Iran Puts Britain On Notice

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iran's parliament voted today to sever ties with Britain in a week unless London ends its diplomatic embargo and denounces Salman Rushdie's "The Satanic Verses," Iran's official news agency said.

Britain last week recalled its diplomats from Tehran to protest Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's order that Moslems seek out and kill the British author because of his novel, which many Moslems consider blasphemous.

Britain also asked Iran's envoys to leave London.

In London, Foreign Office Minister Lynda Chalker called Iran's ultimatum "not entirely unexpected."

"It certainly doesn't alter the position that no country or no religious leader of any country has the right to incite murder on another's territory," she told British Broadcasting Corp. radio.

Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, said "nearly all" of the 201 deputies present in Iran's 270-member Majlis, or parliament, voted for today's measure, standing, cheering and praising the prophet Mohammed.

It said they first voted to sever ties in principle, but then included the ultimatum to Britain to revise its stance.

The measure later was approved by the Council of Guardians, a body of six Islamic religious leaders and six lawyers which must sanction all laws.

Prior to the parliament vote, Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati said: "In the future this will be our stand toward any country which attacks Islam and Islamic sanctities," IRNA reported.

Also today, Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov said Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze discussed the issue with Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati and Iranian President Ali Khamenei during Shevardnadze's visit to Tehran. In the first official Soviet comment on the matter, Gerasimov said, "the situation that has emerged about the book by Rushdie, 'The Satanic Verses,' causes the concern of the Soviet leadership. Unless a reasonable solution is found, the implications can really be unpredictable."

Gerasimov said Shevardnadze, who returned from Iran on Monday, will raise the subject of Rushdie with other foreign ministers and the U.S. secretary of state when they meet in Vienna on March 7.

Fourteen Western nations besides Britain have withdrawn their top diplomats from Iran to protest Khomeini's death decree, and Iranian newspapers today lashed out at one of them — West Germany.

The daily Jomhuri Islami said Bonn should know that hurting Moslems' feelings "would lead to

Bus Fare Hikes Prompt Rioting

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CARACAS, Venezuela — In riots touched off by bus fare increases, Venezuelans sacked hundreds of stores, set vehicles ablaze and traded gunfire with police in the country's worst street violence in 30 years.

At least three people were reported killed and 326 injured in the rioting, which began when the new fares took effect Monday morning and spread to at least seven cities and towns.

The violence persisted into early today in downtown Caracas, where sirens wailed as authorities put out fires and battled looters in the streets filled with shattered glass.

Independent reports estimated damage nationwide to be in the millions of dollars. On some Caracas streets, virtually every store was looted.

"It is a popular uprising. There are riots everywhere. They are all furious," said Metropolitan Police Inspector Jose Lara Montilla, who commanded a police unit armed with shotguns in downtown Caracas.

Police were sometimes forced to retreat from efforts to quell the violence. There were no official tallies of arrests.

Perhaps the worst violence occurred in Guarenas, a shantytown about 12 miles from the capital where the disturbances began. People there formed human chains and threw rocks at National Guard troops in armored cars after the soldiers began firing birdshot and tear gas at looters.

In Guarenas, a 32-year-old pregnant woman who was not involved in the rioting was shot to death and at least 126 people were wounded, said journalist Igor Camacho of the Voz de Guarenas newspaper.

Rioters in the shantytown there emptied dozens of stores and supermarkets and set at least 14 vehicles set ablaze.

The 50 percent increase in bus fares that sparked the protests is part of a reform package announced last week by the month-old government of President Carlos Andres Perez that aims to bring the oil-based economy out of recession.

Weak oil prices have struck a serious blow to the economy of this country that has for decades been one of South America's most stable democracies.

In the capital on Monday, two women were shot to death, one near the Central University of Caracas, the El Nacional newspaper said.

A police spokesman said at least 140 people, including five policemen, were injured in Caracas.

In San Agustin del Sur and Catia, poor neighborhoods on the west side of the capital, the police "received a beating," a police commissioner said.

"This is getting ugly ... The well-to-do neighborhoods in the east weren't affected today, but just wait until tomorrow," said the commissioner, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

A woman caught in the crossfire as she tried to get home complained the looters were criminals taking advantage of what started out as a protest.

Funeral Home Owner Faces Inquiry By State Licensing Board In March

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A Bethel funeral home owner who reportedly is storing human and medical waste in a Pitt County barn is scheduled to appear before a state licensing board next month on an unrelated matter, a state official said today.

John Gray, who owns Ayers-Gray Funeral Home in Bethel and Gray Funeral Home and Crematorium in Raleigh, was cited last December for violating a statute of the state Board of Mortuary Science.

Corrine J. Culbreth, executive secretary of the state board, said Wake County deputies discovered in December that funeral home workers had left six cadavers in a van overnight instead of moving the bodies inside. The activity did not violate criminal laws, but it did break a board statute that prohibits any indecent exposure or exhibition of dead human bodies while in custody of a licensee, she said.

At the March 14 hearing, the board could move to suspend Gray's license or place him on probation, she said.

Pitt County Sheriff's investigators also said Monday that Gray told authorities that he owns a packhouse where area residents discovered containers of human body parts and medical waste over the weekend. The material is sealed in plastics and stored in containers, and county health officials said the waste is not a health hazard.

Chief Deputy Brooks Oakley and Pitt District Attorney Tom Haigwood said today that investigators have concluded that the storage practice is not a criminal violation.

Gray could not be reached for comment and did not return phone calls from a reporter, but Eric Teel, who said he is a funeral director with Gray's Raleigh business, said today that Gray does not own the barn where waste was discovered Sunday.

Teel said Gray does not own any land in Pitt County and has nothing to do with the material found on rural paved road 1547 between Bethel and Stokes. Teel denied that Gray ever spoke with investigators, and he said he does not know how Gray's name was linked to the Pitt site.

Oakley could not be reached today to comment on Teel's remarks.

Pitt County tax records indicate Gray does not own land in Pitt County, but several parcels of land are registered to Michael L. Gray, whom Ms. Culbreth said is a relative of John Gray and a partner in the funeral home business. Officials at the Bethel funeral home said Michael Gray is a nephew of John Gray, but he also could not be reached for comment.

Teel said a private company, Pitt County Incineration Service, owns the land and barn where waste is stored in Pitt County. He said he knew how to get in touch with the company, but he did not believe the officials should be contacted because they would not want to get involved.

But, an official with the Secretary of State's office in Raleigh said no business by the name of Pitt County Incineration Service is incorporated in Public 'Secrecy'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Oliver North's Iran-Contra trial came to a halt again today after it was discovered that government-censored memos by North's Contra courier, Robert Owen, long ago had been placed on the public record.

North's lawyers immediately moved to dismiss the indictment against North, saying it was impossible for the former White House aide to get a fair trial under federal secrecy procedures.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell sent the jurors home, saying there were "unresolved" problems concerning the classified material. He scheduled an afternoon hearing on the matter.

The dispute was triggered by a memo by Owen, which stated the name of a high Costa Rican official, former security minister Benjamin Piza. Owen's memo containing Piza's name was part of the public record in a private lawsuit brought by the Christie Institute, an activist group that has been critical of U.S. policy in Central America.

However, when the same document was introduced at North's trial, Piza's name had been excised by U.S. intelligence officials on national security grounds.

The disclosure that the name was on the public record caused Gesell to call for the hearing.

Eastern Boat Show Will Open Thursday

By Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Boat manufacturers and distributors are making preparations today for eastern North Carolina's first regional boat show to be held Thursday through Sunday at the New Greenville Warehouse on Pictolus Highway.

Sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, the exhibition is designed to draw boating enthusiasts interested in seeing the latest models of boats, fishing accessories and water sports equipment.

Over 50 boat and accessory dealers, several of which are Greenville-based, are participating in the event.

Gary Clay, 1989 boat show manager, said today that the response from area boat vendors and manufacturers has been much greater than was anticipated when chamber officials first announced plans for the show in late November.

"We're expecting approximately 25,000 to 30,000 people to attend the show," he said.

Clay, who also heads the small business division of the chamber, said the show will likely benefit from the poor winter weather in mid-February. A major boat show was held in Raleigh two weeks ago, but a severe snowstorm in the state's capital city resulted in poor attendance.

"I think that will have a positive effect in that people will travel to Greenville to attend this show," he said.

One local company participating in the show is Grady-White Boats Inc., a manufacturer of 21 models of sportfishing boats, ranging in length from 19 to 28 feet.

Tracy Cole, company marketing administrator, said the show provides an opportunity for potential customers to see the entire line of boats at one location.

"We're hoping to draw many of the people who decided not to venture to the recent boat show in Raleigh because of the bad weather," she said. "We also wanted to participate to remind the people of Greenville that we are a local manufacturing facility, adding to the area economy by providing around 460 jobs."

Tar River Expected To Crest On Thursday

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Following an unusual amount of winter precipitation in the past two weeks of Carolina over the eastern North Carolina, the Tar River is expected to reach a crest of 17 feet 8 inches on Thursday, according to a National Weather Service report.

Meanwhile, officials in Greenville are keeping close tabs on the rising waters in an effort to minimize flood damage.

Danny Gaylor, an operator at Greenville Utilities' water plant, said Tar River waters this morning reached a level of 15 feet 6 inches, well above the 13-foot mark designated as the flood level.

Gaylor said that although the National Weather Service has predicted Greenville's major water artery will reach a zenith sometime Thursday at a level of 17 feet 8 inches, he feels the prediction is conservative.

"I think the river is going to go higher. I certainly hope it doesn't, but I think it will," he said.

Gaylor said the flooding is largely due to precipitation which fell during the recent winter storms and from rains falling Monday and today. He also attributed high waters to runoff from melting snow, seeping into the river northwest of Greenville.

"There's not a whole lot we can do about it except to let Mother Nature run her course," he said.

"We're pretty concerned about this at this point, said Greg Brown, city public information officer, in an interview this morning.

Brown said a meeting was to be held with city management and public works officials today to discuss the flooding and the potential damage to low-lying residential developments along the river's edge.

"We're suggesting people who live on the river to keep an eye on the water level so if people have to move, they will be ready to do so," he said.

ECU Launches Plan To Encourage Hiring Of Minorities For Faculty

ECU NEWS BUREAU

East Carolina University announced today it is launching a "Minority Presence Initiative" to encourage the hiring of minority faculty members, especially black faculty.

Goals developed for the new program include efforts to increase awareness of minority scholars, to foster esprit de corps among minority faculty, to showcase ECU as a desirable workplace, to provide role models for students and contribute to the intellectual life of the campus.

The program's goals were developed during a series of discussion dinners with black faculty members last October. The dinners were sponsored by ECU Chancellor Richard Eakin; Dr. William A. Bloodworth, acting vice chancellor for academic affairs, and Dr. Mary Ann Rose, special assistant to the chancellor and director of equal opportunity programs.

The program was developed by the offices of the chancellor, vice chancellor for academic affairs and the EEO program. Bloodworth issued a call in November to academic deans inviting proposals for honoraria funds to bring minority scholars to the campus this spring. Five proposals have been selected for the spring semester, Bloodworth said.

The deans were informed that the primary purpose of the "Minority Presence Initiative" is to enhance awareness of minority scholars and, by inviting such persons for campus visits, to improve the university's ability to attract qualified minority faculty in the future.

The School of Music has invited Talmadge Fauntleroy, an ECU alum who is pursuing an opera career in Italy. He is director of opera at the University of Livorno and general director/manager of the Festival Siana.

The department of accounting proposed bringing Delano Berry to campus. Berry received his bachelor's and master's degrees from ECU and is completing the doctorate in accounting at the University of Kentucky.

Dr. Kenneth Hardy, executive director of the Commission on Accreditation for Marriage and Family Therapy Education, has been invited to campus by the School of Home Economics. He has held faculty appointments with Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University and the University of Delaware. His publications deal with minorities and family therapy and family therapy training.

The department of sociology and anthropology proposed inviting Steve Ellis who is completing the doctorate at Texas A&M University. His research interests include race and job placement in the sciences and career differences between black and white scientists.

Bank Transferred Executive Following Harassment Charge

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A senior vice president at First Citizens Bank in Greenville was transferred to another city and given a written warning after a female employee at one of the bank's Greenville branches complained that he had sexually harassed her, a bank official testified.

The testimony in Wake County Superior Court came Monday, the fourth day of trial in a suit brought by former teller Mary Denise Haughn of Greenville. Mrs. Haughn says she was subjected to three years of sexual harassment by bank executive William C. Glidewell Jr.

Mrs. Haughn is seeking an unspecified amount of punitive and compensatory damages from Glidewell and First Citizens.

Mrs. Haughn has testified that she had complained to one of her superiors shortly after the incident but that he had taken no action. Her husband, John G. Haughn, testified that she then had complained to the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

Christine Lalley, a vice president of First Citizens, told the jury that the bank had first learned of the sexual harassment charges shortly after Mrs. Haughn filed a complaint with the federal agency. Ms. Lalley began an investigation, she said.

Even though two of Mrs. Haughn's female co-workers at the branch had told her that Glidewell had harassed them, Ms. Lalley said, she told the agency that the bank denied any sexual harassment.

Asked by Mrs. Haughn's attorney, Harold L. Kennedy III of Winston-Salem, whether she had told the agency about the other employees' remarks, Ms. Lalley said: "The EEOC charge was that First Citizens had sexually harassed women. First Citizens did not sexually harass anybody."

Under questioning by William J. Austin Jr., an attorney for the bank, Ms. Lalley said the bank had denied the harassment complaint because "we responded immediately to her complaint, (and) we took steps to deal with any problems she felt she was having."

Ms. Lalley said the bank had offered Mrs. Haughn a paid leave of absence or a temporary transfer to another branch.

Ms. Lalley said that after her report was submitted to bank officials, Glidewell was transferred from Greenville to Kinston, where he works as a trust officer.

During Monday's testimony, Kennedy asked Ms. Lalley: "How many women have to complain before the male (employee) will be subject to termination?"

Ms. Lalley said the bank had no policy on the number of complaints needed for termination. She said the bank has had two other sexual harassment complaints by female employees against male supervisors and in both cases the supervisors were transferred out of the offices but not fired. Ms. Lalley said one supervisor was fired after a second complaint.

As an inauguration for the "Minority Presence Initiative," Dr. Reginald Wilson, minority affairs director for the American Council on Education, has been invited to campus. Wilson will be available to consult with black and white faculty, administrators, and students.

Plans are under way to make the program an annual event, Bloodworth said.

Student Wins P&G Research Award

ECU NEWS BUREAU

A doctoral student at the East Carolina University School of Medicine studying adenosine, a natural chemical messenger in the cardiovascular system, has won a national award for research which may help scientists better understand the underlying causes of heart attacks.

Daniel J. Cushing, a second-year graduate student in the ECU Department of Pharmacology, is one of 17 recipients of the Procter and Gamble Professional Opportunity Award. It is given annually by the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology, the nation's largest biomedical research organization.

For the second straight year, an ECU graduate student in biomedical research has received the award. At a March 22 conference in New Orleans, Cushing will receive a citation and $500 cash prize.

Cushing's project details how diseased blood vessels respond to adenosine, which is responsible for maintaining normal blood flow in the heart. According to Cushing and Dr. S. Jamal Mustafa, professor of pharmacology and director of the research project, when blood vessels are diseased the heart must work faster, thus producing more adenosine to meet the oxygen needs of the heart. In the project, Cushing seeks to understand the mechanisms by which adenosine causes this increase in blood flow to the heart.

Farmville Children's Center Seeks County Funding

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The director of the Farmville Child Development Center has asked the Pitt County Board of Social Services to consider approving the Farmville unit as a day care program funded by the Social Services.

Judy Parker said the Farmville center serves children in Pitt and surrounding counties who have been identified as demonstrating a developmental disability or are at risk for a developmental disability. The disabilities include mental retardation, cerebral palsy, autism, emotional disturbance, hearing, learning, visual, orthopedic, speech or health impairments.

Once the children reach age 3, they are tested, Ms. Parker said at Monday's meeting of the board. If the children pass the test, they are no longer eligible to receive money funded through the mental health system.

"My primary concern is that these children don't fall through the cracks," she said, explaining that the children will not receive treatment before entering the public schools and could actually lose the skills they had learned in the program.

The center is paid $432 per month for each child in the program, Ms. Parker said. But, "we can negotiate based on the additional services the children will need," she said.

Ed Garrison, director of the Pitt Social Services Department, said subsidized day care has been provided for parents involved in work or work training or for children needing protective services through the juvenile court system because there has been no other source for the low-income parent.

Cuts from the county's day care budget by the state Department of Human Resources, Day Care division, have made it difficult to expand the day care services, he said.

The National Guard Armory in Greenville will be the site of the food commodities distribution scheduled

March 15 and March 16, according to Debbie Ryals, eligibility director for the Social Services department.

Food to be distributed include butter, honey, flour, dry milk, canned pork, raisins, eggs and peanut butter, Debbie Ryals told the board.

St. James United Methodist Church will also distribute potatoes at the site, Ms. Ryals said.

Board attorney Ed Harper said that the North Carolina Association of Social Service Attorneys recently discussed the bill of state Rep. Walter Jones Jr. to give a juvenile court judge the authority to order a parent to undergo examination or treatment in a juvenile case as a condition of obtaining legal custody or physical placement of a child.

The board had asked local state representatives to explore legislation that would make this requirement.

The association's executive committee will review Jones' bill, and if it approves, a resolution will be adopted stating that the association endorses the bill.

Garrison told the board the state Division of Social Services has approved the county's plan to establish private interviewing offices and to meet other necessary space and facility requirements in the department by November 1989. He also noted that Social Service employees and the board are covered in the county's Comprehensive General Liability policy.

Garrison also told the board that the department's 1989-90 budget has been estimated at more than $41.5 million, which is up from this year's projected budget of $34.7 million ending June 30.

The largest increase in the budget will be in the Medicaid program, which is expected to climb from $18.6 million to $24.9 million. Also, the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program is expected to increase about $500,000.

Cuts in the budget will be made in the Low Income Energy Assistance program, which is expected to decrease from $415,000 to $352,000.

Pitt County's share of the 1989-90 budget is projected at $631,607, Garrison said. That includes funds for mandated programs and 10 additional positions needed by the department, he said.

The board agreed to ask Garrison to write a letter to County Manager Kramer Jackson and the Pitt County Board of Commissioners that would include a letter from Mark Aydtlett, an income maintenance supervisor for the state, that was sent to the board.

In his letter, Aydtlett validates a report made by Ms. Ryals' that said the department needs more staff to reduce workloads within tolerable limits.

"State Quality Control staff cited four case errors in Pitt for the 19 month period of October 1987 - September 1988," the letter says.

"With 33 cases having been reviewed by Quality Control during this period that equates to a 12.1 percent case error rate and a 4.2 percent payment error rate which is in excess of federal tolerance levels as well as the regional and statewide error rates for the period ... This must change," it says.

The board approved educational leave for Lois Gray, administrative officer, and presented a plaque to Mrs. Ryals, who is leaving the department, "in appreciation for an outstanding job while an employee of the Pitt County Department of Social Services."

Before its regular meeting, the board conducted an executive session to conduct the annual review of the director's performance. After its regular meeting, the board accepted recommendations made in handling administrative overpayment cases.

Shoffner Takes Oath As Defender

Pitt County Public Defender Robert L. Shoffner Jr. of Greenville was sworn in Monday to a second four-year term in office.

David E. Reid Jr., resident Superior Court judge in Pitt County, administered the oath to Shoffner. After the county bar association nominated candidates last week, Reid appointed Shoffner to the post.

In addition to Shoffner, the county bar had also nominated Mark A. Ward of Greenville, an attorney on Shoffner's staff.

Shoffner has held the post since Jan. 4, 1985, when Gov. Jim Hunt appointed him public defender. But because of changes made by the General Assembly, resident superior court judges now appoint public defenders.

"The court ... chose to continue the good office of Mr. Robert Shoffner for the balance of the term (which ends Dec. 31, 1992)," Reid said. "The court is ... confident he would continue the fine and exemplary work in administering the office of public defender."

"Let me congratulate you, Mr. Shoffner, and let me wish you godspeed for the remainder of the term," Reid said.

A graduate of the School of Law at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Shoffner began practicing law in Greenville in 1971. With the additional positions added in January, he is now one of 10 public defenders in the state.

In past years, Shoffner has served Pitt and other neighboring counties. But as of Jan. 1, he was assigned to Pitt only.

Body Found

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — The body of a New Bern fisherman who had been missing since Feb. 9 has been recovered from the Neuse River approximately 200 yards from where his capsized fishing boat was found.

The body of Jerry Allen Jones, 38, was found floating in the water near some pilings on the James City shore around 2 p.m. Saturday.

The body was spotted by the Craven County chapter of the Civil Air Patrol.

Bankruptcies

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Farm bankruptcies have steadily declined since a rush of filings immediately after Chapter 12 bankruptcy laws were enacted in November 1986.

Under Chapter 12, designed especially for farmers, producers try to maintain their operations while paying creditors.

Boat Show To Open

Gregg Stokes, a buyer at Overton's Sports Center Inc., said Greenville's central location in eastern North Carolina should attract a large number of consumers from the region.

"This show will kick off the spring and summer business season for us, helping us promote both catalog and retail store sales," he said.

Among the items to be featured at the Overton's display, according to Stokes, are ski vests, ski ropes, electronics such as radios and depthfinders, and fire extinguishers.

"Just about anything you need for boating, we will have at this show," he said.

Joe Vernelson, owner of Greenville Marine and Sport Center Inc., said boat shows allow consumers a chance to examine a significant portion of what is available on the market at one place.

"Customers can shop comparatively, ask questions and clear up confusions that have arisen from talking to several different sales persons," he said.

Vernelson said the introduction of a regional boat show in Greenville is a reflection of the impact which boating has had on the area economy.

"Boating has experienced a rapid growth rate locally for the past 10 years and I envision that trend continuing well into the future," he said.

A variety of merchandise from Greenville Marine will be displayed, representing goods in a wide price range, Vernelson said.

"We'll have items ranging from a 14-foot fishing boat all the way to a 33-foot Fountain boat which sells for $90,000," he said.

Hours for the Eastern North Carolina Boat Show are from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Thursday through Saturday and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

Deer Crossing

PILOT MOUNTAIN, N.C. (AP) — Five cars were damaged when a small herd of deer crossed U.S. 52 early Monday morning, officials say.

Three of the deer were killed, but no serious injuries were reported to the people involved. Damage to their cars amounted to almost $14,000, according to the N.C. Highway Patrol.

Dredging

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Walter B. Jones, chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, has begun a campaign to rescind the administration's plan to end Army Corps of Engineers dredging of channels carrying less than 25,000 tons of commerce annually.

Jones has sent letters to President Bush and the chairman and ranking minority members of the House Appropriations and Budget committees urging that the policy be overturned.

Seventy-four projects nationwide would be immediately affected, including Oregon Inlet. Another 542 projects would face problems in the future.

Six Thefts Reported

Investigators said six thefts, including $12,909 worth of tools and other items from the Texaco service station in the 1200 block of Dickinson Avenue, were reported to Greenville police on Monday.

Officer K.L. Hadnott said a tool box, tools and a quantity of cigarettes were taken from the station in a break-in reported at 6:44 a.m., while Officer P.W. Worthington said a clock radio-cassette player was taken from Agnes Fullilove School at 1615 Halifax St. in a break-in reported at 7:21 a.m.

Officer E.E. Laughinghouse said a set of floor mats was taken from a car parked at 1803D Village East Apartments in an incident reported at 7:23 a.m., while Officer K.P. Woods said four tires and rims were taken from two cars at Bob Barbour Honda at 3500 S. Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 8:07 a.m.

Officer F.G. Pruitt said $750 worth of items — two saws, two drills and two tires — were taken from C.L. Lupton Inc. at 1700 W. Fifth St. in a break-in reported at 8:09 a.m., while Officer C.M. Credle said a wallet containing several credit cards was taken from Hardtimes Nightclub on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 2:49 p.m.

Ayden Man Says Fire Was Delayed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — An Ayden man testified he helped prepare the Liberty Warehouse in Wilson to be burned in the spring of 1986, but the fire was postponed because "the insurance wasn't right."

Earl S. Arnold said Monday that he was enlisted by Ronnie Lee Stocks of Black Jack to help set the blaze. But Arnold said he dropped out of the plan after the insurance problem developed.

An insurance agent testified earlier that an insurance company had canceled an $800,000 policy covering the building in May 1986.

Stocks has pleaded guilty to charges relating to a fire that destroyed the giant tobacco warehouse in October 1986, several months after the aborted plan described by Arnold.

Arnold's testimony came in U.S. District Court in the trial of warehouse owner J.T. Worthington and his son, warehouse manager J.T. "Tommy" Worthington Jr., both of Greenville. The Worthingtons are accused of arranging the fire to cover a cash-flow problem. The prosecution alleges that Tommy Worthington had helped himself to large cash advances, which he put into failing business enterprises.

The Worthingtons, both of Greenville, are accused of working through Harvey Bowen of Ayden, the warehouse's largest customer, to set up the fire. Bowen, who died last year while the target of a federal investigation, allegedly hired Stocks.

Arnold, now serving a 20-year sentence on unrelated drug charges, said he admitted his role in the incident to investigators last March, after Bowen's death. He was not charged in the fire.

Arnold told jurors that he and Stocks met Bowen at the warehouse in early spring 1986. Bowen unlocked the warehouse, then left the key with Stocks, Arnold said.

He and Stocks filled a sprayer with charcoal lighter fluid and tossed burlap sheets over the building's rafters to prepare for the blaze, Arnold said. "The understanding I got was we weren't supposed to do it that night, but the next night," Arnold said.

But the next day, Stocks called off the plan, the witness said. "He said Harvey had called and said not to do anything because the insurance was not right."

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Road Spending Good Investment

The highway package which seems to be winning the support of administration and legislative representatives still contains specific highway projects which have been long sought by the eastern region of North Carolina.

That is worthy.

We never cease to be amazed that, when eastern legislators bow their backs and stand up for their section of North Carolina, surprise emanates from other areas. Somehow it never seems to be recognized that eastern North Carolina wants to improve its economic, health and social situations; that a better way of life is our goal.

Building good highways is a way of achieving economic growth and that will lead to better education, better health care, healthier newborns and an improved way of life for the elderly.

Too often the East has failed to receive returns on our state tax dollars. The reality has been that state funds go elsewhere, with highway funds being the most notable.

If the new highway package proceeds intact, easterners and all North Carolinians will be paying more taxes for new highway construction. Much of that will go to metropolitan counties, but the east will see the four laning of U.S. 64 to the coast, the completion of a controlled access U.S. 264 and a new U.S. 17 along with a number of other projects spelled out in the agreement. The East will also benefit significantly from new secondary road paving.

The region will get the immediate rewards, but the entire state will eventually receive the benefits that better eastern highways will generate.

It is an investment that will surely pay dividends.

Storm Passes For N.C. State

The book "Personal Fouls" may be the most celebrated never published book about a North Carolina institution.

The book, which was to have discussed the state of athletics at N.C. State University, will not be issued by Simon & Schuster. Though there was advanced promotion, the publisher decided it would not bring the book out and announced last week that it did not meet its publication standards.

But the dust jacket for the proposed book unleashed a storm of public debate in North Carolina and involved N.C. State's basketball coach-athletic director Jim Valvano and N.C. State Chancellor Bruce Poulton. The positive in it all is that the event caused the university to take a close look at athletics-academics. The university called for an NCAA investigation, launched its own investigation and is involved with an investigation by the UNC Board of Governors.

Though the publicity about the book caused Coach Valvano much personal agony and put the university under a national spotlight, the current N.C. State basketball team continued to perform well in the regular season which spanned most of the time of controversy. Now a major cloud has been lifted from the N.C. State athletic program and its relation to academic performance.

N.C. State is strong enough as a university to withstand the controversy. It can, and has, taken this event as an opportunity to carefully scrutinize its athletic program to make certain that academics are never sacrificed.

For that matter all the other colleges and universities which maintain strong athletic programs should do the same.

All Answers Aren't In The Constitution

BOSTON — I don't envy the caseworkers we have assigned the task of determining how violent a family is, how vulnerable a child is. When there is trouble in a home, these family risk-assessors face dilemmas the rest of us only ponder.

What are the risks of leaving a child at home? What are risks of removing him? How much harm might this parent inflict with his fists? How much harm might the state inflict with its alternative kinds of care?

The decisions they make rarely seem as clear as they do when — in every caseworker's nightmare — they reach the headlines. Lisa Steinberg dead at the hands of her father. Joshua DeShaney, battered into permanent brain damage by his father. Then the cry goes out: Why didn't anyone protect this child?

It was Joshua DeShaney whose horrific story came before the Supreme Court this year. In 1983, the preschooler was brought to a hospital in rural Wisconsin with bruises around his body and genitals, with hair pulled from his scalp.

The hospital suspected child abuse and the boy was briefly removed from his father's custody. But a team of experts with a lot of initials after their names concluded that there wasn't enough evidence to support a case of child abuse.

Ellen Goodman

Joshua went home and his case was left in the hands of a caseworker, Ann Kemmeter. Kemmeter was not a social worker by the standards of that profession. She was a high-school graduate with no special training. As the incidents and the evidence mounted, she duly recorded it in her files and did nothing. When the boy was finally beaten into a coma she said, "I just knew the phone would ring some day and Joshua would be dead."

To say that the case of Joshua DeShaney was botched is an understatement. To say that Ann Kemmeter bungled it is also an understatement. When Joshua's mother reappeared (the boy had been in his father's custody since infancy) she accused the child-welfare officials of violating Joshua's constitutional rights by failing to come to his rescue. She said they were guilty of the failure to act.

This is how the issue was presented to the Supreme Court. Did the boy have a constitutional right to protection from his father's violence? Does the state have a constitutional obligation to protect one private citizen from another?

In a classic split, 6-3 — conservatives against liberals — the Supreme Court ruled last week that the state didn't have that duty. Under the due-process clause, the Court said, the Constitution was devised to protect us from government intrusion, not to force the government to protect us from each other.

I find myself in rare agreement with the conservative Court. If this case had gone the other way, in our lawsuit-happy world, any firefighter, police officer, ambulance driver or social worker might have been sued by a citizen who claimed the right of protection. But the Constitution doesn't determine the size or standards of government services.

It was not the state or caseworker that destroyed Joshua's future. It was his father. If there is an injustice, it's that Randy DeShaney spent less than two years in jail, while Joshua will spend his life in an institution. The state of Wisconsin may well have been open to a charge of negligence — the Court strongly suggests this — but that doesn't mean it has an active constitutional duty to save a child from his family.

There is another concern. In general, caseworkers today are protected from lawsuits when they remove a child from a home. Had the Court allowed that worker to be sued for leaving the child at home, it would have tipped the scales further in the direction of "rescuing" children from their parents. Do we want that?

Disagreeing with the Court, Justice Blackmun wrote: "It is a sad commentary upon American life and constitutional principles...that this child Joshua DeShaney now is assigned to live out the remainder of his life profoundly retarded."

It is indeed. A sad commentary that there are parents as brutal as Joshua's. A sad commentary that child-protective services are so overburdened. That there are many untrained and unprofessional workers acting as home-level judges. That the alternatives to abusive homes are often so bleak.

The story of Joshua should raise awareness of what can happen when state standards are low and child-welfare budgets meager. But not every social problem is to be solved by lawsuits, nor does every solution lie in the Constitution.

Myths & The Pointy-Headed Intellectual

WASHINGTON — Behold the cowardly intellectual! Behold the writer who tells everyone else to be brave but who, when asked to stand up for Salman Rushdie, begs off: Sorry, too busy. Thanks for calling, but — paleeze! — call someone else.

That's the picture we have gotten in recent days. It's false, but understandable. The New York Times editorialized that "only a handful of famous writers were willing to raise their voices when asked by talk shows to discuss the death threats..." The Washington Post reported that seven writers refused to appear on "Good Morning America." One was Norman Mailer.

But Mailer, showing a recklessness not evident since he ran for mayor of New York, then turned literary Rambo at a New York meeting of writers: "If he (Rushdie) is ever killed for a folly, we must be killed for the same folly." He may have turned down "GMA," but he appeared on "Nightline."

As for "GMA," its editorial producer, Florence Squassi, said yes, indeed, 11 writers had turned it down. "I couldn't say they were fearful, though," she added. "Getting writers is always difficult. I don't know why they turned us down." Maybe it was because the segment aired at 7:09 a.m. — curtain call at 6:45. For some, the only reward for writing is the freedom to sleep late.

So much for the fact that your average intellectual is a craven fellow — or gal. On the contrary, many writers spoke out immediately, some of them condemning their fellow writers (who?) for failing to do so. Susan Sontag was ubiquitous; William Styron appeared on CBS; Edgar Doctorow, Gay Talese and John Gregory Dunne, among others, read from Rushdie's "Satanic Verses." And Mailer, all but paraphrasing the last words of the doomed Sydney Carton in Charles Dickens' "Tale of Two Cities" ("It is a far, far better thing that I do, than I have ever done...") pronounced himself ready to die for the cause of intellectual freedom. If anything, Mailer could be accused of false bravado — and awarded a tin medal for conspicuous bravery in the face of no immediate threat.

That leaves only Arthur Miller, who was invited on GMA and, it seems, turned down the request with a quip about being fearful. But Miller, one of our more courageous writers, hardly needs to prove his courage. At any rate, not a single writer, not even several, make a rule, but an exception instead. But in time, that purported exception may become the rule.

Why? Because contempt for intellectuals is as American as apple pie (a true intellectual could provide a better metaphor) and a staple of conservative politics. The conservative movement has traditionally lacked an intellectual base. That has changed in recent times — but not to the extent that a generalization no longer holds: Most intellectuals are left of center.

The myth of the intellectual is that he is detached from reality, willing, for instance, to propose "forced busing" while putting his own kids in private schools. Since the political leftist attacks the status quo and the conservative defends it, the canard about the intellectual is a useful political tool.

Myths become accepted when they conform to preconceived notions or reflect anxieties. The story that alligators infest the New York City sewers, a so-called urban myth, stems from the fear that the city is a dangerous place.

A story was published in countless papers reporting that Phoenix was spraying kerosene on its garbage so homeless people would not eat it. There was nothing to the story, but it was published — and believed — because it conformed to a stereotype of Sun Belt residents, especially the retired: mean, self-centered and consumed by a sense of entitlement.

Only a naïf could hope that the myth of the cowardly intellectual will not become lore. Overlooked will be all the writers who announced their solidarity with Rushdie. The myth will become the truth in the hands of people who will not challenge their own preconceived notion. Now that's cowardice.

Legislators Say 'Pork Barrel' Spending Will Stay

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The General Assembly can improve the system of awarding state grants to local projects without abolishing it, which would hurt worthy organizations that need the money, legislative leaders say.

"You're speaking of the dollars that go to (volunteer) fire departments, that go to battered shelter homes, that go to historic facilities, that go to 4-H clubs," said Sen. Marc Basnight, D-Dare. "We want to make sure that they stay intact." The future of "pork-barrel" spending is being debated at party caucuses and elsewhere, said Basnight, chairman of the Senate Base Budget Committee, and House Appropriations Committee Chairman David Diamond.

No decisions have been made, the lawmakers said. But they said local spending remains popular with legislators and has always existed in some form.

"There will always be pork barrel," said Diamond, D-Surry. "Everybody in the world's got their hand out."

He and Basnight acknowledged the system should be changed to dispel its reputation as a political grab bag. Among those being contemplated:

— Requiring recipients to match state grants with local funds.

— Limiting the number of ways a district's share can be divided. If each House member gets $40,000 to take home, it might be stipulated that no grant can be smaller than $10,000. That way, a representative could not divide his district's money into 20 grants of $500 each, which "really makes it political," Diamond said.

More frequent turnover in the legislative leadership might foster more even distribution of the money to all regions, he said.

As it puts together the annual state budget, the General Assembly customarily sets aside a certain sum — from $7 million to $9 million in recent years — for local projects.

The system of allocating the cash has varied. Usually, the Democratic leadership decides which lawmakers will receive a chunk and how much each will get for his district.

Each senator might receive $70,000 and each House member $40,000, for instance. The lawmakers divide their "pork" among groups in their districts.

The longstanding practice has drawn fire in recent years, particularly since Republican Gov. Jim Martin took office in 1985. Martin and GOP lawmakers say "pork barrel" money is unevenly distributed and is used by Democratic bosses to keep the troops in line.

Districts represented by Republicans are shortchanged and Democratic leaders pack the budget with more dollars for their districts than the rank-and-file receive, critics say.

But the system's defenders say allegations of political intimidation are exaggerated. The governor requests funding for local programs and projects that could be labeled "pork barrel," they say.

Diamond said the Legislature in 1988 changed the state income tax code to benefit companies based in North Carolina. The revision was requested by RJR Nabisco and helped persuade the company to locate a new cookie plant in Wake County.

"That's a kind of pork barrel, if you ask me," Diamond said. "It's a subsidy."

N.C. Mountains Get Snow Again

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The third winter storm in 10 days has dumped up to 14 inches of new snow in North Carolina's mountains, slowing vehicular traffic but bringing joy to the state's ski resorts.

"It's absolutely gorgeous," said Nelda Hatcher, office manager of Ski Beech outside Banner Elk, which will extend its season. "It's a winter wonderland again."

Big, wet, heavy flakes plopped onto Beech Mountain, coating a base that was already up to 32 inches thick, Hatcher said.

"We've got 10 slopes open," she said, "the most we've had all year."

Fourteen inches of new snow fell on the 7 that already topped Mount Mitchell on Monday. That boosted the height of the highest peak in the eastern United States to 6,684 feet, 21 inches.

Early today, a mixture of precipitation was still falling over the northern counties of the northwest Piedmont and northern foothills.

A winter weather advisory was in effect for the morning in the northern mountains of North Carolina with a mixture of rain, sleet and snow. Slush and ice covered some roads over parts of Ashe, Watauga and Avery counties, the weather service said.

Precipitation was expected to end by midday in the mountains and foothills.

The weather service said snowfall amounts included 8 inches in Boone, 6 inches in Mitchell County, and 4 inches in Jefferson.

A check with sheriff's departments in the northern counties bordering Virginia found the following accumulations, according to the National Weather Service: 8 to 10 inches in Alleghany County, light rain; in Surry County, light rain, sleet and snow; in Stokes County, light rain with slick spots; light rain in Rockingham County with main roads clear and some back roads slushy; rain in Caswell County, and rain in Wilkes County;

Also pleased with the recent rain and snow are farmers in western North Carolina, which has suffered through four years of drought.

But analysts warn that more precipitation is needed before the area can completely recover from a drought that has left areas 4 to 6 feet below their normal rainfall totals.

In Asheville, a little more than 3 inches have fallen since Feb. 16 at the airport, including 1.13 inches Monday. Asheville has been at the center of the worst drought in the Southeast.

The group of people who have been most directly affected by the lack of rainfall is farmers. The situation has reached such crisis proportions that last week area farmers met in Mars Hill to consider planting more drought-resistant crops this year.

On some ridges where there are farms, groundwater supplies are reported to be 15 to 20 feet below normal.

The heavy, wet snow snarled traffic on several highways in Watauga County, including N.C. 105 at Foscoe and N.C. 421 east of Boone.

Tractor-trailers ran off the road at both locations about 3 p.m.

Mavretic Makes A Peace Trip To A&T, But Doesn't Apologize

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — House Speaker Joe Mavretic refused to apologize for saying the school of agriculture at North Carolina A&T State University was "not much of a school at all," but said he would work for a discussion of funding.

"I really don't think anybody should apologize for telling the truth," Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, said Monday at a meeting with N.C. A&T officials and students. "If you look at the comparison of A&T and NCSU and the schools of agriculture ... for decades A&T comes out on the short end of the stick."

Mavretic said he wants to work with state Rep. Herman Gist, D-Guilford, in drafting a bill to get the University of North Carolina Board of Governors and the legislature to look into the inequities in funding the N.C. A&T School of Agriculture.

"I will do what I can to see at the core of the bill, that I hope would begin to address the inequities of funding in this biennium," Mavretic said at the conclusion of his morning meeting at the university.

Edward Fort, chancellor of N.C. A&T, told Mavretic that while North Carolina State University's School of Agriculture gets $62 million a year in state funds for research and extension services, his campus gets none.

Fort said the campus should get a percentage of the money or that funding of research and extension service should be increased to cover some of the university's needs.

"The state must totally revamp the way in which it funds agriculture resources in this state," Fort said.

Mavretic has been under fire after saying in Greenville last week that North Carolina has only two schools of agriculture and one of them is "not much of a school at all."

Mavretic said later that his comments referred to funding levels and the public attention given A&T.

"I say once again, and I say it clearly and emphatically ... there is and there has been an inequity in the level of funding that has gone to A&T," Mavretic told a gathering of students, faculty and administrators on Monday. "I intend as the speaker of the House to use my influence to ask some very difficult questions of the university system about this."

At the appearance in Greenville, Mavretic suggested that agricultural programs be set up at East Carolina and in western North Carolina. Fort asked Mavretic to apologize, and set up the meeting.

The N.C. Student Legislature is also calling for an apology for the remarks. The resolution seeking the apology was adopted Saturday during an interim council meeting of the N.C. Student Legislature, held in Greenville at East Carolina University.

The group, which exposes students to parliamentary procedures and public issues, has members from 36 colleges and universities in the state.

Senate OKs Fetal Disposal Measure

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A bill designed to prevent fetal remains from being dumped into abortion clinic garbage cans has cleared the state Senate after questions about its impact on medical research were settled.

"We believe that the bill allows legitimate research and gives the (state) Commission of Health Services the necessary regulatory authority to prevent abuse," Sen. A.D. Guy, D-Onslow, said before the Senate passed the bill 48-0 Monday. It now goes to the House.

Under the measure, clinics would have to dispose of fetuses by cremation, incineration or burial.

"The purpose of this bill is to prevent abuses in North Carolina of remains of pregnancy," Guy said. He and other bill supporters say there have been reports in other states of fetuses being thrown away with garbage.

The measure drew close scrutiny in committee and was pulled from the Senate floor earlier this month.

Senators voiced fear that the bill might hamper medical research involving fetuses or interfere with the use of fetal remains as ingredients in drugs. The bill's wording was amended to allay those concerns.

In other legislative action, the $8.6 billion highway construction plan endorsed by a legislative study commission and Gov. Jim Martin last week was introduced in the Senate and referred to the Transportation Committee.

If approved, it will go to the Finance Committee for consideration of its revenue-raising provisions, including a 5 1/4-cents-per-gallon gasoline tax increase and a 2 percent fee on automobile title transfers.

Study Indicates Rural South Growing Economically Faster Than Expected

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM — The Southern Growth Policies Board has completed a follow-up report to its 1985 study on jobs in rural parts of the South, and the new report says the employment picture isn't as gloomy as first suggested.

Although jobs in metropolitan areas are growing appreciably faster — about 80 percent faster during the most recent study period — researchers found that employment in rural areas is growing at nearly twice the national average.

"What makes the rural areas look as if they're performing poorly is the phenomenal growth in the metropolitan areas," said Stuart A. Rosenfeld, the board's deputy director.

The board's 1985 report — titled "After The Factories: Changing Employment Patterns in the Rural South" — sent shockwaves throughout the South by documenting a shift away from the region's traditional industrial development pattern. The study found the South was moving away from predominantly rural, manufacturing operations toward more urban, service-related development.

In addition, the report found that the development was relying less on steel, concrete and other physical capital for transporting goods and more on fiber optics, digital switching devices and human capital for processing and moving information. Thus, the quality of human resources was becoming more important than the costs of human resources.

"Originally, I think, people looked at the first report and said, 'Our rural areas are really in terrible shape,'" Rosenfeld told the Durham Morning Herald on Monday. "But the picture is not quite as bleak as we thought. Rural areas are growing, and they're growing better than many other parts of the country."

The new report covers the most recent complete business cycle, from 1977 through 1984. The original report, which extended from 1977 to 1982 and ended in the depths of a recession, prompted some analysts to suggest that its findings reflected cyclical rather than structural changes.

Rosenfeld said the follow-up, titled "Making Connections: After the Factories Revisited," had verified structural changes.

As the original report suggested, manufacturing is not really growing. Between 1982 and 1984, manufacturing appeared to regain many of the jobs lost in the previous five years, but it failed to contribute significantly to new employment. Service and construction industries were responsible for most of the new jobs.

"Manufacturing is no longer the force that's creating growth in the rural South," Rosenfeld said.

The new study also supports the contention that growth is inextricably tied to better education.

"In every respect the importance of education is confirmed — levels of education, institutions of higher education, and technical expertise," the report said. "It strengthens the conviction held in all southern states that growth and education go hand-in-hand in today's economy, and it supports the investments being made in education on economic grounds. The higher the levels of educational attainment in a county, the more likely it added new jobs and raised per capita income."

The results indicated that growth was slightly influenced by the presence of good interstate highway access, particularly if near a metro area. Growth also was influenced by the presence of commercial airports and technical resources such as colleges, scientists and technicians and technical associate degrees.

One of the surprises of the study, Rosenfeld said, was that rural areas adjacent to fast-growing metropolitan areas did not necessarily benefit from their proximity.

In North Carolina, for example, the highest rates of rural growth were in the eastern and western counties, not near the high-tech crescent between Raleigh and Charlotte.

Rosenfeld said high growth in rural areas may be more closely related to major tourist attractions: coast lines, recreational lakes, scenic mountains, and ski resorts.

Rural areas near military installations and "bedroom" communities with new industries and a growing consumer service sector also have performed well.

The Southern Growth Policies Board was created by southern governors in 1971 as a unique agency for regional cooperation and planning. Headquartered in Research Triangle Park, its 12-member states and Puerto Rico develop an economic policy agenda intended to improve their capacity for growth and development from within.

Ervin Library

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — With its 7,500 books, furniture and political cartoons, the library of Sen. Sam Ervin Jr. will be dismantled and moved to Western Piedmont Community College in Morganton.

There, students will be able to look through Ervin's lifetime repository of knowledge in a replica of the library, which will be dedicated early next year as part of the new Phifer Learning Resources Center.

Ervin, who retired in 1974 after serving in the Senate for 20 years and becoming national known as chairman of the Watergate hearings, died in 1985 at age 88.

spend what money it does have on welfare."

The reason for the decline in federal money is an example of a classic Catch 22: The number of refugees on welfare in North Carolina has declined because state agencies do such a good job of helping them so the funding will be reduced.

The federal government has proposed a 15 percent cut in programs, including job development and translation services, for refugees in North Carolina for fiscal year 1989, Bailey said.

Air Pollution

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina industries emitted nearly 100 million pounds of toxic air pollutants in 1987, including 12.7 million pounds of cancer-causing chemicals, according to a report.

A state air quality official said that the figures, which had been compiled for the first time, were cause for concern but that it was difficult to put them into perspective.

Sixteen counties had emissions exceeding 2 million pounds — demonstrating a need for state regulations to control air toxins, according to the N.C. Environmental Defense Fund, a non-profit environmental group that compiled the figures.

Catawba County ranked first in the state in releasing the highest amount of toxic air pollutants in 1987, and Forsyth County was second.

Worker Charged

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. (AP) — An Orange County construction worker has been arrested and charged with the shooting deaths of a Hillsborough couple whose bodies were found Saturday in a ditch, authorities say.

Jimmy Wayne Arnett, 29, was arrested Sunday night without incident at a trailer park where he lived with the victims. He was charged with two counts of first-degree murder in the deaths of Donnie Holleman, 22, and his wife, Susan O'Neal Holleman, 46.

Orange County Sheriff Lindy Pendergrass said the Hollemans apparently were shot to death Thursday at their home off Old N.C. 86 home, and the bodies then were dumped about a mile away.

No Criticism

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — A woman Marine Corps captain who has been recommended for discharge for associating with lesbians said she was angry over the treatment she received, but also said she would not criticize the corps.

"The Marine Corps is a good organization. I'm never going to put the Marine Corps down. It's not the organization, it's just some individuals in it," Capt. Judy Meade said in an interview Monday.

Ms. Meade, 36, a military police officer in the Marine Corps, also said she hopes for an honorable discharge for her 12 years of service. The final decision on a discharge will be made by the secretary of the Navy.

A board of five colonels recommended Sunday that Ms. Meade receive an "other than honorable" discharge after concluding that the captain's association with lesbians constituted conduct unbecoming an officer.

Refugee Services

GREENSBORO (AP) — A cut in federal funding for refugee services in North Carolina will mean an influx of refugees in states such as California, where services are being increased, an N.C. expert said.

"This is a bad investment," said Raleigh Bailey, director of the refugee program of Lutheran Family Services in Greensboro. "The government loses taxes as more refugees don't work, and then the government turns around and has to

Emergency Landing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MORRISVILLE, N.C. — A Piedmont Airlines 737 jetliner made an emergency landing at Raleigh-Durham International Airport after the pilot felt a vibration in one of the plane's two engines, officials said.

Flight No. 1614 took off from Charlotte at 1:15 p.m. Monday headed for Boston with 117 passengers and a crew of six, but was forced to land at Raleigh-Durham International at 1:50 p.m., said airport spokeswoman Teresa Damiano.

"He (the pilot) called into the tower saying that one engine was giving him a problem," Ms. Damiano said.

Once the plane landed safely, USAir spokesman Dave Shipley said the left engine was removed and all passengers were rerouted on other flights to Boston. USAir is in the process of merging with Piedmont.

Shipley said the aircraft is capable of flying on one engine and passengers were never in any serious danger.

Town Uses Greed To Seek Industry

GRAHAM, Texas (AP) — "Wanted: New Industry. $5,000 Reward." So say printed enticements distributed by leaders of this feisty little north Texas town of 9,000 near the sparkling waters of Possum Kingdom Lake.

Graham wants new business and industry and is willing to pay someone for finding it.

Who's eligible for the bounty? Practically everyone. "The Graham Industrial Association and the Graham Chamber of Commerce will confidentially and professionally follow up on your suggestion," the "Wanted" posters proclaim.

"If your recommended company successfully locates in Graham and provides at least 10 new jobs for a least six months you will receive a $5,000 check for providing us with the contact person."

Graham is neither the first nor the last city to woo new industry with incentives and innovative schemes, but the reward program does have a fresh touch.

Greed's the word that comes readily to mind, but the Graham Covenant, as author Robert Ludlum would call it, really is just a cash inducement to help rescue a small Texas town stricken by the oil slump.

"We will give $5,000 to anybody and everybody who can provide us with a lead that results in a new industry or business coming to Graham," Mayor Ed Hinson tells anyone who'll listen.

"We want to get the attention of all Graham citizens — clerks, truck drivers, gas station attendants — and give them the chance to do something for Graham and help themselves in the process."

But Hinson and City Manager Larry Fields, who concocted the scheme at a "board meeting" of coffee drinkers, stress that anyone can win the bounty.

The Graham Covenant maintains that the city can offer available manufacturing, warehousing, distribution, office space, acreage for new construction, utilities, a productive labor force and, for new employees, a quality of life that features abundant hunting and fishing opportunities.

North Trial Turns To Code Names

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The judge in Oliver North's Iran-Contra trial is assigning code names to mask the identities of foreign officials and intelligence operatives the government wants kept secret.

A CIA headquarters official who North's courier Robert Owen met in Costa Rica was assigned the code-name "CIA One" during Monday's proceedings.

Similarly, two Costa Rican officials that Owen said he met before touring the site for an airfield to be built for the Nicaraguan rebels were dubbed "Costa Rican Official No. 1" and "Assistant of Costa Rican Official No. 1."

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell explained to jurors Monday that the codes were necessary "to protect the identities of those individuals so they will not get in trouble" for involvement in covert intelligence operations.

But all the tiptoeing around sensitive references to names didn't prevent an abrupt adjournment Monday, while Gesell tried to resolve a problem created by the defense's attempt to disclose yet another name.

Gesell sent the jury home for the day saying: "I'm going to get this roadblock straightened out."

The matter was discussed at a closed session and the trial was set to continue today with further questioning of Owen, who shuttled intelligence maps, money and tactical advice from North to Nicaraguan Contra rebel leaders for nearly two years.

North, a retired Marine lieutenant colonel and a former National Security Council aide, faces 12 felony charges, including allegations he lied to lawmakers to cover up his secret efforts to help the Contras when such assistance was banned by Congress.

Ex-Du Pont Workers Accused In Extortion

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILMINGTON, Del. — Five former Du Pont Co. employees threatened to sell secret documents on synthetic fibers to a competitor or begin production themselves if the chemical giant didn't pay them $10 million, authorities said.

Four of the five were arrested on extortion charges Monday in Switzerland in a hotel parking lot after they failed to meet with Du Pont officials and an undercover FBI agent where an exchange was to take place, said FBI agent Joseph V. Corless.

Du Pont had planned to turn over a bogus $10 million check for the documents, which deal with the production of Lycra, the company's trade name for spandex fiber used in clothing such as swimming suits, leotards and pantyhose.

The suspects also were to sign a contract agreeing not to produce spandex fiber for five years, Corless said.

The five had worked at the Du Pont plant in Mercedes, Argentina, one of several plants that make spandex. Du Pont was contacted about the documents in December. Four of the five had quit since September, authorities said.

Those arrested were Bruno Skerjanc, age unknown; Raul A. Giordano, 36, operations supervisor for Lycra production; Antonio R. Inigo, 39, maintenance supervisor for Lycra production; and Maria I. Lorenzo de Bianchini, 39, secretary of the Lycra information office, authorities said.

Corless said Ms. de Bianchini had the most access to the documents.

Study Challenges Safety Of Fruits

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A private group says it will sue the Environmental Protection Agency to make it tighten its pesticide standards because current allowable levels in fruits and vegetables pose a risk to preschool children.

The group, the Natural Resources Defense Council, said in a report released Monday that current standards fail to account for the high amounts of fruits and vegetables children eat in proportion to their weight.

The study's findings were reported last week after a summary of the two-year study became public. The group examined risks from the use of eight cancer-causing pesticides on 27 fruits and vegetables. While no lawsuit has yet been filed, Al Meyerhoff, a lawyer for the council, said the group plans to take the matter to court, arguing that the EPA has failed to protect the public health of all citizens.

"When the agency sets supposedly safe levels of pesticides in food they ignore children," Meyerhoff said in an interview.

The EPA has challenged the findings of the study.

John Moore, acting deputy administrator, said last week the EPA analysis on allowable toxicity levels of fruits and vegetables already considers that children often consume large amounts of such foods.

Illegal Aliens Nabbed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Immigration officials nabbed 79 illegal aliens on a Los Angeles-New York flight, acting on tips from airline sources and even someone who often traveled the route and became suspicious of fellow passengers.

Investigators believe illegal aliens have been aboard the same Eastern Airlines overnight flight nearly every day for the past 30 days, said Tom Thomas, an Immigration and Naturalization Service spokesman in Atlanta.

Agents arrested the 79 Monday during Flight 80's 5:35 a.m. stopover at Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport. Thomas said the flight might have been used because no plane transfers are involved and rates might have been cheaper.

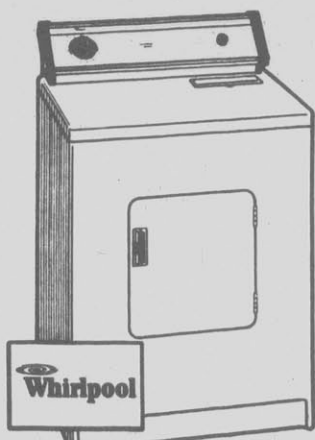

"There's a commuter who regularly flies from Los Angeles to Atlanta who called our office. ... and said, 'Hey, it seems there's an awful lot of Hispanic people who fly this flight. You might want to check into it,'" according to Thomas.

Thomas said some of the aliens indicated they had paid up to $4,000 for a package, but authorities don't know what that deal included other than air fare from California to New York. The package could have included living arrangements, phony documents and a job, he added.

On Monday, the cheapest fares available for the flight were $433 to $577, including taxes, according to a travel agent.

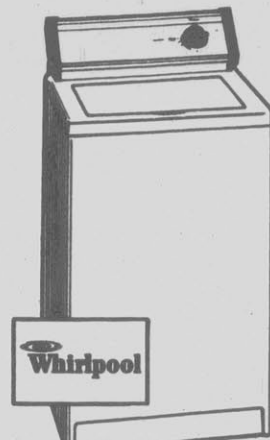

One of the 79, Elias Quevedo-Gonzalez of Pachalun, Guatemala, said he borrowed $1,400 from neighbors to make the trip.

Mail Box Flag Wins A Dinner

Dear Abby: Please help me settle a bet and win a dinner. My mate and I are at odds over the reason for the red flag on our mailbox. She says we should put it up to let the mail carrier know that there is mail in the box to be picked up.

I told her that its original purpose was to let the homeowner know that his mail had been delivered. Can you help me? — U.S. Male

Dear Male: According to Mike Orland, supervisor of the Beverly Hills, Calif., post office: "The flag goes up to signal the mail carrier that there is outgoing mail in the box to be collected." You owe your mate a dinner.

Dear Abby: I read with interest the letter regarding the multiplication of pups from one female dog — from one to 4,000 in seven years — and the plea to have them neutered.

I would like to relate this to the equal proliferation of mankind. Starting with 1 billion in 1800, the population doubled in 125 years. From 1925 to 1987, the increase was to 6 billion. The projection at this rate is 14 billion by 2025!

The time has come and gone when we should have begun neutering the irresponsible breeders of the human herd. Our fragile ecology depends on it. — Lyle Moore, Hilo, Hawaii

Dear Mr. Moore: That's food for thought. But is anybody listening?

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: The constant rain in Seattle must soften our brains. I, too, was taken in by a sob story from a young woman who told me she had been "beaten and robbed" and was desperate for bus fare.

After seeing her on the streets in the next weeks, conning other people, it became apparent to me that she had other uses for the money she collected.

One day I saw her setting up another sucker near a cash machine and I decided to take action. I got in line and waited. She saw me so she stayed away, but when her victim got in line behind me, I turned to him and recited the story she must have given him, and let him know that she'd already fleeced me and many others. I left him with the information and went about my business.

Twenty minutes later, who should be crossing the street, but the poor young lady! She turned to me and said defiantly, "I got my 40 bucks anyway!"

At least now I know there's a bigger fool in Seattle than me. — Philip A. Hocker

Dear Philip: Don't be so quick to buy her story. If she lied about needing bus fare, she could have lied about getting the 40 bucks.

Beauty Thoughts Go Far

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

Every time I see the motto at the post office — "Neither snow nor rain nor heat nor gloom of night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds" — I am reminded of the brave souls for whom it was obviously written: women who go to the beauty shop.

Offhand, I know of no group as dedicated to making good their appointments as women with unwashed, stringy hair. Nothing can deter them. Disasters are nothing more than challenges. They will commandeer rowboats during a flood to drop them off for their "standing." They will grope and stumble in the darkness of brownouts. They have been known to arrive at their appointments during earthquakes with instructions to "Hold the manicure, Doris, until the shock waves pass."

You honestly don't for a minute believe that the salons of Nome, Alaska, closed their doors this winter, do you? These brave women climbed into their cars with square tires and solid fuel lines and inched their way through blizzards of 80 degrees below zero to get their hair shampooed and set.

I don't have the statistics to prove that a haircut is the antibiotic of the '80s, but every woman who has the flu and needs a haircut will never cannot do with dirty, stringy hair. She cannot give birth, be married, go to a funeral, drop a child off at school, stay at the scene of an accident, or answer the phone with her husband's old girlfriend on the line.

Unlike women, men do not consider "hair" as one of the major religions. They say, "I need a haircut" in the same tone as they say, "I need change for the coffee machine." The passion and the urgency just aren't there.

Women, on the other hand, will not be deterred by a dead car battery, inclement weather, an empty gas tank, a sitter who didn't show up, or a direct hit by a bomb on the shop.

A person has been known to come between a mother and child and live, but don't try it with a woman and her hairdresser.

the state, and no such business name is on file with the Pitt County Register of Deeds. No telephone number was available in the Greenville City Directory or the phone book.

Teel could not be reached for further comment.

Ms. Culbreth said John Gray owns a funeral home, crematorium and ambulance service in Wake County, and a funeral home in Bethel, and the incineration service could be a subsidiary of one of his businesses.

One problem with crematoriums, Ms. Culbreth said, is that they are not regulated by the state. While activity connected to cadavers is regulated by the state board, she said no regulations govern cremations.

Because no corpses were found in the Pitt storage site, she said there was no violation of the board's statutes. However, she said the storage practice could violate statutes of the hospitals or medical facility that contracted a business to burn the waste.

Dr. Stan Harris of Greenville, regional medical examiner, said the material appears to have come from a hospital, but he would not say which facility. He did say the waste did not come from Pitt County Memorial Hospital, which operates its own incinerator.

Also, Ms. Culbreth said legislation pending in the General Assembly would establish laws to govern crematoriums, she said.

"Hopefully, that will be corrected next year at this time," she said. "Right now, nobody regulates (crematoriums)."

In past years, there have been at least two other complaints about how John Gray disposed of cremated ashes, she said, but the board could take no action because no cadavers were involved.

Also, Gray lists a Bethel telephone number for his crematorium. Ms. Culbreth said the crematorium is actually in Raleigh, but the board is not able to regulate how crematoriums list phone numbers. The board does not allow funeral homes to list telephone numbers in a city, unless the facility is physically located there, she said.

The board is also backing legislation to create criminal statutes controlling the storage of medical and human waste pending incineration.

Currently, when a business assumes control of waste, there are virtually no laws governing how soon the material must be burned or how it must be stored.

"To my knowledge, that's not regulated by statutes," said Bill Brinkhouse, an investigator with the state medical examiner's office.

Brinkhouse said his office would probably not become involved in the Pitt County situation, unless an investigation is ordered.

Cities Liable

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Local governments may be forced to pay monetary damages to people whose rights are violated by inadequately trained public employees, the Supreme Court ruled unanimously today.

Ruling in a case from Canton, Ohio, the justices said cities and towns may be held legally accountable if the inadequate training stemmed from governmental "deliberate indifference."

In an opinion by Justice Byron R. White, the court said the inadequate training also must be closely related to the ultimate injury suffered before local governments can be forced to pay damages.

The ruling, although a potential threat to municipal treasuries nationwide, might not result in numerous successful lawsuits.

White said the court was imposing a stringent standard for those filing such suits because any lesser standard would open local governments

South Carolina Tops Lady Bucs

14th Ranked Gamecocks Roll

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina's Lady Pirates hung with 14th ranked South Carolina for a while, but then the Lady Gamecocks took advantage of ECU's lack of depth and pulled away to roll up an 84-59 basketball victory Monday night.

The Gamecocks, now 20-6, built up a 16-point lead in the first half and continued out to as much as a 29-point spread before it was over.

"We got beat by a real good team," ECU coach Pat Pierson said. "They have such outstanding athletes. Even their big kids have surprising quickness," she added.

Those big kids, forward Beth Hunt and center Shonna Banner, led the way for the Lady Gamecocks with 23 and 22 points, respectively. Both pulled down eight rebounds as South Carolina held a 41-23 advantage.

Hunt is 6-1 and Banner, 6-3. Both constantly made good on inside shots. Hunt connected on 10 of 12 while Banner made nine of 11.

"They are just an outstanding basketball team," Pierson continued. "I just hope that playing against a team of that caliber will be a learning experience for us and will help us in the (Colonial Athletic Association) tournament."

For the first 15 minutes of the game, the Lady Pirates stuck with the Gamecocks, even leading on two occasions. But both Chris O'Connor and Sarah Gray got into foul trouble for the Lady Pirates and that, Pierson said, was when South Carolina began to pull away.

South Carolina scored the first two baskets, but East Carolina came back to tie it at 4-4. South Carolina again went out by four, 8-4, but East Carolina struggled back and took the lead for the first time at 10-9 when Gray hit from underneath off a pass from Hamilton.

But Hunt then scored on a nine-foot jumper in the lane to make it 11-10, but Gretta Savage hit a 10-footer to return the lead to the Lady Pirates, 12-10, with 11:14 left.

It was to be the last ECU lead of the night.

Hunt scored off a layup with 10:55 left to return the lead to the Lady Gamecocks and she followed that up 50 seconds later with a three-point play to open up a 16-12 lead. The Lady Pirates twice cut it back to two before South Carolina began to pull away.

Sandra Grace hit two free throws with 4:11 left to cut the South Carolina lead to 27-20, but the Gamecocks then hit the next nine in a row to balloon out to a 36-20 lead. That margin held at the half, 40-24.

In the second half, it was just more of the same as South Carolina moved out to as much as a 27-point lead at 61-34 before the Lady Pirates cut it back to 19, 63-44. South Carolina pulled away again, taking an 84-55 lead before ECU scored the final four points of the game.

Rose Advances In Big East Play

Johnny Ebron Keys 52-44 Win

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

With a distinct height advantage over Wilson Beddingfield, Rose's big men figured to be the key, but it was guard Johnny Ebron who made the winning difference for the Rampants.

Ebron scored a game-high 15 points to lead the Rampants to a 52-44 win over the Bruins in the opening round of the Big East 4-A Conference Basketball Tournament Monday night.

"We knew we wanted to control the game from the inside," Rose coach Jim Brewington said. "But they started sagging back and that left Johnny and James Teel open."

"I like Johnny to shoot the ball. He's not selfish. He could probably average 25 points a game but he knows his job is to get it to the big people and shoot when he's open."

The Bruins, with no real height across the front line, had little choice but to sag in on 6-8 Paul Powers and 6-6 Carlester Crumpler. As it was, Powers ended up with only two points and Crumpler had eight, but it mattered little.

After a slow start plagued by turnovers by Beddingfield and missed shots by the Rampants, momentum began to shift Rose's way at the end of the second quarter.

Beddingfield pulled as close as 15-11 with 3:47 left in the half on a jumper by Bill Mercer and had a chance to cut it to two after a miss by Jamie Brewington, but Reggie Ray turned the ball over and Ebron nailed a jumper at the other end to make it 17-11.

Teel then came up with a steal, was fouled and hit one of two free throws to make it 18-11.

A layup by James Smith pulled the Bruins back within five at 18-13, but Rose went on a 8-1 tear over the final two minutes to take a 26-14 lead at the half.

"It was very important," Brewington said of his team's late charge. "That put us coming in with a 10-point lead."

All told, Beddingfield had 14 first half turnovers and those miscues dug the Bruins a deep hole to climb out of.

"It was an up and down ball game," Beddingfield coach Lin Greene said. "I thought we started out and controlled the tempo, which we had to do. But the turnovers hurt us. I felt we let it slip away more than we could afford to."

Rose continued to pull away in the second half and jumped out to as much as a 18-point lead in the third quarter when Ebron came up with a steal and fed Teel for a layup to make it 38-20 with 1:58 left in the period.

Beddingfield chipped away at the lead during the final period and pulled within eight three times in the final three minutes, courtesy of two three pointers by Henry Langston and a layup by Dennis Smith, but that was as close as it would get.

Rose went into a delay in the end, milked the clock down and hit enough of its free throws (4-8 in the final two minutes) to hold on for the win.

In the end, it was a question of numbers. Rose had them and Beddingfield didn't.

"I felt we got good shots," Greene said. "We were just shooting over taller people and that makes it tough."

The win puts the Rampants into the second round of the tournament Wednesday for a game against Northeastern, a 69-48 winner over Kinston in another first round game at home at 7:30 p.m.

Elsewhere in the league, Fike downed Hunt, 92-68, and Northern Nash nipped Rocky Mount, 67-64. Fike meets Northern Nash Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

Chargers Too Much For Devils

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

BETHEL — Even without the services of a starter and a key reserve, Ayden-Grifton proved to be too much for South Lenoir.

The second-seeded Chargers overcame a sluggish start to roll to a 100-64 win over the seventh-seeded Blue Devils in the opening round of the Eastern Plains Basketball Tournament.

Ayden-Grifton entered the game without starting guard David Dixon and backup guard Darryl Moye. Both had been suspended for one game for disciplinary reasons.

But forward Ronnell Peterson and center Leon Dixon picked up the slack for the Chargers. Peterson scored 38 points and pulled down 12 rebounds, while Dixon chipped in 22 points and had 10 boards to lead the Chargers. James Woodard also added 12 points for Ayden-Grifton.

The win pushes Ayden-Grifton to 19-4 on the year and into the second round of the tournament on Wednesday to face the winner of tonight's game between Greene Central and C.B. Aycock.

The loss marked the 38th in a row for the Blue Devils, who finished this season 0-23.

"This is a good way for us to get started in the tournament," Ayden-Grifton coach Bob Murphrey said. "Even though it wasn't tough, it gave us a chance to play and get into the swing of the tournament."

"I would much rather have played tonight's game than had a bye," Murphrey said. "Even though it's always a chance you might get beat, playing in the first round gives you a chance to work out those early jitters."

And the Chargers definitely seemed to have some jitters in the early going Monday.

The Blue Devils were within six points, 31-25, with just over four minutes to play in the first half after David Swinson scored on a baseline jumper.

"We were down 31-25 and had the ball," South Lenoir coach Bobby Davis said. "Then we turned the ball over and they scored three points on their next possession and from there it was all downhill."

Woodard drove in for a layup after the Blue Devil turnover, was fouled and sank the free throw to get the Chargers' run started.

Ayden-Grifton went on to roll up a 51-30 lead by the half and, for the most part, put the game out of reach.

"We came in here and showed that we could play ball with Ayden-Grifton," Davis said. "But once we started going bad, we got back in that same old rut of playing bad basketball."

The Blue Devils tried to make another push at the beginning of the second half when they scored the first six points to pull within 51-36.

The Chargers, however, answered the run with a nine-point burst of their own keyed by Dixon and Peterson to push the lead to 24, 60-36 with 5:41 left in the quarter.

"I think you're always going to be a little rusty for a while in your first tournament game," Murphrey said. "But once we got the kinks out, we got going."

South Lenoir's Stephen Waller scored nine of his team-high 19 points in the third quarter and kept the Chargers from stretching the lead much the rest of the period. Ayden-Grifton went into the final quarter up 77-51.

And from there, the only question left to be answered was whether or not the Chargers would hit the century mark. That was taken care of when reserve Kinsey Wallace buried a 3-pointer with 12 seconds left to wind up the scoring and give Ayden-Grifton its biggest lead of the game.

Steele Looks Only To AU Game ECU Coach's Name Comes Up Regarding ISU Job

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina basketball coach Mike Steele said he has not been contacted about a job opening at Indiana State despite published reports that say he's one of the leading candidates to replace Sycamore coach Ron Greene.

"My only concern is the American game and trying to win the first game East Carolina has ever won in the Colonial Athletic Association basketball tournament," Steele said. "Anything extraneous, I'll deal with after the season."

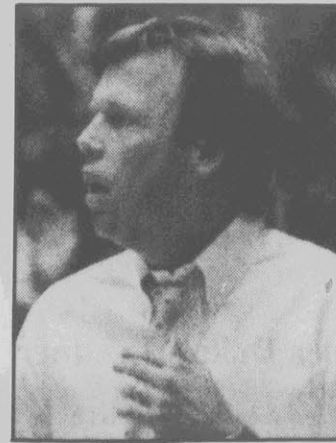

The Pirates open play in the CAA Tournament Saturday at 2 p.m. against American University.

Indiana State coach Ron Greene resigned Feb. 22, effective at the end of the season. A settlement will be made on the final two years of his contract.

Greene is in his fourth year coaching the Sycamores, who are 4-23 this year and last in the Missouri Valley Conference, which in recent years has sent Bradley and Wichita State to the NCAA Tournament.

Another coach prominently mentioned in published reports is Indiana University assistant basketball coach Ron Felling.

Steele, in his second year at ECU, is a native of Robinson, Ill.,

Mike Steele

which is located just across the Indiana state line about 35 miles from Terra Haute where ISU is located.

Steele later played at Purdue University and went on to coach Depauw University in Greencastle, Ind., which is also near Terra Haute.

"My name probably came up because Depauw is about 35 miles from Terra Haute and my home town is about 35 miles from Terra Haute," Steele said. "It's just natural my name came up, but I've had no contact."

ISU has officially received 16 applications in the mail and over 60 phone calls concerning the vacancy, according to ISU Athletic Director Brian Faison, who expects to have a coach named by the end of March.

While a search committee has been named, Boston Celtic stand-out Larry Bird, who played at ISU in the late 1970s, figures to play an advisory role, according to published reports in Indiana.

Steele became the head coach at ECU in the spring of 1987, replacing Charlie Harrison.

He guided a Pirate squad devoid of height or experience to an 8-20 mark in his first season and followed that up with a 14-13 record this year.

At Depauw, Steele took over a program that went 5-20 the year before he arrived and recorded a record of 124-40 in six seasons. His best team reached the Division III Final Four in 1984 en route to a 25-5 finish and was ranked as high as third nationally.

In 1986, Depauw went 26-2 and reached the NCAA Great Lakes Regional finals.

During his time at Depauw, the team set a Division III record for consecutive homecourt wins with 61 from 1982-87.

During his four-year career at Depauw, Steele started his junior year and was a team captain his senior season.

Prior to coaching at Depauw, Steele was an assistant at Butler University in Indianapolis from 1978-81.

North Pitt Pulls Away In Final Quarter, 73-57

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

BETHEL — When the chips were down, North Pitt did what it had to do.

The fourth-seeded Panthers reeled off the first 10 points of the fourth quarter to pave the way to a 73-57 win over first-seeded Pamlico County in the first round of the Eastern Plains Conference Basketball Tournament.

"In the fourth quarter we stopped trapping and kept people on their shooters," North Pitt coach Gregg Ashorn said. "They missed a couple of 3-pointers and we started coming around with our rebounding."

The Panthers, who improved to 11-12 on the year, put four players in double figures in picking up the win led by 15 points from William Morning and 13 from Randy House. Clayton Cherry added 12 points and Calvin Grimes 10.

The Hurricanes, who finished their season at 3-15, were led by 14 points from Mike Rouse and 11 from Raymond Green.

Morning got the Panthers started on their run in the fourth quarter with a dunk with 7:50 left to push the lead to 45-37.

Cherry then scored inside on a layup following an assist from House to stretch the lead to 10, 47-37 with 7:03 to play.

Following two more scores by Morning, House tacked on two free throws with 5:30 left to give the Panthers a 53-37 lead.

"They (North Pitt) got what they wanted inside against us," Pamlico County coach Gary Cooper said. "We got tired coming down the stretch and then we just fell apart. We never could recover from that run."

The Hurricanes cut the margin back down to seven, 53-46, with 2:40 left when Green canned a 15-footer. Pamlico County was able to cut into the lead when the Panthers missed three straight one-and-one opportunities.

"I think when we went up 53-37 the kids thought it was over," Ashorn said. "I knew it wasn't over though because these guys are capable of

Former President Consoles Duke's Laettner

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Duke basketball player Christian Laettner got some presidential words of consolation Sunday after a missed free throw cost his team a chance to send the Duke-Arizona game into overtime. Former President Richard Nixon, accompanied by a friend wearing a Duke hat, approached Laettner as he sat alone in a corner of the Duke dressing room after the Blue Devils' 77-75 loss. "I know you feel badly, young man," Nixon, a graduate of the Duke University Law School said, looking up at the half-dressed basketball player with the sad face. "But everything will be just fine. I know. I've won and lost a few myself. "And I will tell you this. This is the first basketball game I have attended in 55 years, and I will go away remembering the shots you made," Nixon said, according to the Greensboro News & Record.

hitting 3-pointers and coming back quick.

The Panthers, who made only nine of their first 22 free throw attempts, then hit 12 of their last 15 to put the game away.

In the early going, the lead went back and forth until the Panthers moved out by five, 25-20, with 2:50 left in the first half after a 3-pointer by House. That shot came on the heels of a 3-pointer by Grimes at the 3:18 mark.

The Panthers stretched the lead to as many as six, 29-23, before taking a 29-25 lead in at the intermission.

North Pitt looked poised to put the game away in the third quarter when they built a 41-30 lead with 2:44 left in the period. The Hurricanes, however, battled back to within six thanks to 3-pointers from Rouse and Marcel Bell in the final two minutes.

For the night, the Hurricanes hit six 3-pointers, but that wasn't nearly enough, according to Cooper. "We've been living and dying by the 3-pointer all year," Cooper said. "Chris (Warren) usually has three or four each game but he didn't have any tonight and that made a difference."

The Panthers will now move on to face top-seeded Farmville Central, 19-3 on the year, in second round tournament action Wednesday at 8 p.m.

Hoyas' Win Over Villanova Quite Pleasing To Thompson

LANDOVER, Md. — Rarely has Georgetown coach John Thompson gotten so much satisfaction from a victory that meant so little.

Charles Smith scored 10 of his 24 points in a decisive second-half run that lifted Georgetown to a 76-62 Big East victory Monday night over Villanova.

Since the Hoyas have already clinched the conference regular season title, the game was virtually meaningless to them. Still, Thompson savored it because Georgetown fell behind by nine points in the second half before rallying to win.

"I think it was good for us. I wouldn't have been overly upset if we lost, but it's great to have some things to fuss about," Thompson said. "It was also great because we were in a struggle and still came out of it with a win."

The Hoyas led 35-33 at halftime, but opened the second half by missing their first eight shots from the floor and five of six free throws while Villanova took a 45-36 lead.

Enter Smith, who took it upon himself to generate some instant offense.

"I had to go out and look for my shot," he said. "I knew I had to start shooting the ball, so I did. Luckily, most of them went in."

A layup by Smith with 13:55 left ended the Hoyas' dry spell, and he added two 3-pointers and a short jumper in a 20-6 run that gave Georgetown a 56-51 lead with 7:51 left.

The Wildcats quickly cut the margin to 56-54, but Jaren Jackson hit a 3-pointer and John Turner made two free throws to make it 61-54.

Villanova, 15-14 overall and 6-9 in the conference, never got closer than five points the rest of the way.

"We told Smitty to take the shot," said Jackson, who contributed 16 points. "If it goes in or not, he knows that we're depending on him."

"He's the heart and soul and backbone of that team, and John knows it and the team knows it," Villanova coach Rollie Massimino said of Smith.

The Hoyas, 23-3 and 13-2, have now won five in a row overall and 20 straight at home. Villanova, which lost its third consecutive game, got 16 points from Gary Massey and 15 from Rodney Taylor.

"We did not have a particularly good shooting night," Massimino said. "We got the ball and missed some shots, but they kind of forced us to miss them."

Villanova scored the first point of the game, but it turned out to be the Wildcats' only lead of the half. Georgetown led 15-5 with 6:12 elapsed and 23-15 with 12 minutes gone, but Villanova rallied behind eight straight points by Taylor to close the deficit at halftime.

Wildcats center Tom Greis made two close-range shots and an eight-foot jumper to ignite a 12-1 spree at the start of the second half that gave Villanova a nine-point advantage with 15:29 left.

At that point, Smith took over and the Hoyas were on their way to sweeping the season series from the Wildcats.

Both teams had guards removed from the game due to injury. Villanova senior Kenny Wilson left with a suspected stress fracture of the right foot and Georgetown junior Mark Tillmon was carried off the court on a stretcher after being kneed in the groin.

The status of each player was to be determined during a medical examination today.

No. 10 Michigan 79, Michigan St. 52

An 18-0 run that spanned the latter part of the first half and the early portion of the second was decisive for the Wolverines, 22-6 overall and 10-5 in the Big Ten. Glen Rice, the top scorer in the conference at 26.1 per game, was held to nine points. But Loy Vaught scored 16 to lead Michigan.

"I can't say enough about Glen Rice. They were doubling Glen the entire time," Coach Bill Frieder said. "They used a triangle-and-two and a box-and-one on him all night, and he kept finding the open man. If that's not unselfishness, I don't know what is. And that's why we won the game."

No. 18 Nev.-Las Vegas 84, UC Santa Barbara 75

David Butler scored 25 points as Nevada-Las Vegas clinched its seventh straight Big West Conference championship.

The Rebels, bouncing back from a last-second 88-87 loss Saturday at Louisiana State, improved their Big West record to 14-2. They are 21-7 overall.

Anderson Hunt added scored 19 points for Nevada-Las Vegas.

UCSB, which got 24 points from forward Mike Doyle, is 10-7 in the conference and 19-7 overall.

NASCAR Driver Found Dead

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A former NASCAR driver whose burned body was found in a charred truck in Conover died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head, investigators said Monday.

The body of William Leroy "Roy" Tyner of Hickory was found Thursday morning in the cab of a truck outside Punch Enterprises, where he worked as show car manager. The truck, leased by his employer, was used to haul Budweiser and Anheuser-Busch show cars.

Tyner's NASCAR racing career lasted from 1957 until 1970. He started in 310 NASCAR Grand National Division races, never winning, but finishing 14 times in the top five.

Conover police Capt. Gary Lafone said preliminary results of an autopsy concluded Tyner died of the gunshot wound. When the truck was found, Tyner's body and the interior of the truck had been damaged by fire.

"Due to the nature and location of the wound, it was ruled self-inflicted," Lafone said. He said a larger caliber revolver was in the truck.

He said the fire "was a smoldering fire and there were no accelerants used."

Lafone said would not say what started the fire, except that it was not ignited by the gunshot.

UNRANKED

Tennessee-Chattanooga clinched the regular-season crown in the Southern Conference with a 79-70 victory over the Citadel. Daren Chandler scored 19 points as Tennessee-Chattanooga ended the season with a 10-4 conference record.

When Appalachian State was upset by Marshall 97-96, the Moccasins had the conference title.

Andre Cunningham sank two free throws with 11 seconds left for Marshall, which was led by Gery Strickland with a season-high 26 points.

"We didn't shoot that well (37.5 percent), but I was glad that we kept scraping right to the end," Pierson said. "That's a sign of good things to come. But I'm not real surprised at the outcome for several reasons. They're good, and we were a little flat after our win over UNC-Wilmington Saturday night. Then, they were fired up. They came into our game after losing at Virginia Tech. They had beaten Virginia Tech by 30 some at South Carolina."

Martha Parker added 11 and Karen Middleton had 10 for South Carolina. East Carolina was led by Gray and Savage with 14 each, while O'Connor added 10.

The loss dropped the Lady Pirates to 14-11 on the year and they close out the regular season on Saturday, hosting Appalachian State at 3 p.m. in Minges.

New York Party Will Honor Actor-Director Sidney Poitier

By Jay Sharbutt
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK — Those attending a black-tie gala held by the American Museum of the Moving Image here today won't have to guess who's coming to dinner. They know Sidney Poitier will be the main event.

The party is for him, followed by a March 3-17 retrospective of his better-known films, including "The Defiant Ones" that earned him both an Oscar nomination in 1958 and star status.

That was the year Poitier, whose first film job nine years earlier was in an Army Signal Corps documentary on religious counseling, became one of the few black actors to join Hollywood's front ranks.

Big changes since then, much progress for blacks in leading roles, he says. "Today, we have Eddie Murphy, Denzel Washington, Danny Glover, James Earl Jones, Richard Pryor, Bill Cosby..."

And don't forget the new kid on the block, Forest Whitaker, star of "Bird." He adds: "A wonderful actor, by the way... I watched him the other day and I marvel at how easy he works. He's got it."

"Anyhow, that's what we see today. And from my time to now, one has to characterize their appearance on the scene as progress, although it's far from complete, certainly."

One also must keep in mind that there still are Latino and Asian actors "who are struggling very hard for some identity in the film business," he says. "And we all have essentially had the same problems."

The tall, dignified actor, who won a best actor Oscar in 1963 for "Lilies of the Field," spoke by phone from Los Angeles shortly before heading east for Tuesday night's dinner tribute at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

He praises what he calls "the healthy number of people" in Hollywood who have worked to expand opportunities for minorities, including himself, through the years. "We're lucky to have them," he says.

But he believes that the bottom line is the belated realization that there is a sizable black audience in the United States. That, he says, is largely "responsible for these new opportunities."

"The fact is, the black community is a sizable portion of profit balance... we go to movies and what we would like to see... is ourselves, our lifestyles, our values. At least we would like to see ourselves represented on the screen."

When interviewed, Poitier was amid preparations to direct his ninth film and his second with an old pal — Bill Cosby, the NBC sitcom star.

The new effort, a comedy that starts production either on April 23 or May 1, is "Ghost Dad." Poitier says. He first directed Cosby and co-starred with him in another comedy in 1974, "Uptown Saturday Night."

Despite acting two years ago in "Little Nikita," and then "Shoot to Kill" with Tom Berenger, Poitier has spent more time behind the camera than in front of it in recent years.

The reason for his second career as a director is that, as he gently puts it, "things do change."

Born in Miami, raised the son of a poor farmer on Cat Island in the Bahamas, Poitier's first career began with various roles on and off Broadway after World War II service as a physiotherapist in the then-segregated Army.

He came to Hollywood 40 years ago for "No Way Out," the first of 43 Hollywood films on which he has worked, most of them as an actor.

The 20 years that followed were exciting and satisfying for him, he says, a period when films in which he had roles tried "in a very courageous way" to understand and examine racial relations in America.

Much of the effort, he emphasizes, came through directors, producers and writers, "men like Stanley Kramer, the Mirisch Brothers, Richard Brooks and Martin Ritt, people who had great courage to step outside the framework, and came up with pictures like 'The Defiant Ones,' 'Edge of the City,' 'Heat of the Night,' and 'Guess Who's Coming to Dinner?'"

"It was a very vibrant period, a very active period. It was during the civil rights struggle in America, during a tumultuous time in society. So parts coming to me at that time had some currency to them."

"Then, of course, subsequent to the Vietnam War, we (Hollywood) got into a different syndrome, more cops-and-robbers stuff. We had just begun to examine the social fabric during those (previous) 20 years, but then we started drifting away from it as an industry."

"I don't know if that's because... we didn't replenish our mavericks, or if it's just the natural drift of things. But we floated away from that kind of examination. And with that went, for me, the kind of material that kicked my juices over."

Singer Faces Brain Surgery

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Veteran country and gospel singer-composer Stuart Hamblen faces surgery to remove a brain tumor, but also suffers from inoperable lung cancer, a spokesman said.

Hamblen, 82, a longtime host of the "Cowboy Church" radio program, has received well wishes from former President Reagan, cowboy performers Roy Rogers and Gene Autry, and many others during his stay at St. John's Hospital and Health Center, a hospital spokesman said.

Physicians said Hamblen would live about two months without the brain tumor operation, which was scheduled for today. He was expected to live six months with the surgery, Hamblen's spokesman Garth Hintz said Monday.

"He has been telling the doctor he wanted to go to New Zealand," Hintz said. "He's a tough old bird and I expect if he wants to go to New Zealand he will."

Hamblen's best-known song, "It Is No Secret What God Can Do," written in 1950, has been translated into 50 languages. He ran for president in 1952, running a distant third behind Dwight Eisenhower and Adlai Stevenson.

Producer Debbie Allen is credited with rescuing TV's 'A Different World' from extinction

'Different World' Producer Brings New Lease On Life

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — If television gave awards for the most improved show of the season, this year's would have to go to NBC's "A Different World" and to producer Debbie Allen.

In its debut season last year, "A Different World" was ballyhooed as a spinoff of "The Cosby Show," and slotted right behind that hit comedy. I, it produced huge ratings, frequently landing in first or second place in the Nielsen's. Critically, though, it was a big yawn.

The show was a vehicle for Lisa Bonet, one of the "Cosby" kids packed off to college. The show was designed to appeal to younger audiences.

"I was brought in to turn it around," said Allen, who previously helped make "Fame" a hit in syndication. "I was also to help with the morale problem on the set. People were unhappy. It wasn't a company that had a central binding force. One of my main assignments was to make the show about something that was relevant."

The most interesting character on the college campus was Whitley Gilbert, a spoiled debutante played by Jasmine Guy. This season, Whitley got the limelight when Bonet became pregnant and left the show.

Allen said she was sorry that Bonet had to leave and would welcome her back. "I don't think she'll be back," she said. "She's had her baby and is getting used to being a mama."

Allen said she was happy that the show had become good enough that the Rev. Jesse Jackson had agreed that morning to appear on the show.

His episode is to be taped in March for airing in April.

Allen also has a special on ABC this Sunday and her first album, "Special Look," is due out in April from MCA.

"So many exciting things are happening I'm getting on the Princess Di level," said Allen, who talked in her office at the CBS-MTM Studios where the show is filmed. "Everything I've been working on for a long time is coming to fruition. My real forte is that I've been able to keep up with my own growth pattern. I have been consistently able to keep up with my ambitions, my talents and my abilities."

When she was hired as producer-director of "A Different World" the first thing she did was review the physical look of the show and talk to the writers about the stories.

"The Debbie Allen Special" on ABC this Sunday, stars Whoopi Goldberg, Robert Guillaume, Little Richard, Spike Lee, Philip Michael Thomas and Phylicia Rashad, who is Allen's sister and plays Bill Cosby's wife on "The Cosby Show." Allen's husband, Norm Nixon of the Los Angeles Clippers basketball team, is co-executive producer and makes a brief appearance.

Amnesty Reports Iraqi Violations

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — The government of Iraq has tortured, abused, imprisoned, and executed children — some just infants — to punish and extract confessions from its adult opponents, Amnesty International said today.

"Opponents and critics of the government have frequently had to pay a price for their activities in terms of the welfare — and sometimes the lives — of their children," the international human rights group says in a report.

Amnesty appealed to Iraq to stop the reported brutality and said it had asked the U.N. Commission for Human Rights, now meeting in Geneva, to scrutinize the situation.

The 33-page report, entitled "Children: Innocent Victims of Political Repression," said children held by Iraqi authorities are routinely tortured by beatings, whippings, sexual abuse and electric shock.

It said the aim is often to "force them to reveal information about their relatives ... In sum, children and young people have become the innocent victims of a policy of political repression."

"Brutal treatment of children has become routine practice in the prisons of Iraq," the human rights group said.

Amnesty also devoted its March newsletter, "Focus," which became available today, to the problem. It details the cases of Iraqi children allegedly mistreated from about 1983 to 1988.

In one case, a former political prisoner released in 1985 after five months detention at al-Karkh Security Directorate told of the abuse of his family.

"My mother (aged 73), three sisters and three brothers, with five children aged between five and 13, were arrested and brought in front of me," then beaten on the soles of their feet, the prisoner, who was not identified, was quoted as saying.

Amnesty said he added: "Usually they keep children in a separate cell next to the mother's or father's cell and deprive them of milk in order to force the parents to confess. I saw a 5-month-old baby screaming in this state."

The human rights group said children have been lined up and "summarily shot in public" and others have been shot to death in demonstrations in a series of killings of children by government forces.

The fingernails of Abd Rahman Ahmad Haji, 17, were pulled out before his execution in Abu Ghraib Prison in 1985, it said.

Other incidents reported by the independent London-based group include:

— The repeated breach in spring 1987 of Iraqi law prohibiting the death penalty in cases involving people under 18 years of age. It said that among those teenagers killed were a number of supposed supporters of the outlawed Kurdistan Democratic Party.

— The killing of 15 secondary school and university students in spring 1986 in retaliation for an assassination attempt, reportedly by Kurds, on a governor in the Abril region.

Other children have simply disappeared, Amnesty said.

"The fate of hundreds of Kurdish children and youths seized over four years ago in retaliation for their relatives' political activities remains unknown," it said.

It said that in 1983, 315 children, some as young as eight, were among 8,000 male members of the Kurdish Barzani community who disappeared after the community's forced resettlement.

The government killed about 8,000 members of the Kurdish minority in 1988, according to the U.S. State Department.

Raiders Kill 32 In Sinhalese Village

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — Attackers raided a Sinhalese village of rice farmers in eastern Sri Lanka, shooting or hacking to death at least 32 people — nine of them children, officials said today.

Police and military officials blamed the attack on a separatist Tamil guerrilla group, but a spokesman for the group denied responsibility.

The target of Monday night's attack was the village of Welikande in the Polonnaruwa district about 100 miles northeast of Colombo, according to the police, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

A military official in Colombo said the bodies of 19 men, four women, and nine children were found. He said most of the victims were hacked to death but some of the men were shot. He said two village men were also missing.

The police blamed the attack on the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, the most powerful of the Tamil separatist groups that have been waging a bloody campaign of guerrilla warfare and massacres since 1983.

The ethnic struggle against the Sinhalese majority of this island off the southern tip of India has claimed more than 8,500 lives.

The Welikande attack was the third massacre this month blamed on the Tigers in northeastern Sri Lanka. At least 75 people died in the three attacks.

On Feb. 11 in Dutuwewa, 36 Sinhalese were shot and stabbed to death. On Feb. 22 at Sinhapura, seven Sinhalese were killed.

The Tigers' information office in London denied the first two attacks were the work of their people. It telexes to Colombo newspapers, the Tigers blamed the Dutuwewa and Sinhapura raids on "quislings of the Indian government" trying to discredit the Tigers.

A Tiger leader telephoned The Associated Press on Monday to deny his men were behind the Welikande killings. Speaking of all three attacks, he said: "These killings are being done by armed groups who want to discredit our just struggle on behalf of the Tamil people."

Speaking on condition of anonymity, he added: "They are being done to give the Indian occupational forces and the Sri Lankan army and police a right to kill Tamils." He did not elaborate.

An Indian peacekeeping force has been deployed in Sri Lanka since the summer of 1987 in an effort to disarm the Tigers.

A former Tamil rebel leader from a rival group claimed the Tigers were on "a headline-hunting exercise."

Vartharaja Perumal, now chief minister of the northeastern administrative council, said the Tigers had been "badly mauled" by Indian troops and were "showing off their fangs by killing innocent Sinhalese."

Perumal used to be the leader of the Eelam People's Revolutionary Liberation Front, which once fought alongside the Tigers but now says it has surrendered its arms in an effort to enter the political mainstream.

U.S. Troops Halt Korean Dissidents

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL, South Korea — U.S. troops today blocked South Korean dissidents who were trying to reach the Panmunjom border truce site to organize unsanctioned reunification talks with representatives of communist North Korea.

Culture and Information Minister Choe Byung-yul warned in a statement that the government "will be compelled to take countermeasures" should the dissidents try to meet with North Korean officials at the border.

He did not elaborate.

The 30 dissidents blocked today were trying to get to nearby Panmunjom to arrange a "pan-national congress" for Wednesday. The radical United National Democratic Movement of Korea, or Chonminnyon, had stated its intention to hold such a meeting Wednesday at Panmunjom with 10 delegates from each side.

The U.S. troops who help guard the area held back the dissidents, who tried to force their way through one gate at the site and rush a second gate, until South Korean police removed the protesters, a U.S. military spokesman said.

The American soldiers who help guard the Panmunjom border site are among 42,000 Washington has in South Korea under a mutual defense pact.

The Democratic Movement, embracing about 200 radical groups in the south, proposed the Wednesday meeting in January, and North Korea's Committee for the Peaceful Unification of the Fatherland accepted it Feb. 15.

Choe, the chief government spokesman, said the government "wants to make it clear that it will never tolerate the arbitrary attempts by Chonminnyon or any other organization to contact North Korea without consulting the authorities" on an important issue like unification of the two Koreas.

North and South Korea have been holding talks on trying to improve relations. The north has been demanding a halt to annual U.S.-South Korean military exercises before agreeing to further progress.

A BARGAIN.

CHOOSE UP TO $300 OFF A JOHN DEERE.

This spring John Deere lawn tractors and riding mowers come with a choice of generous price reductions, or a variety of valuable accessories at no extra cost.

Or choose between a $200 cash reduction on a John Deere 200 Series Lawn and Garden Tractor or a trimmer, dump cart or 15-gallon sprayer. These rugged 200 Series Tractors come with smooth 14-18 hp engines, 6-speed or hydrostatic transmissions and durable, full-length steel frames.

Our top of the line 300 and 400 Series Lawn and Garden Tractors come with extra heavy-duty 16-20 hp engines, hydrostatic transmissions and durable welded steel frames. And you can now discount one $300 or get a lawn edger, blower or trimmer.

Even our economical new STX Tractors with high-torque 9 or 12½ hp engines and convenient, shift-on-the-go transmissions (already priced $600 lower than any of our other tractors), are down another $100. Unless
