Bush Takes Reins In Tower Drive

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — At an after-hours strategy session in the White House family quarters, President Bush Tuesday night told Senate Republican leaders he would publicly lead the increasingly bitter battle on behalf of John G. Tower, probably delaying any vote on his nomination as defense secretary until next week.

But the promises of a new full-court press — which will include a White House campaign to take Tower's case to the public — came as Democratic ranks seemed to be hardening against the former Texas senator, with Bush failing to win a single senator's pledge after a day of intensive personal lobbying.

"We're going to go to the mat," Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas vowed after meeting with Bush Tuesday night, saying that the GOP would insist on days of debate and even consider reopening public hearings in an attempt to clear Tower's name of allegations of drunkenness and womanizing. Virginia Sen. John Warner, ranking Republican on the House Armed Services Committee, declared: "It's time the American people got involved in this case."

But the redoubled defense by the White House and Senate Republicans who complained of a smear campaign against Tower was met by a Democratic counterattack.

"Ridiculous allegations," Senate Minority Whip Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., told reporters, describing the charges in an FBI report about Tower.

But Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., told reporters that the report contained the words "crooked," "bombed," "excessive drinking," "sloshing," "stoned," "comatose."

All day long, Democratic senators and at least one wavering GOP lawmaker — about a dozen in all — trooped one by one to the White House to listen to Bush ask them to confirm his nominee to be secretary of defense. He argued that it should be a president's prerogative to choose his Cabinet, noting that the Senate has rejected a president's Cabinet choice only eight times in American history.

With the Senate Democrats outnumbering Republicans 55-45, the Republican president was looking for at least five Democratic lawmakers to side with Tower.

As Tower sat at the table with downcast eyes, Bush said: "I haven't heard one single voice challenge this man's knowledge, his ability." The president said he was appealing to "America's sense of fair play."

Senate Republicans Tuesday appeared one after the other in the reporters' gallery Tuesday to insist that a reasonable view of the FBI report shows that it is filled with contradictions and that Tower is being unjustly vilified.

Sen. Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania said that Senate Armed Services Committee chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., a lawmaker with a reputation for fairness, was opposing Tower because he wouldn't be able to control him if he became secretary of defense.

Dole said Tuesday night that "some of my colleagues agree" with that charge, though Warner said that it is "not a correct one."

Bush may have to change the minds of some Republicans as well as Democrats. Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., told reporters that he is still troubled by Tower's connections with and attitude toward some defense contractors. "I'm leaning strongly against," said Pressler, who had talked to Vice President Dan Quayle earlier. "I usually vote with my party, but this is a matter of conscience."

Sen. Joseph Lieberman, a freshman Democrat from Connecticut, also said after meeting with Bush that he was undecided, but that, if possible, the president "should be given the benefit of the doubt" on nominations.

Earlier in the day, Republicans had gathered for a luncheon meeting that turned into a cheerleading event. Dole began by reading a telegram he had received from Tower's three daughters, thanking him for "your unwavering support."

Officials Inspecting Barn Where Body Parts Found

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

State health officials were scheduled to inspect a tobacco barn in northern Pitt County today where an area funeral home owner is reportedly storing human body parts and medical waste until it can be incinerated.

"We're going to send our field agents out there to take a look at the materials," said Stephen Reid, spokesman for the Solid Waste Management Section of the state Division of Health Services.

"A tobacco barn is hardly a permitted solid waste facility... That could constitute a violation."

Pitt County Sheriff's investigators inspected the barn Sunday and Monday after area residents discovered the containers of human ashes, needles, syringes and biological remains.

Chief Deputy Brooks Oakley said he and Detective Billy Vandiford spoke with funeral home owner John Gray by telephone Monday, and Gray said his funeral home owned the land on rural paved road 1547 between Bethel and Stokes.

Gray owns Ayers-Gray Funeral Home in Bethel and Gray Funeral Home and Crematorium in Raleigh. He is set to appear at a hearing before a state licensing board in two weeks on an unrelated matter in which he reportedly left six cadavers in a van overnight instead of moving them inside.

Oakley and Pitt District Attorney Tom Haigwood have said Gray has violated no criminal law by storing the waste in the tobacco barn.

Though investigators said it appeared that some stored material is up to three years old, Gray said the containers had been stored in the barn for about six months, Oakley said. Gray claimed the practice is legal, and the material will remain there until he constructs a facility to incinerate the waste, Oakley said.

Gray said he keeps the barn locked and secured and checks the facility often, Oakley said.

Empty Fuel Tanks Float To Surface

By Jerry Raynor
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Greenville's fire chief says "action necessary to avoid the possibility of an accident" was being taken today at a local convenience store where gasoline tanks floated up to the surface from their underground anchorage.

Chief Jenness Allen said gas tanks at the Fast Fare unit at Evans Street and Arlington Boulevard apparently rose to the surface Tuesday as a result of heavy rainfall and melting snow. Allen said the tanks had been drained by Fast Fare for scheduled inspection and maintenance.

"Our people were at the site Tuesday afternoon to check the situation," Allen said. "The odor of gasoline fumes was still heavy."

Public Is Mixed On Mayor's Vote

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Greenville City Council received mixed citizen input Tuesday regarding Mayor Ed Carter's campaign to reinstate full voting privileges for the person occupying the city's highest elected office.

And, after listening to both pros and cons of the issue expressed by about 10 people during the two-hour public meeting at City Hall, Carter says he's all the more convinced that the matter should be decided by the voters of Greenville in a referendum.

Yet, despite Carter's pleas, the six-member City Council will ultimately have the final say in the matter and City Manager Greg Knowles said he is placing the subject on the agenda of the council's March 9 meeting for further consideration.

As it currently stands, the mayor can only vote on matters to break a tie vote among the council members, as in the case of a 3-3 deadlock.

Before 1981, the mayor had the power to cast a ballot like the other council members. But in that year, the council elected to take away the mayor's full voting privilege.

However, the city recently learned that the 1981 action did not first get proper clearance by the U.S. Justice Department as is required by law.

Subsequently, Mayor Carter has viewed the council's 1981 decision to strip the mayor of voting powers as non-binding, and has, on occasion this year, cast a vote on items pending before the council.

The City Council on Jan. 9 moved

Agents Nab 27 Aliens In N.C.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Federal immigration agents in Charlotte today apprehended 27 more suspected illegal aliens on a flight bound for New York, bringing to 175 the number seized in a three-day government crackdown on a suspect alien smuggling ring.

Immigration and Naturalization Service officials in Atlanta, whose jurisdiction includes Charlotte, said the 27 were on Piedmont Flight 1522, bound from Phoenix, Ariz., to New York. They had flown to Phoenix on an American West Airlines flight from Los Angeles late Tuesday, the INS said.

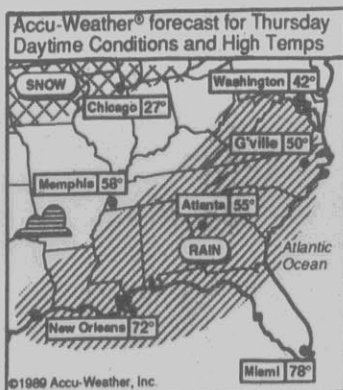

The 27, who are from Mexico, Brazil and El Salvador, were taken off the plane when it made a scheduled stop in Charlotte at 7 a.m. EST.

"An irate citizen called our office this morning and claimed to be a commuter aboard the Piedmont flight," said David Carmichael, supervisory INS agent in Charlotte. "The source suggested we check Flight 1522."

On Monday, INS agents apprehended 79 suspected illegal aliens aboard Eastern Airlines Flight 80, which stops in Atlanta en route from Los Angeles to New York. Sixty-nine more aliens were apprehended in

Blue Ribbon Panel Says Health Fads Useless

By Paul Recer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Vitamin, calcium and fiber supplements that Americans consume by the millions of doses are useless and potentially harmful, says a report today by the National Research Council.

The massive NRC study called "Diet and Health: Implications for Reducing Chronic Disease Risk" recommends that higher-than-needed doses of vitamins be avoided and says that neither fiber nor calcium supplements have any value to health.

Instead, the 1,300-page report said, people should eat a variety of foods that provide nutrients naturally. Particular attention should be paid to reducing dietary fat, alcohol consumption and salt intake, it said.

The findings on dietary supplements come at a time when Americans are spending millions of dollars on vitamin pills, calcium powders and capsules, and on high fiber compounds.

On vitamins, the NRC study said a good health recommendation is to "avoid taking dietary supplements in excess of the RDA (recommended daily allowance) in any one day."

A daily dose of multiple vitamins with 100 percent of the RDA "is not known to be harmful or beneficial," the report said. "However, vitamin-mineral supplements that exceed the RDA and other supplements (such as protein powders, single amino acids, fiber and lecithin) not only have no known health benefits... but their use may be detrimental to health."

Though the study recommended foods high in calcium, it noted that "the potential benefits of calcium intakes above the RDAs to prevent osteoporosis or hypertension are not well documented and do not justify the use of calcium supplements."

Dietary fiber, the study said, could be acquired by eating fruits and vegetables. "The committee does not recommend the use of fiber supplements," the study said.

"Fruits and vegetables... contain high levels of fiber, but there is no conclusive evidence that the dietary fiber itself" is a protection against cancers of the stomach, intestine or lungs, the study said.

Healthful diets should include five or more servings of fruit and vegetables daily, and six or more servings of breads, cereals and legumes.

On fermented beverages, the report was blunt: "The committee does not recommend alcohol consumption."

The study said pregnant women should avoid alcohol, and those who do drink should limit their intake to one ounce of alcohol a day, equivalent to two cans of beer, two glasses of wine, or two average cocktails.

Salt should be limited to 6 grams a day for the general population, and there could be health benefits from reducing its use even further, the report said.

The American diet rich in animal fats, however, came under the heaviest attack by the committee.

"Highest priority is given to reducing fat intake because the scientific evidence concerning dietary fats and other lipids and human health is strongest and the likely impact on public health the greatest," the study said.

It recommended that fat be reduced to 30 percent of the calories consumed daily, and that cholesterol consumption be less than 30 milligrams daily. There is evidence, the study said, that reducing fat intake below these levels "may confer even greater health benefits."

High fat diets, the study said, are linked to heart disease, cancer and obesity. This echoed findings reported earlier in studies by several federal agencies.

The National Research Council is the principal operating agency of the National Academy of Sciences, a private organization mandated by congressional charter to advise the federal government on science and technical matters.

Glidewell Says He 'Kidded' But Didn't Harass Females

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The former branch manager at a First Citizens Bank in Greenville denied Tuesday that he had sexually harassed a former bank teller or other female employees.

William C. Glidewell Jr., 56, testified in Wake County Superior Court that he did not make improper sexual advances toward Mary Denise Haughn, 33, the former teller who filed the lawsuit.

"I have never harassed Denise Haughn or anybody else sexually or otherwise" at First Citizens, Glidewell said.

Under questioning from his attorney, Danny McNally, Glidewell denied testimony of female employees that he had fondled women's buttocks or breasts during work, had made sexually suggestive remarks or had tried to force himself on Mrs. Haughn in the bank's vault.

Haughn is seeking an unspecified amount of compensatory and punitive damages from Glidewell and First Citizens for what she says were repeated acts of sexual harassment by Glidewell beginning in 1984 and continuing until the incident in the vault in early 1987.

Glidewell said that he had been in the banking business since 1954 and that he had enjoyed "teasing" the female tellers at the First Citizens branch where Mrs. Haughn worked.

"We did kid around quite a bit," he said as he told jurors various anecdotes involving female employees.

He denied the testimony of several female employees that his kidding had been sexually suggestive or that he had improperly touched them.

Before Glidewell testified, Judge Donald W. Stephens of Raleigh ruled during a morning hearing that he would allow the jury to decide whether the bank also should be held responsible for Glidewell's conduct.

An attorney representing First Citizens argued that the bank had acted quickly and properly when it learned of Mrs. Haughn's allegations and should therefore be dismissed from the lawsuit.

William J. Austin Jr., the bank's attorney, said the bank had investigated the vault incident shortly afterward and had transferred Glidewell quickly to an office in Kinston. Mrs. Haughn was allowed to choose another branch office to work in, he said.

Students Added

East Carolina University has announced that several students have been added to its fall 1988 honors list.

Greenville students are Sally A. Aldridge, Deborah Paige Taylor and Debbie Godwin Vargas.

Reading Club

Third Street School has formed a reading club called "The Ready Readers," which will meet weekly in the media center with coordinator Charlotte Copeland.

First-grade students have been selected to begin reading independently. Club members will read special library books, write word lists with a word-processing program and participate in other activities. Books for the club have been purchased with funds received from a migrant from the Pitt County Educational Foundation.

Month Observed

Ayden Middle School celebrated

"Black History Month" with several activities. Students spoke on historical events or people, trivia questions were presented and exhibits and bulletin boards were displayed.

Dr. Arlee Griffin, pastor of Cornerstone Baptist Church, was the speaker during an assembly. Other guests were Gaston Monk, president of the Pitt County branch of the NAACP, Dr. A.A. Best, Dr. Wiley Hines and J.J. Brown, mayor pro-tem of Ayden.

Educators Honored

Edith D. Warren, principal, and Debbi Metcalf, a learning disabilities teacher, at Sam D. Bundy School recently were chosen as outstanding principal and teacher by the east chapter of Exceptional Children.

Pitt County exceptional teachers and staff members nominated candidates and the winners were chosen based on interest and support for exceptional children's programs in the county.

IT IS TIME FOR PITT COUNTY TO GO AND THEN PAY RATHER THAN PAY AS YOU GO

The Pay As You Go approach is just leaving Pitt County further behind.

Whether we like it or not, Pitt County has become an urban county. No longer can we act like a rural county.

Pitt County became an urban county in large measure without the County Commissioners spending much money for capital projects. These monies have come from outside Pitt County:

- ECU has grown to be the third largest campus of UNC.
- The development of US 264 has been four laned with state funds
- Pitt County Memorial Hospital has used revenue bonds for its initial construction and the remainder of the hospital growth has been self generated
- The planned $50 million expansion of PCMH will not come from Pitt County funds
- The ECU School of Medicine has been funded entirely from state and private funds
- The development both in housing and commercial properties has been from private investors

It would be remiss not to include the funding of many school projects that have come from county funds.

Our legislative and county leaders continue to ask the state for further funding for highway and growth at ECU. A regional convention/sports complex is also being requested.

NOW is the time for Pitt County to involve itself in supplying those needs which only Pitt County can pay for.

- The Pitt County Board of Education has outlined their needs which will cost $25 million
- Pitt Community College needs $22 million
- The Sheriff's Department needs a modern jail facility (better we provide our own than have the federal courts tell us what to build and Pitt County has to pay for it at $12 million)
- Land and equipment for a sanitary landfill at $2 million

AND THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS SAY WE CAN PAY AS WE GO!!!!

That approach has only left us further behind.

- What we build today will be built at today's prices and not after further inflation has pushed the cost even higher
- Our tax base will expand with more people living and shopping in Pitt County
- Our county has become a desirable place to live and work and retire
- Other counties borrow money to expand needed facilities

THE PITT COUNTY BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS HAS TO HAVE THE COURAGE TO FACE THE VERY REAL NEED FOR THESE FACILITIES.

THE PEOPLE OF PITT COUNTY SHOULD BE ALLOWED THE OPPORTUNITY TO VOTE ON THESE VERY CRITICAL NEEDS.

I am confident that if given the opportunity to understand the needs of Pitt County, the people of Pitt County will vote YES for necessary funds.

Contact the County Commissioners and let them know how you feel about these issues.

Jury Deadlocks On People's Law School Project

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The mock trial at the first installment of the People's Law School ended with a hung jury, but several participants said the exercise was educational for both the public and attorneys.

"I think everybody had a good time," said Greenville attorney Charles Vincent, who represented Greenville sportscaster Brian Bailey in the mock driving while impaired trial Tuesday night in the Pitt County Courthouse.

"I think it helps the general public understand more about our system of justice, and they can actually ask questions about why we do certain things that we do, and give us input," he said.

The People's Law School was created by the North Carolina Academy of Trial Lawyers, and Greenville attorneys Charles A.

Ellis and John Smith III are organizing the four local seminars.

For the mock trial, Bailey and Vincent volunteered their time, as did Pitt District Attorney Tom Haigwood, Pitt Resident Superior Court Judge David E. Reid Jr., state Trooper Coy Taylor, Greenville Police Officer K.L. Evans and Pitt Clerk of Court Sandra Gaskins.

"I think it gives (people) a better understanding, for people who don't normally come to court, of how court operates," Reid said. "I hope the choice of a DWI trial will not obscure the purpose of the People's Law School, which is to (demonstrate) to people how a trial is conducted. It just happens to be a DWI case."

After the state and defense presented evidence before a volunteer jury of seven women and five men and about 50 others in attendance, the jury members deliberated about 15 minutes before announcing they were deadlocked.

Nine voted for guilty and three voted for innocent, said jury foreman Darren Bush, a criminal justice major at East Carolina University who is considering law school.

"You listen much closer when you're a juror than when you're in the audience," Bush said. "When you come in you might have a feeling of guilt or innocence one way or the other toward the defendant. When I came in, I felt that if he blew over .10 on the Breathalyzer, he'd definitely be guilty."

"But after listening to the evidence for both sides, it leaves a question in your mind as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant," Bush said.

"I think (the People's Law School) is great, and the certificate idea that they're going to give if people come to three of the four (programs) is really good. I think it will help the public a great deal, especially people who are not in criminal justice or some type of prelaw."

The sessions are scheduled to be held on four successive Tuesday nights. Other seminars will deal with personal injury and civil law; criminal law, including discussions about death penalty cases, and domestic and family law. All programs are scheduled from 7-9 p.m. in the Pitt County Courthouse, and people who attend at least three sessions will be awarded a "diploma" for participating in the seminars.

Kathy Prescott of Greenville, former president of the Pitt chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving, was also on the jury. Because of her involvement with MADD, she said she doubts she would ever be chosen to sit on an actual jury, but she believes she could decide a DWI case objectively.

"Yes, if they didn't blow a .10, and I didn't think they were impaired, I think I could be impartial. But the law says if they blow a .10, they're guilty. And he did, so I thought he was guilty. But I don't think they'd ever put me on a jury."

She said most people probably do not realize how juries really operate.

"What jumps out at me is that when I was on jury duty years ago and when I was in here tonight, is that people on the jury, sometimes, I don't think they listen to what the judge tells them. Even though they may say they don't have a preconceived notion (about the outcome of the case), it was apparent to me that some do."

In addition to informing the public, Ellis and Smith said the sessions are designed to give attorneys a chance to perform public service.

"I think it gives attorneys some feedback from citizens in the community who are interested in the judicial process but are not necessarily a part of it in their everyday lives," Vincent said.

"It helps the lawyers see what the public thinks is important. It helps me with my job. Sometimes you get out of touch."

If people could sit in court for a week, Vincent said the biggest surprise for people would probably be how long trials take. Even the mock ran over nearly an hour.

"Unfortunately, people are just not aware how technical our laws are — and must be — to preserve freedom, and this process is naturally slow," he said. "Coupled with a tremendous caseload and a small number of defense attorneys, it's just a very slow process."

"We in Pitt County, just do not have a large criminal bar. The same thing with officers. If officers have to be in one court, they can't be in another," Vincent said.

Former Ayden Man Testifies He Torched Wilson Warehouse

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A former Ayden man who admitted starting a fire that destroyed a five-acre tobacco warehouse in Wilson told jurors that the man who hired him to set the blaze had gotten instructions from the facility's manager.

Suicide Ruling

DURHAM (AP) — A retired Durham policeman committed suicide Tuesday after pursuing his wife to a neighbor's home and shooting her to death, authorities say.

James W. Price, 64, was found dead on a couch in the den of his home about 2 p.m., according to Durham Police Det. R.D. Simmons. Earlier, officers found the body of his wife, Maxine Dickerson Price, 33, who had been shot in the head with a shotgun. She had already suffered one gunshot wound when she went to a neighbor's home across the street for help, authorities said.

Price was a sergeant when he retired Nov. 1, 1983, after 20 years as a Durham police officer.

Edmund Wayne Hart's testimony came Tuesday in the trial of Liberty Warehouse manager J.T. "Tommy" Worthington Jr. and his father, warehouse owner J.T. Worthington, both of Greenville. The Worthingtons have pleaded innocent to arson, conspiracy and other charges.

Hart, who said he moved to Massachusetts after the fire, told a U.S. District Court jury that he was paid $2,500 by Ronnie Lee Stocks of Pitt County to set the fire in October 1986. He described starting the blaze in the early morning of Oct. 3 with incendiary devices made of birthday candles and paper cups stuffed with paper towels soaked in charcoal lighter fluid.

On the day before the fire, Hart said, he and Stocks went to the warehouse "to make sure things would be set up properly."

Stocks told him that Tommy Worthington would leave a rear door unlocked so he could escape once he set the fire, Hart said. That night, the rear door was left unlocked as planned, he said.

Hart pleaded guilty last year to burning the warehouse and agreed to testify for the prosecution. He faces up to 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

The government contends that Stocks was hired by Harvey Bowen of Ayden, a major customer of the warehouse and close friend of Tommy Worthington's. The prosecution says the Worthingtons worked through Bowen, who died last year, to arrange the fire. The father and son wanted to collect insurance to make up for large cash advances that had been obtained by Tommy Worthington, the prosecution says.

On the night of the fire, Hart said he searched the warehouse thoroughly.

"I was scared there'd be an old drunk or something up in there," he said. "I draw the limit on that. I wouldn't murder someone."

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

An Inferno

Put Out The Fire, Mr. President

There was a disaster movie a decade ago about a burning building that was too tall for firefighters to extinguish. It just had to burn itself out.

President George Bush's choice for secretary of defense has created a similar "Towering Inferno." Unless John Tower's name is removed from nomination for that office, the issue, like the fictional building, will continue to blaze.

Bush should have withdrawn Tower's name and replaced it with a more suitable selection. Objections to Tower have been sound and vigorous. Bush should not have allowed the issue to proceed to the full Senate.

First, Tower's nomination should not have been made. His past is not consistent with the vow of propriety Bush pledged for his administration. His confirmation before the U.S. Senate has indisputably proved him inappropriate to serve as secretary of state. He has a record of bad judgment, and that history goes beyond a liquor bottle and pretty legs. It is a record made no more acceptable by Tower's pathetic pledge to never take another drink of alcohol.

No, Tower's political history — a history that has been overshadowed by allegations of alcoholism and woman-chasing — is what's so troubling. Consider this fact. He accepted large sums of money from the defense industry in the 1980s. Tower held a consulting job for major suppliers to the Department of Defense. This position netted him over three-quarters of a million dollars from 1986 to 1988.

That is too cozy a relationship for a secretary of defense to have with defense contractors. It's no wonder the Senate Armed Services Committee recommended the Senate reject Tower. Any other action would be remiss. Tower's connection with the defense manufacturing establishment is a clear conflict of interest for an individual that holds the position of secretary of defense.

But Bush could, and should, put out the fire Tower's nomination has sparked. He should withdraw Tower and make another, more acceptable choice. And he should resist the temptation to blame partisanship for the controversy surrounding Tower. The senators objecting to his confirmation are acting properly. They are denying an important office to a man whose record of poor judgment raises serious questions about his ability. They are correctly insisting that propriety be given priority. That's fair.

The Senate should not have to kill a nomination as inappropriate as Tower's. Bush should have allowed good judgment guide him away from the inferno that Tower's confirmation has created.

No More

Another Cleanup Nearly Complete

City public works employees, utilities workers and State highway workers were at it again over the weekend.

Following a weekend when ice caused havoc with trees and power lines, a springlike windstorm of tornado proportions swept the area. That was topped by a snow storm which Greenville Utilities measured at 11 inches. It probably was more in some sections of the city.

Crews had yet to complete the cleanup following the ice and wind storms before the snow hit. It was back to work with road scrapers and trucks equipped with plows to get the massive job of cleaning snow from highways, bridges and streets under way.

Add to that thousands of home owners and employees of private businesses who were out shoveling snow and you have some idea of the massive amounts of human energy which were required to get the area back to normal.

For once the weather cooperated and much of the snow which fell all day Friday disappeared on Saturday. Even though the temperatures didn't climb too high, the bright sun worked to clear most of the snow from recently plowed roads.

By Sunday and Monday only patches of snow reminded the area of the big snow fall of 1989.

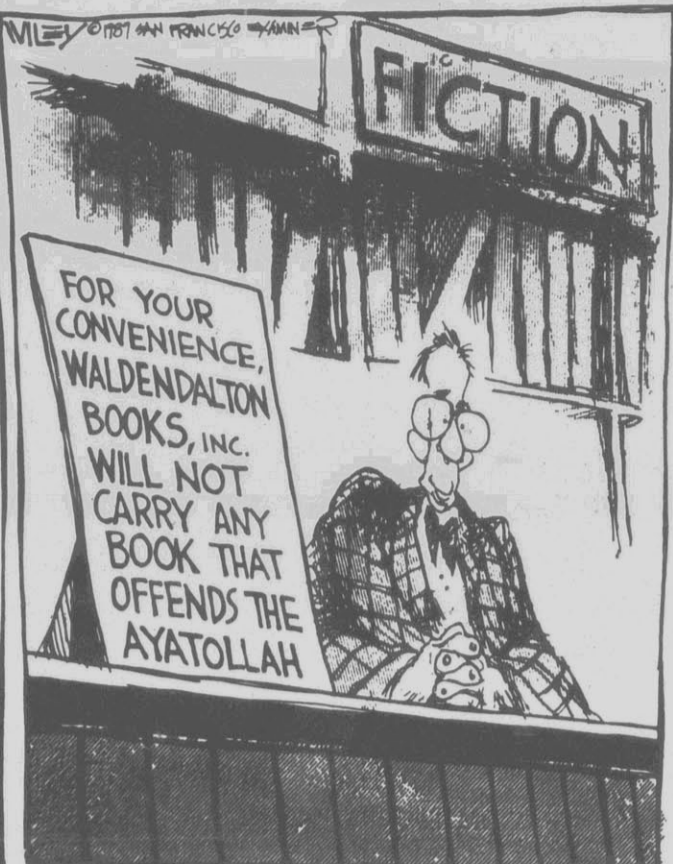

But, as the snow disappeared, the piles of tree limbs placed at curb side for pickup began to reappear. Public employees would once again turn their attention to clearing up the debris of the almost forgotten previous storms.

Now the Tar River threatens to spill from its banks as snowfall and the rainfall of two days accumulates.

All-in-all and considering nature's one-two-three punch, it was a good overall effort. Neither snow nor wind nor ice nor rain was enough to bring the community to a halt.

Just one-thing. Please, Mother Nature, no more.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I am writing in response to an editorial which appeared recently in The Daily Reflector titled "A Quick Fix."

You say "a lottery is unfair because it takes a disproportionate share of the poorer person's income." But so does their purchase of shoes, candy, cigarettes and aspirin. Really, what purchase doesn't take a disproportionate share?

Also, you say that "a lottery is essentially a tax on the poor." My Webster defines tax as "a charge, usually money, imposed by authority (government, etc.) on persons or property for public purposes." I question what authority would be imposing a charge upon the poorer people for lottery purposes. I had always assumed that buying a lottery ticket was through a person's own volition.

I'm not saying that a lottery is exactly what North Carolina needs, but several states have found this to be a "way to raise a sizable chunk of revenue" (per your editorial).

Isn't North Carolina currently looking for an additional source of revenue with which to help correct our deplorable sagging teachers' salaries? Our teachers are, after all, agents of the state of North Carolina.

Earl B. Seay
Greenville

To the editor:

Frequent public complaint regarding the poor state of roads in eastern North Carolina is well-founded. However, little is said about the misappropriation of public funds for ill-conceived highway schemes. An example of road policy gone awry is taking place in Beaufort County today.

While we are pleased to see money targeted to improve roads in our county, the expenditure of nearly 3 million taxpayer dollars to replace a little-used bridge is unjustifiable.

The Department of Transportation, in concert with a developer from New York, has decided to replace a little-used low-clearance bridge with a very expensive high rise. The purpose is to accommodate development further up Blount's Creek, a tributary of the Pamlico River.

The alternatives on the project range from $52,000 for repairs to $2,800,000 for the high rise. The DOT choice of the most expensive alternative may have been prompted by the pledge of a New York City developer to pay $100,000 toward the projected cost of the bridge. This may sound like a generous offer, but one should consider the income the developer will make from such an investment.

Despite comments from government agencies and conservation groups that increased development resulting from this project may have negative impacts on water quality, the project continues.

People in North Carolina are well aware of our rapidly declining natural resources. Are they willing to subsidize this decline with their tax dollars? Even with the developer's contribution, taxpayers will spend an extra $2½ million to create sailboat access to a private marina.

If our administrators were less extravagant with our tax dollars, perhaps we would not need to increase our taxes so often and so much.

Seldom have so few benefited from the pocketbooks of so many.

Empty Cartridges Good Ammunition

WASHINGTON — Sen. Tim Wirth (D-Colo.) voted against John Tower in the Armed Services Committee because, although there is no "smoking gun," the ground is covered with "empty cartridges." And Wirth worries that rumors (cartridges?) of Tower's "womanizing" set an "example" that might cause women in the military to be "discriminated against."

Wirth will not talk about specifics because that would be "unfair." We know everyone is trying to be fair.

Regarding the allegations, Sen. Jeff Bingaman (D-N.M.) stresses quantity over quality. He voted against Tower because the "allegations" (cartridges?) come "from a great many unconnected sources."

Sen. Alan Dixon (D-Ill.), another quantity man, is impressed that "the firestorm of allegations" has not stopped. Many allegations are, he says, merely "rumors and innuendo," but (read this carefully) "other allegations offer cause for considerable alarm." Does Dixon think they are true? All he says is: "There may not be a smoking gun, but there is an abundance of smoke." Smoking cartridges, perhaps?

Sen. John Glenn (D-Ohio) says the "effectiveness" of an officeholder depends on "perceptions" and in Tower's case, "They may not be fair — I agree with that — may not be fact. But the perceptions are there."

George Will

Thus a confirmation process that began purporting to pursue the truth ends by declaring the truth irrelevant.

However, Sen. John Breaux (D-La.) explains that we are witnessing senatorial idealism: "We ought to be looking for the very best we can find in the nation. The President has the right to go out and find that person, but the Senate has an obligation to determine whether in fact this is the best we can find out there in the whole country."

Adding them up, the reasons for rejecting Tower include: alleged drunkenness that no senator serving with Tower claims to have ever seen, but which most Democrats now say they believe on the basis of reports (cartridges?) gathered by the FBI. Undefined and undocumented "womanizing." The "appearance" of "conflicts of interest" (more about which in a moment).

To the editor:

A comic strip titled Frank and Ernest printed in The Daily Reflector Feb. 2 was very upsetting to those patients who have received kidney transplants. The implication that a person may take on the sins of the kidney donor when they receive a kidney transplant is not true, and is a very serious subject that should not be joked about.

There is a critical shortage of available donor organs at present, which may be due to the many myths and misconceptions surrounding organ donation and transplantation. Therefore, I feel the comic strip was in bad taste, inappropriate and harmful to the many patients who have received or are waiting to receive their life-saving organ transplants.

To the editor:

It has been very interesting following the plight of our teachers trying to earn a respectable living. It is no wonder we lose dedicated and talented teachers to other professions because of our legislators' inability to find funds for a long overdue pay increase.

Recently a large group of our teachers met with our local legislators to see what could be done on their behalf.

Tommy Taft suggested our teachers "put their elbows and shoulders to the grindstone and let their demands be known..." Every teacher I know puts their elbows and shoulders to the grindstone every day they teach and, if their demands aren't known, our legislators are wearing earplugs. He also suggested that the teachers work with the education committee of the Chamber of Commerce. I guess our legislators listen more to the Chamber of Commerce than they listen to our teachers.

Gene Rogers of Martin County told our teachers to "attach yourself to the business industry." I really don't see why our teachers need to have CEO's speak for them.

Our local politicians say they support more teacher pay, but what have they done to bring a larger raise to reality?

Our business community and Chamber of Commerce have always supported teachers and better education. If they could give our teachers a larger raise, they probably would. But that isn't the issue; they can't give raises.

Our teachers need more service from our governor and legislators, not more lip service. We need to bring our teachers' pay scale more in line with industry, or industry will be without education.

If you can read this, thank a teacher. If you can't or won't, thank our politicians. They get raises; teachers don't.

thing, the real reason is none of the four.

Sen. Sam Nunn (D-Ga.) was most worried about Tower's use of alcohol. Then Tower pledged not to touch it. Then Nunn changed his emphasis. Nunn was clear about only what he was not saying. "I'm not saying," he said, that Tower as a private consultant improperly gave information to defense contractors. But "it's the appearance that is so bad."

Now, is it really asking too much to ask Nunn, who has rendered an emphatic judgment on Tower, to be comparably clear about his reasons for the judgment?

Does Nunn think Tower today has an alcohol problem? Has Nunn decided that Tower behaved unethically as a consultant? If Nunn cannot decide, he should defer to the presidential decision on Tower.

"I'm in a hopeless situation," Nunn says, because he cannot reveal his reasons for trashing Tower. FBI reports are confidential. They also are often confusing, contradictory and inconclusive. Because the White House has characterized the reports differently than Nunn has, Nunn has threatened to re-open the hearings and subpoena people for testimony under oath. That, he says, would be "unfortunate."

Oh? For whom? Not Tower, who can hardly be more injured. It might be unfortunate for the patrons of The Monocle Restaurant because all the employees would be testifying. (One claims to have seen Tower drunk; a dozen say they never did.) And it would be interesting to hear from the man who says he saw Tower drunk in Washington on dates when Tower was in Pakistan, Texas and Seattle.

If it is fair to judge Tower for "appearances," it is as fair to note that Nunn "appears" to be taking this personally. As Nunn likes to say, I'm not saying that he is. But there is a "perception" that this is simply a power struggle. The perception may be unfair, but we know how seriously Nunn and his allies take perceptions.

Some Democrats are behaving the way some Republicans did between 1949 and 1952, when they had been too long without the sobering responsibility of executive power. As Democrats bandy "allegations," try something. Try substituting the phrase "allegations of communist sympathies" for "allegations of alcohol abuse" (or "womanizing" or "conflicts of interest"). Then see what you think of the flavor of this senatorial high-mindedness. As some earlier senators (McCarthy and Jenner and others) understood, empty cartridges are the perfect ammunition for character assassinations.

House Democrats Protest As Caucus Endorses Slate For UNC Governors

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The General Assembly prepared to fill eight coveted seats on the University of North Carolina Board of Governors today after the House Democratic Caucus voted to endorse a common slate of candidates, upsetting some members.

"We've got backroom politics all over again," a Democratic representative who spoke on condition of anonymity said after the closed-door caucus Tuesday.

But Majority Leader Dennis Wicker defended the decision to choose a Democratic ticket, saying the election of UNC board members was a matter of party politics.

"The Board of Governors implements policy and sets policy for our university system in the state," Wicker, D-Lee, said. "They are the ones that govern higher education."

"Certainly, the Democratic Party has a duty ... to see that people placed on these boards will reflect the Democratic philosophy and principles in higher education."

A majority of the 74 House Democrats agreed at the caucus to vote for incumbent Phillip Haire of Sylva, Ellen Newbold of Rose Hill and Harold Webb of Raleigh for at-large seats.

William Woltz, a Mount Airy manufacturer and board member since 1981, did not get the Democrats' endorsement. Other candidates for the three at-large seats are John Yorke of Lincolnton and Richard Lewis Jr. of Whiteville. All are Democrats except Yorke, a Republican.

The Democratic Caucus also agreed to support Asa Spaulding, a Durham broadcasting executive, for re-election to a seat reserved for a Republican. His opponent is Bill Current, a Gastonia dentist.

The House and Senate were scheduled to elect eight board members — four per chamber — today. The board has 32 members who serve staggered terms.

The Senate candidates are Jim Van Hecke of Greensboro, Wallace Hyde of Raleigh, Dorothy Lockey of Raleigh and Walter Davis of Texas for two at-large seats; Maxine O'Kelley of Alamance County and Theodore Carter Sr. of Raleigh for a seat reserved for a racial minority; and Bonnie Cone of Charlotte and Lois Britt of Duplin County for a slot reserved for a woman.

The nominations, which had been approved by House and Senate committees, were made official during a brief joint session Tuesday.

Only House Democrats chose to adopt a party slate. House Republicans decided to let each member make his or her own choices, according to Minority Leader Johnathan Rhyne, R-Lincoln. Senate Democrats and Republicans took the same position.

But 10 to 12 of the Democrats who attended the caucus rebelled, saying they had committed themselves to other candidates and believed there should be no party slate, participants said in interviews.

"That's what's wrong with the Democratic Party," said Rep. Dan DeVane, D-Hoke. The caucus "puts people in a position of having to vote against their word. I don't think it's the Democratic way of doing things."

Senate Postpones Veto Consideration

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The state Senate has delayed considering a bill to make North Carolina the 50th state to give its governor veto power, but supporters say approval is still expected.

"This is not the kind of issue that is going to be susceptible to lobbying," said Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, after the Senate voted 43-5 Tuesday to put the matter off until today. "People have pretty much made up their minds."

The delay came after several lawyers in the Senate questioned whether the proposed constitutional amendment specified what would happen to a bill if the governor vetoes it and declines to call the General Assembly back for an override session.

Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, rejected attempts to provide a quick fix with a floor amendment. He said the state constitution is "almost sacred ground where lawyers and we legislators ought to tread very lightly."

Winner, the sponsor of the bill, said he couldn't imagine a governor refusing to call a special session. He said it was clear to him that in such a case the bill would become law.

Sen. Jim Ezzell, D-Nash, who chairs the Constitution Committee that worked on the bill, urged quick action.

"I think it's perfectly clear and I would like to see us go ahead and act on it as it is written here today," he said.

Convention Draws 'No' Vote

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Members of a Senate committee weighed reducing the federal deficit against the possibility of banning abortion before voting for a bill to rescind North Carolina's support for a national constitutional convention.

North Carolina is among 35 states that have called for the convention — two short of the number needed. But Sen. Bill Staton told the Judiciary II Committee some of his constituents have changed their minds since the 1979 vote.

While the convention would primarily be intended to approve an amendment requiring a balanced federal budget, Staton, D-Lee, said the public has other worries.

"I think it's their fear more of abortion than anything else," he said.

Sen. Bob Martin, D-Pitt, agreed that the convention "would probably be aimed at those things that we hold somewhat dear to us at this time." Besides, he said, Congress is already working to reduce budget deficits.

"My personal opinion is a constitutional convention might be like opening Pandora's box," said Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe.

"I don't think we're in that kind of emergency to open Pandora's box, when who knows what would come flying out."

While the vote to send the bill to the Senate floor was unanimous, Sen. Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg, questioned whether the concerns might be overblown. He noted that anything proposed by a constitutional convention would have to be ratified by the states and would carry no more weight than something proposed by Congress.

"Do you think they could not only propose these horrible amendments but they could persuade the other states to enact them?" he asked.

Smokeless Cigarette Goes Out

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Premier was a cigarette designed for people who hate cigarettes — a butt that didn't cause cancer, that didn't cloud the air with smoke, that didn't even dribble ashes.

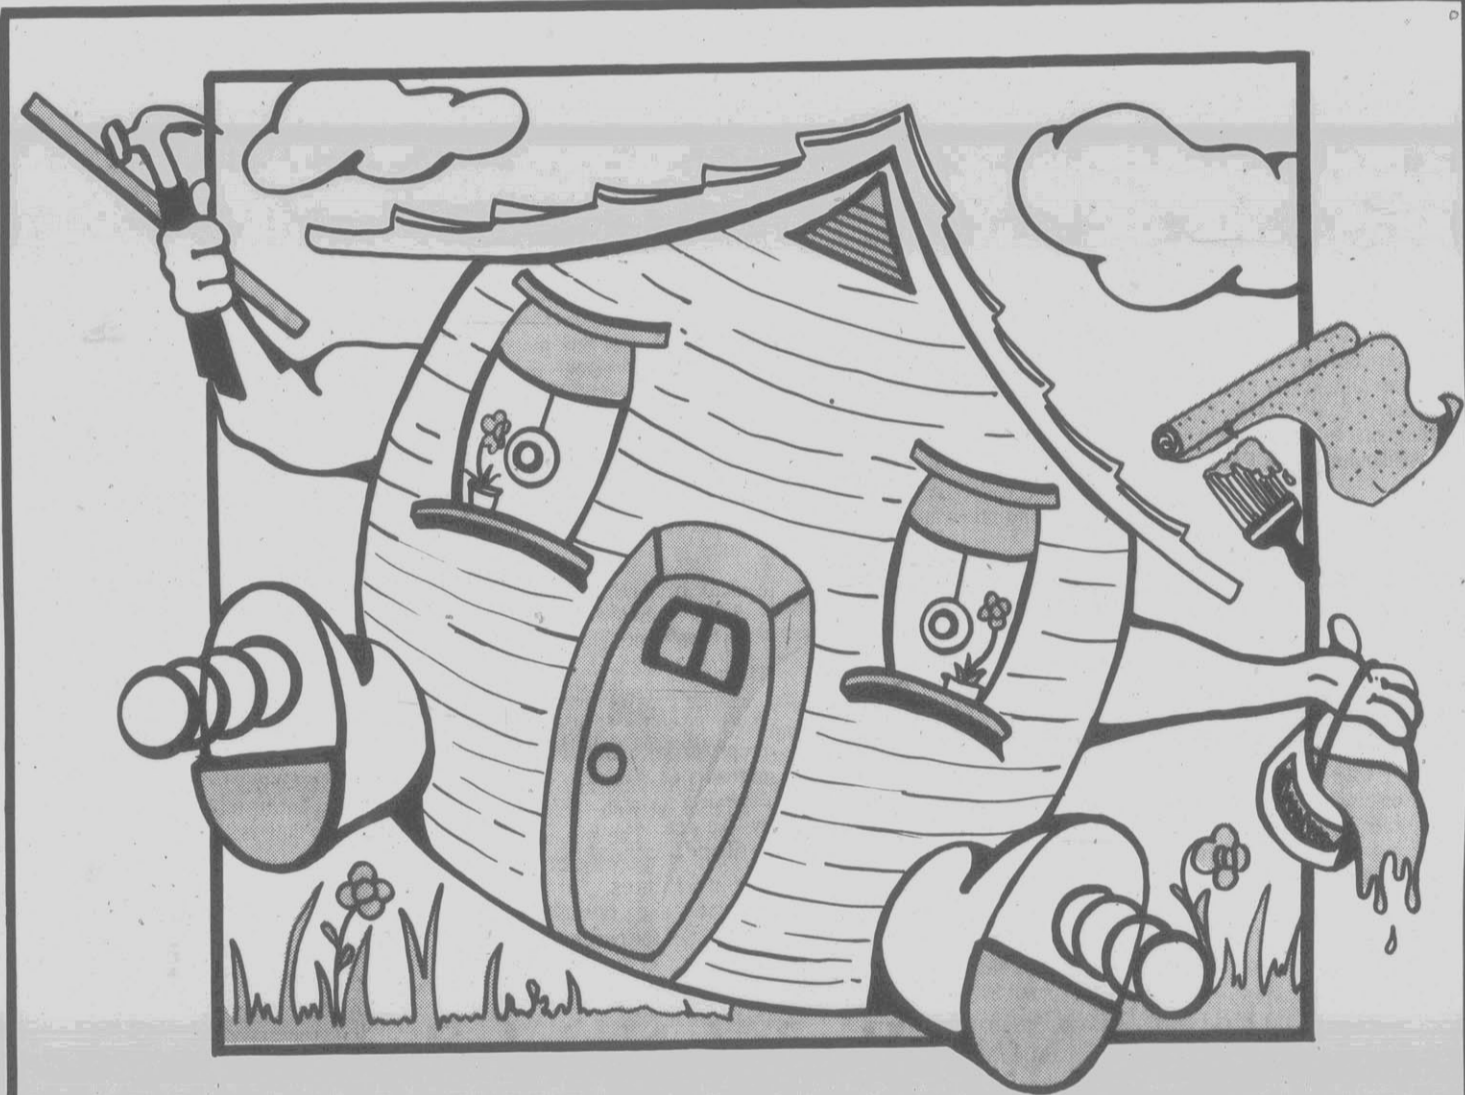

It also didn't taste very good. And that, after several hundred million dollars of investment by R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., was apparently what finally killed Premier, the world's first "smokeless" cigarette.

On Tuesday, Reynolds announced that after five months of test marketing in Missouri and Arizona it had scrapped Premier because it "has not achieved adequate consumer acceptance."

During its short life, Premier neither satisfied cigarette smokers nor placated cigarette haters. Despite its often-repeated label, Premier was not exactly smokeless. It gave off a steamy vapor vaguely reminiscent of cigarette smoke.

Depending on the point of view, Premier was not enough like a cigarette, or it was too much like one.

S.C. Invokes Ban On Wastes From 32 States

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Officials at South Carolina's commercial hazardous waste landfill say they won't challenge the ban that begins today on waste from 32 states and Puerto Rico.

"It will have a tremendous impact on our business," GSX vice president Roger Davis said. "We just think it's a good business decision not to challenge it."

The ban announced Tuesday, which affects such heavy landfill users as Florida and North Carolina, is the result of Gov. Carroll Campbell's Jan. 18 executive order. Campbell said then that South Carolina would prohibit beginning March 1 the disposal of waste from any state that refused to dispose of the waste itself.

"We hope our actions will encourage other states to move toward developing their own hazardous waste management programs," said Hartsill Truesdale, head of the state Department of Health and Environmental Control's hazardous waste division.

"It was both the failure of other states to aggressively address their waste disposal problems and the growing imbalance in waste disposal that prompted Gov. Campbell to issue this executive order," he said.

The ban affects the massive GSX landfill on the shore of Lake Marion in Sumter County near Pinewood. The site annually accepts 135,000 tons of hazardous waste, such as solvents, acids and other chemical garbage. About 70 percent of the waste comes from out of state.

The banned states shipped about 45 percent of the waste handled by the facility in 1987, according to the latest DHEC figures available.

Truesdale said additional state inspectors would be at the facility today to ensure no waste from a banned state is accepted.

State officials will also follow rejected trucks back to state borders to ensure no waste is illegally dumped, Truesdale said. But Davis said he did not expect many, if any, trucks to be turned around.

Shipments to GSX are scheduled in advance, and Davis said the company late Tuesday notified shippers of waste from the listed states their load would not be accepted.

The GSX site is one of only two commercial hazardous waste landfills in the Southeast. The other is in Emelle, Ala.

Most of the affected states did not respond to DHEC's request for information on prohibitions in that state, Truesdale said.

As a result, he called the list "dynamic" and one that could change as additional information is received. Campbell's office said in January nine to 12 states were believed to have prohibitions that would put those states on the banned list.

Campbell was in Washington Tuesday winding up a trip to the National Governors' Association meeting, but his spokesman, Tucker Eskew, said the governor had been aware of the selected sites.

As the ban goes into effect, Eskew said he believed Campbell's message to other states would come across: "If it's not good enough for you, it's not good enough for us."

Campbell has said that any state would have to remove disposal prohibitions before the ban could be lifted.

But state Sen. Phil Leventis, D-Sumter and a longtime landfill opponent, while praising the order's implementation, said other states should have working disposal sites before being allowed to send South Carolina their waste.

"Anybody that promises us that with a little revision of a law that their state is soon going to be handling its own hazardous waste is simply telling us the check is in the mail," Leventis said.

North Carolina is one state trying to change its law. A bill was filed Tuesday that would give Gov. Jim Martin firm control over a newly created Industrial Waste Management Commission while abolishing the Hazardous Waste Treatment Commission that failed to find an acceptable site in the face of heavy public opposition.

N.C. legislators hope to learn in the next few days whether South Carolina will agree to keep taking North Carolina waste in light of the bill.

"They realize that whatever bill that we put in, if it's in good faith and we're working in that direction, they don't really care what is in the bill," said Sen. Lura Tally, D-Cumberland, one of the bill's sponsors.

Eskew said he believed the lack of response from some states had been the result of "clerical oversight or lack of focused attention."

"The governor expects that list to be whittled down pretty quickly," Eskew said.

Of those states approved for shipment, three — Hawaii, Montana and Nevada — did not send waste to the facility in 1987, Truesdale said.

North Carolina, Florida, Tennessee and Mississippi are the only states which not only submitted the information and were banned, but also shipped waste to GSX.

According to the 1987 figures, North Carolina shipped to South Carolina 44,000 tons; Florida, 3,900 tons; Tennessee, 2,600 tons; and Mississippi, 10 tons.

The ban does not affect a state-mandated 135,000-ton annual cap at the facility, and Truesdale acknowledged it was possible states still allowed to send waste would fill the gap created by those states now banned.

He also said the department was working to make sure generators did not avoid the order's effect by shipping waste to an approved state for reshipment to South Carolina, though he did not give specifics.

IN THE STATE

Erosion Causing Concern

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Two winter storms that battered the Outer Banks coastline have Hatteras Island residents worried that erosion could endanger the bridge that is their only link to the mainland.

"If we get any more hard nor'easters," said Dare County Sheriff Albert W. Austin, "it's going to be a direct hit at the (Herbert C. Bonner) bridge. I'm not the only concerned person. I hear it all over the island."

Austin said he hoped state Department of Transportation officials will consider building an extension at the bridge's southern end to prevent a washout in a storm that would sever transportation to the island.

E. Wayne Gray, master chief of the Oregon Inlet Coast Guard station, said the storm washed away more than 100 feet of beach. He predicted that one more nor'easter would send ocean water into the yard of the Coast Guard's old Oregon Inlet station, which was abandoned in December.

Meanwhile, officials condemned three cottages and part of a Nags Head motel because of erosion damage.

In Kill Devil Hills, two motels whose foundations were threatened by the pounding surf continued to dump truckloads of sand on eroded beachfronts. Motel operators said the beach renourishment will cost thousands of dollars.

The first storm punched the Outer Banks on Feb. 17 with high winds and seas. The second storm hit less than a week later with freezing temperatures, 50 mph northeast winds and relentless waves that pounded the beaches.

Challengers

RALEIGH — Less than two months after Joe Mavretic's stunning election as speaker of the state House of Representatives, candidates are laying the groundwork to challenge him when he seeks a second term in 1991.

Rep. Jack Hunt, D-Cleveland, former speaker pro tem, and five-term Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, said Tuesday they will run against Mavretic. And the incumbent said he had been told that Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, was also a candidate. Hunter could not be reached for comment.

"My chore is to do just the best I can, be the best speaker I can," said Mavretic, D-Edgecombe. "And then ... if the majority of the people want me to come back as speaker, I will."

Hunt, a 14-year House veteran from Cleveland County, for many years was among the closest allies of former Speaker Liston Ramsey. But Hunt said in an interview he did not consider himself a Ramsey protégé.

The N.C. Highway Patrol said the truck driver was going too fast for conditions.

Troopers said Edward M. Rohe, 40, of Salem, Ind., was charged with reckless driving.

House Fire

ROXBORO, N.C. (AP) — A father and son received burns over more than half their bodies in a house fire in Roxboro early Tuesday, authorities say.

Roxboro Fire Chief Buddy Hall said he thinks the fire was ignited by a portable kerosene heater.

Michael Woods Sr., 35, suffered burns over 75 percent of his body, while his 4-year-old son, Michael Woods Jr., was burned over 60 percent of his body, Hall said. Michael Woods Sr. was listed in serious but stable condition at Duke University Medical Center, and his son was listed in critical condition.

The two were pulled from their burning home about 9 a.m. by neighbor Willie Bailey, who noticed flames and called authorities.

Records Stolen

DURHAM (AP) — Federal animal records were stolen during a weekend break-in at Duke University's research animal farm.

Sometime between noon Sunday and 7 a.m. Monday, someone cut through a barbed wire fence at the 80-acre farm. The thief or thieves then pried open a window and took three U.S. Department of Agriculture record books that list names and phone numbers of suppliers of dogs and cats that are used for medical research at Duke.

Firefighter Dies

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A 57-year-old Swannanoa volunteer firefighter who was injured in an accident last week during a winter storm died Tuesday at Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville.

Samuel Waddell and another firefighter were helping an accident victim on Interstate 40 Thursday night when a tractor-trailer rig plowed into them from behind. The other firefighter, Glenn Hensley, 36, was in stable condition at the Asheville hospital.

Study Says New Radar Needed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Weather radar systems across the country must be replaced to avoid the tragedy that occurred when tornados struck eastern North Carolina last year, killing four people, a federal study concludes.

There is "a compelling, almost desperate, need to upgrade and replace the nation's aged system of weather radars," according to a two-page summary of the report obtained Tuesday. "These actions must be expedited to prevent another devastating surprise such as we witnessed on Nov. 28, 1988."

The report, by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, said a personnel shortage, antiquated and malfunctioning radar systems and inadequate scientific understanding of tornados resulted in a lack of warning from the National Weather Service.

But the report primarily blamed outdated radars for the failure to warn residents. The Raleigh weather service's local warning radar was not working when the storm struck.

The study says that weather service employees were somewhat short-staffed when the storm struck but that they reacted reasonably.

Four people were killed by the tornados that hit Wake, Franklin, Nash and Halifax counties early Nov. 28. "Considering the amount of damage caused by this outbreak," the report said, "it was astonishing the death rate was so low."

The full report will be released Friday at a congressional subcommittee hearing in Raleigh.

'Come Fly With Me'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most of Sen. Daniel Inouye's colleagues on a Senate panel have spurned his invitation to join him on a six-nation tour, despite his promise that the taxpayer-paid trip will mix pleasure with business.

Inouye, D-Hawaii, the new chairman of the Senate Appropriations defense subcommittee, has invited 17 panel members to accompany him to the Middle East and Europe for an "on-the-scene evaluation of the changes which are occurring in several areas of significance to our nation's defense requirements."

But Inouye's letter of invitation also notes other attractions in Germany, Italy, Egypt, Spain, Israel and Turkey.

"I also intend to make a special effort to allow time for visits to museums, art galleries, and religious and historical sites in the capitals and the countryside of these countries," Inouye wrote.

Citing protocol demands, he suggested that the senators bring along their spouses on "what I know will be a most enjoyable and productive trip."

"Far from being a 'congressional junket,' this trip will take us to areas which I believe we need to visit to understand the dimensions of the problems confronting U.S. national security and to meet the responsibilities we face as members of the subcommittee on defense," he said.

The Associated Press obtained a copy of the letter, which proposes the trip for the Senate's Easter vacation the last two weeks of March.

Only Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., has definitely signed up, although three senators, Arlen Specter, R-Pa.; Bennett Johnston, D-La.; and Jake Garn, R-Utah, are undecided, according to an informal head count. The rest say they have no plans to go.

Wright Denies He Threatened Expose

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The ethics investigation of House Speaker Jim Wright was expanded to include an allegation that he threatened to expose a federal thrift regulator's homosexuality unless Texas thrift executives were allowed to meet with Washington officials of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Wright said through a spokesman the allegation was "preposterous," the newspaper said.

The Times quoted sources as saying Wright was accused of threatening federal officials in Washington with "blowing the whistle" on a federal thrift regulator's alleged homosexuality unless Texas thrift executives were allowed to meet with Washington officials of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Executives of at least two Texas savings and loan associations felt they could not get fair hearings at the bank board's Dallas office, where the federal official in question worked, the Times said. The Texas thrift executives were complaining of over-regulation, and some of them were friends of the speaker, the newspaper said.

Wright's spokesman, Mark Johnson, told the newspaper, "The speaker never threatened to expose anything. It's a figment of someone's imagination, someone with an obvious ax to grind."

Wright has been investigated by the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct since last fall regarding an attempt to influence federal regulators on behalf of several Texas savings and loan executives. Wright has been accused of accepting a Fort Worth condominium at a price below market value, of ordering a member of his staff to work on his book and of using the book's royalties to skirt limits on outside income.

Wright has denied any wrongdoing. A report was submitted to the House ethics panel last week by its counsel, and the panel must decide whether it believes any of the charges were substantiated.

The Times said the new allegation was brought to the committee's attention in December or January.

Liz Taylor's Doctors Under Scrutiny

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Prosecutors are investigating allegations that some physicians prescribed excessive quantities of drugs for actress Elizabeth Taylor, the District Attorney's Office said.

The Oscar Award-winning actress is not herself the target of a criminal investigation, spokesman Al Albergate said Tuesday.

Miss Taylor admitted in a 1987 magazine interview that she had undergone treatment for addiction to painkillers and alcohol. A call to Miss Taylor's publicist wasn't answered after hours Tuesday.

Albergate said the investigation involves allegations that at least two doctors during the past year prescribed excessive amounts of various opiates, barbiturates and stimulants to her "without medical justification."

He did not identify the drugs or the doctors, nor did he say when the probe began or what prompted it. Miss Taylor has not met with authorities, he said.

The doctors could be charged with illegally prescribing drugs, a violation of the state's Health and Safety Code, he said.

The state Attorney General's Office also is investigating and submit its reports to the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office, Albergate said.

State To Buy Plant

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALBANY, N.Y. — Gov. Mario Cuomo signed a new agreement to buy the $5.4 billion Shoreham nuclear plant for $1 and close it permanently, but some opponents were skeptical, saying "Shoreham continues to rise from the dead."

Under the agreement, the Long Island Lighting Co. will sell the debt-ridden, unused plant to the state, which will dismantle it. The plant, which has been subject to repeated licensing battles since its completion in 1985, had come close to bankrupting the utility.

"It is time to end this matter once and for all and turn our energies to new, productive measures for Long Island and the state," said Cuomo in announcing the agreement Tuesday.

Unlike a similar agreement last year, which was killed by state legislators, Cuomo predicted this deal would succeed because it largely bypasses the Legislature.

Reaction from opponents of the plant was mixed. Long Island business leaders contend the $2.5 billion loss that LILCO plans to take on the plant during the next three years will be passed to its customers, who already pay among the nation's highest electric bills.

Daley's Son Wins Chicago Primary

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Richard M. Daley's Democratic primary victory over Mayor Eugene Sawyer carried him to the door of the City Hall office his father held for 21 years, but a new foe and an old nemesis want to bar his entry.

By defeating Sawyer Tuesday, Daley advanced to the April 4 general election and a contest Democrats have won without fail since 1931 — including six straight terms captured by Richard J. Daley, the late, legendary boss of Chicago politics.

The 46-year-old white nominee faces third-party candidate Alderman Timothy Evans, previously Sawyer's chief black rival and now Jesse Jackson's choice. He also faces the Republican primary winner, a title claimed by Edward Vrdolyak, who bucked GOP leaders by launching a write-in candidacy a week ago.

With 2,843 of 2,911 precincts reporting, or 98 percent, unofficial totals showed Daley with 481,370 votes, or 56 percent, to 367,919 votes, or 43 percent, for the black acting mayor. Three other candidates shared the remaining votes.

Daley rode overwhelming white support to win, capping a three-month campaign that was largely free of racial strife and, by Chicago standards, rancor.

Our Aging Fleets

Average age of fleets as of July 1, 1988. Aviation experts say that more than chronological age, the safety and value of an airliner is determined by the quality of maintenance and the number of flying cycles, or takeoffs and landings and other factors in its individual history.

Airlines Endorse Work On Planes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A new plan to require $800 million in work on aging airliners will provide an extra margin of safety, even though the planes already are "perfectly safe," an airline trade association official said today.

Officials of United, Delta and American airlines who worked on an aging-aircraft task force joined Tuesday in endorsing the group's far-reaching recommendations to increase the safety of older Boeing airliners.

Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner says steps are being taken to write the proposal into law.

"Collectively we decided that it was far better to be pre-emptive in our maintenance activity rather than to wait for problems to develop," Clyde Kizer, vice president of the Air Transport Association, an airline trade group, said today on ABC's "Good Morning America."

The task force, which also included other U.S. and foreign industry and government safety experts, called for $600,000 in modifications and replacements on each of more than 1,300 older Boeing 747s, 737s and 727s.

"The aircraft that are out there right now are perfectly safe and the activities that the airlines are taking in regards to the maintenance were satisfactory," Kizer said. "This supplies an extra protection margin."

Bob Doll, United Airlines vice president for technical services, said the proposals conform with steps the airline is already taking to keep its older airliners in shape.

"We don't anticipate anything over and above what we've already planned to do," said Doll.

Kizer said the proposals had nothing to do with damage to United's oldest 747 on a flight from Honolulu to Auckland, New Zealand, last Friday.

Investigators into the incident in which nine passengers were hurled to their deaths over the Pacific Ocean say they have found no signs of metal fatigue or corrosion associated with aging. Instead, they have focused on possible mechanical problems with the cargo door that ripped off along with a portion of the airliner's skin.

Julian May, Delta vice president, said none of his airline's fleet of 130 model 727s would be affected by the proposals right away.

"It will be several years before we are affected because of fleet age," he said.

Pan Am's top executive, Thomas G. Plaskett, also endorsed the proposal, saying that unless older airliners are restored and kept operating, there may not be enough planes to serve the growing worldwide travel demand.

No airliners would be scrapped under the proposal which asks the Federal Aviation Administration to order the work that would include replacement of parts subject to wear rather than repeated inspections and repairs only when they wear out.

An official of Boeing Commercial Aircraft Co., which manufactured the affected airliners, said the older jetliners covered by the plan are safe and should last indefinitely if the recommended work is done.

"We believe that the aircraft out there flying are safe," said Ben Cosgrove, Boeing engineering vice president who sits on the task force. But he said the work was needed to reduce the number of regular inspections needed for older aircraft.

The recommendations are based on 150 service bulletins issued by Boeing, which is now to write them into a single massive bulletin for presentation to the FAA.

Skinner praised the task force's work as the first product of a cooperative international government and industry effort to deal with the problem of the world's aging airliner fleet.

The average age of the 8,800 airliners in use around the world is just over 13 years, and aviation experts predict that will increase each year for several years.

Death Toll Passes 100 In Price Riots

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CARACAS, Venezuela — The army moved to wipe out snipers in the hills of Caracas today after the government suspended civil rights and imposed a nationwide curfew to combat the worst violence in 31 years of democratic rule.

Reports from authorities and independent sources indicated the death toll had surpassed 100 in two days of rioting and plunder touched off by protests over price increases imposed to meet the demands of international creditors.

The El Nacional newspaper said today that 80 had died in Caracas.

At least 800 have been injured in what President Carlos Andres Perez termed an "incredible tragedy." At least eight cities were placed under military control to keep order.

Even as Perez spoke late Tuesday, gunfire was heard in the streets and rioting and looting continued in this capital of 4 million people.

Authorities said thousands of people had been arrested.

Perez, in office only since Feb. 2, said in the television address that the riots were threatening the democratic process.

In the eastern shantytown of Petare, 17 people were killed in battles between police and rioters. Victims were carried down from the hills to major avenues to be taken to hospitals while crowds watched, witnesses said.

Later Tuesday, the army moved into Petare and the hills of January 23, a lower-income neighborhood on the west side of Caracas, to take on snipers. Authorities said army units completed their search before dawn but did not elaborate.

The curfew was in effect from 8 p.m. Tuesday to 6 a.m. today, and 6 p.m. tonight until 6 a.m. Thursday.

The Education Ministry ordered school and university classes suspended nationwide.

Stores Will Sell 'Verses'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BERKELEY, Calif. — Operators of two bookstores where firebombings may be linked to sales of "The Satanic Verses" pledged not to stop selling the book despite the violence, which caused modest damage but no injuries.

Bookstores throughout the country have been threatened if they carry the book that Moslems call blasphemous. The bombings at Cody's and Waldenbooks in Berkeley and at a weekly newspaper in New York City early Tuesday were the first signs of violence in the United States.

At eight bookstores in Santa Barbara in Southern California, employees opening for business Tuesday found crudely worded, poorly typed notes warning that something "bad" would happen to shopowners selling the novel. The notes were signed "American Moslems."

Cody's owner Andy Ross found no such threat, but he said he had little doubt the firebombings were connected to the novel that prompted Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini to issue a death order for the Moslem author, Salman Rushdie, and the book's publishers.

"I can't imagine any other reason why people would be lobbing bombs through bookstores — Cody's or anyone's," said Ross.

But Ross reiterated an announcement issued last week that the store wouldn't give in to pressure.

"We do not have it now, but we will be selling it," he said while surveying the damage to his shop, a landmark dating from the 1960s Free Speech movement that originated in Berkeley.

Britain Welcomes Soviet Mediation In Book Spat

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LONDON — The British government Tuesday rejected an Iranian ultimatum to change Britain's stand over death threats to author Salman Rushdie, but it welcomed a Soviet offer to try to mediate the continuing controversy over Rushdie's novel, "The Satanic Verses."

The developments followed a vote by the Iranian Parliament earlier Tuesday to break all diplomatic relations with Britain within a week unless London denounces "unprincipled stands against the world of Islam" and condemns the contents of Rushdie's book.

In Moscow, Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov told journalists that "the situation around 'The Satanic Verses' causes grave concern for the Soviet leadership."

Gerasimov said that Iranian officials had given the impression during meetings with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze in Tehran last weekend "that we could play some positive role in resolving" the conflict. He said that Shevardnadze will immediately take up the issue with Western leaders because of the "unforeseeable consequences" of the affair.

Reacting to the Soviet hint, a British Foreign Office spokesman said: "That's the sort of thing we're going to be positive about."

The spokesman said that it is up to Iran to decide whether it wants normal relations with London. If it does, he said, Tehran "must renounce the use or threat of violence against citizens of other countries. ... We would like to have normal relations with Iran, but so far they're making that impossible. If the Soviets can help to redress the balance, we'd be pleased."

Last month, Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini condemned Rushdie and his publishers to death for producing a book that allegedly blasphemes Islam and the Prophet Mohammed.

In response, Britain last week withdrew its three-person diplomatic team from its embassy in Tehran and ordered Iran's charge d'affaires to leave London. The Iranian official left London Tuesday night.

Other members of the 12-nation European Community, as well as Canada and Sweden, have ordered their diplomats home from Tehran to protest the death threat against Rushdie. The United States and Iran have no diplomatic relations.

Britain apparently was singled out by Iran because the book was first published in Britain, and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government has reacted with outrage to Khomeini's order that Rushdie be killed.

Likud Wins Key Elections

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — The Labor Party lost key strongholds to Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's right-wing Likud bloc in nationwide municipal elections that Likud had billed as a referendum on the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Shamir told Israel radio today that the results will show the world "who is dominant in the Israeli political system, who is the one who determines, who has the stronger voice."

He had called Tuesday's elections a referendum on Israel's refusal to negotiate with the PLO.

Political analysts said the results showed Labor's historic dominance of the grass-roots level had eroded.

"The Likud has now in effect become the dominant party in the country. It has finally translated its gains in national politics to the municipal scene," Hanan Crystal, a political scientist, said on Israel radio.

In The Area

Civic Dinner

The Salvation Army annual report and civic dinner will be held Friday at 7 p.m. at the Greenville Masonic Temple on Charles Street.

Dr. Leslie H. Garner Jr., president of North Carolina Wesleyan College in Rocky Mount, will be the guest speaker. J.T. and Judy Adams of Emerald Isle will provide the music.

DR. LESLIE H. GARNER JR.

Jobs Found

In January, 9,474 North Carolinians found jobs through the 78 Job Service centers and six branch offices operated by the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina. This was a 14.9 percent increase over January 1988.

Adjustment Board

The Greenville Board of Adjustment will meet Thursday at 7 p.m. in the council chambers of City Hall to consider items on the February agenda. The February meeting was cancelled due to severe weather.

Science Fair

E.B. Aycock Junior High School recently held its annual science fair. In the senior division, first-place winners were Brad Williams in earth science, Jennifer Vore in biological science and Jeffrey Li in physical science. In the junior division, first-place winners were Lori Evans in earth science, Peter Brinson in biological science and Bryan Pridden in physical science.

Talent Hunt

The Nu Alpha chapter of the Omega Psi Phi Fraternity is sponsoring a talent hunt, featuring area high school students, Sunday at 3 p.m. at the Cedar Street Omega Center in New Bern. Admission is free and refreshments will be provided.

Workshop

The Child Care section of the N.C. Division of Facility Services conducted a training workshop today at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Greenville to help summer day camp operators with licensing requirements.

In 1987, the N.C. General Assembly ruled that summer day camps operated by nonprofit organizations were no longer exempt from regulation. In March 1988, the N.C. Child Day Care Commission adopted rules for the licensure of summer day camps for school-age children. The rules are administered by the Child Day Care section of the N.C. Division of Facility Services.

School Activities

Wahl-Coates School celebrated "Black History Month" with several activities.

Contributions of black Americans were highlighted on the intercom; a contest was held for naming a notable black American; jazz students from East Carolina University performed, and Edie Snider featured songs and stories from the book "The People Could Fly, American Black Folktales," told by Virginia Hamilton.

Fifth-graders wrote reports and learned about black history as part of their language arts and social studies classes. Fourth-graders also completed reports and played games naming black personalities.

Students also saw the works of Billy Walls at the Greenville Museum of Art, and they were visited by speakers discussing the life and culture in Africa.

Public Speaks Out

to deny the mayor a vote by directing the city attorney to properly submit the 1981 council decision to the Justice Department for preclearance. The vote on that action was unanimous.

But following public outcry in support of the mayor's vote at the council's Jan. 12 meeting, the governing body agreed to conduct Tuesday's public meeting on the matter.

Approximately 30 people attended Tuesday's meeting, including a Boy Scout troop and most of the city department heads.

Four people spoke at the meeting in favor of the mayor's vote.

City resident Jeff Savage supported the mayor's vote, saying, "I do think the city would be in a better position if we did have another person on the council who does not represent a particular district, other than the at-large elected council person."

Charles Clark of Jefferson Drive said he feels the mayor should be able to vote to voice his restraint to overzealous proposals by other city officials.

"The mayor should also be able to vote his approval to whatever he feels is best for the city. This would let the citizens of Greenville know how the mayor stands on all issues concerning all parts of Greenville," he said.

Meanwhile, four residents spoke in opposition to the mayor's vote.

David Barbour, a free-lance artist whose work is featured in The Daily Reflector, said he believes the mayor's role should be a facilitator and a mediator to the council rather than a voting member of government.

Bob Bohannon of York Road said a proper checks and balances exists in the government when the mayor does not vote.

"Our country was founded on no person having too much power," he said. As it stands now, the mayor has the most important vote of all in his ability to break a tie," he said.

After listening to the diversity of opinion, Carter elaborated on why he believes so strongly in the mayor's vote — assuring those in attendance that his efforts to reinstate the mayor's vote are not of a personal nature.

"The issue isn't Ed Carter — I don't plan to be here that long," he said.

"The issue is right or wrong. If you find something's going wrong in the city, a lot of people call me and blame me for it, as the mayor. To suggest that the mayor should have less authority than any of the council people is ludicrous.

"During the time of the ice storm, I got more calls than Greenville Utilities and yet when it comes right down to it, (the mayor) has no authority (without a vote)," he said.

One Greenville resident, Lucy Jones, said she was surprised to learn at Tuesday's meeting that the mayor has such limited powers.

"I didn't know the mayor was such a little man," she said. "When we elect a man, that man should have some power."

Following the meeting, Carter said he believes the citizens of Greenville should have the decision on whether the mayor's role should be that of a figurehead or whether the mayor should have the voting powers to represent the city's constituents.

"I think the best way to do it is to call for a referendum. I don't think it's right for me to decide anything for the council and the council decide anything for the mayor," Carter said.

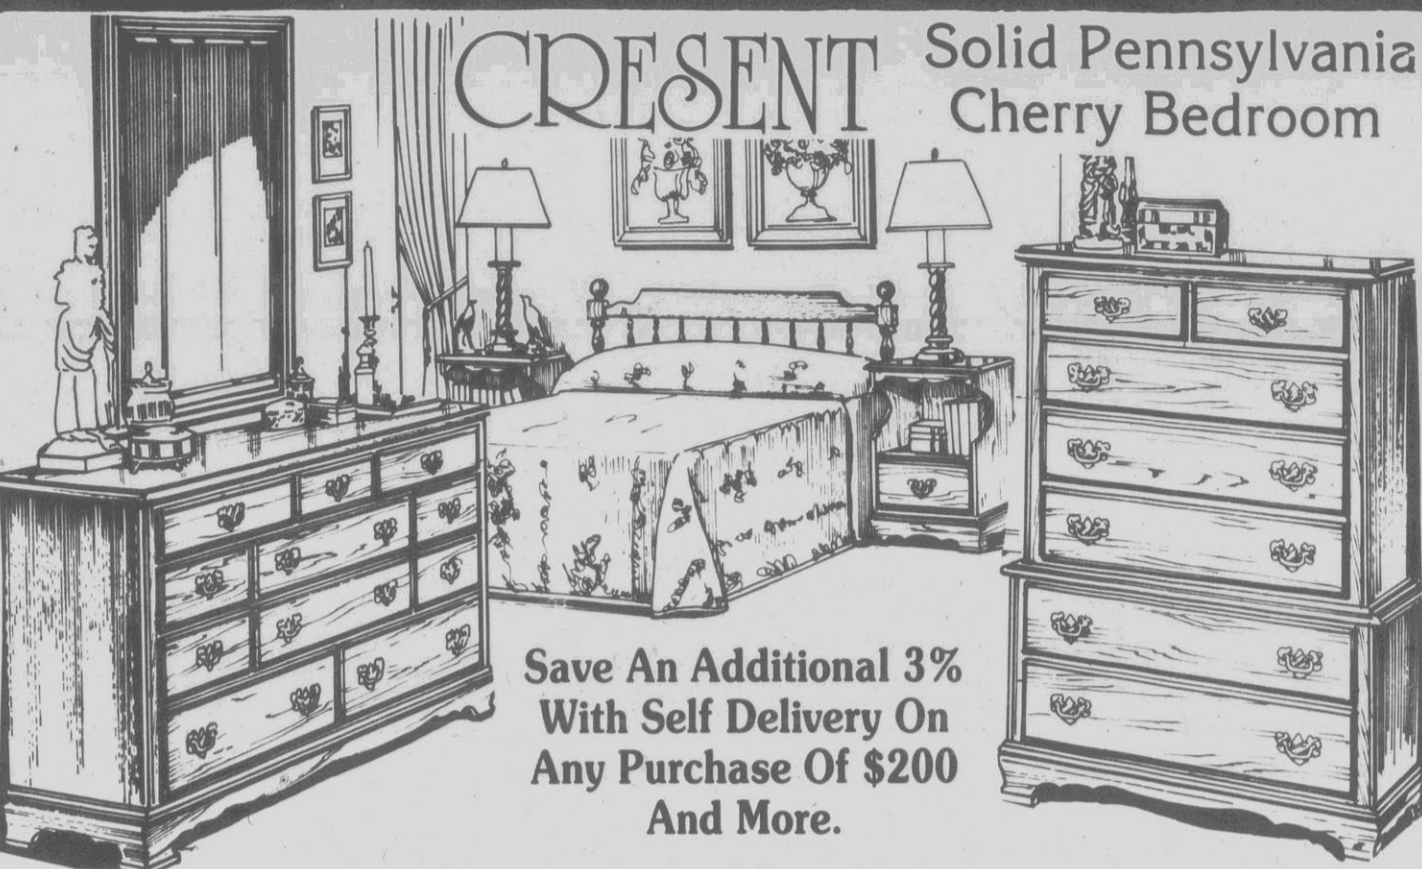

"It's an issue that needs to be put to rest and I think the people need to put it to rest," he said.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market staged a broad advance today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 11.97 to 2,270.36 in the first half hour today.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 680 up, 271 down and 477 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 25.75 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Rates declined modestly in the bond and short-term money markets this morning.

Among actively traded blue chips, American Express gained 1/4 to 29 1/4; Merck 3/8 to 64 1/4; International Business Machines 3/4 to 122 1/4, and American Telephone & Telegraph 1/4 to 30 1/2.

Columbia Pictures Entertainment climbed 7/8 to 17 3/4 on reports that Coca-Cola Co. had been approached by several parties interested in buying Coke's 49 percent stake in Columbia.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .71 to 163.20. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.07 at 323.54.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 8.03 points to 2,258.39.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by more than 8 to 5 on the NYSE, with 889 up, 529 down and 521 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 147.43 million shares, up from 139.90 million in Monday's session.

Tanks

"We had environmental representatives come in from Washington (N.C.) to check it out. Their suggestion to the Fast Fare people was to have the tanks taken up and the mixture of gasoline and water beneath the tanks pumped out."

Harry Dixon, territory manager of Fast Fare, said that in situations of this nature, maintenance people from the chain's Baltimore office are called in to carry out whatever action is necessary.

Melissa Scheitler, manager of communications for Crown Center in Baltimore, operator of Fast Fares, explained that the two tanks at the Greenville site "had been emptied of fuel to undergo a periodic relining as part of a continuing safety measure. Because of what our crew said was the extremely soft conditions of the earth, the empty tanks floated to the surface and in the process one of them tipped, spilling a small amount of fuel left in one of the tanks. Because of that, the decision was made to take the tanks out and replace them with new ones rather than to attempt to reline them."

Watkins Confirmed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — James D. Watkins won unanimous support from a Senate committee today for confirmation as energy secretary, opening the way for the retired admiral to clear the decks in an agency management he has described as "a mess."

The Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee voted 18-0 to recommend that Watkins, 61, be made the first career military man to head the Energy Department.

James McClure of Idaho, the committee's ranking Republican, said he hoped the nomination could be voted on by the full Senate by the end of the day.

"We're very, very pleased with Admiral Watkins," committee Chairman J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., said before the vote.

Members of the committee, at a confirmation hearing last week, raised not a word of doubt about Watkins' fitness for the job. He was warmly praised for a reputation of diligence and strong leadership.

Although he has no experience in the conventional energy field, Watkins developed an expertise in nuclear power during a 41-year Navy career that included training in reactor technology as well as the command of a nuclear submarine.

Now he's about to enter battle against one of the Bush administration's biggest challenges: revitalizing the Energy Department's nuclear weapons complex and planning a long-range cleanup operation that may cost $100 billion.

Aliens Are Nabbed

Los Angeles Monday night as they attempted to board the same flight.

"We saw it here (in Atlanta) and in Los Angeles on Monday, and now in Charlotte," said Thomas P. Fischer, director of the Atlanta INS office. "They're desperate to unload their human cargo and have little concern, if any, for the aliens."

INS officials in Los Angeles said a man believed to be a leader in the smuggling ring — Jorge Guzman-Romero, a 42-year-old Mexican national — was arrested along with the 69 in Los Angeles.

Immigration officials stressed that several independent smugglers may have been using the "red eye" flights to ferry illegal aliens to the East Coast and that the group arrested in Los Angeles was not necessarily linked to those seized in Atlanta.

"This was a concurrent, parallel investigation that will continue until we close this route. We suspect there will be other routes," Donald H. Looney, acting district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Los Angeles, said Tuesday.

Authorities said the chief smuggling operators remain at large, but they described Guzman-Romero as a leader.

"We're not as close as we'd like to be. We'd like to have (the ringleaders) in handcuffs," said Thomas Gaines, INS assistant district director for anti-smuggling.

Guzman-Romero was charged with transporting at least three illegal aliens. U.S. Magistrate Volney V. Brown declined to set bail Tuesday, saying Guzman-Romero has no ties to the Los Angeles area.

Gaines said investigators received tips that several groups used Eastern's late-night flight to New York.

"We feel like we have a number of individual smugglers who are utilizing a rather low airfare to move their aliens away from the border from Los Angeles and on up to the East Coast," Gaines said at a news conference.

Smugglers often appear early at the ticket counter and pay cash for a block of tickets, officials said.

The 69 aliens caught in Los Angeles allegedly paid up to $4,000 for a package that probably included crossing the border, passage to a drop house and the cross-country flight, Gaines said. He said he didn't know if the package included finding employment.

Fifty-four were from Mexico, seven from El Salvador and four each from Colombia and Guatemala, Looney said.

INS spokesman Joe Flanders said most of the people, if found to be illegal aliens, would be given the choice of going home or requesting a deportation hearing. He said some might be held as material witnesses.

Tom Thomas, a spokesman for the INS in Atlanta, said thousands of illegal aliens may have been shuttled across the country on the Eastern flight nearly every day for the past 30 days.

Gaines refused to speculate on how many illegal aliens may have used the flights but said the technique is not new, recalling at least one sweep in recent years that netted 200 people.

Gray said he plans to build a facility near the site of the barn — on the Gray farm — and the business is to be called Pitt County Incineration Service, Oakley said.

Gray has not returned telephone calls from a reporter, but a man who said he was an employee at Gray's funeral home in Raleigh called The Daily Reflector on Tuesday and denied Gray was connected to the Pitt County site or had ever spoken to investigators.

But, Oakley restated that he and Vandiford spoke by telephone with a man who identified himself as Gray.

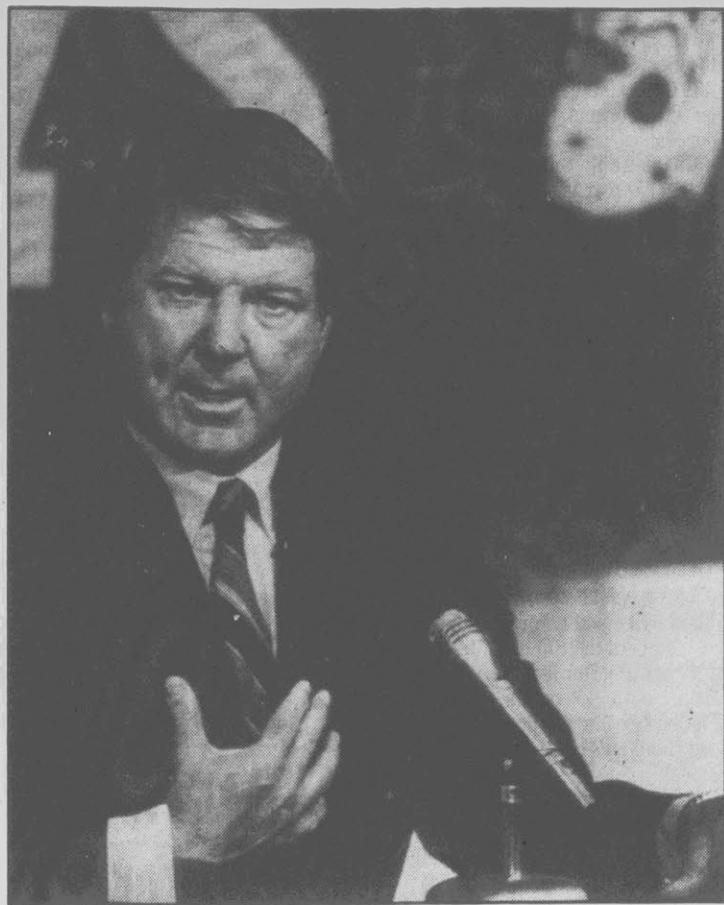

Dr. Stan Harris, regional medical examiner, has said that the materials are sealed and stored properly and do not constitute a public health hazard. The remains appear to have come from a hospital, he said, but he could not identify which facility. However, he said the waste did not come from Pitt County Memorial Hospital, which operates its own incinerator.

Gray has a contract with the state's chief medical examiner to dispose of waste, said Dr. John Butts of Chapel Hill, the chief medical examiner. Butts said he has no information to indicate the waste stored in Pitt County came from his office. Officials with the state Board of Mortuary Science said Gray also has contracts with other facilities.

C. Timothy Monroe, Pitt County health director, also said the stored material is not a health hazard.

Johnson Apologizes To Tom Landry New Cowboy Coach Says He Meant No Offense In Early Dallas Visit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

IRVING, Texas — Jimmy Johnson knew it wasn't going to be easy replacing Tom Landry as coach of the Dallas Cowboys. He discovered the degree of difficulty in his first news conference.

Johnson was grilled for showing up in Dallas before the sale of the Cowboys to close friend Jerry Jones had been completed last weekend.

Things got so heated on Tuesday that Johnson said at one point, "This thing has been a grind."

Questions about Landry outnumbered football questions, 2-to-1.

He repeatedly apologized if he offended Landry or the Cowboys' fans.

"I'm sorry if I hurt anyone. I apologize," Johnson said. "I was in Dallas (on Friday before the Cowboys were sold on Saturday) to talk face to face with Jerry Jones."

"The fact I was seen in public apparently offended some people. I'd like to sit down and visit with Tom sometime about it. We'll do it at a time of his choosing."

Jones and Johnson were photographed celebrating at a Tex-Mex restaurant in downtown Dallas on a day Landry had spent studying film and getting ready for the season.

Jones, an Arkansas millionaire, bought the team from H.R. "Bum" Bright in a sale announced on Saturday night after Johnson, the former coach of the Miami Hurricanes, had flown home.

"Things happened so fast that we didn't mean any disrespect to anybody," Jones said. "I have deep feelings for the Cowboys and Coach Landry."

Landry wasn't told he had been fired until Jones and club president Tex Schramm visited him on Saturday afternoon at the Hills of Lakeway near Austin.

"It hurts me to say I did something out of disrespect for Tom Landry," Johnson said. "I don't expect to replace someone like him. But just let me do my thing and judge me by what happens later."

Landry said he thought his dismissal "could have been handled better."

Landry was left uninformed for almost two days after Jones had shaken hands on a done deal with Bright.

Jones, who was standing near Johnson during the news conference, said, "I'm wrong and there was no right way. I visited with Tex about the sale then got to Tom as soon as I could."

Jones added, "Tom Landry and Tex Schramm are bigger than money, bigger than life."

Jones also said that the sale with Bright was final.

It now awaits approval from three-fourths of the NFL owners. With Schramm still with the team, no problems were expected in getting it approved at the next owners' meeting in March.

Asked how he could win some of the disenchanted Dallas fans, Johnson said, "I hope they are as excited as I am. We need your help. I don't claim to have all the answers but I want to take them to the Super Bowl."

Johnson, who was 10 minutes late for his first news conference, said he had not decided on what assistant coaches he would be bringing with him from Miami or which Cowboys' assistants would be retained.

"We'll say something about that next week," Johnson said. "We also will be evaluating the players on the team and have no announcements about them yet."

Johnson said he will field a Dallas team that is "aggressive on both sides of the ball. We want to press the game on offense and press the game on defense with an attacking style."

He said the Cowboys will run a 4-3 defense with some 3-4 sprinkled in as a changeup.

Johnson said former Miami assistant David Shula "is a brilliant coach and an excellent offensive strategist. He'll do a great job."

He said he still hasn't signed a contract with Jones.

"I just told him I didn't want to take a pay cut," Johnson said. "Pay is not an issue. I've got the job dreamed about all my life. I told the team that I'd never leave Miami unless I had a chance like this."

Greene Central Defeats Aycocock

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

BETHEL — It wasn't pretty, but Greene Central came away with a win.

The third-seeded Rams struggled all game long before coming out on top of sixth-seeded C.B. Aycocock, 62-48, in the opening round of the Eastern Plains Basketball Tournament Tuesday.

The win moves Greene Central, now 13-9 on the year, into the second round to face second-seeded Ayden-Grifton, a 100-64 winner over South Lenoir Monday. The Falcons closed out their year with a 8-15 record.

But even with the win in hand, Greene Central coach Lewis Godwin wasn't pleased with his team's effort.

"I didn't see anything that we did well enough tonight to beat anybody from here on out," Godwin said. "We've got Ayden-Grifton Thursday and you can't beat them with offense like we had tonight. Maybe it was just the first game jitters."

The Rams led by only seven, 34-27, with five minutes to go in the third quarter when they began to take over the boards and pull away.

Tyrone Streeter scored on a layup with 4:12 left in the third quarter and was fouled. He missed the free throw, but Tyrone Sutton pulled the rebound down and scored on a layup and was fouled, putting the score at 38-27 with 4:09 left in the quarter.

"Ideally, rebounding-wise we had a good night (Greene Central held a 32-26 edge on the boards)," C.B. Aycocock coach Randy Bledsoe said. "But it seemed like in every key situation they got the rebound."

Following a layup by the Falcons' Bob Grant, who led all scorers with 15 points, Johnnie Joyner, who led the Rams with 13 points, buried a 17-footer to put the lead back to 11, 40-29.

Reserve Bobby Williams, who finished with 11 points, then scored on a base line dunk with 2:26 left in the third to push the lead to 13, 42-29.

After that the Falcons never got closer than seven points the rest of the way.

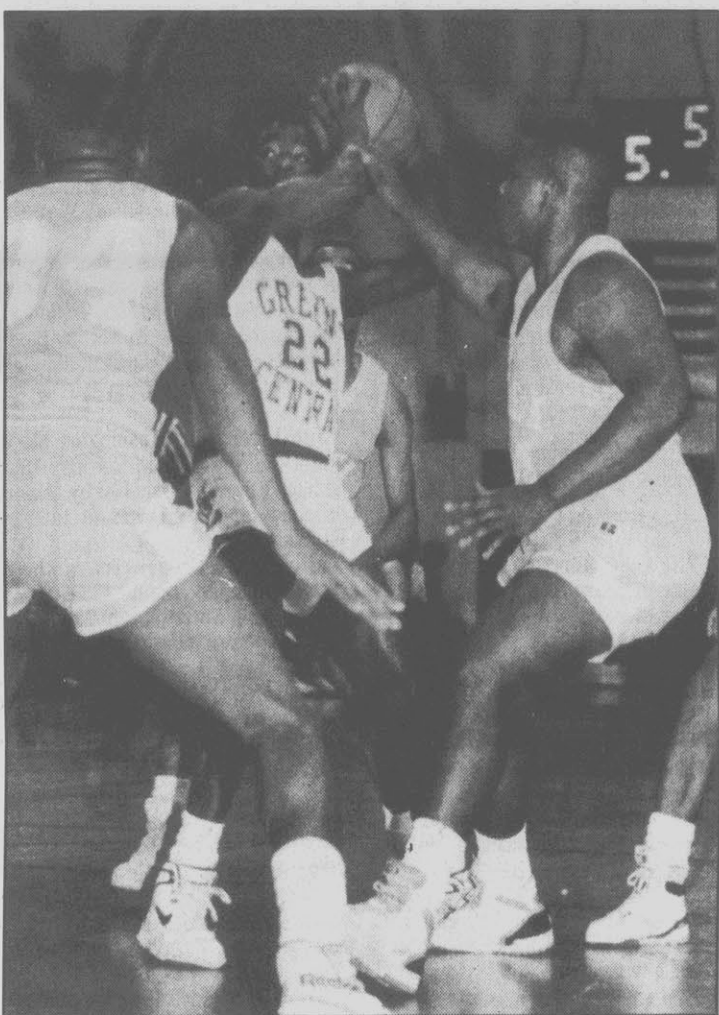

"I'd say Williams is what kept us in the game," Godwin said. "He has come along right here at the end of the season and if he had not been here tonight, I think we would have been beaten."

"And that's not to take anything away from C.B. Aycocock. I thought they played well, but we beat them on raw talent tonight. It was nothing we did on the court."

The Rams pushed the lead to as many as 15 points, 46-31, late in the third quarter thanks to a free throw from Reggie Hill, who scored 11 points, and a 3-pointer from Kevin Ormond with 1:37 showing on the clock.

After trimming the Greene Central lead to 46-34 going into the final period, C.B. Aycocock quickly closed within eight points on a follow shot by Grant with 7:29 left and a pair of

No Pressure In Chase Of Record

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Syracuse's Sherman Douglas says there was no pressure while he was closing in on college basketball's career assist record and his own school's scoring record.

Nevertheless, Douglas let out a big sigh of relief Tuesday night after achieving both records within minutes of one another during No. 6 Syracuse's 88-72 victory over Big East foe Connecticut. It was the only game involving a ranked team.

"It really hasn't been on my mind all that much. There are other things to worry about," said Douglas, who led the Syracuse triumph with 22 points and 11 assists.

"But I wanted to get it out of the way," the 6-foot senior guard said. "I'm definitely happy about it. It was the right time. We were up and we were at home."

The victory, which boosted Syracuse to 9-5 in the Big East and 24-5 overall, means that the Orangemen have evened the score with four of the five teams to deal them losses this season: Villanova, St. John's, Pittsburgh and Connecticut. Syracuse will try to exact the same revenge against No. 2 Georgetown on Sunday.

Connecticut is 6-9 in the conference and 15-10 overall.

Douglas' 11 assists give him 897 for his career, pushing him past Northeastern's Andre LaFleur as college basketball's all-time leader. LaFleur, who played between 1983 and 1987, finished his career with 894 assists.

The 22 points gave Douglas the Syracuse all-time scoring record with 1,889 points. The record was held previously by Dave Bing, who had 1,883 in a three-year career. Both Bing and Douglas played prep basketball at Springarn High School in Washington, D.C.

Douglas broke the scoring record with 11:57 to play on an emphatic breakaway dunk — not his typical style of scoring.

Later, he said he wasn't sure if that was the record-breaking basket. "I knew I was coming close ... If I could have hoped for the shot, it would have been a dunk, but it would have been a dunk over somebody," Douglas said.

Less than three minutes later, Douglas lobbed a soft pass to

Pilgreen Paces Pant-Hers

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

BETHEL — When North Pitt's girls' basketball team opens play in the Eastern Plains Conference Basketball Tournament tonight, Keisha Pilgreen will be in the spotlight for the Lady Panthers.

A senior guard for the Lady Panthers, Pilgreen is one of the main reasons the Lady Panthers are the top-seeded team in the conference. She averaged 22.7 points per game this year in leading her team to a 13-6 overall record and a 9-2 mark in the league. The Lady Panthers have also won eight of their last nine contests.

But even with the good record and good statistics, Pilgreen doesn't feel she or her teammates have gotten the notoriety they deserve this year, or any year she has been at the school.

"I don't feel like we get the recognition we deserve," Pilgreen said. "Girls play for the same reason the boys do. It's not just for fun, it's something we really enjoy doing. And I want us to be recognized just like the boys."

"We've had winning years every year, but people just aren't interested," Pilgreen said.

The Lady Panthers will battle fourth-seeded Ayden-Grifton tonight in the semifinal round. The Lady Panthers are responsible for one of the conference defeats that North Pitt has. They won the first meeting of the year by a 49-44 score, while North Pitt, led by 20 points from Pilgreen, rebounded the second time they met to take a 44-32 victory.

The Lady Panthers began conference play this year 1-2 before winning their last eight conference matchups and gaining the top seed.

"In the beginning, we had some problems but we managed to overcome them," Pilgreen said.

And the play of Pilgreen had a lot to do with why they overcame the problems.

"They (the younger players) look up to me as the leader of the group," Pilgreen said. "They look to me when they need help on and off the court."

But Pilgreen doesn't mind the pressure of being the player the team looks to in tight situations.

"I play better, I think, when I've got pressure like that," she said. "It just happens. I guess it's instinct."

Pilgreen was the player the team looked to in an earlier win over Farmville Central, a game that helped sew up first place for the team.

She scored 35 points in the 81-77 win, including 17 in the fourth quarter when she almost single-handedly put the win in the bag for the team. That loss helped erase an earlier 81-58 blowout loss to Farmville, a game where Pilgreen scored 19 points.

"I feel like I've improved each year," Pilgreen said. "My maturity has improved a lot."

But it wasn't too long ago when that wasn't the case, according to Pilgreen.

"Earlier whenever I had a bad game, I would get upset and my game wouldn't be as effective," Pilgreen said. "It affected the team too. If I didn't score then they didn't either. But I decided to stop trying to score a certain number of points a game and just go out and let what happens happen."

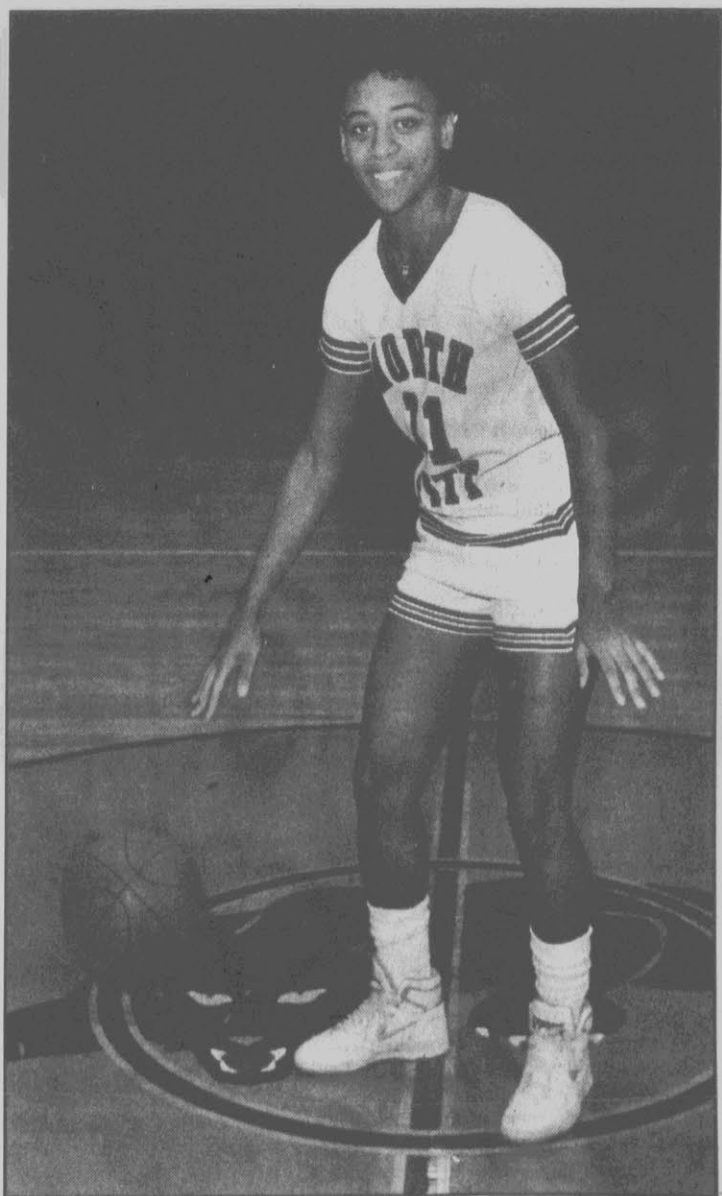

Pilgreen will now have to wait and see her goals for herself and the team happen this year. The All-Conference performer and tournament most valuable player from a year ago hopes to add All-State honors to her list of personal accomplishments this year, while her goals for the team including winning the conference tournament and advancing farther in the state tournament than they did last year.

"We lost to James Kenan in the game before the semifinals last year," Pilgreen said. "This year we

Hot Stove League To Honor Pirates

RALEIGH — The Raleigh Hot League will honor the East Carolina University baseball program Friday night at its annual banquet. The banquet will be held at the Raleigh Howard Johnson at 7:30 p.m. In a related matter, the doubleheader scheduled for Friday with St. Augustine's has been moved from 1 p.m. to noon as its starting time. Coach Gary Overton and the entire Pirate squad will attend the banquet.

Steelers Sign Ex-ECU Standout Smith

Former East Carolina football standout Vinson Smith has been signed by the Pittsburgh Steelers, team officials announced Tuesday. Smith, a 6-1, 240-pound linebacker, played last season with the Atlanta Falcons after making the squad as a free agent. He was left unprotected by the club after the league revised its free agent system and that left him free to negotiate a contract with other team in the league. Smith closed out his career with the Pirates in 1987 after leading the team in tackles as a senior with a total of 118 stops, including 62 solos. He was a three-year starter for the Bucs, playing bandit as a sophomore and inside linebacker as a junior and a senior.

Thompson Set For Release From Clinic

CHARLOTTE (AP) — David Thompson will be released from a Van Nuys, Calif., drug rehabilitation center later this week, Charlotte Hornets vice president and general manager Carl Scheer said. Thompson, director of community affairs for the Hornets, suffered an alcohol-related relapse and went to the National Basketball Association's rehabilitation center on Dec. 17. Scheer said Thompson will continue to work for the Hornets, but will assume a low-profile position until his doctors believe it is safe for him to return to a public-speaking function. "We are going to keep him away from the press and the public because his doctors believe that may have led to his relapse," Scheer told the Gastonia Gazette. "When he returns, David will be doing basketball-related functions, such as clinics and things like that." Thompson has had a well-publicized history of substance abuse problems since he left North Carolina State in 1975. While playing with the Denver Nuggets, Thompson admitted to using cocaine. He spent time in two drug-rehabilitation centers, including time at a correctional unit outside of Seattle. Thompson took his job with the Hornets in September.

Aycock Takes Win Over Beddingfield

E.B. Aycock defeated Wilson Beddingfield, 54-38 in second round action at the Tar East Nine League junior high school basketball tournament. Dwight Sheppard scored 13 points to lead Aycock while Marlo Williams added 12 points. In other action from the tournament, Bertie defeated 74-70. Aycock, 12-1, will take on Bertie today at 3:45 p.m.

Herrin Leaves UNC To Go To Clemson

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Former East Carolina defensive coordinator Les Herrin has resigned his post at North Carolina to return to Clemson to replace Tom Harper. Clemson's assistant head football coach and defensive line coach. Harper has been named administrative assistant for football operations. Harper had been Clemson's defensive line coach since 1981. He also has coached at Eastern Kentucky, Oklahoma State, Wake Forest, Iowa State, North Carolina and Virginia Tech during a 24-year career. "Tom Harper's expertise in the area of football has been a major reason for our success in recent years," Clemson coach Danny Ford said Monday. Harper succeeds Don Wade, who retired in January. Herrin served as the Tigers' linebacker coach between 1981 and 1984 and was with Clemson when it won the national championship in 1981. He left before the 1985 season to become linebacker coach at East Carolina. Herrin stepped up to defensive coordinator for the 1986 and 1987 seasons before leaving to coach outside linebackers at North Carolina in 1988. "The transition should be smooth because Les and Tom were always on the same wavelength when it came to defensive philosophies," Ford said. Clemson begins spring practice on Friday.

Deacs Add Brush To Their Coaching Staff

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Bob Brush, defensive coordinator and outside linebacker coach at the University of Tulsa since 1987, will join the coaching staff in a similar position at Wake Forest, Tulsa head coach Dave Rader says. Rader announced the promotion of assistant coaches Chris Thurmond and Pete McGinnis to handle Brush's responsibilities. Thurmond coaches the Hurricane's secondary and McGinnis handles the inside linebackers. Thurmond, who also serves as recruiting coordinator, has been at Tulsa for seven seasons, while McGinnis begins his third year. Brush, 44, has been coaching 21 years and has served on coaching staffs at Virginia Tech, Vanderbilt and West Texas State.

Charges Against Lavette Are Dropped

ATLANTA (AP) — Kidnapping charges against Robert Lavette, who set the all-time rushing mark at Georgia Tech and played with Atlanta and Dallas in the NFL, were dropped and he was freed on his own recognizance. Lavette, 25, who left Georgia Tech as its all-time leading rusher, receiver and scorer, was originally charged with kidnapping, battery and aggravated battery in connection with a Jan. 21 fight at an Atlanta hotel. Atlanta police spokesman Keith Williams said Lavette was arrested Monday at the auto agency where he works in connection with a fight between Lavette and Arlecia Shephard, 24. A security guard at the Hyatt Regency Hotel, Frank Pierce, 40, suffered a broken collarbone when he tried to break it up. At a court hearing Tuesday, Municipal Judge Andrew Mickle agreed to reduce the charges against Lavette to two misdemeanor counts of simple battery after Ms. Shephard sought to drop the kidnap charge. Lavette was released on his own recognizance pending a future court date, which was not set. Lavette was a fourth-round pick of the Dallas Cowboys in 1985. He became a free agent with Atlanta in 1988 but is no longer on the Falcons roster.

Jabbar Is Convicted By A Phoenix Judge

PHOENIX (AP) — A Phoenix Municipal Court judge convicted Los Angeles Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of two misdemeanor offenses stemming from a 10-month-old shoving incident in a shopping mall. Judge John L. Wiehn set sentencing for March 29. The charges stemmed from an April 21 run-in between with an Italian tourist, who police said was following Abdul-Jabbar at the mall with a video camera when the player turned and stiff-armed the camera.

Stewart Is Released From Hospital

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Missouri basketball coach Norm Stewart, who underwent surgery Feb. 14 for colon cancer and a diseased gall bladder, was released from a hospital, officials said. During the operation, doctors removed Stewart's gall bladder and one-third of his colon. Doctors said at the time that Stewart stood a 90 percent chance for full recovery but would probably not coach anymore this season.

Bengals Don't See A Return For Wilson

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Bengals said they have no interest in bringing back Stanley Wilson even if he is reinstated from his suspension for cocaine use. NFL spokesman Joe Browne said the league is still considering reinstating Wilson, but Bengals general manager Paul Brown said his team would not be interested in Wilson anyway. Wilson, 27, a former University of Oklahoma star drafted by the Bengals in 1983, was suspended for drug use on the eve of the Jan. 22 Super Bowl, which the Bengals lost 20-16 to San Francisco. "Stanley Wilson hurt his teammates and our team and all of us, and we certainly would never have any plans for him again," Brown said Monday. "We will have no other interest, regardless of what might happen."

Celtics Roll Past Hornets, 112-87

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — It was hard to believe the words that were coming out of Kevin McHale's mouth. "You can't expect to turn a switch on and play well in the playoffs," the veteran Celtics forward said after he scored 19 of his 21 points in the first half to lead Boston to a 112-87 rout of the Charlotte Hornets Tuesday night.

"We have to establish that we are a good team now," McHale said. "We need momentum. We have a good positive feeling about ourselves. That has a rebound effect on our young players."

Even though the Celtics have struggled to a 26-29 record this year, McHale's words seemed out of place. After all, it hasn't been that long since the Celtics were the 1985-86 NBA champions after posting a 67-15 record.

Many of the fans in the new Charlotte Coliseum Tuesday night also can remember the unmatched string of championship Celtics teams led by Bob Cousy, Bill Russell, Dave Cowens and Larry Bird.

But the Celtics are playing these days without the services of Bird, who is recuperating from surgery to both feet.

Last week, the Celtics traded veteran guard Danny Ainge and Brad Lohaus to Sacramento for 6-foot-11, 271-pound center Joe Kleine and 6-foot-9 forward Ed Pinckney. The trade was designed to beef up the Celtics' inside game.

"When you take away Danny Ainge it takes away the outside shot," McHale said. "Our strength is now on the inside, especially since we picked up a couple of active players."

Kleine finished with eight points and six rebounds in 19 minutes Tuesday night, while Pinckney had 9 points in 16 minutes.

Hornets coach Dick Harter said his players were outmanned by the bigger and stronger Boston forwards, who outrebounded the Hornets 51-36 Tuesday night and blocked seven shots.

"McHale and (Robert Parish) were blocking everything underneath and Kurt (Rambis) couldn't get anything going inside," he said.

As he applied ice bags to both knees in the Boston locker room, McHale admitted the addition of two big men gives veteran players like himself a needed rest.

"It's hard to play 45 minutes in this league," he said. "We're not spring chickens any more."

McHale and forward Reggie Lewis scored all of Boston's points in the first period as the Celtics took a 28-19 lead after one quarter.

The Celtics were ahead 33-27 with 7:51 remaining in the half when they staged a 26-4 run to break the game open. Parish had eight of his 16 points during that spree.

McHale had 19 of his 21 points in the first half, while Lewis got 15 of his 28.

While Lewis and McHale sparked the Boston offense in the first half, the Celtics' defense clamped down on the Hornets, who shot only 33 percent.

Charlotte's top scorers, Kelly Tripucka, Rex Chapman and Robert Reid, shot a combined 16-for-46, as the Celtics forwards closed down the lanes and forced the Hornets to shoot from the outside.

Tripucka led the Hornets with 21 points and Michael Holton added 16.

Cavaliers 115, Pistons 99 At Richfield, Ohio, Ron Harper made 11 of 16 field goals, mostly on fast breaks and in the low post to score 26 points to lead the Cavaliers' win.

Aguirre and Isiah Thomas scored 28 points each for Detroit, and Thomas added 13 assists.

Larry Nance scored 18 points and Mark Price had 17 for Cleveland.

Pacers 108, SuperSonics 106

Chuck Person led the way for Indiana with 45 points, but it was Detlef Schrempf who won it, breaking Indiana's 11-game road losing streak.

After Xavier McDaniel's jump shot tied it at 106 with nine seconds left, Schrempf took an inbounds pass, dribbled into the lane and made an off-balance one-hander.

Trail Blazers 139, Suns 134

Terry Porter, Jerome Kersey and Clyde Drexler were a three-man gang for the Blazers. Porter scored a season-high 34 points and had 12 assists, while Kersey had 21 of his 31 points in the second half. Drexler added 28 points and 11 rebounds, but missed getting his third consecutive triple-double by having nine assists.

Mavericks 111, Heat 110

At Miami, Rolando Blackman scored Dallas' final seven points, including a three-point play with three seconds left in overtime. The Heat blew a seven-point lead in the final 1:33 of OT.

76ers 123, Clippers 105

Rookie Hersey Hawkins scored a season-high 32 points and Charles Barkley added 23, sending Los Angeles to its 10th straight defeat.

Miami Continues Search For Coach

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — Gary Stevens faces at least one challenger in his bid to succeed former boss Jimmy Johnson as head coach at the University of Miami.

Washington State coach Dennis Erickson was interviewed Tuesday for the job, several Miami television stations reported. The visit with Athletic Director Sam Jankovich reportedly lasted six hours.

Erickson apparently won't be the last candidate to talk with Jankovich.

"He's got other guys I guess he's going to interview," said Stevens, who had a 7½-hour interview Monday. "He said he's going to interview a couple. I don't know who they are."

Stevens is the only coach to say publicly that he wants the job. Jankovich has declined to discuss the search publicly.

Several Miami players said last weekend that they wanted Stevens, an assistant with the Hurricanes since 1980, to become head coach if Johnson left. Miami quarterback Steve Walsh, who graduates in May but has a year of eligibility left, said he's turn pro if Johnson left and Stevens wasn't promoted.

Heavily recruited quarterback Bryan Fortay of East Brunswick, N.J., who signed a national letter of intent with Miami earlier this month, also said he wants to play for Stevens.

"If Coach Stevens is named the new head coach and the staff remains stable, this (Johnson's departure) might not affect me," Fortay said.

Jankovich has said players will not dictate who will be hired.

Miami begins spring practice Saturday, and Stevens is likely to serve as interim coach. Stevens, 45, has been considered in the past for head coaching jobs at Ohio State, East Carolina and Kent State, and he turned down the job at Western Kentucky.

Erickson, 41, has a career record of 50-31-1 in seven college seasons and was 9-3 last year, his second at Washington State. He is a pass-oriented coach and knows Jankovich well. Both men are from the Northwest.

Jim Livengood, Washington State athletic director, said Tuesday that he hasn't been approached by Miami officials for permission to talk to Erickson.

"Dennis is a Cougar. That's where it's at," Livengood said.

Louisiana State coach Mike Archer, regarded as a likely candidate because he was a player and assistant coach at Miami, apparently has not heard from Miami officials.

"I have to assume that they're not interested," LSU Athletic Director Joe Dean said. "And that's fine with me..."

"Mike's had an awful lot of conversations from people from Miami — people he's friends with. I think Mike thought (UM officials) would call based on those early conversations."

Archer said: "Until somebody contacts me, I'm not interested in the job."

Once this season is over, Pilgreen will begin contemplating which school to attend to play collegiately. She has yet to earn a 700 on the SAT, but has the required 2.00 grade point average in her core program. She said she plans to take the SAT again March 11.

"I definitely want to play college basketball," Pilgreen said. "Right now, Pembroke State and UNC-Wilmington are the only teams that have come to watch me play. But I haven't made up my mind where I want to go now."

Lady Jaguars Roll Past C.B. Aycock

BETHEL — Farmville Central's girls' basketball team easily advanced to the second round of the Eastern Plains Tournament by rolling past seventh-seeded C.B. Aycock 66-29 Tuesday.

The second-seeded Lady Jaguars improved to 16-7 with the win, while the Lady Falcons ended their year with a 4-19 record.

Brenda Reid led the way for Farmville with 18 points, while Felicia Barrett added 17 and Vickie Best 10.

Barrett helped the Lady Jaguars jump out to a 17-8 lead by the end of the first quarter by scoring nine of her points in the period. Marti Anderson, who led C.B. Aycock with 12 points, scored all eight of the Lady Falcons' points in the opening quarter.

The Lady Jaguars built the lead to 32-14 by halftime and to 46-24 by the end of the third quarter.

Best, who scored eight of her points in the final quarter, then led the Jaguars on a 20-5 run over the final eight minutes to put the lid on the rout.

Farmville Central will face South Lenoir in the second round Thursday at 6:30 p.m. South Lenoir downed Pamlico, 46-34, in their game.

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke High School, seeded second in the Northeastern Conference girls' basketball tournament field, struggled to a 44-42 victory over seventh-seeded Williamston Tuesday night.

Williamston eased out into a 7-4 lead in the first period, but Williamston came back to tie it up at 15-15 at intermission.

In the third quarter, Roanoke inched ahead, taking a 27-25 lead into the last period. In that, the two teams matched points to the end.

Joyce Outlaw led Williamston with 22 points while Germaine Wallace added 10. Kim Hawkins led Williamston with a game-high 28, with Topeaka Manning adding 10.

Roanoke improves its record to 15-6 with the win, while Williamston ends its season with a 6-15 record.

Roanoke advances to the semifinals of the tournament on Friday. The Lady Redskins will meet the winner of tonight's game between Northampton East and Plymouth in the semifinals.

In a boys' game Tuesday night, Northampton East defeated Roanoke Rapids, 58-42.

HAVELOCK — Washington High School romped to a 45-19 victory over North Lenoir in the opening round of the Coastal Conference girls' basketball tournament Tuesday night.

North Lenoir hung with Washington for the first eight minutes of the game, then disappeared. The score was knotted at 12-12 at the end of the first period, but Washington jumped on the Lady Hawks, 15-2, in the second period and held a 27-14 halftime lead.

They stretched that to 41-17 in the third period and eased through the final quarter.

Crystal Lupton led Washington with 16 points while Rolanda Kittrell had 10 to pace North Lenoir.

Washington is now 12-8 overall while North Lenoir ends its season with an 0-22 record.

Referees Need Some Protection

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Legislation is needed to protect referees of athletic contests from punches, lawsuits or flying bottles, sports officials say in backing such a measure in Tennessee.

"The purpose of having referees is to make sure there are at least two sane people in the basketball arena," former state Transportation Commissioner Dale Kelly, who refereed NCAA tournament games including the Final Four, has said.

It's getting harder to find people to fill that role at high school games, said Jim Wright, commissioner for the Middle Tennessee Basketball Officials Association.

"We're running a lot of young people out of officiating because they don't want to take the heat," Wright said Tuesday. "The shortage is becoming greater all over the state."

A bill before the Legislature would make it a misdemeanor to attack a referee at a ball game and would protect sports officials from lawsuits over judgment calls.

"It will impress upon these people at these games they cannot touch the officials," said Bob Baldrige, assistant executive director of the Tennessee Secondary School Athletic Association.

Chocowinity Rolls Past Bear Grass

BELHAVEN — Chocowinity jumped on top of Bear Grass early and rolled to a 83-54 win in opening round action from the Tobacco Belt 1-A Conference basketball tournament Tuesday night.

Dewayne Tripp scored seven of his 12 points in the first quarter while Otis Harrell and Sean Crawford added six each as the Indians jumped out to a 23-13 lead en route to the win.

Crawford led Chocowinity with 29 points while Harrell added 17.

Chocowinity moves to 10-11 on the year and moves on to second round play against Belhaven at Bath tonight.

Rodney Little's 18 points led the Bears, 13-10.

In other TBC games Tuesday night, top-seeded Belhaven downed Bath, 69-47, number two North Edgecombe topped Creswell, 73-51, and #6 Mattamuskeet upset #3 Columbia, 63-52.

quarter and captured a 59-47 victory over West Carteret in the first round of the Coastal Conference basketball tournament Tuesday night.

Washington ran out to a 16-11 lead in the first period, but scored only seven points in the second period as the Patriots came back to knot the score at 23-23.

But the Pam Pack regained its composure in the third period, pushing out into a 40-33 lead. They finished off West Carteret, 19-14, in the final quarter.

Rod Gorham led Washington with 18 points while Jason Smith had 16 and Walter Rasby, 12. West Carteret was led by John McLean with 12.

Washington improves to 15-7 on the year while West Carteret closes out its campaign with a 3-20 record.

In the other boys' game Tuesday night, Havelock, the third seed, beat West Craven, 69-51, and will meet Washington on Thursday night at 8 p.m. in the semifinals.

College Education May Be Within Your Means

By Allen P. Splete
For THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Confused about the real cost of college? You're not alone. According to a recent Gallup Poll, a majority of people aged 13-21 years think that a college education costs more than it actually does. Those polled also have misconceptions about financial aid: How much there is, where it comes from and who gets it.

Because private colleges have so many special features — small classes, good faculty-student ratio, solid liberal arts curriculum — many prospective students and their parents think they are financially out of reach.

That's not true. Financial aid directors believe it's time to change students' and parents' attitudes toward financial aid and the application process. They are trying to get the word out: The real cost of education at a private college is less than meets the eye. That's because there is a big difference between the stated price and what families actually pay.

Here are the facts:
Many students actually pay a "discount price" to go to college. The price an institution charges for tuition is often not borne entirely by the student or his family. In one sense, the entire "cost-price issue" comes down to a question of semantics. Price is the amount the college charges, as seen in catalogs and college guidebooks. Cost is the amount the family actually pays. Consider these numbers:

— About 65 percent of the 2 million undergraduates enrolled at independent colleges and universities in the United States received financial aid for the 1986-87 school year, the last for which figures are available.

— According to the most recent survey by the College Board, the average annual tuition and fees at 4-year independent colleges is $7,110.

— The average amount of aid for full-time private college students is $5,617.

— The College Board reports that more than $24 billion is available from all financial aid sources this year.

To sum up, about half of all undergraduates receive aid, and the average amount is about half the cost of attending college.

For example, 80 percent of the students at Concordia College in Moorhead, Minn., do not pay full price because of aid programs, outside grants, federal grants and borrowed money.

The average financial aid package at Millikin University in Decatur, Ill., is $7,848 and nearly 100 percent of the families with incomes of $39,000 or less qualify for aid.

At Gettysburg College in Pennsylvania, about 60 percent of all students are on financial aid; 37 percent of those receive aid from the college itself. Awards range from $500 to $15,360.

At Buena Vista College in Storm Lake, Iowa, 98.9 percent of all freshmen who applied for financial aid in 1987-88 are receiving financial assistance. The average package — gift, loan, and work — for freshmen is $7,465.

With numbers like these, it becomes clear that most families

If money is all you lack, an education at a private college or university could be within your grasp. You'll need the tenacity to survive the tedious task of completing countless student aid forms and the poise to get through innumerable interviews. But in the end, according to Allen P. Splete, president of the Council of Independent Colleges, it could cost you a lot less than a land-grant school.

are not paying the full price of the college listed in the catalog. Besides financial aid, parents can also choose from a variety of paying plans. They can pay through a combination of incomes — past, present and future.

No one should be deterred from trying for the college of his or her choice because of cost.

"Our message to students is that they should select a college based on academic programs and other factors without regard to cost," says Roger Miller, president of Millikin University. "After they select the college they like best, they can find out if the aid package will make it affordable."

Never assume you are ineligible for financial aid until you check, writes Kathleen Brouder, author of "The College Cost Book."

"In 1987-88, almost half of the nation's freshmen were judged to need financial aid for college," she writes, "and 93 percent of them received some financial aid. Financial aid is designed to fill the gap between what you can afford and what it costs to attend a particular college. And high-cost colleges generally have more of their own aid to offer than less expensive colleges."

The issue of college costs has raised questions about the value of higher education. But, according to recent studies, liberal arts graduates have much to look forward to after graduation. A recent study funded by the Corporate Council on Liberal Arts, which surveyed 535 major corporations and 505 middle and senior managers of large companies, shows that liberal arts students are perceived as bringing exceptional communications, leadership, creative and cognitive skills to the workplace, and that liberal arts graduates are sought out for their potential advancement in the private sector.

Now, more than ever, college is an investment that pays off in the future. According to the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education (CASE), college graduates will earn about 50 percent to 60 percent more during their lifetimes than will high school graduates. The average lifetime income of college graduates is expected to exceed that of non-graduates by more than $600,000.

The Wall Street Journal reports that, in 1986, male college graduates in the work force made 39.2 percent more than high school graduates — up from 27.9 percent in 1979. For women college grads, the difference rose to 40.5 percent from 27.9 percent.

Awareness of college costs has taught families to be less intimidated about financial aid. "Financial aid isn't always a piece of cake, but parents shouldn't be throwing their arms up in despair," says Dale

Thornton of Concordia College. "It's sad when a young mind is talented or needs to be developed and college is ruled out because of lack of money. That's not good for our society as a whole."

"The saddest is the family that doesn't use financial aid. If we can lead them to it, we've accomplished a major social good."

How It's Done

At Millikin University

DECATUR, Ill. — Geoffrey Schoonover didn't find Millikin University, Millikin found him.

As an A student and outstanding athlete, Geoffrey was recruited by several colleges and universities for football and track. But he chose Millikin because he wanted a small college, even though as a Division III NCAA school it couldn't provide the athletic scholarships that the bigger schools could.

"My parents and I realized that it was expensive," says Geoffrey, a 19-year-old sophomore. "We realized that we'd have to go out of our way, make sacrifices. But my parents were all for it. Right away, we looked into financial aid."

The Schoonovers live about 50 miles from the university, in Bloomington, Ill. Geoffrey's father is a press operator, and his mother is a bookkeeper and receptionist at a printing company. Based on his parents' combined income of $39,469 and the fact that Geoffrey is the only child in college, his parents' estimated contribution was $5,338.

Total cost for the 1988-89 year at Millikin is $12,197, including $7,771 for tuition and fees, $3,086 room and board and $1,340 for books, travel and miscellaneous expenses.

To supplement his parents' contribution, Geoffrey received a package based on need and his strong academic record. He received a Millikin University Scholarship for $3,065 and an Illinois Guaranteed Student Loan for $2,625. The remaining $1,169 was paid by Geoffrey with earnings from a campus job.

Thus far, Geoffrey is more than pleased with his choice. "Taking out student loans hasn't bothered me. Ninety-five percent of the graduating seniors at Millikin find jobs. I think that I'll be able to find a job and be able to pay back my loans," he says.

Geoffrey is an elementary education major who hopes to teach and coach. "I'd rather spend more on college," he says, "knowing that I can get a job, a good education and develop as a person."

At Concordia College

MOORHEAD, Minn. — Matthew Peterson, a senior from Omaha, Neb., discovered Concordia College through his interest in German. As a freshman, he attended the Institute of German Studies, an intensive year-long language program associated with Concordia.

"After that, I knew that's where I wanted to go, and my parents and I just worked from there. We filled out financial aid information, and Concordia sat down and put together a package for us," says Matthew, 22, who is studying German, business administration and communications.

His aid package was based on his parents' income of about $27,000 and the fact that he was an only child. His package included a merit scholarship through his high school, a faculty scholarship from Concordia, federal loans and grants and a work-study position.

To receive some of the merit scholarships, Matthew had to maintain a 3.5 grade point average. His average is about 3.86, and he admits that having to get good grades helped spur him on.

The summer before his senior year, Matthew's family situation changed. The firm his father worked for went out of business. His father, unemployed, would be unable to pay any college expenses. Matthew contacted Concordia's financial aid office and explained. "The school had compassion for the situation," says Matthew.

His parents' contribution was eliminated and several of his aid packages were altered with increased student loans and work study.

"They pulled money out of a hat for me, money that was given based on need," says Matthew. "I was lucky."

Here's how Matthew's senior year financial aid package was set up:

The cost of attendance at Concordia was $10,500, including $7,155 for tuition and fees, $2,245 for room and board and $1,100 miscellaneous expenses.

Matthew was able to contribute $1,469 from his own savings. As in previous years, he received a $2,500 Concordia Faculty Scholarship, a $1,000 North Dakota Friends of Concordia Scholarship, a $600 C400 Dividend Endowed Scholarship and a rural scholarship for $1,200. His college work-study was increased to $850, and he received a $2,881 Stafford Loan.

Matthew speaks confidently about his experience and encourages other students to seek help from their college's financial aid director.

"Looking at the cost of attending college is not really indicative of how much it really costs," he says. "What I pay now at Concordia is less than what I would pay at a state university. Before you turn a college down, find out about aid. Some schools give better aid than others. I couldn't have gotten an education any cheaper."

After graduation, Matthew plans to look for a management position using his communications skills. His long-term goal includes working for a German-speaking firm.

As for repaying his loans, he says, "I don't look at it as borrowing, but as investing in the future. The money you get now will help you get the position you need to pay it back."

At Buena Vista College

STORM LAKE, Iowa — When it comes to understanding financial aid, Martin Gallagher believes that being a part of a big family helps.

He has five brothers and sisters and his older siblings, he says, helped pave the way through the financial aid maze.

"One of my brothers graduated from Buena Vista, and another is a year ahead of me," says Martin, a 19-year-old sophomore whose family recently moved from Strawberry Point, Iowa, to Storm Lake, where Buena Vista is located. "My brother got financial aid, so when I applied

ECU Fraternity Lends Helping Hand, On Wheels, To Student

By Karen E. Simmons
ECU NEWS BUREAU

Sylvia Isler of Greenville will no longer have to rely on buses and taxis for transportation, thanks to the generosity of an East Carolina University fraternity.

The brothers of Lambda Chi Alpha presented Isler a car last week. The 1977 Buick was purchased with proceeds from area fund-raisers as well as donations from alumni brothers in other parts of the country.

The fraternity was contacted by Dr. James R. (Jim) Taylor of Washington, a former Lambda Chi Alpha member and director of ECU's Remedial Education Activity Program (REAP), where Isler is employed as a developmental specialist. REAP is a developmental day care center for children with disabilities.

According to Taylor, Ms. Isler supports herself and her grandmother on her salary and is pursuing a degree from ECU in special education by taking classes at night.

"Sylvia has been poor all her life," Taylor said. "Last semester she couldn't afford to buy the book she needed for her class and had to take taxis to the library to use their copy."

The car came as a total surprise to Ms. Isler, who was moved to tears. "I really appreciate this from the bottom of my heart," she said. "It will mean so much to me to have a feeling of independence for a change and not have to depend on someone else to come and get me."

In addition to the car, the fraternity also presented Ms. Isler its first Burton Blatt Optimism Award, which is to be presented annually to an ECU faculty or staff member for outstanding research, service or teaching in the area of mental retardation.

Dr. Blatt, centennial professor and dean of the school of education at Syracuse University, was known for his efforts at establishing a more accepting society for people with disabilities. At his death in 1985, his vita listed 291 published contributions to the field of special education. Taylor knew Blatt and suggested that the fraternity establish the award.

"We wanted to present this award to someone we feel portrays the optimistic outlook that Burton Blatt showed throughout his life," said Paul Lawson, Lambda Chi president. "After listening to Sylvia Isler, who gave us a very moving speech about the effects of poverty, we decided to give the award to her."

Ms. Isler's speech inspired the fraternity to assist children with mental retardation by getting involved with HELP Corps, a volunteer organization that Taylor recently established. The goal of the organization, Taylor said, is to eliminate the devastating effects of poverty.

"Seventy-five percent of children with retardation come from poverty stricken areas,"

Taylor said. "There is so much poverty in eastern North Carolina that if we can get the youth involved, we can make a difference."

Two brothers who are enrolled at REAP have already benefitted from the fraternity's commitment. Several fraternity members traveled to their home last Sunday to remove ice-torn limbs from the roof of their home. The chapter also purchased clothing and shoes for the boys.

"We're always looking for service projects," Lawson said. "We think this is a good opportunity to help out kids that need help."

Summer Field School Will Hold Classes Under Water

By George A. Threewitts
ECU NEWS BUREAU

A graveyard of sunken Civil War ships near Wilmington will be surveyed this summer by underwater archaeologists from East Carolina University.

The 10th annual ECU Summer Field School in Maritime History and Underwater Archaeology will be held June 28 to Aug. 4 in waters near the historic port city.

During the Civil War, Wilmington was one of the main supply ports for the Confederacy and a blockade by Union gunboats sank many of the sleek, British-built steamers that tried to run the blockade with supplies. Wreck sites for about 30 of the blockade runners have been found.

"We're going to be looking at these wrecks in an area extending from Topsail Inlet to Shallotte Inlet," said Gordon P. Watts, co-director of the ECU graduate program in Maritime History and Underwater Research.

He said the area contains at least 30 known wrecks of blockade runners and research has shown that there may be another half dozen undiscovered wrecks. In addition, he said, recent research in England has indicated some of the known wrecks may be identified incorrectly.

"We will be looking for some new sites and will be trying to confirm the identity of some of the shipwreck sites," said Watts.

ECU has conducted a summer field school in underwater archaeology since 1979 as an introduction to maritime history and to teach the basics of underwater research. About 10 students will be selected for the project. Past field schools have attracted students from throughout the country.

"It will be an opportunity for students to see a variety of wreck sites," Watts said.

The summer program will work in assistance with the Underwater Archaeology Unit of the N.C. Department of Archives and History at Fort Fisher. Much of the diving will take place offshore in waters ranging from 15 feet to about 40 feet in depth.

Watts said the blockade runners were selected because the ECU program wants to continue research on shipwrecks in North Carolina. The last six field schools have been held in Virginia and Georgia.

Wilmington was chosen because the Civil War wrecks relate to an ECU study in Bermuda of the wrecks of two blockade runners. Both vessels had been bound for Wilmington in 1863 and 1864 when they struck a reef near the Bermuda coast and sank.

During the Civil War the British, in helping to send supplies to the Confederacy, used Bermuda as a port to transfer cargo from large merchant ships to the small but faster blockade runners. Many of the blockade running steamers were bound for ports at Wilmington and Charleston.

Watts said the field school in Wilmington will locate wreck sites using a magnetometer and side scan sonar. Divers will then be sent down to inspect the condition of the wreck site and to look for clues that will help archaeologists make positive identification of the wreck. Some of the wrecks will also be photographed with an underwater video camera.

Watts said that arrangements for the school such as housing for the students and the use of an additional boat are still being made along with the selection of students. The field school is open to college students interested in underwater research and maritime history. Students who expect to dive at the sites must have SCUBA certification and their own diving equipment.

PBS 'Great Performances' Feature Linda Ronstadt's Songs In Spanish

By Mary Campbell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Linda Ronstadt has sung rock, country, standards and even opera once, but she found yet a new style on a recent tour, singing an evening's worth of songs only in Spanish.

Even people who didn't understand a word of Spanish enjoyed the show, thanks to Ronstadt's involved performance, the colorful staging and the mariachi band and singers who performed with her.

"Canciones de mi Padre" ("Songs of my Father") is also a record album that recently won a Grammy Award as "best Mexican-American performance." Ronstadt sang a selection on the nationally televised Grammy Awards show.

Now "Canciones de mi Padre" is a television show, airing Friday as part of PBS' "Great Performances" series.

"It was important to structure the show so you wouldn't have to understand Spanish or anything about Mexican culture," said Ronstadt, who says she understands every word she sings, but doesn't speak conversational Spanish.

Does the television special mark the finale of Ronstadt's "Mexican phase?" She says an emphatic no. "I'm never going to stop doing it. It's great music. There's a huge amount of it. I just scratched the surface."

"Mexican music is the first music

I ever heard and learned."

Mexico provides much of Ronstadt's heritage. At the beginning of the TV show, she is pictured with her father, though he isn't identified. Both he and she were born in Tucson. She says, "Some say that part of Arizona was stolen from Mexico. I'm one of the ones who thinks it was stolen. His father was born in Mexico. My family has been ranchers for generations in the Sonora Desert region."

"My great-great-grandmother was born in Mexico, too, in the San Gabriel Valley. That's now California. The U.S. got away with California, too."

"This Mexican culture is pretty firmly ensconced out here. People have a tendency to forget that."

The fact that Ronstadt sounds like a German instead of a Spanish name doesn't mean somebody changed the name, the singer says. "Mexico is a melting pot like the United States. There was a migration of French; they ruled Mexico awhile. There was a migration of Germans when they discovered mining. My great-great-grandfather was a mining engineer from Germany. He married a Mexican woman whose family had been there a long time."

Mexican music has a lot of long-held notes and falsetto breaks. "I grew up listening to this. I learned how to do it," Ronstadt says. "I used some of it on the end of 'Blue Bayou.'"

"I've been fooling around with this music a long time. I've been figuring out a way I could record it and present it to North Americans."

First, she and her father wrote "Hasten Down the Wind," which she sang, mainly in Spanish, in American pop style. "What I wanted to do was traditional Mexican — stop fooling around and not make any concessions at all to the pop market," she said. "I wanted to do it with original arrangements and bands I loved. And I did it, and it worked. I thought it was strong enough to bridge the gap."

She says, "If you listen to country music out of Texas there's a great similarity. It is rural music. A lot of vocal tradition is shared by American and Mexican country music."

"And Roy Rogers' cowboy suit — the embroidery, yoked shirt and flared pant legs — is Mexican, a regional style in northern Sonora. People don't know that."

All costumes and stage design are Mexican, Ronstadt says. "I didn't want anything Hollywood or Broad-

TV 'Roseanne' Has Special Appeal To Factory Workers

By Mary Corey
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BALTIMORE — Ask female factory workers at Tuscarora Plastics here if they would change places with Roseanne Conner, the blue-collar heroine of the ABC sitcom, "Roseanne," and the "no's" come quicker than you can punch a time clock at shift's end.

"We don't have to trade places with her," explains Theresa McClusky, 45, of Dundalk, Md. "We are her."

Let Ms. McClusky count the ways. There is Roseanne's flannel shirt, her aversion to housecleaning, her love of a good game of bowling and a cold beer.

That kinship helps explain why Ms. McClusky, as well as many other female blue-collar workers, tune in Tuesday nights to share a laugh with the indefatigable wife, mother and factory worker whose comedy is of the queen-size variety. The show has attracted viewers in such numbers that it has consistently finished in the Top 10 Nielsen ratings since premiering in the fall.

"I like her because she's not perfect," says Pamela Leisinger, international representative for the United Auto, Agricultural Implement, and Aerospace Workers in Detroit. "I enjoy 'Designing Women,' like 'Kate and Allie' and laugh hysterically at 'Murphy Brown,' but none of these women's lives are anywhere near mine. ... 'Roseanne' seems very real to me."

So real, in fact, that many blue-collar women who watch the show — as well as other viewers who simply relate to the character's struggle to balance work and family — often experience a serious case of deja vu.

In a recent groundbreaking episode, Roseanne's 11-year-old daughter Darlene began her menstrual cycle. "I put my daughter who's 10 in front of the TV, and we watched it together," says Dottie Jones, assistant director of the UAW's Women's Department. "This is the kind of thing mothers struggle with. And the father's reaction was typical when he said, 'Way to go, kid.' ... Isn't that real life?"

"I put in eight hours a day at the factory, and then I come home and put in another eight hours. ... And you don't do nothin'!" Roseanne scolds her husband Dan, who works infrequently as an independent contractor.

When he volunteers to fix dinner, she coos, "Oh, but honey, you fixed dinner three years ago."

"Mom, I got a knot in my shoe," laments her youngest child and only son D.J.

"Wear loafers," she replies.

But comedian-actress Roseanne Barr softens the sting in these zingers with a generous dose of motherly love. In real life the wife of a former postal worker who raised three children in the family's trailer home, she explained the premise for the show in The New York Times by saying, "I want to do a show that reflects how people really live. ... I want people to watch it and go 'Wow, that happens to me.'"

Many women see an implicit message of hope in the show. After each episode, Glenda Strickland, a 48-year-old press operator and packer at Tuscarora Plastics, says she comes away believing, "You can make it if you try." So what if "making it" means living in a cluttered home where the furniture looks more worn than new and where the staircase is littered with toys, pillows and other debris of domestic life.

"The whole environment is very similar to what it's really like," Ms. Jones says. "I look at those living-room settings and I have flashbacks. I see my living room. I'm not into decorating. ... It has what you'd call a lived-in atmosphere."

Seeing that setting has made some women feel less embarrassed about their own imperfect homes. "It helps that they don't have a palace," says Deborah Duffy, 37, who works in the quality control department of

Spy Author Doesn't Live Out His Parts

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PORTOLA VALLEY, Calif. — Fans of author Alfred Coppel might be surprised to know he seldom wears a trench coat, de rigueur for spies and reporters, his favorite subjects.

An even bigger surprise is that he has no practical experience in either intelligence work or journalism.

"However, I did major in journalism at Stanford (University) and worked in public relations after World War II," said the author of 26 books, including "Show Me a Hero," "Thirty Four East" and his latest, "A Land of Mirrors" (Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, $18.95).

As for espionage, a suggestion that he's been on the cloak-and-dagger circuit only brings a laugh from Coppel, 67, who lives in a two-story rustic home in this exclusive San Francisco Peninsula community.

The writer admits that in the 1950s, when caught in a "fit of patriotism," he offered his services to the CIA. He was interviewed but was never contacted again.

Coppel, a P-38 pilot in World War II, wondered why.

"In 1961, when a brigade of poor sods stormed ashore at the Bay of Pigs without air cover, I stopped asking," he said.

The alleged CIA connection has haunted Coppel and, he said, he has paid a price.

"For the last 30 years the critical establishment has become less part of the literary world than of the world of media and politics," he said. A conservative writer, according to Coppel, is not likely to be invited to appear on network television shows.

The literary establishment suffers from what Coppel calls "slavish liberalism."

For that matter, so do most reporters, he says. Just read "A Land of Mirrors," a tight suspense yarn about the rivalry between CIA and KGB agents that is rooted in the Vietnam War and serves as an indictment of the mass media.

The villain is Jean Thierry, a French journalist who uses his job as a cover for his KGB work. The book is filled with lines such as these:

"The press hated the whole war effort. ..."

"The army was more the enemy than the Vietcong. ..."

"The media people made a separate peace with the enemy after the Tet offensive. ..."

Don't get the impression that the CIA is always sitting pretty. One of the most repulsive characters in "A Land of Mirrors" is CIA agent Charlie Blaisdell.

Because his books carry a tone of authority, it's easy to see how some people might surmise that Coppel's been a spy. But it's just a matter of keeping your eyes and ears open, claims the author who said many of his characters are drawn from life.

"My aging gone-to-fat CIA field man is a synthesis of intelligence officers I have known," he said.

Some characters are pure fiction, of course.

TOXIC AVENGER II

Students Get Taste Of Working

By David Smollar
LAT/WP NEWS SERVICE

SAN DIEGO — For many people who eat at the Hungry Tiger Cafe on the campus of Morse High School, it is just a nice little place for an inexpensive but tasty breakfast or lunch.

After all, there are few places in town for 2-inch-thick French toast "made from butter bread, dipped in egg, milk and cinnamon batter, toasted golden brown and served with butter and syrup," all for $1. Or the luncheon menu's fish sandwich and chips for $2. "delectable tidbits of breaded Atlantic Ocean cod, served on a toasted bun, served with french fries, tartar sauce, malt vinegar and a slice of lemon."

Math aide Fumi Marquez is one of many faculty members who choose the Hungry Tiger each day over the regular cafeteria food.

Said Marquez as she wolfed down a Tigerburger with cheese: "There is no competition."

To the Morse faculty and staff, and school guests who make up the restaurant's clientele, the attentive, though inexperienced, student employees who prepare and serve the food enhance the already informal, unpretentious atmosphere.

Only after several visits to the Hungry Tiger — and the chance to talk and watch the students and their instructor in action — do people begin to perceive the larger role this unusual vocational education course plays.

For Dewayne Schilling, who founded the two-semester course 17 years ago and has shaped it ever since, his goal with the 90 or more students he teaches annually is not primarily to train legions of future food service.

"Sure, you can't lose knowing how to cook and prepare food," said Schilling, who, before returning to college for his teaching credential, enjoyed a food-service career in the Air Force, working for a while on the presidential jet, Air Force One, for Lyndon B. Johnson.

"But my philosophy is rather to show these kids how to find jobs, the mechanics of staying on the job and being successful, how to work with people and how to develop positive attitudes toward people and life.

"With that emphasis, they can go into the food business or any other business, work part-time in cooking while going to college, whatever. It's a win-win situation."

Add to Schilling's philosophy his caring but firm attitude toward students, and the recipe is complete for a course that shows how vocational education can coexist with — even complement — the so-called basic-skills curriculum of English, math and social studies at a time when job-related study has come under fire.

"We always perceive academics and vocational courses as either/or," said Shirley Weber, a San Diego city schools trustee. "I think that the Hungry Tiger shows we can have both and they can complement each other. We do need these functional courses, but what I don't want are situations where students are put only into (vocational education courses) and not given other options."

"This is a great program," teacher Connie Phillips said between bites of Hungry Tiger chili recently. "Dewayne has accomplished things for his students that you wouldn't believe. These kids learn about math, work ethics, politeness as much here as in any other classroom."

Schilling does all this while shuttling from the dining room, where he guides students on how to approach customers, to the well-equipped but frenetic kitchen, where students at the short-order grill tackle the art of mixing pancake batter while others handle vats of carrot cake mix near the ovens.

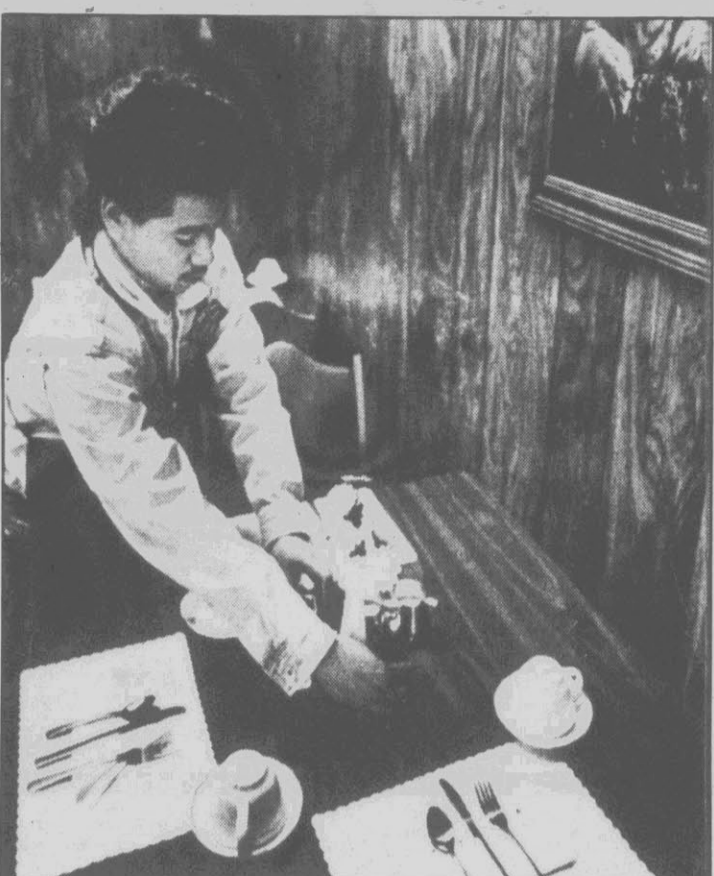

Senior Eric Fernandez was waiting on tables recently as part of his two-hour-a-day course work at the Hungry Tiger. "I took the course because I wanted some job experience in any category, and I also wanted to raise my grade-point average," he said.

Fernandez credited Schilling with showing him how to prepare for a job and present himself in a positive manner.

"I think that also I've been helped with my other courses," the soft-spoken Fernandez said. "Mr. Schilling stresses teamwork, Learning how to work with other people, how you should never give up on any work, that you should try hard, and that you can make new friends."

Fernandez plans to attend college next year and might consider a career in the military.

Vocational education has been criticized strongly in recent years for emphasizing too much training for specific occupations and for not stressing enough links to academics.

Eric Fernandez sets the table at the Hungry Tiger

Academic core-class requirements for graduation have increased in districts nationwide, leaving less time for students to take vocational classes. Educators expected that only those classes flexible enough to adapt to the educational reform movement will survive.

"I know about the criticism; but, at the same time, 85 percent of the student population probably is not going to college," Schilling said.

"I'm not saying don't teach algebra, no way am I saying that. But I am saying that for some students, why not set up algebra or science like our class is structured, where we have class work instruction in the first semester, and then in the second semester we apply it. You could measure angles on buildings or understand decibels as they correlate to the kids' music."

Schilling said that success with his course requires that students perform as well as they do in their core classes. When Schilling teaches baking, he emphasizes that correct measurements and formulas are critical to a decent cake or blueberry muffin.

"Baking is an exact science, and the kids then begin to see a relationship between school and success in life, and they'll lean back and say, 'Yeah, I should remember this,' instead of asking about the relevance of this and that. ... We reuse and relearn things every day here, and I often ask them to try the same task in a different way the next day."

Not that the students innately pick up on the method behind Schilling's madness. "At 16 or 17 years old, a lot of kids don't know where they want to be," he said. "It's only a year or two later when so many come back to tell me they got a lot out of the class."

Language Lesson Comes From Paper

Dear Abby: A little while ago, I took a break from my job of reading and grading essays written by high school juniors. Their grammar, spelling and punctuation defy description — but with the mail you get, you probably have a pretty fair idea.

Anyway, I relaxed for a few minutes, scanning headlines and reading Dear Abby, and there it was: "Confidential to Eunice: All men do not cheat on their wives. But it's a fairly safe bet that the man who says they do, cheats on his."

Abby, I believe what you meant to say was that not all men cheat on their wives, since what you did say stated that there weren't any men who cheat on their wives, and, unfortunately, we all know better than that.

Forgive me for being so picky, but I used a lot of red ink today. — Adele Christensen, California School Teacher

Dear Ms. Christensen: I forgive you for being so "picky," and regret that my editor lacked the pickiness to pick up on this error.

Thus far only you and another sharp-eyed San Francisco Chronicle reader have written to correct me. He wrote:

Dear Abby: There you go again. Perhaps you meant to say, "Not all men cheat on their wives." What you have said is like saying, "All women writing advice columns do not say it that way." (Some do, including your sister.) — Jerry Thompson

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Dear Jerry: It figures. We both cut the same classes.

Dear Abby: I want to thank you for your quiz about homosexuality in which you debunked many myths. I am sure you educated many people, but, Abby, you write about gays as though they were another species, as if the reader had never known any, as if there were none among your readers. The fact is, we are your readers. We are also your sons and daughters, your grandchildren, your brothers, sisters, cousins, aunts, uncles, mothers and fathers.

We are your neighbors, your teachers, your supermarket checker, your stockbroker, your plumber, your mail carrier, your nurse, your doctor or your lawyer. In short, we are people you know, and often people you love.

Because people often confuse effeminacy in men and masculinity in women with homosexuality, most are not aware how many gays they come in contact with every day.

If they knew, and stopped thinking about us as strangers or strange creatures, it would go a long way toward helping solve many of the problems gay men and women face in our society. — Gay In Alabama

WHEN CHILDREN MISBEHAVE

Many times in understanding and defusing the misbehavior of our children, we need to take a close look at the marriages from which these misbehaving children come. Therapists often find that children "act out" in a misguided attempt to keep their parents from focusing on marital issues.

All too often children are highly successful in identifying themselves as the family "problem." Parents can be confused and angry when a counselor suggests examining the marriage in order to resolve the child's problems. This suggestion may raise some feelings of guilt in parents and many times results in the child's behavior becoming worse as he or she tries to hang onto his or her role as family protector.

Families caught up in this pattern may need to seek long-term assistance so that they can address the deep-seated causes of their problems and give the child enough of a sense of safety to become able to step out of the "protector" role.

Flame Stitch Is Fun Craft

Pat's Pointers
Pat Trexler

Try your hand at weaving an afghan. It's an easy-to-learn, fun craft that involves weaving pre-cut strands of yarn into a mesh cloth, with no knitting or crocheting involved. The end result is a 42-by-65-inch afghan (including fringes) with a bold flame stitch pattern in four colors. Even those who do not knit or crochet will find this project quick to complete and super-easy.

To obtain directions for weaving the woven afghan, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-022689 with $2 and a long, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

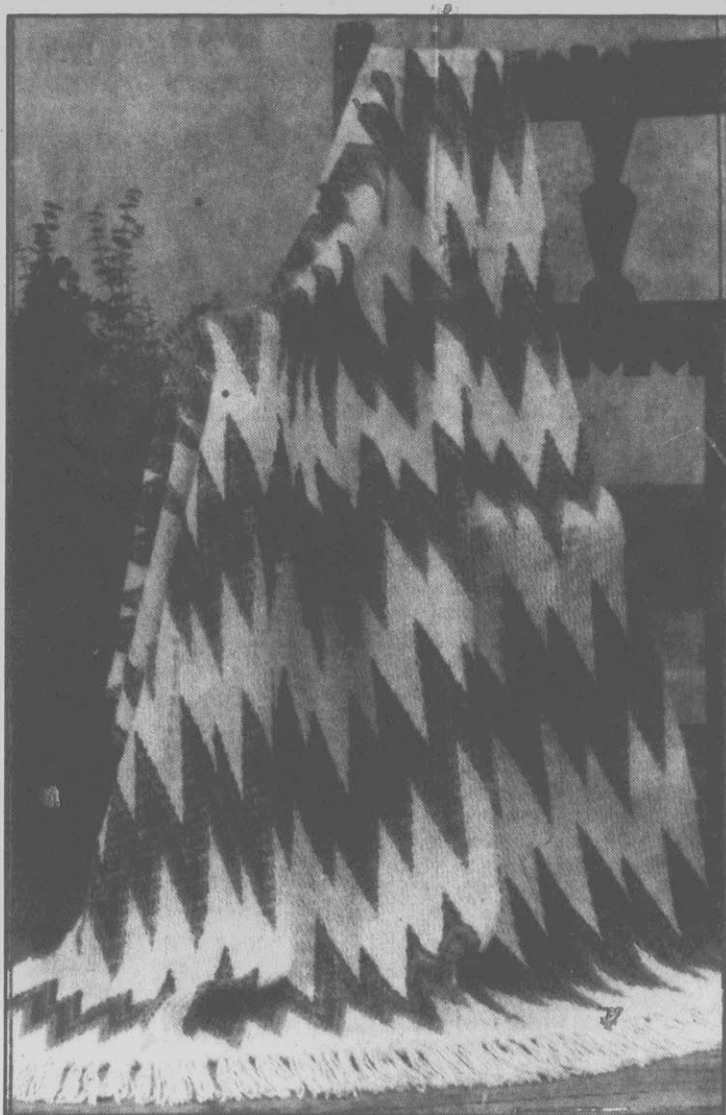

Or you may order Kit No. N-022689 by sending a check or money order for $19.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions, needles and yarn in shades of blue.

Charts used in weaving the woven afghan are almost identical to ones used in Florentine or Bargello needlepoint, and the results are equally striking and satisfying. The primary difference is the space between the meshes.

The cloth consists — as does needlepoint canvas — of holes and meshes. The meshes are the vertical and horizontal threads. This type of design in needlepoint is usually worked on fine canvas with 14 or more meshes per inch, but because the weaving fabric has less than four meshes per inch, your work goes much more quickly.

Dear Pat: I know that you are always encouraging us to enjoy needlework in our spare time, but I would like to put my two cents worth in too! I'm one of those people who always has four or five projects going at once — because of this habit of starting a new one before others are finished — some never are completed.

Some might think this is a terrible

Woven afghan features flame stitch waste of time and materials, but to my way of thinking, I haven't wasted a thing. For the pleasure and the therapy are the most important things. The materials are cheaper than tranquilizers and safer too! I've even given up some bad habits like smoking and overeating by happily keeping hands busy.

Of course, I do finish many projects and get great satisfaction from seeing the results. Family and friends always seem to enjoy my handcrafted gifts much more than things I purchase for them.

And although I stitch, knit, crochet and weave in busy times and happy times, these crafts helped to soothe and get me through a very hard and lonely times in my life as well. Keep giving us new ideas and just sign me as: A Friend!

Dear Friend: Thank you so much for sharing your thoughts and experiences with us. I see you not only as a friend, but as a kindred spirit in many ways. I have a number of projects going at once, and I also have a house full of sample swatches and pieces, mostly made to test ideas. I can honestly agree that whether the projects are finished or the ideas used, they are always fun and relaxing and never wasted.

Once I put aside an unfinished sweater and came across it years later while clearing out a storage area. Having been knitted from the top down, it needed only a few inches of stockinette stitch and ribbing, so I quickly finished it and wear it often. Now I have fun when people ask — as they often do — "How long did that take you?" I reply, with as straight a face as I can manage, "Only 15 years?"

Mary O'Bryan Ends Road Life

By Trevis Mayfield
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SUMTER, S.C. — Nothing stopped the mail from being delivered on Route 10. Not rain, sleet or snow. Not a flood, fire or even a robbery.

The mail always got through. Mary O'Bryan made sure of it.

But now, after racking up more than 840,000 miles and wearing out 16 cars, the 72-year-old lifelong Gable resident called it quits last month.

She worked for the U.S. Postal Service for 48 years and is thankful for the longevity of her career, which she says kept her "out where the action is."

The action included a daily circuit of driving from Gable to Sumter, then back to her route in Clarendon County, then back to Sumter and then back to Gable. Her car's odometer flipped off an easy 100 miles every day.

She began her career at the Gable Post Office in 1941. "The postmaster asked me if I wanted to work. I thought I was going to work one afternoon. I never stopped," she said.

After 20 years, she started working as a carrier. Life on the road was more exciting, sometimes even life-threatening, but Mrs. O'Bryan says that's what fueled her drive.

One morning 18 years ago, Mrs. O'Bryan was driving back out of a dead-end dirt road when the rain became heavy and the visibility poor. She piloted her car into a quick-moving stream, thinking she was crossing a bridge she had passed over just moments before.

The bridge had washed away.

Water started pouring into the car, which was nose down in the stream. First throwing the mailbag into the back seat, she followed and then pulled herself out the back window. She escaped with the mailbag.

"I thought the water (at first) would come up to my ankles; it came up to above my chest. I had to swim out," she said.

From there, she walked a half mile to the main road, flagged down help, borrowed a car and delivered the portion of the mail she was able to salvage. She wasn't as upset over the loss of the car as how she looked after the ordeal.

"I've always been a very meticulous person. I had to have my hair fixed just right. When I stepped in that water that day, my pride went down the drain," she said.

More recently, Mrs. O'Bryan helped save a life.

She arrived at a convenience store with three packages in hand and heard the clerk inside screaming.

"She was being attacked. She was stabbed 10 times," she said.

Mrs. O'Bryan reacted.

"I hollered: 'I'm going to get help. I'm going to get help,'" she said. The assailant fled, but not before Mrs. O'Bryan got a good enough look at the car to identify who it belonged to.

"That's the closest I ever came to being scared," she admitted. But her quick response helped convict the robber.

In the coming years, Mrs. O'Bryan expects less excitement. But that doesn't mean she's going to let grass grow under her feet. Much of her time will be spent traveling, something she says she's always liked to do. She also plans to remodel her home.

Those 4 o'clock mornings are coming to an end. She'll rise at a more leisurely 6 o'clock instead.

"I wake up at my usual time and I force myself to stay in bed. It makes the day too long to get up at 4 or 5 if you're not working," she said.

She said she'll miss the daily interaction with customers and co-workers. And according to Sumter Postmaster Earl Reese, they'll miss her, too.

Oprah Hopes Ad Will Be Inspiration

NEW YORK (AP) — Oprah Winfrey, dubbed an "unforgettable woman" in a new cosmetics ad, says she hopes the designation will inspire young blacks.

"As a child, it never occurred to me I might be considered beautiful, because none of the models looked like me," Ms. Winfrey said Tuesday in USA Today. "If just one little black girl sees the photo and thinks she's beautiful because she sees a part of herself in me, I will be grateful."

College Costs

to Buena Vista, I figured I'd get it, too."

As a senior in high school, Martin — a good student involved in extracurricular activities — applied to Buena Vista College and the state university. He knew he would need more aid, but he figured it was worth it. He wanted to study communications, and was especially interested in Buena Vista because of its extensive communications department with plenty of hands-on projects for all students, including freshmen.

Tuition for the current year is $10,650, including room and board. His parents' estimated contribution was $1,500, based on the number of children either in college or college-bound, and on his parents' annual income of $34,000, including Social Security.

Martin's father is a retired sales manager, and his mother works part-time at Buena Vista and as a substitute teacher.

The school's financial aid office came up with a loan-free package. Martin received a Pell Grant for $1,250, a Supplemental Education Opportunity Grant for $300, an Iowa tuition grant of $2,350, a State of Iowa Scholarship for $600, a Buena Vista Honors Scholarship for $1,400 and a Buena Vista ZZ White Talent Scholar for $1,000. He contributed to his aid package with a work-study job in the college public relations office and other employment.

On his own, Martin applied for and received a $1,000 Scripps-Howard Scholarship, designated for students interested in journalism.

"You can find books that list scholarships according to area of study," says Martin. "A lot of students don't know that these scholarships exist."

Martin says the financial aid process starts as early as high school, by concentrating on getting good grades.

"Lots of high school students don't take school seriously enough," he says. "They don't realize that getting good grades in high school can help you get scholarships for college when you need them."

Martin credits his family for his financial aid savvy.

"It helps to come from a big family," he says. "You're kind of competitive in nature and you get a lot of support."

At Lafayette College

EASTON, Pa. — "A lot of my aunts and uncles went to college, so it was always expected that I would, too," says Stephanie Tucker, 20, of College Park, Ga.

Stephanie, a Lafayette College junior, says the difficulty was finding the money to get there.

Rearing by her mother, a single parent and business consultant with AT&T, Stephanie realized she'd have to find her own way. When she was a high school sophomore, she took a part-time job as a cashier at McDonalds. She was soon promoted to managing director.

Stephanie worked 20 hours a week after school and saved $3,000 but knew she would still need aid.

"One of my aunts went to Wellesley," she says, "and she helped me look through the forms. It was a tedious process. You have to really investigate."

While still in high school, Stephanie looked into scholarships that would suit her goals, a minority student interested in business. Meanwhile, Stephanie applied early decision to Lafayette.

"When I visited, I could see that the classes were small and that the teachers really knew the students well," she recalls. "One of the teachers even talked to us high school visitors. I liked that."

When Stephanie was accepted early decision at Lafayette in February, she was still concerned about how she and her mother would finance her education. It wasn't until early April that her application was processed and she found that she'd also been offered one of Lafayette's financial aid packages.

Stephanie's package looked something like this: In 1986-87, Lafayette tuition, fees, room and board, travel and miscellaneous expenses were $15,200. At the time, Stephanie's mother was earning $10,452 a year.

Stephanie contributed $800 from summer earnings and her mother added $500. The foundation of her aid package was a Lafayette funded scholarship of $8,550. She also received a $1,000 Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant (SEOG), a $1,950 Pell Grant, a $1,500 Perkins Loan and a $900 College Work-Study position at the library.

"Every year, I relaxed a little more," she says, explaining how each year her financial aid package was rearranged.

Her record helped. She made Dean's List three of her first four semesters and was involved in campus activities, including being a peer counselor, writing for the Minority Newsletter and working on an admissions committee for minority recruitment.

Because of her performance, some of Stephanie's loans have become grants. This year, her college employment is as a resident advisor, for which she receives $2,800. She was also named a Dana Scholar, a Lafayette College scholarship recognizing contribution to campus based on leadership ability and potential after graduation.

After receiving a degree in business and economics, Stephanie plans to open her own business or work as a dean in a college or university. Her advice to other financial aid candidates:

"Don't give up. Believe in yourself and others will, too."

At Drury College

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. — "I've always had big goals for myself," says Suzie Chmelir, 19. "I wanted to go to a private, four-year college. I knew my family couldn't send me without financial aid."

Suzie graduated second in her class from a Catholic high school in Sedalia, Mo., where she enjoyed a gamut of activities. "I went for broke," she says. "I'm always game to try anything once."

Her outstanding academic and extra-curricular record came in handy when it was time to think about college. She wanted to go to a small college and thought that because of her record, she would have a good chance.

Last year, tuition, fees and room and board at Drury College were about $8,000. Her parents' income was about $21,000, and her older brother was enrolled at a community college and hoped to transfer to a 4-year school. Taking into account her family's situation, her parents' estimated contribution was $600.

From other students in high school, Suzie knew about the Westlake Scholarship, a state merit scholarship. Suzie applied and received $1,000, which was doubled by Drury College through its matching funds program.

Also from her hometown, Suzie received a $250 Student of the Year Scholarship from the Rotary Club and $150 from the Knights of Columbus.

Through a family friend, she learned about a trust fund set up by a family from her hometown. The Ilgen Fritz Trust Fund provides spending money for college students during the school year. From that, Suzie receives $100 a month.

To complete Suzie's package, Drury contributed a $1,750 Academic Scholarship and a $500 Drury Activities Scholarship, based on high school activities. She also received a $1,500 state grant and a Pell Grant for $1,200.

"My parents always said they wanted to pay for my college education," Suzie says. "But I didn't want to burden them. I wanted to work, make my own way. I wanted to do it myself. And I have. Between us, Drury College and I have come up with more than 75 percent of my tuition."

Now, in her sophomore year, Suzie has added a $1,000 College Work-Study position.

"I know I'll have to continue to fill out financial aid forms," she says of the next two years. "I'm urged on by the fact that if I don't, I'll have to transfer to a state school and I don't want to. I prefer the atmosphere of a small college. My professors know me, and that means something to me. I feel like I'm getting my money's worth."

Suzie, a business administration and accounting major, has this advice for other financial aid applicants: "Don't be afraid. The money is there — if you're talented or have a special interest. If you don't apply, you'll never know. All you have to do is dig in and find out what's out there."

CONCORD, Ky. — How do you teach fourth-graders the difference between strip-mining and tunnel mining?

You let them mine for blueberries in a blueberry muffin, of course.

"It really gave them an understanding of the subject when they saw that if they took too much off their muffin, it was harder to reclaim or put their muffin back together," says Concord Elementary teacher Pam Estes.

Natalie Cougill, 9, who built a model of a strip mine for extra credit, enjoyed mining for blueberries. "And the muffins were good, too," she says.

Concord was one of 15 schools in Kentucky to receive grants from the state Department of Education and the Kentucky Energy Cabinet to develop curricula on energy and how it affects our lives.

Motherhood Often Proves Fatal In World's Poorest Countries

By Sydney Rubin
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KOLLO, Niger — Fatuma Issa bore her eighth child in a concrete shelter on the edge of the desert, accompanied only by a teen-age midwife she had never met.

Mrs. Issa, 36 years old, strong and lucky, survived the delivery, but thousands of other women around the world in circumstances similar to hers die each day in childbirths or from complications related to pregnancy.

The world's poorest nations account for about 90 percent of the half-million women who die each year in childbirth, from complications during pregnancy or from illegal abortions.

International efforts are under way to save women's lives, but changes are slow.

In Northern Europe, 9 or 10 women die out of every 100,000 who give birth, compared with Niger and other parts of West Africa where the figure is 700 out of 100,000, according to United Nations studies.

And for every woman who dies, at least 10 are permanently handicapped by a complication during pregnancy or delivery, a United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) study reports.

For each of the 500,000 women who die, at least two children are left orphans, says UNICEF, calling the figures "the statistics of shame."

UNICEF, the World Health Organization, the World Bank and others have taken steps in the last few years aimed at reducing maternal mortality rate by half in the next 25 years.

The problem was forcefully illustrated in 1987 at a conference on maternal mortality in Nairobi, Kenya, by Dr. Attiya Inayatulla of Pakistan, when he told other delegates: "It is intolerable that thousands of women die alone, in suffering, when they are in the process of giving life, and that we should do so little to help them."

The day Mrs. Issa gave birth, a second international meeting was taking place about 50 miles down the road in Niger's capital, Niamey. The meeting, under the auspices of the World Bank and U.N. groups, was designed to raise awareness of the problem among officials in 22 French-speaking African countries and to encourage them to help women and increase family planning.

Health ministers were hammered with evidence that women hold the key to helping African nations struggle out of poverty.

At the close of the meeting, delegates issued a declaration calling on African nations to do more to save the lives that are being squandered.

Women, the declaration said, are not dying from the natural dangers of childbirth, but from bad health, ignorance, poverty and an inferior social status that is beyond the imagination of most women in the West.

Every morning for most of the last 19 years, Mrs. Issa has risen before dawn to walk an hour for a bucket of water for cooking and washing. There is no water source in her village of helmet-shaped straw huts. After being fed a meager meal, her children scour for firewood in the vast expanse of dusty scrubland that supports few trees.

Standing before a hip-high trough, she begins pounding millet, the staple of Niger's diet. In blazing heat and dusty wind, she pounds the grain for eight hours, first in the morning and again in the afternoon. She then walks another hour for more water.

She also plants and maintains a garden, feeds the livestock, cares for her eight children and elderly family members, cleans the hut and does what is demanded by her husband. He grows millet a few months of the year when it rains and spends hours talking with other men in the village.

"How can we ease the burdens that rest on the shoulders of African mothers?" Edward Jaycox, World Bank vice president for Africa, said at the Niamey conference. "It is a question at the very heart of the development of Africa."

African women work 12 to 16 hours a day, account for an average of 60 percent of what many nations produce and furnish 80 percent of what their families eat.

"The African mother is the foundation of African society," Jaycox said. "Yet, she is also the most vulnerable member of that society. When food is in short supply, she is the one who goes without. When there is no doctor, she is the one who must deal with the risks associated with frequent pregnancies. ... And when the national quality of life plummets, she is the first to face the consequences."

Mrs. Issa has experienced some of that. Throughout her childhood when food was short in the decades of recurring drought, her nine brothers and her father got first choice. She was lucky to have grown up at all, given the rate of child deaths in poor countries.

The death rate for Third World children in their first year of life is 21 percent higher for girls than boys. Fourteen percent of girls suffer serious malnutrition, while only 5 percent of the boys do, a World Health Organization study reports.

Malnourished girls grow into undernourished women. Two-thirds of pregnant women in developing countries suffer from anemia and many more suffer vitamin deficiencies related to poor diet.

Bad health leads to problem pregnancies, but few women have access to medical care. Only 44 percent of Third World women in labor receive medical care. In many countries, about 80 percent of all births take place at home. About half the time, these women are alone, national studies report.

Niger, like several African countries, has taken preliminary steps to improve health services for expectant mothers. The aging, concrete shelter where Mrs. Issa had her baby is one of about 80 maternity centers set up by the government around the nation.

But in a poor country like Niger, where per capita income hovers around $260 a year, medical service is rudimentary at best and the standards of service differ widely.

Even in the capital, where six multi-purpose complexes offer prenatal, obstetric and early pediatric care by trained midwives and health workers, the centers often lack sufficient antibiotics, pain killers and plasma.

Former African Maid Makes Good As Italian TV Host

By Stephen R. Wilson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROME — Hundreds of thousands of Third World immigrants struggling to make a living in Italy have found a spokeswoman and role model in a 33-year-old former maid from Cape Verde, the island republic off northwest Africa.

She is Maria de Lourdes Jesus, Italy's first black television anchorwoman, host of a weekly program that highlights the problems of foreigners and tries to break down racist stereotypes.

"Without a doubt it's a great responsibility," said Ms. Jesus. "Whoever speaks out on these problems is seen as someone who can have some influence or can do something about them. I just try to do my best within the limits of possibility."

Her program on the state-run RAI network is called "Non Solo Nero," which literally means "not just black" and is derived from the name of another popular show, "Non Solo Moda," not just fashion.

The program has examined, among other things, the problems of immigrant families separated by their jobs, foreigners in jail, racially mixed marriages, sexual harassment and housing discrimination.

To make its point, the show recently had a woman call to ask about an apartment advertised as being for rent. The telephone conversation was put on the air. After inquiring about the rental, the woman in the studio said: "By the way, I'm Somalian. I hope that doesn't matter."

"Yes it does," the woman on the other end said and hung up.

Ms. Jesus said she's received compliments from strangers in the street and numerous letters praising the program, marking what she hopes is the beginning in a change of attitudes toward immigrants.

"This program shows that we're beginning to see the fruits of the efforts of all the foreign communities in Italy trying to make known their situation and the need to improve it," she said in an interview, sitting in her small office under an anti-racism poster.

"This is the first time a program of this type has been on the air. It's a very first step. Now people are beginning to talk about our problems and trying to confront them."

Still, Ms. Jesus said, she is not satisfied with the time allotted to the program, just 15 minutes on Saturday afternoons, and complains that RAI devotes more time each week to pets.

"More time to the problems of dogs than to foreigners," she said. "It's crazy."

Since the program first went on the air in November, Ms. Jesus has also been a target of the same racism she is trying to eliminate.

Leaving her home one night she was taunted and cursed by a young man who recognized her from television. On another occasion, she was riding in a car with several friends, including three Italian television technicians of dark complexion, when they were stopped by police.

"They made us get out of the car, with machine guns drawn, and the first thing they said was, 'You're all foreigners, right?'" she said.

"I consider these incidents as things that happen, but I've had other, positive experiences. I have so many Italian friends. It's a very nice atmosphere."

Ms. Jesus, called Lou by her friends, was born in Cape Verde, a former Portuguese colony. She moved with her family to Lisbon, Portugal's capital, at age 12 and three years later joined her sister in Italy to work as a maid.

She worked her way through high school and won a scholarship to a university, getting a degree in education. She gradually became involved in defending the cause of immigrants and formed an association to represent the 8,000 Cape Verdians living in Italy.

When RAI decided last fall to broadcast a program on the problems of immigrants, she was a natural choice for host.

Ms. Jesus speaks fluent Italian with a slight Portuguese accent. The newsmagazine L'Espresso described her stylish look as that of a "woman executive... always elegant."

Former Cape Verde maid Maria De Lourdes Jesus is Italy's first black television hostess

Third World immigration is fairly new to Italy. There are an estimated 1 million immigrants, mostly from Africa and Asia, many without legal documents. Italians, who long considered racism someone else's problem, are now confronting the issue themselves.

"Generally, Italians are apparently open, friendly and hospitable people," Ms. Jesus said. "But when it comes to personal and work relations, they often manifest a racist attitude, especially toward Africans. The stereotypes are amazing."

She said she didn't notice any racism in her early years in Italy because her community was closed and isolated from the outside society. But things changed when the immigrant community grew and decided to organize.

"Then you begin to realize what your concrete possibilities are, the many difficulties and the resistance," Ms. Jesus said.

Carolina Events

Greenville Choral Society To Perform In Raleigh

RALEIGH — The Greenville Choral Society, directed by Dr. Rhonda Fleming, will perform with about 15 other choral groups in a production of Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 8 in Raleigh this weekend.

The performance will be presented at 8 p.m. on Saturday and again on Sunday at the Reynolds Coliseum in Raleigh. The choral groups will perform with the North Carolina Symphony conducted by Gerhardt Zimmermann.

First Annual Confederate Flag Day Observance

The North Carolina Division, Sons of Confederate Veterans, will sponsor a Confederate Flag Day Observance and Celebration at the state Capitol from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday.

Gov. Jim Martin has proclaimed March 4 as Confederate Flag Day in North Carolina. All events are free and open to the public.

Timberdoodle Watch At Merchants Millpond Park

GATESVILLE — A timberdoodle (or American woodcock or snipe) listening and watch event is scheduled at Merchants Millpond State Park on Saturday. Participants will gather at 5:45 p.m. at the park's interpretive building.

If conditions are right, listeners will get to hear the timberdoodle's mating call and possibly see some of the bird's mating flights. No reservations are required and the event is free.

Italian Abortion Law Under Attack

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROME — Ten years after Italy legalized abortion, the law is under attack by those who maintain it is too loose and has failed to stop "back alley" abortions.

After bitter debate and street protests by pro-and-con forces, Parliament approved the Socialist-designed abortion law in May 1978 over the objections of the Roman Catholic Church. Three years later, the anti-abortion Movement for Life, led by a Christian Democrat politician, tried to overturn the law by a popular referendum, but lost 67.3 percent to 32.7.

Now the Movement for Life and other anti-abortion forces close to the church are clamoring for changes that would drastically restrict the cases in which abortion is permitted.

"They don't want a referendum now," says Luigi Laratta, who heads the Italian Association for Demographic Education, roughly the equivalent of Planned Parenthood. "But in a couple of years, there will be the climate for it."

Laratta was referring to the increased political clout of such conservative groups as Communion and Liberation. The group, founded by a Milanese priest as a foil to leftist groups, enjoys considerable support from the Christian Democrats, Italy's dominant political party.

A telephone survey by Panorama, a leading newsweekly, found that 51.6 percent of those polled thought the law was just, while 47.5 percent did not and 0.9 percent didn't know.

Of those who considered themselves "practicing" Catholics, 59.3 percent said the law was not just and only 39.2 said it was just; 1.4 percent of them didn't know.

Among the champions for restrictions on the current law is Health Minister Carlo Donat Cattin, a Christian Democrat.

Even some of the law's original supporters say the time has come to correct what many see as abuses that both widen loopholes for midterm abortions and make it difficult for a woman to obtain a legal one.

The law requires public hospitals and those that accept patients paid for by the government to have doctors available to perform abortions. It forbids private clinics from doing them.

Off-Broadway Play Wins Award

NEW YORK (AP) — Wendy Wasserstein has won the Susan Smith Blackburn Prize for "The Heidi Chronicles," her play about one woman's search for self-fulfillment from the 1960s to the present.

The play, which opened off-Broadway in December to critical acclaim, moves to Broadway next week. Wasserstein, 38, established her reputation as a wry social commentator with her off-Broadway hit, "Isn't It Romantic."

The $5,000 prize was awarded Monday to the playwright by actress Jessica Tandy during a ceremony in New York.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY March 2

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Draw up a new plan of action toward improving your bank balance. You are in a sensual mood and can connect with romantic excitement.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Emotions can snap if an inflexible attitude is maintained. Adapt to changing conditions and avoid any rigid stand that does not work.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Decrease anxiety over budget demands by following a planned budget. Stabilize and organize money systems that are realistic.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You are victorious when dedicated to long-term goals. Children interest you and bring joy to your life.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Unexpected events will start your day glowing with excitement. Postpone a social meeting if another offer is to your advantage.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): This day can have business advantages. Your insight into money matters is keen, and strategic moves can fill the bank account.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): This can turn out to be a great day right from the start. Do your own thing when others around you are bummed out and negative.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Some early day conflicts occur, but level off before the evening. Promises made by others today should be taken with a grain of salt.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You will be on the go most of the day. Interesting ideas come that can be applied to a personal project. Pets need to be checked by a vet.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): The focus today is on money and accompanying financial matters. Grumbling by others can get you in a negative mood, if you let it.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Social affairs are on the upswing. You are back in the driver's seat when you accidentally meet an old friend or flame.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): The tempo is picking up so that some financial problems can soon be solved. It is not a good time to experiment with new social activities.

 We know some bridge players who insist that they never misguess a finesse. That's all well and good, but we would still prefer to be in a position where we don't have to guess at all!

 South's four-spade opening bid is acceptable in third seat. In first or second position, you would open one spade—never preempt opposite an unpassed partner on a hand with two aces. It makes it impossible for partner to judge what to do, should the opponents compete, if you are going to have that much in the way of defensive values.
 West led the king of diamonds, ruffed by declarer. The problem was simple—with two sure heart losers, declarer simply had to hold his club losers to one to make his game. The trouble was that a finesse for the jack could be taken against either East or West.
 The good guessers draw trumps and lead a club to the king. Later, they get back to the table with a trump and run the ten of clubs. Making four-odd. The not-so-skilled guessers take the club finesse the other way and go down.

 The good players avoid any guess. After ruffing the king of diamonds, they overtake the queen of spades with the king and ruff a diamond high. The seven of spades to the nine provides the entry to ruff dummy's last diamond. Then they cash the ace of hearts and exit with a heart.
 The defenders can take their remaining heart winner, but whichever one is then on lead is endplayed. A red suit gives declarer a ruff-and-sluff, allowing him to get rid of a club. A club return picks up the jack for declarer. Either way, he cannot lose more than one club trick. Try it.

White's New Cookbook Offers Easy-To-Fix Recipes

By Lane Dunn
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

It's possible that no one cooks fish and game better than Franc White. This week his new cookbook, "More Southern Sportsman Fish and Game Recipes," is due to hit the book stores. In the book White reveals the secrets of the latest dishes to be featured on his television program, "The Southern Sportsman."

The dishes featured in the book are both delicious and easy to fix, according to White, who resides in Greenville. Because of the time limitations on television, White only chooses dishes that can be prepared simply and quickly.

White divided his cookbook into six sections. The first section is devoted to white meat fish, which include species such as bass, perch, flounder and snapper.

The second section of the book is comprised of oily meat fish recipes. Oily meat fish include trout, bluefish, mackerel and shad roe. General recipes make up the third part. Recipes which use fish but do not need a specific type of fish are in this section.

The next division is shellfish and crustaceans, with a number of recipes using crab, shrimp, clams, crawfish and oysters listed. The book also contains game recipes using various game animals, from deer to muskrat.

The final section is reserved for miscellaneous recipes. In it readers find recipes such as baked shark steak, hangtown fry, which is a dish containing oysters and eggs, and instructions for making a cantaloupe cocktail.

It took White about three weeks to compile the recipes into a book form, he said, but it took him much longer to actually put together his collection of recipes. White said he couldn't estimate how much time he spent on the collection.

"I don't invent a lot of recipes," he said. White gets his recipes from numerous sources and he has about 300 cookbooks at his home near Farmville. He also gets recipes from newspapers and magazines. A few of his recipes have been contributed from people who write him.

White said that he sometimes goes to restaurants where he likes a dish and he will ask the chef for the recipe. He said that people are usually cooperative when he asks them for recipes

Although White doesn't invent recipes, he said that he often alters them. He changes the ingredients to suit his tastes or simplifies them so they can be used on his show.

White's favorite fish dish is one called Merry Old Sole. It is a flounder fillet stuffed with crab meat, shrimp and scallops. His favorite game dish is quail in mushroom sauce.

He doesn't stop with fish and game, though. "I make a mean jungle pancake," he said, referring to a breakfast dish he makes with bananas.

White's new cookbook is 178 pages long and contains 172 recipes. This is White's sixth cookbook. He sold 34,000 copies of his last book but he said he is only going to start with 10,000 copies of this one. White said the book will be distributed over half the country.

White said he started doing cookbooks because so many people were asking for his recipes. He writes a new one about every three years.

His television show has been run-

Expert Advice Needed When Picking Your Own Mushrooms

By Mary MacVean
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — In Oregon last fall, four people required liver transplants after eating mushrooms they picked for a dinner party. Two Chinese officials visiting Connecticut became sick from soup made with mushrooms they picked.

But fortunately, despite the surge in the popularity of wild or "exotic" mushrooms, Americans generally are cautious about venturing into the woods to pick their own.

"The United States is probably one of the few countries where there's been a cultural fear of mushrooms," Preston Alexander, president of the Oregon Mycological Society, said in a telephone interview. "If you go to Asia, all of Europe excluding Britain, Africa, people routinely eat wild mushrooms."

But, he said, that conservative outlook is changing somewhat, leading to a slight increase in the number of poisonings, some among immigrants who believed they were picking mushrooms cultivated in their native lands.

As people become more familiar with "exotic" — and expensive — mushrooms, such as morels, chanterelles, shiitake and cepes, there is an increased potential for trouble. One way to avoid it is to hunt for mushrooms only with knowledgeable guides like those in mycological organizations. The Oregon group has 500 members; there are similar clubs in most states.

Jack Czarnecki owns Joe's Restaurant in Reading, Pa., which specializes in wild mushrooms, and wrote the recent "Joe's Book of Mushroom Cookery." His father, Joe, was among the country's top amateur mycologists, and Czarnecki maintains an extensive library on fungi.

"I feel very unequivocal about the fact that people should not go out and pick their own mushrooms unless they are very interested and follow two important steps," he says.

The first step, he says, is to read extensively about hunting mushrooms. "And step two, to join a mycological group and go out with some experts so you can measure what you've learned."

Czarnecki and others stressed joining experts on a foray, because reading will not always give you

Low-Fat Doesn't Mean Tasteless

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — You can make healthy choices to lighten your diet. You can cook light, and there's a world of delicious foods that are low in saturated fat but high in taste.

For example, you can cut the fat in fried chicken by removing the skin from the chicken; you can use skimmed evaporated milk instead of whole milk; when baking, you can use an egg white to replace one or more egg yolks, and substitute 3 tablespoons of unsweetened cocoa powder plus 1 tablespoon margarine for 1 square of unsweetened chocolate.

Other cooking suggestions:
— Use non-stick cooking spray and non-stick skillets.

— Avoid frying and deep-frying. Instead, saute in a small amount of oil or broil, grill, bake or poach.

— Skim excess fats off soups, chilis and stews.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the average American gets about 37 percent of his or her daily calories from fats and about 13 percent from saturated fat.

The American Heart Association now recommends that a well-balanced diet for a healthy adult should consist of no more than 30 percent of total calories from fat (less than 10 percent of calories from saturated fat), 55 percent carbohydrates and 15 percent from protein.

Puritan Oil, made from all-vegetable canola oil, has the following suggestions for cutting saturated fat in diets:

MEATS: Avoid heavily marbled or fatty meats, sausage, bacon and organ meats like liver; bologna, salami, luncheon meats and hot dogs. Choose lean cuts of beef such as rump, round, flank steak, London broil and tenderloin; lamb (leg, loin or rib); pork (loin or tenderloin); lean roast beef. Trim off all visible fat before and after cooking. Choose more poultry and fish.

FISH: Eat tuna packed in water instead of tuna packed in oil.

Consult The Family Doctor

Dear Readers: I received three items in my home mail recently that disturbed me. The first was a promotion piece for the book "8 Weeks to a Cholesterol Cure." As I have written before, I cannot recommend that you undertake the type of self-medication promoted in this book without the supervision of your family doctor. It can be harmful. The diet recipes in the book are good. But, if you are going to take high doses of niacin, talk to your doctor first.

The second piece of mail looked like someone had torn out a newspaper clipping on a weight control diet and sent it to me. A handwritten note said, "Kathy, try it, it works, G." I found out that several of our secretaries also got this letter selling "Berry Trim." I won't take space to refute all claims; just save your $39.95. I loved the last p.p.s. in this ad. If you are a doctor or a health care professional, you can call Marc Kulan at his private phone number, 602-996-8186. Now that is real private.

The last was a solicitation from a group I have not heard of before called the Cancer Research Fund of America, Inc., telling us that diet causes cancer and we should send them money to do research. I do not know yeast if this is a legitimate request. This is the first time I've heard of this organization and my colleagues in nutrition are not familiar with it either. If you have good information about this group, please let me know.

Q. Are the light coffee non-dairy creamers O.K.? M.G., Greenville.

A. These non-dairy creamers have had some of the fat taken out and more starch put in. Read the label and you'll see that most have some coconut or palm kernel oil. So, if you are on a very strict cholesterol lowering diet, still use skim milk or evaporated milk. However, if you are not on a strict cholesterol lowering diet, using one or two teaspoons per day in your coffee is not likely to affect your cholesterol unless you are especially sensitive to the topical oils — coconut and palm.

Q. Is the margarine "I Can't Believe It's Not Butter" good? S.G., Greenville.

A. When I stopped to read its label, another shopper told me it has a good taste. We have generally recommended that people on cholesterol lowering diets choose a margarine that has twice as much polyunsaturated fat to saturated fat in it. This product does not meet our rule-of-thumb. In this product, saturated and polyunsaturated fats are equal — 2 grams of each type of fat per tablespoon. Although it doesn't match our rule-of-thumb, it's not too bad, especially if the rest of your diet has a good balance between polyunsaturated, monounsaturated and saturated fats. And, if you're on a cholesterol lowering diet, it sure is lots better than the saturated lard, butter or fat meat grease.

P.S. Many of you asked how to pronounce my name. My dad always said Polish words sound just like they look. All three syllables are pronounced: KO (like co-payment), LA (do, re, mi, fa, so, la), and sa (replace the l in la with s for sa).

Creating A New You

By Colleen Pierre
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

These days I find it a joy to run, to escape enclosure, to breathe fresh air, to revel in a glorious morning.

But it has not always been this way.

There was a stretch of time when I was just an inactive lump — passive, unenthusiastic, out of shape and just plain dull. Fortunately, I grew tired of feeling lousy. One day I decided to go for a walk. Then I added a little "bend and stretch" exercise. Eventually I started aerobic dancing, followed by jogging, biking, swimming, marathons and triathlons.

I didn't plan it that way. I just kept adding this, dropping that, switching off as my interests changed.

Now, exercise actually feels good. I'm more energetic.

My eating habits have evolved in much the same way.

When I was pudgy, I lived on candy bars and potato chips. I still in-

Family Food Shopping Tips

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Keeping pace with food economics is valuable for shoppers of all ages and budgets.

To help consumers stretch their food dollars without sacrificing quality, the following tips are offered.

— Clip newspaper coupons: Manufacturers' coupons provide a source of savings. Weekly specials are regularly announced in newspapers and supermarket circulars.

— Reduce impulse buys: Plan a week's worth of balanced meals before shopping. Make a list of essentials and stick to it.

— Shop after meals: The temptation to buy non-essentials and to neglect price comparisons and nutritional evaluations is greater when shopping hungry, tired or hurried.

— Compare unit price: Compare the cost of different brands and package sizes by referring to the unit price, item cost by weight or volume. This price is posted on labels on the edge of store shelves, directly above or below the product.

— Check dates: Look for expiration or last sale dates on perishables to make sure you're buying the freshest product available. Dates are stamped on tag-closures for bread or muffins, on the bottom or side of yogurt containers, and near the spout on milk containers. Because many marketers rotate their stock and push older products toward counter fronts, particularly in the dairy case, select a product from the back of the shelf.

— Consider economy sizes: Buy the large economy size or stock up on sale items only if you have space to store them conveniently and can use them before they spoil. This does not, however, apply to certain foods, such as produce and meat. To prevent waste, buy those items in amounts you can use.

— Check packaging: Food storage is just as important as preparation. Select food items contained in convenient and protective packaging. Unused portions of perishables such as cereal, hot dogs, cheese and potato chips in resealable zippered packaging are better protected from spoilage. Look for other packaging innovations designed for convenience such as squeezable bottles, individually-wrapped, single-serving sizes, and foil-lined containers.

— Check ingredients: Compare ingredient lists and nutritional information on packaged foods. Consult nutrition brochures, home economists, dietitians or your physician for guidelines on acceptable levels of fat, sodium, sugar and calories.

— Make substitutions: In order to stretch your financial and nutritional budget, be prepared to make

Just Boiling Water

By Joan Drake
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

That old cliché "I can't even boil water" may not be as much of an exaggeration as it sounds. Determining whether liquids are simmering, boiling or at the rolling boil stage is important to the success or failure of a recipe.

At sea level, water simmers between 180 and 211 degrees Fahrenheit. In this range, bubbles form slowly, rise and break below the surface. Maintaining a simmering stage requires careful adjustment of the heat source.

When water at sea level reaches 212 degrees, bubbles rise in a steady pattern and break on the surface. As the water boils harder, there is active agitation of the liquid and some is transformed to vapor (steam).

cooking at the fastest boil possible to speed up evaporation.

In "Food Fundamentals — Fourth Edition" (John Wiley & Sons; 1985), author Margaret McWilliams explains that boiling occurs when the vapor pressure of a liquid (pressure in a liquid to escape) just exceeds atmospheric pressure (downward pressure on the liquid).

"The pressure being exerted downward upon a pan of water must be overcome before boiling can occur. Therefore, this pressure has an instrumental role to play in determining the temperature at which boiling will happen," McWilliams says.

"Atmospheric pressure is influenced by the altitude; in the mountains there is less atmosphere above the surface of the ground than there is at sea level. Consequently, atmospheric pressure is lower at high

EGGS: Substitute egg whites for whole eggs.

DAIRY PRODUCTS: Use herb-seasoned or plain low-fat yogurt, or blended or whipped low-fat cottage cheese, in place of sour cream or mayonnaise. Eat frozen yogurt, ice milk, sherbet or sorbet instead of ice cream. Avoid American or Cheddar cheese, cream cheese or semisoft cheeses like brie. Choose low-fat cheeses such as ricotta, mozzarella made from skim milk, or low-fat cottage cheese. Drink skim or 1-percent milk instead of whole or 2-percent milk.

BREADS AND GRAINS: Whole grain breads, English muffins, oat bran muffins, breads and cereals are better choices than Danish pastry, croissants, sweet rolls or butter rolls.

SNACKS AND SWEETS: Avoid rich desserts, snack crackers and chips made with saturated fats. Choose air-popped popcorn, breadsticks, low-fat crackers or flatbread crackers, angel food cake and fruits.

SAUCES AND SOUPS: Prepare gravies with bouillon or defatted broth instead of meat or pan drippings. Choose bouillon, defatted broth, clear soups or soups made with the fat skimmed off instead of creamy soups or those with fat not removed. Stir-fry or steam vegetables instead of cooking them in butter or cream sauces.

FATS AND OILS: Choose margarine made from a liquid vegetable oil as a spread for bread instead of butter. Use all-vegetable shortening or margarine for cooking or baking instead of butter, lard, meat fat or shortening made from animal fat. Use oil and vinegar, with spices, instead of bottled salad dressings. Use all-vegetable oil with your favorite spices instead of butter and margarine for sauteing.

Canola oil is a seed oil derived from the rapeseed plant, grown in Europe since the 13th century. It is now also grown in Canada, where it ranks as the No. 1 cooking and salad oil. The canola plant is a relative of the mustard plant.

COUNTRY FRIED CHICKEN
1/4 cup oil
2/3 cup all-purpose flour
3/4 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon paprika
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
1/2 teaspoon pepper
One 5.3-ounce can skimmed evaporated milk
2 1/2 to 3 pound broiler-fryer chicken cut up, with skin removed Heat oil in large skillet. Combine flour, salt, paprika, garlic powder and pepper in large plastic bag. Pour milk into shallow bowl. Dip chicken into milk and then shake in flour mixture to coat. Fry chicken in oil over moderate high heat 25 minutes or until meat near bone is no longer pink. Makes 4-6 servings.

APPLE-RAISIN OAT BRAN MUFFINS

1/2 cup plus 2 tablespoons oil
1/2 cup honey
1/4 cup plus 2 tablespoons skim or low-fat milk
1 large egg
1 cup whole-wheat flour
1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon baking soda
1 1/4 cups oat bran
2 cups chopped apples
1 cup raisins
Preheat oven to 375 degrees F. In a large bowl combine oil, honey, milk and egg.

In separate bowl stir together flour, baking powder, baking soda and oat bran. Gradually add dry ingredients to the wet ones until lightly blended.

Stir in apples and raisins. Fill greased or lined muffin tins approximately 2/3 full. Bake for 25 minutes or until golden brown. Makes 10-12 muffins.

ning for 17 years but White said he has been involved in the media for much longer. He was a news correspondent in Italy during World War II and worked in radio before starting "The Southern Sportsman."

Here are some examples of White's recipes taken from his fifth cookbook. His new book promises to be just as good.

MERRY OLD SOLD

2 flounder fillets
6 medium scallops
1/4 cup crabmeat
1/4 cup chopped shrimp
1/4 cup shredded Mozzarella
3/4 cup Hollandaise sauce, paprika and chopped parsley
Pre-heat oven 450 degrees. Butter individual casserole dishes. Place one fillet on bottom and layer with scallops, crabmeat, shrimp and cheese. Top with second fillet and cover with Hollandaise. Bake until fish flakes and sauce is bubbly, 10-15 minutes. Garnish with paprika and parsley.

SMOTHERED DOVES

10 dove breasts
4 tsp. flour
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
1/2 cup olive oil
2 cloves garlic
1 cup red wine
Season the flour with salt and pepper and coat the doves. Heat oil to 350 degrees in electric skillet. Add garlic and doves and cook until breasts are browned. Remove garlic. Add wine and enough water to almost cover the birds. Simmer 1 1/2 hours at 300 degrees. Thicken pan juices with some of remaining seasoned flour, cook until smooth, and pour over the dove breasts.

FRANC'S HASH BROWNS

1 tbsp. butter
1 med. chopped onion
1/2 green bell pepper, chopped
1 lb. diced cooked potato garlic salt and onion salt
Hamburger seasoning salt
paprika
You can use canned white potatoes, but peeled diced baked potatoes are best. Sauté the chopped onion and the green pepper in the oil and butter mix until tender but not browned, then add the potatoes. Season with the garlic salt and the onion salt, then sprinkle generously with the Hamburger seasoning salt and a further sprinkling of paprika for added color. Fry the potatoes until they are hash browned.

VENISON MEDALLIONS

3/4 inch thick deer chops peanut oil garlic salt milk Worcestershire bread crumbs
salt and pepper
Let chops reach room temperature. Sprinkle with garlic salt and let stand 15 minutes. Mix milk with Worcestershire, enough to give it a brown color. Marinate chops in this mix about 10 minutes. Roll in bread crumbs, season lightly and fry in very hot oil until golden brown.

Advice Is Needed

enough information to judge what you see in the woods.

"You look at a book and this is supposed to be, say, yellow, and you go out and see a mushroom and yellow isn't quite what you thought," Czarnecki explained.

In addition, he says, some mushrooms are OK cooked, but can cause illness if eaten raw. One is edible if found under one kind of tree, poisonous — though not deadly — under another.

Czarnecki said he's surprised there are so few mushroom poisonings, but also noted that hunting for them is not part of most Americans' culture and that unusual cultivated mushrooms are increasingly available in markets.

The Portland poisoning victims, who since have recovered, thought they were eating a mushroom that's grown commercially in Asia but they actually ate Amanita phalloides, or "death cap," mushrooms. Apparently, Alexander said, the problem arose because in Asia they bought the mushrooms in markets and were unfamiliar with how they appear in the wild.

"The same thing happened to 14 Laotians in California a couple of years ago," Alexander said. There are other examples, but the problem is relatively rare.

There are no complete statistics, but the American Association of Poison Control Centers tracks calls to its branches around the country. In 1987, the last year for which tallies were available, of 1.17 million calls about mushrooms, none were fatal and only 12 involved life-threatening illness. In 1986, of 1.1 million calls, none were fatal and 22 involved life-threatening illness.

It's easy to see why expertise is needed. There are 30,000 varieties of fungi that broadly can be classified as mushrooms, Czarnecki said. Only about a dozen of them are deadly, but those few types can grow in large quantity and some resemble edible types. An additional 100 or so species can cause illness.

"I look at every single wild mushroom that comes in" to the restaurant, he said. "People assume if they eat them in restaurants, they're safe, and that's generally true."

While he hunts for mushrooms himself, Czarnecki buys them only from dealers he knows. He said he often gets calls from other chefs, asking about the reputation of a particular seller, and he turns away people who show up at his door hoping to sell a basket of assorted wild mushrooms.

"I have had people come with an oddball grab bag of stuff. They wanted me to pick them out and pay for what's good," he said.

substitutions. Frozen fruits and vegetables may be less expensive than fresh produce during the winter months. Certain grades and cuts of beef may be lower in fat. Bread, muffins and cookies baked at home may be a better buy than commercially baked products.

1/2 cup sugar
2 tsp. salt
2 pkgs. active dry yeast
1/4 cup warm water (105 to 115 degrees F.)
1/2 cup orange juice
3 eggs, beaten
1 Tbsp. grated orange peel
1 cup chopped apples
7 to 7 3/4 cups all-purpose flour

Cinnamon Sugar:

1 1/2 cups sugar
1 tsp. cinnamon
1 cup chopped pecans
2 tsp. grated orange peel
1/2 cup butter or margarine
Combine milk, butter, sugar and salt in a small saucepan. Heat over low heat until butter melts and sugar dissolves. Remove from heat and cool to luke warm.

Dissolve yeast in lukewarm in warmed bowl. Add lukewarm milk mixture, orange juice, eggs, orange peel, apples and 5 cups flour.

Mix well, about three minutes. Continue to knead dough, adding remaining flour 1/4 cup at a time. Knead for 3 to 5 minutes longer.

Prepare cinnamon sugar by combining sugar, cinnamon and pecans; set aside.

Punch dough down. Shape into 1-inch balls. Roll each ball in melted butter, then in cinnamon sugar. Arrange balls in bundt pan. Cover; let rise in warm place, 40 minutes. Bake at 350 degrees F. 35 to 40 minutes. Yields 1 loaf.

© 1988 Apple Computer, Inc. Apple, the Apple logo and Macintosh are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc.

Together we can help our schools strengthen the skills of our kids.

Open Letter To All Area Residents:

Computers are a major part of our children's education today. They provide valuable "hands-on" experience that textbooks alone can't teach. Students who are fortunate to receive a basic computer education will have a distinct advantage in the work-place over those who have no computer skills. However, the reality is that computers are costly educational tools, making only a limited number available to students.

Farm Fresh wants to help change that and are pleased to announce its "Computers for Kids" program. The program itself is very simple. Farm Fresh shoppers need only save their cash register tapes, designate which school they would like to receive credit for them and then mail their accumulated receipt tapes to the respective school. When each school has collected $100,000 in receipt tapes, Farm Fresh will donate an Apple IIgs computer system - at no cost to the school. The "Computers for Kids" program will run 10 months - from March 1, 1989 to December 31, 1989.

We welcome all area public and parochial schools to participate in this program.

See your convenient Farm Fresh store for complete details.

Cheese-Safety Worries Softening British-French Rapport

By Gilbert A. Lewthwaite
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LONDON — In the old days when men thought of themselves as men, they learned to live with the double danger that if the women didn't get them, the liquor must.

Today, when real men eat quiche and a lot of them regard themselves as gourmets, they are being told that a more modern threat might lie in their passion for eggs and soft cheeses.

At least your average Briton, male or female has, in recent weeks, waded to daily stories in the media of the possible poisonous bacteria lurking within two of this nation's most popular foods.

Such is the consternation that a junior minister has been forced to resign from the Thatcher government for overstating the risks. And the French, who see the English appetite for Brie and Camembert being impaired, are looking to their history books for the roots of such cross-Channel affront.

One French paper has even suggested that English underhandedness was originally learned on the battlefields of Crecy (1346) and Agincourt (1415), two historic precedents for Britain's overcoming tremendous odds to defeat the French.

And a British commentator, Jon Akass, in a recent story in the Daily Express, warned: "It would be a grave error for us to get involved in a cheese war with France. When it comes to cheese, they have the guns."

True, noted Akass, the British have the "great howitzers" of Cheddar and Stilton, hard cheeses still judged to be as safe as they are enjoyable. But the French "have a thousand varieties of cheese to throw at us."

Akass, generally judged a voice of common sense, concluded: "If I were a military adviser in the cheese war, I would urge a strategic retreat. There are better fields of battle."

It all started several weeks ago with a well-meant warning by junior health minister, Edwina Currie, of the danger of salmonella bacteria in eggs. She warned pregnant women and the elderly to avoid the easy-over egg. Unfortunately, she misspoke, saying most egg production was contaminated.

This sent egg sales plummeting, the British egg industry into crisis, millions of laying chickens to eternity, and finally cost Ms. Currie her government job.

No sooner had the government set about unscrambling the salmonella scare than hysteria broke out over the danger of listeria (a food-borne bacteria associated in rare cases with meningitis) in soft cheeses and prepared foods.

The government's chief health officer advised the elderly, pregnant and sick to stick to hard cheeses as a precaution.

The situation has become so serious that the cabinet spent half its recent meeting worrying about how to respond to increasing public concern over the dangers of food poisoning.

It did not take long for the infection to spread farther afield. Recently in Brussels, British agriculture minister John McGregor came face-to-face with his French colleague, Henri Nallet.

France had let it be known that it would demand a formal inquiry by the European Commission should Britain seek to ban such tinned fromages as Brie and Camembert.

There was also the Gallic hint that if French cheeses were judged unfit for the British, then British eggs would be banned from France.

McGregor tried to keep the international climate cool enough for everyone to be able to store and enjoy healthy cheese by saying: "There is no plan to ban unpasteurized soft cheese."

New

Indulge with a candy bar occasionally, and I still like some chips with my lunch every now and then. But the basics are different.

Usually, I'm not quite satisfied if I don't have a glass of milk with lunch. And generally I crave a piece of fruit at the end of my meal. I finally like whole wheat bread, and I really can't go very long without a salad. Spinach and romaine have replaced iceberg, and real salad dressings are too rich for my palate. Nutritious food tastes good, and it's what I want.

This didn't happen overnight, but gradually — as a result of making positive choices in line with my feel-good goals for myself. I now feel, think, move and act younger than I did 15 years ago. And what's astonishing is this evolution came not from "turning over a new leaf" some magical morning, but from making a long series of small but good choices (mixed with, but undeterred by, some not-so-good ones).

Gradual-choice change gives the body time to adapt. Exercise and good nutrition enhance each other. Besides reducing the risk of heart disease, aerobic conditioning improves the entire circulatory system. Exercise strengthens the heart muscle, allowing it to pump more blood with each contraction, enlarges arteries and multiplies the number of small blood vessels feeding muscles and organs. This improved system delivers more oxygen to exercising muscles, but it also delivers more nutrients to cells for growth, maintenance and repair of tissue.

Eating a well-balanced diet makes the full range of nutrients available to be used as building blocks for strengthening the heart muscle, enlarging arteries and multiplying blood vessels.

So, it is the little steps that make the next steps possible. Exercise a little, eat a little better. Exercise a little more, make even better food choices.

If you want to look and feel younger, just do one little thing: Begin.

Boiling

elevations than at low ones. This means that boiling will take place more easily at a high elevation than at sea level; in other words, the temperature at boiling is lower on a high mountain than it is at the ocean. In fact, the boiling temperature of water drops one degree for each 500 feet of gain in elevation."

To illustrate McWilliams' point, at 8,000 feet water boils at 196 degrees, in contrast to 212 degrees at sea level. This explains why foods cooked in boiling liquids in the mountains require a longer time to become tender than they do at lower elevations. They are simply cooking at a lower temperature.

Successful Tea Blender Doesn't Enjoy Her Product

By Caroline E. Mayer
LATWP NEWS SERVICE

CHURCH HILL, Md. — Jan Burns doesn't like to admit it, but in an unguarded moment she will confide that she is not a tea lover. "I'm really not a tea drinker," she says quietly.

It is a strange confession from Burns, considering the business she and her husband, Howard, launched five years ago: the Eastern Shore Tea Co.

Since that time, the two have turned tea blending into a fine art — in more ways than one.

Although she had no formal business education or training in tea tasting, Jan Burns has developed some unusual, deliciously aromatic teas that are being sold in some 500 specialty stores around the country.

From its best-selling Spiced Apricot Tea with Cloves to the decaffeinated Pink Lemonade herbal blend to the heavier and brisker Night Owl, Burns calls her brews "culinary creations" that serve as a middle ground between traditional heavy teas and lighter, herbal teas.

As much of an art as Burns' tea blending is, even more so are the tea packages themselves, designed by Howard Burns, who formerly worked as a full-time book illustrator in New York.

Meticulously hand-packed, each 3-ounce bag of their loose tea sports one of his bright and colorful labels, complete with a matching satin ribbon.

"The graphics are very eye-catching — they are what made us stop and explore the tea," says Andrew Strauss, co-ordinator of purchasing for the 60-store chain of Bernie's Coffee & Tea Co. "The look of the product is very nice," says Strauss.

Although significantly simpler than the bright and busy packages of herbal tea from Celestial Seasonings, they are as effective in attracting a customer's eye, partly because each flavor of tea has a noticeably different package.

By contrast, Strauss notes, he currently is reviewing the product line of another tea company in which there is no variation in the labels. "The labels are all the same. It won't sell."

The size of Eastern Shore Tea is another plus for Strauss: "It's refreshing to find a cottage industry still in existence in an industry that is known for major companies."

Compared to the giants of the industry — Lipton, Bigelow, Tetley, Red Rose, Twinings and Nestle among them — the Eastern Tea is indeed a cottage industry.

In fact, its business is conducted in a 25-foot-square renovated two-room carriage house behind their 80-year-old farmhouse on the edge of the village.

As Jan Burns is giving a tour of her business, she points 5 feet away and says, "Over there is our billing department." It consists of a two typewriters on a long table looking out the window. "Here is our packaging," she adds, pointing to a large dining-room table immediately in front of her. And to her side, she notes without moving from her spot, "is our shipping department." Tea blending is done in the next room, only 3 feet away.

Eastern Shore Tea began simply enough when the Burns moved to this small town of 319 (the population "remains pretty constant," Burns says) to escape the rat race of Manhattan.

Initially they bought their house in Church Hill as a weekend and vacation spot but eventually got tired of the weekly commute and decided to move to the Eastern Shore for good.

Before they made the great escape, however, they began looking for different ways to make a livelihood in the sparsely populated area.

That's when they came up with the idea of creating a special tea for the annual Chestertown (Md.) Tea Party, a May festival that commemorates the town's 1774 dumping to defy the British.

While Jan, in the interest of authenticity, researched what teas would have been available at the time, Howard drew his first commercial label. The entire investment was $5,000.

But, Jan is quick to add, "No one else could have done it for that, because Howard drew the label." It would have cost much more if the label had to be designed by an outside firm, she explained.

After the Chestertown festival, things just took off. "We started getting calls, 'Do you have Earl Grey?' We said, 'Sure' and called our New York supplier to get 5 pounds of Earl Grey," Burns recalls. As a result, the Burnses concluded, "Maybe there's a niche here for us."

So while Howard Burns continued to illustrate books on a free-lance basis in Church Hill, Jan set about creating more tea blends.

One of the earliest was Liberty Tea, a logical consequence of the Chestertown tea, because Burns sought to recreate the substitute a colonial family would have drunk during the revolution when no tea was available.

The tea contains only herbs that were around at that time: raspberry leaves, rose hips, peppermint, lemon verbena and/or lemon balm and spearmint.

The first year in business, the Burnses sold what they considered a paltry 300 pounds of tea. Last year they sold close to 4 tons — or nearly 42,000 bags of tea.

"Our goal has been to increase the pleasure of the consumption of tea by offering more to choose from," Burns says. "Although I do not have the expertise of a lifetime tea fan, you can develop your own palate by tasting and trying."

"At what they do, they are rather unique," says Jim Harron, owner of Simpson & Vail Inc., a tea-blending company in its own right that is also the Burnses' supplier.

"They are the only one that offers to the marketplace some real different blends. They have found a real niche in the marketplace that needs to be fulfilled," Harron adds.

Simpson & Vail supplies Eastern Shore Tea with the basic tea — to which a variety of 23 different flavorings may be added. Then, at the Church Hill barn, various spices, herbs and floral petals are added to make Jan Burnses' special blends. Unlike Celestial Seasonings brands which are primarily herbal, Eastern Shore Tea sells mostly traditional teas, many of which have been enhanced with herbs.

For instance, Just Lemon Tea — what Jan Burns calls "the quintessential lemon tea" — smells like a fresh-cut lemon thanks to four different lemon flavors: lemon verbena, lemon balm, lemon grass and lemon peel.

Canton Spice is a lemon blend designed to contain spices traded along the early caravan routes from China to Byzantium — cinnamon, cloves, star anise and ginger.

Chanticleer Tea, designed as a breakfast tea, includes sunflower petals for a fresh and different look, while Berry Jamboree — a mixture of strawberry, blackberry and raspberry tea — contains hibiscus and raspberry leaves.

Eastern Tea is now experimenting with several more flavors it hopes to introduce soon: kiwi and watermelon tea, passion fruit tea and tangerine tea.

With the help of five part-time employees, the teas are mixed in large metal trash cans by hand and then carefully weighed and poured into the 3-ounce packages, complete with a reusable cheesecloth tea bag.

Then the packages are hand-tied — a process that is so boring that one employee says the company should have at least 52 employees, one for each week of the year. "One week is about all it takes before you get burnout," said longtime employee and right-hand woman Kathleen Chilton.

The first three years in business were a bit of a struggle, Jan Burns now admits. But business finally took off after Jan and Chilton began promoting the product at specialty-food shows.

Since then business has grown to a brisk clip — more than doubling every year. But just how big the business — or the profit — is, Burns declines to say, saying it is not good policy to say what you make.

In growing their business, the Burnses have been careful to heed the advice offered by an official of a larger tea company: Don't grow too fast.

Realizing that many small companies, in their eagerness to grow, have failed because they were unable to finance and manage their expansion, the Burnses have moved slowly.

For one thing, they have been careful to limit the stores that sell their tea. "We don't want to be everywhere, because that would kill us as a niche product."

National Frozen Food Month

Frozen Food Association

From Freezer To Microwave It's A Matter Of Packaging

"The consumer is expecting more out of frozen foods and is willing to pay a premium price for them," says Harry Rubbright, president and CEO of The Rubbright Group, Inc., a team of specialists in international product development and marketing. Rubbright is a microwave authority, whether it be in food packaging, food engineering or microwave oven accessories.

He is a past president of the International Microwave Power Institute (Cooking Appliance Section), and a current member of the Plastics Institute of America, the Foodservice and Packaging Institute and the Institute of Food Technologists.

In this exclusive interview with the National Frozen Food Association for National Frozen Food Month, he talks about the challenge of designing microwave packaging to suit today's current and emerging frozen foods.

"The package must be designed with the food to make it work," Rubbright said. "People are beginning to understand the effect of microwave coupling in microwave food packaging."

"The consumer is becoming wiser about what will really heat well in the microwave," he added. "Today consumers are seeking truly microwavable foods."

"The food and packaging industries are looking at more convenient ways so that the consumer can best use that precious 30 minutes a day devoted to preparing the evening meal," Rubbright said.

"Packaging is now being designed to work in all ovens. We are working to design packages that will enhance microwave energy," Rubbright said. Pointing out that the majority of all frozen food packages still call for product preparation on HIGH, he emphasized that some products are of more optimum quality when prepared using different oven settings. "The consumer must be aware of his/her own oven wattage and must know if they have a small or large oven capacity," he said.

Pointing out that the majority of Americans simply don't take time to read package instructions, Rubbright sees an increasingly important role for simple-to-understand, pictorial instructions on microwavable frozen foods.

Rubbright says there is also a phenomenal success of a second microwave oven in homes. That second microwave is right in the kitchen. The second oven is a complement to the first, and enables the consumer to have different wattages and features. According to Rubbright, "some companies are already giving different preparation times for different wattage ovens."

He says there is also a small trend toward individual and double servings in frozen microwavable foods; Green Giant brand vegetables being a current example.

Realizing that some of the more sophisticated packaging of frozen foods has a built-in cost passed along to consumers, Rubbright poses the dilemma, "how do you make a decent plate presentation that the consumer can take to the table and eat out of when the consumer is resistant to paying for the glamorous, eye-appealing packaging?" He predicts we will see more unique uses of materials for packaging that can go right to the table and can be eaten out of or used as a serving dish.

"The major food companies are aware of the shortcomings of the microwave oven and are working concurrently to design specific foods and packaging to meet consumer expectations," Rubbright said.

Last October, Rubbright was speaker in San Diego, California at a short course titled Basic Principles of Microwaves for the Food Industry. In his presentation, "Packaging for Microwavable Foods," he stressed that the things Americans want most out of the food they purchase are convenience, good taste, nutrition and product safety.

Rubbright believes there are three major reasons that account for the rapid increase in microwave oven ownership in the past 10 years — the decreased purchase price of the oven, changes in the structure of the American family, and changes in the eating patterns of that family.

The family has changed its configuration. Today, the traditional family structure represents only 17 percent of American households, a figure that represented 40 percent in 1970. About 14 percent of all households are single-parent households. In fact 25 percent of all the children in the United States are living in single-parent households; twice the 1960 figure.

The traditional meal preparer, the woman, is likely to be working out of the home. Now she has less time, desire and energy to use toward family meals. Over a third of the women interviewed in a recent Food Marketing Institute and Better Homes and Gardens survey said they are spending less time cooking than they did five years ago. In contrast, 47 percent of the men interviewed said they are cooking more. And the people who are cooking are using the microwave oven more and more.

For example, 95 percent of husbands of working women said they use the microwave oven in their cooking. And 45 percent of all children surveyed between the ages of 10 and 17 said they use the microwave oven.

There is also a growing population that lives alone, which, when combined with the high incidence of fragmented meal situations, gives you a huge population that has a need for frozen foods and the microwave's convenience. These trends are backed by the desire for more single and couple-serving frozen food products. Approximately $3 billion worth of frozen food is used annually in the microwave ovens of America.

Rubbright, from his lifetime of experience in developing packaging and products for microwave ovens, pointed out that the microwave is designed for complete versatility. The three main applications are defrosting, reheating and cooking.

"The microwave has the ability for "instant on," there is never a need to preheat," he said.

He stressed that it is important for the microwave industry and the consumer to understand there are also many different types of microwaves. They differ in output wattage ranging from 400 to 700 watts at the full or high power settings, with many variations in their design which include: the point at which the microwaves enter the oven cavity, false bottoms which raise the food off the oven floor, metal racks and the time intermittent power activity.

He concluded that the frozen food microwave package designer must account for the huge variations in the power output, patterns and distribution capacities in the oven cavity to assure consumer happiness and the full performance of the product.

Further, Rubbright pointed out that, "now that the microwave oven has been around a few years, the consumer has heightened his/her expectations of packaged microwave food. The consumer is seeking food that provides him/her with shorter heating times, improved flavor, aroma and appearance. It is also on the shoulders of the package designers to create packaging that will fall within the parameters of the consumer's expectations."

- Minimize the effect of the distribution cycle and physical abuse.

- Protect the wholesomeness of food
- Provide manufacturing interface.

- Serve as a functional container for consumers — one that is easy to store, open, use and dispose of.

- provide instructions for effective use.
- Serve as a billboard for product sales.

These are complex and present major challenges. Yet, according to Rubbright, the microwave environment presents its own set of requirements that compounds the difficulty of packaging in the following requirements:

- Provide adequate venting.
- Control arching within the package itself and between the package and the microwave itself.

- Control energy conversion, accomplish proper and uniform constructural temperature in both multiple and single component food.
- Control potential hazards from heated products, such as eruptions of viscous materials at their boiling points.

- Prove dor safe handling and opening when hot.
- Avoid migration of taste and odor from the packaging material into the food.

- Maintain the structural integrity under varied thermal conditions.
- Attain uniform heating to provide microbiologically safe preparation.

Rubbright, in discussing packaging materials, also mentioned there are four generally accepted categories for packaging material according to function, which are as follows:

- Materials that are transparent to microwave energy.
- Materials that absorb energy.
- Materials that shield, or reflect microwave energy.
- Materials that modify the electromagnetic field.

All-In-One Meals Feature Fillings Of Meat Encrusted In Fresh, Home-Baked Bread

Three great recipes are given below for beef mushroom buns, chicken pasties and spicy fire sticks. These delicious all-in-one meals feature savory meat fillings encrusted in fresh home-baked bread. They are perfect take-along entrees for summer picnics and meals on the go. Delicious hot or cold, you can make these stuffed breads in a hurry with frozen dough. Make extra to keep on hand for quick snacks and last minute meals.

BEEF MUSHROOM BUNS

- 1 (1 lb.) loaf frozen dough
- 1 lb. lean ground beef
- 1 can condensed cream of mushroom soup
- 1 can (4 oz.) sliced mushrooms, drained
- 2 tbsps. dried chopped onion
- 1 tbsps. Worcestershire sauce

Let frozen bread dough thaw until pliable. Cook ground beef until well browned; drain. Add soup, mushrooms, onions and Worcestershire sauce to beef. Cut loaf of bread dough crosswise into eight slices. Using a little flour on board and rolling pin, pat and roll dough pieces out to 5 inch diameter circles. Place filling in centers of dough circles. Pull all dough edges up to the center and pinch tightly to seal filling in. Place buns smooth sides up on a greased baking sheet. Using a sharp knife, make a large cut on top of each bun for a steam vent. Preheat oven to 375 degrees and bake buns for 35 minutes or until well-browned. Makes eight.

CHICKEN PASTIES

- 1 (1 lb.) loaf frozen bread dough
- 10 oz. canned chicken breast chunks, drained
- 1/2 cup condensed cream of mushroom soup
- 1/2 cup frozen peas and carrots
- 1 tbsp. minced green onion or dried chopped onion
- 1/2 tsp. curry powder
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1 tsp. pepper

Let frozen bread dough thaw until pliable. Combine all remaining ingredients. Cut loaf of bread dough crosswise into eight slices. Using a little flour on board and rolling pin, pat and roll dough pieces out to 5-inch diameter circles. Place filling in lengthwise strip down centers of dough circles. Pull dough edges up and pinch together to form a ridge across top of pastry. Place pasties smooth sides down on greased baking sheet. Prick several times with a fork to vent steam. Preheat oven to 375 degrees and bake pasties for 35 minutes or until well browned. Makes eight.

SPICY "FIRE STICKS"

Fire sticks are crusty bread sticks filled with Monterey Jack Cheese and green chilies. They're a snap to make with frozen dough; each one-pound loaf makes 16 fire sticks. After you try them, you'll want to bake plenty. For extra hot fire sticks, try Jalapenos in place of green chiles. Enjoy fire sticks as a great anytime snack or as a complement to all types of cuisine.

- 1 (1 lb.) loaf frozen bread dough
- 4 oz. Monterey Jack Cheese, cut into 1/4 inch sticks
- 4 whole green chilies, canned or fresh, cut into 1/4 inch strips

Let frozen bread dough thaw until pliable. (Thaw dough in the microwave, wrap frozen loaf in plastic wrap and heat on low power for 6 minutes, rotating occasionally.) Using a little flour on dough and fingertips, stretch or roll thawed dough out to a long thin strip, approximately 5 by 30 inches. Arrange strips of cheese and chilies about 2 inches apart to make 16 bread sticks. Use a sharp knife to cut dough into strips. Using flour on fingertips, bring dough around filling and pinch to seal at all edges. Place bread sticks seam sides down, on greased cookie sheet(s). Bake at 375 degrees for 20 minutes or until golden brown. Remove from pan immediately to cook slightly on rack or wax paper.

New Products Serve Special Niches

Innovative food processors and marketers are catering to today's changing consumer by introducing new products to serve special niches. Here are just a few of the latest products on the market.

Targeted to toddlers, a newly formed company in New York State is testing a line of frozen all-natural meals for toddlers. The product line, which appeals to children from one to three years of age, consists of complete meals, packaged as single-serving dinners with an entree and vegetable. One of the four varieties is creamed turkey with sweet potato-carrot balls and peas. The line is aimed at upscale parents, both working and nonworking, who are looking for both good nutrition and convenience. The items are high in protein, complex carbohydrates, vitamins and minerals and low in saturated fat. The contain no salt, sugar, artificial ingredients or preservatives. Packaged in microwavable and ovenable pressed paperboard trays, they can be heated in a microwave oven in three to five minutes or in a conventional oven in 30 to 45 minutes.

Microwave frozen foods, with dollar sales up 31.2 percent in 1988 vs. 1987, has 15 frozen food categories in which microwave products accounted for more than $10 million in the year ended July 15, 1988, according to SAMI/Burke research data. Leading the pace was the breakfast category spearheaded by sandwiches and entrees, with $171.8 million or 74.7 percent of the breakfast category's $230.0 million, an increase of 14.8 percent over the same year before period. Sandwiches were second, with a gain over the preceding year of 38.2 percent and 63 brands now competing in the category. Microwave basic dinners, with sales of $63.2 million or 5.8 percent of basic dinners, rounded out the top three frozen microwave categories. Categories which also are significant in the microwave area include pizza, poultry dishes, french toast and pancakes, potato items, fish, dessert pies, international prepared vegetables, Oriental dishes, pot pies, miscellaneous prepared vegetables and vegetables/cheese sauce.

Novelties have emerged as a star performer in the freezer case. The category includes such categories as fruit bars; fruit and juice nuggets; fruit and cream bars; yogurt bars and pints; ice cream sandwiches; sorbets; dietary items; Italian ices; pudding and gelatin bars and non-ice cream pops.

"Frozen Food Age," a leading industry magazine of marketing and distribution, surveyed Kings Super Markets Inc., West Caldwell, N.J., and found that in 1988 novelties scored a clean sweep in all performance classification, topping all other frozen food product groups in unit sales, dollar sales, dollar gross profit per square inch. The eastern retailer carried 197 novelty items during the 1988 survey, representing 17.9 percent of the 1,101 frozen food products stocked by the chain. At the 1988 National Frozen Food Convention and Exposition in Chicago in October, Kings Super Markets was honored as the 1988 Frozen Food Industry Supermarket Merchandiser of the Year.

Meal Preparation Shortcuts

In the search for quality shortcuts to make meal preparation easier, remember frozen vegetables. Here are a few reasons why:

Just about all your favorite vegetables are available frozen in package sized to suit your family's needs.

Frozen vegetables are picked at the peak or ripeness and quickly processed to maintain quality and nutrients.

Frozen vegetables are convenient, versatile and easy to keep on hand in your freezer.

Cooking with frozen vegetables saves time and you can use almost any cooking method — boil, steam, stir-fry, microwave and pan steaming.

You can use frozen vegetables as a quality ingredient in recipes from appetizers, salads and soups to sandwiches and entrees.

Nutrition-Conscious Can Enjoy Dessert, Too

Desserts made with cholesterol-free pound cake

There is a discernable change in the way busy people entertain these days that reflects today's changing lifestyles. Not only has menu preparation been simplified, but with people more nutrition-conscious, the food is invariably low-calorie as well as cholesterol-free. This extends right through to the dessert course.

The following are three recipes that take advantage of current food products that are prepared for the nutrition-conscious. Each of the desserts is made with cholesterol-free pound cake, which is found in the freezer at your local supermarket, for a fine finale to a festive dinner!

Peach Melba Pound Cake

- 1 pkg. (10-3/4 oz.) frozen cholesterol-free pound cake
- 3/4 cup raspberry preserves
- 1/4 cup brandy or almond-flavored liqueur
- 1 qt. peach sorbet

Cut frozen pound cake into eight slices; toast. Heat preserves over low heat and pour through a strainer to remove seeds; discard seeds. Stir brandy or liqueur into preserves and set aside. Place a slice of cake on each individual serving plate; top with a scoop of peach sorbet and some raspberry sauce. Serve at once. Makes eight servings.

Italian Zuppa Inglese

- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/4 cup cornstarch
- 1 tsp. salt
- 2 cups skim milk
- 3 egg whites, slightly beaten
- 1/2 tsp. vanilla extract
- 2 tbsp. creme de cacao
- 1/2 cut dark rum
- 1/4 cup marsala wine

1 pkg. (10-3/4 oz.) frozen cholesterol-free pound cake, cut into 1/2 inch cubes and thawed. Garnish with fruit: sliced strawberries, kiwi, peaches, papaya, etc.

In a small saucepan, mix sugar, cornstarch and salt. Stir in milk and cook over moderate heat, stirring constantly until mixture thickens and comes to a simmer. Beat about 1/2 cup hot custard into egg whites; return to saucepan and cook a few minutes longer, stirring constantly until mixture thickens. Divide equally into thirds; flavor one third with vanilla, another with creme de cacao, and the other with 2 tablespoons rum. Mix remaining rum and marsala wine and sprinkle over cake cubes. Arrange 1/3 cake cubes in the bottom of a 5-cup glass bowl; top with a flavored custard. Repeat layering with remaining cake cubes and flavored custards. Cover and chill at least 2 hours. Garnish with sliced fruit. Makes eight servings.

1/2 Pina Colada "Pie" 1/2

- 1 pkg. (10-3/4 oz.) frozen cholesterol-free pound cake
- 3 tbsp. dark rum
- 1 can (1 lb., 4 oz.) crushed pineapple in light (or natural) juice, drained
- 3 envelopes unflavored gelatin
- 1 1/2 cups plain yogurt
- 1/2 cup confectioners sugar
- 1 tsp. coconut flavoring
- 1 can (5-1/4 oz.) light pineapple slices, drained and cut in half
- Mint leaves

Cut cake into twelve slices, thaw. Line bottom and sides of 9-inch ungreased pie plate with cake slices cutting to fit. Sprinkle cake with rum; cut leftover cake into small cubes and set aside. Put drained juice from crushed pineapple into a small saucepan. Sprinkle with gelatin and let stand 5 minutes to soften. Stir over low heat until gelatin is completely dissolved. Transfer to a large bowl (preferably metal) and stir in yogurt, confectioners sugar, coconut flavoring and crushed pineapple. Stir until gelatin mixture is very thick and almost set. Beat with electric mixer at high speed until mixture is smooth; chill until almost set and beat again until smooth. Fold in reserved cake cubes and spoon mixture into cake-lined pie plate. Top pie with pineapple slices and chill until firm, 2 to 3 hours. Garnish with mint leaves and cut into slices to serve. Best when served the day the pie is made. Makes one pie, eight servings.

Americans Scoop Up Ice Cream

What comes in more than 2,100 varieties, 400 flavors, dozens of shapes and colors and will have sales in excess of $6 billion in the United States in 1988? Here's a clue: Last year the average American consumed some 15.1 quarts of it in pops, cones, scoops, cups, sandwiches and cookies. Of course, we are talking about ice cream.

Last year, Americans licked, spooned and gulped nearly one billion gallons of ice cream. But with more than 160 new varieties of frozen desserts introduced just last year, manufacturers are churning these delicious treats out as fast as Americans can swallow them.

Although it has been some 600 years since Marco Polo brought the recipe for ice cream back from the far off land of China, the big boom in ice cream sales is a relatively new one. What has suddenly made ice cream "hot"?

Most marketing experts point to the recent explosions of consumer choices in the super premium and frozen novelty segments of the ice cream freezer section as an explanation.

The first frozen novelty appeared in 1924 with the creation of the Eskimo Pie Bar. Shortly thereafter the first novelty on a stick was introduced by Popsicle. For various reasons, over half a century would pass before someone would take their unsold hard-pack ice cream and water-ices and convert them into hand-held novelties for children. A multi-billion dollar industry was overlooked and its potential untapped. While each city or region would have its own colorful or bizarre novelty favorites, few were ever carried into other markets.

It took the entrepreneurial 1980s to wake ice cream's sleeping giant. In 1981, a CBS Television Network engineer in New York City slapped two chocolate chip cookies around a premium ice cream and the Chipwich was born. Three years later, a 30 year-old ice cream novelty, named by its creator after his Dove Candy Store, was marketed by the creator's son. And we all entered the age of

The Dove Bar. The deluxe, upscale, super premium frozen novelty had finally arrived.

In the past decade, we have seen frozen fruit desserts, frozen tofu desserts, frozen fruit and cream bars, frozen fruit juice and juice bars and frozen yogurts. All this, and ice cream too.

According to The International Ice Cream Association, the ten most popular flavors are vanilla (31%), chocolate (8.8%), Neopolitan (6.2%), vanilla fudge (4.2%), cookies and cream (3.9%), butter pecan (3.8%), chocolate chip (3.6%), strawberry (3.5%), rocky road (1.3%) and tin roof sundae (1.3%). Even though plain vanilla is much more popular than plain chocolate, you may have noticed chocolate is found in 7 of the 10 top flavors.

Chocolate in ice cream used to be a thinly flavored milk chocolate. Today, however, rich, deep European chocolates, dark, bitter sweet chocolates and creamy, white chocolates are found in many of the popular ice creams. This may explain why chocolate has become more popular in recent years.

What are the hot trends in ice cream novelties this year? Ice cream industry experts see six trends emerging: aspartame-sweetened low-calorie bars, smaller-portion novelties, more candy and ice markers, recognizing the consumer's anguish of choosing between watching their weight and eating their ice cream treats, are coming out with smaller portion novelties this summer. Additionally, the cross-over between candies and ice cream has become nearly complete, and you will notice how candy novelties tend to have famous candy brand names. This is another prominent trend.

With an estimated 70 percent of all American homes having one or more microwave ovens, it was only a matter of time before microwaveable ice cream treats became a fact of life. Consumers are now seeing microwaveable frozen shakes which, when popped in the oven for one minute provide a cold creamy refreshment for a warm summer's day. Additionally, the industry is offering a line of microwaveable ice cream sundae toppings to crown a delicious dessert.

This is also the year for frozen yogurt treats, according to many of the experts. Many supermarkets, convenience stores and food shops will be installing soft-serve frozen yogurt machines. And ice cream freezer cases will soon see the debut of frozen yogurt on a stick.

Currently, there are over 2,100 types of ice creams available to today's consumers. And while the average supermarket freezer section accommodates 100 varieties, it may take a bit of shopping to track down your favorites from last year. But isn't that half the fun!

GREAT LOW PRICES EVERY SINGLE DAY!

An Important Message
That Will Change The Way You Shop

SEARS

Michael Bozic
Chairman and Chief Executive Officer
Merchandise Group

Dear Customer:

During the next few days, you're going to hear a lot from Sears — on television, in the newspaper, and on radio.

We're making the most important changes in our history, and we want everybody in America to know about them.

The most exciting news of all — we've lowered prices on over 50,000 items in our stores and catalogs, and we'll keep them low, every single day! Now, there's no need to wait for a sale.

In fact, if it helps, think of it as "a sale that never ends!"

The great thing is, we're lowering prices on the items you want to buy, including the Sears brands you know and trust, like Kenmore appliances, Craftsman tools, McKids clothes and DieHard batteries, plus a tremendous selection of name brand merchandise as well.

We already carry over 1,000 name brands, and we're adding even more, like Pioneer electronics, Sealy bedding, Levolor blinds, Lee and Levi's fashions, Converse athletic shoes and Pirelli tires, to mention just a few.

But not everything at Sears has changed. You'll still find the same Sears quality and the same "Satisfaction guaranteed or your money back."

Now with more sales help and more conveniently located cash registers, shopping is easier than ever.

I invite you to come in and see what we mean when we say, at Sears you get your money's worth and a whole lot more!

Very truly yours,

Michael Bozic

If it helps, think of it as
A SALE THAT NEVER ENDS!

We're lowering prices on over 50,000 items in our stores and catalogs. You'll never have to wait for a sale again. Because now at Sears, you'll always get great low prices every single day.

*No purchase necessary to enter or claim prize. Come in to any Sears retail store between noon Wednesday, March 1, and closing time Saturday, March 4, and enter. Complete rules and entry form are available at participating Sears Customer Service Desks until March 4, 1989. Void where prohibited. (Ohio and Michigan residents may enter the shopping spree by mailing 3x5 in. card hand-printed with name, address, age and phone number to their nearest participating Sears retail store. Card should be addressed: Attn: Store Manager Sears Great Low Prices shopping spree. Must be received by March 4, 1989. Limit one entry per person per day. No mechanical reproductions permitted. Open to U.S. residents 18 or over.
