Bush Unveils Bipartisan Aid Plan To Boost Central American Peace

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush, unveiling a bipartisan Contra aid plan as the first plank of his emerging foreign policy, today outlined a $4.5-million-per-month aid program that commits his administration to support Central American peace efforts.

The agreement, breaking a long history of partisan polarization on U.S. policy toward the region, for the first time offers money to the Nicaraguan rebels to resettle in their native country and rejoin political life there.

"We will be speaking with one voice" on Nicaragua, Bush said with congressional leaders at his side, striking a sharp contrast to what was perhaps the most divisive issue of the Reagan administration.

"Insurgent forces have the right to re-integrate into their homeland" under the agreement, Bush said. Congressional Democrats, in turn, agreed to support Bush's request for an extension of humanitarian aid to the Contras at current levels.

"Does it mean an end to the war? Let's hope so," said Secretary of State James A. Baker III, a chief architect of the compromise accord.

"The burden of proof is on the Sandinista government to comply" with democratic overtures, Bush said.

Bush mentioned no specific figure for continued aid to the rebels, but Senate Democratic Leader George Mitchell said the money was to flow at the current rate. Baker said it would amount to $4.5 million a month for 10 months.

In advance, sources said the accord called for Congress to extend aid to the anti-Sandinista Contra rebels, now scheduled to end after this month, through Feb. 28, 1990. In exchange, the administration pledges to support peace efforts of the five Central American presidents and the eventual reintegration

PCC Says Its Classes Are Filled

"I'm sorry. There's no more room."

That's what Pitt Community College had to tell 175 people who registered for classes in the spring quarter, President Charles Russell said.

"We had to turn about 175 students away this spring because we didn't have the space to accommodate them," Russell said during the college's board of trustees meeting Thursday.

He said 75 of those denied enrollment needed the remedial courses the college offers.

"The crunch for space is on," he said, noting the numbers turned away could be as high as 400 during the fall quarter.

"I didn't think we'd ever be in that position," Russell said. "It's a real tragedy."

PCC's 1989 enrollment of 2,993 is an increase of 6.8 percent over the 1988 spring enrollment of 2,803. The vocational programs had an increase of 9.2 percent — the first significant increase in several quarters, Susan Nobles, director of public relations, said.

She attributed that increase to the aggressive and creative ideas of the vocational staff to promote the need for the various vocational skills.

There was a three-tenths of a percent decrease in the technical programs, while the college transfer enrollment increased by 39.5 percent.

While the college transfer enrollment has increased, Kay Whichard, board chairman, said that the goal of the institution is not to become a liberal arts college.

According to state laws, only 15 percent of the college's enrollment may be college transfer students, she said.

The college has asked the Pitt County Board of Commissioners for a $22 million bond referendum to construct nine new buildings, to renovate two and to expand a campus internal road and utilities system.

Whichard Follows Everett As PCC Trustee Chairman

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Pitt Community College Board of Trustees named a new chairman and vice chairman during its regular meeting Thursday.

Kay V. Whichard is the new chairman of the board, succeeding Clifton Everett who was chairman from 1977 until his death Feb. 25. Henry Leslie, who has been a trustee since 1974, is vice chairman.

Mrs. Whichard became a trustee at PCC in 1961 and was chosen to serve her 12th year as vice chairman of the board in the September, 1988, elections.

Mrs. Whichard and Leslie will serve until the board has its elections in September.

The board approved a resolution honoring the life of Everett and recognizing his leadership on the board. Mrs. Whichard said the Pitt County Board of Education will appoint a person to the board to fill the vacant position.

In other matters, the board approved its county operating and capital outlay budgets for 1989-90.

The operating budget is more than $1 million, and has increased by about $203,000 from the 1988-89 budget of $873,361. The increase includes funds for operating the new Whitley building being constructed, unfunded requests from the prior year, a 5 percent salary increase for employees, two maintenance helper positions, a FICA (Social Security) increase and a projected increase for supplies, said Joe Hunnicutt, dean of administrative services.

The capital outlay budget of more than $22.5 million includes a request for nine new buildings, the renovation to two buildings and a campus internal road and utilities system. The board has asked Pitt commissioners for a $22 million bond referendum to meet those needs.

Ten People Lost After Boat Sinks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PORTSMOUTH, Va. — The Coast Guard says it has found no sign of 10 people aboard a 52-foot sport fishing boat that apparently sank off the Virginia coast after sending a distress call.

The boat radioed that it was taking on water and that the passengers had donned life jackets and were abandoning the vessel, said Coast Guard Petty Officer 1st Class Vernon Covington said. He said the Coast Guard told them to try to stay together but did not receive acknowledgement of that transmission.

The Coast Guard sent a helicopter and two cutters to the boat's last reported position about five miles off Virginia Beach, but they found no sign of the Blue Goose or its occupants, said Coast Guard Seaman Kenneth Crump.

"We're assuming it did go down. We haven't had any contact with the vessel since 10:30 p.m.," Crump said Thursday.

The helicopter from Elizabeth City, N.C., arrived to help in the search but returned to its base shortly afterward because of 60 mph winds and zero visibility, Crump said.

He said the cutters Point Huron and Point Arena and two Navy ships were continuing the search. A third cutter, Point Highland, was en route.

Easter Brings New Clothes, Travel

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Spring arrived this week after a seemingly endless winter, and along with it, the accompanying seasonal holiday — Easter.

Men will be taking out their light blue suits and the ladies will don bonnets Sunday for Easter church services. Athletic events, such as the continuing NCAA basketball tournament, will likely consume the attention of many sports fans who are not involved in typical springtime activities like waxing the car, cleaning the house and planting the garden.

Local residents, many of whom are enjoying a holiday from work today, will certainly not have a shortage of activities to choose from this Easter weekend.

Since no classes were scheduled today, many of the 13,000 students at East Carolina University were taking advantage of the three-day Easter holiday and traveling to Myrtle Beach, S.C.

Each Easter thousands of students from colleges throughout the southeast descend upon the seaside resort to take part in a festival-type atmosphere.

Jeff Kelly, an ECU senior who planned to make the southern jaunt, said the Myrtle Beach festivities attract many of the students who did not get an opportunity to attend the standard spring break Florida excursions to Daytona Beach and Fort Lauderdale.

"It's a weekend to just get away, to get out and enjoy the beach and

Attendants Call Off Continental Strike

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — Striking flight attendants today ended their walkout against Continental Airlines, saying their protests had accomplished the union's goal of publicizing its grievances. The five-day walkout had had little effect on service.

The airline, which has a largely unionized work force since Texas Air Corp. head Frank Lorenzo took Continental into bankruptcy proceedings in 1983, said that only a few attendants had taken part and that they had lost their jobs but have the right to fill future job openings.

The Union of Flight Attendants said its executive board ended the strike, at 9 a.m. Union officials were notifying attendants to report for their work assignments.

"This strike accomplished the objectives we set out to achieve," Carla Winkler, union president, said in a statement.

"We have been able to bring to the public's attention the disparate treatment between the wages and working conditions of Continental flight attendants and flight attendants at other carriers in the industry."

When the strike began, some of those on the picket line said it was intended to last only 96 hours, a figure Winkler refused to confirm.

Union leaders had said that the strike was largely unrelated to the Machinists union walkout against sister Eastern Airlines, another branch of Texas Air.

Homework Inside Today

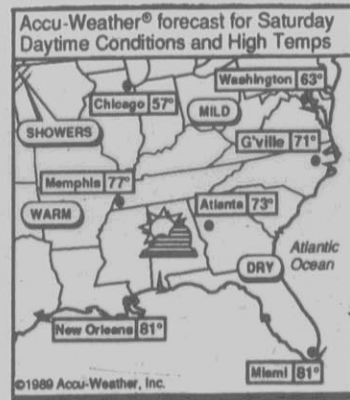

Spring is here, and with it, the traditional clean-up, fix-up chores for home, yard and garden. Whether you're adding a wing to the house or trying to decide which variety of pole beans to plant in your garden, you'll want to check today's special section before you begin.

"Homework," a 28-page tabloid, offers practical, professional advice on a full range of chores, from the lowly task of spring cleaning to the exciting opportunities awaiting those who plan to add sunspace to their home. Fuel Spill Cleanup Under Way

A Route 5, Greenville, man escaped injury when his tractor-trailer loaded with logs lost a wheel and overturned near Farmville early Monday, but the accident has necessitated fuel cleanup activities.

Trooper J.R. Mumford said the truck's owner-driver, Kevin Lee Simpson, 43, said that as he was approaching a stop sign at a T-intersection of U.S. 264 and State Road 1221, a wheel came off his truck and he was unable to stop the vehicle. The truck went down an embankment to the west of SR 1221, spilling logs and diesel fuel, Mumford said.

The North Carolina Air and Water Resources Department, with offices in Washington, N.C., has been involved in the diesel fuel cleanup. Damage to the truck was estimated at $12,000.

Pitt Commissioners Discuss Budget With Agency Chiefs

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County commissioners, faced with the annual task of developing a balanced budget for the coming year, met with the heads of the health, mental health and social services departments Thursday to review money requests from those agencies.

When he presented the working budget to the board earlier this month, County Manager Kramer Jackson said the list of expenditures, which totaled more than $35.04 million compared to $33.12 million this year, was "an unbalanced budget" because it contained recommendations for spending $1.92 million more than revenue estimates for 1989-1990.

Dr. Tim Monroe, the health director, told commissioners Thursday that his main concern with the $1.07 million in county funds recommended for his department in the coming year — the loss of about $65,000 in carry-over funds not recommended for inclusion which would bring the proposed 1989-1990 budget up to the $1.37 million in county money the department received this year.

The department's total operating budget this year, including $915,152 in state funds, amounts to $2.4 million.

Dr. Steve Creech, who heads the county's mental health program, expressed concern at the "loss" of just over $64,000 in fund balance in the proposed budget, as well as a requested $32,424 for continuation of a preschool program and only partial funding for a social worker for the mental health facility in Ayden.

As recommended, local money for mental health for the coming year would total $752,546, the same amount of new money as was contained in this year's budget. This year county appropriations account for about 15.92 percent of the department's total operations.

The proposed budget for the department of social services for the coming fiscal year recommends spending more than $3.1 million in county money, compared to more than $3.13 million this year.

But most of the department's expenditures are mandated by federal and state law. And the department's director, Ed Garrison, told commissioners that additional money would be needed before this fiscal year ends on June 30 to meet mandated expenses. He said probably more money would be needed in the coming fiscal year than is included in the present working budget.

Garrison said the department only operates three programs that are not mandated: distribution of surplus U.S. Department of Agriculture commodities; the general assistance program (about $61,800 in county money), and disaster relief activities, including shelter management.

The other high-expense items such as Medicaid and aid to families with dependent children grants are mandated and have to be funded.

This year's budget for AFDC payments includes $799,442 in county money, with an additional $129,010 requested for the coming year. Money for Medicaid grants in this year's budget amounts to $860,394, with an additional $72,774 requested for 1989-1990.

Garrison said "there is a shortfall" in this year's public assistance programs budget of some $130,000, which the board will be asked to make up before the end of the fiscal year.

According to Garrison, Medicaid is the most expensive program that the DDS operates. Of the department's total budget this year of $34.78 million (including federal and state money) Medicaid accounts for $18.69 million. The county's share of that is 4.85 percent or about $860,000.

Store Loses Bid For Flag Display

A request by a local commercial business to display a large flag was one of the items denied by the Greenville Board of Adjustment at a monthly meeting Thursday which lasted well over five hours.

The board denied a request by The Pantry Inc. for a variance from the Zoning Ordinance to allow the placement of a 375-square-foot flag on a flag pole at its 316 E. Tenth St. facility.

After a conducting a public hearing on the matter, the board determined that the request was in direct conflict with current city regulations.

City Planner Jack Simoneau said the Greenville Sign Ordinance does not allow flags in the city which are larger than 100 square feet.

"A flag over 100 square feet is designed to draw attention to a commercial establishment and often is used as a means to get around the sign limitations which the city has established," Simoneau said.

In other action Thursday, the board denied requests by David Mitchell II for a special use permit to allow the operation of a private night club at 1002 Evans St.; by Dennis O'Neal to obtain a special use permit to allow a fraternity or sorority house at 612 E. 10th St., and by the Pitt County Mental Health Center for a special use permit to allow the operation of a day care program for adults at 2307 E. Fourth St.

The board also denied requests by James Evans and his wife, Brenda Evans, to obtain a variance to allow a non-conforming use at 1307 S. Greene St.; by Dr. and Mrs. Barry Moore for a variance in order to divide their 3.33-acre lot and sell a portion of the lot as a separate building site at the end of Martinsborough Road, and by Shady Knoll Limited Partnership to obtain a variance from the Flood Damage Prevention Ordinance in order to exempt a mobile home park at the intersection of Mumford Road and N.C. 33 from the required first-floor elevation requirements.

The board approved requests by C.L. Summerlin for a special use permit to allow the operation of a flea market mall at the intersection of River Bluff Road and N.C. 33 East, directly behind Putt Putt Golf and Games, and by Joyce Holland for a special use permit to allow the placement of a manufactured home on an unimproved road on the north side of N.C. 33, approximately one mile east of North Greene Street.

The capital outlay budget also includes funds for equipment and trailer renovations and moving. The board also approved revisions to the 1988-89 budget. Through amendments, the college's 1988-89 budget has increased about $696,000 from $10.6 million to $11.3 million. Trustee A.B. Whitley reported on the progress on the construction of the Whitley building, noting that construction is behind about 30 days because of inclement weather. The board approved a resolution to advertise and receive bids for the sale of the house the carpentry students at PCC built. Trustee Ephraim Smith noted the growth that is expected in the region by the year 2007. "Where are these people coming from that these companies are going to hire," he said. Henry Leslie, vice chairman of the board and an honorary member of the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees, said the hospital now is in need of 100 nurses, and 220 additional nurses will be needed to staff the new bed tower scheduled to be completed in 1992. PCMH depends heavily on the college's nursing graduates as employees, Russell said. But with the lack of facilities the college is unable to meet the needs of the community.

A passenger in his car, Jill Ruth Kawanishi, 19, of Raleigh, a sophomore at UNC, was in stable condition with head injuries at Duke Medical Center late Thursday. Rescue workers had to cut the top off the 1984 Chevrolet Cavalier to free Ms. Kawanishi. The driver of the truck, Donald Edward Weaver, 26, of Raleigh, was not injured. He was charged with involuntary manslaughter and released from the Durham County jail Thursday night on $10,000 bond.

Oil Tanker Runs Aground

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VALDEZ, Alaska — An oil tanker ran aground today about 25 miles outside this northernmost ice-free port in the United States, spilling an estimated 150,000 barrels of crude oil into Prince William Sound, the U.S. Coast Guard said. Cmdr. Stephen McCall, commander of the port, said the Exxon Valdez was heading outbound from the Alyeska marine terminal with 1.26 million barrels of oil aboard when it ran hard aground at Bligh Reef.

"There are no reported injuries," McCall said. "We're estimating right now based on soundings of the tanks and what we can see that she's lost approximately 150,000 barrels. "The ship is hard aground. It's not moving at this time." McCall said emergency crews were gathering pollution response equipment and soon would be en route to the scene. Oil was still leaking from the ship, but slowly, he said. The Coast Guard was awaiting daylight before trying to assess damage to the shoreline or marine environment, he said. "Reports we've had from boats in the area say the slick is proceeding south into the main portion of the sound. That would make sense according to the winds we have now," McCall said. The Coast Guard was responding to two concerns — pollution and the safety of the ship, he said. "It appears that the rate of release of the oil has been greatly reduced. It probably lost the largest portion of that oil when it ran aground. But it's still leaking. "A concern we have, too, is the structural integrity of the ship," McCall said. "We're concerned about what further damage would be done if attempts were made to remove it (vessel) early. "We've got the pollution to go after and the off-loading." Another tanker, the Exxon Baton Rouge, is not far from the stricken tanker and officials hoped oil could be transferred from the Valdez to the Baton Rouge, McCall said.

people have booked reservations far in advance," she said. Meanwhile, Kim Peele, manager of Travel Express, said several people have made arrangements to spend the holiday at Disneyworld in Orlando, Fla., while other customers will be skiing at resorts near Denver. "This is usually one of our busiest times of the year," Ms. Peele said. "This month has been particularly busy with Easter and the ECU spring break both occurring in March." With all those people traveling, personnel at the Pitt-Greenville Airport have their hands full. "We have been quite busy today and we'll be busy again tomorrow," said Nancy Mazingo, station manager for Piedmont Commuter, on Thursday. Ed Moore, manager of American Eagle at the airport, said air travel was heavier than normal on Thursday but returned to the usual, hectic end-of-the-week pace today. For residents who plan to stay close to home, there will be plenty of traditional Easter-time events to enjoy. The town of Farmville's Recreation and Parks Department will sponsor an Easter Egg hunt at J.Y. Monk Park on Saturday at 10 a.m.

Three hunts will be conducted, with children divided by ages 2 and under, 3- and 4-year-olds, and 5-through 7-year-olds. Prizes will be given to those youths who find designated "lucky eggs." For those not interested in participating in the traditional outdoor Easter events, plenty of indoor activities are available. For instance, many local retailers are luring fashion conscious shoppers with pre-Easter sales offering the latest in spring and summer attire. Several new films are opening at area theaters and for those interested in indulging in Easter-time cuisine, several hotels will provide holiday revelers an opportunity to treat their taste buds to a selection of specially seasoned entrees, salads, and deserts. The Hilton Inn and The Ramada Inn will both offer Easter buffets Sunday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., while the Comfort Inn will have an Easter breakfast buffet from 8 a.m. to 11 a.m. Meanwhile, the Holiday Inn on Memorial Drive will be offering an Easter weekend "Beach Party Package," which includes poolside accommodations, buffet and social hour.

of the rebels into Nicaraguan political life. Baker was asked if the payments amounted to "mustering out pay" for the Contras and if the agreement sounded the "death knell" for the anti-Sandinista forces. "No, it is not mustering out pay," the secretary said. He said the agreement calls for the restoration of democracy to Nicaragua and to the voluntary "re-integration" of the Contras into Nicaraguan society. The agreement, in the works for the past month, came together after a series of meetings Thursday between Baker and Democrats and Republicans on both sides of the Capitol. "I want to salute the speaker," Baker said in introducing House Speaker Jim Wright, the Democratic leader who was at odds on Contra policy with the previous GOP administration. "We began talking a very long time ago it seems," Wright said, adding that he spoke with Bush two days after the Nov. 8 election about a shift to bipartisan foreign policy-making. Even before announcing the agreement, prominent Democrats were embracing the change. "We are trusting the administration, and they are trusting us," said Rep. David Obey, D-Wis. "I do think the administration is legitimate on this." "We all have to admit that the policy failed to some extent because we were not united," Baker said. "We had an executive branch going in one direction and a Congress going in the other." Despite the air of harmony at the White House news conference, the congressional leaders warned that the plan is not universally supported on Capitol Hill. "It will not be unanimous on either side of the aisle," Mitchell said, a prediction echoed by his Republican counterpart, Sen. Bob Dole.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Don't Rush

Look It Over Carefully, Lawmakers

The concept of a career ladder for teachers looks good on notebook paper, but when it is applied in the classroom it gets far lower marks.

While the notion of a carefully structured system of mobility and merit pay based on strict guidelines for teaching performance sounds exciting, there are serious flaws to the current proposal — flaws that would make such a plan counterproductive. Gov. Jim Martin, who is holding salary increases over the noses of teachers like a carrot to sell the career ladder, owes it to the state's students, taxpayers and educators to responsibly address these faults instead of blindly pushing the plan forward.

Although the plan is devised to provide accountability for performance through clearly defined steps and goals, it fails to provide enough leeway for classroom situations that fall between the cracks of the guidelines. Like any carefully drawn plan, the career ladder program is rigid. It lacks the flexibility that allows ingenuity and creativity — two important factors in good teaching.

For example, the career ladder plan requires a six-step daily lesson plan. For most teachers, that's redundant anyway, but what if the day's teaching needs just don't fit in six steps? Is the teacher who needs four or seven steps, for example, failing? Or is that individual obligated to arbitrarily mold the needs of the students into the required number of steps?

This rigidity goes against the thinking of the best minds in education. It conflicts sharply with study after study stating the value of more versatility in the classroom. Phillip C. Schlechty, a nationally recognized advocate of school reform, told the Chancellor's Forum at East Carolina University in January that teachers need less dogma and more creativity if they are to successfully reach the students of the 21st century. They need more control over their classrooms and less paperwork, according to Schlechty. Well said.

Paperwork. Here's another drawback to the current career ladder plan. The amount of that despised task — a duty which takes valuable time away from teaching — increases if a teacher is climbing the rungs of the career ladder. "Please, no more paperwork," educators have been screaming for years. "We can't teach now for filling out forms." That's a plea that must be heeded. North Carolina is obliged to take a serious look at any move that would deepen the mire of red tape.

As with any plan for upward mobility, the career ladder requires individual evaluation. Here is where the largest liability of such a plan lies. First, the criteria by which teachers are evaluated is faulty. Again, there's too much rigidity. Setting specific standards for performance doesn't leave room for imaginative teaching or inventiveness. Unless a means of addressing those factors can be devised, the plan can't provide the kind of accountability its proponents desire.

Finally, the plan cannot provide a sufficient guarantee that favoritism won't play a part in climbing the career ladder. Since evaluations and decisions will come from principals, there's too much leeway for politics to interfere with sound decision-making. Even the most objective individuals find it hard to be unprejudiced when analyzing someone whose ideas, beliefs and values coincide with their own. Most principals will be fair, or try to be. The question is, can they be?

North Carolina's teachers need an opportunity for advancement and the state needs a qualitative way to measure educators' performance. But the state should not rush into a career ladder plan that will work against, not for, these goals. Until it can be refined and its flaws satisfactorily ameliorated, the current proposal should stay on paper — and out of the classroom.

S&Ls: Back To The Intended Purpose

WASHINGTON — The savings-and-loan crisis is to economic theorists what the Bible is to religionists: There's something in it to justify virtually any doctrine you care to name.

It is either deregulation gone haywire or the result of too much reliance on government. It is the result of local economic conditions, or it is the inevitable outcome of merger-mania. It is caused by faltering confidence in the thrift institutions or else overconfidence in the federal government's willingness to bail out the improvident.

And if the multibillion-dollar crisis provides credence to any number of theoretical causes, it also furnishes the basis for a like number of cures. Some would let the industry collapse from the weight of its own mismanagement. Others, like Henry Butler, author of a new Heritage Foundation study, say the solution is a shift from federal deposit guarantees to private insurance.

My own inclination — doubtless guided as much by political predisposition as by logic — comes close to the position advocated by the Financial Democracy Campaign, a coalition of labor, civic, church and consumer groups.

It begins with the notion that the only justification for federal involvement in the S&L industry is the public good — principally its role in providing loans for home purchases and small businesses. Whatever the cause of the crisis — nearly a third of the nation's 3,000 S&Ls are approaching insolvency — the industry has moved sharply away from this basic role.

The reasons seem clear enough. The S&Ls use higher interest payments as a way of attracting depositors, then undertake potentially lucrative but unusually risky loans in order to generate the funds to pay the interest.

William Raspberry

As Jim Hightower, the colorful Texas agriculture commissioner told the House Banking Committee, mortgage lending by Texas thrifts has plummeted as a result of the institutions' shift to high-risk loans.

And how has the government responded when these risky deals land an S&L in trouble? By encouraging takeovers by larger, often distant, thrifts, to keep depositors from losing their funds.

But these larger thrifts may have little interest in the local communities.

Hightower told of the small-town Texas mayor who, when he tried to make a $1,000 loan at his S&L, was told that a "non-loan" policy was in effect. The thrift, Cameron County Savings, had been taken over by Coastal Ban Savings Association of Houston under a plan that has allowed a dozen big institutions to acquire 88 locally-owned thrifts.

Said Hightower: "Who are these guys? Depositors in Corpus Christi, Gonzales, Lampasas, Luling, San Antonio, Seguin and Yoakum now find their money — and their borrowing fate — in the hands of something called Pacific USA, which is not to be found in the USA at all, but across the water in Taiwan. It is a subsidiary of the Pacific Wise and Cable Co., one of the largest conglomerates in Taiwan."

So what would the Financial Democracy Campaign do about the situation? It has recommended a number of steps, including these four:

First, instead of the taxpayer bailout proposed by President Bush, it would put the cost of cleanup on those who have profited from eight years of regulatory permissiveness.

Second, it would establish a fund, capitalized by the entire financial-services industry, to provide affordable housing for all Americans.

Third, it would outlaw redlining, a device by which entire geographic areas — usually areas occupied by blacks and Hispanics — are closed to loans.

Fourth, it would require local S&Ls to reinvest in the communities in which they are located, perhaps as the price of federal insurance for their depositors.

As Hightower puts it, it is neither logical nor economically just for a handful of speculators to make a bundle of money while the taxpaying public underwrites their risks.

The troubles of the savings-and-loan industry constitute, quite literally, a crisis — a turning point. We can abandon the industry as no longer serving an important public function, and let the speculators pay the price for their own greed. Or we can bail it out.

Since abandonment would hurt too many people who had nothing to do with creating the crisis, I favor a federal bailout. But only if the institutions agree to resume the role they were intended to serve: financing the homes and small businesses of the American people. All of them.

The Good Mother, Part II

BOSTON — Someone from Geraldo Rivera is on the line. This is a sign. Carla Parrillo, you understand, does not ordinarily get a chance to chat with talk-show hosts. They do not usually reach out to mothers of three from Johnston, R.I.

But this month, Carla's family life became a precedent for the divorced parents of Rhode Island and maybe the country. The state Supreme Court upheld a ruling that prohibited Carla from having a man sleep overnight when the kids were home. Now she is a shooting star in the courtroom-to-television trajectory of modern life.

As she takes the call on the other line, I try to imagine the way Geraldo would pitch the show to the audience, which angle he would take. Sex and the Single Mother. An old-fashioned judge and a new-fangled morality. The Good Mother, Part II. Groan.

Before the Parrillo story became a national soap opera, it was just a nasty post-divorce wrangle like a thousand others. Maybe ten thousand. Carla and Justin Parrillo, twice-married with three kids, had finally called it quits in 1986.

When Carla started dating a man named Joseph, when he stayed overnight with her and the children, she says her ex-husband began harassing her. She accused him of making unscheduled visits to his old home, smashing the guy's car windows.

So Carla went into court to restrain this behavior. There, she found her own sexual behavior questioned. Her ex-husband raised the matter of the boyfriend. And the judge said, in essence, we can't have that sort of thing going on.

The judge talked to the children. He didn't find them troubled: "The court cannot fault the mother in any way for not taking good care of the children." Nevertheless, he declared, "The court must infer that this situation is not conducive to the welfare of the children." No guests allowed.

It is this ruling that still sticks in Carla's craw. It took over two years for the case to get up to the Rhode Island Supreme Court. Joseph, the boyfriend, is long gone. But when the court ruled, she was angry all over again.

"The court is trying to tell me what to do in my private life," said the 33-year-old mother whose children now range from 10 to 15. "They have no proof of adverse psychological effects on my children. My kids liked the guy. I discussed it with them before he slept over. The judge was imposing his values on my life."

Indeed, this is the first time a state Supreme Court has limited the behavior of a custodial parent. This was not a custody fight. The father was not trying to win the children; he was trying to control what went on in his children's home.

Ellen Goodman

Implicit in the decision is the notion that (1) unmarried sex is misconduct and therefore intrinsically (2) bad for the children. In both of these judgments, the decision flies in the face of current legal and social trends.

Co-habitation, which was once illegal, is now commonplace. There are some 2.3 million unmarried couples in the United States. They do not regard themselves as living in sin.

There are surely many more millions of divorced parents who go through a time of trial marriage and error, integrating new partners into their children's lives. Even Justin Parrillo, who praised "the old-fashioned morals" of the court went through some variation on this theme before he remarried last fall.

Some make this transition better than others. Few ex-wives or ex-husbands like it. Typically, women try to control their ex-spouse's behavior by withholding children; men by withholding money.

'Sometimes a parent's sexual behavior or indeed the arrival of a new partner in the house is profoundly disturbing to a child. Sometimes that partner is or becomes a real plus. But the notion that a judge can automatically "infer" that it is bad for the child is psychologically and legally off base.'

Sometimes a parent's sexual behavior or indeed the arrival of a new partner in the house is profoundly disturbing to a child. Sometimes that partner is or becomes a real plus. But the notion that a judge can automatically "infer" that it is bad for the child is psychologically and legally off base.

As Sanford Katz, a law professor and former head of the American Bar Association's family-law committee, says: "Unless you can show a connection, show that the conduct of the parent has an effect on the child, the parent should have the freedom of association."

What happens next? Aside from a starring role in Talkshowland, Carla and her lawyer, Patricia Hurst, are trying to decide whether to appeal to the United States Supreme Court. Carla would like to. Hurst worries that the current conservative court could turn a bad state decision into a bad federal case.

For now, Carla Parrillo has to decide whether some guy is worth risking a $500 fine and a year in jail. The rest of us can be grateful that Rhode Island is a very, very small state.

Affection Lawsuit

GREENSBORO (AP) — Jimmy Dale Hudson, convicted of the slaying deaths of his wife and 3-year-old daughter, has filed a $5 million lawsuit alleging that a university professor was having an affair with his wife, precipitating a "violent family tragedy."

Hudson, serving a life sentence plus 50 years at Central Prison in Raleigh, filed the alienation-of-affection suit against Nicholas Williamson, a business professor at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. He filed the suit March 7 in Guilford Superior Court without the assistance of a lawyer.

Hudson and his wife, Kay, separated in early 1986 after 15 years of marriage. Three weeks after separation papers were signed, Kay Hudson and their daughter, Wilma Dale, were found with their throats slashed.

Hudson, a Greensboro dentist, admitted killing his family. But he claimed at his 1987 trial, in which prosecutors sought the death penalty, that he was legally insane at the time.

Suspension Suspended

RALEIGH (AP) — A disciplinary panel of the State Bar said it was impressed by a Raleigh lawyer's successful fight against alcoholism and refused to suspend him from practicing law for failing to pay his state income taxes.

The panel ordered a two-year suspension of the license of Rodney Alan Cook but also ordered that it not go into effect. The panel required him to file quarterly reports on his payments of back taxes and penalties and to certify that he has filed state and federal tax returns.

George Ward Hendon of Asheville, chairman of the three-member committee of the Disciplinary Hearing Commission, said the panel had found a number of mitigating factors in Cook's favor.

"More impressive than any other mitigating factor has been this man's sincere effort to rehabilitate himself," Hendon said Thursday.

Senate OKs Wildlife Reorganization Bill

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission would be rebuilt under new appointment rules if the House goes along with a Senate-approved bill.

Sen. Bill Barker, D-Pamlico, helped the bill win Senate approval on a 43-3 vote Thursday, saying it would ease political tensions on the commission that have threatened its policy-making decisions.

"This bill is sort of an emergency situation," said Barker, who sponsored the measure on behalf of Gov. Jim Martin. He compared the current commission to a rowboat with six people pulling one way and six the other.

"It just doesn't go anywhere," he said.

The commission has become involved in personnel and administrative issues — sometimes to the detriment of policy matters, Barker said.

Barker said he hoped to see the bill enacted by April 18, when the next district nominations for commission membership are scheduled.

Sen. Lura Tally, D-Cumberland, was the only senator to speak in opposition. She said the Senate should think twice before abandoning nominations for commission posts at the wildlife district level.

"We're taking away, after 40 years, the right of the people to elect commissioners in wildlife districts," she said. However, only Sens. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, and Russell Walker, D-Randolph, joined her in opposition.

Barker said after the vote that district elections don't mean much because virtually anyone can vote and the governor may choose any of up to five nominees to serve.

Under the bill, the governor would choose one member from each of the 11 congressional districts instead of the current system of choosing two at-large members and nine from candidates who run for the posts in wildlife districts. The commission

N.C. Trails Southeast In Manpower Devoted To Curbing Air Pollutants

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina trails other Southeastern states in the manpower it devotes to air pollution programs, even though it leads the region in the number of major pollution sources, a state study shows.

In 1987, North Carolina had 1,471 major air pollution sources — nearly double the average among eight Southeastern states, according to the study. Yet the state devoted the least manpower to monitoring each polluter.

"I think you'll find that typical of our environmental programs — that we don't have the manpower out there," said Rep. Bruce Ethridge, D-Carteret, co-chairman of the joint Appropriations Committee on Natural and Economic Resources, which reviewed the study at a recent meeting.

"We're not doing what we need to do as far as monitoring, as far as finding out what's happening to our water and air," he said. "That's just one of the things that's been put on the back burner, until people become concerned enough to do something."

The state Division of Environmental Management compiled the figures from information obtained from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. It compared air-pollution programs in eight states: Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee.

An EPA study released Wednesday showed that North Carolina ranked 10th in the nation in the amount of toxic air pollutants emitted by industries. Most of those pollutants are unregulated, although the state is considering a plan to control 117 air toxins.

North Carolina's 1,471 major air-pollution sources accounted for nearly a fourth of the regional total, according to the state study. Kentucky had the second highest number of sources, with 1,154. The average number for the region was 751.

North Carolina was fourth among the states in "man-years," a measure of the total manpower devoted to air-pollution programs. The state devoted 98 man-years — the equivalent of 98 people working one year — to air-pollution programs in 1987, about average for the region. But when that number was divided by the total number of pollution sources, the state ranked last in manpower per source.

"I was shocked to learn in the appropriations committee that North Carolina had such a weak air-quality program," said Bill Holman, lobbyist for the Sierra Club and Conservation Council of North Carolina.

"I'm not familiar with the programs in other states," he said. "But my guess is that while North Carolina has dedicated staff, they are not able to keep up with the workload."

The Division of Environmental Management compiled the figures to show legislators that it needs more employees, said Ogen Gerald, air-quality chief for the division.

"We don't have enough bodies to do the job that could be done, or to do it as well as in other states,"

Gerald said. "On the average, we don't have enough manpower to go by each major air-pollution source but one time a year — and that's not a whole lot."

"We probably are more efficient, with more expertise than other places. But it still takes time to go to a source and do an inspection. The reduction in the air pollution comes from going to a source and inspecting the plant."

The air-quality program has a $3.5 million budget for the current fiscal year, with more than a third of its money coming from federal grants. The program hired about five people last year, increasing its total staff to about 75, he said. It has asked the General Assembly for another 20 positions by next year.

"In general, positions must be established by the legislation," Gerald said. "I can't simply establish positions, even if I have the money. Money is not in oversupply either."

The appropriations committee received the study last week as part of its review of budget requests, but has not yet decided whether to allocate more money for air-pollution programs, Ethridge said.

Gerald said the EPA study will help illustrate the seriousness of the problem to the public.

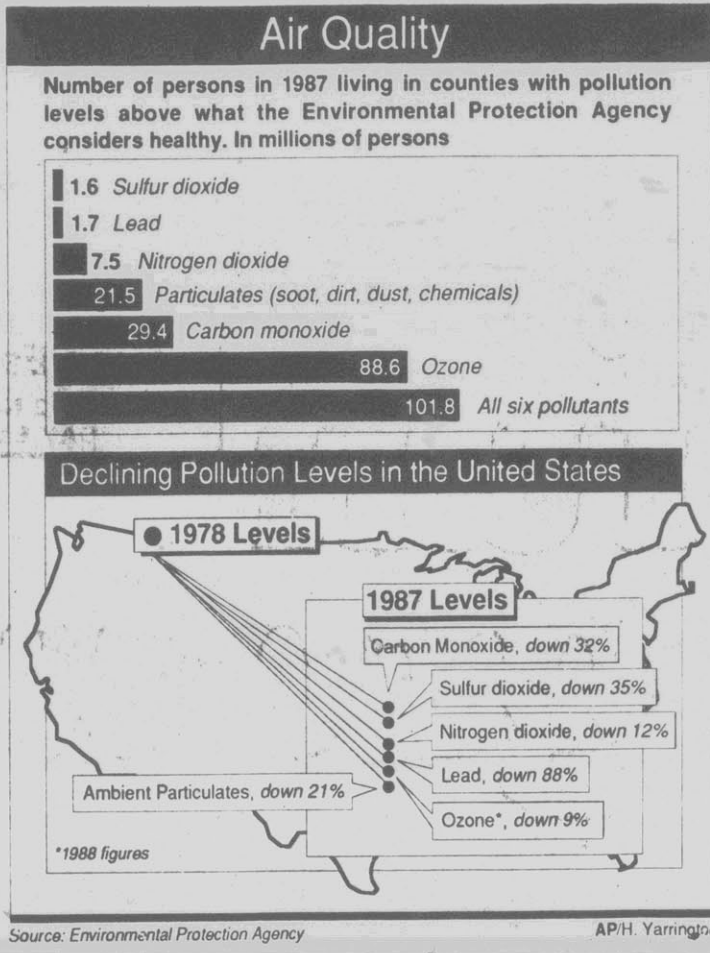

"The public really didn't see the need and discern the effects, so the need wasn't real clear," he said. "This helps accelerate the need."

Gerald said he was not surprised by the ranking because of the state's textile, chemical, furniture and tobacco industries.

"I think it's significant, though, that we're shown to be in the top 10," Gerald said. "And I think that's good reason for us to expedite the passage of air-toxics regulations."

North Carolina has no regulations for controlling air toxins, although the Division of Environmental Management has been developing rules for five years.

Gerald also said Gov. Jim Martin has asked the commission to accelerate its pace with a target of two months before a public hearing can be held.

House Sends Abortion Measure To Senators

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Outgunned opponents of requiring minors seeking abortions to obtain parental consent say they hope the Senate will give the bill close scrutiny and fix what they call major flaws.

The bill gained final House approval 85-23 Thursday without debate. The previous day, the measure was debated at length before receiving tentative passage, 86-30.

Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, one of five lawmakers who voted for the bill Thursday after opposing it before, said he wanted to offer amendments to correct problems with the bill but decided the shortcomings were too complex to debate on the floor.

"I talked some with some of the fellows in the Senate and I've been assured that they're going to look at it ... and be sure that if they're going to enact the bill, it will be technically sound and not create more problems than it solves," Nesbitt said.

He said he switched votes because he objects to how the bill would implement the parental consent requirement instead of the philosophical concept involved.

The battleground now shifts to the Senate, where similar parental-consent bills died after passing the House in 1985 and 1987. The measure is scheduled to be referred to committee Monday.

Rep. Paul Stam, R-Wake, the bill's chief sponsor, said he is confident the Senate will pass the bill if it reaches the floor. He said he would fight any effort to bottle up the measure in committee as was done in 1987.

"I think the state feels that the Senate ought to at least vote on this proposal," Stam said. "If they want to defeat it, then defeat it."

Critics such as Nesbitt have focused on a provision allowing girls who don't want to involve their parents to seek a waiver in juvenile court. A pregnant minor would file a petition and a judge would decide if she is mature enough to decide on her own or if it would not be in her best interest to tell her parents she is pregnant.

Nesbitt and other critics say the bill does not make clear whether the girls would have a right to counsel or how the promise of confidentiality would be kept. Another unanswered question is what would prevent a girl whose request for a waiver is rejected in one county from filing another petition elsewhere, he said.

Franklin Freeman, director of the Administrative Office of the Courts, told the House Judiciary Committee the bill would cost the judicial system nearly $700,000 a year.

"The whole scheme of handling this thing in the court system is flawed," Nesbitt said. "In my opinion, someone will have to develop an entirely different procedure."

Stam said he had no objection to a thorough Senate study of questions raised by his bill, "as long as they vote on it this year."

Hatcher Says He Has 'No Regrets'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — Eddie Hatcher does not regret taking hostages at a Lumberton newspaper, but he told a Winston-Salem newspaper that he never expected to wind up in a California jail.

"I never thought a year ago that I would end up in jail in Oakland," Hatcher told the Winston-Salem Journal. "This just wasn't something I planned."

In a telephone interview, Hatcher, 31, said his flight across America was made on a Greyhound bus with little regard for secrecy. He said life on the run has only hardened his resolve to expose corruption in Robeson County.

"I do not regret the past year and all that's happened," Hatcher said. "But I will say that I regret that I had to put those people in a situation they didn't want to be in. I hated for that to happen."

"If I had the opportunity to do it over, I would have tried a more direct thrust against the people I had a gripe with."

A Raleigh jury found Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs, 20, not guilty of all federal charges last October arising from the takeover. But the two were indicted on state kidnapping charges a few months later.

Jacobs, who was on an Indian reservation in New York when the state charges were filed, recently dropped his fight for extradition. His first appearance in Robeson Superior Court was scheduled for today.

During his cross-country flight, Hatcher said he avoided airports and tried not to act suspicious, but spent many nights in bus stations and cheap motels. He told the newspaper that he often mailed his family and friends post cards and once asked a policeman for the time, he said.

"My philosophy was: If they get me, they get me. It's no big deal. Let's just see who can play this thing out the longest," he said. "But after a while, I was getting a little disappointed that they weren't looking for me. I did about everything but call them up and tell them where I was."

Hatcher turned up at the Onondaga reservation shortly after the National Council of Churches posted his bail, but he said he only stayed a few days. He left about the time Jacobs began saying that he regretted ever meeting Hatcher. He ended up at a Shoshone-Bannock reservation in Idaho, where he stayed about a month.

He left there when authorities approached a Shoshone friend, seeking the floor plans to the church he was living in. It was while he was on the road that he was decided to turn to

Phone Rules Supported

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina has reacted "dynamically but sensibly" to keep pace with changes in the telephone industry and consumers would not benefit from deregulating the industry now, state Attorney General Lacy Thornburg says.

Thornburg said local phone companies still enjoy "the classic bottleneck monopoly" and added that a bill to relax restrictions on rates is little more than an attempt to increase earnings for the companies.

"My concern is that consumers will suffer if the local exchange company quits answering to regulators when they set rates for what are still monopoly services," he said at a public hearing Thursday.

The hearing was part of a battle between AT&T and Southern Bell over two bills. AT&T wants to force local telephone companies to lower in-state access charges. Local companies, including Southern Bell, back a bill to let the utilities commission disregard standard basis of fixing rates — considering costs plus rate of return — and not fix rates on competitive services.

Thornburg said the current system has worked well, with phone companies making good profits, investing in improving their systems and still keeping rates stable.

Ossie Brown, representing Southernnet — the nation's fourth-largest long-distance phone company — argued against deregulation even with commission oversight.

"Once the horse is out of the barn, it can never be recaptured," he said.

Inez Miles, representing the N.C. Senior Citizens Federation Inc., supported the deregulation, saying the commission would be careful to protect consumers.

"Being able to make a local call for many is a matter of survival," she said.

Robin Spinks, director of the Edgecombe Development Corp., also supported the bill, saying the utilities commission could best determine the proper balance between long distance and local rates.

However, Jerry Pruitt of the Carolina Utilities Customers Association, said no case had been made to justify either bill.

Jacobs Wants To Deal On Plea

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Fugitive Timothy Jacobs said he would plead guilty to one of 14 counts of second-degree kidnapping if he received probation with no prison sentence, but said he would not testify against fellow Indian activist Eddie Hatcher.

"There's nothing I can say," Jacobs said Thursday after he returned to North Carolina from New York. "I don't agree with another trial, obviously," referring to his acquittal on earlier charges.

Jacobs dropped his efforts to fight extradition from New York on Wednesday and State Bureau of Investigation agents were sent to return him to North Carolina on Thursday, said John Simmons of the state Attorney General's Office.

Jacobs arrived at Fayetteville Regional Airport at 7:15 p.m. on a SBI airplane, and was accompanied by three SBI agents. He was taken to the Cumberland County Jail, where he was kept before an 11 a.m. hearing today before Judge Anthony Brannon in Robeson County.

Jacobs, who has claimed his life would be endangered if he were returned to Robeson County, said he feels safe at the Cumberland County Jail.

"I think my being here in the Cumberland Jail, I'll be safe," Jacobs said. "I'm comfortable here. My family is here. There's a lot of support here in North Carolina."

He told The Fayetteville Times that he would plead guilty to one felony count against him in exchange for probation without a prison sentence.

"How long do you think I'd last in prison — a guy fighting (against) drug and alcohol abuse," Jacobs said after he arrived at the Cumberland County Jail on Thursday night.

Jacobs fled the state the same day a special Robeson County grand jury returned the kidnapping charges, which stem from the Feb. 1, 1988, takeover of The Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton.

He sought refuge at the Onondaga Indian Reservation near Syracuse, N.Y., but was captured by state troopers in late December after being stopped for a speeding violation. He fled from troopers, but crashed into the back of an empty school bus.

After a three-day hearing earlier this month, a New York judge denied Jacobs' request to block extradition. That decision was upheld by a New York appeals court Tuesday and Jacobs decided not to pursue his appeal.

Jacobs, 20, and Hatcher, 31, are both charged with kidnapping after holding up to 20 people hostage for 10 hours. They have claimed they took over the newspaper to draw attention to their allegations of official corruption and drug trafficking in the county.

A federal jury acquitted Jacobs and Hatcher of hostage-taking charges in October.

Hatcher, who is being held in a jail in Oakland, Calif., said Wednesday that Jacobs was wrong to drop his extradition appeal.

"Eddie Hatcher went to the Russian Embassy. He tried to go to a communist country," Jacobs said in an interview at the Fayetteville Regional Airport. "I'm an American. I wasn't trying to go to the Russian Embassy."

Hatcher, who was freed on $25,000 bond posted by the National Council of Churches, fled initially to the same New York reservation as Jacobs and later to a reservation in Idaho. He disappeared from that reservation, but was arrested earlier this month by the FBI after being denied political asylum at the Soviet consulate in San Francisco.

Martin Renews Call For Career Ladder

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Martin is launching a public-relations blitz to counter what he says is an inaccurate portrayal of the career ladder program as a flop that all teachers have rejected.

Martin says the career ladder plan, the centerpiece of his initiative to improve teacher and state employee salaries, must be approved this year for statewide implementation or face extinction.

"If we don't move to establish the career ladder in this year, it will be lost," Martin said at his weekly news conference Thursday. "It will be defeated and the opponents will gloat and will shout from then on that the career ladder was a disaster."

Within the next month, teachers who have participated in the four-year career ladder experiment will be invited to conduct seminars for legislators at which they'll discuss its positive and negative features, the governor said.

"Otherwise, the legislators are getting all the information from the NCAE (North Carolina Association of Educators), which ... is a political organization that is dedicated to stamping out any attempt to get any merit pay of any kind by any name," Martin said. "They've been opposed to it for 40 years."

The experimental phase of the program in 16 school systems is ending this school year.

"Most teachers who have participated in it are in favor of it," he said. "Those who are a part of it know that it works ... but you've got a political organization that wants to block it."

Martin said his support for a 1-cent sales tax increase is contingent on career ladder implementation, along with lifting the seven-year freeze on the teacher pay scale.

If the Legislature rejects the career ladder, Martin said, he will resurrect the budget plan he supported earlier this year — a 4.5 percent pay raise for teachers and state workers beginning in September or October that would be financed with spending cuts and surplus state revenue.

"My main objective is to get the career ladder established," he said. "I believe the career ladder will do more to strengthen the public schools than anything else we're talking about."

He said he supports revising the career ladder, particularly regarding the biggest target for criticism: a six-step daily lesson plan that some teachers call too rigid.

Martin, a former chemistry professor at Davidson College, said the six-step plan might be acceptable for "rookie" teachers but should not be imposed on veterans. "I don't know of anyone who advocates that," he said.

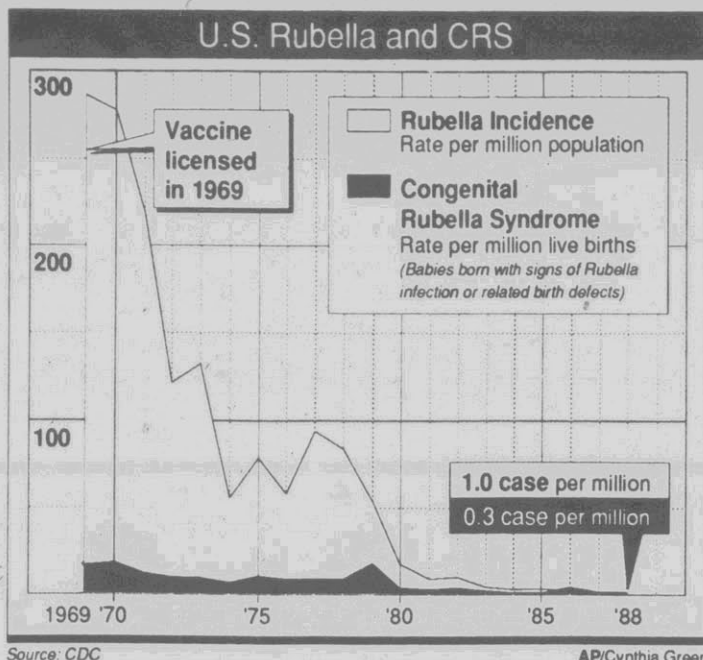

Martin said he has been meeting regularly with small groups of legislators to lobby for his plan, which has drawn a crossfire of criticism from Republicans and Democrats.

Twenty-six GOP House members and two senators have proposed $690 million in budget cuts to finance Martin's salary plan, as well as his $8.6 billion highway construction package.

Democratic leaders in the Senate, who support the highway plan, have said they will propose an alternate salary plan that will match Martin's 6 percent raise in 1989-90 without a sales tax increase.

"Most of the members of the Legislature are ... trying to keep an open mind" on the salary plan, Martin said. The highway plan "appears much more likely to pass" although its tax and fee provisions might be revised, he said.

Martin's proposal to include removal of the state sales tax on food and non-prescription drugs has drawn mixed reviews, he said. Republican legislators generally have supported the idea, while most Democrats have been lukewarm.

Rubella Cases Hit All-Time Low But Are Still Around

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Reported cases of rubella have declined 99 percent in the 20 years since a vaccine was licensed, but health officials say many people who still get the disease are women of childbearing age.

Of the cases reported during a three-year period, 58.2 percent occurred in people 15 and over, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control said Thursday.

The statistics for 1985-87 did not indicate the sex of the rubella patients, but the CDC noted that age group includes women of childbearing age.

"The continued occurrence of rubella in childbearing-aged populations suggests that potentially preventable cases of congenital rubella syndrome may continue to occur during the next 10-30 years," the Atlanta-based CDC said in its weekly report.

Rubella, also known as German measles, is most dangerous when it attacks pregnant women, said CDC epidemiologist Dr. Paul A. Stehr-Green.

Though the main symptom of rubella is a mild rash for adults, it can cause serious birth defects or fetal deaths, he said.

"The real danger of rubella is when a (pregnant) woman is exposed to the virus," Stehr-Green said. "It can cause serious birth defects, including cataracts, heart disease, enlargement of the liver and spleen and mental retardation."

The licensing of a rubella vaccine in 1969 followed a major epidemic from 1962-64 in which 12.5 million cases were reported in the United States and there were 11,000 fetal deaths.

But the latest CDC figures show there were just 221 U.S. cases of rubella reported in 1988.

That amounted to 0.1 case per 100,000 people and represented the lowest total since 1966, when the government began compiling statistics on the disease.

In 1987, the latest year for which complete figures are available, there were 306 cases of rubella reported in the United States, the CDC said.

"Though the numbers themselves are a lot lower, the proportion of cases among young adults is increasing," Stehr-Green said.

Statistics from Illinois, Michigan and New York City — the only areas that at the time reported rubella cases by specific age groups — indicate that from 1966-68, the last three years before the rubella vaccine was licensed, people in the 15-and-older age group accounted for just 22.9 percent of the cases.

The Public Health Service, in its health objectives issued in 1980, set a goal of fewer than 1,000 overall rubella cases and fewer than 10 congenital cases a year by 1990.

"Although the goal for (congenital rubella syndrome) has also been reached, unacceptable morbidity is still occurring," the CDC said in its weekly report.

There was one case of congenital rubella syndrome reported in 1988, according to the CDC, but three already had been reported this year through Wednesday.

Stehr-Green said most of the rubella cases occurring now stem from people failing to get vaccinated, though there are some cases of the vaccine failing to work.

"There is some percentage of people who get the vaccine, and for a variety of reasons, it doesn't take," he said. "But this is more an issue of failure to vaccinate rather than a failure of the vaccine."

The government recommends that children get rubella vaccine when they are 15 months old. Stehr-Green said adults who are not sure if they've been vaccinated are advised to get the shot again.

Helms Will Vote Against Pay Bill

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., is expected to vote against a proposed hike in the minimum wage when the Senate takes up the bill after the Easter recess, a legislative aide says.

The House passed a bill Thursday which would raise the minimum wage to $4.55 an hour by October 1991, with the first increase coming in six months. The minimum wage has been $3.35 since 1981.

U.S. Rep. Walter Jones Sr., a Democrat from Farmville, voted with the House majority in approving the measure 248-171.

The $4.55 wage was 10 cents less than the plan endorsed last week by the House Education and Labor Committee, but it is still well above the $4.25 wage President George Bush is demanding.

Dori Dixon, legislative aide for Helms, said the senator shares the president's concerns that the higher wage law would put a squeeze on employers and result in a loss of low-income jobs.

"He feels it will knock a lot of teen-agers out of jobs, and he is totally against it," she said.

The House bill also provides for a two-month training period in which employers could pay new personnel just 85 percent of the minimum wage, provided it was their first job. Bush has asked for a six-month training period in which employers could continue to pay all new employees $3.35 an hour.

The wage scale and the length of the sub-minimum wage training period likely will be the major conflicts between Republicans and Democrats when the Senate takes up a bill sponsored by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

Bush has threatened to veto any bill that does not meet his requests, and he claims he has the votes to sustain the veto, the Associated Press has reported.

When the Senate re-convenes Monday, one of the first orders of business is expected to be Kennedy's bill, which calls for a $4.65 minimum wage by 1992.

Under the approved House bill, the minimum wage will rise to $3.85 on Oct. 1, to $4.25 on Oct. 1, 1990, and to $4.55 one year later.

The news service reported that the bill would also expand exemptions allowing small businesses to pay wages lower than the minimum wage, and it would allow employers of workers who earn tips to pay them 50 percent of the minimum wage, down from the current 60 percent.

Current law exempts service businesses with annual sales of less than $362,000 from the minimum-wage law, and the House bill raises that to $500,000. The provision is rarely used because of confusing regulations, but lawmakers said the exemption will be simplified in a conference committee if the Senate approves a minimum-wage bill.

A recording at the office of Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., said the senator had closed his office for the holiday and would return Monday.

Fruit From Chile Returns To Shelves

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Fresh Chilean grapes are being trucked across the country today after a two-week absence from store shelves because of a cyanide poisoning scare, industry leaders say.

Consumers may see slightly higher prices on the produce initially, but prices are expected to drop back to pre-scare levels in a couple of weeks when supply catches up with demand, they said.

Losses to Chilean exporters and to U.S. fruit importers as a result of the cyanide scare over grapes and other produce are estimated at $240 million, Ronald S. Bown, executive director of the Chilean Exporters Association, said Thursday.

Some of those losses may be offset by a plan being developed by the Chilean government to compensate

U.S. importers, wholesalers and retailers as well as Chilean growers and exporters, Bown said.

Officials at the Chilean embassy in Washington did not return telephone calls for comment on the plan Thursday.

An estimated $50 million to $75 million worth of Chilean fruit is being destroyed under the U.S. Food and Drug Administration's advisory that was issued after the agency on March 12 found traces of cyanide in two grapes from Chile. Earlier in the month an anonymous caller to the U.S. embassy in the Chilean capital of Santiago had threatened to inject cyanide in export fruit.

Long Sued Over His Denial Of Insurance Rate Increases

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Insurance Commissioner Jim Long's denial of rate increase for an Indiana company forced the firm out of the state and deprived some customers of adequate coverage, say five North Carolina residents who have joined a suit filed by the firm.

"He (Long) doesn't live our lives. He hasn't been in our shoes," said Becky McLamb, whose 4½-year-old son is undergoing treatment for a brain tumor. "We are really upset that someone can make a decision that affects our lives."

Sera Christian attended Thursday's news conference while her husband, Albert, was undergoing surgery for a collapsed blood vessel in his leg.

"We don't believe this is fair and we don't like the decision at all," Mrs. Christian said of Long's position.

Golden Rule Insurance Co. of Indianapolis held the news conference to announce the suit, at which Long walked in and offered two of the plaintiffs attending a chance to make alternate arrangements. After the news conference, neither of the plaintiffs said they would take up Long on his offer.

According to the lawsuit filed Thursday, Long denied a rate request which left the company no alternative but to leave the state. The five plaintiffs who joined in the suit all have insurance with the company.

"This is our last effort to obtain justice," said George Nasser, senior vice president for Golden Rule. "Jim Long has treated us unfairly and arbitrarily. He has forced us out of the state major-medical market.

"Our concern now is to assert our rights in court and prevent our policyholders from suffering because of Jim Long's actions," Nasser said. "So, together, we are bringing this lawsuit in an attempt to gain adequate protection for these people. That is the least we can do for our customers."

Henry Price, the attorney representing the company, told reporters that "Long's promise of providing comparable coverage for these folks were misleading and was a promise he didn't deliver on."

According to the lawsuit, Golden Rule filed requests with the insurance department in July and October of last year with increases set to take effect on Oct. 1, 1988, and last Jan. 1. The request was denied, but the department said the increases could take place in stages. Eventually, Golden Rule notified the state that it could not afford to wait for the increases, which wouldn't be completed until March 1990.

Long was given a list of Golden Rule policyholders who had been notified that their policies were about to be canceled, and the list was given to Blue Cross, the lawsuit says. Golden Rule officials said the alternative would cost its current policyholders more than they were paying.

In a letter to Golden Rule policyholders, Long said his department had reached an agreement with Blue Cross-Blue Shield to offer what was termed "comparable coverage" without a waiting period and without further underwriting.

"Jim Long has ignored the needs of policyholders in North Carolina while conducting his campaign to turn the Golden Rule customers over to Blue Cross," Price said.

Mother Files Suit In Marine's Death

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MINNEAPOLIS — The family of a Minneapolis Marine who died after being abandoned in a California desert during a training exercise has filed a $1.25 million claim against the Marines, the family's attorney said.

Attorney James Schwebel of Minneapolis said Thursday the claim in the death of Lance Cpl. Jason Rother was filed directly with U.S. Marine Commandant Gen. Alfred M. Gray in Washington, D.C. on Wednesday.

The claim seeks $1 million for wrongful death and $250,000 for emotional distress suffered by Cecilia King of Minneapolis, Rother's mother, Schwebel said.

Mrs. King said Thursday night that she wanted the claim filed "because I lost my son and it's the Marine Corps' fault."

Schwebel said Mrs. King suffered "intense emotional distress" during the week that the Marines "failed to conduct an adequate search and then actually called off the search for him."

He said the claim was sent to Gray "since he's acutely aware of the negligence of the Corps in the death, asking him to authorize payment to the family. If he denies the claim, then we go into U.S. district court."

Under federal law, Schwebel said, a party presenting a claim against any agency of the U.S. government must first file a claim with the particular agency. "It's only when the agency denies the claim that a person has a right to then file suit," Schwebel said. "We're hoping this won't have to go that far."

A spokeswoman with the Marines in Washington said there would be no immediate comment on the claim.

Rother, 19, was left behind in scorching heat in the Mojave Desert near Twentynine Palms, Calif., late last August and was not missed by his superiors for two days. By the time they started looking for him, he was dead of dehydration. His body was not found until December.

Three Marines were court-martialed and found guilty of negligence, although not of acting maliciously. Four higher officers were reprimanded and removed from their commands. The most serious punishment was given to First Lt. Allen Lawson, of Flint, Mich., who was sentenced to four months in the brig and then was to be dismissed from the Corps.

A report by the Corps after its investigation into the case blamed the death on a "total breakdown" in accountability.

Court Will Name EAL Examiner

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Eastern Airlines has been granted its request for a court-appointed examiner in its bankruptcy proceedings, but the airline appears to be getting one with broader powers than it wanted.

In a surprising ruling Thursday, U.S. Bankruptcy Court Judge Burton Lifland said he would appoint an examiner to oversee Eastern during its Chapter 11 reorganization. But he decided to give the official a broader mandate than requested by the airline, saying it was in the public's interest to do so.

Among other things, the examiner — still to be named — would mediate differences among Eastern employees, creditors and other parties to achieve a consensus on a bankruptcy reorganization plan, Lifland said.

He described that role as "banging heads together by an independent entity."

The judge also refused a union request to order Eastern to release about $24 million in prestrike paychecks and benefits frozen when the airline sought protection from creditors March 9, five days after the beginning of the Machinists' union strike. Eastern's pilots and flight attendants have refused to cross the machinists' picket lines.

The unions have asked the bankruptcy court to appoint a trustee who would run the airline during its reorganization, bumping Texas Air Corp. Chairman Frank Lorenzo from that function.

An April 7 hearing has been scheduled on the trustee request. But an attorney for the Air Line Pilots Association indicated the union might be willing to drop the request because the new examiner's power would be so sweeping.

"It's rather an extraordinary appointment," Bruce Simon, who represented the pilots during Thursday's hearing, told reporters outside the courtroom.

He described the official to be appointed by the judge as a "super-mediator" and a "super-examiner."

Eastern President Phil Bakes also praised the judge's decision, saying, "We wish we had thought of it."

Eastern has said it made the request for an examiner to dispel arguments by its unions that transactions between Eastern, its parent company Texas Air and its sister carrier Continental Airlines were not made in the company's best interests.

Eastern's unions claim Texas Air has been stripping the airline of its assets while trying to bolster Continental.

Meanwhile, in Tallahassee, Fla., a federal appeals court delayed its ruling on Eastern's request to force the pilots back to work. Eastern asked the judges to overturn a lower court ruling permitting the pilots to honor striking machinists' picket lines under the Railway Labor Act.

In Miami, Eastern spokesman Robin Matell said the carrier planned to begin training replacement pilots Monday despite claims by the pilots' association that no qualified pilots could be found.

Eastern has been getting about 115 flights a day aloft recently.

'Thin Blue Line' Man Goes Home Free, With All Charges Dropped

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Randall Dale Adams returned home to hugs from his mother, flowers from well wishers, a job offer from the mayor and word from Texas that a murder charge for which he was nearly executed was being dropped.

"I couldn't have dreamed this. I knew I would be home, but not this way," said Adams, whose 1977 conviction was questioned in the 12th year of his prison term by the movie "The Thin Blue Line."

Adams was set free Tuesday, a few weeks after the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals set aside the conviction, saying prosecutors had suppressed evidence and witnesses had given perjured testimony.

In the film documentary, an inmate on death row for another murder recanted his testimony against Adams and all but confessed to the 1976 killing of Dallas Police Officer Robert Wood.

About 100 people cheered loudly Thursday as the 40-year-old suburban Grove City native rushed through an airport gate and into the arms of his mother, Mildred Adams.

He was presented with a daffodil lei, an Ohio State Buckeyes cap and an Easter basket topped with a yellow ribbon.

"I feel happy, really happy," said Mrs. Adams, clutching her son's arm as they left the gate. "You're supposed to have a resurrection around Easter. I guess this is it."

Adams fought back tears as he embraced Errol Morris, director of "The Thin Blue Line." Another cheer arose minutes later when news arrived that the Dallas County district attorney announced he was dropping the case.

But Adams, who appeared flushed and complained of feeling ill shortly after arriving from Texas, cautioned against enthusiasm.

"I'll wait until I hear it from my attorney," he said.

In Houston, Adams' attorney said his client's name has been cleared and that Adams has been vindicated.

"I'm now satisfied the final chapter has been written," attorney Randy Schaffer said.

District Attorney John Vance told reporters in Dallas that it was unlikely enough evidence could be produced to retry Adams.

"It's almost impossible to find sufficient, credible evidence to try a case that is 13 years old," Vance said.

But Vance, who was not in office when the case was tried, defended prosecutors' actions, including a legal fight earlier this week that delayed Adams' release.

"The easy route would have been to release Mr. Adams immediately. However, my obligation is not to the media or to play the part of the hero," Vance said. "My responsibility in every case is to the victim, his family, Dallas County citizens and the state of Texas."

Adams, who was unemployed before his arrest, said he had no immediate plans, although he is mulling a job offer from Columbus Mayor Dana Rinehart, who was among those greeting him at Port Columbus International Airport.

Rinehart said he will discuss what jobs are available with Adams once he settles in at home.

Adams, who in 1980 came within three days of execution before his sentence was commuted to life in prison, said he harbors no ill feelings toward Texas officials and gave Morris and his film partial credit for his release.

"I still believe I eventually would have won. It may have taken us some time, but thankfully ... Errol was sent to me by my fates."

Mrs. Adams agreed.

"I don't have any hard feelings for anyone. Randy's home," she said, adding that she now considers Morris "another one of my sons."

Adams and his family planned to spend the evening at a private gathering at Mrs. Adams home.

"It's going to take some time. We need time to have the family together," he said.

"I've been standing in a twilight zone for the past 12½ years. ... I was in that twilight zone until the door opened. Thank God it did."

State May Issue Own Credit Card

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HELENA, Mont. — Some legislators want the state to cash in on credit cards as a way of balancing demands for increased spending and lower taxes.

A House committee on Thursday approved legislation that would have the state issue MasterCard or Visa cards for a commission.

If approved by the full House during the next week, it would be sent to the Senate.

This predominantly agricultural state of 804,000 residents could reap in millions of dollars in extra revenue by sponsoring the card, said Democratic Rep. Mark O'Keefe.

Montana's chief tax collector, Revenue Director Ken Nordtvedt, thinks it's a good idea.

"Every organization under the sun is doing this," he said. "I have two of those cards in my pocket right now from fraternal organizations. ..."

"And this being our centennial year, where there's a little more sense of pride in Montana, the Department of Revenue is certainly willing to administer such a program," he said.

O'Keefe, who sponsored the legislation, said the idea came from a constituent.

"At first, I thought the guy was crazy," O'Keefe said. "But the more I looked into it, it seemed it was not only legal but it might work."

The card would have a special Montana design and would be issued by banks, which would assume all liability and would process the transactions, O'Keefe said.

Each bank would pay the state a commission, perhaps 1 percent of sales.

The plan could mean up to $7.6 million a year for the state, depending on the terms it negotiates with banks and how popular the card becomes, O'Keefe said.

AT&T Cuts LD Rate But Locals Go Up

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Long-distance rates for calls between states will drop again April 1, but telephone customers will pay correspondingly more — 30 cents a month — on their local phone bills.

The lower interstate tolls and off-setting increase in local bills stem from a Federal Communications Commission program that, over several years now, has been shifting to customers a large part of the costs that long-distance carriers pay local phone companies for completing calls.

According to an FCC finding released in Washington, American Telephone & Telegraph will save even more than AT&T had estimated — $705 million versus $533 million. It also found that the local phone companies underestimated by even more last December when they proposed reducing their long-distance connection charges by $489 million to offset the 30 cents they will gain from local customers in the form of an increase to the "subscriber line charge."

The subscriber line charge has been rising periodically in increments until, on April 1, it will peak at $3.50 month. Theoretically, that sum represents each phone user's contribution to the fixed costs of maintaining a nationwide telephone network, regardless of how much a customer may call long distance.

With residential and business users paying more, AT&T has to pay less under the FCC's shared-cost system. And AT&T also must pass along its savings in connection charges to its customers in lower prices.

AT&T will have to recalculate its interstate tolls now in light of the FCC finding, spokeswoman Daylaine Johnson said, but added: "This is more good news for our customers, since their rates will be even lower than we had anticipated."

Most likely, the new reduction will follow the pattern that AT&T proposed on Feb. 15, based on a $533 million reduction. That called for a rate cut averaging 1.6 percent overall. The April 1 reduction will drop prices nearly 40 percent lower than before the Bell breakup five years ago.

Firm To Pay Claims For Bad Pacemakers

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — A company that admitted selling defective heart pacemakers has agreed to pay $5 million to settle claims that it defrauded the government, the Justice Department says.

The Cordis Corp. in Miami is satisfied with the agreement, said Chick McDowell, vice president for corporate relations, who noted that the company already has spent $4 million in legal fees and associated costs.

"What we did is we paid $1 million yesterday with the signing, and the balance of $4 million will be paid in three equal annual installments at 7½ percent interest," McDowell said Thursday.

The agreement, announced Thursday by the Justice Department, was simply to reimburse the government for pacemakers purchased directly by the Veterans Administration or that were subject to reimbursement through Medicare and Medicaid programs. It would not provide payments to anyone who had a fault ty pacemaker implanted or the survivors of anyone who died because of it, said Justice spokeswoman Amy Brown.

The Food and Drug Administration has alleged that the devices could stop without warning, and said that between December 1983 and October 1985 the company shipped 2,200 pacemakers subject to potential failure and 6,000 batteries even though it knew they were subject to corrosion.

The settlement did not indicate how many pacemakers the reimbursement covered.

McDowell said there haven't been any suits brought by those people who bought the pacemakers themselves or who had them implanted by the VA.

Ms. Brown said the settlement would not preclude such individuals from suing the company.

John R. Bolton, assistant attorney general in charge of the department's Civil Division, said the settlement is believed to be one of the largest Medicare recoveries ever.

Teary Hall Says Firing Upset Her

She Hopes 'Good Guy Will Win'

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Former White House secretary Fawn Hall, who wept repeatedly on the witness stand Thursday, said she was "very upset" by the 1986 firing of her boss, Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, and by "very confusing" recollections of altering and removing sensitive documents in the Iran-Contra scandal.

After finishing her testimony, which was given under a promise of immunity from prosecution herself, a defiant Hall told reporters outside the courthouse, "Hopefully the good guy will win."

Testifying a second and final day at North's federal court trial, the glamorous witness first broke down when she was pressed by prosecutor John W. Kecker about how she had altered National Security Council memos at North's direction. Answering rapidly in an exasperated tone, Hall overrode an effort by U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell to calm her down.

"Please keep your mouth shut when I'm talking," an annoyed Gesell advised her. Hall bit her lip, asked for a break and began weeping as the judge called a recess.

But an hour later her tears came again when Brendan V. Sullivan Jr., North's attorney, gently asked her about working for North and whether she knew North's family.

Brushing her eyes, she said that North had been "a very inspirational, tireless boss" and that she had met his wife Betsy one Easter. When she was unable to continue, Gesell said jurors could take their morning recess a few minutes early.

Her eyes filled with tears a third time — but she regained her poise and continued — in telling the jury that former President Reagan's firing of North on Nov. 25, 1986, "was very unfair and I was very upset."

Hall added she has been through "very confusing" times in trying to answer questions about how she altered and shredded documents, and removed other files, in response to inquiries from Congress, from a federal grand jury and now from trial attorneys.

"We didn't lock the doors and pull down the shades or anything," she said of what has been called her "shredding party" with North shortly before his firing as a National Security Council official three years ago.

"It was no big deal. But in hindsight it was a very stupid thing to do."

When she claimed that "I was concerned about security ... protecting the operations for rescuing hostages" in which North had been involved, Hall was brought up short by Kecker. The prosecutor forced her to acknowledge that all the documents she either altered, shredded or removed under her clothing had to do with North's support for the Nicaraguan Contras, which he was seeking to conceal, rather than his past efforts to free American hostages in Lebanon.

Gesell later reminded jurors there are no charges of illegality surrounding White House efforts to free hostages in which North took part.

North is being tried on 12 felony charges including false statements to Congress to conceal his efforts to assist the Contras with money and military aid at a time when Congress had prohibited direct and indirect U.S. military aid. Other principal charges are that he destroyed documents and obstructed Congressional and presidential inquiries.

Hall, who became an instant celebrity when she testified at nationally televised Congressional hearings two years ago, drew a packed courtroom for Thursday's testimony. At least another 100 spectators were waiting in the corridor.

Des Moines Targeted As Model

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES, Iowa — Yale University and a Chicago architectural foundation have chosen a model for 21st century urban development: Des Moines.

Mario Gandelonas, a New York City architect and faculty member at Yale University, will spend much of the next three years studying the city's layout and architecture. In turn, they hope to teach the rest of the country how cities should grow.

"Every city wants to have little skyscrapers growing up," said Gandelonas. "And there are secondary office boxes growing up in suburbia without any order, producing total chaos in the landscape without any rational organization."

Gandelonas has studied the development of U.S. cities, but he has yet to find one that could serve as a futuristic model for the "city beautiful" movement that started in Chicago during this century's first decade.

That movement arose from the Burnham Plan written for the Columbian Exposition in Chicago during the early 1900s. The plan has served as the blueprint for the expansion of that city until now.

In looking for a new city to serve as a model for urban development, Gandelonas said he wanted a place in the middle of the country with a strong architectural heritage, a riverfront and a healthy economy.

Des Moines, he said, "was a natural."

"Des Moines has a long tradition of planning, which very few people know about," he said. "Des Moines got into planning at the turn of the century with Chicago. And throughout the century there have been a number of plans. And there's a fantastic architectural tradition in Des Moines."

Gandelonas has been working with the city's artistic, business and political leaders for several months to start the study. He led a group of 10 Yale graduate students who spent several days taking hundreds of photographs of Des Moines.

Since then, Gandelonas said, he has been constructing computer models of Des Moines at the Chicago headquarters of the Skidmore-Owens-Merrill Foundation.

The work will end in 1992 with the publication of a book showing how other American cities can grow by following Des Moines' example.

Study Indicates Southern Schools Are Resegregating

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Southern schools are the nation's most integrated as a result of court orders and federal compliance plans dating from two decades ago, but a new report says clear signs of erosion are threatening their achievements.

Alabama and Mississippi "show major increases in segregation and have joined the list of the nation's most segregated states for black students," said the study released Thursday by the National School Boards Association.

Other Southern and border states, including Florida, are experiencing gradual declines that may reflect a failure by many fast-growing districts to update their desegregation plans, the report says.

The report, based on federal statistics, cited encouraging trends in black-white integration through mandatory city-suburban busing plans in St. Louis, Las Vegas, Indianapolis and elsewhere.

But the picture was uniformly grim for Hispanics. "Hispanic students are becoming more highly segregated in virtually every part of the country and among each major subgroup," the report said.

Hispanic students are increasingly isolated in center cities with declining white enrollments, it said, and have been largely ignored by the government agencies and civil rights groups that brought about the desegregation of black schools.

"The march to school integration is certainly not over, and school systems are finding no quick and easy solutions," James Oglesby, president-elect of the association, said in issuing the study of desegregation trends from 1968 to 1986.

At the national level, the study found that school desegregation remained relatively stable in the 1980s "in spite of the harsh attacks by the Reagan administration and the widespread impression that the policy was being abandoned."

Nevertheless, the study said, the federal government should "end its attacks on school desegregation and its efforts to dismantle plans that are stable." Other positive steps would be to resume research on effective desegregation techniques and offer assistance to districts trying to desegregate, it said.

Gary Orfield, a University of Chicago professor and co-author of the study, suggested that the nation make a concerted effort to achieve residential integration which would automatically result in integrated local schools. He also said rapidly developing areas should update their desegregation plans.

The report uses federal statistics to rate regions, states and cities on their desegregation efforts. Orfield said it is not meant as a commentary on the quality of education in particular communities, but noted there is "a very strong relationship" between high minority student populations, low test scores and high dropout rates.

The study said Hispanic segregation has always been worst among Puerto Ricans in the Northeast but statistics show alarming trends elsewhere. The percentage of Hispanic enrollment in 90-percent-to-100 percent minority schools rose from 6.8 percent in 1968 to 23.5 percent in 1986 in the Midwest, and from 11.7 percent to 24.7 percent in the West.

The growing proportion of Hispanic students and the lack of major desegregation litigation "suggest a future of continually increasing segregation," the report said.

For blacks, the most segregated states are Illinois and New York while integration is at its highest levels in the South. "We made the largest effort in the South and it had the largest impact, but we're beginning to see in the 1980s a slow resegregation of the South," Orfield said.

The most striking example of the trend is in Alabama, the report said. The percent of the state's black students attending schools with white majorities fell by 8 percent in the 1980s; the proportion of students in highly segregated schools rose by 9.3 percent in the 1980s; and the percent of white enrollment in a typical black student's school fell almost to the level of 1970, "before the implementation of the large urban busing orders."

West Virginia Volunteers Pass Up Beaches To Help Homeless

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Fourteen young people were heading home to West Virginia today after spending their spring break as volunteers at a homeless shelter in the Windy City rather than the beaches of the Sunbelt.

"I knew I would get a lot more out of this than Florida," said Jennifer Jackson, an 18-year-old high school student who traveled to Chicago with the group.

The 14 worked this week on the city's West Side at the Chicago Christian Industrial League, which provides social services to the homeless, mentally ill and substance abusers.

They spent five days cleaning, doing maintenance work and meeting people who use the shelter operated by the 80-year-old agency.

The volunteers, affiliated with the Baptist Temple Church in Huntington, W.Va., traveled by van to work in the nine buildings of the league — former warehouses west of the Loop that were donated by several corporations.

"They came here to experience another kind of life, another type of existence," said Richard Roberts, the league's executive director. Renee Childers, 21, a sophomore at Huntington's Marshall University, said the experience hit home.

"I think it is something to really make me grow up," she said. "I didn't like how my life is going. It was at a standstill, and I needed something to get me going."

She said she was impressed with the people she worked with.

"I was sort of afraid at first because of the homeless I saw in Huntington," she said. "I will look at the people at home differently now. (These) people have hopes and goals. They want to get their lives back in order."

The trip was the idea of Greg Creasy, the Huntington church's youth leader who visited the shelter last summer as a member of a singing group. He said a car wash and dinner was held to raise money for the trip.

"We worked hard to get here and worked hard here," he said.

In addition to cleaning off years of grease and grime in a kitchen, the group cleared a basement of debris accumulated during the decades the buildings were used as warehouses.

"They did a major service for us by cleaning out that area, eliminating a fire hazard," said Roberts. "It will allow us to store more food donated for the homeless."

Roberts said the league helps about 400 people a day. It has a full-time staff of 18, and depends on the homeless for much of the work to maintain its facilities.

The league is located in an area that once was Chicago's Skid Row. It is now a focus of intense redevelopment, including an upscale apartment complex two blocks away.

"It is not uncommon to see people lined up to use the soup kitchens, while Jaguars, Mercedes-Benzes and Cadillacs drive by," said Roberts. It was something also noted by Creasy.

"There is a great need here," he said. "And to go across the street and see great wealth, it is sort of shocking to see that."

Roberts said he could understand the jolt the volunteers received, coming from their middle class surroundings in West Virginia.

"They were in the bowels of the inner city, working with ex-felons, recovering alcoholics, and women who have been abused," he said.

"It was the most amazing trip I have had in my entire life," said Ms. Childers.

Gunman Kills Two, Then Shoots Himself

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LITTLETON, Colo. — A man with an insatiable appetite for cocaine killed two women with a semiautomatic gun and wounded two deputies and a hostage before killing himself during 10 hours of rape and terror, authorities said.

Eugene Thompson Jr., 20, of Littleton, was armed with a MAC-11 assault pistol when he broke into a woman's suburban Denver house early Thursday and began his crime spree.

The rampage, during which he raped two women, ended in a gun-battle at a townhouse as 100 officers searched house-to-house for him.

Thompson opened fire on the two officers who burst into the townhouse, hitting one in the chest and neck and the other in the leg, authorities said. He then shot 18-year-old Jake Carper four times in the back, went upstairs and shot himself in the head.

"A madman, it appears, is what we have," said Douglas County Sheriff Steve Zotos. "We were hoping it wouldn't end this way, but I don't know of any other way it could have ended. There is just no reason to this whole thing."

Thompson died at a hospital three hours after he shot himself.

Carper, who lives in the townhouse, remained in critical condition.

Arapahoe County Deputy Arthur L. Hilton, 37, was in serious condition with wounds to the chest. Deputy Daniel Thomas, 36, was released after treatment.

Thompson, a suspect in at least 140 thefts and burglaries, was wanted on arrest warrants that were issued Monday for his failure to appear in Golden District Court for probation revocation, authorities said.

He had been enrolled in a cocaine residence treatment program as part of his probation for thefts but was kicked out after being caught stealing, said Eugene Strauber.

Two men are nailed to crosses in crucifixion re-enactment

Filipinos Observe Crucifixion Ritual

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN PEDRO CUTUD, Philippines — At least 11 people were nailed to crosses and thousands of Filipinos beat their backs bloody today as the only Christian nation in Asia commemorated the crucifixion and death of Jesus Christ.

About 5,000 people, including foreign tourists and U.S. servicemen from nearby Clark Air Base, gathered on a rice field to watch men dressed as Roman centurions hammer nails into the palms and feet of Mario Castro and six other "Christs."

The crucifixions have been an annual ritual for decades in this village 40 miles north of Manila. They have become tourist attractions in recent years, complete with stalls selling food, soft drinks, straw hats, fans and other souvenirs.

At the village entrance, the Department of Tourism posted a sign saying "Fiesta Islands," the theme of its current campaign to attract foreign tourists to the economically pressed country.

This year, the spectacle attracted seven "Christs," all voluntarily performing the ritual of having themselves nailed for reasons ranging from atonement for sins and thanksgiving for favors to requests for a bright future.

In Kapitangan in neighboring Bulacan province, Luciana Reyes, 30, had her palms and feet nailed to a wooden cross for the 13th straight year. Another woman was also to have been crucified, but she screamed in pain when the nails pierced her palms and the ritual was discontinued.

In Manila, about 3,000 union members and residents of city slums held their own "Calvary of the Poor," a four-hour series of demonstrations with a march from the Senate toward the Presidential Palace. They were protesting policies of President Corazon Aquino's government, which they say favor wealthy businessmen and multinational companies.

Catholics Ignore Ban On Washing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — Bishop John Donoghue's order to exclude women from Holy Thursday foot-washing ceremonies in the Diocese of Charlotte didn't stop some Catholics from arranging alternatives.

About 30 people, most of them women, gathered at the home of Barney Offerman and Jan Valder-Offerman in Charlotte on Thursday evening for a joyful service of foot-washing, anointing, scripture, song and prayer.

"We are here not to defy the bishop but to affirm the role of women in the church," said the Rev. George Kloster, a priest of the Charlotte diocese who is on sabbatical in Atlanta. "We want to celebrate this rite as it's being done in most places in the country."

For Catholics, foot-washing is an optional part of the Holy Thursday service, which commemorates Jesus' last supper with his disciples.

Donoghue drew national attention by limiting the ceremonial foot-washing to men for the first time. The leader of the 46-county Diocese of Charlotte said he was following Vatican guidelines. Dissenters said he offended women by promoting sexism and inequality.

The liturgy in the Offermans' living room didn't include the Eucharist, or holy communion, a traditional part of Holy Thursday services. But there was foot-washing for all.

After a brief homily, worshipers stripped off boots, shoes, socks and stockings. Kloster made his way around the room with a pottery bowl and a stack of cotton towels.

Kneeling before each person, the priest took a pitcher of water from 6-year-old Sean Puglisi and poured it over waiting feet. He wiped each foot dry and kissed the instep before moving on.

Kloster said foot-washing, described in the Gospel of John, was a symbol of Jesus' humble service to others.

"We are here not so much to lament and protest," the priest said, "but to try to heal the pain and hurt and indignation. ... Our challenge as faith-filled people is to demand the freedom to live our faith."

Donoghue omitted foot-washing from the Holy Thursday service at St. Patrick's Cathedral, mother church of the 74,000-member diocese.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the book of I Samuel intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

DAVID'S fighting courage
SAUL, IN SEEKING A WAY TO SAFEGUARD HIS KINGDOM FROM DAVID, HAS NOW THOUGHT OF A PLAN IN WHICH HE WILL USE HIS DAUGHTER MICHAL, TO RID HIMSELF OF DAVID...

French Child Care Is Model For World

By Marilyn August
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS — Two-year-old Margaux, Lorraine and Claire are busy bathing their dolls. Zoe is sponge-painting. Three other toddlers paste spots inside a drawing of a big blue fish.

In the next room excited 15-month-olds throw rubber balls into a plastic swimming pool and then jump in.

In France, where women make up 42 percent of the work force, collective infant care subsidized by federal and local funds is a way of life for nearly 335,000 children, rich and poor, under the age of 3.

To get a first-hand look at France's much-admired system, 14 U.S. child-care experts recently spent two weeks touring nearly two dozen day care centers, pre-schools and drop-in centers in Paris and the provinces.

They met with French child care professionals and government officials, looking for ways to improve child care services in the United States.

"In the U.S., we're still light years away from what we've seen here," said Evelyn K. Moore, executive director of the National Black Child Development Institute in Washington, D.C., who took part in the visit sponsored by the French-American Foundation.

"We're not used to seeing children of these ages participate in such highly structured activities. They're so happy and involved."

Eleven-month-old Caroline Labonou has been in day care since she was 5 months old. Her parents, both university professors, say they could afford costly private care at home, but they believe day care, or the "creche" as it is called here, provides Caroline the best care possible along with beneficial contact with other babies.

"Our primary concern was having complete confidence in child-care workers," said Jeannine Revel, Caroline's mother. "They're trained professionals who understand children, know what to do in emergencies or when children get sick."

In France child care aides pass competitive entrance exams and receive special training including nursing skills. Day care center directors are registered nurses who have had additional training plus five years of day care experience.

The law requires one aide for every five infants who do not walk, and one aide for every eight who do walk. Each center has its own pediatrician, child psychologist and dietician who make two visits weekly, along with a full-time laundress, cook and cleaning personnel.

"In the U.S. we basically have untrained people working in child care. In France, child care is considered a profession and has status," said Susanne Martinez, legislative counsel to Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif.

Mrs. Revel said the locale — a cheerful, brand-new facility designed to handle young children — was another reason she opted for day care.

"It's very safe. The children aren't being told constantly not to do this or that. Their only restraints are with regard to each other."

Health and safety regulations are a major concern for child care advocates in France and the United States. While many mothers say children in day care are sick more frequently than children kept at home, child care professionals disagree.

Betty Caldwell, professor of early childhood education at the University of Arkansas in Little Rock, says statistics show that infants under 12 months in day care get 10 colds a year as opposed to 8 colds for children who stay home.

"Out of 66 children here, there are always about a dozen who are sick, and they're always the same ones," said Nada Fintzler, the director of a day care center in central Paris.

American experts are also examining French day care funding. Parents pay the equivalent of $1.50 to $18.00 a day, on a sliding scale linked to their income.

Officials say the overall costs for a single day of child care in Paris is about $33 and up to $50 in the provinces. Parent fees cover roughly 30 percent of operating costs. National and municipal government funds make up the difference.

"I'm especially impressed by France's commitment to child care from the national level down to the municipal level, and the integration of support from each level," Ms. Martinez said.

French municipalities pay for building child care facilities and provide equipment. The Education Ministry oversees pre-school teacher training and the Social Affairs Ministry handles child care aids.

Several experts said they were surprised by the French system's near universal availability.

"What strikes me is that programs in France are for all kinds of families, whereas in the United States, the care would be directed towards low-income and disadvantaged families," said David Edie, a day care specialist at the Wisconsin Department of Health and Social Services.

He said the proposed Act for Better Child Care, known as the ABC

The Associated Press

Toddlers romp in a Paris day care center

bill in Congress in Washington, targets only low-income families.

It would earmark $2.5 billion to provide more child care facilities, upgrade training for child care workers, subsidize the care costs for low-income families and create resource and referral services.

Edie called the bill "a drop in the bucket" and said it would not affect middle-class double-income families who would still have to scramble for costly private care.

France's child care system is an extension of family policies adopted decades ago to counter a falling birth rate and population devastation wrought by war.

Edie says the French have understood better than most that child care is not just a baby-sitting service, but an educational experience.

"We can learn a lot from the French," said Mrs. Moore. "It's clear their government has made a firm commitment to young children and families. We're just not there yet, but child care is a service whose time has come."

At Mrs. Fintzler's day care center in Les Halles, nearly 100 children from 2 months to 3 years of age are engaged in different activities.

The 2-year-olds bang on drums and blow into recorders. Afterwards, they lie on the floor breathing deeply to relax.

"We focus on introducing new physical sensations and experiences," Mrs. Fintzler said. Earlier, the toddlers took off their clothes and slid around in soft white flour, "learning about softness and slipperiness."

The tots also love splashing finger paint all over each others' naked bodies, learning about "sexual difference" and losing "inhibitions about what's clean or dirty," she said.

Give Young Time Alone

NYU MEDICAL CENTER

Filling a child's day with activity can be too much of a good thing. With the best intentions, parents may be depriving their child of the tools needed to develop self-reliance and self-esteem, according to a psychiatrist at New York University Medical Center.

"A child whose every waking moment is planned does not learn to amuse himself or herself, something that fosters healthy feelings of self-reliance," said Dr. Richard A. Oberfield, clinical associate professor of psychiatry. "Children who live under a constant barrage of entertainments may become bored or panicky when the merry-go-round of activity is not spinning at top speed."

An article in an upcoming issue of the center's Health Letter explains that overprogramming is a relative concept; the specifics depend on the individual child and situation. In general, it refers to a daily structure that permits a child very little time to decide independently what to do.

"This is a common problem for school-age children, and it is beginning to be seen in those as young as 2 and 3," Oberfield said. "The phenomenon usually fades by early adolescence, because 11- or 12-year-olds tend to assert themselves. The over-programmed child may be among the first to want to break out, to be 'free to do nothing,' to hang out with friends, or just to be alone."

One of the dangers Oberfield observed in the excessive offering of gymnastics and music lessons, painting and dance classes, reading and other tutorials, and closely supervised parent-initiated play dates is the introduction of a competitive element that can be stressful to children.

Will Our Children Dream The American Dream?

CHANGING TIMES

One enduring feature of the American Dream is the belief that no matter how well we do, our kids can do even better. But a growing number of economists warn that unless some things change, this particular part of the Dream is in more danger than any other.

Americans have adapted to make other segments of the Dream possible despite some economic trends that have been working against us. Most seriously, pay has stagnated, barely keeping up with inflation since 1973. Overall, families managed to keep their incomes rising mostly by adding a second paycheck and cutting back on the size of their families. More paychecks and fewer kids equals more income per capita despite flat earnings.

But the string has about run out, says Changing Times magazine. The proportion of women working outside the home is probably about as high as it's going to get. The birthrate has begun to hold its ground, too. With everybody already working and families no longer shrinking, there's no way to keep per capita income rising without increasing our income. And there's no way to do that without increasing productivity — the word that surely will be the economic buzzword of the 1990s.

Productivity, simply defined, is output per hour of work. Every factory supervisor knows the principle: The more cars or washing machines or checking-account statements you crank out in an hour, the less each unit costs to produce. That's productivity. And the more productive you are, the more your employer can afford to pay you.

Unfortunately, U.S. productivity hasn't been anything to shout about lately. Productivity growth in the 1950s and '60s averaged 2.5 percent per year, then slowed to less than 1 percent for most of the '70s before perking up a little in the '80s. Over the last couple of years, growth has been about 1.3 percent, which most economists agree isn't enough.

University of Michigan economist Paul McCracken, writing in the "Wall Street Journal," predicts that if the trends of the 1980s continue, Japan's per capita income will top ours by 40 percent in the next decade and real incomes in France and West Germany will also be higher than in the U.S.

To Americans, those would be startling developments. To your children or grandchildren, they would be especially discouraging. The trouble is, boosting productivity isn't just a matter of working harder at our jobs. It depends mostly on business investing more and government spending less. An analysis of the problem by Rebuild America, a nonprofit group, calls for government policies that will encourage saving by individuals and investment by businesses.

So the prosperity of the next generation will depend largely on policies encouraging the growth rate of productivity. Productivity will determine the overall level of earnings in the 1990s and beyond.

But what about your kids? To help assure they get a fair share of the pie, get them the best education you can, says Changing Times maga-

Culture Shock Hard On Many Who Move

By Joy Aschenbach
NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC

How can the distance between Washington and Los Angeles be less than the distance between Washington and, say, Columbia, Mo.?

When the three geographic points are measured in "psychic" distance. Psychic distance is the cultural distance, or difference, between places. Geographers evaluate it in analyzing what motivates people to migrate from one place to another.

"The farmer who moves from New Hampshire to Iowa, from one farming world to another, has to overcome less psychic distance than the Iowa farmer who moves fewer miles to Chicago," explains Christopher Salter, chairman of the geography department at the University of Missouri.

Even a move across the Atlantic from Paris to Washington would be easier than a change from Washington to Peoria, Ill., Salter says.

Of the four possible migration streams, the move from an urban to rural environment is considered the toughest. And "the greater the psychic distance," he says, "the greater the chance of a failed migration."

With tremendous psychic distance to overcome, a person may decide to stay put, leave for but never reach his destination, or get there and return in a short time.

The person who flees Los Angeles for a small town in California's Central Valley, Salter says, may find he can't get his foreign car repaired conveniently, can't buy the gourmet food he enjoys, and can't rent sophisticated movies. The big city isn't so bad after all, he concludes, and heads back.

The easiest moves are urban to urban or rural to rural. Most 20th-century Americans and a growing number of people in the rest of the world have opted for the middle road: the rural-to-urban route.

In less than 200 years, the United States has made a complete turnaround, with nearly 80 percent of Americans now living in metropolitan areas. If the current trend continues through 1999, the decade of the 1970s will rank as the only period in the 20th century with a reverse flow — from urban to rural.

"The '70s were a surprise," says demographer Diane DeAre of the U.S. Census Bureau, who reports an increasingly higher ratio of metropolitan to non-metropolitan growth in the 1980s.

The '70s phenomenon can be attributed to greater employment in mining because of the energy crisis and to decentralization in the manufacturing industry, which not only brought plants and people to rural areas, but kept people from leaving, explains Calvin Beale, leading demographer of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

"Psychic distance also lessened," he told National Geographic. "People did not feel they lost the esteem of their peers by moving to smaller communities. With the environmental movement and the antimaterialistic spirit, urban refugees got their kids out of the cities and back to the land."

The development of retirement communities in rural and resort areas, not only in Florida and the Southwest, added to the outflow, he says.

After 1980, Beale says, the urban-to-rural movement dwindled. There was the farm crisis, recession, a restored reputation for cities and a waning popularity among urbanites for an alternative environment.

Since 1983, the population of the majority of non-metropolitan counties has been declining, Beale says.

Skin Cancer Has A High Rate 'Down Under'

By Richard Bill
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SYDNEY, Australia — Australia boasts up to 14 hours of sunlight a day and some of the world's best beaches, with a lifestyle to match — but has the world's highest rate of skin cancer, and experts say it's getting worse.

In one day recently at fashionable Cottesloe beach near Perth, random screening of 438 beach-goers by the West Australia Cancer Foundation turned up 24 people with previously undetected life-threatening cancers called melanomas.

Multiply that by the scores of thousands of Australians to whom sunbathing is a national pastime

"and you understand the extent of the problem," said Dr. Joyce Ford, Director of the New South Wales Central Cancer Registry.

Australia's incidence of skin cancer is "five or six times" that of anywhere else, said Bill McCarthy, who runs a melanoma clinic at Royal Prince Alfred Hospital. "The average Australian has a two in three chance of getting non-malignant skin cancer during their lifetime."

Last year, 140,000 new skin cancer cases were reported nationwide. In a population of 16.5 million, Ford said, "that's alarming."

The government of Prime Minister Bob Hawke has allocated the equivalent of $30 million (U.S.) this year for cancer protection programs. It also created a TV campaign urging beach-goers to "slip, slop and slap" on sun creams.

"The problem is a lot of people don't use them properly," Ford said.

And despite the campaign, McCarthy said, 90 percent of 2,000 schoolchildren aged 9 to 16 in a survey in Sydney didn't believe they were at risk.

"People tend to think of skin cancer as something that might become malignant and will have to be cut out," Ford said. "So they might wear a hat, it doesn't occur to them that they can die."

"Australians essentially are Europeans in a tropical climate. We live in a hostile environment and have not evolved genetically to cope with the sun."

Because it's summer Down Under when it's winter in the northern hemisphere, the country boasts a beach culture that attracts tourists worldwide. Tourism is growing at a rate of 25 percent a year, and 2 million people visited last year.

"In all our publications sent overseas we remind visitors to wear hats and cover themselves with sun-tan lotion to protect themselves from the sun," said a tourism official, adding there is no way to gauge the impact of warnings.

"People who visit Australia should be very careful about the sun's rays," Ford said. "People still do silly things by going out in the sun at the wrong time of day without any protection."

McCarthy's clinic treated 800

melanoma victims in 1988 and performed 1,600 skin cancer operations. Skin cancer cost Australia $400 million (U.S.) a year in treatment and working days lost, he said.

Melanomas, which often resemble irregular, enlarging or inflamed moles, are the most severe form of skin cancer, and the sixth biggest killer in Australia.

"It's quite frightening," McCarthy said.

The incidence of melanomas among Caucasian Australians is an average 25 per 100,000 people — about even for both sexes — ranging from 38 per 100,000 in sub-tropical Queensland in the north to 14 per 100,000 in southernmost Tasmania. By comparison, the rate in Birmingham, England, is 1.6 cases per 100,000 males and 3.3 per 100,000 females. In San Francisco, it's 12.4 per 100,000 males and 10.9 per 100,000 females.

"Most of the people we see got skin cancers between the ages of two and 20. Skin cancers take years to show up. After 20, most people change their lifestyle by going to work and don't spend so much time at the beach," said Australian Cancer Society executive director Laurie Wright.

"I'm really frightened of the skin cancer threat," said Glenda Seers, 32, whose aunt died of melanoma in 1976. "I used to go to the beach every weekend. The way skin cancer has been publicized has made me frightened. I think the best thing is to stay out of the sun."

American Middle Class Shrinking

CHANGING TIMES

There's little doubt about it anymore: The middle class is shrinking. But that isn't necessarily bad news. Evidence suggests that the primary direction of movement out of the middle class is up, not down.

And we're doing it the old-fashioned way, by the sweat of our brow. "Families are getting richer because more family members are working," says Marvin Koters, director of economic policy studies at the American Enterprise Institute. But there's some troubling news here, says Changing Times magazine.

Because average, inflation-weighted earnings have been mostly stagnant for the past 15 years for many families, adding another income to the household has been the only way that they could stay in the middle class. Those who couldn't add a second paycheck — single women with children, for instance — have had the most trouble hanging on.

So what is the middle class? Economists generally define the middle class as those in the middle of the nation's income distribution. That seems obvious enough, but it isn't.

The Brookings Institution pegs the range at between $20,000 and $50,000 annual income. Economists Michael Horrigan and Steven Haugen work with a range of $20,000 to $56,000.

In "Dollars and Dreams" (Norton; $7.95), economist Frank Levy writes that being in the middle class also involves attitudes: "An emphasis on formal education, a preference for reasoning over physical violence, an expectation of a stable career with a period of retirement."

Brookings found that the share of families earning $50,000 or more adjusted for inflation — the "upper" class — rose 38 percent between 1973 and 1986. At the same time, the middle class has shrunk, and the "lower" class — those earning less than $20,000 — has stayed about the same size. Horrigan and Haugen, using slightly different income breaks, found roughly the same pattern.

Beneath the shifts lie some portentous demographic changes, says Changing Times magazine. Families headed by people over age 65, who have traditionally been concentrated in the lower class, have climbed into the middle class, thanks mostly to inflation-indexed Social Security benefits and the value of their private pensions. This shift in status surely must be counted as a significant success for government policies in these areas over the past 20 years or so.

Single women with children have moved into the lower class as the over-65s moved out. A third of all children are living in families with incomes of less than $20,000, and one out of six is living below the poverty line.

Concludes the Brookings study: "The standard picture of a shrinking middle class with growing concentrations at the top and bottom is not a good description of all families taken together, but it is not a bad description of all families who have children."

The high visibility of prosperous households with income from husband-and-wife professionals has created the impression of the shrinking middle class, says Koters. It would be more accurate, he notes, to say that definitions have changed: The middle class has expanded into a higher income bracket. It's clear many of the families who have managed to climb into the upper class have done it by adding a second paycheck.

Finding ways to get incomes rising again will be the main challenge for government and business in the 1990s.

Mr. Ward, Miss Kurki Are Married

NEW YORK — Allison Kurki and Charles Stuart Ward Jr. were united in marriage in John Street Methodist Church March 11 at 6 p.m.

The Rev. Warren L. Danks officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kurki of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Dr. and Mrs. Charles S. Ward of Greenville, N.C. The bridegroom is the grandson of Edna Earle Baker of Farmville, N.C., and Annie Dare Ward of Bethel, N.C.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. The matron of honor was her sister, Lisa Budd of Fort Lauderdale. The father of the bridegroom was best man.

Bridesmaids included Elizabeth Ward of Greenville, Anne Watson of Philadelphia and Carolyn Browne of California.

Ushers were Gregg Ward of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, Peter Kurki of Fort Lauderdale, brother of the bride, and Brent Holbrook of Florida.

Music was provided by Clark Lewis, Anne Watson, Pego Hodes and Gregg Ward.

Harry Zittel of New York was ring bearer.

The bride wore a formal gown featuring a fitted bodice with a bow in back.

The bride attended the University of Virginia and is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston. The bridegroom is a graduate of East Carolina University, where he played football for four years. Both are now studying acting in New York.

A reception dinner-dance was held at Giovanni's Italian Restaurant following the ceremony and was given by the bride's parents. The wedding party was entertained by the bridegroom's parents at a dinner following the rehearsal at Julia's Restaurant, also in New York.

The bride was given a shower-luncheon prior to the wedding.

Though 'Dog-Tired,' They're Full Of Compassion

Dear Abby: Some will think this is silly, but it's a real problem to our family. I hope you can help us decide what to do.

We got a puppy from the pound; he was supposed to be a sheltie mix. He now weighs 100 pounds, has allergies, hip dysplasia, unpredictable incontinence, predictable flatulence and an unpleasant personality. He's crochety (who wouldn't be with all these problems?), but he isn't mean.

Trying to find another home for him has not worked (surprise, surprise!). We could "put him to sleep," but being obnoxious is not a capital offense. We enjoy our other cats and dogs, so it's not as though we don't know how to care for animals. Can you think of any ethical options that would relieve us of him, yet give him a safe and not lonely life? — Dog-Tired In Portland

Dear Dog-Tired: Bless you. Only a compassionate animal lover would be seeking "ethical options." Since the ailing animal will not be easy to place, you must be very sure that if someone agrees to take him, he will not be abused or turned out. Better to put him to sleep. If you regard this as an unthinkable option, please read the following:

In Memory Of 'Beau'
"Treat me kindly, my beloved friend, for no heart in all the world is more grateful for kindness than the loving heart of me."
"Do not break my spirit with a stick, for though I might lick your hand between the blows, your patience and understanding will more quickly teach me the things you would have me learn."
"Speak to me often, for your voice is the world's sweetest music, as you must know by the fierce wagging of my tail when your footstep falls upon my waiting ear."

"Please take me inside when it is cold and wet, for I am a domesticated animal, no longer accustomed to bitter elements. I ask no greater glory than the privilege of sitting at your feet beside the hearth."
"Keep my pan filled with fresh water, for I can't tell you when I'm thirsty."
"Feed me clean food that I may stay well, to romp and play and do your bidding, to walk by your side, and stand ready, willing and able to protect you with my life."
"And, my friend, when I am very old, and I no longer enjoy good health, hearing and sight, do not make heroic efforts to keep me going. I am not having any fun. Please see that my trusting life is taken gently. I shall leave this earth knowing with the last breath I draw that my fate was always safest in your hands."

Choosing Fabric And Color Wisely Will Make A Wardrobe More Versatile

NEW YORK — Many winter clothes, such as those made of fur and mohair, are "season specific" and should be packed away as soon as the threat of frost has passed. But clothes of many other fabrics easily carry over from winter to spring, indeed can be worn year-round.

Jean Gilbert, senior vice president of fashion merchandising at Ann-Taylor, says fashions of wool crepe and silk are good investments because they are transitional.

"Wool crepe is a good basic fabric that is lightweight and crisp," she says. "Suits made of this material carry over nicely, especially in basic colors such as ivory, black and taupe."

Other clothes and fabrics that work well in winter as well as spring:

- Skirts, short jackets and pants in silk, such as silk dupioni, can be worn in December as well as April and even carry over into the summer months. Colors such as red, black, navy or dark background prints can also work year-round. This fabric travels well and looks great for day or evening.

— A wardrobe "must" is a silk crepe de Chine blouse, for day or evening. How fussy or tailored it is is up to you.

— Cotton novelty sweaters have become year-round wardrobe staples, whether they are florals, patterns, polka dots, stripes, geometrics, plain.

— Merino wool sweaters in bright colors with gold buttons are fashionable, lightweight and versatile.

— Finer gauge cotton-knit cardigans or pullovers are ideal for layering. They can be worn under suits or with pants and skirts throughout the year.

With today's fabric selection, a woman's wardrobe can be less seasonal and more versatile.

Soviets Say Kiev Gravesite Holds Victims Of Stalin Era

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — A government commission has concluded that thousands of people buried in a mass grave outside Kiev were killed during Stalin's repressions, not by Nazi soldiers, Tass reported today.

The commission's conclusion supports the testimony of elderly witnesses in the nearby village of Bykovnia, who said they saw trucks dripping blood rumbling to the site in the 1930s, before the Nazis occupied the area.

Unofficial estimates say the grave contains 200,000 to 300,000 bodies.

Villagers in Bykovnia broke five decades of silence to accuse Josef Stalin's secret police after the Ukrainian government erected a monument in May 1988 blaming Nazi occupiers for the crime. The villagers in December forced Ukrainian authorities to establish the commission, saying three previous investigations had covered up the truth by blaming Nazi troops.

Today report by Tass, the official Soviet news agency, did not mention the earlier investigations.

Viktor Kulik, head of the investigating commission, told Tass that panelists found family names engraved on some objects in the grave.

"Examination of the archives later confirmed that the victims were 'people's enemies' charged in the 1930s with counterrevolutionary and nationalist activity, espionage and conspiracy," Tass said.

"Official confirmation has been given to the version that in the Darnitsa Forest near the village of Bykovnia outside the Ukrainian capital of Kiev are buried victims of the repressions of the 1930s," Tass said.

Western historians estimate 20 million Soviets were killed under Stalin, particularly during the Great Purge of the late 1930s. But Soviet officials ignored the dark side of Stalin for most of the past 50 years. The examination of Stalin's crimes began briefly under Nikita Khrushchev and was revived in 1987 under President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's policy of glasnost, or openness.

Earlier commissions blamed Nazis for the Bykovnia killings even though villagers insisted the bodies already were there when the Germans occupied Kiev in September 1941. Several villagers told The Associated Press they dug up the graves on orders of the Germans.

A local man, Mikola Lysenko, discovered the bones and skulls in 1987 after grave robbers uncovered them and set out on a personal crusade for the truth.

He located witnesses in Bykovnia and won support from the Ukrainian Writers' Union and the newly formed Memorial Society, which is dedicated to baring the truth of Stalin's crimes.

Lysenko was unavailable for comment today as he does not have a telephone.

U.S. Reluctance To Publicize Air Threats Criticized

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Government reluctance to make public an air terrorism threat in Europe is bringing new calls from relatives of the Pan Am Flight 103 bombing victims for disclosure of all serious threats against commercial aviation.

White House, State Department and Transportation Department officials all attempted on Thursday to downplay the hijacking threat against U.S. airlines in Western Europe. Still, some officials, Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner in particular, expressed anger that it was released to the public in leaks to British news media.

But several relatives of victims of the Dec. 21 bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Scotland said they believe the way the government handles terrorism bulletins warns diplomatic and military personnel while keeping other potential passengers uninformed about risks.

British investigators have concluded that a terrorist bomb concealed in a radio-cassette player blew up the Boeing 747 over Scotland, killing all 259 people aboard and 11 others on the ground in Lockerbie, Scotland.

The relatives, in telephone interviews, criticized government failure to provide the public with information about terrorist warnings, such as the March 16 memorandum sent by the Federal Aviation Administration to airlines, airports and European security officials.

The FAA acknowledged the existence of the memo, but declined to discuss its contents, which were nonetheless reported by the Daily Express and other London news media.

The newspaper said a hijacking by three Palestinians was threatened during the Easter weekend. U.S. officials denied that the bulletin contained any reference to this weekend. They also denied the newspaper's assertion that U.S. diplomatic and military personnel were warned of the threat.

President Bush, in an interview published today, rejected the idea of blanket public warnings, saying that could encourage "a lot of crackpots" to call with threats.

"But it is prudent, and that's the existing directive ... to allow the security people to know about these things and to take ... as many precise steps as possible as relating to an individual flight," Bush said in the interview with The Washington Times.

Relatives of the Lockerbie victims say the lack of public notification puts travellers at unnecessary risk.

"We don't think they should use the American public as live bait," said Colleen Hermann, of Huntington, N.Y., whose brother John Michael Ahern was killed on Flight 103.

Bert Ammerman, a spokesman for the relatives of Lockerbie victims, said the group is not calling for general public announcements every time there is a terrorist threat.

But he said that until "prudent security measures" can be taken to protect American carriers throughout the world, a telephone number should be set up for travellers to call to get information on any threat against a flight they plan to take.

Personal Incomes Go Up By 1 Percent

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Americans' personal income increased a strong 1 percent in February while spending rose at half that pace, as people diverted more of their earnings into savings, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said income rose to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $4.32 trillion last month, following a robust revised gain of 1.7 percent in January.

Consumer spending, meanwhile, rose 0.5 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $3.38 trillion in February after increasing a revised 0.4 percent in January.

Most of the gain in personal consumption expenditures, which include virtually all consumer spending except interest payments on debt, came in increased spending for services. Analysts said that was partly a reflection of an upturn in heating bills last month after January's mild weather.

Spending on services rose 1 percent last month, while purchases of non-durable goods edged up 0.1 percent and spending on durable goods declined 0.3 percent, held back in part by slow car sales.

Most analysts expect gains in income and spending to slow this year in response to a campaign by the Federal Reserve Board to nudge up interest rates and relieve inflationary pressures on the economy.

Other government reports for February have suggested an economie slowdown already may be setting in, with declines recorded in retail sales, housing construction, factory operating rates and orders for durable goods.

Last month's changes in income and spending bolstered the personal savings rate — savings as a percentage of after-tax income — to 5.9 percent from 5.4 percent in January. February's rate matched the savings level set in April 1986 and hasn't been surpassed since May 1985, when the rate was 6.4 percent.

February's increase in personal income included a large increase in farm subsidy payments. Excluding that effect, income rose 0.7 percent last month.

Disposable, or after-tax, income increased 1.1 percent in February after a 1.7 percent gain a month earlier.

Wages and salaries, a key component of personal income, rose 0.6 percent to $2.57 trillion in February following a 1.1 percent gain in January.

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Plans to scrape hundreds of acres of pristine wilderness in Transylvania County down to bare earth for a $3.3 billion pumped storage facility have been shelved by Duke Power Co.

Instead, the company will meet the growing demand for electricity by building conventional coal and combustion turbine power plants, spokesman Joe Maher said.

Michigan Tops Tar Heels, 92-87

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Glen Rice scored 34 points Thursday night and Michigan beat North Carolina 92-87 in the Southeast Regional semifinals, avenging losses to the Tar Heels in the NCAA tournament the last two seasons.

Michigan, 27-7, will meet Virginia, 22-10, on Saturday with the winner advancing to the Final Four next weekend at Seattle. Virginia upset fourth-ranked and top-seeded Oklahoma 86-80 earlier Thursday night.

The victory was the third for the Wolverines in as many games under interim head coach Steve Fisher, who took over 48 hours before the tournament began when Bill Frieder accepted the head coaching position at Arizona State.

"To say we're pleased and proud would be a gross understatement," Fisher said. "Our kids displayed a lot of character, determination and grit tonight."

"Michigan basketball took a great step forward tonight. This tournament means Michigan has gone further than it has since 1976 (actually 1977)."

Rice had eight 3-pointers in the game, but the last two were the biggest.

His 3-pointer with 3:47 left gave the 10th-ranked Wolverines the lead for good at 86-83, and his last of the game came with 1:04 to play and gave Michigan a 90-85 lead.

"He just shot well tonight," J.R. Reid said. "He hit some tough shots. That's why he's the great player he is."

Fifth-ranked North Carolina, 29-8, did get within 90-87 on a layup by J.R. Reid with 51 seconds left. Michigan's Rumeal Robinson missed the front end of a 1-and-1 with 47 seconds left, but Reid missed a turnaround jumper with 29 seconds left and Sean Higgins made two free throws two seconds later for the final margin.

"Michigan's playing with a cause with all that's happened," UNC coach Dean Smith said. "It's still (former coach) Bill Frieder's team, but you've got to give credit to (in-

UNLV Tops 'Cats; Bucs Beat Indiana

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER — He could well be one of college basketball's worst hand-cappers, but Jerry Tarkanian is going to the NCAA West Regional final anyway.

Tarkanian, acknowledging he was the only member of the Nevada-Las Vegas delegation who thought his team would lose to top-ranked Arizona on Thursday night, admitted he missed on the night's three other games as well.

Tark's Rebels upset Arizona 68-67 on freshman guard Anderson Hunt's 3-point basket with four seconds left. In the other West Regional semifinal, Seton Hall upended Indiana 78-65.

"I picked Indiana and Arizona, so that shows you what I know," Tarkanian said. Informed that Oklahoma had lost to Virginia and that North Carolina had bowed to Michigan in Southeast Regional, he said, "That's surprising. I wouldn't have thought so."

UNLV, 29-7, and Seton Hall, 29-6, will meet Saturday, with the winner advancing to the Final Four in Seattle.

It was a night of upsets, with the top two seeds in the West eating dust.

"It's nice to have underdogs win once in a while — as long as we're the underdogs," Tarkanian said.

After a closely contested first half, the Rebels squandered a seven-point lead with 5:35 left.

According to the calculations of Arizona coach Lute Olson, UNLV went 11 straight possessions without a basket down the stretch.

The Wildcats, sparked by Sean Elliott's 17 points in the half, failed to take a 67-65 lead with 1:35 left.

When Arizona's Matt Muehlebach was whistled for traveling with 30 seconds to go, UNLV had one last chance.

"We wanted to get the ball inside to (David) Butler or (George) Ackles, either one," Tarkanian said. "If we couldn't, we wanted to kick it back outside."

"We were the underdog, and I think when you're in that position you want to take the three-point shot, instead of the two. If we had been the favorite, we might have settled for a tie and overtime."

Hunt made a move to the basket and collided with Arizona guard Ken Lofton, who went sprawling.

"I looked to see whether he had just staggered or had fallen," Hunt said. "When I saw he was down, I put it up."

Olson said he "knew it was good from the instant it left his hands. That one was money, no question. Hunt shot the ball with rhythm all night long."

"He knocked it down from the perimeter and we didn't, and that basically was the difference," said Olson, whose team finished the year at 29-4. "This was an excellent basketball game. We only allowed them one basket in their last 12 possessions, and you can't ask for more than that. But you look at the numbers and the numbers say Anderson Hunt hit five-of-eight from three-point range."

Hunt paced the Rebels with 21 points, while Butler had 16 and Stacey Augmushooting and brutal interior defense to knock off Indiana.

Andrew Gaze, a transplanted Australian, hit four of the Pirates' eight 3-pointers. Meanwhile, the Seton Hall defense collapsed inside and made Indiana settle for shots on the perimeter, which it failed to convert with its usual efficiency. The Hoosiers hit only 2-of-7 from 3-point range and just 39 percent from 2-point range.

"Our interior defense was excellent," Seton Hall coach P.J. Carlesimo said. "When you play good defense, you can hang in the game. There were a couple of times where Indiana had us stuck on a number, but we didn't let them gain much ground on us."

With sharpshooting Indiana guard Jay Edwards sitting out most of the first half with two fouls, Seton Hall outscored the Hoosiers 12-3 in the final 6:05 of the half to take a 42-33 lead.

Gaze hit a 3-pointer to start the second half, giving the Pirates a 12-point lead, but Edwards & Co. chipped away, eventually drawing within 54-51.

But baskets by Gaze and Ramon Ramos, along with eight straight free throws, kept the Pirates in control.

Indiana coach Bobby Knight, whose team finished the year at 27-8, said Seton Hall's defensive pressure from 12 feet on in was "the best I've seen all year. I think Seton Hall is a stronger team than we are. They deserved to win. They're strong, tough kids — smart kids — and they played that way all night."

John Morton led Seton Hall with 17 points. Gaze had 16, Gerald Greene 15 and Ramos 12.

Edwards was tops for Indiana with 18, while Eric Anderson had 13 and Joe Hillman 12.

Virginia Stuns Oklahoma, 86-80

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Virginia knows that a full house beats a King any time.

The fifth-seeded Cavaliers got scoring from inside and outside Thursday night, dominated the backboards and stuck with their offensive game plan in beating top-seeded Oklahoma 86-80 in the semifinals of the NCAA Southeast Regional.

All-America center Stacey King scored 22 points for Oklahoma, but got only two in the first half and had trouble much of the night with Virginia's sagging defense.

"We as a team played together and stayed together during the whole game," said Richard Morgan, who scored 25 points and sparked a late Virginia run with a pair of 3-pointers. "I think we isolated certain guys at great times in the game."

If it wasn't Morgan hurting the Sooners, it was forward Bryant Stith, who scored 28. Or point guard John Crotty, who had 14 points, eight assists and only three turnovers. Or forward Brent Dabbs, who grabbed a career-high 14 rebounds.

Dabbs helped the Cavaliers out-rebound Oklahoma 38-26, including 17-9 on the offensive end. Virginia also outscored the Sooners 27-8 at the free throw line.

"We just got whipped tonight," said Coach Billy Tubbs, whose team became the first No. 1 seed to lose in the tournament.

"We just didn't make right plays at the right time," Tubbs said. "They just took it to us and should have won the ball game."

Oklahoma, 30-6 and runner-up in last year's NCAA Tournament, took a 7-2 lead in the opening three minutes. But Virginia's strong offensive rebounding gave the Cavaliers several second chances in an 8-2 run that gave them a 10-9 lead.

After that, Virginia, 22-10, opened as much as a seven-point lead on its way to a 42-35 halftime lead. Morgan

Defense Could Be The Key In Jaguar-Bear Matchup

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

CHAPEL HILL — When Farmville Central squares off against Bunker Hill for the state 2-A basketball championship Saturday, defense should be the determining factor in deciding who wins the game.

Although both teams will favor an up-tempo pace offensively in the 2 p.m. game at the Dean Smith Center, the team that manages to make the key plays on defense will probably come out the victor, according to the coaches.

"We work hard on defense," Farmville Central coach Mike Terrell said. "That's going to be the key to whatever takes place this weekend."

Bunker Hill coach Jim Woodruff agreed.

"Defense and hustle and overall desire will play a big role in who wins," Woodruff said. "We've had a lot of defense and desire all year long."

Offensively, Bunker Hill scored 118 points in one game this year and has been over the 80 point mark on 13 occasions during the season.

"They're (Bunker Hill) an upbeat tempo team that likes to run," Terrell said. "They have a lot of playoff experience and I'm looking for a balanced game. They, like us, come from a tough conference (Southern District Seven) and that helps a lot when you get to postseason play."

The Bears finished second in the Southern District Seven regular season standings to Newton-Conover, but managed to make amends for that in the West Region championship game when they topped Newton-Conover, 73-72, with a shot at the buzzer.

"We had played Newton-Conover three other times and had beaten them once," Woodruff said. "We were up by five with 50 seconds left in the (West Region title) game and they came back and took the lead with six seconds left when they tipped in a rebound. Naturally we felt like we had let another close one slip away, but we were fortunate enough to still be able to get off a shot at the end to win."

The problem for the Bears, according to Woodruff, may be matching up with the taller Jaguars. Farmville is led by junior center Jarvis Lang. The 6-5 Eastern Plains

Barrett Key Cog In Jag Game Plan

Senior Was Cut From JV Team As Freshman While At North Pitt

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

FARMVILLE — It was a play that had all the makings of a turnover, but Farmville Central forward Reggie Barrett turned it into a clip for the highlight reel.

In a regional semifinal game against Bunn last week in Fayetteville, Farmville guard Morris Foreman was out on a fast break and saw Barrett just ahead of him with his finger pointing up toward the basket. He released a lob pass that looked a bit too high and headed out of bounds.

Barrett watched the ball, timed his jump and in one motion caught the ball in his right hand and somehow slammed it through for two points.

"I was pointing up and I didn't think he'd throw it," Barrett said. "He did so I just went up and got it."

By game's end, Barrett had 20 points and Farmville found itself with a 85-72 win over Wildcats.

The Jaguars went on to defeat Wake Forest-Rolesville in the Regional finals, and Saturday at 2 p.m. they will take on Bunker Hill in the Dean E. Smith Student Activities Center in Chapel Hill to decide the 2-A state championship.

"Reggie has been a very pleasant surprise this year," Farmville coach

Mike Terrell said. "I always knew he had a lot of athletic ability but he's worked awful hard to develop his basketball skills."

Barrett, a senior, is a vital part of a Farmville team that has rolled up a 25-4 record this year en route to a regular season tie for the Eastern Plains Conference 2-A title, along with wins in both the Sectionals and the Regionals.

At 6-2½, Barrett is an explosive jumper and an effective mid-range shooter.

In a balanced Jaguar attack, he averages 12.9 points per game and 7.5 rebounds, second to 6-5 junior center Jarvis Lang, who averages 19 points and 11.1 rebounds per game.

"We're unselfish; everybody on the team is," Barrett said. "Jarvis does play a big role on our team, but we all play together. We try not to have a two-man team. We want everybody to contribute somehow."

Barrett has done just that. His development as a scoring threat has prevented teams from throwing all their defensive attention at Lang.

That's not bad for a guy who was cut from the North Pitt JV team as a ninth grader and, after transferring to Farmville, earned only a backup role on the Jaguars' JV team as a sophomore.

"It is amazing," Terrell said.

Rain Moves Pirate Drills Inside

Due to continued rains in Greenville, East Carolina's football team moved its third practice of the year inside Thursday. Pirate players worked out for two and a half hours in Minges Coliseum.

"Our players still have a lot to learn about our system, so I felt we needed to work out, even if it was indoors," ECU head coach Bill Lewis said. "Players have to stay on their feet in a workout like this, but the team will get something out of this practice."

A planned scrimmage for Friday was canceled because of the weather. Lewis, in his first year as Pirate head coach, said he has seen two very positive things about the program so far. "First, I am pleased with the organization of our coaches. They have done a great job teaching the players a new system. Second, the attitude of the team is outstanding. The players are eager and enthusiastic and really want to do well."

ECU's spring season will conclude April 22 with the annual Purple-Gold spring game. The spring game is part of the sixth annual Great Pirate Purple-Gold Pigskin Pigout Party, which starts April 20.

Four Coaches Among Win Leaders

Four area coaches rank among the winningest in the state in their respective sports, according to the North Carolina High School Athletic Association.

Rose High School baseball coach Ronald Vinson, Roanoke baseball coach Nolan Respass, Washington basketball coach Dave Smith and D.H. Conley volleyball coach Martha McCaskill are among the state's best when it comes to career victories.

Respass ranks seventh among active baseball coaches with 307 career victories while Vinson is eighth with 303. Records are through the end of the 1988 season.

The state leader in baseball is Chatham Central's Ronald Scott with 444. Bobby Carter of Roanoke Rapids, a member of the Northeastern Conference, is also on the list with 330.

Smith ranks seventh among active basketball coaches with 488 wins, not counting the current season. Fike's Harvey Reid leads the state with 751 win, against only 193 losses, and will seek his eighth state title on Saturday in Chapel Hill. Kingston's Paul Jones, like Reid, a member of the Big East Conference, is third with 557 wins.

McCaskill ranks ninth among volleyball coaches with 184 wins, counting this past season. Ann Harris of Durham Jordan leads the state with 399, while West Carteret's Carolyn Temple is third with 228. West Carteret, like Conley, is a member of the Coastal Conference.

Three other coaches who belong to conferences which include area teams are among the ranked. Two of them are in football, Daryl Allen of Hertford County and Harvey Brooks of C.B. Aycock. Allen is fifth with 227 wins while Brooks is ninth with 217. Clyde Parrish of Red Springs is the state leader with 263.

Eddie Summerlin of Fike is ninth among women's basketball coaches with 323 wins. Bill Rucker of Swannanoa C.D. Owen is first with 598.

No area coaches are listed among the soccer leaders. Dennis Baldwin of South Mecklenburg is the leader with 286.

Jamesville Easter Tournament Begins

JAMESVILLE — The annual Jamesville Easter Baseball Tournament will get underway Saturday at noon with four games slated.

Roanoke High School takes on Bear Grass in the noon game while Plymouth will face Columbia in the 2:30 p.m. contest. Washington meets Bath at 5 p.m., followed by Jamesville and Williamston at 7:30 p.m.

Monday, the afternoon losers will play at noon, with the evening losers at 2:30 p.m. The afternoon winners meet at 5 p.m. and the evening winners play at 7:30 p.m.

On Tuesday, the consolation bracket winners meet at 5 p.m. with the championship game at 7:30 p.m.

Forsman's 66 Leads USF&G Classic

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Dan Forsman fired an opening-round 66 to take a two-stroke lead over a group of six golfers in the $750,000 USF&G Classic.

Two strokes back at 68 were Greg Norman, Tim Simpson, Bill Sander, Tom Byrum, Pat McGowan and Lee Chill. Jim Hallet was alone at 69.

Tom Kite, winner of two consecutive tournaments and the hottest golfer on the tour, shot an opening-round 70, putting him into a tie with six other players.

Finney's Early Birdies Key Early Lead

PHOENIX (AP) — Allison Finney birdied her first three holes and her final four for a 7-under-par 66 and a two-shot lead over Beth Daniel after the first round of the $400,000 LPGA Turquoise Classic.

Finney, whose best finish in her seven-year LPGA career is a tie for second place at the 1985 Hall of Fame Championship, came within one stroke of tying Amy Alcott's course-record 65 set in last year's first round.

Evans Claims 500 Freestyle Event

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Janet Evans, who won three gold medals at last year's Summer Olympics, won the 500-yard freestyle Thursday night at the U.S. Swimming Short Course National Championships.

Evans won in 4 minutes, 38.82 seconds, well ahead of Pam Minthorn, who was second in 4:41.14. It was the second victory in as many nights for Evans, who won the 400-yard individual medley on Wednesday.

William Schwenk won a three-way battle of Florida swimmers to capture the 200-yard backstroke in 1:45.50.

Jim Harvey won the men's 100-yard freestyle in 43.85, while Jenny Thompson, won the women's race in 49.69.

Anne Mahoney was close to an American record pace in the 100-yard backstroke when she slammed her hand into the wall of the third turn hard enough to elicit an audible gasp from the capacity crowd of 2,000 at North Carolina's Koury Natatorium. But she maintained her composure and won in 55.72 seconds.

Tigers Trade King To White Sox

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — The Detroit Tigers traded right-hander Eric King to the White Sox Thursday in a series of three separate trades with three teams Thursday, and acquired outfielder Ken Williams from the Chicago.

From the New York Yankees, the Tigers acquired right-hander Charles Hudson for infielder Tom Brookens. From the San Diego Padres, the Tigers acquired infielder Mike Brumley for utility player Luis Salazar.

Tigers general manager Bill Lajoie said King was the key to the first deal, enabling Detroit to add youth and speed to its roster.

King, 24, spent parts of 1986 and 1988 and all of 1987 with the Tigers. The hard-throwing right-hander has a career record of 21-14.

Denver Offers Smith $7.5 Million Pact

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — Bruce Smith, the Buffalo Bills' two-time All-Pro defensive end, agreed Thursday to a deal with the Denver Broncos for what sources said is $7.5 million over five years.

The Bills now have a week to match the offer or allow Smith to go to Denver in return for two first-round draft choices under the old free-agent rules, which require compensation and right of first refusal.

There was no immediate word on what action the Bills would take. The 6-foot-4, 285-pound Smith was the first choice in the 1984 NFL draft and was second in the AFC last year with 11 sacks despite missing four games after being suspended for a second violation of the NFL's substance abuse rules.

A third violation would mean a full-year suspension, something Beake said the Broncos took into consideration. He said Coach Dan Reeves and owner Patrick Bowlen had interviewed Smith extensively "and are satisfied with the kid."

Rangers' Ryan May Miss Opener

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) — Nolan Ryan pulled his left calf muscle Thursday in a minor-league exhibition game and may not be able to pitch when the season begins in 10 days.

The 42-year-old Ryan, who signed a one-year contract with the Rangers last December for a guaranteed $2 million, said he felt the pull as he ran to cover first base for Tulsa of the Class AA Texas League, which was playing a Baltimore farm team. Ryan faced three batters, throwing 14 pitches, before departing.

Christy Cagle (8.8 rebounds and 6.5 assists) hit 3-point shot in regional finals to beat East Wilkes

Billikens Nip Lobos

Redmen Also Advance In NIT

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — After falling behind to New Mexico by 20 points at halftime, all St. Louis coach Rich Grawer wanted his team to do was to narrow the lead to 10 points by midway through the second half.

"We told them if we could get within 10 with 10 minutes to go, we'd be in fine shape," he said. "And lo and behold, with about 13 or 12 minutes to go we were only down seven."

"I told them, 'We're ahead of schedule.'"

With 10 minutes to go the Billikens had narrowed the lead to 51-49 on a Roland Gray rebound and foul shot.

Gray's basket off a Charles Newberry steal with 12 seconds remaining gave St. Louis a 66-65 victory over the Lobos and earned the Billikens a trip to New York for the National Invitation Tournament semifinals. They'll play Michigan State, 18-13, on Monday.

St. John's also advanced to the semifinals Thursday night with an 83-80 overtime victory over Ohio State. St. John's will take of Alabama-Birmingham in Monday's other game at Madison Square Garden. The championship is set for Wednesday.

New Mexico coach Dave Bliss said the game was typical of the season. "We still haven't won a big game," he said.

After falling behind for the first time, 59-58 on a Monroe Douglass basket with 3:39 left, New Mexico responded with a six-foot jumper by Charlie Thomas and a 3-pointer by Rob Robbins.

Luc Longley scored on a layin with 48 seconds remaining to give the Lobos a 65-64 lead. New Mexico didn't score again.

The Lobos had a chance to take a three-point lead with less than 20 seconds left, but Newberry stole the ball from Willie Banks in the corner and fed Gray under the basket for the winning score.

The Lobos had another chance with four seconds left, but Newberry again stole the ball and threw it in the air as time ran out.

Bliss said the problem for the Lobos was that nobody was willing to take charge.

"We had a complete lack of leadership on the floor, a complete lack of anything that remotely resembled any type of take-charge courage."

"We let them back in the ball game, and they took advantage of it."

Gray scored 34 points — 21 in the second half — and grabbed 11 rebounds to pace the Billikens, 26-9. Bonner added 16 points and 10 rebounds.

The Billikens used a zone press in the second half and forced 10 New Mexico turnovers.

It was the second straight come-from-behind victory for St. Louis in the NIT. On Monday night, the Billikens trailed Wisconsin 28-16 at halftime and came back to win 73-68.

For the Lobos, 22-11, it was the second straight year they lost at home in the NIT quarterfinals. Ohio State beat the Lobos 68-65 last season.

"That's the type of year we had," Robbins said. "That's the type of team we've been. I thought we choked."

Longley led the Lobos with 21 points, Robbins added 13 and Banks 10.

Grawer said he's proud of the way his team rallied twice on the road in the tournament.

"I don't think they wanted us in New York, but we're going."

St. John's 83, Ohio St. 80 OT

At Columbus, Ohio, Billy Singleton and Jason Buchanan scored four points apiece in overtime after St. John's, 18-13, overcame a 13-point second-half deficit.

St. John's won despite losing its leading scorer, Jayson Williams.

Defense Key...

Conference MVP averages 19.5 points and 11.5 rebounds per game.

"Their height overall might pose a problem for us in matching up on defense," Woodruff said.

But Terrell thinks the Bears will match up with the Jaguars fairly well.

"I think they will match up pretty even with us," Terrell said. "Jarvis is the only player that they don't have someone quite that tall."

Bunker Hill does, however, sport 6-3 Reggie Smyre inside and 6-3 guard Tyrone McDaniel. Smyre hit the layup up at the buzzer in the West Regionals that lifted the Bears past Newton-Conover, 73-72, and into the title game.

McDaniel is the playmaker for the Bears scoring 18 points a game, while dishing out six assists and pulling in six rebounds.

Bunker Hill is led offensively by 6-1 senior forward Austin Roberts with a 23.5 point per game average.

The Jaguars give help to Lang in the form of 12.8 points per game from 6-2½ senior forward Reggie Barrett and 10 points a game from guard George Burnette.

How well Lang and Barrett get up and down the court Saturday could be the difference in how well the Jaguars are going to be able to run with the Bears, according to Terrell.

"They (Lang and Barrett) run the court as well as any big men around," Terrell said. "If your big guys get up and down the court like that, you know your perimeter people have the capability."

Barrett...

"When he was a sophomore, he didn't start on our JV team. He was a sub. Last year he had to work his way into the starting lineup. I wasn't sure how well he was going to perform. He's been a pleasant surprise. He is great at times."

Barrett turned the disappointment over being cut from the North Pitt team into a motivation for improvement.

"I had just started playing basketball," he said. "(So) I just played all summer and went to basketball camp. I played summer league and practiced by myself all the time until I reached the potential I've gotten to now."

"I still do the same things now, get out and practice by myself," Barrett added. "I've gotten better on the inside and the outside and my jumping has gotten better."

His rapid development on the court and the subsequent attention from a number of small colleges have brought about a change of heart in his post-high school plans.

"I didn't think (about college) in the 10th grade when I first started," he said. "Me playing college basketball didn't really come across my mind until last year. Before I started playing basketball, I hadn't planned to go to college. I just wanted to go to Pitt Community (College) and take economics. But when I started playing basketball, I figured bigger things could come to me."

If he's accepted, Barrett likely will attend North Carolina Wesleyan. If not, he'll go the junior college route.

Right now, though, college is not the foremost thing on Barrett's mind. He is focused on Saturday and his final high school game.

"I just hope we win," he said. "That's the way I want to end my last (high school) basketball game."

"We just can't get too intense. We just have to go out and play like we're capable of playing, like we have all year. We can't get scared of the crowd."

Saturday will be his first visit to the Dean Dome. He was supposed to be a spectator two years ago when Farmville lost to Salisbury in the state finals, but he missed his bus ride to Chapel Hill.

This time, however, Barrett has a reserved seat on the bus.

Gophers' Underdog Role Is Nothing New

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The University of Minnesota was picked to finish last in the Big Ten preseason poll, made a 2,000-to-1 longshot to reach the Final Four and tabbed the 11th seed in the NCAA East Regional.

The Golden Gophers have known the meaning of being the underdog all season, so they will be facing nothing new tonight when they meet second-seeded Duke, 26-7, in the semifinal of the NCAA East Regional at 7:40 p.m. EST.

Top-seeded Georgetown, 28-4, will face North Carolina State, 22-8, in the nightcap of the doubleheader at the Brendan Byrne Arena at 10:10 p.m.

terim coach) Steve Fisher.

"We're not a great team, but we became a great team," he said. "...This is a very close team. I'm disappointed for everyone involved with the team."

Robinson had 17 points and 13 assists and Terry Mills added 16 points for Michigan, the region's third seed, one spot lower than the Tar Heels.

Reid, who missed the Tar Heels' second-round game because of a one-game suspension for a curfew violation, led the Tar Heels with 26 points, while Jeff Lebo added 19, all but two in the first half.

There has been speculation that Reid would forego his senior season and turn professional.

The rumor that Reid would leave the Tar Heels grew even stronger after he missed North Carolina's victory against UCLA in the second round of the NCAA Southeast Regional.

But Reid is leaning toward staying.

"Coach (Smith) said he would sit down and talk with me at the end of the season," Reid said after North Carolina lost 92-87 in the Southeast Regional semifinals Thursday night. "And it's the end of the season."

"Whatever he says I'll listen to and discuss it with my family. But I do plan to be back next year."

Reid finished with 26 points, hitting 12 of 18 shots, and had six rebounds.

But his effort was overshadowed by Rice, who scored 34 points, including eight of 12 from 3-point range, and grabbed six rebounds.

Their battled erupted into a minor showing match late in the game.

"Somebody was giving me an elbow to the back of the head," said Reid. "And each time I looked back, it was Glen Rice. After the third one I said something to him."

Rice said they "got carried away. It was just in the play of basketball."

Virginia...

scored 10 of 12 at one point, while King was taking only four shots.

"Virginia did a great job on the inside trying to harass me and front me," said King. "They made it seem like I wasn't open inside because they were fronting me on one side and getting backside help."

King got little perimeter help in the first half, which made it easier for Virginia to keep packing the inside. Mookie Blaylock was just 1-for-7 in the half before getting poked in the eye, and the Sooners were 5-of-13 from 3-point range. Blaylock wound up 2-of-12 for five points as he played the second half with the eye nearly swollen shut.

"I could barely see," he said. "I really wanted to go out and win this ball game. I can't blame it on my eye."

Oklahoma took a 53-50 lead early in the second half when Terrence Mullins, who scored 16 points, finished off a fast break with a dunk. But Virginia went on a 12-2 run capped by a Morgan 3-pointer to make the score 62-55.

Oklahoma came back again, going ahead 72-69 on a Skeeter Henry baseline jumper with 5:08 to play.

No problem. Morgan hit a 3-pointer, Crotty scored on a layup, Morgan made another 3-pointer and Crotty added a free throw as the Cavaliers went ahead for good, 78-72, with 3:11 to play.

"I wasn't looking for one (a 3-pointer)," Holland said. "But Richard certainly was. It was a good play because a three gets you well in that situation."

And made Oklahoma sick. The Sooners got within 78-74, but Crotty scored on a backdoor layup and Stith made two free throws to make it 82-74 with 1:02 left. Oklahoma got no closer than five after that.

"I think a lot of times you think you have to shoot 60 percent against an Oklahoma," said Holland. "We shot 48 tonight but still won the game because we did enough of the other things."

Crotty's eight assists gave him 201 for his career, eclipsing the school record of 200 previously held by Jeff Jones.

seed still alive in the NCAA tournament, comes into the regional semifinals having turned around its basketball program a little more than three years after an academic scandal left only one player eligible for new coach Clem Haskins. The Gophers went 9-19 in his first year, 11-17 last year and 17-11 during the regular season, finishing fifth in the Big 10.

Against Duke of the ACC, the Gophers are 10-point underdogs.

"We have no pressure on us," said forward Willie Burton, who has averaged 24 points per game in the NCAA tournament. "Nobody thought we'd come this far. We were picked to finish 10th in the Big 10 and we finished fifth and played .500 in the toughest conference in the country."

The turnaround has been accomplished with just one senior, reserve guard Ray Gaffney.

"Coach brought stability to the program," Gaffney said. "He's turned the program around. We're not just a team, we're a family."

According to most of the players, the turning point for the Gophers came on Jan. 14 when they edged Iowa 80-78. In the next month, they followed with victories over Michigan, Ohio State and Illinois.

Haskins said a non-conference victory over Kansas State on Jan. 7 was just as important and gave the team the confidence he is seeing every game.

"I think our guard play is what's starting to come around now," Haskins said. "You don't win championships without good guard play and we're getting it now from Melvin (Newbern) and (Kevin) Lynch."

The guard matchup is something

Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski is concerned about because Minnesota does have a height advantage there with Newbern at 6-foot-4 and Lynch at 6-6.

Duke point guard Quin Synder is 6-3 and Phil Henderson is 6-4. The Blue Devils are bigger up front with Danny Ferry and Christian Laettner, both at 6-10.

"We're still looking at the Gophers," said Ferry, the Naismith Award winner as the player of the year. "We know they are very talented and that they'd be a strong contender for the title in our league. Everyone has a lot of respect for them."

Duke also is deserving of respect. The Blue Devils have been to the Sweet 16 the past four years and earned trips to the Final Four in two of the past three years, both times taking the road through East Rutherford.

In 1986, Duke defeated Navy for the East Regional title and last year the Blue Devils played textbook basketball in defeating Temple.

Ferry is the guy who makes Duke go. He is averaging 22.4 points, 7.4 rebounds and just under five assists per game.

"I'm not worried about his points," Haskins said. "I'm more worried about his passing. It gets everyone involved. He's like having a third guard on the floor. He's an outstanding passer."

Haskins said the biggest thing Minnesota can accomplish against Ferry is to make him work hard every possession.

"When a team is trying to take things away, I just try not to press," Ferry said. "I know we have other guys who can do things and I have to let them."

Joining Lynch, Newbern and Burton in the starting lineup are Jim Shikenjanski, a 6-10 center, and 6-5 forward Walter Bond. Junior forward Richard Coffey, sidelined with a knee injury for the past month, is expected to see limited action.

Bullets Needed A Victory To Maintain Playoff Bid

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — Washington Bullets forward John Williams says the only way his team will catch the Boston Celtics in their race for the playoffs is by playing tough, consistent defense.

"There's no question we've got offense," Williams said after he came off the bench to score 22 points and grab eight rebounds in Washington's 102-97 victory Thursday night over the Charlotte Hornets.

Playing for a fifth straight game without leading scorer Jeff Malone, the Bullets got plenty of offensive firepower from Williams and Bernard King, who scored 18 of his game-high 29 points in the second half.

The victory broke Washington's two-game skid as they stay alive in their race with the Celtics for the final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference. The Bullets trail Boston by 2½ games.

"We have to get consistent defense," Williams said. "We need to play as a team, to rebound more. We've got to keep them (opponents) off the offensive boards."

The Bullets have been one of the hottest teams in the NBA in recent weeks, having won 14 of their last 21 games.

But they have had some rough periods on the road, where they have won only eight times in 34 tries. They came to Charlotte with two road losses under their belts, including a 101-92 loss to Indiana Wednesday night.

"Tonight we played harder than we did against Indiana," said Washington forward Mark Alarie, who finished with 14 points and seven rebounds.

Washington coach Wes Unseld said the last thing he's thinking about is catching the Celtics.

"We can't worry about what Boston is doing," he said. "We just have to go out and try to win every game we play."

"The Celtics aren't even on my mind," he said. "I'm just worried about our game Saturday night. I don't see any other way to play."

Robert Reid led the Hornets with 25 points, while Kurt Rambis added 17 points and grabbed 15 rebounds.

Suns 154, Warriors 124

They might not be the best teams in the NBA. For one night, however, the Phoenix Suns and Golden State Warriors can be the flashiest.

It was the Suns' turn Thursday night as they scored a near-record 87 points in the first half and romped past Golden State 154-124. Only the Warriors, who got 155 points in beating Sacramento on March 4, have scored more in a game this season.

Lakers 115, Kings 92

The Magic Show was at its best as Magic Johnson had 25 points, 14 assists and 10 rebounds. James Worthy added 22 points and Byron Scott 20 as the Lakers snapped their four-game road losing streak.

SuperSonics 115, Clippers 112

At Seattle, Dale Ellis scored 39 points, with his layup with 41 seconds remaining giving the Sonics the lead for good.

Ellis broke a 109-109 tie with his layup on a feed from McMillan and Xavier McDaniel's dunk with 21 seconds left put the Sonics ahead 113-109.

Cavaliers 102, Bucks 88

Without Mark Price, the host Cavaliers turned to their other stars and got 21 points from Ron Harper, 20 from Brad Daugherty and 19 from Larry Nance.

Political Systems in Central America

All nations in the region hold elections and all but one have presidents, but the nature of their politics varies widely. Panama, once part of Colombia, considers itself in South America, and Belize counts itself as part of the English-speaking Caribbean community.

El Salvador

Government: Presidential, elected, civilian.
Current President: Alfredo Cristiani of the rightist Republican Nationalist Alliance (ARENA) elected president March 19, 1989, for a five-year term ending June 1, 1994.
Next Presidential Election: March 1994.
Legislature: Single house of 60 members elected for three-year periods.
Next legislature election: March 1991, date to be set by a national elections board.

Panama

Government: Dominated by the military, headed by Defense Forces Chief General Manuel Noriega.
Current President: The U.S. recognizes President Eric Arturo Delvalle. Delvalle was forced out by the legislature, dominated by the military, on Feb. 26, 1988, one day after he tried to fire Noriega. Education Minister Manuel Solis Palma was then named acting president.
Legislature: Single house of 67 members elected concurrently with the president.
Next election: May 7, 1989

Nicaragua

Government: Led by leftist civilian-military junta.
Current President: Daniel Ortega, Sandinista National Liberation Front, confirmed in power as president in elections Nov. 4, 1984, for a five-year term ending in 1990.
Legislature: Single house of 96 members elected concurrently with the president.
Next election: Ortega is planning to move election by 10 months to Feb. 25, 1990, as part of a regional agreement to end the civil war with U.S.-supported Contra rebels.

Guatemala

Government: Presidential, elected, civilian.
Current President: Vinicio Cerezo Arevalo, Christian Democrat, elected in a runoff Dec. 8, 1985, for a five-year term that ends Jan. 16, 1991.
Legislature: Single house of 100 deputies elected concurrently with the president.
Next election: Oct.-Nov. 1990, date to be set by a national elections board.

Costa Rica

Government: Presidential, elected, civilian.
Current President: Oscar Arias of the social-democratic National Liberation Party elected Feb. 2, 1986 for a four-year term ending May 8, 1990.
Legislature: Single house of 57 deputies elected concurrently with the president.
Next election: Feb. 4, 1990

Honduras

Government: Presidential, elected, civilian.
Current President: Jose Azcona Hoyo, Liberal, elected Nov. 25, 1985 for a four-year term ending Jan. 27, 1990.
Legislature: Single house of 134 deputies elected concurrently with the president.
Next election: Nov. 26, 1989

India Airlifts Emergency Food, Medicine To Kabul

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KABUL, Afghanistan — Eight tons of food and medicine was airlifted by India into this capital, which is surrounded by Moslem rebels trying to overthrow the Afghan government, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said today.

Rebels meanwhile destroyed a bridge on the main highway linking Kabul to the strategic eastern city of Jalalabad, the government said Thursday.

The anti-government forces have pressed in on Jalalabad in an effort to bring about a quick demise of Kabul's Marxist government in the wake of the Soviet troop withdrawal.

The Afghan capital is surrounded by rebels trying to oust the government of President Najib, and convoys carrying supplies into this city of 2.25 million people are occasionally attacked or delayed.

The Indian supplies were flown in Thursday, said the spokesman, who cannot be identified under briefing rules. Another shipment of nine tons of supplies is being readied, the spokesman said today from New Delhi.

The Indian government announced earlier this month that it would provide humanitarian and economic assistance to Afghanistan.

India is the only non-Soviet bloc nation that maintained relations with Kabul after the Soviet Union intervened militarily in 1979 to prop up its client regime in Afghanistan.

The last Red Army soldiers left Afghanistan on Feb. 15 as part of a U.N.-sponsored peace accord.

Blowing up the bridge could signal a renewal of guerrilla tactics rather than direct battle in the 18-day battle for Jalalabad. The guerrillas have found it difficult to confront an army with air power and long-range missiles.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Mohammad Nabi Amani told reporters Thursday that the bridge near Sarobi, midway between Kabul and Jalalabad, was destroyed by explosives planted on the span. He said the bridge was one of about 100 on the paved highway.

He said three other roads, all unpaved and more circuitous, remain open to military convoys between Kabul and the city, which is 70 miles to the east near the Khyber Pass.

Moslem insurgents, who are based in Pakistan and also backed by the United States, launched their offensive on the eastern city on March 6. But they have not succeeded in dislodging government troops.

Soviet troops completed their withdrawal last month after more than nine years of intervention in a civil war that began with a communist coup in April 1978. The Soviets continue providing military supplies to Kabul's government.

Amani said the guerrillas fired 2,000 rockets and artillery shells at government positions outside Jalalabad in the previous 24 hours.

No government forces were killed, but five soldiers and five civilians were wounded, he said. He said 89 guerrillas, including four local commanders, were killed in the same period.

Soviet-made Scud-B rockets have been fired daily from Kabul toward Jalalabad since the battle began, according to foreign observers and residents of Kabul. They have a range of at least 175 miles.

In Moscow, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze said Pakistan had grossly violated the U.N.-mediated agreement by allowing the rebels to form an interim government on its territory. They hope the government will soon take power.

Shevardnadze also charged arms were being delivered to the rebels from the United States via Pakistan in violation of the accord.

He said many Soviet civilian specialists remain in Kabul as well as the staff of a large embassy. "Any attempt to encroach upon their security will draw a most resolute Soviet response," he said Thursday without elaboration.

Gorbachev Meets Hungarian Leader

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Communist Party leader Karoly Grosz of Hungary met today in the Kremlin with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev for talks that were expected to address Hungary's move toward a multiparty political system.

The Soviet news agency Tass said the focus of the meeting was an "exchange of expertise and information about pressing issues of socialist construction in both countries and the development of cooperation in all areas."

Gorbachev and Grosz also were discussing foreign policy questions, Tass said.

Grosz arrived Thursday in the Soviet Union for a 24-hour working visit.

The talks are the first between Gorbachev and Grosz since Hungarian officials declared their support last month for a multi-party system. But Hungarian Premier Miklos Nemeth said after visiting Moscow this month that Gorbachev approved Hungary's reforms and does not oppose a multi-party system there.

But Soviet officials are less positive about a multi-party system in their own country. The Soviet Communist Party's Central Committee launched an investigation of former Moscow party chief Boris N. Yeltsin earlier this month after he was accused of advocating a multi-party system.

Yeltsin denies advocating the system, although he says the issue must be discussed openly.

New Salvadoran Chief Says He's Willing To Meet Rebels

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — President-elect Alfredo Cristiani said he would accept peace talks with leftist rebels but warned of any U.S. interference in El Salvador's civil war.

"We are willing to open doors to the guerrillas to incorporate them in the Salvadoran democratic process," said Cristiani, the victor in Sunday's presidential election.

"We are willing to work with the United States," Cristiani added in remarks made available Thursday, "but this partnership must be based upon mutual respect and working together, not as an imposition."

Although President Bush congratulated Cristiani on his victory, some congressmen have said his right-wing Republican Nationalist Alliance party, known as Arena, should demonstrate it has become a democratic institution before more U.S. aid is provided. Human rights groups, diplomats and others have linked Arena to far-rightist death squads.

The Salvadoran government has been the biggest recipient of U.S. economic and military aid this decade, receiving more than $3.5 billion. Washington now provides $500 million a year in aid to El Salvador.

The president-elect said the leftist Farabundo Marti Liberation Front "must interpret for the first time the feelings of the great majority of Salvadorans, that they no longer want violence, that they want peace."

"If the guerrillas want to solve the Salvadoran people's problems, they must come and express themselves publicly and peacefully so that the people can judge whether what they offer is valuable or not," he said.

He made no specific proposals for talks, however. Before the elections, rebels asked for a six-month postponement to give them time to participate.

The government and Arena both objected to the plan, and peace talks never got under way.

According to the final results, Cristiani won with 54 percent of the vote in an election boycotted by the rebels. Francisco Merino, also of Arena, was proclaimed vice president-elect.

Fidel Chavez Mena, presidential candidate of the incumbent Christian Democrats, received 36 percent of the vote. President Jose Napoleon Duarte, suffering from terminal cancer, by law could not run for reelection.

More than 1.8 million Salvadorans were registered to vote, and turnout was 52 percent, election officials said.

In his remarks Wednesday, Cristiani also said his administration would oppose direct intervention by the U.S. government in the nine-year civil war. The conflict has killed more than 70,000 people, most of them civilians.

Arena was linked in the early 1980s to extreme-rightist death squads blamed for the murders of tens of thousands of suspected leftists. Former U.S. ambassador Robert White once called Arena founder Roberto d'Aubuisson a "pathological killer."

However, Cristiani contends his candidacy shows his party has moderated its views.

Cristiani said neither he nor his party are "anti-North American."

But he said "if they want us to respect the democracies of other countries, we expect that other countries respect the Salvadoran democracy."

Arab League Tries To Halt Bloodshed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The Arab League stepped in today to try to halt renewed violence that has dragged Christian army units, Druse militiamen and Syrian gunners into the fighting, killing 81 people this month.

Fifteen of the deaths came during artillery duels the past 24 hours, police said.

Kuwait's ambassador to Syria, Ahmed Jassem, met today for 75 minutes with Gen. Michel Aoun, who commands the 20,000-member Christian force fighting against Druse militiamen and their Syrian backers. Aoun also leads a Christian government that rivals a Moslem Cabinet for political control of Lebanon.

Jassem, dispatched to Beirut late Thursday by the Arab League nations, said he met Aoun to discuss a cease-fire in the 14-year civil war and "a solution to the present confrontation."

"Such a solution cannot be achieved in one hour of talks," he told reporters after the meeting at the presidential palace in the Christian suburb of Baabda. He later was expected to travel to west Beirut for meetings with acting Prime Minister Salim Hoss, who heads the Moslem government.

When Jassem was in Beirut on Tuesday, radio stations said Aoun had sent a letter with him for Syrian President Hafez Assad that asked Assad to withdraw Syria's estimated 40,000 troops from Lebanon.

Aoun and other Christian leaders say the Syrians have failed the peacekeeping task the Arab League entrusted them with in 1976. The Christians also bitterly criticize Syrian support for Lebanese Moslems and leftists.

Voice of the Nation, a radio station based in Moslem west Beirut, said Aoun also sent a letter to President Bush requesting "American pressure on Israel to withdraw from south Lebanon."

Israel and allied Christian militiamen control a self-proclaimed 6-to-10-mile "security zone" in south Lebanon, ostensibly to guard against cross-border guerrilla raids.

'Working Less' Is New Trend For West Germans

By Terrence Petty
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BONN, West Germany — Work less?

That doesn't sound like the people who brought West Germany up from the ashes of World War II and made it the rich and powerful nation it is today.

But it is the trend these days among workers, some of whom already are on the job only 32 hours or four days a week.

"Work is not in the center of life anymore," says Meinhard Miegel, a social scientist who heads the Institute for Economy and Society in Bonn. "Leisure time has become a more important part of German life."

"This is not laziness. This is just a normal expression of a very wealthy society. Lots of people have acquired material wealth, and now they want to enjoy it."

Miegel doesn't see the work-less trend as negative, even for industry. "People have become much more relaxed, without hurting the country's overall productivity. More free time increases creativity and spontaneity, which is important for a nation."

But industrial groups maintain the trend will mean higher labor costs.

"We do see a danger that other countries might start to look more appealing to some companies," says Hermann Olbermann, spokesman for Gesamtmetall, an organization that represents employers in the metalworking and electronics industries.

The issue has set off a lively debate across West Germany as workers demand further reductions in their working time, which for unionized employees now range from 32 to 39 hours a week.

Oskar Lafontaine, deputy leader of West Germany's opposition Social Democrats and governor of Saarland state, came under fire of union friends last year by saying further cuts in the work week would be acceptable only if workers took less money.

Unions want a shorter work week but not at the expense of wage increases.

Employers counter that continuous pay increases coupled with lessened working hours could hinder companies' ability to make a reasonable profit and also make West Germany less attractive as a place to do business.

While West German workers have a reputation for industriousness, in recent years they have succeeded in shrinking working hours to the extent that on average, according to some estimates, they now spend less time on the job a year than any other workers in the world.

The German Employers' Association, West Germany's largest organization representing the interests of German businesses, says that a worker averages 1,716 hours on the job annually, compared with 1,912 hours in the United States and 2,138 in the Netherlands.

A few hundred employees at an Aachen tire plant are already scheduled to go on a three-day work week spread over 32 hours, and some workers with the BMW auto company work a four-day, 36-hour week.

West Germans are also the best-paid workers in Europe — in 1987 the average hourly wage including benefits was the equivalent of about $18, compared to about $15 an hour for the Dutch. Exclusive of benefits, the West German average hourly wage is $10, compared to $9.54 in the United States.

West Germans also get 30 working days of annual vacation, which amounts to six weeks for those working a five-day week and more for those who work fewer and than five days.

Indicative of the less-work trend, thousands of teachers and newspaper employees went on strike recently in demand of shorter working hours or no weekend work.

In addition, the IG Metall union, West Germany's largest labor organization with more than 2 million members, is battling with employers for a cut in the number of weekly hours for metalworkers to 35 from an average of 37.5.

But employers' organizations like Gesamtmetall are starting to resist.

"These (IG Metall) demands would put companies at a distinct disadvantage, compared with labor conditions in other countries," says Olbermann, spokesman for the Cologne-based Gesamtmetall.

In making its demands for shorter working hours, IG Metall says further cuts are needed as a means of reducing West Germany's 8 percent unemployment rate.

"We think that the reduction of working time is the only possibility to create new jobs," says Martin Oertel, an IG Metall spokesman at union headquarters in Frankfurt.

But employers are not likely to hire more workers when it means extra costs for mandatory social programs while workers aren't willing to take salary cuts for shorter hours.

West German companies chalk up good profits every year and the country remains one of the most productive in the world.

That's why Juergen Fusswinkel, a mechanic at a Bonn Volkswagen dealership, believes he should work less.

Former Aides Visit Marcos At Hospital

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONOLULU — The ailing Ferdinand Marcos received a bedside visit from four of his former cabinet ministers who are under subpoena to testify against the former Philippine president facing federal racketeering charges.

"It was a sad reunion because of his condition," Marcos aide Arturo Aruiza said Thursday at St. Francis Medical Center. "They introduced themselves, wished him well and encouraged him to fight these ailments so he might someday return home. Mostly, they just gave our president words of encouragement."

Marcos, 71, has been hospitalized since Jan. 15 with heart and lung problems. He remained in guarded condition Thursday night.

The former ministers were handed subpoenas Wednesday when they arrived at Honolulu International Airport, and a fifth member of the delegation, former Education Minister Jaime Laya, was arrested by FBI agents on a material witness warrant.

Laya, once head of the Philippines Central Bank, was released on bail after relinquishing his passport and being ordered to appear May 8 in U.S. District Court in New York.

The visitors — Blas Ople, former minister of labor; Estelito Mendoza, former minister of justice; Conrado Estrella, former minister of agrarian reform; and Sylvia Montes, former minister of social services — also were ordered to appear in court with Laya.

Marcos and his wife, Imelda, are charged with plundering more than $100 million from their country to buy art and real estate in Manhattan. Mrs. Marcos is free on $5 million bail after pleading innocent. Marcos' physical condition has prevented him from being arraigned.

Material arrest warrants or subpoenas were also issued for at least five others, including five of the six former cabinet ministers who had been scheduled to arrive in Honolulu Thursday or today, said Ralph Girardi, assistant FBI agent-in-charge of Honolulu.

"After what happened yesterday (Wednesday), we don't have any information that they're still coming," Girardi said. "We don't have any absolute word that they're not, but

Bus Accident Kills 2 People

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEXICO CITY — A bus carrying workers to a nuclear plant collided with a tanker truck on the coast of Veracruz, killing two people and injuring 33, a government report said.

The Notimex government news service said the crash occurred Thursday in Nautla, a town 30 miles north of the Laguna Verde power plant on the Gulf of Mexico.

Witnesses said the Federal Electricity Commission bus was rounding a curve when the driver apparently lost control of the vehicle and slammed into the tanker truck, Notimex reported.

The driver of the bus, identified as 35-year-old Alberto Ramirez, and an unidentified electrical worker, were killed, the news service said.

The nuclear plant, Mexico's first, is scheduled to begin operations later this year.

we're really not expecting them anymore."

Free Enterprise Gets An Oscar

LOS ANGELES — Free enterprise has collided with the Academy Awards, and everybody's trying to pick up the pieces.

With Oscar statuettes selling at auction for more than $10,000 and a Chicago trophy company casting alleged Academy Award clones, the National Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences is scrambling to make sure Oscar's golden sheen isn't tarnished by Hollywood hucksterism.

"If you know about an infringement and fail to object to it, you risk having your trademark become public domain," said Bruce Davis, the Academy's executive administrator, in explaining the lawsuits the organization has filed to protect its beloved hunk of electroplated plaster.

But despite the Academy's crusade against crass commercialism, this year's awards ceremony will feature a new merchandising wrinkle: Some 800 limousines delivering the most famous stars to the Oscar telecast will be equipped with door-mounted coolers jammed with Diet Coke, Coca-Cola Classic and other Coca-Cola Co. beverages.

When the limo doors swing open in front of the Shrine Auditorium and the celebrities tumble out, the Coke logo will be on display in front of an audience that includes millions around the world.

"It seemed like a good marketing opportunity," said Coca-Cola spokesman Ira Gleser. "The Academy approached our local bottler in Los Angeles and said we're going to have a lot of thirsty people."

But even as the Academy embraces this new intrusion of merchandising, it has lashed out at whatever else it considers a blemishing of the Oscar name.

Balloting For Oscars Comes Under Fire As Studios Fight For Awards

By John Horn
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOLLYWOOD — Oscar selection has come under scrutiny as film studios go to new lengths to pull votes out of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

And with the flood of Oscar vote enticements — from free coffee mugs to complimentary buffet dinners — Academy members are acknowledging that some Oscar voting is done by committee, in violation of the rules. Secretaries, spouses and friends, several Academy members say, are marking ballots in what is supposed to be the entertainment industry's most esteemed awards competition.

"It's like a local election of judges," said Academy member Harry Clein, who said he's witnessed team voting. "A lot of people don't know who the candidates are. So they take a look at who's around them and see what the consensus is."

"As far as elections go, it's not bad. But I've never been through an election in Argentina."

Dan Lyle, who oversees the Oscar balloting for the accounting firm Price, Waterhouse Inc., said that there is no guarantee that Academy members have actually filled out their own ballots.

"All we know is that a properly numbered ballot has been returned," he said. "Members are on the honor system to fill out the ballot themselves."

More than 4,600 members were given ballots this year for the 61st Annual Academy Awards, which will be telecast on March 29 from the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles. Academy members vote on their area of specialty. The Academy's actors branch, for example, is the only group to select nominees in the four acting categories.

Since the voting is done secretly — members do not sign their ballots — the ballot's authenticity is ensured solely by a numeric control number, Lyle said. Ballots are invalidated only if there is more than one vote in a given category, and only the votes in that specific category are not tallied, he said.

Nominations for acting, directing, art direction and all specialized categories are handled by select branches and committees composed of Academy members.

All voting members of the Academy can participate in the best picture nominations and may vote for the final awards in all categories. Winners for best documentary feature, best animated short film and best live-action short film are chosen by only those members who have seen all the nominees.

Academy constituent Julian Blaustein said that most of his colleagues take the voting very seriously. "I don't even vote (in a category) if I'm not familiar with the pictures in that category. ... And I've never told someone to vote for a film, even when I've done some of them."

Meanwhile, other Oscar voting rules are perhaps being broken, speculates veteran Academy member Millard Kaufman. "Although you'll be asked to vote in the nominations for five pictures, I think a lot of people figure out that they have a better chance if they just vote for their own picture and leave the other four blank," he said.

Given the tremendous impact both an Oscar nomination and an Oscar victory have on a film's fortunes, it's not entirely surprising that a certain degree of artifice might surround the Oscars.

"The Last Emperor" took in $18.9 million, close to half the film's gross, after it won last year's best picture trophy. More than 70 percent of the revenues generated by 1986's best picture, "Platoon," came after the film was nominated. On average, a best picture award is worth about $20 million these days.

A $500,000 Oscar promotional campaign mounted by a studio, therefore, can be a good investment. In the case of this year's awards, a flurry of Academy-oriented newspaper advertisements, banquets, complimentary gifts and photo mailings tied to five late releases appears to have been remarkably successful.

This year, all best picture nominees and the large majority of top acting nominees came from movies released in December: "The Accidental Tourist," "Dangerous Liaisons," "Rain Man" and "Working Girl" were all released after Dec. 16.

While these five movies might be good, the nearly complete exclusion of films from the rest of the year has highlighted the studios' mastery of Oscar marketing.

"I think the Academy Awards are crap," said Terry Gilliam, director of "Brazil" and the current "The Adventures of Baron Munchausen." "It's about selling films in all it's about," he said. "It's one more way of flogging some films. When 'Brazil' got nominated (in 1986), they asked me to be a member of the Academy. And I wouldn't join. I just don't want to be a part of that at all."

And at least one prominent Academy member, director Carl Reiner, says that the manipulation of Oscar voters has reached new depths. Reiner said that Universal Studios' all-out effort to bag votes for Sigourney Weaver, a best actress nominee for "Gorillas in the Mist," could lead him to vote against the film.

"I have in my house more color reproductions of Sigourney Weaver and a beautiful gorilla than I need," Reiner said of promotional material sent to his home. "We've got to tell the Academy to stop this advertising. I'm getting turned off on the pictures I like."

Oscar Show Revives The Magic

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Critics say the Academy Awards telecast is showing its age. Producer Allan Carr says that's the way it should be.

In an attempt to keep the program's ratings from slipping, Carr will celebrate Oscar by reveling in its yesteryears.

"I'm restoring it, hopefully, to what it was in its glorious day," Carr said of the March 29 broadcast of the 61st Annual Academy Awards from the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles. The program will be shown at 9 p.m. EST by ABC-TV.

Carr and scenic designer Ray Clausen will recreate a likeness of the Cocoanut Grove, the tropical nightclub where the Oscar dinner banquet was held in 1940. Famous movie couples will be seated at tables between the palm trees, and a bandstand will be on the stage.

"This is the ultimate variety show," Carr said. "It's also the ultimate awards show that all the other awards show copy. So I have to make this a return to Oscar — the way it was in the old days — because now you have the Tonys, the Grammys, the American Music Awards, the People's Choice Awards. ... There's an awards show on every other week."

ABC Gets Entertainment Chief

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

HOLLYWOOD — Breaking with a long tradition of promoting from within the creative department, Capital Cities-ABC Inc. named Robert Iger as the network's business affairs side as its new entertainment president Thursday. Immediately, the 38-year-old former executive vice president of the ABC Television Network Group declared, "I do not come in with a program strategy."

In an interview from his New York office, the one-time manager of "ABC's Wide World of Sports" acknowledged that while his expertise lies in the "day-to-day workings of the network," he is "an obvious newcomer" to the process of prime-time programming.

"I come to this job clearly with a great degree of inexperience in the entertainment field," he said. "I have a lot to learn."

He disputed speculation that Capital Cities-ABC management was stressing bottom line considerations over creative experience and working relationships with the Hollywood community in its top programming executive. "I do not come in with any game plan having to be handed to me by the management of the company," he stressed.

And he indicated that his unfamiliarity with entertainment programming would help give him a sense of independence in his new position. "If there's one thing that I bring to this job, in terms of my point of view, it's that I'm my own person. And if people are wise, they'll wait to judge me when they see me."

Iger said that he had asked Stoddard, now president of ABC's in-house production division, to stay on through the process of choosing the fall schedule "so he can bring into it his knowledge and experience," Iger declared. "It's a very delicate time. And the important thing to emphasize is I will not disrupt the process one bit. Of course, there's a natural disruption caused by the change. But I'm going to do whatever I can to reduce that."

Juice Maker Issues Invitation To Streep

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

YAKIMA, Wash. — Actress Meryl Streep has neither accepted nor rejected an invitation from apple processor Tree Top Inc. to view Alar testing, her agent's office said.

Tree Top, the nation's largest apple juice maker, issued its invitation Tuesday. It wants Ms. Streep to visit its headquarters and view how it tests to make sure Alar is not present in its products.

"I have no idea if she is aware of the invitation," Susan Anderson, who works for agent Sam Cohn in New York City, said during a telephone interview Thursday.

She said Ms. Streep will be out of the country until Tuesday, plans to attend the Academy Awards on Wednesday, and will leave the country again the next day.

Tree Top, based in the Yakima suburb of Selah, contends that the nationwide Alar controversy — with Ms. Streep as a vocal opponent of the suspected carcinogenic farm chemical — has been a "blanket indictment" of the entire apple industry.

Tree Top for years has rejected Alar-treated apples for its own products, but contends that the nationwide scare is hurting its sales.

GALLATIN, Tenn. — City Council is considering a request to remove Barbara Mandrell Boulevard signs from a two-mile section of highway because the country music star has moved 15 miles away.

Jeannie Gregory, executive director of the Gallatin Chamber of Commerce, said she believes the two large signs should be removed "if

Filming Begins On Tot's Rescue

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIDLAND, Texas — Filming has begun for a depiction of the rescue of toddler Jessica McClure, who was pulled from an abandoned well 58 hours after tumbling in.

But little of her west Texas city will be seen in the production that ABC-TV will broadcast May 21.

The filming of "Everybody's Baby: The Rescue of Jessica McClure" began Thursday in the backyard of a suburban Los Angeles home, a spokesman for Interscope Productions said.

The hospital and city hall are the only sites in Midland being used. The shaft will be recreated in a Hollywood film studio.

the posts can be used to advertise civic groups or for some other fashion."

The signs, costing a total of $10,000, were erected in 1983 along the stretch of U.S. 31E about five miles from Mandrell's former palatial home on Old Hickory Lake. The singer moved to Joelton last year.

"There are no hard feelings because she left," Gregory said.

City council members studied the matter Tuesday night, and will discuss it again April 4. Jeannie Ghent, a spokeswoman for the performer, said there will be no ill feelings if the signs come down.

"We were so honored when they made that stretch of road, but with her moving out, we don't blame Gallatin at all," she said. "We were honored by the time we had it."

Today's Cryptoquip clue: X equals C

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY March 25
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Relationships are in focus. Plan a great day with friends and family. Get out of the old rut and locate new adventures and excitement.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): You may have to push yourself a little to get going. This is one of those easy and passive days that allow for personal time and rest.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): It is easy for you to feel in a rut. Let life sparkle when you have free time, but don't neglect basics that may come to haunt you later.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You are independent and may wish for more free time this friendly day. Activities will be more enjoyable if you get a headstart.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Some projects you plan today may be inappropriate for other family members. This may lead to restlessness and a feeling of being left out.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Shop, but hold off on the final purchase of a big item until you investigate further. Get all the facts. Take the family along and eat out.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Make a major domestic adjustment during this time while you are open to new ideas. Be vicarious, sneak off to a romantic spot.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): The moon in your sign brings forth good judgment, intuition and sensuality. Enjoy yourself more with conservative activities.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): The early morning may test your diplomatic nature. Finances improve. Now do something fun that you have been putting off.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Home improvement plans may temporarily be set aside. Trust intuition to deliver the best social variety and excitement.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): It may be necessary to compromise and to leave some hopes behind. The results will feel the same if you realize the positive cycle.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): A gossip who has your ear is up to no good and should be avoided. Evening plans will be exciting if you invite favorite friends.

We all have a bit of larceny in our hearts. If we indulge our weakness in everyday life, the consequences could be disgraceful. If we do so at the bridge table and are successful, we can earn accolades from our peers.

By CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

Consider the position from declarer's point of view. He had been wondering how to tackle the trump suit when it seemed that his problem had been solved for him. If West were guarding the queen of trumps, why should he ruff his partner's trick? So he called for the table's king of hearts—down one.

It is quite likely that, left to his own devices, declarer would have started trumps by leading the ace from hand on the theory that, since West was short in spades, he was more likely to have heart length. Therefore, we salute West for his acumen in giving declarer a nudge in the wrong direction.

Rent-A-Judge Plan Gives Justice By The Hour

By Michael Fleeman
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — With nasty allegations flying and millions of dollars on the line, actress Valerie Harper and the Lorimar studio wanted their legal battle last year resolved as quickly as possible.

But in Los Angeles, where the courts are as congested as the freeways, it would take five years before a civil trial could begin to decide whether Miss Harper was wrongly fired or wrongly quit the "Valerie's Family" TV series.

The lawyers took a shortcut: for $50,000, they got their own judge, bailiff, clerk and court reporter for a trial held in a leased public courtroom before a jury selected from the public rolls.

Within a year, the jury awarded Miss Harper $1.85 million in damages and a cut in Lorimar's future profits that could be worth $15 million.

In contrast, the Los Angeles Superior Court jury that last month awarded Marc Christian $21.75 million did so nearly four years after Christian filed a lawsuit against former lover Rock Hudson alleging that the movie star concealed the fact he had AIDS. The huge award is certain to be appealed.

With civil court systems seriously backlogged across the country, thousands of litigants are finding out that they can afford to rent their own judge.

Retired jurists are returning to the bench for fees from $150 to $250 an hour. Companies arranging rent-a-judge cases are reporting record business. And litigants and lawyers say the speedy, private proceedings are the best thing to come along in the American legal system since the Bill of Rights.

But the proliferation of such cases has many in legal circles yelling "objection." Critics say private adjudication often discriminates against the poor, raises profound constitutional questions and may be luring fine judges off the bench for an early, lucrative retirement.

"I'm worried that we're getting a two-tiered system of justice: one for the group of people who can afford to hire a judge and one for the group of people who cannot," said American Bar Association President Robert Raven.

Attorneys for the poor and minorities want the legal establishment to take a hard look at private adjudication and implement what they call long-overdue reforms in the public system.

"No one who is powerful enough in the public system is going to want to change it if there are other options. We're getting a deluxe justice system for the rich and a deteriorating form for the poor," said Robert Gnaizda of Public Advocates, which provides legal service for the poor and minorities.

An estimated 800,000 civil lawsuits will be filed in the United States this year, 100,000 of them in Los Angeles County where 60,000 cases are backlogged and the wait for trial routinely stretches three to five years. The average wait nationwide is 18 months.

This legal gridlock creates an expensive waiting game that generally ends as lawyers' fees mount and nerves crack. More than 95 percent of civil cases are settled out of court, many within hours before the scheduled start of a trial and after years of waiting.

Rent-a-judge firms offer an attractive alternative. The wait for a judge is about a month, many disputes are settled in a matter of hours, and satisfaction is practically guaranteed. Fewer than 10 percent of decisions are appealed.

"We're getting busier and busier every month," said John Trotter, retired presiding justice of the California Court of Appeals and now vice president of Judicial Arbitration and Mediation Services in Santa Ana.

Lawmakers Say USDA Ignoring Drought

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Farm state lawmakers say the U.S. Department of Agriculture is mishandling last year's emergency drought relief and ignoring this year's arid, potentially disastrous conditions on the High Plains.

Rep. Bill Sarpalus, a Texas Democrat and member of House Agriculture subcommittee on wheat, soybeans and feed grains, said the Texas Panhandle is extremely dry, yet he can't find out "from anybody" what "we can do to help our farmers."

At a hearing Thursday, an angry Rep. Pat Roberts, R-Kan., said the central part of the country is "blowing away ... and I can't get any damn answers," because of the Bush administration's slow pace in filling key policy jobs at USDA.

"People are crawling out of train wrecks faster ... than they're getting people on board," Roberts said during a subcommittee hearing on USDA's handling of the $3.9 billion drought bill.

Milton Hertz, administrator of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, countered that farmers receiving drought benefits do not face an undue paperwork burden. He also said he doesn't believe the agency has suffered during the transition to the Bush administration.

As of Feb. 28, more than 558,000 producers have received disaster payments and emergency feed assistance amounting to more than $2.7 billion, Hertz testified.

The amount paid to date represents 70 percent of what the agency anticipates will go to farmers stricken by the devastating drought of 1988, he said.

Hertz said he was not aware of efforts at USDA to draft 1989 drought relief, although subcommittee chairman Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., said it's "no secret the central part of America is blowing away right now."

Spring Cleaning

Grab The Mop And Bucket For A Frontal Attack On Dirt

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

It's that time of year when flowers bloom, birds start singing and the grass turns green.

It's also the time of year when you realize there's an inch of dust on the furniture, the cobwebs have become thick as rope and the growing stack of newspapers and magazines you've been collecting is sprouting mold.

Perhaps this is the year, you tell yourself, that you will finally get around to the spring cleaning which you've talked about throughout the cold winter months.

But cleaning is usually not considered one of life's most pleasurable tasks. In fact, most of us would probably rank that activity right up there on the "fun scale" with house painting, plumbing and replacing electrical fuses.

Still, there's no reason to put it off any longer. A local home economist says there are ways to make cleaning chores quicker and easier.

Evelyn Spangler, Pitt County economics extension agent, says successful spring cleaning lies in having the proper attitude, cleaning materials, and knowing some basic cleaning tips.

"Some people prefer to attack cleaning the house one room at a time, getting a room completely clean and then moving on to the next room," she said.

"When starting to clean a room, the most efficient method is starting in a specific place then working around the room in a clockwise fashion so that you do not retrace your steps."

"Make sure to clean from the top of the room down," she added. "The floor is the last place to clean because that's where all the dust and particles fall."

Another good practice for spring cleaning is working in teams, said the 1986 recipient of the RJR Extension Agent Award of Excellence.

"Try to get family members to work with you so that each team member has a specific job. That way, everybody is working together. Hopefully each team member can finish at about the same time and everybody can then go out for pizza or some kind of treat for their efforts," she said.

To clean furniture, Ms. Spangler recommends dusting with a slightly dampened cloth.

"Periodically, people might want to use a polish, cleaner or wax on their furniture if it is deemed necessary," she added.

The best dusting clothes are of the lint-free variety such as old, 100 percent cotton T-shirts. Cloth diapers also make excellent cleaning materials.

Other tools to help make the home spic and span include a wisk broom and a feather duster.

She said it's very helpful to have a tool-caddie to carry cleaning supplies so you don't have to be running back and forth from room to room.

In vacuuming, it is helpful to have an extension cord, perhaps of 50 feet, so you don't have to stop as you proceed through the house.

"When you use a vacuum cleaner, you work with the cord behind you and you work into the room so that you are not running over the cord," she said.

Chandeliers can be washed with a mild dishwashing detergent with a degreasing agent. Rinse the crystal with ammonia to add sparkle and dry with a lint-free cloth.

Refrigerators should be washed with a baking soda and water solution, which keeps the inside smelling nice, she said. A box of baking soda should then be left in the refrigerator and freezer compartments to help absorb odors.

People might want to consider using a dry carpet cleaner if the weather is particularly humid, she said. Otherwise you might face difficulty in removing the moisture from the rug if it's been washed with water and detergent.

"Often times, draperies or curtains can just be put in the dryer on the air-fluff setting, which gets the dust out and freshens them up a bit. Then they can be re-hung. If they're soiled they may need to be sent to the dry cleaners," she said.

In order to kill mildew fungus, which she says is prevalent in this part of the country, Ms. Spangler recommends using a chlorine bleach and water solution.

Items in the house that are very lightly soiled, like kitchen appliances, can usually be cleaned with a glass/mirror cleaner, she said.

Ms. Spangler said a growing trend in recent years is to hire professionals for the big spring cleaning effort.

"Many times the person in the household who does the major cleaning is also a full-time employed person and that person doesn't have an opportunity to do a big spring cleaning," she said. "They almost have to take vacation time to do that."

"These people might want to treat themselves by having professionals come in to do the cleaning if need be," she said.

"The secret to housecleaning is keeping the work done regularly during the year so that you don't have to do the real big cleaning in the spring," she added.

Another task usually associated with spring cleaning is putting away winter clothes to make room for the spring and summer wardrobe.

"The most important thing to remember in putting away winter clothes is to make sure they are clean," said Dickie Rook, owner of A Cleaner World Garment Care Center.

"Insects such as moths and silverfish will usually attack a stored garment if there exists a spot of spilled food residue.

"A lot of people wear an article of clothing just once during the winter and make a mistake by assuming they can store it without a proper cleaning. I remember one lady who cried in our parking lot after bringing in a $300 wool suit which was pulled out in late September with several holes the size of quarters where insects had chewed on the wool," he said.

Another tip to remember is to not store clothing in garment bags, said Judy Harrington, owner of Professional Cleaners.

"Plastic bags do not allow the clothing to breathe. Garment bags are merely intended to protect the garments en route from the cleaners to home," she said.

She also recommended storing wools in a cool, dry place.

"If possible, store clothing in a cedar-lined closet or chest. The scent repels insects," she said.

Meanwhile, Ms. Harrington said, furs should be stored by professionals in special vaults, which protect the valuable garments from heat and humidity which can cause the furs to shed and the linings to deteriorate.

Wallpaper Removal Is One Messy Chore

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

While an estimated 85 percent of all do-it-yourself wallpapering is done by women, the percentage is considerably lower when it comes to wallpaper removal.

Taking off the old paper and preparing the wall surface for the new covering is the messiest part of the entire job. Martha Washington reputedly hung the wallpaper in the first White House, but no records exist about how the walls were prepared or if George had a hand in it.

The traditional method of removing wallpaper was to soak it with warm water and scrape it off. Small sections were wet down with a cloth or sponge and scraped while still damp. A later method of removing papers was to apply a chemical solvent that loosened the underlying paste. Another way was to use strippable paper that later could be pulled off with an upward-away motion.

Steaming remains one of the most-used methods. Though messy, it's the most efficient method, if done properly. Non-porous paper needs to be scored so the steam penetrates more easily. The steam machine also makes an easier job of removing more than one layer of paper.

On the market now is a wallpaper stripper that is sprayed on. After 20 minutes, the paper can be peeled off, though if it's non-porous a second application may be needed. To determine whether or not the paper is porous, work a test patch by spraying a section of the paper with water. The water will bead on non-porous paper.

Non-porous papers — the kind often found in kitchens and bathrooms — must be scored so enzymes in the stripper can reach and dissolve the adhesives. This can be done with a special tool that uses angled cutting disks to cut the paper without damaging plaster or drywall.

Another method is to use a variable-temperature heat gun. After moistening a small section of the wallpaper with water, hold the gun 3 or 4 inches from the wall, starting at a seam. As the adhesive begins to soften, loosen the paper gently with an accessory scraper and peel it off. Take care not to overheat the paper or wall, and don't use with flammable wallpaper removers.

Americans Opt For Big Homes

By Paul Bucha
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A decade ago, just as the energy crisis influenced Americans to buy smaller, more efficient cars, it also impacted the housing market, causing developers to construct smaller, more efficient homes.

But today we are seeing a demand for larger, more spacious houses with greater elegance and a more creative use of space with sophisticated heating and ventilation systems.

Developers have just begun to see the impact of this trend in the demands of purchasers.

Many house buyers, for example, want larger bedrooms that serve as secondary living areas. And the postwar trend to reduce the height of ceilings has been reversed. Homeowners appreciate a minimum of 9-foot ceilings. They often soar to 20 feet, with dramatic window treatments.

Many homeowners will actually incorporate a mini living room into their bedroom, where one member of the

Spas, Hot Tubs Slow To Catch On In South

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Spas and hot tubs aren't just for margarita parties or skinny dipping couples, they are becoming standard household items for folks looking to relax or overcome stress.

Since they first became a big hit in California over 10 years ago, home spas and hot tubs have been growing more popular across the country. In Greenville, there are three businesses that sell the items: Greenville Pool Construction & Supply Co., Ferguson Enterprises Inc., and Paradise Pools and Spas.

North Carolina has traditionally lagged behind the West Coast and the Northeast in spa sales, but area dealers say the market is growing.

"Last year, we more than doubled what we sold in 1987," said Donna Spain, owner of Paradise Pool and Spas.

"(At first), a lot of people liked them from the social standpoint, being able to party in them. That was the thing. But most people today aren't looking at that.

"They want them for a therapeutic use, especially as stressed out as people get now. A lot of people are becoming more educated about it. For the longest time, about five years ago ... people would say: 'Why do I want a bathtub this big. I'm not going to put that many people in a bathtub.'"

Spring and summer is boom-time for spa and hot tub sales, but they are sold year-round. Most range in price from about $1,500 to $6,000. The spas come in dozens of sizes, from portables, for use on decks or inside homes, to in-ground units. More than half of the spas sold in this area are placed outside, dealers said.

The largest spas are nearly eight-foot square and four feet deep and sport 16 jet blowers. The average spa has about five or six jets.

Smaller spas hold about 115 gallons of water while six-seaters may hold about 300 gallons, but dealers said the spas can be filled and emptied with a garden hose, and it should not affect water bills. No extra plumbing is needed, just a 110 v or 220 v hookup.

"The spas, their popularity is growing each year," said Charles Tutor, general manager of Ferguson.

"People of all ages have been buying (the spas). We've had everything from couples in their 20s to couples in their 50s buying them."

Keith Bishton, owner of Greenville Pool, said he has been selling spas for 12 years, and his customers are mainly adults from 30-45 years old and retirees.

"We have a 5,000-square-foot showroom, and we keep several models on the floor. The popularity is increasing, but this isn't Southern California either.

"We've seen it grow a little bit each year. But it's not a hotbed for spas. You have to market them. (In) the South, it's just not as popular. I don't know why," he said.

People often refer to all the items as Jacuzzis, but that is a brand name just as Kleenex is a brand of tissue. Though the terms spa and hot tub are sometimes interchanged, there is a difference between the two products.

Spas are constructed of a man-made substance — usually plastic, or a harder acrylic — and have air jets blowing from the bottom or side of the tub. Water remains in the tub and must be treated chemically just as swimming pool water is treated. The units require little installation or construction.

On the other hand, hot tubs are made of wood panels, and the usually require quite a bit of construction and installation. Water also remains in the hot tubs, and it is chemically treated.

Spas are also much more popular, outnumbering hot tubs 20-to-1 in homes nationwide, said Pat Ewing, editorial assistant with the National Spa and Pool Institute in Alexandria, Va.

Of the 1.83 million spas and hot tubs in U.S. homes, there are fewer than 90,000 hot tubs, she said.

Hot tubs are not as popular because they require a more maintenance and construction.

"Chemistry-wise, it's a lot easier to maintain a spa than a hot tub," Ms. Spain said.

The acid that has been used to treat the wood of a hot tub may change the chemical balance of the water and throw the system out of whack. The wood may also develop leaks.

The spas offer options such as underwater lights, a protective cover, solar warming blankets, floating telephones or ice buckets, she said.

Many buy spas for therapeutic value

"(A spa is) all ready to go, self-contained, no construction," Tutor said.

Ms. Ewing's institute is a trade association representing several areas of businesses involved in hot tubs, spas and pools. Though the idea of lounging around a spa caught on in California in the 1970s, she said much of the South and Midwest has been slow to follow.

"They were perceived by consumers ... as a peculiar form of California lifestyle and were not really accepted."

The thought of stripping down to bathing suits and hopping into hot bubbly water with friends raised some eyebrows in the stiffer neighborhoods, she said, but more people are changing their minds as they realize the recreational and medical benefits.

Some Midwest dealers have even invited church groups to sample the fun, and the sales pushes have been very successful.

"Actually, they are not only fun, but very beneficial," Ms. Ewing said. "Now the over-50 groups have discovered that they are really great. With the fitness movement, they are more into exercise and they realize that sometimes their muscles hurt, too.

Extension Ladder Is Worth The Cost

By Andy Lang

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's a rare house indeed that doesn't have an extension ladder as part of its necessary maintenance equipment.

Whether you are painting the outside of your house, removing leaves from the gutter, repairing a damaged roof shingle or just trying to recover a rubber ball that has lost its way, an extension ladder is something you need when you need it.

Even if it is used only a couple of times a year, it justifies its cost, which can be as little as $25 or as much as $250.

An extension ladder is really two ladders — fitted together so that one can be moved upward and downward to suit your immediate needs. Most are made of wood and metal, although there are some light ladders other than aluminum. You should have one that you can handle, but which suits the requirements of your house.

Obviously, a one-story house does not need as long nor as heavy a ladder as a two-story building. But there are other considerations, one of the most important being who is likely to use it.

An elderly couple who will not or cannot climb a ladder of any size does not need an extension ladder, yet they should have one if some other member of the family may use it. That's a personal matter which the homeowner can pass judgment on.

Remember that if you get a wooden ladder, it should never be painted. The paint can hide defects already there, as well as those that might occur at some later time. And if you get a metal ladder, it must be handled with care to prevent it from coming into contact with power lines.

When you use an extension ladder, the most vital factor is safety. You should learn how to put it up and what not to do when you get on it.

To be sure an extension ladder has the proper balance to keep it from tipping when it is placed alongside your house, the feet of it must be a certain distance away from the foundation. That distance should be one-fourth the length of the ladder. If you have a 24-foot ladder, for instance, its base should be 6 feet from the house foundation when it is standing against the house.

If you have an aluminum ladder that isn't too long and is light enough to be handled easily, you sometimes can set it against the house without following a set procedure.

But most of the time, a ladder should be placed against the house in a certain fashion to prevent it from getting out of control as it being set into position.

The correct way is to set the base of the ladder against the house so that it is at right angles to the foundation and the rungs will be in the correct position when it is upright.

Go back to the top of the ladder, grab the top rung and raise it to the height of your shoulders. Now walk under the ladder slowly, keeping a tight hold on it and releasing one hand at a time. Be sure you have one hand on the ladder at all times.

As you walk and you move your hands up the ladder, it will be getting more and more vertical. At the same time, slowly and carefully move the feet away from the house until it is far enough. That point should be where you placed a marker of some kind to indicate the exact spot.

After everything is set and you are sure the ladder is at the right height, the right distance from the wall and its feet are steady, step on the first rung. Shake your body a little to test the ladder's stability.

Once high up on the ladder, there are certain safety precautions that must be observed, no matter what your chores are. Always face the ladder when climbing up or down. Hold on securely.

Tools and supplies should be carried in your pocket if they are small enough; otherwise they should be hauled up on a line. Paint stores carry all kinds of equipment for anchoring tools and equipment, stabilizing the ladder and steadying the feet of it.

Whether painting or anything else, do not overreach. It is better to move your ladder frequently than risk a fall.

And be sure you know at all times where there is any electric wiring. Do this checking before you begin working. Don't do any work from the top rungs of the ladder.

And forget about the ladder or whatever you planned to do if it is a windy day.

Rust and corrosion attack metal hardware and household objects because air and moisture eventually get under their protective films. The tiniest nick in the paint, oil, lacquer or other coating lets air and moisture begin their attack. Rust will spread under a paint finish and often won't be seen until it buckles the surface. To stop its spread, the rust should be removed with sandpaper or steel wool, then coated with a rust-proofing product available in paint or hardware stores.

Homes

family can read quietly and retire from the rest of the house. Comfortable lounge chairs, side tables and small couches give bedrooms a new dimension. Some people even opt to have fireplaces as the focus of these bedroom and living areas.

To complement these spacious rooms, home buyers frequently look for large, adjacent bathrooms, often subdivided into two areas so that more than one person can use the room at the same time.

In the large bathrooms, homeowners may also build whirlpool baths with separate showers and steam showers (an enclosed shower linked to a steam generator). This provides an almost self-sufficient mini health spa right in a bathroom.

Previously, bathrooms were small with minimal and restrictive light. Bathrooms are now being built with larger windows and skylights to provide a greater feeling of openness and light. In the same vein, enclosed sundecks are being built outside of the master bedrooms. These extended porches show even greater popularity in the sun belt for obvious climatological reasons.

For the health conscious, homes will include small separate bay areas for exercise equipment and space for calisthenics and stretching.

In homes at one development at Port Liberte, Jersey City, N.J., this bay area is located in the master bedroom, near the shower, so that it can be used conveniently at any time. Port Liberte has a cross section of homes ranging from $150,000 condominiums to $900,000 family townhouses, built along a 2½-mile network of man-made canals.

Walk-in closets these days generally feature shelves designed for shoes and several hanging racks for sport coats and slacks and a variety of drawers. The closet becomes well organized, transformed into a storage and dressing area, and very much more, with a section that includes large mirrors for dressing.

Whatever market developers are dealing with, there appears to be an increasing expectation of luxury.

Areas for entertaining play an important role. Foyers — large, formal areas — are separated from the living room and dining room, decorated with tile and marble. This is a place to greet guests that reflects the overall theme of a home.

Kitchens are taking on a new flavor — very European in style and design. Appliances and cabinet work are getting sleeker and cleaner, with much more sophistication in the way they operate.

The typical American buyer will take to this with enthusiasm. Smooth closed range tops, built-in refrigerators, built-in microwaves, separate double ovens and a garbage disposal and compactor will be incorporated into more and more modern kitchens.

A wider range of counter materials will also be used, including natural and synthetic stones, as well as tile and stainless steel. They are durable and easy to live with, and new in appearance. Kitchens will become an area where style is as important as design.

"Naturally, we'd like to see them sold, and we've been doing a lot of advertising and a lot of public relations in the South and Midwest," she said. "They're doing very well now."

Bishton, vice-president of the institute's regional chapter, said he often sells spas to retirees involved in exercise programs. The swirling water can also help improve circulation.

Sales remain slow in Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi, but business is growing in North Carolina — one of four states in the South Atlantic Region, Ms. Ewing said.

In 1986, hot tub and spa sales in the region made up 8 percent of the total national sales. That fell a bit in 1987, but there were still nearly 11,600 units sold in North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and Georgia.

In addition to lobbying and national advertising campaigns, the spa institute also produces consumer information, she said, because there is very little material available to customers who want to learn more about different type of product lines and new developments.

Sunset magazine has published a book called "Spas and Hot Tubs," and HPBooks has put out a book that will also provide consumers with important information, she said.

Don't Let Remodeling Terms Become Confusing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Do the terms involved with the remodeling of houses confuse you? They need not, according to the Small Homes Council-Building Research Council at the University of Illinois.

There are six types of remodeling. The Council says they are preservation, restoration, rehabilitation, retrofitting, conversions and additions.

Preservation is keeping the building in its present condition and preventing further deterioration. Restoration refers to restoring a house to its original character, which could mean removing so-called improvements made in the past. Rehabilitation involves the updating of existing features such as bathrooms and kitchens.

Retrofitting is a term for improvements made to an existing house, usually to make it more energy-efficient. Conversion changes the use of existing space to fit current needs. And additions usually involve the addition of space to the exterior of the house.

The most expensive of those six ways of remodeling a house is restoration, which the Council also calls the most challenging type of remodeling. Any kind of remodeling, no matter what it is called, is an investment of time and money.

It can affect the value of the home and the cost to own and operate it. But some remodeling is of dubious value from the standpoint of financial return.

It could decrease its value and even price it out of the neighborhood. For instance, a house worth $100,000, remodeled to bring it into the $150,000 to $200,000 range, might bring no offers if priced at the latter figure.

That's because a family wishing to spend between $150,000 and $200,000 for a house might not want to move into an area where the average price of the other homes is $100,000. The remodeled house then becomes a white elephant, unable to be sold except at far less than its value.

A homeowner is often faced with a choice of whether to remodel or look for another place in which to live.

The advantages of remodeling include maintaining ties in the neighborhood and to the schools, better financing rates at the old percentages and avoiding the cost of selling, buying and moving. In addition, do-it-yourself projects can be less expensive than buying a house where the work already has been done and the costs are included in the price.

Disadvantages include the dirt, dust and clutter which will disrupt family life during the project, costs which turn out to be higher than expected, dissatisfaction with the finished job and the aforementioned "over-improvement."

One kind of home improvement that does not really increase the value of a home, but is often desirable is that involving maintenance. This could include such things as painting, decorating and repairs made to offset the effects of normal wear and tear.

Even though such maintenance does not add actual value to the house, it often is vital, since it brings the house up to the standard that a buyer would expect.

Because that helps to sell a house faster and with less trouble, it has its own special importance. There aren't many bigger headaches to a family than having a new place to live and being unable to get rid of the old one.

A two-page checklist of items to be considered before remodeling is included in the eight-page circular, "Planning for Remodeling," one of a series of publications for the homeowner issued by the Council.

Single copies can be obtained for $1, including postage and handling, from the Small Homes Council-Building Research Council, University of Illinois, One East St. Mary's Road, Champaign, IL 61820.

Whether a new shingled roof can be applied right over the old shingles is a decision that can be made only by a professional. He must determine whether the weight of the additional shingles would be too heavy for the framework. Two sets of shingles are about all that most roofs can handle.

How-to videos, branching out from the popular self-improvement exercise tapes, now are showing home improvements as well.

Among the latest releases are "Contracting a Home," "Refinishing a Lower Level," "Three Season Porch" and "Security," all from the Hometime library. The videotapes run between 40 and 90 minutes and include a printed guide listing materials and tools needed for the job.

A new Stanley Works videotape is "The Stanley Armoire," a 35-minute tape on tips and techniques for building a computer-cupboard-style armoire.

Many home improvement tapes are now available at home centers and hardware stores.

Dean Johnson and Joanne Liebeler host the Hometime series of videos. The 36-tape library is based on their PBS-TV series.

DOE Raises Its R-Value Minimums

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The U.S. Department of Energy has upgraded its insulation recommendations to home owners, increasing its minimum R-value suggestions for the country's various climates.

The new R-values, which measure insulation's resistance to heat flow, are based on climate, heating and cooling needs, forms of heating used and prices of energy.

For example, in a gas-heated home in St. Louis, or Seattle, the recommendation is R-38 for the attic. A similar home in Atlanta or San Francisco carries an R-30 recommendation. In Portland, Maine, it would be R-49.

The new recommendations cover other areas of the home as well, including ceilings, floors, exterior walls and crawl spaces.

"It's important that homeowners take the new guidelines seriously," said Sen. Timothy E. Wirth, D-Colo., chairman of the Alliance to Save Energy and member of the Senate Energy and Banking Committee, "because Americans spend $100 billion on household energy, or more than

Add Sunlight To A Room For 'Pizzazz'

Sunspace Expands Almost Any Home

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Style and practicality are two reasons often cited for building sunspace additions to a home, but many prefer another: Let the sun shine in.

From solariums and greenhouses to skylights, from additions of whole rooms to kitchen and bathroom remodeling, the common interests are more light and more living space.

"The successful kitchen today is one with lots of light, a good view, and good access," says Joe Esposito, executive vice president of Four Seasons Greenhouses and Design Center, Holbrook, N.Y.

"People want to feel the activity going on in the rest of the house while they're working in the kitchen," he says. "Nobody who works in a kitchen wants to feel like a servant or a cook."

Even in the bathroom, says Esposito, "natural light and expansion views give the room that pizzazz, that special touch that is so important."

"A sunspace expands a house for anything a homeowner wants, a workplace for business or hobbies, private retreat, or entertainment center," says Lee Stanley, chief designer at Solar Additions Inc., Greenwich, Conn., "and helps reduce fuel bills at the same time by capturing and trapping solar heat. The most common reason today is to get more living space."

The sunspace, which attaches directly to a home, features panels of front glass that bring solar energy inside and insulated roof and side walls.

Stanley says a $10,000 add-on sunspace can increase the value of an $85,000 house to more than $100,000.

Sunspace in the form of skylights is one

The Associated Press

Solarium-type roofing allows natural light to pour into an otherwise dark kitchen recommendation if you're considering remodeling the bathroom.

Substituting a window with a skylight can provide a touch of elegance as well as more space.

Interior designer Alice Silverman, president of Creative Interiors and Decorate-a-Day Inc., Carmel, N.Y., says a skylight in the bathroom can have other advantages. "Many bathroom windows are located in the shower stall," she says. "Water can collect on the sill, rotting it and causing moisture problems behind the wall. A skylight is a perfect solution, and it offers total privacy."

Most manufacturers offer three basic models of skylights, says Alec Bechtold, vice president of the Ventarama Skylight Corp.: Fixed (cannot open or close), venting, or motorized venting.

Motorized models, says Bechtold, can open or close with a switch rather than by a pole.

Energy

The DOE estimates that 50 to 70 percent of the energy used in the average American home is for heating and cooling.

For the do-it-yourself insulation installers, Thomas Seymour, of Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp., offers this advice:

— First, measure the length and width of the area to be insulated; multiply the two to get the square footage. Then, determine how wide the insulation should be.

— Determine if you need a vapor barrier and what is the proper R-value for your insulation. Higher R-value means greater insulating power. The retailer should be able to tell you the new government recommendations for your area.

— Before starting the installation, put on safety glasses, work gloves, a long-sleeved shirt and a mask; have a sharp knife available.

When mixing concrete, remember that the strongest concrete is created with the least amount of water possible. Of course, there should be enough water to hold the ingredients together.

Pointers Make It Easy To Buy Top Quality Upholstered Furniture

By Constance Ward
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Have you been considering buying upholstered furniture?

Before making that trip to the furniture store, take time out to read some tips supplied by Evelyn Spangler of the Home Economics Extension Service.

The five main areas to concentrate on when checking upholstered furniture are fabric, padding, filling, springs and frame, all important to the quality of the furniture.

Begin with checking the fabric. If you are looking at fabric samples, you will see letters and numbers used to grade the fabric. The letters and numbers stand for the material's quality and cost. There's not standardized grading system so ask a salesperson for the scale for your sample.

The fabric is made of threads that form the fabric. The number of threads per square inch and the type of fibers used contribute to how the grade is made.

Mrs. Spangler said when choosing fabrics, "avoid something that soil easily — get tightly woven material fabric."

This advice is especially important if you have children or pets. The more tightly woven to material, the easier it is to clean and the more durable it is.

In case you're wondering how to check to see if the fabric is tightly woven, there are several ways.

Hold a piece of the material up to a light. You shouldn't be able to see any light except for small points.

Take two edges of the fabric, and holding with your thumbs 1 to 2 inches apart, press down on the fabric as hard as you can. If the yarns begin ripping or tearing apart, the construction isn't strong.

Take an eraser and rub the material quickly. If bits of fabric come off, it's a sign that the fabric will form tiny balls.

Also, check to see if the design is printed or woven. If the back of the material is a solid color, the design is printed.

An additional way to check the design is to rub the material with a hankie and see if the color rubs off.

Fiber content is another important aspect of fabric. Most fabrics are a combination of fibers that make up the features of each yarn.

If you know the furniture will have to put up with some abuse, it's best to use fabrics with a high nylon or olefin content. Nylon is very tough and resists soil and signs of wear. Olefin resists abrasions and stains. It is also softer than nylon and won't fade so easily when dyed.

In case you can't find furniture with those fibers, some other good fabrics are polyester, cotton and rayon. If you choose cotton, be sure to get the type with a soil resistant finish.

The next area to check is the padding. Padding smooths and protects rough edges and corners.

Examine the tops and corners of the arms, the top back of the cushion, the front rail (where the seat cushions rest), the corners of the back and the outside wing and wing chairs.

All these sections should feel smooth and you shouldn't be able to feel the wooden edges of the frame through the padding. If you do feel it, Mrs. Spangler said it's a sure sign that the fabric will show wear.

A good type of padding is polyurethane foam and polyester fiberfill. They are the most durable padding materials.

A chair sits comfortably depending on what type of filling is in the cushions. The filling provides support and shapes the cushions. Most furniture today uses foam.

Foam is polyurethane and air. The key is to get foam with less air in the filling because the higher the foam's density and better the support. If it has less the density, it will compress over time and eventually not fit the cushion cover.

There are different types of polyurethane foam cushioning used in upholstered furniture. Some types are con-

The Associated Press

Check fabric, padding, filling, springs and frame when buying upholstered furniture ventional, high resilience and high comfort. High resilience and high comfort provide the best comfort and softness.

To test the filling, sit on the cushions. You'll know it's low density foam if it gives little support and you hit bottom. Lift the cushions. High-density cushions are heavy; low-density cushions without added compounds are light.

A simple way to check the type of foam is by asking a sales clerk or by reading the "Under Penalty of Law" tag.

Springs are also important to the comfort of a chair — they give the chair its bounce.

There are three kinds of springs: double-cone coil, no-sag and drop-in. Each gives a different type of support.

Double-cone coil springs, used in quality furniture, give maximum support and comfort. These springs are mounted individually and are hand-tied eight ways with strong twine.

As quality decreases, fewer springs may be used. Each spring may be tied only four to six times.

No-sag springs are used in good quality cushionless chairs. This type of spring will also be used in the back of quality sofas and chairs.

But beware of cheaper furniture, because manufacturers try to keep costs down by using a few no-sag springs. The chair should have at least five rows of the springs.

The final type of spring is the drop-in spring unit. This pre-assembled unit drops into the chair to form the seat. Single-cone coils are used, and they aren't as comfortable or durable as double-cone coil springs.

Mrs. Spangler said to be sure to check the springs. You shouldn't be able to feel them. If you sit in the chair and land in the bottom, the springs aren't sturdy.

The frame must also be inspected. Check to find out what the frame is made of and how it is built. You'll have a long-lasting product if the base is strong.

Quality furniture is made with hardwood frames of woods like maple, elm or hickory. The frame should be kiln-dried to prevent shrinking or swelling.

When checking furniture, try to lift it. It should have some weight to it and shouldn't wobble or creak.

Minimize Aches And Pains Of Gardening By Getting Into Shape, Using Right Tools

By Prudence Heller
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Is there such a thing as painless gardening?

Judy Glatstein, an instructor in design at the New York Botanic Garden and herself a gardener in Wilton, Conn., says perhaps not — but there are many things one can do to minimize the aches.

Use tools appropriate to the job, she urges. If you're planting just a few bulbs, a trowel will do; for large quantities, dig up the area involved with a shovel or spade. Don't use a heavy pump sprayer if you have only a few bushes or plants to spray. A small container with a hand trigger will do.

Reading seed catalogs in winter is fun, but it won't keep you in shape for gardening in the spring. Mrs. Glatstein, Fred McGourty, a Norwalk, Conn., nurseryman who teaches at the New York Botanic Garden, and others urge exercise — walking, swimming, other sports during the winter. And in the spring, start gardening slowly; don't try to put in a full day right off.

Lifting is less likely to give gardeners aching backs if they bend the knees, grasp the item to be lifted, and then straighten up.

Mrs. Glatstein also says heavy things should be carried — if they must be carried — close to the body. But she adds, "Man invented the wheel for a reason," so get a wheelbarrow or garden cart for heavy moving. The bigger the wheels, the more maneuverable the cart.

Knees ache from damp earth? Pads for kneeling can be purchased at garden centers or elsewhere — or made at home, using scrap foam rubber. Or try raised beds, or a hanging garden, in pots.

Joel Flagler, a Rutgers University agricultural-resources management agent in New Jersey, says garden centers and garden supply catalogs offer all kinds of adaptive tools that make it possible for elderly or handicapped people to garden, and for anyone to garden more comfortably. Wood or aluminum handles can extend the length of standard shovels, hoes or cultivators. Low folding chairs and stools enable one to sit while weeding or hoeing.

Attitude toward gardening may also contribute to pain or painlessness, some gardeners say.

To keep up your morale, take on chores you can complete, urges Mrs. Glatstein. Then go on to something else. She says beginning gardeners should keep their gardens small and choose plants that are easy to maintain.

Elvin MacDonald, director of special projects at Brooklyn Botanic Garden in New York, also urges gardeners to relax. "If you think weeding hard dirt a curse, then you're more likely to get blisters," he says.

Tools should feel comfortable to the user and should be used properly. Short or tall, strong or not so strong, the gardener buying a tool should look around until finding one that feels right.

The Cooperative Extension service at Cornell University in New York State offers these tips:

— Don't leave a rake on the ground with the tines pointed upward. If you step on it, the handle may hit you in the face (and the tines could hurt your foot).

— Wear gloves when picking up garden debris, in case there are thorns or other sharp items.

— Wear protective goggles when using power equipment, and a mask over mouth and nose when spraying with insecticide.

Denatured alcohol is the solvent for shellac, turpentine or mineral spirits the solvent for oil paint and varnish. Do not use either with latex, which requires only water.

Use Garden To Teach Children About Patience, Responsibility

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Patience, responsibility and pride in accomplishments are important qualities that may be nurtured in children through a wholesome, educational and entertaining pastime — gardening.

By planning, planting, tending and harvesting a vegetable garden, children can gain a new respect for the life cycle as well as learn some basic skills for living, said Sam Uzzell, an agent in the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service.

"I think it gives kids foremost an appreciation of plant life and the interaction of all plants and animals," he said. "It also gives them some lessons in basic science and patience because they're investing time and energy today for something in the future. If you do your job well, you will be rewarded," he said.

"In trying to get children involved in gardening, you need to make things as easy as possible," Uzzell said. The children can do most of the work, but may need help with heavy chores such as preparing the soil.

Some of the first seeds that are planted should be ones that don't take too long to mature so as not to discourage the child, Uzzell said. For example, radishes only take from three to four weeks to sprout from the soil and they mature quickly.

Interest may be spurred if you "plant some things the child is going to eat and enjoy," Uzzell said. Vegetables that are easy to care for that may qualify include garden peas, sugar snap peas and beets.

Plants, such as lettuce and cabbage, also may be planted and "will stimulate some visual interest," he said.

Pulling weeds and other gardening chores that may be not be appealing to the child may be introduced in "small bits," Uzzell said. The goal initially is to make the gardening experience easy and rewarding.

"Plant less than you think you'll need (rather) than to plant too much and not take care of it," he said.

Potatoes, broccoli, cabbage and greens are vegetables that grow well during the spring, Uzzell said. Cucumbers, sweet corn, okra, sweet potatoes and tomatoes are ideal for the summer garden.

"Cherry tomatoes is something that's real suitable for kids to tend to over the long haul," he said.

Biltmore Plans Flower Festival For The Spring

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Travel to attract recreational gardeners this season includes a package tour to Britain and a flower festival in North Carolina.

Wilton House in Wiltshire, the Lake District, Castle Howard in Yorkshire, Anglesey Abbey in North Wales, Nottinghamshire, Leeds Castle in Kent and the Chelsea Flower Show in London are on the itinerary of the Garden Tour to Great Britain organized by Trafalgar Tours.

The 10-day tour, May 18-27, features visits to formal gardens of historic houses and buildings and through natural beauty areas, ending with an afternoon at Britain's most famous flower show, held at Chelsea Hospital.

The Festival of Flowers at the Biltmore Estate in Asheville, N.C., evokes the Victorian era, with 19th-century music, games, crafts and garden tours of the George Vanderbilt estate.

The festival runs April 8 through May 14.

Poison Ivy Is Nemesis In Garden

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

One plant not valued by gardeners is poison ivy.

Rashes resulting from poison ivy encounters most often occur in summer, when it thrives and victims are lightly dressed.

The best thing, of course, is to recognize and avoid the plant. But if you make contact, act quickly and thoroughly to minimize the discomfort.

Here are some pointers recommended by the 3M First Aid Center:

— Remember that the poison is in the sap found on leaves or roots, not the leaves themselves.

— Choose clothing that offers the best coverage if you're going to be gardening in an area where there might be poison ivy. Long pants, socks, long sleeves and gloves are advised.

— Clothes that have come into contact with the sap can spread the infection, so remove them carefully and wash them immediately. Treat garden equipment, particularly handles, the same way.

— If your skin comes into contact with the sap, wash the area right away. Washing with soap and water two or three times may even prevent your getting a rash, though that ultimately depends on your own sensitivity to the toxins in the sap.

— Itching and rash probably will appear from 24 to 48 hours after contact. Keep the area clean and dry. If blisters develop, clean and dress the affected area, especially if the skin is broken, since a secondary infection may set in. — If the rash is widespread or keeps you from getting on with your daily activities, contact your doctor. Prescription steroids taken orally may bring relief in serious cases, but don't rely on over-the-counter steroid creams, because they won't help.

— If the rash is localized, the best thing is to let the condition run its course, usually two or three weeks.

'Bio-Intensive Gardening' Used To Push Yields

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ITHACA, N.Y. — A method of increasing vegetable yields using available resources, developed by a Cornell University graduate, is bringing better nutrition to people in underdeveloped Third World nations.

Called "bio-intensive gardening," the technique depends on local conditions and uses available plant and animal wastes rather than expensive imported fertilizers. Coupled with basic knowledge about crop rotation and companion planting best for small plots, the method has increased vegetable crop yields wherever it has been tried.

Julian Gonsalves, senior researcher at the International Institute for Rural Reconstruction in the Philippines, developed bio-intensive gardening while a graduate student at Cornell. His demonstration project in the Philippines started with three rural villages and grew to 224 villages by the second growing season.

In each village, several local farmers were trained in the technique, including seed bed preparation, use of organic fertilizers, composting and natural pest control. The farmers applied the techniques to small family vegetable plots, usually about 200 square feet. They followed up with discussions with Institute technicians about problems encountered, such as soil erosion after heavy rain. Technicians then could devise techniques to deal with the problem, using available resources.

Bio-intensive farming has been used successfully in both high-rainfall and arid climates.

'Scare-Eye' Balloon Is Newest Scarecrow

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Many food crops, including strawberries, cherries, blueberries and sweet corn, suffer bird damage. One way to protect them is to float a special "scare-eye" balloon, reported successful in scaring birds in Japan.

Other ways are to use firecrackers, sonic devices, carbide and propane cannons, rubber snakes, owl decoys and netting, but birds get used to these and their effectiveness diminishes.

The "scare-eye" balloon is hung from trees or long poles to frighten away marauding birds. The balloons are made from heavy gauge, weather-proof vinyl, the size of basketballs.

The manufacturer, Hartmann's Plantation, Grand Junction, Mich., says control is most effective with birds that flock, but that swallows, purple martins and songbirds are not frightened by the eye. Hartmann's recommends two balloons per small garden, six per acre of orchard or farm crop.

If you have a circuit breaker panel in your house and one of the breakers trips, blacking out the power on that circuit, check if there are too many lights and appliances on the line. There are if the line fails again after you reset the breaker. If it fails again after unplugging some appliances, you may need an electrician's help.

HOMEWORK

Houseplant Containers Influence Plant Growth

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The primary use of houseplant containers is to hold the soil for plants to grow in, but they have a major influence on plant growth because they affect a plant's water supply.

The size and porosity of plant containers and the presence or absence of drainage holes in the bottom are critical factors, says Lee Taylor, Michigan State University Extension horticulture specialist. The relative sizes of the pot and the plant it holds affect both the plant's water and nutrient supplies.

Taylor says that "a plant that's too large for its pot dries out quickly. A plant in an oversized pot may suffer from too much water because, after watering, the soil stays saturated for a long time. Also, the nutrients in the soil may be leached out before the plant has a chance to use them."

The container's porosity affects the plant's water supply by influencing how quickly the soil dries out after watering. Householders who tend to overwater plants should avoid glazed, glass or plastic containers because they keep water from moving out of the soil and air from moving in. On the other hand, porous clay pots permit air to move into the soil and water to escape. This is important because plant roots need air as well as water to function.

Roots that stay a long time in water-logged soil tend to rot and die.

Excess water escapes through drainage holes.

Taylor says it is important to discard excess water after the soil is thoroughly moistened so that the soil can dry. If the pot sits in water after the soil is thoroughly moistened, the soil will absorb water as fast as it's lost to evaporation or taken up by plant roots. As a result, the spaces between soil particles will remain filled with water rather than air. Using clay pots with drainage holes and saucers is no guarantee that you won't overwater plants. Clay might be a good choice, however, if you tend to kill your plants with too much attention, says Taylor. If you want the decorative look of glazed ceramic pots, simply place the porous clay pot inside the fancy container.

"Relative humidity" is the amount of moisture in the air compared to the maximum amount it can hold at that temperature. When the temperature changes even a tiny bit, the relative humidity changes, since warm air holds more moisture than cold air.

The Ladybug Is A Friend To Gardeners

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Who says the only good bug is a dead bug? One of the best bugs to have in your garden is the ladybug. Each day, it feeds on many "bad" insects, such as aphids, Colorado potato beetles, grape root-worms, alfalfa weevils, plus others. This helps keep things in natural balance.

The black-spotted red ladybird, better known as ladybug, is a voracious, predatory beetle described as one the most beneficial on earth.

Millions of them have been released on croplands, their hearty appetites helping to reduce aphid populations — with biological pest control.

Cornell University scientists note the advantages of biological controls: There is no environmental damage; the pests do not develop resistance to their predators as they do to chemicals, and a small initial investment results in a safe, permanent control method.

In Palo Alto, Calif., some years ago, park officials released 300,000 ladybugs to fight plant pests. Gardeners in Albuquerque, N.M., scattered more than 2.5 million ladybugs to protect plants. In Medford, Ore., Jackson and Perkins invited thousands of ladybugs to an aphid feast in their rose test garden.

National Geographic magazine has reported 4,300 known species of ladybugs, or which North America has 370. Remember the children's chant: "Ladybug, ladybug, fly away home, your house is on fire, your children will burn." This was a plea by English farmers concerned for the safety of ladybugs during the annual burning of hop fields.

Given a chance, an adult egg-laying ladybug may consume up to 200 aphids a day. One larva may eat between 200 and 300 during its development.

National Geographic noted that ladybugs were put to work by man in the late 1800s when a species, Rodolia cardinalis, was imported into California from Australia to combat the cottony cushion scale insect, saving the citrus industry in two years at a cost of only $1,500.

Ladybugs are sold by the pint, quart and gallon; a half-pint means about 4,000 ladybugs.

A major concern is in getting the tiny migratory insects not to fly away home. California studies indicate that 90 percent wing off after release. Since they don't fly at night, a late afternoon or early evening release will encourage at least an overnight stay.

The beetles are very mobile. When there only a few aphids around, a Cornell researcher reported, they migrate, searching for other areas of food, scouting apple crops, oats, winter wheat, sugar beets and beans. The researchers imported the predacious European seven-spotted lady beetle to help protect potato and alfalfa fields.

There is no correlation between the number of spots and the beetle's age. The number of spots on a beetle's back is characteristic of its species, not its age.

Ladybugs are but one example of millions of harmless insects, Cornell noted. In fact, fewer than 2 percent of all insects are pests and those are "often controlled by natural enemies." The researchers recommend that gardeners and homeowners be certain that insects are actually doing damage before they take action.

Insects belong in a garden. They are natural and often harmless, if not beneficial. Spray only if you detect damage. Beneficial insects such as ladybugs of all kinds and green lacewings should be protected, entomologists say. By learning to identify their eggs and larvae, we may save time, money, energy and the environment.

Many ladybugs have been released in recent years to devour aphids feeding on upstate New York alfalfa, peaches and potatoes.

If you see an unattractive, dark insect with orange, blue and black patches and a deeply segmented body covered with spines, don't squash it. It may be an immature lady beetle, hungry and looking for a meal.

One catalog (Burpee) offers a half-pint for $9.95, a quart for $17.95, recommending they be released in small batches.

Increase Your Garden Growing Power By Keeping Log Of Each Year's Work

NCSU NEWS SERVICE

Quick. When was the first frost last year? How much did you fertilize and water your okra plants two years ago? When did you plant corn last year?

If you don't know the answers to these questions, chances are you don't keep a garden record. That's too bad because good records can save time and money, according to Larry Bass, horticultural specialist with the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service.

Each gardener's system of keeping records varies. Some gardeners use a notebook or journal system, while others use a calendar. According to Bass, the calendar system is probably the most effective method because it has the date and a full year of little squares on which to write notes.

Exactly what should a garden record contain? Bass offers these suggestions:

Planting — Indicate the date and whether seeds or transplants were used. This will help plan for a continuous harvest.

Varieties — Make a note of the name of the variety of each vegetable you plant.

Depending upon how well an individual variety performs, this record will help you decide if you continue to grow it or try something else in next year's garden.

Weather — Record the first and last frost dates. This will help estimate the frost dates in a particular area. Record rainfall amounts, air and soil temperatures. Many radio stations will give this information.

Transplant Starts — Record the date seeds were planted indoors or outside in containers. Also record when they were transplanted to a larger container prior to being placed in the garden.

Yield and First Harvest — Keeping up with yield helps to plan how much of each vegetable to plan next season for freezing and canning purposes. Noting the first harvest of each crop can alert you to the time a certain vegetable needs to be harvested, especially root crops.

Spraying — Keeping a record of when you spray the garden with chemicals will help you abide by the appropriate schedule each year. Chemicals should be used according to recommended label instructions.

Use Grass Clippings As Mulch For Lawn

What do you do with the clippings after mowing the lawn?

Put them back into the earth with a mulching mower, say spokesmen at the Bolens Corp.

Mulching results in generally greener and healthier lawns because the nutrients are returned to the soil, they say. Mulch particles decompose and are absorbed by the grass root system within 14 days.

Rocks or boulders give character and permanence to a garden setting

Spend Spare Time On A Rock Garden

By Earl Aronson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

If summer brings a lull to your gardening activity, perhaps you'll have time to build a rock garden.

Select a location that has at least a half-day of sun — more is better if you want to make a show of flowering plants.

A steep slope or the vicinity of a rock outcrop is good. Not everyone has such a location, however, and we suggest you avoid making a round pile in the middle of a lawn. Instead, place the rock garden in a corner, off to the side, next to a foundation or bordering steps.

If the area is level, change the grade. Shovel out the soil a foot to 18 inches and slope it, perhaps, making two hills with a valley between. Then put in a 6-inch layer of stones or gravel for drainage. On this foundation replace the soil, mixing in sand or gravel to improve drainage. Add some peat.

Then develop the contour, with the lowest or largest stones embedded to make them look as though they have always been there. Then add your next layer with the spaces between filled with the mixture or medium for the plants to grow in.

We suggest you place rocks horizontally and in a line so that they appear to be part of a bed or layer. Avoid "dragon's teeth," or pointed sharp rocks standing up. We prefer one kind of stone, not a collection, and mica-infested rocks are quite gaudy.

Continue building to a reasonable height, then place a few stones to tie in the main groupings in the garden. You can move them around until you get the right effect, then imbed the rocks into the soil.

Finally, place your plants. A narrow hand trowel is handy to dig between the rocks.

Select low, creeping plants, not border flowers. Consider alyssum, aubrietas, low pinks, armerias, creeping phlox, miniature iris or other miniatures, spring and fall crocus, snowdrops and other low-growing varieties.

You don't have to feed often. Water when necessary and weed or loosen soil if necessary.

Pick Your Plants And Seeds With Real Care

The Wrong Selection Could Cut Your Yield

NCSU NEWS BUREAU

Your choice of seeds and transplants can heavily influence the yields you harvest from the vegetable garden this year. There are differences among varieties that bring disappointment if you pick the wrong one.

Agricultural Extension Service horticulturists at North Carolina State University recommend that you consider selecting seeds and plants by variety name. There are thousands of different ones available. Some are better suited for growing in North Carolina than others. And each has its own qualities, yield potential and hardiness.

An important consideration in selecting tomato plants, for example, is to buy those with disease resistance, if you are having trouble with wilt diseases. Three of these are Whopper, Celebrity and Better Boy. Another good performing variety is Mountain Pride. It was developed by North Carolina Agricultural Research Service scientists at NCSU and has become very popular since its release a few years ago.

One of the favorite okra varieties continues to be Clemson Spineless. Other good ones include Emerald, Lee and Annie Oakley. Your county agricultural extension office can give you planting date recommendations as well as identify some of the best varieties to plant. Okra, for example, shouldn't be planted in most sections of the state before May 1.

Some of the best cucumbers for pickling are Carolina, Calypso and County Fair '83. Popular slicing cucumbers include Poinsett, Sweet Slice and County Fair '83.

Senneca Chief (yellow) and Silver Queen (white) continue to be favorite sweet corn varieties.

Southern peas are a favorite in North Carolina. Good producing varieties include Dixilee, Mississippi Silver and Colossus. Like okra, this is a warm weather crop and shouldn't be planted too early. Wait until May.

Some old and familiar names are still on the recommended list of snap beans and lima beans. Tenderette, Harvester and Astor are good snap beans varieties. Kentucky Wonder 191 and Blue Lake are good pole beans. Forkhook 242, Bridgeton and Early Thorogreen are favorite bush lima beans, and King of the Garden and Carolina Sieva are good pole limas.

'Designer Vegetables' Taking Root

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Arugula. Cardoon. Gobo. Scorzonera. No, they're not rare diseases, nor are they foreign phrases that will get your ears slapped.

They are among dozens of new and unusual gourmet vegetables — some call them "designer vegetables" — on a list compiled for home gardeners and commercial growers by a Cornell University vegetable crop specialist.

Unconventional crops have become increasingly popular in recent years, says Robert A. Kline, a senior extension associate for Cornell Cooperative Extension in the College of Life and Sciences at the Ithaca, N.Y., school. Kline attributes the interest to the increase in health-conscious consumers, who eat more conventional vegetables and are looking for diversity.

"The market for these unconventional vegetables will continue to expand," he says, "and vegetable growers in the Northeast should have a share of that growing market."

Similar conclusions have been reached by Richard VanVranken, an agricultural agent in Atlantic County, N.J., for the Rutgers Cooperative Extension Service.

At a recent convention of the New Jersey Annual Vegetable Meeting, VanVranken said that baby carrots, endive, radicchio, oriental radishes, fennel, and mung beans are some of the vegetable varieties that restaurant chefs love to experiment with and home cooks are not afraid to try.

Robert L. Bidner, president of RLB Food Distributors of West Caldwell, N.J., said, "A few years ago, if I tried to introduce the avocado to a grocer, he would have laughed me out the door. Not anymore. There's a national preoccupation with health and fitness, and waves of new immigrants, and sophisticated consumers who read food magazines."

That's one of the reasons that Cornell's Kline developed his list of more than 240 varieties of some 50 crops, based on field trials conducted over the past three years.

His recommended crops range from Jerusalem artichoke to a rare tomato called "tomatillo" that yields golf-ball-sized fruit inside papery sheathes, or capsules. It is used to make salsa, a spicy sauce.

Arugula? That's a spicy, leafy vegetable used in salads. Gobo is a crop popular in Japan. Cardoon leafy vegetable with a wide "vein" in the middle; only the vein is eaten. And scorzonera is a type of salsify known as "vegetable oyster" or "oyster plant" because its black-skinned roots taste somewhat like oysters.

Other exotic crops recommended include radicchio, a type of chicory that forms a head much like lettuce; witloof, a Belgian endive; Chinese artichoke, which produces very small potato-like tubers, and escarole, a kind of endive with flatter leaves.

Finding Immortality Among Roses Requires Luck And Lots Of Money

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Christian Dior, Anna Pavlova and the Empress Josephine found immortality in the rose garden, but the honor requires luck — and lots of money.

For centuries, rose breeders have named new varieties in honor of the heroic, the beautiful and the famous. But they won't guarantee the flower will catch the public's fancy.

It costs up to $62,000 to buy the right to name a rose, says Terry Kenwright, vice president of the British Association of Rose Breeders.

He said it can take as long as 15 years to develop a new blossom, and "breeders are businessmen. They want some reward for their effort."

Britain's 17 professional breeders introduce only 35 new varieties each year on average, and only a fraction of those are available for private naming.

Newspapers, charities and big businesses have roses named after them. There's a Chrysler Imperial rose and a Times rose. The Everest Double Fragrance is named after a storm window factory.

One of the oldest and most famous cultivated roses is the fragile pink flower the French call Cuisse-de-Nymphé — Nymph's Thigh. The British, who have grown it for 500 years, prefer to call it Great Maiden's Blush.

A blossom named after a factory might smell as sweet, but could it so perfectly evoke the silken cheek of youth?

In the depths of winter, a rose catalog with its mysterious and seductive names offers a promise of spring. There is Eglantine, Celestial, Rose d'Amour, Black Prince and the splendid crimson Cardinal de Richelieu.

Even rosa horrida, described in one catalog as "a strange, gooseberry-like bush" from the 18th century, appeals to the curiosity.

There are dashing dukes, Grandpa Dickson and the dress designer Dior. But the honors go mostly to the ladies: Penelope, ballet dancer Anna Pavlova, dozens of duchesses and Ma Perkins.

Roses have inspired wonderful tales about their origin: A jealous goddess created the flower to rival Venus' beauty; the first rose sprang from the sweat of the prophet Mohammed or fell from the hair of Aurora as she combed her golden locks.

One of history's greatest rose lovers, Napoleon's empress Josephine, grew every known rose of the day at Malmaison chateau and is honored by the pale pink Souvenir de la Malmaison.

The unfortunate Atom Bomb, reputedly quite a nice red rose, never caught on and disappeared from the catalogs soon after its introduction in 1954.

Some say the Peace rose by any other name might not have become one of the most popular modern varieties. Bred in southern France during World War II and shipped out of the country just before Hitler's armies invaded, it was named in the United States on the day Berlin fell to the Allies.

Hundreds of Peace blooms were sent to the first United Nations Conference in 1945. It was planted in gardens and at memorials, and by the mid-1950s, an estimated 30 million of the bushes had been sold.

Few dare to speak ill of this famous yellow rose tinged with pink, but some mutter under their breath that it has no fragrance, and can a rose be a rose be a rose without perfume?

Pointers Make Power Mowing Much Safer Job

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Seventy thousand consumers were injured while using outdoor power equipment in 1987, most of them adults over age 25, according to statistics from the Consumer Product Safety Commission's National Electronic Injury Surveillance System.

The Outdoor Power Equipment Institute, a national trade association of manufacturers, offers this advice to consumers:

— Be sure you know how to operate your equipment before you start. Read the operator's manual.

— Dress properly for the job. Wear substantial shoes, long pants and close-fitting clothes; no loose jewelry or unrestrained hair.

— Handle gasoline carefully. Store gas in an approved container, away from the house. Fill up before you start. Wipe up spills and never light a match, or smoke, while gasoline is being used.

— Clean up and clear out the area — including other people and pets — before you start.

— Follow recommended safe procedures in operating equipment. Always turn off the engine before attempting to unclog or do any work on the equipment itself. When leaving equipment unattended, turn off the engine and remove the key.

— Keep hands and feet away from moving parts.

A leaping or jumping saw chain, irregular or crooked cuts, or excessive chain wear are signs that an electric saw's guidebar needs replacement. Abnormal bar wear often results from an over-tightened chain, lack of lubrication, or operator misuse.
