Bush Pledges Continued Troop Support In Korea

By Terence Hunt
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL, South Korea — President Bush today pledged continued troop support for South Korea and called for lower trade barriers as he wrapped up a five-day Asian trip and headed home to a fierce political battle over John Tower's nomination to head the Pentagon.

"I have come here today as the leader of a faithful friend and a dependable ally," Bush said in a speech to the South Korean National Assembly that highlighted his quick stopover in Seoul. The president boarded Air Force One at 5:24 p.m. local time (3:24 a.m. EST) for the nearly 15-hour return trip to Washington.

The president's audience applauded when he pledged to keep the 42,000 U.S. troops on duty as protection against North Korea, but sat quietly when he talked of trade.

"I want you to have this direct from me: if we are to keep our bilateral relationships growing even stronger, much more needs to be done" to ease trading relations, said the president.

Although Bush's South Korean visit was limited to five hours, a security force of 120,000 police, agents and commandos was put on top alert to protect him against threats ranging from radical students to North Korean infiltrators.

About 700 radical students shouting "Bush go home!" battled riot police with firebombs and rocks during a 45-minute clash around Dongguk University in an abortive attempt to march on the U.S. Embassy about three miles away.

Earlier, police arrested about 15 prominent dissidents shouting "no Bush visit" who had tried to assemble about a block from the embassy in downtown Seoul.

Minutes after they were hauled away, Bush's helicopter flew overhead on its way to the Blue House, the nearby presidential mansion, after his arrival from China at a secure military base outside Seoul. Police also clashed with demonstrators in five other cities, including the site of a U.S. air base south of Seoul.

From Seoul, Bush was flying back to Washington and the sternest political test so far of his young administration, the storm over the Tower nomination. The appointment is in danger of rejection in the Democratic-controlled Senate, and the president has pledged to mount a personal lobbying campaign to salvage it.

Bush's brief visit in Seoul included a luncheon for which the participants took off shoes and donned slippers. Guests sat on a heated floor on cushions with hard backs.

Body Parts Stored In Farm Barn

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County law enforcement officials are investigating a packhouse containing human body parts that deputies discovered Sunday near Bethel.

On a tip from area residents, deputies found several cylindrical cardboard containers with body parts and medical wastes inside, investigators said. Chief Deputy Brooks Oakley said he consulted with county attorney William H. Watson and Pitt District Attorney Tom Haigwood and that, as of now, no criminal charges will be filed.

"Apparently, there is no violation," Oakley said.

John Gray, who operates funeral homes and crematoriums in Raleigh and Bethel, told authorities today that he owns the packhouse where the remains were stored, Oakley said.

Gray claimed the remains were being stored until they could be incinerated at a later time, Oakley said. Gray could not be reached for comment.

Deputies found the material off rural paved road 1547 between Bethel and Stokes, Oakley said.

"We did find some human organs and that kind of thing out there," Oakley said.

Detective Billy Vandiford said it appeared some of the materials had been in the packhouse since 1986, and the stored waste includes needles, syringes, human ashes, human organs and body parts.

Dr. Stan Harris of Greenville, regional medical examiner, said he inspected the material Sunday.

"It's in no way a felonious criminal matter. At this point, they appear to be biological remains, and I have no suspicion in

Book Protests Kill Two In Bombings

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A bomb killed a Moslem civilian today in India during a demonstration over "The Satanic Verses", and police linked a fatal blast in Pakistan to Moslem protests over the novel.

The publisher, meanwhile, is considering labeling novel copies of Salman Rushdie's book with an apology in an effort to defuse the protests, a London newspaper reported today.

Thousands of Shiite Moslems demonstrated in Lebanon and Iran on Sunday in support of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's order Feb. 14 that Moslems seek out and kill the British author and his publishers.

The Press Trust of India news agency reported that today's bombing in Jammu-Kashmir state was aimed at police who were trying to prevent demonstrators from closing shops in Srinagar. However, a Moslem civilian was killed instead and seven people were injured, including a police officer and two news photographers, Press Trust said.

The news agency said the demonstrators were trying to enforce a general strike to protest Friday's police gunfire during rioting over the novel in Bombay. Nine people were shot and killed.

At least 18 people have been killed since Feb. 12 in India and Pakistan in violence related to "The Satanic Verses."

On Sunday, a bomb blast killed a guard outside a British cultural center in Karachi, Pakistan, police said.

Police identified the victim as Mohammad Shafi, 65, and said the explosion destroyed the building's guard room.

Asked whether the blast was connected to the furor over Rushdie's novel, one officer said, "It appears that way." He spoke on condition of anonymity.

About 5,000 pro-Iranian Shiite Moslems burned effigies of Rushdie during a march in Beirut, Lebanon, on Sunday.

Students' Art Item Proves 'Offensive'

A work of art was removed from the mall at East Carolina University this morning because it was considered "offensive and repugnant" by some, according to Chancellor Richard Eakin.

According to Eakin, "Two students in the school of art undertook as a class project to construct on the mall ... (a) display or public sculpture intended to convey an expression against racism.

"This display, which was on view for a short time this morning, has resulted in a sharply mixed reaction and many have found it to be offensive and repugnant. It easily could be misunderstood as to its intent," Eakin said, "and could be seen as conveying a message in direct opposition to the artists' intent.

"This university community as well as every other has a responsibility to observe the highest level of sensitivity to the feelings of all members of the community. This work, while well-intentioned, was judged to lack that sensitivity.

"The most repugnant portion of the display was removed immediately and after discussion the students agreed to dismantle and remove the remainder," according to the chancellor.

One of the artists who designed the work, Victoria Higgins, voiced concern over its removal from the mall. Ms. Higgins identified the other student involved with the project as Marc Sylvester.

Sources, who asked not to be identified, described the part of the sculpture which was removed initially by ECU police officers as "a black mannequin hanging in effigy ... a kind of a thing that resembled someone being hanged."

Reunion: an event designed to fondly remember the past and to forge ahead into the future. An opportunity to reflect on events occurring long ago and a chance to reaffirm friendships for decades to come.

Approximately 200 people were part of a very special reunion Saturday evening as the Greenville Jaycees conducted its 50th anniversary dinner and dance at the Greenville Country Club.

Representatives from nearly all the 50 years were accounted for at the celebration — from the organization's first president, Dave Mosier, to current Greenville Jaycee President Michie Faulconer.

Highlighting the affair was a two-hour program, featuring five former Jaycees presidents, which recalled many of the Jaycee-sponsored civic projects which helped shape Greenville into one of the most thriving communities of eastern North Carolina.

Mosier described the organization's beginnings and elaborated on Jaycee accomplishments during the group's first ten years — accomplishments such as the dedication of Guy Smith Stadium and the optioning of land on which Pitt-Greenville Airport is located.

Henry Aldridge, who served as president from 1955-1956, outlined the Jaycees second decade, which included the Jaycees participation in such successful endeavors as changing the Greenville city government to a city manager-council arrangement and raising funds to help equip the city's first rescue vehicle.

Gene Prescott, who served as president in 1968-1969, accounted for the Jaycees' third decade while the fourth decade, in which the organization experienced its greatest growth, was detailed by Tom Reese, who served as president in 1973-1974.

Jack Myers, 1984-1985 president, chronicled the last 10 years of Jaycee accomplishments.

Auto Dealers Object To Title Fee Plan

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

State lawmakers have proposed a highway bill calling for an increase in title transfer fees that could put a sharp dent in automobile sales across North Carolina, several area automobile dealers say.

"It's going to have a very strong negative impact on car and truck sales across the state," said Brian Pecheles, general manager of Joe Pecheles Volkswagen Inc., in Greenville.

"I think the biggest problem is that it's just not the most equitable way to spread the cost of building highways," he said. "The person that drives their car to and from work only — it's definitely going to have a negative impact on that person ... A 1 percent (fee) would be much more fair."

Officers in the North Carolina Automobile Dealers Association, which represents 750 new car and truck dealers in the state, have also spoken out against the plan, which would set the title fee at 2 percent of the cost of the vehicle. Used car dealers have also voiced opposition to the move.

Presently, the title fee is $5 — regardless of the cost of the car — and the license plate transfer fee is $4. New plates for cars cost $20, and for trucks it is $21.50.

The new plan would set the title fee at 2 percent of the car's value; the fee on a $15,000 car would be $300.

The proposal is part of a 12-year, $8.6 billion program designed to generate money for the state's roads.

The fee increase is expected to produce $5.6 billion, and lawmakers have proposed a 5.25 cent increase in the gasoline tax, which is expected to generate $3 billion. Sponsors of the bill want to implement the new tax provisions by July 1, the start of the new fiscal year.

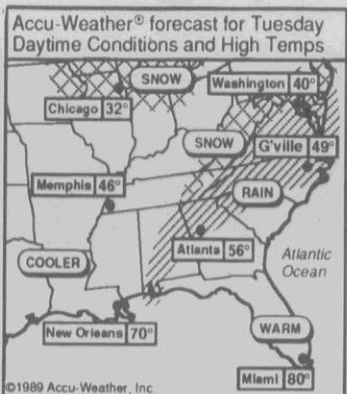

Opponents of the bill claim the increased fee will hurt consumers, automobile dealers, truck drivers and many people employed in automobile-related jobs.

Randy Doub of Greenville, a member of the state Board of Transportation, said Gov. Jim Martin and Transportation Secretary James Harrington had asked the General Assembly to fund part of the program through a bond issue. But, Doub said lawmakers were strongly opposed to the bond idea, which would help lessen the strain on customers and dealers.

"I have some concerns for the average man on the street selling used cars," Doub said. "It could

Rescue Call Reports Up

The 10 rescue squads in Pitt County answered 7,016 calls in 1988, 805 more than the 6,166 calls they answered during 1987, according to Bobby Joyner, the county's emergency services coordinator.

Joyner, in his annual report of rescue calls handled by the county's communications center, said rescue units operated by the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department responded to 3,534 calls in 1988. This compared to 2,997 calls the department answered in 1987.

The other nine rescue squads in the county — from Ayden, Bethel, Eastern Pines, Falkland, Farmville, Fountain, Grifton, Pactolus and Winterville — answered 3,462 calls in 1988, compared to 2,612 calls the previous year.

According to the figures, Greenville Fire-Rescue Department rescue units answered 72 more calls than the nine volunteer rescue squads combined during 1988. In 1987, Greenville units answered 385 more calls than the total for the other nine rescue squads.

October was the busiest month for rescue calls in 1988, with 680 calls made by the 10 squads, while April, with 477 calls, was the least busy.

In October, Greenville rescue vehicles responded to 361 of the calls, while trucks from the other nine squads answered 319 calls.

Hearing Scheduled On Vote By Mayor

A public hearing on whether the mayor of Greenville should have a vote in all matters before the City Council will be conducted Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the council chambers of City Hall.

The Greenville City Council agreed to hold a public hearing on the matter after 30 people asked at the council's Jan. 12 meeting that the council listen to citizen input as to whether the city's highest elected official should vote.

The City Council in 1981 took away the mayor's vote except in cases to break a tie among the six council members. However, the city was notified in late December that the 1981 decision was not precleared first by the U.S. Justice Department as required by law.

Mayor Ed Carter has repeatedly spoken in favor of the mayor having a vote. However, the council, which will make the final decision on the matter, indicated its unapproving position on Jan. 9.

The council at that session passed a resolution directing the city attorney to submit the 1981 charter amendment, which denies the mayor a vote on all matters, to the U.S. Justice Department for preclearance.

City Attorney Mac McCarley said information obtained from the public hearing will be forwarded to the Justice Department as part of the city's submission for preclearance.

Area Cleaning Up After 11-Inch Snow

By Jerry Raynor
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

After two full-fledged winter weekends in a row, city workers in Greenville's Public Works Department face an ongoing effort to clean up the debris — especially limbs felled by the ice storm of Feb. 17 and 18.

And after this weekend's heavy snowfall, high floodwaters in the Tar River and in Greenville's flood plain can be expected as Sunday's and today's warmer weather melts the heavy blanket of snowfall statewide.

Danny Gaylor, operator of the Greenville Utilities' water plant, said the snowfall registered 11 inches at "the peak of the snowfall late Friday."

Temperatures varied widely during the weekend, with a low of 13 degrees recorded early Saturday morning, climbing to an almost springtime high of 55 on Sunday.

"The Tar River water level this morning at 8 o'clock has already risen to 14.6 feet," Gaylor said. "This is 1.6 feet above the flood level crest. Since the snowfall was statewide, we can expect flooding problems soon due to the melting of snow upstate plus expected rain in the next day or so. It may not rise as high as the 18.2 level a couple of years ago, but we can be pretty certain there will be some significant high water levels soon."

Glenn Whisler, transportation manager for the public works department, said this morning that "with all going well, and no more ice or snow storms right away, we should be able to remove the tremendous number of limbs felled throughout Greenville by the ice storm weekend before last."

"There's no way we can estimate the number of limbs that broke and fell under the weight of ice, but it's been extensive throughout all Greenville. Pine limbs, more than any other, broke and fell," Whisler said.

To accelerate the clean up process, Whisler said that the full street crew, along with sanitation and street maintenance personnel when available, are removing limbs.

The limbs are being taken to the city's demolition landfill, rather than to county landfills. "We are using our tree chippers to grind up as many of the limbs as possible, and others we are putting into the fill the way they are."

Whisler noted that some instances of damage were reported to roofs of homes and some damage occurred to parked vehicles. "Just now we have no accurate account of such damages," he said.

Greenville Tagged 'Tree City USA'

The National Arbor Day Foundation has designated Greenville as a "Tree City USA," according to Greg Brown, the city's public information officer.

The Tree City USA program recognizes cities doing outstanding jobs of maintaining and replacing their trees. Greenville will receive a flag with the program logo, a plaque and Tree City USA community signs.

Brown said Greenville had to meet several criteria, including the appointment of a legally constituted tree board (the Greenville Community Appearance Commission), having a community tree ordinance, developing a comprehensive community forestry program with a minimum budget of $1 per city resident, making an official Arbor Day proclamation and conducting a public, commemorative replanting.

Brown said the designation comes as the city's Environmental Advisory Commission is developing proposals to strengthen tree protection through planning and zoning regulations and new city ordinances.

Recognition of the tree-protection program came largely through the Leadership Institute of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, which applied for the Tree City USA designation last year.

To study the issue, the Leadership Institute appointed a five-person committee consisting of Elizabeth Newsome Nelson, Daniel Sprau, Michal Esarey, Wanda Edwards Yuhas and Wesley Beckner. Local schools also helped through tree-protection projects on Arbor Day, March 17.

Elmhurst Elementary School students and their parents spent a day planting five trees then pruning and fertilizing 20 others. Wintergreen Elementary School landscaped its grounds and planted 17 trees as part of its Arbor Day commemoration and kindergartners at each of the city's elementary schools planted a "class tree" on school grounds.

The Public Works Department has scheduled two tree-planting ceremonies on Arbor Day.

Greenville also prepared an inventory of all trees growing on public property, noting their condition and listing recommendations for future needs.

"The Tree City USA award is an excellent indication that you are taking your municipal tree-care responsibilities seriously," said John Rosenow, executive director of the National Arbor Day Foundation, in a letter to Greenville Mayor Ed Carter.

"This is the first time the city has received this national recognition and we're delighted to have it," Carter said.

HAZEL GAY MOORE

Pitt Nurse Will Head State Unit

Pitt County native and former resident Hazel Gay Browning Moore of Raleigh has been named executive director of the North Carolina Nurses Association effective Wednesday.

The appointment is an advancement for Mrs. Moore from her position as associate executive director, a position she held from 1982 until November 1987 when she became a project analyst for the Certificate of Need Section of the state Department of Human Resources Division of Facility Services.

Mrs. Moore is a 1968 graduate of Farmville High School. She holds a bachelor's degree in nursing, a master's degree in rehabilitation counseling and a master's degree in nursing from East Carolina University. She has worked as a maternal-child health nurse at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and in the general practice of Drs. Woodworth and Pearsall in Greenville. From 1973 to 1980, she taught in the East Carolina University School of Nursing.

Following a family move to Raleigh, she became an assistant professor at the Duke University School of Nursing, where she developed a clinical component in maternity nursing for the junior-level curriculum and developed and implemented a senior-level elective in high-risk maternity nursing.

A Fountain native, Mrs. Moore is the daughter of Daniel and Helen Gay. She and her husband, Frank Douglas, and daughter reside in Raleigh.

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — Exploratory drilling for natural gas 35 miles off the Outer Banks would not endanger the environment, federal officials say.

Mobil Oil wants to drill on a large geologic feature known as the Norfolk Arch, about 35 miles east of Salvo.

Jaycees Mark 50th Anniversary

County, the evening offered Jaycee alumni a chance to remember countless anecdotes.

"We had a lot of serious projects, but we also had a lot of fun," commented Charles Horne, who served as president in 1952-1953.

Also attending the anniversary gala was Jaycees state Chairman Joe Walker, who described the current state organization as having about 8,000 members in 20 chapters throughout North Carolina.

Walker said the state organization's accomplishments this past year include raising over $1 million dollars for the Jaycee Burn Center at Chapel Hill, sponsoring the stay of 15 boys at the Boys Home at Lake Waccamaw, and raising contributions to the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, The Muscular Dystrophy Association and the Duke Cancer Center.

"You've got quite a tradition here in Greenville and I think it's very important that you set this time aside and evaluate what you've done in the last 50 years and talk about the many, many achievements," Walker said.

"There's only one thing I know of that's more important and that is that the current Jaycees assess what has happened here in the last 50 years and set the tone and direction for the next 50," he added.

Current President Michie Faulconer said he foresees the next 50 years for the Greenville Jaycees to be a successful continuation of the accomplishments of the previous half century.

"Jaycees are do'ers, helpers and winners. It's like everyone in this room," Faulconer said. "We'll continue to attract good people because we are made of sound ideas and morality. And if history and this banquet are any indication, the Greenville leaders of tomorrow are the Jaycees of today."

The Organizing Committee for the Jaycees 50th Anniversary Dinner and Dance included Reese, Mark Meltzer, Jerry Creech, Jerry Cox, Floyd Little, Hal Smith, Myers, Mosier and Joe Clark. Active Jaycees members who were part of the organizing committee were Ken Smith, Jeff Boswell, Fred Keith and Mike Walsh.

Andrews said luggage, a radio, a watch, a hair dryer, a pair of boots and three sweatshirts, with a combined value of $985, were taken from a guest room at Best Value Motel on Memorial Drive in a break-in reported at 7:37 p.m.

Officer A.T. Parrish said a 1983 Chrysler Cordoba, later recovered, was taken from the Piggly Wiggly parking lot at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Hooker Road in an incident reported at 8:07 p.m. and three pieces of luggage, two coats, a microwave oven, a video cassette recorder, a telephone answering machine, two portable radios, a suit, a watch, a gold chain and other items were taken from 301B Alice Drive in a break-in reported at 10:37 p.m.

Officer K.P. Woods said a microwave oven, three suitcases, two speakers, a television, a telephone and telephone answering machine, a diamond ring, an onyx ring, two gold chains and two gold bracelets, a video camcorder, 15 compact disks, $220 in cash, a camera and stereo receiver and other items were taken from 104 Chesterfield Court in a break-in reported at 2:19 p.m. Sunday, while Officer M.J. ### Hennis Trial

WILMINGTON (AP) — A Fort Bragg Army sergeant accused of stabbing a mother and two of her young daughters to death was scheduled to stand trial again today in New Hanover County, after the N.C. Supreme Court overturned convictions against him.

A jury in Fayetteville convicted Timothy Bailey Hennis of three murders and first-degree rape in July 1986.

The May 1985 killing spree took the life of Kathryn Eastburn, 32, after she had been raped. Authorities found the body of 3-year-old Erin in the same bedroom. In another bedroom, they found the body of 5-year-old Kara.

Farm Scene

North Carolina swine producers have the reputation of raising sows that wean more pigs per litter than any other U.S. state. The reason is largely due to the significant number of highly productive maternal sows on our large swine farms. These sows are generally composed of the white breeds which are noted for having excellent maternal characteristics. Because these sows raise large litters, nutrition becomes very important the sow herd.

Most farms use the same lactation ration as gestation ration for their sows and just increase the amount fed during lactation. Sometimes fat is added to the lactation ration to provide more energy intake by the sow. Still, swine producers have problems with sows maintaining condition in the farrowing barn and continually see delayed estrous in these high producing sows. Recent work by Dr. Bill Schoenherr, NCSU Swine Extension Specialist, points out that protein may be the limiting factor in preventing delayed estrous and maintaining body condition of these sows.

According to Dr. Schoenherr, high producing sows can easily yield 18 to 20 pounds of milk per day when nursing 9 to 10 pigs. This milk production, coupled with her nutritional requirements for maintenance, greatly increases the dietary requirements for protein during peak lactation.

Adequate intake by sows during lactation often limits the nutrients available to them. All swine producers at times have had problems getting sows to consume adequate quantities of feed in the farrowing barn, especially during summer. Research indicates that sows will actually consume more feed when the protein is higher (i.e., 18 percent protein ration vs. 13 percent protein ration).

Based on certain production levels for high producing sows, it has been shown that these sows must consume 16.1 pounds of a 13 percent protein feed daily to meet necessary lysine requirements during lactation. However, if the ration contains 18 percent CP, only 10.1 pounds would need to be consumed daily by the sow to meet her lysine requirement.

These findings indicate swine producers should consider feeding a lactation ration which contains 16 percent to 18 percent protein. This high protein lactation ration could help alleviate problems with sows rebreeding, poor feed consumption by the sow during lactation and poor sow condition. ## A Lesson

What's Important And What's Not

Citizens of Greenville, Tuesday is an opportunity to tell your elected public officials what issues need their attention — and what issues don't.

At a public hearing that night, the City Council will hear comment on whether to allow the mayor to vote. That is not a matter board members need to address, and the public should take this chance to tell them so.

They should also remind them of the myriad concerns of a growing city — problems that do indeed demand the leadership of elected officials. Concerns like inadequate thoroughfares and daily traffic snarls; inconsistent zoning and land use conflicts; a burgeoning population whose demands are quickly outpacing the community's financial ability to meet these needs; a pleasing quality of life that is diminished by the by-products of such rapid growth.

The question of a mayoral vote isn't among these issues.

While it may appear unfair, there are sound reasons, backed by clear evidence, to deny the mayor blanket voting privileges. Currently, the mayor is allowed to vote only to break a tie. If the City Council is deadlocked, he breaks that impasse.

'While it may appear unfair, there are sound reasons, backed by clear evidence, to deny the mayor blanket voting privileges.'

That system is an appropriately balanced one that keeps one person from wielding too much influence on public policy. The mayor's role should be one of persuasion and consensus building, not authoritarian power. With a regular vote on every issue, the city's top public official simply becomes too influential.

A look at Greenville's political past proves the point. The city opted for this system in 1981 to escape a setup that encouraged mayors to dabble in empire-building. Mayors encouraged their own supporters in each district to run for office, and once they were elected, while progress occurred under these leaders, the community was also led by the nose into and around some crucial issues. That's not the right way to conduct public business, and removing the mayoral vote was a step forward. Reinstating it would be a step backward.

The non-issue of a mayoral vote is the political pet of the city's current mayor, Ed Carter. His constituents and his fellow officials might ask their mayor just why he wants to devote public time and money to regression. Winding the workings of a city around one's finger is not a noble goal — and that's what happens when a mayor has too much power. It's not a predicament Greenville needs to repeat.

So at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the City Council Chambers, the public will have a chance to give its elected officials a history lesson about the mayoral vote. After that, maybe the discussion can focus on concerns that are real issues and need the real attention of real leaders.

The Debate Over The Source

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — Since the opening of the 1989 General Assembly, the issue that promises to headline the session has been waiting off of center stage, much like a headline actor waiting to make a grand entrance.

When North Carolina teachers marched on Raleigh last week to demand a bigger pay raise than that proposed by Gov. Jim Martin, they may have forced that headliner — a major general tax increase — out onto center stage.

"The debate has started over whether to raise taxes," Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, said during an appropriations subcommittee on education meeting the day of the teachers' march.

State revenues will allow only about $225 million in new spending next fiscal year. That comes nowhere near the amount needed to fund the next installment of the Basic Education Plan, to implement prison reforms and grant a pay increase of any significance. Martin has flip-flopped back and forth, unable to decide whether he wants to fund a pay raise or the BEP. He continually says that the state doesn't need a tax increase, although it is obvious that he can't keep his campaign promises to fully fund the BEP and give a teacher pay raise without raising taxes.

House Speaker Joe Mavretic has said several times that it is up to the governor to propose a tax increase, but in an interview after the march he held open the possibility that one could come out of the House leadership. He noted that the House has a bi-partisan leadership and said that a consensus for an increase could coalesce.

The march had other important legislators also talking about a tax increase. "Not often do I feel that a public demonstration reaches the point of direct effect (on the legislature)," said Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, chairman of the Finance Subcommittee on Ways and Means. "But this event highlighted the need to increase salaries for teachers...and the need to finance out support in whatever way."

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, Senate Finance chairman, said he's already started thinking about contingency plans for raising new revenue for the state. If the base budget committees cannot cut enough out of current spending plans to finance a pay increase, than new revenue will be needed, he said.

Sen. Richard Conder, D-Richmond, has been one of the most vocal about the need for new money for schools. The Rockingham banker, who is considered a fiscal conservative and pro-business legislator, said the state's political leadership has its priorities upside down.

"The way it looks to me, we're going to prioritize highways over education," he said in reference to a major road tax increase that appears poised for passage. "If we're not going to get a good educated labor force, we won't need the highways."

Conder said that North Carolina has to spend more money on education. "You can't do it with money alone, but you can't do it without new money," he said about educating a labor force for modern industry.

If a general tax increase stands any chance for passage, Rauch said, it would have to deal with something other than the sales tax, or corporate taxes. The proposed income tax reform package currently before Miller's subcommittee might be the perfect vehicle for a tax increase. It is revenue neutral as now proposed, but cuts taxes for most lower to middle income families. That very plan, with smaller that currently proposed cuts, could become that plan that brings in the needed money for a raise.

Life In The 'W&D' Division

Art Buchwald

One question I am constantly being asked is, "Did the press have the right to investigate and print stories about the private life of Sen. John Tower when he was being considered by the Senate Armed Services Committee for the position of secretary of defense?"

The answer is, "Only if the Russians already knew about it." Tower's off-duty activities are nobody's business, with the exception of the National Enquirer. They are only significant if what he does for recreation could give aid and comfort to the enemy, while the enemy provides aid and comfort to him.

Few people are aware that the KGB has a large department called The W&D Division — W&D stands for Womanizing and Daiquiris. The purpose of the department is to find out which Pentagon officials like womanizing and which ones prefer to play miniature golf. If they discover an official who likes to do both, the KGB refers to such a person as a "twofer."

With one of the largest budgets of any agency in the Soviet Union, the W&D has training quarters, actually luxury hotels, where beautiful women are instructed on how to be friendly and warm to Westerners in high places.

At this very moment, the KGB is holding a Miss Secretary of Defense 1989 contest, with the most beautiful women from all over the Soviet Union competing. The winner gets 12,000 rubles, a Ziss convertible and an opportunity to meet a U.S. secretary of defense in the bar of her choice.

The girls have to appear in bathing suits and then evening gowns. There is also a talent category. Each contestant is asked how she would get the NATO order of battle while making pillow talk.

To make the contest more interesting, each woman has access to any clothing in Raisa Gorbachev's closet and is issued a Diner's Club camera hidden in the neckline, which goes "click" every time she is bitten on the neck. One of the most important qualities that the judges look for is how many people in high government positions she can catch in a revolving door.

I only mention what is going on in Moscow right now because our president can't be too careful when selecting a secretary of defense for this country. While Tower may not be guilty of anything, we would be fools to ignore the fact that the KGB's Miss Secretary of Defense 1989 is about to be chosen and start on her world tour.

The KGB is a vicious, calculating organization and there is nothing it would like more than to have its beauty queen party with Sen. Tower on a nuclear submarine, even if he doesn't want to. The Russians are taking the position that Tower may not be a swinger, but they have to be ready for any emergency. While shooting photos of Tower's bedroom, a KGB man was overheard to say, "We're not talking about a man falling in love with an agent — we're talking about finding out what's screwed onto the undercarriage of the Stealth bomber."

The odds-on favorite to win the Miss Secretary of Defense 1989 title is Miss Smolensk. She used to be a ballet dancer with the Bolshoi, but she kept falling down and they had to let her go. She is not only reported to be a seductive Mata Hari, but she also speaks fluent Pentagonese.

In any case, the KGB officials have big plans for the winner. They are going to ensure that she meets Tower at the Military-Industrial-Complex Cotillion in Washington, which defense company lobbyists hold every year to present their daughters to Washington society.

Miss Secretary of Defense 1989 will have strict orders that under no circumstances is she to discuss Star Wars with Tower until their second date.

The KGB has never denied that attempting to make Sen. Tower a security risk is a dirty business, but they say if they don't do it, who will?

Education Consensus In General Assembly Proves Elusive

John Flesher

RALEIGH (AP) — It took 16 months of tedious negotiating for Gov. Jim Martin, his transportation secretary and a legislative study group to hammer out the $8.6 billion highway program pending in the General Assembly.

But difficult as that process was, Martin is now grappling with an issue that could make the highway debate look like a Sunday picnic.

Sometime in the next week to 10 days, the governor says he'll unveil a major education proposal. It will be geared toward what Martin long has called the key to improving public schools: strengthening the teaching profession.

Feeling the heat from teachers demanding higher salaries in a tight budget year, he apparently is developing a plan to overhaul the pay schedule that has been frozen since 1982 and is riddled with inequities. He also vows to push ahead with some version of the career ladder, an incentive pay program still in the planning stage.

Martin says his plan will include a funding mechanism, which some say can only mean a tax increase. Persuading the General Assembly to raise taxes for schools the same year as it contemplates a nickel-a-gallon gasoline tax hike would be an uphill struggle.

But even if Martin could pull that off, a potentially bigger obstacle is the difficulty of getting enough people to agree on any sweeping education reform.

Speaking with reporters last week, Martin lamented that while there is a broad consensus in and out of government on the general approach to highway expansion, no such consensus exists for education.

"We have many demands to spend more money," he said. "But we don't have a legislative coalition that agrees on what the problem is and what needs to be done."

Lawmakers and education leaders acknowledge the difficulty.

"In education, 35 to 40 special-interest groups of consequence are out there. Maybe more," said House Speaker Joe Mavretic. "Anybody that wants to try to do anything major in overhauling the K-12 system has to deal with this myriad of special-interest groups, and it's very difficult to do."

'But difficult as that process was, Martin is now grappling with an issue that could make the highway debate look like a Sunday picnic.'

The Edgecombe County Democrat was a member of a legislative study group that helped develop the two big-ticket education initiatives of the decade: the career ladder and the Basic Education Program.

When the committee held hearings in 1982, "the special interest groups that signed up appear before us taught me that the turf fights between (them) are as destructive ... as everything else combined," Mavretic said.

Uniting the disparate factions, he said, requires a leader "who has ... a lot of courage and the will to use all the resources at his disposal."

Actually, a consensus does appear to be forming around the idea that the most immediate need is to reform the teacher salary schedule. Martin says it will be the centerpiece of the plan he's developing. The North Carolina Association of Educators has a plan to thaw the freeze, as does the Public School Forum of North Carolina. The Forum plan has been introduced in the House and Senate.

Also, the State Board of Education has asked a private firm to develop a proposal for modernizing the compensation system.

However, serious disagreement remains over what Martin calls the question of accountability — assuring the taxpayers that if they spend hundreds of millions of dollars for better schools, they'll get what they pay for. It's an issue he says must be addressed in any comprehensive package.

To Martin, that means the career ladder. Implemented statewide, he says, the program would give teachers incentive to excel by establishing a series of guaranteed pay raises as they gain experience and hone their skills.

But the NCAE has branded the career ladder, which is in the experimental stage, a failure. If Martin pushes to expand it, he can expect bitter opposition.

"It's hard to reach a consensus when so often, teachers and even principals don't get included in the decision making," NCAE President Karen Garr said. "When all we get is top-down mandates, there's often dissension and resentment."

Howard Haworth, chairman of the State Board of Education, says the NCAE is out of the mainstream on the career-ladder issue.

"Almost of the major constituencies ... are in favor of merit or performance-based pay, although they differ somewhat as to the form," Haworth said. "We simply must quit compensating those who are mediocre the same way we compensate those who are excellent."

John Dornan, executive director of the non-partisan Forum, says money is the key to arriving at a solution that wins broad acceptance.

The Forum's governing board issued a statement this month promising to lobby for higher taxes if that's what it takes "to make sure we don't abruptly end school reform momentum."

"I don't think it's possible to achieve consensus ... without increasing revenue. That's the bottom line," Dornan said. "Otherwise, we're just looking at a series of bad choices."

IN THE STATE

Bodies Found

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. (AP) — The bodies of a man and a woman were found Saturday beside a rural Orange County road south of Hillsborough, authorities said.

The bodies were discovered a few feet off Davis Road, about a half-mile off Old N.C. 86, shortly after noon by Orange County sheriff's deputies.

Following the gathering of evidence at the crime scene by deputies and State Bureau of Investigation agents, the bodies were taken to N.C. Memorial Hospital for autopsies.

The identities of the two people, and information about how they died, was not immediately available.

Clinic Arrests

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Twenty-five people were arrested for trespassing Saturday outside the building which houses Planned Parenthood of Charlotte's main clinic.

The arrests, which occurred shortly after 7:30 a.m., followed a protest that included the singing of hymns and designating a group to be arrested without incident.

About 50 protesters sang while 25 protesters walked to the building entry.

They were met by a line of Planned Parenthood supporters wearing T-shirts: "Keep Abortion Safe and Legal." The protesters sat down in front of the line.

Preservation

WEST JEFFERSON, N.C. (AP) — Advocates of the New River's preservation say that the state cannot shed its responsibility to protect the federal Wild and Scenic waterway, regardless of whether Ashe and Alleghany counties enact land-use controls.

The General Assembly should hold good the state environmental agencies into action, said some members of the National Committee for the New River at their regular meeting on Saturday.

"If I remember right, I don't remember the counties every promising to protect this river," said Burl Fowler of Ashe County. "They (state officials) shouldn't come up here and say it's our fault. It's theirs."

Indictment

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — A North Carolina truck driver has been indicted for murder in the November shooting of a Woodbridge man on the New Jersey Turnpike.

A grand jury indicted Everett Lee Lyons, 46, on Friday for murder and illegal weapons charges in the Nov. 12 death of 49-year-old Edward Kearney.

Lyons, of Holly Springs, N.C., allegedly shot Kearney during an altercation on the turnpike as Kearney headed home from the Rutgers-West Virginia football game at Giants Stadium.

Police say Lyons was driving a truckload of steel from New Hampshire to Virginia when Kearney's car struck the cab of the truck.

Acting Bergen County Assistant Prosecutor James Santulli said the two men got out of their vehicles and argued over who was responsible for the accident.

Kearney punched Lyons, and Lyons returned to his truck and allegedly retrieved a .25 caliber semi-automatic pistol which he used to shoot Kearney, Santulli said.

Rare Birds

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — An endangered species of woodpecker is shaping the face of new development in the Sandhills region, as contractors work to make sure the birds' homes are not disturbed.

Although threatened by extinction throughout the Southeast, one of the largest remaining populations of red-cockaded woodpeckers lives in the tall pine forests common in Pinehurst, Southern Pines and nearby towns.

Researchers have counted about 120 of the woodpeckers in the area, with nesting cavities in about 5,000 pine trees. Federal wildlife officials have prohibited people from cutting the trees — forcing developers to plan new roads, houses and golf courses so they won't disturb the nests.

One house near a Pinehurst golf course actually surrounds a tall pine tree with two nesting cavities.

Dryer Explosion

SAXAPAHAW, N.C. (AP) — A Saxapahaw man was critically burned Saturday when a clothes dryer that had been sprayed with silicone ignited, causing an explosion and fire, authorities say.

Thomas Darnell, 44, was taken to the burn unit at North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill and was listed in serious condition Monday morning, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Firefighters were called to the home about 10 a.m. according to Alamance County Sheriff's reports. Silicone, which acts as a lubricant, had been sprayed on the drier to stop a grinding noise, authorities said. The spray caused an explosion and fire, the report said.

Board Says Marine Should Be Dismissed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. — A 12-year Marine Corps veteran should be dismissed because her association with lesbians made the corps look bad, a board of inquiry has ruled.

Capt. Judy Meade's friendships with lesbian women gave the impression "that you yourself were a lesbian, (and) therefore brings discredit to yourself and the Marine Corps," Col. J.J. Carroll told Meade on Sunday.

Ms. Meade, 36, testified last week that she is not a lesbian.

The five-member board recommended that Ms. Meade be dismissed with an "other than honorable" discharge, which would mean the loss of normal discharge and retirement benefits.

Ms. Meade declined to comment, but her civilian attorney, Vaughn Taylor, called the hearing process unfair.

A board of inquiry hearing differs from a court martial, which is similar to a civilian trial, in that five Marine colonels hear the presentation of the government against the accused and then make a decision. The board has a legal adviser available.

The opinion is automatically reviewed by the commanding general, and then the Board of Review in Washington.

Damaged equipment, tapes and compact discs remain after blaze in college media center

WCU Media Center Destroyed By Fire

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CULLOWHEE, N.C. — Audio visual equipment, films and music cassettes were destroyed when a fire extensively damaged the media center in Western Carolina University's Hunter Library, but no one was injured, officials said.

The media center, on the library's main floor, looked "like a meltdown" after the blaze early Sunday, said university spokesman Doug Reed.

"It was in the media center area on the main floor that most of the damage occurred," Reed said. "That may or may not be where the fire broke out."

"It was an intense fire in the media center itself," he said. "It was gutted. On a floor above the media center, the heat was intense enough to melt the fluorescent light fixtures. There was no explosion that blew up windows or anything like that, though."

A campus officer spotted the flames and alerted firemen at 5:40 a.m., Reed said.

The Sylva fire department and volunteers from Cullowhee, Savannah and Balsam battled the fire, he said.

"There's no estimate yet on damage," Reed said. "It's extensive in the interior section of the building confined to the media center. There's extensive smoke damage on the main floor and above."

The ground floor area, which houses the circulating book collection, "appears to be undamaged by smoke or fire or water," he said.

No one was in the library when the fire broke out, said Charles Gibson, chief of the Cullowhee Fire Department. One firefighter complained of a problem with smoke inhalation, but no one required treatment at a hospital, Reed said.

Chris Martin, director of the media center, said the fire was confined to the area of the library where students can check out a collection of audio visual equipment, 16mm films, video tapes, music cassettes and compact discs.

"It's bad but not a disaster," said Martin. "All this stuff is highly replaceable."

Nabisco Bakery Work To Continue

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GARNER, N.C. — RJR Nabisco Inc. has decided to continue construction of a giant bakery in Garner, but will scale down the project from $600 million to about $400 million, company officials say.

The costs will be cut by substituting less expensive equipment for high-technology machines that were being developed for the plant, said John Manfredi, senior vice president for corporate affairs at Nabisco Brands Inc., an RJR subsidiary in East Hanover, N.J.

"What we did was not put down what we felt we needed," Manfredi told the News and Observer of Raleigh Friday. "What we did was put down a wish list of things we possibly could use."

Manfredi said he did not know how the reduction of RJR's investment would affect the number of employees at the new plant. The company had estimated it would employ 650 workers, and the employees needed for the scaled-down plant "if anything, might go up some."

Earlier this month, RJR became a private company in a $25 billion buyout by the New York investment firm of Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. The buyout prompted speculation that RJR would cut overhead costs, such as new construction, to help pay off the buyout debt.

Mavretic Will Speak At A&T

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — House Speaker Joe Mavretic will venture into hostile territory on Monday when he visits the campus of North Carolina A&T State University, whose agriculture school he called "not much of a school at all."

The N.C. Student Legislature will give Mavretic a resolution demanding an apology for his remarks.

Mavretic's comments, made in Greenville last Monday, offended N.C. A&T Chancellor Edward B. Fort, who already has asked for a public apology.

Mavretic will be presented with the resolution when he visits the campus for a tour and a talk with faculty and students. Fort arranged the meeting during a telephone conversation with Mavretic.

Jet's Locks Under Study

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONOLULU — Federal investigators focused on a jumbo jet's cargo door locks as the cause of an accident that killed nine passengers, and United Airlines inspected the baggage compartment hatches of all its Boeing 747s.

The Coast Guard, meanwhile, ended a sea and air search of the Pacific 100 miles southwest of Honolulu after recovering 57 pieces of debris from the United flight.

Flight 811 took off Friday for New Zealand with 354 people and was about 100 miles from Honolulu when the fuselage ripped open as the plane flew at 22,000 feet. Nine passengers were sucked out of the 18-year-old jetliner and are presumed dead.

The pilot, Capt. David M. Cronin, lost power in one of the four engines and shut down another when a fire indicator light went on, but the plane returned safely to Honolulu International Airport.

Among the items recovered were seat cushions, an overhead compartment, a section of fuselage, safety instruction cards and personal items including baby shoes and a teddy bear, authorities said.

Neither human remains nor the cargo door was recovered Sunday, said Lee Dickinson, a National Transportation Safety Board investigator.

"Obviously, if we had the door it would be very helpful to us," he said Sunday night, but added that other information could pinpoint the cause.

Tower Vows To Quit Drinking

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — John Tower, angling for Democratic support in a bitter confirmation battle, says he will swear off alcohol if he is approved as defense secretary and would be "obliged to resign" if he broke the vow.

As Tower made his extraordinary promise Sunday in televised interviews, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said he might reconvene Armed Services Committee confirmation hearings to hear testimony in public about the former senator's drinking habits.

The committee chairman coupled his statement with a complaint that the White House was leaking information from the FBI's background report on Tower in a bid to rescue the nomination.

Nunn's Democratic-controlled committee voted 11-9 along party lines last Thursday to recommend that the full Senate reject Tower's nomination, with the chairman citing allegations of excessive drinking by the nominee.

The comments by Tower and Nunn were a prelude to an intense week of political maneuvering over the nomination, which the full Senate is expected to debate beginning at midweek. President Bush intends to take personal charge of the lobbying campaign for Tower, and has invited several Democrats to the White House to discuss the issue later in the week.

But Tower wasn't waiting for Bush to return home from his Asian trip.

"Noting the principal concern of Senator Nunn and other members of the Senate relative to my confirmation as secretary of defense, namely the extent to which I may engage in excessive use of beverage alcohol, let me state that I have never been an alcoholic nor dependent on alcohol," Tower said in a statement.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING TO AMEND THE SUBDIVISION ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF GREENVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA SECTION 9-5-18

Pursuant to Article 19, Chapter 160A of the General Statutes of North Carolina, notice is hereby given that the City Council of the City of Greenville, NC, will conduct a public hearing in the City Council Chambers of the Municipal Building in the City of Greenville, NC, on Thursday, March 9, 1989 at 7:30 p.m. on the question of the adoption of an ordinance amending the Zoning Ordinance as follows:

Section 1: Title 9, Chapter 5 of the Code of the City of Greenville is amended by adding a new Section 9-5-18 as follows:

Section 9-5-18. Transition Regulations for Developing Property Brought into Extraterritorial Jurisdiction.

(a) Final subdivision plats.

An approved and recorded final subdivision plat shall constitute "evidence of compliance" under the terms of G.S. 160A-360(i) for the purpose of subdividing property and constructing improvements required to obtain final plat approval under County standards, and shall confer the right to complete the subdivision under the County regulations governing the approved final plat. Provided, all future construction and/or use of lots in the subdivision shall be in compliance with the zoning regulations of the City of Greenville as contained in Chapter 32 of the Greenville City Code.

(b) Preliminary subdivision plats.

A preliminary subdivision plat shall not constitute "evidence of compliance" under the terms of G.S. 160A-360(i) for the purpose of obtaining approval for a final plat under Chapter 5 of Title 10 of the Greenville City Code. However, an opportunity to complete a subdivision as proposed on a preliminary plat will be available under the following conditions:

- (1) A final subdivision plat meeting the rules for submission has been submitted to the County for final consideration on or before the date the property becomes subject to the regulations of Chapter 5, of Title 9 of the Greenville City Code; or
- (2) In the absence of a pending final plat in accordance with subsection (b) (1) above, the owner/developer must present to the City adequate evidence of substantial investment in reliance on the preliminary plat, or those portions of a preliminary plat which have not been approved as phases under final plats. The City Planner shall determine whether substantial investment has been made, taking into consideration the percentage of the preliminary plat which has been constructed under approved final plats or is subject to a pending or approved final plat, the extent to which a unified design for the entire subdivision is evident in the preliminary plat and any pending or approved final plats for phrases of the preliminary, the installation of subdivision improvements (including water, sewer or waste disposal, drainage, lighting, common areas, streets or roads), or the construction or work toward construction of any improvements or amenities in the area subject to the preliminary plat. If the City Planner determines that there is a substantial investment in the preliminary plat or that portion of the preliminary plat which is not covered by pending or approved final plats, the City Planner shall issue a written notice to the owner/developer confirming an opportunity to complete the subdivision as proposed on the preliminary plat. The opportunity to complete the subdivision or portions thereof in accordance with the preliminary plat shall be afforded notwithstanding non-compliance with the requirements of Chapter 5 of Title 9 of the Greenville City Code. An appeal from the decision of the City Planner may be taken to the Planning and Zoning Commission.
- (3) A preliminary plat approved for completion under subsection (b) (2) shall be valid for the period set forth by the approving jurisdiction or five years, whichever is less.
- (4) Any change to a preliminary plat approved for completion under subsection (b) (2) above shall be in compliance with the requirements of Chapter 5, Title 9 of the Greenville City Code. Minor deviations may be approved by the City Planner where the approval of the deviation is in keeping with the general policy of this subsection (b).
- (5) Nothing in this Section shall be construed to exempt or exclude applicable zoning ordinance restrictions or requirements currently in effect, including, but not limited to, lot width, lot area, or street frontage.
- (6) In the interpretation of the conditions stated above, the City Planner shall be guided by the general policy underlying these transition regulations for developing property brought into the extraterritorial jurisdiction. The general policy is to allow the completion under County regulations of those subdivisions which have been started under County regulations. The greater the investment in construction under previous regulations, and the greater the percentage of units constructed in accordance with the original design of the subdivision, the stronger the policy justification for allowing completion under the original design and preliminary plat.

During this public hearing, objections or suggestions will be duly considered by City Council. All interested persons are requested to be present at the hearing, and they will be afforded an opportunity to be heard.

A copy of the proposed ordinance is on file at the City Clerk's office located at 201 W. 5th Street, and is available for public inspection during normal working hours Monday through Friday.

BY ORDER OF THE CITY COUNCIL.

Pursuant to Article 19, Chapter 160A of the General Statutes of North Carolina, notice is hereby given that the City Council of the City of Greenville, NC, will conduct a public hearing in the City Council Chambers of the Municipal Building in the City of Greenville, NC, on Thursday, March 9, 1989 at 7:30 p.m. on the question of the adoption of an ordinance amending the Subdivision Ordinance as follows:

Section 1: Section 9-5-145 is amended by the deleting the present text and substituting in lieu thereof the following:

Section 9-5-145. Amount and Terms of Performance Guarantee; Time Limitations.

A. Following receipt of the required estimate, the City Engineer shall prepare recommendations as to the terms of the performance guarantee, including time of initiation and completion of the work, as a whole or in stages, and provisions for release of portions of the guarantee upon completion of portions or stages of the work. The life of a performance guarantee shall not be less than six (6) months or greater than two (2) years, unless otherwise provided. The time between initiation and completion of development shall not exceed four (4) years, except as provided under subsection (c).

B. Based on such estimate, with such changes as deemed necessary, the City Engineer shall set the amount and terms of the performance guarantee, subject to necessary legal review of form as provided in Section 9-5-143.

C. When in the opinion of the City Engineer the required improvements or portions thereof cannot be completed within the specified time frame due to a physical condition and/or lack of an approved final plat on an adjoining property, the performance guarantee or portion thereof for such improvements may be extended beyond the maximum time stated in subsection A. Following approval of a final plat on an adjoining property, the required improvements or portion thereof shall be installed within the life of the current performance guarantee or twelve (12) months, whichever is greater.

D. The City Engineer may accept a substitute performance guarantee from any party to cover the cost of all or a portion of the remaining improvements shown on an approved final plat. The "Notice to Proceed" will be issued to the party offering and posting the substitute surety unless the party posting the original surety makes a written request that the "Notice to Proceed" be issued to him, and has in place or offers a surety meeting the requirements of a substitute surety.

E. When a substitute performance guarantee is accepted the following rules shall apply:

- (1) The work covered by a substitute performance guarantee shall be completed within 12 months.
- (2) The original performance guarantee may be released, reduced or returned to the party posting the original performance guarantee.
- (3) The work performed under a "Notice to Proceed" shall conform to the original plans in accordance with the approved final plat.
- (4) No extensions or substitutions of a substitute performance guarantee will be allowed.

Section 2: Section 9-5-11 of the Code of the City of Greenville is amended by rewriting subsection A as follows:

A. The approval of a plat by the Planning and Zoning Commission or the Subdivision Review Board shall not be deemed to constitute or effect an acceptance by the City or the public of the dedication of any public street, facility or ground shown upon the plat. Acceptance of such dedications shall be made only by resolution of the City Council, following approval of the final plat by the Subdivision Review Board.

B. Dedication of any street right-of-way shall be deemed to constitute and include a general utility easement.

C. Acceptance of physical improvements will be made by the City Engineer and the General Manager of Greenville Utilities Commission once the required improvements have been installed and are found to be in accordance with approved plans and City and Greenville Utilities Commission standards.

Section 3: This ordinance shall be effective upon adoption for final plats approved after the date of adoption of this ordinance. For final plats approved prior to the adoption of this ordinance, these regulations shall become effective upon the expiration of the current performance guarantee, where such exists, or upon acceptance of the dedications by the City Council for those final plats which do not have a performance guarantee posted.

Prince Of Chintz Flourishes Among Flowers

By Paula Span
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK — Mario Buatta has a vision. One day not too far off, people out there in the heartland will put together their own overstuffed versions of his English-country decor, using the growing array of officially licensed Mario Buatta products.

Think of it. Windows in St. Louis festooned with enough swags and jabots and cascades of fabric to make up several ball gowns, all of it Mario Buatta prints with names like "Hillary" and "Melanie."

Sitting rooms in Boise planned around the Mario Buatta serpentine-back sofa in madly flowered glazed cotton. Elaborately romantic bedrooms in Schenectady, created with Mario Buatta linens. Possibly to be joined by carpets and candlesticks and even china table settings, all reflecting his taste for cabbage roses and King Charles spaniels and other talismans of old money.

Of course, some people can already achieve the same drowning-in-swatches effect by hiring Buatta himself to decorate their Park Avenue duplexes and Southampton cottages.

Barbara Walters, for instance, whose new apartment overlooking Central Park ("14 rooms," Buatta says. "Or is it 15?") is preoccupying him at the moment. Or Malcolm Forbes or Charlotte Ford or various Hearsts and Woolworths.

The problem, Buatta acknowledges, is that nowadays "the average little three-bedroom apartment in town costs well over a million" to furnish and decorate, "depending on how fancy the antiques are. I mean, a pair of chairs can be $30,000 or they can be $60,000."

Quite. No decorator wants to relinquish his big-name and big-money clients, his crack at high-prestige assignments like the restoration of Washington's Blair House (a 3½-year, $15 million project Buatta shared with Mark Hampton), or his residence in the society columns.

But clearly there is a limit. Only so many of those who thirst for glazed walls are multimillionaires, and for only so many multimillionaires can Buatta personally determine whether those walls ought to be spinach, pale shrimp or beach plum.

But licensing is a way for interior decorators, like fashion designers before them, to ensnare us all, the classes and the masses. "My pension plan," Buatta calls it, cheerfully.

LAT-WP News Service

New York decorator Mario Buatta

Other celebrity decorators have had the same vision, of course. Jay Spectre's contemporary furniture line has been selling briskly at Bloomingdale's; Mark Hampton's more traditional collection had its debut a year ago.

But Buatta has certain advantages in this sweepstakes. He has a flair for self-promotion. ("Everybody's Mario's pal, particularly if you have a byline or a magazine," says the editor-in-chief of Architectural Digest.)

As a result, he has broad name recognition ("Whom else do we hear so much about?" says the executive editor of House Beautiful). And he can claim the swellest sobriquet, first bestowed by a local television reporter, in interior design. Mark Hampton is plain old Mark Hampton. Dorothy Parish is Sister Parish. But Mario Buatta is the Prince of Chintz.

"We're leaving you!" the Prince carols to his assistant Beth Martell, tucking bits of fabric and his "scheme boards" (a room's floor plan on the back, swatches and paint samples on the front) into a shopping bag. He slides into his blazer pockets the folded yellow legal sheets on which he jots all notes, appointments and phone numbers until they blur into an indecipherable, inky jumble.

Other top New York designers command sizable staffs in posh surroundings; the Prince has a single assistant, an Upper East Side office so jammed with decorating detritus that it can be entered only sideways and a hole in the sole of one tasseled loafer.

When a house is being Buattified, as the Prince puts it, paint doesn't mean latex semigloss. It means a thin coat of plaster and then a layer of canvas, followed by five or so primer and finish coats, plus stippling or brushing, then glazing, to achieve the proper burnished sheen. Small wonder that painting a not enormous dining room can cost $10,000.

But there are so many antique shops en route. "I was born to shop," Buatta confides, happily prowling the side streets. "Luckily, I'm spending other people's money."

A Buattified room is supposed to feature all sorts of artful clutter, old silver objets, Delft china, Scottish tobacco tins, that sort of thing. The English gentry, of course, amassed the stuff over a couple of hundred years. Buatta's clients are on a tighter schedule, and what's more, many of them are too busy to collect their own collectibles. So he acquires things for them.

Scientist: We Can Control Dreams

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TUCSON, Ariz. — Most people can learn to control their dreams and use them to overcome fears, nightmares and depression, according to a Stanford University dream researcher, though he has his critics.

Stephen LaBerge of Stanford's Sleep Research Center says he knows "lucid dreamers" who have overcome their fears of heights and snakes by confronting those fears in dreams. Lucid dreamers know they're dreaming and can direct the course of the activities they're imagining, he said at a recent Arizona Conference on Sleep and Cognition.

LaBerge, a research associate in psychology, says he has worked with about 100 lucid dreamers over the past 11 years.

One lucid dreamer was able to "greatly lessen" his fear of heights during a dream by deliberately stepping off the edge of a tall building and floating away, LaBerge says.

Rosalind Cartwright of the Sleep Disorders Center at Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Hospital in Chicago told of a recent study of depressed people who were able to change the endings to depressing dreams.

"They became aware in the dream that they were dreaming, then changed the ending to stop the badness," Cartwright says. "This technique also has a great deal of potential in treating nightmares."

LaBerge says lucid dreaming is a skill anyone can learn.

He predicts that lucid dreaming will become increasingly popular as a tool for self-exploration and self-help because "it's such a simple, straightforward, effective means of dealing with fears and exploring the powers of the mind."

In recent studies at the Stanford sleep lab, lucid dreamers have been trained to signal the onset and conclusion of their dreams by moving their eyes to the left and right repeatedly in a prearranged pattern. Subjects also have been taught to hold their breath, count to five, then exhale while they're dreaming, he says.

"These people are capable of remembering instructions given to them before sleeping, then executing them consciously while in sleep — they're aware of what they're doing," he says.

Critics charge that those subjects probably were awake, not dreaming, when they carried out the tasks. But LaBerge says important physiological indicators — brain waves, heart rate, respiration rate and others — demonstrate that those people were in deep sleep.

Critics also charge that LaBerge's experiments lack basic control measures and that subjects' reports of lucid dreaming are influenced by the researchers' expectations.

"Yes, there may be lucid dreaming, and yes, maybe you can use it to help yourself, but we don't yet know enough about the process," says David A. Dinges, co-director of the Institute for Experimental Psychology at the University of Pennsylvania.

Dinges asks: "How often do they occur? What state are these people in when they occur? How many people get them? To what extent can these results be separated from the researcher's expectations?"

Don't Face-Off With 4-Year-Old

Dear Abby: When "Truly Enraged" complained that her guest's children behaved badly in her home, you said she had every right to discipline them.

Hooray! What if you are a guest in someone's home and there is a child there who acts rudely? One small guest took it upon herself to start kicking me for no reason at all. I was very embarrassed and could not hit a 4-year-old with her mother looking on. I had no idea what to do, so I finally left the party.

Since I am engaged to the son in the family, I will be seeing this little girl frequently. What do you advise? The child's mother refuses to discipline her child, and I do not care to be abused by a pint-sized bully. — Problems In Paramus, N.J.

Dear Problems: First I'll tell you what not to do. Don't get into a power struggle with a 4-year-old who is obviously making a bid for attention and testing her limits. Resist scolding her, and ask, in all sincerity, "Why are you kicking me?" Then wait patiently for her reply.

She will have accomplished her mission in gaining your attention, and you will have reached out to her in a non-combative way that will open the door for further dialogue.

I hope you realize that this child is probably jealous of "the other female" (you) for having captured the male in her family.

Dear Readers: How can a person handle the seemingly impossible and withstand the unbearable? Let Arnold Beisser tell you.

At age 25, as a recent Stanford Medical School graduate and a national tennis champion, this handsome 6-footer "had it all." Then polio struck, leaving him completely paralyzed from the neck down — unable to breathe outside an iron lung.

Now a professor of psychiatry at the University of California at Los Angeles, Dr. Arnold Beisser has written a book. It's "Flying Without Wings," published by Doubleday ($15.95). In it, he describes how he made a new life for himself with what he had left — his mind.

This book is a godsend to the disabled, and a useful guide for anyone who has suffered a tragic loss and has asked himself, "Why did this have to happen to me?"

Oddly enough, this jewel of a book is an "upper" — filled with humor, peace and hope.

Give yourself a gift, and read "Flying Without Wings." You will be a kinder, wiser and more compassionate person for having read it. I am.

P.S. If your bookstore doesn't have it, ask the people there to call Doubleday and order it — on the double.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 6940, Los Angeles, CA, 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Soviets Vow Closer Ties With Iranians

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
NICOSIA, Cyprus — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said today his visit to Tehran signals expanded ties with Iran, whose revolutionary leader says he wants Moscow to help combat the "devilish" West.
 "In our opinion, Iran enjoys high international prestige," Iran's official news agency quoted Shevardnadze as saying. "We have come to the conclusion that it is a must to acknowledge others' beliefs and respect them."
 Shevardnadze made his remarks at a meeting with President Ali Khamenei. On Sunday, he met with Iran's revolutionary leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, for 90 minutes.
 The Islamic Republic News Agency said Shevardnadze was quoted as saying his visit held the promise of closer ties between Iran and the Soviets despite "ideological differences." IRNA did not quote Shevardnadze as enumerating the differences, but Iran — an Islamic republic — previously has criticized the Soviet Union's official atheism.

 Shevardnadze was quoted as saying the two sides agreed that military confrontations must be reduced and chemical weapons annihilated worldwide, according to IRNA. He also said Moscow would push for progress in the Iran-Iraq peace talks, stalled since the Aug. 20 cease-fire in the Persian Gulf war.
 Khamenei told Shevardnadze, "Iraq must be pressured, and we think your government can exert this pressure more than anyone else," IRNA said. The Soviet Union was Iraq's major weapons supplier during the war and is believed to be one of its biggest creditors.
 IRNA said Shevardnadze repeated his call for the withdrawal of foreign forces from the gulf.

Body Parts Found

 my mind about it being felonious homicide," Harris said.
 Harris described the material as "a bunch of human remains that got misplaced."
 Pitt County Health Director C. Timothy Monroe said he has spoken with Harris, and he does not believe the material represents a health threat, as long as it is stored properly, chemically treated and not tampered with.
 Dr. John Butts of Chapel Hill, chief medical examiner for the state, said his office contracts with Gray Funeral Home and Crematorium on South Wilmington Street in Raleigh to dispose of waste, but he said he has no information to indicate the remains found in Pitt County came from his office.
 The disposal of human remains is a private business, Butts said, and he did not know of any law that would make it a crime to store remains such as those found in the packhouse.
 There are ethical norms which most businesses try to follow, he said.

"The appropriate professional way those things are handled ... generally it's regarded it should be handled in such a fashion as to be out of the public view and disposed of within a reasonable time," Butts said.
 If material has been stored since 1986, Butts said that would be unusual.
 "That does seem a long time, doesn't it," he said. "I would certainly think that having things around for three years would not be the best way to handle it."
 Gray Funeral Home of Raleigh also received publicity last December when it was discovered that cadavers were left overnight in a van instead of being moved inside. Authorities said it was not a criminal violation, but an ethical matter.
 Numerous agencies, including hospitals, laboratories, medical schools and pathologists, generate medical waste, Butts said. Pitt County Memorial Hospital officials said the waste discovered Sunday is not connected to the hospital or the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

UNCW Eases Past ECU, 60-55

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Seahawks put another notch in their belt Sunday afternoon in Minges Coliseum.

For the 10th time in a row, UNC-Wilmington defeated East Carolina in a Colonial Athletic Association basketball game, 60-55, holding off a Pirate rally in the final minutes of the game.

And Coach Bob McPherson of UNCW says there's no big secret to his team's 10-game winning streak over the Pirates of East Carolina.

"If there was, I'd like to know what it is," he said. "But there has been a lot of luck involved. Sometimes things like this happen when you've got a big rivalry."

Whether there is a secret or not, East Carolina's three seniors may have wound up their careers without a victory over the Seahawks — ever. One must go back to the 1984-85 season to find a "W" beside the Pirates against the Seahawks.

The loss left the Pirates with a 6-8 CAA record, tied with James Madison for fifth place in the standings.

The Pirates, down by 11 at the half, and by as much as 13 in the second half, rallied, however, and nearly pulled it out, closing to within one before Larry Houzer canned back-to-back jumpers close in under the nets to run the lead back to five with 1:22 left in the game.

The Pirates were forced to foul after that and came back within three with nine seconds left, but by then, time was their enemy.

"I thought it was an outstanding game by both teams," McPherson said. "East Carolina played especially well as compared to our first game (with them). But I thought we played well defensively and used the shot clock well. We kept the crowd out of it for 35 minutes and that's so important on the road."

ECU coach Mike Steele said he thought the crowd helped his team get back into the game.

"Hey, we shot 37 percent and still had a chance to win the game," he said. "We did everything that was needed to win the game, we just couldn't hit a jump shot. We were taking good shots, too."

Steele said he especially felt back for senior Jeff Kelly, who was 0-8 in the game. "Jeff has done a fine job for us all year, and I'm proud of him for stepping in and taking the shots when they gave it to him," he said.

UNCW generally let Kelly go and put two men on Blue Edwards, who still scored 26 points.

"We struggled from the perimeter and they had two and three men on Blue," Steele said. "But we still need to get the ball into Blue's hands first, then if he passes out, we need

Bucs Lose Flip

RICHMOND — East Carolina lost a coin-flip with James Madison in the tie breaker for fifth place and will now play American University at 2 p.m. in opening round action at the Colonial Athletic Association Basketball Tournament in Hampton, Va. Saturday.

The Eagles finished the season as the number-three seed. ECU is now listed at the number-six seed.

Seniors' Final Home Game Ends In Disappointment As Pirates Come Up Short

Jeff Kelly's emotions told the whole story. It was senior day at East Carolina Sunday against UNC-Wilmington for Kelly, Blue Edwards and Kenny Murphy.

It was a day where the trio should leave Minges Coliseum with fond memories of their days of playing for the Pirates.

The three were honored before the game with a standing ovation from the crowd and plaques from the university. The table had been set for the trio to leave Minges on a happy note.

Yet Kelly's eyes were full of tears minutes after ECU suffered a 60-55 loss to the Seahawks to finish the regular season with a 14-13 overall record and a 6-8 mark in the Colonial Athletic Association.

Kelly was especially down after the loss. In his final appearance before the home crowd, he went 0-8 from the floor and finished with only two points.

Tim Chandler

Two of the shots he missed came in the final 2:30 and would have given the Pirates the lead.

"I couldn't make one," Kelly said. "Coach was saying 'you've got to shoot the ball, they're laying off you' and I'm shooting and I think it's going in the basket and it doesn't go in."

"I don't think I've ever had a game where I went 0 for when I shot it that many times. We shot the ball terrible and still had a chance to win the game. I feel like I let the whole university down."

Kelly wasn't the only Pirate who struggled shooting. From the field, ECU hit only 18-48 shots for the game for a 37.5 percent clip. And from the free throw line, the Pirates connected on only 17-27 shots.

Virginia Takes Road Win Over State

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Associated Press

Virginia's Bryant Stith puts one up over Brian Howard

RALEIGH — The road hasn't been particularly kind to Virginia this year, but the Cavaliers took a step toward erasing those woes at the expense of North Carolina State Sunday.

Virginia came from behind in the final five minutes to take a 76-75 Atlantic Coast Conference win over the Wolfpack before 10,400 fans at Reynolds Coliseum.

Freshman Bryant Stith, who scored a career-high 29 points, hit two free throws with 1:30 remaining to provide the final margin but N.C. State had two more viable chances to regain the lead as well as a last-second possession, but in each case, the Wolfpack couldn't convert.

Rodney Monroe missed a jumper from about 14 feet with just under a minute and a half to go. Virginia's Brent Dabbs got the rebound and was fouled by Brian D'Amico.

Dabbs missed the front end of the one-and-one with 1:12 to go, giving State another chance. As the clock ticked down, Monroe drove into the paint and put up a short jumper. It rolled around the rim and fell off. Chucky Brown's tip also failed to drop and Stith grabbed the ball and was fouled with one second left.

Monroe, who had been guarded by Morgan most of the day, was matched up against John Crotty on the final possession and tried to drive from the perimeter into the paint.

"He drove the ball with his left hand really hard and he fell off balance and took the shot fading away. I was worried," Crotty said.

Stith intentionally missed the free throw. Monroe rebounded and called time. No time ran off the clock and the Wolfpack had one more chance.

On the inbounds play, State had trouble getting the ball in and called time out. On the next attempt, the Cavaliers' Richard Morgan deflected the ball and Kelsey Weems was off on a last-second heave after the buzzer to give Virginia the win.

"We've had a lot of trouble getting a win on the road this season," Virginia coach Terry Holland said. "To win here at N.C. State is always difficult. Basically what happened in the second half was it just seemed like we had to outscore them. Finally, in the end, we found a way to stop them."

"Because of when it comes and because we needed a conference road win so bad it is probably our most important win."

The win moved Virginia to 16-9 overall and 7-5 in the ACC and kept alive the Cavaliers' hopes for an NCAA bid.

State, meanwhile, falls to 18-7 and 8-4, one game out of first place behind North Carolina.

Elliott, Arizona Topple Blue Devils

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Sean Elliott scored 24 points Sunday and No. 2 Arizona needed a missed free throw with one second left to beat No. 9 Duke 77-75 and set up a probable return to the top spot in the poll.

Elliott gave the Wildcats the lead for good with a 3-pointer with 54 seconds left that broke a 70-70 tie.

Duke missed two 3-point shots before Anthony Cook gave Arizona a 75-70 lead with a layup.

Quin Snyder hit a 3-pointer to bring the Blue Devils within two with 19 seconds left, but Elliott was fouled on the ensuing inbounds play and made two free throws one second later. A layup by Snyder with seven seconds left made it 77-75.

Cook missed the front end of a 1-and-1 with six seconds left. Danny Ferry grabbed the rebound, hit Christian Laettner with a long pass and the freshman was fouled by Ken Lofton with one second to play.

Laettner missed the free throw and Elliott grabbed the rebound to seal the victory.

Arizona returned to the top of the college basketball poll today, replacing the team which took over as No. 1 for the Wildcats two weeks ago.

Oklahoma dropped from first to fourth following a 97-84 loss at Missouri last week after the Sooners had become the first team to hold the No. 1 ranking for consecutive weeks in five weeks.

The Wildcats almost assured themselves of the top spot with a gritty 77-75 victory over Duke on Sunday.

Four teams have been ranked No. 1 this season. Duke held the top spot from the preseason poll through the first nine polls of the season.

Illinois went up to the top for one week and was followed by Oklahoma and then the Wildcats for their first appearance of the season.

Being A Legend Wasn't Enough New Ownership Casts Veteran Coach Aside

By Denne H. Freeman
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

IRVING, Texas — In the end, Tom Landry made it through Doomsday.

Landry got an $800,000 consolation prize, but close friends say he didn't get the one thing a legend deserves most — respect.

"It's a damn shame they didn't show Tom any respect at all," said offensive line coach Jim Erkenbeck. "Here he is, a legend, and they treated him like dirt."

The new-era Cowboys told Landry he would be paid the $800,000 remaining on his contract, and also told him he could stick around and they'd find him something to do, if he wanted.

But the way an NFL legend was dismissed could not be easily dismissed in the minds of many in Big D.

Tom Landry, the innovator, stripped of his head coaching job for a college coach with no NFL experience.

Tom Landry, the third winningest coach in NFL history, hung out to dry by a new owner.

Tom Landry, the only coach the Dallas Cowboys had in their storied 29-year history, busted from general to private.

"SOLD! LANDRY ERA ENDS," screamed the bold headlines.

Landry said Sunday he will leave the organization and never coach again.

"It wouldn't be fair to keep me around hanging over everybody's shoulder," Landry said in an exclusive interview with The Associated Press.

"I wouldn't think I would coach again, because it would just be hard, not being in the Cowboys' blue," he said. "People will forget me pretty quick."

Probably not, judging by the shockwaves rolling through Dallas.

Even though there was an idea the end might be coming for Landry as head coach it was difficult to contemplate.

"Does this tell you how mortal we all are?" said Larry Wansley, former FBI man who is the Cowboys' director of security. "If (being removed) can happen to Tom Landry, then it can happen to anybody."

Landry, 64, lost the only job he's had for three decades in a slow, painful way.

New owner Jerry Jones and club president Tex Schramm didn't give Landry the official news until Saturday afternoon at the Hills of Lakeway near Austin, Texas.

Schramm knew about it Friday morning. Jones shook hands with majority owner Bum Bright on Thursday morning on the deal for the Cowboys, its home field, Texas Stadium, and its Valley Ranch headquarters.

Landry had the noose around his neck for days before Jones and Schramm, who hired Landry in 1960, tightened the knot.

ECU Golfers Take Third Place

SANTEE, S.C. — East Carolina finished third out of 18 teams at the Palmetto Intercollegiate Golf Tournament over the weekend. Clemson, the top-ranked collegiate golf team in the nation, had a two-day total of 559 to take first. South Carolina finished second with 571, led by individual medalist Rick Williams' 70-66 136 total. ECU was tied with North Carolina for third with a total of 575.

Furman tied for fifth with a 586, followed by Virginia with 587. Old Dominion with 590. UNC-Charlotte with 591 and North Carolina State with 595.

ECU's top performer was John Maginnes, who tied for third overall with a 69-71 140 total. Francis Vaughan was sixth with a 70-71 141 score. Other ECU scores were Tee Davis (76-71 147); Paul Garcia (77-72 148) and Greg Powell (71-77 148).

"I'm really pleased with our performance this weekend," ECU golf coach Hal Morrison said. "We are beating some good teams early and that's a good sign at this time of the year."

The match was ECU's first of the year and the Pirates return to action March 10-12 at the Fripp Island Invitational.

Pairings Set For Coastal Tournament

D.H. Conley's girls basketball team drew top seeding in the Coastal Conference's post-season tournament, which begins tonight. A drawing was held Sunday to determine final pairings for the event, which will be held at Havelock High School.

No changes were made in the boys' standings. Conley will be number one and will receive a bye in the first round.

Tonight, at 5 p.m., #4 West Carteret will play #5 Havelock, while #3 West Craven played #6 East Carteret in a girls' game at 6:30 p.m. The lone boys' game sends #4 East Carteret against #5 North Lenoir at 8 p.m.

Tuesday, #2 Washington will meet #7 North Lenoir in a girls' game at 5 p.m. The #3 Havelock boys take on #6 West Craven at 6:30 p.m. while #2 Washington needs #7 West Carteret in an 8 p.m. boys' game.

Conley's teams will play Wednesday in the first semifinal games of the tournament.

Lady Pirates To Face American

RICHMOND — East Carolina's women's basketball team lost a coin flip this morning with George Mason and will be seeded fourth in the upcoming Colonial Athletic Association Tournament to be held in Williamsburg, Va. at William & Mary.

The Lady Pirates will face fifth-seeded American University in the first round of the tournament on Thursday, March 9.

Glasson Holds Off Challenger At Doral

MIAMI (AP) — Billy Glasson escaped with a one-stroke victory after Mark Calcavecchia double bogeyed the final hole of the $1.3 million Doral Open on the Blue Monster course Sunday.

Glasson, who earned $234,000, finished with a final round of 72 for a 13-under-par 275 total.

Fred Couples finished second at 276. Calcavecchia, Curtis Strange and Bruce Lietzke tied for third at 278.

Tough Loss ...

Edwards closed out his Mingos career in much the same fashion he has performed all year. The former Greene Central High School and Louisburg College standout poured in 26 points and pulled down eight rebounds, while not committing any turnovers.

"Deep down inside, I am kind of sad to see it end," Edwards said following the game. "I came to the gym late today, with just enough time to get ready to go on the floor. I didn't want to get nervous. I wanted to be ready to play."

The thing that bothered Edwards the most about the loss was he felt the Pirates did what they needed to do to win.

"We knew we had to play hard," Edwards said. "We wanted to stop their transition and rebound well against them and for the most part we did that."

The taller Seahawks were out-rebounded by the Pirates, 32-28, in the game. But as in most games the Pirates play, if they don't shoot near 50 percent from the floor, they aren't going to win.

The loss was tough for Murphy to take also, but he seemed thankful to have just been on the court.

"It (the final game in Mingos) was very special to me," Murphy said. "Even though we didn't win, I can look back on my time here and appreciate what I've accomplished."

When Murphy came to East Carolina out of Northern Durham High School, no one thought he would ever play college basketball. After playing on the intramural level for two years, Murphy decided to try out for the team when Mike Steele was named head coach two years ago.

"I never thought this would happen," Murphy said. "If someone had told me when I was in high school that I'd be playing college basketball, I would have laughed at them. I only played a little bit in high school."

"I decided to try out here as sort of a bet," Murphy said. "I just wanted to see how long I could stay on the team. Once I made it I decided to make the most of it."

And that he did.

Murphy earned a scholarship last season and has been a starter since his first game. Not bad for a guy who had no intentions of even playing.

In the end, though, even Kelly found a silver lining. Not a silver lining to the game against the Seahawks, but one for the overall progress of the basketball program.

"It's (the ECU program) gone all uphill since I've been here," Kelly said. "This is the first time in six or seven years that this place has a chance to finish above .500."

The goal for Kelly now is to put Sunday's loss behind him and prepare for the CAA Tournament.

"He needs to put this game behind him and concentrate on the games he's helped us win this year," ECU coach Mike Steele said. "He's a big reason why we've had a winning season this year."

Kelly agreed.

"I've got to try and get my confidence back," Kelly said. "We need to go up to the tournament and try to win three games."

Arizona ...

Arizona seems headed for No. 1 again.

Arizona improved to 22-3 and has won 14 of 15, while Duke, 21-5, had a seven-game winning streak ended.

Elliott also grabbed 10 rebounds in his matchup with fellow player of the year candidate Ferry, who had 29 points and 12 rebounds.

Neither shot very well as Elliott made six of 21 from the field and Ferry was nine of 21.

Cook finished with 19 for the Wildcats and Matt Muehlbach had 14.

Laettner had 12 points and 10 rebounds for Duke.

Arizona took command at the start, opening a 30-11 lead with 8:02 left in the first half. Duke outscored the Wildcats 13-3 over the half's final 4:05, with Ferry scoring seven of the points and assisting on two other baskets.

Arizona led 38-32 at halftime.

No. 1 Spot Anything But Stable

Temple Upsets West Virginia; Syracuse Rolls By Kentucky, 89-73

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Doesn't anyone want to be No. 1? Well, yes, Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs does, but he's about to lose it.

Arizona's Lute Olson, the logical successor following the second-ranked Wildcats' 77-75 victory over No. 9 Duke on Sunday, isn't thrilled about it.

"We were excited about being No. 1 last season when it was a first for the school," Olson said. "It brought us national recognition then. Now, I'm not sure we need it."

Arizona was No. 1 for one week three weeks ago but lost to Oklahoma, which assumed the top spot the last two weeks. Oklahoma was beaten Saturday by No. 7 Missouri 97-84 but Tubbs is perfectly willing to remain at the top.

"I can't imagine anyone not wanting to be No. 1," he said.

Four other members of the Associated Press Top Twenty also lost over the weekend, including Temple's 74-56 pasting of No. 11 West Virginia that snapped the nation's longest winning streak at 22 games. Elsewhere, South Carolina shocked No. 8 Louisville 77-73, Virginia nipped No. 17 North Carolina State 76-75 and LSU edged No. 18 Nevada-Las Vegas 88-87.

Temple 74, No. 11 West Virginia 56

Mik Kilgore made seven 3-pointers and scored 33 points as Temple handed West Virginia its first loss since Dec. 3. West Virginia, 23-3 overall and 16-1 in the Atlantic 10, was led by Herbie Brooks' 24 points.

Temple took a 23-6 lead as Kilgore scored 11 points. West Virginia pulled within 57-49 with 5:56 left on a 3-pointer by Brooks, who scored 11 consecutive points during a five-minute stretch of the second half. But Kilgore converted a layup and his seventh 3-pointer to make it 62-49.

Kilgore scored just four points when West Virginia defeated Temple 65-63 in Morgantown last month.

No. 6 Syracuse 89, Kentucky 73

Stephen Thompson scored 13 of his 27 points in a second-half surge. The Orangemen erased a three-point halftime deficit, outscoring Kentucky 26-15 during a nine-minute span, then finished the game with a 15-4 burst. Syracuse, 23-5, beat Kentucky, 12-17, for the first time in six tries.

The Wildcats, who led by 10 points in the first half, were led by Derrick Miller's 21 points. Derrick Coleman and Billy Owens each had 15 for Syracuse and Sherman Douglas had 14 assists and moved into second place on the NCAA's all-time list, eight behind former Northeastern guard Andre LaFleur, who had 894.

No. 10 Illinois 94, Ohio St. 71

Nick Anderson scored a career-high 35 points and Illinois pulled away in the second half, shooting 73 percent from the field. An 18-2 run early in the second half brought Illinois back from a 44-39 deficit and put the Illini in the lead to stay with 12:33 left. Anderson scored 10 points and assisted on another basket during the surge.

No. 14 Iowa 84, Purdue 67

Roy Marble scored 22 points and B.J. Armstrong added 15 and became Iowa's all-time assist leader. Ahead 39-35 early in the second half, Iowa stretched the lead to 45-35 on 3-point buckets by Matt Bullard and Armstrong and controlled the game the rest of the way.

Armstrong's seven assists gave him 486, breaking Ronnie Lester's record of 480. Stephen Scheffler led Purdue with 16 points.

to step up and take the shots we get."

The Pirates led briefly at the start of the game, holding a 6-2 lead in the early going. But the Seahawks struggled back and took the lead on a basket by Antonio Howard from eight feet, 8-7.

UNCW never trailed again.

Greg Bender banked in a shot and Howard added another basket. Bender hit from the baseline to run the Seahawk lead to seven, 14-7 before the Pirates got a free throw from Gus Hill to snap the string.

Two baskets by Scott Tierney, one a three-pointer, ran the UNCW lead out to 11, 21-10 before the Pirates put on a rally behind Edwards and Reed Lose to cut the back to four, 24-20 with 4:37 left in the period.

But Howard scored on a three-point play and then added another basket and Bender hit again to open a 31-20 lead and the Seahawks too a 33-22 edge into the dressing rooms.

The Pirates were unable to dent the UNCW lead, which climbed to 13 at 49-36 with 11:47 left in the game. But then, the Pirates caught fire and over the next 8:06 outscored the Seahawks, 13-3, allowing only three free throws to UNCW. Stanley Love led the Pirates in the sprint, scoring five points while Edwards added four.

In fact, Love went to the line with the chance to tie it when he was hacked by Major Wiggins with 3:41 left. But he missed the first of his two shots before making the second to make it 52-51.

The Pirates had a couple of chances after that before Houzer finally hit with 2:22 left from underneath. He scored again a minute later to open up a five point lead and Howard added two free throws to make it 58-51 with 52 seconds left.

Then, it was only a question of the final margin.

"Houzer's two baskets at the end were certainly the key to the game," McPherson said. "We'd been trying to get it to him, but they'd done a good job of cutting it off until then."

McPherson praised Wiggins for his defensive work on Edwards. "You're not going to stop him," he said of Edwards, "but at the same time you don't want him to get on a roll. And I think we effectively stopped that."

Stopping Houzer, who led UNCW with 21, was a different story. "I thought we did a good job, but we had Lose (6-3) and Love (6-3) guarding him," Steele said. Houzer is 6-8.

Edwards was the only Pirate in double figures, while Howard added 19 for the Seahawks.

Edwards surpassed the single season scoring record of 699, held by Oliver Mack, running his total to 711.

East Carolina, badly beaten on the boards in the first meeting with Wilmington, actually controlled them this time, with a 32-28 edge. Edwards had eight and Love, seven, for ECU, while Houzer pulled nine for Wilmington.

Cavs Top Pack ...

"On our last possession, we were not looking to hold the ball for a last shot," State coach Jim Valvano said. "We wanted a good shot, but we got a little tentative. We were hoping to get the ball to Chucky, but they did a good job of shutting down the middle. Still, we got a pretty good shot, and a tip, but they just wouldn't go."

That the Wolfpack was in a position to lose the game at all was amazing in itself. N.C. State led most of the second half and went up 67-60 with 6:57 remaining when Howard put in a miss by Corchiani.

But Virginia didn't quit. Dabbs hit a jumper with 6:22 remaining to make it 67-62. Monroe countered with a free throw but with 5:08 to go, Crotty was left open on the left wing and nailed a three-pointer to make it 68-65 to put the Cavaliers right back into the game.

"The three-point shot by Crotty," Brown said, "That was definitely a clutch shot."

It was a momentum shifter. "I didn't think it was that big a key, but I guess it was," Crotty said. "We were down seven and we made a little bit of a run after that and tied it up. I guess it was a big one. I needed one. I hadn't taken that many."

From there, Dabbs hit one of two free throws after Brown was called for going over his back to put the Cavaliers in the bonus.

Corchiani missed at the other end and with 4:02 left, Stith hit a jumper from the left just inside the three-point line to tie the game at 68-68.

The basket capped an 8-1 run by the Cavaliers and prompted a Wolfpack timeout.

With 3:37 to go, Monroe drove, pulled up and nailed an eight-foot jumper and drew a foul from Morgan. He added the free throw to make it 71-68, but Stith countered with a jumper to make it 71-70.

Howard missed at the other end for N.C. State and Dabbs grabbed the miss. Stith worked free again and hit another jumper to make it 72-71 and give Virginia its first lead of the second half. From there, the teams traded baskets until Stith hit his two clinching free throws with 1:30 remaining to provide the final margin.

Morgan, the Cavaliers' leading scorer, struggled early on, going 3-9 from the field in the first half, but others stepped forward to take up the slack.

Stith rarely missed, hitting on 12-17 from the field.

"He didn't surprise me," Brown said. "He played well when we played them the first time. We knew he was a player. He has not only played well against us but against others too."

The Cavaliers also got a solid game out of Dabbs in the middle as he scored 12 points, eight in the second half, and grabbed a game-high 13 rebounds.

"I just had in my mind every time a rebound came off to just go and take it," Dabbs said. "I didn't want to force any shots down low because they weren't playing me like they were last time. I was taking my time. I was dropping out to the short baseline and (then I) pump faked and drove and it was falling for me."

Morgan didn't have his usual hot hand but ended up with 18 points, including eight of nine from the free throw line.

Brown had 23 points for the Wolfpack while Monroe added 22.

State, in all likelihood, has already earned an NCAA bid. For Virginia, this game was a must if the Cavaliers had any intention of earning one.

"It was a big win, one we needed to get an NCAA bid," Crotty said. "I think we came out much more mentally prepared and sharp. We executed well. I thought. We didn't let them take us out of what we wanted to do. We stayed with our system."

Celebrities Investing More Carefully Than In The Past

By Al Delugach
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

HOLLYWOOD — Hollywood celebrities, becoming financially gun-shy after a variety of troubles, are investing their wealth more conservatively than they did just a couple of years ago.

A major impetus has been the revision of the income tax laws, which turned many tax shelters into dead ducks. Many have seen their tax writeoffs reversed when the principals were found to be concealing tax frauds.

Another factor has been a pervasive attitude of caution toward the stock market since the crash in October 1987, and toward such tarnished high-risk investments as second trust deeds and limited partnerships.

Also, a parade of criminal cases against business managers and investment handlers for actors and actresses accused of defrauding their clientele continues to serve as an object lesson on the subjects of trust and greed.

A large cast of celebrities was prominent among the investors in the infamous Home-Stake Production Co., an oil drilling tax shelter that went sour in 1974, as well as in a similar ventures in the ensuing decade.

They involved an assortment of investments — cattle feeding and breeding, vineyards, commodities, computer leasing and theatrical productions. Lower U.S. taxes, in effect, subsidized the investments by sheltering the other income of investors and resulting in a lower tax bracket.

In the quiet wake of all that hurly-burly, real estate now stands out as an investment in vogue.

Despite eye-popping prices, Southern California real estate is considered in Hollywood circles to be a prudent investment. Buying a personal residence in Malibu, Beverly Hills, Bel-Air, Brentwood or some other preferred locale is top priority for many of the glitterati.

Some celebrities who recently purchased homes with multimillion-dollar price tags in the Los Angeles area include actors Tom Selleck and Eddie Murphy, producers Norman Lear and Giancarlo Parretti, singer Pia Zadora and her husband Meshulam Riklis and the friends who bought a house for former President and Mrs. Reagan.

The action is not limited to Southern California. Actor Sylvester Stallone, who has a Malibu house and also invests in fine paintings, built another home on Hawaii's island of Kauai. Actors Michael Douglas and George Hamilton have bought extra homes in Aspen, Colo.

The stars invest in other things, too. Some of their professional business advisers put special emphasis on liquidity these days. They say they lean toward Treasury bills, as well as blue chip stocks and tax-free municipal bonds, to conserve their clients' assets.

Nevertheless, plenty of prominent personalities still gravitate to business managers who go the riskier route in search of splashy gains. Some of these clients end up losing big.

A long history of criminal prosecutions and civil lawsuits is a reminder that the entertainment scene is replete with business managers who are not careful about what they put their clients' money in. Sometimes it is their own pockets.

Hollywood luminaries who have lost big in tax shelter and other frauds — or who had business managers who were convicted of cheating them — make up an impressive list. It includes:

Doris Day, Johnny Carson, Steve Allen, Woody Allen, Dick Cavett, Bill Cosby, Mort Sahl, Shirley Jones, David McCallum, Norman Lear, Bill Murray, Sidney Poitier, Henry Mancini, Elvis Presley, Andy Williams, Walter Matthau, Alan Alda, Candice Bergen and Buddy Hackett.

Charles Balis, a New York investment manager for Hollywood types, said his clients "sit down with their accountants and lawyers just like any other person" and determine how much to put into stocks and bonds. He said he represents Mel Brooks and his wife Anne Bancroft, as well as Robert Blake and "some of the top news broadcasters."

Entertainers tend to spend big when they earn big money and keep on spending when income goes down, Balis said.

Needing shelter for great floods of income, actors used to get into highly leveraged deals so they could get tax writeoffs, Los Angeles entertainment lawyer Bruce Jeffer said. Many make no provision for saving, he added. If they make $1 million, they spend $1.2 million.

"Some have no net worth at all," Jeffer said. "It's amazing."

Eddie Murphy Production Offers Funny Satire Of TV

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Soon it will be possible to make a TV program that makes fun of TV programs that make fun of TV, but Eddie Murphy's production company has found at least one more interesting and funny way to spoof its very own medium in "What's Alan Watching?" tonight on CBS.

Murphy returns to television in a very funny cameo as James Brown, but mostly his credit here is as executive producer.

The hour-long sitcom combined with video sketches, "What's Alan Watching?" is the first production of Eddie Murphy Television in its deal with CBS. Well, so far, so good. It was written by former "Saturday Night Live" writers Barry W. Blaustein, David Sheffield and Bob Tischler.

Woven through the sitcom premise is a satire of movies of the week, game shows, commercials, documentaries. A rapid montage of these is presented to 17-year-old Alan Hoffstedter (Corin "Corky" Nemeo) who plops in front of the set with the remote when he wants to get away from the rest of his wacky family.

First, there's older sister Gail (Fran Drescher), who mooches off mom and dad and waits for her divorce from Juan to become final so she can marry slobbish carpet-cleaning magnate, Leonard Kling,

"the Carpet King." (Rob Bartlett) whose motto, which he often graphically demonstrates, is "so clean you could eat off it."

Alan's brother Jeff (David Packer), a Porsche salesman, is in love with his sleek 912 Turbo — and any other material possession he can acquire. "Did I tell you I'm thinking about getting a fax machine?" he excitedly asks dad at dinner.

Dad (Peter Michael Goetz) is in the corrugated cardboard box business. He tries to explain to Alan why Jeff is so mean by explaining "sometimes a box comes off the assembly line a little skewed."

"That's why I love my dad," Alan says in an aside, "these incredible box analogies."

Meanwhile, Mom (Barbara Barrie) teaches tap dancing to neighborhood youngsters.

"My parents tell me I watch television to escape," says Alan as a 7-year-old would-be hoover wails "Mammy" in the living room. "What would I possibly want to escape from?"

The sitcom plot manages to be very funny on one level, rather poignant on another. While mom and dad yearn to spend worry-free golden years at the sunny retirement village of their choice, the older kids regress, moving back home when they can't make it in the outside world. Alan, facing the uncertainties of a far-away college next year, is torn between going off to school and staying in Philadelphia to be near his high-school sweetheart.

When he escapes to the TV room, Alan is regaled with an amazing array of video sketches that, when interspersed occasionally with actual clips of television shows, make the real things look like jokes. There's an ad for a hard-hitting news report on "pit babies," a documentary on Mr. Ed, complete with celebrity recollections, such as George Carlin's paean, "While we were still telling jokes, Ed was working conceptually," a commercial for an upcoming extravaganza — "Coming Sunday to the Brendan Byrne Arena — it's 'Gandhi on Ice!'"

Murphy makes a cameo appearance in heavy makeup as James Brown starring in a CBS movie of the week, "Soul on the Rocks," in which Brown goes to prison, an apparently intentional reference to real life that allows Murphy, in a dual role as a protester, to chant, "Free James Brown!" while moon-walking.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

- Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠KJ ♥94 ♦Q973 ♣A10972
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 Pass Pass 1 ♦ Pass
 3 ♦ Pass 3 ♦ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—You are not sure what partner is looking for with his three-heart bid, but you really don't care! You can show your stoppers in the black suits by bidding three no trump.
- Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠K6 ♥8 ♦K72 ♣AQ107652
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—With no first-round control outside of your suit, a jump to three clubs would be a distinct stretch. For the moment, you can do no
- more than rebid two clubs and await further developments—if any.
- Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AQ102 ♥85 ♦6 ♣AKQJ93
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—This time, no one can question your strength for a jump to three clubs, yet that would not be the right bid. When you have an opportunity to show a four-card major suit at the one-level, you should seize the chance rather than rebid a six-card minor. Bid one spade.
- Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠Q3 ♥KQ82 ♦AQJ532 ♣5
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 Pass 1 ♣ ?
 What action do you take?

- A.—You are not strong enough to double and then, over partner's probable one spade response, bid two diamonds. Therefore, be content with a simple overcall of one diamond.
- Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K ♥KJ1065 ♦AQ6 ♣J864
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 Pass Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 1 ♣ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—It might seem automatic to complete the picture of your distribution by bidding two clubs (two hearts promises a six-card suit). However, rather than make a bid which suggests extra values when you have such a poor suit, we suggest a rebid of one no trump. That's only a little white lie and limits your hand.
- Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AQJ96 ♥AJ1073 ♦J ♣74
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
 What action do you take?
 A.—This is close, and we'll accept anything other than a pass. The aggressive ones will go straight to four spades. The more conservative will make a trial bid of three hearts, the suit in which they need some help.

Iran-Contra Defendant Charged With DWI

RESTON, Va. — Richard V. Secord, one of four men facing criminal charges in the Iran-Contra affair, was arrested on suspicion of drunken driving, police said.

Secord, a retired Air Force major general, was arrested early Sunday morning after officers saw his car weaving on a highway of this Washington, D.C., suburb, according to Fairfax County Police communications supervisor Pete Kirby.

Secord was charged with driving while intoxicated and taken to an adult detention center, where he appeared before a magistrate, Kirby said.

A court official at the magistrate's office said he did not whether a court date had been set.

Secord has a nonpublished telephone number and was not available for comment.

Secord was charged in the Iran-Contra affair in March 1988 along with former National Security Council aide Oliver North, former national security adviser John M. Poindexter and Secord's ex-business partner, Albert Hakim.

Second, an arms dealer who helped North sell weapons to Iran and divert the proceeds to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels, was charged with conspiracy, theft, wire fraud and conspiring to pay North illegal gratuities.

North is the first of the defendants to go on trial, and his trial was scheduled to resume today in U.S. District Court in Washington.

Japanese Minister Admits Aggression

TOKYO (AP) — In a reversal of his earlier remark on Japan's role in World War II, Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita said Monday there was no denying Japan was an aggressor in the conflict.

"It is regrettable that my unsatisfactory remark invited criticism" from other Asian countries, Takeshita said during a parliamentary budget committee session. China had been especially indignant.

Parliament resumed business after a week's recess for the funeral of Emperor Hirohito, whose death has renewed debate and national soul-searching over Japan's role in World War II.

Takeshita said today that Japan caused grave damage to neighboring countries through the war. "There is no denying our country's aggressive actions during the war," he said.

In a Feb. 18 parliamentary committee session, Takeshita said the question of whether Japan was an aggressor in World War II would have to be decided by future historians.

The remark touched off sharp criticism from countries that suffered brutal invasions by Japan before and during the war.

China's Foreign Minister Qian Qichen, who attended the emperor's funeral, urged the Japanese government to cease promulgating what he said he viewed as distortions of Japan's militaristic past.

Qian met Friday with both Takeshita and Foreign Minister Souseike Uno.

Italian and Soviet newspapers have also accused Takeshita of evading the issue of Japan's wartime aggression and failing to draw lessons from history.

Railroad Car Filled With Butane Burns

AKRON, Ohio — Firefighters were allowing a railroad car filled with highly flammable butane to burn itself out today after a derailment caused an explosion and fire in four tankers, forcing thousands of people from their homes.

"I was watching TV and I heard something and saw the whole sky light up," said Minnie Herrington, 40, who was brought to a shelter with her four children, ages 4 to 11.

"It sounded like a gunshot."

Thirteen people were treated at Akron General Hospital, most suffering from inhalation of smoke and fumes. One man was admitted, in fair condition.

About 1,500 homes within a half mile of Sunday evening's accident were evacuated, police said. They were uncertain how many people fled.

Shelters were set up at Kenmore High School and the University of Akron for those who could not stay with friends or relatives.

The burning cars were among 17 that derailed from a CSX Transportation train on the grounds of the B.F. Goodrich Chemical Plant, Fire Chief George Romanoski said.

The 45-car train was en route from Willard to Akron and back to Willard when the derailment occurred, CSX spokesman Lloyd Lewis said.

The cause was under investigation.

Nine cars carried highly flammable butane, Lewis said. The eight other cars that derailed carried non-hazardous materials.
