Soviet Voters Stun Party, Government Officials

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Voters offered their first real choice in 70 years spurned top Communist and government officials in the Soviet Union's most populous regions in a stunning rejection of the status quo, returns showed today.

Moscow's mayor, its No. 2 Communist Party leader, five regional party chairmen in the Ukraine and the party chiefs in Leningrad and Kiev were all rejected Sunday in contested races for the new Congress of People's Deputies.

In addition, a non-voting member of the ruling party Politburo, Yuri Solovyev, was defeated in Leningrad even though he had run unopposed, officials at the Central Election Commission in Moscow said.

Enough voters crossed Solovyev's name off the ballots to deny the regional party chief the required majority, forcing a runoff.

Rejection of the officials by voters did not sweep them from their jobs in the party or government apparatus. But it was a serious embarrassment that could weaken their power base and eventually lead to their replacement.

Voters appeared to be expressing dissatisfaction with the inefficiency and mismanagement associated with an entrenched party elite that many see as resisting President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's efforts to reform Soviet society, to end chronic food shortages and improve the quality of life.

Three other men who sit on the 20-member Politburo also were candidates Sunday. All ran unopposed and all won, election officials said. They included Vitaly I. Vorotnikov, the president of the Russian republic, who received 84 percent of the vote according to city officials in Voronezh, where he ran.

Final voter turnout figures were not available, but figures from individual cities indicated it was high. The Communist Party newspaper Pravda said 89 percent of those eligible voted in the southern city of Krasnodar and 90.3 percent voted in the Ukrainian city of Kharkov.

The 1,500 winners in Sunday's vote and in subsequent runoffs will join those picked earlier by the party and other officially sanctioned organizations in the 2,250-seat congress, which is still certain to be dominated by the ruling Communists.

Still, many independent voices are expected to make a lively body of the congress, which will meet once a year to choose a standing legislature and the country's president.

As returns were reported, Boris N. Yeltsin left Moscow for a month's vacation after the crushing success of his anti-establishment candidacy for a seat representing the capital.

Yeltsin received 89.4 percent of the vote in Moscow, which he ran as party chief until he was sacked in 1987 for criticizing the slow pace of reform.

Oil Spill Probers Scanning Captain's Drinking Habits

70 MPH Wind Gusts Slow Cleanup

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VALDEZ, Alaska — Authorities today investigated reports that the captain of a tanker responsible for a 100-square-mile oil spill had drinking problems, and crews struggled against the slick that was moving "like it's on a superhighway."

"We look at all areas in an investigation and that's an area of concern," National Transportation Safety Board spokesman Bill Woody said of reports that Exxon Valdez Capt. Joseph Hazelwood had a drunken driving conviction as recently as September.

Hazelwood likely will be required to testify at NTSB hearings that begin April 4 in Anchorage, Woody said.

Hazelwood, 42, was not on the bridge when the vessel left shipping lanes on Friday to avoid ice, rammed a charted reef and ran aground in Prince William Sound, said Exxon Shipping Co. officials. The third mate, who did not have proper certification, was in charge, company President Frank Iarossi said.

Investigators said the results of drug and alcohol tests on crew members will be made public perhaps in two or three days.

Hazelwood pleaded guilty in 1984 to driving while intoxicated after an accident near his home in Huntington, N.Y., The New York Times reported today. He was convicted of drunken driving last September in New Hampshire and his license was revoked, the paper said. His driver's license had been suspended on two other occasions during the past five years, the Times said.

Telephone calls to his home Monday were not answered.

Attempts on Monday to clean up the nation's worst oil spill were set back by 70-mph gusts that swept the slick more than 30 miles toward the southwest, and forced crews to retreat.

The cleanup "is not proceeding well — believe me, that is an understatement," Iarossi said. "We've got a mess on our hands."

Fewer than 135,000 gallons of oil have been recovered from the 10.1 million-gallon spill.

Beaches on four uninhabited islands have been fouled, and the slick fast approached sensitive salmon-spawning areas on the larger Knight Island to the southwest.

"It's unbelievable. That slick is moving like it's on a superhighway," said Iarossi.

The goo also threatened the region's abundant herring, marine mammals and seabirds, biologists said.

"There are bird populations all over the place," said Pamela Bergman, an Interior Department spokeswoman. Nearly 100 oiled birds and two oiled sea otters have been spotted, and many more stricken animals likely have gone undetected, she said.

The cleanup was getting more difficult as the leading edge of the slick moves into more remote areas of the sparsely inhabited sound.

The 987-foot tanker was carrying 1.2 million barrels of North Slope crude oil when it ran aground.

About 240,000 barrels spilled through the hull, creating the slick that has spread to more than 100 square miles.

The Port of Valdez has been closed since the accident, stranding tankers and cutting production on the North Slope, which supplies nearly 20 percent of the nation's domestic oil.

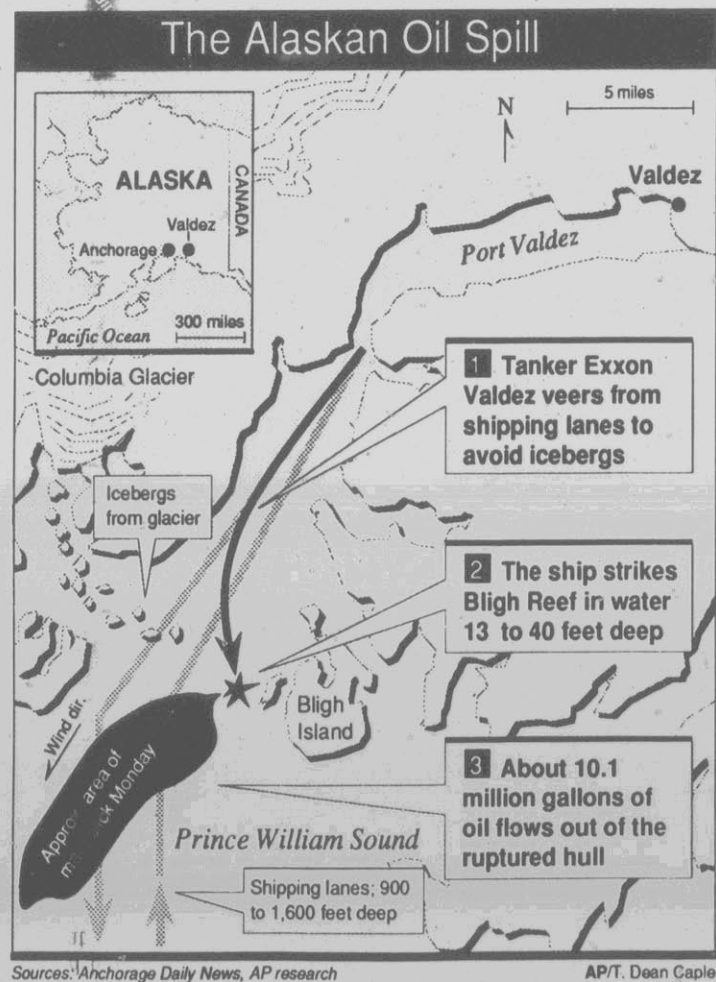

Coast Guard Cmdr. Steven McCall, however, said he planned to reopen the port today.

Hard-Boiled Surprise

Monday's pleasant spring weather provided the right ingredients for an Easter egg hunt and Ashley Watts, 2, with the help of her mother, Annie, enjoyed gathering eggs during the Greenville Area Rosfelt Pasha Shrine Club's annual hunt. About 250 children were on hand at Tom Foreman Park in West Greenville to search for the 50 dozen hard-boiled eggs hidden on the park grounds.

State So Far Unable To Gain Access To Stored Body Parts

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

State health officials say they are losing hope of reaching an agreement with a Bethel funeral home owner on how to dispose of human body parts and medical waste stored in at least three Pitt County farm buildings.

Agents with the Solid Waste

Management Section of the state Division of Health Services have been working with John Gray of Raleigh to iron out a consent agreement that would establish guidelines for cataloging and disposing of the waste Gray has improperly stored in a packhouse and two tobacco barns near Stokes.

Local residents discovered the waste last month and reported the situation to Pitt County deputies, who later determined there was no criminal violation.

Solid waste spokesman Stephen Reid said consent agreement talks have broken down in recent days, and it appears the state will have to go through the court system to get permission to inspect and inventory the waste. The state has also asked the Environmental Protection Agency to inspect the site, and Reid said the entire cleanup project could possibly be turned over to the EPA.

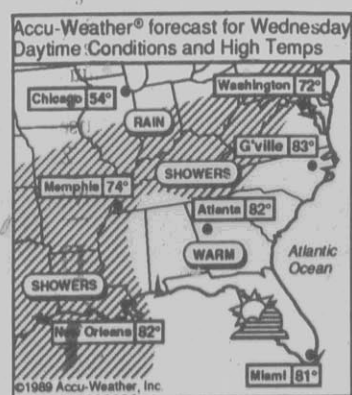

"It doesn't look as though we've been able to work out the details on the thing," Reid said today. "It would have taken care of the problem a lot quicker."

Gray, who owns Ayres-Gray Funeral Home in Bethel and Gray Funeral Home and Crematorium in Raleigh, is not licensed to accept or burn medical waste, only dead human bodies.

Reid said Gray may have violated several state regulations concerning the handling of medical waste. Gray

Death Toll Mounting In Yugoslav Rioting

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia — Police fired on hundreds of ethnic Albanian protesters in Kosovo province today, killing at least one person and wounding 14, in rioting against Serbia's bid to gain more control over the region, authorities said.

Serbia's parliament today formally adopted constitutional changes to increase authority over government and schools in Kosovo, the republic's autonomous southern province bordering Albania.

Six straight days of rioting since Kosovo's parliament approved the changes have left 16 people dead and scores injured, authorities said. It is Kosovo's worst violence since 1981, when nine people died in ethnic riots and the province was briefly placed under martial law.

The ethnic Albanians, who make up 85 percent of Kosovo's 1.9 million citizens, say the constitutional changes will curb the broad autonomy they won under the 1974 Yugoslav Constitution.

Serbia says the changes are needed to protect the province's Slav minority, which alleges constant harassment from the ethnic Albanians.

Maria Gasi, a spokeswoman for Kosovo's information secretariat, told a news conference 14 demonstrators died and 40 were injured in bloodshed since Monday. She said two police officers were killed Monday.

Memory Of Tornado Keeps Area Alert

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The devastating tornado that plowed through Pitt County five years ago tonight has caused area residents to become more weather conscious.

The first-hand knowledge of a tornado's destruction keeps Pitt County residents especially attuned to weather warnings, said Bobby Joyner, emergency services coordinator for Pitt County.

"I think the people involved in that area still remember it very strong. I don't think they will ever forget it."

"I see a concern in business and industry to be more informed and have some way of being warned and protecting their employees ... the students in school. I still think there is no way of notifying the general public in a rapid manner," Joyner said.

Howard Meagle, station manager of WITN-TV in Washington, N.C., said he was working at a television station in Savannah, Ga., four years ago and covered the storm damage in South Carolina. To aid residents, he said WITN breaks into regular programming to notify viewers of a tornado warning, which means a tornado has been sighted and people should take shelter.

"That's a very conscientious effort on our part," he said. "Generally, (with a warning, we) break into programming to keep everybody posted. That's a direct relationship to how important we think (severe weather) is."

"Definitely, anytime a watch (which means conditions are favorable for a tornado) is on, we put an alert on the screen," he said.

In 1984, the National Weather Service issued a severe thunderstorm warning for Pitt, Greene and Lenoir counties at 8:58 p.m. A weather service meteorologist reported a tornado on radar at 9:22 p.m., which was just minutes after the twister entered Ayden. It destroyed a number of homes in the Scuffleton area of Greene County.

The twister killed nine people in Pitt County, injured 148 and destroyed 180 homes. More than 450 dwellings across the county were damaged.

Coming from the South, the tornado reportedly clung close to the ground for virtually its entire run through Pitt County. It cut a path a quarter-mile wide and over 22 miles long before it left the ground near the Beaufort County line.

The twister ripped down trees, power lines, damaged Harris Supermarket in Ayden and the

SGA Decries Apathy On ECU Campus

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Improving race relations and other issues generated discussion Monday at a Student Government Association candidate's forum on the mall of East Carolina University.

But with student elections scheduled for Wednesday, some of the SGA candidates expressed concern that a sense of apathy may pervade the student body over student government and its efforts.

Only 40 of approximately 15,000 ECU students attended the afternoon forum despite it being widely promoted on the campus radio station and the student newspaper, The East Carolinian.

And looming over the whole process is the specter of last year's SGA elections, which were ignored by about 90 percent of the student population.

"There seems to be a sense of apathy on campus. No one seems to be interested in things like this. I don't know why," said Jennifer Vanderburg, a candidate for SGA vice president.

"I was disappointed in the turnout to the forum Monday. I'm hoping people will vote on Wednesday," said the ECU senior. "There'll be voting booths all over campus. There's really no reason not to vote."

The Student Government Association is comprised of approximately 65 students, about 80 percent of whom are members of Greek fraternity and sorority organizations.

The SGA is designed to represent the student body and provide a voice regarding various social and academic issues which directly affect campus policy. Recently the SGA has worked toward having condom machines placed in ECU dormitories.

Another social issue currently drawing student government attention is racial tensions between white and minority students.

Those tensions were exacerbated by the widely publicized incident in which a black student was dismissed for fighting after allegedly being subjected to racial slurs by non-minority students.

At Monday's forum, SGA presidential candidate Tripp Roakes suggested that white and minority students need to meet in a series of "brainstorming" sessions to discuss racial problems.

"We just need to let it all out ... to let each other know where each other is coming from. We've got to start understanding each other," he said. "I feel it's got to start with the leaders on campus and I feel if we start at the top, it will trickle down to our constituents."

Valeria Lassiter, another candidate for president, suggested that administrators require each student to take a mandatory course which might enlighten students to recognize cultural problems and barriers at ECU and in society.

"Racial problems will not change on this campus by the chancellor making a statement saying, 'We do not condone racism on this campus,'" she said.

Meanwhile SGA presidential candidate Kelly Jones suggested that a certain number of seats be made available specifically for minority representatives on the student legislature.

Other issues discussed Monday included increasing the amount of artwork on campus, increasing safety on campus at night and lengthening the operating hours of Joyner Library.

Teachers Are Sought For Writing Project

ECU NEWS BUREAU

The Coastal Plains Writing Project is reaching out for experienced public school teachers in any discipline, including math, computer science and biology, for 1989 summer fellowships now available.

"Teachers in all disciplines appreciate and understand the need to teach students to write clearly and effectively," says Patrick Bizzaro of East Carolina University, co-director of the CPWP program.

"Applicants should have a genuine interest in improving their effectiveness in the teaching of writing, in using writing as a learning tool, and in sharing new knowledge with their colleagues," Bizzaro said.

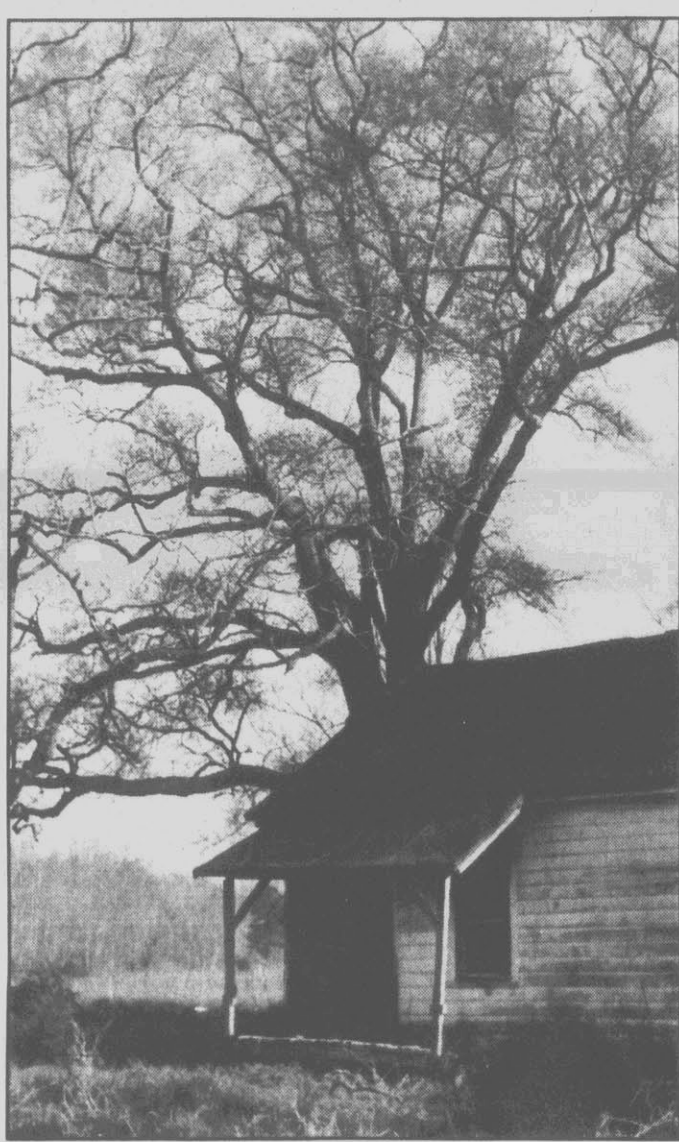

Up to 25 teachers in Region 1, the northeast North Carolina education district, will be accepted for the CPWP program which includes a four-week institute, June 26 through July 21, on the ECU campus.

Fellows will receive a $400 stipend, tuition and fees for six hours of graduate credit. Transportation and housing costs must be borne by the enrollees. Application information may be obtained from Bizzaro, Department of English, General Classroom Building, ECU, Greenville, N.C., (Tel. 757-6575) or JoAnna S. Mink, director of Writing Programs, Atlantic Christian College, Wilson, N.C., (Tel. 237-3161).

First Commercial Rocket Launch Set

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. — A privately owned rocket ship carrying experiments on weightlessness will blast off on a 15-minute mission Wednesday, the nation's first licensed commercial space flight.

The flight of Consort I, owned by Space Services Inc. of Washington, marks another stage in the private space research efforts that gained in significance after the 1986 Challenger tragedy.

"This launch you can probably trace to the Challenger disaster, because these experiments were hoped to be carried aboard the Challenger or future shuttles," said Walter Pennino, an investor and spokesman for Space Services.

The company launched the first privately financed space shot, Conestoga I, with a dummy payload in 1982. Since then, the federal government has begun licensing private launches, and Consort I is the first to get the green light.

Conestoga I proved private industry could launch spacecraft, and also showed that the government was unprepared for the new industry, Pennino said.

"There was no single agency we or anyone else could go to and ask if we could do this," Pennino said, adding his firm had to consult with the Federal Aviation Administration, Federal Communications Commission and Defense Department, among other agencies.

The Department of Transportation was assigned the task of licensing, private launches and coordinating with different agencies. Consort I received its license from the department's new Office of Commercial Space Transportation.

Consort I's 650-pound payload will include experiments that will measure how liquids mix in weightlessness, how plastic foam forms and cures, how liquids coat glass surfaces, how epoxy reacts in weightlessness and how finely powdered metals bond under high temperature to produce alloys without melting.

The experiments have applications in the manufacture of medicines, alloys and ball bearings, and in the construction of future space stations.

The payload was assembled by the University of Alabama-Huntsville's Consortium for Materials Development in Space, one of 16 NASA-sponsored consortiums for the commercial development of space.

Talks With Funeral Home Owner Stalling

has not revealed details, but he has told state health officials he received the medical waste from hospitals when he was picking up dead bodies to be incinerated. Gray reportedly claims he did not realize he needed a different license to handle medical waste, Reid said.

But, Gray was cited in December for improperly incinerating medical waste at his Raleigh crematorium, Reid said.

In the proposed consent agreement, Reid said the state was requesting that Gray provide a complete list of when and where he acquired the waste and select and pay for a certified contractor to dispose of the material.

Assistant Attorney General Nancy Scott, counsel to the solid waste section who has been working on the consent agreement, said talks were scheduled to resume last week, but Gray has not been in contact with her office and officials have not been able to locate him.

"He has not come back around. Unless he does, it does not appear that this is going to work," she said today.

The attorney general's office is considering other ways to get the waste inspected and disposed of, she said, but she would not reveal the options.

Several developments have complicated the cleanup, and Ms. Scott said there has been some conflicting reports about who owns which land.

Gray Farms Inc., a corporation Gray formed in 1980, owns the parcel of land on rural paved road 1547 where deputies inspected stored medical waste and internal organs inside a packhouse. There are also three other buildings on the site — a house, a grain bin and a tobacco barn — and Ms. Scott said Gray has told state officials that medical waste is stored in those three buildings as well.

Gray Farms is currently going through a Chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization, and the medical waste site is part of a tract of land scheduled to be sold at public auction. The sale had been set for last week, but a federal bankruptcy judge postponed the sale indefinitely after hearing from solid waste agents, Ms. Scott said.

Ms. Scott also said solid waste agents have reported that the second parcel scheduled to be sold in the bankruptcy settlement, on rural unpaved road 1545, also contains medical waste.

But, maps in the Pitt County tax office indicate that second site where medical waste was found is not owned by Gray Farms. The 86-acre site, where medical waste is stored in two tobacco barns, is owned by Gray's cousin, Harry T. Gray of Robersonville.

Last July, the land changed hands from a James M. Fatata to Harry Gray, the tax maps indicate. A year before, in July of 1987, John Gray had transferred the parcel to Harry Gray.

When the waste was discovered, Harry Gray said he was not aware that his cousin was storing waste on the land, and he said he urged John Gray to cooperate with the state and properly dispose of the material. John Gray leases the land, his cousin said, and he has been using the land for years.

Gray Farms does own a 133-acre plot of land on rural unpaved road 1545 that adjoins Harry Gray's land. The public sale notice indicates a 169-acre parcel on that road will be auctioned, but tax officials said the discrepancy in acreage could come from new surveying and mapping systems.

Wilson lawyer Walter Hinson, the court-appointed trustee of the Gray Farms estate, said he does not know whether both parcels included in the auction contain medical waste.

Public Awareness

Farmer Funeral Home, scattering empty caskets behind the building.

The tornado tore through Branch Road (SR 1716), and then roared through Taylor Estates mobile home park south of Greenville on N.C. 43. It continued through the Portertown area and through Simpson near N.C. 33.

A Raleigh meteorologist reported that the winds in Pitt County topped 150 mph and peaked at over 206 mph.

"I think it's made local government more aware of the situation ... constantly trying to improve on ways that they receive warnings and ways they disperse it to the public," Joyner said. "I think out of the tornados and out of the awareness of the public ... the state has come up with a multihazard plan that will handle any emergency.

"Right now, we have a direct phone line to the National Weather Service in Raleigh, (and) the sheriff gets information off the police information network."

For safety tips, Joyner suggested that residents stay tuned to local radio and TV news during severe weather, and families should practice tornado drills so everyone is prepared for a crisis. When a tornado hits, it is safest to be in the center of the house in the smallest room, like a closet. Anyone stranded outside should lie face down in a ditch, Joyner advised.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Keep Moving

Don't Leave Taxpayers By Roadside

One more reminder for the state's lawmakers: go ahead and approve the Highway Trust Fund so North Carolina can roll up its sleeves and do some road work.

The bill creating the $8.6 billion trust fund is a sound one. Although it raises the price of gas at the pumps for consumers by 5.4 cents, it also addresses a nagging economic problem that can no longer be overlooked — the deterioration of the state's highways.

In addition to its promise, the bill is also something of a political miracle. In a year when North Carolina's government is rent by partisan squabbling, Republicans and Democrats alike support the legislation. Yes, you heard correctly. The coalition behind the bill includes North Carolina's Republican governor and lieutenant governor, as well as the Democratic speaker of the house and president pro tem of the Senate.

That unusual and somewhat tenuous cadre is one reason the bill's proponents are pushing its expedient passage in the N.C. General Assembly — and with good reason. It's rare when the aforementioned clique agrees on anything except about what to disagree on. It's even rarer when its members reach accord on an issue that's of vital importance to constituents.

The highway bill has, as its supporters say, a window of political opportunity through which it can slip to success. But if that window closes — and if the matter isn't settled promptly it will — North Carolina's chance to do some serious catching up on highway needs will vanish. Timing is just as crucial as the deficiencies the bill addresses.

Economically, the state cannot delay massive spending on highway construction. It's hard to put a price tag on lost opportunity but there's no doubt that cost would far exceed the $8.6 billion of the trust fund.

Of special importance to eastern North Carolina is the share of the booty that region is practically guaranteed to receive. One of the bill's strong points is its specificity. It distributes the newly generated revenue equally by stating what projects the money will be spent on — with the East getting its fair share. That's a salve to the sores of eastern taxpayers, who frequently fork over the money for roads but wind up short when the checks are written.

These are all appropriate reasons to make the Highway Trust Fund law. Remember lawmakers, don't let this bill stall. Don't leave the taxpayers of North Carolina stranded by the side of the road.

Soviet Vote

Not Yet Democracy But It's A Start

It's not democracy yet — not in the sense that Soviet citizens can determine their own destiny, but it is a start.

In fact the election held in the Soviet Union last week was an astounding move toward elections as we understand them with opponents representing different points of view.

Boris N. Yeltsin, a populist reformer was a big winner in Moscow against a more traditional party candidate. Only a short while ago there would have been no such race. The party traditionalists would have been the only candidates in the election.

Of course, none of this means any great deviation from the unswerving concept of communism. It is still intraparty fighting, but such fighting was not allowed under the stern rule of the party powers until now.

An acorn of democracy has been planted, but from acorns grow giant oak trees.

Even from watching our own television coverage of the Soviet Union we can tell that dissent is more acceptable now in that society. And it appears that the Soviet people have much to complain about — a class system which gives bureaucrats the best, lack of food, and poorly made consumer goods.

We cannot know whether glasnost created the new found freedoms in the Soviet Union, or a poorly run system created glasnost. What is clear is that reforms are essential to the system and the people are expecting them.

In a democracy reforms are brought about through the ballot box. As the Soviet election process becomes more open, the same results can be expected there.

The Flaws In An 'ABC' Policy

WASHINGTON — Black Chicagoans, with a vigorous assist from the Rev. Jesse Jackson, seem to have adopted what might be called an ABC policy for the city's mayoral contest: Anybody But a Caucasian.

They supported Acting Mayor Eugene Sawyer in the Democratic primary. When Sawyer, chosen by the city council to finish out the term of the late Harold Washington, lost — by some 100,000 votes — to Richard M. Daley, black voters turned their attention to the third-party candidacy of Timothy Evans.

There are two things to be said about this sort of racial politics. The first is that white people have done it for years. The second is that when they have done it, black voters have yelled "foul" — none more eloquently than Jackson, the perennial presidential candidate who is forever talking about the need for reciprocity.

The point is not that blacks should vote for Daley, the undistinguished son of Chicago's most famous mayor. Those who favor Evans are free to vote for him — or for Republican nominee Edward

William Raspberry

Vrdolyak or for anyone whose name they choose to write in.

But should the leaders of the Democratic Party be similarly free? One leader, Jackson, is leading the fight against Daley. Sawyer declined to endorse anyone in the April 4 general election. Gus Savage, the Chicago congressman, is outraged that Ronald Brown, the first black Democratic National Committee chairman, is supporting his party's nominee. "When Ron Brown brings his Oreo you-know-what into Chicago," Savage threatened, "I'll guarantee I'm going to help organize a reception party for him at the airport and to follow him all the way to some white hotel to denounce his coming in."

The clear implication: Only an "Oreo" — black on the surface but white inside — could support a white candidate (no matter that he is the party's nominee) against a black opponent (even one who declined to seek the nomination).

Jackson may be the big loser in the contretemps. During and between his two runs at the presidential nomination, Jackson made an issue of racial fairness. He fought, with some success, to change party rules that he said were rigged against him. He argued long and loud that Democrats must be politically and morally consistent, willing to rise above considerations of race.

Now it appears that he is willing to apply the fairness principle to his party, but not to himself. After all, it was not biased rules but the will of the voters that gave Daley the nomination.

Jackson's race-based decision is questionable in terms of the principles he has espoused. And in cold political terms, it is worse. It violates the law of pragmatism.

The old Jackson rule was that race is an illegitimate basis for choosing candidates. The new Jackson rule seems to be that a race-based campaign is perfectly all right so long as it serves to elect black candidates.

The self-styled "country preacher" was right the first time. There may be a few places where racial politics can elect black candidates — including the District of Columbia, where the black majority seems to consider it a matter of high principle to prevent David Clarke, the white chairman of the city council, from becoming mayor. But at most times and in most places, the best hope for blacks and other minorities is to promote fairness without regard to race.

The danger of blacks playing race-based politics is that it cuts both ways. It is arguably in the short-term interest of black Chicagoans to support the candidacy of a black third-party candidate against the Democratic nominee. But it is not in the long-term interest of black Americans to be perceived as willing to abandon principle in favor of racial advantage. That approach might prevail here and there, but its general practice serves to keep blacks out of the political mainstream.

Not So Firm A Foundation

BOSTON — They were talking about real estate. It is, to be frank, one of their favorite subjects.

Each of them had a story to tell. One had bought a house in 1973 for $40,000. It had just been valued at $265,000. Another had a neighbor who sold her house, tripling her money in ten years — the right ten years. A third figured carefully the inflated value of his home into his retirement plans.

They did not brag, these couples in late middle age, of having had any special prescience about a real-estate boom. They had put money down on a house in the '60s or '70s and won the jackpot of the '80s. There were no oil wells in their backyards, but the homes had made a more spectacular return than any gusher.

They simply rode the real-estate boom to a certain measure of paper profit. The houses they chose to live in were also investments to live off. They were now middle-income and house-rich. So conversations like these make them feel good or at least lucky.

But then the subject turned to their children, grown children. Could their children afford to buy the houses they had grown up in? A second set of stories poured out, more troubled than the first.

They had working children wholly unable to save a downpayment that might equal the parents' entire first mortgage. They had married children who needed two jobs to afford what they had supported with one. Most of their offspring were double income and house poor.

To this eavesdropper, there was no news bulletin in this exchange. These days the economic gap between generations is built on the private turf of real estate. A space has grown between those who have houses and those who do not.

More people over 65 and fewer people under 35 own their own homes these days. In 1977, 11.5 percent of new home-buyers were in their early twenties. In 1987, only 4.2 percent of these buyers were that young. More than half of new mortgages depend on second incomes.

The gap grew through the vagaries of supply and demand. Over the past 15 years, incomes fell behind inflation and houses sold ahead. Tax breaks have gone to those with mortgages, and so-called tax revolts made generational differences even more striking. In California, famed Proposition 13 froze property taxes at 1978 rates — but only for those who already owned homes. A new neighbor now may pay vastly more than the older couple in an identical house next door.

There are other very real effects of real estate on these two generations. Generations find common ground in the family. There, the house-rich middle class increasingly is called upon to help its house-poor children.

I am told that standard equipment for any mortgage lender's office includes at least four chairs: two for the couple, two for their parents who help bankroll the sale. As many as half first-time young buyers are getting help from their parents.

If I am to judge by my listening sample, these elders feel both duty-bound and willing to share their good fortune. But another of their favorite conversations echoes concern about the long-term dependence of "kids these days."

The "kids" of 25 and 30 have in turn become awkwardly conscious of the way that real estate has solidified the two-class structure. The have and have nots of their own age are often those who either have or have not parents with home equity. Those who will have or will not have their legacies.

I don't want to turn a real-estate boom into a sociological bust. The windfall is a large component of an older generation's improved economic status. Their independence is a boon to their children as well.

But it is also a major reason why the scales are tipping, why grandparents often live better than grandchildren. It's why there is a need to build more affordable housing, tax more of the capital gains that came to those who rode the real-estate boom and allot the money to help families buy into the market.

Rising real estate makes for great conversation. I can attest to that from my listening post. But a younger generation is being left out of the lucky dialogue. It looks as if the family homestead rests on very shaky ground.

Take Care Not To Throw Out Democracy With The Bathwater

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — Howard Twiggs has lost his fluency in the language of the legislature. The Raleigh lawyer who served in the General Assembly 20 years ago stood before the Senate Constitutional Amendments Committee recently and flat out missed a perfect opportunity to use one of the legislature's favorite bromides: "Let's not throw the baby out with the bath water."

Sad thing about Twiggs' speech was that use of the baby analogy would have been completely appropriate — for probably one of the few times ever.

Twiggs was representing the N.C. Academy of Trial Lawyers in their opposition to a constitutional amendment that would end the election of judges. The amendment would have governors select judges and legislatures confirm them. After four years, the Judicial Standards Commission would evaluate the judge's performance, and would recommend retention or dismissal. The legislature would decide to accept or reject commission recommendations.

The amendment grows out of concerns the North Carolina's system of electing judges might degenerate into highly charged and nasty judicial campaigns like those in Texas and California. In the Lone Star State, lawyers are contributing huge sums to help judges win elections. There are obvious conflicts of interest and very ugly campaign ads that reduce the public confidence in the judiciary.

Twiggs argued that there is not a direct correlation between what has happened in Texas and what has happened, to date, in North Carolina. There was a nasty race for chief justice of the N.C. Supreme Court in 1986, but that race didn't get down to the depths of a typical Texas race, he said.

Even if North Carolina is heading towards problems in its system of electing judges, that doesn't mean that the elections have to be stopped. This is where he should have said,

"We don't have to throw the baby out with the bath water." Less radical changes could be suggested.

If the state is worried about the tenor of judicial elections, the Canon of Ethics of the state bar can be adjusted to keep judicial debates on a higher plane. If the state is worried about the conflicts of interest involved what a judge raised money from lawyers who may appear in his court, campaign fundraising laws can be changed.

There is an oft-repeated concern that the public doesn't know for whom it is voting in judicial races, that no one knows the candidates. Twiggs said that is just not the truth. The public does find out who is good and who is not. But even if the public doesn't, he said, then the solution is to better educate the public on the candidates for election, not to eliminate the elections. "I doubt that most voters know who the register of deeds is, but no one is talking about ending the elections for register of deeds," he said.

Proponents of this amendment have raised many points in their attack on the current system, but Twiggs, like a good attorney, stated the strength of his case: Democracy can be messy, but it beats any other form of government which man has used on this planet.

Twiggs asked two thought provoking questions. Who will sit on the Judicial Standards Commission that decides which judges are retained and which are fired? Will it be an elite crowd of lawyers who are detached from the public pulse?

Taking the vote away from the people and having only politicians and selected lawyers pick judges might solve some of the peripheral problems of judicial elections. But in discarding some dirty bathwater, this amendment would also throw out the precious child: democracy.

Central America Politics Complex

Robert Pastor

Central America has attracted the world's attention, but its politics remain those of small, dependent nations with rigid classes, competing families, dominating caudillos and a reliance on force to settle disputes. Impatient outsiders tend to ignore these complexities and interpret Central American politics in terms of two wings and a prayer. In Guatemala and El Salvador, right-wing military forces fight left-wing guerrillas; in Nicaragua, a left-wing government fights right-wing guerrillas. It is only by prayer and the good dollar that the groups in the middle survive.

Since the United States is most comfortable with the groups in the middle, we are often frustrated or easily fatigued by the region's battles. A decade ago, when I worked on the National Security Council, my nightmare was that Jose Napoleon Duarte, the courageous Salvadoran Christian Democrat, would be assassinated by one extreme or the other. He represented peaceful, moderate reform — favorite words for Americans but anathema to the extremes; which viewed reform and Duarte as a threat to either revolution or privilege. Both wings aimed to eliminate the middle as a first step in defeating the other.

To some, it appears that their wish has come true. Arena, the Salvadoran right-wing party, won the presidential election on March 19 by an overwhelming vote. As the election approached, the guerrillas stepped up their violence. Some leftists said that they wanted Arena to win, as this would polarize the country and increase their prospects for a successful revolution.

Whether the left succeeds will depend on who Alfredo Cristiani, the winner, is: a conservative democrat, who, like Richard Nixon, could negotiate peace with Marxists, or just a clean-looking mask for Maj. Roberto D'Aubusson's death squads?

The question is the mirror image of the one that is asked of the Nicaraguan Sandinistas or the Salvadoran Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front. Are the Sandinistas sincere when they profess to want the opposition to compete openly and equally in a free election next February? Was the FMLN's proposal to participate in the presidential election if it was postponed for six months serious or merely a ploy?

The only people who know the answers are the people who sit at the political extremes. To those on the left, Cristiani is a death mask, the guerrillas are serious about elections, and the Sandinistas are pluralists; to the right, Cristiani is a democrat and the promises of the Sandinistas and the FMLN are a ruse. These answers, however, may say more about the speakers than they do about the region's actors. They are both more certain and more ambivalent, and that is both their problem and their opportunity.

The recent Sandinista decision to release the National Guardsmen, the FMLN's recognition of the ballot box as the basis of legitimacy, and Arena's willingness to accept land reform and negotiations with the FMLN — all are serious steps, but they are also half-hearted. The decisions were courageous in that they divided their movements at a time of weakness. At the same time, the extremes are nervous about fulfilling their democratic promises for fear of losing the chance to gain or maintain power.

The acceptance by both wings of the validity of elections and the imperative of outside verification provides the crucial framework to achieve peace. The United States and other governments must devise an incentive package to encourage the wings — Arena and the Contras on the right, the FMLN and the Sandinistas on the left — to compromise and make peaceful change a reality.

The bipartisan accord reached between President Bush and Congress on Friday represents a positive and necessary first step for the United States to play an effective role in Central America. But the administration should not confuse talks on Capitol Hill with negotiations in Central America. The real bargaining will be with Latin America, and it has not yet begun.

Pastor is a professor of political science at Emory University

Emergency services worker checks crash site of medical helicopter near Coinjock

Safety Board Launches Probe Of Copter Crash

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COINJOCK, N.C. — An investigation into the crash of a Dare County helicopter ambulance that killed two people probably will focus on whether a 340-foot telephone tower was properly marked with warning lights, said an official with the National Transportation Safety Board.

The inquiry into Sunday's crash, which killed the county's chief pilot and an emergency medical technician, will begin today, officials said.

The air ambulance struck the tower, which had been erected earlier during Easter, and a supporting guy wire and careened 300 feet away in a field behind a two-story apartment building in Coinjock, Currituck County authorities said. Firefighters had to cut a path through a briar-entangled field about 100 yards from old U.S. Route 158 to reach the wreckage.

Pilot C.C. Duvall, 53, and medical technician Stephanie G. Willoughby, 34, both of Manteo, died on impact, rescue personnel said.

Officials do not know why the helicopter was flying at only 320 feet when it went down in a field about 9 p.m. Sunday in the Coinjock community. "That's one of the unanswered questions," said Stanley D. Griggs, emergency services director for Currituck County.

"There wasn't any light (on the tower) after the crash. I think it indicates there wasn't one before the crash. There was one being installed."

Griggs also said there was no fog at the time of the accident. "Weather did not play any role in the crash at all," he said.

The helicopter, a $1.2 million MBBKawasaki BK-117, was en route to Dare County after completing a flight to Sentara Norfolk General Hospital, said Gwen A. White, Dare County spokeswoman. Fog rolled into the area later that night. The crash occurred about 15 minutes after the crew had left Norfolk.

"It's just a tragic thing for them to have saved so many lives and now to have lost their own," White said. Duvall, a former Dare County chief deputy, just celebrated his 21st year of employment with the county. Willoughby was a 6½-year county employee and "one of our more experienced" medical technicians, White said.

Law enforcement officers who worked with Duvall described him as a skilled and dedicated pilot. Lt. Col. Jasper Williams, of the Dare County Sheriff's Department, credited Duvall with saving numerous lives because of his quick responses and ability to maneuver the helicopter into makeshift landing zones.

"He has done so much I wouldn't know where to begin," Williams said. "When it came to dedication, he was the definition of it."

The craft was one of two medical ambulances operated by the Dare County Emergency Medical Services. The other, a UH-1, currently is undergoing maintenance, White said.

Phillip Powell, an air safety investigator with the National Transportation Safety Board, is expected to begin sifting through the wreck scene today, a spokesman said.

As of late Monday afternoon, authorities could not say whether the telephone tower, owned by Centel Cellular Co., was lighted with a warning beacon. A spokesperson for the Chicago-based Centel said work on the tower began March 23 and was completed Sunday.

The tower is designed to transmit radio waves to allow the use of cellular telephones. The chopper appeared to have struck the metal tower about 15 feet from the top, authorities said.

A contract with a St. Louis company hired to construct the tower included the installation of a beacon light, but "we do not know at this point if the light was on or if there was a light," Elizabeth Goodwin, Centel's spokesperson, said Monday.

A spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration said towers taller than 200 feet must have lights, if they are near airports or in the flight paths of planes flying on visual flight rules. The FAA spokesman didn't know if the Currituck tower was required to have lights.

The tower, being built by a contractor for Centel Cellular Co. based in Chicago, was to be finished by March 31 and was to be lighted, Ms. Goodwin said.

"The specifications did include lights," she said, but she did not know if the strobe light that would have flashed at the top of the tower had been installed. Company employees at the site said the lights were to be installed Monday or today.

There was no fire. The pilot was thrown from the craft, while the medical technician was pinned inside.

Radio contact with the helicopter was lost shortly after it left Norfolk. The Outer Banks Medical Center, a 24-hour facility operated in Nags Head by Chesapeake General Hospital, requested assistance from the Nightingale helicopter ambulance, based at Sentara Norfolk General, apparently because it was unable to contact the Dare County chopper, said Richard J. Fedorowicz, Nightingale's chief pilot. The Nightingale aborted the mission after running into fog south of Coinjock, Fedorowicz said.

The Dare County helicopter, White said, had just undergone major maintenance, which is required after 1,500 hours of flight.

On Monday, Dare County Manager Jack W. Cahoon was trying to make arrangements to get a stand-by medical helicopter while the UH-1 undergoes maintenance, she said. Michael P. Daniels, chairman of the county Board of Commissioners, called the emergency service a "vital link" in medical service to the Outer Banks.

The crash was the third fatal accident in four years involving a North Carolina-based helicopter ambulance.

Three crew members were killed on Sept. 23, 1986, when a Bell 222 UT operated by the Bowman Gray-N.C. Baptist Hospital Medical Center in Winston-Salem crashed into the side of a mountain near Galax, Va., en route to pick up a patient at Twin Counties Community Hospital. A pilot and two flight nurses were killed in that accident.

On Jan. 8, 1987, an "EastCare" air ambulance crashed in remote woods between Jacksonville and Greenville. Four people — the pilot, two nurses, and a 3-month-old girl — died in that crash.

That copter was en route from the naval hospital at the Camp Lejeune Marine base to Pitt County Memorial Hospital, which operated the service in conjunction with the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

Just prior to that crash, the crew had radioed that there was a fire in the helicopter.

Last Federal Charge Dropped

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — An American Indian who says his life is in danger if he is returned to North Carolina to face state kidnapping charges can fight extradition now that the only federal charge against him has been dropped.

U.S. prosecutors asked a federal magistrate on Monday to dismiss a charge of unlawful flight against Eddie Hatcher and turn him over to local authorities to begin extradition proceedings.

Hatcher's lawyers said they would seek his release on bail and try to deny extradition to North Carolina, whose local law enforcement authorities Hatcher has accused of corruption.

Hatcher also contends he should not be tried on state charges after being acquitted of federal hostage charges for the same incident in a newspaper office.

But defense lawyers said Hatcher would not have been able to make those arguments before being sent to North Carolina if the federal government had pursued its charge of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution. That charge, filed after Hatcher fled the state in December, usually is dismissed after a fugitive is arrested.

If Hatcher had been prosecuted on that federal charge, his only defense against return to North Carolina would have been mistaken identity.

But state extradition proceedings at least allow Hatcher to make the argument to the governor's office and the courts that a compelled return to North Carolina would be unfair or unsafe.

Hatcher, 31, and Timothy Jacobs, 20, both Tuscarora Indians, were accused of holding up to 20 people hostage for 10 hours in February 1988 in the offices of The Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton, N.C.

The two said they were trying to draw attention to their claims that law enforcement officials were involved in drug trafficking and other corruption. A task force formed by Gov. Jim Martin concluded later that the claims were unfounded.

Hatcher and Jacobs were tried and acquitted in federal court on hostage-taking and firearms charges. But in December, the two were indicted on state kidnapping charges.

Jacobs, arrested in New York state, was returned to North Carolina on Thursday after dropping his appeal of an extradition ruling by a New York court. A judge in Lumberton has set his bail at $100,000.

Hatcher was arrested in San Francisco three weeks ago after unsuccessfully seeking political asylum in the Soviet consulate. He is being held without bail.

Lunch Charge

RALEIGH (AP) — Stephen Ward already had an ulcer and decided a prison lunch wasn't going to do it any good, so he put the lunch where he thought it belonged — in the trash.

But skipping lunch at Washington County Prison Unit at Creswell netted him 40 hours of menial tasks because a disciplinary board decided that he had destroyed state property — his lunch.

Now a federal magistrate has recommended that Ward, who filed suit over the incident, be awarded $1,434 from prison officials: $134 in minimum wages for his work, $200 for mental anguish and $1,100 in punitive damages for violation of his constitutional rights.

Trial Ordered

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A Davidson County man accused of killing four passing motorists and wounding five others last summer is competent to stand trial, a Superior Court judge ruled.

Judge James Beaty said he based his ruling Monday on the conclusion of a psychological report done on Michael Charles Hayes Hayes last summer by doctors at Dorothea Dix Hospital in Raleigh, and on questions to Hayes and his attorneys.

Hayes, 25, an ex-moped mechanic from Davidson County, has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity to the shootings July 17.

Renovations

RALEIGH (AP) — A legislative panel approved spending almost $6 million for renovations to the General Assembly's two buildings, more than the $5.5 million cost of the Legislative Building in 1961.

The improvements include 8-foot-high protective glass around the House and Senate galleries, 30 computer terminals for legislators and a television surveillance system.

The renovations will be funded from a $6.5 million reserve fund established from unspent funds allocated over the years for legislative operations over the years.

Dying Dogwoods

BENT CREEK, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's dogwoods are coming under increasing attack from a deadly fungus that has spread to 15 counties since 1987, officials say.

Extensive testing at Bent Creek Experimental Forest in Buncombe County has determined that the native flowering dogwood has no resistance to the anthracnose, a disease that has spread from Pennsylvania, New York and Oregon to much of the Southeast and parts of the Pacific Northwest. But Bob Anderson, a U.S. Forest Service plant pathologist, said special care and treatment can help homeowners and municipalities save their dogwoods.

Zoo Attendance

ASHEBORO (AP) — Beautiful weather and the infant gorilla Kwanza combined to boost attendance at the North Carolina Zoological Park to an all-time high over the Easter weekend, zoo officials said.

The zoo attracted 8,007 people Saturday, followed by 6,771 visitors on Sunday, shattering last year's record two-day total of 10,679 for Easter weekend.

Rod Hackney, public relations coordinator for the park, said next to pandas, gorillas are the most popular attraction at a zoo, particularly baby gorillas.

"There is no question that Kwanza has had a major impact on our attendance," he said.

Economic Score

GREENSBORO (AP) — North Carolina got an above-average B grade for its present economic development but only a D for its future prospects in an annual economic report card compiled by the Corporation for Enterprise Development.

The Washington, D.C.-based group cited the low educational level of the state's work force for the low grade on future growth, ranking North Carolina 40th in the nation in high school graduates, 42nd in college graduates and 33rd in adult literacy.

North Carolina got a B on each of the other indexes — performance, business vitality and policy.

Forest Fires

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Three fires covering at least 360 acres continued to burn Monday in an isolated mountain section of McDowell County, officials say.

No injuries were reported. The fires were within a five-mile radius of each other north and west of Old Fort near Andrews Geysers, said Keith Jenkins, assistant district forester for the N.C. Forest Service.

Baby Abduction

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — A High Point woman is competent to stand trial this week on charges that she abducted a 1-day-old baby from a hospital, a Superior Court judge ruled Monday.

Brenda J. Nobles, 38, was arrested June 22 after police found the missing baby, Jason Ray McClure, in a closet in her home. She is charged with child abduction and faces a maximum sentence of 15 years in prison.

The baby was taken from his mother's room in High Point Regional Hospital early in the morning June 20 by a woman impersonating a nurse, authorities say.

Democrats Want Elections Changed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A partisan fight is brewing in the Legislature as Democrats prepare for another attempt to separate presidential elections from elections of North Carolina's governor and other top officeholders.

Rep. Roy Cooper, D-Nash, was to introduce a bill today that would shift elections of the governor, lieutenant governor and Council of State officers to even-numbered but non-presidential election years.

Supporters of the move say national elections and issues overshadow their state counterparts and shortchange the voters.

"Issues such as automobile insurance rates and the Basic Education Program should be page one news and not page 15," said Cooper, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee.

Republicans say Democrats favor the change because their candidates have suffered from the unpopularity of nominees such as Walter Mondale in 1984 and Michael Dukakis in 1988.

"The Democrats are saying they're ashamed of their national candidates and they don't want to run with them," said Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner, who rode the coattails of President Bush and Gov. Jim Martin last year and became the state's first Republican lieutenant governor since 1901.

North Carolina is one of six states that hold statewide elections the same years as presidential elections. Thirty-four states have state elections in even-numbered, non-presidential years.

If Cooper's measure were enacted, which would require three-fifths majority support in the House and Senate and approval in a referendum, the shift would take place in 1994.

The governor, lieutenant governor and Council of State officers elected in the 1992 presidential election year would serve two-year terms instead of the current four years. In 1994, the offices would be open again.

"I really question whether it's proper to have only a two-year term," said Senate GOP leader Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg. "We all know how expensive it is to run for office. You'd be spending millions of dollars to serve two years."

If someone was elected governor in 1992 and defeated for re-election in 1994, state government would be severely disrupted, Gardner said.

The Legislature approved a shift of state and local elections to odd-numbered years in 1985 but the proposal failed in a statewide referendum.

"Moving statewide elections to odd-numbered years was a bad idea because of cost and lower voter turnout," Cooper said. "Putting statewide elections on even, non-presidential years is a very good idea which other states have found quite workable."

Bill Would Rescue Cemeteries

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — In an effort to preserve historical records and save abandoned cemeteries from pavers, some legislators have called on the state to make a statewide inventory of abandoned graveyards, assign priorities to the sites and relocate those that are endangered.

The last major effort to do so was more than 50 years ago and turned up an incomplete estimate of more than 10,000 abandoned cemeteries in North Carolina.

Sen. Wanda Hunt, D-Moore, a co-sponsor of the bill along with eight other senators, said it's a matter of preserving a neglected resource in a state that should treasure the abundant history that those hallowed grounds could provide.

"We're losing so many of them to vandals, plows and logging operations," she said in an interview published today in the Winston-Salem Journal. "And there is so much history there that, in some cases, is just lost when those old grave sites are turned under."

The recent pillaging of old Indian mounds in western Davidson County underscores the need, said William S. Price Jr., director of state archives.

"There's no question that there's a problem," he said.

Vigil Marks TMI Anniversary

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. — A small group of people lit candles in the darkness outside the Three Mile Island power plant at 4 a.m. today, the moment the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident began 10 years ago.

"It was an accident that changed the world as people knew it," said organizer Gene Stimp, a Harrisburg attorney.

Seven others stood by him. In the distance, the two 350-foot high concrete cooling towers of the still-active Unit 1 silently puffed white steam.

"It was not the last nuclear accident. ... We're out here to remind people of that," Stimp said.

The vigil ended about two hours later.

About 150 people marched outside the plant Monday. Residents near the plant said they are still angry about the accident and that they bear physical and emotional scars today.

"The so-called accident at TMI was an act of violence against mankind, an act of violence against the unborn," said Jane Lee, who lives near the plant in Etters, about 10 miles southeast of Harrisburg.

The accident began March 28, 1979, when a series of human and mechanical errors allowed the plant's 150-ton radioactive core to lose cooling water. Half the core melted and 20 tons of molten material raged to the bottom of the reactor before it was held in check by a remaining pool of water. Radioactive gas was released into the atmosphere over several days.

Ms. Lee scoffed at how the federal and state governments responded to the accident and their followup health studies that found no evidence of accident-related illnesses.

"They're lying," she said. "Why is it such a big, dark secret? ... It must be covered up for national security. With those kinds of friends, I don't need any enemies."

Gordon Tomb, a spokesman for GPU Nuclear Corp., the utility subsidiary that operates the plant now, said extra people had been assigned to the main gate this morning. The demonstration was peaceful.

Asked about the anniversary, Tombs said, "We're inclined to take the opportunity to note the lessons from the Unit 2 accident and remind ourselves of the importance of remembering those lessons."

Officials of General Public Utilities Corp., the plant owner, have said in the past few weeks that the company has made great strides since the accident and learned from the mistakes that were made.

Since 1985, when TMI Unit 1 returned to operation, they said the company has shown it has the integrity and capability to safely run a nuclear power plant.

The plant owner still faces about 2,000 damage claims.

Deborah Baker of Middletown, who won a $1 million settlement from the plant owners' insurance company, said her own research has convinced her the accident caused her son to be born nine months after the accident with Down's Syndrome. "If I can touch one person today with my message, then I feel I have accomplished my goal," she said. "For us, the accident will always be in our memories."

Ernest Sternglass, a professor of radiation physics at the University of Pittsburgh and a critic of government health studies, said radiation from the accident boosted infant mortality in Pennsylvania, New York and Maryland and caused thousands of other deaths by lowering people's immunity.

He said government officials manipulated mortality data to hide the damage and called for a congressional investigation into what he called "a scandal here of incredible proportion."

"That's patently absurd," replied Faith Schottenfeld, a spokeswoman for the New York Department of Health. "His allegations are not new," said George Tokuhata, research director for the Pennsylvania Health Department. "They are absolutely untrue. It's ridiculous. We don't have an ax to grind. We're trying to report what we find."

White House Aide Rebuffed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The White House has told President Bush's legal counsel to keep internal policy disputes inside the administration and off the front pages of newspapers.

Straying from a course set by Bush, C. Boyden Gray had publicly challenged a new agreement with Congress on Central America, arguing that it dilutes the constitutional powers of the president.

It is highly unusual for an official serving at the pleasure of the president to publicly criticize a policy the president has endorsed, but that's just what Gray did.

"There's a lot of discussion of this and a feeling that it was really a somewhat bizarre occurrence and shouldn't have happened," said one senior White House official. "The general rule of thumb for senior White House aides is that they're not supposed to be on the front pages of the newspapers, particularly not raising concerns about the president's policies."

The official, who declined to be identified, says Gray was "backing off" on his challenge.

Another White House official, also speaking anonymously, said: "Gray was told, 'Dumb move, but move on (to other subjects).' It's not as if everybody's wringing their hands over this."

Bush sidestepped whether he was mad at Gray for putting a critical spotlight on the first major plank of the administration's emerging foreign policy.

"On a day like this, I'm not angry at anybody," Bush said at the annual Easter egg roll on the South Lawn, surrounded by thousands of youngsters.

White House officials made clear, however, that they thought Gray had blundered.

Skipper's Wife May Get Her Job

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

SAN DIEGO — Officials at La Jolla Country Day School reversed themselves Monday and said that they are inviting Sharon Rogers, wife of Vincennes commander Navy Capt. Will Rogers III, to work for the school again next year.

Richard Roth, a public relations specialist hired by the school in the midst of mounting dissension over the fourth-grade teacher's removal from her classroom, said that "if we can assure 100 percent security for her, the faculty and the children," the school will present her a new contract offer inviting her to return to the school when classes resume next fall.

If that cannot be worked out, then Mrs. Rogers will be asked to work "off-campus" and contribute to the school by preparing teachers' lessons and working with the alumni association, Roth said.

Other options being discussed call for her to teach via a live television hookup, or for her students to be bused to a more secure location, according to a parent of one of Sharon Rogers' fourth graders.

Mrs. Rogers was told by the school not to return after her van exploded on the morning of March 10 at a busy intersection just blocks away from the school. The FBI has been investigating the bombing as a possible terrorist attack in retaliation for her husband's command on the guided missile cruiser Vincennes, which last summer shot down, by mistake, an Iranian airliner in the Persian Gulf.

Bodies Of Five Men Discovered

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TUCSON, Ariz. — Drugs may have been involved in the slayings of five men whose bodies were found in a shed, police said.

The bodies were discovered Monday morning by the wife of one of the victims, said Sgt. Charles Armijo, head of the Police Department's homicide unit.

"They appeared to have been executed," Armijo said. "Drugs may have been involved in some way or other."

The five, described by a neighbor as in their 20s and 30s, were killed "within the last day," Armijo said, adding he couldn't provide a precise time.

He said he wouldn't disclose the victims' names nor other details of their deaths pending further investigation.

A next-door neighbor said his wife told him she heard sounds like gunfire before noon Sunday.

The neighbor, who said he had thought there was drug-related activity at the residence because of heavy traffic, said his wife told him she had heard what "could have been three (shots) or more."

The owner of the property, Tien Chu, said the house had been rented within the past three or four months, and that one of the tenants said he was in the construction business. He said the tenants put a fence around the property about two months ago.

Another neighbor, Curtis Espinoza, said he frequently has seen police parked late at night, "like narcs, staking something out," on a street across from where the victims were found.

Children Need Control With Love, Understanding

By Dr. John Y. Powell

Children can often be effective teachers if parents and professionals will carefully listen to them. One of my child-teachers was Billy. I was his therapist in a residential center for emotionally disturbed children. Billy was one of those rare children who has been expelled from first grade. He had earned the dubious title of "Midget Man" from his family and neighbors. He presented himself as a child who was afraid of anything — he was constantly in motion trying daring students.

Billy was born prematurely to an alcoholic mother. Although well proportioned, he was much smaller than most children his age. Diagnosed as hyperactive and emotionally disturbed, he often started fights at school. Teachers had great difficulty managing his constant provocative activity in a classroom with other young children.

His first three years of life were chaotic as he moved from town to town — bar to bar — with his alcoholic mother. She was often arrested or hospitalized, and Billy lived in numerous foster homes and emergency placements. An interested and concerned great-aunt and uncle were finally able to secure custody of Billy when he was three years of age. He received good care from them, but at grand-parent age, the great-aunt and uncle had difficulty managing his chaotic, always in motion behavior. Various medications were prescribed to no avail. In desperation he was referred to the children's residential center where I worked.

At the center, Billy taught us to view him from the inside out. His external behavior — hyperactivity and aggression — was a cover up for his overwhelming fears. He especially feared being rejected; he was afraid to love. The staff began to coax him into trusting adults and sharing affection with them. Gradually he began to let staff tuck him into bed and to read stories to him. He found that he need not pretend to be unafraid. His hyperactivity diminished when he was given individual attention. In my office, he would meticulously build houses, cars and other objects without any signs of hyperactivity. He made great progress in the campus environment with its special education school and caring staff, but to our surprise his great-aunt and uncle reported that on weekend visits home he was the old Billy — disruptive and hyperactive.

In one of our therapy sessions while Billy was playing with tinker toys, I asked why he was doing so well at the center but was having trouble at home. Without stopping his play he answered, "They give me too much candy." It took time to sort out what he meant, but it later became clear. When he visited home, he was required to spend time in the general store-gasoline station that his great aunt and uncle ran. As customers came in, Billy could not be given the care he needed and he became restless. They attempted to buy good behavior by giving him candy and gum.

We helped the family to learn appropriate ways of caring for Billy without bribing him. The family rearranged their weekend work schedules so that someone could stay home with him on weekends. His behavior at home improved remarkably. At the end of the year, Billy and his family felt confident about his leaving the center and returning to live at home. We celebrated his last day at the children's center with a family meeting in my office. Billy was playing quietly — seemingly unaware of adult conversation. I mentioned that the turning point may have been when Billy said that he was given "too much candy." Suddenly Billy stopped playing, stood up and said, "Dr. Powell, tell them I still need some candy."

All children need limits, control and discipline, but Billy taught me that children also need "some candy" — unconditional love and understanding. Sometimes we label children as disturbed or hyperactive as if such terms represent fixed conditions, but Billy's life shows that children like adults can change and grow. In fact, Billy is now in high school and is considered to be a good school citizen and is active in many school affairs.

Children are unusually resilient. If we will provide troubled children and their equally upset families with an abundance of love, guidance and professional assistance, our efforts will result in helping many children grow into self-confident, productive adults.

Dr. Powell is assistant professor in the School of Social Work at East Carolina University.

Professionals Should Deal With Son

Dear Abby: Your well-intentioned advice to "Perplexed in California" may have endangered the parent's life. You suggested that the perplexed parent, who was aware of her son's drug dealing, warn him that he was going to be turned in if he did not stop his illegal activities. You suggested that if the son continued to deal drugs after the warning, "Perplexed" should have no qualms of conscience about blowing the whistle.

Abby, people who deal drugs often do it to support their own habits, and therefore may not react rationally to parental threats. I know. We advised our housekeeper, whose son was stealing her money to support his drug habit, to warn him, then lock him out of the house if he didn't mend his ways. He did not mend his ways — so his mother locked him out of the house. Her son's response to being locked out was to set fire to his mother's house while she was asleep in it! Our housekeeper barely escaped with her life and lost everything she owned in the fire.

Our newspapers are full of stories about acts of violence related to drug dealing. An addict or dealer will lie, cheat, steal, and in some cases will even murder his own parents if they try to interfere.

Dear Abby

You should have advised "Perplexed" to notify the authorities anonymously of the drug-dealing son, and let the professionals handle it. Threatening a drug dealer — even one's own son — can be extremely dangerous. Sign me ... Learned Better In New Jersey

Dear Learned Better: Thank you for writing. Your answer was better than mine. Within minutes of reading your letter, I received the following Western Union Mailgram:

"Dear Abby: For God's sake, contact woman whose son is possibly dealing cocaine. If she threatens to turn him in she could be signing her own death warrant. Drug dealers do not operate in a vacuum! Read article in recent Reader's Digest regarding drug dealing. Thousands have been murdered to protect cocaine interests — including judges and law enforcement agents." — Z.L.L., Norfolk, Va.

Dear Abby: My 17-year-old daughter, "Sandi," left for college last fall. Adding to her normal separation anxiety was the fact that her roommate, "Lorna," was a heavy smoker. The first week of college, Lorna inconsiderately puffed up a storm in their dormitory room. We received many tearful phone calls from Sandi — but not about homesickness. Her clothes and hair smelled terrible!

The first week of school, Sandi told us Lorna had boys in the room until 2 a.m., smoking and watching television, so I prepared to remove Sandi from that college. I called the dean and told her about the situation my daughter had encountered. She advised me to let Sandi handle things for herself — that she could not impose her morals on her roommate, Abby, how about her right to privacy?

Before Sandi moved out, Lorna had several all-night male visitors. I am grateful to the resident assistant who found a place for my daughter to move.

I am writing so that other parents won't be as disillusioned as I was about college life. I was so upset about this situation that I spoke to many people — and learned it was not unusual and, in fact, common! My daughter was lucky. Some freshmen spend a whole year unable to change their circumstances. I hope the rules in college housing swing the pendulum back to stricter enforcement of quiet and consideration for those who want to study. — East Coast Mother

Dear Mother: If any rules are changed, it will be due to the decision of the students themselves who, like your daughter, have the gumption and good sense to take action. You (and she) are not alone. Very few colleges these days place any kind of restrictions on their students. They figure the students who come there will live by the moral code they brought with them.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rose in early trading today amid government efforts to knock down the value of the dollar.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 10.35 to 2,268.21 as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Advancing issues outnumbered declining ones nearly 2 to 1, with 588 stocks higher, 302 lower and 518 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 24.26 million in the first half-hour of trading.

European central banks and the Federal Reserve joined in selling dollars, but the intervention appeared to have little immediate effect on the currency.

Stock investors were paying close attention to the credit markets. Bond prices were little changed today, while short-term interest rates edged higher, providing an attractive alternative to stocks.

Meanwhile, oil futures prices fell today after running up Monday.

Among actively traded issues, American Telephone & Telegraph was unchanged at 31 3/4, General Electric was up 1/2 at 44 1/2, Anheuser Busch was up 1/2 at 34 3/8, and Texaco was up 1/2 at 53 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks was up 0.44 at 163.76.

Polaroid Escapes Takeover Attempt

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BURBANK, Calif. — Shamrock Holdings formally abandoned Monday its $3.2 billion, 8-month-old struggle to acquire Polaroid, less than a week after a Delaware court dealt the company a fatal blow in its attempt to gain control of the instant photography giant.

The agreement reached Easter Sunday between the two companies calls for Shamrock, a Burbank, Calif., investment company controlled by Roy O. Disney, to drop all efforts to gain control of Cambridge, Mass.-based Polaroid for at least 10 years in exchange for a package that could give Shamrock a pretax profit of about $40 million for its failed takeover attempt.

Despite the profits awaiting Shamrock, President and Chief Executive Stanley Gold expressed deep disappointment at falling short of the main prize.

"We wanted the company and we are frustrated that we didn't get it," he said in a telephone interview after leaving New York where the deal with Polaroid was signed. "The consolation prize is really only that: second best. I can't say I'm thrilled."

Neither, apparently, was Wall Street. Polaroid's stock dropped sharply Monday, dropping 4 1/2 to close at $36 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Terms of the deal call for Polaroid to repurchase 27 percent of all its outstanding shares at a premium of $50, including 27 percent of the shares held by Shamrock. Polaroid also agreed to reimburse Shamrock $20 million for its takeover-related expenses and to spend $5 million in advertising on radio and television stations owned by Shamrock.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Here's how area House members were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending March 24. The Senate was in recess and conducted no votes.

COMMITTEE FUNDING: By a vote of 348 for and 53 against, the House authorized a budget of $53.5 million for a share of its committee operations in 1989, an increase of 7.5 percent over the comparable 1988 budget. The legislation (House Resolution 103) did not require Senate approval and took effect immediately.

The $53.5 million covers about half of the cost of running House committees, with the remainder to be supplied by the legislative brand appropriations bill. It funds items such as salaries for many of the 2,200 employees of the House's 27 committees and 160 subcommittees, domestic travel and the hiring of consultants.

Members voting yes supported the committee funding resolution. For North Carolina, members voting yes were Walter Jones, D-1, Tim Valentine, D-2, Martin Lancaster, D-3, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, Alex McMillan, R-9, Cass Ballenger, R-10 and James Clarke, D-11. Howard Coble, R-6 voted no and David Price, D-4 and Stephen Neal, D-5 did not vote.

MINIMUM WAGE: By a vote of 248 for and 171 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 2) to increase the minimum wage by $1.20 an hour. The existing $3.35 hourly pay floor would rise to $3.85 in October 1989 and $4.25 in October 1990 and peak at $4.55 in October 1991.

Members voting yes wanted to increase the minimum wage to $4.55 and hour. Jones, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner and Clarke voted yes. Valentine, Lancaster, Coble, McMillan and Ballenger voted no.

THE BUSH SUBSTITUTE: By a vote of 198 for and 218 against, the House rejected an amendment to HR 2 (above) embodying President Bush's plan to raise the minimum wage to $4.25 per hour instead of higher levels advocated by House Democrats and organized labor.

Members voting yes supported President Bush's call for a smaller increase in the minimum wage. Members voting yes were Valentine, Lancaster, Coble, McMillan and Ballenger. Voting no was Jones, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner and Clarke.

TO PENALIZE EMPLOYERS: By a vote of 98 for and 321 against, the House rejected an amendment to toughen penalties on employers who fail to pay the minimum wage or overtime as required by the Fair Labor Standards Act. This occurred during debate on HR 2 (see preceding votes).

Members voting yes wanted to stiffen penalties against employers violating the Fair Labor Standards Act. Jones voted yes and Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Coble, Rose and Hefner voted no.

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Sears, Roebuck and Co. said Monday that it has agreed to sell its Coldwell Banker commercial real estate group to employees and outside investors. The price was not disclosed, but sources in the industry put it in the range of $300 million.

Financing for the deal is being put together by Sumitomo Bank and Bankers Trust Co.

NFL's Free Agents Don't Have To Leave

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Federal judge David Doty has made it official: the 130 players who have changed teams since the NFL's new free agency plan took effect six weeks ago won't have to go back to their old teams.

In a decision made public Monday, the Minneapolis-based federal judge denied an injunction filed by the union against the owners' so-called "Plan B."

But Doty, who is presiding over the antitrust suit filed by the union at the end of the 24-day strike in 1987, did not specifically validate the new system as a way for the league to satisfy antitrust requirements. He didn't mention that subject at all.

The union claimed, through general counsel Dick Berthelsen, that it didn't expect the injunction to be granted.

"Getting an injunction is like having a game declared a forfeit in the first quarter," he said. "That's how difficult an injunction is. It's a very extraordinary remedy."

"The bottom line is that the system continues," John Jones, spokesman for the NFL Management Council, said.

Doty based his decision on a ruling he made in July 1988, in which he held that outright free agency, which the union is seeking, could hurt competitive balance and "would work a wholesale subversion of the collective bargaining process."

"The court would have to depart from its previous rulings in order to grant plaintiff's motion," Doty wrote. "The court declines to do so."

Under the new system, each team was allowed to protect 37 players, with the others on the roster to become unconditional free agents, regardless of whether they were under contract.

As of Monday, 130 of the 619 unprotected players had changed teams, at an average of 78 percent increase in salary, according to management council figures. Doty's ruling came on a less liberal plan, one that would allow teams to protect 40, 42 or 44 players, depending on their records.

Doty said that more than 1,000 players still were subject to the compensation and right-of-first-refusal stipulations that have bound them to their teams. The union is seeking free agency for all players at some point in their careers, a fact of which Doty made mention when he wrote:

"The new system is similar in that the majority of NFL players are subject to the same restraints contained in the previous system."

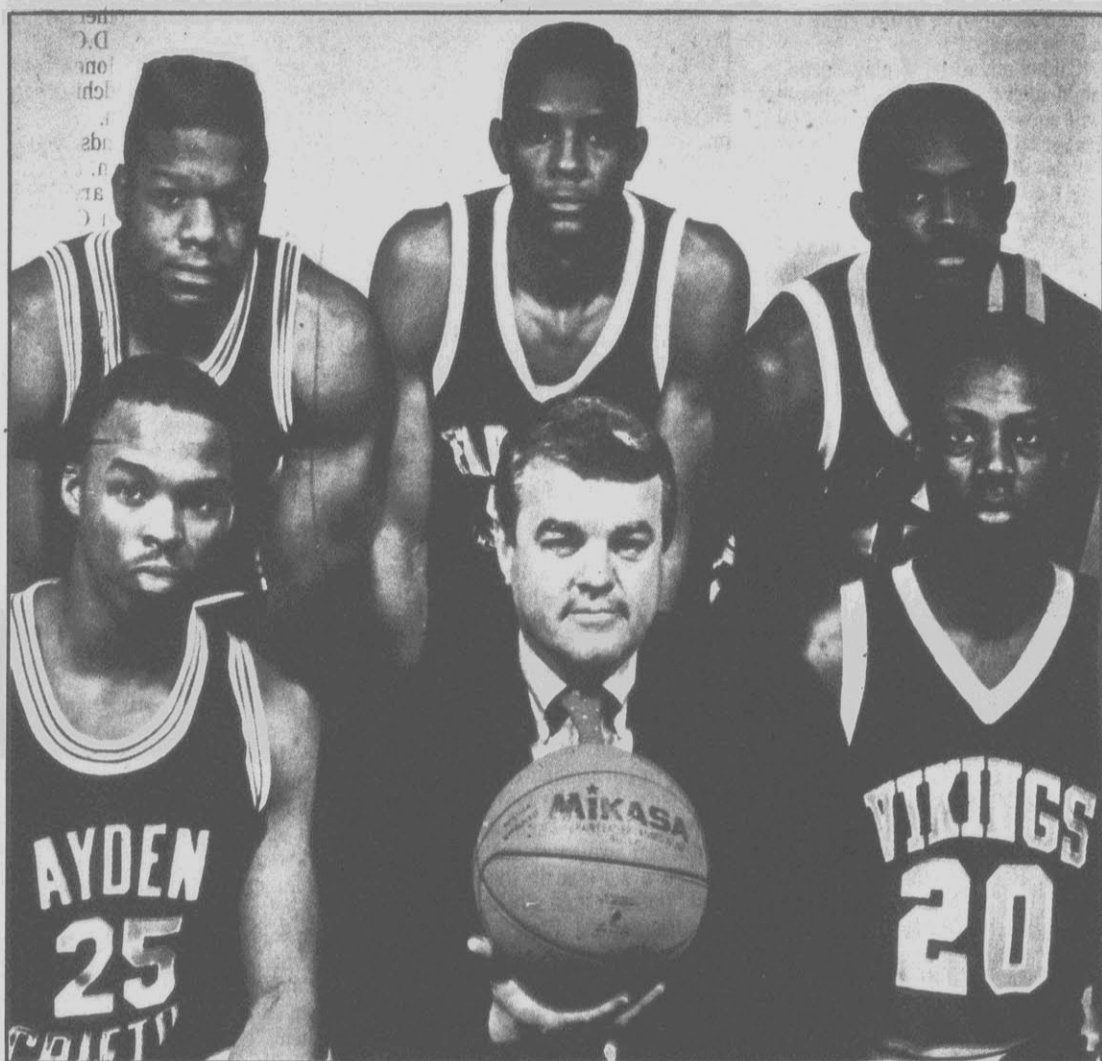

For example, All-Pro defensive end Bruce Smith of Buffalo, a protected player, was tendered a $7.5 million, 5-year contract offer by Denver last Friday. As with the old system, he will revert back to the Bills if Buffalo decides by Friday to match the offer. If Buffalo lets him go, the Broncos will have to pay the Bills two first-round draft choices.

Berthelsen noted that Doty did nothing to change the wording of last year's decision, in which he wrote at one point: "... The court finds it probable that the players will prevail at trial and that at least some of the players are likely to sustain irreparable harm if they are not immediately permitted to sign with other NFL clubs."

The suit itself remains in limbo. The 8th Circuit Court of Appeals will hear arguments in early May on an NFL motion that Doty's declaration of a bargaining "impasse" does away with the league's labor antitrust exemption.

Jones said Monday that if the court rules in the league's favor, "it invalidates the union's case up to this point."

All County Boys

Chargers' Ronnell Peterson Heads All County Selections

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The junior class dominates this year's Daily Reflector All-Pitt County high school boys' basketball team, but player of the year honors go to Ayden-Grifton senior Ronnell Peterson.

Peterson is joined on the All-County team by his Ayden-Grifton teammate Leon Dixon, D.H. Conley's duo of Terry Williams and Bershawn Thompson along with Farmville Central's Jarvis Lang.

Conley coach Cobby Deans, who was in his first year with the Vikings after moving over from North Pitt, is the Daily Reflector high school boys' basketball coach of the year after leading his squad, 22-6 this year, to the Coastal Conference regular season title as well as a sectional title and a berth in the 3-A Regionals.

While Peterson and Dixon are seniors, the remainder of the team are all juniors and will be back next year.

Peterson, who led his team to regular season, conference and sectional championships this past season, has been called by Charger coach Bob Murphrey the best all-around player he has ever coached.

Who could argue?

Peterson did it all for the Chargers this year. He played every position except center and after averaging 21 points a game during the regular season, he picked his game up a notch higher during the latter part of the season and into the playoffs. During his final 15 games, Peterson averaged 28.1 points per game as he led his team to the Eastern Regional 2-A Semifinals.

He finished the season with an average of 23.5 points per game.

"The turning point for us in having a great year came when we lost to Rose in the Holiday Tournament," Murphrey said. "He had a lousy game and I felt like he didn't step forward and do what he was capable of doing. I let him know it and the whole team know it. After the Holiday Tournament, he was without a doubt the guy who carried us. There were times late in the season when he took control of the game."

"It was very important because of our (lack of) depth and because we used him in so many areas," Murphrey added. "He played everything from point guard to small forward. He played every position except center and probably could have played that if we asked him. He's so versatile. I want to give the rest of the players credit ... but I just can't say enough about Ronnell Peterson. As much as I realize how good he is, I probably won't (fully) realize until we start playing without him."

Peterson could very well wind up playing basketball for ECU next season. He is awaiting his SAT scores to see if he'll be eligible. If not, Murphrey said he likely will attend either Chowan or Louisburg.

Peterson has point guard size but Murphrey feels he can play both guard positions in college.

"There are probably some college coaches that may have some doubts because he doesn't shoot the 3-point shot and he's not spectacular looking all the time," Murphrey said. "But I'll say this. Whoever gets Ronnell Peterson is going to have a diamond in the rough."

Peterson is a repeat performer on the All-County squad, as is Lang.

A 6-5 center, Lang was the dominant big man in the Eastern Plains Conference this year, averaging 20.1 points a game and 11.5 rebounds per contest.

He led the Jaguars into the state 2-A finals where the Jaguars XXX-XXXX Bunker Hill Saturday in Chapel Hill.

"Jarvis is an exceptional athlete and I think probably one of the strong points of Jarvis is his running the floor," Farmville coach Mike Terrell said. "You don't get too many big men who run the floor the way he does."

"He doesn't let anything go to his head and those types of intangibles are worth so much to your team. He's a lot better than he thinks he is."

Dixon, a 6-4 center, was a two-year starter for the Chargers and

All County Girls

North Pitt's Keisha Pilgreen Tops Girls' All-County Team

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Thanks in large part to the play of guard Keisha Pilgreen, North Pitt has claimed two straight Eastern Plains Conference and Tournament Championships.

And for her efforts, Pilgreen is the Daily Reflector's Pitt County Player of the Year.

Pilgreen averaged 23.4 points game this season as the Pant-Hers advanced to the 2-A Eastern Regional Semifinals before falling to eventual state champion Clinton.

Joining Keisha Pilgreen on the All-County team are teammate and cousin Gwen Pilgreen, along with Farmville's Brenda Reid and D.H. Conley's tandem of Lendora Tyson and Glenda Hardy.

Conley, which went 8-19 a year ago, rebounded to finish 23-6 this year, falling to Pisgah, 65-44, in the state 3-A finals.

A big part of that success could be attributed to first-year coach Keith Gould, the Daily Reflector's 1987-88 Girls' High School Coach of the Year.

For the past two years, Pilgreen, a 5-9 senior, has been named the Player of the Year in the Eastern Plains 2-A Conference as well as MVP of the conference tournament.

Her play has attracted the interest of a number of colleges and she likely will choose between Tennessee

State, North Carolina Central, St. Augustine's, Mount Olive, Chowan and Pembroke State.

"She made it easy for coaching but as far as recruiting I've learned a lot," North Pitt coach Mabel Perry said. "We've just got so many colleges looking at Keisha and at Gwen."

The interest is understandable.

Pilgreen was almost unstoppable at times for the Pant-Hers.

She could score at ease in the half-court offense, but she could cause the most damage on the break. Often times for the Pant-Hers, Pilgreen would grab the rebound, run the break and finish it off herself.

"She put more pressure on herself than I do," Perry said. "We tried to work our offense around. The majority of the points she got were from being a running team. She could run the length of the floor and score every time."

"Keisha was the leader on and off the court. She led us right until the end of the year with points, rebounds and assists. The other girls looked to her for guidance in basketball and off the court."

Gwen Pilgreen missed the early part of the season, but came back in time for conference play and averaged 15.1 points a game and 9.8 rebounds per contest.

"Gwen played all but one conference game and she was a big asset," Perry said. "She's small, but under the boards, people know she's there. She ended up being our leading rebounder."

The remainder of the All-County team is comprised of underclassmen.

Tyson, a 5-11 sophomore, and Hardy, a 5-9 junior, were the primary offensive options for the Vikings this year.

Tyson averaged 20.6 points per game this season, while Hardy chipped in with an average of 13.4 ppg.

"Lendora has been the mainstay of our offense," Gould said. "I am an inside-oriented coach and having Lendora has allowed us to mesh real well."

"As the year has gone on, she has matured a whole lot as far as being double teamed by the opponents," Gould added. "Toward the end of the year she has kept working hard."

"The main focus of our offense is looking to Lendora and when she doesn't get the ball she works hard on the offensive boards."

Hardy has been a nice complement to Tyson for the Valkyries. She runs the floor well and has hit well enough from outside to keep defenses honest.

"Glenda has been taking the pressure off Lendora," Gould said. "Glenda has seen the open spots on the floor and she has a lot of confidence in her shot. Glenda is the one that makes teams quit doubling Lendora."

Hines, Gatlin Key Rampants Rose Rolls Past Havelock, 10-1, In Eastern Tourney

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

HOLLYWOOD — Maurice Hines hit a three-run homer and Walter Gatlin pitched five innings of one-hit baseball as Rose High School romped to a 10-1 victory over Havelock in the first round of the Pitt County Easter Tournament at D.H. Conley Monday.

Jamie Brewington added a solo homer and a one-run triple to highlight the hitting for Rose, which banged out a total of 10 hits.

Havelock got only one hit off the combined pitching of Gatlin, Jeff Likosar and Paul Powers. Gatlin, who went the first five frames, was touched only for a single by Chad Robson in the bottom of the fifth inning. He struck out five and walked an equal number, three of those free passes in the first inning.

Likosar fanned two and faced only three batters in his one inning while Powers walked two but picked off one of those in facing four batters in the seventh.

"Gatlin threw extremely well after the first inning," Rose coach Ronald Vincent said. "And I was also pleased with the job Jeff and Paul did."

"We hit the ball well at times. Maurice got a couple of big hits and so did Jamie," he continued. "We put a lot of pressure on them with our hitting and running and forced them into a lot of mistakes."

Havelock coach Charlie Smith admitted that mistakes cost the Rams. "I'm not saying it as an ex-

Rose's Gambling Began In College

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — A man who met Cincinnati Reds manager Pete Rose as a college baseball player in Florida says the beleaguered manager liked to go to the race track and once bought a Porsche the day after a big win at a Las Vegas casino.

Tommy Gioiosa also said he placed bets for Rose at race tracks because baseball's all-time hit leader didn't like to go the betting windows where he would be bothered by fans, Gioiosa said.

"Pete liked to go to the track," Gioiosa told The Boston Sunday Globe. "He would bet $2,000 or $4,000 or $8,000, maybe between $4,000 and $10,000, but Pete was good at it. I'd say overall ... that Pete is ahead with his gambling."

Eason Named CAA Player Of The Week

RICHMOND (AP) — East Carolina's Tommy Eason, who was 5-for-8 last week including two doubles, a home run and four RBIs, was named the Colonial Athletic Association's player of the week, the conference announced Monday.

The freshman catcher-outfielder from Snow Hill, N.C., drove in the winning runs in the Pirates 15-1, 10-4 sweep of a doubleheader against William & Mary.

Eason batting average is now .407 with 21 RBIs.

Galbraith Joins Dooley At Wake Forest

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Marty Galbraith has rejoined Wake Forest as the offensive coordinator. Demon Deacons head coach Bill Dooley announced Monday.

Galbraith was an assistant coach at the school from 1978 through 1982 before leaving to coach professionally. He replaces Whitey Jordan, who resigned earlier this month to take the offensive coordinator's position at Florida.

"We are delighted to have a coach of Marty's abilities and experience join our program," Dooley said. "He is, of course, familiar with Wake Forest University and has been involved with successful programs throughout his career."

Galbraith has been an assistant coach at Louisiana State the past two years. He was an assistant with the Tampa Bay Bandits of the USFL in 1983 and 1984 and was an assistant with the NFL's Kansas City Chiefs in 1985.

Joplin is a 1973 graduate of Missouri Southern and holds a master's degree from Northwest Missouri State.

Martin To Honor N.C. Central Teama

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin will honor the North Carolina Central men's basketball team, which won the NCAA Division II national championship last week, at the Governor's Mansion on Tuesday.

"All of North Carolina is proud of coach Mike Bernard and the entire team's victory, which has brought national fame to the school and our state," Martin said. "By winning the championship with the largest margin of victory in NCAA Division II championship history, the team has established itself as one of the nation's premier basketball programs."

The Eagles defeated Southwest Missouri State 73-46 on Saturday to win the championship. N.C. Central Chancellor Tyrone Richmond and the General Assembly's delegation from Durham County will participate in the celebration, which begins at 5 p.m.

Yankees Trimming Roster For Opener

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Pitchers Jimmy Jones and Hipolito Pena, catcher Bob Geren and outfielder Kevin Maas were sent Monday to the Yankees' minor-league complex for reassignment.

Jones, acquired last fall in the multi-player trade for Jack Clark, was 1-1 in five games this spring with a 3.65 earned-run average.

"I'm real disappointed," Jones said. "This is the first spring training I didn't think I had to worry about my job. I worked all winter as hard as I could and came here ready. I thought I was part of the rotation and then they told me to pitch in relief. I said fine, at first, but then I wondered what my role would really be."

The Yankees also acquired designated hitter-first baseman Steve Balboni from the Seattle Mariners on Monday for minor-league pitcher Dana Ridenour.

Balboni, once a top Yankee prospect, has 147 career homers in eight major league seasons and is a lifetime .231 hitter.

Prior to the 1984 season, Balboni was traded to the Kansas City Royals by New York for pitcher Mike Armstrong and catcher Duane Dewey.

Balboni's best season for the Royals was in 1985 when he hit 36 homers with 88 runs batted in as Kansas City won the World Series.

He was released by the Royals last May 27 and signed with Seattle on June 1.

Balboni had a strong finish for the Mariners and ended the year with 23 homers and 66 RBIs.

Ridenour was 5-4 with Albany of the Eastern League last season and 1-2 with Class AAA Columbus of the International League.

He pitched three shutout innings this spring for New York before being reassigned on March 14.

Pena was 0-2 in five relief appearances with a 5.97 ERA. Mass was batting .257 in 14 games with one homer and seven runs batted in.

Geren batted .333 in eight games with one homer and six RBIs but with Don Slaught and Jamie Quirk, the Yankees had no room on their roster.

"I really thought I had a chance to make it this time," Geren said. "I know I can play in the majors. There used to be a time when I was ready for Triple A after the spring, but not this time."

The Yankees have 29 players remaining on their roster.

Jordan Wins NBA Weekly Player Award

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Jordan, who averaged 26.7 points, 13.5 assists, 9.2 rebounds and 2.8 steals in four road games last week as a point guard, was named Monday NBA player of the week.

Jordan, the league's top scorer with a 32.4 average, had 21 points, 16 assists and eight rebounds against the Los Angeles Lakers; 32 points, 10 rebounds and nine assists against Phoenix; 33 points and a career-high 17 assists against Portland, and 21 points, 12 rebounds and 12 assists against Seattle. The Bulls won all four games.

Brewers' Higuera Put On The DL

CHANDLER, Ariz. (AP) — Teddy Higuera, the ace of the Milwaukee Brewers' pitching staff the last four years, will start the 1989 season on the disabled list, General Manager Harry Dalton said Monday.

Dalton said the Brewers would announce Tuesday whether Higuera would go on the DL immediately or at the end of spring training. If he goes on the DL immediately, Higuera would not be able to pitch in an exhibition game. He has not pitched in a game this spring.

Braves' Sutter Shelved Once Again

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The career of one of baseball's greatest relief pitchers could be over after an examination Monday revealed that Atlanta Braves right-hander Bruce Sutter suffered a rotator cuff injury to his pitching shoulder.

He has undergone three previous operations on the same shoulder.

Sutter left the Braves' spring training camp Sunday and returned to Atlanta to have his shoulder examined by Dr. Joe Chandler, who has previously treated him.

General Manager Bobby Cox said Monday that Chandler telephoned to tell him of the results of the examination.

"He's got a torn rotator cuff," said Cox. "Rotator cuff surgery is tough to come back from. I know we're disappointed and I'm sure he is."

He said Sutter will return to the Braves camp in Florida Tuesday morning to discuss his future, but Cox was not optimistic about that.

"I really don't know right now what his future is," Cox said.

Sutter, 36, had missed nearly two seasons after undergoing surgery to the same shoulder. He underwent the operations on the shoulder between September 1985 and February 1987.

Earnhardt Extends NASCAR Points Lead

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt maintained his lead in the NASCAR Winston Cup standings following Sunday's Pontiac Excitement 400 at Richmond (Va.) International Raceway.

Earnhardt, a native of Kannapolis, N.C., recorded his third third-place finish in the first four races at Richmond, his other finish a second place in the Motorcraft 500 at Atlanta International Raceway just over a week ago.

With 690 points, Earnhardt holds a slight, 64-point edge over second-place Alan Kulwicki, who has 616 points. Kulwicki picked up his second second-place finish of the year in Sunday's race.

Darrell Waltrip, a two-time winner this season, is third with 582 points, while Sterling Marlin is fourth with 573 and Geoff Bodine is fifth with 560 points.

"Obviously, we'd rather have a string of wins in there instead of the third-place finishes, but good finishes and what keep you in the points chase and the wins will come for this team," said Earnhardt, who has won three previous Winston Cup championships.

Clemmons Hurls Vikes To Win

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley rode the arm of pitcher Travis Clemmons to a 4-0 win over Ayden-Grifton in the opening round of the school's Easter baseball tournament.

Clemmons went the distance on the mound for the Vikings, giving up only two hits as the Vikings improved to 2-1. The Chargers, who have scored only six runs so far this year fall to 0-3 with the loss.

"Travis did a good job for us," Conley coach Allan Wilson said. "He probably threw around 100 pitches. That's a lot, but he's been throwing since February."

Offensively, Conley, like the Chargers, didn't have much punch either as it picked up only four hits in the game. The Vikings did, however, take advantage of two of the eight walks they were issued when they scored a trio of runs in the fifth inning to open the game up.

"I knew coming into this year that this was going to be the type of team that had to scrap to get every run," Wilson said. "In fact, this is the most runs we have scored this year. We scored three runs in one game and two in the other."

Ayden-Grifton coach Chris Ross is still hoping his team will come around with the bats.

"We just haven't got it going this year," Ross said. "It's a combination of things. Honestly speaking, this is one of the weaker offensive teams I've had since I've been at Ayden-Grifton. That along with the weather has hurt us."

"Defensively, we're playing sound ball," Ross said. "But that's because when you practice in the gym you can take ground balls, but you've got to be able to get outside to improve on your hitting."

Conley scratched out its first run of the game in the bottom of the fourth. Andy Fasset led off the inning with a walk. Paul Jackson then sacrificed him to second. After moving to third after a balk, Fasset scored on a sacrifice by Bryan Smith.

The Vikings struck for three more runs in the fifth inning. Gray Mills and Brian Bullock led off the inning with walks. A pair of wild pitches allowed Mills to score and Kervin Vines knocked in Bullock with a RBI single to center.

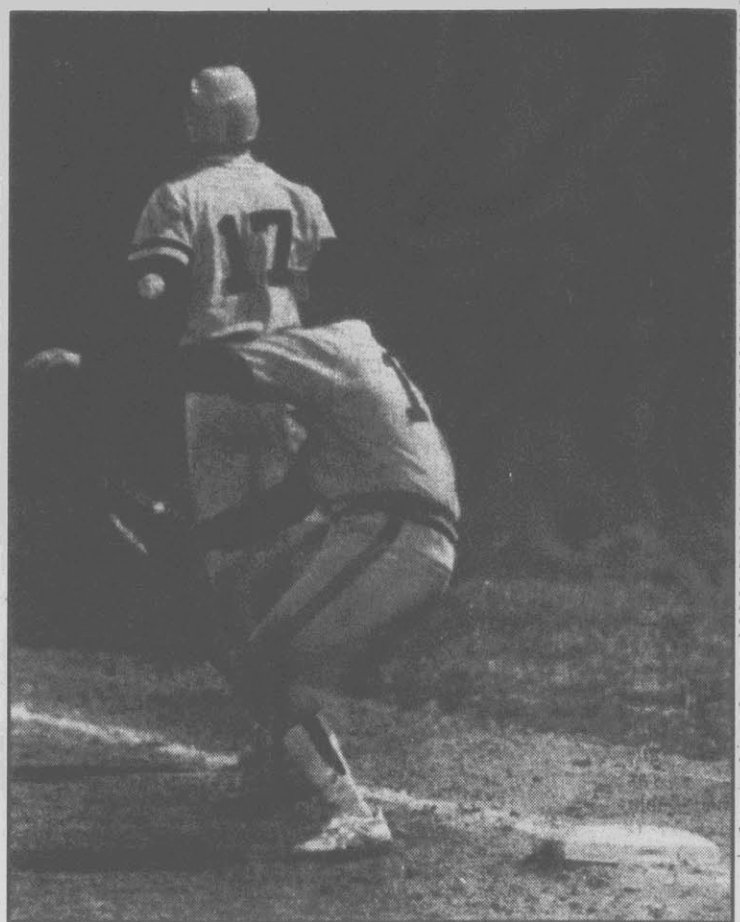

Fasset produced the third run of the inning with a single to right, scoring Vines. The Vikings could have had an even bigger inning, as they stranded three runners on base in the inning. For the game, Conley left nine runners on base, while the Chargers left only four.

"I'm pretty pleased with the way we played," Wilson said. "This is the first time that we've been on the field in 10 days, so you're going to be a little rough."

Conley advances to play Bertie tonight at 8 p.m., while the Chargers will square off with Farmville Central at 2 p.m.

"One thing for sure is we'll find out how we will match up in the (Eastern Plains) conference (today)," Ross said. "If we can't hit the ball consistently (today) then we're going to be in for a long spring."

Bertie Tops Jaguars

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

HOLLYWOOD — An opportunistic Bertie team took advantage of four seventh inning errors by Farmville Central to record a 10-7 win in the opening round of the D.H. Conley Easter Baseball Tournament.

The Jaguars played six innings of error-free baseball and held a 7-6 lead going into the seventh inning thanks to a five-run sixth inning. However, the four errors allowed Bertie to bat around in the final inning and pull out the win.

Early on, it looked as if Bertie might run away with the game as it opened a 3-0 lead in the top of the first inning. Bob Cooke, Kenneth Stevens and Al Pierce loaded the bases with no outs with three consecutive singles.

Erik Jernigan then sacrificed the first run in with one out before David Perry hit a bloop double down the rightfield line to score the other two runs.

"We couldn't hold on early in the game," Farmville central coach Billy Best said. "I think that is what made the difference. We misplayed a couple of bunts and that led to some early runs for them."

The Jaguars trimmed the lead to 3-1 in the bottom half of the inning when Jeff Tyson walked to open the inning, stole second and later scored on a RBI single by Kevin Wade.

Bertie stretched the lead to 5-1 in the top of the third. Stevens and Mike White each singled and scored in the inning.

Farmville cranked out a run in the bottom half of the inning behind back-to-back doubles from Tyson and Eddie Little to cut the margin to 5-2.

And that's where the lead stood until the sixth inning as both Bertie and Farmville got good innings from their pitchers.

The Falcons' Erik Jernigan pitched 5½ innings and struck out 10, while Troy Puryear pitched 5½ innings and struck out four for the Jaguars.

Puryear was relieved from the mound in the sixth inning as Bertie's

Perry was hit by a pitch to open the inning. Perry then stole second, moved to third on a sacrifice and scored on an infield single by Joe Peele.

The Jaguars rallied in the bottom of the sixth to take the lead as they sent nine batters to the plate.

J.J. Phillips, Anthony Joyner and Scott Shirley loaded the bases with no outs in the inning with three straight singles. After a strikeout, Little drilled a two-run single to right center, followed by a two-run triple to the left field fence by George Burnette.

The hit by Burnette sent Jernigan off the mound for Bertie.

"I knew our pitcher was tired but I left him up there because they were just getting chink hits," Bertie coach Rod Curlings said. "I stayed with him because I knew they had a lefthander (Burnette) coming to bat, but he's the one that got the big hit for them."

Burnette then scored the go-ahead run for Farmville on a single to right by Mitchell Moore.

All the Jaguars had to do then was hold on in the seventh inning. Instead, they allowed the Falcons to bat around.

The Falcons used the four Farmville errors as well as a RBI double by Jernigan to pull out the win.

"This thing was about like a fiasco," Curlings said. "We looked exactly like how many times we've played. We've only been out on the field about five times. But I guess it's that way for everybody right now."

Bertie, 1-1, will play D.H. Conley tonight at 8 p.m., while Farmville, now 1-2 will play Ayden-Grifton at 2 p.m.

cuse, but we've been hurt by the weather. We haven't been on the field in a week and we have a very young and inexperienced team. Playing a team like Rose, with the reputation they have, we tightened up."

Smith said he thought his starting pitcher, Russell Seaton, did a good job, but made a few mistakes by getting the ball up in the strike zone for the Rose hitters at times. "Still, this is good experience for us to get ready for our conference season. It's good, too, to play a team like (Rose) early to see what you have to do to get better."

Havelock threatened early when it loaded the bases on walks in the first inning before Gatlin fanned the final batter to end the frame.

Havelock's only run came in the fourth inning and was unearned. Jeff Smith opened and was safe on an error. Seaton walked and both were sacrificed up. Demetrius Taylor then hit a deep fly to right for the sacrifice, bringing Smith in.

The Rams threatened again in the fifth, putting runners on second and third on the lone base hit, an error and a wild pitch. But again, Gatlin pitched his way out of the jam.

Rose jumped into the lead in the second inning, scoring twice. John Bolen walked and raced around to score on Brewington's triple to right center. Brewington then scored when Grant Harmon reached on an error.

Three more crossed in the third. Heath Clark doubled and David Leisten was hit by a pitch. Hines then cracked the ball out of the park in straight-away center for a 5-0 lead.

Rose added two more in the fourth. Harmon singled and moved all the way to third when the ball got through the outfielder. Timmy Moore singled him in. Moore stole both second and third and scored on the latter steal when the ball was thrown into left.

Rose added an eighth run in the fifth on Brewington's lead-off shot to center.

The final two came over in the sixth. Clark singled and stole second. Leisten reached on an error and both runners stole up, scoring on Hines' single to right.

Clark, Hines and Brewington each claimed two hits for Rose, which moves to 5-0 on the year. Havelock falls to 0-1.

Rose will face Kinston, a 6-2 winner over New Bern, Tuesday at 5 p.m. Havelock will play New Bern in a consolation bracket game at 11 a.m.

Rose Inquiry ...

and income-tax evasion, recently told Sports Illustrated that he heard that Gioiosa had placed bets for Rose on basketball and football games.

Gioiosa, a college baseball player when he met Rose in 1978, declined comment when the Globe asked if he ever placed bets with a bookie for Rose.

However, in an interview with The Standard-Times of New Bedford published last week, Gioiosa denied making such bets.

"I made no bets like that. We'd go to the track together all the time. Every night — sometimes day and night. And sometimes I'd go to the track for Pete."

"I've got nothing bad to say about the guy. He bought me my first Porsche," Gioiosa said.

Gioiosa said he was scheduled to meet today with representatives of the commissioner's office, which is investigating allegations that Rose broke baseball's gambling rules.

"I'm still not positive if I'm going to go," Gioiosa said. "I'm going to talk to Pete ... and then take it from there."

Spokesman Rich Levin said the commissioner's office would not comment on the investigation.

Gioiosa said he lived with Rose for five years, until Rose and his first wife were divorced. When Rose remarried, Gioiosa bought a condominium nearby and, "I'd be over there all the time ... see him every day, have breakfast with him, wash his car, go to the track with him."

Rose placed a large bet on the Washington Redskins to win the 1988 Super Bowl, Gioiosa said. He said the bet was placed in Las Vegas, where sports gambling is legal.

Gioiosa said Rose also liked to play baccarat. After one successful night at the tables, Gioiosa said, Rose bought a Porsche the next day.

averaged 18.4 points per game this season.

"He's kind of an interesting story," Murphrey said. "I brought him right up to varsity as a sophomore and he had never played junior high basketball or jv basketball.

"He doesn't have great height or reach, but he has learned to use that big body to the fullest advantage around the basket. Usually it's the last thing a player learns," Murphrey added. "Right now, he's as good as any player I've every had once he catches the ball in the low post.

"It's almost a sure thing when he gets ball on the blocks he's going to score. It doesn't matter if the player is 6-5. Jarvis Lang of Farmville is a great player, but he has more than held his own each time he's played against him."

Williams, who averaged 13.7 points per game and 9.2 rebounds, and Thompson, who added 11.6 ppg, were the mainstays for the Vikings this year.

"Terry just refused to all season long to let us not be our very best," Deans said.

In his last game, Williams scored a team-high 18 points despite playing most of the game with a broken hand as Conley fell, 47-46, to Eastern Alamance in the 3-A Eastern Semifinals.

"The last game was typical," Deans said. "He wanted to be on the floor and he made sure he played his best. For a kid to tell me his hand was broken and to go out and play as hard as he did just chokes me up."

"He has been the most consistent player and probably the hardest worker of anybody on the team. That's a key to his success. Terry is a very sound defensive player. He would guard the best offensive threat."

Thompson, a 6-1 junior, blossomed as a floor leader for the Vikings this season and was the team's best 3-point field goal shooter.

"Bershaun has been our floor leader," Deans said. "He's been a good outside threat the entire year. With him and Terry, we had an inside game and an outside game."

Deans took over a team that advanced to the 3-A Eastern Regional finals last year but lost a number of key players, most notably 6-9 center Phil Medlin, now at Wake Forest.

The Vikings surprised many by winning the Coastal Conference title outright over a strong Havelock team.

"I'm pleasantly surprised," Deans said. "I didn't think we'd do this well. I was shooting for this next year."

"This was a credit to the kids even though they had a rookie coach. I had a lot of help from Keith (Gould) as far as personnel judgment as well as Walt (Claybrook). Mainly it was the kids. They proved to me that we could run up and down the floor and (still) play defense. We developed into a very sound defensive team."

With four starters returning for next season, Deans is looking forward to the beginning of the campaign.

"We've had some talks with some of the kids," he said. "We're going to start working on next year in the very near future."

Girls' All-County Team ...

Reid, a 6-1 center, came on strong in the second part of the season for the Lady Jaguars, averaging 17.7 and 15.1 rebounds per game as Farmville finished up 16-7.

"She's grown up a lot and I'm real proud of her," Farmville coach Hilda Worthington said. "It's just beginning to develop. She's just a junior. I had my four juniors and one senior all be captains. She played an important role as far as being a leader."

Gould points to assistant coach Martha McCaskill, a holdover from the previous staff, as one of the keys in the Vikings' improvement this year.

"She had been with the program before and knew the girls and she helped me a lot," he said.

With a team dominated by underclassmen, Gould said he thought the Valkyries could be a good team, but he wasn't necessarily pointing to this year.

"It's been about like a dream," he said. "I think the biggest thing we've done is get the girls to play together. There is real good team unity."

"That has as much to do with the girls as anything. We had a lot of adversity early. To say we'd expect to go this far, no, we didn't expect it."

Pirates Shutout Tribe, 4-0

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — East Carolina completed a three-game sweep of William and Mary with a 4-0 victory in Colonial Athletic Association baseball action Monday.

The Pirates never trailed against the Tribe as they scored two runs in the first along with one run apiece in the fifth and ninth innings.

With one out, Chris Cauble singled. Tommy Eason followed with a walk. Calvin Brown added an RBI single to score Cauble. Eason later came on a ground out by John Gast.

ECU added a run in the fifth when David Ritchie led off with a single and stole second and third on a grounder by Cauble before scoring when William and Mary John Moosa tried to pick him off at third but erred the ball into the outfield.

ECU's final run came when Ritchie reached off an infield error and stole second and third before scoring on a single by Cauble.

William and Mary loaded the bases with two outs in the seventh, but Brien Berckman came in for John White, who came on in the second to earn the win, and struck out the first batter to end the threat.

Ritchie had three steals on the day to move into second for ECU career steals with 36.

ECU, 16-2 overall and 5-1 in the CAA, has won nine of last 10 and six in a row.

ECU returns to action Thursday at 3 p.m. against Kent State.

St. Louis To Meet Redmen In NIT Finals Wednesday

other kids pitched in when needed. It was a team effort.

Michigan State came back with a 20-7 spurt, including the final eight points of the first half, closing the gap to 41-35 with 13:53 left.

But that was the closest the Spartans got. Gray followed with a 3-pointer 22 seconds later and Douglass hit two jumpers in less than a minute, helping St. Louis rebuild its margin to 50-37 with 10:47 left. Michigan State got no closer than eight in the final 10 minutes.

"It was a disappointing loss," said Michigan State coach Jud Heathcote, who won a national championship with the Spartans 10 years ago. "Anytime you come this far, it's disappointing. St. Louis played a little harder and a little smarter than we did."

St. John's, eighth in the nine-team Big East Conference, used a loss to last-place Boston College in the first round of the conference tournament as inspiration against Alabama-Birmingham.

"We talked about the B.C. game before going out there tonight," Coach Lou Carnesecca said. "It was a bitter pill to take."

"We didn't want to put the balls away after that last game," said forward Jayson Williams, who had 17 points and 11 rebounds against UAB. "The NIT isn't the NCAAs, but it's a national tournament and we'd like to win it."

Freshman Malik Sealy also scored 17 points for St. John's, 19-13, while freshman Robert Werdand had 12 points and 11 rebounds and a third freshman starter, Jason Buchanan, added 12 points.

"Every game we play this season will help all the young players next year," Sealy said. "We want to keep the fires burning."

The Redmen outrebounded the Blazers 46-32 while holding them to 37.7 percent shooting from the field.

"But it's all worth nothing unless we bring it home Wednesday," Carnesecca said. "The first 12 or 13 minutes tonight was the best we've played, offensively and defensively, all season."

Ewing Scores 45 To Lead Knicks' Rout Of Hornets

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — It's amazing, said New York Knicks coach Patrick Ewing can do with a little support.

"If you can surround Patrick Ewing with good players, he can play great," Pitino said. "If you surround him with inferior players, then they may not get the ball to him or pass it off."

Ewing got plenty of help from his teammates Monday night as the Knicks defeated the Charlotte Hornets 121-105 behind Ewing's 45 points, which tied his career high.

New York point guard Mark Jackson, in his second game back from the injured list, scored 21 points and had nine assists for the Atlantic Division-leading Knicks, who snapped a three-game losing streak. Gerald Wilkins added 14 points.

"I don't think there is anybody better," Harter said of the Knicks' 7-footer. He is right up there with (Chicago's Michael) Jordan. But I like the big guy. The ball was really dropping for him. He plays great for us all the time. He is a superior player, the best in the league."

The loss was the third in a row for the expansion Hornets' and seventh straight at home, the longest home skid of the season.

Rookie Rex Chapman had 24 points for Charlotte, which played without injured regular starters Kelly Tripucka and Michael Holton.

Robert Reid added 18 and Kurt Rambis had 12 points and 14 rebounds.

Pistons 90, Mavericks 77

Adrian Dantley won the battle, Mark Aguirre won the war in their first rematch since the two traded teams in one of the bigger trades of the year in the NBA.

Dantley and Aguirre squared off for the first time since they were traded for each other last month. Dantley won the head-to-head battle 18 points to 12 but Aguirre's streaking Detroit Pistons defeated the slumping Mavericks.

Heat 100, Nets 79

Pearl Washington scored 21 points, Rory Sparrow added 20 and Miami unleashed a 34-2 second-half burst over New Jersey, which has lost 10 straight.

A 13-2 run midway through the third quarter gave the Nets a 57-49 lead. The Heat then scored nine straight points, including four of Sparrow's third-quarter total of 12.

Pacers 104, Cavaliers 102

Rik Smits made two free throws after time expired, enabling Indiana to beat Cleveland for the first time in six meetings this season.

Bucks 121, Warriors 109

Larry Krystkowiak scored 10 of his 26 points in the fourth quarter as Milwaukee defeated Golden State for the 11th consecutive time.

Clippers 119, Nuggets 118

Ken Norman scored 28 points and Benoit Benjamin added 24, including a game-winning slam dunk with 14 seconds left. Rookie Gary Grant had his best game as a pro with 22 points, 17 assists and eight rebounds as the Clippers won for only the fifth time in their last 41 games.

'Fletch Lives' Is Top Seller

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOLLYWOOD — "Fletch Lives," starring Chevy Chase as an investigative reporter prying into the private life of a TV evangelist, was Hollywood's top money maker over the Easter weekend with $5.6 million in ticket sales.

Movies aimed at youngsters on spring break dominated the Top 10 list, notably the re-released Disney film "The Rescuers" in second place with revenues of $3.1 million.

The only serious films in the weekend lineup were the Oscar-nominated movie "Rain Man," in third place with $3 million, followed closely by "Lean on Me," based on New Jersey's baseball bat-wielding educator Joe Clark, with $2.9 million.

"Miami Vice" TV star Don Johnson's latest big screen venture "Dead Bang" made its debut in fifth place with a $2.8 million gross, while "Leviathan," with Richard Crenna in an underwater variation of "Alien," was sixth with $2.7 million.

Actress Shelley Long and her new movie "Troop Beverly Hills" placed seventh in its first week of release with a $2.3 million gross.

In eighth place was the romantic comedy "Chances Are," featuring "Moonlighting" TV star Cybill Shepherd, and ninth went to the teen comedy, "Bill and Ted's Excellent Adventure."

Rounding out the Top 10 was "Skin Deep," with "Three's Company" and "Hooperman" TV star John Ritter.

Witt, left, and Thomas say laughter is key to 'Heartland,' new show about a farm family

Producers Bypass The Rubes In Farm Comedy 'Heartland'

By Jerry Buck THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Paul Junger Witt and Tony Thomas, noted for their hip, urban comedies, have turned to the soil for their newest series, CBS' "Heartland."

"Heartland" may be the first television comedy to milk laughs from farm folk without portraying them as "aw-shucks" hayseeds.

"This is from an idea that's been percolating for a while," said Witt.

"We started a long time ago with the idea that the farm is the last of the family businesses. And although the American family farms are disappearing, the people running them are some of the most clever and inventive people in business. People on farms are now sophisticated and no longer culturally isolated."

"Rather than the images we were raised with, we wanted to portray them as the last vestige of the Connecticut Yankee. Farming is a complex business that requires you to be mechanic, veterinarian, agronomist and many other things all at once. In talking to farmers we found that it was laughter that helped them get through the hard times."

"Heartland," which made its debut on March 20, stars Brian Keith, Richard Gilliland, Kathleen Layman, Jason Kristofer, Devin Rattray and Daisy Keith as a family living in Nebraska. It was created by Don Reo.

The Family Farm Coalition has urged its 42 organizations in 35 states to ask its members to watch the show.

Other Witt-Thomas shows are "The Golden Girls," "Empty Nest" and "Beauty and the Beast."

Keith, starring in his seventh series, portrays family patriarch B.L. McCutcheon. McCutcheon is outspoken and cantankerous, two characteristics Keith virtually holds a patent on. He's lost his own farm and lives with his daughter and son-in-law. Daisy Keith, who plays McCutcheon's granddaughter, is Keith's real-life daughter.

"That allows us to play to a very primal conflict," said Witt. "Very few fathers ever believe that their son-in-law is worthy of their daughter. That's a great source of comedy and conflict. There's little that they agree on, from raising children to farming to politics."

Both Witt and Thomas agreed that it was hard to launch a show with only six episodes on a third-place network. "It's tough to get sampling at any time, and it's especially tough to get the audience to sample a show with only six episodes," said Witt. "The phrase we use is, 'it's tough to hit the green.'"

Partners since 1976, Witt and Thomas have produced such shows as "Soap," "Benson," "It Takes Two," "Hail To the Chief" and "I'm a Big Girl Now." In the past, both worked for Danny Thomas Productions and Spelling-Goldberg Productions.

Thomas is the son of entertainer Danny Thomas. Witt is married to writer-producer Susan Harris, who created "Soap" and "The Golden Girls."

"Bureaucracy is the enemy of comedy," said Thomas, who wants to keep the company small. "Most major studios haven't been as successful as the independent producers with comedy."

The Witt-Thomas show "Beauty and the Beast" was a big risk for the producers. A one-hour show is a financial burden for an independent producer, because the network licensing fee does not cover all the costs.

Witt said "Beauty and the Beast" was hurt by the writers' strike, which delayed its fall premiere to Nov. 19, and by its temporary move from Friday to Monday nights.

The concept of a noble, heroic man-beast living underground in New York could easily have turned out corny without the right execution.

"It's an epic love story," said Witt. "It's also very literate and stylized. The people read Shakespeare and poems. It was a risk creatively and financially. It's still not profitable. But every once in a while you find something you want to do because you like it."

Oscar Is Now Old Enough To Reach 3rd Generation

By Linda Deutsch THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — A shocking fact came to light as old and new Hollywood gathered for Academy Awards rehearsal — Oscar is old enough to have grandchildren.

One such third generation heir of Hollywood royalty is in Wednesday night's 61st awards show. Keith Coogan, grandson of actor Jackie Coogan, is one of the fresh-faced acting newcomers who will sing and dance their way through a glitzy production number called, "I Wanna Be An Oscar Winner."

None of the youngsters performing has yet been nominated for Hollywood's most coveted award. But most said they were hopeful their careers would lead them into a realm now occupied by such contenders as Dustin Hoffman, a front runner for best actor in "Rain Man" and Sigourney Weaver, double nominated for best actress and supporting actress in "Gorillas in the Mist" and "Working Girl," respectively.

The last minute odds put "Rain Man" in the lead for best picture over four other distinguished nominees: "The Accidental Tourist," "Dangerous Liaisons," "Mississippi Burning" and "Working Girl."

Many of the young thespians in the Oscar show trace their lineage to the golden days of the silver screen. Tyrone Power Jr. may bring tears to some aged eyes when he performs a fencing routine reminiscent of his late father.

Also onstage will be Tracy Nelson, daughter of the late Rick Nelson and granddaughter of TV's Ozzie and Harriet. Two daughters of Connie Stevens and Eddie Fisher are in the production number. And Carol Burnett's daughter, Carrie Hamilton, will perform.

"I feel very privileged to be part of the Oscars," said young Corey Feldman who starred in "Stand By Me" and the current, "Dream a Little Dream." "It's a great honor. ... I really want to meet Vincent Price."

Price will be one of the old timers more recognizable to the billions who tune in Wednesday night to view the awards on ABC-TV. The veterans were as excited as the youngsters when they arrived for a rehearsal Monday night.

"We've come to the Oscars before, but this is the first time we've been in the show," said Dale Evans who, along with husband Roy Rogers, will sing in a "Coconut Grove" production number.

"Is this Hollywood magic or what?" exulted Oscars producer Allan Carr as the legends of movieland paraded into the Shrine Auditorium past four King-Kong-size gold colored Oscars towering to the roof of the building.

Dorothy Lamour, Alice Faye, Vincent Price, Tony Martin, Cyd Charisse and Charles "Buddy" Rogers were among the Hollywood pioneers ready to sing and even dance a few steps.

Rogers attended the very first Academy Awards 61 years ago and noted that event, a small dinner at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel, lacked the glitz of current ceremonies.

"There was no television, no lights. We didn't even know what we were there for," he recalled. "We got an invitation to dinner. I said to Clara Bow, 'Should we go?' We didn't know why we were going, but we went."

The idea of bringing old and new stars to the Oscar production scene came from Carr, the ebullient Broadway impresario who is trying to give old Oscar some new pizzazz.

Pro-Abortion Rally Staged

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Singer Judy Collins, actor Ed Asner and about 30 other abortion rights advocates staged a rally on the steps of a courthouse to promote an April 9 march in Washington.

Francoise Jacobs, a spokeswoman for the National Organization for Women, said Monday the group wants to make the public aware that access to legal abortions saves women's lives.

Illegal abortions were once the leading killer of pregnant women in the United States, she told Monday's rally.

"I've known the terror of abortion when it was illegal and the people who suffered from it when it was illegal," said Asner. "I don't want to return to those days."

 3 NT Pass Pass Pass
 Opening lead: Jack of ♣

In an attempt to make his contract on today's hand, declarer chose a not unreasonable line. He would have earned our sympathy for going down, were it not for the fact that he had a sure-trick line available.
 South had plenty in reserve for his jump to two no trump, but it was not a bid we would have chosen! With so many prime cards, South should have first probed for a diamond fit because there could easily be slam in the hand. To make matters worse, South's play was even worse than his bidding.
 After a spade lead, declarer could count seven fast tricks. He saw that two more could be developed if the club finesse were to work or, if it failed, if the suit were to divide evenly. So he won the first trick in hand and unsuccessfully finessed the jack of clubs.
 East shifted to a low heart. Declarer again won in hand and went after the clubs. But the suit broke 4-2—according to the odds—and another heart from East meant that declarer could take no more than eight tricks.

 Unfortunately for his side, declarer had tried to develop his second-best asset. Had he paid more attention to his holding, he might have seen that there was no way that he could be prevented from scoring three diamond tricks!
 After winning the opening lead declarer should simply have led a diamond to the king. Even if East holds up, declarer continues with a diamond. East can win and shift to a heart. But declarer wins in hand and forces out the queen of diamonds. He still has a spade entry in hand to cash his diamond winners and make an overtrick.

Carpet Cleaner Draws Sentence

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Barry Minkow, who cofounded a carpet cleaning company that cleaned investors out of more than $100 million, got the maximum sentence from a judge who said he wasn't buying the young entrepreneur's apologies.

Before ordering a 25-year prison term and restitution of $26 million, U.S. District Judge Dickran Tevzian compared Minkow's new-found remorse to "spreading toro poo-poo across the court."

Tevzian issued the sentence Monday for Minkow's Dec. 14 conviction on 57 counts of securities, credit card and mail fraud.

Minkow, 33, founder of the now-defunct ZZZZ Best carpet cleaning company, used the sentencing hearing to tell the court how grateful he was that justice prevailed.

"This is a great day for this country," said Minkow. "This is a great day for justice. This is how America works."

He commended the FBI, the Securities and Exchange Commission and the U.S. attorneys who prosecuted him, saying, "They got the right guy. They got the guilty guy." Defense attorney David Kenner had asked for an eight-year sentence.

"That would be a joke," snapped the judge. "Here is someone who has corrupted the financial system. Here is someone who has lied and cheated. That sentence would be a slap on the wrist."

Tevzian further denounced Minkow as a charismatic fraud and said his harsh sentence should serve as a warning to white collar criminals.

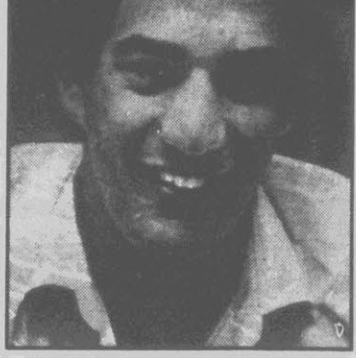

"I have to make sure that he pays the price for what he has done," he said, expressing hope that his action would tell "those who feed the bulls and bears of Wall Street" that stock fraud will not be tolerated.

"You're dangerous because you have this gift of gab, this ability to communicate," he told Minkow. "You don't have a conscience."

Tevzian told Minkow he didn't buy his late show of remorse, or his new-found admiration for justice.

"You tell me you're sorry and I think, 'Is he trying to clean my carpet or what?'"

The judge elicited laughter as he added, "I can't use the word to describe what you're trying to do to me. Perhaps the best way is to use my anglicized Spanish and say, 'el toro poo-poo.'"

Assistant U.S. Attorney James Asperger said Minkow would most likely serve only a third of any sentence imposed. Once released, the judge said Minkow would be placed on five years probation with the condition he pay back taxes, any civil judgments against him, the restitution and participate in a program for drug dependency.

Ueberroth May Make Bid To Buy Eastern Airlines

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Baseball Commissioner Peter V. Ueberroth, who made the traditionally money-losing Olympics profitable, is discussing a purchase of strikebound Eastern Airlines, sources said.

Another well-known figure, former Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci, is being mentioned as a candidate for the airline's bankruptcy examiner.

News of Ueberroth's interest came as takeover specialist Carl C. Icahn was reportedly resuming talks with Eastern's unions about a possible takeover.

A federal judge in Miami, meanwhile, scheduled a hearing for Thursday on Eastern's efforts to force its rebellious pilots back to work. The pilots' support for the Machinists' strike that began March 4 virtually grounded Miami-based Eastern and forced it to seek bankruptcy protection five days later.

An offer from Ueberroth may be presented to the board of Eastern's parent company, Texas Air Corp., in the next few days, airline industry and baseball sources said Monday, speaking on condition of anonymity. Ueberroth's term as baseball commissioner ends Saturday.

"I know Peter's been trying to put together a group" to finance a purchase of Eastern, one source said. Ueberroth did not wish to comment, his spokesman, Rich Levin, said in New York City.

Texas Air's board was to hold regularly scheduled meetings today and Wednesday, said a source close to the company. Texas Air spokesman Art Kent in Houston said the company would have no comment.

"There are a lot of those rumors going around," Kent said. "If and when any agreement is reached to sell Eastern I'm sure all the parties involved will issue a statement."

Ueberroth was approached last fall by Eastern's unions to consider taking over the airline. The unions have said they would make wage concessions if Ueberroth took over, possibly in return for part ownership.

Eastern's demand for $125 million in concessions from its Machinists triggered the strike.

Telephone calls to the office of the Machinists local for Eastern in Miami and union officials were not answered Monday night.

Capt. Jack Bavis, a spokesman for Eastern's pilots union, said Ueberroth would provide greater job security at the airline than the current management.

"I've got my fingers crossed," Bavis said.

Ueberroth met with Eastern officials in December during baseball's winter meetings in Atlanta, then traveled to Miami for further talks, a baseball source said. Ueberroth also has discussed a possible buyout with Texas Air Chairman Frank Lorenzo, other sources said.

The Wall Street Journal today said Ueberroth's offer ranged from $300 million to $500 million.

13th Person Pleads Guilty In Defense Probe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — A private consultant who is a central figure in the Pentagon contract fraud scandal is the 13th defendant to plead guilty in the case before even the first trial is held.

William A. Parkin, 65, admitted Monday in U.S. District Court that he bribed a public official and conspired to defraud the government. He was to have been one of five defendants next week in the first trial stemming from a 33-month investigation that has uncovered abuses in the Pentagon's $150-billion-a-year purchasing system.

Parkin appeared at the court despite his hospitalization a week ago because of what sources said was an overdose of sleeping pills.

Parkin faces a maximum of 25 years in prison and fines of up to $750,000 on his sentencing, which is scheduled for June 3. He has agreed to cooperate in the meantime with prosecutors preparing for the trial next Monday in which he was to have been a defendant.

Parkin admitted that he bribed a

Navy official, Stuart E. Berlin, by channeling money to him in exchange for information and favors that might help the consultant's clients obtain multimillion-dollar contracts.

Appearing subdued and speaking in a soft voice, Parkin told Judge Claude Hilton that the charges against him were accurate "as far as it pertains to me." His sentencing date is June 3.

Parkin pleaded guilty to conspiracy to defraud the United States and wire fraud in addition to the charge of bribing a public official. In exchange for his pleas, the government dropped other charges against him.

U.S. Attorney Joseph Aronica said he was pleased with Parkin's plea.

On Friday, Berlin pleaded guilty, as did Teledyne Electronics of Newbury Park, Calif., a company that had agreed to pay Parkin $160,000 for his help in obtaining a contract.

Teledyne Electronics, a division of Teledyne Industries, actually turned over about $30,000 to Parkin between November 1985 and May 1988.

Hospitals Performs Double Transplant

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — District health officials have asked the Washington Hospital Center to sign an agreement that essentially admits doctors violated the law by performing a heart-pancreas transplant without city approval.

The agreement requires the hospital to set up procedures to prevent a violation from happening again.

"The important thing to do is reestablish the rules. If there is another violation, I'm not sure we'll be so lenient," said Carolyn Graham, acting director of the District of Columbia's State Health Planning Agency. She said the city could have sought financial penalties against the hospital.

Surgeons at the hospital performed a combined heart-pancreas transplant Saturday on Barry Katz, 45, of Silver Spring, Md., the first time such a procedure has been successfully performed in the United States.

Katz's doctors argued that they had to go ahead with the transplant to save the patient's life. Katz was reported in serious condition following the operation.
