Discovery Outwaits Weather, Soars Into Space

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Discovery and its five crewmen waited out bad weather and thundered into orbit today to deploy a $100 million satellite that completes a network giving astronauts almost unbroken radio contact with Earth.

The 113-ton winged spaceship, also carrying four crippled white rats and 32 chicken eggs among its scientific experiments, vaulted off its seaside launch pad into a cloudless sky at 9:57 a.m. EST. Liftoff was delayed one hour and 50 minutes to allow fog to burn off and high-altitude winds to subside.

NASA reported 8½ minutes after liftoff that Discovery had achieved a successful orbit 180 miles above the Earth.

"All systems are clean as a whistle," Mission Control commentator Brian Welch reported from Houston.

The flight, postponed for nearly a month by mechanical faults, is the third since the Challenger disaster more than three years ago and starts NASA on an ambitious schedule calling for seven shuttle launches in 1989.

A 700-foot geyser of flame trailed the $1.5 billion craft as it rolled onto its desired course and sped toward orbit.

More than 45,000 people jammed viewing areas along nearby beaches, roads and river banks to watch the blazing departure of the 28th space shuttle flight.

Two minutes and six seconds after liftoff, the flight passed a critical milestone when the two solid fuel booster rockets burned out and jettisoned on schedule. The failure of a booster rocket joint led to the loss of Challenger and its seven-person crew.

Six hours after liftoff, the astronauts were to perform the main task of the mission — deploying the 2½-ton Tracking and Data Relay Satellite. It then was to be carried by its own rocket to a 22,300-mile-high orbit to join two older satellites and complete an orbiting network essential for communicating with future space shuttles and with science and military satellites.

With the new satellite operational, Mission Control will be able to communicate with an orbiting shuttle 85 percent of the time, in contrast with the old system of ground stations which provided only 15 percent coverage. NASA plans to shut six of those ground stations at a monthly savings of $3 million.

Immediately on reaching orbit, commander Michael L. Coats pitched the shuttle's nose down so crewmate Dr. James M. Bagian could photograph the 154-foot-tall external fuel tank as it drifted away toward a breakup over the Indian Ocean.

Settlement Reached In Teamsters Case

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Prosecutors seeking to seize control of the Teamsters union to rid it of alleged mob influence reached a tentative settlement with the union today that would allow its leaders to remain in office, a union leader said.

The agreement was reached hours before the Justice Department's civil racketeering lawsuit was to go to trial.

The lawsuit, in which the government sought to oust the Teamsters' leadership and have a trustee or committee appointed to oversee elections, represents the first time the government has tried to seize an entire union.

Just before he was to give his opening statement today, Assistant U.S. Attorney Randy Mastro said the Teamsters had agreed to a settlement proposal at 1:30 a.m.

Mastro said that in addition to the union itself, the 11 individual defendants — the executive board of the union — had signed the agreement.

Outside the courtroom Mastro declined to give the terms of the agreement.

However, James T. Grady, the union's general counsel, said that no administrator would be appointed by the court to oversee the union and none of the remaining executive board members would be required to resign.

Grady said a three-member panel chosen by the government and the union would investigate alleged union misdeeds and review local elections, and reform amendments to the union constitution would be voted on at the Teamsters' 1991 convention.

"Until the attorney general approves this, we don't have a settlement," Grady cautioned.

U.S. District Judge David N. Edelstein, who was to preside over the non-jury trial, granted an adjournment to allow time for the settlement to be reviewed and approved by U.S. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh.

U.S.-Born Jew Wins Long Freedom Fight

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Chicago-born Abe Stolar joined his son in a Jewish prayer today and left the Soviet Union for the first time since his American parents brought him here more than a half-century ago.

Stolar, who waged a 13-year fight to emigrate, his wife, son, daughter-in-law and two grandchildren boarded an Austrian Airlines flight to Vienna. They plan to settle in Israel.

In an interview at Moscow's Sheremetyevo Airport, the 77-year-old Stolar said his thoughts today were not of Israel, but of the United States, which he left in 1931.

"When I left Chicago at the age of 19, we were leaving on a train at night for New York, and I felt as if I was leaving on an adventure and I was coming back. Here, I was riding on a taxi coming here and didn't feel anything at all," said the balding Stolar, who paced nervously at the airport.

Stolar said he hoped to visit the United States soon and would head "straight from Israel to Chicago."

His 29-year-old son, Michael, is an observant Jew, and interrupted an interview to pray with his father and a group of friends who taught themselves Hebrew.

"Anyone Jewish around? We need a 10th one," the younger Stolar shouted in the bustling departure hall.

Jewish law requires the presence of 10 men for prayers, and Stolar had not brought enough friends.

After several minutes, a Jewish man at the airport agreed to join them, and a service was conducted in Hebrew in front of the currency exchange counter.

Abe Stolar, speaking English fluently, said he did not consider himself a refusenik — a Soviet Jew refused permission to emigrate — because he always has been a U.S. citizen.

"I was an American, pure and simple, and so I considered myself a hostage all these 13 years," he said.

Stolar's struggle had been the subject of high-level superpower negotiations for years, and President Reagan took a personal interest in the case. The two sat together at a

Bragg GIs Die In Desert Crash

TUCSON, Ariz. — An Air Force Reserve helicopter ferrying Army personnel crashed and burned in a fireball during a training flight Sunday night, killing 12 people and leaving the three others aboard missing and presumed dead, said authorities.

"They've currently found the remains of 12 (victims)," Capt. Carlos Roque, a public affairs officer at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base in Tucson, said this morning as efforts resumed to find out what happened to the other three people aboard.

Roque said on board the CH-3E "Jolly Green Giant" were four crew members assigned to the 71st Special Operations Squadron at Davis-Monthan and 11 active-duty Army personnel stationed at Fort Bragg, N.C.

Maj. Richard Adams, public information officer for the 1st Special Operations Command at Fort Bragg, said the 11 were members of C Company, 3rd Battalion, 5th Special Forces Group.

He said the soldiers were taking part in annual desert training and were en route to work on laser target designation training when the crash occurred.

Efforts were under way to contact relatives of the victims, Adams said. "There was another helicopter in the area but there was no damage to the second helicopter," said Roque. "There was no mid-air collision."

He said the helicopter was on a routine training mission transporting the 11 Army personnel from Fort Huachuca, 79 miles southeast of Tucson, to the Air Force's Gila Bend Gunnery Range, 124 miles northwest of Tucson.

"They were not on a low-level mission," said Roque.

It was unclear whether the helicopter had stopped at Davis-Monthan after leaving Fort Huachuca, said Roque.

Cheap Eastern Shuttles Strand Hundreds

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Hundreds of people who bought $12 tickets on Eastern Airline's Northeast shuttle headed home this morning, one day late, after getting stranded in three cities when there were no bargain-basement seats for them on planes.

"Nightmare of nightmares," was how Catherine Holtz, 24, described her night sleeping on the carpet at New York's LaGuardia Airport before she returned home to Boston today. "I'm not so sure if it was worth it. It was a good idea in theory."

Eastern's three-day offer of rock-bottom fares on the Washington-New York-Boston shuttle attracted 8,000 passengers Friday, 11,000 Saturday and 12,500 Sunday, said John Siefert, vice president for the shuttle.

Although fares went up to $49 today, Eastern said it would honor that index of 101.5; Raleigh, 103.0; Durham, 105.3; Chapel Hill, 109.6, and the Outer Banks region, which scored an index rating of 110.8.

The ACCRA index is calculated from a list of prices of 100 standardized goods and services as collected and recorded by chamber of commerce officials. Prices are collected from area stores, averaged and then categorized into several airport and at least 100 were turned away at Washington's National Airport. Many spent the night at the airports and took the first shuttle flights out this morning.

"The first two went out full, so I'm hoping we got most of them," said Rosa R. Williams, shuttle manager at National Airport. On Sunday night, Eastern employees had given stranded shuttle passengers peanuts and decks of cards.

Pickets outside the Eastern terminal in Boston today took note of stranded passengers with a sign that read: "Pay $12 and sleep at the terminal."

On Sunday, the Bush administration reiterated its determination to stay out of the 10-day-old strike by Eastern's 8,500-member Machinists union.

Eastern trumpeted the reopening of flights to seven Latin American cities Sunday as a new start for the troubled airline, which filed for bankruptcy protection last week after most of its 3,600 pilots honored picket lines.

Greenville Scores Low In Living Costs

By Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Greenville, falling well below the national cost-of-living average, was one of the least expensive cities in the state to live in during the last quarter of 1988, according to a recently released report.

In the quarterly report of the American Chamber of Commerce Researchers Association, the average American city is designated a cost of living index of 100. Greenville recorded an overall index of 96.6 for the fourth quarter, placing 3.4 percent below the national average.

Greenville also ranked 13th out of 14 North Carolina cities in a comparison of cost-of-living rates during the same period.

Only the western North Carolina community of Hickory scored a lower cost-of-living index than Greenville, with an overall rating of 91.9.

"This report shows that Greenville's cost-of-living is lower than the average of 260 urban areas throughout the United States during the fourth quarter of 1988," said Ed Walker, president of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

"This index is especially useful to businesses, especially those that are in the process of transferring employees from one location to another. The index can help an employer determine whether a salary adjustment is necessary in relocating that employee," he said.

Those cities in the state with a higher cost-of-living level than Greenville were Charlotte with an index of 101.5; Raleigh, 103.0; Durham, 105.3; Chapel Hill, 109.6, and the Outer Banks region, which scored an index rating of 110.8.

The ACCRA index is calculated from a list of prices of 100 standardized goods and services as collected and recorded by chamber of commerce officials. Prices are collected from area stores, averaged and then categorized into several consumer spending areas — groceries, utilities, transportation, health care, and a miscellaneous category, including items like cigarettes and alcoholic beverages.

Those results are then tabulated and compared with other cities by the ACCRA.

Greenville also recorded a lower cost-of-living index than most major Metropolitan Statistical Areas throughout the country.

Only Memphis, Tenn., with an index of 96.4, recorded a lower cost-of-living index than Greenville.

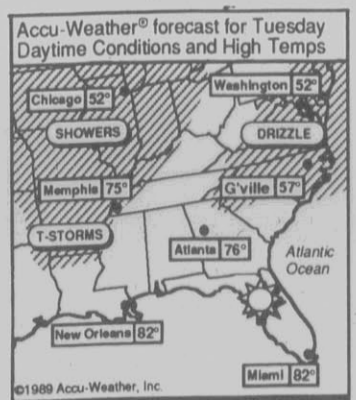

97.6; Indianapolis, 98.0, and Jacksonville, Fla., 99.1.

Major cities receiving a cost-of-living index ranking above the national average of 100 were Houston, with an index of 102.9; Columbus, Ohio, 104.4; Phoenix, Ariz., 105.3; Denver, 105.3; San Diego, 127.1, and Philadelphia, which recorded an index of 128.2, or 28.2 percent above the national average.

Greenville's fourth quarter index coincides with the results of the ACCRA's third quarter study.

Greenville recorded a cost-of-living index of 95.2 during the last recording quarter and ranked 12th in 13 North Carolina cities.

Winterville Police Chief Lester Smith said the robbery suspect, Andre Jones, was apprehended and arrested Sunday morning in Ayden and charged with two counts of strong arm robbery and one count of unauthorized use of motor conveyance.

Smith said the two incidents occurred Saturday night beginning at 8:10 p.m. when a man entered the Fresh Way store on Cooper Street, pushed the cashier away from the register and took $58. The suspect then went to the Dixie Queen restaurant and repeated the same tactic, taking $20 from the register.

Smith said no weapons were used in the incident.

Farmville Central Junior Is Pitt's New Junior Miss

By Priscilla Brown
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

It was some Saturday for Dionne Griffith. It began with an unusual twist that morning, when she was forced to get up early for school. And it ended after midnight — early Sunday, actually — when she was crowned Pitt County Junior Miss.

For the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan B. Griffith Jr., the honor came as a surprise. "I still haven't gotten used to the idea," she said today. "I was shocked."

And her parents were thrilled. "I think Daddy jumped 40 feet when they said my name," she said.

The Farmville Central Junior was crowned winner in a competition that included 20 girls from across the county. She received a $2,000 scholarship, a $300 travel and clothing allowance, a medal, a silver bowl, a Blair Woolverton dress, a 16-by-20 portrait and a dozen red roses — for starters.

She had also picked up a $50 scholarship for being one of the top five scholastic winners, a $50 scholarship for winning an award in poise and appearance, a $200 scholarship for being one of two representatives in the Spirit of Junior Miss Award, and a $200 savings bond for topping advertising sales for the evening's program.

Those awards, in part, show why the sponsoring Farmville Junior Women's Club shies away from calling the program a pageant. Beauty, they maintain, takes a back seat to academics, talent and leadership.

Other overall winners in the contest were first runner-up Kathy Denise Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Coy R. Taylor of Farmville; second runner-up, Alice Taylor Evans, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Richard H. Evans Jr. of Greenville; third runner-up, Pamela Michell Teel, daughter of Moses and Pauline Teel Jr. of Greenville, and fourth runner-up, Melodie Camille Hahn, daughter of Allen and Debbie Hahn of Greenville.

Other winners in specific categories were:

Scholastic — Taylor Evans (overall winner); Amanda Corbett, Melodie Hahn, Michelle Taylor

Physical Fitness — Kathy Taylor (overall winner); Renee Crawford and Melodie Hahn

Poise and Appearance — Kathy Taylor (overall winner) and KeAne Burney

Creative and Performing Arts — Taylor Evans and Melodie Hahn

Spirit of Jr. Miss Award — tie between Miss Griffith and Natalie Renee Crawford

Ad Sales — Amanda Corbett and Julie Milner

The Junior Miss Pageant is a lot of work for every participant, Miss Griffith said. And winning was just one of the positive aspects of the program.

"I've learned to be friendlier to others, to cooperate within a group and to be more responsible about meeting deadlines," she said. "I would recommend the program to every girl"

"It takes some long hours and hard work," she added. "People think it's easy, but it isn't."

Still, she said, it was worth it all, for each participant. Because everyone, she said, gained something.

"I feel like everybody won," she said.

Warming Weather Brings Out Crowds

By Jerry Raynor
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Warm weather brought many people out during the past weekend to enjoy life in Greenville's city parks as high water began to recede on the Tar River.

Walter Stasavich, director of parks with the Greenville Parks and Recreation Department, said "we had an unexpectedly large number of people using the city's parks on Saturday and Sunday. Since it was the first warm weekend in some time, it seems everybody wanted to get outdoors."

"Lots of parents and children were at Elm Street playing softball and baseball. Kids filled up Peppermint Park. River Park North had lots of fishermen even though only one pond, the one nearest the Science and Nature Center, could be fished in because of high waters in other areas of the park. And there were lots of strollers at the Town Common."

Wendy Ross, administrative secretary to Greenville Public Works Department director Mayo Allen, said that "workers are still tackling the big accumulation of broken limbs that fell (during the past three winter storms), with a projection of completion in about two weeks."

"We still have everyone available from different departments working on this big cleanup job. Cleanup in some segments of the city have been completed, others are yet to be gotten to."

Ms. Ross said "the pickup of garbage is back on schedule, with curbside pickup of boxes and other non-garbage material being made each Wednesday."

The water level of the Tar River, according to Randy Buck, a Greenville Utilities water plant operator, "began to drop this weekend after holding steady at 16.6 feet for several days. The reading this morning was down to 15.9 feet, a little lower at 15.26 feet at the Greene Street bridge. Unless there is more rain right away, it should drop now at a faster rate." The flood stage for the Tar River is 13.0 feet.

Weekend temperature readings reached a high of 75 degrees on Sunday, with a low of 36. The reading at 8 a.m. this morning was 41 degrees.

Classes Resuming

East Carolina University students are back in class today after a week-long spring break.

The campus was sparsely populated last week as only administrative offices remained open. Students and faculty were on vacation.

Only students required by the university to either work or participate in athletics on behalf of the school were permitted to stay in residence halls. And the ones who stayed were moved into special sections of specified dormitories. Housing Director Carolyn Fulghum said.

She said the break was used as an opportunity to complete repairs to the sixth floor of Clement Hall, a women's dormitory damaged recently by fire. The approximately 40 students displaced by the fire moved back in yesterday, she said.

Dr. Ron Spear, dean of student services, said virtually all students were back and it appeared that the campus was operating normally this morning.

Renewable Resource Going Strong

North Carolina pine lumber might seem the perfect building material.

The pine trees grow rapidly and with careful timber management the cut trees can quickly be replanted. Since trees can be replaced and new ones grown we do not use up resources that cannot be replenished such as oil and coal.

And the president of the Southern Forest Products Association sees the future as bright for pine timber.

Speaking at a meeting here Karl Lindburg said 1.1 billion board feet of pine lumber was produced in the state in 1988. Some 145,000 workers are involved in the industry and the payroll is $2.5 billion. The export business is good for pine lumber with much of that going to the Caribbean. Exports are also increasing to Europe.

'In modern times timber management has become essential to providing the lumber that is needed for construction.'

A promising use of the lumber is for small bridges which can be constructed of wood rather than concrete due to improved timber treating technology.

Problems facing the industry including environmental matters such as control of wood dust, proposed restrictions on wetlands timber harvest and others. Timber spokesmen said they needed clearer definitions of wetlands noting that currently the definitions cover most of Hyde County.

The North Carolina pine was essential to the settling of our state. Most farm homes and buildings were constructed of lumber and settlers found a plentiful supply in the abundant forests of what was to become the Tar Heel state.

In modern times timber management has become essential to providing the lumber that is needed for construction. Pine trees planted now will provide the lumber for the next generation.

Pine lumber is a renewable natural resource that can be around indefinitely with proper management. It also creates a multibillion dollar payroll for North Carolina.

Martin's Proposals Lead Parties To Reverse Traditional Roles

John Flesher

RALEIGH — A Republican governor who swept into office in 1984 proposing massive tax cuts endorses the two biggest tax increases in North Carolina history.

Democratic legislators accuse Gov. Jim Martin of knuckling under to special-interest pressure by rushing to raise taxes without first paring all the fat from the current budget.

What's wrong with this picture? Historically, the GOP has prided itself in opposing higher taxes. When former Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt called for a 3-cent gasoline tax increase in 1981 to upgrade the state's highway system, most Republicans fought him.

When Martin ran for governor on a tax-cutting platform in 1984, Democrats charged he would give business an unnecessary break by robbing the budget of money for better schools, improved services for the poor and elderly, and environmental protection.

Suddenly, the political landscape has been altered.

Last week, Martin proposed a 1-cent sales tax increase to fund pay raises for teachers and state employees and a food tax cut to help the needy. A couple of weeks earlier, he endorsed an $8.6 billion tax package for highways. Democrats, meanwhile, were calling on him to put on the brakes.

As the dust settled from the dizzying turn of events, many observers were wondering whether North Carolina's two major parties had become separated from their ideological moorings.

Others said nothing so drastic had happened, but that Republicans — chiefly Martin — have been forced by the realities of governing to become more pragmatic.

"That evolution was predictable," said Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake. "There are certain basic things that responsible leadership realizes must be provided by state government. Jim Martin is... bold enough to start proposing the kinds of things to run that responsible, caring kind of government."

"As Republicans come to the point that they have to govern, unless they're really from off the wall in right field, they too will start embracing those kinds of ideas," Blue said.

Rep. Harry Grimmer, R-Mecklenburg, acknowledges that Martin's willingness to raise taxes is distressing some Republicans.

"Many of them ran on no-tax-increase kinds of campaigns," Grimmer said. "They're facing a new reality of finding that in a number of instances such as roads... we've got a major problem we've got to address. They're wrestling with that problem pretty heavily."

Rep. Skip Stam, R-Wake, is one such Republican. A freshman known for his anti-abortion activism before winning his House seat, Stam is strongly conservative but says he had reconciled himself to voting for the highway bill on grounds that its tax and fee provisions could be considered "user fees."

"I don't think the road tax would hurt us (Republicans)," he said. "But a general fund tax increase parents dissuade their teenagers from having abortions. But she added that teen pregnancies and live births also decreased. That's evidence that teenagers are either being more careful with their sexual activity, or that they are abstaining.

Gail Wilkins of Raleigh, a mother of a 17-year-old daughter, echoed the remarks of many supporters of the bill. She said that she got pregnant when she was 15. She was poor and uneducated at the time. But she turned to her family, had the child, later married, and got an education. Now that child is a high school student with an eye on a career in engineering. Her family pulled her through a tough time, she said, as no one else could.

Opponents of the bill say that strong families don't need such legislation. Wilma Woodard, lobbyist for the National Organization of Women, said that those pushing the bill come from families which are likely to pull together and help a teen who becomes pregnant. That teen is likely to turn to her parents with her problem whether or not the law requires her to do so, Ms. Woodard said.

The bill would be harmful in families where there are major problems already, she said. "This is likely to harm our most vulnerable children."

Other witnesses, like Raleigh Episcopal minister, the Rev. Jim Lewis, noted that many teens become pregnant after being sexually abused by other family members. And Raleigh volunteer counsellor Mary Hines told of the many abused and battered teens with whom she's talked. They have no lines on communication open with their parents.

These children will not obey the law, bill opponents said. "They'll go out of state, some may run away... they may find a place locally where they can get an illegal, unsanitary abortion or have a self-induced abortion," said Ms. Hines. Many parents will throw their daughters out of the home, and some girls will drop out of school.

Rev. Lewis may have best summed up the opinion of the opponents. When parents and children are not speaking to each other, the law can't make them start, he said. And William Simpson of the American Civil Liberties Union added, "Legislation cannot create what a lifetime of failure cannot. If parents and children don't talk, this law won't make them do so."

The House, in passing the bill, obviously disagrees. Now the Senate, which has derailed such legislation in the past, must decide if a law can overpower that natural teenaged reluctance to turn back to one's parents.

Can Legislation Change Teenagers?

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — Somewhere in the process of becoming adults, children drastically reverse their reliance on parents. Whereas small children run to their parents with every trouble, with every bruise or fright, teens hide their troubles from their parents.

That simple fact of child development underlies the legislature's most socially charged issue this year. A bill that would require a teen to receive a parent's permission before she could get an abortion confronts the natural separation process of children and their parents. The question which the state Senate must now answer is whether legislation can reverse a natural process and bring teen and parent together at a time of crisis.

Those who argue for the bill say that it can. At a public hearing on House Bill 93, Susan Renfer, a Raleigh attorney and vice-chairman of the Wake County Right to Life Committee, said that 30 states now require some form of parental consent before a minor child can have an abortion. She said that the record in these states is that teen abortions have decreased — evidence that when there's no attempt made to cut out low-priority budget items would hurt us. Two in one year is too much."

Martin's pro-tax position does not change the basic philosophical differences between the two parties, Grimmer said. He noted that Martin inspired the biggest tax cut in state history in 1985 and has won other tax relief since then.

"Democrats are still for the most part quicker to look to tax increases and have less sense of urgency to look at recodifying and reducing programs, determining ways to cut so that you minimize the tax increase," he said.

Aside from ideological pragmatism, Martin also is displaying political pragmatism. Administration insiders and legislators say Martin, who may challenge Sen. Terry Sanford in 1992 and is devoted to building the GOP, would not have supported two big tax increases without reading the political tea leaves.

"I think Martin's in touch with what the people of North Carolina want," said Rep. Sam Hunt, D-Alamance. "He's been in touch and we Democrats have underestimated him. I don't think he's taking any particular ideology, just a leadership role."

"But on the other hand, one of the most conservative things you can do is build roads and education."

The Students Were Right; The Faculty Was Wrong

WASHINGTON — If students at Washington's Howard University are listening to what their elders are saying, they must be terribly confused.

They are being told, in tones that range from sadness to outrage, that they were naive, immature, self-centered and more than a little stupid to force the resignation of Lee Atwater from the Howard board of trustees.

Don't they understand that Howard needs money — for student financial aid, among other things — and that Atwater, the well-connected chairman of the Republican National Committee, could have delivered a good deal of it? Can't they see the puerile silliness of punishing their school, the flagship of American black higher education, in an effort to punish Atwater for his alleged offenses against black people?

And who is saying these things? Some of the same people who lately were decrying the cynicism of today's young people; their abandonment of idealism in favor of material interests.

The Howard students identify Atwater as the chief architect of last fall's often vicious presidential campaign. In particular they identify him with the cynical use of Willie Horton to make George Bush's soft-on-crime case against Michael Dukakis. In their minds, the choice of Horton was calculated not merely to demonstrate the danger of Massachusetts' prison furlough program but also to put a black face on the danger.

Were they wrong about the double-message of the Willie Horton TV ads? I think not. Were they wrong to identify Atwater with the message? Atwater says they were, and that is worth further discussion.

But if the students were right — if Atwater did appeal to white paranoia in order to get his man elected — how could they have been wrong to insist that he be removed from their university's board of trustees?

Atwater himself, in a long op-ed piece in the Washington Post, devoted a single paragraph to the Willie Horton affair. "The ad in question," he wrote, "was an independent and unauthorized effort. In fact, Campaign Chairman James A. Baker III and I both wrote to the group responsible for it demanding that it be discontinued."

Was the Horton campaign innocent of racial intent? Atwater insists that it was.

But the burden of his op-ed piece, like the responses I've been hearing to the student demonstration, was pragmatism. "I believed that I could be helpful to the university in fund raising, scholarship endowment, identifying job opportunities such as student internships at the White House and the Republican National Committee. I was especially pleased that I could help bring money into a university the overwhelming majority of whose students depend on tuition assistance to get their education. The fact is, I had a lot to offer Howard."

And so he did. But at what price?

Imagine, if you would, that David Duke the ex-Klansman recently elected to the Louisiana Legislature, were in position to make even more money and internships available to Howard students. Should Howard make him a trustee?

No, I don't equate Atwater with Duke, and I was pleased that Atwater and the GOP specifically renounced Duke as unfit for membership in the party.

The point is that only cynicism of the worst sort could lead a great institution to overlook the character and background of a candidate for trusteeship on the ground of his fund-raising ability.

But Atwater knows that, no matter how many good licks he managed in his joint concert with black blues-singer-guitarist B.B. King, he is viewed with suspicion by blacks, primarily because of his role in the campaign.

He knows that it is up to him to prove that his critics have misjudged him. Black Americans, including the students at Howard, owe him the chance to offer that proof.

But it doesn't make sense to me that he should be allowed to make his case while he sits as a policymaker for the nation's pre-eminent black university. First the proof, then the honor.

Absent convincing evidence that he has been misjudged, Atwater should never have been named to the Howard board. Howard's trustees were wrong to put him there. Howard's students were right to insist on his removal.

Amnesty Proposal Could Make Martin Tax Plan More Attractive

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Martin's proposal to toughen enforcement and penalties on tax evaders, while also promoting a tax amnesty program, gives the program the backing it has lacked in the past, a state official says.

"What the governor is saying is that it's a good idea, he supports it and the Department of Revenue supports it," said Deputy Revenue Secretary Myron Banks.

Martin, using figures from the report of the Tax Fairness Study Committee issued two months ago, said last week the two programs could bring in $47 million next year. The amnesty program would be a one-shot deal that could raise $20 million. Increased enforcement efforts would bring in $27 million next year and, according to Martin's estimates, up to $67 million by 1992-1993.

Martin endorsed the proposals with little fanfare last week, about the same time that he announced he would like to see a one-cent increase in the sales tax to raise $510 million to fund increases in teacher and state worker salaries.

Administration officials say Martin wants the tax amnesty-enforcement element — along with his proposal to cut three cents from the sales tax on food — to build public support and make his package more attractive to legislators reluctant to pass a large tax increase.

But when Martin announced the tax and pay hike program — the largest increase in the state sales tax since it was enacted in 1933 — he didn't mention the tax enforcement and amnesty programs. The only reference to them was on a chart without explanation.

Tim Pittman, Martin's communications director, said that because the bulk of the money would be raised by the tax increase, the other programs were overshadowed.

The program has been proposed in nearly identical bills in the Senate and House. Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, chairman of the Finance Committee and the Tax Fairness Study Committee, proposed it in the Senate, and Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, proposed it in the House.

Rep. Steve Wood, D-Guilford, has introduced a similar bill — an idea he offered when in the House in 1985.

The study report said tax amnesty programs have been successful in 28 states.

The Rauch and Miller bills propose that taxpayers be offered a 77-day grace period, from mid-September through November, in which they may pay back taxes and interest without facing any criminal prosecution or other penalties. Unpaid income, sales, inheritance, license, franchise, gift, intangibles and motor fuel taxes would be covered.

Coupled with the amnesty program would be an effort to increase tax collections and enforcement of tax laws.

The study committee recommends spending $5.3 million next year to hire additional field and sales tax auditors, collection and clerical personnel, and to improve collection and data processing equipment.

"The experience of other states and the federal government indicates that each additional dollar to modernize enforcement and compliance efforts will result in $6 to $24 of new revenue in one to two years," the commission report said.

The recommendation to increase penalties for evading or failing to pay taxes is a repeat of a proposal Miller offered two years ago. The bill was recommended "without prejudice" by the House Judiciary Committee but never made it out of the House Finance Committee.

"Each year more than $300 million in state and local taxes go uncollected," the study report said.

Under the study committee's proposal:

—Attempting to evade taxes of $400 or more, now a misdemeanor carrying up to a $1,000 fine and six months in jail, would become a felony carrying a five-year prison term and a fine to be established in the law or set by a judge. Evasion of taxes of less than $400 would remain a misdemeanor.

—Failing to collect, withhold or pay taxes of $400 or more, now a misdemeanor carrying up to a $500 fine and six months in jail, would become a felony carrying a five-year prison term and a fine. If the violation involved less than $400, it would remain a misdemeanor.

—Aiding or assisting in filing, fraudulent returns, now a misdemeanor carrying up to two years in prison and a fine, would become a felony carrying up to three years in prison and a fine.

"Stiffer penalties should result in higher revenues," the study report concluded, and "improved voluntary compliance. Stiffer penalties would also encourage the Department of Revenue to enforce the tax laws more rigorously."

Station Silent

RALEIGH (AP) — WPTF-TV in Raleigh was off the air Sunday morning so some sections of a transmission line can be replaced.

The television station, Channel 28, was off the air from 1 a.m. until 11 a.m., said Robert B. Butler, executive vice president for Durham Life Broadcasting.

Ice has damaged a portion of the transmission line that carries the signal up the tower to the antenna. Some of the line might have been defective when it was installed two years ago, Butler said.

WPTF normally is off the air for four hours Sunday morning, but "this is major transmitter maintenance that cannot be done during the normal down period," he said.

Doll Sale

RALEIGH (AP) — Several hundred dolls, including Scarlett O'Hara, Prince Charles and Sleeping Beauty were sold to the highest bidder Saturday in Zebulon, drawing about 40 collectors from as far away as Maryland.

Storybook characters, international dolls, brides, ballerinas and Bobsey twins adorned the tables of the auction hall. Dolls representing states, months and days of the week were sold. And there were famous faces: Nancy Reagan, Mickey Mouse and Elvis.

One Scarlett O'Hara doll — who, the auctioneer pointed out, was wearing the famous green velvet dress she made out of drapes — sold for $430.

colorful posters when they asked the Wilmington City Council to consider their top priority — having sidewalks installed.

The Kids' Coalition for Sidewalks got results. City officials said Friday that a section of their neighborhood will be the first to have sidewalks installed when the second phase of a three-part project begins next month.

"When we walk to school our feet get wet, and at Forest Hills and Market people are in a hurry to get to work and we get close to getting hit," said Carriedelle Wilson, a 10-year-old student at Forest Hills Elementary School.

Because of delays in the first phase of the city's sidewalk construction project, some neighborhoods have waited two years beyond the time they expected the project to reach their areas.

Landmark For Sale

WILMINGTON (AP) — One of Duplin County's historic landmarks is for sale, but only to someone who is willing to preserve it.

The house near Faison is known as the Buckner Hill house, after its builder, who was born in Duplin County in 1800.

It has been acquired by the Historic Preservation Foundation of North Carolina Inc., a non-profit group that operates a revolving fund to purchase endangered historic properties and resell them to buyers who agree to preserve them.

The plantation house is a well-preserved example of Italianate architecture, notable for its plaster ornamentation and distinctive cross-shaped floor plan, officials say.

Trucker's Lawsuit Challenges Tradition

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A North Carolina trucker is challenging a century-old notion that employers have the right to fire someone without reason, suing his former employer after losing his job for failing to perform a task that he says could not be done legally.

Mark Coman, 31, of Thomasville, said he broke federal law to make a 40-hour, sleepless truck run to Michigan for Thomas Manufacturing Co. of Thomasville. It should have taken him three days, but he did it in two and fudged the difference in his log book, he said.

When he refused to do it again, Coman said, he lost his $30,000-a-year job.

He's challenging the so-called "at-will" doctrine. Courts in many states have restricted its use.

Coman's case will be argued Wednesday before the N.C. Supreme Court — the first employee-rights case to reach the state's highest court. Its potential for legal precedent is drawing considerable attention.

Attorney General Lacy Thornburg, Labor Commissioner John Brooks, the N.C. Civil Liberties Union Legal Foundation and the N.C. Academy of Trial Lawyers have joined the lawsuit on Coman's side.

The N.C. Truckers Association and Capital Associated Industries have come to aid of Thomas Manufacturing.

"It's critical that the Supreme Court is going to hear this case," said David Tamer, a Winston-Salem lawyer representing Coman.

"The at-will doctrine first crept into North Carolina law in the late 19th century," Tamer said. "We're no longer in a position where the rule makes sense philosophically or economically."

Employers fear a court decision in Coman's favor would set off a wave of litigation from people fired from their jobs, said Penny Bradshaw, a Winston-Salem lawyer representing Thomas Manufacturing.

"Will it open the door to people wanting to litigate every time they're fired?" she said. "When you bring someone in your company, does that create an obligation to continue to employ them for life or until they've done something bad enough to constitute just cause?"

Coman said he often falsified log books, which are audited periodically by the U.S. Department of Transportation.

It took him two days to deliver brass plumbing fixtures made by Thomas to Michigan. He did it with minimal stops and no sleep.

Federal law requires long-distance drivers to rest eight hours for every 10 on the road. So Coman says he would record a three-day trip in the log book and include stops for sleep.

But he became reluctant to do that when Thomas, in an efficiency move, installed on its trucks on-board computers to track fuel consumption, speed and miles in service.

"If you got stopped by the DOT, they could check the computer, too," Coman told The Greensboro News & Record. "Your log book and the computer is supposed to match. I told them I could not run the way they wanted me to unless they took the responsibility for it if I got caught."

Coman left the company in June 1987 and sued later that year.

Bradshaw said Thomas denies Coman's charges.

In January 1988, Superior Court Judge T.W. Ross dismissed Coman's lawsuit in Davidson Superior Court. Citing the at-will doctrine, Ross agreed with Thomas' contention that Coman failed to state a claim upon which relief can be granted in North Carolina.

The N.C. Court of Appeals split 2-1 on the issue, in favor of the company. Two appeals judges said federal law provided Coman a possible remedy through an administrative law judge. They saw no reason to disturb the at-will doctrine.

AIDS Bills Could Have Reverse Effect

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH (AP) — The AIDS epidemic has sparked bills ranging from mandatory testing of prostitutes and prisoners to an anti-discrimination law for AIDS victims, but onlookers say some of the bills may stymie efforts to slow the spread of the deadly disease.

Roslyn Savitt, executive director of the State Council for Social Legislation, said several measures may "increase the discrimination and misinformation that runs rampant whenever this disease is discussed."

She pointed out that neither the Governor's AIDS Task Force nor the Legislative Study Commission on AIDS has endorsed testing any population.

"Policies to deal with the AIDS disease should be left to the public health professionals — they are the ones with the knowledge," she said.

But Rep. Bob Brawley, R-Iredell, sponsor of the prostitute and prisoner testing bills, said his intent is only in generating information.

"I don't think the public nor the medical community or government agencies really know what the extent of the AIDS problem is," he said. "My intent was to provide as much as possible more data for the scientific community."

Brawley said he is not convinced scientists know fully how acquired immune deficiency syndrome is transmitted or how much risk heterosexuals face from the disease, which has been mainly associated with homosexuals and intravenous drug users.

"My concern is, with all of the confidentiality and rights to privacy, I don't think we have enough scientific data to be going out here and saying with any certainty that a heterosexual in a heterosexual relationship has no chance of getting AIDS or you get it this way and you don't get it that way."

Brawley admits he wants to target the prison population because he believes it is a high-risk group because of homosexuality behind bars. He said estimates of AIDS carriers in prisons are as high as 6 percent.

Brawley said his bills would help ease public concerns.

"One of the things they run into in society is the general impression that everybody is trying to keep it (AIDS) secret," he said. "You're building up a barrier there that is going to bust sooner or later."

Fugitive Arrested At Church Service

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — A 36-year-old man was taken in handcuffs from a Catawba County church Sunday after Michigan authorities issued a fugitive arrest warrant for his arrest.

Patrick Allen Dunbar, who was studying to be a paramedic, was arrested at Penelope Baptist Church, where he had attended services twice before.

Michigan authorities had been searching for Dunbar since Jan. 13, said sheriff's Det. Coy Reed. Dunbar is charged with breaking and entering and assault with a deadly weapon with intent to commit murder, Reed said.

Dunbar is accused of breaking into a home in Grandville, a small southwest Michigan town about 5 miles from Grand Rapids. Police said a man attacked a resident with a surgical scalpel, Reed said.

On Sunday, Dunbar sat in a rear pew, wearing an Emergency Medical Service T-shirt and carrying an orange backpack filled with professional medical equipment and books, while Reed sat one row behind.

Reed said he waited for 15 minutes while Dunbar listened to a sermon and a church choir, then arrested him while several hundred congregants left the church and walked to their cars outside.

Dunbar was being held on $50,000 bond in the Catawba County Jail late Sunday. He told investigators he will fight efforts to be extradited to Michigan to face charges.

Dunbar, who said he was a native of Santa Monica, Calif., moved to Catawba County more than a month ago so he could study to be a paramedic at Catawba Valley Community College, Reed said.

Dunbar "just said he was glad we let him finish the service," Reed said. "He said he had been there twice before and he said the people were pretty nice."

48 Senior Judges Don't Work, But Get Paid

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Some senior federal judges think the taxpayers are getting a bargain from the semi-retired jurists even though dozens accept pay raises after they stop all judicial work.

But other senior judges are concerned — even angry — that colleagues take pay boosts without working. A third group is satisfied with current pay levels for semi-retired judges but believes that younger, full-time judges deserve more money.

An Associated Press survey, conducted in February and March, of the nation's 277 senior federal judges found that 48, or 17 percent, no longer do any judicial work. Nevertheless, they remain eligible — and in most cases, eager — for any pay raises granted to active judges. The survey was undertaken because the government refuses to release its own data on the workload of individual senior judges.

The AP found most judges reduce their workload when they take senior status; many give up criminal cases; some drop complicated civil cases. Nevertheless, they handle 10 to 15 percent of the total federal court workload, which is considered a godsend by their 750 active colleagues.

"You can't make a judge work if he doesn't want to work," said Bailey Aldrich, at age 81 a working senior appeals court judge in Massachusetts.

"I wrote a letter to a congressman that getting the senior judge a raise, even though he wasn't working anymore, was a small price to pay to get rid of ... (active judges) who are old."

Congress created senior status in 1919 to encourage older judges with life appointments to step aside for younger replacements.

Federal judges of a certain age and experience may take senior status which allows them to decide how much work they do.

Those who instead choose full retirement through resignation keep for life the same salary they had on their last day of work. There are only 13 of these.

In February, senior judges and their active colleagues were denied a 50 percent pay raise when Congress rejected increases for top officials across the government.

Two new bills in Congress would add 20 to 30 percent to judicial salaries. Trial judges are paid $89,500 a year, and appellate judges earn more — up to $115,000 for the chief justice.

The AP survey found no senior judge who has stopped hearing cases and was willing to forgo any pay raise. Ronald Davies, an 84-year-old senior trial judge in North Dakota, was typical of most who addressed the issue:

"I'm a senior judge and I get paid whether I work or not. I felt it (the raise Congress rejected) was long overdue." Davies, who took senior status in 1971 and stopped hearing cases altogether six months ago, planned to accept that raise.

But some still-working senior judges felt differently.

"If you don't want to do the work, retire and get out," said Raymond J. Pettine, a 76-year-old trial judge in Rhode Island who has maintained a full caseload since taking senior status in 1982.

"I think there probably should be some requirement that they work to a certain extent," said John Minor Wisdom, a fabled New Orleans judge who at 83 worked on appeals courts in four states last year.

John T. Elfvin, 71, a senior trial judge in Buffalo, N.Y., who handles about 66 percent of a normal caseload, said, "There ought to be a look taken at individual situations. At some point, a judge should be cut off from getting senior status."

Other senior judges endorsed raises for active judges to attract qualified younger lawyers in an era of soaring salaries for private attorneys, but were content with their own salaries.

"The job is worth the money, the $135,000 (which Congress rejected), for an active judge," said Eugene R. Gordon, a senior trial judge in North Carolina, who at 71 carries a 50 percent workload. "For what you're paying me on senior status, $89,500, it's fine, but we are going to have to raise the salaries to attract good people."

The AP reported in January that a previously undisclosed 1987 federal court study showed 20 percent of senior judges did no judicial work. That study tracked trials and cases completed during 12 months, but identified the judges only by code number.

The AP survey, which found that 17 percent do no judicial work, unlike the 1987 study, gave judges credit for dormant, but unresolved cases even though they have not required recent judicial action.

The non-working senior judges include such famous figures as retired Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Watergate trial judge John J. Sirica.

Of the 48, Sirica and 19 others suffer from serious health problems that either limit or preclude continued judicial work.

Others devote their energies to pursuits away from the courthouse, ranging from managing their investments to serving full time on public commissions, like Burger who heads the bicentennial celebrations for the Constitution and Bill of Rights.

But there are senior judges who stay with court work, or try to, despite enormous obstacles.

In North Carolina, 75-year-old senior trial judge Woodrow Jones maintained a 75 percent caseload until his larynx was removed last October. Unable to speak, he still works on petitions and motions that can be handled with written orders.

In Baltimore, 88-year-old former chief trial judge Roszel C. Thomsen was forced by failing hearing to give up cases, but he comes to the courthouse every day to serve as consultant or researcher for other judges.

The mixed feelings about pay raises were summed up by Frank M. Coffin, an appeals court judge in Portland, Me., who took senior status last month:

"At age 88, they become sick and they can't judge any more. Are they to be deprived at the end of their life of a small increment that is probably the only thing that can be added to their estate? That's the most sympathetic case," Coffin said.

"The least sympathetic case is the senior judge who at a very early age decides not to hear cases and takes senior status. I would not object to taking a hard look at that situation."

Tar Heel 'Senior' Judges Keep Up Active Caseload

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Most people look forward to taking it easy when they retire, but most of the five federal judges on "senior status" in North Carolina continue to hear a heavy load of cases.

"Until last fall, he carried the exact same caseload as an active judge," Rich Leonard, federal clerk of court for the Eastern District, said of Judge Franklin Dupree, 75, who has been on senior status for four years.

"He never really changed his caseload after taking senior status," Leonard said. "Currently, he takes the same civil draw as an active judge, but is not on the rotation for criminal cases."

Federal judges on senior status have the option to do as much — or as little — as they want. But North Carolina's senior judges say they never considered their departure from active status to be full retirement.

"I couldn't even think about going home and waiting on the grim reaper," said U.S. District Court Judge Hiram Ward, who took senior status last August. "As long as I'm in good health and able to work, I want to stay active."

Ward, 65, said all he had given up were the administrative chores that went along with being the chief judge for the Middle District in Greensboro.

"I haven't been able to tell the difference in my caseload yet," Ward said. "I had 103 civil cases I was involved in one way or another, so I kept all of those and about three-fifths of a full criminal load."

Judges on senior status draw a salary of $89,500 a year, the same salary as active judges. They must be at least 65 years old with 15 years experience, or 70 years old with 10 years experience, and will receive any raises granted active judges as long as they stay on senior status.

Judges who resign from the bench — the only other way to retire from the lifetime appointment to a federal judgeship — continue to draw the salary they made on their last day of work. That salary, which is drawn for life, is not adjusted to reflect raises later given active judges.

Judges on senior status would have been eligible for a 51 percent pay increase to $135,000 a year if Congress had not rejected an independent commission's recommendation for the raise Feb. 7.

Judge Eugene R. Gordon of the Middle District, who maintains a caseload about half that of an active judge, said the size of the proposed increase was responsible for the public outcry against it.

"Where the mistake is, in my opinion, is that they have not raised it periodically," said Gordon, 71, who took senior status in July 1982. "To the average man on the street, getting a 50 percent raise is a shock. It's not just the ordinary thing to do."

"I think it was very poorly handled," Gordon said of the pay raise proposal. "The job is worth the money, the $135,000, for an active judge. For what you're paying me on senior status, it's fine, but we are going to have to raise the salaries to attract good people."

Gordon said he takes every ninth civil case that comes up and has gone to Florida and South Carolina to help clear case backlogs.

"I feel like I should make some contribution as long as my health holds up," said Gordon. "We need the help here in this district and, of course, when I went on senior status, that made an opening for a full-time active judge."

Bobbie Frazier of the Middle District clerk's office said Gordon was anything but retired.

"He's here every day — the first one in the building in the morning," she said.

Judge Woodrow Jones, 75, who took senior status in February 1985, carried "about 75 percent of a full load" until October, when his larynx was removed, said Western District clerk Tom McGraw.

Jones has continued to work since his surgery in October, handling prisoner petitions and motions that require a written response, but no hearing, McGraw said.

Judge John D. Larkins Jr., the oldest of North Carolina's senior judges at 80, "takes certain categories of cases, generally those that can be heard on the record," said Leonard.

"But he has tried jury cases, as recently as last fall," Leonard said.

Larkins took senior status in June 1979, when he turned 70 years old.

Two-Thirds Of All Marriages Doomed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Only one in three of today's marriages can be expected to last, according to a new study that says divorce and separation have been under-reported.

The projection is contained in a study in the journal Demography, which says an apparent decline in divorces since 1980 is likely to have little effect on long-term prospects.

"This decline may indicate a return to a more stable family life; however, it would be foolish to jump to that conclusion from this brief deviation from the trend," said researchers Larry L. Bumpass and Teresa Castro Martin of the University of Wisconsin's Center for Demography.

With the marriage rate running about double that for divorces, they note that the basic data indicate "that 56 percent of recent first marriages would be likely to disrupt within 40 years of marriage."

However, studies have found a "serious under-reporting" of divorce and separation in the government's Current Population Survey, according to their study: "Recent Trends in Marital Disruption."

Taking that into consideration "we conclude that the best estimate based on these data is that about two-thirds of all first marriages are likely to disrupt."

"As high as this estimate may seem, it is based on the assumption that a plateau in the long-term trend has in fact occurred," the authors added.

Bumpass noted in a telephone interview that published divorce statistics do not include separations.

Population experts estimate that as many as 6 percent of marriages end in separation without a divorce, he said. That, added to the more than 50 percent that divorce, push the total near the two-thirds range, he said.

These are only estimates, not precise predictions, Bumpass stressed. "We don't have a crystal ball," he said.

The nation's divorce rate rose sharply from the mid-1960s through 1980 and then seemed to reach a plateau and even slip somewhat, an event some observers took to be a return to older family values.

This is disputed by Bumpass and Martin, however, who contend that the changes in this decade could occur for a number of reasons without any overall shift in values.

The growth in divorce after the 1960s has to reach a limit at some point, they said. Plus, some rate changes occur merely because the overall composition of society is changing.

Presidential bootmaker Rocky Carroll shows off his wares

Houston Bootmaker Shoes Presidents And Celebrities

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — When President Bush rolled up his pants and showed off his cowboy boots at an inaugural ball, Rocky Carroll couldn't have asked for better advertising.

Not that he needs it, Carroll's boots — which he makes for presidents, country-western singers and professional athletes, among others — are so popular that longtime customers have to drive around the block a few times just to park at his RJ's Boot Co. shop.

"Before he became famous, he used to fix all my high heels," Donna Meyer said recently while picking up a pair of boots Carroll repaired. "Oh, he is still fixing them for me, but he is so busy now."

"I love what I do," Carroll said. "I was raised in a shoe shop. My mother said I used to suck on a leather heel and cut my first tooth on an old heel."

Carroll's grandparents started the business in the east Texas town of Tenaha. The craft was passed to his parents, who taught Carroll. Carroll, who made his first boot at age 10, has passed the trade to his son and daughter. They, in turn, operate two other shops in Houston.

Bush, for one, is getting to be a regular customer. The president's office called before his recent Far East trip. The request: four pairs of boots.

The call came on a Friday afternoon. The White House wanted the boots by Tuesday, a day before the president's departure.

Carroll had the boots in Washington by Monday night. Among them was a black pair that had a Chinese flag on the front shoe and an American flag on its companion. Bush gave a pair to Chinese Premier Li Peng.

The 51-year-old bootmaker had earlier made a pair for Bush at the request of Houston Police Department officers who escort the president when he visits his hometown.

The black size 11D had the outline of the state of Texas with the Texas flag inside and his initials on the side.

Bush apparently showed off his boots to then-President Reagan, who called Carroll to place his own order — two pair, size 10½B, of brown and black ostrich.

Carroll and his wife made their first trip to Washington late last year to deliver the boots to Reagan. Carroll also gave another pair to Bush, this time black alligator with the presidential seal.

"When we went into the Oval Office, he and the president were teasing each other saying, 'My boots are better looking than yours,'" Carroll recalled. "Bush was like a kid with a new toy."

His handmade boots are expensive toys, though, ranging in price from $295 to $6,500.

Among Carroll's other customers are country-western singers Larry Gatlin and Willie Nelson; actor Patrick Swayze; race car driver A.J. Foyt; several Houston Oilers; and Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus clowns.

At the Black Tie and Boots Inaugural Ball, Bush wore black patent leather boots with a Texas flag set in a gold map of the state with a star designating Houston.

Bush picked Carroll out of the crowd and thanked him. Since then, the bootmaker said, his phone "hasn't stopped ringing."

"One even wanted my autograph. I was so embarrassed. Why would they want my autograph? I'm just an old cowboy," Carroll said.

McFarlane Says North Hid Activity

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Former national security adviser Robert McFarlane testified today that Oliver North did not tell him of all his Contra fund-raising activities when McFarlane questioned him on the matter.

McFarlane, on the stand at North's trial for a second day, testified that he questioned North about his involvement in private fund-raising activities amid congressional inquiries about news reports that North was helping the Contras. The inquiries came in late summer 1985 during a two-year congressional ban on military aid to the guerrillas.

"This was a very thorough kind of discussion the two of us had on more than one occasion," McFarlane testified. "I believe I had a clear understanding and he was very emphatic in saying 'at no time did I break the law on fund-raising'."

Prosecutor John Kecker asked McFarlane whether North told him about his involvement with the National Endowment for the Preservation of Liberty, a tax-exempt organization that raised money for the Contras.

"No," responded McFarlane.

McFarlane also said North didn't tell him that he was controlling the flow of donations sent through NEPL to the Contras.

Stolar Leaves Moscow

U.S. Embassy reception last summer for Soviets denied permission to emigrate.

Stolar traveled to the Soviet Union with his parents, who were Russian emigres and ardent Communists. His father died in Josef Stalin's purges.

Abe Stolar, his wife and and his son have been trying to emigrate since 1975. They got as far as the entrance ramp of their plane when Soviet officials stopped Stolar's wife, claiming she had access to state secrets.

The family received permission to leave again in the mid-1980s, but Stolar's son married and had children, creating more problems. His daughter-in-law was denied permission to emigrate. She received approval in December.

Many long-term refuseniks have been allowed to emigrate under President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's relaxation of restrictions, but Michael Stolar said he knows of many Jews still barred from leaving.

Bragg Soldiers Killed In Crash

Capt. Mark Besich, another Air Force spokesman, had said earlier that the helicopter crashed after taking off from Davis-Monthan.

The crash occurred in an uninhabited area adjacent to the Saguaro National Monument, about 20 miles northwest of Tucson.

The victims' names were not immediately released.

One witness, Mike Skrekas, said he saw the crash from his house a few miles away.

"I looked up and I seen a yellow ball, like flames, coming out of the back," he said. "Five seconds later I saw it hit the ground, and then there was a red fireball."

Another nearby resident, 31-year-old Gary Williams, said he did not see the crash, but heard two helicopters flying "real low" just before one hit the desert floor.

"They were flying so low you could throw and rock and hit them," he said.

At least 50 security officers and investigators from Davis-Monthan were dispatched to the scene, officials said.

"A board of officers is being convened now to investigate the cause of the accident and part of the job of the people here is to make sure that all the pieces of evidence are not disturbed," Roque said.

It was not immediately known if the crew was using night vision goggles when the crash occurred, Roque said.

Since 1978, 37 of 41 Army helicopter crashes in which night goggles were used occurred when there was not enough moonlight for the light-amplifying devices to operate properly, the Orange County (Calif.) Register reported Sunday.

Those crashes killed 65 soldiers when mechanically sound helicopters flew into mountains, oceans, lakes, trees, and power lines, the newspaper reported.

The Army's policy of flying under overcast and moonless nights with night-vision goggles never has been cited as a contributing factor in a crash, military records show.

The crew of the helicopter that crashed Sunday was from the 71st Special Operations Squadron at Davis-Monthan, Roque said. He said he didn't know if the passengers also were attached to the unit.

The CH-3E "Jolly Green Giant," which was most noted for its use in combat rescues during the Vietnam War, is made by Sikorsky, according to Jane's All the World's Aircraft. But Boeing makes several Chinook helicopters with the CH designation.

"In wartime their mission would be to rescue downed pilots from behind enemy lines, consequently they do a lot of night training for combat rescue," Besich said.

'Feeling Rotten' Should Tell Best Friend About Betrayal

Dear Readers: I received a letter from a woman signed "Feeling Rotten," who was beside herself with guilt because while visiting her best friend in another city, her friend's live-in lover came to her bedroom in the middle of the night and she "let him" make love to her. She admitted that she responded positively, adding she "hopes" she's not pregnant because they used no protection. "Feeling Rotten" asked me if she should tell her friend what took place. I aired the pros and cons, then asked my readers how they would vote.

So far, it's a dead heat — and the letters are still coming in: Some responses from readers who say "Tell!"

Dear Abby: "Feeling Rotten" should feel rotten, because she is rotten to the core. She must have given her best friend's live-in lover some kind of encouragement — flirting, body language, eye signals to let him know she could be had — or he never would have had thechutzpah to come to her bed in the middle of the night. Yes, she should tell her friend what kind of bum she's living with. It will probably be the end of their friendship, but if she keeps quiet and her friend marries this heel, it could be the worst mistake of her life. — Been There In Wilmington, Del.

Dear Abby: "Feeling Rotten"

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

should tell her friend immediately. Also, both she and her friend should be tested for AIDS. If they test negative, they should be tested again in six months. And it goes without saying that the sleepwalking boyfriend should also be tested. — An M.D. In The Bronx

Dear Abby: "Feeling Rotten" should tell! How I wish someone had told me what a louse my husband was. He was in his last year of medical training and it was accepted that his hours were erratic and his schedule flexible. Finding out from a phone bill with a list of 15 of the same numbers from a different city was the most agonizing revelation I had to face. He swore he'd never do it again. But he did. If only a friend had told me. I later learned that everyone knew it but me. We are still married and are reasonably happy, but I'll never be able to trust him. We have two fine children, which is the cement that has held us together. — No Name Or Town, Please

Dear Abby: Here's what I would tell Miss Feeling Rotten: Tell your friend everything — exactly the way it happened — then accept the consequences of your friend's reaction. If your friend is so hurt she no longer wants you for a friend, then so be it. I hope you realize that your friend is feeling twice the pain from having been betrayed by both her best friend and her lover. — Paul In Phoenix

Dear Abby: I went through exactly the same thing "Feeling Rotten" experienced, only I cheated with my best friend's husband. When I finally couldn't stand the deceit anymore, I confessed. Do you know what she told me? "What took you so long? It's been all over town for months." — Formerly Easy In Philly

Dear Abby: This happened to me. Only I was married at the time. My wife had a younger sister who spent the night with us. One night my wife went to bed early. Sister and I stayed up to watch television. She said her back ached, so I rubbed her back. One thing led to another, and we ended up in bed. We both felt so guilty, we went to my wife together and told her what had happened, and promised it would never happen again. She was hurt, but she forgave us, and we all put it behind us. Everything is better out in the open. Today, I have no desire for the sister

— nor she for me. (She's married now.) Confessing took the "romance" out of it. — No More Guilt In Vermont

Dear Abby: Why are you surveying your readers about something that has only one answer? Of course "Feeling Rotten" should tell her friend that the man she's living with is sleeping around. Women should stick together. Why keep quiet and protect a cheater? Since it takes two to cheat, they are equally guilty. Those two unprincipled dimwits deserve each other. — Chicago Schoolteacher

Miss Hix Is Wed To Mr. Moore Sunday In St. James United Methodist Church

Caren Lea Hix and Kenneth Edward Moore were united in marriage Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The ceremony was conducted in St. James United Methodist Church by Caswell Shaw. Music was presented by organist Francis Cain and the church Handbell Choir.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James E. Hix Jr. of Greenville, and Mr. and Mrs. James O. Bond of Kinston. The bridegroom's parents are Dr. and Mrs. James R. Moore Jr. of Rockville, Md.

Sherry Clevenger of Greenville was matron of honor. Dawn Broome of Greenville and Nancy Cress of Durham were bridesmaids.

The best man was Lt. Gene Harr of Norfolk, Va. Ushers included Justen D. Hix of Greenville, brother of the bride, and Richard A. Moore of Rockville, brother of the bridegroom.

The bride wore a formal gown of white lace and satin with a Victorian neckline and long fitted sleeves. The all-over lace skirt flowed to a semi-cathedral length train. Seed pearls and sequins trimmed the bodice. She wore a band of silk flowers with sprays of lilies accenting the back and sides attached to a two-tiered, waltz-length veil. The bride carried a bouquet of pink rosebuds, white miniature carnations and white freesia. She was given in marriage by her father.

The bride is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School and East Carolina University. She is a pharmacology doctorate student at Duke University. The bridegroom is a graduate of the University of Maryland and is to receive an M.D. degree from there in May.

Bridal attendants wore formal gowns of royal blue taffeta featuring scoop necklines, shirred sleeves and basque waistlines. The low scoop backs had bows across the shoulders. They carried bouquets of pink alstromeria lilies, white miniature carnations and white freesia.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents at the Colonial Inn in Farmville. Pre-nuptial events included several showers and bridal attendants' luncheon.

Dieters Can't Keep The Lean, Lose Fat

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Can real people on real diets "keep the lean, lose the fat?"

No, says Dr. Gilbert Forbes of the University of Rochester's Medical Center.

"Whenever people lose significant amounts of body weight, they lose some lean tissue in addition to the fat," he says. "Conversely, when people gain weight, most is in the form of fat, but a small proportion is lean tissue. Most obese people have not only larger stores of fat, but larger hearts, livers, kidneys, spleens and pancreases. Their skeletons are heavier, too. Probably the larger organs and heavier frame help support the extra weight."

Last Year's Memories Keyed Heels

UNC Tops Duke To Win ACC Tournament For First Time Since 1982

The Associated Press

J.R. Reid puts up a shot over Duke's Danny Ferry

By Tom Foreman Jr.
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — The much too vivid memory of last year for North Carolina's Steve Bucknall might have been the spark that he and the Tar Heels needed to take the Atlantic Coast Conference championship.

"I didn't want to go through what we went through last year when we all cried in the locker room," Bucknall said, recalling the disconsolate Tar Heels' reactions after Duke's 65-61 victory to win the tournament. This year, North Carolina turned the tables for a 77-74 victory over the Blue Devils and their first title in seven years.

"Now, we go with a good attitude into the NCAA tournament."

Bucknall helped dry the tears himself, scoring all of his 10 points in the final five minutes to stave off a Duke rally. The victory was accompanied by the automatic NCAA tournament bid, and the Tar Heels learned they would be playing in Atlanta again, facing Southern University of the Southwest Athletic Conference Thursday.

It was a foregone conclusion that North Carolina was going to the NCAA tournament, but Bucknall said it wouldn't have been the same with a loss to the Blue Devils.

"If we would have lost, we wouldn't have gone too far in the NCAA. It would have taken a lot out of us," he said.

North Carolina, 27-7, had a 12-point lead in the first half. But Duke, 24-7, rallied to take the lead for the first time with 5:44 left on two free throws by John Smith.

The Tar Heels, who have won 11 ACC tournament titles in 18 trips to the finals, retook the lead 60-59 when Bucknall scored his first points on a three-point play with 5:28 left.

Duke tied it on Robert Brickey's free throw before Bucknall made a three-point play with 1:46 remaining to give the Tar Heels a 69-66 lead.

"I wasn't playing well all day. I wasn't helping earlier offensively, so I tried to penetrate a couple of times and made some good passes," said Bucknall, who led the Tar Heels with five assists.

"Then I penetrated and got a couple of shots. When I went up for them, I knew I wasn't going to miss. I was fortunate and got a couple of 3-points."

Bucknall missed his first four shots before connecting on his last two. He also was 6-for-6 from the free throw line.

Bucknall and King Rice each added four free throws in the final minute as Duke, seeking its ninth ACC tournament title, could only get as close as 71-69 with 32 seconds left on a free throw by Christian Laettner.

Duke's leading scorer, Danny Ferry, who was held to 14 points, attempted a 70-foot desperation heave at the buzzer that would have tied it. It bounced off the rim, evoking a collective gasp from the crowd and sigh of relief from the Tar Heel faithful.

ATLANTA — It was basketball, but the players for Duke and North Carolina looked more like boxers than participants in the Atlantic Coast Conference championship.

J.R. Reid was the tournament's most valuable player, and he had a small welt under his right eye. Scott Williams left the game three times, twice with his recurrent bad shoulder, only to return. Danny Ferry wore a nasty 4-inch scar on the left side of his face.

In the second half, the two teams nearly came to blows. In all, 49 fouls were called.

"It was one of the most physical games I've been in," Reid said after the Tar Heels took their 77-74 victory over the Blue Devils.

"If a team wants to bang with us for 40 minutes, we're going to win," Reid said. "We've got Kevin Madden and Scott Williams in there and Pete Chilcutt and me, not that many teams can bang with us for 40 minutes."

Ferry, who said he was hurt when he was hit by Reid while going up for a shot, said the day was disappointing.

"We didn't play poorly ... but we didn't win," he said. "And that's frustrating."

And, without a doubt, quite intense. "Of the games that we've played this year, I think this was the game that was played the hardest," Ferry said. "There have been other games in the past, but I think both teams really, really came at each other real hard. They came out more together in the first five minutes than we did and we paid for that for the rest of the game."

Williams deserved some sort of badge. He hurt his shoulder in a scramble under the basket, hit his head hard on the floor in another scramble and had to come out of the game when he dived on the floor for a loose ball, hurting his shoulder again.

UNC's Smith Is Unhappy With Pairings

By Tom Foreman Jr.

ATLANTA — Duke didn't win the Atlantic Coast Conference championship but got an NCAA tournament berth just an hour from its front door, and that has North Carolina Coach Dean Smith livid.

Six Atlantic Coast Conference teams were invited to the NCAA championship chase, with tournament winner North Carolina set to return to Atlanta and Duke getting to play in Greensboro. It is the third straight season in which the Blue Devils begin their tournament play inside North Carolina.

"We love Greensboro," Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski said in a telephone interview with the Capitol Sports Network. "We're pleased."

Smith was not the least bit pleased with the news that he was being sent back to Atlanta, and, in fact was not happy about the way some of the pairings developed.

"The idea in the past has been that if you are the best, you stay in your home area," Smith said in a prepared statement released by the school. "Based on our schedule and record, we should have been in our home area unless we were competing for a spot with Georgetown, which we weren't."

More ACC teams were invited to the NCAA tournament than any other conference. The Big East, the Big Ten and the Southeastern conferences will each field five teams in the 64-team field.

Two ACC teams — Duke and North Carolina State — will play in the East Regionals; North Carolina and Virginia will be in the Southeast Regionals, and Georgia Tech goes to the Midwest while Clemson goes to the West.

The Tar Heels, 27-7, took a 77-74 victory over the Blue Devils in the ACC tournament finals, and were

Kings Roll, Top Hornets

CHARLOTTE — The recent trades that brought forward Wayman Tisdale and guard Danny Ainge to the Sacramento Kings are beginning to pay dividends for the struggling franchise.

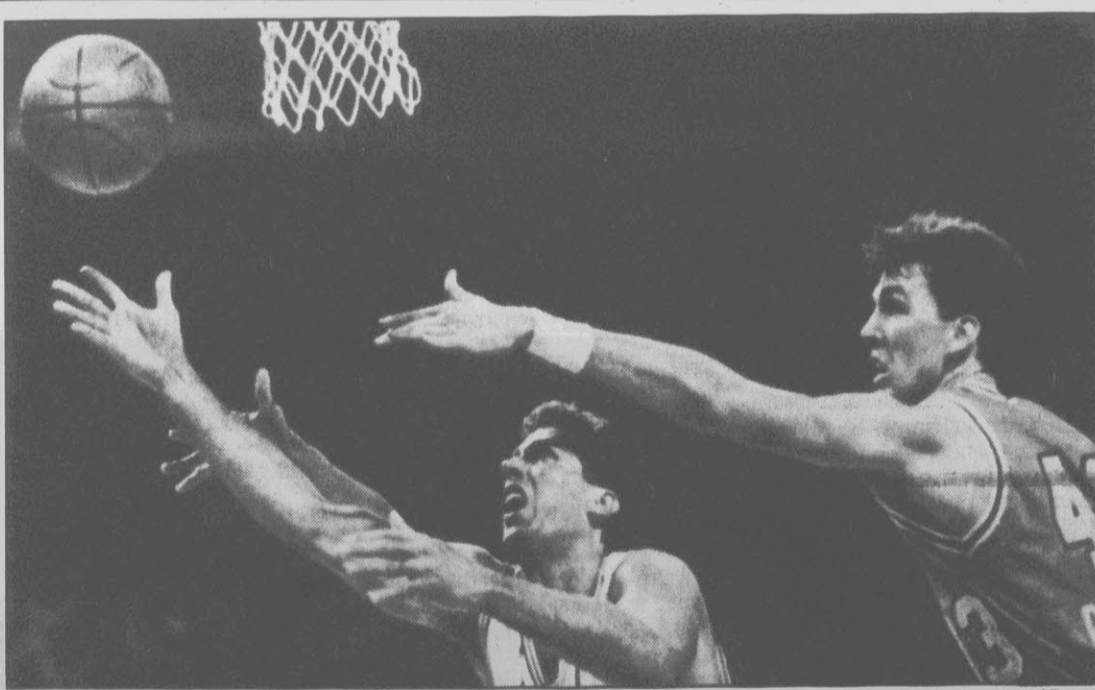

Led by Tisdale's 20 second-half points and Ainge's 15 points and game-high 10 assists, the Kings held off a late challenge by the Hornets to beat Charlotte 114-105 Sunday afternoon.

The win was only the fifth in 33 road games this season for the Kings, who acquired Tisdale from Indiana and Ainge from the Celtics in separate trades last month.

"I think we are starting to put the pieces together here. We're very glad to have Tisdale and Ainge," said Kings coach Jerry Reynolds. "I think if we can get a quality big man we have the potential to be a good team."

While Reynolds is hopeful despite his team's 17-45 record, Hornets coach Dick Harter must prepare his players for a five-game road trip after losing a season-long seventh straight game.

old and our young players are playing young, although I thought Rex (Chapman) had an excellent game," said Harter, whose Hornets (15-46) have been out of the game early in four of those seven losses.

Chapman, a rookie guard out of Kentucky, scored a career-high 37 points — 20 in the second half — as Charlotte got to within three points of the Kings after trailing by 20 at the 6:45 mark of the third quarter.

Tisdale led Sacramento with 28 points and guard Kenny Smith added 22 Sunday as the Kings snapped their own three-game skid.

The Kings held off the Hornets' second-half challenge by hitting 24 of 28 free throws, including a perfect 13-for-13 in the final 24 minutes.

The Hornets weren't much worse — hitting 20 of 26 free throws. But the Kings hit 51 percent from the field to 48 percent for Charlotte.

The Hornets hit only 40 percent of their shots in the first half, while the Kings were hitting just over 50 percent to take a 60-45 lead.

Final Rematch Conley Faces E. Carteret Again

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

D.H. Conley's boys basketball team will face a familiar foe in the finals of the Section I 3-A high school basketball playoffs tonight.

The Vikings, 21-5 on the year, will square off against Coastal 3-A Conference foe East Carteret at 8 p.m. at Southwest Edgecombe High School. The winner will advance to the East regionals in Fayetteville later this week.

The Mariners advanced to the finals by upsetting Tarboro Saturday, while the Vikings easily disposed of Apex.

If things go as they have in the prior two meetings this year for Conley, the Vikings should roll. Conley recorded 61-40 and 63-41 victories over the Mariners in the two meetings this year.

In the first win, the Vikings jumped out to a 18-8 lead in the first quarter and went on to roll to the 61-40 advantage paced by 18 points from Terry Willimas and 14 from Paul Merritt.

In the second game, the Mariners led 21-20 after the first period only to see the Vikings snatch a 32-26 halftime lead and then roll 31-15 in the second half. Williams led the way in that win also scoring 20 points, while Merritt chipped in 12. Guard Junior Farrow and center J.J. Stephenson each added 10.

"Well I hope since we saw them play the other night that the players realize that we're not talking about the same team that we played earlier," Conley coach Cobby Deans said. "They're a vastly improved team since the last time we played them. We'll have to do a much better job this time to win."

The leaders for the Mariners offensively are center Billy Ellison and forward Joe Montford. Ellison led East Carteret in scoring in both of the losses to the Vikings this year with 13 and 15 points respectively, while Montford was limited to outputs of nine and six points.

"Ellison is the main concern for me on defense," Deans said. "He presents a size problem for us inside. We'll have to try and keep Montford off the boards. He's happy when he can get a couple of dunks, so we need to make him work for what he gets."

East Carteret may be improved, but Deans also feels that the Vikings are playing better now.

Brown Keys Bucs To Clean Sweep

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Calvin Brown banged out four hits, driving in four runs in the first game of a doubleheader and East Carolina got fine pitching from Jake Jacobs and Jonathan Jenkins to sweep Connecticut Sunday, 8-0 and 7-2, in a baseball doubleheader.

Brown, who was hitless in the second game, cracked a three-run homer and added a single and two doubles in the opening game of the afternoon. Jenkins picked up his third win of the year in that game, going the first five innings and allowing only two hits as he struck out four.

Jacobs, winning his second against no losses, went the distance in the second game, scattering six hits, walking one and fanning five. Only one of the two runs against him were earned.

In the second game, however, the Pirates had to break a 2-2 tie to come away with the win.

"In the second game, we had a number of hits, but we weren't able to score runs in small bunches," ECU coach Gary Overton said. "But we still managed to explode the game."

That came in the fifth inning when the Pirates came up with five runs to put the contest on ice.

ECU Softballers Top BC, But Fall To UNC

CHAPEL HILL — East Carolina recorded a 5-2 win over Boston College in the early game but fell to North Carolina, 5-4, in the late contest in collegiate softball action Sunday.

The Pirates will be back in action this Saturday and Sunday at the Richmond/Hyatt Intercollegiate Tournament in Richmond.

Kite Takes Playoff Win Over Love

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Tom Kite and Davis Love III both double-bogeyed the 18th hole Sunday to send the Nestle Invitational to a playoff, and Kite won the tournament when Love three-putted the second extra hole.

Both made pars at 16. On 17, Kite got his approach in the fringe, and Love found the green. But he was 30-40 feet away and left his putt about eight feet short. Kite got down in two for par, and Love missed his putt for par.

The 39-year-old Kite, third on the all-time earnings list, collected $144,000 from the total purse of $800,000 and pushed his total for the year to $318,723. Kite, who won this tournament in 1982 when it was known as the Bay Hill Classic, won for the first time since the 1987 Kemper Open.

NIT Grabs NCAA Leftovers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Defending champion Connecticut and Ohio State, whom the Huskies beat in last year's final, were selected Sunday for the 52nd National Invitation Tournament.

Connecticut will travel to North Carolina-Charlotte, 17-11, in the opening round on Wednesday.

Ohio State, Temple and Villanova were the three NIT teams who were ranked in The Associated Press preseason Top Twenty. The 32-team tournament will include 13 schools with 20 or more victories, led by Georgia Southern, 23-5, Boise State, 23-6, and St. Louis, 23-9.

Also named were New Mexico,

20-9; New Mexico State, 21-10; Arkansas State, 20-9; Santa Clara, 20-10; Kent State, 20-10; Akron, 21-7; Richmond, 20-9; St. Peter's, 22-8; UC Santa Barbara 21-8; and Southern Illinois, 20-13.

Others invitees were Alabama-Birmingham, 18-11; Mississippi, 15-14; New Orleans, 19-10; St. John's, 15-13; Wichita State, 18-13; Wisconsin, 17-11; Murray State, 19-10; Penn State, 19-11; Hawaii, 17-12; California, 19-11; Pepperdine, 19-12; Nebraska 16-15; Michigan State, 15-13; and Oklahoma State, 16-12.

Temple, 18-11, reached the NCAA final eight last year, where it lost to Duke. The Owls, who were ranked 19th in the AP preseason poll, were upset in the Atlantic 10 conference tournament semifinals by Rutgers.

The Villanova Wildcats, 16-15, were 12th in the preseason poll, but, in the tough Big East didn't fare well against Georgetown, Syracuse, Seton Hall and Pitt.

St. John's is in the NIT for a record 25th time and seeking a record fourth title. The last time the Redmen won the NIT was in 1965, the last year St. John's was coached by Joe Lapchick.

Wisconsin posted victories this year over Big 10 champion Indiana, Illinois and Michigan.

The tournament gets underway Wednesday with Mississippi at St. John's, Temple at Richmond, St. Peter's at Villanova, Akron at Ohio State, Southern Illinois at St. Louis,

New Orleans at Wisconsin, and Murray State at Penn State.

On Thursday, it will be UC Santa Barbara at Wichita State, Georgia Southern at Alabama-Birmingham, Hawaii at California, Pepperdine at New Mexico State, Arkansas State at Nebraska, Santa Clara at New Mexico, and Kent State vs. Michigan State at Cobo Arena in Detroit.

The first round will be completed Friday when Boise State travels to Oklahoma State.

The second round will be played March 20-21 and the third round March 22-23-24, all at campus sites.

The semifinalists will play in New York's Madison Square Garden March 27, with the final set for March 29.

seeded second in the Southeast Regional in Atlanta. North Carolina will play next Friday against the 15th-seeded Southwestern Athletic Conference winner Southern, which defeated Texas Southern for the league championship in overtime.

But Smith made his displeasure clear in the statement. He said the selection committee "apparently has decided to determine the Big 10 championship itself instead of deciding it on the court."

"Indiana, which won the Big 10 title, should definitely be ranked ahead of Illinois. I have a hunch Cedric Dempsey didn't want Indiana to play in Indianapolis since Arizona couldn't play in Tucson," Smith said.

Dempsey is the chairman of the nine-member selection committee, and also is the athletic director at Arizona. His school's basketball team was top-seeded in the West, but will play its first-round game in Boise, Idaho.

Duke, 24-7 and seeded second, will face Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference champion and 15th-seeded South Carolina State, which is 25-7.

The last time Duke started an NCAA tournament in Greensboro, it faced a tough Mississippi Valley State team.

"We were outplayed to the last eight minutes of the game. We had a very difficult game and that was a noon game," Krzyzewski said.

The coach said he understood the NCAA tournament selection committee wanted to avoid pitting an ACC team against a Big East team in an early round in the same region, thus the placement of the Tar Heels in Atlanta.

"We're a little bit concerned about playing on Thursday because of the three tough games here," Krzyzewski said in a telephone interview with the Capitol Sports Network Sunday. "We're happy we're not traveling."

Krzyzewski said he doesn't think the Blue Devils are drained from the ACC battle, but he said the team will get Monday off to rest and prepare.

The Duke coach said he also was pleased with the committee's decision to take six teams.

"The ACC was a great conference this year. I thought we deserved to have six teams," Krzyzewski said.

The Wolfpack, 20-8, lost its first-round ACC tournament game to Maryland and was seeded fifth in the East Regional at Providence. N.C. State will play Metro Conference member and 12th-seeded South Carolina, 19-10, on Friday.

Clemson, which along with Virginia felt it was worthy of getting an invitation, was shipped to the West Regional as the ninth-seeded team. The Tigers, 18-10, will meet eighth-seeded St. Mary's, 25-4, next Thursday at Boise, Idaho.

The Cavaliers, who beat Clemson to get to the ACC tournament semifinals, also gained a berth in the Southeast Regional in Nashville, Tenn., and a Thursday game against 12th-seeded Providence, which is 18-10. Virginia, 19-10, is the fifth seed.

"We did have a chance to see them in the middle part of the season," Virginia Coach Terry Holland said of a Providence game against Georgetown. "I know a little bit about the Providence team, but I don't know exactly what they've been doing the last couple of weeks."

Georgia Tech, 20-11, first-round losers to North Carolina in the ACC tournament, has a Friday matchup against 11th-seeded Texas, 24-8, of the Southwestern Conference in the Midwest Regional in Dallas. The Yellow Jackets are the sixth-seeded team.

Arizona and Georgetown won their way into No. 1 regional seeds for the upcoming NCAA basketball tournament. Oklahoma lost its way into one.

The NCAA announced its 64-team field Sunday while Arizona was still in the process of hammering Stanford 73-51 in the championship game of the Pacific-10 tournament. Georgetown overpowered Syracuse 88-79 for the Big East title and while Oklahoma bowed to Missouri 98-86 in the Big Eight final.

Arizona was seeded No. 1 in the West Regional. Georgetown in the East and Oklahoma, despite its defeat, in the Southeast. Illinois, the No. 1 seed in the Midwest, wound up its regular season Saturday by trouncing Michigan 89-73.

Other teams that nailed down automatic NCAA berths by capturing conference tournaments Sunday included North Carolina in the Atlantic Coast, Louisville in the Metro, Ball State in the Mid-American, Alabama in the Southeastern, Arkansas in the Southwest and Southern University in the Southwestern Athletic.

Pac-10: Arizona 73, Stanford 51
Sean Elliott scored 16 of his 21 points in the first half as Arizona took command early. The Wildcats went ahead for good after less than six minutes and led 43-27 at halftime although Stanford made 11 of its 15 shots. But the Cardinal had as many turnovers as shot attempts and finished with 23 giveaways. In addition,

Todd Lichti, Stanford's leading scorer with a 20.6-point average, was held to 11.

"It was a case of Arizona implementing their game plan and us not being able to get cooking," Stanford coach Mike Montgomery said. "They handled the pressure well and did a good job of taking us out of our offense. I give credit to Arizona to get us away from our game."

"I thought it was probably as strong a defensive effort as we've had in a long time," Arizona coach Lute Olson said.

Big East: Georgetown 88, Syracuse 79

Freshman Alonzo Mourning scored 21 points as Georgetown won its sixth title in the Big East's 10-year history. The Hoyas controlled the game throughout the second half after using an 8-0 run to take a 58-45 lead with 11:50 to play. They led by as many as 23.

Georgetown guard Charles Smith, the conference's Player of the Year, was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player after scoring 16 points to go along with 24 and 26 in the first two games. Stephen Thompson led Syracuse with 19 points.

"Right now, everybody's healthy and keeping their concentration for 40 minutes," said guard Mark Tillmon, who scored 17 points. "We just played three big games, got a lead and kept pouring it on and we plan to keep doing that."

However, Coach John Thompson said his team "didn't play as well as they're capable of."

Big Eight: Missouri 98, Oklahoma 86

Byron Irvin scored 29 points, Doug Smith had 22 points and 14 rebounds, Gary Leonard had 16 points and Lee Coward 15 as Missouri dominated from the start and tied a school record with its 27th victory.

Oklahoma's Stacey King scored a tournament-record 38 points but didn't get much help. The Sooners, who shot 42 percent compared to 66 percent for Missouri, scored only 19 points from the perimeter.

With Leonard scoring 12 points and Irvin 11, the Tigers took an eight-point halftime lead. A 14-6 run to start the second half stretched the lead to 58-42.

"It was a special occasion," said Smith, a 6-10 sophomore who was named the tournament's MVP and whose mother was watching him for the first time. "I just tried to go out and do what I've been doing all along. I just had a great game today."

"Missouri had a great game. They shot well and whipped us on the boards," Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs said. "They did about everything you have to do to win. They got command of the game and did a great job."

Metro: Louisville 87, Florida St. 80

Pervis Ellison scored 22 points as Louisville won its second straight Metro tournament. Louisville led by 14 in the second half but the Seminoles cut the margin to three with 1:35 left on a three-point play by Derrick Mitchell. Ellison and LaBradford Smith each hit two free throws in the final 37 seconds to clinch the victory.

The title was the Cardinals' seventh in the 14-year history of the league. Florida State was the regular-season champion.

Mid-American: Ball St. 67, Kent St. 65

Billy Butts scored 19 points, including five 3-pointers, and Paris McCurdy added 15 points and 11 rebounds as Ball State withstood a late Kent State rally.

The Cardinals, whose 28-2 record in the nation's best, led by 11 twice in the second half but fell behind 61-60 on two free throws by Eric Glenn with 2:33 left. McCurdy hit a jumper 40 seconds later and two foul shots by Curtis Kidd with 1:02 left made it 64-61. The Cardinals then held on amid a flurry of turnovers and missed 3-pointers.

SEC: Alabama 72, Florida 60

Keith Askins scored 14 of his 23 points during a 2:14 span in the second half as Alabama broke open a close game to win its fourth SEC tournament. Askins hit four consecutive 3-pointers during the spurt that helped the Crimson Tide extend a one-point lead to 49-38. Florida, 21-12, was the regular-season SEC champion.

SWC: Arkansas 100, Texas 76

Lenzie Howell scored 28 points as Arkansas won the Southwest Conference tournament for the first time in seven years. Arkansas broke the record of 92 points in a SEC tournament championship game set by Houston in 1978.

The Razorbacks were spurred by the ejection of center Mario Credit, who was thrown out for swinging an elbow at Texas center George Muller with Arkansas leading 38-28 in the first half. Arkansas scored 10 straight points after the ejection and subsequent technical foul on Coach Nolan Richardson.

SWAC: Southern U. 86, Texas Southern 81

Carlos Sample scored 26 points, including four free throws in the final second of overtime. Texas Southern led 81-80 with three seconds left when Darrion Applewhite was called for an intentional foul on Southern's Darryl Battles, who made both free throws.

Southern also retained possession and Sample was fouled by Clayton Crook with one second to play. He made both free throws to make it 84-81. Texas Southern then called a timeout it didn't have, was assessed a technical foul, and Sample sank two more free throws. Joe Faulkner scored 25 points for Southern.

playing just one half," said Charlotte forward Kelly Tripucka, who finished with 28 points — 18 in the second half. "Everybody hates losing streaks but it is hard to win in this league. We just have to be patient and play a little harder."

The Kings built their lead to 20 points with 6:25 to play in the third quarter.

After the Hornets went on a 15-3 tear to narrow the lead to 91-89, Tisdale scored four straight points and Smith followed with a three-point play to make it 98-89 with a little more than nine minutes to play.

The Hornets got within five points on a drive by Michael Holton with 6:50 left, but that was the closest they would get.

"When they were coming back they were hitting some great shots but you can't keep that up for an entire half," said Ainge. "They used a lot of emotion for their comeback and that is why it's easier to play when you're ahead. When they did catch us we were able to get some emotion."

Harold Pressley came off the bench to score 18 points and center Jim Peterson added 14 points and grabbed nine rebounds for the Kings.

Tisdale finished with a game-high 10 rebounds, including six in the second half.

"He is capable of having great games," Harter said. "If he becomes more consistent, he will become an all-star."

Celtics 121, Nuggets 115
Boston used some strong play off the bench to hand Denver a 121-115 loss Sunday.

"This was a bench contribution," Celtics coach Jimmy Rodgers said. "We got a solid effort from all the reserves. We came quite a ways from behind with our bench."

Jim Paxson was one of the keys in Boston's victory, coming off the bench to score 17 points and help erase a 13-point second-half deficit. Also putting in a solid performance was Kelvin Upshaw, who signed a 10-day contract with the Celtics last Friday.

Reggie Lewis paced the Celtics' attack with 28 points as Denver suffered its 25th loss in 31 road games this season.

Alex English led Denver with 27.

Lakers 126, Warriors 115
Byron Scott scored 32 points and shot down Golden State with three 3-point bombs in the final period as the Lakers posted their fourth straight victory.

Scott ended a furious comeback bid by the Warriors when he snapped a 109-109 tie late in the fourth quarter with the first of his three straight bombs. After Winston Garland hit a 3-pointer for Golden State, Scott hit two more to make it 118-112, and the Lakers never lost the lead again.

Cavaliers 123, Trail Blazers 110

Brad Daugherty scored 23 points as Cleveland broke a two-game losing streak. Craig Ehlo added 19 points for the Cavaliers, while Larry Nance had 16 points and 14 rebounds.

Pistons 110, Bullets 104

Isiah Thomas scored 22 points and sparked an 11-4 fourth-quarter run that led Detroit past Washington. It was the Pistons' seventh straight victory.

Detroit has won 10 of its last 11 games and 10 in a row at home.

Holyfield Ready For Tyson Shot

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — There's a sense of urgency in Evander Holyfield's quest for a title shot against undisputed heavyweight champion Mike Tyson.

"We want to do it now, while he (Tyson) is alive," said Holyfield's manager, Ken Sanders. "We're concerned about what Tyson is going to do next (outside the ring)."

Holyfield emerged as perhaps Tyson's only legitimate challenger Saturday night when he beat and bloodied former champion Michael Dokes before stopping him with a pair of thundering left hooks in the 10th round.

Immediately after the fight, Sanders issued a winner-take-all challenge for $25 million for a battle between the undefeated fighters.

"If we can't beat him, we don't want nothing," said Sanders. "This could be the greatest sports event of all time."

It also could be a sports event that will take some time before it comes off.

With Tyson's estranged manager, Bill Cayton, and promoter Don King working on fights against two different journeyman opponents, it could be late in the year before Holyfield gets his crack at the champion.

"It will work," Holyfield said of the winner-take-all offer. "I feel I am the best. I'm not looking at the fact of losing."

ECU Takes Two From Connecticut ...

"I thought both Jenkins and Jacobs threw the ball well," Overton said. "Still, Connecticut didn't seem to be the team they have been in the past. They didn't have the same old punch. Of course, I have to give some of that credit to our pitchers. But I don't think we saw the pitching and hitting that we usually see from them."

Overton said he was disappointed in the fact that the Pirates are getting people on base, but the team fails to move them up. "Too, a lot of times when we get people into scoring position, we don't get them across."

Sunday, however, it wasn't too bad. ECU left only 11 runners stranded in the two games. However, baserunning mistakes did cost them as two were picked off first base.

"Still, this was two good wins for us," Overton said. "We needed them after losing to South Carolina and with a tough game ahead with N.C. State."

Connecticut did open the first game as it was looking to win its first game of the young season, after dropping a 4-0 decision in its opener to Virginia Commonwealth. Brian Specyalski lined a double down the line in left. But Jenkins allowed only a bunt single after that although reliever David Willis gave up three hits in the seventh. ECU escaped that threat with a double play.

The Pirates wasted little time in taking the lead on the Huskies. John Thomas beat out a slow roller to short and stole second. He moved to third on a hit by Tommy Eason.

Brown then stepped in and lined the ball over the fence in right for a 3-0 lead.

The Pirates got two more in the third. Brown singled and John Gast followed with a homer to left. It was the second round-tripper for each of them.

The Pirates added one in the fifth to make it 6-0. Brown doubled to right and scored on a hit to center by Steve Godin.

The final two came in the seventh. David Daniels arrived on a chopper down the third base line and Thomas singled him to third, moving up on the relay. Eason grounded out, scoring Daniels and Brown doubled to right again, scoring Thomas with the final run of the game.

Thomas had two hits for the Pirates to go with Brown's four. Todd Rosenthal had a pair to lead the Huskies.

East Carolina again struck early in the second game, getting two in the bottom of the first. Thomas opened with a single and went all the way to third when, as he stole second, the ball got away from catcher Frank Gately. Thomas scored on Chris Cauble's single to center. Eason got a third straight hit off Craig Gaudio, but he set the next two down. Godin, however, singled to left, scoring courtesy runner Kevin Riggs to make it 2-0.

Connecticut got its first runs of the year in the third, scoring two to tie it up. Rob Rotondo walked and Specyalski reached on a bunt when no one covered first in time. Rosenthal's grounder to second was errored, loading them up. Coffee then reached on another infield hit, scoring Rotondo. A sacrifice fly by Ed Rossy brought in Specyalski.

The Pirates then came up with five runs in the fifth to gain the win. David Ritchie led off with a single and Thomas doubled to right. Chris Cauble followed with a single to left, scoring Ritchie with the go-ahead run.

Eason added a double off the centerfield fence, scoring both Thomas and Riggs, who was running for Cauble. Gast singled to left and Godin lined one up the alley in left center for another double, driving in Eason. Godin scored on a squeeze bunt by Mike Andrews.

Thomas, Cauble, Eason, Godin and Ritchie each had two hits as the Pirates picked up 11 for the second

Cosby Show Tops People's Choice Awards

BURBANK, Calif. — Bill Cosby and "The Cosby Show" swept the People's Choice Awards with five honors, and the TV sitcom "Roseanne" and the film "Rain Man" also were viewers' favorites. Cosby was voted favorite male television performer, all-around male star and his NBC series won favorite comedy in the 15th annual edition of the entertainment popularity contest conducted by a nationwide Gallup Organization poll. "The Cosby Show" also won all-time favorite television show honors, edging out longer-running hits "M-A-S-H" and "Star Trek," while "Cosby" co-star Phylicia Rashad was picked as favorite female television performer.

"It's certainly gratifying to know that you and the work you do are appreciated by the people," Miss Rashad said backstage.

Cosby was not at the awards ceremony at Walt Disney Studios but thanked the public in a videotaped message that showed him in bed on "The Cosby Show" set.

The two-hour awards show was broadcast nationally with Michael Landon and Michele Lee as hosts.

The ABC-TV situation comedy "Roseanne," which portrays the life of a blue-collar mother, was another big favorite, winning three awards.

"Roseanne" star Roseanne Barr was voted favorite female performer in a new television series, the show won for new television comedy series and co-star John Goodman was voted favorite male performer in a new television series.

"I'd like to accept this award on behalf of all the working moms and housewives," said Miss Barr.

ABC's "China Beach" won for new television dramatic series and NBC's "L.A. Law" was selected as favorite television dramatic series.

Kirk Cameron of ABC-TV's "Growing Pains" was selected favorite young television performer.

The World War II saga "War and Remembrance," ABC's globe-spanning story of a family torn by World War II, won for best miniseries despite its disappointing ratings.

It was selected over "Elvis and Me" and "Favorite Son," but was not against CBS' block-busting miniseries "Lonesome Dove," which was not included because it was broadcast in 1989.

In film categories, Dustin Hoffman was voted favorite actor in a dramatic motion picture and his "Rain Man" won as favorite dramatic motion picture. Cher was voted favorite all-around female star.

Fairbanks Prefers To Discuss Future

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Douglas Fairbanks Jr. says most people want to hear him reminisce about his days as a leading man during Hollywood's golden age, but he'd "rather talk about the future."

The man who started out in 1922 at age 13 in the silent film "Stephen Steps Out" has just completed filming a brief appearance on Burt Reynolds' new television series, "B.L. Stryker." He also plans to participate in documentaries on director Frank Capra and actress Rita Hayworth in Rome this spring. "What I've always strived for was independence," he said in an interview published Sunday in The New York Times. "In my day, the only people who achieved real independence were my father, (my stepmother) Mary Pickford and Charles Chaplin. ... Other than that, everybody belonged to the big studios."

While an actor's lot has improved over the years, writers have "always been at the bottom of the creative heap," he said.

William Faulkner and F. Scott Fitzgerald often were forced to "doctor up other people's scripts. Finally they succumbed to the studios because they needed the money. It's much the same today, I fear."

Fairbanks, 79, will discuss his career in a series of four public interviews beginning Tuesday at the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

'Sin Is Fine,' Actress States

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Actress Catherine Deneuve says she's a party girl who doesn't mind some harmless vice.

"I'm a bon vivant, a reveler," the French star of 60 films said in an interview in April's Vanity Fair magazine. "I like going out, being with people, and I'll stay up late when I'm shooting."

She also said she's "not against sin. If it isn't a deadly sin and it doesn't hurt someone else's life, sin is fine. That's what gives virtue its value."

The 45-year-old Deneuve has two children, both by men who were married to other women — director Roger Vadim and actor Marcello Mastroianni.

"There is no such thing as a home wrecker, a femme fatale," she said. "Some men are available."

Of the stunning beauty that made her the face of Chanel perfume, she said: "It's not my looks, it's the fact that I'm reserved that intimidates people. With this face, if I had a softer, sweeter voice, if I sounded less brusque, if I were warmer and more demonstrative, they'd forget my face."

Food For A Horse

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — In his first on-air meeting with Bryant Gumbel since the release of Gumbel's memo criticizing his "Today" show colleagues, weatherman Willard Scott today kissed Gumbel on the cheek, then got off a zinger.

Scott, plugging Purina pet foods, told Gumbel that Purina "makes all kinds of food for animals. They make goat food, they make horse food."

"They make it for the complete horse, so you wouldn't be interested," Scott added.

Gumbel looked slightly chagrined, and Scott added, laughing, "I had to do something."

Scott was the recipient of the strongest criticism from Gumbel in the memo to the NBC show's executive producer. Gumbel complained about Scott's "bad taste" and the amount of time he spends sending birthday greetings to elderly viewers.

The memo was written in the fall and was leaked two weeks ago, apparently after being taken from Gumbel's computer file.

Scott was on vacation last week, though he and Gumbel talked by telephone, with Scott making Gumbel take an on-air pledge against computer memo-writing.

Gumbel was on vacation the week the memo was leaked.

 MAZTIG: "WFMU IGJ SKFOU."
Saturday's Cryptoquip: THE WITTIEST NETWORK CENSOR: HE'S GREAT AT CUTTING REMARKS.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: I equals A

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY March 14

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Keep an open mind. Investigate matters and look behind the scene before moving ahead. Aries energy tends to leap before looking.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): The battle of the sexes may penetrate your space. Patience will be required to stay uninvolved. Look forward to a great afternoon.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Your heart could skip a beat when you cross paths with someone provocative and stimulating. Turmoil can divert attention.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You can hit all the right buttons when good luck and intuition are working for you. Primetime has some interesting diversions.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Respect the knowledge of the people around you. You will hear new information about the future. Get important correspondence in the mail.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): You are very close to hearing from someone who knows your family well. Cut down on work time, if it cuts into family time.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Remember the virtues of rest and the proper use of leisure time. Watch the stress level and slow down the pace.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Acquiring material things is not the road to bliss that you think it is. You have a feeling of pride and are committed to uphold it.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): There is no way to stop the progress of what has already been started. Accept what you have accomplished thus far.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): You may feel that you are living in a time warp. Pause and give proper attention to organizing the future. Look to the past for clues.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Beware of bogus offers and schemes that are too good to be true. Avoid spending sprees. Protect assets and focus on income.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Your own interests stand waiting when you are a mother hen to everyone else's needs. Give yourself a break. Let someone else take over.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠A10542 ♥7 ♦83 ♣J7642
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 NT 3 ♦ ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—You would like to compete, but how? A bid of three spades by you would be forcing, and you don't have the values or distribution to insist on game. Pass. When you're fixed, stay fixed!

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠103 ♥762 ♦J9875432 ♣Void
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♣ 1 ♠ 2 ♥ Pass
 3 ♥ 3 ♣ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—At the table, South bid four spades on the theory that his partner had to have a diamond fit. He wasn't listening to the auction. North does have a two-suiter, but it is in the blacks. Pass, and hope that nine tricks aren't beyond partner's reach after a trump lead.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K8732 ♥K106 ♦83 ♣K73
 Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
 A.—This depends on your methods. If you play limit raises, perfect—jump to three spades. If you play forcing jump raises, you have a problem. The way to solve it is to temporize by bidding two clubs, then raising spades next. Don't jump to four spades—that shows more distribution and fewer high cards.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠83 ♥KQ10652 ♦97 ♣1032
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 3 ♥ Pass ?

What action do you take?
 A.—Partner's jump to three hearts is invitational, not game-forcing. He is showing a hand of some 16-18 points. In terms of point count you might not have quite enough for game, but that sixth heart is pure gold. Raise to four hearts.

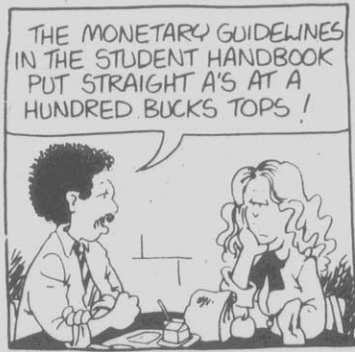

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AJ5 ♥AKQJ93 ♦85 ♣62
 Partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?
 A.—The requirements for a jump shift are a game-going hand either with a self-sufficient suit or with excellent support for partner's suit. This hand certainly meets the first standard, so jump to two hearts.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AJ6 ♥AQ954 ♦K7 ♣A72
 Partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?
 A.—Although this hand, in terms of high cards, is far stronger than the previous example, it meets neither of the conditions for a jump shift. Since you don't yet know where you want to play the hand, respond one heart. You can catch up later if you find a fit.

Veterans wave an American Flag in Chicago demonstration

Four Arrested In Flag Dispute

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — A hotly debated art exhibit that has a U.S. flag lying on a floor touched off a protest by about 2,500 veterans and supporters and a clash that led to the arrests of at least four, police said.

Before the scuffle, police arrested two men who described themselves as art students as they stenciled American flags on the sidewalks around the museum building. They were charged with criminal damage to property.

During Sunday's demonstration outside the Art Institute of Chicago, a group of veterans attacked about a dozen students who were holding a counter-demonstration. They swung fists, threw hot coffee and shouted at the students to leave the country. Police intervened, and no one was injured.

Police said at least one veteran was arrested on battery charges and three students were charged with disorderly conduct. The confrontation was broken up after police led the students to a corner about two blocks away from the veterans, and kept the groups apart.

In front of the institute, the veterans, who came from at least nine states, chanted, "One, two, three, four, get the flag off the floor."

"I just think it's a sin to have the flag on the floor," said Michael Boorsma, 38, a Vietnam veteran from suburban Batavia. "It bothers me tremendously."

Veterans also came from Wisconsin, West Virginia, Michigan, Indiana, Oklahoma, New York, Vermont, and Arkansas. They waved hundreds of flags, including some with the Revolutionary War motto "Don't tread on me."

The demonstration was the biggest in a series of protests over a student art exhibit titled "What is the Proper Way to Display a U.S. Flag?" The exhibit includes the flag lying on the floor beneath a shelf where visitors can write comments in two ledger books. Veterans contend that the placement of the flag invites viewers to step on it.

Student-artist "Dread" Scott Tyler said he had no apologies for his exhibit, which he described as revolutionary.

In the counter-protest, one of the art students carried a poster showing Adolf Hitler, Ayatollah Khomeini and Republican mayoral candidate Edward Vrdolyak, a supporter of the veterans' protests, with the caption: "Art Critic — Get rid of degenerate art."

A second group of counter-demonstrators, about 20 primarily older artists, stood near the veterans under heavy police guard. They carried empty picture frames on sticks to show that the exhibit being protested was essentially "empty" of artistic merit, but that the right to free expression should be upheld, they said.

The exhibit, which includes art by 66 minority students, opened on Feb. 17. Earlier this month, a judge rejected a lawsuit by veterans' groups contending that the artwork desecrated the flag.

The gallery was opened to the public for a few minutes Sunday morning, but was closed after veterans repeatedly picked up the flag, said security guard Alicia Lloyd.

Three Palestinians Killed In Hill Clash

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TYRE, Lebanon — Israeli troops killed at least three Palestinian guerrillas in south Lebanon early today in a gunbattle illuminated by parachute flares after a chase through hills near Israel's border.

It was the second day in a row that Israeli troops had clashed with guerrillas in Israel's self-proclaimed security zone that were headed for attacks in northern Israel.

The Israeli army showed reporters the bodies of three slain guerrillas at a base in northern Israel, displaying identification papers showing the dead men belonged to a Syrian-based PLO faction and saying they intended to attack an Israeli settlement.

The faction, the Palestine Liberation Front, said in a statement that the guerrillas were headed into Israel for a raid.

The Israeli military said the three were killed in a half-hour fight after a pre-dawn chase of several hours through the hills. A Lebanese police spokesman said four guerrillas were killed.

The discrepancy could not immediately be resolved.

The police spokesman, who cannot be identified under standing rules, said the guerrillas were intercepted in Israel's security zone at the village of Meiss el-Jebel shortly after midnight.

He said the Israelis fired about 600 parachute flares during the action.

In its communique, the Israeli military said air force planes dropped the flares to light the way for the troops after they spotted the guerrillas near Meiss el-Jebel, about half a mile from the Israeli border.

A soldier in the force, identified only as Ofer under army regulations, told reporters at the base in northern Israel that his sergeant opened fire on the guerrillas after spotting their hiding place about 20 yards away and the guerrillas fired back.

Then, he said, "the whole force joined in and threw hand grenades. One of the terrorists opened fire and missed, and then he was killed."

The names on the guerrillas' documents were Ahmed Mohammed Atallah, Mazen Mohammed Shams Adin, and Khaled Mohammed Ibrahim.

Also displayed to reporters were leaflets carried by the men, which said their mission was "to identify with the children of the stones," referring to the Palestinian uprising in Israeli-occupied territories.

The guerrillas carried AK-47 automatic rifles with several magazines, hand grenades, three small missiles, barbed wire cutters, and photographs of members of their faction killed in earlier raid attempts.

French Canadians Stage Language Protest

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MONTREAL — More than 50,000 demonstrators, many waving Quebec flags and shouting "French Quebec," marched through the city's streets in one of the biggest outpourings of French Canadian nationalism in years.

The mood was generally friendly, but one placard proclaimed: "Death to anglophones."

Organizers, who had expected only 25,000 people to participate, were jubilant over Sunday's turnout in sunny, but extremely cold weather.

"The message is great," said Guy Bouthillier, spokesman for the Movement for a French Quebec. "It's obvious these people want to have back their Law 101."

The group organized the protest march in support of the nationalist language law passed in 1977 by the Quebecer Party that provincial Premier Robert Bourassa amended last December.

The demonstrators want the Quebec legislature, which reconvenes Tuesday, to return to a law allowing businesses to post signs only in French. Bourassa decided to permit some bilingual signs inside the businesses, though only French can be used outside.

"Considering the size of the demonstration, I think it will make (Bourassa) think about a few things," said Quebecer Party leader Jacques Parizeau, who marched with the crowd.

Some of the marchers draped themselves in the province's fleur-de-lys flag, and others carried placards with slogans like "The Humiliation Has Lasted Long Enough" and "Quebec for Quebecers."

The march ended with a rally at City Hall.

Roughly 80 percent of Quebec's 6.5 million people are Francophones. They say they have long been locked out of good jobs and other benefits by English speakers.

Jacques St. Amant, who marched with his two children, said he wanted to "sensitize them to the fact that French Quebec might disappear."

His 9-year-old daughter Christine, who plans to become a French teacher, nodded and said, "French is important for me."

Although the marchers were predominantly French-Canadian, a number of English speakers and foreign immigrants turned out to offer their support as well.
