London Train Crash Kills 5

Authorities Say 80 Hurt

By Edith M. Lederer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — A passenger train struck the back of another train outside London on Saturday, sending rail cars careening into the yards of nearby homes and killing at least five people, police said. At least 80 people were hurt.

Earlier death tolls in the capital's second major rail accident in less than three months ran as high as 12 but could not be confirmed.

Scotland Yard put the confirmed death toll at five dead and 80 injured. Earlier it had said six died. It did not explain the change.

St. Helier Hospital reported two deaths there, and Mayday Hospital's emergency chief, Kambiz Hashemi, said three people were dead at that hospital.

Reports of deaths reached 12 earlier in the day when Hashemi reported four dead at Mayday and six more dead at the scene of the crash — a claim that could not later be confirmed. There also was apparent confusion over the number of times the two deaths at St. Helier had been counted.

Hashemi said his hospital admitted 52 casualties, 20 of them in serious or critical condition. Twenty-four were discharged and three transferred to hospitals specializing in head and spinal injuries.

Firefighters had to cut dozens of passengers from the wreckage of the trains, and authorities said some

State Employees Lobby For Raises

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Although much attention has been focused lately on the compensation for North Carolina's teachers, Kay Wijnberg wants to get the message out loud and clear that state employees also deserve a raise in their pay.

Ms. Wijnberg, president of the State Employees Association of North Carolina, says that with all the recent attention on teacher's efforts to unfreeze salary steps, state employees' issues have somewhat faded from the public eye.

However, she's making efforts to change that.

Accompanied by 100 state employees, Ms. Wijnberg on Wednesday met with Gov. Jim Martin and various state legislative leaders to lobby support for a bill which would provide state employees a 6 percent pay raise — including merit pay — and no change in health care benefits.

Meanwhile, state employees are planning to meet with legislators during a barbecue lunch in Raleigh during "State Employee Awareness Week," April 23 through April 28.

In an telephone interview, Ms. Wi-

Strikers Paralyze Eastern

Mass Transit Chaos Promised By Workers

By Marcy Gordon
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Striking Eastern Airlines workers paralyzed the financially strapped carrier Saturday, overwhelming management efforts to run a skeleton schedule and vowing to incite mass transit chaos when the workweek starts.

Eastern managers thought they had prepared for the strike that began at 12:01 a.m. by hiring non-unionists and slashing the weekend schedule by up to 75 percent. Many passengers were rerouted to flights offered by rival airlines.

But when most pilots and flight attendants honored the machinist lines it threw the company's strike battle plan into disarray.

Eastern said only 48 planes got off the ground by 8 p.m. EST Saturday. That compared with Eastern's goal of around 180 flights under its weekend contingency plan and with 720 flights under a normal Saturday schedule.

"We've been able to mount only a limited schedule today," company spokesman Robin Matell said, admitting strike contingency plans fell well below management projections. "We were relying on what the pilots were telling us. Obviously, in that sense, it was a miscalculation."

Matell told a late afternoon news conference that operations were "better this afternoon than this morning" and said the airline expected more pilots to report for work Sunday.

But Ron Cole, Eastern pilots union spokesman, said: "It's very clear the airline isn't going to fly without us. The ball is in management's court."

The leader of the pilots union, Capt. John J. Bavis, accused Eastern in a statement of trying to give the impression that "labor is breaking ranks. This appraisal is either an overly optimistic prayer or an out-and-out lie."

The Machinists and sympathizers said they were mobilizing for massive pickets Monday that threatened to cause rush-hour nightmares, especially in the congested New York metropolitan area. Strikers planned picketing at commuter railroads and received assurances that no rail workers would cross their lines.

Time Inc., Warner To Merge

By Peter Coy
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Time Inc. and Warner Communications Inc. have agreed to combine in an "old-fashioned merger," creating an $18 billion company that would be the world's largest media and entertainment empire, it was announced Saturday.

The resulting conglomerate, Time Warner Inc., would include publishing, film and music interests with estimated annual revenue of $10 billion, the companies said.

The company would surpass Rupert Murdoch's Australian-based News Corp. as the world's biggest company in the field of media and entertainment, which are two of the United States' most successful exports.

"There's never been a deal like this in the media business. This is going to be a frighteningly powerful company," said John S. Reidy, an analyst at Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

Some of America's most famous names would combine forces if the deal, which requires shareholder and regulatory approval, is consummated.

Time is the nation's leading magazine company, with such titles as Time, People and Sports Illustrated, along with Time-Life Books and the Book-of-the-Month Club.

Time also owns two of the nation's largest pay-cable television networks, HBO and Cinemax.

Warner has major movie and television production interests, including Warner Brothers and Warner Brothers Television and Warner Cable Communications.

Clint Eastwood and Barbra Streisand are regulars with Warner and Steven Speilberg makes some of his movies for the studios. Warner's recording artists include Madonna, Z.Z. Top, U-2, Fleetwood Mac, Prince and Paul Simon.

Warner, through its $1.2 billion acquisition of Lorimar Telepictures Corp. in January, owns such TV programs as Knots Landing, Dallas, People's Court, Alf and Falcon Crest.

The companies' cable television properties combined would be the second biggest in the country, behind Tele-Communications Inc. of Denver.

The deal is a merger of equals rather than an acquisition, and thus cannot be directly compared to such mega-deals as the nearly $25 billion leveraged buyout late last year of RJR Nabisco Inc. by Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co., a Manhattan investment firm.

The new company will have co-

Poll: Most Americans Back Tower Rejection

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Most Americans believe the Senate should reject the nomination of John Tower as defense secretary, according to a poll published in Sunday editions of the Los Angeles Times.

The nationwide telephone poll of 1,046 adults, conducted as the Senate debate on Tower began last week, also shows that most people dismiss the argument that a president should be able to appoint anybody he chooses to a Cabinet post.

The poll, which was done Wednesday and Thursday, found that 44 percent of those interviewed believe that Tower should be rejected by the Senate, while 35 percent believe he should be confirmed. The remaining 21 percent were unsure.

The poll also found that 82 percent of those surveyed rejected assertions by the Bush administration and Republican leaders that "the President should be given a free hand to pick whoever he chooses for his cabinet."

The poll indicates that people are less concerned about Tower's alleged heavy drinking and womanizing than about his impartiality in dealing with defense contractors because of his prior work as a defense consultant.

However, 64 percent of those surveyed said they did not believe Tower would abide by his pledge to forsake all liquor during the duration of his service as Secretary of Defense.

The poll showed that President George Bush continued to enjoy a relatively high job rating, 59 percent approval to 13 percent disapproval.

While 61 percent said that Bush's nomination of Tower had not influenced their overall impression of the

Hazardous Waste A Hot Topic

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Like kudzu, potentially hazardous waste is everywhere.

From paint thinners to pesticides to used needles and syringes, the material is linked to virtually every corner of society.

Stories such as the medical waste and human body parts found last week stored in Pitt County and Gov. Jim Martin's executive order requesting industries to reduce waste usually make headlines, but trouble could be right under any kitchen sink.

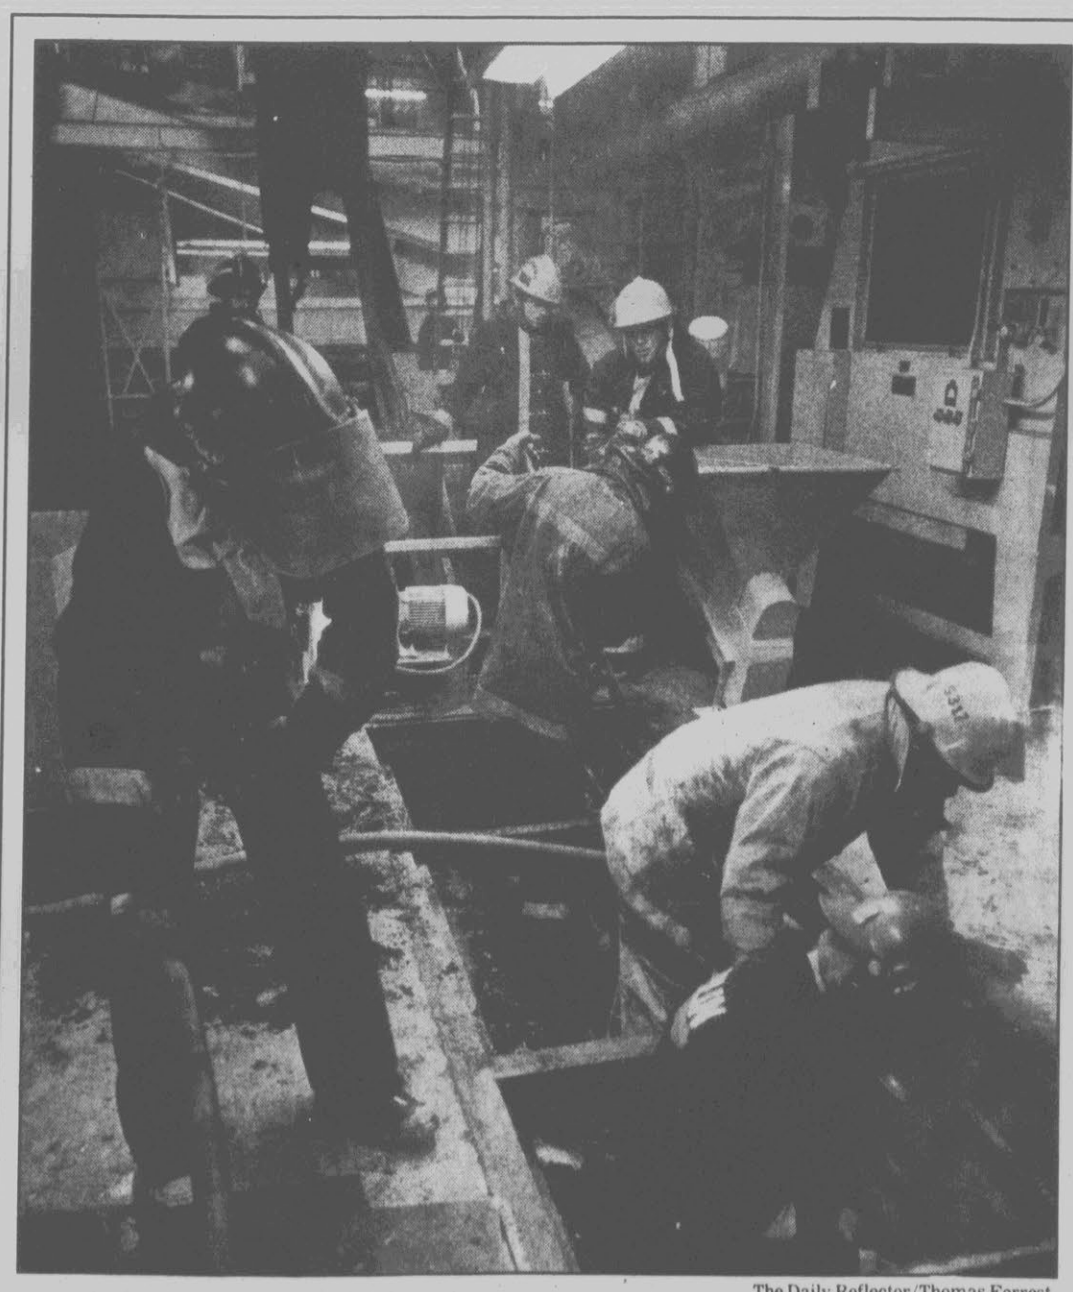

"That's a big problem. It starts in the household, you've got stuff sitting under the sink or out in the garage that constitutes hazardous waste," said Stephen Reid, spokesman for the Solid Waste Management Section of the state Division of Health Services.

"So basically the thrust of (the state agency) is to have various individual communities conduct household hazardous waste cleanup days where they have qualified people on site to accept the materials and then give them to a properly permitted disposal facility.

"That looks like the wave of the future for the time being, at least until some other technology evolves to deal with it," Reid said.

The city of Raleigh has jumped onto the wave, and on April 1 public works officials are planning to conduct the first community-sponsored household hazardous waste cleanup day in the state.

Fire Damages Farmville Plant

Firemen clean out burned tobacco debris at the A.C. Monk tobacco processing facility in Farmville on Saturday after a fire damaged a conveyor system in the plant. A maintenance worker, Jesse Baker, said the conveyor belt was not in operation when the fire was discovered, and the cause of the blaze had not been determined. Firemen from Farmville, Bell Arthur and Staton House responded to the call.

Train Crash Kills 5, Injures 80

were trapped for hours after the 1:39 p.m. collision near the Purley station in Surrey.

Both trains originated in southeast England cities and were traveling north to London.

A British Rail spokesman said it appeared a train that originated in Horsham, West Sussex, was crossing from the local line to a main track when it ran into the back of a train that originated in Littlehampton.

Littlehampton is about 50 miles south of London and Horsham is about 30 miles south of the city.

The spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, said it was not known why both trains were on the northbound track at the same time.

The trains collided a few hundred yards outside the station on London's southern outskirts, sending several cars hurtling down an embankment into the yards of homes, witnesses said. It was not known if anyone was hurt in the houses.

Several rail cars came to a precarious rest on the steep slope, and residents were advised to leave their homes until the wreckage could be cleared.

Witnesses heard a deafening bang followed by silence, then shouts and screams as passersby and residents rushed to the rescue. Firefighters arrived and cut victims from the wreckage.

British Rail estimated fewer than 100 people were in the trains — the normal low volume for a Saturday.

A three-train crash at London's busy Clapham Junction on Dec. 12 killed 35 people, and the latest disaster brought immediate accusations by the opposition Labor Party that neglect of the state-owned rail system was to blame.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was "very distressed" and following developments, her office said. Queen Elizabeth II was said to be shocked.

"I heard a loud bang," said Alan Long, a nearby resident. "My son and I brought a sledgehammer and ran over to the train. There was blood everywhere and people screaming."

Passenger Derek Pearson said his car "was tipping down an embankment. I was trapped where I landed and showered with glass."

He said his train, traveling from English Channel town of Littlehampton, was going about 60 mph.

Tania Lawrence and her father were in the other train from Horsham England, watching a couple across the aisle from them.

"She flew through the air and was knocked unconscious and he was thrown into my lap with blood pouring out of his head. He had glass in his eyes," said Ms. Lawrence.

British Rail said engineers began a probe into the cause.

Samantha Muggeridge, who was waiting on the Purley platform, said a slow train was headed for the station when "a faster one came up behind it and seemed to clip the back of it."

The Dec. 12 crash in Clapham, 10 miles north of Purley, has been blamed by British Rail on flaws in its system of installing new signaling equipment.

Railroad officials believe malfunctioning signals led one commuter train to slam into the rear of another stopped on the tracks. An empty freight train on an adjacent line then plowed into spillover wreckage and apparently hit some passengers who had scrambled onto the tracks.

The Clapham crash was the worst rail wreck in Britain since 1975, when 43 people died in a subway train that crashed in a London tunnel.

How to measure: If installing inside window frame, measure width and length. If installing outside window frame, add desired overlap, such as molding width, to inside width. If there is no molding, recommended overlap is ¼" per side. For example, if you are installing inside a window frame that measures 23½" wide and 56½" long, select the package marked 23" to 23⅞" wide x 64" long. Blind lengths can be shortened at home.

Eastern Paralyzed As Strikers Get The Best Of Management

"This thing will really take off on Monday, when we take out the railroads," Machinists Local 1894 President Michael O'Connell at Kennedy International Airport said. "And we're prepared to do that."

In Philadelphia, a federal judge enjoined railroad workers in that city's mass transit system from honoring Eastern picket lines, and authorities in New Jersey said they were seeking a similar order against any secondary walkouts. They exhorted commuters to carpool or stay home if the disruption spread.

"There is no question that if the boycott occurs, it will cause massive delays and severely inconvenience New Jersey residents," said state Transportation Department Commissioner Hazel Frank Gluck.

Frank Ortis, a Machinist union local vice president, told The Associated Press the union was considering a picket on Monday of Eastern's suppliers and contractors — including the Miami offices of British engine maker Rolls-Royce.

In Washington, John Peterpaul, general vice president of the Machinists, said picketing was organized at Eastern points nationwide and union officials were mapping prospective sites for secondary picketing.

But Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner said the Bush administration would seek emergency legislation, if necessary, to prohibit strikers from broadening their protest to "hold American industry hostage."

The mass walkout that began at 12:01 a.m. Saturday by 8,500 mechanics, bag handlers and ground crews escalated a 17-month union-management battle at the nation's 7th largest airline which ordinarily schedules more than 1,000 flights with 100,000 passengers daily.

Both sides were deadlocked on $150 million in wage concessions that company boss Frank Lorenzo demanded in order to keep the carrier alive. Talks collapsed in Washington at midnight Friday and no new discussions were planned.

The main target of the striker hostility was Lorenzo, head of Texas Air Corp., which bought Eastern in 1986.

He is widely mistrusted by Eastern workers because of what they call his triumphant union-crushing campaign at sister carrier Continental Airlines in 1983. Many accuse him of provoking the strike to do the same at Eastern.

Battered by years of labor tension and growing competition in the deregulated airline business, Eastern has racked up nearly $2.5 billion in debt and claims to be losing more than $1 million a day.

Pickets chanted and baggage piled up at airports from San Juan, Puerto Rico, to Los Angeles, Miami to New York City. Some Eastern planes were stranded on Caribbean islands without crews, the company said, and hundreds of vacationers were spending a weekend tropical getaway at ticket counters seeking other connections.

"It's not the way you want a vacation to start off," Randy Stern, 25, of Marina del Rey, Calif., said in Los Angeles. Stern had booked an Eastern flight to Miami three months ago.

At Atlanta's airport, the second busiest after Chicago's O'Hare, nearly all Eastern flights were scrapped.

About a dozen striking machinists picketed outside the Eastern terminal at New York's La Guardia Airport, yelling "Don't fly Eastern" to arriving passengers. Inside, hundreds of people — surrounded by mounds of luggage, crying children and sports equipment — crammed ticket counters.

"We'll probably never draw a retirement check," said 32-year Machinists veteran Herbert King, scheduled to retire in 27 months. He blamed the walkout on management and likened Lorenzo to "Idi Amin, Khomeini, the Russians. The Russians treat their people better than Eastern treats us."

The AFL-CIO has urged members across the country to honor picket lines and the Machinists have vowed to picket trains, ports and other airlines.

President Bush refused to intervene in the strike, the first major labor crisis of his presidency. But he warned that his administration wouldn't tolerate disruptions to mass transit elsewhere.

New Column

Beginning Tuesday, The Daily Reflector will offer a new column for its readers. "Your Mental Health," which has been developed with the Pitt County Mental Health Association, will cover topics that face Pitt County families everyday.

The column will appear on Tuesdays in the Accent section of the paper. Written by local professionals, it will offer practical views on topics as diverse as raising teen-agers, dealing with depression or helping children face the loss of a loved one.

Other topics include medical insurance coverage of counseling, facing loneliness, what it means to grow old and dealing with child behavioral problems in the home.

Sea Lion Returns

SEATTLE (AP) — A sea lion relocated to the Pacific Ocean in a campaign to stop the mammals from feasting on local fish returned to its hunting grounds here after traveling nearly 300 miles, a wildlife official said Saturday.

The California sea lion spotted near the Ballard ship locks Friday afternoon was the first relocated animal to return.

"He obviously likes it here," said Bob Byrne of the state Department of Wildlife. "He knows a good life when he finds one."

The sea lions wait by the locks and pick off steelhead, a seagoing trout, and salmon that are en route to their spawning grounds.

Officials have trapped 18 sea lions so far using a floating cage. Two died after being sedated for tagging and five more were released at the locks because of cold weather.

To return, the sea lion had to swim about 150 miles up the coast, turn right, swim another 100 miles through the Strait of Juan de Fuca, turn right again and paddle the remaining 35 miles to the locks.

Trapping will probably resume Monday, and officials are confident they can catch the remaining 13 or so animals, including the one who returned, for relocation to the Pacific, Byrne said.

Serum Arrives From Iran

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Physicians treating a snake-venom researcher received a shipment of serum from Iran to counteract a deadly viper bite Saturday, but a hospital spokesman said doctors may elect not to use it.

Antivenin was flown in Saturday afternoon for William E. Haast, 78, who remained in serious but stable condition at the University of Utah Health Sciences Center after being bit on the left hand by a Pakistani pit viper earlier in the week.

"The doctors are evaluating it," said John Dwan, hospital spokesman. "We're hopeful that it's not needed, but that remains to be seen."

In an unusual effort initiated by Stephen Studdert, special assistant to President Bush, antivenins effective against the bite were located in Iran, England and the Soviet Union, and U.S. Customs rules were waived to place the shipments quickly on flights to the United States.

The British shipment from the English National Poison Unit in London arrived Friday night. But doctors did not administer it to Haast, deciding instead to wait for the more effective Iranian serum, said nursing supervisor Rick Taylor.

Studdert said the shipment from the Soviet Union was being arranged through direct, government-to-government contacts, but in Iran, "people-to-people, non-government" contacts were used. There are no formal ties between the United States and Iran's fundamentalist Moslem government, which has repeatedly referred to America as the "Great Satan."

Meanwhile, Haast's fibrinogen level, an element in the blood that regulates how the blood coagulates and is destroyed by the snake bite venom, has been improving, although it remained far below acceptable levels, according to hospital spokesman John Dwan.

"We have been replacing fibrinogen through transfusions and his body appears to be making fibrinogen," Dwan said.

President, 29 percent said that the appointment had caused their opinions of Bush to fall.

The poll found that 44 percent disapproved of the Tower nomination and 38 percent weren't sure, while just 18 percent approved of President Bush's nomination.

The Times Poll, directed by I.A. Lewis, had a margin of error of 4 percentage points in either direction.

More Rain Needed?

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — It may seem like weeks since the sun came out over North Carolina, but a meteorologist says the gray, wet days that have pushed rivers to the brink probably aren't doing much for the state's groundwater tables.

"The problem is most of this has been runoff," said James B. Merrell, meteorologist National Weather Service at Raleigh-Durham International Airport. "It has not soaked in as much as we want.

"Rivers are running high, but groundwater levels generally need an extended period of rainfall — time to soak in."

February was extremely wet, with nearly twice the normal precipitation for the month. A total of 6.42 inches of precipitation — including melted snow from two winter storms — was recorded at RDU during February. That is 2.99 inches above normal.

While March is off to a soggy start, the 30-day forecast calls for the state to be warmer and drier than average, Merrell said.

Only minor flooding had been reported, he said, but residents in low-lying areas should watch for flooding for the next several days. Showers are possible across the state through Tuesday.

From midnight to 7 p.m. Friday, .76 inches of rain fell at RDU, the first precipitation for the month. For the year, there has been 8.53 inches of precipitation, 1.16 inches above normal.

Lawyer Released On Bond

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — A Morganton lawyer charged with parental abduction was released on a $30,000 secured bond early Saturday after police brought him back to Burke County from Maine.

Hugh "Skip" Williams, 34, is scheduled for arraignment Tuesday in Morganton. He is charged with transporting his daughter Jessica out of state in violation of a custody order. The felony charge carries a maximum three-year sentence.

Williams, who disappeared with Jessica on Oct. 28, said Saturday he's "running around like a chicken with my head cut off."

On Monday, he plans to look for work and begin helping out the more than 200 clients he left behind, he said.

"There's not much I can say to apologize," Williams said.

Williams has other legal troubles in connection with his flight. He faces misdemeanor counts in Burke County on charges of passing bad checks, and later this month, he faces a N.C. Bar review panel.

Williams left with Jessica in the midst of a three-year custody battle with ex-wife Julie Realon, who has full custody. Williams claimed in court that Jessica's stepfather, Rod Realon, had sexually abused the child. Realon denies the allegations.

Cleanup Days Set In Some Areas To Handle Hazardous Waste

"It's for the safety of our personnel, as well as the safety of our citizens," said Cindy Kling, management analyst for Raleigh's public works department. "This is a pilot program, so we have no idea how many people will show up."

She said Raleigh opted to establish a cleanup day after 1,200 residents answered a survey enclosed in their water bills. The responses indicated residents were willing to take their waste to a dump site.

Officials decided to conduct the program at the Public Utilities Operations Center, and Ms. Kling said the most common hazardous waste items residents have are anti-freeze, motor oil, pesticides, solvents and paint thinners.

Presently, there are three primary methods residents may use to dispose of such hazardous waste: flushing it down the toilet; pouring it on the ground, or dumping it in with the regular trash to be taken to a landfill.

With flushing, a large amount of hazardous waste entering the water treatment plant could damage the system, she said. If the material is poured out on the ground, it may seep into groundwater and contaminate lakes or streams.

If the waste is placed in the regular trash, it may chemically react with other items and cause fires, either on the trash truck or at the landfill.

"Those things do happen," she said.

Nationwide, most regular household hazardous waste cleanup days occur in the New England states, California and Florida, she said, and there have been about 1,350 operations across the country.

About five years ago, a Rockingham County company opened up its facilities for residents to drop off household waste, but Raleigh's operation is the first public program in the state, she said.

Locally, Pitt County emergency services may assist in chemical spills and large cleanup operations, but there is no household cleanup plan.

"We don't have anything like that," said Terry Payne of the emergency services office. "The only thing probably we would be concerned about is chemicals and things like that."

Mitch Smith, director of the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service, said Extension Agent Sam Uzzell is the pesticide assignment coordinator for the county, and farmers stuck with unwanted pesticide can contact Uzzell to learn how to dispose of the material.

"We do recognize that as being a critical need of the county," Smith said.

For two years, the extension service has also been assisting the state Department of Agriculture in educating farmers about how to use restricted pesticides, which are not available to the general public.

Farmers must be licensed by the state to buy the restricted chemicals, and the Pitt extension service offers seminars to educate farmers about proper use, Smith said.

On a larger scale, there have been several recent publicized examples incidents involving hazardous waste.

For example:

Federal Environmental Protection Agency officials worked for more than two weeks in early January to clean up tons of toxic pesticides buried at the old FCX facility in Washington, N.C. The site was one of 21 Superfund sites in the state and 1,175 nationwide. In the $100,000 cleanup effort, workers were piling up soil contaminated with DDT and a several other banned pesticides. Local officials expressed concern that the chemicals have polluted nearby streams, and the EPA said it would conduct a groundwater assessment.

On Thursday, the governor issued an executive order to state environmental agencies to require industries to reduce waste as much as possible. The order also calls for tougher controls on air pollution.

The move by Martin came on the heels of an announcement by South Carolina authorities that the Palmetto state will no longer take hazardous waste from several states — including North Carolina — because the states were not making a good-faith effort to dispose of waste within their own borders. Additionally, North Carolina is working to select a location to host a low-level radioactive waste site.

In Pitt County, last weekend deputies discovered a packhouse near Stokes where Bethel funeral home owner John M. Gray of Raleigh had stored medical waste and human body parts, and Thursday state officials received information about two more tobacco barns near Stokes where Gray has stored medical waste.

Though he owns a crematorium in Raleigh, Gray is not licensed to dispose of medical waste, and state health officials said they will inspect the storage facilities for possible violations and assist Gray in selecting a proper contracting company to incinerate the waste.

News of medical waste and hazardous waste is a popular topic in the media, Reid said.

With the state Department of Human Resources, the state Attorney General's office, the State Bureau of Investigation, the state Board of Mortuary Science and the state medical examiner's office involved, Reid said the medical waste in Pitt County has sparked interest across the eastern half of the state.

"I've gotten more calls on this from media from all around the Raleigh area, all the way between Raleigh and (Greenville), down to Wilmington. I've had interest in this from all over. It really hasn't come from as far away as Charlotte too much, but basically from the Raleigh area east. All the media in that area has been interested," he said.

Technically, the medical waste found near Stokes may not be hazardous waste, Reid said.

Under the Solid Waste Management Section of the state Division of Health Services, there are four waste categories: Superfund sites; inactive sites; solid waste sites, and hazardous waste sites.

Hazardous wastes are any of a number of materials designated as hazardous by the EPA, or any material that is corrosive, ignitable, toxic or reactive.

Solid waste includes dead human bodies and body parts, which may be cremated. But the category also includes medical waste, such as needles, syringes, blood packs and laboratory bags, and that material may not be cremated. It must be disposed of at a medical waste incinerator.

"There are distinctions. You've got solid waste as your large category. As a subset of solid waste you have medical waste. It can be hazardous. Certain infectious wastes can surely be hazardous, but they are not by definition hazardous waste.

"Hazardous wastes are those which are listed by the EPA as being hazardous to your health, or exhibiting any one or combinations of four characteristics of ignitability, reactivity, corrosivity and toxicity," Reid said.

Most medical waste is generated by hospitals, clinics and doctors who perform outpatient surgery.

"There are about five or six different firms throughout the state that deal in medical waste. That is, they are contractors for hospitals and medical institutions. They go around and gather up materials and take them back to their quarters and burn them.

"Most hospitals (including Pitt County Memorial Hospital), most large medical facilities, however, have incinerator capability on site and deal with their own medical waste. This is why we don't have much occasion to deal with it," Reid said.

State Employees Want Raises

jnberg said that citizens of the state, as well as public policymakers, should recognize the efforts of the approximate 85,000 state employees, as well as recognizing the state's teachers.

"There have been a number of concerns from state employees from what seems to be a lack of attention by the governor on state employees' issues," she said.

"Teachers' pay has received a lot of attention lately because everyone is concerned over the quality of children's education. It seems people don't seem to get too excited over correctional officers unless a prisoner escapes."

In addition to state corrections officers, Ms. Wijnberg said the ranks of state employees include faculty and staff of North Carolina's University System, highway patrol officers, Department of Transportation employees and workers of various state hospitals and institutions.

"We want the citizens of North Carolina to be proud of their work force and feel good should the governor and legislature provide us with a salary increase," she said. "We want the people to be our supporters and recognize they get quality for the tax dollars that goes into our salaries."

Meanwhile, Bobbie Austin, district chairwoman representing local District 97 of SEANC, attended Wednesday's meeting with state legislators and said she believes they paid attention.

"I think they listened and I think they understood our concerns," she said.

"I think it's time for them to really realize our worth. We perform a very valuable service to the state of North Carolina and I think the state employees should be the top consideration in formulating their budget," she said.

Ms. Austin, whose district includes most East Carolina University employees, said she has been impressed that local legislators have been very supportive of the needs and concerns of state employees.

"I think that that's very important and encouraging," she said.

Saturday Arrests

Local police said three people were arrested Saturday in Greenville on charges stemming from thefts.

Officer C.G. Alphin said John Louis Fornville, 42, 109 Douglas Ave. was arrested at 2:13 a.m. Saturday at Chestnut and Pennsylvania avenues and charged with breaking, entering and larceny in connection with an incident at Sutton's Tire Service on Dickinson Avenue.

Alphin said 19 tires worth $1,900 were taken in the robbery. Four of them were recovered in the Fornville arrest, Alphin said.

Officer C.A. Elks said Rufus Junior Sutton of 319 Oakgrove Ave. was arrested at 5:03 a.m. and charged with the theft of $6.76 in merchandise from the Fresh Way store on Airport Road.

Officer D.R. Wyrick said Frank Smith, 47, of 1302 W. Third St. was arrested at 1:47 p.m. and charged with breaking, entering and larceny in connection with the theft of a $100 radio cassette player from 1607 B. W. Third St.

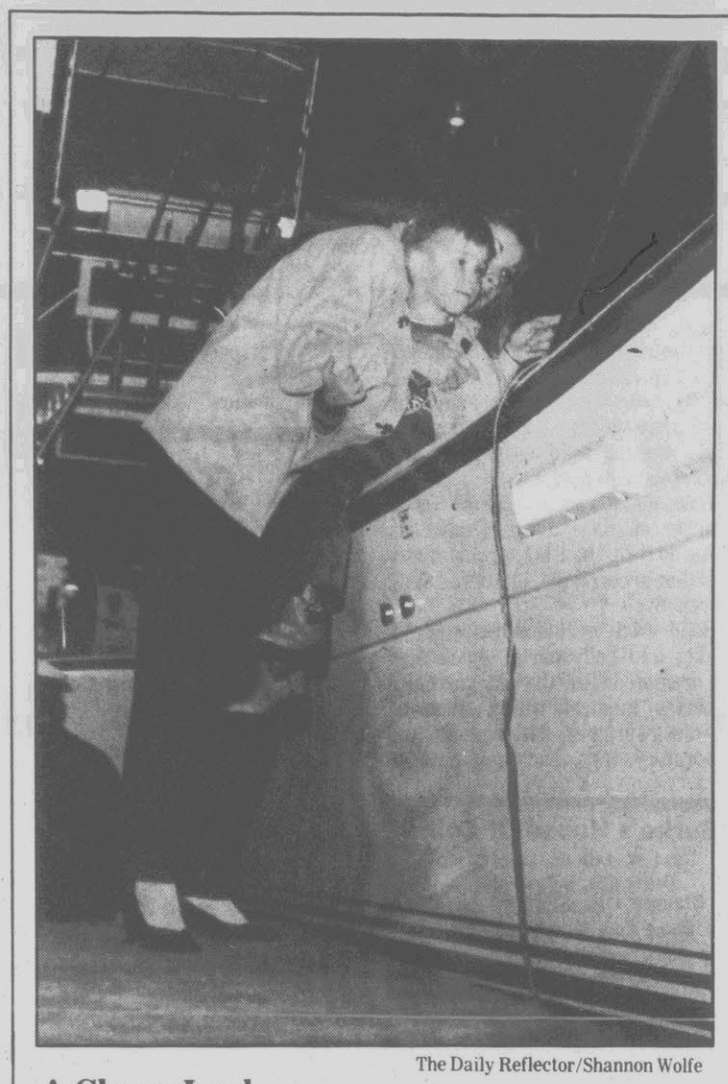

Thefts Probed

Greenville police said four incidents were reported in the area Saturday by late afternoon.

Officer D.R. Wyrick said the theft of a $45 drill, $250 in tools, and a $35 motor tester from AAA Auto Sales on Greene Street was reported at 8:28 a.m.

Officer M.T. Scheid said the theft of a lawn mower worth $80 from 905 Imperial St. was reported at 9:51 a.m.

Officer W.E. Davis said the theft of an undetermined sum of money from 817 S. Washington St. was reported at 9:52 a.m. Davis said the theft of a $25 pocketbook from a car parked behind Gold's Gym was reported at 11:46 a.m.

A Closer Look

Jonathan Harold, 4, gets a little assistance from his mom, Tina Harold, in order to see the inside of a boat during the Eastern North Carolina Boat Show at the New Greenville Warehouse. The show, sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, concludes Sunday.

Scouts Hear Nurse

Greenville Girl Scout Troop 712 members working toward an advanced badge in child care recently heard a discussion of the value of prenatal care.

Sharon Eaker, an adult Girl Scout who is a licensed practical nurse and a student in the Pitt Community College Nursing Program, talked about nutrition, growth and development of the unborn child, and teen pregnancy. She used fetal models to show the girls the size of the developing infant.

School System Cited

Greene County has won a state award for advancing middle level schools. The award was presented recently to the staff of Greene County schools at a statewide conference of the North Carolina League of Middle Level Schools.

The county was recognized for several efforts. It passed a $4.5 million dollar bond referendum and obtained a $2 million dollar bond referendum for a middle school facility. It also designed a new facility to meet the needs of a middle school program.

The school system also provided staff development opportunities and established a lab school for East Carolina University to assist in the training of undergraduate and graduate students.

Academic Honor

Kathryn Taft, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Taft of Greenville, was recently inducted into the High School Honor Society at Saint Mary's.

Miss Taft is a high school junior at the school.

To be inducted into the society a student must have a grade point average of 3.75 after one semester or 3.50 after two or more semesters.

Saint Mary's is for women and offers the last three years of high school and the first two years of college.

Precinct To Meet

The Democratic 8th precinct will meet March 16 at 8 p.m. in the Willis Building at the corner of First and Reade streets. A meeting scheduled for Thursday has been canceled.

Friday Incidents

Greenville police said three incidents were reported in the area Friday.

Officer M.J. Nobles said a woman staying at the Holiday Inn in Greenville was approached by a man carrying a handgun and forced to give him $50 in an incident reported at 4 p.m.

Officer A.J. Dennison said the theft of a $25 revolver from 1105B N. Washington St. was reported at 4:48 p.m. Dennison also said the theft of a license plate from a car at 404 Elizabeth St. was reported at 10:47 p.m.

Orientation Session

The Dream Factory of North Carolina will have an orientation meeting for volunteers and other interested persons Monday at 6:30 p.m. in the board room of the Greenville Hilton.

Supervisors Will Meet

The board of supervisors of the Pitt Soil and Water Conservation District will meet at 9 a.m. Monday in the district office in the Federal Building, 215 S. Evans St. in Greenville.

Manager Denies On Tape Any Knowledge About Fire

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — In a recording played for a U.S. District Court jury, the general manager of Liberty Tobacco Warehouse denied 25 times within five minutes that he knew anything about a fire that destroyed the building.

"I've no idea about it," warehouse manager J.T. "Tommy" Worthington Jr. told the informant, Ronnie Lee Stocks of Blackjack, who was surreptitiously recording the conversation.

"Don't know nothing about it, so I don't know what to tell you," he said repeatedly.

The recording was played Friday in the trial of Worthington and his father, warehouse owner J.T. Worthington, who have pleaded innocent to arson, conspiracy and fraud. The tobacco warehouse, one of the state's largest, was destroyed by an early morning fire Oct. 3, 1986.

Stocks testified that he had been hired by Harvey Bowen of Ayden, a major customer of the warehouse and friend of the Worthingtons, to burn the warehouse. In turn, Stocks said, he paid Edmund Wayne Hart of Ayden to set the fire. Tommy Worthington knew of Stocks' involvement, but the elder Worthington did not know specifically who had been hired, Stocks said.

Stocks, who was on the witness stand about 10 hours Thursday and Friday, became an informant after he was arrested in April 1987.

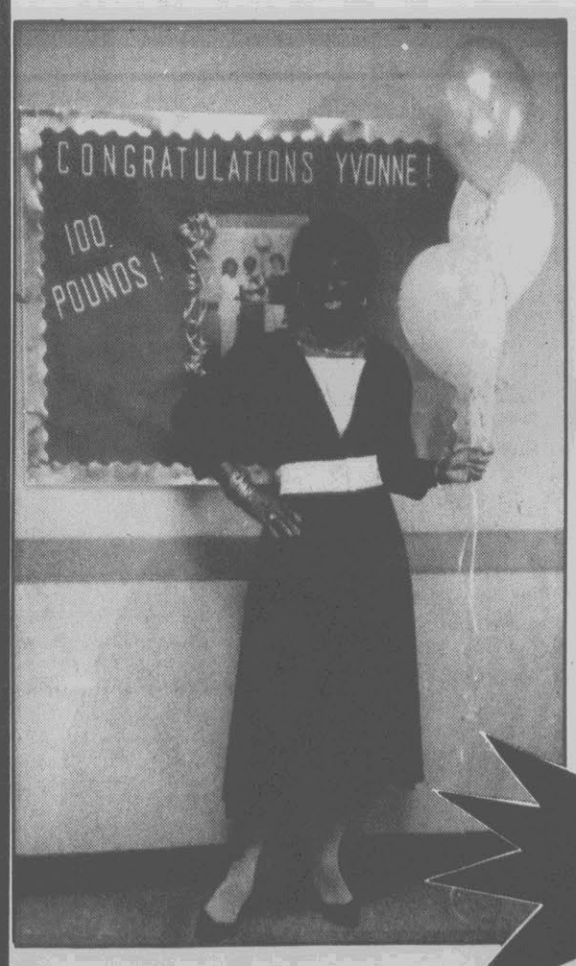

He said he had begun cooperating after a prosecutor had told him he faced a sentence of more than 100 years for the Liberty fire and other arsons. He subsequently pleaded guilty in a plea bargain to conspiracy and faces a maximum of five years in prison.

After his arrest, Stocks wore a hidden tape recorder for numerous conversations with Bowen in 1987 and 1988 and, finally, the single recorded encounter with Tommy Worthington in February 1988.

At the time, Bowen was in the hospital, a month away from death from a heart ailment. A week earlier, investigators told Bowen they had wiretapped his office.

The old saying is not true. Leaving the waving lotion on longer makes a tighter curl...not true. The size of the rods controls the shape of the hair during the waving process. Rods are made of a canvas and plastic composition and vary in diameter, length and design.
Hair shorter than 3 inches should not be rolled on a rod, but can be done. Hair that is longer than 6 inches can be and should be rolled on rods piggyback style.

Brownie Gathering

Brownie Troops from 25 eastern North Carolina Counties are scheduled to attend "Brownies in Wonderland" at East Carolina University's Minges Coliseum on Friday and Saturday.

The event is presented by the Girl Scout Council of Coastal Carolina Inc.

"Brownies in Wonderland" is an opportunity for Brownies to come together and participate various learning games and educational activities.

Activities to be held are singing, dancercizing, games, shopping, making paper bag puppets, safety and science.

A magic show is planned for Friday night and a puppet show will be put on by Cherry Hospital of Goldsboro on Saturday morning.

There are 562 girls plus chaperons registered to attend the overnighter. They will spend Friday night at the coliseum and leave Saturday morning.

For snacks, the Brownies will eat foods like pizza and popcorn and have drinks. Breakfast will also be served Saturday morning.

Road Work Set

The N.C. Department of Transportation has announced that it will close 5.4 miles of N.C. 222 from just west of its intersection with State Road 1245 on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Drainage pipe will be installed. The detour route will be on state roads 1245, 1246 and 1247.

Repair work on bridge 11 on state road 1238, five-tenths of a mile west of its junction with SR 1237, due to have been closed Monday has been postponed indefinitely, said J.D. Gargis, DOT supervisor of bridge maintenance.

Blood Drive

The Pitt County Association of Life Underwriters is sponsoring a blood drive Tuesday from noon to 6 p.m. at the Moose Lodge on Dickinson Avenue.

The goal for this year's drive is 150 pints of blood.

For an appointment call Raquel Zimmerman at 752-4222.

Rotary Scholarships

Applications for 1990-1991 Rotary Foundation Scholarships are available from local Rotary clubs. The scholarships are awarded worldwide and provide for one year of study abroad in one of 164 countries where Rotary clubs are located.

Five types of scholarships are available — graduate, undergraduate, vocational, teacher of the handicapped and journalism. Applicants for graduate scholarships must be between the ages of 18 and 30, for undergraduate scholarships 18 and 24, and for vocational, journalism and teacher of the handicapped between 21 and 50.

Fifteen additional students will be chosen for a 21-month program of language training and academic study in Japan. A scholarship that provides for up to three years of study toward an advanced degree in agriculture is also being offered in developing countries.

For application and deadline information contact local Rotary clubs.

Alumnae Gathering

Peace College alumnae living in the Greenville area have been invited to a dinner at the Greenville County Club on March 15 at 6:30 p.m.

The Rev. George A. Thomas, Peace chaplain, will be the guest speaker. The Peace Chamber Singers will provide entertainment.

For reservation information, contact Liz Thurston, Alumnae Office, Peace College, 15 E. Peace St., Raleigh, N.C., 27604, before March 13.

Student Gets Suspended Term, Probation In Weapons Case

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

School rivalry and fear prompted a D.H. Conley junior to carry a loaded sawed-off shotgun on the Rose High campus last summer during a countywide session of summer school, the student's attorney said in Pitt County Superior Court.

At Ehyin Mohamod Youssef's sentencing hearing Friday, Judge David E. Reid Jr. of Greenville suspended a two-year prison term for the weapons violation and placed Youssef on supervised probation for three years.

At the hearing, Assistant Public Defender Carlos "Buddy" Murray said Youssef, 17, 2106 S. Charles St., Greenville, told him he did take the weapon to school on Aug. 2, the last day of the summer session.

But, his client has said he did not display it to a large number of people, as police investigations have indicated, Murray said.

"Ehyin has constantly told me that he never pulled the shotgun out of the (gym) bag. It was seen in the bag," Murray said.

Two of the people who saw the weapon had previously threatened Youssef, Murray said. One had pulled a knife on him and another had displayed a handgun, he said.

"You got some friction going on, and that's what prompted him to do what he did, even though it was wrong.

"Apparently, it was some type of intraschool rivalry, as far as I can determine," he said.

Youssef pleaded guilty Jan. 18 to a charge of possessing a weapon of mass destruction, a felony for which he could have received a maximum penalty of five years in prison, a fine, or both. For the plea, the state agreed to dismiss a misdemeanor charge of possessing a weapon on school grounds.

A District Court judge agreed to a request by Chief Assistant District Attorney Nancy Aycock to order Youssef to undergo a battery of tests at the Pitt County Mental Health Center, thus the sentencing was delayed until Friday.

Following the recommendations of the presentencing report, Reid placed him on supervised probation for three years on several conditions.

During that period of time, Youssef must not possess any knife, handgun or weapon; he must remain in school or fully employed; he must submit to guidance counseling at D.H. Conley, and probation officers must make random checks and school and at home, according to Reid's sentence.

Also, for minor probation violations, a probation officer may recommend Youssef serve up to five weekends in jail, Reid said, instead of invoking the full suspended sentence.

In a separate matter, Youssef was convicted last October of three counts of simple assault in connection with an incident that occurred about five weeks after he was arrested on the weapons charge. In the assault, he was charged with attempting to run over two teen-agers and a small child while driving a car through Farmville.

He was ordered to perform 75 hours of community service and remain on supervised probation for two years.

Local Arrests Made

Greenville police said several arrests were made in the area Friday.

Officer C.J. Melvin said Bruce Wayne Person, 26, of 509 Sheppard St. was arrested and charged him with assault on a female and injury to personal property following an 8:10 p.m. incident.

Officer A.T. Parrish said Ann Moore, 31, of 102 E. Third St. was arrested at 3:33 p.m. at Farm Fresh and charged with shoplifting and assault. Parrish said the store reported the theft of six steaks worth nearly $30.

Officer B.A. Dobbs said Charles Allen Arrington Jr., 25, of 118 Howard Circle was arrested at 9 p.m. and charged with five counts of breaking, entering and larceny in connection with an earlier incident at 110B Howard Circle.

Officer J.A. Bartlett said Bennie Ray Best, 26, of 302A Watauga Ave. was arrested at 9:26 p.m. and charged with possession with intent to sell and deliver marijuana at the Trade gas station on West Fifth Street.

Officer J.A. Felton said James Hilton Brown, 33, of 100 Contentnea St. was also arrested at 9:26 p.m. and charged with possession with intent to sell and deliver a schedule six substance at Sixth and McKinley streets.

Council To Consider Computer Allocations

A decision on allocating $209,000 to meet the city's future computer needs is one of the items to be considered by the Greenville City Council at a workshop session Monday at 6 p.m. in the third floor conference room of City Hall.

The council will consider four budget ordinance amendments which would allow for the purchase of an IBM AS 400 system for $114,000, a software operating system for $19,000, police/fire rescue software for $28,000, administrative software for $26,000, and training expenses estimated at $10,000.

The council will also consider amending the city pay plan to allow for the hiring of a computer programmer at grade 11 ($20,654 to $30,992 salary range).

The City Council directed the city staff to prepare the budget amendments after agreeing to implement the recommendations of a computer consultant regarding the city's future computer needs.

Also planned Monday is a discussion of electrical problems in City Hall; roofing repairs to the Pitt County Family Violence Center; a budget amendment transferring funds to account for the purchase of public works equipment, and title insurance an a redevelopment parcel.

The council will also review items on the agenda for the council's monthly meeting on Thursday.

Also scheduled for Monday is a council executive session to discuss personnel matters.

Time, Warner Communications Agree To Form Conglomerate

chief executive officers and a board of directors made up of equal numbers named by each company.

By merging in what is legally a tax-free pooling of interests, the companies avoid the financial drain that usually accompanies huge acquisitions. Glenn Britt, Time's chief financial officer, called it "an old-fashioned merger."

"I think we can contrast this to a lot of other transactions we see going on in America, where companies end up being over-leveraged and so constrained they can't do anything," Britt said.

"This is a very important business for this country and we think it's significant that we're forming what will be the largest global media company, and that it's American-owned and U.S.-based," Britt said.

Time executives have been predicting recently that there will eventually be about half a dozen global powers in the media and entertainment business and have vowed to make their company one of them.

"To compete in our particular business, media and entertainment, the ability to product materials in the various forms of media and to distribute them on a worldwide basis is critical," Britt said.

Time Warner would be jointly led by J. Richard Munro, chairman and chief executive officer of Time Inc., and Steven J. Ross, his counterpart at Warner, according to a statement from both companies.

"Our complementary organizations are a perfect fit," Munro and Ross said in a statement. "Together we will be a worldwide leader in all our businesses, enabling us to create and innovate in ways each could only dream about before."

Besides Murdoch's News Corp., other big world media companies include West Germany's Bertelsmann AG, and Gulf & Western Inc. and Capital Cities-ABC Inc. of the United States.

The merger of the companies would continue a trend of consolidation in the media business, marked by such deals as Sony Corp.'s $2 billion purchase of CBS Records Inc. in 1987.

The deal would also help protect each company against unwanted suitors. Time has occasionally been the subject of speculation as a take-over target, and Warner has had uneasy relations with its largest shareholder, Herbert Siegel's Chris-Craft Industries Inc.

Britt said the companies would be stronger together than apart but declined to give details on plans. "We have lots of ideas but we feel at this point it's not appropriate to discuss things," he said.

Time would benefit from Warner's strong international distribution, while Warner would benefit from the strong programming, Reidy said.

Time and Warner are headquartered within one block of each other in Manhattan's Rockefeller Center, and the top advisers to each firm are also within a block or two.

Britt said negotiations on some form of business communication, such as a merger of cable interests, had proceeded off and on for two years. He said intense negotiations, including several all-night sessions, occurred in the last few weeks.

Legally, the deal calls for Warner shareholders to receive 0.465 share of Time for each share of Warner they own. Since there are potentially 177.2 million Warner common shares, and Time closed Friday at $109.12½ a share, that puts a value on Warner of about $9 billion if the deal had closed Friday.

In addition, there are 56.6 million shares of Time outstanding, giving it a market value of a little more than $6 billion based on Friday's close.

Debt and preferred shares account for the balance of the $18 billion market value of the proposed new company.

Appreciation Event

An appreciation program for Joe Louis Daniels and Frankie Smith will be held Sunday at 7:30 p.m. at Higher Ground Free Will Baptist Church.

Program participants include the Faithfullettes, the Gospel Consolators, the Spiritualairs, the Junior Consolators, Souls of Joy, the Higher Ground choir, the Waterside choir and a group from Richmond, Va.

Older Workers Week

March 12 through March 18 has been designated as "National Employ the Older Workers Week."

The annual observance brings the employment problems of middle-aged and older workers to the public's attention to ensure equal opportunity for employment of the older worker.

In commemoration of the week, the Employment Security Commission is seeking the oldest gainfully employed worker in Pitt County. The commission asked residents and local employers to call their nominations to the ESC at 756-2686. All nominations must be made by 5 p.m. on March 10.

James E. Hannan, local ESC manager, said he will award a certificate and dinner at a local restaurant to the honoree.

Science Fair

Ayden Middle School recently held its annual science fair in the media center. Winners were chosen by category for sixth through eighth grades, and three winners were chosen in the fifth grade.

Fifth-grade winners were Sue Anne Bundy, first; Shirley Burke, second, and Shannon Robinson, third. In the biological science category, winners were Carrie DeRemer and Rhonda Fleming, first; Albrect McLawhorn, second, and Greck Cannon and Chad Cleaton, third.

In the earth science category, winners were Rebecca Tullock and Lou Ann Smith, first; Tract Taft and Vicky Gauthier, second, and Kellie Chappell, third. In the physical science category, winners were Elizabeth Smith, first; Wesley Nichols, second, and Jonathan Forehand, third.

The first place winners in the biological science, earth science and phsyical science categories will participate in the regional competition March 17 at East Carolina University.

Program Planned

A program titled "Exercise and Diabetes Mellitus" will be given at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Gaskins-Leslie Center at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Dr. Rick Croskery of Quadrange Internal Medicine will make the presentation and answer questions. The seminar is a presentation of the Pitt County chapter of the American Diabetes Association.

For information call 1-800-682-9692.

Heart-Healthy Club

A club to promote the benefits of heart-healthy exercise has been formed in Greenville.

Called Pacesetters, the club was organized recently at The Plaza Mall. Sponsors are the American Heart Association, Plaza merchants and Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Walking is an emphasis of the club. Walkers taking part are identified with special buttons and have been given books for logging their walking mileage. Certificates of achievement and 100-Mile Club T-shirts will be awarded to those logging 100 miles of walking at The Plaza.

Monthly seminars on health care subjects are to be held each first Tuesday at 7:30 a.m. Speakers and educational material will be provided by the Heart Association and PCMH.

For more information call The Plaza office, 756-1748.

History Competition

Approximately 200 students in grades six through 12 from 15 eastern North Carolina counties will participate in National History Day district competition March 14 at East Carolina University.

Using the theme, "The Individual in History," students will compete in junior and senior divisions and seven categories including papers, individual and group projects, individual and group performances and individual and group media presentations.

District winners will advance to the state competition at Wake Forest University in April and the state winners will compete in June at the University of Maryland.

The ECU event is sponsored by the history department. The Pitt County Historical Society also supports the contest by awarding plaques to schools with winning entries.

District I counties are Beaufort, Bertie, Camden, Chowan, Currituck, Dare, Gates, Hertford, Hyde, Martin, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Pitt, Tyrrell and Washington.

Deadline Extended

The deadline for applying for the annual summer session of study in Italy has been extended until March 15, East Carolina University officials announced.

The study in Italy program is scheduled May 10 through June 15 with headquarters at the Universita degli Studi di Ferrara. In addition to classes at Ferrara, participants also will visit Venice, Florence, Ravena, Padua, Mantue, Verona, Milan and other historic and cultural centers.

Classes, taught in English, will focus on Italy's visual arts and architecture, music, literature and political, religious and scientific thought from the Middle Ages and Renaissance to the present.

The program is open to non-students as well as students and the classes may be taken for college credit, if desired.

For more information contact the ECU Office of International Studies, General Classroom Building 1002, telephone (919) 757-6769.

SBI Told That Scout Council Padded Rosters

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — The State Bureau of Investigation has seized financial and registration records for the Boy Scouts of America in Guilford and Randolph counties after an informant told them the local council used "paper units" to get more funds.

The SBI's application for a search warrant says an employee of the General Greene Council, which covers the two counties except for High Point, said he was told by the council's registrar that as many as 40 percent of the council's 9,052 registered Scouts don't exist.

Council registrar Mary Lib Myers denied the statement attributed to her by the SBI informant, and she denied any Scouts or troops are fictitious.

"We're cooperating fully with the SBI," said Jim Belk, chairman of the Greater Greensboro United Way Campaign, which provides 46 percent of the council's funding. "We're concerned about the allegations, and we certainly want to make sure everything is done to clear this matter up."

The informant also claims Executive Director H. Don Smith forced top council officials to register fake Scouts or be fired. The informant also said Smith suggested the employees obtain lists of names from the public schools and the Greensboro Housing Authority to set up nonexistent Scouts and troops, the Greensboro News & Record reported in Saturday's editions.

Smith denied the allegations in a prepared statement.

"I have not had an opportunity to review matters with the executive committee and will not have any further statement to make at this time," he said. As of Friday, the SBI had not interviewed Smith.

The allegations from the informant were contained in an application for a search warrant, issued Thursday by Superior Court Judge Judson DeRamus Jr. SBI agents seized records for 1987 and 1988 from the council's headquarters, located in Greenboro.

The council's 12 officers either declined to comment, said they know nothing about the allegations or could not be reached for comment.

T. Edgar Sikes, a council board member for about 30 years, said he is unaware of the SBI investigation but has heard of "paper units," although not in connection with the General Greene Council.

"This sort of floors me," Sikes said. "I've heard of paper units before, but when I was president, that's one thing we would not have tolerated. ... It's unethical."

According to the search warrant, the informant said scouting executives created fictitious Scouts and troops to meet enrollment quotas from the national organization of the Boy Scouts of America, which has its headquarters in Irving, Texas.

But national officials denied that membership quotas were set for local councils. David Corti, associate director of public relations, said no quotas were set because officials are aware that membership is often affected by economic conditions, such as the oil depression in Texas.

National officials, however, said the allegations are likely to touch off an internal investigation by Boy Scouts' Atlanta regional office.

United Way officials said Friday they have provided the SBI with documents used by the General Greene Council justify its funding requests.

In 1988, United Way of Greater Greensboro contributed $285,000 and Randolph County United Way contributed $42,000.

The amount of funding is determined in part by the number of people served by a particular group or agency, United Way officials said.

The General Greene Council has increased its membership for eight consecutive years, from 6,610 in 1980 to 9,052 in 1988, according to its 1988 annual report. But the SBI informant said most of these increases have been through enrollment of nonexistent Scouts and troops.

The informant also said promotions and pay raises for council employees are based on monthly and annual growth in membership.

DOT Board To Pay For Stolen Cars

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A Johnston County automobile auction company will be reimbursed $140,000 by the state because a government inspector failed to recognize that 14 luxury cars that allegedly had been rebuilt were actually stolen.

"It's a case of negligence," said William S. Hiatt, the state commissioner of motor vehicles.

The state Board of Transportation agreed to pay Aycock Auction Co., which was not aware the cars were stolen when it sold them to dealers, who then sold the automobiles to motorists. The motorists and dealers were repaid when the state Division of Motor Vehicles later seized the cars, leaving Aycock with the bill.

The Cadillacs and other luxury vehicles were among automobiles sold by a sophisticated car-theft ring uncovered in 1985, according to DMV officials. The ring stole about 400 cars in New York City. The cars were later sold to unsuspecting dealers in at least 17 North Carolina cities — including Raleigh — and in three other states.

State transportation officials said an inspector for the state Division of Motor Vehicles — who subsequently was demoted — should not have approved the 14 vehicles for sale in North Carolina.

DMV officials said the theft ring's scheme involved the purchase of wrecked cars in several northern cities and the theft of similar cars in New York. The serial numbers of the wrecks were transferred to the stolen cars, which were then driven south and presented to state inspectors as rebuilt wrecks. After titles were obtained, the stolen cars were sold to dealers, sometimes through auctioneers.

"These weren't just fly-by-night, good ole' boys slapping (vehicle identification) numbers on the stolen cars," Victor H.E. Morgan Jr., and assistant state attorney general, told transportation board members on Friday. "They were sophisticated."

He said that five men — including Howard Clinton McLaurin Jr., a Chatham County dealer who said he rebuilt the cars, and his company, Silk Hope Automotive Inc. — subsequently were convicted on charges stemming from the car-theft ring.

Officials acknowledged that the state also might be liable for similar settlements involving other cars that inspectors might have wrongly certified for sale. But they said there probably would not be many more such cases, partly because a three-year statue of limitations has expired.

Of the estimated 400 cars stolen by the ring, authorities identified 117 that had been sold in North Carolina. Most of those cars, including the 14 bought by Aycock Auction, were returned to the original owners or to their insurance companies.

After the theft ring was uncovered, Hiatt said, the state cracked down by requiring that titles to all salvaged cars to be stamped as such so they could not be used for stolen cars.

DMV also adopted regulations requiring two inspections by the division before and after a salvaged car is rebuilt.

In other business, the board approved $28.5 million in construction projects, including a highway interchange at the location of a planned RJR Nabisco Inc. bakery near Garner.

Airports Say Few Travelers Stranded

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A strike by Eastern Airlines machinists snarled travel across the country Saturday, but officials at North Carolina airports reported few picketers or stranded travelers.

"Everything's been running smoothly. We've had no confrontations or anything," said Lt. T.E. Nash, an airport safety officer at Charlotte-Douglass International Airport.

Nash said four picketers had been posted at the airport since Saturday morning.

About 20 picketers marched outside a terminal at Raleigh-Durham International Airport Saturday, said Teresa D'amiano, a spokeswoman for the airport.

Eastern has only nine flights a day from the airport, so few travelers were left stranded, she said.

"Most of the flights were covered by other airlines," she said. "Other carriers were trying to accept passengers for those flights."

The mass walkout that began at 12:01 a.m. Saturday by 8,500 mechanics, bag handlers and ground crews escalated a 17-month union-management battle at the nation's 7th largest airline which ordinarily flies more than 1,000 flights with 100,000 passengers daily.

Both sides were deadlocked on $150 million in wage concessions that company boss Frank Lorenzo demanded in order to keep the carrier alive. Talks collapsed in Washington at midnight Friday and no new discussions were planned.

Eastern managers thought they had prepared for the strike by hiring non-unionists and slashing the weekend schedule by up to 75 percent. Many passengers were transferred to flights offered by rival airlines.

But when most pilots and flight attendants honored the machinist lines it threw the company's strike battle plan into disarray and only 23 planes had crews to fly by Saturday afternoon.

"We've been able to mount only a limited schedule today," company spokesman Robin Matell said, admitting strike contingency plans fell well below management projections. "We were relying on what the pilots were telling us. Obviously, in that sense, it was a miscalculation."

Federal Laxity

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Federal inaction on a trucking safety measure may force North Carolina to rescind a law aimed at saving lives by mandating eye-level reflectors or lamps on tractor-trailers.

Rep. Dave Diamont, D-Surry, sponsored the state law after four teen-agers coming home from a religious revival were killed when their car ran under an unmarked trailer parked across a Stokes County road.

"These people were going around a curve and slam-bam there it was," he said.

But to Jennifer Tierney, 32, of Kernersville, the problem had hit even closer to home. Her father was killed in 1983 when he drove his car under a tractor-trailer being backed into a farmer's field.

"I thought it was a rather freak accident, but in investigating it I found out that between 4,500 to 5,000 people a year die in that type of accident," she said in a telephone interview.

The 1987 General Assembly agreed to delay implementing the law until March 15, hoping to give the federal authorities time to adopt a similar measure. But that never happened, Diamont said.

"We passed a law and the federal boys haven't done anything," he said Friday. "The Division of Motor Vehicles contacts me and says, 'We've got a problem here. We don't think there is any way to resolve this unless you pass a law bringing our law into the same level of regulation as the feds.'"

Diamont said it was disturbing that the federal government would not have stronger safety standards.

"If the state of North Carolina has passed a law setting a standard that is higher than the federal standard, should not the federal agency doing the regulating pay attention to that?" he asked. "Did they consider that or did they just cave in to certain elements of the trucking industry that said it would be too expensive?"

Ms. Tierney said she's been hearing for years that the federal government is planning to change the law.

"My question is when, because people are getting killed in accidents every day," she said.

Ms. Tierney cited a University of Michigan study of the problem, called "underride." The study showed it accounted for 76 percent of all car-truck collisions resulting in a fatality.

Officials with the American Truckers Association, while not openly opposing the state law, said "they didn't know if it was cost effective," Ms. Tierney said.

"When they say that, they are putting a price tag on my father's life and others who were killed by running under those trailers," she said.

IN THE STATE

Plans For Schools

RALEIGH (AP) — Key leaders in the state House of Representatives say the state should be playing a greater role in providing basic plans for how new public schools should be built.

During a meeting of the legislature's Governmental Operations Commission last week, Rep. Sam Hunt, D-Alamance, House Speaker Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, and House Minority Leader Johnathan Rhyne, R-Lincoln, all suggested that the state start developing a way for school systems to share plans for building schools as a way to save money.

If local school boards used similar architectural plans for similar schools, they say, there could be a substantial savings.

The matter was not on the agenda, and discussion was brief. The legislators agreed to look further into it when they meet again next week.

House Seized

RALEIGH (AP) — The federal government seized a house and surrounding property in Beaufort County in connection with a Washington man's conviction on drug charges.

Stephen A. West, an assistant U.S. attorney in Raleigh, said the home of Carroll Lenley Hales may be sold and the proceeds distributed among law enforcement agencies that participated in a 1986 undercover operation leading to Hales's arrest and conviction.

William I. Berryhill, the U.S. marshal for the Eastern District of North Carolina, used a court order to claim the property and notify its tenant of the legal action, West said Friday.

The house is about two miles north of Washington, N.C., on U.S. 17.

The woman living there now signed an agreement with the government that allows her to stay in the house for six months or until a judgment is rendered in the case, West said.

The title currently lists Sherry L. Hales and Lisa C. Hales, the daughters of Hales and his wife, Linda E. Hales, as owners, West said.

A press release prepared by the U.S. Attorney's office, said Hales and his wife attempted to give the property to their daughters on July 4, 1987, 11 days before he was convicted in Beaufort County Superior Court of trafficking and selling a controlled substance.

Slashing Sentence

GASTONIA (AP) — A Gastonia man convicted of slashing a Charlotte police officer across the face during a November shoplifting incident was sentenced to six months in prison.

Kyle Rico Miller, 19, pleaded guilty to slashing Officer Robert Barker four times across the nose, cheek and ear after stealing two bathrobes. Barker said Friday his scars are permanent.

Assistant public defender Cynthia Brooks said Miller could have faced more than five or six years in prison.

Mecklenburg County Superior Court Judge Terry Sherrill imposed an eight-year sentence, suspended it and ordered Miller to serve six months in prison, Brooks said. Miller also was ordered to pay $3,633 restitution for Barker's surgery and to attend a drug rehabilitation program at a state prison unit in Wayne County. Brooks said Miller indicated he had a cocaine habit.

Unfair Trade Practices

RALEIGH (AP) — A Wake County Superior Court judge has ruled that a Raleigh car dealership engaged in unfair trade practices by repainting a car and selling it as a "new demonstrator" without disclosing the car's history to its new owners.

Frank McNeish was the new owner. Told by a car salesman at Capital Ford that the Mustang convertible he fancied was a "new demonstration" model, McNeish and his wife, Louise, agreed to pay almost $13,000 for the car.

The salesman told the McNeishes that the car had 8,000 miles on it. But he did not tell the couple that 3,000 of those miles were piled on by a a thief who had stolen the car from the lot and driven to New York, leaving dents and scratches.

On Feb. 17, Judge Donald W. Stephens of Raleigh awarded the couple the $2,318.98 they had already invested in the Mustang, and then tripled the award under the state's unfair trade practices law. Stephens ruled that the failure to disclose the car's journey was "a material misrepresentation."

Sound Pollution

RALEIGH (AP) — The N.C. Environmental Management Division made a "fundamental misinterpretation" of state environmental regulations in approving a condominium project at West Onslow Beach, James E. Kennedy of the N.C. Coastal Federation said.

As a result, storm water runoff from the project could increase pollution in nearby Stump Sound, he said Friday.

"This is an important precedent that will be interpreted in a way that provides negligible water quality protection," Kennedy said by telephone.

The project being developed by Century 21 By the Sea of North Topsail Shores is known as "The Towers."

It consists of two 15-story buildings, each containing 52 luxury condominium units to be built on a 14-acre tract of oceanfront land near the north end of North Topsail Shores near Stump Sound in Onslow County.

Hunter Pays Fines

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — A North Carolina man has paid more than $1,450 in fines and restitution for the illegal killing of a bull elk in 1988 and four bobcats in 1987, according to the Wyoming Game and Fish Department.

Herbert Townsend of Boone, N.C., was hunting deer on a ranch near Cheyenne when he killed a four-point bull elk.

On Oct. 15, the elk season in the area opened and two hunters found the quarters of the elk hanging in a tree. Even though it was the opening morning of elk season, the quarters of elk were cold and dry, and it was obvious the elk had been killed before the season opened.

Cheyenne game warden Steve DeCecco investigated and maintained surveillance on the animal when he could. The elk was removed on Oct. 16 or 17.

Later, a neighboring rancher contacted DeCecco and said some hunters had reported that Townsend had spoken to them and bragged of killing an elk on the ranch in question. There also were reports that Townsend had told of killing bobcats on the same ranch.

DeCecco then contacted a U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service officer in Raleigh, N.C., who interviewed Townsend. Further investigation produced the elk and four mounted bobcats.

Townsend pled guilty and was fined for taking the animals and had his Wyoming hunting and fishing privleges revoked for 1989.

Cows' Deaths Probed

RALEIGH (AP) — Eleven cows died recently at a Chatham County farm, possibly from nitrate poisoning caused by eating hay grown at Raleigh's sewage treatment plant.

"I don't recall having heard of anything like this before," said Susan J. Rollins, an environmental specialist with the Environmental Protection Agency in Atlanta. "This type of problem just hasn't come up."

Michael Canery, a part-time farmer who works as a mechanic at the Raleigh sewage plant, owned the beef cattle. Canery said he had bought the hay to feed his Black Angus herd at his farm near Pittsboro.

Eleven of his 70 cows died Feb. 20 after eating the hay, he said.

"I'm positive that it was the hay that did it," said Canery, who lives in Raleigh. "I'm positive that it was the hay and nothing else."

Robert McFarlane Receives Probation, Fine

By James Rowley
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane became the first participant in the Iran-Contra affair to be sentenced, receiving a $20,000 fine and suspended prison term.

McFarlane, placed on two-years' probation Friday for misleading Congress about covert U.S. support for the Nicaraguan rebels, will be a key prosecution witness at the ongoing trial of his former aide Oliver L. North.

Leaving the U.S. Courthouse with his wife, Jonda, McFarlane said the ordeal left him with "strong faith and a terrific wife and a free country."

"I am looking to the future," he said.

McFarlane admitted he misled Congress by denying that North was helping the Contras raise money and transfer weapons when lawmakers had banned U.S. aid.

In a sentencing proceeding that lasted barely five minutes, U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr. said McFarlane must complete 200 hours of community service during his probabtion.

Robinson said "the nature of the offense and the totality of the circumstances" required him to impose a $20,000 fine.

McFarlane could have received a four-year prison term and a $400,000 fine for pleading guilty to four misdemeanor charges of withholding information from Congress.

The retired Marine lieutenant colonel stood at ease with his hands clasped below his waist as he listened to the comments of his attorney, Leonard Garment and the judge.

"The public servants in this country are not to be found to be more decent and more honorable," Garment said. "Every action on his part .... was taken out of a high sense of duty, a strong sense of serving his country's interests."

McFarlane accompanied North to Tehran in May 1986 on an unsuccessful arms-for-hostages mission. McFarlane, by this time retired from government, carried a key-shaped cake and a Bible signed by President Reagan as a show of good faith.

In his emotionless voice, McFarlane said: "Clearly, this episode in our history has rendered enormous turmoil on our country's processes.

"To the extent that I contributed to that I regret it. I tried to serve my country."

Independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh, who negotiated the plea agreement with McFarlane before North and three co-defendants were indicted last year, told reporters outside the courthouse his office had made no recommendation about the sentence. He refused to comment further.

The sentencing took place on a day that North's trial had recessed for legal arguments. Former Air Force Lt. Col. Richard Gadd, who provided aircraft for the Nicaraguan rebels during the "secret war" that prosecutors say North waged after Congress banned military aid, is scheduled to continue testifying when the trial resumes Monday.

He pleaded guilty March 11, 1988, to charges that he misled Congress in 1985 by stating in three letters that North was not helping raise money for the Contras or providing military assistance.

The letters were written to the House intelligence committee and the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on the western hemisphere in response to queries about news reports that North was providing aid in defiance of the ban imposed by Congress.

Among the 12 felony charges against North are allegations that he made false statement to Congress by drafting the false letters that McFarlane signed.

The defense contends that McFarlane should be held responsible for those letters, not North, who was below his boss on the chain of command.

McFarlane also admitted misleading the full Foreign Affairs Committee in testimony after the Iran-Contra affair became public in later 1986 by denying knowledge of efforts to raise money from foreign governments to help arm the rebels.

Political Intrigue Surrounds Investigation Of Jim Wright

By Jim Drinkard
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — While the House ethics committee deliberates behind closed doors over a series of ethics charges against House Speaker Jim Wright, its complex probe is but part of a growing web of political intrigue surrounding the Texas Democrat.

Some Republicans are complaining that Wright has intervened in the House Intelligence Committee's business to hamper a second ethics investigation into whether the speaker last September improperly disclosed a covert CIA operation in Nicaragua.

And Republican political operatives have set Wright up as their "No. 1 target" in the 1990 elections and are using the speaker as a centerpiece in their long-range efforts to split the Democratic party and recapture control of Congress.

The House speaker traditionally has been a target of the minority party, which seeks to use him to personify the evils it sees in the majority. But with Wright, the attack has taken on personal tones.

While the ethics committee has given little outward hint of the results of its independent counsel's expensive nine-month probe of the speaker's finances, talk in House cloakrooms and corridors is that the investigation has been extremely thorough and the outcome will cause Wright severe political problems, if not legal ones.

Wright is alleged to have abused his office for personal financial gain. This includes using a congressional aide to help compile a book on which Wright earned some $55,000 in royalties, and using a condominium in his hometown of Fort Worth without paying full market value.

He also is alleged to have lobbied federal officials improperly on behalf of Texas savings and loan institutions and lobbied for a gas venture in which he had a financial stake.

Wright has steadfastly denied violating any law or rule of the House, although he has conceded he might have dome some things differently if he had them to do over.

Soon after the outcome of that probe is known — expected sometime the week of March 13 — the ethics panel will turn its attention to the other, less-noticed case against Wright: its inquiry into whether the speaker violated House rules against disclosing classified information.

In an offhand remark last Sept. 20, Wright said he had "clear testimony from CIA people" that the agency had sought to stir up public unrest in Nicaragua to provoke an overreaction by the leftist Sandinista government. The remark appeared to violate rules against publicly disclosing Intelligence Committee testimony, although Wright later denied doing so.

That case is now "on the back burner," said ethics Chairman Julian Dixon, D-Calif., but has not been ignored. Interviews have been conducted with Intelligence Committee staff members on the subject, he said.

But Republicans are concerned that a classified report on a trip to Central America by four panel members in December has not been forwarded to the ethics panel, in part because the lone Democrat on the trip — Rep. Dan Glickman of Kansas — disagreed with the document and declined to sign it.

The report, according to sources, includes a conclusion that Wright's comments had a severe chilling effect on Nicaragua's internal political opposition, effectively shutting down public political dissent and leading to threats of imprisonment for some opposition leaders.

Committee member Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., declined to comment specifically on the report, which under committee rules is a classified document. But he said his conversations with opposition leaders made it clear that they were dealt a setback by news stories about Wright's comments.

"It seemed to be common knowledge," he said in an interview.

Tower Maintains Public Role

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary-designate John Tower has moved out front in the Bush administration effort to salvage his nomination, pleading the case publicly and setting the stage for a possible last-ditch stand on the Senate floor.

"We've still got some good prospects," among Democrats who would be needed to provide a majority vote in Tower's favor, said the official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

"We could still pull it out," the official said. "I admit it's very tough."

As the number of Democrats on record against the nomination grew, Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole raised the prospect of bringing Tower to the Senate floor to answer allegations against him.

"The request would be that John Tower be allowed to come to this chamber, to stand in this well, and to answer his critics face-to-face, charge-by-charge, rumor-by-rumor and fact-by-fact," the Kansas Republican said Friday.

Dole did not formally ask permission for Tower, once a senator himself, to speak from the floor, but said he was considering introducing such a motion.

"If we owe Senator Tower anything, we owe him the right to say, 'I've had my day in court,'" Dole said.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell said he would be "happy to consider any request" by the minority leader, but gave no indication on how the proposal would fare.

If Tower came to the floor to answer questions, it would be the first such instance for a Cabinet nominee and only the sixth time in Senate history for a non-member to be questioned.

On three occasions in the 1800s, newspaper reporters were called before the Senate to answer questions about where they obtained leaked information from closed Senate proceedings which appeared in their stories.

In 1933, the Senate sergeant at arms was called before the chamber to answer questions about an article he had published alleging that senators were selling their votes. And in 1934, three airline officials were called to answer questions about government contracting with airmail carriers.

In the meantime, Tower planned to appear on a major network interview show, CBS-TV's "Face the Nation." The national television appearance follows a week in which the embattled nominee pledged to abstain from alcohol if confirmed and lashed out at the double-standard that existed in the Senate — all attempts to help his faltering cause.

The need for last-ditch efforts came in the wake of President Bush's inability to convince a single Democrat to support the nominee. The administration conducted two days of intensive lobbying with the president holding one-on-one Oval Office sessions with swing Democrats and Vice President Dan Quayle courting senators on Capitol Hill.

But on Friday, the numbers against the nomination continued to rise. Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., said the nation "cannot take a chance" with Tower.

DeConcini, who met privately at the White House with Bush earlier this week and had hinted he might support the nominee, said Tower "is not the proper person for this sensitive position in these critical times."

An Associated Press survey of senators showed 47 Democrats and Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., either solidly against the nomination or leaning against, and 40 Republicans either solidly committed or leaning toward confirmation. The Democrats hold a 55-45 majority in the Senate.

New Doctors Discovery
Weight Loss Pill Approved for U.S. Gov't. Patent
'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight Already Sweeping U.S.

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)— An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" you steady fat loss and calorie reduction by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

The U.S. government has just approved the doctors claims for a hard-to-get patent that confirms "there has never been anything like their fat-bonding pill process before." It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough and is revolutionizing the weight loss industry.

You Can "Eat Normally"

Best of all, "you can continue to eat your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat and reduce calories from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire without exercising".

Flushes Fat Out of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles. Then, all the trapped fat and calories are naturally "flushed" right out of your body because they cannot be absorbed.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated.

"Automatically" Lose Fat

According to one of the inventors, Dr. William Shell, heart specialist and associate professor of medicine at UCLA medical school, "the new fat-bonding process is a "lazy way" to lose weight because the pills alone "automatically" reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat. It is 100% safe and not a drug."

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with glowing reports of weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slimmer, trimmer and more attractive again.

Now Available to the Public

If you are trying to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these "no-risk" highly successful fat-magnet pills directly from the doctors' exclusive manufacturer only (includes optional calorie-reduction plan for even better results). Send $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$3 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. W634, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not 100% satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard and American Express OK. (Send card number, expire date, and signature.) For fastest service for credit card orders ONLY call anytime 24 hours, toll free 1(800) 527-9700, ext. W634.

Bush To Steer Own Course On Nuclear Doctrine

By Bruan Brumley
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Six years after Ronald Reagan urged development of space-based defenses that could make atomic weapons obsolete, President Bush is seeking to put his own imprint on the U.S. nuclear doctrine.

The new president, who has given his National Security Council 90 days to come up with a plan, is expected to shift emphasis from Star Wars to the deployment of a new generation of mobile missiles.

That is more than a cosmetic change, returning U.S. doctrine to deterrence instead of Reagan's radical vision of a world free of nuclear weapons.

Senior administration officials have said in interviews with The Associated Press that Bush does not want to shift direction so radically as to derail Strategic Arms Reductions Talks with the Soviet Union.

"The talks are too far along for that," said one top official, who spoke on condition that he not be identified.

Caution, consistency and coherence are emerging as the credo of the new administration, and the Bush's first defense budget will be closely scrutinized to see how he translates rhetoric into reality.

In a speech last month, Bush offered few details beyond asking that defense spending be kept even with the inflation rate, a 2 percent cut from the request Reagan sent Capitol Hill in January.

But more is involved than moving money from one program to another to, in the president's words, "insure that our capabilities and resources meet our commitments and strategies."

National security adviser Brent Scowcroft, directing the nuclear doctrine review, has described Reagan's nuclear policy as one of "near total ... confusion."

Scowcroft signaled where he is headed in a report that he drafted for the Center for Strategic and International Studies before he joined the administration. The report suggested staggered development of weapons started under Reagan, concentrating on the single-warhead Midgetman mobile missile rather than the 10-warhead MX or the B-2 stealth bomber.

Bush postponed until April a choice between the MX and the Midgetman, pending completion of the review. The chief of the Strategic Air Command, Gen. John Chain Jr., opposed the Midgetman in a Jan. 26 letter, saying, "We can't afford it now." A congressional estimate in 1988 put the cost of the Midgetman at $13.8 billion, about three times the price of putting 50 MX missiles on mobile rail cars.

Continuing all the weapons started by Reagan would cost closer to $400 billion a year than the $308.8 billion requested by Bush, according to Congress.

While Congress and the administration have dickered for a decade on whether to deploy a mobile missile, the Soviets have fielded two, the rail-mobile SS-24, with 10 warheads, and the road-mobile SS-25, with one.

Mobile missiles help stabilize the nuclear balance because an enemy can never be certain where the missiles are, and they can be moved many miles in the 20 or so minutes that it takes a warhead to reach its target, according to Scowcroft and other strategic thinkers.

That means neither superpower can be guaranteed victory in a surprise attack. Variations of that kind of deterrence have been at the heart of U.S. nuclear doctrine, a concept summed up in the acronym MAD — the belief that a nuclear attack by either superpower on the other would result in Mutual Assured Destruction.

"We have for 40 years relied on the threat of nuclear weapons to keep the Soviet hordes at bay," Scowcroft wrote in a biting critique of the bargaining positions that Reagan staked out at the 1986 summit in Reykjavik, Iceland.

"If we do have a strategic concept that brings order to all the disparate actions and proposals of the administration, of which Reykjavik is a prime example, it would be reassuring to know what it is," Scowcroft wrote.

In a 1983 speech, Reagan argued that technological advances made it possible to defend against intercontinental ballistic missiles. That might allow the superpowers to eliminate their atomic arsenals, said Reagan, borrowing a line from the anti-nuclear movement.

Reagan vigorously pursued his call for a space-based missile defense and said a decision on deployment would come in the mid-1990s.

Bush stopped short of that commitment, and said last month that he "will vigorously pursue the Strategic Defense Initiative."

The Center for Strategic and International Studies report with which Scowcroft was affiliated struck a similar note. "Although active strategic defense is a long way from negating deterrence based upon mutual vulnerability, there is still an open question about the long-term advantages of large-scale ballistic missile and air defenses," it said. "These systems might eventually be worth the price of deployment beyond the year 2000."

Defense Secretary-designate John Tower has called Reagan's vision of a anti-nuclear umbrella unrealistic. And for several years, the scientists, engineers and military officers assigned to carry out Reagan's research, in the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization, have aimed for a system to enhance deterrence by making some U.S. systems harder to destroy.

Lt. Gen. James Abrahamson, who retired as head of SDIO on Feb. 1, argues that puts the United States on the same nuclear wavelength as the Soviet Union, which he said never abandoned the doctrine of strategic defense and maintains an Anti-Ballistic Missile (ABM) defense system around Moscow, as allowed under the 1972 ABM treaty. The United States has no such system.

The Soviets also maintain an extensive system of underground bunkers which the Pentagon says are designed to protect the Kremlin leadership in wartime, and has "hardened" numerous military and industrial targets to help them survive a nuclear attack.

"The central political objective of U.S. nuclear policy is to deter aggression against the United States and its primary allies' interests," according to CSIS.

By contrast, "Soviet nuclear policy has as its primary objective the deterrence of a U.S. first use (of nuclear weapons) during crisis of war." "Unlike the United States, Soviet writings and statements made primarily by military professionals convey strong preemptive overtones," the CSIS report said.

Slain DEA Agent Remembered As Gentle, Kind Man

By Helen J. Simon
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARSIPPANY, N.J. — A federal drug agent whose murder touched off a nationwide manhunt was eulogized Saturday as a "teddy bear of a man" who fell victim to the violence he sought to prevent.

About 4,000 mourners turned out for the funeral of Drug Enforcement Agency Agent Everett Hatcher of Boonton. Hatcher was unarmed when he was shot to death Tuesday by a man whom officials say has ties to organized crime.

Thousands of DEA and FBI agents and policemen from as far away as Canada lined up in the parking lot outside St. Christopher's Church when the hearse pulled up.

The strains of a single bagpipe from the New York Police Department's Emerald Society pipe band cut through the chilly air while the flag-draped coffin was carried up the steps.

Father Frank Ferraioli, the family priest, described Hatcher as a gentle and kind man who would live on in the memories of those who met him.

"He was not a man of violence," the priest said.

A former DEA agent and close friend of Hatcher's, Joseph DeGenaro, recalled the slain agent as a "teddy bear of a man" who loved to make people laugh and whom he remembered "grinning from ear to ear."

"He has touched all of us and we are sad he's gone," he said. "But he lives on in our minds and our hearts."

At the service were the slain agent's wife, Maryjane Hatcher, and the couple's two children, Joshua, 3, and Zachary, 9.

Mrs. Hatcher said Friday that people who use drugs must share the blame for her husband's death.

"Even through the grief and our loss, I must ask the question, who really killed Everett Emerson Hatcher?" she said. "Who are the ultimate guilty parties who create the market for the poison which he valiantly tried to remove from our society?"

DEA officials said the investigation of Hatcher's killing was continuing "satisfactorily."

A van that was driven by the main suspect, Costible Farace, 28, of New York's Staten Island, was found late Friday in Staten Island.

Officials believe Farace, a paroled killer, shot Hatcher four times during a meeting in a secluded area along an expressway on Staten Island. Hatcher, who was wearing a radio transmitter, had previously met with Farace several times.

The DEA has undertaken a nationwide search for Farace. He had not been charged with murder, but a warrant was issued for his arrest on narcotics charges.

New York Police Department spokesman Jim Coleman said Farace appeared to have loose ties to the Bonanno crime family, and was involved in a ring that transported cocaine from Florida to New York.

Stutman said officials had gotten calls from hundreds of people trying to cooperate with the investigation, but "as any tedious investigation it will take time to build a case."

"We will locate Mr. Farace, you can rest assured of that," he said.

Stutman has ordered New York's 500 DEA agents to focus on the murder until Farace is found. A nationwide search was underway.

President Bush will visit the DEA in New York this week, a visit expected to boost what he said was low morale in the wake of the murder, Stutman said. DEA head Lawn said Bush also planned to meet with Hatcher's family.

Alar Furor Sours Apple Industry

By Nicholas K. Geranios
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

YAKIMA, Wash. — The great American apple, baked in a pie and teamed with motherhood as the symbol of all that is wholesome, is once again under attack for health risks.

Alar, a chemical used to make apples crisper and more colorful, was labeled a possible carcinogen last week by the Natural Resources Defense Council, adding more fuel to nationwide concerns.

That is an ironic twist for an industry that spends millions of dollars each year promoting the healthful aspects of apple consumption.

Most growers have voluntarily halted the use of Alar, fearing bad publicity more than bad production. But many are bitter over a furor they say is unnecessary and unfair.

"There is absolutely no imminent health risk in eating apples or apple juice or apple sauce or any other apple product," said Charles St. John, a spokesman for the Washington Apple Commission, which has a grower-financed $14 million annual budget to promote apples around the world.

Alar is the trade name for daminozide, a chemical growth regulator marketed by Uniroyal Chemical Co. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency announced last month that it intends to ban Alar by 1990, but for now it is still legal to use. The cancer risk from Alar was not so bad as to warrant an immediate ban, the EPA said.

Apples are a huge business in Washington, where 5,000 growers produced more than $300 million worth of apples last year. Washington grows half the nation's supermarket apples, with thousands of workers employed in packing and shipping the fruit, and making juice, applesauce and other products.

The industry feels threatened by last week's NRDC report warning that eating Alar-treated apples increased cancer risk, especially in children.

The report found that children who consume large amounts of fruit and fruit juice face a cancer risk of about one case for every 4,200 preschoolers exposed to Alar.

The report has been attacked by some scientists and the acting EPA head as misleading and promoting hysterical fears. It is also a frustrating public relations problem for Washington growers, and the industry is launching a counterattack.

"It's not illegal and not in any way harmful to anybody's health," said Marv Sundquist, who co-owns 600 acres near Yakima. "There are so many other things we consume every day that have so much greater risk than this would have."

The Washington Apple Commission contends only about 5 percent of the acreage is sprayed with Alar. The state Department of Agriculture puts the figure at about 7 percent.

The NRDC estimates are somewhat higher, but no one really knows for sure how much Alar is sprayed because its use is not regulated. Uniroyal has said Alar sales are down 75 percent since Alar fears were first raised in 1985.

Alar is not a pesticide, and it can't be washed off the apples by the consumer. It is sprayed on trees in the spring and acts to keep apples on the tree longer. That makes harvesting easier, improves the apples' color and firmness, and extends their shelf life.

The most recent reports about Alar are already hurting apple sales, which were showing a decline by the end of the week.

"Shipments are slow," said Jay Grandy, president of the Snokist apple cooperative in Yakima, on Friday, adding that Alar fear "is the only thing I can point to."

The Alar dispute hits growers in the pocketbook in more ways than one. U.S. consumers want crunchy, colorful apples, and they simply cannot be produced in national volume without chemicals, St. John said.

"When you ask the consumer, 'Will you buy something that is not as appealing or crunchy (but not treated with chemicals)?' they'll tell you, 'Yes, I would,'" he said. "But we know from actual practice in supermarkets that they don't.

"Americans have been so preconditioned that everything we purchase must be the biggest and best," he said. "Our lower grades of apples aren't as appealing ... and we are not able to sell them."

Major juice makers like Tree Top Inc., based in the Yakima suburb of Selah, say the same. But a recent Consumer Reports study found Alar residues in 23 of 32 apple-juice samples it tested. The magazine did not identify which brands it tested.

The chemical first came under a negative spotlight in 1985, and by 1986 the Washington Apple Commission was recommending that growers not use it.

The industry has hoped that the completion of extensive tests on Alar would clear it for use. But the EPA announcement last month that it planned to ban Alar, on the basis of preliminary testing, was viewed as a major setback. It is only the latest apple industry chemical to come under fire.

Top 10 Fugitive Nabbed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BUTTE, Mont. — A man on the FBI's Ten Most Wanted list for fleeing child molestation charges was arrested while living under an alias at a campground, the FBI said Saturday.

Roger Lee Jones, 43, of Sarasota, Fla., was arrested at a KOA campground on burglary charges stemming from a February service station robbery in Great Falls, 150 miles north of Butte, FBI agent Toby Harding said.

Jones, who used the alias Mike Andrews, admitted his true identity in custody, Harding said.

He was held without bond in the Great Falls jail on charges of burglary and felony theft, and was scheduled to appear before a Cascade County justice of the peace Monday, Great Falls police Sgt. Russell Sinnott said.

Harding said authorities in Great Falls and Florida will decide whether Jones will face charges in Montana or be transported back to Florida.

Jones was arrested in Florida in August 1986, charged with seven counts of lewd and lascivious assault on a child under 16, Harding said. Jones fled the area after posting bond.

Jones was charged under federal statutes in March 1987 with unlawful flight to avoid prosecution, and placed on the most-wanted list last May.

Acupuncturists Charged

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Prosecutors have issued warrants for the arrests of 47 acupuncturists on charges they bribed a state licensing official for answers to an exam they must pass to practice in California.

District Attorney Ira Reiner said the 30 men and 17 women were charged with paying bribes, ranging from $5,000 to $27,000, to a member of the California Acupuncture Examining Committee.

Dr. Chae Woo Lew, 54, of Hillsborough, resigned his post on the committee's 11-member board after he was arrested in January on charges that he took nearly $500,000 in bribes from 54 aspiring acupuncturists between 1982 and 1988.

A native Korean, Lew wrote and judged all the exams administered in Korean, according to Herbert Lapin, a deputy district attorney prosecuting the case.

Lew was charged with conspiracy to commit bribery, conspiracy to dissuade a witness and 54 counts of bribery. He could face a maximum of eight years in state prison if convicted.

Britain Assures Rushdie Of Unwavering Support

By Edith M. Lederer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — The government assured novelist Salman Rushdie of its unwavering support Saturday, and Iran suggested London could defuse the crisis over Rushdie's new novel by banning the book and prosecuting the writer.

The Indian-born author questioned government support for him Friday after Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe said Rushdie's "The Satanic Verses" has offended some Britons as well as Moslems.

"The British government, by accepting that the book is insulting, cannot object to the death sentence on the writer, which has been issued in line with Sharia (Islamic law)," it said.

Britain repeatedly has demanded Iran's spiritual leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, rescind his Feb. 14 death sentence on Rushdie for writing the novel, which some say insults Islam.

The Foreign Office reiterated Saturday that Britain will not discuss the Rushdie affair with Iran until the death threat is withdrawn.

Rushdie, 41, who was born into a Moslem family in India, is in hiding. On Friday he telephoned the office of Paddy Ashdown, leader of the centrist Social and Liberal Democratic Party, and said he was worried about the commitment of the government's support for him.

Asked to comment Saturday on Rushdie's misgivings, Mrs. Thatcher said: "I want to say that the government has not changed its position at all on this."

Home Secretary Douglas Hurd, who joined Mrs. Thatcher at a Conservative Party conference in London, was asked about reports that Rushdie fears for his continued police protection.

"The protection is afforded to him by the police — not because he requests it, not at my direction, but because it's their professional assessment that he needs that protection," he said.

Hurd said he understood "the hurt and insult being felt" by Moslems over the book, but "the overwhelming majority" of Britons accept Rushdie's right to free expression.

Tehran Radio called on the British government to clarify "whether or not freedom of expression and writing can be a license for defamation and insult.

"If the British government does not see the freedom of expression as a license for defamation, then legal prosecution of the author, prevention of further publication of the book, and removing already published copies are reasonable requests which can remove much of the friction," the state radio said in a commentary.

Britain's chief rabbi, Lord Jakobovits, said in a letter in The Times of London on Saturday that Rushdie and Khomeini both had abused freedom of speech, "the one by provocatively offending the genuine faith of many millions of devout believers, and the other by a public call to murder."

"It should be illegal to allow either provocation to be published or broadcast," he wrote.

Rocard told French radio Saturday that in a democratic society, freedom of thought was "total."

Khomeini was an "instigator of murder" for issuing death threats against Rushdie, he said.

Moslems demonstrated against Rushdie in at least four countries Saturday. In West Germany, 5,000 protesters marched peacefully through downtown Bonn. But police in India lobbed tear gas to disperse protesters who stoned cars in northern Anantang town. About 25 people were injured in the clash in Jammu-Kashmir, India's only majority Moslem state.

In Bangladesh, 400 people marched through Dhaka shouting "Death To Salman Rushdie!" and in Thailand, 700 protesters in Bangkok burned an effigy of Rushdie.

Nineteen people have been killed in protests over the book.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency on Saturday welcomed Mrs. Thatcher statements on the novel as her "first expression of sympathy with Moslems over the book" and "a clear attempt to defuse the row between Britain and Iran before next Tuesday's deadline that the Iranian parliament gave to London to alter its attitude or face the consequences of a complete cut in diplomatic ties."

But Tehran Radio said severing diplomatic ties would not end the Rushdie affair.

"London's insistence on ignoring the fact that freedom of writing can be abused will not only destroy the ground for any kind of relation(ship) in future, but will endanger British interests in other parts of the world," it declared.

Oil Cleanup Continues As Damages Assessed

By Steve Elliott
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONOLULU — Crews worked to remove thick oil washing in along a 2-mile stretch of shoreline Saturday, while the Coast Guard checked damage to a tanker that spilled 117,000 gallons of oil when it ran aground, authorities said.

The 800-foot tanker Exxon Houston floated free of a reef Friday evening, about 24 hours after a storm drove it aground off a little-used stretch of coast 15 miles west of Honolulu and its famed Waikiki Beach.

Some of the spilled oil washed to sea during the night, said Randal O'Grydziak, with the Coast Guard's Marine Safety Office in Honolulu.

"For the most part, it looks pretty good," O'Grydziak said. "Mother Nature overnight has through some tide changes done away with a lot of the (petroleum) product."

He said cleanup crews worked to remove oil-soaked vegetation, soak up oil in water pools in the coral reef and rake the affected beaches.

The state Department of Health had closed beaches along the soiled shoreline, O'Grydziak said.

Libert K. Landgraf, deputy director of the state Department of Land and Natural Resources, said there was no immediate evidence of injury or death to marine life or birds.

The Coast Guard's Pacific Area Biological-Chemical Strike Team arrived from San Francisco late Friday and was standing by with a floating boom that skims oil off the ocean surface, Coast Guard Lt. Brad Nelson said.

He said the team had not decided whether to use the 612-foot boom, which is towed between two ships.

The Clean Islands Council, a Hawaii oil spill cleanup cooperative, was contracted to perform the cleanup by Exxon Co. USA, the Houston-based domestic oil and gas division of Exxon Corp. Exxon Co. USA, will pay for the costs of the cleanup, according to Exxon attorney Leonard Alcantara.

Officials had planned to wait until high tide early Saturday to attempt to remove the tanker from the reef.

But it floated free on its own late Friday after workers pumped off more than 9,400 tons of ballast water and some of the remaining 3.8 million gallons of crude oil, lightening the ship to prevent more crude oil or ship's fuel from spilling, said Scott Hartvigsen, another Coast Guard spokesman.

The tanker was moved to deep water five miles offshore and a Navy ship and three tugboats had lines attached to the vessel, Nelson said. A Coast Guard cutter and Navy salvage ship also were with the ship.

There was no problem keeping the tanker afloat, Nelson said.

The ship ran aground late Thursday after high wind and rough seas tore it from its offshore mooring.

The Exxon Houston had unloaded 400,000 barrels of Alaska crude oil at the mooring a mile off the Hawaiian Independent Refinery at the time, said Capt. Gordon Piche, commander of the Coast Guard's Marine Safey Office.

When the ship tore away from its mooring, floating hoses unloading the oil pulled free, spilling about 25,000 gallons of crude oil.

When the ship ran aground, one of its fuel tanks ruptured, spilling about 92,000 gallons of thick, black bunker oil.

Gorbachev Can Claim Success In Foreign Policy

By John-Thor Dahlburg
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Jetliners daily carry Soviets to visit relatives in the United States and roam the shops. In Central Russia, resident U.S. inspectors verify the scrapping of Soviet missiles. New Yorkers along Broadway cheer the Kremlin leader.

In four years, President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's "new thinking" has brought style and substance to Soviet foreign policy, largely due to plaudits from the West. Once the domain of frowning apparatchiks with a penchant for saying "nyet," Kremlin diplomacy now proclaims its willingness to consider any complaint, and to compromise.

While still beset at home by a stagnant economy, ethnic unrest and a growing impatience for more food and a better life, Gorbachev can cite a string of impressive achievements in world affairs since he was named Communist Party chief March 11, 1985:

—A U.S.-Soviet treaty signed in December 1987 banning medium-range and shorter-range nuclear missiles. It was the first negotiated reduction in superpower nuclear forces.

—An end to the nine-year military intervention in Afghanistan that soured East-West relations and left up to 13,000 Red Army soldiers dead.

—The narrowing of differences with China and agreement to hold the first Chinese-Soviet summit in 30 years in Beijing in May.

When Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain first met Gorbachev in December 1984, she judged: "We can do business together." Her verdict sums up the West's attitude toward the energetic, pragmatic communist who succeeded Leonid I. Brezhnev, Yuri V. Andropov and Konstantin U. Chernenko.

In a recent public opinion poll in the conservative bastion of Orange County, Calif., the Soviet leader scored a higher favorable rating than Bush — 70 percent to 67 percent. When Gorbachev and his wife, Raisa, got out of their limousine near a Broadway theater during a December visit to New York, Americans cheered from the sidewalks.

Gorbachev, 58, says his brand of diplomacy forms a seamless web with "perestroika," his drive for economic and social reform at home. "We say honestly, for all to hear, that we need a lasting peace to concentrate on the development of our society and tackle the tasks of improving the life of the Soviet people," he said in 1987.

In other words, reduced world tensions mean the need for fewer guns, and that means more bread and apartments for Soviet people. A cut of 500,000 men and 10,000 tanks in the country's armed forces, announced by Gorbachev in December, appears motivated as much by Soviet economic pressures as by a desire to ease East-West confrontation in Europe.

Conversely, Gorbachev's domestic reforms have led to improved relations abroad and often appear motivated to dispel what he refers to as the Soviet Union's "enemy image." Some examples: the 1987 release of Nobel Peace Prize laureate Andrei D. Sakharov from internal exile, the freeing of more than 300 imprisoned political and religious activists, and a marked increase in the number of Soviets permitted to emigrate and visit relatives abroad. More than 35,000 visas were granted last year for Soviets to visit the United States, twice the 1987 figure.

The new face of Soviet foreign policy was personified by Gorbachev's appointment of Eduard A. Shevardnadze to replace Andrei A. Gromyko as foreign minister. The dour Gromyko, nicknamed "Mr. Nyet" by those he faced across the negotiating table for nearly three decades, was elevated to a ceremonial post less than four months after Gorbachev came to power to make room for the debonaire Shevardnadze, who pointedly has criticized the way the Soviets used to deal with the outside world.

In July, Shevardnadze announced that the "class-struggle" basis of Soviet diplomacy, under which the Kremlin for decades labored for the triumph of socialist revolution abroad, has given way to "universal human values" such as the banning of nuclear weapons and renunciation of military force in favor of negotiation to settle international disputes.

Such a switch in emphasis implies a cutback in Soviet commitments to client states, including Afghanistan, Ethiopia, Angola and Mozambique. The passage to socialism by such countries was trumpeted as a major Kremlin foreign policy success in the 1970s, but their unproductive economies cost the Soviets dearly in economic and military aid.

In April, Gorbachev is to travel to Cuba, where he is expected to outline new limits on the Soviets' largess to bolster the island's economy and to signal to its neighbors that the Kremlin no longer will bankroll socialist revolutions in Latin America. Gorbachev also has indicated that economics played a role in the Kremlin's decision to end the Afghan intervention, which one Estonian newspaper estimates cost the Soviets $100 billion.

However, the "new way of thinking" in some respects may be only a "new way of talking" on some issues the new leadership has yet to address.

Despite Gorbachev's repeated calls for construction of a "common European home," for instance, the Berlin Wall still divides the German city and, symbolically, the continent into communist and non-communist camps.

The Kremlin is seeking to become a major player in Asia, a role that is impossible without better relations with Japan. But the Soviets so far have failed to satisfy Japan's condition for improving ties: renegotiation of the status of the Kuril Islands, which the Red Army occupied at the end of World War II.

Opposition Party Leader Quits

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TORONTO (AP) — Ed Broadbent, whose New Democratic Party won a record number of seats in the last election but who failed in four tries to become prime minister, resigned Saturday after nearly 14 years as party leader.

"Now is the time for renewal, now is the time to pick a new man or a woman to take us the next step," Broadbent said as he announced his resignation in an hourlong speech to leaders of the opposition party.

His voice breaking with emotion, Broadbent called on the left-of-center New Democrats to fight the new conservatism he said is sweeping Canada and widening the gap between rich and poor. One party member attending the caucus shouted "No!" as Broadbent said he was quitting.

It was not immediately clear when the popular politician will leave or when a party convention will be held to replace him.

Broadbent, 52, who has represented Oshawa southern Ontario in Parliament since 1968, spoke to 120 members of the party's Federal Council, or governing body. His announcement followed months of speculation about his political future in the wake of Nov. 21 general election.

Although the New Democrats won a record 43 seats, they remained in third place among the national political parties and failed to win a single seat in Quebec, even though Broadbent learned French and campaigned vigorously there.

Only a year earlier, the party had led in public opinion polls.

After a bitter election campaign dominated by the free-trade agreement with the United States, Brian Mulroney was re-elected prime minister and his right-of-center Progressive Conservative Party won 169 seats in the House of Commons. The Liberal Party finished second with 82 seats.

Both opposition parties opposed the free-trade agreement, which was supported by Mulroney. Broadbent said he favored amendments that would protect Canadian jobs he believes will be threatened by the accord.

During his long tenure as party leader, Broadbent was credited with leading his party toward the political mainstream.

"As in the past, when I've reached a decision, I'm very happy and convinced that the decision I made is the right one," he said.

Broadbent, whose personal popularity always was higher than his own party's, had indicated earlier he might step down.

After the election, he appeared tired and demoralized. He questioned publicly whether he had the energy to continue in his position.

"You have to have your whole heart and soul, in terms of commitment, especially in national politics," he said in January.

"In terms of my disposition at this stage of my life, am I going to go out there and give it 100 percent of my energy and whatever talents I have? Unless a person is willing to do that, they ought not lead a political party."

Iditarod Sled Race Gets Under Way

By Susan Gallagher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Throngs crowding a downtown street covered with trucked-in snow cheered Saturday as 49 mushers and hundreds of dogs charged off on the first leg of the 1,168-mile Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race from Anchorage to Nome.

The 17th annual race over the Alaska Range, across desolate stretches and along the storm-raked coast began in clear, windy weather at 9 a.m., with veteran musher Jerry Austin of St. Michael first out of the chute.

Susan Butcher, aiming for her fourth consecutive win and the $50,000 winner's share of the $250,000 purse, was 19th to leave in the succession of departures spaced two minutes apart. Rival Rick Swenson of Two Rivers, the only person to win the race four times, was No. 22.

"I feel great! I feel great!" Butcher, 33, of Manley said with a laugh as she hugged a well-wisher before the start. Last year, she finished her 12th Iditarod in just under 11 days and 12 hours.

"I think that I can take the pressure," she said. "I know that everybody's gunning for me, I know that everybody's after me, but I don't see how they can be more after me than they were last year."

A temperature of 13 degrees and winds gusting to 46 mph combined for a wind chill of minus 22 degrees at the race's start. Stronger wind and clear skies were reported along the first stretch of the race route.

The snow was trucked in because the streets had been swept.

Some observers crowded into a fast-food restaurant to stay warm while awaiting the start. Children outside hawked Iditarod newspapers and a man wearing a sandwich sign advertised Iditarod photographs.

The race, inspired by a sled-dog relay of serum to Nome for a diptheria outbreak in 1925, began in 1973.

The number of competitors dropped this year because the record cold spell of January and February prevented mushers from giving their dogs enough training, said race manager Jack Niggemyer. There were 53 competitors last year.

The racers will stop at 25 checkpoints along the route, where they will get food for themselves and their dogs. Along the way, they will camp out or stay in homes or lodges.

Commercial subsidies for the race have grown substantially over the years, with money coming from a variety of sources, including television rights, dog-food companies and manufacturers of cold-weather gear.

Joe Redington, the 72-year-old "Father of the Iditarod," stood by his dogs early Saturday as he waited to compete for the 15th time.

"I'm a little more serious this year than I have been before," said Redington, who has never won the race. "I usually go out and have a good time. I'll be a little more serious now."

Libby Riddles, whose 1985 victory made her the first woman to win the Iditarod, is back after missing two of the last three races and dropping out of a third.

"I'm just real anxious to get on the trail," said Riddles, 32 , of Nome. "I feel prepared for anything."

Botha Staying On

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — President P.W. Botha says he is determined to serve out the rest of his current term despite "derision and attacks" following his stroke.

The 73-year-old Botha, in an interview published Saturday by major Afrikaans-language newspapers, said it was too early to speculate whether he would seek another term after his five-year term expires in September. He plans to return to work in April.

Botha suffered a stroke on Jan. 18 and has spent most of the time since then recuperating at his coastal vacation home while his duties are carried out by an acting president, Constitutional Development Minister Chris Heunis.

Botha said in the interview he would complete the term despite calls for him to step aside.

Peace Activists' Meeting With Palestinians Blocked

By Rini Rabin
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATAROT, Occupied West Bank — Israeli troops blocked West Bank roads Saturday and turned back hundreds of Israeli peace activists seeking to meet Palestinians in the Arab city of Ramallah.

Activists of the mainstream Peace Now movement were outraged and said Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin is "surrendering" to demands of Jewish settlers. A Defense Ministry official said the army was concerned clashes would break out between Jewish settlers and Jewish peace activists.

Legislator Dedi Zucker of the left-wing Citizens' Rights Movement Party said the blockades reflect a government policy not conducive to making peace, Israel radio said.

A convoy of dozens of cars and a bus, bearing poster-size signs saying "Peace Now," was one of five groups that left four Israeli cities to meet West Bank residents in different locations to talk peace today. The army blocked them all, Israel radio said.

As the Jerusalem convoy made its way north from the city, military jeeps drove into the middle of the road.

"I'm sorry, but I must inform you this is a closed military area," a soldier identified as Col. Chai said. "You cannot proceed."

"We weren't planning any assemblies or marches or demonstrations — just meetings," said Peace Now spokesman Tsali Reshef.

"We would like to prove to Israel and to the rest of the world that with the right approach and with mutual respect, peaceful relations can be had ... and we will not give up," he said.

Uri Ariel, head of the West Bank Settlers' Council, was one of several settlement leaders who on Friday called on the army to block the meetings, charging they would "legitimize terror" by encouraging the Palestinian anti-Israeli revolt. At least 388 Palestinians and 17 Israelis have died in the uprising in the occupied lands, now in its 15th month.

The proposed talks had been coordinated with underground leaders of the Palestinian revolt, and the Palestinians had agreed to stop violence and protests in meeting areas, Peace Now activists said.

The Unified National Leadership of the Uprising distributed a leaflet in Ramallah, saying: "We call on the masses of Palestinians ... not to attack cars with Peace Now signs."

Peace Now has called on Israel to negotiate with the Palestine Liberation Organization, which the government refuses to do because it regards the PLO as a terrorist movement.

As troops watched the Israeli vehicles make U-turns on the outskirts of Ramallah, about 10 Palestinians cheered from the roadside, clapping and shouting, "Peace, peace."

The activists returned to a Jerusalem parking lot where they unfurled banners demanding, "Stop Shooting! Speak Peace Now!"

Legislator Ran Cohen addressed the crowd briefly.

"Defense Minister Rabin is ready to let 365 days go by in which there are dead and wounded on both sides, but he won't let even one day go by in which the two sides talk to each other," Cohen said.

"If anyone is killed or wounded today, it is his fault."

Thousands Hold Peace March

By Douglas Grant Mine
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — About 10,000 people carrying palm leaves, white flags and peace banners marched Saturday to demand postponement of the presidential election and a negotiated end to the civil war.

Leftist rebels accused the government of bad faith in the effort to schedule talks aimed at achieving peace. They said they are being "pushed to continue and escalate the war."

The march through downtown San Salvador was sponsored by dozens of religious, political and student organizations.

"Because of this unjust war, we struggle for peace," said the marchers. Their column stretched for about two miles along Juan Pablo II Avenue running through the center of the city.

The Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, or FMLN, in January proposed postponement of the March 19 presidntial election as a first step toward ending the 9-year-old civil war. The rebels, who had rejected all previous elections this decade as a sham, said they would participate in and respect the outcome of the vote if it were postponed until September to give them time to organize.

The government of Christian Democratic President Jose Napoleon Duarte has suggested holding it April 30.

The guerrillas say that is much too soon. The legislature, which is controlled by the rightist opposition and has a virtual veto power over any postponement, insists the election be held as scheduled.

The FMLN, in a communique broadcast over clandestine Radio Venceremos, said Saturday that guerrilla-government talks must be held Tuesday and Wednesday in San Salvador if there is to be any prospect of negotiating peace.

The government had proposed meeting with the rebels in Guatemala. But the FMLN insists any negotiations be "among and in full view of all Salvadorans."

Supplies Reach Kabul

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — Soviet truck convoys carrying emergency food and fuel reached the Afghan capital on Saturday, Radio Kabul said.

The relief convoy had been stranded at Hairatan, an Afghan village on the border with the Soviet Union, after bad weather closed the 250-mile Salang Highway, said the radio monitored in Islamabad, Pakistan.

It did not say how long the convoy had been stuck or when the snow hit the highway, which is Afghanistan's key overland link to the Soviet Union. Avalanches periodically shut the highway, which cuts through the Hindu Kush mountains.

It was along the Salang Highway that Moscow moved the remainder of its troops out of Afghanistan on Feb. 15, after nine years of military intervention.

In a bid to preempt Afghan rebel attacks on departing Soviet soldiers, Soviet and Afghan fighter jets bombed both sides of the highway in the last week in January.

As many as 600 civilians died in the bombing raids, said a publication distributed by the Jamiat-i-Islami guerrilla group, which operates extensively along the highway.

Afghan Moslem guerrilla fighters, called mujahedeen, have besieged the capital, Kabul, and blocked most roads into the city since late last year. The fighters are backed by the United States, Pakistan, China and several Arab states.

There are serious food and fuel shortages in Kabul, caused as much by an unusually bitter winter as by the rebel siege.

A U.N. program to airlift food and fuel from Islamabad for refugees in Kabul has been stalled because airlines refused to fly into the city, saying it was not safe.

Radio Kabul reported that Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi promised economic and humanitarian assistance to Afghan Foreign Minister Abdul Wakil, who is visiting the Indian capital for meetings with top officials.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

A Lesson

Politics & Waste A Noxious Mixture

Pitt County has had an encounter with hazardous waste. The state, furiously searching for a waste site, can take a lesson from Pitt's experience.

In May 1988 the county had an eyeball to eyeball look at what happens when a tough issue is mishandled. Neighboring Edgecombe County offered to host the state's hazardous/low level nuclear waste dump, nestle it on the Pitt County line, then take the booty and wave from the balcony. All the negotiations were done in secret. Public opposition stopped the issue cold.

'Hazardous substances are barrels of poison. They shouldn't be handled by a barrel of monkeys.'

The Edgecombe effort was seriously flawed. That's why it failed. The proposal was devised without public debate and it was based on a faulty premise: the state can buy its way out of a dead end. North Carolina thought, by offering megabucks to any taker, it could convince a poor county desperate for revenue that a waste dump was a jackpot. Wrong approach.

That's why Pitt County knows, better than most in the state, just why the location of North Carolina's hazardous waste dump must be based on sound environmental and economic guidelines. Neither politics nor money should influence decisions about hazardous waste.

But the latest waste legislation sizzling on the N.C. Senate floor puts politics right back in the barrel. It gives Gov. Jim Martin an uncomfortable degree of control over how the state disposes of its hazardous waste.

A bill introduced last week gives Martin final say on where a site will be. It gives him the power to choose what type of facility should be used, whether it should be a dump or an incinerator. It gives the governor the authority to appoint over half the members of an Industrial Waste Management Commission, the board charged with building the state's hazardous waste facility.

Lawmakers are scurrying to address the waste dilemma — a rush prompted by the closure of a South Carolina dump to Tar Heel waste. Unless North Carolina makes an effort to build its own waste site, South Carolina won't take any more waste. Right now, the stuff has no where to go.

Gov. Martin seemed anxious to take responsibility for the problem, and legislators appear equally eager to give him what he wants. It doesn't take 20/20 vision, however, to see the gaping hole in the plan — a hole big enough for plethora of politics to pour through. One individual should not have such influence on an important issue. There's too much opportunity for abuse.

For Martin, it will be tempting to stick the hazardous waste facility in an area with little political clout. Revenge could lure him to put it on the turf of a political enemy. It will be equally enticing to cut back-room deals with poor counties, offering them state dollars that would otherwise be out of reach. And with such broad control, Martin could employ these options.

Remember for just a moment, what constitutes hazardous waste. Corrosives, poisons, industrial toxins — battery acid, for example, and toxic chemicals. These substances endanger human lives. That's why they're hazardous.

The state cannot afford to dispose of its poisons and toxins incorrectly. It does not need them burned or buried in the wrong place. There are simply some areas that aren't ecologically appropriate for that use.

That's why correct environmental criteria and proper economic guidelines must be the basis for siting a waste disposal facility. Politics cannot be substituted for careful decision-making based on scientific data and sound conclusions. The danger is too great.

For example, it makes ecological sense not to bury toxins where the water table is close to the ground, or where geology is unstable. It makes sense to locate a disposal site close to the state's major hazardous waste producers, so that spills during transportation are less of a risk. It makes sense to place a dump near an interstate quality highway instead of a winding country road.

It makes no sense to let politics supersede these realities. Hazardous substances are barrels of poison. They shouldn't be handled by a barrel of monkeys.

Pitt County learned that last May. Now it's the state's turn.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I was dismayed when I heard about the bodies being left overnight in a van in Raleigh, but I was appalled when I learned that body parts were found in a barn near Bethel!

The newspapers said there were no laws broken, only a moral question. Where do most of our laws come from? Don't they start with moral questions? Where is the law that protects our late loved ones? Do we want Greenville and Pitt County known as the Hub of the East, home of ECU, or do we want Pitt County known as the place where three-year-old body parts were found!

I ask our state legislators to enact legislation to end this procrastination of incineration of bodies and body parts! Give them maybe a week, but not years!

To the editor:

Many people had a holiday Feb. 20, Presidents' Day, but I didn't see any special observance or even mention of this holiday by The Daily Reflector or by television. All week I looked for something, but I didn't find anything. I asked a young lady at Sheppard Memorial Library to check some newspapers of Feb. 20 and 22. She checked the News and Observer and the Charlotte Observer. All she could find was a small piece in the Charlotte Observer.

Does the news media think the people of this state aren't interested in reading about or watching some special program about Washington or Lincoln?

Shouldn't the holiday in remembrance of our presidents and the values they believed in be remembered and honored by all of us?

The GOP's Favorite Democrat

David Broder

WASHINGTON — The night after the Chicago mayoral primary, Jesse L. Jackson was offered an unusual place to lick his wounds: the White House. The speed with which President Bush moved to invite Jackson over for a therapeutic private chat speaks volumes about the Republicans' new political strategy and the threat it poses to the long-term dominance of the Democratic Party.

Bush is signaling in the most obvious way possible that if the most prominent black in America is rebuffed by the Democratic Party, as Jackson surely was in Chicago, the GOP will offer consolation.

This was not the first act of solicitude Republicans have extended to Jackson. Indeed, since the last election, he has become the GOP's favorite Democrat.

It's not because they find Jackson's ideas so attractive; still less do they have any realistic hope of converting him to the Bush-Republican cause. But the more ostentatiously polite and respectful and generous the Republicans are to Jackson, the more they raise the potential that he can help them by becoming the wedge that splits the Democrats' biracial coalition wide open in 1992.

Should Jackson win the nomination in his third try, Lee Atwater, the Bush campaign manager and new chairman of the Republican National Committee, would need no manual on how to exploit the possibility of white flight from the Democratic Party. What he is busily orchestrating is the more subtle game of how to put the GOP in a position to gain in the likelier prospect that Jackson is rejected for a third time in 1992. This scenario that was strengthened by the serious setback Jackson suffered in the voting in Chicago.

Ever since the death late in 1987 of Chicago's first black mayor, Harold Washington, a Jackson ally, Jackson has seen his political position weaken in his home city. In the shock and confusion of the post-funeral days, Jackson's effort to rally unified support in the Washington coalition for Alderman Tim Evans as his successor failed when white city councilmen persuaded another black, Alderman Eugene Sawyer, to become acting mayor with their support.

In last week's primary between Sawyer and state's attorney Richard M. Daley, Jackson campaigned actively for Sawyer. But he was unable to persuade or pressure Evans, now running as an independent in the April general election, to endorse Sawyer. And Daley crushed Sawyer, in part because black turnout in wards close to Evans' home base plummeted.

What Jackson calls "the civil war" in the black community is continuing. And while Jackson has switched his support to Evans, even he acknowledges it will be "a tough, uphill battle" to keep the son of the old mayor from completing his victory next month.

The increasing isolation and estrangement Jackson feels toward his party serves Atwater's strategy. When the cunning South Carolinian announced that the GOP was going after black voters shunned during the Reagan years, it was no idle talk. It represented a cold calculation that the way to increase the likelihood of a crippling split inside the Democratic Party was to heighten restiveness among blacks who have been the Democrats' most loyal constituency.

Atwater talked privately of boosting the GOP share of the black vote from single digits to perhaps 20 percent, an ambitious and perhaps implausible goal.

But he and others who concocted the strategy understand that much the same objective — reducing the massive minority-bloc margins that gave Dukakis New York last November and almost California and Illinois — could be achieved if the black turnout is reduced.

And nothing, these GOP strategists know, is more likely to keep black voters at home than nurturing the feeling of martyrdom in Jackson and his legion of supporters at his treatment at the hands of the Democratic Party. If Bush builds a personal relationship with Jackson that makes that incandescent campaigner less willing or able to mobilize blacks against Bush in 1992, then he has hurt the Democrats where it counts.

And not just in the presidential race. Five Democratic senators elected in the South in 1986 owe their seats to the overwhelming margins they received among black voters. Those senators will be up again in 1992. Many House Democrats in mixed urban-suburban districts are in the same vulnerable position.

It was a vexed and troubled Jackson on the phone with this reporter just before his meeting with Bush. And the Republicans are smart enough to recognize the opportunity that gives them.

Tobacco Warehouses: A Rich Heritage

Alvin Taylor

Sunday Morning Notes

Tobacco warehouses ... there's nothing like them anywhere outside of a tobacco sales area.

The huge buildings cover acres of ground and, of course, they have been used for auctioning of tobacco — in this area bright leaf — for decades. They began to grow larger as sales time was allocated on the basis of floor space. Thus many of them are have far more space than the actual tobacco sales require.

Older ones were constructed of brick. While many of those have been demolished or have burned, at least one, the old Smith and Sugg warehouse on Ninth Street, is now used for business purpose.

More recent ones have metal siding. All have in common that they are simple in construction and they must not leak. Tobacco which gets wet is damaged and the price it will bring plummets.

All that tremendous amount of space under a roof has created unique opportunities for other uses over the years. The warehouses have been used for storage of grain and other bulk products and even new automobiles in the days when introduction of new models was kept a well guarded secret.

Warehouse dances were the rage in the 1930s and '40s and even later. Some of the big name dance bands came to eastern North Carolina because the huge dance floors under a roof were available and the payoff could be large. Even in the 1950s Louis Armstrong, the great trumpeteer, played a warehouse dance in Greenville.

Of course, the warehouses are great for expos, and for the city's first regional boat show the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce naturally turned to a tobacco warehouse. The show was held at the New Greenville Warehouse on the Pactolus Highway. The warehouse had adequate room for the show. It's doors and ceilings are high enough to accomodate trucks loaded with tobacco, so they could also handle the boats.

The chamber's annual expo is also held there.

East Carolina University may be the only such institution in the country to own a tobacco warehouse. It is located in the athletic area facing Charles Street. Of course the building is no longer used for tobacco sales but the warehouse name is still on the front. It is now used for indoor athletic activities.

Local tobacco warehouses have a rich heritage and it involves more than tobacco sales. May these unique buildings continue to serve the community.

Prescription For A One-Term Presidency

Richard Cohen

WASHINGTON — When no one was looking and the lights of Washington were dark, that creature from the early 1988 presidential campaign returned to town. I am referring to — yes — The Wimp of Yesteryear. Its picture once graced the cover of Newsweek and induced in George Bush a bilious anger. He rose to become the campaign's Incredible Hulk.

But somehow the original image has not dissipated. Whatever the real issues are in the confirmation of Secretary of Defense-designate John Tower, one thing is clear: The President is being cuffed around. The Senate, at least its Democratic majority, has sniffed weakness in the Oval Office and is doing to Bush what it would not do to a President it feared.

The same could be said about the Chinese. With a casualness (not to mention ruthlessness) that was stunning, the authorities in Beijing barred China's foremost dissident, Fang Lizhi, from attending Bush's farewell barbecue there. The astrophysicist was not only invited by Bush, but the invitation was highlighted by a White House intent on showing its human-rights mettle. For all that, the Chinese waylaid Fang in his taxi and made sure he ate elsewhere.

'Whatever the real issues are in the confirmation of Secretary of Defense-designate John Tower, one thing is clear: The President is being cuffed around.'

What was Bush's reaction? Well, at first he had none — not at the dinner and not immediately afterwards. It was only after the pesky press repeatedly asked "Where is Fang?" that the White House issued a mild protest, just about the only mention it made during the trip about the appalling human rights situation in China. Not since Buh himself waxed rhapsodic over Ferdinand Marcos ("We love your adherence to democratic principles...") has the blatantly obvious been so overlooked.

By themselves, the two actions — the rebuff to Bush in the Senate and the barring of Fang from the dinner — are so disparate they seem to have nothing in common. Not so. Both events were preceded by incredibly klutzy staff work and poor judgment which are beginning to emerge as Bush's personal style.

The Chinese were wrong to have barred Fang from the dinner and, by so doing, to have insulted Bush. But what did Bush think would happen? The invitation to Fang was an affront to the Beijing regime. The barbecue was for 500 guests, including the Chinese leadership. Bush lost face because the Beijing regime would not. But having thrown down the gauntlet, he meekly retrieved it himself and tip-toed out of the country.

The same sort of inept staff work and lousy judgment preceded and, indeed, permeates, the Towermatter. Whatever the real issues might be — genuine doubts about Tower or a rampant partisanship — this much is clear: The Tower nomination always spelled trouble The nomination was not helped by a briefing the White House provided to Republicans only, by the clumsy handling of Sen. Sam Nunn (D-Ga.), by the inexplicable decision not to object to the committee vote while Bush was in Japan and by Bush's own proclivity to overstate the case: The FBI report apparently does not dispel all allegations about Tower; it merely fails to prove them. On that distinction, there is much difference.

In both instances, the Senate Democrats and the Chinese sensed weakness. Bush, for instance, was slow to condemn the threat on the life of Salman Rushdie. When he finally got around to doing so, it had all the impact of a weak breeze. (You remember those stirring words, don't you?) As for the Chinese, they seem to have pulled off their Fang caper with impunity. Bush may retaliate by not sending them one of his famous thank-you notes.

Domestically, Bush has packaged himself as a presidential Gandhi, but his catchword is "bipartisanship" instead of nonviolence. But Washington is a mean town and the street gangs of Capitol Hill respect, above all, power — the ability and willingness to inflict political pain.

The incantation of bipartisanship suggests weakness, lack of purpose, the absence of threat — a guy who wants too much to be liked and who confuses consensus with leadership. Presidential authority must have a Sicilian component: offers that cannot be refused. Sen. Ernest Hollings (D-S.C.) said it all when he declined Bush's invitation to discuss the Tower appointment at the White House: "I hate to waste the President's time." As they say in Mafia movies, this is not showing respect.

The wimp of the last campaign was always a caricature. Bush proved in the New Hampshire primary that he could break out of his servants' mentality, climb the stairs and become master of the house. But now he has regressed to type, a fellow without theme or program who looks like he can be pushed around. This is a prescription for a one-term presidency. (Ask Jimmy Carter.)

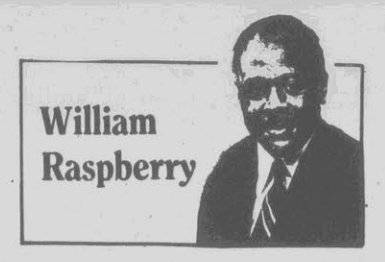

In Washington, as in baseball, the wisdom of Leo Durocher still holds: Nice guys finish last.

A Hard Sell

William Raspberry

WASHINGTON — When representatives of President-elect Bush approached Jack Kemp about joining the administration as HUD director, Kemp had his answer ready.

"I told them I don't want to be secretary of housing," he recalls. "I want to be a secretary of housing AND urban economic development."

It was Kemp's way of making two points: (1) that he sees no point in squandering his reputation by undertaking the bricks-without-straw mission of providing housing for the indigent, and (2) that he believes the salvation of the nation's inner cities lies in a rebirth of the entrepreneurial spirit.

The upshot of that response, he says, was "a portfolio that would not have been ordinarily associated with the narrow focus of HUD as it has been looked at in the past" but a commitment from Bush to let him try it his way.

His new job, says Kemp, is a chance to implement some of the ideas he has been talking about for years, including the magic of capitalism.

Much of the capitalism presently in the inner cities falls under the rubric of crime — fencing, drug trafficking and other elements of the underground market. "I want to encourage legal entrepreneurship (in areas that have been 'red-lined' by lending institutions)," Kemp said at a recent session with reporters and editors of The Washington Post.

Specifics include the idea that has come to be associated with Kemp: economic free-fire "enterprise zones," in which businesses started in hard-pressed inner-city areas — whether by residents or by outsiders — would be exempt from certain zoning restrictions and business taxes.

He cited the legislation, introduced by Democrats but based on earlier Kemp proposals, that would abolish the capital-gains tax "for any man or woman who puts his or her capital and time and talent and intellectual and entrepreneurial skills" into the inner city.

"But I'm not just interested in enterprise zones," he insists. "I want to see more credit and liquidity targeted for low-income and moderate-income and poor folks' economic development and shelter needs."

Kemp may be on to something, but the suspicion here is that, given the dearth of funds available in the deficit-ridden budget, his optimism that he can solve some of the "so-called intractable" urban problems may be unrealistic.

The problem of homelessness, for instance, used to be limited primarily to prematurely deinstitutionalized mental patients and other misfits. But in recent years, the numbers of homeless have been swelled by people whose major problem is that they don't earn enough to house their families. Enterprise zones and capital-gains exemptions aren't likely to help much.

Nor will some of Kemp's other prized ideas. Tenant management and sale of public housing units is a good idea that is already working well in one Washington project, but it won't solve the housing shortage in this overpriced housing market.

Still, some of the new HUD chief's approaches make more sense than those advocated by some of the traditional champions of the poor, which rely too much on lifting people out of poverty and too little on lifting them out of dependency.

Who, for instance, can argue with his notion that present law can make it unattractive for a welfare recipient to take a low-paying job?

"If a woman on welfare in the District of Columbia takes a job, she loses her welfare payment and they tax her income to where she has to earn — this figure should be checked, but it's close — $16,000 of pre-tax income at her first entry-level job to get the equivalent of $9,000 or $10,000 of untaxed welfare payments for her and her three children. How is it possible that we could have designed a welfare system that says we want to reward you for not being able to get a job but if you get a job, you get punished? It's a terrible

And s[illegible] will a Congress that has so recently endured the agony of [illegible]rm reopen that can of worms, even for the sensible changes advocated by Kemp?

That's one problem for the secretary. The other is that sooner or later he will discover that many of the pressing problems of the inner cities — homelessness, joblessness and public safety among them [illegible]

Can Kemp sell the hard necessity to President Read-My-Lips Bush? If you care about the economic health of the inner cities, you have to wish him well.

Despite Setbacks, Pro-Life Strengthens

Lincoln Caplan

In New York recently, two men who call themselves right-to-lifers asked a court to make them guardians of a woman in a coma and her 17-week-old fetus. The woman, Nancy Klein, had severe brain damage as a result of a car accident two months before. Her husband, Martin, had previously asked the court to name him guardian so that he could authorize an abortion which, according to Nancy Klein's doctors, might improve her chances of recovery.

Neither right-to-lifer had ever met the Kleins, but as part of a national network that seeks to make abortion a crime, they wanted to intervene. Their concern, one said, is for "the psychological and emotional state of Nancy Klein if she wakes up. Under our plan, we say the baby's down at the neonatal clinic getting the best care possible. Under their plan, they've got to tell her they've killed her baby."

Approving Martin Klein's request — and, thus, the abortion — a state appeals court found, "these strangers to the Klein family, whatever their motivation, have no place in the midst of this family tragedy." The defeat was not the first in this kind of suit: In a similar case a few years ago, a court rejected intervention as "distressing and offensive."

The defeat was also only a momentary setback. In the past year, the anti-abortion movement has grown in visibility and combativeness. If the Supreme Court ends or restricts the right to abortion, as some experts predict it will in a case called Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services, the movement will carry strong momentum into the ensuing state-by-state fight over abortion laws.

The "Siege of Atlanta" during the Democratic Convention last summer, led by the relatively new anti-abortion group, Operation Rescue, was a fair symbol of the movement's recent activities. Operation Rescue was founded by Randall Terry, who has said the anti-abortion movement was "too nice" through most of the 1980s. Terry's tactics, duplicated around the country, are sit-ins, picketing and other forms of sometimes illegal harassment described by participants as Christian civil disobedience and radical pro-family activism.

Operation Rescue is joined by the Pro-Life Action League, the American Life League and other anti-abortion groups in promoting such activism. One measure of their success is extensive media coverage. Some of their tactics are directly modeled on the methods of the civil-rights movement in the 1960s because they play so well for the cameras.

A generation into its heyday, the pro-life movement is hardly uniform. The National Right-to-Life Committee is the largest group in the movement and it tries to distance itself from street activism. Members use mainstream tactics, lobbying and law suits, to try to keep doctors from performing abortions, insurance companies from covering doctors who do, state-funded hospitals from permitting abortions, federal and state governments from paying for abortions and drug companies from marketing products like RU 486.

The pro-choice movement has a complex response to the strength of its adversaries: The right to abortion is in jeopardy, leaders acknowledge, but only because of the influence of a small, vocal group. Pro-choice support, they say, is both wider and deeper than many realize:

•In the 1988 elections, there were gains of two pro-choice votes in the Senate and four in the House.

•Pro-choice voters are stirring who had long been complacent: the response was dramatic to the National Abortion Rights Action League's coat hanger ad in newspapers across the country this January on the 16th anniversary of Roe vs. Wade. ("To many of our daughters, this looks like a coat hanger. Please sign this pledge to keep it that way.")

•Some polling data suggests that Michael S. Dukakis might have narrowed his loss to George Bush had he pressed his abortion views more widely. For example, in California, the response to radio ads in favor of abortion designed to influence working women raised Dukakis' standing in that group from 39 percent to 58 percent.

According to Nancy Broff of NARAL, if Roe vs. Wade is overturned, abortion is likely to be severely restricted or outlawed in the Midwest and deep South — with some states providing exceptions — and is only likely to be available on the West and East coasts. Wealthier women would be able to travel to have an abortion.

Political power is reflected in the recent success of pro-life efforts to limit access to abortion through state ballot initiatives. After years of failing to pass these measures — pro-lifers began offering them in 1978 — last year they enjoyed a significant victory in Michigan.

The elections of 1990 will help determine the shape of American politics for a decade because elected state legislators will be required to redraw Congressional district lines in accordance with that year's census. If abortion again becomes a primary issue of U.S. politics, as seems likely, life-choice divisions will influence far more than a woman's ability to have an abortion. The 1987 defeat of Robert H. Bork's nomination to the Supreme Court may serve as a precedent; when widespread public concern about the limits Bork might set on the right to privacy led to a wave of criticism of his nomination, there was a large spillover effect.

Meanwhile, pro-choice groups flood the Supreme Court with briefs intended to persuade the justices not to do what they are expected to — restrict women's rights to abortion. There is also the possibility, however slim, that the justices will go a step farther and do what they have never done before with a constitutional right — erase it altogether.

U.S. Faces Pressure To Review Baker's Debt Plan

By Susanne M. Schafer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The economic and social turmoil that rocked Venezuela last week has put pressure on the Bush administration to review Secretary of State James A. Baker's plan for dealing with the international debt crisis facing many Latin American countries.

"Time is running out," said Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., a member of the Senate Finance Committee and a specialist on international debt. "Today's crisis is with Venezuela. Tomorrow's could be Mexico."

Meanwhile, the administration is moving to arrange a temporary loan to help ease Venezuela's plight in which at least 300 people were killed and 2,000 injured in riots in response to an economic austerity program designed by the new government of President Carlos Andres Perez.

He is faced with a crushing $33 billion foreign debt owed to international banks and other lenders.

Treasury Department officials are putting the final touches on a $450 million emergency "bridge loan" to help the South American nation weather its economic crisis, U.S. officials have told The Associated Press.

The loan is part of an international package from countries including West Germany and Japan and other lenders such as commercial banks, The New York Times reported Saturday. Quoting government and banking officials, it said the emergency loans could total nearly $2 billion.

The bridge loan is designed to replenish Venezuela's depleted reserves over the next few months until longer-term loans from the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank can be worked out.

Under an agreement with the IMF, Venezuela agreed to adopt its austerity measures in exchange for a $4.5 billion loan over a three-year period. The international body is composed of 151 member nations, but its largest contributor is the United States.

Critics in Venezuela, and elsewhere, have pointed to the IMF's austerity requirements as being partly to blame for the turmoil. But its defenders contend the requirements amount to bitter medicine that is long overdue.

"The country has its back to the wall and it has no other choice than to strengthen its economic situation at once," said an IMF official, who would speak only on condition of anonymity. "We can send a signal to the rest of the world that by working to solve its problems, Venezuela is doing the right thing."

The official praised Venezuela's new government for taking action swiftly, and emphasized that the austerity measures were of Venezuela's own design and not imposed by the IMF. He said that in other situations, critics of the IMF have used it as a "whipping boy" to deflect criticism.

"They have no choice but to swallow the medicine. But if it tastes bad, do you blame the doctor for that?" he asked.

One Treasury official, who also spoke privately, said that despite the criticism directed against the IMF and other Western lenders, Venezuela's officials have been sincere about working out an economic reform plan.

"In this case, we have a real commitment on the part of Perez to stick with this," the official said. "The adjustment is painful, no doubt about it," he said of the bloodiest civil unrest to strike the country in 31 years.

But Bradley and other Latin American experts argue that emergency measures on the part of the U.S. and the IMF — while welcome — aren't adequate to deal with the financial nightmares facing Venezuela and other heavily-indebted Latin American nations.

Besides an urgent review of U.S. debt policy, several called for so-called debt relief, or a reduction of the debt burden. Venezuela is the fourth largest debtor in the region, which has accumulated some $420 billion in foreign debt.

Debt relief is not part of the Baker plan, put forward when the Secretary of State ran the Treasury Department. He suggested economic reforms in the debtor nations, coupled with assurances of new private and public lending.

The plan's critics point out that Latin leaders have lost faith in the scheme, since it appears to help commercial banks while forcing debtor nations to adopt policies that severely strain living standards and put their democracies in peril.

"I think there is no way that you can expect these countries to dig themselves out of a debt crisis through economic growth and without some debt reduction," Bradley said Friday. "We need a plan for debt reduction. ... I have high hopes the administration will move away from that plan to a new one."

Sen. Chris Dodd, D-Conn., a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and its subcommittee on the Western Hemisphere, agrees there are many things the Latin American nations must do to refocus their economies, saying he does not disagree with some elements of the Baker plan.

But the administration "must do a more effective job, both politically and economically, on the debt question," he said.

Dodd faults the Reagan administration for placing too much emphasis on the Contra battle against the Sandinistas of Nicaragua, and not paying enough attention to the debt crisis.

"Venezuela should be a reminder to policy-makers in Washington of not addressing the underlying problems of the Latin American nations," Dodd said.

Both the present U.S. Ambassador to Venezuela, Otto Reich, and a former envoy, Viron Vaky, voiced hopes in separate interviews that the Venezuelans will overcome the most recent turmoil.

"It is surprising, the volatility," said Vaky, who served as U.S. ambassador during Perez' earlier term of office in the late 1970s. "They probably didn't prepare the people well enough for these price hikes, but I believe they'll be able to ride this out."

Reich, speaking in a telephone interview from Caracas, emphasized Venezuela's importance to the United States, pointing out that it is the source of 7 percent of all U.S. oil imports.

"We definitely want to help," Reich said, noting that Bush had telephoned Perez on Friday to voice support for his reform plans.

"The president's call was an indication of how close our relations are, and how we want to be of assistance. ... it is a vital link that can't be ignored."

Bus Blast Kills 10

BEIJING (AP) — Ten people were killed and 35 others were injured when an explosion destroyed a passenger bus in the central city of Zhengzhou, an official daily said Saturday.

The Legal News said the explosion occurred on the bus shortly after it left a Zhengzhou station Thursday.

The explosion blew off one-third of the roof of the bus and demolished the vehicle, it said. The disaster stopped traffic for six hours.

The report did not say what caused the explosion, but it said police reported finding large quantities of sulfurous acid in the remains of the bus. The report did not say how many passengers were on the bus.

Pirates Topple American, 76-58

The Associated Press

AU's Ron Davenport (L) and ECU's Gus Hill (42) battle for a loose ball

Edwards Gets Scoring Support from Love And Lose

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

HAMPTON, Va. — It was simple, East Carolina University's Reed Lose said Saturday afternoon after the Pirates had upset third-seeded American, 76-58, in the first round of the Colonial Athletic Association basketball tournament.

"We just weren't ready to go home," Lose said.

Lose and Stanley Love both came to the fore when CAA Player of the Year Blue Edwards struggled in the first half of the game. Lose scored 17 and Love, 15, both season highs, while Edwards finished with 28, the most by a Pirate in CAA tourney play.

The victory was the Pirate's first ever post-season win under the CAA umbrella, and only their second since they joined the ECAC-South, which became the CAA. The win, which makes the Pirates 15-13, also assures them of their first winning season since 1982-83.

East Carolina never trailed in the game, although American did come back to tie it up on several occasions in the first half.

"We just didn't get it done," American coach Ed Tapscott said, after asking the press to get as gentle as possible in their questions. Tapscott has been under fire from the Virginia press in the past.

"If I knew why, I wouldn't be sitting here now. But I guess that sometimes you just try too hard and you forget to relax," he said.

"But we couldn't make layups, pick up the ball or catch the ball today."

East Carolina's Mike Steele said he thought the Pirates had to accomplish three things to win the game — keep American off the boards, keep the Eagles from going inside for easy baskets, and get back on defense to prevent the transition basket.

The Pirates accomplished all three. Although American held a 42-36 edge on the boards, they also had the taller lineup. Ron Draper, who leads the conference in rebounding, pulled down 11, but generally was not that much of a factor in the game. He scored but 11 points on five of 15 shots from the floor and one of three free throws.

"East Carolina made us play their game," Tapscott said. "Their zone defense packed it in inside and for five or six minutes early in the game neither Draper nor (Daryl) Holmes touched the ball on a pass from a guard. Then, when they did get it in there, everybody stood and watched and waited for them to do something. It's like we froze because we wanted to play so well."

East Carolina scored the first five points of the game and held a 10-4 lead on a three-point shot by Edwards with 13:25 left in the half.

But American fought back and tied it up when Eric White tossed back a missed shot for a 23-23 deadlock with 4:14 left. The two teams exchanged the next few baskets before Love made two free throws with 1:38 left to make it 29-27. Jay Scherer, who played 17 minutes — 15 more than he did during the entire month of February — then canned a jumper for a 31-29 halftime lead.

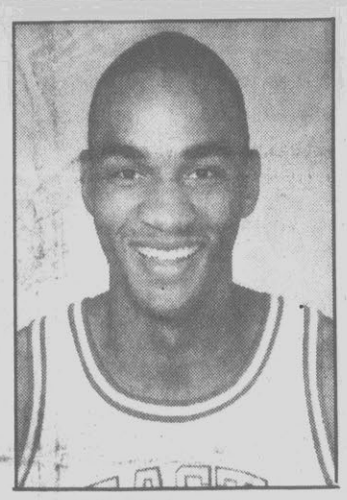

Love made two jumpers to open the second half to open up a 35-30 lead. After widening the lead to a 38-32 margin, the Pirates missed on three straight chances to up the lead, turning it over twice and missing a shot. But Edwards made a free throw and after two by American, baskets by Edwards and Love ran the lead to 43-34.

The Pirates upped the margin to 10, 47-37, on another Love jumper and after another exchange, Lose and Edwards both hit to make it 53-39 with 9:00 left.

After another American free throw, Edwards missed a try as the shot clock ran down, but Scherer rebounded and Edwards hit on a second chance for a 55-40 lead.

American made a run to cut it back to 10, but time and the foul line began to tell. The Pirates canned 15 of 22 down the stretch to built the

CAA Names Edwards Player Of The Year

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

HAMPTON, Va. — Blue Edwards, East Carolina University's senior leader, admitted that he was a little apprehensive Friday night at the Colonial Athletic Association Tip-Off Banquet.

Edwards was one of the leading candidates for the CAA's Player of the Year award — and at the climax of the evening, he was named the winner.

Edwards, who led the conference with a 26.3 scoring average, said he had talked earlier in the day with ECU Sports Information Director Charles Bloom and Bloom told him that a number of the Virginia media had said that they voted for him.

"But as it got closer, I got nervous and I was really glad when they announced it," Edwards said.

He also said that he was a little more nervous getting up to talk before several hundred people than he would be shooting baskets before thousands.

"I have to thank my teammates," Edwards said. "I love them all like brothers. And I have to thank my coaches who have worked with me keeping me positive and playing my best. I'd like to thank my family and the people I've played against, too. That's what basketball is all about — competing."

Edwards then almost got emotional after that. "The person I'd especially like to thank is someone who has really touched my life — my head coach and my best friend. This is for you, coach."

The man Edwards referred to, Mike Steele, said that Blue, after having sat out a year on suspension, showed that everyone deserved a second chance.

"He got that second chance and he's taken advantage of it," the coach said. "Blue's learned a lot and to say I'll miss him is obvious. But I'll miss him just being around. He's going to be successful in whatever he does, even if he never shoots another hoop."

Also receiving individual awards for the night were Richmond's Dick Tarrant, who was named Coach of the Year. Tarrant led his team, picked for the lower division, to a 13-1 league record and the regular season title.

James Madison's William Davis, who led the Dukes in scoring despite not being a starter while also leading the conference in steals, was named the conference's Rookie of the Year.

Also honored were the All-

Wolfpack Survives Quadruple Overtime

Monroe Provides The Key Points As State Holds On To Take 110-103 ACC Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Rodney Monroe provided the key points and his North Carolina State teammates provided the stamina as the 20th-ranked Wolfpack beat Wake Forest 110-103 Saturday in the first quadruple overtime game in Atlantic Coast Conference history.

It was the first four overtime game between two ACC opponents, although two conference teams had played in such games. Canisius beat N.C. State 79-78 in 1956 and North Carolina defeated Tulane 113-106 in 1976 in four extra periods.

N.C. State coach Jim Valvano and Wake Forest coach Bob Staak froze their lineups, looking for the knockout blow that never seemed to come.

"This was incredible," Valvano said. "The unusual aspect of the overtimes was that it seemed like both Bob and I were waitin to see who would blink first. I kept waiting for him to substitute and he didn't so I wouldn't ... We just kept going with it."

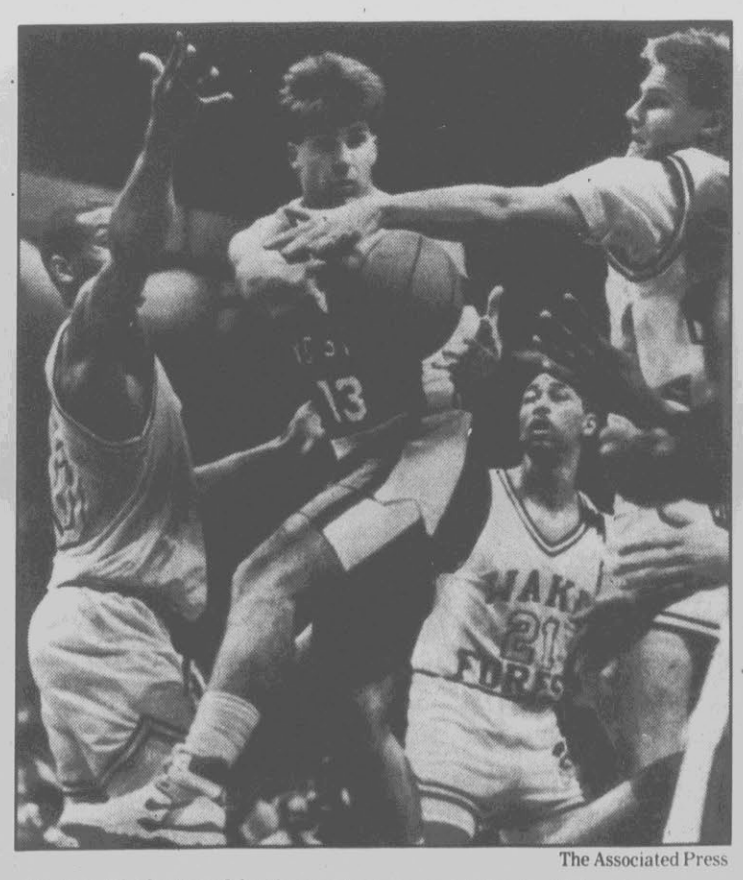

N.C. State, 20-7 overall and 10-4 in the league, will win the regular-season ACC title outright if North Carolina loses to Duke on Sunday. If the Tar Heels win, they will share the crown with N.C. State.

Monroe finished with 26 points, including shots that put N.C. State into two of the overtime periods.

Monroe grabbed the rebound of a deliberately missed free throw by Kelsey Weems with two seconds left in regulation and lofted in a shot while falling on his back to tie the game at 77.

"We had to fight back and fight back," said Monroe, who missed all eight

CLEMSON, S.C. — After Dale Davis and Elden Campbell had heated up in the stretch in Clemson's victory over Georgia Tech, Coach Cliff Ellis told his players to stay cool about their shot at an NCAA tournament bid.

"I still don't know about our NCAA chances, but I do know we've beaten some great teams in Georgia Tech, North Carolina and Duke," Ellis said after the Clemson defeated the Yellow Jackets 81-79 in overtime in an Atlantic Coast Conference game Saturday.

Davis had 29 points and combined with Campbell to score Clemson's final 24 points.

"All I'm telling our players is we have to go to Atlanta (the site of next week's ACC tournament) and win," Ellis said.

Clemson concluded the regular season at 18-9 overall and was sixth in the ACC at 7-7.

"Who would have thought 7-7 would have finished sixth. It just shows how close this league is. I hope the NCAA committee takes that into account," Ellis said.

Coach Bobby Cremins, whose Yellow Jackets dropped to 20-10 and 8-6, said he believes Clemson is worthy of an NCAA bid.

"I think they're definitely an NCAA team," Cremins said. "It's tough to get six teams in from the same league, but I hope they make it.".

Campbell, who had 22 points and 10 rebounds, tied the game at 69-69 with two free throws with 25 seconds to play in regulation. Georgia Tech's Anthony Sherrod missed a 3-pointer with two seconds left in regulation.

Clemson scored the first six points of overtime, including two dunks by Davis, and led 81-74 with 1:07 to go.

But Tom Hammonds scored on a short jumper and Dennis Scott hit a 3-pointer to give the Yellow Jackets a 81-79 lead with 32 seconds left.

ECU Sweeps By St. Augustine

Weather Finally Cooperates For Buc Baseball Team

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Two straight weekends plagued by winter storms jumbled East Carolina baseball coach Gary Overton's schedule, but the weather cooperated Saturday and the Pirates came through with a double-header sweep of St. Augustine of Raleigh.

ECU won 11-0 in the first game behind a strong pitching performance by Jonathan Jenkins and then came from behind to take a 8-3 win in the second game.

"It feels good just to play," Overton said. "We didn't play well with a lead in either game. This time of year, it (the schedule) is unfixed. We just have to play each day as it comes."

This game was supposed to be played Friday, but wet field conditions forced a postponement. In all, ECU has been able to play four of its eight scheduled games so far.

St. Augustine baseball coach Henry White got his team out on the field for the first time this year with Saturday's twin bill and he felt that in itself was a victory.

"Every field in Raleigh is under water," he said. "We've been in the gym for a month. This is the first time our outfield has played together on the field.

"I was just looking at this game as getting some work in. That's one reason why I wasn't real critical. I just wanted us to play solid defense."

In both games, the early innings keyed the Pirates.

ASU Slips By Lady Pirates

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

It was Senior Day at East Carolina Saturday for the Lady Pirate basketball team, but Appalachian State was the team doing the celebrating at game's end.

The Lady Mountaineers held off a late rally by ECU to post a 72-71 non-conference win.

The win lifts Appalachian to 19-17 on the year, while the Lady Pirates finish the regular season with a 14-12 record.

The Lady Pirates seemed doomed for a blowout early in the second half when the Lady Mountaineers broke open a tight one-point halftime lead, 32-31, and opened up a 50-40 advantage with 15:39 to play.

Appalachain continued to cling to a nine-point lead, 64-55, with 7:30 left in the game.

But that's when the Lady Pirates rallied.

Behind five points from Sarah Gray, who finished with 12, ECU reeled off nine unanswered points to knot the game at 64-64 with 3:43 to play.

"They showed a lot of grit and fought back and got in the game," ECU coach Pat Pierson said. "They really showed a lot of determination. I'm real proud of their comeback."

After an 18-footer by Irish Hamilton, who scored 13 points, Swicegood hit one of two free throws with 2:31 left to give ASU a 67-66 lead.

The Lady Pirates then took the lead for the first time in the second half with 2:04 to play when O'Connor, who scored 16 points, buried an 18-footer for a 68-67 ECU lead.

Beth Laney, who finished with 16 points, then hit one of two free throws after being fouled by Hamilton with 26 seconds left to give ASU a 72-71 lead.

The Pirates then worked the clock down and went inside to Savage, who scored 16. As she turned to go up for a turnaround jumper in the lane, she was whistled for charging.

The Lady Pirates had one last chance after a missed free throw by Swicegood, but were unable to get the ball upcourt before time expired.

"It's sad when kids play their hearts out and have a game taken away from them by someone in a striped shirt," Pierson said. "That call was what broke our back.

"Gretta had been making the same move all night and it wasn't anything called until then."

The Lady Pirates will begin play in the Colonial Athletic Association Tournament Thursday against American. Appalachian State will be in action in the Southern Conference Basketball Tournament beginning Friday.

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. — Vicky Bullett scored 28 points and fifth-ranked Maryland opened the game with a 10-0 run as the Terrapins easily defeated North Carolina 93-68 in the opening game of the Atlantic Coast Conference women's tournament.

Maryland, 24-2 and the defending ACC champions, extended the lead to 35-16 with 5:54 left in the first half and held a 44-31 halftime lead.

The Terrapins opened the second half with a 17-5 run to pull away.

Deanna Tate added 22 points for Maryland, which forced 27 turnovers and held the Tar Heels to 39 percent shooting from the field. Maryland also outrebounded North Carolina 51-30.

Sunday Notebook:

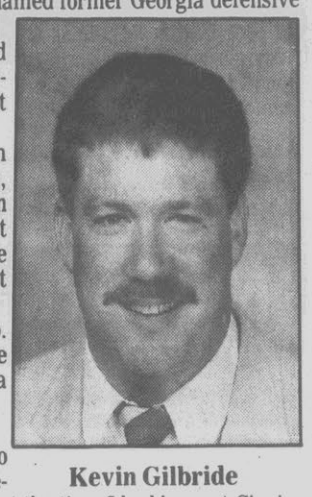

If it's guaranteed stability you're looking for in a profession, then you might want to steer clear of being a football coach.

Climbing the gridiron career ladder can be a tough journey. Exhibit A — Former East Carolina offensive coordinator Kevin Gilbride, who not too long ago was wondering what the future held for him and his family.

Now, with a new opportunity in professional football, those concerns are a thing of the past.

Last week, Gilbride was named quarterback coach of the Houston Oilers, replacing June Jones, who resigned to accept a job with the Detroit Lions.

November and December had been anxious months for Gilbride. He found himself without a job after the resignation of ECU head coach Art Baker midway through the season, and though he got a chance to interview for the top spot, ECU Athletic Director Dave Hart named former Georgia defensive coordinator Bill Lewis to the position Dec. 3.

Kevin Gilbride

Not long after that, though, Gilbride found work when he was named offensive coordinator at Cincinnati under new Bearcat coach Tim Murphy.

Shortly thereafter, he received a call from Syracuse University coach Don MacPherson, who wanted to know if he was interested in joining his staff. Gilbride was tempted, but he felt he couldn't back out on Cincinnati. He declined to interview and immediately hit the road recruiting for the upcoming season.

Shortly after the national signing date Feb. 8, Houston Oiler coach Jerry Glanville came calling. The Oilers were in need of both a quarterback coach and a receivers coach.

This was too good to pass up.

"I definitely wanted a chance to talk to him," Gilbride said. "The jobs were definitely ones I'd be interested in. I just told them at the time I had been at Cincinnati one day and Syracuse called and I was afraid about how the coach here would react (now). He said he'd talk (to Tim Murphy), and he was receptive. He allowed me to come down and talk to the (Oiler) staff."

That one opportunity was all it took.

A former head coach at Southern Connecticut, Gilbride also had experience coaching in the pro ranks, having worked exclusively with the run-and-shoot offense while coaching with the Ottawa Rough Riders and Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League. The Oilers use a number of run-and-shoot sets within their pro-set offense.

"Their main concern with that position was lack of NFL experience," Gilbride said. "There were some reservations within the organization. There was some concern, but I knew I was being considered. I got up in front of the whole staff (during the interview) and told them what I'd done with the run-and-shoot, and they utilize a lot of the run-and-shoot schemes. We talked the entire afternoon. They presented problems they'd had and asked how I'd handle those problems."

In all, the Oilers interviewed about 15 candidates for the two positions before naming Gilbride the quarterback coach.

Professionally, it was a great move. The NFL is the big show. To get there is sign of approval from your peers that you are good at what you do. Gilbride realized this.

But there were other concerns — primarily his family.

Over the last six years, the Gilbrides had covered a lot of territory following the career ladder.

"My poor family has been through so much since I left Southern Connecticut six years ago," Gilbride said. "We were in a great situation. We were nationally ranked. We were close to both my wife's family and my family. But (then) you take that chance.

"We went to Ottawa and I was there one year and was named offensive coordinator the next year then there's a change in ownership and the coach is fired," Gilbride said. "So then we went to Montreal for a year and the Alouettes fold. Then it was down to East Carolina and my family stayed in Connecticut that first year. The next year, I'm named offensive coordinator and then Art resigns.

"Fortunately for me, my wife knows what I want to do and she supported me through this entire episode. It's made it tolerable. The ones I feel sorry for are the kids. They've been in Connecticut, Ottawa, Montreal, North Carolina and now it's Houston. That's six schools in five years."

But it's still one more move. Gilbride's wife, Debbie, and their children, Kelly (13), Kristen (11) and Kevin (9) will join their father after the school year concludes.

"Fortunately, my wife has done a great job with them and they've done a great job adjusting," Gilbride said. "It's been rough on me, but not nearly as difficult as it has been for them. They've had to struggle through it with me.

Gilbride's stay at ECU was a short one. He joined the staff late in the summer of 1987 after Montreal folded. He was put in charge of the special teams, but the following year he was named the offensive coordinator and given the task of making the Bucs' run-and-shoot offense more than just a diversion between defensive series.

After going 5-6 in 1987, the Pirates finished only 3-8 this past year. But the offense averaged about 390 yards a game while scoring 26 points per contest against a schedule that included five top-20 opponents.

That's impressive in itself, but when you take away games against top-10 teams, those figures move to 450 yards a game and 38 points per outing.

It was a season, though, that was doomed from the start. Baker was in the final year of his four-year contract and would have needed a miracle season in order to get a contract extension. It didn't happen.

After Baker announced his resignation effective at the end of the season, there was every reason to quit, but for some reason it didn't happen. The Pirates surprised probably everybody but themselves by winning their final two games against Temple and Cincinnati.

"It would have been easy to pack your bags emotionally and maybe not prepare as hard. But you learn to live by certain principles," Gilbride said. "There's a right way to do things and a wrong way. We knew we were going to be let go, but you have to work hard and have security in knowing you did the right thing. It was a tremendous strain on the coaches and their families.

"I told the guys on the staff, I've never been as proud of a group of guys. No one worked less hard or less diligently or soured on the kids," Gilbride added. "To finish up the way we did in the last two games was a great reflection on the coaches and kids handling adverse conditions.

"It's easy to be fun-loving and positive when things are going well, but it's not quite as easy when things are as difficult as they were (last season), not only on the coaches but on the players also."

Those thoughts, though, are in the past now. The first items on the agenda are settling into his new office, finding a house and eventually moving the family down. Over the next few months, Gilbride will be familiarizing himself with the Oilers' playbook and getting to know the players, chief among them Oiler quarterback Warren Moon.

"It's just a great opportunity. I certainly enjoyed the college game, but this is such a great opportunity in my profession. It's considered the apex," Gilbride said. "For a chance to get into the NFL, that's something everybody in my profession aspires to and to get a chance to come to an organization that is as successful as Houston, it makes it doubly attractive."

That doesn't mean there won't be any regrets though. Make no mistake about it. Gilbride is happy to be in Houston and excited about his opportunity, but he can't help but think what might have been.

"One, I loved the area," he said. "It's a great place to live and raise a family. Second, I felt proud about what we achieved as an offensive unit and the success we had. Third, I'm disappointed that we didn't get one more year to see what could have happened with more experience and the schedule (for next year). And of course, I'd have loved to have the opportunity to be the head coach.

"I was disappointed, (but) appreciated the opportunity that our success had presented me that I was considered as a candidate. Dave Hart felt what was best for the university was to go out and get a candidate outside the situation, which was unfortunate in the sense that having been on the inside and having developed a rapport with the kids and people within the University, I felt I had some insight. I felt if given the opportunity, I could have maintained and built up some of the things we'd accomplished."

Those thoughts aside, Gilbride continues to make the transition to a new job. It's his third office in three months and he's about as tired of putting things into cardboard boxes and then taking them back out again as he could possibly be.

This time, though, he hopes to completely unpack and he might even hang some pictures on the wall.

"Hopefully, I'll be here for a while," he said.

Moore Takes Over At ASU

By Tom Foreman Jr.
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ASHEVILLE, N.C. — Jerry Moore, who spent the 1988 college football season as an assistant coach at Arkansas, was officially named head football coach at Appalachian State Saturday.

Moore, 49, who had been a head coach at North Texas State and Texas Tech, succeeds Sparky Woods, who resigned on Feb. 30 to become head football coach at South Carolina.

"There's a lot of tradition that's already been started," Moore told a news conference.

"It's a great opportunity. I want to do the very, very best job," Moore said. "It was a great opportunity to do the things I believe in."

Details of Moore's contract were not revealed at the news conference, although Appalachian State athletic director Jim Garner said the two agreed on a multi-year deal.

Moore was a member of the Southern Methodist coaching staff in 1965, leading the linebackers and defensive ends for one season, then the wide receivers for six seasons. He coached wide receivers at Nebraska from 1972 through 1978

Moore's head coaching career began in 1979, when he took over at North Texas State and compiled an 11-11 record. For the next five seasons, he coached Texas Tech and his record was 16-37-2.

Asked about his coaching record, Moore said he would make no excuses.

"When I was coaching at North Texas ... 10 of the 11 teams that beat us went to bowl games," he said. "That's what kept the budget going.

"At Tech, we lost 17 ball games by less than a touchdown. The last year I was there, we lost four ball games by a total of six points," he said.

Garner also pointed out that after Moore left Texas Tech, the Red Raiders went to a bowl game that next season with the players that Moore recruited.

Moore worked for a Dallas developer for 18 months before returning to coaching at Arkansas.

"I don't mind proving myself and my staff proving itself to the Appalachian people and the people of North Carolina," Moore said. "We're going to try to make everyone proud of the way we handle our business on and off the field. We will work hard."

Garner said he received as many as 100 applications for the job and as many as 300 phone calls.

"There was an unbelievable field from which to choose," Garner said.

"I do not overwhelm easily. I was overwhelmed. I was surprised at the number of people who were interested in coming to the mountains," Garner said.

Miami Speculation Continues To Swell

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Concerns about Miami coaching prospect Dennis Erickson's longevity at other schools and attention to his players' academics have arisen as speculation continues about a successor for Jimmy Johnson.

The Hurricanes have lost Howard Schnellenberger and Johnson, new coach of the Dallas Cowboys, in the last six years. Both won national championships at the school but left for more lucrative opportunities.

Besides Erickson, Miami offensive coordinator Gary Stevens is in contention for the job.

Stevens met with Athletic Director Sam Jankovich at his home Friday and came away saying, "Sam said he's got a couple of days left in the process. I feel I'm still in it. He said I was."

Miami President Edward Foote has insisted on the football program improving its standards after several incidents in the Johnson years embarrassed the school.

The football team improved their off-field reputation last season, and all of the current seniors are on schedule to graduate.

Erickson, 41, left Wyoming after just one year to take the Washington State post where he has completed two years of a five-year contract. It includes a buyout clause that means Miami would have to compensate the Pacific Ten school between $100,000 and $300,000 to hire its coach.

Erickson didn't keep as tight a rein on his players' academic progress as his WSU predecessor Jim Walden, The Miami Herald and The Tampa Tribune reported.

And Erickson didn't return to Laramie to talk with his Wyoming players after deciding to head west. Fans bid him farewell with a bomb threat and rock through his window.

The way Erickson has handled the Miami situation has already prompted editorial criticism in Washington newspapers.

"I can't imagine why you'd blow your fragile credibility here just to look around," Spokane columnist Dan Weaver wrote. "I like your act coach, but the exit needs work."

Elliott Leads Wildcats Past UCLA

Missouri And Ball State Both Take Wins; Michigan Rolls Past Big 10-Foe Iowa

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Sean Elliott scored 26 points and took control in the final minutes as top-ranked Arizona beat UCLA 89-86 Saturday in the final regular-season game for both teams.

Jud Buechler had 18 points and 14 rebounds for Arizona, 24-3 overall and 17-1 in the Pacific-10 Conference. The Wildcats clinched their second straight league title Thursday night with a victory at Washington State.

UCLA, which suffered a 38-point loss to Arizona two weeks ago in Tucson, is 19-8 and 13-5.

The Bruins, who trailed 44-40 at halftime, tied the game three times in the second half, but were never able to take the lead.

Two free throws by Buechler and two straight baskets by Elliott gave Arizona a 76-69 lead in the second half. UCLA cut it to 76-73, but Elliott made two more baskets and Matt Muehlebach sank a layup to make it 81-73 with 3:50 left.

UCLA's Trevor Wilson, who finished with 30 points, made a bank shot and teammate Kevin Walker hit a 3-pointer to bring UCLA within three points.

Following an Elliott layup, the Bruins cut the margin to 86-84 on a layup by Wilson, who had 22 points in the second half. But Anthony Cook, who scored 17 points, helped clinch the victory for Arizona with a pair of free throws with 31 seconds left.

Pooh Richardson scored 21 points and Don MacLean added 17 for UCLA.

UCLA took a 10-8 lead on Kevin Walker's 3-point basket, but the Bruins were rattled by a six-point turnaround that started on Arizona's next possession.

Walker was called for blocking Cook, complained to the referee, slammed the ball to the floor and was whistled for a technical foul. UCLA coach Jim Harrick was also hit with a technical for arguing the call.

Cook made one of two free throws for the personal foul and Elliott made three shots for the technicals to put Arizona up 12-10. The Wildcats were also awarded possession, and Elliott made a baseline jumper for a 14-10 lead.

Ken Lofton made a 3-pointer to start a 9-0 run that included two buckets by Buechler and two free throws by Elliott for a 25-14 lead. However, UCLA went on a 15-6 run to pull within 31-29 on Wilson's layup layin with 6:42 left in the half.

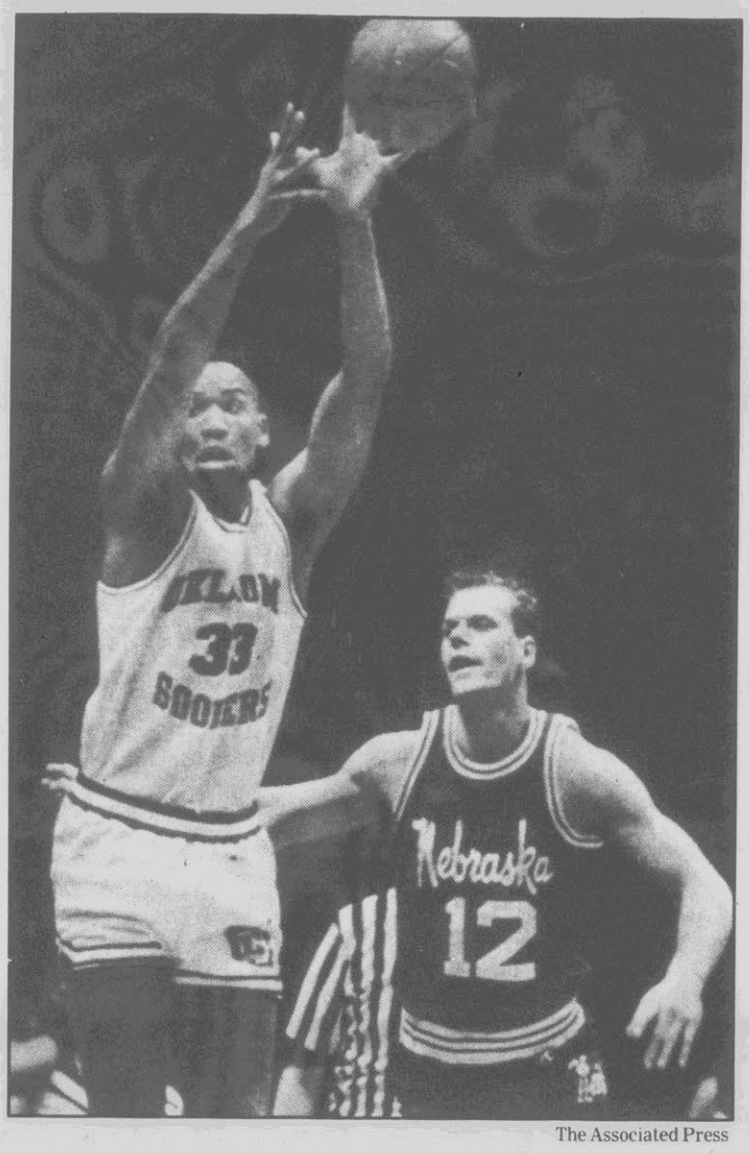

Missouri.....66
Colorado.....65

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Greg Church had 21 points, including four free throws in the final 11 seconds, as seventh-ranked Missouri held off a Colorado rally for a 66-65 victory Saturday that gave the Tigers a perfect record at home this season.

Reggie Morton's 3-point basket for Colorado with 48 seconds left cut the Tigers' lead to 63-60. After Missouri's Lee Coward missed the front end of a one-and-one, Morton made a basket to bring the Buffaloes to within 63-62 with 18 seconds left.

Church then hit his two one-and-one opportunities, the first with 11 seconds left, the second with five. Morton, who led Colorado with 19 points, hit a 3-point basket at the buzzer for the final score.

Missouri, 24-7 overall and 10-3 in Big Eight play, completed the season with a 16-0 record at home. Colorado finished the regular season at 7-20, 2-12 in the league.

Missouri was playing without Byron Irvin, who was sidelined with a pulled groin.

The teams traded buckets until Steve Wise missed a free throw attempt for Colorado and Church sank two free throws for Missouri to give the Tigers a 57-49 lead with 6:32 left.

Wise later made two free throws and Shaun Vandiver hit two to cut Missouri's lead to 59-57 with three minutes left.

Church's jumper with 2:07 remaining and two free throws with one minute left gave the Tigers a 63-57 lead.

Michigan.....119
Iowa.....96

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Glen Rice scored 29 of his 33 points in the second half to lead five Michigan players in double figures as the 10th-ranked Wolverines breezed to a 119-96 Big Ten victory over No. 11 Iowa on Saturday.

Rice, the Big Ten's leading scorer with a 24.9 average, sparked the Wolverines to 71 second-half points.

It marked the ninth time this season that Michigan, 23-6 overall and 11-5 in the conference, has scored more than 100 points, a new school mark.

Iowa, 21-8 and 9-7, got 30 points from Roy Marble. The Hawkeyes played without B.J. Armstrong, their second-leading scorer who suffered a strained hamstring and bruised left knee in an 83-81 loss to Michigan State on Thursday.

Iowa led 16-15 before Rumeal Robinson scored seven of his 22 points in a 15-2 burst to give the Wolverines a 30-18 lead with 8:47 left until halftime.

Michigan led 48-33 at intermission. Rice scored 12 points in a 21-15 run, including back-to-back 3-point baskets, as Michigan increased its lead to 69-48 with 14:07 remaining.

Baskets by Mark Hughes and Terry Mills following steals gave Michigan its largest lead, 73-48, with 13:01 left.

Mills and Loy Vaught each finished with 18 points while Sean Higgins had 11 for Michigan.

Ed Horton had 17 of his 20 points in the second half while freshman Ray Thompson added 19 points for Iowa, which committed 24 turnovers, 15 in the first half.

Ball St.....92
W. Michigan.....79

KALAMAZOO, Mich. — Paris McCurdy scored 22 points, including 16 in the second half, as No. 19 Ball State defeated Western Michigan 92-79 in a Mid-American Conference game Saturday.

The victory was the 12th straight for the Cardinals, 25-2 overall and 14-2 in the conference.

Western Michigan, 12-15 and 6-10, tied the score at 38 with 54 seconds left in the first half on a 3-point basket by Billy Butts. But Keith Stalling hit a layup with three seconds left in the half to put Ball State ahead to stay, 40-38.

Ball State went on an 11-4 run early in the second half to take a 51-42 lead. Billy Stanback's 3-pointer for Western Michigan cut the margin to 51-45, but the Broncos could not get any closer in the second half. Stanback finished with 19 points.

Eli Parker scored 19 of his 21 points in the first half to keep Western Michigan ahead until the final seconds of the half.

McCurdy had 11 rebounds for Ball State, which outshot Western Michigan from the field 57 to 47 percent.

Colorado St.....89
Brigham Young.....72

PROVO, Utah — Pat Durham scored 31 points to lead Colorado State to an 89-72 victory over Brigham Young Saturday afternoon, clinching at least a share of the Western Athletic Conference title.

With the win, CSU improved to 12-4 in the WAC and 20-8 overall. Whether the Rams win the WAC out-right depended on the outcome of the New Mexico-Hawaii game late Saturday.

BYU slipped to 7-9 in the conference and 14-14 overall.

BYU led 40-38 at the half, but CSU took control with a 10-2 run to open a second half in which it shot 78 percent. The Rams finished at 67 percent for the game.

Joining Durham in double figures for the Rams were Jamie Hines with 17, Joel Tribelhorn with 16 and Trent Shippen with 10.

Michael Smith led BYU with 30 points while Marty Haws added 14 and Steve Schreiner had 12.

Smith's point total enabled him to pass former BYU star Devin Durrant as the WAC's all-time scoring leader in league games only. He was five-for-five from the free throw line to pass Utah's Jeff Jonas as the career percentage leader in that category. He finished with an .864 percentage. Jonas' old record was .863.

Oklahoma.....103
Nebraska.....76

NORMAN, Okla. — Mookie Blaylock scored 19 of his 22 points in the second half Saturday as fourth-ranked Oklahoma beat Nebraska 103-76 in a Big Eight Conference game.

The Sooners ended the regular season 26-4 overall — their eighth straight 20-victory season — and won the league championship with a 12-2 record. Oklahoma will play last-place Colorado in the first round of the Big Eight tournament Friday.

Nebraska, which got 17 points from Beau Reid, wound up 16-14 overall and in seventh place in the conference at 4-10.

Blaylock made only one of nine field goals in the first half when he shot primarily from outside. By taking the ball inside more in the second half, Blaylock had more success as the Sooners won their 30th straight at home.

Morris Leads New Jersey Past Celtics

THE ASSOCIATED PRES

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Rookie Chris Morris scored 20 points and made three free throws in the final minute Saturday night, leading the New Jersey Nets past the Boston Celtics 98-95.

Boston, which had its three-game winning streak stopped, trailed through most of the fourth quarter, but rallied in the closing minutes behind Reggie Lewis and Dennis Johnson.

The Celtics outscored New Jersey 8-2 and tied the score at 95 with 1:54 left when Johnson made a pair of free throws. With 59 seconds to play, Morris put the Nets ahead for good by making two free throws.

Lewis, who scored 27 points, missed a 20-foot jumper for the Celtics with 41 seconds to play, but the Nets missed a chance to put the game away when Roy Hinson's jumper from the key bounced off the back of the rim. In the scramble for the ensuing rebound, Morris was fouled by Brian Shaw and the rookie made one of two free throws for a three-point lead with 14 seconds remaining.

Lewis had a chance to tie the game but his 3-point attempt from 25-feet straight away bounced off the rim.

Hinson added 19 points and Dennis Hopson had 18 for the Nets. McHale had 18 and Johnson added 17 as the Celtics lost to the Nets for the first time in four games this season.

Knicks.....122
Bulls.....104

NEW YORK — Rod Strickland had season highs of 20 points and 14 assists in relief of Mark Jackson and Johnny Newman scored 14 of his 28 points in the fourth quarter as the New York Knicks beat Chicago 122-104 Saturday night for their 23rd consecutive home victory.

Strickland, a rookie, made the first start of his career after Jackson went on the injury list with torn cartilage in his right knee.

The Knicks, who already have the NBA record for most 3-point attempts and goals in a season, connected on five long-range shots in the third quarter and each of them either tied the score or put New York ahead.

Wilkins followed with a 16-footer 34 seconds later for the 19th and final lead change. Two free throws and a basket by Patrick Ewing made it 90-84 with 10:45 led in the game.

After Chicago cut the deficit to 90-88, Newman scored New York's next eight points — on a jumper and two 3-pointers — and Ewing and Wilkins followed with baskets for a 102-92 advantage with 5:17 remaining. The Bulls got no closer than eight the rest of the way to lose for only the second time in eight games.

Michael Jordan led the Bulls with 28 points, while Bill Cartwright and Horace Grant had 18 each. Trent Tucker and Newman had four 3-pointers each and the Knicks, now 26-1 at home, finished with 10.

Bullets.....119
Mavericks.....105

LANDOVER, Md. — Jeff Malone scored 11 of his 28 points during a 13-4 third-quarter surge Saturday night, pacing the Washington Bullets to their third straight triumph, 119-105 over the Dallas Mavericks.

With the Bullets ahead 75-70 with 4:49 left in the period, Malone scored nine straight Washington points, assisted on John Williams' basket and scored on a layup for an 88-74 cushion with 44 seconds to play in the third.

The Mavericks — led by Rolando Blackman, who scored 15 of his 27 points in the fourth quarter — pulled within 106-103 with 3:42 left. Malone then capped a 6-0 burst with a driving layup to seal Washington's sixth victory in seven games.

Adrian Dantley, in his sixth game with Dallas since being traded from Detroit, scored 29 points. Bernard King had 27 for Washington and Williams 17.

Notebook:

The Charlotte Hornets didn't play Saturday after losing to the Atlanta Hawks, 133-109, Saturday in Atlanta as Dominique Wilkins had a big night.

"I don't think anyone can stop me when I get in that kind of rhythm," Wilkins said after scoring 35 points in 28 minutes Friday.

Wilkins scored his final points on his sixth dunk with 5:25 left in the third, giving the Hawks a 101-77 lead. He sat out the final 16 minutes, watching reserves mop up in the final quarter.

Calvin Brown followed with a walk and stole second. John Gast and Steve Godin also walked. Mike Andrews' fielder's choice brought in Brown while Gast scored on a wild pitch to make it 4-0.

It was early, but it was enough.

Jenkins gave up a hit in the first inning, but he settled down and pitched through to the fourth inning while allowing only two hits and and three base runners after the first.

Rodney Colvin came in and finished the game, allowing only two men on base the rest of the way.

Adams had two hits to lead ECU's hitting in the first game.

Jenkins ended up with eight strikeouts and one walk while Colvin allowed but one hit and struck out three in relief.

In the second game, ECU found itself trailing 2-0 midway through the second, but responded with a seven-run, five-hit second inning that quickly put the Pirates in control.

Gast was hit by a pitch, went to second on a bunt single by Godin, third on a walk to Kevin Riggs and home on a passed ball. Godin also scored on a passed ball.

Chris Cauble then doubled in Riggs and David Ritchie followed with a single to drive in Cauble. Thomas singled and later scored on an error while Adams also singled and eventually scored on a wild pitch to make it 7-2.

"In the first game, we didn't swing the bats well. In the second game, the second inning, we not only bunched some hits together we hit the ball hard," Overton said.

It would be ECU's best offensive inning of the day and quickly snuffed out the Falcons' chances.

"That's always been a problem for us playing East Carolina," White said. "The early innings hurt us. My pitching staff has a senior and a junior and the rest are freshmen and it showed."

Brien Berckman got the win for the Pirates in the second game and scattered five hits over seven innings along with five strikeouts. Adams and Eason had two hits each to lead the way.

Waters had a home run and a single to lead the Falcons, 0-2.

Instructors Being Trained In Aquatics Education

The N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission has begun training instructors to reach every school student in Pitt County and the state with a new aquatics education program.

Aquatics education is one part of North Carolina WILD, an educational program which follows the national Project WILD guidelines, but is adapted to address the state's special wildlife and water resources.

Project WILD was designed by wildlife educators to help school teachers and youth counselors relate their normal school subjects to wildlife and environmental principles.

During a three-day workshop last week at a 4-H camp in Rockingham County, wildlife commission educators were teaching 43 people how to teach the new program to other teachers.

"We want to put aquatics education in an environmental perspective," said Jane Krupnick, education programs coordinator for the commission. "We're using North Carolina WILD as a vehicle to educate the public in sound environmental principles and ethics."

She said the program's primary target is teachers, who will use WILD materials in their classrooms.

"But that's not where it stops," she said. "We want to reach camp counselors and youth leaders, so they can help us teach every child how important our water resources are."

The new instructors include college professors, education specialists from the three state aquariums, public school teachers and personnel from the state Department of Public Instruction and the state Division of Parks and Recreation.

The instructors' workshop was the first of several that are planned for the state. Ms. Krupnick said 250 Project WILD workshops have been held in North Carolina by commission staff and a few volunteer instructors since 1984.

"The program is very popular with school teachers, and demand for workshops has exceeded our ability to respond," she said. "By training more volunteer instructors, we will be better able to keep up with public demand."

Stream Sipping Can Lead To Disease

Laymen call it "beaver fever." Doctors call is giardiasis, and an estimated 17 million Americans have it.

Beaver fever is an intestinal disease caused by microscopic animals called protozoans nabbing onto the intestinal wall. People usually get it by drinking impure water from creeks and streams.

The disease is rarely fatal, but it can make you wonder. Symptoms vary from intestinal discomfort to energetic diarrhea and vomiting, headaches, fever, dehydration and weight loss, says Dr. Dennis Juranek of the Center for Disease Control.

Symptoms usually appear from one to several weeks after infection. And beaver fever can last for months. If untreated, it can recur for years.

It's called beaver fever because beavers have been identified as carriers, and so have humans, muskrats, rabbits, dogs and cats. It's founf worldwide, but it's most common in mountainous areas where people drink contaminated water.

To avoid the disease, Dr. Juranek recommends taking your own drinking water when you go into the woods.

Wild Turkeys Released Thursday

Wildlife biologists released almost 70 wild turkeys Thursday at eight restoration sites across North Carolina after they were trapped in South Carolina and moved here to boost the state's wild turkey population.

Biologists with the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission met at the North Carolina Welcome Center on Interstate 77 near Charlotte Thursday afternoon to pick up the birds from South Carolina wildlife workers.

The birds were then taken to restoration sites in Randolph, Iredell, Brunswick, Anson, Harnett, Wake, Northampton, Hertford, Wilkes, Alexander and Caldwell counties to be released on sites managed by the commission.

The birds will be relocated to geographic regions with environmental conditions similar to their South Carolina homes. Hunting will be prohibited on these sites for at least three years.

Owners of the land on which the turkeys were to be released will help the commission manage the habitat and protect the burds. Trapping from these areas for further restocking also will be allowed for 12 years after the release.

The commission recently approved spending $80,000 to replenish the state's dwindling turkey population. Part of these funds will be used to reimburse South Carolina for its $500-per-bird trapping and relocation costs.

"We didn't think we'd get the birds this year," said Mike Seamster, who heads the wild turkey program. "We got lucky. It's a great opportunity for our state to boost its turkey population."

He said the commission has been able "to work out trades with other states to get turkeys. In 1986, we traded river otters to West Virginia to get wild turkeys."

The National Wild Turkey Federation stepped in to help states re-establish their dwindling populations. Federation members polled southeastern states and found that live trapping and relocation of turkeys cost an average of $500 per bird.

The federation set up a superfund into which this money would be transferred when states participated in the new program. The money can only be used for habitat improvement and acquisition, and turkey restoration and research, in each state that has a superfund.

"The reimbursement fee that North Carolina pays for these turkeys will go into the superfund of the South Carolina chapter of the Wild Turkey Federation," Seamster said. "They plan to use the money to buy public hunting lands."

Since 1970, wildlife biologists have moved 1,100 wild turkeys within the state. During the early 1970s, the commission launched an intensive wild turkey restoration program to replenish the state's population.

Biologists trapped and released wild turkeys in a restoration area, allowed them to reproduce, then as the birds increased, they trapped more turkeys and released them in another location to re-establish another population.

When the program began in 1970, the state's turkey population was estimated at 2,000 birds. In 1980, the population jumped to 8,000 birds. Not, it is estimated at more than 15,000.

Outdoors Show Scheduled Soon

An "Adventures in the Great Outdoors" show will be held March 17-19 at the Arthur Ashe Center in Richmond, Va.

Leonard Lee Rue II, author of "Deer of North America" and wildlife photographer, will present a seminar on white-tailed deer.

World famous fly casting expert Ed Jaworski will demonstrate his perfected technique of fly casting. Also featured will be guides and outfitters, such as Larry Henderson, Matt Burgeois and Jack Innes, who will talk about subjects ranging from grizzly bear hunting to rainbow trout fishing.

Lynda Richardson, who has done wildlife photography for "Time" magazine, "National Geographic" and the Association Press, will present a program on the basics of wildlife photography.

Area Made Into Recreational Trail

By Bill Schulz
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

With the turning of a shovel just outside Peoria, Ill., the 200th piece of abandoned railroad right-of-way was turned into a recreational trail.

"We want 500 rail-trails by the 500th anniversary of Columbus' discovery of America, Oct. 12, 1992," said Peter Harnik, program director for the Rails to Trails Conservancy.

The Washington-based group is dedicated to getting abandoned railroad lines turned into recreational areas before they are chopped up for development. There now are 203 rail-trails totalling 2,701 miles in 32 states.

The conservancy is trying to save for recreational use the remains of the shrinking United States railroad system which is now about 165,000 miles, down from about 300,000 miles in 1920.

Rail-trails provide access to scenic wonders and a short route to work or school.

"Many ot these trails do hug the rivers. They cross the rivers several times," Harnik said. He said the Bizz Johnson Trail runs along California's Susan River. "There's beautiful scenery."

"There's a beautiful trail being developed up along the New River in Virginia, donated by the Norfolk Southern Railroad in 1986. It's 29 miles and a tremendous resource for the state of Virginia," he said.

The 45-mile Washington and Old Dominion Railroad Trail runs from Arlington Va., to Purcellville, Va., which is just nine miles from the Appalachian Trail.

"As far as we can determine, it is the most heavily used rail-trail in the country with 1 million visitors a year," Harnik said. Efforts are under way to try to connect it to the Appalachian Trail.

On the West Coast, the Burke-Gillman Trail in Seattle gets about 750,000 visitor a year, "including 700 daily bicycle commuters to the University of Washington. It's one way to keep their parking problems down," Harnik said by telephone.

Then there's one trail that's at least partly under ground.

"The Elroy-Sparta Trail in Wisconsin has three long, very dramatic tunnels. You have to bring a flashlight," Harnik said. The University of Wisconsin found the average person who uses the trail drives 128 miles to do so.

"We started with the assumption that a 200-mile trail is a lot better than a 5-mile trail," said Harnik, who assists local groups and state agencies in working out the details of acquiring abandoned rights of way.

"We learned a lot of other things are important, like who is going to use the trail, what is the resource like. There is a little 1-mile trail in Tulsa which includes an old railroad bridge that now is a pedestrian bridge, that is an important city park," Harnik said.

Top Night Crawlers Grown In Illinois

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LANARK, Ill. — Four miles outside town, heading east on Illinois 64, a traveler comes to the intersection of a blacktop road that looks like any other rural artery in the rolling acres of northwestern Illinois.

Turn right for Milledgeville, left for Shannon, or pull over on the soft shoulder where three unmarked buildings house a night crawler's delight: Buss Bed-ding.

Inside these buildings, which appear as simple and sturdy as the barns that dot Carroll County, more than a million pounds of the gray, lint-like material are made each year for the benefit of fishermen hoping to bait their hooks with the fattest, slimiest, juiciest worms around.

"It's No. 1," says Chuck Shuck, owner of Chuck's Bait and Tackle in Muscatine, Iowa, where bedding sales are brisk. "It conditions them, fattens 'em up. Buss Bed-ding works good, always has."

The testimonials aren't unusual, according to the mail that arrives at the two-desk headquarters of Buss Manufacturing Co., owned by Marvin Gruhn and his wife, Dolores.

Six employees make the bedding, which is sold through sporting goods stores and bait shops, mostly in the Midwest and Northeast, although Gruhn describes the market as "everything north of Interstate 80."

The Gruhns won't disclose how much money they earn off Buss Bed-ding — they won't even divulge how the stuff is made — but they produce 1.5 million pounds a year. It usually sells at $1.25 for a one-pound bag.

EPC Announces All-Conference Teams

Regular-season co-champion Farmville Central placed three players on the Eastern Plains Conference All-Conference team led by player-of-the-year Jarvis Lang.

named from Ayden-Grifton were Ronnell Peterson and Leon Dixon. Greene Central and North Pitt also placed two members on the team. For the Rams, Reggie Atkinson and Tyrone Streeter were named, while the Panthers placed William Morning and Reggie Daniels on the team. C.B. Aycock's Bob Grant rounded out the squad.

For the girls' squad, player-of-the-year honors went to North Pitt's Keisha Pilgreen. Joining Pilgreen on the all-conference squad from the Pant-Hers was Gwen Pilgreen.

Ayden-Grifton's Iris Brown and Debbie Williams were also named as was Greene Central's Angel Harrell.

From C.B. Aycock, Marti Anderson was named, while South Lenoir's Kelly Thompson rounded out the team.

Coach-of-the-year honors were shared by Ayden-Grifton's B.T. Chappell and South Lenoir's Jimmy Smith.

Softball Leagues Set To Organize

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will hold organizational meetings for its summer softball league program this week.

Anyone interested in playing on a team, forming a team, or managing a team should attend the appropriate meeting. All meetings will be held at Elm Street Gym. The deadline for entering a team in a league is April 6.

The meeting schedule is as follows: Industrial League, Monday, 7 p.m. □Church League, Monday, 8 p.m; Women's League, Wednesday, 7 p.m; Coed League, Wednesday, 7 p.m; City League, Wednesday, 8 p.m.

Participation is limited to one league, with the exception of the Coed League. Players from other league may, if they wish, play in the Coed League also.

For further information, contact the Recreation Department at 830-4543 or 830-4550, or come by Elm Street Gym.

Youth Soccer Progam Is Offered

The Greenville Aquatics & Fitness Center is offering a youth indoor soccer progam for both girls and boys from ages 5-11.

Registration will run from now until March 18 or until the league is filled. Games will begin April 8. For more information call 758-6892.

Rosco Run Set For March 11

The Second annual Rosco Run, sponsored by The Daily Reflector and Ross Laboratories for the benefit of the Children's Hospital of Eastern North Carolina, will be held on March 11.

The event will include a 10-kilometer run, a 5-K run and a one-mile run-walk. In addition, a special wheelchair division and a team division will be held in the 5-K race.

The 5-K race will start at 10 a.m., with the 10-K starting at 10:45. The one-mile event will begin at approximately 11:45, or 10 minutes after the final runner from the 10-K finishes.

The starting line will be at the East Carolina University School of Medicine on the grounds of the Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Age groups will include 19 and under, 20-29, 30-34, 35-39, 40-49, 50-59, and over 60. The top three men and women overall and the top three Masters men and women will receive awards and prizes. The top three women and men in each age group will also receive awards for the 5- and 10-K runs.

The top three boy and girls, ages 12 and under in the one-mile run/walk will receive Rosco bears. Ribbons and certificates will be presented to all finishers.

The first 300 entrants to the 5- and 10-K races will receive free t-shirts.

Pre-registration is $8, and must be mailed no later than March 5. Registration on race day will begin at 8 p.m. and is $10 for those not previous registered. A $1 charge is made for the one-mile event.

Phillip Rowan of Greenville is the defending champion of the 10-K race in the men's division, while Cynthia Wooten, also of Greenville is the women's defending champion. In the 5-K race, Greenville's Rob Powell, who finished second in the 10-K, is the defending champion, while Pam Allie-Morrill of Virginia Beach, Va., is the defending champion.

Entry forms are available at The Daily Reflector, the Greenville Aquatics Center, or from Bill Twine, 758-6892.

St. Peter's Takes Two Basketball Victories

St. Peter's varsity boys and girls both took wins over St. Mary's of Goldsboro in parochial league basketball action Saturday.

In the boys' game Ryan Williams's 11 points led St. Peter's to a 40-17 win

Graham Powell added eight. The win moved St. Peters to 11-3 heading into its conference tournament next weekend.

In the girls' game, St. Peter's took a 16-13 win as Katie McPherson scored six points.

St. Mary's JV team handed St. Peter's a 23-19 loss. Matthew Dellasega led St. Peters with nine points.

Cardinals Top Irish, 87-77

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Kenny Payne scored 27 points and LaBradford Smith added 19 to lead No. 14 Louisville to an 87-77 victory over Notre Dame Saturday.

Louisville, which had lost five of its previous eight games before playing the Irish, will enter the Metro Conference Tournament on Friday with a 20-8 record.

Notre Dame, an independent hoping for an invitation to the NCAA tournament, slipped to 18-7.

Keith Robinson led the Irish with 18 points and 16 rebounds.

Elmer Bennett scored twice for the Irish in the closing seconds, the last a 3-point goal for the final score.

Notre Dame trailed from midway in the first half but twice closed to within four points, the second time on a 3-point goal by Joe Fredrick that made it 71-67.

Notre Dame dominated the boards 37-27. Robinson's 10 rebounds in the first half were more than the entire Louisville team.

The Irish played most of the game without their second-leading scorer, freshman forward LaPhonso Ellis. He left without scoring three minutes into the game after suffering a compound dislocation of his right index finger.

Louisville took an early first-half lead, 16-10, before the Irish went on a 14-2 scoring streak. Notre Dame widened its lead to 31-23, but the Cardinals scored eight straight points to tie the game with 1:57 left.

Louisville took a 36-34 lead a minute later on a 3-point goal Tony Kimbro and a basket by Payne, and Robinson tied it with seven seconds left.

The Cardinals lost the chance to take a halftime lead when Keith Williams missed both free throws after a Keith Tower personal foul at the buzzer.

Florida St.....81
S. Mississippi.....78

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — George McCloud scored 29 points to help Florida State capture the regular season Metro Conference championship with an 81-78 win over Southern Mississippi Saturday.

Florida State, 21-6 overall and 9-3 in the league, will be the first-seeded team in the league's post season tournament to be held March 10-12 in Columbia, S.C.

Southern Mississippi, 10-16 overall and 2-10 in the league, will be seeded fifth, or last. The Golden Eagles finished the season with seven consecutive conference losses.

McCloud scored 18 points in the first half when Florida State erased an early 24-10 Golden Eagle lead. The two teams were tied at the half, 40-40.

Florida State led by as much as nine points, 60-51, with 12:55 left, but the Golden Eagles rallied and tied the score at 70-70 on a slam dunk by Jurado Hinton.

Hinton, who led Southern Mississippi with 16 points, tied the game again at 77-77 with 1:41 left, but Florida took the lead for good on a shot by Tharon Mayes, who scored a total of 11 points for the Seminoles.

Tony Dawson added 22 points for Florida State, and Derrick Mitchell had 13.

Other players in double figures for Southern Mississippi were Clarence Weatherspoon, 15, Darrin Chancellor, 15, Willie Brown, 11, and Marcus Crowell, 10.

St. Mary's.....86
Portland.....48

SAN FRANCISCO — Al Lewis sparked St. Mary's to a game-opening 21-2 run and the 17th-ranked Gaels went on to beat Portland 86-48 in the first round of the West Coast Athletic Conference basketball tournament Saturday.

St. Mary's improved to 25-3, while Portland finished its season at 2-26.

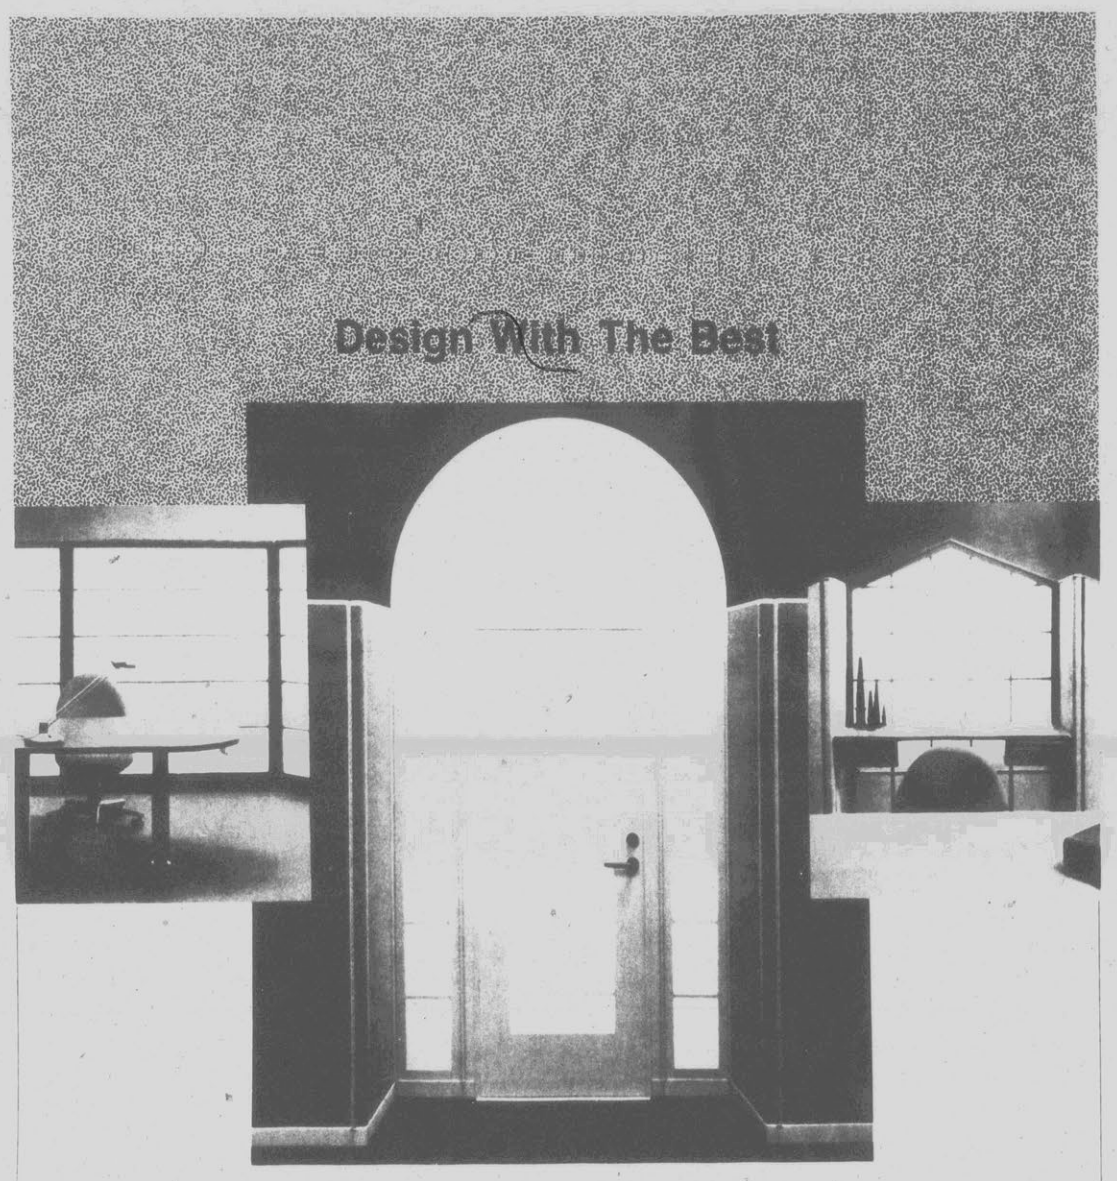

Lewis, who finished with 20 points in only 17 minutes of action, scored eight points during St. Mary's opening run. The Gaels extended their lead to 31-8 with 9:24 left in the first half.

St. Mary's posted the most one-sided victory in WCAC tournament history despite playing without all-conference performer Erick Newman, who is recovering from a sprained knee.

James Dailey, Newman's replacement, scored 16. Portland was led by William McDowell's 17.

A RESPONSIBLE APPROACH: Liquid applications made by ChemLawn are highly diluted solutions of fertilizer and pesticide (when pesticide is used). The pesticides that we may include have passed scientific review of their safety and effectiveness and are registered by their manufacturers with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and appropriate state agencies. Since it is a prudent practice to avoid unnecessary contact with any chemical substance, we recommend that your family and pets stay off treated areas until the application has dried. ChemLawn avoids the use of materials known to sensitize persons or produce allergic reactions. Nevertheless, there are persons sensitive to chemicals who may wish to take additional steps to minimize their exposure.

ECU, AU Were Both After Same Thing

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

HAMPTON, Va. — When East Carolina and American met Saturday afternoon in the second game of the Colonial Athletic Association basketball tournament, neither team had ever won a CAA tourney game.

The two teams split during the regular season, and there was all the expectation that the rubber meeting would be a close one.

But it didn't turn out that way. East Carolina, a team that rose and fell on the play of Blue Edwards, the CAA's Player of the Year, found extra help at just the right time. Reed Lose threw in a season-high 17 points while Stanley Love added 15, also a season high. Edwards, after a first half that was less than spectacular, came through with a stellar second half and finished with 28 — the most ever by a Pirate in a CAA tournament game.

"I struggled in the first half, but the coach just told me to relax in the second half," Edwards said. "I did, and everything worked out."

That sets the stage for a matchup Sunday between the reigning player of the year and last year's honoree, Kenny Sanders, who leads George Mason.

Mason, after leading by 17 points in the first half of their game against William & Mary, had to battle to avoid an upset, taking a 75-72 victory when the Indians turned over the ball with five seconds left.

"There won't be any pressure about that," Edwards said. "I'm more concerned with how our team plays than how I do against Kenny. I just have to put (the Player of the Year award) behind."

The Pirates, who were not playing well at all in January, have rebounded to win six of their last seven games.

"We got down on ourselves," Lose said. "We knew that we were better than we were playing (when the team traveled to James Madison and George Mason). So we've worked hard to try and get better. We just didn't want to lose here."

Coach Mike Steele said that the Pirates, after they lost Kevin Staples to suspension, wasn't a very good team.

"But we slowed down our offense and played a zone on defense," he said. "We got the ball to Blue each time down the court and then looked for what came out of that."

The key turned out to be the play of Lose and Love, and that point wasn't lost on American coach Ed Tapscott.

"When you play a team with a great player like Edwards, you tend to concentrate on him," he said. "But they got great play from Lose and Love and that hurt us badly. They just got an excellent effort from their guys. They were ready to play and played within themselves.

"But nobody died here. It's just a ball game. You have to put it into perspective."

ECU returned to the court at halftime to find it had lost a point on the scoreboard.

Just before halftime, Jay Scherer hit a jumper and the scoreboard recorded three points. During the half, however, a review of the television tape showed Scherer was just on the line when he shot and the adjustment was made while the teams were in the dressing room.

Former ECU player Herb Krusen is now an assistant coach under Ernie Nestor. Krusen formerly served as an assistant with Nestor when both were on the Wake Forest staff. Prior to coming to GMU, Krusen served as an assistant, and then as interim head coach at Western Carolina.

"It's been a great year for us," Krusen said. "We were only 6-9 early, but we've won 11 of our last 12 now and playing pretty well."

Krusen said the Patriots are hopeful of a post-season bid, possibly in the National Invitational Tournament, even if they don't win the tournament, "But I think we'll have to win Sunday to have a legitimate chance."

And he wasn't surprised that ECU won, predicting that prior to the Pirate-American game.

Krusen, who watched Edwards move past him in the all-time ECU scoring list, scored 1,115 points in his career. Edwards now has 1,143, and is alone in ninth place.

The former Pirate hopes to spend a couple of more years with Mason — unless something good comes along. "I want to be a head coach," Krusen said. "And if the ECU job comes open, I'd like to have a chance at that."

Blue Earns CAA Honor ...

Conference team, the all Rookie team, the all defensive team and the all-academic teams, announced Friday morning. ECU's Jeff Kelly was named to both the defensive and the academic units.

The principal speaker for the night was ESPN commentator Chris Berman, who commended the conference for having six of its eight teams finish the regular season over .500.

Berman gave a brief history of the cable network, noting that it got started as a way of telecasting University of Connecticut football and basketball. When the group learned that it would cost them the same to use sattelite broadcasting nationwide as it would to cover Connecticut, ESPN was off and running.

Berman, famous for coming up with comic nicknames for professional athletes, said that originated when he was a college student, reading the box scores. After he began with ESPN, one just slipped out one night and the reaction to it was so great that he kept it up.

He then came up with some for the CAA: Commissioner Tom "I'm not as fast as Chuck" Yeager; supervisor of officials Dan "100 percent" Woolridge; Navy Coach Pete "Pee Wee" Herrmann; Navy player Joe 'Get the blackboard, I've" Gottschalk.

And for the Pirates there was "Cordon" Blue Edwards, Gus "Blueberry" Hill, Stanley "you might as well face it, you're addicted to" Love; and Reed 'my lips" Lose.

lead to the final 18-point margin as American fouled out five players.

Edwards, who was only three of eight in the first half, with five turnovers and four rebounds, went seven of 10 from the floor with five rebounds and just one turnover in the second half.

"Once we got Blue to realize that our guys were the ones in purple, we did all right," Steele joked afterwards.

Steele praised the play of Scherer, saying that he had gotten down on himself earlier, but had practiced well in the last 10 days. "We go by how people practice and he got his chance."

Steele also said that Lose did a good job of bringing the ball up the floor after Jeff Kelly was benched with his fourth foul. "It wasn't pretty at times, but it was effective. "We slowed the game down, spread it out and got the ball to Blue."

Chuck West led American's scoring with 14 points, but only Draper joined him in double figures.

"We're 9-1 when we keep our opponents under 65 points," Steele said. "We've tried to slow things down, get the ball to Blue at least once each time down, and play good zone defense."

ECU shot a hot 64.1 percent from the floor while holding American to just 34.8 percent.

East Carolina will now face George Mason in the second round of the tournament, at 2 p.m. Sunday in the Hampton Coliseum.

Wolfpack guard Chris Corchiani drove the lane in the final seconds of the first overtime to tie the game at 84 and force another extra period.

Cal Boyd and Derrick McQueen each made 3-point shots for Wake Forest in the next overtime, but Monroe scored with 45 seconds left in the second extra period to tie the score at 92 and just missed getting off a 3-point shot at the buzzer.

The third overtime ended after N.C. State's Brian Howard tipped in a missed shot at the 1:02 mark to tie the score at 96.

Senior Chucky Brown scored a career-high 34 points for N.C. State, which led 42-37 at halftime. Avie Lester scored 18 while Howard finished with 11 points and 12 rebounds. Corchiani scored 10 and added 10 assists.

N.C. State could meet Wake Forest in the first round of the ACC tournament.

"Why didn't you tell me this in the third overtime?" Valvano said. "I might have conceded this one to Bob. We could play them again? Oh, my."

GMU Gets By Stubborn Tribe

UNC-Wilmington Hold Off James Madison; Richmond Romps By Midshipmen

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAMPTON, Va. — George Mason coach Ernie Nestor can't help but wonder what lies ahead for his Patriots after they failed to hold a double-digit lead against seventh-seeded William & Mary at the Colonial Athletic Association tournament.

"I didn't expect this type of game at all," Nestor said after second-seeded George Mason held off a second-half comeback bid by the Indians for a 75-72 victory in Saturday's opening round of the tournament.

"We're disappointed that we got the lead and then lost it," Nestor said. "But we held on to win, and that's been an important aspect of this team all year long."

Kenny Sanders scored 19 points to lead George Mason into Sunday's semifinals. The Patriots, who have won 12 of their last 13 games, improved to 18-10.

William & Mary, losing its fifth straight, wound up 5-23.

Swenson's team was plagued by injuries throughout the season. Seven players missed anywhere between one and 13 games due to various ailments throughout the year.

"With all the adversity we've faced," Swenson said, "we just never really got over the hump. We never really got that confidence."

The Patriots took the lead for good on a free throw by Sanders that made it 16-15.

That began a 29-14 run by George Mason to close the half. Sanders added nine more points in the surge as George Mason, shooting 57.6 percent from the floor compared to 37.9 percent for William & Mary, built a 44-29 intermission edge.

Scott Smith and Tom Bock scored six points apiece as William & Mary rallied from a 62-49 deficit with 11:05 to play to pull to within 71-68 on a pair of free throws by Smith at the 3:55 mark. The Indians could get no closer, however.

Two free throws by George Mason's Robert Dykes gave the Patriots a 75-70 edge. William & Mary cut it to 75-72 on Jimmy Apple's short bank shot with 38 seconds to go, but the Indians could not score again.

George Mason also got 13 points from Dykes and 10 from Mike Hargett.

Bock led William & Mary with 22 points. Smith, who fouled out with 1:35 to play, added 16. Curtis Pride had 14 for William & Mary and Apple added 11.

Richmond.....96
Navy.....86

HAMPTON, Va. — Mike Winiecki, Eric English and Ken Atkinson scored 22 points each as Richmond opened its defense of the Colonial Athletic Association tournament title with a 96-86 victory over Navy Saturday night.

The top-seeded Spiders, who have won 15 of their last 16 games, improved to 20-8 and advanced to Sunday's semifinals.

Navy, seeded last in the eight-team field, closed at 6-22. The Midshipmen, who earlier in the season endured a school-record 15-game losing streak, won three of their last seven.

Richmond trailed only once, when Navy's Erik Harris sank a 3-point goal that made it 3-2.

A short jumper by Jim Shields on Richmond's next possession put the Spiders ahead to stay, and they gradually built their lead to 14 points on two occasions en route to a 46-35 halftime edge.

Twice after intermission Richmond pushed its lead to 19 points, the last time at 82-63 on a pair of free throws by Joe Jon Bryant with 5:39 to play.

Scott Stapleton added 11 points for the Spiders.

Eddie Reddick, who scored 26 of Navy's 51 points in the second half, finished with 28 to lead the Midshipmen. Navy also got 15 points from Joe Gottschalk, 14 from Harris, 11 from Sam Cook and 10 from Bobby Jones.

N.C.-Wilmington.....80
James Madison..... 70

HAMPTON, Va. — Antonio Howard scored 23 points and North Carolina-Wilmington used strong 3-point shooting to build an early lead and held off a James Madison rally for an 80-70 victory over the Dukes in the first round of the Colonial Athletic Association tournament Saturday night.

The fourth-seeded Seahawks improved to 15-13 and moved into a Sunday afternoon semifinal against top-seeded Richmond, which downed Navy 96-86 earlier Saturday. Last month in Wilmington, N.C., the Seahawks handed Richmond its only loss of the CAA season.

East Carolina and George Mason meet in the other semifinal, and the winner of Monday night's title game gets an automatic berth in the 64-team NCAA tournament field.

A pair of free throws by James Madison's Anthony Cooley cut N.C.-Wilmington's lead to 73-66 with 1:43 to play, but Howard responded with a pair of foul shots at the other end, and James Madison was unable to get closer than seven points the rest of the way.

Larry Houzer added 17 points for the Seahawks, who also got 12 each from Greg Bender and Bryan Withers.

Tire Changing In Goodwrench

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. — Driver Ken Schrader will change from Goodyear to Hoosier tires at the first opportunity Sunday in the Goodwrench 500, and his team manager figures they won't be alone.

"I think once we get the Hoosiers on the rest of them will be chasing us," Richard Broome said Friday. "The Goodyears are faster for a lap or two, that's why we qualified on them. But after that they fall off (in speed) quite a bit more than the Hoosiers."

Tires were the main topic of discussion Friday, when rain washed out second-round qualifying for the second Winston Cup event of the season, forcing NASCAR officials to complete the lineup on the basis of first-round speeds.

Few drivers lingered at North Carolina Motor Speedway very long as the rain fell. But those who did conferred with crew chiefs about plans for Sunday's race, the first since the Daytona 500 on Feb. 19. Last week's Pontiac 400 at Richmond was snowed out.

All but two of the 44 drivers who made qualifying runs Thursday had Goodyears mounted on their cars. Under NASCAR rules, cars must start a race on the same tire make on which they qualified.

The rainout of Friday's session put Phil Parsons in the 21st position, first of the remaining spots available for Sunday's race. Parsons, driving an Oldsmobile, had a lap at 145.032 mph in first-round qualifying, in contrast to Rusty Wallace's record-setting speed of 148.973 mph in a Pontiac.

The rainout at the 1.107-mile track left defending Goodwrench 500 champion Neil Bonnett to start his Ford 24th. Richard Petty, who has scored 11 of his 200 career victories at the track, goes 39th in a Pontiac.

The only "racing" done Friday at the speedway was among NASCAR officials, scurrying at one point during the morning to figure who would get the two provisional back row starting spots if the foul weather persisted — as it did.

These positions, on the basis of points earned in the Daytona 500, went to J.D. McDuffie and Mike Alexander.

Drivers Geoff Bodine and Davey Allison, involved in an accident during the Daytona 500, met with Winston Cup director Dick Beaty to discuss their situation Friday.

Beaty had called the meeting.

"Basically, we just wanted to stress to them that the Daytona 500 was over and the other race tracks are no place for continuing hard feelings," NASCAR spokesman Chip Williams said. "It was a good meeting and there were no fines or reprimands, just a clearing of the air."

The drivers and Beaty viewed videotapes of the incident which sent Allison spinning and then flipping one time. Despite the wreck, he was able to continue in the race at reduced speed and finished 25th. Bodine placed fourth.

"We got together just to be sure that what happened at Daytona is behind us. Mistakes were made at Daytona and I hope they don't happen again," Bodine said.

Farmville's Reggie Barrett tries to block AG's Leon Dixon

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

BETHEL — Ayden-Grifton had a trio of seniors that simply refused to go out without the Eastern Plains Conference Basketball title.

Ronnell Peterson, Leon Dixon and James Woodard combined for 88 points to lead the Chargers to a 92-87 double-overtime win over Farmville Central in the championship game.

Peterson, who was named the tournament's MVP, led the way for the Chargers with 38 points and 22 rebounds, while Dixon added 29 points and 10 boards. Woodard finished with 21 points, including a 3-pointer with six seconds left in regulation to tie the game at 75-75.

"We just couldn't stop Peterson," Farmville Central coach Mike Terrell said. "I'm not sure if anybody can stop him when he gets hot like he did tonight. I think they have the capacity to beat anybody when he's hot."

The two teams tied for the regular season championship, but the Jaguars were seen as the favorites for the tournament as Ayden-Grifton had lost a starting guard and a key reserve heading into the tournament due to disciplinary reasons.

"I think what it boils down to is we had three guys out there that weren't going to lose," Ayden-Grifton coach Bob Murphrey said. "Those three guys just kept making big plays for us."

The Jaguars seemed poised to run away with the game in the first half as they built as much as a 14-point lead, 41-27, before leading 41-29 at the half.

"I thought we were taking our shots too quickly in the first half," Murphrey said. "We weren't getting the ball in the hands of the people that could score in good position."

Terrell felt the big lead at the half may have been bad for his team.

"I'm not so sure if the big league didn't hurt us," Terrell said. "I thought we played with more intensity in the first half. It seemed as if we sort of relaxed in the second half."

The Chargers battled back to within three, 51-48, late in the third quarter, only to see the Jaguars reel off seven unanswered points in the last 1:23 of the quarter and take a 58-48 lead into the fourth period.

Ayden-Grifton pulled back within four, 67-63, with 3:23 to play when Woodard canned a 3-pointer.

The tie marked the first in the game since the two teams were tied at 17-17 with 7:39 left in the first half.

Farmville forged back out to a three point lead, 75-72, with 15 seconds to play when center Jarvis Lang, who led the Jaguars with 24 points, was good on two free throws.

Woodard, however, sent the game into overtime with a 3-point shot.

"I didn't get a chance to set up for the shot," Woodard said. "When I shot it, I said to myself, 'oh no, you shouldn't have shot it,' and then it went in. It was like having a prayer answered."

The shot by Woodard may have been the beginning of the end for Farmville, according to Terrell.

"We had the game won and then he made that shot," Terrell said. "I could see it in my kids' eyes. They thought the game was over and then he makes that shot. I knew we were in trouble then."

In the first overtime, the Jaguars jumped out to a quick lead when Barrett scored on a layup after an assist from William Carr with 2:52 left.

The Jaguars then moved out by four, 79-75, with 1:33 to play when Lang knocked in both ends of a one-and-one.

Peterson then cut the lead to two, 79-77, when he followed up his own miss with a layup with 1:16 left.

Peterson then stole the inbounds pass by Farmville and scored to knot the game at 79-79.

That's where they stood until Peterson was fouled with seven second left and missed two shots that would have won the game. George Burnette, who finished with 17 points, had missed a shot for the Jaguars at the other end with 37 seconds to play.

In the second overtime, Ayden-Grifton took the lead with 2:47 left when Woodard knocked in a pair of free throws.

It marked the first lead for the Chargers since they led 11-10 with 2:50 to play in the first quarter.

Lang managed to tie the game at the other end with a turnaround, but the Chargers pushed the lead out to five, 86-81, by the 1:28 mark on free throws from Dixon and Peterson.

From there it was just a matter of hitting free throws and the Chargers nailed six out of their last seven.

"Deep down we felt like we could win," Dixon said. "Everybody expected us to lose but we thought that we could come through and we just never gave up."

Peterson agreed.

"I felt like we could win all along," Peterson said. "I felt like if we never got down then we could win."

Ayden-Grifton improves to 21-4 with the win, while Farmville slips to 20-4. The two teams will begin action in sectional competition next week.

Lady Jaguars Win EPC Title, 61-58

Brenda Reid's 26 Leads Balanced Offensive Attack By Farmville

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

BETHEL — Farmville Central's girls' basketball team used a balanced attack to pull out a win Friday night.

The Lady Jaguars held off a fourth quarter rally by North Pitt to win the championship of the Eastern Plains Conference Basketball Tournament, 61-58.

Farmville got 26 points from center Brenda Reid and 13 from forward Wanda Bullock inside, while guard Felicia Barrett took care of the perimeter with 12 points.

"We wanted to use a multi-offense and get it into Brenda as much as we could," Farmville coach Hilda Worthington said. "I thought Felicia did a good job of getting the ball in to her and setting up our offense."

The win lifts Farmville to 18-7 overall for the year, while the Pant-Hers slip to 14-7. Both teams will move on to sectional play next week.

The Lady Jaguars broke open big leads in the game on a couple of occasions, only to see the Pant-Hers battle back. Farmville led by 16, 54-38, with 4:50 left. But North Pitt rallied to close to within one.

"We never did get the knockout punch we needed," Worthington said. "We just didn't execute well when I put in substitutes."

Keisha and Gwen Pilgreen, who finished with 20 and 24 points respectively to lead North Pitt, led the rally. Keisha Pilgreen canned a 3-pointer with 4:24 left to close the gap to 54-41. She scored 11 of her 20 points in the first quarter.

"I knew that she would get hot in the fourth quarter," Worthington said. "Both times before when we played them she got going in the last quarter."

After a follow shot by Gwen Pilgreen, Keisha scored on a driving layup to trim the lead to nine, 54-45, with 3:32 to play.

Pilgreen then hit one of two free throw attempts and scored off a layup from an assist from Portia Clark to make the score 54-48 with 2:55 to play.

After Reid missed two free throws for the Lady Jaguars, Gwen Pilgreen canned two from the line to make the score 54-50.

But the Pant-Hers wouldn't die.

Donna Leggett buried an 18-footer with 53 seconds left, followed by a pair of free throws from Louise Powell with 42 seconds to play to cut the margin to five, 59-54.

Gwen Pilgreen then cut the lead to two with a 3-pointer from the corner and Keisha Pilgreen stole the ensuing inbounds pass and was fouled with 18 seconds to play.

She hit the front end of the one-and-one to make the score 59-58, but missed the second and following a North Pitt turnover after steal by Keisha Pilgreen, Bullock then iced the game for the Lady Jaguars with a pair of free throws at the other end with eight second left.

"We got a bad call there at the end," Perry said. "The ball went off Farmville's player but those things are going to happen every time you go on the court."

The free throw line proved to be the nemesis for the Pant-Hers in the game. Keisha Pilgreen made only 3-10 attempts and the team sank 10-22 opportunities.

"It (free throw shooting) cost us the game," Perry said. "We've drilled and drilled on that in practice and had our percentage up to around 70 percent, but tonight it just wasn't there."

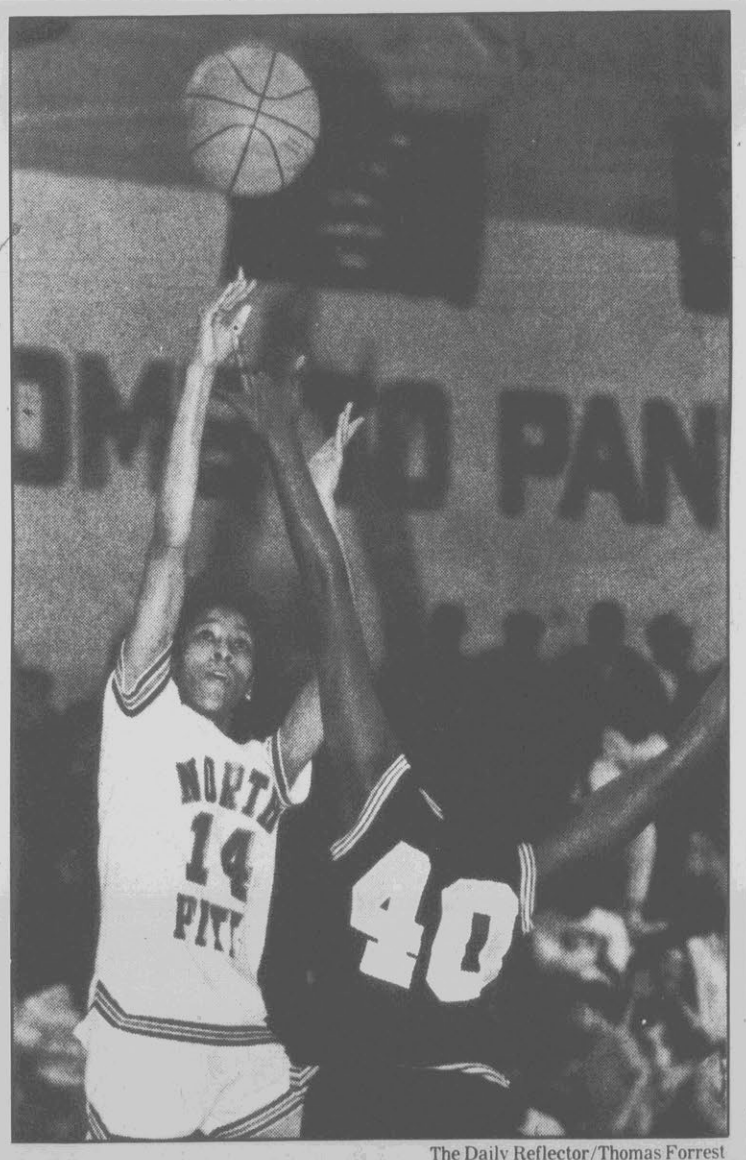

In the third quarter, the Lady Jaguars had raced out to a 10 point lead, 36-26, before Gwen Pilgreen brought the Pant-Hers back within two, 36-34. She scored 10 of her points in the period to guide the offense.

The Lady Jaguars built a 26-20 halftime lead in the game thanks to a 10-point effort from Reid in the second quarter. Reid scored 17 of her points in the first half.

"I think this loss will probably get us up more than anything else," Perry said. "We're still going now. If we had to lose one, then this was the one to lose. Next week, if you lose, you're finished."

George Helps Rams Slip By Vikes

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

HAVELOCK — With the game on the line in the final seconds, the last person D.H Conley coach Cobby Deans wanted to see with the ball was Havelock's Ledell George, but that's exactly what happened and the Vikings paid for it.

George hit two free throws with seven seconds left to put the Havelock ahead, 57-56 and the Rams held on for the win to claim the Coastal 3-A Conference Basketball Tournament Title Friday night.

After George's free throws, Conley still had a last shot at winning the game. The Vikings worked the ball to Terry Williams, who led the Vikings with 21 points, and he got free for a 16-foot jumper, but the shot was off. Stacy Green got a hand on it and tried to tip it back but that too missed as the clock wound down to give Havelock the win.

On the winning play, George took the out of bounds pass, turned and drove toward the foul line before rising up for a shot. But Green was called for a foul on the play to send George to the foul line.

"We were supposed to deny him the ball and make sure they didn't get any second shots," Deans said of George. "We didn't do a very good job on that. Once he got the ball, it was all over."

Putting the ball in George's hands was a logical move. He had a game-high 27 points, including four 3-pointers. But Havelock coach Shelley March said the final play was actually designed for guard Issaic Barrett.

"We thought Issaic would be the most likely candidate to be open," Marsh said. "We had planned to get the ball to him. But Ledell being the type of person he is, saw an opening, got the ball and drew the foul. It's good the way it worked out."

It marked the second time in three years that Havelock had handed the Vikings a last-second defeat in the tournament finals. Two years ago, the Rams' Al West canned a long jumper at the buzzer to sink the Vikings, who then went on to win the state 3-A Title.

Conley led most of the early part of this game, but Havelock came out strong in the third quarter to erase the deficit.

Keith Frazier opened the period with a three-pointer to tie the game at 26-26. Two free throws from Conley's Bershaun Thompson made it 28-26 but George worked free for a 3-pointer from the right side to give Havelock a 29-28 lead.

The teams traded baskets with Conley's last lead coming with 2:43 to go in the period on a 3-pointer by Thompson.

George answered that with a follow shot. Anthony Robinson added two free throws, Carl Frazier hit a free throw and then George put in a follow shot just before the buzzer to give Havelock a 44-39 lead heading into the final quarter.

Conley tied the game at 46-46 with 6:28 remaining on a jumper by Williams, but George keyed a seven-point run with two baskets as Havelock pushed out to a 53-46 advantage.

Conley was able to fight back, though, and took the lead one last time thanks to a steal by Green that eventually led to a short jumper by Junior Farrow that made it 56-55 with 24 seconds left.

But that left plenty of time for Havelock to set up what would prove to be the winning play.

The Vikings were plagued by foul problems in the second half. Thompson, the VIkings' top ball handler and best outside shooter, picked up two quick fouls in the first half and saw little time and was also limited by fouls in the second half. Forward Paul Merritt had to sit down the majority of the fourth quarter with four fouls.

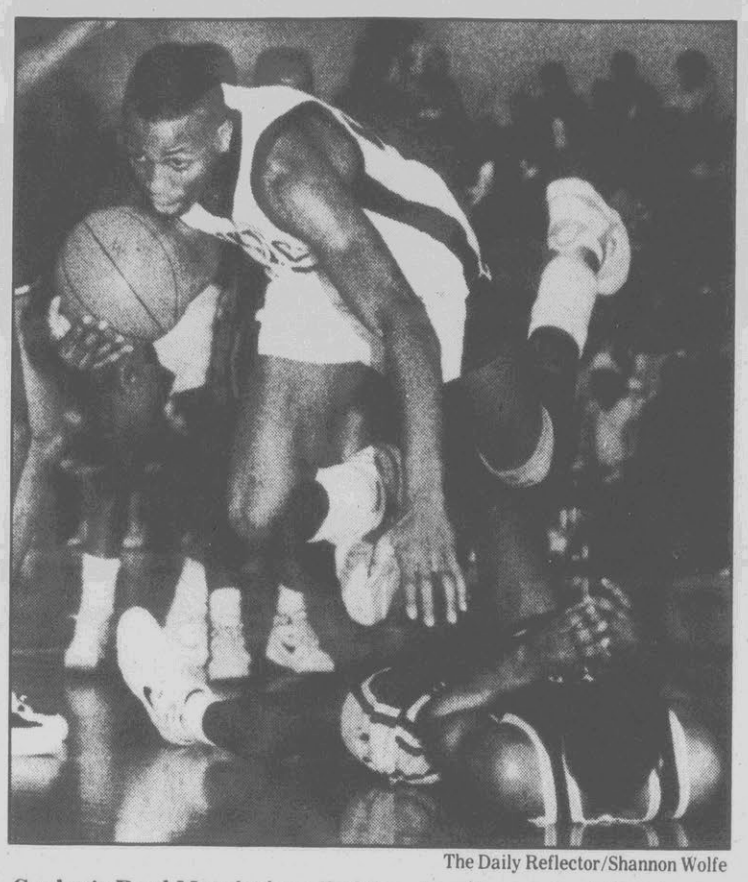

"I think him (Thompson) getting in foul trouble hurt us a lot," Deans said. "It kind of took away our outside threat. (But) we had a chance to win it and that's what makes it so sad, to come back like we did and then not block out on a free throw or have a missed assignment. We have to play extremely well to match up with them. If we had done a few of the simple things, then we might have been in the ball game."

Conley falls to 19-5 overall while Havelock improves to 16-9. Both teams return to action next week in sectional play.

Conley's Finish Keys Title Win

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

HAVELOCK — As far as D.H. Conley is concerned, it's not so much how you start, but how you finish.

The Valkyries overcame a poor first half to roll past West Craven, 56-45, and claim the Coastal Conference Girls' Basketball Tournament title Friday night.

Glenda Hardy, with a game-high 24 points, was a constant for Conley while Lendora Tyson scored eight of her 13 points in the final quarter for the Valkyries, who move to 18-5 on the year.

Conley led 10-8 after the first quarter and 22-17 at the half, but looked anything but in control.

"We had a real slow start," Conley coach Keith Gould said. "It was a combination of the girls really wanting to play Washington (which lost to West Craven 38-35 in the semifinals) and the fact that we had such an easy time with West Craven the last time we played them. We weren't ready to play mentally."

The small edge Conley did have at the half was quickly lost in the third quarter as West Craven got hot and took the lead, briefly, at 27-26 on a follow shot by Tasha Raynor with 3:55 left in the period.

From there, the lead seesawed back and forth until Jenni Bradburn fed Hardy for a short jumper late in the quarter to give Conley a 30-28 edge.

West Craven continued to stay close in the final quarter and tied the game up one last time when Raynor hit a short jumper to make it 32-32.

From there, Conley got things in gear.

Hardy hit the front end of a free throw opportunity. She missed the second but Tyson rebounded it and that led to a basket by Charlene Davenport that put the Valkyries up, 35-32 with 5:40 left.

Tyson then came up with a loose ball and was fouled at the other end. She canned both free throws for a 37-32 advantage. Davenport followed with another basket for a 39-32 edge, prompting a Lady Eagle time out with 5:03 left in the game.

Linetta Bryant pulled West Craven back within five at 39-34 with a jumper with 4:29 left, but that was as close as it would get.

A jumper by Hardy made it 43-36. Tyson then scored on three straight possessions, the last coming with just over a minute to go to give Conley a 49-40 lead. That, for all intents and purposes, was it.

"They had a real good game plan," Gould said. "They tried to take our best three offensive players out of the game. I don't think we really got going until the final quarter.

"We changed our offense. We were just basically trying to get a lot of offensive movement. We wanted to get Lendora alone, one on one. We tried it in the third quarter, but we didn't have the patience.

"In the fourth quarter, it was crunch time. It was time for a gut check and that says a lot about the girls that they were able to come out and do it."

Next up for Conley is the sectionals. The complete pairings will be announced Sunday afternoon.

Fike Upends Rampants

Key Second-Half Spurt Sinks Rose In 82-59 Defeat

By Lane Dunn
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

WILSON — Jamie Watson scored 21 of his 30 points in the second half and Maurice Williams added 24 to lead Wilson-Fike to an 82-59 victory over J.H. Rose in the Big East Conference Championship game Friday.

The Golden Demons opened the second half with an 11-0 run to stretch their two point halftime lead to 13. Rose could not catch up after that.

Fike coach Harvey Reid gave credit for the win to a new pressure defense he installed which did not heavily contest the ball handler, but put pressure on the off man.

Rose had trouble adjusting to the tactic and the pressure resulted in a number of turnovers that led to baskets for Fike.

It appeared that Fike would put the game away early in the first half when Williams gave Watson an off-the-backboard pass that resulted in a crowd-raising dunk and a 15-point lead.

Rose came back though, and scored 16 of the last 19 points of the half, with James Teel scoring 10 of them, to make the score at the half 30-28 Fike.

Maurice Hines started the spurt when he stole the ball and drove the length of the court for a layup. Teel then made three consecutive steals. The first two led to layups and the last one was goaltended to cut Fike's lead to seven.

Hines hit another field goal, Paul Powers dropped in a basket and Teel added four more points to make the game close at intermission.

The momentum switched, though, in the second half. Rose saw its chances for a win dwindle as Fike and Watson went on their second half tear. Reid had substituted often in the first half and sat some of the starters on the bench in an effort to keep them out of foul trouble.

The rest gave the Demons a chance to catch their breath and come out fresh. They outscored Rose 26-11 in the third quarter.

"We get tired and we didn't think," Brewington said. "We were slow in the third quarter."

To add to Rose's troubles, Fike scored seven points in the first 45 seconds of the fourth quarter and later pulled out to a 32-point lead on a 3-pointer by Watson.

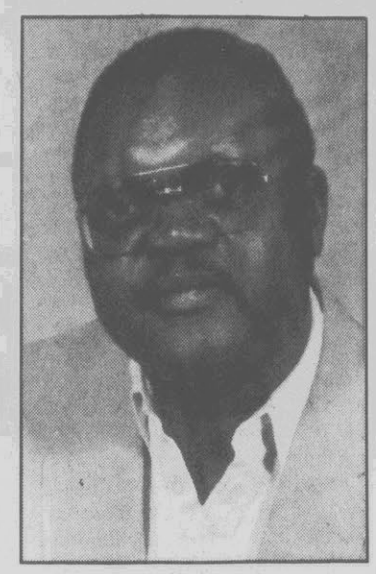

With 1:30 left in the game and a 25-point lead, the the Golden Demons' students began chanting "Warm up the bus" to the Rose players.

Fike then summed up the night when Kevin Satterfield fed Kendrick Lucas a 25-foot alley oop pass for a slam.

Rose and Fike open sectional play next week against opponents yet to be determined.

And the sectionals afford Rose another chance.

"We played well against Northeastern and we can beat anyone," he said. "We were just off tonight."

Jim Brewington

Carlester Crumpler led Rose with 17 points and James Teel added 11 for the Rampants.

Kendrick Lucas had 11 points for the Golden Demons.

Indians Upset N. Edgecombe

Chocowinity Claims TBC Tournament Championship

BATH — Chocowinity came into the Tobacco Belt 1-A Conference Basketball Tournament as the fifth seed, but the Indians leave with the championship in hand after a 67-57 win over second-seeded North Edgecombe Friday night.

The Tribe upset top-seeded Belhaven Wednesday and used a strong second and third quarter to send North Edgecombe to the same fate.

After taking a 13-11 lead after one period of play, Chocowinity outscored North Edgecombe 20-14 in the second quarter and 27-18 in the third quarter for a 60-43 lead heading into the final period.

The Tribe continued its' strong play in the final quarter by outscoring North Edgecombe, 17-14, to provide the final margin.

Bobby Moore's 16 points led five Tribe players in double figures. Dewayne Tripp and Otis Harrell added 12 while Sean Crawford and Sonchas Howard had 10 each.

Orlando Whitaker led North Edgecombe with 22 points.

Chocowinity moves to 12-11 on the year with the win. The Indians needed to win the TBC Tournament to qualify for sectional play next week. Their opponent is yet to be determined.

Trinity.....59

ASHEBORO — Fayetteville Street Christian School of Asheboro came up with the plays at the end to hold off Trinity, 61-59, in a North Carolina Christian Activities Association playoff game Friday.

Kevin Wright scored the last of his game-high 28 points with a just over a minute to go to put Fayetteville Street up 60-58.

Trinity then failed to score on its next two possessions, but the Tigers still had a chance to tie the game with seven seconds left when Kreston Welch was fouled. He hit the front end but missed the second shot. A desperation foul allowed Fayetteville Street to adda free throw with one second left to provide the final margin.

Kirk Welch led Trinity with 21 points while Gerard Fulton had 17 and Kreston Welch added 11.

Trinity falls to 18-5 and played in a consolation early Saturday.

Strawberry Returns With A Big Day

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Darryl Strawberry made a dramatic return from a one-day walkout with a three-run homer and Darren Reed's three-run shot capped a five-run seventh inning that rallied the New York Mets to a 9-8 exhibition victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers on Saturday.

It was the teams' first meeting since the Dodgers won last year's National League playoffs.

Strawberry, who left camp Thursday after throwing a punch at first baseman Keith Hernandez and was fined $750 when he failed to show up Friday, put the Mets ahead 3-2 with his first spring homer in the third inning off Tim Belcher. Strawberry has been upset because the Mets refused to renegotiate his contract.

He said he came back "because I felt it's right for me to come back to be a part of this team and my teammates at this time."

But he still threatened to leave the Mets after 1990, the year in is contract.

In other games, Pittsburgh beat Cincinnati 2-1, Boston beat Detroit 5-2, Toronto beat Philadelphia 9-2, the Chicago White Sox beat Texas 3-2, Kansas City beat Cincinnati 6-2, Minnesota beat Houston 4-3, the Chicago Cubs beat Oakland 5-4, Cleveland beat San Francisco 7-4, San Diego beat California 4-2, Seattle beat Milwaukee 13-2 and Atlanta and Montreal played to a 1-1 tie after 13 innings.

Los Angeles went ahead 8-3 with four runs off Wally Whitehurst in the fourth inning, including John Shelby's solo homer, and two more off John Mitchell in the sixth. Reed's second homer in as many spring games capped the seventh-inning comeback against Chris Jones and John Wetteland.

Jeff Hamilton homered for the Dodgers off Mets starter Sid Fernandez, who allowed two runs in three innings.

Pirates 2, Cardinals 1

Dann Bilardello led off with a single off Jeff Fassero and was sacrificed to second. With one out, Pena bobbled a potential double-play grounder to load the bases and Fermin's fly ball scored pinch-runner John Cangelosi. Pittsburgh's other run off Joe Magrane in the first inning was also unearned. It came on an error by shortstop Rod Booker.

Red Sox 5, Tigers 2

Jim Rice hit a three-run homer and Carlos Quintana and Ellis Burks added solo shots in a five-run third inning.

Quintana led off with a home run off Frank Tanana. Wade Boggs singled for his fifth consecutive hit and Marty Barrett also singled. Rice followed with a home run and one out later Burks also homered.

Blue Jays 9, Phillies 2

Rob Ducey had four hits and Jesse Barfield three in Toronto's 16-hit attack. Toronto scored single runs in the second and third innings off Mike Maddux and two in the fourth off loser Bob Sebra. Scott Service gave up Toronto's last five runs, including Kelly Gruber's two-run homer.

White Sox 3, Rangers 2

Eddie Williams tripled home one run and scored another in a three-run fifth-inning Chicago rally. Paul Wilmet, the third of five Texas pitchers, gave up all the runs on four hits and a walk. He also balked home the final run.

Royals 6, Reds 2

Bill Buckner's two-run homer capped a four-run eighth inning off Kent Tekulve, who allowed five hits and a walk in his first inning for the Reds. Pat Tabler's sacrifice fly broke a 2-2 tie and Jim Eisenreich's triple put Kansas City ahead before Buckner homered.

Twins 4, Astros 3

Jarvis Brown hit a tie-breaking two-run single off former Minnesota reliever Mark Portugal in a four-run seventh inning. With two out in the seventh, Charlie Kerfeld walked Paul Sorrento and Rafael Delima, then allowed run-scoring singles to Doug Baker and Al Newman. Portugal relieved and gave up Brown's two-run single.

Minnesota's Frank Viola, the 1988 American League Cy Young Award winner, allowed four hits and two runs in three innings. Houston managed only three hits over the last five against Roy Smith, Balvino Galvez, Jeff Reardon and Jim Davins.

Cubs 5, Athletics 4

Mark Grace hit a two-run homer off Oakland's Storm Davis in the third inning. Chicago's Mike Harkey, a highly regarded rookie projected to be in the Cubs' starting rotation, gave up a run and four hits in three innings. Oakland's Steve Howard hit a two-run homer off Dean Wilkins in the ninth.

Indians 7, Giants 4

Cleveland reliever Rich Yett struck out six in three innings and San Francisco shortstop Jose Uribe's throwing error led to three unearned runs in the second inning, two coming on Jerry Browne's single.

Bud Black pitched three scoreless innings for the victory. Loser Rick Reuschel allowed six hits and three unearned runs. Kevin Mitchell homered for the Giants.

Padres 4, Angels 2

California reliever Greg Minton walked four batters in the fourth inning, helping San Diego score three runs. Minton could not protect a 2-0 lead, walking Joey Cora with the bases loaded to force home what proved to be the winning run.

Mariners 13, Brewers 2

Steve Balboni hit a grand slam in a nine-run fourth inning. Seattle had 15 hits off five Milwaukee pitchers and the Brewers committed six errors that led to eight unearned runs.

The score was 1-1 in the fourth when the Mariners sent 13 men to the plate. Balboni's homer came off Chris Bosio, who allowed all nine runs in the inning. Shortstop Mario Diaz batted twice in the inning and drove in four runs with a single and a bases-loaded triple.

Braves 1, Expos 1

Atlanta pinch runner Dennis Hood scored on a sacrifice fly by Jeff Weatherby in the ninth inning and the Braves and Montreal played to a 13-inning tie. Montreal scored in the seventh on Alonzo Powell's RBI double.

The New York Yankees played Baltimore in a night game.

Pate In Honda Lead

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. — Steve Pate was trying to make the cut. He did — and took the lead, too.

Pate shot an 8-under-par 64 to come from nine shots back and take a one-stroke lead Saturday after the third round of the $800,000 Honda Classic.

"I didn't expect to be in this position at all. I had no hope of this," Pate said after he'd one-putted 11 times in the third round. "But the guys in front of me weren't doing much and, with the wind, the golf course was much tougher today."

Pate, a two-time winner last season, completed 54 holes in 201, 15-under par. He was among the 72 golfers whose second rounds were halted by darkness Friday night.

"I was 4-under with seven to play," Pate said. "I knew the cut would be 4-under, so I was just trying to get in the last two rounds."

Pate birdied three of those seven second-round holes, then moved in front with his bogey-free third round.

"I played better than I hoped," Pate said after completing 54 holes — 25 on Saturday — in 201, 15 under par.

"Probably the best putting round I've had this year," said Pate, who went 5-under for the round when he holed a 45-foot birdie putt on the ninth.

He came within six inches of holing out a wedge shot on the 10th, birdied the 14th from 15 feet, scored from 10 feet on the 16th and then saved par — and the lead — with a 10-footer on the final hole.

"I didn't expect to be in this position at all. I had no hope of this," Pate said. "But the guys in front of me weren't doing much and with the wind, the golf course was much tougher today."

Dan Pohl, who led by three strokes after shooting a 62 in the second round, shot a 75 and was two strokes back at 203.

"Absolutely brain dead," he muttered after hitting an approach into a bunker on the 14th hole, where he made one of his five bogeys.

Littler In 3-Way Tie

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. — Gene Littler created a three-way tie for the lead when he shot a 4-under par 68 Saturday in the third round of the Vintage Invitational seniors golf tournament.

Little joined Bob Charles and Miller Barber at the top, with 54-hole scores of 212.

Charles, the left-hander from New Zealand who has had at least a share of the lead every day, struggled with his swing Saturday and settled for a 71.

Barber, with a par 72, was the most inconsistent of the leaders. He had a triple bogey on the first hole to fall five strokes off the pace, then later had a double bogey at the 16th.

Barber says he plays better when his competitive juices are flowing and they were absolutely gushing at the Mountain Course at the Vintage Club.

"You never lose that competitive edge, that's why we're out here," Littler said. "But it's not going to be easy. Too many good players are right up there, too."

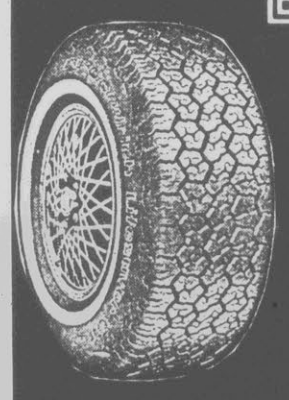

After the three leaders, there was a logjam of players with a chance to win the $55,500 portion of the $370,000 purse.

Larry Mowry, recent winner of the Seniors PGA Championship, carded a 71 to leave him a stroke off the pace at 213 with J.C. Goosie, who fell out of the lead when he shot a 74, and Don Bies, who fired a 68.

Dale Douglass and Tom Shaw were at 214. Douglass, one of seven players to have at least a part of the lead during the round, wound up shooting a 70 while Shaw had a 73.

Defending champion Orville Moody was three strokes back, after his round of 72. With a total of nine players within three shots of each other, the leaders expect a shootout in Sunday's final round.

Chairman Elected

William C. Bowen of Greenville has been elected chairman of the board of the Coin Laundry Association, a national organization representing manufacturers, distributors and store owners involved in the coin laundry business.

Bowen, who earned a degree in business administration from East Carolina University, has been involved with the association since 1978. He owns and operates William C. Bowen Companies Inc., which include Bowen Wash House, Bowen Cleaners and Bowen Uniform Rentals.

Bowen is charter president and co-founder of the North Carolina Coin Laundry Association, vice president of the North Carolina Drycleaners Association and a board member of the North Carolina Entrepreneurial Development Association. He is a member of the Greenville Noon Rotary Club, the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, the East Carolina University Pirate Club and Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

Bowen is married to the former Trudy Williford and they have two children.

Insurance Settlement

Reginald M. Fountain, president and chief executive officer of Fountain Powerboat Industries in Washington, N.C., has announced that a settlement has been reached with its insurance companies that will provide $4.9 million for losses incurred from a fire at the plant in October 1988.

Fountain also said that a new building will begin operation next week.

Production will be expanded during the coming months as the remaining models of Fountain sport boats and sportfishing boats whose molds were lost in the fire are put back into operation, the spokesman said.

CT&T's Plans Include New L-D Service Cable For Area

Carolina Telephone's 1989 construction plans call for spending $755,000 near Greenville for a new long-distance service cable made of fiber-optic strands, a state-of-the-art material in telecommunications, according to the company.

The new cable, to be placed into service in September between Greenville and Washington, N.C., is part of Carolina Telephone's plans to spend more than $119 million on construction this year throughout eastern North Carolina, said Wayne Peterson, company president.

"We have more than $1.3 billion invested in equipment and facilities in eastern North Carolina" said Peterson. "To continue to meet the communications needs of our customers, we will undertake this year a construction program that is estimated to cost $119,123,000."

About half of the figure will be used to provide for growth, Peterson said. The company expects to add about 26,500 telephone access lines this year, which would make its year-end total approximately 774,000.

The remainder of the construction budget is set for replacement and modernization of equipment and facilities.

Fiber-optic technology, Peterson said, is the most advanced means of telecommunications transmission. It uses lasers to transmit information over hair-thin glass fibers. One pair of glass fibers can transmit 8,000 telephone conversations simultaneously.

The 1989 plan also calls for spending $1,763,000 in Farmville and Fountain on new computer-controlled digital electronic switches.

The new digital offices, slated to open July 15, will serve 4,736 access lines in the two exchanges.

Peterson said the company has been replacing its electromechanical central offices with computerized digital offices at an accelerated pace since 1985. During 1989, the company will spend more than $32 million for its central office replacement program.

Peterson said Carolina Telephone will place into service 26 new digital central offices this year. When those are in service, 87 percent of the company's customers will be served by the technology.

"Our 1982 long-range plans called for all switching offices to be changed out to the new digital technology by the year 2000," Peterson said. "We were able to get a few steps ahead of that schedule during the last three years and now hope to substantially improve on it."

The digital central offices require less maintenance and provide faster call processing, improved voice and data transmission and custom calling features.

Business Courses

The Pitt Community College Small Business Center is offering two six-week courses titled "Starting a Small Business" and "Small Business Bookkeeping."

The first will begin Monday from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. in Room 7 of the Vernon White Building. The bookkeeping course will begin Tuesday from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. in the same room.

A registration fee will be charged. For information, call 355-4260.

Manager Earns Award

Kelly Temporary Services has presented an award for outstanding service to Greenville branch manager Jeffrey Bujak for his service to customers.

Kelly Services operates more than 850 branch offices in the United States, Puerto Rico, Canada, England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, France and Australia.

Du Pont Promotions

Two employees of Du Pont's Kinston plant, both residents of Greenville, have been promoted.

Ronald P. Rouse was promoted to senior engineer in the fiberfill technical group. He holds a bachelor's degree in physics from East Carolina University and has been employed by the company since 1973.

Clarke R. Broaddus, an employee since 1968, was promoted to research associate in the fiberfill technical group. He holds a bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering from Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

Paperwork Program

The eastern North Carolina chapter of the American Production and Inventory Control Society will meet Tuesday at 6:15 p.m. at Three Steers Restaurant on Memorial Drive.

The program, titled "How to Simplify Paperwork Anywhere," will be presented by Mike Hunter, owner of Hunter Consultants in Arden.

Employees Promoted

Grady-White Boats Inc. has announced that Craig Murden has been promoted to assistant supervisor in the lamination area. A native of Graston, Va., he has been employed by the company since October 1988.

The company also has promoted Renee Jones to lead programmer in the data processing department. A native of Ayden, she has been employed by the firm since November 1983.

Company Featured

Carolina Microfilm and Mailing was recently featured in an article of "NCEast" magazine. The story explains how Jerry Creech founded his business and turned it into a successful venture.

The article appeared in the "Up and Coming Business People" column that highlights eastern North Carolina entrepreneurs.

The magazine is published quarterly by Williams & Simpson Inc.

Pepsi Firms, Seven-UP Ink Production Contracts

The Seven-Up Co. on Friday signed contracts with the Pepsi-Cola Bottling Companies of Kinston, Greenville and New Bern to produce 7UP brands in their franchise areas.

Combined, the companies will provide 7UP brands to approximately 500,000 people in 13 counties covering most of eastern North Carolina, according to the Seven-Up Co.

Seven-UP, based in Dallas, is a wholly owned subsidiary of Dr Pepper/Seven-Up Companies Inc.

The three Pepsi-Cola soft drink bottling corporations are owned by members of the Minges family. M.O. Minges started the business in 1923 with one plant in Greenville.

"Speaking on behalf of all three companies, we are excited and enthusiastic about having 7UP as our lemon-lime brand," John F. Minges, president of Pepsi-Cola Bottling of Greenville, said. He said, "We want to realize the full potential of the brand and will look to develop a good consumer base in this area."

The Seven-UP Company's executive vice president and chief operating officer, Dale Schaufel, said, "We are delighted to be associated with the Minges family who have had such a long and distinguished history in the soft drink business in North Carolina."

He said, "We feel the addition of 7UP to their operations will be the first step of a long and mutually beneficial association."

Kroger, Union Eye Talks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALEM, Va. — The Kroger Co. and striking Teamsters planned to return to the bargaining table at the request of a federal mediator, according to a Kroger spokeswoman who was unsure Friday afternoon when the talks would begin.

"I think there's probably going to be a meeting scheduled," Joann Boone said.

No one was available to comment for the union at Teamsters Local 171 headquarters, according to a woman who answered the telephone Friday afternoon.

A Kroger warehouse was struck Feb. 26 by 325 Teamsters who had turned down a contract offer because they did not believe wages were high enough. Kroger said 68 stores were affected in Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and North Carolina.

The stores were all open, and Ms. Boone said Kroger was keeping the shelves stocked by using management to haul meat and other drivers to bring in other foods.

"Our stores are stocked, and our deliveries are fairly normal," Ms. Boone said Friday.

Teamsters had asked grocery employees represented by the United Food and Commercial Workers Union to honor their picket lines, but the grocery workers were awaiting a decision from their international union and no pickets had been set up at any stores, union officials said.

Substitutes For CFCs

The Dupont Co. says it will announce Sunday at an international conference in London the development of alternative candidates for the ozone-depleting chlorofluorocarbons used to clean wiring assemblies and components for the electronics and telecommunicatons industries. United States Is Joining Effort For Quicker Reductions In CFCs

By H. Josef Hebert
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The United States is joining its European allies in pushing for elimination of all ozone-depleting chemicals by the end of the century, a sharp acceleration of the schedule for ending their use.

President Bush said Friday he has asked the head of the Environmental Protection Agency to join the call to ban chlorofluorocarbons, or CFCs, by the year 2000 at an international conference that begins this weekend in London.

"Recent studies indicate the 50 percent reduction (of CFCs as provided by a 1987 treaty) may not be enough," Bush said.

The United States accounts for about one-third of the production of ozone-damaging chemicals, primarily CFCs, which are widely used as coolants in refrigerators and air conditioners and as a cleaning agent for electronic and computer equipment.

Scientists ave raised concerns about the chemical because it floats into the stratosphere before it breaks down, interacting with the gaseous veil of ozone that shields against the sun's cancer-causing ultraviolet rays.

EPA Administrator William K. Reilly flew to London on Friday to take part in the conference to discuss ways to slow down ozone destruction. Representatives from more than 100 nations also will take part in the meetings being hosted by British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

In remarks to a group of high school science contest winners at the National Academy of Sciences, the president said the United States will support the call "for the elimination of CFCs by the year 2000 provided safe substitutes are available."

Reilly, according to administration sources, had strongly recommended at a White House meeting Thursday that the United States join its European allies and call for the complete elimination of CFCs, as opposed to cutting production by 50 percent as required by current treaty.

Many scientists have said that a 50 percent cutback would not be enough to protect against serious ozone depletion.

On Thursday, the 12 nations of the European Economic Community announced that they have agreed to a ban on the chemical in their countries by the end of the century.

Sen. Al Gore, D-Tenn., another members of the U.S. delegation to the London conference, said Friday that even quicker action is needed because "every year of delay implies an additional five to 10 years that these chemicals will remain in the atmosphere."

Gore has called for elimination of all CFCs by 1994.

Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., ranking minority member of the Environment and Public Works Committee, called the president's move "very encouraging" but also urged that CFCs be eliminated well before the year 2000.

The 1987 treaty has been ratified by nearly 40 nations, including the United States, Japan, most of Western Europe and Soviet Union. But it includes a provision that allows additional measures, including a complete ban, if further ozone damage is found.

The parties to the treaty are scheduled to consider an accelerated phase-out schedule at a meeting in Helsinki, Finland, in early May. The London meeting, which begins Sunday, is described as a dress rehearsal for the Helsinki session.

According to the World Resources Institute, the United States produces roughly one-third of the world's CFCs, with E.I. DuPont de Nemours & Co. the world's largest producer. There were 750 million pounds of CFCs produced in the United States last year and about the same amount in Western Europe, according to Dupont.

Dupont, which accounts for about half of the U.S. production, has announced plans to stop making the chemical, perhaps as early as the mid-1990s and will begin to offer substitutes next year.

Technology Deal With Japan OK'd

By Barton Reppert
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration has decided to proceed with a controversial deal under which a major U.S. defense contractor would work with Japan in developing and producing an advanced version of the F-16 fighter, congressional sources said Saturday.

They said that following an interagency review, the administration was expected to send formal notification of the technology transfer agreement to Congress on March 13.

There is opposition on Capitol Hill to the plans to transfer to Japan $7 billion in advanced American aircraft technology that would enable Japan to build a proposed FSX fighter to upgrad its air capabilities by the late 1990s.

Under the pending agreement, St. Louis-based General Dynamics would join forces with Japan's Mitsubishi Heavy Industries to co-develop and co-produce the next-generation fighter.

A congressional source, who spoke on condition that he not be identified, said, "There are going to be some changes in the agreement to control and monitor what type of technology flows."

The source said that chances appear to be slim that Congress would be able to block the deal by passing resolutions of disapproval.

"It's really long odds to stop it," he said. "It's possible, but it would be tough, very tough."

A group of 21 senators introduced last month a sense-of-the-Senate resolution declaring they have "strong reservations" about the FSX deal.

In the House, 24 congressmen have sent a letter to President Bush saying that they intend to fight the agreement when it goes to Capitol Hill.

The New York Times reported Saturday that Commerce Secretary Robert A. Mosbacher, who had led opposition to the FSX within the administration, has now been mollified by the compromise worked out in the review process.

Proponents of the FSX deal say it is the best that could be negotiated — in view of Japanese refusal to buy wholly American-built planes — and that it fosters beneficial technology transfer in both directions with Japan while generating income and jobs for U.S. industry.

Critics, however, contend that the agreement amounts to a technological giveaway that will enable the Japanese to compete more effectively against this country in the global aviation market. They argue that Tokyo should purchase American-made fighters to help offset the $50 billion U.S. trade deficit with Japan.

General Dynamics, this country's No. 2 defense contractor, has said that under the deal, it and other U.S. companies will receive 35 percent to 45 percent of the $1.2 billion being spent on development of the FSX as well as a comparable share of the $5 billion production program.

Heavy Losses

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Royal Insurance USA lost $66 million in 1988 as the property and casualty insurance industry appears headed for another cyclical slump.

"Royal's results were severly impacted by the special addition last year of $200 million in reserves for prior-year claims," said William Buckley, chairman and chief executive officer of the Charlotte-based company.

For all of 1988, Royal placed $260 million in reserves, which it believes will cover claims from customers who have suffered losses in previous years. The reserves are counted as losses although Royal could recover some of the money.

Problems at the Charlotte firm were a major reason why Royal Insurance Holdings plc reported a 7.2 percent decline in net income to $275.5 million in 1988. The London-based firm owns the U.S. company.

Figures Slumped

CHARLOTTE (AP) — BarclaysAmerican Corp. of Charlotte said it suffered a 1988 loss of $30.9 million because of exceptionally high losses at its consumer finance subsidiary and its Delaware bank.

That represented the first loss in ten years since Barclays Bank plc bought the huge financial company, then called American Credit Corp.

Barclays Bank said Thursday it would guarantee BarclaysAmerican Corp.'s $3.6 billion in outstanding debt, a move that led Standard & Poor's Corp. and Moody's Investors Service to upgrade ratings on the debt.

Also, Charlotte officials said the London bank has provided reassurances that BarclaysAmerican is not for sale.

Champion Expansion

DUNN (AP) — Construction of a 650,000-square-foot expansion at a Champion Products Inc. facility is expected to begin Monday, according to officials of the Dunn Area Chamber of Commerce. Groundbreaking ceremonies were held Thursday at the plant site near Dunn.

Harnett County industrial developer Tom Meece said the plant is about 130,000 square feet, and the expansion will create 300 jobs, bringing total employment to 500.

He said construction and installation of equipment should be completed by mid-winter 1990.

Recently, Champion was bought by Sara Lee Bakery Company, but Champion officials said the New York-based company will continue to operate its Dunn plant.

Chicken Prices

Fast food chains are continuing to roll out new chicken sandwiches and biscuits, responding to continued demand by consumers.

Fast food and poultry industry officials say the increased demand for chicken might push broiler prices up in the spupermarktes.

Fast food restaurants used 22 percent of the U.S. broiler production in 1987, up from 16 percent in 1981, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The fast food market share is expected to continue rising, industry observers say.

Thrift Goes Public

ROANOKE RAPIDS (AP) — First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Roanoke Rapids has completed a sale of stock, taking the thrift public.

The sale, which began in January, was completed Thursday. Most of the 140,000 shares were sold to residents of the Roanoke Rapids area at $10 a share.

"This conversion shows the faith that the people in ouur community have in our institution," said Barry Wilson, president of First Federal.

Sales Increased

SALISBURY (AP) — Food Lion, Inc. reported that sales in the four-week period ending Feb. 25 were 32.8 percent over sales in a similar period the previous year.

Sales in Food Lion's 574 stores in the four weeks ending Feb. 25 were $340,943,000, compared to sales in 482 stores in the four weeks ending Feb. 27, 1988 of $256,827,000, the company said Friday.

Southern Magazine Sale Reported

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A majority interest in Southern magazine is to be sold to a subsidiary of Time Inc. that publishes its bigger-circulation regional rival, Southern Living, Southern's publisher said.

The sale "is getting ready to happen," Alan Leveritt, publisher and co-owner of Arkansas Writer's Project, which owns part of the magazine, said Friday.

Terms of the sale to Southern Progress Corp. were not disclosed. The Arkansas Gazette quoted an anonymous source in Saturday's editions as saying the price was in the range of $9 million to $10 million.

Southern was launched 2½ years ago by Arkansas Writer's Project and Stephens Inc. of Little Rock, one of the largest investment banking firms outside of Wall Street. "They made a generous offer and Stephens decided to take it," Leveritt said of Southern Progress.

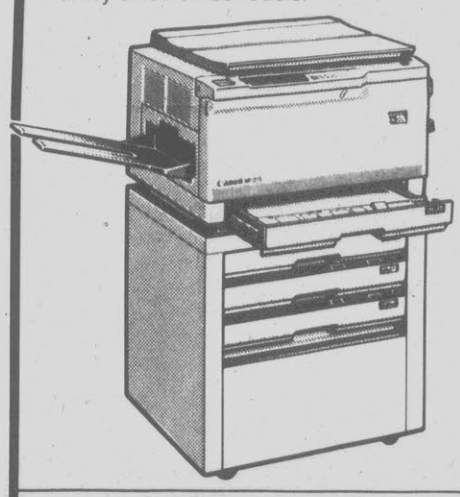

Representatives of Stephens and Southern Progress were not available for comment Friday.

A Demonstration

Dr. Ricky Clay demonstrates the method of removing red skin blemishes by working with a red balloon inside a white rubber glove. The new procedure, approved only recently by the Food and Drug Administration, was pioneered in Australia.

Surgery Erases Port Wine Stains

With Help Of Laser, Disfiguring Marks Are Removed

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

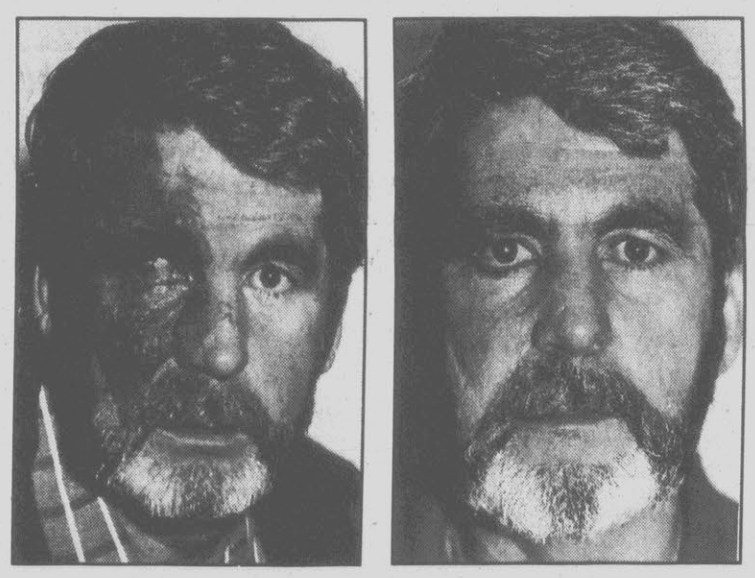

Dark red birthmarks, commonly known as port wine stains, show up on the skin, usually the face, of three out of every 1,000 babies born.

Until recently it's been accepted wisdom that, if someone was unfortunate enough to be born with one of these marks, there was nothing any parent or doctor, no matter how sympathetic, could do.

The marks are caused by overgrowth of enlarged blood vessels in the skin. Often, according to Greenville plastic surgeon Dr. Ricky Clay, they tend to be on the upper part of the face in the general area fed by a major nerve to the face which branches in three directions around the eye.

But what has been heretofore inevitable has become treatable in recent years, but until only the past several months has never been refined to the point that Clay felt was sufficient. A short time ago, he learned of a copper vapor laser machine for dermatological use developed in Australia and used there before it was approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for use in the United States. Clay is elated to have one of the first three copper vapor dermatological lasers in the United States — one of the other two is in Minneapolis, the other in New York, with a fourth expected in Arkansas soon.

Clay has known for some time of tunable dye dermatological lasers, but was not satisfied enough with their performance to think it wise to purchase one. He said he believes the tunable dye is adequate about not scarring, but does not produce the uniformly complete removal of birthmarks that he wants to achieve.

Port wine birthmarks, before and after treatment

Now he has his tool — a tool that can remove not only port wine stains to his satisfaction, but other red vascular structures like acne rosacea, spider veins and also brown vascular structures like freckles and age spots. All of these removals are done with speed and a minimum of pain or other discomfort for the patient.

Ask Clay if he's excited about his new tool and he'll probably take you into his Metalaser room and show you the machine that can emit pulsed light at a wavelength at 578 nanometers (millionths of a meter) making it appear yellow and pulsed light at a wavelength at 511 nm that makes it appear green. A plasma tube inside the machine contains copper pellets at each end and is filled with neon gas. Heat generated by gas discharge vaporizes the copper to create the light energy. This energy is delivered at very high repetition rates making it appear as a continuous beam to the naked eye.

Since he has had his machine, Clay has been popping red balloons inside a white rubber glove that has yet to be harmed. He does this with a wand-like tube of vivid yellow light just for fun and demonstration. He's also practicing on his staff members — targeting moles, freckles and spider veins and zapping them away.

He doesn't have many port wine stain patients lined up yet, because he must get the word out that his instrument is available before they'll come to him for treatment. People just don't consult a physician about something that's heretofore been accepted as being without remedy.

Clay is confident, though, that patients will appear when the word is out.

In removing a port wine or other red blemishes, he said, the yellow light is directed through the layer of skin above the blood vessel affecting it not at all, but coagulating the blood in the vessels underneath. Over the following week or so, the dried blood under the layers of skin above will disappear.

In removing an age spot, freckle or other non-malignant melanin (brown)- pigmented blemish, the wavelength that appears green is used. Shortly after treatment, a scab appears and when it falls off, usually not more than a week later, the spot is gone and there is no scarring.

The laser treats one round five-millimeter dot of skin at a time. Patients describe the skin sensation during the treatment as being "like a light pop of a rubber band."

Small sections are done at a given treatment time, usually not more than 15 minutes in length. Often retreatments have to be made. One doctor described a port wine stain as being like a layer cake. The doctor can destroy one layer of blood vessels and then another and another with each treatment. Treatment can even be done through hair without harming the hair.

Clay is associated with Dr. Howard Dawkins in East Carolina Plastic Surgery Associates at 2577 Stantonsburg Road. A Gadsden, Ala., native, he was previously a resident in plastic surgery at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn. He and his wife Emily and their five children, Rick Jr., Rachel, Adam, Angela and Andrew, moved to Greenville from Minnesota in July 1987.

'New' Geraldo Is Still Seeking Some Respect

By Dennis McDougal
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — It's 6:30 p.m. on Santa Monica Boulevard and some clown in a yellow Porsche has just cut off the most famous Puerto Rican Jew in America.

Geraldo Rivera curses mildly. He hits the brakes and swerves his rented Lincoln.

He admits that there was a time not long ago when he might have chased the Porsche down, jumped out and confronted the driver. But this evening, he avoids confrontation. Strange, considering his now-famous program that ended up with a neo-Nazi brawl and Rivera suffering a broken nose from a thrown chair.

After the close call with the Porsche, he turns to reassure his 10-year-old son in the back seat. "It's all right. It's OK," he calls over his right shoulder to Gabriel.

Meet the "new Geraldo."

According to his executive producer and longtime friend Marty Berman, the controversial talk-show host and self-declared crusading journalist, now 45, is a changed man: monogamous and moderate. "I've known him for 20 years," said Berman, the former producer of "Hour Magazine" and, before that, Rivera's producer during the '70s at ABC. "Geraldo's gotten older and wiser the way all of us have."

He's a faithful husband, for example. Ten days ago during an appearance on the "USA Today" television show, he publicly proclaimed that he no longer sleeps around indiscriminately.

He's a businessman — at least as interested in owning TV stations as appearing on their program lineup.

These days he is also preparing a new television show that he says returns him to "conventional" nighttime news.

And he is a concerned parent, focused on getting his boy into the Ivy League where Geraldo was never admitted, but equally interested in passing his own macho mantle on to Gabriel.

The "new" Geraldo Rivera is, indeed, a changed man.

Though he still portrays himself as a romantic rebel, the crusading storefront lawyer-turned-journalist of the '70s sounds suspiciously like a yuppified capitalist these days. With the announcement last month that he and four partners (including Cheech Marin of Cheech & Chong comedy fame) would be buying up TV stations, Rivera discovered the wonderful world of corporate power.

The way he described it, his flight into Los Angeles three weeks ago on broadcast magnate George Gillett's private Challenger jet was as intoxicating as Rivera's favorite before-dinner drink, Tanqueray and tonic. If Gillett was trying to woo Rivera and his partners in the newly formed Maravilla (English translation: Marvelous) Communications to buy one of his stations, he was doing a splendid job.

"I'll never forget, sitting in the back of George Gillett's private jet, flying into Burbank, talking deals to Cheech (in Malibu) on the phone," said Rivera. "It was just such a trip!"

Big bucks is nothing new to Rivera. When he was fired from ABC-TV's "20-20" 3½ years ago at the top of his game, he was reportedly pulling down about $800,000 a year. He had a pricey apartment on West 64th Street in Manhattan, a Malibu beach house, a yacht, Cadillac, Jaguar.

The only thing he didn't have to divvy up in his 1984 divorce from Sheri Rivera, his third wife, was the Jaguar. (He still keeps the classic 1954 beauty garaged here so that he can tool around the freeways on his three or four visits a year from his New York home.)

In the past, his investment interests have been show-business garden variety: stocks, bonds, his own production companies, insurance policies and, for the sake of speculation, a few gas, oil and shopping center partnerships.

But with the success of "Geraldo," which premiered in 1987, all of that has changed.

First, Rivera developed his Investigative News Group production company. In conjunction with Tribune Broadcasting, which underwrote his talk show and his hugely successful syndicated specials, ING will undertake a new weekly TV magazine later this year titled "The Investigators." Like his non-network talk show, "The Investigators" will not have to use union crews, a situation that substantially cuts production costs.

With a $200,000-per-week budget, "The Investigators," as Rivera envisions it, will be his own flashy version of a "20-20" program with Rivera at the anchor desk. Rivera says he decided to hold off launching the show until the current deluge of tabloid TV programs ("Inside Edition," "A Current Affair," "USA Today," etc.), "kill each other off."

Rivera sees "The Investigators" as his return — on his own terms — to mainstream nighttime TV. So he doesn't want to debut in an atmosphere of "Geraldo bashing" hysteria, he says.

The other aspect of the new, more fiscally conservative Geraldo Rivera is Maravilla.

Using an infrequently invoked minority-ownership regulation instituted by the Federal Communications Commission a decade ago, five men teamed last month to begin buying their own network of TV stations — Rivera; Marin; former New York Rep. Herman Badillo; Marcellino Miyares, owner of Times Square Studios where most of the "Geraldo" shows are taped; and Tony Bonilla Sr., chairman of the National Hispanic Leadership Conference.

According to Rivera, there are currently 44 on the market and Maravilla is bidding for all of them. He predicts flatly that the partnership will own its first station by April.

The key to their edge is an FCC ruling that gives huge capital gains tax breaks to station owners who sell their licenses to minorities.

"If everybody else goes in and offers $100 million, we can offer $95 million," he said. The deferral granted the seller on capital gains taxes is so sweet that it will put Maravilla in a terrific bargaining position, Rivera said.

Within a few years, Maravilla could be in the same league as some of the other multiple-station groups.

"I'm sitting there in George Gillett's jet, making calls to bankers and my business partners and business reps," Rivera recalled. "And I just stopped at one point and had the best belly laugh. All by myself, sitting in the back of that jet. If somebody had seen me, they would have thought I was a lunatic. A crazy man. I was just laughing out loud about how the worm has turned."

On another day, Rivera is in front of a studio audience at Universal Studios, discussing transsexuality for the next taping of "Geraldo." The episode will air in Los Angeles at 4 p.m., just as school is getting out. If Rivera sees any ambiguity between his protective paternal role off camera and his titillating showmanship on camera, he doesn't show it.

Rivera — even the new one — makes no apologies for shameless self-promotion. His afternoon talk show is a different brand of journalism from that which he practiced on prime time for ABC. It's a different kind of audience too: The unemployed, housewives, youngsters. They are "the people," Rivera says.

His people.

Yet Rivera's assertion that he "picks up where Oprah and Donahue leave off" consistently proves to be all too tastelessly true in the view of most TV critics.

"I'm a surrogate for my audience," he says. "A moderator. A ringmaster. I ask what they'd like to ask."

Radio blurbs invite listeners to tune in while Rivera talks with women who dress their husbands up in panties, teddys and lace. Rarely does a week go by without mud wrestlers, prostitutes, pimps, serial killers or some other sensational social misfit making an appearance on his TV show.

Dreams Influence Waking Hours

By Edward Stiles
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TUCSON, Ariz. — Studies of troubled Vietnam veterans and of people going through divorce show sleep researchers that one's dream life heavily influences one's waking hours — and vice versa.

During a recent Arizona Conference on Sleep and Cognition, researchers reported that dreams are not random, that they have meaning and serve vital mental health functions.

Dr. Milton Kramer, medical director of the American Institute for Sleep Disorders Inc., in Ohio, says dreams are a continuation of thought processes during waking hours.

Kramer identifies two types: A progressive, sequential type in which problems are stated, worked on and resolved, and a repetitive, traumatic type in which the problem is simply restated with no resolution.

The latter type is common in depressed people going through divorce, says Rosalind D. Cartwright, director of Chicago's Sleep Disorder Service and Research Center.

She says depression is quite common during divorce, though the sufferers often do not recognize it. She says that 47 percent of the men and 51 percent of the women she studied were depressed, according to psychological tests.

Often their dreams would be of childhood or adolescence, but rarely of adulthood. They seem to be reviewing how they got into the present situation, Cartwright says.

"They're more repetitive in their dreaming," she says. "They may state the problem and restate it across the night, and they seem to have no forward drive of working through it."

People who were not depressed, she says, had dreams covering a wider time frame, and some dreams speculated about new roles in their lives after divorce, she says.

It's important for those going through divorce to recognize the symptoms of depression and to get help if needed, Cartwright says. Symptoms include troubled sleep, not enough hours of sleep and frequent awakenings.

Weight loss and uncontrollable crying also are symptoms.

"Anyone going through a stressful life event may have a little of that," she says. "But if it persists for more than three weeks, those are signs of trouble and they should get help."

Kramer notes that effectively working through problems while dreaming can influence mood on awakening. His subjects showed both patterns of dreaming, progressive and repetitive.

"This shows there is not universal success in altering the emotional preoccupations of the previous day," he says. "This may account for some of the variability in how one feels on awakening from a night's sleep."

Generally, those with few emotional problems who feel upset at night may feel better in the morning because "dreams have worked their magic and done their job," Cartwright says. "But we know the depressed don't have that restorative function of their sleep. They feel worst, at their lowest point, first thing in the morning. And looking back at the depressed dreams, I see no progress."

Kramer has studied what is called "chronic delayed post-traumatic stress disorder" in Vietnam veterans. These vets seem fine for many years after returning home but then begin to have disturbing memories of Vietnam, nightmares and difficulty in concentrating, he says. They either begin withdrawing or have difficulty coping with their intense emotions, he says.

Similar disorders have been seen in veterans from other wars and in survivors of tragedies, he says.

Couple Are Wed Saturday Afternoon

MRS. CHANEY

KINSTON — Ursula Rosalinda Waite and Thomas Hogan Chaney were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Dr. Michael Cogdill, dean of religious education at Campbell University, conducted the ceremony in Spilman Baptist Church. Organist Mrs. Danny Rice and vocalist Karen McCall Dail presented music.

Ursula G. Waite of Fayetteville and the late Nelson Allen Waite are parents of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Epps Chaney of Kinston are parents of the bridegroom.

The bride wore a formal queen gown of ivory silk taffeta gown designed with a beaded lace wedding-band collar, sheer yoke and long sheer sleeves appliqued with re-embroidered alencon lace. The filled bodice and slim front skirt were embellished with alencon lace, pearls and iridescents. The full circular silk taffeta train featured open cameos of peau d'ange lace. Her two-tiered, fingertip veil of silk illusion was attached to a V-shaped lace and pearl band accented with a side profile of pearl sprays and lily of the valley. Poufs of silk illusion and scattered pearls were attached to the back of the headpiece. She carried a cascade of sonya roses and eggshell roses, orchids and baby's breath.

Sandra Jean Chaney of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor and the matron of honor was Kimberly Suzette Poncin of Fayetteville. Bridesmaids included Sally Jane Allen and Annette Embree, both of Fayetteville, Caroline Kilpatirck of Rocky Mount, Rachel Soles of Kure Beach and Julie Talton of Goldsboro. Marie Wilder of Garner, cousin of the bridegroom, was flower girl.

The best man was the bridegroom's father. Joshua Johnson of Garner, cousin of the bridegroom, was ring bearer. Ushers included Phillip Jernigan of German Town, Md., Roddy Ray Chaney, brother of the bridegroom, and Jamie Powers, both of Kinston, Tommy Bush of Charlotte, Ronald Stroud of Atlanta, and Parish Sasser of Greenville.

Each of the attendants wore a shrimp-colored taffeta sheath dress styled off-shoulder, with V-pleats and flower puckers with pearls on the sleeves and a back bow. Each carried sonya roses, eggshell roses and baby's breath.

A reception was held in King's Banquet Hall.

The bride is employed by Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Both are graduates of East Carolina University.

The couple will live in Greenville after a cruise to the Bahamas.

Mr. Gurkins And Miss Holder Wed In Double-Ring Ceremony

MRS. GURKINS

Sandra Leigh Holder and Michael Van Gurkins, both of Greenville, were united in marriage Saturday at 3 p.m. in the Black Jack Pentecostal Free Will Baptist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Annie Gryder Holder of Greenville and the late Gerald Elliot Holder. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Douglas McAurthur Gurkins of Greenville.

Given in marriage by her mother and escorted by her brother, Robert Holder, the bride wore a formal gown of white satin with a sweetheart neckline and fitted bodice accented with beaded sposabella lace. The leg o' mutton sleeves were also enhanced with beaded sposabella lace. The satin skirt and chapel length train, which attached to an antebellum waistline, was accented with sposabella lace cut-outs. Scalloped lace surrounded the skirt and train at the lower edge. A tiara of silk flowers and sprays of pearls extended into a two tier veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of white silk roses, lilies and baby's breath interspersed with garlands of silk ivy.

Sheila Russell of Greenville was maid of honor. She wore a tea-length gown of royal blue satin designed with a sweetheart neckline and V-back. The skirt and puffed sleeves featured an embroidered sheer overlay. She carried a silk colonial nosegay of pink opened roses, pink sweetheart rosebuds, royal blue asters, and white baby's breath with white lace ribbon and showers of royal blue satin ribbon.

Bridesmaids were Donna Spain, sister of the bride, Kristy Gurkins, sister of the bridegroom, both of Greenville, Angie Hamill of Raleigh, and Wanda Mayo of Washington. Allison Spain of Greenville, niece of the bride, was junior bridesmaid. They wore dresses and carried silk nosegays identical to those of the honor attendant. The junior bridesmaid was dressed similarly and carried an identical miniature bouquet.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers were Randy Batts, Jeff Riggs and Jeff Rouse, all of Greenville, Stevie Kite of Raleigh and Chris Stancill of Ayden.

Patricia Holder, sister of the bride, presided at the guest register and programs were distributed by Violet Pack. The wedding was directed by Betty Frances Hardee.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church fellowship hall. Assisting in serving were Louise Spain, Deborah Barrington, Geneva Holder, sister of the bride, and Dorothy Carraway.

Several parties and showers were given prior to the wedding.

The bride is a graduate of North Pitt High School and is a senior at East Carolina University. The bridegroom is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and is employed by Gurkins Farms Inc.

After a wedding trip to the Bahamas, the couple will reside near Greenville.

Winter's Cold Can Dry Skin

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Whether your idea of a "winter wonderland" is a day on the ski slope or an afternoon curled up on the sofa before a raging fire, midwinter's cold, dry weather can wreak havoc on your skin.

"Sufficient levels of water can be essential to healthy skin, plumping up the cells of the skin's outermost layer and minimizing the appearance of fine lines," says Dr. Pamela Brown of the Oil of Olay Skin Care Center. "But when the air is dry as it is throughout much of the winter, water evaporates from the surface of the skin more rapidly, reducing the normal level of moisture in the outermost layer."

The results are dryness, dullness, flaking and the exaggeration of superficial facial lines on the face, forehead and throat.

To help minimize the effects of harsh winter weather on your skin:

— Wash with a gentle cleansing lotion to help counteract winter dryness. Although soaps are effective cleansers, many leave an alkali residue that can magnify the drying effects. Consider a glycerine-based cleansing lotion that thoroughly removes dirt and makeup without stripping your skin of essential moisture.

— Moisturize both day and night to protect against the harsh elements outdoors as well as against dry air indoors created by the heating systems. Use your facial moisturizer on neck, hands and legs. It will work as effectively as one designed exclusively for the body.

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS

A GOOD WAY TO "GO UP A WALL" WITH ONE KIND OF FURNITURE

Wall units have the ability to change dull, wasted areas into useful and attractive areas.

First, the right kinds of wall units or cabinets can add beauty in themselves by filling an area nicely--and the books and accessories they hold also add good looks to any room.

So, right off the bat, you can make a room more appealing, both with wall units and with what they hold and display.

Then, too, wall units help solve the problem of storage and display space. Hardly anybody has enough storage and display space, and wall units supply a remedy.

Another advantage to regular wall units--as opposed to the built-in kind--is that you can take them with you when you move, or you can move them around when you want to re-decorate.

All in all, wall units can be one of your best furniture buys, but, of course, the important thing is to get the wall units or cabinets that are best for you, and we stand ready to help you with both selection and ideas. Stop in.

Computers Help In Fabric Design

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — It is possible that the madras shirt or silk dress hanging in a department store window was designed by a three-dimensional graphics processor, reports a computer industry journal.

Although 3-D computer workstations are usually used for molecular modeling, seismic analysis and other scientific projects, notes MIS week, several clothing manufacturers in the United States and Europe have adopted computer-aided workstations for their designers.

The workstations permit designers to scan fabrics, patterns and models and then integrate the three in myriad combinations to eliminate much of the guesswork inherent in clothing design, the publication explains.

Tips Help Hanging Quilts

BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

Quilts are masterpieces of color and pattern.

To display a quilt to its best advantage, Better Homes and Gardens magazine says, hang it up! But first read these special handling tips.

When deciding where to display a quilt, keep these guidelines in mind:

— Avoid placing a quilt opposite a window that admits strong sunlight. This will fade colors and weaken fibers.

— Steer clear of radiators, hot-air registers and damp environments.

— Don't hang delicate pieces. Fragile quilts are best displayed on a bed where they won't be handled excessively.

Try one of these hanging methods:

— Sew one side of a piece of hook-and-loop fastening tape to the top back of the quilt. Staple the coordinating strip of tape to the wall, or to a length of narrow wood attached to the wall.

— Stitch a muslin casing about four inches wide along the top back edge of the quilt. Slide a wooden lattice strip into the sleeve. Add screw eyes for hanging wire at each end of the wooden strip.

Hawkins-Stanley Couple Wed

AYDEN — Babbi Lois Stanley and David Brian Hawkins were united in marriage Saturday evening at 6:30.

The Rev. P. Gregory Kennedy conducted the double-ring ceremony in the Ayden Christian Church. Penny McCreary presented wedding music.

Parents of the couple are Lois H. Stanley of Greenville, and Mr. and Mrs. Donald W. Hawkins Sr. of Winston-Salem.

The bride, given in marriage by her mother and escorted by her brother, Parham Stanley, wore a formal gown of white satin featuring embroidered lace and pearls on a sweetheart neckline. Matching lace, beads, sequins and Austrian crystals accented the fitted bodice and princess waistline. The gown had short, off-shoulder double-puffed sleeves and the full circular skirt extended into a chapel train. She wore a matching bridal hat trimmed with white satin, silk flowers, pearls, hearts and a satin bow. The attached fingertip veil was trimmed with pearls. Her cascade bouquet of pink and white Asiatic lilies and pink sweetheart roses was centered with an orchid tied with lace and pink ribbon. It was designed by her mother.

Angelene H. Venters of Ayden was matron of honor for her niece while Mary Helen Allen of Greenville was maid of honor. Bridesmaids included Amanda Haddock and Dawn Haddock, cousins of the bride, Layne King and Lisa Hales, all of Greenville, and Allison Respess of Raleigh.

Each attendant wore a black floor-length taffeta gown with a sweetheart neckline accented with black and white ruffles. The off-shoulder puffed sleeves were accented with matching ruffles. Each carried a single pink sweetheart rose tied with pink ribbon.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Wayne Hawkins and Matt Hawkins of Winston-Salem, brothers of the bridegroom, Todd Venters of Ayden, cousin of the bride, Sammy Hancock of Kernersville, Jeff Speas of Rural Hall and Mark Willis of Orlando, Fla.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents at the Hilton Inn. An after-rehearsal party was given by friends of the couple.

The bride is a graduate of J.H. Rose HighSchool and is a senior at East Carolina University. The bridegroom graduated from ECU and is employed by Lenoir County schools.

The couple will live in Kinston after a wedding trip to the coast.

Miss Jones Is Wed To Mr. Robertson

The First Pentecostal Holiness Church was the setting for the wedding ceremony of Sarah Ruth Jones and Christopher Lee Robertson Saturday.

The Rev. Frank Gentry conducted the double-ring, candlelight ceremony at 7 p.m. Organist Betty leRoux and vocalists Shirley Proctor and the Rev. Wiley Clark presented wedding music. Trumpeters were Ken Kearney, John Howard and Toby Hendrix.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Mitchell Jones of Greenville, the bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. She wore a gown of tissue taffeta fashioned with a sabrina neckline accented with alencon lace appliques, sequins and pearls. Tapered sleeves had lace cut-outs. Lace appliques hemmed the full skirt. A side ruffle bustle was accented with fabric roses, lace appliques and pearls. She wore a crown of pearls, bugle beads, sequins and rhinestones attached to a double pouf with fluted silk veiling. She carried a cascade bouquet of white butterfly roses and stephanotis centered with white lilies interspersed with baby's breath and tied with white lace and satin ribbons.

The bridegroom is the son of Ervin Lee Robertson and Linda Evans Williams of Hartwell, Ga. The bridegroom's father was best man.

Martha Brown Rollins of Raleigh was maid of honor for her cousin and the maiden of honor was Christina Leigh Jones of Greenville, niece of the bride. Bridesmaids included Angie Hardee, Avis Hemby and Anna leRoux, all of Greenville, Sherry Lee of Raleigh, Joneida Glass of Cantonment, Fla., Mrs. Jeff Morris of Hartwell, Rhetta Thomas of Watkinsville, Ga., and Audra Williams of Orlando, Fla.

The junior usher was Lee Shannon Robertson of Hartwell, brother of the bridegroom. Ushers were Louis Mitchell Jones Jr. and Jerry Lane Jones, brothers of the bride, Louis Mitchell Jones III, nephew of the bride, and Christopher Conner, all of Greenville, Michael Ayers, Dale Brown and Scott Corneilson, all of Hartwell, and James Hammock of Franklin Springs, Ga.

The attendants wore floor-length gowns styled with royal blue velvet bodices and taffeta skirts. The bodices had jewel necklines and bishop sleeves extending to elbow-length. They carried candles with hurricane globes surrounded by pink pixie carnations, deep pink starburst lilies and baby's breath tied with white streamers.

Acolytes were Jerry Bradford Jones and Mavid Allen Jones. Wedding programs were distributed by John Britton Jones. Lynne Wiseman presided at the guest book. The wedding was directed by Hayes L. Austin.

Mrs. William Rollins, Mavis Brown, cousins of the bride, and Mrs. James Jones, aunt of the bride, assisted in serving at the reception. It was given by the bride's parents and was held in the church fellowship hall.

The bride attended J.H. Rose High School and Emmanuel College in Franklin Springs. She is a junior at East Carolina University. The bridegroom attended Hart County High School in Hartwell and served in the U.S. Marine Corp. He is a police officer with the city of Greenville.

The couple's parents entertained at a rehearsal dinner Friday evening. A bridal shower, tea and bridesmaids luncheon were held prior to the wedding.

American Express Is Wooing Students

NEW YORK (AP) — College students, once thought to be long on brains, short on cash, are being wooed by American Express with offers of a credit card, travel discounts and a quarterly magazine geared to their interests.

What's the attraction? According to CollegeTrack, a market research and consulting firm, there are 7 million full-time college students in the United States with an average annual personal income of $6,000.

That's $40 billion in total personal buying power.

College students also are frequent travelers. During the last year, 4.2 million students traveled by plane, and last summer alone more than 1 million traveled abroad.

"Students are now 20 percent of total new card members," says Ken Chenault, executive vice president and general manager of the company's personal card division.

Currently, he says 500,000 students are members, and with the new push he expects to increase the base by 25 percent or more.

Miss Strawn Exchanges Wedding Vows With Mr. Langley On Saturday Afternoon

The wedding ceremony of Anna Christine Strawn and Cecil Timothy Langley took place Saturday at 5 p.m.

The Rev. Caswell Shaw conducted the double-ring ceremony in St. James United Methodist Church. Frances Cain presented a program of organ music.

Parents of the bridal couple are Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Wayne Strawn of Greenville, and Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Jackson Langley of Grimesland.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. The maid of honor was Brenda Carol Strawn of Greenville, sister of the bride. Patricia Langley of Grimesland, sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Mark Langley of Grimesland, cousin of the bridegroom, and Johnny Wilson of Greenville.

MRS. LANGLEY

The maid of honor wore a floor-length gown of peach satin styled with a bateau neckline and puffed sleeves. The princess bodice was complemented by a drop waistline and extended into a full skirt. Roses were repeated at the neckline and drop waistline. She wore a peach satin rose comb with illusion and carried a nosegay of white roses with peach miniature carnations mixed with baby's breath and greenery tied with matching ribbon. The bridesmaid was dressed identically. She carried a round nosegay of peach and white miniature carnations mixed with baby's breath and greenery tied with matching ribbon.

The mother of the bride wore a rose matte georgette sheath dress and the mother of the bridegroom wore a royal blue crepe sheath dress. Both wore rose corsages tied with satin ribbon.

The wedding was directed by Pamela Brown of Elizabeth City, cousin of the bride, and Jean Pezzulla of Greensboro presided at the register.

The bride is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School and is employed by Cypress Glen Retirement Home. The bridegroom graduated from D.H. Conley High School and attended Pitt Community College and N.C. Justice Academy. He is employed by the Greenville Police Department.

The couple plan to live in Greenville after a wedding trip to the coast.

A reception was given by the bride's parents in the church fellowship hall. Assisting in serving were Freda Kovalchick, Margaret Register, Edith Payne and Helen Campbell, aunt of the bridegroom. A rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents. Several miscellaneous showers and a wedding brunch were given for the couple.

Erma Bombeck

Corporate Headquarters

How's this for a seduction scene? You slip into something satiny with a spaghetti strap that falls from the shoulder. As you approach the bed (with the perfumed sheets), your foot becomes entangled in a mound of paper being spewed out by a fax machine, causing you to bump into the filing cabinet and send the keyboard to the word processor crashing to the floor. If that doesn't take the fire out of your desire, it'll at least slow you down.

I didn't know bedrooms had "gone corporate" until I complained in a column about the exercise bicycle at the bottom of my bed. The mail that followed enlightened me.

According to one writer, her bedroom is so full of business machines, people ask, "Who's your decorator? Shearson Lehman Hutton?" Another one who complained of romance between the sheets (fax, that is) said she considered draping herself in all that paper and becoming a Turkish belly dancer.

One disenchanted wife said she and her husband don't have exercise equipment, but they are part of a new trend that brings a microwave oven and a small refrigerator to their bedroom for those late snacks of popcorn and pizza while they're watching television. Another woman offered to trade me my exercise bicycle for the large German shepherd dog draped over the foot of her bed every night like a "snoring quilt."

It has become apparent that the sexy mirrored bedroom that television depicts as the last stop before ecstasy isn't a parking lot for sex at all, but a gym ... an office ... a kitchen ... or a kennel.

Here's a challenge for you. Go to your bedroom and take a look. Is this a room that sets a tone for intimacy, passion and adventure? Or is it decorated in the following decor?

-- Early Cloth World: A dress form, sewing machine and swatches of material dominate the room. The shag rug on the floor contains some decorating surprises -- straight pins that go straight through a bare foot.

-- Neo-Laundry: My personal favorite is a bedroom where the bed is dramatically underplayed. It is buried under a mountain of clothes to be folded. Every night the clothes are taken off the bed and dumped on chairs. Every morning, the clothes are returned to the bed.

MRS. GREEN

Catholic Ceremony Unites Couple

The wedding of Jennifer Leigh Wooles of Greenville and Samuel Brodie Green Jr. of Louisburg was solemnized at 2 p.m. Saturday in St. Peter's Catholic Church.

The Rev. Joe Jones officiated during the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Dr. and Mrs. Wallace R. Wooles of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Brodie Green of Franklinton.

The bride's father gave her in marriage and the bridegroom's father was best man.

The bride wore a formal ivory satin gown with a V neckline adorned with seed pearls and appliques. Her Renaissance sleeves were accented with seed pearls. Her basque waistline dropped into a full A-line skirt adorned with butterfly cutouts and pearls. Her cathedral-length train was adorned with butterfly cutouts and lace appliques. She carried a triple Japhet orchid bouquet with stephanotis and spathophyllum greens.

The bride's sister, Leslie Murray of Franklinton, was her matron of honor. She wore a tea-length teal gown of moire taffeta with a shaped bodice, full skirt and elbow-length sleeves. She carried a bouquet of triple phalaenopsis orchids with ivy and eucalyptus.

Bridesmaids were Teresa Wooles, sister-in-law of the bride, and Lisa Laughinghouse, both of Greenville, Christia Dunn of Huntsville, Ala., and Margaret McGlohon of Raleigh. They wore gowns similar to that of the matron of honor and carried orchid bouquets with ivy and eucalyptus.

Junior bridesmaids were Ashley Worthington and Megan Duffus, both of Greenville. They wore tea-length gown of moire taffeta with shaped bodices; puffed sleeves and lace trim on underskirts and around necks and sleeves. Each carried a single orchid cluster with greens, baby's breath, and eggshell satin streamers.

Caroline Shaw of Greenville was the flower girl. She carried a basket of stephanotis and baby's breath.

Ushers were Bob Parker, cousin of the bridegroom, of Greenville, Gary Murray, brother-in-law of the bride, and Lloyd Bowers, both of Franklinton, and Larry Thompson of Youngsville.

Music was provided by Laura Gaither, organist, and Elana Thompson, vocal soloist.

A reception was given by the bride's parents at the Brook Valley Country Club. Diane Duffus and Joyce Allen served cake. Mark Wooles, Mike Wooles and Mr.and Mrs. George Allen greeted guests.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents at the Brook Valley Country Club; a wedding breakfast by Nancy Emory and Sandra Smith at the same place. A kitchen and bath shower and a pounding also were given for the couple.

The bride attended the University of North Carolina at Wilmington and graduated from East Carolina University. She is a teacher, formerly employed at St. Peter's School in Greenville.

The bridegroom is employed by the Mallinkrodt Corporation.

Two Are Wed Saturday

Martha Allyn Richardson became the bride of Edward Lee Whitaker Saturday at 1 p.m. in a double-ring ceremony.

The Rev. Hugh Burlington conducted the ceremony in Immanuel Baptist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Baxter A. Richardson of Washington, N.C., and Daphne L. Richardson of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Sybil W. Holt of Farmville and Thomas F. Whitaker of Greenville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white satin gown fashioned with a Victorian schiffli lace yoke and Elizabethan sleeves of satin and lace. The semi-cathedral train with peplum flowed from a waistline accented with cut-out medallions. She wore a floral wreath beaded headpiece attached to a two-tiered illusion veil accented with pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of lilies, freesia and stephanotis tied with satin ribbon.

A program of music was presented by organist Joe Goodwin.

The matron of honor was Beth Kennedy Edwards of Whiteville. Bridesmaids included Janet Whitaker of Ayden, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, Margaret Ellington of Raleigh and Amanda Vincent of Winterville, cousin of the bride.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Thomas F. Whitaker Jr. of Ayden and Donald E. Whitaker, brothers of the bridegroom, John B. Richardson, brother of the bride, both of Greenville, and Greg Damaron of Charlotte.

Each of the attendants wore a light blue moire taffeta tea-length gown with a bolero jacket.

The mother of the bride wore a tea-length green crepe silk dress and the mother of the bridegroom selected a light blue tiered tea-length dress.

The bride attended J.H. Rose High School and N.C. State University. She is a research tecnhician in biochemistry department at the East Carolina University School of Medicine. The bridegroom attended J.H. Rose and Pitt Community College.

They will be living in Bethel after a cruise to the Carribean.

The bridegroom's father gave a rehearsal dinner followed by a cocktail dance given by friends of the family. A bridesmaids luncheon was given by the mother of the bridegroom and a bridal shower was given for the couple prior to the wedding.

MRS. WHITAKER

Miss Daniel Married To Mr. Meeks

Hillary Sharon Daniel and Christopher Wehman Meeks were married Saturday at 3 p.m. in a double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Eugene Daniel, and Mr. and Mrs. John Harold Meeks, all of Greenville.

The Rev. Gregory Rogers conducted the double-ring ceremony in Oakmont Baptist Church. Organist Becky Tyndall and soloist Anna Anderson presented a program of wedding music.

Frances Wiedeman of Virginia Beach, Va., aunt of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids included Lea Williams, sister of the bridegroom, Leigh Caldwell, Grace Jendrasiak, Dottie Parker and Charlotte Proctor, all of Greenville. Karen Carmichael of Virginia Beach, cousin of the bride, was junior bridesmaid.

MRS. MEEKS

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Derick Daniel, brother of the bride, John Meeks Jr. and Stepehen Meeks, brothers of the bridegroom, and Tim Williams, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Mike Garris, Alan Mizelle, Robbie Moye and Mike Uhlman, all of Greenville. The junior groomsman was Chip Wiedeman of Virginia Beach, cousin of the bride.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a floor-length white satin gown styled with a cathedral train. The fitted, beaded bodice featured embroidered schiffli lace, seed pearls and sequins. The Victorian neckline and basque waist were accented with drop pearls and the Juliet poufs extended into fitted satin and lace sleeves with pearls and sequins. Floral windows of lace, pearls and sequins egded with schiffli lace and satin bow trimmed the skirt and train. She wore a floral tiara attached to a two-tiered, fingertip veil which extended into a pouf of illusion accented by pearls. She carried a nosegay of pink sweetheart roses and white miniature carnations accented with gypsophelia.

Bridesmaids wore hot pink satin dresses with tea-length, pleated skirts and pouf sleeves. The fitted bodices had scoop necklines which extended into V-backs accented with a satin bow. Each carried a nosegay of pink alstromeria, yellow daisies, purple statice, freesia and gypsophelia.

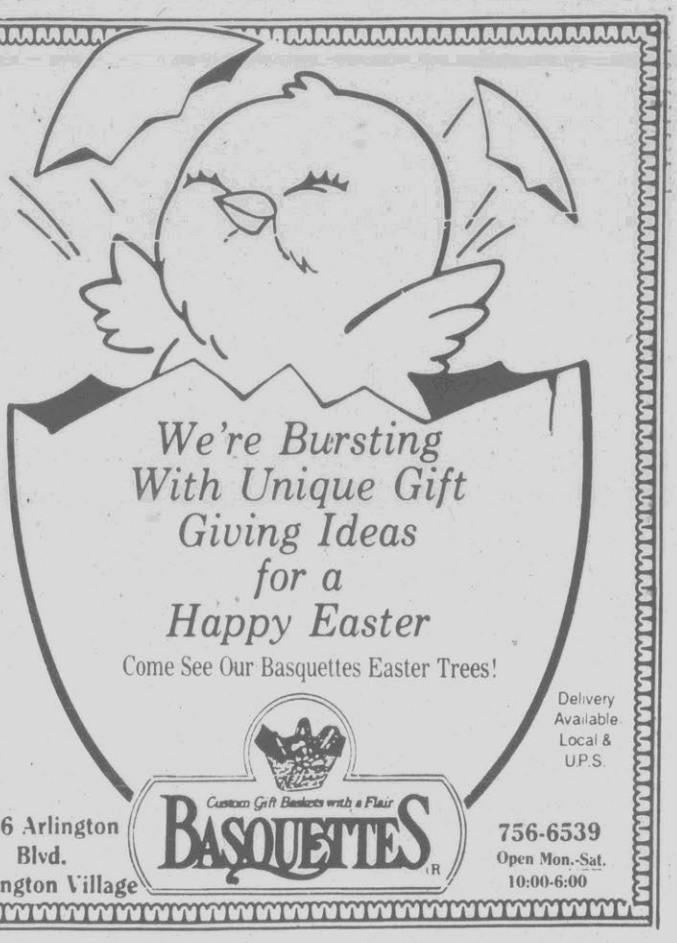

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Georgia.

The bride is attending East Carolina University and is employed by the offices of Sandra Thomas and the Center for Psychological Services. The bridegroom attended ECU and is in management training at Domino's Pizza.

The parents of the bridegroom gave a rehearsal dinner at the Beef Barn. Pre-nuptial parties honoring the couple included a bridemaids breakfast, chili supper, bachelor party, lingerie shower for the bride, several miscellaneous showers and a luncheon.

Couple Wed In Raleigh

RALEIGH — The wedding ceremony of Sarah Katherine Hickman and Christopher Duane Griffin, both of Greenville, took place Saturday at 3 p.m.

The Rev. Ray K. Hodge of Kinston performed the ceremony in Dinwiddie Chapel on Peace College campus.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Hickman Jr. of Kinston, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Duane Griffin of Hendersonville.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Susan Elizabeth Hickman of Kinston was maid of honor and Lauri A. Hickman of Raleigh was bridesmaid. Both are sisters of the bride.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Daniel Ryan Griffin of Hendersonville, brother of the bridegroom, was usher.

The bride wore a white voile gown which featured a wedding-band collar of lace accented with a lace yoke. It had a natural waistline accented with a back bow. The short puff sleeves were of lace and voile. The bride wore a voile bow headpiece with satin ribbon, bows and pearls attached to an illusion veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of daisies, pink roses, baby's breath accented with white and pink satin ribbons.

Each of the attendants wore a royal blue tea-length dress with a V-back accented with a bow and carried daisies and pink roses tied with satin ribbon.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom. Other parties included a cocktail party, miscellaneous shower and a champagne buffet.

MRS. GRIFFIN

The couple will travel to Jamaica for a wedding trip.

The bride is a graduate of Peace College and East Carolina University. She is assistant to the director at the Greenville Museum of Art. The bridegroom is attending ECU.

Wedding Invitation

Mr. and Mrs. William B. Cash request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Stephanie JoAn Cash, to Timothy James O'Shea on March 18 at 1 p.m. in the Trinity Free Will Baptist Church in Greenville.

Designer Gives Birth To Two Lines Of Clothing

By Donna Larcen
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

If you could design your own clothes, wouldn't you make them like fancy sweat pants? Comfortable, secure, easy to wear, no tight-fitting waists — and if you spilled a milkshake on them, you could pop them into the washer and they would be good as new.

Oh sure, you would make them in grown-up colors for the office — conservative stripes, solid black — with maybe just a dash of color on the waistband. But you would also want some zippier colors — shrimpy orange, green and periwinkle blue — for organized fun.

Oh, yeah. Price. You don't want to spend all your cash to look good, and you want the outfits to mix and match so a little can go a long way.

Well, you can have that. You can have all of that.

Two companies are making this kind of clothing, marketed under the names Multiples and Units. They are both based in or near Dallas and had their genesis with the same designer, Sandra Garratt, 37.

In both lines, the price is reasonable. The look is different but not weird. It's easy-care clothing. It travels well, it doesn't wrinkle and it works in all kinds of settings.

There are more similarities than differences between the two lines, having been created by the same woman. Both are packaged and displayed in plastic; both are manufactured in the United States, so there are no long delays or supply shortages because of faraway factories or import quotas; and both have a basic look that can be built upon.

Some other Multiples examples: $67 buys a wedge-sleeve top with wide stripes and a 36-inch-long full skirt, giving a bright, nautical look. Another $116 buys two 24-inch tubes, a 50-inch-long wedge-sleeve dress, a 50-inch-long square-sleeve wrap and 48-inch-long leggings — kind of an Obi-Wan Kenobi look from the desert scenes in "Star Wars."

Multiples has 26 basic designs, swapping and trading colors and styles each season, but staying with a basic look that works with its jumpsuits, crop tops, wrap jackets, miniskirts, full skirts and peg pants.

Units has about 50 ditterent pieces and prices comparable to Multiples.

Both companies use a 50-50 polyester-cotton blend to cut down on the bagging-out that sometimes occurs with 100 percent cotton and to keep durability up and the price down.

For $100, a shopper can get an entire outfit; for $200, virtually a new seasonal wardrobe from either Multiples or Units.

"Every stewardess knows about us," says Kathy Ravener, Multiples' regional account coordinator in the Northeast.

And one size really does fit all — or least bodies that fall anywhere from a size 6 to an 18. They are looser on the tiny frame and snugger on the larger frame. Draping and cinch-tightening above the waist, at the waist and below the waist with the all-purpose tube changes the look. Men can wear many of the pants and tops.

"I have a picture of me and my mother and my sister who was 8 months pregnant," Ravener says. "We all have the same outfit on, and we all look completely different."

It is that universality that makes Garratt's creations appealing.

She attended the California Fashion Institute of Design in Los Angeles after calcium deposits in her ankles cut short a dance career. She was graduated in 1975 and won the Bob Mackie Award (named for the designer who made Cher's navel famous) for outstanding achievement in design for her school project, an early version of Multiples.

She did serf work for several designers: Mary McFadden, Halston and Zoran in New York; Holly Harp and Dinallo in Beverly Hills, Calif.; and Ossie Clark and Alice Pollock for Quarum in London. But she also sold her own line of silk dresses to Henri Bendel and Bloomingdales.

In 1977, she and her husband moved to Dallas, where she gave birth to a son, Wesley. Divorced in 1980, she needed an income, so she resurrected her school project, a line of one-size-fits-all knits. Instant success? Not exactly.

She peddled the hand-sewn goods to boutiques and department stores around Dallas, slowly building a clientele. It caught on, but Garratt's business acumen was not as sharp as her design eye. In 1986, a group of American businessmen came up with cash for her small company, called Units, but the partnership lasted only four months. She sold her share of the company, paid off her debts and agreed not to compete with them for six months. The company, now called Stinu (Units spelled backward) was sold to J.C. Penney Co. in December 1987.

Garratt went on to start Multiples with backing from Jerry Frankel, president of Jerell Inc., a Dallas-based women's-wear company pitched toward moderately priced clothing.

Garratt maintains creative control of Multiples, while Units has a team of designers. Both companies are trying to get their lines past the casual connotation and into the office.

"You can very easily wear one outfit to the office, and by having something stashed in your drawer — another jacket or top — you can change the whole look of this," says Cynthia Sutton, spokeswoman for Units. "We used to joke about this around the office, but people actually do this."

What makes the look work is the service aspect. Whether Multiples or Units, once salesclerks show customers how to wear them, the rest is pretty simple arithmetic. Add a jacket; change a top; mix and match.

In fashion today, Ravener says, "There's nothing in the middle. It's either very classic or very avant-garde. This is in the middle. People understand this. It doesn't scare them."

Dear Abby: You Blew It; Not All Elderly Are Poor

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: You blew it! "Christine in Albuquerque" voiced the thoughts I've held for a long time. The discounts given to senior citizens by parks, theaters, public transportation and restaurants are largely unjustified.

I, too, was under the misconception that today's seniors are a poor and hungry lot until I researched the subject. Imagine my surprise to learn that there are more poor people in my own age group (24 to 35) than there are in the senior citizen group!

Get with it, Abby. — Christine In Cleveland

Dear Christine: Believe me, I'm with it now. Did I get mail? Flog me with a Forbes! My desk is piled high with articles from The Wall Street Journal, Barron's, Time, Fortune and Money, plus various "studies" including figures, facts, graphs and charts.

Read on for a peek at my mail:

Dear Abby: We've reached the point where senior citizens are getting a disproportionate amount of help from the government. Thanks to AARP, with a membership of 38 million, theirs is one of the most powerful lobbies in Washington.

The working poor are the ones who could use some help. They frequently have no medical insurance and struggle to make ends meet from paycheck to paycheck. — Columbia, Mo.

Dear Abby: You owe Christine an apology. According to Time magazine, Feb. 22, 1988, during the Reagan administration, payments to the elderly have risen 35 percent. Now, more than 25 percent of all government spending goes to the 12 percent of the population who are 65 years old and older. Meanwhile, Aid to Dependent Children was cut 19 percent, and school meal programs were cut by 41 percent during the same period. Also noted in this article, the percentage of the elderly living below the poverty level was reduced from 20 percent in 1970 to 12 percent in 1984. — Senior, Wilmington, Del.

Dear Abby: Don't cry for the elderly. Senior citizens' per capita income is now higher than the average American's, and their median income has doubled since 1960. They hold title to about 50 percent of all household net worth, and 40 percent of all financial assets. — J.W. in S.F.

Dear Readers: Enough already! So next time I see an elderly bag lady, instead of offering her a few bucks for a meal, I may hit her up for a loan.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Working Parent Endorses Credit Union Services and Benefits Make Her Life Easier

WINSTON-SALEM: Linda Bowen is the mother of a 12 year old daughter. She is representative of today's working mother and an active member of the Hanes Credit Union in Winston-Salem. In a recent interview she was asked to comment on the advantages of being a credit union member. Her comments vividly illustrate how credit unions are unique and able to do special things for their members.

"I am a single parent who doesn't always have $500 to $700 in my savings account" (to qualify for free checking at a regular bank). "My credit union earns me money rather than (costing me money by) charging me $12 to $15 a month for check cashing privileges. If I should miscalculate my (checking account) funds, the folks at the credit union will transfer money from savings automatically — saving me $30 in overdraft charges and a lot of personal embarrassment. I've never needed the service but it is a comfort to know it's there."

Credit unions provide members like Linda Bowen and other moderate income consumers with a unique financial alternative that would otherwise not be available to them.

Credit unions place strong emphasis on educating members to improve their economic condition. This unique interest in the members' financial well-being includes the importance of regular savings, a focus on how the credit union works, on the privileges and responsibilities of member/ownership, consumer education, how to get the best use of their money and how to get the best financial services available for their specific needs.

"As a credit union member, I can call to make cash transfers, get personal help on financial decisions and even get discounts on tickets to various special events for me and my daughter," Linda stated.

Service to its members is what distinguishes the credit union from other financial institutions — People helping people in a very personal way.

Linda Bowen stated it best when she said, "A single parent on a secretary's salary has it hard. But thanks to all the benefits and services of my credit union, it makes my life easier and I have more. I need the credit union, I hope they never change it."

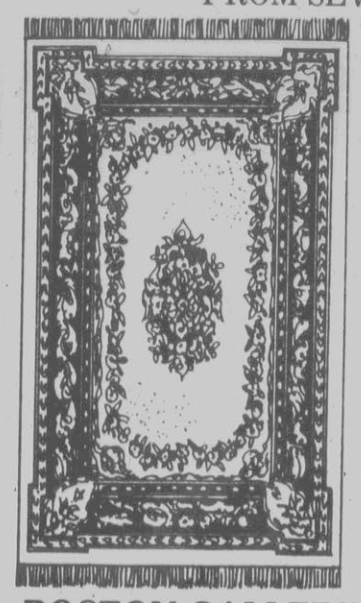

North Carolina boasts 267 credit unions with a growing membership exceeding 1.1 million and assets of 4.2 billion dollars.

Wild Donkeys Are Virgin Islands Pests

By Susana Hayward
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINNAMON BAY, U.S. Virgin Islands — Wild donkeys are driving the tranquil Caribbean island of St. John to distraction.

An estimated 300 donkeys roam the smallest of the three main U.S. Virgin Islands. They knock over garbage cans, chew up gardens, wake people in the night, intrude on campers, eat native tamarind trees and foul the streets with their droppings. Sometimes, the ornery 300-pound pests kick and bite.

They also reproduce rapidly. After their first pregnancies, females stay in heat and can give birth annually. It is estimated that the donkey population will double in five years.

"They reproduce faster than jackrabbits in Australia," says Eileen Sundra, a native of Northfield, N.J., who has lived on the island for eight years and bought an air gun to keep them away from her garden.

The burros, descendants of wild asses from northeast Africa, were brought to St. John in the mid-1600s during Spanish colonial days. They were ideal for the rugged terrain and were valued as work animals in sugar and cotton plantations.

But with the advent of cars and roads in the 1950s there was little need for donkeys, and they were gradually turned loose.

"Today, they have no real domain," says St. John administrator William Lomax. "They roam the whole island and they don't seem to fear human beings. We're concerned they'll injure someone."

In the Caribbean, the problem is unique to St. John. With the creation of the National Park in 1956, more than half of the 21 square miles of land was preserved — a donkey utopia. Other islands became more developed and most donkeys died out.

Officials of the National Park, which administers 60 percent of St. John, say the 7-mile-long island of 3,000 people is too small for residents, thousands of tourists and 300 donkeys.

Last November, under cover of night, park rangers shot to death 10 donkeys in Cinnamon Bay, an area favored by tourists for its sandy beach, coral reefs and tropical campgrounds.

They dumped the carcasses into the ocean and hoped the slaughter would go unnoticed.

"Within two days everyone knew the Park had been there blowing away donkeys," says David Nellis, a biologist who heads the Fish and Wildlife Department of Agriculture and Economic Development.

Gilbert Sprauve, a professor of foreign languages at the Virgin Islands University, denounced "the destruction of animals of servitude, animals which used to ease the pain.

"There were wild donkeys in St. John before the age of mechanization, and I don't recall they were a threat to anybody. I don't think they are much of a roblem now."

Ranger Richard Jones countered by saying that parks people would be responsible if a tourist was hurt petting or feeding an "aggressive" donkey.

Park superintendent Richard H. Maeder says "donkeys have destroyed thousands of dollars worth of food, clothing and equipment, and we have been subjected repeatedly to the challenge: 'Why isn't the National Park Service doing something?'"

St. John is looking for solutions. A committee was created to toss around ideas, and 5,000 questionnaires are to be mailed asking for suggestions.

Multimillionaire Laurance Rockefeller, who owns a chunk of St. John and helped establish the National Park, proposed shipping donkeys to impoverished Haiti, where they could be useful.

Other options include sterilization, euthanasia or adoption.

"But people don't want a wild, mangy donkey," says Jones. "They have no value, no use."

Role Sought

NEW YORK (AP) — Audrey Hepburn, who says she has rejected hundreds of scripts since making "They All Laughed" eight years ago, is looking for a new film role.

"It would be fun to do another part before I roll over," Ms. Hepburn, 59, says in next Sunday's issue of Parade magazine.

"People are inclined to send scripts to me for which the parts are too young," said Ms. Hepburn.

Stamp Notes

Collectors who have Scott albums and specialize in U.S. Trust Territories will be interested to learn of a new, 12-page 1988 supplement about to be issued. It costs $8.95 and is available at stamp shops or from Scott Publishing, P.O. Box 828, Sidney, OH 45365.

The supplement includes the Marshall Islands Marine Birds stamps, the Robert Louis Stevenson Pacific Voyage sheet, and Micronesia airposts from 1986 through 1988, as well as two additional Palau strips of five in the Seashells series and issues for the U.S. Constitution Bicentennial.

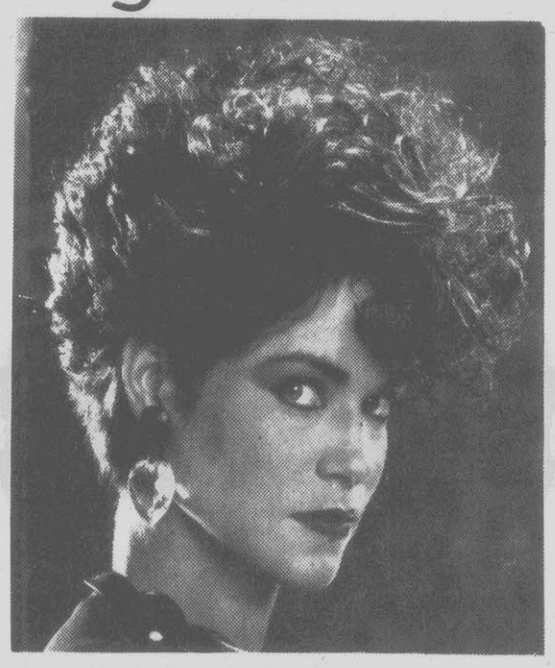

India salutes the start of Jawaharlal Nehru Centenary Commemoration Year with the issue of two stamps dedicated to the "father" of his country.

The 60-paise bears a portrait of a pensive Nehru, with the tricolors of India in the background. The 1-rupee features the portrait of Nehru that is in the Central Hall of India's Parliament.

Rebuilder Estimates 10 Percent Of U.S. Homes Are Underinsured

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — A Georgia widow sat crying on a tree stump in her backyard, surveying what was left of her charred home.

Even though she had homeowner's insurance, seven contractors refused to rebuild her house. The reason: It wasn't insured for enough money to rebuild it at current construction prices.

Inadequate insurance coverage is a serious problem for thousands of American homeowners, according to Nelson Bean. Bean's catastrophe reconstruction company, the Evans American Corp. of Houston, volunteered to rebuild the widow's house for less than cost.

Bean says the problem exists because most people do not understand co-insurance. He says policy owners should read the fine print — before catastrophes occur.

"With proper insurance representing just 3 percent of monthly housing expenses for home buyers, there is no reason why every homeowner should not be adequately protected," says Bean, who has supervised insurance-funded reconstruction of more than 5,000 homes.

The consequences of underinsurance can be tragic. Consider the case of an elderly Tennessee woman whose lifelong home was destroyed by fire. Although Bean wanted to help her, his company was unable to bridge the gap between her insurance coverage and the cost to rebuild.

Her home, which would cost $40,000 to rebuild, was insured for $20,000, but because of a co-insurance clause, she could collect only half. So instead of having a comfortable home in which to live out her life, she was left with a $10,000 insurance check.

These experiences left a lasting impression on Bean. His company now rebuilds commercial and industrial losses rather than single-family homes, but Bean continues to warn homeowners against the hazards of underinsurance.

Although the Insurance Information Institute estimates that 95 percent of homeowners carry household insurance, Bean conservatively estimates that about 10 percent of all homes are underinsured. His estimate is based on nearly a decade of experience in meeting homeowners sorry to learn that their insurance alone cannot replace their homes.

By ANDY LANG

Even if your home workshop boasts two or three power saws, there will be times during the year when you will be using a handsaw of some kind.

The most common of the handsaws is the crosscut, so-called because it is used for cutting across the grain of wood. That's how you'll be doing most of your cutting — across the grain. If you have to do a considerable amount of cutting with the grain, unlikely if you are the average do-it-yourselfer, you will need a ripsaw, the teeth of which are shaped a certain way to facilitate that type of cutting.

When you use a handsaw for the first time, it will appear to be an unconquerable tool. Once you get the hang of it, though, you will wonder why you ever thought it difficult to use. Follow certain fundamentals and you will get the hang of it quickly. Whenever possible, the wood should be clamped in place.

While most of the cutting with a crosscut is done on the down stroke, the saw also will cut on the upstroke. In fact, the first cut is made that way. Draw the saw towards you at an angle of about 45 degrees. Do it two or three times, placing your forefinger along the side of the handle for better control. Once the cut has been started, saw forwards and backwards with firm but not excessive pressure.

Do not cut exactly on the cutting line. Always cut on the waste side of the line. Learning to use a handsaw is like driving a car. At first, you remember each step as you take it. Once you have it down, you do everything automatically.

For average projects, a 7-point or 8-point saw is fine. Only when you have some precision work to do, where extra smooth cutting is essential, is it necessary to use a 10-point or 12-point saw. A saw is known by the number of teeth it has to the inch. Thus, a 7-pointer means it has 7 teeth to the inch. By the way, even though the greater number of teeth give smoother cuts, a 7-point saw also cuts smoothly for most purposes.

When you are making a cut and the saw blade tends to jam in the slot, place a wedge of some kind, even a nail, in the gap at the point where you started the cut. The binding will end.

If you are cutting plywood with a handsaw, certain slight variations in technique are necessary. That's because plywood is made from sheets that have the grain running in different directions. The first thing to remember is the starting stroke should be forward. Also, as you make the cut, keep the good side of the plywood face up. You do that with a handsaw or with a table saw, but if you use a portable circular saw, the good side of the plywood should be face down. Generally, a handsaw works best with plywood when it has fine teeth.

As you finish cutting the wood with a crosscut saw, support the waste piece. Too often, novices tend to twist the saw blade at the finish of the cut, which breaks off the piece but leaves it ragged. Instead, finish the cut with the saw, holding the waste piece with your free hand as you do so.

With a ripsaw, the pressure should be applied only on the forward stroke. Work very carefully, since it usually is more difficult to rip a piece of wood than crosscut it. To refresh your memory, in ripsawing you cut parallel to the grain, not across it.

As with all tools, a sharp handsaw is less dangerous than a dull one. It is the dull blade that sticks or jumps or kicks back. When a saw has been cutting well over a period of time and suddenly begins to balk a bit, the chances are it needs to be sharpened or reset. Most of the time, a saw needs sharpening four or five times before it has to be reset. If you want to try your hand at resharpening a saw, get a book or booklet that tells you how to do it. It requires the use of a small triangular file but it can be tricky without some instruction.

Museum's Storeroom

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An antiques fancier's dream would be a behind-the-scenes peek into a great museum's storeroom.

The bulk of what is regarded as one of the finest museum collections of American antiques, previously accessible only to scholars, is on public view as a "study collection."

There are 850 paintings, 100 sculptures, 600 pieces of furniture and 7,000 objects primarily of glass, silver or ceramic. They are set out in orderly rows in glass display cases that line a space of 17,000 square feet.

All have been cataloged in a computer, complete with background information, and printouts are available.

The setup, which opened this winter, is expected to cater to a varied clientele — collectors who want to study many examples side by side or to compare something they own with labeled examples, decorators and designers seeking inspiration, art history students and the curious.

While possibly the largest such display in the country, the collection and computer catalog are not unique.

James Yarnall, a consultant who supervised the computerization, says that in the last few years there has been a surge of interest among museums in placing collection data on computer.

Several other institutions have study collections in place, including the Strong Museum in Rochester, N.Y. (19th-century American decorative arts), the Toledo Art Museum in Ohio (art glass) and the Everson Museum of Art in Syracuse, N.Y. (ceramics).

The Metropolitan undertook the exhibit, says Doreen Bolger, manager of the study collection, because a more knowledgeable public is eager for more detailed information about American art. Also, curators are eager to display as many items as possible under their stewardship.

An advantage of study collections, sealed in glass cases, is that they are easier to protect and thus cost less to maintain, adds Bolger.

Yarnall predicts that the computer will continue to grow in significance as a tool to manage museum collections. Although he says it may be rudimentary in terms of a centralized data base for art in the future, the Metropolitan's new catalog "is important because we have never before been able to give even that much information on all of our objects."

A study collection may not communicate much about the way the pieces were used in a period, as environmental displays do. But the sheer mass allows the viewer to study a wide range of similar objects and perhaps to better understand geographical and chronological changes in design.

Here's The Answer

Q. — I have taken up the kind of woodworking that requires the use of an electric routing machine. I have a fairly small one and it doesn't appear to be able to handle the kind of deep grooves I intend to make. Would it be a good idea to use it until I get the knack of it and then buy a larger one?

A. — Yes, but before you do that, read the instructions very carefully. There are certain tricks to making deep cuts even with a small router. One of them involves making a number of shallow passes. Others involve the use of certain accessories. After you become skilled at making the deep cuts in one or more of those ways, you can think about purchasing a high-powered router that cuts much deeper.

Q. — I have a table which wobbles a bit because one of the legs seems to be shorter than the others. I'm thinking about adding some wood putty or plastic wood to the bottom of that leg, waiting until it hardens and then sanding it off even with the others. Will this work?

A — Yes, you can handle it that way, but there are leg levelers that will solve your problem. You simply turn the adjuster on the leveler until the table doesn't wobble any longer.

Q. — Many times over the years I have replaced faucet washers to stop leaks from the spout. Recently, the cold water faucet in our tub started to leak. When I took off the visible equipment to remove the stem so I could replace the washer, I found it recessed into the wall. Is there some special way the stem can be taken out and the washer replaced? I would hate to chip away at the wall to make room to get a wrench in that space.

A. — The solution is simple. Merely tell your problem to a hardware dealer and ask him to sell you an extended socket wrench. This will fit into the wall recess and enable you to remove the bonnet holding the stem in place. You then change the washer the same way as with an ordinary compression faucet.

Q. — I have some plumbing work to do and wonder whether I can use a hacksaw to cut the pipe, which is steel as far as I know.

A. — You can cut pipe with a hacksaw, but it is a tedious job and may not produce precision results. You are better off with a pipe cutter. If the pipe were copper, you would use a similar tool called a tube cutter.

Get The Jump On Spring

From Garden Ideas
A MEREDITH MAGAZINE

While snow still covers the ground, Garden Ideas and Outdoor Living magazine reports outdoor plants can supply fresh blossoms for enjoyment indoors.

By bringing branches of flowering trees and shrubs indoors and forcing them into early bloom, homeowners will be rewarded with the first colorful and fragrant signs of spring.

Trees and shrubs that respond beautifully to indoor forcing include forsythia, pussy willow, honeysuckle, crab apple, flowering quince, cherry and flowering plum.

While outdoors enjoying the first days of above-freezing weather, check the branches of flowering trees and shrubs. Swollen buds, stimulated by warm temperatures, indicate that the branches are ready to clip for forcing. Branches brought indoors while they're still dormant will respond poorly to the sudden exposure to heat.

For best results, use sharp pruning shears or loppers to avoid tearing the bark on the portion of the branch that is left on the shrub or tree.

Forcing branches into bloom is a snap if they are given the proper temperature and moisture. To help the branches absorb water more easily, make a 3- to 4-inch lengthwise slit from the base of each branch, then pound the ends with a hammer. Next, place the branches in a vase filled with warm water. All buds beneath the w[illegible]

HOME BUILDERS SUPPLY, CO.

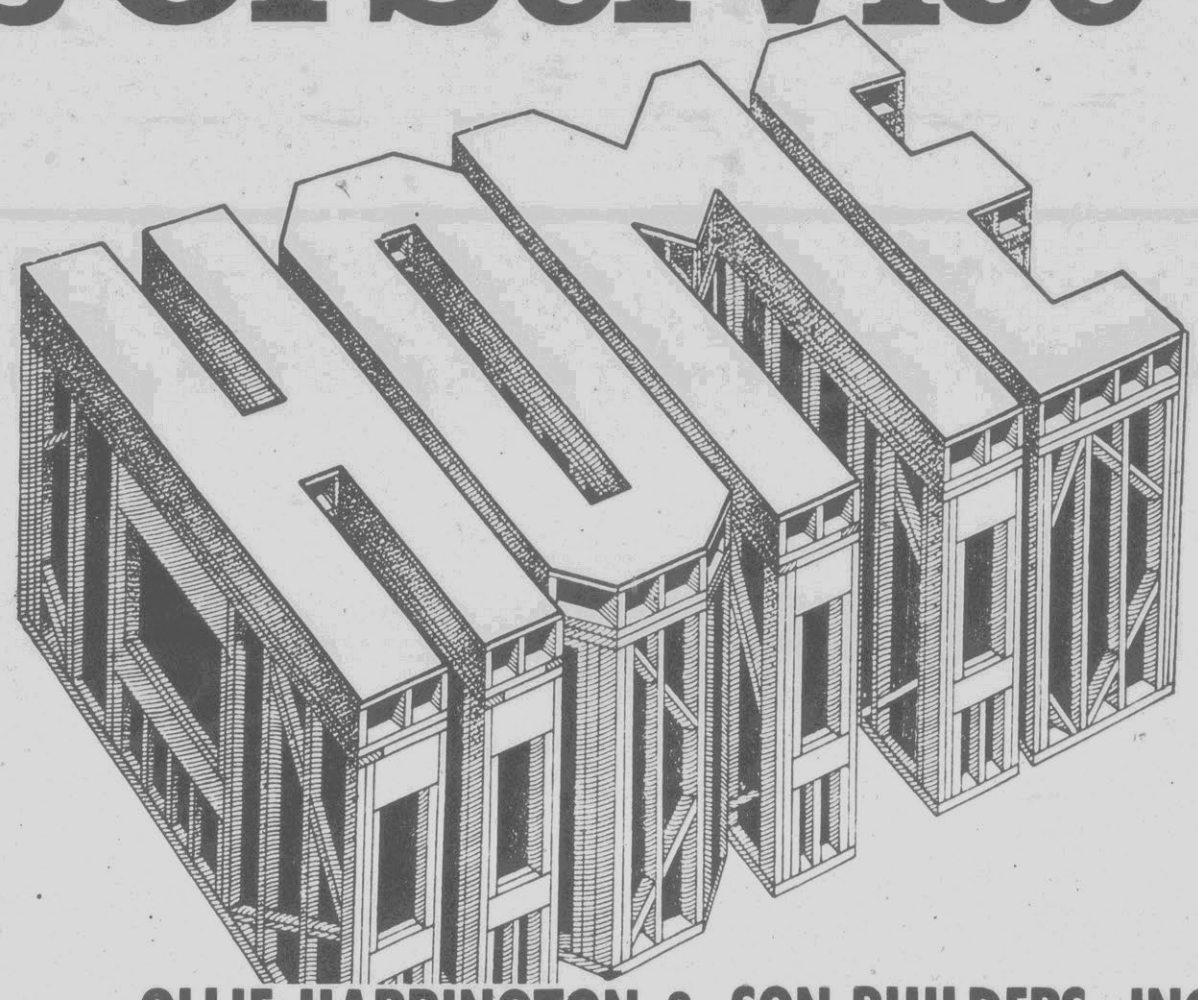

Making Plans At Home Builders For The Next 40 Years With Future Subdivision Plans Are: Bob Dail, Assistant Manager; J.B. Surles, General Manager; Bill Blount, President.

Since 1948 Home Builders Supply Company has supplied the Greenville-Pitt County community with its building supply needs. We pride ourselves in maintaining a complete inventory of quality materials to serve our customers' needs in a prompt efficient manner. Our growth from a ten employee operation is directly related to our providing complete customer satisfaction in both materials and service.

Ollie Harrington and Son Builders is Home Builders' oldest contractor customer. We are proud to have supplied the majority of the building materials on the many projects constructed by the Harrington firm.

Our congratulations and support is given to Ollie and Dennis in their endeavors and achievements in the Greenville-Pitt County Home Builders Association. Their combined time and efforts on behalf of the building industry in Greenville has aided in its continued growth and development.

Home Builders Supply Company continues our promise to our customers in providing the best quality materials, best service and competitive pricing. Our most important asset is our customers and we will continue to provide them with the quality they deserve.

OLLIE HARRINGTON & SON BUILDERS, INC.

Ollie Harrington & Son Builders, Inc. is a family owned and operated custom building firm specializing in custom residential homes, additions and historical renovations.

The firm's president, Ollie A. Harrington, has over forty years of experience in the building industry with the majority of his work done in Pitt County. His son, Dennis Harrington, joined the firm in 1977 and subsequently became a full partner. Dennis currently serves as construction co-ordinator and chief estimator for the firm.

The Harringtons are very active in the Greenville-Pitt County Home Builders Association with Ollie Harrington being a charter member of the organization which started in 1972, serving on the Board of Directors, selected as Builder Of The Year in 1976, and serving as president in 1977. Dennis, also active in the association, has served in all offices including president in 1983, is currently 1st Vice-president and slated to become the first two-term president of the Greenville-Pitt County Home Builders Association in 1990. He was also recognized as Builder Of The Year in 1984 and 1988.

Ollie Harrington & Son Builders, Inc. believes that attention to detail, quality materials, craftsmanship and customer satisfaction are the keys to their success as professional builders.

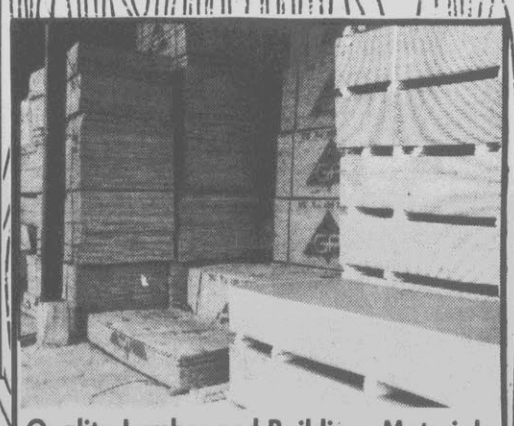

Also contributing to their success is the selection of a material supplier that feels the same about quality and customer satisfaction as Ollie Harrington & Son Builders, Inc. According to Ollie Harrington, Home Builders Supply Company's dedication to quality and customer service is the primary reason they were selected as our material supplier.

Chinqua-Penn Plantation Open For The 1989 Season

REIDSVILLE — Chinqua-Penn Plantation near Reidsville opened this week for the 1989 season, with spring flowers due to come into blossom soon. The earliest due to flower are more than 10,000 tulips and pansies, with other flowers to come into bloom all along until the spring blossoms peak about mid-April.

A new touch to the gardens is a pergola, made of cedar posts and wrought iron which was constructed in the herb garden.

A new museum at the plantation features a variety of items, including seed mixtures for hummingbird gardens, butterfly gardens and cut flower gardens, in addition to a line of souvenir items.

Chinqua-Penn Plantation was the home of the late Jeff and Betsy Penn of Reidsville and was presented to the University of North Carolina system in 1959. The Penns had built the 27-room mansion in 1925 and furnished it with a collection of art and furniture from visits to Europe and the Orient.

The mansion and its 32 landscaped acres are open to the public Wednesdays through Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and on Sundays from 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Amission is $5 for adults, $4 for senior citizens, $2 children six to 14, and free for younger children. Special rates for children and groups of 10 or more are available.

For more details, call 349-4576 or write: Chinqua-Penn Plantation, Route 3, Box 682, Reidsville, N.C., 27320.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING TO AMEND
THE SUBDIVISION ORDINANCE OF THE CITY
OF GREENVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA
SECTION 9-5-18

Pursuant to Article 19, Chapter 160A of the General Statutes of North Carolina, notice is hereby given that the City Council of the City of Greenville, NC, will conduct a public hearing in the City Council Chambers of the Municipal Building in the City of Greenville, NC, on Thursday, March 9, 1989 at 7:30 p.m. on the question of the adoption of an ordinance amending the Zoning Ordinance as follows:

Section 1: Title 9, Chapter 5 of the Code of the City of Greenville is amended by adding a new Section 9-5-18 as follows:

Section 9-5-18. Transition Regulations for Developing Property Brought into Extraterritorial Jurisdiction.

(a) Final subdivision plats.
An approved and recorded final subdivision plat shall constitute "evidence of compliance" under the terms of G.S. 160A-360(i) for the purpose of subdividing property and constructing improvements required to obtain final plat approval under County standards, and shall confer the right to complete the subdivision under the County regulations governing the approved final plat. Provided, all future construction and/or use of lots in the subdivision shall be in compliance with the zoning regulations of the City of Greenville as contained in Chapter 32 of the Greenville City Code.

(b) Preliminary subdivision plats.
A preliminary subdivision plat shall not constitute "evidence of compliance" under the terms of G.S. 160A-360(i) for the purpose of obtaining approval for a final plat under Chapter 5 of Title 10 of the Greenville City Code. However, an opportunity to complete a subdivision as proposed on a preliminary plat will be available under the following conditions:

(1) A final subdivision plat meeting the rules for submission has been submitted to the County for final consideration on or before the date the property becomes subject to the regulations of Chapter 5, of Title 9 of the Greenville City Code; or

(2) In the absence of a pending final plat in accordance with subsection (b) (1) above, the owner/developer must present to the City adequate evidence of substantial investment in reliance on the preliminary plat, or those portions of a preliminary plat which have not been approved as phases under final plats. The City Planner shall determine whether substantial investment has been made, taking into consideration the percentage of the preliminary plat which has been constructed under approved final plats or is subject to a pending or approved final plat, the extent to which a unified design for the entire subdivision is evident in the preliminary plat and any pending or approved final plats for phrases of the preliminary, the installation of subdivision improvements (including water, sewer or waste disposal, drainage, lighting, common areas, streets or roads), or the construction or work toward construction of any improvements or amenities in the area subject to the preliminary plat. If the City Planner determines that there is a substantial investment in the preliminary plat or that portion of the preliminary plat which is not covered by pending or approved final plats, the City Planner shall issue a written notice to the owner/developer confirming an opportunity to complete the subdivision as proposed on the preliminary plat. The opportunity to complete the subdivision or portions thereof in accordance with the preliminary plat shall be afforded notwithstanding non-compliance with the requirements of Chapter 5 of Title 9 of the Greenville City Code. An appeal from the decision of the City Planner may be taken to the Planning and Zoning Commission.

(3) A preliminary plat approved for completion under subsection (b) (2) shall be valid for the period set forth by the approving jurisdiction or five years, whichever is less.

(4) Any change to a preliminary plat approved for completion under subsection (b) (2) above shall be in compliance with the requirements of Chapter 5, Title 9 of the Greenville City Code. Minor deviations may be approved by the City Planner where the approval of the deviation is in keeping with the general policy of this subsection (b).

(5) Nothing in this Section shall be construed to exempt or exclude applicable zoning ordinance restrictions or requirements currently in effect, including, but not limited to, lot width, lot area, or street frontage.

(6) In the interpretation of the conditions stated above, the City Planner shall be guided by the general policy underlying these transition regulations for developing property brought into the extraterritorial jurisdiction. The general policy is to allow the completion under County regulations of those subdivisions which have been started under County regulations. The greater the investment in construction under previous regulations, and the greater the percentage of units constructed in accordance with the original design of the subdivision, the stronger the policy justification for allowing completion under the original design and preliminary plat.

During this public hearing, objections or suggestions will be duly considered by City Council. All interested persons are requested to be present at the hearing, and they will be afforded an opportunity to be heard.

A copy of the proposed ordinance is on file at the City Clerk's office located at 201 W. 5th Street, and is available for public inspection during normal working hours Monday through Friday.

BY ORDER OF THE CITY COUNCIL.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING TO AMEND
THE SUBDIVISION ORDINANCE OF THE CITY
OF GREENVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA
SECTION 9-5-145

Pursuant to Article 19, Chapter 160A of the General Statutes of North Carolina, notice is hereby given that the City Council of the City of Greenville, NC, will conduct a public hearing in the City Council Chambers of the Municipal Building in the City of Greenville, NC, on Thursday, March 9, 1989 at 7:30 p.m. on the question of the adoption of an ordinance amending the Subdivision Ordinance as follows:

Section 1. Section 9-5-145 is amended by the deleting the present text and substituting in lieu thereof the following:

Section 9-5-145. Amount and Terms of Performance Guarantee; Time Limitations.

A. Following receipt of the required estimate, the City Engineer shall prepare recommendations as to the terms of the performance guarantee, including time of initiation and completion of the work, as a whole or in stages, and provisions for release of portions of the guarantee upon completion of portions or stages of the work. The life of a performance guarantee shall not be less than six (6) months or greater than two (2) years, unless otherwise provided. The time between initiation and completion of development shall not exceed four (4) years, except as provided under subsection (c).

B. Based on such estimate, with such changes as deemed necessary, the City Engineer shall set the amount and terms of the performance guarantee, subject to necessary legal review of form as provided in Section 9-5-143.

C. When in the opinion of the City Engineer the required improvements or portions thereof cannot be completed within the specified time frame due to a physical condition and/or lack of an approved final plat on an adjoining property, the performance guarantee or portion thereof for such improvements may be extended beyond the maximum time stated in subsection A. Following approval of a final plat on an adjoining property, the required improvements or portion thereof shall be installed within the life of the current performance guarantee or twelve (12) months, whichever is greater.

D. The City Engineer may accept a substitute performance guarantee from any party to cover the cost of all or a portion of the remaining improvements shown on an approved final plat. When a substitute performance guarantee is offered the City Engineer shall give 10 days notice to the party posting the original surety that the City Engineer intends to issue a "Notice to Proceed" for construction of the guaranteed improvements to the party offering the substitute surety. The "Notice to Proceed" will be issued to the party offering and posting the substitute surety unless the party posting the original surety makes a written request that the "Notice to Proceed" be issued to him, and has in place or offers a surety meeting the requirements of a substitute surety.

E. When a substitute performance guarantee is accepted the following rules shall apply:
   (1) The work covered by a substitute performance guarantee shall be completed within 12 months.
   (2) The original performance guarantee may be released, reduced or returned to the party posting the original performance guarantee.
   (3) The work performed under a "Notice to Proceed" shall conform to the original plans in accordance with the approved final plat.
   (4) No extensions or substitutions of a substitute performance guarantee will be allowed.

Section 2. Section 9-5-11 of the Code of the City of Greenville is amended by rewriting subsection A as follows:

A. The approval of a plat by the Planning and Zoning Commission or the Subdivision Review Board shall not be deemed to constitute or effect an acceptance by the City or the public of the dedication of any public street, facility or ground shown upon the plat. Acceptance of such dedications shall be made only by resolution of the City Council, following approval of the final plat by the Subdivision Review Board.

B. Dedication of any street right-of-way shall be deemed to constitute and include a general utility easement.

C. Acceptance of physical improvements will be made by the City Engineer and the General Manager of Greenville Utilities Commission once the required improvements have been installed and are found to be in accordance with approved plans and City and Greenville Utilities Commission standards.

Section 3. This ordinance shall be effective upon adoption for final plats approved after the date of adoption of this ordinance. For final plats approved prior to the adoption of this ordinance, these regulations shall become effective upon the expiration of the current performance guarantee, where such exists, or upon acceptance of the dedications by the City Council for those final plats which do not have a performance guarantee posted.

During this public hearing, objections or suggestions will be duly considered by City Council. All interested persons are requested to be present at the hearing, and they will be afforded an opportunity to be heard.

A copy of the proposed ordinance is on file at the City Clerk's office located at 201 W. 5th Street, and is available for public inspection during normal working hours Monday through Friday.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY March 5

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Gains are shared with others. Temptations and pleasures may upset your steady course. Cool down your enthusiasm.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): There is more under the surface than has been revealed. Disruptive attitudes prevail. There are winners in a disagreement.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Moods may fly up and down today. Find a way to cope with small problems that are blown out of proportion. Problems can be solved.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Concentrate on family affairs that bring you pleasure. A jealous friend is not as strong a foe as you originally imagined.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): The constant worry of a relationship breaking up can be a self-fulfilling prophecy. Stick to immediate concerns today and stay confident.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Focus on your own pleasure, but include some warm companionship in the picture. Children bring out the best in you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): The wheels of time are spinning but go nowhere. Following the dictates of your feelings may place you where you do not want to be.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): An irresistible, but reckless, friend may have you doubting the wisdom of your pursuit. Find a substitute that will fit your lifestyle.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): The transitional period will mature. You get what you want if you leave hands off and allow fate to work for you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): A recent, romantic contact seems too good to be true. Don't let dust collect on your social calendar. Tap into a new social set.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Someone may refuse to believe you. Change could come swiftly. Solutions are difficult, but will work to your advantage in the end.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): A disturbing development can cloud the midday but will solve itself. Give others a chance to change their minds.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY March 6

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): A comfortable attitude prevails during important business meetings. The week will move smoothly. Open up your feelings to another.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Your organized and warmhearted ways will win over others who can help you. A key factor in improving finances is self-restraint.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): A conclusion will not be in your favor. Sticky feelings arise when you don't get your own way. Good will produces more good will.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You are one step ahead of others around you. Communicate objectively with your feelings in neutral. Reorganize priorities.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): You are close to establishing the right mix between business and pleasure. Study past procedures and take the successful methods.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Your nerves are in danger of busting out. Remain calm today and act in your own best interest. Your talents will bring rewards for the future.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Excessive playtime can lead to waste and affect your efficiency. Your loyalty to a project is admirable. Communication skills work.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Diplomacy will get you through the day. An admirer stirs up support on your behalf. Be prepared for aroused sensual feelings.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You are building success patterns through good connections. Colorful people contribute to your social experience.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): You can relax if you let yourself. Enjoy shared values with others on your level. Your determined energy completes some boring tasks.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Your intuition power gains momentum. Gossip at the workplace should be ignored. You have new information on a legal matter.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Self-improvement, formal education and development of avocations would fit the day's agenda. Concentrate on home environment and siblings.

Beware of hands that seem to be laydown. Think of the goalie in an ice hockey game who turns away seemingly unstoppable shots, only to have the puck trickle slowly between his pads and have the game slip away.

We like North's decision to raise to three spades. When partner opens with a demand bid, three trumps to an honor and 1 1/2 quick tricks are more than ample for a raise. That led to an excellent small slam reached with a minimum of fuss.

Declarer won the diamond in hand and, bearing in mind the desirability of leading up to honors by first playing toward the short trump hand, led a spade to the jack. When East showed out, declarer had no way to avoid losing two trump tricks to West—down one.

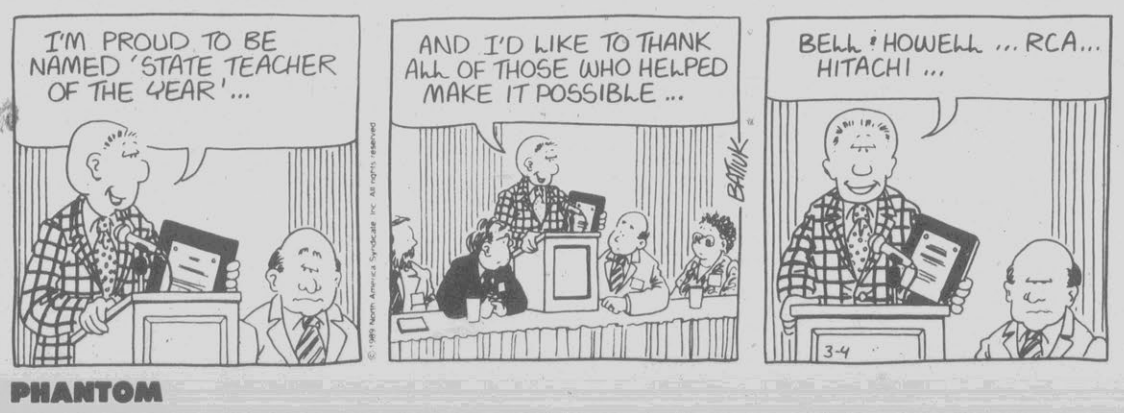

Declarer was guilty of fast fingers—he should have taken time to study the hand before playing to the second trick. If trumps are 3-1, the hand is a virtual claimer; only wild distribution could defeat the slam. Realistically, declarer should have concentrated on a 4-0 break as the most likely threat to his contract.

The spade spots are such that South can handle even that distribution. To the second trick he should lead the king of trumps from hand. If West shows out, declarer can take the marked finesse against East's ten. (If East holds up, declarer continues with a trump to the jack, and can enter dummy with the ace of clubs to take the trump finesse.) If West turns up with all the trumps, declarer continues by finessing the eight, and again the defenders are held to one trump trick.

NOTICE TO BIDDERS
Sealed proposals, in duplicate, from separate prime contractors, will be received by The Pitt Greenville Airport Authority, Airport Administration Offices, Greenville, North Carolina, on March 15, 1989, until 3:00 P.M. local time, at which time and place all proposals received will be publicly opened and read aloud.
Bidders are invited to submit proposals for Terminal Building Expansion, FAA AIP No. 3-37-0028-07 at the The Pitt Greenville Airport, Greenville, North Carolina on the proposal forms provided. Other proposal forms will not be accepted.
The complete examination and understanding of the existing facility, site, construction plans, specifications and contract documents of the proposed work is necessary to properly submit a proposal. Construction plans, specifications and contract documents are available for examination and may be obtained from the office of The LPA GROUP INCORPORATED, 2530 Devine Street, Columbia, SC 29250, (803) 254-2211. Attention: Architectural Division, for a cost of Seventy-five Dollars ($75.00) per set which will be refunded to bona fide bidders if returned in satisfactory unmarked condition by April 15, 1989. Plans and specifications are on file in the AGC Room in Raleigh and Fayetteville, North Carolina; ASAC Plan Room in Kinston, North Carolina; and Dodge Room in Greenville, Charlotte, and Raleigh, North Carolina.
A prebid conference for bidders will be conducted at:
Location: The Pitt Greenville Airport
Date: March 8, 1989
Time: 11:00 AM (local time)
A proposal bond in the form set out in the contract documents or certified check in the amount of not less than five percent (5%) of the total bid amount must accompany each bid.
Successful bidder will be required to execute and to provide a Payment Bond and Performance Bond each in an amount of not less than one hundred per cent (100%) of the total value of the contract awarded to him with a satisfactory surety or sureties for the full and faithful performance of the work.
This project is a Federal Aid Project under the provisions of Airways and Airport Improvement Act of 1982 and as amended by the Airport & Airways Safety and Capacity Act of 1987. Certain mandatory federal requirements are included in the proposal documents. The bidder's attention is also invited to the General Conditions Federal Requirements regarding labor provisions, minimum wage rates, EEO and Disadvantaged Business Requirements as outlined in the contract documents.
The Pitt Greenville Airport Authority, in accordance with Title IV of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 78 Stat. 252, 42 USC 2000d to 2000d-4 and Title 49, Code of Federal Regulations, Department of Transportation, Subtitle A, Office of the Secretary, Part 21, Nondiscrimination in Federally assisted programs of the Department of Transportation issued pursuant to such Act, hereby notifies all bidders that it will affirmatively ensure that, in any contract entered into pursuant to this advertisement, disadvantaged business enterprises will be afforded full opportunity to submit bids in response to this invitation and will not be discriminated against on the grounds of race, color, national origin or sex in consideration for an award.
The bidder shall certify, by submission of this proposal, that neither it nor its principals is presently debarred, suspended, proposed for debarment, declared ineligible, or voluntarily excluded from participation of this transaction by any Federal department or agency.
No bid may be withdrawn after closing time for the receipt of proposals for a period of sixty (60) days.
The Pitt Greenville Airport Authority reserves the right to waive any informalities or irregularites in or reject any or all bids and to award or refrain from awarding the contract for the work as may serve their best sole interest.

The Gates

ALL SQUARE FEET ARE NOT CREATED EQUAL

Everybody talks about square feet, but The Gates has done something about it. Square footage is a unit of measure in two dimensions only. At The Gates, we add the third dimension—height. Height adds excitement... soaring ceilings, lofted overlooks; emotional space that makes a home more than just shelter. Come visit our model and see and feel what The Gates has done to the square foot.

An Album of Snowscapes In Eastern North Carolina

Text And Photos By Jerry Raynor

All things considered — the cold discomforts of snow versus its visual virtues — it is a rare opportunity to encounter winter wonderland landscapes in Greenville and throughout the entire area of eastern North Carolina.

Big snows seldom blanket our flatlands. When they do arrive, chances are they are fleeting affairs, disappearing soon after the arrival of a warming sun.

The big snowfall beginning February 23 and continuing through February 24, however, was of sufficient depth and richness and of a long-enough lasting value to provide a welcome chance to indulge in winter sports (even if only on a modified basis); to build snow men, and for photographers to record the temporary world of white.

The photographs on this page represent merely a very small sampling of the great variety of snow world beauty to be seen along every block of a town or village, every mile traveled along eastern North Carolina highways.

An astonishing array of magnificent vignettes of nature in winter was created by the substantial fall of snow. Everywhere there were scenes succeeding scenes, some in small details, others in dramatic panoramas.

Many of these scenes were matchless visions of Christmas-card beauty, exciting to behold, of an ambience to ignite the imagination of children, poets and all others who chose getting outdoors for this brief display of snow glory before its passing.

Flowers in bloom — golden forsythia, white plum and sprays of spirea, rosettes of red camellias and papery rose-hued Japanese quince, displayed fragments of color beneath tiny canopies of snow.

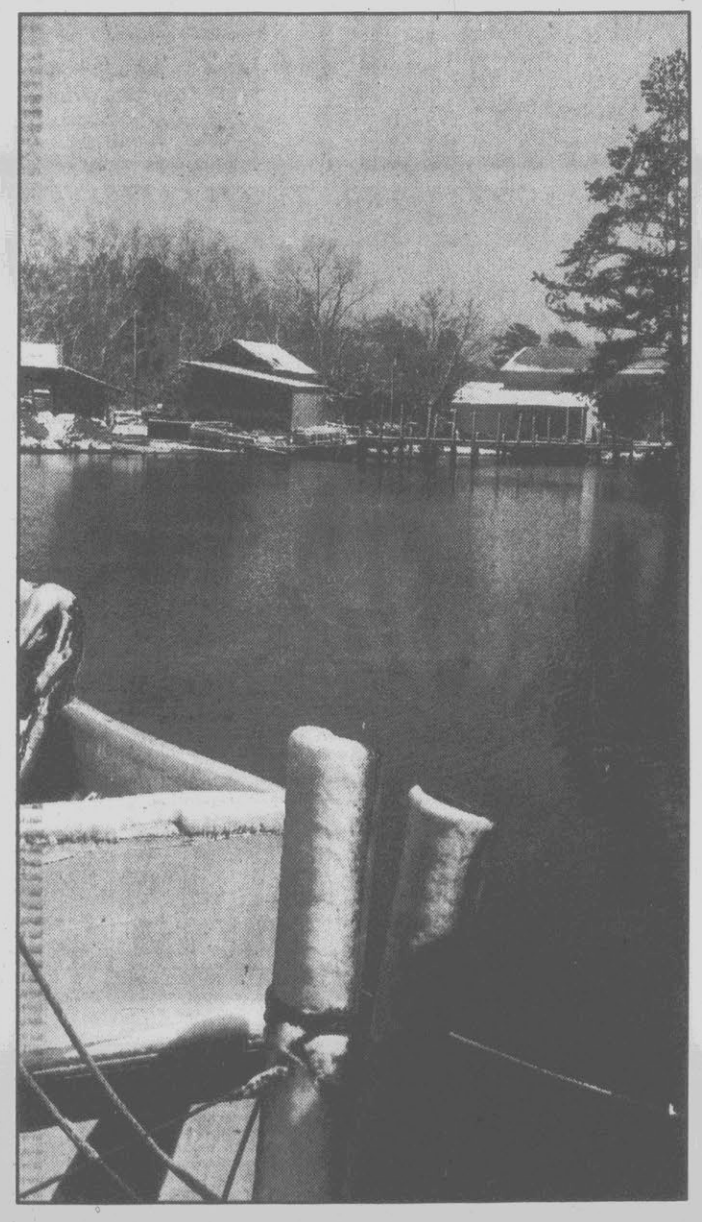

The favorite winter vegetable, collards, became strangely sculptured mounds; trees with small branches and twigs wore fantasy filigree jewels; icicles glistened from the eaves of homes, barns and stores, and furrowed fields were transformed into heavy ribbons of white alternating with more narrow bands of black where earth moisture had soaked up the snow.

In the forests, pine trees bowed under the weight of snow until, in the case of smaller, more pliable trees, treetops touched the forest floor — resembling ballet dancers taking deep bows. Swamp water mirrored white-clad tall hardwoods.

In fishing villages and byways where boats were in harbor, snow dusted the boats and wove intricate patterns around wire crab traps and in the folds of green fishing nets and on the surface of orange-colored floats.

The photographs on this page were made from early sunrise hours until noon on January 26 after the passing of the snow storm and before the warmth of the day's sun began to change the enchanted landscape into a different spectacle of snow falling from limbs and snow mounds melting into wet earth and ditches.

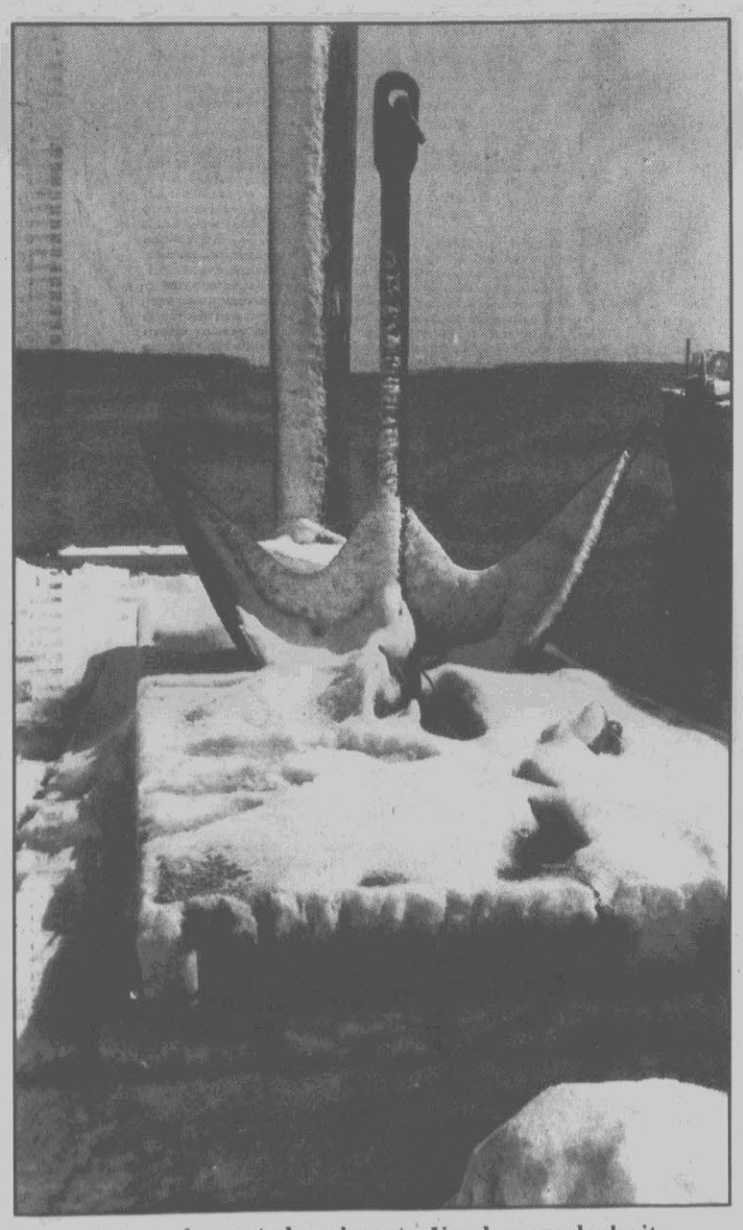

It was a brief time of magic, a time to remember, to recall when the hot days of summer arrive.

ECU Art Fundraiser

The Art Enthusiasts of East Carolina University have set a date for their next fundraiser, "An Evening with Kitty Carlisle Hart" featuring film and television personality Kitty Carlisle Hart as the keynote speaker at a dinner to be held in the Gray Art Gallery on May 10.

Ms. Hart, who has appeared recently in Woody Allen's film, "Radio Days," is probably best known for her appearances as a panelist on the television quiz show "To Tell the Truth," which ran from 1956 to 1978. Prior to her last Broadway play in 1983 "On Your Toes," Kitty starred in four films during the 1930's: "Murder at the Vanities," "She Loves Me Not" and "Here is My Heart," with Bing Crosby; and in the Marx Brothers classic, "A Night at the Opera."

She has been writing her autobiography, "Kitty," on and off for the past 20 years. It was released last year by Doubleday. The book is divided into three sections which deal with the two people who had the greatest impact on her life; her mother and her husband, playwright/director, Moss Hart. This book is available at Central Book and News in Greenville.

Among her many activities Kitty Carlisle Hart is currently the chairwoman of the New York Council on the Arts to which she was first appointed in 1976 by then Gov. Nelson Rockefeller.

The Art Enthusiasts of East Carolina University is a regionally supported group whose purpose is to bring together members of the community and state to expand the awareness and enjoyment of the visual arts in the region. The group supports scholarships for students in the School of Art and special activities and publications in the Gray Art Gallery and the School of Art which would not otherwise be funded.

For more information on the forthcoming event, contact Carmen Albea at 756-3661 or Perry Nesbitt, Gallery Director at the Gray Art Gallery 757-6336.

Exhibition/Auction By Greenville Art Museum

The Greenville Museum of Art and Patrician Galleries of Atlanta will present an art exhibition and auction at the Greenville County Club beginning at 6 p.m. Saturday.

Proceeds realized from the event are restricted for acquisitions of art and for the endowment fund of the Greenville Museum of art.

The auction will feature about 300 pieces, including lithographs, original oils, watercolors, serigraphs, engraving and etchings. Artists represented in the exhibition/auction include Rockwell, Neiman, Miro, Agan, Calder, Erte, Chagall, Delacroix, Boulanger, Vaserely and others.

Each work is certified and custom framed. About 100 of the pieces of art will have starting bids of between $35 and $100. For any piece of art selling for $500 or more, an extended payment plan with no interest charge can be arranged.

According to coordinators Patricia P. Minges and Patricia West, a preview of the items will begin at the country club at 6 p.m. with the auction to follow at 7 p.m.

Admission to the auction is $25 per couple for members of the Greenville Museum of Art and $35 per couple for non-members. Deadline for making reservation is Tuesday.

For reservations or other information, call the museum between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. at 758-1946.

Art Fellowship Exhibition

RALEIGH — The City Gallery of Contemporary Art in Raleigh is currently displaying "The North Carolina Arts Council 1988 Artists Fellowship Exhibition," until May 7.

This show spotlights the work of six North Carolina visual artists who received fellowships from the N.C. Arts Council last year.

These six fellowship winners were selected from a field of 185 entries. Winners each received $5,000 to assist them in pursuing their art.

A catalogue containing an essay by Vernon Pratt, an artist and faculty member in Duke University's Department of Art and History, will be available at the show.

This exhibition will be featured at a gala reception City Gallery will host for attendees of Arts Congress '89, April 5 to April 7.

City Gallery is located at 220 South Blount St. in downtown Raleigh. For further information on this exhibition, contact 839-2077. Artist fellowship application information can be obtained by writing the N.C. Arts Council, Raleigh, N.C., 27611 or by calling 733-2111.

Only five aye-ayes, strangest of lemurs, Madagascar natives once thought to be extinct, live in captivity, three in a Paris zoo and two at the Duke University Primate Center in North Carolina, says National Geographic.

Twenty-eight species and 40 subspecies of lemurs, all threatened by humans, live today on the island of Madagascar, descendants of mammals that first arrived there more than 40 million years ago, says National Geographic.

Old store signs

Two drink signs, the one at left a weather temperature reading device, the one at right a fanciful flower-top design, fade into rust a little more each season. The signs adorn a closed country store near the village of Maribel in Pamlico County.

Lost Colony Improvements Planned

MANTEO — Numerous improvements and programs are the focus of a new three-year devolopment campaign to benefit "The Lost Colony," America's longest running outdoor drama presented annually in summer months on the Outer Banks of North Carolina on Roanoke Island.

The plan gets under way after approval by the Roanoke Island Hisorical Association's board of directors. This summer's production will open June 9.

The development campaign is being headed by Albert Gard of Durham. A native of Elizabeth City, Gard's boyhood summers were spent in Kill Devil Hills on the Outer Banks near Roanoke Island, and many of those summers included attending performances of "The Lost Colony."

Premiering in 1937 as a summer's tribute to the 35th anniversary of the founding of Sir Walter Raleigh's lost colony on Roanoke Island, the show received widespread acclaim, including a visit that first season from President Franklin D. Roosevelt and New York Times drama critic, Brooks Atkinson, who turned in a favorable review.

Author Paul Green's concept of combining drama, music, song, and dance to tell an historic event on the site where it actually happened was called "symphonic drama" which, along with the the Broadway musical, became one of America's unique contributions to the world of theatre.

The new three-year plan will concentrate on improvements to the show's home, The Waterside Theatre, its front-of-the-house facilities as well as a variety of areas in the production itself from sets and costumes to sound and lighting.

Also earmarked for repairs is the Morrison Grove apartment complex which is used each summer to house the majority of the 130 actors and technicians who come to Roanoke Island from across the country. The other major area of concern is a new program aimed at increasing the number of groups and bus tours that attend the production each summer.

Goldsboro Site For March 12 Readers Event

GOLDSBORO — Goldsboro has been chosen again as a site for the N.C. Writers & Readers Series. Fiction writer Catherine Petroski of Durham and poet Cedar Koons of Timberlake will read from their works at 3 p.m. on March 12 at Wayne County Public Library.

In its fifth year, the Writers & Readers Series, sponsored by the N.C. Writer's Network, sends 20 established and emerging writers into 10 communities around the state.

The local program will be hosted by the Community Arts Council and the Goldsboro Writers Group with Margaret Boothe Baddour as moderator. The public is invited to attend the reading, free of charge, which will be followed by a discussion, an autographing session and refreshments.

Catherine Petroski is the author of a collection of short stories, "Gravity and Other Stories," published in 1981 by Fiction International. Her two children's books, published by Houghton Mifflin Co., are "Beautiful My Mane in the Wind" and "The Summer That Lasted Forever," winner of the AAUW/N.C. Literary and Historical Society Prize in 1985.

Ms. Petroski lives in Durham where she most recently taught fiction writing at Duke University.

Cedar Koons has had her poetry published in numerous literary magazines. Also, a number of her essays and reviews have been published in magazines and newspapers.

A native of Louisville, Ky., Ms. Koons has lived in North Carolina since coming to attend Duke University, where she graduated in 1971. She participated in two writers support groups in the Durham area and teaches both fiction and poetry through Duke Continuing Education.

She coordinated the First Monday Readings in Durham for the N.C. Writers Network and currently is reading at Duke Hospital through their "Artist on Call" series.

The North Carolina Writers' Network is a non-profit organization serving writers across the state by offering them information, workshops and conferences. For more information, contact NCWN Executive Director Marsha Warren, P.O. Box 954, Carrboro, N.C. 27510.

N.C. Poetry Society Competition

PEMBROKE — The North Carolina Poetry Society has announced that it is now accepting entries for the Zoe Kincaid Brockman Memorial Award. The competition is open to North Carolina poets, native-born or who have resided in the state for the past three years at the time of book publication.

The volume must be the original work of a single author, contain over 20 pages of poetry, carry the copyright date 1988, or a letter from the publisher stating date of first appearance, and be a new work that has not appeared in book form previously. No writer is eligible who has won the Brockman Award during the past five years.

The winner, notified by the middle of July, 1989, will be invited to read at the September meeting of the North Carolina Poetry Society at Weymouth Center, Southern Pines.

The recipient of the award receives a $200 cash prize and an engraved silver bowl to be kept permanently.

This year's judge is Robert R. Morgan, professor of English, Cornell University. A native of Hendersonville, Morgan has published nine volumes of poetry.

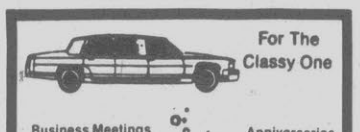

Contestants should submit a short biography with two copies of their book, postmarked by May 1, 1989, to: Zoe Kincaid Brockman Award Committee, Shelby Stephenson, Chairman, Box 60, Pembroke State University, Pembroke, N.C. 28372.

For acknowledgment of receipt of books, authors should include a self-addressed post card with the entry, and a SASE of adequate size if they wish to have one book returned.

16th Century Spanish Convent To Serve Modern Usage

The Associated Press

Spanish convent complex being transformed

By Susan Linnee
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOLEDO, Spain — When Mario Muelas leaves the construction site in the winter twilight, he walks to his car through narrow alleys where Christians, Moslems and Jews once rubbed shoulders. Then he drives four centuries back home to Madrid.

The 45-year-old architect is working in the vast 16th-century San Pedro Martyr convent complex, drawing up and executing plans to turn it into a modern government administrative center.

"Some days when I leave I feel like I'm emerging from the 15th or 16th centuries, I don't know where I am," Muelas says, surveying one of three cloistered patios that form the core of the former Dominican convent that expanded to about the size of a soccer field through the heart of Toledo as the Roman Catholic order grew in power.

The transformation of the convent, which has also served as an army barracks, stables, home for the elderly and orphanage, is the largest project yet undertaken in the preservation and restoration of Toledo, a once strategic city on a hill whose origins go back to the Roman colony of Hispania.

Like Venice in Italy and Fez in Morocco, Toledo has been declared part of the world's cultural patrimony by UNESCO, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. And as in the case of Venice and Fez, Toledo needs more than declarations to help it remain a living city as well as a monumental symbol of a time when three of the world's major religious cultures thrived together on a rocky outcropping of the La Mancha plain.

Rose-Anne Bartholomew, wife of U.S. Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew, calls Toledo "one of the places where three cultures lived successfully," comparing the city's former mix to that of Jerusalem and Beirut in their finer days.

Mrs. Bartholomew is the only non-Spanish member of the Board of Directors of the year-old Toledo Foundation, which seeks to mobilize the interest, government support and independent financial backing necessary to save the city. She hopes to set up a U.S. branch when she returns to Washington when her husband leaves his post in Spain this year.

The group has just moved into its headquarters in a room at one end of the medieval St. Martin bridge renovated by Toledo youths employed at a restoration workshop school set up by the regional government of Castille-La Mancha.

Convents like San Pedro Martyr are a key element in the future of Toledo. There are some 50 within the old, walled portion of the city. Most were built to house at least 400 cloistered nuns each but now have less than 20 inhabitants, most of whom are over 65.

Since the Spanish state confiscated much of the church's property in 1834, the convents have fallen on hard times.

The rehabilitation of San Pedro Martyr — Muelas says the Dominicans meant it originally as an administrative center for some aspects of the Spanish Inquisition when they opened it in 1540 — is budgeted at $10 million. The Spanish Interior and Economy ministries are paying the bill, rather than building something new in Toledo's industrial park across the Tagus River.

Another convent, San Juan de la Penitencia, has been turned into an international studies center for North and South American students sponsored by the University of Minnesota and Spain's Jose Ortega y Gasset Foundation.

The center has served as the setting for several tri-cultural congresses.

Roman Catholics and Jews lived under Moslem rule when the Moors incorporated Toledo into the Cordoba Emirate in 711 before it became the capital of an independent Moorish kingdom in 1012. The city was reconquered by a Christian king in 1085 and reached its glory under the 1252-1284 reign of Alfonso X, the Wise.

At the height of his rule, Toledo became the most important Jewish center in Spain, a country known in Hebrew as Sepharad, from which Sephardic Jews get their name. Moorish artisans using brick construction, carved wood, sculpted plaster and painted tiles built the Transito and Santa Maria la Blanca synagogues.

Then, in 1492 Queen Isabella, in an effort to consolidate her position on the Iberian Peninsula, signed an edict banishing all Moslems and Jews from Spain.

As part of the commemoration of the 500th anniversary in 1992 of the first voyage of Christopher Columbus to the New World, the Spanish government has declared Toledo the headquarters of Sepharad 92 and a symbol of Spain's "re-encounter" with its Jewish heritage.

When Edgar Bronfman, president of the World Jewish Congress, visited Toledo a year ago, Mayor Jose Antonio Molina told him the old city needed $100 million over the next two decades to reverse a depopulation trend that threatened to turn the city into a ghost town filled with monuments and tourist shops.

Of Toledo's 60,000 inhabitants, about 16,000 live inside the city's Moorish walls where streets are only as wide as a person's outstretched arms, parking is impossible and "everyone knows what you're doing," in the words of Steve Kennedy, an Englishman married to a Spaniard who lived in the old city for six years.

On evenings and weekends the main Zocodover Plaza fills with people who come to gossip, drink a beer, or buy almond paste marzipan, a Moorish-Jewish legacy and a Toledo speciality.

Many of the dwellings in Toledo have been abandoned over the years by squabbling heirs who don't want to live 42 miles from much more up-to-date Madrid. Many are either palaces or hovels, too big or too small for single families.

Former Mayor Juan Ignacio de Mesa, a member of the foundation's board of directors, is looking for a way to use state-of-the-art technology to make a medieval city liveable.

De Mesa is working with representatives of the city's major industries — Alcatel, Nixdorf and the Beecham and Jansen pharmaceutical firms — to solve mundane but pressing problems of what to do with the elecrical and telephone lines that dangle in clusters and crisscross narrow streets and the television antennae that sprout from red-tile roofs.

The Spanish government through the Ministry of Culture's restoration department has earmarked 81.6 million pesetas ($710,000) in 1989 for work on Toledo's magnificent 13th century cathedral, the Tornerias mosque, Santa Maria la Blanca and the Santa Fe convent. A similar sum was budgeted last year.

The ministry's museums department spent an additional 33.3 million pesetas ($290,000) restoring the house of the painter El Greco, the Transito and the Santa Cruz museum. The regional government spent 70.1 million pesetas ($609,000).

These amounts, De Mesa says, are but a drop in the bucket.

The foundation is in the process of drawing up the first overall plan to present to the Ministry of Culture on what has to be done to establish what Mrs. Bartholomew calls "the very fine balance between a museum city and a city that lives."

Spanish government support for the plan is essential in encouraging fund-raising from other sources, she adds.

De Mesa says the lack of a specific plan has hindered fund-raising from sources outside Spain, including American Jewish groups that could be interested in the restoration of the city's old Jewish quarter.

Heads Stolen

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Thieves raided a museum display case and made off with two softball-sized shrunken heads worth at least $15,000 each, the director of the plundered archeology museum said.

"The thief or thieves simply unscrewed one of the glass panes of the case and walked away with the two heads," Orlando Marques de Paiva, director of the ethnology and archeology Museum of Ipiranga, said by telephone Wednesday.

He said the heads were war trophies of the warlike Jivaro Indians, who live in the jungles of Ecuador. The Jivaros decapitate prisoners captured during tribal wars and use the victims' shrunken heads as trophies.

Paiva said the heads were stolen Thursday from an exhibit that also contained animal heads shrunken by the Jivaros. One of the heads was donated to the museum in 1932, the other nine years ago, Paiva said.

The world's biggest orange-juice exporter is Brazil, which garnered half the U.S. market in 1985, says National Geographic.

British Author Is Sought

Ayatollah Rudollah Khomeini ordered Moslems to seek out and kill the British author, Salman Rushdie for writing the novel "The Satanic Verses." The Ayatollah stated that he wants strong ties with Moscow to help fight the "devilish" West. During a demonstration in Beirut this Shiite Moslem expressed his feelings toward the author and his country.

The Elite Forms One Segment Of Refugees In America

SHARATI MUKHERJEE

By Geneva Collins
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — They are not the tired, poor, huddled masses yearning to breathe free. They are Oxford-educated professors from India, wealthy families chased from Idi Amin's Uganda, factory owners fleeing Afghanistan's upheavals. They are America's new immigrants, arriving via Concorde, not a refugee boat.

They have found a voice in Bharati Mukherjee, a self-described Hindu Bengali Brahmin who was raised in affluence in Bombay, India, educated in British and Swiss schools before receiving a master's and doctorate at the University of Iowa, and who last year became an American citizen.

In January, her sixth book, "The Middleman and Other Stories" (Grove Press, $15.95), won the prestigious National Book Critics Circle Award. The honor has been gratifying for two reasons, she said in a recent interview.

First, it has put the book, published last spring, back on the shelves. But far more importantly, she said, it has shown a "marvelous curiosity and adventurousness" on the part of the literary establishment to select such an unconventional book.

"A country that allows a writer from a minority community or a marginalized group to be included as a voice in mainstream American literature — now that's a tribute to the country," said Mukherjee, a slight, thoughtful woman with a relaxed laugh and exquisite poise during the interview at The Associated Press offices.

She was asked if she chose the title "The Middleman" because immigrants are, in effect, middlemen — shuttling between their native and adopted countries.

"Immigrants are middlemen, and I also feel that America is going through transition, that the country has changed since the 1970s with the fast influx of immigrants from non-traditional countries," she said. "We are in many ways similar to the European, and especially the Jewish, influx of 30 to 40 years ago. But in many significant ways, we who are coming from Asia and the Caribbean are very dissimilar, very distinct. ...

"For many of my characters, as it was for me, coming to America is a social comedown. I had a life of ease and privilege which I have chosen to not to want to continue by living in the United States — a social demotion. I'll never have that kind of money and physical comfort in this country."

Mukherjee, 48, who has lived in North America for 28 years, has wholeheartedly embraced the United States. She said she thinks of this collection of short stories as "my tribute to America. This is finally my very American book, and I want the exuberance to reflect the kind of exuberance that this country has released in me that none of the countries I have lived in have."

While studying at the University of Iowa, Mukherjee met and married Clark Blaise, a novelist, and the two moved to Canada in 1968 to teach and write. They both became Canadian citizens, but left that country in the late '70s because of racial prejudice and physical harassment of foreigners there. The couple came to the United States and now live in New York City, where Mukherjee teaches full-time at Queens College and part-time at Columbia and New York universities.

She has written two novels, "The Tiger's Daughter" and "Wife," and a previous collection of short stories, "Darkness." She also has collaborated on two non-fiction books with her husband, "Days and Nights in Calcutta" and "The Sorrow and the Terror." The latter is about the 1985 Air India flight that crashed over Ireland, killing 329 people.

"The Middleman" is a departure for her because she now feels comfortable adopting the persona of white Americans when needed. In fact, this collection's power lies in the enormous range of characters and locales so convincingly portrayed — a Vietnam vet who becomes a hired killer in Florida, a Trinidad woman who sneaks into America from Canada and finds work as an au pair, a Sri Lankan high school teacher who gets stranded in West Germany, a young woman from a close Italian family trying to introduce her Afghan lover to her blue-collar parents.

"When I'm with Ro I feel I am looking at America through the wrong end of a telescope," thinks the woman with the Afghan lover in the story "Orbiting."

"He makes it sound like a police state, with sudden raids, papers, detention centers, deportations, and torture and death waiting in the wings."

Other characters see America as Disneyland, a nation of infinite plenty where adults act like overfed children.

Mukherjee said she is not surprised at Americans' ignorance of events and geography beyond their borders. "I remember as a kid in Calcutta, where we had to know street names in London and Paris ... because real life was lived elsewhere, and whatever life we lived was somewhat devalued by colonialism and post-colonialism. I envied Americans their insularity."

America will learn about the rest of the world when geopolitical events force it to, she predicted. And perhaps the literary world's recognition of "The Middleman" is a small step toward increasing understanding of this new and different generation of immigrants.

"The people I'm writing about have had no voice in American literature," she said. "And I think one of my tasks becomes sensitizing editors of magazines, saying, 'Look, we all exist out there. The people you sit next to on the No. 7 train have enormous stories to tell.'"

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Tammy Lee Jolly
SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

Australian writers have started becoming very popular as more and more of their works are released in America. Two new books by Australian writers were received recently at Sheppard Memorial Library.

The first is by a novelist who won the Australian Journalist of the Year Award in 1983. Her novel, "Small Tales of a Town," is a memorable and utterly delightful story. Susan Webster has a sharp eye and a sparkling sense of humor. "Small Tales of a Town" is an intimate portrait of small town life on the edge of the Australian outback as seen through the eyes of a journalist fresh from Melbourne.

The town appears quiet enough, but soon, behind the sleepy facade, we see tragedy, farce, fierce feuds and many extraordinary characters that keep this journalist on his toes. This is a thoughtful and amusing look at a small town, 70 miles from anywhere, hanging onto the last fringe of usable land as the last outpost before the desert, and its big red dunes, swallow up everything and nothing else exists anymore.

The other new at Sheppard novel is "Two By Astley," by Thea Astley. Consisting of two short novels, as the title suggests, the first is "A Kindness Cup," winner of the Australian Book of the Year award.

This is a memorable novel that tells the tale of shared guilt from a long unpunished act of brutality. When the citizens from a North Queensland town have a jubilee celebration, a man who left 20 years before, returns, determined to see the bullies responsible punished. Justice, or revenge?

The second novel, "The Acolyte," winner of Australia's prestigious Miles Franklin award, tells the tale of genius and those drawn to its radiant center. Paul Vesper is the acolyte, devotee of the brilliant blind musician Jack Holberg. The story is an account of obsession shared and idolatry scorned.

A Review

Alistair Cooke's America

AMERICA OBSERVED. By Alistair Cooke. Knopf. 233 Pages. $19.95.

Alistair Cooke probably is better known to Americans for his television appearances than for his reportage. A pity, since he is a fine observer and writer. This has been rectified, however, with the appearance of "America Observed."

The book was published to mark the distinguished Briton's 80th birthday and contains a variety of pieces Cooke says "were filed as daily dispatches to what was then known as the Manchester Guardian between 1946 and 1972, when I retired as the paper's chief American correspondent." It also contains several pieces from other sources that carry Cooke's views of the American scene into 1985.

The first, dated Dec. 24, 1946, is a description by Cooke of how Christmas is celebrated in America, especially in New York City, and observes wrily that because the country is so large it has different time zones which are "mostly a nuisance, but at Christmas and New Year it gives revellers, by the magic of radio, the chance to get drunk four times over."

In 1951, Cooke wrote a piece on The New Yorker magazine. His terse article does an excellent job of summing up the periodical's birth and surprising growth, as well as giving a witty word picture of founder Harold Ross, a man of "writhing perfectionism."

A 1962 piece tells of Marilyn Monroe, who was found dead in her Hollywood home "only a physical mile or two, but a social universe away, from the place where she was born." Cooke pities her because she was "a baffled, honest girl forever haunted by the nightmare of herself, 60 feet tall and naked before a howling mob."

"Bedlam in Chicago" (Sept. 5, 1968) is a devastating report on the Democratic presidential convention in Chicago in which "stupefied millions" of TV viewers watched "a Chicago police force gone berserk in front of the biggest hotel in the world."

The book contains more than 50 other fine reports. Enjoy them.

New York's Forbidden Broadway Pleases The British

By Matt Wolf
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — "Les Miserables" is getting ribbed in the city that made the musical a hit, as New York's gleefully poisonous "Forbidden Broadway" strikes sparks in London.

Also under the satirical gun are "The Phantom of the Opera," "Cats" and Cameron Mackintosh, who produced both hits. They're just some of the British targets now being lovingly lampooned on home turf.

The long-running spoof of the Broadway theater scene, which has been playing on and off in New York since its 1981 bow at an upper Westside supper club, opened March 2 at London's Fortune Theater.

"Forbidden Broadway: The West End Edition" is the latest incarnation of a mini-musical revue that has made a cottage industry out of creator Gerard Alessandrini's skills at parody.

"This show has pulled me out of poverty," said Alessandrini, 34, a graduate of the Boston Conservatory of Music who was in New York waiting tables when "Forbidden Broadway" clicked.

In eight years, his show has ballooned from a two-person nightclub act at Palssons in Manhattan to a full-fledged London show in a 440-seat West End theater.

Last fall, a revised New York production opened to rave reviews in larger premises — the 130-seat Theater East.

It's more than Alessandrini ever dreamed would happen, and requires him to maintain a sharp lookout for new trends to spoof. "You've got to keep up, almost like a critic," he said. "You listen to the theater gossip, that type of thing."

However, he doesn't want to be known just as a parodist: "I like to think of the show operating on different levels. If audiences listen, it's informative about the theater ... and it at least works on a musical level."

Targets under attack from his five-member New York cast range from Patti LuPone and Madonna to Mackintosh and B. D. Wong, the Tony-winning star of "M. Butterfly."

A four-person London cast will perform about 25 percent of the New York material. There's a duet spoofing musical divas Mary Martin and Ethel Merman, and a "Les Miserables" parody that abbreviates the 3 hour and 15 minute musical adaptation of Victor Hugo's epic novel into a chaotic, pell-mell 10 minutes.

Other numbers come from the repertory of 150 accumulated over the years, and some were written especially for the West End.

In the last category are "The RSC Gavotte," referring to the government-subsidized Royal Shakespeare Company, and a piece about the British theater's obsession with spies, as currently seen in Alan Bennett's hit, "Single Spies."

"Brush Up Your Richard" is sung to the tune of "Brush Up Your Shakespeare" from Cole Porter's "Kiss Me, Kate."

Because of the constant two-way theater traffic between London and New York, Alessandrini is confident the American material will work here. He already looks forward to the parody potential of "M. Butterfly," which opens in London April 20.

Budgeted at $375,000, Alessandrini's show breaks even at a staggeringly low 14,000 pounds ($25,000) a week, or 55 percent audience capacity.

"We couldn't have done 'Forbidden Broadway' off-Broadway for the London price," said the shw's American producer, Jack McQuiggan.

Last season, McQuiggan produced an English play, Simon Gray's "The Common Pursuit," on the West End following success with the play off-Broadway. Neither he nor his partner, Joan Stein, is involved with "Forbidden Broadway" in New York.

An unrelated London theater spoof, "Wicked Lips," proved a fast flop last year when its British crators failed to clear the necessary rights.

Andrew Lloyd Webber, composer of "Cats" and "The Phantom of the Opera," has so far refused to approve mockeries using his melodies, so Alessandrini's show parodies him with its own tunes.

But "Forbidden Broadway," happily, has other fans where it counts. Mackintosh has put his money where Alessandrini's mockery is: He's invested $7,500 in the show.

A Review

An Idiom's Delight

IDIOM'S DELIGHT. By Suzanne Brock. Times Books. 158 Pages. $13.95.

In addition to being an excellent reference book, Suzanne Brock's "Idiom's Delight" is a pleasure to browse through.

It's packed with pungent phrases, and Brock has an uncanny talent for pairing off an American English idiom with its equivalent in Spanish, French, Italian and Latin.

And it has a purpose: "Although we speak a grand, rambunctious language, we use the same idioms over and over until the imagery is lost. This book aims to remind you of the riches of your everyday speech, and to throw some light on the equivalent riches in other languages."

Consider:

"An American uses 'in the wind' to mean 'already under way.' A Frenchman uses 'in the wind' to describe a person who is 'with it.' A 'with it' Italian, someone who is up on everything, is said to 'have his hands in the dough.' Yet a Spaniard with his 'hands in the dough' isn't 'with it' at all. He's simply been 'caught red-handed.'"

While these different languages often have idioms that are identical or nearly so, they just as often have idioms that are not. Americans and Spaniards both cry crocodile tears, but "on the other hand, an American has crow's feet, while a Spaniard has rooster feet."

France is known for its love of food and drink, so it's only natural that while Americans "split the difference; the French divide a pear in two. To us, it's no bed of roses; to the French, it's not all honey. An American goes broke; a Frenchman drinks broth."

In Italy, a person is not light-fingered as he is in America. "An Italian is swift of hand. An American does something behind your back, while an Italian does it behind your shoulders."

As for Latin, it may be a dead language, but its idioms live on. Among Latin sayings alive and well and living in America: "Time is usually the best medicine," "The die is cast" and "Now or never."

'Monster Concert' Scheduled At ECU's Fletcher Recital Hall

March 12 at 3 p.m. is the date and time set for the multi-piano ensemble concert by piano players numbering 120, a combnation of students and teachers of the Greenville Piano Teachers Association.

The concert will take place at Fletcher Recital Hall on the East Carolina University campus. It is free and open to the public.

Titled the "Monster Concert," the name refers to the tremendous volume of music resulting from nine pianos with two players performing at each keyboard. The "Monster Concert" concert was first performed in this format at a group concert last year.

Guest conductors for the event will be Dr. Charles Schwartz, Dr. Richard Lucht, and Dr. Michelle Hairston of the ECU School of Music keyboard faculty; Juan Carillo, a graduate assistant at ECU, and Charles Entzminger of Cha-Rich Music.

The program will open with the piano teachers playing "The Star Spangled Banner" and will close with Sousa's "Stars and Striped Forever," also to be performed by the teachers.

Five categories of piano music are encompassed in the program featuring students. These categories are: dances, family time, classical, around the world, and on parade. Choices of music range from Bach to Berlin.

Co-chairmen for the concert are Annamarie Lalik and Carlene Ragan. Audition chairmen were Margaret Baker and Judy Carlton.

Other teachers with students performing in the concert are Anna Anderson, Barbara Caspar, Charles Entzminger, Sylvia McCreary, Susan Pittman, Don Roebuck and June Rose. Rose is president of the association.

Louise Kessler To Perform In Greenville

Storyteller/performer Louise Kessel will return to Greenville in a program at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Belk auditorium of the School of Allied Health on Charles Boulevard.

Tickets to the Kessel performance are priced at $4 and will be available at the door. Her concert is being sponsored jointly by the Folk Arts Society of Greenville and the East Carolina University Department of Library and Information Studies.

Ms. Kessel has performed in Greenville previously — in 1987 in a Greenville Folk Arts concert and in 1988 at the Grenville Museum of Art.

Additionally, she has performed in diverse places such as the Alaska State Fair, the Hudson River Revival, the Eno River Festival, the N.C. Museum of Art and the Vermont Storytelling Festival.

Ms. Kessel's concern for our planet and its people have led her to develop some special themes that she weaves through many of her stories. She celebrates hopes for a healthy environment and cooperation among people.

Proceeds realized from Saturday's performance will help sponsor Ms. Kessel's participation in citizen-to-citizen diplomacy between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Rodeo Sweethearts At Hardtimes

The country music act, Sweethearts of the Rodeo, will perform at Hardtimes in Greenville on Saturday at 11 p.m.

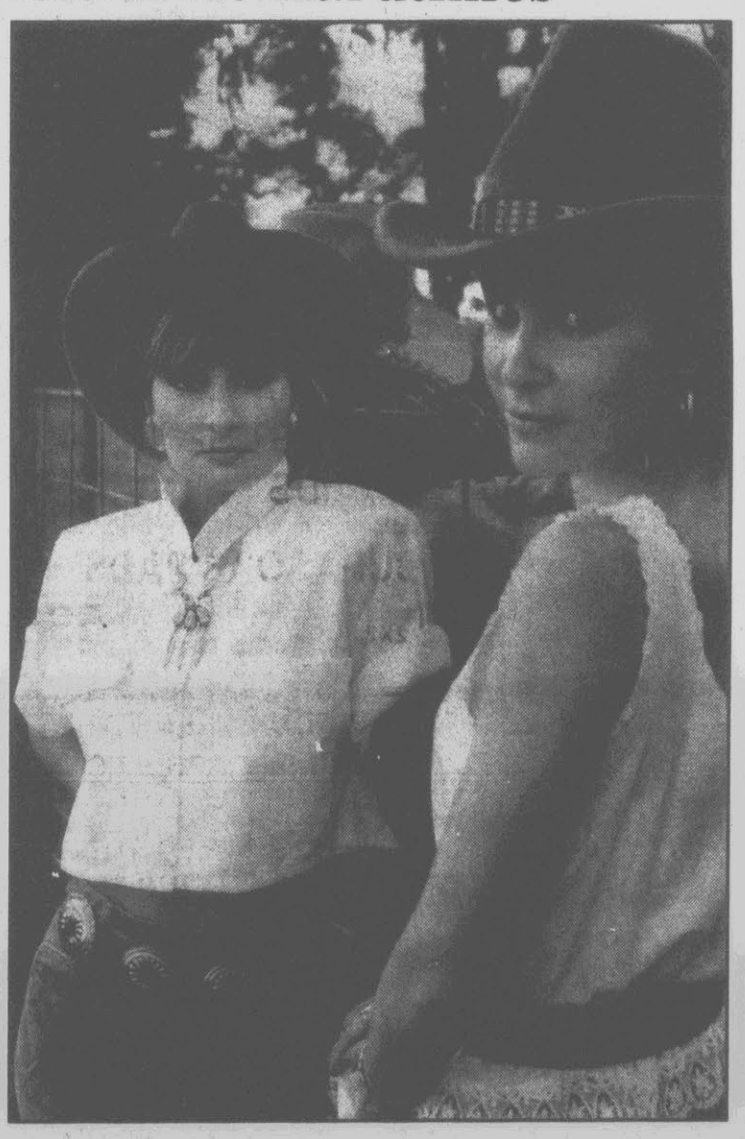

Kristine and Janis are sisters who came to Nashville from Los Angeles. Their debut CBS album was the number eight record of 1987 in country music on the Billboard Magazine listing.

Five of the eight songs on the album were released as singles and all five went into the top ten listing on weekly charts.

Their second album, "One Time, One Night," has proven successful. The first two singles, "Satisfy You" and "Blue to the Bone," were top five hits. The current release is the Beatles' cover, "I Feel Fine."

The Sweethearts were nominated for the Country Music Association's prestigious "Horizon Award" and "Duo of the Year." They were also nominees for the Academy of Country Music's "Best Duo."

'Salome' To Air On Saturday

NEW YORK — Richard Strauss' "Salome" will be broadcast live from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera house on Saturday afternoon over the Texaco-Metropolitan Opera Radio Network. The broadcast will begin at 1:30 p.m. with a pre-curtain feature, and will be followed at 2 p.m. by the opera, which is performed without intermission.

It will be heard locally over radio stations WTEB, New Bern, and WRRF, Washington, N.C.

The cast for this season's new production of "Salome" will include soprano Eva Marton in the title role, Helga Dernesch as Herodias, Graham Clark as Herod, Mark Baker as Narraboth and Bernd Weikl will sing the role of the prophet, Jochanaan. Marek Janowski will conduct the opera orchestra.

McGehee Book Is Published

WINDER, Ga. — Lineal and collateral descendants of Thoms MackGehee, a colonist who settled in Virginia in the late 1600s, are encouraged to submit data for the third and final volume of "McGehee Descendants" to be published by Ethel W. Grider in 1990.

Volume 1, published in 1987, covered the MacGregor connection and the ancestry of Thomas MackGehee. Volume 2, now completed and ready for distribution, covers the lives of three of MackGehee's children and their descendants.

TV Show Focuses On Young Drunken Drivers

The topic of driving by underage intoxicated drivers is the focus of ABC television's "Who's the Boss?" sitcom. The episode, titled "Boozin' Buddies," airs at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Members of the local Pitt County chapter of Mothers Against Drunken Drivers, MADD, is recommending that this show be put on the priority list of viewers, particularly young people.

Anyone interested in more details about the Pitt County MADD chapter can call 355-3388.

Runaway Cow

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — You've heard of the bull in the china shop. How about the cow in the bank?

A half-dozen First National Bank of Louisville customers were startled when a cow crashed through a window Tuesday after escaping from a nearby downtown stockyard.

"I was writing the deposit ticket out and I looked up, and in the window was a big black — and I looked again — a cow!" said Louis Cox. "And then it came through the window and it ... sort of brushed this one guy down on the floor.

Cox said the animal was foaming at the mouth and his first thought was that the animal was "crazy or something."

No English Spoken In A Louisiana Cajun Program

EDITOR'S NOTE — There was a time when Louisiana's Cajuns were spanked at school if they spoke French. All that has changed in a resurgence of pride in Cajun culture, a culture that is celebrated in the "Rendez-Vous Des Cajuns," a two-hour program of music and humor that is broadcast live every Saturday night from a restored vaudeville theater. No English is spoken there.

By Guy Coates
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

EUNICE, La. — The foot-stomping and fiddling inside the old Eunice vaudeville theater spoke of a packed house for the Cajun version of Prairie Home Companion.

They lined up around the block, ignoring a tornado watch and gully-washing rain to purchase tickets for a show where no English was spoken except for brief opening remarks by a uniformed park ranger.

For more than a year now, the crowds have been filling the 700-seat Liberty Theater every Saturday night for a live two-hour show broadcast locally, regionally and at several points in the nation on a delayed basis.

The music, the humor and the recitations of spicy recipes by guest chefs are in Cajun French, which is based on a language spoken in the 18th century.

The Acadians were exiled from Nova Scotia by the British in 1755 and 10 years later many had found their way to the swampy coasts and inland prairies of south Louisiana. Others went to inland Canada and Maine.

"The tape of this show is being sent to public radio in Maine and New Brunswick," says Mayor Curtis Joubert, who led a local movement to save the three-story brick Liberty Theater from destruction once it finally closed as a movie house in 1982.

Joubert, a retired high school principal and veteran politician, sweet-talked the citizens into buying the building. Next, he used his charms on the National Park Service, which entered into a joint venture with Eunice.

Town residents helped restore the gaudy grandeur of the old theater, tearing down rotted curtains that had covered original ceiling-to-floor murals, one a painted Carmen dancing with a tambourine. Moldings were regilded, chandeliers cleaned and floors scrubbed of more than 50 years of accumulated wax and dirt, revealing sparkling green-and-white ceramic-pieced floors.

An old organ with wooden pipes, now valued by the Historical Organ Society at $25,000, was found under a pile of debris.

The theater is part of the Jean Lafitte National Park, which is a series of places scattered around south Louisiana, including the New Orleans French Quarter.

Construction was set to begin earlier this month on a $3 million Acadian Culture Center, adjacent to the theater. It is scheduled to open sometime next year.

The Jean Lafitte National Park chose the Liberty Theater as a site for an interpretive center for the Prairie Cajun culture. The city signed a cooperative agreement with the National Park Service which uses the theater for its living history presentations.

The heart of the Liberty is the "Rendez-Vous Des Cajuns," which features Cajun bands, from the famous to youngsters just getting started on the traditional sound that was isolated along with the French heritage until the late 1960s.

"In my generation we were spanked at school if we spoke French," recalls Joubert. "There was a sense of shame in being Cajun. We kept the music to ourselves."

In less than 20 years, the state has brought back that heritage with a bang, offering French courses in elementary schools with many teachers from France. Chefs have traveled the world touting the food.

No one represents the new wave of Cajun culture better than Dr. Barry Ancelet, the 37-year-old humorist who hosts the show, boasts Joubert.

Ancelet is a specialist in folklore at the University of Southwestern Louisiana and did his doctoral dissertation on Cajun humor.

"I would die in English because the tone of voice, the melody and the vocal pattern are so important in humor," Ancelet says. "The humor here is not the slick Johnny Carson type. It's more earthy and rural. There's a lot of hunting and fishing stories. And here they poke fun at prominent people in the community."

Marcovicci, A New Name In Tackling St. Joan Roles

By Thomas Murphy
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Andrea Marcovicci recalls a moment last year when she spotted a brief announcement that the American Conservatory Theatre would include George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan" in its upcoming season.

Marcovicci, who was in town then to perform her cabaret act at the Plush Room, turned to her accompanist and mused: "I wonder who's going to play St. Joan?"

The surprise answer came when director Michael Smuin asked her to take on the title role, which is sometimes described as the female equivalent of Hamlet. It's won that reputation for three very good reasons. First, everybody who comes to see the play has their own vision of what Joan of Arc was like. Second, the Shavian concept of Joan is quite unlike most others.

Third, almost every major actress of the 20th century has tried on Joan's sandals. The leading women of stage have included Uta Hagen, Siobhan McKenna, Sarah Miles, Joan Plowright, Wendy Hiller, Jane Alexander, Lee Grant and Lynn Redgrave. Ingrid Bergman, Hedy Lamar, Jean Seberg and Julie Harris have played Joan in screen adaptations.

Being with such heavy talent is enough to cause any actor to lose sleep, and Marcovicci has indeed had trouble sleeping lately. A month ago she was worried about learning her lines. Now she finds herself tossing in bed as she mentally walks through her part.

But she no longer worries whether she'll measure up to the great performers of the past.

"If you were to worry about that, how could you ever get up? If I were to think that way when I was singing, it would be impossible for me to sing a song because Ella Fitzgerald did it so much better. Judy Garland did 'The Man That Got Away' better than I'm ever going to do it, so why should I ever try?

"From what I've been reading, I'll never touch Siobhan McKenna in their minds. But then you have to throw that out, and you have to say once you take on the part, you become (Joan) and she becomes you. Since she was a real person, if you open yourself to the echoes of what she really said, you should be able to take her on without too much intimidation."

Marcovicci has retraced Shaw's footsteps in researching the part. She has even read the transcript of Joan's nine-week trial, which has shown her that Shaw was correct when he told his admirers he was merely quoting the saint.

"That transcript is staggering when you read it. That great line — when they say, 'Can you possibly tell me that you are in a state of grace?' and she says, 'If I am not, may God bring me to it. If I am, may God keep me in it.' — That's exactly, word-for-word, from the transcript."

Marcovicci also wants to show another side of St. Joan.

"I have to dare to let her be actually unpleasant at times, which will be surprising to people who think, 'Well, she's a saint and we're supposed to love her at all times.' But she was irritating beyond belief to the people that were around her," she said.

"She allowed medals to be cast in her honor. When she came into town, she had the bells ringing a half-hour at a stretch so she could hear them. She became quite puffed up. ... That's the thing that's so tragic. This really has Shakespearean scope because she doesn't see what she's doing."

But Marcovicci, who played Ophelia opposite Sam Waterston's Hamlet at the New York Shakespeare Festival, doesn't see the comparison of Joan to the Bard's prince.

"Hamlet is much more difficult because Hamlet is neurotic," she said. "Joan never doubted. She firmly believed in everything she did because it came from God. And she had what none of us have — complete assurance."

Although Marcovicci's acting career has included roles in such short-lived musicals as "Ambassador," "Chaplin" and "Nefertiti," and work in television and film, she is best known to many as a torch singer. And that strikes her as funny.

"It's weird. I've only been best known as a singer in the last two years. I mean people are coming up to me at my concert appearances and saying, 'I heard a rumor you were once an actress.'"

Q Is Michael J. Fox, formerly of "Family Ties," en route to becoming a papa? Is he going to star in another TV series? Isn't he too short to become a leading man in feature movies?—Pam Rowland, Baltimore, Md.

A Fox and his wife, actress Tracy Pollan, expect their first child in midsummer, probably July. The diminutive actor has had enough of TV for a while. Reportedly he would like to confine his talents to acting, directing and producing big-screen motion pictures. At 5 feet 6 with lifts in his shoes or when wearing high-heeled boots, Fox is not too short for leading-man roles.

Tracy and Michael: Goodbye to TV, hello to parenthood

Q How old is Shirley Temple? How many children does she have, and by how many husbands? What do her children do for a living? Who appointed Shirley as U.S. Ambassador to Ghana? —Mira Gaillard, Shreveport, La.

A Shirley Temple was born April 23, 1928. She has three children: Linda Susan Falaschi, 41, a freelance writer; Charles Alden Black Jr., 36, who works in the U.S. Department of Commerce; and Lori Alden Black, 34, a freelance photographer and a bass player in a rock band. Linda is the product of Shirley's first marriage, to actor John Agar, from 1945 to 1949; Charles Jr. and Lori are Shirley's children by Charles A. Black, her husband since 1950. Shirley Temple Black was appointed Ambassador to Ghana by President Gerald Ford in 1974.

Q Jasmine Guy, who acts in the TV sitcom "A Different World"—is she black or white? And is she replacing Lisa Bonet? —Ina Rice, Newark, N.J.

Feingold/Outline

Jasmine: Not taking over

A Jasmine Guy, 24, is the daughter of the Rev. William V. Guy, black pastor of Atlanta's Friendship Baptist Church. Her mother, who divorced Guy after 21 years of marriage, has remarried and teaches high school English in Atlanta; she is white. Lisa Bonet dropped out of "A Different World" to have a baby but will return. She is not being replaced.

Q Is it just a coincidence that two actors who played Superman have similar names, or were George Reeves and Christopher Reeve related? Did George Reeves commit suicide because he had difficulty separating himself from his TV role as Superman?—Frederick B. Muller, Livingston, N.J.

A George Reeves was born in Iowa in 1914. His real name was George Besselo, and he was in no way related to Chris Reeve, born in New York in 1952. Reeves committed suicide in 1959 not only because he found psychological difficulty in separating himself from his role but also because he was being pursued relentlessly by the wife of an MGM executive. It's just a coincidence that two actors named Reeves and Reeve both starred as Superman.

Q What's the inside story of Andreas Papandreou, prime minister of Greece, who used to teach economics at the University of California, and the Olympic Airlines hostess with whom he's infatuated? Where'd they meet?—Olga H., Berkeley, Calif.

A Andreas Papandreou, 70, apparently met and was attracted to Dimitra "Mimi" Liani, 34, when the tall, buxom, bleached blonde was assigned as his "personal hostess" on a charter flight to India in 1985. The friendship gradually warmed, but Margaret Papandreou, 67, the prime minister's American-born wife, paid it no mind. Having been married since 1951, she was well aware of Andreas' infidelities, including one that reportedly resulted in a daughter born out of wedlock in Sweden. No matter how frequent his suspected liaisons, she was sure he'd return to her. After all, they'd been through much and had four grown children, including a son who is education minister of Greece.

Arvrpoulos/Sipa

Andreas and Dimitra: Will Mrs. P agree to "Big D"?

Last fall, however, Mrs. Papandreou was proved wrong. When her husband developed a bad heart and flew to London for major cardiac surgery, he took along not his wife but his mistress. He was convinced, said his apologists, that Margaret cared more for her feminist causes than for him. Prior to his surgery, Papandreou let it be known that if he pulled through, he'd divorce his wife. The operation was a success.

On Jan. 19, Mrs. Papandreou announced: "My personal affair with the prime minister is ended. There remains only the legalization of the separation, which I am trying to get over and done with as quickly as possible." In Athens, where the two have been living together, it's said the prime minister will wed his mistress when expedient. His friends say whimsically that Dimitra won Andreas' heart because she cooks extremely well, and he has loved good cooking since he was 16. But many also predict that his wife will never divorce him.

Audrey Hepburn is sophisticated, charming, feminine—and vulnerable

'You Can't Love Without The Fear Of Losing'

Timothy White

BY EDWARD KLEIN

AUDREY HEPBURN and I are sitting alone in front of a crackling fireplace in the den of her friend's home in Beverly Hills. She dreads interviews—"This is my very last magazine interview, ever!" she vows—but she has agreed to meet with me over a period of two days to try to unravel a mystery.

This May she will turn 60. She has never had a facelift, she doesn't use a press agent, she lives quietly in a secluded Swiss village and she has turned down hundreds of scripts since her last movie, They All Laughed, eight years ago.

Yet this shy and reclusive star seems poised for a comeback. Here she is, suddenly, the glorious face in Revlon's ad for "the most unforgettable women in the world," the glamorous figure who outshines women half her age at the Academy Awards, the Special Ambassador for UNICEF who draws adoring mobs all over the world, the rarest of Hollywood commodities—the "bankable" name who can still guarantee that a movie will get made.

"In the last year, I've had seven requests from publishers for the Audrey Hepburn story," she says. "You know, the definitive book."

It makes sense. We live in a time when romance is back in vogue, and so is Audrey Hepburn. But why is it that while most other actresses her age have faded into celluloid memory, she still has the power to reach us in our deepest fantasy life? What is the mystery of her enduring appeal?

"I'll never have an answer to what makes me special," she says in that lovely, lilting voice which instantly evokes images of the vulnerable princess in Roman Holiday and Holly Golightly in Breakfast at Tiffany's. "The last thing you want to be in acting is an introvert, which I am. I've never loved to perform. Oh, I liked it beforehand—all the preparation—and I liked it afterward, if it went well. But the thing itself is scary!"

She gets up suddenly, almost bolts out of the sofa, as if she's trying to escape a frightening memory. The room is small, but she takes long, balletlike strides that carry her in a nervous circle. Then, just as suddenly, she stops with her back to the fireplace.

Audrey Hepburn is 5 feet 7, still reed-thin at 110 pounds, with perfect posture. She is wearing jeans and a wool pullover, a touch of mascara accenting her large eyes but no other makeup. And there's no jewelry around her famous neck, which is like a long, elegant pedestal that keeps your eyes focused on her expressive face.

"I remember," she continues, "many years ago, my mother said to me, 'Considering that you have no talent, it's really extraordinary where you've got.' And that's what I really believe to this day. I've always been self-conscious about interviews, about my thinness, my tallness, my unattractiveness. My success—it still bewilders me."

So here is a start in unraveling the mystery—her lifelong need to overcome a desperate sense of insecurity. But then, many actors are plagued by self-doubt, and this alone doesn't seem enough to explain Hepburn's hold on our hearts.

Remember, at the height of her fame in the '50s and '60s, she rivaled Greta Garbo, Marlene Dietrich, Ingrid Bergman and that other Hepburn—Katharine—as one of the greatest female movie stars of all time. By 30, she was commanding $1 million a movie plus 10 percent of the gross. She made Sabrina with Humphrey Bogart and William Holden, Funny Face with Fred Astaire, Love in the Afternoon with Gary Cooper—and she created her very own look in Givenchy's dresses and gowns.

"It would be fun to do another part before I roll over," she says with a modesty that, coming from her, doesn't sound false. "People are inclined to send scripts to me for which the parts are too young. I'd love to do a picture with Michael Caine or Michael Douglas—actors who have style but aren't pompous about it."

And you know all she'd have to do is ask. Her kind of career doesn't just happen. For an answer to the Hepburn mystery, she delves further into her past.

"The most traumatic event in my life was when my father left my mother," she says. This was in Brussels, Belgium, where she was born Edda Kathleen Hepburn van Heemstra, the daughter of a domineering Dutch mother and a ne'er-do-well Hungarian-Irish father. It was a stormy marriage that left a lasting mark on the sensitive girl, and even now Audrey Hepburn can't forget the day when she was 6 and her father walked out of the house.

"I remember my mother's reaction," she says. "You look into your mother's face, and it's covered with tears, and you're terrified. You say to yourself, 'What's going to happen to me?' The ground has gone out from under you.

"I'm not afraid to say that something of that feeling has stayed with me through my own relationships. When I fell in love and married, I lived in constant fear of being left. I was terrified that someone else would take them away from me. I learned that you can't love without the fear of losing."

Her father's disappearance was followed by a series of shattering losses. When Audrey's mother moved the family back to Holland, she discovered that most of her fortune had been frittered away by her husband. Then, when Audrey was a promising 11-year-old ballet student, the Germans invaded the Netherlands. Audrey's half-brother, Ian, was carted off to a concentration camp; an uncle who was active in the resistance was executed by a Nazi firing squad.

"But," she says, "I've always been almost eerily fortunate. I was given an outlook on life by my mother, a lady of very strict Victorian standards. It was frowned upon to bother others with your feelings. It was frowned upon not to think of others first. It was frowned upon not to be disciplined.

"Then, since I was a child, I've believed in prayer. Please don't make this sound pompous, but I have this faith that things somehow work out. During the last winter of the war, we had no food whatsoever, and my aunt said to me, 'Tomorrow we'll have nothing to eat, so the best thing to do is stay in bed and conserve our energy.' That very night, a member of the underground brought us food—flour, jam, oatmeal, cans of butter. You see, I've had black moments, but when I hit rock-bottom, there's always something there for me."

And so, gradually, the pieces of the puzzle can be identified: a shy, introverted child; a practical, disciplined teenager; a fragile, innocent young woman. Possessing a high degree of intelligence, Audrey Hepburn built a career on these foundations, creating a movie image of such elegant perfection that she became every man's dream. Women loved her too, because under all her immaculate style and playfulness they sensed someone needy, a kind of orphan princess. Through 19 Hollywood movies, she always played a woman searching for something.

But what?

"I never in my wildest dreams ever thought that maybe I'd be a great star," she says. "It was a simple need. I had to go to work. I had a mother to take care of. Eventually, I was able to give my mother the life she deserved. I was able to help my father..."

"Your father?" I interrupt. "I thought your father disappeared from your life when you were a child."

Then, slowly and with a great deal of pain, she starts to tell a story—a story I have never heard before: her search for lost love. "I never saw him from the time he left when I was 6," she explains. "I knew he was living in Dublin, but I didn't know how to reach him. At age 30, I had this great need. I found his address through the Red Cross."

I can't resist asking: "But you were a famous movie star by then. Why didn't he make an effort to contact you?"

"It might have happened earlier," she answers, "but maybe he didn't want to see me. His sense of discretion..." She pauses, then adds: "Perhaps I don't want to talk about it."

Now I can see the tears filling her eyes, and she falls silent for a minute or more. I wait until she can resume.

"At some point I wrote my father," she says. "I traveled to Dublin with Mel Ferrer [the actor who was her husband at the time]. My father was living in a tiny apartment, just two rooms, but please don't make it sound as though he was poverty-stricken. He looked the way I remembered him. Older, yes, but much

LOVE TO SEW- But have no time?

You have been sewing for years—for yourself, your family and friends. You love handling the fabric, reveling in color and texture—making something out of nothing. But now, somehow, there doesn't seem to be enough hours in the day to indulge in your favorite hobby.

EXTRA SEWING TIME

Are you a busy woman who loves to sew but never seems to have any time? Now thanks to THE BUSY WOMAN'S SEWING BOOK, you don't have to give up the pleasures and rewards of this relaxing hobby.

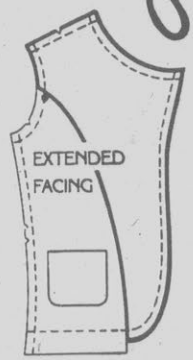

SEEN ON TV

Author Nancy Ziemanhas helped thousands of women with her national TV show, "Sewing with Nancy". She and co-author Robbie Fanning have careers and families. Both love to sew so much, they have devised this simple way to fit it into their lives, and you can too!

THE BUSY WOMAN'S SEWING BOOK creates that "extra" time to sew by teaching you how to sew faster and better. And your clothes will fit, be comfortable, compliment you in the best colors, and cost less than ready-to-wear. And best of all, your sewing time will be more enjoyable and productive too.

"I love THE BUSY WOMAN'S SEWING BOOK. I've been sewing for 44 years and even so, I kept finding such good ideas all the way through."

"It took me a long time to find someone like him, but sometimes it is better late than never. At 18, I wouldn't have appreciated him."

HEPBURN /continued

the same. Slim and tall. He was married to a woman some 30-odd years his junior, almost my age."

And what, I ask, did they talk about after a separation of 24 years?

"I had just made a movie called The Unforgiven with Burt Lancaster, and I fell off a horse during the shooting. My father was a great horseman in his youth, and he said to me, 'Of course you were a fool to ride that gray stallion.' He was cross with me for riding a horse that was going to throw me."

She took care of her father's every need for the next two decades, until the time he died in his 90s. "It helped me to lay the ghost," she says. "I went on suffering as long as I didn't see him."

But, apparently, her aloof father could never truly reciprocate her love, and the ghost she thought had been put to rest continued to haunt her. The 14-year marriage to Mel Ferrer, who had dominated her personal and professional life, broke up in 1968. On the rebound, she married a handsome Italian psychiatrist named Andrea Dotti, another domineering man, whose compulsive womanizing was a public embarrassment until they too were divorced.

But in 1980 she met Robert Wolders. He is a Dutch actor who once was married to the late movie star Merle Oberon and who is eight years younger than Audrey Hepburn. They have never married, but when she introduces Wolders to me, it is obvious from the ease and warmth with which they treat each other that they are very much in love.

So now, an answer to the mystery of Audrey Hepburn. All her life, she has been searching for a man capable of returning her love. And I believe she has found that man in the gentle, decent, psychological father figure of Wolders.

Today, her two children (one by each previous marriage) are grown up, and Audrey Hepburn and Robert Wolders live in a 16th-century farmhouse near Lausanne, Switzerland. He presides over her schedule, makes sure she gets nine to 10 hours of sleep every day and accompanies her wherever she goes, including two recent trips to Ethiopia and Latin America on behalf of UNICEF.

"Robby has no ego, that's for sure," she says. "We love to live the same way—the country life. He's as bananas about our four dogs as I am. We're both Dutch, and that's a big bond. It took me a long time to find someone like him, but sometimes it is better late than never. If I'd met him when I was 18, I wouldn't have appreciated him. I would have thought, 'That's the way everyone is.'

"I still feel I could lose everything at any moment. But the greatest victory has been to be able to live with myself, to accept my shortcomings and those of others. I'm a long way from the human being I'd like to be. But I've decided I'm not so bad after all."

Introducing New Perform.™ The only premium pet food delivered fresh to your door.

HOW GOOD is your pet's food? Super premium brands like Science Diet® and Iams,® available at specialty stores, are good for your pet, but are not always convenient for you. Other brands, while good, don't compare in nutrition.

But new Perform is better overall. Perform is conveniently delivered direct from the manufacturer to you—ensuring maximum freshness and nutrition.

WHY NEW PERFORM IS DELIVERED TO YOU

Other super premium brands like Science Diet and Iams can spend several months in transit from the manufacturer to various distribution centers, then sit on the shelf while nutrition and taste can slowly drain away.

But Perform is shipped direct to your door. You can't buy Perform any other way. That's a revolutionary idea that makes Perform more convenient and fresher. And Carnation guarantees Perform's freshness and nutrition—or your money back.

100% COMPLETE, BALANCED NUTRITION

Perform was developed by The Center for Animal Nutrition, a division of Carnation Company, a leader in pet food research for over 50 years. Perform meets or exceeds requirements set by the National Research Council or Association of American Feed Control Officials for each stage of your pet's life—dog, puppy, cat and kitten.

Every bite of Perform is 100% nutritionally complete to help keep your pet healthy and happy.

100% NATURAL NUTRITION FOR GOOD HEALTH

Perform's basic nutrition comes from pure, natural sources. High quality beef, beef by-products, poultry, fish, dairy products and grains are fortified with extra nutrients to provide the perfect balance of protein, fat, carbohydrates, vitamins and minerals for good health.

PERFORM HELPS PREVENT F.U.S.

Feline Urological Syndrome (F.U.S.) is a common health concern of cat owners. In Perform, magnesium, calcium and phosphorus are carefully balanced to produce a urine acidity that helps prevent the formation of struvite crystals—the cause of many forms of F.U.S. And Perform is naturally low in ash.

Perform also has the proper levels of taurine, an important amino acid that helps control certain feline eye and heart diseases.

HIGH DIGESTIBILITY MEANS MORE USABLE ENERGY

The higher the digestibility of your pet's food, the more nutrients your pet can absorb and use. That's why rice, a highly digestible grain, is the primary grain used in Perform. It's rice that makes Perform as digestible—or more so—than either Science Diet® or Iams.® Your pet can actually eat less of Perform, but get more energy.

THE GREAT TASTING SUPER PREMIUM

Palatability is a major problem in super premium pet foods—especially cat formulas. But in taste tests pets preferred Perform over Science Diet and Iams—sometimes by a ratio of 3 to 1. Pets even preferred high-nutrition Perform over leading premium brands!

BETTER FOR YOUR PET—EASIER FOR YOU

Home delivery means your pet enjoys a fresh, high-nutrition diet and that you never have to make trips to the specialty store to buy Perform. Or carry home bulky bags and heavy cans.

To order Perform, you just call our toll-free number and charge your order to your MasterCard, VISA or American Express. Checks and money orders accepted. UPS will deliver your Perform order in a few days.

We also offer an optional automatic replenishment plan customized to fit the needs of you and your pet. Just tell us where and how often to ship your Perform. With automatic replenishment you never have to worry about running out of pet food. If you need to change your shipment size or address, or wish to cancel, just call.

Our toll-free number is staffed every day by fully trained Perform Specialists. They'll answer any questions you have about Perform and can help you decide how much Perform your pet needs.

100% SATISFACTION GUARANTEED BY CARNATION

Carnation Company guarantees Perform 100%. If you or your pet are not completely satisfied, we will replace the product or refund your money.

A TRAP CAN CATCH MORE THAN A MOUSE.

Lyme-disease tick

Mice can carry ticks that carry disease. Even dead mice.

When you pick up a trap, wherever it's been set, you may be picking up more than a dead mouse. There may also be disease-carrying ticks. And fleas. And mites. These parasites can carry serious diseases such as Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever, Colorado Tick Fever, Tularemia, Typhus.

Recently, you may have read about Lyme-disease ticks carried by the white-footed field mouse. People bitten by the Lyme-disease tick can suffer temporary paralysis of the facial nerves, pain in the joints, and even severe neurological problems similar to multiple sclerosis.

So if you're a homeowner, be careful in your garage or in any barns or outbuildings you may have. While the mouse that carries Lyme-disease ticks has not been shown to enter homes, the ordinary mice found indoors can carry ticks that also may be as threatening.

Why use traps?

If a trap happens to catch a mouse, the only way for you to dispose of it is to go near it. And that may increase your risk of being exposed to ticks, fleas or mites that can remain alive—even on a dead mouse! Why take chances?

With d-CON bait products, you never go near a mouse.

If you have mice in your home, you'll feel more secure using d-CON bait products instead of traps.

All you do is set out the bait. Mice eat it, then leave and go off to die, without you ever having to touch them. Without you ever having to go near them. Or the ticks they can carry.

d-CON makes Mouse Prufe II—which can kill mice in just one feeding. d-CON also makes Ready Mixed and Pellets, which kill both mice and rats.

d-CON helps you in other ways.

We at d-CON understand that you might want more information about how to get rid of mice. Please write us at: d-CON, P.O. Box 5160-I, Westbury, NY 11592. We'll be happy to send you our brochure.

Ask Marilyn

BY MARILYN VOS SAVANT

If a nationwide baby-food company offers a prize to the woman who has the first baby of the year, which of the following two women would win: one from New York City who provides proof of birth at 12:02 a.m. on Jan. 1, or one from Los Angeles who submits proof of birth at 12:01 a.m. on the same date?

—Dean F.V. DuVall, Williamston, Mich.

I'd give the prize to the woman in Los Angeles, even though the baby in New York was born some three hours earlier, because not mentioning national standard implies that all time zones are in the running according to local standards, and that was undoubtedly the intention of the sponsors of the contest.

To make the contest more fair, however, I would begin the race for everyone at the same time—when the new year officially begins on earth in Greenwich, England, the home of Universal Time, used in astronomy and other sciences. That worldwide event would occur in New York at 7 p.m. on Dec. 31 and in Los Angeles at 4 p.m. on that same day. That way, it would be a real nationwide race, with all time zones on the starting blocks simultaneously.

What is the best answer to give when an interviewer asks, "Why do you want this job?"

—Anthony Grimes, Norfolk, Va.

For a beginning job, you might tell the interviewer that you actually enjoy doing that sort of work—making it likely that you will be a very good employee in many ways, from showing up on time to working with enthusiasm. But only say this if it's true. If it isn't, do both yourself and the interviewer a favor and look instead for a job that you will like.

If you have a question for Marilyn vos Savant, who is listed in the "Guinness Book of World Records" under "Highest IQ," send it to: "Ask Marilyn," PARADE, 750 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Because of volume of mail, personal replies are not possible.

BRIGHT IDEAS®

BY JANE CIABATTARI

Find Out What Triggers Your Headaches

FOR YEARS, I WAS AMONG America's 18 million migraine sufferers. Then I discovered that certain foods could trigger migraines. By avoiding ripened cheese, red wine and chocolate and cutting back on caffeine, I virtually eliminated migraines from my life.

Understanding why headaches occur often can be a big step toward preventing them. Stress was the most common precipitating factor mentioned by migraine sufferers surveyed recently by the National Headache Foundation. Another factor, according to Dr. Seymour Diamond, executive director of the foundation: overworking, followed by excessive sleep. (This can include sleeping late on Saturday mornings, leading to weekend headaches.)

Among other common migraine triggers:

- Bright lights, including flashbulbs, or the nuances of TV or movies. (Tinted glasses can help, says Dr. Diamond.)
- High blood pressure and cardiac medicines in some cases.
- The odor of perfume, flowers, cigars or natural gas.
- Fluctuating hormone levels during menstruation and ovulation.
- Food additives, such as MSG, and preservatives in smoked and processed meats.

Anyone who suffers from migraines or other types of headaches on a regular basis should consult a physician. There are medications that can forestall attacks as they begin to occur or prevent them altogether.

We'd like to hear from you. Send your suggestions to "Bright Ideas," PARADE, 750 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017.

Parade's All-America High School

BOYS BASKETBALL TEAM

KENNY ANDERSON, A SIX-foot-2 star shooter for Archbishop Molloy in Queens, N.Y., has been named Player of the Year on PARADE's All-America High School Boys Basketball Team. Anderson, who averaged 32 points a game this season, hit an awesome 77 percent of his shots from the field. He scored a sizzling 56 points in one contest this year, to set a school record. Add to that an average of eight assists, nine rebounds and six steals each game. Anderson also set a New York state scoring record over his four-year career, surpassing the previous mark of 2391 points. He is one of a select group of players—among them the NBA stars Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Patrick Ewing—to have been named PARADE all-Americans three years in a row.

Anderson heads the list of 40 players from 22 states selected by college coaches and recruiters for the 32nd annual PARADE team. New York is at the top of the list with six players on the squad, followed by Illinois with five, California with four, and Kentucky and Tennessee with three each.

"He's the most complete backcourt player in the high school ranks in this country today," says Anderson's coach, Jack Curran. "He's considered by most people to be the best backcourt performer in New York basketball history. He has terrific skills and is a good plugger scholastically as well as on the floor."

Anderson is headed for Georgia Tech next season. "People just don't know what a nice youngster this fellow is," says the Georgia Tech coach, Bobby Cremins. "He is one of the finest performers I've ever seen on the court."

Second in the voting was 6-foot-9 Doug Edwards of Miami Senior High. Edwards averaged 26 points a game, with 12 rebounds and four assists. He had two 40-point games. "He is probably the best high school player ever in the state of Florida," says his coach, Marcos Rodriguez. "He is a multitalented kid who can do it all." Edwards was uncommitted at press time.

Although only a junior, 6-foot-6 Darrin Hancock of Griffin High in Griffin, Ga., came in third in the voting. He's a team player, notes his coach, James Martin, who adds: "He can dunk and shoot the lights out on the court. He knows the game very well and this year had 21 points, 10 rebounds, three blocked shots and four steals each time out."

Jim Jackson, 6 feet 6, of Macomber-Whitney in Toledo, Ohio, is a repeater from last year's squad. "He's a high school coach's dream," says his coach, Bart Schroeder. "He's a talented youngster, and his potential has not been fully reached." Jackson averaged 31 points, eight rebounds and five assists this season. He's committed to Ohio State.

Another standout is Shaquille O'Neal of Robert G. Cole in San Antonio. The 7-footer, committed to Louisiana State at press time, has averaged 30 points, 26 rebounds and nine blocked shots each game. "Shaquille is a good all-around player," says David Madura, his coach, "and he's improving with age."

Also a top player is Bobby Hurley of St. Anthony in Jersey City, N.J., who made the team last year. He's one reason why St. Anthony was rated among the top five teams in the country, all season long. He's committed to Duke.

Other repeaters from last year's squad, in addition to Anderson, Jackson and Hurley, are: Arron Bain, Jamal Faulkner, Damon Bailey, Zan Mason, Conrad McRae and Lee Mayberry.

At press time, the college commitments made by our all-Americans included: Darryl Barnes and Malcolm Mackey, Georgia Tech; Bill McCaffrey, Duke; Calvin Byrd and Lloyd Mumford, Villanova; Jeff Webster and Orlando Lightfoot, Oklahoma; Greg Graham and Chris Reynolds, Indiana; Zan Mason and Mitchell Butler, UCLA; Allan Houston, Louisville; Matt Wenstrom, North Carolina; Michael Tate, Maryland; Jamal Faulkner, Pittsburgh; Travis Ford, Missouri; Conrad McRae, Syracuse; Shaun Golden, Georgia; Deryl Cunningham, DePaul; Lee Mayberry, Wyoming; James Robinson, Alabama; and Tony Tolbert, Michigan.

Photos of the 10 players on our first team will be displayed for a year, beginning in July, at the Basketball Hall of Fame in Springfield, Mass.

IF YOU WORK WITH WOOD...

Don't whittle, saw, carve, drill, hammer, chisel or sand another piece of wood until you consult your "bible" first!

THE WOODWORKER'S BIBLE

by Percy W. Blandford

ONLY $5.98!

Whether you're a beginner to woodworking or an experienced craftsman, this is one book that belongs above your workbench. Here, in one copiously illustrated volume is everything you need to know about the craft of working with wood.

This definitive 416-page manual provides detailed instructions for building dozens of projects both inside the home and out-of-doors. You not only get the "how tos" for specific woodworking projects—from raw material to finished masterpiece—but you're also treated to complete information on:

Fashioning various kinds of wood joints—from edged and lapped joints to mortise-and-tenon joints and other variations.

Carving and whittling wood—including techniques for carving figures in relief, smooth carving, wood sculpture, chip carving and edge decoration.

Turning wood on a lathe. Here's how to choose the right chisels, gouges and other equipment you'll need... plus techniques for turning between centers, faceplate turning, hollowing, unequal turning, laminating and more.

But that's not all. You also get valuable information on picture-framing... selecting wood fasteners (nails, screws and glues)... and constructing weather-resistant exterior woodwork such as fences, gates and decks. There's even an important chapter on finishing wood that explains how to choose and then apply the proper finish to ensure long life for all your woodworking projects.

The Woodworker's Bible is truly the most comprehensive and indispensable guide to the craft of working with wood. Originally published at $12.95, this classic guide is now available from PCB for only $5.98. Order your copy today while supplies last. Full money-back guarantee if not delighted.

LOWAS 33¢ ea. in qty.

All-Male Hybrid Asparagus Never Goes to Seed...Puts All Its Energy Into Growing Colossal, Succulent Spears

(Asparagus Officinales L)

Farmers in some California communities have a little trick to growing extra-large spears of asparagus that fetched top prices. They would go down their rows and remove all the female plants — those that produce red berries — leaving only the males to produce stalks. Since the males never "go to seed", they put all their energy into growing fat, succulent spears.

Plant scientists took this idea a little further and produced a variety of asparagus that would only grow males, also making it a HYBRID so that the productivity of the males could be increased even more. We call our variety "Ben Franklin" in honor of the energetic American Patriot.

More Than Doubles Your Yield

We send you plants — not seeds or roots. These plants are already green and leafy with healthy root systems, ready to plant into garden soil. The resulting yields of asparagus are more than two times that of regular asparagus. A higher percentage of thick spears is assured, many as thick or thicker than a man's thumb. What's more, these hybrids have inbred disease resistance and are true perennials coming up year after year with no replanting. They are hardy in subzero weather and tolerate poor soil.

First Public Offering

We have secured almost all the available supplies of "Ben Franklin" and this is the first public offering. Until now only a few professional growers and university researchers have had access to them.

Be one of the first to grow these succulent giants. You can grow as few as six plants — or plant a whole patch of 100 plants. Supplies are limited, so be sure to send your order in today.

Male

Female

Male asparagus grow top quality flavorful spears, thick and succulent. Female has thin, seed bearing stems. Ben Franklin is a hybrid with all male stems, and gives you more than twice the yield.

He Loves His Wife, But...

Steve Schapiro

John Ritter and friends in Skin Deep

Early in the sex farce Skin Deep, the wife and mistress of the hero, a writer (John Ritter), both catch him with the mistress's hairdresser. It's the genius of director Blake Edwards (also responsible for 10) to make a movie about an alcoholic, insatiable womanizer funny, instead of as unattractive as that scene sounds. The story, says Edwards (who is married to actress Julie Andrews and admits to his own struggles with a womanizing nature), is about the "terrible difficulty of changing one's basic character." The hero loves his wife but has a "real illness" he has to learn to control. What would keep a good, very special woman with a guy who is all that trouble? Says Edwards: "You should be asking my wife." 20th Century-Fox.

• And check out Chances Are, a romantic comedy by the director of Dirty Dancing that's clearly in the Shirley MacLaine school of movie-making: It's about a 22-year-old aspiring reporter (Robert Downey Jr.) who finds out that his girlfriend's mother (Cybill Shepherd) is his beloved wife from a previous life. Wasn't there a song that went, "I'm my own grandpa"? Tri-Star.

CORN CHIPS AND KISSES

The most corn chips are sold in Dallas, chocolate kisses in New York and prune juice in Miami, says Self, whose 10th-anniversary issue tells all about who snacks on what where—and who ends up the fattest: Southerners. Westerners are the thinnest. Overall, 27% of American women and 24% of American men over 20 are substantially overweight and have been getting fatter every year since the 1960s, says Self, quoting the National Center for Health Statistics. Intriguingly, although the heaviest women are in the lowest economic bracket, the poorest men tend to be slightly thinner than middle-class men. The skinniest of all, though, are rich men. Do they all have personal trainers or what? In the March issue.

Sing Along With Judy

Looking just fantastic with her great mane of blond hair flowing over a skinny black sequined pants suit, Judy Collins and some very talented friends—Bobby McFerrin, Val Diamond, Ronnie Gilbert and others—lead 3000 San Franciscans in a grand community sing-along of favorites like "Both Sides Now," "Michael, Row the Boat Ashore," "Amazing Grace," the Mickey Mouse Club theme song and more in a warm and wonderful show: Sing Out America! With Judy Collins. PBS.

• With clips from 34 movies that span 48 years, and the usual interviews with friends and colleagues and the man himself, John Wayne Standing Tall gives a first-rate look at the legendary actor's development from a callow young leading man to a superstar whose roles came to personify the rugged strength and character of the American West. When A Life Is In Your Hands

Since the days of Karen Ann Quinlan, technology has continued to perfect the art of keeping the ill "alive." The call for euthanasia, or mercy killing, has grown stronger as well.

Hank Morgan

AP/Wide World

UPI/Bettmann

The Miami Herald

Karen Ann Quinlan: Her parents were allowed to free her from a respirator like the one shown here, but she lived 10 years in a coma. Roswell Gilbert (c) is serving life for wife's mercy killing. Dr. Peter Rosier admitted giving wife overdose but was acquitted.

YOU ARE IN A hospital. The nurse checks carefully and adjusts your respirator tube. You hear the incessant beep, beep of a heart monitor. You wonder: "Is it mine?" You try to speak. You cannot. Nor can you move your arms or legs. Hour after hour, day after day, you stare at the ceiling. And you endure.

Are you dying? Probably not. But you may wish you were, or wish that someone would "pull the plug" and grant you a merciful, easy death: euthanasia.

Physicians, patients, clergymen and philosophers told us their views on this issue as it confronts people today. Here is a look at many sides of euthanasia and life-sustaining high-tech medicine.

Chances are, if you fall deathly ill, modern science and the machines surrounding your hospital bed will keep you alive. In time you will mend, leave the hospital and resume your normal life. But the man in the bed next to you is not so lucky. He will not recover, but he will endure, because those same machines can sustain his life-functions indefinitely.

Doctors today are being asked—even begged—to turn off those life-sustaining machines. And dealing with such requests is not easy. Physicians are faced with legal and ethical decisions and with questions to which there are no simple "right" or "wrong" answers.

Doctors take an oath—the Hippocratic oath—and swear to protect life. They are professionally and morally bound to do so. For a physician to act to end a life is morally and ethically questionable at the very least. And yet Dr. James H. Sammons, executive vice president of the American Medical Association, says, "We must give those patients a way out. There comes the time that the physician must step back and, at the patient's or the family's request, allow the patient to die with dignity."

Danny Delio of Little Neck, N.Y., finally died with dignity after a year-long court battle waged by his persevering wife, Julie. At 33, Danny had earned a Ph.D. in exercise physiology and was a marathon runner. And then he emerged from minor surgery permanently unconscious. Doctors put a feeding tube through his nose and down into his stomach, allowing him to "live."

"It wasn't life," says Julie Delio. "Danny's father had been in a coma, and doctors tried to revive him until he died. That made a mark on Danny, and he made me promise never to let him exist even one day in a vegetative state."

She won her court case and had Danny admitted to another hospital, where he was not fed through a tube. He died 10 days later. Julie Delio says, "All that happened here is that a man who was already dead was allowed to die."

In this country, nearly all of us agree that active euthanasia is morally wrong. It almost always is illegal. It is illegal, for example, to shoot and kill your incurably sick wife. Roswell Gilbert did so in Florida in 1985, and he is serving a life sentence in prison. It is illegal to give a suffering person a lethal dose of a drug like morphine. And it is illegal to do anything to hasten or to bring about a person's demise (by, for instance, leaving a gun or a jar of poison at the bedside).

Dr. Peter Rosier, a Florida pathologist, stood by as his wife, Patricia, incurably ill with cancer, took 20 sleeping pills in January 1986. When the pills failed, Rosier gave her a massive shot of morphine. When that also failed, Mrs. Rosier's stepfather, Vincent Delman, smothered her. Prosecutors gave Delman immunity from trial before they knew what he had done. Dr. Rosier, tried before a jury, was acquitted.

For doctors, the issue of helping a patient to die cuts deep. Yet distraught patients and their families do ask doctors to help end suffering. Respondents to a survey by the Hemlock Society, which advocates assisted suicide for the terminally ill, included 79 California doctors who admitted taking the lives of patients who had asked to die. Derek Humphry founded the society after he supplied his cancer-ridden wife with lethal drugs. She later committed suicide, dying in his arms. The First Amendment, which guarantees freedom of speech and the press, also protects the society's right to hand out data on the type and quantity of drugs and where to get them.

"Many doctors interpret the Hippocratic oath to mean that if you let the patient die in a disgusting manner or in agony, that is doing harm," Humphry says. The Hemlock Society sponsored a referendum to allow active euthanasia in California, but too few signed the petition to get it on the ballot last fall.

Says Arthur Caplan, a philosopher and director of the Center for Biomedical Ethics at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis: "I don't think doctors should kill. Active euthanasia is easy to abuse and misuse. It sows distrust between doctor and patient." Such distrust is evident in Holland, according to an article by Richard Fenigsen, a Dutch heart doctor. Dr. Fenigsen writes that under new lenient attitudes by the courts, Dutch general practitioners annually kill at least 5000 patients who allegedly desire voluntary active euthanasia. He adds that involuntary active euthanasia cases are growing in Holland. In these cases, patients don't want to die, but doctors kill them "for their own good" (perhaps they are suffering) or "for the good of society" (the patients are too expensive to maintain). Essentially, Fenigsen says, euthanasia has got out of hand in Holland.

The controversy deepens over passive euthanasia. That's when the doctor withdraws treatment. Patients have the right to refuse medical treatment of any kind, even if refusal means that life will soon end. That is a right by common law and by nearly every religion's teaching. In most states, your family can exercise your right of medical refusal if you are unable. The late Karen Ann Quinlan, a young New Jersey woman who sank into a coma after mixing tranquilizers and alcohol, continued to breathe unaided for nine years after her parents had gained permission to shut off her respirator.

In New York, doctors and the courts may choose to honor a patient's wishes to avoid life-sustaining methods. However, if a patient falls unconscious before declaring those wishes, doctors are at risk if they don't continue treatment till death occurs.

In 39 states, legislation has been passed giving a "living will" status as a legal document. It specifies your wishes, should you become unable to decide or to tell others what you want done. In one form of such a will, you can ask that, facing little hope of recovery, you be allowed to die and not be kept alive by medications, artificial means or "heroic measures."

Arthur Caplan cites these problems with living wills: 1) They may not exactly fit the situation when the time comes. 2) The family and the doctor may not know about your will. 3) In many instances, family members may disregard your will and order the doctor to follow their wishes rather than yours.

The New York State Legislature will be asked by the New York Task Force on Life and the Law to consider legislation that permits a person to appoint a health agent to make all decisions about his medical treatment in the event he cannot. Caplan defines medical treatment—including tube-feeding—as something only a doctor, nurse or licensed technician can do for you.

Says J. Robert Nelson, a Methodist minister and director of the Institute of Religion at the Texas Medical Center in Houston: "I think the medical and moral duty of all of us is to keep the patient comfortable until death." Father Richard McCormick, professor of theology at the University of Notre Dame in South Bend, Ind., agrees and adds: "Given a reasonably certain diagnosis that the person won't return to a cognitive state, I believe that artificial nutrition can be withheld, because the patient cannot get any benefit."

Doctors and laymen alike have debated the definitions of "life" and "death." They often argue about such points as these: When is a patient dead? Can a particular comatose patient recover? In most states, doctors declare a person dead if his heart and breathing have stopped. If the heart continues to beat but the patient can breathe only with the aid of a machine and his brain is dead, the person usually is legally dead.

Dr. Matthew E. Fink heads the neurological intensive-care unit at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center in New York City. "The most truly frightening thing," he says, "is that doctors and nurses make many mistakes about the conditions of their patients. A patient may be in a paralytic state and not in a coma."

Dr. Fink tells of an 18-year-old who was hospitalized with a severely injured head and declared comatose after six weeks. After examinating him, however, Fink found that the patient was wide awake but able to move only his eyelids.

"I told him to blink once for 'yes,' twice for 'no,'" Fink says, "and I asked him if his name were Bob. He blinked 'no.' When I gave him his true name, he blinked 'yes.' He was alive. He was thinking. He recovered in a year."

A person in a coma is not responsive and often cannot breathe unaided. Dr. Fink says that in 90 percent of such cases, he can predict whether the patient will live or die or will convert to a vegetative state. In a vegetative state, many reflexes —such as coughing, blinking and breathing—return, but the patient does not respond to outside stimuli. After 30 days, Fink says, he is almost certain that a coma victim will never wake. If, in a rare case, a victim does regain consciousness after six months or so, Fink asserts that he or she probably was not comatose. To avoid misdiagnosing a condition and then withholding treatment from someone who otherwise might recover, he recommends that the patient be examined by an experienced neurologist at a large, well-equipped medical center.

Though there are drugs to ease those with incurable and painful diseases, many Americans often opt for passive euthanasia (ending treatment). That choice is open only to those who are competent and able to state their wishes.

Laws governing the enforcement of patients' living wills vary from state to state, and the acceptance of such wills varies from hospital to hospital and physician to physician.

IN STEP WITH:® John Shea

BY JAMES BRADY

Shea says his early success in the movie Missing was a mixed blessing: "It set such high standards that nothing after that was good enough."

JOHN SHEA PLAYED FOOTBALL WITH Bryant Gumbel at Bates College up in Maine. He attended Yale drama school with Sigourney Weaver. He recently made a movie with Kelly McGillis in Israel, where, he said, you'd see a young woman sunbathing on a blanket with her transistor radio and an Uzi submachine gun close at hand. And he co-starred with Jack Lemmon and Sissy Spacek in a powerful movie called Missing.

Shea and I got together for coffee to talk about all that and about his current off-Broadway play and a new TV movie called Magic Moments, coming up on Showtime this month, in which Shea plays a magician. It was cold outside and trying to snow, and John said, "This is when I like New York best." He was wearing a British motorcycle officer's long leather coat and toting a small rucksack. And he likes the cold.

"I was born in a skiers' hospital in North Conway, N.H.," he said. "I think they got a skier with a broken leg out of bed to make room for my mother."

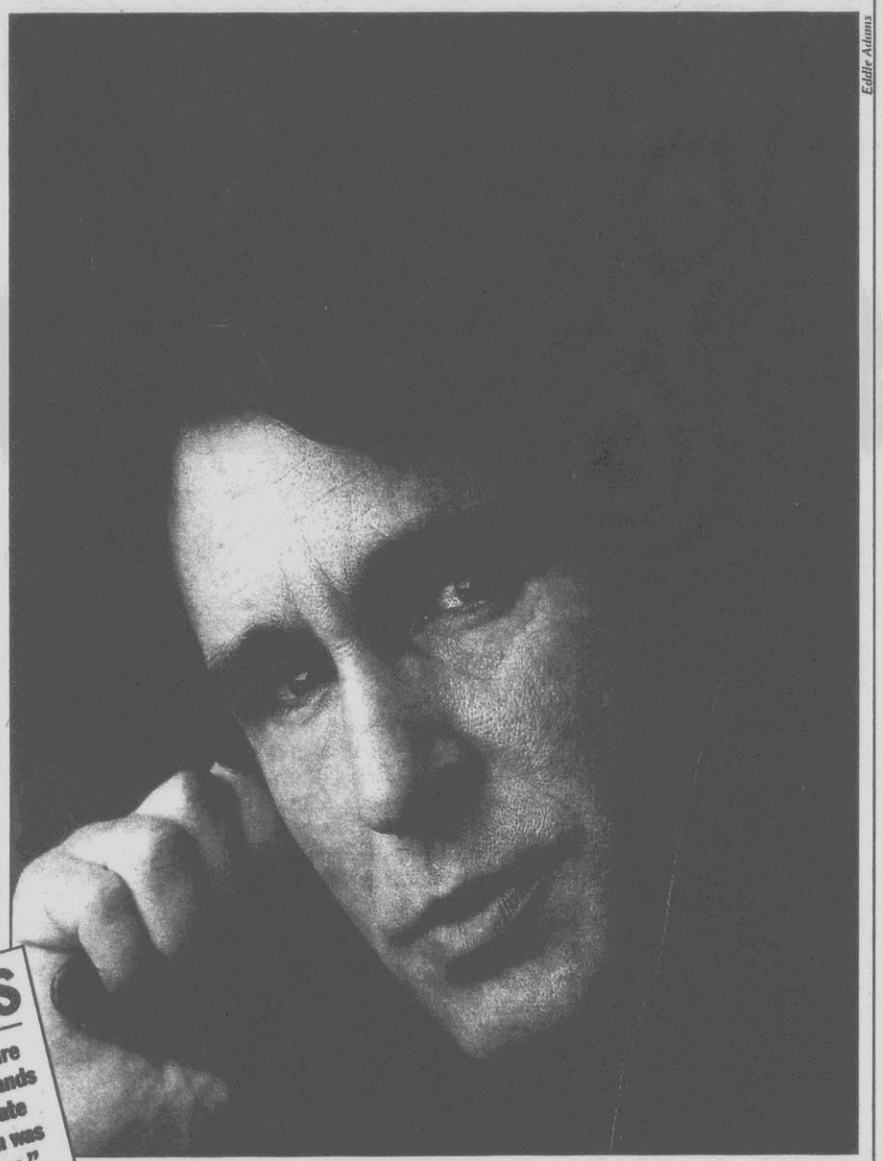

Shea and his wife, Laura, a professional photographer, live in New York now with their son, Jake. The actor was waiting, with some anxiety, for the reviews of his play, a bleak Ibsen drama called Rosmersholm. "Before an opening," he said, "actors should post small-craft warnings. If you take the critics too seriously, they can kill you."

Shea won an Emmy Award last year for his role in the TV movie Baby M, but his career really got its big boost with Missing. That success was something of a mixed blessing. "It set such high standards that nothing after that was good enough," he told me. "I turned down some good things. Maybe I made mistakes."

But they weren't all mistakes. He made A New Life, working with Alan Alda and Ann-Margret; starred in a play that ran almost two years off-Broadway, The Dining Room; and was nominated for a Drama Desk Award as best actor for American Days. Then he and Linda Hunt did a play called End of the World, and it nearly was. "Before that, I was batting a thousand," he said, "and then the pitcher threw a change-up. Linda and I were alone out there, like soldiers under fire."

Shea is not yet the huge star he may one day become. But he is a no-nonsense, thoughtful sort of guy. When I left him, he was going to finish his coffee and jot down a few thoughts on paper, a few notes. He had come uptown on the subway to meet me—not playing movie star, just keeping an appointment. Oh, yes, the next day his play was reviewed in the papers. The New York Times said Shea gave his character a "steely ..resilience within his rectitude."

BORN: April 14, 1949, in North Conway, N.H.
PERSONAL: Married photographer Laura Wilson Pettibone in 1971; one son.
STAGE: Includes Yentl, 1975; Romeo and Juliet, 1977; The Sorrows of Stephen, 1979; American Days, 1981; The Dining Room, 1982; End of the World, 1984; The Normal Heart, 1986; Rosmersholm, 1988.
FILMS: Include Missing, 1982; A New Life, 1988.

BRADY'S BITS

I know that after some movies are wrapped up, the actors shake hands and retreat into their own private worlds. I asked if Jack Lemmon was like that. "He never forgets you," John said. "Even though each of us played his role solo—I was the missing son, he was the searching father—Jack wanted to spend time with me, so he'd know the kind of young man he was looking for. He became my theatrical godfather. He has actors he worked with to dinner at his house. It's like an extended family. Jack loves poker, always with fresh cards and chips. He lays them down and says, 'Boys, let's play.'"

In his new TV movie, "Magic Moments," John Shea plays a magician. He studied for weeks with a professional. "Show me," I said. Shea promptly pulled out a coin and made it disappear!

Hollywood's Best Year

Should you own a VCR and find that you've run out of ideas on films to rent, you might take a chance on any Hollywood-made motion picture released in 1939. That was, in our opinion, the most golden year of Hollywood's fabulous golden age—a year which produced more classics, more genuinely entertaining "good pictures" and more truly memorable performances than any other year in the history of moviemaking.

Herewith a list of 31 films released in 1939. Ten were so good, they were nominated for a "best picture" Oscar. They constitute the first 10 on our list:

Gone With the Wind
Goodbye, Mr. Chips
Love Affair
Mr. Smith Goes to Washington
Ninotchka
Dark Victory
Of Mice and Men
Stagecoach
The Wizard of Oz
Wuthering Heights

Photofest

Gable and Leigh in GWTW, best of best in '39 Oscar race

• Other 1939 classics:

Juarez
The Old Maid
Gunga Din
Idiot's Delight
Beau Geste
The Rains Came
Golden Boy
The Women
Intermezzo
The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex
The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle
Made for Each Other
The Hunchback of Notre Dame
The Great Victor Herbert
Drums Along the Mohawk
When Tomorrow Comes
Gulliver's Travels
Babes in Arms

Marilyn and Dan Quayle, whom some have compared to Redford and Tomlin (r)

Look-Alikes

Last summer, when George Bush pulled a sleeper and selected Sen. Dan Quayle as his running mate, surprised Republicans said it was because Quayle resembled screen-star Robert Redford. That resemblance, they predicted, would attract the women's vote. It was nonsense, of course.

Following the inauguration on Jan. 20, however, when Dan and Marilyn Quayle made the rounds of a dozen Washington balls, many of the celebrants, studying the facial features of the Vice President's wife, remarked that Marilyn Quayle was a dead ringer for the actress-comedienne Lily Tomlin. That, too, is nonsense—except Marilyn Quayle looks more like Lily Tomlin than her husband does Robert Redford...or is our eyesight clouding?

High-Flying Air Fares

In 1981, the price of an unrestricted coach ticket on the Los Angeles-to-San Francisco air corridor was a reasonable $36. Planes departed on the hour at comfortable and competitive intervals. Flights took about 50 minutes and were a breeze. It ain't like that anymore, Charlie.

As we go to press, the unrestricted coach fare between the two California cities is $148 one-way and $296 round-trip. And should you care to splurge and fly first-class, the price each way is $222. Of course, various discount fares are available, but these are encumbered with all sorts of restrictions and oddball schedules. Continental Airlines, for example, offers one flight a day between Los Angeles and San Francisco. It originates in Newark, N.J., then makes stops in Houston, Guatemala City and San Salvador before departing from Los Angeles at 1:05 a.m.

In any case, for the business traveler who requires flexibility in his transportation, the Los Angeles-San Francisco air run has become one of the most expensive in the U.S., at least at this writing. For latest and lowest fares, consult your travel agent.

When They Were College Boys

Like many universities, Princeton requires its candidates for a Bachelor of Arts degree to write a senior thesis reflecting independent study. These are filed in the library and consulted from to time by researchers, scholars, biographers and even, we suppose, the CIA and FBI.

Recently Harold T. Shapiro, the school's president, called attention to the papers penned by prominent Princeton graduates in the days when they weren't quite so prominent. For example, consumer advocate Ralph Nader, Class of '55, wrote one titled "Lebanese Agriculture." Paul Volcker, '49, former chairman of the Federal Reserve Board who now teaches at Princeton, devoted his thesis to "The Problems of Federal Reserve Policy Since World War II," in which he proposed that the Federal Reserve Board be taken over by the Treasury Department. George Shultz, '42, who said farewell to his post as Secretary of State in January, titled his "The Agricultural Program of the Tennessee Valley Authority." And James Baker, '52, who succeeded Shultz, wrote his on the post-World War II conflicts between Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Labor Secretary Aneurin Bevan of Britain's Labor Party.

Just look at what's happened to the prices on videocassettes! Contemporary hits like Dirty Dancing, Fatal Attraction and The Untouchables have been reduced from $79.95 to as low as $19.95! Classic favorites like The Ten Commandments have come down from $79.95 to only $29.95! And some recent hits like Good Morning, Vietnam and E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial have been released for as little as $24.95! So it's become easier than ever to build a library of your favorite movies–at truly affordable prices!

And the most economical way to start your movie collection, or add to it, is by joining the CBS Video Club. As a new member, you may have any 6 of the movies offered here–all 6 for just 89¢ each (plus shipping and handling). And you can even save up to $140 on two more movies (see Advance Selections box in coupon).

There's no membership fee for joining, nor do you have to buy a lot of movies. Just six more within the next three years. And you'll have no problem in finding six movies you want, because our library holds over 2,500 titles: from the very newest releases to classical favorites. Our regular Club prices currently range from $79.95 to $29.95, plus shipping and handling; and we also offer a selection of lower-priced videocassettes, down to $14.95. Your only obligation is to buy six movies within the next three years, for as little as $29.95 each–and you may cancel membership anytime after doing so.

How the Club operates: about every four weeks (up to 13 times a year) we send you our CBS Video Club Magazine, reviewing our Director's Selection, plus many alternate movies. And up to four times a year, you may also receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off regular Club prices, for a total of up to 17 buying opportunities.

Choose only the movies you want: if you want the Director's Selection, don't do a thing–it'll arrive automatically. If you'd prefer an alternate movie, or none at all, just mail the card always provided by the date specified.

You'll always have two full weeks to decide. (If you ever receive a tape before having had two weeks to decide, just send it back at our expense.)

Half-Price Bonus Plan: after fulfilling your membership obligation, you'll automatically become eligible for our Half-Price Bonus Plan. With each movie you buy at regular Club prices, the plan currently allows you to take another movie of equal value or less at 50% off.

10-Day Risk-Free Trial: join today and we'll send your introductory movies, along with more details on how the Club works. If not satisifed, return everything within 10 days for a full, prompt refund and no further obligation. Act now!

Cover Story....

'Day One' Airs On CBS, March 5

By Lynn Hoogenboom

From 1943 to 1945, as World War II raged, another battle was taking place. It was a battle that was not reported on the front pages, but the consequences of which would alter the shape of history. The battle wasn't fought on the beaches of Normandy or the slopes of Iwo Jima, but in the New Mexico desert and the power corridors of Washington. That conflict is at the heart of "Day One," a three-hour drama (CBS, March 5) that traces the moral and ideological battle between the American military and the scientists concerning how to develop and use the atomic bomb.

Military officers tended to assume that weapons were produced for one reason only — to be used. The scientists, on the other hand, frequently held strong idealistic views about the role that the bomb could play in the post-war world. "Day One" offers up such historical personages as Harry Truman (Richard Dysart), Gen. George Marshall (Hal Holbrook) and physicist J. Robert Oppenheimer (David Strathairn) as they wrestle with one of history's most crucial dilemmas.

The key players in this drama were the scientists who first set the project in motion. Many were refugees from Hitler's Germany. They knew that Hitler had the capability of producing an atomic bomb and they were terrified by what he might do if he became the sole possessor of such a weapon. For years, however, their warnings were shrugged off by both the British and the U.S. military. The unlikely hero of this group was Dr. Leo Szilard, a Hungarian-born physicist.

"The scientists always figured it was their bomb," explains Michael Tucker ("L.A. Law"), who plays Szilard. "My character tried to get the military involved in this for five years, and they pooh-poohed it. They wanted nothing to do with it. Then suddenly they took it over as if it was their idea. They shunted the scientists aside. Szilard almost singlehandedly resisted them."

Many of the scientists argued that the United States ought to share the nuclear technology with the Soviet Union (then an ally in the war against the Axis powers) and that both nations should useit to ensure peace after the war. Such a position was anathema to the military, which tended to see all other nations as potential future enemies. These issues are even more relevant today, one reason why the story is a natural for dramatization.

Szilard's advice was ignored. The result, says Tucker, is obvious. "The stockpiling of nuclear weapons is a disaster," he says. "It's a waste economically, it's a tremendous threat to the world, and there's now a threat of a terrorist nation using them. What we discovered was a force to end war, and we didn't quite use it that way."

In the end, of course, the military point of view won out. President Truman's decision to bomb Japan would become one of the most hotly debated issues of the 20th century. In fact, the one place where the movie falters is in its portrayal of the policy makers who were responsible for making this final decision. Truman and his Secretary of State James Byrnes (Hume Cronyn) are portrayed as self-important yahoos. It's a pity that a movie that manages to combine fair and balanced portraits of such divergent personalities as Gen. Leslie Groves, the Manhattan Project's security-conscious military administrator (played by Brian Dennehy); Oppenheimer, its scientific director, who found himself torn between the demands of the military and those of his fellow scientists; and Szilard, who doggedly opposed the bomb's use, couldn't give us more of a notion of what motivated Truman and Byrnes.

Michele Will Tell

By Michele Marks

Dear Michele: Could you please provide the history behind the song "You Were Always On My Mind"? I bet my husband a dinner out that Elvis Presley made the song popular! — ELIZABETH THROCKMORTON, BURLINGTON, N.J.

According to Si Siman, former co-publisher of the song, the idea for the song came from Wayne Carson Head, who wrote the song in a Memphis motel room with fellow songwriters Mark James and Johnny Christopher. Presley released the first version of the song in 1973. It was released about the time of Presley's split from his wife Priscilla, and although there is some speculation he choseto record it because of its lyrics and message, this cannot be verified. Writer Wayne Carson Head was the second artist to record the song, but his version was never released. In 1982, Willie Nelson had the biggest hit version.

Dear Michele: What is sportscaster Warner Wolf doing now? — MR. & MRS. NOEL G. SUTTER, FORT PIERCE, FLA.

Wolf is currently the sports reporter for WCBS-TV, the CBS affiliate in New York. Last season he made a cameo appearance on an episode of "The Equalizer," which is filmed in New York.

Dear Michele: My question concerns Edward James Olmos of "Miami Vice" and the recent movie, "Stand and Deliver." I bet my sister that he also appeared in the movie "Zoot Suit." Please confirm, and also tell us where he was born. — ESTHER AVILA, COVINA, CALIF.

Olmos was born Feb. 24, 1947, in East Los Angeles, Calif. His first professional role came in the 1978 play "Zoot Suit," which earned him a Tony nomination. He later appeared in the 1981 movie version of the play.

Dear Michele: I'd like to know if Stephen Collins of "Tattinger's" played Nancy's husband on the series "Nancy"? — NANCY ZACCARO, YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO

Renne Jarrett starred as attractive young Nancy Smith, daughter of the president of the United States, in this 1970 sitcom. The object of her affections was veterinarian Adam Hudson, portrayed by John Fink. They were married on the episode that aired Nov. 5, 1970.

Dear Michele: Two generations of females in our family would love some info on Dan Frazer, who played Captain McNeil on "Kojak." Did he begin in the theater? Does he have any children? — JULIE GRAF, WASHINGTON, D.C.

Raised in New York's Hell's Kitchen, Frazer attended St. Michael Parochial School, Commerce High School and the Piscator Dramatic Workshop, all in New York. He started acting at the age of 14 with the WPA Federal Theater Project. In his late teens, Frazer appeared in the off-Broadway play, "3 Steps Down," which led to a screen-test offer with MGM. World War II then intervened, and heserved with the Army Special Services Division gaining experience in writing and directing. Following his Army stint Frazer returned to a full-fledged acting career. In addition to his numerous television and stage appearances, he has had featured roles in such films as "Requiem for a Heavyweight" (1962), "Lilies of the Field" (1963) and "Counterpoint" (1968). Frazer and his wife, Lee, are the parents of an only child, Susan, who has performed with New York's American Ballet Theater.

Dear Michele: Whatever happened to Ross Martin of "The Wild, Wild West"? — A. HONEYCUTT, JONESBORO, TENN.

Martin, who portrayed disguise master Artemus Gordon on this series from 1965-70, died of a heart attack in 1981 at the age of 61. Considering his educational background — he had a degree in business administration, a master's in education and two years of law school — Martin once said that his most valuable lessons in portraying Gordon were learned during a one-year stint as a panelist on the charades game show "Stump the Stars."

Soap Scoop

Roger Thorpe is due for a villainous 'GL' return

By Connie Passalacqua

For months, the hottest daytime soap rumor – still unconfirmed by CBS and Procter & Gamble – is that "Guiding Light" is about to resurrect one of the greatest soap villains of all time, Roger Thorpe. When we last saw Roger (who was played by Michael Zaslow) on April Fool's Day 1980, he was slipping off the side of a cliff after a fight with his archenemy Dr. Ed Bauer (then played by Mart Hulswit, now played by Peter Simon). It was a magnificent sequence taped on location in the Dominican Republic. After leaving "GL," Zaslow played spy David Renaldi on "One Life to Live." Most recently, he has been a script writer, along with his wife Susan, on "Another World."

Try as we might, there's no way to find anyone in official "GL" capacity who will even comment on Roger's return. We can understand the show's thinking. Why ruin the best surprise of the soap season? But if you're an experienced soap watcher, there's no way you could have missed the clues that "GL" has been dropping about Roger's return:

• Blake Lindsey (played by Elizabeth Dennehy) arrived in Springfield last year, without familial connections to any "GL" character. Then, it was suddenly revealed that she is really Christina, the long-lost daughter of Holly Bauer (played by Maureen Garrett) and Roger Thorpe.

• Maureen Garrett, who played Roger's wife and eternal victim Holly throughout the '70s, returned to the show for a stint to "mother" Blake/Christina. Now comes word that Garrett, always a "GL" fan favorite, has signed a long-term contract to reprise Holly.

• "GL" has been without a formidable villain since Chris Bernau stopped appearing on the show as Alan Spaulding last year. (Daniel Pilon currently plays the once hard-edged Alan more softly and romantically.)

• Zaslow is currently working as a writer on "AW," another P&G-owned show. Talent segues from P&G show to P&G show are almost as omnipresent in the soap world as commercials.

• And what about all those scenes last month of a man in a leather chair whose face we never see?

• We never saw Roger's body after his fall off the cliff in 1980. And throughout his nine-year tenure on "GL," the character was killed off and resurrected several times.

We'll be glued to "GL." You should be too, especially next week.

TV Chatter

By Frank Sanello

Playing Chris Broderick, director of student nurses on NBC's "Nightingales," has dredged up painful memories for Suzanne Pleshette. "Honey," she says, in her trademark throaty voice, "I spent the last three years at Cedars," a hospital in Los Angeles. "I lost my mother two years ago and my best friend six months before that." Pleshette's role on the show reflects her own last few years consoling grief-stricken friends and relatives. "I know I should have undergone grief counseling after my mother died, but I was too busy keeping my dad going."

Gary Cole does a 180-degree turn away from his ex-cop talk-show host on "Midnight Caller" to play a nurturing dad on "Those She Left Behind" (NBC, March 6). But Cole's character doesn't start out that way. In the drama, Cole plays a self-centered businessman who is forced to take on all the duties of parenting when his wife dies in childbirth. Joanna Kerns ("Growing Pains") plays the family friend who helps steer Cole through the shoals of dirty diapers, colic and 2 a.m. feedings.

The role had a profound effect on Cole. "I never handled children as much as I did for this," he says. "They're kind of endearing. It got me to thinking about becoming a father ... but not right away." The actor made a point of not reading any Dr. Spock-type baby books to prepare for the film. "I didn't talk to any real-life fathers either because my character didn't know anything about fathering. I felt fully qualified for this role because I didn't know anything about kids either."

Although he says the three sets of twins who played the baby at various stages of development were endearing, Cole confesses they weren't always troupers.

Heartland

Brian Keith, Kathleen Layman and Richard Gilliland will star in CBS's "Heartland," a new half-hour comedy series about a Nebraska farm family. Keith plays B.L. McCutcheon, a cantankerous rural Archie Bunker of sorts, who is forced to move in with his daughter (Layman), son-in-law (Gilliland) and three grandchildren when he loses his farm. The show will be taped in front of a live audience.

Peter Gunn

Three-time Oscar winner Henry Mancini will compose the musical score and Emmy-winner Peter Strauss ("The Jericho Mile") will star in the upcoming two-hour movie "Peter Gunn" on ABC. Strauss will portray the street-smart private eye who is hired by a gangland boss to prove that he did not kill a rival gangster. The showing will mark the return, after 28 years, of Peter Gunn, which debuted in 1958.

THURSDAY

PARADISE

"Paradise" was dismissed by most critics when it was unveiled last fall, but the CBS series has shown surprising strength. It has even been running neck-and-neck with the once-powerful "Dynasty." It airs Thursday, March 9.

Sports Roundup

SUNDAY, MARCH 5

NCAA Basketball (CBS)

Georgetown at Syracuse. This game could be a preview of next week's Big East Championship. There should be some powerful rejecting going on here, with Georgetown's Alonzo Mourning (5.5 blocks per game, best in the nation), and Syracuse's Derrick Coleman (4.0, fourth) facing off.

NCAA Basketball (NBC)

Duke at North Carolina. This may be a preview of the ACC title game. Expect to see the scoreboard light up when these two high-scoring squads go at each other.

Seniors Golf (ABC)

Over the years, Billy Casper has won three major titles (two U.S. Opens and a Masters) and has been elected to both the World Golf Hall of Fame and the PGA Hall of Fame. Now on the Seniors Tour,Casper says the latter two honors are the most satisfying achievements of a career that has included 51 regular Tour victories. "Winning the Masters or the U.S. Open is a week-long thing, but it's only that week," says Casper. "After that, it's on to the next tournament. But when you are recognized by the media and your fellow competitors by being inducted into the World Golf Hall of Fame, that means that you've really arrived. Your total career brought about this induction."

Gymnastics,

Speed Skating (CBS)

America's Cup Gymnastics, from Fairfax, Va.; World Cup Speed Skating from Heerenveen, the Netherlands.

Boxing (NBC)

NBA Basketball (CBS)

Los Angeles Lakers at Houston Rockets.

PGA Golf (NBC)

NCAA Basketball (ABC)

Iowa at Michigan or Illinois at Indiana. The Wolverines' Glenn Rice is making a good case for himself as an NBA lottery pick, averaging 25.3 ppg in the always brutal Big Ten.

MONDAY, MARCH 6

NCAA Basketball (ESPN)

A tripleheader of conference tournament action, with championship games from the Sun Belt, MAAC and WCAC. ESPN will be providing extensive live coverage of post-season tournament action all week. Check your local listings for further details.

SATURDAY, MARCH 11

NCAA Basketball (CBS)

Big East semifinal, games one and two, from Madison Square Garden, New York.

PGA Bowling (ABC)

The $160,000 Budweiser Open, live from North Olmsted, Ohio.

NCAA Basketball (NBC)

Notre Dame at DePaul. The last two important independent teams in Division I meet in a game that could determine if either or both get into the NCAA tournament next week.

NCAA Basketball (ABC)

Indiana at Iowa or Illinois at Michigan. The Big Ten has provided a lot of fireworks this season. It always does. Since it is the last major conference to resist the post-season tourney, these two games will be important.

Will High-School Sports Go For The Big Money?

By Marty Linehan

A pay-cable network, Sports Channel America, recently announced it was negotiating with the National High School Association to nationally televise a high-school basketball game of the week. With this comes a plan to televise a championship tournament, sort of a junior version of the Final Four.

And to think other parts of the country laughed when they red-shirted junior high-school football players in Texas.

This puts high-school basketball right in the big money, and that could present a whole new set of problems.

The fight to gain national recognition has been growing among high-school games, and the game-of-the-week idea can only intensify it. High-school recruiting is already commonplace, and the TV money can only add to it.

And the academic side of the proposition presents a lot of questions. Suppose a star point guard of a team scheduled to appear on the nationally televised game fails an important test and can't play! Do you suppose there will be pressure put on the teacher who failed him?

Chances are something will be worked out because of the money involved and the recognition the school stands to get from the games. The only loser is the student. And what about the time the students will lose when traveling to play the televised game?

And televising high-school games will inevitably invite nationwide gambling. We can see a Las Vegas line on the games. And how about corruption? With big money on the line, will 16- and 17-year-olds be able to resist the pressure that may be put on them. There have been older players who have failed to meet that challenge.

Brooks Steps Out From Behind Urich's Shadow

By Bob Remington

In "Spenser: For Hire," Robert Urich never quite captured the spirit of Robert B. Parker's enormously popular paperback hero. Although convincingly rugged in "Lonesome Dove," the actor was unable to convey the toughness of Parker's Boston-based private investigator.

One character admirably brought to life in "Spenser," however, was Hawk — a mysterious black man who occasionally emerged from the shadows to help Spenser. As played by the imposing Avery Brooks, Hawk commanded not only total respect on the street, but on the screen as well. So intriguing was the character that Brooks has been brought back in "A Man Called Hawk," a spinoff from the canceled "Spenser: For Hire" airing Saturday nights on CTV.

The show is a bit like "The Equalizer," with Hawk acting as a strong-arm vigilante with a desire to "do good for people." What sets it apart, however, is the enigmatic nature of this inherently dangerous character who appears to have little moral foundation.

"The thing about this character is that he never moralizes," Brooks told reporters recently. "He never judges. He acts."

The challenge facing the producers is to maintain Hawk's mystery. As the main character in a weekly series, some of his background is bound to emerge. But if the enigma disappears, Hawk loses his intensity, and the series runs the danger of becoming just another detective show.

"To lose the enigma of the character would be, in some ways, to destroy the character," Brooks admits. "So we are walking a very fragile line. While we need to unravel parts of his past in order to carry the show, we still want to keep the mystery."

In other hands the character might not work, but Brooks is a riveting performer who should be able to maintain the shadowy nature of Hawk if the material he is handed — and the time slot — doesn't fail him. In the U.S., where ratings actually mean something, "Hawk" runs on ABC opposite NBC's powerful "Golden Girls."

HOMEWORK

Fresh Ideas For Home Improvement

Staying home is back in style. Carryout and prepared food sales are rising. Renting a video is more popular than going to the movies, and do-it-yourself home repair is booming! Because more career families regard their home as a refuge, home improvements are more popular than ever!

"Homework" will contain articles on renovating, repairing and remodeling your "castle". This special section will also contain ideas on adding wallpaper, insulation and new lighting to homes. In addition, many helpful and time-saving tips will be given on outdoor cleanup, additions and gardening. If you have the merchandise or expertise to improve someone's home, then you can reach your potential customers through "Homework".

Reserve your space today by contacting your sales representative, or by calling The Daily Reflector at 752-6166.

Why You Need The All-New Protection Plus Hospital Plan

Hospital care today is very expensive. It's a fact of life. If you've been in the hospital lately, you already know this.

But, if you've been lucky and haven't had to be hospitalized, the cost of hospitalization could take you by surprise. That's why you should consider these startling facts.

- An average hospital stay now costs over $3,200.00.
- Over 99,000 people are admitted to the hospital each day—365 days a year.
- One family in every two will be faced with hospital bills this year.

These statistics from the American Hospital Association show just how common and how expensive hospital stays are.

Of course, you may have a good major medical or group plan already working for you.

But—even the best plans pay only 80% or less of your hospital bills—after you have paid deductibles of $100 or more. That means the rest is totally up to you.

Think about it. If you were hospitalized tomorrow, would you be able to pay your share of the bill?

Or would you have to dip into your hard-earned savings? Or worse yet, borrow the money?

That's why so many people have turned to the Protection Plus Hospital Plan. It pays cash benefits directly to you—or anyone you choose.

You can use the additional cash you receive from Protection Plus to pay the hospital, the doctor, leftover bills, or even household expenses. The money is yours to spend as you wish!

When you enroll in the Protection Plus Plan you are joining over a million Americans who are enjoying security and peace of mind with Physicians Mutual protection plans.

I received this letter from one of our policyowners recently and would like to share it with you.

Arnold W. Lempka, M.D.
Chairman, Board of Directors

Dear Dr. Lempka,

For many years my wife and I have been proud and satisfied owners in Physicians Mutual.

Any and all benefits have been paid promptly and correctly.

When those benefit checks arrive with those assuring words, "We are happy to be of service" ... how sweet it is!

I suspect there are some things more painful than being without insurance coverage from a company as good as yours, but at the moment, I can't think what it could be!

Cordially yours,

Edward J. Bryant

Here's How The All-New Protection Plus Hospital Plan Helps You Beat The Rising Cost Of Hospital Care

These Cash Benefits Are Paid Directly To You

$2,250.00 A Month—$75.00 A Day
For Any Covered Sickness Or Accident
You'll collect these cash benefits whenever you are hospitalized for any reason—even a simple checkup.

$3,375.00 A Month—$112.50 A Day
For Cancer Or A Heart Attack
Your benefits increase 50% whenever you are hospitalized for cancer (including leukemia and Hodgkin's disease) or a heart attack (acute myocardial infarction).

$9,000.00 A Month—$300.00 A Day
Double Benefits For You And Your Spouse
When you and your insured spouse are hospitalized at the same time, you'll suffer even more financial strain. So you'll be glad knowing you both collect DOUBLE Benefits when you are hospitalized at the same time—for the same or different accidents.

A Special Note To People 65 & Over
Pays Benefits In Addition To Medicare
To keep your premiums low when you're 65 and over, we pay half benefits for your first 60 days in the hospital. After that, we pay you full cash benefits of $75.00 a day for as long as you're hospitalized—even for life!

With Protection Plus, you don't have to pay for protection you don't really need. And you don't have to join an association or pay membership dues to get it. Your acceptance is guaranteed regardless of age.

You'll receive copies of the North Carolina Buyer's Guides with your policy. If you wish to have the Guides before you enroll, you may request them from the company.

You Also Get All These Special Features

Protection From The Very First Day
Your cash benefits are paid from the VERY FIRST DAY of any covered hospital stay. No deductible.

Benefits For A Lifetime
Your cash benefits are paid for EVERY DAY of covered hospitalization. No matter how many days you're hospitalized, or how many times. Even for life!

You'll Collect Cash Benefits On Top Of Any Insurance
That includes group insurance, major medical coverage, workers' compensation, prepaid health plans—even Medicare. And your benefits are not subject to state or Federal income tax.

Money To Spend As You Choose
Your checks will come directly to you, unless you tell us otherwise. These cash benefits are yours to use in any way you wish.

Full Benefits For The Whole Family
Your insured spouse and children will receive the very same protection you have. One rate provides full coverage for all—regardless of your family size.

Pays Maternity Benefits, Too
You'll collect full benefits for normal childbirth when pregnancy occurs anytime after your policy is issued. And at no extra cost.

Freedom Of Choice
Your Protection Plus coverage is good at any hospital, anywhere in the world—even federal and VA hospitals. The only exceptions are nursing homes, convalescent, extended care or self-care units of hospitals.

Quick, Convenient Cash Payments
Your claims will be settled promptly—and your benefit checks will be sent to you by first class mail.

Please Note These Limitations
Old health problems (those that became evident or were treated before the effective date of your policy) are not covered for the first year of your policy. But once that year is up, even a health problem you've had for years is covered!

If you are 65 or over you will be covered for cancer, heart attack, stroke, hernia, disease or disorder of the prostate, tuberculosis, cataracts, emphysema, cirrhosis or diabetes if your hospital confinement commences more than six months after the effective date of your policy.

For confinement due to mental illness, half benefits are paid for up to 30 days.

No Salesman Will Call
We believe the Protection Plus Hospital Plan is good enough to sell itself. That's why you won't have to deal with a salesman to enroll. Everything is handled directly between you and Physicians Mutual.

Enroll Today For Just $1.00!
Your Acceptance Is Guaranteed
Simply fill out the brief enrollment form and mail it back to Physicians Mutual along with $1.00 for your first month's coverage. There is no medical exam required, or health questions to answer. Your acceptance is guaranteed!

The All-New Protection Plus Hospital Plan Gives You The Best Value At The Lowest Rates Possible

While the prices of many things you buy are still rising, we've actually kept this protection at low affordable rates.

So it's important to take advantage of this opportunity now. You'll get much-needed cash protection—for an economical premium. Your premium will stay low, too— because you'll never be singled out for a rate increase.

What's more, you can save over 8% by paying once a year, instead of each month. That's like getting one month of protection free!

Three More Reasons To Enroll Today

1. We Will Never Turn You Down

We guarantee to issue your Protection Plus Hospital Plan regardless of your age, health, or any other reason. Of course we can issue only one policy to you on a guaranteed issue basis. If you are already a Physicians Mutual policyowner and would like information about additional coverage available, please call or write for details.

2. We Will Never Cancel Your Coverage

No matter how many claims you file—or how much money you collect—we guarantee to renew your protection for as long as you wish. Only you can cancel your coverage.

3. We Will Never Increase Your Rate Individually

You will never be singled out for a rate increase. The only way your rate will ever change is if we make the identical change on all policies like this in your state.

Questions? Call 1-800-228-9100

If you have questions or need help, please call us! Dial toll-free from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., Central Time, Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., Saturday.

Because this offer is so important we'll have a Special Hotline Sunday, March 5, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Central Time.

First Choose the Plan That Fits Your Needs

With these plans, you can insure family members at one low rate—and all collect full cash benefits!

Individual Plan

Ideal for the single person . . . or for the individual family member who needs protection and wants separate insurance.

Husband-Wife Plan

Designed for the married couple without children or whose children are grown. Pays full benefits for both of you—no reductions for the spouse.

All-Family Plan

Offers protection for the entire family—father, mother and all eligible dependent children—with full benefits for all. Future additions to the family are covered automatically at no extra cost.

One-Parent Family Plan

Created for the special needs of the single parent. Covers you and all eligible dependent children with full benefits for all.

Now—Choose the Cash Benefit Option You Need

Remember—your first month's premium is only $1.00! Then continue at the low monthly rate shown below.

OPTION A

Husband-Wife	16.35	19.05
All-Family	20.75	23.45
One-Parent Family	12.95	14.35

NOTE: Your renewal rate does not increase as you move from one age group to another.

Money-Back Guarantee

We'll rush your easy-to-read policy (P500 Series) to you by first class mail. Then you have a full month to look it over . . . discuss it with your family, with friends, with anyone you respect and trust.

If for any reason you're not 100% satisfied, just return your policy within 30 days of receiving it for a full, immediate refund of your money. No questions asked, no obligation now or ever.

Physicians Mutual Rated A+ (Superior)

Physicians Mutual has been awarded the highest rating—A+ (Superior)—from A.M. Best Company, independent insurance analysts, recognizing our financial stability and sound operating performance.

As the company began in 1902, we specialized in health insurance for the medical professions only. Later, we saw the public's growing need for extra protection against rising hospital costs and began offering insurance to all Americans.

Headquartered in Omaha, licensed in all 50 states and the District of Columbia, we are proud of our service record. We currently pay claims totalling over $12,700,000.00 a month on all policies!

No matter how large or how small your claim, you can depend on us ...

"What is a wonderful feeling?

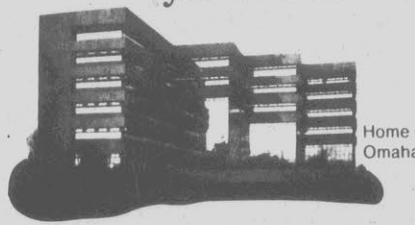

"Having an insurance policy that pays off, and doing it without a lot of hedging around, arguing, or delays. They just send you a check paid in full for every claim.

"Physicians Mutual is that lovely company. These people don't argue with you, they pay you and I love it!

"I know why I like Physicians Mutual, don't you?"

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Neckline is different. 2. Stripe is missing. 3. Picture is missing. 4. Newspaper is thinner. 5. Elbow is concealed. 6. Drawer is missing.

• SMASH HIT! What nine-letter word closely associated with the launching of ships can be inserted between the two rows of letters in the diagram at right so that nine three-letter words will appear reading from top to bottom?

P.S.: Illustration gives you a clue.

What word complies? Time limit: One minute.

The word 'champagne' will do it.

• JUST ONE! Only one letter of the alphabet is not required to spell out names of all 50 U.S. states. What letter is that? Answer quickly.

A MOVING EXPERIENCE

Place pieces of paper numbered 1-8 atop the corresponding numbers in the diagram above. Now, shift these eight counters in as few moves as possible so that they stand in numerical order horizontally across the diagram: 1, 2 and 3 in the top row; 4, 5 and 6 in the middle row; and 7, 8, below.

Only one number may be moved at a time, and it must be moved to a blank square — no numbers are to be jumped.

One way. Move, in order, 1, 2, 6, 5, 3, 1, 2, 5, 3, 1, 2, 4, 8, 7, 1, 2, 4, 8, 7, 4, 5, 6.

KIDD STUFF! Two of Captain Kidd's crew look enough alike to be twins. Which two? Study diagram details carefully.
