Task Force Says Waste Site Could Bring Income, But Problems, Too

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A low-level radioactive waste site will generate big bucks for the host region, but it may also include a truckload of trouble, a regional task force has reported.

As a member of the eight-state Southeastern Compact Commission, North Carolina has been selected to host a low-level radioactive waste facility beginning Jan. 1, 1993. In response to strong public opposition, last spring Edgecombe County officials withdrew their offer to host the facility. Commissioners from six area counties then formed the task force to study how a waste facility would impact the region.

At the task force's meeting Tuesday in Greenville, the group released the study to the public. Greenville attorney Phil Dixon, task force chairman, said the report — more than 150 pages long — offers an enlightened, rational look at the import of a waste facility, as opposed to the emotional hysteria that struck the area last year after Edgecombe County's offer.

"The most positive thing to come out of this is that there is a reasonable, rational response that can now be made (to an offer to host the site)," Dixon said. "Instead of being hysterical about it, (we can) try and look at some hard facts."

The study could lower the chances of a waste facility being located in the six-county region, Dixon said, because it gives opponents scientific ammunition to argue against the facility. Prior to the report, residents had no comprehensive resource from which they could obtain hard facts. Now, they do.

"All we (could) say is: 'Any place but here.' That's not a very persuasive argument. Everybody is going to say that," Dixon said. "(The report) is a reasoned approach for dealing with the suggestion that a

Soviets Expel U.S. Army Officer

MOSCOW — The Soviets today accused a U.S. military attache of spying and ordered him to leave the country in apparent retaliation for Washington's expulsion last week of a Soviet officer.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov said Army Lt. Col. Daniel Francis Van Gundy III, an assistant military attache at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, was given 48 hours to leave.

Gerasimov said Van Gundy, who had been assigned to the embassy for about two years, the normal Moscow diplomatic tour, was declared unwelcome because he engaged in espionage.

The 42-year-old Army officer lives on the U.S. Embassy compound with his wife, Susan, and two of their three daughters.

On Thursday, U.S. officials accused Soviet Lt. Col. Yuri N. Pakhtusov of trying to buy computer secrets and ordered him to leave the country. They did not say how long he had to leave.

Gerasimov, at a hastily called briefing, charged that Van Gundy attempted "to enter a closed area, deliberately diverting from the officially permitted route, clandestinely photographed military sites and committed other gross violations" of the rules of diplomatic conduct.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Richard Gilbert said the Soviet charges were "unwarranted, inappropriate, without justification and certainly in no way in keeping with the positive tone of the U.S.-Soviet relationship."

Gilbert, the embassy press attache, suggested the Soviet action was in retaliation for the U.S. expulsion of Pakhtusov.

Van Gundy refused to answer questions from reporters as he walked to his office. He specifically refused comment on Gerasimov's allegation that "warnings had already been issued to the lieutenant colonel."

Gerasimov said: "The U.S. administration is revealing its foreign policy, and we have this problem of spy mania."

He cited a recent Time magazine cover story on the 1987 Marine spy scandal in Moscow and said there had been other attempts to incite fears of espionage by unnamed American leaders uninterested in improving U.S.-Soviet relations.

U.S. Bans Import Of Assault Weapons

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Administration officials are describing their ban on imports of AK-47s and other semiautomatic firearms as "temporary and reversible," but say it was necessary to head off an imminent flood of the assault weapons into the United States.

The action Tuesday appeared to be a softening of President Bush's oft-stated opposition to gun controls, but White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater said it merely enforces current law that allows imports of guns only if for sporting purposes.

Bush, a member of the National Rifle Association, "shares the public concern" over the proliferation of semiautomatic weapons, but he is not changing his position against a ban on such guns, Fitzwater said.

Bush had asked national drug control director William J. Bennett last week to recommend what should be done about the weapons. Calls for a ban have been prompted by scores of drug-related shootings and the recent killing of five California schoolchildren.

The action will affect more than 110,000 weapons with pending applications for import, Bennett said, including AKS-type firearms such as AK-47s, Uzi carbines, FN-FAL and FN-FNC-type weapons as well as Steyr Aug semiautomatic weapons.

It does not affect semiautomatic weapons already in this country or those produced domestically such as

Sticking Valve Darkens Shuttle

By Paul Rezer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Discovery's lights were dimmed and some computer screens were darkened today, but engineers were optimistic they could correct a sticky valve that threatened to cut short the shuttle mission.

The valve, which controls the flow from a hydrogen tank to the spacecraft's electrical generating system, started jamming shortly after launch on Monday, and Mission Control engineers planned a way to coax it into working properly.

The problem does not threaten the astronauts' safety but could force the five-man crew to return a day early by limiting the supply of electricity.

"We're optimistic that we'll come home on Saturday as planned," flight director Ron Dittemore said today.

He said the decision will be made after engineers turn on a heater in the tank this morning and monitor the flow of hydrogen through the valve.

Some engineers believe there is no reason to shorten the five-day mission, said Dittemore, because a similar erratic pattern was seen on the valve when Discovery flew in September. There were no power problems on that mission.

Dittemore said Mission Control experts believe the valve can be

Med School Test Will Add Writing

By Carol Tyer

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Two East Carolina University School of Medicine officials say they believe an addition of a writing component to the Medical College Admission Test and shortening of the test will make it a better one.

The American Association of Medical Colleges announced this week the two major changes in its uniform test for students seeking to enter medical colleges. The new test was approved Feb. 23 and will become effective in 1991.

As of 1991, students who take the MCAT will be required to write essays as a measure of writing and thinking skills. The AAMC says the new streamlined test will the first professional school admission test to use essays and score them to evaluate applicants' ability to express themselves in writing.

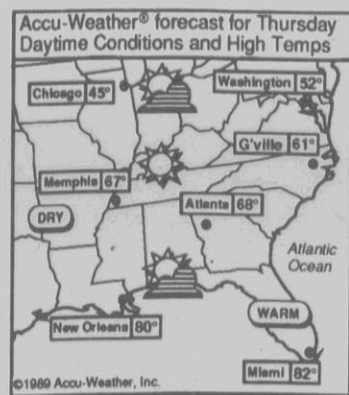

Time allowed to take the test has been reduced from 9 hours 30 minutes to 8 hours 10 minutes.

Dr. James Hallock, ECU Medical School dean, said "I think the addition of the writing component will give kids the opportunity to express themselves more fully than the previous all-multiple-choice test allowed. I think it's a positive change."

Hallock said he sees the essay inclusion as an asset in bringing about what has been a stated goal of medical school admissions programs for the past several years — allowing students from a broader educational background to enter medical school. He said it's his opinion that, in the past, partially because the test was composed almost entirely of science questions, that students who had

GUC Patrons Get Delay In Rate Boost

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Members of the Greenville Utilities Commission board tentatively decided Tuesday night to delay passing on to customers a 3.5 percent wholesale rate increase scheduled for April 1.

But electric ratepayers will almost certainly see a rate increase in their bills beginning May 1.

Malcolm Green, GUC's general manager, told board members that the commission's wholesale cost of power will increase 3.5 percent on April 1. And he said an additional 7.5 percent increase in GUC's wholesale cost of power is scheduled to take effect on Sept. 1.

Rather than pass on one increase in April and the other in September, Green suggested that the board consider a May 1 adjustment in rates to include both increases.

According to Green, the proposed May 1 rate increase would be "about 9.9 or 10 percent."

While no formal action was taken, the board seemed to agree with Green's proposal.

Green said the delay in passing on the 3.5 percent hike on April 1 would cost the GUC between $150,000 and $160,000.

In the past year the commission has absorbed wholesale rate increases totaling about 6 percent, which has cost some $1.9 million so far this fiscal year.

Even with a rate increase of about 10 percent on May 1, Green said, most customer's utility bills in May should be lower than their April bills.

Green said GUC's residential rates are presently "a full two percent" lower than Carolina Power & Light Company's rates. Since CP&L has scheduled a 7.5 percent rate hike in August, Green said GUC's residential rates will "still be on a par with CP&L after the increase."

Roger Jones, director of GUC's electric systems, reported that load management operations during February saved some $198,256 in wholesale power costs.

The load management system was in full operation between 7 a.m. and 8 a.m. on Feb. 10, the time of Carolina Power & Light Company's system peak. The savings included $86,944 from voltage adjustments, $101,888 from operation of radio-controlled Beat-the-Peak switches on water heaters, and $7,319 from operation of generators at GUC's water plant and at Procter & Gamble Paper Products and the Fred Webb Inc. grain storage facility.

Since January 1985, load management operations have saved more than $6.86 million in wholesale power costs, according to Jones.

While load management operations in February saved almost $200,000, Jones reported that the mid-February ice storm will cost the commission more than $176,000.

According to Jones, 180 GUC employees spent 6,538 man-hours

State Hearing For Funeral Home Owner Rescheduled For March 31

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The state Board of Mortuary Science has rescheduled a hearing for a Bethel funeral home owner to March 31.

John M. Gray of Raleigh had been scheduled to appear before the board Tuesday in connection with an incident in December when Wake County deputies discovered six unclaimed bodies were left in a van overnight instead of being moved inside.

The practice may have violated one of the board's regulations prohibiting the exposure of dead human bodies, said Corrine J. Culbreth, executive secretary of the board. The board could move to suspend or revoke Gray's license, she said.

The hearing was postponed because subpoenas were not properly delivered, but the delay was not the fault of either party involved, board attorney Bill Hoke said.

Sometimes the board reaches an agreement with a party charged with an offense, and there is no need for a hearing, Ms. Culbreth said, but she has had no indication Gray plans to work toward a compromise.

Gray owns Ayres-Gray Funeral Home in Bethel and Gray Funeral Home and Crematorium in Raleigh. Last month Pitt County deputies discovered.

Gray had stored medical waste and human body parts in farm buildings on two sites near Stokes.

No criminal charges were filed, but the Solid Waste Management Section of the state Division of Health Services is investigating the storage sites. Gray may have violated state regulations concerning the acceptance, storage and disposal of solid waste.

Agents have not determined where the waste came from, but Gray has agreed to cooperate with the investigation and may provide a list of where and when he received the waste, Division of Health Services spokesman Stephen Reid has said.

Gray is not licensed to accept or incinerate medical waste, and state officials have previously cited him for improperly burning the material in his Raleigh crematorium.

One of the parcels of land where medical waste is stored is scheduled to be sold at public auction March 23 as part of a Chapter 11 bankruptcy settlement for Gray Farms Inc., a company Gray organized in 1980. Gray Farms filed for bankruptcy last spring after creditors began foreclosing proceedings.

Gray Farms owns one tract where medical waste is stored, and Gray has also stored waste at a second parcel of land he leases from his cousin, Harry T. Gray of Robersonville.

EXTENDED FAMILY

Sociologists may warn of the loss of the extended family in modern American society, but the extended family often makes its presence known in undesirable ways. For example, the number of relatives that seem to get involved in a marriage can be astounding.

Frequently, couples use relatives as allies in their marital power struggles. They seek and report the opinions of outsiders as ways to express negative thoughts and feelings about each other. This can become an explosive component in a marriage, and as others gain undue influence, resentments develop and individuals become more entrenched in their positions.

Couples sometimes come to counseling seeking ways to break away from their relatives' influence. The first step is to confront the reasons that got them involved. A wife's desire for support may have turned into a negative alliance against her spouse. Sometimes this is a pattern that has existed in the family for generations.

Learning new ways of coping becomes paramount. This is where the assistance of a professional counselor is invaluable. Changing family patterns is difficult; learning to work things through independently, as a couple, is a skill that needs practice.

been science majors have had an advantage.

The new test, Hallock said, will allow students from majors other than science who have the necessary chemistry, biology and mathematics courses for meeting other entrance requirements to be successful in entering medical school.

Dr. Dean Hayek, the ECU medical school's associate dean for admissions, said he's looking forward to the effects of the new test on ECU's admissions program. While ECU has always admitted some non-science majors, he said he believes this test will give students with broad knowledge in many areas a better chance at admission.

Hayek said he understands that people from many ethnic groups had input into the test and that the testing process of making the test fairer to people of both genders and all ethnic groups has been further enhanced in this latest test.

Hayek said he thinks there will be some greater difficulty in grading of the test which includes essay material. He especially wonders about making comparisons among tests of the same person at different times.

county should host the waste facility."

The 18-member task force includes members from Pitt, Edgecombe, Halifax, Martin, Nash and Wilson counties.

Ellis Williford, Edgecombe County manager and a member of the task force, said the report includes more complete information than any other study concerning the impact of a waste site. But, the study presents only data, not recommendations.

"It boils down to whether a majority of residents of that particular county want it or not, and that is qualified by the politics (of the issue)," he said.

With the report, residents will be able to decide the issue using fact, instead of assumptions, he said.

On one side, the waste facility will be an economic boon. The report states that the waste facility will generate about $94 million for a large community and spark additional revenue by creating more than 600 jobs. The facility would be opened for a maximum of 20 years, but radioactive waste would have to remain secured in the facility for decades after that.

restoring electric power to customers as a result of the storm at a cost of $103,321, including $73,132 in overtime pay. Material costs, Jones said, have amounted to $49,482.

In addition, Jones said four crews from Fayetteville (two tree-trimming crews and two service crews), two service crews from High Point, and two tree-trimming crews from Asplundh Tree Co. participated in the storm restoration work, at an estimated cost of $23,700.

The board gave approval to the sale of equipment and vehicles that are surplus to the commission's needs. The auction, scheduled for 10 a.m. May 6 at the GUC operations center on Mumford Road, will include a range of things, from office furniture, baseboard heaters, utility tool boxes and truck tool boxes, to three trucks and a car.

"A low-level radioactive facility averaging over 200 employees is a definite factor on any local employment picture ...," the report said. "The relatively long-term nature of the facility's operation (20 years) establishes a base from which related services (i.e. trucking terminals and waste generators) can be spun off in a locality."

However, the waste facility could also damage the environment and the quality of life in the area. It could create additional noise, contaminate surface water and disrupt traditional lifestyles. It might also cause the host region to suffer from added political conflicts, loss of industry and the pressure of providing adequate services to a fast-growing population, according to the report.

"A low-level radioactive waste facility sited in the six-county study could be expected to have negative effects on the quality of life throughout the area," the report said. "This would be the case for each of the three phases of operation: planning/construction; operating and post-operating."

Dr. Trenton Davis, acting dean of the School of Industry and Technology at East Carolina University, chaired a task force subcommittee on environment and technology. He said it is unclear whether the host site would suffer from loss of property value. Property values have dropped in some host areas, while others have improved, he said.

There are numerous other potential costs which cannot be determined, he said, including the cost of building auxiliary roads, tourism loss and the cost of closing and securing the facility.

Though the study draws some conclusions, Dixon and others emphasized that the task force did not attempt to decide what site is most suitable. It only outlines what factors should be considered in siting the facility.

The North Carolina Low-Level Radioactive Waste Management Authority is overseeing the siting process, and the group is scheduled to select two potential sites by Aug. 1. The authority will pick the most suitable site after a yearlong series of tests. Final site selection is set for Nov. 15, 1990.

The compact is currently disposing of waste at a Barnwell, S.C., facility, but that contract is set to expire in 1993. The new facility will dispose of about one-third of the low-level radioactive waste produced nationally, the report said, and the waste will come from civilian means, such as utilities, hospitals and laboratories.

Crystal Stowe, spokeswoman for the authority, said the group has worked with the regional task force, but she has not read the report and does not know whether it will be a factor in the site selection process.

The task force should remain active until the state selects a site, Dixon said, and the group would be a valuable resource for any area county considering the impact of hosting the site.

Other North Carolina regions are conducting similar studies, and task force members said they have had officials from as far away as France and Seattle request copies of the study for use as a guide.

If the state proposes a site within the six-county region, Dixon said he believes it would be appropriate for the task force to help evaluate the offer.

Embezzlement Charge Filed

The treasurer of the Pitt County Association of Rescue Squads faces a probable cause hearing later this month on charges of embezzling $600 from the association since November.

Mary Sue Harrell, 35, Box 1165 Cherry Lane Road, was charged by Pitt County Sheriff's Department officers on Saturday with embezzling the money by fraudulently cashing several checks from Nov. 28, 1988, through Jan. 16, 1989. The checks were cashed in amounts of $50 and $75.

She was also charged with embezzling $100 from the Bethel Fire Department on Jan. 28.

She is free pending trial on $10,000 bond and is scheduled to appear in Pitt County District Court on March 31 for a probable cause hearing. Each charge is a felony punishable by 10 years in prison, a fine, or both.

The association is a volunteer group made up of all the rescue units in the county, and members pay dues to the association. Ms. Harrell serves as secretary and treasurer for the group.

Premature

Tax Increase Should Be Last Resort

North Carolina must find the money to pay its teachers higher salaries. There is no other option. But increasing the sales tax to fund pay increases should be a last resort, not a first choice.

Gov. Jim Martin's reborn support of higher pay for teachers is correct, but his proposal to add one cent per dollar to the state's sales tax to fund those increases is premature. His accompanying offer to repeal the tax on food is a ploy to garner support.

The 1989-90 budget process is still in the discussion stage. Lawmakers have tossed proposals around but haven't yet put their pencils and calculators to work. When they do so, every effort must be made to find the money for teacher raises and an updated salary schedule from sources other than additional sales tax. If they cannot, then the state must consider such a move. But it would be unfair to North Carolina's taxpayers to make a sales tax rise the first choice. Here's why:

The sales tax is a regressive tax. It takes a larger amount from a poor family's income than it does from a wealthy family's. For example, let's say a family earning $16,000 per year pays $500 in sales tax. A family earning $60,000 also pays $500. That $500 is a much greater percentage of the $16,000 income than it is the $60,000 income. That's unfair.

Additional sales tax, when coupled with an almost-certain 5½ cent gas tax increase for highway construction, places a large, sudden burden on the public. While the gas tax increase is an appropriate way to fund roadbuilding, lawmakers should be sensitive to this load and make every effort to avoid further weighting taxpayers.

Both the public and lawmakers should also recognize Martin's accompanying proposal to eliminate tax on food for what it is: a sales gimmick. The governor has proposed a regressive tax, one that attacks the state's citizens square in the wallet — and one that hits a poor person harder than anybody else. He is trying to make that bitter pill politically palatable by repealing the food tax.

But before applauding the demise of that tax and accepting the package Martin is offering, the state's citizens should recall the tax reforms of 1987. The state repealed the inventory tax on business and industry, saving the state's businesses millions of dollars — and consequently removing millions of dollars from state coffers. Perhaps North Carolina's revenue shortfall of 1989 is just a coincidence, but there's a faint odor of smoke and a warm gun rests nearby.

Here's the evidence. Martin supported the repeal of the inventory tax, which benefits business. Revenue fell short of needs. Now, Martin wants to add a penny to the sales tax to fund these needs — a penny that comes from the public's pocket every time basics are purchased. Isn't this a subtle shift of the tax burden from business to individuals?

North Carolina's teachers have earned a pay raise in 1989 and they deserve a decent salary schedule. Those changes will take money, and the state must find it during this session of the General Assembly.

But the state would be remiss if it bought Martin's sales tax package without unwrapping it. Lawmakers are obliged to make sure levying additional sales tax is the final option, not the first choice.

'Stop — I Want To Get Off'

WASHINGTON — Occasionally something happens that brings to mind a Broadway show of some years back. Last week, it happened again. Meeting in Geneva, the United Nations Human Rights Commission voted not to investigate Iraq. "Stop The World — I Want To Get Off," was the show. It's also how I feel.

The case against Iraq is impressive. It has used poison gas against Iran in a war it started but could not finish. It has used poison gas against its own people, the Kurdish minority. Torture, although outlawed by its own constitution (naturally), is commonplace. A recent State Department report on Iraq is just plain sickening: beatings, whippings, the extraction of fingernails. The State Department says that "disappearances" are com-

Richard Cohen

'Short of war or economic sanctions, only condemnation will give Iraq's Saddam Hussein pause — condemnation not only by the West but by other Arab governments and Third World nations as well. But even a slap on the wrist was too much for these nations. In Geneva, they turned in a squalid performance.' Back in 1962, Anthony Newley said it best: "Stop the world — I want to get off."

monplace. It says Iraqi children are occasionally executed and cites instances in which bodies of youngsters were returned to their families bearing unmistakable evidence of torture. The State Department also says what should be obvious: "Torture could not be practiced without the authorization of senior officials."

Of course, these are allegations. But the evidence for them is compelling. The Baghdad regime claims it had not used poison gas against the Kurds. Some 60,000 Kurds who fled into Turkey say otherwise. So does U.S. intelligence which, reportedly, monitored radio transmission from Iraqi planes as poison gas was dropped.

The State Department says Iraq is involved in a massive relocation program. An estimated 500,000 Kurds have been taken from their villages and resettled elsewhere. This effort to destroy an entire culture by dispersing its people is what Turkey attempted with its Armenian citizens during World War I. The Turks had their explanations, but 60 years later a term has been applied to what was done: Genocide.

Iraq, too, has embarked on genocide. So what does the United Nations do? Nothing. Seventeen mostly Third World countries, including such American allies as the Philippines and Pakistan, voted against investigating Iraq. Four communist governments, including the Soviet Union and the fictitious Ukrainian Republic, took no position, and nine other nations abstained. Of the Third World nations on the commission, only Peru and Togo voted with the industrialized United States, Japan, Canada and Western Europe.

The consequences of this indifference are hard to predict. Maybe there will be none. But history suggests otherwise. It teaches that thugs like Iraq's Saddam Hussein must be called to terms. The lack of reproof, the absence of indignation — these only encourage despots. How many times must the world relive the lessons of Hitler? How many times must we exhume the victims of Stalin before we get the point? How many times do we have to be told that silence is complicity.

Wars accelerate history, and two recent ones have done just that. The first was the Iran-Iraq war in which both sides, but Iraq in particular, used poison gas. The second is the recently concluded war in Afghanistan. The Soviet Union was licked, partly because the United States supplied the mujaheddin with Stinger ground-to-air missiles. The effectiveness of these weapons remains disputed, but what matters is that Third World guerrillas learned to use them. The nature of warfare was changed: Both a highly trained soldier and a poorly trained guerrilla can press a button. Silicon chips will do the rest.

Iraq came out of the war with Iran with an immense army. It learned how to effectively drop poison gas from airplanes and helicopters. It might know how to arm missiles with poison gas — missiles that can reach Jerusalem or, for that matter Amman, Jordan. Iraq violated international law with impunity — and benefited from it. The world noticed. In addition to Libya, there are reports that Egypt is getting into the poison-gas business. The next Middle East war, should there be one, could be a doozie.

Third World countries wonder why they should abjure chemical weapons when the United States and other Western countries retain them. There can be only one answer: The West must practice what it preaches. These nations also ask why they should abide by international law when the Reagan administration thumbed its nose at the World Court in 1984 when the United States was sued by Nicaragua. Again, there can be only one answer: The United States must play by the rules.

Short of war or economic sanctions, only condemnation will give Iraq's Saddam Hussein pause — condemnation not only by the West but by other Arab governments and Third World nations as well. But even a slap on the wrist was too much for these nations. In Geneva, they turned in a squalid performance. Back in 1962, Anthony Newley said it best: "Stop the world — I want to get off."

It's Hard To Walk Away From A Political Bargain

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — Travelers who want to visit exotic places often find that four packages carry the lowest prices. Flight, hotel, breakfasts and car rental — all for one low price.

Gov. Jim Martin, in presenting his teacher and state employee pay raises, has put together a package that would be the envy of any travel agent. He's telling legislators that for just one penny they can get two major voting groups off of their backs, take a major step towards education reform repeal an odious tax or two, satisfy some angry merchants and maybe still have a little left over to spend on some pressing state needs.

The penny, of course, is the one penny per dollar sales tax increase. That increase would bring the combined state and local sales tax to six percent and raise an estimated $510 million on new revenue next year. Martin also proposes tax amnesty and tougher tax collections programs that would raise an additional $20 million to $65 million a year.

Martin won't have an easy time selling this package to the 170 legislators who would have to make it law. But his package is so packed full of goodies that many legislators might find it hard to say no.

Sixty percent of the new revenue would go towards state employee and teacher pay raises. Martin and the legislature face two problems with raises. The first is that the pay scales for both state employees and teachers are tremendously goofed up. The merit pay plans for both groups have not been used in six of the last seven years. Teachers aren't being rewarded for length of service, and state employees are not moving up on their pay scales.

Martin's pay raise immediately corrects the problem for teachers. He puts every teacher on a 30-step pay scales. Beginning next September, teachers would once again receive salaries which reflect their years of experience. In July, state employees would also begin to receive merit pay raises based on the recommendations of their superiors.

The second problem with raises was that there wasn't enough money for much of an across the board raise. Martin's proposal raises the money to give state employees four percent. The beginning pay for teachers would be raised 4.3 percent and then every salary step would add another two percent. While small numbers of teachers might not get a raise at all next year, most would do considerably better than the miniscule raises that had been discussed.

The other 40 percent of the revenue raised by the one percent increase helps sell the entire package. Martin is saying that the biggest chunk of it, $18 million chunk of the new revenue would stay right with the merchants who collect it. Until the 1987 tax package for schools was approved, merchants used to be paid for collecting sales taxes. But they lost it in the package, and they've been harassing Martin and legislators to get it back every since.

Finally, there is enough left over to fund some $68 million in other programs next year. Martin repeatedly mentioned mental health programs. It's likely that day care, Medicaid and aging programs could expect a piece of this money, also.

Legislators might not like sales tax increases, but this package may be a political bargain from which it would be difficult to walk away.

Bush & The Wisdom Of Yogi Berra

Tom Raum

WASHINGTON — While presidents traditionally have quoted illustrious predecessors, President Bush has been sprinkling his speeches with the observations of Winston Churchill, Yogi Berra and Woody Allen.

Bush, whose own syntax is sometimes a trifle fractured, seems most at home quoting Berra, often repeating the baseball luminary's contention that "you can observe a lot by just watching."

"That master linguist ... Oh, I love to quote Yogi," Bush told a recent audience of college students.

The president often injects Berra quotes into his prepared speeches, much as he did during his presidential campaign — joking with audiences about "pairing off in threes."

During his campaign, Bush frequently borrowed Berra's "it seems like de ja vu all over again," and told of how "no one" frequents a particular restaurant any more — because the lines to get in are so long.

President Reagan often quoted former Democratic Presidents Franklin Roosevelt and John F. Kennedy and authors famous and not-so-famous.

Bush seldom quotes literary figures or Democratic presidents. When it comes to former chief executives, he shows a clear preference for Republicans Abraham Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt.

But most of all, he quotes Churchill — when he's not quoting Berra. He told the United Negro College Fund: "As an undergraduate I came to grasp what Churchill talked about when he said: 'Personally, I am always ready to learn, though I do not always enjoy being taught.'"

And, in his budget message to Congress: "We shall not fail or falter. We shall not weaken or tire. Give us the tools, and we will finish the job."

Those are among the dozen or so references to Churchill that have cropped up in recent Bush speeches.

Sometimes, he alludes to Churchill but doesn't quite get the whole quote out.

For instance, in a speech to state legislators in the White House last week, Bush said: "As Britain faced an adversary that tested the courage and character of its people, Winston Churchill vowed never to surrender."

That was it. Then, later in the same speech: "To paraphrase Churchill again, we shall not flag or fail."

Bush speech writer Robert Grady said the president admired Churchill and that the late British prime minister "was such a gifted speaker" that many of his phrases fit naturally into the president's speeches.

Grady said Bush quotes Lincoln and Teddy Roosevelt a lot, because "they fit in with his agenda." Lincoln for the politics of inclusion and Roosevelt because of his devotion to the environment.

But Yogi Berra?

"He's been quoting Yogi Berra for a long time," Brady said. "He's very much a favorite of the president's." The speech writer suggested that part of it might be Bush's background as captain of the Yale University baseball team in 1948.

Usually Bush ad libs his own Berra lines, but sometimes speech writers put them in for him, Grady said.

Audiences usually laugh when Bush quotes Berra, but he's had less luck so far with Woody Allen.

In a speech to drug enforcement agents in New York last week, Bush said: "Perhaps you heard Woody Allen's wry observation: 'Organized crime in America takes in over $40 billion a year and spends very little on office supplies.'"

The remark was greeted by silence.

"Philosopher that he is," Bush added sheepishly.

First Dog Mildred K. Bush is due to have her pups this week, and press secretary Marlin Fitzwater says the president expects as many as eight.

Want one? Forget it.

"Mrs. Bush says the pups are all spoken for. Of course, I think there are about 8,000 requests in at the moment," Fitzwater said.

"Millie is progressing quite well. The president is watching her condition," Fitzwater said.

The progress of the presidential pooch has been an item of key concern for the Bush family in recent days.

In a speech in New York last week, the president said he had to rush back to Washington because "the Senate is still in session and my dog is pregnant."

And, he told an audience earlier this week: "If I look a little frantic, our dog is expecting. And if you think I look frantic, you ought to see the Silver Fox."

After some laughter, Bush added by way of elaboration: "That's Barbara."

A Popularity Plunge In West Germany

Carol Williams

BONN, West Germany — Chancellor Helmut Kohl's party is loudly downplaying its recent string of election setbacks but quietly eyeing a possible change at the top.

Kohl's popularity among West Germans has plunged in recent months, and the party's fortunes appear to be following him. The big test, the national elections that choose a federal chancellor, is in December 1990.

Some key political figures already have begun distancing themselves from Kohl, whose image has been bruised by a chemical weapons scandal, indecisiveness over NATO strategy and numerous domestic troubles.

Not the least of his problems is a series of poor showings by his Christian Democrats in regional elections, which some party regulars worry may be a harbinger of the national race.

The party lost its legislative majority in West Berlin on Jan. 29, and public opinion polls conducted since indicate Kohl's conservative party would lose to the left-leaning Social Democrats if national elections were held today.

On Sunday, the Christian Democrats lost control of the Frankfurt city council and other important local legislatures in balloting throughout Hesse state.

The conservative Bonn daily Die Welt suggested Tuesday that the party could use a "fresh start", with Baden-Wuerttemberg state governor Lothar Spaeth replacing Kohl.

"Lothar Spaeth is certainly very suitable as chancellor," Stuttgart Mayor Manfred Rommel, a prominent Christian Democrat, said in an interview for today's edition of the Bild newspaper.

Such speculation is bad news for the Christian Democrats, who lack a clear majority in the federal parliament, controlling the government through a delicate alliance with the liberal Free Democratic Party.

The Free Democrats also suffered in the Hesse elections, and party leader Otto Lambsdorff hinted that the relationship with Kohl's party was being re-evaluated.

"We have no cause to stick our head between our knees," Lambsdorff said Monday. "We have considerable doubts about the way the campaign in Frankfurt was conducted in the final days and weeks with regard to policies on foreigners, asylum-seekers and immigrants."

Right-wing extremists of the National Democratic Party won 6.6 percent of the vote in elections to the Frankfurt city council, focusing on what the federal government should do to slow the influx of foreigners.

Likewise, the Christian Democrats' showing in the world arena has not generated many popularity points.

The leadership has taken a beating over its handling of U.S. charges that West German companies helped build a suspected chemical weapons plant for Libya, and over its refusal to be pinned down on whether it will support NATO plans to modernize short-range nuclear missiles on West German soil.

The head of the Christian Democrats' Bavarian sister party, the Christian Social Union, described the outcome of Sunday's elections as "catastrophic," but resisted suggestions that a new candidate for chancellor is needed.

"The chancellor is elected, he is the party's national leader, and I don't know anyone who wants to relieve him," Christian Social Union leader Theodor Waigel told the ARD television network.

Jacobs pleads futilely with N.Y. court to continue his bail

N.Y. Judge Orders Jacobs Back To North Carolina

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WAMPSVILLE, N.Y. — A New York judge said he denied fugitive Indian activist Timothy Jacobs' request for sanctuary in New York because he found no evidence that Jacobs faces any danger if returned to North Carolina to stand trial on kidnapping charges.

Even before Madison County Judge William O'Brien III announced his decision Tuesday, Jacobs' lawyers had filed an appeal to prevent authorities from whisking Jacobs back to North Carolina.

O'Brien, who heard three days of testimony in the unusual extradition case, rejected claims that Jacobs' life would be in danger if returned to North Carolina because of his knowledge of corruption.

"You've spent the entire time here with the same information about drug trafficking and there has been no evidence of any harm to you or any threats to you," O'Brien told Jacobs.

O'Brien said all he heard from witnesses was "rumor, gossip, speculation and innuendo."

"I'm satisfied there is in place in North Carolina the essentials for you to receive fair treatment, for you to be protected," the judge said.

Jacobs spoke only to ask the judge to extend his bail so he could speak publicly against alcohol and drug abuse.

But O'Brien revoked Jacobs' $25,000 bail, and the 20-year-old Tuscarora Indian was taken away to jail.

About 150 Jacobs supporters were in the courtroom. Ten of them stood with their backs to O'Brien for more than one hour as the judge explained his reasoning for not granting Jacobs asylum.

Funding May Delay Road Bill

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Disagreements over how to fund the $8.6 billion highway construction program might cause the Legislature to miss its April 15 target date for enacting the program, the Senate sponsor says.

Sen. Bill Goldston, D-Rockingham, said the emergence of rival financing plans is slowing progress of the package.

"They're coming out of the woodwork," he told reporters Tuesday after the Senate Transportation Committee voted to delay action on the bill. "It's the age-old thing: 'Don't tax me, get the fellow behind the tree.'"

The bill would raise the state gasoline tax by 5 1/4 cents per gallon to fund construction of an "intrastate" system of four-lane highways, "loops" around seven metropolitan areas, and the paving of secondary roads.

The dispute centers on a provision that would levy a fee on automobile

NCAE Reports State's Teacher Pay Now Ranks 36th On National Level

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina's national ranking on teacher pay plummeted over the past year, demonstrating a need to keep pressure on Gov. Jim Martin and legislators, a teacher spokeswoman says.

"North Carolina is becoming an island in a sea of higher paying states," Karen Garr, president of the North Carolina Association of Educators, said Tuesday as she released a report showing the state fell from 29th nationally to 36th in teacher pay in the 1988-89 academic year.

The news came as about 700 teachers from the Greensboro, High Point and Guilford County systems, some carrying placards and wearing green ribbons around their arms, lobbied legislators and marched to the Executive Mansion. Gov. Jim Martin was not in town, but teachers tied green ribbons to the iron fence encircling the mansion grounds.

The march occurred one month after 5,000 teachers marched on Raleigh demanding higher pay.

Ms. Garr said teachers were pleased that Martin last week proposed a 1-cent sales tax increase to finance higher salaries. But she said teachers wanted to keep pressure on the governor because his plan "doesn't get us where we need to go."

"We are farther behind the national average this year than we have ever been," Ms. Garr said. "This shows just how critical the salary situation in North Carolina really is."

The average teacher in North Carolina earns $25,650, while the national average is $29,557, Ms. Garr said. The state has been surpassed in the last year by Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, New Hampshire, Vermont, Idaho and Tennessee.

"We have dropped eight rankings in the past three years," she said. "This is tragic news for the future of our state. We call upon all of the state policy-makers to join NCAE in correcting this deplorable situation."

She said she hopes the news spurs legislators to approve a bill pending in the House and Senate that would enact the NCAE's plan for lifting a seven-year freeze on the teacher salary schedule.

Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, sponsor of the NCAE bill, said North Carolina's showing in the latest NEA survey should reinforce already strong public sympathy with the teachers' cause.

"I am getting letters from boards of education, from parents, from superintendents, from principals and, believe it or not ... from students," Mrs. Marvin said. "They're all taking up the banner. This general awareness and concern across the state should give impetus" to the push for higher salaries.

Martin's new salary plan would lift the seven-year freeze on the teachers' salary schedule and on merit pay for state employees and would raise the average teacher's salary by 6 percent in fiscal 1989-90.

But the proposal drew criticism from the NCAE leadership because Martin insisted on linking it with statewide implementation of the career ladder incentive plan, which the NCAE says is a failure.

Ms. Garr said the NCAE's salary schedule plan is the only one that would get North Carolina to the national average in four years. "And we will accept nothing less."

Sen. Marc Basnight, D-Dare, chairman of the Senate Base Budget Committee, said it was a "foregone conclusion" that the Legislature would raise teacher pay by around 6 percent next year. He and other Senate Democratic leaders are working on a plan to raise the money for such a raise without a sales tax increase.

Basnight declined to elaborate on the plan Tuesday, saying it was still on the drawing board.

He said he was disturbed by North Carolina's showing in the national teacher salary rating.

"We don't need to be 30-something," Basnight said.

Senate Panel OKs Waste Dump Search

RALEIGH — Calling it an effort to "improve discipline in the public schools," lawmakers and several organizations are pushing for a pilot program in which up to 16 school systems could ban corporal punishment.

Rep. Marie Colton, D-Buncombe, has tried unsuccessfully for years to change a law that makes North Carolina one of two states in the nation to prohibit local schools from banning spankings. She said Tuesday that the results from a two-year study of alternative punishments might change some minds.

"We will be looking especially for the effects that alternative forms of school discipline have on academic achievement, school dropouts and suspensions, tardiness, absenteeism and teacher morale," Ms. Colton said at a news conference. "If the results are good, as many parents, teachers and other professionals think they will be, the General Assembly can choose to continue or expand the program."

John Niblock, president of the North Carolina Child Advocacy Institute, said 14 states have banned spankings outright. He added that the use of corporal punishment has declined in North Carolina from 60,000 cases in 1984 to 33,000 in 1986, "but there is still room for improvement."

Niblock said a survey of school superintendents has already sparked queries from 10 school systems interested in the experiment.

North Carolina Gov. Jim Martin has asked New York to return Jacobs so he can be tried in the takeover of The Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton, N.C.

Jacobs and fellow Tuscarora Eddie Hatcher, 31, both of Pembroke, N.C., used shotguns to hold 20 people hostage for 10 hours before surrendering. Hatcher and Jacobs said they were trying to publicize allegations of corruption.

The siege ended when Martin agreed to investigate their charges that county officials were involved in drug dealing and murder. A task force found no evidence to support the claims.

A federal jury acquitted Jacobs and Hatcher of hostage-taking charges in October, but they were indicted by a Robeson County grand jury in December.

Jacobs fled North Carolina before he could be arrested and tried to take refuge at the Onondaga Indian Reservation near Syracuse. New York police arrested Jacobs for speeding in December.

Hatcher had fled to Idaho but was arrested Friday by the FBI after attempting to seek refuge at the Soviet consulate in San Francisco.

Defense attorney Lewis Pitts said the ruling was "absolutely contrary to the evidence," adding that he was confident about the prospects of an appeal.

"We feel good about the record we made. The evidence is strong for our position and the evidence is lacking for the court's position," Pitts said.

Appellate Division Justice Ann Mikoll granted a temporary stay of O'Brien's ruling.

A panel of five appellate justices is scheduled to decide next week whether to extend Mikoll's temporary stay. An extension of the stay would allow Jacobs time to appeal O'Brien's extradition order.

title transfers of 2 percent of a vehicle's value, which has drawn protests from auto dealers.

Goldston has offered to replace that with a 3 percent "user fee" similar to the transfer fee and with abolition of the 2 percent sales tax on vehicles.

He said Tuesday that auto dealers, truck dealers and at least two legislators were coming up with their own financing plans.

Southeastern Beaches Benefit From Ocean Storm

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OCEAN ISLE BEACH, N.C. — The nor'easter that caused millions of dollars in damage on the Outer Banks, including taking some cottages and motels out to sea, has saved one house at this beach from being condemned.

"I came down here ready to tag it after the storm, but the sand was back up over the pilings," said Druid Roberson, the Ocean Isle Beach building inspector. "The house is safe right now."

The house, on the east end of the beach, has lost several feet of sand around its pilings over the years, Roberson said. But because this beach is among a few in the state that face due south, winds from the northeast last week pumped sand onto its coastline.

The state shoreline takes a westward turn at Cape Fear, leaving six beach towns in Brunswick County sheltered during nor'easters. Sometimes their beaches benefit from the sand such storms push around the cape and along the shoreline.

Sunset Beach consistently gains beachfront each year, partly because of sand deposited by northeast winds.

At Ocean Isle, nor'easters have added about 120 feet to the western end of the beach — a 1½-mile stretch — during the past four years, Roberson said.

"After Hurricane Diana, the whole beach gained about three feet of sand," he said. "It helped us."

From a beach access walkway on the west end, Roberson pointed to other walkways. The ones that were built more than a year ago end many feet short of the sand.

"The biggest pain is having to put new access ways on every three or four years," he said.

The setback requirement — how far a house must be built from the first line of stable vegetation — was 60 feet on the west end of the beach until 1984, Roberson said. Though the state lengthened the setback to 120 feet that year, beach houses remained behind the line because the beach had grown, he said.

Although winds from other directions sometimes cause erosion, Ocean Isle's beach usually rebuilds.

"The erosion we've had here has never been the situation like Dare County, where you get the dramatic pictures of houses falling into the ocean," Roberson said. "If the owner of the building is willing to spend money and jack it up with pilings, he can probably save it."

Even in the island's inlet "hazard" area, erosion is slow. Since Roberson became building inspector 4½ years ago, three houses have been relocated because of erosion and three have been demolished.

"We don't have any new ones with problems," he said. "When I call someone to tell them about their house, they always say, 'Oh, that again?'"

Meanwhile, in the wake of last week's widespread beach erosion, marine geologist Orrin Pilkey has completed a study that indicates the federal government frequently underestimates the cost and the volume of sand required to renourish beaches.

But Tom Jarrett of the Army Corps of Engineers says Pilkey's research usually is unscientific and lacks enough details to be conclusive.

"The estimate of long-term sand volume requirements is far too low in nearly every case," said Pilkey, a Duke University professor, whose study covers 90 renourished beaches on the East Coast.

At Wrightsville Beach, the corps anticipated in the early 1960s a need for 1.5 million cubic yards of sand initially and an additional 31,800 cubic yards of sand each year, Pilkey said. But 7.8 million cubic yards were dumped on the beach from 1965 to 1986, he said.

Pilkey said renourishment costs at Wrightsville Beach have been underestimated by 672 percent in the past and costs at Carolina Beach have been off by 1,200 percent. Carolina Beach is the most replenished beach in the country and has had the biggest cost overrun, Pilkey said.

In cases where the corps does adhere to its original estimate of sand volume, the beaches often disappear in a short period of time, Pilkey said. The short-lived projects are the result of the corps' disregard for factors including frequency of storms, rise in sea level, wave heights, location, size and angle of the beach, Pilkey said.

But Jarrett said Wrightsville Beach and Carolina Beach underwent physical changes that could not have been foreseen, which led to higher-than-estimated costs. Renourishment data for Carolina Beach didn't include the impact of Carolina Beach inlet. The addition of jetties at Masonboro Inlet and the closing of Moore's Inlet causes the Wrightsville Beach shoreline to erode faster, Jarrett said.

Bone Marrow Recipient Meets Donor

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A 50-year-old woman met face-to-face for the first time with an 8-year-old girl whose life she helped save a little more than a year ago.

"She's taking good care of the bone marrow," said Diane Walters as she hugged Brooke Ward on Tuesday when they were surrounded by reporters at a reception to mark the 100th bone marrow transplant from non-family member donors who have registered with the National Marrow Donor Program.

"It was just great to be able to see her and hug her and know that she's doing so well," said Walters, who has carried a picture of the girl since the child received marrow which reached her in a dramatic delivery last winter.

"Diane Walters gave us our child back. ... Our child was dying," said Marguerite Ward, Brooke's mother before the crowd of about 200 people, including four other marrow donors, at the Rayburn House Office Building.

Walters was matched with Ward's daughter in the first successful bone marrow transplant from a non-family member through the program established by Congress in July 1986 to maintain a computerized network of bone marrow donors.

The girl had been diagnosed with acute lymphatic leukemia, a fatal blood disease. The program found Walters and Ward were an exact marrow match, but a snowstorm had closed the airport in Milwaukee. Authorities cleared one runway, allowing a small private plane to leave and deliver the marrow to Seattle where the girl was hospitalized.

Ward and Walters had appeared early in the day on ABC's "Good Morning America" and were honored at the White House where Walters received a letter of praise from President Bush.

The Associated Press

Eight-year-old Brooke Ward meets Diane Walters, 50

But Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., reminded the audience that the Bush administration has endorsed former President Reagan's budget proposal to cut funding for transplant programs by 70 percent.

The only hope for many of the 16,000 children and adult victims of leukemia, aplastic anemia and other blood-related diseases is a marrow transplant, according to a statement from the program.

Initial medical efforts try to match the bone marrow of blood disease victims with family members, but "close to 70 percent cannot find a suitable match among parents, brothers, sisters and other family members," said the statement. In those cases unrelated donors must be found.

Dr. Jeffrey McCullough, president of the program, said 34,000 people are registered now with the program.

Lawyer Cuffed To His Chair

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A Wake County District Court judge ordered that a Raleigh lawyer be handcuffed to a chair for not answering a question, the attorney said.

District Court Judge Stafford G. Bullock, who is under disciplinary review for a 1986 confrontation with a police officer, declined to discuss the incident, which apparently occurred Monday when the lawyer tried to withdraw as a court-appointed attorney for a man charged with breaking into a change-machine at a car wash.

The lawyer, Richard N. Gusler, said: "He asked me a question. A yes-or-no question, that if I had responded to in either way, I would have violated the canon of ethics" involving attorney-client confidentiality.

He said he was removed to a nearby room and handcuffed to a chair for 45 minutes for not answering the question, then released. He never answered the question. He and Bullock declined to say what the question had been; the Wake Clerk of Court's office said no stenographic record is maintained in District Court.

Plan Endorsed

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin said Tuesday he endorses Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner's recommendation that a breakwater be constructed to save the Herbert Bonner Bridge, which has been endangered by erosion.

The breakwater would be "a short-term solution as far as the safety of fishermen and the future of the inlet," Martin said in a prepared statement. "But it is an important and necessary move with the shorter-term goal of protecting the use of the bridge."

The project will cost between $15 million and $20 million, Martin said.

Gardner toured the Bonner Bridge, which links Hatteras Island with Bodie Island, Monday and called for quick action to deal with the effects of erosion caused by shifting tides. The problem was exacerbated by last week's storm.

Cleanup Cost

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A former Statesville agricultural supply company may pay $250,000 toward the cleanup of five tons of pesticides it buried on its property, officials say.

But local environmentalists and federal officials said the amount wouldn't cover the cost of extracting chemicals from the defunct FCX site.

Officials have estimated cleanup costs of $875,000 to $1.3 million to rid the property of pesticides. FCX operated its pesticide repacking plant in Statesville from 1940 until it went into bankruptcy in 1986. The company's assets are being divided among creditors and the federal government wants part of those assets to clean the Statesville site.

A U.S. District Court Judge has allocated $2 million in FCX assets to clean the Statesville site and another at Washington, N.C. The Washington site received $1.3 million.

Nash Elections

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — A federal court judge has ordered the Nash County Board of Education to change the way its members are elected.

The decision of U.S. District Court Judge W. Earl Britt was announced at a special meeting of the county board. Britt ordered the school board to carry out a plan to elect members from nine single-member districts in non-partisan elections.

The judgment is the result of a lawsuit filed March 2 by Rocky Mount attorney Anthony W. Brown on behalf of 10 black residents of the Nash County school district. The suit asked the court to approve the school board's plan, which provides for minority representation on the board. All five of the current board members, who are elected at large, are white.

Fugitive Arrested

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — A man wanted since 1985 in connection with a shotgun slaying in High Point has been arrested in Dade County, Fla.

James Michael Lovette, 26, currently being held in a Florida jail, has waived extradition proceedings and will soon be brought back for trial, officials said.

Lovette had been arrested and jailed on a larceny charge when detectives ran his name through the National Crime Information Network Friday and learned he was wanted in High Point on a murder charge, said Detective Jonathan Clark of the Dade County Sheriff's Dept.

Lovette is charged with the July 20, 1985, shooting death of Jimmy Lee Cruthis, 23. Cruthis died of a shotgun blast to his chest.

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A request for a new unionization vote at Henderson County's General Electric plant has been dropped by the International Union of Electronic, Electrical, Salaried, Machine and Furniture Workers.

Officers Nab Three Roxboro Escapees

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROXBORO, N.C. — Three of four inmates who escaped from the Person County jail after striking a jailer on the head were recaptured, officials said.

Two were recaptured in Orange County about 9 p.m. Tuesday and another in Person County at about the same time, a Person County Sheriff's Department dispatcher who declined to give his name told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

The inmate who remained at large was Franklin Dennis Morton, 29, of Oxford, according to the dispatcher. Morton was awaiting trial on charges that he robbed a grocery store in Roxboro last year and had been in jail since November.

The dispatcher declined to give further details of the recapture.

The escapees took a stun gun with them and shed their orange jail-issued jumpsuits for street clothes, said Sgt. Joy Hill, a deputy with the Person County Sheriff's Department.

The state Department of Correction brought in bloodhounds to aid in the search. Also taking part in the manhunt were Roxboro police officers and agents from the State Bureau of Investigation, Ms. Hill said.

Ms. Hill said someone threw liquid into the face of Jailer Ray Fox around 2 a.m. as he was walking down a hallway, using a flashlight to make his rounds of the cells.

Then, an inmate who apparently had already escaped from his cell struck Fox on the head with a blunt object, Ms. Hill said. She said the jailer was momentarily knocked out while an inmate got his keys and unlocked three cell doors.

She said the jailer called for help after regaining consciousness moments later.

Deputies discovered a bar in one of the cell doors had been sawed through with a hacksaw blade. Deputies still do not know how the inmate obtained the hacksaw blade.

Ms. Hill did not know which inmate had been in the cell with the cut bar.

Fox received several stitches and was examined for a head injury before being released from Person County Memorial Hospital today.

Ms. Hill said authorities still aren't sure what Fox was hit with or which inmate attacked him.

The escapees who were recaptured were identified as:

— Jeffery Lee Cates, 26, of Roxboro. Cates was awaiting trial on charges of breaking and entering, safecracking and possession of burglary tools.

— Willie Junior McCain, 34, of Roxboro. He was awaiting trial on charges of breaking and entering and larceny.

— Raynard Keith Blackwell, 28, of Roxboro. He was awaiting trial on charges of breaking and entering and larceny of 21 weapons from The Arsenal, a gun shop in Person County, last Dec. 19.

Grocers Removing Chilean Fruit From Shelves After Poison Scare

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Many fresh fruits became a scarce commodity across North Carolina after the discovery of cyanide-laced grapes in Philadelphia forced supermarkets and wholesalers to stop selling fruit imported from Chile.

Reaction ranged from that of the Bi-Lo in Arden, which put the fruit in storage, to that of the Fresh Market in Asheville, which threw the fruit in the dumpster.

Howard Ward, owner of Ward's Produce at the State Farmers Market in Raleigh, said crews would pick up fruit already delivered to customers and bring it back to the warehouse. Customers will get credits for shipments for which they've already paid.

"There's nothing for us to do but pick it up," he said. "This particular time of year, we've got no other place," except Chile to obtain such fruits.

"We removed it all as soon as we got the word," said Edward S. Dunn Jr., president of Harris-Teeter Supermarkets. "I suspect everybody, everywhere has."

Harris-Teeter operates 125 stores in North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and Tennessee.

Because Chile is virtually the sole supplier of soft fruits during winter months, stores in North Carolina and elsewhere are likely to be without the fruits for weeks, store officials said.

Other Chilean fruit being sold here at this time of year include peaches, blueberries, blackberries, seedless watermelons, cantaloupes, Juan Canary and honeydew melons, raspberries, nectarines, quince, Granny Smith green apples, cactus pears, pears and plums.

Dunn said seedless grapes comprised the overwhelming majority of the recalled fruit. With no alternate supplier, the grapes may not be available for another month when they will start to come from domestic sources, he said.

Unless the FDA lifts its advisory, grocers said, the other fruits also will not be available until domestic seasons start.

"Unfortunately, they're not in season now and people like to have them all year," said Mike Mozingo, a spokesman for Food Lion stores. Food Lion, based in Salisbury, has 266 North Carolina stores, including 13 in Greensboro and four in High Point.

But while soft fruits are "nice to have on an out-of-season basis, it's not really going to hurt you when can't have them," Dunn said.

Salisbury-based Food Lion is offering refunds to customers who bought grapes, peaches, nectarines and plums in the past four or five days, Mozingo said. He said all produce from Chile was removed from the chain's 581 stores in eight Southeastern states.

Asheville-based Ingles Markets Inc. also has pulled grapes and other Chilean fruit from its 145 stores, personnel manager Ronald Woodberry said.

The FDA, in one of the largest actions of its kind, on Monday warned consumers not to eat any fruit imported from Chile after traces of the poison were found in seedless red grapes shipped from the South American country to Philadelphia.

"We are asking people to make sure and check the origin of their fruit," Bob Gordon, director of the Food and Drug Protection Division of the N.C. Department of Agriculture, said Tuesday. "If it is fresh and from Chile, we recommend that people not consume it."

The cyanide was confirmed in testing ordered after an anonymous threat to poison Chilean fruit was telephoned to the U.S. embassy in the Chilean capital of Santiago.

"This may be an isolated incident, but we can hardly take that chance," said FDA Commissioner

Frank Young. "The Chilean government and fruit packers have been incredibly cooperative."

The amount of cyanide found in the grapes was less than would be needed to make a small child sick, but is more than would be found naturally, the FDA said.

In Asheville, wholesale producer Hoy Johnson said he was told Tuesday by state officials to stop selling red table grapes imported from Chile. He in turn notified schools, restaurants and other customers.

Meanwhile, grocery stores face a heavy financial loss because of the threat.

"It could be a substantial loss," said Bob Tripp, vice president division manager of the 107 Winn Dixie stores in the Charlotte area. "We're looking at a loss of $50,000 in this division."

Grady Gresham, district manager of Harris-Teeter, said: "We're talking about a tremendous amount of money. For producers, shippers, and brokers, not to mention supermarkets. It's a perishable product, and there's not a lot of time to determine what to do with it."

In Durham, produce wholesaler Bill Watson said he had discarded all of his fruit imported from Chile at a cost of about $5,000.

FDA Says Fruit Tests Will Continue

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Food and Drug Administration officials say intensive testing of imported Chilean fruit will continue until they are satisfied that produce from the South American country is safe from poisoning attempts.

Hundreds of food inspectors are at work in Philadelphia, Miami, New York and Los Angeles, the ports where fruit from Chile arrives in the United States, officials said.

"Until we know where we are going, it would be pure speculation to indicate any time frame" for ending the stepped-up testing program, said Fred Shank, acting deputy director of the FDA's Center for Food Safety.

"What we are doing is pouring all of our available resources into looking at the produce that is at the docks at the present time," he said. "We are also in the process of developing a program to ensure that the produce is safe for re-entry into the market," he added, but would not elaborate.

FDA Commissioner Frank Young met with White House aides on Tuesday and told reporters that U.S. officials will meet "with representatives of the Chilean fruit growers, also the government of Chile, the FDA, FBI, and we'll get a joint strategy. We hope to do that soon."

Traces of cyanide were found in two seedless red grapes tested at the port in Philadelphia on Sunday, and on Monday the FDA warned consumers not to eat any Chilean fruit and to throw out any fruit left in their refrigerator unless they were certain it did not come from Chile.

Meanwhile, U.S. and Chilean authorities were trying to determine the source of the cyanide, which was found after a poisoning threat was telephoned to the U.S. embassy in the Chilean capital of Santiago on March 2. The caller, a man speaking in Spanish, threatened to poison export fruit.

The FDA began precautionary testing, but four days later officials investigating the threat said it appeared to be a hoax. However, on March 8, another call was received by the embassy saying it was not a hoax, Young said.

Although there has been no public word on a motive in the case, a Bush administration source knowledgeable about the investigation said "the first message did suggest they were trying to call attention to the poverty in Chile." The source spoke on the condition of anonymity.

At FDA's urging, supermarkets moved quickly to remove all Chilean fruit from their shelves and distributors held produce from the South American country in warehouses until further testing could be done. Virtually all grapes sold at this time of year in U.S. markets are from Chile.

Canadian officials also urged that Chilean fruit be removed from stores in Canada. Additionally, news nese officials have halted Chilean fruit imports.

The moves could have a devastating effect on the Chilean economy. The Chilean Fruit Association said Chile exports about 880 million pounds of fruit, worth about $900 million, to the United States from Dec. 1 through April.

Losses at New York City's Hunt's Point Fresh Produce Market alone would be in the millions of dollars and could be "incalculable," said Tom Kovacevich, chairman of the New York Produce Trade Association.

A Los Angeles produce importer gobbled Chilean grapes at a news conference Tuesday to dramatize his claim that the fruit is safe and the government is ruining a booming industry unnecessarily.

Hefner Top Fee-Earner Among N.C. Delegation

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

North Carolina's 11 members of the U.S. House of Representatives received speaker's fees and other honoraria totaling more than $308,000 between 1983 and 1987, according to a study by Common Cause.

Democratic Rep. Bill Hefner of the 8th District received $102,967 during the five-year period, the Washington-based citizens lobby group reported. He was among 52 current members of the House who received more than $100,000 in such fees during the period, the group said.

Charlie Rose, also a Democrat, of the 7th District, reported $93,085 in honoraria, placing second among the state's congressmen in total receipts.

Democrat I.T. "Tim" Valentine, whose 2nd Congressional District received the smallest amount of honoraria fees of the five congressmen who were in office during all of the five-year period covered by the Common Cause report. He reported receiving a total of $8,100. The Nash County Democrat was first elected to Congress in November 1982.

Financial disclosure reports, upon which the Common Cause survey is based, are filed with the office of the Clerk of the House each year. Last year's reports are due May 15.

Federal law permits U.S. House members to keep honoraria for their own use, up to a limit equal to 30 percent of their salaries. Honoraria in excess of the 30 percent limit must be donated to charity. U.S. senators may keep honoraria up to 40 percent of their salaries.

The honoraria issue came to light earlier this year during the flap over a pending congressional pay raise.

Many congressmen supported banning any honoraria from private firms and organizations, in return for a substantial increase in their congressional paycheck. Public pressure, however, killed the pay increase.

"Some members of Congress argue they are not willing to eliminate honoraria fees without a pay increase, because this would result in a 30-percent reduction in their pay," said Common Cause President Fred Wertheimer in a news release.

Wertheimer said honoraria are not a legitimate form of pay for legislators, because the money comes from businesses and other organizations that have a special interest in legislation.

Democrat Stephen Neal of 5th District reported $46,900 in honoraria, while Democrat Walter Jones of the 1st District reported $20,500 over the five-year period.

The state's other congressmen were not in office during the entire five-year period surveyed by Common Cause.

Fourth District Rep. David Price, also a Democrat, reported receiving $10,500 in honoraria in 1987. He was first elected to the House in 1986.

Democrat Martin Lancaster, elected in November 1986 to represent the 3rd District, reported receiving $5,200 in honoraria during 1987.

Eleventh District Democratic Rep. James Clarke, elected in November 1982, defeated for re-election in 1984 and re-elected in 1986, reported $700 in 1983 and $400 in 1987. He filed no financial-disclosure report in 1984, according to Common Cause.

Among the state's three Republican congressmen, Howard Coble of the 6th District reported getting a total of $8,800. Coble first was elected to Congress in November 1984 and reported no honoraria receipts for 1985.

Republican Alex McMillan, of the 9th District received a total of $6,890 since being elected in November 1984.

Cass Ballenger, a Republican first elected in 1986 to represent the 10th District, reported no honoraria that year and $4,000 in 1987.

S&L Withdrawals Reach Record Level

U.S. Savings Loan Net Deposits

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Depositors withdrew a record $10.7 billion from savings and loan institutions in January as the outflow of funds from the troubled thrift industry accelerated, the government announced Tuesday.

The January withdrawals were double the amount expected by several Wall Street analysts.

They also represented a $16 billion swing from the $5.5 billion in net new deposits the S&L industry attracted during the same period a year earlier.

S&L regulators at the Federal Home Loan Bank Board also announced that preliminary information suggests that withdrawals slowed in February but are still expected to range as high as $9 billion.

If the February total is confirmed, the two-month outflow would be the largest ever, and more than double the withdrawals of $8.6 billion for all of 1988.

Most of the deposits withdrawn from S&Ls are being transferred to money market funds and other financial instruments paying higher interest rates, bank board economist

James Barth said.

Barth also blamed a sizable portion of the outflow on "depositor nervousness" about the S&L industry's problems and news reports on how the Bush administration might raise the tens of billions of dollars needed to deal with it.

Despite the massive outflow, no S&L has had to borrow cash under a newly created federal program to provide emergency funds to any institution having trouble meeting withdrawal demands, Barth said. But the decline in deposits could make the Bush plan to bail out the S&L industry more costly for taxpayers by making it harder for thrifts to pay their share.

As some industry and government officials had feared, President Bush's plan to rescue the thrift industry appears to have made the public more aware of the sorry state of S&Ls and contributed to a steady stream of withdrawals around the country. The plan was widely discussed in January and unveiled in early February.

Bank board economist Barth said four out of every five of the nation's 3,000 S&Ls experienced withdrawals in January. About half of the outflow was concentrated in Texas and California, the states with the severest S&L problems, he said.

"Reports about a tax or fee on thrift deposits in late January ... contributed to withdrawals," Barth said, referring to a Treasury Department proposal to impose such a tax to help pay for the multibillion-dollar bailout.

When Bush announced the plan, which must be approved by Congress, he had abandoned the idea of a direct tax on deposits. But industry analysts said publicity surrounding the issue caught and held the public's attention.

Jonathan Gray, a thrift industry analyst at Sanford C. Bernstein & Co. in New York, said that when the president was then seen on television announcing his plan and assuring depositors that their money was safe, it was like "when the pilot comes on the intercom and says the plane won't crash — it scares the death out of you, it brings you around, doesn't it?"

Barth estimated that "less than 50 percent" of the outflow stemmed from depositor worries about the health of the S&L industry.

Most of the withdrawals, he said, can be explained by a transfer of funds to money market accounts that in January offered interest rates as much as 1.25 percentage points higher than rates offered by thrifts.

Barth said that many S&Ls have decided to restructure their balance sheets by allowing expensive deposits to run off, replacing them with cheaper sources of funding, such as money borrowed from the government. And the Bush administration is forcing the nation's weakest thrifts to curb their growth by lowering the interest rates they offer depositors.

"If one wishes to characterize that policy as a silent run, then so be it," Barth said.

Fred Webber, president of the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, the largest S&L lobby group, said, "The withdrawals are alarming but not unexpected. I wouldn't call them silent runs. I would just say it's abnormally high withdrawals and alarming."

Barth said that commercial banks also experienced deposit withdrawals in January, although "nowhere near" the levels at thrifts.

Last May S&L customers withdrew $1.1 billion from the industry. The trend continued, intensifying in November, when outflows jumped to $7.1 billion. In December, outflows were $8.3 billion.

Bush Tax Plan Mainly Benefits Wealthy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Eighty percent of the tax benefits from President Bush's proposed cut in capital-gains taxes would go to people with incomes over $100,000 a year, congressional analysts say.

An estimated 1.25 million couples and individuals who make more than $100,000 and report capital gains would get tax cuts averaging $12,315, according to a study by the staff of the Joint Committee on Taxation. The 376,000 with incomes over $200,000 would get 60 percent of the total reduction, their cuts averaging $30,820.

Despite such figures, Bush on Tuesday maintained that his plan is "not a special tax break for the rich."

The estimates were presented Tuesday to the Senate Finance Committee, which heard the Treasury Department hail Bush's proposal as one of the most important things Congress could do to ensure economic growth.

"If this country is to maintain its leadership role in the world economy, we need to encourage investment, and, in particular, investment that is oriented to long-term growth rather than short-swing speculation," said Dennis Ross, acting assistant secretary of the treasury for tax policy.

Bush, in a speech Tuesday to insurance agents, defended his plan. "Let the critics carp," he said. "I'm going to push for this idea that will stimulate jobs, risk-taking, capital formation. And it's good for the economy and it is not a special tax break for the rich."

Until 1986, capital gains, which are profits from the sale of stock, real estate and other property, were taxed at a lower rate than were wages and other income. The preferential treatment was ended, along with several other deductions and exclusions, as part of the price for cutting basic tax rates across the board.

The Bush administration and lawmakers of both parties say it was a mistake to repeal the special treatment of capital gains. They contend such an incentive is necessary to improve the nation's savings rate.

Bush has called for a maximum capital-gains tax rate of 15 percent, down from 33 percent, on assets held for more than three years. He wants single taxpayers with incomes under $10,000 (couples under $20,000) to pay zero tax on capital gains.

Critics of the proposal raised three arguments against the proposal at the Finance Committee hearing:

- Restoring a special tax rate for capital gains could lead to unraveling of other key parts of the 1986 tax overhaul.
- The proposal could cause the public to perceive the tax system as weighted in favor of the wealthy.
- Bush's proposal is unlikely to increase revenues over the long run, despite predictions of the administration. "There is a very real danger that the president's proposal would work against our long-term effort" to reduce the federal deficit because it could reduce revenues, said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the committee.

Solons Want TV Violence Curbed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A renewed effort in Congress to curb violence on television drew immediate challenges from broadcasters and from a civil rights organization that said the move was a "Trojan horse" that could open the gates for government censorship of TV.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., and Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., saying there was overwhelming evidence of a link between excessive TV violence and children's behavior, introduced a bill Tuesday that would grant a three-year antitrust exemption to the TV industry so networks, local stations, the cable industry and producers could formulate voluntary guidelines on TV violence.

The bill is identical to a measure that Simon and Glickman offered unsuccessfully last year.

The National Association of Broadcasters and the American Civil Liberties Union said the bill raised serious First Amendment concerns.

ACLU legislative counsel Barry Lynn labeled the bill "a Trojan horse to bring the government into the business of regulating the content of television broadcasting and cable."

"There is nothing voluntary about guidelines which emerge from a regulated industry after Congress has instructed it about specific programming it finds objectionable," he said.

NAB spokeswoman Susan Kraus said, "Can it ever be truly voluntary when you have the government breathing down your neck?"

She said that although the government "can insulate the industry from antitrust actions, it cannot insulate us from being sued on First Amendment grounds."

Last year's bill, like another one in 1986, passed the Senate but died in the House.

Eastern Pilots Seek Appointment Of Trustee To Replace Lorenzo

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Eastern Airlines pilots, accusing Chairman Frank Lorenzo of "gross mismanagement and incompetence," asked a bankruptcy judge to appoint an independent trustee to run the strike-crippled carrier.

The request Tuesday by the Air Line Pilots Association coincided with the union's approval of $2,400-a-month strike pay for the 3,600 pilots, bolstered by a U.S. appeals court's refusal to force them back to work.

In other developments in the 12-day-old strike by the airline's 8,500-member Machinist union:

— A U.S. House vote was expected today on a proposal to put striking workers back on the job while a federal review panel studies the 17-month-old contract stalemate. But the legislation, even if passed, isn't given much chance of surviving a presidential veto.

— The airline, which struggled to run less than 10 percent of its pre-strike schedule, won bankruptcy court approval Tuesday for a plan to help ticket holders grounded by the walkout.

— In a show of support with Eastern pilots, the pilots' union announced its 41,000 members at 47 airlines will be assessed $300 each to help pay for the strike pay package.

The union also agreed to refuse to fly planes and routes purchased from Eastern unless Eastern pilots are hired for the work.

— The Machinists, whose strike began March 4 when they refused to accept $125 million in concessions, asked the bankruptcy court to approve $8 million in paychecks due last Friday and $1 million in insurance premiums due for February coverage.

In papers filed Tuesday in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in New York, the pilots charged that Lorenzo, chairman of Eastern's parent Texas Air Corp., intends to dismantle Eastern.

"Lorenzo's stripping of Eastern's valuable assets constitutes, at a minimum, gross mismanagement and incompetence," the pilots union said.

The charge was denied by the Miami-based carrier, which filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection Thursday.

"The intention is to keep the airline flying," said Eastern spokesman Art Kent. "That is the point. We have said that, if necessary, assets will be sold to maintain liquidity."

Eastern, which reported about 100 flights Tuesday, is seeking to sell its profitable Northeast shuttle to billionaire Donald Trump for $365 million.

It is not known when U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Burton Lifland will rule on the request for a trustee.

With Eastern ticket holders clamoring for refunds, the carrier announced an estimated $200 million compensation package that provides for some first-class upgrades and travel vouchers.

Under the plan, which won Lifland's approval, tickets and reservations frozen by the bankruptcy filing will be accepted and most travelers will receive first-class seats. Those holding tickets for routes canceled by Eastern can exchange for travel credits on Eastern's present flights. Otherwise, ticket holders can wait until Eastern resumes operation on the original route and take a companion at half price.

In other developments: — At a rally in Miami, Mary Jane Barry, president of the Transport Workers Union local representing flight attendants, told a crowd of 750 that an anti-Continental campaign would begin Thursday in Denver, one of the carrier's hubs. She would not elaborate.

— In Atlanta, the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals refused to force the pilots back to work but set a March 23 hearing in Tallahassee, Fla., for a three-judge panel to review the airline's request for such action.

— Several major domestic carriers have asked a U.S. District Court judge in Washington to issue a permanent ban on sympathy strikes by machinists. A ruling was expected this week.

— Federal courts continued to block attempts by union leaders to organize rail worker strikes in New York and Philadelphia.

EAL Strike Costs Regional Airlines

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Regional airlines from Maine to Puerto Rico that depend on ties to Eastern Airlines are taking a bumpy ride trying to weather the loss of business caused by the Machinists strike.

In New Hampshire, a commuter line suspended operations and the governor of Vermont has asked the federal government for help.

"That's what happens when these carriers get in bed with a weak or poorly run major partner," Michael Boyd, an analyst at Regional Airline Management Systems, said Tuesday from Golden, Colo.

"Because of the consolidation of the industry ... if one player goes down, they take a lot more players down with them than they used to."

Commuter lines hurt by the 1½-week-old Eastern strike go by such names as Precision Airlines and Eastern Metro Express. They provide linking flights up and down the East Coast to Maine; Martha's Vineyard; Philadelphia; Atlanta; Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, among other stops.

Their connection to Eastern is more than simply moving passengers from a major air route to its less-traveled tributaries. Many of the commuter and regional lines depend on Eastern to take their reservations, print their tickets and act as a clearinghouse for fare money.

Since the Eastern Machinists union strike began March 4, triggering walkouts by its pilots and flight attendants, the airline has reduced the number of its reservation clerks. And because Eastern filed for federal bankruptcy court protection from creditors last week, the cash due the commuter lines from its tickets could be held up for weeks.

"When the bankruptcy was filed, those funds got all tangled up," Boyd said. "When you run a commuter airline, you run pretty close to the vest."

One of the hardest hit was Precision Airlines of Manchester, N.H., which runs flights out of New Hampshire and Vermont. Last weekend, Precision suspended all operations for at least three weeks and furloughed 350 workers, citing a 70 percent drop in passenger traffic.

Shuttle Experiment Is First Try To Crystallize A Virus In Space

By Lee Siegel
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The first attempt to crystallize a virus in space is taking place aboard Discovery as scientists use weightlessness to try to design better crops and new drugs against cancer, AIDS, emphysema and other diseases.

"From the crystals we will be able to learn the structure" of the virus, said biochemist Alexander McPherson of the University of California, Riverside.

"If we know the crystal structures of viruses, we may be able to design vaccines to prevent infection or drugs to lessen the effects of infection" by binding to targets on viruses that cause AIDS, certain cancers, hepatitis, influenza and the common cold, he added.

The virus in McPherson's shuttle-borne experiment is a harmless one named STMV, or satellite tobacco mosaic virus. It is a parasite virus that can replicate itself only when attached to TMV, or tobacco mosaic virus, a disease that afflicts tobacco, tomato, pepper and certain other plants.

But STMV is "the basic model for understanding the way viruses are put together," said biochemist Charles Bugg of the University of Alabama at Birmingham.

"Understanding its structure in detail would allow us to understand all viruses better."

The STMV experiment, McPherson said, "is the first time we've tried to crystallize a virus in space."

STMV is among 15 substances, mostly proteins, inside Discovery's 60 crystallization chambers. The experiments, activated Monday, are aimed at determining whether the weightlessness of space will let scientists grow large, perfect crystals of proteins, viruses and other substances.

Gravity makes it extremely difficult to grow perfect crystals on Earth. Efforts to grow crystals on previous shuttle flights yielded mixed results, although some were successful.

The overall crystallization project, led by Bugg, "could improve food production and lead to innovative new drugs to combat cancer, AIDS, high blood pressure, organ transplant rejection, rheumatoid arthritis and many other diseases," the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said.

Scientists need perfect crystals of proteins, viruses and other substances so they can bombard the crystals with X-rays to learn their precise three-dimensional structure. The structure of a protein or virus determines what it does.

Proteins control the functioning of all living things. Viruses consist of basic hereditary information surrounded by a protein shell. Researchers believe knowing the exact structure of a protein or virus will let them alter what it does or develop drugs to block what it does.

On Discovery's flight last fall, Burroughs Wellcome Co. grew crystals of reverse transcriptase, a protein that lets the AIDS virus replicate in human cells. If the crystals help scientists determine the protein's structure, they might be able to devise a drug to hinder it and thus treat AIDS, McPherson said.

On this week's flight, Biocryst Ltd. is trying to crystallize influenza neuraminidase, a protein used by flu viruses to invade human cells. The crystals might let researchers learn enough about the protein to create a drug to block its ability to trigger the flu, Bugg said.

Discovery also carries an experiment in which McPherson is growing crystals of canavalin, the key protein in beans, peas and other legumes — humanity's third-largest source of food protein, after meat and fish. Scientists hope to learn canavalin's structure, then alter it to make legumes even more nutritious, McPherson said.

University of Pennsylvania and Smithkline Beckman Corp. scientists are trying to crystallize a protein that controls the expression of genes, the basic units of heredity. Certain genes act as switches to turn on cancer. Bugg said learning how the protein works could aid development of anti-cancer drugs.

Merck & Co. again is trying to crystallize elastase, an enzyme that degrades lung tissue, in an effort to develop drugs to block degradation of the lungs in emphysema.

An Upjohn Co. experiment aboard Discovery is an effort to crystallize human renin, an enzyme that regulates blood pressure. Learning its structure could spur development of new drugs to control high blood pressure.

Eli Lilly Co. is crystallizing human growth hormone, which now is used to spur growth in children with certain growth disorders. Bugg said knowing the hormone's structure could lead to improved versions that might be used to speed healing of wounds and burns.

Some scientists have criticized hoopla about crystallization experiments on the shuttle, saying it's a giant step from crystallizing a protein or virus to being able to develop a useful drug.

Bugg agreed "hype" surrounds the experiments, but only because their presence on the shuttle makes them subject to intense publicity long before researchers know if the promising experiments will produce valuable results.

made to function properly by using only one heater in the tank instead of the usual two. This would slow the flow of cold hydrogen into the generating system, reducing the buildup of pressure against the valve.

In any case, Dittmore said a Friday landing was unlikely because the weather forecast was poor for the prime landing site at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. The forecast was better for Saturday, he said.

Should engineers decide after the test that the hydrogen tank cannot be used, "we could power down even more" and land on Saturday.

The astronauts were assured there was no safety concern but were asked to conserve electricity. The crew scurried around to turn off lights and computers not in use.

The problem tank is one of three that supplies Discovery's fuel cells, a type of generator that combines hydrogen and oxygen to make electricity and pure water. If the tank cannot be used, the shuttle will not have enough electricity for five days in space plus the two days kept in reserve for contingencies.

Despite a dim cabin and a careful use of electrical power, the astronauts kept to their schedule of conducting experiments and photographing environmentally damaged places on Earth during their second morning in space.

They focused a powerful 70mm camera on the Tanzanian plains in Africa and then looked for evidence of pollution near Zanzibar, where a coral reef is dying. Other targets included the scars from a recent fire in the Everglades and an erupting volcano in Guatemala.

While over Australia, then in darkness, Discovery commander Michael L. Coats turned Discovery to get TV views of what he called "spectacular thunderstorms."

"Every so often you can see a chain of lightning go off just like a string of firecrackers," he said.

Coats focused a television camera on crewmates Dr. James M. Bagian and Robert C. Springer as they made a minor repair on an experiment and vacuumed away debris.

"Bob and I almost had a fight over the vacuum cleaner," Bagian joked. "We are the prime operators of that instrument and we wanted a chance to show off our prowess."

The official wakeup call was a full brass band rendition of the Marine Corps Hymn played with gusto and volume.

"We got two Marines standing at attention up here," joked Coats, a Navy captain. "What do we do now?"

Astronauts James F. Buchli and Springer are Marine colonels. Bagian is a physician; John E. Blaha is an Air Force colonel.

Within hours of Discovery's launch Monday, the astronauts deployed a $100 million Tracking and Data Relay Satellite, the final link in a network that will give almost unbroken radio contact with shuttles and other satellites.

Discovery's flight is the first of seven shuttle voyages planned for this year. The mission is the third for the shuttle since the 1986 Challenger disaster that killed seven astronauts and grounded the shuttle fleet until September.

Weapons Banned

the AR15, the civilian version of the military's .223-caliber M-16.

The decision to suspend imports was made a day after Bennett was sworn in to his new job. Stephen E. Higgins, director of the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, had raised the issue with Bennett.

"Higgins mentioned to him this spike, this upsurge in import applications, and outlined for Bennett what the legal authorities and options were," said Bennett spokesman Don Hamilton.

ATF approved the import of 88,000 such weapons during 1986, 1987 and 1988. This year alone, the government has received requests to import many more than that, with 113,732 applications pending, according to Bennett.

After several more conversations with Higgins and others, "his thinking was developing along the lines of, this was a temporary and reversible measure," Hamilton said.

"If we keep them out, it's temporary and reversible," he said. "If, on the other hand, you let them in, they're in, and it's irreversible. In the space of several weeks, you could more than double the last three year's imports by doing nothing."

Treasury Secretary Nicholas

Brady — whose department includes ATF — agreed to the import suspension and ordered it Tuesday.

"ATF has the authority to regulate the importation of weapons into the United States, to make sure they fall into certain categories," spokesman Dick Pedersen said. "We're saying some of these weapons may not fall into some of the prescribed categories, such as hunting."

Gun control advocates hailed the move, while even the NRA — which has opposed controls on the weapons — said it could do some good.

The action would "put a stop to the media hysteria surrounding the semiautomatic version of the AK-47 rifle, and should provide an atmosphere for a reasoned and sensible debate on this issue," said Wayne LaPierre, executive director of the NRA Institute for Legislative Action.

Before the suspension announcement, NRA President Joe Foss decried the "panic" over semiautomatic weapons and blamed a faulty criminal justice system for the current state of affairs in which heavily armed drug dealers operate within minutes of the White House.

"If you think that taking away the guns from those bozos will make any difference, you've got another thing coming," Foss said. "You could outlaw every single gun that there is, and they would still get them."

Lebanese Convicted In Hijacking

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — U.S. officials say the conviction of Lebanese hijacker Fawaz Younis affirms the "long-arm" tactics they used to lure him aboard a yacht in the Mediterranean Sea with promises of sex and drugs.

The black-haired, bearded Younis, held in isolation since his arrest in September 1987, was convicted Tuesday in U.S. District Court of leading five heavily armed men aboard Royal Jordanian Airlines flight 402 in Beirut, Lebanon, on June 11, 1985.

The hijackers, members of Lebanon's Amal militia, a Shiite Moslem group, held the 70 passengers and crew hostage for 30 hours to publicize their demands for aid in their battle against Palestinian refugees.

No one was killed in the incident, and Younis testified that he led the hijacking under orders from the militia.

Younis, 30, sat impassively as the jury of seven women and five men returned a verdict rejecting his defense. He faces life imprisonment.

Minutes after the verdict was announced, Younis appeared relaxed, smiling and chatting with his interpreter.

"I tried to prepare him," said court-appointed defense attorney Francis D. Carter. "He understands what happened. He really went into the courtroom feeling that it was preordained."

Federal officials proclaimed the results an affirmation of a 1984 law asserting United States jurisdiction over the taking of American hostages overseas.

Attorney General Dick Thornburgh said the verdict means that "those who violate the rights of U.S.

citizens are hereby put on notice that the American law enforcement system is capable of exacting a penalty for these terrorist crimes, regardless of where they occur."

Carter contested the government claim and said he would appeal. "It is an outrage," Carter said, adding that the case "was not about the United States" and the two Americans aboard the aircraft were not harmed.

Carter said he would appeal on grounds the United States ought not to have jurisdiction in the case and on grounds the military was involved in the arrest.

Younis was lured aboard a yacht 13 miles off the coast of Cyprus, in international waters in the Mediterranean Sea, on Sept. 13, 1987, with the prospect of a drug deal and a party.

He was slammed to the deck by members of the FBI hostage rescue squad, then interrogated for four days aboard a Navy munitions ship. After he gave a detailed confession, he was flown non-stop from the deck of an aircraft carrier to Washington.

Doctors later found he had suffered hairline fractures of both wrists during the arrest, but during his interrogation, the swelling was treated only with bags of ice.

"Mr. Younis did not expect an awful lot from the United States after the means used to arrest him," Carter said.

Carter said he expected the the judge to issue a sentence in 30 to 45 days, and said he would be reviewing the record of the trial to determine further grounds for appeal.

The jury was led from the courthouse under guard by U.S. marshals.

Teen-Agers Survive Sweep Along River

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

One of three Tarboro teen-agers found safe Tuesday after being reported missing said the three were swept down the rain-swollen Tar River during an overnight boat ride.

Lyle Adams, 15, said he and two friends, Richard Howard and Rick Wadsworth, both 16, launched a 10-foot boat in Tarboro Sunday afternoon with the intention of fishing and floating around the edge of the river.

"We were just going to stay close to the bank and fish among the trees because there wasn't any current there but we kept on paddling and the next thing we know we're in the river," said Lyle Adams, 15. "There was no stopping after that."

He said in a telephone interview that they lost their paddle trying to break the hold of the current and drifted downstream through the darkness Sunday night.

By Monday evening, they reached Greenville and were able to reach the shore by pulling on tree branches. Cold and hungry because they hadn't eaten since Sunday, they took refuge in a barn and spent another cold night before calling their parents early Tuesday.

Edgecombe County Sheriff Phillip H. Ellis said in an interview that searchers had sent boats up and down the river on Monday and a helicopter flew overhead in an unsuccessful effort to find the youths. Searchers thought the small boat may have floated up under trees because the river had spread out of its banks, he said.

The river meanders more than 20 miles between Tarboro and Greenville. "That's quite a distance to drift," Ellis said.

Hungarians Observe National Holiday

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BUDAPEST, Hungary — Thousands of people dressed in national colors and pre-Communist coats of arms jammed a Budapest square today to support calls for freedom on the anniversary of Hungary's 1848 revolt against Austria.

For the first time in 41 years, the anniversary of the months-long revolution was a legal public holiday, a symbol of Hungary's increasingly independent course and democratic reforms.

Many used the day off to go shopping in neighboring Austria for the electronic gadgets and other goods that are in short supply in Hungary.

But thousands more massed at Communist Party gatherings and independent rallies. Calls for a neutral, independent Hungary and criticism of the Soviet Union punctuated today's rallies.

About 50,000 people at a rally in Budapest applauded a call from independent groups for more rights and freedom.

"Not only should March 15 be a day of freedom, but the 16th, 17th, 18th and all the other days of the year," declared Denes Csengey, a leader of the Hungarian Democratic Forum, one of the largest of Hungary's new independent groups.

Shouts of "We demand! We demand!" rang out as speakers read a proposal for free elections, disbanding of paramilitary police forces and the creation of a national holiday on Oct. 23 — the start of the 1956 anti-Soviet revolt.

Today's ceremonies began with an official wreathlaying and a party rally outside the National Museum.

For the first time, Communist Party speakers such as leading Communist reformer Reszoe Nyers shared the rostrum with leaders from the Social Democrats and the Smallholders' Party, two parties formed recently.

Nyers won applause from the crowd of 60,000 when he said that Hungarian policy from 1948 to 1956 was largely steered by the Kremlin.

Got An Extra $19 Million? Buy Baseball's Most Costly

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The most expensive lineup in baseball this season costs $19,388,895. The best lineup money can buy, using last season's Associated Press All-Star team, costs about $7.5 million.

Orel Hershiser of the Los Angeles Dodgers is one of only two AP All-Stars to make the All-Money team. His 1989 salary, including a prorated share of his signing bonus, is $2,766,667, the highest in baseball this season.

Wade Boggs of the Boston Red Sox is the other All-Star to have the top salary at his position. He'll make $1.725 million this season.

However, Oakland's Jose Canseco and Minnesota's Kirby Puckett don't make the All-Money team. The most expensive outfielder in baseball has Jim Rice of the Boston Red Sox ($2,325,385), Andy Van Slyke of the Pittsburgh Pirates ($2.15 million) and Andre Dawson of the Chicago Cubs ($2.1 million).

On the All-Money team, Hershiser would throw to Gary Carter of the New York Mets ($2,160,714). The infield would feature Eddie Murray of the Los Angeles Dodgers at first ($2,244,462), Juan Samuel of the Philadelphia Phillies at second ($1.45 million), Cal Ripken of the Baltimore Orioles at shortstop ($2,466,667) and Wade Boggs of the Boston Red Sox at third ($1,725,000), aside from Hershiser the only other All-Star on the team.

Samuel played second base last season, but Philadelphia is planning on moving him to the outfield this year. If he weren't counted, Steve Sax of the New

Chargers Open Regional Tourney Against Cougars

North Pitt's Girls Take On Unbeaten Clinton Five

By Tom Morris THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Ayden-Grifton's Ronnell Peterson figures to be the focal point of defensive attention when he leads the Chargers against Wake Forest-Rolesville in the Eastern 2-A Regional Basketball Semifinals tonight.

A 6-1 senior swing man, Peterson has been the driving force behind Ayden-Grifton's first trip to the regionals since 1986.

Wake Forest-Rolesville is led by 6-0 senior Romas Lucas, who leads his team in scoring with an average of 21 points per game. He is also their defensive stopper and figures to draw Peterson as his assignment.

Lucas held 4-A Athens Drive point guard Arriel McDonald (22.2 ppg — signed by Minnesota) to only nine points in a game earlier this year.

"I've got a kid that I think can handle him as well as he can be handled," Cougar coach Larry Lindsey said. "Lucas is as good a defense player as there is around. He'll try to keep a body on him."

But Peterson hasn't been stopped in quite a while. He is averaging 21.5 ppg and 11.1 rebounds per game. He hasn't scored below 20 points in either the Eastern Plains Conference Tournament or the Sectionals.

Ayden-Grifton coach Bob Murphrey, though, is hopeful that he can get scoring from more than just Peterson tonight.

Saturday, the Chargers, 22-4 on the year, defeated Hertford County, 86-66, as four players scored in double figures.

"It's a whole lot easier to win, because we beat a good team (Northeastern Conference champion Hertford County) going away with four people scoring," Murphrey said. "With two or three, we have to really struggle. I hope that game did some good for John Tyndall's (who had 17 points) confidence.

"We've talked about it. You can't make a player do what he's not comfortable doing. John kind of fell into the role of defensive player, passer and role player. He's one who has not looked to score all year."

"A player that gets a way from his role without it being a natural thing can hurt you," Murphrey added. "The (other night) the opportunity has presented itself to John and he scored. Hopefully, he'll look to take his other shots. He's not a bad shooter. We do now especially need the balance."

Other leaders for the Chargers include 6-4 center Leon Dixon, who averages 18.5 points per game, and senior guard James Woodard, who chips in with an average of 10 points per game.

Murphrey has one advantage over Lindsey in terms of preparation. Due to bad Tyndall also figures to draw the assignment of Lucas on defense, Murphrey said.

"John has played the role of our best defensive player this year," Murphrey said. "He always take the best score. John is smart on defense and I hope that can compensate for guarding somebody with a little more athletic ability."

weather, Wake Forest-Rolesville wasn't able to play its sectional final until Monday night. That gave Murphrey a chance to scout the Cougars while giving Lindsey little time to get any kind of reading on the Chargers.

"We saw them play Monday night," Murphrey said. "I guess we're lucky in we got a chance to scout them and they didn't get a chance to scout us. Whatever advantage that is, I don't know. At least we have some idea of what their best players are."

The lack of preparation time hasn't exactly pleased Lindsey, though.

"It's terrible this time," he said. "We were the last one to find out who we played and when we played. Everybody else knew. We were the last 2-A team to play a game Monday night. We got home around 1 a.m. It's next to impossible."

"There is not a whole lot you can do. It's a lot of guess work. You call around and find out who they played."

"I'm just concerned that we have the legs the last 32 minutes. I have no idea if we can play at the same level we've been playing at. Two

Hornets Continue To Struggle

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER — Denver Nuggets coach Doug Moe said Tuesday's 125-102 NBA victory over the Charlotte Hornets, "...was almost too easy for us."

"Charlotte is struggling right now. They (Hornets) had a great first half of the season, but they seem to have hit the wall," Moe said. "I think at this point, Miami is probably playing better than Charlotte."

The loss was the 27th in 30 games away from home for the expansion Hornets.

The Nuggets grabbed the lead at 2:04 into the game, held a 79-46 halftime lead and built margins ranging to 39 points in the third period. Denver played out the final quarter, mostly with reserves.

Danny Schayes led Denver scoring with 19 points. Alex English contributed 16 points for the Nuggets, Jerome Lane 15 and Blair Rasmussen and Darwin Cook had 11 points apiece. Lane led Denver rebounders with 11.

The Nuggets had eight players in double figures in shooting a 53.8 percent rate. Michael Adams contributed three 3-pointers for Denver. David Greenwood came off the bench to score 10 points and grab 6 rebounds for the Nuggets.

"It was great to put this game away early and blow them out," Greenwood said.

Hornets coach Dick Harter said injuries prevented him from using plays like those that won the game for the Nuggets.

"With our injuries, we do not have any combinations, so we have to play who we have," Harter said.

The Hornets played without their top scorer, Kelly Tripucka, who didn't dress because of back spasms.

"After they got the lead to 10, we stopped executing and didn't get back on their break," said Charlotte's Robert Reid, who contributed 18 points in the Hornets' loss. "Toward the end of the second half, we did better and gave an extra effort. Our bench contributed and played well, getting their margin from 39 to 23 points."

Del Curry paced the Hornets with 21 points, and Ralph Lewis had 17. Brian Rowsam led the game's rebounders with 12.

Suns 114, Hawks 112

The Phoenix Suns just couldn't pass up a chance to pay the Atlanta Hawks back for a rare home defeat, and they couldn't waste the opportunity for a rare .500 road trip.

In their only previous meeting this season, the Hawks came back in the last quarter to force overtime and win 118-116 at Phoenix, where the Suns are 27-4.

On Tuesday night, Tom Chambers scored 38 points, including a free throw with 1:27 left to put the Suns ahead to stay as Phoenix won 114-112 at Atlanta.

"They took one from us earlier and we wanted to get them back," Chambers said.

"I felt it was poetic justice for us to beat them on their floor," said Kevin Johnson, who had 17 points, 14 assists and nine rebounds for the Suns. "This was a big payback game for us."

The Suns also ended a six-game road trip at 3-3, improving their record to 12-19 away from home.

"We are really proud of the way we played on this road trip," Johnson said. "We proved a lot to ourselves."

"We needed this win to be .500 on this road trip and even the score with the Hawks for the win they had at our place," Phoenix coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said. "It would have been easy for this team to let this game slip away from us, but we kept battling and tightened the defense and played our way to a win, a hard-fought win against a top-flight team."

Chambers scored 15 points in the first quarter and 11 in the final period while hitting all three of his 3-point shots as the Suns connected on five of seven.

"The 3-point shots made a difference for them," said Atlanta coach Mike Fratello, whose team has dropped four of five games.

"They shot the ball extremely well when they had to."

The Suns shot 46.7 percent to the Hawks' 40 percent.

"We shot the ball terribly. I know I did," said Dominique Wilkins, who led the Hawks with 30 points, but made only 12 of 32 shots. He also had a chance to win the game at the buzzer, but his 3-point attempt from about 25 feet hit the rim.

"I was satisfied with the shot. I had a good look at the basket," said Wilkins, who got the opportunity after the Hawks called a timeout with two seconds left.

Eddie Johnson added 23 points for the Suns. Tyrone Corbin, starting in place of Armon Gilliam, out with a pulled groin muscle, had 14 points and 12 rebounds. Moses Malone had 29 points for the Hawks, including 17 of 20 free throws, and 12 rebounds.

Pirate Rally Tops 'Pack, 5-3

RALEIGH — East Carolina University snuffed out two late inning rallies by N.C. State University and pulled out a 5-3 10-inning baseball victory over the Wolfpack Tuesday afternoon.

Jonathan Jenkins got the victory, his fourth of the young season, in relief, going four innings and striking out eight batters. He walked four, but two of those were intentional.

East Carolina struck first, getting a run in the top of the first inning. With one out, John Adams singled and went to third on Tommy Eason's single. Calvin Brown followed up with a sacrifice fly, scoring Adams for a 1-0 lead.

The Wolfpack came back to tie it up in the bottom of the second. Steve Shephard doubled and Paul Borawski followed with a single. Borawski stole up and on an error on the throw to second, Shephard was able to score.

The Pirates went back out on top in the fifth inning, scoring two for a 3-1 lead. With one away, David Ritchie singled and stole up. With two away, Adams singled him to third. Adams then tried to get hung up between bases to help Ritchie get home, but State failed to get anyone, leaving runners at second and third.

Tommy Eason then made up for his run-scoring error in the second with a double to left, driving in both Ritchie and Adams.

But again, State rallied, scoring two in the sixth to tie it up. With one out, Borawski reached on an error and Chris Woodfin walked. Scott Snead singled to score Borawski and Woodfin kept running, coming all the way from first on the play.

In the seventh, State threatened to take the lead for the first time. Gary Shingledecker led off with a double, chasing starting pitcher Tim Langdon as Jenkins came on. After striking out the first batter, Jenkins intentionally walked the next, then struck out the next two to end the threat.

State again threatened in the ninth. With two away, Shephard walked and Steve Shingledecker singled him to third. Shingledecker stole second and R.J. Ventura was intentionally walked. Donnie Adams then hit a line drive to Brown at first to end the inning.

In the 10th, East Carolina pushed over two more for the winning runs. Chris Cauble singled and was sacrificed up by Eason. Brown then singled to center, scoring Cauble with the go-ahead run. John Gast singled Brown to third and he scored the insurance run on a Steve Godin sacrifice.

Jenkins then struck out the first two State batters, walked the third and got the final out on a grounder to third.

Adams led the ECU hitting with three while Eason and Gast each picked up a pair. Snead, Shephard and Borawski each had two hits for State.

The victory boosted East Carolina to 10-1 on the year while State slipped to 7-3, having a four-game winning streak snapped.

NIT Looks At Strength Of Schedule

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBUS, Ohio — One of the critical factors involved in making the NIT field is strength of schedule.

Ohio State Coach Gary Williams says that before anyone belittles his faltering team, they should also take into consideration strength of schedule.

So when Ohio State, 17-14, hosts Akron, 21-7, in the first round of the NIT tonight at St. John Arena, Williams says you can't judge the game by recent fortunes.

Akron has won its last eight games, while Ohio State has dropped eight in a row. Six weeks ago, prior to the loss of leading scorer Jay Burson to a neck injury, the Buckeyes appeared to be a lock for the NCAA tournament; one week ago, Akron coach Bob Huggins thought his team would still get into the 64-team affair.

"Over the last eight games, four of the eight (losses) have been against Top 20 teams," Williams said. "Of course, you have to play well, no matter what the circumstances are. Everybody talks about this long losing streak, but you have also got to talk about who you play."

In other NIT games today, defending champion Connecticut is at North Carolina Charlotte. Mississippi visits St. John's. Murray State travels to Penn State. St. Peter's plays at Villanova. New Orleans is at Wisconsin. Southern Illinois goes to St. Louis and Richmond hosts Temple in a rematch of one of last year's NCAA East regional semifinals.

Ohio State has lost to ranked Big Ten Conference heavyweights such as Iowa, Michigan, Illinois and Indiana during the skid, and missed any chance of entering the NCAA tournament with a loss to Minnesota on Saturday night. The Golden Gophers made the field off a 78-70 victory over the Buckeyes.

Akron's eight victories are eight more than Ohio State has enjoyed over the past few weeks, but even the Zips' streak is misleading. It has been built on victories over Southern Utah State, Central Florida, Florida International, Wright State, Oral Roberts, Brooklyn College, Western Illinois and Weber State. None has masqueraded as Oklahoma, Louisville or Illinois this season. Huggins says his team has been playing well, regardless of the opposition. He also doesn't hide the fact that he is still upset over the NCAA snub, but is philosophical about it.

"It's better to be playing now than not," said Huggins, a former Ohio State graduate assistant coach under Eldon Miller. "The NIT is an excellent tournament. It'll be a great challenge for our guys, but we're still disappointed we didn't get into the NCAA."

Ohio State has had its share of ups and downs against intrastate rivals in the NIT recently. The Buckeyes lost to Xavier 60-57 in overtime in a first-round game in 1984, beat Ohio U. 65-62 on the way to winning the NIT championship in 1986 and beat Cleveland State 86-80 en route to a runner-up trophy last year.

"It's good to play somebody you're aware of," Williams said. "A team from Ohio with a 21-7 record is easy to sell to our team, that they are a good team that can play. That should help us."

Akron will most likely go with a lineup of 6-foot-6 Shawn Roberts and 6-5 Albert Jones at the forwards, 6-10 Todd Robinson at center, and 5-11 Eric McLaughlin and 6-2 Anthony Buford at the guards.

Those last two names should be noteworthy for Ohio State. The Buckeyes have been hurt badly by the top guards in the Big Ten. With their current so-called "big lineup," the guards are 6-4 Jamaal Brown and 6-5 Jerry Francis. Matchup problems — for both teams — could be imminent.

"Our guards are very good," Huggins said. "They're as good and athletic as anybody playing in college today."

Joining Brown and Francis in the Ohio State lineup will be 7-0 Grady Mateen, 6-8 Treg Lee and 6-8 Perry Carter.

Huggins was concerned that his team had not played in a week and a half, and that Ohio State would flex what he called its superiority in athletic ability.

"It's the nature of our guys that they'll play hard," Huggins said. "When you can trot out as many high school All-Americans as them (Ohio State does), we know they're a good basketball team."

Smith Dislikes Policy Change

Questions Why The NCAA Altered Placement Plan For The Regionals

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHAPEL HILL — Dean Smith said he's more dissatisfied with a change in policy by the NCAA Basketball Selection Committee than its decision to send North Carolina to the NCAA's Southeast Regional in Atlanta.

"We're happy to be in the NAAs," said Smith, whose team is seeded No. 2 in the Southeast. "And once you're there, you go where they say, play when they say and hope you play well."

But Smith said he was not pleased with the committee's decision to alter its placement plans and keep conference champions out of the same regional.

"The tournament committee is conscientious, perhaps too conscientious," Smith said at a news conference on Tuesday. "They added a third criterion that the ACC and the Big East are too powerful to have their champions in the same region. If we're that good, then put us in as one of the top (four) seeds."

North Carolina, 27-7, will return to The Omni after beating Duke in the ACC Tournament final there Sunday. The Blue Devils, the No. 2 seed in the East behind top-seeded Georgetown, the Big East champion, will play their first two games at the Greensboro Coliseum.

"Vic Bubas spent a lot of time setting up the two criteria that you stay in your own region if you're one of the top teams and you don't have a rematch of the conference championship," Smith said. "All regions should be equal, but their explanation just doesn't make sense. It is disappointing as it turned out."

The Tar Heels will meet Southern University, winners of the Southwestern Athletic Conference tournament, in a Friday first-round match. The Jaguars, 20-10 after winning six straight games and nine of their last 10, average 98 points per game.

"Southern is much quicker than we are, though we're much wider ... stronger than they are," Smith said. "They press a lot like Iowa did and they do believe in shooting it up quickly, which is OK, if they don't make them."

Carlos Sample, a 6-foot sophomore guard, is Southern's leading scorer at 19.4 points per game. Senior forward Daryl Battles is next at 19.1 points and leads the Jaguars with an 11.7 rebounding average.

Smith said the Jaguars reminded him of another SWAC team, Mississippi Valley State, which threw a scare into a top-ranked Duke team in the first round of the 1986 NCAA tournament.

"Their players will be gung-ho to play Carolina — I've seen that before," Smith said. "If we're not ready, we'll be in for a quick exit."

Smith is in his 28th year as UNC's coach and two victories away from tying former UCLA coach John Wooden for sixth on the all-time win list at 667.

On Tuesday, Smith also called for a reduction in the current pool of Division I basketball programs.

"Division I is too large, and the reason is because of the NCAA Tournament Committee — everybody wants a chance to get in the tournament," Smith said. "I'd like to see us be like football, where you have Division I-AA. Look how happy Furman is when they win the (I-AA) championship. Teams like Monmouth have no business being Division I."

games in 48 hours and in both of them we traveled a long way."

The Cougars, 22-6, were the runner-up in the Capital Area 2-A and advanced to the Regional Finals last year, losing to eventual state champion Pender County.

In the only other game involving a Pitt County team tonight, North Pitt, 16-7, takes on undefeated (24-0) Clinton, which is led by Parade All-American Danyel Parker (31.0 ppg).

The Lady Dark Horses rolled through the regular season, finishing in first place in the East 2-A Central.

The Pant-Hers were the first-place team in the EPC this season and are led by 5-6 senior guard Keisha Pilgreen (23.0 ppg).

In addition to Parker, 5-11 junior forward Tonya Sampson averages 23 points a game.

"They've got two really good players," North Pitt coach Mabel Perry said. "Parker, as you know, is a Parade All-American and Sampson can score. They are two really good players. I watched them play the other night. Sampson can go coast to coast when she gets a rebound."

"They play good defense and block out well. Most people get psyched out when they play them. If we're ready mentally, we'll be all right. Physically we can run with them."

For the Pant-Hers to have a chance, they will have to do what no other team has done this year — stop Parker.

That's easier said than done. Parker broke the 3,000 point-career barrier earlier this year and is the state's all-time leading scorer.

Parker, who has already signed with North Carolina State, has led her team into the state 2-A finals the past two years where the Lady Dark Horses have fallen to Bandys in each game.

moving within five of Boston's single-season NBA record, as Patrick Ewing scored 31 points and Johnny Newman 26.

Ewing made his first nine shots and was 11-for-15 for the game, while Newman improved his average to 22.2 points since the Knicks acquired Kiki Vandeweghe in a trade six games ago. Vandeweghe plays Newman's position.

New York, now 29-1 at home this season, led by as many as 17 points in the third period before Seattle got within three with 1:47 to go as Dale Ellis scored 12 of his 29 points in a span of 3:39 of the fourth quarter.

Xavier McDaniel led the Super-Sonics with 34 points.

Pistons 129, Pacers 117
Detroit, with the best record in the NBA, won its eighth straight game as Isiah Thomas scored 15 of his 28 points in the fourth quarter against Indiana.

The Pistons led 114-110 with 3:30 left and scored six straight points to pull away despite 40 points by the Pacers' Chuck Person.

Detroit's James Edwards and Indiana center Stuart Gray were ejected with four seconds left in the first quarter after starting a bench-clearing brawl.

Joe Dumars scored 30 points for Detroit, including 14 of 16 free throws. Vinnie Johnson scored 24 for the Pistons.

Kings 95, Rockets 90
Sacramento overcame 40 points and 24 rebounds by Akeem Olajuwon as Danny Ainge scored 29 points, including a jumper with 16 seconds left that stopped a Houston rally.

Olajuwon scored seven points for the Rockets during a 9-0 run that reduced the Kings' lead to 92-90 with 25 seconds left.

After Ainge's shot made it 94-90, Eric Floyd missed a 3-pointer for Houston, and Wayman Tisdale rebounded with 11 seconds remaining. Tisdale missed his first free throw, but made the second for the final margin.

Both Ainge and Harold Pressley were 3-for-3 from 3-point range during the third period, and the Kings were 9-for-14 for the game.

Trail Blazers 139, Warriors 110
Portland outscored Golden State 29-12 in the third period and Clyde Drexler scored 29 points, all in the first three periods.

Leading 72-66 at halftime, Portland outscored Golden State 25-7 for a 97-73 lead with 4:13 left in the third period, which ended with the Trail Blazers ahead 101-78. The Warriors were 4-for-25 from the field in the quarter.

Drexler, who sustained a bruise on his right hand in the second period, didn't play the final 12 minutes. Portland, which scored 86 of its points on layups or dunks, built the margin to 112-82 in the fourth quarter.

Chris Mullin, who had 16 points in the first period, led the Warriors with 19 points.

Bears' Manager Has Dreams Of Playing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. — Brent Hanks pictures himself stepping to the free throw line Friday at Tucson, Ariz., his Southwest Missouri team trailing Seton Hall by a point. One second remains on the clock.

Hanks coolly dribbles a few times, takes a deep breath, raises the ball to his chest, and eyes the basket.

"I'd roll the first one in and then sink the second one, no problem," Hanks says. Then he bursts into laughter.

Hanks is the Bears' student manager.

But yes, he'll be in uniform, No. 24 on your program, when Southwest Missouri meets, 11th-ranked Seton Hall in the first round of the NCAA tournament's West regional.

Injuries at the guard position forced coach Charlie Spoonhour to dress Hanks in a maroon-and-white uniform instead of the suit he usually wears for a game. Starters Doug Lewis and Keith Jackson are healthy, but No. 3 guard Billy Brown is hobbled by a pulled leg muscle. And the fourth guard, Pat Bauer, is out for the season after spraining ligaments in his right knee during practice Sunday.

Hanks is a skinny 6-foot senior physical education major who's been the student manager for four years. He was a pretty decent guard in high school, averaging about 12 points a game in his senior season at Ozark, Mo., in 1984.

"The players and I got to playing around with it after practice Monday, talking about how I could be a 'Hoosiers' situation, where I throw in the last shot at the buzzer," Hanks said. "We've been having a good time with it."

Hanks might laugh at the idea of life imitating a basketball movie, but Spoonhour is serious when he says he wouldn't be afraid to play Hanks, should the situation arise. In addition to his student-managing duties, Hanks has scrimmaged with the team nearly every day for four seasons, is in good shape and knows all the plays.

Rapone, Thompson Leave ECU Staff

Nick Rapone, defensive coordinator and secondary coach, has left the East Carolina football coaching staff to take an assistant coaches' position at the University of Pittsburgh. ECU head coach Bill Lewis announced Tuesday afternoon.

It was also unofficially reported that Donnie Thompson, linebacker coach, has resigned to accept a position with the University of North Carolina. That is expected to be announced this afternoon in Chapel Hill.

Rapone will be responsible for coaching the secondary for the Panthers. "I'm always disappointed when we lost good people and good coaches," Lewis said. "Nick Rapone is a good person and a good football coach. I hated to see him leave. I believe the thought that it was a good opportunity for him and since both he and his wife are from the Pittsburgh area, it was an opportunity that was attractive for his family. I wish him nothing but the best and look forward to competing against Nick Rapone and the Pittsburgh program for many years to come."

The Pirates travel to Pittsburgh on Nov. 18 to play the Panthers. Lewis indicated that the search is one for a new defensive coordinator and hopes to have one before the start of spring drills on Saturday.

Rapone and Thompson are the third and fourth members of Lewis' staff to leave since the coach was hired to replace Art Baker in early December.

ECU Basketball Banquet Set

East Carolina University will honor its 1988-89 basketball team at the annual awards banquet, to be held April 9.

The banquet will be at 1 p.m. at the Greenville Hilton. Tickets for the event are available to the general public at $10.

Reservations should be made through the ECU basketball office, 757-6472, by April 6.

Season ending awards will be made to players at the banquet.

Scott Takes 2nd In Bi-The-River Biathlon

WILMINGTON — Barry Scott, an East Carolina student, placed second in the second installment of the Bi-The-River Biathlon Sunday.

In the opening part of the event held in February, Scott placed fourth.

This time around, Marshall Randall, of Charleston, S.C., who has not lost a biathlon in over a year, took first.

Scott placed first in opening leg of the event, a five kilometer run, with a time of 15:47, just ahead of Randall. In the second segment, a 15-mile bicycle ride, Randall was first, 45 seconds ahead of Scott, who recorded a time of 51:30.

The third and final installment of the event, which has a field of over 175, is April 9.

Chapman: Wildcats Must Clean House

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Rex Chapman, the Charlotte Hornets' rookie guard who left the University of Kentucky after his sophomore season, believes his alma mater needs to clean its own house before the NCAA does.

Kentucky could face severe penalties if the NCAA finds the allegations placed against the school to be true. Numerous recruiting violations have been alleged against Coach Eddie Sutton's team, the most serious being $1,000 in cash found in an Emery Air Freight package from assistant coach Dwayne Casey to the father of then-Kentucky recruit Chris Mills of Los Angeles last spring. Casey has denied sending the money and the Millses have denied receiving it.

"I think they have problems, but it's something they have to handle," Chapman told The Gastonia Gazette. "It's something they just can't shove aside, put away or put it on the corner of their desk. They have to handle it.

"If they don't handle it, somebody else will." The Owensboro, Ky., player went to Kentucky after earning Mr. Basketball honors at Apollo High School. In two years at the Lexington, Ky., university, Chapman averaged 17.6 points a game, scoring 1,073 in 61 games. He led Kentucky in scoring as a freshman, the first freshman ever to do so.

Chapman decided to enter the college draft after his sophomore season, and was the eighth player selected in the National Basketball Association draft.

It's a decision he's glad he made. "I could have played in college this year and probably played very well," Chapman said. "But looking at this, there is no way I would have been learning and progressing like I am now at the college level."

Chapman attended one Kentucky game this season during the NBA's All-Star break when Florida played UK.

"They announced I was there, and the majority of the people clapped and cheered, but some booed," Chapman said. "I look at it as the same people who cheered me last year were all the ones who were booing."

"That's just the fans. You can't explain it. It's how people are: 'What have you done for me lately.'"

Chapman admits it hurts to watch the program get into trouble.

"I was born in Kentucky, I was raised there and I know how big Kentucky basketball is," Chapman said. "I feel sorry for the position the University of Kentucky is in. It's a great program with a great tradition.

"No matter what happens, it will bounce back."

Hopeful Real Wolfpack Shows Up

RALEIGH (AP) — Rodney Monroe hopes the real North Carolina State shows up when the Wolfpack meets South Carolina in the opening round of the NCAA basketball tournament on Friday.

He's still trying to figure out who showed up to play against Maryland in the opening round of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament. The Terrapins defeated N.C. State, a huge favorite, 71-49.

"I still don't know who we were," Monroe, the Wolfpack's All-ACC guard, said Tuesday. "It was like the team that showed up wasn't even us."

But N.C. State coach Jim Valvano offered no assurance that what he called "the nightmare on Peachtree Street" would not recur.

"We've been in 28 games, and three of them have been close," he said of his 20-8 Wolfpack. "That's one of several things that concerns me. I don't really have a good feel for how we'll react to a tough, tight game under this kind of pressure."

Valvano said he expected the 19-10 Gamecocks to play a game similar to the one played by Maryland.

"I'm expecting a possession-to-possession game," he said. "It could be a tempo a lot the same as Maryland used. I'd be surprised if the final score wasn't close and in the 50s or 60s. The pressure's going to be on us to do the very things well that we didn't do well against Maryland."

In that regard, Valvano said the Wolfpack would need a much-improved performance from playmaker Chris Corchiani, who had half his assist average and more than double his usual number of turnovers in the ACC tournament loss.

"The half-court game does put more emphasis on the point guard," Valvano said.

"It's something Corch and I talked over just last week — before the tournament."

"I told him that it's going to get more and more important that the two of us are on the same page and that he starts becoming more of a coach on the floor. That'll develop. He's only a sophomore."

The Gamecocks, making their first NCAA tournament appearance since 1974, whipped Memphis State twice, Louisville, Ohio State with Jay Burson and beat Clemson by 20 points.

"We know what they can do," Valvano said. "We've got to find out what we can do."

WSU Names Price As Its Coach

New Coach Follows Dennis Erickson, Who Had Moved On To Miami

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SPOKANE, Wash. — New Washington State football coach Mike Price wasn't about to repeat predecessor Dennis Erickson's early claim that his blood flowed crimson and grey, the Cougars' colors.

But Price hastened to add he is dedicated to the school.

"I'm not embarrassed that I'm a Cougar. I was a Cougar 10 years ago, I'm a Cougar today, and I'll be one 10 years from now," Price said Tuesday as he was welcomed by upbeat WSU boosters anxious to forget the loss of Erickson to the University of Miami.

At the second of five news conferences scheduled statewide, Price assured the Spokane Cougar Club that WSU had made the right football choice.

"If you go someplace in life where you're needed and wanted, your chances to succeed are much better," Price said. "I think Washington State needs me right now, and I sure wanted Washington State."

Club members wore buttons that read "The Price Is Right" and a banner was draped behind the podium read "Welcome Back."

Price, 42, who quit as head football coach and athletic director at Weber State in Ogden, Utah, played at Washington State in 1967-68. He was an assistant under three different Cougar coaches in the 1970s and lost out to Erickson in bidding for the head coach's job two years ago.

"I'm excited, honored and privileged to be chosen. I am here to mend the Cougar wounds and to carry on where last year's great team left off," Price said.

Washington State's 1988 season was the school's most successful since 1930. The Cougars compiled a 9-3 record that included a victory over Houston in the Aloha Bowl.

Price said it was a tough decision to leave Weber State, where he was 46-44 in eight seasons in the Big Sky Conference. Weber State was 5-6 last season after going 10-3 and making its first trip to the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs in 1987.

"We took over a program that was probably the worst in the nation and turned it into a program that's competing for the (Division I-AA) national championship," Price said when asked about his record at Weber State.

He said Washington State doesn't need its program turned around, but to build on its success.

"We're inheriting a great bunch of kids and a real good football team,"

Price said. "The program is in good shape."

Price was introduced by WSU Athletic Director Jim Livengood, a former teammate of Price at Everett Community College who said he picked the new coach for his "integrity, class and squeaky-clean image" as well as his reputation as a "players' coach" and his potential to win games.

Price's trademark at Weber was a wide-open passing attack that annually ranked among the Division I-AA leaders, and he promised Cougar fans they would see little change from the pass-oriented offense Erickson installed.

He also promised to emphasize his players' classroom performance and said he would meet with their academic counselors in his first days on the job.

Doug Wellsandt, who will be a senior tight end this fall, came to the news conference from his home in Ritzville, where he was spending spring break.

"We're just happy," Wellsandt said of the team's reaction to the selection of Price. "Overall, he was the guy everybody wanted before we left for spring break. We're glad they got a guy who's going to keep the same kind of offense."

"We're ready to go" in spring practice, Wellsandt added. "We've got a lot of the guys back from the bowl team, and we're excited to prove we can do it again."

Spring drills, scheduled to start next Tuesday, will be postponed, with practices probably shortened from five to four weeks, Price said.

Price said four assistants — defensive coordinator Mike Zimmer, defensive ends coach Larry Lewis, offensive line coach John McDonnell and linebackers coach Jim Zeches — would join him at WSU.

Price said that on Wednesday he would interview two of Erickson's assistants who did not follow him to Miami.

Prior to being named head coach at Weber State in 1980, Price served as a graduate assistant and assistant at Washington State from 1969-70 and 1974-77; a full-time assistant at University of Puget Sound from 1971-73; and assistant at Missouri from 1978-80.

His five-year contract at WSU will pay him a base salary of $75,000 a year, the same he received at Weber State, and he will receive additional compensation from radio and television contracts still being negotiated, Livengood said.

The contract will contain language similar to that in Erickson's, meaning Price will have to agree to negotiate his release with the university should he be offered another job prior to the contract's end.

One-Time Vietnam DJ Is Now Bureaucrat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adrian Cronauer, the real-life hero of "Good Morning, Vietnam," neither looks nor behaves like comedian Robin Williams. In fact, he's a fledgling government bureaucrat whose baggy eyes and Brillo-gray beard remind some people of Robert H. Bork.

Cronauer says he's seen the movie five times. "Sure, I love it," he says.

But much of the popular 1987 screen comedy about a fast-talking, nonconformist, yuk-it-up disc jockey in Saigon, which earned Williams an Oscar nomination, is pure Hollywood make-believe, Cronauer says.

"Yes, there was somebody named Adrian Cronauer," he said Tuesday during a lunch break from his temporary job at the Federal Communications Commission.

"Yes, I was a disc jockey in Saigon, and I went there from Greece. Yes, I did teach English in my off-duty time. Yes, I did try to make it sound more like a stateside station. Yes, I did have problems with news censorship. Yes, I was in a restaurant shortly before the Viet Cong hit it. And yes, I did start each program by yelling, 'Good Morning, Vietnam!'"

The rest is what he delicately calls "good script crafting."

"Welcome to the real world," he says. "Surprise!"

After 36 years in radio and television, including a four-year stint as an Air Force disc jockey, Cronauer entered law school at the University of Pennsylvania in 1986 with his eyes on a new career in communications law.

To "find out how the sausage is really made" by a government regulatory agency, Cronauer, 50, is working as a student intern at the FCC, doing legal research for Commissioner Patricia Diaz Dennis. He expects to get his law degree next January.

Cronauer chuckles at the disparity between his buttoned-down lifestyle and his screen image as a rebellious disc jockey who once bucked the U.S. military establishment in Saigon by playing rock 'n' roll instead of Lawrence Welk on his Armed Forces Radio morning show in the mid-1960s.

"In many ways I'm a very conservative guy," he said. "A lifelong, card-carrying Republican can't be that much of an anti-establishment type."

Friends still send Cronauer newspaper clippings with photos of Bork, the look-alike conservative judge whose Supreme Court nomination was killed by the Senate. The notes scrawled in the margin read, "Hey, does this guy look familiar to you?"

Cronauer is a Bork defender. And in his frequent lectures on college campuses, where the movie has made him a celebrity, Cronauer is critical of U.S. conduct of the Vietnam War.

"We never lost the war militarily, we lost it politically," he said. "If there's any lesson to be learned from Vietnam, if God forbid we ever get involved in any kind of a conflict again, we'd better be damned sure we have support on the home front politically, so we don't just go in to fight it but to win it."

Schools Banning Apples In Wake Of Cancer Scare

LOS ANGELES — Schools across the country are banning apples from lunchrooms even as one health expert mocks educators' fears of the farm chemical Alar as a "toxic bogeyman."

On Tuesday, school systems in Chicago, Minneapolis-St. Paul and Virginia joined districts in New York City, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Sacramento, Cincinnati, Atlanta and elsewhere in suspending sales of apples, applesauce and apple juice. The bans follow a report that children faced increased cancer risks from the chemical that's used to make some apples crisper and brighter.

Seeking to slow the spread of apple bans and soothe consumer alarm, California's top health officer said educators were acting hastily.

Kenneth Kizer, director of the state Department of Health Services, pulled out a shiny red apple and took a bite as he explained that current research on Alar, a trade name for the compound daminozide, shouldn't prompt anybody to quit eating the fruit.

"In a nutshell, I and the Department of Health Services think this was reactionary and premature and indeed our fear is they have really created a toxic bogeyman," Kizer said.

The bans were prompted by a report last month from the Washington, D.C.-based Natural Resources Defense Council, which estimated that the average preschooler's cancer risk was about one case for every 4,000 preschoolers exposed to UDMH, a breakdown product of Alar. It found the risk greatest for children because of the large amounts of apple products they consume.

Farm groups maintain little threat from the chemical exists, and the manufacturer, Uniroyal Chemical Co. of Middlebury, Conn., estimates it is used on only 5 percent of the nation's apple crop. The federal Environmental Protection Agency plans to ban the use of Alar on food crops in 18 months, pending further study.

Public lobbying against Alar by actress Meryl Streep and a broadcast on the CBS-TV program "60 Minutes" have fueled the growing concern.

Kizer said the risk of getting cancer from agricultural chemicals is dwarfed by the cancer threat posed by a bad diet overloaded with sugar and fat.

"This should not change what parents are putting in their kids' lunch or what schools are serving the kids," Kizer said of the controversy. "When we send a message to our kids that apples aren't safe, what are they going to eat? They're going to eat Twinkies and Zingers."

Vicky Scharlau, a spokeswoman for the Washington (state) Apple Commission, which represents the nation's largest apple crop, said it was frustrating that school districts were choosing to disregard EPA assurances that apples are safe.

"They are taking the issue into their own hands and playing judge and jury," she said. "They are instilling fear in children whose favorite products are apples and apple products."

Chicago officials said the ban was temporary, pending suppliers' assurances that the products were free of Alar.

In Virginia, bans were announced by school officials in Fairfax County outside Washington, D.C., and in Richmond.

The federal government's school lunch program will continue providing apples, applesauce and apple slices to students, said Gene Vincent, a spokesman for the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

"Our apples are certified Alar-free," Vincent said.

A cyanide scare involving Chilean fruit may divert consumer attention away from apples, but won't solve the industry's problems, said Derl Derr, president of the International Apple Institute in McLean, Va.

Washington state provides about two-thirds of the nation's supermarket apples this time of year, and the state's 5,000 growers produce more than $310 million worth of apples per year.

McFarlane Says North Wrote Two Paragraphs Of Letter To Congress

WASHINGTON — Former national security adviser Robert McFarlane says Oliver North wrote two paragraphs of one false letter to Congress but that he is uncertain whether North's work was incorporated into another.

McFarlane gave the testimony during North's trial in response to questions from a defense lawyer Tuesday afternoon, after a morning session in which McFarlane exploded in anger at prosecutor John Keizer.

The outburst came amid questioning about a letter sent one day before McFarlane, distressed over the unraveling of the Iran-Contra affair, attempted suicide.

In the Feb. 8, 1987, letter to then-House Intelligence Committee chairman Lee Hamilton, McFarlane said a foreign national had paid $5 million to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels. Keizer said McFarlane knew the money was coming from the Saudi Arabian government, not an individual, and that the Saudis had given $32 million, not $5 million.

"Well, Mr. Keizer, if I had sat down in my state of mind the day before I tried to take my life, if I had tried to parse every last dime that went to the Contras ... it probably would have come out differently," McFarlane retorted.

McFarlane agreed under cross-examination by North lawyer Brendan Sullivan that North wrote only two paragraphs of a Sept. 5, 1985, letter to Hamilton for which North is accused of making false statements to Congress.

Asked about a draft that North sent him, McFarlane said, "I did reject the words," although he added that much of North's thinking was incorporated in the letter.

The final letter to Hamilton said that National Security Council staffers did not solicit funds or other support for the Contras and didn't offer tactical advice to the Contras. At the time, North was helping raise money for the Contras and was overseeing a secret military supply operation for them.

McFarlane also testified that he didn't know whether North prepared a draft that became the final version of a Sept. 12, 1985, letter to then-U.S. Rep. Michael Barnes. North also is accused of making false statements to Congress in the response to Barnes.

McFarlane testified Monday when prosecutors handed him a copy of a draft of the proposed response to Barnes. "I assume Col. North prepared" it. He told Sullivan on Tuesday that "I assume the prosecutors wouldn't show me something that wasn't true" and then agreed with Sullivan that there was nothing to show that North had prepared the draft that was the basis for the final version of the letter to Barnes.

McFarlane pleaded guilty to withholding information from Congress in connection with the version of the letter eventually sent to Barnes, which said no one at the NSC solicited funds or organized or coordinated the Contras' efforts.

"Did you know they (the government) are charging Ollie North" with that alleged falsehood in the Barnes' letter, asked Sullivan.

"No," responded McFarlane.

"All you know is that you wrote it?"

"Yes," responded McFarlane.

In responding Oct. 7 to additional questions from Hamilton, North proposed in the case of one question to assert executive privilege and refuse to give Congress the information it requested, Sullivan said in cross-examining McFarlane.

McFarlane instructed North to redo the answer, saying the proposed response was too confrontational.

North isn't charged with giving a false response to that question but to three others on the list. They included denials that North used his influence to help move supplies to the Contras or that he had any ties to retired Army Gen. John Singlaub, who helped arm the Contras.

Baker, White House Differ On Aid Plan

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration is fine-tuning its proposal for non-military aid to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels amid confusion between the White House and State Department over how much to request from Congress.

White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Tuesday that reports President Bush is preparing to ask Congress to approve aid in the $40 million to $50 million range are "in the ballpark."

But Secretary of State James A. Baker III told a congressional subcommittee that was "not an accurate number as far as I'm concerned." Testifying before the House Appropriations foreign operations subcommittee, Baker didn't say whether the figure was too high or too low.

Told about the discrepancy, Fitzwater said he agreed with Baker and that when he talked about ballpark figures, "It's a big ballpark."

Meanwhile, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., one of Capitol Hill's most ardent Contra supporters, will introduce legislation this week to give the Contras $75 million in new humanitarian aid when the current aid package runs out March 31, according to a congressional source who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Helms plan would allow for purchase of such items as gasoline, which are banned under the current aid setup because they could have a potentially military use.

Helms also will seek a sense-of-the-Congress resolution that resumption of military aid for the Contras should be considered after one year unless President Bush determines Nicaragua has lived up to its promises to implement democratic reforms, the source said.

Bush administration officials have said they are not seeking military aid, and Fitzwater reiterated Tuesday that the goal is a diplomatic solution to the eight-year-old internal war in Nicaragua.

Fitzwater said no final decision has been made on what will Bush will propose in the way of new humanitarian aid, "and we are not setting artificial timetables for decisions."

Contra leader Adolfo Calero said administration officials told him Bush would seek in the neighborhood of $40 million to keep the Contras alive in their camps on the Honduran side of the Nicaragua border where some 11,000 rebels are encamped.

U.S. sources have said the request probably will exceed $50 million.

Fitzwater said Bush's plan would include "the ideas of incentives and disincentives" to accompany the humanitarian aid and diplomacy efforts.

"In this approach we are also pursuing the building of a bipartisan support for whatever policy emerges," he said.

Administration officials have said Baker is considering various economic and diplomatic incentives toward Nicaragua if the ruling Sandinistas live up to their promises for democratic reform.

Fitzwater also acknowledged that the cooperation of Honduras in allowing the Contras to keep their camps on the border is a key factor.

He noted that Undersecretary of State Robert Kimmitt visited Honduras President Jose Azcona on Monday and discussed with him the matter of incentives, Sandinista compliance with democratization pledges, and the agreement by the five Central American nations to reach agreement on disbanding the Contras.

Baker said the effort to maintain the anti-Sandinista Contras afloat represents "a genuine view that they do represent somewhat of an incentive for the Sandinista government to keep the promises they haven't kept in the past," including steps toward democratization and civil liberties.

The five Central American presidents agreed last month in El Salvador to devise a plan by this spring for the disbanding of the rebels in exchange for democratic reforms in Nicaragua.

RALEIGH (AP) — The Shearon Harris Nuclear Plant in southwestern Wake County automatically shut down Tuesday after an electrical panel shorted out, a Carolina Power & Light Co. spokesman said.

Moisture from the plant's sprinkler system got onto some electrical cables, shorting out the panel, said CP&L spokesman Elizabeth M. Bean. Maintenance was being performed on the sprinkler system.

"The plant did exactly what it was supposed to do," Mrs. Bean. "There was no danger or threat to any plant systems or personnel."

Barber Grooms The Homeless

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OXFORD, Ala. — James Johns laid aside his crutches, pulled himself painfully into the barber's chair, then received his first haircut in two months.

"I hope this makes you feel better," said Jerry W. Huff, a 36-year-old hair stylist who donates his labor every week to the grooming of homeless people. "It always does."

Huff, who calls himself Super Barber, said haircuts can spruce up a homeless person's self-esteem, often the first casualty when men or women are down on their luck. He has been giving out free haircuts and shampoos for about a year.

"It's just scissors and a comb and a little overhead. I feel like I want to help. If I can get one of 20 motivated, that's good, isn't it?" he said Tuesday.

Working on Johns' hair, Huff said: "I'm going to make you look like that fellow in 'Gone With The Wind' — Clark Gable."

Johns said the haircut would be an improvement, in any case. The 54-year-old former truck driver and service station worker suffers from rheumatism and has lived at the Salvation Army center in nearby Anniston for 18 months.

"I'm out of work and didn't have anywhere else to stay," he said. "They were kind enough to take me in and give me work sorting shoes."

Alex Reaves, also 54, has suffered from emphysema for three years and subsists by doing occasional carpentry at the Salvation Army.

"I can't work regular. I wish I could," he said, while Huff cut his hair. "I'm sure glad to get a haircut."

Huff bought buns and soft drinks for the men who came for cuts Tuesday, and restaurateur Betty Walker donated barbecue meat.

"I get so motivated every time I do this," said Huff, 36, who normally charges $8 for a haircut. "When I get depressed, I do charity work and it makes me feel better."

Huff said he dons a Santa Claus outfit the week before Christmas to cut hair for needy children.

Nurses Protest TV Portrayal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Nurses are writing letters to NBC-TV to stop "Nightingales," a show about student-nurses that the real-life practitioners say reduces them "to a bunch of sluts."

"Why don't they just go ahead and do a show about lingerie models instead," said Carol Grimaldi, an American Nurses Association spokeswoman.

Some nurses complain that the actresses who portray the five student-nurses are frequently undressed and don't spend much time studying.

NBC defended the show, saying a registered nurse reviews each script.

"Basically, it has to be viewed as an entertainment drama," said Merry Aronson, a publicist for the show. "It just happens to be that these girls are studying nursing."

Grimaldi said "Nightingales" couldn't come at a worse time, as nursing schools are beginning to overcome recent enrollment drops.

"Nightingales" belittles the profession because it consists of "little sex kittens under the guise of going through a nurses training program," she said.

"We do not want this type of image on TV. You're reducing nurses to a bunch of sluts," said Dorothy Luniewski, an instructor at Framingham Union Hospital School of Nursing.

Auditors Say NRC Fails To Spot Security Risks

By Robert Burns
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has put national security at risk by allowing newly hired personnel to start work without security clearances and by failing to reinvestigate many veteran workers, a government auditing agency said today.

The General Accounting Office said it found that since 1983 about 10 percent of NRC employees who began working before their security investigations were completed later left the agency because the checks disclosed drug-related or other personal problems that made them unacceptable security risks. It said nearly all workers are granted this security waiver.

The report was the subject of a public hearing today before a House Government Operations subcommittee, which requested the GAO investigation in 1987.

At NRC headquarters in Rockville, Md., spokesman Robert Newlin said, "We are planning improvements in our programs that are responsive to the GAO recommendations." He said details of these changes would be revealed to the House panel.

The GAO report criticized the NRC for failing to reinvestigate nearly half of the approximately 10,600 people who hold security clearances. Only those holding the most sensitive jobs are subjected to reinvestigation, but the GAO said results of those probes indicate a need to extend the practice to all workers.

"Reinvestigations revealed cleared persons with histories of child molestation, drug abuse and criminal activities," the report said.

"Periodic reinvestigations can highlight these problems and provide NRC information needed to determine whether an employee could be a possible candidate for activities, such as espionage, that would endanger national security."

The GAO said it reviewed a sample of NRC's personnel security files for clearances since 1983 and found several cases that underscored the need for stronger security rules.

It cited an example of an NRC branch chief who was granted the highest level of security clearance in 1979 and then suspended in 1983 after the employee was indicted on 52 counts of interstate transportation in aid of racketeering. The worker was found innocent, but the NRC later fired him after learning that the worker had a business interest in an outcall massage and escort service.

The NRC said it does not reinvestigate workers with lower-level clearances because of the added cost and because those employees have only limited access to classified information.

The report was critical of the NRC's practice of allowing new hires to start before completion of background investigations by the Office of Personnel Management or the FBI. It said the security clearance process takes so long that the requirement is waived for about 99 percent of new employees, including those with access to nuclear weapons design data and other highly sensitive information.

"Waivers have become the rule rather than the exception," the report said.

The GAO investigators said a review of NRC files since 1983 showed that in about 10 percent of cases in which security clearance requirements were waived the employees later were forced out.

The report cited as an example a reactor operator examiner who worked for more than a year without a security clearance before the background check revealed that the employee had received treatment for drug and alcohol abuse, had physically abused his wife and children and had not filed a federal income tax return for 13 years.

The GAO also criticized the NRC for failing to set rules on security clearances for people who require unescorted access to nuclear power plants. It said this was particularly important in light of increasing threats of sabotage and arson directed at nuclear plants. The NRC said in a report last summer that excluding bomb threats, the number of such reported security threats had grown from 84 in 1986 to 205 the following year.

Navy Recalls Mine Sweepers From Gulf

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANAMA, Bahrain — Three Navy mine sweepers are ending their tours of duty in the Persian Gulf in the biggest single reduction of U.S. warships since an Aug. 20 truce ended fighting between Iran and Iraq.

The departure of the mine sweepers is expected within the week, U.S. military sources said.

The withdrawal would leave the United States with 11 warships — including three other mine sweepers — in the gulf, and nine more in a supporting aircraft carrier battle group in the Arabian Sea.

U.S. officials say the Navy intends to keep a permanent force in the gulf, as it has since 1949.

The latest reported cutback coincides with the arrival of a new chief for the Joint Task Force Middle East, the naval contingent in the gulf.

Rear Adm. William M. Fogarty, who led the official inquiry into the shooting down of an Iranian jetliner by the Navy cruiser USS Vincennes on July 3, will take command Thursday.

Fogarty replaces Rear Adm. Anthony A. Less, who headed the task force for 13 months when the "tanker war" intensified and U.S. ships and planes clashed several times with Iranian forces.

Six Iranian vessels, including two heavily armed frigates, were sunk or disabled on April 18, 1988, after an American missile frigate was nearly sunk by an Iranian mine. More than 300 commercial ships were attacked and more than 500 seamen killed in the "tanker war."

Military sources in Washington said the three departing U.S. ships were the Inflict, based at Little Creek, Va., the Fearless and the Illusive, both from Charleston, S.C.

Vincennes Captain Returning To Duty

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN DIEGO — A Navy captain emerged from protective seclusion to take the helm of the USS Vincennes while the FBI summoned an expert in terrorist explosives to probe the bombing of a van driven by the officer's wife.

Will C. Rogers, who was commanding the Vincennes last year when its crew mistakenly shot down an Iranian airliner, guided the ship out of the San Diego Naval Station for routine, daylong exercises off the coast, a Navy spokesman said.

"It shows that things are back to normal on the ship," Cmdr. David Dillon said on Tuesday.

The Los Angeles Times today reported that the FBI has summoned an expert from the San Francisco office of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms to examine evidence from the busy intersection where the van exploded Friday.

Sharon Rogers, who was driving to work alone, escaped uninjured. She got out of the vehicle moments before it caught fire and burned because she thought the car behind her, fire officials said.

Rogers and his wife have been under Naval Investigative Service protection since the bombing.

FBI spokesman Ron Orrantia said no possible motives for the attack have been ruled out, including retribution for the airliner downing.

Gregory Jones, an FBI spokesman in Washington, said it's "too early to be pinpointing the cause and culprits of this act."

FBI officials said the bomb was a non-military device, possibly a pipe bomb.

Mrs. Rogers took the week off from her job as a fourth-grade teacher at a private school in La Jolla.

The Vincennes returned to San Diego in October after six months' duty in the Persian Gulf. In July, its crew mistook an Iranian jetliner for an attacking warplane and shot it down with a missile, killing all 290 people aboard.

U.S. Posts 13 Percent Improvement In Trade Imbalance During January

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The U.S. merchandise trade deficit narrowed to $9.49 billion in January, as the nation posted a rare trade surplus with Western Europe and the imbalance with Japan declined to its lowest point in almost four years, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the overall 13.7 percent improvement in the sharp trade deficit, the best showing since October, reflected a 6.9 percent drop in imports that was enough to offset a 4.3 percent decline in U.S. export sales.

The monthly improvement was better than many analysts had been expecting, although they cautioned against reading too much into a one-month swing in the figures.

The $9.49 billion January deficit would translate into an annual imbalance of $114 billion, compared with a deficit for all of 1988 of $119.76 billion.

While that would represent a small improvement, many economists are not looking for any change in the nation's trade performance this year.

They contend that the trade deficit has stalled out at a very high level, a forecast that would spell bad news for the Bush administration, which hopes an aggressive market-opening strategy will boost U.S. export sales.

The January deficit reflected a rare surplus of $46.5 million with Western Europe, the first trade surplus there since September 1983.

The trade deficit with Japan dropped to $3.5 billion. While this was, as usual, the highest imbalance the United States had with any country, it was the lowest deficit with Japan since February 1985.

The $9.49 billion January trade imbalance followed a $10.99 billion deficit in December and was the smallest imbalance since $8.78 billion in October.

Starting with the January report, the government is removing the cost of shipping and insurance from the import totals, a bookkeeping change that has the effect of lowering each month's trade deficit by about $1.5 billion.

With shipping and insurance charges included, the 1988 merchandise trade deficit was $137.3 billion and with those costs removed the deficit totaled $118.7 billion.

The January performance reflected a 6.9 percent decline in exports, which fell to a seasonally adjusted $37.29 billion.

The smaller import figure reflected declines in sales of foreign consumer goods, down $1.4 billion, and a drop in sales of foreign cars, down $700 million.

U.S. imports of oil went up sharply in January, rising 1.1 percent to $3.5 billion, reflecting higher petroleum prices. The price per barrel jumped to $14.46 from $13.10 in December, while the number of barrels fell to 7.8 million barrels per day from 8.11 million barrels in December.

U.S. export sales fell 4.3 percent to $27.8 billion, down from a record $29.06 billion in December.

The drop reflected declines in sales of capital goods, down $1.2 billion, and industrial supplies, which fell $600 million.

The measurement change removing the costs of shipping and insurance, adopted by Congress at the urging of the Reagan administration, will return the government to the trade accounting procedures used before 1979.

Starting in that year, the government included the costs paid to foreigners to ship and insure their products as part of the country's total import bill. Former Sen. Russell Long, D-La., sponsored an amendment making the change.

However, Reagan administration officials argued that the shipping costs were actually payments for services and should be included in the services category of the current account trade report, which breaks U.S. trade down into trade in merchandise and trade in services.

The government released data on Tuesday showing that the current account deficit for 1988 totaled $135.3 billion, a 12.1 percent improvement from the all-time high of $153.96 billion set in 1987.

Whites Live Span Longer Than Blacks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Life expectancy of white Americans continues to increase while that of blacks declines, and other significant health differences between Caucasians and minorities remain, according to government statistics released today.

The figures, contained in an annual Public Health Service report, show that blacks are dying younger than whites, blacks are twice as likely to die in infancy as whites and substantially fewer black women who are pregnant receive early prenatal care.

"The report shows, as have others for as long as they have been issued, that there is a disparity between the health of our white and black populations," said Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan.

While life expectancy at birth for whites increased from 75.3 years in 1985 to 75.4 in 1986, life expectancy for blacks declined from 69.5 to 69.4 during the period, the report said. For all Americans, life expectancy was 74.8 in 1986, up from 74.7 the year before.

Japanese Court Orders Payments For Jet Noise

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — A judge today ordered the government to pay an estimated $3 million to residents who complained that noisy flights by U.S. military planes kept them awake at night.

The decision came almost seven years after 599 residents filed the suit seeking $23 million in compensation and a ban on night flights by the U.S. Air Force.

Residents said the sound of jets taking off and landing at Yokota Air Base west of Tokyo had caused chronic sleeplessness and hearing problems.

Tokyo District Judge Takeshi Ochiai ruled that the noise levels "exceeded acceptable levels" and ordered the government to pay each resident living near the base between about $18 and $11,000 each, depending on the degree of noise pollution.

But Ochiai refused to grant the residents' demand to ban the flights between 9:00 p.m. and 7:00 a.m.

He said he could not order the government to halt the flights because Yokota Base is under the jurisdiction of the U.S. military. The court also dismissed the residents' demand for future compensation for potential damages.

Kyodo News Service said plaintiffs' attorneys estimated the total compensation from the government to be about $3 million.

Under a U.S.-Japan mutual security treaty, Japan provides land and pays some of the costs for U.S. troops stationed in the country.

Residents living near Yokota Air Base filed two earlier damage suits for noise pollution in 1976 and 1977. One case, with 41 plaintiffs, is under appeal to the Supreme Court.

In that case and another involving 107 plaintiffs, the Tokyo High Court rejected requests for a ban on nighttime flights, but awarded damages to the plaintiffs.

The court ruled that national defense takes precedence over other fields of administration in promoting the public interest, even in peacetime, and that therefore citizens should endure inconveniences caused by military facilities.

Gorbachev Calls Policy Meeting On Food Crisis

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev convened the Communist Party's top policy-making body today for a special meeting on the worsening food shortages that threaten to derail his entire reform program.

Tass, the official news agency, said the 300-member Central Committee first formally elected its foremost leaders, including Gorbachev, to the nation's new parliament, the 2,250-seat Congress of People's Deputies. Gorbachev then opened the discussion of agricultural policy, Tass said.

The Communist Party is one of 30 organizations that will choose a total of one-third of the representatives in the new congress.

Despite the publicity touting this campaign as the Soviet Union's first multicandidate election, the Communist Party chose to nominate just 100 people for its 100 seats. Party members had suggested more than 31,000 names. The deputies elected by the party in a secret ballot include most members of the 12-man ruling Politburo, 26 workers and seven collective farmers, Tass said.

The food problem was likely to produce far more discussion, since Yegor K. Ligachev, who heads the party's Commission on Agriculture, apparently disagrees with Gorbachev on how to resolve the crisis.

Gorbachev was to make his report on agricultural policy today, with discussion of the nation's pressing food supply problems continuing Thursday, Tass said. The shortages have weakened popular support for Gorbachev's reforms.

The hottest item on the agenda was Gorbachev's desire to lease state-owned fields to farmers, making them "masters of the land" that he says will produce more because they can earn more.

In several recent appearances, Ligachev has skipped lightly over leasing, and instead emphasized collective farming — the traditional system that has left Soviet consumers standing in line for meat and vegetables.

In contrast, Gorbachev has stressed the need to abandon traditional thinking if it interferes with results. "We must open the door to anyone who is capable of radically changing the situation," Gorbachev said in a speech in Kiev last month. "No stereotypes or dogmas must stand in the way of deciding the food problem."

Despite that rhetoric, no one has proposed allowing farmers to own the land they till or breaking up the giant collective and state farms that have been the backbone of the Soviet agricultural system since the days of Josef Stalin.

Whatever the decision on leasing, the Central Committee was likely to agree on the need to ease the poverty and isolation of rural life.

It is also expected to order the dismantling, at least partially, of an agricultural superministry created in 1985.

Along with the differences in emphasis in Gorbachev's and Ligachev's recent remarks, there has been evidence in recent weeks that the Kremlin leadership has found it difficult to agree on agricultural reform.

The Central Committee meeting on agriculture was originally scheduled for February, then postponed.

Last week, the 12-member Politburo's meeting covered agricultural reform, among other items, and ran for two days instead of the usual one.

The Central Committee, which last met in January, also has the power to change the membership of top party bodies like the Politburo and Secretariat.

Botha Returns To Work After Eight-Week Layoff

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — Embattled President P.W. Botha returned to work today after an eight-week recuperation from a stroke, meeting with his Cabinet ministers after they signalled their wish for a new head of state.

Reporters were kept at a distance as Botha arrived at his office shortly before the Cabinet meeting began.

He has yet to comment publicly on Monday's declaration by the National Party parliamentary caucus, including the full Cabinet, that it wants the new party leader, Education Minister F.W. de Klerk, to be president.

"Crisis Day in the National Party Struggle," said the front-page headline in Beeld, a pro-government, Afrikaans-language daily.

The 73-year-old Botha resigned as party leader on Feb. 2, two weeks after his stroke, and was succeeded by de Klerk, 52.

Botha said he wanted to distance the presidency from partisan politics so he could be more of a symbol of national unity, but the caucus announced Monday that it wanted the party leader to be head of state.

The caucus has no formal means of forcing Botha out of the presidency, barring evidence of misconduct or incapacity which could prompt impeachment proceedings. Thus, Botha has the option of remaining in office against the wishes of his party or deciding on his own to step aside after heading the government since 1978.

The power struggle intensified Sunday, when Botha said in an interview he arranged with the state-controlled television network that he would not call an early election this year.

The next election does not have to be held until March 1990. Botha's statement, made without consulting party leaders, quashed hopes that he would retire in the next few months in conjunction with an early election.

Some National Party officials have suggested Botha might agree to yield policy-making power to de Klerk while remaining in office until next year. Other political observers have predicted Botha will aggressively resist any concessions.

Botha has received little public support during the showdown, but two leaders of extreme-right organizations expressed sympathy for him in speeches Tuesday.

Australian Outback Soaked By Rain

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SYDNEY, Australia — Torrential rains in Australia's Outback turned dry creeks into 12-mile-wide rivers and marooned remote homesteads in the region's worst flooding in at least a half-century, officials said.

No casualties were reported Monday and Tuesday in what the daily newspaper Sydney Morning Herald today said was believed to be one of the heaviest rainfalls since Australia was settled by Europeans in 1788.

Australian weather records, however, have only been kept since 1924.

The Meteorological Agency said parts of the parched continent had experienced the first rain in years.

In the state of South Australia, nearly 11 inches of rain fell in 24 hours. The normally dry Wilpena Creek became a 12-mile-wide river while the opal mining town of Andamooka in Western Australia state was knee-deep in water.

Residents at Broken Hill, in far western New South Wales, said reservoirs were almost overflowing after a year's supply of rain fell in just two days. They said it was the worst flooding since 1932.

Broken Hill Water Board spokesman Noel Wood said residents had been forced to cope with severe water restrictions last week. Now, he said, the town's reservoirs are at their highest level since 1974.

The rains deluged three of the continent's six states, from Western and central Australia to the eastern seaboard, causing millions of dollars in damage and loss of livestock to isolated rural farms.

In Canberra, the federal capital, police warned children to stay away from swirling stormwater drains throughout the city, where flooding closed several roads.

Many Outback farms were flooded out, and news reports headlined the downpour as the "The Big Wet."

Arab Teen-Agers Attack Israeli Post

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Two teen-age Arab guerrillas crossed the Egyptian border today and attacked an Israeli military outpost in the occupied Gaza Strip with rifles and hand grenades, the army said. The guerrillas were captured and wounded.

A military source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the 3 a.m. attack failed when a grenade hurled at the Israeli camp rolled back onto the guerrillas' position and exploded, injuring the two Arabs. Soldiers opened fire after hearing an explosion.

No Israeli soldiers were hurt. The attack came on the day Israel withdrew from the Red Sea resort of Taba and handed sovereignty to Egypt.

Maj. Gen. Yitzhak Mordechai, head of Israel's southern command, said the guerrillas belong to a fundamentalist group known as Jihad Islami, or Islamic Holy War.

The guerrillas, aged 15 and 17, carried Soviet-made automatic AK-47 rifles, a Swedish-made Karl Gustav submachine gun and six Soviet F1 hand grenades, the army said. It said the teen-agers were from the Canada Palestinian refugee camp in Egypt.

Sources who demanded anonymity said a third person, perhaps acting as a scout, slipped back across the border and avoided capture.

Mordechai said the attack was carried out with the knowledge of PLO chief Yasser Arafat and his Fatah guerrillas.

Shamir's Likud Bloc Wins Local Runoffs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's right-wing Likud bloc cemented its domination of Israeli local government by defeating the rival Labor Party in 11 election runoffs.

Results published today also showed a victory for Islamic fundamentalists who wrested control of two more local councils in Arab villages from popular non-religious parties.

The runoffs were held Tuesday in 27 townships and cities where candidates failed to win a minimum of 40 percent of vote in local elections held Feb. 28.

The Likud's gains mean the party now controls 44 townships, as compared to only 26 in 1983 elections. The left-leaning Labor Party won eight councils Tuesday, bringing its total to 32, a significant decline from 54 in 1983.

Shamir has said the results represent a vote of confidence for Likud's policy of rejecting territorial concessions or any dialogue with the PLO. Labor has said local issues had an effect on the outcomes.

Islamic fundamentalists, meanwhile, emerged victorious in the Arab villages of Rahad and Jaljoulia. The fundamentalists' success has sparked concern among Israeli officials who fear a rise of Arab nationalism among Israeli Arabs.

Novelist Steven Corbin wrote his 447-page book on a desk next to the washer and dryer in the laundry room of his apartment. The Cotton Club, he says, is just one part of Harlem's cultural explosion during the 1920s.

Writer Chronicles Harlem Renaissance Novelist Hoped To Restore A 'Missing Chapter' In History

By Gary Libman
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — Steven Corbin wrote his just-published novel, "No Easy Place to Be," on a desk next to the washer and dryer in the small laundry room of his duplex apartment here, where the phone sits on the floor and he must exert himself to answer calls.

His spacious living room is bare except for an old couch facing the fireplace. In the large dining room, there's only an old cabinet and a dining table pressed against the wall.

There's a reason for his home's spare decor — and it's not just financial.

"I need space for my characters to walk around so I can understand them," Corbin, 35, says. "The characters are allowed to bring themselves to the surface where I can see and hear them. And I talk to them."

He might, for example, chat with Velma, a character from his book. "I'll say, 'I don't know, Velma. Would you really do that?' I need to play out their development."

For Corbin, the latest twist in his development as a writer came with the publication of his first novel, set in the 1920s' Harlem Renaissance, in which blacks from Africa, the West Indies and across the United States mingled their talents in a remarkably explosive, romantic, creative and productive way.

Corbin spent two years researching the seminal period of black life and wrote his 447-page work, which experts say is one of the few novels ever published by a Los Angeles black, in seven months.

"I wanted to say something about black writers," Corbin explains, adding that he believes that the Harlem Renaissance "is a missing chapter (that) I wanted to put back into American history. No one knows about the Harlem Renaissance, and that's a large error. That's offensive to me.

"From reading fiction I learned, yes, you can write novels. From reading James Baldwin, I learned, I must write them. What Baldwin said to me was that, 'We must create and disseminate the written word to perpetuate our own history. It's our responsibility to tell our story.'"

— Steven Corbin

"What's even more offensive is that the only thing we remember about the Harlem Renaissance is the Cotton Club, where blacks danced and sang and did buffoonery. We do not ... remember our novelists, our playwrights and our great actors such as Paul Robeson."

But as a youngster in Jersey City, N.J., Corbin recalls hearing his grandmother's riveting stories of the Cotton Club, where all-black revues performed for white-only audiences. He heard her tales of thousands of blacks taking elegant Sunday strolls on Seventh Avenue. Later, he learned about the artistic and intellectual fervor in Harlem during the Renaissance, when singer-actor Robeson, black nationalist Marcus Garvey, scholar Alain Locke and authors such as Langston Hughes and Zora Neale Hurston all were powerful forces.

He felt he could best capture the time not with a historical study, but in a work of fiction "on a grand scale — to show all that went on." He blends the elements into the story of three Harlem sisters: one who longs to return to Africa, another who tries to pass for white and a third who writes novels.

Early reviews give Corbin high marks for his historical accuracy but criticize how his characters interact and cite other flaws. "While his dialogue is sometimes pointed and vivid, too often the writing is stilted and woefully cliched," said Publishers Weekly, adding that Corbin has produced "an interesting but flawed treatment of a period of great social flux." Corbin seems unruffled by the faint praise.

Of critics, the 5-foot-10 author whose rippling arms show that he has lifted his share of weights, says simply, "I never agree with what they say, and I don't know what they look for. So I don't worry about that."

What Corbin is interested in is developing his writing skills, which he only recently began to tap.

Corbin's mother was a housewife. His father, who attended college, managed a supermarket. He has two brothers and attended Essex County College in Newark, N.J., before earning a scholarship to the University of Southern California's cinema-television school, where he stayed for two years before he ran out of money and left in 1977.

He then supported himself by working as a legal secretary. He formulated ideas for screenplays, which he never wrote, and finally figured what he really wanted to be was a novelist.

"I had to decide whether I could really work in Hollywood, in terms of writing something I could get made," he says. "At that time, there was a real dearth of black product coming out, so that was working against me. And everyone in this town was a screenplay writer. It was a joke. People would say, 'Oh, you're a screenwriter? That's nice. What do you really do?'

So I just got up one day in 1981 and went to the typewriter to write a story, as best I knew how. It was a short story, which grew into a novella. Although I really did not know what I was doing, that led me into a segue. I thought, this sounds pretty decent, and if I can write this, I should be able to do a novel."

His decision followed a belated introduction to literature. He read little before college but began devouring novels at school.

"I think college made me realize my life was not complete unless I was reading," he says, adding that after he left school, he began reading works of black writers, particularly James Baldwin.

"I never had any black lit. in high school or college," he says. "I was catching up. People would talk about 'Invisible Man,' 'Native Son,' 'Black Boy' or 'Another Country' and I would say, 'Oh, so I have a predecessor in black literature.'"

"From reading fiction I learned, yes, you can write novels. From reading James Baldwin, I learned, I must write them. What Baldwin said to me was that, 'We must create and disseminate the written word to perpetuate our own history. It's our responsibility to tell our story.'"

Corbin — who, besides working as a legal secretary, took jobs as a word processor, script typist and cab driver — wrote a novel in 1982. It went unsold.

But he stuck to his work and produced "No Easy Place to Be" in 1984. Six years after he started writing, Simon & Schuster bought his novel and paid Corbin an advance big enough so he could quit his other jobs.

When A Boy From Dixie Heads North

Gasps Follow His Big Move To The Big City

By Doug Marlette
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

When I told friends and family that I was moving north, they were stunned. When I said I was moving to New York City, they were horrified. I might as well have announced that I was going to have a sex-change operation. They were too polite to gasp audibly and reel back in horror, but I could see it in their eyes. "You'll be mugged!" "You'll be homeless!" "You'll live in a cardboard box!" "You'll become a crack dealer!" Southerners, as a rule, are not encumbered by an exalted view of life in the big city. In fact, they are the best haters of New York City in the world — with the possible exception of New Yorkers.

I have never met a Southerner who didn't have some hideous I-loathe-New York story to tell. Our worst paranoid nightmares about life in the city always seem to come true upon our first visit. When Southerners come to town, we get mugged at LaGuardia's baggage claim. The cab we hail is driven by Son of Sam. By the time we check into our hotel, we're being sued by the Rev. Al Sharpton.

One North Carolina friend planned his first New York trip for months, arriving just in time to watch a wrecking ball and crane knock down the hotel he had booked into. A friend from Georgia, walking down Broadway on his first visit, heard a woman screaming from an apartment above the street. "Help me! Help me! He's killing me! He's killing me!" Noticing nobody else heeding her calls, as any chivalrous son of the South would, he gallantly rushed into the dark building, ran up the stairs toward the screams, burst through the apartment and into a primal-scream group therapy session. The therapist threatened to call the cops.

Within a few hours of arriving on Manhattan Island for the first time to sign my first syndication contract, I found myself being propositioned by, yes, a bisexual porno film maker.

Welcome to the Big Apple. The antagonism toward New York nurtured by many Southerners is primal and profound. My neighbor in Decatur, Ga., Bruce Wilson, an attorney who has fondness for guns, perhaps expressed it best: "I've done a lot of things in my life — some good, some not," he explained, politely declining an invitation to visit us in our new hometown. "But when I die, I hope I can look back on my life and be proud to say I never set foot in New York City."

My Southern roots run deep, too, and except for a year in Cambridge, Mass., on a Nieman Fellowship at Harvard, I never figured on spending much time north of the Mason-Dixon, certainly not in New York. Still, I have never mustered quite the same revulsion for Yankees or the Big Apple as some of my kinsmen.

New York's energy, excitement and vitality have always attracted me. For any artist, naturally, there is a strong gravitational pull toward New York City. It's the show — the cultural vortex of the race, the storm center of human achievement. And it holds a special place in the dream-scapes of my youth and the mythic underpinnings of my budding ambition.

As a child growing up in small towns in North Carolina and Mississippi, I visited New York and studied its environs only from TV, movies, books and magazines. The media initiated me into the secrets, mysteries and allures of the city.

I learned about Macy's from "Miracle on 34th Street." I knew that Rob and Laura Petrie on the "Dick Van Dyke Show" lived in suburban New Rochelle. The offices of Mad magazine were located on Lexington Avenue. They made fun of admen on Madison Avenue.

Holden Caulfield and the Glass children in J.D. Salinger's novels traversed and grew up on the streets of Manhattan.

I saw the city through the comic prisms of Neil Simon and Woody Allen. I listened to Johnny Carson rib the Long Island Rail Road and Con Ed. Those impossibly sophisticated New Yorker cartoons informed my sense of humor.

The hip alienation and urban angst of Jules Feiffer's drawings somehow enchanted and spoke to this drawing, towheaded adolescent lost in the sweltering southern summers of my youth.

To a teen-ager in Mississippi, the comedians on Ed Sullivan and "The Tonight Show" all seemed to be sharing some wonderful inside joke with their Jewish cultural references and Yiddish expressions that I knew I would understand if only I could go to New York.

Those places and frames of reference were as much a part of the geographies of my imagination as were Judea and Samaria from my Sunday school lessons or Vicksburg and Chancellorsville from

Black Author Recalls 44 Years In USSR

By Charles Elder
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Robert Robinson, 81, spends most of the present contemplating his past. He usually rises at 6 a.m. and finds some portion of the day to write about his 44 years in the Soviet Union.

Robinson has lived in the District of Columbia since returning to the United States in 1980 but leads a rather secluded existence, he said, because he fears retribution from Soviet authorities who on several occasions thwarted his return.

Along with spending up to five hours a day writing, Robinson said, he is enrolled in a basic computer science course at the University of the District of Columbia.

In February his schedule to speak about his book, "Black on Red: My 44 Years Inside the Soviet Union," included appearances during Black History Month at The Bethune Museum and Archives, the University of Maryland and the D.C. Public Library.

"Black children grow up thinking they are nobody," said Robinson, who was born in Jamaica and grew up in Cuba. He went to New York City as a teen-ager. "They go to school and don't know we have a history. Life for the black man now is much better than it was back then. It was very different."

In his autobiography, published last June, Robinson recounts the years he spent adjusting to the Soviet society and frigid climate. He also writes of the period from 1945 to 1973 when, 11 years after forfeiting his U.S. citizenship, he received annual visa rejections from Soviet authorities that kept him from visiting the United States.

He has become somewhat of an anomaly in the annals of black American history.

LAT-WP News Service

Robinson, author of 'Black on Red,' stands next to painting of Mary McLeod Bethune

"Robinson's story gives you an interesting slice of life from an era from one man's point of view," said Howard University professor Allison Blakely, author of "Russia and the Negro: Blacks in Russian History and Thought."

"The minority of the (black) people who went in the '20s and '30s went for political reasons," Blakely said.

"There were those who went purely for economic reasons. They were leaving the Depression behind to find a place where they could find a job. They could work in positions in the Soviet Union that they could never hold in the U.S. Robert Robinson was a perfect example of that."

In a recent interview Robinson said he hopes his book will enlighten the world about the oppressive nature of the Soviet society he saw between 1930 and 1974. While there, however, he said, he was able to create 27 industrial inventions in the First State Ball Bearing Factory in Moscow.

A toolmaker and engineer by trade, Robinson said he felt freer working there than in the United States, where his American co-workers sabotaged his machinery.

He kept no notebook or diary while he was in the Soviet Union.

"It was prohibited. Never allowed. I would not dare keep a journal," Robinson said.

He said he feared that any minute his quarters could be searched, his writing confiscated and he would be charged with subversive activity against the government. He sought publication for his book only after his U.S. citizenship was restored in 1986.

"Even now I have to be careful," Robinson said, "because so many people do not understand the Russian psychology: that once you have offended the Russians, you are never forgiven. Never forgiven."

When a group of Soviet recruiters came in 1930 to the Ford Motor Co. plant in Michigan where he worked, they offered him a one-year contract to work at a tractor factory in Stalingrad for more than twice his wage at Ford. Robinson said being the only black man in his 700-man department at Ford, as well as one of the last hired, made him feel expendable.

December 1934 proved to be a crucial month for Robinson. On the 10th day of that month, he recalled, he went to a factory-wide gathering for the election of a representative to the Moscow Soviet.

Impassioned speeches followed one after another as the names of nominees were sounded. Then one man stood up and nominated Robinson. The crowd roared jubilantly, and he was elected, Robinson said.

Later that month Robinson said he decided to give up his U.S. citizenship. Under pressure from the U.S. Embassy to puzzled about that when I first started as a self-taught knitter. They are simply short, straight needles with a point on each end — a necessity for the cord recommended for use on the purse.

Cast on three stitches. Knit one row. After you knit the first row, (1) slide the three stitches to the opposite end of the needle, pull your yarn tight, and (2) knit three.

For the next and every following row, work steps one and two as described above until the cord is the desired length. Give a gentle tug to the cord each time you slide it to the other end of the needle. You'll be surprised and delighted with the way the tubular cord forms after you have worked a few rows. To finish it, knit one, knit two together, pass the slip stitch over the knit-together. Cut yarn and pull it through the one remaining stitch.

Depending on the type of yarn you use for practice, you may end with a narrow tube more suitable for ties on a cap or a baby's sweater. For the handle on your Popcorn Purse, however, you will be using double strands of a sturdy yarn, thus creating a bigger, firmer cord.

By varying yarn and needle sizes, you can create cords for a multitude of uses. You can, for instance, make a cord to match the background of a needlepoint pillow by using the tapestry yarn and needles size six to eight. Just let your imagination go and you'll find many uses for this versatile knitting technique.

There are several ways to make a knitted popcorn stitch, but I think this is one of the most effective: At the point where you start your first popcorn, (A) knit one, knit one in back, knit one all in the same stitch. (B) Turn your work and purl these three stitches. (C) Turn your work, slip the first stitch, knit the next two stitches together. (D) Pass the slip stitch over the knit-two-together.

If you have never created three stitches from one as is done in Step A above, here are step-by-step instructions: (1) Knit the next stitch on the left needle by do not push this stitch from the needle. (2) Insert the right needle into the part of the loop that is behind the needle and, from this position, again knit one and leave it on the needle. (3) Knit into the front (the usual way of knitting) of the stitch and this time push the stitch from the left needle.

The three stitches created from one are now on the left needle. Now work steps B through D to complete one popcorn. Before and after each popcorn, you will usually work a few stockinette stitches.

Because of the large volume of mail she receives, Pat is unable to answer your letters personally. However, she welcome all questions and hints, and will use those general interest in the column whenever possible.

If You Love Him, Don't Leave Him

Dear Abby: While I was away from home for three weeks visiting my sick father, my husband (I'll call him Dan) had a fling with a woman he met in a bar. Well, he got her pregnant. She's married, but has been separated from her husband for four months, so there's no chance the baby is his.

Abby, Dan hardly knows this woman. He was only with her four or five times. He offered to pay for an abortion, but she refused, saying she's 36 years old, has always wanted a child, and her biological clock is running out. She's no airhead — she's a legal secretary. I don't know whether to file for divorce or not. This is all so ironic, Abby. Dan and I have been married for 10 years — I'm 35 and he's 39 — and we've been trying to have a child for the last three years without success.

He's begging for forgiveness, but I'm not sure I can handle his fathering a child with someone else. Meanwhile, his affair will cost him child support until the child reaches legal age. What a price to pay for a fling!

Maybe I'm bonkers, but I still love the guy. Please tell me what to do. — Troubled In Toronto

Dear Troubled: If you still love the guy, don't file for divorce. You can always file later, if, after serious deliberation, that's what you really want to do. Dan should consult an attorney if he hasn't already done so, and everyone involved should seek counseling. You need to sort out your feelings rationally.

Dear Abby: In 1986 my son was married in the local Methodist church. We were not members, so we paid $350 for the use of the church. My brother-in-law is a minister, so he officiated. However, my son was required to give the regular minister a gratuity of $75, even though he had no part in the ceremony.

It is now 1989, and our daughter is getting married in the same church. The price for using the church is now $380. Her uncle will again perform the ceremony. She was told that she must place a crisp $100 bill in a white envelope as a gratuity for the regular minister who will not participate in the ceremony.

Is this normal practice? Must newlyweds pay twice for ceremonies if they choose to have a friend or relative from another church officiate?

The price continues to climb, and we have one more child yet to be married. Paying two ministers seems unreasonable to me. Please don't use my name or town. I don't want to make trouble for my daughter. — Ripped Off, I Think

Dear Ripped Off: I spoke with some leaders of the regional office of the United Methodist Council and was told that no minister has a set fee for performing a marriage ceremony — the couple voluntarily gives him or her a gratuity of their own choosing.

You should contact the regional office of the United Methodist Council in your area. They will appreciate knowing that you were ripped off — and by whom.

Confidential To All Brides-To-Be: To ensure a perfect wedding, "break in" your wedding slippers before your wedding day. You'll be glad you did. Trust me!

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Actress Relies On Luck (And Ability)

By Hillel Italic
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Amidst all the gore and sticky substances of "Fly II," Daphne Zuniga emerges relatively unscratched with just a smudge of blood on her forehead.

She's been just as fortunate throughout her career, starring in Rob Reiner's romantic comedy, "The Sure Thing," a year after leaving school and going on to appear in Mel Brooks' "Spaceballs" and co-starring with Lucille Ball in "Stone Pillow," a TV movie.

Zuniga was studying theater at the University of California at Los Angeles in 1984 when a friend asked her to help read a scene for an agent, who was impressed enough to sign both women.

"I'm tempted to say it was luck but I believe there's a right time and a right place for everything," said Zuniga, a native of Berkeley, Calif. "I didn't plan it but I was ready for it. If you're given the opportunity, you have to take it."

In "Fly II," the sequel to David Cronenberg's classic horror film starring Jeff Goldblum, Zuniga plays the girlfriend of the original fly's son (Eric Stolz), who suffers from the same disease that transform him from man to insect.

"I'm in love and he's changing into a fly," Zuniga shrugged. "On all sets you have distractions but you multiply that with all the machines and noises. It took a lot of concentration to get quiet and focused."

Zuniga also recently played a Latin dancer who falls in love with a Catholic priest (Tom Berenger) in "Last Rites." It was her first role in a movie in which she had a love scene.

She said Berenger ("Platoon") helped her with the awkwardness of the scene.

"He (Berenger) said something which Debra Winger had told him that helped him in 'Betrayal.' She said, 'Let's just stay in bed all day and it will go by quicker.'"

"Tom was great. I trusted him fully. That's important when you're so vulnerable, emotionally and physically and for the first time. It was wonderful. I was very fortunate."

Zuniga considers herself fortunate in most of her films. In "The Sure Thing," which co-starred John Cusack, she was helped by the sensitive direction of Reiner.

"Rob was an actor so there was no problem with communication, none whatsoever," she said. "He understands about romance and love and all those feelings very well. I just fully trusted him to bring out qualities that I wasn't in touch with or didn't remember."

"I was worried about being funny enough, but Rob pointed out that comedy comes from reality."

But for Brooks, mastermind of such off-the-wall films as "Blazing Saddles" and "Young Frankenstein," comedy comes from every direction. Zuniga was admittedly nervous about working with a director whose previous stars included such wacky comedians as Madeline Kahn and Teri Garr.

"My background was in dramatic training and much more realistic. I really had to trust him and he really helped me find that big isn't necessarily bad — in fact it's preferred."

She found Brooks to be serious about his work, however, sometimes running his crew through multiple takes, and had a similar experience with Ball, discovering that television's zany Lucy Ricardo was a dedicated professional.

"She's very serious about what she's doing," Zuniga said. "She knows what works for her and I really had to earn her respect. In the very beginning, she said I looked wonderful but I had to speak up and express more. I took that as a sign that I wasn't satisfying her but that wasn't it at all. She was very warm and supportive."

Zuniga has long been involved in social causes, accompanying her mother to anti-war rallies. The actress co-founded Young Artists United, an organization of Hollywood activists, and is also a member of CISPE (the Committee in Solidarity With the People of El Salvador). Her father is from Guatemala and is especially concerned about human rights in Central America.

"My family has been threatened so it's not just an intellectual commitment, it's something deeper," she said. "My parents not only cared about issues but expressed it. They were both students and both were very expressive. They said if you be-

Performances Can't Rise Above Syrup In TV Movie

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The operative word in ABC's "The Women of Brewster Place" is women.

The two-part movie, airing Sunday and Tuesday, is based on the 1982 novel by Gloria Naylor and follows the stories of seven women who wind up living on the blighted, dead-end Chicago street in the 1960s. It boasts a stellar, mostly female cast, a woman writer and a woman director.

Men who tune will see their gender portrayed as mostly bullies, brutes and no-account losers. One of the only nice guys in the movie winds up getting beat with a two-by-four wielded by a lesbian who's been assaulted by a drug dealer.

This occurs near the end of the movie, after it has sunk into too much syrupy melodrama and heavy-handed symbolism, a disappointing turn of events, since Part One promised an engrossing and thoughtful drama.

The movie stars Oprah Winfrey — who is co-executive producer with Carole Isenberg — Cicely Tyson, Mary Alice, Olivia Cole, Robin Givens, Moses Gunn, Jackee, Paula Kelly, Lonette McKee, Barbara Montgomery, Phyllis Yvonne Stickney, Douglas Turner Ward, Lynn Whitfield and Paul Winfield.

Scriptwriter Karen Hall ("The Betty Ford Story") adapted the novel for the screen. Donna Deitch ("Desert Hearts") directed.

The first character we meet is Mattie Michael (Winfrey), a Tennessee farm girl who becomes pregnant by a roving farmhand and flees the wrath of her father (Winfield).

Mary Alice ("Fences") has a brief but powerful role as Mattie's mother, who stands up to her enraged husband, leveling a shotgun at him, she declares, "So help me, Jesus, you hit my child again, and I'll see your soul in hell!"

Cicely Tyson also appears only briefly in another memorable scene. She plays a well-to-do matron whose daughter (Robin Givens) has rejected her middle-class upbringing, taken an African name, Kiswana, and moved to Brewster Place to be among "my people."

When the daughter refuses to answer to her given name, Melanie, her mother explodes, "I named you after my grandmother who bore nine children and educated them all, who held off five white men with a shotgun when they tried to take one of her sons to jail. And you had to reach into an African dictionary to find a name that would make you proud!"

Williamsburg Folk Art Selections To Begin Tour Of Eight Museums

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Prepare to enjoy the most elegant of decoy ducks, the merriest carved wooden figures, bright, neat quilts and eloquent portraits of good, plain people.

Examples of just about every favorite kind of folk art are being lent to the wider world during the next two years, as an outstanding selection of works from the Abby Aldrich Rockefeller Folk Art Center at Colonial Williamsburg circulates to eight major art museums.

The exhibition, "Treasures of American Folk Art," is at the Whitney Museum of American Art through April 2. It brings to the toughness of the Whitney's famous Breuer building an uncommon warmth and whimsy in the liveliness of its carvings, the endearing dignity of the average people of the past portrayed on its canvases, the creative sparkle of their handiwork.

There's the jaunty merman gallivanting across the waves in one sketch; a painstakingly decorated valentine, a lacy paper cutout painted and inscribed with tender detail; a dog of no discernible breed carved and painted with serious affection; a merry face forming one side of the body of a fat, round ceramic pitcher; a quilt full of birds and blossoms.

There are nearly 200 items in all — paintings and sculpture, whirligigs and weathervanes, quilts and housewares, toys and furniture, representing the full range of the original collection, considered one of the finest in the world.

Many folk artists were itinerant whose names have been lost to history, but there are some well-known and attributed works in the exhibition — painter Edward Hicks, for example, represented by "The Peaceable Kingdom," and portraitist Ammi Phillips; the brilliance of "Wallowa Lake" by Steve W. Harley stands out among landscapes and seascapes.

Open Letter To All Area Residents:

Computers are a major part of our children's education today. They provide valuable "hands-on" experience that textbooks alone can't teach. Students who are fortunate to receive a basic computer education will have a distinct advantage in the work-place over those who have no computer skills. However, the reality is that computers are costly educational tools, making only a limited number available to students.

Farm Fresh wants to help change that and are pleased to announce its "Computers for Kids" program. The program itself is very simple. Farm Fresh shoppers need only save their cash register tapes, designate which school they would like to receive credit for them and then mail their accumulated receipt tapes to the respective school. When each school has collected $100,000 in receipt tapes, Farm Fresh will donate an Apple IIgs computer system - at no cost to the school. The "Computers for Kids" program will run 10 months - from March 1, 1989 to December 31, 1989.

We welcome all area public and parochial schools to participate in this program.

See your convenient Farm Fresh store for complete details.

"THE BIG NAME FOR VALUE"

"Giving food for thought towards our kid's education."

His Move To New York Brought Southern Fears To The Surface

Robinson, 47, who was raised with a family and family that seemed achingly absent from my own.

I sometimes compare notes and swap cracker credentials with a friend and fellow Southern, novelist Pat Conroy, who wrote "The Prince of Tides." He and I like to trade stories from our white-boy roots in that trailer park of the spirit we recall as our childhood.

Past our prime for one-on-one basketball, we compete to see who can outdo the other with lurid recitals of family degradation and humiliation. Conroy weighs in with one of his patented yarns from his tortured youth. They usually have something to do with Southern families who eat their young, as chronicled in his best-selling novels.

I counter with stories of my grandmother, who, during the Depression, was bayoneted by a National Guardsman during a mill strike. "Mama Gracie," as we called her, dipped snuff, toled a .38 in her purse, tyrannized her family with tears and rages and would never allow us grand-young'uns to step inside her house without taking off our shoes.

She was a virtuoso of manipulation, a museum of hysterical symptoms. She suffered psychosomatic illnesses, dreams, visions and premonitions. Like Tammy Faye Bakker, she could weep at will, and could wield that mighty weapon like a truncheon. We grand-young'uns often prayed for a bayonet.

Of course, in the South, colorful families are as common as barbecue joints, and a low-grade schizophrenia is the spiritual coin of the realm. Where I come from, as Faulkner reminds us, the past is not over and done. It's not even past.

Perhaps it was the vividness of the contradictions, ironies and hypocrisies in the family and culture in which I grew up that brought forth the satirical rage and my impulse to "picture" those inconsistencies.

For whatever reasons, my professional identity has been bound up to some degree in my Southernness. I won a Pulitzer Prize in part for cartoons lampooning PTL in the buckle of the Bible Belt, Charlotte, N.C. No doubt I was able to draw a bead on Jim and Tammy before it was cool because I attended Sunday school at Magnolia Street Baptist Church. I draw a comic strip, "Kudzu," named for a vine that covers the South and set in a small Southern town.

Bypass — because that is what I know.

But I don't think of myself as a "Southern" cartoonist, whatever that means. I have never sat down at the drawing board to chronicle the folkways and mores of Dixie — to catalog humorous and colorful items of interest from below the Mason-Dixon, like some Stuckey's souvenir shop of the funny pages. Yes, I am attracted to issues of race, religion and family. How can you grow up in the South and not be? But aren't those issues as important to midtown Manhattan and Long Island as they are to Peachpit, Ga.? Certainly they were central in the last presidential campaign.

I don't know how my move north will affect my work and the way I see things, but I'm sure they will be affected. Artists are emotional teabags. We have a semi-permeable membrane for skin. Everything gets under our skin, and eventually finds its way into our work.

How does it feel to leave the South? I have long suspected that Malcolm X was right: The South is south of the Canadian border. The problems of my native region — the racism depicted by the jarring "white" and "colored" signs on the water fountains of my youth, the poverty and ignorance that crippled the spirit of the region — were just vivid symptoms of a disease that afflicts the nation as a whole. It's not very far, it turns out, from Forsyth County, Ga., to Howard Beach.

Growing up in the South in the '60s, we were the nation's scapegoat and whipping boy — we wore our private demons and public neuroses on our sleeves — and the world had something to point at.

Author

Return to this country immediately. Robinson sought a way to hold onto the well-paying job that he had little or no chance of equaling in the United States without becoming a Soviet citizen.

He then applied for British citizenship, because he was born in Jamaica, a British colony at the time, but he was refused. He became a Soviet citizen.

A U.S. congressman and Time magazine described Robinson as a dupe of Soviet propaganda, a playing of the Soviets once used to heighten the race-relations issue.

But Robinson has said repeatedly that he was "not even a Communist Party member. My very fundamental beliefs are in opposition to the party and the Soviet regime."

The decision to stay came when he was accepted into a degree program at the Evening Institute of Mechanical Engineering in Moscow.

"Ever since I was a child in Cuba, I had dreamed of going to Tuskegee Institute in Alabama to become a mechanical engineer," Robinson wrote. "I could now fulfill my ambition of becoming a first-class engineer."

During World War II, Robinson stayed in the Soviet Union. As the war progressed, Moscow was bombed by the Germans, and food shortages plagued the country.

Two months after the Germans surrendered, Robinson applied for a visa to visit his ailing mother in New York City. The request was denied, and every other request to leave the Soviet Union was denied until 1973.

In 1973 Robinson finally received permission to travel when Mathias Lubega, the ambassador of Uganda, whom Robinson had met on one of Lubega's visits to the Soviet Union, invited him to Africa for his annual vacation.

In 1974 he landed in Uganda and into the welcoming arms of the then-ruler, Idi Amin. Amin offered him citizenship, which Robinson refused, and a teaching job, which he accepted.

Robinson taught at Uganda Technical College and met Zylpha Mapp, who was a lecturer at Uganda's Teacher's College. They were married in 1976.

Bill Davis, an American career diplomat who had briefly met Robinson in Moscow in 1959, managed to obtain a U.S. visa by contacting sources at the Immigration and Naturalization Service and the White House in 1974.

Robinson and his wife stayed in Uganda until 1980, when he flew to the United States and they were declared legal residents. In Dec. 6, 1986, Robinson became a U.S. citizen once again.

Chocolate Can Kill Pets

DENVER — Easter baskets filled with chocolates and eagerly awaited by children could be lethal to pets.

Chocolate contains theobromine. Even small amounts can cause vomiting and restlessness in pets, and larger amounts can cause their death.

What is a lethal dose of theobromine depends on the size of the animal and the type of chocolate. Once for ounce, baking chocolate has six to nine times more theobromine than milk chocolate.

The Journal of the American Animal Hospital Association reports the death of a springer spaniel after eating a 2-pound bag of chocolate chips.

Few pet owners realize the toxic potential of chocolate. Dr. Aaron Glauber, a West Orange, N.J., veterinarian wrote in the journal.

"When pets are finally taken to veterinarians," he says, "they are often in more advanced states than if they had eaten something obviously toxic, like rat poison."

As little as 4 ounces of milk chocolate or one-half ounce of baking chocolate can be lethal for a small dog such as a Chihuahua or toy poodle, according to the journal.

Chocolate poisoning occurs less often in cats because their eating habits are different.

While a very small amount of chocolate may not harm some dogs, it is safest to avoid giving it to them at all, says Glauber. "Any amount is potentially toxic."

Expert defenders are few and far between. Here's an opportunity for you to convince us that you belong among the elite few. Tell us how you would defend against four hearts.

North-South reached four hearts on a fairly normal auction. At his second turn North had to choose between a heart preference and a spade rebid. It's a close decision, but we feel North did the right thing.

Partner's spade lead was hardly a thing of beauty—not that it made any difference. On a more normal club lead, declarer could have won the ace and led a spade himself to create much the same position. After you win the opening lead, try to count declarer's tricks. If you allow him to negotiate two diamond ruffs in dummy to go with the spade trick that's available, it's difficult to construct a hand where declarer won't romp home with 10 tricks.

Obviously, therefore, you must remove dummy's trumps. Suppose you shift to a low trump. Declarer will let it run to the jack, since if he rises with the ace and ruffs a diamond, he will have to lose a trump, a spade and two tricks in the minors. When the jack of hearts wins, declarer can discard a diamond on the queen of spades, cash the ace of diamonds and ruff a diamond, which limits his losers to one in each suit except for trumps.

But see what happens if East shifts to the queen of trumps! Declarer wins in hand, cashes the ace of diamonds and ruffs a diamond, then discards a diamond on the high spade. But the diamond ruff has promoted West's ten of trumps to a trick, and declarer has to lose a trick in each suit no matter how he twists and turns. Try it.

My Friend, The Leprechaun

By Stan Moore

It was a warm sunny day. Me and my little hound dog were walking through the forest to go to the pool of water. My dog started barking at two little men. One was skinny and was about three inches high. The other one was chubby, small and about one inch and a half. I grabbed the littliest one and put him in my pocket. I told my dog if the other one came out to get it. I walked to the library to look in the encyclopedia and saw a man that looked just like him. He had an orange beard, a pointed hat and was dressed in green. He was called a leprechaun. I yelled "Leprechaun!" That made him jump out of my pocket. There was a scraping noise at the library door. It was my dog. He had the other leprechaun. I got it out of his mouth. He asked me if I could keep a secret? I said, "Yes." Then the leprechaun led me to his pot of gold. When we got home I gave them some M and M's. They liked them very much. Then I poured them some milk. We became good friends. When I went to school they did all my work and no one ever found out.

The Day I Found St. Patrick

By Rosemary Johnson

One day it was a holiday, because it was St. Patrick's Day. I got in my time machine and went where St. Patrick was living. I saw lots of clovers. I saw St. Patrick riding in a buggy. He was throwing out money to the poor people. He got out of the buggy and he gave me a pot of gold. I said, "Thank you."

Then I got back in my time machine and went home.

Rosemary Johnson, 6, a student at Third Street School receives special mention.

The Magical Leprechaun

By Jerry Sharpe

Once there was a leprechaun that had no gold. A magical leprechaun came to see the leprechaun that had no gold. The magical leprechaun took the pot that had only one gold coin in it and turned it into a pot full of coins. After this, they became good friends. They played together. They shared their toys and had lots of fun.

Later they were getting tired. They both decided to take a nap. When they woke up, they looked out the window and saw a rainbow. It was a very colorful rainbow. Both of the leprechauns wanted to see if there was gold at the end of the rainbow. There was gold there. They shared it. They lived happily ever after.

Jerry Sharpe, 6, a student at Third Street School receives special mention.

The Little Leprechaun

By Deborah Nanney

One day a little leprechaun went walking. He came upon a rock. Behind the rock was a pot of gold. Inside the pot of gold was a hat. The hat was pointed. The leprechaun put the green hat on. Then he got the gold and took it to his tiny log house. Then he went into his kitchen because he was hungry. He got something to eat. When he went back into the livingroom, the gold was missing. He looked everywhere. Then he scratched his head and thought. He went to look for it again. He kept on walking until he came upon the same rock where he'd found it before. So he picked up the gold and he noticed something strange. The rainbow was connected to the pot of gold. It was red, blue, yellow and purple. It reached into the sky. The little leprechaun crawled up into the pot of gold and went to sleep.

Deborah Nanney, 8, a student at Sam D. Bundy School receives special mention.

My Friend Jimmy Leprechaun

By Jessica Oakley

One day while I was in Ireland on my vacation, I saw a little man on a rock. He was about three inches tall. I could barely see him. He had a square top hat and was wearing green. He had orange hair and an orange beard. There was this tale I heard. It was that if you see a little man keep your eyes on him, he may be a leprechaun and if he is, he will give you his treasure! So I kept my eyes on him. Then he saw me and tried to hide behind a large rock, but I still kept my eyes on him. I said very gently, "I won't hurt you. I just want to be your friend." "Okay," said the leprechaun, "I'll be your friend on one condition." "What's that?" I asked. "You won't tell anyone about me," said the little voice. "I said all right." "What's your name?" "My name is Jimmy Leprechaun," he said. "My name is Jessica." "I promise to treat you gently and nice." "Thank you, Jessica!" "You and I are going to get along just fine," said Jimmy. One day I woke up and it was St. Patrick's Day. Jimmy said, "You've been a great friend and I want you to have my treasure, a pot of gold."

A Lucky Leprechaun

By Latoya Brown

One day the lucky leprechaun said, "Oh, I wish it would stop raining so the sun could shine and make a rainbow for me to follow to find a pot of gold." So he said to himself, "I'll take a nap. Maybe when I wake up it will be stopped." So he climbed into bed and went to sleep. Zzzz Zzzz. Ring! went the clock. He looked out the window but no rainbow. "Well," he said, "I guess I'll get up and eat noodles and cheese. Then he saw a rainbow! So he ate very fast and ran outside and followed the rainbow. At the end do you know what he saw?...Millions of pots of gold and silver! So he took it home and went into the attic and put it in there.

Enjoy A Bit 'O The Irish

St. Patrick's Day Puts All In The Green Friday

By Rosalie Trotman THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Greenville residents Mike and Ann Ryan gave a spin of the moment St. Patrick's Day party several years ago, and it was such a hit that the couple has made the March 17 party a tradition.

"While living in Winston-Salem about eight years ago, we planned a party on a Monday morning to be held Friday night, which was near St. Patrick's Day," Mrs. Ryan said.

"The idea was to invite some new employees in my husband's department at the bank and other friends."

"About the middle of March we start thinking spring. Our party is a celebration of looking forward to spring," she said. "I prepare some of my party food using fresh produce that is not usually available during the winter."

Mrs. Ryan starts planning her menu around the first of January. She has a notebook that she started with the first party. "It contains foods served during the years, recipes, copies of party invitations and a collection of recipes," she said.

"My menus vary year-to-year. One expected dish is crabmeat mixed with a cheese spread on an English muffin. There is no exotic name for it, just 'Low Country Crab Canapes,'" she said.

Mrs. Ryan's parents live in South Carolina on the Intracoastal Waterway. She spent several days there this past summer, catching, cleaning and picking crabs for her St. Patrick's Day party 1989.

"I froze the crabmeat in evaporated milk, which helps it retain its fresh flavor," said Mrs. Ryan.

Mrs. Ryan uses lots of green for her parties. "I hope to find water-cress for sandwiches. Last year I made a trip to Raleigh to purchase six bunches," she said.

Throughout the year, she purchases things that are green. This year Mrs. Ryan ordered pantyhose embossed with shamrocks. The Ryans decorate their house using such things as green carnations, Belles of Ireland and shamrock plants.

"It's amazing how many people are suddenly Irish on the day of our party. Some wear hats or some type of green clothing — wearing green isn't mandatory. Some of the buttons that are worn are astounding," she said.

"In time, what started as a religious holiday in Ireland honoring the figure of St. Patrick has become part holy and part festive," said Mrs. Ryan.

Many Irish-Americans enjoy traditional dishes such as corned beef and cabbage, mulligatawny soup, Irish stew and Irish soda bread.

People of Irish blood march in parades on St. Patrick's Day. In New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Los Angeles and many other cities, St. Patrick's Day has become a national day for the Irish.

Whether you're Irish or not, you may want to celebrate the special day with Irish recipes. Here is a collection of some traditional and some new ideas:

IRISH BEEF STEW

2 cloves garlic, minced
1 tsp. dried thyme
1 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
1-1 1/2 lbs. beef for stew, cut into 1 to 1 1/4-inch pieces.
3/4 cup plus 2 tbsp. water, divided
3/4 lb. small onions, quartered

Ann Ryan puts plenty of fresh foods into her St. Patrick's Day celebration

The Daily Reflector/Shannon Wolfe

1 pkg. (8 oz.) frozen sugar snap peas
1 tbsp. cornstarch

Combine oil, garlic, thyme, salt and pepper; add beef for stew, stirring to coat. Heat Dutch oven over medium heat 5 minutes; brown beef in two batches. Pour off drippings if necessary. Add 3/4 cup water and onions. Cover tightly and cook slowly 1 hour, stirring occasionally. Add potatoes; cover and cook 20 minutes or until meat and vegetables are tender. Add sugar snap peas and continue cooking 5 minutes. Combine cornstarch and remaining water, stir into stew. Bring to a boil. Cook and stir 1 to 2 minutes until thickened. Makes 6 servings.

BIT O' THE IRISH SALAD

1 head California Iceberg Lettuce
1/2 cup oil
1/2 cup white wine vinegar
1 tbsp. Dijon mustard
1 clove garlic, minced
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
1-1 1/2 pounds small red potatoes
1 cup julienne carrots, blanched
1 cup sliced mushrooms
1 cup sliced celery
1/2 cup sliced green onions

Core, rinse and thoroughly drain Iceberg Lettuce; chill. Combine oil, vinegar, mustard, garlic, salt and pepper, mix well; set aside. Cook potatoes in boiling salted water to cover; simmer about 25 minutes or until tender. Drain, cut into chunks; pour dressing over potatoes, cool. Gently fold in carrots, mushrooms, celery and green onions. Cut lettuce in half from core section to top. Cut one half into chunks and toss gently with potato mixture. Cut remaining half into 6 wedges. To serve, arrange lettuce wedges around potato mixture. Makes 6 servings.

KILEY'S BEST FRUIT SAUCE

1 cup apple jelly
2 tbsps. prepared mustard
2 tbsps. cider vinegar
1 cup fruit bits

In small saucepan, heat jelly over low heat; stir occasionally until smooth. Blend in mustard and vinegar. Stir in fruit bits. Reserve 1/4 cup sauce to glaze corned beef brisket. Serve additional sauce with brisket. Makes about 2 cups.

1/2 lb. cabbage, kale or spinach
2 strips bacon

2 tbsps. butter

Beaufort Men Fill Nets With New Fish

Pond-Raised Fish Praised For Flavor

By Jerry Raynor THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Six ponds covering 36 acres in a field near the Pamlico River community of South Creek are the source of the nation's first commercial harvest of pond-raised hybrid fish. This venture also marks the first aquacultural project in North Carolina to produce a commercial crop of the fish for the dinner table.

On Friday, a pair of aquaculturists, Harvey Brothers and his son Lee, both of Aurora, introduced the hybrid, a cross between a striped bass and white bass. Joined by their assistants, the two demonstrated methods of harvesting and packing the fish.

The Brothers are members of a Beaufort County family that has had roots in there for several generations.

"We have marketed more than 66,000 pounds since our first sale shortly before the end of 1988," said Lee Brothers. "Even at this early date, there's already a big demand, more than we can possibly meet at this time."

"So far, the market price is good, averaging well over $2 a pound." His father said they are trying to meet that demand even now.

"We are working on three additional ponds which we will have ready before long," he said. "This will increase not only what we can supply, but will relieve pressure on fish populations in the ponds at this time."

The younger Brothers revealed that he and his father almost made a decision earlier to diversify their soybeans and corn farm production by raising crawfish and obtaining duck-hunting rights for their land.

"We are glad we decided on the

The Daily Reflector/Jerry Raynor

Bucket-shaped net lifts the hybrid bass from the catch-basin hybrid bass instead," he said. "We realize it's a potential high-risk venture, but the profit is also potentially strong."

The elder Brothers named "New York City as our strongest market at this time, with sales being made also to Boston, and some as far away as California.

"We have gotten word from a noted Chinese restaurant in New York that the chef there lists this striped hybrid as ideal for steaming and the most delicious fish they have purchased in a long time.

But, he added, recommendations on taste come locally, too.

"My family, and lots of friends who have tried them locally, find them good eating. I especially like the smaller fish broiled and served with wedges of lemon. Like any good fish, you've got a choice of several ways of fixing them.

"Already our purchasers have sent us recipes of their favorite way of fixing them. Maybe we'll get together a recipe book sometime soon."

Feeding, raising and harvesting the hybrid bass is simple, said Lee Brothers, but demanding. "We feed them twice a day with a blower machine operated by tractor that blows feed out across each pond," he said. "To harvest the fish, we place a sizeable seine net in each pond, then wench them in by tractor to a collecting point within an enclosure."

When that is done, two men stand hip-deep within the enclosure. The two performing that duty for the demonstration method were Lee Brothers and Dave Berry. They are also the regulars for that task, which Berry said "can really be a chilling experience on cold days like we've had lately."

A crane-operated, bucket-type net is lowered from the pond dike into the enclosure. There, the two dip the sturdy mesh net into the teeming mass of fish. When the bucket is filled, the crane swings it over steel tanks, where a trip device on the bottom of the net releases the fish.

"Here is where we separate the marketable size fish from smaller ones to be returned to the pond," Harvey Brothers said. "Market-ready fish range from one to two and one-half pounds."

Once separated, smaller fish are returned to the pond. Fish for market are immediately packed into heavy-duty cardboard cartons and covered with crushed ice, ready for pickup. Pickup is done by area truckers who run a fleet of vehicles designed for hauling area fish catches to market.

The two entrepreneurs expressed praise and appreciation to people in North Carolina's UNC Sea Grant programs and those with the National Coastal Resources and Development Institute. Introducing Ron Hodson, Sea Grant's associate director and coordinator of Sea Grant's aquaculture research, Lee Brothers said "Ron's not one of those persons who simply tells you how to do things. He came, helped out, got right into the water with us. We couldn't have done this without his help."

In a rural eastern North Carolina area long known for traditional fishing by trawlers, net and shore fishing, this highly technological method of raising and harvesting fish is an innovative concept. While it may not be as romantic or as colorful as older methods of fishing, several local fishermen on hand agreed it's a venture that should bode well for the local seafood industry.

Q. Being a concerned consumer, is there anyway to find if local grocery stores sell apples treated with the growth regulator Alar? F.D., Stokes, N.C.

A. I had a number of readers write and ask about this current controversy: the continued use of Alar to preserve and improve the appearance of apples. You may have read that the Food and Drug Administration has just extended the period of time that growers can use Alar on the apples. We recently talked to a regional Food and Drug Administration staff member who told us they are continuing to review the situation and that the extended action level use or the regulation that allows twenty parts per billion to be used on trees will be reevaluated before its next expiration date of July 31, 1990.

There is no real way to tell if Alar is used on apples. The grocer has to rely on word of the supplier. We called several local stores to find out if they were aware of their apples being treated. Kroger, Winn Dixie and Food Lion were able to tell us that their apples were not treated. Others did not know. We know for certain that Granny Smith apples (or any green or yellow apple) at all stores have no Alar, because Alar turns the apple red.

Personally, I don't believe there is a great danger. The only data are from studies of mice. The exposure to the danger for mice is much greater than trace amounts people get from treated apples. And, only about 5 percent of the U.S. apples are now treated. We know of lots other more potent cancer causing agents.

There is an aggressive advocate organization called "Americans for Safe Food," 1501 Sixteenth St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036 who work for a safer food supply. There is also a consumer education organization called "American Council on Science and Health," 1995 Broadway, 16th floor, New York, N.Y. 10023, that takes a more moderate approach to identifying key issues in food, nutrition and health. If you want to be active, write for their literature and join the group whose philosophy best matches yours.

Dear Readers: Periodically I like to thank you for your warm reception to this column. It's been almost two years since we started, and every time I think we have run the course and it's time to quit, the mailbox and phone bring a stack of additional questions. But, this is a risky business that I am in. In the last two years, I have been introduced as, "the lady who tells us what not to eat." Recently I was enjoying lunch at a Mediterranean-style restaurant on the Evans Street Mall, and when I went to the counter to pay my tab, I walked by a table where a friend was trying to hide her dessert. Remember folks, I never said good nutrition means never eating desserts! I have some occasionally, too. While at home recovering from surgery recently, our very special head nurse, Brenda Spencer, stopped by to visit; she was carrying muffins. Before I could say anything she blurted out, "I am Southern, I can't visit a sick person with bringing food." She also quickly added that the recipe was from the new American Cancer Foundation Cookbook, which I have reviewed in this column. It makes me wonder what folks think about the way Patrick and I eat. A very dear friend also recently brought us supper. When I called to thank her and tell her everything was wonderful, she sounded so relieved. It seems that her friends wondered how she had the "gumption" to bring food to us. I guess a nutritionist could starve in the time of need.

This is all to say, that I hope you hear my basic message. Food is a wonderful part of our culture, our traditions and our lifestyles and should be enjoyed. Food does nourish the body and spirit. We only need to look at what we eat and make sure that over the long run, it does not hurt our health. Remember, health promoting foods can be wonderful in taste, flavor and memories.

The Memory Of A Fine Sauce Will Last Forever

By Jonathan Susskind
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The shrimp cocktail was tough, the chicken was charbroiled to a cinder, the sherbet passed its expiration date during the last Ice Age, but ... ohh, that sauce.

It is funny how long the memory of a fine sauce remains on the mind's "tongue."

Like painters who blend pigments to create colors for their canvases, good cooks can learn to make flavorful sauces that add zest to food and turn any dish into a work of art. Learning the tricks of sauce-making, and mastering a few prime examples, is one sure way of making memorable meals or just invigorating your daily cooking.

"You can put a sauce over just about any kind of food, and you can pick how plain or how fancy you want it just by virtue of the sauce," says Diane Rozas, author of a new book on the subject, "Sauces and Dressings" (Harmony Books; $6.95; paperback).

"I think most people really like sauce, but they don't think, 'I'm going to make bearnaise sauce at home,' they think 'I'm going to go out to a restaurant and have it,'" Ms. Rozas said. "People don't realize that they can make these classic sauces without any problems whatsoever. Here are some sauce recipes from Ms. Rozas book and other sources.

CUCUMBER SAUCE

1 large cucumber, hothouse if available, peeled, seeded and thinly sliced

1 tsp. coarse salt
1 tsp. fresh minced chives
2 tbsps. white wine vinegar
1 cup sour cream
Salt and freshly ground pepper

To remove any bitterness from the cucumber, place the slices around the inside of a colander, sprinkle with coarse salt and drain for 30 minutes. Rinse, pat dry and chop finely. Place in a mixing bowl. Combine the chives, vinegar and sour cream with the cucumber. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Chill well before serving. Makes about 2 cups.

Marinate meat or fish in the following sauce for at least an hour and use it to baste while broiling or grilling. Ms. Rozas suggests.

ORIENTAL BARBECUE SAUCE

1/2 cup peanut oil
1/4 cup hoisin sauce
1/4 cup soy sauce
1/2 cup rice vinegar
1/4 cup dry sherry
1/2 tsp. hot chili oil

2 whole scallions, minced
2 garlic cloves, minced
2 tbsps. fresh ginger, minced

Combine all ingredients in a small bowl. Whisk until well mixed. Store in the refrigerator up to two weeks. Makes 2 cups.

MUSHROOM SAUCE

3 tbsps. butter
4 tbsps. chopped shallots
1/2 lb. mushrooms, sliced
1/2 tsp. salt
Freshly ground black pepper (6 turns of the mill)
1/4 cup dry white wine
1 cup chicken stock

Melt 1 tablespoon butter in a saucepan and add the shallots, mushrooms, salt and pepper. Cook, stirring, for about 5 minutes. Add the wine and chicken stock and reduce by half over high heat.

Transfer the mixture to a blender and blend at high speed until smooth. Add the remaining butter and blend until very smooth, about 1 minute.

CHIVE AND DILL SAUCE

1 tbsp. unsalted butter
6 shallots, finely chopped
1 leek, white part only, well rinsed
1/4 head escarole (discard outer leaves) or 12 spinach leaves, rinsed well

1/2 cup chicken stock
3/4 cup sour cream
1/4 cup heavy cream
1 bunch chives, chopped
1 1/2 cups fresh dill, chopped
Fresh lemon juice
Ground white pepper

Melt butter in saucepan over medium heat, add leeks and shallots and cook until tender. Add chicken stock and escarole and cook until reduced to one half. Remove from heat and cool to room temperature.

Blend sour cream, cream, chives and dill in food processor. Add the vegetable reduction and process until smooth. Add lemon juice and pepper to taste before serving. Makes 1 1/2 cups.

RED PEPPER COULIS

5 sweet red peppers, coarsely chopped
1/2 cup chicken stock
2 tbsps. balsamic vinegar
2 cloves garlic
2 tps. dried basil

In a food processor or blender, puree all ingredients until smooth. Pour into a medium saucepan and bring to a boil. Lower heat slightly and cook uncovered for about 10 minutes, until thick. Makes 2 cups.

SHORTCUT CHICKEN STOCK

3 1/2 cups canned clear chicken broth
1 cup of water
1 medium onion, peeled and coarsely chopped
1 small carrot, scraped and coarsely chopped
1 medium stalk of celery, coarsely chopped
1 leek, green part discarded, well washed and thinly sliced
1 or 2 large mushrooms, stems trimmed, rinsed and coarsely chopped

Several sprigs of parsley
1/2 bay leaf
Pinch of dried thyme or a small sprig of fresh thyme

If you are making a chicken dish the same day, you may cut up the chicken gizzard, heart, neck, wing tips and leftover bones and add them to the stock pot.

Combine everything in a saucepan and simmer, partially covered, over low heat for 1 1/2 hour. Strain the stock through a fine mesh strainer, let it cool, then store covered, in the refrigerator. Makes 3 cups.

Consumers Soaking Up New Bottled Sauces

By Jonathan Susskind
LAT-WP News Service

Bottled sauces are hot, and not just taste-wise.

Hundreds of salsas, marinades, jerks, chutneys, mustards, dressings and glazes — both domestic and imported — are being introduced to American consumers every year.

And apparently, we are pleased to make their acquaintance.

The market for sauces was almost $2.9 billion in 1987, a year when at least 200 new sauces reached store shelves, reports FIND-SVP, a New York market research company. Another New York research company, SAMI, estimated sales of $1.5 billion worth of bottled spaghetti sauces last year, compared with less than half that amount five years ago.

Such growth is astonishing, says Barbara Preston of the Association for Dressings and Sauces, when you consider that sauces and dressings are "accessory foods," not "like oatmeal or bread, that people need to eat."

"Obviously, these are products that (consumers) like and enjoy, and they appreciate the quality and variety that it brings to our meals," says Ms. Preston, executive director of the Atlanta-based industry group, founded in 1926.

The FIND-SVP report says that Italian sauces top the popularity list, followed by meat basting portions like steak and barbecue sauce, dry sauce and gravy mixes and Mexican sauce, which is moving fast up the charts at 16 percent annual growth rate. Overall, the market for all kinds of sauces is growing by about 6 percent a year.

Spicy sauces are selling especially well, says Lisa Lamme, founder and president of Le Saucier, distributor of more than 300 different sauces through a Boston retail store and mail-order catalog.

"The hotter the better," Ms. Lamme says. "There are people out there who have hot sauce collections. They'll call up and order everything on the hot-sauce page."

Mexican, Thai, Caribbean and Indian hot sauces, plus anything with garlic like aioli, are going strong, she says. Prices of $1.50 to $12 a bottle are no objection.

A market for sauces free of salt, sugar, preservatives and artificial additives is also growing, Ms. Lamme says. "About 80 (percent) to 85 percent of everything we have is preservative-free or all-natural, and we do inform the customer about MSG. We have little asterisks (in the catalog) next to the products that have preservatives in them.

Americans Cut Animal Fat From Their Diets

By Toni Tipton
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

A lot of Americans are having trouble discerning which foods provide the most saturated fat in their diets, according to a study conducted by the National Academy of Sciences and a Texas researcher who spoke on the subject in Los Angeles recently.

The academy's data shows that between 1965 and 1985 "the shift from animal to vegetable sources of fat in the American diet has been dramatic: fat consumed by Americans from animal sources decreased 22 percent and fat from vegetable sources increased 64 percent." This is due to the fact that fats from vegetable sources are often "hidden" from consumers in processed foods such as donuts, cookies and cakes, the study explained.

"Vegetable oils such as coconut, palm and palm kernel oils are as much or more saturated than most animal fats," the study stated, "and considerable amounts are used in commercial baking and as frying fats."

These fats, according to Dr. Margo Denke M.D., Center for Human Nutrition, Southwest Medical Center, University of Texas, account for about 5 percent of the saturated in the American diet. Cheese, beef steaks, hot dogs and luncheon meats contribute about 7 percent each, she said. Ground beef and whole milk "top the list," each contributing about 9 percent to total dietary saturates, she said.

"A trimmed steak can fit into the diet," said Denke. "Unfortunately, the majority of red meat consumed is hamburger meat." Instead, consumers who reduce consumption of ground beef, baked products and include smaller and leaner portions of meat to the diet, may find it easier to comply with the American Heart Association's recommendation that fat intake be limited to 30 percent of the day's total calories.

A three-ounce cooked serving of lean, trimmed beef derives only 78 calories from fat and only 31 of those from saturated fat. Considering these figures, a person following the 30 percent fat diet eating 2,000 calories per day, would be allowed 600 calories from fat, no more than 200 of which could be saturated.

"One can easily follow these guidelines and include two three-ounce servings of lean beef in the diet every day," said Dr. Burdette Breidenstein, director of research for the National Live Stock and Meat Board, "and still fall short of the daily 200 calories from saturated fat limit."

"Animal food products, particularly red meat, can no longer be portrayed as the only source of so-called bad fats," she said.

Additional research supporting the return of lean beef to the diet conducted by Scott Grundy, a physician and a doctor of biochemistry at the University of Texas Health Science Center in Dallas, has further demonstrated that not all saturated fats are alike.

In a study published last May in the New England Journal of Medicine, Grundy and his associate, Dr. Andrea Bonanome, noted that the saturated fat in beef (and also in chocolate) known as stearic acid showed a tendency to lower blood cholesterol levels.

While Grundy's data does not encourage the public to overload on beef fat and cocoa butter, he said, lean beef in moderate amounts "has a place in our diets."

The following recipes provide the recommended three-ounce serving of beef. This amount is equivalent in size, approximately, to a deck of cards.

MEXI-BEEF SALAD

1/2 lb. Southwestern Beef Steak (recipe below)

Tips Make It Easy To Clarify Butter

Clarified butter, drawn butter and ghee are one in the same — butter that has been melted and had the milk solids removed. The result is a clear yellow liquid that tolerates higher cooking temperatures and, stored in a covered jar, keeps for weeks in the refrigerator and even longer if frozen.

To clarify butter, place any amount in a heavy pan over low heat. As the butter melts, the white milk solids will begin rising to the surface.

Keep the heat low so the butter does not brown. Continue to boil until the white solids look curdled. Then remove the butter from the heat and pour it into a glass measuring cup.

After standing for a few minutes, the butter will settle into three layers. Skim the thin butter fat layer from the top and pour or strain the clear yellow liquid into a clean container with a tight fitting lid. Discard the milk solids that settle to the bottom.

Each one-half cup of butter should yield about one-third cup clarified butter. Use the clarified butter for sauteing delicate flavored foods, as a sauce for lobster, to make brown and black butter and as a baking ingredient.

1 cup julienne-cut jicama
1/2 cup coarsely chopped sweet red pepper
1 cup torn lettuce
Prepared guacamole

Cut Southwestern Beef Steak into 2 1/2-inch strips. Separate orange into quarters, then cut each quarter crosswise into 1/4 to 1/2-inch thick slices. Combine orange slices, jicama and red pepper.

Arrange lettuce around edge of small serving platter. Place orange mixture in center. Top with beef strips and serve with guacamole. Makes 2 to 3 servings.

Southwestern Beef Steak

1/3 cup chopped onion
1/3 cup prepared salsa
2 tbsps. lime juice
1/2 tsp. sugar
1 lb. beef top round steak, cut 1-inch thick
Salt, pepper

Combine onion, salsa, lime juice and sugar. Place steak in plastic bag and add marinade, turning to coat. Tie bag securely and marinate in refrigerator 2 to 4 hours. Remove steak from marinade and pat dry with paper towels.

Pan broil steak in large skillet over medium-high heat 13 to 16 minutes to desired doneness, turning at least once. Carve half of steak into thin slices and serve. Reserve remaining steak for use in Mexi Beef Salad.

BEEF STEAKS WITH ONION AND PEPPER SAUTE

1 beef eye round steak, cut 1-inch thick
1 medium green pepper, cut into 1/4-inch strips
1 medium onion, sliced 1/4-inch thick
1/4 tsp. basil leaves
Salt, pepper
1/4 cup hot water
1/4 tsp. instant beef bouillon

Partially freeze steak until firm. Cut into 2 (1/2-inch thick) slices. Saute green pepper, onion and basil in non-stick skillet 5 minutes. Remove and reserve. Quickly cook steaks in skillet over medium-high heat 2 to 3 minutes, turning once. Do not overcook.

Season to taste with salt and pepper. Remove to warm platter and keep warm. Place vegetables in same pan. Add water and bouillon and cook over medium-high heat 2 to 3 minutes or until tender-crisp. Serve with steak. Makes 2 servings.

BEEF AND TOMATO STIR-FRY SALAD

1 tsp. onion powder
1 tsp. oil

cornstarch, 2 tablespoons soy sauce, sugar and garlic. Stir in beef. Let stand 15 minutes.

Meanwhile, combine remaining soy sauce with vinegar, ketchup, onion powder and 2 tablespoons water. Set aside.

Heat oil in wok or large skillet until hot. Add beef and stir fry 1 minute. Remove meat. Cut celery diagonally into 1/4-inch slices. Add to pan along with green pepper and ginger. Stir-fry 1 minute. Remove wok from heat and stir in tomatoes, beef and soy sauce mixture. Spoon mixture over lettuce. Toss well to combine before serving. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

STIR-FRY BEEF-EGGPLANT SALAD

1/2 lb. boneless tender beef steak
1/2 cup bottled stir-fry sauce
1 tsp. vinegar
1/4 to 1/2 tsp. crushed dried red chiles
1 clove garlic, pressed
3 cups finely shredded lettuce
6 green onions
Oil
1 medjum eggplant, cut julienne
1 medium carrot, cut julienne

Cut beef across grain into thin slices, then into strips. Combine stir-fry sauce, vinegar, chiles and garlic. Coat beef with 1 tablespoon mixture, then set aside remaining stir-fry mixture.

Line bottom of shallow bowl or large platter with lettuce. Cut green onions into 1 1/2-inch lengths, separating whites from tops. Heat 1 tablespoon oil in wok or large skillet until hot. Add beef and stir fry 1 minute. Remove.

Add eggplant and stir-fry 6 minutes, adding small amount oil if needed. Add carrot and white part of green onions. Stir-fry 3 minutes. Add green onion tops and stir-fry 2 minutes longer. Add reserved stir-fry sauce mixture and beef. Cook and stir just until beef and vegetables are coated with sauce. Spoon over lettuce and toss well to combine. Makes 4 servings.

Note: Bottled stir-fry sauce is available in Oriental section of supermarket.

SESAME BEEF WITH GREEN BEANS

1 tbsps. oil
3/4 lb. flank steak, cut into thin slices
2 1/2 tbsps. soy sauce
1 1/2 tps. sugar
1 tsp. sesame oil
4 tps. roasted sesame seeds

Slice beans into 1 1/2-inch diagonal slices. Parboil 4 to 5 minutes or until tender-crisp. Drain and set aside.

Heat wok over high heat. Add oil and stir-fry 1 to 2 minutes, or until beef is no longer pink. Add beans and stir-fry 30 seconds.

Add soy sauce, sugar and sesame oil. Stir-fry 30 seconds. Remove from heat. Add sesame seeds and toss. Serve hot or cold. Makes 4 servings.

Irish Green Means Good Food And Great Celebration On Friday

salt
cayenne pepper

Cut the lobster in half and remove the meat from the claws and body. When cracking the claws it helps to cover them with a cloth before hitting them with a rolling pin, to stop the shell splinters flying all over the kitchen. Keep the body shells to serve to serve the lobster in, and don't try to remove the small legs or the interior casing of the head. Leave the greenish tomalley in place.

Cut the lobster meat into  $\frac{3}{4}$  inch chunks and put it in a small pan with the butter. Heat gently, turning the pieces until well coated. Heat the whiskey, light it and pour it over the lobster. When the flames die down remove the pieces of lobster with a slotted spoon and add the cream to the pan. Mix it with the pan juices and add seasoning. Boil until it is reduced to a rich and creamy sauce, about 3 minutes. Put the lobster back into the sauce, turning it over to heat it through, then pile into the shells and serve very hot. Serves two.

BRONZED BRAISED BEEF WITH GUINNESS

$2\frac{1}{2}$  lb. chuck steak, cut in large slices  $\frac{1}{4}$  inch thick
 $\frac{1}{4}$  lb. carrots
 $\frac{1}{2}$  lb. small onions
2 shallots
 $2\frac{1}{2}$  cups bottled Guinness stout ale
1 bay leaf
2 sprigs parsley
6 peppercorns
1 strip orange rind, pared free of the white pith salt and freshly ground pepper
2 tbsp. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  stick) butter
1 tsp. oil
A little flour
Pinch of sugar
1 tsp. vinegar
A little beef stock

The Day Before

Trim the meat but keep the pieces whole. Cut the carrots into little sticks about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  inches long by  $\frac{1}{4}$  inch across and peel and cut the onions and shallots downwards so that they fall apart into little crescents. Put them into a porcelain dish and pour the Guinness over them. Add the bay leaf, parsley, peppercorns and orange rind. Season with a tiny pinch a salt. Put the meat into this marinade and let it marinate overnight. Turn it over or twice if possible.

Next Day

Drain and dry the steaks. Heat the butter and oil in a wide casserole. Dust the steaks lightly with flour and brown them well on both sides. Remove them to a plate and add the strained vegetables from the marinade (if you prefer you can use fresh). Cook the vegetables over a low heat for a few minutes, stirring occasionally. Add the marinade and place the beef on top of the vegetable. Add the sugar and vinegar and enough stock to bring the liquid halfway up the sides of the meat. Season lightly with salt and pepper.

Cover the pan and place over a very low heat — use a heat diffusing mat if you think the heat is too fierce. Simmer very very slowly for  $1\frac{1}{2}$  hours — the meat is cooked when a skewer pierces it very easily.

You can cook this braised beef in a low oven if you prefer, 325 degrees Fahrenheit. Serve it with a good dish of mashed potatoes to mop up the delicious gravy, or with baked potatoes and red cabbage. Serves six.

SHEPHERD'S PIE

Shepherd's pie is always make with leftover roast lamb and can be delicious, juicy and full of flavor or dry and boring depending on how much trouble you take. Cottage pie is a similar dish but made with beef — either fresh hamburger or cold roast beef. You can use the same recipe for both.

$\frac{1}{2}$  lb. roast lamb (preferably underdone)
2 onions
1 tbsp. vegetable oil
2 tbsp. ( $\frac{1}{2}$  stick) butter
3 tsp. flour
4 tsp. red wine
1 cup gravy or stock
 $\frac{1}{2}$  tsp. dried thyme
 $\frac{1}{2}$  tsp. well pounded dried rosemary

Tabasco sauce
1 tsp. tomato puree
Salt and freshly ground black pepper

For The Mashed Potato

$\frac{1}{2}$  lb. potatoes
 $\frac{1}{4}$  cup ( $\frac{1}{2}$  stick) butter
 $\frac{2}{3}$  cup hot milk
Salt and freshly ground black pepper

Make The Mashed Potatoes

Cook the potatoes in well-salted water until very tender, drain well and mash, adding plenty of butter and hot milk. Beat them thoroughly to make them really smooth and creamy and season well.

For The Filling

Mince or chop the lamb, but not too finely, since coarser pieces do not dry out so quickly. Peel and chop the onions. Heat the oil and butter in a large frying pan and fry the onions until golden brown. Add the lamb and let it brown in places, then sprinkle the flour over it and brown that too as much as is possible — most of it disappears into the meat in some mysterious way. Now add the liquids, first the red wine, which should bubble and sizzle, then the stock. Stir it in well, deglazing the pan, and add the herbs and seasonings, including the Tabasco and tomato puree. Simmer for about 10 minutes, add more stock if necessary then transfer to a deep 9-inch oval dish.

Cover lightly with mounded mashed potato — do not smooth it down. Dot the top all over with little pieces of butter and cook at 350 degrees Fahrenheit for 30 minutes or until nicely browned and crusty on top. Serves six.

POT O' GOLD SODA BREAD

2 cups all-purpose flour
1 tbsp. sugar
 $1-1\frac{1}{2}$  tbsp. baking powder
1 tsp. baking soda
 $\frac{1}{4}$  tsp. salt
 $\frac{1}{4}$  cup butter or margarine, softened

$1-1\frac{1}{4}$  cups fruit bits
1 cup buttermilk

Combine flour, sugar, baking powder, baking soda and salt in large mixing bowl. Cut in butter until mixture resembles coarse meal. Stir in fruit bits. Add buttermilk and stir until combined. Turn dough out onto floured surface. Knead gently 1 minute. Form dough into a 6-inch ball. Place on greased baking sheet. Flatten slightly, so that center mounds and outer edge of ball is about  $1-1\frac{1}{2}$  inches high. With a sharp knife, cut a cross  $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch deep in top of bread or score into wedges. Bake at 350 degrees Fahrenheit above oven center 35 to 40 minutes, or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Makes 1 round loaf.

Variation: For individual rolls, prepare dough as above. Divide dough into 8 pieces. Shape into rounds. Bake as above for 30 minutes.

New Methods Help Frozen Seafoods Keep Quality

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — March is National Frozen Food Month, and frozen seafoods, including lighter, better tasting products, are among the foods available.

The National Fisheries Institute in Washington says new preservation methods, which control time and temperature, are the most important factors in maintaining quality after fish are caught.

Many seafood products are blast frozen within hours of being harvested to bring consumers that "fresh-caught flavor," the Institute says.

In addition to being available fresh, farm-raised products, including catfish, trout and salmon, are taken from ponds or pens and quickly frozen, to assure consumers a fresh-tasting product.

From a frozen state, seafood products are transformed into a number of different end products including breaded fish sticks, portions or nuggets. Some of the seafood products now on the market have lighter breadings, new and creative toppings, and stuffings that eliminate deep-frying.

Among the products available: stuffed clams; Cajun-style catfish; shore-grilled shrimp; crabmeat-stuffed shrimp; stuffed rainbow trout; soft-shell crabs; crab cakes; breaded clams; breaded scallops; breaded clam strips; calamari steaks; and blackened fish.

For top quality and taste, it is best to use all frozen seafood products as soon as possible. Prolonged storage, depending on the effectiveness of your freezer,

Seafood is high in protein and low in saturated fat, sodium and calories. It cooks quickly, and can be prepared by almost any cooking method. However, timing is important. Perfectly cooked fish is moist and has a delicate flavor; overcooked fish is dry and tasteless.

The National Fisheries Institute says the "10-minute rule" is the best guide to cooking seafood by conventional methods. Here's how to use it:

1. Measure the fish at the thickest point. If the fish is stuffed or rolled, measure it after stuffing or rolling and time it accordingly.

2. Cook fish 10 minutes per inch, turning it halfway through the cooking time. For example, a 1-inch fish steak should be cooked 5 minutes on each side for a total of 10 minutes. Pieces of fish less than 1/2-inch thick do not have to be turned over.

3. Add 5 minutes to the total cooking time if you are cooking the fish in foil, or if fish is cooked in a sauce.

4. Double the cooking time for frozen fish that has not been defrosted.

The 10-minute rule can be used for baking (at 450 degrees F), broiling, poaching, steaming, grilling and sauteing. Do not use the 10-minute rule in the microwave or when deep-frying.

The following recipes are provided by the Fisheries Institute:

CRAB AND SPINACH STUFFED FLOUNDER

Four 4-oz. flounder, sole or orange roughy fillets
One 10-oz. package frozen chopped spinach, thawed and squeezed dry
1/4 lb. crab meat, drained
4 tps. minced onion
3 tps. mayonnaise
2 tps. Dijon mustard
1/8 tsp. pepper

Pat fillets dry with paper towel. Combine spinach, crab meat, onion, mayonnaise, mustard and pepper. Spread an equal amount of mixture on each fillet; roll up from narrow end in a jellyroll fashion. Place fillets seam side down in oiled baking dish. Cover with foil and bake at 375 degrees F 13 to 18 minutes, or until fish just flakes when tested with a fork. Remove with slotted spatula to warm plates. Makes 4 servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 222 cal., 82 mg chol., 307 mg sodium.

MUSTARD-HONEY SAUCE

2 tps. white wine vinegar
2 tps. Dijon mustard

2 tps. oil
2 tps. honey
Dash freshly ground pepper
1/2 cup light sour cream

Combine vinegar, mustard, oil, honey and pepper in jar. Shake to combine. Stir into sour cream. Makes about 1 cup.

Nutritional information per 1/4-cup serving: 140 cal., 7 mg chol., 139 mg sodium.

CHUTNEY SAUCE

1/2 cup light sour cream
1/2 cup light mayonnaise
1/4 cup finely chopped mango chutney
1/4 tsp. curry powder

Combine all ingredients. Chill 1 hour to blend flavors. Makes about 1 1/4 cups.

Nutritional information per 1/4-cup serving: 145 cal., 14 mg chol., 243 mg sodium.

SPICY TOMATO SEAFOOD SAUCE

1/2 cup tomato ketchup
1/4 cup mild salsa or chili sauce
1 tsp. prepared horseradish
Combine all ingredients. Makes 3/4 cup.
Nutritional information per 1/4-cup serving: 65 cal., 0 mg chol., 686 mg sodium.

Bonnet Cake Is Fashioned After Diana's Hat

FESTIVE EASTER BONNET CAKE

Filling:
2/3 cup heavy cream
3 tps. orange marmalade

Frosting:
3 cups confectioners' sugar
2 tps. orange juice
2 tps. warm water
A few drops orange or yellow food coloring

Preheat oven to 375 degrees F. Grease and line two 8 1/2-inch layer cake pans.

In a bowl, rub the margarine into the flour until the mixture resembles fine bread crumbs. Add sugar, marmalade and grated orange rind.

Squeeze the juice from the oranges and add to the 2-3rds cup orange juice. Mix with beaten eggs and add to the cake mixture. Mix well.

Divide the mixture between the pans and bake for 30 minutes until golden. Turn out of pans onto cooling rack.

For the filling, whisk the cream until thick and gently fold in the marmalade. Sandwich the cakes together with the cream, making sure it reaches the edges sufficiently to seal the gap between them.

Place the cake in the center of an 11-inch, thin, round silver cake board and then put the board onto a turntable or pedestal, on a clean work surface.

For the frosting, sift the confectioners' sugar into a mixing bowl, then gradually stir in the orange juice, followed by the warm water, until the frosting is thick enough to coat the back of a spoon. Add the food coloring and mix thoroughly.

Pour the frosting onto the center of the cake and all over the cake board so the entire "bonnet" is evenly coated. (Don't worry too much about the sides because they will be covered by ribbon.)

Carefully transfer the cake onto a plate. Leave to set for several hours or overnight.

To decorate: Use colored ribbon (approximately 1 yard) to create a hatband around the side of the cake, securing it with a little of the leftover frosting. (You may secure it with a pin, but don't forget to remove the pin when serving the cake.) Arrange artificial flowers on the bonnet as desired.
