Czech Youths Hijack Airliner Teen-Agers Make Bid For U.S.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFURT, West Germany — Two armed Czechoslovak teen-agers hijacked a jet in Prague today and reportedly demanded it fly to the United States. They surrendered and freed their hostages — including a Hungarian diplomat — after the plane landed in Frankfurt.

No injuries were reported among the 10 passengers and at least four crew members aboard the hijacked Hungarian plane when it reached Frankfurt, officials said.

The hijackers released 82 passengers at Prague airport after speaking with Lajos Taba, the Hungarian consul-general, the Hungarian news agency MTI said. It said Taba traded himself for the passengers and was among those freed in Frankfurt.

The gunmen surrendered less than three hours after seizing the Soviet-made Tupolev-154 owned by Hungary's Malev Airlines.

MTI said the hijackers demanded to be taken to the United States, but West German officials said the gunmen's motives were not known.

Court Backs Those Who Uphold Sabbath

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court today barred states from denying unemployment benefits to people who refuse to work on their Sabbath even if the refusal is not based on a religious sect's doctrine.

The justices, in a unanimous 9-0 decision, said Illinois officials violated a Peoria man's religious freedom by denying him unemployment benefits.

The high court previously had barred states from denying unemployment benefits to people who refuse certain work because of religious scruples. But in all previous cases, the workers' refusal was based on the teachings of an established religious group such as the Seventh-day Adventists or the Jehovah's Witnesses.

Justice Byron R. White wrote for the court, "Never did we suggest that unless a claimant belongs to a sect that forbids what his job requires, his belief, however sincere, must be deemed a purely personal preference rather than a religious belief."

The ruling means, for example, that a Methodist or Roman Catholic might be eligible for unemployment benefits after refusing to work on Sunday even though neither church bars Sunday work as part of its official doctrine.

William Frazee of Peoria was disqualified from receiving unemployment benefits after turning down in 1984 a temporary job assignment that would have required him to work on Sunday.

Frazee said his understanding of the requirements and tenets of Christianity is that non-emergency work on Sundays is forbidden.

The Illinois Department of Employment Security ruled that Frazee's rejection of the job offer disqualified him from receiving unemployment benefits.

State officials, while not questioning Frazee's sincerity, said a refusal to work due to religious scruples must be based "on some tenet or dogma accepted by the individual of some church, sect or denomination" — and not based merely on personal religious convictions.

Full Jail Leaves Prisoners Free

By John Bare

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson has turned away more than a dozen prisoners over two weekends this month because the county's satellite jail was full.

In a letter Pitt County District Attorney Tom Haigwood mailed to county officials last week, he said Chief Jailer Larry Gay has confirmed that five prisoners were turned away the weekend of March 10, and eight inmates were turned away the weekend of March 17.

"It appears that this action seriously calls into question the integrity of criminal judgments which direct the service of sentences in the Pitt County Jail," Haigwood said in the March 23 letter mailed to Chief District Court Judge E. Burt Aycock Jr., Pitt Resident Superior Court Judge David E. Reid Jr., the sheriff and the county manager.

"Larry Gay has confirmed this and advised me that this is being done at the direction of Sheriff Tyson because the jail facilities are overcrowded," the letter said.

Tyson was out of his office this morning and could not be reached for comment.

When someone is sentenced to less than six months in jail, they are placed in the custody of Tyson, who has the responsibility of carrying out the judge's sentencing order. Anyone sentenced to longer than six months usually enters the state Department of Corrections.

According to state law, if a jail is full, the custodian of the detention facility is required to submit a letter to the clerk about the problem. In turn, the clerk would alert the judges in the judicial district, who could order the prisoners held in any facility within the district. For Pitt District Court judges, the district includes Craven, Carteret and Pamlico counties.

If all jails in the area are full, the judge may order the prisoners held in another district, the statute says. If the sentence is longer than 30 days, the law says a judge may order the prisoner held in a facility designated by the state DOC.

Sandra Gaskins, clerk of court for Pitt County, said she was not contacted by Tyson regarding the overcrowding on March 10 and March 17.

Medical District Zoning Debated

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A representative of Pitt County Memorial Hospital and East Carolina University Medical School told the Greenville City Council that the amount of the highly restrictive MD-2 zoned property in the Medical District should not be changed.

But many Medical District property owners attending Tuesday's special call meeting at City Hall argued there is too much MD-2 zoned land and that failing to ease zoning restrictions could place the area near the hospital in an economic "deep-freeze."

Mayor Ed Carter had called the meeting to obtain public comment from people who would be affected by a council subcommittee proposal to make changes within the special permitted use categories of the MD-2 classification. The MD-2 category is intended for directly medical-related uses.

The proposal also calls for city staff to study the quantity of MD-2 and MD-3 property and make recommendations to the Planning and Zoning Commission regarding any adjustments in the distribution of the two classifications.

SBI Turns Over Report On Police

By John Bare

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County District Attorney Tom Haigwood is studying the State Bureau of Investigation report into allegations of wrongdoing in the Winterville Police Department.

Haigwood asked the SBI to investigate after two Winterville police officers were fired in January and accused Chief Lester Smith of ordering officers not to ticket town aldermen. Smith, the Board of Aldermen and Mayor E.C. Hines denied the charges.

Haigwood received the SBI report Thursday, and he said he would probably issue a statement within a month.

Pizza-Eating President Pops In On Students

By Peter Baker

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — He actually ate the pizza.

Right there, in front of everybody, the leader of the free world, the most powerful man in America, the president of the United States — actually ate the school cafeteria pepperoni pizza. "Woofed" it right down, as one spectator put it.

The students at Vienna's Madison High School were awed by the act of gastronomic courage.

"The chicken nuggets are sort of a safer bet if you don't want a stomach ache, but he went for the pizza," recalled David Caglarcan, the 17-year-old junior who hosted President Bush at lunch Tuesday in front of 500 cheering students. "He ate it all. He was about halfway through it and he stopped and I was afraid he wouldn't finish it, but he went ahead."

Bush's excursion into Fairfax County, Va., was the first in a series of education-related events in which the president will participate during the next week, and illustrates his professed intent to be a leader who actually mingles with the people. While students and staff members at Madison said they were amazed that he visited the 1,930-student school, nearly all of them interviewed after Bush's visit seemed equally astonished that Bush appeared to be such a warm, friendly, unrushed regular Joe.

After he left, nearly everyone who had gotten within eyesight of the president rushed around, talking about their encounter with history.

"When he came in I didn't see him at first because I was kind of dazed," Caglarcan said. "But then there he was. He has this godlike aura around him. He's like a regular guy, but there's this bigger-than-life thing about him."

"I'm like the kids — should I wash my hand?" said Assistant Principal Terrence Meade, beaming. "He got down to our level and talked to us," said Nick Lutz, a 16-year-old junior. "It was a funny feeling being so close to the most powerful person in the world." (A presence so powerful Lutz was hoping his teachers would not mind too much that he missed his three final classes of the day.)

"I'm just in high spirits," said Todd Stearns, 17, president of the junior class. "I can't believe this is happening. When I woke up this morning, I thought I was in for another day of sacrifice with the books."

The trip, which went unannounced until minutes before Bush's departure from the White House, surprised almost everyone involved. No one in Fairfax County was informed until just hours ahead of time, including the students, the principal, the school superintendent and the police, officials said.

Principal Edward J. Ryan said he got a telephone call at home Monday night from White House officials who asked whether they could come by Tuesday morning to discuss a possible future trip by first lady Barbara Bush. After they arrived, talked for about an hour and toured the building, they informed Ryan that the president himself would be there in about two hours.

The visit was the kickoff of several events that will culminate with the administration sending its package of education legislation to Congress late next week.

Trio Charged In Thefts

Greenville police arrested three people late Monday on theft charges.

Officer C.G. Alphin said Delbert Junior Mooring, 31, of 102D-2 Legion St. was arrested on breaking, entering and larceny charges in connection with a break-in at the law offices of Gaylord, Singleton and McNally at 206 S. Washington St. about 11:31 p.m.

Alphin, who said attempts were made during the break-in to remove a computer from the building, said Mooring went to the county jail across Washington Street from the law firm and turned himself in after breaking into the law office.

Officers B.W. Lewis and R.C. Allsbrook said Gregory Terrill Sanders, 19, of Route 2, Dover, and Tony Lavell Williams, 18, of Route 9, Kinston, were arrested on multiple charges in connection with the theft of 43 cassette tapes, sunglasses, windshield wiper blades and other items from four cars parked at Plantation Apartments on Landmark Street.

The two officers said Sanders was charged with larceny, carrying a concealed weapon, two counts of possession of property with altered serial numbers and two counts of aiding and abetting the possession of stolen property in connection with the incidents.

Sanders was charged with breaking and entering a vehicle and two counts of possession of stolen property in connection with the cases.

ECU Gets Grant For Herpes Study

ECU NEWS BUREAU

A major governmental grant will support research at the East Carolina University School of Medicine on the role of sexual activity and lifestyle habits in the spread of the virus responsible for genital herpes, a disease for which 500,000 new cases are reported each year.

The National Institute of Health, the federal government's principal biomedical research unit, has awarded a $600,000 grant to Dr. Harry F. Adams, ECU associate professor of medicine and chief investigator of the clinical research project. His five-year study is one of the largest single-investigator awards ever received at ECU.

"Genital herpes, which affects roughly 20 million Americans, has become a problem of major public health importance," said Adams, who specializes in the treatment of infectious diseases.

"Over the past 20 years, chlamydia and viruses like herpes simplex have emerged as important causes of sexually-transmitted diseases but have received only moderate attention in recent years," he said. "In the 1980s AIDS came to the forefront as the major public health concern."

Genital herpes, caused by the herpes simplex virus, is characterized by a painful infection of the genitals that results in one or more blisters. The blisters later rupture and become shallow ulcers or sores. After several days the sores disappear. While the recurring disease is incurable, it is controllable. The herpes simplex virus is also responsible for fever blisters and cold sores.

Adams' study will focus on how the disease is transmitted in both patients with and without symptoms. Special attention will be paid to the transmission of the virus in patients showing no symptoms. Through his study of approximately 1,000 subjects including both sexually and non-sexually active persons, Adams will track the incidences of new infections as well as patterns of recurrence.

Partners of subjects will also be evaluated for the presence of herpes simplex virus antibodies, viral shedding, history of genital herpes and presence of lesions at the time of intercourse.

Adams said that there is evidence that persons with active genital herpes may be more likely to acquire the AIDS virus if they engage in intercourse with an HIV-infected individual.

"By further study of the herpes simplex virus, especially the asymptomatic aspect of its transmission, we hope to fill in the gaps in our knowledge of its spread."

Power Outage

Approximately 400 to 500 Greenville Utilities customers west of Greenville were without electrical power, some of them for nearly five hours, following an automobile accident which damaged a GUC pole and interrupted a feeder circuit Monday night.

Trooper C.S. Raines said a car driven by Andrew Allen Frith, 36, of Route 8, Greenville, struck a utility pole four-tenths of a mile west of State Road 1210 on Stantonburg Road at 9:52 p.m. He said that Frith, who was wearing both shoulder harness and seat belt, was not seriously injured, but approximately $14,000 damage was done to the car he was driving.

Electrical service to some GUC customers was restored by 11:15 p.m., GUC electrical director Roger Jones said, but others in the immediate vicinity of the pole were without power until about 3 a.m. when replacement of the pole was completed.

Activities Planned To Honor Doctors

The Pitt County Medical Society Auxiliary is undertaking several activities Thursday to honor the national celebration of "Doctors' Day" and Mayor Edward E. Carter has proclaimed the observance in Greenville.

Carter issued the proclamation in appreciation for the services provided by the medical profession. "The doctors of Greenville and Pitt County have helped to establish our city as one of the great medical centers," he said.

The medical society auxiliary has donated three books to the East Carolina University Medical School Library. They were assisted in selecting the books by Dr. Joann Bell, director of the ECU Health Sciences Library. She suggested, "The Origins of Specialization in American Medicine," and two editions of "Spanish-English Handbook for Medical Professionals."

The official flower for Doctor's Day celebrations, according to Marion Bartlett, Doctors' Day observance chairman, has been the red carnation. She said that the auxiliary is selling red carnation corsages and boutonnières this year, with money earned going into the auxiliary's Health Education Foundation. She said the carnations were donated by a local florist.

Mrs. Bartlett said that benefactors of previous auxiliary gifts through the Health Education Foundation have included the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Emergency Services Department with a Life Pak worth $1,000, the Adventures in Health Program, and the Ronald McDonald House with furnishings for its children's playroom.

Lecturer Says Abortion Ruling Symbolized Role Changes

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Roe vs. Wade, the 1973 Supreme Court case that protects the woman's decision to terminate a pregnancy, symbolized changes perceived in gender roles, a university professor of history said Tuesday evening in a lecture at East Carolina University.

Dr. Kathleen Berkeley of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington also said the landmark case allows women freedom to express their sexuality because through birth control methods and abortion impregnation and sexual intercourse are separated.

She said, "this separation is so disturbing" for opponents to the 1973 case because of the shift in the economic and public role of women.

"Women are no longer just mothers," Dr. Berkeley said. "There are other possibilities," she said, noting women's increasing presence in the work force.

Working women generally support abortion and pro-choice, she said. They are middle class and are career-minded. They often have children or plan to have children, she said. "They're not anti-child."

Women opposed to having the choice to terminate a pregnancy usually have a high school education and perhaps a partial college education, she said. They are full-time mothers who are comfortable with the traditional alignment of the home — father goes to work, mother raises the children.

But, "the father knows best family is not the norm anymore," Dr. Berkeley said.

The abortion issue brings in the "emotional charge" of those changing gender roles, parental values and female sexuality, she said.

Abortion has become a major issue in recent months as the Supreme Court agreed to review a Missouri case that would test the constitutionality of a state law that recognizes and protects the life of a child at conception and also gives it all the rights of a resident.

The Roe vs. Wade ruling does not allow states to adopt theories of when life begins, Dr. Berkeley said. The Missouri case, which ruled the state law unconstitutional in the eighth Circuit Court of Appeals, will give the Supreme Court the opportunity to abandon or revise its 1973 decision.

The Supreme Court is expected to rule in the case by July, she said. In the worse scenario, the court would follow the Missouri law, overturning Roe vs. Wade and running abortion "underground."

"The court may opt to alter the 1973 ruling, which would likely make abortions more expensive and less accessible to the poor."

"You can't legislate moral issues," Dr. Berkeley said. Women wanting to terminate a pregnancy will find the means to do it, she said, noting that 10,000 women in New York were treated for botched abortions in 1964.

Studies have shown that only a small percent of women use abortion as a form of birth control, she said.

Meanwhile, the North Carolina Legislature is considering a bill that would require parental support for minors wanting an abortion, Dr. Berkeley said. "Under Roe vs. Wade, that's not kosher, folks."

Dr. Berkeley presented a history of abortion in the United States that showed it was seen 400 years ago as a private act supported by the community and legal system. For the first 250 years, abortion was not illegal.

During colonialism, a condition on "quickening," or the time when a woman can feel the child stirring in the womb, was established. Before quickening, abortion was not illegal. After quickening abortion was considered criminal and was a misdemeanor.

Abortions provided a lucrative business for medical doctors and "medical entrepreneurs" usually found in rural areas. In an effort to upgrade the medical profession, restrictions were adopted so that abortions only could be performed by doctors, which limited the competition for patients and made the procedure more expensive.

Abortions after 1840 were sought by middle and upper class, married, white women who wanted to delay childbearing, to limit family size or to be rid of the fear of the health risks of childbirth which included the death of the child and/or the mother.

After the Civil War and the influx of immigrants, "race suicide fears" prevailed as the upper class, white woman continued to seek abortions and immigrant women, many of whom were Catholic, were reproducing.

Race suicide fears brought on the Comstock Law in 1873 which banned medicine used in aborting a fetus and outlawed the manufacturing and sale of those medicines in federal territories.

But women who could afford it still were able to get an abortion on therapeutic needs, she said, which ruined the plan.

The Comstock Law was overturned in 1933, but states had adopted forms of it which continued to exist in laws until 1964 when the last remnant of it was destroyed in Connecticut.

About two-thirds of Americans polled recently favored the woman's right to terminate a pregnancy.

Dr. Berkeley's lecture, titled "Sexual Politics: The History of Reproductive Freedom and the Fate of Roe versus Wade," was presented by ECU's Women's Studies program and Phi Alpha Theta, the university's chapter of the National History Honor Society.

Youths Surrender In Frankfurt

grenade, gave up at Frankfurt Airport when U.S. officials prevented the plane from taxiing onto adjoining U.S. military base.

A witness said a policeman collapsed during a shootout at Prague airport when the hijackers took a hostage and forced their way onto the aircraft.

Hans Neitze, chief spokesman for Frankfurt police, said: "We found the emptied casing of a bullet, and we assume that there was at least one shot fired on the aircraft." He offered no further details.

Criminal investigator Roland Desch said the hijackers initially demanded to be flown "overseas" but were convinced by the airliner's crew that the plane could not fly that far. The plane then went to Frankfurt.

"As far as I know, all passengers are safe. It ended without bloodshed," airport spokesman Hans Rainer Otto said. Frankfurt police spokesman Karl-Heinz Wagner also said there were no injuries among those aboard the plane.

Wagner said the youths were Czechoslovak citizens aged 15 and 16.

"We still don't know what their motive was," Wagner said, adding the two youths were being questioned by police. He said the hijackers were armed with a sawed-off shotgun and a rifle and carried a fake grenade.

Wolfgang Schwalm, a spokesman at Frankfurt airport, said the hijackers gave up after officials refused to accept them at the U.S. Air Force's Rhein-Main Base, which is located at the airport. U.S. officials confirmed that.

"The pair wanted to go to the American side of the airport," he told reporters. "The Americans declined accepting them, and at that point the hijackers gave up." Desch said a military truck was driven on to the tarmac to prevent the jet from reaching the U.S. base.

A U.S. Air Force spokesman, Eberhard Bock, said the jet was halted on the taxiway.

"Two men got off the plane and they were held by U.S. military security police until the German police arrived and took over," Bock said.

The jet had been en route to Amsterdam, said Hungarian radio, which was monitored in Budapest. It did not say where the flight originated.

Witnesses at Prague's airport said two hijackers forced their way into the VIP lounge and took a female airport employee hostage.

They then broke the glass wall of the airport building to get onto the tarmac where they aimed their guns at a policeman, said the witnesses, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

There was shooting and the policeman collapsed, but it was not clear whether he had been shot, the witnesses said. The two men forced their way onto the plane but left their hostage behind, the witnesses said.

Haigwood Has Report

were fired because they complained to Hines about Smith's practices. They also said Smith provided inadequate equipment and ordered officers to single out certain citizens to be followed and pulled over.

Haigwood said he would not comment on the content of the SBI report until he is ready to make a statement. His main concern, he said, is the image of law enforcement officers in Winterville.

"I'll issue some statement or some press release. I think the people of Winterville deserve that."

"What concerns me most about the case is the public's perception about the law enforcement in Winterville and how to address those concerns," he said. "That's what I would like to do ... (find a) solution making people over there feel and be confident in their law enforcement. That may be something I cannot do. But, that's something I'd like to do."

In the wake of the firings, residents formed a citizens committee and asked the town board to form a grievance committee so town employees would not have to fear losing their jobs if they complained.

The board did not establish such a committee, and Hines said the board served as the grievance committee for the town.

Several residents also complained that the firings left the town with inadequate police control and caused citizens to lose faith in the police force.

While Hines denied there was any formal policy exempting town officials from speeding tickets, he repeated on several occasions that small town police officers can accomplish more by warning residents than by ticketing them.

Haigwood said the SBI probe dealt only with possible criminal misconduct, not with personal feuds or town management.

"The focus of our investigation is totally directed at, and limited to, criminal misconduct. I don't have any jurisdiction to look into other areas," he said.

HOW OPEN IS OPEN?

Marriage counselors talk a great deal about "improving communications" and "being open with each other." Many couples take this to mean they must discuss everything from their past and present, in great detail. But the results are often upsetting.

Making a relationship work is frequently as much a function of knowing what NOT to say as it is of being open and forthright. Problems develop when people make poor judgements about this balance; saying too much can induce feelings of extreme insecurity in both parties.

Couples experiencing difficulties in communication, both in saying too much and in being too circumspect, frequently need help in establishing better guidelines to distinguish between marital issues and private, personal issues. This balance is different from couple to couple. Seeking help and guidance from a professional counselor will help husband and wife tailor their issues to their own unique circumstances.

Convention Center The Missing Factor

After 13 months with a full time director the Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority has found there is a vast new source of travel dollars out there for Pitt County, but the market will have to be cultivated and proper convention facilities provided.

The convention and meeting business has been pretty good here over the past year and it can be much better. There are a considerable number of hotel rooms in the county. However, the biggest drawback to attracting large meetings is the absence of a convention center which can accommodate large groups.

That is something that Rep. Ed Warren and others have been working on in the N.C. General Assembly for several sessions. Many believed this would be the year that a state commitment would be made. It is, however, a year of tight funds, particularly for capital improvements. East Carolina University officials have, properly so, placed top priority on a $25 million library expansion for the main campus.

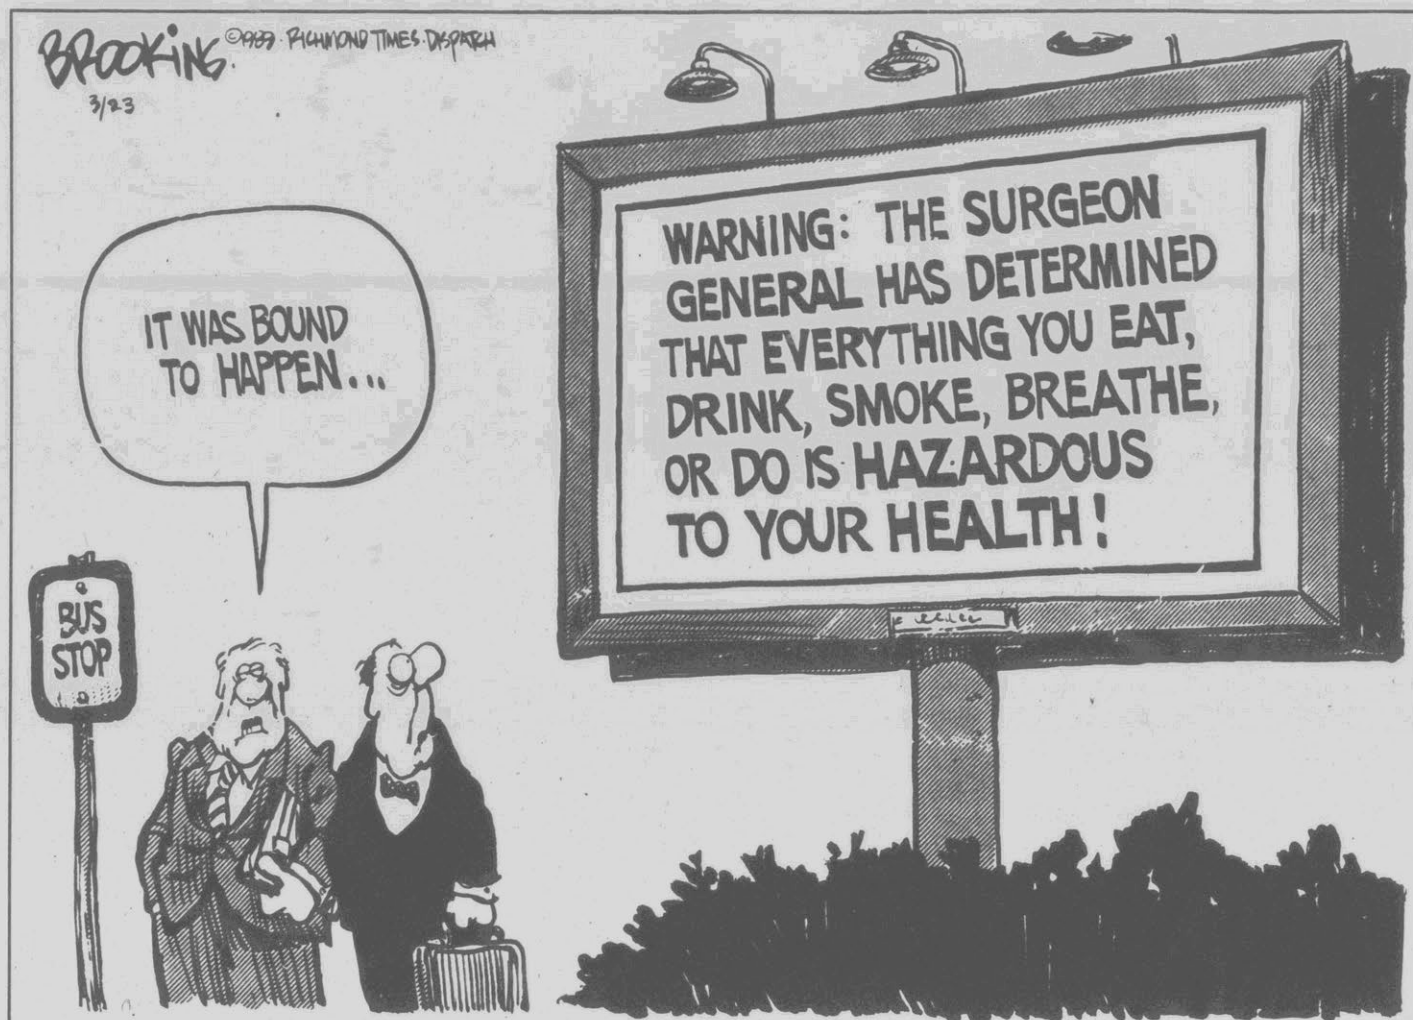

That doesn't lessen the need for a regional convention center, though, and such facilities have been provided to other regions of the state in proximity to university campuses.

The center here would provide for major conventions and it can also become a sports center, providing the home that the ECU basketball team so badly needs to reach its full potential.

East Carolina University, which has been lagging in capital improvements funds, must have the library expansion project. Eastern North Carolina also needs the convention center which will serve the needs of East Carolina University and also provide for large group meetings here.

Pitt and Greenville are centrally located in the east. Travel here is convenient to many areas. The convention center project is one that deserves full support.

Sack The Nanny — She's Asleep

WASHINGTON — Occasionally, Uncle Sam puts on his whites, powders his nose and transforms himself into our National Nanny. In that get-up, the government treats us as children. When it came to Chilean grapes, we were told not to eat them. When it comes to airline terrorism, we are told nothing at all. Sleep tight, America, the government will tuck you in.

Oddly, the government reacted with public fanfare when it came to the minimal danger posed by grapes, only two of which were found to be laced with a slight amount of cyanide. But when it comes to airline terrorism, the government keeps its information to itself. For a time, you could not buy a Chilean grape but you could, if you wanted, board a plane not knowing that yet another terrorist alert had been issued — this time because of a purported plot by three Palestinians to hijack a plane in Europe during the Easter season.

Our National Nanny seems confused, maybe a wee bit tipsy and not at all as competent as we once thought. (Better check her references.) We now know that almost everyone but airline passengers were alerted last November and December to the threat against Pan Am. The airlines were warned; airports, too—and in such detail no one can now believe initial statements that the threat was routine, just another drunk calling in from a phone booth. A warning, after all, was posted in the U.S. Embassy in Moscow. On Dec. 21, a Pan Am jet blew up over Scotland with the loss of 270 lives.

It just so happened that shortly before that tragedy, I boarded a Pan Am flight in Frankfurt and flew to New York. Frankfurt is reportedly where the bomb was placed aboard the doomed plane. In other words, I was a passenger on the very airline and the very route that had been targeted.

Should I have known the danger I was in? I think so. Would I have changed my plans? Maybe not. But the decision should have been mine. Let me calculate the risks. Let me make the choice. After all, it's my life we're talking about. But the government decided the matter for me: Better I shouldn't know. Better? Better for whom?

Well, for the government, for starters. Its concern — its appropriate concern — is that terrorists not know when their plans have been compromised. A public warning would signal that their security has been breached, that there may be an informer in their midst. This is a serious concern. And so, for that matter, is confusion (chaos, the government insists) that might result if every threat was made public. In 1988, the government issued 27 security bulletins and maybe as many as seven this year. A single anonymous telephone call could throw the entire airline industry into chaos, we are told.

Not necessarily. When a British paper publicized the latest threat, something less than chaos resulted. Planes flew. People traveled. The treat of terrorism, not really all that great when you calculate the odds, has become yet another reason for the traveler to be anxious — like rough weather or a baggage-handlers' strike at the airport. There are things you want to know.

But like many a nanny, the government pretends to an authority and expertise it does not have. Some warnings that Pan Am was targeted for a bombing went astray — lost in the mail, would you believe? It's still not clear how Pan Am responded to the alerts it did receive. (I, for one, breezed through security at Frankfurt.) And just the other day three young men in England vaulted a security fence and entered a British Airways jumbo jet. They videotaped their caper and turned it over to the Independent Television News of Britain. The video was hardly comforting. The nanny, it turns out, was sound asleep.

The purported plan by Palestinian terrorists to launch an Easter surprise resulted in yet another government alert — secret, as usual. When it was leaked to a British newspaper, Secretary of Transportation Samuel K. Skinner hit the roof. Maybe he was entitled since, in a way, his own department's security had been breached. But Skinner was also playing nanny, maintaining that we, America's airline passengers, need not be told that our lives were at some risk. Shush, go to sleep. We'll wake you when we arrive.

But the government's pose of all-knowing expertise is no longer comforting. Its security procedures are imperfect, occasionally chaotic and not impervious to the ingenuity of the clever terrorist. Many airlines are involved; many governments and many agencies within those governments — too many cooks to guarantee a perfect pudding.

Americans are not children and ought not to be treated as such. Give us the facts, let us make our own decisions — and sack the nanny. Half the time, she's asleep anyway.

Time To Take The Next Step Toward Education Reform

WASHINGTON — The current wave of education reform began with a federal government report, "A Nation at Risk," depicting the failure of far too many schools to give their students a mastery of essential citizenship and economic skills.

Terrell Bell, the education secretary who initiated that report in 1983, was unable to interest his boss, President Reagan, in a federal response. Instead, Reagan traveled the country telling governors, legislators and local school boards that it was up to them to run the rescue operation.

Confounding the skeptics, many states and localities stepped up to the challenge. They raised teachers' pay, toughened curriculum, lengthened school days and years, and insisted on testing students to measure the results.

Impressive as that response was, the people involved — especially governors — soon realized that the first wave of school reform would fall well short of what was needed. In 1986, the nation's governors, working with the Carnegie Foundation Task Force on Teaching as a Profession, launched the second wave. It was aimed primarily at improving professional skills, pay, accountability and authority of teachers.

That effort developed enough momentum that in the final years of the Reagan administration, Education Secretary William Bennett was able to publish useful guidebooks to "what works" in particular schools and classrooms.

Only now, six years after it began with Bell's report, has the education-reform effort turned back to Washington. As this is written, the final touches are being placed on the message in which President Bush will spell out his campaign's stated aspiration to have him recorded as "the education President."

He is expected to offer suggestions for expanding "Head Start" pre-school programs for needy youngsters, savings programs to help middle-class families pay college bills and other classroom goodies hinted at in last year's stump speeches.

But unless there's a last-minute change of mind by Bush's domestic-policy staff, he apparently will not adopt as his own a bold but essentially cost-free idea through which the federal government could give a powerful boost to the healthy experimentation taking place at the local level.

The idea was offered to White House, Office of Management and Budget and Department of Education officials by the National Center on Education and the Economy. This is a Carnegie-funded group led by John Sculley, head of Apple Computer, Inc., and former Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr., of North Carolina, a leader in the education-reform movement. Marc S. Tucker, who headed the staff of the original Carnegie effort, is directing this follow-on project.

It would, by simple waiver of regulations, allow school systems with many poor students to develop educational bootstrap plans and then pool federal and state funds to carry them out. This idea is so much in tune with what he governors already are doing and with the basic philosophy of the Bush administration that New Jersey Gov. Thomas H. Kean (R) has called it "an excellent place to begin" redefining the federal role.

Today, the federal government supplies earmarked funds, through separate programs, for education of poor children, the handicapped, children from foreign-language backgrounds and other target groups. These are well-intentioned efforts. But as Tucker and his colleagues noted in a memo to the President, "Separate bureaucracies...typically carve kids into separate pieces and make it difficult to build initiatives that work for the student." It would be better, they argue, if the quest for excellence gave states and localities "maximum freedom to figure out how to produce those results."

They are not proposing an overhaul of existing federal programs. Rather, they suggest that Bush ask Congress to give Cabinet secretaries authority to solicit proposals from communities and states with large concentrations of poverty. The winners would get "broad waivers that would permit pooling of both state and federal funds...in exchange for commitment...from education, government, community and business leaders...to set and achieve high education performance."

They emphasize this is not a suggestion for deregulating the system. Communities would keep their waivers only as long as they could demonstrate they were making year-by-year progress toward their education goals, so "the emphasis (would be) squarely on performance."

States and districts would receive the same funds they now get, with perhaps a 5 or 10 percent bonus for efforts to boost performance, especially in academic achievement and in helping students make the transition from school to work.

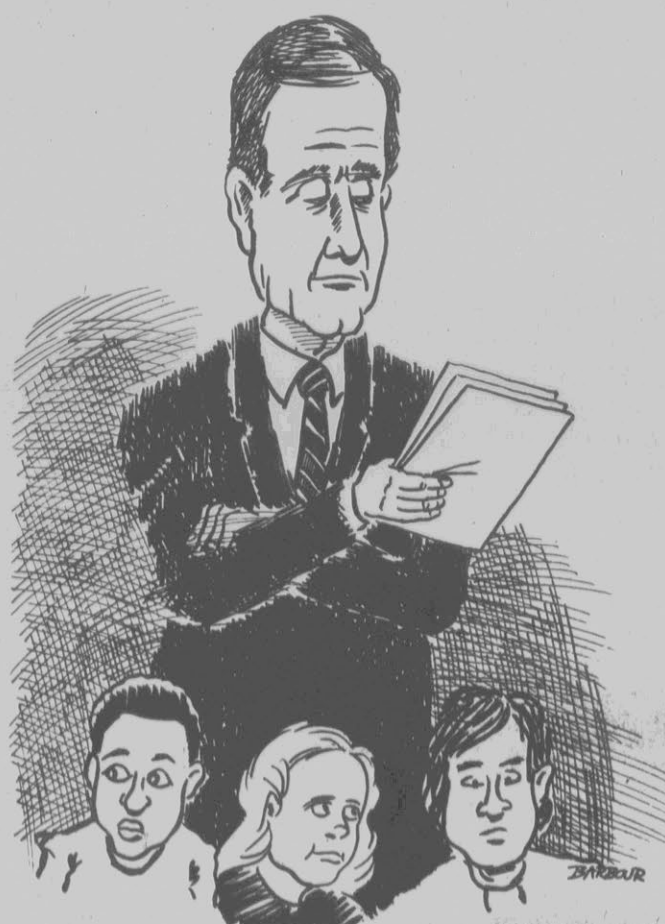

It's a sensible way of building on the good work already begun. As the memo to Bush notes, there are model schools that "are able to help their students function at high levels of performance, even in the poorest communities. But no school systems serving (those) kinds of communities...have yet been able to produce consistent high performance."

It's time to attempt that next step.

A Great Deal For Consumers From North Carolina's Banks

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — North Carolina's banks have a great deal for you. They want the state-imposed caps on interest and fees removed from revolving credit accounts so they can make more money. And the lucky North Carolina consumer gets to pay for it.

With such a great deal, it's no wonder that the banks found three state senators — Bill Staton, Aaron Plyler and Ken Royall — to introduce a bill that would do this. How can we ever thank them?

Senate Bill 377 would eliminate the 18 percent annual interest rate cap on credit cards bills, the $20 cap on the annual fee for using a card, and the 25-day grace period for paying balances without a credit charge. No doubt consumers will be happy to see interest rates shoot up to 21 or 24 percent, annual fees to $50 or more, and to get an interest charge every month. What else do consumers have to do with their money than to give it to the banks?

But the bill doesn't stop with the banks. Since most large department stores have their own credit cards, this bill would also help them improve their profits from credit card purchases. It would also remove the caps on the amount of interest your doctor or plumber can charge you for paying in installments.

Another benefit of this bill is that it would allow the small loan companies — the folks who charge the highest interest rates to the worst credit risks — to have a virtually unfettered industry. By switching their loan arrangements to revolving credit, they'd be free to charge whatever they like. Those who think 36 percent annual interest is obscene might be surprised to see how high it will go. N.C. Legal Service Inc., which is working against the bill, says that in other states totally deregulated credit has led to rates as high as 100 percent. That's the legal rate, not the rate charged by the local mobster.

Sen. Aaron Plyler, D-Union, when asked why he'd sponsor such a bill said, "because it will bring lower interest rates." The rationale is that it will increase competition and thus drive down rates. But N.C. Legal Services says that won't happen, and they're probably right. North Carolina banks aren't fighting amongst themselves for credit card customers. They are not restricted from charging less than 18 percent. If they really wanted to compete, they'd state cutting interest rates to get more customers.

The second justification is that higher interest rates will create jobs. Sure, any industry allowed to gouge the public could then afford to hire more people. But the vast majority of consumers would still be paying more than is fair.

And why should anyone believe the bankers, anyway? In 1987, Rep. David Diamond, D-Surry, sought to reduce the credit card cap to 17 percent. The state's three major banks threatened to move their credit card operations out of state if the bill passed. The legislative leadership killed the bill, and the banks moved their operations out of state anyhow.

Sen. Bill Staton, D-Lee, principal sponsor of the bill, when asked why he filed it, said he did so to have the issue discussed. Asked why the people of North Carolina would want to pay higher interest rates, he said he didn't know. Asked if legislators would believe bankers after they moved their credit card operations out of state, he said he didn't know.

"This is not something that I dreamed up that the people of North Carolina are crying for," Staton said.

No fooling.

Gray Finds The White House Woodshed Is Still In Place

Tom Raum

WASHINGTON — President Bush has made a few changes to the White House grounds, but the woodshed out back remains.

You won't find it by the new horseshoe pit Bush had installed, or the "Beware of Dog" sign he posted by the Rose Garden.

The woodshed is invisible, fabricated by onetime budget director David Stockman during a contrite 1981 news conference.

Just as Stockman claimed he was "taken to the woodshed" by President Reagan for his public criticism of the president's economic policies, so was

White House counsel C. Boyden Gray rebuked for publicly raising questions about a day-old bipartisan agreement on Nicaragua endorsed by the president.

In both cases, the dressing-down may have been more for show than for real, and parallels can be drawn between the two incidents.

Gray, in an interview with The New York Times, suggested the new agreement with Congress on Central America diluted the constitutional powers of the president.

The statement questioning a presidential decision was highly unusual coming from a White House subordinate, and the reverberations were almost immediate.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater — asked at his daily news briefing if Gray had yet been to the woodshed over his remarks — said the official, in fact, had just met privately on that very matter with both Bush and chief of staff John Sununu.

"They had a polite discussion about how things work in the White House," Fitzwater said.

And Bush, asked for his reaction to Gray's criticism, said pointedly: "I shared my reaction with Boyden, which is the way I handle things."

Stockman found himself in hot water when his skepticism about the ability of Reaganomics to make a dent in the budget deficit found its way into an article in the Atlantic Monthly.

And one of the first people Stockman sought out for advice was Bush, according to no less a source than Bush himself.

In his 1987 biography, "Looking Forward," Bush said, "A forlorn figure in a dark blue suit showed up at my office seeking advice."

It was Stockman. Bush said the youthful budget director told him that he believed his comments to writer William Greider had been off the record, which Bush said seemed a little naive because Stockman also told him Greider had a tape recorder going.

"When Dave finished telling his story, my advice was that he go down to the Oval Office as soon as possible, get an appointment with the president, and give him the same account he'd just given me. 'Admit you've made a mistake and apologize,' I advised him.

"My thought was that everyone's entitled to one mistake," Bush wrote.

Stockman, in his 1986 book, "The Triumph of Politics," claims he wasn't scolded by Reagan in the Oval Office meeting that followed. In fact, he wrote, Reagan asked him to stay on, saying "I need your help."

Stockman, who resigned his White House job four years later, saw his book become a best seller and went on to become a Wall Street financial consultant, said he created the "woodshed story" to appease other White House aides.

Stockman said the line about him having been called on the carpet by Reagan was demanded by an enraged chief of staff, James A. Baker III, who told him it was the only way he could save his job.

Baker, now the secretary of state, also figures prominently in the recent episode.

Gray's voicing of concerns about the constitutionality of the Central American agreement marked the second time the White House counsel had challenged Baker, who was the chief architect of the accord. Earlier, Gray raised conflict-of-interest questions about stocks Baker held in a New York bank because it was a Third World creditor. Baker sold his holdings as a result.

Any conversation between Baker and Gray at the woodshed remains unreported. Meanwhile, White House officials are taking the flap in stride, even with a measure of humor.

"First of all, I want to announce that Boyden Gray concurs in the constitutionality of the Easter Egg Roll," Fitzwater said at the outset of his briefing on woodshed day. "I checked with him myself."

Tom Raum covers the White House for The Associated Press.

More Doubts About Iran's Leadership

Ed Blanche

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's dismissal of his designated successor and the resignation of two key Foreign Ministry officials indicates a resurgence of radical fundamentalism in the Islamic republic.

The removal of Ayatollah Hussein Ali Montazeri leaves open who will succeed Khomeini, now 88 and ailing, when he dies.

By dumping the 64-year-old Montazeri as his political and religious heir, Khomeini has moved to curb so-called liberal figures in the Tehran hierarchy and strengthen the hand of hardliners led by Interior Minister Ali Akbar Mohtashemi.

The political future of Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani, leader of the so-called pragmatists, is also now in question.

Montazeri, who has in recent weeks openly criticized the shortcomings of the Islamic revolution and called for greater freedoms, announced his resignation Tuesday after Khomeini asked him to step down.

He wrote to Khomeini: "The survival and stability of the Islamic republic rests on obeying your orders."

Montazeri's removal, and the resignations of deputy Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Larijani and U.N. Ambassador Mohammad Jaafar Mahallati in recent days, took place against the backdrop of a determined drive by Khomeini to swing Iran back to radical fundamentalism.

He has sought to revitalize flagging revolutionary fervor in post-war Iran by confronting the West over Salman Rushdie's novel "The Satanic Verses," which many Moslems consider blasphemous.

Khomeini's actions also served the purpose of seriously damaging efforts by Rafsanjani and Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati to rebuild bridges with the West and end Iran's isolation.

These events have dealt a serious blow to efforts to ease Iran's political, religious and social restrictions following the Aug. 20 cease-fire in the costly eight-year war with Iraq.

It also effectively robs the liberal faction of one of its most influential figures.

Montazeri has recently been aligning with Mehdi Bazargan, leader of the Freedom Movement, Iran's token opposition which has been largely stifled for several years.

Bazargan, the republic's first prime minister who resigned over the takeover of the U.S. embassy in November 1979, has said that under moves to permit political parties he plans to expand his tiny movement nationwide and even field a candidate in the presidential race "if circumstances permit."

There has long been speculation that Iran would likely be ruled by a triumvirate of key leaders, including Rafsanjani, after Khomeini dies, with Montazeri little more than a figurehead.

Eighteen months ago, Khomeini rewrote his political will, to be opened after his death, heightening speculation he sought to diminish Montazeri's powers in the succession.

Montazeri's recent criticism of the revolution's achievements while the country celebrated the republic's first decade — the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi was ousted in 1979 — came amid an intensifying power struggle between Rafsanjani and the hardliners.

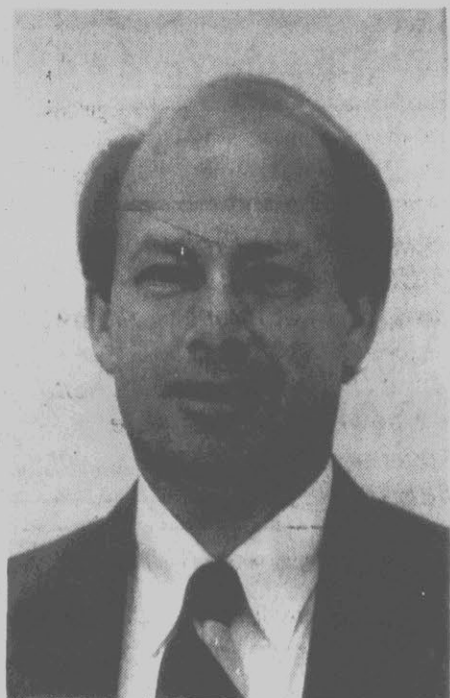

Montazeri initially rejected Khomeini's order that Moslems seek out and kill Rushdie, but later came out in support of the religious decree.

Khomeini, apparently at Rafsanjani's urging, unconditionally accepted a July 1987 U.N. Security Council cease-fire resolution after wavering for almost a year.

Urban-Rural Disagreements Slow Road Bill

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Efforts to ensure that all regions of the state are treated fairly under the $8.6 billion highway construction program might have been overdone, a House member says.

Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, planned to challenge one such provision today as the House Infrastructure Committee prepared to take a key vote on the massive package.

Despite nagging differences between urban and rural interests, both sides said the bill has broad support and should have no trouble clearing the committee. If approved, the bill will be referred to the Finance Committee.

The committee debated the bill for an hour Tuesday, questioning co-sponsor Rep. Bob Hunter and Transportation Secretary Jim Harrington about its impact.

Blue said he would offer several amendments that could prove controversial, one of which drew criticism from Hunter, D-McDowell. It would water down a provision in the bill stipulating that if one section is ruled unconstitutional, the entire project will be held up until the Legislature decides how to respond.

Under Blue's amendment, a court ruling delaying implementation of one portion of the bill would not prevent the others from going forward. Money appropriated to fund the disputed section would be held in reserve to prevent its being spent elsewhere.

"To me it makes sense, if we decide that we need this thing, that we plow ahead as quickly as possible once we start coming up with the money to do it," Blue said.

But Hunter said allowing some parts of the program to proceed ahead of others could cause the bill's coalition of support to unravel.

"It's going to increase the likelihood that later on, somebody's going to be back here saying 'you told me such-and-such was going to happen and we counted on it and now everybody else has got theirs and we don't have ours,'" Hunter said.

"That's the kind of thing we've tried to avoid in this bill. We've tried to make it fair to all regions of the state."

Blue withdrew his amendment to correct drafting errors but said he would seek a vote on it today. He contended the provision Hunter favors reflects an unfounded "distrust of urban areas."

"I don't see how the question of the constitutionality of the bill distinguishes at all between urban and rural," he said. "You see all these safeguards in the bill" to prevent some regions from taking advantage of others, such as creation of a legislative oversight committee to ensure that the Department of Transportation correctly implements the program, he said.

"What I think it is is a case of excessive precaution that may border on overkill," Blue said.

The bill would finance construction of an "intrastate highway system," largely by widening two-lane highways in rural areas, thus bringing 96 percent of the state's residents within 10 miles of a four-lane highway. It also would pay for construction of "loop" highways around seven metropolitan areas and for paving rural secondary roads.

To finance the program, the bill would raise the state sales tax by 5 1/4 cents per gallon of gasoline and impose a 2 percent fee on auto title transfers.

Meanwhile, Rep. Billy Mills, D-

Onslow, asked Harrington for assurances that the money would be spent on building roads and not fattening the Department of Transportation bureaucracy.

"We can put more folks in Raleigh, but I want more dollars put on the roads," Mills said.

Harrington said most money would go for construction, but "somebody's got to drive the pencils and the bulldozers and the paving machines, and that takes people."

Most of the work will be done by contract, but DOT will have to hire some new employees to design the contracts and perform other tasks, Harrington said.

Coastal Bridges, Urban Loops May Cost Motorists

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Bridges to coastal resorts and loops around the state's large cities are the most likely highway links on which North Carolina might begin collecting tolls, state Transportation Secretary Jim Harrington says.

The secretary told a state House committee Tuesday that one coastal bridge appeared to be a promising candidate for tolls but it would require more study. He declined to identify the bridge.

"We would need to find some machinery where the local traffic would not be unduly penalized" by a toll bridge, Harrington said.

He spoke as the House Infrastructure Committee debated a proposed $8.6 billion, 12-year highway construction package. The bill also calls on DOT to study which roads in the state are suited for tolls. Other legislation would be needed later to establish a toll road or bridge.

"It would take a significant and steady volume of traffic to justify putting in the toll booths and staffing them," Harrington said.

He said preliminary work indicated high-volume bridges along the coast and urban loop highways were the best candidates. While current federal rules do not allow tolls on highways built with federal funds, the trust fund created by the bill could provide money to build some highways without federal help, he said.

Inter-House Visit

State Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr., D-Pitt, left, talks with Pitt Sen. Tom Taft, also a Democrat, in a private conversation Tuesday in the Senate chamber of the state Legislative Building.

Legislators Reviewing Budget Items For Places To Cut Costs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The Legislature probably won't be willing to make the deep spending cuts needed to finance a pay raise for teachers and state employees without raising taxes, a House leader says.

As House and Senate committees continued reviewing ongoing state programs in search of fat, House Appropriations Chairman Dave Diamont said lawmakers soon must choose between severe budget cuts and higher taxes.

"You need to go through the process and debate it fully, but at some point you've either got to cut or look somewhere else," said Diamont, D-Surry.

The state fund for poor women's abortions, long a target of conservative critics, was slated for a $500,000 cut by the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Human Resources.

But most of the cuts debated by budget panels were smaller, and leaders acknowledged it would be difficult to reach their goal of paring $50 million from the 1988-89 budget. "I'd like to but I don't think we will get that much," Diamont said.

Marvin Dorman, deputy state budget director, predicted that roughly $20 million would be cut. He echoed Gov. Jim Martin's contention that a tax increase is the only way to finance the governor's pay plan, which would raise average teacher salaries 11 percent over the next two years.

It would take about $47 million to raise teacher and state employee pay 1 percent.

Another $15 million to $20 million in excess revenues — largely from capital gains payments resulting from the RJR-Nabisco sale — should be available, Dorman said. Added to money saved from spending cuts, "you're talking about maybe enough for a 1 percent salary increase" without a tax increase, he said.

Democratic leaders of the House and Senate have been cool to Martin's proposal to raise the sales tax 1 cent to raise salaries and implement the career ladder plan for teachers. But they acknowledge some combination of tax and fee increases may be necessary.

If lawmakers want to raise salaries, they will have to raise taxes or make deep cuts in the current budget, which most lawmakers have shown no inclination to do, Diamont said. A group of 28 Republicans has called for $639 million in budget cuts, but the plan is viewed as a long shot.

House and Senate budget subcommittees, which have been meeting jointly for weeks to review Martin's proposals for funding continuing programs, are meeting separately this week. They will review items that were "flagged" for further consideration.

Next week, the full Appropriations Committee will debate the cuts.

The Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Human Resources voted to reduce the abortion fund from $924,500 to $424,500 Tuesday after rejecting a Martin-backed plan to cut it to $200,000 — enough to pay for abortions resulting from rape or incest.

The Martin proposal, made by Sen. Betsy Cochrane, R-Davie, was defeated 4-3 as Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph, the subcommittee chairman, cast the tie-breaking vote.

IN THE STATE

Arbitration Programs Endorsed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Court-ordered arbitration programs in three judicial districts have proven their worth and should be used to reduce court loads in other areas, judges and lawyers said.

James Exum, chief justice of the state Supreme Court, called expanding the program a big step toward "multidoor courthouses."

"Civil disputes come in all shapes and all sizes and all forms and seek all kinds of different things," he said at a news conference Tuesday. "There should be options to address those interests."

"Litigants and lawyers seem to be satisfied with the quality of justice administered by the arbitrators," Exum said. "The potential cost savings to litigants and the judicial system may be substantial."

Richard Thigpen, president of the North Carolina Bar Association, said the pilot program in the 3rd, 14th and 29th judicial districts has been very effective, with only 14 percent of litigants appealing the outcome.

Thigpen said a key benefit is in time saved. Court-mandated arbitration usually takes place in 60 days, while the waiting period for a jury trial is closer to a year, he said.

"I think that it will be the non-attorneys that profit," said Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, who noted legal fees would be substantially reduced.

It will cost about $100,000 a year to continue the program in the pilot districts, Exum said, adding that he was not sure how much the General Assembly would be willing to commit to expanding the program.

"Actually and ultimately, there may be cost savings in the sense that we may not have to add judges and additional personnel," he said. The pilot programs currently mandate arbitration only for cases involving less than $15,000, but Exum endorsed raising the ceiling to $25,000.

Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, said it would require little additional money to expand the plan, since arbitration uses lawyers and court facilities already in place.

The news conference accompanied the release of the Bar Association's report to the state Supreme Court on court-ordered arbitration. In the report, the association recommended the program be expanded to other districts "as resources and administrative expertise permits."

Child Killed

DENVER, N.C. (AP) — A 21-month-old Lincoln County girl was shot to death by her 7-year-old brother, authorities say.

Teresa Diane McCall of Denver, was shot and killed Tuesday morning, Medical Examiner Sharon Colton said. A bullet from a .38-caliber handgun entered the girl's chest and exited the back of her head, Colton said.

"The 7-year-old brother had taken the gun off the top of the refrigerator and was playing with it and accidentally shot her," Deputy Ronnie Matthews said.

Matthews said the children's father had left the gun on the refrigerator because he had a problem with stray dogs coming into the yard.

Grace Lawsuit

RALEIGH (AP) — A federal jury has awarded W.R. Grace and Co. $12.34 million from an Alabama company accused of supplying a contaminated ingredient in a fertilizer that damaged tobacco crops of 1,600 farmers in three states.

Grace, the fertilizer manufacturer, had sought the amount to cover its costs of paying farmers for their damaged crops, legal costs and other costs associated with recalling the fertilizer and decontaminating its plant in Wilmington.

An attorney for the defendant, Frit Industries Inc. of Ozark, Ala., said Tuesday the company would appeal the verdict.

It was the second time the case had come to trial. U.S. District Judge W. Earl Britt, who presided over both trials, set aside a jury verdict that awarded $1 million in damages to Grace last year. Britt ruled that the verdict was the result of an improper compromise by the jury.

Farmers in North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia discovered their tobacco was shriveling and dying in the summer of 1984. The source of the problem was traced to Grace's Gold Dollar Premium Tobacco fertilizer. Grace had said herbicides designed to kill broadleaf weeds, including tobacco, had contaminated its fertilizer and the company had blamed Frit's Five Star micronutrient mix.

Applications

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Housing Finance Agency is accepting applications for $4.2 million in federal low-income housing tax credits. Executive Director A. Robert Kucab announced Tuesday. The application deadline is May 15.

The low-income housing credits encourage for-profit and not-for-profit organizations to buy, construct or rehabilitate housing for low-income renters.

Investors who submit successful proposals receive an annual federal tax credit of up to 9 percent of the cost of housing for low-income renters. They may use the credit for 10 years, but must agree to keep the rental units occupied by low-income tenants for at least 15 years.

Summer Schedule

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Zoological Park will resume a summer schedule April 1.

The zoo will be open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. weekends and holidays.

The R.J. Reynolds Forest Aviary and the African Pavilion will be open from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on weekdays and 10:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. on weekends and holidays.

Jackson Named

RALEIGH (AP) — Roger Jackson, superintendent of Ashe County Schools, has been named deputy superintendent of the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction, said State Superintendent Bob Etheridge.

"We are fortunate to have attracted a man of his experience to join my staff as my chief executive officer," Etheridge said. "He brings a rich and varied experience to this organization."

Jackson, a Surry County native, has been superintendent of the Ashe County Schools for 13 years.

Remains Identified

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (AP) — The skeletal remains uncovered by a dog near Weightsville last month have been identified as Ricky Lee Alexander, a child missing since June 1987.

Pasquotank County Sheriff Davis M. Sawyer said Dr. Page Hudson, clinical pathologist with the East Carolina University School of Medicine, identified the 10-year-old Hastings, Fla., youth with dental records.

The youngster disappeared while visiting his grandmother at a migrant labor camp. Authorities are in search of the man last seen with a member of the migrant labor crew.

Double DWI

DURHAM (AP) — A Durham man was arrested twice within 48 hours for driving while impaired last weekend, and officers said his blood alcohol level both times was more than 3½ times the legal limit.

Durham Police Officer Irvin Roberts said Jerome Lewis, 30, registered .36 and .35 blood alcohol contents on a Breathalyzer test. A .10 blood alcohol content is considered the standard for impairment in the state.

Lewis was charged with driving while impaired and driving while his license was revoked.

New Conviction

RALEIGH (AP) — Otis Wadford pleaded guilty in Wake County District Court on Tuesday to five counts of driving while impaired, bringing the number of his DWI convictions to 44.

"Your driving record boggles my imagination," said Judge A. Leon Stanback Jr. of Durham. "I have never seen such disregard for the motoring public."

Wadford, 52, was sentenced to serve six years in prison at the expiration of the sentences he is already serving for DWI convictions in Harnett and Durham counties — six years from Harnett County convictions and four years from Durham County.

Wadford, who was stopped for DWI last fall while appealing earlier convictions, is already serving a 10-year sentence for the previous convictions.

Tower Was Not Lighted

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COINJOCK, N.C. — The telephone tower struck by a Dare County helicopter air ambulance this week was not marked with an operational warning light, apparently in violation of federal aviation rules, an air safety investigator says.

But the National Transportation Safety Board official could not say whether the lack of a working light caused the Sunday night crash that killed the pilot and an emergency medical technician shortly after construction of the 340-foot metal tower, owned by Centel Cellular Co. of Chicago.

"There was a beacon up there, but it wasn't connected, and there was no light emitting from it," said Phillip Powell of the NTSB. "I can't say that's the cause. We can only say we are rather certain the helicopter collided with the tower."

Powell said he needed to check Federal Aviation Administration and Federal Communications Commission regulations before declaring that the company had violated the rules. However, he said, "I'm guessing there should have been a light up there."

Powell began inspecting the crash scene Tuesday morning in a field behind a two-story apartment building 300 feet from the tower.

RTI Scientists Developing New Test To Check Pesticide Levels

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM — Scientists at the Research Triangle Institute are developing a simpler and faster test to detect pesticide residues, a move that could help government regulators in assuring that the country's food supply is safe.

The test uses monoclonal antibodies and should make it possible to screen more crops for pesticide residue in the field rather than at a laboratory. Conceivably, the test could be used for on-site inspection of produce by supermarket owners or for home inspection by concerned consumers.

Standard pesticide residue tests used by government regulators are often time-consuming and must be done in the laboratory by experts. The monoclonal antibody test could be taken out of the lab and into the fields, allowing government inspectors to test more food at a lower cost, said Dr. Carol Whisnant, an immunologist at the Research Triangle Institute and co-chairman of the research.

The antibody test being developed by the non-profit institute in the Research Triangle Park is based on enzyme immunoassay technology. The technology has been widely used to develop clinical antibody tests for the detection of natural substances or drugs in humans, but has only recently been applied in the field of agriculture.

The pesticide residue test works in much the same way as a pregnancy test. In a pregnancy test an antibody binds to a hormone found in the urine, causing a biochemical reaction that indicates if a woman is pregnant.

Likewise, certain antibodies derived from mouse cells are sensitive to pesticide residues and bind to them. A chemical reaction occurs that can be measured to determine if pesticide residue is present.

The Food and Drug Administration, which is sponsoring the institute's research on pesticide residue tests, is interested in a faster method of spot-checking foods, said Dr. Marion Clower. He is acting chief of the Pesticides and Industrial Chemicals branch of the FDA and project director of the research at the Research Triangle Institute.

The antibody test is not expected to replace more sophisticated laboratory testing but will provide a faster screening method, he said.

A drawback is that the test does not indicate the amount of pesticide residue in food, which is needed to determine if levels exceed those set by the Environmental Protection Agency, Clower said.

Ex-Sheriff Involved In Shooting

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MARSHALL, N.C. — A Madison County man was shot in the back Monday night during a struggle with former sheriff E.Y. Ponder, authorities said.

Ponder, 79, told investigators his 16 gauge shotgun went off during a struggle with the man, said Dal Peek, chief deputy for the Madison County Sheriff's Department.

"According to Mr. Ponder, his wife woke him up around 10:30 said there was someone outside," Peek said. "He went to the door and a subject was outside and he said he didn't know who it was. He ended up in a scuffle. He had his shotgun and it went off."

Hubert Roberts, 35, of Hot Springs, was shot in the back and is in critical condition at Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville, officials said.

"E.Y. had loaned him money the last of February," Peek said. "But he said he didn't know who it was at the time last night."

No charges have been filed, but Peek said the sheriff's department and the State Bureau of Investigation are looking into the case.

Ponder was not hurt, Peek said. "About the only thing we saw was his pajamas were torn," he said.

U.S. Team Waits In Wings To Back Up Oil Spill Team

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VALDEZ, Alaska — High-ranking Bush administration officials began evaluating Exxon's cleanup of the nation's worst oil spill as angry fishermen wearing black armbands vented their frustrations with the efforts.

President Bush dispatched the team Tuesday to determine whether the federal government should take over the cleanup from Exxon Shipping Co. He said he has received conflicting reports about Exxon's response to the spill that occurred when the Exxon Valdez rammed a charted reef about 25 miles from Port Valdez.

The ship spilled 240,000 barrels of the 1.2 million barrels of crude oil on board. Since the tanker ran aground Friday, the 10.1 million gallons of oil have moved more than 40 miles, contaminating some beaches and marine life.

Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner, Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Bill Reilly and Coast Guard Commandant Paul Yost viewed the spill site by helicopter immediately after arriving in Valdez.

After their tour, Skinner said it would be inappropriate to make any judgments until they talked to those in-involved in the cleanup. They planned to meet with shipping company representatives and state and federal agencies, then report back to Bush.

In the fishing village of Cordova, 50 miles to the southeast, angry residents packed a high school gymnasium Tuesday night for a meeting with state and Exxon officials. Many of the town's 2,500 residents had opposed using Valdez as the southern terminus for the trans-Alaska oil pipeline.

Resident Marla Adkins said the oil industry had promised to have adequate equipment on hand to handle any spills. "What happened here is not what we were told would happen 10 years ago," she said.

Fisherman John Booren said he feared publicity about the spill would destroy the market for the area's fish, even if the damage is contained.

The spill into the once-pristine Prince William Sound forced the closure of Valdez' port. Flow through the pipeline, which supplies nearly one-fourth of the nation's supply of domestic crude oil, was reduced to 800,000 barrels a day from 2.1 million.

When the port reopened Tuesday, 10 tankers led by the Arco Sag River were waiting to enter port and load at the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. marine terminal, Coast Guard Lt. Ed Wieliczkievich said.

Meese Says North Fingering To Ease Pressure On Reagan

By Dennis Bell
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Fearing that former President Reagan might be impeached and driven from office in disgrace, his top aides moved quickly to put out a "political firestorm" by publicly disclosing that former White House aide Oliver North and his confederate had used money from Iran to aid the Nicaraguan rebels, former Attorney General Edwin Meese III testified Wednesday.

That startling disclosure came in the midst of the cross-examination of Meese by North's chief defense counsel Brendan Sullivan at North's Iran-Contra criminal trial.

In a series of questions, Sullivan asked if Meese and other close advisers to Reagan were becoming afraid, in November 1986, that the emerging links between the secret sales of missiles to Iran and the illegal project to supply arms to the Nicaragua contra rebels "could cause the toppling of the president ... you were worried about impeachment, correct?" Meese answered "Yes" or "Yes, sir" to each question.

"Did you discuss it with the president?" U.S. District Court Judge Gerhard Gesell asked.

"That was a concern. I don't know whether the actual word 'impeachment' was used with the president ... but I did discuss the tremendous consequences with the president," replied Meese. Before Wednesday, neither Meese nor any other member of the Reagan administration had publicly admitted that they were concerned the Iran-Contra scandal might cause the fall of the popular president.

Meese said that on Nov. 22, 1986, his aides had discovered the lone surviving copy of the memorandum that linked North to the scheme to overcharge Iran for missiles and use at least $12 million of those excess profits to buy arms for the Nicaraguan rebels.

North and his associates had altered or shredded thousands of pages of classified documents to disguise his role in the Contra resupply effort. So, having only one incriminating paragraph, Meese said at that point he did not know if the plan had actually been carried out.

Meese said that the following day, he confronted North with the memo and asked if he was the author. North, not knowing the incriminating paragraph was still in this copy, admitted he was. Meese then pointed out the paragraph that mentioned $12 million would be diverted to the Contras and asked if it had actually taken place. North replied affirmatively.

"In a way, your worst nightmare had come true, right?" asked Sullivan.

"Yes, it was," Meese replied. "You knew that spelled political trouble?"

"Yes, I did."

Sullivan repeatedly used the word "political" in his questions. Coming on top of allegations in 1985 that North had illegally aided the Contras, Meese agreed that he feared Reagan's political enemies could hurt the president by piling on the new information about the illegal arms sale.

"You were afraid that the merging of those two factors could cause the toppling of the president himself?" asked Sullivan.

"Yes," Meese replied.

Sullivan's questions were in line with his contentions that North was a "fall guy" for Reagan and other high-level officials who were well aware and had tacitly approved all his actions. North is charged with lying to Congress to cover up his activities.

North is also charged with obstructing a presidential inquiry by lying to Meese about his activities.

Processors Say No Alar In Products

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Makers of apple sauces and juices presented test results today showing the products to be virtually free of Alar, a chemical that environmentalists say heightens the risk of cancer in children.

The Processed Apple Institute, which represents most of the producers of apple sauces and juices, said today tests covering 4,623 samples and a cross-section of brand names revealed only eight cases in which detectable levels of Alar were found in the product.

Larry Davenport, executive director of the Atlanta-based trade association, said a detectable level meant a trace of at least 1 part per million in the sample, or 20 times below the tolerance level established by the Environmental Protection Agency.

"We're talking about truly insignificant levels here," Davenport said Tuesday in a telephone interview.

There has been widespread concern reported among parents in recent weeks over the health effects of chemicals used on apples.

A report by the Natural Resources Defense Council, a private environmental group, concluded last month that children are especially at risk from such chemicals because they eat a much larger volume of apples and other fruits and vegetables compared to their weight than do adults.

Alar, technically known as daminozide, was singled out by the NRDC study, although industry and government officials have said only from 5 percent to 10 percent of apples are sprayed with the chemical. Alar regulates growth and increases shelf life.

Daminozide has been found to cause cancer in test animals, and the EPA has said it intends to ban its use. But the regulatory process could take several years.

Court Halts Tax On Pensions

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — States may not tax the pensions of retired federal workers if they grant a tax exemption on pensions paid to state and local government retirees, the Supreme Court ruled 8-1 Tuesday.

In a decision that apparently will have some impact in 15 states, the court struck down a Michigan law because it was found to discriminate unconstitutionally against retired persons receiving federal government pensions.

Besides Michigan, 14 other states grant special tax exemptions for retirement income to state and local government employees that are not granted to federal employees.

In Maryland, for example, a tax exemption is granted on "length of service" payments that are financed by county or city government funds for workers who have been firefighters, rescue workers or ambulance personnel. No such exemption is available on the income of individuals who have retired from similar jobs with a federal agency.

Among the other states, a number make the exemption broader, as Michigan did, extending it to all pensions of former state and local government workers.

Under Michigan law, the tax favor goes only to state and local government retirees. Those who retire from private industry jobs are denied the exemption, just as federal government retirees are.

But the Supreme Court said that, for constitutional purposes, the only test of whether discrimination exists in such a situation is whether those who once held government jobs are treated differently just because of the level of government at which they worked.

If federal retirees are among the ones who do not get a favor provided for state and local government retirees, that amounts to an unconstitutional attempt by states to put a tax burden on the federal government, the court declared.

The ruling, written by Justice Anthony M. Kennedy, came in the case of Davis vs. Michigan (87-1020). Justice John Paul Stevens was the lone dissenter.

Property Owners Call For Easing Of Medical District Zoning

 senting PCMH and the medical school, indicated those two entities do not approve of any changes, saying that the availability of land for the future growth of the medical center is vital to Greenville, Pitt County and the East.
 "Individual decisions on particular requests for zoning changes, special use permits, or exceptions, may appear harmless unless one stops to look at the medical park concept and remembers our vision for the future," said the former ECU Medical School dean.
 "The hospital and the med school agree that land areas currently zoned MD-2 should continue to be so designated. We also recommend that MD-1 and MD-2 designated areas should permit the location of facilities for health-related education in addition to medical schools.

 "We wish to express to this council our growing concern about traffic congestion all around the medical school and urge the city, the county, and the state to move as rapidly as possible to implement the already planned solutions.
 "More curb cuts on the south side of U.S. 264 across from the hospital aggravate the existing congestion and create dangerous driving conditions — particularly true for geriatric people," he said.
 Laupus also told the council that the hospital and medical school would fully assist the city in its efforts to promote the objectives of the Medical Arts District Plan.
 "We appreciate the hard work inherent in accomplishing this task and we stand ready to help in any way possible. We will be prepared to give opinions on a regular basis so that there be no question as to where the hospital and the medical school stand," he said. "Finally, we urge the city and county to renew their efforts toward the joint planning required to develop the concept of the Medical Park to reality."

 But many of those speaking from among the group of 60 people attending the meeting said they feel the quantity of MD-2 property is too great and much of the property — particularly a large section of land on the south side of Stantonsburg Road, across from the hospital — needs to be rezoned to the less restrictive MD-3 (office and institutional) classification.
 "I think we seriously need to look at the allocation of MD-2 and MD-3," said Burney Warren, president of First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Pitt County.

 Warren said one of the main purposes of the Medical Arts Plan is to insure the growth of the Medical Arts district and to secure the economic opportunities that growth provides.
 "We don't want to take 290 acres and put it in a deep freeze," he said. "If we did that, we would not be doing what the original intent of the Medical Plan was. The intent was to capitalize on the great asset we have in the medical school — not to freeze it and not to ruin the economic advantage of that asset," he said.
 Meanwhile, Steve Horne, representing four medical district property owners, said that the current amount of MD-2 land will never be fully developed and subsequently much needed streets in the area will not be constructed.
 "The city of Greenville, as I understand, has little or no money to develop streets and to develop land," he said. "In my experience, it's always been requested that the developers provide streets, provide extensions of sewage and other things."
 "The traffic congestion that has been created by Highway (U.S.) 264 being dumped in there is significant and the way to lessen that is to develop some of the lands parallel to Stantonsburg Road and to develop some feeder roads and thoroughfares to help reduce some of that traffic," Horne said.

 "Unless you recognize that you need these people to develop these lands, then you might as well zone the land RA-20 (residential-agriculture) and say, 'We're not going to let you do anything with it for 10 or 20 or 30 years,'" he said.
 Phil Dixon, representing two property owners, said he also believes new roads are necessary for the area.
 "Think about the number of emergency vehicles that are trying to bring patients out there and look what a bottleneck they are facing. I think that we have got to try to do something about that," he said.
 "You have to make it feasible for developers to go in there and make improvements. There is simply a limit to the number of medical-related development," said Dixon, who was one of the original members of the Medical District Land-Use Study Committee.
 Following the meeting, some city officials said that the forum was helpful.
 "I think that with the input that we had here, the council should have some good direction as to where we should proceed from here," Mayor Carters said.
 "We didn't have to have this meeting tonight but I realize that the more opportunity that you have for public input and discussion, the better position you should be in to make the right decision," he said.

 "I have heard a lot of different things, some I already knew, but I think it will help me to better make the positive decisions which would be in the interest of both the medical park and the landowners," said Council member Mildred Council.
 "I think it's very clear from the meeting tonight that some people want some major changes out there and they want those changes to allow different kinds of development," said Council member Inez Fridly.
 "We can talk all we want to about building roads and taking the traffic away but every time you build a new industry out there, you are going to automatically bring more traffic into that area and I have some real problems with that."
 "I think that there is a middle ground here between the property owners and between the medical school and hospital and I think that it's going to take a very wise group of elected officials to decide what that middle ground is," said Mayor Pro-Tem Lorraine Shinn.
 "I don't know if I heard anything new last night," said Council member Nancy Jenkins today. "It was positive in that it offered a forum for those involved to ventilate their feelings. I firmly believe that the Medical District is our shining star in Pitt County and we have to make sure that the development out there is done right."

Pitt Jail Turns Away Prisoners

 In the past, she said Tyson has notified her by letter when the jail was full, and she has notified the judges in the district.
 Kramer Jackson, county manager, said Tyson works with local towns such as Farmville, Ayden and Bethel, to house inmates in crisis situations, but there are problems because any alternate facility must be certified by the state and inmates may not be kept there longer than 24 hours.
 The inmate limit at the main jail downtown is 84, and the limit at the satellite jail at the county office complex is 50, Jackson said, and those numbers are set by the state.

 "The county doesn't set that limit. That limit is set by the state of North Carolina," he said. "As long as we sleep them on the floor, we're violating the state policy."
 Jackson said he was inquiring to see whether the county had any official agreement with surrounding towns to house extra inmates, but the satellite jail, which opened in January, was supposed to be the solution to the problem.
 "We thought we had a short-term solution a few months ago when we opened the satellite jail.
 "Part of the problem is the judges are sentencing these people on the weekends and we're under capacity (by more than 20 inmates) on the weekdays," he said. "On weekends, when everyone wants to serve their time, it's hard to accommodate them."

 Bill Watson, county attorney, said the county commissioners have passed a resolution stating that no prisoners shall be housed in the county's main jail and satellite jail once the facilities reach their limit. On top of that, all other local jails are full, he said.
 "The jail is built to house so many people, and the satellite jail is built to house so many people. When they get beyond (the limit), there's no place to put them. I have no idea when it will be resolved. I don't know where there are any other jails," he said.
 The commissioners are also working to fund a new jail, he said.
 "The commissioners are in the process of studying the jail problem. They have employed architects to prepare certain suggested plans. They are going to see where they can get the money from. At this point, they are doing all they can to remedy the situation."

John Lawn and other federal authorities. Lawn said the sophisticated and complicated money-laundering operation laundered $1.2 billion in two years.
 Thornburgh called it "a very hostile takeover of a major money-laundering operation."
 Lawn said federal investigators in Atlanta were told by drug-world leaders that the money-laundering scheme they were operating under was processing the money too slowly and described a faster Los Angeles-based operation that could launder their money in 48 hours.

There is no more effective way to deal with the business of drug trafficking than to take the profit out of it. That's what has happened with Operation Polar Cap," Thornburgh said at a news conference.
 Federal authorities also obtained conspiracy indictments against two South American banks, Banco de Occidente of Panama and Banco de Occidente of Colombia, on charges they were involved in laundering more than $1 billion in drug proceeds generated in the United States.

Those Turned Away ...

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Over two weekends this month, 11 inmates with convictions ranging from assault to driving while impaired were turned away from the satellite jail by Sheriff Ralph Tyson because of overcrowding, according several Pitt county officials.
 Mike Drake, 26, of 114 E. Redman Ave., Greenville, was turned away from the facility the weekend of March 10. He was scheduled to serve 48 hours as part of a 14-day jail term he received in February. His last weekend term is set to begin Friday at 6 p.m.
 Drake was originally charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, inflicting serious injury, in connection with an August 1988 stabbing. But, in February he pleaded guilty in Superior Court to assault inflicting serious injury and received a 18-month suspended sentence and 14 days active.
 Pitt District Attorney Tom Haigwood said he learned last week that several prisoners were not housed for two weekends this month, and the county's chief jailer confirmed the report. Haigwood has notified judges, the Pitt County clerk of court, the county manager and Tyson about the problem.
 Four others were also turned away March 10, including Samuel Delvon Bradley, 34, of Route 4, Greenville, who was charged in October with driving while his license was permanently revoked; Randolph Terrance Griffin, 23, 1600 Myrtle Ave., who was charged in September with driving while impaired; Charles Ervin Daniels, 127 Avery St., Apartment 4, who was charged in November with assaulting a female and trespassing, and Larry Joe Horne, 34, of Route 2, Farmville, who was charged in October with driving while impaired.

 Bradley and Griffin were also turned away the following weekend, along with six others.
 Marion Odell Parker, 43, 9 Ford St., was scheduled to serve two days March 17 as part of his 20-day sentence he received in January. Parker, originally charged with three counts of DWI and two counts of felony hit and run, pleaded guilty in Superior Court to one count of driving while impaired and two counts of misdemeanor hit and run.
 He received a 60-day suspended sentence and 20 days active, to be served on weekends. His final installment is scheduled for the weekend of March 31.
 Clayton Earl Clemons, 38, Route 5, Greenville, was scheduled to serve 48 hours as part of a 28-day active sentence he received in Superior Court in February. With at least two prior DWI convictions, he was originally sentenced to six months in prison in District Court, but he appealed the case to Superior Court. His last weekend stay is set for May 26.
 John Franklin Haddock, 41, Route 2, Greenville, was sentenced to 40 days in jail after being convicted of DWI. He was also turned away the March 17 weekend.
 Linwood R. Baker, 37, Route 4, Greenville, was scheduled to serve two days over the March 17 weekend as part of a 30-day sentence imposed in January. Convicted of at least his third DWI, the court file states his last two-day stay is set for April 28.
 Thomas Earl Harris, 28, Route 1, Greenville, has also been convicted of at least three DWIs, according to the case file. He was turned away March 17 when he was scheduled to serve part of a 28-day sentence.
 James Floyd Coward, 27, Route 3, Greenville, was scheduled to serve 24 hours March 17 for a DWI conviction, and he was also turned away.

Feds Crack Down On Drug Money Ring

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Dick Thornburgh today announced the arrest of 127 people in an investigation he said smashed a billion-dollar international money-laundering ring with links to the Medellín drug cartel of Colombia.
 Thornburgh called it "the largest money-laundering crackdown ever carried out by the federal government."
 Authorities seized a half-ton of cocaine and $45 million in cash, jewelry and real estate, and have identified more assets for potential seizure, he said.

There is no more effective way to deal with the business of drug trafficking than to take the profit out of it. That's what has happened with Operation Polar Cap," Thornburgh said at a news conference.
 Federal authorities also obtained conspiracy indictments against two South American banks, Banco de Occidente of Panama and Banco de Occidente of Colombia, on charges they were involved in laundering more than $1 billion in drug proceeds generated in the United States.
 Appearing with Thornburgh was FBI Director William Sessions, Drug Enforcement Administrator

John Lawn and other federal authorities. Lawn said the sophisticated and complicated money-laundering operation laundered $1.2 billion in two years.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose today as the dollar held its ground against further intervention by major central banks.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which rose more than 30 points in the first two sessions this week, was up 4.70 at 2,280.24 as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Rising issues outnumbered declining ones about 7 to 4 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 561 higher, 322 lower and 535 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 24.51 million shares as of 10 a.m. EST.

The Commerce Department said its index of leading indicators fell 0.3 percent in February, following a revised 0.7 percent increase in January. The announcement had little apparent effect on the market, which has been paying more attention to the value of the dollar.

The central banks of the United States and West Germany were reportedly selling dollars today to put a lid on the currency's recent rise. The dollar's strength has come about from expectations that the Federal Reserve will raise interest rates to stem inflation. High rates are attractive to foreign investors.

The governor of Japan's central bank was quoted as saying that dollar buying has been "overdone" and that the Bank of Japan would intervene if necessary to stem the dollar's further rise against the yen. The powerful bank has been absent from coordinated intervention so far.

NWA, parent of Northwest Airlines, was off 7 1/2 to 69 1/2 after soaring 9 1/2 on Tuesday on news that an investor group had acquired 4.9 percent of its stock and was considering a possible leveraged buyout.

Among the early volume leaders on the NYSE, Pan Am was unchanged at 4 1/2, Texaco was unchanged at 5 1/2, General Motors was unchanged at 4 1/2, BankAmerica was unchanged at 2 1/2 and Anheuser Busch was up 1/2 at 36.

The New York Stock Exchange index was up 0.49 at 164.37. The American Stock Exchange's market value index was up 0.37 at 325.82.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 17.68 points to 2,275.54.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 7 to 5 on the NYSE, with 820 up, 577 down and 529 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 146.42 million shares, against 112.96 million in the previous session.

Economic Gauge Falls In February

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The government's chief economic forecasting gauge dropped 0.3 percent in February after posting sharp gains during the previous two months, the Commerce Department said today.

February's decline in the department's Index of Leading Economic Indicators was the first drop since a similar dip last September and the largest since a 0.8 percent drop last July.

It was in line with widespread expectations that the economy will slow this year.

The leading index, designed to foretell economic activity six to nine months into the future, had advanced 0.6 percent in December and 0.7 percent in January after vacillating during much of 1988.

With labor markets tight and factories operating close to peak capacity, analysts say some slowdown is needed to keep the economy from overheating and inflation from spiraling.

However, analysts are divided over whether the Federal Reserve Board can successfully engineer a controlled slowdown that restrains economic growth just enough to ease inflation without causing a recession.

The Fed for a year has been pushing up interest rates in order to relieve inflationary pressures, and it intensified those efforts after sharp price increases were recorded in January and February.

In another report today showing the impact of higher interest rates, the government reported that sales of new, single-family homes plunged 9.4 percent in February to the lowest level in more than a year.

The Commerce Department said sales retreated to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 626,000 in February, following a 2.5 percent increase in January and a 3.7 percent gain in December.

Irwin Kellner, chief economist for Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. in New York, said in advance of today's report that the jagged behavior of the leading index suggests "the economy has been slowing down from its overheated pace and that the economy is continuing to slow down as we work our way into the second quarter of 1989."

Kellner said that despite the Federal Reserve's efforts to prolong the life of the economic expansion even as it restrains growth, "the odds are growing each day" that the central bank will push the nation into a recession.

In February, eight of the 11 indicators that make up the leading index declined, with the biggest negative factor being a drop in manufacturer orders for new plants and equipment.

The other negative factors were a drop in building permits, a decline in manufacturers' orders for consumer goods, a contraction in the money supply, a dip in an index of consumer expectations, an increase in initial claims for unemployment benefits, faster vendor deliveries to companies signaling slower demand and a decline in manufacturers' unfilled orders.

Two indicators made positive contributions: an increase in prices for raw materials indicating stronger demand, and rising stock prices.

One indicator was unchanged last month: the length of the average work week.

The various changes left the index at 145.2 percent of its 1982 base of 100. Over the past 12 months, the index has risen 3.5 percent, after climbing 2.4 percent over the previous 12-month period.

Bob Staak

Staak Said Out At Wake

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — Paperwork is all that stands in the way of Bob Staak's resignation as head basketball coach at Wake Forest, school officials told the Winston-Salem Journal.

The school is awaiting signed documents from Staak's financial counselor and will confirm the move once the documents are returned, university officials told the newspaper.

"We will make a definitive statement about that later today," said Sandra Conner, vice president for public affairs at Wake Forest.

Staak, 41, met with Wake Forest players Tuesday night and told them he would resign, the newspaper reported. The team held a meeting afterward, at which time they agreed not to speak to the media. However, many players spoke freely about the situation to sources who confirmed Staak's impending departure.

"We had a team meeting, and the guys all decided it was best for everything to be handled between Coach Staak and the university," said senior guard Cal Boyd.

Staak could not be reached for comment.

He is expected to leave Winston-Salem today for Seattle, site of this weekend's Final Four and coaches' convention.

Wake Forest officials met with Staak to discuss the results of a standard, season-ending review and evaluation of the basketball program along with the results of an in-house investigation into alleged NCAA violations. Staak's resignation was discussed at that meeting, the newspaper reported.

Wake Forest officials contended Tuesday afternoon that Staak had not been fired, but sources said that the issue was moot in light of the negotiations over the buyout of his contract.

Last week, it was disclosed that the NCAA had asked Wake Forest to conduct an investigation of possible recruiting violations concerning Anthony Tucker, a transfer from Georgetown who was ineligible this past season, when Wake Forest finished 13-15.

According to sources, the alleged violations involved Tucker receiving illegal transportation to and from his home in Washington, D.C.

Wake Forest hired Staak on Aug. 3, 1985, to replace Carl Tacy, who resigned unexpectedly. Staak had been head coach at Xavier University in Cincinnati for six years.

Staak compiled a 45-69 record during his four seasons at Wake Forest.

New Zealand Wins Cup In Court

Judge Rules American Catamaran Violated The Rules Of The Race

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN DIEGO — Defeated New Zealand challenger Michael Fay has no qualms about winning the America's Cup in court after his sloop proved no match for the San Diego Yacht Club's catamaran defense.

"This is not a hollow victory when you see the issues that were at stake," Fay said Tuesday after a New York judge ruled that the defending boat was illegal under the century-old Deed of Gift which governs the event.

"The real winner is the Cup and its traditions, the Deed of Gift and what it means, and the clear spelling out of obligations for challengers and defenders," Fay said.

Kiwi joy contrasted shock and bitterness in San Diego over New York state Supreme Court Justice Carmen Ciparick's order that the yacht club forfeit sports' oldest trophy to Fay and the Mercury Bay Boating Club.

"There is a feeling that we've been had," yacht club attorney Mark Smith said.

A decision on whether to appeal the ruling will be made in "the next few days" after attorneys brief the boards of the San Diego Yacht Club and its event organizer, the America's Cup Organizing Committee, SDYC Commodore Pat Goddard said.

"The issue facing us now is to do what is best for the America's Cup," he said. "If the Cup goes to New Zealand, the commodore of San Diego Yacht Club will personally deliver it."

The trophy will remain in San Diego until the decision about an appeal is made, Goddard said.

Fay, a merchant banker who has financed New Zealand's sailing and legal battles the last three years, said Mercury Bay Boating Club would host the next Cup defense at Auckland, New Zealand, in April 1991 barring an appeal or other delays.

In the first disqualification in the event's 138-year history, Ciparick said the yacht club flouted America's Cup rules by its unprecedented entry of a twin-hulled vessel, which is inherently faster than a monohull because of its basic design.

Saying the yacht club "violated the spirit of the Deed of Gift," Ciparick said she was left with no alternative but to award the Cup to New Zealand to rectify the situation.

Ciparick's 14-page decision acknowledged that forfeiture of the Cup was a "drastic remedy" because of its economic significance and prestige. Studies indicated San Diego stood to gain up to $1.2 billion from its planned international regatta in 1991 or 1992.

"Nonetheless, the parties neither seek or suggest any alternative relief upon the disqualification of a competitor, nor is any alternative relief feasible under the circumstances," Ciparick concluded.

Goddard contended the judge's ruling was "a complete reversal of her previous decisions" in similar lawsuits brought by Fay before last year's Cup races.

"We based our catamaran defense on Judge Ciparick's decision of November 1987 that emphasized tradition was not as important as the letter-of-the-law of the Deed of Gift," the commodore said.

"Now she is saying just the opposite ... We don't know why she shifted her field at this late date."

Dennis Conner skippered the yacht club's high-tech catamaran to consecutive lopsided victories over Fay's 133-foot monohull New Zealand to sweep the best-of-three series off San Diego last September.

Conner, who learned of the ruling while on a business trip in Australia, said he will wait for the yacht club's decision about an appeal before deciding whether he will skipper a boat in the next America's Cup.

"I'm disappointed, naturally, because we worked hard to win it," he said.

Fay called the races a farce, however, contending San Diego defenders had made a mockery of sportsmanship and fair play. He returned to court with a lawsuit alleging that the SDYC failed to properly meet his challenge by using an illegal entry.

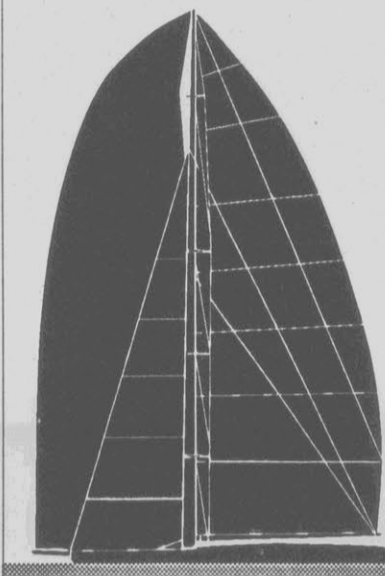

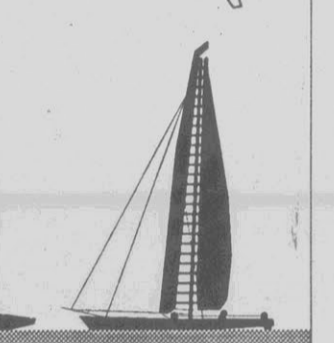

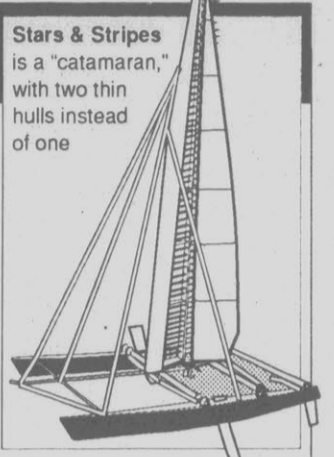

Ciparick agreed, calling the series a "gross mismatch," and saying San Diego had "paid lip service to the Cup as a competitive event" by defending with a catamaran.

"We were always strong in our belief in what the Cup meant and I think the Cup has come through."

Rose, Conley Gain Finals

Rampants Take 21-2 Win

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

HOLLYWOOD — Inclement weather has curtailed Rose's practice time so far this season, so the Rampants decided to use their game Tuesday against Kinston to hone up just about every part of their game.

The Rampants romped to a 21-2 victory over the Vikings in the second round of the Pitt County-D.H. Conley Easter Baseball Tournament.

Early on the game was actually tied at 2-2 after two and a half innings, but Rose scored eight runs in the third, six in the fourth and five more in the fifth to turn the contest into a laughter that saw just about everybody in a Rose uniform get a chance to play.

In essence, it was a late-afternoon practice session for the Rampants.

"I guess it was," Rose coach Ronald Vincent said.

Hitting, pitching, fielding, base-running. You name it. All the basics were covered.

Timmy Moore and David Leisten opened the game with a pair of solo homers in the first, but Kinston came right back with a run in each of the first two innings to tie the game at 2-2.

But Rose's first inning homers were a sign of things to come.

"For the team, it picks everybody up," Leisten said. "They want to get up there and do something too. You just have to sit back on the ball and wait for it. They sort of stayed with us in the beginning. Then we picked it up and got the bats going."

Maurice Hines added a two run shot in the fourth and Walter Gatlin put the final touch on with a grand slam over the left field fence to break the game open in the third.

In all, Rose collected five hits in the third. Moore doubled and singled while Leisten added an RBI single.

That inning put an end to the game and, in essence, began the practice session.

"It really was (a key)," Vincent said. "Early on, Maurice got us up 6-2. The grand slam sort of nailed it shut."

It was all over for Kinston from there on.

"We were just hoping for the best after that inning," Viking coach Ron Battle said. "We felt good with the score 2-2 and playing them as close as we were. We got hurt mentally after they scored those six runs in the fourth."

As if the third wasn't enough, Rose came back with six runs off two hits in the fourth. Leisten had another homer in the frame and the Rampants also took advantage of two wild pitches and two errors by the shortstop to key the spurt.

Just for good measure, Rose added five more runs in the fifth to turn the scoreboard back over to zero. Off the bench, Jeff Likosar and Abram Lang had doubles while Matthew Cagle and Derrick Clark added singles to key the inning.

Leisten went 3-4 with two homers and three RBI to lead Rose. Moore (2-3, one homer and three RBI) and Gatlin (2-3, one homer, five RBI) added to the hit parade. Hines also had two hits along with two RBI.

"The home run is like a dunk in basketball," Vincent said. "Even though it's only one run, it seems to count more."

Vikings Top Bertie, 4-1

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley may not be an offensive showcase this season, but the Vikings do possess effective pitching and good defense and those attributes were enough to pull the Vikings through against Bertie Tuesday night.

Hal Conger tossed a four-hitter and the Vikings put together enough key hits to come from behind to take a 4-1 win over the Falcons in the second round of the Pitt County-D.H. Conley Easter Baseball Tournament.

The win moved Conley to 3-1 on the year and advanced them to the championship tonight at 8 p.m. where the Vikings will take on Rose, a 21-2 winner over Kinston Tuesday.

"We just don't hit the ball," Viking coach Allan Wilson said. "We have to keep people to two and three runs to have a chance. If we can just put it into play and hope. That's what we did tonight. Pitching carried us again."

The Vikings found themselves down 1-0 after the first inning. Conley then put two men on in the bottom of the inning but came away with nothing when Kevin Vines flew out to the third baseman and Travis Clemmons grounded out to the pitcher to end the inning.

With William Crandall at third, Wilson contemplated a squeeze bunt but decided against it.

"I thought about it," he said. "But I decided I'd wait. I felt we'd get some hits. Vines is my number four hitter. He usually makes contact."

Conger, though, kept the Vikings in the game as Bertie went scoreless the rest of the way.

His teammates helped out with a three-run fourth inning that gave Conger enough of a lead to work with.

"I knew one run wasn't going to win it," Bertie coach Jack Curlings said. "I never feel comfortable with one run. We missed out on a couple of opportunities if the ball had just dropped in play."

Bertie had a chance increase its advantage in the fourth, but Conger got out of the frame by getting James Cephas to pop out to right field and strand three men on.

Bertie then saw its 1-0 lead disappear after the fourth when Clemmons opened the inning with a single and was sacrificed to second by Scott Seymour. Andy Fassett followed with a walk. Brian Smith singled

No Frosh Jitters For Laettner

By Tom Foreman Jr.
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM — Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski remembers his first game as a collegian, and he's quick to point out that night at Army is a far cry from the first year of his prized freshman, Christian Laettner.

"We played Princeton and I scored four points, which is a high game for me. We lost, but I felt good that it was my first game and I did well," Krzyzewski said Tuesday. "This kid's playing against Georgetown in such a big game and he's having a lot of fun."

That Georgetown game further established the 6-foot-10 Laettner as one of the keys to Duke's bid for a national championship in Seattle.

Krzyzewski touted Laettner last November as a player who could have an immediate influence on the Blue Devils. That impact became apparent when he scored a game-high 24 points in leading Duke to an 85-77 victory over the Hoyas in the NCAA East Regional finals.

So much for the freshman jitters, Krzyzewski said.

"He's not just one of the better freshmen. He's one of the better players," Krzyzewski said. "Christian's a very good player and he's going to get a lot better."

Krzyzewski said Laettner's enthusiasm for the game was quite apparent when he brought the Angola, N.Y., native to the Durham campus as well as when he visited Laettner at his home.

"One of the things we had to bring up for one of our visits with him was a copy of the press conference that our kids did in '86 in Dallas," Krzyzewski said of that Sunday gathering in which the Blue Devils delivered a memorable package of one-liners.

"For him to like it that much, not just basketball, but all the stuff. It's refreshing, it's really nice, and it's not phony."

"He's looked at playing in the ACC with so much anticipation," Krzyzewski said. "I remember when we recruited him, how awestruck he was by the whole situation. He's dreamed of it for so long. And he's an even better player than he thought he'd be. He's excited about that."

Excitement doesn't come too hard to Laettner. His play in the NCAA tournament, and throughout the season, has been spiced by fists thrust into the air in confidence, fiery looks of celebration after a great play and red-faced rage when he commits a mistake.

His teammates often have to calm him down to prevent the possibility of a technical foul, but they also feed on his natural high.

"Some of the teammates walk up to me after the game and say 'That gave me such a personal lift' when they saw me having a really good time out there," Laettner said.

"I just have a lot of fun. I think the happiest I've been this season, and the craziest I've gone on the court is when Rob (Brickey) gets a really nice dunk," Laettner said. "In the Minnesota game, he just had an excellent dunk and I went crazy. I'll go crazy if we get a really big rebound or something like that."

Criticism doesn't affect Laettner often, but in the East Regional, he let guard Quinn Snyder know that he wasn't in the mood to take heat.

"In the Minnesota game, Quinn got really angry with me and told me to quit acting like a freshman. We were 50 feet away on the court and I told him to leave me alone," he said.

His teammates might have taken the advice to heart as they were battling the Hoyas. Laettner didn't back down from Georgetown's Alonzo Mourning, instead charging to the basket with every opportunity.

Laettner is hitting 72 percent of his field goals, and while he is averaging eight points per game, he has been in double figures in his last five games.

The moment which most impressed was when, after grabbing an offensive rebound, he had his first shot blocked by Mourning, then went back to the basket and scored. That elicited his trademark — the wild flailing arms and the defiant facial expression.

"I think the biggest thing that hurt him (Mourning) momentarily was when Phil (Henderson) dunked on him," Laettner said of his teammate's monster slam in the second half.

"All I did was score a few buckets when he was around me. I didn't do anything big," Laettner said. "Phil's move on him was totally one-on-one, and Phil just beat him and I think that hurt him a lot."

Pirates Get In Some Contact Work

East Carolina head football coach Bill Lewis put his team through a three-hour workout that included contact drills and fundamentals Tuesday.

It was the team's fourth-spring practice of the season for the Bucs, who will hold another workout this afternoon.

"I feel that today was a positive practice," Lewis said. "I am pleased with all of the teaching and learning that is going on during practice. It was perfect weather today unlike last week."

Spring drills conclude with the annual Purple-Gold spring football game, which is part of the Great Pirate Purple-Gold Pigskin Pigout Party April 22 at 3:30 p.m.

ECU Sweeps Past UNCW Netters, 9-0

East Carolina's David Shell's straight set win in the sixth position highlighted a 9-0 victory by the Pirates over UNC-Wilmington Tuesday in collegiate tennis action.

The Pirates lost just one set during the match, in the number-one doubles. The win moved ECU to 3-5 on the year.

Jon Melhorn (E) d. Troy Furbay 6-3, 6-1. Andre Moreau (E) d. Eric Lutz 6-1, 6-3. Jon McLamb (E) d. Scott Pukys 6-1, 6-2. Bobby McPherson (E) d. David Tedder 6-2, 6-1. John Hudson (E) d. ## ECU Splits A Doubleheader With UNCW

WILMINGTON — East Carolina and UNC-Wilmington split a doubleheader Tuesday in collegiate softball action.

ECU, 11-7, won the first game, 6-2, but fell 5-2 in the second game.

In the first game, ECU broke a 2-2 tie with four runs in the seventh, keyed by a two-run double by Wendy Tonker.

Jennifer Sagl got the win for ECU while Tracey Kee led the hitting with two on the day.

In the second game, the Lady Seahawks took control early by pushing across four runs in the first to gain the early lead en route to the win.

Mickey Ford went 2-4 for ECU and keyed a two-run sixth inning that pulled ECU within 4-2, but that was as close as the Lady Pirates would get.

Rose Golfers Defeat Lee County

SANFORD — Rose High School's golfers, who finished fourth in the state 4-A championships last year, visited Lee County, last year's runner-up, and came away with a 10-shot victory in a match at the Sanford Country Club.

Rose played the round with a team total of 303 while Lee County closed with a 313 total.

Brooks Honeycutt led Rose with a 73, while Rob Thomas carded a 75. Derick Daniel added a 76 and Mark Honeycutt had a 79. Lee County was led by David Van Canon with a 73 while Henry Buckner had a 78. Kevin Goodwin added a 79 and Kevin Stubbs had an 83.

Rose is now 2-0 on the year and travels to New Bern next Wednesday.

Greene Central Netters Top Northwood

PITTSBORO — Greene Central High School's tennis team swept the doubles events to take a 5-4 win over hosting Northwood of Pittsboro Tuesday.

Northwood had won four of the six singles matches to have a leg up on the match, but they could not win again in the doubles.

Greene Central is now 3-1 on the year while Northwood falls to 1-2. Greene Central travels to Wilson Beddingfield today.

Summary:

Singles: Marcus Stroud (N) d. Johnny Rouse, 7-6, 6-2; Michael Gregoritsch (N) d. Tobb Murphy, 6-4, 6-0; Eddie Baldrée (GC) d. Mike Robb, 6-2, 6-2; John Pettrie (N) d. Howie Lee, 6-4, 5-7, 6-1; Steve Brooks (N) d. Scott Vinson, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3; Richard Sugg (GC) d. Derek Eiford, 6-3, 6-2.

Doubles: Rouse-Murphy (GC) d. Stroud-Robb, 8-2; Baldrée-David Murray (GC) d. Gregoritsch-Brian Burkes, 9-7; Sugg-Vinson (GC) d. Eiford-Brooks, 8-6.

Hornets Slumping As Tripucka Sits

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Charlotte Hornets have lost three straight, and that makes it tougher for leading scorer Kelly Tripucka to sit on the bench and watch, nursing his ailing back.

"I like to think I could push us over the top in some of those close games," he said. "It's tough, watching us play well and not come away with anything."

Back miseries have kept the 6-foot-6 forward, who is averaging 22.7 points per game, out of seven of Charlotte's last eight contests.

"It's still day to day," said Hornets trainer Terry Kofler when asked about Tripucka's strained back. "There's muscle thickening from the spasms, of course, but all the tests have been negative."

"And I know he's getting anxious to play."

"We're missing a lot of points when he's not in there. And he's such a great competitor," said Hornets coach Dick Harter.

When asked about his availability for Thursday's game with Golden State, Tripucka said, "I don't even think about it anymore. I'll just have to see then."

State Slated For Preseason NIT

NEW YORK (AP) — Nevada-Las Vegas, North Carolina State and four other teams that played in this year's NCAA tournament will participate in the 1989-90 preseason NIT.

The preseason tournament, formally known as the Big Apple NIT, will run from Nov. 15-24, with the semifinals and final at Madison Square Garden.

DePaul, Loyola-Marymount, Texas-El Paso and Louisiana State are the other 1988 NCAA tourney teams entered in the tournament.

The tournament also will feature six teams from this year's National Invitation Tournament — Richmond, Ohio State, California, Wichita State, St. John's and Alabama-Birmingham.

Rounding out the 16-team field will be Houston, North Carolina A&T, Southern Mississippi and Kansas.

In opening-round games, it will be Richmond at N.C. State, Ohio State at DePaul, Loyola-Marymount at Nevada-Las Vegas, Texas-El Paso at California, Houston at Wichita State, North Carolina A&T at St. John's, Southern Mississippi at LSU and Alabama-Birmingham at Kansas.

ESPN will telecast 11 games, including five first-rounders, three quarter-finals, the semifinals and the championship game.

Vandeweghe, Knicks Top Portland

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kiki Vandeweghe was hurting during much of the last two years with Portland. After running into Vandeweghe for the first time since trading him away last month, the Trail Blazers were the ones hurting.

Mark Jackson had 27 points, 10 rebounds and 12 assists. Vandeweghe scored 24 points and the New York Knicks rallied in the fourth quarter and defeated Portland 128-124 Tuesday night.

"Once the game started it was just a basketball game," said Vandeweghe, who suffered from back problems with the Trail Blazers. "This was a team victory. Everyone came together, and that's the way it should be."

Vandeweghe, acquired from Portland on Feb. 23 for a first-round draft pick, had his most productive game for the Knicks. He averaged 9.1 points in his first 14 games for New York, with a high of 23.

76ers 117, Celtics 115
Charles Barkley had 27 points and rookie Hersey Hawkins scored eight of his 21 in overtime. Boston's Reggie Lewis scored a career-high 39 points and Brian Shaw had 18 points and 14 rebounds but the Celtics fell 2 1/2 games behind second-place Philadelphia in the NBA's Atlantic Division.

A slam-dunk by Barkley tied the score 102-102 with 27 seconds left in regulation and a 3-point shot by Hawkins gave the 76ers a 114-110 edge with 1:24 to go in overtime. Boston's Dennis Johnson had 24 points.

bounds and 11 assists. He made a pair of short jumpers during a 12-3 fourth-quarter spurt that gave the Bulls a 103-88 lead.

Rockets 120, SuperSonics 117
Akeem Olatuwon scored 17 of his 36 points in the pivotal fourth quarter. Olatuwon was one of six Rockets in double figures, including Mike Woodson with 22, Walter Berry 18, Otis Thorpe and Buck Johnson 11 each and Sleepy Floyd 10. Dale Ellis led Seattle with 36, Derrick McKey had 21 and Xavier McDaniel 19.

With Houston leading 96-95 going into the fourth quarter, Olatuwon scored eight of Houston's first 10 points to give the Rockets a 106-103 lead with 7:16 left. A pair of baskets by McDaniel cut Houston's lead to 111-109 before Olatuwon scored the Rockets' next nine points to make it 120-117 with 32 seconds left.

Suns 127, Lakers 104
Tom Chambers scored 28 points, Kevin Johnson 24 and Eddie Johnson had eight of his 21 in a decisive second period as Phoenix clinched its first playoff berth in four years. Phoenix entered the game with a magic number of two to make the playoffs and was put in position when Dallas lost to Cleveland.

Cavaliers 102, Mavericks 90
Ron Harper scored 15 of his 26 points during a rally late in the third quarter and Cleveland reached the 50-victory mark for the first time in its 19 NBA seasons.

Mark Price added 21 points as Cleveland won for the 32nd time in 35 home games — including 26 of the last 27 — and handed Dallas its 11th consecutive setback, fourth longest in its history. The Cavaliers' 50-20 record is the NBA's second best behind Central Division-leading Detroit's 50-17.

Bulls 115, Warriors 106
Michael Jordan had his sixth triple-double of the season and scored 14 of his 33 points in the final quarter as Chicago won its fifth consecutive game. Jordan had 12 re-

Willie Anderson scored 29 points and Alvin Robertson 28 as San Antonio snapped a four-game losing streak. The Bulls were led by Bernard King with 31 points and John Williams with 20.

Leading by 12 at halftime, the Spurs used a 9-2 run to open up a 78-59 advantage with 9:33 left in the third period. The lead grew to 23 later in the quarter and 24 with 4:29 left to play. The defeat left the Bulls three games behind Boston in the race for the Eastern Conference's final playoff berth.

Nets 111, Hawks 108
Roy Hinson scored six of his 25 points in the last two minutes as New Jersey snapped a 10-game losing streak overall and a 16-game losing streak against Atlanta.

Hinson made a pair of free throws with 7:57 left to break an 88-88 tie and give the Nets the lead for good. Buck Williams, who scored 19 points, followed with a dunk. New Jersey's Mike McGee, making a rare start in place of the injured Dennis Hopson, scored 23 points, including four 3-pointers. Dominique Wilkins led the Hawks with 23.

Call it luck of the draw, but D.H. Conley and Rose will once again meet in the finals of the Pitt County D.H. Conley Easter Baseball Tournament tonight.

Rose, the 17th-ranked team in the country by USA TODAY, rolled over Kinston, 21-2, to move to the finals while Conley advanced with a 4-1 win over Bertie.

The two schools are located roughly seven miles apart from each other, yet they don't regularly play each other during the season. If they meet, it's usually during the Easter Tournament.

This is the third-straight year the teams will meet in the finals, with Rose, a 4-A team, winning the previous two over the 3-A Vikings. Conley, though, did defeat Rose in the semifinals of the tournament in 1986.

If the past is any indication, tonight's game should be a good one. The two teams have set it up so that they can use their top pitchers tonight, with Brian Bullock (1-0) going for the Vikings and Jamie Brewington (1-0) going for Rose.

The Rampants are the stronger-hitting team, as evidenced by their 14-hit performance against Kinston Tuesday that featured five home runs.

The pseudo series between these two has featured some great talent and exciting games the last two years.

In 1987, Rose won in extra innings, 6-4, when Jason Galloway and Curtis Perkins hit consecutive RBI singles to break a 4-4 tie in the eighth.

That game featured a duel of two junior pitching aces in Rose's Tom Moya and Conley's Bronswell Patrick.

The two were matched up again last year with Moya tossing a two-hitter to help the Rampants take a 5-1 win.

Moya is now a freshman on the ECU baseball team while Patrick is playing for the Oakland Athletics A farm club.

This time around, Conley needs a strong performance from Bullock and near-perfect defense from his teammates.

The Rampants, 6-0, are on a roll despite graduating a number of key players off last year's team that advanced to the state 4-A finals. Tim Moore and David Leisten have returned and provided key hitting along with newcomers Maurice Hines and Walter Gatlin.

Conley, 3-1, hasn't had a whole lot of time out on the field of late due to inclement weather, but in Bullock, Travis Clemmons and Kevin Vines, the Vikings have enough weapons to do some damage. Another hitter to keep an eye on for the Vikings is freshman designated hitter Brian Smith.

Seating is limited, so if you want a piece of this action you better get out to Conley early. It's a one-shot deal. The two won't play again until Easter 1990, if then.

home Clemmons to tie the game at 1-1.

Crandall followed with a bloop single into shallow right where the first baseman, the second baseman and the right fielder all converged on the ball, only to watch it fall to the ground for a base hit. Bill Jenkins added another single, but Crandall was thrown out at the plate to end the inning with Conley leading 3-1.

"Well, the fourth was a key," said Conley centerfielder Brian Bullock, who had two hits to lead his team. "We made them field the ball. We put the ball in play. We've been struggling with the bats because we've had no live hitting (due to rained-out practices)."

Conley added an insurance run in the fifth when Bullock singled, stole second and eventually scored on a single by Seymour.

"The more runs you score down the stretch the easier it is for your pitcher," Bullock said. "We wanted to help Hal out."

And Conger was up to the chore. He had 10 strikeouts in his first extensive action of the season while walking only three batters. He also retired the number eight, nine and one hitters in the seventh inning to end the game.

Greene Central Romps By N. Nash

ROCKY MOUNT — Greene Central High School romped to a 13-4 victory over Northern Nash in the Rocky Mount Breakfast Optimists Baseball Tournament Tuesday.

The game was for third place in the event. The Rams jumped off to a lead in the first inning and never were headed. Two runs scored in the first. With one out, Cedric Collins walked and stole second. He scored on Walt McKeel's single. Rob Davis then walked and Swindell Flowers singled to score McKeel.

Greene Central put the game out of reach with three more in the second, taking a 5-0 lead. Jason Head singled as did Keith Pridgen. Cornelius Hill singled in Head and Collins walked to load the bases. Davis and Flowers also drew walks, forcing in Pridgen and Hill.

The Rams picked up two more in the third, one in the fourth and five in the sixth along the way. Northern got one run in the fourth and three in the sixth.

Flowers led the Ram hitting with three, while Brad Kearney, Head, Hill and McKeel each added two.

Jon Carter, Wayne Matthews and Greg Bobbitt each had two for Northern.

The victory boosted the Rams to 3-3 on the season. The Rams travel to Greenville Rose on Friday at 2 p.m.

HOLLYWOOD — Brian Haddock limited Farmville to four hits and struck out six to lead Ayden-Grifton to a 4-1 win in consolation play from the Pitt County-D.H. Conley Easter Baseball Tournament Tuesday.

The Chargers scored all of the four runs they would need in the second inning. Keith Wade, who had two hits on the day, keyed the spurt as he recorded a two-run single that scored Scott Chauncey and Gene Stancill.

Farmville pushed across a run in the sixth to pull within 4-1, but that was as close as the Jaguars could get.

Ayden-Grifton plays Havelock, a 7-2 winner over New Bern Tuesday, at 2 p.m. today while Farmville takes on New Bern at 11 a.m.

PINETOPS — Hosting SouthWest Edgecombe outlasted North Pitt, 11-9, to capture its own holiday baseball tournament Tuesday night.

The Cougars grabbed the lead in the second inning, scoring twice, and adding one in the third for a 3-0 lead.

But North Pitt rallied to score five times in the top of the fourth and take a 5-3 lead. Randy House walked as did Johnny Sherrod and Roosevelt Hines, loading the bases. House scored on Dave Sawyer's sacrifice fly and Shaun Howard hit a triple, driving in both of the other two runners.

Craig Willoughby missed a sacrifice bunt but an error on the suicide play let Howard score anyway. Willoughby then slapped the ball out of the park for a homer.

The Cougars closed to 5-4 with a run in the fourth, then tied it up with another in the fifth. North Pitt went back out, 9-5, with four in the top of the sixth, three of them on a Reggie Daniels home run.

But SouthWest took advantage of five hits, one of them a two-run double by William Rhodes, along with three Panther errors and a walk to score six times in the bottom of the frame to take the win.

Sherrod led the North Pitt hitting with two. Phil Arrington led SouthWest with four while Ronald Bess had two.

North Pitt is now 2-1 on the year and is idle until April 7 when the Panthers host Greene Central in the first Eastern Plains Conference game of the year.

JAMESVILLE — Washington High School topped Jamesville, 11-1, in the Jamesville Easter Baseball Tournament Tuesday.

Two Washington pitchers held Jamesville to only one hit in the game, called after five innings. Clayton Holliday got the hit in the fifth inning.

Washington got all it needed in the second, scoring three times. Tripp Leggett was hit by a pitch and Eric Siler singled. Brian Greenwood's hit brought in Leggett. Patrick Paul walked and Jeremiah Jackson singled to drive in both Siler and Greenwood.

Washington added seven in the third and one in the fourth. Jamesville's only run came in the fourth.

Jackson, Siler, Greenwood and Mike Moore each had two hits to lead Washington. Jackson and Moore had doubles, while Moore also had a triple.

JAMESVILLE — Plymouth High School held off a Roanoke rally to take a 6-4 win in the winners' bracket of the Jamesville Easter Tournament Wednesday.

Plymouth took the lead for good in the first, scoring three times. Andy Womble reached on an error and Russ Edmondson brought him in with a double. Chris Kelly doubled in Edmondson. Kelly moved up on an error and scored on a balk.

Roanoke scored once in the second, but Plymouth came back with two in the fifth and one in the sixth. Roanoke rallied for three in the seventh, but fell short.

Bob Harris had two hits, the only hits Roanoke got. Edmondson had two doubles to lead Plymouth.

JAMESVILLE — Bath scored four times in the fourth inning and made that stand up for a 4-2 win over Williamston in the Jamesville Easter Baseball Tournament Tuesday.

Williamston had taken a 1-0 lead in the top of the year. Bath put Brian Tuten and Clay Cartwright on via errors. Eric Slade's grounder forced Tuten at third, however. Lars Joyner was hit by a pitch, loading the bases. Roger Braddy then reached on another error, scoring Cartwright and Slade. Michael Boyd doubled to drive in Joyner and Braddy.

Williamston came back with one in the seventh. Mark Raynor and Toby Gardner each had two hits to lead Williamston. No one had more than one for Bath, which will play Plymouth tonight at 7:30 p.m. for the title.

N.C. Central Day Declared By Martin

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Central Eagles, fresh from their NCAA Division II basketball championship, met with Gov. Jim Martin at the Governor's Mansion on Tuesday, which the governor proclaimed N.C. Central Day.

"We're just as proud of you as we can be, here in a week when we're hoping that North Carolina is going to be able to carry through a lot of different championships in basketball," Martin told the team before a crowd of about 50 N.C. Central administrators, state legislators and others gathered at the mansion.

The players displayed their championship trophy, posed for photographers and presented an autographed basketball to Martin.

"It's a great feeling to be honored and recognized for your accomplishments," said Fred Bennett, a junior from Durham.

Jeff Hayes, a junior guard from Warrenton and one of the team's tri-captains, presented the governor with a basketball signed by each member of the championship team.

"Hopefully, at this time next year, we can be standing here in the same place at approximately the same time, saying approximately the same thing," Coach Michael Bernard said.

Martin told the team that it represented the state well and that he is proud of the accomplishments the players have made on and off of the basketball court.

The Eagles won the NCAA Division II by defeating Southwest Missouri State 73-46 Saturday in Springfield, Mass. The 27-point margin of victory was the largest in NCAA Division II championship history.

Durham state legislators were also on hand for the celebration and congratulated players. Both the House and Senate adjourned Monday night in honor of the Eagles.

New Zealand...

Fay said from New Zealand. "The America's Cup is the winner. The deed works."

The mood was different in San Diego, however, where elected officials suggested politics played a part in Ciparick's ruling.

"Michael Fay has always used the judges because he couldn't win on the water," said county Supervisor Brian Bilbray, head of San Diego America's Cup Task Force.

"Sailors in the water, not attorneys in court, should decide where the Cup goes."

San Diego Mayor Maureen O'Connor said the judge "should have clarified the rules before the race was ever held."

"I hate to say this decision was politically motivated, but we all know the New York Yacht Club wanted the Cup to go New Zealand so they could compete for it on foreign soil in 1991," O'Connor said.

"There's no question Michael Fay has the best attorney and the New York Yacht Club the best judge... I hope the San Diego Yacht Club will vigorously appeal the ruling."

NYCC held the Cup for 132 years before Conner, as skipper of Liberty, lost in 1983 to Australian Alan Bond. The New York club also had filed court documents supporting some of Fay's arguments.

Fay's maverick challenge, issued in July 1987, called for a one-on-one race in 133-foot monohulls in a radical departure from the 12-meter yachts used in Cup races for three decades.

San Diego officials rejected Fay's initial challenge and were proceeding with plans for a 1991 defense featuring 12-meter boats when Ciparick ruled in November 1987 that Fay's challenge was valid under a strict interpretation of the Deed of Gift.

Ciparick ordered the yacht club and its defense manager, Sail America, to either meet Fay's challenge, reach a mutual agreement on race conditions or forfeit the Cup.

The yacht club, saying its response to Fay's challenge was based on the same narrow interpretation of the deed, built the catamaran, which was equipped with an airplane-like wing sail.

San Diego defense officials maintained they had the freedom to design a vessel of their choice and that the deed, while restricting hull length, did not specify a maximum number of hulls.

The SDYC became trustee of the Cup in February 1987 after Conner sailed the club's 12-meter, Stars & Stripes, to victory over Australian defender Kookaburra III off Fremantle, Australia.

Air Force Grounds B-1 Bomber

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The Air Force, in another setback for the troubled B-1 bomber, has grounded all 97 of the $300 million aircraft because of a malfunctioning wing spotted on one plane, the Department of Defense disclosed Tuesday.

Pentagon spokesman Dan Howard said the bombers were put on "precautionary stand-down" Monday afternoon until the Air Force can find and correct a problem that caused one of the wings of a bomber to sweep too far forward. The problem, detected during a routine ground check, caused the wing to puncture a fuel line.

The action brought an abrupt halt to the roughly 20 B-1 bomber training flights conducted daily at bases in South Dakota, Kansas and Texas. The Air Force said the moratorium would continue until the service, working with engineers from the plane's manufacturer, Rockwell International Corp., pinpoints the cause of the problem and makes any needed repairs.

But the Pentagon also said that the force of bombers remains ready to take off on short notice and would be capable of flying its wartime mission if ordered to do so.

The B-1 intercontinental bomber, centerpiece of the Reagan administration's $260 billion effort to modernize the nation's strategic nuclear arsenal, is the Air Force's principal manned penetrating bomber.

It is the third time since the planes were introduced to the force in September 1986 that technical problems have grounded them. Three jets have crashed. Some industry sources say it would cost as much as $11 billion to fix flaws that limit the bombers' ability to perform as intended.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., a frequent critic of the B-1 program, called the latest development "very disturbing." Two and half years after the bomber's introduction into the arsenal, he added, "this kind of problem should not be recurring."

The latest trouble was discovered during a preflight check of the plane at Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene, Texas, where 25 of them are based. The latest problem appeared to involve the plane's "variable geometry" wing, which can swing forward or sweep back to increase the aircraft's ability to maneuver.

"The first or second time the wings were swept, it was noted that they were out of sync," Howard said. "The third time that they swept the wings forward, a clunking noise was heard. They shut down the aircraft and observed the fuel leak."

The Air Force suspects that the device that swings the wing into the forward position punctured the fuselage of the plane in a spot where fuel is stored.

Lt. Col. George H. Peck, a spokesman for the Air Force's Strategic Air Command in Omaha, Neb., said it is not yet known whether the problem may exist in other planes.

Execution Delayed

SEATTLE (AP) — A man convicted in three slayings won a reprieve from death from a federal appeals court 33 hours before he was scheduled to become the first person executed by hanging in the nation since 1965.

Richard Bauer, a prison administrative assistant, said Charles Rodman Campbell responded to a letter informing him of the ruling by laughing and saying, "It's about time."

A three-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Tuesday agreed to stay the execution after Campbell's attorneys filed a notice of appeal and briefs with the court earlier in the day.

"We're surprised and disappointed," said assistant state attorney general James Hansen, who said the court ruled without hearing the state's arguments.

"We were just getting ready to fax the documents when we got the ruling."

Even if the appeal fails, Hansen said the earliest date for execution could be a year from now.

Campbell had exhausted his bid for a stay in state courts. A federal appeal was rejected Monday by U.S. District Judge John Coughenour in Seattle, who said he found no merit in Campbell's claim that his trial lawyers ineffectively represented him.

"I am very, very pleased," said defense attorney Al Lyon. "That goes without saying. It has been a lot of late, late nights."

Campbell had been scheduled to hang just after midnight Thursday morning at Washington State Penitentiary in Walla Walla.

He would have been the first person executed by hanging in the United States since Kansas put four men to death in 1965, including Richard Eugene Hickock and Perry Edward Smith, whose story was told in Truman Capote's book "In Cold Blood."

Hanging is Washington's official form of execution, although a prisoner may opt for lethal injection. Campbell so far has decided not to choose injection.

Campbell, 34, was convicted of three counts of aggravated first-degree murder for the 1982 throat slayings of Renae Wicklund, 31; her 8-year-old daughter, Shannah, and a neighbor, Barbara Hendrickson, 51.

At the time of the killings, Campbell was on work-release from a prison sentence for a sexual assault on Ms. Wicklund in 1976. She and Mrs. Hendrickson had testified at his trial in 1978.

Volcker's Panel Calls For Pay Hike

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A private commission headed by former Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker today recommended pay increases of approximately 50 percent over two years for top federal officials, members of Congress and judges.

The pay increases suggested by the National Commission on the Public Service roughly parallel those called for by a congressionally created panel and endorsed by President Bush as well as his predecessor, Ronald Reagan.

Those increases were rejected by Congress in the face of intense public criticism centering on the proposed pay raise for the lawmakers.

The private commission also recommended that Congress prohibit its members from receiving speaking honoraria and other outside income related to their public responsibilities, saying that otherwise the increase would be more likely to be "perceived by the American people as excessive."

"Not only does such income create lingering doubts about the need for an across-the-board increase, but it also undermines public trust in national institutions," the panel said.

The commission, which includes former President Gerald R. Ford and former Vice President Walter F. Mondale among its 36 members, also suggested pay increases for lower-ranking government workers.

It recommended that these raises be phased in and the cost of them absorbed through reductions in employment or the elimination of government programs. The commission recommended that pay for civil service workers be varied depending on the cost of living in different parts of the country.

George King, director of public relations for the National Treasury Employees Union, said the commission's report "really doesn't address the lower-grade or rank-and-file federal employees."

"It holds out the false hope that pay increases for these people can be absorbed in current agency budgets or through reductions in force," King said.

He said that his organization, which claims to represent 144,000 federal workers, seeks annual pay raises of 6 percent, or 3 percent above inflation, whichever is larger, and advocates agency-by-agency bargaining.

The commission was formed after a conference held in Washington in 1987 by the liberal Brookings Institution and the conservative American Enterprise Institute.

It reported that the purchasing power of executive, judicial and legislative salaries has fallen by 35 percent since 1969 and recommended that they be restored to the 1969 purchasing power level. This would require an increase of about 50 percent.

time President Bush was announcing a new policy toward Nicaragua at the White House.

"The whole idea behind that is that political activity should be transferred inside Nicaragua, which is where the testing arena is now," said Cesar.

"This is a logical result of the new policy of the Bush administration," he said. "You cannot support the peace process, really, unless you support the internal political opposition. And you cannot support the internal opposition at the same time you are supporting a shadow opposition in exile."

He said "this shows the Bush administration is very serious about the new policy."

That policy, arrived at after weeks of meetings with congressional leaders, calls for a 10-month renewal of humanitarian aid to the rebels troops now based in border camps just inside neighboring Honduras.

But it also commits the United States to support a peace process undertaken by the five countries in the region and permits the rebel aid to be used to relocate the fighters into their homeland when political conditions there improve.

Cesar said he is the only one of the seven members of the directorate thus far who has announced plans to return to Nicaragua. He said he will go back the third week in May, assuming that the promised changes in electoral and communications law are made in Nicaragua and that the five presidents come up with a plan for voluntary repatriation of the rebels.

Contra Aid Cut To Force Return

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration is cutting funding in half for the Nicaraguan Contras' political operation in exile, to underscore its desire for rebel leaders to return to their homeland, a Contra leader says.

The administration wants Contra leaders to return to Nicaragua to test promises made by the leftist Sandinista government of an open political process, said Alfredo Cesar, a member of the rebels' political directorate.

The United States has been spending $4.8 million a year to support the Contras' exiled political operation, including offices in Miami and Central America.

Under the new policy, the Contras are being urged to take part in the national elections scheduled by the Sandinistas for February 1990.

"Even though it's only at the suggestion level, it's a very strong suggestion," Cesar said in a telephone interview Tuesday evening. "The message is that they will no longer support political activities in exile. The only ones they will support are ones conducted inside Nicaragua as part of the political opposition there."

Cesar said that message was delivered to the rebels at a State Department meeting when the seven members of the directorate were in Washington two weeks ago. It was repeated in stronger terms when a State Department delegation traveled to Miami to meet again with the group last Friday — at the same

Space Test Raises Questions About Gravity's Effect On Life

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SPACE CENTER, Houston — A fertilized egg experiment aboard the recent Discovery flight raised more questions than it answered after half of them returned dead, the shuttle's pilot says.

The experiment included 16 chicken eggs fertilized two days before the March 13 blastoff and another 16 fertilized nine days prior to launch.

Although all of the older eggs hatched Saturday, the others were found dead when the shuttle returned March 18. Both the hatched chicks and the dead ones are being studied to determine how weightlessness affected them.

"What looked like a very simple experiment may turn out to have generated thousands of questions now instead of providing any answers to anything," Discovery pilot John Blaha said Tuesday at a news conference. "It's certainly a great mystery as to why this happened."

Dr. James Bagian, another astronaut on the flight, said the experiment raised questions as to whether plant or animal life can begin in zero gravity.

Bagian said the chicken eggs and another experiment in which he observed plant growth were designed to determine if cell division is somehow "impeded or mutated" by a lack of gravity.

"Is there a certain point in the differentiation of cell types where they are vulnerable to the effects of the loss of gravity? Maybe gravity plays up to now an unknown role but a very essential role in that the older ones (eggs), at nine days, are past that crucial gate, if you will, and they are developing normally," Bagian said.

If the experiment shows that "life cannot begin anew in orbit," that would have great implications for long space stays in the future, Bagian said.

"You may have to supply a gravity environment for a period of time."

PACs Contributed $100 Million

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Political action committees donated almost $100 million to House candidates during the last two-year election cycle, but incumbents enjoyed a more than 7-to-1 advantage over challengers in terms of PAC generosity, according to a new study by Common Cause.

The study showed that nearly half of the members of the House receive 50 percent or more of their campaign funding from PACs, a slight increase from the 1986 election cycle. It also showed that House incumbents raised more money than their opponents in 320 of 328 races.

The fund-raising advantage is often cited as a reason that 98.5 percent of incumbents have been re-elected in the last two elections and why groups such as Common Cause, a public interest lobby group, pin hopes for campaign law changes on limiting PAC contributions.

Many PAC managers freely admit that they give only to incumbents because their bosses expect them to back winners. Since the Democrats enjoy a majority in the House, it is not surprising that their candidates attract more PAC money.

The study showed Democratic incumbents raised an average of $217,000 from PACs while Republican challengers received $10,762. GOP incumbents raised an average of $177,691 from PACs; their challengers raised an average of $49,469.

U.S. Ambassador's Home Hit By Shell During Beirut Attack

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A Syrian shell struck U.S. Ambassador John McCarthy's residence while he was in its bomb shelter, damaging the living quarters but causing no casualties, the American Embassy said today.

"Damage was confined to the living and dining areas and no one was injured in the attack," an embassy statement said.

An embassy spokeswoman said the attack occurred late Tuesday and that McCarthy was in the bomb shelter. The residence in the Christian Yarze district is midway between the presidential palace and the defense ministry.

Meanwhile, a cease-fire declared today by Christian army commander Gen. Michel Aoun after three weeks of fierce artillery clashes with Syrian troops and their Moslem militia allies collapsed a few hours later.

A police spokesman said one man was killed and four wounded in a Syrian rocket barrage of Christian east Beirut earlier in the day.

The casualties raised the overall toll to 122 people killed and 376 wounded since March 8, when Beirut's worst civil war clashes in four years broke out.

Aoun's headquarters said Syrian gunners were shelling the presidential palace, the Defense Ministry and neighboring residential districts in Christian east Beirut.

Aoun, who heads a Christian military cabinet in Lebanon's dual government, said he ordered his 20,000 troops to stop shooting at midnight in response to an appeal from the Arab League.

There was no public response from the Syrian command or Druse warlord Walid Jumblatt's Progressive Socialist Party militia, Aoun's main adversaries in the latest round of Lebanon's 14-year civil war between Christians and Moslems.

A communique issued by Aoun's headquarters said, "Despite the army's adherence to the cease-fire ... the Syrian batteries poured shells on eastern (Christian) areas as people were emerging from bomb shelters to buy food and take stock of the damage caused to their homes."

The communique said that Aoun's troops were not returning fire. However, sniper fire from positions in east Beirut hit several streets in both Moslem and Christian sectors.

The shellings have triggered an exodus of residents from Moslem west Beirut and its southern Shiite Moslem slums. Long lines of cars packed with beds, mattresses and suitcases continued to stream from the city's Moslem sector heading south.

United Nations sources said at least 35,000 Moslem families have sought refuge with relatives and friends in areas policed by U.N. peacekeeping forces in south Lebanon.

The confrontation was sparked when Aoun clamped a blockade March 6 on illegal ports operated by Moslem militias along Lebanon's Mediterranean coastline. The ports were draining about $100 million a year from the five government harbors in lost tax revenues.

Party Realignment Likely In Wake Of Communist Losses In Elections

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

MOSCOW — A major realignment within the Soviet Communist Party appears likely to follow the defeat of perhaps a quarter of the party's nominees, many of them among the country's most powerful men, in the nation's parliamentary elections.

As more defeats were reported Tuesday of regional and local party leaders, a senior Soviet official said that the party would have to review the positions of those leaders whose candidacies to the new Congress of People's Deputies had been rejected in the weekend elections.

"The party must decide why it happened," Gennady I. Gerasimov, the foreign ministry's chief spokesman, said of the huge protest vote. "We will have to examine this promptly and thoroughly. Party leaders must have not only the confidence of the party, but the confidence of the people."

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev had warned a special party conference last summer that "the party's authority will be put to a serious test" by the contested elections envisioned in his political reforms, but he declared that party leaders nonetheless had to be made "more effectively answerable to the working people" if the country's broad strategy of political, economic and social change were to succeed.

When its nominees were defeated, Gorbachev added, the party "will have to draw the necessary conclusions" — and he may now use such a wide-ranging review to purge more conservative officials from the party's senior ranks on grounds that they have lost the faith of the people.

The list of those defeated now includes the top three party and city officials in Leningrad, five regional party secretaries in the Ukraine, the mayors of Moscow and Kiev, many senior party and government officials in the Baltic republics of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, several military and naval commanders and regional party leaders from the Soviet Far East across Siberia and Russia to Byelorussia.

The most prominent loser was Yuri Solovyov, first secretary of the Leningrad regional party committee and a candidate, or non-voting, member of the ruling Politburo. Although running unopposed in his home district, he failed to win a majority of the votes cast as a reported 60 percent of those who went to the polls scratched his name off their ballots. Under Soviet law, a candidate must receive at least half of the votes cast to be elected even if unopposed.

But many other regional first secretaries, powerful political barons in the party structure, were similarly defeated in grass roots campaigns that galvanized the long-simmering popular discontent into an unprecedented protest vote that defied the party machine and broke decades of enforced discipline.

The party's power was not seriously at stake. The candidates were competing for 1,500 seats in the new Congress of People's Deputies and subsequent election to the Supreme Soviet, the strengthened national legislature.

Party control of both is assured at this point because of the predominance of Communists among the candidates and the selection of 750 additional deputies from a variety of groups, including the party, the Communist Youth League, the trade union federation and other allied groups.

Food, Water Scarce At Beseiged Prison

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SANTA CATARINA PINULA, Guatemala — Negotiations were at a standstill and food and water reported running out today inside a prison farm where heavily armed inmates were holed up with relatives who were visiting when the prisoners revolted.

The government threatened to cut off supplies to the estimated 2,000 inmates and family members, who have been inside Pavon prison since Easter Sunday, if no accord is reached today.

"We're at an impasse," the Rev. Antonio Lopez Martin, chaplain of Guatemalan prisons said late Tuesday. Lopez is part of the delegation negotiating with the rebellious inmates at the facility outside Guatemala City.

The bodies of four guards and three inmates who were killed in Sunday's takeover have been recovered, authorities said. Five others are believed dead, said prison spokesman Conrado Monroy, but their bodies have not been found on the grounds of the 2 1/2-square-mile prison, Guatemala's largest.

About 20 inmates not among the rebels were transported to another prison on Tuesday. They were seen leaving the prison, handcuffed by twos. Another half dozen visitors who had been inside since Sunday also made their way out.

THE OSCARS

Curtain Is About To Rise On Hollywood's Big Show

By Bob Thomas
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — America's film industry honors its own at the 61st Academy Awards, and the cross-country odyssey of two disparate brothers appears to be the favorite to capture the best picture Oscar, with Dustin Hoffman the front-runner for best actor and Barry Levinson for best director.

"Rain Man" has the double advantage of being generally (but not unanimously) praised by the critics and embraced by the public ($122 million gross in 80 days).

The other major categories look as unpredictable as a horse race for 2-year-olds. Critics' awards have been scattered over a wide field, providing no hint as to favorites.

The uncertainty of the outcome should add excitement to tonight's telecast, in contrast to last year's no-surprise awards. The event returns to the Shrine Auditorium despite the wave of protest over traffic gridlock and poor sound a year ago. The Los Angeles police and the sound engineers have promised to do better.

The Academy also seems resolved to restore glamour to the Oscar presentations. Producer Allan Carr ("La Cage aux Folles") will stage the awards "like a Broadway show," with Marvin Hamlisch providing the downbeat in the orchestra pit. After 17 years of directing the awards, Marty Pasetta has been replaced by Jeff Margolis, who has attracted good ratings with the American Music Awards show.

The Oscarcast will have no emcee. Instead, a bevy of "couples, companions, co-stars and compadres" will present the awards. Among them: Demi Moore and Bruce Willis; Melanie Griffith and Don Johnson; Kim Novak and James Stewart; Sammy Davis Jr. and Gregory Hines; Goldie Hawn and Kurt Russell; Farrah Fawcett and Ryan O'Neal; Bo Derek and Dudley Moore; Kiefer and Donald Sutherland.

The nominees for best picture — "The Accidental Tourist," "Dangerous Liaisons," "Mississippi Burning," "Rain Man," "Working Girl" — offer a wide range of subject matter. But they have one thing in common: All were released last December.

This has brought renewed claims that movies released earlier in the year have less chance of winning Hollywood's big prize. History seems to bear that out. Since 1934, when films became eligible on a calendar-year basis, 18 December releases have won as best picture. The tally: November, 9; October, 5; September, 4; August, 3; July, 3.

Only 11 movies released in the first six months of the year have been picked as the best. Interestingly, the only January release to take the top prize was the classic "Casablanca," first seen in Los Angeles on Jan. 2, 1943. (For Oscar eligibility, a film must play at least one week in an L.A. theater.)

Academy president Richard Kahn offers an explanation: "The major serious films are traditionally released in the last three months of the year. Summer is now reserved for lighthearted, escapist entertainment. That's the way movies are dealt out to the public.

"That doesn't mean that movies released earlier in the year don't have a chance as best picture. 'The Godfather' came out in March. 'Annie Hall' was an April release." Other early releases: "The Sound of Music" (March); "Patton" (February). But 11 of the last 17 best-picture winners were released in November or December.

"There's no question that a year-end release enhances the possibility of Oscars," observes publicist Booker McClay, who has conducted campaigns for "E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial," "Out of Africa" and this year's "Gorillas in the Mist" for Universal Pictures.

"At the end of the year, Academy voters may have 30 pictures to see. They are much more likely to be attracted to the new movies than to return to those they have seen early in the year. It's hard to generate interest in movies that were released eight or nine months earlier. You have to book a theater on the west side, so the film is available to Academy members. Meanwhile the new releases are attracting all the excitement."

McClay cited "E.T." as "a classic example of a picture that came out too early. It was released

Predicting Winners Isn't Easy

By Bob Thomas
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — It's a wretched year for predicting who will win the Oscars, but somebody's got to do it.

This most unrewarding of endeavors is made more difficult by the absence of a groundswell for any of the major contenders. Excuses aside, here's one Oscar watcher's view of the 61st race for the gold:

Best Picture — "Rain Man." Not an overwhelming favorite with the Academy crowd, but it has the luster of a winner.

Best Actor — Dustin Hoffman, "Rain Man." A unique portrayal.

Best Actress — It could be any of the five, but the voters do like newcomers. Melanie Griffith, "Working Girl."

Best Supporting Actor — Martin Landau, "Tucker: The Man and His Dream." An acting gem in a flawed film.

Best Supporting Actress — Frances McDormand, "Mississippi Burning." A slight favorite in a wide-open race.

Best Director — Barry Levinson, "Rain Man."

DUSTIN HOFFMAN
In "Rain Man"

in June of 1982 and unanimously hailed. It did fabulous business and seemed a cinch to win the Oscar.

"But six months later, big campaigns focused on the new pictures. 'Gandhi' was given an $18-million marketing budget. It was heavily screened, and everything was centered on the Gandhi theme, making it seem like something more than a spectacular film. The result: 'E.T.' did not win."

John Flinn, who has conducted Academy publicity campaigns for MGM and Paramount, agrees. "It's much tougher to promote a picture released early in the year," he says. "The December pictures have all the ad strength and publicity behind them, and Academy members are naturally affected."

McClay adds: "Studios are on the horns of a dilemma. If they hold an important film until December, they are faced with interest charges. If they release the picture too early, they lessen chances of an award."

But, given the eternal lure of the Oscar and the ego satisfaction involved, chances are that Academy hopefuls will continue crowding into Los Angeles theaters during the month of December.

ECU, Beaufort Join To Sponsor 2 French Films

Two French films, "Jean de Florette" and "Manon of the Spring," will be screened in Greenville during April. The films are sponsored jointly by the Beaufort County Arts Council and the East Carolina University International Language Organization and will be shown in Belk Auditorium in the Allied Health Building, corner of Charles Boulevard and Greenville Boulevard (entry to the site is from Charles Boulevard).

The first of the two films, "Jean de Florette," will be shown at 8 p.m. Saturday, with the doors to open at 7:30 p.m.
"Jean de Florette" is an adaptation of Marcel Pagnol's novel about shattered dreams among peasant farmers in the Provençal area of France during the 1920s. The cinematography augments the story.

The sequel to "Florette" is "Manon of Spring," which will be shown at Belk Auditorium on Saturday, April 15.

"Manon" deals with the daughter of Jean de Florette who wreaks vengeance upon the cruel peasants responsible for her father's death, and is also filmed in the Provençal countryside.

Tickets for the films are priced at $4 each and can be purchased at the door prior to 8 p.m.
For more details, call 946-2504.

Three Pretty Geese Brighten Any Area

Three cheerful geese tiptoe through the tulips on a plastic canvas doorstop. Done in beautiful colors, this decorative accessory is meant to brighten a dreary hallway or entry. Best of all, this type of needlepoint is so simple that even a beginner will have fun with it. Finished size is 7 by 11 inches.

An added bonus is the set of eight tulip magnets, which will add a springtime touch to a kitchen.

To obtain directions for making the Geese-A-Walking Doorstop, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-032689 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. N-032689 by sending a check or money order for $14.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and all materials required to make this projects.

When plastic canvas became available several years ago, it quickly exploded in popularity on the needlepoint scene. While some needlepoint purists frowned on the use of plastic canvas and even felt that stitches worked on this material should not be called needlepoint at all, many others felt then — and still do — that it is an exciting material, particularly well-suited for newcomers to the craft.

Pat's Pointers

Plastic canvas doesn't have the long-wearing qualities of needlepoint done on fine canvas with wool yarns. But that is really not a problem with the type of project most often done on plastic.

Also, plastic canvas is a fairly stiff material, which is not really suitable for such items as pillow covers, upholstery, rugs or dining chair covers. For all of these and many other items, traditional canvas is the obvious choice. Plastic is the best choice for tote bags, notebook covers, doorstops, Christmas ornaments and a wide variety of other gift and accessory items.

It won't warp out of shape no matter what stitch you use, so blocking is never needed. Another reason for its popularity, even with experienced stitchers, is the ease of finishing. Some talented needlepointers often pay dearly to have their stitchery mounted or put together since an entirely different set of skills is required for the finishing of traditional canvases.

You have no raw edges on plastic canvas and there is no need to turn under hems, miter corners or use involved binding stitches. You simply cut the canvas so there is one unworked rib of the canvas around the outer edges of each piece. To cover the unworked edges or to join pieces, just work a simple lacing or overcast stitch on the edges.

'Geese-A-Walking' doorstop is a good project for beginners

To use the overcast method on an unfinished edge, bring a threaded needle up through a hole from the wrong side to the right side of the piece; take the needle to the back again and bring it up in the next hole. Continue in this manner along the edge to be covered, taking extra stitches as needed to cover the corners.

When two pieces are to be joined, work in the same way, but hold the two together with right sides facing out. When joining, you will be working through matching holes of each piece, thus joining and finishing at the same time.

When putting together any boxlike shape, I find it best to first join each side piece to the bottom piece. Next I join each side piece to the neighboring side piece, always working from the bottom to the top.

There is a logical reason for this. If you work from top to bottom, you will find it much more difficult to secure your yarn ends at the end of the seam. If you were making something like a tissue box cover with an attached top but no bottom piece, you would do the reverse. In other words, always work away from the closed end.

Clarinetist To Perform Senior Recital

Clarinetist Leigh Anne Lane of Sykesville, Md., a senior student in the East Carolina University School of Music, will perform in recital Friday in the Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall, beginning at 7 p.m.

She will be accompanied by pianist Lee Ann Taggart and assisted by a group of student and faculty instrumentalists.

The program will include the Mozart Divertimento No. 5, K. 229, a clarinet concerto by Aaron Copland and selections by Olivier Messiaen and Paul Hindemith.

Ms. Lane is a candidate for the Bachelor of Music degree in clarinet performance and a student of Deborah Chodacki of the ECU woodwinds faculty. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Lane of 2302 Harvest Farm Road, Sykesville,

ABWA Plans April Meeting

A spring membership meeting April 18 was planned at Tuesday's meeting of the Pirate Charter chapter of the American Business Women's Association.

Jane Wheaton, membership chairman, said the event will be held at The Humber House.

Mary Kittrell spoke on using scarves as the season's top accessory. She demonstrated how they fit into the business wardrobe.

Jan Verdict, president, or Nina Redditt, secretary, can be contacted concerning further information about ABWA.

Telemarketer's Pleas Fall On Deaf Ears

Dear Abby: You recently ran a series of scathing letters condemning telemarketing. It was discussed at length on one of our local radio call-in talk shows, and telemarketers took a verbal beating that made telemarketing in this area very difficult.

I have been in sales all my life, and for years I listened to people gripe about our door-to-door salespeople: "They are too persistent." "They always come at the wrong time." Then when we tried mail-outs, people complained about all the junk mail they were getting. We tried radio and television advertising, but people griped that we were aired too often and came across like used-car salespeople (my apology to used-car salespeople; however, that stigma persists). Even newspaper advertisements drew fire.

So, we turned to calling people on the telephone in order to sell our product, and never has there been a more economical way to reach people in the history of America — and what happens? People complain, and you add fuel to the flame!

Who in all of God's creation ever said that we would go through life without interruptions? What makes people think that they possess an unalienable right never to be approached by anyone at any time for any reason that they feel to be an improper interruption?

Dear Abby

So, Abby, please remember: Peeking in your window while you are taking a shower is a direct violation of your privacy; telemarketing is only one of life's interruptions, but whose efficiency and effectiveness to this economically struggling nation far outweigh its inconvenience. — Telechief In Bloomington, Ill.

Dear Telechief: You rattled the wrong cage. I am still of the opinion that one's telephone is for the convenience of the person who pays for it, and that solicitors and market researchers should find some other way to sell their products or gather information.

Some people sleep at odd hours; others may be ill, or otherwise occupied. Why should we accept a salesperson's telephone call as "one of life's interruptions" as though it were an act of God?

The late Supreme Court Justice Louis Brandeis said, "One of our most cherished rights is the right to be left alone." (I'm with Louie!)

Dear Abby: I was amused to read the letter from Wallace A. Krapf, who stated unequivocally that a friendship cannot survive where there is a business relationship. (He specifically deplored relatives in business.) Mr. Krapf may be interested in our story:

My husband and I met in 1974 when I took a job as his secretary. We worked together for four years, then we both moved to another company in the same department.

In 1979 he moved in with me, and in 1982 we were married (a second marriage for both of us). He left the company I was with for a short time, but returned to become the manager of my department.

We still work for the same company and I am his assistant. We ride to work together every morning and go home the same way. And whenever it's possible, we go to lunch together. We have never taken separate vacations because we enjoy being together and are each other's best friend.

We both feel that we have an ideal, enduring relationship and wouldn't trade it for the world.

I know this probably sounds like I made it up, but you may sign me ... Wouldn't Have Believed It Either, But It's True

Dear Wouldn't, Etc.: Now that's what I call "togetherness." Siamese twins could not be closer. If it works for you, bravo and congratulations. May it ever be thus.

Dear Abby: The letter from "Irk-ed," who applied for a sales job in a large retail store, brought back memories. He was told if he wanted the job he'd have to shave off his beard.

Back in 1929, I applied for a job with the Standard Oil Co. The job paid $80 a month for working a 60-hour week. I was told I wouldn't be hired unless I shaved off the moustache I'd been wearing for 10 years.

I didn't think twice. I agreed to shave off my moustache and felt lucky to get the job. — Don McLellan, Flintridge, Calif.

Dear Don: You made it by a whisker. Back in 1929 you were lucky you had a razor to shave it off with.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

French Will Celebrate Bicentennial With Texas Deep In The Heart Of Paris

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS — At a time when the French are trying to whip up enthusiasm for the 200th anniversary of their Revolution, visitors will be treated to an American exhibition in Galeries Lafayette, France's best-known department store.

A major art exhibition will form the backbone of the show in the Paris store, which also includes a Tex-Mex restaurant, a demonstration of Navajo arts and crafts and phone booths offering free three-minute phone calls to the United States.

The exhibition might be dubbed the biggest "show and sell," gambit ever attempted in France because it's also a commercial enterprise aimed at selling thousands of items "made in the U.S.A."

"We feel the United States was the most obvious choice for our annual show devoted to a foreign country," said Jean-Michel Girardin, director of promotions and sales.

He pointed out that people in both countries battled for liberty in the late 18th century, and that the Marquis de Lafayette, a French statesman, had championed the American patriots' cause as a general under George Washington in the American Revolutionary War.

Lafayette's gesture was viewed suspiciously by the French, who first condemned him but finally welcomed him back as a hero in 1781 when they saw how he'd defeated their arch-enemies, the English.

The exhibition of 50 American paintings from the Wadsworth Atheneum in Hartford, Conn., is the most important such show sponsored by a retailer in France.

"Chosen by the museum's curator, Patrick McCaughey, the paintings will cover the chief periods of art in America," said Georges Meyer, chairman of Galeries Lafayette.

Insured for $50 million, the canvases will range from the works of the scenic Hudson River School to the abstract expressionism of Jackson Pollock and the pop art of Andy Warhol.

Also on show will be Whistler's "Coast of Brittany," as well as Winslow Homer's "Boy in a Dory," Georgia O'Keeffe's upside down painting of D.H. Lawrence's pine tree and an impressionistic landscape of Etretat, a beach in Normandy, by George Inness.

PR Firms Move Into Spotlight

By Felix Gutierrez
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — When Royal Viking's new luxury liner sailed under the Golden Gate Bridge at the beginning of a recent television news report, it was the end of a successful promotional journey for the cruise lines' publicist.

The segment — shown on stations from San Diego to Boston in January — was shot, edited and transmitted not by news crews, but by a video public relations agency.

"If we do it right it looks like their own tape," said Gail Cottman, whose Pro Video News Service produced the clip. Her $10,000 fee included contacting more than 100 television news outlets, distributing the piece via satellite and making follow-up calls to see where it was broadcast.

Parts of the story, including the ship's christening and an on-board interview with actor Jimmy Stewart, screened on Entertainment Tonight and CNN. It was retransmitted to more than 500 local stations that take newsfeeds from ABC, CNN or Group W, Pro Video reported.

As television news expands, more public relations agencies are moving past typewritten press releases and still photos. They target TV newsrooms with videocassette news releases and promotional tape available via satellite.

"The most interesting things I see companies doing is putting up satellite feeds on the day of an event. They put it up there for people to grab," said CBS news West Coast bureau manager Jennifer Siebens.

When Honda offered visuals of its first U.S.-manufactured cars being shipped to Japan from Portland, Ore., Ms. Siebens passed up the reverse-import story. "If we took their feed we would be conceding total control of the story to the subject of the story," she said.

Such ethical concerns divide news directors. Some argue against ever using promotional clips within newscasts. Others use them, but identify who supplied them. And still others broadcast the clips on newscasts without any hint to viewers as to who supplied them.

"There is absolutely no consensus among our members," said Ernie Schultz, president of the Radio-Television News Directors Association in Washington, D.C. "We've got 1,200 news directors and 1,200 positions. Everybody is different."

"We believe that if we do a story the viewer should be confident that whatever he's seeing is 100 percent CBS news, that we have been there as an independent set of eyes on the story," said Ms. Siebens.

Sometimes news directors have little choice. A few months ago CBS and other networks showed Drexel Burnham Lambert chief executive Frederick H. Joseph reacting to the firm's settlement of alleged federal securities-law violation.

But Joseph wasn't interviewed or taped by news staffers. Instead, his comments were issued as a video press release in the late afternoon by Drexel. CBS noted the source when it broadcast the edited tape.

Ms. Siebens said CBS identifies publicity videos for viewers, such as file footage of a factory assembly line. CBS newsfeeds likewise identify sources for the local stations receiving them, but Ms. Siebens doesn't know if stations pass the identifications along to viewers.

Radio-Television News Directors Association ethics don't require newscasters to mention if the tapes were supplied by the subject being mentioned, only that stations don't pass off tapes as their own.

"We are not prepared to say that every time that you put something on the air that you have not originated that you have to name the source," said Schultz. "The strength of our position is that every editor uses his or her own judgment."

But broadcasting client-supported videos on news shows blurs the line between publicity and news, critics contend. Publicity videos allow companies to put their best visual foot forward, avoid questions from probing reporters and promote story angles favorable to their products.

"If they try to push anything corporate or push a product, we're not going to take it," said Jake Wirtshafter, a news assistant with ABC network news in Los Angeles, who fields publicists' messages. He said they "are lucky to get three items a month on one of our (network) feeds."

"A reporter can take information from a public relations piece and sort it out," said Wirtshafter. "But once we put it up we can't do that. If we show something that makes their client look good we can't balance it out."

Cottman averages two client-supported releases a week. She produces both video news releases with narration that stations can air as their own, as well as news tapes without sound for which stations can provide their own narration from information provided by Pro Video.

"In five minutes (of tape) the station gets everything it needs," said Cottman. "They can deal with the story as they choose to show it."

Director Rubs Corporate Hollywood The Wrong Way

BURBANK, Calif. — Director

Terry Gilliam doesn't make box-office ticket machines sing. His movies aren't stuffed with car chases, naked women or automatic weaponry. He prefers strange characters, weird settings and unusual endings.

Most of what Gilliam does rub corporate Hollywood the wrong way. And that's why the arrival of his new film, "The Adventures of Baron Munchausen," is such a minor miracle.

While many other Hollywood filmmakers produce predictable, mass appeal fare, Gilliam grinds out rumormongers on fantasy, idealism, history and death.

"I'm desperately trying to make popular films because they speak to a large audience," Gilliam said on a recent visit from his home in London. "But I also want to turn people a little bit off the path they are charging down."

Open Letter To All Area Residents:

Computers are a major part of our children's education today. They provide valuable "hands-on" experience that textbooks alone can't teach. Students who are fortunate to receive a basic computer education will have a distinct advantage in the work-place over those who have no computer skills. However, the reality is that computers are costly educational tools, making only a limited number available to students.

Farm Fresh wants to help change that and are pleased to announce its "Computers for Kids" program. The program itself is very simple. Farm Fresh shoppers need only save their cash register tapes, designate which school they would like to receive credit for them and then mail their accumulated receipt tapes to the respective school. When each school has collected $100,000 in receipt tapes, Farm Fresh will donate an Apple IIGS computer system - at no cost to the school. The "Computers for Kids" program will run 10 months - from March 1, 1989 to December 31, 1989.

We welcome all area public and parochial schools to participate in this program.

See your convenient Farm Fresh store for complete details.

Laura Gaither Student Recital Saturday

Laura Lynn Gaither of Miami, Fla., a student of Mark Gansor in the School of Music, East Carolina University, will present her senior organ recital at 3:15 p.m. Saturday in Memorial Baptist Church. For her program, she has chosen compositions by Nicholas de Grigny, J.S. Bach, Jean Langlais, W.A. Mozart, Jehann Alain and Franz Liszt. The recital is free.

Tobacco Museum Sponsors April Film Series

KENLY — The Tobacco Museum of North Carolina is sponsoring a film series, "Folkways," during April. Each film will be shown on Saturday mornings from 11 a.m. to noon in the museum theater. Admission is $1 for adults and 50 cents for children. A discussion and demonstration period led by a resource person follows each film.

Films to be shown are: Saturday, "Cherokee Indian Basketry"; April 8, "Homesteading"; April 15, "Music From The Hills"; April 22, "Spinning, Dyeing and Weaving," and April 29, "Toys From The Field." For more details, call 284-3431.

Two Sunday Concerts At Craven Arts Council

NEW BERN — Two free concerts will take place Sunday at the Craven Arts Council and Gallery, Inc., 317 Middle Street, New Bern. Beginning hour for the two performances is 4 p.m. Performers are Les Deux Amis, a guitar duo of Brian Morris and Joseph Hoey, visiting artists at Craven and Beaufort Community Colleges, respectively, and The Vocal Arts Ensemble of Wilmington, featuring Alice Pierce, Clair Rezier, Joe Hickman and John Pierce. In addition to separate performances, the two groups will join to play Mario Castelnuovo's "Romancero Gitano," arranged for two guitars. Where possible, to assure seating, individuals are encouraged to pick up tickets at 317 Middle St. prior to the concert. For more details, call 637-2787.

Temple University Professor Says It's All In The Numbers

By Kay Bartlett
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — Quick, what's the difference between 1 million, 1 billion and 1 trillion?

You're in trouble if you respond with something like, "What's the difference when the figures get that high?"

If you think the Empire State Building is about a mile high, plead guilty again.

You're an innumerate.

Help, however, is at hand.

Meet the oxymoronic John Allen Paulos, a witty mathematics professor who quotes philosophers, devours novels, once did a stand-up comedy act in a Philadelphia club and passionately hopes his fifth-grade math teacher reads his latest book. He's also a man who doesn't think the world would be a better place if we were all able to work quadratic equations.

"Come to the fifth floor," he instructs a visitor, "and go to room...this is rather embarrassing given the subject of the book, but it's either room 540 or 542."

A huge poster of Bertrand Russell, one of his idols, looks over his shoulder as he works. A pyramid of blue and magenta empty Hawaiian Punch cans — fun to move around in different configurations — rests quietly now in a garish display on his windowsill.

Paulos, a 43-year-old Temple University professor, has written "Innumeracy: Mathematical Illiteracy and its Consequences," a book whose title would not compel the average reader to snap it off the shelf. But it's fun, and Paulos tells you it's OK to skip the tough parts.

One of the tough parts is the title itself. The word "innumeracy," which means the inability to deal comfortably with the fundamental notions of number and chance, has been in usage in England since the 1950s, Paulos says. He first came across it several years ago in an article in Scientific American.

"It will be in American dictionaries soon," he says. "Dan Rather has used it a few times and that's got to be an imprimatur."

But back to that first question. Throughout the book, Paulos has a knack of breaking things down into easily grasped units.

He wants people to have a sense of the vast difference among the members of the "...illion" family. He suggests you look at it this way: One million seconds takes about 11½ days to tick by. A billion seconds would take almost 32 years. A trillion seconds equals 32,000 years.

Paulos says he sometimes asks his freshman students how high the Empire State Building is.

"I don't want them to go and look it up," he says. "I just want to know about their sense of proportion and scale. I would consider 1,000 feet a correct answer, even 2,000 feet, because it's in the range. (Actual footage is 1,200 feet.) But if a student said 50 feet or a mile, he has no sense of what a mile is, what a mile is like straight up in the air."

Paulos, who teaches freshmen as well as graduate students, is a recognized expert in symbolic logic, computer languages and artificial intelligence. Born in Denver, he grew up in Milwaukee and describes himself as a bright kid but very shy.

"This is a book for educated people," he says.

Paulos notes that he once accompanied his wife, a former French teacher turned romance novelist, to the doctor to learn more about a minor procedure she was facing.

Within 20 minutes, the doctor said there was only a million-to-one shot of something going wrong, that it was a 99 percent safe procedure, and then he said that it usually went quite well," he says. When Paulos tried to explain to the physician that he just said three entirely different things, he was met with a grim stare and incomprehension.

"Even in their areas of expertise, people just use numbers, not knowing what they mean," he says.

Paulos has met with blank stares before. When he did the comedy club act one of his jokes had to do with the sign suggesting citizens put litter where it belongs. Paulos pointed out that if people did that, it would no longer be litter, it would be garbage. Litter, he pointed out, is litter only when it is littering.

Not too many chuckles.

"Actually, most of it went quite well, but some of it was a little too cerebral for the club," he says.

He also gets blank stares when he quips that something selling at a "fraction of its normal cost" probably is — and that the fraction is 43.

His quixotic quest is serious. He feels that innumeracy contributes to a lack of skepticism and lack of critical thinking, which leads to poor life decisions.

"People should know, for instance, that when they see a headline that says something like 1 million American children kidnapped every year, that it's simply not true," he says.

"Innumerates, if I can use that as a noun, tend to personalize things and overvalue coincidences," he says. "They don't have a sense of how unrare coincidences are, so they read entirely too much into them."

These are the people, he says, who get involved with numerology, astrology, and such largely because they don't understand the laws of probabilities, nor do they think critically. Do they ever wonder how many times the psychic was wrong, rather than boasting about the one time he was right?

Paulos has many funny examples in his book, such as the Wisconsin legislator who opposed daylight-saving time on the grounds that that much more sun would fade the curtains and the carpets faster.

He blames math teachers, the social acceptability of even intelligent men and women rather proudly flaunting their innumeracy, and a general unawareness of how important these things are in a society that is rapidly becoming more and more scientific and technical.

Tiny Record Company Stuns The Industry

By Dennis Hunt
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

HOLLYWOOD — "What a dump, man," scoffed Matt Dike, surveying the tiny, cluttered Hollywood office of the independent label Delicious Vinyl Records.

"It's hard to tell what's debris and what's not," said his partner Mike Ross, pushing some papers off a chair so he could sit down.

"Who cares?," said Dike, 27, plopping down on a chair and putting his feet on the desk. "It's funky — it's home."

Lanky and long-haired, wearing rumpled, mismatched clothes, Dike had that walking-disaster-area look of a '60s hippie. Ross, 26, dressed Saturday-afternoon casual, was eager for the interview to be over so he could go play basketball.

Who would figure that these two disheveled novices would be responsible for the biggest-selling single since "We Are the World" in 1985: Tone Loc's "Wild Thing"?

If that's not unlikely enough, there is the added surprise that Ross and Dike are white players in a game usually identified with black music and tied to the ghetto experience.

"Hey, we're happening, dude," said Dike, doodling on a piece of scrap paper. "We're just two soulful white guys, hanging out, being cool."

Soon, they may be a couple of rich, soulful white guys. Their little label, which has only five artists, has only released a handful of singles and one album — by Tone Loc.

Tone Loc's new single, "Funky Cold Medina," is off to a fast start and has definite Top 10 potential. The Los Angeles rapper's album, "Loc-ed After Dark," was just released, but is already in the national pop Top 20.

At first, Dike and Ross said putting together the 2 million-selling single, "Wild Thing," was no real feat. It cost less than $3,000 — dirt cheap these days.

"You can't call it novel or different," said Ross. "We used stuff that other people have used. Matt came up with the beat and the guitar groove. It's simple and nothing new."

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY March 30

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Analyze the situation before you make any important moves. Build your strength and get added rest. The red light turns green tomorrow.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Friendships are important. A secret attraction has you playing a waiting game. Moves you make now will pay off.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Stick to business as usual with no changes. Your inclination to stir up some action is not in your best interest. Trust fate to lead the way.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Worry over finances can get you in a gray mood. An overload of responsibilities is only a temporary situation.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Stay with established procedures. Think twice before making important changes. Contacts with higher-ups can prove rewarding.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Stay clear of arrangements that are permanent, fixed, or cannot be modified. Pursue an interesting romantic prospect.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): You feel alone and unsure when you do not have supportive people around you. Take advantage of good buys at the marketplace.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): A positive attitude will help you through the day. Hostility levels are high. Avoid the temptation to straighten out cranky associates.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Keep a loose schedule that could include some surprise moves. Prepare for a social gathering. Gains are slow but sure.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Put an emphasis on optimism, contacts with people you enjoy, and business associates who can help. Reserve time for a cultural event.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): You feel tested by others. Self-confidence is important. Call a friend to join in a shopping adventure.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Reconcile differences with a family member. Check on a friend who is under the weather. Neighbors play a key role in the evening.

It was the late S.J. Simon who first propounded the theory that, if you defeat every contract you double, you aren't wielding the ax often enough. However, to double for an extra 50 or 100 points and thereby give away the show is hardly a profitable pastime.

South took the bidding along at a slow pace until North jumped to three no trump. Since North could hold no more than two kings in the major suits, it was quite likely that he held a high diamond honor. South put his reasoning to the test with a slam try of four diamonds, then bid one more for luck after North raised. West's double was fatuous, and received its just desserts.

West led a trump, taken by dummy's jack. Declarer cashed the ace and was delighted to see East follow a second time. With nothing to guide him, declarer might have come to hand and conceded a trump trick, relying on either a 3-3 heart break or the spade finesse. However, the double marked the king of spades with West, so declarer tried something else.

He cashed the ace-king of clubs and ruffed a club, then the ace-queen of hearts. Next, he threw West in with a trump. That worthy was now firmly enmeshed in an endplay.

A spade lead would be into declarer's major tenace, so West was forced to exit with a club. Since the lead of the queen would permit declarer to ruff and set up the jack for a spade discard, West led his ten of clubs. Declarer covered with dummy's jack and claimed. If East held the queen, declarer would ruff and a long club would be established; if West held the queen, the jack would be the fulfilling trick.

The Magic Easter Bunny

By Blair Harrell

One day I was playing with my friend. Then I saw a magic bunny. My friend was so scared that she ran home. Then the magic bunny said, "Would you like to go with me?"

I said, "I would like to go with you."

She brought me to her kingdom in the land called Bunnyland. There were a lot of golden bunny statues and pictures of famous magic bunnies. It was very beautiful. I met the King and Queen Bunny. They were pink and white rabbits with wings and crowns on their heads. The queen had bracelets on her hands and necklaces on her neck with lots of jewels. They were rich.

They made me clean the castle. I was their slave. I had to clean up a lot of rabbit tracks because they had mud all over their feet. Then I had to clean up all the lettuce and carrots that were on the floor in the castle kitchen. I had to clean up the egg shells and egg paint in their workshop. I was tired of cleaning up. They said I could rest a little while.

The King and Queen Bunny fell asleep and I went out a door which was opened and got home safely.

My Easter Bunny

By Crystal Daniels

There was a bunny who lived in a little house in a beautiful forest. He was called the Easter Bunny and he was white, gray and black. He would deliver eggs every Easter. He loved carrots. He had a white, fluffy, soft tail. He hopped real high and he could jump over the highest fence. He had big ears with pink in the middle. He had a black nose. He loves you!

Crystal Daniels, 9, a student at Ayden Elementary School receives special mention.

Tornado Day

By Kendall Byrum

Yesterday the wind started blowing hard. Mrs. Macleod just finished reading a story. Then the wind started blowing harder. Mrs. Brewington was reading to the class about tornados. Then Mrs. Warren came rushing in and said to go to the cafeteria. It got real windy and the lights went off. Kristen and I started crying. We got real scared. After it settled down, Mrs. Medlin got her guitar and we sang some songs.

The Angel Rabbit

By Alana Rhodes

Once upon a time there was a little rabbit named Tom. He was a smart little Easter rabbit. One day when he was painting eggs he saw the fairy. That fairy turned the rabbit into an angel rabbit. He learned how to fly. With his wings he flew all around the place. He thought it was fun. He wished to never stop flying.

He met a friend. She was a girl. He flew over to her. She loved the rabbit so he had a home. The girl's name was Jennie. The rabbit helped the girl a lot. It put light bulbs in when the light bulbs blew. It could kill flies and mosquitoes that flew in and were high on the walls. He could chase bad animals away. Jennie was safe with the rabbit.

Angel Bunny

By Angel Moore

There was an Easter Bunny. She was hiding eggs down by a lake in the park. She heard a little child crying. She went to save the child. The child was about to drown. The Easter Bunny became an angel Easter Bunny. Instead of giving eggs and Easter baskets, she went around saving little children from danger.

Federal Facts

Department of Education

A member of the executive branch of government is the Department of Education. Education had been a part of another department until it was granted Cabinet status in 1979. The head of the agency is called the secretary of education and is appointed by the president with the Senate's approval. The secretary of education is 16th in line to serve as president in an emergency. Today more than 5,200 people serve as employees in this agency.

There are many responsibilities of the Department of Education. They provide money for public schools, colleges, vocational education, gifted students, and handicapped or disadvantaged students. It collects information or data on education and sponsors research to improve education. The department provides law enforcement education for the Department of Justice and has responsibility for some of the National Science Foundation's programs.

The U.S. Department of Education's major function is to supplement or aid the local and state offices of education.

Send In Your Entries To Expressions

The Daily Reflector is looking for elementary, middle, and high school students to draw pictures, write stories, essays and poems. Each week we will publish the best writing and drawing. The winner of each will receive $2. We will publish stories and art work we feel should receive special mention.

Entries must be original. Drawings must be in ink, crayon, markers or paint on thick colored paper. Please no pencil. Entries will be held for a period of ninety days and will be considered for that period of time. Entries will be returned if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is included.

Parents or teachers who sign the entry form should monitor for good taste and plagiarism.

Go Light, Go Quick, Go Easy

By Rose Dosti
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Have you decided, like many of us who want to keep weight down and health status up, to "go light" on cooking?

You know. Low-fat and low-calorie cooking. But you probably also want the cooking to be glamorous and appetizing, and last but not least, fast and easy.

Tall order, yes, but we are here to help.

We have put together a group of recipes that we hope will give the cook a good idea of how simple it is to reduce fat and calories in almost any recipe you choose without loss of taste or looks. You'll get excellent results by using proper ingredients and cooking methods that are aimed at reducing fat while keeping appeal high.

In the recipes given here, we try to show how normally healthy persons can reduce fat content, not by eliminating fat, but by cutting down.

Some red meats contain more fat than others. Meats such as sirloin, top loin, chuck arm and blade and round beef contain less total fat than brisket, rib roast and tenderloin. However, taste often dictates choice, and moderation should, therefore, be a guide.

Steaming, poaching and broiling will automatically cut fat content, because little or no extra fat is necessary in these cooking methods. But you won't have to eliminate grilling or stir-frying if you reduce the amount of fat in the recipe. Investing in non-stick skillets can help too. (Using liquid fat will help keep cholesterol down, as well.)

In our recipe for Grilled Chicken Wrapped in Radicchio, we used only 2 teaspoons oil instead of the 2 tablespoons called for in the original recipe, (a saving of 135 calories) to cook the radicchio rolls in a skillet. We also used 2 teaspoons oil in a pasta dish containing tomatoes. The same dish using the normal amount of fat (about one quarter cup butter) would have contained more than 300 additional calories.

A skillet dish in which vegetables are combined with eggs for a brunch entree uses only 2 teaspoons of oil to cook the vegetables before adding eggs for poaching. Eggs are an excellent low calorie and fat alternative to most meats, chicken with skin and even some high fat fish such as salmon, trout or mackerel, for persons without cholesterol restrictions. An egg contains 4.6 grams total fat (1.7 grams saturated fat), but 275 milligrams cholesterol, compared with 27 grams total (10.8 grams saturated fat) and 85 milligrams cholesterol for ground meat, and 14 grams total fat (4.4 grams saturated fat), and 91 milligrams cholesterol for roast chicken with skin. We used less-fatty ground turkey instead of beef for a Greek-Style burger, and lean sirloin steak (instead of the more fatty tender cuts) for a stir-fry steak and potato dish.

Lean leg of lamb was the choice for a curry using lean meat. You can try the same recipe with skinless chicken, turkey, shrimp, fish or vegetables, as well.

Low-fat yogurt is used in place of sour cream for a sauce with the burger and scallop kebabs that are cooked on the grill or under the broiler.

And a Garden Turkey Salad, which can be made with fresh or canned turkey, is a mildly seasoned salad platter overflowing with fresh vegetables. Simple ingredients take on a whole new flavor when teamed with the turkey and topped with a light Dijon dressing.

GARDEN TURKEY SALAD

2 tbsps. olive oil
½ tsp. Dijon-style mustard
½ tsp. sugar
1 large clove garlic, minced
5 oz. white turkey meat (fresh or canned)
¼ lb. small new potatoes, cooked and quartered
¼ lb. whole green beans, steamed and rinsed with cold water

Lettuce leaves
In a small bowl, combine lemon juice, oil, mustard, sugar and garlic. In medium bowl, gently toss 2 tablespoons of the dressing with turkey; set aside. Arrange potatoes, green beans, tomatoes and turkey on lettuce leaves. Drizzle with remaining dressing.

GRILLED CHICKEN WRAPPED IN RADICCHIO

6 small boneless, skinless chicken half breasts, butterflied

Mildly seasoned Garden Turkey salad uses simple ingredients for a light platter

Dash cayenne pepper
Salt, pepper
18 tangerine segments (3 tangerines)
6 large radicchio leaves
2 tbsps. olive oil
Hot cooked rice

Open chicken breasts and sprinkle with mint and cayenne. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Arrange 3 tangerine segments lengthwise over each breast.

Roll breasts, jellyroll fashion, tucking in ends. Place each over radicchio leaf and wrap, fastening edges with wood pick.

Place rolls in skillet with ½-inch chicken broth and bring to boil. Reduce heat, cover and simmer 15 minutes.

Drain liquid and add olive oil to skillet. Heat, then toss rolls in hot oil until radicchio wrapping is lightly browned. Or brush rolls with olive oil and place under broiler to brown tops lightly. Serve with hot cooked rice. Makes 6 servings.

SESAME SCALLOPS WITH CILANTRO YOGURT SAUCE

Juice of 1 lime
Sesame seeds
½ onion, grated
2 cloves garlic, crushed
2 tbsps. chopped cilantro
1 cup plain yogurt
Salt, pepper

Rinse scallops several times to remove sand particles. Dip in ½ of lime juice and roll in sesame seeds. Thread on skewers and grill or place under broiler and broil until done on all sides, turning often and basting with remaining lime juice.

Combine onion, garlic, cilantro and yogurt. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Pour over scallops to serve. Makes 6 servings.

LAMB CURRY-ORANGE KEBABS

1 lb. lamb, cut in uniform 1-inch cubes
Salt, pepper

1 onion, minced
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 tsp. oil
Juice of 1 orange
1 tbsp. Madras curry powder
Orange slices
Thread lamb cubes onto 6 (6-inch) bamboo skewers. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Place under broiler or over hot coals and cook until browned on all sides, turning often. Set aside.

Meanwhile, saute onion and garlic in oil in 8-inch skillet until onion is tender. Add orange juice and Madras curry powder and stir until smooth. Simmer, covered, 10 minutes over low heat.

Arrange kebabs on platter and pour sauce over. Garnish with orange slices. Makes 6 servings.

ANGEL HAIR PASTA WITH TOMATO VINAIGRETTE

4 tomatoes, diced
1 clove garlic, minced

Cut Fat In Diet With Tips

By Toni Tipton
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The following is a list of tips and simple substitutions that can help maintain a diet that derives only 30 percent of its total calories from fat. Keep in mind that the recommendation also stipulates that the fat be equally distributed among polyunsaturated, monounsaturated and saturated fat, each responsible for no more than 10 percent.

"To reduce the intake of dietary fat," said Darlene Dougherty, president of the American Dietetic Association, "avoid what I call the worst offenders • including fried foods, rich sauces, whipped cream, fatty or heavily marbled meats and high-fat desserts."

• Steam, boil or bake vegetables and season them with herbs and spices rather than sauces, margarine or butter.

• Potatoes, whole-grain breads and pasta supply significant amounts of carbohydrate and fiber in the diet, but use low-fat preparation methods to serve them. Avoid frying potatoes, spreading whole-grain breads with high-calorie spreads or topping pasta with rich sauces.

• Use egg whites instead of whole eggs in cooking and baking. Or, use ¼ cup egg substitute in place of each whole egg.

• Substitute low-fat cheeses such as ricotta and mozzarella made from part skim milk or low-fat cottage cheese for American or Cheddar, cream or semisoft cheeses such as Brie.

• Avoid the use of whole milk and cream in sauces, on hot and cold cereals or with beverages and opt, instead, for nonfat or evaporated skim milk.

• Instead of heavily marbled or fatty meats (ground beef is one of the highest), sausage, bacon and organ meats choose lean cuts such as flank and round steak, white meat poultry without skin, most fish and veal cuts.

• Choose tuna packed in water over tuna packed in oil for lunch and spare 7 grams of fat. Make sandwiches from sliced roasted turkey breast instead of turkey and other processed deli meats, which can be sources of hidden fat.

• Low or unsalted soda, rye and some whole-grain crackers are better options than butter-type or round snack crackers. Four saltines offer about 1 gram of fat while round snack crackers offer about 1 gram of fat per cracker.

• Select English muffins, bagels, yeast breads and tortillas over muffins, waffles, biscuits, croissants, sweet rolls, doughnuts, fried breads and coffeecakes.

• Most cereals are better options than granola, except when the cereals contain excessive sugar (1 gram of sugar is equivalent to 5 teaspoons).

• During grilling season, barbecue chicken without the skin instead of beef and pork ribs.

• Rich gourmet-type vanilla ice cream contains as much as 24 grams of fat per cup, while the same size serving of ice milk contains 6 grams of fat.

Nutrition Can Cut Food Bill

March is National Nutrition Month, a good time for taking a thoughtful look at our diets and considering where improvements can be made. But looking for better nutrition does not have to mean looking for more expensive foods. In fact, selecting foods wisely can actually help save money while you eat better.

Some of the most dramatic savings can be accomplished by simply cutting back on high fat and sugary items, such as baked goods, soft drinks, presweetened cereals and chip-type snacks. These items offer little nutrition, but can really hike your grocery bill.

In the meat department, look for chicken, turkey or lean cuts of meat that are typically less expensive than more fatty cuts. Sausage, bacon and processed luncheon meats are other high-price, high-fat items that can be limited. And consider using economical legumes, such as dried peas, beans and lentils, to supply some of your protein needs.

Add-ons like sour cream, butter

Pasta with a difference: a light, tuna sauce and rich sauces add to the cost of your meals and subtract from their healthfulness by increasing your fat consumption. If a dish needs a little more flavor, try adding a dash of your favorite herb or spice, or a splash of lemon juice.

Convenience foods can spell disaster for both your budget and nutrition goals. Avoid prepared potatoes (dried and frozen), rice mixes and instant rices, and packaged macaroni and spaghetti dinners. Most represent higher costs for reduced nutritional values.

Frozen dinners, frozen vegetables with high fat butter or cream sauces, and most of the packaged

Guidelines For Nutrition

Dear Readers: We were pleased to have Dr. Victor Herbert in our town recently to discuss Nutrition Facts and Fallacies. Dr. Herbert was invited by the medical student nutrition interest group, a group of students and faculty working to bring attention to nutrition issues in patient care. Dr. Herbert, who is nationally known as a "nutrition quack-buster," said to be able to detect nutrition misinformation, you need to know some simple basic facts about nutrition.

He said you can understand nutrition if you understand three words, four food groups and seven dietary guidelines.

The three basic words are: moderation, variety and balance. The food groups are: four servings of fruits and vegetables; four servings of breads and cereals; two servings for adults, three servings for children and four servings for teens and pregnant women of milk and dairy products; and two servings of high protein foods like beans, meat and fish.

The Seven Dietary Guidelines you have read here before are:

1. Eat a variety of food.
2. Maintain desirable weight.
3. Avoid too much fat, saturated fat and cholesterol

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

4. Eat foods with adequate starch and fiber.
5. Avoid too much sugar.
6. Avoid too much sodium.
7. If you drink alcoholic beverages, do so in moderation.

He said that if you follow these ideas, you'll probably be OK.

Dr. Herbert told us false information about food and nutrition is really information with important points missing. He said, for example, that we hear the good things about vitamins or about specific foods, but we don't hear about their downside. We can hear that a certain vitamin can do something wonderful, but the salesperson doesn't tell you you'll get a rash or have another side effect. He reminded us that too much of anything be it a nutrient or a food, can be bad for you.

Dr. Herbert is a physician as well as an attorney fighting health and nutrition misinformation and fraud. The National Council Against Health Fraud Inc., Box 1276, Loma Linda, CA 92354 has a regular newsletter that evaluates product claims and misinformation. For those of you interested, write Dr. Herbert for information.

Dear Readers: I was reading about new food products and saw that "Pupsicles" are coming soon. The Associated Ice Cream Company is introducing frozen treats for dogs called "Frosty Paws." What next?

I am pleased to report, too, that Mrs. Fields, one of my favorite and expensive cookie stores, is added oat bran muffins. Now, when I have a Mrs. Fields bag in my hand, you'll have to wonder if it's a cookie or an oat bran muffin.

sauce mixes are other product categories that may offer convenience, but often represent less nutrition and higher costs.

The American Institute for Cancer Research suggests that you stock up on fresh fruits and vegetables — and focus on those in season, when they will cost the least and offer the most nutrition. Be wary of marked down, older fruits and vegetables; they lose significant amounts of nutrients with age and poor handling, and may be no bargain at all.

The following recipe offers an economical change from meat sauce for pasta by using tuna as its protein source. Garlic, oregano and a hint of cayenne pepper add interesting flavors. Use whole wheat pasta for added fiber and other nutrients.

PASTA WITH TUNA SAUCE

- 1 tbsp. olive oil
- 2 garlic cloves, minced
- 2 6 1/2-oz. cans water-packed tuna, drained
- 1 32-oz. can tomato puree
- 2 tbsps. fresh parsley, minced (or 3 tsp. dried)
- 1/2 tsp. oregano
- 1/4-1/2 tsp. cayenne pepper
- 3/4 lb. pasta preferably whole wheat
- 3 tbsps. parmesan cheese, grated

Heat the oil in a large skillet over medium heat. Add the garlic and saute, stirring constantly, until it is just golden. Add the remaining ingredients except the pasta and cheese. Simmer, uncovered, over low heat for about 15 minutes. Add some water if the sauce gets too thick.

Meanwhile, cook the pasta in boiling water until it is tender but still firm. Drain. Serve immediately. Top with the sauce and cheese.

This recipe yields 4 servings, with a fat content of 7 grams and 615 calories per serving.

Missing lunch will not fog your mind, but you will be meaner because you are running on empty, warns Dr. David Kritchevsky, a nutrition expert from Philadelphia and a past president of the American Institute of Nutrition.

"When you are satisfied in whatever it is that you want, your general demeanor is better because your mood is better," he said. "So, eating a well-rounded diet — a little bit of everything, but not too much of anything — becomes very important."

You should not deny yourself anything, because no single meal is going to cure you or kill you, said the associate director of the University of Pennsylvania's Wistar Institute of Anatomy and Biology.

"Food is not a panacea, it's not a talisman, it just helps you get along and it should be there to be enjoyed," he says. "You don't necessarily have to have variety, but variety is what makes eating fun."

If you have ever wondered if there is any danger associated with a diet that stresses fish and chicken almost to the exclusion of meat, the answer is no, according to the specialist.

"Fish and chicken should really be thought of as meat — they're flesh," he said. "One of the big objections to meat has been that it contains more fat. Part of that is because our idea of a real good steak is a marbled steak. Now that the meat industry has recognized the excess fat content, the meat has been trimmed."

"Fish, chicken and meat all have roughly the same amount of cholesterol — 50 to 70 milligrams per three-ounce serving, which is not exorbitantly high. And now that the meat industry is growing the beef leaner, fish and chicken are not that much less fatty."

While you would not be in any real danger if you had not had a Delmonico steak in six months, you could be robbing yourself in one sense, he said, because meat has a lot more B vitamins and minerals than either fish or chicken.

"Nobody recognizes meat for that, but meat has a lot more iron and zinc than either fish or chicken, and we're beginning to find out that those minerals are very much needed," he says. "They are co-factors in a lot of enzyme systems. They're what we need to digest food and to create energy in the body."

Zinc deficiency, for example, will result in no growth, Kritchevsky says. In a study done many years ago in the Middle East, researchers found a village filled with what appeared to be 12-year-old boys. They turned out to be men up to 25 years of age who were stunted because they were zinc-deficient.

"They began feeding them zinc and they began to grow," he says.

True vegetarians have to be careful, he further says. They have to recognize the importance of zinc and make sure they get their minerals through tablets or a greater variety of vegetables than they normally would eat.

Eggs — a very controversial food item — are not harmful, according to Kritchevsky.

"In general, eggs are the best source of high-grade protein for poor people or sick people or little people, and that is sort of lost in the fear of eggs," he said. "Even people in the American Heart Association say that a couple of eggs a week are not harmful."

"And, that's a big difference from what they used to say. Fifteen years ago if you uttered the word 'egg' in their office they would wash your mouth with corn oil."

Nutrition is an ongoing science, and scientists like Kritchevsky keep learning new things.

For instance, consider mono-unsaturated oil — the kind that occurs in olive oil mostly. Until a few years ago, people said it was a neutral fat, it didn't raise cholesterol, it didn't lower cholesterol.

"Now, they have found that it does, indeed, lower cholesterol."

A Steaming Bowl Of Homemade Soup Gives Goodness That Is Hard To Beat

One of the best ways to fight the raw, cold days of early Spring is with a steaming bowl of homemade vegetable soup. A thick, hearty soup not only warms you up, but provides nutritional goodness that's hard to beat.

Fresh vegetable soups are a delicious way to include more healthful vegetables in your family's diet, a practice strongly recommended by the American Institute for Cancer Research. Research has shown that many vegetables provide vitamins, fiber and other nutrients which may be important in reducing cancer risk.

But don't make the mistake of countering the healthful benefits of vegetables by making them part of a high fat soup. While you want to avoid cream-based soup recipes that are high in fat, creamy-texture vegetable soups can easily be prepared by blending potatoes as thickening and adding skim milk or lowfat yogurt for enrichment. Some delicious and healthful possibilities for such cream-type soups include broccoli, carrot, cauliflower, asparagus, zucchini, tomato, spinach, watercress, cucumber, red pepper, pumpkin, turnip, rutabaga or leaf lettuce. Onions or leeks add zip to the flavor.

Once the vegetables are softened by simmering in just enough water to cover them, puree the soup in a food mill, food processor or blender. Then return it to the pan and add the skim milk or yogurt before serving.

Here's a delicious, hearty, but non-cream soup with a unique herb flavor from the pesto topping. Check a specialty grocer if your supermarket doesn't stock fresh basil.

MINISTRONE WITH PESTO

- 1 cup (1/2 lb.) dry small red beans
- 1 qt. water
- 1 14-oz. can whole tomatoes and juice
- 1 cup (1 medium to large) onion, chopped
- 3/4 cup (2 medium) carrots, shredded
- 1/2 cup celery, finely chopped
- 1 garlic clove, crushed
- 1/4 tsp. pepper
- 1 cup cabbage, shredded
- 3/4 cup water
- 1/3 cup (3 oz.) tomato paste
- 1/4 cup salad macaroni
- Pesto (if desired, see recipe below)

Combine the beans and one quart of water in a large pan of Dutch oven. Heat to a boil, and boil for 2 minutes. Remove from the heat, cover, and let stand 1 hour.

Minestrone with pesto fights off a spring chill

Stir in the onions, carrots, celery, garlic and pepper. Stir the mixture and heat until boiling. Reduce the heat and simmer gently, covered, until the beans are tender (about 2 hours). Add the tomatoes with their juice. Stir to break up the tomatoes. Next add the cabbage, the remaining 3/4 cup of water, tomato paste and macaroni. Simmer the ingredients gently, covered, for 20 minutes or until the macaroni is al dente. Spoon the mixture into bowls, and top each with a spoonful of Pesto.

To make the Pesto topping, place 1/2 cup of fresh basil leaves, 1/2 cup fresh or frozen (but thawed first) spinach leaves, 2 tablespoons of grated Romano cheese, 2 tablespoons of olive oil and 1 tablespoon of chopped fresh parsley in a blender jar. Blend them until the mixture forms a smooth paste.

This recipe yields 6 bowls of 1 1/4 cups each, with a fat content of 6 grams and 235 calories per serving.

Light Meals Are Quick, Easy

- 2 tbsps. chopped fresh basil
- 2 tsp. oil
- 1 tbsp. vinegar
- Dash red pepper flakes
- Salt, pepper

Cook pasta in boiling, salted water until tender. Drain.

Combine tomatoes, garlic, basil, oil, vinegar, red pepper flakes in skillet and season to taste with salt and pepper. Heat until tomatoes are barely heated through and still firm, about 3 minutes. Pour over drained pasta. Makes 4 servings.

EGGPLANT, LEEKS, TOMATO AND EGG SKILLET

- 1 Italian eggplant
- 1 large leek
- 2 tomatoes, peeled
- 2 tbsps. olive oil
- 1 onion, minced
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- Salt, pepper
- 4 eggs
- Chopped parsley

Cut eggplant into large dice. Thoroughly rinse leek and cut into thin slices. Dice tomatoes.

Heat oil in large skillet. Add onion and garlic and saute until onion is tender. Add eggplant, leek, tomatoes and salt and pepper to taste. Toss to mix well. Cover and simmer over medium-low heat 20 minutes.

Uncover and break eggs over casserole. Simmer until eggs are poached as desired. Sprinkle with parsley. Makes 4 servings.

TURKEY BURGER IN PITA BREAD

- 1 lb. ground turkey, chicken, lamb or veal
- 1 slice Italian bread, soaked and squeezed dry
- 1 egg
- 1 small onion, minced
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 2 tbsps. chopped fresh mint leaves
- 1 tbsp. chopped fresh parsley
- Paprika
- Salt, pepper
- 6 pieces pita bread
- 1 cup torn lettuce
- 1 tomato, cubed
- Yogurt Sauce

Combine turkey, soaked bread, egg, onion, garlic, mint leaves, parsley, and paprika, salt and pepper to taste. Mix well.

Form into well-rounded patties. Broil or pan-fry without fat until browned on both sides.

Serve in pockets of pita bread stuffed with lettuce and tomatoes. Top with Yogurt Sauce. Makes 6 servings.

Yogurt Sauce

- 1 cup plain yogurt
- 1 small clove garlic, crushed
- 1 tsp. dried or fresh chopped mint leaves
- Salt, pepper
- Combine yogurt, garlic, mint leaves and salt and pepper to taste. Makes 1 cup.

STIR-FRIED STEAK AND POTATOES WITH GRAIN MUSTARD SAUCE

- 1 lb. sirloin steak, sliced into strips 1/2-inch wide
- 1 large white onion, halved and sliced
- 1/2 cup dry red wine
- 2 tbsps. grain mustard
- Salt, pepper
- 4 small cooked potatoes, cubed
- Chopped parsley

Toss steak strips in hot wok or skillet without fat until seared. Add onion and toss until onion is slightly browned. Add wine and simmer over high heat until wine is reduced to glaze. Stir in mustard and salt and pepper to taste. Add potatoes and toss lightly. Sprinkle with parsley. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

LEMON-HERB FISH BAKE

- 2 tbsps. oil
- 1/4 cup dry white wine
- 1 tsp. grated lemon zest
- 2 tbsps. lemon juice
- 2 tbsps. chopped parsley
- 1 tsp. ground thyme
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 4 fish steaks (halibut, snapper, sword fish or 4 individual trout)
- Combine oil, wine, lemon zest and juice, parsley, thyme and 3/4 tsp. salt in shallow baking dish. Place fish in marinade, turning to coat. Marinate 30 minutes.

Bake, uncovered 15 minutes, basting frequently with marinade. Fish is done when flakes easily and flesh is opaque. Makes 4 servings.

New Egg Has Higher Levels Of Cholesterol

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The emergence of Rosemary Farm's lowered cholesterol egg late last year was thought to be a boon for the egg industry until state officials announced that the reductions were not as significant as previously claimed.

The Santa Maria, Calif.-based company was then required to relabel its packaging to more accurately reflect the eggs' cholesterol content. The revised totals, however, were still lower than most commercial varieties but not the breakthrough previously touted.

On the heels of this incident comes a warning from the University of California, Davis that other producers are erroneously claiming that their eggs offer reduced cholesterol levels. In this case, the statements are being made by producers of the blue, or Araucana, egg. The unusual color is the work of a particular chicken species native to Mexico and South America.

Home Economists Share Test-Kitchen Pointers

By Nancy Byal
BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

Your Test Kitchen home economists are on a baking binge, testing breads, cakes, pies and desserts for a new book. They've shared these ideas you can use to make baking easier and baked products better.

Ingredients

Eggs are easier to separate when cold. But for best volume, let them stand at room temperature 1 hour before beating.

Brown sugar too hard? Use your microwave to soften it: In a 1-cup measure cook 1/2 cup water, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) for 1 to 2 minutes or until boiling. Place brown sugar in a microwave-safe container near the water. Heat, uncovered, on high until softened. Allow 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 minutes for 1/2 pound brown sugar and 2 to 3 minutes for 1 pound.

Home-Style Cooking Is Returning

BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

Home-style cooking is making news as cooks of all ages rediscover meat loaf, mashed potatoes and other favorites we loved at Mom's table. One recipe I've never stopped enjoying is this swiss steak. The meat is easy to prepare, needs no attention while cooking, and fills the kitchen with a wonderful real-food aroma.

DEVILED SWISS STEAK

2 tbsps. all-purpose flour
1 tbsp. dry mustard
1/2 tsp. pepper
1 1/2 to 2 lbs. beef bottom round steak, cut 1-inch thick
2 tbsps. cooking oil
1 cup water
1 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
1 tsp. instant beef bouillon granules
Two 4-oz. cans whole mushrooms, drained

In a small bowl combine flour, mustard and pepper. Sprinkle half the flour mixture over one side of steak; cover with clear plastic wrap and pound with flat side of meat mallet or edge of heavy saucer. Repeat on other side with remaining flour mixture. Discard plastic wrap.

In a large skillet brown steak on both sides in hot oil. Drain off fat. Combine water, Worcestershire sauce and bouillon granules; pour over steak. Spread mushrooms over steak. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and cook over low heat 1 1/2 to 1 3/4 hours or until tender.

Transfer steak and mushrooms to a serving platter. Skim fat from juices; spoon some of juices over steak. Pass remaining juices. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Microwave Lamb Curry In A Flash

BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

Remember when making curry took all day? With your microwave, you can make this delicious, mildly spicy curry in just 15 minutes' cooking time. Serve with hot cooked couscous and pass peanuts and shaved coconut for toppers.

MICROWAVE LAMB CURRY

1 stalk celery, sliced (1/2 cup)
1/4 cup chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced
1/4 cup all-purpose flour
3 to 4 tps. curry powder
2 tps. instant chicken bouillon granules
1/4 tsp. pepper
1 medium apple, cored and coarsely chopped (1 cup)
1 cup water
1 cup milk
1/3 cup raisins
Salt

In a 2-quart microwave-safe casserole crumble lamb. Add celery, onion and garlic. Cook, covered, on 100 percent power (high) for 5 to 7 minutes or until no pink remains and celery and onion are tender, stirring once. Drain off fat.

Stir in flour, curry powder, bouillon granules and pepper. Then stir in apple, water, milk and raisins. Cook, uncovered, on high for 8 to 10 minutes or until thickened and bubbly, stirring after every minute. Cook 1 minute more. Season to taste with salt. Makes 4 servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 359 cal., 27 g pro., 48 g carb., 6 g fat, 71 mg chol., 346 mg sodium. U.S. RDA: 18 percent thiamine, 22 percent riboflavin, 27 percent niacin, 12 percent calcium, 18 percent iron.

You can melt baking chocolate right in the paper in your microwave because the chocolate doesn't lose its shape. Allow 1 to 2 minutes on 100 percent power (high) for 1 ounce (1 square); 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 minutes for 2 ounces (2 squares). Because the chocolate won't look melted, test it with a spoon or fork to see if it's completely softened.

When buying a product to substitute for butter in baking, choose a stick product labeled

"margarine." Products labeled "spread" are intended for table use and are not satisfactory for baking.

Substitutions

For sour milk or buttermilk, substitute an equal amount of soured milk: Combine 1 tablespoon lemon juice or vinegar and enough whole milk to make 1 cup total. Let the mixture stand 5 minutes before using.

No self-rising flour? For each cup, substitute 1 cup all-purpose flour plus 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt and 1/4 teaspoon baking soda.

For each 1-ounce square unsweetened baking chocolate, you can substitute 3 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa powder plus 1 tablespoon margarine or butter.

Measuring

When measuring oil and honey or molasses for a recipe, measure the oil first. Then use the same cup to measure the sweetener; it will pour out easily without sticking to the cup.

To measure 2/3 cup stick butter or margarine, cut off one stick at the 1/3 cup mark on the wrapper. Use the small portion (not the 1/3 cup) plus one whole stick.

Pies

Transfer pastry by rolling the pastry around the rolling pin, then unrolling over the pie plate.

Don't trim the bottom pastry for a two-crust pie until after filling.

You'll be sure of having enough pastry left to seal well and make a pretty edge.

Cookies

When baking bar cookies, line the pan with foil (grease if necessary) and pour in batter. Bake and cool the cookies; then lift out the foil. It's easy to cut neat pieces and saves the pan from knife cuts. To freeze, wrap the slab of cookies before cutting; it takes less freezer space than cartons of cut cookies.

Oat Bran Recipes Attract Health-Conscious

By Toni Tipton
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

A woman at a bakery in Los Angeles recently sauntered up to the counter to ask the clerk if the outlet's brand of oat bran muffins could reduce her cholesterol.

"I'm afraid I really don't know," the clerk responded. "Our bakery items are already prepared when we get them. We just bake the dough."

The customer seemed a bit confused, because the young woman behind the magnificent display of baked goods had failed to answer her question. Nonetheless, the customer headed for the bin of oat bran muffins.

To her dismay, the bin was empty — another example of consumer demand for a product with a perceived health effect.

Manufacturers have been quick to respond to that demand. They tout oat bran as an ingredient in everything from gourmet cold breakfast cereals to granola-type snack bars. Gourmet cookie makers are even adding bran cookies to their product lines.

Health experts claim, and opinion polls indicate, a growing interest by consumers in reducing their blood cholesterol to acceptable levels. But often the amount of oat bran in commercial products — when compared to that given to participants in the study that recognized the cholesterol-lowering effects of the fiber — produces insignificant health benefits.

It is important to keep in mind that the study group consumed two ounces of oat bran each day, which represents about two-thirds of a cup of the insoluble fiber. And they followed a low-fat diet that derived only 30 percent of its calories from fat.

This can easily be translated into a one-ounce serving of hot oat bran cereal, oatmeal or cold oat cereal in the morning, oat bran or oatmeal bread with sandwiches for lunch, oat bran muffins as an afternoon snack and an oatmeal cookie for dessert. Spoon a tablespoon or two of oat bran into savory dishes or into crust mixtures for oven-baked chicken. Substituting oats for up to one-third of the flour called for in some recipes is another option.

Maintaining a low-fat diet regimen is also vital. Use non-fat milk, lean meat and egg whites instead of whole eggs in recipes. Remove the skin from chicken before cooking and coat the chicken with an oat bran crumb mixture and bake instead of frying.

OAT BRAN LOAF

- 2 cups water
- 1 cup plus 2 tbsps. oat bran
- 2 pkgs. dry yeast
- 1/4 cup honey
- 1/4 cup oil
- 1 1/2 tps. salt
- 4 1/2 to 5 cups flour
- Cinnamon Date Filling, optional
- 1 egg white

Bring 1 1/2 cups water to boil. Remove from heat and stir in 1 cup oat bran. Blend well. Set aside to cool.

Place 1/2 cup warm water (105 to 115 degrees) in large bowl. Sprinkle in yeast and stir until dissolved. Stir in oat bran mixture, honey, oil, salt and 2 cups flour. Beat until smooth. Stir in enough additional flour to make soft dough.

Knead lightly on floured surface until smooth and elastic, about 8 to 10 minutes. Place in greased bowl, turning to grease top. Let rise in warm, place until doubled, about 35 minutes.

Punch dough down. Divide into 2 equal parts. Roll each piece to 16 by 7 inches. Sprinkle each piece with half of Cinnamon Date Filling. Roll up from short ends to make loaves. Place seam sides down in 2 greased 8 1/2- by 4 1/2-inch loaf pans. Cover and let rise in warm place until doubled, about 35 minutes.

Brush with egg white, sprinkle with remaining oat bran and bake at 375 degrees 35 minutes or until done. Remove from pans and cool on wire racks. Makes 2 loaves.

Cinnamon Date Filling

- 1 (8-oz.) package chopped dates
  - 1 cup oat bran
  - 2 tps. ground cinnamon
  - 1 egg white
- Combine dates, oat bran and cinnamon in small bowl. Stir in egg white and blend well.

PEACHY OAT MUFFINS

- 1 (16-oz.) can peach halves, in juice
- 2 egg whites, beaten
- 1/4 cup oil
- 1 tps. vanilla
- 1/2 tsp. grated orange zest
- 1/4 tsp. almond extract
- 1 cup flour
- 1 cup oats
- 3/4 cup brown sugar, packed
- 2 tps. baking powder
- 1 tsp. ground cinnamon
- 1/2 cup raisins

Drain peaches, reserving juice for other use. Chop 2 peach halves and set aside. Puree remaining peach halves to measure 1 cup. Combine peach puree, egg whites, oil, vanilla, orange zest and almond extract. Set aside.

Combine flour, oats, brown sugar, baking powder and cinnamon in large mixing bowl. Mix well. Pour liquid ingredients into dry ingredients and mix just until moistened. Fold in chopped peaches and raisins. Spoon into paper-lined muffin cups and bake on top oven rack at 400 degrees 20 minutes or until wood pick inserted in center comes out clean. Makes 12 servings.

ALMOND OAT COOKIES

- 3/4 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup margarine, softened
- 1/2 cup corn syrup
- 2 egg whites, lightly beaten
- 1 tsp. almond extract
- 2 1/4 cups oats

- 1 cup flour
- 1/2 tsp. baking soda
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 3 tps. sliced almonds

Beat together sugar, margarine and corn syrup until light and fluffy. Add egg whites and almond extract. Beat until blended. Gradually add combined oats, flour, soda and salt. Mix well. Stir in nuts and drop by scant 1/4-cup measure onto ungreased baking sheet. Gently press into 3-inch circles. Bake at 350 degrees 14 to 16 minutes or until light golden brown. Cool 1 minute on baking sheet. Remove to foil, then store tightly covered. Makes 1 dozen cookies.

THREE-GRAIN FILLED ONION RINGS

- 2 (8- to 10-oz.) sweet Spanish onions
- 1/2 cup flour
- 3 tps. cornmeal
- 3 tps. oat bran
- 2 tps. sugar
- 1 tsp. baking powder
- 1 tsp. baking soda
- 1/2 cup buttermilk
- 2 egg whites
- 2 tps. oil

Peel onions and cut crosswise into 1/2-inch slices.

Remove centers of onion slices to leave 1/4-inch thick rings. Reserve centers and end pieces for other use. Mix together flour, cornmeal, oat bran, sugar, baking powder and soda, buttermilk, egg whites and oil. Place onion rings on lightly oiled griddle, heated to medium heat or 350 degrees. Fill each ring with batter. Cook until bottom sides begin to brown. Turn and cook until other sides are done. Serve hot. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

ONION-PARMESAN OAT BRAN MUFFINS

- 1 cup finely chopped onions
- 1/4 cup plus 1 tps. oil
- 2 egg whites
- 3/4 cup non-fat milk
- 1 1/4 cups flour
- 3/4 cup oat bran
- 1 tsp. baking powder
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese

Saute onions in 1 tablespoon oil over medium heat until tender, about 5 minutes. Transfer to small bowl. Add remaining oil, egg whites and milk and beat to blend. Combine flour, oat bran, baking powder, salt and cheese in large bowl. Stir in liquid ingredients, mixing just until moistened. Spoon into 12 non-stick or paper-lined muffin cups. Bake at 375 degrees 18 to 20 minutes or until lightly browned. Serve warm. Makes 12 muffins.
