A Pitt County school bus and a car collided Wednesday in Greenville, injuring three students and two people in the car

Car-Bus Mishap Injures 5 People

Five people were injured — three of them students — when a car and a Pitt County school bus collided about 3:25 p.m. Wednesday at the intersection of Greene and Arthur streets.

Officers, who said investigation of the mishap is continuing, said the collision involved a car driven by Susan Tucker Holmes, 36, 510 Bremerton Drive, and a bus, carrying students from Wintergreen School, operated by Edwin Hayes Whitehurst, 21, of Route 1, Winterville.

Police said three students on the bus, as well as Mrs. Holmes and her young son, were treated at Pitt County Memorial Hospital for injuries they received in the collision and then released.

While no estimates of the damages caused by the wreck were available from investigators this morning, a spokesman for the county school bus garage said the bus, which was scheduled for replacement, would not be repaired.

Congress Opens Work On S&L Bill

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Members of the House Banking Committee today began the tortuous process of writing legislation to bail out the troubled savings and loan industry, voting on the first several of 165 proposed amendments.

The House Banking subcommittee on financial institutions, which includes all but four members of the full committee, voted 35-12 to adopt an amendment that would leave the S&L regulatory agency, the Federal Home Loan Bank System, with even less authority than proposed by President Bush.

The amendment, offered by Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, gives the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., rather than the bank system, primary authority to regulate state-chartered S&Ls.

The subcommittee, chaired by Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., also adopted by voice vote an amendment providing fixed four-year terms to the chairman and vice chairman of the FDIC, which now insures deposits in commercial banks and would also become responsible for insuring S&L accounts. The Bush administration had proposed making the chairman of the FDIC serve at the pleasure of the president.

A third amendment, offered by Rep. Stephen Neal, D-N.C., encourages state housing authorities to buy repossessed S&L properties from the federal government.

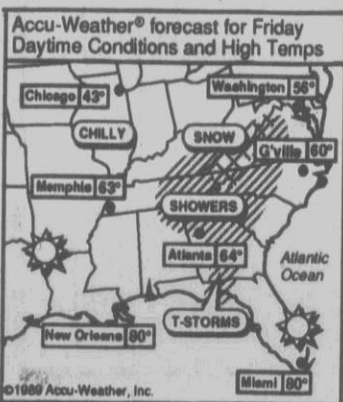

The subcommittee planned to meet all day today and for two days next week.

In a further indication that the legislation may face slow going, the full committee's chairman, Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, earlier said he doubted the subcommittee has set aside enough time and promised to reconsider any of the amendments if sponsors believe they received short shrift in the subcommittee.

"I'm not going to be party to a stampede, to act in great haste only to repent later at great leisure," he said.

In the Senate, the legislation appears to be moving at a faster pace. The Banking Committee chairman, Sen. Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich., told members of his panel that Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, intends to have the Senate vote on the bill during the week of April 17.

Source Of Oil Slick Uncertain

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

An oil slick discovered Tuesday afternoon in a creek feeding into the Tar River adjacent to New Street is being contained in the creek by Greenville fire-rescue personnel, but the source of the oil has not been found, officials said this morning.

Assistant Fire Chief Raymond Carney said firemen were continuing work they began Tuesday, monitoring the creek and changing the oil-absorbent material as it became saturated. Removal of the oil-absorbent material was done Wednesday afternoon, he said, and probably will be carried out again today.

Carney said the oil does not appear to have moved and the level of the creek does not appear to have risen. He said he is confident that the oil is being contained in the creek.

The creek is adjacent to a city recreation and park maintenance facility that once was the city public works garage. Recreation and parks personnel have removed one empty oil storage tank from the area and have dug around a second one, so far finding no leaks, said Walter Stasavich, the recreation and parks

WASHINGTON — Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner told Congress today that government and industry never had a contingency plan sufficient to handle an oil spill the size of the one caused by the Exxon Valdez tanker accident in Alaska.

He did not place the blame on anyone specifically, saying, "it is too early to have factually adequate evidence of culpability."

"But my impression is that a somewhat over-optimistic attitude crept in about our readiness and ability to deal with a spill of this magnitude, or even that an accident of this size could occur," Skinner said.

He told the Senate Commerce Committee that the Exxon Corp. did not have enough equipment on hand when the spill occurred March 24 in Prince William Sound, discharging 10 million gallons of crude oil.

"This was compounded by the remote location of the spill, but it goes without saying that every step of the planning for moving Alaskan oil by water had to assume a spill in just this locale," said Skinner.

He called for updating all contingency plans for oil transportation.

Related stories on A-12

"It is also time to reassess the need for comprehensive oil spill liability and compensation legislation," he said, noting that bills have been introduced but never passed by Congress.

Skinner also warned of problems that would occur if a foreign tanker, whose owner had fewer resources than Exxon, had a similar accident.

"There would be no means under current law to assure that damage costs are met," he said.

"Moreover, a significant proportion of the crude oil arriving in the United States is not effectively covered by the four existing U.S. statutes," Skinner said, naming sections of the Clean Water Act and the outer continental shelf, deepwater ports and trans-Alaska pipeline acts.

Exxon chairman L.G. Rawl also appeared before the committee.

Bush Administration Considers Gun Registration Rule

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration is considering a proposal to require that gun buyers register semiautomatic assault rifles of the kind linked to mounting drug-related violence.

Stephen Higgins, director of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, said that proposal, among others, is being studied by government agencies as the administration weighs additional steps to control the deadly weapons.

"I've been asked to give comments on that and a lot of other proposals that were made," Higgins said Wednesday. "The administration is involved in looking at the entire issue, getting input from a lot of people, of which this agency is one."

Another administration official, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said today that putting semiautomatic rifles in the same category as machine guns — requiring an FBI background check and a waiting period — is "one of the options" actively being considered.

The official also said that some steps to crack down on the sales of high-powered, rapid-fire weapons could be announced by the administration within the next few weeks.

An initial plan, dealing just with the District of Columbia, was to be unveiled on Monday by federal drug coordinator William J. Bennett. The official said this package would deal more with such issues as finding more prison space and expanded use of federal prosecutors than with the guns themselves, since the district already has tough gun-control laws on the books.

Higgins made his comments as he discussed the administration's move to widen its temporary import ban on assault rifles to include virtually all foreign-made models.

Earlier Wednesday, the White House had announced that 24 models of semiautomatic assault rifles were being added to the list of weapons already covered by the 90-day ban on imports imposed last month.

The initial import suspension covered as many as 400,000 weapons. The additional list covers permits to import up to 250,000 more, Higgins said.

"We think we've got 99.9 percent" of the foreign-made semiautomatic rifles, Higgins said.

The 90-day period for banning imports of semiautomatic weapons will enable ATF to determine if any of the weapons on the list are used for legitimate sporting purposes. The Gun Control Act of 1968 bans the importation of weapons that are not used for legitimate sporting purposes.

Hit and Run Incident

A 13-year-old boy was injured Wednesday morning after being knocked from the bicycle he was riding on 14th Street by a truck which did not stop at the scene.

Police identified the youth as Johnathan White Foley IV, of 1618 Greenville Blvd.

Investigators said Foley was stopped near the center line in the east-bound lane of 14th St., about .1 mile west of the Greenville Boulevard, when a west-bound truck struck a bag of baseball equipment Foley was carrying at about 8:32 a.m.

The force of the impact threw Foley from the bicycle. Police said the driver of the truck did not stop.

'Camper' Finds Life With Nature Just Fine Living Year-Round In An Indian-Style Teepee

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Eustace Conway went on a long camping trip and never came back.

That's how he describes his decision to live the way Indians did more than 400 years ago.

Dressed in self-made deerskin pants and a T-shirt, Conway visited students at Third Street School on Wednesday showing tools, clothing and other items he had made while living in a teepee in Boone for the last eight years. He also erected a teepee for the students to view and to walk through.

Conway is the grandson of the late Eustace Conway of Greenville, who worked with Imperial Tobacco Co., and the late Virginia B. Conway.

He said he became interested in Indian traditions while a youngster listening to Indian teachers during summers at Camp Sequoyah in Asheville.

After graduating from high school, Conway lived in Columbia, S.C., and Gastonia before touring the United States, Canada and Mexico. He received a bachelor's degree in anthropology and English from Appalachian State University.

It was during his college years that he began living in a teepee, he

Leukemia-Stricken Child Is Improving

Cinnamon Brown, a Cincinnati Children's Hospital patient who recently had her own treated bone marrow put back into her body, is showing signs of recovery, her father reports.

Robert Brown, a Robersonville native, said the 3-year-old leukemia patient now has the ANC cells that tell her doctors her body is benefiting from the autologous bone marrow surgery. Her count of ANC cells Wednesday was 99, her father said, and her doctors say when she has a count of 500 and maintains it three days she can go home to Warner Robins, Ga.

One of Cinnamon's doctors is Dr. Chris Johnsrude, who spent part of his youth in Greenville and graduated from the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

Brown and his wife, Belinda White Brown, have relative in the Robersonville area where both of them grew up. Local friends have been appealing for donations to assist the family. Donations may be sent to the Cinnamon Brown Assistance Fund, Robins Federal Credit Union, P.O. Box 2368, Warner Robins, Ga., 31093.

Inquiries may be made of Brown's sister, Essie Mae Spruill, Route 1, Box 202, Robersonville, N.C., 27871; phone, 795-4861.

It's Expo '89 Time

Cindy Hammond, director of sales at The Ramada Inn in Greenville, prepares her booth for today's opening of the fifth annual Expo '89, the commercial fair sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce. said. "Nobody really knew about it," he said of the 14-foot, round structure he called home. "I just kind of did it and didn't tell anybody."

The desire to be "close to nature" grew from a camping trip along the 2,000-mile Appalachian Trail, Conway said. "I went on a long camping trip and never came back," he said, explaining how confusing the modern world can be compared to the peace that can be found living with nature.

Conway said he has been accused of escaping reality by living in the woods, hunting for his food and using the skins and fur of his prey for clothing.

But, "this modern world is trying to escape reality," he said. The woods and the animals are real, and the lifestyle experienced by the Indians living in North Carolina existed for 12,000 years, Conway said.

The summer camp and experience have taught Conway the necessities to live in the woods, he said. He has lived with Indians in southern Mexico, Alaska, Arizona and North Carolina. He has kayaked more than 1,000 miles of ocean shoreline along Alaska's inland waterway and has served as leader of a Mississippi River canoeing expedition extending from St. Louis to New Orleans.

When talking to students, Conway said he tells about the environment using the Indian theme. "We teach people about taking care of the earth which is necessary for our survival," he said.

"What goes around comes around," is a modern saying that helps Conway explain the life cycles in the world, he said.

Conway said he teaches about the Indian culture, food, language, dance, tools, clothing, child care, psychology — life. He also discusses social and environmental issues such as suicide, depletion of the ozone layer, acid rain and water and air quality.

Conway is the founder of the American Indian Cultural Association of the Schiele Museum in Gastonia where he presents demonstrations throughout the year. He also conducts camps on his Turtle Island Preserve in Boone.

JUST ADD WATER

Ocean Pacific® began several years ago in Southern California as an association of close friends who shared a common love for the ocean. We began by making surfboards that earned immediate recognition for OP® within the California surf community.

As we grew and began selling our surfboards coast to coast, surf shops and fellow surfers confirmed our belief that there was a need for rugged surfwear. It was this need that prompted us to make our first pair of durable, long-lasting surf trunks that would stand up under the stresses of surfing. The design, performance and high quality of these trunks quickly established OP® as the leader among a demanding new breed of surfers.

At OP® we still surf, we still share the same close friendship, and we make only the best sportswear...because there is still a need. OP®...Wear the lifestyle.

Welding Shop Officer Dies From Gunshot

Greenville police said Archie Lee Oakley Sr., 52, of 2106 N. Village Drive was shot at his home about 10:15 p.m. Wednesday and died a little over an hour later at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Detective J.E. Harris said Oakley, who was president of Hardee-Cox Welding Shop, was found by his wife in a bedroom of the couple's home a short time after the shooting. The shooting was reported to police at 10:54 p.m.

Harris said Oakley had been shot one time in the head.

Other investigators said Oakley had worked late — until about 9:30 p.m. or 10 p.m. — at his shop at the intersection of Line Avenue and Farmville Boulevard. After he returned home, police said, he let another man into his house through the rear door and the two went to the front of the house.

Officers said that a few minutes later Oakley's wife, Gloria, heard a noise — like a door slamming or a gun shot — then heard someone leave through the front door. She told officers she then went to the front of the house and found Oakley, wounded, in the bedroom.

Oakley was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital, but was pronounced dead at 11:33 p.m.

Dr. Stanley Harris, regional state medical examiner, who was performing an autopsy on the body this morning, said Oakley died from a gunshot wound to the back of the head.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Anachronism?

Castro & The Winds Of Change

Mark it down for certain. The Soviets don't want to give up their relationship with Fidel Castro's Communist Cuba in the western hemisphere, but they do want to reduce the cost, thus cutting the drain on the Soviet economy.

Mikhail S. Gorbachev's visit to Cuba and Castro was not just for exchanging pleasantries. The Soviet leader undoubtedly told the bearded Cuban that the $5 billion per year the Soviet Union pays out to support the Cuban economy has to be reduced. He also likely told Castro that he should seek better relations and thus better trade with his western neighbors and particularly with the United States.

Overriding it all is the fact that Castro represents a philosophy from the past for Marxist nations. He was far more comfortable with a Stalin-like Soviet Union and has a distaste for glasnost. No matter. Castro's government would have collapsed long ago without the huge influx of Soviet monetary aid.

As it is, Castro is a quaint character of these times. He still appears at public functions in his combat uniform, boots, fatigue cap and ammo belt, the last of the Bolshevik-style revolutionists.

No doubt Gorbachev talked cordially with Castro, even though he might inwardly harbor a distaste for the soldier boy Cuban leader. Still Gorbachev will continue the nations' friendship, but make it clear there will be less financial aid coming. Gorbachev might also have found that Castro is out of touch with modern day diplomacy. He might even suspect that Castro's days are numbered as the number one man in Cuba. Certainly the Soviet diplomatic machinery is forced to look to the day when Castro will be replaced.

The net result of the meeting may be that Gorbachev will continue to stress to Castro that the winds of change are sweeping world diplomacy, as well as world economy. Castro will have to conform or else get out of the way.

Nothing New

It's Time To Get To Work

There was nothing new to the story the Pitt County Board of Commissioners heard Monday. The poverty level in eastern North Carolina is dismal.

Eastern North Carolina Poverty Committee representatives told the commissioners that 41 counties in the east have a disproportionate share of the state's poor.

Poverty is defined as having an income below $11,650 for a family of four. In anybody's book, that's poor.

The region and state are paying for this through family breakdown situations, drug addiction and suicide. A high percentage of the poverty level households in the East are headed by individuals with less than a high school education.

Dr. Charles Coble, dean of the ECU School of Education suggested that more money invested in preschool and day care centers allowing parents or guardians to work could help. More education for the poverty level workers can benefit. Other speakers told commissioners low-skill jobs are disappearing in the east. Again that suggests a need for training in higher skilled positions.

It all proves the eastern counties must band together to solve their poverty problems. That means attracting more new jobs, which means industries. The program to better the region's roads program will help.

Then the area must deliver better social services to the poverty level citizens. Next the adults now living in poverty must receive the training that they need to compete for new jobs.

Finally the upcoming generations must receive the best education possible from the earliest age possible to compete in an increasingly complex world. They must be challenged to complete high school and to be serious about their school work.

The poverty problem is monumental in eastern North Carolina ... but the bigger the task the greater the progress that can be made. It is time to proceed.

'As it is, Castro is a quaint character of these times. He still appears at public functions in his combat uniform, boots, fatigue cap and ammo belt ...'

Don't Feel Sorry For Ollie

Art Buchwald

I don't worry about Ollie North any more. What he has done, he has done. Now a jury of his peers (most of whom don't read the headlines, watch television or talk about the news) will decide his guilt or innocence.

What does concern me is that somewhere in the bowels of the White House, maybe at this very moment, there's a Marine colonel or an Air Force major named Solly South. He is dreaming of becoming another Ollie and is saying to his secretary, Dawn:

"I would love to do something heroic and illegal today to save the Bahamas."

Dawn answers, "What a neat idea, Solly. If you draw up the plans, I'll shred them."

"Maybe I will sell MX missiles to Kadafi and use the money to buy AK-47s for the Cuba-Libre freedom fighters." "What a heroic thought, I'll carry the sales slips to Switzerland in my bra."

"How much do you think the president should know about what I'm doing, Dawn?"

"Just enough so that if you get caught, you can say he made you do it."

"Exactly. I am not the type of hero who falls on my sword for my Commander-in-Chief."

"Of course you're not, Solly. Military people don't do that any more. I can't wait to write a book about my role in all of this."

"Dawn, we have to find some shady munitions dealers to act as go-betweens."

"That won't be hard to do, Solly. I'll let my fingers do the walking in the Yellow Pages to 'S' for shady. If we are serious about this, then I'm going to need more burn bags."

"I'll see if I can get the money for them from the king of Saudi Arabia. He owes us for the AWACs we gave him. Dawn, get my lawyer on the phone."

"I didn't know that you had a lawyer!"

"Everybody needs an attorney when they are about to do something unconstitutional for the good of the country. Ollie North's mistake was that he waited too long. Now he is in court fighting for his life."

"Which lawyer do you want me to call?"

"Any one, as long as he is not a potted plant."

"Just think, Solly, now there are so many people who don't even know your name, but who will worship you someday."

"Even though I was just following orders?"

"Because you were following orders. What man can say no to the president of the United States?"

"Dawn, I think you're putting too many papers in the hem of your skirt — they keep bulging out."

"I'll hide the rest up here next to my heart. If a guard tries to search me, I'll sue him for female abuse."

"You're a good secretary, Dawn. My whole plan wouldn't work if it wasn't for you. Why are you stamping 'Top Secret' on the U.S. Constitution?"

"Because then the prosecutor can't use it against you."

"Good thinking, Dawn. Stuff it next to your girdle until we get out of the building. That's one document we don't want to leak."

The Reason Income Gets Counted ...

DAYTON, Ohio — History is spread across this country as evenly as honey on toast. You can not drive for long down any highway without coming upon some site of the distinctive American genius for democratizing historymaking. Dayton, for example, is the site of one of those commonplace developments that altered habits of thought as well as action.

Something that happened in this middling-sized city in the middle of the state that begins the Middle West shows how middle-class concerns shape the history of our commercial society. Dayton may be most famous for the bicycle shop in which the Wright brothers tinkered with the technology that would, in time, democratize the experience of long-distance travel.

But Dayton also deserves fame for a more mundane machine. A list of cities that have shaped our world would include London and New York (finance), Washington (freedom), Moscow (revolution),

George Will

Paris (art), Vienna (philosophy and psychology). And add Dayton, birthplace of the cash register.

In the 1870s, James Ritty was running a saloon here and wondering why business was brisk but profits were slim. He suspected that his bartenders were dipping their fingers in the till. Driven by distress to a breakdown, he embarked on a vacation voyage to Europe. While on board, he became fascinated by a machine in the ship's engine room that recorded each rotation of the propeller shaft. It was an epiphany. Perhaps a machine could be built that would record each sale in a saloon.

Cutting short his vacation, he dashed back to Dayton and invented the cash register. "Ritty's Incorruptible Cashier" was soon refined to record all transactions on a paper roll. Retailing — among other things — was on the way to being transformed.

Ritty soon sold his struggling business for $1,000 to a clever fellow who added a bell that rang when the cash drawer was opened. The official history of Dayton's National Cash Register Company (now NCR) said that the bell "like the historic Revolutionary shot fired at Lexington... would be heard around the world."

What was heard around America was the new phrase "ringing up a sale." Historian Daniel Boorstin writes: "Americans had thus found a way to give a new publicity to the shopkeeper's smallest transaction. Shopping now was a semipublic, communal activity, announced by the ringing of bells."

The company soon was owned by John Henry Patterson, a coal dealer who found that his business became profitable only after he replaced his cashbox with a cash register. A company report from 1888 contains this gem: "A hotel keeper when asked why he did not discharge his bartender who had purchased a $1,000 diamond pin, out of a salary of $10 per week before he had been at work six months, said that if he did so, he would only have to lose another $1,000 on the next man because the new man would do the same thing."

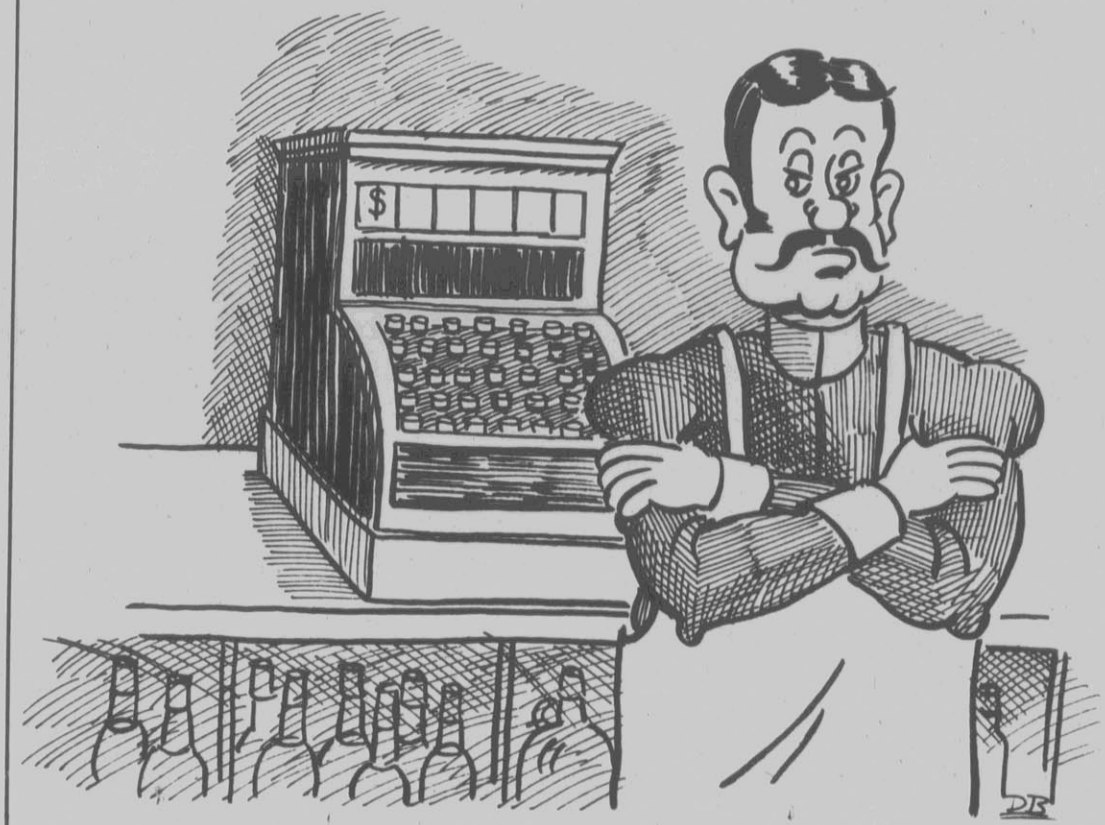

Patterson encountered resistance to cash registers in businesses whose employees considered the machines a slur on their characters. However, he was not one to be defeated. When his doctors ordered him to do daily calisthenics, he ordered his executives to join him at 5 a.m. One executive whose performance displeased Patterson arrived at work one morning to find the charred remains of his desk and other office effects in a smoldering pile in front of the factory. Nowadays that is called negative feedback.

Next came calculating machines. As more and more precise information became available about the quantity of things, Americans acquired the habit of thinking quantitatively, especially about incomes.

By the end of the 19th century, a powerful political movement for a new kind of taxation was forming around this way of thinking. And in the 20th century, as Boorstin says, "income consciousness, no longer merely a byproduct of technology or of government statistics, became a civic obligation, under penalty of fine and imprisonment" and under an annual mid-April deadline.

Do not blame Dayton's ringing machines for your income taxes that are due soon. But there is a connection.

How To Tell A Good Samaritan From An Imposter

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — Anyone who has read the Bible knows about the Good Samaritan. Unfortunately, anyone who reads the newspapers also knows that Good Samaritans sometimes pay a price for being good guys.

Good Samaritans are people who help others in times of emergency. At one time, doctors learned that when they stopped to help those in need, they could be sued for malpractice.

State law for a long time has protected those doctors and emergency medical workers who stop to help

But this year the legislature is again facing a Good Samaritan law, this time for those who donate food to the poor and hungry.

When someone donates food to a food bank or soup kitchen, state law limits their liability. If someone becomes ill from that food, those who donated it are liable only if it can be proved that the donor knew, or had reasonable grounds to believe, that the food was bad.

That standard is not easy one to prove in court. But it isn't the toughest standard, either. Jerry Williams, lobbyist for the N.C. Restaurant Association, said that restaurant owners fear that, during a hectic shift, they might overlook something which a skillful plaintiff's lawyer might use to prove this standard in court. The restaurant owners respond by deciding not to take the risk, and they throw leftover food away instead of giving it to the hungry.

Rep. Vernon Abernethy, R-Gaston, has sponsored a bill that would set a more difficult standard for a plaintiff to meet. To successfully sue a donor of food, the plaintiff would have to prove that there was gross negligence or intentional misconduct. It's the same protection given to doctors and emergency medical technicians under the Good Samaritan statutes.

Abernethy estimated that restaurants throw away 438 tons of food a day. A good portion of that, he says, is still good. It's food that was never even served. If restaurant owners feel that they are protected by the law, they'll be willing to donate that food, he said.

Several members of the subcommittee feel current legal protections are adequate, however. Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, said, "This is nothing more than lawsuit paranoia. There is no reason not to be giving away food now." Reps. Harry Payne, D-New Hanover, and Sharon Thompson, D-Durham, also expressed concern that the bill might encourage restaurant owners to be less than careful and give away spoiled food.

Why would anyone do that? For the tax deduction. Food donated by a restaurant amounts to a charitable deduction. The skeptics said they were concerned that a tougher liability standard combined with tax deductions could lead an unscrupulous restaurant owner to donate bad food.

Even with that concern, the subcommittee last week appeared ready to approve the bill — with modifications to prevent a windfall for insurance companies — when Greg Kirkpatrick, the director of the Raleigh Food Bank, argued that the present law works well.

Kirkpatrick said that most donations currently come in uncooked food stocks. But food banks are using more prepared foods donated by caterers and restaurants. In the past, there have been rare cases of obviously spoiled canned food being donated. That problem might become worse if more food banks are accepting prepared foods and if the liability standard is weak.

The subcommittee put off work on the bill until this week while it tried to determine how to tell a Good Samaritan from an imposter.

Analysis

Don't Shut Alaska's Oil Spigot Because Of The Valdez Spill

Frank Murkowski

While it is too early to draw firm conclusions, it appears that the disastrous oil spill of the Exxon Valdez was caused by inexcusable human error. Alaskans and all Americans are and should be rightly outraged. Because the captain of the tanker was under the influence of alcohol, the command of one of the largest tankers in this country's merchant fleet was left to a person without appropriate credentials.

Since the start-up of the Trans-Alaska Pipeline 11 years ago, everyone involved with moving the oil has worked hard to avoid this type of accident. Obviously, they did not work hard enough. The fact that 8,858 tankers have sailed from Valdez, carrying more than 282 billion gallons of oil without a major incident, does not justify or reduce the significance of this event. We intend to learn from this incident and do everything possible to prevent it from happening again.

As with all things, there are two ways to look at this accident. It is tragic. It dumped more than 240,000 barrels of crude oil into one of Alaska's most biologically productive marine environments, an area of extraordinary value and beauty.

Yet we are fortunate that three-fourths of the 1.1 million barrels of crude oil stayed on board the grounded tanker. Exxon has now transferred more than 500,000 barrels of that crude, and once all of it is unloaded, the huge risk of additional pollution will be eliminated.

Exxon has accepted full responsibility for this spill and has committed to pay for the cleanup and make full reimbursement for damages. I intend to see that the company lives up to that commitment.

The citizens of Prince William Sound are legitimately concerned over the effect this spill will have on their future. In an effort to better understand the impact, I have asked President Bush to dispatch to Prince William Sound a team of scientists who have studied large oil spills around the world. I also will ask the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee to examine the adequacy of the response to this incident and the need for stricter and more realistic contingency planning.

Beyond contingency plans, one question has been asked countless times during the last few days: Will the Exxon Valdez oil spill have a detrimental effect on efforts to open the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to oil and gas leasing? While there is no logical connection, I recognize that we live in a world of perception and that therefore this question has to be addressed.

We are hearing a lot of "I-told-you-so" from the environmental community. There are those who say that this accident proves that we should not have built the Trans-Alaska Pipeline. These same people will try to mislead the public to believe that the Exxon Valdez accident is proof that exploration and development in a national wildlife refuge cannot be done safely.

As Environmental Protection Agency Administrator William K. Reilly has said, if we do not move oil from Valdez, we will have to bring it in from foreign sources. That means more foreign tankers hauling oil into San Francisco Bay, Cape Cod Bay, Chesapeake Bay and other U.S. ports. But this scenario could also become a reality if we do not explore for oil in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. Production from Prudhoe Bay is beginning to decline. By the year 2000, as little as 800,000 barrels a day could be moving through the pipeline. We won't know if there is oil in the wildlife refuge unless it is opened for exploration. And we won't have the option to find oil in the wildlife refuge unless we go ahead with authorizing legislation.

There really is no room for compromise. Valdez will continue long into the future to be our nation's most important oil port. Therefore, it must be our nation's safest, most environmentally sound oil port. Both the ecological and oil resources are extremely valuable and require our greatest concern and closest attention.

The Energy and Natural Resources Committee recently sent to the Senate a bill authorizing oil and gas leasing on the coastal plain of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. In constructing this legislation, the committee built on past experiences with oil development in the Arctic to fashion an environmentally sound development program for the refuge.

The bill requires that the best available technologies be used and that facilities be consolidated to minimize the areas affected; that all oil exploration and development activities be conducted in a manner that results in no significant adverse effect on the Arctic environment; establishes a reclamation fund and requires performance bonding to ensure that all areas are reclaimed, and creates a dedicated fund for environmental monitoring and enforcement by federal and state agencies to ensure continuous compliance with environmental laws.

Murkowski, R-Alaska, is a member of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

I-40 Closed By Rock Slide

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A rock slide in Haywood County near Tennessee temporarily closed more than 20 miles of Interstate 40 in both states today, but no one was injured, officials said.

The slide appears to be "fairly substantial" because rocks broke through a retaining wall built to prevent such a happening, said Al Warlick, spokesman for the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety.

Officials closed the interstate to traffic after the slide was reported at 1:25 a.m. Both eastbound lanes of the interstate were reopened at around 7:00 a.m. One westbound lane was reopened to traffic around 8:00 a.m., said F.L. Huggins, the N.C. Highway Patrol communications center supervisor in Asheville.

Traffic was expected to move through the area slowly, Huggins said. A wreck involving three trucks was reported to the state Highway Patrol in Asheville at 1:24 a.m., and the rock slide was reported a minute later, said Huggins.

One truck was partially hit by rocks, but no one was injured, he said. "Had it been a car or something, they probably would have been."

Most of the early-morning traffic is trucks, Huggins said. Highway Patrol Lt. Don Reavis suggested that motorists who need to get to Tennessee use U.S. 19-23 to Johnson City, Tenn., or U.S. 25-70 from Marshall through Hot Springs and up to Newport, Tenn. But those routes are not approved for twin tractor-trailer rigs, and are not recommended for other tractor-trailers, he said.

Superintendents Back Martin Career Plan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Martin has launched a campaign to offset the North Carolina Association of Educators' attacks on the career ladder program, the centerpiece of his initiative to boost the teaching profession.

Twenty-eight local school superintendents showed up Wednesday at Martin's weekly news conference to praise the governor's program, which also includes a 1-cent sales tax increase, full implementation of the Basic Education Program and removal of the seven-year freeze on the teachers' salary schedule.

Another 14 superintendents allowed their names to be placed on a list of supporters.

"Their goal, like mine, is to improve the professional character of the teaching profession," Martin said. "They see, as I do, that the best way to achieve this goal is to provide better pay for better teachers."

Karen Garr, president of the NCAE, also attended the news conference and told reporters afterward that the superintendents do not speak for teachers.

"The point is, the teachers have resoundingly said we don't want this," she said. "Either we can impose something on them that they don't want because 'we from our high position say we know what's best for you, little people,' or we can listen to them."

Martin insisted that, contrary to NCAE claims, most teachers in the 16 systems that have experimented with the career ladder for the past 3½ years support taking it statewide.

Study Calls For Total Overhaul Of Public Schools' Pay Policies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A comprehensive pay plan presented to the state Board of Education recommends overhauling job classifications and making salary schedules equitable and competitive for all school employees.

The plan, designed by the national accounting firm of Price Waterhouse at a cost of $168,000, would generally boost pay for non-certified positions such as office workers and teachers assistants and give teachers a salary range of $18,897 and $34,101.

Board members, who gave the proposal high marks, hope parts of it can be approved by the General Assembly this session.

"These are salary ranges that are internally compatible and externally competitive," Charles W. Rech, project director for Price Waterhouse, told the board Wednesday.

The board will use the plan in developing a legislative recommendation for addressing the immediate needs of giving teachers a reasonable pay increase and untangling a salary schedule that has become inequitable through a series of step freezes.

Board Chairman Howard H. Haworth said Price Waterhouse's 20-step salary plan for teachers alone would cost roughly $150 million in new funding next year. Three other salary proposals before the General Assembly advocate 30-or 31-step plans carried out over the next three years.

The Public School Forum of North Carolina's plan would give teachers a 5.4 percent pay increase costing $98 million next year. Gov. Jim Martin has proposed a 6 percent pay increase costing about $107 million, and the N.C. Association of Educators is seeking an 8 percent increase costing $150 million.

The board asked State Superintendent Bobby R. Etheridge to merge the Price Waterhouse plan with the other three into a single plan that all groups could support in the General Assembly.

"I appreciate that hot potato," said Etheridge, who will bring the merged plan back to the board in May.

The Price Waterhouse study goes beyond the other proposals in presenting a total restructuring of job classifications, pay grades and salary schedules for all school employees, not just teachers.

Haworth said the plan provides a thoughtful, long-term approach to creating a sophisticated, modern pay and benefits plan for a public school system that is essentially a $4 billion business.

"One of the reasons we are in trouble with our compensation system, is in past administrations the approaches have been too simplistic," Haworth said.

The Price Waterhouse plan reduced 105 job classifications to 90, redefining and renaming some of them. It grouped them all into six categories with various pay grades. One of those categories is solely for teachers.

Jobs were compared with one another to make sure pay among them was fair, and then salaries were adjusted so they were competitive in the region. Teacher assistants, bookkeepers, and librarian aides, for example, are all in one category and the study found they are paid lower than their counterparts elsewhere in the Southeast.

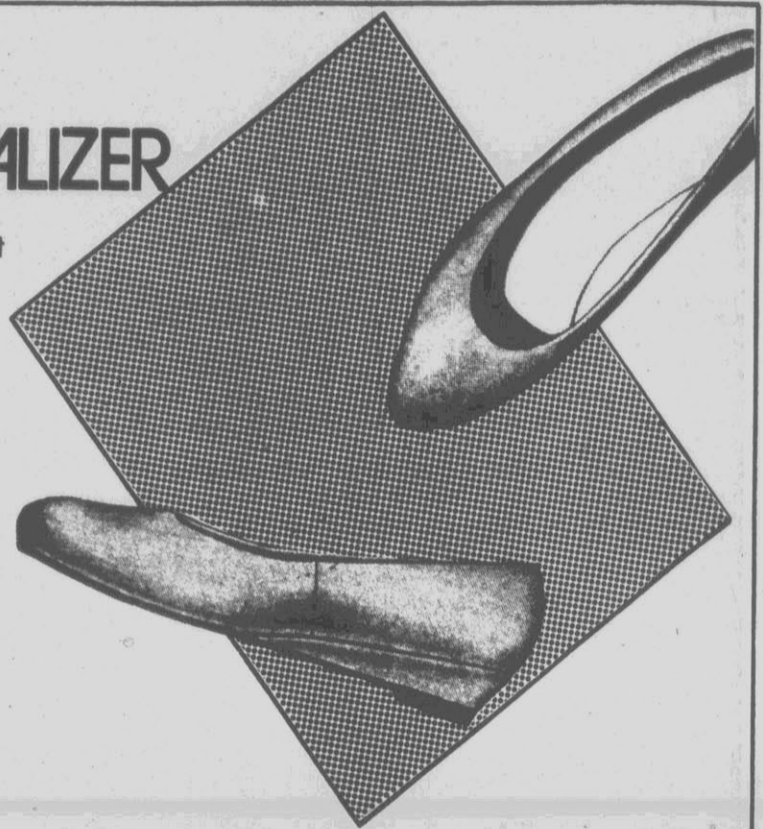

The plan recommends boosting their salary ranges.

About 25 percent of teacher assistants have family incomes near or below poverty levels, according to a recent survey by the N.C. Association of Teacher Assistants. They now make about $7,000 a year. Price Waterhouse recommends paying them between $12,530 and $20,443.

The firm recommends putting all jobs on 20-step pay schedules providing 2½ to 3½ percent pay increases each year. But it also recommends offering merit-pay supplements to all employees, not just teachers as the state is considering now.

Teen Gets Award For Vaccination

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KINGS MOUNTAIN, N.C. — In the first payment of its kind in the state, a Kings Mountain teen-ager has been awarded $300,000 for brain damage she received from a vaccination she received as an infant.

The award to 14-year-old Angel Parker is the first under the state's Childhood Vaccine-Related Injury Compensation Program, said the teen-ager's attorney, Joseph Roberts of Gastonia. It's the maximum allowed under the 1986 law.

The claim was filed in 1987 by Angel's mother, Frances Joan Story. Hearings were held in 1988 in Gaston County and in Raleigh and a decision was issued by the N.C. Industrial Commission on Feb. 6, 1989.

The state gave notice of appeal, but that was withdrawn Tuesday, Roberts said. The money will be paid to the clerk of court's office for Angel's medical and living expenses.

According to the court records, Angel was born at Kings Mountain Hospital on May 28, 1974. She was the youngest of five children and was cared for by an older sister, who testified at the hearing. Roberts said Sherry Tessner, then 11, was fascinated by the baby and frequently helped care for it.

The suit claims Angel was a "normal baby in every way, responsive to stimuli," until she received a diphtheria, pertussis and tetanus) vaccination on July 19.

Angel reacted instantly and violently to the routine baby shot. She began crying and screaming, ran a high fever and later developed seizures.

She cried constantly for two days, and then just stopped. The suit claims she hasn't cried since. Mrs. Tessner testified that the "baby was lost" and she never recovered the same responsiveness she had shown before the vaccination.

In early 1985, Angel was diagnosed as "severely developmentally delayed as a result of mental damage sustained by her at the time of her reaction to the vaccine which was administered."

Mrs. Story is "a courageous woman who knew from the very beginning the connection between the vaccination and her daughter's medical problems," Roberts said.

The Greenville Public Works Department should recover soon from collecting tree limbs and other debris that occurred during two ice storms and a snow storm.

Our crews have hauled more than 2,700 truckloads of debris to the old City landfill to be burned at a later date.

From all indications, trash trucks and all garbage trucks should be back on their regular schedules and operating under normal conditions on Monday, April 10.

City residents should be reminded that larger trees are to be cut 5-6 feet in length and stacked next to the curb, separate from trash that is to be picked up. Bundles should not weigh more than 50 lbs. All leaves and yard rakings are to be bagged or boxed for the months of April through October.

IN THE STATE

Boycott

RALEIGH (AP) — Accusing city leaders of insensitivity, black legislators said they would not attend next week's commemorative session in Fayetteville to protest the location outside the building where slaves once were sold.

"If one black person was sold into slavery in there, it's a blight," Rep. Mickey Michaux, D-Durham, chairman of the Legislative Black Caucus, said Wednesday after a closed-door meeting.

Despite last-minute pleadings from white Cumberland County lawmakers, 11 of the 13 black House members and four black senators agreed it would be inappropriate to attend a session in the shadow of a "slave market," Michaux said.

Court Ruling

RALEIGH (AP) — A woman who killed her husband as he slept after more than 20 years of abuse cannot say she acted in self-defense because she didn't prove her life was in immediate danger, the state Supreme Court said.

The high court said Judy Ann Laws Norman of Rutherford County had not shown she was in "imminent" danger from her sleeping husband, even though he had a long history of abusing her and had become particularly violent in the three days prior to the shooting.

"The killing of another human being is the most extreme recourse to our inherent right of self-preservation and can be justified in law only by the utmost real or apparent necessity brought about by the decedent," Justice Burley Mitchell wrote for the majority. "The imminence requirement ensures that deadly force will be used only where it is necessary as a last resort."

The ruling reversed the state Court of Appeals, which had ordered a new trial for Mrs. Norman. Mrs. Norman was convicted in 1987 of voluntary manslaughter and sentenced to six years in prison for shooting her sleeping husband three times in the back of the head.

Baby Abduction

HIGH POINT (AP) — A woman found guilty of abducting a 2-day-old child from his hospital bassinets was mentally ill at the time but did not commit the crime knowingly, a judge said he sentenced her to 12 years in prison.

"To the contrary the evidence tends to show some deliberating, planning and scheming as to how the offense was to be carried out with some attention to detail," Guilford County Superior Court Judge Judson DeRamus said Wednesday as he sentenced Brenda Joyce Nobles.

Ms. Nobles was arrested June 22, 1988, after police found a newborn infant on the floor of the closet of the house she shared with her boyfriend. The baby was unharmed, though his hair had been cut in an apparent effort to conceal his identity and he had not been kept clean.

The baby, Jason Ray McClure, had been missing for two days after a woman disguised as a nurse took him from his mother's room in the High Point Regional Hospital.

State Ports

WILMINGTON (AP) — A California-based public policy research institution has recommended selling North Carolina's state-owned ports, but the recommended price is less than half what North Carolina has invested in them so far, state officials said.

The Reason Foundation suggests in its report, announced earlier this week, that the Wilmington port be sold to a private operator for $48 million. The state port at Morehead City would bring $22 million, if combined with the Atlantic & North Carolina Railroad, which serves the port and is primarily owned by the state, the report says.

That's a total of $70 million for the two ports, plus a railroad. But according to figures from the SPA, the state already has spent $132 million for just the Wilmington and Morehead ports since the authority was founded in the early 1950s.

"That's the historical cost," said Thomas Green, SPA director of finance. "That would not even be a starting point" in deciding what the ports are worth today. "We'd be giving it away for that price."

Kindergarten

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Many children in North Carolina are needlessly being held back for a second year of kindergarten, costing the state at least $17 million, according to a study conducted at the University of North Carolina.

Researchers at the Frank Porter Graham Child Development center conducted the study, which involved observing 103 randomly selected kindergarten classrooms in 1988. Also, 218 elementary school principals and 375 teachers were surveyed about their knowledge, attitudes and philosophies regarding kindergarten.

"We found that 8.6 percent of children in the 53 kindergarten classes we followed for a whole year were held back," said Donna Bryant, co-principal investigator for the study. "That is pretty shocking considering that most studies show few benefits from kindergarten retention."

Election Bills Get Mixed Reviews

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Bills to eliminate second primaries in North Carolina received mixed reviews in a Senate committee and no vote was expected for two weeks.

Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, committee chairman, said a vote on the measure would likely come in the next two weeks. But Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, said he wondered whether there would ever be a vote because Democrats have such mixed feelings on the bill.

"I think they have a real problem with what they say and what they're willing to do," Johnson said.

The elimination of the law requiring that a winning candidate receive at least 50 percent of the vote in a primary has failed to pass in several sessions. But momentum has been growing for the idea as Democrats try to keep blacks — traditionally Democratic stalwarts — from leaving the fold.

Supporters argued Wednesday that the system discriminates against minorities and is costly to candidates and taxpayers.

"We feel that there are no advantages to black people as the second primary currently exists," Sen. Ralph Hunt, D-Durham, sponsor of one bill before the Senate Election Laws Committee.

"It's bad on the Democrat side and it's bad on the Republican side," said Johnson. He said runoffs can cost up to 80 cents per vote cast, not to mention the thousands of dollars spent by candidates.

"When we're spending the amount of money on second primaries that we're spending, it's unnecessary," added Johnson, who sponsored the second bill.

But Sen. Ted Kaplan, D-Forsyth said the law was never intended to discriminate against minorities.

"The reason for it was for the party to pick a nominee that had more than half of the party's support," he said.

Kaplan said eliminating second primaries completely would "devastate both parties." He said a candidate must receive some high percentage of the vote to ensure party support.

Otherwise, he said, "We'll see more third- and fourth-party candidates, more write-ins. We'll have chaos at the Board of Elections."

Martin Threatens Lawsuit Over Oil Drilling

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Calling the demand "non-negotiable," Gov. Jim Martin is threatening a lawsuit if the federal government authorizes oil drilling off the North Carolina coast without an environmental impact study.

Martin and Attorney General Lacy Thornburg said Wednesday they are prepared to fight a decision to let Mobil Oil Corp. proceed with its drilling plan until the potential effects on the state are known.

"As the oil spill in Alaska has so vividly reminded us, it's our duty as elected officials to work together to safeguard the public's vital natural resources," Thornburg said.

North Carolina received notice in August 1988 that Mobil Oil Corp. intended to submit a plan to drill for oil approximately 38 miles off Hatteras Island this spring.

The application would be made to the Minerals Management Service, an arm of the U.S. Department of Interior. Martin said he could veto the MMS's decision but final authority rests with the U.S. secretary of commerce.

Martin and Thornburg said they were seeking Mobil's support of their call for an environmental impact study before the MMS rules on the company's drilling plan.

"That demand is non-negotiable," Martin said.

Thornburg acknowledged that no court has required such a study before exploratory drilling is conducted. MMS has said there is not time under federal law for such a study.

Martin, however, said the MMS's reluctance was based on the experience of states on the Gulf of Mexico coast, where drilling is commonplace.

"It's not our intention to arbitrarily oppose or obstruct Mobil," Martin said. "If we are to meet our responsibilities to make the best judgment for our state, we must insist that we be fully informed on the basis of an environmental impact statement."

Panel Delays Vote On Leaf Assessments

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The state Senate Agriculture Committee postponed its discussion this week of two bills that could lead to an increase in the assessment fees tobacco growers pay to promote their product.

The bills will be taken up Tuesday when supporters of each bill will be present to talk to the committee, said Sen. James D. Speed, D-Franklin. Speed is one of several co-sponsors of both bills.

One bill calls for farmers to vote in a referendum to increase fees paid to Tobacco Associates from 10 cents per 100 pounds to 25 cents per 100 pounds. Tobacco Associates was formed in 1947 to promote flue-cured leaf worldwide.

The other bill calls for growers to vote in a referendum to pay 50 cents per 100 pounds on the tobacco they produce. Tobacco Associates would receive 25 cents and the other 25 cents would be divided between Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina and the Tobacco Foundation.

Tobacco Growers, which currently is financed by annual membership dues from growers and others in the industry, wants to be the commodity group to represent producers. Its board has agreed not to assess farmers more than four cents per 100 pounds during the three years the vote would be effective, said Carlton Blalock, vice president of the group.

The Tobacco Foundation, financed heavily by cigarette manufacturers, donates money for tobacco research to N.C. State University.

Farmers disagree over which bill should be approved by legislators.

"It was obvious we were going to have some interest on both bills," Speed said Wednesday. Speed and Sen. R.C. Soles Jr., D-Columbus, introduced the 25-cent proposal. Speed, Soles and 14 other senators co-sponsored the bill on the 50-cent proposal, which was introduced by Sen. Wendell Murphy, D-Duplin.

President Bush congratulates Mary Bicouvaris of Hampton, Va., the 1989 teacher of the year

Bush Unveils $441 Million Plan For Nation's Schools

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — President Bush, who announced during the presidential campaign that he wanted to be the "education president," unveiled on Wednesday a $441 million legislative package that would reward good teachers and schools, expand magnet schools and provide funds for drug prevention.

But some members of the educational establishment and some Democrats were sharply critical, arguing that the legislation is inadequate and that Bush is reneging on his promise to create a renaissance in the nation's schools.

"The Bush initiatives, as introduced today, do more harm than good to education," said Augustus F. Hawkins, D-Calif., chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee.

Rep. William H. Gray III, D-Pa., chairman of the House Democratic Caucus, called the Bush proposal "poppycock."

"The education budget of George Bush is less than the education budget of Ronald Reagan," said Gray, the former chairman of the House Budget Committee.

Hawkins and Gray contend that despite new funding for the initiatives announced Wednesday, Bush is recommending an education budget that does not account for inflation — thereby forcing cuts in current programs — and that is subject to additional reductions as part of his "flexible freeze" program. Moreover, critics said, money for the new initiatives would be better spent expanding successful programs for disadvantaged and handicapped students.

It is the first time that Bush, who initially enjoyed support from the education community, has encountered strong criticism on this front. The complaints were heightened by the charge that the president is failing to fulfill a major campaign pledge.

However, Sen. Nancy Landon Kassebaum, R-Kan., chief Senate sponsor of the measure, defended it as "very good ... it is a package one could hardly be against."

Education Secretary Lauro F. Cavazos said education problems are not a result of insufficient funds and that federal funding constitutes a small portion of total education spending.

"Consistent with constraints we have in the current (federal) budget ... this is the best we can do," he said. "We have to respond to those constraints."

Cavazos praised the legislation, calling it "a real step forward in our effort to focus on education in this country."

Bush released his legislative package at a Rose Garden ceremony honoring the "teacher of the year," Mary V. Bicouvaris of Hampton, Va.

"We're going to take action, action to make excellence in education not just a rallying cry but a classroom reality," he said.

His proposal includes new funding requests of $250 million for cash awards to successful schools; $100 million for grants to encourage magnet schools, which offer specialized instructional programs; $25 million to help states establish programs to place in classrooms teachers without standard courses required for certification; $7.6 million in cash awards for successful teachers; $5 million in scholarships for students gifted in science and math; and $25 million for antidrug programs and $10 million in funds to assist historically black colleges.

Funding for the initiatives in fiscal 1990 would total about $422 million.

Wage Bill Faces Amendments

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Sponsors of Senate legislation to raise the minimum wage have agreed to amend their proposal to match a House-passed bill in hopes of sending a measure quickly to the White House, where it faces an all but certain veto.

Republicans could thwart the Democrats' strategy by staging a filibuster when debate begins today, but an aide to one leading GOP senator said there were no plans to do that. The aide said it appeared the Democrats had the votes to win passage of their plan by Friday or early next week.

"It will go on to the president and we'll get a veto," said the aide, who asked not to be identified.

The Senate bill due for debate today was sponsored by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. As it now stands, the measure would raise the hourly minimum wage from $3.35 to $4.65 by January 1992 and contains no provision allowing a lower wage to be paid to new hires.

But Kennedy aides said he would offer an amendment making his measure identical to the House bill passed two weeks ago, which has a final target of $4.55 and would allow employers to pay new entrants in the job market a "sub-minimum" for two months.

Bush has insisted on a sub-minimum "training wage" but the version in the House bill is more restrictive than the president's proposal, and $4.55 is 30 cents an hour higher than Bush has said he is willing to raise the general minimum wage.

By agreeing to amend his bill now, Kennedy, provided the amended version wins passage, averts the need for a conference committee to resolve differences between the House and Senate versions and allows the Democrats to get a bill to Bush sooner.

A number of other amendments are expected, including a GOP attempt to substitute Bush's proposal.

Uniform Poll Closing OK'd

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Polling places across the nation would close at a uniform time in presidential elections under a plan on its way to the Senate after winning House approval.

The bill, approved 238-154 on Wednesday, is designed to reduce the effect of outcome projections made hours before the polls close in the West and in some late-closing states elsewhere.

"The importance of Western votes for president is being diminished just because of where we live," Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., declared.

The measure has passed the House twice before only to languish in the Senate, but lawmakers say Senate prospects are better this year.

The bill calls for closing times of 9 p.m. EST, 8 p.m. CST and 7 p.m. MST. In presidential election years only, the switch from daylight-saving time to standard time in the Pacific time zone would be postponed a maximum of two weeks. Polls there would close at 7 p.m. PDT.

Only presidential years would be covered by the bill, which would take effect in 1992.

Trial Hearing Set

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — The Florida Supreme Court refused to release a man who state officials agree was unfairly convicted of killing his stepdaughter, but it cleared the way for a hearing that could lead to his freedom.

Attorneys for James J. Richardson, 53, are seeking a new trial on grounds the farm worker was framed in the 1967 poisoning deaths of his seven children in Arcadia, about 35 miles east of Sarasota.

The Supreme Court on Wednesday relinquished its jurisdiction in the case to permit a Circuit Court hearing in Arcadia on the new trial request.

"It all means we are at last unblocking the clogged up pipeline and we are now going to get some action," said Ellis Rubin, one of Richardson's attorneys. "This may be the beginning of the end."

Richardson was convicted only of killing the oldest of the children, an 8-year-old stepdaughter, and sentenced to die in the electric chair. His sentence was commuted to life in prison after the U.S. Supreme Court struck down the death penalty in 1972.

An investigation ordered by the governor's office concluded last month that the prosecution withheld vital evidence from the defense, and Attorney General Bob Butterworth determined Richardson received an unfair trial.

The children died after eating a lunch tainted with a pesticide. The lunch was served by a neighbor who was babysitting while Richardson and his wife were working in an orange grove.

Wright Says He Sold Book To Skip Rule

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Jim Wright converted a $3,000 speaking fee from a Texas university into a bulk sale of his book, "Reflections of a Public Man," because he otherwise couldn't accept the money under House rules, the speaker acknowledged.

The sale of 504 copies of the book to Southwest Texas State University following a 1984 lecture Wright delivered at the school is under examination, along with other such sales, as part of an ethics committee investigation of the speaker's finances.

The panel is looking into whether Wright used the book sales in some instances to evade limits House rules impose on outside income from speaking and writing fees, and is examining other areas of the speaker's conduct for potential violations of at least four other rules.

In October 1984, when Wright delivered the university speech, he already was bumping up against the $23,630 maximum he could accept in speaking fees for the year under House rules. In addition, the $3,000 check the university sent him was $1,000 more than the maximum the rules allow.

An aide asked him what to do about it, Wright told reporters on Wednesday.

"I said $3,000 is actually more than I can properly accept," the speaker said he responded. "He said, well, maybe they want to buy some books. I said if they want to buy some books, that'll be fine. I don't think there's anything wrong with that."

Wright's income from the book sales — about $1,650 — was not subject to House limitations.

The incident is similar to a previously reported bulk sale of the book in 1985, when Wright sent 336 copies to the New England Life Insurance Co. in return for $2,000 initially intended as an honorarium. But in that case, the speaker's office defended it by saying the deal was arranged by aides without Wright's knowledge.

Wright received 55 percent of the proceeds from each copy of the slim $5.95 volume, collecting a total of $55,000 in royalties.

The ethics committee was meeting again today and had a full day of deliberations scheduled for Friday. Chairman Julian Dixon, D-Calif., said he anticipated some conclusion in the case next week.

REAL Sale Plan Stalls

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Ex-baseball commissioner Peter V. Ueberroth's deal to buy strikebound Eastern Airlines hit last-minute snags for the second time in a week, but negotiations haven't ended.

A source familiar with the negotiations said the parties reached an accord Tuesday night and were set to make the announcement Wednesday. But the deal began to unravel Wednesday morning, as Ueberroth believed Texas Air Corp. Chairman Frank Lorenzo was again changing the agreement, the source said.

"Both sides thought they had a deal but there were some sticking points that kept negotiations continuing instead of concluding," said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Texas Air is the parent of Eastern, which has been paralyzed since March 4, when the Machinists union went on strike and pilots and flight attendants refused to cross picket lines. Five days later, Eastern filed for protection from creditors in U.S. bankruptcy court in New York.

Ueberroth began what he thought would be final negotiations with Lorenzo early Wednesday in New York and continued them until about 8 p.m. The source told said negotiations were to resume this morning.

"They don't have a deal," the source said. "There's still negotiations and sticking points. It's not done."

Sources close to the Houston-based Texas Air, however, said Ueberroth himself raised minor sticking points that kept the deal from being consummated.

"Ueberroth is the one who is nit-picking the deal to death," said a source, who also demanded anonymity.

North Defense Mum On Whether He Will Testify

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Blocked from presenting testimony from Ronald Reagan and John Poindexter, lawyers for Oliver North are struggling with ways to prove the former White House aide acted on the authority of his superiors.

But the defense is giving no indication whether it will resort to what appears to be the most dramatic tactic remaining at its disposal — putting North himself on the witness stand.

Prosecutor John Keiser referred to the possibility earlier this week, saying the length of the trial depends partly on whether North testifies.

North lawyer Brendan Sullivan said he estimates the defense case, which began Monday, will take three to nine days.

On Wednesday, U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell rejected North's latest bid, a request to use videotaped congressional testimony from Poindexter.

Portions of Poindexter's testimony in 1987 are "critical to the defense, particularly on the issue of official knowledge and authorization of Lt. Col. North's activities," North's lawyers said in court papers.

Court rules require that the prosecution have had an opportunity to question the testimony. Gesell said that was not done, since the congressional committee and the prosecution are not one and the same.

Poindexter, to be tried separately later this year in the Iran-Contra affair, is charged with conspiracy, theft of government property, obstruction of Congress and making false statements to a congressional committee. He said he will invoke his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination if asked to testify at the North trial.

In his testimony to Congress, Poindexter said "there was no doubt in my mind" that North would withhold information from the House Intelligence Committee in August 1986. But "I did not authorize" North to make false statements, Poindexter said. North is accused of obstructing Congress in connection with that Aug. 6, 1986, meeting.

Asked whether he thought it was proper for documents to have been destroyed on Nov. 21, 1986, as the attorney general launched a fact-finding inquiry on the Iran initiative, Poindexter responded:

"Senator, I don't have any problem with it. ... these are working documents in the staff offices."

Last Friday, Gesell quashed North's subpoena for former President Reagan to appear at the trial. The judge ruled there was no proof that Reagan while in the White House authorized North to engage in illegal conduct.

North is accused of obstructing Congress in November 1986 by altering, destroying, concealing and smuggling documents out of the NSC.

Poindexter also told Congress he was aware North was spending money supplied by Contra leader Adolfo Calero and regretted not taking a personal interest in North's concerns about his family's safety.

Tugs pull the Exxon Valdez off a reef in Prince William Sound to refloat it Wednesday

Alaska Asks Coast Guard Help To Clean Up Oil Spill

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VALDEZ, Alaska — Angry state officials asked the Coast Guard to take the helm of the cleanup of the nation's worst oil spill, and an enraged judge ordered a $1 million bail for the captain of the now freed Exxon Valdez.

"We have a man-made destruction that has not been equaled, probably, since Hiroshima," Judge Kenneth Rohl said in setting the bail for fired Capt. Joseph Hazelwood after he surrendered in New York state. Hazelwood was jailed, and an extradition was pending.

In Washington, officials from Exxon Corp., the Bush administration and the state of Alaska were called to the Capitol to brief members of Congress today on the spill.

With the slick now larger than Delaware, Gov. Steve Cowper asked Coast Guard Rear Adm. Edward Nelson Jr. to take control of the cleanup.

Cowper said Nelson indicated he would, but a formal decision was pending.

The governor charged that Exxon has been too bureaucratic in overseeing the cleanup, and other state officials complained of a lack of planning and inadequate updates.

"We think there has to be a much more disciplined management structure," Cowper told reporters. "Maybe that's been the problem all along. You need a military system to get things done."

In his letter to Nelson, Cowper noted that less than 4 percent of the 10.1 million gallons of oil spilled in Prince William Sound on March 24 had been recovered, and that the slick had reached the Gulf of Alaska.

But Exxon spokesman Henry Beathard said the company believed it was the best organization to manage the effort.

"We gathered all the resources and organized the cleanup," he said. "We think the most effective and efficient way to carry out this project is (for Exxon) to continue."

The tanker was freed from Bligh Reef, 25 miles outside Valdez, with an infusion of compressed, inert gas into its hull, a rising tide and a nudge from six smoke-belching tugboats, which steered it on a slow 30-mile journey to a remote cove.

Two skimmers and boats pulling two containment booms trailed the tanker, mopping up a sheen of oil.

The ship had to evade thousands of icebergs, some as big as houses.

"We're not going to move fast," said Gary Gorski, Exxon's salvage coordinator. "We're trying to work our way around these little dorky bits out here."

A newspaper, meanwhile, reported that a Coast Guard investigator speculated that Hazelwood unknowingly had set the ship on a collision course with the reef and then apparently placed it on automatic pilot without telling the third mate.

The uncertified third mate was at the helm when the ship ran aground, but the investigator said there was no way to confirm if being on automatic pilot played a part in the accident, the Anchorage Times said.

Asked about the report, a Coast Guard spokesman, Chief Warrant Officer Rick Meidt, said: "None of the facts in that story are in dispute to the best of my knowledge."

Hazelwood, 42, is charged with operating a ship while drunk, reckless endangerment and negligent discharge of oil. The misdemeanors carry a maximum penalty of 2 1/4 years in prison and a $10,000 fine upon conviction.

FBI officials in Washington said they are investigating whether Hazelwood could be charged with felony violations of the Clean Water Act, which prohibits negligent discharge of pollutants into navigable waters.

Flow through the trans-Alaska pipeline has returned to its normal daily amount of 2.1 million barrels, according to the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. Oil flow from the North Slope had been cut by 60 percent because of tanker restrictions in Valdez harbor.

Shell, Chevron Limit Gasoline Deliveries To Western States

SEATTLE (AP) — Two major oil companies have limited gasoline deliveries to wholesale distributors in Western states in what one spokesman called the first U.S. gas rationing since the Arab oil embargo of the early 1970s.

The limits were meant to prevent hoarding of gasoline in the wake of the Alaska oil spill, spokesmen for Shell Oil Co. and Chevron Corp. said Wednesday. Shell's decision to put a cap on its deliveries to wholesalers in Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho, Utah, Nevada and Arizona resulted from excessive buying by distributors in the last week, said Bill Gibson, a company spokesman in Houston.

"Some of our Western regional (wholesalers) began buying excessive amounts of gasoline last week, and this (program) is strictly in response to that," said Gibson.

He denied Shell's "supply management program" was put into effect because of shortages in crude supplies.

The decision to limit sales to 90 percent of the gasoline the wholesalers purchased in April 1988 went into effect Monday and will remain until Shell decides it's no longer necessary, he said.

He said it was the first gasoline rationing he could recall since the Arab oil embargo of 1973-74.

The wholesalers rushed to purchase gasoline after the tanker Exxon Valdez ran aground in Alaska's Prince William Sound on March 24, dumping more than 10 million gallons of crude in what became the nation's worst oil spill.

Chevron began its rationing three days after the accident in anticipation of stepped-up gasoline purchases, said company spokesman Mike Libbey in San Francisco.

On March 27, Chevron began to limit deliveries to 100 percent of contract agreements to make sure there'd be enough gasoline to go around, Libbey said.

Major West Coast refineries rely heavily on Alaska oil to make gasoline and other products. The pipeline from Alaska's North Slope to Valdez usually carries 2 million barrels of crude a day, but that was reduced to 800,000 barrels a day after the spill limited tanker loadings at the port.

Protesters

RALEIGH (AP) — Two Duke University students who padlocked a gate at the Governor's Mansion during a protest in support of Eddie Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs last month were charged with misdemeanors Wednesday.

Bonnie Lynn Freid and Robin Alise Bhaerman, both 22, were charged with disorderly conduct at a public facility and conspiracy to commit disorderly conduct.

Women Leaders To Meet At ECU

East Carolina University will host the 10th anniversary spring forum of Women Administrators in North Carolina Higher Education June 1-2.

The purpose of WANCHE, organized in 1977 under sponsorship of the American Council on Education, is to increase the number of women in positions of leadership in colleges and universities.

The two-day program includes addresses by Dr. Cynthia Tyson, president of Mary Baldwin College, Staunton, Va.; Dr. Patricia Sullivan, vice president of academic affairs at Texas Woman's University; Dr. Marilyn Haring-Hidore, dean of the school of education, University of Massachusetts at Amherst, and Dr. Betty Siegel, president of Kennesaw State College in Georgia.

Dr. Helen Grove, dean of the ECU School of Home Economics, will present a program on managing organizational change, explaining four models. Dr. Callie Coaxum, associate vice chancellor for academie affairs at Fayetteville State University, will present a 10th year retrospective for WANCHE.

The organization uses state-based networking involving women and men holding administrative positions in higher education and women who aspire to such roles. It holds two formal meetings each year.

For reservations and registration information, contact Dr. Betsy H. Harper, director of Cooperative Education, 1028 General Classroom Bldg., East Carolina University, Greenville, NC 27858.

Mayor Says Chief Didn't Act Improperly

monitor all citations issued by the Winterville police in the future, and the clerk of court is to audit all Winterville citation books.

Haigwood requested the SBI inquiry in January, after two Winterville officers claimed they were unjustly fired because they refused to obey Smith's order to give town officials and their families special treatment. Town aldermen denied any formal policy ordering special treatment, and Haigwood said the SBI investigation revealed that the board did not direct Smith to void the ticket.

The younger Weathington also did not request that the citation be voided, Haigwood said. Considering that, and the time lapse since the ticket was issued, Haigwood said he decided not to reinstate the traffic charge.

Hines said this morning he does not believe Smith ever acted improperly.

"All this happened when the chief was new in the police business. He had never been informed about how to take care of all this," Hines said. "I don't know if you could say if it's our fault or his fault or whose fault it is. I just need to talk to my board."

Hines contended Summerlin did not tell the truth to SBI investigators. In the incident, Hines said Summerlin issued the younger Weathington a citation, but also issued three warning tickets the same day for the same offense. When Smith discussed the situation with Summerlin, the officer agreed that he had not been fair, Hines said.

"The chief didn't do it," he said. "Tony is the one that voided the ticket. (Smith) talked with him about it. But Tony did the voiding. Then Tony told a doggone story about it in the investigation. It makes it kind of complicated when you change the story."

"The way I look at it, (Smith) didn't do anything wrong," Hines said.

Hines said he believes Smith has the best interest of the town's people at heart and is doing a good job. He does not foresee any action by the board against Smith, he said.

Smith could not be reached for comment at the Winterville Police Station.

Former Winterville Officers Harold Evans and Ralph Whitehurst initially complained that they were unjustly fired, and Summerlin later resigned, claiming Smith told him he would be fired. Summerlin has since been hired by Pitt Sheriff Ralph Tyson as a jailer.

Winterville residents also levied other accusations against Smith, but Haigwood said the investigation focused solely on the traffic ticket situation and did not uncover other criminal activity.

Thieves Get Away With Computer

Investigators said seven thefts, including a $12,000 computer system, were reported to Greenville police Wednesday.

Officer W.S. Heath said the computer system was taken from Gold Leaf Warehouse at the intersection of Charles Boulevard and 14th Street in a break-in reported at 11:04 a.m., while more than $1,500 worth of jewelry, including 12 gold chains, a pearl necklace and earring set and a watch were taken from 1807 McClellan St. in a break-in reported at 1:13 p.m.

Officer J.G. Bridges said 15 cases of baby formula, $100 worth of assorted medicines, a microwave oven and a radio-tape player were taken from 1730 W. fifth St. in a break-in reported at 7:09 a.m.

Officer C.A. Curtis said $100 in cash was taken from 1806 Kennedy Circle in an incident reported at 9:31 a.m., while Officer R.L. Smith said a quantity of pennies were taken from 212 Manhattan Ave. in a break-in reported at 12:03 p.m. and $14 in change was taken from the Pet Village pet shop at 511 S. Evans St. in an incident reported at 4:32 p.m.

According to Officer J.W. Corbett, tires valued at $247 were taken from Sears Roebuck & Co. at Carolina East Mall in a larceny by trick incident reported at 6:41 p.m.

superintendent who manages the maintenance facility.

Stasavich said Capt. Michael Branch, city fire marshal, and state ground water protection officer Richard Powers were at the site this morning. Both verified that neither tank was leaking, he said.

According to Jim Shepherd, public information officer for the state Division of Environmental Management, the source of the oil remains undetermined. He said samples have been taken from the creek to determine what kind of petroleum product is in the water and whether it matches the oil in any adjacent tanks.

The investigation will continue, he said.

Tale Of Dogtown Is Just A Memory

By Charles Hillinger
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

DOG TOWN, Calif. — This 19th century Gold Rush town, five miles up a one-lane twisting mountain road from Angels Camp, is but a memory today. Not much is left of Dogtown, and what little is left is rapidly falling apart.

In its heyday from 1849 to the turn of the century, Dogtown was one of the biggest hydraulic mining camps in California. Hundreds of men operating giant hoses equipped with rotating nozzles washed down vast mountain slopes here in search of gold.

"There were Chinese, Chilean, Cornish, French, Indian, Mexican, black and Yankee miners. There were hotels, boardinghouses, a dance hall, stores, saloons, a red-light district and hundreds of cabins and tents scattered about," recalled Gloyd A. "Bud" Ponte.

"It was a booming mining camp full of stray dogs. That's how it came by its strange name," explained Ponte, 71, a rancher, longtime president of the Calaveras Historical Society and a fourth-generation Dogtown.

And for 20 years Dogtown was the home of Windsor A. Keefer, a suave, sophisticated promoter with dark, wavy hair who was reputed to be the best-dressed man in the Mother Lode. He often wore ankle-length fur coats.

A local reservoir bears his name. He built it. He was one of the owners of what is now Calaveras Big Trees State Park, 20 miles northeast of here.

He owned several mines and water companies. He erected one of the first electric-generating plants in the West. He was also accused of floating bogus mining stock and bilking investors in many of his enterprises.

On March 24, 1897, he vanished, never again to be seen. "Was He Murdered?" "Did He Flee to Avoid the Wrath of His Victims?" headlined the newspapers. Stories about the mysterious disappearance of Dogtown's best-known resident filled California newspapers for weeks.

Eight years later, it was reported that Keefer was seen in Paris, living the life of luxury. But there is no proof that the story was true.

Today, all that remains of old Dogtown are scattered building foundations and half a dozen wooden structures on the verge of collapse. Surrounding ranches and three homes of relatively recent vintage along French Gulch Creek occupy what once was a riotous mining camp.

"There's still gold in these hills. Those old-time miners didn't get it all," insisted Lenny Owen, 33, one of three prospectors living in Dogtown. Bernie Dorsey, 43, and his wife Carolyn, 33, are the other two who hope to strike it rich in the old Dogtown diggings.

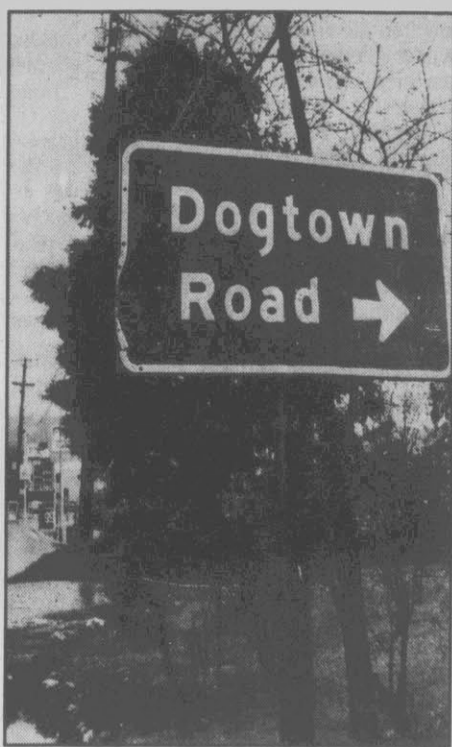

Rancher Bud Ponte's great-grandfather was one of the original Dogtown miners. He had been a ship's captain, sailing out of El Paraiso, Chile, when he got gold fever, gave up the sea and sought his fortune here.

Ponte was born in Dogtown, as were his parents and grandmother. His grandparents and father went to Dogtown School.

He pointed to a collection of old news stories that document the town's share of gunfights, excitement, tragedies and unusual occurrences. When the Ross Reservoir gave way in 1899 and flooded Dogtown, it swept away a good part of the mining camp, including Otto Lunt, who rushed to his cabin to save his dog.

Lunt, a miner from Germany, was last seen alive holding his dog in his arms and waving from the window of his cabin as it floated away in the raging waters.

One news story described the suicide of Charlie Ferants, a singer of Spanish songs in a Dogtown cabaret. He hanged himself from a tree. Shortly after that, the tree died, too. Another story was about woodchopper Manuel Lopez, who found $300 in $20 gold pieces in a hollow in a tree he felled. He took the money, went to town and drank himself to death, all in the same day.

"All we have left is memories. Like memories of the old Dogtown schoolteachers: Lizzie Kaler, Mayme Duffy, Annie Gallagher, and Mrs. Mulgrew," Ponte mused.

"Justice in Dogtown was quick in my great-grandfather's time. If somebody did something wrong — robbed somebody, stole a horse or assaulted a woman — he was strung up before sundown. That was the way it was when Dogtown was in its prime."

Will They Wear Name Tags In Heaven?

My husband and I watched an old movie the other night with a poignant farewell scene in it. "Imagine," said the man on his deathbed, "I'll soon be living with all the great presidents and statesmen of our time. I'll have the same address as movie stars and astronauts. All my sports heroes will be there. I'll be among friends."

As the credits rolled by, I wiped a tear from my cheek and said to my husband: "Do you think that's really the way it is? You get to heaven and all the people you admired in your lifetime will be there? Can't you see me running up to Amelia Earhart or Fanny Brice or Montgomery ... oh, you know his name."

"General Montgomery?"
"Why would I run up to General Montgomery? I'm talking about the good-looking man who played opposite Elizabeth Taylor."

"Richard Burton."

"I'm not going to talk to you anymore if you don't make sense. Does his name begin with Montgomery? Think! He was in a movie once with Jimmy Dean."

"The guy who makes sausages?"

"No, no, the one who played with Marlon Whatshisname."

"Perkins."

"Marlin Perkins! I haven't thought about him in ages. Who was the guy who always wrestled the crocodiles while Marlin was selling insurance in the tent nearby?"

"Jim something or other. Give me a minute."

"Now you've got me off the subject. What was my question?"

"I don't remember."

We sat there for a while, and then I said, "Do you suppose they wear name tags?"

"Who?"

"All those people walking around heaven."

"Sure," he said, "like, 'Hi, I'm Abe Lincoln from Illinois.'"

"I'm serious. What if I'm talking to Humphrey Bogart and my cousin comes up ... you know, the one who married the guy whose name I never remember? Or what if William Shakespeare shaved off his beard and I don't know him? I CAN'T DIE. MY MEMORY'S SHOT!"

"Maybe it all comes back, like hair," he said absently. "Probably no one in heaven is bald either."

"I'll never recognize Gandhi," I groused. "It's probably just one big Jeopardy game in the sky where all day long you struggle to remember names."

"Then why do they call it heaven?" he said.

"Aggressive travel agent?" I ventured.

He brightened. "Clift ... Montgomery Clift, that's who you were thinking about."

I clutched his arm gratefully. "You know what this means, don't you? We go together ... or we don't go at all."

Having Stripper At Retirement Party Was One Tasteless Stunt

Dear Abby: I recently attended a party to honor a much-loved and highly respected high school teacher who was retiring after 38 years of service. His wife and family attended, as did all the other teachers.

The social committee hired a young woman to "crash" the party dressed in a policeman's uniform, and give the retiring teacher a "citation." Then, to the accompaniment of some taped music, she stripped down to a black fishnet body stocking with a few doodads here and there, and proceeded to fondle the honored guest while trying to involve him in a very sexy dance!

The honoree was visibly embarrassed but tried to be a good sport. The guests were also embarrassed, but laughed to hide their embarrassment. I was more angry than embarrassed. My first impulse was to leave, but I didn't want to insult the guest of honor and his family, so I stayed and simmered.

Abby, what should a disapproving guest have done under such trying circumstances? — Pittsburgh School Teacher

Dear Abby

Dear Teacher: A disapproving guest should have done exactly what you did — remained and politely tolerated the tasteless stunt. I'm sure the social committee meant well, but their judgment was out to lunch.

Dear Abby: As a child my mother taught me that when I was in a store trying on clothes, after I took a dress off I was to put it back on the hanger.

I never realized how unusual my mother was until I started working in a beautiful dress shop. I am appalled at the way some women treat the clothes they have tried on! They drop them on the floor and step over them, or wad several dresses together and throw them over a chair — not to mention how they yank the garments over their thighs and split the seams.

Once I waited on a young woman who was trying on dresses. Her mother was with her, and when the girl started to put a dress back on the hanger, her mother said, "Oh, don't bother to do that — the salesgirl will do it!"

Please mention this in your column. Perhaps some people don't realize that when they beat up the merchandise, the store has to mark it down, and they're the ones who take the beating. — Old-Time Salesgirl

Dear Salesgirl: You may have done the retail merchants a great favor by writing this letter. (It's a first.)

Ladies, when trying on garments, treat them all as though you were going to own them.

Dear Abby: This concerns the letter from "Mr. Clean Plate," whose wife considered it bad manners to finish all the food on the plate. You answered, "It's bad manners to mop up every drop of gravy with a piece of bread."

Abby, that's true in public or when you have guests for dinner, but it's all right in your own home with family. My mother is a wonderful cook. When she makes goulash or chicken livers with rice, I clean my plate. Sometimes when no one is looking, I even lick my plate! Mom considers it the highest compliment. — Lickin' And Loving' It On Long Island

Dear Lickin': I'm all for complimenting mother on her cooking, but licking the plate in the presence of others is for animals — not people.

Dear Abby: A man signed "U.S. Male" said that he and his wife were having a disagreement about what it means when the red flag is "up" on the mailbox.

When I was a kid in Allegan, Mich. (RR1), we would put the red flag up to let the postman know that there was something in the box to be picked up.

After he picked it up, he'd put the red flag DOWN to let us know that he had picked it up. If, however, there was incoming mail only, the postman would put the flag UP to let us know that he had been there. — Jeanne Barney, Hollywood

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Memorial Service Planned For Dupree

A memorial service for Greenville native Louis Dupree, considered by many the world's foremost expert on Afghanistan, will be conducted at 10:30 a.m. Friday in Duke Chapel on the Duke University campus in Durham.

Dupree, who lived and studied in Afghanistan for 40 years and was regarded by Afghans as a freedom fighter, died of lung cancer March 21 at 63 years of age. At the time of his death, he was a professor at Duke University and at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The Rev. Williams Willimon, Duke University minister, will officiate at the memorial service. Ehsan Entezar, formerly an associate professor at the University of Kabul in Afghanistan, will present a recitation from the Holy Qur'an. James B. Duke Professor Ralph Braibant, director of Islamic and Arabian Development Studies, will give a talk titled "Tribute To A Mujahid."

Since Dupree was a highly decorated paratrooper during World War II, ushers at the service will be cadets from Duke ROTC units.

The service is open to the public. Relatives and Dupree's high school classmates from this area expect to attend. Among those attending from Greenville will be Bill Lee, Ralph Garrett, Edith Williams and Mr. and Mrs. J.B. Smith.

According to J.B. Smith, a local businessman who was Dupree's schoolmate at Greenville High School, Dupree graduated in the war class of 1942. He said the class was composed of male members of the class of 1943 who were in the top 30 percent of the class and who were allowed to graduate in November so they could enter the service.

Kinston Indians Ease Past Pirates, 9-1

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

KINSTON — East Carolina University's Pirates, down in their pitching order, went down to a 9-1 defeat at the hands of the Kinston Indians, the Class A farm club of the Cleveland Indians, Wednesday night at Grainger Stadium.

The action was the first of the year for the Indians, who struggled themselves at times, but had too much manpower for the Pirates.

"We saw some exceptional pitching tonight," ECU coach Gary Overton said of the three moundmen who worked for the Indians. "That we got five hits off them speaks pretty well for us."

At the same time, the Pirates used a number of hurlers who had seen little action thus far this season. Starter Dallas McPherson, a former Rose High School pitcher, had thrown only two innings prior to the game. He was relieved by Preston Bowers, who had only one inning to his credit. Owen Davis, with one prior inning, and David Willis, with three and two-thirds frames, finishing up the game.

McPherson, a freshman, admitted that he had been nervous about making his first start as a Pirate against the professional team. "I found out Tuesday that I would start," he said. "I was a little nervous coming down here. I felt that if I could throw them strikes and let them hit it, the defense would do the job. After the first pitch the butterflies dropped down and acted like it was just another game."

Overton said that because of more important Colonial Athletic Association games, and a contest set with N.C. State in Greenville tonight, the Pirates were not able to use any of their front line pitchers. Still, he termed it a great experience for the players. "They faced a fine baseball team. I was not real happy with the defense at times and with the errors we made. Too, when we loaded the bases a couple of times, their pitchers really bore down and got the job done."

While the Pirates scored but once, they did have several other chances. They left runners at first and second in the opening frame, the bases loaded in the third and fourth and men at first and third in the sixth.

And while the Pirates got only five hits, only three Pirates collected them. Both John Thomas and Kevin Riggs picked up two hits.

"They threw hard," Thomas said. "But when they got the ball low, it didn't seem as fast. If they got it up waist-high or higher, it really seemed fast."

Kinston's starting pitcher, David Oliveras, was clocked on a number of pitches above 90 miles per hour — pitching the Pirates don't see during the regular season.

Kinston scored first with an unearned run in the first off McPherson. With one away, Ramon Bautista reached on an error and Mark Lewis, Cleveland's number one draft choice this past year, walked. Ken Whitfield, a Kinston veteran, then singled to left, scoring Bautista.

East Carolina tied it up in the third. Adams walked as did Tommy Eason. With two away, John Gast singled to drive in Adams.

The Indians, who are the Carolina League's defending champions, struck back quickly with two in the bottom of the inning. Lewis doubled to left and scored on a single to center by Whitfield. Rick Falkner reached on an error, allowing Whitfield to score.

State Probe Growing Additional Charges Investigated

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A panel examining North Carolina State University's basketball program has broadened its inquiry into reports that players received cash payments and cars from athletic boosters and sold complimentary game tickets and athletic shoes.

The panel's primary emphasis has been on whether there were academic irregularities. But according to interviews with several people close to the committee, State Bureau of Investigation agents have uncovered information about other matters that spurred debate among panel members about how far to extend the scope of the inquiry, the News and Observer of Raleigh reported in Thursday editions.

The four-member panel, established by the University of North Carolina system, is relying on the legwork of three SBI agents who have conducted dozens of interviews and have pored over hundred of pages of documents, according to the newspaper.

The panel was appointed Jan. 27 by UNC system President C.D. Spangler Jr. in response to reports that a book charging widespread corruption was about to be published. That book, "Personal Fouls," was withdrawn in late February by Simon & Schuster, which issued a statement saying the book did not meet company standards.

But the panel has continued its inquiry. Samuel H. Poole, panel chairman, said this week he hoped to finish the investigation by the end of the school year, which is about four weeks away.

The NCAA is also continuing its own investigation, which was requested Jan. 9 by Wolfpack head coach Jim Valvano and N.C. State Chancellor Bruce R. Poulton.

Charles E. Smrt, director of enforcement for the NCAA, would not comment on that investigation.

Mullins, WF Discuss Job

WINSTON-SALEM — North Carolina-Charlotte coach Jeff Mullins said he has talked with Wake Forest officials, but only to recommend two others for the job of Demon Deacon basketball coach.

Mullins had just returned from Seattle and the Final Four, where he called Wake Forest officials there to recommend assistant Dave Odom of Virginia and assistant Eddie Payne of South Carolina. President Thomas K. Hearn and Athletic Director Gene Hooks of Wake Forest were in Seattle from Friday through Monday in search of a replacement for Bob Staak, who resigned March 29.

"From day one two very good friends of mine in the coaching community have been interested," Mullins said Wednesday. "I've been a 'recommender,' and that's the way I will stay."

"I've known Dave Odom and Eddie Payne for a long time and both are very, very good candidates. Like

Rose Reportedly Bet Big On Baseball During 1987

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Pete Rose bet heavily on baseball games during the 1987 season under a code-name, two Ohio newspapers said Wednesday, citing unidentified sources.

If true, the Cincinnati Reds manager could be banned from baseball — for life if he bet on games involving his own club.

A person referred to in an Internal Revenue Service court affidavit as "G-1" — whom the Plain Dealer of Cleveland and the Cincinnati Post quoted sources as saying was Rose — bet $8,000 to $16,000 a day on games during a stretch early in the 1987 season.

Although Rose is not referred to by name in the IRS affidavit, the newspapers said they were told by federal sources the code name "G-1" means Rose.

Rose declined comment on the newspaper reports.

The Post quoted the document as saying G-1 bet an average of "$2,000 per game on four to eight games per day, approximately four days per week."

The IRS affidavit quoted unidentified government informants as saying the bets were placed through Ronald Peters, 31, a Franklin, Ohio, cafe owner who was described in a Sports Illustrated story as Rose's principal bookmaker. Peters said Monday he would plead guilty to federal charges of tax evasion and cocaine distribution.

Peters declined to tell reporters whether he had any knowledge of Rose having bet on baseball games. Peters, under pressure of his plea agreement with federal prosecutors, is cooperating with federal investigators looking into drug trafficking.

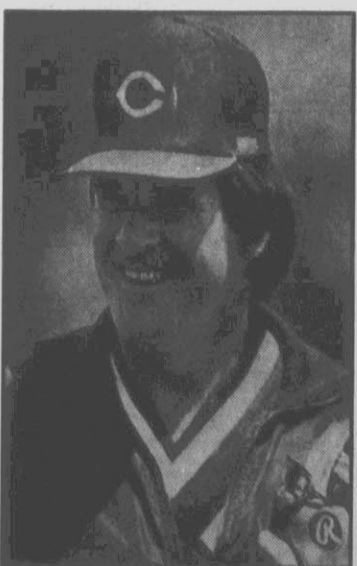

The newspapers also reported the document indicates that Paul Janszen, a friend of Rose's, urged Peters to pay a $50,000 gambling debt the bookie owed Rose and Janszen.

The Plain Dealer said U.S. District Court records show Janszen became an FBI informant and began wearing a wireless microphone in April 1988 and that federal agents taped at least four conversations about the debt. Janszen's lawyer, Merlyn Shiverdecker, declined comment on the reports.

FIBA Expected To Vote Pros In

By Bill Barnard
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

How about a starting lineup of Karl Malone, Charles Barkley, Patrick Ewing, Magic Johnson and Clyde Drexler for the 1992 U.S. Olympic team in Barcelona?

With FIBA, the international governing body for basketball, expected to open the Olympics to all professionals when they vote in Munich, West Germany, on Friday, that possibility is closer to reality.

But according to an Associated Press survey of 295 NBA players, they are a long way from speaking with one voice about whether the NBA should be allowed to play and whether they would play if allowed to participate.

Malone, Barkley, Ewing, Johnson and Drexler were among the 47.1 percent who believe that NBA players should be allowed into the Olympics and who would play if the league's players gain entry.

"I would go in a heartbeat," Malone said. "I'd pay my own ticket over there. It teed me off when the Russians were high-fiving like they had beaten America's best and I knew they hadn't."

"It's about time for us to let to world see what we can really do," Johnson said. "I definitely would like to play. The Soviets think they can beat us, but they haven't beaten our best. All they've done is beat our best collegiate players. It was very tough for me to see them lose last summer."

Almost two-thirds of NBA players think professionals should be allowed in the Olympics, but only 58 percent said they would play if they could.

The majority of those opposed to participation said the Games are better suited to college players and that NBA players would make a travesty of competition.

Others said that it would disrupt their family life, or that they doubted NBA owners would let them play.

A total of 185 players — 62.7 percent — answered yes when asked by the AP if NBA players should be allowed in the Olympics. Another

Seve Seeks Title Win Would Be Third Of Decade

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Seve Ballesteros needs a third Masters championship in the 1980s to equal a mark set by two of this event's most acclaimed players — Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer.

Nicklaus, the only six-time winner, and Palmer claimed three titles each during the decade of the 1960s.

No one did that before.

No one has done it since.

Ballesteros, the reigning British Open champion, cut his appearances on the PGA Tour five weeks ago when he became ill with the flu at the Honda Classic.

After spending two weeks at home in Spain, he returned to the Tour, finishing in a tie for 30th at New Orleans two weeks ago and sharing third last week at Houston.

"I still have a bad cold, but I feel better than the last week," Ballesteros said Wednesday on the eve of the 53rd Masters, which opened today with an international field of 85 on the 6,905-yard, par 72 Augusta National Golf Club course.

"I feel nearly 100 percent healthy," he said.

The improvement in his health also has Ballesteros thinking there's a chance he could be don a third green jacket on Sunday when the season's first major championship comes to an end.

"My game is getting better and better, week after week," he said. "I feel nearly ready. I hope I can play well this week and maybe be in contention on Saturday for the green jacket."

Ballesteros won his first Masters in 1980 and claimed the title for the second time in 1983. He had a chance in 1986 and 1987, tying for second both times, losing the latter in a three-way playoff with Greg Norman and eventual champion Larry Mize.

Nicklaus Is Ready Back Problem Not Bothering Him

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Although his back problems have flared up again, Jack Nicklaus believes he's still ahead of where he was a year ago at the Masters.

"Last year I didn't even think I'd be here, so I guess I'm a big notch up on that," said Nicklaus, whose unmatched career was threatened by serious back difficulties last year.

Nicklaus, holder of a record 18 major professional titles, including six Masters crowns, suffered painful spasms last Friday.

As late as Tuesday, he said, he was not certain he'd be able to play in the 53rd Masters that got underway today on the Augusta National Golf Club course.

"It's a lot better," he said Wednesday. "It's not 100 percent, and that's disappointing, not being able to come in here 100 percent."

"I'd like to play well here if no place else," Nicklaus said.

"But at least I'm playing. I'm happy to be here. I'm happy to be playing. Who knows? Maybe I'll scare somebody."

ECU Adds Offensive, Defensive Wrinkles

East Carolina spent Wednesday afternoon's spring practice developing new offensive and defensive formations while also working on goal-line situations as the Pirates prepare for their second scrimmage of the spring Saturday.

"We need a great scrimmage," ECU coach Bill Lewis said. "This was our last practice in pads before Saturday and when Saturday comes, we need to get a lot done."

"We've still got 22 positions open, plus the kicking game is wide open too. The area where standouts the most right now is the offensive line. Grant Low and Stuart Southall are showing good leadership. Another plus is coach Steve Shankweiler. Not having to adjust to a new position coach makes a lot of difference to the offensive linemen," Lewis added.

Spring drills will conclude April 22 with the Purple/Gold game.

Sports Medicine Conference Set

The 19th annual Sports Medicine Conference for athletic trainers, coaches and team physicians will be held April 14-15 at East Carolina University.

Focusing on injuries associated with athletic competition, the conference program will present the skills and techniques covering prevention, treatment and rehabilitation of sports-related injuries. Certified athletic trainers, teacher trainers, coaches, students and team physicians will be attending.

Some of the topics to be covered include anatomy; leg, ankle and foot injuries; dermatological problems and meniscal repair in the knee. In addition a special workshop will be offered dealing with the role of psychology in sports medicine.

Sessions will be held Friday and Saturday in the Carol G. Belk (Allied Health Building) from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Advanced registration is required.

Contact the ECU Division of Continuing Education, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C. 27858-4353. Phone 757-6143.

Rose High Golfers Win Tri-Match

A pair of Rose High golfers tied for medalist honors as the Rampant linksters won a tri-match over New Bern and Washington Wednesday at Green Briar Country Club in New Bern.

The Rampants finished with a team score of 309, while New Bern was at 361 and Washington 398.

Mark and Brooks Honeycutt led the Rampants and tied for medalist honors with rounds of 76. Other Rose scores included Rob Thomas at 78 and Chris Warren at 79.

Rose, now 3-0, will be back in action Monday at a Big East Conference match in Wilson.

Ayden Middle Tops Savannah, 14-3

AYDEN — Ayden Middle School romped to a 14-3 win over Savannah Tuesday in junior high baseball action.

Brian Booth pitched the victory for Ayden while Orlando Peterson and Robert Moye had three hits apiece. Peterson also had two homers.

Some Openings Left In Pigskin Cookout

Forty entrants will again vie for the right to be known as the best pork barbecue cooker at the 6th annual Great Purple/Gold Pigskin Pigout Party on April 20-22, at East Carolina University.

There are several openings in the cooking contest still available and anyone interested should contact Phil Hatch at the Pirate Club, 757-6178.

The cooking contest will get underway at 7 p.m. April 21 at Ficklen Stadium with the arrival of the pigs. Fires will be lit at 9:30 p.m. and the cooking itself will begin at 10:30 p.m.

A special committee will judge the pigs on the morning of April 22 between 7 and 9 a.m. Barbecue plates will then begin being served at 10 a.m.

For the first time this year, a drive-through pickup on Charles Street, behind the Lady Pirate softball field, will be in operation.

Top prize in the pig cooking contest is a cash award of $500 and a $500 Pirate Club membership. Other prizes will be awarded through five places.

Tickets for the barbecue plates can be purchased in advance for $5, which includes a ticket to the Purple-Gold football game on April 22. On that day, meal prices will be $4 and football tickets, $2.50.

Powers Added To The Citadel Staff

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Don Powers, former East Carolina assistant head football coach, was named defensive coordinator at The Citadel, Coach Charlie Taaffe announced Wednesday.

Powers, 44, replaces Bill Doba, who resigned Monday to coach defensive backs at Washington State. Powers, like Doba, will be responsible for defensive backs at The Citadel.

"Don is well respected in the coaching ranks and has a very impressive background as a defensive coordinator," Taaffe said.

For the past four seasons, Powers worked as an assistant under former East Carolina coach Art Baker, who was coach of The Citadel from 1978 to 1982.

In 1985, Powers served as defensive coordinator and defensive backs coach. He was assistant head coach and defensive backs coach from 1986 to 1988.

Power also has coached at Western Kentucky and Western Carolina.

RALEIGH (AP) — An NFL exhibition game between the New York Jets and the Philadelphia Eagles to be played at Carter-Finley Stadium has been rescheduled to Aug. 20 and will be nationally televised.

The game had been scheduled for Aug. 19, but the date was changed to accommodate the national telecast by ESPN.

Johnson Leads Suns Past Jazz

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHOENIX — If this was a sneak preview of the playoffs, Kevin Johnson says he wanted his Phoenix Suns to get rave reviews.

Johnson scored 13 of his 32 points in the fourth period and Tom Chambers had 11 of his 30 in the final seven minutes as Phoenix beat the Utah Jazz 114-104 Wednesday night.

The victory put Phoenix 3 1/2 games behind the pacesetter Los Angeles Lakers in the NBA's Pacific Division, but two games ahead of the Midwest Division-leading Jazz in the race for the homecourt advantage in the Western Conference playoffs.

"It was a game we just had to win," said Johnson, who was 8-for-12 from the field and made 16 of 18 free throws. "We had to show them that we can play them even for the series just in case we end up playing them in the second round of the playoffs. It also lets them know that it's going to be very difficult to come in here and get a win."

Utah lost for the seventh straight visit and 31st in 35 games at the Arizona Veterans Memorial Coliseum despite 29 points from Karl Malone and 28 from Thurl Bailey.

"Who knows — we might meet them in the playoffs," Malone said. "Both teams played with a lot of intensity like it was the playoffs already."

In Wednesday's only other NBA game, it was Atlanta 135, Philadelphia 93.

Phoenix, 33-5 at home this season, including a 26-0 mark against Western Conference foes, trailed 74-73 after a 10-1 Utah run with 3:53 left in the third quarter.

Malone was called for a personal foul and a technical with 2:57 remaining. Johnson sank one free throw, rookie Dan Majerle hit a pair and Chambers added two more foul shots 24 seconds later for a 78-74 lead.

Phoenix, ahead 82-77 entering the fourth period and 86-81 with 10:26 to go, saw the Jazz close to 89-88 on John Stockton's three-point play with 7:20 remaining.

Johnson made two free throws with 7:11 left, hit a layup 19 seconds later, then made five free throws in a 42-second span for a 102-96 lead with 4:02 to play. Chambers added a steal and stuff and Johnson had a layup to cap a 9-2 run for a 106-96 lead.

The Jazz never got closer than seven points thereafter as Chambers scored five points down the stretch.

Eddie Johnson finished with 21 points for the Suns, while Jeff Hornacek had 13 and Armon Gilliam 10 points and 15 rebounds.

"We pretty much controlled the tempo the last half of the third quarter and the fourth quarter," said Phoenix coach Cotton Fitzsimmons. "When we had to make some defensive plays, we made the ones we had to. Armon was outstanding and Mark West was a monster around the basket."

West was held scoreless in the game but had six of the Suns' nine blocked shots. Gilliam added two blocks.

Stockton had 23 points and 16 assists for Utah, which leads the league in defense, allowing just 99.7 points per game. Phoenix sports the NBA's No. 1 offense with a 118.4 average.

"Both teams really wanted this game and the intensity reflected that," Stockton said. "This is about as close as you can get to the playoffs. Our effort was there, but we made a few mistakes at the end. We kept up the defense in the beginning, but we didn't keep up the intensity."

The Jazz led 27-14 early in the game, 30-26 after the first quarter and 55-52 at halftime before the Suns opened the second half with a 10-2 run and then went ahead 71-64 midway through the third period.

"It was a pretty good ballgame up until the end when our legs got a little tired," said Utah coach Jerry Sloan. "I don't think it was their defense that won the game. It was their offense that took over in the stretch. They are a talented team with more finesse and quickness than us. That's what won it for them."

Hawks 135, 76ers 93

Atlanta scored more points in the first quarter than Philadelphia had in the first half, and the rout continued in the second half.

The Hawks outscored the 76ers 40-14 in the second quarter to extend a 15-point first-quarter lead to 78-37 at the half, with Reggie Theus scoring 20 of his 30 points in the first two periods.

The 78 points was the most Atlanta has scored this season in one half, and the 42-point margin of victory tied the all-time record for the Hawks, who beat San Diego 129-87 on Nov. 30, 1967.

Atlanta took a 26-6 lead with 4:31 left in the first quarter behind 10 points from Theus and Dominique Wilkins, and the game was never close after that.

The Hawks reached the 100-point mark with 3:56 remaining in the quarter on Moses Malone's three-point play that made it 100-52. It was 109-66 after three periods.

The Hawks' largest lead was 130-80 on Antoine Carr's technical foul shot with 2:53 to play.

Malone had 25 points and 12 rebounds for the Hawks, while Wilkins and John Battle each added 19. Philadelphia was led by Charles Barkley and Ron Anderson, who both had 18 points.

The teams meet again on Saturday night, this time in Chicago.

Four more crossed in the fourth. Mark Pike led off with a double to left center and scored on Bautista's single to right. Whitfield collected his third straight hit, chasing Bowers from the mound. Falkner reached on an error, scoring Bautista and Jim Bruske singled in Whitfield. Walks to Darren Epley and Jim Richardson brought Falkner over to up the lead to 7-1.

State Inquiry ...

One of those interviewed by the SBI was John A. Simonds Jr., a team manager during the 1986-87 season who was a primary source for a controversial book manuscript that triggered the inquiry.

Simonds, interviewed recently by a reporter for the Raleigh at his apartment in Tallahassee, Fla., where he is a student at Florida State University, said he was questioned by two SBI agents in February.

"They just showed up on my doorstep unannounced — scared the pants off me," Simonds said.

Simonds said the two-hour interview included questions about whether Wolfpack players had been paid for bogus summer jobs. Several players, Simonds said, were paid for work they never did by Wake County businesses owned by Wolfpack supporters. Another, he said, was paid $50 for sweeping the Case Athletic Center at night after the gym already had been swept.

Simonds said he also told investigators that Wolfpack players traded their game tickets for gold jewelry at a store owned by a Raleigh jeweler who is a Wolfpack supporter.

Simonds said he also told SBI agents that players traded sneakers to local businesses for other shoes and clothing.

Simonds said he told the agents that some players openly admitted substituting "clean" urine samples during drug tests administered by the university, and that some boosters provided cars to players.

William F. Dowdy, chief investigator for the SBI, declined to comment about the investigation.

Weiss' Two Homers Aid Oakland's Rout

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

On the Oakland Athletics, hitting home runs is contagious. Even Walt Weiss is catching on.

Weiss, who had three homers in 481 career at-bats, homered twice Wednesday night as the Oakland Athletics beat the Seattle Mariners 11-1.

"I've never done that, and I don't know if I ever will again," said Weiss, who hit a two-run homer off Scott Bankhead in the second and a two-run homer off Tom Niedenfuer in the eighth.

Weiss had never before homered at home.

"This park's too big for me," he said. "I've got to hit them down the line to get them out."

Even though his glove won him last year's American League Rookie of the Year Award, Weiss wants to work on his bat. He got two hits in his last 21 spring training at-bats.

"I was actually happy with my spring," he said. "My swing was consistent and I had a lot of hard outs. I want to keep my swing as short as possible, as quick as possible. There's less margin for error that way."

Playing for a team with a lot of power, Weiss has learned what gets the attention.

"Hitting is where all the fun is — especially home runs," Weiss said.

He increased his weight to 180 pounds with an offseason weight-training program. He's also been working on quickening his swing.

"They tried to pound him inside three times, and the only time they got him out was when they went outside," Oakland manager La Russa said. "He's a tough out and likes to hit."

In other games, Kansas City beat Toronto 2-1, Minnesota beat New York 12-2 and California beat Chicago 6-2. Boston at Baltimore and Milwaukee at Cleveland were postponed by rain.

Mark McGwire and Dave Parker also homered for Oakland, which has won its first two games.

Welch gave up a homer to Dave Valle, two singles and triple. He struck out three and walked none and has allowed three earned runs in 20 1-3 career innings against Seattle, a 1.33 earned run average.

Greg Caderet and Eric Plunk finished with a hitless ninth.

Royals 2, Blue Jays 1

Dave Stieb's shutout streak ended at 34 innings and Danny Tartabull doubled with two outs in the ninth inning and scored the winning run on Pat Tabler's single off Todd Stottlemyre, who relieved Stieb to start the inning.

Stieb, who lost no-hitters with two outs in the ninth in his last two starts of 1988, gave up four hits, struck out four and walked two. He did not allow a hit until Willie Wilson's leadoff single in the fourth.

Stieb wasn't all that impressed with his streak.

"What was it, 34?" he said. "Well, it's irrelevant now."

Stieb's streak was 21 2-3 innings short of Walter Johnson's American League record, set in 1913, and 25 short of Orel Hershiser's streak, which also ended Wednesday night.

Twins 12, Yankees 2

Wally Backman's single snapped a fifth-inning tie and sparked an eight-run inning capped by Brian Harper's three-run homer.

Harper had three hits and drove in four runs to lead a 17-hit attack. Allan Anderson gave up seven hits in seven innings to improve his record to 11-2 since June 24.

Angels 6, White Sox 2

Lance Parrish had four hits and Chili Davis hit a three-run homer as California snapped a 13-game losing streak dating back to last season.

Brian Downing hit the 18th leadoff home run of his career and Parrish had his first four-hit game since July 25, 1986.

Chuck Finley allowed four hits in 6 1-3 innings, walked two and struck out three.

Dan Pasqua broke a bone in his right wrist when he jammed his arm against a railing in the sixth while attempting to catch Jack Howell's foul pop-up.

Phillies Top Cubs, 12-4; Schmidt Hits 50th

By Jim Donaghy THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

When Mike Schmidt is hitting in Wrigley Field, it doesn't matter if it's night or day.

Schmidt hit his 50th career homer in Chicago, a three-run shot in the fourth inning, as Philadelphia beat the Cubs 12-4 Wednesday night. Schmidt's previous 49 homers at Wrigley came under the sun.

"When you come in this park in April you expect cold weather and the wind to be blowing in," Schmidt said. "But we were lucky. Yesterday (Tuesday), the wind was blowing out and tonight it was calm with no wind at all."

The Cubs installed lights in Wrigley Field last summer and scheduled 18 night games at home this year.

Reds 4, Dodgers 3

Orel Hershiser's consecutive scoreless innings streak ended at 59 in the first inning at Riverfront Stadium when Todd Benzinger singled home Barry Larkin as Cincinnati beat Los Angeles.

Hershiser, who did not allow a run in his final six regular-season starts last year, pitched seven innings and gave four runs, two of them earned, on seven hits. The Cy Young winner and World Series MVP struck out six and walked one.

Cardinals 3, Mets 1

St. Louis spoiled Bob Ojeda's first start since he nearly severed the tip of his left middle finger as Willie McGee drove in two runs for the Cardinals with a homer and single.

The Cardinals snapped their 11-game losing streak in Shea Stadium and right-hander Jose DeLeon broke a personal nine-game skid against the Mets. DeLeon, who led the Cards' with 13 victories last season, allowed four hits in eight innings.

Ojeda almost severed the tip of his finger Sept. 21 when he lost control of hedgeclippers while gardening at home. The left-hander underwent six hours of microsurgery and spent most of the winter in rehabilitation.

He pitched 6 2-3 innings and allowed six hits and three runs, two earned. Last season, Ojeda was 10-13, and in 10 of his losses the Mets scored two runs or fewer.

Padres 4, Giants 3

San Diego won its first game of the season after two straight season-opening losses to San Francisco as Jack Clark's single keyed a three-run third inning.

Ed Whitson allowed six hits and struck out eight in 6 2-3 innings for the victory. He left in the seventh inning after giving up a two-run homer to Robby Thompson, and Mark Davis pitched the final 1 2-3 innings for a save.

It was the first time Whitson has beaten San Francisco in San Diego since June 15, 1984.

Pirates 3, Expos 0

Doug Drabek pitched a two-hitter and Pittsburgh took advantage of three errors to beat Montreal at Olympic Stadium. Drabek held the Expos to Hubie Brook's single in the first inning and a single by Andres Galarraga in the seventh.

Sid Bream doubled off 6-foot-10 rookie Randy Johnson, 0-1, in the fourth inning and scored the only run Drabek would need when shortstop Spike Owen failed to field a grounder by Junior Ortiz for an error.

Johnson pitched eight innings and allowed three hits, walked seven and struck out nine.

Braves 8, Astros 4

Jeff Blauer's two-run double in the fourth inning put Atlanta ahead for good and Gerald Perry had a pair of run-scoring doubles at the Astrodome.

Last season, the Braves lost 10 straight games at the start of the season and began 1989 with a loss to the Astros on Tuesday night.

Blauer's two-run double chased starter Bob Knepper after 3 2-3 innings and gave the Braves a 5-4 lead.

Andres Thomas singled, was sacrificed to second and, after Lonnie Smith walked, Blauer doubled to right field to put the Braves ahead. Perry followed with a double to score Blauer.

Olympic Vote Favors Pros ...

100, or 33.9 percent, said no; 10 had no answer or no opinion.

Asked if they would play, 172 players, or 58.3 percent, said yes; 114, or 38.6 percent, said no; and the rest, nine players, had no answer or no opinion.

Only 139 of 295 NBA players contacted by the AP said yes to both questions. There are a maximum of 300 players on the active NBA roster at any time — 12 players on each of the 25 teams.

If the proposal passes today, much would have to be decided between NBA and amateur basketball officials about how and when the U.S. team would be chosen.

The problems include having the NBA in playoffs until late June and the next Olympics in July. The regular season ends in late April, which could preclude tryouts — a sore point for some players in any case.

"If they picked me for the team,

I'd go, but I'm not trying out," said Barkley, a perennial All-Star now but an early cut by Coach Bob Knight from the 1984 Olympic team.

Twenty-seven players who thought professionals should not be allowed in the Olympics said they still would go if they could. Forty-six said professionals should be allowed, but they would not play.

Not everyone said why, but the most common reason, given by 60 players, was the belief that the Olympics are better suited for college players.

"For us to be selfish and say we want to win at all costs is not right," said Detroit's Isiah Thomas, who made the 1980 Olympic team but lost out to the U.S. boycott. "I'd hate to deprive a college player like Binbo Coles, for whom the Olympics are the crowning point of his career."

"I believe the Olympics are for amateurs, the college guys," said Kevin Johnson of the Phoenix Suns.

"Being an Olympian has always been a dream of mine and to get that opportunity would be great," said John Stockton of the Utah Jazz.

baseball and using bookies, he has admitted he frequently bets at race tracks.

Rose's lawyer, Reuven Katz, said Wednesday he would not comment on the report.

U.S. Attorney D. Michael Crites declined comment on the reports or whether the government is investigating Rose.

Washington lawyer John Dowd, who is directing baseball's investigation of Rose, was registered Tuesday night at a Cincinnati hotel.

Reds majority owner Marge Schott said she was not aware of the IRS affidavit. She said she would be surprised if Rose was involved in baseball betting.

Peters has an unlisted home telephone number and did not return a telephone message left at his restaurant. But his lawyer, James Ruppert, said he would not comment on the affidavit.

"Mr. Peters will continue to cooperate," Ruppert said. "That is his position and will continue to be his position, both with federal authorities and the baseball commissioner."

Janszen is serving a six-month sentence in a Cincinnati halfway house for tax evasion involving the sale of steroids.

On April 8, 1988, Janszen made a standing $200 bet with Peters on each Cincinnati Reds game, picking the Reds to win, the Post reported.

According to the newspaper reports, the document says the following happened in May 1987:

During the first or second week of May 1987, G-1 (Rose) and S-1, identified by other court documents as Janszen, together won approximately $25,000 from Peters. S-1 met Peters in Franklin, and in S-1's car, Peters gave him currency in stacks of $5,000 each.

The following week, S-1 took several thousand dollars to Peters, which was for losses of G-1.

Beginning in June 1987, G-1 began winning his bets with Peters. However, in June 1987, when S-1 went to Franklin to collect, Peters told S-1 that his wife "had gone crazy on him, and that she took $150,000 of his money." Peters told S-1 he could not pay at that time, but would pay S-1 soon.

Mullins said that he did not discuss with Hooks or Hearn the possibility of his leaving North Carolina-Charlotte for Wake Forest. When asked if he would be interested in the position if it were offered, Mullins said: "I'll give the same kind of answer I've been giving, that I'm very happy at Charlotte and I'm in the middle of trying to build a very solid program."

"I'm very comfortable here. I don't like dealing with 'what-ifs.'"

Odum and Payne met with Hooks in Seattle, as did Coach Les Robinson of East Tennessee State. Payne is also a candidate to succeed Billy Hahn as head coach at Ohio University. Hearn and Bartow spent seven years together at UAB, Hearn as vice president and Bartow as head basketball coach and athletic director.

Gorbachev Takes Peace Initiative To England

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Mikhail S. Gorbachev met Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher for talks today, smiling and waving to onlookers as he arrived at her 10 Downing St. residence.

The Soviet leader, bundled in an overcoat and scarf to ward off the cold, damp weather, posed for pictures with Mrs. Thatcher before the meeting began. Staff assembled inside the prime minister's residence burst into applause as the two leaders sat down.

Gorbachev arrived in London on Wednesday night from Cuba, where he proposed making Latin America a "zone of peace." He was expected to press for something similar in Europe in his talks with Mrs. Thatcher.

Mrs. Thatcher went to Heathrow Airport to greet the Soviet leader and his wife, Raisa, reflecting the close relationship that has grown between the Soviet leader and the staunchly anti-communist prime minister in the past five years.

Mrs. Gorbachev scheduled a day of sightseeing, starting with St. Paul's Cathedral, where she gave a bear hug to a 4-year-old girl who presented her with a bouquet of flowers.

Though Gorbachev's popularity in the West has grown, British officials have preferred to concentrate instead on the Kremlin's human rights record.

The Foreign Office welcomed

news the Soviets released nine prisoners believed jailed for religious activities or evading military service. But it said many cases remained outstanding.

It said it also had received details of 14 Jewish refuseniks who had won permission to emigrate. A Foreign Office spokesman, speaking anonymously, said the Soviets provided the list of names in response to a British request and that it, in effect, had brought Britain up to date on the status of various refuseniks.

Amnesty International welcomed the news but said more than 80 other "prisoners of conscience" remain in the Soviet Union.

About 50 people, including former Liberal Party leader David Steel, stood across the street from 10

Downing St., reading aloud from a list of 10,000 names of refuseniks being denied permission to leave the Soviet Union.

Press reports said the British were expected to question Gorbachev about reports the Soviets sold at least a dozen long-range fighter-bombers to Libya, a country Britain regards as a sponsor of terrorism.

British Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe, who was to meet with his Soviet counterpart, Eduard Shevardnadze, reiterated his call for more Soviet arms cuts.

"It is for them ... to reduce this very large dominance in conventional weapons that does overshadow Europe," Howe told British Broadcasting Corp. radio today.

The Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman, Gennady I. Gerasimov, told reporters Gorbachev and Mrs. Thatcher would discuss global and bilateral issues as well as regional problems, "especially southern Africa," which Mrs. Thatcher visited last week.

Gorbachev has made two previous visits to Britain since 1984, but the latest 40-hour trip has enabled the British to put on a sumptuous program to match the reception Mrs. Thatcher got when she visited the Soviet Union in 1987.

Before flying home on Friday, Gorbachev is to deliver a major speech in the splendid medieval setting of London's Guildhall, and have lunch with Queen Elizabeth II at Windsor Castle.

The Times, Daily Telegraph and Guardian today headlined unconfirmed reports the Soviets may invite the queen to Moscow, despite earlier hints that Mrs. Thatcher, who must approve the monarch's foreign travel, would veto the idea.

Refusenik, the British group lobbying for the release of Soviet Jews, urged the queen to turn down any invitation, fearing a visit could be misinterpreted as an endorsement of the human rights situation in the Soviet Union.

This is Gorbachev's first visit to a NATO country since the Armenian earthquake forced him to curtail his U.S. trip in December. He gave a preview of his vision for Europe on Sunday when he stopped over in Ireland en route to Cuba.

Declaring that "we feel very strongly that we are Europeans," Gorbachev said it was time "to set our common European house in order."

Solidarity Says Fight Just Begun

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity's leaders, uneasy partners with a government that for years tried to crush their movement, say hard work lays ahead now that they have won back legal status and a chance to build democracy.

Solidarity chairman Lech Walesa told a news conference today that the historic agreement was "a political victory" but cautioned that it could prove disastrous if "we are not able to make use of it."

Walesa and Interior Minister Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak sealed the deal Wednesday to reinstate the free trade union movement and give Poland its first free elections since the postwar Communist takeover.

"For the first time we have talked to each other using the force of arguments and not the arguments of force," Walesa said.

Grazyna Staniszevska, a member of the union's National Executive Committee, delivered a powerful plea to Poles to take advantage of the chance to make a democracy of the Soviet bloc's most politically liberal country.

"We have waited seven years. Our union is legal again. We cannot waste time. We must organize it," said the Solidarity leader from Bielsko-Biala.

"Solidarity must be efficient, wiser than ever before, so that it could defend people against exploitation and so that finally one could live a normal life in Poland," she said.

"The fight has just begun," said Alojzy Pietrzyk, a Solidarity leader from the southern city of Jastrzebie.

The agreement, under which the union is to work with authorities to revive Poland's crumbling economy, came after two months of intensive talks and also reinstates independent student, farmer and artistic organizations banned with Solidarity after a December 1981 military crackdown.

Under the accords, free elections are to be held in June for a parliament that Communist authorities will still control but in which the opposition would have strong representation.

Cambodian Groups Wary Of Viets' Withdrawal Plan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia — Resistance groups warily greeted Vietnam's pledge to end its 10-year military intervention in Cambodia by Sept. 30, and China vowed to continue arming the insurgents until the withdrawal is complete.

Resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk urged France, the site of previous peace talks, to organize an international conference to resolve the future of Cambodia.

Sihanouk said participants should include the five permanent U.N. Security Council members — China, the Soviet Union, the United States, France and Britain — in addition to Vietnam and all Cambodian factions.

China, the main supplier to the three groups trying to topple Cambodia's Vietnamese-backed government, said it was "entirely just" to keep aiding them until Vietnam makes good on its promise.

On Wednesday, Vietnam announced its remaining 50,000 to 70,000 troops would leave Cambodia by Sept. 30 to encourage a peaceful resolution of the turmoil that followed the Vietnamese invasion a decade ago.

Previously, Vietnam had said it would remove its soldiers by September only if a political settlement was reached but that the troops would be out by 1990 in any case.

Resistance groups expressed skepticism Vietnam would honor the new pledge.

In a written statement today from Beijing, Sihanouk said he rejected "all decisions, all conditions and all accords concerning Cambodia that are the illegal work of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, Laos and the 'quising' government in Phnom Penh."

He urged Vietnam to pull out of Cambodia as soon as possible under supervision of the United Nations, which would also supervise new elections.

Thailand and the United States praised the announcement. Indonesia said it would sponsor a meeting between Sihanouk and Cambodia's Vietnam-backed prime minister, Hun Sen, next month. A spokeswoman for Sihanouk said he planned to meet with Hun Sen on May 2 in Jakarta.

Wednesday's announcement did not indicate any conditions attached to the withdrawal. But the Vietnamese news agency quoted Vietnam's Foreign Secretary Nguyen Co Thach as urging Sihanouk to break with the Khmer Rouge, strongest of three groups in his resistance coalition.

Syrian Gunners Break Cease-Fire

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Syrian gunners today fired 10 mortar rounds at Christian army positions in mountains southeast of Beirut, breaking an Arab League call for a cease-fire after a month of fierce shelling duels.

A spokesman at Gen. Michel Aoun's command said the 120mm mortars were fired against positions manned by his troops in Souk el-Gharb. No casualties were reported.

"For the time being, the army is responding to the Syrian fire," the spokesman, who cannot be named in line with regulations, said without elaborating. But the cease-fire fire appeared to be holding along other fronts in Beirut and the surrounding mountains.

Police said the casualty toll from the month of fighting stood at 177 people killed and 576 wounded.

The truce was called Wednesday by Kuwaiti Foreign Minister Sheik Sabah Ahmed Sabah, who heads a six-man Arab League committee on Lebanon.

"We appeal to all the warring Lebanese parties to observe a cease-fire as of midnight Wednesday," Sabah said in Damascus before meeting with Syrian President Hafez Assad.

Aoun, who heads the Christian Cabinet in Lebanon's dual government, rejected any truce accord that does not specifically include the Syrians as the main adversary to his 20,000 strong Christian troops.

"There is only one power on the other side that can cease or unleash fire. It is the Syrian army, and any Lebanese cover for the Syrian army is unacceptable," Aoun said.

Asked to comment on the lull, a spokesman at Aoun's office, who refused to be named, said the general's "standard policy is that we will not shoot if the Syrian army stops shooting."

After Sabah's talks with Assad, Syrian presidential spokesman Jibril Kourieh said the Syrian leader expressed support to the Arab League committee.

"President Assad stressed the necessity that all cooperate to save Lebanon from the difficult circumstances it is going through so that this country becomes united in its territory and people and cooperates with the Arab nation," Kourieh said.

The cease-fire call was welcomed by acting Prime Minister Salim Hoss, who heads the pro-Syrian Moslem Cabinet in Lebanon.

Debbie Reynolds Stars In First 'Perry Mason' Musical Mystery

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — "Perry Mason" is doing its first musical mystery on NBC this Sunday, but don't look for Raymond Burr to sing and dance his way into your heart.

Debbie Reynolds, in a guest appearance as a fading movie star looking for a comeback in a Broadway-bound play, handles that chore.

The two-hour movie, "Perry Mason: The Case of the Musical Murder," also stars Raymond Burr as the intrepid lawyer, Barbara Hale as Della Street, William R. Moses and Alexandra Paul as his new investigators, and Jerry Orbach and Dwight Schultz. It was filmed on location in Denver.

Reynolds performs as Amanda

Cody, whose play is suddenly derailed when the promising young stage manager is accused of murdering the director. In the play, called "Polly," she's a bawdy house madam and sings two songs, "Polly" and "Madam," written by the show's musical director, Dick DeBenedictis.

"We did the musical in a lovely theater in Denver that Raymond had gotten permission for us to use," said Reynolds. "Polly's like a Polly Adler. She runs a house of ill repute. That gives it a little color, since it's not my image to play a madam. There aren't many good scripts for a woman my age."

"I like to play characters. Amanda is the sort of lady who's vain. She's a star, but she doesn't want to admit she's old enough to have a son. The young stage manager is really her son but she keeps passing him off as her friend. She's like Gypsy Rose Lee. You never knew she had a son until she died."

She said it was her first time to work with Burr, who was an established character actor when she began as a musical comedy star at MGM. She was in such movies as "Singin' in the Rain," "Tammy and the Bachelor," "How the West Was Won" and "The Unsinkable Molly Brown."

now in its second printing in this country.

She is married to Richard Hamlett of Roanoke, Va., a real estate developer who helps manage her business affairs.

"I keep saying I'm going to cut back, but I'm doing more now than I did when I was 20," Reynolds said. "I think I'm caught on the cowcatcher. I can't get off. I still work in Atlantic City and Reno."

The "Perry Mason" appearance is her first time on TV in about a year. The last thing she did was a movie called "Sadie and Son," about a policewoman and her son. She said it was probably intended as a pilot but she refused to sign a series agreement.

"I prefer to do theater," she said. "The roles are better. I don't want to compromise at my age and I don't want to go out doing scripts I hate. I have to travel a lot, but I prefer that. You have a choice. I'd teach before I'd do bad scripts."

Reynolds made two attempts at TV series, "The Debbie Reynolds Show" about 20 years ago and "Aloha Paradise" in 1981. Both shows were unsuccessful.

She has owned the dance rehearsal hall about 10 years. The hall, decorated with old movie posters and theater memorabilia, is a favorite place for dancers to work out.

Her last feature film was "What's the Matter with Helen?" about 18 years ago. Her daughter, Carrie Fisher, is very active in feature films, most notably in the "Star Wars" films.

Owner Says Famed Southfork Ranch Of 'Dallas' Is Meant To Make Money

By Dave Pego

PARKER, Texas — Terry Trippet has done his best to make certain

"Accidental Tourist" (PG) 7:05-9:15 Winner of Academy Award for Best Supporting Actress visitors to his world-famous Southfork Ranch can see everything they believe Texas has to offer.

He has installed a 183-foot-tall oil derrick.

He has stocked lush pastures with longhorn cattle and championship racehorses.

And as for a Texas millionaire? Well, he says, he just walks around the grounds as often as he can.

Trippet's ranch about 25 miles northeast of Dallas is the model for the Ewing spread in the television series "Dallas."

The ranch, with its stately white two-story ranchhouse and immense outbuildings, is sometimes incorrectly placed in neighboring towns. But Trippet prefers the townname of Southfork Ranch, and he lets everyone know it's all his.

"I'm the mayor and I'm the city council and I'm the building inspector," he says, wearing a sly grin that's shaded by a $3,000 cowboy hat. "That's the only way I could have gotten all these things built around here."

What was once a fairly nice country ranch is becoming an international tourist attraction. Trippet says you can stand on any part of the ranch and hear about 10 languages spoken in one hour. It sounds like an idle boast until the next group of tourists strolls by.

A camera-snapping couple is from Germany. A young family with two children is from Canada. And a woman who rolls into Trippet's path and levels a camera lens at his head has a British accent.

"You look just like J.R., coming down there," she says, as she shoots.

He does resemble J.R. Ewing, who raises the ire and interest of millions of TV fans worldwide. On this day, the tall Texan is wearing a leather vest, western shirt, a pair of sharply pressed jeans and ostrich-skin boots.

Like J.R., the 44-year-old Trippet is fond of that disappearing Texas pastime — making money. And he made his through — you guessed it — oil.

"You want to know the most expensive souvenir around here," he says, then points at himself. "Me — that's what. And I'm not cheap."

Trippet, who bought the ranch in 1984 for a "very big" price, says if Southfork Ranch looks a bit commercial, that's because it's meant to make money.

From the $1.75 chili dogs to the ranchhouse, which he rents for $2,500 a night for overnight visitors, the showplace is meant to be a money-making proposition.

"Besides," he says. "That $2,500 is nothing. A good penthouse is going to cost you that much to rent...."

"But anything you see here is for sale. You want to buy those shrubs and I'll dig them up myself."

His latest enterprise could be the start of something very big. This Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Trippet is holding the Southfork Antiques Spectacular.

More than $3 million worth of antique furniture, chandeliers, carpets and jewelry will be offered for sale. The auction will include a Louis XV dining room transferred intact to Texas from a Scottish castle. It's being offered by Priscilla Davis, a Fort Worth socialite.

For the occasion, Trippet is selling the contents of his ranchhouse. He says he will then refill the house and sell all those items at the next auction.

As Trippet ambles back to the ranch office to check calls before roaring off in a gold Mercedes, he doesn't miss a step when asked about his favorite part of the ranch.

"My cash register," he says. "And those tour buses parked over there. I love to see those dollar bills walking in."

C-Span Has Little Effect On House

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — On March 19, 1979, when then-Rep. Al Gore, D-Tenn., stepped up to the podium to make the House of Representatives' first live televised speech, opponents predicted the practice would lead to disaster. In his speech, Gore countered by saying that television would "revitalize representative democracy."

Ten years later, most analysts and members of Congress agree that neither side was right.

Since that day when the Cable Satellite Public Affairs Network, C-SPAN, started broadcasting live coverage of the House via the rapidly expanding cable-TV industry, Washington-area clothiers have joked of a marked rise in the sale of bright-red neckties.

But beyond cosmetic changes and some slight accommodations in House rules, the consensus is that television in the Congress has not had the dramatic effect both sides predicted.

Opponents of a televised Congress once claimed that cameras would reduce the level of debate to "political posturing" for the benefit of the people watching. But a leading foe of congressional television at the time, Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., conceded recently that "the playing to the cameras and the galleries that I expected just didn't occur."

Regardless of partisanship, almost everyone agrees that the camera's presence has shortened speeches.

Here's a little poser of a different sort for you. Declarer made exactly six hearts on this hand. What card took the defenders' trick, and when did they get it?

North's jump to three diamonds over South's strong, artificial two-club opening showed a five-card suit headed by at least two of the three top honors. That was not exactly music to South's ears, but with 11 tricks in hand, his jump to slam was not only justified, but warned North that he should not go on unless he had a prime card outside the diamond suit.

A cursory examination of the full hand might suggest that declarer will have to rely on the location of the king of spades for his contract. That, however, is an optical illusion—it does not take into account the key feature of North's hand: his trump holding!

Dummy's 7 6 of trumps are equals with the 8. So go to the top of the class if your answers to the questions posed in the opening paragraph were the eight of trumps at trick two!

Let's see how the play develops. Declarer wins one of his club honors and leads a low trump from hand. If West does not go up with the eight, dummy's six will win, so assume that after taking the eight West does best by shifting to a spade. But it is too late! Declarer wins the ace, gets to the table by leading his remaining low trump to the seven, and then takes two spade discards on the ace-king of diamonds.

Not all that difficult. Just a simple lesson in the power of spotcards.

Leith's Fairgrounds Sale Going On Now, For A Limited Time!

1st Time Buyer's Program.

We are pleased to announce Nissan's new purchase program, good for a limited time only, just for people who've never bought a car before! You see, we believe your first car-buying experience should be as exciting (and as easy) as possible! If you:

- Have a permanent job,
- Have lived at the same address for 1 year,
- Have an income sufficient to make your payments,
- Have no credit (or a satisfactory rating),
- A valid driver's license, and
- A social security number, then you're eligible to buy one of our new Nissans! Perhaps with no cash down!

The requirements, as you can see, are quite basic and easily met. In fact, we're willing to bet you're eligible and didn't even know it!

Just think, you could be cruising down the highway in your brand-new Nissan—much sooner than you've ever dreamed possible! And by beginning with Nissan quality, dependability and value, you've already made your most important step: getting the right car.

Simply cut out the credit application we've provided below. Fill it out and bring it to Leith Olds/Nissan. We'll be ready to start you on the road to your new car! And when you use your manufacturer's rebate, with absolutely no cash down!

Smithsonian Displays Elegance Of White House Past

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The nearly forgotten mantelpiece that formed the backdrop for Franklin D. Roosevelt's famous "fireside chats" is the surprise feature of a new Smithsonian exhibition recreating the glitter and elegance of the White House in a bygone era.

The permanent installation in the National Museum of American History, entitled "The Ceremonial Court," shows the front hallway of the White House as it appeared from a 1903 restoration until 1952.

The 1903 restoration, conducted by New York architect Charles Follen McKim, took six months and cost about $500,000.

The Smithsonian display required more than four years of planning and eight months to install, at a cost of nearly $1 million. The project was underwritten largely by a grant from Sears, Roebuck and Co.

"This is a permanent statement of the highest and most elegant reaches of American craftsmanship," said museum director Roger G. Kennedy.

The White House, he said, represented "a courtly life, a life of high style. It's always opening night at court ... the night for grand occasions, for getting out the very best china."

Among the items in the exhibition, which opens today, is the mantelpiece from the fireplace in the Diplomatic Reception Room that was the scene of FDR's radio broadcasts to a Depression-weary public in the 1930s.

When Roosevelt's successor, Harry S. Truman, undertook a major renovation of the White House in 1952, the mantelpiece and other unwanted objects were donated to the Smithsonian, which crated them for storage in its sprawling warehouses in suburban Suitland, Md.

There the mantelpiece gathered dust, its existence recorded only on a Smithsonian catalog card, until the pile of crates marked "White House" was discovered nearly 30 years later by J. Michael Carrigan, the museum's newly appointed assistant director for exhibits.

In that moment, Carrigan envisioned a permanent museum exhibition of historic White House treasures drawn from the Smithsonian's vast collections. The centerpiece of the resulting display is a recreation of the front hallway, stretching from the East Room to the State Dining Room, as it appeared beginning with Theodore Roosevelt's presidency.

While the hallway reflects the formal, chandeliered elegance of the turn-of-the-century White House, there are hints of the boisterous Teddy Roosevelt household.

Just outside a trompe l'oeil painting of the State Dining Room is the family elevator. Inside is a mannequin of one of Roosevelt's six children with their pet pony, Algonquin, which once was smuggled upstairs to greet a bedridden Archie Roosevelt.

At the other end of the hall is a second trompe l'oeil painting of the main stairway, with Archie and brother Kermit playing at the bottom with a paint set and their pet macaw, one of a menagerie that also included three rats, a terrier, a kitten, a flying squirrel and a green snake named Emily Spinach.

Among the objects in adjoining rooms is a gold Steinway grand piano that was donated to the White House in 1930 and used until 1939. The piano, still being restored by Smithsonian conservators, was richly decorated by artist Thomas W. Dewing with an allegorical painting, acanthus garlands and scrollwork.

The exhibit features cases of White House children's dolls and toys, inaugural gowns worn by first ladies since Jacqueline Kennedy and White House china and silver used by first families since George and Martha Washington.

Presidential leisure-time memorabilia on display include Washington's leather dispatch case and English-made telescope, a chess set used by John Quincy Adams, Warren Harding's golf clubs and balls monogrammed "WGH," Chester Arthur's silver cigar cutter, Ulysses Grant's well-chewed Meerscham pipe and a life preserver from John F. Kennedy's yacht, "Honey Fitz."

IRS Says Some Taxpayers Aren't Complying With New Regulations

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A new effort by the Internal Revenue Service to spot errors and tax-avoidance schemes without a formal audit has turned up considerable evidence of apparent non-compliance with several provisions in the new tax law.

In some cases, the IRS says, taxpayers are ignoring the limitation on deducting miscellaneous itemized expenses, such as union dues. Others are overlooking new restrictions on deducting personal and investment interest. Some are circumventing complicated requirements on the treatment of losses from rentals and passive investment activities.

The IRS is concentrating on those four issues because they underwent significant change in the 1986 tax overhaul, show up on numerous returns and have the potential for yielding substantial amounts of money for the government, Rick Hayes of the IRS said in an interview Wednesday.

The IRS is looking at 1987 and 1988 tax returns to determine how much revenue is being lost and how forms and instructions could be changed to eliminate confusion and opportunity for cheating.

Rather than waiting for barely 1 percent of returns to make their way through the formal audit procedure — which can be as long as two years after returns are processed — the IRS has set up teams in each of the 10 regional service centers to make spot checks as soon as returns are filed.

A big goal in the effort is to not only correct the returns that are checked but also to make the public aware of what mistakes are being made with regularity and how to avoid them.

"When we see things on the return that are not allowable, we want first to get that information to taxpayers through public-affairs channels ... during the filing season," said Hayes, who directs IRS research on audit planning.

"We want to fix as many of these things as we can without doing audits on people," he said. "If we can do these as part of (returns) processing, that's what we want to do."

The agency is studying several thousands of returns for 1987, the first year that most of the major tax changes went into effect. Those returns were filed in 1988. About 150,000 1988 returns, which are due by April 17, are being checked.

As much as anything else, the new program is an attempt by the IRS to see how people are reacting to the 1986 law, which, by some calculations, represented the biggest change in the federal income tax since it was enacted in 1913.

"There were so many changes, designed to close loopholes and reduce deductions," explained IRS spokesman Paul Nerdinger. "We need to know how people are taking it. Are the changes misunderstood? Are people aware they have lost some deductions but are still intent on taking them?"

One of the big changes affects millions of itemizers who were accustomed to fully deducting union dues, business publications and similar miscellaneous expenses. Under the new law, only the portion of such expenses (with a few exceptions) that exceeds 2 percent of adjusted gross income may be deducted.

The spot check of 1987 returns found many taxpayers ignored the 2 percent floor. Others deducted expenses that did not qualify, such as personal attorney fees.

Another major change limited to 65 percent the portion of personal interest (such as on credit cards and education loans) that could be deducted for 1987. Similar restrictions were imposed on investment interest. Spot checks indicated many taxpayers had circumvented those restrictions by deducting the interest as a business expense on Schedule C.

Similarly, Hayes said, some filers have tried to dodge limitations on deducting passive losses and rental losses by writing them off as business losses on Schedule C.

On returns filed this year, the IRS has found many taxpayers still trying to avoid the limitation on deducting personal interest. Other areas of non-compliance on current returns, Hayes said, include claiming too much depreciation for automobiles used in business, and attempting to avoid the 80 percent limit on deducting business-related meals and entertainment.
