswoman Virginia Kice declined to provide details on the plan Sunday, saying INS Commissioner Alan Nelson would hold a news conference here today to outline it.

INS officials briefed U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela on the plan Sunday, Ms. Kice said.

Vela ruled Friday that the INS could return to its policy of restricting asylum seekers to southern Texas while their claims for refugee status are under review. The agency on Tuesday regains the authority to restrict their travel.

The plan calls for immediate arrest warrants and deportation orders for asylum seekers whose applications are denied, the Brownsville Herald said Sunday, quoting unidentified government sources. Those denied asylum would be jailed in the INS detention center at Bayview near Brownsville or taken to detention camps in El Paso, Laredo or elsewhere.

The plan also provides that asylum applications be reviewed in Texas, rather than in Washington as had been the case previously, the newspaper said.

More than 2,000 Central Americans a week have been crossing the Rio Grande before applying for political asylum, and more than 100,000 are expected to enter the country illegally this year.

The government provides asylum to those who can show they are fleeing persecution. INS officials maintain that most of the Central Americans are here for economic reasons, and do not qualify for political asylum.

Before Dec. 16, the INS had allowed asylum seekers to check in at its south Texas district, then travel anywhere in the United States while their cases were reviewed. But after that date, the agency made them stay in the area, forcing Central Americans to live in wretched tent cities.

Sirhan Says Robert Kennedy Represented Threat To Arabs

By Gary Langer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Sirhan Sirhan, in his first television interview, called Sen. Robert F. Kennedy his hero, but said he killed the presidential candidate more than 20 years ago because he felt betrayed by Kennedy's support for Israel.

"I was not doing it out of personal malice towards the man but out of concern for other people," said Sirhan, who likened Kennedy's assassination to a Jew killing Adolf Hitler. "Robert Kennedy represented a threat to Arabs by his support of the Arabs' enemies."

Sirhan, 44, is serving a life sentence in state prison at Soledad, Calif., and comes up for parole in May.

The hourlong interview at the prison with David Frost for the syndicated program "Inside Edition" was shown to reporters Sunday, and is to be broadcast in segments tonight, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Sirhan apologized repeatedly for killing Kennedy, then the front-runner for the Democratic presidential nomination.

"He was my hero," Sirhan said. "He was my champion. He was the protector and the defender of the downtrodden and the disadvantaged. I can't say anything except that I am totally sorry and feel nothing but remorse for having caused that tragic death."

But when Kennedy gave a speech favoring the provision of U.S. fighter jets to Israel, "that seemed as though it were a betrayal," said Sirhan, a Jordanian immigrant. He said Kennedy exercised a "double standard" by favoring peace in Vietnam and the sale of arms to Israel at the same time.

Sirhan said murder is not an accepted way to settle political differences. But he added: "Imagine if you were a German or a Jew in Hitler's Germany and if you had the opportunity to assassinate Hitler. I'm sure that you would have tried to do that."

Frost replied: "There is no comparison between Hitler and Kennedy."

Sirhan: "Agreed, agreed. But the principle, in sorts, seems to be similar."

Kennedy was shot in the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles on June 5, 1968, moments after he claimed victory in California's Democratic presidential primary. As he has before, Sirhan insisted that he acted alone.

Sirhan's death sentence was changed to life imprisonment when the state Supreme Court outlawed the death penalty in 1972, and he became eligible for parole in 1975. He has been turned down for release nine times.

After his last parole rejection, Sirhan said he believed the only way he will leave prison is "in a coffin."

In the interview, Sirhan said he had renewed hopes of release but accused the California Board of Prison Terms of putting political considerations before the law in denying him parole.

Sirhan has given other interviews, but this was the first in which he agreed to be recorded for broadcast, said the producers of "Inside Edition."

British Army Barracks Damaged By Explosions

By Leslie Shepherd
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — A series of explosions rocked a British army barracks before dawn today after intruders were spotted, the buildings evacuated and a sentry fired shots at two fleeing suspects, authorities said.

An army spokesman said no one was injured by the three or four blasts that shook the Ternhill barracks near Shrewsbury, 160 miles northwest of London. Police said, however, that one soldier was slightly injured by flying glass.

The explosions occurred about a half hour after sentries saw two suspicious intruders and sounded an alarm, the army spokesman said.

Witnesses said the wall of one block was blown out and the roof of the second was burned away in the fire that ensued.

There was no immediate indication of who planted the explosives, but suspicion fell on the outlawed Irish Republican Army, which has been attacking British soldiers for nearly 20 years.

The barracks that were hit house the 2nd Parachute Regiment, whose colonel-in-chief is Prince Charles, heir to the British throne.

The army spokesman said sentries spotted the intruders, one armed with a handgun, inside the camp's perimeter fence shortly after 3 a.m. and ordered the barracks evacuated as a precaution.

"It would seem that the swift evacuation saved many injuries," the army spokesman said. The Defense Ministry could not say how many soldiers usually sleep in the barracks or how many were there this morning.

The local fire brigade said 20 firefighters remained on the scene six hours later, although the fire was under control. At dawn, residents near the barracks reported acrid smoke hanging overhead.

A number of veterans of the 1982 Falklands war against Argentina live at the barracks, but fewer men were asleep there than usual because many were on weekend leave. No families live on the base.

Col. Peter Hicks of the Defense Ministry said a guard had fired three warning shots at the two fleeing people "but they escaped."

A police helicopter was searching the area for the intruders, who were believed to have hijacked a car on the main road outside the base, and police roadblocks were checking motorists in the vicinity.

It Was All 'A Sham'

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — An Australian woman seeking a divorce from a South African swimmer says she married him to help him try to obtain Australian citizenship and compete in the Olympics.

Lani Engels, 20, described her highly publicized marriage to Gary Brinkman as "a sham," said she had to buy both their wedding rings and that they were separated the day after wedding last April.

"We weren't lovers. The whole thing was a set-up," Engels told newspapers in her hometown of Brisbane. "I just wish it never happened. I really regret it."

It Was 'A Ball To Remember'

Guests Rally Despite Ice

It wasn't an ordinary Charity Ball by anyone's standards.

Thanks to the ice and snow that blanketed the state this weekend, electricity to the Greenville Country Club was cut off from 2 p.m. to 7:10 p.m. Saturday. The ball was scheduled to begin at 8.

Roads were covered with ice, homes across the county were dealing with electrical outages of their own. And Ball organizers weren't sure whether they would cancel or continue.

But the Charity Ball guests answered that question. They began to arrive, decked out in their tuxedos and evening gowns, shortly after 7 p.m. Men had shaved with cold water, and women had donned their finery by candlelight, but their arrival confirmed one thing.

The ball, against all odds, would go on.

About 280 guests found their way to the social event, and were fed, fêted and treated pretty much as promised.

"They were a special kind of people rallying around and supporting a special kind of event," said ball-organizer Cathy Gavigan.

But the guests weren't the only folks who rallied around the cause on Saturday. "People everywhere just did everything they could to help us," Mrs. Gavigan said. "The electricity didn't come on until 7:10 p.m., but the staff at the country club got busy, and the guests were served dinner by 9.

"People all over the place answered our calls for help."

Once the lights came on and the guests began to arrive, things began to happen. But about five numbers into their floor show, the Fabulous Waller Family was cut off by another electrical outage. The ball's entertainment was silenced.

No matter. Mrs. Gavigan said guests stayed and talked and made a fun evening out of an otherwise disastrous situation.

"Nothing went right," Mrs. Gavigan said. "It was a disappointment on the one hand, but a great success on the other."

One thing is for sure. "It'll probably be a ball that's never forgotten," she said.

Wrinkles & Sagging Gone! How Does The Myotonology Toning Procedure Affect The Changes In Appearance That Accompany Aging?

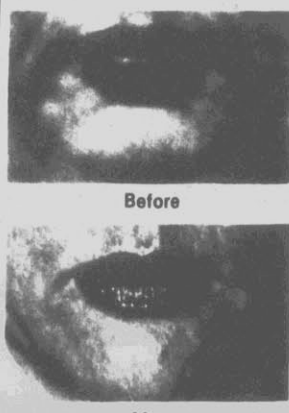

By utilizing new micro-current technology available from a host of medical fields, Universal Health Products, Inc. developed a cosmetic procedure that uses a mild, pulsating microcurrent to accomplish two goals.

First, the micro-current is directed in specific patterns and frequencies to exercise and tone the muscle fibers.

Second, the micro-current is used to carry ionic solutions (collagen, elastin, DNA) into the underlying layers of the skin where they are needed to help the growth of new, healthy skin cells and to help strengthen the connective fibers.

The results are firmer more resilient muscles which enhance facial contours, and dramatically improved skin tone and texture. A return to the healthy, glowing look of youth.

Forgiveness Is Gift To The Giver

Dear Abby: I must respond to your column on forgiveness: Forgiveness is a gift to the giver. I speak from personal experience.

Years ago, I took legal action against my ex-husband for payment of back child support. I had a good job with an adequate salary, but I could have used some financial help, as I was raising our two sons alone. "Rob" had a drinking problem, which was one of the reasons we parted, but I was determined to get what he owed me — regardless.

Then suddenly, I asked myself: What am I doing? Our sons had always had a very good relationship with their father, and my taking Rob to court would only alienate him from his family.

I made up my mind that I would forgive Rob and forget the money he owed me, so I called my attorney and told him to withdraw the legal action — that I was letting Rob off the hook.

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

As it turned out, that was the wisest decision I ever made. Seven years later Rob was dead of a massive heart attack. He was 48.

During the final seven years of his life, our relationship was very cordial, and he was able to establish good communication with his sons.

I am glad I let Rob off the hook. If I had taken him to court, I always would have felt guilty, wondering if I had caused him stress and hastened his death. — Glad I forgave

Dear Glad: Many people could learn from you. Read on for more on the joy of forgiving:

Dear Abby: Your wonderful column on the subject of forgiveness reminded me of a phrase I copied some years ago and have shared with many. I do not know who wrote it, but I hope you think it's worth sharing with your readers. — M. Bell, Cassville, Mo.

Dear M. Bell: I do, and thank you for the following:

"To forgive is to set a prisoner free and discovering that prisoner was you."

SUPERMARKET FOR SPOTTING SUPPLIES

Here's an opportunity to "let your fingers do the walking". Look in the yellow pages under "Janitorial Suppliers", and you should find several who can assist in creating a spotting kit. While there, look over his other products. You'll discover many items available for home maintenance; and because they're packaged in gallons, they may be less expensive than grocery store products.

Basic tools for spotting include a carrying tray, spotting brush, flip-top spotting bottles, an old spoon and some white absorbent towels.

Chemical requirements include: first, a volatile (evaporates completely leaving no residue), dry (as in dry-cleaning) solvent (designed to dissolve oil, grease, tar, asphalt, gums, fresh paints, etc.). This dry solvent spotter is available at grocery, variety and hardware stores. Second, a neutral detergent solution is needed. This solution can be made from almost any detergent safe for fine fabrics, or specialty spotters are available at your grocer. Forget the general-purpose kitchen cleaners—they're usually too harsh for carpet dyes.

General procedures for the use of spotters include: (1). Use only enough chemical to wet contaminated face yarns. Excess dry solvent weakens adhesives used in carpet backings. (2). Tamp (lightly tap, never scrub) the spot with your spotting brush. (3). Blot and observe for transfer to your towel. As long as this transfer takes place, repeat 1-3 patiently. (4). When no more transfer takes place, blot the remaining spotter and proceed with another type if appropriate. (5). Use dry solvents first, followed by water-based spotters. (6). When as much of the spot as possible is removed, place a one-inch-thick layer of towels over it and weight it down with a heavy object. Then allow drying overnight. Excess chemical "wicks" out of the carpet into the towels, and no residue remains to create future spots.

Remember, the best insurance against permanent discolorations on your carpet is a prepared, knowledgeable homemaker...that's you!

Tentative Agreement

A Pitt County District Court judge presiding over the Fred Webb Inc. case has told potential witnesses that both sides tentatively agreed not to proceed with the lawsuit.

Fred Webb of Greenville owns the grain storage business that is charged with violating the county's noise ordinance. Andy McLawhorn of Renston filed charges in December, claiming that six large fans at the facility generate unreasonably loud noise.

Attorneys for the prosecution and defense stated in court files that they might call more than 100 witnesses — including several medical and acoustical experts — to testify. Judge W. Lee Lumpkin III of Morehead City said today the trial could have taken most of the week. No witnesses were called this morning when court convened and Lumpkin told about 30 possible witnesses in the courtroom that the attorneys had asked him for time to resolve the case.

"At worst, we may lose a couple of hours of trial time," he said. "At best, we may resolve the case." No details of the settlement were released when court recessed at 12:15 p.m. and Lumpkin said the agreement was not concrete. But he said he did expect some type of settlement.

McLawhorn's attorneys said they still expect to file a civil lawsuit against Webb's company.

The county's noise ordinance does not specify what type of decibel level is acceptable and Webb's attorneys challenged that it was unconstitutional. Last week, Lumpkin ruled that the ordinance is constitutional.

Americans Killed

A police spokesman told reporters that two charred bodies had been recovered — one Sunday and one today. He said the search at the wooded hillside continued for the other two bodies.

Charles Tomson, Flying Tigers vice president for human resources, identified the captain of the plane as Frank Helpin, 53, of Los Angeles; First Officer Jack Robinson, 54, of Tucson, Ariz.; Second Officer Ron Penton, 70, of Burlingame, Calif.; and maintenance engineer Leonard Sulewski, 53, of Whitehouse, N.J.

The airline's director of safety, Ken Ensslin, was on his way to Kuala Lumpur with others from flight operations and maintenance divisions to help in the investigation. U.S. Embassy spokeswoman Meg Gilroy said officials from the Federal Aviation Administration and the National Air Safety Board would also take part.

The Department of Civil Aviation's deputy director, Brig. Gen. Omar Saman, said the flight records would be sent to the United States or Britain for examination.

Ms. Hennessey said the flight originated at John F. Kennedy Airport in New York, and went on to Columbus, Ohio; Anchorage, Alaska; Narita, Japan; Taipei, Taiwan; Singapore and Kuala Lumpur.

It was to leave Malaysia for Hong Kong. Aviation officials said Flying Tigers operates three flights a week to Kuala Lumpur.

military, one military council member, Vice President Abdul Rahim Hatif, does not belong to Najib's party.

Foreign Minister Abdul Wakil said Sunday the military council will coordinate economic and military activities. He said it will not replace the Cabinet, but did not elaborate. It appears the military council is the most powerful body in the government.

Najib declared the state of emergency three days after the last Soviet troops withdrew from Afghanistan, leaving his forces to fight alone against U.S.-supported Moslem guerrillas trying to overthrow his communist regime. The departure ended nine years of Soviet military intervention.

The guerrillas and some Western diplomats believe the government in Kabul will fall without the help of Soviet troops.

However, Pakistani-based guerrilla groups are bogged down in efforts to resolve differences over power-sharing. They seek to name an interim government to take over in Kabul.

The emergency suspends or limits certain civil rights, such as freedom of expression, privacy and public assembly. The 43-year-old president, former head of the KHAD secret police, said it was needed because of "conspiracies" and "armed intervention from outside."

Pitt Towns Have Electricity Problems

Farmville, even before the major failure this morning, was continuing to fight the battle, with help from crews from Laurinburg, High Point and New Bern. A crew from Lumberton assisted in Fountain, which is served by Farmville.

At 10 a.m. today, Murphrey said all major circuits in Farmville and Fountain were up, but lots of secondary lines were down in both towns.

"I'm not going to say that everything will be back up by the end of today," he said. "There's a lot left to do and we don't have guarantees that more limbs aren't going to hit lines. Tree limbs are what did all our damage."

Russell said tree branch damage also was responsible for Ayden's problems. "Just as you'd get one section back on, another limb would hit a line and everything would be off again. There was one subdivision that went down five times at least because of new limbs falling."

Like Farmville, Ayden had help from outside. Most of its additional manpower and trucks came from E&R Construction Company in Kinston, an electrical contractor whose crews are continuing to assist Ayden today.

Russell said Ayden area Boy Scouts and other private citizens also assisted in power restoration efforts. "When our downtown was without power," he said, "our town radio system was out and we had Boy Scouts acting as runners going all over town taking messages to our crews. They also took coffee and food to our crews. Many local restaurants donated meals for us and some private citizens even brought up big pots of soup they'd cooked for our workers. The way everybody pitched in was wonderful to see."

Murphrey said he spent much of the wee hours of Saturday at Guardian Care Nursing Home in Farmville where power was first restored. "We used an emergency generator there," he said. "That facility had to be our town's number one priority."

Prior to Farmville's 12 hours without power, the town had sought to open its community building for people without heat in their homes, Murphrey said, "but then there was no power there either."

Ayden opened its community building and a recreation department gymnasium to the public and a few people used them. Power stayed on in these facilities all night, Russell said, and there was gas heat in certain portions of each.

Grifton also had major ice damage, but left restoration up to its supplier, Carolina Power and Light. At 11 a.m. today, Town Manager Ron Hardison said there were outages in "only a few spotted houses."

Williamston had few problems related to the weather, according to Willie Long, superintendent of public works. Long said there was some ice and snow in the Williamston area, but not enough to break many tree branches. He said any necessary cleanup will get under way today.

North Carolina Power, which supplies much of Martin County and some of northern Pitt County, had its major storm damage in the Bethel, Parmele and Robersonville areas. Crews from Elizabeth City, Ahoskie and Roanoke Rapids provided assistance there, said Burney

Power

Smithfield Town Manager Tony Robertson said an electrical switch at the Johnston County town's substation overheated and caught fire Saturday due to power surges blamed on tree limbs falling on icy lines.

Robertson said he hoped all residents would have power restored by today.

Doug Hamilton, manager of Smithfield's Chicken 'N Bar-B-Q, said Saturday night he was serving customers despite the lack of power.

"We've got a small gas stove, and we're keeping the barbecue and the Brunswick stew hot, and we'll buy some candles if people want to see what they're eating," Hamilton said.

Duke Power Co. was working to restore power to about 22,500 customers in Charlotte and the mountain counties, said Anne Sheffield, a Duke spokeswoman.

About 10,000 customers in the Charlotte area were without electricity Saturday night, but that number had been cut to 550 by Sunday, she said. Brevard had 1,100 customers without power, while Hendersonville had 3,500 and Rutherfordton had 3,800.

Ms. Sheffield said 600 additional workers were sent to western North Carolina Sunday to help local repair crews fix lines. She said it might be today before all power was restored.

In eastern North Carolina, Carolina Power & Light Co. had scattered outages in Selma, Goldsboro and Mount Olive. About 4,000 customers were affected, said CP&L spokesman Wayne Ennis.

"We have some customers who will have interruptions through tomorrow," Ennis said Sunday night.

At least five fatalities were blamed on the icy roads, including two people who were struck by sliding vehicles after they had gotten out to inspect their own wrecked cars.

The Highway Patrol reported no new fatalities Sunday, but dispatchers said they were swamped with reports of accidents across the state.

Outages Numerous

"All customers without power likely have service line problems at their individual locations. If those customers have not contacted GUC, please call us immediately," Green advised.

"We appreciate our customers' patience in this occurrence and our employees' efforts at restoring power service," he said.

Greene said that although GUC employees involved in the restoration of service worked late hours and under pressure, none suffered injuries or had any accidents.

about 3,000 customers in that area has been restored, he said.

Waltrip's Daytona Win Was No Fluke

Darrell Waltrip celebrates after winning the Daytona 500

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — After failing to win the Daytona 500 in cars far superior to the one he had just driven to victory, Darrell Waltrip was asked if he thought it was a fluke.

"The first car across the finish line wins the race," he said Sunday after breaking a 16-year drought in stock car racing's premier event. "It doesn't matter how you get there."

The how of it was in the right foot of the 42-year-old driver. He kept it off the floor over the final 35 laps on Daytona International Speedway's 2.5-mile oval, turning the $1.7 million NASCAR stock car race into a fuel conservation clinic.

"There's no doubt that Ken Schrader had the strongest car in the race," eighth-place finisher Rick

Wilson said. "But he got snookered."

Pole-sitter Schrader, who led 114 of the 200 laps, didn't dispute that.

"When I saw Darrell legging it, I knew we were in trouble," said Schrader, forced to surrender the lead when he stopped for fuel just 11 laps from the end. "We had to stop. There was no way we were going to make it."

Nor was there any way for Dale Earnhardt, who ran second to Schrader in the latter stages of the race. Earnhardt followed Schrader to pit road at the end of lap 189.

When they returned to the track, they trailed Waltrip and race leader Alan Kulwicki by about 10 seconds. Seven laps later, with four remaining in the opening race of the Winston Cup season, Kulwicki cut a tire and had to pit.

That left Waltrip to "draft ... draft ... draft" to victory.

Waltrip and crew chief Jeff Hammond had decided their only chance to win was to bypass a final pit stop.

"We couldn't outrun him," Waltrip said of Hendrick Motorsports teammate Schrader. "Either we ran out of gas or we didn't."

"Today, Lady Luck smiled on us. Last year, she deserted us."

Waltrip, on the verge of tears a year ago after dominating the event only to fall back with an engine problem in the last 20 laps, was ecstatic in Victory Lane on Sunday.

"I won the Daytona 500 ... I won the Daytona 500," he screamed as he emerged from his day-glo orange Chevrolet Monte Carlo, thrusting his arms skyward. "This is Daytona, isn't it? I'm not dreaming, am I?"

Until Sunday, Waltrip's dreams about the race were nightmares.

"Last year was a real disaster," he said. "In 1984, Cale (now-retired Cale Yarborough) passed me on the last lap. In 1981, I blew up leading the race. Same thing in '82. In '83, I had a bad crash. I finished third in '85, '86 and '87."

"It's good to be able to say I finally won the Daytona 500."

The race, slowed to an average of 148.666 mph by seven caution flags covering 30 laps, was marred by several crashes.

Among them was an accident in which Davey Allison did a 360-degree flip off the dirt bank guarding the infield lake. He skidded all the way to the dirt after making contact on the backstretch with Waltrip's other teammate, Geoff

Numerous Wrecks Plague Race

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Wrecks sent 10 cars to the pits during a crash-filled Daytona 500. Explanations ranged from the wind to the rules to bad driving.

Close racing helped cause a series of collisions in a 10-car wreck on lap 72 that sidelined Rodney Combs, Chad Little, Dale Jarrett, Lake Speed and Jody Ridley, who had replaced injured Bill Elliott four laps into the race. Jarrett and Speed later returned.

Wrecks also ended the race for Phil Barkdoll, who collided with Rick Wilson on lap 143; and Bobby Hillin and Charlie Baker, who were forced out on lap 39. The most serious injury was to Combs, who suffered a concussion.

Darrell Waltrip avoided the wreckage to earn his first Daytona 500 victory in 17 tries.

The angriest accident victim was Davey Allison, who was bumped off the track by Geoff Bodine on lap 24. Allison's Thunderbird slid through the grass, climbed a dirt mound and did a complete roll.

Satterfield Interviews For USC Job

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Furman coach Jimmy Satterfield said he would be honored if South Carolina asked him to succeed the late Joe Morrison.

"It's a great school ... a big-time program ... a big-time job," Satterfield said Saturday after meeting with South Carolina officials.

"It would be an honor if they offered me the job, but I'm not going to lose any sleep over it."

Satterfield, who led the Paladins to the NCAA Division I-AA title in 1988, said he believed South Carolina officials would interview other candidates.

"They are going to talk with some other folks, but it would be an honor for me if they offered me the job," said Satterfield, a 1962 graduate of South Carolina.

If that happened, Satterfield said he would accept.

"You betcha I will," he said. "I've have to talk with our people (staff) and see what they think about it. Of course, they haven't offered it to me yet."

"But I've got a great job. I'm in a no-lose situation. Furman is a fantastic school," he said.

Other coaches reportedly who will be interviewed are George Chaump of Marshall; Spaky Woods of Appalachian State; Fisher DeBerry of the Air Force Academy; and Mike Gottfried of Pittsburgh.

Joe Lee Dunn, South Carolina's assistant head coach and defensive coordinator, is the only coach on the interview list who is not a head coach.

The Greenville News reported Sunday that Southern Mississippi coach Curley Hallman and Syracuse coach Dick MacPherson might be under consideration.

South Carolina athletic director King Dixon has said the school hopes to choose a new coach by the end of this week.

He has refused to discuss the search, saying "the important thing is the decision as to who the head coach is, not the process."

The South Carolina job came open after Morrison, 51, died of a heart attack Feb. 5. He had been playing racquetball with three friends at Williams-Brice Stadium.

Satterfield said South Carolina officials "seem to want to get on with it, whether it's me or somebody else."

Satterfield said he met Saturday with Dixon, associate athletic director Art Baker and President James Holderman.

"We all three talked, but I talked with King more," Satterfield said. "He went over the particulars of the job with me. We toured the stadium and the whole athletic complex."

Dixon did not return messages left Sunday at his home by The Associated Press.

Bucknell Keys Heels UNC Tops Terps For ACC Victory

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Steve Bucknell scored 14 of his 16 points, including a key 3-pointer, in the second half to help No. 8 North Carolina hold off Maryland 86-75 in an Atlantic Coast Conference game Sunday.

With the Tar Heels leading 70-66, Bucknell sank his second 3-pointer with three seconds left on the shot clock for a seven-point North Carolina lead with 1:50 left to play.

King Rice sank two free throws and converted a three-point play, and Jeff Lebo added four more in the final 90 seconds as the Tar Heels improved their record to 22-5 overall and 8-3 in the ACC.

J.R. Reid led the Tar Heels with 17 points, 12 in the first half.

Maryland, after erasing a 10-point deficit in the second half and a nine-point margin in the first, fell to 8-16 overall in losing for the 10th time in 11 ACC games.

John Johnson led Maryland with 24 points and freshman Walt Williams scored all of his 14 points in the second half to keep the Terps close.

After trailing from the opening minute, the Terps outscored the Tar Heels 14-6 behind eight points by Johnson, including two 3-point baskets, to pull within 61-59 with 7:31 to play.

North Carolina, behind a layup and a 3-point field goal by Bucknell and a three-point play from Jeff Lebo, ran off a 10-2 spurt for a 55-45 lead with 10:36 remaining.

Maryland erased a 42-35 deficit early in the second half on two baskets by John Johnson and two more from Jerrod Mustaf in an 8-3 run that got the Terps within 45-43 with 15:13 to play.

Rick Fox gave North Carolina a 36-29 halftime lead with a 3-pointer from the left side at the buzzer ending a half in which the Tar Heels shot 38.2 percent and committed 10 turnovers.

The Tar Heels jumped to a 20-11 lead in the opening 8:40 behind 10 points from Reid.

Baseball Salaries Increased Again

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Double-digit inflation of baseball salaries, renewed last fall by free agency's bull market, continued during arbitration, an Associated Press study shows.

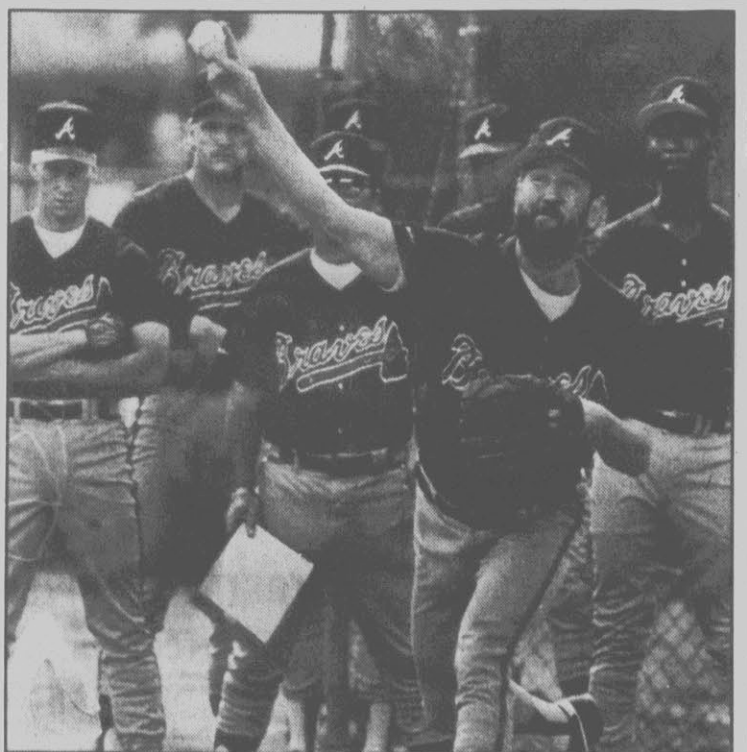

As a result, the average salary will increase by about $50,000 per player this year to approximately $485,000.

An examination of the 1988 and 1989 contracts of salary arbitration-eligible players shows a 61 percent salary increase, from an average of $368,443 to $593,098. The 134 players who actually filed had a 70 percent increase, the AP study shows. It's the largest jump since 1985, the winter before collusion began, and five percent more than last year.

Using AP models based on previous years, that projects to an overall salary increase of between 10 and 12 percent from the 1988 average, calculated at $430,000 by the owners and $438,729 by the players' union. The exact increase cannot be determined until opening day rosters are set in April.

Only 12 players actually had hearings, the fewest since 1984, when there were 10. Players won seven cases and owners five, the first winning year for the players since 1981. All three million-dollar players who took their cases to arbitrators won — pitcher Danny Jackson of Cincinnati, first baseman Glenn Davis of Houston and outfielder Joe Carter of Cleveland.

L.A. Hoping For Comeback

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Los Angeles Dodgers won the World Series last season without Fernando Valenzuela. Now, he's trying to prove he can help them repeat.

So Valenzuela's workout Sunday at Vero Beach, Fla., attracted more than the usual notice. Valenzuela, who missed most of the final two months of last season with shoulder problems, threw for 20 to 25 minutes.

"I was very encouraged," Dodgers pitching coach Ron Peranoski said. "He was spotting the ball well today and had good velocity. Fernando worked hard during the offseason and, because of his hard work, his strength and conditioning is improved as compared to other springs."

Valenzuela is scheduled to throw batting practice for the first time this spring on Thursday.

ECU-Howard Baseball Games Rescheduled

East Carolina will open the baseball season Wednesday with a double header against Howard University, beginning at 1 p.m.
The Pirates were set to open the season this past weekend against Howard with a doubleheader Saturday and another game Sunday, but all three contests had to be postponed due to inclement weather.

St. Peters Tops Annunciation Of Havelock

HAVELOCK — Ryan Williams scored a game-high 32 points to lead St. Peters to a 52-45 victory over Annunciation of Havelock in an overtime Parochial League basketball game Sunday.
With the win, St. Peters' moves to 9-3 on the year and returns to action Sunday at home against St. Francis of Jacksonville.
In the girls' game, St. Peters also won 23-17 as Marianna Weigand scored nine points. Annunciation's JVs took a 32-20 over St. Peters. Matthew Dellasega had 12 points to lead St. Peters.

Hornets Ready To Bring Rowsom Back

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Brian Rowsom, a power forward for the Charlotte Hornets, will be reactivated before the team's next game Wednesday night, team officials said Sunday.
The NBA team also may be looking to make a trade, Hornets General Manager Carl Scheer said.
Scheer said he had talked with the Indiana Pacers, who now have five players who can play center after a trade that sent Wayman Tisdale and a second-round draft choice to the Sacramento Kings for center-forward LaSalle Thompson and guard Randy Wittman.
The player the Hornets are most interested in acquiring from Indiana is 7-foot center Stuart Gray. Scheer told The Gaston Gazette on Sunday night that he had discussed a deal involving Gray with Pacers' general manager Donnie Walsh earlier in the day.
"Gray is now expendable with LaSalle Thompson coming over. I talked to Donnie today (Sunday) and now I understand what it was all about. It opens the door (to get Gray), but it also further complicates the situations because they have to get rid of a player and their salary cap is full," Scheer said.
"We're going to be talking," Scheer said. "We're also talking to other teams (about a trade)."
The NBA trading deadline is Thursday.

Groh Reportedly Headed To Giants

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — South Carolina football offensive coordinator Al Groh has resigned and will become an assistant coach for the New York Giants.
The NFL team was expected to announce Groh's hiring Monday, according to The Charlotte Observer. He will coach linebackers.
Groh had been considered by most observers to be a strong candidate for the Gamecocks' head-coaching job, which became open when Joe Morrison died of a heart attack Feb. 5.
But he had not been interviewed for the post. "I was not part of the process," he said Sunday.
Groh is the fifth South Carolina assistant to leave since the end of the season.
Groh, 45, was head coach at Wake Forest from 1981 through 1986. He had just finished having a new home built in Columbia.

Mavericks Hope Dantley Ends His Holdout

DALLAS (AP) — The crippled Dallas Mavericks hope Adrian Dantley ends his holdout this week because their NBA playoff hopes are in the lurch.
Dantley, angered when Detroit traded him to the Mavericks for Mark Aguirre and a 1991 draft pick, has missed two games since the trade last Wednesday.
The Mavs, who are battling for the eighth-place playoff spot in the Western Conference, were in seventh place, just a game ahead of Portland and a game and a half ahead of Denver.
Dantley's agent, David Falk, was expected to meet with Dallas owner Donald Carter early next week. Dantley is losing $15,000 for each game he misses.
Carter said he wasn't upset yet that Dantley was a no-show.
"We're his sixth team in the NBA and I can understand why he would want to meet with the owner of the new team he is going to play for," Carter said.

Bucks Bring Dunleavy Out Of Retirement

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Bucks brought assistant coach Mike Dunleavy out of retirement Sunday and sent him into the crucial final seconds of a loss to the Chicago Bulls.
Dunleavy hadn't played in an NBA game since Dec. 1, 1984, when he hurt his back when an airplane in which he was riding stopped suddenly as it taxied along a runway.
He was eventually awarded an out-of-court settlement by the airline.
He got the chance to play again Sunday after signing a 10-day contract to help the Bucks with a roster problem caused by injuries.
The Bucks trailed Chicago by three points with 11 seconds to go when Dunleavy was summoned from the bench, where he had been handling a clipboard most of the game.
"I knew the offense as well as anybody on the team," said Dunleavy, 34, and in his second year as an assistant coach. "I left the game a little earlier than I wanted, so this was a way to get a little bit back. I felt the risk was one that I'd be able to take. I was in great condition when I hurt my back," he said.
Bucks coach Del Harris said the Bucks signed Dunleavy because of the injuries and because they didn't want to sign another player to a 10-day contract and then drop him later.
"We knew Mike could come in as a player-coach and he won't feel crushed if we take him out," Harris said.

Turner Takes Hawaiian Open Title

HONOLULU (AP) — Sherri Turner fired a record-tying 6-under-par 66 Saturday for a record-setting victory in the $300,000 Hawaiian Ladies Open tournament.
Turner shot a bogey-free round to finish at 11-under-par 205, four strokes ahead of second-round co-leader Sara Ann McGettrick. Her 205 total beat the previous tournament record of 9-under 207 set by 1987 champion Cindy Rarick and her 66 equaled the tournament record set by Terry-Jo Myers in the first round.
Turner, the LPGA Tour's leading money-winner in 1988, claimed a $45,000 winner's check for her third LPGA Tour victory.

Twiggs Claims Victory In San Diego Open

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Greg Twiggs shot 3-under-par 69 Sunday for a two-stroke victory in the $700,000 San Diego Open and his first win in five years on the PGA Tour.
Twiggs, who carded a four-day 271 total, had five birdies and two bogeys en route to claiming the $126,000 top prize.
Third-round leader Steve Elkington of Australia struggled to a 1-over-par 73 to finish in a second-place tie with Mark Wiebe, Brad Faxon and Mark O'Meara at 273.

Charles' Birdie Putt Secures Win

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Bob Charles dropped a 15-foot birdie putt on the third extra hole Sunday to win a four-way playoff and the $45,000 winner's check in the GTE Suncoast Seniors Classic.
Charles closed with a 6-under-par 66 for a 9-under-par 207 total, the same score posted by Harold Henning, Jim Ferree and second-round leader Dave Hill.
Hill, who blew a four-stroke lead in the final two holes with a triple-bogey on No. 17, and Ferree were eliminated on the first extra hole. Henning then missed a 15-foot birdie putt on the third hole before Charles dropped one from the same distance for the victory.

Norman Takes 5-Shot Victory In Australia

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Australian Greg Norman fired a 5-under-par 68 Sunday and scored a five-shot victory in the Australian Masters championship, his fifth win in the event in nine years.

Sooners Win, Hang On To No. 1

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Who's No. 1? Surprise! — it'll probably be Oklahoma.

That's the same team that was No. 1 last week. That hasn't happened in five weeks, since before Duke was knocked off and the top spot became a seven-day honor.

"In my book, they're the toughest team in the country. Colorado coach Tom Miller said Saturday after the Sooners beat Colorado 106-88.

Oklahoma almost didn't make it, though. The Sooners needed overtime to beat Kansas 94-89 on Wednesday before handling Colorado.

It's been a tough stretch for the Sooners, 23-3 and 9-1 in the Big Eight.

"We've had eight out of 10 games on the road," Sooners coach Billy Tubbs said. "We feel like an NBA team."

No. 2 Arizona also didn't lose this week. But No. 3 Missouri lost to Iowa State, No. 5 Illinois lost, No. 6 Syracuse lost to Georgetown and No. 7 Florida State lost to 10th-ranked Louisville and to Memphis State. So when the new Associated Press poll is released tonight, there will be a lot of changes.

No. 9 Indiana 76, No. 13 Michigan 75
Jay Edwards made a 3-pointer at the buzzer to lift the Hoosiers to their 15th consecutive victory at home.

Michigan coach Bill Frieder wouldn't criticize the officials. Not quite, anyway.

"I'll get ripped if I say it was good because people will say I'm not standing up for my team, and I'll get ripped if I say it wasn't good because they'll say I was making excuses," Frieder said.

The Hoosiers, 21-5, are 11-1 in the Big 10 league with six games remaining. Illinois is second at 8-4.

Michigan, 19-6, fell into a tie with Iowa for third at 7-5.

Edwards finished with 23 points, including 13 in the game's final 8:48 after getting just four in the first half.

No. 3 Missouri 79, Nebraska 63
Gary Leonard scored 11 of Missouri's first 17 points. The Tigers, 2-2 under interim head coach Rich Daly, went ahead 19-6 and extended it to 38-21 at halftime.

Nebraska, 14-12 and 2-8 in the Big Eight, shot 8-for-31 in the first half. The Cornhuskers did not reach double digits in scoring until Bo Reid's basket made it 25-10 with 7:41 left in the half.

Leonard scored 23 points and Anthony Peeler 22 for Missouri, 22-5 and 8-2. Rich King scored a career-high 22 points for Nebraska.

No. 14 West Virginia 90, Rhode Island 66

Chris Brooks scored 22 points and Ray Foster 17 as the Mountaineers, 22-2 and 15-0 in the Atlantic 10, extended the nation's longest winning streak to 21 games.

John Evans scored 23 points for Rhode Island, 11-13 and 7-8, which lost its third straight. Herb Dixon scored 17, including 11 in the second half, and Kenny Green had 11.

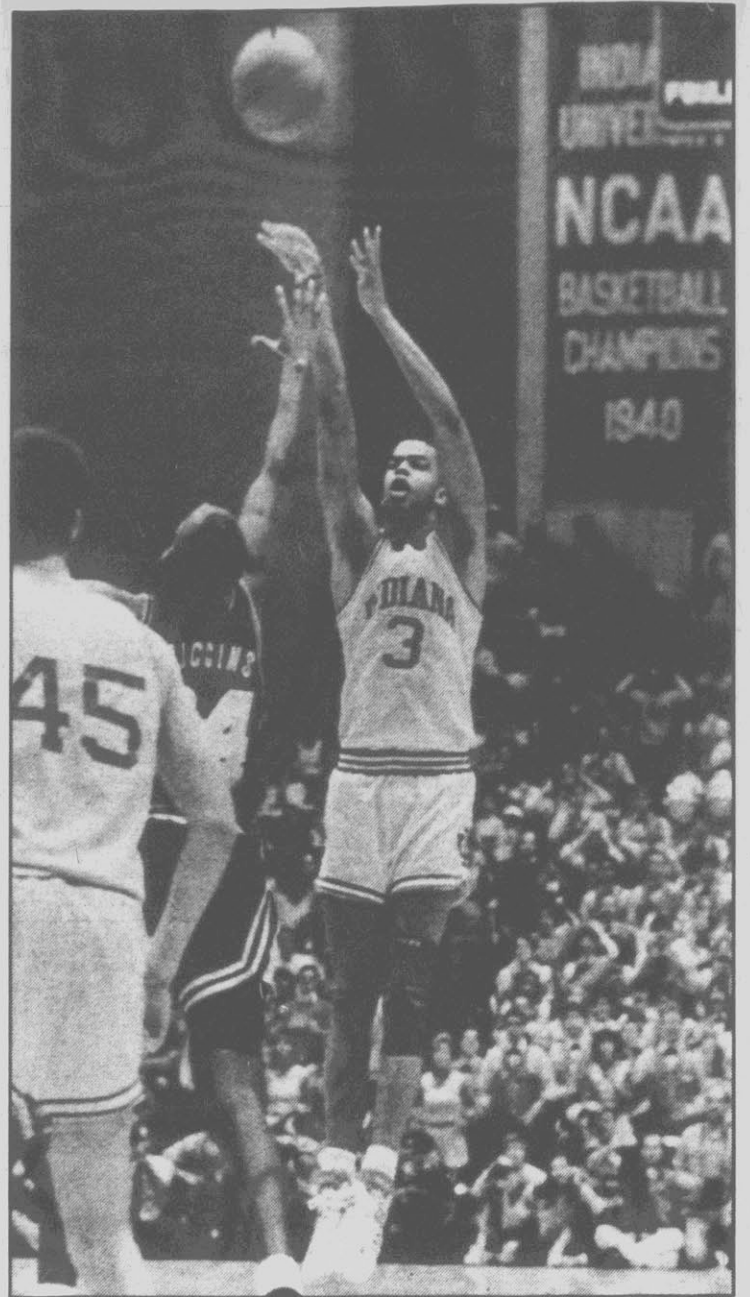

Eric Leslie, who had been leading the Rams in scoring with an average of 17.5, scored just two points.

Chris Brooks scored seven of his points during a 17-8 Mountaineers run that made it 57-40 with just over 10 minutes remaining.

No. 18 Nevada-Las Vegas 62, Temple 60

Greg Anthony made a game-winning, off-balance jumper with 28 seconds left as the Runnin' Rebels rallied in the final four minutes.

Temple, 15-9, led 56-53 before Anthony tied it on a 3-pointer with four minutes remaining. Anderson Hunt's 3-pointer with 3:31 left gave Nevada-La Vegas a 59-56 lead.

Barkley Hopes Hard Work Pays Off

By Hal Bock
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — The dilapidated gym stands in the underbelly of this town, light years removed from glitzy boardwalk casinos that endlessly blink neon and gobble loose change from the senior citizens who are bused in here each day.

That's all right with Iran Barkley, the WBC middleweight champion, who works out there. Glitz has never been his thing, anyway. It was in short supply on the hard streets of the South Bronx, where he grew up.

Barkley, who defends his title Friday against Roberto Duran, has finished his day's work. Now he sits on a side horse watching an anonymous heavyweight and a shorter man, both rough around the edges, pound on each other.

"It's a tough way to make a living," he said. "People I worked with showed me things. They didn't just beat on me. What good is that? Just beating on the man?"

He swings to the other side of the horse. "This is the toughest time for a fighter, the time in the gym. The road work, every day, over and over. If you're tired, you still got to get up and run. If you're sore, you still got to box. You can't think about the pain. You just got to do it."

"When I run, I'm into my own world, on my own private road. My road is lonely. And it's long."

That road started on those hard streets, a rough place with gangs, drugs and all the baggage of the inner city. "I don't like to reminisce on it," Barkley said. "It was rougher than this. It was survival."

But he remembered those roots when he dropped Thomas Hearns to the deck last June 6 and watched the title pass into his hands. "In those 10 seconds, I thought about it all," he said.

Barkley always wanted better for himself and his family. Some of his friends didn't make it. They are in jail, or they are dead. And he is the middleweight champion of the world.

The old neighborhood was no help in the quest, though. Mostly, Barkley was scorned there, ridiculed as a dreamer.

"If you want to better yourself, you get criticized," he said. "People would say, 'He ain't gonna be nothin'.' The more I pushed, the more they doubted me. They want you at their level. They'll do whatever they can to keep you down. Misery loves company."

"People would laugh at somebody who couldn't read. That's not funny. It's just that they don't know. They didn't learn. I was always so afraid when I saw that. I didn't want people to know I couldn't read as well as I wanted to, either."

It's not that Barkley can't read. It's just that he wants to read better. "I feel a need to learn, to freshen up," he said. "I was out of touch so long."

The man who helped him change that was his new manager, oil and gas executive John Reetz, who arranged twice a week tutoring sessions for the fighter. "It's very hard," Barkley says, "but I do it because I want to improve myself."

When Barkley was shopping for a manager, he met Reetz in a conference room full of lawyers, debating contract terms. "John looked at me and I looked at him," Barkley said. "We went outside and I said, 'You want a fighter and I want a manager.' The deal was done and for all they know, those lawyers are still at the table, talking."

Reetz and Barkley are from distinctly different sides of the street, a button-down manager and his street-smart fighter.

"He showed me his world and I showed him mine," Barkley said. Each of them turned some heads in the other's neighborhood — Reetz's suburban Bronxville, N.Y., with its manicured lawns and Barkley's South Bronx with its projects and tenements.

Now, together, they prepare for Duran.

"I'm always caught between a rock and a hard place," Barkley said softly. "Destroy Duran and people will say I beat an old man. If he wins, he's king of the world."

"I don't let it bother me. People will say what they will say. If you do good, everybody wants to be around. If you do bad, nobody wants to be around you. I know. I've been there."

Waltrip Takes Daytona 500 Win ...

Bodine. Although the car was badly damaged, Allison kept on going without losing a lap.

The 27-year-old son of defending champion Bobby Allison — sidelined this year with injuries sustained in a near-fatal wreck last June — was livid.

"It's one thing when you're on lap 198 or 199, but when you're running sixth or seventh and the 28th lap, you've got to use your head. Apologies in the garage are too late."

Bodine, the 1986 Daytona 500 winner, admitted making a mistake when he tried to pull in front of Allison after coming off the high-banked second turn.

That 31-degree turn, into which the wind was blowing, was the scene of virtually all the mishaps. There were no serious injuries.

"... But sorry doesn't straighten it out," Bodine said. "Davey didn't want to hear that."

Bobby Allison, a three-time winner of the race, was impressed with his son's driving skill after viewing the race on TV at his Hueytown, Ala., home.

"As far as I know, he is the first driver to ever flip a car over at Daytona and still finish the race," the elder Allison said in a telephone interview.

The younger Allison, who finished 25th, was second to his father after a last-lap shootout a year ago.

Waltrip, who won $184,400 Sunday after collecting $34,457 for winning a Grand National race in a thrilling finish 24 hours earlier, beat Schrader by 7.64 seconds.

Earnhardt finished third in the 500, which featured 30 lead changes among 15 drivers. Bodine was fourth, giving the Monte Carlos a sweep of the top positions. Ironically, they are now out of production, soon to be replaced by Chevrolet's new Lumina.

The sweep had been predicted by two-time winner Bill Elliott. He started the race, but gave way to Jody Ridley because his left wrist is in a cast, the result of a fracture sustained in practice 10 days ago.

Ridley, who was to retire after he was bumped from behind and ignited a 10-car accident on lap 72, replaced Elliott during the first caution, on the fifth lap.

Phil Parsons, in an Oldsmobile, broke the Chevrolet spell with his fifth-place finish. Rookie Rick Mast, who ran strong throughout the race, was sixth in another Chevrolet.

Kulwicki was seventh in a Ford, followed by Wilson in an Oldsmobile. Terry Labonte, who took no fuel over the last 50 laps of a qualifying race last week — three fewer than Waltrip made in winning the 500 — was ninth in a Ford.

Rounding out the top 10 was Kyle Petty, who relieved Eddie Bierschwale in an Oldsmobile early in the race. Petty's father Richard, a seven-time winner of the race, finished 17th.

The only other former winner in the field, A.J. Foyt, was 38th.

The race, run in cool, overcast weather, was watched by an estimated crowd of 140,000 — a Daytona record — as well as a national television audience.

New York Lures Gossett Back For 'Gideon Oliver'

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — If you want to entice Louis Gossett, dangle an exotic locale in front of him.

That's what the Academy Award-winning actor said drew him to the television movie series "Gideon Oliver," premiering tonight on "The ABC Mystery Movie." Gossett plays a brilliant anthropology professor who solves crimes that involve exotic cultures.

Gossett made the hit action film "Iron Eagle" in Israel, the sci-fi drama "Enemy Mine" in West Germany, and his new movie, "The Punisher," was filmed in Australia.

Well, so the first two episodes of "Gideon Oliver" were shot in New York. "I'm from here, and the reception is very warm. Gets me through the cold winter day," Gossett said during a break in shooting on location in Manhattan's Chinatown. "It's nice working with New York people. They're pretty real."

Co-executive producer Dick Wolf puts the cost per episode of "Gideon Oliver" at about $3 million. Last month, the production moved to Mexico for stories set in South America and the Caribbean. And if not for the writers' strike last summer that delayed the start of the season, Gossett said, the first episode would have been filmed in Moscow. Maybe next season. And maybe Borneo, Japan and Australia, too. Wolf even hopes to shoot in Beijing.

"That's exciting to me," Gossett said. "I've got some kids it would be wonderful to take with me, and it's an education that's just priceless."

Gossett, 51, married soap opera star Cyndi Reese Gossett in 1987. He has two sons, Satie, 14, from a previous marriage, and Sharron, 11, whose adoption just became final.

Gossett, who grew up in the Sheepshead Bay-Coney Island section of Brooklyn — "I had to get a tongue transplant and a passport to get out of there," he laughed — now lives in Malibu, Calif.

"I wasn't happy until I saw the ocean again," he said. "I felt quite stifled in California, because it's slow and plodding and you have to get in cars. Then I found Malibu. I went to a beach party, and I never left. It's that infinity. Something happens to you. What I needed was to be at the sea."

"Gideon Oliver" rotates with two other movie series, Peter Falk's "Columbo" and "B.L. Stryker," starring Burt Reynolds.

"Gideon Oliver" comes from producers and writers whose credits include "Hill Street Blues," "Murder, She Wrote" and "Miami Vice."

"I said, now this is a challenge," Gossett said. "This is something I can do and not get bored with, with the repetition of. And they got the best of television to do it for me in (producers) Bill Sackheim and Dick Wolf and David Black. The best. If you can't do it with the best like that, I can't do it."

As the crew set up across the street in Chinatown, Gossett stood around and entertained a cluster of fans. "You the guy in 'Iron Eagle'?" an eager youth asked. Gossett said yes. "You really fly that plane?" the young man asked. Gossett allowed that no, he rode in the plane, but he didn't actually fly it.

Though he's played Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, won his Oscar for a simmering portrayal of the drill sergeant in "An Officer and a Gentleman," and is best-known on television for his role as Fiddler in "Roots," Gossett has a huge following from his action movies.

Gideon Oliver is a karate expert who can take care of himself, but, said Gossett, "if he gets hit, it's got to hurt, and if he hits somebody that's got to hurt his hand."

"What I'm trying to do is be careful with 'Gideon Oliver,' because it would be easy to do all action in these episodes," Gossett said. "It leaves out his intelligence, his sense of humor, his caring, otherwise."

"The wonderful thing about the show is it is not easily categorized," said Wolf. "He's not a cop, he doesn't carry a gun, he's not a private detective, he's not a coroner. He's a guy who understands subgroups because he's an anthropologist."

Actress Helps Girl Scouts

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. — A soft spot for the Girl Scouts brought actress Kathleen Turner here to help raise money for a Girl Scout camp and to talk to nearly 3,000 girls about her filmmaking career.

"The older girls mainly wanted to know what it was like kissing Michael Douglas" in the movies "Romancing the Stone" and "Jewel of the Nile," Ms. Turner said. "I told them 'he's not bad.'"

The chat with about 2,700 Girl Scouts took place Saturday at an arena at Southwest Missouri State University.

Later, Ms. Turner was the guest of honor at a dinner and reception to benefit Girl Scout Camp Finbrooke. More than 300 people attended.

Ms. Turner, who attended

Southwest Missouri State in the early 1970s, said she grew up with the Girl Scouts in the United States, England and Venezuela. Her mother, Pat Turner, has been a Girl Scout volunteer since the 1960s and is chairman of a summer camp in southwest Missouri.

"I think the Girl Scouts is a very important organization," the actress said at the dinner. "I have a daughter now, although she's a little young and won't be starting Girl Scouts for some time."

"But I'd like the organization to be healthy and strong when she is," Ms. Turner said.

Critic Says 'Mighty Quinn' A New Low For Townsend

By Stephen Hunter
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

"The Mighty Quinn" is zesty and flavorful, which is great if you're a soup, but not nearly enough if you're a movie. It has a few rambunctious moments, but in the end it's brought low by the one person you'd least expect to betray it.

And that's the wonderful Robert Townsend, so hysterically funny in his own film "Hollywood Shuffle." Townsend is cast as Maubee, a kind Rastafarian free spirit who, on an unnamed but immediately recognizable Caribbean island, stands for the native indomability of spirit, the unquenchable naturalness of the natural man. In other words, a black Errol Flynn.

But poor Townsend, a gifted writer and a wonderful comic actor, somehow doesn't quite have the charisma to bring off the impersonation. He is, somehow, too cultivated, and he lacks that animal heat that would make such a conceit spring instantly to life. And so when the movie offers him up as a lithe and wiry emblem of guile and charisma, it simply dies; the illusion doesn't hold and all life leaks out of the film.

A shame. Clearly conceived as the starring vehicle that would make Denzel Washington the Sydney Poitier of the 90s, the film is a kind of island "Heat of the Night," in which Washington, as police chief Xavier Quinn, must solve a murder among the fancy white folks who own the big resort. Quinn is a kind of man without a culture; though the tropics blaze out of the background, the movie is really set on that same fault line in black mindset between wannabees and don't-wannabees that Spike Lee has explored so fruitfully. Thus Quinn, an ex-Marine trained in FBI procedures, isn't quite fully accepted as equal by the island's whites, because of his blackness; at the same time, his own culture now sees him as a stranger, isolated by the toxin of his whiteness.

This is very interesting stuff, and Washington, a strong and attractive performer, manages to bring it off convincingly, though he's much better at the heavier moments than at the lighter ones: he doesn't quite have Poitier's extremely bearable lightness of being. But he's particularly compelling in getting Quinn's wariness and isolation, his policeman's feelings of apartness. And he has a wonderful and wise scene early on, where he disarms a frustrated suitor at a wedding and gives him sage advice: "Learn to live with it."

The plot is too complicated for the movie's own good, perhaps owing to its derivation from a novel by A.H.Z.

Carr: a prosperous guest at the resort is beheaded and indefatigable Maubee is seen racing off with a mysterious suitcase. It pleases all the powers that be — black, white and in between — that Maubee is guilty. But Quinn, an old chum of Maubee from his wild youth, doesn't quite buy it. He knows that although Maubee's got a heart of pure larceny, he's not a killer.

Defying his various masters, Quinn digs deeper and soon taps into a CIA plot involving the Contras, a huge sum of missing money and two CIA hit men, one Nicaraguan and one down-home American in the form of M. Emmet Walsh. Walsh is really a wonderful actor, particularly when here (as in "Blood Simple") he plays the kind of role that Gene Hackman would play if he weren't quite yet a star: that is, a sleazy and avuncular country boy, whose affability masks both sheer cunning and the willingness to strike out hard and do permanent damage.

Top Tightwads Crowned

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OAKLAND, Calif. — A retired welder who says he separates two-ply toilet paper to save money won top tightwad honors in a newspaper's "How Cheap Are You?" contest.

"It's no trouble at all; it just takes a little practice," Luis Torres said Sunday. He said his single-ply rolls are "just as good as two-ply" and save about 23 cents each.

Torres, 64, who attributes his frugal ways to growing up with 14 siblings, says he buys day-old baked goods and meats, generic groceries and "whatever's on sale." He also says he reuses plastic bags and never tosses out that final sliver of soap.

"I always did things to save money," said Torres. "I've done everything there is to make or save a dollar. I'm not embarrassed at all."

The Oakland Tribune, which asked readers to submit their money-saving ideas, cited other skinflints in the categories of gross, tacky, unbelievable, incredible and dishonest.

Among the gross, a Berkeley couple said they save dental floss on a bathroom hook for reuse, and a Richmond man claimed he refreezes used ice cubes.

As for tacky, one couple said they collect two-for-one coupons to restaurants and then invite another couple. "We make them pay for their half, and we dine free," they wrote the newspaper.

In the unbelievable category, one person wrote: "I regulate my bodily functions so that I go to the bathroom during work hours. This saves on water, tissue and time. I can spend my hours at home doing something constructive, like cutting off expiration dates on coupons."

An incredible submission came from Elmer Hurren in El Cerrito, who said that when his vacuum cleaner bag fills, he cuts one end, empties it and sews it up for reuse.

"Not only does it save bags, but sometimes I find a penny in the dust," he said.

As for people who perhaps can't distinguish between cheap and cheat, one man admitted he carries a paper bag with "Out of Order" written on it. He places the bag on parking meters next to his car.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠KQ5 ♥AJ52 ♦K105 ♣J73
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♣ Pass 2 ♦ 2 ♣ ?

What action do you take?
A.—There are only two realistic possibilities: pass, to show a minimum opening bid, or two no trump to show your spade stoppers. With over a third of your values concentrated in the enemy suit, we prefer two no trump to warn partner of possible duplication. Despite your excellent support for partner's suit, three diamonds would be wrong on this holding.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠83 ♥KJ1052 ♦106 ♣AK104
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 2 NT Pass ?
 What do you bid now?

A.—You should begin to be interested in slam. The first step is to complete a picture of your hand. Since you have a good second suit, show it. Bid three clubs.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠83 ♥KJ1052 ♦106 ♣AK104
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 2 NT Pass 3 ♣ Pass
 3 ♥ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?

A.—You would like to cue-bid, but no convenient one is available—a bid of four clubs would be distributional, showing a five-card club suit. Therefore, jump to five hearts as a slam invitation.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K95 ♥AJ32 ♦KJ3 ♣QJ5
 Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?
A.—Even if partner has a maximum

18 points, with your flat hand and lack of intermediates slam is unlikely to be a bargain. So why risk an almost certain minus score by going overboard? Be content with three no trump.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠6 ♥KQ10732 ♦AKJ53 ♣6
 Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?
A.—We would be prepared to play in hearts at whatever level is dictated by the number of aces partner holds and take our chances on losing no trick in diamonds. The way to ask is by bidding four clubs—the Gerber Convention. A bid of four no trump would be quantitative, not ace-asking.

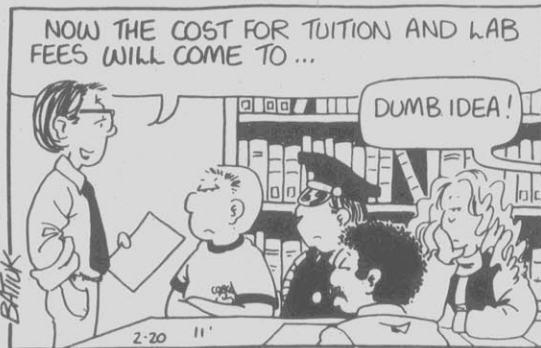

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠Q104 ♥742 ♦J732 ♣KQ3
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 2 ♥* 3 ♣ ?
 *—strong

What action do you take?
A.—This time you have three possible actions: three no trump; three hearts; double. Unless East has taken leave of his senses, double is unlikely to compensate you for the value of the game, or perhaps slam, you are missing. Our choice is for three no trump, just to tell partner where most of our values lie.

Soviet Envoy On Arab-Israeli Peace Mission

By Dalie Baligh
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAIRO, Egypt — Eduard Shevardnadze, the first Soviet foreign minister to visit Egypt in 15 years, met with President Hosni Mubarak today as part of a peace mission that is to include a meeting with his Israeli counterpart.

Shevardnadze arrived late Sunday from Jordan, where he said he hoped to persuade Israel to abandon its "stubborn" stand on regional peace when he meets with Foreign Minister Moshe Arens in Cairo on Wednesday.

The Soviet envoy's tour bolsters his country's role in Middle East peace efforts at a time when U.S. action is hampered by the change of administrations in Washington.

In Jordan, Shevardnadze gave King Hussein a letter from Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev on "important international issues." The content was not disclosed.

In Israel, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Sunday he would wholeheartedly welcome direct peace talks with the Arabs under U.S. and Soviet sponsorship. However, the Soviets insist on a role for the PLO, which Israel views as a terrorist group and says it will not meet.

Shevardnadze said he would also hold talks with Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat in Cairo, despite earlier reports the meeting would be held in the Iraqi capital, Baghdad.

"I hope progress can be made in the Middle East problem, which needs joint efforts by the (U.N.) Security Council and other concerned parties," he told reporters at Cairo airport Sunday night.

On Saturday in Damascus, the first stop on his Middle East tour, Shevardnadze called for a U.N.-sponsored international Middle East peace conference, including the PLO, within six to nine months.

He suggested the foreign ministers of the five permanent U.N. Security Council states — Britain, China, France, the Soviet Union and United States — begin preparation for such a conference.

But he told reporters in Amman that "no country can come up with a proposal acceptable to all parties from the beginning."

"Therefore, I say I do not have a special proposal in my pocket," he said.

Shevardnadze is scheduled to visit Iraq and Iran before returning home next Monday.

"Only through dialogue and convincing can one overcome the stubbon Israeli stand," Shevardnadze said in Syria. "I hope I can convince him (Arens)."

Shevardnadze said in Jordan that the PLO and Arabs had made great efforts toward an international conference: "The rest now awaits the Israeli position."

Shevardnadze was the first Soviet foreign minister ever to visit Jordan, a country historically leaning to the West.

He became the first Soviet official of his rank to visit Cairo since President Anwar Sadat expelled Moscow's military advisers in 1972. Egypt has since become Washington's closest Arab ally.

Asked as he left leaving Jordan about resuming relations with Israel, which were broken during the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, the Soviet minister said: "First let us convene the conference, and then there will be no problems on diplomatic issues."

Restoration of relations is an Israeli condition for a Soviet role in peace talks. The two nations recently began consular contacts.

Shamir told Israel Radio on Sunday that the planned meeting between Shevardnadze and Arens would be a "positive phenomenon."

Sikhs Kill 4 Members Of Hindu Family

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AMRITSAR, India — Sikh gunmen burst into a Hindu family's home and killed four people, police said today. Sikh militants have been avenging the executions of two Sikhs for the slaying of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

In another Punjab town, a Sikh schoolmaster was found today hanging to death from a tree, a news report said.

There was no report of who was responsible.

However, it was the 15th such hanging in the state since the militants pledged revenge for the Jan. 6 executions of the two Sikhs convicted in the 1984 assassination of India's leader.

At least 292 people have been killed in the predominantly Sikh state so far this year by radical Sikhs pressing their campaign for an independent homeland.

Five or six Sikhs with Chinese-made T-56 semi-automatic rifles forced their way into Ram Prakash's house in the Punjab village of Khara overnight and sprayed the room with bullets, said senior police superintendent Sanjiv Gupta. Prakash, his wife, and two teen-age sons were killed, Gupta said.

The body of schoolmaster Surjan Singh was found hanging from a tree in the town of Talwandi Rai. Press Trust of India news agency reported.

Sikhs, whose faith is rooted in both Hinduism and Islam, outnumber Hindus in the northern state of Punjab, but they comprise just 2 percent of the national population of 880 million.

Hindus account for 82 percent of the national population.

The Sikh separatist campaign began in 1982, and the death toll has escalated each year. In 1988, at least 2,440 people were slain by Sikh extremists in Punjab.

The extremists attack Hindus and moderate Sikhs.

Mauled Animal Keeper Plans To Resume Job

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — An animal keeper says she intends to return to her job when she recovers from a mauling by seven monkeys who bit and clawed her for 15 minutes before she jumped in a lake to save herself.

Vanessa Dennis, 26, head primate keeper at Kilverstone Wildlife Park in Norfolk, eastern England, was locking up the monkeys for the night on Feb. 1 when she was set upon by the seven white-throated Capuchins, whom she had looked after for almost five years.

After the 15-minute struggle in which she was severely bitten and clawed on her head, neck, arms and legs, she managed to throw off the last remaining animal and scream for help.

She then jumped into a lake until she was pulled out by another keeper, Steve West. "She was in total shock. The troop wanted her dead," he said.

Miss Dennis spent four days being treated for deep wounds at West Suffolk Hospital in Bury St. Edmunds and was then allowed home. A local newspaper first reported her ordeal on Friday.

Miss Dennis said Sunday that the attack was led by the dominant male named Percy, which leaped screaming at her neck and was followed by the others. She said she thought Percy might have been enraged by something behind her which she did not see.

"They were clinging to any flesh they could reach. The male clung relentlessly — I remember thinking I was dead and he had severed my jugular, the pain was so intense," the keeper said.

"I am going back because the animals are my life. I can forgive them and still care for and love them," she said.
