A bunch of daffodils rests among rubble alongside a fireman's helmet found in the wreckage of a fireworks factory that burned in an industrial center in Peterborough, England, on Wednesday. One fireman was

FAA Tells U.S. Airlines Terrorists May Attempt Hijack During Easter

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — The Federal Aviation Administration has warned U.S. carriers of a possible hijack attempt by Palestinian terrorists in Europe over the Easter weekend, the U.S. Embassy confirmed today.

However, embassy officials denied a report in the tabloid Daily Express that U.S. diplomats and military personnel had been notified of the warning.

"We can confirm that a threat warning was issued and received and that the host government and the airlines were informed," said Richard Calder, a spokesman at the embassy press office.

Calder said the FAA office in London passed on the warning to Britain's Department of Transport and to U.S. carriers in Britain.

"I know of no warning to military personnel," Calder said.

Embassy spokeswoman Charla Saylor-Hatton denied there was any warning given to military personnel.

In Washington, FAA officials declined comment on the memo. But other officials, who demanded anonymity, confirmed that it had been issued.

Delays of up to half an hour in flight departures were reported at London's Heathrow Airport because of stringent security.

In another development, Independent Television News today showed videotape taken by three youths who said they were able to board an empty British Airways jumbo jet at Heathrow early Monday morning without being challenged. The video included a shot of one youth sitting in the captain's seat in the cockpit.

"They say they are cracking down on security and they are confident no one else can do what happened at Lockerbie," said one of the youths, identified only as Shoaib Khan. "It is just not true."

British Airways said in a statement it regarded the incident as "extremely serious" and was investigating. "It must be clear, however, that the alleged incident took place in the maintenance and not the operational area. The aircraft involved was scheduled for maintenance," the statement said.

The London tabloid the Daily Express said the possible hijack threat was detailed in a secret memorandum dated March 17 from the FAA. The paper said it had been given a copy of the memorandum.

The front-page report in the Daily Express came during a political debate in Britain over whether airlines were properly informed about a radio-cassette bomb before Pan Am Flight 103 was blown apart over Lockerbie in Scotland, Dec. 21, killing all 259 people aboard and 11 on the ground.

Britain's Department of Transport said in a statement: "We don't discuss security matters. We would automatically have anything like this assessed and take any necessary action."

John Prescott, the opposition Labor Party's spokesman on transport, said he was concerned by the Daily Express' report that only U.S. military and diplomatic personnel were warned.

Party Set For End Of School Year

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Juniors and seniors in the Pitt County high schools will be invited to participate in an all-night party after commencement this year under the condition that they don't use alcohol or drugs on the day of graduation.

Project Graduation will "provide an alternative to drug and alcohol use" after graduation, said Greg Allinson, the manager of the event and a member of the Pitt County Council on Substance Abuse.

Allinson, joined by student representatives of the Pitt high schools, Mothers Against Drunk Driving, the Council on Substance Abuse and the Interfraternity Council at East Carolina University, unveiled plans for the event Wednesday before community leaders and the media at East Carolina University.

Project Graduation "is a student idea. It's student oriented," Allinson said. "They put enough pressure on their principals and the people who deal with substance abuse" to get the celebration organized, he said.

The party is scheduled June 9 from 10 p.m. to 5 a.m. in Minges Coliseum at ECU, Allinson said. Students will not be admitted into the party after 11:30 p.m.

The students will be entertained with an area band and disc jockeys from two local radio stations, he said. Food and beverages will be provided during the party, and "they won't be served in beer mugs and cocktail glasses."

Area businesses and organizations have donated money and services for the event so that students will not be charged for admission to the party or for refreshments.

But students attending the party will have to have an invitation to get in, Allinson said.

Invitations will be mailed to students who sign a contract, agreeing not to use drugs or alcohol on graduation day. Parents also sign the contract, indicating whether they want to be notified if their children want to leave the party before 5 a.m.

The contracts will be distributed in the schools after the students return from Easter break next week and are to be turned in to school officials by May 3, Allinson said.

The Pitt County Sheriff's Department will help secure the coliseum from outside influences during the party, Allinson said. There also will be a screening process to make sure students don't bring alcohol or drugs into the party.

Allinson said he hopes that at least 500 of the 2,100 eligible students in the high schools will participate. Students attending the conference Wednesday said their peers are in favor of the celebration.

South Carolina Eases Ban On N.C. Waste Shipments

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Gov. Carroll Campbell says a desire to work with other states and avoid further environmental problems has led to a temporary easing of the hazardous waste disposal ban against North Carolina.

Campbell announced Wednesday that North Carolina can temporarily ship to South Carolina 850 tons of hazardous waste but will remain on the list of states banned from the GSX Services hazardous waste landfill.

North Carolina Gov. Jim Martin said state officials will coordinate with North Carolina businesses that produce the waste so that "those that are in the worst situation will be able to get theirs in."

Martin sought the reprieve in a late-night telephone conversation with Campbell on Monday, just hours after the N.C. Senate unanimously approved legislation establishing a new hazardous-waste management policy for the state.

"The way I expressed it was even a temporary relief, so that the businesses in North Carolina that are reaching a critical problem would be able to lawfully remove that waste and send it somewhere where it can be properly disposed of," Martin said in an interview published Wednesday in The News and Observer of Raleigh, N.C. In a letter to Martin, Campbell said the state would be allowed to ship the waste over a 10-day period beginning Monday to ease "North Carolina's impending environmental crisis," Campbell said the amount would equal about 50 truckloads.

Campbell said he was taking the emergency action to show South Carolina's recognition of North Carolina's good faith efforts at removing disposal prohibitions, and at the request of Martin and Greer Tidwell, head of the federal En-

Economy Better Than Expected In Late '88

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The U.S. economy grew at a moderate annual rate of 2.4 percent in the final three months of last year, even better than previously believed, the government said today.

But the Commerce Department said the increase in the gross national product, the broadest measure of economic health, was accompanied by a pickup in inflation, reflecting higher food costs and rising import prices.

The 2.4 percent increase represented an upward revision from last month, when the government estimated that the GNP had grown at an annual rate of just 2 percent in the October-December quarter.

The economy's momentum would have been an even stronger 3.5 percent except for the lingering effects of last summer's drought, which subtracted more than 1 percentage point from growth.

However, the strong growth, propelled by high consumer demand, has economists and the Federal Reserve Board worried, given the tight labor markets and high factory operating rates.

The Fed last month embarked on a renewed drive to push interest rates higher in an effort to dampen demand and cool off growing inflationary pressures.

But the Bush administration and some private economists have complained that the Fed may be in danger of overdoing that effort and end up pushing the country into a recession.

Despite some alarming reports on inflation in January and February that sent the stock market plunging, many analysts believe that growth is slowing and the central bank does not need to do more in its anti-inflation efforts.

First word on the GNP performance for the first three months of 1989 will be released in April.

An inflation index tied to the GNP rose at a sharp annual rate of 5.3 percent in the October-December quarter, up from a 4.7 percent rate of increase in the third quarter.

Since the index, known as the GNP deflator, has been rising at annual rate of 3.8 percent or less for the past three years, analysts said the uptick over the 5 percent mark indicated that inflationary pressures have increased.

Rain, Rain: But Still Not Enough

Annual Precipitation May Be Low

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

How about a flood and a potential drought at the same time. That's sort of the story in Greenville, as the city has received sporadic amounts of rainfall during the last several months.

On the heels of nearly six inches of precipitation in February, Greenville Utilities has recorded rainfall on 15 of 23 days this month, for a total of 3.6 inches.

Downpours have filled rivers and creeks and boosted the groundwater needed to withstand the dry dog days of summer.

"Anytime we can get rainfall in the winter it's going to help fill up our reservoirs and help replenish our groundwater supply," said James Stewart, associate director of the Water Resources Research Institute at N.C. State University. "This kind of rain does help."

At the same time, however, especially low rainfall in July and December has left the city looking at a yearly precipitation total that would be less than that of the three previous fiscal years, and even the recent rains have not benefited everyone.

Downpours have postponed baseball games, endangered tobacco beds, flooded the Tar River and generally made life gray and dreary.

At the rate rain fell last month, the city would receive over 70 inches of rain in a year, nearly double the average amount.

With buckets coming down, it is hard to imagine that the area still needs rain, but it does, weather watchers say. Consistent rainfall is needed, not six inches in February and a half-inch in December.

Greenville Utilities records annual rainfall totals on a fiscal year calendar, from July 1 to June 30.

The year ending June 30, 1988, produced 42.7 inches of the wet stuff. As of June 30, 1987, the fiscal year produced a whopping 54.9 inches of rain, and fiscal 1986 ended with 40.3 inches of precipitation.

Bud Greer, with Greenville Utilities' water treatment plant, said between 40 and 45 inches of rainfall is the annual average. Even with all the rain in the last seven weeks, the city still may not reach that mark.

From July 1, 1988, to the end of February, the city has received 26.17 inches of rainfall, an average of 3.27 inches a month.

Over a year, that comes out to be 39.2 inches of rain.

One problem is that averages may be misleading. Over a period of years, the average annual rainfall in Greenville may be 40 inches, but the actual amount falling one year may be 50 inches, and then 30 inches the next.

That would produce an average of 40 inches a year, but no annual amount would actually total that much.

Also, any city may expect normal fluctuations in the average, and with the big 54-inch year of rain two years ago, the curve may be down.

Those fluctuations also occur from month to month. Greenville received 1.9 inches of rain in July, then 4.2 inches in August. After six-tenths of an inch in December, 5.9 inches fell last month. The heavy rains this month will boost the annual total, and April and May could easily bring more rain than the city received during some fall months.

To some the recent rain is a blessing, to others it is just a sloppy mess. Only individual perspective can determine whether the glass is half full or half empty.

James Earl Johnson of Greenville was arrested by city police on larceny charges Tuesday night.

Officer H.D. Hines said Johnson was taken into custody about 10:24 p.m. in connection with the theft of an eight-horsepower Briggs & Stratton engine from a construction site at the intersection of 14th and Charles streets.

Quiz Bowl Results

The D.H. Conley High School Quiz Bowl team recently participated in a district competition at West Carteret High School in Morehead City.

Conley defeated Smithfield-Selma to advance to the championship game, but lost to East Carteret in the final competition. East Carteret will represent the district in the state finals in Raleigh April 29.

Conley team members are Scott Claybrook, Jeff Denton, Chad Dickerson, Bill Wainwright, Hank Crapps, Julie Smith, Ashley Cobb and Maria Smith.

The bowl is an academic competition sponsored by public libraries across North Carolina. The Conley team, coached by Christine Waters, Jena Kerns and Dora Snow, had advanced to the district level after winning the Sheppard Memorial Library Quiz Bowl in February.

Seminar Attended

Patricia Hiss, chairman of fine arts at E.B. Aycock Junior High School, recently attended the seminar "The Perpetual Pendulum: Nature or Nurture?" sponsored by the Advancement of Teaching.

Held in Greenville, the seminar included lectures on Africa, evolution and child development.

Minigrants Discussed

Several people recently discussed minigrants provided to Farmville schools by the Pitt County Educational Foundation during the Farmville area schools community meeting.

Presenters were LuAnn Jordan, Richard Wilkerson, Ellen Mallebaum, Sandra Flowers and Linda Womack.

About 60 people attended the reception, including members of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, the Pitt County Educational Foundation, the Board of Education and the Farmville Board of Commissioners.

Japanese Studied

Silk kimonos from Japan were worn by Ms. Atkinson, Laura Powell, Jessica Oakley, Karen Peaden and Angela Rhodes. Students wore Japanese hats and used decorative fans.

Billy Warren of A.C. Monk demonstrated the correct use of chopsticks, and Shaun Cates and Michael Moore demonstrated karate. Ms. Peaden, accompanied by Ms. Atkinson, sang a song in Japanese.

Ms. Powell, Elaine Pickett and Carol Tugwell prepared a buffet luncheon using Japanese recipes. Students ate lunches using chopsticks.

TIM COPELAND

WOW Honors Copeland

Pitt County Deputy Sheriff Tim Copeland has been honored by Greenville Lodge 218, Woodmen of the World, as recipient of the fraternal benefit society's award as Outstanding Citizen of the Year for Greenville and Pitt County.

A spokesman for the Greenville unit said only one person may qualify for the award during a calendar year and Copeland was selected because of his service to the area through his dedication and achievements.

Copeland, crime prevention officer/firearms control officer for the sheriff's department, is a graduate of the police science curriculum of Pitt Community College and the Police Law Institute at Salemburg.

Copeland, 32, has received various honors, including: Community Outstanding Young Public Servant 1988 by Greenville Jaycees; Pitt Law Enforcement Officer 1988 by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce; Outstanding Achievement Crime Prevention Award by the governor; Outstanding Service To N.C. Community Watch Award; Pitt County Law Enforcement Officer 1988 by VFW; Service to Youth Award 1987 by VFW; Distinguished Law Enforcement Award 1987 by Greenville Optimist Club, and Outstanding Law Enforcement Officer 1982 by Hyde County Jaycees.

The recipient is married to the former Ann Leggett of Williamston. They attend Kings Crossroads Free Will Baptist Church.

Team Won Contest

A comprehensive math team from J.H. Rose High School recently won first place in the University of North Carolina at Wilmington Math Contest.

Team members were Jamie Molchan, Dave Chan, Tom Irons, Sheila Kasperek, Jeff Jones and Stephen Smith. Molchan and Chan will advance to the state finals April 27 in Raleigh.

Rose Teams Honors

Two math teams from J.H. Rose High School won honors in the comprehensive and algebra II competition at a region I math contest at Chowan College.

The algebra II team, composed of Brian Marks, Jonathan Ames and Jita Shah, won first place, while the comprehensive team, composed of Jonathan Li, Jeff Likosar, Felicia Cherry, Bill Gibson and Karen Howell, won second place.

Students winning individual honors and their categories were algebra II: Marks, first, and Ames, second; comprehensive: Li, third, and Likosar, fifth.

Li and Likosar will advance to the state finals in Raleigh April 27. Marks and Ames will compete in the algebra II run-off on April 20 in Rocky Mount.

Film Site Studied

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — Paramount Pictures Corp. is looking at High Point as one site for a contemporary comedy called "Crazy People," officials with the North Carolina Film Office said Wednesday.

Paramount is finalizing negotiations to film at an exclusive girls' boarding school called Chatham Hall near Danville, Va., though no final contract has been signed, according to Laura Oaksmith, director of the Virginia Film Office in Richmond. Producers are expected to use the facilities of the new Carolina Atlantic Film Studio in High Point, built in 1986-87 by a group of High Point businessmen operating under the name of Market Square Partners, officials said.

Jake Froelich, managing general partner for the group, acknowledged that some agreement may be in the works, but he declined to give any details.

Class hours are from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Jaycee Park Auditorium. Children should bring bag lunches.

A performance will be held Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. Cost is $15. For information and registration, call 830-4542.

N.C. Ranks 10th In National Study Of Pollutants Released Into The Air

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Federal officials and environmental groups are calling for stronger laws to control toxic air pollutants in light of a government report showing that at least 2.4 billion pounds of deadly chemicals are released into the air each year.

"The magnitude of this problem far exceeds our worst fears," declared Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., after he made a report public Wednesday that provided the first nationwide glimpse into the volume of toxic pollutants released by chemical plants and other industrial sources.

The report covered 328 chemicals or chemical groups including 60 agents the government has identified as causing cancer. Among the chemicals are phosgene, used as a nerve gas in World War I, and methyl isocyanate, which killed more than 2,000 people in Bhopal, India, in 1984.

North Carolina ranked 10th among the states, with 92.3 million pounds of toxic emissions in 1987.

The survey also showed that Charlotte, Raleigh, Fayetteville and Greensboro exceeded federal standards for ozone in 1988, and Raleigh

North Carolina has no regulations for controlling air toxins, although the Division of Environmental Management has been developing rules for five years.

"The numbers do reflect our population size, which is 10th overall," said Edward Norman, a scientist with the N.C. Environmental Defense Fund. "But we certainly don't want to reflect the image that we are the 10th most polluted state, which is what this says to me."

The ranking, Norman said, must be attributed in part to the lack of regulations on air toxins. New Jersey, which has more industry than North Carolina, ranked 22nd on the list.

"They already have an air-toxins regulation in place," Norman said.

Spokesmen for the chemical industry, which accounted for about a third of the total volume of toxic pollutants cited in the report, said it is misleading to link the raw figures to health risk because they do not take into account actual exposure or concentration.

They said the emissions are legal and take place within the restrictions of various state and federal permits.

"Anyone who says that there is a national health crisis based on these numbers is wrong. To use those numbers is misleading," insisted Jeffrey Van, chief spokesman for the Chemical Manufacturers Association.

Waxman, chairman of the House subcommittee on health and environment, acknowledged that the raw figures do not provide a clear picture of the health impact because "we don't really know how much of which pollutants individuals are actually breathing."

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Not Ho-Hum

Don't Take Fund-Raising For Granted

Maybe you're a little weary with fund-raising campaigns. Maybe reading the news about their success is wearing thin. Pitt County has had a few and will probably have quite a few more. After all, it's a growing community, constantly reaching to exceed its grasp. It would be quite easy to cop a ho-hum, here-we-go-again attitude about headlines like the one Tuesday which read "Foundation Receives $300,000 Gift From Burroughs Wellcome."

But before the yawn breaks across your face, hold on. That kind of nonchalance isn't becoming in a community where needs constantly overstep funding. Pitt County has a wealth of such needs, and private fund-raising plays an enormous part in meeting them. It can't be taken for granted. Without it, the shortfall would be overwhelming. The Pride and the Challenge campaign, the foundation the headline above referred to, is a good example.

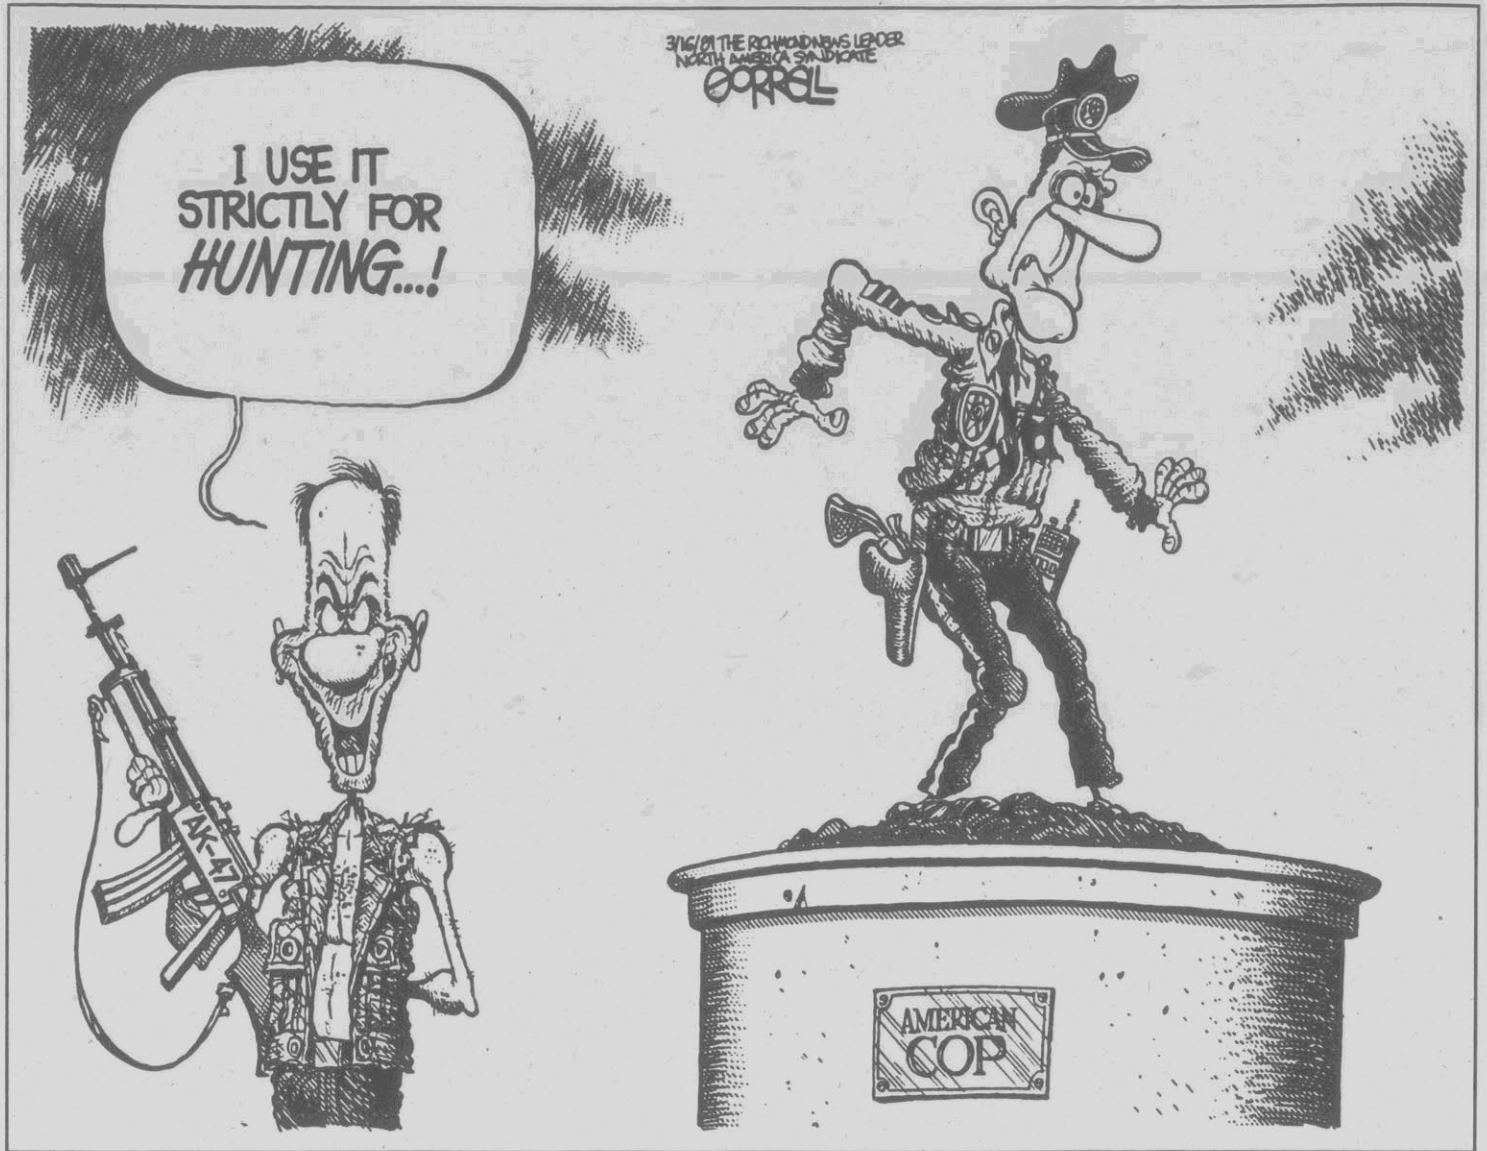

Dollars from that campaign establish an endowment for Pitt County Memorial Hospital. They will be spent for state-of-the-art medical equipment. That may sound a little mundane, but if you've ever spent any time in a hospital, you know how important adequate equipment and comfortable surroundings are. If you haven't, consider yourself very lucky but prick up your ears because your time of need inevitably will come. And when it does, the meaning of private fund-raising will be clear. You'll reap the benefits.

The Pride and the Challenge drive is significant in two respects. First, because the principle will be invested as an endowment with only the interest earned expended, it creates a permanent resource for the community. Equipment purchases can be made as necessary without depleting the capital. That's quite an asset.

Second, the drive funds needs without burdening the taxpayers, an outstanding bargain in a county where wants frequently outnumber dollars. The partnership between the public and private sectors is becoming more and more important, and the Pride and the Challenge campaign is an excellent example of this successful relationship.

In a community with broad scope and high hopes — a community like Pitt — fund-raising is not ho-hum. It never will be. Don't let the frequency of the headlines mesmerize you into complacency. There's nothing everyday about extraordinary effort.

'In a community with broad scope and high hopes — a community like Pitt — fund-raising is not ho-hum. It never will be.'

The Word 'Womanizer' Lives On

Art Buchwald

Sen. Tower is gone but the word "womanizer" lives on. The senator was falsely accused of being one. Even Sam Donaldson doesn't know what a womanizer is.

My Webster's dictionary doesn't seem to know either. It defines womanizing as "to pursue free-wheeling relationships with women."

I decided to ask some friends what they thought a womanizer was.

Ella Brennan told me, "A womanizer is a man a woman can't stand."

"Supposing she likes him?"

"Then he's a teddy bear."

Lisa Johnson said, "A womanizer is someone who has no respect for anybody. For example, if a guy in my office takes me out on a date and then the next night has a date with my roommate — he is a low-life rat."

"And if he called you two nights in a row, what would he be?"

Bob Hefty spoke up, "The whole business of courting is full of jokers. I enjoy dating girls, but so far my mother hasn't liked any of them. Does that make me a womanizer?"

I replied, "People believe that if a man has to go from woman to woman, he is fatally flawed."

Bob protested, "But if a man's not married, there is nothing wrong with going out with a lot of women. Everyone has to go somewhere to eat."

I asked Sarah Temple if she thought womanizers were evil people or just poor little sheep who had lost their way.

"I deal with it on a case-by-case basis. Some guys who start out as womanizers can easily be tamed. In a way, it's more fun because it's a challenge to win a man over for yourself. Then there are men who are incorrigible and will never change. They should not even be confirmed as a member of Bush's Cabinet."

John O'Donnell was sputtering mad. "The whole mating game is based on female pursuit. Everything from Opium perfume to Victoria's Secret is used to trap us. After spending so much money on themselves, women get mad if the bait doesn't work. So they start bad-mouthing males around the water cooler. What do they call a woman who dates more than one guy?"

"An environmentalist?" I suggested.

I then asked Arthur Buckingham, the lobbyist, "Do certain professions have more womanizers than others?"

"Of course they do. Defense consultants are in a very high stress business and womanizing is the only way they can wind down."

Roz Ripple thought womanizers should be hung.

"They serve no useful purpose, and they're always spoiling your fun on a Saturday night."

"It sounds as if you're bitter because there are no messages on your answering machine," I said.

"I can get all the womanizer dates I want. But I wouldn't waste my time with a man who is interested in going to a movie with me one night and validating his parking ticket with someone else the next."

Toss The Rifles, Keep The Handguns

WASHINGTON — President Bush, balancing when he should be choosing, says he is seeking "an accommodation between the police and the sporting interest" regarding assault rifles. So much for the interest of ghettos, where such guns are frequently fired.

The urban poor, are as usual, invisible while their betters plan their betterment. But the poor have a special interest in firearms policy. They would gain from a prompt ban on assault rifles and would suffer from gun control focused, as it usually is, on handguns.

The reasons for acting forcefully against the former are reasons for leaving the latter alone. Assault weapons are not yet prevalent and never will be needed for legitimate civilian activities. Handguns are widely dispersed and poignantly necessary for some people.

Don Kates, Jr., notes that New York's pioneering Sullivan Law (1911) was an example of gun control advocated by conservatives who associated handguns with foreign-born anarchists, labor

George Will

'But the poor have a special interest in firearms policy. They would gain from a prompt ban on assault rifles and would suffer from gun control focused, as it usually is, on handguns.'

agitators and criminals. Newspapers of the day denounced "low-browed foreigners" with guns, guns in the pockets of "ignorant and quarrelsome immigrants of lawbreaking propensities."

Today, too, there is a class bias in the gun-control argument. Literature from the National Coalition to Ban Handguns includes this gem:

Q. Does the banning of handguns discriminate against minority members of society?

A. No. Handguns would be illegal in the hands of the total populace, including all racial and religious groups, the rich and poor alike.

Wonderful. It would impartially disarm white, safe Park Avenue and the South Bronx, a war zone.

Kates makes a disturbing but not unsupported argument as follows: Many urban Americans live where government cannot, or will not, enforce its proper monopoly on the use of force. Given this failure, or abdication, by government it is unseemly for the safe majority to deny the endangered minority the handguns needed for self-help.

A Chicago judge writing in a legal publication stresses that his readers "would not go into ghetto areas except in broad daylight under the most optimum conditions — surely not at night, alone or on foot. But some people have no choice. To live or work or have some need to be on this 'frontier' imposes a fear which is tempered by possession of a gun."

Kates cites data that indicate that, "Handgun-armed citizens actually thwart almost as many crimes annually as handgun-armed criminals succeed in committing. Citizens acting in legitimate self-defense kill about three times more assailants and robbers than do police." He says prison surveys show that criminals fear armed victims more than police and that fear of armed civilians deters criminals into nonconfrontational crime. Burglars rarely encounter armed victims because burglars target unoccupied premises. Even so, more burglars meet armed resistance than are arrested and sent to prison.

About half of America's households possess at least one gun. Among those owning at least one gun, the average is three. About 50 million households have handguns. Prohibition of handguns would be a bigger failure than prohibition of gin. "Handguns, unlike liquor," notes Kates, "are reusable, and their continued use does not involve the visibility of perpetual illegal purchase."

Assault rifles are different. Daryl Gates, Los Angeles police chief, says: "A reasonable right to bear arms does not mandate that weapons designed and built for the express purpose of killing human beings on battlefields be made available to the general public. In fact, the general public is already prohibited by the National Firearms Act from owning most weapons made for that purpose."

But assault rifles have enthusiasts (the Bush administration even worries about the interests of "gun collectors"), so a President whose primary objective is popularity is resorting to a tested technique: When the subject is politically problematic, swallow it up in a larger subject.

Hence the administration's position is: Assault weapons are misused by drug dealers, so let's not ban the guns; let's win "the war" on drugs which must be won (in the words of Attorney General Dick Thornburgh last Sunday) "on the battlefield of values."

Meanwhile, back on the non-metaphysical battlefield where many poor people live, the poor must be bemused by Bush's idea that his temporary ban on the importation of some rifles is a "cooling-off" period. It is not cooling their streets, but it is not supposed to.

No wonder the National Rifle Association is so pleased by Bush's policy. The policy is to cool off public opinion until some fresh menace — say, a tainted banana from some banana republic — appears, a menace that threatens substantial interests, like the serenity of the comfortable.

New Threat

Out Of The Hands Of The Public

Clearly acts of terrorism and random violence and destruction are on the increase, but does a trace of cyanide in a few grapes justify paralyzing the fruit trade?

It did last week. Chilean grapes were pulled from grocery shelves, halted in shipment and disposed of because of the cyanide threat.

The move paralyzed the fruit trade of Chile, sent Americans to dumping grapes and other fruit on hand and caused supermarkets all over the nation to pull the fruit from their show cases.

Late in the week the administration lifted an embargo on Chilean fruit and trade was resumed, but the event was costly for Chile's economy and for American suppliers and retailers.

The matter soured relations between the United States and Chile. The Chileans felt their northern neighbors were overreacting to an isolated occurrence. Of course at this end consumers might agree — except that none of us wants to be the one who gets a poisoned grape. The threat has now abated and hopefully the Chilean fruit trade can continue unrestricted.

However, in a world more beset than ever with senseless acts we can expect new threats to public safety. Most of them will be groundless, the work of kooks. Some will have to be taken seriously. The proper government agencies will have to sort them out. The public may also have to take more risks than it has been prepared to take if the nation is not to be brought to its knees by terrorism or the crazies. It is an unpleasant and undesirable prospect, but the choice is not ours to make.

House OKs Bill Requiring Consent In Abortions

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — With House passage of a bill requiring parental consent for minors' abortions virtually assured, supporters are looking to the Senate for friendlier treatment than similar measures received in previous sessions.

The House tentatively approved the bill 86-30 Wednesday and scheduled a final vote for today. It would be the third time this decade that the House has endorsed mandatory parental consent, but the Senate bottled up the two previous bills in committee.

Rep. Paul Stam, R-Wake, the bill's chief sponsor, said prospects in the Senate are better than before "but not assured."

"In the (1988) elections we didn't lose any votes over there and we picked up some," Stam said. "Last time, we had 29 senators ready to vote for it if it ever came out on the floor. We've got more than that this year."

It would take 26 Senate votes to pass the bill.

A bipartisan coalition supported the bill in the House — 43 Democrats and 43 Republicans. Twenty-eight Democrats and two Republicans — Reps. Frank Rhodes and Ann Duncan, both R-Forsyth — voted against it. Four lawmakers abstained.

Reps. Ed Warren and Walter Jones Jr., both Pitt County Democrats, joined those voting for the bill.

Supporters said the bill would enhance family communication, while opponents said it was unnecessary for families that get along well and unreasonable for those who do not.

"Perhaps this will nudge a few (pregnant girls) to talk with their parents," said Rep. Harry Payne, D-New Hanover. "But for the other groups, the consequences of this bill can be very brutal."

"You've got a young girl who for reasons sufficient to her, very real reasons, cannot go to her parents," Payne said. "What this bill does it put that young girl into a legislatively-created pressure cooker."

Stam, a freshman lawmaker and longtime anti-abortion activist, said the bill would promote family unity.

"I hope and trust and believe that it would increase the responsibility of parents toward their children," Stam said. "I see this bill as a small step forward in helping get the families of North Carolina back together."

He said parental consent routinely is required for minors to undergo other forms of surgery and for activities ranging from school trips to the zoo to getting pierced ears.

"A minor is a minor is a minor ... except for abortion," Stam said.

Most of the debate focused on a provision that would allow girls who don't want to consult their parents to seek a waiver of the consent requirement in juvenile court.

The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that parental-consent laws without judicial bypass provisions are unconstitutional, but opponents said it would be unrealistic and unworkable to involve the courts in a personal decision such as whether to have an abortion.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, called the judicial provision "badly flawed" and a "legal mess." He said it could not be kept confidential as the bill promises and would lead to "judge shopping" as some judges earn reputations for approving petitions for waivers in most cases.

Girls who are rejected by one judge will simply go to another county and try again instead of appealing through the court system as specified by law, Miller said.

"What really are we doing, folks?" he said. "Who are we trying to fool?"

Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, who voted for the bill, said it nonetheless "troubles me." He voiced concern that doctors who unwittingly perform abortions on girls who lie about their age would be treated as criminals.

Stam said only doctors who knowingly violate the law would be prosecuted.

The bill cleared a potential obstacle when House Speaker Joe Mavretic ruled that it would not cost the state additional money, which would have required sending it to the Appropriations Committee.

Rep. Mickey Michaux, D-Durham, quoting the director of the Administrative Office of the Courts, said 4,715 abortions were performed on minors in North Carolina in 1987.

If all of them had sought a judicial waiver, the cost to the guardian ad litem program would have been $581,216, Michaux said. If 35 percent of the girls had requested legal counsel and couldn't pay for it, the cost would have risen to $696,000.

Stam noted that the cost figures Michaux mentioned were based on the assumption that all the pregnant minors would have fought the parental-consent requirement. He said evidence in states with parental-consent laws indicates otherwise.

Ethnic Harassment Bill Runs Into Balky Senate

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Ethnic harassment would have to be reported at all levels of state government under a bill that met resistance on the Senate floor and was sent to a committee for further action.

"There have been a lot of discussions in reference to increasing incidents of harassment based upon race," Sen. Bill Martin, D-Guilford, told the Senate Wednesday. He said the bill would simply require that all law enforcement agencies, state government agencies and public school superintendents and principals report acts of ethnic harassment to the N.C. Human Relations Council.

But Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, said the bill was too broad.

"This would add ... a burden or a duty for all the state, county and municipal law enforcement agencies and all the public school people and every department of state government to report this to this council," he said. "Is that in addition to what is now required and, if so, how much money is it going to cost?"

Sen. Bob Shaw, R-Guilford, said there was no description of what would constitute a reportable incident.

"Could we be talking about first graders here or second graders or third graders who say something?" he asked.

"We're not talking about a word here or there that a school child would raise," Martin replied, adding that there is no penalty in the bill for agencies that fail to report.

Sen. Don Kincaid, R-Caldwell, said he was concerned about letting the Human Relations Council adopt rules to encourage the employment of qualified people without regard to race — something already in the law.

"Are we giving this council the power to adopt rules to tell people who they can hire or fire?" he asked.

Martin said the council has no authority over anyone else, but Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, said the council might report those who don't hire enough minorities for ethnic harassment.

Finally, Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, proposed sending the bill to the Judiciary I Committee for further study. Sen. Frank Ballance, D-Warren, agreed, saying the bill might be improved with language describing what kinds of actions would be reported.

Legislative Committees Ponder Ways To Fund Road Program

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — As the $8.6 billion highway construction bill inches forward, how to pay for the ambitious program is becoming the hottest issue and the biggest obstacle to enacting the bill by mid-April as hoped.

The package won unanimous approval Wednesday of the Senate Transportation Committee, which focused on how the money raised would be spent. It now goes to the Finance Committee, which will deal with how to generate the revenue.

Meanwhile, the House Infrastructure Committee held its first meeting on the bill, which was approved by a subcommittee Tuesday. Chairman Sam Hunt, D-Alamance, said he expects the full committee to vote next week. If approved, it would go to the House Finance Committee.

The finance committees are expected to be battlegrounds, as tax provisions are shaping up as the bill's most controversial issue.

Automobile dealers are mounting fierce resistance to an automobile title transfer tax. Wade Isaacs, executive vice president of the North Carolina Automobile Dealers Association, told the Senate committee the provision would have "an absolutely devastating effect" on vehicle sales.

Average sales in North Carolina are down 20 percent this year and probably would fall another 6 to 10 percent if the title transfer fee were approved, Isaacs told reporters.

"If this (bill) were to pass and go into effect before we get some sort of recovery, it would put some dealers out of business," he said.

But Sen. Paul Smith, R-Rowan, said the service-station industry might be hurt more than any other by the bill — especially in border counties. If the gasoline tax is several cents higher in North Carolina than in South Carolina, Virginia and Tennessee, motorists might wait until they cross into those states to purchase gasoline, Smith said.

"There seems to be a lot of concern for automobile dealers, but there seems to be little concern for the thousands and thousands of service-station dealers," Smith said.

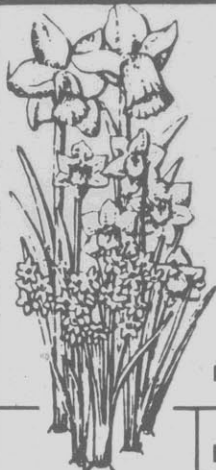

"They're bearing the biggest brunt of this total package."

The House bill would impose a 2 percent title transfer fee, while the Senate bill would establish a similar 3 percent "highway user fee" and abolish the existing 2 percent sales tax on automobiles. Both versions would increase the state gasoline tax by 5 1/4 cents per gallon.

Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, the bill's chief House sponsor, said difficult negotiations remain in the quest for a financing consensus. But he said he still hopes the measure can be enacted by April 15, which would enable its tax provisions to take effect when the new fiscal year starts July 1.

"I'm still open on the funding part, as long as we maintain $8.6 billion," Hunter said. "I'd like to do it whichever way ... the public and the members of the General Assembly feel most comfortable with. Obviously it's expensive; it's got to be paid for."

The 750-member auto dealers' association wants to replace the current sales tax with a 3 percent user fee.

GREENVILLE'S FULL GOSPEL BUSINESSMEN'S FELLOWSHIP INVITES YOU TO HEAR THE TESTIMONY OF ERNIE MEADOWS

On Friday, March 24th, 1989, come join us at The Golden Corral at 12 noon for our luncheon and hear Brother Ernie Meadows share his testimony.

If Ernie Meadows could find joy, peace and fulfillment, then so can you. When you are fifteen (15) years old, and labeled "bad" by society, what do you do? Get worse? That is what happened to Ernie. He found himself behind bars, not just once, but many times. He was convicted of felony armed robbery and reckless homicide. The world punished him but never could tell him how to live a different life. Once again, he found himself behind bars, charged with four (4) counts attempted murder, three (3) counts armed violence, two (2) counts aggravated battery, one (1) count aggravated assault and two (2) counts reckless conduct.

Ernie cried out for help and someone heard his plea—someone, who cared enough to tell him the truth and the way to everlasting life. There in a cell, he gave the shambles of his broken life to Jesus Christ, who delivered him from drug and alcohol addiction and saved him from many years behind bars.

Today, Ernie is still free, and he visits prisons and jails telling others of the saving grace and power of Jesus Christ. He has shared the Good News of Jesus with prisoners in twenty seven (27) states. He is past president of Centralia, Illinois FGBMF Chapter, effective January 1987 and is a sales representative. He and his family reside near Odin, Ill.

Ernie has shared his story with FGBMF Chapters in THIRTY-FOUR (34) states since May 18, 1985.

October 19, 1986, Ernie and his son David, were reunited for the first time since 1978! After eight (8) years of separation, God in His love and mercy, brought dad and son together again. PTL!

September 9, 1987, at 12:28 a.m., a premature baby girl was born to Ernie and Gayle, weighing 2 lbs. 10 oz. PTL!

One week later the doctors said the tiny baby girl did not properly form. According to them, she would not be normal. They said she would be mentally retarded, and there was not only a possibility but a probability she would develop heart, lung and bowel problems. Ernie shares what God said about this.

For more information concerning the meeting, call 355-2727

*Breakfast meetings are held weekly each Tuesday at 6:30 am at Tom's Restaurant in Greenville.

Appointed Judiciary Opposed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — While two judges supported changing North Carolina's judicial selection process from statewide election to gubernatorial appointment, representatives of women and minorities said they would be penalized by such a switch.

Superior Court Judges Tom Ross and Charles Winberry said the system being studied by the Senate Constitution Committee would insulate a fair and scandal-free judiciary from an emerging two-party system and more hotly contested elections.

"Practically speaking, a judge many times has no control over an election," Ross said Wednesday. "They go with the winds."

Lawyers would be the biggest contributors to campaigns, leading to at least the perception of favoritism, he said. "No matter what the judge does ... the client may walk out of that courtroom thinking that decision was made based on money."

But Irving Joyner, former president of the North Carolina Association of Black Lawyers, opposed the proposed constitutional amendment.

"Historically, the appointive process has overlooked the contributions of minorities and women in the judicial arena," he said.

Joyner said only two minorities have ever been appointed resident Superior Court judges in this state, while 10 blacks have been elected to Superior Court positions. And he said the public should never lose the right to vote for representatives at any level.

Joyner recommended less drastic revisions, saying, "You just don't tamper, willy-nilly with the constitution."

"The integrity of the judiciary is not determined by how the person is selected, but by who is selected," he added.

Heidi Chapman, president of the N.C. Women Attorneys Association, said women would lose ground under the appointive system because the governor would be looking for candidates with strong business ties.

"They (women) are not working usually for the mainline firms, the big firms that have big business clients," Ms. Chapman said.

She said changing North Carolina's selection process would not have its intended effect of reducing outside influences on the judiciary.

"There's no avoiding that money talks and money comes into play under many circumstances," she said. But she added that under the proposed constitutional amendment before the committee, the money would be poured into the governor's pocket instead of being spread across the state during elections.

Extra Power Scheduled

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Electric Membership Corp. is planning a generator project along the Outer Banks to cut summer peak power costs, officials said Wednesday.

Plans call for diesel generators at two locations to provide power during critical power-use peaks in the summer, when thousands of tourists place heavy demands on power supplies.

The generators would be at the site of the headquarters for Cape Hatteras Electric Membership Corp. in Buxton and the Ocracoke branch office of Tideland Electric Membership Corp.

"The generators will be used principally during the summer peak demands in the area, when our bulk power costs are at their highest," said David McCue, interim executive vice president of N.C. Electric Membership Corp.

"They may also be used on occasion to provide some power when our primary transmission service is interrupted. But these generators alone will not be able to serve the entire area during outages."

Accept No Substitutes

Every man needs a god. Every man has a god. Every man's god is not God. But every man's god is the choice of his own heart. The very personal subject of where you stand with your god, and with God is an important issue—more important than this life, because it concerns death. And if you trade God for a god, you've traded eternal life for death—which is a poor substitute.

HMO Losses

RALEIGH (AP) — Eight of the 10 health maintenance organizations doing business in North Carolina reported operating losses for 1988 despite increases averaging 20 percent in the HMOs' monthly fees for members.

But in five of the cases the losses, which were blamed mostly on rising medical costs, were less than in 1987.

The state's largest HMO, Kaiser Foundation Health Plan of North Carolina, lost the most money in 1988 — $23.1 million — partly because of expensive new projects. Kaiser's 1987 loss was nearly $15 million.

State regulators and HMO operators said all segments of the health insurance industry continued to suffer from rapidly rising medical costs last year.

Quieter Jet

DURHAM (AP) — American Airlines plans to begin operating a new, quieter jet aircraft from Raleigh-Durham International Airport in 1991.

American officials announced Wednesday that the airline will acquire up to 150 Fokker 100 jets, manufactured in the Netherlands. The airline has placed firm orders with Fokker Aircraft B.V. for 75 of the 95-seat planes, with an option for 75 more.

"These are airplanes that we will use in fairly substantial numbers over time at Raleigh-Durham International Airport," Al Becker, an American spokesman, said Wednesday. "One of the critical missions for this category of airplane will be to help us expand our hub at RDU."

Baxter Threat

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Work at Baxter Healthcare Inc. in McDowell County, which was suspended for 24 hours because of an anonymous tampering threat, resumed on Wednesday as law enforcement officials searched for the source of the threat.

A note alleging the contamination of a bag of intravenous solution was found Monday in a washroom at Baxter's North Cove plant 12 miles north of Marion. In response, Baxter management sent first- and second-shift workers at its manufacturing facility home at 3 p.m. Tuesday.

suspended production and quarantined all solutions produced Monday.

The plant, McDowell County's largest employer, makes intravenous solutions, such as saline solutions, in various sizes for use in hospitals and by other health-care providers.

None of the solutions manufactured Monday had been shipped from the plant, and the company has no evidence that any of Baxter's products are unsafe, officials said.

Citizenship Award

DURHAM — George R. Herbert, president of the Research Triangle Institute, has received the 1989 Citation for Distinguished Citizenship from N.C. Citizens for Business and Industry.

The award was presented Wednesday at a luncheon at the Raleigh Civic Center. Sherwood H. Smith Jr., president of Carolina Power & Light Co., made the presentation.

The citation has been made annually since 1960 to recognize significant contributions to business and industry in the state. Winners have included the late Gov. Luther H. Hodges and the late Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr.

Aldicarb

GREENSBORO (AP) — Aldicarb, an acutely toxic pesticide that the Environmental Protection Agency may ban from use on potatoes and bananas, is used by North Carolina growers.

But tests on North Carolina produce last year found no measurable aldicarb residue, and the state is planning no immediate change in its use, said Joel Padmore, assistant director of the N.C. Department of Agriculture's Food and Drug Protection Division.

The EPA is considering banning aldicarb from potatoes and bananas because of its potential for making children sick. A study recommended continued use on other food products, including citrus, where residue levels are lower.

In North Carolina, aldicarb is also used on peanuts, soybeans, sweet potatoes, cotton and tobacco. Because of aldicarb's toxicity, the state requires growers to complete a training program before being licensed to use the chemical.

Jacobs Drops Extradition Fight

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Timothy Jacobs' decision to drop his fight against extradition from New York and return to North Carolina will hurt "the cause," fellow Indian activist Eddie Hatcher said.

Hatcher, who is being held in a jail in Oakland, Calif., told The Fayetteville Times on Wednesday that Jacobs is making "a big mistake, and I think he's putting himself first, which is affecting other people."

State Bureau of Investigation agents may leave today for New York to pick up Jacobs, authorities said.

Jacobs, 20, and Eddie Hatcher, 31, both of Pembroke, held up to 20 people hostage for 10 hours at The Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton on Feb. 1, 1988. They said they took over the newspaper to publicize their allegations that county officials were corrupt and involved in drug trafficking.

A federal jury acquitted Jacobs and Hatcher of hostage-taking charges in October, but they were each indicted by a Robeson County grand jury in December on 14 counts of second-degree kidnapping.

Robeson County District Attorney Richard Townsend said he hopes that Hatcher and Jacobs will be tried together. He said he plans to prosecute the case himself.

"We feel like, for a lot of reasons, they need to be tried together," Townsend said. "Right now, we'll have to wait and see when we'll be able to get the co-defendant Hatcher back."

The Appellate Division of State Supreme Court in New York refused Tuesday to block Jacobs' extradition, but Lewis Pitts of Christie Institute South said he was preparing a new appeal to New York's highest court when Jacobs decided not to pursue it.

Pitts said Jacobs made his decision "based on representations ... to friends and acquaintances that he will not be required to stay in the Robeson County Jail at all and that they will support a reasonable bail for him."

New York Judge William O'Brien, who approved the extradition after a three-day hearing, said in his written order that SBI Agent James Bowman had told Jacobs' parents that he would recommend Jacobs be released on an unsecured bond or be housed in another county jail if bond could not be arranged. Jacobs' attorneys had argued that Bowman's statement constituted interference with his right to counsel.

Bishop Bans Women From Foot-Washing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — A directive from the Catholic bishop of Charlotte to exclude women from the foot-washing ritual in Holy Thursday services was criticized by his counterpart in the eastern part of the state, who called the action "damaging."

"I'm going to wash the feet of whoever comes forward," said Raleigh Bishop Joseph Gossman, who will lead services today at Sacred Heart Cathedral in downtown Raleigh.

Charlotte Bishop John Donoghue said his actions were wrongly interpreted as discriminatory.

"The Holy Thursday liturgy is the celebration of the institution of the Priesthood," he wrote in a letter to the diocesan newspaper, The North Carolina Catholic, "where Christ washed the feet of His apostles — all men."

The letter did not placate protesters, who held candles and stood in silence outside St. Patrick's Cathedral Tuesday as Donoghue led a Holy Week mass for priests from every Catholic church in the 46-county Diocese of Charlotte.

"Our purpose is to demonstrate unified support for the end of the sin of sexism in our church," said Susan

Richards, one of the protest organizers. "It's important for the bishop to know that we consider his actions a source of discrimination and alienation."

Report Says Pot Can Stunt Fetus

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Pregnant women should be warned that smoking marijuana may stunt the growth of their unborn babies, and even a single joint results in prolonged fetal exposure to the drug, researchers reported today.

"This study documents that marijuana during pregnancy is associated with poor fetal growth," said Dr. Barry Zuckerman, who directed the study.

The research, based on 1,226 patients at a pregnancy clinic at Boston City Hospital, found that women who smoked pot produced babies who averaged three ounces lighter and two-tenths of an inch shorter than non-users' newborns.

Zuckerman said the study underscores the belief that the effects of bad habits during pregnancy add up. While one may have a small impact on the baby, several together can significantly harm the child's growth.

For instance, his study suggests that a woman who gains only 10 pounds during pregnancy, smokes a pack of cigarettes a day and uses marijuana and cocaine will produce a baby who is 15 ounces smaller than normal.

"It definitely supports the case that marijuana has an effect on the fetus," said Coryl Jones, a research psychologist at the National Institute on Drug Abuse in Bethesda, Md.

The study also confirmed earlier reports showing that cocaine users also produce unusually small babies.

Fawn Hall Says North Ordered Her To Alter Contra Documents

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Oliver North's former secretary, Fawn Hall, says he directed her to alter documents outlining his deep involvement with the Nicaraguan Contra rebels during a period in which U.S. aid to them was against the law.

In testimony Wednesday, Ms. Hall also acknowledged that North joked about going to jail in 1985 when she typed false letters to Congress denying that North was involved with the Contras. North now is charged with lying to Congress.

"Col. North made jokes and there were jokes made about" going to jail, Hall testified. "He is one to jest often. ... He had a great sense of humor."

Hall described how at North's instructions on Nov. 21, 1986, the day before the attorney general's aides began combing National Security Council files for evidence of the Iran-Contra affair, she altered several classified memos.

The documents described North's recommendations to his superiors on how to help the Contras, including providing aid to Guatemala after military officials there supplied phony end-user certificates for arms shipments to the Contras. The memos also referred to third-country assistance to the Contras and the possibility of seizing an arms shipment headed for Nicaragua.

Former national security adviser Robert McFarlane had raised questions about those memos with North in 1985, shortly before McFarlane signed the letters to Congress containing denials of NSC assistance to the Contras.

Ms. Hall said she made the changes and shredded the originals, adding that "it was the logical thing to do."

Asked if she had any qualms, she said, "There was a moment when I paused, but I worked for Col. North ... four years. I knew his character well, ... knew there was a reason he was doing this."

When she asked North what to do about duplicating the handwritten checkmarks at the bottom of some of the original memos, "he said 'Check it.'"

She said her work was interrupted at one point because "Col. North was in the room with the shredder" and she went to help him. The volume of shredding was so heavy that the shredder jammed.

North was destroying 15 months worth of internal office system computer notes.

Hall said she had long wanted to get rid of a growing stack of telephone logs kept in the same drawer of a safe as the computer notes and when she asked if she could destroy them, "he said yes."

Supreme Court Says N.Y. City Panel Unconstitutional

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A U.S. Supreme Court ruling that declared the city's government unconstitutional prompted an immediate threat of secession from Staten Island, to which Mayor Edward I. Koch replied, "I'll protect it."

The Board of Estimate, a body unique to New York City, is "a substantial departure from the one-person, one-vote ideal," Justice Byron R. White wrote in the unanimous ruling Wednesday.

The justices upheld a U.S. Court of Appeals ruling requiring a plan that meets that standard. Currently, the borough of Staten Island, with fewer than 400,000 residents, has the same voting power on the board as Brooklyn, with 2.2 million.

The board governs everything from land-use decisions to setting sewer and water rates, negotiating city contracts and awarding franchises and leasing property. It also has partial authority for the city's $25 billion budget.

Its powers are greater than those of City Council, a lawmaking body whose 35 representatives are elected from proportional districts citywide.

The board is made up of the five borough presidents, each with one vote, and three citywide elected officials — the mayor, comptroller and City Council president — each with two votes.

It was created in 1898 when the Bronx, Brooklyn, Manhattan, Queens and Staten Island joined to form New York City.

White said the under-representation on the board for the city's largest boroughs is severe, and he rejected arguments that the make-up legitimately balances regional interests.

He said a voter is shortchanged "if he may vote for one representative and the voters in another district half the size also elect one representative."

The ruling left city government in disarray before November's elections, in which all eight positions on the board will be decided. It also renewed calls from the smallest borough that it leave the city.

Staten Island "would be better off back under the rule of George III," said state Sen. John Marchi, who is sponsoring a bill in Albany to have his borough leave New York City.

The ruling "drops 400,000 Staten Islanders into a colonial state by effectively separating them from the governance of the larger community in which we live," said Marchi.

The borough's president, Ralph Lamberti, said: "I will not stand up as a representative of 400,000 people and lead them in a colony state."

But he added that if a new voting system reduces Staten Island's participation in government to that of a "spectator," he would give serious consideration to seceding.

The mayor said he's concerned about the problem, adding: "We'll find a way to protect Staten Island. I'll protect it."

After the lower court ruling, Koch appointed a Charter Revision Commission, which he said would now move "full speed ahead" with a new governing plan in time for a November referendum.

Koch said he expects the high court will allow the board to function until a substitute can be authorized. He also said that while he favored continuing the board, "I never believed we could win it" in court.

The city population is more than 7 million, with wide disparities in the size of the boroughs. Besides Brooklyn's 2.2 million people, Queens has 1.9 million, Manhattan 1.4 million and the Bronx 1.2 million.

The presidents of Brooklyn, Queens and Manhattan called for the board to be revised by weighting voting according to population. But Bronx Borough President Fernando Ferrer opposed weighted voting and instead urged a county executive form of government in each borough, removing some power from City Hall.

City Council President Andrew Stein said he wasn't sure if the board should change to weighted voting, but added that he was confident his own office "will have a strong role in the new setup."

Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin, who is expected to run against Koch for mayor, said an alternative government should make it "impossible for a centralized administration to run roughshod over communities which, until now, have had direct input into decisions affecting them."

'Rambo' Fan Is Charged In Deaths

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y. — A teen-ager accused of killing his parents and younger brother owned a variety of military paraphernalia and told police his nickname was "Rambo", authorities said.

Brian Britton, 16, pleaded innocent Wednesday to three counts of second-degree murder. He also pleaded innocent to one count of second-degree attempted murder for allegedly wounding his 18-year-old sister, Sherry Britton, at their home in the nearby Town of Poughkeepsie.

He was held without bail. Miss Britton was in stable condition late Wednesday after surgery for head and chest wounds, according to a nursing supervisor at Vassar Brothers Hospital.

Killed in the shooting spree were Dennis Britton, 44, his wife, Marlene, 42, and 8-year-old Jason Britton.

Town of Poughkeepsie police displayed two guns they believe were used in the shootings, a 20-gauge shotgun and a 12-gauge semi-automatic shotgun. The weapons were found in the attic of the Britton home, police said.

Also on display during a news conference was a range of military paraphernalia, including canteens, army fatigues, canvas ammunition packs, a copy of Soldier of Fortune magazine and a smoke grenade, which belonged to Brian Britton, police said.

The teen-ager also had Rambo posters in his room and a magazine from the "Rambo III" movie, about the Vietnam War veteran portrayed by Sylvester Stallone, police said.

"I'd say he had a definite fixation on Rambo and military activity and military life," said Town of Poughkeepsie Police Chief Stanley Still Jr.

Still said police think the shootings may have been sparked by a running argument in the household over school work.

Bride's Bail

CENTRAL CITY, Colo. (AP) — Joanne S. Bryant made bail and danned her veil after she was arrested on a charge of first-degree grand theft on the way to her wedding.

Bryant married Ron Gilmore on Monday after she posted $10,000 bail, which was reduced from the original $25,000. However, her honeymoon will have to be delayed because of a hearing.

PLO Says Uprising By Arabs To Continue

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TUNIS, Tunisia — The United States has asked the PLO to ease the violence in the Israeli-occupied lands, but the PLO vows the Palestinian uprising will not let up until Israel withdraws from the territories.

U.S. Ambassador Robert H. Pelletreau and Yasser Abed-Rabbo of the Palestine Liberation Organization smiled and chatted amiably for a few minutes over a cup of coffee, then faced each other over green baize-covered tables.

On that note Wednesday began the first formal meeting under the administration of President Bush between Israel's biggest supporter and the principal organization struggling to create a Palestinian state.

Pelletreau said U.S. concerns about terrorism were discussed as well as "practical steps that can be taken in the occupied territories to reduce tensions."

He indicated recent attempts by Palestinian guerrillas to infiltrate Israel for raids — which had been the subject of a number of his informal contacts with PLO officials — were also discussed.

"The PLO is very aware of our very strong view on violence and terrorism," he said.

Abed-Rabbo said he stressed to the Americans that the source of the violence in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip was "the Israeli occupation and the Israeli repressive measures."

"The Intifadeh will continue until the Israelis evacuate our homeland," he said. Intifadeh is the Arabic word for uprising.

Pelletreau and Abed-Rabbo would not say what steps the United States has asked the PLO to take to ease the 15-month-old revolt. At least 404 Palestinians and 18 Israelis have been killed in the uprising against Israel's 21-year occupation.

The meeting Wednesday was the second formal session since the United States in December lifted its 13-year embargo on official contacts with the PLO.

Both sides said it was the first to tackle the practical aspects of ending conflict in the region.

"Today there is clearly a new dynamic (in the peace process) of which this dialogue is a part," Pelletreau told reporters after the 4½-hour meeting at a government guest house in suburban Carthage, north of Tunis.

Abed-Rabbo agreed that some progress had been made, but stressed that "an international conference" is the only framework for a just and global solution "to the Middle East conflict."

In Washington, an official said on condition of anonymity that Abed-Rabbo's response to the U.S. plea to take steps to ease tensions in the occupied lands was "indefinite." The official spoke after receiving a report from Tunisia.

In another development, Rep. Charles E. Schumer, D-N.Y., said he was concerned about Abed-Rabbo heading the delegation because he is second-in-command in the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a PLO faction. The group was accused by Israel last month of sending guerrillas on an infiltration mission despite PLO chairman Yasser Arafat's renunciation of terrorism in December and recognition of Israel's right to exist. The guerrillas were intercepted.

The U.S. government in its "Terrorist Group Profiles" describes the front, headed by Naif Hawatmeh, as Marxist-Leninist and pro-Soviet in policy. It has "repeatedly affirmed its hostility and resistance to U.S. policy in the region" and carried out bombings and grenade attacks against Israel, the document says.

The talks in suburban Carthage followed a 90-minute get-acquainted session Dec. 16, the first announced formal meeting between the two sides in 13 years.

Police guarded surrounding streets and rooftops.

Israel is vehemently opposed to the U.S.-PLO dialogue, saying it prefers to talk with Palestinians living in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. However, no viable local interlocutors have been found.

Congressional Foes Ready To Fight Deal With Japan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Republican and Democratic members of Congress are criticizing the FSX fighter plane deal with Japan despite President Bush's support for the joint venture.

"The FSX agreement is a bad deal for America and for American workers," Sen. Alfonse M. D'Amato, R-N.Y., who has emerged as a leading critic of the pending U.S.-Japan agreement, said Wednesday.

The deal is expected to be sent to Capitol Hill within the next few days. It could be blocked if both the Senate and the House pass resolutions of disapproval within 30 days of being formally notified of the agreement.

The president, however, could then veto the congressional action, with a two-thirds majority required to override the veto.

Bush said Tuesday that he has decided to endorse the deal, but with modifications to help safeguard U.S. technology and to assure that American industry has a share in the plane's production.

Under the agreement signed late last year, St. Louis-based General Dynamics would join with Japan's Mitsubishi Heavy Industries to co-develop and co-produce the FSX as an advanced version of the U.S. F-16 fighter.

Proponents argue the agreement represents the best deal the United States could negotiate in the face of Japanese opposition to buying F-16s directly from this country. They say the deal will promote exchanges of technology while helping U.S. industry.

Critics contend the arrangement amounts to a giveaway of advanced technology that Japan may use to help propel its civilian aircraft industry into head-to-head competition with the United States in the world market. They say Tokyo should purchase American-made planes to help offset the $50 billion U.S. trade deficit with Japan.

"We're giving them $7 billion worth of F-16 technology, in return for about $420 million in development work," D'Amato said.

D'Amato said he was asking the General Accounting Office to examine the current level of development of composite wing technology and active phased-array radar.

FSX proponents say the United States will benefit from Japanese developments in those areas, but D'Amato said, "This appears to be a case of the Japanese offering us something we already have for something they desperately want."

Sen. Alan J. Dixon, D-Ill., said he was "disappointed the president has not called for a complete rejection of the FSX deal."

"Since I have not seen his revised edition of the technology transfer, I cannot comment on it directly, but I will be meeting with my fellow senators to plan our next course of action," Dixon said. "I am leaning toward introducing a resolution of disapproval."

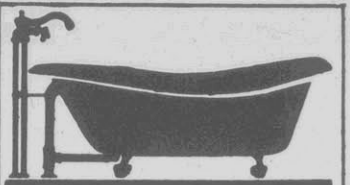

In the House, Rep. Duncan Hunter, R-Calif., introduced legislation to impose sanctions on Mitsubishi, Toshiba and other companies reportedly involved in assisting the Libyan government with construction of a plant to produce poison gas and munitions.

"Any country that sells out the security of the West certainly can't be trusted with high-technology defense information," Hunter said.

Published reports earlier this month said Mitsubishi had assigned a team of 50 technicians and engineers to assist in building a suspected chemical weapons production complex in Libya. Mitsubishi officials have denied involvement in the project.

Rep. Nicholas Mavroules, D-Mass., chairman of the House Armed Services subcommittee on investigations, said he has sent a letter to Bush expressing concern over the U.S.-Japanese deal.

Two Plead Guilty In Defense Probe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — A Navy official and defense contractor Teledyne Industries Inc., pleaded guilty today to bribery and conspiracy charges stemming from the massive probe into whether companies had paid Pentagon employees for inside information on contracts.

Stuart E. Berlin pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit bribery, receiving a bribe, wire fraud and making false statements. He faces a maximum term of 25 years in prison and $750,000 in fines when sentenced June 2.

Teledyne pleaded guilty to making false statements and conspiracy. It agreed to pay a total of more than $4.3 million — $1.5 million in penalties, $2.08 million in civil claims and $786,000 to reimburse the government for the cost of the investigation. U.S. District Judge Claude Hylton ordered the company to make those payments today.

The case involved a Teledyne division, Teledyne Electronics, based in Newbury Park, Calif.

Berlin, 51, admitted that he had received a bribe for supplying inside information on contracts. He had been a supervisory electronics engineer and branch head of the ship systems engineering section at the Space and Naval Warfare Systems Command in Arlington, Va.

He initially had been charged with racketeering, but those charges were dropped at an earlier court hearing. Berlin had no comment for reporters after leaving the courtroom.

Still facing charges in a trial scheduled to begin April 3 are defense consultants Fred H. Lackner and William L. Parkin, as well as three Teledyne officials: George H. Kaub, Eugene R. Sullivan and Dale Schnittger. Parkin was hospitalized last Friday after reportedly taking an overdose of pills.

Teledyne issued a statement after the guilty plea saying:

"The company's decision to enter a plea agreement and make a settlement with the government primarily came from the recognition that a former employer, Michael Savides, had entered into a corrupt and illegal arrangement with William Parkin, a consultant to Teledyne Electronics, and Fred Lackner, with whom the company had no relationship.

"Their purpose was to subvert the lawful operation of the government's procurement process."

Environmental Protection Agency's Southeastern office.

EPA has questioned the legality of Campbell's action, but the governor said environmental officials did not threaten him with legal action if he did not allow North Carolina to use the site.

North Carolina was most affected when Campbell's executive order prohibited March 1 any state from disposing hazardous waste in South Carolina that it would not bury in its own borders. Nineteen states including North Carolina remain banned.

Before the ban, North Carolina was shipping about one-third of the 135,000 tons of waste accepted annually at the GSX site near Pinewood. But officials say waste is now backing up in North Carolina.

"It just kind of takes a little of the pressure off," Campbell said.

North Carolina's state Senate agreed Monday on legislation that would remove the prohibitions, and Martin assured Campbell he would proceed with locating a facility once the legislation cleared the House. North Carolina Speaker of the House Joe Mavretic promised to move the bill along "as promptly as possible."

"I appreciate what you and the legislators are doing," Campbell said in Wednesday's letter to Martin. "It is obvious by your actions that you recognize the need for each state to do their fair share in dealing with this matter."

Martin said 850 tons was "a pretty reasonable level of shipment in comparison with what we shipped a year ago."

He said he thought the House could pass the bill within three weeks and if that happens, "we'll be in good shape."

"Otherwise," he said, "I am afraid that some of them would start just dumping it on the side of the road."

Campbell said he has been very careful to make clear that the ban is directed only at states that will not allow any hazardous waste disposal within their borders.

"We've been very careful — and this is like walking through a minefield, I'll tell you — to stay on the side of that which we can do which is legal and which doesn't invite any kind of problems," Campbell said.

Campbell claimed to be seeing some action, particularly in North Carolina and Tennessee, where he said the governor there told him he would seek to have prohibitions repealed.

Ageless Dick Clark To Retire

'Bandstand' Is Passed On To 26-Year-Old Hirsch

By Jeff Wilson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Dick Clark, the rock 'n' roll Pied Piper whose "American Bandstand" introduced teen-agers to Stevie Wonder, The Jackson 5 and Madonna as well as the Bunny Hop, Twist and Jerk dance crazes, is hanging up his saddle shoes after 33 years.

Known to generations of youths as America's oldest teen-ager, the squeaky-clean packager of pop next month turns over the emcee chores of television's longest running variety program to David Hirsch.

"Like David, I was 26 when I started hosting Bandstand. After 33 years, I finally decided it was time to give someone else a chance," Clark, 59, said in a statement.

"I knew that this day would eventually come. I've been very fortunate to host Bandstand as long as I have," he continued. "American Bandstand" has always been like a fourth child to me — a child that has grown and matured."

Interview requests were declined. "He is trying to make it nice and quiet without hoopla," Clark spokesman Tom Stepanchak said Wednesday.

Hirsch takes over April 8 when the syndicated show moves to USA Network. The Detroit native, who lives in Los Angeles, also will continue to work for Clark's production company as a producer for "USA's CAMP MIDNITE," a late-night talk show on USA Network.

"I was completely flattered and honored to be asked to audition. I was extremely nervous," Hirsch said in quotes provided by Stepanchak. "When they told me I was the new host, I was speechless. It was a total shock."

Hirsch, who was unavailable for interviews Wednesday because of an unspecified family emergency, is a graduate of Michigan State University. He has worked with improvisational comedy groups, worked as a disc jockey in college and played drums in several bands to help pay his way through school.

Clark won't be retiring to his Malibu beach house to watch gulls and migrating whales. "American Bandstand" is only a small part of his production empire.

He continues as TV host of the "$25,000 Pyramid" and "$100,000 Pyramid" game shows, numerous television movies and network specials. He is the producer of the annual American Music Awards, the Academy of Country Music Awards, the "New Year's Rockin' Eve" TV show and "TV's Bloopers and Practical Jokes."

"Bandstand," as it was first titled, debuted in September 1952 on WFIL-TV in Philadelphia with Bob Horn and Lee Stewart as hosts. Clark took over in 1956. He became the show's symbol as it won five Emmy awards and made him a multimillionaire.

On Aug. 5, 1957, "American Bandstand" moved to the ABC network, quickly becoming a national success. The first record spun on that show was "Whole Lotta Shakin' Goin' On" by Jerry Lee Lewis.

"The first record of the day was always a fast one. It got the kids moving," said Clark.

On his Thanksgiving show on Nov. 22, 1957, Clark introduced the singing duo Tom & Jerry, who sang "Hey Schoolgirl." The duet later recorded under their real names, Simon & Garfunkel.

Over the years, more than 65,000 records were played on "American Bandstand." The show has logged more than 10,000 musical guest appearances and more than 600,000 teen-agers have danced before television cameras.

Generations of teens saw the clean-cut, carefully suited and coiffed Clark preside over a studio full of equally clean-cut teens, dancing and posing for the cameras.

Clark, who never danced on the show, became the butt of jokes for maintaining his boyish looks, and once compared the burden to that of female sex symbols.

"They're constantly told how wonderful they look, but it gets to be a drag after a while, because someday the looks have gotta go," he said. "It would be nice to be allowed to age gracefully."

Off-screen, Clark has acknowledged he has a temper and is intolerant of mistakes by subordinates. But in his "Bandstand" persona, teens saw him as a friendly, hip father figure.

The show was a must for many performers. It provided the first national exposure for Madonna, the Beach Boys, Linda Ronstadt, James Brown, Neil Diamond, Bobby Darin, Tina Turner, Buddy Holly and The Doors.

Booster Seat May Not Protect Toddler From Crash

By Katherine Reinhard
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

ALLEN TOWN, Pa. — The second baby has arrived, so it's time to play musical car seats. If you were thinking of putting junior in a booster seat so the baby can have his car safety seat, you may want to think twice about it.

Safety specialists are divided over the issue of how safe booster seats, small car seats without backs or sides, really are.

Some say the right booster seat used under the right conditions is perfectly safe. Others believe they do not provide as much protection as a simple lap belt, especially when used on children who are too small for them.

"We feel anyone putting a child who is under 40 pounds in a booster is really looking for a lot of trouble," says Lorrie Walker, a safety trainer with the American Academy of Pediatrics.

As children reach the toddler stage, many parents make the switch from a car seat to a booster seat, thinking it is just as safe.

Under federal law, booster seats must pass the same crash standards as car seats. According to Kent Milton, a spokesman for the National Highway Transportation Safety Administration, all of the booster seats on the market were tested in January and all of them passed the government-set standards.

But the American Academy of Pediatrics says the safety level of booster seats depends on the type of booster seat and the circumstances under which they are used. Often it's a judgment call on the part of the parents on what's best for the child.

"There is no one answer. That's the problem," says the academy's Walker. "A lot of it depends on the booster seat used, the size and the age of the child, the lap and shoulder belt system in the car."

"In some cases your child may be better off with just a lap belt in the back seat," says Walker. "At least the child isn't going to be ejected."

Kathleen Weber, senior research associate at the University of Michigan School of Medicine, has conducted more than 100 tests on booster seats. Weber says there has never been a case in the United States where a child was ejected from a properly used booster seat during an accident.

But she agrees that a child may be better off in a simple lap belt if the alternative is a low-shield booster seat that is kept in place with a lap belt.

The problem with boosters that require only a lap belt is that there is nothing to prevent the child from moving forward on impact. A booster with a shoulder-lap belt will prevent the child from being ejected or hitting the shield.

"There have been injuries of children, abdominal injuries because their torso hasn't been restrained," Walker says.

The best type of booster seat to use is one with a large frontal shield that is kept in place with a shoulder-lap belt.

Although manufacturers generally say booster seats can be used for children 20 to 70 pounds, Walker says that simply isn't the case.

Any child who can see out of the car window is too big for a booster and would be better off in the back seat with a shoulder-lap belt.

Children under 40 pounds should never be put in a booster seat, according to the American Academy of Pediatrics. Walker says children under 40 pounds are too small and can slide around too much during a collision. In the long run, Walker says a child under 40 pounds who sits still would be better off in a lap belt than in a booster seat if the child can properly wear a lap belt.

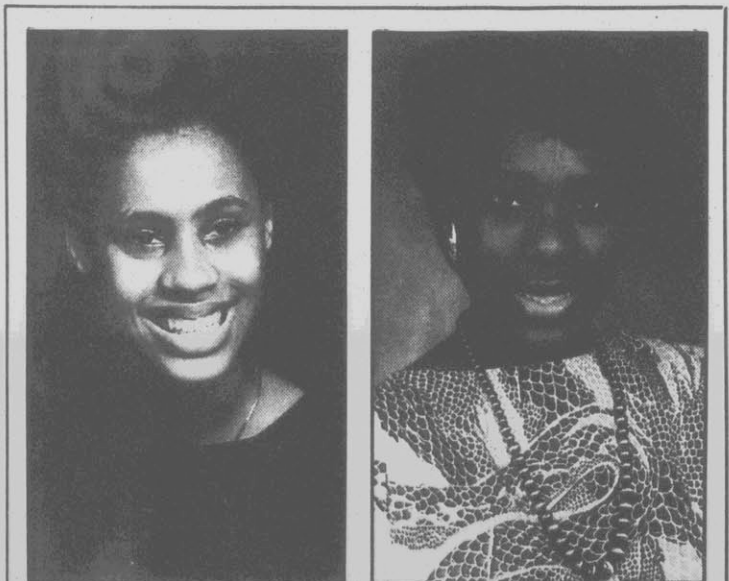

Anyone with questions about car seat safety can call 1-800-CAR-BELT, the American Academy of Pediatrics' toll-free number.

Monique Arlene Hill, left, and Chiquita M. Pitt are participating in separate pageants this month. Miss Hill, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie Hill of Greenville, was a state finalist Saturday in the Miss North Carolina U.S. Teen Pageant in Greensboro. Miss Pitt, whose parents are Randy and JoAnn Pitt of Greenville, is a contestant in the 18th annual Miss North Carolina National Teen-Ager Pageant in Raleigh this weekend.

Migraine Headaches Are Linked To Slight Peripheral Vision Loss

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DAVIS, Calif. — More than a third of migraine sufferers lose some of their peripheral vision, a new study suggests.

Other studies have found permanent vision loss in a small number of migraine patients, but not the loss of peripheral vision, said Dr. Richard A. Lewis, an ophthalmologist at the University of California, Davis.

Lewis studied the eyes of 60 people diagnosed as migraine sufferers based on a complete neurologic examination, and found that 35 percent had some loss of peripheral vision, especially among the older people and among those who had suffered migraines the longest. Each patient had 20-30 vision or better, so most weren't aware they sustained slight vision loss.

"The study shows there is more going on during a migraine than just the headache, and that migraine has a greater effect on the visual system than previously recognized, particularly in elderly and long-term migraine patients," he said.

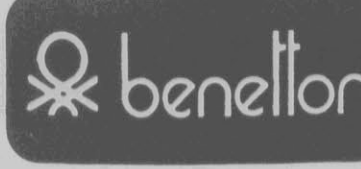

"One speculation is that damage is caused to either the optic nerve or to certain brain nerves that affect sight by the reduced blood flow that occurs during migraine attacks."

About 10 million to 12 million Americans suffer migraine headaches, which often run in families and afflict women three times more often than men. They are caused by dilation, or expansion, of blood vessel walls in the head. The ultimate cause remains uncertain, although theories include the ingestion of caffeine, certain foods and estrogen in birth control pills.

Foundation Offers Help To The Victims Of OCD

Dear Abby: You were right to tell Count Dracula that compulsive counting is fairly common. Some people are always counting something — the number of stairs they go up or down, the number of posts in a fence, cars on the highway, light bulbs in a sign, etc. It can be harmless, or carried to the point where a person thinks he's going insane. Doctors call it "Obsessive Compulsive Behavior Disorder" or "OCD."

An estimated one in every 40 men, women and children has some form of OCD. I know, because I am an OCD sufferer. For years I thought I was the only person in the world who couldn't stop counting everything.

The good news is that doctors' now

Dear Abby

realize that OCD is a physical illness — and there is medication that can bring it under control.

Three years ago, many of us who were being treated in the Yale Clinic OCD program in New Haven, Conn., formed an organization to educate and offer support to the estimated 5 million OCD sufferers throughout the country. Today, this national non-profit OCD Foundation offers advice, information, newsletters, referrals to treatment centers and "phone pals" to OCD sufferers and their families in all 50 states.

It's not just a compulsion to count; it includes saving things until there is no more space to accommodate the collection, and the uncontrollable habit of pulling one's own hair or eyelashes out. The list goes on and on.

Thank you, Abby, for giving this hidden disorder national exposure so those who have it will not feel so alone and can seek the help they need to control this disorder. — Fran Sydney, New Haven

Dear Fran: Thank you for providing me with this information so I could publicize it. Those who are interested may write to The OCD Foundation, P.O. Box 9573, New Haven, Conn. 06535. This is a non-profit group, so please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (25 cents) envelope.

Dear Abby: You missed the boat on the letter from the "Savannah Cop" who appealed to you to help bring back the saying, "The policeman is your friend." Whether or not his police department has a public relations division to give talks in schools is not the issue. First, if the officer is a uniformed patrolman, he probably has no say in department policy or programs. Second, it's not the schools or the department he is appealing to, it's the parents. If parents have already instilled fear of policemen in their children, then giving talks to schools isn't going to help change that.

Many departments do work with schools in this area, but it's not enough. Abby, you should help educate the parents. They cannot use the image of the "cop" to threaten their children, and then turn around and expect the children to be respectful of the uniform and turn to the police when they are lost or need help.

Being a police officer is one of the most frustrating jobs in the world. Half the time we are the good guys; half the time we are the bad guys. And all the time we are in danger of being shot or attacked in some way — if not by the criminal element, then by the courts, the press or public opinion. It's ironic that most people become police officers to help others, yet seldom get the help or support they need from others to do their jobs well.

Abby, please remind parents that what they teach their children about law enforcement stays with them forever. — Another Cop In New York

Dear Cop: Thank you. A rap on the knuckles with a billy club for Abby.

Dear Readers: Have a heart. A living creature is not a toy, so this Easter, do not give a furred or feathered pet to a child who is too young to care for it properly.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

What Is The Logic Behind Hot-Line Votes?

I have never understood the logic behind calling a hot line phone number and paying 50 cents to cast a vote for or against some controversial issue. What does that prove? That people are willing to put an insulting bit of change where their mouth is? Or that there are a lot of kids living at home who don't pay the phone bill?

Whatever, hot lines are big business. I read recently that 28,154 people called in at 50 cents a pop to vote on the infamous memo attack on Willard Scott by Bryant Gumbel. The hot line recorded 27,300 calls reassuring Willard that they still loved him. For $13,650 they could have sent him a nice plant for his desk.

Call me cheap — or call me real

At Wits End

cheap; the idea of contributing to the phone company's newest boutique leaves me cold. It is bad enough I have to pay extra to keep it from printing my home phone number (which is like tipping a waiter to ignore you) and that it charges me to look up a number. But then it came out with Scoopline numbers that allow you to listen, for a price, to designer weather, more about stock market quotations than you can physically bear, jokes, sports news and children's stories. Your teen-agers can even talk with other teen-agers from all over the country at a cost just under the national debt in Argentina.

What are the chances of these polls reflecting what America is thinking? About the same as Miss Texas losing a beauty pageant! Any poll that lets you, if you have the money, vote more than once has to be suspect.

There is something to be said for the phone company. It knows its audience. We are a nation of phone junkies. No matter where we are, we are only within steps of a phone. If it had a program for logging mouth miles on the phone, my kids would own AT&T. Throughout their lifetime, they have spoken possibly six words a year to me. Ma Bell is the one they really send Mother's Day cards to.

The habit starts with a few free numbers. Want to know the time of day? Call Ma. If you want to know what your horoscope is going to be or get an update on "The Young and the Restless," reach for the phone. You can get ticket and box office information, play the lottery, get racing results or ski conditions -- all on the phone. You could live out your entire life in a phone booth without ever having to leave.

On our phone bill this month was a 50-cent charge to a number we didn't recognize. My son said Upbeat Pete and Big Rudy Toot were vying for Raisin of the Year. He voted for Rudy Toot.

Why didn't that bit of news accelerate my heart rate?

Technique May Reduce C-Sections

BONN, West Germany (AP) — A new technique that bounces laser light off brain cells to monitor the amount of oxygen reaching a fetus could help prevent brain damage and reduce the number of Caesarean sections, a researcher says.

The technique has shown good results in tests on 12 patients at the University of Bonn Gynecological Hospital, said Dr. Stephan Schmidt, who heads the research team. "Its main advantage is that its a gentle monitoring method which can give continuous readings without touching the fetus."

"We still have a long way to go before we make definite conclusions, but the preliminary results are very promising."

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 55.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pounds birds. Too few percent of the loads offered have been confirmed for a preliminary average. The market is steady and the live supply is adequate for a moderate demand. Average weights are mostly desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina 2,043,000, compared to 2,024,000 last Thursday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 1 to 2 cents lower, at mostly $2.84-$2.99 in the East; mostly $3.07-$3.09 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 8 cents higher at mostly $7.82-$7.97 in the East; mostly $7.72-$7.80 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly $3.86-$4.07; new crop corn $2.49-$2.72; new crop soybeans $7.18-$7.34; new crop wheat $3.47-$3.77. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were mostly steady and ranged from 97 to 100 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned upward today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 5.00 to 2,268.21 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by nearly 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 589 up, 299 down and 530 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 22.42 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Boyd

Mr. Jesse Ray Boyd Sr. died Wednesday at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

His funeral will be conducted Saturday at 2 p.m. in Wilkerson Funeral Home by the Rev. Bobby Aycock. Burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery with Masonic honors.

Mr. Boyd was a lifelong resident of Greenville and had operated Boyd's Grocery for the past 50 years. He was a member of the Unity Free Will Baptist Church where he was a member of the board of deacons. A member of the Greenville Masonic Lodge No. 284, he had received a 50-year Masonic membership certificate and was a Shriner.

Surviving are his wife, Elsie Cayton Boyd; a son, David B. Boyd of Greenville; two sisters, Tessie Gurganus of Greenville and Virginia Perkins of Douglasville, Ga.; five grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren.

Ormond

MAURY — A funeral for Mrs. Annie "Anna" Streeter Ormond, 85, will be conducted Saturday at 3 p.m. at Maury's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church by General Bishop J.E. Reddick. Burial will be in the Warren Cemetery, Snow Hill.

Mrs. Ormond was a member of Maury Chapel Church, where she served on the Usher Board. She was a member of the Electa Chapter No. 17, Order of the Eastern Star, in Hookerton, the Maury Burial League and the Maury Community Club.

Surviving are a stepdaughter, Lucille Joyner of Stantonburg, and a sister, Ruth E. Streeter of the home.

The body will be at the church from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Friday. The family will receive friends at the church from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. Friday and at other times will be at the home in Maury, Norcott and Com-

Partin

ENFIELD — Mrs. Mannie Lewis Partin, 85, of 210 Bond St. died Tuesday in the Community Hospital in Rocky Mount.

Her funeral was to be conducted today at 2 p.m. at Branch Memorial Chapel by the Rev. Dallas Prestwood. Burial was to be in Elmwood Cemetery.

A native of Enfield, she was a member of the Enfield Baptist Church.

Surviving are her sister, Helen Partin of Enfield.

Pugh

VANCEBORO — A funeral for Mr. Elijah "Boy" Pugh, 80, of Route 3, Vanceboro, will be conducted Saturday at 4 p.m. at Piney Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Route 1, Grifton, by Elder E.L. Garner. Burial will be in the church cemetery.

Mr. Pugh was born and reared in Grifton and attended the area schools. He was a member of Piney Grove Church and was a retired farmer.

Surviving are his wife, Kathleen Benton Pugh of the home; three sons, Owen Pugh of New Bern, Billy Pugh of Cove City, and Elijah Lee Pugh of Vanceboro; six daughters, Mildred Pugh of the home, Christine P. Dozier of Brooklyn, N.Y., Isolan P. Brown of Cove City, Eva Mae Benton, Doris P. Hammonds and Evangelina P. Micken, all of Goldsboro; a sister, Gladys P. Williams of Epworth; 30 grandchildren, and 16 great-grandchildren.

The body will be at Norcott Memorial Chapel in Ayden from 7 p.m. Friday until carried to the church one hour before the funeral. The family will receive friends Friday from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the funeral home and other times will be at the home.

Party Scheduled

"So far, the idea has been accepted pretty good," said Shawn Artis of Ayden-Grifton.

The students at D.H. Conley also like the idea, Kareem Daniels said. He said he is working with the junior class at Conley so they'll know how to organize the event next year.

Kia Hardy said the students at J.H. Rose were surveyed about the event and also showed a lot of interest.

Students across the county were surveyed for their interest, Allinson said. The majority of them wanted the party at ECU, which had the facilities large enough to accommodate the students, plus "it's a good way to showcase ECU" as a university to be considered for furthering their education, he said.

Pitt County is one of the last counties in the state to offer this alternative on graduation night, Allinson said. The idea for the party originated in Wilmington and New Hanover County about five years ago.

"It's been very successful" across the state, he said.

"It will educate the students and people in the community that you can have fun without drugs and alcohol," Allinson said.

Rain Still Short

Right now is the perfect time for replenishing groundwater.

There is less evaporation in the cool winter and spring months, Stewart said. The 80- and 90-degree days of June, July and August make it difficult for rainfall to have a substantial effect.

Also this time of year, there is less evapotranspiration, which occurs when plants in full foliage absorb much of the moisture in the ground, Stewart said.

On the other hand, the excessive rain is a burden on baseball managers and tobacco farmers.

East Carolina baseball coach Gary Overton has had to postpone more than a half dozen games and schedule a few more double headers to make up for the lost time on the field.

Tobacco beds are already saturated, and the tiny seedlings are in danger of suffocating from a lack of oxygen.

Mitch Smith, director of the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service, said farmers need to maintain good drainage systems and dry the beds by removing the curtain on days when it is not raining.

The constant rain is also making it tough on farmers who use multipurpose chemicals for disease control, Smith said. Farmers must wait three weeks from the time they apply the fumigant until they transplant the seedlings to the field. But, the chemicals cannot be applied until the field is dry, thus they are still waiting to start the process.

Continued rain could push back the transplant date for some farmers, Smith said.

Rozelle Resigns NFL Post

Commissioner Ends 29-Year Tenure With League

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PALM DESERT, Calif. — When Pete Rozelle strode to the podium, all but a half-dozen of the 50 or so people in the meeting room thought he was doing no more than opening a routine business session.

A few seconds later, when the commissioner with the second-longest tenure of any chief executive in sports history announced his resignation, there was stunned silence.

"It was as if they didn't believe it," said Wellington Mara of the New York Giants, the NFL's senior owner and one of the few who knew.

A few hours later, most still didn't, not even Al Davis of the Los Angeles Raiders, Rozelle's longtime adversary who embraced the commissioner as he left the meeting room after his resignation.

"I feel emotionally drained," Davis said.

The tear-laden announcement Wednesday by the 63-year-old Rozelle that he was stepping down three years before his term expires ended a 29-year tenure in which the league expended from 12 teams to 28 and less than $1 million a year in television revenue to a $440 million TV extravaganza about to go international. Only Clarence Campbell, who ran the National Hockey League from 1946-78, was in charge longer.

"We've got the greatest sports league of all time and that makes him the greatest commissioner of all time," said Dan Rooney, president of the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Rozelle said he was in good health "except for the 20 pounds I've added since I've quit smoking a year ago," and said he was quitting primarily for family reasons and will move from the New York suburb of Rye to the San Diego area.

Rozelle said he made the decision last October to make the announcement now. But those close to him said it probably gained impetus by the death of his stepson — the son of wife Carrie — two days before last January's Super Bowl.

"I want to enjoy free time — stress free-time — with Carrie," he said.

Unlike most major developments in the NFL, this one was top secret.

The first to learn were Mara and Leon Hess of the New York Jets, whom he told last week. When he arrived here Sunday, he told four other league fixtures — Rooney, Tex Schramm of the Dallas Cowboys, Art Modell of the Cleveland Browns and Lamar Hunt of the Kansas City Chiefs.

And it wasn't until a few minutes before the announcement that he broke the news to three of his four top aides — communications direc-

No Standouts

For NFL's Job

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PALM DESERT, Calif. — For NFL owners, finding a successor to Pete Rozelle is like a boxing fan trying to determine who will succeed Mike Tyson as heavyweight champion. There just don't seem to be any leading candidates.

"We have to turn over every stone," said Edward DeBartolo Jr., owner of the San Francisco 49ers, after Rozelle's shocking announcement Wednesday that he is retiring three years before his contract expires.

"This guy isn't coming into any day at the beach. This man will be succeeding a legend."

The first and most obvious name that surfaced was Jack Kemp, the former NFL quarterback, congressman and now Secretary of Housing.

But there are others who might fit the description set forth by Tex Schramm, president of the Dallas Cowboys, and seconded by other owners: a man in his 40s or early 50s, knowledgeable about the NFL and communications.

Among them:

— Paul Tagliabue, a former Georgetown basketball player who is now a lawyer with Covington and Burling, the prestigious Washington law firm. Tagliabue has represented the NFL before Congress and has been deeply involved in two major lawsuits — the antitrust suit filed against the league by the USFL and the current antitrust suit filed by the players union at the end of the 1987 strike.

— Neal Pilson, the president of CBS Sports, who has worked closely with the league for a decade. Several owners were impressed with Pilson's testimony during the USFL trial.

— Joe Bailey, Dallas' vice president for administration. Bailey is a former North Carolina quarterback and Cowboys ballboy who is considered to have Schramm's knowledge of football without the abrasiveness that has antagonized some owners toward the Cowboys president.

Other, more speculative candidates, might include former Dallas running back Calvin Hill, a Yale graduate and member of the Baltimore Orioles' board of directors; Bob Wallace, general counsel to the Phoenix Cardinals and a former Yale running back; and Bill Walsh, who stepped down as San Francisco coach after winning his third Super Bowl in January.

Hill and Wallace are black — earlier this week Rozelle strongly urged the owners to hire more minority employees.

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Although staying alive in the NCAA tournament should serve as incentive enough for Virginia and Michigan to play well tonight, each has added reason to win.

It's called revenge.

In each of the past two seasons, Michigan has lost to North Carolina in the tournament. The Wolverines lost 109-97 two years ago, then were beaten 78-69 in the regional semifinals last season.

Virginia, meanwhile, lost 109-61 to Oklahoma in a holiday tournament last season. In that game, the Cavaliers were outscored 27-0 in the opening nine minutes of the second half.

Fifth-ranked North Carolina, 29-7, and 10th-ranked Michigan, 26-7, play in the Southeast Regional semifinals tonight. Oklahoma, 30-5 and ranked fourth, plays Virginia, 21-10, in the other semifinal.

"We can't help but remember we've been beaten by them twice," Michigan's Loy Vaught said. "The revenge factor will hype us up. It will put fire in our eyes."

Said Virginia's Richard Morgan: "The attitude of everybody on this team is we're not going to lose by 48. It's just a whole different situation."

Michigan's interim coach, Steve Fisher, and Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs downplayed the role revenge might play.

"We haven't talked about revenge at all," said Fisher, who assumed the Wolverine coaching duties prior to the NCAA tournament when Bill Frieder took the job at Arizona State. "I don't think that will have a whole lot to do with it."

"There's a lot of characters missing," Tubbs said. "The guys that were there remember that, but it's a new game. I find that what's happened in the last game rarely has a bearing on the next game."

In Vaught, Glen Rice and Terry Mills, Michigan presents one of the strongest, and most efficient, frontcourts in the country. Vaught leads the nation with 68 percent field goal shooting, while Rice is shooting 57 percent and Mills 56 percent.

North Carolina will have forward J.R. Reid back again following his one-game suspension for breaking curfew. He will join Steve Bucknall, Pete Chilcutt and Scott Williams up front.

"They do a real good job of posting up inside, and we try to do a good job of post-up defense," North Carolina coach Dean Smith said. "They have so many ways to go inside, so our job is really going to be tough defensively."

North Carolina is making its ninth straight appearance in the round of 16, and Smith is trying to win his eighth regional title. Only UCLA's John Wooden, with 12, has won more.

"I'm proud to be part of this Michigan program and coaching against a legend," said Fisher, who admitted to asking for and receiving Smith's autograph while coaching in high school.

"When you start to play, you don't feel like you're matching wits with anyone," Fisher said. "I don't mean to imply that we're in awe of them. ... I think we have the type of team and talent to play with anyone."

Virginia has shown that ability, particularly last weekend in victories over Providence and Middle Tennessee. The Cavaliers, who prefer to keep the score in the 70's or 80's, reached 100 points in both games.

Morgan is the tournament's leading scorer with a 33-point average, and point guard John Crotty scored 24 and 25 points while missing only four of 23 shots. Freshman forward Bryant Stith added 19 and 26 points in the two games.

Coach Terry Holland noted that his Cavaliers shot only 46 percent during the season, but won by playing good defense and hitting the offensive boards.

"I kept thinking that someday we were going to start to shoot the ball well, and those were certainly the two best shooting games we've had back to back," he said.

Tyson Hopes Her Dreams

Will Come True Saturday

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

HOLLYWOOD — Lendora Tyson is shouting that dreams come true.

The 5-11 sophomore center for D.H. Conley's girls' basketball team has dreamed all week of the Valkyries having one of their best games of the year Saturday when they face Pisgah for the state 3-A championship.

"I've daydreamed about it all week long," Tyson said. "I've dreamed that there are a lot of people there and that we are playing good and everybody is shouting 'Conley, Conley.'"

The fans may very well be shouting Tyson's name by the end of the evening if she continues to perform for the 23-5 Valkyries as she has done so far in the playoffs.

In the six postseason games Conley has played in, Tyson has averaged 27.5 points, scoring 30 or more points in three games. For the season, Tyson is averaging 22.3 points per game and 16 rebounds.

"I think Lendora is one of those kind of players that plays real well when she's got a big challenge," Conley coach Keith Gould said. "She normally rises to the challenge and accepts the fact that most teams are going to try and pack the defense in around her. But even if she's not getting the ball she works hard to go to the offensive boards and score her points there."

Tyson may be met with her biggest challenge of the year Saturday against Pisgah. The Sugar Bears are led by 6-3 center Vickie Henson, who averages 20 points and 10 rebounds per game. She will be the biggest center Tyson has had to face all season.

"She's (Tyson) bound to be leery," Gould said. "But we've talked about it this week and it's not like she hasn't played against tall people all year. East Wake had a 6-1 girl and Northwest Guilford had one about 6-1½."

"And everyday in practice she goes up against Kim Pakowski (Conley's backup center)," Gould said. "She's 6-1½ and nobody probably has played her as aggressively as Kim does everyday in practice."

Tyson says she is hoping to gain confidence against her taller opponent early on Saturday.

"When I first walk out on the court I'll probably be a little shaky," Tyson said. "But as I get into the flow of the game, everything should come together. If I tap the jump ball then that's confidence right there. If I miss it, I'll just keep going until I get into the flow. If I do well in the first and second quarters then they can say it's all over."

Tyson is hoping that she will get the same sort of feeling about Henson as she has about the other taller opponents she has faced in the playoffs.

"I thought the big girls would be better than me," Tyson said. "But when I realized that I could hang in there and play with them it gave a lot of confidence."

Even though Tyson is the main spark to the Valkyries offense, she says that it's her teammates that deserve a lot of the credit.

"Early on teams are going to have the defense packed in on me," Tyson said. "But if Charlene (Davenport) and Glenda (Hardy) make the early shots then eventually they are going to step out on them and then they can lob the ball in to me. And if I only have one person on me, I'm confident that I can take the ball and score."

Regardless of the outcome Saturday, Gould wants Tyson and all the

To Be Battle Of Centers

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

CHAPEL HILL — It's going to be a battle of the centers Saturday in the girls' state 3-A basketball championship between D.H. Conley and Pisgah.

Conley, 23-5 on the year, is led by 5-11 sophomore center Lendora Tyson, while the Sugar Bears, 27-4, are led by 6-3 senior center Vickie Henson.

Tyson is averaging 22.3 points and 16 rebounds per game while Henson chips in with averages of 20 points and 10 rebounds per contest.

Henson, the Mountain Athletic Conference Player of the Year, will be the biggest center that the Valkyries have had to face all year.

"We've not really faced anybody with that much size all year," Conley coach Keith Gould said. "We've got to do a good job of blocking out. We've got to concentrate and keep her off the boards."

But Gould said he won't change anything the team has done this season just because of Henson.

"I think at this point you don't change anything from what you've done all year long," Gould said. "We'll run the same offense and defense that we've run all year. We'll probably use the 1-3-1 zone and mix in some junk defenses to change it up. It's been good for us so far this year, so if we lose, we're going to do so playing what has been best for us."

While Tyson doesn't have the height Henson does, she is still a major concern for Pisgah coach Tom Nix.

"I don't know much about them (Conley)," Nix said. "But from what I've found out, they have a big scorer inside (Tyson) and that's where they like to take the ball."

Though Nix is wary of Tyson, he feels that he has the personnel to handle her offensive output.

"I hope we can stop her," Nix said. "We've done a good job during the regular season of stopping other big girls. We're strong and big inside. We try and play the type of defense that dictates our offense. We'll play man-to-man some, but we'll also go zone at times."

To go along with Henson, the Sugar Bears have 5-9 senior Tonya Chambers, 5-9 sophomore Amy Wood, 5-8 junior Amy Stiles and 5-7 sophomore Vicki Inman.

Inman, the number-two guard for the Sugar Bears, averages 17.3 points per game and earned all-league honors this season in the Mountain Athletic Conference.

The Valkyries also have weapons to use offensively other than Tyson. Junior forward Glenda Hardy adds 15.1 points per game to the Valkyries' offense and senior Charlene Davenport earns the title of playmaker on the offense with 4.8 assists per game.

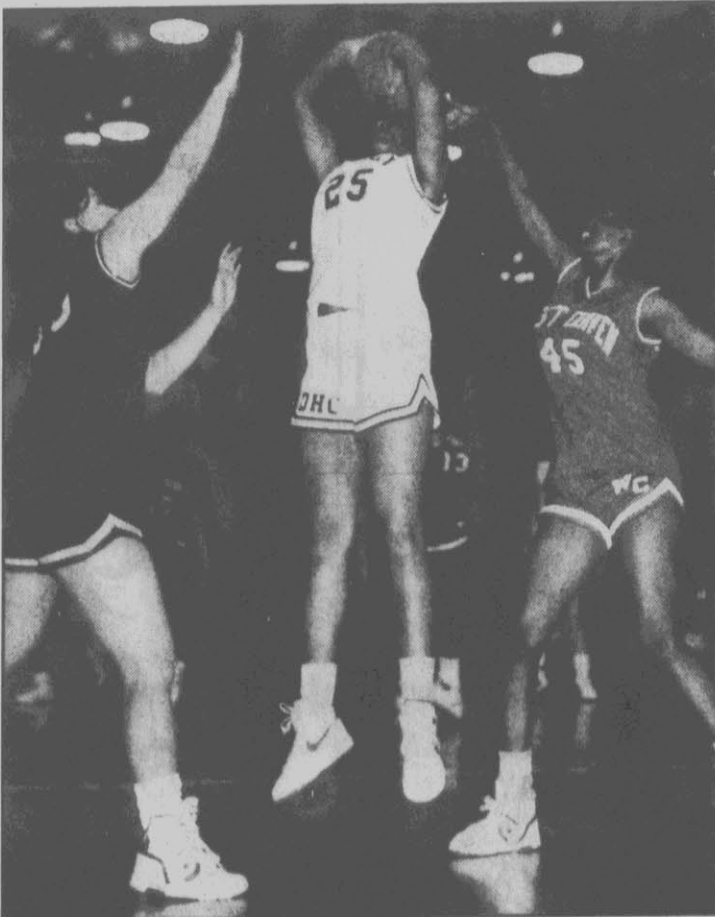

"I think we've pretty much proven that we are more than just Lendora on offense," Gould said. "We've got some other players that can step in and score for us too. They've done a better job of that later in the year. In our last two games, we've probably played our best team offense of the year."

"I feel like if we play to our potential on offense, we've got a good chance to win," Gould said. "Of course it wouldn't hurt to shoot 70 percent again (the Valkyries percentage in their 83-48 win over High Point Central in the Eastern Regional finals)."

Nix also feels that Pisgah is playing its best ball of the season now.

"We haven't lost since mid-January," Nix said. "We lost three

UAB Tops Huskies; Spartans Nip Wildcats

VILLANOVA, Pa. — Villanova's physical game took its toll — on the home team — and put Steve Smith in a place he just couldn't miss: the free-throw line.

Now Michigan State is headed for the National Invitation Tournament semifinals after a 70-63 victory over the Wildcats Wednesday night.

"We concentrated tonight," said Smith, a 6-foot-6 sophomore who carried the Spartans down the stretch with 22 of his career-high 34 points coming in the second half. "Having fun, shooting free throws and playing defense, it really came together."

Smith nearly doubled his 17.6 average for the season, and has now scored at a 26-point clip in three NIT games.

The win was the fourth in a row and sixth in the last eight games for Michigan State, 18-13, which next plays Monday at New York's Madison Square Garden.

Villanova ends its season at 18-16. "The Big Ten season really prepared us for this game," Smith said. "They tried to overpower us physically. But we didn't let it happen."

Instead, the Wildcats had Michigan State in the one-and-one for more than eight minutes of the second half, and the Spartans responded by going 18-for-18 at the line, 10 of those points coming from Smith.

"He made every foul shot — every shot — and we couldn't make the big shot at the end when we needed it," said Villanova coach Rollie Massimino, who watched his Wildcats shoot 43 percent from the field and make only 10 of 18 free throws.

"It's a shame it has to end this way," Massimino said.

Smith rescued the Spartans from a cold second-half start that included five- and four-minute scoring droughts. He went 11-for-15 from the field for the game, with two 3-pointers.

"There were periods we were in a funk, but Steve pulled us up out of that," Spartans coach Jud Heathcote said. Neither team shot well from the field in the second half, the Spartans shooting 37 percent and Villanova 34 percent.

Gary Massey, who scored 12 points in his final game for Villanova, said the Wildcats "got a little tentative."

They didn't start the second half that way. Trailing 37-30, Villanova scored the first nine points, taking a 39-37 lead on a tip-in by Massey.

Michigan State went 5:04 without a point, but Smith brought the Spartans back with three field goals for a 43-39 lead.

But after taking a 46-41 lead, Michigan State went scoreless for 4:07 while Massey and fellow senior Doug West scored four straight baskets to put Villanova ahead, 49-46.

Mark Montgomery broke the string with a pair of free throws.

Smith then personally outscored the Wildcats down the stretch, scoring 16 of his team's final 22 points while the Wildcats managed only 14 the rest of the way.

Ken Redfield and Todd Wolfe added 10 each for Michigan State. Redfield also had 12 rebounds for the third time this season.

West led Villanova with 17 points, followed by Massey with 12 and Rodney Taylor with 11.

UAB 85, Connecticut 79

STORRS, Conn. — Basketball crowds mean different things to different people.

Connecticut has used its home field house crowd to advantage, winning 26 straight games there.

Wednesday night, Alabama-Birmingham made the hostile UConn crowd work for it in an 85-79 NIT quarterfinal victory over the defending champion Huskies.

"It was a great crowd. What a phenomenal atmosphere," said UAB coach Gene Bartow.

Sophomore swingman Andy Kennedy, who led the Blazers with 22 points, including a half-dozen 3-pointers, agreed.

"We came in looking at the opportunity," he said. "The crowd worked, to our advantage. They were making more noise than we'd heard all year, but you couldn't tell what they were saying."

"I never felt all year like I felt tonight because of who we played, the crowd and what we were playing for. We still have a chance to salvage our season," he added.

"They played the way you need to play to win on the road," said UConn coach Jim Calhoun. "The crowd didn't deter them a bit."

The Huskies took an early lead, but six straight points by Reginald Turner and a three-pointer by Kennedy gave the Blazers a 29-25 edge with 9:45 to go in the first half. UConn led only twice after that, 33-31 and 38-37. By halftime, UAB was in front, 45-41.

The Blazers gradually increased the margin to 66-55 with 9:28 left on another Kennedy three-pointer.

UConn, 18-13, tried to come back, but every time they did, the Blazers responded.

"Every time they made a big run at us, we got a big basket. If they got a steal, we got a steal right back," said Kennedy.

"This is probably the best we've played in many ways," said Bartow.

UConn got within 79-76 with 57 seconds left on a three-pointer by John Gwynn, but Kennedy hit two free throws and Dylan Howard and Alan Ogg followed with two more foul shots each to seal the win.

Turner finished with 18 points while Ogg and Howard had 11 each for the Blazers, 21-11. Ogg blocked seven shots while Barry Bearden led the Blazers in rebounding with eight and assists with nine.

Cliff Robinson had 23 points and eight rebounds for the Huskies while Phil Gamble hit six-of-seven three-pointers and finished with 20.

Rose Isn't Really Showing Effects Of His Situation

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PLANT CITY, Fla. — If Cincinnati Reds manager Pete Rose is worried about his future in baseball, he's not showing it.

Rose cracked jokes, talked baseball and sidestepped questions about gambling allegations during a 45-minute session with reporters Wednesday before an exhibition game.

"All I worry about is my team," Rose said. "All I worry about is the Cincinnati Reds. You find that hard to believe?"

Rose still refuses to discuss allegations that have linked him with gambling and could jeopardize his future in baseball.

One of the allegations under investigation is that Rose may have bet on baseball, possibly his own team, a baseball source told The Associated Press.

"That's what they're looking into. Nothing has been proven yet," said the source, who asked not to be identified.

If proven true, Rose would be suspended or even banned for life.

Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth and Commissioner-elect A. Bartlett Giamatti announced in a statement Monday that Major League Baseball was looking into "serious allegations" about Rose. The statement didn't mention the nature of the allegations, and gave no indication when the commissioner might act.

In a copyright story today, the Dayton Daily News reported that Ueberroth probably would announce his decision today. The newspaper quoted an unnamed source as saying, "Pete will get a minimum suspension of a year, if he's lucky."

However, a source with major league baseball told the AP it was "unlikely" any action would be taken today.

Rose has been left to issue "no comment" when asked about the allegations, and to wait for a ruling by the commissioner. Rose said Wednesday he had no information about when it might come.

"No idea. No more idea than you do," Rose said.

His dugout meeting with about 75 reporters before an exhibition game against St. Louis was the first time he'd made any comment about his situation.

To hear Rose, the storm of allegations hasn't affected him much.

"I don't have any problems sleeping," he said. "Not the way my team played yesterday (in beating St. Louis). The only thing that creates problems for me sleeping is the way my team plays."

Rose even had a hand in a little skit by his players making light of the media mob. Pitcher Danny Jackson put on a Rose jersey and strutted around the field during batting practice while about a dozen players with "PRESS" taped on their caps followed him around.

"He (Jackson) asked for permission (to wear the jersey)," Rose said. "Did it fit him? I wish I looked like him."

Rose also said he's getting support from his players — even those he cut from the squad Wednesday.

"My players pat me on the back," he said. "I had three pat me on the back today — they got optioned out (to the minors). That's not funny, being optioned back to the minor leagues. I said, 'I wish you luck.' They said, 'Hey, I wish you luck.'"

Federal officials as well as baseball authorities are investigating allegations about Rose's gambling, according to published reports.

The Dayton newspaper said federal investigators in Cincinnati were scheduled to meet today with investigators from the commissioner's office about the widening probe into Rose's alleged gambling activities.

John M. Dowd, the special counsel hired by Ueberroth, and Kevin Hallinan, baseball's security chief, also are scheduled to meet with the attorney for Ronald Peters, a Franklin, Ohio, bar owner who has emerged as a central figure in the investigation into Rose's alleged betting activities, the newspaper said.

The Dayton Daily News said the investigation had nothing to do with gambling initially, but grew out of drug probe that focused on Peters and a major cocaine dealer in Cincinnati. Rose wasn't a target in the drug investigation, but authorities found betting slips in Peters' bar that led them to Rose, the newspaper said.

The federal investigation of Rose involves tax and gambling issues, including income Rose may have derived from the sale of personal memorabilia, the newspaper said.

D. Michael Crites, U.S. attorney for the southern district of Ohio, declined comment.

The New York Post also said in Wednesday's editions that Rose's activities have the attention of Crites' office and the Internal Revenue Service, plus the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Cincinnati police.

The New York newspaper quoted an unnamed source as saying Cincinnati police estimate the Reds manager owes bookmakers between $500,000 and $750,000. Police officials were not commenting on that report.

WLWT-TV in Cincinnati said it spoke with Michael Fry, who was tied to Rose's gambling in a Sports Illustrated story this week. The station said that Fry, who is serving a prison term for cocaine trafficking and income-tax evasion, told it that Rose bet up to $40,000 on football weekends.

The Plain Dealer of Cleveland reported today that Fry flunked an FBI lie-detector test last year while working as a government informant, and federal prosecutors said that "severely limited the value" of his use as a witness.

It isn't known what the lie-detector examination concerned, the newspaper said, although Fry made a deal on Oct. 13, 1987, to furnish a federal grand jury in Cincinnati with information about drugs, tax and gambling offenses in southern Ohio, according to court records.

In a court filing last September, assistant U.S. Attorney William E. Hunt disclosed Fry had failed a lie-detector test.

"First of all, whether or not (Fry's) cooperation was of any value to the government is open to question," Hunt wrote. "Among the problems that (Fry) has in emphasizing the value of his cooperation is the fact that he failed a polygraph examination administered by the FBI."

"This severely limited the value of information he had given to authorities."

Candidates...

Schramm, whose role with the Cowboys is likely to be diminished with the sale of the team to Arkansas oil man Jimmy Jones, said he wasn't interested. But Schramm hedged when asked if he might be interested in taking the job on an interim basis.

"I'm older than Pete," the 68-year-old Schramm said of the 63-year-old Rozelle. "But the league is No. 1 with me. If there is anything I could do to help, I would."

Less likely are two who were hot candidates half-a-dozen years ago but whose luster has dimmed because of their involvement in the NFL's recent legal and labor troubles: Michael McCaskey, president of the Chicago Bears and nephew of George Halas, one of the league's founders, and Jack Donlan, executive director of the NFL Management Council.

The new commissioner will be picked by a committee headed by Wellington Mara of the New York Giants and Lamar Hunt of the Kansas City Chiefs, president of the NFC and AFC, respectively. Three more members will be named today.

Several owners, led by Art Modell of the Cleveland Browns, suggested a two-headed job — a commissioner to handle marketing, television and other public aspects, and a president to handle the football operations and perhaps legal matters.

In any case, it will take 19 of the 28 owners to elect the new commissioner — two-thirds of the teams. That's not always easy. Most other policy matters need three-quarters, or 21.

In 1960, when Rozelle was elected, it took 11 days and 23 ballots to decide on the then little-known general manager of the Los Angeles Rams.

It was the two thirds requirement that got Rozelle his job in 1960, when the owners were choosing a successor to the late Bert Bell in Miami Beach.

As Mara recalled, Marshall Leahy, the league counsel, had seven votes early but couldn't get the eighth as the days and ballots rolled on. Finally, he said, the late Art Rooney Sr., Dan's father, said "we've got to settle it."

So Mara, Dan Reeves of the Los Angeles Rams and Paul Brown, then the owner of the Cleveland Browns and now the president of the Cincinnati Bengals, came up with two names — Brown himself and Vince Lombardi, then coach of the Green Bay Packers.

Brown turned it down "and Dan said 'it's got to be Pete,' Mara recalled.

He and Reeves told Rozelle, then 33, and advised him to stay in his hotel room. Then they went back and told the other owners "it's Rozelle." All seemed to accept it, although Frank McNamee, the owner of the Philadelphia Eagles, wanted to know:

"Who's Rozelle?"

Rain Again Halts Spring Games

Rains in the area once again washed out spring sports scheduled for play on Wednesday.

East Carolina's baseball game with Hartford was canceled and will not be rescheduled. The Pirates return to action on Saturday at Williamsburg, Va., in a Colonial Athletic Association game with William & Mary. The Pirates and Indians meet in a doubleheader on Sunday.

Other games washed out include: Eastern Plains Conference girls track teams at Farmville Central; Roanoke at North Pitt softball; Southern Nash at Farmville Central tennis (April 5); Ayden-Grifton at Kinston baseball. Ayden-Grifton has also postponed its game with Havelock in baseball today.

Washington Skipper Leads Series

Mike Horner of Washington, N.C., skipping the "Bodacious" captured the first and second spinnaker class races of the Pamlico Sailing Club, held recently.

Ferrell Blount of Washington took second place in the second race on "X-5".

Blanchard Sets Record In 200 Breaststroke

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Mary Ellen Blanchard set an American record in the 200-yard breaststroke with a time of 2 minutes, 9.06 seconds at the U.S. Swimming Short Course Nationals.

Blanchard, swimming for the Dynamo Swim Club in suburban Atlanta, recorded her record-setting effort in the morning qualifying heats. She won the final in 2:09.54.

Whitney Hedgepeth, who was eighth in the 200-meter individual medley in Seoul, won the 200-yard freestyle in 1:46.89, while Hungarian Olympic silver medalist Karoly Guttler won the 100-yard breaststroke in 54.94.

John Keppler took the men's 200-yard freestyle in 1:36.30, with John Kennedy runner-up in 1:37.27.

Russo Resigns Top Job At Washington

SEATTLE (AP) — Andy Russo, the University of Washington's basketball coach, resigned after two straight losing seasons, the school announced Wednesday.

Russo, 40, who came to the Huskies after guiding Louisiana Tech to a 29-3 record in 1984-85, had a 61-62 record in four seasons at Washington. The Huskies were 12-16 this season after going 10-19 in 1987-88.

Russo, who has not returned telephone calls during the week, was not at a news conference called by athletic director Mike Lude to announce Russo's resignation. Don Meucci, an assistant sports information director, said Russo was out of town Wednesday.

Russo replaced retired Coach Marv Harshman after coaching Louisiana Tech to a 122-55 record in six seasons, including 26-7 and 29-3 marks in his last two seasons with teams led by current NBA star Karl Malone.

Russo's first team at Washington went 19-12 and made the NCAA tournament and his 1986-87 team went 20-15 and made the NIT.

The Huskies were expected to rebound from their 10-19 record this season, but they stumbled badly and didn't play up to expectations.

Lynn Nance, 42, coach at St. Mary's, Calif., was reportedly one of the top candidates to replace Russo.

Nance, who played for Washington in the 1960s, coached St. Mary's to the West Coast Athletic Conference regular-season championship and into the NCAA tournament this season.

In addition to Nance, top names mentioned as possible candidates to succeed Russo included Paul Westhead of Loyola-Marymount, Jerry Pimm of California-Santa Barbara, Duke assistant Bob Bender and Jim Crews of Evansville.

Kite Not Ready To Give Up On Streak

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Chances are this is the week Tom Kite's streak comes to an end, but he isn't conceding a thing.

Kite, the hottest golfer on the professional tour with consecutive victories at the Nestles Invitational and the Players Championship, began his quest today in the USF&G Classic for a third straight tournament victory.

No golfer has done that since Gary Player won three in a row in 1978. Player's attempt at a fourth straight failed at New Orleans when he finished fifth.

"All the odds say it will probably end this week, but that's not saying I can't win," Kite said. "My game is good. I like the course — what I've been able to do so far."

"As far as my frame of mind, it's good enough to win. But there have been a lot of cases when the mind was right, and I couldn't put up a 'W'. I went 20 months that way."

Kite was winless last year, breaking a string of seven straight years with at least one tournament victory. He still had 10 finishes in the top 10, was in the money in 22 of 25 starts, finished fifth in earnings with $760,000 and had a stroke average of 69.53.

He currently is averaging 69.04, best on the tour, and leads in earnings with $561,723. He has been in the money in 16 straight starts, including starts in six of the nine tournaments this year.

Kite and the rest of the field approached today's start of the $750,000 USF&G Classic cold, both literally and figuratively.

ND's Brooks Withdraws From School

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Notre Dame tailback Tony Brooks, who faces two misdemeanor charges in a hit-and-run accident last month and was suspended from spring practice, has withdrawn from the university, the school said.

Brooks, 19, left voluntarily for personal reasons and returned to his Tulsa, Okla., home, said athletic department spokesman John Heisler.

Coach Lou Holtz said Brooks' future at Notre Dame is uncertain. Whether he returns for the fall semester and the 1989 season will be determined by Brooks and the university administration, he said.

Knight Ready For Seton Hall

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER — Bobby Knight as a jolly old elf?

"You remember when you were a kid growing up and you believed in Santa Claus?" Knight responded when asked if he had mellowed. "There's not much difference between Claus and me today, you know. We're two overweight, lovable guys that kids really enjoy."

Knight was in top form Wednesday as he talked to the press gathered for tonight's NCAA West regional semifinal matchup between his eighth-ranked Hoosiers, 27-7, and No. 11 Seton Hall, 28-6.

No. 1-ranked Arizona, 29-3, plays No. 15 Nevada-Las Vegas, 28-7, in tonight's second semifinal.

The winners meet Saturday with a berth in the Final Four at stake.

Knight spoke out on subjects including his own future, the recent rash of coach resignations and firings and the fact his Wednesday practice, under NCAA rules, had to be open to the public.

Knight flirted with moving to the head coaching job at New Mexico last season, but he said he figures he's at Indiana for good now. Asked if he'd be interested in any of the jobs opening up now, he said, "No, I'm done. Take a look at me. I just barely get by here, I finally decided."

As for all the coaches who have lost their jobs in recent weeks, Knight said, "I think it's a sick thing."

He said coaches should refuse to take the vacated jobs.

"Let the athletic director or the chancellor coach," he said.

"Catholicism has been on the decline around the world. Maybe they should fire the Pope. It makes about as much sense," he said.

"There are coaches who have been fired this year who are among the best coaches in the country."

The other three head coaches in Denver were equally, if not as eloquently, distressed.

"I can't believe what's going on," UNLV's Jerry Tarkanian said.

His former assistant, Lynn Archibald, was fired at Utah.

"He was perfect for Utah," Tarkanian said. "I think somebody ought to fire that athletic director."

The NCAA tournament is to blame, he said, for giving teams too much money. He said all major colleges should share in the tournament revenue.

Seton Hall coach P.J. Carlesimo seemed about to lose his job two years ago. Now he's a two-time Big East coach of the year with his school in the "Sweet 16" for the first time.

"It's a disgrace the caliber of coach who's been fired or forced to resign," he said.

"There were a lot of people at Seton Hall who wanted to get rid of me. Our athletic director and our chancellor didn't knuckle under and that's the only reason I'm here."

Arizona coach Lute Olson said he expects serious discussion about forming a coach's union when the National Association of Basketball Coaches meets next week in Seattle.

Tonight, Knight tries to keep his hopes for a fourth NCAA title alive against Seton Hall.

The coach said the Hoosiers, the Big Ten conference champions, aren't good enough to win without playing at the top of the game.

"We're not going to overpower anybody," he said.

Against Seton Hall, the Hoosiers will be playing a team that was picked for seventh in the Big East. Instead, they wound up tied for second.

"This team has exceeded a lot of people's expectations," Carlesimo said, "because their chemistry's been good and they are basketball players who are a lot better than some people thought they were."

Arizona, which coasted to first- and second-round victories last week in Boise, is calm and confident heading into the Nevada-Las Vegas game. The Wildcats beat UNLV 86-75 Dec. 10 in Tucson.

Both teams are much better than they were then, their coaches said.

"We're at the top of our game right now," Olson said.

All-America Sean Elliott scored 32 points in a head-to-head matchup with Stacey Augmon in the earlier Arizona victory, but Tarkanian said nothing special is planned to try to stop the Wildcats' star.

"We're not a gimmick team," he said.

The Runnin' Rebels have shot poorly most of this season, including 42 percent or less the last three games, but that has to change, Tarkanian said.

"We have to shoot extremely well to be in the game," Tarkanian said. "We're playing a team with no weaknesses."

UNLV guard Greg Anthony had a realistic assessment of his team's chances of stopping Arizona from a second straight trip to the Final Four.

"We're just going to go out and play the best we can," he said, "and hope they have an off night."

WINSTON-SALEM — Wake Forest began an internal investigation of its men's basketball program more than six weeks ago amid allegations that the university violated NCAA recruiting policy.

Sources told the Winston-Salem Journal that the alleged violations involved Anthony Tucker, a 6-foot-8 sophomore who sat out this season after transferring to Wake Forest from Georgetown.

Tucker said he had been told not to talk to the media.

Wake Forest Athletic Director Gene Hooks said Wednesday that the university's Office of Legal Affairs is conducting the in-house probe and will report its findings to the NCAA.

The NCAA, in a letter dated Jan. 25, 1989, and signed by R. Daniel Beebe, its director of enforcement, said that it had received reports from outside the university alleging recruiting violations.

"In the letter, the NCAA asked for information to be provided by the university in response to questions about the recruitment of a prospect in the men's basketball program...." Hooks said in a prepared statement.

"Because of the university's longstanding commitment to integrity in the conduct of its athletic programs and because of its responsibilities as a member of the NCAA, Wake Forest is conducting a full, thorough study of the matter. The university will assess its findings at the conclusion of the study and will deliver a confidential report to the NCAA."

Rozelle Quits NFL...

tor Joe Browne, executive director Don Weiss and director of broadcasting Val Pinchbeck. A fourth, counsel Jay Moyer, was away with his ailing wife.

"We talked about the agenda," Browne said. "And he kept saying 'what's first?' I told him the management council was making a presentation and he said 'No, I've got something to say.' That's when he told us."

"It was like it was in the room. We were stunned for a second, then he broke into tears."

He broke into tears again half an hour later, after he was applauded by reporters at a hastily called news conference — more than one media member showed up in bathing attire after having been plucked from the pool by members of the public relations staff.

Then the tributes started pouring in for the man who forged a consensus that made the NFL one of the nation's preeminent sports organizations despite the tendency of 28 owners to pull it in different directions.

Elected in 1960 as a compromise candidate at age 33, Rozelle emerged from a background in public relations and as general manager of the Los Angeles Rams to build the first league that shared revenue as a matter of course.

"He was able to get people in New York, Los Angeles and Chicago to share television revenue equally with people in Green Bay and Buffalo," said Art Modell, owner of the Cleveland Browns. "That was his genius and that made us what we are today."

"Pete Rozelle dominated his profession," said Davis, to whom Rozelle barely spoke during the 10-year period that began in 1978, when Davis first proposed moving the Raiders from Oakland to Los Angeles, and ended two weeks ago, when the lawsuit against the league that was won by the Raiders was settled for $18 million.

"He had a commitment to his profession and the NFL that I greatly admire and a commitment to build a better league," said Davis, who was commissioner of the old AFL when the leagues merged in 1966.

"He had the unique ability to get people all on the same page in a business where you could depend on 28 different people all going in different directions," said Hunt, another AFL owner.

"If you needed a consensus, you went to Pete," said Hugh Culverhouse of Tampa Bay.

Hunt and Mara, presidents of the AFC and NFC respectively, will head a five-man search team that will seek a successor. The other members are expected to be named today.

The search could be difficult. In fact, Modell, Schramm and other owners suggested that the league might need both a commissioner and president to run the myriad of tasks undertaken by Rozelle.

The general description was of a person in his 40s or early 50s who could run the league for more than a decade, and one conversant with football, communications and the law. Among the early favorites: Paul Tagliabue, the league's Washington lawyer, and Neal Pilson, president of CBS Sports.

"We have to turn over every stone," said Edward DeBartolo Jr. of San Francisco. "This guy isn't coming into a day at the beach. The situation isn't easy because this man is a legend. He stabilized the league."

That echoed almost every owner's sentiment.

More Fire Safety Wanted By NASCAR

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — A pit road fire at Atlanta International Raceway that severely burned a member of Richard Petty's crew has forced every team to reevaluate fire safety, the crew chief for another driver said.

"I think NASCAR has made a lot of effort to get the guys in the proper clothing, with the fire suits, but we're going to take it one step further," said Jeff Hammond, the crew chief for Atlanta winner Darrell Waltrip. "We're going to have our guys in special fire-type helmets, the balaclavas, to keep their heads from getting on fire and to allow them to keep breathing."

Sunday's pit road fire — the third in the past six months at a NASCAR race — has NASCAR teams swamping the Charlotte shop of Bill Simpson, one of the country's most famous fire safety men.

"I just came from Bill Simpson's, because we're trying to get some equipment to give our boys a little more fire protection," Hammond said in an interview with the Winston-Salem Journal.

"Simpson will tell you that the proper equipment will give you from six to 12 more seconds of protection before the fire gets through to your skin," he said, adding that he was taking one more precaution.

"The most important thing we're doing this week, because of this incident, is I'm assigning a crewman to be the fireman for our team ... because I don't trust the firemen at the tracks," he said.

Hammond was one of several members of NASCAR pit crews who have criticized firefighters at Atlanta International Raceway for their handling of the fire.

"We're going to approach it differently from now on, believe me. We're going to have more people in fire suits, and we're going to have more people with fire extinguishers of our own, because I don't think the fireman assigned to our pits did anything but protect himself," said Dale Inman, crew chief for Petty.

"One of our boys put Robert (Callicutt) out, and some of the crews from other pits did more than the regular firemen did," he said.

Hammond agreed with Inman's claim that the firefighter ran from the Petty pits.

"The guys who put that boy out were members of the Kenny Schrader team and the Richard Childress team. I mean, other crews are having to put these guys out; the firemen aren't," he said. "That's what I'm being told and that's what I'm seeing, too. These firemen aren't reacting quick enough; they're too busy gawking around."

Callicutt underwent skin graft surgery Tuesday in Augusta Humana Hospital, which has a special burn unit. The 38-year-old Asheville, N.C., crewman was wearing the NASCAR-required firesuit when the incident occurred, but was still burned over some 30 percent to 40 percent of his body.

Mrs. Bush holds AIDS-infected child at Washington center

Barbara Gives AIDS Patients An Embrace

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — It was just a hug — a simple embrace of one human being by another.

But, to a 39-year-old man with AIDS, that gesture from first lady Barbara Bush meant a lot more.

Mrs. Bush wanted to show people that "it's not going to hurt you" to express compassion toward people who have acquired immune deficiency syndrome or who are infected with the virus that causes it.

"One hug is worth many thousands of pamphlets and public service announcements," said Jim Graham, director of the Whitman-Walker Clinic, which provides support in Washington to 700 people with the fatal virus. "What happened with Lou Tesconi (the patient with AIDS) was absolutely historic," he said, because publicly "the first lady has held an adult person with the disease."

Tesconi has been diagnosed as an AIDS sufferer for three years — a long survival time for people with the disease.

Mrs. Bush also hugged Ashley, who is 18 months old and is infected with the human immunodeficiency virus. She has a 40 percent to 70 percent chance of developing AIDS.

Mrs. Bush made her first visit as the president's wife to representatives of AIDS support organizations, meeting with them at Grandma's House, a home in Northwest Washington for babies infected with HIV or with AIDS. Currently four children live there — Ashley, a 21-month-old girl; a 20-month-old boy and a 5-month-old boy — all infected with HIV. A 20-month-old resident recently died of AIDS.

Told that more compassion and assistance were needed by people with AIDS and their families, Mrs. Bush appealed to the public to get involved in AIDS support activities.

As significant as Mrs. Bush's call for understanding and volunteers was the visit itself, AIDS support workers said. "It took Ronald Reagan seven years into his administration before the word 'AIDS' even passed his lips," Tesconi said. "It sent a very negative message."

Tesconi is the founder of Damien Ministries, a Roman Catholic-affiliated group in Washington that helps people with AIDS. Tesconi's parents, who live in New England, are supportive of him by phone, he said, but have visited him only once in the last 2½ years. A nephew forbids him from entering his home.

Despite medical findings that AIDS can be contracted only through the exchange of blood or semen, or passed from mother to fetus, alienation driven by fears and misconceptions has caused emotional distress and lowered public concern, AIDS advocates said.

Waste Shipment Pact Signed By 100 Nations

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BASEL, Switzerland — More than 100 countries have endorsed a proposed U.N. treaty that supporters say will slow the alarming and unregulated rise in toxic waste shipments across international borders.

The treaty, immediately signed by 34 countries after its approval Wednesday, requires signatories to provide detailed information on intended toxic shipments and to ensure that importing nations can handle them in an "environmentally sound" way.

Signers of the convention also pledge to forbid the shipment of hazardous wastes to countries that have banned their import.

Waste generation and dumping in foreign countries are to be kept to a minimum, and developing countries are promised technical aid.

Backers say the treaty is the first step toward restricting shipments of dangerous waste to nations unequipped to deal with it. But environmentalists contend it would merely legalize the transport of such materials.

The treaty was adopted by delegates of 105 countries after a three-day U.N.-sponsored conference and 18 months of hard bargaining. It intends to confront growing international waste traffic and fears about poor countries accepting shipments in exchange for lucrative payments.

Twenty countries must formally ratify it before it can go into force. U.N. officials have said this could take up to two years.

The United States, Britain and West Germany were among major industrialized countries not signing immediately. Delegates were taking the text back for consideration by their governments.

Among the countries that signed on Wednesday were Canada, France, Italy and host Switzerland. Hungary was the only Soviet bloc country to sign.

None of the 40 African delegations signed the convention.

Mostafa Tolba, chief of the sponsoring U.N. Environment Program, said African lands are committed to the treaty and he expects their signatures after a policy-setting summit meeting in June of the Organization of African Unity.

Taxpayers Shortchanged In 1985 Have Until April 15 To Get Refunds

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Taxpayers whose 1985 federal refunds were shortchanged or lost because they forget to subtract taxes already withheld have only 25 days to file a claim with the IRS.

After April 15, the refunds will be lost forever.

The Internal Revenue Service on Wednesday outlined a procedure for filing such refund claims, one day after acknowledging that an old policy had prohibited IRS employees from notifying taxpayers who neglected to take a credit for withheld taxes.

The agency indicated that most people who got squeezed by the old policy probably were taxpayers who in 1985 received lump-sum pension payments from which some taxes were withheld. Most such payments were reported to the taxpayer and the IRS on Form 1099R.

"Taxpayers should review their 1985 returns, especially if tax withholding was reported on a Form 1099," the IRS said Wednesday. "If taxpayers find that they have not claimed all their withholding for 1985 they should file a special claim."

The IRS also announced that after additional review, it will issue instructions on how to apply for refunds that were not made for the same reason on returns filed in 1987.

The new policy — which Acting Commissioner Michael J. Murphy says simply restates the basic IRS position that "taxpayers pay only the tax due — no more, no less" — affects returns filed in 1988 and later years.

Murphy announced Tuesday night that IRS employees were no longer barred from informing taxpayers who forgot to consider withheld taxes when they calculated what they owed.

The agency's hand was forced by several employees in the IRS Memphis regional service center, who complained privately to Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., that the old policy amounted to stealing from taxpayers. One of those employees, Linda Johnson, a returns examiner, went public with her complaints after talking to Gore.

"On a lot of returns, the taxpayer often failed to notice ... that money was withheld, especially from pensions," Ms. Johnson explained. "A lot of times these taxpayers had paid someone else to do their returns. But when we questioned it, we were told that taxpayers would have to find their own mistakes."

Ms. Johnson said she personally handled dozens of such returns, on which taxpayers overpaid their taxes. In most cases, she said, the taxpayers were pensioners and the overpayment was between $100 and $1,000.

A taxpayer's failure to subtract withheld taxes would likely be detected as part of the operation in which W-2 and 1099 forms from employers, banks and other payers are matched against income reported on a tax return. A computer will find, for example, that interest income was not reported where it should be on a return.

Ms. Johnson or some other examiner would then try to determine whether the taxpayer reported it on the wrong line or the wrong form. If the examiner could not resolve the discrepancy, the taxpayer would be sent a letter demanding an explanation.

To claim a refund of 1985 taxes because of the withholding problem, a taxpayer may file Form 1040X, Form 843, or a simple statement explaining the circumstances. In any case, the notation "1985 income tax withholding claim" should be entered at the top of the page.

If the taxpayer opts to file a statement explaining the claim, it must include the taxpayer's name, address and Social Security number; the withholding figure that was entered on the original return, the correct withholding and the refund due. The statement must be signed, dated and postmarked by April 15.

Claims should be sent to the Problem Resolution Officer at the IRS service center to which the 1988 tax return is being mailed.

Teen-Ager Allowed Back Home

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ZEPHYRHILLS, Fla. — A 14-year-old girl is back home today after winning an age discrimination battle but says she can't forgive the elderly neighbors who forced her eviction from a mobile home community.

"I'm glad to be home," Staci Elmer said Wednesday after a judge allowed her to return to her parents' home in this rural central Florida town.

"But my family was separated. I don't care if the neighbors got down on their knees and apologized. I don't think I could look them in the eye and forgive them. It hurt that much."

Neighbors waged a court battle for more than a year to enforce a deed restriction on the Elmer's property and other homes in the two-block subdivision. The deed banned children under age 15.

They won an injunction in January, and Staci was kicked out of her family's home Jan. 31 after Pasco Circuit Judge Wayne Cobb threatened to jail her parents for contempt. The teen-ager went to live with a married brother several miles away, coming home to visit on weekends.

But Cobb ruled Wednesday that the ban was rendered illegal by a federal housing law that took effect March 12.

"This court cannot continue an injunction in violation of the law. The federal act now makes these deed restrictions unlawful and I'm going to dissolve the injunction," Cobb said at the end of a brief hearing.

The federal housing law is controversial in many retirement communities, where some residents say they're entitled to live quietly and without children.

The long court battle left bitterness on both sides.

"I just feel we've been taken," said Arlene Murray, who lives across the street from Beverly and Thomas Elmer. "We bought here 20 years ago with the idea of peace and quiet. We raised our family. Our grandchildren are raised."

"It isn't that we are against children," she said. "Out of 17 families, it comes down to the fact that 16 don't have any rights — I don't think that's fair."

"I really don't care if they like me or not," said Mrs. Elmer, 45. "There are some gray-haired monsters here."

Wife Of Vincennes Captain Asks Parents To Help Regain Her Job

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

SAN DIEGO — Teacher Sharon Rogers, who escaped unhurt from a car bombing this month, has sent a letter to the parents of each of her former students at the La Jolla Country Day School saying that she did not pose a security risk, had planned to return to the school, but was "terminated" by school officials.

A school official, who asked not to be named, told the Los Angeles Times on Wednesday that the wife of Navy Capt. Will Rogers III was ordered not to return in part because of concerns about the safety of the children, but also because administrators were worried that parents would pull their children out of the exclusive private school.

Sharon Rogers has not taught at the exclusive school since a bomb went off under the van she was driving March 10, prompting an investigation into whether she was the intended victim of a terrorist attack. Her husband skippered the USS Vincennes, the ship that mistakenly shot down a civilian airliner down over the Persian Gulf last July, killing 290 people. Iran vowed revenge at the time.

The La Jolla school official estimated that the school might lose as many as 100 of its 702 students if Sharon Rogers had returned. "You lose 100 kids at $6,000 a head, hey ...," the official said.

He said the school administration also was "afraid for the children's lives. I'm afraid for my life. If she came back to the school I would consider resigning."

Whether Sharon Rogers agreed to leave or was fired has been a matter of controversy since her departure was announced as a "mutual decision" by the school last week.

Jim Stewart, a spokesman for the school, said Wednesday she was not fired. "We're just not renewing her contract," he said.

But Stewart added, "No matter what kind of furor she expresses, she's not coming back. Period."

In her letter to parents, dated Saturday, Sharon Rogers said she was "terminated" by the school last Thursday. She said in the letter that earlier, in consultation with school officials, she had requested that the words "mutual decision" appear in the school's press release. At that time, according to sources who have spoken to the Rogers, she wanted it to appear that she had not been fired.

She said in the letter that federal agencies had done "an in-depth threat assessment" and found that "no evidence exists of a direct or implied threat against me or the school." As a result, she said, she was "prepared to resume (her) full classroom schedule."

Attempts to reach Sharon Rogers for comment were unsuccessful. Capt. Rogers remains at sea on a training mission.

Mrs. Rogers has temporarily moved out of her home and remains under the protection of the Naval Investigative Service. Both she and her husband have attempted to maintain a low profile since the bombing, but she was interviewed at a local television station this week for a segment of a television show called Crime Stoppers, which is produced by an organization that assists law enforcement agencies in solving crimes.

The segment is to include a reenactment of the van bombing.

Drug Cartel Leaders Indicted

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Leaders of a Colombian drug cartel bribed Nicaraguan officials for use of a military base as a way station for 3,000 pounds of cocaine before smuggling it into this country, according to a federal indictment.

Leaders of the Medellin cartel masterminded the slayings of the Colombian justice minister and a U.S. drug informant, according to the federal District Court indictment unsealed Wednesday.

The indictment accuses 30 people, including an associate of the Bahamian prime minister, of participating in a ring that imported 22 tons of cocaine — $1 billion worth — into the United States.

"This is an encompassing indictment that talks about the whole system of importing cocaine from Colombia through the Bahamas to the United States beginning in about 1974 and continuing into 1989," said Jack Hook, a DEA spokesman.

Those indicted are tied to Carlos Lehder Rivas, the Colombian drug kingpin who was convicted in Jacksonville last year of smuggling cocaine into the United States.

"This prosecution will further dismantle the Medellin cartel and its distribution network in the United States," U.S. Attorney Robert W.

Genzman said of the latest indictments.

The cartel, named for the Colombian city where it is based, is considered the world's largest cocaine trafficking ring. It's said to be responsible for up to 80 percent of the cocaine imported into the United States.

The indictment accuses reputed cartel leader Pablo Escobar Gaviria of organizing the 1984 assassination of Colombian Justice Minister Rodrigo Lara Bonilla. Escobar and Fabio Ochoa Vasquez also directed the 1986 slaying of former Drug Enforcement Administration informant Barry Seal, the indictment charges.

After the minister's slaying, cartel leaders fled the South American country and eventually traveled to Nicaragua, the indictment said. They stored 3,000 pounds of cocaine at Los Brasiles Air Force Base in the leftist-ruled country before flying it into the United States, the indictment said.

In May 1984, Lehder and other cartel leaders arranged to pay Nicaraguan officials large sums of money to allow them to remain in the Central American nation and to use it as a base for smuggling cocaine to the United States, the indictment said. In addition, in July 1984, a Piper Navajo owned by Lehder was given to the Nicaraguan government as a gift, the indictment said.

130 Boat People Lost In Collision

TOKYO (AP) — About 130 Vietnamese boat people apparently drowned after a Japanese tanker collided with their overloaded 30-foot boat in the South China Sea, Japanese officials reported today.

Authorities said first reports of the March 8 accident did not emerge until Monday, when 35 survivors of the accident on the high seas between Vietnam and Malaysia arrived in the port of Yokohama.

The refugees said their wooden ship was carrying 165 people when it struck the propeller of the 239,000-ton Japanese tanker Nissei-Marui, said Nagasaki refugee center official Masanami Nakatsukasa. The boat had left Long An in southern Vietnam for Malaysia on March 4, he said. Nakatsukasa quoted the survivors as saying their boat overturned and sank after it hit the propeller of the tanker while trying to approach the Japanese ship for help.

Many passengers were seasick and suffering from a lack of fresh water after four days at sea, Nakatsukasa quoted them as saying.

The refugee boat somehow overturned when the tanker's captain, Yasuo Kawamura, stopped his ship and prepared ladders to let the refugees come on board, said Hiroshi Hattori, spokesman of Tokyo Tanker, the Nissei-Marui's agent.

Hattori denied reports that the boat overturned after hitting the tanker's propeller.

Easter Means Skiing In Norway

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OSLO, Norway — A 250-year-old ban on dancing during Easter may finally become a thing of the past. Authorities acknowledge the law sends few Norwegians to church for solemn prayer — so many are on the slopes.

Koreans Issue Assault Rifles

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL, South Korea — The government said it today began arming police with about 13,000 M-16 rifles to defend their posts against attacks by radical protesters, a move critics said can only incite more violence.

Riots broke out to after the tough measures were announced. Authorities said about 3,400 students, hurling firebombs and rocks, battled riot police today outside campuses in four cities.

President Roh Tae-woo on Wednesday ordered security forces to crack down on radicals and dissidents, calling them a major threat to political stability.

"All government offices must cooperate to root out the violent and destructive acts of leftists attempting to overthrow the government," a presidential spokesman quoted Roh as telling security officials.

The government said it was allowing police to carry guns and use them in self-defense in response to mounting firebomb attacks on police stations.

The country's police have until now rarely carried guns, normally using only tear gas and shields to defend themselves.

Senior government officials, who declined to be named, said U.S.-built semi-automatic M-16s were being issued today to police.

Opposition parties charged that the move only would aggravate unrest. Issuing M-16s was "tantamount to declaring a war against the people," the Reunification Democratic Party said in a statement.

On Monday, Roh announced that he was postponing indefinitely a national referendum on his performance that he had promised before his election.

He blamed the postponement on threats from radical groups and discord over how to hold the referendum.

Every Easter holiday, Norwegians abandon their cities and close their shops, jamming up mountain roads and ski trails.

Few actually go to church.

The dancing ban, made law in 1965, stems from strict 1735 decrees by the Lutheran Evangelical state church that limit public entertainment and sports events on religious holidays, said Peter Selaeg of the Ministry of Church and Education.

But he added: "The rules get a little confusing and may be relaxed when the government finishes reviewing them next spring."

Almost everything but church services and skiing is banned on Good Friday and Easter Sunday. Dancing is allowed Saturday until 9 p.m., though municipalities are empowered to override the rules or make them stricter.

Similar blue laws and entertainment bans exist on Good Friday and Easter in Finland, where the Lutheran church also is an arm of the state.

Norway's state-run liquor stores are closed until Tuesday, but restaurants can still serve alcohol over parts of the long weekend. At certain times, it's possible to buy a drink at a discotheque, though customers must keep their feet under the tables and off the dance floor.

The Central Bureau of Statistics says 87.8 percent of Norwegians belong to the state church. In a recent newspaper survey, however, 14.3 percent of those asked said they would consider attending an Easter church service.

About 75 percent of the 604 Norwegians surveyed said they no longer consider Easter a religious holiday, and would rather go skiing, said the Oslo newspaper Aftenposten.

Some Norwegians say Easter has become more like a Viking spring festival than a Christian ritual.

The Easter holiday has been five days long since the 1700s, but many Norwegians now begin the traditional exodus to the mountains the weekend before, drawing on their vacation time.

The Statistics Bureau says it's a myth that cities are totally abandoned. "Only 25 percent of the population is on vacation," said a bureau official. However, the figure does not include people merely gone for the weekend, he added.

With more than 1 million of their 4.2 million residents skiing in the mountains, relaxing in cabins by the fjords or flying off to sunny lands, a strange calm engulfs Norway's largest cities during the last workdays before the holiday.

City traffic jams disappear. Chronic parking shortages become parking space glut. Skeleton office crews explain that nothing can be done "because it's Easter."

Among the few people left working by Wednesday afternoon were Red Cross personnel, foreign businessmen and thieves. Police say Easter brings a wave of burglaries, as thousands of people leave their homes vacant.

Mary Martin 'Flies' Again As NBC Brings 'Peter Pan' Back To Screen

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — From the age of 5, when she soared off the garage in Weatherford, Texas, and broke her collarbone, Mary Martin knew that she was destined to fly.

She would later become a high-flying legend of the theater, familiar to millions of Americans as "Peter Pan," the impish boy of Sir James Barrie's play who flies Wendy and her brothers to Never-Never Land.

Martin flies again Friday in the first telecast of "Peter Pan" by NBC in 16 years.

"I'm so thrilled they're bringing it back," said Martin. "It's for children. Mothers today grew up with it and many are having parties to watch it."

Martin first played "Peter Pan" on Broadway in 1954. By then she was already the empress of the musical. She'd been a star since her show-stopping number, "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" in "Leave It to Me" in 1938. She was Nurse Nellie Forbush in "South Pacific" and Maria in "The Sound of Music."

But to a new generation she is probably better known as the real-life mother of Larry Hagman, who plays J.R. Ewing on CBS' "Dallas."

Her first NBC "Peter Pan" telecast was live in 1955, and she won an Emmy. She appeared live again in 1956. She made the taped version for a 1960 broadcast and it was telecast again in 1963, 1966 and 1973.

It also stars Cyril Ritchard as Capt. Hook and Mr. Darling, Maureen Bailey, Margalo Gillmore, Sondra Lee, Joe E. Marks, Jacqueline Mayro and Norman Shelley. Lynn Fontanne narrates.

"The last time I flew as 'Peter Pan' was in 1984 at Davies Symphony Hall in San Francisco," she said. "It was a benefit performance for the trauma center at San Francisco General Hospital. They saved our lives after the accident."

In a 1982 taxi-van accident, Martin, Janet Gaynor and Gaynor's husband, Paul Gardner, were severely injured, and Ben Washer, Martin's manager, was killed.

"I flew three stories high. I was 70 years old. I wore the original costume and flying harness. The auditorium was pitch black and they had laser lights. All you heard was the little voice of Tinker Bell. Then I was in a purple light flying through fairy dust."

Martin grew up in Weatherford, Texas, as the daughter of a prominent lawyer.

"I loved flying from an early age," she said. "My mother was a fabulous mother but she had a tough time with me. At the age of 5, I climbed on top of the garage and flew off. My mother came running out of the kitchen, screaming, 'What have you done now?' I broke my collarsbone. That stopped me from flying, but only for a while.

"She did get to see me in 'Leave It to Me.' I brought my little boy along. Nobody knew I was married, but I'd gotten married at 16 and had Larry when I was 17. My poor mother went through many phases with me."

Martin first dressed up as "Peter Pan" for a Hollywood costume party. Jean Arthur also came as "Peter Pan." Arthur played "Peter Pan" on Broadway with Boris Karloff while Martin was doing "South Pacific."

Sandy Duncan has also become famous for playing "Peter Pan."

"I went to see the show on Broadway," said Martin. "I'd never seen it before. I was asked to come on stage, and Sandy went off to one side. She said, 'I can't come over. You're Peter Pan.' I said, 'Sandy, you're my Peter Pan.'"

NBC Says Programming Will Be Better Next Year

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BURBANK, Calif. — The head of NBC Entertainment said the network would boost the quality of its programming next season because of viewer and advertiser concerns over the content of shows such as "Nightingales."

"When we set the fall schedule, we can ... upgrade the quality of NBC by carefully choosing what shows return and what (prospective new) shows we select," Brandon Tartikoff said Wednesday.

"We've beefed up broadcast standards. We are sensitive to changing audience tastes."

The executive spoke at a preview for advertisers and advertising agencies of 32 prospective new programs for next season. The new offerings will include the return of "M-A-S-H" star Alan Alda in a one-hour dramatic series, and a comedy created and produced by Mel Brooks.

Tartikoff said NBC was concerned about the "content issue" of its shows and the "restlessness on the part of advertisers, affiliates and the audience."

He did not name any specific program, but "Nightingales" has been criticized by nursing groups that claim it demeans the profession by showing scantily clad nurses. Chrysler Corp. and Sears, Roebuck & Co. said they would stop advertising on the show because of such complaints.

Tartikoff acknowledged some advertisers had withdrawn from the show, but he said such pullouts were common and the show was doing well.

"Anytime you push the boundaries of what is acceptable, you're going to find that you sometimes push too far," Tartikoff told reporters.

Next season's prospective new offerings were highlighted by the return after a six-year absence of Alda, who played Hawkeye Pierce and won five Emmys in 11 years on the smash comedy "M-A-S-H."

"I haven't been tempted to get back into television until now," said Alda. The actor will be involved in the creation and writing of the show, but he declined to say what it would be about except to say: "We'll be very proud of it. We're very up about it."

Tartikoff said the show probably would not debut until the middle of the 1989-90 season.

The prospective programming continues to place a heavy emphasis on comedy, which has been largely responsible for making NBC No. 1 in the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings.

Brooks will create and produce a series called "The Nuthouse" about a New York hotel, starring Harvey Korman and Cloris Leachman.

Rodney Dangerfield will have cameo roles in "Young Rodney," about a boy whose idol is the comic.

There can be great difference in technique between a pairs tournament and rubber bridge. Cover the East-West hands and, as South, decide how you would play the hand at both forms of the game.

Since South's spade rebid guarantees a six-card suit, North's invitational raise should be automatic. South has a little in reserve for his bid of four spades, but not enough to do anything more. Note that six clubs, impossible to get to, is a pretty good contract.

Assume that you are playing in a pairs competition. You ruff the opening heart lead and decide that most of your fellow competitors also will be in four spades. Therefore, you should follow the percentage line in an effort to take as many tricks as possible. Ruff the opening heart lead and cash two rounds of trumps. Unfortunately, West shows out on the second round and a perfectly sound game bites the dust.

Playing rubber bridge, before you do anything else you must determine what poses a risk to your contract. Here, obviously, the major threat comes from a 4-1 trump break. How can you neutralize that? Simple enough.

At trick two, lead a trump from hand and insert the table's nine! Even if the cards lie as in the diagram, you are safe. The best East can do when he wins the jack is, say, shift to a club. You win in hand, draw the three outstanding trumps by starting with the ace from hand, and then run the clubs. You will collect five spade tricks and six clubs for a well-deserved overtrick.

$185,500 BONDS OF THE TOWN OF AYDEN"

WHEREAS, the Board of Commissioners of the Town of Ayden has caused to be filed with the Secretary of the Local Government Commission of North Carolina an application for Commission approval of the bonds hereinafter described as required by The Local Government Finance Act, and the Secretary of the Local Government Commission has notified the Board that the application has been filed and accepted for submission to the Local Government Commission; NOW,

BE IT ORDERED by the Board of Commissioners for the Town of Ayden,

1. That, pursuant to The Local Government Bond Act, as amended (the "Act"), the Town of Ayden, North Carolina ("Town"), is hereby authorized to contract a debt, in addition to any and all other debt which said Town may now or hereafter have power or authority to contract, and in evidence thereof to issue bonds in an aggregate principal amount not exceeding $185,500 ("Bonds") for the purpose of providing funds, with any other available funds, for improving, grading, draining, resurfacing, reconstructing, remodeling, altering, renovating, replacing, enlarging, expanding or extending the recreation center and sanitary waste system, and all functionally related facilities, of the Town.

2. That taxes shall be levied in an amount sufficient to pay the principal of and the interest on the Bonds.

3. That a sworn statement of the debt of the Town has been filed with the Clerk of the Board of Commissioners for the Town and is open to public inspection.

4. That this order shall take effect 30 days after its publication following adoption, unless it is petitioned to a vote of the people as provided in Section 159-60 of the General Statutes of North Carolina, in which event this order will take effect when approved by the voters of the Town at a referendum as provided in the Act.

The foregoing order was adopted on the 22nd day of March, 1989, and is hereby published this 23rd day of

991 Greenville Blvd., SW, Greenville • 756-3115 • Toll-Free 1-800-553-9218

1st Time Buyer's Program.

We are pleased to announce Nissan's new purchase program, good for a limited time only, just for people who've never bought a car before! You see, we believe your first car-buying experience should be as exciting (and as easy) as possible! If you:

• Have a permanent job.
• Have lived at the same address for 1 year.
• Have an income sufficient to make your payments.
• Have no credit (or a satisfactory rating).
• Are a valid driver's license, and
• Are a social security number, then you're eligible to buy one of our new Nissans! Perhaps with no cash down! The requirements, as you can see, are quite basic and easily met. In fact, we're willing to bet you're eligible and didn't even know it!

Just think, you could be cruising down the highway in your brand new Nissan—much sooner than you've ever dreamed possible! And by beginning with Nissan quality, dependability and value, you've already made your most important step: getting the right car.

Simply cut out the credit application we've provided below. Fill it out and bring it to Leith Olds/Nissan. We'll be ready to start you on the road to your new car! And when you use your manufacturer's rebate, with absolutely no cash down!

Any IRA reduces the tax you send to Washington, but only First Federal's IRA keeps your money at home.

Only First Federal's IRA assures you that your retirement money is to be used here in the local economy. That's because First Federal is the only financial institution that operates offices only in Pitt County. So with a First Federal IRA, your money works right here while you're working right here.

What's more, your tax-deductible IRA contribution at First Federal is insured by the same people who offer you the tax deduction: the FSLIC, an agency of the federal government. As an added bonus, First Federal's IRA investments generally pay higher interest than federally-insured investments at the big banks.

But those aren't the only reasons to open your IRA at First Federal. Our customer service representatives are IRA specialists with the knowledge and experience to help you choose the right IRA investment. And unlike most banks, First Federal doesn't limit your investment choices. All First Federal investment products are available as IRAs.

When you add it up, First Federal is your first choice for your IRA. Higher rates, federal insurance and personable people, happy to help you choose the right IRA without limiting your investment choices.

And best of all, with a First Federal IRA, you know your money will be working here with you until you're ready to retire.
