Hostages Facing Threat Over Book

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pro-Iranian militants holding American hostages in Lebanon today vowed revenge for the publication of "The Satanic Verses," but publishers in three countries reversed decisions not to put out the book, and two U.S. bookstores returned it to the shelves.

Former pop singer Cat Stevens, who gave up a successful music career in 1977 after becoming a Moslem, supported Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's execution order on the book's author, Salman Rushdie.

From his place in hiding, Rushdie sent London's weekly Observer a review of novelist Philip Roth's autobiography. It arrived about a week late. The newspaper said Rushdie comments about his predicament in the review.

West Germany, Iran's biggest trading partner, announced it had suspended plans to help rebuild Iran's war-ravaged economy, and the Parliament condemned the death sentence as a "declaration of war" against Western values.

Police in Canada said they received a bomb threat against the Iranian Embassy in Ottawa.

A Yugoslav republic criticized this week's visit to Belgrade of Iran's president and joined the chorus of condemnations of the death threat.

Rushdie, 41, born into a Moslem family and living in London, was in hiding for the ninth day along with his wife, American novelist Marianne Wiggins, who canceled her own book promotion tour to stay with her husband.

Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, which holds Americans Alann Steen, Robert Polhill and Jesse Turner in Beirut, released a statement threatening to take revenge against Rushdie, the book publishers and their supporters. The statement was accompanied by photographs of the hostages but it did not specifically threaten the men or any of the 12 other foreign hostages in Lebanon.

The group said it will "take revenge against all those who took part in strong and ferocious campaigns against Islam." The revenge will cover "all institutions and organizations that insulted in one way or another" members of the prophet Mohammed's family, it said.

Some say "The Satanic Verses" insults Islam by portraying the prophet's wives as prostitutes and suggesting he wrote the Koran rather than receiving it from God. Iranian clerics offered $5.2 million to anyone who killed Rushdie.

'Please, No Ice,' Utilities Officials Say

By Carol Tyer and Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The National Weather Service is predicting snow this evening for the Coastal Plain and area utilities and public works officials are saying, "Snow, we can deal with, but please no ice."

"We can get the snow out of the streets without too much trouble," Farmville town administrator Frank Bradham said this morning, "but I don't know what our men are going to do if we get another ice storm. They're very, very tired."

"Many of our utilities people worked 80 hours in four days last week and a lot of our public works people worked 70 hours. Their paychecks are going to look good, but I don't think they're going to feel like doing it again so soon," Bradham said.

Nevertheless, the Coastal Plains stands under a winter storm watch with a 60 percent chance of snow later today and more snow likely in the morning, according to the weather service.

Pitt County school officials today maintained a close watch on weather conditions.

John McKnight, deputy superintendent of the Pitt schools, said this morning that school officials were staying in contact with the city of Greenville and Greenville Utilities for the latest weather advisories.

McKnight said school buses had been fueled this morning and bus maintenance personnel were prepared in the event local weather conditions called for an early departure for students today.

In the event of adverse road conditions in the morning, schools will be closed if bus travel is deemed unsafe," McKnight said.

"That decision would be made immediately as possible and announced over local radio and television," he said.

First Sgt. C.E. Pearce of the N.C. Highway Patrol in Greenville said additional troopers will be called into action should roads become treacherous due to an accumulation of snow and the presence of ice.

"My first suggestion to people in case of bad weather today and tonight is if you don't have to travel, don't travel at all.

"If local residents must go someplace by car, drive slow, allow plenty of stopping room and watch for ice on bridges and roads," Pearce said.

Greg Brown, public information officer for the city of Greenville, said public works employees were stockpiling salt and sand this morning in case the material is needed to be distributed on city thoroughfares.

"All the snow equipment is currently being checked and will be ready to go in case of a snow emergency," Brown said.

Mark Suggs, general manager of the Pitt & Greene Electric Membership Corporation, said, "We're bracing for snow and hoping we won't get it. And certainly

Snow Scatters Across The State

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Another wintry puff of snow blew into North Carolina today, prompting school officials to call off classes and law officers to warn drivers to stay off the roads.

The National Weather Service issued a winter storm warning for the North Carolina mountains and a winter storm watch from the Piedmont to the coast for tonight.

"The roads are treacherous and we've gotten three inches of snow so far and it's still snowing hard," said Deana Daniels, a dispatcher with the Avery County Sheriff's department today.

She said the many of the county's roads were covered with a layer of ice topped with snow. The temperature had fallen to 18 degrees and it was very windy, Ms. Daniels said.

"We're trying to get everybody stay in until the temperatures go up," Ms. Daniels said.

Between 10 and 15 storm-related accidents had been reported to the Avery County Sheriff's Department since 8:00 a.m. Ms. Daniels said none of them caused serious injuries.

"Mainly it's just been fender-benders with people sliding into each other," she said.

The weather service reported snow falling in Charlotte today with most exposed surfaces blanketed by 7:30 a.m. Police in Charlotte said the roads remained clear.

But the state patrol office in Asheville was besieged by calls following traffic accidents due to slick roads.

"We're having snow and the roads are snow and ice covered," said a dispatcher at the Asheville office of the Highway Patrol who did not give her name.

The National Weather Service reported that snow had accumulated to one-half inch to two inches in the northern Piedmont and northern foothills.

The snow was sparked by the combination of the moisture from a low pressure system just off the North Carolina coast and cold air from a high pressure system, said Ruth Aiken, a meteorologist with the weather service in Raleigh.

"The combination of the cold air and the moisture is causing the precipitation," Aiken said.

Accumulations of four to six inches were expected in the mountains with between one and two inches expected in the Piedmont by this afternoon, the weather service said.

Feds To Aid Banks In S&L Takeovers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan said today the Fed will make it easier for bank holding companies to buy troubled savings and loans, and he suggested that a specialized thrift industry may not be needed in the future.

Greenspan, in testimony submitted to the Senate Banking Committee, also said the Fed has made arrangements to support the Federal Home Loan Bank system in the event of runs on S&Ls.

The committee was holding its second day of hearings on President Bush's plan to rescue the ailing industry by selling $50 billion in bonds to raise the money to close insolvent institutions.

Some analysts have said the president's plan won't provide enough money, but Greenspan said that "in our judgment, all things considered, the $50 billion should be adequate" to take care of 470 insolvent S&Ls.

Investment from outside the thrift industry, from banks and other firms, likely will be needed in order for the thrift industry to meet the new capital standards that the administration is proposing, analysts have said. Greenspan said "more than a majority of thrifts" that are not insolvent will be able to meet the new capital requirements.

Sullivan Says He Opposes Abortion

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Dr. Louis Sullivan, echoing the position of President Bush, told a hearing today on his nomination to be secretary of health and human services that he opposes abortion except in three circumstances.

"I am opposed to abortion, except when the life of the mother is threatened, or cases of rape or incest," Sullivan said in remarks prepared for delivery to the Senate Finance Committee.

Sullivan apologized to Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., for having "misspoken" when they discussed Sullivan's position on abortion last month.

"I support a human life amendment, embracing the exceptions just noted. Like President Bush, I would welcome a Supreme Court decision overturning Roe vs. Wade," the 1973 ruling that legalized abortion, he said.

Sullivan said that if confirmed as HHS secretary, he would work to encourage adoption and other alternatives to abortion.

ECU Profs Boost Plan For Mediation Center

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Folks mired in domestic disputes or other squabbles may benefit more from mediation than from traditional legal action, an East Carolina University sociology professor says.

"The traditional system has, many times, made a bad situation worse (in divorce cases)," said Marty Shultz, who came to ECU two years ago from Pennsylvania. "And I've become more and more convinced there is room for mediation in cases outside of the family." Shultz is one of two ECU professors coordinating the seven-member steering committee for a Pitt County Mediation Center, and the group is working to create a center in Greenville. If people are willing to bargain and compromise, advocates claim the centers give people a better opportunity to work out an agreement where everyone benefits.

There are already 15 mediation centers in North Carolina, and the agencies handle a wide variety of cases, from worthless checks to neighborhood spats to delicate domestic situations.

"Across the board, almost anything — somewhere in the U.S. — is being mediated," said Frank Laney of Raleigh, dispute resolution coordinator for the North Carolina Bar Association. "Most people are willing to at least come in and talk."

For example, if someone has had a problem with a neighborhood kid trampling flowers or damaging a fence, the mediation program may offer an attractive alternative to swearing out an arrest warrant, Laney said.

"You can do one of two things. You can have them arrested, or you can go to mediation and see if you can work it out with this third party neutral," he said.

Mediation may also help ease the case load of state courts.

"It sounds to me like it's got a lot of promise," Pitt County Public Defender Robert L. Shoffner Jr. said. "I've heard a little bit about it."

"I can certainly see where it would impact favorably in the civil courts. If there was any way it could be used to ease the burden of the (worthless checks) in criminal court, it would be great."

Pitt County District Attorney Tom Haigwood said that certain types of cases would be appropriate for mediation, but cases involving violence, numerous offenses or defendants with prior records would probably remain in criminal courts.

"I have an open mind about the matter. If it would help defer cases that ought to be handled in some non-court setting, I think there might be a place for it," he said. "Every case does not have a place in (the mediation program)."

Some neighborhood complaints may be successfully handled in mediation, Haigwood said, if both parties can agree to sit down and talk things out. Worthless checks would be handled by mediators only if the merchants agree to participate, he said, and the defendant

Ex-Teller Says Boss Made Sexual Moves

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A former teller at a First Citizens Bank and Trust Co. branch in Greenville testified for more than seven hours, saying sexual advances by a supervisor had left her with serious emotional scars and in need of psychiatric care.

"I'm a nervous wreck. I'm tired all the time, I can't concentrate, I have no self-confidence," Mary Denise Haughn testified Wednesday in Wake County Superior Court.

"My sexual relationship with my husband has suffered. I don't like to talk to men, and I don't want other men to talk to me."

Mrs. Haughn said she fled in tears after the supervisor grabbed her inside the bank's vault and tried to kiss her.

"He tried to put his tongue in my mouth twice, and he slobbered all over me," she said tearfully.

She said that when she resisted and began crying, he "just dropped me and turned around and walked out." Mrs. Haughn rushed to the bathroom and washed her mouth out with toothpaste, she said.

Mrs. Haughn is suing the bank and the supervisor, William C. Glidewell Jr., for what she says were three years of repeated sexual harassment by Glidewell, including several instances in which she said he had fondled her breasts and buttocks.

Glidewell says that he had never sexually harassed Mrs. Haughn.

Attorneys for First Citizens say that the bank did not know of any sexual misconduct and that Mrs. Haughn did not follow bank policy for reporting such incidents.

Danny McNally, the attorney for Glidewell, cited instances in which Mrs. Haughn had been placed on probation or had not been promoted while under Glidewell's supervision. He suggested that the setbacks had made Mrs. Haughn angry at Glidewell and were possibly a motive for her to fabricate her allegations.

Mrs. Haughn said she was not angry with Glidewell over the lost promotions.

White Is Elected Committee Leader

MURFREESBORO — Former state senator Vernon White of Pitt County has been elected chairman of the executive committee of the board of trustees of Chowan College, Murfreesboro.

At the recent meeting of the board, it was revealed that the $4 million Mission Excellence campaign had been exceeded by over $600,000. Based on that report, the board voted to extend the present campaign to a $5 million target to be reached by June 30.

Mission Excellence will provide funds for additional student aid-scholarships, endowment for teaching and administration, program development and the renovation of facilities.

Campaign chairman Robert Spivey of Windsor said reaching the extended $5 million goal would serve to further strengthen the college and provide additional financial aid for needy and deserving students.

In addition to White, trustees elected Thomas McCrary of Raleigh as chairman and Mrs. J. Grady Bridgers of Jackson as vice chairman of the board of trustees and elected Charles Revelle III of Murfreesboro vice chairman of the Executive Committee.

Attorney Says Greenville Men Had Nothing To Gain In Fire

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The owner and general manager of a Wilson tobacco warehouse that was destroyed by fire gained nothing from the blaze, defense attorneys for the two Pitt County men said.

Liberty Warehouse "wasn't the kind of thing ... that anybody would want to burn down," said James R. Van Camp of Pinehurst, Tommy Worthington's lawyer. "It was profitable. It was successful."

Defense attorneys told jurors that Tommy Worthington's cash-flow problems had nothing to do with the fire.

But a federal prosecutor said Wednesday that the fire was set to cover up cash-flow problems caused by the general manager's use of the business as his "own personal bank."

The statements came on the opening day of testimony in the trial of the Liberty Warehouse owner J.T. Worthington and his son, J.T. "Tommy" Worthington Jr., the general manager, both of Greenville. They have pleaded innocent to a 60-count indictment charging arson, conspiracy and mail, wire and bank fraud. A jury was seated Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Raleigh.

tobacco in the fire. Another insurance group, however, has refused to pay for the building.

Insurance proceeds were used to reopen the business in another warehouse, Van Camp said.

Van Camp and Trawick H. Stubbs Jr. of New Bern, representing the elder Worthington, also told jurors that the Worthingtons did not try to destroy documents relating to the advances and never tried to increase insurance coverage, indications that they had no advance knowledge of the fire.

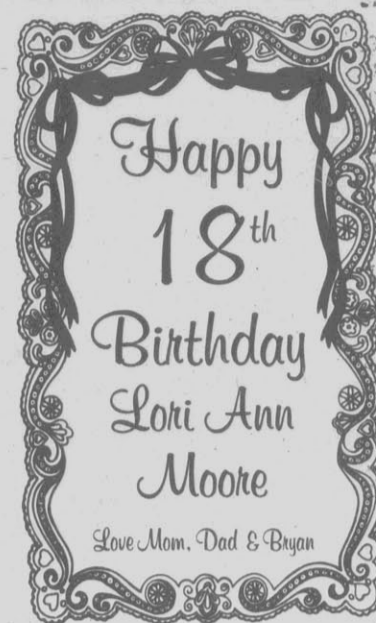

Another owner of the warehouse, Robert D. Oldham of Nashville, Tenn., has pleaded guilty to bank fraud. Oldham is expected to be a prosecution witness.

Two other Pitt County men, Edmund Wayne Hart and Ronnie Lee Stocks, have pleaded guilty to charges stemming from the warehouse fire and are expected to testify for the government.

Stocks, a resident of the Black Jack community, has told investigators that he was hired to burn the warehouse by Harvey Bowen, an Ayden businessman and the warehouse's largest customer. The government claims Bowen was acting at Tommy Worthington's behest. Bowen died in 1988 before he was indicted.

The government plans to play tape recordings of conversations between Tommy Worthington and Bowen. The recordings came from court-approved wiretaps at Bowen's office.

The two sides gave jurors conflicting previews of evidence to be presented in the trial.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Kieran Shanahan told jurors that the government would show that Tommy Worthington had "sucked" some $1.6 million out of the warehouse between 1980 and 1986, when it was destroyed. The money went into failing enterprises, including the Carolina Opry House, a nightclub in Greenville, and the Pirate's Chest, a convenience store, Shanahan said.

At the time of the fire, just after the peak of the tobacco season in October 1986, Tommy Worthington owed more than $500,000 to the warehouse, the prosecutor said.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Parallels

The Human Mind In Chains

There once was a charismatic, opportunistic leader who believed in his country. The man was intelligent. He was talented. He drew the support of millions of his peers with his patriotic goals.

He believed in a strong military backed by a vigorous economy. He inspired an already-industrious nation to new heights of productivity.

But he was a fanatic. He found a scapegoat on which to build his empire, a scapegoat whose name was race and whose face was religion. Once he found this scapegoat he espoused genocide. And his people followed him. They also followed him into war, a war whose worldwide wounds continue to ooze nearly half a century later.

The man's name was Adolph Hitler. If you're wondering why his story is being told today, think about the Ayatollah Khomeini of Iran.

He's not charismatic and his nation is not highly industrialized. He's old and his power is probably waning. But his intolerance and fanaticism parallel Hitler's and they are just as dangerous and just as offensive. His call for the cold-blooded murder of Salman Rushdie, the man who wrote a book the Ayatollah didn't like, is a call to arms against human rights. It is no less chilling than Hitler's Holocaust.

And that call should be treated with equal import by the western world whose values it affronts. It is the solemn responsibility of those nations who cherish human rights — of which free speech is one — to draw an indelible line of outrage against such odious extremism. They should take every step to ensure his rabid call goes unanswered.

While the West cannot expect the Ayatollah to appreciate the importance it places on human life and intellectual freedom, it can expect him to understand fear. If he hits, he will be hit back, whether with sanctions or severed relations. He must be made accountable for his offensive zeal. There is no other option.

Consider this: In 1933, Nazi Germany burned the books of Jews and, later, the Jews themselves. A reminder from the Ayatollah: first the books and then the writer.

The impulse to censor celebrates ignorance. Whether the censor is a mullah in the Middle East irritated over a book or a preacher in the United States offended by a movie ("The Last Temptation of Christ") what they have in common is the conviction that ideas are dangerous — and that only their own should be permitted. That is the core belief of the fanatic, whether it is the zealous anti-pornographer or the fascist.

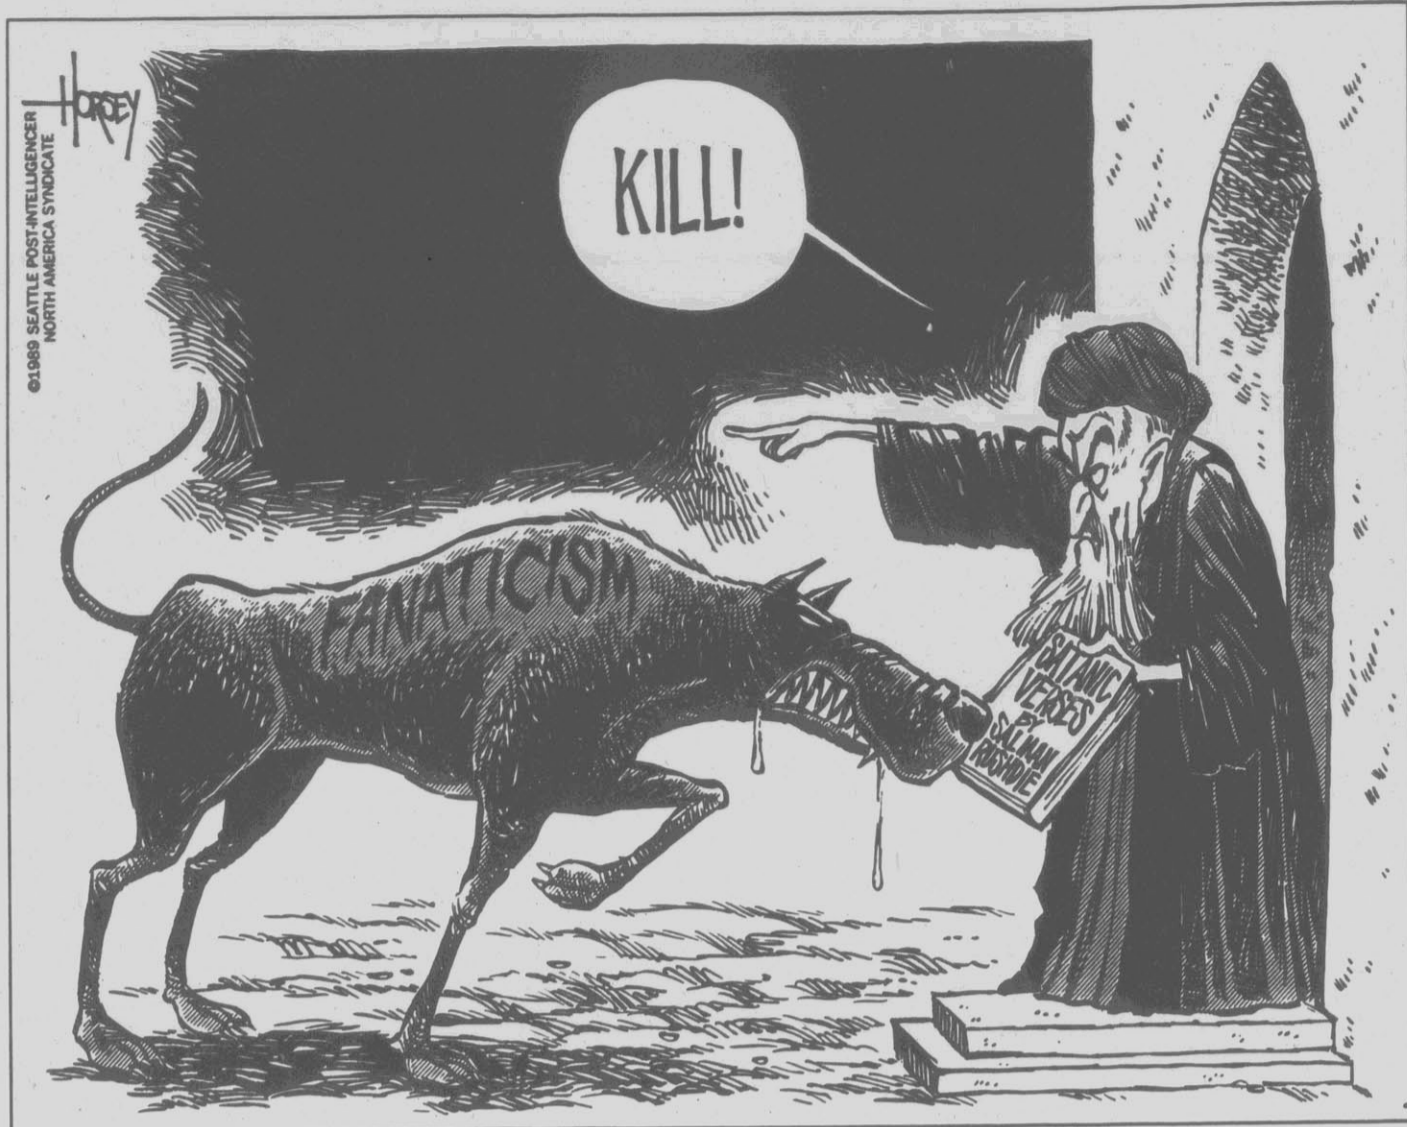

It is this belief that is an insult to civilization, to the values the West holds dear. The world has ceased killing authors for what they wrote — or so we thought. In 1498, Girolamo Savonarola, a political reformer, was burned in Florence, along with his writings. A century later, Giordano Bruno was burned in Rome by the Inquisition. In Europe bonfires were made of the Talmud.

It sounds absurd, doesn't it, in this sensible eastern North Carolina community, this religious leader half a world away calling for the murder of a man who wrote a book conflicting with the leader's religious views — and for the death of anyone having anything to do with such a book. Surely this can't be so serious as the Inquisition or Hitler's Nazi horrors.

But it is. Whether or not the commanded bullet pierces Rushdie's bones, one of the most basic human rights has been put in peril.

Khomeini's chillingly cold assertion of murder should touch a deep chord, for the mullah's cry goes far beyond censorship. It is a cry for assassination of liberty and tolerance and free exchange ideas.

That amounts to placing the human mind and condition in chains — as unthinkable a circumstance as were Hitler's atrocities.

Public Forum

To the editor:

A pattern of widespread human rights violations in rural areas of Brazil has been documented by Amnesty International. Over a period of years there have been persistent reports of assaults on and killings of peasants, Indians, their leaders and advisers — lawyers, priests, nuns and trade unionists — in the context of land litigation or labor disputes.

Hundreds of victims have been deliberately killed by gunmen hired by landowners. These killers and their contractors generally operate with complete impunity due to the fact that the Brazilian local and state authorities persistently fail to take effective action to investigate the killings or to bring those responsible for organizing them to justice.

Hundreds of peasants and Indians have also been the victims of arbitrary detention, ill treatment or torture in campaigns of intimidation and harassment aimed at displacing the victims from the land they occupy. Military and civilian police have regularly taken part in these human rights violations as well as in violent land eviction, some of which have not been authorized by a judge.

Amnesty International has launched a campaign to persuade authorities to put a stop to these practices, to bring hired killers to justice and to protect those Brazilians who work to promote human rights and the welfare of the powerless. The Greenville chapter of Amnesty International discussed this situation at a recent meeting and wrote letters to those responsible in Brazil.

Everyone is invited to attend Amnesty meetings held at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, 401 E. Fourth Street the fourth Wednesday of each month at 8 p.m. Come prepared to write a letter.

To the editor:

In response to your editorial Feb. 13 on the lottery for North Carolina, I believe you would do well to rethink your position.

First, if you look at it as a tax, regardless of economic class, it is voluntary on everyone's part. People are prone to waste a few dollars. Why not let it be on something they enjoy.

Secondly, at a time when so many good leaders are trying to bring money into the state, more and more of our money is going to the states who already have a lottery. Face it, the lottery is a political hot potato, with many politicians favoring it but afraid to vote for it.

Last, the main reason I see for the lottery is the numbers racket. Many people who are insulated from the streets or have well-paying positions which keep them from associating with the common man, do not even realize that illegal rackets are run every day. If this tremendous amount of money is going to crooks and the drug trade, would not we be better off with a lottery used wisely?

A Potboiler Pitting Words Against Murder

BOSTON — It is peculiarly fitting that Salman Rushdie should have opened his novel with a terrorist fantasy. At the outset of "The Satanic Verses," two Indian-born men are tumbling 29,000 feet from a hijacked plane that breaks apart over England.

In the real world, the jumbo jet has become a most familiar and symbolic target. The flying cocoon that allows us to pass over the turmoil of the world sipping wine and watching movies has made an easy hit for those who want to reach around the world and explode our sense of security.

Now Rushdie himself is a target for one of the great "isms" of the world that has rationalized its beliefs into terror-ism. The theocrat of Iran has sent a message across borders and cultures. He has put out a contract for the murder of the novelist as retribution for the crime of blasphemy. The leaders of Western Europe have responded by closing embassies, outposts of their civilizations, saying they do not deal with hit men.

If Rushdie were not at the terrifying epicenter of this furor it is the sort of event he might write about, even create: An Islam-born author condemned by Muslims who haven't read his novel and, indeed, refuse to read it. Riots in Pakistan that threaten a Radcliffe- and Oxford-educated prime minister because she doesn't join the call to kill the author.

Ellen

There is more than a small irony to this most-talked-about, least-read novel. Rushdie's extravagant fantasy explores the conflicts between the values of belief and skepticism. He lays out the struggles between the comfort and rigidity of religious fanaticism, and the freedom and struggle of religious doubt.

"The Satanic Verses" wallows in just the kind of ambivalence that an author can explore only under the luxurious rules of tolerance. This ambivalence is, as well, the first victim of absolutists.

But the fine points of literary and cultural debate are lost in the current drama. It has become a much simpler story of life and death. Not a literary work but a potboiler starring a man of words threatened by an international gang of murderers. It's another moment when we see, crystal-clear, how vulnerable civilization is to violence, as vulnerable as the questing mind is to a bullet.

Our world is divided into haves and have-nots: Those who have and have not freedom of speech. Those who have and have not tolerance. Those who have and have not an abiding belief in the right to think for yourself.

The leaders of Iran are not the only ones who regard an open mind as a festering sore. We have had our own running arguments with those who define skeptics as heretics. There are more than a few Americans who would defend The Book by banning books. Ask about them at the library or the school board meeting.

Those who led the charge against the American film, "The Last Temptation of Christ," were no less certain than the Ayatollah that their religion had been slandered. Nor were they more likely to have seen the movie than the rioters were to have read the book. But our laws and tradition protect the right to doubt in public, to air our imaginings, to question everything out loud.

How do we protect those cool rights in a world full of passionate beliefs? How do we defend the right to doubt when it is attacked by murderous, even suicidal, certainties? How do we protect civilization against its discontents. We've struggled with this issue on foreign Tarmacs and airports and Lebanese apartments.

This is one of those moments of consensus about what is important to us. Salman Rushdie wrote extravagantly about the cultural cross-fire of his life and then got caught in the real thing. As the target of fanaticism, he is making Western countries stand up with certainty for the right to doubt.

There is a moment in the novel when one of Rushdie's characters mimics the voice of the Ayatollah: "...If I was God, I'd cut the imagination right out of people." In that attempt, Iran has ignited a rare international incident in defense of something the West holds sacred: the freedom to imagine.

County Governments Haven't Been Playing Fairly

Paul
O'Connor

RALEIGH — If there is one thing that will scuttle efforts to move greater control of public schools to local authorities it is the practice of cutting local spending for schools as state money arrives. As the General Assembly debates whether the Basic Education Plan will be fully funded this year, and whether the state will loosen the strings it attaches to that money, there is evidence that county governments have not been playing fairly with the state.

A report prepared for Rep. David Diamond, D-Surry, House Appropriations Committee chairman, shows that county governments have failed to hire much of the new secretarial help for schools that the BEP provides. But the counties have taken the money the state has provided for those positions.

The BEP called for the hiring of 1,702 new secretaries and clerks during 1987 and 1988. But, according to the report prepared for Diamond, only 1,014 new secretarial positions were filled during this time. Counties have taken the funding for the other secretarial positions and used it to pay secretaries and clerks who were already being paid with local funds. That freed up local funds for any of a number of different purposes.

"As you'll see, in a fairly high number of instances, new BEP secretarial positions simply replaced secretarial positions that were previously funded by the county," wrote John Dornan, executive director of the N.C. Public School Forum, in a letter to Diamond. "So, what appears to be a fairly substantial gain in clerical positions ends up being far less than one would imagine."

The BEP includes secretarial help because the legislature felt that teachers and principals are often swamped with clerical duties. By providing secretarial help, the legislature hoped to free teachers and principals for the work they are hired to do.

Diamond wasn't pleased with the report. "Lots of times, we do things up here and we think that we solve the problems. But then we get home and find we didn't solve the problems," he said.

He said that some small counties probably moved the money they saved on a secretary's salary into an area other than education. He hypothesized about a county that received extra secretarial funding while it also needed a new jail. So, the county puts its one school secretary on the state payroll, takes him or her off the local payroll and uses the money it saves to help pay for the jail. Thus, the BEP is helping to build jails.

Sen. Richard Conder, D-Rockingham, a former county commissioner who often argues their side in the legislature, was upset when shown the report. "We were distinctly told (when approving the BEP) that there would be no supplanting," he said in reference to the practice of supplanting local education spending with state money.

All during the school facilities debates of the early and mid-1980s, the issue of supplanting local funds was a main point of contention between legislators and local government representatives. Legislators feel that local governments often cut their commitment to education when the legislature increases state spending.

Donan's report applied only to clerical help. But he indicated that he suspects that counties have done the same with teachers and their aides.

Sandbagging and bulkheading has failed to protect sections of the Kill Devil Hills shoreline from erosion. A recent northeaster displaced sand in vertical scarpments just a few feet from the base of this ocean-side hotel complex.

Coastal Resorts Reporting Record Demand For Rentals

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Northeasters worried about a repeat of pollution that closed their beaches last summer have fueled a record demand for rental cottages at Virginia and North Carolina beaches, real estate agents say.

"Our reservations are already up about 20 percent, and most are from the New York-New Jersey area," said Jean F. Siebert, co-owner of Siebert Realty in Virginia Beach.

Increases of 25 percent to 40 percent in advance bookings are being reported by several realty companies on North Carolina's Outer Banks, said Janice Myers, a spokeswoman for the Dare County Board of Realtors.

"Our oceanfront cottages are already booked for the summer" and cottages on the ocean road are filling rapidly said Janice Farr, property manager for Sun Realty's rental office in Kill Devil Hills, N.C. "We usually don't feel that sort of rush until after the weather warms up."

The heaviest demand is from the urban Northeast, she said.

Beaches in New Jersey and New York were closed in July because sewage and medical waste had washed ashore. To avoid a repeat of the season that cost the area tourist industry millions of dollars, New Jersey and New York City officials have used prison inmates to remove beach debris through the winter.

But real estate agents in Virginia and North Carolina say their callers fear the Northeastern beaches will be closed again this summer.

"A lot of people just lost their vacations last year," said James Moseley, a sales representative with Outer Banks Ltd.'s rental office in Nags Head. "This year they're coming here."

Most real estate agents in the Outer Banks increased their weekly rental prices about 10 percent this year, but that hasn't slowed demand, they said.

Summer and fall bookings by Outer Banks Ltd. have increased 25 percent over 1988, which was a peak year, said James W. Crabtree, a partner in the company and rental manager.

"We had a lot of people come here for the first time last year," he said. "I think we offer a better accommodation down here for the same money. They went back and told their friends."

Panel Suggests $80 Million Program For Mentally Ill

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A report released by a legislative commission calls for $80 million in new services for severely mentally ill people living across the state in rest homes, shelters for the homeless, rooming houses or with their families.

Mental health workers and advocates say they hope that the study will help them pry scarce dollars from the legislature during what is expected to be a tight budget session.

A bill introduced in the General Assembly Wednesday asks for $10 million in this biennium. Another bill, to be introduced later in the session, will call for an increase in money for the poorest local mental authorities.

"If the state of North Carolina can come up with $20 billion for highways ... it's time we do something for mental health," said Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, who was the chairman of one of the subcommittees of the Mental Health Study Commission.

The report, which was released Wednesday after a year of study and three public hearings, was endorsed by the state's leading advocacy groups at a press conference yesterday.

"It is historic because it distinguishes mental health consumers disabled by serious mental illness from those (who simply have) problems of living and establishes the severely and persistently mentally ill population as a priority population for the next several years," said John F. Baggett, the director of the Alliance for the Mentally Ill.

Its 110 pages of goals, strategies and recommendations are expected to shape the growth of community services to schizophrenics, manic-depressives and other severely mentally ill people.

"Members of the commission said that the recommendations were purposely vague to give local mental health authorities flexibility in deciding what services they need."

The report also calls for additional money for the 600 or 700 state prison inmates estimated to have severe mental illnesses. It proposes legislation that will prohibit discrimination against mentally ill people who have been denied health insurance. And it suggests that patients and their families be appointed to local mental health boards and other bodies, a recommendation that was praised by the advisory groups.

Twenty years ago, the state-run mental hospitals began sending patients who were not dangerous to themselves or others home to their families and communities. Mental health workers felt that patients stood a better chance of recovery out of the hospitals.

In effect, the study is a statement that the community services required to make that movement work were never developed.

"I think this plan in one sense is 15 to 20 years later than it should have been," Baggett said.

"This is kind of a coming of age, almost, for mental health," said Donald E. Taylor, director of the state division that oversees those programs.

Researchers at Duke University estimate that North Carolina's severely mentally ill population is 84,000. The report says that less than a third of these people receive any services from their local mental health authorities.

Advocates said the $80 million would be divided among the following types of service:

- Case management: Mental health workers to help with such seemingly mundane matters as assisting a patient to grocery shop, pay his bills, keep a clinic appointment and to arrange for emergency hospitalization if necessary.
- Crisis services: Emergency hospitalization and counseling to help keep a patient out of state hospitals when delusions and other extreme symptoms of his illness return.

Auto Dealers Protest Plan To Boost Title Change Tax

By John Fleisher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Supporters hope the proposed $8.6 billion highway building program can be put on a fast track for legislative approval, but automobile dealers want to put on the brakes while they contest a key provision.

Although bills to implement the massive program might not be introduced for several days, sponsors said Wednesday they hope a wave of endorsements from leaders in both parties — including Gov. Jim Martin and top Democratic lawmakers — will smooth its path.

Sponsors say enacting the bill by then would allow the tax provisions to take effect with the beginning of the new fiscal year July 1. They said they will try to keep the plan mostly intact as developed by the Highway Study Commission.

"I would hope we've had enough of a consensus and enough support that there would not be any big effort to make major changes," said Sen. Bill Goldston, D-Rockingham, the commission co-chairman.

But automobile dealers vowed to fight the 2 percent title transfer fee that would generate the bulk of the program's revenue: $5.6 billion over 12 years. The other $3 billion would come from a 5 1/4 cents-per-gallon increase in the gasoline tax.

"We are absolutely opposed to the 2 percent title transfer fee," said Wade Isaacs, executive vice president of the North Carolina Automobile Dealers Association. "It's excessive. There's no question it would be very damaging to sales."

Isaac's group represents 750 new car and truck dealers.

Also lining up against the fee is the Carolinas Independent Automobile Dealers Association, representing 400 used car dealers in North Carolina. Executive Director Mike Lynn said he expects consumers to rise up in anger when they realize the bill would boost the fee from $5 to $300 for a $15,000 car.

"You're taking about a thousands of percent increase," Lynn said. "This is money the consumer will have to come up with. The banks will not consider it part of the financing package, so it'll have to be structured into the down payment."

Isaac said his association would "reluctantly" accept a 1 percent fee, an option that Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, the other study commission co-chairman.

But Goldston said the 2 percent fee was necessary to keep the gasoline tax increase at an acceptable level

Weather Hearing Scheduled

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM — New technology and better communications are needed by the National Weather Service to warn Americans about severe storms, a North Carolina State University meteorology professor says.

Charles Anderson, a severe-storm expert, is one of several Triangle-area residents and officials invited to testify March 3 at a congressional hearing in Raleigh about the National Weather Service's severe-weather warning system.

Congressmen Tim Valentine and David Price will be in Raleigh for the hearing, sparked by complaints about the lack of warning on Nov. 28, when a tornado ripped through Wake, Franklin and Nash counties, killing four people, injuring 157 others and causing an estimated $100 million property damage.

According to Valentine's office, the Raleigh-Durham weather radar was out of commission when the early-morning storm occurred.

However, some experts, including Anderson, have questioned whether a functioning radar would have been able to provide adequate warning.

Anderson said Wednesday the hearing should concentrate not just on problems at Raleigh-Durham International Airport radar, but on the entire system now in place to issue warnings of severe weather.

and raise enough money to fund the ambitious road-building program, which supporters call the biggest in state history.

"What do you think about 9 cents a gallon? That's what you get if you go to 1 percent," Goldston said. "And then you'd have to go higher and higher to keep up with inflation. This is one time ... we want to have a road plan and not have to come back to the citizens for more money every two years."

House Speaker Joe Mavretic said there was room for maneuvering on the tax and fee combination without jeopardizing the April 15 target date.

"I think that will get worked out fairly quickly," Mavretic said.

The plan will undergo scrutiny by up to six House subcommittees and committees and three Senate committees.

Members of the House Infrastructure Committee received a preliminary briefing Wednesday. The chairman, Rep. Sam Hunt, D-Alamance, said he didn't think the lengthy committee gauntlet the bill must run will harm its prospects. On the contrary, he said, the process should generate additional support.

"There's nothing in (the plan) that can't be changed," Hunt said, "but there's nothing on there that won't take some doing to change."

The program is designed to create an "intrastate" network of four-lane highways, pay for "loop" highways around major urban centers and pave all state-maintained secondary roads.

House Hearing Draws Emotional Testimony On Abortion Bill

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A woman who underwent an abortion at age 16 told a House subcommittee she is grateful for the support her mother gave during the ordeal, but other witnesses said not all parents are so understanding.

The bitterly contested issue of whether minors should be denied abortions unless their parents approve surfaced anew Wednesday. The House Judiciary Subcommittee on Courts and Administrative Hearings heard from both sides and will vote next week after more testimony, according to chairman Rep. Charles Cromer, R-Davidson.

Cynthia Shang, a Durham resident, said when she was 15 a friend became pregnant and sought her advice. Ms. Shang said she repeatedly urged the girl to tell her parents although the girl said her father would "kill" her.

"I thought that all the families were like mine," she said. "My parents were very supportive of me and still are. So a week went by and I continued to pressure her to tell her parents."

But Ms. Shang said one morning, she opened her front door and found her friend on the porch, her body covered with bruises and scratches. "She told me, 'I told you my dad would kill me,'" Ms. Shang said tearfully.

"Those girls who know ... that they can't talk to their parents should not be forced to. What happened to her never should have happened. And I still hold a small amount of guilt for what happened. I don't feel that a law forcing these girls to tell their parents would help them at all."

But Nancy Bell of Wilmington, who had an abortion at 16, said she had tried to keep her pregnancy secret to avoid upsetting her mother.

Eventually her mother found out and, despite her anger and disappointment, provided crucial support, Mrs. Bell said. She accompanied her daughter to a pediatrician and later to the abortion clinic.

"I'm a parent now, and I have two daughters and another baby on the way. And I think about my children going through what I did. My reaction if my unmarried child got pregnant — some anger, but mostly sadness and concern. I would want to know," Mrs. Bell said.

"I feel very strongly that my guilt was lessened because my mom shared this responsibility with me. By not insisting on parental consent, we are fostering a lack of trust between parent and child, as well as dishonesty and sneaking."

The issue has raged in the General Assembly for five years. Bills to require minors to get parental permission for an abortion were approved by the House in 1985 and 1987 but were bottled up in the Senate.

With the House's more conservative bent, the bill's prospects there are regarded as favorable. The situation in the Senate is less clear, Cromer said.

The bill would allow waivers for girls who convince a judge they are mature enough to make the decision on their own, that it would be in their best interest not to involve their parents, or that they were incest victims.

Exceptions also would be granted in medical emergencies that require immediate abortion.

Dr. Mary Vernon, a Duke Medical Center pediatrician, told the subcommittee she works with young pregnant girls and that most of them involve their parents anyway. Those who don't want to will find a way around it, she said, such as going out of state.

Dr. Edward Halperin of Duke Medical Center, speaking on behalf of the North Carolina Medical Society, said published data shows that 40 percent to 60 percent of pregnant minors inform one or both parents. The numbers are the same regardless of whether the state has a parental-consent law, he said.

Medical data also shows that parental-consent requirements do not reduce teen pregnancy or the abortion rate, Halperin said.

But Dr. Watson A. Bowest Jr., an obstetrician with the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill School of Medicine, said it was a fundamental medical principle that parents are involved in decisions about surgical procedures performed on minors.

Rep. Skip Stam, R-Wake, the bill's sponsor, said the U.S. Supreme Court has upheld the constitutionality of other states' parental-consent statutes.

Panel OKs Four-Year Terms, Veto

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A partisan scuffle could be brewing over fears that a balance of power in government may come at the expense of the Republican Party.

The Senate Constitutional Amendments Committee Wednesday easily approved proposals to make North Carolina the 50th state with gubernatorial veto and the 40th state with four-year legislative terms. But elections for the four-year terms would be held in non-presidential years, stripping the GOP of coattails that recently swept them into statewide office.

And the longer terms would begin before legislative maps are redrawn to accommodate the 1990 U.S. Census — an action that will likely result in more Republican majority legislative districts.

"There's going to be some dissent from the Republican Party, that's for sure," said Sen. Jim Ezzell, D-Nash, committee chairman.

Sen. Betsy Cochrane, R-Davie, said she was concerned.

"I'm just not sure that that facet of this issue has been appropriately evaluated," Ms. Cochrane said. "Obviously that is troublesome for us."

Sen. George Daniel, D-Caswell, who sponsored the four-year term bill, denied any partisan motives. He said more attention will be paid to candidates of both parties in non-presidential years. And he said the new terms should coincide with the governor's veto powers to balance power.

"Certainly, there's always an argument on both sides that as long as the Republicans hold the national offices like the president and vice president, certainly they look to have a coattail effect," he said.

Sen. Bill Barker, D-Pamlico, agreed that when a presidential candidate wins by 10 percentage points or more, it helps the whole ticket.

"I think the people of North Carolina ought to be insulated from that coattail effect, no matter who that candidate is," he said. But he added that Republicans apparently are "confident we're going to keep shooting ourselves in the foot."

Daniel told the committee longer terms could cut down on campaign expenses.

"If you're only having to go back and ask for contributions to assist in your race every four years, as opposed to every two years, it just seems to me to be simple mathematics it's going to cut down on campaign costs," he said.

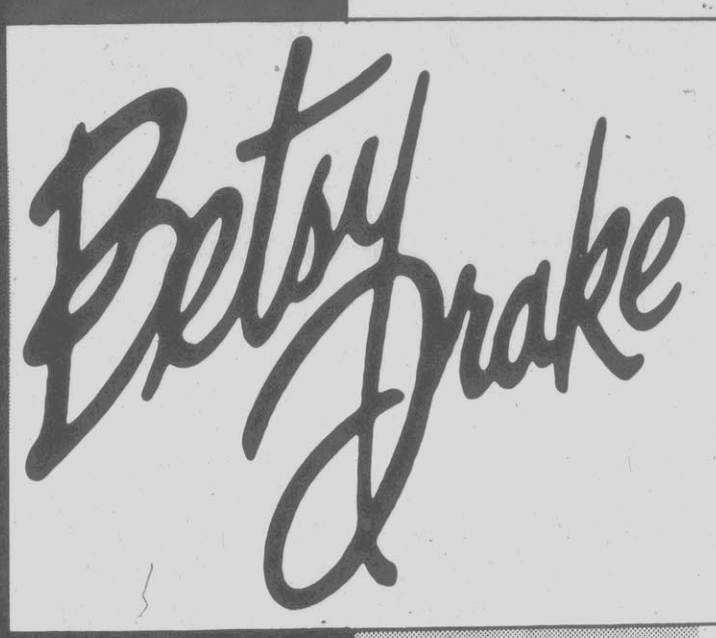

Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, was among three members who said they have changed their minds about the four-year terms since it was defeated by voters in 1982. He said longer terms would have many benefits.

"The pressure of special interest groups, I think, is much more intense because of the constant elections," he said, adding that the change would make statewide office more attractive to better candidates.

IN THE STATE

March Planned

WILMINGTON (AP) — The State Bureau of Investigation is looking into the shooting death of a Wilmington man by a city narcotics detective — a death that has prompted the Southern Christian Leadership Conference to schedule a rally Friday.

John Jones, 38, was shot in the back of the head Feb. 9 by Det. Ed Gibson while Jones was in his truck at a street corner, according to SBI reports. Details of the shooting were withheld until SBI agents send their findings to the district attorney's office.

King Gardner, an SCLC field secretary, has been organizing a 7 p.m. rally Friday at the International Longshoreman's Union hall and a 2 p.m. "solidarity march" Saturday.

widow have already been convicted of murder.

The arrests of Angela Mills, 20, and John Enloe, 34, an inmate at the Davie County correctional facility, are expected to close the case in the October 1984 murder of Lance Cpl. Joel Long, authorities said.

Larry Watson and Candie Long, who was married to the Marine when he was killed, have already been found guilty of taking part in the murder.

Enloe was charged with first-degree murder and conspiracy to commit murder. He was transferred to Craven County jail Tuesday and is being held without bond. Enloe is the cousin of Watson, who last October pleaded guilty to second-degree murder in Long's death.

Hazing Incident

DURHAM (AP) — Two North Carolina Central University students received medical attention this week after a hazing incident by a fraternity, authorities said.

The Tau Psi chapter of Omega Psi Phi fraternity and the members involved were suspended from campus Monday pending an on-campus investigation, NCCU spokesman David Witherspoon said.

One student was admitted to Durham County General Hospital early Monday complaining of dizziness and low blood pressure, Witherspoon said. Hospital records show Paul Woodson, sophomore class president, was at that hospital from Monday morning until his release Tuesday morning.

A second student had a nose injury and was taken to the student infirmary for treatment, Witherspoon said. Hospital records show C. Payne Lucas was treated and released early Monday.

Witherspoon declined to elaborate on the activities of the pledge class. He said he did not know the number of pledges or fraternity members involved.

Retirement

RALEIGH (AP) — Wake County school Superintendent Robert Bridges said Wednesday he would retire as head of the county's 61,000-student system on June 30, reversing a decision he made last fall to accept a two-year extension of his contract.

Bridges, 55, said his decision was based on his feeling that the school system needs a new leader.

Bridges has worked in the system 28 years.

Bridges is the third superintendent in the Triangle to leave in the past year. Others are Larry Coble, superintendent in Durham County, and Cleveland Hammonds Jr., former superintendent of Durham City Schools.

Shooting

BURLINGTON (AP) — Charges against a Burlington man accused of shooting a 12-year-old boy after the youth allegedly threw a snowball at him Sunday have been dropped and the local district attorney said the charges were falsified by the boys involved.

Travis Jones, 12, of Burlington apparently was shot while he and two other boys played with a handgun, Steve Balog said.

The boys made up the story accusing Mark Yellock, 19, of Burlington of shooting Jones, Balog said. Yellock was charged Sunday afternoon with assault and was released on bond Tuesday.

Balog said he will charge Jones, Willie Graham Downey, 14, and Timmy Taborn with making a false police report.

Volunteers

DOBSON, N.C. (AP) — Clearing the streets of Dobson of its 8-inch blanket of snow last weekend cost less than $27. And that was for gas.

The town paid nothing for the labor, thanks to Kermit Draughn, a town commissioner, and Todd Dockery, a college student who lives in Dobson. Together they ran the town's snow plow for free, working all night Friday and about five hours during the day Saturday.

The town bought a dump truck and a plow last summer for about $4,300. Town Manager J. Wayne Atkins said. Last weekend was the first time that the snowplow has been used.

Draughn has been a member of Dobson's volunteer fire department for 37 years, 22 as chief.

Sentenced

NASHVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Nash County man was sentenced to 50 years in prison this week in Nash County Superior Court after he pleaded guilty to second-degree murder.

William Winstead, 41, of Nashville, was charged last July with shooting his wife, Joyce Winstead, also 41, with a 12-gauge shotgun at close range.

Sharpsburg police charged Winstead with first-degree murder when they apprehended him in a field after responding to a domestic call at his residence.

Dog Deaths

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — The deaths of 17 dogs in a rural neighborhood near Burlington has puzzled both owners and veterinarians, who don't know yet what caused the animals to die.

State and county officials started looking into the dog deaths last month. They interviewed dog owners, took stream samples and talked to farmers about their use of pesticides and herbicides.

But a month later, they say they still don't know what killed the animals.

J.C. Brown, a Burlington veterinarian who treated two of Jennifer Helton's dogs, said Wednesday he suspects poisoning — either accidental or intentional. Brown and a state veterinarian performed animal autopsies, or necropsies, on the two dogs in December.

In both cases, they found the dogs had suffered heavy bleeding in the lungs.

WWII Letter Finally Reaches Goal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Neither time, nor missing records, nor an addressee named Smith, nor lack of a ZIP code could stop the final two letters in a sack of World War II mail from reaching their destination.

The two letters from Sgt. Clarence F. Smith were delivered Wednesday to his brother, Norman T. Smith of Hendersong, Md., in a ceremony marking completion of the deliveries. Clarence Smith, a tailgunner killed in action over Italy, had written the letters to his mother and a friend.

The letters were the last of 235 pieces of wartime mail to be delivered after their discovery in an attic in Raleigh, N.C., in 1986.

The Postal Service spent 30 months tracking down the servicemen or their relatives to deliver the letters.

"Thanks to the efforts of many caring people — veterans, reporters and postal employees at all levels — we were able to find Sergeant Smith's brother and to return these last letters from World War II," Postmaster General Anthony M. Frank said at the Washington ceremony.

Smith's letters and those from 91 other servicemen were discovered in an old Army duffel bag in the attic of an elderly North Carolina woman's home by an exterminator.

The bag had been hidden by the woman's nephew and contained letters written in May 1944 by GIs bound for Algeria aboard the troop ship Caleb Strong, the Postal Service said. A homebound serviceman had promised to mail the letters for his shipmates but never did.

Smith's letters were the hardest to deliver, the Postal Service said, because Smith is such a common name, they did not have his full name, and some of his military records apparently had been destroyed in a fire at the Federal Records Center in St. Louis.

Another veteran, Pierre J.J. Kennedy of the 781st Bomb Squadron Association, who was asked to assist, located information about Smith through the National Archives' listings of missing air crew reports from World War II.

He found that Smith was a tailgunner on a B-17 Flying Fortress bomber who was shot down and killed in action on a mission over Verona, Italy, on July 6, 1944. He located Smith's mother's old address in Philadelphia and through neighbors learned of Smith's brother.

Southern Baptists Plan Their Own Lobbying Unit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Southern Baptist leaders have voted to establish a conservative lobbying effort called the Religious Liberty Commission despite objections about the plan's cost and concerns it may appear vindictive.

The plan means the Southern Baptist Convention would shift most of its funding away from the Baptist Joint Committee for Public Affairs, a church lobby whose stand against school prayer and other issues has been criticized by conservatives.

The plan must still be approved at two consecutive national meetings of the denomination, meaning it cannot go into effect before next year.

The Rev. Keith Parks, head of the SBC Foreign Mission Board, warned that the denomination's influence on national legislation would be reduced if it breaks away from its traditional coalition with other Baptists.

"We think Southern Baptists are pretty big stuff, but I don't think folks in Washington think that," Parks cautioned the Executive Committee before the vote Tuesday. "And it looks like we're not cooperative with other Baptists, much less other denominations."

State Baptist conventions, local churches and moderate church organizations will pledge money to fill the void likely to be left by the SBC, said James Dunn, director of the Baptist Joint Committee.

"We'll get more than enough money to make up for the cuts," he said.

Southern Baptists provide almost 80 percent of the agency's $650,000 budget. But conservatives say it is unfair that the SBC controls fewer than 50 percent of the seats on the Baptist Joint Committee trustee board.

Eight other Baptist groups are members of the BJC.

The Religious Liberty Commission is designed to give the SBC a greater voice on church-state separation issues.

Officials estimated it will take some $600,000 to set up a new agency, which some argued is too much at a time when the denomination is in a financial crunch.

Women's Caucus Lists Legislative Priorities

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Women's Legislative Agenda on Wednesday issued 32 recommendations to address women's concerns in the General Assembly.

"Gender discrimination continues to take a heavy toll on the economic and physical well-being of women and their families," said Anne Mackie, executive director of the agenda, in a news conference.

"The thousand women engaged in preparing this report believe we must fund more teen pregnancy and prematurity prevention programs, and that elder women, divorced and single women, young families searching for adequate day care services, victims of sexual assault and family violence and poor women and their children all urgently need expanded services," she said.

Priority issues named in the report include income and basic needs, violence against women, elder women's needs, inadequate day care, discrimination against divorced and single-parent families, job training and education and problem pregnancy.

Rep. Ruth Easterling, D-Mecklenburg, who chairs the women's legislative caucus, said the recommendations all had 80 percent or greater support from members of the agenda. While there was no recommendation on the issue of state funding of abortions for poor women, Ms. Mackie said there was "significant support" for maintaining that fund.

Ms. Easterling said legislators would look for issues on which they could build a consensus in order the pass better laws. Such issues include day-care reforms, curbing domestic violence and child abuse and improving child support, she said.

FBI Report Expected

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — An FBI investigation of an agent's drunken-driving accident in Winston-Salem is expected to be finished soon, according to the supervisor of FBI operations in North Carolina.

"There's a lot of pressure to get it completed and get it in... It'll be complete," said Paul V. Daly, the special agent in charge of the state's FBI offices.

The investigation began after Robert Joseph Drdak, a 42-year-old FBI agent, ran into a tree in Winston-Salem on Feb. 14. Confidential hospital documents obtained by the Winston-Salem Journal this week show that Drdak's blood-alcohol content that night was well above the legal limit when he was brought to Forsyth Memorial Hospital.

Paul M. Wiles, the president of Carolina Medicorp, which owns the hospital, verified the authenticity of the documents.

No charges have been filed. The Winston-Salem Police Department and the Forsyth County Sheriff's Department are continuing their investigation.

PTL Funding Still Short

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORT MILL, S.C. — Heritage Ministries, the evangelical remains of the collapsed PTL ministry, says it needs half a million dollars in donations by March 1 to prevent the cable network from falling apart.

Heritage Ministries President Sam

Johnson appealed to viewers of "Heritage Ministries Today" on Monday to preserve the ministry, which is based at the Christian retreat and theme park known as Heritage USA.

He said Heritage Ministries owes $492,600 to its 76 affiliate stations for air time.

Plant Allergies: A Year-Round Problem

Three native plants — poison ivy, poison oak, poison sumac — cause allergic reactions in half of all Americans. The leaves, stems, berries, bark, and roots contain urushiol, a chemical which produces allergic reactions.

Cases of plant allergy occur most often during warm weather when people are outdoors. But reactions can develop in the winter because urushiol is present in dead or decaying plants, and it can remain potent for at least a year on tools or camping gear. To prevent a reaction or to lessen its severity, wash the exposed skin within five minutes of contact and clean clothing, pets, tools, and outdoor gear that might have touched these plants.

The symptoms of plant allergies usually appear within hours after exposure, but they may not appear for several days. Symptoms include a rash characterized by redness, blisters, burning, swelling, and itching. Headache and fever also may occur.

A variety of nonprescription medicines are available for relief of plant allergy symptoms. Hydrocortisone preparations applied to the skin help relieve itching and redness. Antihistamines taken by mouth may reduce itching.

David Duke takes the oath of office as a member of the Louisiana House of Representatives

Black Says Former Klan Chief Under Close Scrutiny

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BATON ROUGE, La. — State Rep. David Duke, the former Ku Klux Klan leader elected to the Louisiana Legislature, promised to concentrate on the state's financial problems now that efforts to bar him from office have failed.

But at his inaugural session of the state House of Representatives on Wednesday, Duke heard warnings from black lawmakers that he will be under close scrutiny.

"I'm here to put you on notice that not only black folks here in Louisiana, but black folks all over the country will be watching you," said Rep. Diana Bajoe of New Orleans.

"We are resolved and committed to make sure that racism will not become the order of the day," Rep. C.D. Jones of Monroe.

Two black legislators walked out as Duke was sworn in.

Duke, 38, a former grand wizard of the Klan, left the group in 1980 but remains president of the National Association for the Advancement of White People, which he describes as a civil rights group for everyone.

He beamed and waved before taking the oath of office, administered by House Speaker Jim Dimos, to represent a suburban New Orleans district that is 99.6 percent white.

"I want to allay fears that I will be divisive or a problem in this great body," Duke told his new colleagues. "I truly believe when we took the pledge of allegiance this morning and we said justice for all, I believe in that for America."

Duke was sworn in after the House turned aside a challenge on the grounds that he was not a legal resident of the district he represents. Earlier, state courts rejected a similar attempt to keep him out.

In remarks after his swearing in, Duke said, "I love this country and I love this state. And I'm anxious for the media to go away and to get down to solving Louisiana's problems."

Later in the day, Duke met with fellow members of the GOP legislative caucus to discuss changes in the state's tax system — the subject of the 15-day special legislative session that convened Wednesday.

Duke defeated fellow Republican John Treen in a special runoff election Saturday. Treen received the backing of President Bush and former President Ronald Reagan during the campaign.

Ethics Panel Calls For Officials To Eliminate Outside Incomes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush's ethics commission says top officials in all three branches of government should curtail their outside income, stop taking speaking fees, resign from corporate boards and disclose more of their personal finances.

In its third meeting, the eight-member panel on Wednesday tentatively backed some of the toughest new rules and laws it has suggested to date. If adopted, however, the recommendations would fall most heavily on Congress, because panel members repeatedly opted for applying already stiffer executive branch standards to all of government.

The commission's final recommendations are due on Bush's desk March 9.

The mood of the session was captured by chairman Malcolm R. Wilkey in a comment about banning corporate board memberships. Vice chairman Griffin Bell, the former attorney general, pointed out that judges have been allowed for 25 years to remain on the board of family-owned corporations.

Wilkey, former federal appellate judge, replied, "It has to be changed. A man just has to decide whether he wants to be a judge or not. That rule fit the ethos of 25 years ago but not now."

Both Wilkey and Bell recently persuaded Bush's chief ethics adviser, White House counsel C. Boyden Gray, to resign as board chairman of his family-owned communications company.

The panel agreed that senior officials of all three branches of government should be barred from accepting fees for speeches and articles whether or not they get a pay raise.

"The evil of honoraria is so great from the appearance of a conflict of interest," said Bell, in proposing a ban on the fees. "People wonder who's paying all these honoraria. It undermines confidence in government."

All eight members agreed, though they debated and decided against coupling this recommendation with backing for a pay raise.

Under enormous public pressure, Congress recently voted down 50 percent pay raises for the government's top officials. That recommendation from the Quadrennial Commission and President Reagan and Bush was coupled with a proposal that members of Congress stop taking honoraria.

Physicist Develops System To Warn Tornado Is Near

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JACKSON, Miss. — Residents of the nation's "tornado alleys" are most likely to witness a twister but they're often the least likely to heed a tornado warning. So a Mississippi inventor is developing a device that he says may better predict a direct hit.

University of Mississippi physics professor Henry Bass has invented a "tornado warning device" about the size of a smoke detector. He predicts that one day, few homeowners in the nation's tornado-prone areas will be without one.

His device, which is triggered by the freight train-type sound made by a tornado, would set off alarms within a half-mile radius of the funnel cloud. With a sensor mounted outside the home, it would pick up the tornado's sound — which may not be heard in a noisy house with blaring radios and television sets, or could be missed by sleeping residents.

"But why develop a device which would only give a homeowner about a 30-second warning of impending destruction when the National Weather Service often warns entire communities several minutes in advance?"

"Because many people ignore warnings unless they're very sure they will end up a victim, Bass replies. Better to give people a chance to dive under the bed or scurry down the basement steps, than to have no chance at all."

"Say a tornado is spotted and the (warning) siren goes off, the danger could be five blocks or five miles away," Bass says of the sirens activated by many cities whenever the weather service issues a tornado warning. "In the spring, after we've listened to four or five of these, you're really not going to climb under the bed anymore" and stay there as the sirens go off and on all day, perhaps for as long as a half-hour at a time.

He added that the device would be particularly useful for rural homeowners who don't live in areas with community weather sirens.

It also could prove a crucial back up for the weather service's radar and volunteer weather watchers, which don't always sight tornadoes in time to issue warnings.

For example, Bass notes, no warnings had been issued before tornadoes struck Raleigh and eastern North Carolina on Nov. 28, killing four people and sending 157 to hospitals.

Forecasters with the National Weather Service at Raleigh-Durham

International Airport initially said the storm was difficult to predict because it first set down within five miles of the facility. But a federal survey team said forecasters probably would have had some warning if their radar had been working.

The weather service radar at the airport was out of order at the time of the storm.

Several weather service officials said they had never heard of a device like that invented by Bass. They said if it works, it might be useful.

Since 1916, 11,643 people have been killed by tornadoes in the United States, according to Fred Ostby, director of the weather service's Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

Mississippians are among those desensitized to tornado warnings — even though the state recorded two of the three most deadly tornadoes in U.S. history.

A single tornado that skipped across Missouri, Illinois and Indiana in 1925 killed 700, more people than any other recorded in the nation. But Mississippi claims second and third place with 317 dead in Natchez back in 1940 and 216 in Tupelo in 1936, said Dave Imy, meteorologist at the weather service office in Jackson.

In November, the weather service reported at least 26 tornadoes touched down in the state, the most tornadoes reported in Mississippi in any single month since the beginning of reliable statewide record-keeping in 1950. Two people died after one tornado touched down in Lee County, yet many people continued their regular activities as warning sirens sounded across the state last month.

Because the number of people who take notice of any alarm is directly related to the accuracy of the warning system, Bass said it will be at least 10 years before he begins marketing his device. Bass believes his device can be fine-tuned to respond only to the approach of a tornado, but right now he's still trying to keep it from being triggered by the sound of airplanes taking off and landing.

He said his current model is much better than about a dozen previous ones he's designed since starting work on the project in 1974. The earlier versions responded to lots of false noises.

But Bass expects to be ready by next spring to blanket the Jonesboro, Ark., area with his device. The area has been hit by a tornado almost every year for years, he says. Homeowners there will provide a perfect testing ground, providing the data needed to assure prospective buyers that the device is extremely reliable.

"I hope it works. We've invested a lot of time in it. We think if it does work, it can prevent a lot of injuries and save a lot of lives," Bass said.

Bush Holds Mini-Summits On Mideast Peace

By Terence Hunt
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — President Bush arrived in Japan today and plunged into a series of mini-summits with Israeli and Arab leaders, as the United States suggested that new Soviet initiatives in the Middle East were merely "rhetorical exercises."

Against the backdrop of an imperial Japanese funeral, Bush conferred with Jordan's King Hussein, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and Israeli President Chaim Herzog. Bush pledged that the United States will take an active role in the search for peace in the region.

Reporting on the talks, Secretary of State James A. Baker III said there were "perhaps some opportunities out there with respect to the Middle East peace process that haven't existed before."

In particular, Baker noted that the United States has opened talks with the Palestine Liberation Organization, which Washington had shunned for years as a terrorist group.

Baker said Bush did not offer any new U.S. initiatives in the Middle East.

On his first overseas journey as president, Bush will attend the funeral Friday of Japanese Emperor Hirohito, who died of cancer Jan. 7 at the age of 87.

Some nations refused to send a high-level delegation to the funeral because of Hirohito's role as a leading Japanese figure during World War II. British veterans protested the decision by Prince Philip to attend the funeral, and one veteran embarked on a hunger strike.

Commenting on Bush's decision to attend, Baker said, "Maybe it indicated that the wounds have healed as far as the United States is concerned." Bush fought in the Pacific during World War II as a Navy pilot whose torpedo plane was destroyed by Japanese gunfire.

Bush held private talks with a handful of world leaders, including French President Francois Mitterrand, Portuguese Prime Minister Mario Soares, Japanese Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita and Prime Minister Chatichai Choonhavan of Thailand.

It was Bush's talks with Hussein, Mubarak and Herzog that provided a counterpoint to the 10-day trip through the Middle East by Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, who is trying to advance Moscow's role in the region.

Baker said "it's healthy, quite frankly, that the Soviet Union would be interested in contributing to the cause of peace in the Middle East."

He added: "I suppose we would want to know that there were concrete contributions that they have in mind, rather than simply rhetorical exercises."

Challenging Moscow to "contribute in a concrete way," Baker said the Soviet Union should establish full diplomatic relations with Israel and "cease its support of radical countries in the Middle East region such as Libya."

He said Moscow also could exercise influence with Syria.

Shevardnadze has been promoting the idea of an international peace conference under the auspices of the United Nations.

Baker said the United States will continue to insist that any such conference must lead to direct negotiations between Israel and the Palestinians. He said Jordan also would be "an appropriate party in these discussions."

After a 16-hour flight from Washington, Bush went directly to the U.S. ambassador's residence for lunch with Mitterrand. White House officials said their talks focused on East-West relations, Central America, the global environment and plans for a seven-nation economic summit in Paris in July.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Bush and the French president expressed interest in "exploring whatever options might be out there" in the Middle East.

The spokesman affirmed Bush's earlier statement that the Soviet Union should play only a secondary role in the Middle East.

White House officials said in advance that Bush's meetings with various world leaders would be brief and lacking in any decisions. But they were considered significant as the start of Bush's personal diplomacy as president in search of a Mideast peace strategy.

"Although we think there are some opportunities to move the process forward, we want to be methodical and deliberate," Fitzwater said.

Asked to elaborate, Fitzwater replied, "I can't be specific simply because we don't want to talk about any opportunities that might be there. Things move slowly in the Middle East."

However, he said there was "a changed situation" because of U.S. discussions with the PLO and recent statements by its chairman, Yasser Arafat, who has publicly disavowed terrorism.

On his first overseas journey as president, Bush will attend the funeral Friday of Japanese Emperor Hirohito, who died of cancer Jan. 7 at the age of 87.

Bush will travel to China on Saturday and make a 4 1/2 hour stop in South Korea on Monday before returning home.

"Things in the Pacific seem to be going reasonably well," Bush said earlier during a refueling stop in Anchorage, Alaska. "But we are a Pacific power and this visit will demonstrate that we intend to stay a Pacific power."

Bush said during a pre-trip news conference that he won't be stamped into action by Shevardnadze's advocacy of an international peace conference hosted by the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council.

In recent days, the Soviet foreign minister has conferred with Mubarak, Hussein and Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Arens.

After his talks with Mitterrand, Bush went to Akasaka Palace, the government guest house. There, in the chandeliered and marble-columned Room of the Morning Sun, Bush paid a courtesy call on Japanese Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita, who was the first foreign visitor to see Bush at the White House.

In a session stiff with formality, Bush and his six aides were seated in a straight row of delicate gold chairs opposite their Japanese counterparts. Two waiters in tuxedos served orange juice in crystal glasses.

Fitzwater said Bush told Takeshita that "Americans express their respect and sorrow for the emperor."

After the funeral on Friday, Bush is to hold talks with leaders of West Germany, Singapore, Belgium, Turkey, Pakistan and Zaire, and may meet with Philippine President Corason Aquino.

Bush and Mitterrand spent some time exchanging impressions of Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and his perestroika program of economic reforms.

Fitzwater said they agreed that Gorbachev's agenda provides new challenges and opportunities to the West. He said they also agreed that the Western alliance "was strong, that NATO was in a very sound and strong position and that the West was ready to deal with Soviet change in a very positive fashion."

Tokyo Shuts Down For Hirohito Rites

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Shinto priests purified Emperor Hirohito's resting place and workers swept leaves off the procession route today on the eve of the grand state funeral that will virtually shut down this capital of 12 million people.

Friday's ancient ceremony for Hirohito — emperor during a devastating war and a dazzling economic recovery — has been described by Japanese officials as the biggest funeral and the largest gathering of international leaders in modern times.

Making his first trip overseas as president, George Bush held a series of meetings today with several of the 163 heads of state, royalty and other government representatives scheduled to attend the daylong funeral. Accompanied by his wife Barbara, Bush had lunch with President Francois Mitterrand of France. Later, Bush met with Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita at the Akasaka Palace.

Opponents of Japan's imperial system staged at least three peaceful rallies today, including one with placards that caricatured and equated Hirohito and Nazi leader Adolf Hitler.

The protests by anti-monarchy groups and the possibility of international terrorist attacks have prompted Japan's largest security operation.

Authorities double-checked baggage at airports and restricted the use of storage lockers in Tokyo's train stations. About 32,000 police were deployed at roadblocks throughout the capital and at other details.

Company employees observed a request to refrain from driving to work today, a self-restraint measure designed to improve security and control. One police official said traffic was down by 20 percent to 30 percent on city streets.

Final preparations today included the sweeping away of leaves along the route of the funeral procession and purification by nine Shinto priests of Hirohito's final resting place.

The newspaper Daily Yomiuri said Hirohito would be entombed along with more than 100 personal belongings, including a microscope, a recent list of top sumo wrestlers and a sacred sword. Officials declined to provide details. Hirohito, a well-known marine biologist, was a big fan of sumo wrestling.

Friday has been declared a special national holiday, and while many Japanese are expected to pay deep respect to Hirohito, who died of cancer Jan. 7 after a 62-year reign, others planned a ski weekend.

"We are having an alternating feeling between joy and embarrassment," said Ritsuko Yamaguchi, an official of a hotel association in one of central Japan's most popular ski resorts.

Yamaguchi said hotels and inns were fully booked at Shiga Heights with more than 30,000 people expected through Sunday. Heavy bookings were also reported at resorts on the northern island of Hokkaido.

The funeral is scheduled to begin at 7:30 a.m. Friday (5:30 p.m. EST Thursday) with a ceremony of farewell at the moated Imperial Palace in Tokyo and conclude more than 13 hours later with offerings of food at the mausoleum.

The foreign dignitaries will join about 3 1/2 hours of the ceremonies.

EPA Audit Critical Of Policies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Environmental Protection Agency hired a private firm to inspect hazardous waste sites and then used its experts as file clerks or kept them in offices gathering secondhand information, the EPA inspector general says.

The EPA also gave the company undeserved performance awards and paid its workers for attending conferences, the inspector general says in a report set for discussion before a House panel today.

The House Post Office and Civil Service subcommittee on civil service is reviewing EPA contracting practices.

EPA hired NUS Corp. of the Washington suburb of Gaithersburg, Md., to provide field inspection teams to inspect potential Superfund cleanup sites in four of the agency's regions: Atlanta, Boston, New York City and Philadelphia. The report estimated the five-year contract will cost $125 million by its finish.

The report said the contract turned sour within a month of its Nov. 1, 1986, beginning when the Boston-based Region I stopped preliminary on-site inspections of hazardous waste areas. The region ordered the contract employees to get data from state officials and information supplied by the polluters of the sites.

The contract employees' "morale was affected since almost all ... activity was office work," the report said.

North's Attorney Suggests Congress Can't Be Trusted

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Oliver North's lawyers in the Iran-Contra case are trying to blunt charges that he lied to Congress by suggesting that he had good reason to think lawmakers couldn't be trusted with government secrets.

But under cross-examination, Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., steadfastly defended the record of the House intelligence committee in protecting some of the nation's most well-kept secrets.

Hamilton, the panel's former chairman, testified Wednesday that for 18 months before the Iran-Contra affair became public, he relied on White House denials that North was secretly helping the Nicaraguan rebels despite a congressional ban on such aid.

"I relied on what Col. North told me," Hamilton said of an Aug. 6, 1986, meeting the intelligence panel had with North, then a National Security Council aide, in the White House Situation Room.

"I believed what Col. North told me at the meeting. I did not think there was any credible evidence to the contrary," Hamilton said.

The congressman also said that in 1985, he accepted as "accurate, honest and correct" then-national security adviser Robert McFarlane's assurances that North was not raising money for the Contras or giving them tactical military advice as prohibited by the so-called Boland Amendment of 1984.

North, a retired Marine lieutenant colonel, is charged with 12 felonies arising from the Iran-Contra affair that could result in 60 years imprisonment upon conviction.

Among other things, he is accused of obstructing congressional inquiries into his efforts to raise money for the Nicaraguan rebels. This allegedly included lying at the 1986 meeting and helping McFarlane, who has pleaded guilty to withholding information from Congress, draft false denials in response to congressional inquiries.

Cross-examining Hamilton, defense attorney Brendan V. Sullivan Jr. argued that North rightly feared Congress couldn't be trusted to keep secrets because it "leaked like a sieve."

"From 1984, 1985 and 1986 leaks occurred on Capitol Hill as a result of members and staff members who provided information," Sullivan said.

"(The late CIA) Director (William) Casey told me he didn't know a single leak from the House intelligence committee," Hamilton replied. "I will not deny leaks, but neither can I prove any such leaks."

Asked about a newspaper report containing classified information that appeared "the very next day" after the panel was briefed by the CIA, Hamilton said he had only a "cloudy recollection" of the incident.

"I don't assume for a moment that the leak came from the Congress," Hamilton added. "There are some very experienced people in the administration who leak information after it comes to the Congress."

He also denied threatening to leak CIA information himself in a Jan. 16, 1985, letter to then-Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

Hamilton conceded Sullivan's suggestion that North's prosecution "is a product in one sense of the controversy that existed between the Congress and the executive branch in 1984, 1985 and 1986."

Decrease Reported

Don Anders, a veterans employment representative at the Greenville office of the North Carolina Employment Security Commission, reported a small decrease in the number of veterans placed in Pitt County.

From July 1, 1988, to Jan. 31, 1989, 286 veterans were placed in Greenville, compared to 299 in the same period in 1987.

Anders said there was a significant increase in the percentage of veterans being placed in high paying jobs.

Council To Meet

The executive committee of the

Pitt County Council on Aging will meet Monday at noon in the conference room of the Pitt County Senior Center on West Fifth Street.

Fire Calls Answered

Firemen from 20 volunteer departments in Pitt County were called to 1,410 fires in 1988, 340 more than the 1,070 fire calls answered in 1987, according to Bobby Joyner, the county's emergency services coordinator.

Joyner, in his annual report, said the county's volunteer firemen spent 38,520 man hours in training during 1988, as well as 1.07 million man hours fighting fires.

Based on the minimum wage of $3.35 per hour, Joyner said the time firemen contributed in fire-fighting would amount to $3.61 million, while the time spent in training activities would be valued at $129,043.

According to the report, the volunteer fire departments spent a total of $651,580 on operating expenses, capital outlay items and other costs for the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1988, as compared to $484,622 for the previous 12 months.

The departments, Joyner said, have 27 pumpers, 29 tankers, 13 brush trucks and four equipment trucks.

Conference On Elderly

A conference on issues that affect the elderly will be held March 23 at Cyprus Glen Retirement Community.

The conference, "Aging in North Carolina: Confronting Issues in Service Delivery," concerns legislation affecting the elderly, techniques of assessing the elderly's needs and program development issues regarding aging.

Dr. Jim Mitchell, director of the East Carolina University Gerontology Program and conference organizer, said morning and afternoon presentations will be held followed by small group discussions on a variety of elderly-related topics such as health insurance and housing.

we're hoping not to get the ice and wind we've had to deal with in the past week."

Suggs said that, beginning Friday, Pitt & Greene was the hardest-hit-by-weather electric membership cooperative in the state, having as many as 4,000 customers in their six-county service area out of power at times. And outages on major Carolina Power and Light Co. supplier transmission lines caused its office and radio communications system to be useless at times, hampering work because of inability to communicate between base and various work crews.

Work crews were bolstered from 16 to as many as 85 to 90 workers at times, thanks to loans of crews from Randolph County, Mount Airy, Jacksonville, Washington, N.C., Rich Square, Halifax County and from several private electrical contractors, Suggs said. "Without all this extra help, we'd still be in the disaster stage," he said.

He said most of the extra crews were being released today and he was hopeful they wouldn't have to be called back in on the heels of another storm.

Suggs said that Pitt & Greene crews were now dealing with only scattered outages throughout corporation's the service area.

Mediation Urged

did not have a list of worthless check charges.

"It might be that certain types of worthless checks would be appropriate matters for a dispute resolution center," he said.

The key to a successful program, Laney said, is community involvement.

"Your mediators are generally volunteers from the community with no particular background, but instead, with a certain amount of innate ability, as well as (understanding)," Laney said.

While the bar association encourages counties to establish mediation centers, they do not oversee the projects or provide funding.

"We, basically, are here to provide technical, moral support, advice, consultation and things of that sort," he said. "We simply encourage it."

The mediation centers have evolved from grass roots efforts in local communities, Laney said, and they are not organized or totally funded by any specific agency. They are also not directly accountable to any area of state government. But, when residents of an area such as Greenville become interested in a mediation center, they usually work with officials from other centers in the state to create the program.

The Pitt County mediation committee is working to organize a training session for potential mediators within the next six months, Shultz said, and the group would like to begin mediating some cases shortly after the training. New mediation centers only handle the most basic disputes until the mediators gain experience and demonstrate that they are able to help resolve complaints, he said.

The committee meets the first Tuesday of each month in room D-301 in the Brewster Building at ECU, and Shultz said the group is working to recruit people interesting in serving on the board of directors and participating in the mediation training sessions.

Colleges Promote Language Bank

By Elliott Minor
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TIFTON, Ga. — Foreigners who visit the Tifton area no longer have to struggle to understand their hosts' Southern drawls.

Thanks to a new international program at Abraham Baldwin Agricultural College, visitors usually can find a translator who speaks their native language.

Helene Dutcher, an associate director of the Foreign Language International Culture Center, has signed up 18 volunteers with skills in 20 foreign languages to serve as translators and interpreters.

"It's a matter of putting people with language needs in contact with people who have foreign language skills," she said. "We hope it will promote cultural awareness and the study of foreign languages."

Funded by the General Assembly through the University System of Georgia, the culture center is directed by Lee Bradley, a language specialist at Valdosta State College. The center includes "language banks" located at VSC, Albany State College, ABAC and junior colleges in Bainbridge, Waycross, Albany and Douglas. The seven colleges serve 41 south Georgia counties.

"The purpose is to serve as a resource to college units, area public and private schools, businesses and citizens," Bradley said.

The center conducts foreign language workshops, surveys to identify businesses that are interested in international trade and programs that foster the study of foreign languages and cultures.

Among the languages covered by ABAC are Arabic, Chinese, Spanish, German, Persian, Japanese, Dutch, Portuguese, and Hindi. Access to other languages is available through the other schools. "We want to work with business, schools, anywhere there's a need," said Mrs. Dutcher, who was born in Belgium to Polish and Ukrainian parents.

She already has made contact with Japanese executives and their families who have moved to Tifton to pave the way for a new yarn plant that will open this summer. The plant will be operated by the Kanebo Spinning Co.

Because of interest generated by the center, ABAC plans to offer a basic Japanese course in the spring and a course for people who speak English as a second language.

Recently, when Tifton Aluminum Co. was training a manager from Mexico, Mrs. Dutcher was able to provide a volunteer who spent time with the trainee's wife, helping her adjust to the community.

Mrs. Dutcher believes the languages and cultural diversity of foreign-born residents will enrich the community and help them feel less isolated by giving them an opportunity to make a contribution.

"I think the end result is that you're going to have a lot more communication," she said. "The foreign people will feel more comfortable knowing they're valued for the language and cultural information they have. They will feel like they're returning something to the community."

Mrs. Dutcher hopes the language bank can become a source on languages for businesses, educators, civic groups and the government. She also believes it can broaden the area's educational base, heighten interest in foreign cultures and increase ABAC's international enrollment.

"If people know that the bank has this capability for communication, we can open up the door to the world," she said. "The South is changing and people from all over the United States and overseas are moving here."

She feels the language bank also can help Southerners accept change and avoid cultural conflicts.

Some Southerners may feel threatened by the influx of people from other areas, but the hospitality and charm of the area should survive, she said.

"I think Southerners will teach others their genteel ways," she observed.

Britons Face Mortgage Increase

By Cotten Timberlake
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's program to transform Britain into "a property-owning democracy" has produced an army of new homeowners. But many are being squeezed by her determination to curb inflation by driving up interest rates.

Mortgage costs have risen at their fastest rate in 50 years, to 13.5 percent from 9.75 percent last summer, confronting many of Britain's 15 million homeowners with heavy debt and even the risk of losing their homes, homebuyers' advocates say.

Types of mortgages in the United States vary but their rates generally hover around 10 to 10.5 percent.

Stephanie Manasche, a single mother in Harrow, says her monthly payments have jumped 42 pounds ($73.50) to 262 pounds ($458.50), and she had to negotiate a temporary agreement with her lender to pay interest only. That brought the payment down to 253 pounds ($443), and she is still having trouble keeping up.

"It makes me feel very, very frightened, obviously," she said.

The crunch could also make Britons lose confidence in real estate and return to renting, undermining Mrs. Thatcher's initial aims.

"The present government is pulling the rug out from underneath their feet," said Michael Brett, secretary general of the National Association of Homeowners in Shrewsbury.

John Doling, a professor at the University of Birmingham's department of social policy, said: "Many people will be deeply depressed, deeply suffering from what has happened." Some, he says, "will have to economize on food and they won't eat properly."

But lenders say defaults are more an outcome of unemployment and marital break-up than of higher interest rates.

They stress their eagerness to help borrowers in difficulty by, for example, extending the term of a mortgage.

"As long as those people come in and let us know, there are things we can do," said Mark Hemingway, a spokesman for the Halifax Building Society, the country's biggest mortgage lender.

The monthly payment on a new 40,000-pound ($70,000) 25-year adjustable mortgage has risen to 388.42 pounds ($679.74) from about 304.93 pounds ($533.63) last summer, the Building Societies Association said.

Repayments on only the first 30,000 pounds ($52,000) of a mortgage are tax-deductible. Most rates fluctuate with interest rates. Fixed rates are rarely offered, and 40 percent of mortgage-holders have their monthly payment adjusted once a year.

The squeeze worsened last year when young buyers rushed into the market and overcommitted themselves trying to beat the abolition in August of double tax relief for unmarried joint mortgage-holders.

"When people see prices going up rapidly they feel they have to be active in the housing market right now before it is too late," Doling said.

In June Mrs. Thatcher's Conservative government began raising interest rates, stalling the housing boom so that buyers who came in at the top of the market can't get out at a profit.

Mrs. Thatcher has promoted home ownership as part of her campaign to roll back socialism, allowing occupants of rented public housing to buy the property at preferential terms.

Sixty-four percent of Britain's housing is occupant-owned, compared with 55 percent in 1978, the Building Societies Association said.

But now Mrs. Thatcher says that inflation, which has jumped to an annual rate of 6.8 percent from 3.3 percent a year ago, is her top priority, and interest rates are her weapon.

"I think many people would find the irony in that," Doling said.

Brett, of the homeowners association, said: "We are predicting a massive rise in the number of mortgage arrears and repossession."

In 1985, when mortgage rates went up to 14 percent, mortgage arrears doubled, Brett said.

Today some 300,000 people are in arrears, while last year, 25,000 families saw their homes repossessed, Brett said.

In addition, he said: "As soon as someone falls behind in mortgage payments, even if they don't get repossessed, they will get a bad reputation financially and will in fact be blighted for life."

The building societies association said up-to-date statistics aren't available yet, and it expects arrears and repossession to show a decline because unemployment is down.

A 36-year-old bank employee from Liverpool who requested anonymity said: "A couple of years ago, the mortgage was affordable. Now it is ridiculous."

Sarah Rudman, a 19-year-old advertising saleswoman, bought her Shrewsbury home in September with fiancé Stephen Chaloner, a 23-year-old software engineer. Payments on their 21,000-pound ($36,750) mortgage have risen 57 pounds ($100), to 220 pounds ($385) a month.

Now, Ms. Rudman said, they have to postpone the wedding and lower their living standard.

"We were advised by a lot of people, 'You ought to have your own house. Buy now.' We panicked really. We just grabbed it," she said.

Commercials Give Careers Some Snap

I've been watching the commercial wars too long.

After George Bush was sworn in as president, I sat there waiting for someone to yell, "Whatya gonna do now, George?" and he would answer, "I'm goin' to Disneyland!"

Commercials are changing the way America thinks. Little children who used to cling to their mothers' bony knees and fantasize, "When I grow up I want to be a corporate raider," now aspire to go where the big money is — hustling Diet Pepsi.

During the Super Bowl, it was like High Noon at the Soft Drink Corral. Forget Joe Montana and Boomer

At Wits End Erma Bombeck

Esiason out there throwing their brains out. The big question on everyone's lips was, would George Michael's commercial for Diet Coke premiere and overshadow the game? Or would a major soft drink company take a corporate risk and pick an unknown non-singing chimpanzee to go against the opposition?

Forget the scandal of the Chicago grain market traders. The real shocker was that business ground to a halt while all of them stood around singing "Happy Birthday" to McDonald's. On company time yet. How could you get so many people to sell out?

Commercials used to be the iceberg of a Titanic career. There was a stigma attached to them. Come out for a hemorrhoid cream and your professional life was over. Today, commercials have replaced the casting couch. Sandy Duncan, Teri Garr, Roseanne Barr — all boosted their careers making commercials.

Even the legends are taking a second look. They aren't ready to go public, but they are testing the waters. Foremost is Jimmy Stewart, whom you never see on camera, but you know by the voice he's there sipping soup. And it doesn't take a genius to figure out that the raisin playing the piano is Ray Charles.

Where is all this going? I think the trend will give new meaning to the word "star." I can foresee a future where a producer will say, "OK, so if Meryl Streep has so much talent, then how come she never sells Oldsmobiles?"

Stars will leave messages on their agent's answering service: "Turn down the prune commercial. I'm too young to play the part." Rock stars will refuse a People cover for a shot on a cereal box.

I wouldn't be too surprised if people taped an evening of television and fast-forwarded the regular programs, stopping only to watch a $5 million performance by Madonna for Pepsi.

The war goes on. As you are reading this, somewhere in New York, a client is saying to an agency, "Get me Elvis. Price is no object!"

Totem Pole Carver Touches Past

By Melinda Joiner
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOAZ, Ala. (AP) — When Nancy Cobb decided to make her first totem pole a decade ago, she'd never even attempted to carve a piece of wood. Yet when she set chisel to cedar, the Texas native discovered carving came naturally — almost supernaturally.

"I'd never carved a piece of wood in my life, and it came so easily for me, I told my husband it felt like I'd done it before," she says. "It was a very strange sensation."

Mrs. Cobb, a quarter Cherokee, says she feels an almost divine inspiration when she's working on a totem pole in the cavernous metal building that serves as her workshop. Her Indian heritage is evident in her striking cheekbones, creamy beige complexion, and black hair and eyes.

"I always knew I was Indian, but 30 to 40 years ago, people didn't readily admit to having Indian blood. It was like being part Gypsy," she says. "But in the last 20 to 25 years, people have become proud of their Indian heritage. I've always been proud of mine."

Although she's always been interested in Indian history, Mrs. Cobb never dabbled in native American art until a friend challenged her to carve a totem pole.

"We were living in Columbus, Georgia, and there was a Boy Scouts camp near our home," she explains. "Boy Scouts camps usually have totem poles, and I commented to a friend that the one at this camp really looked bad. My friend said, 'Well, you try to carve one,' and I did."

Mrs. Cobb gleans cedar from the Marshall County area for her totem poles, which range in height from 9 to 17 feet. "I use strictly cedar trees because they're easy to carve on," she says. "I get wood any place there's a cedar tree anyone will let me have."

"People in the area often call and offer me trees," she says. "When you carve as much as I do, you smell like a hamster cage."

Mrs. Cobb lets the trees season three to four weeks before she peels off the bark "like a banana peel." She then mounts the log on a stand her husband made and uses a 4-pound chain saw, a chisel and sanders to begin painstakingly shaping the totem pole.

"I sketch out my designs first," she says, showing a rough drawing of her latest project, a totem pole with a sacred thunderbird standing on the top of the head of a raven standing on the head of a bear with a fish at its feet. "I start at the top and go to the bottom, and usually I paint the poles when I'm finished. I'm going to sand and stain the one I'm working on now to put in my living room."

Mrs. Cobb's totem poles, which sell for $400 and up, generally take three weeks to two months to complete. Although she shuns mass-producing totem poles and doesn't advertise or actively seek to sell her wares, Mrs. Cobb has carved made-to-order totem poles for a few enthusiastic customers. "You'd be surprised who wants them," she says. "I sold one to a man who put it in his living room, and another put it on the patio by the pool."

The Chippewa, or Ojibwa, Indians first used the term totem to denote the birds, fish, animals and plants associated with their clans. Some groups even viewed the totem as an ancestor of the clan.

Some clans reportedly had rules against killing or eating the species to which the totem belongs, and tribes sometimes considered the totem as holy and prayed to it. Various tribes, particularly those in the Pacific Northwest, carved the family and clan emblems on totem poles and held a "potlatch," or feast, when the poles were put up.

"Totem poles were made to tell a story, and you usually saw one in front of a village that told the story of the tribe's brave men, victories and defeats — like a biography," Mrs. Cobb says. "They carved totem poles the way we write books."

Besides carving totem poles, Mrs. Cobb makes small wood carvings of such Western figures as cowboys, Texas mules, horses and cows. The Amarillo native's work area contains mounted animals, including a coyote and jackrabbit, and a Texas flag and ribbons from Marshall County fairs are draped on the walls.

"Anybody born and raised in Texas never gets it out of her blood," she says. "Texas will always be the biggest and best home. I feel I can breathe the real good and see a million miles when I'm there."

Mrs. Cobb moved to Boaz with her husband, Kenny, a Sand Mountain native and retired Air Force colonel, a few years ago. The couple have three children and a grandson. Cobb, a free-lance pilot, is building a plane in one side of the metal building that houses his wife's workshop.

Mrs. Cobb, who is well-known around Boaz and frequently visits schools to talk to children about Indians, laughingly admits people think the woman who carves totem poles and drives around town in a Bronco filled with Labrador retrievers and sporting a personalized "Injun" tag is a little strange.

"Everyone around here knows what I do, and I get calls from all over," she says. "It's a very sacred thing to be an Indian. It makes me feel very special and makes me want to go back to my roots."

Her Recollections Stir Nostalgia

By Carol J. Willimas
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BERLIN — The bittersweet recollections of a Bavarian farm girl deprived of youth by her mother's early death and the hardships imposed by World War II have for more than four years been stirring a nostalgia for the simple life of bygone years.

Anna Wimschneider's true-life story, "Herbstmilch" ("Autumn Milk") is a major motion picture in West Germany. As a subtitled commercial offering during the 39th Berlin International Film Festival, it will seek an audience worldwide.

"Herbstmilch" was directed by Joseph Vilsmaier and released last month by Senator Films in Munich. It will make its international debut at the film festival.

The movie, shot entirely on location in the scenic Bavarian countryside around Wimschneider's village near Pfarrkirchen, adopts the harsh and simple style of the 1984 best-selling novel in its portrayal of life 50 years ago.

Anna's naive bliss as the barefoot and carefree eldest daughter among seven children in the southern German countryside comes to an abrupt end when her 39-year-old mother dies after the birth of an eighth child. Eight years old and grieving, Anna is forced to take over the exhausting farm chores and child care that sent her mother to an early grave.

The young girl's father comes off in the film as a harsher man than the author recalls him to have been, beating her for bad cooking and for falling asleep at the sewing machine where late each night she sews by lamplight to earn money to feed the family.

She finds a short-lived happiness in the courtship of a local farmer's son, Albert Wimschneider, and marries him at age 21. But the brief respite from hunger and hard work is broken when Albert is called off to the front and Anna must care for the farm and her husband's family under the cruel eye of a hateful mother-in-law.

Told entirely from the perspective of isolated villagers who see Adolf Hitler's politics and the emergence of World War II from afar, the film brushes only gently against the still-tender subject of the hopes inspired among poor Germans that the Nazi regime would bring glory and prosperity.

Wimschneider casts herself and her family as devoted Catholics skeptical of the Fuehrer, occasionally defying the social order by refusing to give the "Heil Hitler" salute in town.

The few scenes in the film on the Nazi administration of Bavaria depict the local party chief as a self-indulgent villain and the people of Pfarrkirchen as unquestioning but innocent followers.

Vilsmaier also grew up near Pfarrkirchen, though a full generation after Wimschneider.

"The director was from the same part of Lower Bavaria as Anna Wimschneider, which no doubt made this project an important and personal one for him," said Heinz Badewitz, who put together the series of 30 new West German films being shown at the Berlin festival. "There is a new generation of filmmakers that wants to examine history and its effects on the present."

The film and Wimschneider's book have drawn some criticism, however, for the uncritical account of the Nazi influence and Bavarians' willingness to be led into a war that shattered the continent.

Rare Plant Rescued By Botanists

By Douglas Kreutz
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TUCSON, Ariz. — Kearney's blue star, once considered the nation's most endangered plant, is sprouting back from the brink of extinction, government botanists report.

Not long ago, the delicate shrub had all but disappeared.

Only eight blue star plants were known to be growing in the wild — all of them in a remote canyon of the Baboquivari Mountains southwest of Tucson.

But last March, in a last-ditch effort to preserve a natural population of the species, federal government botanists planted 76 artificially propagated blue star seedlings on a private ranch on the east side of the Baboquivari range.

"So far, we're feeling real positive about the results of that planting," says Peggy Olwell, an endangered species botanist for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Albuquerque, N.M..

"Of the 76 plants that were put in, 41 are still surviving, in addition to the original eight plants," says Olwell, whose agency is responsible for helping save endangered animals and plants. "That's a survival rate of about 54 percent for the new plantings, which is encouraging at this point."

Olwell says the plants have faced tough weather conditions — including intense summer heat and a lack of adequate rainfall since August.

"Still, some of them grew more than two times their original size," she says. "They dropped their leaves in November, and now they're waiting for rain and warming temperatures to help them leaf out and then flower and fruit. That will happen in April and May."

Olwell says the plants that didn't survive may have had inadequate moisture or, possibly, root damage from fertilizers.

Kearney's blue star, named in honor of botanist Thomas Kearney, was discovered in the Baboquivari Mountains in 1926.

The plant, which grows to a height of about 18 inches and has bluish-white flowers, has been found nowhere else in the world, Olwell says.

She says botanists aren't sure what caused the decline of the blue star.

One theory, she says, is that stinkbugs could be infesting the plant's seeds.

The seedlings were propagated at the Arizona-Sonora Desert Museum and in University of Arizona laboratories.

"There's a plentiful supply of seedlings," she says. "But...you don't know how they will transplant. Sometimes they will survive for a year and then die. Sometimes they will make it."

Readers Speak When Taking Nuisance Call

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: I, too, stand by your opinion that telephoning the general public, either to sell something or to gather information for whatever purpose, is an invasion of privacy and should be abolished.

I read in the February 1989 Reader's Digest that one way to stop most "junk" phone calls is to write the Direct Marketing Association's Telephone Preference Service, 6 E. 43 St., New York, N.Y. 10017. This trade organization keeps a list of people who don't want to be bothered by sales calls. I am certainly going to write and get my name on the list.

Thank you for your many years of good, sound advice. — Kathryn A. Bedford, Omaha, Neb.

Dear Kathryn: And thank you for the tip. I'm also going to write to them. And if that doesn't work, read on for a stronger approach:

Dear Abby: I don't usually read your column, but today's on telephone soliciting grabbed me, and I want to add my support for your cause against all types of telephone intrusion.

In this case, it is unfortunate that our society has taught us that we should always be polite and considerate of others' feelings, even when they are abusing us! Most people think that when someone calls them they must listen to the pitch or answer the questions to keep from offending the caller. In my opinion that's hogwash!

When I receive unwanted calls, I very quickly break in and tell the caller: "I object to your invading my privacy with this call.

If I had wanted your product (or service or to give you information), I would have come to you. Please remove me from your list because if I receive further calls from your company, I will report you to the Better Business Bureau and the state attorney general."

I don't remember ever having gotten a second call. Just thought I would share my solution with you. — Polite And Firm In Radcliff, Ky.

Dear Polite And Firm: Well, that's one way. You also can say, "I'm not interested, thank you," and hang up before the caller begins his spiel.

Dear Abby: Eight months ago, when I went to my first Overeaters Anonymous meeting, I weighed 370 pounds and I was miserable. Since then, I have lost 130 pounds and gained a new sense of serenity and self-worth. I am happier now than I have ever been in my life. For years, fear kept me from going to my first O.A. meeting. Now I want to reassure others who may be apprehensive about going to their first meeting.

Overeaters Anonymous is free, and there I found love, understanding and acceptance that I couldn't get from my family, friends or society. In loving gratitude for the O.A. fellowship, I will remain... Anonymous In Ballwin, Mo.

Pirates Top Liberty, 69-60

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The last time East Carolina's Pirate basketball team won four games in a row, fifth-year senior Blue Edwards was in the sixth grade and freshman Brooks Bryant was in the second grade.

Wednesday night, the Pirates overcame the fatigue of playing their fourth game in eight days to slip past Liberty University, 69-60, to win their fourth straight game. It was the first time a streak of that length had been put together since the 1977-78 season.

East Carolina raced out to a 17-point lead early in the second half, but then found the going much more difficult, scoring only four field goals in the final 15 minutes of the game, and none in the final four minutes.

But the Pirates used an outstanding performance at the foul line to hold off the rallying Flames to claim the victory. East Carolina canned 14 of 16 in the final five minutes, including an eight-of-eight performance by Reed Lose, who made 11 of 12 all together.

"They went to a box and one (defense) in the second half with Blue and we didn't step up and get aggressive," Coach Mike Steele said, adding that he thought that the Pirates, too, might have been a little leg-weary because of the four-game stretch.

"At the start, we came out well. We missed some easy shots in the paint, and we could have had a 17-18 point lead at the half, but Liberty hung in there," he added.

Steele credited some heady board play in the final minutes when the Pirates did miss some free throws. Jeff Kelly, who is usually one of the top free throw shooters on the team, missed four free throws in a row, but on three of those, Gus Hill leaped high and tapped the ball back out to a teammate to allow the Pirates to hang onto the ball. "Those were big plays for us," Steele said.

Steele praised the box and one defense as doing a good job on Edwards, who was held to just 22 points on nine of 17 shots. "That's one of the best jobs done on him in a long time," Steele said.

Liberty's Jeff Meyer said that the Flames attempted to keep a fresh player on Edwards throughout the game and he did feel that it had some effect. Edwards, who scored 15 points in the first half, scored only seven in the second before fouling out with 1:17 left to play.

"But I have to say this. This was our 24th game of the season, and this was the best pressure defense we've faced all year, and that includes people like Clemson and Towson State. Our 10 turnovers in the first half had a lot to do with the final outcome.

"I have to credit the intensity level that East Carolina had. They have better ball pressure and help than we've seen," Meyer continued.

Meyer said he thought his team did a better job of responding in the second half, but that it just wasn't enough.

East Carolina led throughout the contest, taking the lead on an Edwards slam after he had stolen the

Bucs Sweep Two From Howard

Eason Homers In Each Game As ECU Wins By Scores of 8-1 And 10-0

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

On a cold and wet day for baseball, East Carolina used the hot bat of freshman Tommy Eason and a strong team defensive performance to sweep a pair of season-opening baseball games from Howard University Wednesday.

Eason cracked a two-run homer in the first game to key a 8-1 victory over the Bison and came back with a three-run shot in the second game to help the Pirates take a 10-0 decision to open the 1989 baseball season with two wins.

"It feels great," Eason said. "As a freshman, you don't expect to come in and start. It was a great opportunity. Their guys didn't throw that hard. They threw high. I like high pitches, especially when the count is 2-0 or 3-1. You can wait on a pitch. Both those pitches (on his home runs) were high pitches."

The Pirates also got a one-hit pitching performance from Tim Langdon in the second game to help record the shutout.

Howard had gone ahead early in the first game when John Moody singled off starter Jake Jacobs in the second to score Mark Taylor and make it 1-0, but Eason's first homer erased the 1-0 deficit and provided the Bucs with a spark.

"That's all you need, especially in conditions like we were playing in," ECU coach Gary Overton said. "If a big play like Eason's occurs, it opens the door for a team to make mistakes."

And that's just what the Bisons did the rest of the day.

After Eason's homer, an error by third baseman Edward Johnson and four walks by Howard pitcher Darrell Moody helped spur ECU on to three more runs in the inning and a 5-1 lead.

Jacobs gave up a hit in each of the first three innings, but Jonathan Jenkins came on in the fourth and pitched two hitless innings and effectively kept the Bison out of scoring position the rest of the game, thanks to some late relief help from Warren Hall.

The Bucs were aided by strong defensive plays throughout the lineup as ECU didn't commit a single error in the first game.

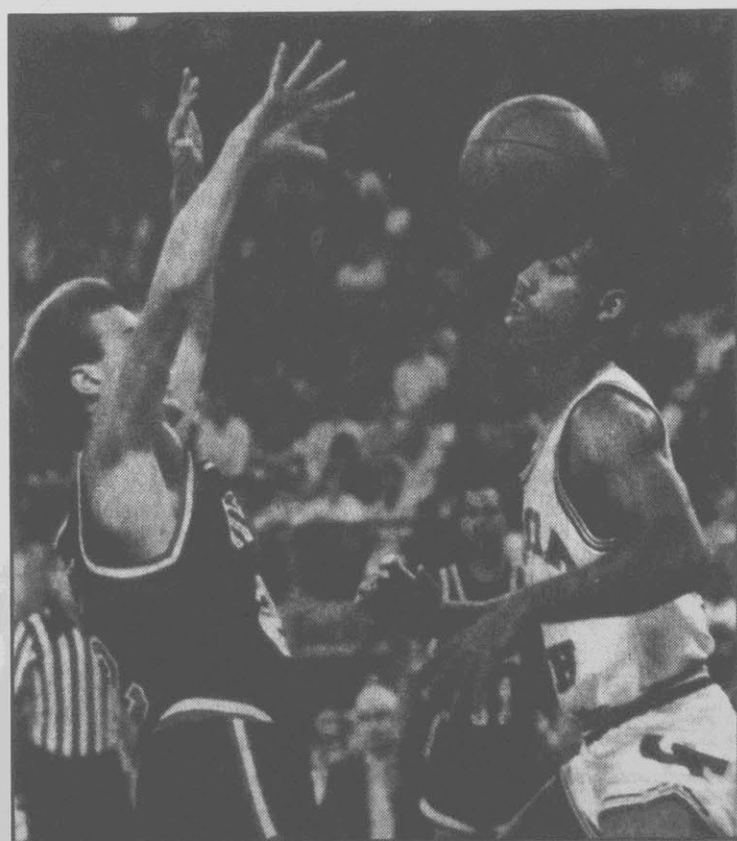

"Normally teams don't play that well defensively early in the season, but we stressed that in our pre-season workouts," Overton said. "Apparently the work paid off. It's nice to have the offense, but to get two good pitching performances is great."

After going ahead 5-1 in the first game, the Pirates came back with three more runs in the fifth inning to take firm control of the game. Eason opened with a single, went to second when Calvin Brown drew a walk and scored on an error by Moody. Freshman John Gast followed with a home run to drive in Brown and close out ECU's scoring.

Howard's first pitcher, Robert Major was their only effective performer on the mound. He pitched the first three innings of the first game, ATLANTA — Tom Hammonds gives Georgia Tech more than his scoring and rebounding.

He also gives the Yellow Jackets confidence, something that had been missing when Georgia Tech dropped its last two games, both with Hammonds on the sidelines with an injured right knee.

Hammonds scored 25 points, lifting his career total to 1,996, and Brian Oliver provided the key play down the stretch to lead Georgia Tech to a 73-65 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over Virginia Wednesday night.

"Going into this game our confidence level had been shot," Tech Coach Bobby Cremins said.

He said Georgia Tech had come off a big victory at Maryland and then he learns that Hammonds wouldn't play in losses to North Carolina State and Duke, a pair of setbacks that knocked the Jackets out of the battle for first place in the ACC.

"We were questioning ourselves," Cremins said. "I didn't know what percentage Tommy would be able to play at, but I just told the guys it's gutcheck time. Hammonds was incredible."

Oliver's key play came with 1:37 left and Georgia Tech nursing a 65-62 lead, built on Hammonds' second consecutive 15-footer from the left side.

Georgia Tech missed a shot, but Oliver somehow got the offensive rebound and scored from the left side of the lane. He was fouled, completed the three-point play to stake Tech to a 68-62 lead and Virginia never got closer than three points the rest of the way.

Wrestling Tradition Is Rich At Conley

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

HOLLYWOOD — The records posted on the window of D.H. Conley wrestling coach Milt Sherman's office are a testament to the one thing he has tried to establish in 14 years on the job — a consistent, winning program.

The sheets point to a multitude of both team and individual school records.

All together, though, they add up to one thing: success. And the 1988-89 season has been one for the record books.

Led by seniors Kevin Daniels (36-0) and Jason Hamby (33-4), Conley, 24-2 overall, claimed its second straight 3-A Regional Title last weekend.

The Vikings had four first-place finishers at the regionals in sophomore Jacinto Moore (32-4) at 119 pounds, junior Derrick Gardner (34-1) at 140 pounds, Daniels at 145 pounds and sophomore Danny Osborne (24-8) at heavyweight.

On Friday the Vikings will send a team-record eight wrestlers onto the mats to compete for titles at the 3-A State Championships at Greensboro Grimsley High School.

In addition to the four regional champs, other Conley qualifiers include 125-pound junior Gary Howard (31-6-2); 130-pound sophomore Jason Osborne 25-14-1; 135-pound sophomore Jason Adams (22-13) and 160-pounder Hamby.

"Talent in a program has its ups and downs," Sherman said. "I'm fortunate to have a good group of kids to work with. They've got a combination of good athletic ability and good attitudes and that's hard to beat."

Sherman has had at least one wrestler advance to the state finals and earn All-State recognition in each year he has coached. Last season, Daniels finished second at 140 pounds and Gardner was fourth at 135 pounds as the team finished seventh in the state. Hamby and Moore also advanced to the state tournament, and each split four matches.

"I've had some good talent out here every year for the last several years, but our won-loss records varied a lot," Sherman said. "That's largely dependent on the attitude of the team members and how much leadership you have. This year, we've got two team captains, Hamby and Daniels, who are the strong, silent type and are well respected by the team members."

"But we also have some solid, energetic types in the junior class like Steve Allen, Larry Wilson and Gary Howard who add a lot of enthusiasm to the team. We've got some of these fellas who are obviously having a lot of fun and that enthusiasm carries over."

The strength of the Vikings' program can be attributed to a number of factors, not the least of which is hard work. But Conley also benefits from a strong feeder program at A.G. Cox Middle School under coach Ben Moore as well as the existence of the Pitt County Wrestling Club which works in conjunction with the State Junior Olympic program.

A number of the present team members got started wrestling while at A.G. Cox and about half the team presently competes in the spring and summer with the wrestling club.

"It helps out a lot," said Hamby, who has 25 pins, including a team-record 18 in a row at one point this year. "If I went to another school that didn't have the (entire) program, I might not be as good a wrestler as I am. Coach Sherman is

State Challengers

Area Wrestling State Finalists:

D.H. Conley:

Jacinto Moore (119 pounds): "Jacinto is just a sophomore and was the runner-up at the regionals last year and won two matches at the state tournament," Sherman said. "He's got a tremendous amount of ability."

Gary Howard (125 pounds): "Gary is a junior in his third year as a varsity starter," Sherman said. "Gary is quick and can be tough offensively and defensively."

Jason Osborne (130 pounds): "He was just the 11th seed in the regionals, but wrestled his way to fourth place, showing a lot of desire to win," Sherman said.

Jason Adams (135 pounds): "Jason shows a lot of intelligence on the mat and uses good technique," Sherman said. "He has improved his record a great deal in the last year."

Derrick Gardner (140 pounds): "Derrick has tremendous athletic ability, particularly in the areas of strength and balance," Sherman said. "He's a mentally tough kid. He was a regional champion last year and fourth in the state tournament."

Kevin Daniels (145 pounds): "He was the state high school runner-up last year," Sherman said. "That junior Olympic program including his trip to the nationals has helped him gain a lot of confidence. That has put him in a lot of competitive situations, winning and losing, that has paid off for him."

Jason Hamby (160 pounds): "You'd have to identify Jason as a pinner," Sherman said. "He's an exciting wrestler to watch. His style is somewhat unorthodox. He tends to do some unusual things which will usually catch his opponents by surprise."

Danny Osborne (Heavyweight): "Danny has good balance for a 245-pounder and has a lot of experience on the mat and with the regional championship showed that he's using that experience shows that he's using that experience."

J.H. Rose High School

Neil Williams (160 pounds): "Neil Williams made the most of his post season," Rose coach Ronald Vincent said. "He didn't wrestle last year and has shown dramatic improvement. He came from out of nowhere in the regionals."

Jeff House (Heavyweight): "He's a very small heavyweight (195 pounds), but Jeff has tremendous balance and strength," Vincent said. "He's 18-1. The one he lost in the regional finals is the only one he lost. He's a hard worker and he practices real hard and it pays off for him."

Terp Investigation On Only One Student

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maryland's athletic director says an investigation into the university's alleged violation of NCAA rules will center on a former student, not the entire basketball program, according to a published report.

The Washington Post reported today that Athletic Director Lew Perkins says the university's investigation into whether former Terrapins guard Rudy Archer received transportation from home to the university and to Prince George's Community College will only center on Archer.

"It is a routine practice at an institution with potential NCAA violations to review all the facts and try to gather as much information we can," the university's chief legal counsel Dennis Blumer told the newspaper. "We will follow the NCAA's lead and then make a confidential report to them."

Perkins could not say how long the investigation would take.

On Monday, Maryland notified the NCAA that "several members" of the basketball staff gave transportation to the 6-foot-1 Archer, who played two seasons at Allegany Community College before playing last season for Maryland.

He was dismissed from the university last summer due to academics and spent the fall semester in Prince George's Community College. Archer is currently attending University College, an evening and weekend program at Maryland.

Archer still has a year of eligibility left and is technically a recruit, and therefore the transportation issue would be a violation of NCAA rules.

Wednesday's edition of The Baltimore Sun quotes Archer as saying a friend drove him to class. However, Archer refused to identify that friend.

The Washington Post cites sources who claim that head coach Bob Wade, administrative assistant and long-time friend Woody Williams, part-time assistant Ralph Lee and graduate assistant Ed Lansford were involved in providing the transportation.

Wade and his assistants have refused to comment.

Gamecock Players Relieved To Have Coach

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina punter Rodney Price says the players are relieved to have a coach named, even if many of them don't know very much about Sparky Woods of Appalachian State.

"It's been a tough two or three weeks," he said. "All the players had been anxious about who the coach would be. I think a bunch of people are pleased."

Wide receiver Robert Brooks was not sure exactly who Woods was before Tuesday. In fact, Brooks still does not know a lot about the new Gamecock head coach.

But Brooks and his teammates are anxious to learn more about the man who replaced Joe Morrison, who died Feb. 5 of a heart attack.

"I didn't even realize he was the Appalachian State head coach when we played them last season," Brooks said. "Not too many guys on the team know much about him. "But after all we've been through these last few weeks, it's a relief that this has happened and we have a coach."

Linebacker Patrick Hinton knew a little more about Woods, 35, who was at Appalachian State for five seasons before being named the head coach at South Carolina on Tuesday.

"He has a winning record, and he's had good teams at Appalachian State. Most of the players on defense wanted to see Coach (Joe Lee) Dunn picked because we know what to expect from him, and we weren't sure what to expect from someone we don't know," Hinton said.

"But we're just going to have to try to get to know this guy and go out and in spring practice and work hard."

The Gamecocks begin spring practice March 13.

A week ago, Athletic Director King Dixon met with the players and gave them a progress report on the coaching search. What he had to say apparently impressed the players.

"He told us what kind of coach he was looking for," kicker Collin Mackie said. "To me, it doesn't matter who the new coach is because I know the kind of man King Dixon wanted to hire — someone with character who is going to be strong and who wants to be here to stay."

"From our standpoint, Sparky Woods may be a surprising choice, but I think it will be a great choice for us."

USC Assistants Hope To Stay On Staff

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina's assistant coaches say they'd like to stay, but whether they'll get to or not rests in the hands of new Gamecock coach Sparky Woods.

"I like it here," South Carolina assistant coach Tom McMahon said. "And not only myself, but my family. I hope I get a chance to stay."

Woods said at a news conference Tuesday where he was introduced as the new head coach that he hopes to have his staff in place by the time South Carolina begins spring drills March 13.

"We have great coaches on our staff (at Appalachian State), and I believe at least the bulk of them would come with me," Woods said. "But I think Appalachian State would at least consider one or two of them for the head coaching position there."

Two of those coaches, assistant head coach David Bibee and offensive coordinator Art Wilkins, have indicated they will interview for the Appalachian State job.

Most of the Gamecock assistants said they would wait to see what happens. But one who didn't wait is one of the newest members of the staff, Jacob Burney, who came to South Carolina in January from Mississippi State. Burney was hired Tuesday by Wisconsin as defensive line coach.

The others left on the staff are assistant head coach and defensive coordinator Joe Lee Dunn, who applied for the South Carolina head job, Ricky Diggs, Buddy King and Roy Gregory, who was hired in January from Mississippi State.

"Nobody ever said life was easy," Gregory said. "You just have to have faith things will work out. Any time you go through death, it's tough, and when your job is involved it makes it even tougher."

"I just got here. South Carolina is a great place, and I think Sparky will do a great job. Personally, I'd like to stay."

Tigers Fall In Hard-Fought Game

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Seventh-ranked Missouri went down fighting to Oklahoma State. Fighting and yelling and pushing and shoving.

The Tigers were called for a technical foul, an intentional foul and a flagrant foul in the final four minutes of their 82-71 loss Wednesday night to Oklahoma State. Mike Sandbothe was ejected for throwing Thomas Jordan to the floor.

After fans and players exchanged profanities, Missouri coaches had to restrain their players from going into the crowd.

"I think it was more of a frustration-type thing," Oklahoma State's Richard Dumas said. "A lot of stuff was happening all night, a lot of pushing and shoving the refs weren't calling."

Missouri, 22-6 and 8-3 in the Big Eight, led 69-68 when Nathan Buntin scored from inside with 5:45 left, the Tigers' first lead since early in the first half. But Missouri didn't make a field goal the rest of the way.

Missouri assistant coach Rich Daly, filling in for ill head coach Norm Stewart, was given a technical when he protested a blocking call with 3:45 remaining.

Darwyn Alexander made two free throws, giving the Cowboys the lead for good. Alexander, who had 17 points, then made a 3-pointer for a 73-69 Oklahoma State lead with 3½ minutes to go.

With three seconds left, Lee Coward of the Tigers was called for an intentional foul on Jordan, who scored 19 points for Oklahoma State.

After Jordan made one of two free throws, Sandbothe sent Jordan to the floor by hitting his neck on the inbounds.

"He just tried to block Jordan's shot," Daly said. "I didn't see it and I guess Jordan tried to retaliate."

Jordan tried to go after Sandbothe, who was charged with a flagrant foul and ejected.

"I think everybody was getting hot under the collar and they just let it out at one time," said Dumas, who scored 16 points.

Tech Tops...

"We had a lot of people in there looking at it, thinking that someone else would get it when Brian Oliver picked it up for the three-point play," Virginia coach Terry Holland said. "Of course, that was a very, very big play in the game. Tech made the plays down the stretch. We did it."

Georgia Tech, 18-9 overall and 7-5 in the ACC, also got 21 points from Dennis Scott and Oliver added 17. Virginia fell to 15-9 and 6-5.

"We played better than we have played on the road," Holland said. "I don't know if it was fatigue. Maybe we should have substituted a little bit more, but we really did not play well down the stretch."

The Cavaliers never led after Hammonds erased a 48-47 deficit on an inside jumper with 12:02 to go, triggering a 12-4 Yellow Jacket run that produced a 59-52 lead with 9:10 left.

The Cavs cut the lead to one point three times down the stretch, but never could gain the lead.

Bryant Stith led the Cavs with 28 points and Brent Dabbs added 14.

Clemson.....94
Wake Forest.....83

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — After watching his team trade baskets with Wake Forest for a full 20 minutes, Clemson Coach Cliff Ellis decided it was time to turn up the heat.

The result was a pressing defense early in the second half that led to a 22-9 scoring outburst as the Tigers pulled away from a close game and coasted to a 94-83 Atlantic Coast Conference win over the Deacons Wednesday night.

"This was almost like a road game," Ellis said after watching his team beat Wake Forest for the second time this season. "There was no emotion."

"The fans were waiting for us, and we were waiting for the fans," Ellis said. "I called the press mainly to get the fans in the game."

Wake Forest Coach Bob Staak said the press did not surprise him.

"I think tonight we lost the game — we didn't get beat by Clemson," Staak said. "We knew exactly what they were going to do in the second half. We just did not execute and it all boiled down to that fact."

"I don't think either team played with emotion," he said. "But they upped their level of play in the first five or six minutes in the second half and that was the difference in the game."

Dale Davis led Clemson with 23 points and four other Tigers had double figures in the victory.

Davis hit nine of 12 shots from the field and five of six from the line. He also had a game-high 13 rebounds and blocked three shots.

The Tigers, 16-8 overall and 5-6 in the Atlantic Coast Conference, led 45-43 at the half and saw the Deacons tie it up on a jumper by forward Chris King early in the second half.

Tim Kincaid, who finished with 14 points, and Derrick Forrest, who had 19, helped Clemson score 12 unanswered points to take a 57-45 lead with 16:29 left to play.

Wake Forest, 12-12, came back to within nine at 61-52 before junior Elden Campbell and Davis combined for a 7-0 outburst to put the Tigers in command.

Campbell finished with 21 points. Marion Cash added 11 for the Tigers.

King finished with 23 points to lead the Deacons. Sam Ivy and Derrick McQueen had 12 points each, while Cal Boyd scored 11 and Ralph Kitley added 10.

AURORA — Chocowinity closed out the regular season in fashion Wednesday recording a 51-39 win over Aurora in a Tobacco Belt Conference game.

The Lady Indians improved to 20-3 overall and 17-1 in the conference with the win. Aurora slipped to 15-8 overall and 13-5 in the league.

Chrylene Meyers led the way for Chocowinity with 17 points, while Drusilla Crawford added 14.

Aurora was led by Andrea Cannon with 12 points. Jeannie Keller added 11 for Aurora, while Melinda Peacock chipped in 10.

Chocowinity will be back in action next week in the conference tournament.

Rose Reportedly To Kentucky

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Eddie Sutton will be out and Lee Rose will be in as basketball coach of the Kentucky Wildcats in a few weeks, according to a published report.

The Columbus (Ohio) Dispatch, in a copyright story today, quoted a source close to the Kentucky program as saying "Sutton is going to be told he's gone in 10 days to two weeks. The new coach is picked and it's Rose. He's (C.M.) Newton's choice for the job."

Newton will become athletic director at Kentucky on April 1, replacing Cliff Hagan, who resigned last year. Newton refused to discuss the Kentucky coaching situation with the newspaper.

"I'm not AD there until April 1," said Newton, Vanderbilt University's head basketball coach.

Two Kentucky officials, however, told The Associated Press that no decision has been made on the coaching position.

Baseball Sweep...

allowing two hits, before giving way to Moody, who struggled as did all the others that followed.

"You've got to have pitching," Howard coach Chuck Hinton said. "Our first pitcher threw well. He had good location. Then our left-hander came in and had a lot of trouble. It's the first games and guys have got to get out there and throw."

"You have to start someplace. Last year we started out 10-0 and then the bottom fell out (as the Bison finished 18-31-1). This year, we wanted to start out with better competition."

ECU recorded only five hits in the first game, led by Eason's two, but took advantage of the Bison pitchers' control problems (eight walks) to produce runs.

In the second game, Langdon was in control from the outset. He gave up a single to the second batter he faced and then retired 17 of the next 18 batters he faced.

Again, ECU took advantage of Howard's pitching problems. Gast scored the first run of a three-run inning when he was forced home after David Ritchie drew a walk. John Adams then drove in two more runs with a single to give ECU a 3-0 advantage.

The Pirates made it 6-0 in the fourth when Eason hit a three-run homer over the leftfield fence to bring in Ritchie and Adams.

In the fifth, ECU sent eight men to the plate and pushed across four more runs, keyed by two errors, an RBI single by Brown and a sacrifice fly by Ritchie to provide the final margin, 10-0.

Brown went 3-3 in the second game as ECU banged out six hits for the win.

The Pirates return to action Saturday in a double-header at Harrington Field against George Washington.

ball just over a minute into the contest. Stanley Love hit a jumper in the lane to make it 4-0 before Charles Richardson hit a three-pointer for the Flames.

Edwards sparked the Pirates out to a 12-5 lead before Liberty scored three straight baskets, two by Bailey Alston, to cut the lead to 12-11. But again, the Pirates went on a tear, scoring four straight baskets and a free throw for a 21-11 lead with 10:39 to play. Edwards scored two of the four baskets and assisted another.

The lead hung around that area most of the rest of the half although it did climb to as much as 12, 30-18, on a Gus Hill basket. Liberty, however, cut it back to 32-22 at the half.

The Pirates scored on their first four attempts, two by Edwards, and then got another basket from Blue with 15:52 remaining for a 43-26 lead, the biggest of the game.

But the Pirates were unable to put the Flames out after that. East Carolina scored only four more baskets the rest of the way, one of them a three-pointer by Jeff Perlich. K. Ivy hit the other. The last basket for the Pirates came at the 4:44 mark as Murphy hit an eight-footer.

Meanwhile, Alston was leading the Flames back to within six points on several occasions. However, the Pirates were able to counter at the free throw line, pushing it back out to as much as 11 points just before the end.

Lose finished with 15 for the Pirates while Murphy had 14. Alston led the Flames with 26 points while Richardson and Todd Cline each had 10.

The loss drops Liberty to 6-16 overall while the Pirates climb to 14-12, assuring the Bucs of a winning record in the regular season. They still need one more win, however, to ensure an overall winning season.

That could come Saturday night when the Pirates entertain UNC-Wilmington in the final regular season game as the Pirates gun for a fifth place finish in the conference seedings and a fifth straight victory.

The last time East Carolina won five games in a row, Blue Edwards was in the third grade and Brooks Bryant was in kindergarten.

Volunteers Provide Support For Stranded Soviet Dancers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A Soviet ballet company that was left on shaky footing when its original backers pulled out made its New York debut thanks to an outpouring of support from the business and dance world.

Lead dancer Vadim Pisarev said Wednesday night's performance was everything the group had hoped for. "We got a 10-minute standing ovation. Everything went very well. We are extremely pleased," he said.

New York arts patron Howard Gilman, averting an embarrassing international incident, mobilized the business and dance worlds when the Donetsk Ballet's original backers bailed out in mid-tour, leaving the penniless in Baltimore. "These people started out in Baltimore eating pizzas donated by theater ushers," Gilman said. "I think everybody understood there was something more at stake than just a company that wasn't able to perform. It was everyone's reputation."

Businesses, ballet lovers and even a New Jersey firehouse pitched in with free meals, cash and messages of hope. The artistic director of the American Ballet Theatre, Mikhail Baryshnikov, provided technical and moral support; Eliot Feld, founder of the Feld Ballet, treated the dancers to dinner.

With the help of I.C.M. Artists, a concert management firm based in New York City, Gilman booked the Donetsk into New York's City Center, with a Wednesday night debut. Future appearances were scheduled at the National Theater in Washington and the Shubert Theater in Philadelphia.

"We were doing what ordinarily visiting performers stranded and can't be done: putting together an engagement and a tour in less than a week. Most often, it takes six months or a year," Gilman said. "This disaster was about to happen and I thought someone should do something."

The Donetsk is a lesser-known but well-regarded classical company from the Ukraine with 59 dancers, most under age 25, plus a handful of support staff.

The first performance was Feb. 2 in Baltimore on a tour that was also to include Columbus, Ohio; Detroit; Chicago; Kansas City, Mo.; and other cities.

Disaster struck Feb. 5 when the California-based promoter, Heart of Art, announced that Californian and Mexican investors had withheld $200,000 because dancers from better-known companies like the Kirov Ballet couldn't leave their country to join the tour, as promised.

"I was totally broken — like a bird that had flown into an obstacle," said the 24-year-old Pisarev.

Members of the company feared that if they were sent home after only five performances in Baltimore, the tour would be construed as an artistic rather than a managerial failure.

Pryor Will Pay Support For Child

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Comedian Richard Pryor was ordered to pay $3,500 a month more in child support for a 22-month-old son fathered with a showgirl extra who said she lives in a roach-infested apartment.

Celebrity attorney Marvin Mitchelson represented Geraldine Mason in her successful bid Wednesday to have support payments from Pryor, 48, increased from $1,000 a month to $4,500.

In papers filed with Superior Court, Ms. Mason said she and her son Franklin, born April 29, 1987, lived in a Houston apartment infested with mice and roaches and that she was unable to work.

"Now I am all but destitute," she stated in the suit.

Miss Mason, a showgirl who met Pryor on the set of the film "Jo Jo Dancer, Your Life is Calling" in 1985, said she became accustomed to an extravagant lifestyle with the comedian. The lawsuit said she received more than $65,000 from the entertainer, including a West Hollywood apartment, a $5,000 bank account, trips in a private jet and use of a car.

"His extravagant spending on gifts swept me off my feet," she said in the lawsuit, adding Pryor became angry when she told him she was pregnant "and he told me he did not want to see me anymore."

Pryor, who has been married five times, appears in the recently released film, "Moving." The actor's publicist could not be reached for comment Wednesday night.

McFerrin's 'Don't Worry' Brings In Top Grammys

By Richard De Atley
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Bobby McFerrin's feel-good song "Don't Worry, Be Happy" was the choice of the music academy for song and record of the year over Tracy Chapman's downhearted "Fast Car" at the 31st Grammy awards.

McFerrin, the vocal gymnast who uses his voice and body as an instrument, won four Grammys Wednesday night, while Miss Chapman, a shy 25-year-old folksinger from Boston whose self-titled album dealt with racism, poverty and desperation, won three trophies.

"I think it was so popular because it went to the spirit," McFerrin said backstage of his song. "I think, given the mood at the time, it was such that people wanted something uplifting and joyful and funny. The tempo was nice."

Both big winners lost to George Michael for album of the year. He won for his platinum "Faith," a crossover blend of ballads, rock and soulful pop, including the hit single "I Want Your Sex."

Fifteen of the Grammys were handed out in a 3-hour, 20-minute long ceremony broadcast live to the East Coast by CBS. The rest of the 76 awards for the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences were handed out during a pre-broadcast ceremony.

Singer Anita Baker took two rhythm & blues trophies for her "Giving You The Best That I Got," including best female performance and a shared songwriting award with Skip Scarborough and Randy Holland.

In country music, Randy Travis won best male vocal with "Old 8 X 10" and K.T. Oslin won female vocal honors for "Hold Me," which also was voted best country song. The Judds won best country group for "Give a Little Love."

Willie Dixon, the 73-year-old blues master whose songs have been hits for so many rock groups, finally won his first Grammy for his "Hidden Charms" album in the best traditional blues recording category. He mounted the stage with the aid of a cane and received a standing ovation.

"I've been in the music business for about 50 years," Dixon said backstage. "It's about time, don't you think?"

Dixon's compositions for rock groups include such hits as "Spoonful" for the British supergroup Cream in the late 1960s.

McFerrin, asked by reporters about the difference in musical style between him and Chapman, said he didn't like the idea of competition with her.

"I am touched by her music," he said. "This is by no means a gauge of artistic ability."

Besides best song and record, McFerrin won best pop male vocal for "Don't Worry" and the male jazz vocal award for the song "Brothers."

Chapman did not appear backstage to talk to reporters. Her Grammys were for best contemporary folk recording, best new artist, and best pop female vocal performance for "Fast Car," a song about a woman trying to escape poverty by driving away from it with her jobless boyfriend.

Chapman's debut album deals with such subjects as poverty, racism and revolution and was a surprise hit in 1988, selling more than 3 million copies.

"I want to thank my family — my mother, who bought me my first guitar, my sister, who's always been my best audience, best critic and best friend," Chapman said tearfully as she accepted the award for best female pop vocalist.

A check of Grammy records showed "Don't Worry, Be Happy" was the first a capella song, or one without instrumental background, to win best song and record of the year. Another a capella group, the sextet Take 6, won the soul gospel duo-group award for their self-titled debut album.

In a new category, hard rock-metal vocal or instrumental, the high-voltage rockers Jethro Tull won for "Crest of a Knave," defeating newer groups such as Metallica and Jane's Addiction.

Another new category — rap — was hit by a boycott by some of the major nominees. The best song was "Parents Just Don't Understand" by D.J. Jazzy Jeff & The Fresh Prince, who were among those not attending the show because the award was given during the pre-telecast presentations.

"I personally felt that the boycott was negative," said Kool Moe Dee, an award presenter. "I understand that they felt a little upset because they didn't get the rap segment on television, but I think it was more important for the rap fans, for America, to see rappers in a different light."

Neil Dorfman was named producer of the year for British rocker Sting's album, "... Nothing Like The Sun."

The late Roy Orbison won his third Grammy, sharing best country vocal collaboration with country singer k.d. lang for their version of Orbison's "Crying."

Tina Turner won the female rock vocalist prize with "Tina Live in Europe." Robert Palmer won male rock vocalist for "Simply Irresistible."

Manhattan Transfer, the harmonious jazz vocal quartet, were awarded best pop performance by a duo or group for the single "Brasil."

Pop singer Linda Ronstadt took honors in the Mexican-American category for her album "Canciones De Mi Padre," dedicated to her father's heritage.

Terence Trent D'Arby won best male rhythm & blues vocal for "Introducing The Hardline According to Terence Trent D'Arby."

Irish rockers U2 won for rock performance by a group for the single "Desire" and music video performance for "Where The Streets Have No Name."

Lifetime achievement awards were given to dancer-actor Fred Astaire, blues chanteuse Bessie Smith, jazz pianist Art Tatum, cellist Pablo Casals, violinist Jascha Heifetz, singer-actress Lena Horne, soprano Leontyne Price, singer Sarah Vaughan, and trumpeter Dizzy Gillespie.

Other winners included the Rev. Jesse Jackson for best spoken word recording for a speech included on Aretha Franklin's "One Lord, One Faith, One Baptism" album. Franklin's album also won best female soul gospel performance.

In with the king, East gave his partner another diamond ruff. The defenders still had to collect a trick with the king of clubs for down three, or 500 points.

This hand cropped up in a pair tournament. East-West worked hard to extract the maximum penalty, and to do so West had to break a cardinal rule not once, but twice! But the effort was largely in vain. Most North-South pairs did not sacrifice in five clubs, so the majority of East-West pairs got to play four spades, a contract which presented little difficulty and usually netted East-West 620 points.
