Navy's $24 Million Missile Fails

By Howard Benedict
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Investigators are analyzing wreckage and four seconds of flight data to learn why a $23.7 million Trident 2 missile spun like a burning pinwheel and exploded on its first test-firing from a submarine.

The Navy's newest and most powerful weapon was launched Tuesday from the nuclear submarine USS Tennessee as it cruised submerged in the Atlantic, several miles off Cape Canaveral.

The unarmed missile's first stage ignited above the ocean surface and the 44-foot missile immediately cartwheeled out of control, spewing a shower of fiery debris over the ocean.

A Navy statement said an unknown malfunction caused it to veer off course and self-destruct after four seconds of flight. It said no damage was done to the submarine or nearby support ships.

Divers recovered the nose section and other parts, wreckage that could help in the investigation of what went wrong, authorities said.

Navy officials at the Pentagon who spoke on condition of anonymity said the failure appeared to involve a malfunction in the first-stage rocket motor.

"But we have no idea at this point just what went wrong," said one official. "It will take awhile to sort through the data."

The three-stage Trident 2 is a new, more lethal version of the weapon that's the heart of America's naval nuclear deterrent. It can deliver three to 12 nuclear warheads to individual targets up to 6,000 miles away.

The Navy plans to have the intercontinental range Trident 2 operational in time to send the Tennessee on patrol late this year with 24 of the weapons.

In a statement from the Pentagon, the Navy said it was still planning to conduct eight more undersea test launches and that it was premature to suggest the missile wouldn't be ready for its scheduled first deployment this December.

The Navy said it was disappointed with the failure, but added, "It is through this type of developmental test program that you iron out problems."

The Trident 2's predecessor, the Trident 1, experienced similar test failures but still was deployed on schedule, the Navy said.

The Navy says the new weapon is much more accurate than its undersea predecessors — Polaris, Poseidon and Trident 1 — and can

Bush Takes Anti-Drug Campaign On The Road

The Associated Press

LANCASTER, Pa. — President Bush came to the Pennsylvania Dutch country today to declare drug abuse "a national problem" that leaves no communities immune from the death and destruction of narcotics.

Bush resumed a traveling campaign to tout his more than $5 billion drug-fighting effort and to urge community leaders to help educate young Americans to the dangers of drug abuse.

The president was accompanied here by his drug control policy director, William J. Bennett, who has been weighing strategies for combatting rampant drug-related violence in the nation's capital.

Bush traveled here by helicopter from Washington and was to go on later in the day to Wilmington, Del., to meet with community organizations fighting drug abuse in that industrial city.

"We often think of drug abuse as an urban, inner-city phenomenon," the president told some 3,500 students, faculty and parents at Conestoga Valley High School, in the heart of Amish and Mennonite farm country near Lancaster.

"When drugs come here to the Conestoga Valley, that's proof the drug epidemic is a national problem," Bush said. "The rising problem here simply shows how vulnerable every American city and town is to the menace of drug abuse."

Bush noted an acceleration of drug abuse in the past two years in the historically staid Pennsylvania Dutch region.

"Most Americans want to see their towns restored to a time when drugs came from the local M.D. ... where crack was something you jumped over to avoid bad luck," the president said.

"Twenty-three million Americans used illegal drugs last year," Bush said. "Countless thousands died. The fact is that none of us is immune to the problems drug abuse can cause."

"We've learned a hard lesson. Unless we join together and fight, it can happen here. But if we do work as a team and as a community, it won't," he said.

"Don't hide yourself from the reality of drug abuse in our communities and hope for the best," Bush told his audience.

"The good news is, you are fighting back," he said. "Your community is too proud, your traditions here too deeply rooted, for an invader to threaten your safety and well-being without a fight."

He praised local programs that target for special attention high-risk youths in area elementary and high schools as "doing something to stop drug problems before they begin."

But, the president said, "the war on drugs will ultimately be won one day, one battle at a time — the battles each and every one of us wage to keep our families and communities free from drug abuse."

Afghanistan Expert Louis Dupree Dies

DURHAM — Greenville native Louis Dupree, 63, a Duke University professor recently characterized by the Wall Street Journal as the "world's leading expert on Afghanistan," died Tuesday in Durham.

Arrangements for a memorial service in Duke Chapel will be announced.

Since 1985, Dupree had been senior research associate in Islamic and Arabic development studies at Duke. He also held concurrent appointments as visiting professor of public policy studies at Duke and lecturer in anthropology and political science at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Dupree, who in 1988 spent six months in Pakistan as a Fulbright Fellow and as adviser on Afghanistan to the U.S. ambassador to Pakistan, also had been an adviser on Afghan problems to the governments of Germany, France, Australia, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, England and Austria.

Cargo Jet Falls Into Brazilian Slum Area, Kills 18, Hurts 200

The Associated Press

GUARULHOS, Brazil — A Boeing 707 cargo jet crashed near an airport and exploded, sending flaming debris tumbling through a hillside slum. Officials said 18 people died, including all three on board, and about 200 were injured.

Doctors tried to save an infant born moments after his mother was killed in Tuesday's crash, but the boy died, a doctor said.

Rescuers said they believed at least 20 people were still trapped in the enormous wreckage left by the aircraft, which virtually leveled the small shantytown of Jardim Sentilha outside Guarulhos, 15 miles from Sao Paulo.

The Transbrasil cargo plane, flying from the northwestern jungle city of Manaus, was approaching the international airport at Guarulhos when it crashed about a mile short of the runways, the airline said.

The jet slammed into the ground and blew up and its flaming fuselage slid through the hillside slum, crushing or setting fire to 30 fragile wood-and-brick huts that housed more than 80 people, authorities said.

All three crew members of the Transbrasil jet and 15 people on the ground were killed, a morgue said today. A morgue official, who gave just her first name, Cida, told The Associated Press only 10 of the fatalities had been identified so far.

Unconfirmed television reports Tuesday evening put the death toll at 20.

Guarulhos Health Department officials said more than 200 people were treated for shock and burns in local hospitals.

"Rescue teams are still out at the site and are trying to see if there are more victims under the wreckage," said a Fire Department official today. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

On Tuesday night, firefighter Cesar Barros said authorities believed "there could be more than 20 people still trapped out there."

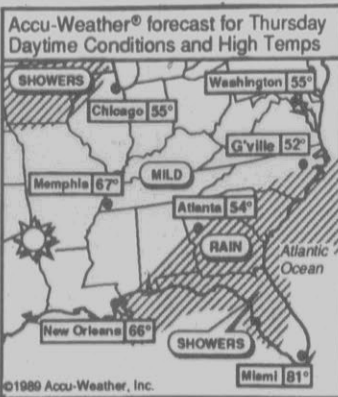

Eustaquio said the plane was carrying 26 tons of electronic equipment when it crashed.

Hospital Awards Contract For Bed Tower

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The board of trustees of Pitt County Memorial Hospital awarded a contract Tuesday for architectural work for its new bed tower and related modifications and approved contracts for a 16-bed addition to the hospital's psychiatric unit.

The architectural contract worth 5.5 percent of the anticipated $38 million cost of the bed tower and related modifications project was awarded to the firm of Henningson, Durham and Richardson of Alexandria, Va.. The firm has planned several previous PCMH additions. The contract is to be multiphased and include program refinement, design schematics, design development and working drawings. Some $1 million of the amount owed the architects was allocated, budgeted through this month's capital budget requests.

The psychiatric unit project is expected to cost $1,274,929. Eastern Construction Co. of Greenville was awarded the general construction contract of $808,319. Other contracts included: Kinston Plumbing and Heating, mechanical contract, $282,182; W.M. Wiggins Co., plumbing contract, $71,983, and Pitt Electric Co., electrical contract, $113,445.

The board heard that renovation-construction of the new administrative suite of the hospital is under way and members awarded a $12,548 electrical contract to Pitt Electric Co. and a $47,500 mechanical contract to Central Heating. The board approved a change order that would reallocate $9,985 to complete plumbing in the new administrative area and the Phase IC bridge connection. And $150,000 was budgeted through capital requests for this month for the project's completion.

Approval was given for beginning contract negotiation with Law Engineering for subsoil testing and Rivers and Associates for topographical surveys for the Phase II project.

The purchase of hospital equipment worth $1,336,707 was approved. This included the $1 million for architectural fees for the 143-bed expansion and the $150,000 administrative suite completion. Also included were a high-resolution tape recorder for a cardiac catheterization lab at $56,562; an offset press for the print shop at $22,000; $9,163 for deep fat fryers for the dietary unit, and $98,982 for expansion of telemetry capabilities in the North A nursing unit. The addition will allow eight more monitored beds, nursing vice president Diane Poole said.

President Dave McRae reiterated the hospital's commitment to guest relations — providing the human touch in the midst of the all the technology that must be used on patients. He said Jennifer Congleton, the hospital's new vice president for human relations, is "an excellent person" to put this policy into action.

The personnel committee recommended that nurses' starting salaries be raised from $11.25 to $12 an hour beginning in June, with all nurses having a 6.67 percent increase in salary. He said this will cost the hospital an additional $530,440 this fiscal year.

It was also recommended by the personnel committee that the hospital pursue creating an on-site child care program that would become operational within the next three

Test Of Dog Control Rule Is Withdrawn

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A Greenville resident has agreed to drop charges against an assistant public defender accused of violating the city's five-month-old ordinance barring pooches from pooping on the property of a neighbor.

Ann Toney, 1215 E. Rock Spring Road, an assistant public defender in Pitt County, was set to appear Tuesday in Pitt County District Court to face the charge, but the case was dismissed after the complainant signed a request Friday asking the district attorney to drop the charge.

Angie McMillen, 1210 E. Rock Spring Road, drew out an arrest warrant March 9 against Ms. Toney, accusing her of allowing her dog to repeatedly run at large and defecate on the McMillen property. The alleged offense occurred March 5.

The Greenville City Council amended its animal control ordinance last fall by requiring dog owners to maintain actual control — instead of "adequate control" — over the pets when they were off the owner's property.

The new ordinance also made it "unlawful for a dog to use the property of another as its toilet," according to a memo from city attorney Mac McCarley to Jerry Tesmond, chief of police. Violating the ordinance is not a criminal misdemeanor, but the city may issue a civil citation and levy a fine.

In a telephone interview, Ms. McMillen said the problem had been going on for several months, but she believes the conflict has been resolved, and taking the issue to court would not benefit either party.

"We are dropping the charges," she said. "It's just the kind of thing that snowballs into greater things ... The point has been made. I think she's going to take care of things from now on."

"We're not vindictive ... The problem has ceased, and I would be very surprised if it started occurring again," she said.

Ms. Toney declined to comment on the case.

Tesmond said he was not familiar with Ms. McMillen's case, but the new ordinance was written because more and more residents are putting a great deal of money into their homes, and they are upset when a dog or other animal tramples through the yard or uses it as a toilet.

McCarley said the new ordinance was needed to remove any doubt about what degree of control dog owners must exercise. A leash constitutes physical control; just walking along side a dog does not, he said.

Also, city police get numerous complaints from residents that neighborhood dogs have soiled their yards, he said.

In the memo, dated Aug. 11, 1988, McCarley said the ordinance is designed to clarify that "voice control" is not actual control or physical control. The memo also stated that the ordinance prohibiting a dog from defecating on someone else's property was drafted along the lines of a sample Tesmond provided.

"(It) should be an adequate basis to cite an owner who allows his animal to foul another person's property," McCarley said in the memo.

Activities include the Book It Club, Mrs. Garrison's Little Hearts Club, Partners in Excellence and Newspaper in Education Week.

Diane Williams of The Daily Reflector visited the class as part of NIE week. Elbert Buck spoke with the class on how reading improves self-concept.

Peter's Catholic Church will recall Christ's journey to His crucifixion and death on the cross.

Led by the Rev. Joseph Jones, the congregation will gather at 12:15 p.m. at the church and walk "The Way of the Cross," stopping to pray at 15 stations along the route. There will be indoor stations in the church at the same time.

Play Presentation

The internationally known Covenant Players will make a dramatic presentation at Hooker Memorial Christian Church's Maundy Thursday service at 8 p.m.

Titled "The Night," the play is based on Christ's last hours on earth. Organized in 1963 by Charles Tanner, Covenant Players is a non-profit, non-endowed corporation with more than 125 touring groups throughout the world. The traveling ministry in drama is not affiliated with any church or other organization.

Science Winners

D.H. Conley High School students recently won several awards in the district competition of the N.C. Student Academy of Science.

First-place winners were Mary Beth Gray, Katrina Layton and Elizabeth Phibbs in the junior biological advanced category, and Jessica Mega in the junior behavioral advanced category.

Ms. Gray also received a cash award from the N.C. Biotechnology Center. The students will participate in state competition April 21-22 in Winston-Salem.

Students Learn Juggling

Fourth- and fifth-grade students at Falkland Elementary School have been using juggling scarves received through a mini-grant from the Pitt County Educational Foundation to learn the art of juggling and to develop hand and eye coordination.

Kindergarten through third-grade students have used the scarves in their physical education classes, and scarf juggling recently was presented during a Parent-Teacher Organization meeting. Belinda McKeel is the physical education teacher.

Falkland Activities

Falkland Elementary School students will study art history and appreciation with a print collection provided through a mini-grant from the Pitt County Educational Foundation.

Ella Mallenbaum, the art teacher, also received the "Discover Art Big Book," which will be used for group instruction of kindergarten and first-grade students.

Second-graders recently observed rockets being launched on the playground, while Jerry Everhart explained and demonstrated the laws of motion, the parts of a rocket and how it flies. Prior to Everhart's visit, the students studied motion in science.

Oil Firm Denied Rezoning Request

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A request to rezone the southeast corner of 10th and Charles streets for commercial use met with disapproval from the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission on Tuesday.

The planning board unanimously recommended that the City Council deny a request by Lee Moore Oil Co. to rezone the .65-acre corner tract, located across from Wendy's restaurant, from O&I (office and institutional) to CDF (commercial downtown fringe).

Permitted uses in the CDF zoning district include a drugstore, a car wash and a convenient mart.

The city's development staff voiced opposition to the request. City Planner Constance Callahan told the board that the rezoning was in conflict with the city's comprehensive plan, would create an undesirable increase in traffic, and might lead to strip commercial development along 10th Street leading into the East Carolina University area.

A spokesman for Lee Moore Oil Co., Carl Darden, argued that the comprehensive plan was not pertinent since it was developed eight years ago. He also argued that the request was entirely logical since the other three corners of the intersection are also zoned CDF.

"The possibility of strip commercial development is certainly something we would want to avoid if at all possible," said commission member Ruth Leggett regarding the request.

The Greenville City Council will consider the request at its next monthly meeting.

In other matters Tuesday, the commission recommended the council approve requests by: Joseph D. Speight to rezone a .74-acre tract located off the southern right of way of Mumford Road and across from Powell Street from R-6 (residential) to I (industrial); Judy Robinson to rezone a 1.33-acre tract located at the northwest corner of Dexter and St. Andrews streets from CH (highway commercial) to O&I (office and institutional); David G. Nichols Jr. to rezone a .66-acre tract, located east of Truman Street and south of the intersection of Ione and Truman streets, from R-6 to CDF (downtown fringe commercial), and by William L. Tripp to close a portion of Staton Court located south of SR 1759.

The commission also recommended amending a section of the buffer yard regulations requiring developers to show planned vegetation at the site review planning stage of a development.

Commission Chairman Wallace Woolees formed a planning board subcommittee to study the possibi-ty of exempting industrial developments from specific requirements of the city's subdivision regulations.

The forming of the subcommittee was prompted by a request from the Pitt County Development Commission to exempt certain industrial developments from the city's curb and gutter requirements.

The planning subcommittee will be chaired by Planning Commission member Steve Blades and will include representatives from Greenville Utilities and the development commission.

A request by Joseph D. Speight to rezone a 6.4-acre tract located north of SR 1725 and west of the 14th Street extension from RA-20 (residential/agriculture) to R-6 was continued until the next planning board meeting. Also continued was consideration of a revision of the preliminary plat of Lynndale Townes on Dartmouth Road.

Store Seeks Permit To Fly Large Flag

A request by a local commercial business to display a large flag will be one of the items considered by the Greenville Board of Adjustment at its monthly meeting Thursday at 7 p.m. in the council chambers of City Hall.

The Pantry Inc. is requesting the board to issue a variance of the Zoning Ordinance to allow the placement of a 375-square-foot flag on a flag pole at its facility at 316 E. Tenth St.

The property is zoned CDF (downtown commercial fringe). A public hearing will be held on the matter.

The board will also consider a request by C.L. Summerlin for a special use permit to allow the operation of a flea market mall at the intersection of River Bluff Road and N.C. 33 East, directly behind Putt Putt Golf and Games.

Other items include: a request by David Mitchell II for a special use permit to allow the operation of a private night club at 1002 Evans St.; a request by Dennis O'Neal to obtain a special use permit to allow a fraternity or sorority house at 612 E. 10th St.; a request by the Pitt County Mental Health Center for a special use permit to allow the operation of a day care program for adults at 2307 E. Fourth St., and a request by Joyce Holland to obtain a variance to allow a lot not having frontage on a private street to be used as a building site. If granted the petitioner wants a special use permit to allow the placement of a manufactured home on the north side of N.C. 33, approximately one mile east of North Greene Street on an unimproved road.

Others items include: a request by James Evans and his wife, Brenda Evans, to obtain a variance from the zoning ordinance to allow a non-conforming use at 1307 S. Greene St.; a request by Dr. and Mrs. Barry Moore for a variance of the zoning ordinance to divide their 3.33-acre lot and sell a portion of the lot as a separate building site at the end of Martinsborough Road, 641 feet north of the intersection of Martinsborough Drive, and a request by Shady Knoll Limited Partnership to obtain a variance from the Flood Damage Prevention Ordinance in order to exempt a mobile home park at the intersection of Mumford Road and N.C. 33 from first-floor elevation requirements.

Gingrich Named House Minority Whip

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House Republicans today elected confrontational conservative Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia to the job of minority whip, choosing him over veteran Rep. Edward Madigan of Illinois.

The vote in a closed caucus at the Capitol Hill Club, attended by all but one of the 174 GOP members, was not announced.

Gingrich replaces Dick Cheney of Wyoming, who resigned his House seat and the No. 2 post in the House GOP leadership to become secretary of defense.

Cheney addressed the meeting briefly before Rep. Henry Hyde of Illinois, who had been the subject of a draft attempt, asked that he not be considered because he had not announced for the post.

Before the vote, the Madigan-Gingrich race had been viewed as an indicator of whether the party would seek the cooperative relations that President Bush espouses or declare war on the Democrats, who greatly outnumber them in the House.

Gingrich, 45, appealed to the 174 Republican House members with a pitch that he's a "national Republican" who will lead them from the desert of more than three decades in the minority.

Gingrich's strident attacks on House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, which led to an ethics committee investigation, gained him backing among Republicans of all ideological stripes who sought to lash out in frustration.

But Gingrich was also personally controversial, and as the election approached he was fighting off questions about an unusual deal where he got political supporters to help finance publicity for a book he had published.

Madigan, 53, was the favorite of what one member called "the institutional Republicans," and he ran with the quiet support of Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill.

He insisted that within the House, Republicans needed to make themselves players in the legislative game, sometimes working with the Democrats. He said Republicans' best shot at taking over the House is with redistricting, candidate recruitment and financing — not trying to bring down the House.

While Gingrich was holding news conferences about his candidacy, Madigan worked quietly, without ever directly attacking Gingrich.

On the eve of the election, both announced candidates were claiming to have majorities. In addition, people leading the movement to draft Hyde claimed they had 40 votes.

The level of intrigue in the race clearly exceeded all expectations.

"I did not know there could be this much action created over a whip race," said Rep. Jack Buechner, R-Mo.

Gingrich's neo-conservative politics and his accusatory style are anathema to many House Democrats, and Gingrich supporter Bob Walker, R-Pa., accused the Democratic leadership Tuesday of trying to sway the election by threatening him with ethics charges.

"Obviously, the Democrats in this body feel they have a big stake in trying to prevent Mr. Gingrich's election," said Walker, portraying Gingrich as a man the Democrats feared.

But for the most part the majority Democrats were watching the race with more curiosity than concern.

"I think the institution does better with Madigan, and Democrats do better with Newt," said Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass. Gingrich "produces great unity among the Democrats," he said, and, as a result, diminishes the Republican role.

Rep. Pat Williams, D-Mont., made clear that Democrats didn't mind seeing the Republicans fighting among themselves.

"We view it as the ax murderer against the defense lawyer," he said.

Hitchings To Receive Award

WILMINGTON — The 1989 Albert Schweitzer International Prizes for medicine will be awarded tonight at the University of North Carolina-Wilmington to Boris Luban-Plozza and Dr. George Hitchings.

Hitchings, 83, of Chapel Hill, has worked for more than 45 years for Burroughs Wellcome, which has offices in the Research Triangle Park. During those years he was instrumental in the creation of numerous drugs for use against such illnesses as leukemia, gout, herpes and drugs that allowed the first organ transplant to take place.

He shared the 1988 Nobel Prize for physiology and medicine with his co-worker Gertrude Elion, who will be in Wilmington for the award ceremony.

Luban-Plozza, 65, teaches about psychological medicine and is a world authority on illnesses caused by mental stress. He advocates an approach to treatment that includes the patient's family and takes into account any factors in the patient's life that may affect his health.

The N.C. Educational, Historical and Scientific Foundation honors Schweitzer every four years with the international prizes, which it awards to people who embody Schweitzer's ideals, especially his philosophy that all life is sacred.

Forest Windfall

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A $565,000 windfall from excess national timber receipts will go toward enhancing the most popular features of the National Forests in North Carolina.

Bjorn Dahl, forest supervisor of the four national forests in North Carolina, said Tuesday the bulk of the money, about $350,000, will go to upgrade some of the most frequently used hiking trails, to improve fish and wildlife habitat, and to restore drought-stricken areas of the forests. Ranger districts throughout the state are developing plans for the improvements, Dahl said.

At least $100,000 will go to the Cradle of Forestry in America, a national historic site and forestry learning center in Pisgah National Forest near Brevard.

The unexpected funds are a result of Congress sharing money generated by the Forest Service, including proceeds from timber harvesting, recreation and mineral exploration, Dahlsaid.

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — An assistant principal of Parkland High School was arrested Tuesday on charges of taking indecent liberties with a 15-year-old girl who is a student at the school.

Bryan Scott Molnar, 41, was charged with taking indecent liberties with a child, sexual activity by a custodian and contributing to the delinquency of a minor. Capt. E.L. Moreau of the Winston-Salem Police Department said that Molnar arranged for the girl to meet him after school hours Friday, but Moreau declined to comment about how the meeting was arranged.

According to warrants, Molnar met the girl at his home and had sexual intercourse with her. Molnar was arrested Tuesday afternoon after the girl talked to the police, Moreau said.

GREAT EXPECTATIONS

Many couples become stuck in power struggles over what they expect from each other. Before long, lengthy "grudge lists" begin to develop as each spouse expects more and feels denied more. We begin to see couples fighting with great anger and energy over essentially trivial things.

This kind of marital struggle occurs when individuals in a relationship place too much emphasis on others meeting their expectations for life. While it is normal to expect some things from a spouse, it's a no-win situation to expect other people to become something other than what and who they are.

Couples who want to break out of this cycle need to begin to take responsibility for their own expectations and look more realistically at how they will be met, and by whom. It is important but often difficult to remember that one's expectations are ones own, and it might be unrealistic to expect that others will meet them.

Beyond Looks

A Deeper Problem Than Appearance

The problem goes beyond the boarded-up facades with peeling paint and sprayed-on obscenities. It goes deeper than the crimes committed behind these fronts. Abandoned, dilapidated buildings are, like the drug trade that often takes place inside them, a symptom of a larger dilemma — disenfranchisement from the economic and aesthetic mainstream.

Greenville Police Chief Jerry Tesmond says such abandoned structures have become drug havens and are serious concerns to the community, but that the city has no power to demolish these structures. He cheers a bill in the N.C. General Assembly that would allow local governments to tear down condemned buildings after a two-year period.

That legislation is needed and should be enacted for the public good. A city needs clear authority to destroy a condemned or dilapidated structure if it is the chronic site of crime or if it harbors a health threat. After all, drugs, crime and danger affect everyone, regardless of where they occur.

'But even if the abandoned buildings are torn down, that alone will not ease the problem. The real task at hand is careful surgery to remove the cancer.'

But the issue doesn't end with demolition. In many cases, the structures, like the drug trade they harbor, are indicative of a greater illness. Often, that illness is the result of severed opportunity. The individuals, and often the neighborhoods are unable to participate equally in the economic system of the community.

Frequently, these abandoned structures are in poor neighborhoods or areas fighting to hold onto solid standards of living. Many of the residents are hard working. They want neither the eyesores nor the drugs disrupting their lives. Absent, perhaps wealthy, landlords find little economic incentive to invest in these areas.

First, it is important to rid communities of buildings where crime occurs. The hands of local government should be uncuffed. That is the immediate and pressing need.

But the community cannot stop there. While it is imperative symptoms are addressed, the illness itself cannot be effectively erased without attention to its causes. It cannot be permanently eased without treatment. That treatment includes relevant education and a diverse economy.

While those solutions may sound oversimplified, they are in truth complex, and vitally important. A responsive education system that addresses the needs of each student, that can provide him or her with pertinent, meaningful skills is the first step. The second is a local economy broad enough to offer jobs for a wide range of talent and ability.

Plainly put, taking stronger steps to eliminate dilapidated, unusable structures is necessary. These buildings harbor criminals. They are places where deadly crack is sold and used. Vagrants pry open boarded-up windows and sleep inside, starting fires. Rodents find the buildings irresistible. And the number of such structures is growing — for Greenville, another unwelcome by-product of change. The city now lists 30 condemned homes.

But even if the abandoned buildings are torn down, that alone will not ease the problem. The real task at hand is careful surgery to remove the cancer.

Time To Rescue 'The Lost Battalion'

WASHINGTON — Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist did not mention George Kazen by name, and may not even know about the plight of the Federal district judge in Laredo. But Kazen is proof of the point Rehnquist made when he called an almost unprecedented news conference last week to plead for an immediate 30 percent pay raise for judges to avert "the most serious threat to the future of the judiciary...during my lifetime."

Last month, the House and Senate, battered by radio-talk show hosts and Ralph Nader, killed the proposed pay raise for federal judges, top executive-branch officials and members of Congress. Critics rubbed their hands in glee and promptly forgot about the issue.

But the problem did not go away, as George Kazen knows all too well.

When I called him last week at the suggestion of a friend and fellow jurist, this is what I learned. Kazen is 49. He grew up in Laredo and was first in his class when he graduated, at age 21, from the University of Texas law school. Married and the father of four, he was making about $120,000 a year in private practice when President Carter appointed him to the bench ten years ago. Today, he's making $89,500 in inflation-shrunk dollars, the same as the American people pay those who represent them in Congress, the man who drafts the federal budget and the heads of the CIA, the FBI and NASA.

On behalf of the public, Judge Kazen administers justice in a vast expanse of south Texas. By all reports, he does it very well. In the last two years, as efforts to halt the flow of narcotics have intensified, his felony calendar has increased 48 percent and may be the longest of any federal judge.

This is what Judge Kazen told me: "I was in pretty good financial shape when I started here. But I have put three children through college.

my son is still in law school. Another son will graduate from high school this year and wants to go to Trinity in San Antonio, where tuition, room and board is $13,000 a year, without a nickel for books or clothes or anything else.

"I have liquidated every bit of stock I owned and every investment except two pieces of real estate that are dead ducks and can't be sold. My debt has probably doubled. This year, I promised my wife, my family, my banker and myself that this would either be the year I finally got a handle on my finances, or I was going to get out. The pay raise (to $135,000, recommended late last year by President Reagan and a bipartisan commission but killed by Congress) was all going to go to reducing the debt. With it, I could see how I would be out of debt by the time I was 60. But without it, I just can't go on.

"I feel a tremendous amount of loyalty to my colleagues, to the court personnel, but there's only so much I can do for my country. I honestly feel that serving my country for ten years has cost my family $1 million. And what really hurts is when you're told (by critics of the pay raise), 'You're in a fat, cushy job...You're a dime a dozen...If you leave, there's a dozen others could fill your job.'

"Well, I haven't looked on it as just a job. I work my butt off on this endless narcotic docket because I think it's important. But the minute I said to a reporter for a Texas legal magazine I might have to leave the bench, I started getting feelers for jobs starting around $200,000...so what the hell. I tell you, we're the lost battalion out here, and I'll admit it, I'm very frustrated, very bitter."

When Kazen talked to members of Congress about the situation, he was told, "We just don't want to discuss pay raises. It was very unpleasant for us to take that abuse. Our feelings are hurt."

Indeed, neither President Bush nor Democratic leaders of Congress have stepped forward on the pay-raise issue since last month's fiasco. But in a few days, the National Commission on the Public Service, headed by former Federal Reserve chairman Paul A. Volcker, will highlight the crippling effect of the pay freeze on morale in the courts and the agencies, and on the ability of the government to attract top scientists, administrators and lawyers.

Many members of the commission, such as former senator Edmund S. Muskie, favor "decoupling" congressional pay from that of judges and top executive-branch officials, and taking immediate steps to deal with the judicial and executive-branch pay crisis. The two key committee chairmen, Sen. John Glenn (D-Ohio) and Rep. William Ford (D-Mich.), are receptive to that idea. But neither has received any great encouragement from his colleagues.

Congress deserved — and deserves — a pay increase. But the crisis is greater in the other two branches, where salaries cannot be supplemented by honoraria or other outside earnings.

The President owes it to the country to respond to the chief justice's warning. And Congress owes it to its own reputation to show that its concern for federal pay was not selfishly motivated.

It's time to rescue George Kazen and the others in "the lost battalion."

Shooting At You Or Working For You

BOSTON — Not long ago, in a London hotel room, I heard one of those very British television interviews with a "royal." This time it was Princess Anne talking about her role as president of the Save the Children charity.

In the middle of the hour, quite out of the blue, the princess and mother told her interviewer directly: "I wasn't particularly keen on children — and I'm still not. But you don't actually have to like children very much to be interested in giving them the best possible start in life."

At the time, I thought she sounded like a member of Monty Python doing Princess Anne. How British can you get? Even in England the only public officials who can admit to finding little ones less than enthralling are those who inherit their titles. I have never heard anyone in American politics say they didn't ardently love the little tykes.

Now I am wondering whether Princess Anne isn't onto something. We could use fewer professions of affection, photo opportunities of love, exhortations to care, and more hardheaded and hardhearted calculations about our interest "in giving them the best possible start in life."

I have been brought to a cynical state by the endless progression of data-filled, chart-ridden, thoroughly documented and gloomy reports on the state of children in America: Reports on nutrition, education, housing, drugs, child-care. They have landed on my desk one after another.

If you can remember only one figure from these studies, let it be this one: One out of every five children in America is poor. If you can remember two figures, add this one: Our infant mortality rate is higher than 17 other industrial nations. Or add yet another: On any given night, there are 100,000 children among the homeless.

We know about these problems. But since the end of the campaign, the man who was "haunted" by these visions has done little that you couldn't read on his lips. On Inaugural Day, George Bush said we have more will than wallet. In fact we have more wallet than will. In an emergency, the government can bail out the savings and loan associations, but we lack the will to bail out children — to make the investments in their future.

As Marian Wright Edelman, the indefatigable head of The Children's Defense Fund, says: "There is no sense of urgency. Nobody wants to make any decisions. The pressure is not going to come from Washington and the White House. It will only happen when people in the country say, 'This must stop.'"

Why hasn't that happened? Why isn't there an outcry to stop this vast national case of child neglect? Children were indeed a hot topic during the endless campaign. Was it the prospect of taxes that cooled the ardor?

The young, more than the rest of us, have inherited the Reagan legacy, financial and emotional. In the course of eight years, $40 billion was cut from programs for poor children and their families while the national debt doubled. Americans were taught not to look to the government for help. Now we are told the pockets are empty.

The emotional cycle follows the economic one. As the government pulls back from social service, middle-class taxpayers look more anxiously at their own bank balances. People who cannot count on help with education for their children or medical costs for their old age become more and more concerned about the need to take care of their own, and the definition of their own narrows. Read his lips.

'The young, more than the rest of us, have inherited the Reagan legacy, financial and emotional. In the course of eight years, $40 billion was cut from programs for poor children and their families while the national debt doubled. Americans were taught not to look to the government for help.'

The one idea put forward last week by the no-new-taxes administration is a tax credit for low-income families with pre-school children. It is mislabeled as a do-it-yourself, pay-for-your-own child-care assistance.

So it is time to be hardhearted. No more pictures of neo-natal clinics with the tiny babies of mothers who never got prenatal care or decent nutrition. No more television tours through the hapless welfare hotels and shelters where parents and children learn how not to be a family. No more stories about the funeral of a kid caught in a gun battle between drug dealers. No more appeals to moral sensibility or national pride.

Just the facts. Marian Edelman states them baldly. Look at these kids, she says. "Tomorrow they are going to be dependent on you, shooting at you, or working for you."

A Cut & Run By Republicans

Paul O'Connor

Analysis

RALEIGH — Faced with a tough question, Rep. Trip Sizemore, R-Guilford, chose to be glib. As leader of the rebellious House Republicans opposed to Gov. Jim Martin's school and roads plans, Sizemore was asked why he wasn't describing Martin as a "tax and spend" governor, as he most surely would have done had a Democrat proposed such big tax increases. "Let's just say it's a kinder and gentler time," Sizemore said.

With that line, Sizemore earned a laugh and added hypocrisy to the faults connected to this mean-spirited, simplistic, and short-sighted plan.

The plan came from 28 of the 46 House Republicans. It would postpone and probably kill the next step of the Basic Education Plan, and maybe the next two. It would eliminate all state funding for private entities, cut all state agency budgets by 5 percent and force the firing of many school and state employees. It is a program designed to cut services to the poor, the mentally ill, school children, university students, and senior citizens. Rather than cut the fat of state government, it would eliminate some of state government's limbs, like rape crisis centers and the N.C. Symphony.

"You're portraying it all wrong," one Republican cabinet member who opposes the plan told this reporter. "Tell the people how it will drive up their local property taxes and cut services to any senior citizen, not just the poor." These (legislators) are hurting their own mothers and fathers."

Sizemore and Rep. Art Pope, R-Wake, said that the program "prioritized" education because it includes a teacher pay raise. But that argument defies logic. Their plan would force the firing of school librarians, counsellors, aides and principals. This is the crowd that is pushing the paperwork heavy Career Ladder plan, but their budget would force huge cuts in the clerks who do the paperwork. Sizemore said part of his opposition to the BEP was that there are not enough classrooms to reduce teacher-student ratios. But his proposal would also cut state funds for new school construction. They exempt teacher salaries from the across the board cuts, but not university and community college system that pays its teachers little better than McDonald's pays burger flippers. Do House Republicans want a second-rate university system, too?

Rep. Larry Justus, R-Henderson, is pushing a drug-fighting bill which he says will lock up more drug pushers. But Justus is also backing this GOP budget plan which would sharply cut the number of state prison guards. Justus would have the gorillas running the zoo.

Sizemore said that the House members wanted to put their priorities in line. Prisons, education and no new taxes, he said. But the plan hurts both the corrections department and education, and it is likely to force up local property taxes. Pope said that volunteer fire departments, rape crisis centers, cultural activities and libraries shouldn't be state-funded, they should be locally funded. That means higher local taxes. That's easy to say for a wealthy lawyer from chic-chic West Raleigh. Pope's attitude is: Poor kids from rural counties should only hear the symphony if their parents can afford a $45 ticket.

Sizemore claims to be kinder and gentler in not calling Martin a "tax and spend" governor. But, in reality, he holds his tongue because of the political expediency. These Republicans praised Jim Martin as a great leader when he was helping them get re-elected, and they realize they may need him at the head of their ticket again. But when Martin shows the courage of leadership, they cut and run liker cowardly hypocrites.

Another Deja Vu

George Gedda

WASHINGTON — The sense of deja vu is palpable these days as the Bush administration tries to fend off congressional complaints that American policy toward El Salvador is playing into the hands of the most retrograde elements in that country.

In what has many of the earmarks of a rerun of what President Reagan faced in the early 1980s, some members of Congress want to condition the Salvador aid program on clear signs of progress toward peace and protection of human rights.

Reagan survived the challenge, largely because the first free and fair election in El Salvador, occurring in the spring of 1984, produced as president a figure whom even the staunchest of Reagan's congressional critics could admire, Jose Napoleon Duarte.

When Duarte spent a day on Capitol Hill in May 1984, extolling the virtues of his country's newborn democracy 10 days before his inauguration, opposition to Salvadoran aid evaporated.

Now, however, almost five years later and with Duarte due to step down in 10 weeks, the questions which once hovered over the Salvador aid debate are being revived.

Is the United States unwittingly prolonging a system that seemingly is unable to come to grips with such issues as war, injustice, poverty and repression? Or is the United States through its policies sparing El Salvador a victory by the country's leftist guerrillas?

In El Salvador, liberals are at pains to find any benefit accruing to the Salvadoran people despite an unusually generous American aid program during this decade: more than $3.5 billion in economic and military assistance, by far the largest in the hemisphere.

"El Salvador has enjoyed a free ride from the United States with the American taxpayer footing the bill," says Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, author of a bill to slice the U.S. military aid program in half unless certain conditions are met. To limit corruption, Harkin also wants guarantees that the U.S. economic aid program helps those in need.

Harkin believes that permissive U.S. policies have thwarted the goals of peace, reform and democracy in El Salvador.

What appears to have strengthened the hand of Harkin and his allies is the election of the Arena party candidate, Alfredo Cristiani, in Sunday's presidential election in El Salvador. For many in Congress, Arena is synonymous with rightist death squads, an allegation that Cristiani angrily denies.

A glimpse of the debate that is likely to emerge in the coming weeks over El Salvador was evident Tuesday when Secretary of State James A. Baker III testified before a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee.

"We ought to give this new government a chance to prove itself before we start condemning it in some sort of knee-jerk fashion," Baker told the subcommittee.

But Rep. Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, is convinced that El Salvador is an example of American policy gone awry.

Voter turnout on Sunday declined from past elections, human rights abuses continue and the civil war still rages, she said.

Despite American generosity, she said, polls indicate that Salvadorans regard their situation as "much worse" than it was before.

But when she complained that half of El Salvador's municipalities have no mayors, Baker had a ready answer. "They don't have mayors because mayors are afraid they'll be murdered by the communist insurgency," Baker said. With a rare display of irritation, he rejected the notion he felt was implicit in Snowe's question: that El Salvador lacks mayors because the U.S. aid program has been too generous.

George Gedda has covered foreign affairs for the Associated Press since 1968.

Democrat Says Changes Needed

RALEIGH (AP) — One of the House Democrats who banded with Republicans to overthrow the House leadership in January says a statewide poll shows the public is looking for more changes in the Democratic Party.

Rep. Sam Hunt, D-Alamance, noted that Republican Gov. Jim Martin's popularity remains strong, even with his proposals for raising taxes.

"When a majority of people say that they would rather trust the future of North Carolina to the Republican Party, it would seem to me that we would be well served in the General Assembly to continue to include them in the process and not engage in Republican and governor bashing," he said.

Hunt said the poll by Accurus Systems Inc. supported his view that not only are there no negative feelings about the (House) change, but rather for those who had heard of it, their opinion was favorable by a margin of almost 3-to-1.

Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, who lost the powerful chairmanship of the Appropriations Committee when he sided with former Speaker Liston Ramsey, said he doubted the results.

"He's not doing a thing in the world but soothing his soul," Watkins said. "He sure didn't survey anybody in my district."
Hunt, who is part-owner of Burlington-based Accurus, said 42.5 percent of those surveyed had heard of the revolt that replaced Ramsey with Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe. Of those who knew about the action, 55.6 percent were favorable, 19.1 percent were unfavorable and 25.3 percent were not sure.

The poll consisted of 612 telephone interviews conducted from March 6 to March 9 of people over age 18 and has a margin of error of 4 percentage points, meaning in 95 percent of such samples, the results would vary by no more than that amount.

Hunt, who said he paid $6,000 to $7,000 for the poll, cited several responses as indicating a need for change in the Democratic Party. He said 77.2 percent of those surveyed consider individual qualities over party affiliation when voting and 57.9 percent said the party needs new direction.

Hunt said he expected some Democrats to reject the poll, "but I believe the majority of Democratic members will look at the results objectively and hopefully find the results informative and useful."

Watkins said there is no need for new direction.
"I think we need more people who won't join up with Republicans like he did and try to be a Democrat one day and Republican the next," he said. "All 20 of them ought to change their registration."

House Panel Accepts Funding Plan For Road Construction Bill

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — An agreement on dividing up $8.6 billion for highway construction should boost prospects for the General Assembly's acceptance of the program despite continuing debate over how to fund it, a key supporter says.

The 12-year program passed its first test Tuesday, receiving unanimous approval of the House Infrastructure Subcommittee on Highways. It now goes to the full committee and if endorsed there will go to the Finance Committee.

Meanwhile, the Senate Transportation Committee was expected to vote on the package today, while an association representing new car dealers continued waging its fight against an automobile title transfer fee and offered an alternate financing plan.

The version of the bill backed by the House subcommittee includes a distribution formula hammered out last week by the Department of Transportation and members of the legislative study commission that developed the bill.

Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, the bill's chief House sponsor, said the formula was designed to reassure legislators and the public that no region would be shortchanged.

"No area has gotten what they need or what they want" in the past, Hunter told reporters. "This is to give everybody, hopefully, some peace of mind to know that there will be a certain amount of dollars that will flow to their areas, whether it be an urban area or a rural area...and they can count on it."

North Carolina is divided into 14 highway districts. Under the formula, they would be combined into seven for purposes of allocating money from the special trust fund the bill would create.

Twenty-five percent of the revenue generated by the bill would be allocated on the basis of construction needed in each area to complete a network of four-lane highways. Another 25 percent would be divided equally among all seven areas, while the remaining 50 percent would be allocated based on population.

For example, the bill would combine Divisions 1 and 4 into one region consisting of 20 counties, primarily in the northeast.

Under the formula, this area's share of money for the 12-year construction program would be $780.4 million.

"It's a balanced approach," Hunter said. "Everybody's going to be able to look at it and feel confident that their area's going to get some of the money."

The bill continued to raise questions despite the unanimous vote of approval.

Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, voiced concern about a provision in the bill that would make the Intrastate System the state's top transportation priority for the next dozen years. Thus, in the event of a shortfall, the Intrastate System would be funded at the expense of other construction projects.

"It means everything else takes a back seat," Blue said.

The North Carolina Automobile Dealers Association submitted a counter proposal to the funding provisions in the highway bill.

The House version of the bill would raise the state gasoline tax by 5/4 cents per gallon and impose a 2 percent automobile title transfer fee.

The Senate Transportation Committee has voted to drop the title fee but to impose a 3 percent "highway user fee" and to abolish the existing 2 percent automobile sales tax while retaining the proposed gasoline tax increase.

The auto dealers' plan favors the Senate's approach on the sales tax and user fee, but would allow a credit that would lower the fee for trade-ins.

ing it would hurt car sales.

Our goal is to assist legislators in developing a financial package that will avoid a serious negative impact upon any one segment of the business community or North Carolina economy," Wade Isaacs, executive vice president of the association, said in a letter to Sen. Bill Goldston, D-Rockingham, the Senate bill's chief sponsor.

Bill Allowing Seizure Of Wages Recalls Gardner's Debt History

The Associated Press

RALEIGH — Republican Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner's financial problems of the 1970s have been resurrected by the introduction of a bill that would let creditors garnish the wages of elected state officials, but Gardner says his debts are behind him.

"There are no more judgments," Gardner said Tuesday after learning of the bill filed by Rep. Bob Brawley, R-Iredell.

"I looked at the bills filed yesterday but it (the list) was so long, I never got to that one," he said. "But that one certainly doesn't concern me."

After the measure was filed Monday night, one lawmaker who asked not to be identified said, "This could be the first time in history that a lieutenant governor has had his wages garnished."

Under the bill, an elected state official against whom a creditor has won a judgment would have up to 40 percent of his monthly disposable earnings garnished from his paycheck and transferred to the creditor.

But Brawley said he was certain Gardner had paid off debts incurred in the 1960s and '70s when four companies Gardner promoted failed and hundreds of creditors lost money.

"If that isn't so, ooh!" Brawley laughed. "If that wasn't the truth, come and talk to me next week — if you can find me. I might be under a building somewhere."

Democrats backing former Sen. Tony Rand for lieutenant governor criticized Gardner last October for his financial troubles, issuing a list of suits and judgements against the Republican in excess of $2.6 million.

John Bode, finance chairman for Rand, said at the time that Gardner "forced his creditors to go through hoop after legal hoop to obtain satisfaction."

Brawley admitted he was concerned that the bill might rekindle debate about Gardner's past, but he said that was not his intention.

"People would come down very harshly on me if he thinks it's a slap at him," he said. "I would hope it's not perceived that way. I believe he has settled all of his problems."

During the campaign, Gardner, who had his biggest success with Hardee's, said he lost his own money in the failures of Carolando Corp., Brandywine Bay, Family Inns and Modular Corp. And he said when creditors sought their money, "I stood up and took my lumps like a man."

Democrats, however, said it usually took court judgments to force Gardner to pay up on back taxes, attorney fees, employee wages and claims stemming from alleged unfair trade practices and false advertising.

Debate Over Veto Bogs Down

The Associated Press

RALEIGH — A House committee's debate over one of seven veto bills bogged down when some members objected to letting the legislature override the governor with a simple majority.

The committee has seven bills involving veto power, including a bill passed by the Senate earlier this month. Rep. Walter Jones, D-Pitt, said the panel will hear explanations from each sponsor and will "narrow down the issues" in a couple of weeks.

Rep. Don Dawkins, D-Richmond, sponsor of a proposed constitutional amendment, said Tuesday his bill would "put the governor on the line" without seriously changing the balance of powers among the three branches of government. He said even with a majority override, the governor would often see his orders upheld.

"There are members of houses and senators who will uphold a governor's veto who would not have otherwise voted to kill the bill in its original form," he told the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Election Laws and Constitutional Amendments.

But Rep. Larry Justus, R-Henderson, said he could support a bill that didn't at least require a three-fifths override.

"I will vote for a veto bill that is a true veto bill," he said. "But I don't believe that a simple majority is a true veto bill. If you can get a majority to pass it, you certainly can get a majority to override it."

If a veto carries an override requiring three-fifths or two-thirds of the House and Senate, the door would be opened to collateral issues to temper the switch in power, Dawkins said.

Legislators Say A&T Fund Bid Impressed Lawmakers

The Associated Press

RALEIGH — Prospects for better funding of the agriculture school at North Carolina A&T State University improved after school officials made an unprecedented appearance before legislative agriculture committees, lawmakers say.

"I talked to several legislators after the meeting who genuinely didn't know what A&T does," Sen. Bill Martin, D-Guilford, said Tuesday after a joint meeting of the Senate Agriculture Committee and the House Basic Resources Subcommittee on Agriculture.

"They were all impressed with the presentation ... and I hope it's going to translate into some funding," said Martin, an A&T alumnus.

EDWARD B. FORT

Chancellor Edward B. Fort and other A&T officials gave a briefing on the agriculture school's programs and needs during the meeting. They asked for a $4.2 million budget increase for agriculture research and $1.9 million for extension program improvements.

It was the first time Fort had been invited to address either panel, and some members of both acknowledged ignorance about the A&T agriculture school.

"I've been here four years and I've never seen you before," Sen. Marc Basnight, D-Dare, told Fort. "I'm delighted you're here and I hope to see you more often."

Greenville that North Carolina has two agriculture schools and one of them "isn't much of a school."

He said later he had been referring to the A&T school. The other agriculture school is at North Carolina State University.

Mavretic said he wasn't disparaging the A&T school but was citing its relative lack of funding and public attention. But university officials reacted angrily to his comments and urged him to visit the school, an invitation he accepted.

On Feb. 28, N.C. State officials appeared before a joint meeting of the agriculture panels to request a $10 million budget increase. Afterward, a reporter asked why N.C. A&T officials hadn't also been asked to appear. That led to Fort's invitation.

During the hour-long meeting Tuesday, Fort and A&T's agriculture school dean and extension service director discussed their programs and research. They showed a videotape on rabbit farming prepared by the extension service.

Afterward, Fort told reporters the appearance had been a "tremendous breakthrough." "I think the major accomplishment is one of familiarizing the membership of the committee on the House and the Senate side with the critical relationship between the competencies of our researchers and our faculty and staff and students ... and the economic development ethos of this state," Fort said.

Rep. John Brown, R-Wilkes, chairman of the House subcommittee, said he hadn't realized that Fort had not addressed the agriculture committees before.

"It's news to me," Brown said.

Fort has appeared before legislative budget committees many times, as have chancellors of other schools in the University of North Carolina system.

The A&T School of Agriculture has been a touchy subject since last month, when House Speaker Joe Mavretic said at an appearance in

Azalea Festival Dropping Playboy Model As Queen

The Associated Press

WILMINGTON — Less than a week after announcing their choice of television actress Julie McCullough to be Wilmington's Azalea Festival queen, event organizers are looking for a replacement who hasn't appeared in Playboy magazine.

Bill Cameron, the president of the 42-year-old festival, said Tuesday that organizers and Miss McCullough had mutually agreed "that it would not be in the best interests of the Azalea Festival" for her to reign as Queen Azalea.

When asked at a news conference if the festival committee — which has started to search for a new queen — would change its method of selection, Cameron said with a smile: "We'll ask whether they've been in Playboy."

"The decision to make this change was not an easy one, nor a pleasant one," Cameron said. "However, given the circumstances, we felt it was the best decision for all concerned."

Miss McCullough, who plays Julie Costello on ABC-TV's wholesome "Growing Pains," was a cover girl and a Playmate of the Month in Playboy.

An official at the Growing Pains office said Miss McCullough wasn't available for comment Tuesday because the show is not being taped now. Donna Stern, an official at David Shapira Associates — the firm that represents Miss McCullough in her acting career — said she hadn't heard about the controversy and had no further comment.

"She was booked through the publicity office at ABC, and she's scheduled to be there the whole week and I haven't heard of anything changing," Ms. Stern said before the news conference was held in Wilmington. Ms. Stern said she didn't know of any other controversies set off by Miss McCullough's Playboy appearances in 1985 and 1986.

Cameron said a replacement queen would be chosen as soon as possible for the four-day festival, which begins next month.

"She was very disappointed," Cameron said. "She was looking forward to this. She had gone out and bought clothes in preparation for it. She is the only person who is more disappointed than I am."

Miss McCullough, of Dallas, is the daughter of a former Camp Lejeune Marine who lived for several years in Jacksonville.

In addition to being a playmate, she appeared on a Playboy cover in February 1985 and was in a photo feature on "Girls of Texas." She also appeared scantily clad in a movie titled "Big Bad Mamma II."

The Rev. J. Edwin Bullock, executive director of the 55-church Wilmington Baptist Association, which had opposed Miss McCullough as festival queen, said he thought the decision was for the best.

"We hope that it sends a positive message," Bullock said. "We had great confidence in our people who had put together the festivals over the years. I think this was unintentional, and it was obvious they regretted it from the beginning."

Cameron said the selection committee had not been aware of Miss McCullough's appearance in Playboy when she was invited to be queen. They became aware of it before announcing her selection, he said, but did not realize that she had been a Playmate of the Month or that she had appeared more than once.

IN THE STATE

CP&L Fire

RALEIGH (AP) — A fire raged out of control for two hours Tuesday at Carolina Power & Light Co.'s Lee Electric Power Plant in Wayne County, causing an estimated $20 million in damages, authorities said.

Fire and CP&L officials said a leaking hydraulic line may have caused the blaze at the power plant seven miles west of Goldsboro.

About 100 firefighters from six Wayne County fire departments were called out when the fire began in the plant's third story about 3:30 p.m., said John Whaley of the county's Rosewood fire station. No one was injured, he said.

Firefighters had the fire under control by about 5:30 p.m. Fire officials suspect that water had been leaking from channels designed to cool the plant's turbines.

Schweitzer Awards

WILMINGTON (AP) — Despite the frequent requests for Beverly Sills' presence at festivals, awards and ceremonies — she has 1,100 keys to cities and about 2,000 days named in her honor in various locales — she did not hesitate to accept the Schweitzer Award.

"You might ask where Wilmington is, but you don't ask who Dr. Schweitzer is," Ms. Sills said. "Actually, it's a rather well known award. It bears the sort of name that fills you with pride."

The 1989 Albert Schweitzer International Prizes for music, medicine and humanities will be awarded tonight at the University of North Carolina-Wilmington.

Abbott Dies

RALEIGH (AP) — Peyton B. Abbott Jr., a Raleigh lawyer who served as a deputy to five consecutive state attorneys general, died Tuesday at age 83.

Abbott also helped the late Albert Coats establish the N.C. Institute of Government in Chapel Hill.

He came to the state attorney general's office in 1947 after working for several years as a tax law specialist for the state Revenue Department. He left the department to practice law in 1951, returned in 1955 and resigned in 1967 for personal reasons from then-Attorney General Wade Bruton's staff.

Abbott also served as deputy to attorneys general Harry McMullan,

William B. Rodman, George Patton and Malcolm B. Seawell. In addition, he held a private law practice in Winston-Salem from 1931 to 1942 and a post at the Institute of Government at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill from 1942 to 1947.

Non-Partisan

ASHEVILLE (AP) — When Asheville City Council candidates campaign for office later this year, they may be doing it without the benefits — and liabilities — of political party affiliation.

In response to what some councilmen called frequent urging by their constituents to take partisan politics out of council elections, the board unanimously approved a "resolution of intent to consider" an amendment to the city charter that would make the elections non-partisan.

Bissette said of the 18 largest cities in North Carolina, only four — Asheville, Charlotte, Kinston and Winston-Salem — have partisan municipal elections.

Panel Suggested

BREVARD, N.C. (AP) — Transylvania County businessman Charles Taylor has urged the governor and lieutenant governor to form an environmental advisory committee for Western North Carolina.

The committee should be non-partisan and balanced with members representing businesses, industries, local governments and environmental organizations, Taylor said. It would serve the state's 20 to 25 mountain counties and draw expertise from state agencies and colleges. By using existing staff and facilities, the committee would require no new funding, he said.

The committee's primary work would be recommendations to local, state and federal government officials. These recommendations would not necessarily favor one environmental solution over others. They could explain the various options, weighing the pros and cons of each.

Soybean Producers Say They Are Winning Fight Against Oil Imports

By Paul Nowell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

North Carolina's soybean producers say health-conscious consumers have helped them score an important victory in their decade-long battle against imported tropical oils.

"I think we can begin to write RIP on palm oil and coconut oil," Jim Wilder, executive vice president of the N.C. Soybean Producers Association, said in an interview Tuesday.

In mid-February, the state's soybean growers joined forces with the N.C. Department of Agriculture to launch the N.C. Soybean Bonanza. The campaign promoted hundreds of food items containing soybeans and soy products at some 1,100 North Carolina grocery stores.

The campaign's message was simple: cheap imported oils are not good for your health because they are much higher in cholesterol than soybean and other vegetable oils.

The promotion, which concluded March 15, featured $2.6 million worth of discount coupons, brochures containing nutritional information, and a contest with cash prizes.

"The campaign was a bang-up success," Wilder said.

The $100,000 model program is being scrutinized by the American Soybean Association as a possible strategy in its nationwide battle against tropical oil-producing nations.

Wilder said it will take several weeks to analyze the success of the campaign. But he believed it will be judged a success.

ew, Rep. Joseph P. Kennedy II, laid a wreath on Tuesday at the Green Beret statue at Fort Bragg's John F. Kennedy Special Warfare Plaza in honor of 11 special forces soldiers who died in a March 12 helicopter crash.

The 57-year-old senator crossed himself, closed his eyes and bowed his head as he stood before the bronze statue whose base bears President Kennedy's description of the green beret as a "mark of distinction in the fight for freedom."

Kennedy, a Senate Armed Services Committee member, also was scheduled to visit Camp Lejeune Marine Corps Base near Jacksonville on a fact-finding tour Tuesday during a congressional recess, said Melody Miller, deputy press secretary in his Washington office.

"We've never had such a demand for nutritional information," he said. "The public is highly aware of the issue."

At issue is the economic livelihood of North Carolina's 25,000 soybean growers. Since 1982, they have seen a one-third cutback in soybean acreage, as imports of the cheaper tropical oils from Malaysia and other countries grew each year.

Since 1982, Wilder said, soybean acreage has decreased from about 2.3 million acres to 1.4 million acres, largely because food companies were turning to palm oils that were about one-third cheaper.

From 1980 to 1988, Malaysia increased its palm tree acreage from 2 million acres to 5 million. Palm oil imports in this country rose from 218 million pounds in 1981 to 500 million pounds two years ago.

Meanwhile, the price of soybeans dropped.

In 1986, Wilder's group used claims by a Washington health organization that soybeans were much lower in cholesterol than palm oils for an exhibit at the state fair.

"We even won and award for the best educational display at the fair," he said.

In recent months, several food companies, including Nabisco, Frito-Lay, Kellogg, Pepperidge Farm, General Mills, Ralston Purina, Borden, Pillsbury and Quaker Oats have stopped using tropical oils to make some products.

"We have stopped the erosion in our oil market and gained back the 30 percent market-share tropical oils had taken from this $3 billion a year business," Wilder said.

Hardee's Food Systems Inc., which is based in Rocky Mount, also switched from using vegetable and animal oils to a process that uses 80 percent soybean oil and 20 percent peanut oil.

Meanwhile, Malaysia and some of the other tropical oil exporting countries have begun their own advertising blitz, including full-page ads in national newspapers in the United States. The ads make claims that palm oil is a balanced fat which reduces cholesterol.

Wilder said public pressure convinced the food companies to make the switch from the cheaper substitutes.

"Nothing speaks louder than a boycott," he said.

A national survey conducted two years ago found that 80 percent of all processed foods on grocery shelves contained palm oil, Wilder said.

"Two years later, 20 percent or less of the products contained palm oil," he said. "That's how many (companies) made the switch."

Meanwhile, soy prices have rebounded. Experts point to last year's drought in the Midwest and a nearly one-third reduction in imports of tropical oils.

"The move (to soy oil) is healthy in two ways — for our farmers and for the individual," Wilder said.

RJR Cuts Workforce

The Associated Press

WINSTON-SALEM — About 700 employees of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco USA will be offered early retirement enhancements or cash incentives to voluntarily leave their jobs as the company tries to reduce its workforce after a smokeless cigarette failed in test markets.

Reynolds' spokesman David B. Fishel said Tuesday that the company hopes to achieve the reductions without forced layoffs.

"We think these programs are broad enough that we will get the 700 volunteers," he said. "If we don't get the 700, then obviously we might have to look at layoffs."

Many analysts had predicted widespread layoffs since Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. acquired RJR Nabisco Inc. in a $25 billion leveraged buyout last winter.

But Fishel said that the reductions, which the employees were told about Tuesday morning, have nothing to do with the buyout. He said the cuts are necessary because of Reynolds' decision last month to stop test marketing of Premier, its radically new non-burning cigarette.

"Since our announcement regarding Premier, we have carefully weighed the impact of the brand's reduced production requirements in relation to the continuing productivity increases we are experiencing throughout our production operations," said Ralph Anguoli, president and chief executive officer of RJR.

"After reviewing all available options, we determined late last week that this would be the appropriate time to offer these voluntary programs in order to maintain our production work force at its most efficient level."

Premier cigarettes were pulled from test markets in Missouri and Arizona last month because of poor public acceptance. The cigarette replaced burning tobacco with a high-tech flavor capsule warmed by a carbon heat source at the tip.

The cigarette virtually eliminated sidestream smoke which has drawn objections from non-smokers, but smokers who tried the brand said it tasted awful.

Extradition Fight Denied

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

ALBANY, N.Y. — A state appeals court has opened the way for fugitive Indian activist Timothy Jacobs' extradition to North Carolina, where he faces kidnapping charges.

The Appellate Division of State Supreme Court refused Tuesday to block a lower court ruling that denied Jacobs asylum in New York.

The court rejected without comment a request by Jacobs' attorneys, who had asked the five-member panel to stay Madison County Judge William O'Brien's decision to send the 29-year-old Tuscarora back to North Carolina to face kidnapping charges.

"This puts us behind the eight ball and him (Jacobs) back on his way to North Carolina," said Alan Rosenthal, a Syracuse lawyer who helped represent Jacobs during his extradition battle.

By refusing to stay O'Brien's ruling, the mid-level appeals court left no time for the review of the extradition decision, closing Jacobs' only avenue of appeal, he said.

"It strikes at the fundamental idea of fairness," Rosenthal said.

Rosenthal said he expected Jacobs would be returned to North Carolina within the next few days. He remained in custody at the Madison County Jail Tuesday.

The appeals court's decision was somewhat surprising, said Rosenthal.

State Ports Say Shipments Down

The Associated Press

RALEIGH — The State Ports Authority must make sure that legislators are aware of the impact of ports on the state's economy and their potential, the panel was told.

There is "a lack of understanding in the legislature about the ports," authority chairman P.A. Thomas said at a meeting Tuesday at which the authority learned overall shipments from the state ports at Wilmington and Morehead City are down 21 percent for the first eight months of the fiscal year.

Operating revenues are down $1.5 million for the same period, the State Ports Authority was told.

Actual revenue at Wilmington for the eight months ended Feb. 28 totaled $9.6 million with an operating deficit of $67,000. At Morehead City, operating revenue amounted to $6.3 million, with an operating surplus of $744.

Ports Authority executive director Noel Painchaud said the authority is continuing to cut operating expenses to combat the deficit, but costs to subsidize rail and truck shipping from Greensboro and Charlotte to the ports had increased dramatically this year.

"We have taken the position that the NCSA has to bite the bullet and subsidize this operation even if it means experiencing an operating deficit," Painchaud said. "We then protect North Carolina's intermodal shippers, help cut their costs enabling them to be more competitive in the marketplace."

Figures for the eight month period showed the overall tonnage at Wilmington was down 897,000 tons and the general terminal tonnage at Morehead City was down 66,000 tons.

Despite the overall reductions, bulk cargo handled at Morehead City was up 10 percent, or 140,000 tons, and containerized tonnage at Wilmington was up 5 percent, or 18,000 tons.

The general and bulk tonnage at Morehead City was up 4 percent for the year so far.

The ports authority shows an operating deficit of $80,000, compared to a deficit of $276,000 last year.

"The way to work on the deficit is to focus on controlling expenses first, and then consider revenue enhancement," Thomas said.

Changes in the federal funding formula for port projects have put a bigger share of the expenses on the states, said Col. Paul Woodbury of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Wilmington District.

The funding system, he said, made it complicated to finance projects, since both Congress and the state legislature have to approve the funds.

John Morris, of the state Division of Water Resources, told the authority improvements to the Wilmington harbor that were approved 10 years ago are now ready to be built, but will require $3 million in matching state funds over the next two years. Only $2 million is included in the proposed state budget, he said.

"If we don't get smart, we're going to get left behind," Woodbury said.

Court Backs Coach In Dismissal Appeal

The Associated Press

RALEIGH — The state Court of Appeals has upheld an award of $78,000 to a Hickory High School coach who claimed a school board was biased when it dismissed him for allegedly fondling female students.

Tuesday's decision marks the first time a state appeals court has upheld an award of damages to a public employee who claimed his due process rights were violated by a biased governing board, said a lawyer for the coach. The ruling set a standard for judging the impartiality of dismissal decisions by boards.

The key issue, the court said, was that members of the Hickory Board of Education had claimed they were unbiased despite evidence that they were familiar with allegations against the coach and may have planned his dismissal in advance of his hearing.

"The case before us does not simply involve school board members who conducted a prehearing investigation, or who formulated opinions about the matter they were to decide," Judge Charles L. Becton wrote for an appellate panel, which voted 2-1 to affirm the award.

"The added element in this case which, disturbingly, distinguishes it from cases upholding the fairness of the decision-making process is that, here, the board members effectively denied any connection with the case beyond their having a cursory knowledge of the nature of the charges."

Board members had said at the start of a dismissal hearing that they knew little or nothing about the allegations against Eddie Ray Crump, a teacher and baseball coach at Hickory High School.

In fact, one board member allegedly had tried to get a teacher to persuade the coach to resign, the court noted.

High Winds Tear Through Coastal Area

The Associated Press

BEAUFORT, N.C. — Minor injuries were reported after severe winds at Lennoxville Point destroyed buildings at Ampro Fisheries, damaged homes and downed trees and power lines, authorities said.

Water spouts also were reported around Cape Lookout, said Jim Phillips, local manager for Carolina Power & Light Co.

A spokesman for the National Weather Service in Wilmington said officials there did not spot a tornado on radar, and what may have hit the coast is known as straight line winds preceding a front.

A tornado warning was issued in Carteret County from 7:25 a.m. Tuesday to 8:15 a.m.

Authorities in Carteret County said a storm ripped through an unoccupied factory, destroying two giant storage tanks and damaging several homes.

The 50,000-gallon storage tanks at Standard Products Co. were destroyed, along with several out-buildings at the factory, said Tom Ditt of the Division of Emergency Management.

Ditt also said a 20-foot commercial fishing boat was overturned by high winds.

Strong winds and heavy rain hit Lennoxville Point, at the far northeast corner of Beaufort off U.S. 70 east, around 7 a.m., said Tom Hinton, Carteret County emergency management coordinator.

Damage estimates were not immediately available, but Hinton said two large empty fish oil tanks were blown over at Ampro Fisheries and several buildings on the site were damaged or blown down. He added that some homes in the area also were damaged. Eleanor Fulcher, a local resident,

Democrats Drop Sights On Minimum Pay Increase

By John King
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Backers of House legislation to raise the minimum wage lowered their target to $4.55 an hour on the eve of debate as President Bush declared he had the votes to sustain a veto should Congress go above $4.25.

The Democratic sponsors of the bill, scheduled for floor debate beginning today, also agreed Tuesday to include a sub-minimum training wage in their measure, a 60-day proposal that falls far short of the six-month period demanded by Bush.

And the president, at a White House meeting with reporters, insisted he had made his best and last offer to raise the wage, which has been frozen for eight years.

Bush appeared with Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole, who was there to deliver a letter from 35 Republican senators who promised to side with Bush should he veto minimum-wage legislation that fails to meet White House guidelines.

The administration guidelines include raising the minimum wage, now at $3.35 an hour, to $4.25 an hour by 1992, provided employers can pay new hires a "training wage" of $3.35 an hour for six months. The administration says the sub-minimum wage is needed for employers to create and fill entry-level jobs.

Mrs. Dole, appearing today on "CBS This Morning," said, "Many more jobs and job opportunities are saved if you have a six-month training wage."

The minimum wage "is not the tool for lifting people out of poverty. Most people on minimum wage are very young, they are part-time workers ... they're living at home and they're not in poverty," Mrs. Dole said. "If we are trying to lift people out of poverty, let's go to other means such as training and education and literacy."

"There's enough votes in our grasp here to see that we don't bust the budget and increase the pressures on inflation by going beyond that which the secretary and I have agreed on," Bush said Tuesday. "We've thought out a level of increase on the minimum wage that would help people and yet would not add gasoline to any inflation fires that are burning."

The 35 senators, if their support for Bush held, would leave Democrats short of the two-thirds majority needed to override a veto.

"For eight years this same coalition of Republican senators has blocked any increase in the minimum wage," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., sponsor of a Senate bill to raise the minimum wage to $4.65 by 1992. "Every American who works for a living deserves a living wage, not a sub-poverty wage."

Senate floor action is still pending on Kennedy's bill.

The bill due for House debate today calls for raising the minimum wage to $4.65 by 1992 and has no provision for a sub-minimum training wage, an idea long opposed by the sponsors and organized labor, which has been lobbying heavily against such proposals.

But the sponsors, facing mounting pressure from the White House and moderate Democrats, agreed to scale back the final level to $4.55 and add a training wage in an amendment worked out Tuesday that has the support of the House leadership.

At the same time, however, they said they would move up the effective date of the initial increase, to $3.85 an hour, to Oct. 1, three months earlier than had been planned. The amendment, to be offered Thursday, calls for then boosting the minimum wage to $4.25 on Oct. 1, 1990, and to $4.55 a year later.

The 60-day training wage would apply only to new entrants in the job market, exclude agricultural workers, and expire on Sept. 30, 1992, according to aides. The training wage would initially be $3.35 an hour but would increase to 85 percent of the subsequent increases in the minimum wage.

Workers hired to fill jobs that had been vacated by recent layoffs could not be paid the training wage, a provision designed to prevent abuse of the system in order to pay lower wages.

Tar Heel Delegation Backs Smaller Wage Increase

The Associated Press

It's time to raise the minimum wage, but not necessarily as much as the Democratic leadership has proposed, a majority of North Carolina's members of the House say.

The leadership, for its part, has inched its proposal down toward President Bush's position.

In the House Rules Committee Tuesday, a new version of the bill was offered to raise the minimum wage from $3.35 to $4.55 over three years — 10 cents less than the increase endorsed last week by the House Education and Labor Committee.

The new version, backed by the Democratic leadership, would allow employers to pay new workers a lower training wage for 45 days, a concept that the Education and Labor Committee rejected.

Bush's proposal calls for increasing the minimum wage to $4.25 in three years, while allowing employers to pay new workers $3.35 for six months. The president has promised to veto any bill not in line with his proposal.

The Republican proposal will be considered by the House today and Thursday, along with the new version and the bill endorsed by the Education and Labor Committee.

For the North Carolina delegation, one dividing point is jobs. Some representatives worry that increasing the wage will lead employers to hire fewer people, although Rep. Stephen Neal of the 5th District told the Winston-Salem Journal that history teaches otherwise.

At least seven of the state's 11 representatives, including Neal, do not support the original proposal for raising the minimum wage to $4.65 without a training wage. Three others said that they favor some increase but haven't decided which version of the bill to support.

Rep. W.G. "Bill" Hefner of the 8th District could not be reached Tuesday for comment. Rep. I.T. Valentine Jr. of the 2nd District said that he hasn't seen a version of the bill yet that he likes. His main concern, he said, is the "ripple effect" that any increase in the minimum wage would have on all wages.

Reps. J. Howard Coble of the 6th District, T. Cass Ballenger of the 10th District, J. Alex McMillan of the 9th District, and H. Martin Lancaster of the 3rd District all said that they support Bush's proposal, although reluctantly in some cases.

Bakkers' Proposed Move Sets Florida Town Afire

By Brian Murphy
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAKE HELEN, Fla. — Some officials are worried about a loss in tax revenue, the only restaurant owner in town wonders if he should add more tables, and an astrologer in a nearby spiritualist community foresees profit.

But all agree that this tiny central Florida village will get a jolt like a lightning bolt from the heavens if evangelists Jim and Tammy Bakker move their television ministry here.

"It could be great for business or turn this town inside out," said Chamber of Commerce President Jerry Peters. "Either way, if the Bakkers come, this place will not be the same."

"I'm not going to put myself in a position of judging a man by his past deeds," said Mayor John Smart, a retired Air Force chaplain who last week led Bakker on a tour of this area 20 miles northeast of Orlando. "What did Jesus say? 'He who is without sin cast the first stone.' There are some strong feelings in town, no doubt. But I think we should wait and see."

Bakker, the former Assemblies of God minister who was stripped of the PTL television ministry over his tryst with a church secretary and questions about finances, visited a 28-acre television studio complex here on Friday. It was built in 1982 by Nautilus exercise equipment creator Arthur Jones and bought in 1986 by Dallas investor Travis Ward.

Evan Keesling, one of four people challenging Smart in an April 4 election, believes many of the 2,500 residents are troubled by the secrecy surrounding the negotiations.

"I realize that it's a private deal, but many people would have liked Bakker to come to them first," said Keesling, who built the first Nautilus machines with Jones in the early 1970s. "I'd say the mood in town is nervous to jumpy."

Peters and others are concerned about the possible loss of $13,900 a year in property taxes because the ministry is tax-exempt.

Views were mixed in Cassadaga, less than three miles from town, where most residents claim psychic powers and an ability to communicate with the dead.

"I see real estate values going up and money pouring in," said astrologer Hanan Leeds. "It will be good for everyone, get the idea?"

But Joe Stupar, owner of the 62-year-old Cassadaga Hotel, wonders how the zeal of the Bakkers' fundamentalist followers will mesh with Cassadaga mysticism.

"I'm not so sure how Bakkers' people will relate to this," he said.

"I'm hoping for harmony, but you never know."

Bakker said he'd like to relocate the couple's Jim and Tammy Ministry from Pineville, N.C., to Lake Helen and construct other facilities similar to PTL's Heritage USA theme park in Fort Mill, S.C. He said a decision on a new location likely will be made in two months.

The Mecklenburg County, N.C., Zoning Board of Adjustment has ruled that Bakker must stop broadcasting from the living room of his rented home south of Charlotte.

The board ruled earlier this month that the studio, located in a residential zone, violates the county zoning ordinance.

Texas Air Says Strike Ineffective

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Texas Air Corp. officials say a strike by Continental Airlines flight attendants has fizzled, and they are dismissing calls by labor unions for a boycott of both carriers as a fantasy.

Officials for the strike against Eastern Airlines, the AFL-CIO and two consumer groups announced the boycott plan Tuesday in Miami, but the very idea made Texas Air spokesman Art Kent burst into laughter.

"How can I respond to something that doesn't exist?" said Kent. "This corporation owns Eastern and Continental."

Continental, Monday, had a 99.6 percent completion rate. We have seen nothing. We anticipate nothing.

May Jane Barry, president of a Transport Workers Union local representing Eastern flight attendants, was joined by representatives of the Florida Consumer Federation, the Florida State Council of Senior Citizens and the AFL-CIO of Florida, which said it would run radio ads urging the boycott.

"We will be asking all good Americans to stand up to Frank Lorenzo by refusing to fly Eastern and Continental," Ms. Barry said.

Lorenzo, chairman of Houston-based Texas Air, has been accused by unions of stripping Eastern of its assets to benefit Continental.

Eastern's 8,500-member Machinists union, representing mechanics and baggage handlers, went on strike in a contract dispute on March 4. Most of Eastern's pilots and flight attendants have refused to cross picket lines. The airline is flying only about 100 flights a day, 10 percent its pre-strike level.

Eastern, which has asked for bankruptcy reorganization, has invited representatives of unions and non-union employees to be on a creditors' committee to be formed today in New York.

Wally Haber, a Machinists official in Miami, said the company was asking for union representation "to make it look like they have warm blood and a heart, and I don't think that's true."

Continental officials, meanwhile, dismissed claims by its flight attendants that their walkout, which began Monday by the Union of Flight Attendants, was hampering flight schedules.

The Associated Press

Florida Consumer Federation official backs attendants

The so-called strike has had absolutely no effect on our operations," insisted airline Continental Chairman D. Joseph Corr. "Not a single flight cancellation has resulted from UFA activity."

Union officials, however, said they were having a growing impact on Continental operations, and that the airline was hiding the effects of the strike.

Continental officials said 2 percent, or 130, of 6,500 flight attendants had taken to the picket lines, while a spokesman for the union said 1,075 stayed off the job.

The airline said it has plenty of flight attendants to fill in should more decide to honor the strike, but UFA spokesman Charlie Sampson contended that Continental had exhausted its reserves and was calling on other company employees to fill in.

At Houston's Intercontinental Airport, Continental's main hub, the union reported 132 pickets Tuesday, but Tina Ceppi with the Houston

Department of Aviation said only 15 to 20 pickets were present. No Continental pickets were reported at Hobby Airport, the city's other major airport.

The Continental flight attendants say they are striking to protest wages of $11,000 to $15,000 a year, which they say are 30 percent to 50 percent below those at other carriers. Union members also deny claims by Continental that a recent wage and benefit increase has brought those wages up to par in the industry.

Continental's attendants have been working without a contract since the company reorganized under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act in 1983. The company says only 5 percent of its attendants belong to the union; the union says 60 percent are members.

Drug Testing Rule Upheld

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Advocates on both sides are divided over whether Supreme Court decisions to uphold drug and alcohol tests for some sensitive government and safety-related jobs pave the way for more sweeping random testing.

The decisions Tuesday, the court's first on such tests, are being welcomed by Bush administration officials who say they are an important step toward a drug-free workplace.

Civil libertarians, meanwhile, denounced the rulings as an erosion of privacy rights, and union leaders were split over their likely impact.

"We think this represents a significant first step in validating what has been proved to be a useful program of deterrence of drug abuse," said Attorney General Dick Thornburgh.

He declined to say whether he thinks broader, random testing would meet with the high court's approval.

"All of these cases are going to rise or fall on their particular facts and will depend upon how carefully the program is structured," Thornburgh said.

The justices, by a 7-2 vote, upheld federal regulations forcing railroad workers involved in accidents to undergo blood and urine tests. By a separate 5-4 vote, the court ruled that the U.S. Customs Service can order urine tests for employees seeking drug-enforcement jobs or positions that require they carry firearms.

The court ordered further lower court hearings to determine whether the Customs Service rules also should apply to workers with access to classified information.

Justice Anthony M. Kennedy, writing for the court in both cases, said such tests do not violate workers' privacy rights even though they are conducted without a court warrant or a suspicion that an individual is using drugs or alcohol.

The decisions will affect other drug and alcohol testing programs conducted by federal, state and local governments, and they appear to sanction tests for those in such sensitive jobs as police officer or firefighter.

But labor leaders said it is unclear whether the justices would uphold random testing for millions of other workers.

Larry Mann, a lawyer for the railway workers, said the sweep of the rulings is "quite profound." He asked, "What's to prohibit the government from now imposing regulations on every person caught speeding or every person in an auto accident?"

GAO Says Plane Contract Inflated

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Air Force's deal for $68 million in crash damage kits for its giant C-5 cargo aircraft was marked by a conflict-of-interest violation and vastly overpriced parts, including $229 washers the size of nickels, according to a congressional report.

The General Accounting Office, Congress' investigative arm, found that Lockheed Aeronautical Systems Co. hired a retired U.S. Air Force colonel shortly after he negotiated a Pentagon contract with the defense contractor to buy the crash damage kits.

Retired Air Force Col. Anthony Diferdinando "did not comply with provisions in a conflict of interest law requiring that he report his employment contracts and disqualify himself from procurement functions involving Lockheed," the GAO said.

The review also found that among the prices Lockheed Aeronautical Systems Co. proposed for items in the 6,600-part kit were $229.94 for a nickel-size washer and $211.13 for an inch-long shim, a metal wedge, that was an excess part from production of the C-5B and originally valued at $22.09.

The House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on oversight and investigations, which requested the inquiry last year, holds hearings on the matter today. A copy of the GAO testimony was obtained Monday by The Associated Press. The subcommittee, chaired by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., asked the GAO to look into the San Antonio Air Logistics Center's purchase of the kits and an allegation that Diferdinando violated conflict of interest laws during the procurement process.

According to a GAO chronology, Diferdinando initiated acquisition of the crash damage kits, requesting funding for 147 kits. Less than a month later, the colonel requested an application for employment at Lockheed.

Diferdinando retired from the Air Force on July 1, 1986, and on Dec. 2, 1986, the Air Logistics Center issued its first order for the kits at an estimated value of $44.6 million.

Less than three weeks later, Lockheed offered Diferdinando a job, and on Feb. 2, 1987, the colonel reported for work in Lockheed's International Marketing Division responsible for marketing the C-130 aircraft in Middle Eastern countries.

Bush Seeks Changes In Fighter Plane Contract With Japan

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush is trying to counter complaints that a joint U.S.-Japanese fighter plane project is a high-tech giveaway by promising tight restrictions on the computer technology involved.

Bush said Tuesday that he has decided to endorse the joint venture to produce the "FSX" fighter plane, but with changes in the agreement to safeguard U.S. technology.

Bush said he will send Congress a modified version of the agreement struck last year by the Reagan administration with Japan to build the plane, a new version of the American-made F-16.

The project has come under fire on Capitol Hill, and even with the administration assurances, some lawmakers remain skeptical.

Efforts to keep a lid on sensitive U.S. technology could prove almost impossible once the project gets under way, said Charles Smith, an aide to Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., a chief opponent of the FSX project.

"How do you keep data away from them? We would like to see how the deal is structured," he said.

Among the changes being sought by Bush, according to administration and congressional sources, are tight restrictions on computer "source codes" for the software used to fly and control the plane and a requirement that some of the fighters be made in the United States.

A formal decision by Bush was expected within the next few days, White House aides said, but the president announced his general support for the project on Tuesday.

"We've pretty much finished our deliberations here inside the administration," he said. "I've made my decision to go forward with certain clarifications on the (1988 agreement)."

The changes would also give the Commerce Department an expanded role to monitor the project and keep track of Japanese compliance, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Although the modifications will include a requirement that a proportion of the planes be built in the United States, they will not go as far as the 40 percent level reportedly proposed by Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher, sources said.

Japan, however, still wants the original agreement to stand.

"The Japanese government strongly hopes this agreement would be implemented," said Shingo Yamagami, a spokesman for the Japanese Embassy.

Marlin Fitzwater, Bush's press secretary, said "aspects of the decision" to seek changes already had been discussed with the Japanese government.

"We're interested in their review of some of the suggestions we've made and some of the options we've laid out," Fitzwater said.

The Reagan administration negotiated the arrangement after Japan refused to buy F-16s and indicated it would build its own jet fighters. The new FSX plane would be built jointly by General Dynamics and Japan's Mitsubishi Heavy Industries.

Backers of the project within the administration argued that it should go ahead to avoid damaging U.S.-Japanese relations. But skeptics, including Mosbacher, argued that the

Congress Sends Bill To White House That Would Protect Whistleblowers

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal employees who blow the whistle on government waste, fraud and abuse would get added job protection under legislation passed by Congress and sent to President Bush.

"We have a bill that provides strong protection for those who expose wrong occurring in the federal domain," Rep. Frank Horton, R-N.Y., said Tuesday as the House approved the Senate-passed measure on a voice vote.

Bush is expected to sign the bill, a revamped version of legislation vetoed by President Reagan last fall. It won 97-0 Senate approval on Thursday.

The bill would provide increased protection from firing and demotion for federal employees who disclose mismanagement and waste in the agencies where they work.

Employees fighting for their jobs would face less stringent standards of proof that their firing or demotion came as the result of whistle-blowing.

The Office of the Special Counsel, established eight years ago to investigate civil service abuses, would become an independent agency. It now is an arm of the Merit Systems Protection Board and has come under criticism in Congress on grounds that it has done little to assist whistle-blowers.

Whistle-blowers would be able to take their cases directly to the board if the special counsel did not act within 120 days. But the special counsel would not be allowed to file lawsuits in court on behalf of employees, a key change from last year's version.

Reagan pocket vetoed last year's version, saying it would have resulted in federal agencies fighting court battles against each other. A president may allow a bill to die when Congress is not sitting, simply by refusing to sign it.

A freshly minted compromise between the Bush administration, Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., and other Senate sponsors dropped last year's provision allowing the special counsel to go to court. That answered Reagan's objection and the Justice Department immediately announced that the measure now had administration support.

The bill is the second major piece of legislation sent to Bush in this congressional session; it follows a measure that blocked large pay raises for top federal employees. The only other bills passed so far this year established a Federal Employees Recognition Week and a Greek Recognition Day.

Added job protection for whistle-blowers has concerned Congress since 1969, when Pentagon aide A. Ernest Fitzgerald was fired for exposing $2 billion in cost overruns on the C-5A cargo plane project. He was reinstated after a 13-year battle.

GAO studies have shown the special counsel has done little to help whistle-blowers.

Court Frees 'Thin Blue Line' Man

The Associated Press

DALLAS — Randall Dale Adams walked free after serving more than 12 years for the murder of a police officer, but he said he won't feel vindicated unless his name is cleared in a second trial.

"I still would like to have had the trial, but that's not up to me. That's up to the state of Texas," he told reporters Tuesday after his release from jail.

Adams once was three days from execution, but he was freed under a court ruling that he didn't receive a fair trial. Last year's documentary "The Thin Blue Line" had brought renewed attention to the case.

Dallas County District Attorney John Vance said prosecutors were examining evidence to determine whether to retry Adams. Assistant District Attorney Winfield Scott had said earlier this week that he intended to seek a new trial but might reduce the charge from capital murder to murder.

"It ain't over," Randy Schaffer, Adams' attorney, said after hours of wrangling that had delayed his client's release.

In an interview on ABC-TV's "Nightline," Adams was asked about the prospect of a retrial.

"I'm not afraid of that now," he said. "I believe we're going to win and I believe we can prove it."

He traveled to Houston with Schaffer to lay groundwork for a new trial while his mother, Mildred Adams, decorated her trailer in Grove City, Ohio, with yellow ribbons for his return.

"There'll be a bunch of people to meet him at the airport," she told The Associated Press. "Then the family's just going to bring him home and order pizza and talk and cry for a while and just be glad he's home."

Adams' release on a $50,000 personal recognizance bond was delayed by two days of legal wrangling in which prosecutors tried to have state District Judge Larry Baraka removed from the case and had bond raised to $100,000 cash.

But District Judge Ron Chapman subsequently revoked the higher amount after talking to Baraka in chambers, allowing Adams to be released without posting any money.

Adams was convicted in 1977 for the Nov. 28, 1976, killing of Dallas patrolman Robert Wood, but "The Thin Blue Line" questioned the testimony of the state's key witness,

The Associated Press

Adams walks from jail, free after 12 years in prison

David Harris.

The then-16-year-old Harris had picked up Adams the day of the shooting after Adams' car ran out of gas. After Wood pulled over Harris' car, Adams shot the officer, Harris testified. In the documentary, however, Harris all but confessed to the shooting.

Harris is on death row for another slaying but wasn't charged in the Wood case. The movie also showed other witnesses giving information that conflicted with their trial testimony.

On March 1, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled that Adams did not receive a fair trial because witnesses lied on the stand and the district attorney's office suppressed evidence.

Adams steadfastly maintained his innocence, saying Harris dropped him off at home before the shooting occurred.

"I am 40 years old and have no violence anywhere," he told reporters Tuesday. "The state wants you to think that for five minutes, I went crazy. That's stupid."

Filmmaker Errol Morris, who directed the documentary, said he was "proud, very proud" to have focused attention on Adams' case.

"This is not a story of how someone uses legal wrangling to get out of jail," Morris said. "This is the story of a miscarriage of justice. This is the story of a man who came within three days of a lethal injection in Huntsville."

Adams' original death sentence was commuted to life in prison in 1980.

"I have often wondered what would happen if the evening ever came when they came to my cell to take me out to my death," Adams said. "I often wondered if I could just walk out and go to my death as a man. Thankfully, I never had to answer that."

Carter could not be sentenced to death because he was only 16 at the time of the crime.

According to court records, Underwood and his 19-year-old girlfriend were abducted at gunpoint from a Houston nightclub on April 10, 1978, and taken to a remote area where Underwood was beaten to death.

EPA Says 100 Million Live In U.S. With Polluted Air

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — More than 100 million Americans live in areas where they breathe unhealthy air with pollutants exceeding federal standards, despite general improvements over the last decade, the government reported today.

The Environmental Protection Agency's annual report on air quality singled out ozone pollution and carbon monoxide emissions, both largely caused by automobiles, as being of particular concern in urban areas where air pollution problems are greatest.

Ozone levels increased 5 percent between 1986 and 1987 and, largely because of the unusual heat last summer, jumped another 14 percent in 1988, according to the EPA statistics.

Despite a decade-long campaign for cleaner air and a long-term reduction of all six of the major pollutants examined, the EPA report reiterated that many urban areas continue to be in violation of federal air quality standards.

The statistics covered air quality from 1978 to 1987 for five pollutants and through 1988 for ozone.

The pollutants examined by the report were sulfur dioxide, a source of acid rain which also can cause lung damage; carbon monoxide, which can seriously affect the heart and brain; nitrogen dioxide, which contributes to bronchitis and pneumonia; ambient lead, which can cause brain and nervous system damage; ozone, which can damage eyes, mucous membranes and respiratory systems; and suspended particulates that cause breathing problems.

The EPA report called ozone pollution "clearly ... the most pervasive air pollution problem in 1987 for the United States" with 88.6 million people living in counties where the pollutant exceeded federal standards. Ozone is a prime component of smog.

Last year the EPA listed 66 areas of the country where ozone levels were considered unhealthy and "early indications are that about 30 additional areas may eventually join the list," said the EPA.

Ozone is the product of a complex series of chemical reactions in which organic compounds mix with nitrogen oxide emissions, mostly from automobiles, and are exposed to sunlight.

Here are the EPA assessments covering the five other pollutants:

—Carbon monoxide: Levels in the air were cut by 32 percent since 1978 and 6 percent from 1986 to 1987, but actual emissions were slightly higher in 1987 than the previous year. The increase was blamed on forest fires.

But an estimated 29.4 million people continue to live in counties where carbon monoxide levels exceed federal standards. While the highest concentration during an eight-hour period in 1987 was found in New York City, 21 metropolitan areas in all exceeded the federal standards.

—Sulfur dioxide: Levels in the air were cut 35 percent since 1978 and 3 percent in 1987 from the previous year. Almost all regions of the country fell within federal standards for sulfur dioxide. The exception was Pittsburgh, where a monitoring site reported levels higher than the EPA considers healthy in a region with 1.6 million people.

—Nitrogen dioxide: Levels have been reduced by 12 percent since 1978, but ambient levels showed no change during the last year of the study period. Emissions of nitrogen dioxide actually increased slightly from 1986 to 1987.

Levels are relatively high in the Northeast, but the Los Angeles area with a population of more than 7.5 million is the only region in the country where ambient nitrogen dioxide exceeds federal standards.

Texas Executes Convicted Killer

The Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE, Texas — A 44-year-old man was executed by injection early today for murdering a man nearly 11 years ago by smashing his head repeatedly with a shotgun butt during a robbery that netted $11.50.

Leon King, showed little emotion as he received lethal injection for the death of 26-year-old Michael Clayton Underwood, whose girlfriend was repeatedly raped and sodomized during the April 1978 attack, according to court records.

"I appreciate what you did for me," King told five friends witnessing the execution. "I love you all. God bless."

He closed his eyes and sighed as the drugs began to take hold.

He was declared dead at 12:27 a.m., 10 minutes after the injection began.

"It's about time," said Doug

Shaver, who prosecuted King's case and is now a judge in Houston.

"If anyone deserves the death penalty, it's him," said Shaver, adding that King had never expressed remorse for the killing.

King became the third person executed this year in the United States and the 107th since the U.S. Supreme Court's 1976 ruling that allowed states to resume capital punishment. He was the 30th inmate to be put to death in Texas, which has executed more people than any other state since the mid-1970s.

On Tuesday, King lost last-minute appeals before a federal district judge, a federal appeals court in New Orleans and the U.S. Supreme Court. His attorneys contended that King suffered from organic brain damage.

King was convicted and sentenced to death twice in Underwood's slaying. His accomplice, Allen Ray Carter, is serving a life prison term.

EPA Wants Fruit Pesticide Banned

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — A division of the Environmental Protection Agency, raising new concerns about risks posed by chemicals in children's diets, has recommended banning the use of an acutely toxic insecticide on potatoes and bananas, agency officials said Tuesday.

The recommendation, currently under review at the agency, was based on a study that found residues of the insecticide, aldicarb, in the two crops in quantities that researchers feared might endanger the health of infants and children.

The highest level of aldicarb found in the study was only one-fifth the level EPA says poses a health hazard, and the agency reported no evidence that ill-effects had actually occurred.

Nevertheless, EPA researchers, adopting a cautious standard, concluded that the risks of using the insecticide "exceed the benefits when aldicarb is used on bananas and potatoes."

There are fears that aldicarb could cause adverse effects in concentrations below the acceptable level, the scientists indicated. They said they found aldicarb residues in some potatoes in quantities sufficient to potentially cause stomach cramps, headache, nausea and irritability in children.

Their report estimated that 15,000 to 50,000 infants and children a day are exposed to enough aldicarb to present a risk of illness from eating potatoes, and said bananas presented a risk for as many as 1,500 small children.

A spokesman for Rhone-Poulenc, which manufactures the pesticide, criticized the report for focusing on "hypothetical margins of safety."

"There has never been a case of illness resulting from ingestion of these crops," said the spokesman, Mary Anne Ford.

The EPA declined to release a copy of the report, which was submitted to deputy administrator John A. Moore on Jan. 18. Officials said the methodology used by the researchers in the special review and reregistration branch of the pesticide division must be evaluated before the agency can judge whether the pesticide posed a "dietary risk."

Dupree Dies At 63

He acted as consultant to the U.S. National Security Council, the Department of State, the Central Intelligence Agency, the U.S. Information Agency, the United Nations Commission on Refugees, various committees of the U.S. Congress and scores of private organizations concerned with Afghanistan.

Dupree received three academic degrees from Harvard University, including a doctorate in 1955. He served during World War II, first as a merchant seaman, then as an officer in the 11th Airborne Division in the Philippines campaign and the occupation of Japan.

Dupree began his research in Central and South Asia in 1949 and from 1959-83 represented the American Universities field staff in Afghanistan and Pakistan. Under this program, he spent two of every three years in Afghanistan and Pakistan researching and writing and every third year lecturing at each of the 12 universities in the United States which sponsored AUF.

As director of the American Archeological Mission to Afghanistan from 1959 to 1978, he conducted several excavations sponsored by American institutions like the American Museum of Natural History, the Wenner-Gren Foundation for Anthropological Research, the American Philosophical Society, the National Science Foundation, and the National Endowment for the Humanities. His excavations on upper paleolithic sites at Aq Kupruk in northern Afghanistan won worldwide acclaim.

Prior to his AUF appointment, Dupree taught at Air University at Maxwell AFB, Ala., from 1953-1957, where he was awarded the Air Force Commendation Medal for Meritorious Civilian Achievement. In 1957, he accepted an appointment in anthropology at Pennsylvania State University, where he continued to hold an adjunct professorship.

He taught as a visiting professor at Kabul University in Afghanistan, at Princeton University and at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, where he received the Outstanding Civilian Service Medal.

In addition, he was a faculty associate with the Columbia University seminar in the archeology of the Eastern Mediterranean, Eastern Europe and the Near East.

He participated in field work in Afghanistan, Pakistan, Iran, France, Mexico, Puerto Rico, Panama and Libya and served as consultant to the State Department, the Agency for International Development, the Peace Corps, Esso Pakistan Fertilizer Co., United Nations Development Program and UNESCO and UNHCR, the World Bank, Helsinki Watch and Amnesty International.

He was the writer and co-editor of two books on Afghanistan, plus three others books, 13 monographs, and more than 200 articles, reviews and chapters in such many publications.

At the time of his death, he and his wife, Nancy Hatch Dupree, were writing a book funded by a Ford Foundation grant on the Afghan refugees in Pakistan. He was also working on a book on the war inside Afghanistan.

Duke University James B. Duke professor Ralph Braibanti, director of the Islamic and Arabian development studies program, said, "As soon as the Duprees arrived at Duke Islamic Center, it became the interational focal point for Afghanistan. A steady stream of Afghan visitors, European and U.S. government officials, newspaper and television reporters, called on Dupree and his wife.

"I have never known either one to turn down a request for advice, interviews, or a lecture.

"Despite this whirlwind of international activity, Professor Dupree was scrupulous in meeting his responsibilities as a teacher. He counseled for hours his students, both at Duke and UNC, as well as West Point cadets and graduate students from other universities.

"No work on Afghanistan would be possible without referring to Professor Dupree's monumental work of 760 pages first published by Princeton University Press in 1973 and reissued several times. He became the preeminent authority on that country years before most of the world was aware of its existence."

Besides his wife, Dupree is survived by two daughters, Julie Gill of St. Thomas, Canada, and Sally Dupree of Connecticut; a son, Fred Dupree of California, and four grandchildren.

Memorial donations may be sent to the International Rescue Committee marked for Afghanistan Programs, Attention Roy Williams, 386 Park Avenue South, New York, N.Y., 10016.

Pitt Men Draw Terms In Fire

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Two Pitt County men have been sentenced to five years in federal prison for their roles in torching the Liberty Tobacco Warehouse in Wilson in 1986.

Edmund Wayne Hart, a former Ayden resident, and Ronnie Lee Stocks of Route 2, Ayden, were both sentenced Tuesday by Judge Terrence Boyle in Federal District Court in Elizabeth City, Assistant U.S. Attorney Kieran J. Shanahan said.

Stocks, who is scheduled to face pending drug charges in Pitt County next week, and Hart were key witnesses last month in federal court in Raleigh in the arson and fraud trial of Greenville businessmen J.T. Worthington Sr. and his son, J.T. "Tommy" Worthington Jr. Hart pleaded guilty to arson and Stocks pleaded guilty to conspiring to burn the warehouse, and both men agreed to testify for the government.

The younger Worthington, the warehouse manager, was convicted on 56 of 57 charges and could be sentenced to over 200 years in prison and face more than $10 million in fines. Prosecutors claimed he ordered the warehouse burned to cover up the fact that he had taken more than $600,000 from the warehouse and invested it in failing businesses in Greenville.

The senior Worthington, part owner of the warehouse, was cleared of arson charges but found guilty on one count of fraud.

Stocks testified that the late Harvey Bowen of Ayden, a major customer of the warehouse, hired him on behalf of the Worthingtons to burn the building. In turn, Stocks said he hired Hart to burn the warehouse.

Stocks described himself as a paid arsonist-and said he had been involved in other burnings for Bowen, who died in early 1988 while under federal investigation. Stocks said he drove Hart to the Wilson warehouse and picked him up after the fire was set.

On the witness stand, Hart said he started the fire using paper cups stuffed with towels soaked in lighter fluid. He testified that he moved to Methuen, Mass., after the fire because too many Pitt residents were aware of his role in the blaze.

In separate cases pending in Pitt County, Stocks is charged with six counts of possessing, selling and delivering marijuana and three counts of possessing stolen property in connection with 1987 and 1988 cases. His cases are set for trial on Tuesday, but Pitt County District Attorney Tom Haigwood said he has not been told whether Stocks will be transported to Greenville for court.

Haigwood has said he has no plans to drop the local charges and any plea agreement Stocks had with federal authorities is not related to the Pitt cases.

After Stocks failed to appear for court dates in July and August of 1988, a Superior Court judge revoked his bond and issued an order for his arrest. When he failed to appear again Nov. 1, Haigwood said Shanahan informed him that Stocks was in protective custody of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and would be available to face local charges after the federal trial was completed.

Stocks testified that he feared for his life after agreeing to cooperate with the investigation because he believed Bowen would have killed him for acting as a government informant.

Shanahan said Stocks missed the previous court dates because of a lack of communication between federal and local authorities.

Rose's Place In Game In Doubt

Investigation By Major League Baseball Office, GQ Article Have Put Public Spotlight On Reds' Manager

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pete Rose's reputation is in tatters, his place in the game he loves in doubt.

In two days since major league baseball announced he's under investigation, the Cincinnati Reds' manager has become the eye of a storm of allegations about his gambling, his finances and his parenting.

Rose took refuge behind an armed guard in the team's clubhouse on Tuesday before a spring training game in Florida, declining comment on an array of reports.

The most serious allegations, contained in this week's Sports Illustrated, could drive Rose from the game if proven accurate. The magazine reported in this week's issue that Rose is accused of betting on baseball and could be banned from the game if the charge is proven during an investigation being conducted by the office of baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth.

The Dayton Daily News reported today that Rose is selling off his baseball memorabilia, and is under investigation by federal authorities in Cincinnati looking into his gambling and taxes.

And Gentlemen's Quarterly printed an article in which Rose's children say he was a poor parent, and his former wife is quoted as saying Rose didn't pay his gambling debts — a statement she later denied.

Although Rose was ducking the allegations, his players and team owner Marge Schott were publicly hoping the storm would die out before Opening Day.

"I don't know what's going on," third baseman Chris Sabo said. "We just go and play and hope it all works out very soon. It's very unfortunate. Let's hope it's not serious."

Schott, in Washington for a luncheon, indicated she could fire Rose if he's found guilty of the allegations.

"We don't need this," she said. "Opening Day is coming up. This is a big concern. It could be a complete disruption. I hope this is all nothing serious."

How serious is something being weighed by Ueberroth and Commissioner-elect A. Bartlett Giamatti, who issued the statement Monday saying Rose was the subject of "serious allegations." The nature of the allegations hasn't been confirmed.

While the storm swirled around him, Rose went to the Reds' exhibition game Tuesday afternoon against St. Louis in St. Petersburg, Fla. He walked past reporters and into the clubhouse, which was blocked by a uniformed, armed guard. The clubhouse usually is open to reporters.

Cincinnati Reds manager Pete Rose under investigation

Gambling Nearly Ruined Baseball In Darkest Hour

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Baseball's darkest hour, the 1919 Black Sox scandal, nearly ruined the game and forever instilled in baseball officials a deathly fear of gamblers.

While very little is written in baseball's rules against gambling, association with known gamblers has resulted in numerous suspensions and, in some cases, lifetime banishments.

Now, Cincinnati Reds manager Pete Rose is under investigation by Commissioner Peter Ueberroth's office for "serious allegations" that could, according to one source, result in his suspension. The commissioner won't say what the allegations are, but it looks like gambling.

It may not be known for weeks whether anything comes from the investigation, but if Rose runs afoul of the commissioner, he won't be the first.

The names of those suspended for gambling-related indiscretions read like a who's who: Shoeless Joe Jackson, Leo Durocher, Denny McLain, Willie Mays, Mickey Mantle, and more. They all felt the sting of baseball's fear of gambling.

The exact nature of any transgressions Rose may have committed is not known, but he is known to be an avid horse player. Although he denies it, he also reportedly likes to bet on college basketball games, and one published report said he owed substantial gambling debts for which he was visited by a dead fish.

Horse playing is not specifically against baseball's rules. Neither is betting on college basketball, although in all states but Nevada it's illegal if done through a local bookmaker.

Baseball's only written guideline on gambling is section 21-d of the Major League Rules which prohibits betting on baseball games.

"Of course, you understand the commissioner has broad powers to act in the best interests of the game," said Rich Levin, a spokesman for the commissioner's office.

In 1919, baseball was still young, not yet the multimillion dollar business it would later become. But it was popular and getting moreso, until the Black Sox scandal.

The Cincinnati Reds beat the Chicago White Sox in nine games, and it was later discovered that some of the White Sox tried to fix the games for gamblers. Responding to public pressure and fears that the game's reputation would never recover, Commissioner Kenesaw

Foe's Experience Could Be Key

In Chocowinity's Drive For The State 1-A Basketball Championship

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

CHAPEL HILL — Experience may be the only difference separating the two finalists in the girls' state high school basketball championships.

Chocowinity faces Hayesville Saturday at 2 p.m. for the title game in Carmichael Auditorium at the University of North Carolina. The Lady Indians bring a 26-3 record into the game, while the Lady Yellow Jackets are 26-2.

A key to the Hayesville squad, however, is that it is the defending state champions.

"Of course since they've been there before it helps," Chocowinity coach Larry Knox said. "But we played under pressure in Fayetteville (in the regionals) and we know what it is like now to travel and be in a pressure game."

also tries to play down the effect of being the defending state champions.

"I don't know that in a game like this that it helps," McClure said. "It never gets easier. It would be hard to say that it is easier for us to go into the game. If we had everybody back from last year's team then maybe it would be, but we lost two players that are now Division I college players from that team."

"It's a surprise to me that we made it back," McClure said. "I don't think you ever think that you can make it two years in a row. Over the last four or five years, we've thought that we were good enough to make it and we've been fortunate enough to make it the last two years."

The Lady Indians will rely heavily on the scoring of Chrylene Meyers in the game. Meyers averages 17.2 points per game for Chocowinity, which has won 22 out of its last 23 games.

The three-time defending Tobacco Belt champions also will look from help from senior point guard Wendy Dixon and 5-10 center Drusilla Crawford, who averages 10.5 rebounds per game.

"We're going to have to have a good game from Meyers," Knox said. "Everybody on the team has got to concentrate more than they did in the last game (a one-point overtime win over Midway in the regional finals). We just weren't concentrating at the free throw line (the Lady Indians hit only 13-33 attempts in the game)."

The Lady Yellow Jackets are led by Smoky Mountain Conference Player of the Year Jeanne Coker and three-time all-conference performer Laura Thurman. Coker averages 19.5 points and 9.1 rebounds per game and Thurman adds an additional 18 points per contest. Christy Cagle is the other threat for the Lady Yellow Jackets, averaging 8.8 rebounds and 6.5 assists per game. Cagle hit a 3-point shot in the regional finals to lift Hayesville past East Wilkes and into the title game.

"We've got three pretty good players I think," McClure said. "I guess we'll find out how good they are come Saturday."

Hayesville has combined for a 78-4 record over the past three years and was riding a 46 game regular-season winning streak until a loss to Cherokee earlier this season.

The Lady Yellow Jackets are averaging 71 points per game offensively, while limiting their opponents to only 44.

"We're a very fast-paced team," McClure said. "We like to run the fast break and press a lot on defense. We like to believe that we win with our defense. We're not a halfcourt offensive team and that's been our forte over the past four or five years. We always like to have a fast-paced game."

Pirates Top Senators, 9-3

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Former Greenville Rose pitcher Tom Moye got his first start of the year in an East Carolina uniform Tuesday and hurled seven innings of shutout baseball and the Pirates went on to take a 9-3 victory over Davis & Elkins College.

The two had been scheduled to play a doubleheader at Harrington Field, but ground conditions and rain forced the rescheduling of the series into a single contest — and there were times when it seemed that even the one game might not be completed.

But the teams played through the rain and got in the full nine innings.

Moye, a freshman, went the first seven innings of the game before finally tiring and giving way to another former Rose teammate, Dallas McPherson. McPherson got through the eighth without damage, but ran into trouble in the ninth, allowing three unearned runs by the Senators.

Even then, however, the Pirates had the game well in hand.

"Tom Moye threw a very fine game," Pirate coach Gary Overton said. "I'm very pleased with his effort. Dallas would have done better if not for the error behind him and some mental mistakes on our part."

Moye gave up five hits, but never more than one in an inning. He walked two and struck out seven. McPherson gave up one hit, walked four and struck out one in his two innings.

Playing against the NAIA school gave the Pirates the opportunity to "start some guys who are not front-line players," Overton said. Four of the starters were not among the usual starters, and another was playing in a different position.

The Pirates started the scoring in the first inning, getting a couple of runs. Kevin Riggs led off with a walk and Chris Cauble doubled him to third. Calvin Brown then followed with a two-run single for the 2-0 lead.

A double play in the second after the Pirates had loaded the bases with none out helped the Senators from falling further behind as they kept the Pirates off the scoreboard in that frame.

But in the third, ECU added another run. Cauble led off with a walk and courtesy runner John Thomas stole second. He also stole third and when the ball got past the catcher on the play, he dashed on home to make it 3-0.

Brown slapped the ball out of the park to lead off the fifth inning for the Pirates, making it 4-0. It was Brown's fifth homer of the year.

The Pirates put it away in the sixth with five more runs, upping the lead to 9-0. David Ritchie led off with a single to right and Tommy Boswell got a hit to the other side. Riggs

Two Win Grants From NCHSAA

Two area student-athletes, Michael Moore of J.H. Rose High School and Wendy Dixon of Chocowinity High School, have been named winners of North Carolina High School Athletic Association scholarships.

One male and one female athlete are chosen from each of the NCHSAA's eight regions and each will receive a $750 scholarship. The program is sponsored by WRAL-TV and WRAL-FM of Raleigh and WJZY-TV of Charlotte, three members of the Capitol Broadcasting Co.

The 16 regional winners will be further screened by a statewide selection committee and an overall male and female winner for an additional $750 will be chosen. Those two will be honored during the annual meeting of the NCHSAA in May.

Moore, a senior at Rose, is the son of Mrs. Marsha Moore of 203 S. Warren St. He is participating in track this year, throwing the shot and discus. Moore won the Big East Conference discus championship last year, his second year of high school competition. He has also won three ribbons and two gold medals in Junior Olympic competition, was second place in the discus in the Colonial Capital Classic in New Bern last year, and received the E.B. Aycock Junior High School Principal's Award as a freshman, presented for excellence in academics and athletics.

He also participated in football at Rose as a sophomore and junior.

Moore, who has a 3.98 grade point average, plans to attend N.C. State, where he will study architectural design.

"It's great," Moore said of the scholarship. "I wasn't really expecting anything like this, but it's a very welcome thing."

Dixon, a senior at Chocowinity, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Dixon of Rt. 2, Chocowinity. She plays volleyball, basketball and softball for the Lady Indians. She has competed in volleyball three years, and in basketball and softball for four years, counting this season. She is a starter on the Eastern Regional 1-A basketball champions who will play for the state title in Chapel Hill Saturday.

In softball, she has been all conference for three years, leading the team in hitting as a freshman and sophomore. She was also the team's Rookie of the Year as a freshman.

Dixon has a 3.7 grade point average, and will attend UNC-Wilmington in the fall, where she anticipates studying special education.

"I was really excited (to learn of the grant). It means a lot to me. Sports has meant a lot to me in high school, and I just couldn't believe it."

Pirates Practice In The Rain

Despite the rainy conditions, East Carolina head football coach Bill Lewis led the Pirates through a two-and-a-half hour practice Tuesday, continuing to stress the fundamentals of football.

"I explained to the players that this is the kind of practice that we need," Lewis said. "When working under these conditions, you don't have control of the elements of the game, and so you must take whatever you can get, learn to perform well and win."

Going through drills as if it were perfect weather, Lewis said that his staff didn't change anything about their normal practice format.

"It's the kind of thing you can't let disrupt the way you want things done, so we're not worried about the weather."

Tuesday's session was the second of 20 allowed by the NCAA, including the annual Purple-Gold game, which will be held on April 22.

Lewis said that the Pirates accomplished many positive things at practice and expects them to continue at their next practice today.

E. Carteret Downs Farmville Netters

PINE KNOLL SHORES — East Carteret High School rolled to a 5-0 victory over Farmville Central in a rain-shortened tennis match Tuesday at Pine Knoll Shores.

The Mariners had little trouble in the match, allowing Farmville only nine games in the 10 sets played.

Only the number one, two, four, five and six singles were completed in the match before rain washed it out.

East Carteret is now 3-0 while Farmville falls to 0-2. The Jaguars are scheduled to host Southern Nash at Farmville today.

Summary:
Brian Halstead (EC) d. Tommy Murphy, 6-0, 6-0; Don Williams (EC) d. Matt Mills, 6-0, 6-3; Doug Varner (EC) d. Darrell Case, 6-0, 6-2; Travis Garner (EC) d. Carney Hedgpath, 6-0, 6-0; Steven Willis (EC) d. Gary Robinson, 6-2, 6-2.

Rain Washes Out High School Action

Rains Tuesday forced the postponement of a number of high school sports activities in the area.

Among those postponed, and their new scheduled dates, if known, are: Jamesville at Chocowinity baseball and softball (April 7); Rose at Eastern Wayne baseball (Thursday); Rose at New Bern softball; Ayden-Grifton at Kinston baseball (today); Rosewood at North Pitt baseball; West Craven at Farmville Central baseball, and Conley at Williamston baseball (Friday).

No reports were received of other games scheduled Tuesday.

Agassi Upset In First Round

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — Third-seeded Andre Agassi lost to West German Carl-Uwe Steeb in the first round of the $2.1 million International Players Championship.

Other men's winners were No. 1 Ivan Lendl; No. 2 Mats Wilander; No. 4 Jimmy Connors; No. 5 Jakob Hlasek; No. 8 Miloslav Mecir; and No. 9 Guillermo Perez-Roldan. For the women, No. 1 Gabriela Sabatini; No. 2 Chris Evert; No. 3 Helena Sukova; and No. 4 Pam Shriver advanced, while No. 7 Barbara Potter withdrew because of back spasms.

Tim Mayotte, the sixth seed, was the second top rated player to lose, falling to Australian Kelly Evernden.

76ers, Gminski Agree On A Contract

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers and center Mike Gminski have reached agreement on a contract to guarantee he won't test his value as an unrestricted free agent after this season.

The four-year deal was finalized by team owner Harold Katz and by Gminski's attorney, Larry Fleisher, and forwarded to the NBA office for approval, according to the Philadelphia Inquirer. The club has an option on a fifth season.

According to the Inquirer, the agreement is believed to be worth $7 million, with Gminski's salary increasing each year and making him potentially the highest paid player in 76ers history.

ACC Finds NCAA Tournament Lucrative

RALEIGH (AP) — Atlantic Coast Conference schools could earn more than prestige from having six teams invited to the NCAA basketball tournament — they could earn up to $5.25 million.

When six ACC teams were chosen for the tournament, it amounted to an immediate windfall of $1.5 million because the NCAA pays out $250,000 to each of the 64 teams in the field. And each victory is worth an additional $250,000 until the Final Four.

Under ACC bylaws, league teams participating in the first round pocket the initial payoff for expenses, said ACC assistant commissioner Skeeter Francis. After that, the participating team keeps 70 percent and the other ACC schools divide the remaining 30 percent.

Each of the four ACC teams left has earned at least $750,000 for itself and the rest of the league schools by reaching the regional semifinals. If all four were to lose this week, they would each keep $250,000 off the top and 70 percent of the remaining $500,000, or $350,000.

Charges Against Clemson Players Reduced

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — A Pickens County magistrate has reduced the charges against two Clemson football players in connection with a campus fight in January.

Magistrate Steve Gravley of Clemson said Monday he reduced the aggravated assault charges to simple assault and battery against sophomore Charles O'Brien and freshman Curtis Whitley in connection with the scuffle in the Sloan Street Tap Room on Jan. 17. Gravley then sent the case to Clemson Municipal Court.

The reduced charges are misdemeanors: Simple assault carries a maximum penalty of $200 or 30 days in jail and is heard in municipal court.

Candelaria Spring Plagued By A Bad Knee

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — New York Yankees starter John Candelaria, whose knee injury has ruined his spring training, doesn't think he deserves to be the Opening Day pitcher, but he insists he'll be ready at the start of the season.

"I'll be okay this whole year," the 35-year-old left-hander said Monday. "What happens after this year, I don't know. I'm not a doctor." Candelaria, who has not pitched since March 5 because of a painfully swelled right knee, was scheduled to work three innings Tuesday night against the Baltimore Orioles. He pitched against the Orioles in his only outing this spring, allowing a hit in three scoreless innings.

Astros Pick Up Twins' Lombardozi

KISSIMMEE, Fla. (AP) — The Houston Astros acquired second baseman Steve Lombardozi from the Minnesota Twins Tuesday for a player to be named later.

Lombardozi hit .209 in 103 games for the Twins last season and drove in 27 runs. Lombardozi, 27, led all hitters with a .412 average for the Twins in the 1987 World Series. He has a .233 career average in three seasons with Minnesota.

Astros regular season baseman Bill Doran is recovering from arthroscopic knee surgery March 7.

Doran suffered through a series of injuries last season, including back spasms and underwent off-season shoulder surgery.

Possible Steroid Substitute Discovered

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A new form of chromium could help athletes beef up their bodies without dangerous anabolic steroids, enable diabetics to use less insulin and cut cholesterol, a researcher said Tuesday.

Gary Evans, a chemistry professor at Bemidji State University in Minnesota discussed the possible benefits of "chromium picolinate" during a meeting of the Federation of the American Societies for Experimental Biology.

Two studies at Bemidji State found that the compound "bulked up" muscle and cut down body fat, he said. In one study, football players on the same exercise programs took either chromium picolinate or a placebo.

Lakers Struggle, Jordan Thrives

Jordan Dishes Out 16 Assists, Leads Way As Bulls Take 104-103 Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Los Angeles Lakers are struggling at home after five years of nearly uninterrupted success, and Michael Jordan continues to thrive as a point guard.

Jordan tied a career high with 16 assists and scored 21 points, including two free throws with 48 seconds left that gave the Chicago Bulls a 104-103 victory over the Lakers on Tuesday night.

Despite having just five home losses this season, it was the second time the Lakers lost two straight at home. They went into 1988-89 with no back-to-back home losses since the 1983-84 season.

"We're dying in the fourth quarter when we should be enthusiastic," Lakers coach Pat Riley said. "We're just not getting the job done. I don't have an explanation. We were 4-1 on our road trip and blowing out people."

The Lakers, 45-20 overall, have not lost more than 20 games in a season since 1983-84, but they would have to win their last 17 this time to keep that streak going.

"A pattern is developing," Riley said. "We're not showing strength or toughness in the fourth quarter. I don't like it."

In other NBA games, it was Indiana 92, New Jersey 89; Detroit 110, Atlanta 95; Milwaukee 98, Boston 86; Denver 112, Houston 110; Seattle 101, Utah 96, and Golden State 151, Portland 127.

Chicago led 102-93 with 2:42 left before the Lakers scored nine consecutive points to tie the score with 1:03 remaining.

After Jordan's two free throws, Magic Johnson missed the second of two free throws with 37 seconds left, making it 104-103. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar missed a 14-foot sky hook that was rebounded by Chicago's

Abdul-Jabbar fouled Cartwright with one second left, but he missed both free throws. Byron Scott's 3-point attempt from the corner at the buzzer hit the rim and bounced away.

Jordan, who has double figures in assists in five of six games as a point guard, was joined with 21 points by teammates Craig Hodges and Scottie Pippen. Johnson had 20 points and Scott 17 for the Lakers.

"This was a great game for us because we started an unbelievable road trip," Chicago coach Collins said. "Our defense in the second half was superb. Jordan had an excellent game. People don't realize how good his defense is. He makes everyone around him play better."

"This is the first time we've beaten a good club on the road in a long time and that's why it's a big win."

"We were mentally prepared to play from the beginning and we got off to a great start," Jordan said, referring to Chicago's 11-4 lead. "We let them back in the game, but we kept our poise and fought to the end. They made it tough for me to get off a shot, but that enabled me to distribute the ball and our guys hit the big shots when necessary."

Pistons 110, Hawks 95
Detroit also had a big road victory, winning at Atlanta as Isiah Thomas scored 18 of his 26 points in the first quarter as the Pistons built an 18-point lead.

Thomas scored 12 points in a 19-4 spurt as the Pistons built a 27-11 lead seven minutes into the game. Thomas made his first six shots and Detroit 13 of its first 16 to take a 31-13 lead on Mark Aguirre's dunk with 3:20 left in the period.

Detroit stretched its lead to 21 points twice in the second quarter before Spud Webb, who finished with a season-high 21 points on 10-for-11 shooting from the field, sparked a rally. Webb helped Atlanta cut the deficit to 72-66 in the third quarter before the Pistons took control again with a 17-4 run.

Moses Malone scored 20 points and Dominique Wilkins, who hit three of 18 shots, added 18 for the Hawks.

Sonics 101, Jazz 96
Seattle welcomed Coach Bernie Bickerstaff back to bench as Dale Ellis scored 31 points against Utah, including three free throws with nine seconds left.

Bickerstaff missed six games, five of them losses, after being hospitalized for a bleeding ulcer.

Ellis was 1-for-12 from the field in the second half, but the first two of his late free throws gave the Sonics a 98-94 lead.

After the Jazz turned the ball over on an inbounds violation, Karl Malone was called for a delay of game technical foul. Ellis hit the free throw for a five-point advantage, and Xavier McDaniel then made two more free throws with eight seconds remaining to clinch the game.

Malone led Utah with 29 points, Thurl Bailey scored 24 and John Stockton had 21 points and 14 assists.

Warriors 151, Trail Blazers 127
Golden State scored 50 points in the fourth quarter, its third 50-point quarter of the season after playing 42 seasons without one.

Mitch Richmond scored 29 points, Terry Teagle 28, Chris Mullin 26 and Otis Smith 23 in the Warriors' fourth straight victory.

Mullin scored 10 straight Warriors points in a span of 1:25 early in the fourth period to cap a 12-4 run after the Trail Blazers pulled within three. Golden State's Manute Bol followed with two 3-point shots as the Warriors continued to pull away.

Clyde Drexler led Portland with 39 points, including 17 in the first quarter. Terry Porter added 24 points.

Bucks 98, Celtics 86
The Bucks beat Boston for the eighth consecutive time in Milwaukee as Terry Cummings scored 21 points, including 13 in the third quarter.

Jack Sikma's basket gave the Bucks a 65-56 lead with 4:30 to go in the third quarter, but a 13-2 run gave Boston a 69-67 lead with 56 seconds left in the period. Two baskets by Cummings and a jumper by Ricky Pierce gave the Bucks a 73-69 lead going into the final period, and the Celtics got no closer than three points in the fourth quarter.

Reggie Lewis led Boston with 22 points and Robert Parish added 17, while Sikma finished with 18 points for Milwaukee.

Nuggets 112, Rockets 110
Alex English scored 29 of his 37 points in the second half, including 18 in the third quarter as Denver won at Houston.

Michael Adams added 20 points for the Nuggets and hit two 3-point shots at critical times in the fourth period.

Akeem Olajuwon had 36 points and 23 rebounds for the Rockets, while Otis Thorpe followed with 21 points.

By scoring Houston's first eight points of the final period, Thorpe tied the game at 90-90 with 8:44 to go, but English had 11 of Denver's last 19 points to seal the victory as Olajuwon missed two jump shots in the last 11 seconds.

Pacers 92, Nets 89
Indiana handed New Jersey its eighth straight loss, with Detlef Schrempf's off-balance 10-footer with 53 seconds remaining, putting Indiana ahead for good.

A layup by Vern Fleming gave the Pacers insurance with seven seconds left after they lost a 16-point lead.

There were four lead changes in the final 2:52, with Roy Hinson giving the Nets their final edge, 89-88, with 1:11 left.

Chuck Person had 24 points for the Pacers, and Chris Morris topped New Jersey with 17.

Inductions Near For Racing Hall

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Bill France Sr., the founder of NASCAR and a pioneer in stock car racing, long has wanted a way to honor motorsports leaders, and he is close to getting his wish.

Don Naman said that when France hired him in 1970 to run the Talladega Superspeedway, "he said we need a facility to preserve the tradition of our sport. He foresaw it 19 years ago, and now it's about to come true. This was my number one goal. It was terrible that we weren't having anyone inducted."

A year ago, Naman took over as director of the International Motorsports Hall of Fame and Museum adjacent to the track east of Birmingham and his first goal was to have a hall of fame.

State Sen. Gerald Dial of Lineville, chairman of the hall of fame, said at a news conference Tuesday that mechanics have been worked out for the selection of the first group of inductees July 25 of next year.

Memorabilia will be housed in a building to be erected at the site of the museum.

The hall of fame, Dial said, "will recognize those who have contributed so much to motorsports. It also will fulfill the dream of the museum's founder, Bill France Sr., to preserve for future generations the history of motorsports and the story of the people who made it happen."

About 20 people will be inducted next year. Later inductees will be selected the same way people are chosen for the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y., with a nominee needing 75 percent of the votes to be inducted.

The voting will be done by an international group of people who cover racing.

"The hall of fame will be a tremendous milestone in our sport," Naman said. "It will cover every type of motor racing known to man, with people from the entire world being inducted."

Although no ballot has been prepared, names mentioned at the news conference included France himself, Barney Oldfield, Henry Ford, Lee Petty and Sir Richard Campbell, with current racers becoming eligible after they retire. One of the first of those will be Richard Petty, Lee's son.

An induction banquet will be held in Birmingham each year the week before the Talladega 500.

Naman said there are a number of other racing halls of fame, but that none of them covers all forms of motor racing, whereas the one in Alabama will be for "stocks, sports cars, Indy cars, Formula One, drags, boats, motorcycles, all of it."

walked to load the bases. John Adams' grounder to first was thrown to home for the force, but the ball was in the dirt and Ritchie scored on the misplay. Cauble then followed with a two-run double and Mike Andrews singled, driving in the other two.

Davis & Elkins never got a runner past first base until the seventh inning when Moye gave up a one-out double to David Leonard and then walked the next batter. A wild pitch moved both up, but Moye then struck out the next two batters to end the inning.

But in the ninth, the Senators pushed over three runs. With one away, Leonard walked and moved upon a passed ball. Paul Swartz reached when his fly ball to right was dropped. Phil Mele walked, loading the bases and Lloyd Heckle hit a sacrifice fly to score Leonard. Brad Kane singled in Swartz and a pair of walks, to Mark Blazier and Fred Inter forced over Mele. McPherson then struck out Brian Anderson to end the game.

Cauble, Brown and Boswell each had two hits for the Pirates, while Leonard and Blazier each had a pair for the Senators.

The win boosts the Pirates to 13-2 on the year while Davis & Elkins falls to 0-5.

"The last couple of weeks, we've played about as well as we can," Overton said. "Except for a few errors, the James Madison series was almost flawless. The (N.C.) State game got us going and it's carried over since then."

The Pirates are scheduled to play Hartford today at 3 p.m. at Hartford Field.

Mets Giving The Rest Of NL East Some Optimism

By Jim Donaghy
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The New York Mets are giving the rest of the National League East reason to feel optimistic this spring.

The Mets have been hit with several nagging injuries and Manager Davey Johnson has accused his team of being lethargic.

"We're behind in our conditioning and our skills," Johnson said. "There hasn't been enough work done here: not enough extra running, extra BP (batting practice), extra stretching."

In fact, the only thing extra the Mets have had is trouble.

The biggest problem the Mets face heading into a new season is the tension in their clubhouse.

Some players are unhappy about where they play and others are grumbling because they don't play enough.

All-Star right fielder Darryl Strawberry has an uneasy truce with co-captains Keith Hernandez and Gary Carter and keeps saying he wants out after the 1990 season.

Montreal has added right-hander Kevin Gross and Pittsburgh's youngsters are hungry after tasting a pennant chase in 1988.

"The Mets are the best team in the division," Expos manager Buck Rodgers said. "The other clubs just have to stay close and hope something happens."

Something may well happen, but the Mets will probably win anyway followed by the Expos, Pirates, Cardinals, Cubs and Phillies.

New York Mets

On offense, the Mets have very little over any team in the NL East but hardly any team in baseball can match the rotation of Dwight Gooden (18-9, 3.19 ERA), Ron Darling (17-9, 3.25), David Cone (20-3, 2.22), Bob Ojeda (10-13, 2.88) and Sid Fernandez (12-11, 3.03).

New York led the majors with a team ERA of 2.91 and allowed only 404 walks.

Despite the brilliant pitching, the Mets were only a .500 team from May 22-Aug. 21 (41-41).

Hernandez missed two months with a hamstring pull and Carter (.242, 11 HR, 46 RBI) went 225 at-bats without a home run as years of catching are finally slowing him down. Both are in the final year of their contracts and may not be back.

Strawberry (.269, 39 HR, 101 RBI) and Kevin McReynolds (.288, 27 HR, 99 RBI) carried the offense and will have to again in 1989.

The Mets tried to trade third baseman Howard Johnson (.230, 24 HR, 68 RBI) to make room for Gregg Jefferies, but were unsuccessful. Jefferies, who wants to play third, will start the season at second. But where do Tim Lincecum, Keith Miller and Dave Magadan play?

Neither Mookie Wilson nor Len Dykstra like to be platooned in center and Dykstra has often asked to be traded.

The Mets will continue to have their share of arguments and disgruntled players. They also will have a lot of victories.

Montreal Expos

After challenging the Cardinals in 1987, the Expos slipped last season to 81-81. For a while it seemed they would give the Mets a run, too, but a nine-game losing streak ruined that possibility.

Rodgers thinks the addition of Gross (12-14) from Philadelphia and slick-fielding Spike Owen at short-stop could make the Expos serious contenders again.

This team certainly has the talent and is probably the most balanced club next to New York in the division.

Tim Raines (.270, 33 SB), Andres Galarraga (.302, 29 HR, 92 RBI), Tim Wallach (12 HR, 69 RBI) and Hubie Brooks (.279, 20 HR, 90 RBI) give the Expos a formidable heart of the order. Raines was plagued by injuries and should bounce back to his .330 pace of 1987.

Center fielder Otis Nixon and second baseman Rex Hudler started last season in the minors, but combined to steal 75 bases after their recall June 21.

The Expos had the third lowest ERA in the majors at 3.08 and may be even better this year. Gross joins a rotation of Dennis Martinez (15-13, 2.72), Bryn Smith (12-10, 3.00), 6-foot-10 rookie Randy Johnson (3-0, 2.42 ERA) and Scott Holman.

Pascual Perez (12-8, 2.44) is undergoing drug rehab and his playing status is uncertain.

In addition to his 15 victories, Martinez had 13 more starts in which he allowed three or fewer runs and didn't win.

Tim Burke (18 saves) is joined in the bullpen by Joe Hesketh, Neal Heaton, and Andy McGaffigan. Last season, Rodgers got 43 saves from eight different pitchers.

The Expos lack left-handed power and Nelson Santovena is still unproven as a regular catcher.

Pittsburgh Pirates
It seems like the second-place Pirates are coming off a super season, yet they finished 15 games behind the Mets.

In their head-to-head competition with New York last season, the Pirates lost 12 of 18 games.

Former GM Syd Thrift thought the reason was the bench, so he went out and got outfielders Gary Redus and Glenn Wilson and infielder Ken Oberkfell. Management thought he was spending too much and let Thrift go.

Thrift will be remembered for making some great deals, though.

He got outfielder Andy Van Slyke (.288, 25 HR, 100 RBI) and catcher Mike LaValliere (.261, 47 RBI) from St. Louis, and pitchers Doug Drabek (15-7) and Brian Fisher (8-10) from the New York Yankees.

Drabek is now the No. 1 starter followed by Bob Walk (12-10, 2.71), John Smiley (13-11), Mike Dunne (7-11) and Fisher. Left-hander Dave LaPoint was acquired late in the season from the White Sox and didn't stay long as he signed a free-agent contract with the Yankees.

The Bucs may have the best bullpen in the division with Jim Gott (34 saves), Jeff Robinson and Bob Kipper.

The key to the Pirates' attack is Barry Bonds (.283, 24 HR, 58 RBI) at the top of the order. He gets it going for Van Slyke and third baseman Bobby Bonilla (.274, 24 HR, 100 RBI).

St. Louis Cardinals

The Cardinals finished 25 games behind New York last season, but they are still the team the Mets fear most. Perhaps with good reason.

Three times in the 1980s the Cards went from NL champions to sub-.500 the next season. So last year's 76-86 finish must mean big things for St. Louis in 1989, right? Well, maybe.

The Cards started 1988 with an obvious power shortage and helped that problem by trading for Tom Brunansky (22 HR, 79 RBI) and Pedro Guerrero (10 HR, 65 RBI).

Still, the Cards finished last in the majors in homers with only 71. Oakland's Jose Canseco and Mark McGwire combined for 74 homers.

The top of the Cardinals' order will have Vince Coleman (81 SB), Ozzie Smith (57 SB) and Willie McGee (41 SB).

Last season, the Cards stole 234 bases to become the first team since Detroit (1909-15) to steal 200-plus bases in seven consecutive seasons.

Coleman, who has to improve on his .313 on-base percentage, Smith and McGee figure to be on base, so big seasons from Guerrero and Brunansky are a must.

Third baseman Terry Pendleton (.253, 6 HR, 53 HR) is coming off an injury-plagued season and got a late start in spring training and catcher Tony Pena has slipped defensively.

The Cards' everyday lineup matches up favorably with the Mets but they lose out on the mound, particularly now that Danny Cox is out for the season (elbow surgery).

The rotation figures to have Jose DeLeon (13-10, 3.67 ERA), Greg Mathews (4-6), Joe Magrane (5-9, 2.18 ERA), Cris Carpenter and Scott Terry. Mathews and Magrane are coming off injuries last season and Carpenter was slated for the bullpen.

The relief is strong with Todd Worrell (32 saves), Ken Dayley and newcomer Frank DiPino.

Chicago Cubs
There will be more night games at Wrigley Field this year and probably more losses for the Cubs than in 1988 when they finished 77-85.

The home team should score lots of runs in Wrigley, but don't expect much offense this year.

Endowed Scholarship

A $50,000 check has been donated to the East Carolina Pirate Club to establish an endowed scholarship in the memory of Burney Stevens, a former Pirate baseball player. The gift was given by Mrs. Jean Stevens and her family. Baseball coach Gary Overton (left) accepts the check from Burney Stevens Jr., as Stevens' wife, Kim and ECU athletic director Dave Hart Jr. look on.

1987 to 113 last year. As a team, the Cubs hit .261, but had trouble scoring runs.

Management thought Rafael Palmeiro (.307, 8 HR, 53 RBI) lacked power so he was traded to Texas for reliever Mitch Williams and starter Paul Kilgus.

The Cubs hope rookie Jerome Walton (.331 at Pittsfield) can play center, joining Andre Dawson (.303, 24 HR, 79 RBI) and Mitch Webster in the outfield.

First baseman Mark Grace hit .296, but hit only seven homers in 486 at-bats and amazingly none were at Wrigley.

The middle of the infield is strong with All-Star Ryne Sandberg (.264, 19 HR, 69 RBI) at second and slick-fielding Shawn Dunston at short.

Rick Sutcliffe, in the last year of his contract, heads a starting rotation of Greg Maddux (18-8, 3.18), the left-handed Kilgus, rookie Mike Harkey and Al Nipper. Harkey was a combined 16-4 in the minors last season, but has been hit hard in spring training.

Last year, the Cubs had 27 blown save opportunities, so strengthening the bullpen was GM Jim Frey's main goal over the winter.

Williams had 18 saves for Texas, but he allowed 6.2 walks per nine innings. Calvin Schiraldi, a hard thrower, made 27 starts last season, but will pitch in short relief this year. Aging Rich Gossage, who blew 11 save opportunities last year, is fighting for a job.

Philadelphia Phillies

At 35, Nick Leyva is the youngest manager in baseball. It's a good thing, because he will need lots of time to build this team into a winner.

In 1988, the Phillies finished last at 65-96 because the pitching was horrible (10th or worse in ERA, walks, strikeouts, saves and complete games). And, without traded top starters Shane Rawley and Kevin Gross, the numbers might be even worse this year.

The rotation shapes up as Bruce Ruffin (6-10), Don Carman (10-14) and newcomers Floyd Youmans (3-6), Ken Howell and Steve Ontiveros.

Ruffin, who is considered the ace, is having control problems and Youmans and Howell arrived at camp overweight. To make matters worse, Youmans is 1-6 lifetime in April with a 6.30 ERA.

The bullpen of Steve Bedrosian (28 saves), Jeff Parrett (12-4 with Montreal) and Greg Harris figures to get lots of work.

The Phillies will have Juan Samuel (.298, 12 HR, 67 RBI), new second baseman Tommy Herr and

Von Hayes at the top of the order, followed by Mike Schmidt and Ricky Jordan. Jordan came up from the minors at midseason and hit .308 with 11 homers and 43 RBI in only 273 at-bats. NL Rookie of the Year Chris Sabo of Cincinnati had 11 homers and 44 RBI in 538 at-bats while batting .271.

Schmidt, coming off rotator cuff surgery, still isn't certain he can play third. If he can't, he may be off to the AL as a designated hitter.

Dickie Thon (.264) takes over for Steve Jeltz at shortstop.

The Phils traded catcher Lance Parrish to California for minor-league pitcher David Holdridge and will go with Steve Lake and Darren Daulton.

Two bright prospects, Chris James (19 HR, 66 RBI) and Ron Jones (.290) will share time in the outfield.

Figure to see the Phils involved in lots of high-scoring games and usually on the losing end.

Rose agreed to meet after the game with writers who regularly cover the Reds, but would only discuss the game. His only comment on the allegations came in his daily pre-game interview with Reds broadcaster Marty Brennaman.

"Well, Marty, all I can tell you is we are cooperating with the commissioner's office, and we hope that it gets taken care of real fast, before Opening Day, so we can get down to business. And business is winning the National League West. That's all I'd like to say about that," Rose said.

The allegations dogging Rose revolve around gambling. Rose's affinity for horse and dog tracks is no secret; he has denied a report that he places bets on college basketball.

Sports Illustrated quoted an unidentified source as saying that Rose allegedly "exchanged signals somehow relating to baseball betting" from the dugout at Riverfront Stadium. SI also reported allegations that baseball's all-time hits leader placed bets on baseball through friends.

Under Major League Rule 21-d, if Rose bet on games in which his team was not involved, he would be suspended for one year. If Rose bet on games involving the Reds, he would be banned for life.

Sports Illustrated said Ron Peters, a restaurant owner in southwest Ohio, has been linked to possible baseball betting involving Rose. The magazine said Peters' lawyer, Alan Statman, described his client as Rose's "principle bookmaker" and approached the magazine in hopes of selling Peters' story. The magazine said it declined to pay. The Cincinnati Enquirer said it, too, declined ed an overture from Statman to buy the story.

Statman told the Daily News in a copyright story today that Peters filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the U.S. bankruptcy code on Jan. 19. He said the financial problems stem from a divorce and other personal and business affairs, and were not related to any alleged gambling.

Sports Illustrated said Statman told two of its reporters that he and his client had been asked by Kevin Hallinan, baseball's security chief, "if we had information on Pete Rose betting on baseball. We said we can supply that information."

Rose was quoted in the magazine as saying, "I'd be willing to bet you, if I was a betting man, that I have never bet on baseball."

Gambling also was mentioned in the GQ story contained in the magazine's April edition. The magazine said Rose once received a dead fish in the mail as a warning to pay a gambling debt. The magazine also quoted Rose's former wife, Carolyn, as saying, "He said he was Pete Rose, and he didn't have to pay no gambling debts."

Karolyn Rose, in a telephone interview Tuesday night, denied making that statement. She told The Associated Press that she never had an indication during her 16-year marriage that Rose was placing bets with bookies. She also said she can't believe allegations that he bet on baseball games.

"I just really feel bad for him right now," she said. "I feel he's Mr. Baseball; God knows he's Mr. Baseball, and his first love is baseball. I just don't think it's fair to him."

St. John's Playing For A Cause In NIT

NEW YORK (AP) — The St. John's University basketball team, which saw its hopes for an NCAA bid end on a sour note with a loss to last-place Boston College in the Big East tournament, is playing for a cause in the NIT.

The Redmen have dedicated the tournament to sports information director Katha Quinn, who died last Friday, one day before her 35th birthday, after a long battle with liver cancer.

They wore black bands on their uniform shoulders in defeating Oklahoma State 76-64 in a second-round game Tuesday night and captain Matt Brust said:

"We've taken it upon ourselves to dedicate this tournament to her and to try to win for her. We know she's with us in spirit, and we felt her presence tonight."

The team attended Quinn's wake over the weekend and Brust said:

"Personally, it was gut-wrenching for me. She was like a mother and a sister to a lot of us. That was one hell of a lady, what she fought. I'm just a grain of sand on the beach compared to what she went through."

Quinn was diagnosed as having liver cancer in January 1987. She continued working full-time and underwent experimental chemotherapy treatment for 18 months, almost 11 months longer than any patient before her.

Jayson Williams led St. John's with 27 points and shared rebounding honors with teammate Malik Sealy, each with eight. Darwyn Alexander scored 15 points for Oklahoma State.

In Tuesday night's other second-round game, New Mexico beat Pepperdine 86-69. The quarterfinals begin tonight with Alabama-Birmingham at Connecticut and Michigan State at Villanova. On Thursday night, St. John's plays at Ohio State and St. Louis visits New Mexico.

The semifinals and finals will be played at New York's Madison Square Garden next Monday and Wednesday.

told me we have a chance to be national champions (of the NIT), and that inspired me tonight," Williams said. "Any way you look at it, we're beating 32 good teams."

"It's good not to be putting the balls away," Brust said. "We have confidence that we can take this tournament so long as we play like we played tonight. This game made us feel good."

Williams made 11 of 15 shots. He had two baskets in a 15-4 run early in the second half that put St. John's ahead 45-38 and added five points in a 10-0 burst that gave the Redmen their biggest lead, 74-58, with 1:03 remaining.

"I didn't give them time to double up on me inside," Williams said. "I kicked it right at us as soon as it came in, sort of like a one-on-one pro-style game."

"We needed to stop Williams inside, and didn't," said Oklahoma State coach Leonard Hamilton, whose team finished 17-13, the same record St. John's will take against Ohio State. "He scored a lot of big points and hurt us a lot."

The Cowboys led 32-30 at halftime and went ahead 34-30 on Royce Jeffries' basket. But Williams made a layup and Jason Buchanan's 3-point shot put the Redmen in front 35-34.

Oklahoma State regained the lead 36-35 on a jumper by Jeffries, but Brust's 3-point shot with 18:07 left put St. John's on top for good 38-36.

After Williams and Oklahoma State's Byron Houston traded baskets, St. John's scored five straight points on Robert Werdann's three-point play and a basket by Buchanan for a 45-38 lead with 14:31 remaining.

The Redmen broke it open with their late 10-0 run. Buchanan started it with a free throw and layup, Williams made two free throws, Sealy had a dunk and Williams capped it with a 3-point shot.

Buchanan added 12 points for St. John's, Sealy scored 11 — nine in the final nine minutes — and Brust had 10. For Oklahoma State, Corey Williams added 14, Houston 12 and Thomas Jordan 11.

"We knew we had to keep them in the 60s," St. John's coach Lou Carnesecca said. "We were patient, we played tough inside and we committed fewer turnovers. We also played them tough on the boards."

"We went right at them. This was one of the most physical teams we've played all year. We showed a great deal of patience and didn't take the first shot every time down the court."

New Mexico 86, Pepperdine 69
At Albuquerque, Luc Longley scored 18 points and blocked seven shots and Charlie Thomas added 17 points as New Mexico advanced to the NIT quarterfinal round for the second straight year.

The Lobos dominated from the start, taking a 15-5 lead. Pepperdine got within 30-26, but New Mexico led 46-37 at halftime. It was 61-54 with 13:45 remaining, but the Lobos responded with a 12-2 run and put the game out of reach.

Thomas scored 10 points in the second half when Longley got into foul trouble. Marvin McBurrows added 15 points, Darrell McGee 13 — plus nine assists — and Rob Robbins 10. Craig Davis led Pepperdine with 21 points and Tom Lewis had 18.

Robbins and Pepperdine's Marty Wilson were ejected for fighting with five seconds left in the first half. The fight started when Wilson ran into Robbins as the New Mexico guard was taking a shot from 3-point range.

New Mexico coach Dave Bliss said he didn't want Pepperdine to get off to a quick start, so he started the game with a press.

"We just wanted to get our team going," Bliss said. "I think it worked. I thought our team was emotional right from the start, and I think that's what helped us get off to a quick start."

Mountain Landis imposed lifetime bans on Buck Weaver, Ed Cicotte, Fred McMullen, Happy Felsch and Jackson — forevermore to be known as the Black Sox.

It took the Herculean talents of a man called Babe, George Herman Ruth, to help repopularize the game in the 1920s. Then, in 1922, pitcher Phil Douglas of the New York Giants was banned for life for his alleged involvement in gambling.

The game got a rest from gambling scandal for 25 years before Commissioner Happy Chandler suspended Durocher, manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, for the 1947 season for "incidents detrimental to baseball" — namely, his association with known gamblers.

Twenty-two years later, the game's last 30-game winner, the Detroit Tigers' McLain, was suspended twice by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn for associating with gamblers. He missed most of the 1970 season, but that was only the beginning of his troubles.

He later was convicted of charges that included racketeering, gambling, cocaine possession and loan sharking, and he served 29 months in jail.

In 1979, Kuhn banished Hall of Famer Mays from the game because he had gone to work for an Atlantic City gambling casino. Four years later, Kuhn barred Mantle, another Hall of Famer, because he, too, had accepted a $100,000-a-year public relations job in Atlantic City.

Neither was heavily involved with baseball at the time — Mays was an honorary coach of the New York Mets, and Mantle a spring training batting instructor with the New York Yankees — but the message was there: Gambling nearly ruined the game once. It would not do so again.

Kuhn never hinted, in fact did not believe, that either Mantle or Mays was involved in anything underhanded or illegal. It was just that baseball and gambling should not be connected in any way, Kuhn said.

Ueberroth took over as commissioner in September 1984, and the following March lifted the bans against Mantle and Mays.

"I find no fault with the previous ruling," Ueberroth said at the time. "Baseball must remain free from any connection between it and gambling. That is vital. I am making two exceptions for these two great players because of what they mean to our game."

"I read everything there is to read on the subject. I checked what they had been doing. They don't deserve to be out of the game if they want to be in it."

Ueberroth said he had consulted with Kuhn before making the ruling. "Bowie has only been helpful. I consider him a friend. I discussed the matter with him. He spent 15 years in this job. He knows it very well."

Kuhn, however, did not agree with the ruling.

"I don't know of a basis for changing my decision," he said. "I have trouble going along with it. I told him that. He expected me not to agree. He thinks this should be treated as an exception. I didn't. That is a judgment he has to make."

"He says he is not changing policy, merely making an exception based on the character and conduct of Mays and Mantle. I have no question about their conduct. I never have. My problem is with their employment."

Obviously, any problem Rose might have with Ueberroth would be quite different, because his employment is with the Reds. The end result, however, could be quite similar.

"I couldn't figure it out," Mantle said of his banishment. "It was a dumbfounded feeling. I wondered why I was banned. It seemed to me I was a better guy than that I used to be."

"I acted like it didn't bother me, but it did. You don't want to get kicked out of your favorite bar or be banned from baseball."

Winter Storm Means Higher Egg Prices, Woes For Poultry Farms

The Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. — A winter storm that killed millions of chickens in three states has helped to push nationwide egg prices to five-year highs just before the Easter rush. And industry experts said the most lasting damage from the early March ice and snow storms stem from the deaths of brood hens, which are poultry producers' lifeblood. Ken Klippen, vice president of United Egg Producers in Atlanta, estimated losses in Missouri, Oklahoma and Arkansas at between 1.5 and 2 million brood hens, worth about $55 million. The losses represented just under 1 percent of the nation's egg-laying chickens, he said. For every 1 percent change in supply, a corresponding 5 percent change in price usually occurs, Klippen said.

Wholesale prices in New York, considered an industry benchmark, rose to 98 cents a dozen for Grade A large white eggs from 90 to 92 cents before the storm hit, said Jack Ross, an economist for the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Washington. Prices in mid-February averaged about 66 cents a dozen, he said. The three states have about 7.5 percent of the nation's 230 million brood hens, Klippen said. Arkansas, with 9 million of them, suffered the greatest losses in the storm. The damage came at a time when egg prices already were rising because of traditionally heavy holiday demand, he said. Ross said there is a good balance between production and demand, rather than a shortage of eggs. Prices will drop again after Easter, he said. The last time egg prices reached current levels was in 1984, when an influenza outbreak decimated Pennsylvania flocks and pushed wholesale prices above the dollar a dozen mark, Ross said. "Each dead brooder hen represents about 150 chicks that won't be produced," said Lyndon Irwin, a professor of poultry science at Southwest Missouri State University. "You have to consider all the potential eggs she could have produced in her lifetime." In all, the storm destroyed about 600 poultry houses in Missouri, Arkansas and Oklahoma. About 2.7 million chickens died in Missouri and 3.9 million in Oklahoma. Total damage in the three states has been estimated at about $100 million. Missouri officials say the storm was the worst disaster ever to hit the state's poultry industry. And McDonald County, which bills itself as the "Poultry Capital of Missouri," was hardest hit.

S&L Losses May Ease This Year But Earnings Doubtful

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Losses at U.S. savings and loans will probably ease this year from 1988's $12.1 billion record, but rising interest rates will cut into the earnings of the industry's profitable segment. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board said Tuesday that the nation's

2,949 S&Ls lost $2.3 billion in the fourth quarter, pushing red ink for the year to $12.1 billion, well past the previous record of $7.8 billion set in 1987. Much of last year's red ink, $11 billion, was old in the sense that institutions finally got around to recognizing bad loans that had long ago gone sour. James Barth, chief economist of the bank board, and a number of private analysts believe these non-operating losses, and thus overall losses, will decline this year to lower, but still-troublesome, levels. However, they warn that rising interest rates, which increased 3 percentage points over the past year and continue to climb, will eat away at the industry's slim operating profit, $900 million last year.

"Operating income should be lower across the board for all thrifts in the first and second quarters," Barth said. Savings and loans make their money by borrowing short-term, from depositors, and lending long-term, for mortgages and other purposes. When long rates are higher than short rates, the normal pattern, institutions earn more on loans than they pay to depositors. But currently short-term rates approach and in some cases surpass long-term rates, severely cutting into earnings. Robert Litan, a banking expert at the Brookings Institution, a Washington-based, liberal-oriented research organization, said he is worried that higher rates will begin to erode the half of the industry that is somewhere between healthy and insolvent or nearly insolvent.

"The real issue for the future is what happens to the three-to-sixes. ... I worry about this category. They're not immediately threatened, but what they do in the next three to four years is crucial. These guys are going to be under a lot of pressure to take risks," he said. Bert Ely, an Alexandria, Va., financial institutions analyst, said this year's improved performance will be attributable to a significant degree to $5 billion to $6 billion in government assistance flowing into the S&Ls rescued last year, in the busiest year for regulators since the Depression. "It's just like the farm economy; if we have better results in 1989, it's only because a substantial subsidy is being pumped into the industry," he said. Meanwhile, the bank board's Barth said the heaviest losses continued to be concentrated in just a few institutions, with the 20 most-troubled institutions losing $2 billion in the fourth quarter. Nine of the worst 20 were in Texas, and the state's 204 institutions collectively lost $1.4 billion in the fourth quarter and $10.1 billion in all of 1988. For the year, the 30 percent of the industry that was unprofitable lost $17.7 billion, more than swamping the $5.6 billion earned by solvent institutions.

Math Group Says Rote Should Be Cast Aside

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Designing a dog kennel, building a scale model of the solar system and calculating a statistical profile of the "average" student are among the exercises recommended in a new attempt to upgrade math teaching. The 54 curriculum and evaluation standards announced Tuesday by the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics aim to make sure America's students can explore and reason as well as add and subtract. In classrooms following the new plan, students would be exposed to less rote memorization, more computers and calculators, and cooperative teamwork instead of one-on-one competition. The idea is to view math as a daily human activity and solve problems related to real life. "We look at a decade of work ahead of us in making these changes," NCTM president Shirley Frye said at a news conference at which the council released its 272-page, two-year effort. She said videotapes, publications and trained leaders will encourage teachers to put the standards into practice. The National Education Association and the American Federation of Teachers praised the new standards and urged their members to use them in their classrooms. Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos was equally supportive. The standards are "valuable guidelines for a revised math curriculum that captures students' interest and at the same time builds a solid foundation of knowledge," he said in a statement. The new math teaching standards build on the premise, borne out by recent studies, that American children do well in international comparisons of basic mathematical skills but poorly when it comes to applying mathematical principles. "Only about one-half of American 17-year-olds can say whether 87 percent of 10 is less than 10, greater than 10 or equal to 10," said John Dossey, chairman of NCTM's standards implementation commission. Only about half can figure out how much carpet is needed to cover a floor or calculate the probability of a simple event, he said. Generally, the standards seek to ensure that students value math, become confident in their abilities, learn to solve problems, and learn to communicate and to reason mathematically. They set specific goals and expectations for students — and not only those headed for Ph.D.s. "Applied mathematics is not just for a couple of geniuses in the country," said Sally Ride, a Stanford University physicist and former astronaut who appeared at the news conference. In developing the standards, educators and mathematicians kept in mind that many students find math deadeningly dull. They concluded that rote practice and drills should not be abandoned, but shouldn't dominate the classroom either. The group recommends that every student at every level have access to calculators and computers, calling them "fast pencils" that allow students to expand on their basic skills. It also calls for group activities that better reflect the way problems are solved at work and in the community than the isolation and competition found in many traditional math classes. The guidelines stress that math must be put in the context of everyday life. Sample problems involve grocery shopping, motorcycle races, used car purchases, savings accounts, pulse rates and taste tests, among other things. In addition to curriculum guidelines, the group outlined evaluation techniques designed to make sure concepts are understood. Frye cited the example of a student asked the perimeter of a six-sided figure. A student could add the numbers on each side and get the right answer, 23, without knowing what perimeter means, she said. But a student told he has 23 yards of fencing to draw a six-sided fence would have to demonstrate understanding of the concept in order to solve the problem.

NASA Chief Will Resign Army Says Night Goggles Effective

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The Associated Press

James C. Fletcher, who returned to the helm of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration during its darkest hours, announced his resignation Tuesday, effective April 8. Fletcher, 69, who had served as NASA administrator from April 1971 to May 1977, reluctantly accepted the post in 1986 for a second time in the aftermath of the Challenger explosion, the nation's worst space disaster. The resignation came as no surprise in that Fletcher had made it clear that he wanted to retire as soon as President Bush named a replacement. He told reporters covering the launch of the space shuttle Discovery March 13 that he expected his successor to be named by the end of this month. Sources at NASA said they thought Fletcher went ahead and announced his decision before the replacement was picked in hopes of accelerating the process. Many in NASA are anxious over who will head the agency because the appointment could serve as an indication of how strongly the Bush administration will push space exploration. Selection of a strong leader who would be willing to do battle with Congress in these days of budgetary limitations would indicate that the administration plans to aggressively pursue the many items on the agency's agenda, including the construction of a permanently manned space station by the end of the next decade.

WASHINGTON — U.S. military officers are resisting congressional calls for a 30-day suspension of training flights using night-vision goggles, asserting the flights are getting safer and are essential to a round-the-clock fighting capability. But members of the House Armed Services investigations subcommittee say they need to be convinced that the use of night-vision goggles has not been a factor in a rash of recent deadly crashes. The debate over the goggles was aired Tuesday in a hearing of the subcommittee in the immediate aftermath of a helicopter crash Monday during training exercises in South Korea. Nineteen Marines were killed and 16 were injured in the second Marine helicopter disaster in South Korea in four days. Rep. Nicholas Mavroules, D-Mass., the subcommittee chairman, said 43 servicemen were killed over the last year in four separate helicopter crashes during flights in which night-vision goggles were used. He said an inquiry by the panel determined that over the past two years, 27 of the most serious accidents, or more than 50 percent of the total, involved the use of night-vision goggles. "This steep upward trend is very, very alarming," Mavroules said. He and other subcommittee members said they doubt the safety of an early version of the night-vision goggles and are disturbed that many of them are still in use. The chairman also questioned whether the initial flight training using the goggles is sufficient and whether one hour every 45 days is enough followup training. "The restricted field of vision, limited depth perception, inability to see certain obstacles and many other factors adversely impact upon the aviator's ability to fly the aircraft," Mavroules said. One witness, veteran Army flight instructor David E. Broadnax, urged suspending night training using the goggles for 30 days and added, "I feel we should slow down for a moment at least, pull over to the side of the road, and take a critical look at what we're doing." But Army Maj. Gen. Ellis D. Parker, commander of the U.S. Army Aviation Center at Ft. Rucker, Ala., said that training flights using night-vision goggles are relatively safe and getting safer. "The fact that you see more accidents during night training is because we are doing more night training," he said. "We can't let our proficiency decay." He said that the rate of serious accidents involving deaths and injuries dropped to 1.84 per 100,000 flying hours in 1988, "making this past year the safest year ever for Army aviation." Between 1978 and Feb. 10, 1989, there were 399 serious air accidents involving all causes day and night, Parker said. Of these, 108 or 27 percent of the total occurred during night hours even though night flights account for about 35 percent of all aviation training.

Japan's Generosity In Foreign Aid Spending May Not Bring Benefits

By Elaine Kurtenbach
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Japan has become the world's largest donor of foreign aid, but critics say billions of dollars will be wasted unless it improves the way it dispenses the aid to the Third World.

The impact of Japanese development aid on the environment also has come under fire, the most recent example being what Tokyo labeled incorrect reports that it would fund a highway westward through the Brazilian rainforest to Peru and the Pacific.

The Foreign Ministry said neither the government nor private Japanese interests would pay for the Amazon project. But the criticism — voiced by environmentalists and Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn. — was an indication Japan will have to watch carefully how it spends the huge sums earmarked for development aid.

Japan, which itself is still repaying loans from the World Bank, only recently increased its aid budget, helped by the doubling of the yen's value since 1985.

The United States, for decades the largest donor, has cut its aid budget while Japan's official development assistance has risen dramatically — from $7.45 billion in 1987 to an estimated $10.95 billion in fiscal 1989, which begins April 1.

Washington, now in second place in providing non-military aid, spent $8.78 billion in 1987, the last year for which a breakdown of U.S. aid is available.

Without violating its constitutional ban on military assistance, Japan has responded to U.S. calls to support Washington's strategic interests, said Robert M. Orr, a foreign aid expert and professor at the Tokyo branch of Temple University of Philadelphia.

"In line with U.S. policy, Japan has increased its aid to critical areas like Pakistan, Turkey, Jamaica, El Salvador and Honduras," he said.

Officials and critics alike, however, say Japan must improve the quality of its aid to promote stability in the Third World.

The Development Assistance Committee of the Paris-based Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development said in December that Japan's projects should be more cost-effective and avoid disrupting local communities and the environment.

It added the Japanese should give easier terms on loans and do more to help the poorest nations.

Having pledged over $50 billion in aid in the five-year period ending in 1992, Japan acknowledges difficulties in managing its aid.

Only 1,500 personnel run the programs. The United States has more than twice as many, and most Western donor nations have much larger staffs relative to their aid funding.

"We face major problems in implementing foreign aid due to limitations on personnel," said Shigeo Iwatani, Foreign Ministry senior assistant for economic cooperation.

"We are gradually increasing our staff, but government hiring is strictly limited and few specialists are available."

The policy of rotating officials every few years prevents the training of aid experts, said another senior Foreign Ministry official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Japan should learn from the United States, perhaps by setting up the equivalent of the U.S. Agency for International Development and academic programs to train aid professionals, Orr said.

Foreign Ministry officials readily acknowledge that due to inadequate staffing the government relies on Japanese trading companies to identify aid projects.

"They have a very extensive information network. If they come up with a good project, why should we reject it?" the senior official said.

Involvement of the private sector has fueled accusations, however, that Japan uses aid to give its businesses a foothold in Third World markets.

Japanese companies' share in aid contracts fell from 59 percent in fiscal 1981 to 38 percent in fiscal 1987.

Trading companies naturally favor lucrative contracts to build roads, dams and bridges, but Orr said such projects shift the focus of aid away from basic human needs.

"Japan doesn't make environmental impact statements, so projects have been carried out despite environmental damage," he added.

Takaaki Yasuoka of Sophia University's Institute for Social Justice in Tokyo said Japan should share its talents and skills with the Third World instead of building expensive projects.

"Japan provides aid to many countries but it's just investment, it doesn't meet the needs of the poorest people," he said. "It's as if we have no empathy for their misery."

Yasuoka, who has traveled extensively to observe Japanese aid projects, described a hospital built with Japanese money in the African nation of Somalia.

"It was useless," he said. "The expensive equipment couldn't be used due to electrical outages. But there was a Chinese clinic nearby staffed by 200 Chinese doctors and nurses. If such a poor country can send people, we should send people, too."

Inadequate follow-up is another major problem that virtually invites corruption, Yasuoka said.

He cited a case in which the Philippine government of President Corazon Aquino charged that seven Japanese companies participating in aid projects paid $4.5 million in kickbacks in 1975-1976 to then-President Ferdinand E. Marcos. The companies have denied the allegations.

Japan's emphasis on loans over grants — which officials say reflects its belief in promoting self-sufficiency — has had the opposite effect on some countries, Orr maintained.

"Yen loans are not all shiny and sweet," he said. "Indonesia is really struggling to repay its debt, most of which is in loans from Japan. Is that development?"

Sensitive to these charges, Japan has cut interest rates on loans and raised the proportion of grant aid, which now stands at 60 percent of the total, compared to the U.S. ratio of 92 percent, according to the Foreign Ministry.

In the next fiscal year, 37 new aid officers will be hired, and the government has pledged to improve its project identification and assessment.

By raising grants, Japan could increase support to schools, clinics and agricultural and other technical training programs to aid the poor, Orr said.

"The key to success is to develop a corps of trained specialists to make sure aid works."

U.S. Seeking PLO Help In Calming Resistance

The Associated Press

TUNIS, Tunisia — The United States resumed talks today with the PLO, saying it planned to ask that steps be taken to ease tensions in the occupied lands but not demand an end to the Palestinian uprising.

The meeting, the second between United States and PLO officials since Washington lifted its 13-year embargo on official contacts with the group in December, began shortly after noon at a Tunisian government guesthouse in the northern suburb of Carthage.

Sources in Washington have said Secretary of State James A. Baker III's strategy is to seek reciprocal gestures from the PLO and Israel to calm the occupied lands.

"We will not be asking for an end to the intifadeh (uprising), but for practical steps that can be taken to reduce the tension and reduce the suffering," said a U.S. Embassy official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Asked if Washington would be making similar demands on Israel, the American source said: "We understand the need for mutuality and reciprocity."

Washington has designated its ambassador in Tunis, Robert H. Pelletreau, as its representative in talks with the PLO.

Fifteen months of clashes between Israeli troops and Palestinians in the occupied Gaza Strip and West Bank has left more than 400 Palestinians and 17 Israelis dead, with no sign of an end to the violence.

Farouk Kaddoumi, head of the PLO's political department, said in an interview that he agrees the violence should be brought to an end, but said it should be done by putting the territories under U.N. supervision.

"Quelling the intifadeh or asking us to stop the intifadeh is a taboo, it should not be asked," Kaddoumi said.

Israel says the Palestine Liberation Organization is a terrorist group and refuses to negotiate with it about its demands for an independent state.

The United States refused to deal officially with the PLO until December, when PLO chairman Yasser Arafat's renounced terrorism and recognized Israel's right to exist.

"We don't expect too much," Kaddoumi said of the talks. "Things are in slow motion." He characterized the initial Dec. 16 meeting as a get-acquainted session, and said the PLO now wants to get down to discussing the tough issues.

"We hope that the Americans will accept the principle of self-determination (for Palestinians), that the PLO is the representative of the Palestinian people, the proper formal body for negotiations."

However, Baker on Tuesday ruled out U.S. support for establishment of an independent Palestinian state and urged the PLO not to block Palestinian Arabs from negotiating a settlement with Israel.

The PLO, backed by much of Western Europe, wants an international peace conference involving all the parties directly concerned by the Arab-Israeli conflict and under the aegis of the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council — the United States, the Soviet Union, China, Britain and France.

Israel rejects such a conference. Washington does not seem as adamantly opposed to it as it once was.

As to the immediate task of easing tensions in the occupied territories, Kaddoumi said: "We propose that the idea of U.N. supervision of the West Bank and Gaza should be discussed in order to stop the aggression of the Israelis against our people." He said a U.N. takeover in the territories could be brought about gradually.

Israelis May Back Call For Elections

The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Politicians on the left and right today indicated they would support elections in the occupied territories if they are linked to peace talks, a condition reportedly included in a U.S.-backed peace plan.

A left-wing lawmaker, who met recently with officials of the Palestine Liberation Organization in New York, said he believes the PLO has accepted the plan, which reportedly would shut the group out of participation in the first stage of Israeli-Palestinian peace talks.

Also today, a group of Jews from 40 countries attending a conference in Israel that was organized by Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir adopted a resolution expressing solidarity with Israel.

"We are proud of Israel's adherence to its principles of democracy, justice and freedom. ... We support the democratically elected government of national unity in its efforts to achieve peace and security with its neighbors," the resolution said.

In the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, residents staged a general strike to mark a 1968 battle between Palestinians and Israelis. Six Arabs were reportedly wounded by army gunfire in clashes in the territories.

The Israeli newspaper Haaretz said that under a U.S.-backed peace plan, Israel would negotiate an interim settlement with elected Palestinian representatives from the occupied lands.

The PLO would join the talks in the second stage when a final settlement is negotiated, Haaretz said in an unattributed report.

Attache Denies He Was Spy

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — A Soviet military attache expelled from the United States on espionage charges denied in two interviews published today that he was a spy, and he accused the FBI of setting him up.

"Generally I felt as if I had ended up in Washington not in March 1989, but in a worse time of raging anti-Soviet hysteria," Lt. Col. Yuri Pakhtusov said in an interview with the Defense Ministry newspaper Red Star.

"In my opinion, this provocation was a warning to those citizens of the U.S.A. who today are more frequently trying to see in the habitual 'enemy image' the face of a friend and come closer to the Soviet Union," he told the newspaper.

Pakhtusov was arrested March 8 and ordered to leave the United States within 48 hours. The Soviet union responded a week later by accusing an assistant U.S. Army attache, Lt. Col. Daniel Francis Van Gundy III, of spying and expelled him.

A U.S. government source identified Pakhtusov as a member of the Soviet Army's GRU intelligence service, and the FBI said his arrest ended a six-month investigation. The FBI accused Pakhtusov of trying to gather sensitive information about how the U.S. government protects its computer secrets.

Pakhtusov was surprised when he was offered an envelope by his upstairs neighbor, who had invited him to his apartment to give Pakhtusov some tips on repairing his television set, he said in a second interview.

"When I dropped in, he offered me a yellow packet with the words, 'Here is what you need.' I didn't take the packet and looked at him in amazement," Pakhtusov told the newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda.

Then, he said, at least five FBI agents burst through the apartment door, took the American away and searched the apartment. Pakhtusov said the agents handcuffed him and took him away without allowing him to call his embassy or alert his family.

Pakhtusov said he still likes and respects Americans but that improved relations between the superpowers "frightens some influential people."

Soviet Academy Rejects Old-Line Candidates

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Andrei D. Sakharov's bid for a seat in the new Soviet legislature may be revived now that the Soviet Academy of Sciences has rejected most of the candidates on the officially backed slate.

The outcome means the academy will have to vote again, giving Sakharov another chance for election to the 2,250-seat Congress of People's Deputies. Academy members had left the human rights activist off the official slate.

But members of the prestigious academy on Tuesday approved just eight of the 23 candidates nominated for the 20 legislative seats allotted to the academy, the official Tass news agency reported.

Sakharov, a physicist, and other reform-minded academicians had called for rejection of the old-guard candidates.

Sakharov, meeting with other academy members today, said the outcome of Tuesday's vote is a victory for those seeking greater democracy. Sakharov, a Nobel Peace Prize laureate, spent almost seven years in internal exile for criticizing the Kremlin's military drive into Afghanistan.

The rejection of most of the official slate means a new vote will have to be held to fill the final 12 seats, Tass said. It did not say what process would be followed but said a new election would be held after two weeks.

In the new Soviet election system, people become candidates when they are nominated by others, not by simply announcing their intentions.

There are many people who want to nominate Sakharov, who said Tuesday that he would feel obligated to serve if elected.

Several academy members gathering at Moscow State University today called for Sakharov's nomination to the legislature. But academy President Gury Marchuk said the gathering did not have authority to select candidates.

He said whatever group is formed by the academy to put a new slate of candidates before the membership must also be approved by the National Electoral Commission.

Tass said 1,279 academy members and delegates from top Soviet research institutes voted by secret ballot for three hours in Moscow's Palace of Youth on Tuesday. It gave no breakdown of the vote.

Efforts to get Sakharov on the initial academy slate were rejected by the academy leadership on Jan. 18, although he had been nominated by 55 scientific institutions for a seat in the new legislature.

Pro-Sakharov forces subsequently focused on persuading academy members to reject at least some of the candidates on the officially backed slate.

Tass noted the controversy in reporting the results: "There was a clash of opinions as to whether the procedure of candidates' nomination was democratic."

It quoted Vladimir Kudryavtsev, academy vice president, as saying the elections "showed the growth of democratization in the academy and made for more profound understanding between the leadership of the (academy) and broad scientific public."

The races for the Congress of People's Deputies have been marked by a rare diversity of views and unprecedented public debate.

Boris Yeltsin, the ousted Moscow party boss turned populist reformer, on Tuesday said Soviets should be able to freely elect candidates for all leadership posts, including the presidency held by Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

"We need direct elections, from top to bottom, including for the presidency," said Yeltsin, who is seeking a seat representing Moscow in the new legislature. The seat will be filled in nationwide elections Sunday.

The Communist Party is guaranteed 100 seats in the legislature and Yeltsin criticized it for avoiding contested races by nominating just 100 candidates. He said the move "is not the best example of democracy for our society."

Yeltsin, who was ousted as city party chief in 1987 for criticizing the slow pace of reforms, campaigned Tuesday in the heart of opponent Yevgeny Brakov's territory. He spoke and answered questions for three hours in a conference hall at the giant ZIL factory Brakov runs.

Yeltsin's candidacy has been thrust into the limelight by what he says is a campaign organized against him by the Moscow party elite.

The Congress of People's Deputies, which will meet only one day a year, is to elect the country's acting full-time legislature from among its membership and choose the Soviet president, a post now held by Gorbachev.

A total of 750 seats in the congress are allotted to public organizations like the Academy of Sciences and the Communist Party.

The other 1,500 are for representatives of the 15 constituent Soviet republics and their electoral districts. Those seats will be filled in Sunday's elections.

Radiation Effects Dominate Region Near Chernobyl

By Ann Imse
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NOZDRISHCHE, U.S.S.R. — Nadezhda Zirka lives 35 miles from the Chernobyl nuclear power plant, but only 200 yards from a Ukrainian village abandoned due to radiation from the Chernobyl explosion.

Nearby, pigs are born deformed, and families in another village are packing in response to an evacuation order issued just a few weeks ago.

"I am afraid to live here now," said Zirka, one of 230,000 people who live on land so contaminated that they must eat food grown elsewhere for fear of exceeding radiation limits, according to the Communist Party daily Pravda.

Nearly three years after the Chernobyl explosion 80 miles north of Kiev blasted bits of nuclear reactor as far away as Poland, radiation dominates life downwind.

The April 26, 1986 blast — the world's worst atomic accident — involved one of the plant's reactors and killed 31 people.

In the Narodichi District, well beyond the danger zone 18 miles in radius that was evacuated days after the accident, radiation has driven families from their homes, destroyed farmers' faith in their own produce and terrified parents.

Yuri Spizhenko of the Ukrainian Ministry of Health said in a recent interview that 5,000 of Narodichi's 28,000 residents have fled in the past three years. Only a few hundred were evacuated by government order and received any kind of aid.

Officials face an upset populace at every step as residents complain they're still being told too little, too late. But Georgi A. Gotovchits, deputy chairman of the region's executive committee, told The Associated Press his people are doing the best they can, dealing with a massive problem for which there are no textbooks.

For Gotovchits, the worst moments come when a constituent asks what will happen to his children after 10 years of living with "safe" radiation.

"There is no answer," Gotovchits said.

"We can't sleep," says Maria S. Sheluk, Zirka's neighbor in Nozdrishche. "We can't work. For us, everything is terrible. We can't drink the milk. We're afraid of the potatoes. Nothing could be worse."

Gotovchits says thousands of radiation tests were needed to check hundreds of square miles of territory, and that is why maps showing the extent and level of contamination have been released only in the past six weeks.

Zirka's yellow country cottage with carved sky-blue window frames stands just 200 yards from the guardpost barring traffic from Novoe Sharno. Spizhenko said the irregular pattern of the fallout, depending on wind and the radioactivity of specific particles, left it safe on her side of what locals call "the border."

"But children run where they want," Zirka points out, looking at her toddler bundled in gray wool.

Asked why she has not moved away, Zirka echoes the answer given by every worried peasant interviewed in the district: "Where could I go?"

In the handful of villages in Narodichi District evacuated by government order in 1986, peasants were paid for their lost houses, land and farm animals, Gotovchits said. A typical family received $32,000 to $36,800 or 10 years' pay for the average farm worker.

But since people like Elena Baranchuk in Nozdrishche are considered safe, she and her family would receive nothing.

"We don't have the money," said the collective farm worker and mother of three as she dabbed tears with her scarf. Every kopeck went into a new house built just before the Chernobyl explosion, she explained.

About 18 miles away from Nozdrishche, at the Petrovsky Animal Farm, 37 of 150 piglets born last year were deformed and nearly all of the rest were too weak to survive, said veterinarian Dr. Pyotr Kudin.

Thirty-five calves were born with such abnormalities as six legs or missing ribs, Kudin said. All of the deformed animals died soon after birth, but he said he sent photographs of them to the radiation research institute in Kiev.

"Before the accident, nothing like this happened," said Kudin.

But scientists at the institute said

The Associated Press

Soviet child watches technician check radiation level genetics, not radiation, was to blame. They said other farms with higher radiation levels haven't experienced such a rash of birth defects, according to Vasily Voituk, chairman of the collective farm.

The farm's cows give milk with radiation levels five to six times the standard, Voituk said, "so we don't drink it." Instead, it is processed into butter and hard cheese, which Gotovchits said reduces the contamination to a permissible level.

Ivan Los of the Radiation Medicine Institute, established in Kiev after Chernobyl, said no one is living in an area where the radiation dosage is greater than 2.5 rems per year, the maximum for the third year after an accident.

Soviet officials in November set a lifetime maximum of 35 rems, which prompted evacuation orders for 25 more villages just a few weeks ago. Even with clean food and drink cutting their internal radiation exposure, residents would receive more than 35 rems in a 70-year lifetime, Los said.

Premier's Wife-Cheating Confession May Help Him

The Associated Press

SYDNEY, Australia — Prime Minister Bob Hawke's tearful, nationally televised admission of infidelity does not seem to have hurt his popularity. Some, in fact, believe it may have been a shrewd political move.

"It was vintage Hawke, we've seen it before, he's done it before and that is why people like him," said pollster Gary Morgan.

"The voters will love him for it," said the tabloid Daily Telegraph of Sydney.

The paper, the only one to editorialize on the interview, nevertheless was critical of Hawke, accusing him of subjecting his wife, Hazel, to public humiliation.

"His frank disclosures about his colorful past do him little credit," the paper said. "While it may be refreshing to see such openness, it reveals a cruel lack of tact."

In the interview broadcast Tuesday night, Hawke admitted to cheating on his wife of 33 years.

"She understood that it was part of a pretty volatile, exuberant character," Hawke, wiping back a tear, told the Channel 7 network's Newsworld program. He did not detail his illicit affairs but said his days of philandering were over.

At rival Channel 9, 27,860 people called in for an opinion poll which asked "are you offended that Bob Hawke has had an affair?" Spokeswoman Sue Ward said 13,237 people replied yes and 14,623 said they were not offended.

Journalist Clive Robertson, who interviewed Hawke, said he was sure the remarks were off the cuff and not a political stunt.

Hawke's press secretary, Barry Cassidy, was quick to dispute speculation that Hawke's confession was calculated to win votes.

"There are cynics around who will see all sorts of motives, but once you see it you realize it was totally above board, not pre-cooked," he said. "It was genuine Hawke, telling it like it was."

But the Daily Mirror of Sydney pleaded "Please, No More PM Sob Stories — Is This A Way To Woo The Women?"

"There is a suggestion," it said, "of strength in a confession of weakness — particularly a shared weakness — overcome."

Hawke, 59, has broken down on television once before, when he talked about family drug problems in 1984. Mrs. Hawke later went on television to explain that their daughter, Roslyn, and son-in-law, Matt, had been treated for heroin addiction.

Hawke's battles with the bottle are well-known. As a student at Oxford he was listed in the Guinness Book of Records for his beer-drinking prowess. Hawke says he quit drinking in 1979.

His sexual liaisons also were known to insiders, but he had never before publicly admitted to them.

Hawke's earthy image has made him the country's most popular leader ever. He has won an unprecedented three five-year terms as prime minister and plans to seek a fourth.

He has said he will call new elections by May 1990 but opposition Liberal Party leader John Howard is predicting the prime minister will be pressured into holding the vote this July.

Hawke's popularity is believed to be eroding because of rising interest rates, higher taxes and other economic woes.

Black Escapees Leave Embassy

The Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The four detainees who escaped in pajamas from their guards at a hospital walked out of their refuge at the West German Embassy today after the government guaranteed their freedom.

"We emerge feeling victorious," said Ephraim Nkoe, 28, one of the four black activists who fled to the embassy Monday from Johannesburg's Hillbrow Hospital, where they were admitted after joining a widespread hunger strike.

Nkoe said the four "just marched out of the hospital" in pajamas when their guards were not looking, walked along a busy downtown street and took a mini-bus taxi to the embassy in Pretoria. The men pressed the buzzer at the embassy's locked gate, Nkoe said, and were allowed in after saying they had an urgent message for one of the diplomats.

The men, accompanied by two lawyers, emerged from the embassy at midmorning today, then returned to Johannesburg for a news conference.

They said the government guaranteed their unconditional freedom, but they called for release of the estimated 300 activists still detained without charge.

The escapees specifically urged the release of Sandile Thusi, a detainee hospitalized in critical condition in Durban who has not eaten for 33 days. Nkoe said Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok sent a police general to Durban today to determine if Thusi should be released.

The four escapees had been held for periods of 10 months to 23 months. In addition to Nkoe, they are Job Sithole, 21, Mpho Lekgoro, 24, and Clive Radebe, 28 — all leaders of youth organizations affiliated to the banned United Democratic Front anti-apartheid coalition.

Many detainees freed since the hunger strike began in January have been placed under tough restrictions limiting their movements and involvement in anti-apartheid groups. The Law and Order Ministry imposed no restrictions on the four escapees and said release orders were being prepared for three of them at the time of their getaway.

Says It Will Notify Citizens Of Tax Overpayments

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — Thanks to an IRS whistle-blower, the Internal Revenue Service is dropping a policy that prohibited notifying some taxpayers who had overpaid the government.

had been victimized by the old policy as long as three years ago when they could apply for refunds.
Furthermore, said Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., who discussed the issue in private for nearly an hour with Murphy on Tuesday, the acting commissioner assured him there would be no reprisals against the IRS employee who had publicly disclosed the old policy.

has worked in the IRS service center in Memphis for four years, disclosed the problem to Gore in a private meeting several days ago. She repeated the assertions in interviews last week, insisting that she not be identified by name, but eventually identified herself publicly.

— overpaid their taxes in 1985 and 1986 and were not notified by the agency. Ms. Johnson said she knew of dozens of such cases in the Memphis office, usually involving overpayments of $100 to $1,000.

income has been reported by an employer, bank or other payer but not by the earner, examiners decide whether the taxpayer should be sent a form letter demanding more taxes plus interest and penalty.

discovered such a pattern in 1987 while checking 1985 returns, Ms. Johnson said, they were told that the IRS manual prohibited notifying taxpayers of such errors. When employees complained to superiors that the policy should be changed, they were told it was up to taxpayers to find their own errors.

'Mommy Track' Reaction Stuns Author

By Beverly Beyette
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK — Felice N. Schwartz, a veteran of the working women's battlefield, quietly published an essay, "Management Women and the New Facts of Life," in the Harvard Business Review in the first week of January.

For two months, "I had a great many letters from men and women in the corporate community, really enormously positive," she recalled. "They said 'this is a turning point ... It's going to open a whole new era.'"

Then on March 8, her work received its first media attention in the New York Times. And suddenly Schwartz found herself off on a media fast track, her name synonymous with a new buzz word, "Mommy Track," a term that she did not coin and which she dismisses as not "useful."

Schwartz, who had detailed her concept of "career-primary women" and "career and family women," found herself under sharp attack by women unhappy with how she saw their roles.

As she defined it in her essay in Harvard's influential corporate journal, "career-primary women" place work advancement above family concerns, while "career and family women" — the majority — are "willing to trade some career growth and compensation for freedom from the constant pressure to work long hours and weekends."

What she advocated, Schwartz said, was "an intelligent informed forward movement" in the corporate view of women.

But other women didn't see it that way, reacting in particular to a possible suggestion that Schwartz was advocating two career paths for women, the slower one for mothers suddenly dubbed the "Mommy Track."

Betty Friedan, the feminist leader and author of "The Feminine Mystique," attacked Schwartz's categories, calling them "dangerous" and a kind of "retrofeminism."

"There are not two types of women," Friedan said. "All women must have the real choices. ... How they put it together, their priorities at different times, is a matter of individual choice."

"The so-called Mommy Track," she said, "is really the Mommy Trap. It says to women that if they choose to have children, they pay a permanent price. It's another word for sex discrimination."

In Los Angeles, Judy Miller — a board member of the International Women's Forum and a Braun & Co.

marketing vice president who consults with many large corporations — expressed astonishment at Schwartz's views.

"I can't believe it," said Miller, a widow. "If any company that eventually hired me over the past 20 years had taken her advice, I would not have been able to support my family (three children) when my husband became disabled."

"Where is her head?" she said of Schwartz. "The worst part is that she's wrapped (her thesis) around all these wonderful lofty goals that everyone can agree with and then she has drawn it to these terrible conclusions that will eventually harm all women."

"She's naively given new ammunition to those men who have traditionally blocked women. I resent and reject her conclusions as a working mother and a professional woman."

Schwartz said she "was surprised" by the response to her work, which she feels has been misinterpreted as advocating a retreat for women's rights.

"Why would I want to turn back the clock?" asked Schwartz, 64, who has been married for 40-plus years.

The mother of three adult children — two sons and a daughter — and the grandmother of four, Schwartz noted that, "All three of the men (in my family) are deeply involved in the lives of their children and are sharing entirely parenting and home responsibilities with their wives."

As for herself, she said, "I have worked full time, part time, not at all and full time," summarizing a career that included eight years off with her children.

"I'm part of a generation that graduated from college right after World War

E.L. Doctorow Loves The Word 'Masterpiece'

Rave Reviews Of New Novel Leave Author Feeling Great

By Stephanie Mansfield
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK — E.L. Doctorow has about the most vivid imagination of any living American author, but not that vivid.

Disney's Touchstone Studios, he says, has just bought the rights to his latest novel, "Billy Bathgate."

And the word is, Bette Midler wants to play Billy.

Doctorow's eyes widen. His jaw drops. His bearded mouth forms a shocked and silent "Nooo," but his brown eyes have the amused twinkle of a man who would believe any cockamamie idea, especially coming from Hollywood.

But it's not true. The part about Bette Midler. The interviewer made it up. Just like Doctorow invents all those far-fetched, fantastical encounters in his novels: a touring company of Depression-era, feckless, American-faction figures rubbing up against real-life gangsters, gossip columnists, writers and Tinseltown tarts.

"Imagination is a powerful thing," he says, pouring hot water from a rusty thrift-shop kettle into a teacup. "I think we all compose our lives every day. ... We all tell stories. We all find villains, people who would thwart us. Our minds are built for storytelling, and we all do it."

But nobody does it better than Edgar Lawrence Doctorow. Named for Edgar Allan Poe, the 58-year-old Bronx-born, Kenyon-educated, left-

'Imagination is a powerful thing. I think we all compose our lives every day. ... We all tell stories. ... Our minds are built for storytelling, and we all do it.'

— E.L. Doctorow

leaning grant-endowed, best-selling novelist is pattering about his stark, one-bedroom Bleecker Street apartment in Greenwich Village near New York University, where he teaches writing.

There's a word processor in one room and a giant cactus in another, and the kitchen is so small two people can't boil water without touching. He sets out a cheap bamboo tray neatly covered with a paper napkin and holding two white teacups.

He's a bit professorial, using words like "leitmotif," and rather shy. With his gentle wit and impeccable manners, he seems like a man from another era. He's been married to his wife Helen for 34 years. He has three kids. Loves tennis. Dresses in late L.L. Bean. Has never been to Betty Ford. All in all, he appears amazingly agile and angst-free for a literary lion.

"Billy Bathgate" is Doctorow's seventh novel. His others, "Welcome to Hard Times," "Big as Life," "The Book of Daniel," "Ragtime," "Loon Lake" and "World's Fair," and a collection of stories, "Lives of the Poets," have all been well received. But Billy, a sort of Huck Finn in spats, is his most fully realized and most likable hero.

Newsweek calls "Billy Bathgate" Doctorow's best book: "It's been a long, dry time since we've had a novel as fine as this ... a formal literary work that's also hugely entertaining." Time exalts Billy's voice as "convincing, mesmerizing and finally unforgettable." Anne Tyler, writing in The New York Times, calls the book Doctorow's "shapeliest piece of work" and the prose "breathtakingly vivid."

He is asked about the rave reviews.

"I love that word," he says.

Review?

"Masterpiece."

One has the sense that this is as buoyant as Ed Doctorow gets. He smiles self-consciously. "I'm feeling pretty good."

Doctorow has written about the 1930s before. In fact, the principal figure in "Billy Bathgate," the gangster Dutch Schultz, made a brief appearance in his last novel, "World's Fair." Doctorow says that paragraph may have planted a seed for the new book, but it's clear that "Billy Bathgate" has been germinating for a lifetime.

After the small talk and the book talk, Doctorow grows pensive. "I don't have as many anxieties as I used to," he says, explaining his current state of mind. "I don't feel I have to prove anything, the way I felt when I was a young writer. Which may allow me to write with more freedom than I used to. You forget what you know. Theoretically, you're not as well informed about what you do — you just do it. You get more practiced into tuning into those small secret voices that tell you what to do."

The voice in the novel belongs to 15-year-old Billy, a street kid who becomes the protégé of the colorful Dutch Schultz. "The voice in this book is very pleasing to the ear. And that sort of rhapsodic line that I found for it has a kind of natural breathing rhythm that suits people as they read silently to themselves."

The stream-of-consciousness narrative is lushly evocative of a violent, romantic time. "I subscribe to the idea that the writer doesn't have the voice — the book has the voice. It's the book's voice that is the final measure of whether it's going to work. I always labor under the illusion that I myself have no voice."

He takes a drink of tea. "I don't want to know what my style is. The minute you begin to hear yourself, that's the end, isn't it?"

He lives in New Rochelle, N.Y., summers in Sag Harbor on Long Island and looks a little like the late Bob Fosse, with that balding head and wispy beard taking on more salt than pepper. He's a handsome man who, by his account, has led a solid, almost Ward Cleaver existence.

"This is Flaubert's great idea," he says, settling back into the Haitian cotton sofa. "That in order to write, you need to cultivate boredom. And he did. He stayed away from Paris. He stayed away from the salons. ... He led a generally quiet and abstemious life. I am a very lucky man. Having a family. It's the way I live."

(See DOCTOROW, C-6)

'You lose your sense of time. You lose your personality when you're writing. I imagine it's the same feeling runners describe when they talk about their high.'

First Dog Is Latest Publicity Hound

Millie Isn't First In The Spotlight

By Roxanne Roberts
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — With Georgette Mosbacher revamping her image and John Tower out of the picture, the way seems cleared for Washington's latest publicity hound: Mildred Kerr Bush — a k a Millie, First Dog.

As the constant companion of President and Barbara Bush, the 2-year-old English springer spaniel has already nosed her way into a fair share of presidential portraits, but the birth of her first litter guarantees Millie and the White House press corps eight weeks of irresistible photo opportunities. On Friday night and early Saturday morning, Millie, aided by Mrs. Bush, delivered six 5-inch pups.

Puppies are — admit it — a lot more fun than sound bites from White House spokesmen Marlin Fitzwater. Cuter, too.

Millie was mated in January to "Tug" Farish, owned by Will Farish, a Bush family friend. The White House has since been flooded with requests for the puppies, already promised to the Bush grandchildren. Mrs. Bush's office has turned into ad hoc Puppy Central while her staff fields thousands of media inquiries about the dog. What once was Nancy Reagan's beauty salon was converted into a maternity ward, complete with the presidential seal on Millie's box. There are even reports of a puppy shower, where the mother-to-be received six rubber elephants that squeak.

Welcome to the latest chapter in Presidential Pooches.

There are cat people and dog people, and presidents — with rare exceptions — are dog people. Perhaps it has to do with the long-held superstition that the president will die if a cat enters the White House. (Mrs. Harding and Mrs. Coolidge are said to have bodily thrown cats out, although Coolidge himself favored a striped alley cat named Tiger.) Whatever the reason, it's dogs paws down, and the voters take the four-legged occupants seriously — sometimes as seriously as the two-legged ones, it seems.

Lyndon Johnson learned that lesson when he took his beagles Him and Her for that infamous stroll July 26, 1964, on the South Lawn. Surrounded by reporters, Johnson showed the crowd how he lifted his dogs by the ears. Shuttles clicked. Pens were poised. Her took it quietly, but Him let out a yelp heard round the country. Johnson was quoted as saying, "It's good for him," but thousands of angry calls and letters poured into Washington.

Johnson was, in fact, devoted to his dogs, and reportedly crushed when Her died later that year on the operating table after swallowing a rock on the White House lawn. Him was killed by a car in 1966. Freckles, a daughter of Him, subsequently presented the president with five beagle puppies, which he proudly displayed on the White House steps.

But it was Yuki, a mongrel found by Johnson's daughter Luci in the fall of 1966 at a Texas gas station, who really captured Johnson's heart. While the other dogs slept in kennels, Yuki slept with the president and even attended formal ceremonies. Staffers complained that

History Is Old Fred's Obsession

By Charles Hillinger
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

MACKINAW CITY, Mich. — If you saw Old Fred and didn't know him you would think he was one of the legion of America's homeless, a drifter perhaps. But you can't always tell a book by its cover.

Fred Litzner — known to everyone in this area as Old Fred — wears a well-worn flannel shirt, old trousers, a seedy black coat and faded black hat, walks with a cane and always carries a shopping bag. His get-up belies his standing as an extraordinary historian.

For 20 years, Litzner, 75, has lived in a tiny house filled floor to ceiling with hundreds of his handwritten notebooks, with boxes brimming over with historical records, with books and artifacts. He has no telephone or TV. There's hardly room for him to move about in his one-room modest dwelling.

Old Fred is the best-known character in the small towns along the byways and highways in the sparsely populated counties where Lakes Michigan and Huron come together separating Michigan's Upper Peninsula from the Lower.

"He waves at everybody, talks to everybody. Tell him your name and if you're from around here he'll tell you all about your family, tell you things about your ancestors you have never heard before. He's uncanny," said Joe Nowak, 48, a long-time Michigan state trooper.

"Old Fred hitchhikes everywhere. He doesn't have a car. He's a roamer. Everybody picks him up. He's such a friendly, fascinating person. He's a walking encyclopedia. And, he traces everyone's family tree," said Janet Peterson, 33, executive secretary of the St. Ignace Chamber of Commerce.

"The Ballad of Old Fred," published in the St. Ignace News, captures the essence of this remarkable man. It begins:

Litzner grew up on a Michigan farm. His grandparents came to Michigan from Germany in 1885 after seeing signs painted on barns urging Germans to migrate to Michigan, where the land was good, plentiful and almost free. The Germans came in droves.

Litzner graduated from high school in Saginaw. He farmed. But history was his avocation, his passion, his obsession. He purchased historical items at auctions and presented them to universities, museums, historical societies.

"He is known to historians at the University of Michigan, at Michigan State, to historians and librarians throughout Michigan. He is a most extraordinary person," said James Moody, 53, professor of history at Lake Superior State University, Sault Ste. Marie.

"I would like to sit down with Mr. Litzner for six months and tape everything he knows. He is a tremendous resource. I have just completed a paper for the National Academy of Sciences on the history of railroads in the Upper Peninsula and the industries that grew up with the advent of the railroads."

"Fred knows more about this than anyone I know. He knows the location of dozens of sites of towns that no longer exist. He can take you right to them. He has a tremendous collection of books and artifacts not only in his humble home but in storage that he maintains. He talks to everyone. He is as close to St. Francis of Assisi as anyone I have ever met."

Katherine Punch, 72, a librarian at the Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, Canada, library from 1937 to 1981 and on the library board ever since, is one of numerous librarians throughout Michigan and Ontario befriended by Litzner over the years.

"He knows history on a personal basis. He does so much for history. I've never met anyone quite like him. For 25 years he has been hitchhiking to my library from his home, bringing information to add to our historical collection," Punch said.

"I won't hear from him for months. Then one day he appears. He searches out small clues. Anything he runs across pertaining to the history of our area he collects, saves, then presents to us — papers, maps, photo documents. He has added immeasurably to our collection."

No One Will Believe It's Your First Sweater

Teaching someone to knit? This is the perfect pattern — one stitch, two colors and absolutely no shaping.

No one will believe this is your first handknit sweater. The V-neck, both front and back, along with the vibrant stripe pattern and interesting yarns, hide the simplicity of this summer top. The striped body is worked side to side using the first stitch every beginner learns, the super-simple knit stitch. Pick up stitches along the top for the shoulders, and along the bottom for the ribbing. You'll learn to purl for the ribbing. A simple seam will adjust the V-neckline to the depth you prefer.

Worn alone or paired with a shirt or turtleneck, this season-spanning top looks terrific. A perfect beginner's sweater, it's fun and easy to make.

To obtain directions for making Easy as 1-2-3 Top, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-031989 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-31989 by sending a check or money order for $14.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and yarn in your choice of lilac and white, jade and white or natural and white.

Dear Readers: I discovered quite by accident several years ago that it is easier to pick up stitches along any edge of a knitted piece with a crochet hook than with a knitting needle. Holding the yarn in your left hand and the crochet hook in your right hand, insert the hook into a knit stitch and with the hook, pull up a loop of yarn through the knitting and slip the loop onto your knitting needle, this forming one knit stitch. Repeat this procedure until the required number of stitches are on the needle.

Pat's Pointers

Pat Trexler

Or you may find it easier to pick up several loops with the crochet hook before transferring them to the knitting needle. To try this, pick up five to 10 loops, allowing them to remain on the hook. Then, slip them to the opposite end of the hook and pass them, one at a time, to the needle.

One word of warning: If you pass the stitches by just inserting the needle straight into the left side of each loop, the stitch will be incorrectly slanted on the knitting needle and you will then need to remember to knit (or purl) into the back of each stitch on your next row to straighten them. To avoid this, insert the needle into the right side of the back loop to pass each one. This will position the next stitch correctly on the needle.

Now, a word about creating vertical stripes. To achieve this when you are knitting from the bottom up or the top down, you will be changing colors frequently across each and every row — a tedious task, to say the least.

When you are knitting side to side, however, you are working the stripes in rows to one side edge is used for the top and the other for the bottom of your garment, while the cast-on and bound-off edges will become the side seam or seams.

This means that even though the stripes will appear horizontal while they are on the needles, they automatically become vertical when you assemble and put the finishing touches on your garment.

To work stripes in rows, you simply introduce a new color at the beginning of a row whenever you want to establish a different color stripe. When the stripes are narrow, you can carry the yarn loosely along the edge. When you are ready to change colors again, just pick it up, being sure not to pull it tight, and start working with the next color. This eliminates a lot of loose ends to weave in later.

If the stripes are wide, you will need to cut the strand you have been using (leaving the yarn end about 4 inches long) and start the next row with the new color, again leaving a "tail" of the same length. Tie the two ends together in a single knot or a very loose double knot.

To neatly finish the edges when you finish the piece, untie the tail ends, thread each end singly into a tapestry needle and weave them through the backs of several stitches on the wrong side, occasionally taking a back stitch to secure them.

Her Oxygen Tank Is Not A Threat

Dear Abby: My wife has a serious case of emphysema and is on oxygen 95 percent of the time. I am her caregiver and try to see that she gets out for duplicate bridge, bingo and an occasional shopping trip.

Our problem? We must take a portable oxygen tank with us wherever we go, and people are of the opinion that if someone smokes in the vicinity of an oxygen tank, it will explode.

At a church bingo game recently, a woman who claimed to be a nurse created a very disruptive scene, insisting that my wife's oxygen tank might explode and kill everyone in the building! We were asked to leave the church, and my wife was devastated.

I appealed to Father John and he asked us to come to the next bingo game where he would have the fire chief attend and explain to the players that there is no danger of having an oxygen tank explode. (Oxygen does not "explode"; it only hastens burning.)

Well, yesterday someone at a bridge game expressed some fear that my wife's oxygen tank endangered everyone in the vicinity. The accuser was very pigheaded and refused to listen to me or call the fire department for reassurance.

Abby, people who suffer from lung disease live very limiting lives. In order for my wife to go anywhere, we must load her wheelchair and oxygen tank into the car and find a place large enough for the equipment.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Please address this problem in your column. People need to know more about this subject. — R.J.B. in Lakeland, Fla.

Dear R.J.B.: Gladly. Some of the hysteria about the presence of an oxygen tank may be due to the fact that one sees "NO SMOKING — OXYGEN" signs posted in hospitals. These signs are there because there are oxygen outlets in the walls filled with concentrated oxygen, and should a fire break out, the oxygen would make the fire burn more quickly.

I checked with my local fire department, and the chief is in total agreement with yours. Your wife's oxygen equipment is no cause for alarm. A tank with a tube feeding a tiny stream of oxygen into your wife's nose endangers no one — even if someone were to be smoking nearby.

Dear Abby: My husband is driving me crazy. After a year of marriage, his disorganized, slovenly habits are starting to affect me. There is a pile of his clothes a foot high on our bedroom floor. It's been there for two months, and he hasn't decided what to do with it yet. Every closet and cupboard is crammed full of his stuff. Our dresser is covered with junk. He never puts anything away; he just keeps adding to it.

I've tried straightening up the place, but in two days it's a mess again. He "lost" a shoe once, and it turned up in the clothes hamper. I can't go on living like this. I am really at the end of my rope. What should I do? — Wife Of A Slob

Dear Wife: Since you are at the end of your marriage — you are addressing your complaints to the wrong person. Give your husband a choice. He can either make an honest effort to correct his slovenly habits, or you are leaving.

Confidential To All Parents: Parents who want to "train a child in the way he should go" should go that way themselves.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA, 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Charting Eating Habits Unreliable, Study Says

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Obesity is second only to tooth decay as a major nutritional problem in this country, says a nutrition expert at the University of Rochester's Medical School.

Dr. Gilbert Forbes spent nearly a half-century researching the role of food plays in determining whether we grow up lean or fat. He finally grew skeptical of what patients would tell him about their normal eating habits and their ability to gain or lose weight.

So he embarked on a massive study on the effects of overeating in women. Subjects were paid $800 each to live at the University's medical center for a month, eating as much as they could.

They were given three hearty meals a day plus three snacks with milkshakes, peanut butter and crackers, chocolate cookies, pound cake and other high-calorie foods. Toward the end of the month, the women were consuming an average of 1,800 extra calories a day — nearly twice what they said was their normal intake.

The result? The women had gained between 7½ and 11½ pounds each.

"Even the two thin women who told us that they had been unable to gain weight in the past gained during the study," says Forbes. "It's just what we expected."

What he learned is that overweight patients tend to underestimate what they eat and underweight people tend to overestimate what they eat.

He also says that under controlled conditions, patients always lose weight when their calorie intake is below a normal maintenance diet — even those who said they couldn't lose weight before.

He adds, however, that genetics may still play a part in people who are "born" to be fat.

Forbes recently studied 51 pairs of identical and 38 pairs of fraternal twins of the same sex. He weighed them, tested them for lean-fat tissue ratios, measured their height and the dimensions of their chest, weight and hips to see where fat deposits had accumulated.

"What we found is that the identical twins were much more concordant than the fraternal twins," he says, "in both the amount of body fat they had, and the distribution of the fat. If one identical twin had a small belly and big hips, the other twin did, too."

Forbes believes that genetic influence plays nearly as powerful a role in the distribution of lean and fat as it does in height, but he will not go so far as to say that some people are genetically "predestined" to gain weight on the same diet that keeps others trim.

"I think of obesity as a disease of appetite," he says. "All the evidence we have accumulated under controlled conditions suggests that obese people do tend to eat more than lean people."

"I think what obese people may inherit is a big appetite."

Pennsylvania's Last Distillery Is Still Producing In Allentown

By Paul Wirth
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALLENTOWN, Pa. — On the last day before Prohibition, the line outside Michter's Distillery stretched for 2½ miles.

Customers came on that cold day in 1919 to fill casks, bottles and tin cups and to drink their last rations of legal whiskey until Prohibition was repealed in 1933.

Michter's is a bit easier to get today. The golden-brown sour mash whiskey is sold in state stores and to tourists who visit the Schaefferstown distillery.

Michter's Distillery is the lone survivor of the 3,000 that once operated in Pennsylvania and the only place in the state where whiskey can be bought legally on a Sunday.

In the 235 years since John Shenk, a Swiss Mennonite farmer, first cooked down a pot of grain for distilling, Michter's has operated continuously — except during Prohibition. The distillery is now on the National Register of Historic Places.

In colonial days, whiskey was an important commodity often used for medicinal purposes. George Washington is said to have stopped at Michter's, en route to Valley Forge, to pick up whiskey for his troops.

The distillery has fallen on hard times in recent years. Sales have plummeted to 10,000 cases per year from 40,000 cases 10 years ago. The company filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in 1980 and was taken over by a bank after it foreclosed. It is now owned by an unidentified group of Philadelphia area investors.

At current sales rates, the 100,000 cases of whiskey in the Michter's warehouse are enough to last 10 years.

The distillery generally makes whiskey three or four months a year, usually beginning in late fall when the water table is high and the grains most available, says Michter official Elaine Eckenroth.

During the production season, 25 employees turn out 50 barrels of whiskey a day, six days a week. Each barrel contains 50 gallons.

The whiskey begins with a blend of rye and corn grown in Pennsylvania Dutch country.

The grain is milled slowly, to expose its starch and preserve its flavor, then mixed with 56-degree well water. Stillage from the day before is added, much like in the making of sourdough, to sour the mash.

After cooking, barley malt from North Dakota's Red River Valley is added to the mixture; the natural malt enzymes convert the liquified starch to sugar.

Yeast is added, and the living organisms eat the sugar over a period of three days, giving off carbon dioxide and alcohol. The carbon dioxide bubbles away, and the alcohol remains.

When the mixture reaches 7 percent alcohol, it is called distiller's beer. The beer is distilled to separate the spirits from it, and the left-over mushy substance is collected to sour the next batch of mash.

Another byproduct, distiller's grain, is sold to area cattle farmers as a high-protein feed.

The spirits are distilled again, and impurities called "heads and tails" are siphoned off, leaving behind a colorless liquid with 78 percent alcohol content, or 156 proof.

Joint Recital To Be Given By Pair At ECU Tonight

A joint recital by Michelle Dunn of Henderson and Rudy McNeill of New Bern, both students of Beatrice Chauncey in the School of Music, East Carolina University, will be presented at 7 o'clock tonight in the

A.J. Fletcher Recital on the ECU campus. The recital is free and open to the public.

Both performers are flutists. They will be accompanied by Alisa Weatherington, pianist.

Travel Film Will Wrap Up ECU Series

ECU NEWS BUREAU

"Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Labrador," a travel documentary film narrated by producer Don Cooper, will be screened Thursday at East Carolina University as the final attraction on ECU's 1988-89 Travel-Adventure Film series.

The film will be shown in Hendrix Theatre, beginning at 8 p.m. Tickets, $4 each, are available at the Central Ticket Office in Mendenhall Student Center, telephone 757-6611, ext. 266, or at the door.

Billed as a "scenic montage which captures the abundant beauty" of eastern Canada, the film offers views of nature and wildlife: spectacular coastal scenery and the life and habits of such animals as the wolf, the marten, the ptarmigan, the eagle and the caribou.

Historic and cultural features include footage of the changing of the guard at the Citadel, the "parade of sail" departure from Nova Scotia's Sidney Harbour, early settlements in Acadia (setting of Longfellow's famous poem, "Evangeline"), the French stronghold Louisbourg, quaint English pubs in St. John's, Newfoundland, and the Eskimo populations of Labrador.

ABC's New Series Takes The Male Point Of View

By Soll Sussman
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TORONTO — Yes, they've heard the jokes about "mensomething" on the set of the new television series "Men."
But cast and crew alike say viewers of the new ABC series, premiering Saturday, are not in for another dose of yuppie whining that ABC's hit "thirtysomething" has been accused of.

"It's the time to look at the male point of view of life," executive producer and director Peter Werner said in an interview. "It's time to consider what's going on inside a man's life and psyche."
The new series is inspired not by "thirtysomething" but the "About Men" column in The New York Times Magazine and its wry, unconventional looks at what it means to be male in modern times.

ABC is giving the one-hour drama series a spring tryout.
Werner calls the idea of making the series "a combination of inspiration and logic."

He said the four most popular genres in television are shows about doctors, police officers, lawyers and reporters.
So, the four long-time friends in "Men" are surgeon Steven, newspaper columnist Paul, lawyer Charlie and cop Thomas. Thomas dies in the pilot. His younger brother Danny, also a cop, then is taken into the group.
They live in Baltimore because, the pony-tailed Werner said, that's the kind of place where you could believe four guys who knew each other in high school still might hang out together.

"These are men whose work in the world makes it a slightly better place," he said.
"The producer said his own experience includes the first year of 'Moonlighting' when it was a fresh, quirky voice on television, and that's what he is aiming for here."
Werner said humor definitely will play a part in the show.
"The biggest danger is taking yourself too seriously," he said.
The creator and other executive producer is Steve Brown, who was involved in "Cagney & Lacey."
Although enough movies and television shows have been made in Toronto to earn it the nickname "Hollywood North," locally based Atlantis Films believes this is the first time a Canadian company is producing a prime-time series directly for a U.S. network.
Canadian actor Saul Rubinek, who plays the newspaper columnist, said the show won't be simply four guys sitting around talking.
"It won't be boring," he said, on a break from filming a party scene. "You may like it, or hate it, but that's one thing I can promise you. It's not going to be boring."
He also said, despite the four guys' professions, that it won't simply revolve from cop show to surgeon show to lawyer show to reporter show.
"It's about how these men react to their work and each other," said the talkative Rubinek, who recently wrote a well-received book about his immigrant parents. "I know this show is not developed cynically."

He said the subject matter will be men in their roles as brother, son, husband, friend and lover, so there will be plenty of territory to cover.
Asked if most shows aren't already about men, Rubinek said men generally have been shown on television as pretty types, dumb types, fantasy macho figures or eccentrics.
Rubinek is the only Canadian actor among the principals, but, he joked, "I'm paid too much to feel Canadian."
Also starring are Ted Wass as the surgeon, Tom O'Brien as the young policeman and Ving Rhames as the lawyer.
Rhames, who grew up on Harlem's 126th Street, said the theme of a black man whose three best friends are white hasn't been explored too much in the first set of shows.

"I think we have a ways to go as far as that aspect," he said.
The actor said the show is "not cliché" and will be delving into men's hearts and souls. For that reason, Rhames said, "I think women are more ready for the show than men."

Bernadette Peters Leaves Broadway For The Film Set

By Hillel Italie
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — On a recent stroll around New York's Upper West Side, Bernadette Peters was greeted by shouts of appreciation from passersby. For Peters, a Broadway star whose performance in "Song and Dance" earned her a Tony, it's her part of town.

But cross over to the East Side and head down about 60 blocks and the bright lights give way to the lofts and underground art galleries of SoHo. It's a world depicted in Tama Janowitz's collection of stories, "Slaves of New York," a new movie in which Peters stars.

It's also a world that the actress, a native of Ozone Park in Queens, knew little about.

"It was a unique experience doing the film," Peters said in a recent interview. "There were lots of areas I had never gone to before — the burned-out buildings, Avenue C and D with people living in burned-out cars. I never realized how much of that there was."

"Slaves of New York" was developed by the producer-director team of Ismail Merchant and James Ivory, whose long list of credits include "A Room With a View" and "Maurice."

Peters stars as Eleanor, a copyreader at an East Village newspaper who lives with her boyfriend, Stash, a manipulative and highstrung artist. Dressed in layers of colorful clothing and designing outrageous hats, Eleanor seems to share the same offbeat outlook as her bohemian friends, yet feels inferior.

"She doesn't appreciate herself," Peters said. "She doesn't realize what she's capable of. Everyone else is concerned with what will sell, but Eleanor just makes hats because she enjoys it."

Peters recently turned 41, but her soft features, squeaky voice and long, curly, blond hair make her appear much younger. She has been in show business since age 5 when she was a regular on television's "Horn and Hardart Children's Hour."

But she was a fan as well. Peters recalled seeing the film version of "Auntie Mame," with Rosalind Russell reprising her star stage role.

"My girlfriends rang the bell and I said OK, and asked my mother if I could go. I realized that when I got home how much I loved the movie. What I love right now is that with each film I'm learning more about being in front of the camera. It's about making that moment immediate. I love that."

Movies were even more important to Peters than the newest craze of the 1950s: rock 'n' roll.

Foreign Film Category Controversy For Oscars

By Bob Thomas
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Of all the nomination processes that lead to Academy Awards, none is more complicated — or controversial — than the foreign language film award.

It's commonly called the "foreign film" award. Not so. Nominees must be in a language other than English, hence films from England, Australia and Canada (except for Canadian films in French such as the recent "The Decline of the American Empire") are not eligible in this category.

The controversial part of the foreign language award stems from the fact that the National Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences and its voters have no control over the nominations. The countries themselves can nominate one film per year. The system has been criticized for its inequities.

Critics claim that governments, especially military or communist dictatorships, sometimes refuse to nominate films showing those countries in a bad light. Politics in the selection committee can also eliminate likely choices.

Three years ago Akira Kurosawa's widely acclaimed "Ran" was not submitted because of wrangling among Japanese committee members. The directors-branch of the Academy rallied to the great filmmaker and nominated him for best director.

This year's nominations for the foreign language Oscar managed to dodge controversy. Two of the entries stand out: Spain's "Women on the Verge of a Nervous Breakdown," which has attracted rave reviews; and Denmark's "Pelle the Conqueror," winner of the Cannes Film Festival prize for best picture.

"Women on the Verge of a Nervous Breakdown," written and directed by Pedro Almodovar, concerns two Madrid women whose personal and professional lives are in chaos. The comedy has been a big success in the United States ($4.4 million in 17 weeks of limited release), and critics have compared it to the screwball comedies of Howard Hawks, Leo McCarey and George Stevens.

The star, Carmen Maura, is not surprised by the American response. Her friendship with Almodovar goes back to when he worked for the Madrid telephone company and she was a television talk-show hostess.

"When I began to work with Pedro 10 years ago and we had a very special situation together," she said during a visit here, "I said to him: 'Hey, Pedro, don't worry, because in one time the Americans will understand you.'"

"I am very proud of Pedro Almodovar. I think he's very genuine. His sense of humor is very American sometimes, and mine also. So I understand why you Americans like 'Women on the Verge.'"

Max Von Sydow, who stars in "Pelle the Conqueror" along with young Pelle Hvenegaard as his son, also has high praise for his director, Danish Bille August. "He's very, very sensitive and has a great hand with people, especially children. Very soft-spoken, he seems almost shy. But he's a brilliant man, and I'm really looking forward to seeing what he'll do in the future."

"Pelle" ($1.1 million during 11 weeks of limited domestic release) concerns a Swedish peasant who brings his son to a Danish farm, where the father endures a series of indignities as a lowly worker. The film was shot on the bleak landscape during one of the coldest winters in decades.

"It looks more rugged than it really was," Von Sydow said. "We had to spend a few cold days and nights out in the open, but thank God, we had warmth nearby."

"Hanusen," the entry from Hungary, is the third of three impressive films by Istvan Szabo on themes of human folly and free will. The first, "Mephisto," won the Oscar for foreign language film of 1981. The second was nominated in 1985. All three star Klaus Maria Brandauer, known to American audiences as Meryl Streep's husband in "Out of Africa."

Brandauer plays Erik Jan Hanussen, whose apparent genius for telepathy makes him a theatrical star in Germany. His fame leads him into the inner circles of Nazi power, with unexpected results.

"Salaam Bombay," directed by

Mira Nair, is the nominee from India, earning $1.8 million during 22 weeks of limited U.S. release. Filmed with grim realism, the story concerns a young boy who is abandoned by his family to the streets of Bombay, where he consorts with thieves, drug dealers, prostitutes and pimps.

The Belgian entry is "The Music Teacher," directed by Gerard Corbiau. The story concerns a vocal coach imposes his strict discipline on two singers, entering them into a competition sponsored by a wealthy patron who hates him.

Sensitive Film Roles Pave The Way To Recognition From The Academy

By John Horn
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOLLYWOOD — Portraying the physically or mentally impaired presents a challenge to film actors, who must make the part credible as well as sensitive. Academy Award voters have rewarded several for their efforts with the coveted Oscar. This year, Dustin Hoffman and Tom Hanks are competing for the best actor prize, based on their roles as adults with diminished mental capacities. As critics noted, both infused their parts with credibility, keeping their characters grounded in the realities of their predicaments, rather than playing Tinsel Town cliches.

"Tom is fun ... but he had to be more restrained," said director Penny Marshall. "Innocent and shy was better than loud and brash and broad. If (his character) is just skipping down the block and making silly faces, I don't think you get involved with the movie."

"Basically, you have to not act like what you think a child acts like, but get in touch with the child inside of you."

Indeed, both actors found the key to their depictions from within.

"I simply pretended I was 12 years old. That's all I did," said the 32-year-old Hanks of his role as Josh Baskin, a child locked in a man's body in "Big."

Hoffman, who plays a compulsive autistic savant in "Rain Man," discovered the secret to Raymond Babbitt by examining his own fastidious acting habits. "I suddenly realized that I was playing off myself because I know something about obsession and I'm comfortable being obsessive," the 51-year-old actor said. "The rest of it just took care of itself."

Such introspection brought more than believability to "Rain Man" and "Big." It also allowed both actors to touch on emotions not limited to their character's situation.

In "Rain Man," for example, Hoffman's autistic savant was used not for melodrama but to illuminate the fear of the unknown and the desire for order that many of us share. And as a youngster suddenly thrust into a cutthroat corporate environment, Hanks hinted that innocence and fairness can, in the end, prevail.

Yet, given their subject matter, both films ran the risk of falling into Hollywood formula, where complicated disorders are reduced to plot devices, and multidimensional people with disabilities are simplified for audience appeal.

Actors such as Oscar-winner Jack Nicholson (as a renegade mental patient in 1975's "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest") and Emmy-winner Larry Drake (the mildly retarded office clerk on "L.A. Law") have been singled out for accurately portraying the mentally impaired.

And Academy Award voters and film critics have praised a variety of other actors playing characters with mental and physical impairments: Jane Wyman won an Oscar for playing a deaf-mute in 1948's "Johnny Belinda"; Patty Duke was awarded a statuette for her depiction of Helen Keller in 1962's "The Miracle Worker."

Marlon Brando was commended for his performance as an injured war veteran for 1950's "The Men"; Cliff Robertson won an Oscar for playing a man with mental retardation in 1968's "Charly"; Jon Voight took the best actor prize for playing a paraplegic in 1978's "Coming Home"; John Malkovich was a best supporting actor nominee for his role as a blind border in 1984's "Places in the Heart."

And John Hurt and Charles Laughton suffered pounds of daily makeup and folded their bodies into contorted positions for sensitive roles they played. For his lead in 1980's "The Elephant Man," Hurt received a nomination for best actor. Laughton won critical and industry praise in 1939's "The Hunchback of Notre Dame."

But many others have been faulted for overblown, inaccurate representations.

Josie Abady directed the play "The Boys Next Door," about four mentally handicapped men in a group home.

"Like all people, people who are handicapped are funny, they're pathetic, they're great," Abady said.

"You just think cheap shot, and you've got the stereotype," Drake said. "Hoffman's character and my character both have a full range of emotion. And that seems to surprise people — that the characters can feel as much as they feel, and note as much as they note."

As originally written by Barry Morrow, "Rain Man" described Hoffman's autistic character as "an overgrown Cabbage Patch doll," a person with the lovable, huggable habits of the mentally retarded as typically seen through entertainment industry eyes.

"But Dustin suggested that it would be more interesting if the guy was more autistic, more quirky and less cuddly," said "Rain Man" co-screenwriter Ron Bass. "The idea is that there would be two autistic characters — the Raymond character who is clinically autistic and the Charlie character (a coldhearted car salesman played by Tom Cruise) who is emotionally autistic."

"In this situation, you don't fall in love with Dustin right away," Bass said. "He's a difficult guy, and just when you think what he's doing is kind of cute and sweet, he does something completely weird."

Hoffman's depiction of autism was much better than what he's seen in the past, said George Zitnay, executive director of the Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. Foundation.

Zitnay said movies tend to depict the disabled "as being much more disabled than they really are. ... My attitude has always been that films have done a disservice to persons with mental retardation."

Author's Work Brings Criticism From The Women's Movement

When the roles of men and women were quintessentially polarized, and a woman's job was to "produce babies," she said. It wasn't until later that "we were urged to go out and produce refrigerators."

Schwartz acknowledged that her career, which included three years in manufacturing, was not in corporate management. But, for 27 years "I've been talking with people in the corporate world" as founder-president of Catalyst, a not-for-profit research and advisory organization.

Catalyst was begun in 1962, she says, "to expand career options" for women. "I more recently has addressed family options for career women — things that enable women and men "to do what they want to do with their lives."

If feminists are taking exception to her ideas about working women, well, Schwartz thinks that's healthy.

"I'm not dividing women into two groups" but rather just noting "the two problems that companies have to deal with," she said.

"I'm very happy to have all this (attention)," she said, adding, "I think it extends the life of the discussion. If this is triggering some really negative feeling in women, then we've got to get it out and talk about it."

But, she added, "the amount of distortion is discouraging."

What she was doing, she said, was "trying to focus corporate attention on the two responses that would enable (corporations) to respond to women wherever they are" on the career-family spectrum.

"I wanted to say, 'Look, (these are the) things you've got to learn to do to remove counterproductive attitudes and behaviors that prevail still in the corporation, and facilitate the productivity of women," not impede it. "They don't want to impede (women). They need women."

But by distinguishing between career-primary and career-and-family women, wasn't she reinforcing the idea that parenting is women's work?

"No, of course not," she replied. "This is saying women are still bearing the primary responsibility for childbearing and it's nonsense not to say that." This, she says, means women need "flexibility" in work hours and schedules so "they don't have to renounce their careers."

Corporations must consider workers' lives because current parental leave policies now are "making it difficult for women to survive," Schwartz said. "I don't believe you can have a child and return to full-time vigorous employment eight weeks afterward."

Though long, paid parental leaves are not "in the foreseeable future," Schwartz sees some advances benefiting women who want both families and careers: a major accounting firm lets women work half-time for three years, then "rejoin the partner line"; a large New York law firm has extended the time for making partner from 5½ to 11 years, specifically so women who want time out "can jump back in."

Schwartz noted that the average age of the first birth among women college graduates is now 31. "We've invested a lot of money in these women" in nine years on the job. "Let's hold on to them."

But might her outlined dual-corporate policy for women simply encourage the best and the brightest not to have children? No, Schwartz said.

"It's got nothing to do with whether they're mothers," she said. "It's got to do with their own priorities. ... It won't be either-or as companies become more and more flexible and enable women to be active participants in family life for periods ... and still return to a very strong career commitment" that takes them to the corporate peak.

This is her message — and it has nothing to do with tracks, she said.

In an ideal world, she noted, women would not have to make career-family choices. But in the real world, "I'm saying neither men nor women can have everything. There are trade-offs. ..."

Cadillac Is Cruising Back Into Contention

By James Risen
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

DETROIT — Add a few extra inches here, a little more sheet metal there, throw in a hint of fender skirts and tail fins — and what happens? Cadillac makes a comeback.

Last fall, Cadillac, desperate to recapture its traditional buyers who had fled to Lincoln and the imports after Cadillac had downsized its cars in the mid-1980s, introduced a new line of bigger, longer and, many would argue — gaudier — cars.

In an overt attempt to give the aging country club set the old-style Cadillac touches they yearned for, Cadillac brought back the land cruiser. Replete with fender skirts and extended tail lamps that resemble tail fins, the new Cadillac DeVille and Fleetwood models looked as though they had been driven straight out of the 1960s.

At first the media scoffed, yet the response from Cadillac's old customers during the past few months to the newly lengthened De Ville and Fleetwood lines has been overwhelming.

Now, Cadillac sales are soaring, almost overnight reversing a long, steep dive that had threatened to permanently erode Cadillac's presence in the luxury car market.

After building momentum throughout the fall, Cadillac sales have started to explode. In January the division's sales soared more than 50 percent.

"What has happened is very simple," observes Chris Cedergren, automotive analyst with J. D. Power & Associates, an Agoura Hills, Calif., automotive market research firm. "What Cadillac has done is give the Cadillac buyer back his car."

Cadillac buyers crave size and distinction, Cedergren and others argue, and were turned off when GM's luxury division offered smaller cars that were nearly identical to those sold by Buick and Oldsmobile. While Cadillac did not turn the clock back completely by reverting to rear-wheel-drive — the new Cadillac DeVille and Fleetwood lines are still front-wheel-drive — they are now longer than anything sold by GM's other divisions.

Indeed, Cadillac executives and dealers believe that most of the sales surge is coming from old Cadillac customers who had defected in recent years to Ford's Lincoln-Continental luxury line, or to the German imports.

Despite the surge, however, Cadillac is still sticking to its earlier forecasts that call for relatively flat sales in 1989. Its De Ville and Fleetwood sales should be up, but Grettemberger's not sure the rest of the Cadillac lineup can hold up in the face of what he expects to be an industrywide slump in luxury car sales this year.

LAT-WP News Service

Cadillac has returned with a hint of the old tail fins

Indeed, Cadillac's biggest challenge is to turn around its two other main lines — the long-suffering Eldorado and Seville. Both have been plagued by the same kind of downsizing mistakes that devastated the De Ville and Fleetwood. In fact, while both are supposed to compete in the performance luxury market against the Germans and the Japanese, they've done almost nothing in recent years to improve Cadillac's standing among the affluent young luxury buyers who now flock to BMW and Acura.

As a result, analysts say Cadillac is planning to introduce all-new Eldorado and Seville models in late 1991 for the 1992 model year. The redesigned cars, which will not have clones at any other GM division, will be both wider and longer than the current cars, with the Seville expected to be a foot longer than the 1989 model. Along with the larger size, a more sophisticated approach to the design and handling of the two cars may expand their appeal.

That's not to say, however, that Cadillac's basic problem — its inability to attract baby boom generation luxury car buyers — has disappeared. Far from it. While it has lured its old buyers back, those people are slowly dying off. At the same time, the new Eldorado and Seville models are still nearly three years off, and the luxury market is getting more and more congested each year.

'First Dogs' Popular

the dog had "taken over the White House," climbing onto laps of visitors "whether they like it or not," but Yuki prevailed, and later retired to LBJ ranch with Johnson.

The last White House puppies — nine of them, in 1975 — came from Liberty, a golden retriever given to President Ford by his daughter Susan. But the most famous White House puppies have to be the "pupniks" that were born in the Kennedy administration. In an early example of glasnost, Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev presented Jacqueline Kennedy with Pushinka ("Fluff" in Russian), the daughter of Russian space dog Strelka, in 1961. The little white puppy was an instant hit, especially with the Kennedys' Welsh terrier Charlie. Two years later, the canine sweethearts produced four puppies, much to the delight of 5-year-old Caroline. This brought the Kennedy menagerie to nine dogs — including Clipper, a German shepherd; Wolf, a gray Irish wolfhound; and Shannon, a cocker spaniel — plus assorted ducks, hamsters (which caused a minor emergency when they escaped into air ducts and appeared in the president's bathroom) and Caroline's pony, Macaroni.

Alas, the black cocker spaniel Checkers, immortalized in Richard Nixon's 1952 speech, never made it to first dog. Nixon's daughters did, however, bring Vicky, a miniature French poodle, and Pasha, a Yorkshire terrier, to the White House. And on his 56th birthday, Nixon's staff gave him an Irish setter, King Timahoe, who quickly became his favorite.

President Harding's Laddie Boy ushered in the cult of the White House dog personality. The Aireade became a national celebrity when he "gave" an interview to The Washington Star in 1921, offering his opinions on the dog issues of the day. In a "match made in political heaven," Harding gave the popular dog his own valet and his own chair at Cabinet meetings. When Harding died in office in 1923, a statuette of Laddie Boy was commissioned as a tribute to the late president.

The most striking dogs in the White House had to be Rob Roy and Prudence Prim, the "superlatively beautiful" white collies owned by President Calvin Coolidge. Coolidge is said to have put excessive amounts of sugar into his after-dinner coffee because the long-nosed collies loved to nuzzle the syrup from the cup. Rob Roy, by the way, is the only dog to make it into the White House portrait gallery, in a famous portrait of Mrs. Coolidge.

But it was Franklin Roosevelt's Fala, a Scottie, who epitomized the title of first dog. Called the "most photographed dog in the world," Fala was Roosevelt's constant companion, traveling all over the globe with the president. This "tail-wagging busybody" is said to have won FDR a million votes due to the famous "Fala" speech in the 1944 campaign.

Doctorow Riding High These Days

The photographer wants Doctorow to pose for a picture. He is obliging. "Do you want me to put on my coat and tie and stand by the window so it looks like I'm outside, like they did for Time?" he says. Later he jokes, "If your camera's broken, don't blame me."

The camera whirs. Doctorow has stopped talking. He is staring out the window, past the housing projects and city rooftops, past the drifting clouds to some other time and place.

After a while the silence is broken by a small voice.

"Try and give me a nice Clint Eastwood quality."

As a kid, Doctorow read everything he could get his hands on: Hawthorne, Melville, pulp novels, tabloids. "I read a lot of junk. I didn't distinguish between the bad and the good. I'd go from the bad to the good and love it all — sports, mysteries, ghost stories and then Cervantes. It was just all one flow."

His parents were second-generation Americans of Russian Jewish descent. His father owned a music store. They lived in the Bronx.

"The whole point about the Bronx," he says, "is that it was, in a sense, nowhere. It was endless miles of anonymous, middle-class neighborhoods that had great vitality, of course, but always struck me as being not quite central to the world. There was always the lack of character — that in itself generated a lot of feverish activity on the part of children, to create an imaginary place for themselves, and a surprising number of writers and artists and film-makers have come out of there."

"Brooklyn always had this kind of press agency attached to it, but in fact the Bronx was far more interesting and far more mysterious precisely because it couldn't really be labeled."

So Doctorow learned to invent. "Writers are supposed to write only what they know about, and that's usually interpreted to mean you can only write about your own experience. But there are various ways you know things, and one of them is intuition. Speculation. You know things by means of imagination. Imagination is a form of knowledge."

He rests his feet on a glass-top coffee table. "So it's quite possible to write about places you've never been, and to get into the skin of people who are not yourself."

Writing, he says, is a form of self-hypnotism. "I think once you're in it, it's quite transporting. You lose your sense of time. You lose your personality when you're writing."

He pauses. "I imagine it's the same feeling runners describe when they talk about their high."

He went to the Bronx High School of Science, and then to Kenyon College and later to Columbia Drama School. He married at the age of 23. At the age of 33 he became book editor for Dial Press and then its publisher.

He is quick to point out that Billy, who made a father figure of Dutch Schultz, is not the boyhood voice of Ed Doctorow. Billy was 15 in 1934, the author says. "I was 4."

He's riding high these days, and taking it in stride. "No matter what happens when a book is published, you're going to sit down and work the next day," he says. "Of course it's better to get everything. You always want it all — you want the reviews, you want the sales."

Master Blender Needs A Keen Sense Of Smell

COGNAC, France (AP) — Some good jobs are won by a nose in this little community of southwestern France.

Sensitive nostrils can easily nose out competition here, where nearly all 23,000 inhabitants are involved in making and selling cognac. A keen sense of smell insures success for a master blender, or "maitre de chais," who helps create the well-known brandy that comes from this area.

As a rule, these jobs are hard to come by since they are handed down from father to son over many generations.

In addition to being able to detect what creates superb cognac, a master blender must put to memory the taste of each of hundreds of cognacs of various ages and zones. He must also recall combinations of blends that can total 30 or more.

For this flair, he is treated in this community with awe. People whisper as he walks by, for it is he who is final arbiter of France's No. 1 export product.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY March 23
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Clear up any loose ends left over from yesterday. Maintain control over a young family member's school work. Plan an evening love-in.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): You feel companionable and have good taste. Shop for personal apparel and accessories. Make a day of it and rendezvous with a friend.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Let important matters rest for the day. Focus on family and friendly meetings. The day is ripe for some innocent flirting.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Lend a sympathetic ear to a good friend who is too proud to ask for help. Engage in activities you enjoy.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Looking at both sides of the picture will help you to understand a career problem. It may be necessary to lower expectations.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Actions taken today will have to be tempered if you are to succeed. Use a gentle approach to get what you want.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Money matters are not the brightest. Sharpen the pencil and straighten out the budget. Start now to plan for future vacations.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Your upbeat mood will be pleasing to everyone around you. Give yourself a pat on the back for recent progress.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Worry over a legal problem will not change it. Take the matter to a professional. Evening relaxation is recommended.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Recreational activities are not satisfying your need for an emotional release. Select new activities that fit your style.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): You can take a leadership role if offered. Working with young people and animals is rewarding and has career possibilities.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): The question of whether there is someone else can lead to jealousy and ultimate tension. Satisfy your self-esteem and build confidence.

club—Trump Coup Tommy was back and everybody's wallet was benefitting. So what if, when the trumps didn't break, he played like a genius. The rest of the time he was donating to all and sundry, and no one complained about the occasional setback. The regulars had learned never to double Tommy when trumps weren't breaking; but silence didn't save East on this hand.

Trump Coup Tommy wasted no time in cue-bidding the enemy suit once his partner showed a powerhouse with a good heart fit. North could hardly do less than bid six hearts.

West led the king of clubs, and it did not take Tommy long to play the hand. He won the opening lead in dummy and cashed the ace of trumps, and the moment he saw West stuff a club, he was a man transformed. His eyes took on a steely glint, and he played swiftly and surely.

After cashing the table's two diamonds, Tommy ruffed a club. Back to the ace of spades for another club ruff, then a diamond ruff. Lastly, the queen of spades was taken, followed by a spade to the king. When East followed helplessly to all these tricks, Tommy was ready to claim the balance but one.

Everyone was down to three cards. East held three trumps, dummy two trumps and a spade and Tommy two trumps and a diamond. Tommy simply led the board's last spade, and East was a goner. If he ruffed low, Tommy would overruff and cash the king of trumps for his 12th trick, so East was forced to split his honors. Now Tommy discarded his diamond, and East had to lead away from his Q 8 of hearts into Tommy's combined K 10 ten-ace. Making six-odd.

Lost Easter Eggs

By Tamina Lamb

One day the Easter Bunny was skipping through the woods. He dropped his Easter eggs. Now what will I do! Fast! Fast! I have to find the eggs fast before it is time to go give them out. The people will be mad with me and I will be the saddest Easter Bunny in this town.

Very quickly I will look for them. The Easter Bunny looked and looked. Soon he met Mr. Fox. He said, "Do you know what happened to my Easter eggs?"

The fox said, "Maybe Little Monkey ate them."

Then the Easter Bunny looked at the fox's face. He saw some egg crumbs on his whiskers. The Easter Bunny said, "Ah, ha! You have been eating my Easter eggs so now you will have to help me dye some more."

So the fox went home with the Easter Bunny and they dyed some more eggs quickly. Finally, they finished and the Easter Bunny went skipping through the forest giving out the Easter eggs.

Tamina Lamb, 7, a student at Third Street School wins this week's writing contest.

Bunny Gave Me Breakfast

By Will Kinzie

One day at Easter I went looking for the Easter Bunny. I did not find him, he found me. He gave me an egg for breakfast. The egg was good to eat. The next time I see him I will say, "Thank you for giving me breakfast."

Will Kinzie, 6, a student at Third Street School receives special mention.

Easter

By Molly Chused

Easter is very fun.
You run, run, run
To find the eggs.
You need to use your legs.

Have some treats,
Instead of meat.
I saw the Easter Bunny,
He looked so very funny.

Molly Chused, 11, a student at Parrott Academy receives special mention.

Ben Bunny

By Jennifer Cobb

Hello, my name is Ben Bunny. I can tell you a lot about bunnies. My color is brown and I feel soft, warm and furry. I'm fat, thick and tiny. I smell clean and my tail is short and round like a ball. It's also furry. My ears are long. I carry a basket with eggs in it. Sometimes I have whiskers and I have black eyes. Well, I have to go so I can deliver Easter eggs.

Jennifer Cobb, 7, a student at Falkland Elementary School receives special mention.

Easter Bunny Lost His Nose

By Ricky Waters

Once there was an Easter Bunny who was hiding eggs. When he put an egg beneath a daisy, a bee stung him on the nose. He ran quickly home! He looked in the mirror. His nose was gone! He went back to look for it. He saw some boys and girls at an egg hunt running around and yelling. "I got one." "Me, too." Then he saw a boy sitting by a tree holding what seemed to be his nose. He walked up to the boy and said, "Will you give me my nose?"

The boy jumped up and said, "Who are you?"

The bunny said, "It doesn't matter, give me my nose, please! I need it!" The bunny gave the boy a chocolate Easter surprise and disappeared through the trees.

Ricky Waters, 9, a student at Ayden Elementary School receives special mention.

Easter Sunday

By Andy Ramsden

Once I saw a little rabbit hop and jump; it was a brown rabbit. He had big ears and then he ate a carrot. The next day was Easter Sunday. I went to sleep, I got up and it was Easter Sunday and I saw a rabbit outside. It had a basket with eggs. In the basket the color of the eggs were pink, red, green and some more colors.

Andy Ramsden, 8, a student at Falkland Elementary School receives special mention.

Spring

Spring

By Billy Goins

Spring is a nice time of the year. The time with very little fear. It is a nice time for running, But not when it's thundering. It's mostly sunny, So your nose doesn't start running. And you always feel funny, Whenever it's sunny.

Billy Goins, 11, a student at Falkland Elementary School receives special mention.

Aimee Rigsby, 6, a student at Wintergreen School receives special mention.

Send In Your Entries To Expressions

The Daily Reflector is looking for elementary, middle, and high school students to draw pictures, write stories, essays and poems. Each week we will publish the best writing and drawing. The winner of each will receive $2. We will publish stories and art work we feel should receive special mention.

Entries must be original. Drawings must be in ink, crayon, markers or paint on thick colored paper. Please no pencil. Entries will be held for a period of ninety days and will be considered for that period of time. Entries will be returned if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is included.

Parents or teachers who sign the entry form should monitor for good taste and plagiarism.

Cherry Oaks Home And Garden Club Joins Fashion And Food At Luncheon

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The tasting luncheon of the Cherry Oaks Home and Garden Club is keeping up with the times with its 1989 theme, "Food for Fitness & Fashion."

The theme of the 11th annual event was suggested by a guest of last year's tasting party, Glenda McLawhorn, chairman of the luncheon, said. "She said, 'this is delicious but most of this is high calorie food. Why don't you'll do one on low calorie foods.'"

The club had used a lot of the major food themes in previous years, such as party foods, country cooking and salads, and it was looking for a new theme, she said. It also was growing weary from its crafts sale that was conducted during the luncheon that took a lot of effort and time for club members.

"The crafts were so much work, and the country look has just about passed," Ms. McLawhorn said.

So the club opted to drop the crafts store and to add a fashion show to entertain its guests at the luncheon, Ms. McLawhorn said.

"It made sense to have food with fitness and fashion," she said. "We asked our members to submit their favorite recipes in keeping with our theme."

The recipe committee of the club also searched for additional recipes for the tasting party, and it tested all the recipes.

The recipes are used to make the dishes for the tasting luncheon and a cookbook containing all the recipes was distributed during the luncheon.

The recipe committee chairman, Judy Kuykendall, who is head of nursing program at Pitt Community College, and Ms. McLawhorn, who received her education in health and physical education, screened the recipes for their nutritional information.

The fashion show featured models from the club wearing apparel provided by Snooty Fox and Michelle Palmer Fashions, Ms. McLawhorn said.

Proceeds from the luncheon will benefit the Dream Factory, an organization that grants the wishes of critically ill children. The money also will be used to buy brick entrance signs to Cherry Oaks.

In previous years, the luncheon has benefitted the Ronald McDonald House, the Family Violence Center, Wintergreen Elementary School, Creative Living Center, Project Parenting and other organizations.

The club also aids two needy families at Thanksgiving and Christmas each year.

"Everybody enjoys doing it after it's over," she said. "It takes a lot of work and time."

But, "nobody else does anything exactly like this," Ms. McLawhorn said.

The idea for the luncheon came from a club member who had a relative participating in a similar event in Chicago, she said. "We've kept it going because people enjoy it and it brings our neighborhood together."

SPECTACULAR PASTA SALAD

1 (15-oz.) can unsweetened pineapple chunks, drained (save juice)

2 cups fresh broccoli florets
4 cups triple corkscrew pasta, cooked

1 cup frozen petite peas
1 cup chopped celery
1/4 cup chopped green onion
1/2 cup chopped sweet red pepper
1/2 cup chopped parsley

Dressing:
2 tbsps. pineapple juice (saved from above)
1/2 garlic powder
1 tbsps. olive oil

1/3 white wine vinegar
2 tbsps. lemon juice
2 tbsps. Dijon mustard
1/2 tsp. dried basil

Drain pineapple, reserving 2 tablespoons from dressing. Mix dressing well. Combine all ingredients and toss with dressing. Garnish with parsley. Chill before serving.

PICADILLO DIP

1 lb. lean ground chuck, browned and well drained

3 green onions, chopped
8 oz. tomato sauce
6 oz. tomato paste

4 tomatoes, chopped in food processor
4 fresh jalapeno peppers, seeded and chopped in food processor

1/2 tsp. lite salt
1/2 tsp. pepper
1/2 tsp. red pepper

Simmer all ingredients, uncovered, for 30 minutes. Serve hot with salted or unsalted tortilla chips.

VEGETABLE STUFFED ZUCCHINI

4 medium zucchini
3/4 cup chopped tomato
1/3 cup chopped green pepper

1/4 cup chopped onion
1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. dried basil

1/2 cup bread crumbs
1/2 cup shredded cheddar cheese

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Wash zucchini. Slice 1/2 lengthwise. Micro cook until almost tender. Remove and chop pulp. Mix in bowl with the next 6 ingredients. Place skins in a 12x8x2-inch dish. Spoon in vegetable mix. Bake 400 degrees for 15 minutes. Sprinkle with cheese and bake 5 more minutes. Makes 8 servings.

CRAB-WILD RICE SALAD

1 1/2 cups cooked wild rice
1/4 cup plus 2 tbsps. chopped onion
1 tbsps. margarine

12 oz. fresh crabmeat, cooked, drained and flaked

2 hard cooked eggs, chopped
1 cup chopped celery
1/4 cup plus 2 tbsps. chopped red pepper

1/4 cup sweet pickle relish
1/2 cup plain lowfat yogurt

The Daily Reflector/Shannon Wolfe

Spectacular Pasta Salad makes a healthy, colorful spring dish

1/4 cup reduced calorie mayonnaise
1 tsp. lemon juice
1/2 lb. fresh snow peas

Cook rice according to package directions. Sauté onion in butter. Combine rice, crab, eggs, celery, onion, red pepper and relish. Stir well. Combine yogurt, mayonnaise and lemon juice in a small bowl. Stir well. Pour over crab mixture. Toss gently to coat. Cover and chill.

Trim ends from snow peas. Place peas in a small amount of boiling water. Return to a boil. Cover, reduce heat and simmer 2 to 3 minutes or until bright green. Drain. Rinse with cold water. Drain. Chill.

To serve, arrange snow peas on a platter. Spoon crab mixture in center of peas.

CHEESEY BREAD STICKS

1/4 cup plus 2 tbsps. all-purpose flour

1/8 tsp. red pepper
1/4 cup (1 oz.) shredded extra sharp Cheddar cheese

2 tbsps. margarine
2 tps. white wine Worcestershire sauce

1/2 tsp. water

Combine flour and red pepper. Using a pastry blender, cut cheese and margarine into flour mixture. Combine Worcestershire and water. Sprinkle over flour mixture. Work into dough and shade into ball. On a floured surface, roll dough to 1/4-inch thickness. Cut into 3x1/2-inch strips. Bake on an ungreased cookie sheet at 450 degrees for 6 minutes or until lightly brown. Make 24 bread sticks.

WHOLE WHEAT MOLASSES COOKIES

1/4 cup margarine
1/4 cup sugar

1/2 cup molasses
1/2 tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking soda

1 tsp. ground ginger
1 tsp. ground cinnamon
1/4 tsp. ground cloves

1 1/2 cup whole wheat flour
1 tbsps. vinegar

Melt margarine with sugar and molasses over low heat. Cool. Combine salt, soda and spices with flour in bowl. Stir in margarine mixture and add vinegar. Drop by teaspoonsful onto greased cookie sheet. Bake 7 minutes at 350 degrees. Makes 30 cookies.

Watch Fats In Milk For Cholesterol Diet

Q. Another cholesterol question! For several years I have known that I have high cholesterol. Thinking that dry, non-fat milk would be the best for me, I have been using it. Recently I came across an article listing ten suggestions for those who would like to enjoy life and remain healthy. One suggestion was to avoid powdered eggs and powdered milk. The article said they contain cholesterol that is oxidized, and have damaged arteries of experimental animals. Ingredients on the powdered milk also lists palmitate. Upon checking ingredients in fresh skim milk, palmitate is also listed. What is the best milk for people with high cholesterol? C.A., Greenville.

A. Nonfat dry milk, evaporated skim milk and skim milk are the best milks for people with high blood cholesterol. Milk that has most of its fats removed (the ones I named) often have palmitate or a form of vitamin A added. This is not the same thing as the fatty acid PALMITIC ACID; nor is it the same as palm oil, the saturated oil. Remember that you can't and you don't want to avoid all fat (even saturated fat) from your diet. A heart healthy diet has 20-30 percent of its calories from fat. And, the fat should be all three kinds: saturated, monounsaturated and polyunsaturated.

Dye Some Easter Eggs This Year

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Dyeing Easter eggs is fun, and although kits can be purchased for the project, dyes can be made at home, using water, vinegar and food coloring.

Method No.1

For each color prepared, mix 1/2 cup hot water, 1 teaspoon vinegar, 20 drops of food coloring in a coffee cup or a deep custard cup. Dip hot, hard-cooked eggs in color bath. For deeper colors, leave egg in color longer, turning frequently, until desired shade is obtained.

Method No.2

For each color prepared, mix 3/4 cup boiling water, 1 tablespoon vinegar, 1/4 teaspoon food coloring in a small bowl. Place a soup spoon in each bowl of dye. Gently place hard-cooked eggs in bowl of dye — turn with the spoon to color eggs evenly. Let eggs dry on a cake cooling rack over paper towels (to catch any drips). To make marbled eggs, add 1 teaspoon of vegetable oil to each bowl of dye before dipping eggs.

If your boiled eggs never seem to come out right for dyeing, keep these suggestions in mind:

— Use a saucepan big enough to hold all the eggs you want to cook in a single layer on the bottom of the pan.

— Fill the pan with just enough cold water to come up 1 inch above the eggs. Cover; quickly bring just to boiling. Turn off heat. If necessary, remove pan from burner to prevent further boiling. Let eggs stand, covered in hot water, 15 to 20 minutes. Immediately run cold water over eggs until they are completely cooled.

When using commercial kits, it's generally recommended that eggs be hard-cooked in an enamel, stainless steel or glass pan.

BASIC DEVILED EGGS

6 hard-cooked eggs
3 tbsps. mayonnaise

1/2 tsp. prepared mustard
2 tbsps. vinegar
1/4 tsp. salt

1/4 tsp. pepper
1/8 tsp. celery seed (optional)
Chopped parsley

Cut hard-cooked eggs in half lengthwise. Remove yolks, set egg whites aside. In a small bowl, use a fork to mash yolks. Stir in mayonnaise, vinegar, salt and pepper.

Add celery seed, if desired. Spoon egg-yolk mixture evenly into egg-white halves. Arrange on a small platter. Garnish with parsley. Makes 12 stuffed eggs.

For Curried Chutney Eggs, cut 6 hard-cooked eggs in half lengthwise. Mash yolks, stir in 3 tablespoons mayonnaise, 1 tablespoon finely chopped chutney, 1/2 teaspoon curry powder and 1/4 teaspoon salt. Spoon evenly into egg-white halves.

EGG FARCI

Cut hard-cooked eggs in half lengthwise. Remove yolks, set egg whites aside. Mash yolks, and add equal amounts of cold, cooked chicken or veal, finely chopped. Moisten with melted butter or mayonnaise. Season to taste with salt, pepper, lemon juice, mustard and cayenne. Shape and refill whites.

Port Can Be The Beginning Of A Great Party

By Betsy Balsley
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Every fan of English historical novels or Regency romances is familiar with the fact that at least once in each story the ladies retire from the dining room after dinner, leaving the gentlemen to their Port and cigars. It was a classic example of the sort of sexism that would raise hackles today, whether one likes Port and cigars or not.

Fortunately, today's Ports — and the savories that accompany them — are enjoyed by both sexes, usually together. And there are other changes in the way this pleasant after-dinner wine is served. No longer are the savories necessarily cheese or cheese-based. They too have taken on modern overtones.

In place of serving Port and savories after a multicourse dinner, a 20th century Port party often stands on its own. Guests are invited specifically for a Port and savories tasting. But, because the wines are heavier than the white wines so popular at the cocktail hour or the red wines generally served with dinner, a Port party can take a bit of managing.

The most successful Port parties tend to start later than a dinner party. Guests should be urged to dine lightly well in advance of the evening's festivities, as the savories served usually are light and relatively simple. Often hosts invite friends to a Port party to take place after an evening at the theater, a good movie or a concert. Because Ports definitely are not quaffing wines, a glass or two shared over a sampling of non-sweet savories makes a delightful finale for a pleasant evening out.

Port is not an easy wine to match with food. It has an authoritative and, as wines go, generally sweet flavor. It is a heavy wine, one that calls for snacks with real flavor character. Stiltons, Gorgonzolas and other blue cheeses complement Port nicely. So do salty walnuts and pecans ... and apples and pears. Fortunately for the person hosting a Port party, an extensive array of foods isn't necessary.

CURRENT-CHEESE SPREAD

1/2 lb. triple cream cheese
1 tbsps. reserved currant marinade
1 cup Marinated Currants

Unflavored crackers or thinly sliced French baguette

Beat cream cheese until light and blend in reserved currant marinade. Add currants and blend until well mixed. Chill until about 1 hour before serving. Serve cool or at room temperature. Serve with unflavored crackers or French bread slices.

Makes about 1 1/2 cups spread.

Marinated Currants

1 cup currants
1/2 cup ruby Port

Combine currants and Port, stir to mix and let stand at room temperature 6 to 8 hours or overnight. Drain, reserving marinade for use in cheese spread and potted cheese recipes. Makes 1 cups currants.

POTTED CHEESE

1 (8-oz.) package cream cheese, softened

1 lb. shredded Cheddar cheese

1/4 cup reserved currant marinade (see previous recipe)

Unflavored crackers or thinly sliced French baguette

Beat cream cheese until light and fluffy. Beat in Cheddar cheese and currant marinade until well blended. Pack into several smaller molds or 1 3-cup mold. Chill until 1 hour before serving time. Serve at room temperature with unflavored crackers or French bread. Makes about 3 cups.

APPLE-CHEESE TART

Pastry for single-crust, 10-inch tart

3/4 cup crumbled Gorgonzola cheese

4 to 5 apples, peeled and sliced
1/2 cup sugar

Juice of 1 lemon

Topping

Roll pie crust to fit 10-inch tart pan. Place in pan, pressing up sides. Pierce bottom of pastry crust in 10 or 12 places with tines of fork. Line pastry shell with foil and fill with beans or pie weights. Bake at 400 degrees about 10 minutes or until shell is lightly set. Remove foil and weights and bake 5 minutes longer. Remove from oven and let cool thoroughly.

Sprinkle cheese evenly over bottom of cooled crust. Toss apples and sugar together with lemon juice. Arrange apples, spoke-fashion, overlapping slightly, on top of cheese in shell. Sprinkle Topping evenly over apples and bake at 400 degrees about 30 minutes or until apples are tender. Remove from oven and slide under broiler just long enough to brown Topping, about 1 to 2 minutes. Serve warm or cold. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Topping

1/2 cup flour
1/2 cup sugar

1/2 tsp. ground cinnamon
1/2 cup butter or margarine

Combine flour, sugar and cinnamon. Cut in butter until mixture is crumbly.

Chicken That Roams Is Chicken That Tastes Great

By Charlyne Varkonyi
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Gasps are being heard all over America as nervous shoppers put upscale chickens in their grocery carts. Nearly $18 for a 5-pound chicken. It is no wonder they are grumbling that this better be the best darned chicken they have ever put to their lips.

First-timers wonder if a free-range chicken that costs as much as a turkey is merely hype or really heavenly. But repeat buyers swear on their Julia Child cookbooks that it is worth paying more because it tastes better and is healthier for them.

The free-range chicken — supposedly allowed to roam free in the barnyard, feeding on natural food — has become a status symbol worthy of those seeking champagne lifestyles as well as those looking for nostalgia reminiscent of grandma's kitchen.

Many trend-watchers trace the free-range mania to 1980 when Larry Forgione, owner of "An American Place" in New York City, decided that he wanted to serve chickens like the ones he ate on his grandparents' farm when he was a little boy. He contacted a farmer in upstate New York and devised a plan to raise chickens the old-fashioned way with old-fashioned flavor. They dubbed the birds "free-range" and today you will find the term used at restaurants nearly everywhere.

"I think the fadishness has diminished somewhat and some chefs have said that they are not necessarily a whole lot different from regular chickens," says John Mariani, author of "Mariani's Coast-to-Coast Dining Guide" and a food trend watcher for USA Today.

"They are very, very expensive. A lot of restaurants think they are just a gimmick, but a large number of top restaurants in the U.S. try to use free-range chickens and put them on the menu because it is a gimmicky adjective. Certainly they haven't faded from the restaurant scene."

Gimmick or godsend? Only you can decide with your own taste buds. The following recipe for old-fashioned chicken comes from book, "Square Meals" by Michael Sterns, best known, with his wife Jane, for promoting food from a simpler era. The recipe for the stuffing is a compromise the Sterns reached after years of arguing.

ROAST CHICKEN WITH HERB AND FRUIT STUFFING

The Bird:
1 roasting chicken (4 to 6 lbs.)
1 lemon
Butter
Salt and pepper

The Stuffing:

Giblets from chicken
1/2 cup chopped onion
8 tbsps. butter
1/2 cup chopped celery
1 clove garlic, minced fine
2 cups day-old toast cut in 1/2-inch cubes
1 cup crumbled corn bread
1 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. ground sage
1/2 tsp. ground rosemary
1/4 cup diced apples
1/4 cup diced dried apricot
1/4 cup fresh kumquat or grape-fruit wedges

1/2 cup chopped pecans
1 tbsps. Worcestershire sauce
3 tbsps. brandy
3 tbsps. dry vermouth

Remove and reserve giblets from chicken. Clean chicken with a damp cloth inside and out. Pat dry and squeeze juice of a lemon inside roasting cavity. Butter inside of bird and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Refrigerate while you make the stuffing.

Place giblets in saucepan, cover with water and bring to a simmering boil. Cook until done. Dice giblets. Reserve stock.

Saute chopped onion in butter; add celery and garlic. Cook until onion is transparent but not brown. Place all other ingredients in a large mixing bowl. Pour onion mixture over and gently blend together. Add diced giblets and blend again. If mixture seems too dry, slowly add just enough giblet stock to dampen, but don't let stuffing become soupy.

Heat oven to 325 degrees. Stuff neck and belly of bird, but don't pack in - stuffing expands. You can truss the cavity for beauty's sake but it isn't necessary. (If you are cooking a small bird and have stuffing left over place it in a small pan, cover with foil and bake it with the chicken.) Rub exterior of bird with butter and an extra dash of rosemary or sage.

Place chicken on roasting rack in oven. Roast 20 minutes a pound, basting frequently with pan juices.

POT-ROASTED CHICKEN

2 tbsps. unsalted butter or 3 slices bacon
Salt and pepper
1 large carrot, cut into 4-inch lengths
1 large stalk celery, cut into 4-inch lengths
1 medium-size Spanish onion, peeled and quartered
1 medium-size turnip, peeled and quartered
1/2 cup water
1 tbsps. chopped fresh tarragon or basil
1 tbsps. chopped fresh thyme
Heat the oven to 325 degrees. Rub the outside of the chicken with the butter or cover the breast with the bacon slices and secure with string. Season the bird inside and out with salt and pepper. Place the chicken on its side in a heavy, shallow roasting pan and put it in the oven. Scatter the vegetables around the bird, pour the water over the vegetables and sprinkle the herbs over the top of the bird and vegetables.

Cook for 30 minutes. Baste the chicken and turn it onto its other side. Continue cooking for another 30 minutes and turn the bird onto its chest. Baste again and cook for 30 minutes more.

Increase the heat to 450 degrees and cook the chicken for another 10 minutes to crisp the skin. The juices should run clear when the chicken is pierced with a skewer.

Remove the chicken from the pan and let it stand for 10 minutes in a warm place. Remove the bacon. Carve the chicken and garnish each serving with the roasting vegetables. Spoon some of the roasting juices over each portion. Makes 5 servings.

Oriental Noodle Dishes Offer Lots Of Variety

By Peggy Katalinich
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Oriental noodle dishes offer as much variety as Italian, maybe even more because they are not limited to wheat but also use rice, mung beans, potato and cornstarch, and even yams.

The noodles, angel-hair thin or linguine wide, are boiled, stir-fried or deep-fried, used in sauces or as stuffings and paired with a wide range of Asian flavorings — from fish sauce to hot peppers, peanut sauce to fresh coriander.

The Chinese, of course, have sesame-flavored noodles and all the versions of lo mein and chow mein. Japanese use buckwheat to make soba and serve it cold, topped with minced seaweed; wheat and rice noodles also show up in soups or stirred into dishes.

In the Philippines, pancit means noodle, but it also refers to a dish of the same name combining rice noodles and several kinds of meat and vegetables. In Burma, noodles, both egg and rice, turn up in soups, curries and salads.

Don't get me wrong, I have no intention of forsaking linguine in clam sauce. But often I get a hankering for a culinary trip to Bangkok instead of Naples for pad thai, soft-ened rice noodles in a savory sauce, a little hot, a little sweet, most often topped with shrimp and pork. And I'll get a taste for grilled beef with noodles, a Vietnamese salad that exemplifies the light, delicate cuisine of that country in its combination of hot and cold, pungent and soothing.

In searching for the perfect pad thai and Vietnamese salad, I consulted the following books and borrowed and adapted until the recipes suited my taste. Therefore, they are not presented as the ultimate in authenticity, but as good tastes that reflect the spirit of the cuisines. In some cases, the methods were simplified or more widely available ingredients substituted. The books are: "Asian Pasta" by Linda Burum; "The Classic Cuisine of Vietnam" by Bach Ngo and Gloria Zimmerman; "Thai Home-Cooking" by William Crawford and Kamolmal Pootaraksa; "The Glorious Noodle" by Linda Merinoff; and "The Original Thai Cookbook" by Jennifer Brennan.

PAD THAI

1/2 lb. flat rice noodles, 1/2-inch wide
1/2 cup white vinegar
1/2 cup sugar
3 tbsps. ketchup
2/3 cup nuoc mam (fish sauce)
Juice from 1 lime
1 bunch green onions
3 tbsps. vegetable oil
4 cloves garlic, minced
3/4 lb. lean pork, cut into thin slices
1 lb. small shrimp, peeled and deveined, tails left on
2 eggs, lightly beaten
1 cup fresh bean sprouts plus more for garnish
2 tbsps. minced fresh coriander

1/2 cup chopped roasted peanuts
1 radish

Soak noodles in warm water to cover 20 to 25 minutes. Drain thoroughly.

Combine vinegar, sugar, ketchup, nuoc mam and lime juice and set aside. Cut green part off onions; trim rough tops, then slice green in 1-inch pieces. Set aside. Mince white part and set aside.

Heat oil in large wok or frying pan. Cook garlic and minced onion briefly, then add pork and stir until no pink remains. Add shrimp and cook just until pink. Add noodles and sauce and cook, stirring gently until noodles have absorbed the liquid, about 5 minutes. Push the food aside and add eggs, let cook until almost set, then stir into mixture. Add bean sprouts, green onions, peanut and coriander and cook a minute or two. Serve garnished with radish and bean sprouts. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

VIETNAMESE BEEF SALAD

2 cloves garlic, minced
1 fresh hot pepper, cut in half, seeds removed 3 green onions, chopped (white part only)
1 tbsps. sugar
1 tbsps. nuoc mam (fish sauce)
1 tbsps. lime juice
1 tbsps. sesame oil
1 lb. beef sirloin
2 tbsps. peanut oil

For salad:
1/2 lb. rice vermicelli
1 carrot, peeled and shredded
1 small cucumber, peeled, seeded and very thinly sliced
1/2 cups fresh bean sprouts
1/2 cups chopped lettuce
1/2 cup chopped roasted peanuts

For sauce:

1 tbsps. each minced fresh coriander and mint
1 clove garlic, minced
1 small fresh hot pepper, cut in half, seeds removed, minced
2 tbsps. sugar
1 cup water
2 1/2 tbsps. nuoc mam (fish sauce)
2 1/2 tbsps. fresh lime juice

Prepare marinade by combining garlic, pepper, onion, sugar, nuoc mam, lime juice and sesame oil in a food processor and blending until smooth. Cut beef in matchstick-size pieces (this is easier if beef is partially frozen). Pour marinade over beef and let marinate for 1 hour or more in the refrigerator.

Heat oil in a wok or skillet and saute the beef briefly, just until cooked through. Set aside.

Cook rice vermicelli in boiling water until just tender, about 3 minutes. Drain under cool running water and set aside.

Prepare salad on individual serving plates, four as a main dish, six as an appetizer. Combine sauce ingredients and toss noodles and half of the peanuts together with 4 to 5 tbsps. of sauce. Line plates with lettuce. Top with bean sprouts, then carrot and cucumber. If beef is not warm, reheat briefly, then divide on top of plates. Top with noodle mixture. Drizzle extra sauce on top. Makes 4 main-dish servings.

Free-Range Veal May Quell The Controversy

By Lynn Williams
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

It is as pink as a rosy dawn, which just may be an apt simile. Free-range veal is a product that promises to unite some very disparate groups: gourmets, farmers and animal advocates. If it can do so, and increase its still small share of the market, it could help revitalize a menu favorite that has been plagued by controversy.

Veal's attributes are obvious. The mild white meat of calves is low in calories and very tender, and marries beautifully with a variety of sauces, making a special favorite with French and Italian chefs, who find it a spur to their creative talents.

But veal has also become a cause celebre recently, as the methods by which the prized sinewless meat is produced have come under greater scrutiny. Free-range veal, the product of a system by which the veal calves are allowed to roam the fields and are fed cow's milk and grain instead of powdered formula, produces a flavorful pink meat that its advocates pronounce superior to white veal.

"The good news from the consumer's point of view is that free-range veal is very good to eat," says Robert Brown, of the Chicago-based Food Animal Concerns Trust. "It has a little more 'bite.' It is not tough, but it is a little chewier, and it has a delicate meaty flavor instead of being bland."

The organization has been one of the pioneers in free-range farming. "We are interested in humane husbandry," Brown says. "We set up standards for keeping animals on farms, and find farms to follow the standards, then we market the products. Not-for-profit organizations like ours usually don't do marketing, but we feel it's essential."

Many of the chefs who have tried free-range veal have become advocates, and promote it on their menus. Among the restaurants that feature it are the trend-setting Chez Panisse in Berkeley, Calif.; the Mansion on Turtle Creek in Houston; and Spago in West Hollywood, Calif. Spago's Wolfgang Puck has been quoted as saying that "the veals are happier, so they taste better."

Free-range veal is also making inroads into the retail market. While it was initially expensive, retailers say that free-range veal is now very competitive in price with white veal. "They cost about the same," Brown says. "The cost of production of the (free-range) farm is less, though. Very little equipment is needed. If it ever got into volume operation, it could lower the price of veal somewhat."

It would also lure back into the fold many sensitive diners who have turned away from their favorite veal and vitello dishes because of the negative publicity.

The very methods that are under fire today are the methods that turned America on to eating veal in the first place, according to Merle Ellis, a butcher and author of the syndicated column "The Butcher." And these methods, far from being time-honored, actually came to America relatively recently.

"Basically, most of the veal we get in the market these days, the quality veal that restaurants use and people prefer, is the white European-style veal that we really didn't have in this country before 1962," he says.

The veal industry, he explains, is basically a byproduct of the dairy industry. In order to keep producing milk, a cow must be kept pregnant. When it drops a female calf, the calf is turned out to pasture and incorporated into the dairy herd. Bull-calves, however, are traditionally sent off to the slaughterhouse almost immediately. This "drop veal" or "cull veal" tended to be tasteless and of poor quality, and the calves, only about a week old at the time of slaughter, did not produce much of it.

Veal in America was, then, not a very popular meat. In Europe, the male calves were kept in pens until they were about 4 months old, and were fed a vitamin- and mineral-enriched formula.

"It's like bottle-feeding a baby," Ellis says. The pale fine-flavored meat that this regimen produced made European "milk-fed" veal world-famous and sought after by the well-traveled Americans who had sampled exquisite veal dishes in Italy.

The European method, Ellis says, was popularized in the United States by Aat and Eric Groenvelt, who moved from the Netherlands to Wisconsin about 25 years ago. Their company, Provim (the name means "protein, vitamins and minerals") revolutionized the veal industry, and their methods were adopted by most U.S. veal producers. Today, 90 percent to 95 percent of veal calves are raised in darkened stalls (or "crates," as the critics call them) that confine their movements, and a minority are kept in straw-bedded group pens holding 10 to 20 calves.

Ellis emphasizes that "in most cases, a good veal operation is very clean, and takes good care of the animals, because they represent a good investment."

The following recipes were developed by chefs who are customers of Summerfield Farm in Brightwood, Va., whose owners, Jamie and Rachel Nicoll, have been producing free-range veal since 1983.

POACHED VEAL LOIN WITH ROSE BUTTER SAUCE

- 1 lb. veal loin (about 1/4 saddle)
- 1 qt. court bouillon, seasoned with herbs, salt and pepper to taste
- 2 to 3 shallots, finely chopped
- 2 cups rose wine
- 1 to 1 1/2 stick (4 to 6 oz.) unsalted butter, softened
- Salt and pepper to taste
- Clean veal thoroughly, removing fat and silver skin.

Slowly simmer the bouillon and poach veal for 10 to 12 minutes (for medium rare). Remove veal to a platter and cover with film wrap to keep it warm while you make the sauce. Reserve the poaching bouillon.

Slowly saute shallots in a little butter. Add rose wine. Reduce by 3/4. Add one cup of poaching bouillon to the wine reduction and reduce by 1/2. Whisk in the butter in pieces. The sauce should emulsify. Add salt and pepper to taste.

Slice the veal, fan it out on plates, and serve with a little sauce over it. Serves two.

VEAL SHOULDER ROAST

- 12- to 2 1/2-lb. veal shoulder roast
- 1/2 cup olive oil
- 1 large onion, peeled and cut into medium dice
- 2 carrots, peeled and cut into medium dice
- 2 celery stalks, cut into medium dice
- 2 bay leaves
- 1 clove garlic, crushed
- 2 cups dry white wine
- 1 tsp. tomato paste
- 3 cups veal stock made by dissolving 8 ounces glace de veau in 2 cups water
- 1 tsp. glace de veau
- Salt and freshly ground black pepper, to taste

Heat oven to 425 degrees for 30 minutes. Season the veal shoulder roast with salt and pepper. Heat olive oil in a roasting pan. Sear roast on all sides until brown but not crusty.

Place onion, carrots, celery, bay leaves and garlic in roasting pan. Place veal shoulder roast on top of vegetables. Roast in oven for about 40 to 50 minutes, turning and basting roast frequently and stirring vegetables (Do not let vegetables burn or they will generate a bitter flavor).

Add white wine to pan and continue to cook until the roast reaches an internal temperature of 160 degrees when measured with a meat thermometer. Total cooking time will vary with the size of the roast and oven temperatures. Let roast sit about 20 minutes before slicing. Serves four.

Sauce: Add tomato paste to the roasting pan. Stir frequently over medium heat while scraping the bottom of the pan. Cook until all of the liquid is reduced. Add the veal stock, glace de veau and salt and pepper to taste. Cook to desired consistency and strain sauce over thin slices of meat.

GRILLED VEAL CHOP WITH CHIVE SAUCE

- Vegetable Melange:
- 6 baby artichokes, blanched until tender and quartered
- 1 tsp. olive oil
- 1 small white onion, peeled and cut into large dice
- 7 Calamata olives, pits removed and quartered
- 4 red cherry tomatoes, quartered
- 4 yellow cherry tomatoes, quartered
- 1 tsp. fresh oregano, finely chopped
- Salt and freshly ground black pepper, to taste

Heat a small pan over medium heat. Add the oil and gently saute the onions until transparent. Add the cooked baby artichokes, olives, tomatoes and oregano. Saute briefly until heated thoroughly. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Set aside.

Polenta:

- 3 cups water
- 1 cup cornmeal
- 1 tsp. grated Parmesan cheese
- Salt and pepper
- 1 tsp. olive oil
- Mix 1 cup of water with cornmeal. Allow to stand for 20 minutes. Combine the remainder of the water with the cornmeal in a heavy-bottomed pot. Stir with a wooden spoon for 20 minutes over a low fire. Add the Parmesan cheese and salt and pepper to taste.

Spread a 1/2-inch layer of the polenta evenly in a baking dish. Allow to cool. The consistency should be dense and very firm with no lumps. Refrigerate. When cold, cut into 3-inch squares.

Veal:

- 4 frenched rib chops
- 1 tsp. finely chopped fresh thyme
- 1/4 cup olive oil
- Salt and pepper to taste
- Brush the veal chops with oil and season both sides with salt and pepper and fresh thyme. Grill quickly for 2 to 3 minutes a side for a medium-rare to medium chop. Cooking time will vary with grill heat.

Sauce:

- 1 tsp. olive oil
- 1 tsp. finely chopped shallot
- 1 tsp. finely chopped garlic
- 2 tbsps. white wine
- 1 tsp. lemon juice
- 3 tbsps. water
- 3 tbsps. cold butter, cut into small pieces
- 1 tsp. fresh chives, cut into 1/4-inch pieces

Heat a small pan over medium-low heat. Add the oil, shallot and garlic. Saute for 10 to 20 seconds, stirring constantly. Add the wine and lemon juice. Reduce until nearly dry. Add the water and the butter. Swirl the pan in a circle while the water comes to a boil. When the butter is melted, remove the pan from the heat and season to taste with salt and pepper. Swirl in the chives and pour over the veal chops immediately before serving.

The sauce should be thick and creamy. Do not leave it in the hot pan or the butter may separate and the chives will lose their color. Final assembly: Just before removing the chops from the fire, wipe the surface of the grill with a cloth dipped in olive oil. Place the polenta squares over the hottest part of the fire and brush with olive oil before turning. Grill 30 seconds per side. Allow the chops to rest while reheating the vegetable melange and finishing off the sauce. Do not hold the meat in a warming oven for more than 5 minutes or the chops will become overcooked. Arrange veal, vegetables and polenta on plate. Serves four.

How Well Do You Know Your Fats Of Life?

NEW YORK — March is being celebrated by the American Dietetic Association as National Nutrition Month.

"The important effects of diet on the health of Americans can no longer be ignored," says Darlene Dougherty, a registered dietitian, and president of the ADA. "Improved nutrition is the key to helping consumers learn to make positive food choices. By integrating simple changes in the daily diet, Americans can influence their future health."

She says most Americans' diet consists of too many foods high in fat and low in complex carbohydrates and fiber. The ADA says fat intake should be limited to 30 to 35 percent of the total calories eaten daily.

"To reduce the intake of dietary fat, avoid what I call the worst offenders — including fried foods, rich sauces, whipped cream, fatty or heavily-marbled meats, and high-fat desserts," she says.

To increase intake of complex carbohydrates and fiber, Dougherty suggests eating more cereals, dried beans and peas, fruits, pasta and rice.

"Contrary to popular belief, starchy foods are not high in calories, and they are low in fat," she says. For example, a slice of whole grain bread has 65 calories; a small, plain baked potato has 90 calories.

How savvy are you about the fats of life? Test yourself with the following National Nutrition Month Fats of Life Quiz, provided by the American Dietetic Association:

1. Which has more fat? a. one ounce of turkey pastrami b. one ounce of turkey breast c. one ounce of flank steak.

Answer: (a) Depending on the brand, turkey pastrami can contain up to 60 percent fat calories. Flank steak is 30 percent fat calories; turkey breast is 18 percent fat calories.

2. Which has more cholesterol? a. 3 ounces beef (lean) b. sponge cake (one-twelfth of a 10-inch cake) c. lemon meringue pie (1/8 of a 9-inch pie).

Answer: (b) Sponge cake has the highest amount of cholesterol — 164 milligrams. Lemon meringue pie has 98 milligrams, and lean beef has 77 milligrams.

3. Which is the lowest in fat? a. two strips of bacon b. one slice Canadian bacon c. turkey sausage.

Answer: (b) Canadian bacon has 45 percent fat calories. Turkey sausage has about 60 percent fat calories, and bacon has 77 percent fat calories.

4. Which contains cholesterol? a. peanut butter b. fish c. vegetable oil

Answer: (b) Only animal products (including fish) contain cholesterol. Plant products do not have cholesterol (i.e. peanut butter, vegetable oils).

5. One-half cup of oil has how many calories? a. 360 b. 660 c. 960.

Answer: (c) A tablespoon of a typical oil has 120 calories, which adds up to 960 calories per 1/2 cup.

6. Which contains the most fat? a. chicken nuggets b. plain baked potato c. small plain hamburger.

Answer: (a) Chicken nuggets that are fried contain about 59 percent fat calories. A plain baked potato is virtually fat-free and a small hamburger has about 35 percent fat calories.

7. If a food label says the product is "96 percent fat-free" or "85 percent lean," then the product can be considered low-fat. a. true b. false.

Answer: FALSE. The percentage of fat by weight does not reflect fat calories. Whole milk is 96 percent fat-free by weight, but still has 50 percent fat calories.

8. Which fat listed below is the most saturated? a. butter b. lard c.

coconut oil d. palm kernel oil.

Answer: (c) Coconut oil has the most saturated fat — 92 percent. Palm kernel oil has 86 percent; butter has 66 percent; lard has 41 percent.

9. Which is the lowest in fat and calories? a. non-dairy creamer (liquid or powder) b. evaporated skim milk.

Answer: (b) Evaporated skim milk is virtually free of fat and cholesterol, and much lower in calories than non-dairy creamers.

10. Which is lowest in fat? a. olives b. mushrooms c. avocados.

Answer: (b) Mushrooms are nearly fat-free. Olives have 99 percent fat calories; avocados have 88 percent fat calories.

11. Which has the least amount of saturated fat? a. tub margarine b.

Answer: (a) Tub margarines have less saturated fat than the stick forms. The first ingredient in a tub margarine should be a liquid oil.

12. To maintain a low-fat diet, it is best to buy foods that state "No Cholesterol" on the label. a. true b. false.

Answer: FALSE. "No Cholesterol" on a food label is no guarantee that it is a low-fat food. Such products can contain saturated fats, which raise cholesterol.

13. Which has more calories? a. teaspoon of sugar b. a teaspoon margarine c. a teaspoon of jam.

Answer: (b) Margarine has nearly double the calories of sugar and jam. One teaspoon of margarine has 34 calories; jam has 18 calories; sugar has 16 calories.

Best Method For Peeling 2 Are Same

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

"Peeling peppers is a matter of personal taste and culture," according to "Cooking Techniques" (Little, Brown and Company; 1981) by Beverly Cox, with Joan Whitman. They go on to write: "Mexicans always peel their hot peppers, the Chinese never do. Italians usually roast sweet peppers and then remove the charred, papery skin."

The directions for roasting and peeling both sweet peppers and hot chiles are the same. When working with chiles, however, it is advisable to wear plastic or rubber gloves and avoid touching your face or eyes. These hot peppers contain an oil that may raise welts on tender skin.

Using tongs or a long-handled fork, hold the pepper over a gas flame or charcoal fire. Peppers may also be placed on a baking sheet and broiled about one inch from the heat source. Whatever method is used, turn the peppers often, until the skin on all sides is blistered and charred.

Next, place the charred peppers in a plastic bag, seal and let stand about 15 minutes. This steams the peppers and makes them easy to peel.

Remove the peppers from the bag and peel the skin away with a paring knife or your fingers. Holding the peppers under running water also aids in removing the charred skin and internal seeds. Pat dry with paper towels, and the peppers are ready to use as directed in recipes; or marinate them in a little olive oil, garlic and fresh oregano and serve as an appetizer or accompaniment.

High-Tech Foods A Necessity For The Future

By Mary MacVean
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Imagine tomato flesh without the trouble of caring for a tomato plant. Or real vanilla extract that never came from a bean.

Such laboratory "farming" is far off, but not impossible, says Joan Gussow, an advocate of re-localizing food production and a professor of nutrition and education at Teachers College, Columbia University, who spoke here at a recent forum on food in the year 2010.

Such a high-technology future would involve growing coarse, inedible grasses that produce continuously, breaking them down to sugar syrups that would be piped to cities and there manufactured into such "foods" as apple and tomato flesh.

Gussow cited that extreme scenario from a trade journal because it "gets us to face what the future will be if we do nothing."

Richard Laster, president of DNA Plant Technology Corp., who spoke on a panel after Gussow's address, said the food industry must be concerned about feeding the 280 million people who will live in this country 30 years from now.

Laster suggested people will need a combination of low- and high-tech foods to ensure sufficient food that is nutritious and good-tasting. For example, he said, his company is working to produce celery and carrots that taste better than those now available year-round.

Many scientists are working to make a tasty tomato available all year.

"Once you have a good tomato that's available year-round, then you can put a brand label on that, promote that" and encourage consumers to eat it, Laster said.

At the other end of the spectrum, Gussow described a future in which Americans will be close to their natural, healthy food supply, grown with a minimum of chemicals. She cited a California chef who walks through a supplier's garden each morning on his way to work, selecting the day's produce for his restaurant.

These days, there are about 8,000 new food items a year, "and most of them are very far from anything you could imagine growing in the Napa Valley," she said.

Gussow said the future of our food supply is split in two distinct directions, one toward an increase in technology, and the other a return to simpler food, produced and grown close to its consumers.

On the technology side, she said, are such items as surimi (which she called food technology's answer to the advice to eat more fish), and the experimental fat substitute Simplesse ("this year's answer to overeating").

So, what will Americans be eating in the year 2010? "Tiny fresh mustard greens, or mock crab legs with Simplesse mayonnaise, or both?"

Most likely, she concluded, both. Both means of producing food are on the rise, and not likely to slow down.

She noted that the chicken industry is dominated by six companies, the fifth-largest of which produces 25 million pounds of chicken a week; that one candy company has 44 percent of the candy sales in this country; and that 36 percent of the U.S. hog producers went out of business from December 1980 to April 1985.

"Such bigness requires control and unification to survive," she said.

"I worry about the growing remoteness of the population from where their food is grown," she said.

However, she noted that while organic farming once was "derided as ridiculous," it now has been given "legitimacy by the growing farm crisis."

But, bringing together food producers and their customers is not always easy, said Michael Whiteman of the Joseph Baum and Michael Whiteman restaurant consulting firm, which is opening a large Manhattan restaurant to be called the Hudson River Club.

"We would like to get our products from the Hudson Valley," he said. "We spent a couple of weeks going up and down the Hudson talking to growers ... We were shocked to discover there was no chain of supply, no organized system to sustain a restaurant."

The problems are compounded, he said, by a public that demands inexpensive food of uniform quality and a labor shortage in his industry that probably will only get worse.

Mark Spring With Torte

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Celebrate spring with a Vanilla Meringue Torte. Fill the layers with a tangy orange curd, then frost with whipped cream.

A cooking tip: Be sure to use pure vanilla extract to develop the smooth, mellow flavor of the cake and the frosting.

You can double the recipe for orange curd and use it on toast for breakfast. The orange curd can be made and refrigerated weeks ahead of serving, and the meringue layers may be made the day before, tightly wrapped and refrigerated.

(For a free copy of "The Magic of Real Vanilla," which includes six dessert recipes plus tips on flavoring with vanilla beans, send a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope to the Vanilla Information Bureau, 928 Broadway, New York, NY 10010.)

VANILLA MERINGUE TORTE

- 1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 tbsp. baking powder
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 3/4 cup butter or margarine, softened

- 2 1/4 cups sugar, divided
- 6 eggs, separated
- 1 tbsp. vanilla extract
- 1/2 cup milk
- Vanilla Orange Curd (recipe follows)
- Vanilla Whipped Cream (recipe follows)

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Grease two 9-inch round cake pans. Line bottoms of pans with greased wax paper; set aside. In a small bowl stir together flour, baking powder and salt.

In a large bowl using an electric mixer, cream butter with 3/4 cup sugar until smooth. Beat in egg yolks one at a time until light and fluffy; stir in vanilla extract. Add flour mixture alternately with milk, beginning and ending with flour. Pour into prepared pans; spread evenly. Bake for 10 minutes.

Meanwhile, using a large, clean mixing bowl and clean electric beaters, beat egg whites until soft peaks form. Gradually add remaining 1 1/2 cups sugar; beat until stiff peaks form. Remove cakes from oven; quickly and evenly spread half the meringue over one partially baked cake layer making sure it touches the side of the pan; repeat. Bake until meringue is golden, about 12 minutes. Cool in pans on cake racks for 10 minutes. Remove from pans; remove wax paper; cool thoroughly on racks, meringue side up.

On a cake plate, place one layer, meringue side down. Spread with Vanilla Orange Curd. Top with remaining cake layer, meringue side up. Frost cake with Vanilla Whipped Cream. Garnish with strawberries and orange slices, if desired.

YIELD: One 9-inch torte (12 portions)

VANILLA ORANGE CURD

- 2 egg yolks
- 1 egg
- 1/3 cup granulated sugar
- 1/3 cup orange juice
- 1/4 cup butter
- 1 tsp. grated orange peel
- 1 tsp. vanilla extract

In a medium saucepan combine 2 egg yolks with the 1 egg. Add sugar and orange juice; mix well. Add butter 1 tablespoon at a time. Cook and stir with a wire whisk over medium heat until thick enough so that a whisk leaves a trail, about 10 minutes. Stir in orange peel and vanilla extract. Chill in a covered container. Yield: 1 cup

VANILLA WHIPPED CREAM

- 2 cups heavy (whipping) cream
- 2 tsps. confectioners' sugar
- 2 tsps. vanilla extract

In a large mixing bowl combine all ingredients. Beat until thick. Spread over top and sides of cake. Yield: 4 cups

Storage Buildings

Over 35 models to choose from

Wickes Lumber offers Wood Storage Shed packages in a variety of styles and sizes to meet any need. Each of these packages contains all the quality materials plus complete plans and step-by-step instructions to erect the building. Most of these models may also be increased in size in 2 foot increments and ordered with the siding and finish of your choice.

All models are available in a "stick" building package where we furnish all of the materials, plans and how-to information. In some areas, fully erected models may be available. In other areas, prefabricated truss-ribs, wall panels and/or roof trusses are available. Check with your local Wickes Lumber to determine available options in your area.

Wickes Lumber offers a wide variety of other services for your convenience. Need to customize a shed? A Wickes Lumber sales professional can help you get the shed you want. Can't take it with you? All of our centers offer delivery service. Whether you order a materials package or an erected shed, we can schedule a delivery to meet your needs.
